Gun-law confusion

WASHINGTON — The Brady law's five-day waiting period for handgun purchases takes effect in a week, and confusion abounds among gun dealers and law enforcement officials preparing for paperwork and background checks. "I don't know anything," said Ron English of Olde English Gun Shoppe in Tipp City, Ohio, near Dayton, just 10 days before the waiting-period part of the law kicks in Feb. 28. "The imperial wizards in Washington don't disseminate information to the field. The net result will be a bottleneck until everything gets ironed out." Even the federal official in charge of implementing the law expects preparations to go down to the wire.

Trial to begin

Jackpot swells

No tickets correctly matched all six numbers drawn Saturday night for the twice-weekly Lotto Texas game, state lottery officials said. The numbers drawn Saturday night from a field of 50 were: 2, 8, 16, 17, 38 and 40. Lottery officials estimate the jackpot for Wednesday night's game will be $40 million. The estimated jackpot has exceeded that amount twice in Lotto history, when it reached $50 million on May 1 and July 7 of last year.

Serbs stave off air raids

Troops pull back enough artillery, U.N. reports

■ Western alliance warns that any movement back toward Sarajevo would bring retaliation.

Associated Press

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina — Bosnian Serbs pulled back enough heavy guns from snowy hills around Sarajevo to stave off immediate air strikes as a NATO deadline for removal passed early today.

But the Western alliance warned that any movement of weapons back toward Sarajevo or attacks on the battered Bosnian capital would bring retaliation from NATO.

Bosnia's Muslim president, Alija Izetbegovic, earlier urged NATO to go into combat for the first time in its history and bomb Serb guns that remained around Sarajevo.

But Yasushi Akashi, the U.N.'s senior official in former Yugoslavia charged with making the call on air strikes, said he saw no immediate need.

"I have decided that it is not necessary at this stage for me to request NATO to use air power," Akashi said in a statement released at his Zagreb, Croatia, headquarters.

Controversy swirls around videotape of arrest violence

■ Dramatic footage from East Texas outrages many despite grand jury's finding.

By Sam Howe Verhovek
N.Y. Times News Service

ATHENS, Texas — The 22-minute videotape, taken from a camera mounted on the dashboard of a Texas state trooper's car, is a bit grainy. But the scuffle it depicts one night last fall between a black man and two white police officers comes across clearly enough, especially the gunshots in the black man's backside as he is running away.

The dramatic footage of what began as a routine traffic stop emerged recently in a courtroom in this small city in rural East Texas. The tape, and the legal proceedings surrounding it, have outraged many black people here and even caused some whites to express anger and dismay.

A grand jury cleared both officers of wrongdoing last fall, but the FBI announced last week that its Dallas office was investigating the incident for "possible civil rights violations."

On Friday, a Henderson County jury convicted the black man, 28-year-old Lorenzo Colston, of two charges of assaulting a peace officer. Colston, who was shot in the right elbow and but-

LILLEHAMMER, Norway — Picabo Street didn't read Sports Illustrated before strapping on her skis, rocketing down a twisting course and pocketing a silver medal in the women's downhill.

It's probably a good thing.

In its Olympic preview edition, the most prominent sports magazine in the United States derided the U.S. Alpine ski team as a bunch of lead-footed crybabies who would need a miracle to medal at Lillehammer.

The team's response? A medal in every Alpine event run so far — two gold, two silver. And there are still six races to come.

Street said she had heard about the article but decided not to read it.

"I didn't want any of that extra-negative energy around. I had a job to do, I was nervous enough," the 21-year-old from Sun Valley, Idatocks, paralyzing his arm and causing him to limp, faces up to 10 years in prison on each conviction.

SWIRLS: Dramatic tape stirs debate

The regional chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People has seized on the footage as a portrait of police brutality as vivid as the beating of Rodney G. King, which was videotaped in Los Angeles in 1991.

In one sense, the Colston tape is even more graphic; it has a sound track, which includes the officers discussing the baton blows that they delivered to Colston and one of them warning Colston's companion early in the incident, "It wouldn't take much to set me off, all right?"

Repeated viewing of the videotape strongly suggests that Colston, who was intoxicated and at times appears highly belligerent, would not have been injured had he followed the officers' instructions. But the tape also seems to make clear that the unarmed Colston posed no threat to the officers at the moment he was shot, which followed nearly a minute of fighting in which Colston, using his fists, frequently got the better of the officers.

Though no one denies that Colston was shot as he ran from the officers, prosecutors and police officials here say the officer who fired the shots acted legally and properly. Texas law allows an officer to use deadly force to stop a fleeing suspect who the officer believes is a serious threat to him or to others.

The incident occurred on a remote stretch of U.S. Highway 175, seven miles east of Athens and about 70 miles southeast of Dallas. It began when Bryan Barnhart, a 14-year veteran of the Texas Department of Public Safety, pulled over a 1983 Oldsmobile Cutlass driven by Colston's friend, Marcus Fields, a welder from Dallas, because one of its headlights was out.

In what is a common though not a standard procedure, Barnhart pushed a button on his dashboard to videotape his encounter with the car. The tape begins shortly after 9 p.m. on Sept. 29, 1993.

After taking Fields's license and learning that he has several outstanding traffic warrants, the officer handcuffs Fields, who is seen standing to one side and watching passively for most of the videotape.

Barnhart then asks Colston, a 28-year-old security guard from Dallas, to step out of the car. Colston, whose blood-alcohol level was later found to be .20, or twice the level that Texas law regards as intoxicated, becomes argumentative.

Barnhart, drawing his nightstick, orders Colston to kneel. Colston balks but obeys, saying, "Why're you doing this to me?" Barnhart answers, "Because you won't tell me your damn name!"

A deputy sheriff for Henderson County, Jim Langford, who was driving by, stops his car and walks into the picture. A few seconds later Barnhart orders Colston to lie down. "I ain't got to lie on the ground," he protests.

The officers, standing over him, each strike him a few times on his back and shoulders with their batons. Despite the blows, Colston, who is larger than either officer, gets to his feet and swings his fists, landing several punches.

After about half a minute of fighting, Colston breaks free and dashes three or four steps to the right of the camera mounted on Barnhart's cruiser. Barnhart, who had been knocked down, can be seen rising either to his knees or into a crouch and firing his pistol, a .357-caliber Magnum; Colston crumples.

February FURNACE EMERGENCY SAFETY UPDATE 1994

Local Businessman Is Giving Away $30 Furnace Safety Inspections for $9!

CLAIRE'S Heating & Air Conditioning, the most respected service company in the area, has announced an unusual marketing plan just in time for the really cold weather.

This important safety inspection is recommended by manufacturers, gas companies and industry professionals.

Only $9 complete and no strings attached!

To get your $9 Safety Inspection, simply call our office and tell us the best time to come to your home. There is absolutely no obligation or purchase required for you to take advantage of this great offer. We must tell you, however, that this is a first-come, first-served offer and once all allotted Safety Inspections are scheduled, that's it!

How to prevent a furnace disaster in your home!

Sooner or later, your furnace will fail. It's only a question of when it will happen and how dangerous it will be.

Your gas or oil furnace contains more than 30 crucial parts. A failure in just one of them could mean increased operating costs, sickness from carbon monoxide leaks or even death from gas leaks, fire or explosion.

Why is the owner of Claire's Heating & Air Conditioning giving away a $30 Safety Inspection for only $9?

Since Tim Claire has put the number of Furnace Safety Inspections at 100, we asked him why he is willing to invest more than $3,000 in his community.

"There are really two reasons: First, I want to give something back to the residents of the Permian Basin who have helped me to succeed as I have. Second, I know that it will ultimately be good for my business because many of the people who take advantage of my offer have never used my company before. And I'm confident that once they see what we do and how thorough we are, they'll come back to us again ...hopefully as regular customers"

Claire's Heating & Air Conditioning has limited the number of $9 Furnace Safety Inspections to 100. And they are offering this important inspection only for the next 11 days!

So, we urge you to call now for your inspection. You owe it to yourself and the safety of your family this winter and throughout the coming year.

Here Are 7 Emergency Safety Procedures Your Furnace Safety Inspection Includes:

1. Heat exchanger integrity check: Cracks or signs of wear are very dangerous.
2. Low combustion air check: Dirty Burners can create poisonous gas.
3. High temperature overload check: Faulty blower motors can lead to fires.
4. Flame roll-out check: Flame explosion can cause house fires.
5. Explosive gas leak check: Only special equipment can detect this serious problem.
6. Safety pressure control check: Leaks may cause fires or toxic gas in the home.
7. Toxic fume exhaust check: Helps prevent headaches, nausea

If you are one of the first 100 homeowners to call for this special $9 Safety Furnace Inspection, I'll give you a FREE Carbon Monoxide Monitor. This is a $10 value and I only have 100 left!

RACES: 3 Republicans, 2 Democrats seek Precinct 2 nominations missioner since 1987; and Audie Porter, a 58-year-old salesman.

(From 1A)

Winner of the Republican race will challenge the victor of the Democratic Party campaigns in the Nov. 8 general election. Opposing Democrats are James Brooks, a 55-year-old farmer-businessman in the Greenwood community east of Midland, and his friend, Marvin Manning, a 58-year-old Midland businessman who deals in cars and rental property.

REPUBLICAN PARTY

Patrick Bostick

Patrick "Pat" Bostick, who said he has become diplomatic through his 15 years in law enforcement, hopes to help return "cooperation" and "harmony" to county government if he is elected to the Midland County Commissioners' Court.

"With 15 years experience in law enforcement, I have learned to be a diplomat," Bostick, 36, said, "and learned that there is more than one side to an issue. And you need to look at both sides."

Bostick, a sergeant in the Midland County Sheriff's Department's Crime Prevention Unit and assistant coordinator of Crime Stoppers, said he wants to do his part to mend divisiveness within county government.

The foremost rift within county government has been a chasm between the Commissioners' Court and the Sheriff's Department on the issues of budgetary and manpower control.

Bostick said that part of his decision to campaign for commissioner is linked to complaints by concerned citizens who feel they are not being properly represented on the Commissioners' Court. Among their complaints are county roads in disrepair.

"We need to open up the court to the people," said Bostick, who added that he has a "concern for the taxpayers and the employees who serves the taxpayers. We have to work closer with the other elected officials and other supervisors within the county."

Bostick cited the need for expanding economic diversity within the city and county.

The Commissioners' Court needs "to work closer with the City Council," Bostick said. "If we can combine our resources, it would easier to bring in businesses to Midland County."

Bostick said he plans on being a full-time commissioner "without fail." The position pays about $31,000 annually, including a $4,200 travel allowance.

Of the Commissioners' Court's problem-solving probes to find solutions to overcrowded conditions in Midland County jails, Bostick said he "definitely" plans on "looking into the boot-camp system" for first-time, non-violent offenders.

The boot-camp concept is "something that needs to be explored," he said. "That's something that needs to be looked at."

Guy McCrary

Guy McCrary, who is seeking his third four-year term on the Midland County Commissioners' Court, said Midland County government has "made significant progress" during his tenure on the court.

"I am proud to have played a role of leadership in many of our accomplishments," he said.

But Commissioners' Court is still steeped in trouble-shooting and problem solving.

"The jail continues to be the county's most confounding problem, primarily due to the state-mandated necessity to house, in our local jail, felony-convicted inmates who are supposed to be in state prisons," McCrary said.

And were it not for those state prisoners, Midland County "would have satisfactorily addressed its long-term jail needs in 1990 with the completion of the voter-approved jail."

Meanwhile, the five-member court is exploring the regional-jail concept, which McCrary said he introduced several years ago.

McCrary, 40, said Midland County "enjoys improved relations with other taxing authorities in our community and with our neighbors in government throughout the Permian Basin," he said.

McCrary listed "significant" accomplishments in his years on the Commissioners' Court. Those include development of a new jail and law-enforcement complex, construction of the Midland Community Restitution Center, renovation and expansion of the Midland County Courthouse, construction of the renovated and expanded Midland County Public Library, installation of image-processing system for court records, centralization of the county's facilities management, establishment of funding for community volunteer fire departments, consolidation of emergency communications to facilitate the 911 emergency-alert telephone service, improvement of cooperative relations with the city of Midland, the sharing of Midland College and Midland County library data through the electronic MidNet system, and maintenance of "one of the state's lowest county property tax rates" at 23.56 cents per $100 valuation.

Audie Porter

Audie Porter hopes to bring "equal representation" to Midland County Precinct 2 voters and taxpayers and plans to promote effective "communication and cooperation with all county entities" if he is elected commissioner.

"I want to make sure that both areas of the county are represented: the urban and the rural," Porter said. "I don't think that is being done with an equal-listening ear.

"I don't think that any county official has the right to put one taxpayer above the others. I just want to ensure equal representation."

Porter, a 58-year-old salesman for Midland 66 Oil Company and a native Midlander, lives in the rural Valley View community southeast of Midland. McCrary lives in Midland.

Precinct 2 takes in much of northeast and east Midland County, which includes the Greenwood and Valley View communities and sections of the city of Midland.

"By and large, each (the rural and the urban) looks to the commissioners for different things. And they all are important. Rural residents always look at the roads. That's their prime gripe. There are other things. But they (the roads) are the ones you hear the loudest.

And the townspeople have a "multiplicity" of concerns.

"I value the fact that I can talk to most people," Porter said. "You have to work for these things (harmony and cooperation) before they happen. You have to be on a friendly basis, at least," and maintain mutual respect.

"I'd like to be able to listen to what people have to say and make judgments based on their input," Porter said. "You are not going to be able to please everybody. But you can make a better qualified decision."

Porter said that he aims to "treat people with respect. "I think mutual respect is something that is a must.

Of the county's overcrowded jail system, Porter said "the jail is the kind of horse that is going to have to be ridden a little at a time."

However, Porter noted that "there is really no easy answer to the jail situation. If there were, the Commissioners' Court would have already rectified it. They are not stupid people; they have common sense, I think."

Of the county's economic concerns, Porter said that "frugality is the name of the game."

DEMOCRATIC PARTY

James Brooks

James Brooks, who is seeking the Democratic Party nomination for commissioner of Precinct 2 on the Midland County Commissioners' Court, said "resolving conflict" is a key issue in Midland County government.

"Regardless of who is right or wrong, taxpayers and citizens have a right to expect elected officials to work together effectively and with at least some harmony in providing good government to the county," Brooks, 55, said.

Brooks, a farmer, independent businessman and a trustee on the Greenwood Independent School District board, said he offers voters a "wealth of experience and knowledge to bear on problems confronting local governments."

"Lawsuits and threats of lawsuits only serve to reduce productivity, create ill-will, and squander precious resources.," he said.

Brooks said his experience as a Greenwood public school trustee for more than 25 years and listening to people's concerns and working out solutions have "given me a unique perspective."

Brooks said his goal as commissioner would be "to keep county finances efficient and conservative."

"Declining oil prices will force Midland County to face tough choices in county government," Brooks said. "I think we need to deal with those issues with fiscal responsibility and common sense."

While "everyone seems to agree that property taxes are too high at all levels," Brooks said the "commissioners need to 'scrub the budget' to make sure that duplication of services is avoided and that all departments are run efficiently. This includes making sure that services that can pay their own way do so."

Marvin Manning

Marvin Manning, with experience in business management and in road repair and construction, said Midland County government should be operated "like a business."

"I don't think the county commissioners are running the county like a business," Manning, 58, said. "I think they are wasting a lot of taxpayers' money."

One of those wastes, he said, is in the maintenance of the county's network of roads.

Manning cited a 1992 instance in which the county, through Commissioner Guy McCrary, offered to pave a half-mile of road on East County Road 60 for $12,000 in materials costs.

But Manning offered documentation to indicate that CJ & K Inc. agreed to carry out the same paving under its "Good Neighbor Policy" for $6,600 — about half the county's price.

CJ & K Inc. only charged for materials and donated the labor and equipment used in the roadwork.

"This tells you right here they (the county commissioners) aren't doing things right," Manning said.

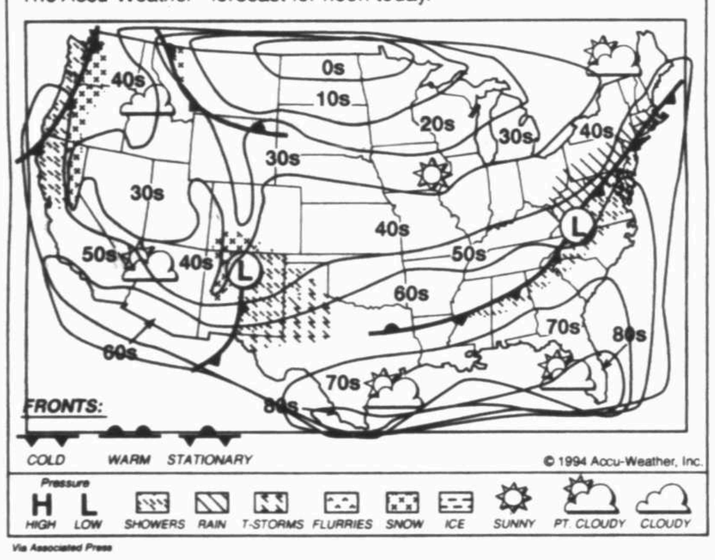

"Somebody up there is not taking care of county business the way they should be," Manning said. "If tax dollars are being wasted like this right here (in roadwork), where else are they wasting taxpayers' money?" Manning asked. "I feel like there's a lot of taxpayer dollars being wasted."

As a commissioner, Manning said he would promote harmony and effectiveness in county government.

"I feel that the county commissioners and the Sheriff's Department should get along instead of fighting all of the time," he said. "I know the Commissioners' Court ought not to get involved in the sheriff's business. If the Sheriff's Department needs to go across the world to pick up a criminal, they should be allowed to do so," Manning said. "We have as good a Sheriff's Department as there are in the world. They need to be left alone."

Chance of rain clouds skies

Staff Report

Today's forecast calls for mostly cloudy skies with a 40 percent chance of rain, a high in the mi-60s and south to southeast winds at 10-20 mph. Tonight should have a 60 percent chance of rain with a low near 35, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Tuesday should be mostly sunny with a high in the mid-60s.

After an overnight low of 32, Sunday's high reached 67, compared to the record high for that date of 86 set in 1986. The record low was 16 set in 1939.

STATE

Strong thunderstorms dumped several inches of rain in some parts of North and East Texas early Sunday as a weak front moved through the state.

More showers developed in South Texas and near the Austin and San Antonio areas of Central Texas, the National Weather Service said.

Some streets were flooded in Tyler, which received 3.82 inches of rain.

NATION

A storm spread heavy rain and snow across parts of California on Sunday, rain and melting snow caused flooding in the Midwest and temperatures hit record highs in the East.

A vigorous upper-level weather system swept across the West Coast during the night and early Sunday, dropping heavy snow in the California mountains and heavy rain across parts of southern California.

Snow accumulations in the northern and central Sierra Nevada included 20 inches at Mammoth Lakes, 18 inches at the Sugar Bowl ski area near Lake Tahoe and a foot at Toms Place. Reno, Nev. got 3 inches.

Heavy snow also fell north and northeast of Los Angeles in the San Gabriel and San Bernardino mountains.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

FOOT: Magazine derides U.S. Alpine team

(From 1A)

ho, said.

"But I know there were some athletes who did use that" to psyche up, she added.

In the annals of sports predictions gone wrong, SI's Feb. 7th issue may be heading for classic status. Still, it was not the prediction itself but the way it was delivered.

"Slovenia, Luxembourg and New Zealand all have better chances to take home Alpine medals from Lillehammer than Uncle Sam's lead-footed snowplow brigade," intoned the writer, Ed Swift.

The article went on to ask why "all seven million Austrians and half of the cows in Switzerland ski faster than the entire U.S. ski team?"

Well, not in this Olympics. The Swiss and Austrians, who dominated Alpine sports for decades, have been shut out of those medals here, a debacle for those living in the shadows of the Alps.

In fact, many European skiers have been downright complimentary about their American counterparts.

"I don't know about the Americans," said Luc Alphand, a Frenchman who placed eighth in the downhill. "Maybe they are all stronger in the head and they can take the pressure of the Olympics."

So far they have. And no hard feelings toward SI.

"I think he (Swift) has already apologized," Street said smiling, medal around her neck.

Not in print exactly, but in a few E-mail messages sent on the computer network available to everyone at the Olympics.

"I am now eating crow," Swift admitted Sunday. "I will tip my hat to them for peaking."

Still, Swift said he stood by the main point of his story: that fundamental changes are needed in the U.S. Alpine program.

"U.S. skiing should be able to compete month after month, year after year on the World Cup, and we were not doing that before this Olympics," he said.

To address the controversy, Sports Illustrated is printing a publishers' note on Swift in this week's issue, talking about subjects he has covered, including Tonya Harding, according to assistant managing editor Bill Colson.

Will this change the way Swift writes his next piece?

Nah. Swift said SI wants its writers to have a point of view and that sometimes means going out on a limb.

Any regrets?

"I would change the skiing cows," Swift said.

SERBS: Troops pull back enough artillery

(From 1A)

"I am satisfied we have achieved effective compliance with the requirement to remove or place under UNPROFOR (U.N. peacekeepers') control all heavy weapons within the 20 kilometer (12-mile) exclusion zone," Akashi's statement said.

NATO, after nearly two years of debate over whether to get involved in Bosnia's war, had demanded all heavy weapons pull back that distance from Sarajevo or be placed under U.N. control. Otherwise it would launch air strikes.

NATO Secretary General Manfred Woerner said today the alliance will follow U.N. recommendations not to use air power "at this stage" in Bosnia.

Woerner, speaking at alliance headquarters in Brussels, said he had agreed in telephone calls with President Clinton to keep the threat of air strikes intact in case weapons were moved back toward Sarajevo or the city was attacked.

"NATO's resolve to prevent the shelling of Sarajevo does not end today," Woerner said. "We shall continue to veryify compliance and will want to make a rapid assesment of this in the coming hours."

"All parties should be aware that the ultimatum stands," Clinton said in a statement. "The deadline has not been extended. Any heavy weapons in the exclusion zone not under U.N. control are and will remain subject to air strikes."

As the midnight GMT (6 p.m. CST) Sunday deadline passed, the roar of a solitary jet could be heard in misty skies. A C-130 which has been flying over on nightly surveillance also droned through the skies.

In a day that saw 400 Russian troops join the U.N. peacekeeping force in a gesture that encouraged Serbian compliance, skies cleared Sunday for the first time after days of snowy weather.

Before the deadline, the U.N. commander for Bosnia said the situation remained unclear at nine of 41 Serb gun sites around Sarajevo which U.N. soldiers have not yet visited.

Bosnian Serbs spent Sunday night by campfires, roasting oxen and lambs, drinking brandy and singing nationalist songs on Mount Trebevic overlooking Sarajevo.

On the roads around Trebevic, last-minute movements of trucks hauling guns could be seen.

A group of drunken Serb soldiers — carrying shoulder-launched anti-aircraft missiles — were stopping cars, greeting the occupants with the traditional three-finger Serbian salute.

"We invite everybody to join us here," said Goran Petkovic.

TWISTS: Inmate attacks ex-wife in courts

(From 1A)

legal system as anyone. He cannot be stopped from suing her and neither can she avoid responding. Already, Golding has forked out more than $7,000 in attorney fees. Griswold hasn't spent a dime: As a prison inmate, he's considered indigent.

"He's getting madder every day he sits in there," said Golding, 36, a $21,000-a-year machine operator at Xerox Corp. "He just wants to make my life as miserable as his is. It's draining financially and mentally."

Under the law, it's no more than a tale of tough luck. Even her lawyer, Herbert Roisman, agrees. "In the legal sense, it really hasn't risen to the level of abuse," he said.

Although Griswold, 40, an ex-serviceman and truck driver, has yet to win — one case is on appeal — he vows to keep dragging her through the courts.

"I will do anything that's available to gain visitation to my children. They're the only things that keep me alive," he said in a phone interview from Groveland prison, 40 miles south of this Rochester suburb.

This is just the latest chapter in a relationship that had all the tenderness — and much of the gore — of a car wreck.

Golding and Griswold met in a Rochester bar in 1979; Golding said the union started crumbling soon after their first child, Duke, was born in 1981. She said he was a heavy drinker, couldn't hold a steady job and was insanely jealous. He accuses her of carrying on affairs with other men.

Golding said she walked out several times but returned when he threatened to kill her or kidnap their children, now ages 12 and 7.

While Griswold denies ever physically abusing her, police records show a pattern of escalating violence in the weeks before the attack.

Golding finally made the break. She was staying with friends at her apartment when he came looking for her early on the morning of Oct. 29, 1988.

"He was yelling through the door," she recalled. "He wanted to come in, I said no; he wanted to talk about the children, I said we'll talk tomorrow.

"He was starting to get riled up. I went to call the police. There was the sound of breaking glass. It seemed like seconds later he was behind me, stabbing me in the back. I remember thinking that it was over, till my friend started screaming at me, 'Don't leave me, G!' "

Golding suffered a punctured lung, a severed jugular vein, slash wounds to her arms. Four surgeries failed to repair her voice box. She was in hospital for 14 days, out of work for four months.

She applied to Family Court to deny him visitation rights. He resisted, bringing the case to trial, and lost in April. He is appealing.

Out of terror, Golding says she hid the final decree when her bid to divorce him came through in 1985. Griswold wants the divorce set aside. In a motion denied Feb. 4 in state Supreme Court, he contended she violated the law by divorcing him in secrecy.

Griswold threatened more legal action unless she fosters his relationship with the children, who have never visited him in prison.

"They have a right to know their father. They have a right to know both sides of the story," he said.

"It's really not about what I want, it's what's best for the kids," Golding counters. "Duke doesn't want any part of him. I'm trying to make his life as normal as possible."

If Griswold keeps persisting — and losing — a judge could intervene and bar him from petitioning the court without just cause.

Masked Mexican rebels come out of jungle for talks with government

SAN CRISTOBAL DE LAS CASAS, Mexico (AP) — Ski-masked Indian rebels came out of the jungle Sunday to the city where their uprising started on New Year's Day, this time to press their demands for social and political change at peace talks.

Hundreds of Red Cross workers, civilian peace workers and military police armed only with clubs surrounded the 16th century Roman Catholic cathedral, where the talks will be held today in this city of 75,000 people.

The government's peace negotiator, Manuel Camacho Solis, and Bishop Samuel Ruiz travelled to the rebels' Lacandon forest stronghold east of the city Sunday morning and escorted their representatives to the talks.

At least 18 rebel negotiators, all wearing ski masks or bandanas to disguise their faces, arrived at the main plaza on Sunday in three caravans of Red Cross vehicles.

They sped into the plaza past a cordon of peace workers holding back tightly packed spectators, a few of whom cheered for the rebels.

Among the rebels was the group's spokesman, "Subcomandante Marcos," who appeared to have an automatic weapon strapped to him.

Marcos waved briefly to reporters standing at a nearby platform, but none of the rebels made statements.

The rebels, Camacho and the bishop huddled in the cathedral Sunday afternoon in preliminary discussions on technicalities of the talks.

In interviews published Sunday, Marcos said the rebels would not remove their ski masks.

"The important thing is that we are all here," Camacho said earlier. "If I have to sit next to someone with a machine gun ... who wants to keep his ski mask on, I will respect it. If they want to remove them, I will respect that too."

Earlier, Camacho said he would pay attention to all proposals.

In interviews published Sunday with the weekly magazine Proceso, the independent newspaper El Financiero and The New York Times, Marcos said the Zapatista National Liberation Army did not expect a quick agreement.

Marcos, who has kept his identity a secret, said rebels would lay down their arms only if profound changes were made in Mexico's political and economic system.

"What is at stake in Chiapas is no longer just Chiapas or even Mexico, but perhaps even the free trade agreement and the whole neo-liberal project in Latin America," he said, referring to the North American Free Trade Agreement and the region's market reforms of the last few years.

Marcos said the rebels want political autonomy for Chiapan Indians, the resignation of President Carlos Salinas de Gortari and the establishment of a transitional government until the August presidential election.

Several thousand Zapatista guerrillas seized San Cristobal and other towns Jan. 1, demanding overthrow of the government, free elections and improved treatment of the region's impoverished and long-neglected Indians.

They withdrew into the jungle a few days later after government troops moved in. More than 100 people died before the government declared a cease-fire Jan. 12 and began trying to arrange peace talks mediated by the bishop.

Camacho has insisted national political changes sought by the Zapatistas would not be on the agenda of the talks. But he left open the possibility that any agreements on local problems could have national implications.

He also made an indirect appeal for the region's entrenched interests — such as political leaders and ranchers — to be open to change.

The traditionally conservative ranching sector in Chiapas wants tougher government action against Zapatistas and their supporters, some of whom have seized ranch lands they claim should have been distributed to peasants decades ago under Mexico's land reform laws.

Some ranchers earlier threatened to take up arms and fight the Zapatistas themselves — no idle threat in a state with a long history of paramilitary groups sponsored by ranchers defending their lands.

On Friday, a group reportedly allied with local political and ranching leaders in Altamirano blocked an aid convoy.

Official: Soviets lied about whale kills

NORFOLK ISLAND, South Pacific (AP) — Soviet whaling ships slaughtered at least twice as many whales as they reported to the International Whaling Commission for decades, Russia's whaling commissioner said Sunday.

Former whalers said the KGB, the Soviet secret police, encoded all data and radio transmissions of the whaling fleet, which operated in military fashion in super-secrecy.

The revelations in interviews with The Associated Press came as whaling commissioners and biologists opened a conference on Norfolk Island, an Australian possession, to discuss a 50-year ban on commercial whaling in the Antarctic.

Japan is contending that scientific data justify resuming commercial whaling in the Antarctic for the minke whale, the last species in the world that still has commercially exploitable numbers, 500,000 to 1 million whales.

The whaling commission imposed a global moratorium on commercial whaling in 1987, but it has no enforcement power. Last year, Norway resumed some whaling in the North Atlantic.

If the Soviet Union underreported its whale catch for decades, current estimates of how many whales are left may need an overhaul.

"I think (the kill was) maybe two times, two-and-a-half times greater than what was allowed," Russia's whaling commissioner, Konstantin Shevliagin, told the AP. "The opening up of this information is going to finally lead to a realistic idea of whale populations."

He said it could turn out that larger number of whales may be needed to rebuild populations than previously thought.

Asked about the Russian comments, Stephen Reilly, an American who heads the International Whaling Commission's scientific committee, said, "I think it's got some pretty big implications for the work we're doing here."

Russian officials believe the underreporting went on at least from the 1960s into the 1980s, and possibly much longer.

Alexei V. Yablokov, a whale biologist and ecology adviser to President Boris Yeltsin, used declassified Soviet Ministry of Fisheries records to find that in the 1960s, one Soviet factory ship told the IWC it had killed 152 humpback and 156 blue whales.

In fact, the ship had taken 7,207 humpbacks and 1,433 blue whales and illegally killed 717 right whales, a species protected by the whaling commission since the 1930s.

Ernst Cherny, a former Soviet whaler who is now head of Russia's Union of Independent Fishery Workers, offered similar examples.

Scientists aboard the whaler Sovietskaya Rossiya told the Fisheries Ministry that ship alone killed 1,568 humpback whales in the 1961-62 season. But the Soviet Union told the IWC that all four Soviet whaling fleets killed only 270 humpbacks that year, Cherny said.

During that same period, the Sovietskaya Rossiya also took 1,200 right whales, but reported none of those kills, Cherny said.

In 1963-64, the same ship killed 530 blue whales, but the Soviets told the IWC that all four fleets took only 74 blue whales, he said.

"It is worth mentioning in this connection that the Soviet fleets were specially designed and built so the desk could be covered by steam, hiding from the view of any outside observers the carcasses of protected species," Cherny said.

British royals hit slopes in Swiss Alps

KLOSTERS, Switzerland (AP) — Britain's Prince Charles wound up a skiing weekend with his sons Sunday, while the Duchess of York enjoyed the snow around the chalet of the man she lived with before her ill-fated marriage to Prince Andrew.

Princes William and Henry — the sons of Charles and his estranged wife Princess Diana — were to return to England for the start of school today, leaving Charles to continue his holiday.

Charles, the heir to the British throne, delighted hordes of journalists pursuing him in this jet-set resort with numerous "photo opportunities" on the sun-flooded slopes and on ski lifts.

British and Swiss newspapers have speculated the normally aloof prince wanted to use the weekend to improve his image, tarnished by the failure of his marriage.

The Duchess of York was skiing with her two daughters, 5-year-old Beatrice and 3-year-old Eugenie, at Verbier.

Blick said the duchess, the former Sarah Ferguson, was staying with her daughters in a chalet owned by Paddy McNally. She lived with McNally before she married Andrew.

Choices include senator, judge

Midland voters will be nominating a Republican candidate for County Court at Law No. 2, as well as candidates for a seat in the U.S. Senate, and U.S. Representative in Congressional District 21 in the March 8 primary elections. There should be plenty of interest to get voters to the polls.

County Court at Law, No. 2

Winner of the four-man race for the Republican nomination to this post will face the sole Democrat, George Patterson, in November's general election. The four include Charles W. "Bro" Seltzer, Jack Chappell, John D. Roosa, and Marvin Moore. Both Seltzer and Roosa have extensive and varied trial experience.

Additionally, Seltzer, a former chairman of the Midland County Republican Party, says that in leaving the county judgeship to seek this strictly judicial position he will be getting back to what he knows best — the law.

While he obviously faced difficult times in the county judgeship position, we are convinced his positions were always based on what he thought was right and what was in the best interests of Midland County and its taxpayers. His strength lies in his knowledge of the law on the legal playing field of the courtroom. Additionally, he has been in Midland since 1950, which should give him an advantage in knowledge of the community and its people over the other three candidates.

We encourage voters to cast their ballots for Charles W. "Bro" Seltzer

U.S. Senator

Democratic — Four candidates are seeking this nomination for the U.S. Senate seat now held by Kay Bailey Hutchison — U.S. Rep. Michael A. Andrews of Houston, investment banker Richard Fisher of Dallas, Evelyn K. Lantz, and former U.S. Rep. and Texas Atty. Gen. Jim Mattox.

While the involvement of Mattox and Andrews in this race signifies the importance the Democratic Party attaches to the Hutchison seat, we're impressed by Fisher's background and his obvious determination to help turn the party back to the ideological midstream.

Fisher contends that the "arrogance of power" now in evidence in government will become a major issue with the masses and that the American people are tired of big money government. Rather, he says, emphasis must be placed on small business because "that's where jobs are created."

Government, he says, must reform welfare, return punishment to the criminal justice system, and preserve the doctor-patient relationship.

Fisher, who served as executive assistant to the secretary of the Treasury of the United States during the Carter Administration, should have the opportunity to bring some of his ideas to fruition. Democratic voters should cast their ballots for Richard Fisher

Republican — Although six candidates filed for this seat against Kay Bailey Hutchison, it must be remembered that when she won election in 1993 to the seat formerly held by Lloyd Bentsen, she received 67 percent of the votes. Throughout 1993, however, Hutchison had to defend herself against charges raised by Travis County Dist. Atty. Ronnie Earle contending that while serving as state treasurer from 1991 to 1993, she performed personal and political work on state time and deleted state computer records.

Earlier this month, however, Earle could not continue with his case against Hutchison and the federal district judge hearing the case instructed the jury to find the senator innocent of the charges.

While that case doubtlessly has raised questions in the minds of many voters, there is no clear indication of guilt, and in that regard it would be wrong to condemn Sen. Hutchison for a mere implication of wrongdoing.

Rather, she should be renominated to the post with the warning to keep herself clear of even the implication of wrongdoing. Voters should cast their ballots for Kay Bailey Hutchison

U.S. Representative

Republican — While there are no Democrats seeking the nomination of congressman from Congressional District 21, which includes part of Midland, U.S. Rep. Lamar Smith did draw a Republican opponent in Scott Campbell, a San Angelo magazine publisher.

Campbell contends that Smith, who was elected in 1986, is out of touch with his constituents in the district and is failing to deal with some issues that are of vital concern to residents of the district. Campbell also believes in term limits as a means of bringing new people with new ideas to Washington to make changes beneficial to the 21st district.

Although Campbell raises good points about the need to change government to make it more responsive, Smith has been effective for all of District 21 during his eight years in Washington. His work on the North American Free Trade Agreement (NAFTA), immigration policy and other issues of direct importance to this district has been most valuable.

Voters should cast their ballots for Lamar Smith

Tuesday: Governor, judicial races.

Battle rages again at Gettysburg

GETTYSBURG, Pa. — Six score and 10 years since Abraham Lincoln delivered his famous address here, the federal government is fighting another civil war.

The battle lines are drawn between the National Park Service and the Library of Congress over who deserves the right to showcase two of the five known original drafts of the Gettysburg Address. The skirmish has cast a pall over Presidents Day for those assigned here to preserve the hallowed ground of the bloodiest conflict of the Civil War.

Anderson

Since 1979, about 2.5 million Americans have visited the Gettysburg National Military Park to view the original documents on loan from the Library of Congress. But library officials are threatening to end the agreement at the end of this year. As a sop to the National Park Service, library officials are offering to send a "high-quality facsimile" of one of the drafts to the battlefield. The park service wants to keep the real thing.

The battle erupted after the library decided it wanted the documents under its permanent control in order to display them in one of its own Washington facilities.

In an office overlooking the snow-covered battlefield, we interviewed six park rangers who are prepared to battle library officials down to the last drop of ink. They maintain that the drafts belong on the battlefield — in the shadow of where Lincoln uttered the words — not 90 miles away in Washington, D.C.

"Having the real thing here — the speech that Lincoln wrote (and) held in his hand — takes people on a jump back in history," explained one of the rangers. "It brings them closer to it."

Some defenders of the park ask whether the library is even up to the job. Earlier this month, the library invited such criticism by admitting it lost track of 300,000 books and other objects, many of which are rare and "priceless." When the General Accounting Office finished the first ever financial audit of the 194-year old Library of Congress in 1991, the GAO said that "because of weaknesses in the library's financial management operations, its ability to account for and control its collection was limited." The report added that "the risk was high" that "other assets could have been lost or misappropriated.

With 532 miles of books and 109 million total items spilling out over its shelves, the library is already spread thin.

For the original draft of the Gettysburg Address, the library promises to pay more attention.

Park rangers have been anything but careless. The document is housed in a high-tech "vault-type" chamber complete with sirens, whistles and lights. A "hygrothermograph" tracks the vault's temperature and humidity, an hour clock records the document's exposure to light, there's a one-hour fire-rated reinforced wall and electronic instruments even record seismic activity. If the vault becomes too warm, temperature sensors seal the air ducts, cut all electrical power and sound an alarm. Library officials have agreed that these precautions exceed preservation requirements.

Rep. Bill Goodling, R-Pa., who in the late 1970s introduced legislation to permanently move the library's two drafts to Gettysburg, thinks the park has proven itself.

Where would Lincoln have stood on this issue? Based on the Gettysburg Address, he might have argued that we live in a government of the people, by the people and for the people — and this site is the "proper final resting place" for a speech that echoes through the ages.

CHARLEY REESE

America's future rests on soil, water

If you want to talk about national security, you should talk about topsoil and water.

The whole of America rests on a thin layer of topsoil, and once it is gone, we will go with it. Of course, dried-out topsoil won't grow anything, so water is necessary, too. And water, in most places west of the Mississippi River, is not all that abundant.

Reese

But topsoil and water won't do us any good unless the land is tended to, worked properly, replenished and preserved. The people who can do that are farmers. Yet the combination of the kind of economy we have and the government policies we implement are driving farmers off the land.

In my job, I scan the news wires every day, several times a day, and read at least three newspapers. It's striking how little news there is about American agriculture. What little does appear is usually a story about a government program or an allegation against agriculture by an environmental group.

There seems to be no interest at all in agriculture per se, in how it's done, in what's happening out in the fields, in what the problems are and in what people think the solutions are.

So the divide between urban America and rural America grows deeper and wider, not only physically — with well over half the population concentrated in large urban areas — but also psychologically, culturally, intellectually and spiritually.

To the urban masses, the farmer does not exist except perhaps as a vague concept. In many cases, it is not even a flattering concept, however vague. It is a concept of some fascist-like rich guy exploiting migrant workers. That's thanks to the great contribution to American understanding by Hollywood and television.

All most of the urbanites know is that when they go to a supermarket or restaurant, food is there. How it got there or what's involved in producing it or how dangerous it is to have great masses of people packed together at great distances from food-producing areas — well, they never think about it.

In fact, though, most large cities probably have no more than a few days supply of food, and if some catastrophic event interfered with transportation, smug urban sophistication would be replaced by hunger, panic and riots.

In Florida, we are having a big hoop-de-do about saving the Everglades. It seems a given in most newsrooms that agriculture in South Florida can easily be sacrificed to "save" the Everglades, though it has by no means been scientifically established that agriculture is the principal source of the Everglades' problems. In fact, water diversion and storage for flood control is probably the single biggest culprit.

But my point is that the Everglades is a swamp. It's OK if you're an alligator or a snake. It's definitely one of those places that most people like in theory rather than in reality. If you visit the Everglades in the hot months, you will find a suffocatingly humid swamp, not especially scenic, alive with mosquitoes and stinking of rotting vegetation. You cannot even see much of it from the ground because it's so flat that a small tree will block your view. You can only go on it by boat or on man-made boardwalks.

The Seminole Indians and a few hardy Florida crackers seem to like it, and by that I mean they like it in a real sense — they live there. Most people prefer the Everglades as an idea.

On the other hand, when you use sugar or eat winter vegetables or citrus, you are benefiting from South Florida agriculture.

It isn't an either-the-farms-or-the-Glades situation, but it is alarming how quickly many pseudoenvironmentalists, all well-fed, dismiss agriculture — Western ranchers and farmers as well as those in Florida — as if it were not important to life in America. That could be what you call a fatal error.

LEWIS GRIZZARD

Can you tolerate skimpy thong swimsuits?

Unfortunately, I will not be running my annual swimsuit column again this year. Of course, I've never run a swimsuit column. That's because my editors won't let me.

What I once proposed was to be given this entire page. I would then obtain photographs of young females in skimpy bathing suits through various means I cannot divulge because they are trade secrets. Then, I would print them on this page and write clever little cutlines under each one, such as, "Sylvia's favorite game? Peek-a-boo, of course."

Grizzard

I got my idea, naturally, from Sports Illustrated magazine, which does run its annual swimsuit edition this time of year.

The reason Sports Illustrated does that, so it says, is to snap its readers out of the winter doldrums. The photographs of the women that have run during the past several years would also snap grandpa's garters.

I'm still not certain how SI is able to get away with selling its annual swimsuit edition without cellophane wrapped around it or without being sued by somebody for being blatantly sexist — which it at least has to deny annually.

Although I'm not allowed to run photographs of women in various stages of undress here, I can do this:

I can offer a report on a controversy developing in Florida, the Sunshine State, regarding the thong swimsuit.

A thong swimsuit for women has a bottom part that is nothing more than a narrow stretch of cloth.

Sumo wrestlers wear thong sumo-wrestling outfits, if you will. When one wears such a thing, one's buttocks are severely exposed.

Two Florida legislators, I read, want to outlaw such swimsuits on Florida's public beaches.

But Florida, of course, is in the midst of a crisis regarding its cherished tourist business. Crime against foreign visitors and the publicity that has followed threaten that industry.

The controversy prompted the following letter to The Orlando Sentinel:

"Foreign tourists generally wear even skimpier bathing suits than Floridians do. If we begin to arrest sartorially offending foreign tourists according to the dictates of the bill . . . we may well finish off a tourist market already badly damaged by several of them being shot."

Another letter to the editor offered a different defense of the thong, one that would never have occurred to me. It has to do with the fact that some people's buttocks tend to expand with age.

If it is exposed buttocks that is worrying Florida legislators, the letter writer pointed out, then "many older women could well find themselves at risk of arrest, because available swimming attire for that age group is often incapable of holding captive the entire buttock area."

I don't really care much about this issue, because I don't go to the beach very often. The nearest beach is 300 miles away from where I live.

But I will say this: The letter to the editor in Orlando that used the line about "holding captive the entire buttock area" started me thinking.

Started me thinking of wild, uncaptured buttock areas of certain members of the opposite sex. And I have, at least momentarily, snapped out of my winter doldrums.

If that's sexist, as many claim the SI swimsuit issue to be, I'm terribly sorry. At least I'm honest about it.

Storm brings more flooding, mud to California

MALIBU, Calif. (AP) — Rivers of mud cascaded down coastal canyons and closed the Pacific Coast Highway on Sunday as yet another storm swept heavy rain across fire-scarred Southern California.

Heavy snow clogged mountain highways.

Roads flooded by water as much as 2 feet deep made driving treacherous and at least three traffic deaths were blamed on rain-slick freeways.

Flowing mud briefly trapped a handful of Malibu residents inside their homes, and a motorist had to be rescued after his car became mired in muck in Las Flores Canyon.

Several homes were damaged by the mud, although a precise count wasn't immediately available. No evacuations were ordered and no injuries were reported.

On Feb. 9, rain-driven mudslides damaged 25 homes in areas stripped of vegetation by a Nov. 2 fire that charred 18,500 acres of the Santa Monica Mountains.

In all, more than 20 autumn fires burned across 200,000 acres from Ventura County to the Mexican border and officials have warned that Malibu and other fire-scarred areas face repeated flooding with each rainfall.

About 2 inches of rain overnight loosened soil around Malibu despite frantic reseeding and sandbagging since the fire. Northern Ventura County received 3 inches of rain and 1 inch fell in downtown Los Angeles.

Mudslides coated roads in several Malibu canyons, said Los Angeles County sheriff's Lt. Michael Moore. Plows and bulldozers scraped muck from the closed Pacific Coast Highway.

A woman and two children were trapped in their Malibu home when a private bridge washed out, but they were rescued without injury, said sheriff's Deputy Kelly McMichael.

Tow trucks removed cars stuck in the mud and residents sandbagged their homes against flowing debris. Road crews slipped and fell into thick goo as they tried to clear storm drains.

A thick wooden wall prevented a 3-foot river of mud from entering the home of Lisa and Brian Anderson. But their garage was 3 feet deep in water, damaging two new cars inside. They had just finished clearing their house of mud from the Feb. 9 storm.

"All I'm waiting for now is for the Martians to come," Anderson said.

Between 6 and 8 inches of snow fell above 3,000 feet, with 8 to 12 inches above 6,000 feet, and more was expected during the night, the National Weather Service said. Elsewhere in California, snow also fell overnight in the Sierra Nevada, with 20 inches reported at Mammoth, the weather service said.

Tire chains were required on most Southern California mountain roads Sunday. Interstate 5 was closed for more than seven hours over the Grapevine Pass in the Tehachapi Mountains northwest of Los Angeles, and the California Highway Patrol escorted Interstate 15 traffic through the Cajon Pass in the San Bernardino Mountains.

The Altadena fire area northeast of Los Angeles escaped flooding Sunday, while Laguna Canyon Road in Orange County had minor flooding. Ventura County, parts of which also were hit by fire, had minor rockslides on local roads, the sheriff's department reported.

Trial begins in case of slain abortion doctor

PENSACOLA, Fla. (AP) — Barricades are up outside the courthouse and jury selection is already cloaked in protective secrecy for today's start of a murder trial for Michael F. Griffin, accused of shooting Dr. David Gunn outside an abortion clinic a year ago.

The 47-year-old Eufaula, Ala., physician was shot three times in the back March 10 as he was parking behind Pensacola Women's Medical Services. An abortion protest was being held in front of the clinic.

The trial of Griffin, 32, a Christian fundamentalist and former chemical plant worker, is being closely watched by activists for the impact it may have the national abortion debate.

Gunn's death has already convinced many state and federal lawmakers that special laws are needed to protect abortion clinics, asserted Eleanor Smeal, president of The Feminist Majority Foundation, which advocates abortion rights.

"It reframed the debate so that this violence was taken more seriously," she said. Smeal also said a first-degree murder conviction would put a chill on anti-abortion violence.

John Burt, a lay minister who was leading the demonstration when Gunn was shot, said he well understands the high interest of abortion rights advocates.

"If Mike got off, gracious, they'd go crazy because that would be a license for everybody else to do something like that, I would guess," Burt said. "I would like to see him get something like second-degree if he has to get anything at all . . . so he'd be able to get out and have some kind of life."

Griffin is charged with first-degree murder, and the prosecution is seeking the death penalty.

Electronic filing means IRS now faces new fraud

WASHINGTON (NYT) — Seeking to automate its way out of a morass of paper by encouraging the electronic filing of tax returns, the Internal Revenue Service now faces a costly threat from thieves using the technology to get fraudulent refunds.

Officials say the electronic filing system, which the agency is counting on to handle 80 million returns by 2001, is coming under increasingly bold and sophisticated attacks.

More than 25,000 fraudulent electronic returns were detected in the first 10 months of 1993, more than double the number in the same period in 1992, as electronic filing grew last year to account for about 40 percent of all detected frauds.

Congressional critics of the program say the IRS has largely brought the problem on itself by hurrying to promote the system before it is fully ready.

It sends refunds more quickly, for example, when returns are filed and processed electronically — more quickly, in fact, than it can verify the claims, because verification still depends on paper documents, like W2s and handwritten signatures, that are mailed in afterward.

This makes it hard for the agency to identify suspicious claims and delay the refunds until they are shown to be legitimate.

To avoid aiding criminals, the IRS is unwilling to specify techniques used in electronic fraud, but they typically involve overstating income tax withheld or refundable credits. Some perpetrators use their own names and social security numbers, some use the names of unsuspecting honest taxpayers and some create wholly fictitious identities.

Dove seal helps families choose videos

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. (AP) — Dick Rolfe sympathizes with parents who search video stores for movies without blood-spattering violence, four-letter words or sex scenes that will leave them red-faced in front of their wide-eyed 6-year-olds.

"Parents don't want to white-knuckle the video control every time they rent a video and bring it home to watch with the family," Rolfe said.

So nearly three years ago he launched the nonprofit Dove Foundation, to publish a list of videos "appropriate for family viewing."

"Pretty soon, it became a real sought-after list. People began taking the list into their local video stores and then we started getting calls from video store owners asking for the lists, too," Rolfe said.

Dove won national attention in 1992, when it helped persuade McDonald's to drop its promotion of the PG-13-rated "Batman Returns" because of the movie's violence.

Today, about 600 video outlets in 35 states and Canada buy blue-and-white Dove stickers and slap them on about 1,000 videos on Dove's list. That's nearly four times the 161 stores in the program at the start of 1993, but less than 1 percent of some 70,000 video outlets nationwide.

Rolfe said that major studios aren't filling the demand for family movies, and parents don't really know what to expect when they rent a video rated PG or PG-13 by the Motion Picture Association of America.

"Parents are frustrated when they walk into a video store because the MPAA rating system has become so inconsistent — and because 40 percent of videos carry no ratings whatsoever," he said.

Women bring changes aboard ships in Navy

ABOARD U.S.S. EISENHOWER, off Virginia (NYT) — The first female naval personnel are coming aboard the carrier now, and when it leaves in October for a six-month tour in the Mediterranean and Indian Oceans, there will be about 500 women among the 5,000 officers and crew members.

Some changes are both physical and behavioral. The Navy spent $1.3 million to convert staterooms and bunks into private sleeping quarters and bathrooms for women. The sick bay now has a specially fitted examination room for women, and ship stores stock feminine hygiene products and cosmetics.

New rules of etiquette require men to knock, announce themselves and wait five seconds before entering female sleeping quarters. Female escorts must accompany men into these areas after working. The same rules apply in reverse to women entering male sleeping quarters.

Commanders on the carrier must also deal with a new threat to their military missions: romance. Sex on ship is, of course, prohibited, as it has always been. But so is dating.

The Navy now requires rigorous sensitivity training about sexual harassment for everyone, including new recruits and ranking admirals. Using tough new regulations, the Navy has dismissed 85 officers and sailors for sexual harassment since 1992. Male and female recruits train together in classes that two years ago were segregated.

"Sometimes something bad has to happen for something good to come out of it," said Petty Officer First Class Lani Glenn, a 29-year-old medical corpsman who is temporarily assigned here.

"Women are more assured that people will listen to their complaints about sexual harassment and there won't be recriminations against those who point the finger," Petty Officer Glenn said.

Boat carrying Haitian refugees to Florida sinks

MIAMI (AP) — A boat carrying 20 to 40 would-be Haitian refugees to Florida capsized Sunday in shark-infested waters off the Bahamas, and at least five people died, authorities said.

Only three people were known to have reached the safety of a beach off Green Turtle Cay, northeast of Great Abaco Island, said duty officer Rhonda Whaton of the Bahamas Air-Sea Rescue.

"It's very gruesome," she said. "Unfortunately, there are sharks very active in the area."

The known dead were a woman and four children, she said.

Rescue efforts were under way.

Rising interest rates could hit ARMs soon

By Nick Ravo
N.Y. Times News Service

Among the first consumers to feel the impact of rising interest rates will be homeowners with adjustable-rate mortgages. For them, higher payments are at least six weeks away and probably longer, according to housing economists and interest rate analysts.

Keith Gumbinger, an analyst at HSH Associates, an interest rate research firm in Butler, N.J., said the vast majority — more than 90 percent — of adjustable mortgages have rates that change annually on their anniversary date.

Lenders are required to give 45 days' notice of any rate adjustment. Thus, a homeowner with a loan that has an anniversary date of March 1 had to be notified of the loan's new rate by Jan. 15, which was before the recent rise in rates.

"But if your rate adjustment is coming due in April, you are probably going to see it go up a quarter-point," Gumbinger said.

On Feb. 4, the Federal Reserve raised a key short-term interest rate to 3.25 percent from 3 percent, a move that has pushed up other short-term rates, like one-year Treasury securities. Many consumers' mortgages use these securities as a benchmark for adjusting rates.

"If they are tied to the one-year Treasury bond, it's possibly going to have an adverse effect on their monthly payment," said Robert Rosenblatt, an economist with the Mortgage Bankers Association of America.

About 27 percent of all home loans have adjustable rates, according to the mortgage group. In addition to loans that adjust annually, the category includes some loans that adjust every six months, two years or three years. A few mortgages even have rates that are fixed for the first five or seven years and that adjust once to a new rate for the balance of the loan.

People who took out adjustable loans last year may not be affected by an increase in rates this year. That's because adjustable-rate mortgages usually cap a rate increase at two percentage points a year and at six percentage points over the life of the loan.

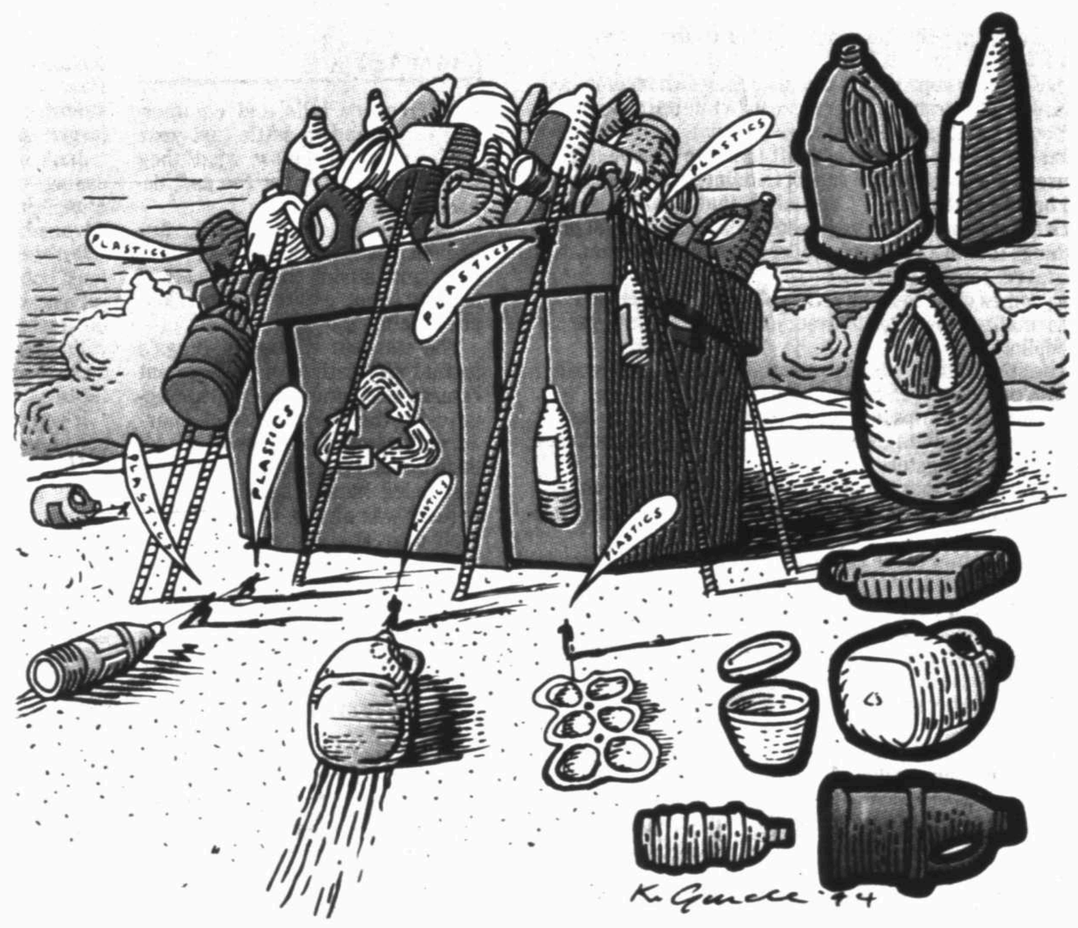

When adjustables come due for the first time, the increase is generally the full two percentage points, because the initial rate was a low "teaser" rate, Gumbinger said. Consumers presumably have prepared their budgets with this increase in mind and will not have to worry about unexpected increases for another year.

Eventually, the rates on these teaser loans will climb to be more reflective of market rates, which are the one-year Treasury rate and a 2.75 percent markup imposed by the lender.

Country awash in plastics

Recycling boom passes by plastics

By David E. Kalish
AP Business Writer

Like the middle-aged businessman who whispers the famous "just one word" to Dustin Hoffman in "The Graduate," the plastics industry asserts there's a bright future in recycling.

But environmentalists and recycling officials are about as cynical as the Hoffman college grad who ignores the career advice.

Major cities like Philadelphia and Newark, N.J. have stopped recycling plastic. Most everything from mustard bottles to yogurt cups to meat wrap still is dumped or burned. Critics want government action to accelerate progress.

"Plastic is the bane of most recyclers' existence," says Brooke Nash, executive director of Solana Recyclers Inc. in San Diego, which collects recyclables from four Southern California cities.

"Cities want programs to divert as much material from their landfills, but it's a money-loser all around."

The problem is simple economics: Too much trash, weak demand. But the solution isn't simple.

Curbside programs inspired by environmental fervor have spread to more than 4,000 communities. Forty states require comprehensive recycling.

But the programs were established without knowing whether companies would embrace trash as a raw material for new products.

Most didn't. The lack of demand drove down what communities get for an average ton of household trash from $100 a ton in 1988 to $35 a ton last year.

The problem is especially acute for plastics. Despite the push by govern-

1993 proved prosperous for investors

Associated Press

NEW YORK — If every year were like the one just past, savers and investors wouldn't have much to complain about.

In the final tally for 1993 by Morgan Stanley & Co., all major categories of investments posted positive results, and most of them handily outpaced the reported rate of inflation.

Whether you took an aggressive or a conservative approach, your chances were pretty good of coming out ahead.

As Barton Biggs, investment strategist at Morgan Stanley, points out, things don't always work out quite so nicely.

"We fortunate financial-asset investors have been terribly spoiled, and genius has been confused with bull markets," he observes.

Of course, prosperity is relative. Owners of money-market investments

Think carefully before loaning car

By Pamela Yip
Hearst News Service

HOUSTON — In our litigious society, everybody needs to worry about getting sued.

Having someone fall down the stairs in your home could get you hauled into court. Give someone a bad job reference and you might be staring at a lawsuit.

But other things seem so innocuous. Probably all of us have been asked by friends or co-workers to let them borrow our cars. And you've probably agreed without agonizing over it.

You'd better start thinking about whether that person is a safe driver. It's important because if he or she gets in a crash, you could risk losing your auto insurance.

The key to whether you are responsible for the way a person drives your car is consent. If you've given your permission for someone to use your car, your insurance coverage rides along with that person. That covers liability and comprehensive collision.

"Generally speaking, if I loan you my car, then I, in effect, am also loaning you my insurance policy," says Mark Toohey, spokesman for the Farmers Insurance Group of Companies.

So if someone who borrows a car gets into an accident while driving your car, generally you'll have to put in a claim with YOUR insurance company.

Similarly, if your family includes a teen-age driver, this can be a concern. If he or she lends the car to a friend who gets in an accident, your insurance is on the hook, according to Jerry Johns, president of Southwestern Insurance Information Service in Austin, an insurers trade group.

Filing a claim if a person borrowing your car has an accident doesn't mean that your insurance will be canceled or even that you'll be socked with a premium increase. But too many claims could cause your insurance company to take a second look at you.

"It wouldn't just be one thing," says Roger Parker, underwriting manager for the Houston region of Allstate Insurance Co. An underwriter's decision is based on a variety of considerations, not one accident, Parker added.

If a person who isn't a member of your household gets into a single accident while driving your car Allstate won't automatically slap you with a premium increase.

But the company may give you trouble if you are in the habit of lending your car.

"If it is a common practice, you've got a problem, because we have no idea if we are insuring a good driver or a bad driver (who's driving your car)," Parker said.

You also have to think of liability when you are driving a rented car.

For example, when you rent a car for yourself only, you are taking a chance if you lend it to a person who is not listed on the rental agreement as an authorized additional driver.

At the Hertz Corp., if an unauthorized person wrecks the rental car, you're responsible, because you've violated the terms of the rental contract.

Hertz would not elaborate on the finer points of losses in

NGPA meeting

The Natural Gas Producers Association will meet Friday at the Petroleum Club beginning at 11:45 a.m.

Guest speaker will be Mark K. Seifert, vice president for regulatory affairs for the Independent Petroleum Association of America. He will give an update on the latest developments and future ramifications of FERC Order 636.

Cost is $15 per person and reservations should be made by noon Wednesday by calling 683-4540.

3-D workshop

A two-day workshop on "Practical Fracture Treatment Design Using Logs and a 3-D Simulator" is scheduled for March 1-2 from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. at the Midland Hilton.

The workshop will emphasize critical parameters required to model a fracture design using readily available inputs and will cover such topics as permeability estimation from logs and production data, in-situ stress estimation from sonic and lithology logs and a discussion of all other critical design parameters for use in 3-D models.

Instructors will be Gary Batchelor, Bob Barba and Mark Linroth. Cost is $420 and registration is available by calling 520-1510.

High Hawaii

Hawaii leads the nation in having the highest auto insurance costs, followed by New Jersey, Connecticut, Massachusetts and Rhode Island. The Insurance Information Institute, which puts out the rankings, says the five states have densely populated areas with traffic congestion and higher accident rates. In Hawaii, where nearly 90 percent of the population lives in urban areas, the average cost of a no-fault claim is $6,568, about twice the national average. Less urbanized states such as North Dakota, South Dakota, Nebraska, Wyoming and Iowa have the lowest premiums.

Forgotten benefit

Maybe they just dread the idea of doing homework again. Whatever the reason, few employees are taking advantage of employer-sponsored financial aid to complete or further their education, according to Hewitt Associates. The Lincolnshire, Ill., consulting firm recently questioned 858 employers that offer educational assistance, and found that less than 7 percent of their workers were involved with such programs. About 85 percent of the corporate programs reimbursed for any job-related course, while 71 percent paid for courses leading to a bachelor's degree and 67 percent for an MBA.

Book of letters

For the busy executive who hates writing business letters there's a book promising some relief. "Business Letters For Busy People," second edition, offers more than 130 ready-to-use letters for many occasions. There's the "thanks, but no thanks," letter to that pesky job applicant, the fill-in-the blank letter to deadbeat customers, even letters of condolence to business associates and acquaintances. "Countless hours are spent and too many letters are sent that say little or nothing. That's a waste of time for the sender and the receiver," says author Jim Dugger.

Cash flow and companies

Q: What do brokers mean when they talk about cash flow?
— Roanne Hinckley, New York, N.Y.

A: Cash flow is a method used by many investors to assess the financial health and viability of a company. It suggests whether the concern can generate enough cash to meet its obligations when due and is particularly important for gauging the value of certain businesses, like real estate and financial services.

To get the cash flow of a corporation, start with its net income and add noncash items like depreciation and amortization. You should also add the proceeds from any loans or from the issuance of any stock.

Then subtract items like purchases of machinery or equipment, redemptions of bonds or acquisitions of other companies.

"The net effect is to determine the total amount of cash receipts and cash expenditures and to see the amount of cash left over at the end of the year," said Harry Shlinger, a partner of Weber Lipshie & Co., an accounting firm based in New York City.

Inheriting an IRA

Q: When inheriting an IRA from someone other than a spouse, over what period does one have to report the deferred income? What about Keoghs?
— Charles Josephson, Great Neck, N.Y.

A: The reporting requirements depend upon whether the individual retirement account participant had begun distributions. If death occurs after distributions begin, the heir must take distributions at least as rapidly as the participant would have.

"If the participant died before the required starting date — and the plan does not designate required default amounts — the beneficiary can choose to either take the distributions at his own life expectancy or at a greater rate over the next five years, when the last payment must be made," said Edward Mendlowitz, a New York certified public accountant. "Keogh accounts are treated the same as IRA's."

Trust fund for minor

Q: How can I set up a trust fund for a retarded minor that permits him to receive principal and income for personal needs but that does not disqualify him for government aid and subsidies for medical treatment?
— Emanuel Gross, New York, N.Y.

A: The answer depends on both federal and state law. If the trust is established with the minor's funds, federal law prohibits him from receiving Medicaid benefits. But this type of trust will not rule out government aid if the person is under 65 and the money remaining in the trust at its termination is used to reimburse the state for the cost of medical assistance.

In New York, there is "a safe harbor for a third party who transfers his own funds in trust to provide for the supplemental needs of an individual who is receiving, or will apply for, governmental assistance," said William Dunlop, a partner of the New York law firm of Jackson & Nash. "Other states may provide similar protection either by statute or judicial decision."

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Grandparents can open gift-to-minors accounts

By Bill Doyle

Q: You have answered questions from parents who buy stocks, mutual fund shares, etc., for their children through gift-to-minors accounts. The area in which I live has a large number of grandparents, including me, who would like to open gift-to-minors accounts for our grandchildren. Can we do this?

Doyle

A: Of course. Gift-to-minor account legislation, which has been passed in all 50 states and the District of Columbia, has been dubbed "the grandparent's best friend."

You can open a gift-to-minors account for your child, grandchild, niece, nephew or any youngster you choose. Although there are no statistics available, it's a safe bet that gift-to-minors accounts are used most frequently by grandparents.

That figures. Most young parents do not have the wherewithal to make large gifts to their offspring. However, many grandparents can afford to part with some of the wealth they acquired through decades of hard work, saving and investing. And, more often than not, Grandma and Poppy are soft touches.

Q: My husband and I intend to buy mutual fund shares in a gift-to-minors account for our young grandson, who lives in a different state. Should the account be registered with the state in which the child resides or in our state?

Also, do we or the grandchild's parents pay income tax on dividends and capital gains distributions until he takes over this task himself?

A: A gift-to-minors account is not registered "with" any state government body. The form of registration, which is handled by the security's transfer agent, is "(An adult's name) as custodian for (the child's name) under the (name of state uniform, revised uniform or model) gift-to-minors act." Different states have different versions of that legislation.

The state named in the registration can be either yours or the one in which the minor lives.

Technically, everyone is supposed to pay his or her own income tax. Realistically, parents and grandparents come up with the money to pay minors' taxes. You and the parents need to decide that.

Q: You explained that the custodian of a gift-to-minors account is "authorized to use the account for the support, maintenance, education, general use and benefit of the minor." You added that a parent who is custodian of such an account is "not supposed to use the custodial property to pay for things that are your parental responsibility." What things are parental responsibilities?

A: That phrase comes close to being self-explanatory and covers things parents normally provide to children, including food, shelter, clothing and schooling.

Past those necessities of life, defining parental responsibilities can be a judgment call, based on each family's wealth and practices.

Sending kids to summer camps and Ivy League schools might be considered parental responsibilities in certain neighborhoods, but certainly not for inner-city youngsters.

Q: How can I buy a single share of stock in one, two or three companies for each of my grandchildren, without having to pay excessive brokerage fees?

A: You will need the names of the relatively small number of companies that allow investors to make direct purchases, without going through brokers or dividend reinvestment plans.

Two dividend reinvestment plan directories contain that information. One, published by Evergreen Enterprises, Laurel, MD 20725-0763, costs $28.95. The other, from Standard & Poor's Corp., 25 Broadway, New York, NY 10004, sells for $39.95.

PLASTICS: Supply outstrips demand

(From 1B)

ment to recycle, U.S. factories have actually increased output of plastic made of virgin materials — oil and natural gas — in recent years.

The tumbling virgin prices depressed prices of recycled plastic resins. It can cost communities $1,000 a ton collecting, sorting and trucking plastic, up to 10 times what they can get for it.

Still, recycled resins cost 10 percent more than virgin plastic, giving manufacturers little reason to use plastic trash in new products.

"There's regulatory mandates to divert this material from the waste stream but no corresponding mandate to use it," said Jane Witheridge, vice president of strategic planning for WMX Technologies Inc., the nation's largest collector of curbside recyclables.

There are impressive success stories, and officials partly credit the diligence of millions of Americans in sorting household trash for curbside collection. Much eventually ends up recycled.

For example, the recycling rate is 70 percent for aluminum cans, nearly half of steel cans, 43 percent for newspapers and about one-third for all glass packages.

Some other rubbish also has recycling problems. Clear and colored glass, for example, create sorting headaches because they cannot be mixed.

The laggard is plastic. About 6.5 percent of plastics packaging was recycled in 1992, the plastics industry says. But the majority of that is plastic soda bottles, largely due to state bottle laws requiring reuse.

The second-largest category includes translucent milk and water jugs.

The overall situation has created huge backlogs. In Los Angeles and New York City, for example, towers of plastic garbage rise from recyclers' processing plants.

Further inconveniencing recyclers are the same properties that make plastic so convenient to consumers — lightness and versatility.

In Philadelphia, officials dropped plastic trash from their curbside program in November 1992 after figuring it took up half the space on its garbage trucks but accounted for only 5 percent of the weight. That meant extra overtime for drivers

"We were driving around with a lot of air," said Tom Klein, director of recycling education and promotion in Philadelphia.

"The point isn't whether it's recyclable or not — my sofa is recyclable — the point is whether it can be collected and recycled in a cost-effective way," he said.

Moreover, plastics have different chemical compositions that make sorting expensive. Some packages have more than one plastic, another sorting problem.

The plastics industry says it is promoting recycling with a $1.2 billion investment between 1990 and 1995.

In one innovation, manufacturers now make plastic soda bottles with pinched bottoms that stand on their own, eliminating the need for a rigid base of different plastic.

Heinz's ketchup bottles were redesigned using PET, or polyethylene terephthalate, a more readily recyclable resin used in soda bottles.

But the environmental community says plastics manufacturers — which includes oil companies that drill the oil used in plastic they make — has spent far more to process virgin materials to meet surging demand for plastic packaging.

"The economics don't make sense and we believe that at the root of this, fundamentally, manufacturers have to take responsibility for their packaging," said Lance King, outreach director for Californians Against Waste in Sacramento.

"If the private sector doesn't take the actions, we believe it will lead to mandatory rules," King said, referring to state legislation requiring a minimum amount of recycled resins in new plastic.

Indeed, cheaper ways exist to dispose of plastic. In some parts of the country, there is a surplus of garbage-fueled incinerators.

Yet people prefer to recycle over burying or burning trash. Many companies created to exploit the recycling fervor have been disappointed.

Even established companies have pulled back. Wellman Inc., the nation's largest processer of old plastic soda bottles, stopped taking other packages like milk and juice jugs because they weren't profitable.

YEAR: Emerging markets led returns

(From 1B)

like Treasury bills and commercial paper had to settle last year for returns far below what they had been used to over the past decade or so.

Tangible assets produced very uneven results. While depressed gold and silver markets rallied sharply, real estate barely eked out a gain.

The standout winner in Biggs's annual tabulation of investment returns was emerging market equities — the fledgling stock markets of numerous nations where industrial and financial bases are just being built. Their gain of 67 percent was almost double that of their nearest rival.

Silver, in second place, jumped 39.1 percent, while gold gained 17.8 percent. But faithful followers of the precious metals markets still have a lot of catching up to do. Both silver and gold still show negative average returns over the past five years.

In the domestic financial markets, emerging growth stocks racked up a 22 percent return, more than doubling the 10 percent advance recorded by Standard & Poor's composite index of 500 stocks, which is dominated by larger issues.

Junk bonds, benefiting from an easing of the early-1990s credit crunch, chalked up an 18.9 percent advance.

With their recent resurgence, junk bonds now boast annualized returns of better than 13 percent for the last five and 10 years, even with the severe shakeout their market endured at the end of the 1980s.

If you opted for higher quality in bonds, you still came out with pretty fancy results. U.S. Treasury bonds gained 17.2 percent and investment-grade corporate bonds 12.2 percent.

Shortening maturities, however, meant giving up a lot, thanks to the decline of interest rates to their lowest levels in a generation. Intermediate-term government bonds returned 8.2 percent.

In the short-term money markets, commercial paper brought a 3.3 percent return and Treasury bills 3.1 percent.

Although those numbers were way down from the double-digit peaks of the early '80s, they still beat reported inflation, which at 2.9 percent also came in below the average levels of the past couple of decades.

By Biggs's reckoning, inflation from 1945 to 1993 averaged 4.4 percent a year.

Without much inflation to stir up interest in them, the real estate and collectibles markets were generally subdued. Art, for example, returned 9.5 percent under Biggs's yardsticks.

In real estate, U.S. farmland returned 6 percent; residential housing 3 percent, and commercial real estate, the laggard among all categories, an estimated 2.1 percent.

CAR: Lending liability

those circumstances. If you expect someone else may be driving the car, check with the rental car company before you sign the agreement.

If you're the primary driver of the car and you want to add another person as a driver, it'll cost you $4 per day, says Lauren Garvey, spokeswoman for Hertz, the largest car rental company.

"The additional driver represents an increased liability risk to the company," she says.

That additional charge wouldn't apply if the added driver were your spouse or a co-worker with you on a business trip.

If you've purchased the loss-damage waiver from Hertz and you violate the rental agreement, the waiver would be invalidated. The waiver exempts you from legal responsibility for physical damage to the rental car, provided that the car wasn't used illegally.

Many states require auto liability insurance. You can't get an inspection sticker, have your car registered or get a driver's license without proof of insurance.

Don't be afraid to say no when someone asks to borrow your car.

Experts offer advice on smart ways to handle inheritance

N.Y. Times News Service

When Stuart Kessler's father died in March 1990, he left instructions to split his modest estate into 10 equal parts for his two sons, their wives and his six grandchildren.

"My three kids got $20,000 each," said Kessler, who is a partner in Goldstein, Golub, Kessler & Co., an accounting firm in New York. "They were upset that he hadn't spent the money on himself. None of them have touched it because they're waiting to find something Grandpa would have approved of."

As Kessler makes clear, an inheritance can raise complicated issues about money values and long-term goals. "The reaction to an inheritance can have a lot to do with your relationship with the deceased," said Barbara Pope, a financial consultant in Chicago.

"You may feel reluctant to spend money that you know someone spent a lifetime saving to pass on to you. It's possible that you may even resent it if money is all you have to show for the relationship with the person."

Even if you have no such personal conflicts, handling an inheritance may be daunting. Between now and the year 2000, an estimated $11 trillion will be passed on to the younger generation, according to Frank Helsom, executive vice president of the Bessemer Trust Company of Florida, Palm Beach.

If you get even a small part of this, several steps are advised before spending or investing your inheritance. Keep in mind that much of the advice is the same for someone who gets a lump sum from any source, whether an insurance payout, a legal settlement or a corporate severance.

1. Consider your tax liability. Inheritances are not subject to income tax. The estate taxes are paid by the estate before any money is delivered to you. But future earnings on the money will be taxable.

2. Cash the check and put the money in an account where it will earn some interest. "If you're in the 28 percent bracket or above, a tax-exempt money market fund would be a good choice," Ms. Pope said.

3. Decide how much you will spend and what you will do with it. "We think you should spend some of it," said Harold Evensky, a financial planner in Coral Gables, Fla. "We advise clients to carve out a reasonable amount."

4. Pay off nondeductible debt, namely anything other than a home mortgage or home equity loan. Credit card interest rates still average 16.5 percent, according to Gerri Detweiler, executive director of Bankcard Holders of America, a consumer group in Herndon, Va. Paying off this debt brings you an immediate return of 16.5 percent.

5. Shore up your financial position. "This is the time to set aside three months' expenses as a cushion and make sure you have enough life and disability insurance," said Larry Elkin, a financial planner in Hastings-on-Hudson, N.Y. Take a look at your property and casualty insurance, too, especially your liability coverage.

6. If you are not making the maximum contributions to tax-deductible retirement accounts, like a 401(k) or Keogh plan, do so immediately. "If you felt you couldn't afford to make these contributions with your salary, now you can supplement your income with the inheritance," Kessler said. Making these contributions will reduce your tax bill and provide a tax-deferred investment.

7. If you have inherited a great deal of money — say $750,000 or more — contact an experienced estate planning attorney and review your estate planning documents.

Once you've laid the groundwork, you can think about investing. "As long as you're making reasonable progress toward your goal, you shouldn't feel rushed," Evensky said.

Nonetheless, having a plan makes you less vulnerable to people who prey on new heirs. Never buy anything over the phone. Don't buy anything from a friend or relative either.

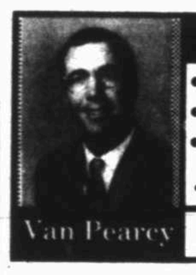

The first step is to decide how to allocate your money. The more in stocks, the higher the potential return. Stocks are also the most volatile investment, which means their value may fall as well as rise.

"Most people's tolerance for risk does not change very much as their financial picture changes," Elkin said. "If you were very unwilling to withstand an investment loss before, chances are you will be just as unwilling."

Yet you must include some risk to get a decent return. A favorite portfolio of Steven Norwitz, a vice president of T. Rowe Price, the Baltimore-based mutual fund company, is 35 percent in stocks, 35 percent in bonds and 30 percent in cash. The combination, producing a conservative portfolio, offers consistent, solid returns.

"That portfolio has had only three negative years in the last 20," Norwitz said. "The worst was 1974, when it was down 4.9 percent, but the stock market was down 26.5 percent. Over the last 20 years, this portfolio has returned an average of 10 percent a year."

Once you decide how to allocate money among asset classes, you will want to pick specific investments. For most people, mutual funds are the obvious choice. If you have a substantial amount to invest, say $250,000 or more, and you have no interest whatsoever in investing, seek professional help.

Gesell died early Saturday morning at a local hospital.

The family requests memorials be directed to the Midland Memorial Foundation, Midland Memorial Hospital, 2200 W. Illinois, Midland, Texas, 79701; or to St. Nicholas Episcopal Church, 2900 Princeton, Midland, Texas, 79701.

POLICE REPORTS

Police seek robber

Police are searching for a robber who took about $335 from the Dairy Queen at 802 S. Big Spring St. late Saturday.

According to a report, the robber entered the restaurant about 8:45 p.m. and went into the men's restroom. He came out, went over to the register, opened it and took the money. The robber was last seen running east on California Street.

The robber is described as Hispanic, 20-28 years old, 5-foot-9, 140 pounds, wearing green pants and a jacket.

Saturday — Vandalism: Vivian Moss reported a rock thrown through the back window of a vehicle at 1614 Shell at 7:52 p.m.

Sunday — Burglary of a Vehicle: Gray speaker cabinets and a speaker were taken from a vehicle at Midland Park Lanes, 5320 W. Loop 250. Entry was gained by smashing the right passenger window. The incident was reported at 5:18 a.m.

Vandalism: A brick was thrown through a vehicle window at 2010 Princeton. The incident was reported at 4:28 p.m.

Zapata indictments fail to faze some

By Josh Lemieux
Associated Press

ZAPATA — Federal charges that the county judge, sheriff and clerk used their positions to assist drug smugglers are shocking to some residents of this remote, rugged area on the Mexican border.

Others aren't so surprised.

"I hope the law will take its course and punish them with whatever they deserve — if they are found guilty," Zapata County Commissioner David Morales said.

Morales commended the FBI and other federal agencies for arresting the three elected officials Friday in a drug sting after a 2½-year undercover investigation.

"That's the only way we can have a clean county," Morales said.

"Operation Prickly Pear" — named after the cactus species common in South Texas — brought indictments against County Judge Jose Luis Guevara, Sheriff Romeo R. Ramirez, County Clerk Arnoldo Flores and the judge's brother-in-law, Miguel Angel Rivera.

The judge and his brother-in-law are charged with accepting $23,000 to help arrange a flight carrying cocaine to land unrecorded at the county airport. The indictment alleges that Guevara offered his county judge's badge to ensure the safety of future shipments.

Sheriff Ramirez is charged with accepting $20,000 in drug profits in exchange for allowing a smuggler to use the sheriff's private Falcon Lake ranch as a loading area for importing marijuana from Mexico.

Ramirez, in a telephone interview Sunday, said he was innocent and blamed the charges on political enemies.

"In some instances political opponents will use whatever resources they have at hand — up to and including the federal government — to attempt to get someone out of office," said Ramirez, who was released Saturday after putting up $2,500 in bond money.

Asked who the enemies were, the sheriff said: "I have no idea at this time. I've got my gut feeling, but I have no knowledge."

Flores is charged with laundering $20,000 in drug money in exchange for a 10 percent commission, accepting drug money as payment for a stolen vehicle and possessing 13 pounds of marijuana with intent to distribute.

Flores, who was released on a $150,000 unsecured bond Friday, had no comment for the media, said a family member who answered his home telephone.

Guevara and Rivera — charged with conspiracy, extortion, money laundering and possession with intent to distribute at least 500 grams of cocaine — remained in custody Sunday.

"I am sure we will be able to prove that I am innocent," some reporters heard the judge saying as marshals hustled him into the federal courthouse in Laredo on Friday.

Officer overlooks robbery, owner of business says

HOUSTON (AP) — Police officials were investigating a restaurant owner's charge that an officer walked in, ordered a sandwich and left, apparently failing to notice that a robber had a gun to an employee's back the entire time.

Although employees at the south Houston Subway Sandwich Shop were certain the officer was wearing a Houston police uniform and not that of a security officer, Houston police spokesman Alvin Wright said officials still were looking into the matter.

If he was, Wright said, "Obviously he didn't realize the store was being robbed. He's not clairvoyant."

Sandwich shop owner Joe Edge said two men robbed the restaurant about 11:20 p.m. Thursday, while two employees were on duty.

One of the men took the manager into the back to open the safe, while the other stayed with the second employee to empty the cash register.

When a blue and white squad car drove up, the robber at the register put his gun in his pocket, threw some money back at the employee and walked out past the officer, Edge said.

The second robber, realizing he was trapped, warned the manager not to alert the officer to the heist. He then put a gun in her back and the two walked out and stood close together as the woman took the officer's order, Edge said.

"So she's standing there with sweat and tears running down her face," Edge said. "I mean he was glued to her the whole time.

"And there is money all over the place and this officer doesn't notice anything odd going on. He is there for between two and 2½ minutes and they talk a little about the weather and he gets his sandwich and walks out.

"The suspect told her, 'You did real good, I'm not going to have to do you,'" he said, adding that the man then left. About $190 in cash was taken.

Edge said the employees thought the officer might have noticed the robbery and would be waiting outside for the suspect.

"But he wasn't. He had gone," Edge said.

Police arrived almost immediately when the employees called 911, but the officer who had bought the sandwich was not among them.

Concept lets folks start own schools

AUSTIN (AP) — The existence of John Pirvett's Houston company is a testament to the growing popularity of a new brand of schooling, one that favors breaking away from state control and rethinking education.

Pirvett is president of Performing Schools Corp., one of several companies that have sprung up nationwide to assist campuses or districts that want to set up "charter schools."

National and state officials, including President Clinton and Gov. Ann Richards, are pushing charter schools as a radical new educational idea.

Charter schools essentially allow anyone with a good educational idea access to public education funding as long as they can attract students. An entrepreneur can start his own school, or parents and staff of an existing public school may apply as a charter school.

"We have to free up our schools and create an atmosphere where the local schools feel free to do whatever is necessary to help their students succeed," Richards said last week.

Pirvett, whose company has not yet landed a contract, said he hopes the Legislature will pass a law so the idea can be pursued in Texas.

Texas doesn't have a state law establishing charter schools, but eight states do. They are Colorado, Massachusetts, Wisconsin, New Mexico, Missouri, Georgia, Minnesota and California.

"The underlying belief of charter schools is that every school has unique needs," Pirvett said.

Usually, charter schools sign contracts with school districts that spell out specific performance objectives. Such schools follow federal laws and are eligible to get waivers from state and local regulations.

Charter schools hire their own staffs and employ their own teaching methods. They enjoy freedom from local school boards.

DEAR ABBY

Quick wake-up may be disastrous in the nude

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Having just read the letter from Gary C. Brown, concerning sleeping in the nude, I say, "To each his own." But if everybody in Los Angeles had been sleeping in the nude on Jan. 17, the morning of the Northridge earthquake, Southern California would have seen the biggest nudist colony in the U.S.A.

Van Buren

I am an 84-year-old native Californian and have lived through many earthquakes. I live in Norwalk, approximately 50-70 miles from the epicenter, and that quake literally shook me out of bed.

Perhaps those who sleep in the nude in California won't anymore. — FRANCES RIGGINS

DEAR FRANCES: As for people who are accustomed to sleeping in the nude, I have previously suggested always keeping a bathrobe handy in case of fire, or some other unscheduled circumstance that calls for a hasty getaway.

DEAR ABBY: We work with a woman who has become a problem for everyone around her. "Betty" is in her early 40s, and has been trying, unsuccessfully, to have a child for several years now. Everyone in the office has had to listen to Betty's infertility difficulties, including the details about her ovaries, her husband's sperm, etc. And when her depression became so severe that she missed several weeks of work, we offered sympathy, and made up the slack at work.

The newest problem: Betty has asked that the rest of us please refrain from discussing our new grandchildren, babies and pregnancies within her hearing.

She has become so obsessed that she refuses to attend baby showers, or even express joy for others. She will not consider adoption, or much-needed therapy to help her deal with this baby obsession.

Abby, do you or any of your readers have any suggestions for Betty? Her behavior is affecting her work and her friendships. — BETTY'S FRIENDS

DEAR FRIENDS: My recommendation would have been therapy, but you say that she has already rejected that idea. It's possible that Betty needs to realize that not everyone is lucky enough to have everything he or she wants in life, but we all should learn to roll with the punches.

Perhaps a group such as RESOLVE, which offers emotional support, peer counseling, medical referrals and education for people with infertility problems, would be helpful. Interested readers, please send a stamped, self-addressed, business-sized envelope to: RESOLVE, 1310 Broadway, Department DA, Somerville, Mass. 02144.

DEAR ABBY: The letter from the mother who was in the habit of telling her 44-year-old son to "be careful" every time she said goodbye to him reminded me of the following:

A successful doctor picked up his mother in his new Mercedes, took her to a fashionable place for dinner, and then to the theater, where they had orchestra seats.

During intermission, she turned to him and asked, "Do you have to go to the bathroom, dear?" — FAITHFUL FAN, COCONUT CREEK, FLA.

DEAR ABBY: To the 44-year-old man who was angry because every time he left the house his mother reminded him to "be careful": It will be very, very quiet when you leave the house one day and your mother is no longer there. — DAVE ELLIS, RENO, NEV.

CONFIDENTIAL TO MY READERS: Just a reminder that the Operation Dear Abby addresses were good only through Jan. 15, 1994. Letters sent after that date may be returned to you.

To order "How to Write Letters for All Occasions," send a business-sized, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054-0447. (Postage is included.)

Small county has quirky campaigns

By Roy Bragg
Associated Press

ROYSE CITY — In the 1994 world of politics, everybody's got a gimmick.

Vice President Al Gore has a wonkish mastery of scientific trivia and detail. Texas Gov. Ann Richards has wry, country quips — and that hair.

It's no different for T.L. Watson, Precinct 2 justice of the peace candidate in Rockwall County, east of Dallas.

His most noticeable feature may be the pitch-black stack of hair, styled in a pompadour save for a strand of bangs that falls onto his 47-year-old face.

Then there's the costume — a jumpsuit with a high, white collar and bell bottoms with big red kick-pleats. The body of the suit is decorated with a spray of red, blue and silver studs. It's accessorized by white, zip-up vinyl boots and a purple scarf, wrapped around Watson's neck and tucked into the suit's plunging neckline.

Watson is an Elvis impersonator.

A guitar labeled "Elvis" decorates "T.L. Watson for Pct. 2 Justice of the Peace" yard signs all over Royse City and Rockwall. Other, larger signs, shaped like the silhouette of a guitar-wielding King of Rock 'n' Roll, are planted around town.

"Everybody around here knows me as Terry Lee (his stage name) or Elvis," said the faux-King. "That's the point of the signs — not to cash in on Elvis but to make the connection between me and the person I play."

Although he doesn't seek votes in costume, Watson's campaign has prompted predictable jokes. Some are silly. Others are thought-provoking:

"How can he, as justice of the peace, pronounce anyone dead if we're not sure whether he's dead?" goes one.

Watson's quick to say his campaign for the GOP nomination, to be decided in the March 8 primary elections, isn't a publicity stunt or a lark.

He has worked at a Tyler family crisis center and is interested in using the office as a forum for helping troubled families mend their problems.

In most courthouses, having an Elvis impersonator run for office would cause as much excitement and eccentricity as folks could stand, but Watson is only one of the unusual politicians to be found in Texas' smallest county.

Here, the image of the small-town sheriff as a Stetson-wearing, farm-raised, good-old boy is shattered in the personage of Belgian-bred Jacques Kiere, 60.

Kiere, first elected in 1990, was born in this country to Belgian parents, who returned home while he was a child. His wonder years were spent in occupied and, then, liberated Belgium. He returned to the United States at age 15, served in the Army, and retired to Rockwall after 27 years in the U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration, which included stints in Germany, Mexico City and Paris.

"I certainly don't fit the general mold of sheriffs, do I?" he said in a voice free of accent.

Then, there's Scott Self, 43, the incumbent county treasurer, whose re-election campaign platform is remarkably simple. And unorthodox.

"If elected, I will not serve," he said.

Nine other Texas counties have received legislative approval and already voted the office of county treasurer out of existence, allowing other officeholders to absorb its functions.

That's Self's game plan. He couldn't do it in his first term, so he continues to collect his $33,000 annual salary. In running for re-election, Self said he came upon a little-used codicil of state law that allows him to campaign for abolishment and, if he wins, lock his office and never accept his salary.

"If I win, I'm out of here," he said. "If I lose, I'm out of here."

"Elvis" Watson, meanwhile, continues his campaign.

Retired after 23 years of work with Texas Utilities in nearby Terrell, Watson said he was never an Elvis fanatic — or "idol worshiper," as he calls die-hard, Elvis-works-at-the-Chevron zealots — and got into the Elvis tribute business accidentally.

Friends for years commented on his resemblance to Presley. Once in 1969, he dyed his blonde mane black and went to work as Elvis.

"The women at that place went crazy," he said. "They said I looked exactly like Elvis."

Years later, he decided to attend a pair of Halloween parties in full Elvis-the-Pelvis regalia. He killed 'em.

"I said to myself 'There might be some money in this,' " Watson recalled.

Because there were a few formalities — "I couldn't sing a lick" — Watson spent several months with a cassette player in hand, singing along with the King. He hired a seamstress to fashion a suit and then put $200 worth of stones on it.

Voila. The King was reborn.

It's not a lucrative business, but Watson said it's a fun job that puts spending money in his pocket. And it makes people happy.

His 90-minute shows, titled "Elvis Yesterday, Today and Always!" feature Watson accompanied by prerecorded instrumental tracks of Presley classics. He plays local parties, elementary schools, nursing homes and community festivals. He travels to and from shows in a black and silver 1978 Corvette, with his stage name painted on each door.

When Watson was spotted in Rockwall one day last week, several drivers honked their horns or greeted him.

Forensic sculptor shows feats of clay at science exhibit

By Ken Guggenheim
Associated Press

BOSTON — Betty Pat Gatliff knows that by carefully molding of clay on a skull, she can help police identify bodies. But she also knows her limits: she's a forensic sculptor, not a detective.

That was clear, she said, when she tried to help police identify a young murder victim who had been dismembered. She suggested that the killer had been a midget who couldn't carry more than one piece at a time.

"The detective said, 'Leave the investigation to us.'" she said.

Gatliff, of Norman, Okla., displayed her craft last Thursday as the Museum of Science opened its exhibit, "Whodunit: The Science of Solving Crime." The exhibit, which runs through May 1, shows how science helps police solve crimes.

Developed at the Fort Worth Museum of Science and History in Texas, the exhibit centers around a simulated murder-robbery at a diner. Visitors see videotaped interviews with witnesses, examine clues and try to solve the case.

Among the side displays are computer monitors that allow visitors to draw sketches of supposed suspects or to see enlargements of their own fingerprints.

"I think the general cleverness of this exhibit is the general public's fascination with crime solving," said John Shane, the museum's vice president of programs. "Many of these things are things people have heard about, but never seen."

The challenge for organizers was to make the exhibit as realistic as possible, while toning down the blood and gore.

"The purpose is not sensationalism," he said. "It's to create something realistic."

So the full-size mannequin of the back-alley murder victim was all-white, clothing-included, to make it appear less authentic. An autopsy display was also toned-down, although it is still not for the queasy. It consists of a video of an actual autopsy, projected on another life-size mannequin, as a pathologist narrates. Viewer discretion is advised.

The exhibit also includes displays of Gatliff's craft, facial reconstruction, although Gatliff's appearance was limited to the opening day. Using a plastic skull and strips of clay, she demonstrated the process of reconstructing a head.

Gatliff, who has worked more than 170 cases nationwide since 1968 and claims a 75 percent success rate, said she is called into cases when police are unable to identify a body through conventional methods.

Normally, she'll build on the actual skull. The thickness of clay she applies depends on a person's weight — something that can be determined by victims' clothing, if any is available.

The skull offers clues about nose size, which in turn helps determine ear size.

Business receives achievement award at national convention

Midland, TX -- The K.C.E. Holiday, Inc. franchise of Travel Agents International was recently honored for excellence at the company's 11th National Convention at Florida's Saddlebrook Resort. Kim and Robert Landreth accepted the crystal "Frannie" award in recognition of outstanding achievement as part of the Travel Agents International system.

The "Frannie" award is presented to the T.A.I. agencies ranking in the top 10 percent of the entire system. "The evaluation process is really a quality control effort," reports Kim Landreth. "We are rated annually using rigid Accent on Excellence criteria." The Accent on Excellence program ensures that T.A.I. agencies provide the best in products and services associated with the Travel Agents International name.

Kim Landreth credits the award to a concerted effort on the part of the agency staff and owners who live up to the high standard of excellence established by Travel Agents International, Inc.

The Travel Agents International network produces more than $600 million in annual sales. Each independently owned and operated office provides quality, professional travel services to both business and leisure travelers.

Robert and Kim Landreth accept the "Frannie" award from Robert Block, CEO, Travel Agents International.

T.A.I. sells all phases of travel including tours, discount cruises, airline tickets, rail, cars, and hotels, as well as customized and corporate travel. Some of T.A.I.'s services include: $100,000 FREE flight insurance, 24-hour emergency phone service, Community Support Programs and a Sailaway Cruise Center with more than 2,000 discounted sailings.

Cruise the Greek Islands for a unique travel experience

If you really want an exciting, awesome cruise you should consider cruising the Greek islands. After spending two glorious days in Athens, you board the ship and cruise all day and night and arrive in Istanbul. A city tour of Istanbul brings out a lot of history and interesting places, such as Soliman Mosque, St. Sophia Museum, Blue Mosque, and Topatki Palace.

After boarding the ship at Istanbul you sail overnight to reach Kusadasi and take a tour of Ephesus, and visit the truly breathtaking ruins of this very famous city. This was the home of Mary, Mother of Jesus, and St. Paul was imprisoned here. St. John was banished from Ephesus to the island of Patmos.

Next, it's on to the island of Rhodes. Here a tour includes the old city of Lindos with a fort on top of the Acropolis. Then, on to the beautiful island of Santorini where the Akrotiri ruins can be found. The town is so pretty that a half day is really not enough to enjoy it ...but that's all there is if we're going to see everything else on the tour.

Patsy Welmaker in the St. John Monestary on the Island of Patmos.

Next on the agenda is a visit to the island of Crete. Very little is known about the Palace of Knossos on Crete, only that it must have been a very peaceful city because there are no indications of any fortresses or prisons.

After sailing all night the ship arrives at the island of Patmos. The Monestary of St. John sits on top of the mountain and was built in the 11th century. The Cave of the Revelation was a spine-chiller. This is where St. John wrote and dictated the book of the Revelations. A church has been built over the cave but one can still see the rock that served as a desk and where St. John laid his head.

After this visit it's on to the island of Mykonos. A most beautiful town. It is famous for its many windmills and its 365 churches and chapels, many of which were dedicated by shipwrecked sailors. There are several good beaches, and in the summer nightlife is very lively. It has been dubbed the "jet set" playground. The last night is aboard ship with arrival back in Athens. You really should try it!

It's a 'Sterling' Daytona

AP Laserphoto

Midland's Bobby Hillin Jr. (90) gets tangled up with Hut Stricklin (23) and Kyle Petty, center, during Daytona 500 action. There were no injuries.

■ Sterling Martin wins his first NASCAR race, and it's the Daytona 500.

By Mike Harris
AP Motorsports Writer

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. — After 17 years and 279 races, Sterling Marlin is a winner for the first time — and he did it in the Daytona 500, the biggest stock car race of them all.

Marlin, gambling on gas, barely held off Ernie Irvan on the final lap Sunday to make it to Victory Lane after nine second-place finishes and years of frustration on the Winston Cup circuit.

One streak did not end, though, as Dale Earnhardt failed to win the Daytona 500 for the 16th time. The defending and six-time Winston Cup champion, Earnhardt was among the leaders all day and was third as late as 18 laps from the end of the 200-lap race before handling problems knocked him out of contention. He finished seventh despite leading 10 times for 45 laps.

Meanwhile, Marlin was beating the odds, going the final 59 laps — 147.5 miles — on a tank of gas.

Tony Glover, Marlin's crew chief, said, "I asked my fuel man if we could make it and he said, 'Stay out there.'"

The 36-year-old Marlin, a second-generation NASCAR Winston Cup star, drove slowly down pit lane after his cool-down lap, savoring the moment as dozens of crewmen from rival teams stood in line to shake his hand and offer congratulations.

Asked about holding off Irvan on the final lap, the jubilant Marlin, son of Clifton "Coo Coo" Marlin, said, "I told myself this is short track Saturday night in Nashville and hung on. No problem."

Wow! Double OT

LUBBOCK — Gionet Cooper's hook shot with 38 seconds left in double overtime put Texas Tech ahead by one, then his dunk with 6.3 seconds left sealed a 128-125 victory over Texas on Sunday in the highest-scoring Southwest Conference game ever.

The Longhorns missed three potential game-winning shots after Cooper's hook gave Tech a 126-125 lead. After UT's third miss, Mark Davis grabbed a rebound and passed it to Cooper for the winning dunk, capping the most points in Tech history.

The loss sends the Longhorns into second place in the SWC behind Texas A&M (16-6, 9-1) and may hurt UT's hopes of entering the top 25 for the first time this season. Tech (12-10, 7-4) is third in the league.

Roderick Anderson missed a desperation attempt for the Longhorns, who ended a 10-game winning streak. He also missed a last-second shot at the end of the first overtime.

Texas (17-7, 9-2 Southwest Conference) led 123-120 with 1:47 to play when Anderson made a layup and a free throw. It was Texas' biggest lead since 7-4.

Two free throws by Jason Sasser and a tip-in by Lance Hughes gave the Red Raiders a 124-123 lead with 1:05 to play.

Texas went back ahead 125-124 with 49 seconds left on a basket by B.J. Tyler, setting up Cooper's winning shots off of Davis' rebound.

Davis paced the Red Raiders with 28 points, 17 rebounds and 11 assists for the first triple-double in team history.

McDowell loses?

SARASOTA, Fla. — Cy Young Award winner Jack McDowell lost his arbitration case Sunday, but the $5.3 million he will get is a record for a salary awarded by an arbitrator.

McDowell, who won in arbitration at $4 million last winter, had asked the Chicago White Sox for $6.5 million, which would have been the highest one-year contract in baseball history and the top one-year salary for a pitcher.

Morenz homers

AUSTIN — Shea Morenz's two-run home run keyed a five-run Texas surge as the 9th-ranked Longhorns (9-4) charged from behind to beat No. 19 Pepperdine 11-4 Sunday.

MHS 'Towers of Power'

■ Michel Ann Thompson and Elaine Rogers play "larger" roles for Lady Bulldogs.

By Amy Wolfenbarger
Staff Writer

When searching for a nickname for Midland High basketball duo of Michel Ann Thompson and Elaine Rogers, the moniker "Twin Towers" doesn't exactly come to mind.

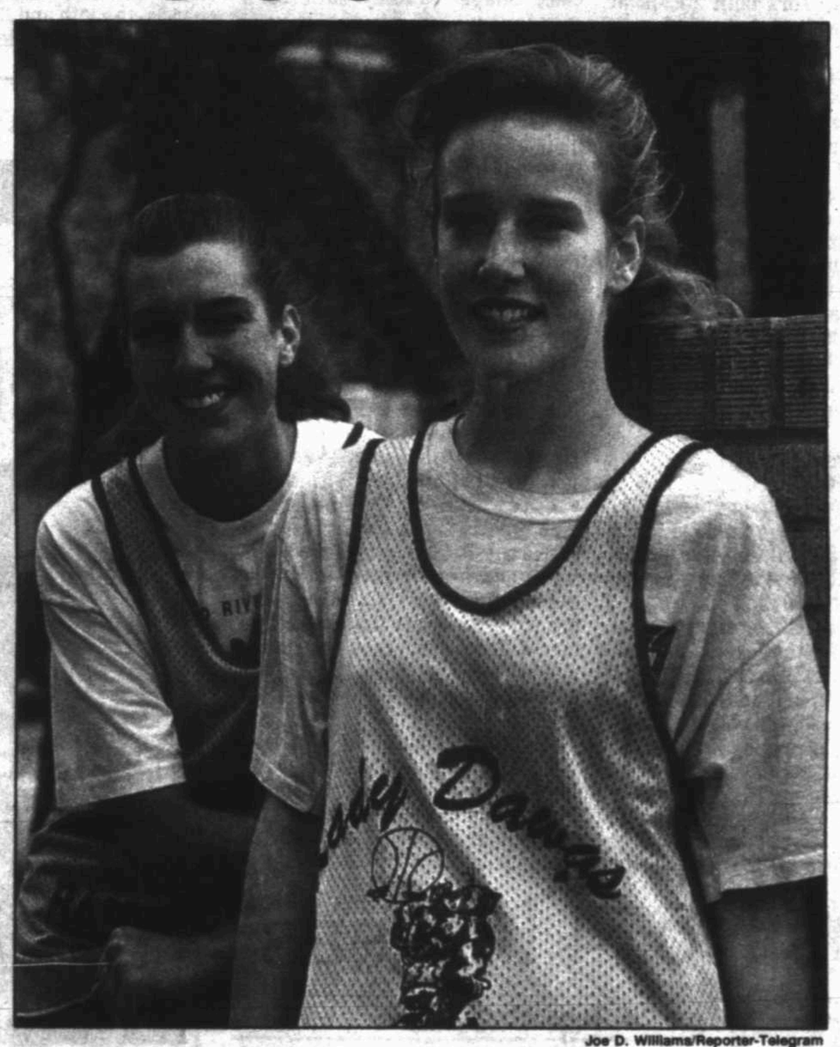

But the Lady Bulldog seniors, measuring 5-foot-10 and 5-9 respectively, have been nothing short of "Towers of Power" for the Midland defense.

All season Thompson and Rogers have matched up defensively against many opposing post players that measure 6-0 or better. But before the season started, the duo had the undaunted chore of filling the gap left by 6-4 Lisa Koss, who blocked an incredible 133 shots last year.

"They have certainly exceeded any expectations that I had for them at the start the season," Midland coach Jim Raughton said. "What they lack in size, they make up for with their heart and an understanding of what I want them to do. They've done a tremendous job."

Rogers and Thompson have faced several 6-foot-plus post players this season. In the preseason, there was Lubbock Monterey's Amy Wells. The Lady Bulldogs play Monterey

Chaps play last home game today

■ Seven Midland College sophomore's play for the final time at Chaparral Center.

By Bill Petitt
Staff Writer

If the Midland College sophomore class does not shed a tear during today's game with New Mexico Junior College, do not take it the wrong way.

It may be the final home game for seven Midland College players, but for the Chaps, there is a lot of work to be done, specifically a trip to the Region V Tournament in Waco and possibly a trip to the national tournament for the first time since the 1986-87 season, before talking about their careers at MC.

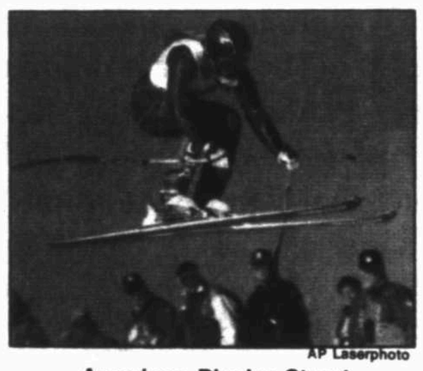

"I think it means something to them," said MC coach Steve Green. "Most of them have had two good years here and they want to go out on a positive note. Andre (Owens) and Kevin Sims have been with us for one, but I think the experience has been good for them and they have been very good for our basketball program."

The Chaps meet New Mexico Junior College tonight at 7:30 p.m. at Chaparral Center.

"It's just another ballgame, no big deal," said sophomore guard Luis Cambraia, reflecting the sentiments of the Class of '94.

"It's going to be interesting knowing I will never play in this gym again," said sophomore forward Kirk Ford. "We're just trying to get mentally prepared for regionals right now. I'm trying to get

American Picabo Street ...standing in second place

Of Koss, more gold medals for Norway

By Larry McShane
Associated Press Writer

LILLEHAMMER, Norway — Picabo Street renewed U.S. medal hopes on the slopes. Torvill and Dean recreated a little piece of 1984. And Norway reasserted itself with its eighth gold medal — of Koss.

Johann Olav Koss, the hometown hero who has made the Games his winter playground, did it again Sunday in the 10,000 meters. He collected his third gold medal and third world record in the last eight days, obliterating the old mark by 12.99 seconds to become Lillehammer's first triple gold medalist.

"I could not imagine that it was possible to skate like that," Koss said. "I am maybe in shock for the moment."

In a form-fitting red outfit fit for The Flash, Koss zipped around the Olympic oval faster than anyone in history. He finished almost 19 seconds ahead of teammate Kjell Storelid, who won the silver. Bart Veldkamp of the Netherlands, who said Koss' record would stand for 30 years, claimed the bronze.

"Koss is the boss," was the cry of the partisan crowd, and the Norwegian was certainly born to skate. The 25-year-old

'Super Tuesday' allows no voting

You can't blame Midland's local basketball coaches for folding hands and saying a few prayers. After all, it's that time of year.

Williamson

"I'm in church on Sunday morning, Sunday night and Wednesday night — and looking somewhere to go the rest of the nights of the week. I don't want to miss a service," was the way Midland High girls coach Jim Raughton put it.

Tuesday night is the biggest day of the basketball season to date as three Midland teams again hit the playoff hardwood. Win and feel the glory. Lose and meet Mr. Elimination. It's that time of year.

But there is even more significance Tuesday. The MHS girls go into their 6 p.m. meeting with Lubbock Monterey at Chaparral Center with more things hanging on the line that a full hamper of damp clothes.

First and foremost is the fact that no Midland girls team has ever reached the Region I tournament field since that event came to Midland in 1981. Secondly, the girls of District 4-5A have a 23-game losing streak in the playoffs against teams from District 3-5A. Monterey just happens to be a 3-5A team.

Ironically, the MHS girls enter the game as the favorite, completely unheard of in the modern era. The Lady Bulldogs are the No. 9 ranked team in the state with a 30-3 record.

And then there is the fact that the MHS girls are guaranteed (if they keep winning) three consecutive playoff games at home. With a win, the MHS girls would move back to Chaparral Center Friday and Saturday for the Region I tournament. The only place left after that is the Big House in Austin — and every team in the state wants to play there. And there isn't a team in the state who wouldn't want to be in Midland High's shoes at this stage of single elimination. It's a path that goes through your own front yard.

OK, so you want to make this Tuesday bigger. The girls game will be followed by Midland High and Lubbock Monterey at 8 p.m. in the opening round of the boys state playoffs. And if that isn't enough, Midland Lee's boys are headed for the Texan Dome in Levelland to meet Lubbock Coronado in another bi-district game. No voting on this Super Tuesday, just bouncing.

Since basketball adopted the three teams from each district to the playoffs format last year, Midland teams have won six of the 12 berths. The MHS girls and the MHS and Lee boys are all making back-to-back playoff appearances. Midland is Basketball Central as far as 4-5A basketball is concerned.

In the two years of three team action, the MHS girls have finished regular season play ranked No. 9 while the Lee boys finished regular season last year ranked as No. 10. The quality has been exciting.

The playoff record over the two years to date is only 3-3. That is why the locals could put a big dent in that mark with a sweep Tuesday.

The MHS girls are 2-1, the Lee boys 1-1 and the MHS boys 0-1. The Lee boys are the only team tonight rated as an underdog, but they only lost to Coronado by a five-point margin early in the season. The sweep is possible.

The Midland High-Monterey doubleheader (MHS vs. MHS twice) should draw a huge crowd at the Chap Tuesday. The pass list has been suspended for these matchups and tickets will be sold from the Chap ticket booth, beginning at 5 p.m. Tuesday. Make plans to arrive early.

Shaq's 38 nips Bucks

Associated Press

MILWAUKEE — Shaquille O'Neal scored 38 points, none more critical than his soft shot with just over one minute left that iced Orlando's 109-104 victory over the Milwaukee Bucks on Sunday.

■ NBA Roundup

Trailing 103-93 with under five minutes remaining, the Bucks used an 11-2 run to pull to 105-104 with 2:49 left.

But they couldn't find the basket after that, and O'Neal's roll-in with 1:07 left made it 107-104. After Eric Murdock missed a shot for Milwaukee, Orlando's Dennis Scott hit one of two free throws with 46 seconds remaining for a 108-104 advantage.

Scott finished with 18 points as Orlando stretched its winning streak to four. Vin Baker and Todd Day each had 20 points for the Bucks, who fell to 6-20 at home.

Nets 122, Bullets 101

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Armon Gilliam, starting for the injured Derrick Coleman, had 24 points and keyed an early 32-9 run as New Jersey won its fifth straight game.

The winning streak matches the Nets' longest of the season, gave them 13 wins in 17 games and put them two games over .500 (26-24) for the first time this season.

The Bullets didn't offer much competition, even with Coleman out with a sprained left ankle — the Nets are now 4-0 without him — and Kenny Anderson on the bench with two fouls less than four minutes into the game.

New Jersey overcame the problem by shooting 60.4 percent from the field in the first half against the league's worst field goal defense (49.6). The Nets pushed the percentage to 68 in the third quarter in building a 32-point lead.

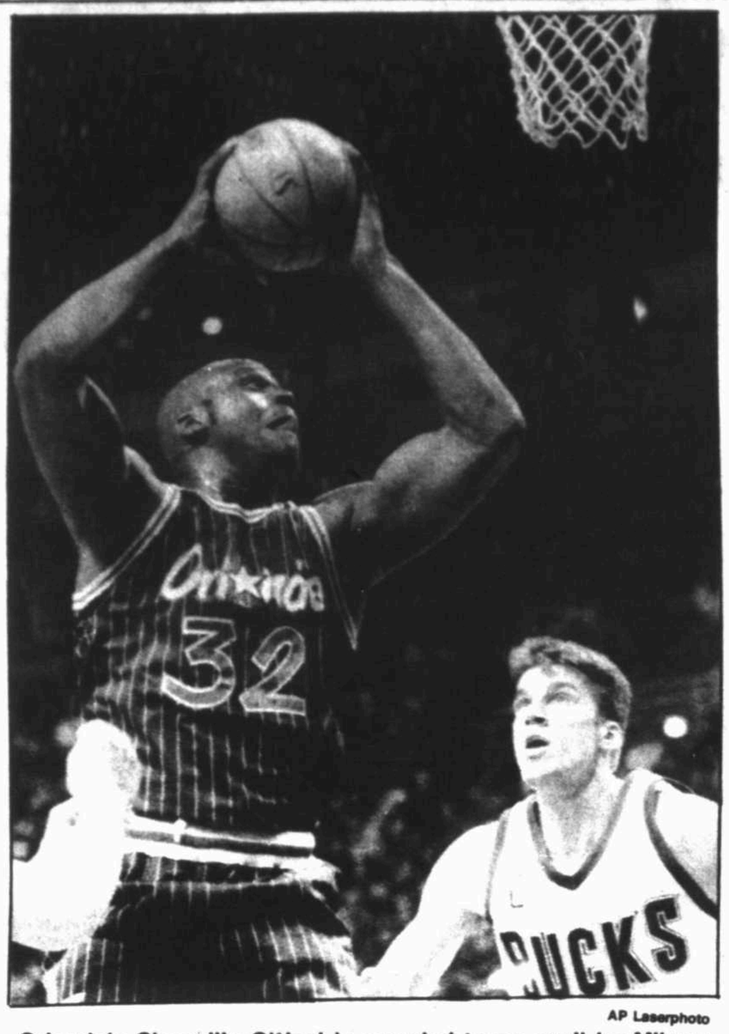

Pacers 101, SuperSonics 95

INDIANAPOLIS — Derrick McKey shook off a cut on his shooting hand and scored 27 points against his former teammates, leading Indiana over Seattle.

The win was the ninth in 10 games for the Pacers and moved them above the .500 mark at 25-24, the first time they've had a winning record since they were 40-39 late last season. The Sonics lost their third straight game, all on a five-game road trip through the Eastern Conference.

The game marked the second meeting between Indiana and Seattle since the preseason trade of McKey for Detlef Schrempf.

McKey made the trade look like a steal for the Pacers. He scored 15 of their first 21 points en route to a 19-point opening half.

Knicks 86, Bulls 68

NEW YORK — Patrick Ewing and Charles Oakley dominated inside as New York built a 22-point halftime lead and cruised past Chicago.

Ewing had 11 of his 20 points and 11 of his 18 rebounds and Oakley all of his 10 points and 10 of his 13 rebounds in the first half, which ended with New York ahead 50-28 after outscoring the Bulls 31-13 in the second quarter.

At halftime, the Knicks had a 34-14 rebounding advantage, including 17-3 at the offensive end.

The defeat was the third straight for the Bulls, who lost consecutive games at home last week after winning 17 in a row at Chicago Stadium. Their 68 points were a season low.

Lakers 107, 76ers 95

INGLEWOOD, Calif. — Sedale Threatt scored 21 points and rookie Nick Van Exel got nine of his 19 points during a decisive third-quarter rally as the Los Angeles Lakers beat Philadelphia.

It was the 10th straight loss at the Forum for the Sixers, a streak dating back to March 7, 1984.

Elden Campbell added 18 points for the Lakers, who ended a three-game losing streak by limiting the 76ers to 10 points in the third period.

Clarence Weatherspoon had 26 points and 17 rebounds for the 76ers, whose five-game losing streak and four-game road skid are their longest of the season. It was Philadelphia's first game since Shawn Bradley suffered a season-ending knee injury Friday night at Portland.

After missing his first three shots, Weatherspoon connected on his next nine to help the 76ers build their biggest lead at 64-55 with 11:05 left in the third.

Nuggets 97, Hawks 92

DENVER — Reggie Williams' three-point play with just over a minute left gave Denver the lead for good as the Nuggets rallied in the fourth quarter for a victory over Atlanta.

Atlanta led 89-83 with 4:19 left, but Bryant Stith, LaPhonso Ellis and Brian Williams each hit two free throws to tie it at 89-89 with just over two minutes left.

A free throw by Dominique Wilkins gave Atlanta its last lead at 90-89, but Williams then made his layup and free throw. The Hawks missed their next six shots, and the Nuggets got a tip-in and free throw from Dikembe Mutombo and a foul shot from Brian Williams to go ahead 96-90 with 7.6 seconds left.

Mahmoud Abdul-Rauf led Denver with 19 points. Reggie Williams contributed 18 and Stith 17. Mutombo's 15 rebounds helped the Nuggets compile a 52-33 edge on the boards.

Hoch ends tour drought

Associated Press

INDIAN WELLS, Calif. — Scott Hoch, receiving little pressure from any of the contenders, shot a 2-under-par 70 Sunday to win the Bob Hope Classic by three strokes — his first victory on the tour in five years.

The triumph was Hoch's fifth in his 15 years on the PGA Tour. His previous victory came in the 1989 Las Vegas Invitational, like this tournament a five-day, 90-hole event played under a pro-am format.

Hoch won with a 234 total, 26-under-par in the tournament sponsored by Chrysler. The victory was worth $198,000 from the total purse of $1.1 million and signaled Hoch's full recovery from shoulder surgery that cost him most of the 1992 season.

The triumph was set up by his brilliant 62 at PGA West in Thursday's second round, which gave him his initial lead, and a 66 at Bermuda Dunes on Saturday to regain it.

Hoch held a four-stroke advantage starting the final round and led by two or more throughout the chilly day at Indian Wells. His task was eased by the failure of anyone within striking range to make a charge.

Lennie Clements, Jim Gallagher and Billy Glasson had a combined total of two birdies on the back nine of the easiest of the four desert resort courses used in this event.

That enabled Hoch to survive from his own mistakes on the back nine. He missed the green on both par-3s, the 13th and 15th, but saved par on both. He made another save of par from behind a palm tree on the 12th.

On the par-5 14th, he drove behind the gallery in the left rough, found an opening throur the trees and got his second into a bunker short of the greend.

But he played a long sand shot to within inches and turned potential trouble into a birdie.

That one gave him a five-shot lead with four to go and, despite a three-putt bogey on the 17th, brought it home with relative ease.

"We were just too far back to catch Scott," Gallagher said. "He did what he had to do to win it."

A couple of veterans, Fuzzy Zoeller and Payne Stewart, made the best runs at Hoch, but each was too far back to have any realistic hopes of overtaking the man who lost a playoff for the 1989 Masters.

The Challenge

NAPLES, Fla. — Mike Hill started his day wondering if muscle spasms would prevent him from defending his title in the final round of the Senior PGA Tour's IntelliNet Challenge.

After receiving treatments for more than an hour, Hill went out and shot a course-record 63 to win the tournament by three strokes.

"At 9 o'clock in the morning I was standing, talking to my wife, and had a muscle spasm," Hill said. "Actually it's a rib that comes up and doesn't stay in place, then the muscle gets into a spasm. I did not know if I was going to play or not."

Hill drove himself from the hotel to the golf course, but had to be helped by his son, Mike Jr., from the car to the fitness trailer.

"I never thought about shooting 63," Hill said. "I was just hoping to shoot par."

Once on the course, the putts started falling and Hill's victory turned into a runaway. Runner-up Tom Wargo finished at 12-under with a closing 68. Second-round leader George Archer, Dave Stockton and Dick Goetz tied for third at 11-under, and former amateur standout Jay Sigel joined Simon Hobday and J.C. Snead at 10-under.

"The fear of having it get me in the middle of my backswing was the big thing," Hill said. "But it never went into a spasm again."

The victory gives Hill at least one victory in each of the last five seasons. It is Hill's 16th career Senior Tour title and earned him $75,000.

Missouri spills No. 4 Kansas

Associated Press

LAWRENCE, Kan. — Melvin Booker scored a career-high 32 points, including 10 straight in one take-charge stretch of the second half, and No. 12 Missouri beat No. 4 Kansas 81-74 Sunday to keep its dream of an unbeaten Big Eight season alive.

The Tigers (20-2, 11-0 Big Eight) clinched a tie for the regular-season title with a season sweep of the Jayhawks (21-5, 6-4), who lost consecutive games for the first time in five years.

Missouri would be the first Big Eight team to go unbeaten through the conference season since the 1970-71 Jayhawks.

Just as Kansas looked like it would take control in the second half, Booker scored 10 straight points, two on 3-pointers, to personally forge a 63-63 deadlock.

A moment later, Jacque Vaughn's 3-pointer gave Kansas the lead back, but with 3:34 to go, Kelly Thames battled inside for a stick-back and a 66-65 lead, Missouri's first since early in the second half.

After Vaughn's bucket tied it at 69, Booker's 3-pointer put the Tigers on top 72-69 with 2:05 to play. Steve Woodberry's bucket brought the Jayhawks within one point, but Jevon Crudup responded with a rebound basket and was fouled by Scot Pollard.

He made the free-throw for a 75-71 lead with 56 seconds left.

For the game, Kansas was 9-of-22 from the line while Missouri was 24-of-30. The Tigers outrebounded Kansas 40-29.

The Tigers, who snapped a six-game losing streak to Kansas last month with a 79-67 home victory, had a 12-4 run in the first half and took a 39-34 lead into intermission. In the first half, Missouri was 15-of-19 from the line while Kansas was 6-of-12.

No. 13 Temple 68, No. 5 Louisville 53

ORLANDO, Fla. — Aaron McKie didn't give John Chaney any reason to lose his cool.

McKie scored all but two of his 19 points in the second half and No. 13 Temple held fifth-ranked Louisville to one basket in the final six minutes.

Chaney, the Owls' coach of 12 seasons, returned to the Temple bench after serving a one-game suspension for threatening comments he made to counterpart John Calipari of Massachusetts following a one-point loss a week ago.

He remained calm throughout the game with the exception of several occasions in the second half when he rose from his seat to shout instructions to his Owls (19-4).

Louisville (20-4) missed 27 of 33 shots in the second half after leading 36-33 at halftime. The Cardinals' leading scorer, Clifford Rozier, was held to one point — 18 below his average.

McKie, meanwhile, warmed up after a slow start in which he made just one of five shots in the opening half. He made seven of 11 after the break and got scoring help from Derrick Battie and Eddie Jones, who finished with 17 and 16.

■ Top 25 Basketball

No. 6 Duke 85, N. Carolina St. 58

DURHAM, N.C. — Jeff Capel scored 18 points to lead five players in double figures, and sixth-ranked Duke smothered North Carolina State with man-to-man defense, its ninth straight over the Wolfpack.

In a 92-65 road victory over N.C. State on Jan. 20, the Blue Devils hit a torrid 68 percent of their field goals, including 77 percent in the first half. Duke (19-3, 10-3 Atlantic Coast Conference) didn't shoot nearly that well at home, but didn't need it.

Drought hardly described N.C. State's shooting in the first half. The Wolfpack got decent looks at the basket in the first 15 minutes, but their shots wouldn't fall against the Blue Devils' defense.

No. 10 Massachusetts 74, West Virginia 67

AMHERST, Mass. — Donta Bright had 19 points and No. 10 Massachusetts used a late rally to pull away from West Virginia.

The Minutemen (21-5, 11-1 Atlantic 10) used a 22-9 run to take its biggest lead of the game, 66-54, with 1:37 to play. Mike Williams had nine of the points for Massachusetts, which holds a one-game lead over Temple in the conference. They meet Thursday night.

No. 19 California 89, No. 23 Cincinnati 80

ORLANDO, Fla. — Lamond Murray scored 13 of his 23 points in the second half and Jason Kidd had 22 points and eight assists to lead No. 19 California over No. 23 Cincinnati.

Kidd made four free throws in the final 1:43 and Murray and Monty Buckley also delivered key baskets down the stretch as the Golden Bears (18-5) won for the eighth time in nine games.

Cincinnati (17-8) played its fifth consecutive game against a Top 25 opponent and fell to 2-3 in those outings despite getting a career-high 26 points from Damon Flint and 17 from fellow freshman Dontonio Wingfield.

No. 22 Marquette 84, Dayton 62

MILWAUKEE — No rest for weary Marquette, but at least there was some relief.

No. 22 Marquette, playing its fourth game in eight days, cruised past Dayton.

Damon Key scored 20 points and grabbed 10 rebounds for the Great Midwest Conference-leading Warriors (18-7, 8-2), while Tony Miller added 14 points and Robb Logterman and Anthony Pieper 13 each.

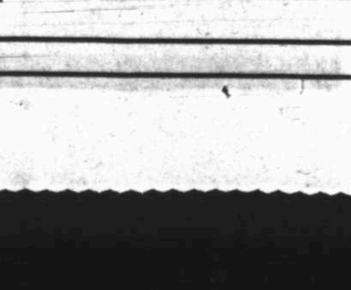

Dayton (5-16), which trailed 43-24 at halftime, lost for the eighth time in nine conference games despite 20 points from Andy Meyer.

AP Book Recounts Agony, Action Of World War II In Europe

War in Europe, a 192-page hard-cover book by The Associated Press, combines an incisive narrative with compelling photographs to mark the 50th anniversary of World War II.

The D-Day invasion in Normandy, Anzio, the Battle of the Bulge, Berlin – all are recalled vividly, with colorful quotes and anecdotes and archival photos that capture the stupifying human cost and staggering proportions of the war. Author Sid Moody offers a penetrating analysis of the war, along with powerful and poignant tales of epic battles and individual exploits, of mayhem and of men.

Winter Olympics

Olympics Capsules

LILLEHAMMER, Norway (AP) — A quick look at what happened Sunday at the Winter Olympics:

SPEEDSKATING
Norway's Johann Olav Koss turned in one of the best speedskating performances of all time Sunday to become the first triple-gold medalist of these Olympics. He cut 12.99 seconds from his own world record to win in 13 minutes, 30.55 seconds.
It marked the first time any speedskater has set world records in three events in one Olympics.

ALPINE SKIING
Katja Seizinger, Picabo Street and Isolde Kostner ran 1-2-3 in the downhill portion of the women's combined, the same order in which they finished the gold-medal downhill the day before.
The combined will be completed Monday at Hafjell, when the women run a slalom race. Medals are based on aggregate time.

FIGURE SKATING
Jayne Torvill and Christopher Dean took a slim lead after the original dance. Russians Maya Usova and Alexander Zhulin were second ahead of Oksana Gritschuk and Evgeni Platov, also from Russia.
It comes down to the free dance Monday. Whichever of the top three wins the final portion, worth 50 percent, takes the gold medal.

SKI JUMPING
Jens Weissflog of Germany came from behind on the second jump to capture the gold medal in the 120-meter ski jumping with 274.5 points.

BOBSLED
Switzerland's Gustav Weder and Donat Acklin won the two-man bobsled over teammates Reto Goetschi and Guido Acklin — Dino's brother — in the second-closest Olympic bobsled finish in history.
The gold and silver medals were the first of the Lillehammer Winter Games for any Swiss athletes.

BIATHLON
Sergei Tarasov won the men's 20-kilometer biathlon in 57 minutes, 25.3 seconds, making up for misses in shooting with superior cross-country skiing.

HOCKEY
Russia edged the Czech Republic, 4-3. Finland routed Germany 7-1 to finish the pool undefeated and untied in the tournament in the preliminary round.
Austria beat Norway, 4-2. Norway finished 0-5.
The qualifiers from Pool A are Finland, Germany, Czech Republic and Russia.

Michael Jordan kneels among several baseballs thrown to him by fans looking for autographs during spring training.

Jordan gets into swing

SARASOTA, Fla. (AP) — Michael Jordan took a whipping in ping pong, slipped and did a belly-flop in the outfield and reached the fence for the first time with a line drive Sunday.

The Chicago White Sox rookie also made a foray to the third base dugout and signed a bevy of baseballs flipped to him from adulating fans at Ed Smith Stadium.

Saying he was pleased with his progress under hitting coach Walt Hriniak, Jordan readied himself for Tuesday when he will face real pitchers for the first time since his quest to play baseball began.

"I don't expect any leeway. Just don't hit me, if they can avoid it," Jordan said with a laugh. "I'm looking forward to the challenge. I think I have the skills to get ready for it on Tuesday."

In batting practice, Jordan drove one ball on one hop against a soft drink sign in left field. On the very next pitch from minor league catching coordinator Tommy Thompson, he lined one against the base of the wall, off a beer billboard. The 6-foot-6 Jordan still has not hit one over the fence.

"There's a tendency and expectations of fans to see me knock it out. My goal is to make good contact. I'm not out to hit home runs, to get on base. If I do improve my strength and my bat speed, homers will be there," Jordan said.

Jordan, who's been getting up every morning at 6 a.m. to head to the park for early batting practice, needs work on another game — his table tennis.

Pitcher Kirk McCaskill beat him 21-17 and then Alex Fernandez scored an even easier victory over the former basketball superstar, 21-11.

Jordan then headed out to work on his baseball defense and near the end of the drill, he went hard after a grounder near the right field line, slipped and went stomach first into the grass, kicking up his heels and leaving a divot.

Less than an hour later as he waited for batting practice to begin, he went to third base line for an impromptu and brief autograph session. One fan flipped a ball at him and as he began to sign, about two dozen balls poured out of the stands at his feet.

Jordan signed them but had to return to the workout, so he had stadium personnel throw them back to the fans.

everybody working together and get things clicking."

New Mexico Junior College is 3-8 in the Western Junior College Athletic Conference and 11-15 overall after a narrow, 94-91 loss to Odessa College last Thursday in Hobbs, N.M.

The T-Birds have been a team in constant disarray all season with the loss center Sonny Alvarado early, and guard Duke Rousse, who left at the semester break.

NMJC does have some weapons left in the arsenal with last year's New Mexico High School Player of the Year Shawn Baker and Terrence Fitzpatrick. Both are averaging 17.9 points and per game. Baker is leading the conference in assists (8.1) and steals (4.0) per game and is hitting 40 per cent of his three-point field goal attempts.

Midland has beaten NMJC twice this season, a 114-94 win on Dec. 4 in the WJCAC Preseason Tournament and a 108-80 win at Hobbs two weeks ago.

Baker connected on seven three's and 27 points in the first game, but Midland held him to just three treys and 18 points.

"We are going to try and do what we did the second time against him," said Green jokingly. "Really, Baker probably took some bad shots the second time around. He and Fitzpatrick are two of the better players in the conference."

Midland is currently on a six-game winning streak. The Chap defense has been a main reason for the streak, holding opponents to 76.1 points per game.

"We have made some adjustments defensively," said Green. "We had to because our offense has been struggling lately. I think anytime we can hold an opponent down to 75 points in a game we have a great chance to win. We should be able to score 80 points on any given night."

Last Thursday, the Chaps held New Mexico Military to 67 points in an 80-67 win. Tyson tied a career-high with 21 points in the game. He has scored in double figures in four of the past six games.

Inside, Steve Walston scored 18 points and grabbed 11 rebounds against NMMI.

CHAP NOTES: Midland College leads the series with NMJC 27-11, winning the past three meetings between the two schools... freshman center John Brown remains hobbled by a sore left knee, but will see action tonight. He scored 24 points against NMJC in the last meeting on 12-of-14 shooting from the field... Midland will play its final regular season game Thursday against Howard College in Big Spring.

Two Toronto Blue Jays report to jail

Associated Press

■ Spring Training

While most pitchers were reporting to spring training, Dave Stewart and Todd Stottlemyre of the Toronto Blue Jays were reporting to jail.

Stewart, celebrating his birthday, and Stottlemyre were arrested early Sunday after scuffling with police at a Tampa-area nightclub and charged with battery on a law enforcement officer and resisting arrest.

Stewart and Stottlemyre both spent about 1½ hours at the Hillsborough County jail before posting bond around 5 a.m. EST. Stewart faces an additional charge of disorderly conduct.

In another incident Saturday night, Cincinnati Reds pitcher Erik Hanson sustained minor injuries in an auto accident. He did not work out Sunday, but was expected to practice again soon.

Lance Blankenship, meanwhile, may miss the entire 1994 season for Oakland. Blankenship, a candidate to become the Athletics' starting center fielder, has not recovered well from arthroscopic shoulder surgery and can't throw.

Stewart and Stottlemyre got in trouble about a half-hour drive from Dunedin, where Toronto trains.

Police officers intervened after noticing an argument between the pitchers and the manager of the nightclub "Masquerades," city police spokesman Steve Cole said in a release.

According to police, Stewart, who turned 37 Saturday night, refused to pay a cover charge for the four people in his party and also refused to wear a bracelet, which is required for entrance into the club.

Stottlemyre, 28, was arrested when he pushed one of the officers backward, and Stewart then attacked the other as his teammate was being escorted to a squad car, Cole said.

"Stewart became extremely angry and without warning punched officer Scott MacLean in the face causing cuts and bruises," Cole said.

The officer punched by Stewart was taken to the hospital and treated for a possible concussion, police said.

Hanson, acquired by the Reds in an offseason trade with Seattle, said an auto crossed the center line and hit his rental car near the Reds' camp in Plant City, Fla.

The pitcher and his wife, Laura, were taken to a hospital as a precaution, but did not require treatment.

Hanson said his back was stiff, but it was "nothing serious." He said his wife had minor bruises and a sore ankle.

The Oakland Athletics and Baltimore Orioles, meanwhile, hope key players who were hurt last year will make a good showing in spring training.

In Arizona, A's first baseman Mark McGwire reported to camp at Scottsdale Community College and took some swings.

McGwire was batting .337 with nine home runs when he injured his heel in mid-May, limiting him two at-bats the rest of the season. Off-season surgery repaired the heel and removed an adjacent bone spur.

"My anticipation is that I will be the same as ever," McGwire said. "I feel strong mentally. They pay me a lot of money to play this game. I won't come up short."

But the report on Blankenship wasn't so bright. He is to be examined in Los Angeles to see whether he'll be able to play.

"It's not good news about Blank," A's manager Tony La Russa said. "It's real doubtful that he'd be available any time soon, and he could be out for the year. That's a setback, because I had important plans for him."

The other A's who reported Sunday were healthy except for two rookies. Pitcher Tanyon Sturtze was sidelined by a spider bite and catcher George Williams has a sore throwing arm.

In Florida, the Orioles are hoping pitcher Mike Mussina feels strong in workouts in Sarasota.

Mussina, a two-time All-Star, had a 9-2 record last June 11. But in the next 10 weeks, he pitched through biceps tendinitis and was 2-2 with a 9.00 ERA.

Harding hobbled by strain

HAMAR, Norway (AP) — Fragile one day, strong the next, Tonya Harding is hobbled more by emotional strain than her swollen right ankle, her coach and close friends said.

Harding talked through her problems with them Sunday morning at the Olympics, then skated beautifully in two workouts. Responding to the applause and exhortations of Team Tonya, she nailed four of the trademark triple axel jumps she had crashed on the past two days when she sobbed in frustration and pain.

Nancy Kerrigan had a bumpier practice this time, falling into one of her bad habits of not completing her program. For one day, at least, and for the first time since Harding arrived, she completely outskated Kerrigan.

Coaches seldom applaud loudly at practice, but sensing the need to boost Harding's sagging spirits, her coach, Diane Rawlinson, choreographer, Erika Bakacas, and attorney, Dennis Rawlinson, clapped each time Harding completed a jump — easy or not.

Harding smiled broadly, and even laughed at herself after one embarrassing fall at the end of the day, when she suddenly slipped doing simple crossover steps while cooling down. She skidded on her bottom across three-quarters of the hockey rink, spinning like a puck. If this were a game, she would have been called for icing.

"The first three sessions she did here were incredible," her coach said. "And then she had one where she was distracted before the press conference. And another one where she had just seen herself on the front page of a newspaper here and wasn't very happy with it. So she was very distracted."

Those distractions, combined with the persistent ankle injury, caused Harding to lose control of her emotions and her skating the past couple of days and opened the question of whether she was fit to compete starting Wednesday night.

Harding became angry Sunday and abruptly ended an interview with Connie Chung of CBS News when asked what she thought of statements by two figure skating judges who said they would be influenced by the fact Harding failed to tell authorities all she knew about the attack on Kerrigan.

"I'm not going to answer that," Harding said. "OK, I'm done. I'm done with this."

On Monday, a draw will be held to determine the skating order for the short program.

Evy Scotvold, Kerrigan's coach, said Harding's behavior at previous practices could indicate her skating is in trouble.

"When someone acts like that, they've got a problem," he said. "Maybe they're not ready or they're not disciplined. Our skaters don't barge off the ice. At least they don't do it twice."

Harding is the only woman at the Olympics who will attempt a triple axel, a 3 1-2 turn jump, though it strains her right ankle and carries severe risks.

"When you miss by a half turn, that's like Greg Norman missing a 30-foot lag putt by 29 feet," Scotvold said.

The urgency of Harding's problems the past couple of days did not elude her entourage.

"We sat down and talked about it," said Dennis Rawlinson. "She realized that doing that, crying and leaving the ice and complaining about her ankle, wasn't going to help her. She needs to remain positive.

"We talked about it after the practices and again this morning. It also really helped to have her dad in town this weekend. Some other friends have arrived, and that's helped to the extent that she can get away for a couple of hours and be with some friends."

Harding has been lonely and edgy in the athletes' village, he said, though she has not felt ostracized by teammates or others.

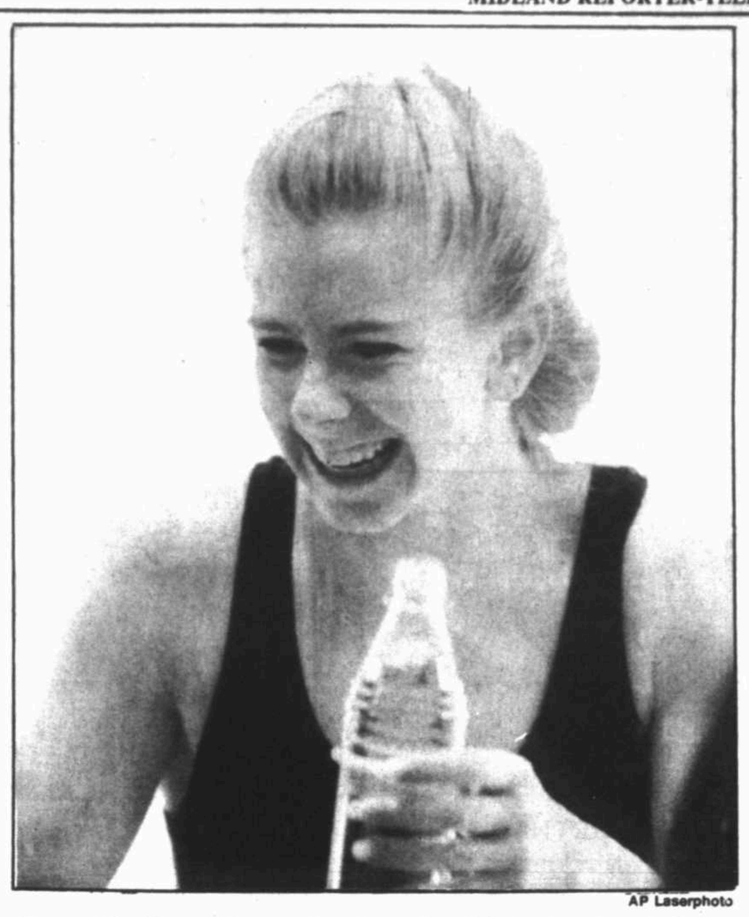

"We haven't experienced anything negative — knock on wood," Rawlinson said. "But Tonya doesn't do as well in the village. She needs to get out of there a little bit, get with some friends, and have a good time."

So far, there hasn't been much opportunity to do that. She wanted to go to the men's free skate Saturday night, but plans fell through at the last moment.

"I saw her sitting all by herself in the cafeteria at breakfast this morning, and I just sat down with her," said Lily Lee, an American who skates for South Korea in the same practice session with Harding. "I didn't get the feeling of anyone giving her dirty looks in the village or staying away from her. Some athletes who didn't know her were kind of curious. One speedskater from the Netherlands came over and said, 'Oh, you're the one who is so famous.' She laughed."

Lee showed Harding how to use the electronic mail on the computers in the village, and they found 61 messages for Harding.

"The U.S. hockey team wished her good luck," Lee said. "I saw a couple of notes like that. I didn't see them all, but none of the ones I saw were bad. But I'm sure she's got a lot of things on her mind, and those are probably bothering her more than her ankle."

OLYMPICS: Norway, Russia tied

(From 1C)

Oslo medical student set world records last week in the 1,500 and 5,000, and became only the third skater to sweep all three distance events in a single Games.

His performance boosted Norway to the top of the medal charts, tied with Russia at 15 apiece. Norway's eight golds are one better than the Russians.

Koss' performance was no surprise; the work of Jayne Torvill and Christopher Dean was.

The British skaters, who won the gold in 1984 and have not skated since in the Olympics, pulled a picture-perfect performance out of their past to take the lead in ice dance.

With a sizzling rhumba, Torvill and Dean jumped from third to first after their skate through the original dance, scoring two perfect 6.0 marks for presentation.

They were tied with Maia Usova and Alexander Zhulin of Russia heading into Monday's free skate, with Russians Oksana Gritschuk and Evgeny Platov third.

"We felt quite good about the rhumba — confident," Dean said. "This put us in a position where we could win. Monday is the real competition."

The free dance is worth 50 percent of the total score and will determine the medalists.

The same night, the U.S. hockey team faces a do-or-die — or tie — game against Italy. A win or a tie puts the Americans in the medal round, while a loss means Italy advances.

America has a shot at its fifth straight Alpine medal with Street, who used the first half of the women's combined to prove her silver medal in Saturday's downhill was no fluke.

Running in the downhill portion of the combined, she again finished second — behind Katja Seizinger of Germany, and ahead of Isolde Kostner of Italy. The trio finished in the exact same order in the downhill.

The combined medals are awarded Monday following the slalom, although Street said she was wasn't worried about adding another medal to her trophy case.

"I'm not going to cry if I don't get a medal, that's for sure," said the 22-year-old from Sun Valley, Idaho. "I had a dream come true for me yesterday, and that's going to be kind of hard to top."

Street aside, it was the quietest day yet in Lillehammer for the Americans, who made plenty of noise in the first week with great stories and gold medals: surprising Tommy Moe and Diann Roffe-Steinrotter on the slopes, Olympic veterans Bonnie Blair and Dan Jansen on the ice.

Blame it on Sunday's events, none of which are U.S. specialties: The biathlon, the two-man bobsled, ski-jumping and the 10,000-meter speedskating. No Americans even entered the speedskating; finishes in the other three ranged from 13th in the bobsled to 64th in the 20-kilometer biathlon.

The biathlon went to Sergei Tarasov of Russia, who finished just 3.4 seconds ahead of Germany's Frank Luck. Taking the ski jump was Jens Weissflog of Germany, who did Torvill and Dean one better — he captured a gold 10 years after winning in Sarajevo.

"This is the greatest victory in my career," Weissflog said after beating Norway's Espen Bredesen.

The biggest U.S. disappointment came in the bobsled, where the new Bo-Dyn sleds failed to end 38 years of Olympic futility. The sleds, shaped like an arrowhead instead of the traditional round shape, didn't get the blame from the Americans who rode them.

"The sled is great," said Jim Herberich, who finished 14th behind teammate Brian Shimer. "I love the way it handles ... I can't say enough about how good the sled is."

Not as good as Switzerland's Gustav Weder, who became the first repeat winner in the event. He beat the sled of Swiss teammate Reto Goetschi by .05 seconds.

The top of the medals chart is shaping up a little differently than at Albertville, where Germany, the now-defunct Unified Team, Norway, Austria and Italy were the top five medal winners.

The Lillehammer lineup as the second half of the Games began: Norway (15), Russia (15), Italy (13), Germany (11) and the United States (7).

Austria, which collected 21 medals two years ago, has but three here — none of them gold, compared to a half-dozen Albertville golds. They swept to eight Alpine medals in 1992; through four races here, they have none.

Austrian team leader Herwig Demschar blamed it on the tragic death of Ulrike Maier in a World Cup event two weeks before the Games.

"Imagine if one of your close friend suddenly died," said Demschar. "You cannot help being affected by an experience like that."

There were three hockey games Sunday in Pool A, where the qualifiers were already set. Russia bounced back from a loss to Germany with a 4-3 victory over the Czech Republic. Finland defeated Germany 7-1, while Austria won its first game over winless Norway, 4-2.

Norway and Austria did not make the medals round.

Torvill, Dean show passion in dance

HAMAR, Norway (AP) — It really looked like they were in love.

Jayne Torvill and Christopher Dean brought their passion and perfection back to Olympic ice dancing Sunday night, skating a sexy rhumba filled with soft caresses and smoldering glances.

Their performance rekindled memories of a decade ago, when they redefined the event at the Sarajevo Games with a scoreboard full of perfect marks.

After their rhumba at the European championships last month, Torvill said, "We were in love for two minutes while we danced, and then we became friends again."

"This is really nerve-racking," she said.

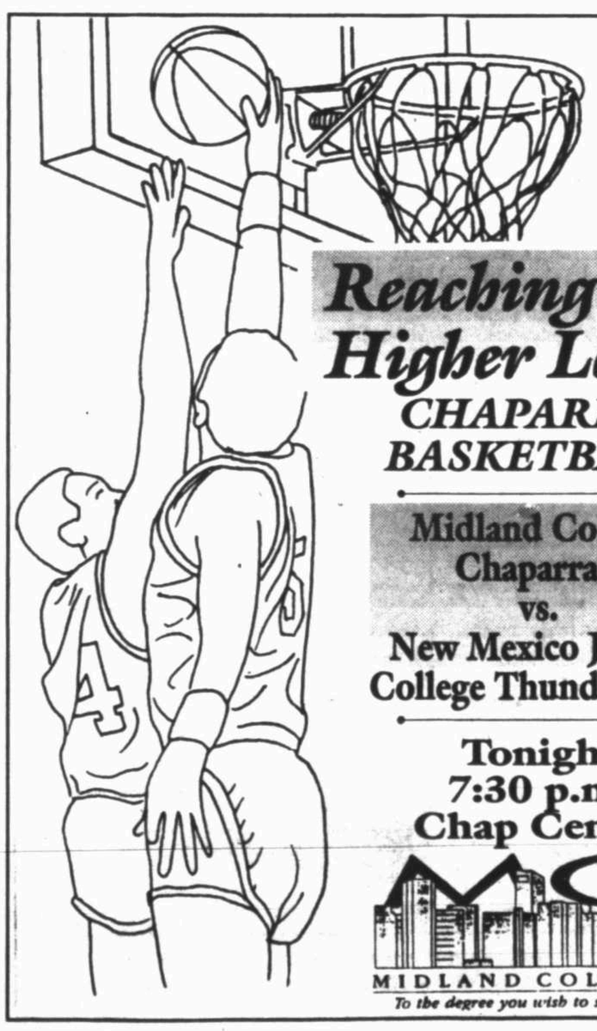

When Preston Waters sees an opportunity, he takes it. And now he's made himself a millionaire.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

MONDAY, FEBRUARY 21, 1994

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Now that you have made a fresh start, build on a solid foundation. You need the support of others, both emotionally and financially. New friends and admirers will enter your life by late spring. Cooperate with circumstances. June could bring a lucrative business partnership. An investment you make in August could result in fantastic returns. Take the lead in romance as the winter holidays approach.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: humor columnist Erma Bombeck, fashion designer Hubert de Givenchy, actress Rue McClanahan, baseball player Alan Trammel.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You have a lot of details to take care of today. Gather all available facts and figures before making an important decision. Curb a tendency to be overly modest.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Try to keep pace with the demands of this busy day. Consult experts before making new investments. Your social life accelerates when you reach out to new people.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Someone may have an idea for resolving the confusion in your mind. A raise or promotion is possible at work. Keep your nose to the grindstone while planning for a glorious future.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A pleasant change of plans arises today, allowing you to spend time on a pet project. Work endeavors go well. Sharing your expertise with others will reap big dividends.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A colleague or friend urges you to take your head out of the clouds. You gain confidence along with great results when you join a team. Give argumentative neighbors a wide berth.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Look your best today. You could be thrust into the limelight. Business decisions can be tricky. It is better to sell than buy when prices are inflated.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A busy day lies ahead. Making a split-second decision will be surprisingly easy. Someone asks a special favor. Grant it if no money is involved. Attend a small social gathering tonight.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Your enthusiasm is contagious now. It is foolish to live beyond your means. A big gamble might pay off if you know exactly what you are doing.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You are eager to set a new career course. A partner influences your decision. A loving home environment will put you in a happy, optimistic frame of mind.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You do not want to miss out on anything today. Initiate new activities; others will be happy to follow your lead. Luckily, you are in a decisive mood; your instincts are right on target.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Your behind-the-scenes private life is about to become more active. Communicate your needs indirectly. Be careful that your ideas or actions are not misconstrued.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): A wish will come true today. Timely talks and short business jaunts work out well. Turn on the charm and a business associate could become a friend. Careful!

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠J952 ♡Q1065 ◇98753 ♣Void
Partner opens the bidding with one no trump. What action do you take?
A.—Your side certainly has no game, but one no trump is unlikely to be your best spot. This is the time to try two clubs, asking partner for a four-card major. Naturally, you intend passing any response partner makes, including the two-diamond denial of a major.

Q.2—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠J9832 ♡K10752 ◇8 ♣74
Partner opens the bidding with one no trump. What action do you take?
A.—You would like to play in your better combined major, but unfortunately, there's no way to accomplish that. When holding two five-card majors and a weak hand, simply sign off in your stronger suit. Bid two hearts.

Q.3—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠KJ76 ♡A98632 ◇8 ♣74
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 NT	Pass	2 ♠	Pass
2 ◇	Pass	?

What do you bid now?
A.—Although partner could not cooperate with the Stayman inquiry, you still have a combined eight-card fit in a major and the values for game, no more. The way to describe this hand is to jump to four hearts. That's a shut-out bid, requesting partner to pass.

Q.4—Both vulnerable as South you hold:
♠KQ73 ♡AQ10652 ◇Q5 ♣8
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 NT	Pass	2 ♣	Pass
2 ◇	Pass	?

What do you bid now?
A.—This time you definitely have slam interest, so a jump to four hearts is barred. While two hearts would still be a one-round force (depending on partnership methods), it will be difficult later to distinguish between game and slam aspirations. Clarify matters now by jumping to three hearts.

Q.5—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠7 ♡KQJ9852 ◇953 ♣102
Partner opens the bidding with one spade. What do you respond?
A.—This is a question of whether to jump to four hearts to tell partner you want to play it right there, or to adopt a slower approach. Since the hand contains seven losers, our choice is to respond two hearts, intending to make minimum heart bids at each subsequent turn.

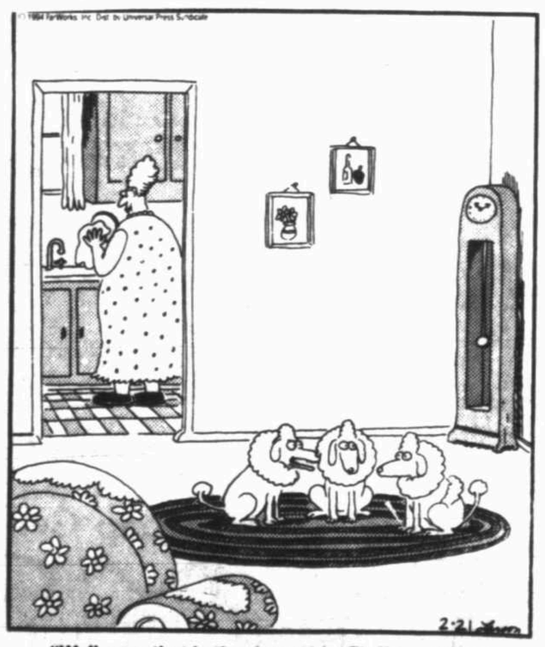

Q.6—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠J1073 ♡A10432 ◇62 ♣AQ
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♡	Pass	1 ♠	2 NT*

*—Minor-suit takeout
What action do you take?
A.—You have a dead minimum opening bid, but reasonable four-card support for partner's suit. Since the latter fact could be essential to partner's judgment of the possibilities, we would bid three spades.

Clinton campaign manager becomes comic on campus

PROVIDENCE, R.I. — James Carville sounded more like a stand-up comic than a political strategist.

Carville

Speaking Friday to a largely sympathetic crowd of about 500 people at Brown University, Carville poked fun at the president, his opponents, and most of all, himself.

He told the Ivy League students that he was able to complete his education at Louisiana State University in just four terms: "Kennedy, Johnson, Nixon and Ford."

Carville, who directed President Clinton's campaign last year, also referred to his poor grades at LSU, and to his recent marriage to Mary Matalin, a chief strategist in the Bush campaign.

"I want all you stupid, ugly guys to know there's hope for you," he said.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — It wasn't all pickin' and grinnin' on the set of the TV show "Hee Haw." Roy Clark says he and co-host Buck Owens nearly came to blows.

It happened when Owens, acting like a "real prima donna," argued with producers because he was late catching a plane, Clark writes in his recently published autobiography, "Roy Clark: My Life in Spite of Myself."

"I thought for a moment about grabbing Buck by the throat and shaking his eyeballs together," writes Clark, a former boxer. "I came close to getting physical with old Buck. I knew if I let myself go it could get ugly, so I held back."

But he also writes: "For a great majority of the time, he and I proved a winning combination."

Clark was host of "Hee Haw" for its entire 24-year run. Owens was co-host from 1969 until he left the show in 1986.

NEW YORK — Henry Kravis, the financier and leveraged buyout specialist, and Marie-Josee Drouin, a Canadian economist and business consultant, were married Saturday night in a ceremony at the Metropolitan Club in New York. The marriage was announced later at a dinner at the club attended by 200 friends.

Engraved invitations to the dinner had listed Kravis and Ms. Drouin as co-hosts, causing speculation that the couple, who had been seen together about town and in the Hamptons since last summer, would be announcing an engagement or wedding plans.

Instead, to cheers and applause, they said they had been married earlier in the evening.

GREENVILLE, S.C. — It may be only months before "Live with Regis and Kathie Lee" becomes merely "Live with Regis."

Kathie Lee Gifford says contract negotiations with producers of the weekday talk show have been going slowly, and that she could leave the show as early as August.

Mrs. Gifford, on a publicity swing to promote a new line of clothing, said she'll stay busy even without the show. She said she is working on a pilot for a situation comedy and, like co-host Regis Philbin, an exercise video. She also wants to write a cookbook and pursue a career on Broadway.

NORTHFIELD, Minn. — The United States and other developed countries must regain their values of community, Nobel Peace Prize laureate Rigoberta Menchu says.

"Students forget they belong to a people and enter the evil of people buying, selling and earning a living. They must return to the first ordinance, which is a community," Menchu said Saturday during a Peace Prize Forum at St. Olaf College.

"Human rights is not a fad; its causes are just and profound," Menchu said in Spanish through an interpreter.

Menchu, 34, has lived in exile from her native Guatemala since 1981. Her late father, Vicente Menchu, had fought the forced movement of Mayan families. She and her family fled to Mexico after her father, mother and brother were killed by Guatemalan security forces.

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — Before he learned to float like a butterfly and sting like a bee, Muhammad Ali ate like a pig, a friend reminisced at a ceremony in his honor.

Ali

"My memory of him is making us sit on the couch so he could raid the refrigerator," said Carol Montgomery, whom Ali used to babysit before he became a heavyweight boxing champion.

She said her parents "would stock the refrigerator just for him and they knew they could stay out as late as they wanted."

Ali returned to his hometown Saturday to mark the 30-year anniversary of his first heavyweight title. Many of his longtime friends, including Montgomery, attended the reception.

Ali defeated Sonny Liston on Feb. 25, 1964, for the first of three heavyweight boxing titles.

TWINS: Thompson, Rogers carry burden for the regional quarterfinals Tuesday at 6 p.m. at Chaparral Center. In beating the Lady Plainsmen in December, Midland's defense held Wells to less than 10 points.

(From 1C)

There are a slew of giants in District 4-5A competition. Midland Lee's Krissy Woodard stands 6-2, Odessa Permian's Angie Braziel is 6-4 and Odessa High has a pair of tall posts, Terri Butler and Donelle Jones, who measure 6-1 and 6-0 respectively. But all of those players were held under their averages when they faced Thompson and Rogers.

"I can't think of a game where an inside player really hurt us," Raughton said.

So how do Thompson and Rogers do it? What's the secret?

"We just work hard on trying to keep the ball out of the post girl's hands," Rogers said.

Thompson added, "We don't go into a game with the attitude of totally stopping them, because if they're good, they're going to get some points. We just want to control them."

To illustrate what Thompson and Rogers have been able to do, "Do Not Enter" signs would have to be posted on both sides of the lane. This is a "Post-Free Zone" would be another good motto for the duo.

But keeping the ball out of their taller opponents hands is just half the job. Rebounding is a huge part of the equation.

"They are a lot more active in the pivot area than other big girls," Raughton said. "They keep moving and working for the loose balls. There has not been a lot of games where we haven't won the battle of the boards."

Tuesday, Rogers and Thompson dominated the boards against El Paso Coronado in Midland's 72-48 win in the Class 5A area contest. Rogers finished with 10 rebounds while Thompson had eight as the Lady Bulldogs outrebounded the Lady T-Birds 40-28.

But with all their energy focused on defense and rebounding, Rogers and Thompson are not huge scoring threats for Midland. That role is reserved for leading scorers Amy Alcala and Julie Chancellor. Thompson and Rogers each average about six points a game.

"If they get the ball inside and they're not open, they're more likely going to flip it back outside to Julie or Amy," Raughton said. "There's no way they're going to be able to turn around and go up with the 6-2 or 6-3 post player in their face."

Thompson added, "Julie and Amy are expected to come out and get their points. We're supposed to come out and control the boards. But it helps when we score, too."

Both seem to be hitting their strides as the playoffs are in full swing. Keeping that intensity up will be a big factor in how far the Lady Bulldogs get in post-season play.

"We just have to keep up what we started," Rogers said. "We've got to continue to rebound well because Coach said that is the way to win playoff games."

Rogers and Thompson will have to keep up that pace Tuesday against Wells and the rest of the Lady Plainsmen for the Lady Bulldogs to advance to the Region I tournament, which is Friday and Saturday at Chaparral Center.

500: Hillin Jr. places 24th after collision

(From 1C)

Marlin's father won a 125-mile qualifier for the Daytona 500 in 1973, and Marlin added: "It took us a long time to get back to Victory Lane."

It was close, competitive racing all day on the 2.5-mile high-banked oval, with lead drafts of up to 10 or 12 cars racing together nearly all the way.

At the end, though, a number of drivers, trying to make it from the last of four caution periods to the end of the race without pitting for fuel, wound up falling off the pace or running out of gas.

That included Mark Martin and Lake Speed, who were in the lead draft with 10 laps remaining.

Marlin said he wasn't sure he could hold off Irvan at the end.

"Well, we did a little weaving up the backstretch," he said. "If Mark had stayed behind him and given him a little help, they might pass me, but he had no help to get by."

Terry Labonte finished third, followed by Jeff Gordon, Morgan Shepherd and Greg Sacks.

Marlin, driving the Morgan-McClure Chevrolet Lumina that Irvan drove until buying out his contract in the middle of the 1993 season, turned the tables on Irvan, who beat the Tennessee driver out for the 1991 Daytona 500 victory.

Irvan, who led seven times for 84 laps, was leading as late as the start of lap 180, but suddenly got loose and slipped all the way back to seventh before moving back into contention.

He drove his Ford all the way back to second on lap 197 only to see Marlin cross the finish line 0.23-seconds — about one car-length — ahead.

"We got loose when I was in front of the pack and nearly wrecked," Irvan said "I about spun, but I worked my way back to second. I just didn't have enough for Sterling."

Marlin averaged 156.931 mph as he won $253,575.

There were only four caution flags for a total of 22 laps, but two of the yellows were caused by scary, multi-car crashes.

A collision involving Kyle Petty and Chuck Bown near the back of the field ignited an 11-car collision on lap 62. Petty and Bown got together coming off turn four and, before it was over, the cars of Rusty Wallace, Harry Gant, John Andretti, Hut Stricklin, Robert Pressley, Jeff Burton and Bobby Hillin Jr. were involved.

There were no injuries, but Wallace, Andretti and Pressley were knocked out of the race, while Stricklin, Petty and Gant came back after extensive repairs.

Hillin ended with a nice race despite the collision. He started 33rd and finished 24th, only two laps down from the winner.

Another big crash came on lap 90 when it appeared that Gordon bumped the rear of Todd Bodine's car and sent the youngster careening into the wall near the end of the back straightaway. Jimmy Spencer, Michael Waltrip, Brett Bodine and Ted Musgrave all crashed together while trying to avoid Todd Bodine's car as it slid backwards through the third turn. Only Waltrip was able to continue, but again the driver's escaped injury. This time, Todd Bodine, Spencer and Musgrave were done for the day.

The final 54 laps were run under the green flag.

There were 33 lead changes among 14 drivers in the exciting race.

The teams, officials and a crowd estimated at close to 150,000 paid tribute before the race to Neil Bonnett and Rodney Orr, killed in crashes during practice for this race, and Davey Allison and Alan Kulwicki, who died last year in aviation accidents, with a moment of silence.

The crews also lined up along the outside of pit road and paid silent tribute to their fallen friends as the 42-car field drove the opening pace lap.

NOW YOU MAY PAY BY CHECK

A New Feature For Your Convenience

Now, when responding to a Voice Introductions personal ad you may choose to pay for your calling by check rather than calling our regular 900 number. Here is why paying by check might be right for you.

- If you have a rotary telephone you may purchase calling time by check, then use any touch-tone phone to call our system. You could call from a pay phone, your office or a friend's house to use the time you purchased.
- If you have blocked 900 calling on your phone, you may now pay by check and still maintain your 900 block.
- If you share your phone with another person, paying by check can help you maintain your privacy.
- When you pay by check you'll know ahead of time how much you are spending and can budget your purchases as you like.

When you make a check purchase you'll get the information you need to respond to ads by using a special toll-free number. The time you purchase will be available to you the following business day, because we will take your check over the phone. Calling packages of 10 or 20 minutes are available at $1.99 per minute. Just call our office at 1-800-882-1981 ext. 326 to find out more. Please have your check book handy when you call.

Distributorships Now Available

PART-TIME INCOME OPPORTUNITY
The Midland Reporter-Telegram has early morning routes which need to be filled with dependable individuals with reliable transportation. Often asked questions:

➥ Is it worthwhile for adults also?
YES! 95% of our Distributors ARE adults! Morning Routes are attractive for:
★ ADULTS who have fulltime jobs, yet want to supplement their income with a steady part-time job!
★ MOTHERS who can't justify a small job AND daycare, because as a Distributor, you don not need daycare!
★ COLLEGE STUDENTS needing a part-time job which will work with classes!
★ SENIOR CITIZENS wanting regular exercise, added retirement income, or just want to work with people, neighbors, and friends!

➥ How much money can I make as a Distributor?
Depending on the size of the route(s), from $350 to $800 monthly, in some cases...even more!

➥ OK...but how long does it take?
The actual delivery takes 1-2 hours Monday-Saturday, and 2-3 hours on Sunday, depending on the size of the route(s). Also some time is needed each month to collect from subscribers. Many Distributors choose to handle some of this by putting envelopes in the subscribers' papers and having payments mailed to them. Some collecting in person will be necessary though, particularly on some routes more than others.

➥ When do the papers have to be delivered by?
Papers must be on the yards by 6 am Monday-Friday, and 7 am on weekend mornings.

➥ Do I ever get a day off?
The job requires a 7-day a week commitment. However, most Distributors do take days off by finding a friend, family member, or another Distributor to substitute for them!

➥ What else?
An initial $100 refundable deposit is required.
