Tactics ire water works staff

By BOB CAMPBELL
SDN Staff Writer

Hermleigh Water Works officials are upset over an out-of-county company's foray into town, leaving water sampling bottles and, the officials say, the false impression that something is wrong with the local water supply.

"They're just trying to sell water purifiers," said Bobbie Mason, who with her husband, Harold, manages the county-maintained water department.

She said the company left plastic bottles on people's lawns in Hermleigh with no explanation other than some writing on the bottles, "making it seem like it's for health reasons."

The bottles say the company will pick them up in a week, run tests and report the results to the participants.

"There's nothing wrong with our water," Mrs. Mason said. "We're tested by the state every month."

She added that samples must reach the state's testing laboratory in Abilene within 12 hours because "when water is any older than that, you cannot test it for health reasons."

She said a number of Hermleigh residents have expressed confusion and concern about the company's initiative.

County sanitarian Louie Vaughan compared the situation to reports last year of trihalamethane levels in Snyder drinking water and an ensuing deluge of water purifier and water softener salesmen on Snyder.

"The Hermleigh water may taste even better than it does here," Vaughan said. "With times hard like they are, everybody is trying to get a foot in the door."

Ask Us

Q. — Is it possible for Hermleigh and Ira students and parents to participate in the new Academic Booster Club formed in Snyder?

A. — Members note the focus of the organization, called the Council for Educational Excellence, is on Snyder school students, and because of this students and their parents in the two schools mentioned would receive no benefit. However, they expressed a willingness to share information for the organization of similar groups in either Ira or Hermleigh. The local president is Steve Smith and his number is 573-8405.

WHITE BUFFALO DAYS — This parade down College Ave. began Saturday's seventh annual White Buffalo Days celebration in Snyder. Most demonstrations at the Scurry County Coliseum were to run through 5 p.m. Saturday. Local

TDC meeting

Members of the Economic Development Committee are to be in Austin Monday for a meeting of the Texas Department of Corrections, although they note no decision is expected regarding site selections for proposed state prisons.

Roy Baze, coordinator for the local prison bid, said there is speculation the TDC board will mainly discuss construction of private prisons.

As for a decision regarding the state prisons bid on by Snyder and '32 other Texas cities, Baze said the best guess is this will occur at a regular board meeting slated Nov. 9.

'Ladder' meet

A called meeting of the Snyder school board is due at 5:30 p.m. Monday to consider a request to make all appraisals of local teachers for career ladder selection "scheduled" as opposed to "unscheduled."

The meeting was originally set for Friday, but had to be changed.

Blood effort

Competition between SACROC employees will be part of a blood drive due here Tuesday from noon until 8 p.m. at the Towle Park Barn.

The contest is between the company's north and south offices with each employee trying to secure five donors.

Weekend renovation set by SNB

Monday morning, bank customers at Snyder National Bank won't see the same facility where they transacted business last week.

An interior renovation of the bank's main lobby is planned over the weekend and is expected to be completed prior to Monday.

The major task will be to enclose the four loan officer offices along the west side. Seven ft. petition walls topped with glass will be added.

In addition, the entire bank lobby will receive carpeting. New furniture for secretaries and loan officers will be added also.

TU Electric event will honor history

The Snyder Chamber of Commerce will honor T.U.Electric and its employees with a coffee and reception from 3-4:30 p.m. Monday at the TU Electric Reddy Room. Everyone is encouraged to come by and say "thank you" to a long time Scurry County industry.

This will mark the third chamber-sponsored "thank you" for a local professional or business-related entity. In August, Wall's Industries was singled out here; and in September, county teachers were honored with a chamber breakfast.

The history of TU Electric in Texas dates to 1886, and in Snyder to 1909.

In February of 1886, lights began glowing from 85 newly intalled electric lamps in a scattering of stores, homes and other buildings in Fort Worth.

It signaled the fact that the city now had its first electric light and power plant.

This event was the first in a succession of related

Sales tax return exceeds '86 here for second month

For the second month in a row, Snyder's 1 percent sales tax return has exceeded last year's monthly total, the most recent by a plus 6 percent.

The latest figures reflect sales made in August. The report for July indicated also an improved total of some 11 percent.

The two monthly figures helped offset the deficit year-to-date figure which had risen as high as a minus 25 percent. With August's total now in, the deficit for Snyder now equals a minus 16 percent or, in actual dollars, some $111,000 less than in 1986.

The year-to-date total is now some $560,000 compared to more than $671,000 last year. Exact figures are $560,747 and $671,777 respectively.

The monthly return for August was $48,629 compared to last year's total for the same period of $45,677.

Across Texas, the state comptroller's office reported that the year's payments are down by 5.5 percent overall. A sampling of area cities shows a general decline in sales tax returns. These include:

In class levels at 97 percent

For the second full week of the month, attendance at Snyder campuses stayed near the 97 percent level as efforts continue here to keep student numbers high during October.

The latest report Friday showed attendance at 96.7 percent. School officials have set a 98 percent level as a goal.

Attendance is being particularly stressed this month to keep Snyder's average daily attendance (ADA) figures high.

The state monitors all Texas districts during October for ADA attendance. These figures are then used at the end of the year for the basis of state funding.

The feller on Deep Creek says, "No hits, no runs and no heiress best describes a guy who struck out with his rich girlfriend."

The World Series begins this week, and a SDN poll of Snyder baseball "experts" says the American League Minnesota Twins are the favorites despite St. Louis' dramatic comeback in the NL playoffs.

Speedy Moffett, former Tiger baseball coach, says he wouldn't have picked the Twins. Although he'll pull for the Cards, he's afraid they are too crippled.

O.T. Brewer, long-time junior teenage league coach, says it's anybody's guess, but he'll go with the Twins.

Albert Lewis, SHS Tiger baseball coach, says you can't count out the Twins but that the Cards have speed, pitching and a super defense. Bottom line: St. Louis.

Buck Logan, long-time Snyder LL official for whom the little league field is named, hopes it will be the Cards, but doesn't think they can win.

Grady Gafford, avid fan and summer league coach, is a Detroit man but leans toward the Cards in the World Series.

Wallace Stark, former semi-pro player, believes injuries will hurt the Cards and the Twins are fired up.

Eddie Peterson, pharmacist and avid fan, says Minnesota is on a roll and will be tough to beat.

Bill McClellan, SDN sports editor, says the Twins.

Monte West, CPA and summer league coach, believes the Twins' luck may have run its course.

Blue Lowry, a volunteer scout for Whitey Lockman and Montreal, says the Twins will be tough to beat.

Bill Atwood, former major league catcher: "I played in the National League and I always go with the National League."

Ole What's-her-name, a veteran of two Snyder farm league seasons: "Who's playing...I thought they were on strike?"

Wall Street closes worst week in years

NEW YORK (AP) — Wall Street closed out its worst week since World War II with a furious selloff that sent stock prices plummeting by $145 billion and plunged the Dow Jones average more than 100 points, its biggest one-day loss.

For every stock that advanced Friday, 15 fell in the New York Stock Exchange's heaviest trading day ever. Wall Street's sophisticated computers were deluged, with final tallies delayed well past the 4 p.m. close.

"It's extremely emotional. People are dumping stocks with reckless abandon," said Newton Zinder, a market analyst at E.F. Hutton & Co.

A record 338.48 million shares changed hands, eclipsing the previous high of 302.39 million set Jan. 23.

For the week, the Dow Jones average dropped 235.48 points, or 9.49 percent, the largest weekly decline of the postwar period in percentage terms. By contrast, the Dow fell 12.82 percent on Oct. 29, 1929, the start of the Depression.

Last week, the Dow dropped 158.78 points.

Still, many market analysts were reluctant to announce the end of the 5-year-old bull market, and stock prices remained at levels considered stratospheric only a year ago.

Robert Farrell, chief market analyst at Merrill Lynch, said he didn't believe the ultimate top of the 1980s bull market had yet been seen. "This is not a major bear market," he cautioned, but rather a "warning crack."

Friday's fall wiped out $145 billion in share values, according to the Wilshire Associates index, which measures the value of 5,000 stocks on the New York and American stock exchanges and the over-the-counter market.

Analysts attributed Friday's plunge, in which the Dow dropped a record 108.35 points to 2,246.74, to computerized program selling and the market's increasingly pessimistic outlook for economic growth.

Some of the money taken out of stocks was being put into the bond market.

Doctor is cleared by board

AUSTIN (AP) — A Central Texas physician has been exonerated on 15 counts of malpractice — including the charge that he performed unnecessary surgical operations — leveled against him by state medical officials.

The Texas Board of Medical Examiners summarily dismissed the charges against Dr. William G. Manax, a surgeon at West Community Hospital.

"I think it's a very accurate decision, very fair," said a relieved Manax when he emerged from the board meeting room in Austin with his wife, Dr. Teresa Manax. "Based on the data we presented, I thought it would come out this way.

"It's affected our lives. It's a very devastating thing to have over your head," he said.

The medical licensing board's vote followed a 90-minute summary of a hearing examiner Carla Cox's recommendation that the board take no action against Manax. The board earlier also had studied records of the 15-count complaint alleging Manax acted incompetently and performed unnecessary surgeries.

Peter Fulton, Manax's attorney, though happy about Friday's victory, criticized the board's attorney and staff.

"There were a number of errors and omissions, and the attorney for the board led his experts to make incorrect statements," Fulton said, claiming that in one case a thousand pages of records were not made available to the witnesses.

Fulton said the staff's investigation was initiated by former West hospital officials with "political" motivations who "furnished aid and assistance inappropriately to the board's staff."

Fulton singled out former hospital board member Sue Pescaia for "generating" the investigations. Pescaia, co-owner of the West News denied the charge.

"It's totally untrue, his remarks," she said. "That's Mr. Fulton's opinion. It will be proven wrong. I've never complained to the board about anybody.

Girl rescued from well pulled some hair out

MIDLAND, Texas (AP) — Barefoot, dirty and strapped to a board like a papoose, 18-month-old Jessica McClure blinked in the glare of TV lights as she was hoisted to the surface after 2½ days wedged in a well in her aunt's backyard.

The toddler was listed in serious but stable condition today, but doctors said it would be several days before they could determine whether she might lose her right foot, which jammed in the abandoned well 22 feet below ground.

Dusty rescue workers who used jackhammers and drills night and day to cut through solid rock hoisted the toddler to the surface at 8 p.m. Friday, and dozens of neighbors, friends and onlookers cheered.

The big three TV networks broke into prime-time programming to broadcast the moment.

"I didn't have any dry eyes," said police Sgt. Jeff Bailes.

Jessica had fallen into the well's 8-inch opening Wednesday morning while playing with two other children in the back yard of an aunt's house where her mother helped run a small day care center.

The little girl spent 58½ hours in the narrow crevice without food or drink. Doctors decided against feeding her to avoid aggravating possible internal injuries or causing her to shift in the hole.

She spent her time underground crying for her mother, singing, humming and sleeping. She also nervously pulled out "huge chunks of her hair," said Dr. Debbie Reese, her physician.

"It was wrapped around her fingers," added Dr. Carolyn Rhode.

The doctors said they were satisfied with Jessica's condition, considering her ordeal. They said she was wedged in the well in a near-fetal position with her right leg pinned near her chest and her left leg dangling below her.

"She probably could have gone another day, but she would have been critically ill," Reese said.

Rescuers sank a shaft paralleling the well, and then cut an upward-angling tunnel to her, their progress slowed by the dense caliche, or hardpan, that blunted even diamond-tipped pneumatic drills.

During the life-saving effort, the little girl's breathing was monitored by microphone as her anxious parents, Reba and Chip McClure, clung to hope and their little girl's stuffed Winnie the Pooh.

Coated with petroleum jelly to ease her out of the hole, Jessica was hoisted up to the surface by cable on paramedic Steve Rhodes' back. She was caked with mud and could only blink, secured by gauze bandages to a backboard.

"She seemed shocked," Rhodes said. "As (paramedic) Robert (O'Donnell) pulled her through the hole, she was moaning. At one point she yelled at Robert, 'No!'"

She had come to rest 22 feet below the surface.

Judging team places sixth

The Western Texas College meats judging team placed sixth overall at the recent High Plains Judging Contest in Plainview — well enough, being in the top 10, to qualify for the National Western Contest in January in Denver, Colo.

The team was fourth in lamb judging, and Shane Gann of Snyder won a plaque as high individual in beef judging. He was also high individual overall for the WTC team.

Eastern Oklahoma State University won the Plainview contest, which attracted 21 colleges and universities from as far away as Virginia, Nebraska and Florida.

Steve Rogers of Marble Falls was second-high individual on the team and second in beef grading and lamb judging for the team, Jeff Roemisch of Hermleigh was third-high individual on the team and high individual in questions, and Carl Daugherty of Snyder was fourth-high individual on the team and second on the team in beef-grading.

Lisa Massey of Snyder was fifth on the team overall and second in pork-judging, and Tiffany O'Brien of Morton was sixth overall on the team, seventh in the contest in pork-judging, high individual on the team in pork-judging and second in questions.

Other team members are Shawn Odom of Cross Plains, Ray Watson of Southland, Robert Lloyd of Dalhart, Cammie Burger of Kerrville, Robin Wheelus of Santa Rosa and Shondra Robinson and Angie Bruns, both of Snyder.

Canadian baby receives heart

LOMA LINDA, Calif. (AP) — A Canadian newborn whose fatally flawed heart was detected in the womb was given a new heart in an unprecedented transplant operation within hours of his birth by Caesarean section.

Paul Holc was in critical but stable condition early today at Loma Linda University Medical Center, hospital officials said.

Previously, the world's youngest heart recipient was 4 days old.

Paul came into the world at 10:54 a.m. Friday, a 6-pound, 6¾-ounce redhead diagnosed through an ultrasound examination in August as suffering from hypoplastic left heart syndrome, an underdevelopment of the heart's left side.

At 2 p.m., he was taken into 4½ hours of surgery performed by a team led by Dr. Leonard Bailey, whose pioneering infant transplants include the baboon heart implanted in 12-day-old Baby Fae in 1984.

Tax plan may shield some Americans

WASHINGTON (AP) — House and Senate committees have given final approval to tax-increase bills that are a potpourri of mostly minor provisions with the same goal: reducing the federal deficit without hurting low- and middle-income Americans.

Democratic leaders, who control both houses of Congress, want to rely on tax increases for half the $23 billion deficit reduction mandated under the Gramm-Rudman law for the 12 months that began Oct. 1. Most Republicans apparently want to rely solely on spending reductions, and President Reagan has promised to veto any tax increase.

Democrats who favor a tax increase fear the alternative would be deep cuts in some domestic social programs, whose main beneficiaries are the poor.

The tax increases, approved Thursday night by the House Ways and Means Committee on a party-line 23-13 vote and Friday by the Senate Finance Committee on a 13-7 vote, with two Republicans voting yes, reflect the same priorities.

The only provision in either tax bill that would directly affect lower-income Americans is extension of the expiring 3-percent tax on local and long-distance telephone service.

The Senate plan includes raising the ceiling on the amount of wages subject to the 1.45-percent Medicare tax. But that would affect only those 8 million people whose wages exceed $45,000 next year.

Both bills would put the bite on the estates of the very wealthy and on certain tax benefits now enjoyed by corporations.

The tax bills will be mixed into a package of spending cuts voted by other committees of Congress before being considered by the House and Senate. Those votes will come the week of Oct. 27 at the earliest.

But, because of questions over just how many members are willing to vote for tax increases in the face of an almost-certain veto, there is no assurance the bills will ever get to a final vote.

Some lawmakers say they are absolutely convinced that Reagan will make good on his veto pledge, preferring to swallow a big cut in defense spending rather than sign another tax increase.

Unless Congress and Reagan agree on a package of deficit reductions, $23 billion of automatic spending cuts will be triggered Nov. 20. While about half that would be in defense, much of the remainder would come from social programs.

Wind power program set

Wind Power will be the subject of a program presented by TU Electric Monday morning in the Senior Citizens Center. The program, including a film, is to begin at 11:20 a.m.

Dr. Stanley Allen will present a film entitled "Walk America!" at 11:15 a.m. Thursday. He will also be reminding senior citizens of the benefits of walking as exercise.

"Hoss" Clayton and his band will present a program of country and western music starting at 11 a.m. Tuesday in the center's dining room. More music will be heard Friday at the Sing Along starting at 11:30 a.m.

The miniature golf season will close Thursday with a tournament starting at 9 a.m. at Westerner Golfland.

Both the Kitchen Band and the Sunshine Choir have scheduled performances on Oct. 24. The band will go to Colorado City to play at Fort Woods. The choir will take part in a scholarship benefit sponsored by the Deep Creek Chapter of the American Businss Women's Association in the National Guard Armory in Towle Memorial Park.

Toddler's bruised foot causes doctors to become worried

MIDLAND, Texas (AP) — Jessica McClure's badly bruised right foot seems to be the worst physical injury the toddler suffered during her underground ordeal, doctors say.

They said they'll know in a few days if it develops gangrene, which would require it to be amputated. But the 18-month-old girl's foot improved after she spent 90 minutes in a hyperbaric chamber Friday night, and she ate an orange Popsicle, they said.

She was in serious but stable condition in the intensive care unit at Midland Memorial Hospital, doctors said.

"It's a matter of rehydrating her and observing her and observing patches of skin that suffered from lack of blood circulation," said Dr. Carolyn Rhode, who delivered the baby.

Jessica was rescued Friday night after spending more than 58 hours stuck in the shaft of an abandoned water well. She fell in Wednesday morning while playing with friends in the backyard of a private daycare center.

Because she is so young, she probably will forget the ordeal within a year, Pediatrician Debbie Reese said.

"When we first saw her, she was unresponsive," Dr. Reese said. "Since that time, she has begun rapidly to respond to people she knows. She needs affection and love the next couple of weeks."

When Jessica was brought up, strands of hair were found wrapped around her fingers: she had ripped out some hair in her fear.

At a news conference, Dr. Reese said the girl's right leg apparently was crossed awkwardly in front of the left. Jessica was stuck in an upright position, her left leg extending down.

Because of the position and because the right foot was wedged against the side of the well, both sides of the foot were very badly bruised, said Dr. Rhode, who is the McClure's family doctor.

The doctors said the bruise could become gangrenous, which could mean that the foot would have to be amputated.

They would not offer odds on the chances that the girl would keep the foot, but seemed optimistic. They said her toes were blue when she was placed in the hyperbaric chamber.

Administration scraps plans to cut some welfare benefits

WASHINGTON (AP) — An embarrassed Reagan administration is making sure that poor Americans can continue to receive free hot meals, blankets and shelter from churches and charitable organizations without losing some of their government welfare benefits.

Stung by Democratic and Republican charges of callous indifference to the will of Congress and the needs of the desperately poor; the Department of Health and Human Resources on Friday quickly revoked a two-week-old policy by the Social Security Administration, which it oversees.

In an order issued last month, effective Oct. 1 but never publicly announced, Social Security officials ruled that non-cash assistance from private, nonprofit charitable organizations should be assessed at market value, counted as income and deducted dollar-for-dollar from federal payments under the Supplemental Security Income program.

Under a law enacted in May 1983, such in-kind assistance was disregarded by the government in calculating SSI benefits for an estimated 4.3 million elderly, blind or disabled people who have little or no other income and generally are unable to provide for themselves.

That law expired last Sept. 30, and the Social Security Administration reverted to its pre-1983 regulations. Meanwhile, proposals to extend the exemption for charitable contributions to the poor were stalled in the House and Senate. Congress is expected to rush the exemption back into law quickly.

"It was never our intention that these most fragile of Americans be harmed by this lapse in the legislative process and none will be," said Health and Human Services Secretary Otis R. Bowen after a lengthy meeting with department lawyers and staff aides.

Bowen, using what he called "a highly unusual waiver of current law," rescinded the Social Security order a few hours after it was disclosed in Friday's editions of The New York Times.

Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y., called the Social Security action "terminal sleaze." Rep. Marge Roukema, R-N.J., called it "an absolute outrage" and sent President Reagan a letter demanding that it be withdrawn.

Said Sen. Paul Simon of Illinois, a candidate for the 1988 Democratic presidential nomination:

"As the hand of private charity gives, the hand of an insensitive government takes away. And they do it just as winter nears. This country needs a government that cares. We need a change in leadership."

Maximum federal benefits under the SSI program are $340 a month for individuals and $510 monthly for couples. According to one estimate, the short-lived Social Security policy would have resulted in cuts in monthly welfare benefits of as much as $113 for individuals and $170 for couples.

Had the order gone through, SSI recipients would have been penalized for such charitable assistance as hot meals.

Reagan seeks tough crime legislation

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, resuming a quest that failed in 1984, is seeking congressional approval of reforms in the criminal justice system, including giving police more leeway to gather evidence.

Reagan, appearing before law enforcement officials Friday, complained that much of what the administration had sought in a legislative package three years ago had to be withdrawn because of congressional opposition.

So in his talk to the group in the Old Executive Office Building next to the White House, Reagan unveiled new legislation seeking many of the same changes, including the proposal to ease the so-called "exclusionary rule."

That rule, which has been widely criticized by Attorney General Edwin Meese III and prosecutors around the country, bars the admission of evidence gathered in criminal cases if mistakes were made in the gathering of the evidence.

Major elements of the proposed Criminal Justice Reform Act of 1987 include stripping judges of some of the leverage they have to throw out evidence on grounds of technical errors by police officers.

Reagan also said the bill being pushed by the administration would restore application of the death penalty for a variety of federal statutes calling for that punishment. There have been no executions under federal statutes for several years.

They had been struck down by the Supreme Court, which held that the punishment had not been uniformly applied.

The legislation outlined by the president would limit application of the doctrine of habeas corpus — the principle intended to safeguard liberties by preventing governments from detaining people without pressing criminal charges.

"The habeas corpus doctrine is now misused by federal courts to second-guess valid state criminal convictions," Reagan said. "My proposal would reform this doctrine and prevent it from being used as another tool to let guilty criminals off the hook."

Perhaps the most far-reaching of the proposals advanced in the bill Reagan described would be the attempt to codify, or write into the law, the principle advanced by the Supreme Court when it ruled in 1985 that the exclusionary rule could not be applied if an officer could demonstrate that he had acted in reasonably good-faith in gathering evidence — even if technical errors were made.

"My proposal would codify the existing reasonable good-faith exception and expand it to warrantless searches and seizures," the president said. "It would also limit use of statutes to exclude evidence."

"Those are reasonable and responsible changes," he said, "and I urge the Congress to act quickly. It'll make a difference to those of you on the front line."

Frontier spirit thrives as town pitches in to help

MIDLAND, Texas (AP) — A thundering chorus of hurrahs, hoots and horns greeted the rescue of Jessica McClure, the little girl trapped in an abandoned well who stole the heart of a depression-weary West Texas city.

The residents had laid their economic problems aside for more than two days as they rallied behind the efforts to free the toddler from her darkened perch 22 feet below the surface.

Curious well-wishers and would-be helpers lined up behind chain-link fences for a third day Friday, despite requests from Midland police that they stay away.

Police said crowds were overwhelming the site, and there had been reports nearby of burglaries and vandalism. But the pleas to stay clear were useless.

Rescuers cheer toddler's recovery

MIDLAND, Texas (AP) — The cheering started before the dust settled when 18-month-old Jessica McClure was pulled from the abandoned water well that held her underground for 58 hours.

"We usually pull out rocks and stuff, not babies," said Scott Fletcher, whose tired, but steady, hand operated the winch that pulled the girl to the surface Friday night.

Specatators cheered and workers slapped each other on the back after Jessica rode up strapped to paramedic Steve Forbes' back. A few minutes later, horns were honked around Midland as word of the rescue spread.

It was a city-wide celebration by people who had seen Jessica only in a family snapshot distributed to the media.

"I saw her face. It felt real good. We got her out," said Ribble Boler, an 18-year-old driller who, like his father and uncle, had taken turns in the rescue pit that eventually was the tunnel to freedom.

Charles Boler, 40, Ribble's father, said a simple strategy led to success.

"Just make hole and make headway," he said. "It was just hard rock."

It was the kind of effort that put family in the minds of workers and watchers.

"I thought of my son, who is going to be 2 in two weeks," said Bob Hawk, a Midland contractor who was looking down the hole as Jessica came up.

Doctors remove cancerous breast from Mrs. Reagan

WASHINGTON (AP) — Doctors removed Nancy Reagan's cancerous left breast Saturday in a 50-minute operation conducted "without complications," White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said.

Fitzwater said laboratory examination of frozen sections showed no evidence that the malignancy had spread to the lymph nodes or surrounding tissues.

He said no other medical treatment, such as radiation or chemotherapy, and no further surgery was contemplated.

Fitzwater said the surgery ended at approximately 10:30 a.m. EDT.

He said President Reagan visited his wife in the recovery room and told her, "Honey, I know you don't feel like dancing, so let's hold hands."

Also visiting Mrs. Reagan in the recovery room was her stepbrother, Dr. Richard Davis.

Fitzwater said final laboratory evaluation of the frozen sections would be completed today.

"Mrs. Reagan's vital signs are strong and stable," he said. "She is awake and resting comfortably in the recovery room."

Hermleigh fire destroys shed

Firemen were called to Hermleigh at 3:47 p.m. Friday to extinguish a large grass fire and were able to keep it from reaching a house during the three-hour effort.

The fire was behind a service station off U.S. 84 on the northwest side of town, and it consumed a storage shed near the home of Reyes Mireles, a spokesman said.

Fire fighters took three trucks to the scene and returned to Snyder about 7 p.m. The cause of the fire was not immediately reported.

Coyotes celebrate homecoming win

GAIL -- Borden County's Coyotes were able to howl at homecoming as they defeated Grady 40-36 in a six-man District 4-1A West Zone football game here Friday night.

Borden County, now 2-5 overall and 1-3 in zone play, will travel to Dawson next Friday night.

"The kids did a pretty good job. They moved the ball better than they have all year," said Coach Joe Bond, whose Coyotes managed 326 yards on offense. "Grady is awfully young. They only have one senior so they'll be tough in the future. They are awfully quick."

The teams traded scoring blows most of the way, but Borden wound up on top when Brian Bond found Jimmy Rios open on a 6-yard TD play with 3:28 left in the ballgame. Randall Hollis tacked on the two-point conversion kick and the Coyotes were able to hold off the visitors for the victory.

Borden County scored the game's first TD when Chris Kilmer tallied on a 15-yard run in the first quarter. Hollis added the PAT kick.

Grady came back on the ensuing kickoff as Julian Valle ran the boot back 82 yards. The kick-after failed.

Borden built on its slim lead with 1:11 to go in the quarter when Bond connected with Kerry Fryar on a 6-yard scoring toss. Hollis again kicked the PAT.

Grady was able to take a halftime lead, however. With 1:16 before intermisson Scott Glaze connected with Scott Terrell on a

The Panthers blasted Big Spring 36-6 to go 4-1 in district action, one game behind both Sweetwater and Monahans - teams which square off next Friday, Oct. 23.

Sweetwater overcame an upset-minded Pecos team 21-6 while Monahans crushed San Angelo Lake View 41-15. In the league's other game, Andrews topped Snyder 13-3.

Big Spring's loss knocked the Steers to 2-2 in loop play. Andrews improved to 2-2-1, Lake View fell to 2-3, Pecos to 1-3-1 and Snyder to 0-4. Lamesa, idle last week, is also 0-4 in district play.

Mustangs overcome miscues to defeat Ragin' Tigers, 13-3

Andrews Mustangs overcame six turnovers to defeat Snyder 13-3 in a District 2-4A football game here Friday night but they had to have some help to do it.

The help came from the Tigers, as Snyder continually shot itself in the foot penalty-wise. The Tigers committed nine infractions for 83 yards - several of which came on big gainers.

"Turnovers hurt them but we paid them right back with penalties," mused a dejected Coach Dennis Tomlin after the contest. "This loss is hard on the kids. It hurt a bunch. Nobody hates it any more than we do."

The loss keeps Snyder winless in six outings this season. Coach Dennis Tomlin's group will try to rebound next Friday when they bus to San Angelo to play Lake View. Andrews, 3-3-1 overall now and 2-2-1 in district play, gets the weekend off.

Andrews was unable to move on its first possession, despite the fact that a choppy kickoff bounded off a Tiger player and was recovered by the Mustangs' Kelly Cornejo. The visitors were able to get the job done on their second try, however, and the 47-yard, eight-play drive produced all the points the Mustangs would need to win the ballgame.

Andrews got the ball at the Snyder 47 after a short punt into the wind. Kelly Cornejo took the first down carry 5 yards on a play which saw Snyder linebacker Chris Casas leave the game with a knee injury. Two plays later, the Mustangs were still a yard short. But on fourth down, quarterback Robert Morris squirmed for the first down to the Tiger 35.

The new lease ignited the visitors and on the next play Michael Hernandez skirted left and ran all the way to the Tiger 9-yard line. The 26 yard carry was the longest gain of the night for either team.

It took three more tries, but Andrews finally scored when Morris crashed over from a yard out with 5:06 to go in the period. Guy Hester kicked the PAT.

Snyder appeared ready to retaliate, and marched from its 36 to the Andrews 29. From there however, Roy Gutierrez was thrown for a yard loss on a fourth down and four play.

The teams then traded turnovers before Snyder got on track for its only points of the game. In a span of just two minutes Andrews fumbled twice - Tommy Lane and Benny Miller recovered - and Snyder fumbled once. Ronnie Seals fell on the loose Tiger ball.

Snyder eventually got set up at its own 37-yard line. Vyron Clay and Gutierrez put together back-to-back 11-yard runs to move inside Mustang territory. From there, Randy Morris took a reverse 23 yards to the visitor 18. The drive stalled at that point, however, and with 6:24 left Craig Watkins booted a 32-yard field goal.

The Tigers' biggest break of the game came just moments later, but the hosts were unable to take advantage. Following the kickoff, Robert Morris fumbled and Lane fell on it for Snyder at the Andrews 23.

Clay got 3 yards on first down but Michael Riggins was knocked back for a 6-yard loss to the 26 on second. Snyder appeared to recover as quarterback Roland Romo hit Watkins on a fine pass play on third down. A penalty negated the gain, however. An incomplete pass and another penalty - this one worth five yards for delay of game - served to further dampen the effort. A fake field goal try on fourth down from the 31 ended in disaster as Andrews' Marc Taylor rushed in and dumped Clay for a 10-yard loss to the 41. Andrews took over.

Neither team was able to mount much offense the rest of the way. Andrews stopped the Tigers on fourth down plays at the Tiger 32, the 28 and the 6.

Interceptions from Clay and Randy Morris and a fumble recovery by Robert Talamantez staved off Andrews threats, meanwhile.

Snyder was hurt by a roughing the kicker penalty early in the fourth quarter, and by three other infractions. On one, Clay had broken loose for a good gain. Another came on Randy Morris' interception return which occured on a third-down play at the Tiger 9.

Snyder got the ball on the interception with 2:40 left at its own 7-yard line after the penalty. The Tigers were unsuccessful in moving the ball, and Andrews took over with 1:01 left. After calling a time out with two ticks on the clock, Andrews got a meaningless TD when Hernandez scored at the buzzer.

Hernandez led all ballcarriers with 58 yards on 16 carries. Snyder's Clay had 54 steps on 17 tries.

The defensive standoff produced only 297 yards in total offense. Snyder managed 145; Andrews 152.

Casas' knee injury sent him to Cogdell Memorial Hospital. The extent of the injury was unknown this morning.

Final chance Sunday for NFL irregulars

by The Associated Press

The third and final weekend of NFL replacement games will be held Sunday and Monday with competitive imbalance even more prominent than it has been - "uneven ball," as Atlanta Coach Marion Campbell calls it.

Since some teams have more picket line crossers than others, this weekend's games figure to be a little different than the past two.

A number of regulars returned on Wednesday, the deadline to be eligible for this weekend's games under NFL rules imposed during the 24-day strike that ended Thursday. But the other regulars, all of whom showed up either Thursday or Friday, will not be allowed to play until the Oct. 24-25 games.

Some of the regulars who will be in uniform Sunday include linebacker Lawrence Taylor of the New York Giants, wide receiver Steve Largent of the Seattle Seahawks, tight end Ozzie Newsome of the Cleveland Browns, quarterback Doug Flutie of the New England Patriots and quarterback Jim Everett of the Los Angeles Rams.

Everett rejoined the Rams this week, giving them 18 regulars for their game in Atlanta. The Falcons have only one regular and are trying to end an 0-2 skid.

The Los Angeles Raiders will have quarterback Rusty Hilger, linebacker Jerry Robinson and kicker Chris Bahr for their game at San Diego, which will field the replacement Chargers.

Nine Browns, including backup quarterback Gary Danielson, came back this week to face the Cincinnati Bengals, who have only two regulars on their squad.

The Washington-Dallas game Monday night could be interesting. The Redskins' replacements have won both of their games, but Dallas will have 11 regulars, including quarterback Danny White and running back Tony Dorsett.

In other games Sunday, it will be Indianapolis at Pittsburgh, Seattle at Detroit, Miami at the New York Jets, New England at Houston, Philadelphia at Green Bay, New Orleans at Chicago, Minnesota at Tampa Bay, the New York Giants at Buffalo, Denver at Kansas City, and St. Louis at San Francisco.

The Super Bowl champion Giants have lost all four games this year - two since the replacement squad took to the field. In addition to NFL MVP Taylor, New York should be improved with backup Jeff Rutledge at quarterback.

Buffalo, also 0-2 during the strike, got some help when running back Robb Riddick and quarterback Brian McClure crossed the line before the strike ended.

Chicago, 4-0, is the only undefeated team in the league. But Bears Coach Mike Ditka said New Orleans presents a problem.

"They are a better team on the field than we are," Ditka said. "They have better people."

The Saints have used a strong ground attack in their two replacement-game victories. However, the replacement Bears are first in the league in defense against the rush and first against the pass.

The Jets have their entire defensive line and quarterback Pat Ryan available for Miami.

Pittsburgh got a big boost with a host of returnees this week, including wide receiver John Stallworth and safety Donnie Shell. Indianapolis, 2-0 during the strike, won't have No. 1 quarterback Gary Hogeboom, out with damaged ribs. His spot will be handled by Blair Kiel, who will be making his first start since his senior year at Notre Dame in 1983.

Besides Largent, Seattle returns center Blair Bush, placekicker Norm Johnson, backup quarterback Jeff Kemp and linebacker Fredd Young. Detroit relies on Gary Hons at quarterback.

Patriots linebacker Andre Tippett and Flutie, acquired from Chicago on Tuesday, join veterans Raymond Clayborn, Tony Collins, Sean Farrell, Tony Franklin and Ron Wooten. Houston, 2-0 since the strike, has gotten solid efforts from replacement receiver Leonard Harris and running back Herman Hunter.

San Francisco looks solid with quarterback Joe Montana, running backs Roger Craig and Joe Cribbs, and wide receiver Dwight Clark on offense, while Dwaine Board, Eric Wright and Pete Kugler head up the defense. St. Louis has wide receiver Roy Green, safety Leonard Smith, linebacker E.J. Junior and running back Earl Ferrell, all veterans.

Green Bay, relying on replacements, is coming off an overtime loss to Detroit. The Eagles, who have not been close in two strike games, have only one veteran, linebacker Ron Moten, on their roster.

Minnesota won its first two games before the strike. The Vikings have lost the two replacement games, and will go again this week with no veterans.

Mavs start slowly but defeat Spurs

DALLAS (AP) - For most of their exhibition opener, the Dallas Mavericks played nothing like the team that won the NBA's Midwest Divison last season.

The Mavericks buried themselves in a blizzard of 27 turnovers Friday evening and at one point in the third quarter trailed the San Antonio Spurs by 18.

But a furious fourth-quarter rally led by Mark Aguirre, Derek Harper and rookie Jim Farmer lifted the Mavericks to a 102-93 victory.

"It took us a long time to get untracked," said Dallas Coach John MacLeod. "In the second half we really perked up. We did a nice job of recovering and executing."

Aguirre scored 12 points in the fourth quarter en route to a game-high 26. Farmer, Dallas' first-round draft pick, had seven in the final quarter and Harper scored six straight in the final minute.

Cold fourth-quarter free-throw shooting proved to be the Spurs' undoing. San Antonio, which finished in the Midwest Division basement last season, hit only six of 15 free throws in the final period.

"If we had made the free throws, we would have won the game," said Spurs Coach Bob Weiss. "But that's neither here nor there. We were passive both defensively and offensively."

MacLeod liked what he saw when the Mavericks righted themselves after their shaky start.

"We kept our composure when we got down," said MacLeod after his first game as Mavericks coach. "It's not unusual to have a slow start. We kept working, and we were able to turn things around."

San Antonio was led by Walter Berry's 19 points. Berry was nine of 15 from the field but hit only one of six free throws.

"I have to start making my free throws," Berry said. "It all starts with me."

Dallas trailed by as many as 12 with 10 minutes to play in the fourth quarter before a 9-0 spurt led by Aguirre and Farmer.

Farmer hit an 18-foot jumper to pull the Mavericks to within 84-83 with 4:14 to play, then converted a Harper steal into a breakaway dunk to put Dallas ahead for good, 85-84.

In 1920, Washington's Walter Johnson pitched a no-hitter against the Red Sox in Fenway Park, Boston. It would have been a perfect game except for an error by Bucky Harris, the Washington second baseman.

Sam Crawford, who played for the Detroit Tigers and Cincinnati Reds, had 56 inside-the-park home runs, a record. He is in the Hall of Fame.

Injured Cardinals to contest Twins club in World Series

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) - St. Louis Cardinals Manager Whitey Herzog never seems at a loss, except for players in the World Series.

The Cardinals, trying to erase the distasteful memory of their 1985 World Series debacle against the Kansas City Royals, were to begin the 1987 Series against Minnesota Saturday night as they did two years ago - without a key player.

On Friday, Herzog decided to place injured home-run leader Jack Clark on the disabled list and activate a ninth pitcher, right-hander Lee Tunnell. Tunnell will go into Herzog's bullpen.

"Injuries? I don't like them, but there's not much I can do about them," Herzog said. "There's no sense fretting.

"I don't know whether you'd call this a challenge," Herzog said, responding to a question at a morning news conference. "Everybody would like to get to a World Series with your whole team. ... I don't know if I can pull this one off."

Besides a crippled roster that also includes the injured Terry Pendleton, Herzog's Cardinals were to contend with a ballpark unlike any other in the major leagues, and some major-league noise from the 55,000 or so fans expected at the Metrodome.

This will be the first World Series played in a dome and the first for the Twins since 1965, when they lost to Los Angeles in seven games.

Left-hander Frank Viola, 17-10 during the season, was to start for Manager Tom Kelly's Twins. Viola had the second-best ERA in the AL this year, 2.90, and was 1-0 in two playoffs starts against the Detroit Tigers, whom the Twins beat in five games in the American League playoff.

Rookie Joe Magrane, a left-hander with a 9-7 record and 3.54 ERA for the Cards, was chosen over Bob Forsch to start Game 1 because, "with his moving fastball, I thought he had the best chance here," Herzog said.

Retains heavyweight crown...

Tyson kayos Biggs in 7th

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) - Mike Tyson knocked down Tyrell Biggs twice in the seventh round and stopped him at 2:59 to retain his undisputed heavyweight championship Friday night at the Atlantic City Convention Center.

Iron Mike was in control from the opening bell and it seemed just a matter of time before he would end it.

That time came when he dropped the challenger twice late in the seventh.

Tyson, who had hurt Biggs with hooks and body shots through the first six rounds, caught him with a left hook that dumped him on the seat of his pants. Biggs' upper body went through the ropes but he quickly got into a sitting position.

The 1984 Olympic super-heavyweight champion struggled up at the count of nine, blood streaming from a cut over his left eye.

Tyson charged to the attack and landed a hard right. He then ripped a left hook that sent Biggs backward onto his back in his corner.

Referee Tony Orlando didn't bother to count as Biggs' corner men and Dr. Frank Doggett rushed into the ring.

They got Biggs up quickly and seated on his stool.

"He's made for me," Biggs had said before the fight.

No way.

The end came for Biggs with one second remaining in the seventh round.

The 6-foot-4¾ Biggs, who weighed 228¾, 12 more than Tyson, and had a large reach advantage, simply was unable to keep Tyson off him.

Biggs, noted for his jab, simply had no steam in the punch on this night and there was no power in his right hand when it did land.

Tyson, 21, five years Biggs' junior but older than the challenger in pro experience, landed several hard jabs and packed power in both hands to the body and head throughout.

Biggs, cut over the left eye in the third round, took several hard shots but finally could not resist the man who has been irresistible since turning pro on March 6, 1985.

"I look for a great fight," Tyson had said before. "I'm the best fighter in the world."

He certainly was the best fighter in the ring as he turned it into a one-sided fight, looking every bit the 8-1 favorite he was.

O'Meara leads Disney

LAKE BUENA VISTA, Fla. (AP) - Mark O'Meara is in position to make the late-season push he needs.

"It's been a kind of disappointing year, disappointing because I haven't played as well as I expected to play," O'Meara said Friday.

But that could change quickly for O'Meara, the leader at the halfway point of the $600,000 Walt Disney World Golf Classic.

"I've been second twice, and I went over to Europe and won a tournament over there. I'm playing well now.

"If I could play well, or even win here, then go on to Tucson (next week) and play well and maybe get into the Nabisco, it could turn it into a very good year," O'Meara said.

He kept those hopes alive Friday with a 4-under-par 68 that gave him a 131 total after 36 holes. He hasn't made a bogey in the tournament.

"That's real important," O'Meara said. "There's no question you're going to make birdies on these courses. You just try to stay away from the bogeys, the real bad holes."

He's done that, but so too has Bob Gilder, who is at 132 after two bogey-less rounds. Gilder had a 65 on Friday at the Lake Buena Vista course, the shortest and easiest of the three courses used for the first three rounds of this event.

The 132 pros were to complete one round on each of the three courses Saturday. After 54 holes, the field will be cut for Sunday's final round at the Magnolia course.

41-yard touchdown hookup. Glaze found David White on a 17-yard scoring toss just 25 seconds later. White kicked both conversions as the Bulldogs enjoyed a 22-16 advantage.

Borden went back in front temporarily in the third period as Patrick Herridge bulled over from 4 yards out. Hollis kicked the conversion.

The teams traded scores when Glaze ran an interception back 24 yards for Grady and Rios got free on a 10-yard scamper for the Coyotes. White and Hollis tacked up the PAT kicks.

Grady answered again with 5:17 to play when Valle broke free on a 42-yard run. This time White's kick-after was no good, but the visitors still led 36-32.

Borden County was able to come up with the victory on Rios' 6-yard catch from Bond minutes later.

Herridge led Borden with 97 yards on 18 carries. Valle had 140 on 20 tries for the Bulldogs.

HSA making Oilers offer

HOUSTON (AP) - One day after Houston Oilers owner Bud Adams returned from a scouting trip to Florida, the Houston Sports Association made new concessions to help keep the team in Texas.

Harris County Judge Jon Lindsay obtained the concessions from Astrodome operator HSA, apparently loosening the logjam between the team and stadium management, Oilers General Manager Ladd Herzeg said Friday.

"Judge Lindsay has met wth the HSA personally and has indicated that some of the things we asked for he doesn't feel are unrealistic as the HSA has incidated to us," Herzeg said.

Herzeg said Lindsay had convinced HSA to soften on issues of rent rate, concessions, parking and advertising for the Oilers.

developments that would continue through the next 43 years and lead eventually to the formation of the present T.U.Electric Service Company.

Thomas A. Edison's accomplishments, with incandescent lamps, not only provided the basis for the electric power industry as it exists today, but also inspired an almost immediate proliferation of "local light plants" in cities and towns throughout the United States.

The acquisition of electric properties in Snyder occurred in December, 1925, about 16 years after the first light plant had gone into operation. George Mosier built the first light plant in Snyder in 1909. It furnished lights for a few businesses on the north side of the square.

This operation was short-lived, and three years later, E.W. Clark and W.A. Fuller formed the Snyder Ice and Light Company. The property changed hands many times before O.P. Yoder sold it to West Texas Electric Company. It became Snyder Utilities Company, and had a line to Hermleigh, where there were a few customers. The plant had a capability of 330 killowatts. The growth of West Texas Electric continued and the birth of T.U.Electric, as it is now known, emerged.

T.U.Electric now serves in Scurry County 7,355 residents and businesses. In the T.U.Electric division alone it has grown to 691,411 customers. The small 330 killowatts of power has been slightly increased to 19,500,000 killowatts.

Amendment 25 profiled below

Amarillo Hospital District nor the South Randall County Hospital District.

The proposed amendment would permit the Amarillo district to serve the disenfranchised residents of Randall County and would authorize Randall County to provide financial assistance to the Amarillo district for that purpose.

A tax of up to 75 cents per $100 valuation would have to be approved by Randall County voters to assist the other county's hospital district.

"Allowing other hospital districts created in the Constitution to make boundary changes with statutory authority, instead of by constitutional amendment, is a much-needed provision that will save state voters time and money," a supporter said.

An opposition spokesman said the proposition is flawed in that the voters inside a hospital district would be able to expand boundaries into areas in which residents had had no say about being included in the district and its taxes.

County report

County Treasurer Billy Wayne Thompson's quarterly report is the principal item of business on the 10 a.m. Monday Scurry County Commissioners Court agenda.

Thompson reports after the end of each quarter on the financial state of county government and on the disbursements and investments of the previous three months.

The only other item on the agenda, besides bill-paying, is the broad category of "any other business necessary."

Square Dance Festival scheduled October 24

The Sparkle City Square Dance Club will host its 16th annual Square and Round Dance Festival on Saturday, Oct. 24, at the Scurry County Coliseum.

Dick Parrish of Hobbs, N. M., a prominent square dance caller, will be the featured caller for this event. Parrish is well known in this area and has many years of calling experience.

Dave and Nita Smith of Lubbock will cue for the round dancing. They are familiar figures in the round dancing field and have been the featured cuers for most of the preceeding festivals.

Henry and Linda Holly are serving as chairpersons for this year's festival and all the other members of the club will be helping on the various committees.

The festival will begin with registration and a round dance workshop on Saturday afternoon from 1-3 p.m. under the direction of the Smiths. A square dance workshop, under the direction of Dick Parrish, will follow from 3-5 p.m. The evening festivities will begin with request rounds from 7-8 p.m. The grand march will be at 8 p.m. with dancing until 11 p.m. All area dancers are invited to attend any or all of the activities and spectators are welcome in the seating area of the coliseum at no charge.

Near tragedy second trauma for family

MIDLAND, Texas (AP) — Jessica McClure's grandfather, aunts and uncles were "jumping for joy" as they watched on television when the 18-month-old toddler emerged from a rescue tunnel that took 2½ days to craft.

"We feel absolutely wonderful," Jessica's aunt, Donna Johnson, said of Friday night's happy ending to the family's second tragic event this year.

When his brother died of AIDS earlier this year, family members hoped the trauma was over for Chip McClure and his wife, Reba. But it began again Wednesday morning when their tiny daughter fell into the abandoned well.

"When I heard this news, I thought to myself, 'I can't believe this. This can't be happening,'" said Chip's sister, Ceidi Proctor.

Chip, 18, and Reba, 17, married 2½ years ago. Both dropped out of high school but have since earned a GED. Chip works as a house painter.

"They are real sweet kids," says neighbor Margie Lunsford. "She is an excellent mother."

The McClures live in an apartment in a working-class neighborhood near the home of an aunt, where Jessica fell into the 8-inch well opening.

Reba McClure was particularly tormented during the ordeal because she was in the house when Jessica fell into the well, Ms. Proctor said.

"She keeps saying, 'I was only gone for five minutes.' She either went to answer the telephone or go to the bathroom, and she thought the children were perfectly safe because the yard was fenced in," said Ms. Proctor.

Drug class

The Western Texas College Drug Abuse-Use class will conduct a program Monday evening in conjunction with the Morgan Christain Home of Levelland. It will be at 6:30 p.m. in the Science Lecture Hall in Building 2A.

The home is a non-profit organization which provides a home for individuals recovering from chemical abuse. A goal of the newly formed Scurry County Council on Alcohol and Drug Abuse is to have some form of similar rehab center in Snyder, sponsors say.

Soccer guest

A professional soccer player will be in Snyder Monday to view local soccer games, then in Roby on Tuesday to instruct any interested players and coaches involved in the sport.

Dennis Aikey, who played for the Los Angeles Aztecs in the North American Soccer League, has been brought to the area by Sunbelt Specialized Services of Roby, which sponsors a team in the Snyder league.

Aikey is to offer a free clinic on soccer Tuesday at 5 p.m. at the Roby High School football field.

Two boosters

Booster clubs for both Ira and Hermleigh have scheduled meetings Monday.

The Ira Booster Club will meet at 6:30 p.m. in the Ira school cafeteria and the Hermleigh Booster Club will meet at 7:30 p.m. at Hermleigh High School. The Hermleigh club will discuss plans for the upcoming Halloween carnival.

Bank renovation due with weekend

The work was originally planned last weekend over the three-day Columbus Day weekend. A late delivery of furniture caused it to be delayed, however.

SNB President Rex Robinson commented, "We've planned the additions to keep up with the progress of the county and city. We'll be improving our facilities here every time we can."

Scurry County Folks...

By Shirley A. Gorman

It was a "once in a lifetime experience."

That is the way Pat Blakely of Snyder described her trip to San Antonio last month and subsequent audience with Pope John Paul II. It is estimated the event was attended by 1,000 people in Texas of Polish descent. Both of Mrs. Blakely's grandparents were born in Poland.

Mrs. Blakely and her husband, Monty, drove to San Antonio and spent three days there in all, seeing the sights in addition to the papal visit.

The audience was held at 8:30 p.m. on a Sunday night, Sept. 13, on the grounds of Assumption Seminary. It had been arranged for people in Texas who are of Polish descent.

The Blakelys had to go through three security checks before being let onto the grounds of the seminary. They also passed through a metal detector and Mrs. Blakely's handbag was searched. In addition, they had to wear special badges.

The Snyder couple was one of 10 people from the Lubbock diocese who were invited to the audience with the pope.

Everyone gathered on the parking lot across the street from the seminary that evening. Among the many Poles Mrs. Blakely saw that evening, 250 were from Panna Maria which was the first Polish Catholic settlement in Texas.

Booths of Polish food and pastries awaited everyone as they entered the grounds of the seminary, Mrs. Blakely said. Many people were dressed in colorful Polish costumes, she said.

Congregated with the people of Polish descent were TV crews from across the state and countless security people. They were very evident because they wore special receivers in their ears and carried guns.

"Security was absolutely incredible," she said. In fact that was a major drawback to the whole experience. "We felt the security was overdone and that it put a damper on things and detracted from the event. We felt uneasy and self-conscious and uneasy for the pope."

Due to stringent security measures, they could get no further than 70 feet to the pope.

As everyone gathered on the grounds, they sang Polish songs and said the rosary, half in Polish and half in English. "This was a very moving experience for me," Mrs. Blakely said.

"I am from Wisconsin and I never realized how much I missed the Polish language and being around Polish people," she said.

As everyone was visiting and enjoying the evening, she said they heard the sound of a helicopter and knew then that the pope was arriving.

A large stage had been built for the occasion and "welcome holy father" had been written in Polish there.

When Pope John Paul II came onto the stage, he addressed the crowd in Polish, telling them how proud he was of eveyone who had helped to establish the Catholic church in Texas. He told them to always remember their beginnings.

Panna Maria was settled in 1854 and from this point the people spread to the midwest. Mrs. Blakely said she had always thought it was the other way around and was surprised to learn otherwise.

The pope was given a carved miniature of the Catholic church in Panna Maria. He then sang to the crowd in Polish. "I think it was the most moving thing I have ever experienced," she explained. "I have a recording of him singing to us."

Mrs. Blakely said she also marveled at the stamina of the pope who at 68 had already put in a long day of Mass, parade and various addresses before he had arrived for their audience.

"In spite of it all he sang and spoke very clearly," she said. She said she also marveled that he was able to converse in three different languages during his visit in San Antonio.

ATTEND PAPAL AUDIENCE--Pat Blakely of Snyder attended the papal audience for people of Polish descent in Texas last month in San Antonio. She called it a very "moving experience." (SDN Staff Photo)

"I felt like I was at a Polish festival where the most important guest was the Polish pope. The whole experience brought home to me how he is pope to all Catholics. He is the spiritual leader of so many varied people in the world."

Another drawback to the experience was the extreme heat of the day. Due to that the Blakelys elected to watch the papal Mass on television rather than attend in person.

She related one bit of sadness connected to the papal visit. The Lubbock priest who had worked for a year to be able to bring the 10 people from the Lubbock diocese to San Antonio for the papal audience slipped and fell a few days before the event and broke five ribs. He had hoped to be able to make the trip anyway but his doctors refused to let him travel. However, his brother and sister were there.

"I felt very sad for him that he had to miss the event," Mrs. Blakely said. They had met the priest some months earlier when he had traveled to Snyder for a face to face meeting. The strict security measures had deemed that he be able to identify by face all the people in the Lubbock diocese who would be attending the papal audience.

Another thing that she observed while in San Antonio was the amount of commercialism attached to the papal visit. Everyone was selling any and everything as souvenirs.

The intensity of the demonstrators who took to the streets to protest the pope's visit surprised her.

"I found that to be unnerving and I certainly did not expect that to the extent that we experienced," she said.

Since she had never been to San Antonio, she said they enjoyed the sights, especially the Alamo.

"I felt such a sense of history while at the Alamo. One of my husband's ancestors died at the Alamo. I finally understood his sense of family roots which stretch back to that era. I can't do that with my family."

They also toured Randolph Air Force Base and they drove to Panna Maria to see the Polish Catholic Church there.

Panna Maria means virgin Mary in Polish.

"The church was so beautiful and so Polish that it brought tears to my eyes."

Scurry County Folks...

By Shirley A. Gorman

It was a "once in a lifetime experience."

That is the way Pat Blakely of Snyder described her trip to San Antonio last month and subsequent audience with Pope John Paul II. It is estimated the event was attended by 1,000 people in Texas of Polish descent. Both of Mrs. Blakely's grandparents were born in Poland.

Mrs. Blakely and her husband, Monty, drove to San Antonio and spent three days there in all, seeing the sights in addition to the papal visit.

The audience was held at 8:30 p.m. on a Sunday night, Sept. 13, on the grounds of Assumption Seminary. It had been arranged for people in Texas who are of Polish descent.

The Blakelys had to go through three security checks before being let onto the grounds of the seminary. They also passed through a metal detector and Mrs. Blakely's handbag was searched. In addition, they had to wear special badges.

The Snyder couple was one of 10 people from the Lubbock diocese who were invited to the audience with the pope.

Everyone gathered on the parking lot across the street from the seminary that evening. Among the many Poles Mrs. Blakely saw that evening, 250 were from Panna Maria which was the first Polish Catholic settlement in Texas.

Booths of Polish food and pastries awaited everyone as they entered the grounds of the seminary, Mrs. Blakely said. Many people were dressed in colorful Polish costumes, she said.

Congregated with the people of Polish descent were TV crews from across the state and countless security people. They were very evident because they wore special receivers in their ears and carried guns.

"Security was absolutely incredible," she said. In fact that was a major drawback to the whole experience. "We felt the security was overdone and that it put a damper on things and detracted from the event. We felt uneasy and self-conscious and uneasy for the pope."

Due to stringent security measures, they could get no further than 70 feet to the pope.

As everyone gathered on the grounds, they sang Polish songs and said the rosary, half in Polish and half in English. "This was a very moving experience for me," Mrs. Blakely said.

"I am from Wisconsin and I never realized how much I missed the Polish language and being around Polish people," she said.

PRUSSIC ACID POISONING IN LIVESTOCK

Plants of the sorghum group (Johnson grass, sorghum, sudan and hybrid sudan) have a high potential for prussic acid poisoning. These plants have cyanide-containing compounds which are converted to prussic acid when the plant cells are disrupted due to drought, hail, harvesting, frost, etc. Prussic acid is liberated in the rumen, absorbed into the blood and carried to the tissues where this potent toxin interferes with oxygen utilization. If absorbed rapidly, it can cause respiratory paralysis. Early symptoms are labored breathing, frothing at the mouth, irregular pulse and staggering.

Stressed plants should be checked for prussic acid before they are grazed. When growth conditions change due to rainfall, drought, frost, etc., analysis should be conducted to head off problems. If prussic acid is detected, cattle should be removed until analysis shows the prussic acid has dropped.

A sodium-nitrite-sodium thiosulfate combination can be administered as an antidote. It must be injected intravenously very slowly. The dosage and administration are critical. The toxic principal works very rapidly, so speed of detection is important.

—Graze sorghum or sorghum cross plants only when they are at least 15 inches tall.

—Do not graze plants during and shortly after drought periods when growth is severely reduced.

—Do not graze for two weeks after a non-killing frost.

—Do not graze after a killing frost until plant material is dry (toxin is usually dissipated within 48 hours).

—Do not graze at night when frost is likely.

—Delay feeding silage and hay four to six weeks following harvest.

Suspect forage can be checked for prussic acid at the Texas Veterinary Medical Diagnostic Lab, Amarillo, Texas. About a one-pound sample that is representative of the forage should be submitted through your local veterinarian.

Done in by a 4-4 fit

By James Jacoby

South's two no-trump opening showed 20-21 high-card points. North was looking at 14, so the combined total was 34-35, plenty for a small slam. North bid three clubs (Stayman) to see if South had a four-card major suit. It didn't take long for North-South to arrive in six hearts.

Declarer won the club lead with his jack and led a heart toward the dummy. Without a break in tempo West played the eight, and dummy's jack was taken by East's ace. Back came a club to dummy's ace, and declarer was at the crossroads. The play of the eight in front of K-J-9-4 and similar holdings is always suspect, since it is a textbook situation for falsecarding. Still, there is a sound reason for paying off to such a deceptive play. If West has a singleton eight he must play it; if he has 10-8-5-3, he might well play either the five or the three. Declarer did go through the exercise of coming to his hand with a spade to lead up to the K-9 of hearts in dummy. When the heart three appeared from West, he went right up with dummy's king, and down he went.

Maybe we can find a moral here. When your side has 34 or more balanced high-card points, don't look for a 4-4 fit. Instead, play no-trump, where you may be able to survive having two losers in a particular suit. If declarer were in no-trump, he could survive misguessing the heart distribution, because of the favorable location of the club queen, and would make 12 tricks.

A new book by James Jacoby and his father, the late Oswald Jacoby, is now available at bookstores. It is "Jacoby on Card Games," published by Pharos Books.

FATS AND OILS

Some fats and oils are high in vitamins A or E, but all are high in fat and calories. The amount of food per serving (sv) is described for each item so you can keep track of fat intake in teaspoons (tsp).

The following fats are considered healthy in moderation:

—Vegetable Oils, listed by the highest in polyunsaturated fat content: Safflower, sunflower, corn, partially hydrogenated soybean, cottonseed oils. (1 sv = 1 tsp)

—Margarines: Stick, tub, squeeze (1 sv = 1 tsp) or diet (1 sv = 2 tsp). One of the above oils should be listed as the first ingredient on the label with twice as much polyunsaturated as saturated fat.

—Salad Dressing and Mayonnaise: Homemade or store-bought, made with the oils listed above (1 sv = 2 tsp). Low-calorie dressings may be used as desired.

—Seeds and Nuts: All seeds (pumpkin, sesame, sunflower) and most nuts (except cashew, macadamia and pistachio). (1 sv = 3 tsp).

—Avocados and Olives: Use only in small amounts. (1 sv = 3 tsp chopped)

—Peanut Butter: Count as a fat (1 sv = 2 tsp) or use as a meatless main dish. (1 sv = 3 tsp)

—Olive Oil and Peanut Oil: These choices are not as good as the oils listed above. Avoid or use them sparingly. (1 sv = 1 tsp)

Depending upon your need for weight control, use no more than 5-8 servings of approved fats and oils per day.

Remember to count the "hidden fats" (in bakery products and snack foods, in cooking, on vegetables and breads).

Use cooking styles which use little or no fat — instead of frying, try roasting, broiling, steaming.

Foods in this category to avoid include the following foods:

—Solid Fats and Shortenings: Butter, bacon drippings, ham hocks, lard, salt pork, meat fat and drippings, gravy from meat drippings, shortening, suet, margarines except those listed as approved.

—Chocolate, Coconut, Coconut Oil, Palm Oil or Palm Kernel Oil: These are often used in bakery products, nondairy creamers, whipped toppings, candy and commercially fried foods. Read labels carefully.

DESSERTS, BEVERAGES, SNACKS

The foods listed as approved are low in saturated fat and cholesterol but many are high in calories and low in nutritional value. Use the foods from the other five food lists to make your eating plan. Then occasionally choose a few of the foods listed below to add interest. For weight control, select from the first two lists. If you are at your recommended weight, add selections from the "Other Choices" category.

—First Choice (low in calories or no calories): Raw vegetables, fresh fruit, fruit canned without sugar, plain gelatin, tea, coffee and cocoa powder.

MAN OF THE HOUSE. By Tip O'Neill.

Tip O'Neill, one of America's most colorful public figures, is a master politician — and a master storyteller, a man of wit and wisdom. First elected to the Massachusetts legislature in 1936, O'Neill has had an extraordinary political career spanning fifty years, including a decade as Speaker of the House.

These memoirs feature everyone from Boston politicos to America's biggest political names — the Kennedys, every president since FDR, and greats in Congress like Sam Rayborn. Never one to hold back, O'Neill is remarkably candid as he assesses our leaders, and his final portraits of Carter and Reagan are as blunt and vivid as any ever offered about our chief executives. O'Neill's story ends with a moving affirmation of his faith in old-fashioned liberalism, particularly the need to help those less fortunate.

ASPIRIN vs STROKE

It is known that a small daily dose of aspirin reduces the incidence of strokes. Modern Medicine reports, a daily aspirin reduces the severity of strokes even more than it reduces their number. Preliminary clinical studies suggest that daily aspirin cuts the number of strokes that are severe (fatal or paralyzing types) by 80%.

Steam and electricity produced by wood burning

SCOTIA, Calif. (AP) — The simultaneous production of steam and electricity has been hailed as an innovative step in the conservation of fossil fuel — but "co-generation" is nothing new for a California lumber company, according to Energy User News.

The company began producing steam and electricity with unsalable wood as far back as the 1880s, relying on an old "Dutch Oven" type furnace that burned some 800 tons of wood daily to produce 11 megawatts of power.

Now, with the installation of new boiler equipment, as much as 1,800 tons of bark, green wood and other waste will be burned to provide the fuel to fire boilers which produce steam and 25 megawatts daily, says the industry journal.

Some of the steam will run generators to provide electricity, while a portion will be rerouted for use in the mill.

For the first time in its nearly 100 years of co-generation the company also will sell electricity to a local state utility, while continuing to supply the company-owned town of Scotia with electricity at only four cents per kilowatt.

Snake migration observed

The annual snake migration this year is the biggest since 1959, according to local farmer-rancher and snake hunter Pete Hester.

Hester says that during the summers of '59 and '87, the rats and mice in fields dramatically increased in numbers, followed by a big increase in the snake population.

Snakes customarily move from summer to winter quarters in the fall but don't always migrate in the intensity seen this year. They are moving north, but Hester does not know where or why they stop.

Hester said the snakes probably migrate to find new territories because there are so many of them.

Hester cited 37 as the most he killed in one evening in '59, compared to a best of 23 in a night so far this year. He routinely hunts along a seven to eight-mile stretch of Highway 350.

About four years following the snake migration of '59, Hester and a friend caught some 700 live snakes that were taken to a Big Spring snake show. They came away with the first place trophy for the most caught, but their largest snake of five feet six inches came in second. A snake measuring a half-inch more won first place.

Of the 700 snakes caught for the show, 352 were caught in four days on ranch land owned by Snyder locals.

Most snakes weigh between three to five pounds. Hester's heaviest catch was a snake caught in '59 that weighed seven pounds. He did not measure its length.

He has never been bitten, he said.

Woman receives citation for volunteer work at zoo

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — To two wallabies, Sallie J. O'Connell is the next best thing to their real mothers.

To a boa constrictor named Rusty, she makes a good substitute for a tree.

To zebras, ostriches, elephants and other animals at the Indianapolis Zoo, she often is the one who feeds and cleans up after them.

To the president of the United States, O'Connell is an example of the American spirit of volunteerism.

The Indianapolis native has been named a citationist in the 1987 President's Volunteer Action Awards.

"Why would they pick a zoo volunteer?" she asks. "I don't feel I do as much as they feel I do."

But O'Connell, 42, admits to working more than 650 hours a year at the zoo, presenting animal programs at St. Francis Hospital every other week and spending her vacations at the zoo "pretending to be zookeeper."

That's on top of the 50 hours a week she works managing a Taco Bell on the southwest side of the city.

"Sallie O'Connell is perhaps the most committed of our volunteers," Richard M. Hurst, the zoo's director of human resources, wrote in his letter nominating her for an award. "She is truly an unpaid professional."

O'Connell's nomination was one of 2,000 sent to the competition sponsored by Volunteer, a private non-profit group, and Action, a federal agency for voluntary service.

Judges picked 15 winning people or groups and 55 citationists, all of whom were honored recently at a White House luncheon.

Talking while Rusty the boa constrictor wrapped himself around her, O'Connell said she simply enjoys working at the zoo.

She started in 1982 after attending a general meeting for potential volunteers.

She was intimidated on her first day when a cockatoo — then just a strange, big, white bird to her — climbed up her leg. Now, she says, she is comfortable with all the animals and tries to make others comfortable with them, too.

The boa constrictor is one of the animals she takes on hospital visits and to educational or public relations programs.

O'Connell says she loves to watch people who don't like snakes get up the nerve to touch them.

"A light dawns in their eyes like, 'Hey, it's not so bad,'" says O'Connell, who tells people that a snake feels like a basketball.

O'Connell has made herself at home — literally — with other exotic animals twice in the past two years.

The first time she took care of a baby wallaby for five months in an experiment to make the kangaroo-like animal less timid around humans.

The second time, a wallaby's mother rejected it and the zoo asked O'Connell to act as a surrogate for almost a year.

"It's probably like having a newborn baby," she says.

Pageant winner is announced

Alexa Rhea Partridge was a winner in the recent Austin Baby Pageant. Alexa is the 21-month-old daughter of Sheree and Leslie Partridge of Austin.

The competition included three categories, health, beauty and royalty. Age divisions were one to 11 months, 12 months through 2 years and two and one-half to six years. Hundreds of boys and girls from across Texas were entered in the pageant.

Alexa received a 100% diploma in the health category. She won a first place trophy in the beauty contest and a second place trophy in the royalty category in her age division.

Alexa is the granddaughter of Donnie and Al Fincher of Aspermont and the great-granddaughter of H. R. Gannaway of Hermleigh.

Bankers are keeping eye on 3 debtor nations

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Foreign bankers are keeping a watchful eye on a new group formed by Latin America's three biggest debtors to look for ways to ease the crushing financial burdens on their struggling economies.

In forming the Group of Three, the finance ministers of Mexico, Brazil and Argentina said their joint action wasn't intended as a club to bludgeon their creditors into better deals.

But some bankers and analysts said the group has the potential to become a formidable bargaining power to demand easier terms on their debts.

"It is not going to go anywhere now, but I think it's a start," said Rogelio Ramirez de la O, who has an economic forecasting firm in Mexico City.

"If some time the three countries are in the same bad situation, then it could move to a more active group," he said.

The three have combined foreign debts of about $270 billion and have been repeatedly plagued by money woes since the debt crisis began in 1982.

Brazil, the developing world's No. 1 debtor with loans of $113 billion, has indefinitely suspended interest payments on $68 billion in loans it owes private banks.

Argentina, which has a foreign debt of about $53 billion, recently worked out a new financial deal with its creditors. But the government is finding itself under fresh pressures from a worsening economy and political setbacks.

Some foreign bankers in Brazil expressed concern that other countries might adopt the Brazilian tactics on the debt.

"One of our main concerns with this Group of Three is that Brazil's example of recalcitrance may serve as an example to Mexico and Argentina," said an American banker, who spoke only on condition of anonymity.

"The idea of a debtors' cartel never really bothered us very much in the past," he said. But now, he said, the debtors are more specific in calling for lower interest rates on the debt and reduced bank earnings on the loans.

"If these ideas are adopted by the three countries, then we may have some serious problems on our hands," he said.

A British banker, who also demanded anonymity, said, "There may be some concern that Brazil's example may rub off on Mexico and Argentina, but overall I cannot say we are overly worried about the Group of Three."

"Past attempts at forming debtor groups have always ended up with each member going its own way to seek a solution with the foreign financial community," he added.

Yet, Ramirez de la O said, "It's enough, if they...adopt a consistent front. Even if they don't stop payments, that consistent front in itself is strong enough."

In announcing their decision last month in New York, the finance ministers said they will meet twice a year "to examine their economic relations and questions of mutual interest, particularly concerning trade and the foreign debt."

Among other things, they said in a statement, they agreed domestic austerity measures "are not sufficient to resolve the problem of the debt ... (It) requires the exercise of co-responsibility of debtors and creditors."

Mexican Treasury Secretary Gustavo Petricioli later said, "I do not believe that it is useful — because it would be false — to dramatize to excess this G-3."

The group, he said, was formed to make formal the consultations finance officials have had since the start of the debt crisis in 1982. "Now it is simply institutionalized," he said.

Geraldo Moura, spokesman for the Brazilian Finance Ministry, said, "The Brazilian government (feels) that there are common interests among the three and that the group should have formed sooner."

"I think it's just to enhance communications, which is in the debtors' interest," said Christine Bindert, senior vice president at the financial firm of Shearson Lehman Brothers Inc. in New York.

"I don't see it as something the bankers should worry too much about," she said.

In the international financial world, finance officials have formed a host of groups for periodic consultations with their counterparts.

The most influential is the Group of Seven, made up of the finance ministers of seven key industrialized nations, including the United States.

"No one sees it (the Group of Seven) as a sinister group," said a Mexican financial official in defending the forming of the Group of Three.

But this official and a foreign banker in Mexico said increased pressure — from rising interest rates to domestic demands for better living standards — could spark the debtor countries to action. Both demanded anonymity.

"There may well come a time when they say enough is enough," said the banker.

"Then," he said, "there may be trouble."

Ramirez de la O speculated the three felt compelled to form the group because, after five years of living with the debt problem, the outlook remains uncertain.

"They are coming closer and closer on a sort of consensus that good debtor behavior is not enough, and that the debtors have to take care of themselves," he said.

Of the three, Mexico — the developing world's No. 2 debtor at $105 billion — is in the best shape.

It recently won a $14.4 billion aid package from the international financial community, and the government's economic program has produced some striking results.

International reserves have reached a record of about $15 billion, export sales have soared, and the economy has begun growing again.

Even so, officials see the debt as a heavy burden slowing efforts to modernize the economy. They would clearly like some relief from the interest payments that will run about $8 billion to $9 billion this year.

Female body building has entered the mainstream

DALLAS (AP) — A dozen magazines on the neighborhood newsstands feature steroid-stuffed female physiques.

In bookstores around town, there are glossy tomes by women who pump up, cut up and pose down. And in the Dallas health clubs and gyms that dot shopping centers from Mesquite to Plano, more and more women are taking to the weights.

Female body building has gone mainstream.

Once solely the territory of superjocks either stirred on by their boyfriends and husbands to get tough or inspired by the male body builders they chose to mimic, women body builders now number an estimated 4 million internationally.

Of the 19 million body builders in the United States, nearly 2 million are women. Some observers say that in Dallas and the Southwest there may be several thousand women who work out with weights and train intensely.

Hundreds of Dallas-area women compete in the scores of amateur regional championships, while a few of those, including local heroine Lori Bowen-Rice, have gone on to win national titles and commercial recognition.

"Women seem to have a much greater interest now (in body building) as opposed to what has been the traditional feminine look," says George Dallam, service and education director of the President's Health Club on McKinney Avenue in Dallas. "More women are conscious of body sculpting."

"I do notice a lot of women getting serious about conditioning themselves," says Bill Bray, director of sports and the fitness center at the downtown YMCA, where both men and women can be members.

Kim Jones, who owns Texas Gym in Garland, agrees that more women are pumping up today.

"It's easy to go to a health club and sit on a bike, but we are getting more athletic females in here. Women still call and say, 'Are only men allowed?' " Jones adds, "I say we want the women."

Pam Ross is a body builder. She is 31, works as a bartender, goes to beauty school during the days and in the evening teaches a class in Dallas called "Body Building for Women." Since she started teaching body building for women in July, she says, enrollment has been increasing each month.

"It's becoming more socially acceptable," says Ross, who says her body fat decreased from 18 percent to 7 percent since she began body building.

"I'm not trying to be stronger than the guys, but I'm a lot more assertive and aggressive when I'm by myself now. I used to be a shy wallflower, and it's brought me out of my shell and I'm more gregarious and positive."

She is 5 feet 8 and weighs 135 pounds, and when she spreads out her back muscles, her measurements are 40-24-34. Since she began lifting weights four years ago, her back has increased 6 inches in width.

Ross won the Lone Star Classic overall title for women in 1985 after a year of working out in Massachusetts with former Mr. Universe Jeff King.

Ross now works out with her boyfriend, who also is a body builder, but says because of the intense training, "I have no social life."

Few people can help but notice that 29-year-old Karen Altemus looks like Lisa Hartman. With spiky blond hair, deep green eyes and a heart-shape face, Altemus looks fit and healthy, not bulging with Popeye muscles like the body builder stereotype. She won the 1986 Miss Texas Cup, two years after placing fifth in her first Texas State Championship. She weighs 125 now, but when she competes she trims down to 106, she says.

Married, with a 10-year-old son, Altemus says she works out three days, then has one day off.

Jesse Jackson rides with Border Patrol

MISSION, Texas (AP) — Standing on the banks of the Rio Grande, the Rev. Jesse Jackson said the U.S. government should put as much oomph into its anti-drug smuggling campaign here as it does defending allies' borders in Europe and Asia.

"You need to be congratulated for what you have done, but you obviously need more enforcement," Jackson told Silvestre Reyes, the Border Patrol's chief patrol agent for the McAllen Sector of South Texas.

Jackson, 46, wearing a green Border Patrol cap, gazed across the river into Mexico Thursday and referred to drug smuggling as a form of warfare against the United States.

"We don't use a phrase in Korea and Europe, 'Say no to communism.' We put up a serious defense," Jackson told Reyes while riding along the border in a Border Patrol vehicle.

Earlier in the day, Jackson was critical of U.S. immigration policies, which he said were partly to blame for poverty in the region.

"Most Americans have no idea of the impact of our immigration policy with our neighbors next door and what's happening in the (Rio Grande) Valley here in South Texas," he said while visiting an impoverished community near the city of Progreso.

Jackson met with residents of a neighborhood known locally as a colonia, two miles north of the Mexican border. He stopped along a caliche road at the plywood-floor home of 73-year-old Placida Torres in the colonia called "La Frontera."

Residents told Jackson the neighborhood was developed four years ago, but did not obtain drinking water until March and remains without sewage connections.

"This is on the edge of national shame and international disgrace," Jackson said.

"This is a kind of little Ethopia right here in our own face," Jackson said in the yard equipped with an outdoor toilet.

He said he intended to contact House Speaker Jim Wright, D-Texas, to ask for a congressional hearing "to put some light on the situation."

Bobbie Rock marches to sober drummer

HOUSTON (AP) — You can find Bobbie Rock in a recent Playgirl magazine in the section called "Rock's Sexiest Bad Boys." Exposing a body builder's granite chest, he smolders like Sylvester Stallone.

You can also find Bobbie Rock at his parent's home in northwest Houston, on leave from Los Angeles. Talking non-stop, he eats a wholesome bowl of oatmeal and tells about his Big Break.

Bobbie Rock (Bob Brock, to his old buddies at Scarborough High School) is the drummer who provides the skill-rattling rhythm for a rock group called Vinnie Vincent Invasion. It's a relatively new group, formed by big-name talent from Kiss and Ozzie Osbourne. Rock was the only unknown in the band.

He took off for Los Angeles to audition two years ago, knowing the time was right. Or maybe knowing he was tired of playing in every low-down dive between the Fifth Ward and Louisiana. Anyway, he risked big, and he won big and lived to tell the tale.

His band's heavy-metal heritage might give someone the wrong impression, though. You know — drugs, violence, decadence, that sort of thing. Bobbie Rock may be wearing a silver cross in one ear and a long untamed mane of black curly hair, but he's actually a comfortable, calm sort of person.

And he's far more likely to be sober than the average judge.

At the ripe old age of 24, Rock has 11 years of sobriety to his credit. He started drinking to fit in with some older kids who played in garage bands in the neighborhood. He hit bottom at 13.

When problems with his family and school authorities started closing in, one of his friends told him about Palmer Drug Abuse Program. The idea was to confess his drug problem, get his parents off his back, go to a few meetings — and get high on the side.

Sounded cool to Rock.

Thing was, though, the PDAP counselor had long hair and a laid-back attitude. He didn't pressure Rock. Try us, he said. You'll like us. Give us 30 days and see what happens.

That sounded cool to Rock, too. He stayed sober from his very first meeting to present day. His friends complained. Rock changed peer groups, hanging out with kids from the program.

He thinks he may have been the only PDAP-er at his school. But he resolutely wore his PDAP T-shirt and the PDAP monkey's paw necklace at all times. At first his old friends tested him, offering him dope. They soon gave up.

"When people see you are serious, they started taking you seriously. They begin to respect your conviction, whether they like you or not. I got along with every single group — the rednecks, the jocks, the kids who got high. I had no problems with anyone," Rock said of his high school days.

He says he'll always appreciate learning that he could hang tough and hold his own. It's a lesson he uses to this day, staying sober in the music business where drugs are always accessible and acceptable. He's learned to be diplomatic when he says, "No, thanks."

Rock says there is a popular misconception that all rock stars get high all the time. First, he says, everybody doesn't do it. Second, he says, life is too frantic for that.

"With 250 shows a year, heavy touring, arena performancces, interviews and photo sessions and traveling by bus at night, you can't burn the candle at both ends and live past 25," said Rock.

Rock sets the pace for clean living when the Invasion is on the road. He won't eat the greasy cheeseburgers, heading instead for the grocery story to stock up on oatmeal and granola. And he has to find a gym in every town to keep up his body building program.

But hey, that doesn't mean he isn't bad. It doesn't mean the Scout leader is going to offer a seal of approval for the Invasion's lyrics.

Well, they aren't drug-oriented, and there's nothing overtly satanic about them, he says. They are sexually oriented. But the more political people get over the lyrics, he says, the more albums the group sells.

"You just can't take the music that seriously," he said.

Even though it was a long shot, he wasn't surprised when he was invited to California to audition. It was just meant to be, he felt. He felt confident enough to tell people along the way that he was a member of the band.

The audition itself was a magical moment, he says. Instead of a 10-minute spot and don't-call-us-we'll-call-you, Rock says the session turned into a drum clinic where he showed his stuff, all the different styles of music he had incorporated into his rock routine.

When he finished, the other two musicians gave him a standing ovation. Unless someone comes in with three arms, they told him, you're hired.

People bicker about rebuilding effort

SARAGOSA, Texas (AP) — The rebuilding effort following the May 22 tornado here threatens to do what the twister couldn't — break the town's spirit.

The tornado dipped down from the direction of the Davis Mountains and tore through the east side of town, killing 30 people and destroying 61 houses. Saragosans vowed to rebuild, donations poured in, and already, volunteers have built 22 new homes.

But 21 stand empty because they lack plumbing, painting and gas hookups. One house was so poorly built it had to be lifted off its foundation and replaced. And the one family that has moved into a rebuilt home still lacks hot water.

Other tornado victims complain that the county has not been keeping adequate records of what was donated for the relief effort, and where the materials and money went.

"The county government stinks, as far as I'm concerned," said Joe Gallego, whose house and tavern were destroyed. "I can't say they're stealing it, but someone's pocketing some money, or misplacing it or whatever you want to call it."

County officials say the complaints are without merit, that a small number of malcontents are muddying Saragosa's name. Townspeople are frustrated, they say, and the bickering is adding to the delays.

"Five months have passed, and only one person is in a home. But it's not the volunteers' fault. It's because we've had so many people arguing with each other," said Felipe Lopez, a Saragosa native hired to be the building committee's on-site supervisor.

Jose R. Candelas is one resident upset about the construction delays and a squabble with the Red Cross over how he could spend a $5,000 federal grant. He now spends his days working behind the house he can't move into because of unfinished plumbing, making cinder blocks he'll use to rebuild his convenience store destroyed by the tornado.

But what disturbs him most is rumors that a lot of donations that were sent to Saragosa never made it into the hands of tornado victims.

"Where are the donations?" he said. "We think there needs to be an investigation."

Many donations of cash and building materials were handled by the Reeves County Sheriff's Office. Rumors about improprieties prompted some Saragosa residents to circulate a petition authorizing Texas Rural Legal Aid to demand that the county release records showing exactly what happened to relief donations.

County officials sent the records last week to a Legal Aid office in Weslaco. They were shipped Wednesday to Del Rio, where managing attorney Alpha Hernandez said she planned to start inspecting them Thursday.

Sheriff Raul Florez said Wednesday that he submitted photocopies of cancelled checks and bank deposit slips. Ms. Hernandez said she wanted more than that.

"There was a lot of cash distributed and we would like to know who got what," she said. "It looks like he's telling us what was sent in."

Florez said he and his deputies have nothing to hide.

"I don't have no need of being dishonest and my people don't have no need of being dishonest," he said, adding that the deputies who worked most closely with the Saragosa victims had friends and family in the town.

Gallego, Candelas, Legal Aid and other critics are just chronic complainers, he said.

"This handful of people, they would be dissatisfied if it were raining $100 bills everyday," he said.

Most of the villagers don't complain, and seem grateful for what they have received, officials said, even if it seems inadequate that their three-bedroom houses are being replaced with hastily made one-bedroom structures.

"There's a lot of positive things to be said about this community," Manuel Galindo, disaster coordinator, said this week.

But the man who hired Galindo, Reeves County Judge Bill Pigman, had few kind words for Saragosans about two weeks ago. Pigman, head of the town's building committee, told The Dallas Morning News that Saragosans have a "welfare" mentality.

"If I give you a loaf of bread for two weeks, you'd (complain) if I didn't give you meat to go with it," he said. "It's the nature of the people down there. I don't know how to explain it. They've been on welfare all their lives, and they expect things will be done for them."

Pigman was out of town this week and did not return calls from The Associated Press.

Trapped toddler causes concern of abandoned wells

MIDLAND, Texas (AP) — Many property owners in the oil-rich Permian Basin probably don't know that their land may harbor one of hundreds of abandoned wells like the one that trapped a toddler, a hydrologist says.

Neighborhood children said they occasionally threw rocks down the 8-inch abandoned water well casing that turned into a trap for 18-month-old Jessica McClure.

"What it does is call attention to the hazard, as well as the liability of these (old wells)," said Joe Reed, a Midland hydrologist and environmental consultant with Reed and Associates.

"There are many, many wells all over town," although no one knows a specific number of abandoned wells veiled by the thick prairie grass, he said.

Reed said Thursday that many old wells still have pumps inside their casings, but if the pumps have been removed, the casings should be capped with a welded steel plate or plugged with cement.

Under the Texas Water Well Drillers Act, landowners are responsible for plugging old wells with cement that haven't been used for six months or more, said Mike Leach, investigator in Austin with the Water Well Drillers Board.

But enforcement of the law is generally left up to the landowner, and sometimes people buy land and are not aware of wells on their property, he said.

"That's why it's a big concern. I'm sure there's hundreds of holes out there that are just open and a lot of people don't even know they are on their land," Leach said.

Reed said during his 20 years as a hydrologist in Midland, he has rarely run into an 8-inch casing — water-well casings in the city are usually 4 to 6 inches in diameter.

"That's very unusual to find someone falling in something that small," Reed said. "It's not totally uncommon, but again it's something that's preventable."

Old water wells are abundant in Midland because during the 1940s and '50s, many homeowners tapped into the shallow High Plains aquifer underneath the city to irrigate their lawns and gardens, Reed said.

And Jessica's neighborhood was once known as rural Midland where wells may have been drilled to use as a primary source of water, Reed said.

Senior City Planner Becky Hamm said the neighborhood known as the Permian Estates was annexed into the city in 1952. Neighbor Maxine Sprague said the well where toddler Jessica McClure was trapped has not been used for 20 years.

Jessica's aunt, Jamie Moore and her husband, James, have rented the home where the 8-inch well is located, since May, Mrs. Sprague told the Midland Reporter-Telegram.

Jessica's mother, Reba Gayle McClure, was babysitting at the home Wednesday morning when the accident occurred.

Bystanders said a flower pot was used to cover the opening on the 8-inch casing, but whether the Moores knew about the well is not known.

Authorities speculated that the pot was removed and Jessica accidently fell into the cavity or was mistakenly dropped in by other children playing with her.

Mayor Carroll Thomas said the City Council will be asking for a review of the accident, and that an ordinance placing stricter controls over abandoned wells could result.

The St. Clair River bridge from Port Huron, Mich., to Point Edward, Ontario, was dedicated in 1938.

Where Kissing Is Involved, How Deep Is Dangerous?

DEAR ABBY: Something is bothering me concerning AIDS information. Young folks, as a rule, pay very little attention to informative TV programs or ads. Not many read newpapers.

However, most parents read your column, so actually you are the best source of information for the layman there is.

Abby, what I read and hear always mentions "body fluids." Does that also mean "deep kissing"? Or just blood, or the sex act?

Color me stupid, if you wish, but I know that most teen-agers do not understand, and many do not ask their parents' advice about anything — especially about sex. They think we are old fuddy-duddies. Thank you.

P.M., SALISBURY, MD.

DEAR P.M.: There is still much confusion in the minds of the public. Although there has never been a documented case of the AIDS virus being transmitted via "deep" or "French" kissing, researchers feel it would be prudent to refrain from deep kissing unless you are sure your partner is free of the AIDS virus. Although the concentration of the virus in saliva is minuscule, and the risk appears to be quite small, there are no 100 percent "absolutes" in medicine. So, avoid deep kissing, unless you "know" with whom you are having the pleasure.

DEAR ABBY: I met this guy; he's cute, smart, a law student at Stanford, and he has everything a girl could dream of. He's Prince Charming. But this prince has the worst breath I have ever smelled. It turned me off completely.

Now he can't figure out why I'm too busy to go out with him all of a sudden. This is a tragedy — what a waste! I know it shouldn't matter, but it does — and that's what is killing me. I really like this guy, and I hate to just drop him, but I don't want to smell his breath again, either.

I tried giving him breath mints, but even that didn't help.

CALIFORNIA GIRL

DEAR GIRL: Do Prince Charming an enormous favor and level with him. It could be his teeth, his diet, his stomach — even "nerves." If he isn't aware that his breath turns you off, he'll never seek a solution to what could be a medical or dental problem.

• • •

DEAR ABBY: I am a 30-year-old woman with a problem. It may be a problem that cannot be solved, but I would like to know one way or the other, so here goes: My stomach looks like a road map! I've had three major surgeries that left "major" scars, and I can't stand to look at them.

Along with this, my skin stretched during my pregnancy. I can't wear shorts, and a bathing suit is out of the question.

Please, Abby, is there a doctor who specializes in this sort of plastic surgery? If you saw me, you would know that I am not just being vain. I really look pathetic.

Please help me. I'm desperate! Sign me ...

ROAD MAP

DEAR ROAD MAP: Ask your family physician to recommend a board-certified plastic surgeon who specializes in repairing the kind of scars you can't bear to look at.

Body cosmetic surgery has come a long way. You shouldn't need a road map to find a competent surgeon.

DEAR ABBY: After reading "The Monkey's Disgrace," I felt I should tell you that I've had that poem since I was 10 years old. (I am now 80.) I am sending you two more amusing poems I have had for at least 70 years. You may want to share them with your readers.

BERTHA D. GOFF,
COLDWATER, MICH.

DEAR BERTHA GOFF: How generous of you. I'm going to use both of them — but one at a time. The first:

COMEDY

Where can a man buy a cap for his knee?
Or a key to a lock of his hair?
Can your eyes be called an academy
Because there are two pupils there?

What jewels are in the crown of your head?
Who walked the bridge of your nose?
Can you do the shingling in the roof of your mouth
With the nails on the ends of your toes?

Can the crook of your elbow be sent to jail?
If so, what did it do?
Can you sit in the shade of the palm of your hand?
Be darned if I know, do you?

Did you ever sharpen your shoulder blades?
Can you beat the drums in your ears?
Do the calves in your legs eat the corn on your toes?
Then why not grow corn on the ears?

DEAR ABBY: I own a motorcycle and have occasionally treated one of my children to a ride. I have always been extremely careful when one of them was aboard. We have never gone on highways, we avoided heavy traffic, wore helmets, etc.

A couple of months ago I was riding with my 6-year-old son behind me, when I felt his fingers tighten on my back and heard a high-pitched wail. I immediately pulled over and stopped.

When I looked back his shoe was gone and the whole side of his foot had been burned off! After reconstructive surgery, skin grafts and a month in the hospital, thank God the foot was saved. He is finally beginning to walk again. That foot is terribly disfigured, and will cause him problems for the rest of his life.

Abby, please tell people that motorcycles are dangerous, especially for young children. It doesn't have to take an accident for a serious injury to occur. A fidgety kid can easily get his foot caught in the spokes of a moving wheel. And an exhaust pipe can burn a foot to the bone in a split second. A day doesn't go by that I don't relive this awful experience.

I love my kids more than anything in the world. It tears me up inside seeing what my little boy went through because I decided to take him for a "little ride." And it could have been a lot worse! Please, you folks with motorcycles, when you've got kids with you — take the car!

SORRY I DIDN'T IN DENVER

DEAR SORRY: Thanks for a valuable addition to this column.

One of Britain's worst train wrecks happened Oct. 8, 1952, when two speeding expresses crashed into a commuter train at Harrow, near London. The crash took 112 lives and almost 160 were injured. The first express passed through one caution light and two stop lights before plowing into the rear of the stationary train. Then the second express hit the front end.

Red carpet makes Nudel welcome

JERUSALEM (AP) — Ida Nudel, hailed as the "Guardian Angel of Refuseniks" for spending more than a decade fighting for the rights of jailed Soviet Jews, arrived from Moscow to a crowd of thousands who chanted her name.

Clasping her new Israeli citizenship certificate to her heart and wiping tears from her eyes, Ms. Nudel told the Israelis who greeted her: "The moment came. I am on the soil of my people, at home."

Ms. Nudel, 56, had sought permission to emigrate from the Soviet Union for 16 years. She arrived at Ben Gurion International Airport aboard U.S. oil magnate Armand Hammer's private Boeing 727 Thursday night. Hammer said he negotiated with Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze for Ms. Nudel's emigration rights.

Her sister, Elana Fridman, whom Ms. Nudel had not seen since 1971, boarded the plane for a brief private moment. Ms. Nudel then stepped down from the plane, her pet collie beside her.

She was welcomed by a shoulder-to-shoulder crowd that included American actress Jane Fonda and Israel's leaders.

"She represents the strongest of Jewish women," Foreign Minister Shimon Peres told the crowd Thursday. "An event like tonight can hardly happen in any other country to any other people. It is really Jewish. It is really Israel."

Ms. Fonda also praised the 4-foot-11, graying Ms. Nudel for all she had done for dissident Soviet Jewish prisoners. "I thank her for teaching me one very important thing — to never lose hope," Ms. Fonda said.

Ms. Nudel worked full time for 10 years on behalf of imprisoned Soviet Jews, including many she had never met. She sent them presents, smuggled vitamins into their prisons, submitted court appeal applications and offered their families support.

Soviet authorities denied Ms. Nudel permission to emigrate in 1971 although her only living relative, Ms. Fridman, was given an exit visa to Israel.

The Soviets said Ms. Nudel was denied permission on the ground that she might have overheard state secrets while working as a bookkeeper at the Moscow Institute of Hydrology and Microbiological Synthesis.

In 1978, she was sentenced for four years' exile in Siberia for hanging a banner on her balcony which read: "KGB, Give Me My Visa."

After her release in 1982, she was forced to move to the Moldavian town of Bendery in the southwest corner of the Soviet Union near the Romanian border.

Ms. Nudel, speaking to her Israeli audience at the airport, recalled: "I had some very tough moments."

No near collision, says tower chief

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A private jet carrying former Transportation Secretary Elizabeth Dole had a close encounter with another plane, but neither pilot considered the incident a near-collision, a federal aviation official said.

Mrs. Dole, who was flying into Lakefront Airport here to speak on behalf of the undeclared presidential candidacy of her husband, Sen. Bob Dole, was not in any danger, control tower chief Lee Hunt said Thursday.

Hunt is an official of the Federal Aviation Administration, which was under Mrs. Dole's supervision this summer when reports of sharp increases in near-collisions brought congressional criticism and tighter restrictions on air traffic at some busy airports.

There were conflicting reports of what happened Wednesday morning, when the Lear jet carrying Mrs. Dole and two aides arrived here.

Above the Fold

By Donny Brown

There is a working rule about newspaper guys who grow weary of daily deadlines, unwilling news subjects and the profession's inherent likelihood of having one's mistakes profiled for a widespread audience.

The working rule is these burnt-out cases often go into PR.

That is, public relations, a field of endeavor which has never been able to generate a good public image for itself despite its claimed ability to provide this service for customers.

Our brethren who have crossed over all seem to wear shirts and ties and to enjoy convenient hours, regular holidays and expense accounts.

For this, they are often the victim of scorn from the working journalist, who must feel that his crummy hours, no holidays and weekly paycheck are sufficient reasons for, shall we say, not having to wear a tie.

In truth, for most news guys, PR is the general fallback. That field they figure they can always try if push ever progresses to shove.

We'll admit to considering it at least once or twice. Then, we get releases in the mail--complete with a glossy, 8X10 black and white photo--with the startling announcement, "Unprecedented Skinning Device Introduced."

We won't dwell on brand names, but suffice to say it's a neatly typed, two-page mailout extolling the virtues of this "newly patented" do-dad which is "revolutionizing the hunting industry."

At this point, place yourself in front of that poor PR guy's keyboard, who must now detail why his is better than theirs.

Attacking the competition is always a good start, and in this case Brand X is a range of "by hand" approaches which include something called the "rock and rope method" and the old faithful "common pliers."

Briefly, what we have here is a "two handled tool" on one end with a set of "skin-grasping teeth" on the other. These teeth, further described as "interlocking," are capable of a "vice-like grip."

After applying a little pressure at the handle end, the user just "pulls downward easily" and--BINGO!--he has saved "time, labor and money," not to mention minimizing that old "tedious, muscle-straining chore."

An executive for the company is quoted as saying, "There's nothing else like it. It's easy to use and the result is first-rate."

In truth, the PR guy in this case had their work cut out for them, trying to lay bare the essense of their product, to pare away the outside layers of initial disinterest so that the real meat of the issue could be packaged away.

(We could go on, but it would only get worse.)

No profession is without its cliches. And newspapers are filled with them, from "armed and dangerous" suspects to a zillion fund raising efforts which are invaribly "kicked off."

The problem with PR is that the cliches come too easily.

Too often you have to make your product sound like rocket fuel in competition with buggy whips. With this kind of stated purpose, it's easy to see how you might drift into windbagism.

But we all have to make a living. And if you're interested in their product, we've kept the release on file.

Country Life

By Deanie Francis Mills

Well guys, it was bound to happen sooner or later, though every columnist hopes like heck it will be later. The truth of the matter is...probably the best way to put this...actually, what happened is...OK, I'll just say it. I ran out of ideas.

After two years of doing this every week, I simply ran smack-dab out of anything to say. Or at least, anything that I haven't already said before. I asked my husband, "What do you think I should write about this week?" And he said, "Well, it's fall." (Aggies are very profound.)

Fall. I like the fall. October is my favorite month. The weather is pretty, what trees there are around are changing. The cotton crop looks pretty good. Scab football beats heck out of The Real Thing. (I expecially like the replacement fans.) School's going strong.

OK. That took up some space. Now what?

There are no big holidays going on that I can steal ideas from. (From which I can steal ideas?) I've written about my kids and my husband and my career (such as it is). My editor, bless him, told me long ago that I would not have to limit this column to country ideas alone. This is good, or else I'd have run out of things to say a year ago.

Hmmm. Here I sit, twiddling my thumbs. I've got the "Miami Vice" movie soundtrack on the tape deck to sort of jazz me up. (It didn't work). There are two framed cartoons on my desk. One is a "Berry's World" from a couple of years ago. A mother and her little girl, who is dressed in a space suit, are looking up at the stars, and the little girl says, "Don't you wish you were a kid again and had a role model like Sally Ride?" Then there is a "Snafu" cartoon, a weary-looking man, obviously a writer, coming into his office which contains piles and piles of manuscript pages. His wife says, "You got a nibble on your book...a paper recycling company called." (I sent that one to my agent).

There's a coffee mug with the Winston Churchill quote, "Never give in. Never give in. Never, never, never, never, in nothing great or small, large or petty--never give in." And the card a friend sent me with a monkey sitting at a desk stacked high with junk, which says, "If there's an easier way to the top, I wish somebody'd let me in on it!" The paper weight my sister gave me which reads, "Old teachers never lose their class." And another paper weight I bought myself years ago when I first started writing which says simply, "Never give up."

A couple of cartoons pinned to the drapes which I clipped from "Writer's Digest" magazine: a man holding an open letter with the caption, "...as I read the rejection notice, I heard something behind me...It sounded like a universe...giggling." And my favorite: a tombstone shaped like a typewriter and paper; carved into the "paper" is the inscription, "J.L. Huffler, 1923-1985...The End."

Pretty shameless, huh? I gave you the grand tour of my desk (not counting all the junk), managed to get a chuckle out of you (hopefully) and fill up space at the same time! You get sneaky when you're desperate. (Though I'm sure my editor isn't fooled.)

There's a perfectly good reason why I am so "blocked" (to use a famous writer's cop-out term) on this week's column. For the past several weeks I've been deeply immersed in a new novel of suspense which features a female police officer as the main character. The plot is very involved and requires a lot of research. While all my energies and concentration are focused on that, I've been depleted in other areas.

I could fill up some more space writing about my new novel, but I don't think that's a very good idea. It would be much better just to drop this for now and, rather than write ABOUT something, just WRITE it. (It's the only way to reach The End).

Which means, in computer jargon, I'll have to quit this document, exit system, plug in a new disk, open a new docu

Letters to the Editor

To the editor,

I would like to say that if I knew who the person was who left the new-born puppies out in the cotton field (and you know who you are), I would file charges.

Not only with the humane society, but for trespassing. I hope you can sleep well at night, knowing what you did. I know I couldn't.

To the editor,

In our recent Civil Service election, our City Council made a unanimous decision against Civil Service. Our mayor, city manager and (others) with so many ridiculous figures, there is no way they could all be true.

In an article in the newspaper, it had quoted the mayor saying it seemed they were against the police and fire department, but it was not quite so — that both departments were doing a fine job. Using the mayor's own words, that they were doing a fine job, what does the City Council do? Cut their pay.

I think this is a good way to lose some qualified people. I would bet any one of them that they would be glad to call upon either department if their homes or places of business were on fire or if someone was holding a gun to their back or a member of their families; then they wouldn't think they were overpaid.

Our present mayor was on the City Council a year ago when the city employees were to get a 4 percent raise, but did not get it. At the same time, a $10,000 raise was given to three department heads. Two of these department heads do not have to patrol the streets day and night, risking their lives, but they got the pay

Casinos are charged with ignoring minor's compulsive gambling habit

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Debra Kim Cohen was a high-roller, gambling away thousands of dollars at the blackjack tables and getting VIP treatment in return, including free limo rides, drinks, hotel rooms and expensive meals.

She was also underage, a 17-year-old compulsive gambler whose father repeatedly pleaded with casinos not to let her play, state gaming regulators charged Thursday.

Five casinos — Caesars, Harrah's Marina, Resorts International, Elsinore's Atlantis and Trump Plaza — were charged by the Division of Gaming Enforcement with allowing her to gamble even though she was under 21.

Miss Cohen, now 18, lost money withdrawn from her bank account, earned from sales jobs and given her at her Sweet 16 party, said her father, Leonard Cohen.

"I tried punishing her, I tried not punishing her," said Cohen, an Atlantic City detective. "I tried taking her out myself, spending time with her. I tried psychiatrists, teachers, her peers."

He said his daughter's gambling habit "got to the point where she would be gone two, three, four days at a time, to the point where she slept in casino lobbies and bathrooms. This would go on until she was penniless and hungry."

Attorney General W. Cary Edwards charged that the five casinos "not only allowed the minor to gamble, but each rated her play and each failed to adequately question her about her age."

"To compound matters, as a result of their ratings, Caesars and Resorts extended her complimentary services, while Harrah's made the offer, which was declined," he added.

The "comps," customarily given to preferred customers, came even though Cohen had his attorney send letters and photographs to the casinos, notifying them the girl was an underage compulsive gambler, the complaint said.

Officials from the five casinos said they had not received the complaint and had no comment.

Caesars Senior Vice President Alfred J. Cade said security guards rigorously attempt to keep juveniles out.

"That segment of the market is not important to us ... because there's not a great deal of disposable income among teenagers," he said.

Cohen said Thursday his lawyer advised him not to speak about the situation because his daughter faces charges of underage gambling.

But he said earlier he had tried everything to help his daughter, who lives with her mother in New York City. They have an unpublished telephone number and Cohen would not give it out.

Underage gambling is not a new problem, DGE Director Anthony Parrillo acknowledged, but the state Casino Control Commission has imposed only nominal fines on casinos. Fines have ranged from $2,000 to $4,000, Hagerty said.

In the Cohen case, gaming regulators will ask the commission to impose harsher penalties and prescribe measures for each casino to take "to ensure that this kind of thing is not so easily done," Parrillo said.

Vice President Millard Fillmore succeeded to the presidency in 1850 following the death of President Zachary Taylor.

The Declaration of Independence was read aloud to Gen. George Washington's troops in New York on July 9, 1776.

Governor marks home of former Texas legation

PARIS (AP) — A French military band played the Texas state song as Gov. Bill Clements dedicated a plaque marking the home of the independent Texas Republic's former legation on the fashionable Place Vendome.

During the ceremony in a light rainfall Thursday, Clements said the marker is a sign of a relationship dating back to 17th century French colonists.

"We in Texas have had a 300-year relationship with the French," Clements said. "We have commercial enterprises, we have academic exchanges, we have joined together for freedom in Europe and France helped us in our battle for independence."

France signed a treaty with Texas on Sept. 25, 1839, becoming the first country to recognize the new republic after its fight to break away from Mexico.

"Vive le Texas!" exclaimed Jean Tiberi, who represented Mayor Jacques Chirac at the brief ceremony.

When Frenchmen think of Texas, they remember the Alamo, the NASA space center and Texan help in World War I and World War II, "for the ideals of human rights and liberty we have fought for together," Tiberi said.

Clements, a Republican, arrived Thursday in Paris to begin a five-day visit focusing on trade and investment. He will also visit the cities of Lyon and Dijon in eastern France.

"Part of my mission here is to strengthen and establish commercial ties," he told a few dozen people huddled under umbrellas in front of No. 1 Place Vendome, now a hotel offering rooms for 480 to 600 francs (80 to 100 dollars), or 790 francs (130 dollars) with bath.

The four-story building also houses the Morabito leather goods store and an IBM computer showroom.

Jean Mazel, a French historian who researched the Paris archives to find records of where the legation was housed, said there were three different locations between 1840 and 1845, when Texas was annexed by the United States.

"The first was a very humble place on rue de Richelieu," Mazel said.

Texas Charge d'Affaires Ashbel Smith — who had studied medicine in Paris in the early 1830s — moved the legation in 1842 to the Place Vendome, an elegant square dominated by a 132-foot column supporting a statue of the Emperor Napoleon.

The following year, the legation moved a few blocks away to 20 rue de Castiglione, its last home.

Tiberi said the Place Vendome building was chosen for the plaque because it is the most prestigious of the three locations.

The French legation in Austin, built in 1840, has been restored and is maintained as an historic site by the Daughters of the Republic.

Mazel said the French charge d'affaires, Pinckney Alphonse Dubois de Saligny, had a difficult time, especially after shooting a neighboring farmer's pig who was tearing up the legation's garden.

Texas woman receives probation for perjury

LIVINGSTON, Texas (AP) — A woman convicted of lying to corroborate her father's alibi at his murder trial in 1986 was sentenced to six years probation and fined $2,400.

"I have to do what I think is right," State District Judge John Martin said after pronouncing the sentence Thursday for Vanessa Fontenot.

Martin said he based his decision solely on the perjury case, not on the 1986 trial of Ms. Fontenot's father, who was acquitted. But, he said he couldn't forget the three years probation and deferred adjudication Ms. Fontenot received in 1984 for forging and cashing an employer's check.

A probation revocation hearing on the forgery conviction has been set for Nov. 2 in Austin and Ms. Fontenot faces a 10-year prison sentence as a result of that action.

Martin's fairness in the case had been called into question by testimony of his court reporter during last week's Galveston evidentiary hearing of death row inmate Clarence Brandley.

Martin's court reporter, Mary Johnson, who was not present Thursday, told jurors last week that Martin had told her his handling of Ms. Fontenot's case would depend on how he was treated in the Brandley case.

Martin had presided in one of Brandley's earlier trials, and Brandley's attorney, Mike DeGeurin is the brother of Dick DeGuerin, who defended Ms. Fontenot's father, Hurley Fontenot.

Ms. Fontenot, 26, was convicted of changing her story at her father's murder trial to corroborate his alibis.

$1.2 million awarded by jury

HUNTSVILLE, Texas (AP) — A Port Neches refinery worker was awarded about $1.2 million after jurors unanimously said the man and his family had been terrorized by a labor union.

The jury found Thursday that the Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers Local 4-23 and seven of its members conspired to punish William Hinote and his wife, Barbara, for crossing picket lines during a 1982 strike.

The jury's verdict contradicted a Beaumont jury's 1986 ruling in the case, later thrown out due to misconduct by a state district judge. The retrial was moved to Huntsville because of extensive publicity.

"Great, I feel just great," Mrs. Hinote said after the verdict was announced. "We finally got some vindication."

Union attorneys Tom Swearingen and Diane Dwight said they planned to appeal the verdict.

"No doubt about it," said Swearingen, who declined further comment.

Defendants Leo Max Hildabridle, Glenn Gonsoulin and Robert Pate declined comment. Other defendants were Donald Gribnau, John Cross, Roy H. Lynch and Lee Solis.

Ten days after Hinote, a union member, crossed a union picket line to return to work at Port Arthur's American Petrofina plant, he was injured when an unknown assailant shot him outside his home on Oct. 2, 1982.

The shooting case remains unsolved, and Jefferson County District Attorney Tom Maness said the verdict in the civil trial would not affect the criminal investigation.

Hinote still works at the refinery, but is no longer a union member.

In 1984, the Hinotes filed suit against the union and seven of its members. Defense attorneys contended that others had motives to shoot Hinote, and took advantage of the tense strike situation.

The defendants were found guilty of conspiring to inflict emotional distress on the Hinotes, threatening or causing bodily injury to them, assaulting them and acting with malice.

Jurors also found that the union ratified its members' actions, was negligent in failing to discipline members and failed to take action to curtail violence during the strike.

It seems to me the City Council needs to check out all the facts before a decision is made.

In a statewide survey, Snyder was the third safest town to live in. Who do you think made it that way? The city that came in first had less population and several more officers than Snyder. So when somebody is doing a good job for Snyder, cut their pay!

I think it is ridiculous that there were rumors out that the firemen would lose their jobs if they signed the Civil Service petition. This is absolutely against their constitutional rights! That's politics!

There is a saying, "You can fool some of the people some of the time, but you can't fool all the people all the time."

To the editor,

We're not the only parents feeling this way, so we decided to voice our opinion out loud to other soccer parents.

It was brought to our attention (which we have noticed ourselves) by our children that they couldn't understand why they had to sit out a lot of the time for the games when other players played all four quarters.

I'm not talking just one game, it's every game. We know some kids are more advanced than others, but how do the other kids ever get the chance to show their abilities of learning if they are never allowed to do so.

Everyone needs to remember those kids are out there for fun and we're out there to teach them the sport of winning and losing and also taking turns sitting out. This way every child gets the chance to learn soccer or any other sport.

If any other parents feel this way, please voice your opinion on this subject. Maybe something will be done.

Retired Supreme Court Chief Justice Earl Warren died in Washington in 1974 at the age of 83.

British Gen. Edward Braddock was mortally wounded as his troops suffered a massive defeat in 1755 at the hands of French and Indian forces near present-day Pittsburgh. One of the survivors was an aide to Braddock — Col. George Washington.

Imaging method shows promise

DEAR DR. GOTT — What can you tell me about MRI? I understand that it is not harmful, like X-rays, but is still somewhat experimental.

DEAR READER — Magnetic resonance imaging is a new technique that is used to examine the interior of the body. It does not require X-rays and has been shown to be harmless. Through the application of magnetic forces and radio waves; the atoms making up body tissues are encouraged to release some of their energy. This energy is fed through a computer to produce a picture, very much like an X-ray film, of the structures being examined. This way, MRI gives images of extraordinary clarity and detail.

The procedure is no longer experimental; it is now considered a valid and valuable method for examining internal organs. However, the machine is very expensive and special technicians are required to operate it. Therefore, it is not generally available — except in large teaching hospitals and university centers.

Many experts predict that as the use of MRI grows (as it is sure to), the prices of the units will fall. This will make it feasible for small hospitals or radiologists in private offices to purchase MRI machines. With time and improvements in design, MRI will become universally available to the public. In my book "No House Calls" (Simon and Schuster), I devoted a chapter to describing MRI because, in my opinion, it is one of the most exciting new technologies.

DEAR DR. GOTT — Once stretched and weakened from repeated injuries, will ligaments ever heal completely?

DEAR READER — Ligaments will heal after repeated injury, but they will not return to their original state. A stretched ligament will become progressively more lax after each injury, thereby making it even more vulnerable to repeated stretching.

For example, I twisted and sprained my ankle years ago. The second time, it gave out more readily. Over the years, I have repeatedly twisted it, and now it is very vulnerable to injury. I really have to be careful when walking on uneven ground, because even a slight twist will cause my ankle to become painful and swollen. The supporting ligaments have been repeatedly stretched and they have healed; however, after a series of sprains, one ankle is not as stable as the other.

DEAR DR. GOTT — Is there a test to detect chronic depression caused by chemical imbalances?

DEAR READER — Although chemical imbalances in the brain certainly are a cause of many types of depression, there is — as yet — no biochemical test to diagnose this common emotional abnormality. Doctors usually use what is called "clinical judgment" in identifying depression, and will then use anti-depressant medicine as a trial. "The Good News About Depression," (Mark S. Gold, M.D.; Villard Books, $18.95) is a good overview of medical approach.

A fable that's all too true

The vicissitudes of modern medicine often seem to be intimately interwoven with the legal system. Doctors are increasingly inclined to blame attorneys for the malpractice crisis; lawyers denounce physician wrongdoers as incompetents who must be weeded out and brought to justice. This adversarial position has ruined many golf-course friendships between medical healers and their legal brethren.

Because many children are being groomed to enter medical or law schools, I believe that they must be informed early about the natural antagonism existing between the two professions. Children's literature provides an ideal vehicle in which to teach grown-up reality. With this goal in mind, I herewith submit a modernized version of Billygoat Gruff, a traditional children's story. I am certain that any sophisticated adult will perceive my updated version of an old story as giving new strength and urgency to an otherwise mundane tale.

BILLYGOAT GRUFF

One fine spring day, Billygoat Gruff and his two younger brothers decided to forage for better pasture in the high fields in the mountains. To reach their destination, they had to cross over dangerous rapids on a bridge under which lived a malicious troll.

As the youngest goat daintily trip-trapped across the bridge, the ugly troll appeared and exclaimed: "Who's that crossing my bridge? I'm going to eat you up!"

"Oh, please, Mr. Troll," cried the little goat. "Wait for my brother, who is much fatter than I!" The troll withdrew.

A few minutes later, the larger second goat clip-clopped across the bridge. The troll appeared and demanded: "Who's that crossing my bridge? I'm going to eat you up!"

"Spare me, troll," the goat pleaded "My brother will be along soon and he is much fatter than I!" The troll allowed the second goat to pass.

Soon Billygoat Gruff clump-trumped across the bridge. The troll reared up, reached for the goat and screamed: "Aha! I've been waiting for you to cross my bridge! I'm going to eat you up!"

"Nonsense!" replied Billygoat Gruff. "A bridge belongs to anyone who wishes to cross it!" With that, he butted the cruel troll off the bridge, down onto the sharp rocks below.

Billygoat Gruff and his two brothers then proceeded to the upper fields, where they contentedly enjoyed the new grass.

The troll required admission to the hospital intensive-care unit. Eventually, the following press release was issued: "The patient suffered multiple lacerations, several compound fractures and a severe concussion, with bleeding into the brain. He required immediate neurosurgery. Despite heroic efforts by the hospital staff, he never regained consciousness after surgery. He has remained in a coma, and is now being maintained with artificial life-support mechanisms. The patient will require long-term medical management in an extended care facility."

The goats were arrested for trespassing, malicious mischief and unprovoked assault with a deadly weapon. There was an enormous public outcry against "the mollycoddling of punks and muggers." The two youngest goats were remanded to the juvenile authorities. Billygoat Gruff was tried in a long and sensational courtroom drama, during which the American Civil Liberties Union provided legal funds for his coterie of lawyers. He was sentenced to life imprisonment in a maximum-security facility. After serving three years of his sentence, he discovered religion, shaved his beard and became a model prisoner.

Send your questions to Dr. Gott in care of this newspaper at P.O. Box 91369, Cleveland, OH 44101-3369. Due to volume of mail, individual questions cannot be answered. Questions of general interest will be answered in future columns.

Man collapses after sentencing

MIDLAND, Texas (AP) — A man who admitted taking $22,000 from the mortgage company he headed collapsed in the courtroom after he was sentenced to two years in prison.

But Alan Dale Austin, 36 — formerly of Odessa and now living in Mabank, 45 miles southeast of Dallas — recovered within moments of his collapse Thursday.

U.S. District Judge Lucius D. Bunton was giving Austin options on when he could begin serving his prison time. Standing at the lectern with his defense attorney, Austin shook and then fell to the carpeted floor.

INS told to liberalize policy

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Aliens caught before Dec. 1, 1988, must be asked if they are eligible for amnesty as agricultural workers and must be allowed to remain in the United States if their case is not frivolous, according to a federal court order that covers at least two states.

In addition, U.S. District Judge Robert Broomfield said, the government must advertise in Mexico to inform aliens kicked out earlier of their right to seek amnesty again and must inform aliens it arrests of their right to call a lawyer for help.

Lawyers for aliens in Arizona and Nevada said Broomfield's order, issued in a class-action suit, should apply nationwide. But INS officials said they would not feel bound by Broomfield's order beyond the two states.

"The language says 'any alien,' but the jurisdiction of the court applies only within certain parameters," said Duke Austin, an INS spokesman in Washington.

The aliens have also claimed in court papers that Border Patrol officials have ignored their claims of eligibility, refused to let them speak to lawyers and bullied them into accepting "voluntary departures" that hurt their chances of permanent status.

One woman claimed, for example, that agents threatened to lock her up for months with "the lesbians" if she insisted on a deportation hearing.

The government has denied those allegations, and Broomfield has not ruled on them.

Although the lawsuit, filed last March, deals only with Special Agricultural Worker, or SAW, status, lawyers for the Arizona Farmworkers Union and Southern Arizona Legal Aid hope to expand it to include those who could be eligible for amnesty under a clause covering those who have lived in the United States ever since Jan. 1, 1982.

INS officials here and in Washington had no figures on how many people would be affected by Thursday's preliminary injunction, but INS Commissioner Alan Nelson said last week that the INS had apprehended 1.1 million aliens nationwide in the year ending Sept. 30.

Laurie Martinelli, an attorney for the aliens, said INS records showed 40,000 people were returned to Mexico from Arizona between November 1986 and April 1987 but did not show how many might have been eligible for SAW status or how many had been returned since then.

SAW status is granted to those who worked on certain crops for at least 90 days in the calendar year that ended on May 1, 1986.

Rules issued by the INS initially allowed aliens with non-frivolous SAW claims to remain in the U.S. only if they had been here since Nov. 6, 1986 — the day Immigration Reform and Control Act took effect.

The cut-off date was later moved back by the INS to May 1, 1987 and then to June 26, however.

"The fact that INS continues to change the cut-off date for granting stays of deportation or exclusion demonstrates the agency's action tends to be arbitrary and has little basis in the IRCA," Broomfield wrote in his nine-page order. "IRCA makes no mention of establishing cut-off dates."

In fact, Broomfield said, the act "clearly states INS shall grant temporary stays of deportation or exclusion" to any alien with a non-frivolous SAW claim and "the balance of hardships tips heavily in plaintiffs' favor on this point. Many aliens may be eligible for SAW status, but they are unaware of this fact.

"By setting a subjective magic date," the INS causes "irreperable harm" to some aliens who are deported without knowing they could have qualified, Broomfield added, saying "once deported or excluded, the alien may never know of this once in a lifetime opportunity to legalize" his or her status before the amnesty program's application period expires on Dec. 1, 1988.

Austin and his public-affairs counterpart at the INS western regional office in Los Angeles said they did not know whether the government would appeal Thursday's ruling. INS officials in Phoenix said they planned to ask Broomfield to clarify his language on the right of aliens to speak with their lawyers but would await instructions from higher up on whether to appeal.

INS has maintained that it does not need to let aliens speak with a lawyer until they choose between voluntary departure or deportation.

But Broomfield said aliens were entitled to consult their lawyers before the choice is made and as soon as INS "makes a field arrest, questions the alien about his-her immigration status, and detains the individual as an illegal alien."

The judge declined a request by the aliens that he order the INS to locate and notify every wrongfully deported or excluded alien about their chance for SAW status but said that INS should include information about them in its planned publicity campaigns on both sides of the U.S.-Mexican border.

Abortion provider has adoption service

AUSTIN (AP) — A major provider of abortion services says a decision to offer adoption services at its clinics will help women with problem pregnancies make the best possible choice.

"Our focus is on the woman involved, the person who is making these very difficult decisions," said Marilyn Chrisman, president of Adoption Affiliates, at a Thursday news conference. "We are there to support these people in whatever decision that they make."

Adoption Affiliates is offering services at clinics that belong to Reproductive Services, which is run under Nova Health Systems of San Antonio.

Reproductive Services, which was started in 1973, has clinics in Austin, Corpus Christi, El Paso, Harlingen, San Antonio and Wichita Falls and in Tulsa, Okla.

Organization officials said theirs is the first major abortion-service provider to offer adoption services in the same facilities. In the past, Reproductive Services has referred women to other agencies for adoption services.

The new program will bring women with unplanned pregnancies together with couples with fertility problems in an open adoption process, said Margaret Stewart, executive director of Adoption Affiliates.

In open adoptions, the birth parents and adoptive parents communicate with each other in ways ranging from an exchange of letters and pictures to being together when the baby is born.

Ms. Chrisman estimated that Reproductive Services has provided pregnancy-related services — including birth control, abortion and pregnancy testing — to a total of 750,000 women.

The number of abortions that have been performed in the clinics since they opened has not been compiled, said Barbara Siejak, vice president of Nova Health Systems.

"Abortion-providers are very close with their statistics. So many people misuse them," Ms. Siejak said.

The new partnership has started working with couples and birth mothers, looking for homes for two babies who have been born since the program started, Ms. Stewart said.

In the program, the birth mother chooses the adoptive couple through profiles and letters, she said.

Prospective adoptive couples must be between 21 and 45 and must have been married at least two years to be considered, Ms. Stewart said.

Top-secret stealth fighter crasher

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — An Air Force plane said by Pentagon sources to be a top-secret Stealth fighter crashed and burned in the dark in the rugged desert, killing the pilot, officials disclosed more than 18 hours after the accident.

Emergency crews secured the crash site after the plane went down on the Nellis Air Force Gunnery range about 8:45 p.m. Wednesday, said Maj. Victor Andrijauskas. The pilot was the only one aboard, he said.

Air Force officials refused to say publicly what type of plane crashed, but Pentagon sources who spoke on condition of anonymity said Thursday the plane was a Stealth fighter similar to the one that crashed in 1986 in California.
