America's Parade of PRESIDENTS

A collector's item - a review of our country's presidents which will be an invaluable aid to both teachers and students and all enthusiasts of American history!

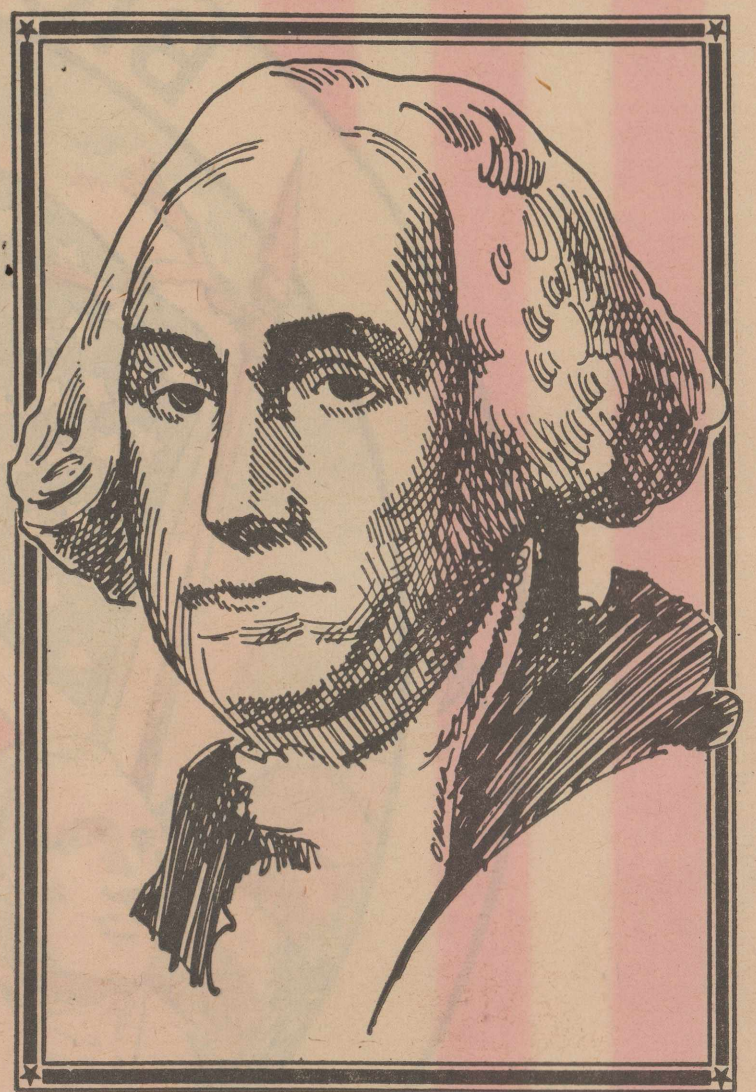

The Presidents were assigned by an impartial drawing and are not necessarily the choice of the assigned sponsor.

"to be self-evident, that all men are created equal.
that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable Rights. that among these are Life, Liberty and the pursuit of Happiness"

On July 4th 1776, at Independence Hall, Philadelphia. American freedom was born, with the adoption of the Declaration of Independence. For John Hancock, president of the Congress, and the 55 other patriotic men who signed this document, this act represented their affirmation of belief and an expression of great courage. In signing, they truly pledged "their lives, their fortunes, and their sacred honor." Take pride in your American upbringing as you celebrate the American Revolution bicentennial. Show your colors and salute America for the principles of freedom and democracy upon which the nation was founded. Since the day our forefathers proclaimed the concept of liberty and independence for all the people, we have worked at preserving the spirit of '76! It has not always been easy to uphold these principles, but even through difficult times and danger, freedom has been cherished.

George Washington

Served 1789-1797, Fed.

Our first president, George Washington, was born Feb. 22, 1732 on Pope's Creek, Va. Co. He studied mathematics & surveying and contracted smallpax while in the West Indies which left him deeply scarred.

He became a Lt.-Col. in 1753, was an aide to Braddock and helped take Fort DeQuesne from the French.

Married to widow Martha Dandridge Curtis in 1759, he farmed quietly at Mount Vernon until 1775 when he was made commander-in-chief by the Continental Congress.

A resourceful leader and a stern disciplinarian, Washington was largely responsible in the success of the War for Indetendence. He favored a federal unanimously elected president and was elected April 30, 1789.

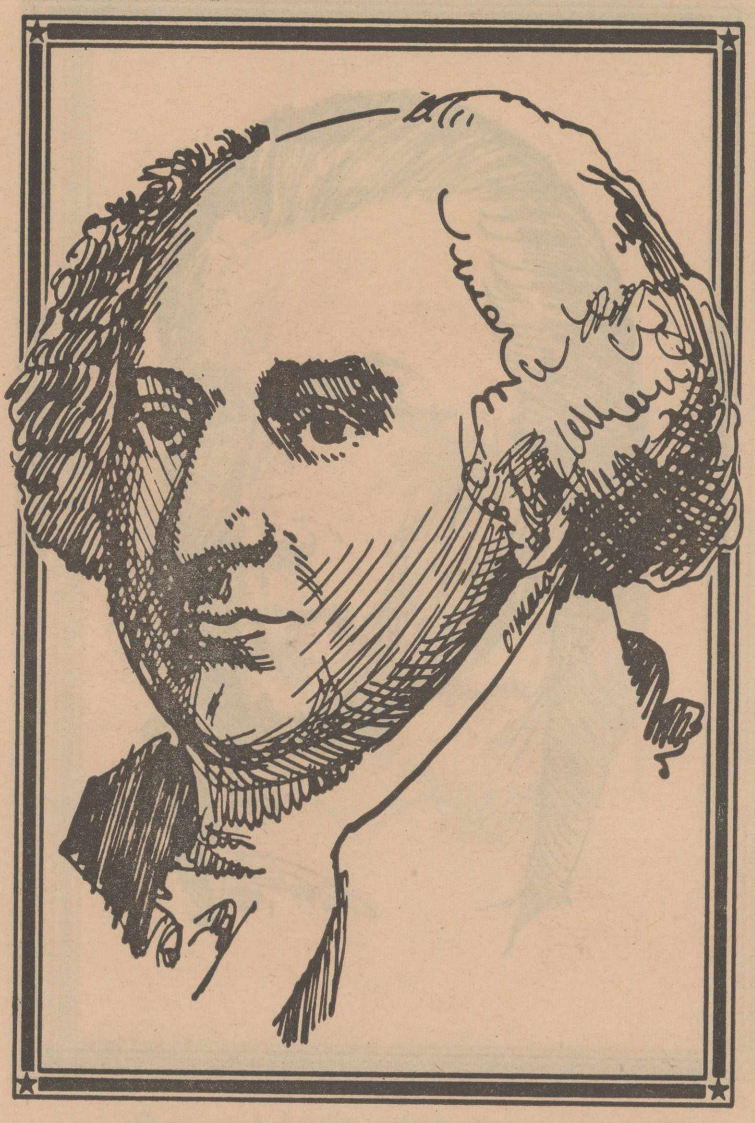

He served 2 terms, refused a third and retired to Mount Vernon where he died December 14, 1799 at the age of 67.

Abraham Lincoln

Served 1861-1865, Rep.

Abraham Lincoln, our 16th president, was born Feb. 12, 1809 in Hardin Country, Ky. After moving to Illinois, Lincoln split fence rails in 1830. Self-educated, he served 4 terms in the Illinois General Assembly beginning 1834. He was in the Black Hawk War as an enlistee, and later he ran a store, surveyed land and became postmaster in 1833-36.

In 1837 Lincoln was admitted to the Bar, began practice on the 8th Judicial Circuit, was a presidential elector, and in 1847 was elected to Congress.

Since Lincoln opposed the Kansas-Nebraska Act and extension of slavery, he was defeated for the Senate by Dem. Stephen A. Douglas, who had sponsored them (which led to the hotly debated issues between Lincoln and Douglas in 1858.)

Lincoln was nominated for president May 18, 1860 and received the majority electoral votes. South Carolina seceded from the union December 20, 1860 followed by 10 more southern states.

He was inaugurated Mar. 4, 1861 and Fort Sumter was fired on April 12-14. On September 22, 1862, Lincoln announced the freedom of slaves as of January 1, 1863, date of the Emancipation Proclamation.

He was re-elected in 1864. Lee officially surrendered the Confederacy April 9, 1865 and Lincoln was assassinated April 14, 1864. He was survived by his wife Mary Todd whom he married November 4, 1842 and four sons.

Andrew Johnson

Served 1865-1869, Dem.

Born in Raleigh, North Carolina, Dec. 29, 1808, Andrew Johnson was apprenticed to a tailor at age 10. He ran away at age 16, and became an alderman, mayor, state representative, senator, member of Congress, governor of Tenn. and U.S. Senator in 1857. Although he opposed Lincoln, he was appointed military governor of occupied Tenn. and in 1864 was nominated as vice president with Lincoln in order to win Democratic support.

He succeeded Lincoln as 17th president April 15, 1865. He proclaimed amnesty to all Confederates except certain leaders if they abolished slavery and ratified the 13th Amendment.

When Johnson removed Edwin Stanton as Secretary of War without notifyig the Senate, he was impeached for repudiating the Tenure of Office Act.

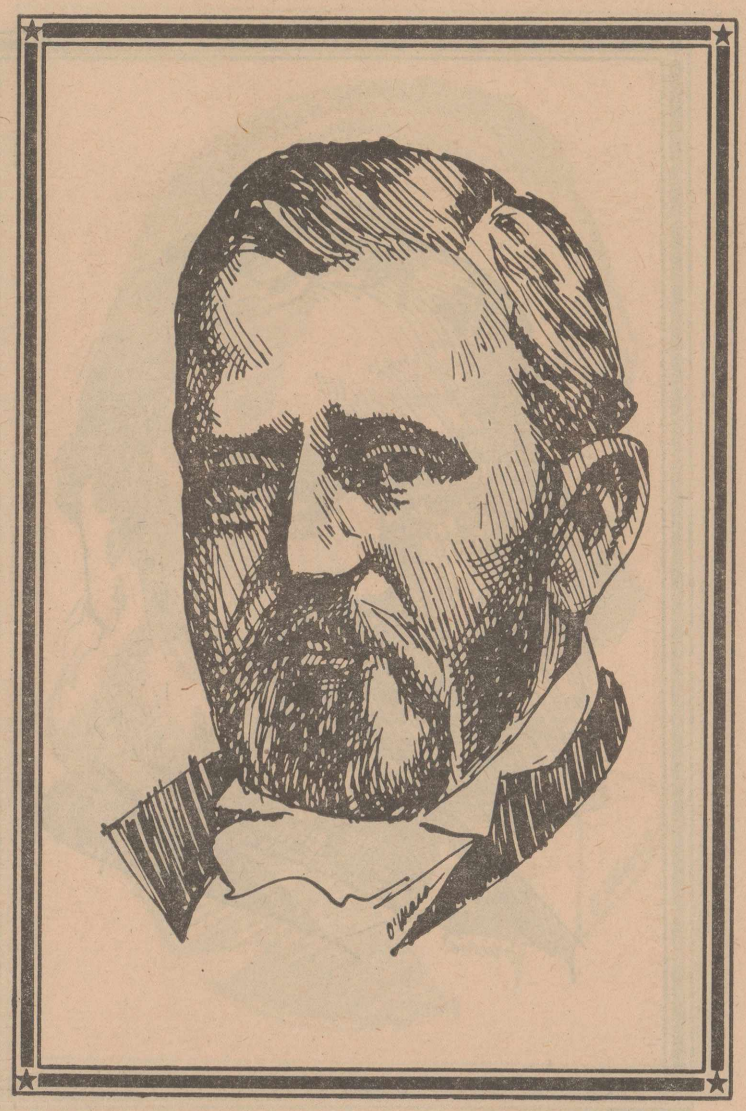

Lacking the 2/3's Senate majority necessary for conviction, he was acquitted, but was not renominated for president. He returned to the Senate in 1875, where he fought for Lincoln's policies until his death July 31, 1875.

Bunting, Bells

'Break out the flags, strike up the band, light up the sky....for 200 years we have tried .... to make the lives of individual men and women in this country better and more free.'

By The AP

Bands, bunting and bells heralded the nation's 200th Fourth of July weekend with Americans in Middlesex, village and farm bent on making it the grandest birthday yet.

"Break out the flags, strike up the band, light up the sky," said President Ford, and Americans were quick to accept the invitation. The United States is observing, he said, "the greatest Fourth of July any of us will ever see."

IN NEW YORK, the tall ships of another era arrived in the harbor for one of the most flamboyant displays of sail since British square-riggers landed troops there in 1776.

Across the land, parades, picnics and street dances celebrated two centuries of independence in a tidal wave of unabashed patriotism.

Ironically, one of the first Independence Day celebrations was in Peking, where July 4 arrived a day early. The American envoy, Thomas S. Gates, was host for a reception at the U.S. liaison office.

At Valley Forge, Pa., 200 wagons from five separate wagon trains completed 17,000 miles of cross-country travel and made camp. President Ford is scheduled to arrive there today for ceremonies declaring Valley Forge a national park.

The President then will go to Independence Hall in Philadelphia for 2 p.m. ceremonies during which the bell in the tower of Independence Hall will be rung.

ON THAT SIGNAL, bells throughout the country will peal, saluting the moment the Declaration was signed "proclaiming liberty throughout the land."

Ford is then to fly by helicopter to the deck of the USS Forrestal in New York Harbor to watch Operation Sail, the parade of square-riggers up the Hudson River.

Apparently warned off by threats of crushing crowds, New Yorkers and New Jerseyites showed up Saturday in far fewer numbers than expected to watch from shoreside vantage points as the armada assembled. Similar light turnouts were reported in Philadelphia.

A Bronx poster vendor, Richard Duggan, who had spent almost $2,000 to buy posters of the tall ships, had sold only four posters, $8 worth, as of noon Saturday.

The water off both state's coasts, however, was crowded with a flotilla of vessels small and large under a cobalt-blue sky in blazing July sunshine.

In Boston Harbor, the most revered square-rigger of them all, the USS Constitution — Old Ironsides — was preparing to test its ancient rigging and rails with a 21-gun salute today at noon, the first such salute firing of its guns in 95 years.

AT A MIDWEEK practice firing, the ship's captain, Cmdr. Tyrone Martin, reported "a very satisfying crack."

The weekend holds meaning beyond nostalgia for at least 10,000 persons who will become American citizens in naturalization ceremonies around the country.

Amid the floats and the flags and the frivolity there were also discordant notes.

An explosion that authorities said was touched off by a bomb damaged a post office in Seabrook, N.H., less than 24 hours after three other bombings in the Boston area. Anonymous phone callers to news organizations, saying they represented an antibusing group, claimed responsibility for the bombings.

In Louisville, Ky., a threatened confrontation between police and white supremacists did not materialize Saturday when rain washed out a "Bicentennial march" for which no parade permit had been issued.

In a less menacing form of protest, 300 American Indians encamped with tepees and tents on a college athletic field in

WE CELEBRATE TODAY the 200th anniversary of a nation born out of a passion for freedom that had burned in the heart of man since time began.

It is a nation that has endured and prospered because each succeeding generation has remained faithful to the high ideals so eloquently expressed in the Declaration of Independence.

It will survive only so long as we are willing to fight for it, to die for it, to revere it and to actively point its domestic affairs in the right direction.

THAT AUDACIOUS collection of men in Philadelphia on July 4, 1776, was neither the first to rebel against tyranny nor the last to feel its boot against their necks.

From time immemorial, man had alternately won his freedom as he gathered the courage and the will to do so — and lost it again as he became to complacent, too trusting or too selfishly immoral to preserve it.

But the signers of the United States Declaration of Independence put their case into a language that would inspire men everywhere with the rightness of their action.

And they left it as a record so that we who came after might recognize the inevitable recurrence of dangers to our freedom — and right our course before it became too late.

THEY PUT EVERYTHING into proper perspective:

God came first. He created all men equal. He endowed them with "certain unalienable rights," among which are Life, Liberty and the Pursuit of Happiness.

But man can not take these rights for granted, the Signers emphasized. It is man's responsibility to secure and protect them.

Governments are instituted among men to secure those rights. That is the only reason for government, which derives its just powers from the people.

Always, it is the people who count.

PRUDENT PEOPLE will not change a government for light and transient causes, the Founders said.

Inevitably, however, government will trend toward a "long train of abuses and usurpations" leading to "an absolute tyranny" — unless the people are on guard.

Too much power in the hands of government.

Its neglect of pressing public matters.

Its refusal to assent to local laws.

Its deafness "to the voice of justice."

IN ESSENCE, THEN, the Declaration of Independence laid out a blueprint by which men can live and work in freedom so long as they limit their government to protecting their personal and collective rights.

Nowhere in it does the Declaration of Independence look to government as the provider of anything except protection from enemies without and justice for all within.

It laid the framework for a system that has created the most good for the most people of any system ever devised by man.

And because that framework has been protected and respected for 200 years, we can rejoice today in saying "Happy Birthday, America, may you live forever!"

Survival: 2000 A.D.

'But the year 2000 is not an end; it is not a place where history will stabilize itself into a permanent pattern. People in 2000 will look forward and there is a good possibility that the future will then show signs of brightness....'

(EDITOR'S NOTE: What lies ahead? Author-scientist Isaac Asimov of The Philadelphia Bulletin predicts what the world will be like in 2000 — politically, economically and technologically. Can there be "world powers" in 2000? What about the food shortage? The population crisis? An unusual, probing report by one of America's best-known science fiction writers offers us a look into the future.)

By ISAAC ASIMOV

IN TWO DOZEN years, the year 2000 will mark the end of the 20th Century, the last year of the century that began with 1901, when the United States, having defeated Spain in two naval battles and one land assault, had stormed the international stage as a world power.

Can there be "world powers" in 2000? Human civilization will be fighting grimly for survival then, and there will be few leaders who can possibly fail to understand that upon cooperation among the nations will rest the only hope for escaping total collapse. There will be only one world power — the global community.

This is not to say that the concept of the nation will not still have a powerful effect on its citizens. Barring catastrophe, there will be a United States in 2000, and we will be Americans and will vote for President and for all other officials in the usual way — but no one will be able to pretend for a moment that the United States (or any other nation) can be its own master and will not be thoroughly dependent on the rest of the world.

IN THE COURSE of the next two dozen years — always assuming no overriding breakdown of world society — more and more of the economy of the globe will come under the control and purview of multinational organizations; more and more of the problems of the world will be overseen, evaluated, and, as far as possible, controlled by international bodies.

We will be living in a global economy; we will be trying to solve global problems by finding global solutions; and behind all the surface blather that will continue the pretense of life in a 20th Century congeries of nations, we will be approaching a 21st Century Global Government. When we will actually cross the line of realization of this fact, and just what form the Global Government will take is hard to predict, but in 2000 the answers to both will still lie in the future.

In fact, the Global Government might not come at all, if the nations, collectively, are willing to settle for mutual suicide instead.

IN 2000, THE population of the United States is likely to be 265,000,000. This is less than would have been predicted a couple of decades ago, and the shortfall is due to the lowered birthrate (thanks to the Pill and consequent alteration in sexual mores).

Increasing American understanding of the dangers of population growth will bring about a defininte government policy by the year 2000 of maintaining any further population rise to a minimum. There will be an increasing number of voices raised which will insist that an actual population drop is required. I suspect that the figure of 150,000,000 will be most often suggested as the ideal population for the United States of the future.

If the United States needs any persuasion as to the value of adopting a low-birthrate-and-declining-population policy, it will be the rest of the world that will supply it by having set us the salutary example of a worse alternative.

THE WORLD population in the year 2000 is likely to be 6,000,000,000, fifty per cent higher than it is in 1976. This will be a billion lower than it might easily have been. What will have caused the shortfall would be, in part, the increasingly desperate attempt by various governments to bring abouat a drop in birthrate, and, in part, by the steady rise in deathrate (especially among the aged and among infants through disease and famine.)

The United States cannot be an indifferent observer of such famines. For one thing, it will possess the major portion of the uncommitted food supply in the world. That supply will not be enough to feed the world, but it can have an ameliorative effect, and it will be a tool that might be used wisely. In 2000, one of the overriding preoccupations of American leaders will be the desperate search for ways of using the food supply to encour-

Park Dedication Starts Celebration In Snyder

By GERRY BURTON
Staff Writer

SNYDER — The "people who bet their lives on those little ships to come to America in the first place" and those braving the wild West Texas frontier got equal honors Saturday in Snyder.

Dedication of a bicentennial park, honoring the original 13 colonies and each state as it added its star to Old Glory, kicked off three days of centennial, bicentennial and traditional July 4th activities in Snyder.

Today will be highlighted, from 1-8 p.m., by a passenger train shuttling between Snyder and Hermleigh while Monday will be devoted to Snyder's regular Fourth festivities in Towle Memorial Park.

"There is no better way God could bless this day than with rain," general bicentennial chairman Delbert Downing said as heavy clouds sprinkled light drizzle on the new park by the Scurry County Coliseum.

In multiple flag raising ceremonies, a Betsy Ross went aloft for the original states near the park entrance, the Lone Star rose for the state, a white buffalo flag climbed for Scurry County and the Star Spangled Banner fluttered upward with the American Bicentennial flag on twin poles near the end of the park path.

Scurry residents in costumes of various eras of history led the first pilgrimage along a rustic landscaped trail from a circular area bounded by 13 huge boulders for the original states through parkways dotted with boulders for states as they entered the union.

Following the tribute to Hawaii, a half-dugout introduces Scurry County and the hide wagons, chuck wagons and farm gear.

Climaxing the trail through the states is a pioneer chapel where the visitor may sit a moment on rough plank benches facing a pulpit made of a cottonwood log.

Historical booths, highlighting activities and crafts as well as foods of pioneer life.

Visitors purchased replicas of the past with donations to organizations while receiving the merchandise in return.

In the Veterans of Foreign Wars booth, members were working behind signs reading "wear a forget-me-not and remember." Next door in the American Legion stall, Scurry County's oldest veteran was telling visitors, "I still don't know how we got out of the Arragon Forest, we had hell there."

Past crafts and activities booths, the Joe Yorks sat among their pioneer mementoes in a booth honoring them for their contrigution to the area development.

Park dedication crowds were sparse, but by late morning comfortably-crowded celebrators milled among booths, clapping to the rollicking folk and camp meeting style hymns as rendered by the R.S.V.P. Kitchen Band composed of Scurry oldtimers, led by a ladle-wielding choir person and accompanied by a saucy French harp and sundry kitchen utensils.

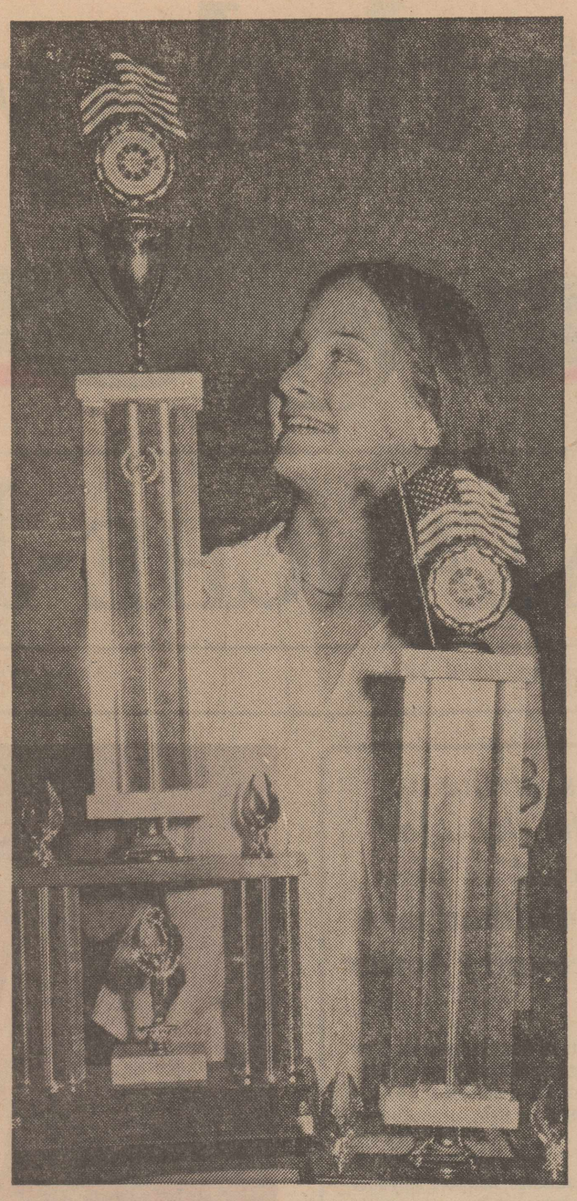

All the things pioneers had to know how to do—from milking a cow and shoeing a horse to making a fancy hat for Sunday meeting kept the crowd entertained.

Singing in a brush arbor blended with the sound of a hammer on metal as the Kitchen Band rested up now and then.

By night, most of Scurry County was milling in the coliseum, learning about history at all levels.

"WE HAD HELL" — Three wars after Roy Hendrinks of Snyder fought three major engagements of the war to end all wars he sat in a rocker in the American Legion booth at Snyder's bicentennial celebration Saturday and told how it was in WWI. (Staff Photo)

Officers Nab Escapee

AMARILLO, Tex. (AP) — One of two trusties who escaped from Oklahoma's Granite Reformatory Saturday morning was captured here a few hours later.

The trusties fled the reformatory at 5:10 a.m. after locking the reformatory's dairy supervisor in a refrigerated vault, prison authorities said.

Police in Amarillo said one of the escapees, Michael Lee McCown, 47, was captured after an officer recognized the stolen 1969 car he was driving as it stopped at a stop light.

Police said McCown abandoned the car and fled on foot but officers caught up with him.

The car had been stolen earlier Saturday about seven miles west of Sayre, Okla., police said.

Meanwhile, a search was continuing for the second escapee, Paul Martinez, 23, who reportedly has relatives in Amarillo.

Western Europe Wilting In Overcooked Weather

By UPI

A two-week heat wave is cracking stiff spper lips all over Europe. For the first time in 137 years, men at the posh Henley rowing regatta in England 5were allowed to remove their jackets.

"Due to exceptional weather conditions," an official regatta statement read, "gentlemen may remove their jackets in the Stewards' enclosure. Ties and shirts must, however, be worn."

Belgium's parliament sat in tieless shirt sleeves for the first time in 140 years.

A United Press International survey Saturday showed an unbroken heat wave in its 14th day in virtually every western Europe city. It was 90 degrees in London and Vienna and 89 in Athens.

Near Ales, in southern France, two construction workers were attacked and injured by heat-crazed swallows.

The UPI survey showed drought conditions of the most severe kind virtually everywhere in Western Europe. The lack of rain, said a West German official, threatens "catastrophic effects."

Country after country was considering rationing water, and some areas already are doing so.

In the Portuguese city of Evora, the 50,000 inhabitants already get water only three days a week for three hours at a time.

The British government drafted a water rationing bill it intended to rush through parliament on a stand-by basis.

Hydroelectric power in Portugal dried up so much the government was imposing power cuts nationwide beginning Monday.

France, drier than any year since 1725, predicted its farm produce exports would fall by up to 30 per cent—about $400 million—du to the lack of rain.

German farmers already have lost up to 80 per cent of their soybean crop, as much as 40 per cent of small grains and nearly half the normal hay yield. In Bavaria, in southern Germany a conference of evangelical priests scheduled a service to pray for "beneficial storms."

Belgium's crops of sugar beete, potatoes, cereals and tobacco were hard hit. Northern Italy feared for its rice and corn. Italian officials said 1 million head of livestock were threatened because of fodder crop shortages.

Forest and brush fires raged in country aftr country.

One, on open moorland in England's north Yorkshire, has been burning for a week. On the Italian Riviera, a blaze swept through olive groves and vineyards on a six-mile front, and was still burning Saturday.

ORANGE JUICE

Americans consumed a whopping 137.5 million gallons of frozen concentrated orange juice in 1974-75. Frozen orange juice concentrate, not oranges, remains the most important segment of the U.S. citrus industry, with some 42 million cases sold annually.

Military Rebellion Crushed In Sudan

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — President Jaafar el-Numairi of Sudan declared Saturday he had crushed a rebellion against his pro-Western regime that claimed at least 100 lives.

It was the third unsuccesful coup in five years against the moderate Arab leader's rule.

A witness reported at least 100 bodies were taken to a Khartoum hospital. Numairi ordered a dusk-to-dawn curfew in Khartoum and Omdurman, set up road blocks and ordered troops to shoot curfew breakers on sight.

Diplomatic sources said army units staged the attempted coup, and an announcement by the Defense Ministry called on citizens to help capture "the soldier Mohammed Nour."

Numairi said in a radio speech to the nation he had "all the information about the rebels but the time to divulge it is not now."

Congratulations

Author-Scientist Predicts Changes For Americans

One thing the United States cannot and will not do is to hoard the food for its own use, or for sale at maximum profit. The American standard of living depends, in large part, on our use of a sizable portion of the total resources of the world. To maintain a reasonable approach to that standard of living the future, the United States must see to it that there is as strong a world economy, as flourishing a world trade, as non-desperate a world-population as possible.

NOT THAT OUR wealth can be maintained untouched by what will be going on in the world. The Unitdgstates cannot expect for very long to maintain a standard of living much higher than that of the rest of the world.

In the kind of sane global economy that we must nurture if civilization is to survive, great disparities in prosperity will be difficult to maintain.

We have seen examples of this in the internal economies of most of the developed nations of the world. Progressive income taxes, social security, unemployment compensation, and a variety of other measures have slowly come into being in the 20th Century, and these all serve to distribute prosperity among the population in a more even-handed manner than would be possible in the absence of such government-enforced devices. It may seem (to some) that the welfare state rewards the improvident at the expense of the productive, but, in theory, what the wealthy get is a somewhat more satisfied population in a somewhat stabler society, where they may enjoy what remains of their wealth in greater security.

IN THE YEAR 2000, this same policy will be coming into being on a global scale. Efforts will be made to keep the poorer nations from destruction at the expense, very largely, of the wealthier nations, for the benefit, in the long run, of the wealthy as well as the poor.

As one concrete example, the United States in 2000 will be far more nearly a vegetarian nation than it is now, in part because the necessityof feeding the world will make it necesary for us to put as much of our arable acreage as possible into the production of grain and other plant food that supplies more protein and calories per acre by far than grazing animals do.

(For that matter, the food-at-any-price pinch is going to force reductions in the use of tobacco, coffee, tea, and even alcoholic beverages. Very little of the wilderness will be left and much of the big game of the world will depend for continued existence on the good auspices of zoos and of shrinking wild-life reserves.)

America's changing food habits will also arise out of fear of the adverse effect on world opinion if Americans continue to eat wastefully while so many starve. One of the characteristics of the year 2000 is that world opinion will have great power to affect our actions. Even in the 1960s, world opinion had already grown strong enough to force the niclear powers into a ban on atmospheric test, much against their own will. In the year 2000, no portion of the world will long be able to withstand adverse world opinion.

BUT THE YEAR 2000 is not an end; it is not a place where history will stabilize itself into a permanent pattern. People in 2000 will look forward and there is a good possibility that the future will then show signs of brightness, as now it looks dark.

If the world is to survive as a functioning global society, and not fall apart into primitive tribal remnants, it will have to have taken to heart the lesson of the 20th Century, and will know that never again can population be allowed to outrace its support. The whole world, as well as the United States, will look forward to a population peak and then the beginning of a slow downward slide. (I suspect that there will be a move on the part of some people to have the day declared a world holiday when it arrives — and if it can be reasonably pinpointed.)

And yet the solution of the population problem, even if humanity can already be looking forward with certainty to its coming by 2000, does not represent an immediate entry into paradise. There are other problems, that cannot be solved at all if the population problem isn't — but are solved automatically if the population problem is.

FOR INSTANCE, by 2000 the oil supply of the world will have sunk to a low and steadily diminishing level, and will no longer be sufficient to serve as the major energy source it is today. The world (and the United States in particular, for it is the largest energy-consumer, both in total, and on a per-capita basis) will be looking, more or less desperately, for alternate sources.

Coal-mining will increase steadily in the United States and an increasing percentage of the mined coal will be hydrogenated on the spot and will be transported as liquid fuel.

In addition, subsidiary sources of energy, long-neglected, will have come into their own. The countryside ll be increasingly dotted with windvanes for instance. More and more houses will be modified to allow solar hearing. Increasing areas of the southwest will be carpeted by solar cells that will turn sunlight into electricity. Geothermal energy will offer an increasing contribution.

The chief energy source of the future may, however, be nuclear fusion. By 2000 it is quite likely that controlled fusion will be a workable affair and the United States can begin to look forward to phasing out the nuclear fission stations that offer less energy with far greater risks than fusion would.

TO BE SURE, the mere demonstration of controlled fusion on a small scale in the laboratory does not necessarily mean its very rapid escalation to the scale of a major power source. There will undoubtedly be many stubborn engineering problems to overcome and the year 2000 is not likely to see fusion stations already in operation. They will be on the horizon, however, and it will be easier to hold out when relief is in sight.

Naturally, even full and unlimited use of nuclear fusion will not make possible a return to wild population overgrowth. Population can outstrip anything, even the energy supply of fusion, and if energy use from fusion reaches a sufficiently high level, the planet itself will be heated slightly — enough to trigger the melting of the icecaps and the drowning of all the coastal plains. This will also be among the great lessons of the 20th Century: that any new technological advance, however beneficial it may seem on the surface, must be implemented with caution and foresight.

Yet even before nuclear fusion power stations are built, there will be benefits. The spinoff of the "plasma torch" will be there. Controlled fusion on a small scale can produce a jet of gas of such high temperature that any substance can be reduced to its indestructible separate atoms. These can then be separated out alone, or in simple combinations.

Not only is this an anti-pollution device — no pollutant can withstand the plasma torch — but it would be the tool that would create a new universal and endless mine for mankind. The junkheaps of Earth, now threatening to drown us all, would be the source of the metals, gases, compounds that would be the raw materials of our various industries.

TECHNOLOGICAL advance need not be at the cost of ever-increasing energy use. Increasing miniaturization, efficiency and conservation could by 2000 produce a world far more electronified than it is now at a disproportionately small increase in energy.

Communications satellites in the sky, far more efficient and versatile by then, together with the use of modulated laser beams in the place of microwaves, will have made available an unlimited number of voice and picture channels on Earth.

All information can then be transfered efficiently and in quantity so that the printed word, reappearing at any distance on a screen or as a printed facsimile, can be available to all for more readily than is possible now — and, increasingly, on private wavelengths.

Conferences can be held at any distance by way of holographic televised images, indistinguishable from actual presence, as far as sight and hearing are concerned. People will look forward to a near future in which no one need be and television-monitoring, each year would see an increasing precentage of work done from some home-associated center.

THIS WILL MEAN the end of commuting and a growing decentralization of the world, particularly once the population finally begins its decline.

The improved electronic communication will also bring all people closer together and make human beings that much more effectively part of a single community. This will make Global Government much more practical (as the railroad and telegraph once made a transcontinental American government much more practical.)

The new communication pattern will offer something else as well.

In a low-birthrate world, the age pattern of humanity will necessarily change. There will be fewer young people, greater numbers of mature and elderly people (especially as continuing medical advances further extend, at least potentially, the life-span).

This will not yet pose a major problem in 2000 but the future will, in the respect, seem grave. Many will feel that the increasing hordes of non-productive old would eventually overweigh and crush the decreasing supply of productive young.

The answer, it may be decided, will be to keep the older generation productive by encouraging continuing education, by permitting changes in career in middle life, by doing everything to encourage mental stimulation in those past the flush of youth.

FINALLY, THERE will be a new world growing in the sky of 2000 — a small world, a space colony, that will hold no solution for the Earth's population problem, for it will only hold 10,000 people. As time goes on, however more and more colonies will be built in space more and more human beings will live in space, and the years may come when Earth itself will house only a minority of the men and women who will be alive.

In fact, population expansion, at a measured rate, will become possible again as the space colonies increase in number. But in the year 2000 that will still be but a distant dream.

In another respect, though, the space colony will offer something at once. In conjunction with the colony as a human habitat, a solar power station will be built, one that can absorb sunlight under conditions of greater efficiency that is possible on the surface of the Earth. That power can be beamed down to Earth as tightly-directed microwave radiation.

In the year 2000, such mocrowave beams may already have been received. They will not be enough to make much of a difference to an energy-hungry world just yet, but there will be bright hope for the future.

In fact, that is the key to what the year 2000 will be. It will be a dark time, but there will be enough of promise on the horizon to offer all alive in that year bright hope for the future; if not in their time, then in that of their children.

We have but to choose now for survival through population control and global cooperation, or for destruction through short-sighted policies of waste and hatred. Destruction is the easier path to take — but survival is the better one.

'Melting Pot' Of Activity Bubbling In Plains Region

By PAT REMICK
Staff Writer

In keeping with America's 200 years of tradition, there's a veritable "melting pot" of activities bubbling around the South Plains area today.

The biggest birthday ever will be celebrated in different ways in each community, but nearly all will join in the bell ringing for freedom this afternoon across the nation. And, as a perfect topping for the cake, plenty of fireworks will light up the West Texas and Eastern New Mexico skies tonight.

The celebration begins in Abernathy at 1 p.m. with a rocking chair contest that will last a full 24 hours. At 8 p.m., a musical entitled "I Love America" begins in the school auditorium.

"A Circle of Brotherhood" forms at the lake in Andrews at 1 p.m. as part of the national bell ringing day. Barbecue and dedication of the new Chamber of Commerce will follow.

Commanche Trail Park is to be the site of gospel singing and church services today in Big Spring. At 7:30 p.m., the community birthday cake will be cut at the park amphitheather, followed by a 8:30 p.m. "Let Freedom Ring" pageant at the park. The fireworks will shoot over Scenic Mountain 30 minutes later.

A "Salute to the States" by the local ROTC group and a waterskiing exhibition on the lake in Carlsbad, N.M., begin the day's festivities there. The new bandshell at Carlsbad Municipal Beach Park will be dedicated tonight, followed by a 8:30 p.m. fireworks display.

A 12:30 p.m. park dedication is scheduled to day in Clovis, N.M., followed by a 1 p.m. parade. Then, the community will climb greased poles and chase greased pigs as part of the day's activities. There'll be golf and softball tournaments and a bicycle race.

Breakfast is free in Colorado City today to persons flying in to the Colorado City Airport between 7 a.m. and 10 a.m. Airplane acrobatics and stunts will entertain the breakfasters.

Crosbyton will be the site of a Married Couples golf tournament at the Silver Falls Golf Course, with tee time set for 1:30 p.m. The community will tell "America Your Birthday Has Arrived" at 8 p.m. at the stadium with a 9 p.m. fireworks display empasizing the message.

Dimmitt holds a 5 p.m. community supper today, followed by a religious service at the exposition building.

Big things are doing at the Hobbs airport beginning at 10 a.m. There'll be an unveiling of a permanent memorial, barbecue, an antique car show, skydiving exhibition, acrobatic sailplane demonstrations and rides, square dancing and for those who last through the day — a fireworks display.

The parade begins at 10 a.m. in downtown Idalou, followed by a barbecue lunch. At 7:30 p.m., there's a community devotional at the football field. Main Street becomes the dance hall between 9 p.m. and midnight for a street dance.

Lockney has scheduled 2 p.m. until 5 p.m. for home shows at the residence of Van Bradley, Dimple McGavock, Carl Adams and Josie Taylor. A family picnic begins at 4 p.m. on the Baker lot, with worship services scheduled for 7:30 p.m.

Lorenzo's parade begins at 10 a.m. and ends with groundbreaking for the park. "Dinner on the grounds" is set for 12:30 p.m. around the community center with judging of baked goods, canned goods and pickled goods starting at 1 p.m. The fiddlers compete at 2 p.m. and bike races, a greased pig chase and other games are set for 3:30 p.m.

Lovington, N.M., has a barbecue and fireworks scheduled to celebrate the Bicentennial year.

U.S. Congressman George Mahon goes to Midland today, where he'll speak at Wadley-Barron Park at 4 p.m.

Worshippers will get up early in Odessa for a sunrise service and reenactment. Freedom Park will be dedicated at 2 p.m. and there's a colonial type worship service scheduled for 7 p.m. at Parker Heights Christian Church. The fireworks go off at 10 p.m. on the colliseum grounds.

"Almost Anything Goes" at the Paducah football field starting at 6:30 p.m. today. There's a 2 p.m. bridge tournament set at the community center and for non-card players — there'll be saddle events at the rodeo arena, and plenty of events at the park to be topped off by a 6 p.m. picnic. The football field at 8:30 a.m. becomes the sight of a "I Love America" musical presentation and fireworks display.

It's "People Day" in Plainview, beginning with a 7 p.m. prayer breakfast at Hutcherson Gym at Wayland Baptist College. The parade begins at 3 p.m. and a 4 p.m. opening is set for the Regional Heritage Center and Llano Estacado Museum at Wayland. The day ends with a 7:30 p.m. singout celebration at the Wayland Bowl.

Southlade Park in Post will be the site of a July 4th community-wide celebration. A family picnic and softball tournament will follow. Worship services if set for 7 p.m.

Ralls holds a special day of worship today, highlighted by the singing of Veo Gray from Dallas the Hazel family.

Roswell dedicates the Chaves County Historical Museum at 10 a.m. The Roswell Symphony Orchestra will play in the park at 6:30 p.m. and a Birthday Jubilee Pageant follows at 8 p.m. in Wollbowl Stadium.

An all-church service in Slaton begins at 7:30 p.m. in the high school auditorium.

Seminole holds an area reunion at 12 p.m. at the Civic Center today. Later, there'll be church services at the county park and a 8:30 p.m. patriotic production and fireworks display.

Religious services in Snyder will be held in Towle Memorial Park. A crafts show at the National Guard Armory begins at 1 p.m. and ends at 8 p.m. Throughout the day, there'll be a tennis tournament and a tractor pull in the park.

Tahoka holds an air show at the airport beginning at 2 p.m. The high school football stadium will be the site of 4 p.m. amusement activities, including an art show, dog show and old fashioned games and relays. A worship service is scheduled for 8:30 p.m., to be followed by stadium fireworks.

They'll be eating pancakes in Tatum at 10 a.m. today following worship service. A community-wide covered dish lunch begins at noon and the final rodeo performance is set for 2 p.m.

Tulia will hold church service throughout the day to give thanks for the nation's 200 years.

The Wilson High School band has a 1:30 p.m. program scheduled at the school football stadium, to be followed by games and contests.

BARBARA MANDRELL

Mandrell Joins Fair Star Lineup

Steve L. Lewis, general manager, said Mandrell will appear on stage with Freddy Fender on Sept. 27-28.

Mandrell is the youngest member of Nashville's Grand Ole Opry. The pint-size (5 foot 2, 92 pounds) country stylist also is adept on the five-string guitar, steel guitar, bass and saxophone.

40 and 50 yard dashes in a Los Angeles track meet during her high school days. She still admits to being a "tomboy."

She started out with a family band and landed a stint at the Showboat Hotel in Las Vegas at 14. Now a successful Columbia Records artist, her top releases include "Midnight Oil," "Treat Him Right," "Holdin' On to the Love I've Got", "Show Me", "Playing Around with Love" and many others.

She joins a top array of stars for the Sept. 25-Oct.2 exposition, dubbed Festival 76.

Others include Charley Pride, with Dave and Sugar, Sept. 26; Charlie Rich, Sept. 29-30; and Neil Sedaka, Oct. 1-2. Shows will be presented at 5:30 p.m. and 8:30 p.m. daily and tickets will be $4, $5, and $6. All seats are reserved. No tickets will be on sale until mid-July and no mail order requests will be accepted until then.

A fiddlers' contest, offering some $1,500 in prize money, will take over the limelight in Fair Park Coliseum on opening day.

Lions Club President Follows Father's Lead

For the first time in its 47-year history, the Lubbock Lions Club will install as its president, the son of a past president.

Incoming president, George E. Morris of 6227 Louisville Drive, son of longtime civic leader Harry Morris who served 1942-43, will assume the leadership at installation ceremonies at noon Tuesday in KoKo Palace.

Directing the installation will be the past district governor, Tut Tutwater of Plainview.

Other officers will be Charlie Lane, president elect; Jack Strong Jr., first vice-president; Bill McMillan, second vice-president; Jim Hall, third vice-president; Lester Grimes, secretary-treasurer; Harold Denny, tailtwister; Carl Looney, lion tamer; the Rev. Paul Hanna, chaplain. The new directors include Bob Murphy, Mike Irish, Avedis Kasargian and Barney Whigman.

Outgoing president is Sloan Fortenberry.

Active in the Lions Club since 1952, Morris is president of Lubbock Auto Glass, Inc., a member of the Lubbock Planning and Zoning Commission and the Lubbock Chamber of Commerce Armed Services Committee and a deacon at First Baptist Church.

Tech Receives Federal Grant

Texas Tech University is the recipient of a $148,942 federal grant for a model rural project for homemakers' service aid program to the elderly, according to a spokesman for U.S. Rep. George Mahon's Lubbock office.

The Department of Health, Education and Welfare made the grant through the Office of Human Development Administration on Aging.

Texans Help Recapture Spirit Of Nation's Founding

By The AP

They raised the flag at Old Glory, pop. 65, had mammoth parades in Dallas and Houston and tamal and "fajitas" (skirt steak) cookoffs in the Rio Grande Valley.

In Victoria, they selected Miss Vacant Lot and held an armadillo race. Throughout the wide expanses of the state Texans engaged in fun and games and listened to patriotic speeches and church sermons.

That's how Texans helped celebrate the bicentennial of a country they joined a little more than a century ago and for which they have now become one of its best known symbols.

"I think the Bicentennial is a chance to re-dedicate ourselves to the spirit of change," said Dr. Joe Frantz, professor of history at the University of Texas and director of the Texas State Historical Association. "We've gotten a little conservative in 200 years. We kicked off a revolution and we need to recapture the spirit."

It was a day for speeches, concerts, parades, musicals extolling the nation's virtues and tradition and a few solemn minutes of prayer of thanks for things often taken for granted.

Churches of all denominations scheduled special prayers during their services today. Sen. John Tower, R-Tex., son and grandson of preachers, was to preach the sermon this morning at the united worship service in San Augustine, one of the oldest towns in the state.

The official ceremonies included the dedication today in Austin of the $6 million, six-story Texas Law Center. It will be the last day of the annual convention of the Texas State Bar. U.S. Atty. Gen. Edward Levi was to be the featured speaker.

San Antonians organized a "Salute to Sousa" concert sponsored by the Music Performance Trust Fund of the American Federation of Musicians.

Throughout the state there rang the speeches of pride, love and allegiance mixed with historic reviews and hard looks at the country and its progress.

Frantz said in an interview:

"I think the Bicentennial will cause some Americans to reassess themselves and their country. It seems we have become the England of 1776. We are the status quo nation. We vie with disdain the new countries springing up, saying they can't govern themselvs. But we couldn't govern ourselves and fell on our face for the first 15 years back then ... We should turn up the torch of revolution in our halo instead of trying to snuff it."

Richard Santos, a historian and professor of history at Our Lady of the Lake College, said the Bicentennial is a celebration "of a political concept of government, the formation of a system of government by the people, a system that in spite of its flaws, has been shown to work."

Here is how sonme Texans celebrated:

At Old Glory in North Central Texas, the 65 residents of the town got together to hoist the flag in front of the town's general store. Many of them then went to nearby Stamford to watch the parade. Old Glory was called Brandenburg until residents changed the German name during World War I.

In San Antonio, there was a festival at the San Jose Mission, a canoe race down the San Antonio River, a parade and fireworks.

In Dallas, marching in the parade was Victor Foss, 79, a veteran of World War I, who wore his uniform and medals.

"The Bicentennial makes us sort of feel like we had a little part in making United States history," the old soldier said.

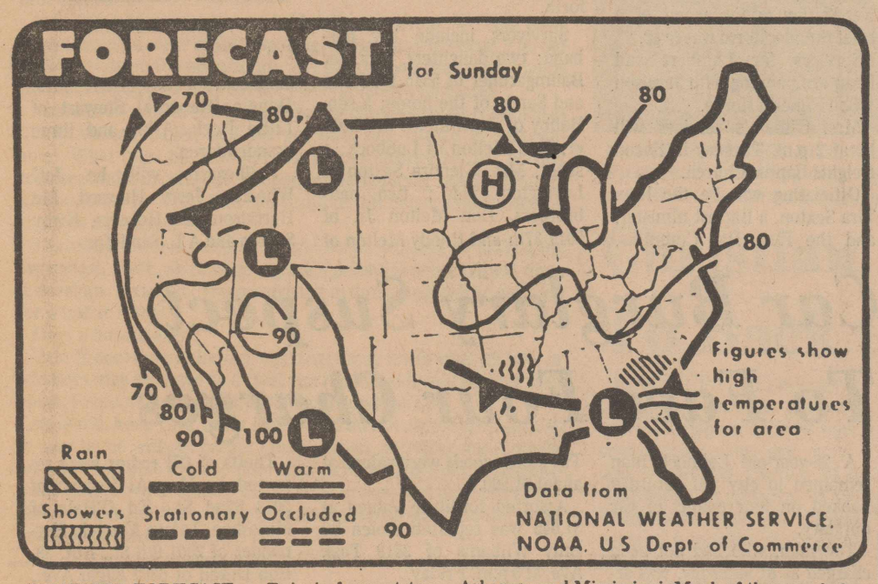

In Brownsville, at the tip of Texas, U.S. and Mexican flags were raised on a levee near the Rio Grande and the Confederate Air Force was to stage a fly-over.

In Corpus Christi there were exhibits by the Institute of Texan Cultures, art shows, flag ceremonies and a 21-gun salute at the Naval Air Station.

Victoria, the South Texan city named for a Mexican general, had its annual Armadillo Confab that included a jalapeno gobble, a greased body slide, a fat-is-beautiful pageant, an armadillo race and the selection of Miss Vacant Lot.

La Feria had a tamal cookoff, Edinburg had a fajita cookoff, Brownsville, a bareback burro race, and Kingsville a pinto bean cookoff.

And there was a generous measure of baseball, hot dogs, hoedowns and fireworks.

Scientist Lauds New Mars Site

PASADENA, Calif. (UPI) — A Jet Propulsion Laboratory scientist Saturday said the new landing site for Viking 1, on a smooth plain between two groups of craters, was "about as smooth a spot as we've see on the planet" Mars.

Viking 1 is scheduled to land on Mars July 17 at 5 a.m. CDT, postponed from the earlier planned July 4 bicentennial landing.

Dr. Hal Masursky, a geologist and head of the orbiter imaging team, said the landing site in the Northwest Territory about 150 miles from the original landing area, was "beautiful."

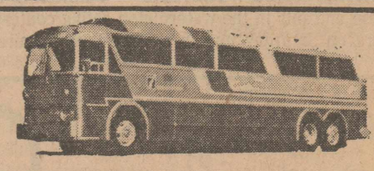

"It has hardly anything but smooth plains," Masursky said. "At the southern edge there is a small island with a crater and it looks like it was shaped oy water. We think we are still in the region slightly modified by a flow of water."

The area has small craters and "a beautiful sand dune field," he said.

Wreck Kills LBJ Friend

A former associate and personal friend of Mrs. Lyndon B. Johnson was hoping for a chance to visit with the former First Lady at dedication ceremonies of the Ranching Heritage Center when she and two other persons were killed in a three-car wreck Friday night.

Mrs. Joan Melton Gilliam, 42, and her husband, Bobby, 44, of 5722 78th St., were en route to the ceremonies, according to a business associate. Mrs. Sue Allen, assistant in the couple's real estate office which opened in April 1975, said Gilliam was one of the managers of the LBJ Ranch for many years.

Mrs. Gilliam had worked closely with Mrs. Johnson on records for the LBJ Library in Austin and was present for its opening, Mrs. Allen said.

Mrs. Gilliam and James Douglas Lambert Jr., 27, of Carlisle and Johnny Bean, 27, of Wolfforth became the state's first traffic fatalities of the July Fourth weekend when the accident occurred on 4th Street.

Gilliam remains in critical condition at Methodist Hospital where his wife was pronounced dead on arrival at 6:45 p.m. Friday. Earl Washington, 19, of Wolfforth was listed in satisfactory condition Saturday with a fractured right shoulder.

The accident marked the first multiple fatality accident in the city this year.

According to police reports, a 1966 Pontiac driven by Bean was traveling west on 4th Street. His passengers were Lambert, Washington, and Steve Menton, 16, of Shallowater who was treated for minor injuries and released.

A light drizzle was falling at the time, and the street was wet,. although the worst of a brief thunderstorm was over.

Services for Lambert and Bean are pending with Jamison & Son Funeral Home.

Mrs. Gilliam's services will be at 2 p.m. Tuesday in Bacon Heights Baptist Church.

Officiating will be the Rev. Tira Sexton, a Baptist minister, and the Rev. Pat Cummins, pastor of First Baptist Church of Brownfield.

Burial will follow in Resthaven Memorial Park.

Raised in Brownfield, Mrs. Gilliam and her husband moved to the Lubbock area five years ago and had been in the real estate business since that time.

She was a member of the Women's Division of the Chamber of Commerce, Lubbock Board of Realtors and the state and national associations of realtors. She was a licensed real estate broker.

Mrs. Gilliam was also a charter member of the Brownfield Art Association and a member of First Baptist Church of Wolfforth.

Survivors include her husband; two daughters, Mrs. Liz Baumgardner of 5515 1st Place and Sandy of the home; a son, Bobby of Brownfield; her father, Don Melton of Lubbock; a sister, Mrs. Glendra Sexton of Lovington, N.M.; two half-brothers, Don Melton Jr. of 5019 37th and Randy Melton of Lubbock; a half-sister, Mrs. Donnie (Rebecca) Stewart of Little Rock, Ark.; and three grandchildren.

JOAN GILLIAM

Pallbearers will be Jeff Wheeler, Jerry Howard, Mc Harrelson, Ed Roberts, Kirby Sexton and A.L. Sandefur.

Car Burglary Suspect To Face Four Charges

A 28-year-old Lubbock man remained in city jail Saturday booked on four counts of car burglary.

The man, who had not been charged as of Saturday, was arrested at 10:50 p.m. Friday after Lubbock police observed him breaking into a pick-up truck belonging to Joe Schwartz of Ropesville.

Sheriff's deputies investigated two incidents of house burglary Friday night. The first occurred sometime between 1:30 and 3:05 a.m. Saturday at Texas Mobil Village. $1,400 in cash was reported stolen by Edward G. Beechwood Jr. of Brookfield, N.Y.

The second burglary report called sheriff's men to the home of Jy Burks of Slaton, where a $250 stereo was reported stolen.

A Houston man visiting his three-year-old daughter reported she had been abused by her step-father. The case was referred to the child welfare department.

Lubbock police responded to two house burglary reports late riday and early Saturday. Clay Birdwell of 5223 19th St. reported a record player, radio, tape deck and color TV were stolen from his residence between 8:30 a.m. and 3:30 p.m. Friday. The stolen goods were valued at about $1,500.

Assorted furniture valued at $1,045 was reported stolen by Billy Williams of 3519 Teak Ave. at 5 p.m. Friday.

William R. King reported the motor and transmission had been removed from his vehicle sometime between June 25 and July 2. The theft occurred at 9500 Quaker Ave.

Thefts of CB radios were reported by Mrs. Al Vernon of 2013 62nd St., Ed O'Hair of Muleshoe, Tafoya Marcelo Hernandez of 2001 9th St., Apt. 38, Bob Duran of 6302 Elgin Ave., Apt. 14, Lee Andrew Washington of 1701 E. 1st Place, Harold Kenneth Bramble of 5401 4th St., Apt. 205, Bill Ervin of 2408 Auburn St., Apt. 153 and Arthur F. Davis of Slaton.

Fatality Recorded In Truck Accident

PLAINVIEW (Special) — A 48-year-old Plainview man was killed here Saturday when his pickup rammed into the rear of a bobtail truck less than a mile outside the city limits.

S.G. Wiltsher, who suffered head injuries in the 6:30 p.m. accident, died on the way to Central Plains Hospital here. He was pronounced dead on arrival by Justice of the Peace Glenn Stone.

Department of Public Safety investigators said Wiltsher's pickup was travelling east on FM 400 northeast of Plainview when it collided with a truck travelling east ahead of it. The truck was driven by Orosco Juan Alvarez of Plainview, investigators said.

The cab of Wiltsher's pickup was sheared off, according to investigators.

Funeral services for Wiltsher were pending late Saturday with Wood-Dunning Funeral Home here.

Wiltsher was an employe of Andy Taylor Trucking in Plainview.

Personal Safety Techniques Help Prevent Rapes

By SGT. SIDNEY LYLE
Odessa Police Dept.

A recent F.B.I. survey on rape reported that the American female has fallen victim to a hideous crime at the rate of 26 per 100,000.

With the crime of rape increasing year after year, and because the criminal is more sophisticated in his mode of transportation, it becomes necessary for women to practice personal safety techniques that make them less vulnerable to attack.

Far too many offenders get "off the hook" merely because the victim does not want to go through a court hearing, or the fear that her husband or elder son would take vengeance and become the subject of prosecution themselves. Therefore, prevention is the best approach.

Understandbly, rape cannot be totally prevented. We can, however, eliminate some of the opportunity for crime to occur. The old cliche, "remove the opportunity and you remove the crime," holds true, but the opportunity cannot be completely eliminated.

There are two extremes: dangerously careless conduct (which is totally unacceptable), and 100 per cent safe (which is unattainable). What must be achieved is a proper balance so that normal routines and activities are altered, while reducing the opportunity for the crime to occur. The end result of this balance must become cautious awareness.

There are several rules to follow which will aid in developing awareness. First, we must recognize a potential crime hazard when it develops. Example, you are driving in downtown traffic and stop for a traffic signal.

Does a hazard exist?

Yes. If doors are unlocked, a stranger may enter your vehicle, or windows may be down so a thief can reach inside and remove your purse. Solution, keep doors locked and windows up.

At home, keep your doors locked and do not accept strangers into your home without proper identification, and then only if necessary. If the person at the door says he is with a utility company, make him prove it. If he says his car is broken and he needs to use the phone, make the call for him. In any event, don't let the caller inside your home.

Water Application Continues

A-J Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The Water Rights Commission has continued to 10 a.m. Sept. 14 the application of Lavonne Crenshaw Hotel for a permit to construct and maintain a 200-acre-foot capacity reservoir on North Running Water Draw in Hale County.

The matter was continued after testimony before the WRC indicated a boundary dispute between the adjoining landowners which the WRC felt should be disposed of before the WRC considers the application.

Otherwise, Chairman Joe Carter said, the WRC would be "disposed to deny" the request.

The application is for construction of SCS Site No. 2, Lower Running Water Draw Watershed Project, with diversion of 150 acre-feet of water annually (100 acre-feet irrigation tailwater and 50 acre-feet run-off from rainfall) for irrigation of 185 acres.

The application also seeks diversion of tailwater from a sump at the proposed dam site until the dam is constructed.

The reconvened hearing will be in the Stephen F. Austin State Office Building in Austin.

Christian Democrats Agree To Back Communist Election

ROME (UPI) — Italy's ruling Christian Democrats Saturday overcame opposition from their conservative wing and promised to support election of a Communist as president of the Chamber of Deputies. Participants in a meeting of six party leaders, including Communist chief Enrico Berlinguer and Christian Democratic party Secretary Benigno Zaccagnini, said no names were mentioned, but all agreed a Communist should head the Chamber of Deputies and a Christian Democrat should become the senate prsident.

The Communists have not held the presidency of a house of parliament since Umberto Terracin who presided over the postwar Constituent Assembly in 1947-48.

Politicians said Zaccagnini agreed to meet the communists despite sharp opposition from party conservatives led by party President Amintore Fanfani.

In an interview for publication in this week's issue of the news magazine Tempo. Fanfani said the elections "confirmed the hegemonic role of the Christian Democrats.

"Certainly, the Communist party increased its support and we don't underestimate it," Fanfani said. "We don't deny the communists any of their rights, but do you know what is the basic right we recognize for them? The right to stay in the oppposition."

Republican leader Ugo La Malfa said at the end of the two-hour conference, "the atmosphere was good. very good." Berlinguer termed the discussion "exhaustive."

Directorate members Giorgio Amendola and Nilde Iotti were mentioned as possible communist candidates for the Chamber presidency. If chosen, Iotti would be the first woman ever to head a house of the parliament.

Former Premier Amintore Fanfani and former Interior Minister Paolo Emilio Taviani were mentioned as potential Christian Democratic choices for the Senate presidency.

Past Nominees To Speak At Democratic Convention

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sens. George McGovern and Hubert Humphrey, the two men who lost the presidency to Richard Nixon, will address the Democratic National Convention next week.

The speeches by the party's past nominees will come on the second day of the convention, July 13, and — given their oratorical skills — could be among the high spots of what could be the least eventful Democratic convention in years.

The agenda was designed to keep any possible rules, credentials or platform disputes off prime-time television and use the peak evening viewing hours for the nominating process and speech making.

Four years ago, McGovern made his acceptance speech until 3 a.m., long after most viewers went to bed. This year, a party spokesman said, Chairman Robert Strauss said, "10:30 no matter what," even if the scheduled business of vice presidential nominations is not complete.

Strauss, in a statement Friday, said: "Where we once wondered if we could even finish our presidential nomination balloting on Wednesday night, we now can plan the one ballot for the most convenient time for our delegates, as well as the best time for radio and television broadcasts and newspaper deadlines across the country."

In addition to frontrunner Jimmy Carter's, the names of Morris Udall, Edmund G. Brown Jr., and Ellen McCormack will be placed in nomination, officials said.

Also addressing the convention, besides Carter when he accepts the nomination he locked up a month early, will be Milwaukee Mayor Henry Meier, head of the Democratic Mayors' Conference, Rhode Island Gov. Phillip Noel, outgoing chairman of the Democratic Governor's Conference and Florida Gov. Reubin Askew, the new Democratic governors' chairman.

Noel raised controversy within the party when he was quoted as making remarks about ghetto-life blacks considered derogatory. As a result, he resigned as chairman of the platform committee.

Ohio Sen. John Glenn, the former astronaut and vice presidential possibility, will deliver one of the two keynote addresses on the first night, July 12. He will be followed by Rep. Barbara Jordan of Texas, whose name also is reported to be on Carter's running mate list.

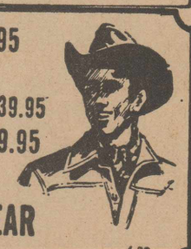

The Monday and Wednesday sessions will begin in the evening, and the Tuesday and Thursday sessions, when the committee reports will be debated, will start in the afternoon. Convention officials said they planned each session to end at midnight.

July 4 Parade Thrills Thousands

By BETSY FRIAUF
Staff Writer

OLD-FASHIONED patriotism made a colorful march through the city Saturday as the Independence Day Parade wound its way down Broadway.

Nearly 100 vehicles, floats and marching units participated, carrying out the theme "200 Years of Freedom."

There were more than 3,000 paraders, and flag-waving spectators lined the route shoulder-to-shoulder from its starting point at Broadway and Avenue E to its finish at the coliseum parking lot.

Approximately twice as many children as adults turned out, and sprinkling rain didn't seem to discourage anyone. Families toting lawn chairs and umbrellas and pushing baby strollers picked vantage points early for the 10 a.m. parade.

One emotion that hasn't changed over the years is the thrill of anticipation, and the kids definitely felt it. Many sported paper Uncle Sam hats and carried small American flags.

The "Spirit of '76" color guard headed up the parade, followed by a marching band of Lubbock junior high and high school musicians.

The crowd applauded each time the American flag came into sight.

More than 50 floats competed for 15 trophies awarded by the Lubbock Bicentennial Committee and presented by U.S. Rep. George Mahon.

The Campfire Girls won first place in the youth division for their float decorated with a teepee and, naturally, a campfire.

The Girl Scouts took second place.

St. Patrick's Catholic Church was awarded first place in the church division. Its float had a Latin American theme in bright colors.

St. Luke's Baptist Church was second with its "old time religion" preacher.

The Avalanche-Journal won first place in the commercial division for a large float depicting 200 years of press freedom. Briercroft Savings and Loan won second place for its colonial motif float.

In the civic and fraternal club division, Rotarians captured first place for their float illustrating the four freedoms, speech, religion, press and assembly. The Panhellenic Association won second place.

In the open division, Reese Air Force Base took first place and the Veterans Administration Clinic garnered second.

Bicycle decoration division winners were Sheri Michalka, first place, and Leigh Armstrong, second.

In the horseback division, the Lubbock Saddle Club took the first place trophy and second place went to the Abernathy Riding Club.

Mayor Roy Bass presented the mayor's trophy to The Avalanche-Journal for the float judged best of all entries in the parade.

Lubbock citizens said they felt the parade was a fitting way to mark the bicentennial, since it was free of charge and contained entertainment that all ages enjoy.

'Million Dollar' Rains Boon To Area Cotton

By PAT PATRICK
Staff Writer

SOUTH PLAINS farmers have extra reason to celebrate today on the nation's 200th birthday: Fourth of July weekend rains have been worth millions of dollars in terms of the 1976 cotton crops.

Soaking showers Friday and Saturday — and more possible today — mean both lower irrigation costs and enhanced production for Lubbock area cotton growers.

The rain's value is almost inestimable, one local cotton authority said: "I couldn't even put a figure on it, it's been worth so many millions that I'd hesitate to make a guess"

Dryland Farming Boon

Dryland farmers who got anything like the nearly 2 inches of precipitation recorded in Lubbock in two days could get along without any more rain on their crops this year, he said.

"Of course, to achieve maximum production, we would prefer to have more rain. But, if the rain fell everywhere as it did last night around Lubbock — steady, no violence that would damage crops — with the deep ground moisture we already have, the 2 inches will assure a cotton crop on dryland farms."

Traditionally, the South Plains' big money crop, cotton acreage has been divided 65 per cent irrigated and 35 per cent dryland farming.

Timing Almost Ideal

The heavy weekend rains are falling at an almost ideal time on the cotton crops.

Perfect time for rain on cotton is when the plants are at first bloom. Mst area crops aren't quite there yet, but the rain is still timely, agriculturalists said.

If cotton crops get too much rain while very young, farmers get leggy or showy plants; but they don't bear a lot of fruit and develop shallow root systems. This year's cotton crop has had enough stress to send strong roots down deep after moisture, they said.

Crop Already Doing Well

"The bulk of the area cotton crop has been doing well and hadn't needed rain badly to this point. The rains this weekend are an extra bonus to those farmers.

"However, some dryland acreage near here never got planted.

"And other dryland acreage was planted under marginal conditions — this rain will preserve those men and enhance their crops," the cotton expert said.

Saving Substantial

An irrigation farmer can expect to save hundreds to thousands of dollars — depending on the scope of his operation — on costs of fuel to run irrigation equipment, thanks to the rain.

National Weather Service forecasters called for a 20 per cent chance of rain through tonight in the Lubbock area due to moist, low level air continuing to hang over the Plains. Today's high should be c the middle 80s, tonight's low in the middle 60s and Monday's high in the upper 80s. The relatively mild summer temperatures may be offset for bicentennial merry-makers, however, by afternoon humidities of 40-50 per cent each day.

Absent from the forecast was a prediction of severe weather for the area like that it experienced Friday night and Saturday morning.

Conditions aloft would restrict development of thunderstorms here today, although it's possible some may drift southeast from New Mexico, the NWS said.

A shower that fell on Lubbock's bicentennial parade Saturday morning brought the city's total recorded rainfall since Friday afternoon to a healthy 1.95 inches.

That was only a drop in the bucket, however, compared to the 5, 6 and nearly 9 inches collected by ranches around Snyder in a 24-hour period ending at midday Saturday. But that city officially had only .05 of an inch.

Tahoka was deluged with 3.47 inches of rain and Brownfield, 2.48. Other area rainfall included Abernathy, 1.72; Big Spring, .54; Dimmitt, .05; Floydada, .07; Hereford, .01; Jayton, .60; Lamesa, 1.44; Levelland, .44; Matador, .01; Morton, .12; Muleshoe, .39; Muleshoe Refuge, .15; Paducah, .03; Plains, .80; Plainview, .10; Seminole, .19; Tulia, .12; Guthrie, .59 and South Camp, .52.

Martin County residents, if they'd been awake, would have been worrying about a tornado spotted on the ground 27 miles north of Stanton at 2:15 a.m.

Marble-sized hail fell near Midland and at Rankin in Upton County about an hour later.

High water which plagued the Lubbock area Friday night and Saturday morning, as water-logged ground just couldn't take any more, had receded by Saturday night. The Department of Public Safety office here said only high water remaining in the area Saturday was on FM 179 north of Shallowater.

Heavy thunderstorms boomed during the evening in the San Angelo, Odessa, Wink, Abilene, Davis Mountains, Dallas-Fort Worth, Austin, Alice, Del Rio, Rock Springs, Junction and Brady areas as the frontal system moved southeast.

Wall, near San Angelo, received more than 3 inches of rain in the 6-hour period ending at 7 p.m. Saturday, and rain fell at 1 to 2-inch an hour rates in some South and Cntral Texas points.

The coastal region west of Galveston to Houston and near Toledo Bend was pelted by showers and thunderstorms, too.

Bicentennial Spirit Permeates Lubbock

By PAT REMICK

TEXAS may not have been one of the original 13 colonies, but you wouldn't have known it Saturday.

The bicentennial spirit floated over Lubbock, wafting the flags in the slight breezes of a July scorcher. Even in the heat, Lubbockites and area residents turned out in red, white and blue to celebrate their nation's birth and their own beginnings.

Cityfolk, countryfolk and kinfolk joined together in block parties, ity parks and at the new Ranching Heritage Center to applaud what they were, what they are and what they will be after the 200th birthday festivities end.

It was a joyous day and a fun day that included a little boy on-stage pantomiming the movements of jazz musicians, a political hopeful sitting on a balloon in a city park and older folk remembering days gone by.

The end of the morning's gala bicentennial parade brought thousands to the 1500 block of Broadway, where the First National Bank hosted a three-hour-long block party. More than 10,000 hotdogs and three times as many soft drinks were consumed before the party ended with a medly ofTexas tunes by a Dallas group.

A few blocks away, Hemphill-Wells was holding a "Happy Birthday America" party of its own with free ice cream and cake during the early afternoon.

Some of the partygoers drifted out to the Ranching Heritage Center to be among the 7,500 enthusiasts to pass through the wooden gates there and enjoy demonstrations of sheep-shearing, square dancing, soap-making and roof-thatching among others.

The buffalo and the Texas Tech Red Raider delighted the children while their parents seemed curious about the rough and tough ranching days of old and thankful they didn't have to live through them. But for the grandparents, seeing the demonstrations of ranching life brought back memories of what it was like "'way back then."

Several thousand more Lubbockites and area residents are expected today and Monday to converge upon the Heritage Center and take in the sights of days gone by.

Nowhere was the significance of the day or the weekend forgotten. Flags waved in every part of the city over the thousands of celebrators singing the National Anthem and other patriotic songs.

Today, Lubbockites express their joy and thanks for 200 years of freedom in church services throughout the city and at a Ranching Heritage Center Sunrise Service followed by a chuckwagon breakfast.

Bells will chime at 1 p.m. as Lubbock joins the rest of the nation in commemorating the 200th anniversary of the ringing of the Liberty Bell.

Boating enthusiasts will gather at Buffalo Springs Lake at that time to view the Governor's Cup Races and at 2 p.m. the roar of motorcycles racing will be heard in Mackenzie State Park.

Tonight is the grand opening of the Harley Sadler Tent Show. The program begins at 8:15 p.m. in the tent on the prairie east of The Texas Tech Museum.

And once again, Lubbockites will join together to sing out their patriotism and songs of American heritage. Tonight's community sing begins at 8:45 p.m. in Lowery Field and will be led by a 300-voice choir.

Ranching Heritage Center activities and the tent show will continue through Monday as West Texas keeps on doing up fine this bicentennial weekend.

Firemen Seek Ways To Improve 'Most Dangerous Job In Town'

By DWAYNE COX
Staff Writer

FIRE fighting. "It's the most dangerous job in town," Lubbock Fire Inspector J.C. Martin claims.

Although only two fire fightershave died in the line of duty in the Lubbock Fire Department's history, a retirement benefit list with several payments going to widows or children adds impact to Martin's claim.

The marked contrast between the Lubbock department's record of few fire fighting deaths and a pension list with orphans and widows as beneficiaries is explained indirectly by a recently released Fire Fighter Mortality Report.

The report, prepared by the International Association of Fire Fighters after a 15-month nationwide survey of fire fighter deaths, reveals that heart attacks — not collapsed buildings, burns or other catastrophes associated with combating fire — were the major cause of deaths among fire fighters.

Forty-five of 101 fire fighters killed in the study of deaths between Sept. 22, 1974, and Dec. 31, 1975, died after a heart attack caused by inhalation of toxic fumes and smoke or by stress and exertion, the report said.

Although heart attacks in the line of duty have not claimed the life of a Lubbock fire fighter, they have forced firemen into premature retirement or have reduced fire fighting capability. They also have prompted resignations from the department and in a few cases haave killed firemen after retirement.

Heart disease and the possibility of developing heart disease are occupational hazards not limited to but most profound in fire fighting when compared to other occupations, Lubbock Fire Marshal A.C. Black, Lubbock Fire Chief Tom Foster and Martin agreed. And, echoing the study, the three men — two of whom have had heart attacks — pegged inhalation of smoke and toxic fumes, stress and overexertion as the three major causes of heart attacks among firemen.

Unfortunately, each of these major causes is inherent to the job. Eight fire fighters on the Lubbock department pension list were forced there by occupation-related heart ailments, respiratory diseases or strains. A sizeable percentage of the department's 233 men take medication to control high blood pressure and other heart ailments, Foster said.

And, of those firemen who have retired with a relatively clean bill of health, several probably will die with one of the inherent hazards of their occupation contributing to their death.

Brain deterioration, caused by a lack of oxygen during fire fighting situations, has affected several firemen in thsLubbock department who died after a normal retirement, Foster said.

A fireman's heart takes a literal beating, according to Black, "beginning with the traumatic shock of being asleep and then being suddenly awakened by a fire alarm." The heart abuse continues, he said, throughout the fire fighting ordeal which involves extremely strenuous work during short periods of time.

The report substantiated Black's observation of the seemingly insignificant hazard to a fireman's health.

"It is assumed that all fire fighters experience a certain degree of stress when the alarm sounds," the mortality report stated. "...sleeping fire fighters awakened by an alarm suffer a higher degree of stress."

Relying on the medically proven fact that smoke inhalation is definitely related to heart disease, the mortality report stated that all fire fighters are exposed to a certain amount of smoke and toxic fumes during their career, a job characteristic which compounds susceptibility to heart disease. The report also noted that the increased use of plastic-based materials in recent years has exposed firemen to more deadly fumes.

The Lubbock department's concern with the fume inhalation problem is reflected in a rule that all firefighters inside a burning structure wear oxygen masks and that all engines have masks for two fighters, Foster said.

The very nature of the job, however, makes absolute compliance with department policy impossible, Foster admitted. In an emergency situation, masks may be forgotten or poorly fitted and Foster indicated departmental research found most firemen pull off their masks too quickly after a fire has apparently been extinguished—a time when carbon monoxide concentration is at its highest level.

The third major cause of heart attacks among Lubbock firemen, overexertion, is to a large extent administrative, Foster said. The Lubbock department operates under a manpower shortage, he said.

"Spreading manpower thin adds to overexertion and strain," Foster said.

Because an increase in manpower is unlikely in the near future, Foster said, he expects more and more money to be spent for protective and higher quality equipment, such as lighter coats, air tanks and other utensils of the fire fighting trade.

These, hopefully, will afford a reduction in fume inhalation, stress and overexertion among the men whose occupation is the most dangerous in town.

In general, however, from sea to sea the national tone was upbeat and patriotic, reflecting the theme sounded by President Ford in his Bicentennial message:

"The unique American union of the known and the unknown, the tried and untried, has been the foundation for our liberty and our great success," the President said.

"In this country individuals can be the masters rather than the helpless victims of their destiny ...

"In the space of two centuries we have not been able to right every wrong, to correct every injustice, to reach every worthy goal. But for 200 years we have tried and we will continue to strive to make the lives of individual men and women in this country and on this earth better lives ... and more free."

ON THIS FOURTH of July weekend, it seemed, the uncommon was commonplace.

Boston and Hawaii, for example, will team up a continent-spanning ceremony blending the nation's newest science and its oldest history.

A telescope at the Mauna Kea Observatory in Hawaii will capture the light emitted by a star 200 light years ago, which will trip a sensor, which will flip a switch — lighting a lamp in Boston's Old North Church, Paul Revere's storied beacon of 1775.

Bob Older, a Californian who thinks big, aimed to hoist a 67-by-102-foot flag over his Mojave Desert ranch, an operation for which he has laid out $10,000 in poles and cables. In Salt Lake City, the Norm Fife family will have a dip in their swimming pool, the botton of which they painted as a flag. In Miramar, Fla., Betty Kapchuck and her children gift-wrapped their house in red, white and blue bunting.

Mainly, however, Americans began their weekend celebrations in traditional ways — barbecues in Texas, clambakes in Maryland, ox-roasts in West Virginia, an old-fashioned bonfire in Litchfield, N.H., and in Philadelphia 635 block parties, probably a record.

Smooth-Running Dream Suddenly Goes Awry

"IT'S A DREAM," the woman kept telling herself as the sleek airplane took off into the rising sun. She looked forward to six days of sightseeing in the nation's capital during the bicentennial year.

She mastered the intricacies of the Dallas-Fort Worth airport and boarded another flight to the metroplis on the Potomac.

She arrived, tired and glad to be on the ground again, after a half-day's flight and took a taxi to the downtown hotel.

Everything up to then had gone smoothly, without a hitch and according to the game plan.

That should have been a warning.

First she attempted to register at the hotel. No, they did not have a reservation for that person or that party. The hotel had never received a reservation for that group. Either the reservation had been lost in the mail or lost in the paperwork shuffle.

WHAT LIFE IS...

The desk clerk miraculously found the woman a room, even though it resembled a closet. No, they did not believe they could find a room for the rest of the group, which was arriving later that day.

After contacting the headquarters for the national event they were attending, a room was found for the remainder of the local group.

Now, the hotel reservations section could not accept the woman's company credit because her name had changed because of marriage since it was issued. A phone call to her employer restored her credit standing.

Next, she went back to her room to relax and unpack her suitacases. Her key broke off in the lock.

Another trip downstairs to the hotel's front desk and the explanation about the key breaking off in the lock. The perfect day ended when an elderly bellhop, after extracting the broken key from the lock, said that he had extracted thousands of such keys from locks during his many years of employ at the hotel.

COMIC DICTIONARY

MIDDLE AGE — The period when a man worries because his hair is getting thin and a woman worries because the rest of her is getting fat.

IN CONGRESS, JULY 4, 1776.

The unanimous Declaration of the thirteen united States of America,

When in the Course of human events, it becomes necessary for one people to dissolve the political bands which have connected them with another, and to assume among the Powers of the earth, the separate and equal station to which the Laws of Nature and of Nature's God entitle them, a decent respect to the opinions of mankind requires that they should declare the causes which impel them to the separation.

We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable Rights, that among these are Life, Liberty and the pursuit of Happiness. That to secure these rights, Governments are instituted among Men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed, That whenever any Form of Government becomes destructive of these ends, it is the Right of the People to alter or to abolish it, and to institute new Government, laying its foundation on such principles and organizing its powers in such form, as to them shall seem most likely to effect their Safety and Happiness. Prudence, indeed, will dictate that Governments long established should not be changed for light and transient causes; and accordingly all experience hath shown, that mankind are more disposed to suffer, while evils are sufferable, than to right themselves by abolishing the forms to which they are accustomed. But when a long train of abuses and usurpations, pursuing invariably the same Object evinces a design to reduce them under absolute Despotism, it is their right, it is their duty, to throw off such Government, and to provide new Guards for their future security. — Such has been the patient sufferance of these Colonies; and such is now the necessity which constrains them to alter their former Systems of Government. The history of the present King of Great Britain is a history of repeated injuries and usurpations, all having in direct object the establishment of an absolute Tyranny over these States. To prove this, let Facts be submitted to a candid world.

He has refused his Assent to Laws, the most wholesome and necessary for the public good.

He has forbidden his Governors to pass Laws of immediate and pressing importance, unless suspended in their operation till his Assent should be obtained; and when so suspended, he has utterly neglected to attend to them.

He has refused to pass other Laws for the accommodation of large districts of people, unless those people would relinquish the right of Representation in the Legislature, a right inestimable to them and formidable to tyrants only.

He has called together legislative bodies at places unusual, uncomfortable, and distant from the depository of their Public Records, for the sole purpose of fatiguing them into compliance with his measures.

He has dissolved Representative Houses repeatedly, for opposing with manly firmness his invasions on the rights of the people.

He has refused for a long time, after such dissolutions, to cause others to be elected; whereby the Legislative Powers, incapable of Annihilation, have returned to the People at large for their exercise; the State remaining in the mean time exposed to all the dangers of invasion from without, and convulsions within.

He has endeavoured to prevent the population of these States; for that purpose obstructing the Laws of Naturalization of Foreigners; refusing to pass others to encourage their migration hither, and raising the conditions of new Appropriations of Lands.

He has obstructed the Administration of Justice, by refusing his Assent to Laws for establishing Judiciary Powers.

He has made Judges dependent on his Will alone, for the tenure of their offices, and the amount and payment of their salaries.

He has erected a multitude of New Offices, and sent hither swarms of Officers to harass our People, and eat out their substance.

He has kept among us, in times of peace, Standing Armies without the Consent of our legislature.

He has affected to render the Military independent of and superior to the Civil Power.

He has combined with others to subject us to a jurisdiction foreign to our constitution, and unacknowledged by our laws; giving his Assent to their acts of pretended legislation:

For quartering large bodies of armed troops among us:

For protecting them, by a mock Trial, from Punishment for any Murders which they should commit on the Inhabitants of these States:

For cutting off our Trade with all parts of the world:

For imposing taxes on us without our Consent:

For depriving us in many cases, of the benefits of Trial by Jury:

For transporting us beyond Seas to be tried for pretended offences:

For abolishing the free System of English Laws in a neighbouring Province, establishing therein an Arbitrary government, and enlarging its Boundaries so as to render it at once an example and fit instrument for introducing the same absolute rule into these Colonies:

For taking away our Charters, abolishing our most valuable Laws, and altering fundamentally the Forms of our Governments.

For suspending our own Legislature, and declaring themselves invested with Power to legislate for us in all cases whatsoever.

He has abdicated Government here, by declaring us out of his Protection and waging War against us.

He has plundered our seas, ravaged our Coasts, burnt our towns, and destroyed the lives of our people.

He is at this time transporting large armies of foreign mercenaries to compleat the works of death, desolation and tyranny, already begun with circumstances of Cruelty & perfidy scarcely paralleled in the most barbarous ages, and totally unworthy the Head of a civilized nation.

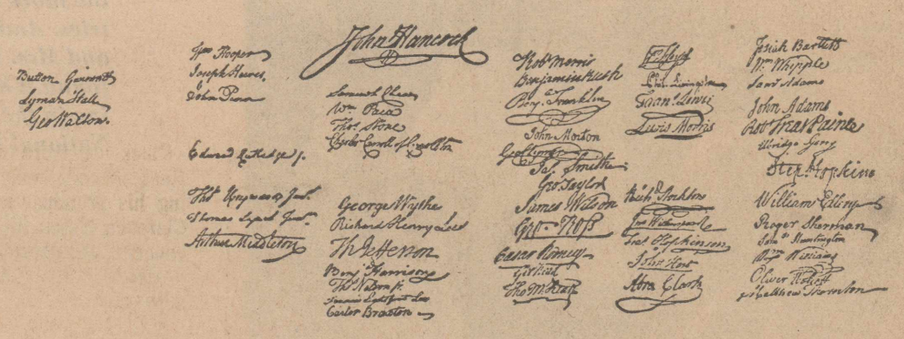

He has constrained our fellow Citizens taken Captive on the high Seas to bear Arms against their Country, to become the executioners of their friends and Brethren, or to fall themselves by their Hands.

He has excited domestic insurrections amongst us, and has endeavoured to bring on the inhabitants of our frontiers, the merciless Indian Savages, whose known rule of warfare, is an undistinguished destruction of all ages, sexes and conditions.

In every stage of these Oppressions We have Petitioned for Redress in the most humble terms: Our repeated Petitions have been answered only by repeated injury. A Prince, whose character is thus marked by every act which may define a Tyrant, is unfit to be the ruler of a free People.

Nor have We been wanting in attention to our British brethren. We have warned them from time to time of attempts by their legislature to extend an unwarrantable jurisdiction over us. We have reminded them of the circumstances of our emigration and settlement here. We have appealed to their native justice and magnanimity, and we have conjured them by the ties of our common kindred to disavow these usurpations, which would inevitably interrupt our connections and correspondence. They too have been deaf to the voice of justice and of consanguinity. We must, therefore, acquiesce in the necessity, which denounces our Separation, and hold them, as we hold the rest of mankind, Enemies in War, in Peace Friends.

We, therefore, the Representatives of the united States of America, in General Congress, Assembled, appealing to the Supreme Judge of the world for the rectitude of our intentions, do, in the Name and by Authority of the good People of these Colonies, solemnly publish and declare, That these United Colonies are, and of Right ought to be Free and Independent States; that they are Absolved from all Allegiance to the British Crown, and that all political connection between them and the State of Great Britain, is and ought to be totally dissolved; and that as Free and Independent States, they have full Power to levy War, conclude Peace, contract Alliances, establish Commerce, and to do all other Acts and Things which Independent States may of right do. And for the support of this Declaration, with a firm reliance on the Protection of Divine Providence, we mutually pledge to each other our Lives, our Fortunes and our sacred Honor.

The Declaration: Comments About It, and How the Colonies Received It

Thomas Jefferson, in an early-morning note in his journal: "6 a.m., July 4, 1776, 68 degrees, wind southeast."

King George III — July 4, 1776, entry in his diary: "Nothing of importance happened today."

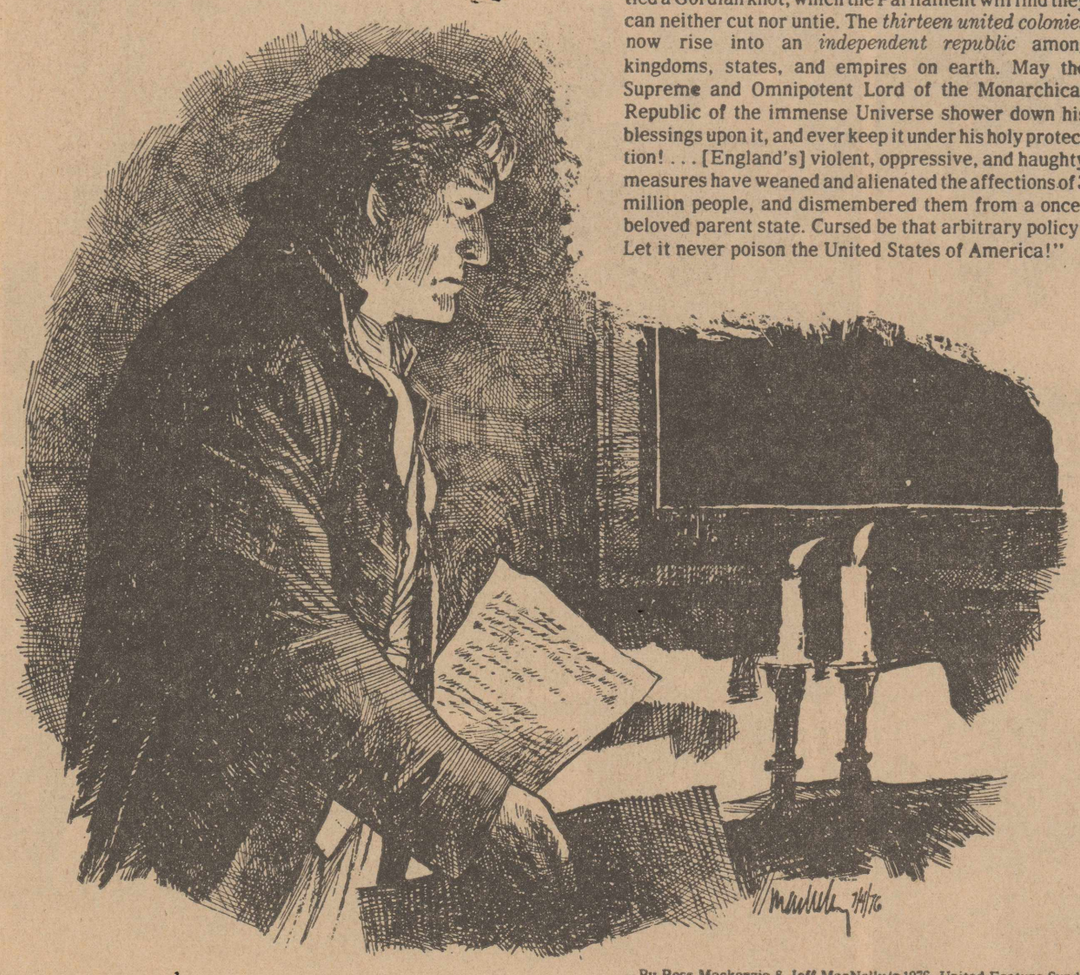

John Hancock, president of the Continental Congress, upon putting his large signature on the Declaration: "There. I guess King George will be able to read that."

Caesar Rodney, a member of the Continental Congress from Delaware, in a letter dated July 4: "I arrived in Congress (though detained by thunder and rain) [in] time enough to give my voice in the matter of independence. It is determined by the thirteen United Colonies, without even one dissenting Colony. We have now got through with the whole of the Declaration, and ordered it to be printed, so that you will soon have the pleasure of seeing it. Handbills of it will be printed, and sent to the armies, cities, county towns, etc., to be published or rather proclaimed in form."

John Adams of Massachusetts, commenting on the first public reading of the Declaration (July 8) by Colonel John Nixon of the Philadelphia Associators — a militia unit founded by Benjamin Franklin and others in the 1740s: "Three cheers rendered the welkin. The battalions paraded on the Common and gave us a feu-de-joie, notwithstanding the scarcity of powder The bells rang all day and almost all night. Even the chimers chimed away."

George Washington, following the first reading of the Declaration — July 9 — to his troops on Manhattan Island (New York): "The General hopes that this important event will serve as a fresh incentive to every officer and soldier to act with fidelity and courage, as knowing that now the peace and safety of his country depends (under God) solely on the success of our arms."

Ezra Stiles, a leading citizen of Connecticut, writing in his diary July 13: "[A friend] returned from Newport [Rhode Island] and brought the Congress's Declaration of Independence.... This I read at noon, and for the first time realized Independence. Thus the Congress have tied a Gordian knot, which the Parliament will find they can neither cut nor untie. The thirteen united colonies now rise into an independent republic among kingdoms, states, and empires on earth. May the Supreme and Omnipotent Lord of the Monarchical Republic of the immense Universe shower down his blessings upon it, and ever keep it under his holy protection! . . . [England's] violent, oppressive, and haughty measures have weaned and alienated the affections of 3 million people, and dismembered them from a once-beloved parent state. Cursed be that arbitrary policy! Let it never poison the United States of America!"

Abigail Adams (wife of John Adams of Massachusetts), following the first public reading of the Declaration, by Thomas Crafts, July 19, in Boston: "The bells rang, the privateers fired the forts and batteries, the cannon were discharged . . . and every face appeared joyful. . . . After dinner, the King's arms were taken down from the State House and every vestige of him from every place . . . and burnt. . . . Thus ends royal authority in this state [of Massachusetts], and all the people shall say Amen."

Letter written anonymously July 22 from Rhode Island to the 'Pennsylvania Evening Post': "Day before yesterday, the honorable the General Assembly of Rhode Island, being then sitting at the State House in Newport, at twelve o'clock, the brigade stationed there, under the command of Colonels William Richmond and Christopher Lippitt, marched from headquarters, and drew up in two columns, on each side the parade, before the State House door. His honor the Governor and the members of the Assembly then marched through and received the compliments of the brigade; after which the secretary, at the head of the company, read a resolve of the assembly, concurring with the Congress in the Declaration of Independence. The Declaration was then read; next 13 cannon were discharged at Fort Liberty, and then the brigade drew up and fired in 13 divisions, from east to west, agreeable to the number and situation of the United States."

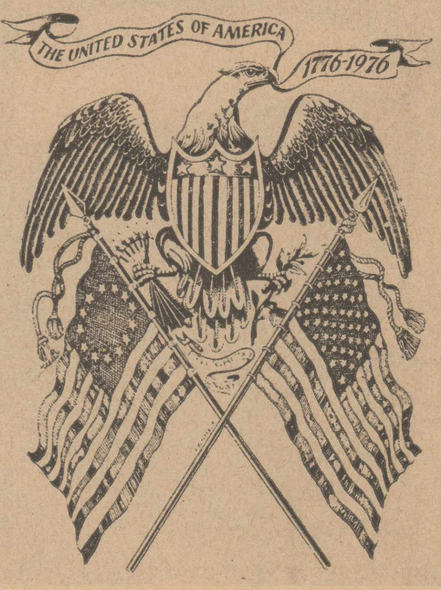

Benjamin Franklin at the August 2 signing of the Declaration in Philadelphia, responding to John Hancock's remark that 'We must be unanimous, there must be no pulling different ways. We must all hang together': "Yes, we must, indeed, all hang together, or most assuredly we shall all hang separately."

An account in the August 10 'Virginia Gazette' — published in Williamsburg: "On Monday last, being court day, the Declaration of Independence was publicly proclaimed in the town of Richmond, before a large concourse of respectable free-holders of Henrico county, and upwards of 200 of the militia, who assembled on that grand occasion. It was received with universal shouts of joy, and re-echoed by three volleys of small arms. The same evening the town was illuminated, and the members of the committee held a club, when many patriotic toasts were drank. Although there were near 1,000 people present, the whole was conducted with the utmost decorum, and the satisfaction visible in every countenance sufficiently evinces their determination to support it with their lives and fortunes."

Letter written anonymously August 10 from Savannah to the 'Connecticut Gazette and Universal Intelligencer': "At Savannah, in Georgia, a declaration being received from the honorable John Hancock, Esq., . . . [the townsfolk proceeded to] the liberty-pole [where] they were met by the Georgia battalion, who, after the reading of the Declaration, discharged their field-pieces, and fired in platoons. Upon this they proceeded to the battery, at the trustee's gardens, where the Declaration was read for the last time, and the cannon of the battery discharged. His Excellency and council, Colonel Lachlan McIntosh, and other gentlemen, with the militia, dined under the cedar trees, and cheerfully drank to the united, free, and independent States of America. In the evening the town was illuminated, and there was exhibited a very solemn funeral procession, attended by the grenadier and light infantry companies, and other militia, with their drums muffled, and fifes, and a greater number of people than ever appeared on any occasion before, in that province, when [an effigy of] George III was interred before the courthouse. . . ."

Thomas Jefferson, in a letter dated May 8, 1825: "... With respect to our rights, and the acts of the British government contravening those rights, there was but one opinion on this side of the water. All American whigs thought alike on these subjects. When forced, therefore, to resort to arms for redress, an appeal to the tribunal of the world was deemed proper for our justification. This was the object of the Declaration of Independence. . . . It was intended to be an expression of the American mind. . . ."

Thomas Jefferson, in a letter dated June 24, 1826: "... Our fellow citizens, after half a century of experience and prosperity, continue to approve the choice we made. May it be to the world, what I believe it will be (to some parts sooner, to others later, but finally to all), the signal of arousing men to burst the chains, under which monkish ignorance and superstitition had persuaded them to bind themselves, and to assume the blessings and security of self-government. The form which we have substituted restores the free right and freedom of opinion. All eyes are opened or opening to the rights of man. The general spread of the light of science has already laid open to every view the palpable truth, that the mass of mankind has not been born with saddles on their backs, nor a favored few, booted and spurred, ready to ride them legitimately, by the grace of God. These are grounds of hope for others; for ourselves, let the annual return of this day forever refresh our recollections of these rights, and an undiminished devotion to them."

Diversity Displayed In July 4th Fetes

By The AP

In all their diverse and sometimes odd ways, Americans wrapped their land in red, white and blue this weekend and conjured up a multitude of Happy Birthdays.

Citizens began logging an expected 17.8 billion miles of holiday travel. They flocked to beaches and state parks. They lined the shores from sea to shining sea.

As July 4 began its westward march from the International Date Line, the mood and the tempo picked up.

In Manhasset Bay off Long Island Sound, a yachtsman noted a rare conviviality, an uncommon courtesy, as small boats hovered near the Bicentennial tall ships of many nations at guest moorings, waiting for today's great nautical parade up the Hudson.

For the last several days, Americans have been doing it their way. In one brief stretch of Constitution Avenue beneath the majesty of the Capitol Dome one hour of one day this week, these three things happened:

Sam Rosenow, 18, and Larry French, 17, wound up an 18-day, 920-mile run from their home town, Manitowoc, Wis., to Washington with a visit to Sen. William Proxmire. They did it, they said, to prove that the Bicentennial was no gimmick.

An array of young people's church groups marched down the avenue, faces bright and smiling, chanting to martial hymns, "Jesus Christ. He's Number One."

When they had passed, police blocked off the avenue for a few minutes to let a small procession of the Vietnam Veterans Against the War cross the street. They chanted, "Two hundred years. Get the Rich Off Our Backs."

Somehow, the avenue named for the U.S Constitution had room for all of them.

In California, Bob Older put out $10,000 for poles, cables and a 67-by 102-foot American flag which he says is the biggest ever. With the aid of a dozen men and a winch he plans to raise it over his Mojave Desert ranch.

In Miramar, Fla., Betty Kapchuk and her children wrapped their home in red, white and blue bunting.

In Washington, D.C., workmen readied 9,000 flags to fly from the Capitol. Each will have its moment of glory, up and down the flagpoles, then off to civic club or school—a flag that flew over the Capitol on July 4, 1976.

In Salt Lake City, one family painted an historical American flag on the bottom of their swimming pool.

In Washington, Joel and Tony Ahlstrom rested after a 58-day, 2,991-mile run from San Francisco's Golden Gate Bridge to the capital. They wore out 10 pairs of shoes. It was their way to carry the message.

In western Illinois, Vernon Moens, a 37-year-old hog farmer, watches over 10 acres of Petunias, planted to recreate in red, white and blue the Betsy Ross flag. He had to plow up 10 acres of oats for his birthday message.

In Ticonderoga, N.Y., the Gerald Vails painted a 40-by 26-foot flag on their lawn. It cost them about $1,000. It was their way to celebrate what Mrs. Vail says is "the most beautiful country in the world."

Meanwhile, the American penchant for superlatives continues unabated, as if the enemy this time were the British Guinness Book of Records.

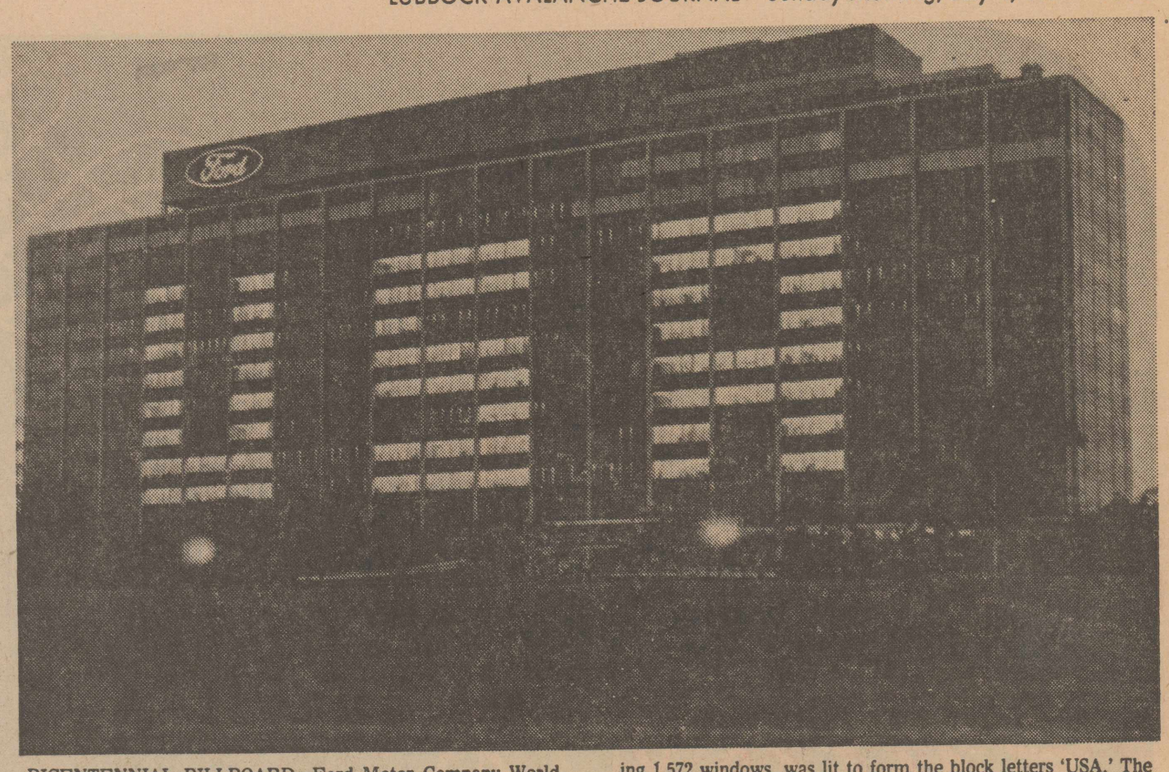

Glenwood Springs, Colo., readied what the Jaycees there say will be the world's largest pancake, 76 inches in diameter. Minneapolis holds the world's largest ice cream social. Ontario, Calif., sets the world's longest picnic table. Los Angeles claims the longest Bicentennial parade. Baltimore claims the world's largest birthday cake, 69,000 pounds, edging out Philadelphia.

And George, Wash., bakes a 60-square-foot cherry pie.

In Nairobi, Kenya, an American woman and her husband plan to fly a Bicentennial kite from the top of 19,340-foot Mt. Kilimanjaro—the highest a kite has flown.

And in Lake City, Pa., Americans have built a landing pad for Unidentified Flying Objects, presumably the first, and ringed it with red, white and blue lights.

With all of that, it should come as no surprise that when the reconstruction of Christopher Columbus' Santa Maria joins the record armada of nearly 300 tall ships in New York Harbor, the man at the helm will be a Spanish sailor on leave. His name: Christopher Columbus XVIII.

BICENTENNIAL BILLBOARD—Ford Motor Company World Headquarters in Dearborn, Mich., became one of the bigger Bicentennial "billboards" Friday night as the building, containing 1,572 windows, was lit to form the block letters 'USA.' The sign, saluting the nation's birthday, was the idea of a Ford employee's five children. (AP Laserphoto)

City Accident Boosts Holiday Death Count

By UPI

The Texas Bicentennial weekend highway fatality count — boosted by three deaths in a Lubbock accident 22 minutes after the holiday period began — Saturday pushed toward Department of Public Safety predictions.

A United Press International survey showed 14 persons had died in traffic mishaps since the 78-hour counting period began at 6 p.m. Friday.

The DPS estimated 42 persons would be killed in traffic accidents in Texas during the Fourth of July holiday.

Frank Erwin Coates Jr., 17, of Wheeler, was killed Saturday morning in a car-truck head-on collision on Texas 152 in Wheeler. Also killed Saturday morning was Cynthia Wilder Johnson, 20, of Vidor. She died in a two-car head-on collision one mile north of Vidor on FM 105.

The three-fatality accident occurred in Lubbock Friday afternoon and killed Joan M. Gilliam, 42, of Lubbock, James Douglas Jr., 27, of Carlisle, and Johnny L. Bean, 27, of Wolfforth.

Another three-fatality accident Saturday killed a McAllen man, a Weslaco woman and her daughter. The accident on U.S. 281 killed Guadalupe Crispin Lesesma, 19, who was alone in his car; Barbara S. Myers, 40; and Gwendolyn Rae Myers, 17, who were passengers in an auto driven by the Rev. Kenneth Ray Myers, who was injured critically. Also critically injured was Lonnie Myers, 11. In fair condidtion was evonne Myers, 10.

Larry Copenhaven, 29, died in a motorcycle accident in Dallas and Mark Erwin Matocha, 27, of Houston, was struck by a car and killed as walking north of Huntsville.

Also killed was Douglas W. Dillard Jr., 15, a passenger in a car which went off a Harris County road Saturday. Darrell A. Monceaux, 23, of Houston, and Frank Wayne Lewis, 17, of Crockett, both died in separate one-car rollovers.

Israeli Commandos Free Hostages From Airport

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Airborne Israeli commandos raided Uganda's Entebbe airport early Sunday and freed all 106 hostages being held by pro-Palestine hijackers of an Air France jetliner, an Israeli army spokesman said.

It was not immediately clear how many casualties there were among the hostages and commandos.

An Air France spokesman in Nairobi, Kenya, where the three Israeli military planes stopped over on their way home, said the commando unit "apparently has eliminated" the hijackers.

He said surgical operations were performed on some wounded persons on the runway of the Nairobi airport.

The raid took place about 12 hours before the 7 a.m. EDT deadline for Israel and four other nations to meet the hijackers' demands of freedom for 53 militants jailed in those nations.

According to the Air France spokesman in Nairobi, there was fighting reported around the old terminal building at Entebbe where the hostages were being held captive.

He reported the Israeli planes flew directly to Uganda from Israel, — 2,500 miles — and landed in Nairobi on their return at about 2:30 a.m. local time (7:30 p.m. EDT).

"Kenyan soldiers surrounded the Israeli planes and prevented our personnel from going near it," the Air France spokesman said, "but one of the Israelis said, 'The operation at Entebbe is over.' From that we gather that the Palestinians have been eliminated."

He said he did not know how many hostages were rescued or how many persons were injured.

He reported the Israeli raiders he saw at Nairobi wore civilian clothes.

An Air France plane that had been prepared for evacuation of the hostages was still standing by in Nairobi.

"Tonight Israel defense forces extracted and freed the hostages including the Air France crew from the airport at Entebbe," an Israeli army communique issued in Tel Aviv said. A military command spokesman told reporters, "As far as we know they were all freed. We do not know if they are all OK."

Most of the hostages, held for a week, were Israelis or Jews of other nationalities. The hijackers had freed 148 other passengers Wednesday and Thursday.

The military command did not say if the commandos encountered resistance from Ugandan soldiers at the airport.

A U.S. State Department spokesman in Washington said, "We have no comment and we're not going to have any...Obviously, we're not involved in this."

The French airplane was commandeered by four hijackers over Greece last Sunday during a flight from Tel Aviv to Paris. After a refueling stop in Benghazi, Libya, the pilot was forced to fly to Uganda, where the hijackers reportedly were joined bh three or four otyrs.

The surprise raid came three days after Israel made a turnabout Thursday and said it was willing to negotiate with the terrorists. Forty of the prisoners the hijackers wanted freed were being held in Israeli jails.

After that, there were meetings of a ministerial group headed by Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin, and Israel kept secret the moves it was making. Diplomats said the Israeli government had been conducting negotiations with the hijackers through intermediaries.

New England Post Office Blasted

SEABROOK, N.H. (UPI) — Security at New England historical sites was stepped up Saturday following the fourth bombing in the area within 24 hours.

The FBI and the state police bomb squad combed the wreckage of the small post office here for a possible link in the series of bombings.

A dynamite bomb tucked on a window ledge next to an air conditioner damaged the inside of the post office and shook this entire seaside resort of 3,000 persons late Friday night.

No injuries were reported in the four blasts.

Postal inspector Irvin Peterson said although the supporting walls and ceiling of the post office were damaged in the blast, he hoped the post odfice could be open by Tuesday. There was no dollar estimate of damage.

Police said "everything was matchsticks" inside the one-story red brick building.

A male caller notified the fire department 18 minutes before the 10:45 p.m. explosion there was a bomb somewhere in the town. The caller said he representd a radical group which also blew up the Newburyport courthouse five miles away in Massachusetts earlier Friday.

Three other explosions Friday in Massachusetts destroyed an Eastern Airlines Electra propjet at Boston's Logan International Airport, wrecked a National Guard truck at a Boston armry and damaged the 171-year-old Essex County Courthouse in Newburyport.

The caller "claimed he was with some militant group but I didn't catch the name of it," Deputy Fire Chief Ernest Sanborn said.

A man identifying himself as a member of the Armed Strike Force of the Palestinian Liberation Organization telephoned United Press International in Boston Saturday and claimed responsibility for the post office bombing.

But a PLO spokesman in New York said his organization had nothing to do with the terrorist act.

UPI received a similiar call Friday from a man who claimed responsibility forthe three Massachusetts bombings. That also was denied by a PLO svkesman in New York.

The post office blast was so intense "it would have been terrible even if someone had been anywhere near outside," a fireman said.

Town officials quoted the FBI and the state police bomb squad as saying the explosion was caused by three sticks of dynamite tucked between a window-mounted air conditioner and the bricks of the window frame.

Gov. Meldrim Thomson said he ordered an around-the-clock guard on the State House and hisofficial residence because of the Massachusetts bombings and concern over recent dynamite thefts.

Police said a quantity of dynamite was stolen from construction sites in Manchester, Nashua and Bow.

Damage in the three Massachusetts bombings was estimated at about $600,000.

Security at Massachusetts' historic sites was increased for the July 4th Bicentennial weekend and will continue through next weekend for the visit of the Tall Ships and Queen Elizabeth.

New Truce Shattered In Lebanon

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — Christian militiamen renewed their all-out attack on a besieged Palestinian refugee camp Saturday, shattering the country's 41st truce even before it was a day old.

The Christians also choked off a Palestinian attempt to break through their rear flank around the Tal Zaatar camp in southeastern Beirut.

American, British and West German officials organized an overland convoy to leave for Damascus this morning, taking more than 200 American, German and other westerners out of the country.

Salah Khalef, Yasser Arafat's chief lieutenant and commander of the Palestinian forces, warned that the fall of Tal Zaatar would turn Lebanon into "a new Vietnam."

"The rightists may take the camp," Khalef said at an emotional late night news conference. "But their occupation of Tal Zaatar will take the term 'cease-fire' out of our dictionary. The area will become a new Vietnam . . . The fire in Lebanon will light the whole Middle East, and many Arab regimes will suffer in the end."

Khalef charged that Interior Minister Camille Chamoun's "tigers" militia, which has led the attack on Tal Zaatar, was receiving tanks and other arms from Israel.

He said both President-elect Elias Sarkis and rightist militia leader Beshir Gemayel had confirmed that Israel is supplying arms to Chamoun's army.

He said Syria was directing the rightsts' military effort. "The rightists are puppets on strings. Syria is our only enemy ... and we are in for a very long war."

Leftist and Palestinian troops attacked Christian strongholds in the central mountains in an attempt to draw rightist strength away from the camp, reports from both sides said.

A rightist radio station said Christian forces beat back a column of about 200 Palestinians and leftists from Araya, 8 miles east of Beirut, but the leftist radio claimed the attackers made "substantial progress in their drive toward the Christian town of Kahhale.

Both sides acknowledged that fighting in the 15-month old war had erupted again, but as usual, accused each other of violating the truce first.

Missouri, Kansas Hit By Flash Flooding

By UPI

National guardsmen, police and civil defense workers evacuated more than 1,000 persons from flooded areas of southwest Missouri and southeast Kansas Saturday, where up to 12 inches of rain hit in just more than 24 hours.

Authorities rescued the flood victims in everything from helicopters to private fishing boats.

Not a single fatality or serious injury had been reported early.

The rains began early Friday, dropping 9 1/2 inches on Beaumont, Kan., and about 7 inches in Joplin, Mo.

The National Weather Service called the 12 1/2 inches of rain in Cherryville, Kan., "more than cquld be expected to occur there oncsin 100 years," and greater than the yearly rainfall for Los Angeles, San Diego or Long Beach.

Jasper County Civil Defense Director Lea Kungle said up to six feet of water flooded the stores in one block of downtown Joplin.

"We have a lot of water and a lot of damage.... It's a mess," said Mrs. Jungle, who with city officials estimated the damage to the downtown area at about $1. million. Officials said damage could be double that amount for the surrounding area.

"There have been cars completely covered, turned over and washed into ditches," she said. "My secretary had it happen to her. She had to get out or she would have died."

Volunteers and national guardsmen continued evacuating persons late Saturday along Shoal Creek, in advance of a crest expected by the Army Corps of Engineers.

The Verdigris and Walnut rivers in southeast Kansas were predicted to crest Saturday night at 43 and 40 feet near Indepedence and Augusta, Kan., according to the National Weather Service.

One observer sud the water in Carthage, Mo., had began to recede Saturday and said the town will be able to "get along pretty well, if it doesn't rain any more."

The flood waters are blamed for a fire in a Joplin car dealership Saturday that damaged 12 cars. Firemen controlled the blaze within an hour despite water 3 1/2 feet deep inside the building.

Newton County Sheriff's Deputy Don Cope in Neosho, Mo., said the flash flooding ended in that area Saturday, but Shoal Creek remained flooded all across the county. Cope said a man in a pickup was washed off a road near Buffalo Creek, and the watr was waist-high earlier in Neosho streets.

In Southern Illinois, Marion reported 3.17 inches of rain since 7 a.m. Friday and some streets in Herrin were flooded. Rainwater closed a couple of highways temporarily in the Carbondale and Murphysboro areas.

Bands of showers and thundershowers extended through the Central Appalachians into New England and the west Gulf Coast states. Much of the nation had cloudy skies, although the rangeland fire index was at a tinder point in the eastern two-thirds of South Dakota.

Briscoe Raps Session For Utility Costs

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Gov. Dolph Briscoe said Saturday he is still not convinced that a special legislative session would solve Texans' problems with soaring utility costs.

"I'm not inclined to call special sessions," the governor told an informal news conference following his appearance at the State Bar of Texas convention.

He was asked about a package of bills sent him by Speaker Bill Clayton, who said enactment of the measures in a special session could save consumers more than 10 per cent in utility costs. Briscoe said the bills were under study by his staff.

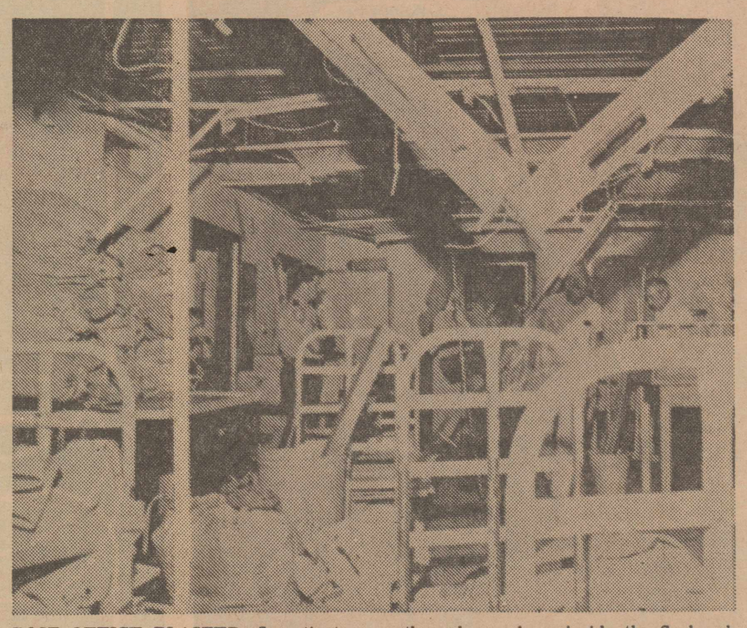

"I want to keep an open mind on the matter," he said, "But I think if you will look at my record you will find I am not a special session-caller (one in three and a half years).

"Before I would call a special session I would have to be convinced of two things — that there would be a substantial decrease in utility bills and that the session would be over in a relatively short period of time.

"I am not convinced of either of those at the present," the governor said.

Briscoe said several matters in the House bills could be put into effect by the Railroad Commission without the need of any additional legislation.

Briscoe also said he had no part in the resignation the past week of Administrator Luke Robinson of the Alcoholic Beverage Commission. He said he appointed Commission member Ed Harlee, San Antonio, "but there was no prior committment for him to fire anyone. I would not make that sort of deal ... I have not talked to anyone on the commission about Robinson."

POST OFFICE BLASTED—Investigators go through wreckage inside the Seabrook, N.H., post office early Saturday following an explosion late Friday. The blast followed one at a court house in nearby Newburyport, Mass., and two in Boston. (AP Laserphoto)

Leftists In Buenos Aires Believed Killed In Revenge For Bombing

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — Security sources said 15 bullet-riddled bodies were found Saturday and may have been those of suspected leftists killed in retaliation for a bombing at a federal police dining hall.

The army said the bomb blast at lunchtime Fiday killed 18 persons and injured 66.

The security sources said the bodies of six men and two women were found in a parking lot less than half a mile from the bombing site in downtown Buenos Aires. Seven more bodies were found in a suburb of the capital.

The latest deaths raised to at least 84 the number killed in political violence last week. At least 477 have died since the military overthrew President Isabel Peron in a bloodless coup last March 24. The year's death toll is placed at 633.

The sources said the latest victims may have been killed by right-wing death squads that usually kidnap and torture student or factory activists, then kill them and dump their bodies.

The rightists have been blamed for more than 2,000 such murders in the last three years. Leftist leaders charge the death squads are linked to the government and made up of uncontrolled security men. The government denies the allegations.

Weekend Political Talk Turns To Veep Candidates

By UPI

With almost no political activity this holiday weekend, talk Saturday turned to speculation on vice presidential candidates in both parties.

The Nashville Banner quoted White House sources as saying President Ford has narrowed his choice for a running mate to his rival, Ronald Reagan, Sen. Howard Baker of Tennessee and John Connally, the former Democratic governor of Texas and treasury secretary who is now a Republican.

The newspaper reported unnamed sources said Ford favors Connally. "We don't think it'll be offered to Reagan. But even if it is, we think Reagan will reject it. A Ford-Reagan ticket would not be the strongest ticket," the source was quoted as saying.

As for Connally, "Big John ... makes it easier for Democrats and independents to vote for the Republican ticket," the source was reported to have said. "He could hang Carter out for all Americans to see what he is. Carter can't grin himself into the White House with someone like Connally on him."

Carter, working on speeches and catching up on reading Saturday at his Georgia farm, will begin interviewing possible running mates this week, press secretary Jody Powell said.

The Democratic nominee-in-waiting will meet with the party's governors Tuesday in Hershey, Pa., and attend a fund-raising dinner in Fort Lauderdale, Fla., Wednesday.

Before leaving for the national convention in New York Saturday, Powell said, Carter will get a haircut and visit a dentist for a checkup of his teeth. "Got to get them polished up for the convention," Powell quipped.

Carter backer Rep. Andrew Young of Georgia, who acknowledges having "really kind of sold him to the liberal community," said in an interview with UPI Carter has more empathy and respect for blacks than the Kennedys, Lyndon Johnson and 1972 presidential nominee George McGovern.

"He grew up with black people, he empathizes very well with poor people generally. He's known the effects of racism and poverty first hand. He didn't learn about it in sociological textbooks."

Ford did no overt politicking. He had a schedule of Bicentennial appearances in Washington, Valley Forge and Philadelphia. He played golf Saturday with comedian Bob Hope and two Washington Redskins football players, Billy Kilmer and Rusty Tillman.

Youth Reigns At Wimbledon

BEATEN TO HIS KNEES — Romania's Ilie Nastase stumbles on the center court Saturday during the finals of the men's singles in the Wimbledon Tennis Championships which was won by Sweden's Bjorn Borg. Borg won, 6-4, 6-2, 9-7. (AP Laserphoto)

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Bjorn Borg demolished Ilie Nastase by sheer speed and power in a sparkling performance Saturday and became the first Scandinavian ever to win Wimbledon.

The athletic Swede raced about the Wimbledon center court and hit top-spin forehands like a demon to crush Nastase 6-4 6-2 9-7 in the men's singles final.

He went through the whole tournament without dropping a set.

At 20 years and one month, Borg is the fourth youngest men's champion since Wimbledon started 99 years ago. Three 19-year-olds have won the title — Wilf Baddeley of Britain in 189., Rene Lacoste of France in 1925 and Sidney Wood ofthe United States in 1931.

While Borg struck a blow for youth, Billie Jean King at 32 failed in a bid to make history. She needed to win the women's doubles with Betty Stove of The Netherlands to break the alltime record of 19 Wimbledon titles she shares with Elizabeth Ryan.

Chris Evert, this year's women's singles champion, and the exiled Czech, Martina Navratilova, beat the King-Stove team 6-1 3-6 7-5 in the final.

King has won six singles and 13 doubles titles since 1961. Miss Ryan won her 19 titles, all in doubles play, between 1914 and 1934.

Nastase, the tempramental 29-year-old Romanian, admitted he feared he had blown his last chance to be a Wimbledon champion. He was in one previous final, losing to Stan Smith in 1972.

Like Borg, Nastase had gone through to the final without losing a set.

Hundreds slept all night on the sidewalks outside the All-England club to see what promised to be a classc final between two of the game's idols.

At first it lived up to its promise. It started with nonstop cut-and-thrust between the two men, but Nastase got an early break and moved to a 3-0 lead.

Borg came back to level at 3-3. He started to hit his relentless top-spin forehands and they flashed past Nastase as the Romanian went adventurously to the net.

The Swede's forehands were rifle-like shots. He hit them so accurately down the lines he might have been looking along a barrel.

At 4-4 Nastase showed the first signs of cracking. He missed with two volleys — one into the net and one out of court — as Borg bombarded him with forehands, and the Swede broke through to lead 5-4.

Nastase played a lot of fine shots. In the next game he saved a set point with a beautifully judged backhand pass, but Borg scored with two service winners and took the set 6-4.

From trailing 3-4 in the first set, Borg won 11 out of 13 games. The Swede was in devastating form, hitting every ball as if he meant to split it in two. He raced through the second set in 21 minutes, breaking Nastase's service in the third and seventh games.

Nastase was not himself. There was never a sign of the temperament that has landed him in so much trouble with umpires and officials—no clowning, no tantrums, no arguing over line calls.

Once, when a service from Borg was called out, Nastase politely insisted on counting it as an ace. He was loudly applauded for this uncharacteristic gesture.

Nastase's fans waited for the blood to start coursing through his veins, but it never happened. He looked nervous and subdued.

Borg began the third set like a world-beater. He hit two blinding forehands and a backhand volley to break service in the opening game, and raced on towards victory.

But when the wede served for the match at 5-4, Nastase launched a late counter-attack and had the crowd roaring with excitement. Nastase led 40-0 against service, but Borg came back to deuce and then had a match point. Nastase saved it with a forehand volley.

The Romanian hit a smash, passed Borg with a backhand and broke back to level at 5-5.

The duel went on to 7-7, then Borg struck the winning blow. He hit a magnificent backhand pass to lead 40-30 on Nastase's service.

COMMITTED TO CHRISTIANITY

Reed Keeping Busy

By RANDY RIGGS
Sports Staff

Summertime, and the living is hectic for Joe Reed, Lorenzo's favorite son.

There are record albums ... singing engagements ... personal appearances ... and the looming spectre of summer camp in the National Football League.

The former Lorenzo Hornet turned Detroit Lion drove into Lubbock Saturday evening on the next-to-last leg of a journey that will take him to the opening of the Lion's pre-season camp a week from today.

Visiting his family that now resides in Lubbock, Reed is scheduled to make a personal appearance tonight at Elgin Avenue Baptist Church. Tuesday, he and his family are off to his wife's home in Mississippi. Then Detroit.

Traveling and tight schedules are nothing new to the Lion quarterback.Reed fills his off-season summer months with numerous committments that give him an opportunity to profess his Christian faith to anyone who wants to listen.

"I'm very committed to it," he said Saturday evening at his father's home while resting from the long car trip from his home near San Francisco.

"I think this is what I've been meant to do. During the summer I usually make appearances to witness around twice a week. The appearances usually are near our home in California because I don't like traveling without my family, but I have gone to Detroit, Canada and Alabama to speak and sing."

The jump from Lorenzo to Detroit — with a stop in between with the San Francisco 49ers — was a long one. After a sparkling prep career Reed went to Baylor, where he stayed two years.

Injuries, and a Baylor passing attack that wasn't conducive to Reed's strong running ability, discouraged the West Texan enough to prompt a transfer to Mississippi State, where he played out his collegiate career.

To Reed, his playing ability was only one contributory ingredient in his jump from Lorenzo to the NFL.

"I'd always wanted to play pro ball, ever since I was a little kid, but I knew the transition would be awfully difficult, especially since I was from a little town.

"It had to be the Lord's will that I was to play pro football. I put it in His hands and He's seen me through."

Although Reed is actively involved in Christian witnessing, he's not a card-carrying member of the Fellowship of Christian Athletes.

"Well, I'm an athlete and I'm a Christian, but I'm not in the FCA because I don't want to be tied to any one particular group.

"I used to have trouble justifying my Christianity and my profession," he added. "I didn't live a bad life, but I wasn't willing to go out and share the faith. As far as justifying my faith with my profession, I believe you can be a non-Christian anyplace or you can be a Christian anyplace. I've chosen the first alternative."

Reed noted that his faith "has helped my to deal with the things that I've had to go through in football. When I step on the field it's good to know someone's with me."

Reed was traded from the 49ers to Detroit midway through the 1974 campaign. Last year, his first full season with the Lions, the quarterback was pressed into duty on several occasions because of injuries to Bill Munson and Greg Landry.

"Last year was the first time I got to play very much and I sure liked the feeling," he said. "As long as I enjoy the game and feel I'm contributing something I would like to stay in it."

The Lions drafted a pair of quarterbacks in the latter rounds of the player draft, then inked a free agent, but Reed said he wasn't nervous about making the team.

"I'm looking forward to having a good year," he said. "Landry and Munson are coming off injuries so I think I can help them. The Lions carry three quarterbacks and I'm confident I'll be the third."

Reed is still unsure about his future once he elects to retire from football.

"I'm not a preacher, I know that," he admitted. "I recorded an album recently and I would like to continue with my music. If I could make a living at it and support my family, then that would be an attractive alternative."

The album is called "The Lion In Me." The Detroit Lions, claims Reed, have nothing to do with it.

Relaxed Hill Assumes Four-Shot GMO Lead

MILWAUKEE (AP) — A relaxed Dave Hill, maintaining superb consistency, fired a four-under-par 68 Saturday for a 15-under total of 201 and a four-stroke lead after three rounds of the $130,000 Greater Milwaukee Open golf tournament.

Hill, one stroke behind second-round leader Fuzzy Zoeller at the start of the third round, overtook the young second-year pro on the third hole and mounted his lead despite his first two bogeys of the tournament. Homero Blancas also shot a third-round 68 and was runnerup at 205.

(Complete Results, Page 6)

Zoeller, former Indiana amateur champion, bogeyed his last two holes for a 74 over the 7,010-yard Tuckaway Country Club course. He was tied for third at 206 with Ed Sneed, who won here in 1974, and Johnny Jacobs.

"I'd like to win tomorrow, but I don't really give a damn, I really don't," said Hill, known for a fiery temperament. "Golf should be fun," he said. "The game basically isn't that important. Winning really isn't that important.

"It used to a religion, but not anymore. I'm looking forward to when I can quit."

Hill, who shot 66 and 67 in his first two rounds, is emerging from what he descibed as a 17-month slump, although he came here ranked 38th among this year's money winners with $44,195 and has made the cut in all 18 tournaments that he has entered.

"But I've been grinding for every quarter I made," said Hill, whose 12th tournament victory in 18 years on the tour was in last year's Sahara Invitational.

"Nothing has come easy. I've managed to make cuts, but I wasn't making much money."

Hill, 39, described his third round as "a lot of fun."

"I played the first eight holes like I'd like to play the rest of my life," he said. "The wind wore me down a little after that and I didn't feel quite as comfortable, but I felt I could have had six birdies between the second and seventh holes."

Hill missed what he described a "simple" birdie putts of 18 feet on No. 3 six feet on No. 6. However, he sank birdie putts of 30 feet on 16 and 1 feet on Nos. 5 and 12.

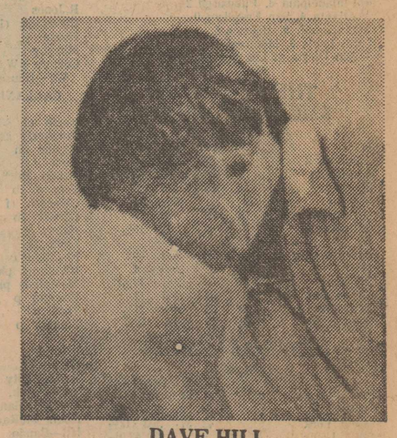

Blancas, who had been in a five-way tie at seven under after two rounds, said the crosswinds which sprung up Saturday affected his strategy.

"The wind was never really right in front or in back of me, but always seemed to be over either my left or right shoulder," Blancas said. "I would have to shoot over the left or the right of the bunkers and let the wind bring it back to the hole.

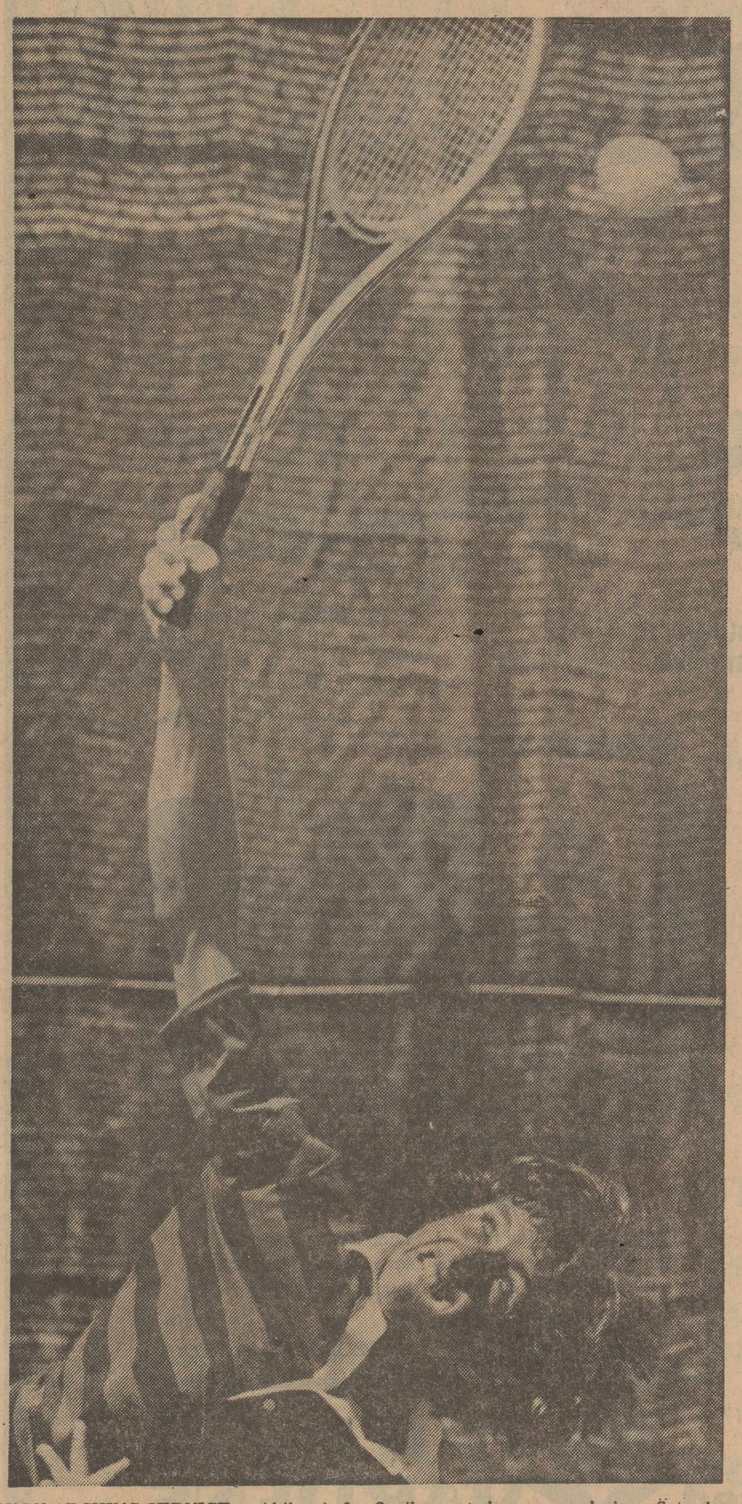

"When you become a veteran player you know which holes to attack and which to play more conservatively," said Blancas, who has won four tournaments in 13 years on the tour.

Jacobs, who had a bogey and five birdies on his first seven holes, finished with a 70 Saturday while Sneed shot 69.

Next, bracketed at seven-under 209, were 1975 U.S. Open champion Lou Graham, along with Fred Marti, Joe Porter and Bill Kratzert.

Durbin Captures Early PBA Edge

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Mike Durbin averaged 233 for his first six games to take the first round lead Saturday in the $60,000 Southern California Open bowling tournament at Keystone Lanes.

Durbin, five-time Professional Bowlers Association champion from Chagrin Falls, Ohio had a total pinfall of 1,403 which was 22 pins better than the 1,381 rolled by Jeff Mattingly, Tacoma, Wash.

Rounding out the top five were Doug Heim, Tonawanda, N.Y., 1,349; Gary Dickinson, Ft. Worth, 1,347 and Wayne Chester, San Mateo, Calif. 1,341.

Gardner, Toney Chosen First Team All-State

A-J News Services

HOUSTON — Lubbock was represented by two performers on the Texas High School Baseball Coaches' Association Class AAAA all-state team announced here Saturday.

Lubbock High third baseman Kenny Toney made the first team of the elite group, as did Monterey pitcher Scott Gardner.

Gardner, a hard-throwing righthkder, was selected as the only pitcher on the first team of the statewide squad.

Toney is headed to Lubbock Christian College on a baseball scholarship, while Gardner is going to the University of Oklahoma after spurning an offer by the Milwaukee Brewers, who recently drafted him in the third round.

State runnerup South San Antonio placed two players on the team and two-time champion Duncanville landed one player.

Clark Passing By Lubbock Foes

By TOM HALLIBURTON
Sports Staff

There's one guy at the Lubbock Open Tennis Tournament who plays like he doesn't belong here at all. And the message has circulated quickly.

The noise centers around Randall Clark, who has roared through the bottom bracket of the men's singles division at the local tournament. Clark, a University of Arizona tennis player, is just passing through town.

Clark is headed east to participate in an eastern satellite tennis circuit sponsored by American Express. He was red-shirted during the spring because of aknee injury but he still has two years of eligibility at Arizona.

"I'm just playing here to stay mentally tough before I get to the east," Clark said. "No matter how much you practice, you have to play the tournaments to get mentally tough."

Clark disposed of former Albuquerque high school classmate, Frank Wolak 6-2, 6-1 in the quarter-finals. He had defeated Mesilla Park's Jim Noble 6-4, 6-2 in an earlier Saturday match.

Now, today's big semifinal pits Clark against state Class AAAA singles champ Rick Meyers. Meanwhile, Abilene's Joe Williams cruised through his matches in the top half of the draw. Williams defeated Lubbock's Jim Clark 6-0, 6-1 and Abilene's Jack Wilson to enter the semifinals.

While the men's division reduced down to the semifinal stage, the women's activites have been dominated by two names — Jana Hanks and Karen Schuchard.

The pair of Abilene girls reached the finals in both the womens open singles and the women's 18 singles. They had the option of playing one match today for both divisional titles but chose to play separate matches.

And if you think that's odd, take a look at the first bracket in the men's singles where Wilson has defeated Hemmeline twice. Abilene's Jack Wilson defeated Lubbock's Dave Hemmeline in the third round 6-3, 6-1. Later in the day, Wilson won a fourth round 6-0, 6-4 over Lubbock's Mark Hemmeline.

But the oddest part of all may be the seedings in the men's singles championship. Meyers wasn't even seeded in the tourney and has played four matches.

"It seems like all the good players in the tournament are in the lower bracket except for Joe (Williams). Clark is a real good player, especially his ground strokes," Meyers said.

"I haven't been playing a lot lately except for a tournament last weekend in Midland. I got into the finals of it and lost. But I've spent most of my time working at a tennis camp," Meyers said.

The camp, a four-week summer tennis instruction session in Abilene is run by Williams. And a Williams-Meyers finale looms as a possibility today. However, the strong lefty from Arizona may spoil that possibility.

All women's finals will be played today at Monterey High School with the singles starting at 10 a.m. and the doubles at 1 p.m.

Rangers Blank Chisox 3-0; KC Keeps On Winning

By The AP

Righthander Nelson Briles allowed only three hits, pitching the Texas Rangers to a 3-0 victory over the Chicago White Sox in an unusual morning game. which began at 10:30 CDT Saturday.

Briles, 7-5, struck out seven and walked three in shackling the White Sox, who had scored only one run in each of their four previous games.

Briles didn't allow a hit until Jim Spencer singled opening the fifth and worked his way out of a tough spot in the sixth when the Sox threatened on a walk and a double by Rich Coggins. Jorge Orta got Chicago's other hit, a double in the ninth.

The Rangers jumped ahead in the first inning against Terry Forster, 1-5, when Gene Clines singled, went to second on a sacrifice by Danny Thompson and scored on Toby Harrah's two-out single.

Texas added a run in the second on a pair of walks and a run-scoring single by Clines off relief pitcher Pete Vuckovich. The Rangers got their final run in the ninth on Juan Beniquez' single and Jim Sundberg's triple.

The shutout was Briles' first of the season and his fifth complete game.

YANKS 7, INDIANS 3

Mickey Rivers and Roy White smashed home runs to lead New York to a 7-3 victory over Cleveland.

The victory, the second straight by the Yankees over the Indians, moved New York eight games ahead of Cleveland in the American League East.

Ken Holtzman, 6-6, gave up 10 hits and all three Cleveland runs but was staked to a 6-1 lead through four innings.

The Yankees scored four runs in the third inning off Cleveland starter Don Hood, 2-5. Rivers led off with his fifth homer of the season. White walked and came around on singles by Thurman Munson and Lou Piniella.

Chris Chambliss followed with an infield hit, loading the bases and, after Hood got a 3-1 count on Graig Nettles, Jim Bibby was brought in to relieve. Bibby walked home Munson on his first pitch and gave up another run on a double-play grounder by Fran Healy.

BREWERS 6, BOSOX 2

Milwaukee scored six runs in the seventh inning and Jim Colborn scattered six hits in a 6-2 victory over Boston.

With the Brewers losing 2-0, Don Money singled with one out in the seventh to trigger their winning rally. Reggie Cleveland relieved starter Rick Jones and fanned George Scott, but then walked Hank Aaron and Sixto Lezcano followed with a single to left, scoring Money.

Cleveland walked Bernie Carbo to load the bases and pinchhitter Von Joshua also walked, bringing in Aaron with the tying run.

ROYALS 7, A'S 5

Hal McRae smashed two doubles and a single and scored two runs as Kansas City downed Oakland 7-5.

Right-hander Dennis Leonard, 8-3, scattered eight hits before needing last-out relief help from Steve Mingori.

Trailing 2-1 going into the bottom of the fourth, the Royals took a 4-2 lead with a tworun double by Al Cowens and Fred Patek's RBI single.

The A's tied the score on a two-run single in the sixth by Don Baylor. The Royals loaded the bases against Jim Todd, 6-7, in the sixth, and Frank White put the Royals on top with a two-run single into center field. Jim Wohlford followed with an RBI single.

Sal Bando's solo home run in the seventh, his 17th home run of the year and seventh in seven games, made it 7-5.

TWINS 2, ANGELS 0

Minnesota's Bill Singer limited the California Angels to five singles, three of them by Bruce Bochte, and outdueled Nolan Ryan for a 2-0 shutout.

Singer, 7-3, was in trouble only twice. In the fifth the Angels had two runners on with none out and in the seventh they loaded the bases with one out but Singer used pop-ups both times to get out of trouble.

Ryan, 6-9, struck out eight and gave up only four hits but three of them came in the third inning when the Twins scored both their runs. He walked five and appeared to be struggling throughout the game.

CARDS 9, EXPOS 0

Willie Crawford collected three hits and drove in two runs and Ted Simmons smashed a two-run triple to lead a 14-hit attack as St. Louis whipped Montreal 9-0 behind John Denny's seven-hit pitching.

The Cardinals scored four runs in the first inning off Expos starter Steve Rogers, 2-6, added a run in the third and erupted for four more in the seventh against Fred Scherman, the third of four Montreal pitchers.

Singles by Jerry Mumphrey, Don Kessinger and Lou Brock triggered the Cards' attack before Simmons unloaded his two-run triple in the first inning. Crawford's RBI single capped the rally.

PHILLIES 3, BUCS 2

Mike Schmidt's two-out single scored Dave Cash from second base in the ninth inning and lifted the Philadelphia Phillies to a 3-2 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates.

The Phillies' triumph ended Pittsburgh's four-game winning streak and boosted Philadelphia back to nine full games ahead of the second-place Pirates in the National League East.

Cash singled off reliever Bob Moose with one out in the ninth and went to second when Larry Bowa grounded out. Schmidt then lined his game-winning hit to left field and Cash just beat Richie Zisk's throw to the plate with a head-first slide between the legs of catcher Manny Sanguillen.

The Phils had taken a 2-0 lead against Pittsburgh starter Doc Medich on a bases-loaded walk to pitcher Tom Underwood in the fourth and a sacrifice fly by Garry Maddox in the sixth.

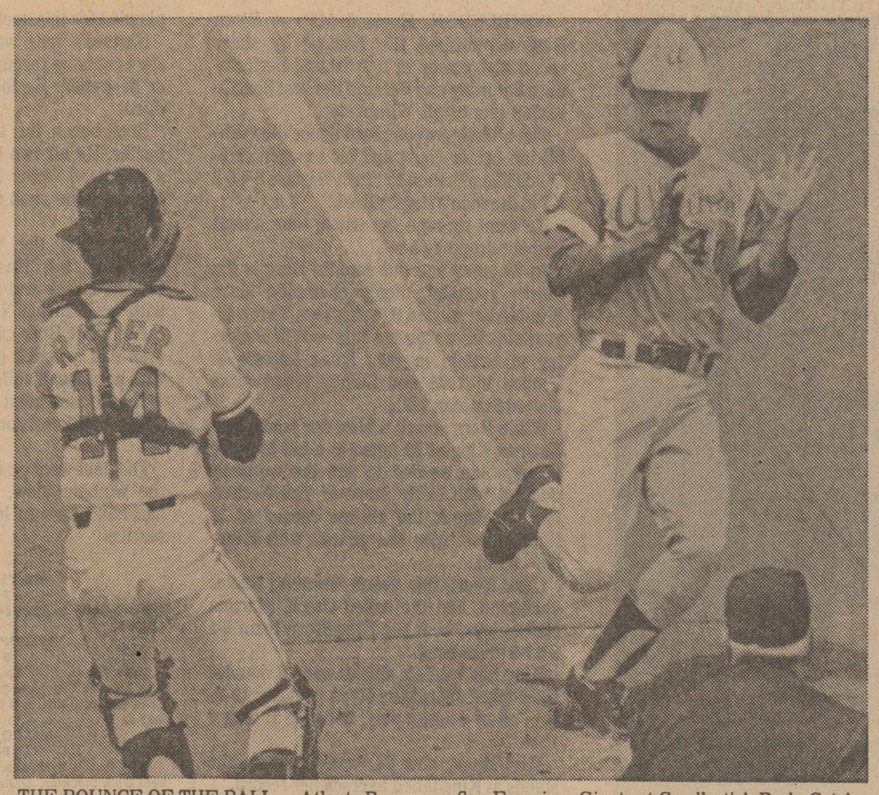

The Pirates scored their first run in the bottom of the sixth when hot-hitting Al Oliver, who had two singles and a double in three official times at bat, walked and came around on singles by Zisk and Bill Robinson.

REDS 9, ASTROS 8

Johnny Bench tied the game with a solo home run and then drove in the winning run in the eighth with a grounder, lifting the Cincinnati Reds to a 9-8 victory over the Houston Astros.

Bench's dribbler, momentarily bobbled by third baseman Enos Cabell, scored Ken Griffey, who had opened the inning with an infield hit, advanced to second on a passed ball and stole third.

Earlier, Bob Bailey drove in four runs for Cincinnati with two homers, including a three-run blast, to help the Reds snap a three-game losing streak.

Pedro Borbon, 2-1, blanked the Astros the last two innings to pick up the victory. The loser was Joe Niekro, 3-7.

TIGERS 4, ORIOLES 0

Rookie sensation Mark "The Bird" Fidrych fired a four-hitter for his first shutout, while Rusty Staub slammed a three-run homer and Jason Thompson hit a solo blast to send Detroit to a 4-0 victory over Baltimore.

A crowd of 51,032, second largest of the season at Tiger Stadium, poured out mostly to see Detroit's newest hero, Fidrych. They weren't disappointed.

"The Bird" was in command all the way in winning his eighth consecutive game and raising his record to 9-1. It was his ninth complete game in 10 starts. His only incomplete game was a victory and his only loss was a 2-0 complete-game outing against Boston.

It was an easy job for the fidgety right-hander once Staub smashed a three-run homer in the opening inning off Mike Cuellar, 4-9. The homer, Staub's sixth, bounced off the upper deck facing of the right-center field bleachers following a single by Ron LeFlore and a walk to Tom Veryzer.

Thompson's homer led off the Tiger fourth. It was a towering drive that bounced off the roof of the third deck in right field, missing flying out of the stadium by a foot or so.

Baltimore's biggest threat came when the Orioles loaded the bases in the fourth inning with nobody out. But Fidrych, eliciting pandemonium from the crowd, struck out Lee May and Andre Mora, then got Mark Belanger to ground out.

Chants of "Go Bird Go! Go Bird Go!" came from the crowd in the late innings as the shutout seemed imminent.

BRAVES 4, GIANTS 0

Dick Ruthven fired a five-hitter for his 10th victory and the Atlanta Braves capitalized on 12 walks for a 4-0 victory over the San Francisco Giants.

Ruthven, who has allowed the Giants one earned run in 23 innings this season, drew a walk leading off the third and scored the game's first run on a sacrifice fly by Craig Robinson.

Rowland Office singled in the same inning and scored on a passed ball following a pair of walks. Rob Belloir's double and three straight walks off loser John D'Aquisto, 0-5, added a run in the fourth.

The Braves ended the scoring with an unearned run in the seventh. Jim Wynn, who walked with the bases loaded in the fourth, opened the seventh with a walk and scored on catcher Dave Rader's throwing error on Ken Henderson's stolen base.

Ruthven, 10-7, posted his second shutout of the season over the Giants and improved his record to 3-0 against San Francisco.

METS 3, CUBS 2

Bud Harrelson opened the bottom of the 10th inning with triple and scored on a wild pickoff throw to first base by relief pitcher Darold Knowles to give the New York Mets a 3-2 victory over the Chicago Cubs for their ninth straight victory.

After Harrelson's drive over the head of right fielder Jerry Morales, starting pitcher Rick Reuschel issued intentional walks to pinch hitter Joe Torre and Mike Phillips, loading the bases.

Knowles came on and struck out Bruce Boisclair. But in trying to pick Mike Phillips off first base, Knowles' throw got away from first baseman Pete LaCock and Harrelson raced home, saddling the Cubs with their eighth consecutive defeat.

Chicago tied the score in the ninth when Morales hit the first pitch of the inning from Tom Seaver for his ninth home run of the season.

Cowboys' Camp To Open

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (AP) — The Super Bowl X runnerup Dallas Cowboys open their training camp Monday at California Lutheran College and Coach Tom Landry says "It will be tough to attain the same success we had last year."

The 1975 Cowboys were supposed to be a rebuilding team yet stunned the National Football League with a 10-4 season and entered the playoffs as a wild card. Dallas defeated Minnesota and Los Angeles in the National Conference playoffs before losing to Pittsburgh in the Super Bowl.

"We won't surprise many people this time," said Landry. "When you come out of the Super Bowl everyone expects you to be as good as you were getting there. This doesn't mean it is impossible for us to get there again.

"I think we will be able to tell when we leave training camp."

Dallas' first pre-season game is at Oakland July 31.

The regular season opener is in Texas Stadium on Sunday, Sept. 12, against the Philadelphia Eagles.

Soviet Junior Thins Top U.S.

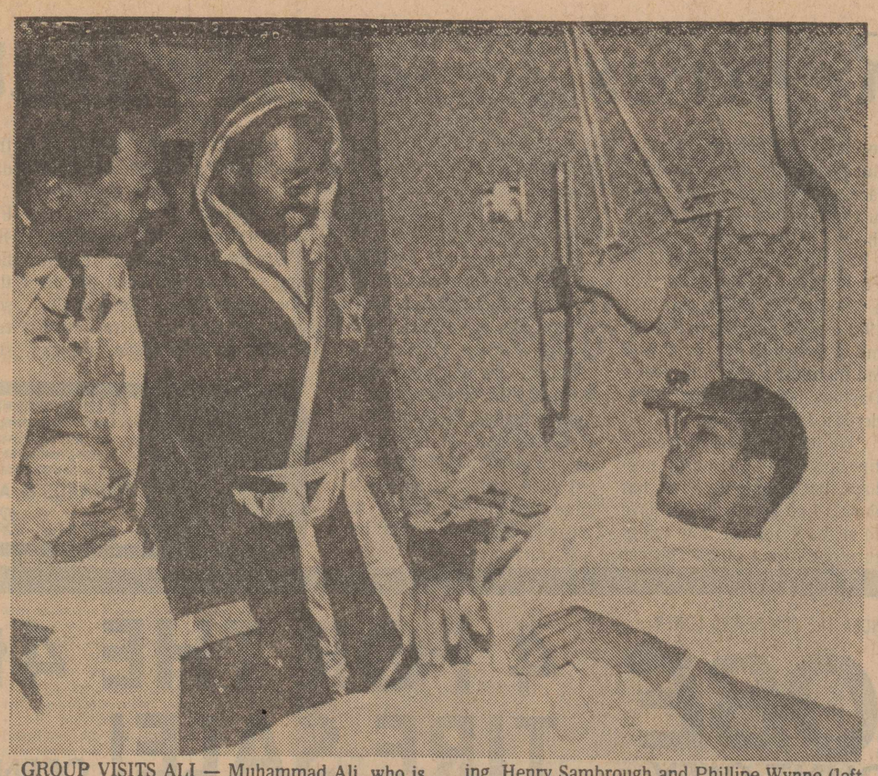

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union's junior track and field team beat the United States 213½-163½ in a two-day competition that ended Saturday, according to the Soviet news agency Tass.

Tass said the Soviets won the men's competion 123½-109½ and the Russian women beat the Americans 90-54.

The score of the meet, held in Tallinn, Estonia, was 92½-84½ at the end of Friday's competition.

Among the American stars was Michael Kee, 18, of Dorchester, Mass. and Southern Illinois University, who won a special trophy at the end of the meet for his 10-second finish in the 100-meter dash.

It was the fifth meet between the Soviet and American junior track and field teams.

Olympic Controversy About Taiwan Rages

By The AP

The controversy over Taiwan's participation in the Summer Olympics in Montreal continued Saturday but threats by the International Olympic Committee to withdraw sponsorship and by the United States to withdraw its team were apparently dead.

An IOC spokesman was quoted Thursday as saying the organization, angered by the Taiwan situation, was considering withdrawing support from the Games, a move which would have reduced the whole business to "just another track meet," in the words of United States Olympic Committee spokesman Bob Paul.

The United States said it wanted no part of such a competition and threatened to pull out if the IOC withdrew its support.

But Lord Killanin, IOC President, announced Friday that the Committee had no intention of pulling out of the Games and had never "even suggested privately it would take such action."

That statement seemed to satisfy U.S. officials. "Since the president of the IOC has clarified his position that the IOC will not withdraw recognition, sanction or patronage of the Games, there should no longer be a question of U.S. team participation in Montreal."

The situation which triggered the IOC and USOC threats remained usettled. Glen Shortliffe, a spokesman for Canada's Internal Affairs Department, kicked off this latest Olympic controversy Thursday when he announced that Taiwan's athletes would not be allowed to compete in the Games as Nationalist China. Canadian officials said the Tawianese would not be permitted to fly their flag or play their anthem.

The restrictions were the result of Canada's attempts to improve relations with the People's Republic of China. Canada recognizes the People's Republic of China—Red China—and does not recognize the Republic of China—Taiwan.

Negative reaction to the Canadian government's action continued to pour in Saturday. The International Amateur Athletic Federation and the International Judo Federation, both based in London, issued protests, joining a host of other groups in berating Canada for injecting politics into the Olympics.

Meanwhile, Taiwan officials said the country's 51-member Olympic team plans to proceed to Montreal as originally planned.

Pates Play Key Roles

BIRKDALE, England (AP) — Jerry Pate, America's new golf hero, has a heavy old score to settle when he plays in the British Open Championship over the Royal Birkdale links this week.

Last year, when he still was an amateur, Pate played for the United States team in the Walker Cup matches against Britain at St. Andrews and set a wrong kind of record. He was the first American in the history of the series to lose all four matches —two foursomes and two singles.

The tall, lean 22-year-old Floridian, following his recent triumph in the U.S. Open, will be the center of attraction when the British classic starts over Birkdale's 7,001-yard, par 34-38—72 course Wednesday.

But Jack Nicklaus will start as the favorite—as he always does in Britain. You can go into the betting shops in any British town and bet on Nicklaus at 5-1.

Next on the bookies' lists are Johnny Miller, 8-1; Hale Irwin and Tom Weiskopf, each 12-1; Gary Player, 14-1, and Lee Trevino, 16-1.

British Open Upcoming

Whatever success Pate has in the tournament, another Pate will play a big part in it. Doug Pate, Birkdale's greenskeeper, has supervised a massive rehabilitation job on the famed links following a damaging series of droughts.

Many of the long fairways have been returfed in the last year. Pate and his men also have reconstructed some of the bunkers, many of which were in such a bad state that when a golf ball pitched into the face of one, it did not hold.

The course is reported in good condition again now, but it is tougher to play than when Arnold Palmer won his first British Open here in 1961, or when Trevino edged Liang Huan Lu of Taiwan by one stroke in 1971.

The 450-yard first hole now is a par four instead of a par five. The sixth hole, 468 yards, which used to be a five, also is rated a four.

One of the most notorious bunkers on any British course, guarding the left approach to the green at the 184-yards 12th, now is more difficult than ever. Players used to pitch near it from the tee and escape. Now they must land on the left hand side of the green or go into the trap.

Like many of Britain's seaside golf courses, Birkdale changes dramatically with the weather. If the recent fine and calm weather continues, it will be good for the big hitters.

When the Open was first played here in 1954, Peter Thomson of Australia won the title. There was so little wind that he went around for four days hitting off most of the tees with a three-wood.

Thomson won again at Birkdale in 1965. Palmer and Trevino were the other British Open champions here.

Nicklaus won the British Open at Muirfield, Scotland, in 1966 and at St. Andrews in 1970.

Stamp Wins Mat Match

Ricky Romero and Davey O'Hannon both were counted outside the ring Friday night in their half of the double main evernt wrestling action at Fair Park Coliseum.

The Super Destroyer topped Larry Lane in a semifinal bout, and the duo of Pez Whatley and Abe Jacabs defeated The Lawman and Wayne Hammer in tag team action.

Reggie Parks and Jerry Kozak wrestled to a ten-minute time draw n the opening match.

This Friday, with action starting at 8:30 p.m., Ricky Romero and Davey O'Hannon will square off in a Texas Death Match. Champion Dennis Stamp will meet challenger Pez Whatley in a brass knucks title bout, while in the tag team event, Rip Hawk and Sweed Hanseon will face Reggie Parks and Jerry Kozak.

Firecracker Revives Friendly Duel

The $170,000 Firecracker 400 Grand National stock car race here today is the first appearance for the long-time friendly archrivals since Pearson won the February Daytona 500 in a wild, wall-smashing finish with Petty.

The prospect of a rematch between NASCAR's all-time leading money and race winners is expected to lure a record crowd for the race, which begins at 9 a.m. to beat some of the summer heat.

Neither driver knows whether the race will come down to a last lap duel between them again, but both have gone out of the way to express hope there is no repeat of February's finish.

"It was something else for the fans, but it didn't do much for me," said Petty, who futilely tried to restart his crumpled Dodge only a few feet from the start-finish line.

"That was a once-in-a-life-time thing, and I hope that was the once," added Pearson, who kept his battered Mercury running and creaked along to victory.

Statistics are not entirely against a repeat of the fabled finish, since Pearson has won seven times and Petty has been second five times this season. But the shorter distance of this race should mean more than just two cars will be fighting for the lead at the finish.

Pole position winner A.J. Foyt hasn't gone the distance in a 500-mile NASCAR race since 1972. But he only has to last 400 miles today, so the man who led the most laps of this year's Daytona 500 has to be considered a definite threat.

"We've had a lot of trouble finishing races, a lot of mishaps, but I think my crew has done a fine job. We'll just have to sit back and see how things turn out," Foyt said. "This car was fastest on qualifying day last February, but it didn't win the race.

Petty is the defending champion, but the all-time stock car king — making his 700th Grand National start — hasn't won since Feb. 29. That's the longest victory drought for the six-time national champion that anyone, including Petty himself, can remember.

"We were running all right at the beginning of the season, but rules changes since then haven't favored us," Petty said.

In recent weeks, however, Petty has seemed to be regaining some of the speed lost to the rules changes. He won the pole position for a race two weeks ago in Michigan, and his third-place starting position today is his best here in years.

Petty's victory in last year's Firecracker, the world's richest 400-mile race, was a first for him and one of the few races that had eluded his grasp. Pearson, meanwhile, has won this race four times, including three straight through 1974.

JUST MISSES — Janet Guthrie, of New York City, winces after learning her qualifying run at Daytona Speedway Saturday was 172.120 m.p.h., just short of the women's closed course record set by Paula Murphy at 172.344 m.p.h. Guthrie easily qualified for today's Firecracker 400 race. (AP Laserphoto)

Rutherford, Guthrie Make Field

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Johnny Rutherford, reigning Indianapolis 500 champion, topped second-day qualifiers Saturday for the final 20 starting spots in the July 4th Firecracker 400 stock car race.

Janet Guthrie, another Indy car driver, was 14th fastest on the day and earned 34th position in the 40-car grid. She later moved up one spot when 30th place qualifier Ed Negre had his time disallowed for using illegal equipment. Officials gave first alternate Dick May permission to move into the field.

Rutherford, hampered by transmission troubles in Friday's qualifying for the top 20 spots, roared back with a lap at 179.034 miles per hour in his Chevrolet. The speed was eighth fastest over-all.

Rutherford had an even better second lap going on his two-lap time trial, but had to shut off the engine just short of the finish line.

Rookie Ricky Rudd was second fastest at 175.977 m.p.h. in another Chevrolet.

Oddly, Rutherford's and Rudd's Chevrolets were both recently purchased from the DiGard Racing Team, for which Darrell Waltrip drives. Waltrip qualified Friday, only slightly faster than Rudd.

Golfers Face Slim Slate

The schedule is slim for golfing enthusiasts this weekend across the South Plains area, but a quality event — the Plainview Invitational Partnership — heads the list.

Other partnerships lined up for next weekend are Snyder's Earl Fish affair and Oldham County CC's best-ball tournament. Both tournaments are Saturday and Sunday, while Plainview's is a three-day meet starting on Friday.

Junior golf activity is at a peak as Meadowbrook Municipal hosts the three-day city championships starting on Tuesday. Also, the West Texas PGA's junior tour stops at five courses this week.

Plainview's field of 96 teams is complete. After Friday's play the field will be broken down into six flights. The top four teams in each flight will receive merchandise awards.

Defending champions John Farquhar and Steve Sloan are missing from this year's lineup. Several of the contending teams expected to replace Sloan-Farquhar are Jeff Mitchell and Rex Robertson of Lubbock and Jack Williams of Plainview and J.B. White of Lubbock.

There will be 9 a.m. and 2 p.m. shotgun starts all three days. On Saturday morning, the championship, first and second flights tee off, while the remaining three groups take to the course in the afternoon. On Sunday, the lineup will be changed to allow the top three flights afternoon tee off times.

Snyder CC still needs 14 teams to fill its field. The entry fee is $60 per team. There will be four flights, which will be determined by lowest handicap of the twosome. Merchandise will be awarded to the top three teams in each flight.

Both days will feature shotgun starts at 9 a.m and 2 p.m.

Ten teams are needed to complete the 60-team field at Oldham CC in Vega. The entry fee is $50 a team and the flights will be determined by lowest handicap of each twosome. Both days will have shotgun starts of 9 a.m. and 2:30 p.m.

The junior city championship is open to those yokgsters will have high school eligibility remaining. The tourney will be 54-hole stroke play (18 holes each on Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday), while age groups 12 and under will play only 27 holes.

The entry fee is $2 and entries close Monday at 7 p.m. at Meadowbrook Muny. Trophies will be awarded in each age group.

The West Texas Chapter junior tour starts Monday at Hunsley Hills in Canyon, followed by Farwell CC (Tuesday), John Pitman G.C. in Hereford (Wednesday), Tascosa CC (Thursday), and Amarillo G.C. (Friday).

The entry fee is $2 and open to any golfer, boy or girl, with high school eligibility. All tournaments start at 9 a.m. and the top two finishers in each age group receive trophies.

Meadowbrook is also host of the Men's City Championship, slated for July 24-25. Entries open Tuesday and will close on the 21st at 7 p.m. The entry fee for the 36-hole individual stroke-play tournament is $15.

The field will be limited to 240 players and only those players with established handicaps, at a local course, will be accepted. Players desiring to play with handicaps will be competing in the championship flight.

Sun Devil Cager Cut

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Mark Landsberger of Arizona State was cut Saturday from the United State Olympic basketball team, the final cut by Coach Dean Smith.

Only 12 players are allowed on each team when they arrive in Montreal for the Olympic games later this month. The United States team will open against Italy July 18.

The cut leaves the team with seven players from the Atlantic Coast Conference. Five of them are from North Carolina schools and three of them play under Smith at the University of North Carolina.

"Making this cut was even more difficult than making the first one. Mark had become a member of the team, both on and off the court," Smith said.

"This cut wasn't based on performance as much as on position. Mark could certainly help us in Montreal. However, we felt we had to cut a forward because that position had been stacked with so many players by the selection committee," Smith said.

Players on the Olympic team are: Phil Hubbard, 6-foot-7, of Michigan; Scott May, 6-foot-7 of Indiana; Quinn Buckner, 6-foot-3 of Indiana; Kenny Carr, 6foot-7 of North Carolina State; Phil Ford, 6 foot-2, of UNC; Tommy LaGarde, 6-foot-10, of UNC; Ernie Grunfeld, 6 foot-6, of Tennessee; Steve Sheppard, 6-foot-6, of Maryland; Mitch Kupchak, 6-foot-10, of UNC; Tate Armstrong, 6-foot-3, of Duke; Adrian Dantley, 6-foot-5 of Notre Dame; and Walter Davis, 6-foot-5, of UNC.

Detroit Gambles On Buckner

DETROIT (AP) — The Detroit Lions have drafted star Indiana basketball player Quinn Buckner to try out as a defensive back if he decides not to play professional basketball.

Duo Tied At 138 In LPGA

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. (AP) — Sandra Palmer fired a four-under-par 67 Saturday to share the lead with JoAnne Carner going into the final round of the $50,000 Ladies Professional Golf Association Bloomington Bicentennial Classic.

Miss Palmer and Mrs. Carner, who shot a par 71 on the 5,970-yard Lake Monroe Golf Club Course, are knotted at 138, two strokes ahead of Kathy Ahern, Gloria Ehret and tour veteran Kathy Whitworth.

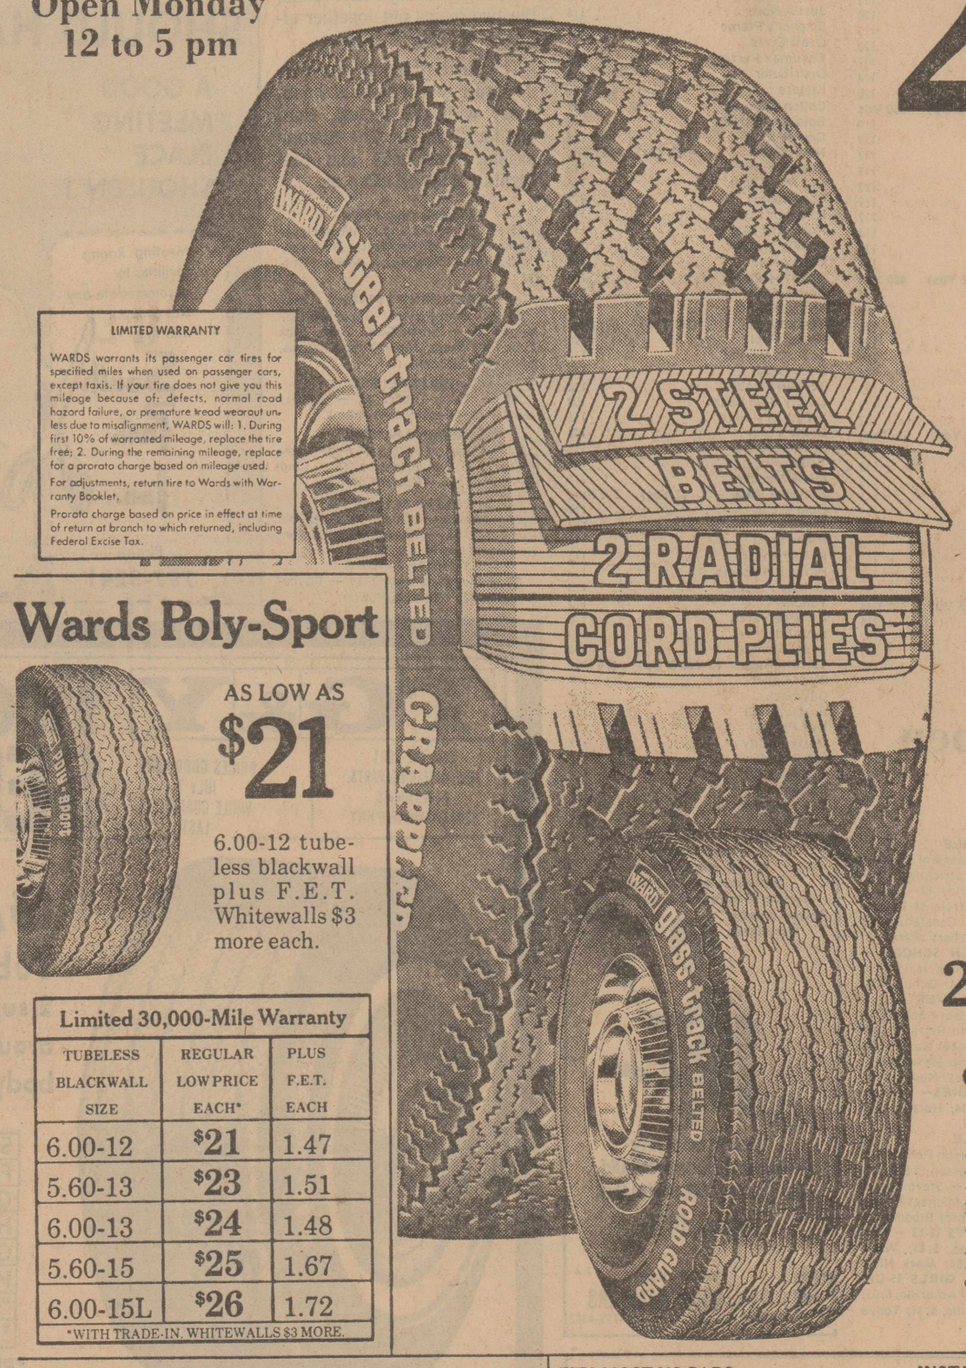

Laura Baugh, Dot Germain and Kathy Martin were tied at 141, and favorite Judy Rankin had a 71 for a two-day total of 142.

Moss Tops LCC Golf

The way Jobe Moss has been playing golf the last month, it's really no surprise that he holds a five-stroke lead after Saturday's first round of the Lubbock Country Club men's championship.

Moss, who partnered with LCC member Bucky Sheffield for wins in the Hillcrest Swinger and Reese Partnership in June, started off slow Saturday but came around with a five-under-par 67 for his lead. He was the only golfer in the 34-man championship flight to better par.

Trailing the streaking Moss is a trio of golfers, headed by none other than Sheffield, at 72 — even par for the 6,767-yard layout. Also tied with Sheffield is defending champion John Farquhar and John Mankins.

Moss, who also finished second in the Men's West Texas last month, was two-over after five holes. But he cranked it up with three birdies on the last four holes on the front side.

He didn't have trouble after that, scoring birdies on holes 10, 11, 15 and 18.

The tournament continues its action today starting at 9:59 a.m. The championship and fifth flights are stroke play, while the first through fourth flights are involved in match play.

The 54-hole tournament winds up play on Monday.

NFL Camps To Begin

By The AP

With the baseball season almost half over, can the pro football campaign be far behind?

The Philadelphia Eagles opened the first National Football League training camp Saturday, less than six months after the Pittsburgh Steelers won their second conseutive Super Bowl.

Twenty other teams start practicing this week. Six follow suit next week, while the Minnesota Vikings get their camp underway July 21.

Eagles Coach Dick Vermeil, who led UCLA to a Rose Bowl victory over Ohio State on New Year's Day, is just one of seven new head coaches who will begin pacing the sidelines when the NFL's regular season opens ept. 12. The other new faces will be Lou Holtz, New York Jets; Bill Johnson, Cincinnati Bengals; Monte Calrk, San Francisco 49ers; Hank Stram, New Orleans Saints; John McKay, Tampa Bay, and Jack Patera, Seattle Seahawks.

McKay and Patera will be coaching new teams, as the NFL football comes to the Pacific Northwest, in Seattle, and the west coast of Florida, in Tampa Bay.

Pro football had an infamous start in the Pacific Northwest with the Portland entry in the World Football League. But the WFL folded last year after 1 1/2 losing seasons. It's major legacy is in the star players who have been signed by NFL clubs.

Larry Csonka, Miami Dolphins fullback before he jumped to Memphis of the WFL, has signed with the Giants. Csonka's old Miami and Memphis sidekick, running back Jim Kiick, was picked up by the Denver Broncos. Willie Spencer, who also played with Memphis, was signed by Minnesota.

Running back Tommy Reamon, Jacksonville, was signed by Pittsburgh and Calvin Hill, of Dallas before he jumped to the WFL's Hawaiian's, was picked up by the Washington Redskins, who also signed free agents John Riggins, a 1,000yard rusher, and Pat Sullivan, a quarterback who won the Heisman Trophy when he was at Auburn.

The Jets lost Riggins but signed former Viking Ed Marinaro, the running back who came to terms with New York last week.

Yanks Edge Bulgarians

HAMILTON, Ont. (AP) — The United States defeated Bulgaria 76-75 and both teams qualified for Olympic berths after final women's games Saturday at the pre-Olympic basketball tournament.

The U.S. win was its fifth without a loss at the tournament, including preliminary and final round-robin play.

The U.S. and Bulgaria had already qualified for the Olympic berths prior to the game after Cuba defeated Poland 84-79 earlier Saturday.

Under Olyvpic scoring, the Bulgarians received a point for their loss, creating a three-way tie with Cuba and Poland.

The U.S. trailed 46-42 at halftime. Julian Simpson led the Americans with 16 and Lusia Harris added 10.

Bayou Battle Rages

By AUSTIN WILSON

FRANKLIN, La. (AP) — Russell Ruiz is so busy trying to save his million-acre sportsman's paradise from do-gooders that he doesn't have time to hunt and fish any more.

"I don't care if I never kill another dove or catch another fish," the 64-year-old Ruiz said. "I've had mine. I just want to save some of this for my grandchildren."

Ruiz stumps Louisiana trying to whip up interest in preserving the vast hardwood swamp that makes up the Atchafalaya Basin. The marshes—40 miles wide and laced with an intricate network of bayous—stretch for about 100 miles along the Atchafalaya River's path to the Gulf of Mexico.

The marsh is somewhat larger than than the Okeefenokee and somewhat smaller than the Everglades. It's home for all forms of fish and wildlife, as well as for outdoorsmen such as Ruiz, whose home is "slap up against the levee—as close as I can get."

The Basin produces $50 million worth of fish and crawfish each year, $160 million worth of oil and gas and $11 million worth of timber.

It has also produced a long-running clash between the Corps of Engineers and environmentalists—the sort of clash that is becoming ever more common as farm lands and subdivisions nibble at wilderness areas.

The Corps wants to widen and deepen the chanel of the Atchafalaya River so Mississippi River floodwaters can be diverted and funneled more speedily to the Gulf.

Environmentalists say the Corps channel would drain the swamps and kill the Basin. The environmentalists want to install a tricky system of controls that would funnel water through the swamps when the river is high and flush it out of the marshes when it is low.

Ruiz said both groups are misguided.

"Here we have people paying taxes to protect themselves from high water and paying taxes to protect the wetlands, and nobody's getting either one," he scoffed.

He claims that since man first began trying to fool Mother Nature on the Atchafalaya, things have grown steadily worse.

"I've seen it all," Ruiz said. "After the 1927 flood, Congress passed the Flood Control Act.

"They built the Old River Structure to keep the Mississippi from switching channels into the Atchafalaya, and they built spillways to send Mississippi floodwaters down the Atchafalaya. They relieved the strain on Mississippi levees, but they piled up mud in the Basin.

"So, in the '60s, the Corps went along stopping up all the natural bayous except one or two little bitty ones, trying to keep the silt out.

"In about four or five years, there wasn't enough oxygen in the water to support life. They held a big meeting to talk about the problem, and they had to go out and buy fish for the supper.

"Then, the Corps opened an access channel to Bayou Chene, and the silt came in.

"That's been the whole story. The Corps tries to solve one problem and creates many more."

And he predicts that the environmentalists won't have any better luck with their plans for the Basin.

"They want to build all those 'structures' to control the water going in and out of the Basin. Leave it alone and the silt will ring it, and nature provides the 'structures.' The water will flow over the silt when the river's high and back out of the swamps when the river's low. And it won't cost any money, either."

His solution: "Let the water come in at the top, and the bottom will restore itself. Open the natural bayous. It would cause some flooding, but all the water that comes down the river has to pass by Morgan City anyway.

Keeping Things Under Control

STRIPED BASS AND walleye can control rough fish populations in open reservoirs better than commercial rough fish operations, Texas Parks and Wildlife Commission members were told at their June meeting in Austin.

As a result, the commission approved a staff recommendation to discontinue permits for removal of certain rough fish species in Texas lakes, effective midnight Dec. 31, 1976.

"Not enough rough fish are being removed with nets to affect the reservoir," said Robert Kemp, director of fisheries, in presenting staff recommendations that the permit system be eliminated.

He also pointed out netting "simply is not a workable management tool."

There currently are 39 individuals with P&WD permits allowing removal of rough fish such as buffalo, carp and other sucker species from 11 lakes and reservoirs. Most are in the eastern part of the state.

Not enough of the rough fish population is caught in these commercial fishing nets, Kemp told the commission.

"Where there is a native fish population, rough fish compete with them for available food sources," said Kemp.

But with the introduction of non-native fish (striped bass and walleye), the rough fish population "has a biological control placed on it," said Kemp.

"A good striper population in a reservoir will keep rough fish populations in check," he said.

STUDIES CONDUCTED BY P&WD at E.V. Spence Reservoir, north of San Angelo, and Pat Mayse Reservoir near Paris show that carp and shad populations dropped significantly and gamefish populations increased as stripers and hybird stripers were introduced.

Kemp added that usually rough fish outnumber gamefish in Texas lakes.

"We have proved that predator fish, such as stripers and walleye, will feed on rough fish in an openwater reservoir," he said.

Additionally, adult rough fish diets are similar to those of bass fry, "so if you have less rough fish, the bass in the reservoir will have a better chance to survive and grow."

Other studies indicate game fish such as stripers are extremely vulnerable to gill nets. Fully 80 per cent of stripers caught in 3½-inch mesh or larger will die.

Netting of rough fish has been allowed in Texas since 1925. It wasn't until 1949, however, that a permit system for rough fish removal was instituted.

Now, inland fisheries biologists are concerned that too many introduced game fish are being caught and killed in nets designed to catch rough fish.

"Netting of rough fish in reservoirs stocked with stripers or hybrid bass must be discontinued for biological reasons," Kemp said.

He added, "For commercial netting to be an effective management tool, up to 80 per cent of the rough fish need to be harvested. Now, between 1 and 35 per cent of any rough fish population is being caught in nets, and the average is about 10 per cent of the standing crop."

There are 15 reservoirs around the state that have been stocked with stripers. More stocking of stripers and walleye are planned for 1977, Kemp noted.

"The catfish in Lake Spence are quite numerous, with several different species.

"There are bullheads, channel catfish, blue catfish, humpback catfish and yellow catfish in the lake. This, despite the fact that the channels and yellows do most of the headline stealing because of their bait stealing and getting caught in the act."

Then later, Service went fishing for history when fishing for fish isn't too exciting.

"I was shopping in downtown Robert Lee the other day and noticed something unusual about the sidewalks there. Embedded in the sidewalk was a rusty old ring.

"This ring was once used to tie a team of horses when the lady of the house needed some supplies. This sight caused me to wonder why such a thing would be preserved after many years of using the car.

"I glanced around me to see if any more of the old timers were being preserved and noticed a cement structure on the lawn of the county courthouse. It was hard to believe that this cracked old horse trough once held enough water to quench the thirst of the horses from around the surrounding area.

"Now filled with sod and flowers, the trough blends into the other cement structures around it with ease. Perhaps in some ways the old days will always be with us."

Safe Boating Week Chosen

In response to a Congressional Resolution, President Gerald Ford has proclaimed National Safe Boating Week to be July 4-10.

"National Safe Boating Week is designated each year as a means of focusing public attention on the safe operation of boats and on the necessary safety equipment of boats that, if needed, may mean the difference between life and death," said Loyd Bowman, Public Information Officer of Flotilla 52, United State Coast Guard Auxiliary.

"Boaters should observe this week by rechecking their safety equipment to be sure it's in first-class, usable condition, and if the boater has not yet received the Coast Guard Auxiliary's free boat safety examination, he is invited to have his boat checked by contacting me," Bowman added.

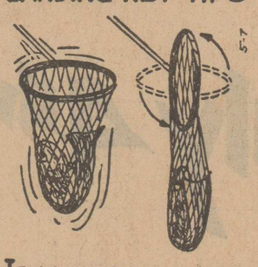

Bowman may be called at 806-372-1127.

Wildlife Harmed By Domestication

J.D. PEER
Parks & Wildlife Dept.

Each spring a new generation of wildlife young makes its debut into the outdoor world, and both wildlife and people have a curiosity about their surroundings which sometimes creates additional problems for everyone, including the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department.

Many children and adults discover young wildlife while participating in various outdoor activities. Acting with a sense of compassion and responsibility, these fascinating creatures are often petted, taken home and put in a pen.

There are reasons and rules why these young animals and birds should not be condemned to a twilight zone of existence between wilderness and domestication.

The most obvious reasons to leave young wildlife alone are state and federal laws governing the possession, sale or barter, and confinement of both game and non-game animals, birds and endangered species such as the horned toad.

These laws are initiated for the purpose of insuring the health, protection and general welfare of man and wildlife alike. Serious, unexpected problems usually arise from unqualified attempts to domesticate creatures which natural laws intended to be wild.

The opportunity to learn to survive in the wild is lost if young wildlife are removed from their natural enviroment. This survival knowledge can only be taught by their wild parents.

Young wildlife in captivity are prevented from learning about their natural enemies and to defend against them. Knowledge about obtaining shelter and food is eliminated as people place food in front of the young wildlife. Keeping young wildlife captive for only a short period of time is inviting disaster for the animal or bird.

Adults, children and family domestic pets are bitten, clawed, seriously injured, and some even killed every year by wildlife "pets" which should have remained undisturbed in nature. Pet deer, which were raised from fawns, losing their natural fear of man, have reverted to their wild instincts and, without warning, have maimed or killed their compassionate captors. Remember, it is usually children who bear the brunt of tragedies involving wild "pets".

Many wild "pets" introduce harmful or deadly parasites and diseases such as virus bearing ticks, rabies, tetanus, or tularemia into the home. Most cities and towns require that only dogs receive annual rabies shots leaving the recipient of a painful wild animal bite in a potentially dangerous position.

If you have penned or confined young wildlife in your possession, release them back into the wild.

Information about these rules and regulations is available by contacting your nearest game warden or any P&WD representative.

City Residence To Utilize Solar Energy Technology

By PRESTON LEWIS
Staff Writer

Although solar energy offers promise for the future, numerous technical and practical problems must be resolved before its use in the home can ever become widespread, according to Dr. Ernst W. Kiesling.

Those problems range from the "add-on" cost of a solar energy system to the lack of an economically efficient method of converting the sun's rays into electricity, Kiesling, chairman of the civil engineering department at Texas Tech University, said.

Construction will begin next week on a Kiesling-designed residence which will utilize the "most advanced solar energy technology that is economically practical for residential heating."

Nonetheless, a conventional heating system will have to be included in the residence because the solar utilization system "can't go three or four snowy days in a row."

"I think many people we have contact with," Kiesling said, "have the impression that solar energy is free and that it is going to relieve most of our problems in the energy realm. Unfortunately, it is not free and will not alone solve all our problems."

"In my opinion," he continued, "we are at the point for utilizing solar energy for water heating. Very soon we will be to the point where space heating with solar energy is practical. It will be several years before cooling looks practical. For generating electricity in the home, it will require some major technological breakthrough."

Construction and material costs for the residence are expected to be about $70,000 which includes $9,000 for the solar heating system.

Kiesling said the solar-generated heat would be used for preheating water before it goes into the hot water heater and, hopefully, for 75 per cent of the total space heating requirement for the 2,500-square-foot house.

The solar collector system will occupy about 350 square feet of that space. A group of black metal plates, the collector will absorb the sun's rays. Air will then pass over the plates to carry the heat away to an enclosed rock pile where it is store until used.

Built in to the back side of the house instead of the roof, the collectors will not be visible from the streets.

Numerous other energy-savings measures are being taken in the construction of the house which will be located at 80th Street in the Quaker Heights addition. Among these are thick insulation, double-pane glass windows, skylights and fluorescent lighting wherever possible.

Other energy-saving considerations include the landscaping. Deciduous trees will be planted at certain locations to provide shade in the summer and sunlight in the winter after the leaves have fallen. The south wall of the house is designed to let in the sunshine during the winter, but not in the summer, Kiesling said.

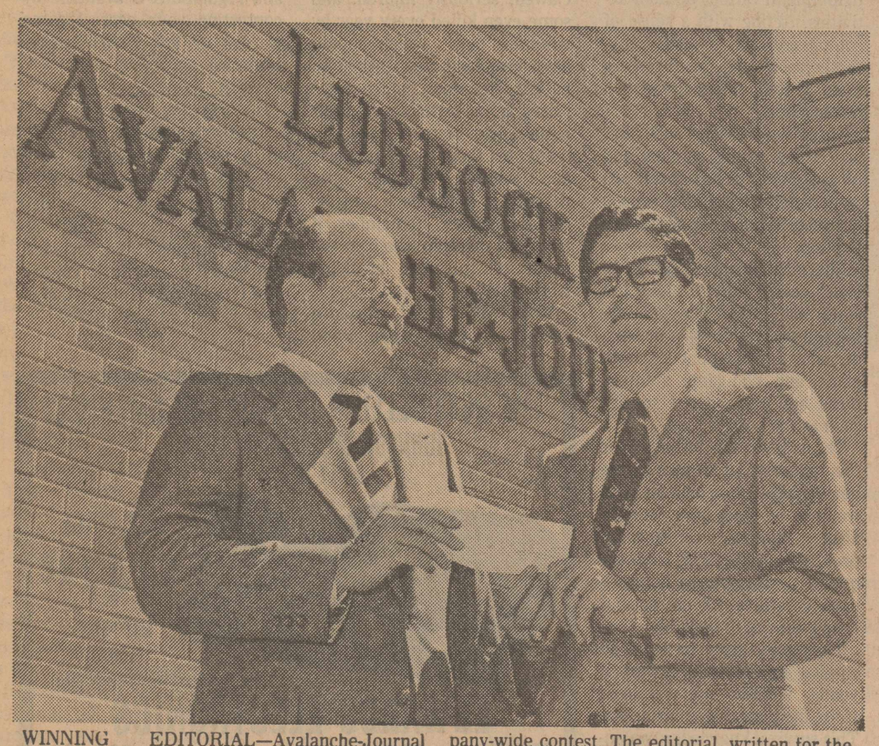

The practical problems with solar energy utilization include the extra cost of the solar collection system since a conventional heating unit is also needed. In this case, a $9,000 grant from the Department of Housing and Urban Development has been received to offset the extra cost.

Additional problems include the loan value on the house, Kiesling said. Some lending institutions might not include the value of the solar energy system in determining the market value. Thus the cost of the system might have to come out of the equity rather than the loan, he said. Further, the tax appraiser might count the cost of the system for taxing purposes.

When completed in November, the house will be open for public inspection probably through January. Then it will be sold to an owner qualified to assist with long-term research studies which could continue for as long as five years.

Kiesling said about 30 per cent of the total energy consumption in the United States goes for heating and cooling buildings.

"I think it is reasonable to expect solar energy to provide 30 per cent of the heating and cooling needs, or about 10 per cent of this country's total energy consumption, within three decades," he said. "But the fact is, don't expect it to solve the energy problem."

Governor Vows Support For Stiffer Panalties

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — Gov. Dolph Briscoe Saturday told the State Bar Association the rights of the accused should not be greater than the rights of the victim and society as a whole and said he intends to push for stiffer penalties for violent crime.

Briscoe described to the attorneys a far-ranging legislative package to combat crime.

"I will recommend that the law be changed so the habitual criminal — the person who commits murder, kidnaping, rape, or robbery, or any crime involving the use of a firearm — must serve a longer period of time in the penitentiary before they may be considered for parole," Briscoe said.

The governor also said he wanted mandatory supervision of all persons released from prison and tighter probation tnd bail bond laws. He said he favored allowing the admission of voluntary oral confessions in trials and use of electronic surveillance in the fight against organized crime and drugs. Briscoe asked the lawyers for their help in drafting and passing these bills. "It is time for us to remember as individual citizens and as office holders that the constitutions of Texas and the United States extend rights to all people equally," Briscoe said. "I think the time has come to demand the rights of the accused be no greater, extend no longer, be no more carefully defined, than the rights of the victims of crimes, and the rights of society as a whole.

"I think that in order to break the back of organized crime, in order to stop the drug traffic that unfortunately is increasing and growing and becoming a more serious problem every month in this state, I think that we are going to have to have a judicially authorized, judicially supervised electronic surveillance statute in this state." The bar convention ends Sunday with the dedication of the new Texas Law Center in the capitol complex. U.S. Attorney General Edward Levy will be the main speaker.

Slaton Class Marks Reunion

SLATON (Special)—The 1926 graduating class of Slaton High School will conclude its golden —and its first—reunion today.

Today an estimated 45 of the graduates will revisit the site of their baccalaureate services which were held in First Baptist Church in Slaton. The church will serve lunch to the returning guests.

Of those attending, the valedictorian, Mrs. Edda Bell Williams, will travel from San Bernadio, Calif. The salutatorian, Ray Majors of Amarillo, and class president, Walter McAtee of Victoria, also will be present.

Weaver, Mrs. Ina Pearson and Mrs. Faye Kuykendall, all of Lubbock; Mrs. Lillian Lockett, Mrs. Audean Nowell, Nrs. Audrea Thompson and Howard Hoffman, all of Slaton.

...Investigate Before You Invest
Before you purchase a new home, consult with a recent buyer of a new home during the past year and compare.
Was your Realtor knowledgeable and helpful?
Was availability of financing totally explained?
Variety of floor plans and elevations (did you have a choice?)
Quality of building materials
Cement requirements (steel)
Plumbing materials and installation
Interior craftsmanship (paint — cabinets)
Insullation — attic — walls
Was it finished on time?
Was your moving a pleasant experience?
Builders warranty (was it as promised?)
Did you feel customer satisfaction was their business?

Dear Mr. Customer
Having been in business for 22 years we realize how often it's difficult to transpose real estate needs and desires into end results.
Those needs and desires are our business. Dedication and professionalism are our stock in trade and have been for two decades. To say that we will make every possible effort in your behalf is simply an understatement.
Whether your requirement is the purchase of an existing home, new construction, insurance, commercial property or the sale of your home we will treat your business as if you were our only customer.

"ME AND MY ARROW"

Introducing Plymouth Arrow.

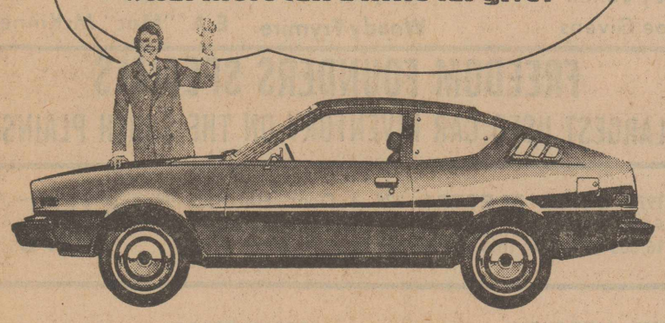

Here comes Arrow. One little car that comes with a lot of standard luxuries like reclining bucket seats, tinted glass, flow-through ventilation, and piston-operated hatchback.

And according to E.P.A. estimates, Arrow with its 1600 cc engine and available 5-speed transmission, got 39 miles per gallon highway, 24 city. Of course, your actual mileage may differ depending on your driving habits, the condition of your car, and its optional equipment.

So come see us. You may leave singing "Me and My Arrow."

Irresolution Marked Congress Until Moment Of Independence

(EDITOR'S NOTE — It was time, at last, for Americans to decide. But would those representatives in the State House in Philadelphia ever make up their minds? Here, excerpted from the book, "'76: The World Turned Upside Down," are the dramatic moments when independence was born.)

By SID MOODY
AP Newsfeatures Writer

As summer unfolded up the Atlantic coast, America agonized over independence like a gestating whale. The birth of a nation would not come easily. The moment of procreation was various.

By July, 1776, it had been months since Tom Paine's "Common Sense" had swept across the Colonies, months since George III had declared them in "open and avowed rebellion," and more than a year since Lexington and Concord. But, as the summer heat came to Philadelphia, the Continental Congress still could not take that irreversible step.

Irresolution marked the Continental Congress convened in May 1775, and July 5 it appealed directly to George III against Parliament.

The next day was voted a Declaration of Causes for Taking-Up Arms, written by young Thomas Jefferson and John Dickinson: "Our cause is just. Our union is perfect. Our internal resources are great ... being with one mind to die Freemen rather than live like Slaves."

The King refused to receive the Petition and instead called on Parliament to put "a speedy end to these disorders by the most decisive exertions." On Nov. 16, it was proposed that Britain abandon the thought of taxing the Colonies and negotiate with Congress. The House of Commons rejected the plan 210 to 105. Instead, on Dec. 22, 1775, it voted for the Prohibitory Act which withdrew the King's protection from America. By that time all the Colonies but Georgia and Pennsylvania had provisional governments of one sort or another, taking their authority from nowhere, giving allegiance still to the King and looking to Congress for guidance.

Although the British had burned Falmouth (now Portland), Maine, in October, Congress later declared: "Allegiance to our King? Our words have ever avowed it — our conduct has ever been consistent with it."

News of the Prohibitory Act reached Philadelphia Feb. 27, 1776. with reports the Hessians were coming. "Nothing is left now but to fight it out," said Joseph Hewes of North Carolina, and the only disagreement as to a Declaration of Independence was its timing.

Some delegates still believed Congress should first listen to peace commissioners which John Adams dismissed as an "airy phantom ... a messiah that will never come, as errant an illusion as ever was hatched in the brain of an enthusiast, a politician or a maniac."

The Virginia colonial assembly voted May 15 "to declare the United Colonies free and independent states, absolved from all allegiance to, or dependence upon, the Crown or Parliament of Great Britain."

On June 7, Richard Henry Lee of Virginia rose in Congress to present a resolution: "That these United Colonies are, and of right ought to be, free and independent states ... " There it was.

The delegates argued to 7 o'clock that night and for three more days with the majority contending Congress had no such authority. The fourth day brought a shift, and Hewes, buffeted by Adams and letters from home, said: "It is done. It is done, and I will abide by it."

Lee's resolution passed, but by a motion of John Rutledge a decision was postponed until the first of July.

Jefferson got the most votes to serve on the committee to draft a declaration. Adams, Benjamin Franklin, Roger Sherman of Connecticut and Robert Livingston of New York were also chosen. Jefferson proposed Adams to do the drafting, but Adams insisted on Jefferson.

Thomas Jefferson, perhaps the most remarkable of that remarkable band of Virginians, was a man of the mind. Historians estimate his I.Q. at 150, the same as Galileo and Michaelangelo.

He was only 33, the son of a local magistrate, surveyor and chief military officer of Albemarle County. His father had married into the wealthy Randolph family and had left 7,500 acres and numerous slaves to his son when he died. Jefferson was a scholarly boy; "games played with balls ... stamp no character on the mind," he said.

In two weeks he presented his efforts to Franklin for approval.

"We hold these truths to be sacred and undeniable ..." Franklin preferred "self-evident." Jefferson agreed. The older man made a few other changes, then said: "I wish I had written it myself."

In old age Jefferson said his purpose had been "not to find out new principles or new arguments ... but to place before mankind the common sense of the subject, in terms so plain and firm as to command their assent ... Neither aiming at originality ... nor yet copied from any particular and previous writing, it was intended to be an expression of the American mind ...."

When Jefferson's work was presented July 1, John Dickinson rose to speak: "Declaring our independence at a time like this is like burning down our house before we have another; in the middle of winter; with a small family; then asking a neighbor to take us in, and finding that he is unready."

'Why put off the Declaration? If we fail, it cannot be worse. I have crossed the Rubicon.' — John Adams

"Enough, prudent petitioner," replied John Adams in exasperation. "I can see right down to the bottom of your timid heart. Your mother has warned you sternly too many times: 'Johnny, be careful. Your estate will be taken and you're bound to be hang'd.' "

"Right now I call any declaration for independence a blind, percipitous measure!" said Rutledge. Some delegates brought up the peace commissioners. Roger Sherman of Connecticut retorted: "I'm more afraid of the commissioners than of their generals and armies. If their propositions are at all plausible, I am afraid they will divide us. There is too much division among us already." "And too much delay," added Josiah Bartlett, from New Hampshire.

Eyes turned to John Adams, and Rutledge said: "You're the one who has all the arguments, Mr. Adams. We're waiting."

Adams finally rose. "Why put off the Declaration? If we fail, it cannot be worse for us. But we shall not fail ... For myself, I can only say this. I have crossed the Rubicon ... Sink or swim, live or die, to survive or perish with my country, that is my unalterable resolution!"

It was his greatest speech. A canvas showed nine states for independence with South Carolina and Pennsylvania opposed, New York abstaining and Delaware's two delegates divided. A messenger hurried off for Caesar Rodney from his farm outside Dover 90 miles away. He reached Rodney's house near midnight. Rodney told his brother, Tom, "Do tend to my harvest," and galloped off in a rainstorm.

Meanwhile John Adams and Lee were buttonholing Rutledge. He agreed finally to vote aye if Pennsylvania and Delaware would, too. Pennsylvania was divided four to three against with Robert Morris and Dickinson in the majority. The next day Morris and Dickinson tactfully failed to appear.

That made it 3-2 for independence.

But where was Rodney? John Hancock, President of the Congress, delayed as long as he could. By 4 p.m., he could delay no longer.

The states were polled from north to south. New England was solidly for. New York had no definite instructions from home and abstained. John Morton of Pennsylvania a month earlier had declared: "I most sincerely hope for reconciliation, for the contest is horrid. Parents against children and children against parents." But he voted for. Then Rodney, caked with mud, strode in. "Delayed by the storm," he said and broke the Delaware deadlock. Rutledge voted yes.

Independence had passed, 12 votes to none.

The next two days the delegates debated Jefferson's document itself. In his original draft Jefferson had said of George III that "He has waged cruel war against human nature itself" by the slave trade.

Rutledge spoke: "The wisdom of slavery should be determined by the states themselves." The whole consistent with our principles," said Adams.

"Morality and wisdom have nothing to do with this," said Rutledge. "The whole passage will have to be cut. If it stays, South Carolina can never agree to the Declaration." Georgia agreed. The slavery paragraph went out.

Biting flies from a nearby livery stable were annoying the already impatient delegates. It was time to vote again, and Josiah Bartlett cast the first ballot for the amended document.

Charles Thomson, known to the Delaware Indians as "The Man-Who-Tells-The-Truth," recorded the votes.

Finally John Hancock spoke: "The Declaration by the representatives of the United States has been adopted unanimously."

The only sound was the flies buzzing. Hancock, with a reward of 500 pounds on his head, signed the document. "His Majesty can now read my name without glasses. And he can double the reward on my head."

Thomson witnessed the President's signature, and theirs were the only names to appear on broadsides hurried into print. (Those absent July 4 — there were 15 — and those elected later signed an engrossed copy August 2). The other delegates signed the unpublished copy.

William Ellery of Rhode Island saw "dauntless resolution in every face." John Adams said, "several...signed with regret."

Aged Stephen Hopkins of Rhode Island came forward leaning on his cane: "My hands may tremble, but my heart does not."

Henry Laurens, later President of Congress and imprisoned in the Tower after being captured at sea by the British, said: "I wept that day as I had done for the death of a son and felt much more pain."

Charles Carroll, probably the wealthiest man in America, was told he wasn't taking a great risk, as there were other Charles Carrolls in Maryland. He added "of Carrollton," should the King have any doubt.

News of the Declaration spread quickly. Worcester got the word July 14, Benedict Arnold's ravaged army on Lake Champlain July 28.

In Huntington, N.Y., an effigy of the King was filled with gunpowder and exploded with a bang. In New York a near riot brought a rebuke from Washington, as a crowd pulled down the statue of the King.

The statue was cut up, taken to Litchfield, Conn., and molded into more than 36,000 bullets to turn on the soldiers of George III.

Declaration Embodied Struggle

(EDITOR'S NOTE — Two hundred years ago this week — on July 2, 1776 — the Continental Congress adopted a resolution making this an independent nation. Two days later the Declaration of Independence proclaimed the right of Americans to be free, a guide for all men through the ages.)

By DON McLEOD
Associated Press Writer

On the fourth day of July, in 1776, the American dream came true. The Declaration of Independence embodied years of struggle and experiment, of testing new ground and building upon it.

God-given freedom was embedded in a nation too big for bounds

The lessons of government had started with little groups of adventurers and refugees forming associations to stay alive.

The community of man had developed behind log stockades in times when everyone would have died if the well had not tended the sick, the strong carried the weak, the whole fed the hungry.

Self-made Americans learned that freedom to pursue happiness was half the race. The joy of a free mind came to religious refugees worshipping for the first time without fear.

And the natural, God-given right to freedom was embedded in a people who had crossed an ocean to seek it and then found it in a land too big to be bound.

On July 4, 1776, 200 years ago today and over a century and a half after the first Englishmen settled in the new world, the Continental Congress put all these elements in a single code for the first time.

Detractors would say there was nothing all that new about it, that its philosophies originated with Locke in England or Voltaire in France or Calvin in Switzerland or Sophocles in ancient Greece.

Thomas Jefferson, who wrote it, said he didn't try to be original. On the contrary, he was trying to capture the truth which America knew and wanted to share, "an expression of the American mind."

Ezra Stiles of Yale said it captured "the soul of the continent."

In all history these ideas had been tried and proven only in America. And only an American in that age could hold it up as a beacon to the world.

The Declaration of Independence did not make America free; Americans did that in seven years of bloody war. It did not make them independent; Congress had done that with the adoption of a resolution two days earlier.

What it did was declare for all time the right of all people to be free. It proclaimed independence, the right of people to govern themselves as they wished.

The founding fathers were revolutionaries, but not radicals. They wrote the Declaration of Independence out of "a decent respect to the opinions of mankind."

They knew they were forcefully overthrowing a government and believed deeply that "governments long established should not be changed for light and transient causes."

So, they gave their reasons and their justification.

The king was accused specifically of frustrating self government, justice and fundamental rights of his American subjects. He had vetoed or obstructed their laws and had made it difficult for colonial legislatures to function. When they offended royal authority, they were dissolved and the colonies left for long periods with no representative government.

Americans would obey properly enacted law, but they resented having an army enforce laws not of their making and efforts "to render the military independent and superior to the civil power."

But the greatest fear was for the fundamental rights of a free people. Britain, they charged, had conspired "to subject us to a jurisdiction foreign to our constitution."

The mother country had been guilty of "cutting off our trade ... imposing taxes on us without our consent ... depriving us, in many cases, of the benefits of trial by jury."

The final straw was the use of military force against Americans and their rights. "He has plundered our seas... ravaged our coasts, burnt our towns, and destroyed the lives of our people."

If this bit of history sounds dated, American resentment was no less great from the bombing of Pearl Harbor than from the shelling of Falmouth or the burning of Norfolk.

These were not just idle irritants. The Americans were convinced they were part of a concerted design for "establishment of an absolute tyranny over these states."

"In every stage of these oppressions we have petitioned for redress in the most humble terms," Jefferson wrote. "Our repeated petitions have been answered only by repeated injury."

The right to petition within peaceful bounds remains a critical tool of democracy. But of what use is it if no one listens because government is not responsible to the people?

This is what our forefathers believed and generations of descendants have defended and expanded the belief. They did not have to accept such mistreatment. And Jefferson explained why.

There was a higher authority than King or Parliament, he said, "the Laws of Nature and Nature's God."

"We hold these truths to be self-evident," the newly United States of America said.

"That all men are created equal," that no man or clique of men had the right to a greater share than others of the protection and opportunities of God's law.

"That among these are Life, Liberty and the pursuit of Happiness," the fundamentals of human freedom and the just object of human government.

"That to secure these rights, governments are instituted among men," as servants of the common good and felicity, keepers of order and securers of rights, not masters serving their own ends.

"Deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed," government based on the willingness of people to live together in harmony and mutual security.

"That whenever any form of government becomes destructive to these ends, it is the right of the people to alter or abolish it, and to institute new government, laying its foundation on such principles and organizing its powers in such form, as to them shall seem most likely to effect their safety and happiness."

Government, they said, must serve its divine purpose or lose its right to govern. The ultimate right lay with the people as a gift of providence.

And calling on this "Supreme Judge of the world" and in the name of "the good people of these colonies," they declared their old government abolished and began anew.

The American dream came true with Declaration of Independence

"And for the support of this declaration, with a firm reliance on the protection of divine Providence, we mutually pledge to each other our lives, our fortunes and our sacred honor."

As freedom among humankind must always be, this declaration was not complete. It did not explain just who "the people" were who could raise 144 years, and youths of 18, old enough to fight for freedom, couldn't vote for it for another 195.

But the fundamentals had been established, the direction set. And Jefferson felt it would continue as long as people cared to be free.

The Declaration of Independence, he predicted, "will be, to some parts sooner, to others later, but finally to all, the signal of arousing men to burst the chains" of autocratic government.

And tumble governments or how they should do it short of war.

Having once justified violent overthrow of their government, however, the founding fathers would move in another decade to assure that it would never be necessary again.

They would devise a government which the voters could overturn at the polls instead of on the battlefield and a constitution which could be amended by citizens not armies.

The founders knew that as long as mortals rule the earth there would always to be some form of tyranny, but they concluded that the "tyranny" of a majority in a democracy was the best that could be hoped for.

And even this could be restrained from abuse by a firm constitution with a guarantee of the fundamental rights of citizenship set forth by the Declaration of Independence.

Jefferson would have liked to have included a denunciation of slavery. It was striken for the sake of a united front of colonies. Black Americans would not enjoy their rights for 89 more years.

Women wouldn't participate in the democratic "revolutions' of the ballot box for another

Federal Loan Guarantee Backs Energy Production

By JOLLY SCHRAM
A-J Correspondent

Along with fun, firecrackers, and festivals enlivening the weekend, a few energy sparklers are being lit on the Southwestern landscape.

One example is a $4 billion loan-guarantee program for demonstration plants of synthetic fuels offered to industry in a Congressional bill of U.S. Rep. Olin Teague (D-Texas).

As amended now in House committees, the bill will offer federal loans for production of fuels from coal, oil-shales, geothermal, and urban wastes.

The committee that authorized the bill, which was introduced by Teague "is trying to say 'We need to produce synthetic fuels...and quickly. We have a lot of coal, oil-shale, and urban wastes (which sophisticates call biomass)...and in the future, there may be some other forms' that are useful," elaborated a spokesman for Teague.

Although such plants need to be located in a fair geographical distribution, the South and West must benefit as both extensive coal and oil-shale deposits exist in these sites. Naturally, demonstration plants to use urban wastes can be located in many places.

Of special note to southwesterners in New Mexico is the current plan to fund only two coal gasification plants for high-BTU pipeline gas. Despite dwindling interest by El Paso Natural Gas Co. in their proposed plants on Navajo lands, WESCO is reportedly still interested in the coal gasification plants that will be finally awarded on a competitive basis via the Energy Research and Development Administration.

Amended bill offers industry demonstration plant program for synthetic fuel production

Widespread encouragement for passage of the loan-guarantee bill for new fuels has come from industry, labor (except the United Auto Workers), government, and individuals, said Teague's office.

South and Western backers of the project include New Mexican Governor Jerry Apodaca, the Western Governors Regional Energy Policy Office, the Los Angeles County Commission, Rocky Mountain Oil and Gas Assn., Colorado Western Area Council of Governments (oil-shale area), Southern California Gas, Texas Eastern Transmission Corp. (a partner in WESCO), and other varied corporations, especially in the Dallas-Irving area, said Teague's office.

"I am optimistic that this bill will pass both houses this year" prior to the election, predicted Teague this week, despite a similar bill being killed in Congress last December.

Another ray on the somber energy landscape has been strong passage of Senator Joe Montoya (D-New Mexico) amendments to the FEA extension bill to exempt from price controls both stripper and tertiary recovery oil. This action is needed as cost of recovering oil in these processes usually exceeds prices permitted for production.

Buttressing hopeful trends in Washington has been growing interstate cooperation, notes New Mexican state representative John Mershon (D-Cloudcroft).

Mershon serves. as chairman of the New Mexico Legislative Energy Committee as well as on the Southwest Regional Energy Council, composed of Texas, New Mexico, Arkansas, Louisiana, and Oklahoma and headquartered in Dallas. He foresees another regional organization of Western legislators possibly aborning in late July at Salt Lake City as oil and gas producing states (except California) meet to offer more "clout" in Washington on energy matters.

Mershon also sees as a result of the favorable vote on expansion of nuclear power plants in California in June a great future for a nuclear energy cycle in New Mexico.

"The prominence of uranium development (for nuclear energy) is tremendous," he said at his peaceful, mountain home this past week. "It will be the biggest business in New Mexico in the future," he added.

MS Area Chapter Seeking Funds

The South Plains Chapter of the national Multiple Sclerosis Society is in debt, and pharmacist Lonnie Hollingsworth is leading a drive to return the organization to solvency.

"Under a former director, the group went into debt. About $5,000 will set it back on its feet," said Hollingsworth, who owns L&H Drugs.

Hollingsworth, who is fund drive chairman for the society for the year, said he hopes this particular drive can be completed by July 15. "It's in addition to the regular door-to-door canvassing the society does," he said.

The MS Society provides equipment disabled by the disease, according to the new director, Esther Martin Turner. "The chapter pays no medical bills and buys no medicine for patients, but tries to furnish items such as wheelchairs, walkers, canes and appliances for bedridden patients," Mrs. Turner said.

covered by Medicare and Medicaid, according to Mrs. Turner. "Those programs consider some of the items needed by bedridden people, especially, to be "institutional" in nature, and not needed by people who live at home," she said.

However, multiple sclerosis has an average duration of 27 years, Mrs. Turner said, and during the period a person has the disease, he or she usually is at home at least some of the time.

Persons wishing to make donations to the MS Society may make checks to the Multiple Sclerosis Society Fund by Shirley Cotten. Mrs. Cotten was chosen Mother of the Year in May by the local chapter. She has had multiple sclerosis eight years.

Donations may be mailed to Hollingsworth at 4616 34th St. or to the Security National Bank. Persons contributing gifts larger than $100 will receive a special certificate, according to Hollingsworth, and all donations are tax deductible.

The cause of multiple sclerosis is not known, but is believed to be started by a virus-like agent that attacks the sheath covering the spinal cord. Nerve fibers are deteriorated and the victim loses the use of motor response nerves, causing partial paralysis.

The South Plains Multiple Sclerosis Society Chapter meets the second Thursday of each month to discuss new treatments for the disease and to plan social activities such as picnics, according to Mrs. Turner.

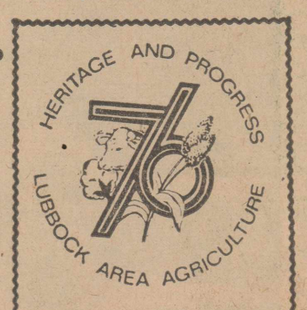

"I think one of the best things the patients get from the meetings is realizing there are other people in the same shape they're in, and they don't think of themselves as freaks as a result," Mrs. Turner said.

The chapter has 130 members. Its next meeting is scheduled for 2 p.m. July 8 at the home of Mrs. Claudine Vail of 3115 20th St.

The South Plains marketed 1,133,128 fed cattle in 1975. This was 37 per cent of the total cattle fed in the state. Texas ranks first in the nation in the number of cattle and calves, beef cows that have calved, and cattle of feed.

Chemical Bucket Bomb Explodes, Injures Four

BEREA, Ohio (UPI) — Four people were injured, one of them seriously, when a fivegallon bucket of chemicals, apparently being mixed for July 4th celebrations, exploded Saturday in the yard of a home.

Police said the blast had the power of 15 sticks of dynamite and blew out the walls, ceilings and windows of one home and broke scores of windows throughout the neighborhood.

The 1:23 a.m. explosion also shook the police station, nearly three miles away, said Police Lt. Loren Merwin, who said John E. Jackulic, a chemistry buff from Brook Park, apparently was planning to use the chemicals for some sort of Fourth of July celebration Sunday.

Jackulic, who suffered severe burns over his body, was in poor condition in the burn center at Cleveland Metropolitan General Hospital, where Iain Rae, 22, Barberton, was in fair condition after being treated for a severed artery in his arm.

America Begins Third Century Of Nationhood

The Fourth of July marks the most important day of celebration during this Bicentennial year.

It is a day for Americans to reaffirm the principles on which our nation was founded, and to rekindle the spirit, ideals and liberty for which the Revolution was fought.

Daniel Webster wrote: "If the true spark of liberty be kindled, it will burn. Human agency cannot extinguish it; like the earth's central fire, it may be smothered for a time; the ocean may overwhelm it; mountains may press it down; but its inherent and inconquerable force will heave both the ocean and the land, and at some time or other, in some place or other, the fire will break out and flame up to heaven."

The world is not as it used to be for anyone; each of us needs to readjust his thinking. It is a time to renew our willingness to reach out and share with our friends and neighbors, to emulate our forebearers, and to pray that, with God's help, we may maintain the spirit that made our country great.

Tune In Tomorrow . . .

By JON-MICHAEL REED

NEW YORK — Dearly beloved, we are gathered here this week to witness the marriage of Mary Ryan and Jack Fenelli on "Ryan's Hope."

It's been a tempestuous courtship and engagement for Mary, the beloved flower of a strong-willed, close-knit, Irish immigrant family, and Jack, the orphan whose only family is a nun and the slightly seedy but heart of gold friends he made on his rise from dock worker to newspaper reporter. But love overcame all obstacles, including Mary's cantankerous father and the bridegroom's last-minute cold feet.

The events of the wedding day take up four days of on-air time. The wedding sequence, taped on location at a West Side Manhattan church, was exhausting, time-consuming and expensive. The crew began setting up cameras, lights and arranging more than 10 dozen flowers at 5 a.m. The cast arrived for full-dress rehearsals at 6 a.m. and it wasn't till 8 p.m. that the newlyweds strolled out of the church doors. But it was well worth it all.

The bride, played by Kate Mulgrew, couldn't have been more radiant, even though Kate had been up most of the previous night — not because of nervousness, but because "I had an exciting date." And the clothes. Ah, the clothes.

Costumer Ramse Mostoller spent the better part of two months preparing to clothe the "Ryan's Hope" cast. For the bride Ramse purchased a basic creme silk organza gown, then wove green ribbon into the lace of the bodice and sleeves. She added an Irish lace blouse (which, in the story, is the same one that mother Maeve wore on her wedding day). A search for an Irish lace veil led to a New York import house and a fine net with muslin applique piece, direct from County Monaghan. The veil itself cost nearly a hundred bucks.

The tortoise-shell haircomb (in the story, borrowed from sister Kathleen who flew in from Pittsburgh for the event) came from studio stock and the blue garter from brother Pat was actually gifted by "a dirty old man on the crew."

The matron of honor, Delia, and bridesmaid Kathleen, wore garden party outfits: dotted Swiss tops with flowered skirts, ribbon sashes and horsehair hats. Mother Maeve was garbed in a beige and tan chiffon dress and tailored jacket, while good friend Jill wore a beige silk jersey. The women were also accessorized with beige kid gloves and chocolate beaded bags. The men had it simple: traditional morning coats. Total effect: a happy blend of the pristine and the contemporary, the subdued and the colorful, the old and the new world.

Appropriately, when the bride and bridegroom depart the church and are told the limousine is waiting, Mary refuses and says they'll walk to Ryan's Bar and the reception, just as her mother and father walked miles from their wedding to their home years ago in the old country. A nice, gentle touch to the end of a beautiful ceremony but typical of this show which marked its first on-air anniversary with this week of wedding festivities.

If you're not familiar with "Ryan's Hope," you should be; it's a super good serial drama. The flow of action is generally unforced. While the playing is seemingly effortless there's an edge of naturally evolving urgency, but always smooth, never frantic. Best of all, the show possesses a sense of genuine familial warmth — a quality some soaps pretend (and, worse, a few think) they have.

Congratulations, "Ryan's Hope," on your anniversary. And good luck, Mary and Jack. Have a happy honeymoon on the Mississippi riverboat — well, you didn't really expect Niagara Falls, did you? — because you'll have trials and tribulations waiting upon your return.

As Kate Mulgrew said, "I have a strange foreboding it's not going to last." It is a soap opera, after all. But love will triumph, won't it?

Tune in tomorrow...

Send your questions about soap operas to "Tune In Tomorrow," in care of The Avalanche-Journal, P.O. Box 491, Lubbock, Tex. 79408. Questions cannot be answered personally, but those of general interest will be answered in future columns.

Wallcovering Helps Home Decorating

STILLWATER, Okla. (AP) — Thoughtful use of wallcoverings can make a dreary room bright, a long room look short and a dull room interesting.

And, for those with limited budgets, a change in wallcovering can achieve an impression of total decoration at a fraction of the cost.

— A boldly patterned wallcovering with large flowers, graphics or the look of tapestry can make a sparsely furnished room appear more cozy.

— Ugly pipes and ducts can be camouflaged by covering them with paint or wallcoverings to match the walls or ceiling.

— For a room without a view, add one in the form of a mural.

— For a small, dull room, select a stunning wallcovering and use matching fabrics for curtains and slipcovers. But limit colors and quantity of furnishings because when a small room becomes too busy, it seems smaller.

— Wallcoverings in cool blues and greens or in silver foil will make a room seem cool; or coziness can be introduced through calico or gingham in dark browns, yellows and oranges.

Stretch home decorating dollars even further by learning to hang wallcoverings yourself.

Sabotage Program Cancels Marriage

AMSTERDAM (WNS) — Model Mariette Horn never disappointed men who asked for her name and phone number.

The only hitch was that she gave the name and phone number of a rival model, who married Mariette's former fiance. "It worked," she said. "The marriage is on the rocks. I've got my fiance back because his wife fell for someone richer than he."

Volunteer Corps Aids New York

NEW YORK (AP) — From tutoring school children to keeping watch over the lonely elderly; from working in hospitals to doing research, New York City citizens are pitching in to help in the city's fiscal crisis.

The campaign to mobilize an initial 10,000 volunteers to fill service gaps is spearheaded by the Citizens Committee for New York City, formed last fall.

"We're striving to maintain the quality of life in the city as best we can through programs of voluntary action," says executive director Dennis Allee, citing threatened closings of day care centers, libraries and hospitals; reduced programs for senior citizens and students, and reductions in police, fire and sanitation services.

More than 3,500 responded to the committee's first full-page newspaper ads calling for volunteers, Allee reports. Some 30,000 volunteers are already involved with public agencies and a large additional number perform various tasks through the 10,000 block associations in all five boroughs.

The program is being carried out jointly by the city administration and the committee and, in announcing the plan Mayor Beame stressed that it "is aimed at supplementing (not supplanting) the efforts of city employes in attempting to maintain city services during these difficult times."

"The people — our people — are the city's single greatest resource. And, we're asking this enormous talent pool to give time, even as little as three hours a week, to help the city weather the crisis," said Allee, an urban expert who supervises a small staff in donated office space in midtown Manhattan.

Working with the Board of Education, trained volunteers tutor students in language and mathematic skills on a one-to-one basis.

Ten retired employes of a large insurance company, for example, devote two mornings a week to students in a Harlem school, transported there by company bus and returned to headquarters for a free lunch.

Six thousand persons in 25 precincts belong to the Civilian Patrols and another 5,300 Auxiliary Police patrol neighborhoods, reporting to the police department via citizen band radio.

Other volunteers visit merchants in their neighborhood in an effort to obtain discounts for the elderly or seek out vacant lots for planting vegetable gardens, with the harvest to be distributed to needy families.

Still others, such as a group on the Lower East Side, make daily telephone calls to old, lonely and infirm area residents, providing what is in many cases their only lifeline to the outside world.

The unemployed are offering their talents without pay in order to "keep a hand in" their respective fields. An out-of-work art teacher works with former drug addicts in a rehabilitation center and an expert in remedial reading instructs former convicts, whose reading ability is so deficient they are unable to apply for a job.

For other volunteers, the city's need offers an opportunity to see if they want to change careers. A dissatisfied accountant, who has been tempted to apply to law school, spends two afternoons a week helping out the overloaded city law department.

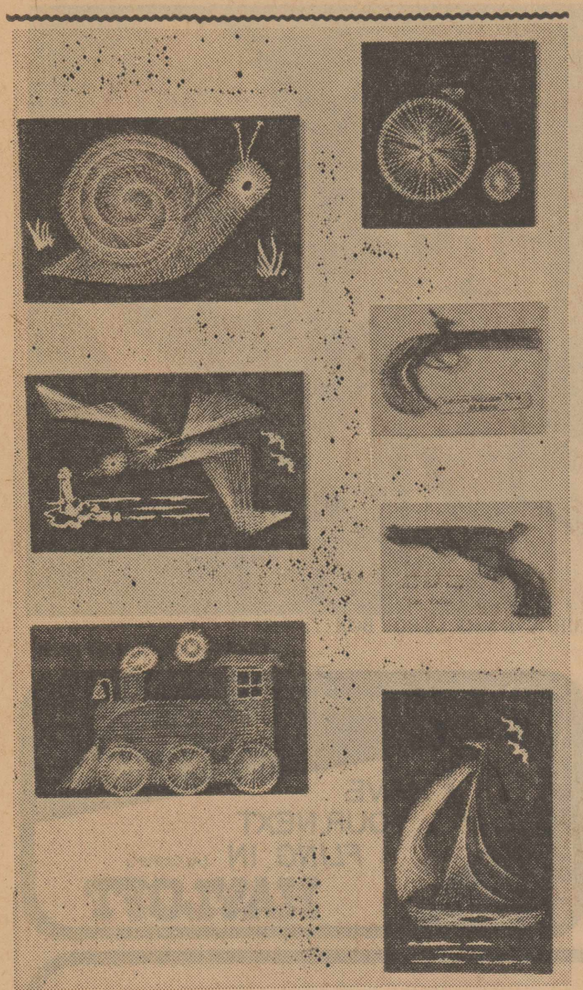

For students "career experience" is available in a wide range of fields, from language instruction to psychiatric research, hospital training to library work, social work to urban studies field experience. More than 16 area colleges have established centers where students can apply for volunteer work that will be helpful to them in their areas of interest.

HOW TO:

String A Picture

Remember when you learned to create simple geometric designs on paper in school? Well, that's all it takes to create these 3-dimensional string-art projects. You just stretch colored string in straight lines between two points, using our full-size patterns. There has never been a simpler (or more popular) art form. This set of projects will appeal to every age and to every member of the family.

Easy step-by-step instructions and dozens of detailed color photos make it a snap to create the snail, locomotive, sailboat, antique guns, high wheeler and seagull wallhangings. So if you can hammer a nail and wrap a piece of string around it, you're on your way to creating a wealth of projects that will look great in the home or office. they make excellent gifts too!

To obtain our String Art booklet No. 577, send $2.25 (includes postatge and handling). If 1st class is desired, send $2.50 by check, cash or money order to Steve Ellingson, c/o: The Avalnache-Journal, Box 491, Lubbock Tex. 79408.

Slimming Mom Displeases Family

PARIS(WNS) — Elte Geiger, 46, took a month off from office work and housework to give her hubby a surprise gift for their 25th wedding anniversary.

Unknown to the family, she spent her month's vacation at a health farm where she trimmed her weight down from 189 lbs. to 136 lbs. Now she is busy eating extra helpings at every meal. "Fred and the children prefer a fat woman around the house," she said. "My littlest boy burst into tears when he saw me thin and cried to the neighborhood, 'My mom has shrunk!'"

DEAR ABBY

DEAR ABBY: When my husband first suggested that we join a swingers club and switch partners with other couples who advertised their availability in a porno magazine, I told him I wasn't interested. (He's 34, I'm 30 and we've been married 10 years.)

He called me a prude and said that swinging was a common practice with married couples. (Is it?) I told him I would divorce him if he ever fooled around like that.

I thought the subject was forgotten, then I found a letter he had written to this club saying he wanted to participate, but he would have to be discreet because his wife wasn't interested. I wasn't snooping, Abby; the letter was laying on top of the desk in our den. With the letter was a Polaroid picture he had taken of himself in a mirror —naked!

I've always trusted him until now. He's a good father and provider, and I do love him. What should I do? File for divorce or forget I saw the letter? I am sick to death over this.

Hurt and Desperate

Dear Hurt: Tell him you saw the letter and picture, and ask him to see a marriage counselor with you. He needs to have his head straightened out if you're to get your marriage back on the right track.

He's wrong. Respectable married couples do not exchange sex partners with other couples. That is the beginning of the end.

DEAR ABBY: I have been widowed for four months. About six weeks ago I took a bus trip to the West Coast from Illinois. While waiting in the bus terminal for the bus to be serviced, I met a nice-looking, well-dressed gentleman. He asked me to have a cup of coffee with him, and before I boarded the bus he asked for my address. He said he came through my town often and wanted to see me again.

Well, I wasn't back home very long when this man called and said he was in town. He took me out for dinner and we had a fine time. He calls me long distance every night and comes to see me every weekend.

He wants to marry me, but I am not sure I want to marry him because he's been married and divorced four times. He admits he has no money because his last wife took him for everything he had. He has no health or life insurance, but he does have high blood pressure, emphysema and diabetes. I am 58 and he is 62.

Common sense tells me to turn around and run like mad, but I think I'm falling in love with him, and my heart seems to be ruling my head. I'm not a rich woman, but I'm not poor either.

My children are begging me to quit seeing him. Should I?

In Love Or Lonely

Dear In Love: I'd say, heed your common sense, Ma'am and don't make any important decisions unless you are absolutely sure you can live with them.

DEAR ABBY: My fiance and I were making plans for our wedding when a problem came up. He asked me if I minded if he asked a girl to be his "best man." He says she is his best friend.

I didn't want to hurt his feelings, so I didn't say flat out that I minded: I just said maybe he should give it a little more thought.

Abby, I come from a very conventional family, and I don't want a girl to be "best man" at my wedding even if she is my finace's best friend.

Can you suggest a tactful way to let my finace know that I would prefer that he ask a male?

To be perfectly honest about it, my main objection is that I am afraid people will make fun of us, and I don't want anything to spoil my wedding day.

Vermont Bride

Dear Bride: Since the expected ridicule would take the joy out of your wedding, level with your fiance and ask him to select a male for his best man.

Everyone has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply, write to Abby; The Avalanche-Journal, P.O. Box 491, Lubbock, Tex., 79408. Enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

PLAN OPEN HOUSE — An open house showing of recently acquired genealogical research material will be conducted from 10 a.m.-4 p.m. Wednesday in the Texas history and genealogy department of the George and Helen Mahon Library. The event is being sponsored by the South Plains Genealogical Society which secured more than 230 books for the collection in the past year. Examining some of the material are, from the left, Miss Dorothy Rylander, society librarian; Bill Stewart, director of the Lubbock City-County Library System, and Mrs. Dorothy Hughes. (Staff Photo)

Society Plans Open House

The newly expanded genealogical research portion of the George and Helen Mahon Library will be on display from 10 a.m.-4 p.m. Wedesday at an open house in the Texas history and genealogy department of the library.

Members of the South Plains Genealogical Society will assist the library staff in tours of the department and in in helping with family history research.

The society, as a Bicentennial project, secured for the library 230 books, 375 historical quarterlies and 36 rolls of microfilm records to supplement materials provided by the library system in little more than a year.

Among the books obtained in the Bicentennial project are a 6-volume set of Johnston Co., N.C., court minutes from 1759-1805; a two-volume set of Texas Family Land Heritage Registry, and "The Makers of San Antonio," the history of the German, Mexican and other ethinc groups which settled there.

The society has, over a period of years, contributed 4,000 books and 1,000 rolls of microfilm to the genealogy section of the library.

Labeling Change Could Help Consumers

By SIDNEY MARGOLIUS

NEW YORK (WNS) — In an era of many packaged ready-to-eat foods combining several ingredients, the lack of information on the percentages of the main ingredients has become a source of widespread consumer concern, misunderstanding and even suspicion.

Without this basic information of compelling economic and nutritional importance, much of the other information now on labels or proposed for them — even nutritional labeling itself — becomes less useful and even may serve to mislead consumers as may be the case among vitamin-fortified breakfast cereals Such products can claim high percentages of the Recommended Daily Allowance (RDA) simply by adding a fraction of a cent's worth of synthetic vitamins.

There's much evidence in consumer comments and letters that people want this information. The most detailed survey was one by Giant Food, a Washington, D.C., chain, in 1973. It found that 91 per cent of shoppers questioned said they thought this information would be helpful.

The need for this information was further documented by the obvious ignorance of the shoppers questioned about the percentage of ingredients in some popular products. Of 230 respondents, only 5 per cent correctly estimated the amount of beef in a beef stew (25 per cent) and a little over 4 per cent had a reasonably correct perception of how much chicken there is in cream of chicken soup (4 per cent raw weight or 2 per cent cooked).

There have been three recent efforts to provide some percentage-ingredient information. They vary in usefulness, but it's worth knowing about them for what help they can give.

Prepared seafood cocktails now are required to show the percentage of the main ingredient. This is a pioneering step although not on a particularly important product.

Thus, the consumer can see, although she may have to know where to look, that three brands in the stores have 30 per cent shrimp although one is $1.29, another is $1.39, and the third, $1.69. A fourth brand provides 33 per cent shrimp at $1.89. Interestingly, the lower-price brands — both house brands — display the percentage in large letters on the face, while a higher-price brand shows it in small print on the back. If you think about it, you also can realize that if 30 per cent of the product is seafood, the other 70 per cent must be sauce.

Curiously, in June 1972 when the Food and Drug Administration announced this procedure for seafood cocktails, the agency said it was "a first step" in percentage labeling of some food products whose names suggest they have more of a specific ingredient than is actually present. Four years later this "first step" seems also to have been almost the last step.

Another venture into percentage labeling is the 1974 FDA regulation requiring diluted fruit "drinks" to show the percentage of real juice. This requirement involved a hard-fought battle starting in 1970, not only between consumers and industry but between orange growers and drink canners. The labels now in use are partly effective. They state the percentage of juice, such as 10 per cent, but fail to state that the other 90 per cent is mainly water and sugar.

Even this hard-won step now may be further weakened. One leading canner now is putting the juice percentage on the back label instead of the face, and in not-easy-to-read blue lettering on a blue background.

A third venture into percentage ingredient labeling is one company's new sugar labeling on cereals. This is a pioneering program, but, unfortunately, the information is not given in a way readily understandable by the average consumer.

The difficulty is that the consumer must first translate 1 3/8 into 39 grams and then divide that figure into 6 grams to determine that the sugar content is 15.4 per cent.

The main potential usefulness of labeling in its present state is for nutritionists, teachers and writers who may understand that the "g" refers to grams and that there are 28.35 grams in an ounce — a measurement relationship worth remembering in an age of increasing use of "grams."

Other sellers soon may announce plans to label cereals with the amount of added sugar so consumers will have a better chance to compare their economic and nutritional value.

Fortune Teller Finds Tale Profitable

NAPLES, Italy (WNS) — Manuela Brunetti, 56, consulted a fortune teller about her fainting spells, hot flashes and pounding headaches.

They gypsy consulted her crystal ball and told her not to worry "because you will be carried up into heaven and perpetual happiness before dawn."

The widow promotly gave the lady $300 and spread her remaining $75 around among poor people she met on the street. Signora Brunetti did not die but felt relieved next morning, "Relieved of my fortune but also of my pains," she said.

She also was relieved of her fortune teller, who has disappeared.

RELAXATION TRAINING — Dr. Kelly D. Randolph demonstrates biofeedback to his brother-in-law, Wayne Harris of Salt Lake City, Utah. Randolph, a psychologist, attached electrodes to the Harris' frontalis muscles to measure muscular tension in his body. Research indicates that, through a passive learning process, a person can learn to control certain involuntary bodily functions including blood pressure and muscular tension. (Staff Photo)

Multi-Purpose Treatment Used For Many Problems

By CHERYL SHAW
Family News Staff

A single form of treatment for many physical disorders sounds more like an Indian medicine man cure-all than modern-day medical research.

Biofeedback has been used experimentally for a decade to treat such disorders as asthma, epilepsy, migraines, hypertension, muscle tension and even in rehabilitation of the handicapped.

"Results are achieved by a passive learning process," said Frank Fee, certified psychologist associate. Biofeedback is a technique that gives a person immediate and continuing signals on changes in bodily functions. One is not usually conscious of these changes, such as fluctuations in blood pressure, brain activity or muscle tension.

"The machine does nothing to you, but tells you what your body is doing," said Dr. Kelly D. Randolph, psychologist. "You never really know how you do it, but the machine trains you to control the involuntary functions of the body. For example, someone who has Raynaud's disease (which has to do with poor circulation in the hands) can learn to increase the blood flow in the hands."

Randolph attended a school of psychology in New York about a year ago to receive specialized training in biofeedback. Last February, he studied at Menninger's Foundation, a leading psychiatric hospital in Kansas where most of the research in biofeedback has been done.

Randolph said that the machine monitors physiological processes through electrodes attached to the body. These functions are read on various meters of the machine. One meter informs a person of the temperature fluctuations in a specific part of his body.

The electromyograph (EMG) picks up the firing of the muscles. "The more the nerves fire, the more tense the muscles," said Randolph. "Stronger firing indicates more tension."

Another meter, the galvanic skin response, indicates the degree to which a person reacts emotionally to a stimulus.

Randolph said, "Biofeedback has helped many people control muscle tension and migraine headaches."

Randolph believes migraines can be caused by essential hypertension (high blood pressure). The fast blood flow to the brain can cause throbbing in the head. With the temperature meter a person can learn to warm his hands by increasing the blood flow to the hands. This decreases the flow of blood to the head and relieves pressure and throbbing.

Randolph explained that research supports this technique as an effective means of treatment for hypertension if there is no known physical source. Another source of the problem can be emotional stress.

"For this reason, we work closely with a medical doctor," said Randolph. "He can tell if the problem has a physical cause."

Randolph generally includes therapy in the total treatment of an individual so if the problem is caused by emotional stress, it can be detected. "Even when tension is controlled, if the source of the problem has not been corrected, the person will divert the problem into other areas," said Randolph.

Treatment is not limited to one weekly session only. "When treating a person for muscle tension, we loan him tapes to listen to at home to help him relax," said Randolph. "Once he gets the general relaxed feeling for one week, we put him on the biofeedback machine," said Fee.

Either Fee or Randolph records the machine's readings which indicates when the person is relaxing or tensing the muscles.

"The object of this is to transfer the training into everyday life," said Fee. "Motivation of the person being treated determines the success of biofeedback."

Sardine Dish Detailed

By TOM HOGE
AP Newsfeatures Writer

The Portuguese have long insisted that the only true sardine is a silvery fish whose technical name is Sardina Pilchardis. For centuries it has been caught off the coast of Portugal, Spain and France. At one point, a British court upheld this claim and ruled that the name "Sardine" must apply to members of the Sardina Pilchardis family.

Actually sardine has become a marketing term applied to a number of richly-flavored species of the herring family that have soft bones and can be preserved in oil.

Off the shores of Italy's Lake Como, fishermen catch a small flat freshwater fish which goes by the name of Lake Sardine and is held in high esteem.

Among gourmets, sardines by most any name are a treat. In France, the best ones are aged as carefully as vintage wines. The tins are turned at regular intervals to allow the olive oil to penetrate the fish evenly, thus improving the flavor and texture.

Here is a recipe from Spain for sardines with green peppers and white wine.

5 tbsp. butter
2 large diced carrots
1 lb. small white onions, sliced
2 cups diced fresh bell peppers
1/4 cup finely diced green beans
4 oz. dry white wine
salt and pepper to taste
4 tomatoes skinned and diced
2 4 1/2-oz. cans skinless and boneless sardines
1 tbsp. grated parmesan cheese

Melt 4 tablespoons butter in pan. Add carrots, onions, bell peppers, beans and wine. Season and stir well. Cover pan and simmer about 5 minutes, stirring occasionally. Add tomatoes. Place on bottom of serving dish. Arrange sardines on top and sprinkle with parmesan and remaining melted butter.

Brown under grill and serve. Serves 4.

Napoleon's Need Spurred Canning Development

The canning of foods began in the early 19th century when Napoleon was desperate for a mean sof supplying his troops with food and offered a prize to anyone who could devise a way in which foodstuffs could be transported long distances in all kinds of weather, yet retain their nutritive and flavor values.

FAR EAST FISH FRY

1 lb. pollock or cod fillets, thawed
1 tsp. minced ginger root
4 tbsps. soy sauce
6 tbsps. oil
1/2 lb. fresh bean sprouts or 1 (16 oz.) can mixed Chinese vegetables
1 cup celery slices diagonally
3 green onions sliced diagonally
2 tbsps. cornstarch
1 tsp. sugar
1/4 cup water (or chichen broth)
1 lb. fresh spinach, washed, drained and crisped

Cut fillets into 2" strips about 1/2" wide. Combine ginger and soy sauce and marinate fish 15 minutes. Drain; keep marinade. Heat oil in wok or skillet. Brown fish on both sides, turning carfully. Remove and keep hot on warm platter. Saute bean sprouts, celery and onions. Combine cornstarch, sugar and water (or broth) and add with reserved marinade to vegetable; toss and stir until thickened (about 30 seconds).

Add spinach and stir-fry quickly until spinach just begins to wilt. Return fish to wok and toss lightly just until all ingredients are mixed.

Merry Pet

Question: We want to get a puppy but can't decide what breed to choose. We have had a boxer, Cocker and a Chihuahua.

We know poodles are very popular but cannot manage all that trimming and brushing. Could you suggest a type of dog you think makes a good pet?

Answer: There are 171 AKC (American Kennel Club) recognized breeds. They all make good pets under the right circumstances. Your own circumstances, feeling and needs will have to lead you to the right breed (and the right dog of that breed) for your family.

What is "right" for other families may not suit you at all, but I can tell you the 10 breeds of dogs Americans love most today.

The French poodle still is America's sweetheart, followed by the German shepherd, Irish setter, doberman pinscher, beagle, dachshund, cocker spaniel, miniature schnauzer, Labrador retriever and collie.

The doberman pinscher showed the greatest increse in popularity of any breed this year. Dobys have moved from the twentieth ranked breed ten years ago to the fourth place popularity winners today.

The doberman's popularity surge occurred in a year of dropping purebreed registries for 23 of the top 30 breeds. Overall, purebreed registries declined almost eight per cent. Litters declined almost 5 per cent. Even the ever popular poodle lost 20 per cent in registries. Of the top 30 breeds only seven increased at all: doberman, cocker spaniel, golden retriever, Siberian husky, lhasa apso, English springer spaniel and the shih tzu.

Question: I've always wondered if there was another name for alley cats. I mean, are they a breed like Siamese or can they be called tabby cats or what?

Answer: Alley cats are more precisely termed "long or short haired domestics." There is a breed of cat named the Silver Tabby.

In general, however, tabby refers to the special marking of cats with stripes. A striped domestic may be red, gray or brown tabby.

But it doesn't matter whether he's striped, spotted, black, white or blue, purebred or born in a barn, a cat in an aristocrat whose lineage goes back to kings and Egyptian Gods.

NUTRITIOUS SNACK

One ounce of almonds (20 to 25 kernels, a good sized handful) contains about 168 calories — not many when you consider the energy, appetite satisfaction and nutritive values almonds provide.

Economy Affects Summer Camps

By MARY E. PARRA
Family News Staff

Summer camp — the near-perfect haven for rambunctious children and anxious parents.

Visions of Charlie Brown-type campers haunt area camp directors and coordinators as parents register their children for camp. By paying the fee, parents buy themselves peace and quiet while providing a worthwhile experience for their children.

In an area where there are no commercial camps, Lubbock area children do have access to several day and resident camps sponsored by such groups as the Girl Scouts, Boy Scouts, Camp Fire Grls, the YMCA and the United Methodist Conference.

But area camps are coping with economic problems and their future remains uncertain, said Glynda Cobb, executive director of the Camp Fire Girls. "Camps are a losing proposition."

Although approximately 2,000 children registered for day and resident camps this year, the summer attendance was lower than camp directors had anticipated. Only 223 of an anticipated 300 girls registered for the Camp Fire Girls' Camp Monakiwa in Las Vegas, N.M. The low attendance created an $8,000 deficit in the projected operating budget, said Mrs. Cobb. There is a paid staff for the camp, but care and maintenance is strictly on a volunteer basis. Most of the volunteers are fathers of the campers.

But camps such as Camp Monakiwa and the Girl Scout camp at Rio Blanco, are subsidized by annual fund raising projects. Between $8,000 and $10,000 each year is raised for the Camp Fire Girls' camp with money earned by a candy sale.

One reason for the low attendance at camp is family camping. "Family camping has taken a big hunk out of our resident camp," Mrs. Cobb added.

An increasing number of families have taken to the highway and camp grounds across the nation each year. With more efficient modes of travel and improved camping equipment, it is more convenient for a family to camp than ever before. But expenses for a family camping trip may not equal the cost of summer camp.

Costs for the camps range from $30 for a four-day Methodist camp to $100 for two weeks at Camp Monakiwa. The Girl Scout camp at Rio Blanco, four miles north of Crosbyton, operates with an annual budget of $19,000, including the salaries of the director, assistant director, counselors and kitchen staff. Total operating expenses for the Methodist camps at Ceta Canyon near Floydada and Camp Butman in Abilene amounted to $114,860.

Part of the operating budget is the salaries of the camp counselors. Carefully selected, counselors receive a nominal fee in addition to room and board. The average age of a counselor is 20 years old. All have completed high school and many attend college.

For those parents who are hesitant to send their children to camp, counselors are screened before receiving clearance. In applying for a Camp Fire Girl counselor, applicants list three recommendations and must "be morally responsible," said Mrs. Cobb. No smoking or drinking is permitted while on the camp grounds.

The counselors also undergo pre-camping training where they learn camp safety, programing and basic first aid procedures. The Girl Scout camp has written list available of procedures for weather and fire emergencies as well as for what to do in the event of a lost camper.

Camps today have a new look and attitude, added Mrs. Cobb. "Rigid programing is a thing of the past. Camps are selective, innovative in the programs they offer."

Depending on the camps, children are offered a variety of activities from outdoor activities to athletics and an assortment of arts and crafts, plus continuing "Christian education" as offered by the Methodist Conference camps.

The "buddy system" no longer is applied to camps and often is discouraged when parents register their children. If two friends enroll in the same camp, they are less likely to participate in the scheduled activities, Mrs. Cobb added. g"camping affords children a learning experience. It is vital to learn to know how to live with one's peers. Children learn how to be good losers and good winners."

Pilots Claimed Risk In Automobiles

AMSTERDAM, Netherlands (WNS) — "If you value your life, don't go driving with airplane pilots," said Sandra Raas, who has given them up after four automobile accidents while pilots were at the wheel.

"Pilots who fly safely all over the world become accident-prone when they are on the ground," insisted the former airline hostess.

"Dr. Malcolm Carruthers surveyed the subject and told me that pilots are 10 times more liktely to have serious car crashes than landbound drivers."

Citrus fruits are said to have originated in Asia on the far borders of China. The botanical name for sweet oranges is "Citrus sinensis," or Chinese citrus. The two Chinese ideographs for an orange tree literally translated mean "tree-sweet" or "sweet tree."

Party Honors Beadles

Mr. and Mrs. E.T. Beadles will be honored by their daughters and grandaughters with a reception from 2 to 5 p.m. today in their home marking their 60th wedding anniversary.

The children of the couple are Mrs. Edna Niblack of Dallas, Mrs. Earline Justice of Brownfield, and Mrs. Billie Wilmeth.

The former Maude Felkner and Beadles were married July 13, 1916 in Sulphur Springs.

The couple moved to Lubbock in 1928. Beadles was a barber until 1972. Both are members of the Bacon Heights Baptist Church.

Clip 'n' Cook

CHOCOLATE MALT BARS

2 cups all-purpose flour
1 cup sugar
1/2 cup firmly packed brown sugar
1 tsp. baking powder
1/2 tsp. salt
3/4 cup butter or margarine
1 egg
3/4 cup chopped nuts, if desired

FILLING:
1 pkg. fudge frosting mix
1/3 cup instant malted milk mix
8-oz. pkg. cream cheese, softened
1/4 cup milk
1 egg

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. (Lightly spoon flour into measuring cup; level off.) In large bowl, combine first seven ingredients; blend at low speed until crumbly. Stir in nuts. Reserve 1 cup crumb mixture; press remainder into ungreased 13x9-inch pan. In large bowl, combine Filling ingredients; beat until smooth. Pour over crumb crust. Sprinkle remaining crumb mixture over Filling. Bake 40-45 minutes until golden brown. Chill; cut into bars. Store in refrigerator. Makes 2-3 doz. bars.

DEVILED LIVER AND CHEESE SPREAD

Extension Update

Reports indicate that the number of new homes under construction in Lubbock is amazing. Figures for 1976 thus far indicate that this year's volume may be the largest ever in the history of the city.

Buyers of these and of used houses may be eligible for a homeowner warranty.

Structural aspects of the dwelling can be covered by the Home Owner's Warranty, a nationally insured program established in 1974. This is a voluntary program under which builders may give their customers a 10 year warranty on the new house.

If the house is sold within its first 10 years, the remainder of the coverage passes to the new owner.

A local warranty council adopts standards for workmanship and materials, based on those established by the National Association of Home Builders.

In shopping for a new house, ask if the builder offers the Home Owner's Warranty, then compare warranties of different developers or check with the local home builders' association.

During the first year, the builder must make good on any failures to meet construction standards such as faulty insulation, improper construction and plumbing and electrical defects. There is no cost to the homeowner for this.

After the second year, a national insurance plan directly insures the consumer against major structural defect for the next eight years. Should the builder fail in his obligation during the first two years, the contract will be honored by the company that underwrites the HOW program.

If you decide to purchase the HOW-insured house, take a 'walk-through' the house with the builder and list anything you wnat fixed. Although this is a standard procedure when any new home is purchased, it is also a HOW requirement.

Be sure to get a copy of the warranty agreement, a consumer information booklet and your 'certificate of participation' in the master insurance policy that underwrites the warranty. You should also return any manufacturer's warranty cards on furnace, air conditioner and major appliances.

If your microwave oven has a glass tray in the bottom, check the manufacturer's instructions before using a browning dish. A browning dish not manufactured for that model may become too hot for the glass tray.

Crepes add touch of elegance to anything they surround. Try filling your main dish crepes with seafood, cheese or chicken in a seasoned cream sauce or soup mix. Crepes make exciting side dishes and desserts as well. They can be as simple as fruit filled crepes or as elaborate as a flaming crepe suzette of sugar, butter and orange peel set a blaze with liqueur.

To give jeans a well worn appearance, rub the knees, pocket edges, seat and crotch with a fine emery board or sandpaper.

Hobbiest Says Pet Fish Require Attention

By LYNN HOHERTZ
Family News Staff

Fish need care just like any other pet, claims tropical fish enthusiast Rocky Muehlbrad.

"Fish aren't that difficult to keep," he maintains, "but problems arise when the fish are neglected by someone who does not know how to care for them."

Muehlbrad said he'd cross bred guppies as a child and returned to the hobby about three years ago.

He had some recommendations for persons just getting started in the field including two basics: "Fish are pets and they need care. You can't just buy some, dump them in a tank and forget them.

"Water is their home. A lot of people neglect this. If something goes wrong, people shouldn't just look at the fish; they should check the water," he claims.

Tank size is the first thing to determine in setting up an aquarium, he said. "I find that most people after having a small aquarium want to get a bigger one. They usually stop around the 55 gallon size," he said.

"Fish are happier and healthier in bigger tanks. But they are compatible to the aquarium they're in and won't out grow their domain. A fish that normally grows 10-12 inches won't grow full lenghth in a small tank." he said.

A 29-gallon tank is a good medium size in which fish can be raised to average size.

Once size is determined, it is best to buy a kit usually including the tank, heater, pump and undergravel filter. The filter will cut the necessary complete cleanings from once a month to once every year and a half year providing there are no other problems.

The fish are the next step. He recommended starting with fresh water fish. "Remember that some types of fish won't get along," Muehlbrad said. "Some are community fish some are not. Fish are classified into two groups, active and passive. It's not a good rule to combine the types.

"The passive fish may lose color, quit eating and die when constantly exposed to an active fish," he explained. Don't over load fish in the tank, he warned. Up to ten medium sized fish would be about right for a 29-gallon tank.

"The aquarium layout depends on what you want and what type of fish. Fish are delicate. Be sure not to over or under landscape. They need plants to hide behind and caves to dart into. Even though a fish always may have lived in a tank, he has traits which require him to live in an environment most like the native habitat of his species.

"Plastic plants are better than live ones," the hobbiest commented. "Live plants do not thrive in aquarium water and will die and clog the filter. Also fish have a tendency to nip at them making the plants ragged.

"Don't get so carried away with landscaping that the fish won't be able to swim freely in the tank," he instructed.

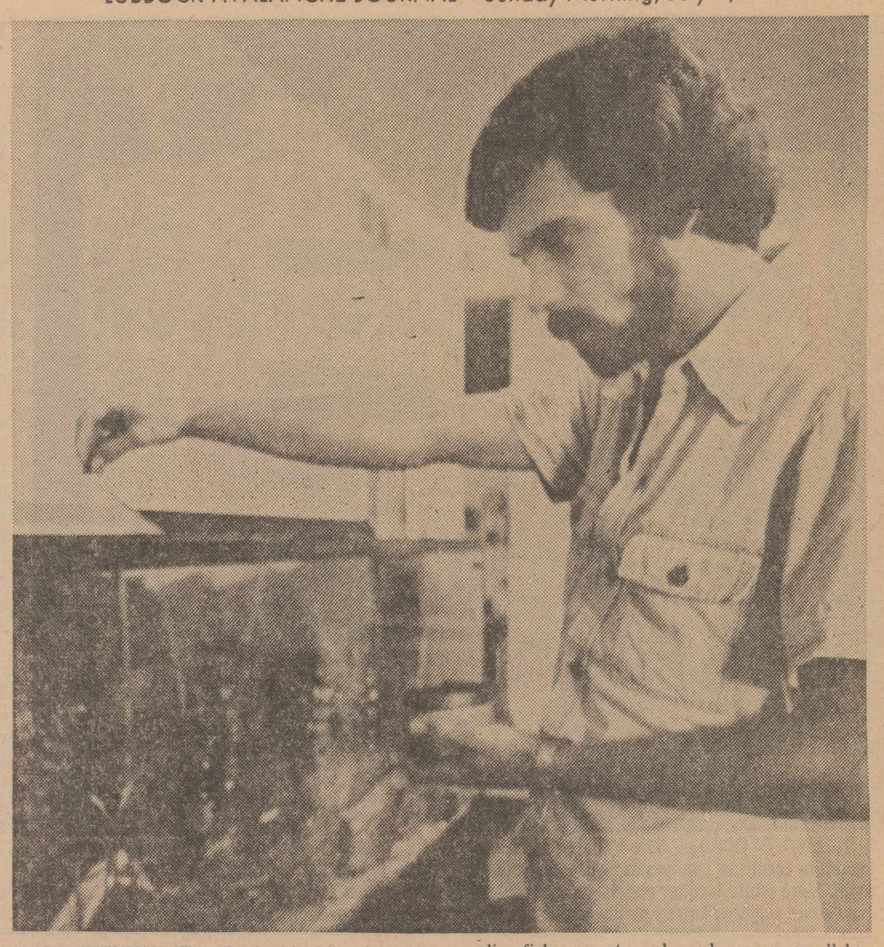

Diet is another important consideration. Different fish eat different foods — such as plankton, white shrimp or worms. Some fish only eat other fish, he said.

As for care, Muehlbrad said he siphons out 25 per cent of the water and replaces it every two weeks. "Many people just replace water that has evaporated. This isn't good for the fish because all the good elements in the water evaporates.

"Always treat the water you're adding in," he said. "Lubbock has hard water and the chemicals stay in. There is also the chlorine factor. Treating water neutralizes the chemicals and adds a protective coating to the fish. As you add the new water splash it into the tank. This knocks the chlorine out," he explained.

"A 29-gallon aquarium can be set up correctly for about $75 depending on the type of fish," he said.

"Fresh water fish are a lot different from salt water fish. You need to keep this in mind. Salt water fish depend alot on the person keeping them. Don't rush into it if you aren't knowledgable. If you don't have at least a year's experience with tropical fish don't attempt it. They are five times more expensive and 50 times more complicated," he estimated.

FISH ENTHUSIAST — Rocky Muehlbrad, tropical fish hobbiest, scatters a variety of food on top of his 135-gallon aquarium. "People need to realize fish are pets and need proper care," he said. (Staff Photos)

TROPICAL BREEZE PINEAPPLE DESSERT

1 cup all purpose or unbleached flour*
1 pkg. coconut almond or coconut pecan frosting mix (reserve part for filling)
1/2 tsp. salt
3/4 cup butter or margarine, softened
Filling: 14-oz. can sweetened condensed milk (not evaporated)
1/2 cup lemon juice
20-oz. can (2 1/2 cups) crushed pineapple, drained
Reserved frosting mix
9-oz. carton frozen whipped non-dairy topping, thawed*

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. (To measure flour and frosting mix, lightly spoon into measuring cup; level off.) In large bowl, combine flour, 1 cup frosting mix, salt, and butter; blend well. Press in ungreased 13x9-inch pan. Bake 20 to 25 minutes until golden brown.

In large bowl, combine condensed milk with lemon juice. Stir in pineapple and remaining frosting mix. (If desired, reserve 2 tbsps. frosting mix to sprinkle over filling.) Fold in whipped topping. Pour over crust. Sprinkle with 2 tbsps. reserved frosting, if desired. Chill: cut into squares. Store in refrigerator. Makes 12 to 15 squares.

*If using self-rising flour, omit salt. One package whipped topping mix, prepared as directed, may be substituted for frozen whipped topping.

League Schedules Film Presentation Tuesday

The Lubbock chapter of Childbirth Without Pain Education League will sponsor a film festival Tuesday in the Mesa Room of the University Center of Texas Tech University.

"Celebration of Birth" is the theme of the event which will include showings of three groups of films.

The programs at 3 p.m. and 8 p.m. will include the films "The Story of Eric," "Birth Without Violence," "Mother and Child," and "First Two Weeks of Life."

The 6 p.m. program will feature "Having A Section Is Having A Family," "Birth Without Violence," "Mother and Child" and "First Two Weeks of Life."

Physicians will be available for questions at all film showings.

The programs are open to the public, and designed particularly for those interested in childbirth and early family experiences, including professionals, parents and expectant parents.

The Childbirth League is a non-profit organization which provides classes in the Lamaze method of prepared childbirth. The film programs are free.

UNLIBERATED CRIMINALS

A popular belief is that the growing number of crimes being committed by women is the direct result of the feminist movement. Two women penologists have conducted a study which shows female inmates still define themselves as " wives and mothers." Further, a national organization for female justice has found "The women prisoners in this country are not tuned in to women's lib."

Weddings

Robinson

Cindy Lough and Stacy Robinson exchanged marriage vows at 5 p.m. Saturday in Ford Memorial Chapel of First Baptist Church. The Rev. Everett Ward, pastor of Colonial Baptist Church, officiated.

Entertainment Sparks Fly In Tech Tent Show

BY PAT HENRY
Amusements Editor

Treat yourself to a Bicentennial birthday present.

Take in the New Harley Sadler Tent Show. Not just on one night, but on three, so you can catch each play and each vaudeville routine.

Tonight would be a good time to start, although the show's three-week run extends to July 16. Billed as a special event, this program will feature a reunion of old-time tent show troupers, some of whom have assisted Texas Tech University students in their reconstruction of the famous trveling repertory theater popular in this area during the first 40 years of the century.

A-J REVIEW

No sweat. The big tent near the Museum at Tech is cool and clean.

Expect to participate. Maybe in the bally candy sale which kicks off each show; maybe in juggler Pate Church's hilarious holler-off; maybe in letting yourself get caught up in the farce and melodrama of old-time theater.

Expect to relate. Time-honored gags and business work as well today as ever.

Tonight's play, "A Texas Steer," is almost as old as the tent show circuit but it hits home with lines such as these delivered by Texas Congressman Maverick Brander: "I didn't come to Washington to be shown the town at night and be brought home in the morning" and "Is it the usual thing for a Congressman to have a private secretary?"

The farce is directed by Richard Weaver and I don't see how he could have made it funnier.

Another broad comedy is "The Awakening of John Slater, " about the effects of the big city on country people, kinfolks of the Beverly Hillbillies.

This is a tent show classic and director Clifford Ashby, who supervised the entire reconstruction, has carefully retained its folksy, exaggerated manner.

In this play, you can meet Toby, the traditional rube who clowned in farce as well as in vaudeville acts. Toby was Sadler's favorite role.

By deadline time, I had seen "One Foot in Heaven" only in dress rehearsal. I have never watched people working so hard as that company of 30 youngsters.

The rehearsal was on Monday afternoon when they were still struggling to get the tent in order after big wind damage the week before. The tent, cool in the evenings, is an oven in the afternoons and the session, off to a delayed start, lasted at least four hours.

Each time director Ronald Schulz interrupted the rehearsal to straighten out a problem, the actors, jolted out of character, sagged in exhaustion. But this type of perfectionism gives that professional touch to the tent show.

You can stake a bag of New Harley Sadler Tent Show peanuts that you'll like the polished "One Foot in Heaven," a papa-was-a-preacher saga with smiles and sobs. The actors take it seriously. So will you.

Although the Sadler shows avoided "star" emphasis, several members from this devoted and competent company may particularly catch your eye, especially if you've watched them all year in Tech dramas.

Brad Williams switches roles every night: Toby, the preacher, the boistrous grit from Texas. And, staying in those characters, he does the come-on for the candy sale and emcees the olio. Sometimes, he dons a white tutu to join the most amazing "Swan Lake" pas de trois.

On one night, Robin Llewellyn gives a patriotic reading; the next, she plays an overwhelming choir director; and, on the third, she lets her hair down as a good old Texas gal.

Phil Caffey seems to have an unlimited capacity for characterizations, from Father the farmer, to Yell the semi-bad Texan, to Hartzell the preacher's kid. As the last, he has a great moment when he wonders if he is disintegrating into "an empty shell."

A Tech newcomer from the stage at Abilene Christian University is Lindy Kyker. In these shows, she spells "Mother" two

BALLY CANDY SALE — It's called ballyhoo and in the old days it pushed the sale of a boxed confection that actually wasn't much of a treat to eat. "Buy it fast so we can get away before you taste it," jokes pitchman Brad Williams at the New Harley Sadler Tent Show. Actually, today's version of the candy tastes pretty good and proceeds benefit a Texas Tech University drama scholarship fund. The pitchman and the candy sellers are members of the casts and they stay in character and costume for the sale. Pictured above is Lindy Kyker dressed for her role as Mrs. Brander, Texas ranch wife in "A Texas Steer." Pitchman Williams briefly touts the candy, displays a big board of donated prizes — there's a coupon for a prize in every box, he guarantees — and, before the audience realizes it, catches up the spectators in a contest about which side of the tent will buy the most candy. Tent Show Calendar

Tickets for the New Harley Sadler Tent Show may be purchased at the door or ordered from the University Theatre, Box 4298, Texas Tech University, Lubbock, 79409.

Ticket prices are $3 for orchestra seats; $1.50 for general admission. Information about group rates is available at 742-2153. Tech students are admitted for half price.

The plays are rotated, repertory style, through July 16. Curtain time is 8:15 p.m.

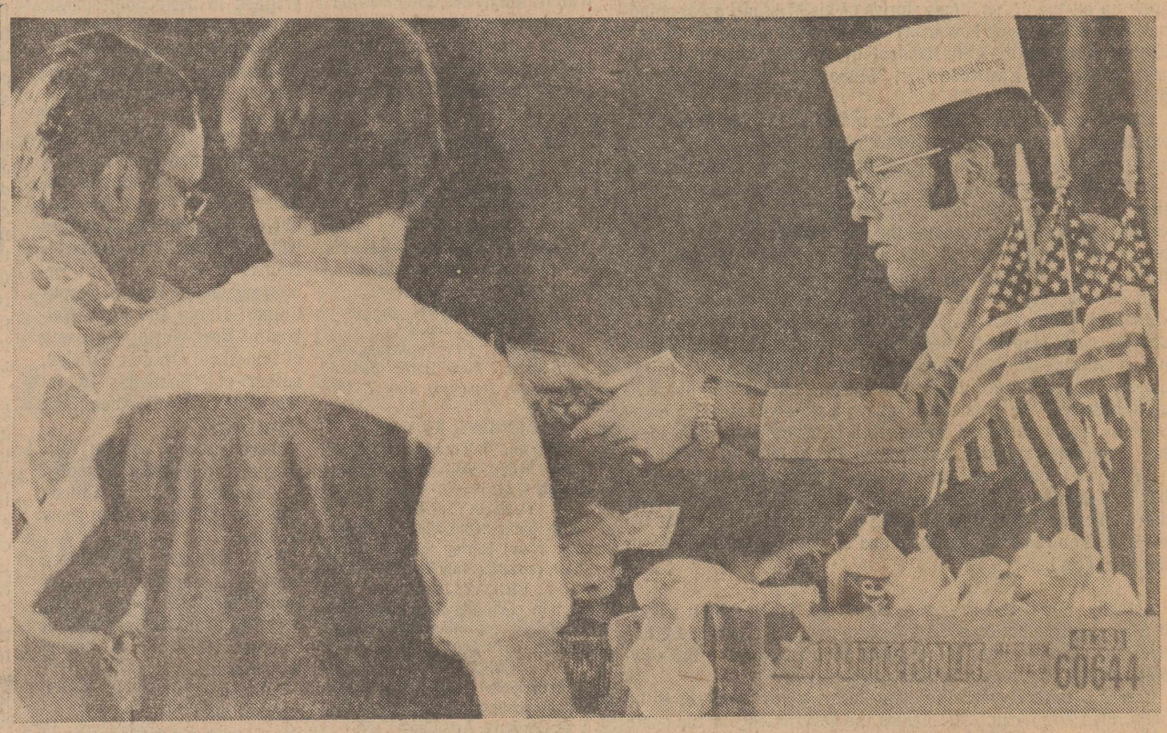

The schedule: "The Awakening of John Slater," today, Wednesday, Saturday, July 13, July 16.

"A Texas Steer," Monday, Thursday, July 11, July 14.

"One Foot in Heaven," Tuesday, Friday, July 12, July 15.

FAMILY TREAT — "A Sunday school show" was an early-day description of the Harley Sadler traveling tent theater. The famous showman insisted on clean entertainment. Any player who uttered a four-letter word was required to deposit a fine in a "cuss box." The current reconstruction of the tent show is bright and fast enough to keep the interest of a spectator of any age. Enjoying the Tech production above is the Jack Rennels family of Muleshoe. The 13-month-old charmer, Gilrobert, seems completely charmed.

BICENTENNIAL RAZZAMATAZZ — The tent show is a relic of Americana. The current reconstruction playing through July 16 on the grounds of the Museum at Texas Tech University is a successful attempt to recreate the atmosphere of a traveling repertory theater. Vendor Max Baxter, above, keeps the audience supplied with soft drinks and peanuts. Breezes from the lowered sides of the tent keep the audience as cool as if they were on their front porches. Cliff Ashby, director of the Tech reconstruction project, has encouraged a setup that permits the audience to come and go, take pictures and relax. Dress is casual. And the entertainment is inexpensive: $3 for reserved seats (colorful, comfortable director's chairs); $1.50, general admission bleachers (not too comfortable, but cushions are available). Every seat in the house is a good one. Tech students are admitted for half price.

MAVERICK BRANDER — Charles Seat plays a Texas rancher elected to Congress in "A Texas Steer." The farce is one of three plays presented in the Tech tent show repertory. Seat also has roles in the other productions. In the days of tent show tours, an actor had to be a quick study. If he could play a musical instrument or do a vaudeville act, he was doubly valuable because he could be in the band or in the olio. (Cast photos by staff photographer Joe Don Buckner)

SANTA FE — Josey Wales may soon be as familiar to moviegoers as Dirty Harry.

"The Outlaw Josey Wales," Clint Eastwood's film based on Texan Forrest Carter's book, "Gone to Texas," has just been released (playing in Lubbock at the Fox). And Eastwood's film company, Malpaso, has already purchased movie rights to Carter's sequel, "The Vengeance Trail of Josey Wales."

Moviegoers are ready for a really good western — that's what the industry has been saying this year. Since May, I have attended press showings of three films touted as crackerjack westerns. After "The Last Hard Men," reporters groaned. After "Buffalo Bill," they woke up. After "The Outlaw Josey Wales" in Santa Fe this week, they applauded; some even whistled like kids at a Saturday matinee cowboy adventure, of which "The Outlaw Josey Wales" is but a more sophisticated interpretation. Eastwood spent $4 million on this single-minded film; that's half the cost of "Missouri Breaks," a recent western that rides off in several directions at once. And Eastwood filmed the movie in a speedy nine weeks.

"I think this is the best I've done," said Eastwood at a press conference after the preview here. "Technically, it's good. But I'm not objective. I've lived with every frame." Eastwood played the title role and directed the movie. I think he did a good job with Carter's book. Eastwood said that Carter had not assisted in the screenplay and would probably see the picture for the first time next week.

In 1973, Carter published "Gone to Texas" himself and sent one of the 75 copies to Eastwood, who immediately saw film possibilities and bought the rights. Then Delacorte Press picked up the book, which met with national success last summer.

Carter, who lives in Dallas County, is official storyteller in the Council to the Cherokee Nations. He is part Cherokee, as is his fictional hero, Josey Wales.

In the story, Wales is a vengeance-bound "pistolman," a border raider of the post-Civil War era. This appealed to Eastwood, who grew up on the Jesse James stories of his Missouri great-grandmother. "It's amazing how many outlaws came out of one state," Eastwood said with a grin. Incidentally, some actors in the movie say, "Missour-i." Eastwood says, "Missour-a," the way Grandma did.

Eastwood considered filming the movie in the Big Bend area, where Carter set the story. "But we needed a lot of things within a certain range," explained Eastwood, referring to locales that call for a farm scene in Cass County, Mo., a trek across Indian territory, and an assortment of shoot-outs in rugged Texas canyons. Arizona and Utah seemed the most practical area to him, so he set up in the Sonora desert, the Paria Canyon and Tucson. Bruce Surtees' photography does justice to these locations.

In casting the role of Josey's Indian companion, Eastwood chose Chief Dan George. The exchanges of humor between Josey and the chief help keep the Carter flavor in the film. Basically, it's an amusing story: after refusing Union amnesty, Josey strikes out for Mexico but acquires a burdensome retinue: the old Indian, a homeless boy, a talkative squaw, a slow-witted girl, a bossy old lady and a mean red hound. Hell is where Josey is headed, says someone at the start of the movie. But he ends up in Texas.

"You can't anticipate Carter's story. That's what I liked about it," said Eastwood. "It takes a lot of twists that most stories don't take. You think Josey's going to ride with the kid, but the kid dies. You think he's going to end up with the Indian girl, but the chief gets her."

Actually, this movie is easy to anticipate. That's why it works. It is a new presentation of an American myth, that of frontier justice. The characters are archetypical; their reactions in this cowboy morality play are predictable and satisfying.

Comes a time in your life, says Josey, when "you got to be plain, mad dog mean." He blames the government for the death of his family and, later, for the massacre of his band of raiders. The U.S. Cavalry, bounty hunters, Comancheros, Comanches, Texas Rangers — Josey must confront them all. And he's lean and mean, all right. He fires his pistols with a grandiose flourish — perhaps this gesture of Eastwood is meant to represent the recoil of the big Colts, but it comes off as if, with each shot, Josey is scoring a graceful coup on an enemy. Josey never misses and he spits tobacco juice on the corpses. ("I hated chewing tobacco, but anything that works —," said Eastwood. "It put me in the right mood.")

Josey's face-to-face challenge of Ten Bears, his Comanche counterpart, is the dramatic episode which sold Eastwood on Carter's story. In the book, Josey dons war paint and rides alone into Ten Bears' war party. Unfortunately, after reels of climactic moments in the movie, this sequence seems superfluous. I think it's because Eastwood has cut Josey's Indian heritage from the movie characterization. I asked Eastwood why. He said he didn't think that facet of Josey was necessary to the movie's intent. "Forrest, who's part Cherokee, had fantasized himself as Josey." Eastwood believes the movie captures the important part of the Ten Bears confrontation. Both the Indian and Josey are "very tired" of running. To Eastwood, this makes a point of identification for the audience in the current era of "doubts about politicians and government manipulation."

In the book, Josey is a mountain man by inheritance, not land-hungry. Without going into this, the movie puts across the idea that Josey is weary of saddle-living and he just wants a place to exist. That's why Texas appeals to him. And, of course, folks don't ask questions in Texas. The hospitable saloon crowd who helps Wales and his "family" settle down on a Texas ranch, does the state proud.

It's a violent movie. Eastwood's defense: "The violence is more in imagination than on screen. It's a tough story about a tough period in history. I carry four guns at all times."

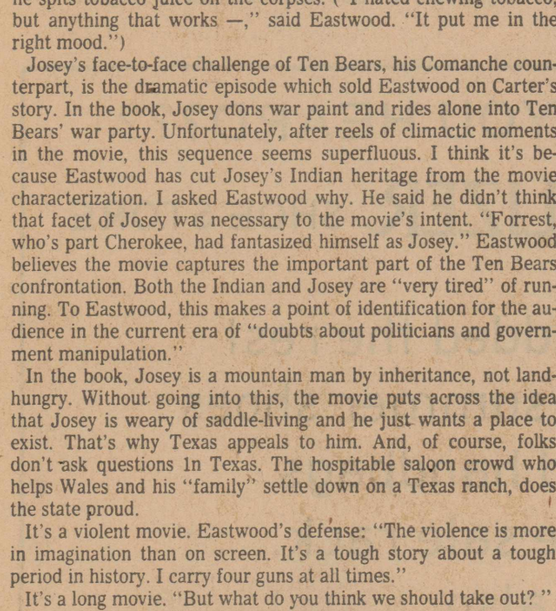

It's a long movie. "But what do you think we should take out?"

In Carter's newly published sequel, the pistolman heads into Mexico after rurales who have kidnapped Ten Spot, the friendly Texas gambler of the first story.

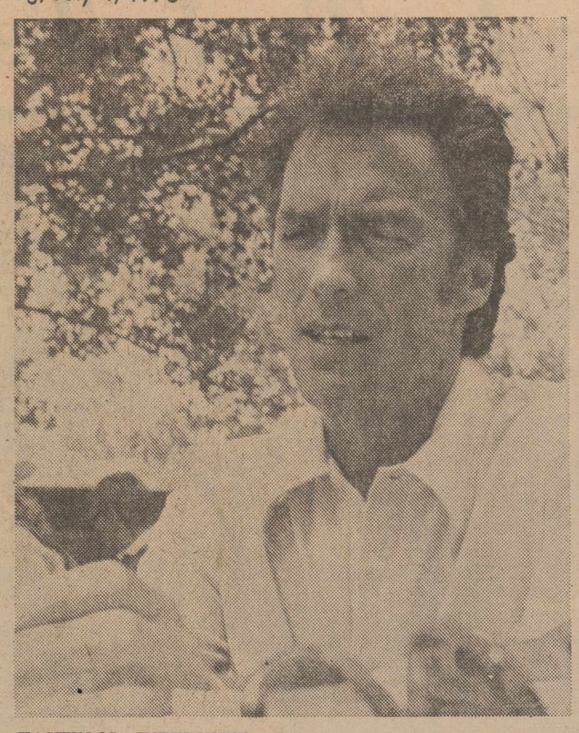

* * * *

Like Eastwood, Sondra Locke, who plays the gentle, vulnerable girl who attaches herself to Josey, is proud of the picture. At the press conference, she said Eastwood is "a director who knows exactly what he wants when he walks on the set."

"He never overuses the gore." In the movie, she's the victim of an attempted rape. As an actress, she didn't feel demeaned by this sequence. "It's not a token rape. It's meant to show the hardships of the frontier — just an averge day in the west."

'JOSEY WALES' — Clint Eastwood believes that a motivation of revenge and frustration justifies the violence in his new movie. He's already planning a sequel.

EASTWOOD INTERVIEW—"I have a house and a pickup truck and an old Mercedes. I don't think much about money." Actor-director Clint Eastwood, pictured at a Santa Fe press conference, thinks the theatrical western is here to stay and he's planning a sequel to his new movie, "The Outlaw Josey Wales." Both movies are based on novels by Texan Forrest Carter. Right now, Eastwood is working on "The Enforcer," another Dirty Harry saga. In the center picture is Sondra Locke, who plays the girl who helps Josey settle down. She said, "Boy, I'm in awe of Clint. He's impressive as a talent and as a director." Eastwood comments on "Josey" in Close-Up. (Staff Photos by Don Henry) ways: as a long-suffering preacher's wife and as a Texas ranchwoman, who looks as if she dressed in a sandstorm.

Tent Show Review

You'll be impressed by the way the entire company copes with traffic noises, the informal crowd, cramped scene changes.

If an actor is confronted with laughter because he has hastily, and not adequately costumed himself, he recoups his poise, finishes dressing on stage, and draws on the incident for a few extra laughs.

There are no dull moments. Olio acts, costumed and choreographed to perfection, sparkle up the intermission. My favorite is a hobo routine by Charles Addington, a giant beside his partner, 5-year-old Sharla Sutters.

Each olio features at least one performance by a tent show old-timer. Tonight's old-timer has not been announced but on hand for the festivities will be Henry and Mercedes Brunks of Wichita, Kan.; Erman and Goldie Gray of Corpus Christi; Harve and Euna Holland of Fort Worth; Gil Lamb of Muleshoe; Dr. Jerry Mickel, author of "Footlights Across the rairie"; Don Blaxham; and Olive Berry.

Special guests will be relatives of Harley Sadler, who died a state senator from Abilene after his retirement from show business.

Williams and Sylvia Ashby wrote the "Harley Sadler Song," with which the company opens and closes the show.

After that final chorus, the students prance into the audience to shake hands and invite you back for another show.

TRUMPETER — Lubbockite Clay Jenkins says he hopes "to create some positive energy" on a Soviet Union tour with the North Texas State University One O'Clock Stage Band.

Lubbock Student Tours Russia With Lab Band

DENTON (Special) — Former Monterey High School student Clay Jenkins will be playing in two concerts today in Leningrad. One of these programs was scheduled to be broadcast via satellite this morning as part of NBC's all-day Bicentennial special.

Jenkins is a trumpet player in the North Texas State University One O'Clock Lab Band, which is touring the Soviet Union.

The month-long tour, sponsored by the U.S. State Department, is due to wind up Wednesday.

Jenkins is the son of Mr. and Mrs. William Jenkins of 2301 56th St. He is working on a degree in music education and plays club dates in the Dallas-Fort Worth area.

Members of the Lab Band are drawn from nine bands in the School of Music's jazz lab band program. Last year its album, "Lab '75," received the first Grammy nomination ever given to a collegiate band in the big band jazz category.

The Lab band was the official big band of the Montreux International Jazz Festival in 1970 and in 1967 was the first collegiate band to be invited to play at the White House.

The tour itinerary included Lison, Oporto, Moscow, Tbil isi and Yerevan.

"I am looking forward to seeing what the Soviets' response is to our music," said Jenkins, before he left.

BOOK MARKS

DOLORES. By Jacqueline Susann. Morrow. 201 Pages. $6.95.

It's hard to find much good to say about Jacqueline Susann's final novel. Unless it's the fact that it's easy on the eyes, printed with lots of white space and wide margins — apparently so the book wouldn't appear as slim as the plot.

It's easy on the intellect, too, being couched in short "see Jane run"-type sentences. The dialogue runs to stilted speeches such as: "Tomorrow you must sleep and catch up with the jet lag. The parties start the following day. And a good round of them we have, too, finalizing with a ball of our own in your honor at the country estate."

The story begins with Dolores, who is always called Dolo and hates it, returning to Washington on Air Force One as the widow of James T. Ryan, "affectionately called Jimmy by everyone." The country's most charismatic president, he has just been assassinated — in New Orleans.

It ends with Dolores' marriage to the wealthy and powerful 60ish Baron Erick de Savonne, with whom her beautiful and younger sister Nita is in love.

In between there are not too many surprises for anyone who's been reading the newspapers the past dozen or so years.

Dolores becomes the darling of the press, is escorted by her handsome brother-in-law, is chummy with her dowager mother-in-law and keeps a motherly eye on her daughter and younger twin sons.

She has her financial problems, having been left an annual allowance of only $30,000. And she has her romantic problems, being in love with a man who married for money and must remarry for the same reason when his wife conveniently dies.

While Miss Susann's previous best sellers, "Valley of the Dolls," "The Love Machine" and "Once Is Not Enough," were hardly great literature, they did have plot and action and characters that showed some motivation.

This book was completed shortly before the author died and perhaps it would have been better to leave her reputation as a story teller intact. But there will undoubtedly be enough of her fans eager to read one last Susann novel to make this a best seller too, despite its shortcomings.

Those who enjoyed Robinson Crusoe will doubtless be intrigued by this brief story of a man who, as the sole survivor of a plane wreck, swims to an apparently deserted African shore.

He is in good physical shape but a blow on the head sustained when the plane ditched has blotted out his memory.

What follows is a fascinating account of how a man with no weapons, no tools, no clothes and not even any recalled experience to draw upon manages to survive. He even manages a fairly comfortable existence in an alien Eden.

Step by step he manages to find food, provide shelter and even clothe himself with leaves and bark and later animal skins. He first learns how to hunt with a crude spear armed with a sharp stone point. Then he makes a bow and arrow that enables him to bring down much larger game from a considerable distance.

When lightning strikes a tree, the man discovers the mystery of fire, and figures out how to start a blaze with sharp sticks. Now he not only cooks his quarry but sets up a crude kiln to bake crude stew pots he has fashioned from the clay beneath his feet.

His homes range from a crude nest in a tree, to a snug sort of wigwam and finally a cave he has stumbled upon.

The author shows a considerable knowledge of the wilderness and the habits of wild animals that gives veracity to the story.

The tenor of the book suddenly changes, however, when the castaway happens upon an armed group of men and women who have fled a hostile ruler. With disconcerting suddenness, our hero starts talking, engages in a debate with the group's leader and finally performs an act of self-sacrifice that is noble but somewhat confusing. All in all, however, it's an engrossing tale.

Here Comes Show Wagon

The Lubbock Area Square and Round Dance Federation will present an exhibition of square dancing from the stage of the Show Wagon this week.

The wagon, new this summer, rolls into city parks for free evening entertainment. Spectators come and go as they like and many bring blankets or lawn chairs.

The shows begin at 7:30 p.m.

MONDAY — Wagner Park

TUESDAY — Ribble

THURSDAY — Woods

FRIDAY — Higinbotham

The regular Sunday Municipal Band concert in Clapp Park will not be held today.

Library Friends Change Book Recycling Event

The annual book recycle has been rescheduled by the Friends of the Library, the sponsoring organization.

This sale, which benefits the Lubbock City-County Library, has been postponed from its usual summer date to Sept. 17, 18.

"During the summer many people are out of town. The fall date will give more people a chance to come to the sale," said Joy Vann, president of the Friends.

Donated books for the sale are collected year-round and stored at either library. Containers of donated books should be marked, "FOL." Book collection boxes will be place in local stores in August.

Collections too large to be brought to the library will be picked up. The number to call for this service is 795-6754 or 795-5128.

FOL is encouraging the donation of paperback and hard-cover books, large collections, records or money designated for books.

From donated books, the library selects those which can be used on its shelves. Other books are placed in the sale.

Forty-one years ago, in 1935, an idea was born. It was a simple idea: provide the people of Southeast Texas with quality prescription eyewear. And make this service extremely convenient in every way. Under the direction of Dr. S. J. Rogers and Dr. N. Jay Rogers, Texas State Optical went into business.

Beginning with one office in downtown Beaumont, through an ever-increasing patronage, TSO made its service available in city after city until today there are 132 offices located in Texas; from Orange to El Paso — from Brownsville to Amarillo. There are also TSO offices in New Mexico and Louisiana. More than 1200 associates serve TSO patrons.

During these years of growth TSO's dedication to the principle of providing prescription eyewear became widely known and literally millions of people have sought and received TSO service.

Prescription lenses from TSO are made in two modern laboratories by highly skilled optical technicians, each a specialist in the step-by-step processing so necessary to precision-made opthalmic lenses. Only the most up-to-date methods and equipment are used in processing and finishing lenses of the finest quality ophthalmic glass or plastic.

In contact lenses, too, TSO excels. Since 1939 TSO has made almost a million pair of contact lenses, both single vision and bifocal.

TSO patrons rely on the fact that fashion is always uppermost where eyewear is involved. Accordingly, TSO offers more frames from which to choose than just about anyone. Designer frames from Givenchy, Christian Dior, Oscar de la Renta and many others afford patrons the type and variety of eyewear today's fashions demand.

TSO offers a convenient credit plan at no additional cost. Bank Americard and Master Charge are also honored at all TSO offices.

Our idea has come a long way. And we think there is a very good reason for it. At TSO . . . we care how you look at life . . . and how life looks at you.

Hayloft To Open Comedy

"Eat Your Heart Out," a comedy about an aspiring actor, opens July 13 at the Hayloft Dinner Theater.

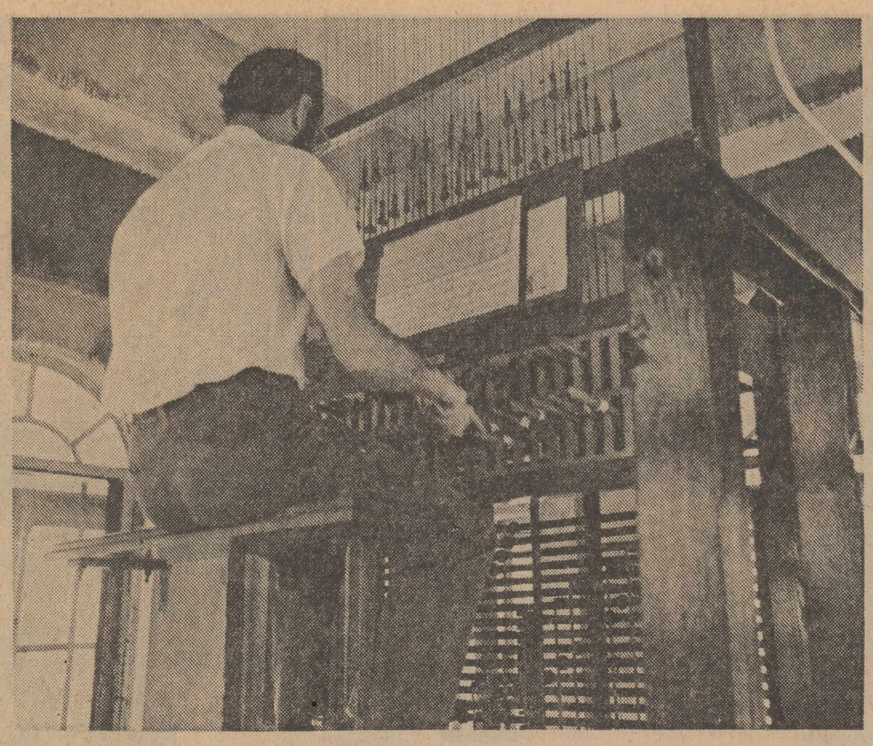

The current show is another comedy, "What Did We Do Wrong?"

The upcoming comedy is set in a literal dream world. The actor, who is supporting himself as a waiter in New York City, auditions for roles and then dreams about each experience.

Four of the cast members must change identities throughout the play to fit into these dream sequences.

CARILLON CONCERT — Dr. Judson Maynard, of the Texas Tech University music faculty, will present a program of Bicentennial music at 1:05 p.m. today on the carillon in the west tower of the Tech administration building. The concert will immediately follow the nationwide sounding of the Liberty and other bells. Among the selections will be the world premiere of Suite for Carillon by Dr. Mary Jeanne van Appledorn, of Tech. (Staff Photo by Pauline Warner)

SPC Four Cops Top

LEVELLAND (Special) — South Plains Bluegrass, a product of the year-old country music degree program at South Plains College, is gaining area recognition.

Having just placed first in last week's Little River Bluegrass Festival band contest, SP Bluegrass has accepted a return engagement, July 13-15, at the Bluegrass Kingdom Park in Cement, Okla. The group entertained there earlier at the Spring Fever Festival

More than 25 bands attended the Little River festival near Norman, Okla. SP Bluegrass won the top prize of $200.

The four members of the ensemble will share some of the money and will place the rest in "a kitty," according to Gary Perkins of Lubbock, bass placyer

Other players are Tim McCasland of Lubbock, banjo; Rick Dennington of Lubbock, guitar; and Debbie Wells of Morton, guitar. The members also sing.

Perkins said that SP Bluegrass is considering a tour of Panhandle clubs.

"Not too many clubs in Lubbock like bluegrass," said Perkins, adding that "Not too many clubs in Lubbock like bluegrass," said Perkins, adding that "Not too many clubs in Lubbock like bluegrass," said Perkins, adding that "Not too many clubs in Lubbock like bluegrass," said Perkins, adding that the group was available for bookings.

The numbers which won the contest were "Shuckin' the Corn," "On My Mind," "Sunny Side of the Mountain" and "Hit Parade of Love.".

Floydada Sets Exhibit On U.S. Theater Past

FLOYDADA (Special) — "Theater in America," a Bicentennial exhibit, will be displayed at the Floyd County Historical Museum through August.

One of 12 traveling exhibitions sponsored by the Moody Foundation of Galveston and the Humanities Research Center of the University of Texas, this display surveys the influences which have swayed the development of theater in this country.

Books, manuscripts and art works highlight the European heritage and the energetic American thesbians of the 19th century, as well as paying respect to the grandiose style of opera in the first part of this century.

The exhibit features American authors who formed the distinctive American style of the legitimate stage.

PROCLAIMING LIBERTY—Michael Dvoracek, 11, son of Mr. and Mrs. Marvin Dvoracek of 4823 16th St., stops, looks and listens proudly as the mission-type bell of St. Stephen's Episcopal Church at 5011 11th St., rings out the blessings of liberty and religious freedom. Mike said he was proud to be an acolyte of the church and would be serving today at services of that church in the northwest sector of Lubbock. This, and other church bells of the city, will ring at 1 p.m. (CDT) today joining bells across the nation to honor the Bicentennial observance of the United States. (Staff Photos by Joe Don Buckner)

Positive Thinking

Norman Vincent Peale

ANYONE WHO knows anything knows that life isn't always easy. It can be filled with hard knocks and tough blows. But you can take one of several attitudes about a blow. You can fold and give up. You can be defeated. You can become bitter and angry. Or you can try to turn that blow into an asset.

Turn it into an asset? Yes, really! How will you ever lick a problem if you don't even try? A defeatist attitude never answers anything. When a difficult problem confronts you, never limit yourself to seeing the bad possibilities. Who knows—there may be tremendous opportunities in a rough problem if you look positively at that difficult situation and try to handle it.

I talked to a man who had successfully built up a fair-sized business over great odds and despite many difficulties. His story was both inspiring and fascinating. What was the secret of his successs? He said it was the blows he experienced. "Adversity is a marvelous teacher," he told me; "Had I been pampered and prosperous all my life, I would have never become strong enough or developed know-how to meet my problems successfully."

Too Much Pampering Not Good

It's a fact that too much pampering and prosperity can not only make Jack a dull boy, but a soft one and therefore a pretty unhappy one too! Remember the story of the baby princes who were watched over and coddled, surrounded by doctors, valets, and nursemaids? Heaven forbid the child should sneeze! The whole palace would be in an uproar for the child's health was an affair of state.

The Empress Catherine II of Russia writes in her mrmoirs that her little son, Paul, was "placed in an extermely warm room, swaddled in flannel and laid in a cradle lined with black fox fur. Over him was a coverlet of quilted satin, and over that was one of rose-colored velvet lined with black fox. Many times I saw him put to bed this way, with the sweat pouring from his face and his whole body, so that when he grew older, if he got in the slightest draft, he would catch cold and it would make him ill."

That poor little prince was destroyed with the wrong kind of care and the wrong kind of affection. Prince Paul wasn't allowed to move a muscle or do anything for himself, for fear that he might become overtired. He had to save his strength. It is sad indeed, for had the little fellow been allowed to use his strenght, he would have grown into a strong man. He never had a chance to become anything but a weakling and so he was marked for life with the curse of failure.

Never Soften Up

Obviously this example may be extreme, but it is a fact that too much pampering either by self or others can make a person weak, chronically nervous, bored and unhappy. We may often think that things should be made a lot easier for everyone. But we had better not get too soft for that can lead to worse problems than difficulty, chief of which is the decay of strength.

The poet Schiller said, "Genuine morality is preserved only in the school of adversity; a state of continuous prosperity may easily prove a quicksand to virtue."

It was Horace, the great Roman thinker, who said, "Adversity has the effect of eliciting talents which in prosperous circumstances would have lain dormant."

Never soften up, for there will come a day you will have to summon your strength. Meet life's problems sturdily all your life and you will handle problems OK.

Churches In City Join Bell Ringing

Observances of the Independence Day that falls on Sunday in the Bicentennial year of 1976 at Lubbock churches today will range from the usual to the unusual; and from the old to the new, and in between.

The usual will be illustrated by many presentations of special music and sermons from the pulpits, and the unusual by picnics in the park, watermelon feasts, homemade ice cream suppers and other outdoor attractions for various congregations.

Also, the unusual will be the jump of five skydivers in parachutes onto an 82nd Street location at 12:45 p.m.

At this site, two blocks east of the intersection of 82nd Street and University Avenue, an old-fashioned barbecue and afternoon games for the congregation of the First Church of God will be underway. Here on 22 acres, the church plans to build a new sanctuary to replace one at 1601 44th St.

This skydiving stunt also could illustrate modern times or the new.

Illustrating the old will be a liturgy at Shepherd King Lutheran Church at 2122 W. 18th St. At the morning worship service there at 10:30 a.m., the Muhlenberg Liturgy, the first

City Churches Plan Observances Today

From the cross-topped bell tower of St. Paul's Episcopal Church at 1510 Ave. X to the mission-styled tower of St. Stephen's Episcopal Church, at 5011 11th St., church bells of Lubbock will join those of the nation at 1 p.m. (CDT) today proclaiming the blessings of liberty and religious freedom.

From the electrically-tolled bell atop vine-covered St. Elizabeth's Catholic Church at 2305 Main St. to the"Cathedral of the West" Lubbock's First United Methodist Church at the intersection of Broadway and Avenue M with its sweet-toned carillons, the Hub City bells will be included in the nation-wide salute to the America's 200th birthday from Agana, Guam, to Caribou, Maine.

As the bells of the nation ring in the third century of these United States, the words of the Bible will vibrate to the sound.

Circling the beloved Liberty Bell, which sorrowfully will remain silent , completely muted now by its famous crack, are words from the Old Testament: "Proclaim liberty throughout all the land unto all the inhabitants thereof (Lev. 25.10).

The ringing bells today in Lubbock will be echoed across the wide-sky of the South Plains and West Texas as every community and town, city and country church takes up the tolling. The ringing of bells is an official part of the Bicentennial observance both here and across the United States to commemorate the 200th annlversary of the ringing of the Liberty Bell announcing the adoption of the Declaration of Independence.

Although the beloved Liberty Bell will be silent, the 100-year-

MY ANSWER

By BILLY GRAHAM

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: How may I know that there is a living God?—B. O.

DEAR B. O.: I want you to know, first of all, that God is very concerned that you come to know Him. He has even promised, "And ye shall seek me, and find me, when ye shall search for me with all your heart" (Jeremiah 29:13).

Begin your search by asking God to show Himself to you. Tell Him you are willing to commit your life to Him if He will reveal Himself to you.

Second, understand that we are not left alone in this world to guess whether or not God exists. Instead, God has taken the initiative and revealed Himself to us. This is why the Bible is so important, for it is in the Bible that we find God's revelation of Himself.

Therefore, I encourage you to read the Bible prayerfully. I suggest you Therefore, I encourage you to read the Bible prayerfully.

We Want Girls In Our Parade

Ever wonder where all the girls were during the revolutionary period? If it weren't for Betsy Ross and Martha Washington, you might wonder if there were any!

Well, times have changed. Women are making headlines, breaking down old barriers and finding new freedoms.

Our carrier organization has seen the change. We now have a number of girls marching right alongside the boys in our carrier parade. And, we welcome more, because girls are proving that they can do the job and do it well.

If you're a young lady who is willing to work and would like to have a newspaper route of your own, contact our carrier manager and ask about the details. He'll give you an equal opportunity to join our parade. And that's the spirit of '76!

Many Of World's 'Little People' Feel Need To Become Intellectuals

By EDDIE ADAMS
Photographer
For The Associated Press

Attila the Hun was a dwarf.

Napoleon and two presidents of the United States, John Quincy Adams and Martin Van Buren, were shorter than normal.

No one knows how many dwarfs and midgets there are in the United States today — estimates run as high as 100,000 people under 4 feet 10. More than 500,000 Americans are under five feet.

Legend and myth called small people elves, gnomes, leprechauns, goblins and pixies. They have existed for as long as the human race, yet the world knows little about them.

Midgets and dwarfs live in every country and are born into every race. They are doctors, lawyers, nurses, schoolteachers, firemen, engineers and truck drivers. They are people: just smaller than most, but people like you and me.

School kids laugh, adults point and stare. Dr. Hugo Brodesky, a psychiatrist in Jacksonville, Fla., who stands 4 feet 7, says: "If you are under five feet, let's face it, you are different. Suppose you see all the trees around you with green leaves and one had blue leaves. Wouldn't you be surprised or taken back a little?"

The average American is 5 feet 10.

A malfunctioning pituitary gland produces a midget — a miniature carbon copy of an average-size person, but with a squeaky voice. The dwarf, on the other hand, is abnormally proportioned, with normal head, trunk and voice, but short arms and legs. The condition results from bone disease, or a malfunctioning thyroid gland, or a wayward gene that stunts skeletal growth and cartilage development.

When midgets mate, they almost always produce a child of normal size. The baby of two dwarfs can be either a dwarf or normal.

Frank and Emma Lentini of Auburn, N.Y., are dwarfs, just over four feet tall. Their son is 5 feet 10. Mrs. Terry De Lair, a social worker in Waterloo, N.Y., says: "I am only four feet tall and my daughter Paula at birth was five pounds, 4 ounces and 18 1/4 inches in length, almost half my size."

Dr. Charles Scott Jr., director of the University of Texas Medical Genetics Clinic and chairman of the Medical Advisory Board of the Little People of America, explains that achondroplasia, a cartilage and bone condition, produces the most common type of dwarf. Achondroplasia strikes randomly once in every 40,000 births. There is no cure for achondroplasia, but smallness resulting from thyrod or pituitary conditions can be treated, in some cases by injections that induce growth.

Most people don't realize their condition until they are eight or nine, when their school chums pass them by in height. In many cases, that's when an inferiority complex begins, driving many little people to be well-educated and competitive, to outdo those of normal size. Ancient history tells us that three kings were midgets.

A common outcry of little people is that they suffer job discrimination more than other minority groups, although their intellectual development is unaffected by their physical condition.

Joe Martin, principal of a New Jersey elementary school, says of Jean Davis, a 4 foot 4 kindergarten teacher: "Jean is six feet tall in my book. She relates to the children. They love her. I love her. I need more like her."

Pat Bilon is a nightclub bouncer (he checks IDs at the door) in Youngstown, Ohio, although he's only 2 foot 10 — one inch taller than Michu of Ringling Bros. circus fame. He had thought of himself as three feet tall, until he took a driver's license test. "They measured my height and said I was 2 foot 10. We had some fight going on until I was proven wrong."

Reminders Of Munich's 'Black Tuesday' Abound

(EDITOR'S NOTE — The horror of the raid four years ago on Munich's Olympic village is an intrusion on the busy young suburbanites who live there today. But reminders of that Black Tuesday abound. To a reporter who was there, memories of a long night of terror are easily stirred.)

By JOHN VINOCUR

MUNICH, West Germany (AP) — Connollystrasse 31, a doorway to horror four years ago, is just concrete suburbia today, a mediocre apartment block where tenants can send their children to the swim school across the street or tack up a card on the bulletin board asking if anobody has a book by Van de Velde, the Dutch sexologist.

That the Munich Olympic massacre began here Sept. 5, 1972, seems just an irritant to the people who live in the Olympic village now, a long gone event that occasionally brings a visitor who wants to talk about memories the residents don't share and who resent the notion that their rent would include everyone else's inquisitiveness.

"Go away," a woman with a blond child in her arms responded when someone pressed the bell next to the name Stark-Tunissen. No hard looks, no aggressiveness, but she said it again. "Go away."

"Look," the woman said, "the people who live here at 31 have agreed that we just don't discuss this business with anyone. We don't know what happened then. And besides, I've lived all my life in Belgium. We've had bombs, wars, everything. Why should I find it different here?"

The difference is that on a Tuesday before dawn, four years ago, a Palestinian suicide squad entered her building when it was in the heart of the Olympic Village and killed two Israeli athletes. Nine more would die, and five Palestinians with them, by the next day.

Within a month, the memory and the shame of the attack would be sufficiently dissolved so that three more of the gunmen, all who were captured alive, would be released by the West German government to ransom a hijacked airplane flown to Libya, where the three disappeared without a trace.

Now, even a plaque listing the 11 Israeli dead and admonishing, in German and Hebrew, those who pass by to "honor their memory" is gone, removed and not yet replaced by a film crew who wanted an authentic set for scenes about the 1972 Olympics.

The crew would also somehow have to cover up the children's sand boxes along the walkway in front of the building, the sign pointing to the model apartment at 24 Connollystrasse, and the indoor pool about 30 yards away that bills itself as the "Munich Swimming Institute — the first swim school in the world for babies and small children."

I went back to the village and Connollystrasse, thinking about the morning it took place: being pulled out of bed, blinking in the sharp sunshine, hearing the sirens and the beating of helicopter blades, scaling two fences and running inside with the USA-team warmup jacket of boxer Duane Bobick on my back to stay clear of the panicky police.

Maybe I talked to all the wrong people that day. But I found only a few athletes who didn't seem more concerned that the games would be cancelled than for the lives of the people involved.

I found their selfishness monstrous, their concern as superficial as that of the American coach who said during that long night of terror, "It's awful. I can imagine what the coaches of those boys are going through."

One man whose concern was totally human throughout that day was Bobick. When he was in Munich recently to fight on the Ali-Dunn card, he went back to the village because, he said, "I left part of me there."

It was a black Tuesday for Bobick personally after his loss to Teofilo Stevenson of Cuba on the last athletic event of the day before competition was ordered to a halt. But his concern was not so much for himself.

"Funny," Bobick said. "Something woke me up at 5:30 that morning, the same time it happened. Our dorm wasn't very far away, and in an hour or so I heard it on the news. When I went out sometime after 7 a.m., the place was crawling with guys with submachine guns. It was terribly disturbing. I felt awful.

"By the time of the fight, everything was rotten. Winning just wasn't all that important anymore."

Whether the massacre had anything to do with it is unclear, but plans to sell the individual athlete's quarters in the Olympic village as condominium apartments have never come up to expectations.

The boxing hall where the distracted Bobick fought has been transformed into a skating rink. The competition pool makes money with the stadium and other sports installations, yet every weekend Munich newspapers are filled with ads for apartments in the village.

A number of private real-estate developers who planned only to sell apartments have had to rent them instead. The local joke is that one of the hardest-working people in Munich is the village superintendent who goes from empty apartment to empty apartment at night, turning on lights to make them look occupied.

The apartments in the three-story building alongside the former Israeli quarters are vacant, but the siege site is occupied now after being empty for more than a year after the games.

The nearby Max Planck Institute for Physics took it over to provide lodging for guests, teachers and students. There are 3,000 apartments in the high-rise former men's section of the village and 1,728 in the section which housed women athletes. The women's section flats are rented to single and married university students for 110 marks ($44) to 130 marks ($52) per month.

At the so-called men's village, only 70 to 79 per cent of the condominiums have been sold, officials report. Some 20 per cent are being rented out and 5 per cent have no occupants. They blame post-games renovations, followed by the recession.

Transportation downtown is good from the village, and there are adequate shopping facilities.

Your Daily HOROSCOPE

from the CARROLL RIGHTER INSTITUTE

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Use caution in dealing with others since there is likely to be some difficulties on this day. Take the time to be especially considerate of others where cultural interests are concerned.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) If you find it difficult to contact a good friend, get busy on other activities. Don't forget to meditate or attend the services of your choice.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Contact associates and use tact in coming to a better understanding with them. Be sure to take the health treatments you need.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) You are desirous of having a happy time but the evening is best for this, since the day could prove worrisome. Think constructively.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Strive for more harmony in the home. Do some entertaining tonight and invite friends and relations.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Contact good friends and obtain the support you need. Take time early in the day to study written material for possible errors.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Take time early in the day to figure out a better way to cut down on expenses. Be more tolerant of mate. Show that you are a considerate person.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Figure out what you want most in life and plan how to gain your aims. Make sure your mind is working in the right direction.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) It would be wise to consult an expert regarding a difficult situation you are facing and get it cleared up quickly. Show devotion to mate.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) A personal aim may seem elusive but it only requires more thought on your part to be successful. Be sure to attend the social tonight.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Some outside matters do not seem to be progressing as you would like and it may require different tactics than those you are using.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Concentrate on how to advance more quickly in the future, be it in business or personal endeavor. Postpone a trip you are planning.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Certain responsibilities may be boring but they have to be discharged nonetheless, so get busy on them. Show more devotion to mate.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will enjoy the company of others and may find it difficult doing almost anything alone. Teach to be more self-reliant and to join with others only when necessary, otherwise your promising progeny could become a mere hanger-on and never amount to much. The field of music, art, or whatever requires precision and persistence is fine here.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to YOU!

Princeton's Honor Students Set Goals After Graduation

By TERRY KIRKPATRICK

PRINCETON, N.J. (AP) — "It's nice to have the pressure off," David Germany said as he learned back on the bed in his Princeton University dormitory room after his last exam.

His mind was pulling into focus the impressions of his four years at Princeton, which he later condensed into a thousand words for his valedictory address — a duty of the university's top-ranked graduate.

"I will give a speech and after that I will not be the valedictorian," he said quietly. "I was the valedictorian. It implies nothing about who I am or what I'll be in the future."

Across the tree-shaded campus, Susan Hurley, this year's salutatorian, was leaving her room to find the professor who was translating her commencement greeting into the Latin she used to deliver it, an old Princeton tradition at June commencement.

"Intellect is really very important to me," she says. "But I think there are too many people who get too caught up in it."

Although their thoughts are turning now from what has been to what will come, each of these 21-year-olds speaks freely but modestly of past achievement. If their experience is any indication, honors graduates at America's top universities are strongly motivated, practical, often introspective, pleased but not overwhelmed by academic excellence, and easily diverted by music and other pastimes.

Princeton's top two students — they had nearly all A's all four years—also are concerned that being labeled valedictorian or salutatorian may increase the pressures on them to succeed.

He didn't expect academic superiority four years ago. Now he is aiming for a doctor of philosophy degree in economics, his major, at Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

"There are many things that are beyond me. Applied math, calculus, things like that always came pretty easy to me. But I got into a course that started teaching math theory and I just sat there lost, dazed and confused. And there was a 15-year-old behind me who thought it was simple.

Classical music can distract him from books, as can his girlfriend and friends across the hall. Much of his time was devoted to campus activites, including intramural athletics and the yearbook he edited.

Eventually he hopes to find a teaching position or a job in the business world — a practical role, close to a final product.

Susan says, "... I want a law degree, to have some clout in the real world."

She studied philosphy at Princeton and will emphasize international law at Harvard Law School in the fall. Her home is Santa Barbara, Calif. She wants to travel and hopes to spend a year in France and Italy studying their languages. Free time at Princeton went to singing with the glee club and studying Japanese art.

High grades were something "I just kind of took for granted," she says. "I don't think I consciously set the goal. I just never thought of doing anything else.

"It takes a lot of work. I'm extremely nervous and I can channel a lot of nervous energy into it."

"My desire is to experience life as fully as possible before I die. I'm really aware of how brief life is and that's why I want to live a life of adventure, instead of riches or status."

34TH STREET AND AVENUE Q

the COIN Box

By NORMAN DAVIS

THIS YEAR'S National Medal issued by the American Revolution Bicentennial Administration is most popular in the 1½-inch bronze version, at $5. Over 182,000 of these have been sold, reports ARBA.

In second place is the 1½-inch silver medal, at $25.

July 31 is the deadline for ordering. Checks or money orders should be payable to "ARBA," and the address is: ARBA, P.O. Boxn 1972, San Francisco, Calif. 94101.

New Jersey's American Revolution Bicentennial Commission has issued a medal for the 200th anniversary of Washington's surprise attack on the British at Trenton.

Medallic Art Co. (Old Ridgebury Rd., Danbury, Conn. 06810) is producing this in various metals and sizes. The 1½-inch bronze one costs $.50 postpaid. The 1½-inch silver version, priced at $26.50 postpaid, has a mintage limited to 10,000

Minnesota, however, has added a unique touch: a bit of native Minnesota iron ore is "dusted" into the alloy (mixture of metals).

If you collect gold medals, this attractive 1-inch medal is priced at $250. For information, write to: Minnesota Bicentennial Medal Program, P.O. Box 3304, St. Paul, Minn. 55165.

For the first time, a Society of Medalists medal is available outside membership rills.

Sculptor Marcel Jovine's design is a light-hearted view of Yankee Doodle (yes, the Yankee Doodle!) riding his pony. The triangular scene is framed by banners lettered "Yankee Doodle" /"Came To Town"/" Riding On A Pony." The reverse also is basically a triangle design, with a bird's-eye view of Yankee Doodle's tri-cornered hat — and the feather.

Society members get first call on the 500 silver and 2,500 bronze medals; any of the 2 7/8-inch medals remaining will be made available to Medallic Art Co.'s customers.

For information, write to: Mary Louise Cram, Executive Secretary, Society of Medalists, West Branch Rd., Weston, Conn. 06880.

The American Bicentennnial Commemorative Society's 13th medal honors Betsy Ross, and shows a nearly full-face portrait. The reverse pictures her home superimposed on a 13-star flag, and "First American Flag." ABCS is at: Box 1776, Springfield, Pa. 19064.

Next week: "Launching The Eagle" — America's first $10 gold pieces.

Big Jump Shown In Seed Sales

UNIVERSITY PARK, Pa. (UPI) — Increasing interest in home gardening almost doubled national sales of retail seeds and fertilizers between 1960 to 1974, says William Hepler, professor of plant breeding at Pennsylvania State University.

Hepler said the increase is most noticeable among high income groups, young adults, and the college-educated.

He said sales grew from nearly $4 billion in 1960 to more than $7 billion in the early 1970s.

In addition, direct farm-to-market sales such as roadside stands and farmers' markets, and pick-your-own operations, helped create awareness of truly fresh fruits and vegetables. Seeing such high quality crops, many persons decided to grow their own, the professor said.

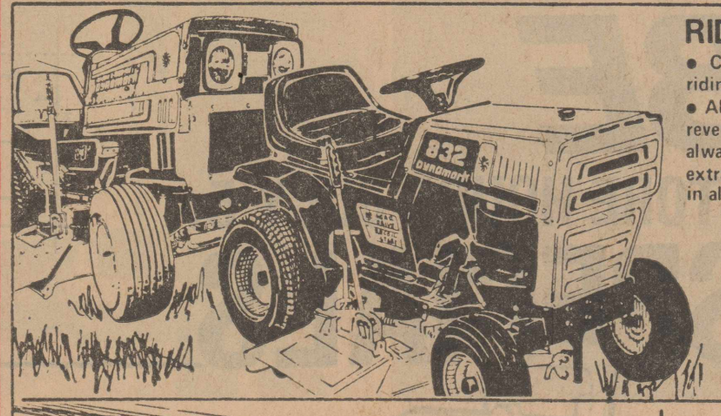

He estimates that a 15-by-25-foot garden can save as much as $280 annually. He said a knowledgeable gardener knows what crops, and how much of each crop his family will eat, and plans accordingly.

A one-acre garden can provide enough vegetables for a family of four for a year, Hepler said, adding that the increased popularity of home gardening and home food processing is due to the increased cost of living, concerns about the environment, outdoor recreation, productive use of leisure time, the satisfaction and triumph of the harvest, and the human need to till the soil.

Lubbock Churches Plan Special Services Today

native American Order of Worship will be used.

Henry Mechior of Muhlenberg who served Trinity Lutheran Church in New York City, prepared the liturgy in 1748 to standardize the manner in which public worship should be conducted in all Lutheran churches in Colonial America.

Originally written in German, the liturgy was translated by a congregation in German Germantown, Pa., as a Bicentennial project.

The "in-between" today will be illustrated at Christ The King Catholic Church at 4011 54th St., where a unique quilted banner (wall hanging) will be displayed. Theme for the quilt is "One Nation Under God." It was quilted by 15 women members of the church, led by Joan Roberts. The quilt is 80 by 110 inches in size.

It was designed by Jeanette Gansky. Illustrations on the quilt in color represent the Holy Trinity—"God, the Father; God, the Son; and God, the Holy Spirit."

The blue field of an American flag represents God, the Father. A brilliant golden sun represents God, the Son; and a white dove outlined against the sun represents the Holy Spirit.

Bells Ring Out At City Churches

old Centennial bell in Independence Hall at Philadelphia will chime 13 times in honor of the 13 original Colonies of America.

The famed Liberty Bell, just 100 yards away from the Centennial Bell, hasn't really made a sound since V-J Day on Sept. 2, 1945. However, each July 4, the Sons of the American Revolution hold a ceremony and two children tap the old bell lightly. They will do so again this Fourth.

America has a Bicentennial Bell, the newest Liberty Bell as a gift from Great Britain, but it will not be ringing today because credentials are not yet properly in order.

The Bicentennial Bell now hangs in the tower of Independence Park's visitor center but officially it will not be presented to this country until Queen Elizabeth arrives July 6, and makes the presentation.

Another last time the Liberty Bell was actually rung was V-E Day, May 8, 1945, and a recording was made of the sound and electronically-amplified.

The sound was reportedly dull and muted because of the crack.

The old bell split when it tolled the death of Chief Justice John Marshall in 1835. Since 1876, its musical duties have been handled by the bell made for the Centennial Exposition in Philadelphia.

The nationwide 15 minutes of bell ringing today officially is promoted by the American Revolutionary Bicentennial Administration by Congressional Resolution.

To be absolutely factual, the Liberty Bell did not ring on July 4, 1776 when the resolution of Congress declaring independence was passed. It actually rang only on July 8 when the Declaration was read publicly at Independence Hall for the first time.

Lorenzo Church Names New Aide

LORENZO (Special)—Gerald Mounce has been named associate pastor and director of music and youth at the First Baptist Church here.

He is a native of Brownfield and attended South Plains College at Levelland before getting a bachelor of arts degree at Dallas Baptist College.

French Seeking To Boost Good Food Image

PARIS (UPI) — Paul Bocuse, the famed French chef, has added one more distinction to the three stars which adorn his restaurant outside Lyon. French Tourism minister Jacques Medecin has named him ministry counsel in charge of maintaining the prestige of French cooking, and making it better known abroad.

In making the announcement, Medecin said "we want to make sure France will retain her leadership in good cooking."

"In our jet age people from ... far away countries come to France to enjoy one of the better things in life — good food and wines," he said.

Yugoslavs Lure Tourist Trade

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (UPI) — A Yugoslav travel agency plans to transport about 200,000 tourists, most of them foreigners, on its own ships in the Adriatic, including regular ferry-boat connections between northern Yugoslavia and Venice.

The Atlas agency of Dubrovnik operates with seven classical ships and six hydrofoils on routes linking islands with the Yugoslav mainland. The Marina ferryboat, which can carry 500 passengers, will sail from the Istria peninsula to Venice.

Earth Church Names Eckman New Minister

EARTH (Special)—New minister of the Earth Church of Christ is Jim Eckman, 26, who moved to Earth last week with his family.

The family consists of his wife and their 3-year-old daughter and 17-month-old son.

Eckman was born in Houston and lived with his family when his parents were missionaries in Ireland from 1965 to 1971.

He attended the North Ireland Bible School and graduated from it in 1971. He is married to a native of Ireland.

The new Earth minister served as an associate minister of Jacinto City Church of Christ at Houston and as minister of Northside Church of Christ at Bonham before moving to Earth.

Ministers Want Celebration To Include God

The significant fact to Christians that the Fourth of July Independence Day in the Bicentennial year of 1976 falls on Sunday has invited comment by a sampling of Lubbock pastors and ministers.

Pointing out that this nation was founded by men and women seeking religious freedom, pastor Morris Sheats of Trininty Church asked that God be invited to the 200th birthday party of the nation.

He said: "It is wonderful that somehow in Divine Providence the Fourth of July of our Bicentennial year is on Sunday. Hopefully we as a people will renew the bassic reason for our existence under this great heritage."

Charles Taylor, assistant pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, said: "This nation was founded on principles of self-government and liberty which are the same principles as the government of the Presbyterian Church stipulate. A clergyman, John Witherspoon, who was a Presbyterian, was a member of the Continental Congress that formulated the Declaration of Independence. His most famous quote is: 'Failure to defend civil liberties is to lose religious liberty, which is not far behind.'"

Dr. Sam Nader, senior pastor of First United Methodist Church, said: "Part of the good coming out of the Bicentennial is that we are looking back to become aware of a past in which our founding fathers publicly before the whole world declared their faith that they believed in God and they believed in the importance of acknowledging God's soverignty over our national life. i think also the Bicentennial also makes us more aware as individuals as to what we must do to strengthen the nation. In a way, America was established as an 'expermental' station to show the world what a country could become when people anchored their lives and their faith in Christ."

"I think that it is very meaningful that our Bicentennial Fourth of July comes on a Sunday. I wouldn't be so bold as to say God planned it that way, I just think its meaningful that it worked out that way. The real strength of our nation lies in our faith. I think that what has made America strong and will continue to keep her strong is the faith of her people in God. The Christian faith is extremely blessed to be in America because of the freedom of religion we're privileged to enjoy. But I also think that America as a nation is blessed by having a strong Christian people who through their faith make the nation great and preserve the freedoms we all enjoy," said the Rev. Jim Sutherlin of First Christian Church.

100-Unit Complex To Be Built For Elderly Near Mall

Wilson & Wilson, Inc. has announced plans to construct a 100-unit apartment complex on an eight-acre tract near South Plains Mall for elderly residents under a government-subsidy program administered by the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

Initial contracts for the $1,750,000 project are expected to be awarded in about three weeks, according to Leonard Wilson, who, with Homer Wilson, will be owners of the property.

It will be located in an area between 56th Street and 54th Street, and from Bangor Avenue to Chicago Avenue.

Residents of the facility will receive rent subsidies according to income, Wilson said. Applications will be taken by Wilson or by the Federal Housing Administration.

A similar apartment project, The Homestead, already is in operation in southwest Lubbock, and reportedly has 175 persons on a waiting list for future vacancies.

The Lubbock facility was among the last of such projects to be given support under a $3 billion federal housing program.

Wilson said Cong. George Mahon was instrumental in obtaining for Lubbock its selection as a site for the program.

Some 100 letters were written to Mahon by elderly Lubbock residents asking for special housing.

Other locations in Texas for similar projects included Dallas, with 400 units, and Nacodoches, with 100 units.

Financing for the Lubbock apartments came through Housing America Mortgage Co. of Dallas, Wilson said.

The apartments will be one-story "luxury" units, according to Wilson. Ninety-six of the units will be one-bedroom apartments, with four scheduled to contain two bedrooms. There will be no efficiency apartments in the project.

A community center will contain a storm celler, library, and hobby and recreation areas.

The area will be landscaped, and will include barbecue facilities for use by the residents.

An automatic water sprinkler system will water lawns.

TI Plant Module Ups Permits

Future commercial and residential construction projects in Lubbock received permits totaling $2,900,750 last week, according to city records.

Contractors have filed plans for $1,752,800 in commercial activity, and have scheduled $1,146,950 in single-family residential work.

Padgett Construction Co. received a permit for the erection of a new manufacturing module at Texas Instruments' main plant, 2502 N. Loop 289. The facility, estimated to cost $1,250,000, will consist of 42,624 square feet of floor space. It is expected to be finished by September.

Wages Construction plans a restaurant facility for Buster Long at 5212 Slide Road. The project will involve 2,100 square feet of space at an estimated cost of $85,000.

A drive-in restaurant is scheduled to be constructed at 4802 Ave. H, by Lewis Garnett at an expected cost of $60,000. The project will consist of 1,085 square feet of space.

Raymond Hogan received a permit for work on an industrial building at 1313 Harvard St. The project is expected to cost $60,000.

Gailey Construction Co. plans to build a radiology facility at 3823 22nd Place at an estimated cost of $106,000. That project will involve 2,635 square feet of floor space.

Gailey also received a permit for remodeling work on the fourth floor of the Southwestern Bell Telephone Building at 1420 Broadway. That portion of the building's renovation is expected to cost $52,800.

Tusha Buildings, Inc. has scheduled the construction of a warehouse and office facility for Pioneer Natural Gas Division of Pioneer Corp. at 3901 Quirt for an estimated cost of $87,000. The work will involve some 12,000 square feet of floor space.

Tusha also plans a warehouse for Lubbock Mill Works at 310 Ave. N for an estimated $18,000. It will consist of 2,900 square feet of space.

In the residential classification, Revere Homes has scheduled the construction of four homes in the Mesa Park area. Expected to cost $40,000 each, the units are located at 5512, 5521 and 5522 70th Place, and 5611 72nd St.

Winchester Homes plans three new projects at costs ranging from $24,500 to $38,000. They are located at 6218 36th St., 5606 73rd St., and 8601 Joliet Ave.

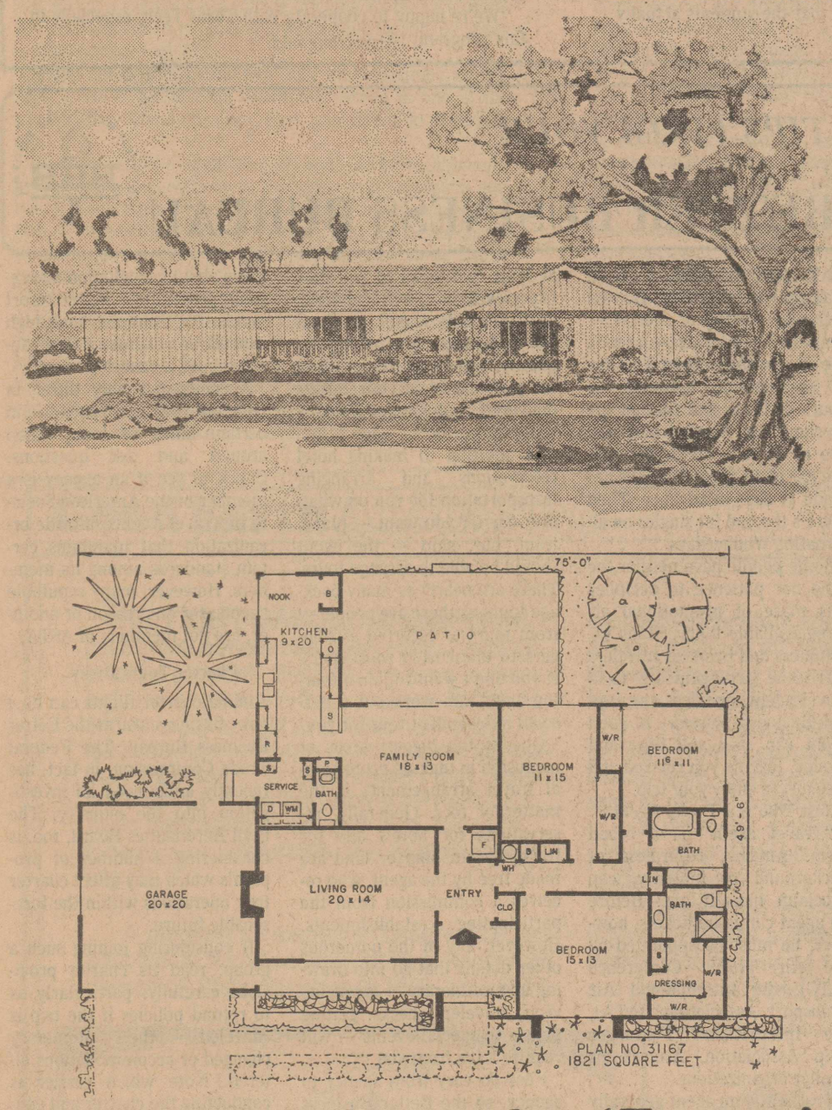

Burl Kizer plans two new homes in the Mesa Park addition at estimated costs of $45,000 each. Locations are 5510 and 5513 72nd St.

Edwin Roberts has scheduled a $51,000 home at 5504 72nd St. and a $52,000 project at 2912 76th St.

The Spanish Oaks area has received locations for two development projects by Minnix Homes. Located at 7012 Wayne Ave. and 4822 72nd St., the homes are expected to cost $32,500 and $33,950, respectively.

Other single-family homes, with estimated costs and contractors, include: 5220 29th St., $56,000, Steele Construction; 5721 78th St., $50,000, Monte Holmes; 5507 72nd St., $48,000, J. L. Elliott; 4905 71st St., $34,950, Milton Cannady; 5604 73rd St., $38,500, Joe Fletcher; 5712 2nd Place Drive, $35,950, Dale Duncan; and 4818 14th St., $29,000, Craig Builders.

Others include: 8507 Knoxville Ave., $47,000, Glad Norman; 5602 73rd St., $36,500, Murray Construction; 5608 73rd St., $39,000, Wilson & Wilson; 7002 York Ave., $36,000, Deer Building Corp.; 8107 Gary Ase., $50,000, C. T. Walden; and 8102 Ave. W, $35,950, Sonny Arnold.

House Plan Provides 'Extras' To Make Entertaining Easy

By HIAWATHA ESTES

This design has most of the features that contribute to a well-planned home. Double doors open to the wide entry with its convenient guest closet. The "dead-end" living room is free of cross traffic and will always be presentable for unexpected guests.

The plan invites every kind of entertaining. The family room is ideally located next to the kitchen for convenient party use. The large patio is accessible from the family room and kitchen. The paito contriubtes to gracious living as it is a convenient spot for outdoor dining, games or just a wonderful place for complete relaxation.

One can reach the garage either through a rear door next to the service or from the covered front porch.

Lots Of Storage Space

An impressive amount of storage area is provided by the two closets in the service, the cabinet above the dryer and washer, the pantry and broom closets in the kitchen together with the bedroom hall closets.

The kitchen is partially open to the family room. The large convenient kitchen nook is flooded with sunlight through the corner windows.

Complete working drawings for plan 31167 can be purchased for only $14.95 for the first set and $8 for each additional set ordered at the same time. This plan will be available at these special prices until November 4, 1976. Please allow at least three weeks for delivery. A large reproduction rendering of the exterior is available for $1. Also available are six home plan books illustrating in excess of 850 plans—a $9.75 value—for only $7.75 plus 60 cents for postage and handling. Send all orders to: Hiawatha Estes, P.O. Box 404-J, Northridge, California 91324.

Former Lubbock High Football Star Named President Of Dallas Bank

Charles N. Brewer, son of Mrs. George W. Brewer of 2105 66th St., has been named president and chief executive officer of the new Reunion Bank which will open in downtown Dallas next month, officials of the bank have announced.

Brewer is a former vice president of First National Bank in Dallas, and chief financial officer of a New York Stock Exchange-listed corporation. He is married and has three children, Robert, Susan and John.

Brewer is a Lubbock High School graduate, and was voted Texas' most outstanding schoolboy football player in 1951 when he quarterbacked the Westerners to the Class AAAA state football championship. He was a starter for the University of Texas all three of his varsity seasons.

Hufstedler's Buys Datsun Dealership

Hufstedler GMC and Subaru has announced its purchase of O'Connor Motors, Inc., Datsun dealership at 6523 Ave. H.

In business here for more than 44 years, Hufstedler purchased O'Connor Motors as part of its continuing program to become a complete transportation center, according to Wayne Holt, general manager.

The firm's GMC truck dealership will continue operations at 1802 Erskine, and the Datsun-Subaru showrooms and maintenance facilities will be moved to the former O'Connor Motors location at 6523 Ave. H.

Holt said that within the past two years, Hufstedler has handled all types and sizes of GMC trucks, Subaru automobiles, Farm Hopper trailers, recreational vehicles and travel trailers designed for import cars.

Former City Resident Gets Advertising Post

FORT WORTH (Special) - Neil Ross, president of Magnussen Advertising Agency, Fort Worth, and former advertising director for Dunlap's, has been elected to the governors board of the Southwest Council of the American Association of Advertising Agencies for the 1976-78 term.

He will serve as a governor on the seven-man council for the second consecutive term. The Southwest Council includes 4-A members in Arkansas, Kansas, Louisiana, Mississippi, Oklahoma and Texas.

Ross, a Lubbock resident until 1966, is a graduate of Lubbock High School and Texas Tech University. He is a past director of the Lubbock Ad Club. His mother, Mrs. Zora Ross, resides in Lubbock.

LONGEST FLIGHT

NEW YORK (UPI) — A new South African Airways Boeing 747SP inaugurated the world's first nonstop commercial flight services from New York to Johannesburg on May 30, it was announced. SAA said it was the longest commercial flight in history — 8,010 miles — and took 13 hours, 42 minutes.

Mini-Buses Tested

VIENNA (AP) — This Austrian city is giving a one-year tryout to 12 mini-buses in its downtown area.

The vehicles, which seat 28 and have a top speed of 37 miles an hour, are expected to help lessen traffic congestion and pollutiom.

Pension Plans Given Boost

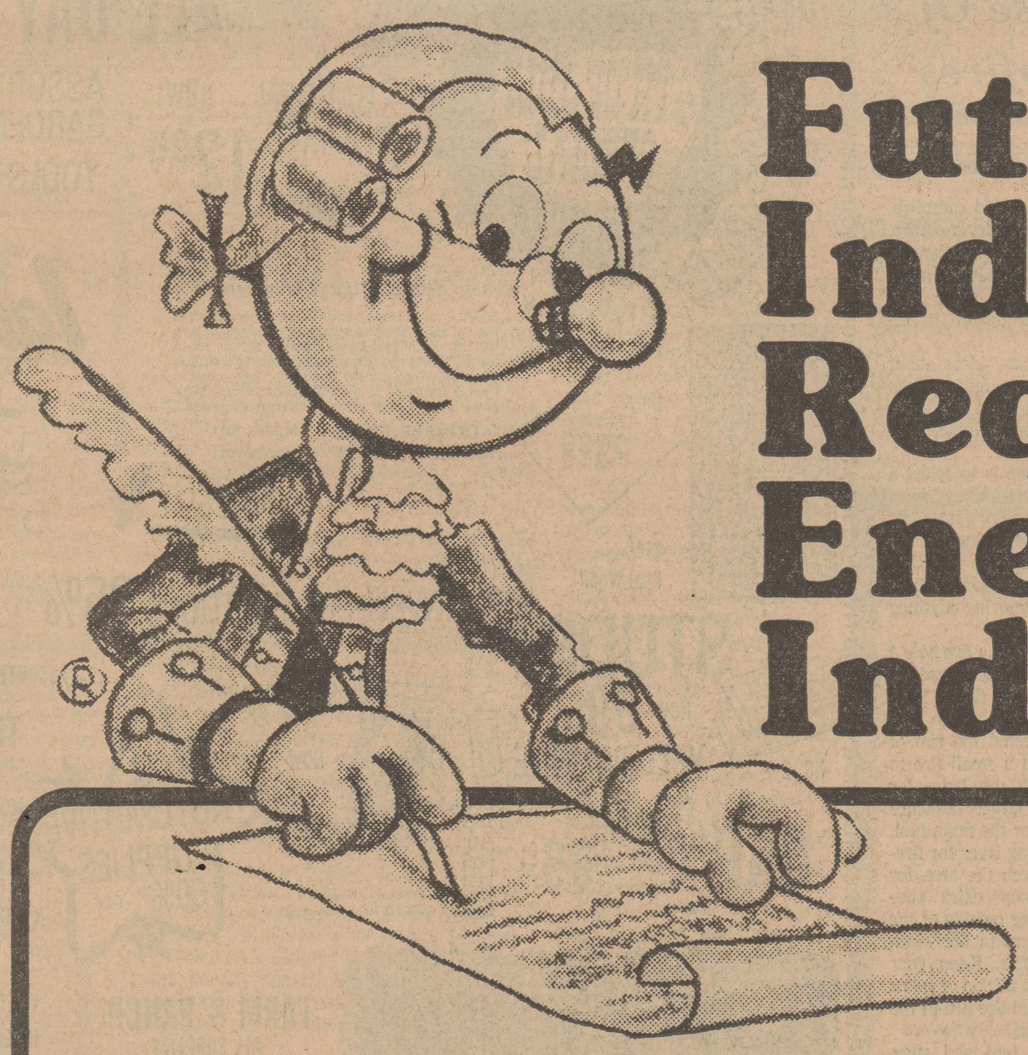

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — A management consultant says the day is here to require industry to provide pensions for employes just as they are required to provide a minimum wage.

Preston C. Bassett, vice president of Towers, Perrin, Forster and Crosby, says providing private retirement benefits would "alleviate...the burden" of current Social Security payments and would provide an employe with an "adequate (rather than) minimum" standard of living on his retirement.

Interest Lower On Mortgages

CHICAGO (UPI) — The typical American home mortgage seekers got a much better rate break borrowing money last year than the typical corporation, according to the U. S. League of Savings Associations.

The organization says for the greater part of 1975 the conventional rate on new home mortgages was under nine per cent, which was better than the rate at which AAA-rated corporations were able to sell their bonds.

Future Independence Requires Energy Independence!

This nation, now celebrating its 200th birthday of independence, must, if it is to enjoy future independence, develop its own sources of energy.

Militarily, economically, and socially, this nation's people must not be humbled by dependence on foreign oil cartels, friendly or unfriendly.

Without our own basic energy sources, we face the loss of jobs because it takes energy to move the factory wheels. Without our own basic energy sources, we are but putty in the hands of foreign militarists who would not hesitate to destroy us. Without our own energy sources, the social gains of the past several years will be meaningless.

To properly develop our own energy sources is a complex job that will take time and money...but it's a job that must be done. It can be done by private enterprise working with the blessing and the cooperation of our government.

You can help by just simply understanding the need because that's the first step in solving the problem...the more people who understand and appreciate the need, obviously, the easier will be the massive job.

Student Says Indian Banks Similar To Our Postal Service

In India, the banking industry is nationalized, and is run more like the United States Postal Service as a service to the people than a business for profit.

That's an observation of Tarun Mukherjee, a student in the Texas Tech School of Business Administration studying for his doctorate degree. He is also working in the Texas Commerce Bank Trust Department as a part of the Occupation Host Program.

The program, which is sponsored by the Office of International Programs, enables international students studying at Tech to learn some of the practical aspects of their intended profession. It enables foreign students to gain knowledge and at the same time establish a working, and hopefully a personal, relationship with local businessmen.

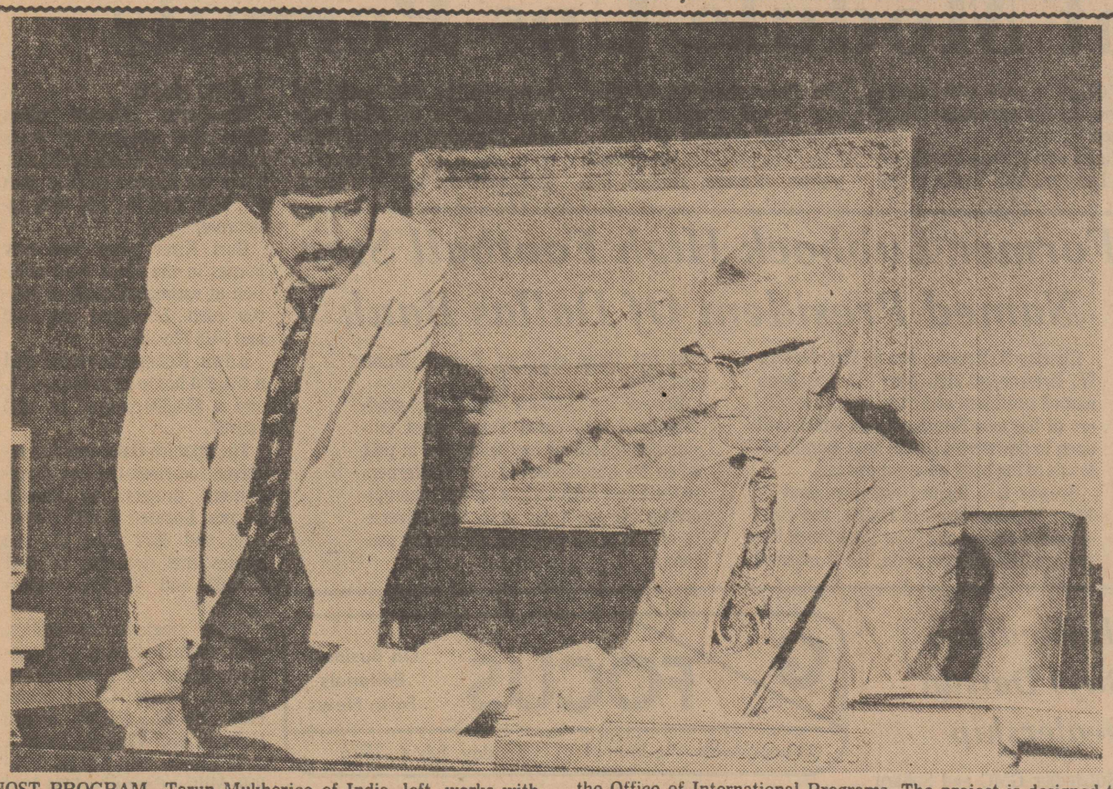

Mukherjee estimates that he is one of over 450 international students at Tech representing more than 50 countries. Many students bring a view from their native countries of the business in which they are working. Mukherjee has gained business experience in New Delhi. Again, comparing banking in India and the United States, he points out that checks in India are used almost exclusively in business. Top officials of the Indian banking industry are appointed by the government.

Tech was recommended to Mukherjee by members of the faculty at Appalachian State where he did undergraduate work. He thinks it has one of the three top business schools in Texas. Students in the Occupational Host Program work a total of 30 hours in a six-week period in addition to their studies. The program emphasizes that the students actually work, they are not just observers.

In the Texas Commerce Bank Trust Department, Mukherjee works with George Rogers, trust operations officer. Together they will evaluate market trends and other operations which are pertinent to handling investments for estate planning work performed by the Trust Department. This will enable Mukherjee to gain practical experience which he could not get in India, since this type of banking service is not a part of that country's system.

William Armstrong, Texas Commerce trust officer, thinks that one of the most valuable aspects of the International Host Program is that it enables students and local businessmen of different cultures to meet and work on a common ground based on their occupations.

"We're happy to cooperate with Texas Tech, especially in this program," Armstrong said.

HOST PROGRAM—Tarun Mukherjee of India, left, works with George Rogers of the Texas Commerce Bank Trust Department as a part of the Occupation Host Program, which is sponsored by the Office of International Programs. The project is designed to enable international students at Texas Tech to establish a working relationship with local businessmen.

Residents' Daughter Honored

DENVER, Colo. (Special) - Amy Brewster, now with Exxon Co., U.S.A., has been doubly honored for her 1975 work with Houston Citizens Bank & Trust in the Gold Quill Awards program conducted by the International Association of Business Communicators (IABC).

Mrs. Brewster, cited at the association's annual conference here recently, won a first-place Award of Excellence in the Newsletter category as editor of Bank Notes. Mrs. Brewster and Bank Notes were also recognized with an Award of Merit for Newsletter Design.

In all, nearly 2,000 communicators from throughout the U.S. and such foreign countries as Mexico, England and Canada competed for the prestigious Gold Quill Awards.

IABC is the professional organization for writers, public relations specialists, managers, and other business and organizational communicators. It is dedicated to the professional advancement of its members and to advancement of the communication profession.

Mrs. Brewster is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Allen O. Hammer of Lubbock.

TIPS FROM YOUR BETTER BUSINESS BUREAU

AT LAST YOU'RE ready to plan your vacation trip! But the incredible variety of special air fares is bewildering — there's the one on the second Tuesday of each month between the hours of three and four in the morning for couples over the ago of 30 with children under the age of 10, if reservations are made 21 days in advance. Then there's the one for singles on alternating Wednesdays...

Some people have neither the time nor patience to decipher this maze of promotional air fares available today. Many vacationers and business travelers leave the arrangements to a travel agent, observes the Better Business Bureau. A good agent can save you time and money, leaving you relaxed and free just to enjoy your trip.

Just Who is a Travel Agent?

"Travel agent" is a broad term. Anyone, regardless of background or integrity, can proclaim himself one. Before an agent can issue tickets, however, he must be appointed by the Air Traffic Conference (ATC), the International Air Transport Association (IATA), the International Passenger Ship Association, Amtrak or similar organizations.

To quality, an agent generally must (1) demonstrate a thorough knowledge of the travel field, (2) show a record of financial responsibility and (3) have at least two years of full-time experience in the travel field. Some capable agents, perhaps not in business long enough to qualify, can make reservations for you and have your tickets delivered, but cannot actually write them.

In addition to making hotel reservations and arranging transportation for you on whatever carrier you want — plane, train, bus, ship — the agent should be able to arrange tours. There are nearly as many package tours as there are people — from tours of escorted astrologers to unescorted zookeepers. If you don't want to join a tour, the agent can work out a personal independent tour for you.

One of the biggest areas of confusion in making professional travel arrangements is the matter of fees. Generally, reservations for hotels and for travel by air, ship or land are made free by the agent, who receives a commission from the participating establishments. However, any of the numerous other details that go into drawing up an itinerary — arranging visas, travelers checks, getting tickets to special events — will require a fee from you.

Fees do vary from agency to agency, so the Better Business Bureau suggests finding out well in advance what the agency's policy is before signing anything. Don't forget to inquire about cancellation and refund procedures. Many resort hotels, for example, have high cancellation charges if they cannot rebook a canceled room.

Agencies not only differ in fees, but they may specialize in certain kinds of tours. Shop around and ask questions. Check to see if an agency is a member of the American Society of Travel Agents, a trade organization that maintains certain standards among its members. However, many reputable agents, for one reason or another, are not members of ASTA.

Charter Tours Risky

Joining charter flights can be a risky business, warns the Better Business Bureau. The Federal Trade Commission, in fact, has recently announced an investigation into the industry. The Civil Aeronautics Board, too, is considering a number of proposals which may affect charter tour operations within the foreseeable future.

If considering joining such a group, read its charter provisions carefully, particularly as to refund policies if the trip is canceled, the iteinerary changed or accommodations altered. Note which carrier is conducting the charter and contact the Federal Aviation Administration to find out if the carrier is certified for charter flights.

Carpet Complaint Aired

MICHAEL CONLON

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A letter from Hornell, N.Y.:

"Can you tell me how I can obtain help in a situation regarding an unsatisfactory carpet purchase and an unreliable home town dealer who claims he knows the carpet is in poor condition but can do nothing to convince the manufacturer (Monarch Carpet) that it should be replaced since he is no longer associated with that company?

"This carpet is an expensive pattern of acrilan fiber and has been matted and discolored since it was installed.

"We are really embarrassed by the condition of the carpeting in our home but feel that we cannot afford another purchase only to encounter a similar situation ..."

Outside of taking your case to a small claims court (which may not be worth the time and effort), there isn't much that can be done. We have turned your letter over to New York State consumer protection officials, who in the past have been effective in resolving complaints.

We thought your experience would be worth reporting because the government is beginning to show increasing concern about the troubles American consumers are having with carpet purchases.

The Federal Trade Commission has been looking at the problem, and Sen. Charles H. Percy, R-Ill., recently told that agency it should launch an industry-wide investigation. Consumers spend about $2.3 billion a year on home carpeting. Percy contends no other part of the home furnishings industry appears to cause as much misunderstanding and fraud among its customers.

Among other things, Percy says the people who sell carpets should work out a system under which a buyer could be sure the carpet he saw in the store sample is the same one that gets delivered to his house. He said a code number stamped on the back of the carpet could solve that problem.

He also suggests that every store that sells carpeting should provide consumers with an easy-to-understand conversion chart so they can figure for themselves the number of square yards they need. He said that would prevent dealers from selling people more carpeting than they really need.

Dyes Made From Plants In Garden

By United Press International

What do avocado leaves, blackberries, dogwood fruit, impatiens flowers and Queen Anne's Lace have in common?

They can all be turned into homemade dyes. At least that's what Bernice Gillette Conner reports in a new book "Dyes From Your Garden" (E. A. Seemann Publishing Inc., Miami, Fla. $7.95).

The book is a collection of dye recipes, along with a how-to explanation detailing the types of pots and pans and the chemicals necessary. While the process appears to be time consuming and not especially easy, it looks as if it might be fun for do-it-yourself fans.

"Part of the fascination in using nature's colors is the element of surprise, for red flowers don't necessarily produce a red dye," the author writes. "We are never sure, until the dye bath is made, what color we will get. Nature supplies us with 'off' shades and soft colors that are distinct from commercial dyes and unique in that they cannot be exactly classified in the color spectrum."

Taiwan's Tourist Trade Booming

TAIPEI, Taiwan (UPI) — A total of 337,634 tourists visited Taiwan during the first four months of this year, an increase of 26 per cent over the same period of 1975, the Tourism Bureau said.

In April alone, Taiwan attracted 82,068 visitors. Japanese tourists top the list with 37,892, representing 46 per cent of the total. Americans ranked second with 12,620, accounting for 15 percent.

Tips Given On Use Of Compfires

By United Press International

A campfire, when properly managed, can offer warmth and good cheer.

But an unattended campfire, especially during dry weather, can turn a forest into a flaming hell that burns trees, animals, campsites and, in some instances, humans unable to escape.

There are many ideas about building a safe campfire. Len Hilts, author of Rand McNally's "National Forest Guide," offers this procedure:

"The first step is to select a level spot, well away from trees, bushes, dry grass or downed and rotten logs. If the campsite has no fire facilities, clean out a 10-foot circle down to bare dirt, removing anything that will burn.

"Now hollow out a fire hole a foot and a half across and six inches to a foot deep. Find some good-sized rocks and place them around the rim of the hole. Build a small fire in the hole, using dry twigs for kindling. Use larger branches or small logs for the main fuel. Do not cut living trees for firewood, but search the area for deadwood. Keep extra firewood you gather outside of the cleared area and to the windward of the fire. Keep your shovel, ax and a bucket of water handy to control the fire in the event it spreads.

"Pitch your tent and store your gear well outside of the fire circle, and also to the windward. Before starting the fire, check the wind. Don't start any fire during gusty, windy weather, especially if there is dry grass in the area. Always be sure you have control over the fire at all times. If the wind comes up after you have started the fire, and there is a danger of sparks blowing from the fire — douse it. This may mean a cold meal, but it is better than being trapped in a forest fire.

"Never leave the burning fire alone at any time.

"When it comes time to put the fire out, don't bury it. Dirt alone won't quench a fire and it will probably escape later. Spread out any burning pieces of wood and soak each separately. Pour water into the fire hole and stir the wet ashes with your shovel to cool the ashes and smother the fire. Keep mixing and pouring water until the fire is completely out. To make absolutely sure the fire is out before you leave the site, feel the ashes with your bare hands. If you feel any heat at all, mix some more."

Matchbook Safety Plan Casts Ominous 'Shadow'

By LEE BYRD

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Consumer Product Safety Commission may soon require that match books be "childproof," despite evidence that it could wreak economic havoc upon the industry, skyrocket the price to the public and cause even more danger than it prevents.

In the boldest, some say silliest, action of its three-year existence, the federal agency tentatively approved on a 3-2 vote last spring a regulation requiring latching covers or alternative features aimed at making it impossible for kids to ignite ordinary paper matches.

If that decision is upheld in a final vote scheduled for August, it could produce an enormous change in one of the most common, and cheapest, consumer habits in American life.

First, to childless adults already annoyed by such government-inspired innovations as the safety cap on aspirin bottles, it could mean yet another, and more frequent, aggravation — especially to smokers. Simply put, the CPSC design would require a tricky motion every time the cover flap is opened.

Second, it could cause a severe cutback in the availability of the now-ubiquitous free light. Less than 13 per cent of the 25 billion matchbooks manufactured each year are actually sold to consumers. The rest are given away by advertisers through vending machines, bars, restaurants and other concerns. But the CPSC's own studies indicate many advertisers might drop matchbooks as a medium if costs increase substantially — and they could, in fact, be doubled.

Since it was announced in April, the CPSC proposal has drawn the enmity of the Ford Administration's Wage and Price Council, the industry and the overwhelming majority of private citizens who have formally filed comments.

And in the words of commissioner Barbara Franklin, even the agency's own staff is "somewhat less than enthused" about the latch proposal, especially insofar as the economic consequences are concerned. One senior commission analyst, who asked not to be named, declared the safety cover "ludicrous," even though this same person, under orders, helped prepare a justification report for it.

Actually, the proposed regulation goes beyond requiring a latching cover. It also calls for matches to self-extinguish after a 15-second burn time, and to meet quality standards for fragmentation. But the latter improvements, while likely to have the greatest effect toward cutting down injuries, are not nearly so costly or controversial as the latch. One major manufacturer already markets matches that meet every test but the cover.

As the commission itself acknowledges, it has absolutely no experimental basis upon which to believe that the latch will, in fact, deter children from playing with matches or cut down on the number of burn injuries.

But even if it works perfectly and eliminates all serious injuries, notes the Wage and Price Council, the cold and unfeeling statistics of cost effectiveness will weigh in at astronomical dollar levels.

The council says the safety design would add a minimum of $68 million, and possibly much more, to the $100 million per year that advertisers and consumers now pay for matches.

Presuming it would have prevented all 57 of the match-related injuries requiring the hospitalization of young children last year, that works out to more than $1 million per injury.

There are those, of course, who argue that no price tag should ever be placed on a child's welfare. Marcia Robinson, who works in the burn unit at Children's Hospital in Washington, wrote the commission of the "long-term misery and trauma resulting from a child's natural curiosity toward fire and matches .. there is no greater agony than the pain from burns."

But there is testimony aplenty that the CPSC design simply won't work, and some even forecast the irony of greater danger. The Wage and Price Council, for example, suggested that "it will entice increased play by children who are attracted by the puzzle."

The Southern Burn Institute of Houston, the only organization to report any field tests of the design, said that "the latch seldom functioned properly for the life of the matchbook" and that "all too often, the user circumvented the purpose of the latch by tearing off the matchbook cover, by tucking the cover behind the matches, or by tearing off a corner of the cover."

But aside from the hazard caused by impatient adults who leave the matches exposed, the institute went on to report, the children themselves "had little difficulty in gaining access to the matches."

The design favored by the CPSC is based on two interlocking staples requiring two separate motions to unlatch the cover, or, to simply rip it apart, a pressure of at least five pounds.

But the matchbook industry as well as independent researchers say that many children of 5 and under can exert far more force than that, especially when they use their teeth. Moreover, they point out, the matches could still be pulled out the side of the matchbook.

Others, echoing the theme sounded by the Southern Burn Institute, have taken note of surveys showing that many persons simply leave the caps off of "childproof" medicine bottles so as to avoid the bother. This phenomenon, they argue, would likely be accentuated in the case of matches, since they are used more frequently.

The commission's proposed regulation would leave the door open to alternative child-resistant features. One that has drawn attention is the "tunnel" match. Instead of a latching cover, this design has the striking material inside a paper tube on the back of the matchbook. To strike the match, it must be carefully threaded into the tube, or tunnel. But it, too, is costly and perhaps more dangerous. One CPSC staffer scorched his hand when the tunnel went off like a cannon from an accumulation of match head material.

Good Earth ALMANAC

THE TIGHT GASOLINE situation the past two summers has given many kinds of wildlife a boost. Because there are increasingly fewer permanent cover areas for birds and animals to nest and raise their young in, roadside right-of-ways have become increasingly important! It is estimated that there were about 50 million acres of right-of-ways nationally in the mid 50's, and with today's new Interstates, this has probably tripled.

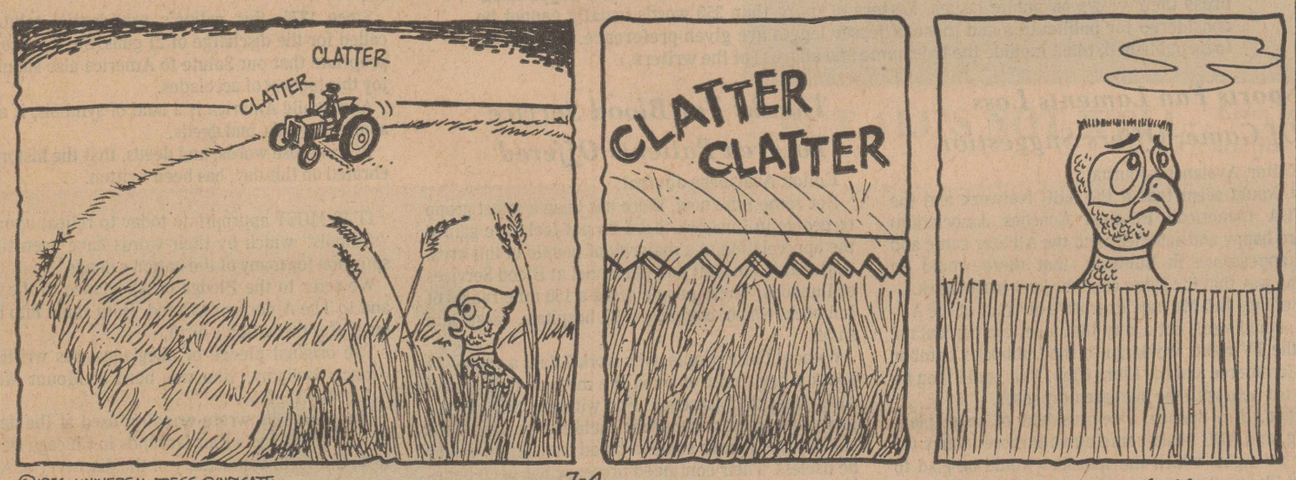

A program of roadside conservation was adopted by the Wisconsin Natural Resources council of State Agencies in 1965. Now there are many other state agencies, power companies, railroads, etc. that utilize programs of limited mowing to save energy and to enhance wildlife habitat.

-- In a study along Interstate 95, Robert Oetting, a former graduate student at North Dakota State, found 433 duck nests which were 61 percent successful.

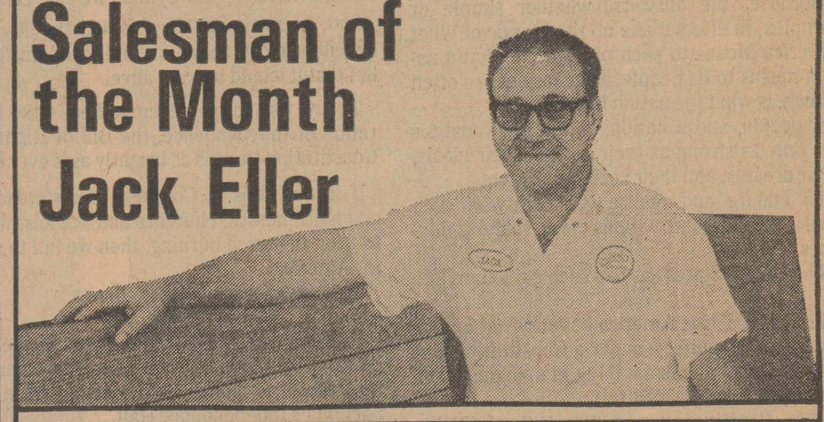

-- In Nebraska, a study revealed that 25 percent of all pheasant chicks were hatched in roadside cover.

-- Kansas, which has over 11,000 miles of highways, utilizes a program of mowing selectively while planting such grasses, legumes and plants as are beneficial to wildlife.

HY GARDNER HAS THE ANSWER:

Glad You Asked That!

Q: The female TV news reporters seem so serious about their work. Don't they have a sense of humor? — Ms. K. Ecleir, Pasadena, Cal.

A. Of course. But they realize most of the news they have to read is too grim to be a laughing matter. Also they have to take a lot of kidding. Like the crack a TV newsman got off recently when asked about newswoman Connie Chung: "Connie is capable and has everything a TV personality could ask for," he said about the Chinese beauty. "She's beautiful, intelligent, perceptive, an expert reporter. But," he added, paraphrasing an old nightclub joke, "an hour later — you want to see her again!"

A: Much blindness is caused by glaucoma. And a liquid derived from marijuana (tested on animals) has turned out to be as good as (or better than) anti-glaucoma medication being used today. Dr. Keith Green (of the Medical College of Georgia) feels that testing should now be conducted on human patients with glaucoma. (Research emphasis is on substances related to or derived from marijuana that "hopefully won't have the euphoric side effects.")

Q. I heard that Elliott Gould had to undergo a mental test before he was signed for "The Long Goodbye." If so, why? — Priscilla Denton, Pittsburgh.

A. Because, by walking out on the shooting of his previous film, he proved that all that glittered was not Gould. The picture — which was cancelled because of his behavior — proved costly to Elliott. He was ordered by a court to pay the production expenses that went down the drain. The wary producers of "The Long Goodbye" had a psychiatrist give him a mental test which he passed before the contract was signed. "The psychiatrist asked me all kinds of questions," he candidly confessed, "even jabbed a flock of needles into my head to prove I was sane."

Q: How much will sponsors have to pay for a one-minute commercial in —"Gone with the Wind?" — M.O.N., Omaha.

A: CBS-TV charged sponsors around $225,000 per one-minute spot for Super Bowl '75. Spots will be higher for "Gone with the Wind" — some $234,000. The NBC network had to put $5 million on the line for the rights to a one-time telecast.

Q: What lover said: "If you're asking for it you don't get it; if you're scrambling for it you'll lose it; if you beg for it it'll be denied?" Do you know on what occasion? — Mrs. Schroeder, Minneapolis.

A: Not a lover but political realist Hubert Humphrey — when asked why he didn't campaign actively for his party's nomination for President this year.

Q: I hear Muhammad Ali was awfully annoyed at the way his girl friend was introduced as part of his entourage before that televised fight in Munich — since, after all, he is married. Know what was said? And does the Muslim religion permit more than one wife? — D. Larapee, Austin, Tex.

A. Yes. Four, we're told. However, in the U.S. and many other countrries, this is considered bigamy. So only one wife at a time is the rule — with the others presumably waiting in the wings. What the TV commentator said (as the Ali parade passed by the cameras) was something like, "There goes Ali's pregnant paramour." Veronica at the time was in her seventh month — and looked it.

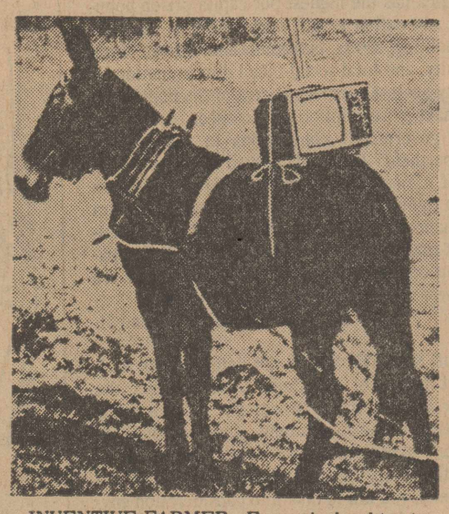

Q: I've heard that some farmers (and supposedly farmer's daughters) now combine plowing with watching soap operas on TV. How do they do this? — R. diNegress, Philadelphia.

Q: What's the inside story behind Sally Quinn being hired, then quickly retired from co-anchoring a network morning show? I have a burning ambition to get into television. What's the first step I have to take? — Miss Carol Lynch, Detroit.

A: Now that you don't have to wonder what's become of Sally, our advice would be for you to memorize her bitter memoirs, "We're Going to Make You a Star." If you still have the stomach and don't mind risking day-and-nightmares, seek a starter's job in a local TV station. (Sidelight: We found Miss Quinn's memoirs well written, warm, honest, frightening and enlightening at the same time. Her experiences seem to be the rule rather than the exception — typical of television politics.)

Send your questions to Hy Gardner, "Glad You Asked That," care of The Avalanche-Journal, P.O. Box 491, Lubbock, Texas, 79408. Marilyn and Hy Gardner will answer as many questions as they can in their column, but the volume of mail makes personal replies impossible.

INVENTIVE FARMER—Farmer's daughter (or wife) can plow and still not miss her favorite TV soap operas thanks to the inventive owner of this mule.

Consumer Finds Dried Buttermilk Unavailable

By MICHAEL CONLON

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A question from Prescott, Ariz.:

"I have an inquiry concerning the availability of dried buttermilk. The local Safeway stores said that they did sell it some time ago but no longer stock it.

"Other stores said that they either had never heard of such a product or that there had been other recent requests for dried buttermilk, but they had been unable to obtain it.

"Can you comment as to its availability in Arizona or it is no longer manufactured? If it is available in Phoenix, that would be no problem for us."

We doubt you'll find it in Phoenix, either. Even though about 40 million pounds of dried buttermilk were made last year, almost all of it went into such things as cake mixes, candy, animal feed and so on.

The American Dry Milk Institute in Chicago says it is very hard to buy in stores in consumer sizes, and has never really been sold there. The trade association says that some specialty stores or health food stores might carry it, however.

Consumer questions or complaints? Write to Buyer's Billboard, UPI, 315 National Press Bldg., Washington, D.C. 20045. We will answer as space permits, but cannot promise personal replies.

Lumber Firm Names New Managers

Forrest Lumber Co. has appointed new managers at its Morton and Seminole yards, and has appointed a shipping coordinator at the Lubbock store, according to Kent Forrest, vice president.

Eldon Reynolds, formerly roof truss shop foreman, will manage the company's Morton yard. He has been with the firm for the past four years, and has supervised the production of pre-engineered roof trusses.

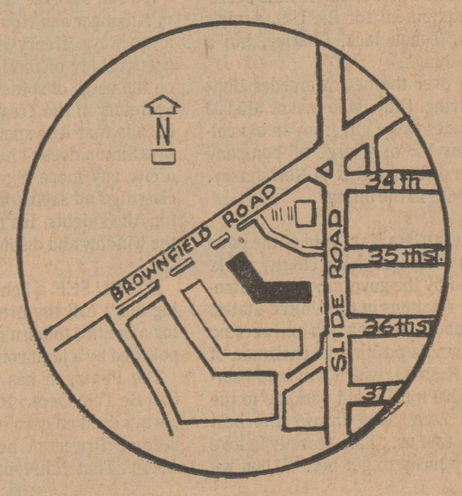

Jerry Shipley, manager at Denver City, will move to Seminole to head the operation there. He previously worked for the company in Seminole.

N. C. Oliver of Lubbock will become shipping coordinator. He will be responsible for supervising customer orders, receiving and stocking incoming shipments and inventory control.

OUR PLEDGE

We pledge allegiance to the Flag of the United States of America and to the Republic for which it stands; one Nation, under God, indivisible, with Liberty and Justice for all.

And Who Speaks For America?

WHAT CAN ONE say about America and the Bicentennial that hasn't been said?

What new is there to say about this "one nation, under God, indivisible..." with a pledge of "Liberty and Justice" for all?

How would one go about explaining the United States of America, and what it has meant, means, and should mean in the future to someone who had never heard of it?

And finally, Who Speaks for America?

THESE ARE pertinent questions on this July Fourth.

Because, the answers, whether simple or complex, in effect make up the mosaic of What America Means to each of us. And what a nation means to its people, as history has so often shown, is what the nation becomes.

A people, and a nation, in the final analysis are only as strong as their beliefs, their ideals, their dreams, and their accomplishments.

To endure and realize the reality of such goals, peoples and nations need sound guidelines.

The United States has had such guidelines.

THE FACT that America has survived for 200 years as a Republic—under a Constitution and Bill of Rights unlike anything in mankind's history, speaks loudly for itself.

That Constitution and the Bill of Rights—based on Faith in an Almighty God and the Equality of Man—in essence have been America's guidelines.

They have served us well.

ON THAT JULY 4 two hundred years ago, when the Founding Fathers laid the groundwork for all that was to follow, they spoke out for themselves and their fellowmen.

In signing the Declaration of Independence, they not only spoke out, they stood up and were counted.

With each flourish of the pen, each pledged his fortune, his sacred honor and life itself.

Since, millions of others have done likewise—and many have paid the supreme sacrifice.

Today, what of those who have toiled, and died, to defend this nation? Who speaks for them? Who speaks for America?

THE ANSWER to that question—and the key to America's past, present and future—is a simple one.

We do! We speak for them, and for ourselves. Each of us. Each and every day!

We speak for those who signed the Declaration of Independence, those who died at Bunker Hill and Gettysburg, those who fell at Chateau Thierry and on the beaches of Normandy, those who perished at Pearl Harbor and in the jungles of Guadalcanal, those who framed the Constitution...

IN REALITY, of course, those on the "honor roll" of this nation's history spoke for themselves—more eloquently than we ever can.

And, in so doing, they passed the Torch of Freedom on to those who followed, in the belief that it would be kept alive.

Today, that torch—as embodied in the Declaration of Independence, the Bill of Rights, the Constitution—burns as brightly as it ever has.

If in our halls of Congress, our statehouses, city halls, homes, churches and schools, we fail to keep the torch burning, then we fail to speak for America.

That, in essence, is the challenge.

TODAY, THE STIRRING words of the Declaration of Independence stand as clear and meaningful as they did that other July 4 in Philadelphia's Independence Hall...

There is no room for misunderstanding.

Unalienable...neither to be given nor taken away by anyone, nor any power...keys to American citizenship, belonging to each individual, a birthright...

THIS THEN IS the cornerstone upon which the United States of America was founded, the well from which it has drawn its life-giving sustenance, the inspiration and foundation for the most perfect form of self-government yet conceived by man...

It will continue to exist only so long as we as a people, as a nation—as individuals—respect and defend it as "One Nation, Under God, Indivisible, With Liberty and Justice for All..."

Who speaks for America? We do! You and I.

ART BUCHWALD:

Gossip Can Be Hot Stuff Without All That Sex

WASHINGTON—There is a tremendous amount of talk these days about the newspaper's role in scandal. Should the press discuss the sexual and private lives of public servants? What is the point of newspapermen reporting gossip? Unfortunately, the sex scandals have gotten everyone off the track. There is a definite place for gossip in Washington, but it shouldn't have to do with who is sleeping with whom.

This is the type of gossip column that Washington and the country need.

CONG. VAL Blinkerman was seen last night at Duke Zeiberts Restaurant dining with a lobbyist from General Dynamics. Rumor has it that Blinkerman may be in bed with the B-1 bomber people...Sen. Tom Crinkle missed an important vote on the tax bill because he was off hunting on the eastern shore of Maryland with several buddies from an aerospace conglomerate...Gen. Charley Rotor and his family are vacationing in the Virgin Islands, compliments of an armored personnel tank company. Charley wanted to stay for a second week, but he had to get back to the Pentagon to advise nthe Secretary of Defense on equipment for the U.S. Army's new tactical division. Tough luck, Charley, but a week is better than nothing...

Washington is agog over the new Mercedes Benz Billy Rimsikorf is driving. Billy, who makes $15,000 a year, said the Mercedes was a gift from an old college chum who is now VP of a large oil company hoping to get offshore drilling rights to New Jersey. Do we hear wedding bells in the offing?...

THE LOVELY hostess Clara Kay, wife of the powerful Sen. Biff Kay, is no longer doing charity work. She has just been hired by the government of Rutania to handle its public relations in the United States. Clara is very excited about her new job and sees no conflict with her husband's position as chairman of the subcommittee on Rutania, which will hold hearings next week on a $900 million aid package to the country. Ambassador Zoog, who throws the best parties in Washington, told us. "I am secretly in love with Clara. We're very lucky to get her." When we asked Clara what her salary would be, she said $85,000. "Isn't it fun?" she giggled. "I'll be making more money than Biff."

What consumer advocate is now being followed night and day by the FBI?...Toland Brillo, of Brillo, Factor and Capistan, the Washington law firm, gave a big party at the Madison Hotel last week to celebrate an out-of-court settlement he made with the Justice Department in the SEC fraud case of Dilly Doodle. For those of you who have short memories, Doodle was indicted for embezzling $20 million in a grain fraud scandal. Thanks to Brillo, Doodle was fined $500 and cannot deal in wheat futures for six months. Poor Dilly.

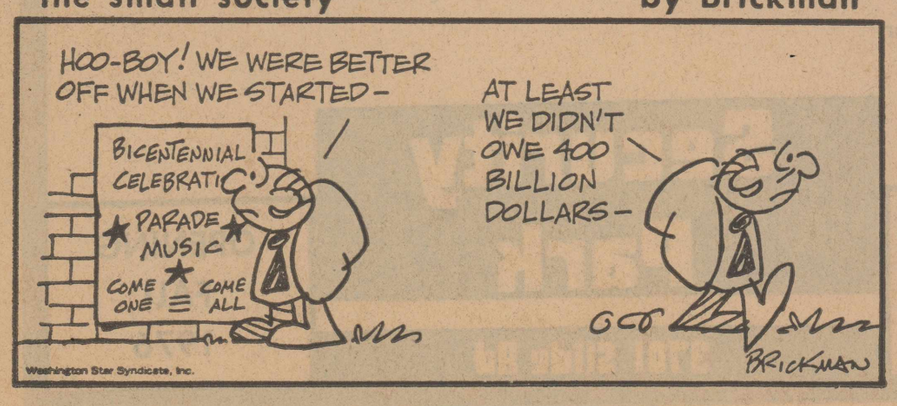

DR. HUDDLESTON Hargrave, the tough Federal Drug Administrator who was responsible for the recall of Whizzadrine, made by the Plowboy Drug Co., has resigned to become vice president in charge of public affairs for Plowboy at $150,000 a year. His last act before leaving the FDA was to rescind his recall of Whizzadrine, which he admitted was a "terrible" mistake.

It's sad but true. Two of our favorite people, Henry Kissinger and Ronald Reagan, are going their separate ways. Henry is keeping detente, and Ronnie gets custody of the Panama Canal...Another couple on the verge of splitsville are Mayor Abe Beame and Secretary of the Treasury Bill Simon. Simon has told friends that Abe spends money like water, and Abe says Simon doesn't have any idea what it costs to run a city any more. Simon is thinking of taking out a classified ad saying he will no longer be responsible for Abe's debts. Isn't it terrible when love goes out the window and disputes about money take over?...

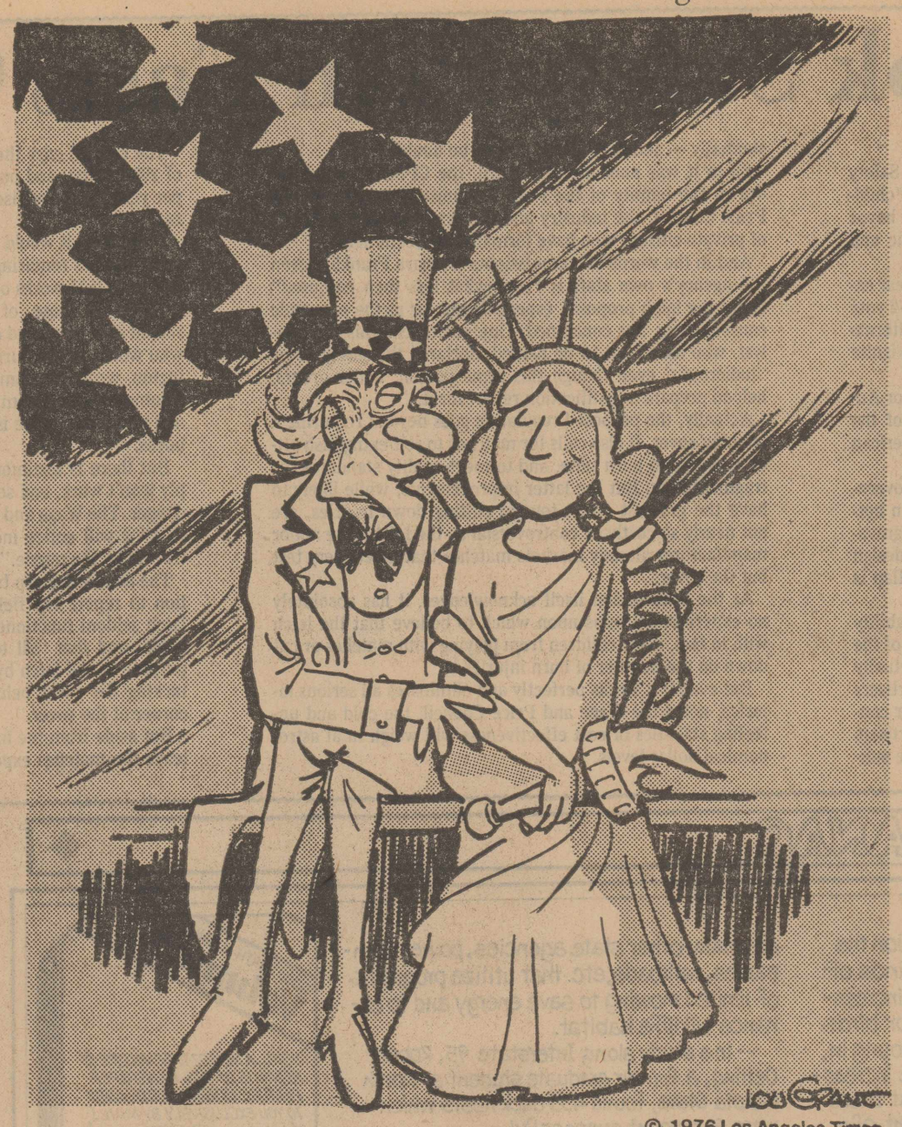

IF YOU SEE a light over Langley tomorrow evening don't call the fire department. The CIA is holding a bonfire to burn records that have just been subpoenaed by a joint congressional committee.

The Pentagon has misplaced $9 billion....Now It Can Be Told Dept.: Richard Nixon and Spiro Agnew always disliked each other, and friends say had Spiro become President he would have never pardoned Nixon...That's all, folks. More hot stuff tomorrow.

Sports Fan Laments Loss Of Game, Offers Suggestion

Editor, Avalanche-Journal:

It would seem that if the ABC Network and the AFCA (American Football Coaches Association) were happy and satisfied with the All Star game and its appearance in Lubbock, that there would be some way that the game could be kept in Lubbock.

Perhaps Bill Murray, executive director of the AFCA, could work out a way that a certain percentage of the TV rights would go to the Lubbock Chamber of Commerce and the Lions Club. This could then be a great help with the increased expenses.

Then, Jim Spence, vice-president of sport planning, and ABC could come up with more money for the TV rights which the sponsors would be glad to pay. I know that you have to pay a lot these days for what you want, especially the very best in entertainment.

The very best in entertainment, and also helping lots of needy causes would be for the coaches All Star game be in Lubbock next June, 1977.

As for the big name players competing in this game—how about having them sign an agreement that they will play if they are invited. Then the fans in this area would be guaranteed that they would be watching the top players who would not be able to back out at the last minute. If this were done, the tickets would sell, even at an increased price.

Just a few thoughts from "A sports fan for Texas Tech since 1946".

(EDITOR'S NOTE: We share your feelings about loss of the game. However, the problems are more involved than they appear at first glance. It was a combination of things which are besetting much of the sports world today.)

Georgia Parents Grateful For Aid To Daughter By Couple

Editor, Avalanche-Journal:

Last month our daughter was in an automobile accident in Texas. A couple traveling behind her car stopped and went to her aid. While the husband stayed and gathered together our daughter's belongings from the highway, his wife went to the hospital with the young girl.

When I arrived at Methodist Hospital in Lubbock I found these "angels of mercy" had taken care of all important details—and even more important, the wife had remained all night at our daughter's bedside.

During my eight-day stay with our daughter at Methodist Memorial these new-found friends were constantly visiting, bringing food, gifts, cheerful thoughts and good advice to us.

In this modern world that is traveling too fast for friendship and unselfish deeds, we want the world to know thaere are such people as Margaret and Harold Ormon of Lubbock, Texas, who are "friends in need"—indeed!

Our daughter is recovering nicely, and has returned to work.

Maxey Park Benefits Lauded; She Urges We Keep It Clean

Editor, Avalanche-Journal:

Patients, visitors and employes of Saint Mary of the Plains Hospital are among many who enjoy the beauty of Maxey Park.

The city fathers were very thoughtful in providing this "oasis" in the City of Lubbock. They recently placed a large cement slab by the lakeside, and hopefully they may add a picnic table sometime for our enjoyment. With that in mind may I add this thought, to whomever it may concern:

Wasn't it just great that you were able to have a picnic there last week? I bet you had lots of fun sitting in the shade of that beautiful tree. I passed by a little later and wondered if you would have enjoyed eating there if the family who had been there before you had left all their "litter" under the tree to be dispersed by the winds—as you did!

Take pride in your facilities! Help keep Lubbock clean for others as well as for yourselves! You may want to enjoy these grounds again!

Thanks For Blood Service To Area Patients Offered

Editor, Avalanche-Journal:

For some time now, there has been a select group of people in Lubbock that I do not feel have gained the appreciation of a majority of people in this area. And that is the staff and personnel at Blood Services of Lubbock. These people serve a 150 mile radius of Lubbock which comprises 33 hospitals, large and small.

Without these people, who work 7 days a week—24 hours a day, most of us in the medical field would surely feel their absence. For without them, a majority of necessary surgeries could not be done here and the therapeutic value of blood transfusion would be useless. Their continued presence has been beneficial to all of us—with the medical patient the main benefactor of their services.

In addition, I should like to take this opportunity to thank each and every individual who has given a few spare minutes of their time to donate blood. We are very appreciative of all of you—for because of you, it makes our work that much more rewarding.

And have a heart—donate blood—someday you might need it.

Reader Offers 'Other Side' Of South African Policy

Editor, Avalanche-Journal:

As one who has lived in the shadow of apartheid I can assure you that the "Tragedy for All South Africans" is much broader and much more severe than the immediate slaughter of 140 blacks and the associated injuries and property damage.

The real tragedy is that the Nationalist government and its formerly pro-Nazi Prime Minister, John Vorster, continue to deny 82.5 per cent of the 21.5 million South Africans the most fundamental political, economic and social rights.

Only the white minority (17.5 per cent) can participate in the election of the parliament. Blacks, coloureds (mixed racial origin) and Asians (mostly Indians) are provided with "puppet" local assemblies, most of whose members are appointed in Pretoria, rather than elected.

In 87 per cent of the country blacks cannot own land or homes and have no legal right to residence, even in the totally segregated urban ghettos like Soweto. Africans are legally restricted to low paying, low skilled jobs, and regardless of ability may not occupy supervisory positions over whites.

As a result of labor unrest, including the murder of 84 miners by the South African police in 1974, African wages have risen in recent years. The average African miner earned R67 ($77) per month while his white counterpart earned R598 ($688) per month in 1975. In all sectors white per capita income is 17.5 x African per capita income.

Opponents of the regime are subject to imprisonment for indefinite periods without being charged or brought to trial (General Law Amendment Act 1963).

As a result of this and other repressive legislation, South Africa has the highest per capita prison population of any nation in the world. Add up the total lack of political rights, extremely limited economic opportunity, and total social-racial discrimination by a minority against over 82 per cent of the population and you have a prescription for violence.

A few government concessions in the area of "petty apartheid" have only served to focus the attention of Africans to the more fundamental issues of human rights which are permanently denied them by the chance of birth. The patience of South Africa's black majority has been sorely tested. If that patience runs out in the face of white intransigence, we shall witness the true tragedy of South Africa.

Richard Vengroff, 4616 62nd St.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: We do not defend South Africa's strict policy of apartheid. And in time, the blacks, or Bantus, must be brought more actively and directly into the government. However, this cannot be done overnight, or by violence. Also, in recounting the salary figures, which vary from others we have seen, you fail to take into consideration government subsidized housing, health care and other such factors, which benefit the blacks. The truth is that the Bantus have streamed to the cities to get urban type work. They weren't dragged there.)

JAY HARRIS:

So, Happy Birthday

HAPPY Birthday, America!

One cannot say it too many times.

Today, each of us will share an experience, which with a few exceptions, we will not share again.

Today, only a handful of persons are enjoying the unique privilege of saying "Happy Birthday, America!" as a Centennial salute twice within a lifetime.

Today indeed is a most unique day. We have not arrived at it by accident, nor has the price paid for it been small. To all, it may not mean the same.

But, today, all of us, regardless of age, race, color or creed, should not only be able to say, freely and humbly: Happy Birthday, but God Bless America!

And mean it from the bottom of our hearts.

THERE MAY BE a few persons who think "too much has been said" about America's 200th Birthday.

There may be those who feel that in some areas the Bicentennial has been overdone, that it became too commercialized, a "buy-centennial," a facade behind which many faults lay hidden.

Perhaps in some areas. But, we honestly believe that for the vast majority of millions upon millions of Americans, this July Fourth is something special, something each is proud to have a part in as an American citizen.

Most of us must be standing tall and proud this Sunday, July 4, to be able to say: "I am an American!"

Are there any more stirring words?

"THE MOST memorable epoch in the history of America...". John Adams called it in a letter to his wife, Abigail, on July 3, 1776.

He was referring to the document which opened the door for a nation's Freedom, and all that was to follow—the Declaration of Independence.

Today, that one word—Freedom—means more to more people, those who enjoy it and those who yearn for it, than perhaps any one word in the world.

Around it is built: Freedom of Speech, Freedom of the Press, Freedom of Religion, and the Right to Life, Liberty and the pursuit of Happiness...

Its foundation is based on Faith in God Almighty, and the belief in the equality of man.

THIS YEAR, special emphasis has been put on the phase to Honor America that fell between June 14, Flag Day, and July 4.

Those 21 days offer an interesting historical parallel.

Since 1875, this nation's presidential salute has called for the discharge of 21 guns. So, it is most appropriate that our Salute to America also should enjoy this highest of accolades.

And, while America is a land of symbols, it also is a land of words, and deeds.

It is in those words, and deeds, that the history celebrated on this day, has been written.

IT IS MOST appropriate today to reflect upon two "symbols" which by their words have been the inspiration for many of the nation's deeds.

We refer to the Pledge of Allegiance to the Flag, and to The American's Creed. Both came into being long after the nation's birth.

The original pledge of allegiance was written by Francis Bellamy, who was born at Mount Morris, N.Y., May 18, 1855.

The pledge he wrote was first used at the dedication of the World's Fair Grounds in Chicago Oct. 21, 1892, the 400th anniversary of the discovery of America.

With some changes, it has been recited from that day to this across the land, and wherever Americans wish to pay tribute to the Flag.

THE REV. BELLAMY'S original wording was changed somewhat by the First and Second National Flag Conferences in 1923-24.

The work was officially designated as the Pledge of Allegiance to the Flag by Public Law 287, by the 79th Congress and approved Dec. 28, 1945.

Then, on June 14, 1954, Flag Day, President Dwight D. Eisenhower signed into law House Joint Resolution 243, which added to the Pledge the compelling and meaningful words, "under God."

Today, this is the way it reads: "I pledge allegiance to the Flag of the United States of America and to the Republic for which it stands, one Nation under God, indivisible, with Liberty and Justice for All."

THE AMERICAN'S Creed in its way is almost as stirring for the commitment it makes...

"I believe in the United States of America as a government of the people, by the people, for the people; whose just powers are derived from the consent of the governed; a Democracy in a Republic; a sovereign nation of many sovereign states; a perfect union, one and inseparable; established upon those principles of freedom, equality, justice and humanity for which American patriots sacrificed their lives and fortunes.

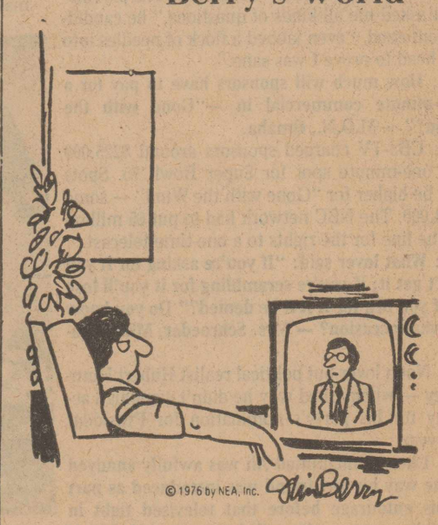

"I therefore believe it is my duty to my country to love it; to support its Constitution; to obey its laws; to respect its flag; and to defend it against all enemies."

The Pledge of Allegiance to the Flag, The American's Creed...

More, much more, than mere words. They are pronouncements of a People whose Faith in God Almighty and whose belief in Freedom and the Equality of Man have brought them this far. Properly implemented, they are beliefs to take America to Eternity itself.

It's Great Day To Visit Buffalo Springs Lake

General admission is 50 cents for those 12-years-old and over and 25 cents for children six to 11-years-old.

Swimming is one of the few activities prohibited at the lake. Joe Weatherford, security chief, said this was because there were so few shallow areas in the lake.

THE ROUSTABOUT

By RAY WESTBROOK

THE AMERICAN AUTOMOBILE ASSOCIATION says it opposes the priorities provision in a Federal Energy Administration gasoline rationing contingency plan.

The FEA plan, which is required to be drafted and submitted to Congress under the Energy Policy and Conservation Act, is aimed at spreading the burden of fuel shortages in the event of a massive future oil embargo by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries.

The FEA plan gives drivers lowest priority in such an energy emergency, John de Lorenzi, managing director of public policy for AAA, labeled the priorities provision as "unsound" because "it does not recognize that the nation's economy cannot operate unless employes are able to get to work."

The motoring federation indicated that approximately 78 per cent of all workers reach their jobs by private passenger car, and that almost half of those have no alternative means of transportation.

UNDER FEA'S PROPOSAL, national defense and emergency services such as police and fire departments would receive 100 per cent of their fuel needs. Other essential services, including sanitation, energy production and telecommunications, would receive 100 per cent of their needs as determined by a base period of consumption. All other firms would receive 90 per cent of their base-period requirements.

In a letter to Frank Zarb, FEA administrator, the AAA official said, "There is no point in giving a priority to the firms of the nation in order to keep industry going during a fuel crisis if there is no recognition of the need of workers to get to their jobs."

The association believes that commuting to work should be given a priority second only to the nation's defense, civil emergencies and essential services.

FEA'S PLAN PROVIDES for each licensed driver to receive an equal number of gasoline ration coupons.

"While a plan to allot the same amount of coupons to all drivers regardless of need is easiest to administer, it's completely impractical," de Lorenzi said.

The AAA spokesman believes it is imperative that statistics used in setting up an allotment for a gasoline rationing program be regional in nature, rather than lumping all of them together to come up with a "mythical" national average.

"An equal allotment of coupons to eligible individuals would penalize those in the suburbs who need gas to get to work and cannot take public transit, rewarding those in the central city who have a lesser need because of more readily available public transportation," de Lorenzi said.

THE AUTOMOTIVE INFORMATION COUNCIL observes that instructions to motorists around the turn of the century is still good advice.

The owner's manual for the curved-dash Oldsmobile of 1903 carried this note of caution to be used when refueling: "Never fill the gasoline reservoir by lamplight."

Service hints were also helpful in promoting carefree driving with the machines of those days. The drive chain in a 1902 Cadillac runabout could be kept in proper condition by the following process: "...take about four pounds of beef tallow, about one pound of flake graphite and about one pint of heavy lubricating oil, then heat and stir. When thoroughly melted and mixed, put the cleaned chain in the hot oil."

The council notes that the engine of a 1915 GMC truck could be kept warm in the winter by placing pieces of cardboard into grooves provided for that purpose alongside the radiator.

SPECIAL INSTRUCTIONS were required for the inevitable spare tire tube of earlier days: "A tube, if carried loose in its cardboard box, will be chafed by jostling about. If carried in the tool box, it is likely to be cut by sharp objects and rotted by oil or grease. Spare tubes should be wrapped in cloth or carried in tube bags. Don't hang tubes over nails in the garage. Keep them away from heat or strong light."

Owners' manuals were considered equipment by the manufacturer of the 1903 Olds, and the following warning was inserted: "Keep this book in the tool box. A new copy will not be furnished unless a satisfactory explanation is given."

The following advice, however, betrayed the fragility of automobiles in that era: "Don't drive 100 miles the first day. You wouldn't drive a green horse 10 miles till you were acquainted with him. Do you know more about a gasoline motor than you do a horse?"

SCALE MODEL—This oil pump being assembled by Bill Craig of Tahoka, is an exact scale model of some of the pumps which dot the South Plains area. Craig estimates the work will require some 85 hours from beginning to end. The device, which will operate at 6 r.p.m., has sealed roller bearings, and is powered by an electric gear motor concealed in the wood base. The pump is constructed entirely of steel except for the base portion. (Staff Photo by Gerry Burton)

New North Sea Activity Expected Despite British Energy Policies

TULSA, Okla. (Special) -The North Sea oil play is headed for its busiest and best year, despite uncertainty over British energy policies.

The year of 1976 will be a rewarding but costly chapter in the 12-year history of North Sea hydrocarbon development, according to the Oil and Gas Journal.

Four new North Sea fields are expected to begin production this year, 11 more discoveries have been chalked up so far in 1976 in British waters, and costs are skyrocketing everywhere.

For instance, Shell Oil Co.-Exxon, Inc.'s operation—the largest in the United Kingdom's portion of the North Sea—is costing $2.55 million a day.

The Journal says companies are shifting their money from risky wildcatting to developing proven fields, and thus offsetting high costs with investments that will return profits.

One restraint on wildcat drilling has been the British government's drive to renegotiate licenses, giving its British National Oil Co. (BNOC) the right to acquire 51 per cent of all offshore oil production.

The economic and political considerations have helped suppress North Sea drilling. Those factors and an increase in available equipment have caused an oversupply of mobile drilling rigs.

Chartering rates have dropped from $35,000 a day for long-term contracts in 1973 to $20,000 a day for a six-month charter now.

Shipyards that geared up to build the deepsea drilling-production platforms also are hurting: the oil firms haven't ordered a new platform since 1974.

Out on the volatile ocean, the oilmen are busily taking advantage of the summer "weather window" to drill, lay pipe, and construct platforms and other facilities. In early June, 43 rigs were active—compared to 50 a year ago.

Most of the activity is on England's portion of the continental shelf, where consortiums totaling 56 companies are developing 14 oil and seven gas fields. They have drilled 592 exploration-appraisal wells and 260 production wells, and are obligated to drill 99 more exploration wells by March, 1978.

Pipeline contractors are pressing to link the new fields with the mainland. One underwater line was completed this year and four more are under construction.

The Journal says the most ambitious is Phillips Petroleum Co.'s 274-mile, 36-inch natural gas pipeline between the Ekofisk field in the Norwegian sector to Emden, Germany. Completion is due next year.

The North Sea already has made Norway self-sufficient in oil. England will reach that status within three years, but wants to ensure its supply through participation agreements with the consortiums, giving it access to 51 per cent of the offshore oil but not ownership in the fields.

Recent deals with Gulf Oil Corp. and Continental Oil Co. gained BNOC a foothold in four large fields. The government has yet to complete negotiations with seven other major firms, including British Petroleum, of which it owns 70 per cent, but recent negotiations have clarified the government's position. This clarification should lead to a continued high rate of drilling, at least in the U.K. secton of the sea.

BNOC automatically will be a 51 per cent partner in the exploration licenses to be awarded later this year. BNOC will pay its share of wildcatting costs, and will share in production where it wants to pay 51 per cent of costs.

The industry considers that a better deal than the oil companies have been getting elsewhere. Norway's federally-owned Statoil doesn't pay for any exploration, but may get half the production by paying half of development expenses.

England's agreements so far will supply it with about 50 million barrels of oil a year in the early 1980s, and up to 135 million barrels more if it takes royalties in oil rather than cash. The country used about 86 million barrels in 1975.

Shell-Exxon's Brent field will be the biggest to go on stream this year. It is expected to flow 450,000 barrels daily by the 1980s. But the northerly North Sea field will cost $3.5 billion to develop, partially due to provisions for 100-foot waves and 160 m.p.h. winds, the most demanding anywhere in the offshore oil industry.

From all their fields, Shell-Exxon will produce nearly half of Britain's needs in the early 1980s—if they spend $6 billion for development between now and 1981.

Norwegian officials recently estimated that consortiums must spend $9 billion to develop their country's offshore reserves, estimated at 6.2 billion barrels of oil and 18.3 trillion cubic feet of gas.

The galloping growth of North Sea production may be a financial blessing for England and Norway, but its a creeping disaster for tanker fleets and construction.

Tanker shipments between North African and Middle Eastern fields and European refineries slipped 9 per cent to 11 million barrels daily last year.

With the arrival of the 1980s, the North Sea is expected to supply about 4.5 million barrels daily, meeting about a third of Europe's needs. Industry forecasts indicate the tanker business will correspondingly drop a third.

Platform Placed Off California

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (Special) -A $67 million drilling and production platform has been placed on location in record water depths offshore California.

The 865-foot steel structure was upended by Exxon USA in the Santa Barbara Channel in 850 feet of water. Twenty steel piles will be driven into the ocean floor to hold the platform securely in place. A three-level deck will be placed atop the unit this fall to expand its total height to 945 feet.

Because of its size, the platform was assembled in an Oakland construction yard in two sections. Each portion was barged to the channel for subsequent joining.

From this structure, 28 wells will be drilled into the Hondo field. The 1969 Exxon discovery is located 5 1/2 miles offshore and 20 miles west of the city of Santa Barbara.

Oil production is scheduled to begin in early 1978, and is expected to reach a maximum production of about 60,000 barrels per day. Potential peak gas production is expected to be 77 million cubic feet per day.

Exxon's total capital commitment in the Santa Barbara Channel will exceed $500 million before the first barrel of oil is produced, a spokesman for the company said.

Oil and gas have been produced from the state portion of the Santa Barbara Channel for more than 80 years and from federal leases since 1966. The Hondo field is located in federal waters.

Memorial Fund For Getty Set At University

LOS ANGELES, Calif. (Special) -A $100,000 endowment fund in memory of the late J. Paul Getty is being established in the Department of Fine Arts at the University of Southern California, according to Harold E. Berg, executive vice president of Getty Oil Co., and A. Quincy Jones, dean of USC's School of Architecture and Fine Arts.

Interest income from the endowment will support newly established J. Paul Getty Memorial Fellowships in fine arts. Recipients of the awards will be graduate students chosen annually by USC officials who are administering the program.

The fund will be provided by donations submitted in memory of J. Paul Getty from friends, relatives and Getty Oil Co. The internationally known oil pioneer died June 6, at the age of 83.

"We believe this program is a fitting tribute to Mr. Getty who, in addition to his business activities, had many diversified interests, including one of the world's foremost collections of art," Berg and Jones said in a joint announcement. Getty was a student at USC in the early 1900s.

Petroleum Society Plans Fall Technical Program

NEW ORLEANS, La. (Special) -"Synergy for Recovery" will be the major emphasis of a 200-paper technical program at the 51st Annual Meeting of the Society of Petroleum Engineers of AIME Oct. 3-6 at New Orleans.

Claude Coppel of Chevron Oil Field Research Co., program committee chairman, said, "The 'Synergy' theme will emphasize the need for a concerted effort by engineering and scientific disciplines to achieve maximum results in energy resource development." Coppel indicated that the three-day program would be divided into 33 sessions covering all aspects of the development of petroleum and natural gas.

The management and general interest session for the meeting, entitled "Realities of Energy Self-Sufficiency—Appraisal and Forecast," will be conducted on Tuesday afternoon, Oct. 5. Industry, government, and news media representatives will express their viewpoints on the how and when of energy self-sufficiency.

Four other sessions during the meeting will examine techniques for improved oil recovery; two sessions will focus on drilling technology; two sessions will discuss coal gasification; and another session will investigate sour gas operations.

In addition to the technical program, the SPE meeting also will include a 230-booth technical-educational exhibition in the Rivergate Convention Center. The exhibition will feature more than 80 leading petroleum service, supply and manufacturing companies who will present the latest products and services the industry has to offer.

Perry Company Picks Manager

ODESSA (Special) -Perry Engineering Corp., a subsidiary of Perry Gas Companies, Inc. of Odessa, has announced the appointment of R. C. Paulette Jr. as manager of project engineering.

Perry Engineering is engaged in the engineering design and construction of grass-roots or expansion projects for the natural gas and natural gasoline industry.

A native of West Texas, Paulette previously worked for The Ortloff Corp. in Midland as project manager. He is a 1958 graduate of the University of Texas at Austin.

ENERGY FORUM

An air conditioner is a common sight in homes throughout Texas, yet few people understand how their air conditioner works.

In the compressor, a gas called the refrigerant is compressed. The compressor works like a giant tire pump; the gas leaves the compressor at high pressure and is quite hot. Commonly used refrigerants are Freon 12 which boils at -21 degrees Fahrenheit and Freon 22 which boils at -41 degrees Fahrenheit.

The hot gas is cooled in the condenser, which looks like a car radiator. As it cools, the refrigerant gas changes to a liquid while still at high pressure. The liquid then passes to an expansion valve. This valve permits the liquid to expand into an evaporator or cooling coil.

As the liquid expands in the cooling coil, it picks up heat from air blown across the coil, producing cool, conditioned air. The refrigerant gas warms and is then recycled in the compressor. The entire system is tightly sealed. In the typical central air conditioning unit, the compressor and condenser are located together outdoors, and the expansion valve and evaporator are placed indoors.

Iran Makes Bid For Membership In Occidental

LOS ANGELES, Calif. (Special) -Occidental Petroleum Corp. and the government of Iran have announced the signing of a letter of intent providing for purchase by Iran of an equity interest in Occidental and for the conducting of a broad range of joint ventures in oil exploration, processing, transportation, marketing and real estate.

The letter of intent contemplates that the government of Iran will purchase 6,250,000 shares of $1.40 cumulative voting preferred stock and 6,250,000 warrants from Occidental for a cash price of $125,000,000. The warrants, which will be valid for 10 years, may be exercised any time after five years to purchase 6,250,000 shares of common stock at $20 per share.

The preferred stock will entitle Iran to elect one member to the board of directors of Occidental.

It was stipulated that the government of Iran will purchase the securities for investment, that it will grant a right of first refusal to Occidental in the event it decides to sell its stock, and that it will purchase no additional Occidental stock unless offered by the company itself or as part of an agreement with the company.

The letter of intent states that the objective of the parties is to lay the groundwork for joint ventures in Iran, the United States, and elsewhere. The joint ventures to be studied or entered into by the parties include the exploration and development of oil in the Caspian Sea, the transportation, processing and marketing of Iranian crude oil, participation by Occidental in cattle breeding in Iran, and participation by Iran in Occidental's real estate holdings and refineries.

The parties expect to explore such ventures by making use on the one hand of Iran's extensive natural resources and by the opportunities presented by its rapidly expanding economic development programs, and on the other hand of Occidental's "know-how, expertise, marketing and distributing facilities, and other resources," a spokesman for the company said.

Amoco Selects Supervisor Of Odessa Office

BROWNFIELD (Special) -S. J. "John" Okerson, former Slaughter area superintendent for Amoco Production Co. at Brownfield, has been appointed Odessa area superintendent, according to John W. Phenicie, vice president.

Elmer D. Newman, engineering supervisor of the firm's Houston Division headquarters, will succeed Okerson at Brownfield.

Okerson will be replacing D. A. "Dave" Davidson, who will retire this month from the Odessa post after nearly 43 years with the company.

Some 85 employes make up the Odessa area staff. They supervise the production of oil and gas for Amoco in Ector and some 40 surrounding counties in Southwest Texas.

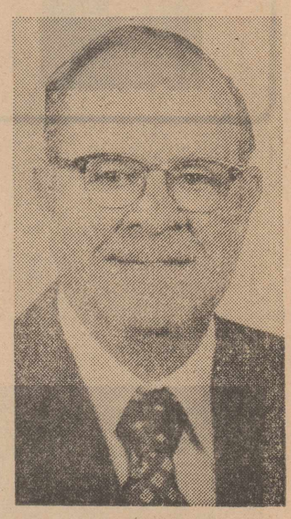

Okerson began his company career as a petroleum engineer in East Texas in 1949. Except for a 14-month tour in the Tulsa headquarters in the early 1950s, he has been involved in various engineering and supervisory positions in Longview, Abilene, Midland, Fort Worth and Brownfield.

Okerson holds a degree in mechanical engineering from Oklahoma University. He is a member of the American Institute of Mechanical Engineers and the American Petroleum Institute.

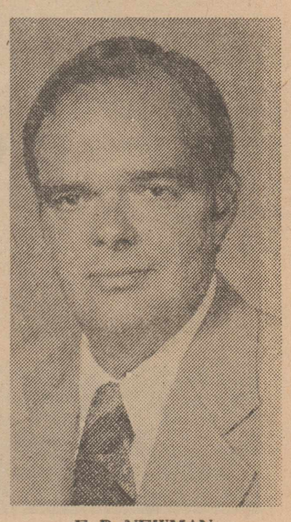

Newman joined Amoco as a petroleum engineer at Levelland in 1964 after receiving a degree in mechanical engineering from Texas Tech University.

He transferred to Fort Worth in 1966 and, after spending two years in the engineering department, moved back to Levelland as area engineer. He served in that capacity until 1974 when he transferred to Houston.

Newman served as chairman of the South Plains Section of the Society of Petroleum Engineers in 1971-72, and general chairman of the South Plains Chapter technical symposium in 1973.

PLAINS AGRICULTURE

By DUANE HOWELL

THE U. S. AGRICULTURAL ATTACHE who wrote a 1967 memo from Hamburg which has been used as a basis for Senate investigators' allegations that multinational grain exporters attempt to manipulate European Economic Community levies and U. S. prices has declined to comment on the matter.

Contacted by Commodity News Services in Moscow, where he has been U. S. agricultural attache since March, Alan Trick declined to comment last week on agricultural attache since March, Alan Trick declined to comment last week on how well he remembered the February 1967 memo, whether or not he will testify before a Senate subcommittee on the issue, or if he stands behind his nine-year-old statements.

Investigators for the Senate Multinationals Corporations Subcommittee have based nearly their entire probe of the grain trade on Trick's memo. The investigators testified last month that they talked twice (no dates were specified) with Trick and that he stood by his memo.

WHEN CNS FIRST TRIED TO CONTACT Trick after his memo had been revealed as the major basis for Senate charges, an assistant said he was traveling in the U.S.S.R. on a crop tour.

Reached later in Moscow, Trick told CNS he needed to talk with USDA officials in Washington before commenting on the issue. He explained it would not be "proper conduct for a government employe" to comment on such a controversy before receiving direction from his superiors.

Trick accepted a second call from CNS after he had talked with USDA officials. He would not comment, CNS reported, on whether he will go to Washington to testify before the subcommittee. Sen. Dick Clark, D-Iowa, told CNS earlier that he had called off hearings set for June 25 and last Monday so that Trick could fly to Washington to clear up the controvery about his memo before USDA or more grain company officials testify.

Trick indicated last week was the first time he had talked with USDA officials about the Senate charges.

THE USDA DOESN'T BELIEVE IT WILL have to bring Trick home for Senate questioning in order for the allegations to be shown false.

Assistant Secretary of Agriculture Richard Bell told Grain Instant News last week that if it were worthwhile to bring Trick to the United States for a Senate hearing, USDA would do so. But Bell said it would be silly to waste Trick's time on such an issue. He and other USDA officials point out that the attache is extremely busy in the U.S.S.R. at this time of year, a crucial season for Soviet crop monitoring. Trick was in Washington May 24-25 for U. S.-U.S.S.R. grain agreement consultations. He only moved to the U.S.S.R. in March, after having attended language school from August through February to prepare for the Soviet assignment.

Bell said Trick's 1967 memo has to be looked at as an "operations" memo, not one complaining to USDA of wrongdoing in EEC price reporting. He told GIN he would have told the Senate on June 25, had the hearing at which he was to have appeared not been canceled, that Trick's memo was written largely to justify having an agricultural officer at the U. S. consulate in Hamburg.

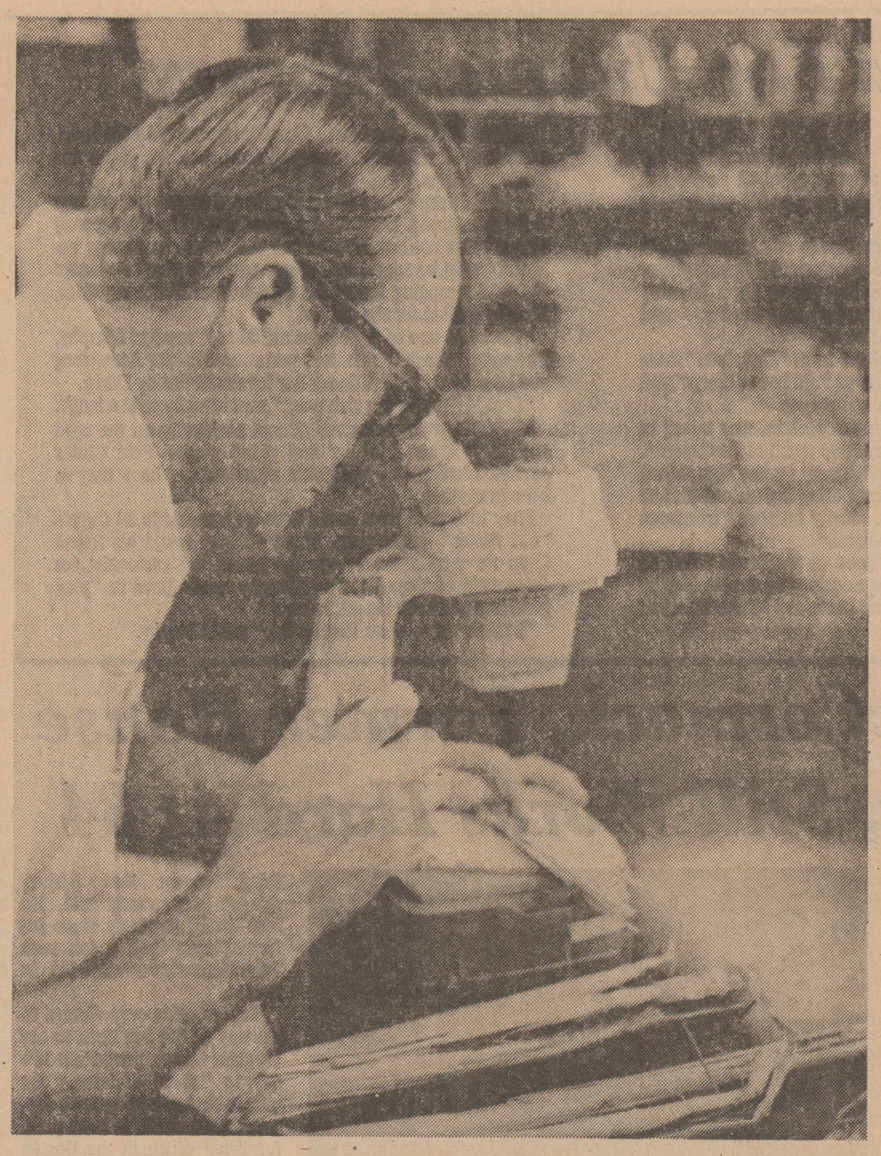

GOVERNMENT DRIVES TO CUT BACK overseas employes resulted in no ag officer being assigned to Hamburg after the summer of 1971. A foreign national employe at the consulate there currently gathers some statistics for USDA, but not on a daily basis, officials say. The Hague is the only EEC embassy now reporting daily prices to USDA. Those prices are published by USDA once weekly, in the department's weekly roundup of world ag production and trade, after which they are transmitted on USDA's leased wire system.

Had Bell testified, he would have noted the same major points Cargill, Inc. vice president Walter Saunders made earlier. Saunders and other grain trade representatives have pointed out that U. S. firms were being boycotted by German importers during the 1965-67 period covered by Trick's memo on possible grain price manipulation. If anybody had been manipulating levies then, trade representatives have indicated, Trick must have been referring to the Germans themselves or other parties not boycotted.

Bell said he also would have made Saunders' point that the EEC levy-setting system was changed July 1, 1967, only five months after Trick's report was received. No present or retired officials have yet been located by CNS who admit to having heard of the Trick memo before the Senate unit made it famous last month.

U. S. OFFICIALS NOW HAVE REGULAR exchanges of information with the EEC, Bell said. He said the EEC is too sophisticated to get into the situation alleged: that of being tricked into setting levies based on false information. The EEC also has denied strongly that it can be tricked by attempts anyone might make to report false offering prices to it.

Early last week, officials said USDA has not received a formal request Early last week, officials said USDA has not received a formal request from the Senate asking that Trick come to the United States for a hearing on his controversial memo.

STUDIES ROT DAMAGE –Dr. Darrel Rosenow, sorghum breeder with the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station (TAES) at Lubbock, examines the deteriorating effects of charcoal rot on sorghum. Scientists Examine Sorghum Diseases

Sorghum disease screening nurseries all being utilized in Texas, Puerto Rico and five other states by Texas Agricultural Experiment Station (TAES) researchers to detect new diseases or any chnages in old ones before they become economically damaging on the High Plains.

Dr. Darrell Rosenow, sorghum breeder at Lubbock, and Dr. R.A. Frederiksen, College Station—based pathologist, are carrying out their research in more than 20 disease screening nurseries in Texas, Puerto Rico, Mississippi, Georgia, Kansas, Arizona and California.

The TAES disease nursery program, which began in 1958, is designed to prevent or reduce losses to new disease organisms or to more potent strains of old pathogens.

"By planting the same sorghum variety lines at several locations, new diseases or new races often are detected before they can become an economically important disease," says Rosenow. "Breeders then either have or can be working on sources of resistance when the disease or race appears here on the High Plains."

An example of the changeability in sorghum diseases is head smut, a disease that has been around for a long time, but which has increased significantly the past few years. The smut organism has the ability to change rapidly and break down plant resistance, rendering the sorghums susceptible, said Rosenow.

"New races of smut first developed in South Texas in the early 1960's, and since then evolved independently in West Texas," Rosenow explained.

To combat the versatile pathogen, large screening nurseries were located in key areas of the Coastal Plains where the newest races exist.

"These nurseries help identify germplasm sources with resistance," he said. "The germplasm material then is made available to all sorghum breeders for use in incorporating resistance into their hybrids."

In 1976, because of obvious rapid changes in smut races in South Texas and an unusually high incidence of head smut in some sorghum fields on the High Plains, a smut screening nursery under Rosenow's supervision was planted near Halfway.

The nursery contains more than 2,400 entries and is a duplicate of nurseries planted near Edna and Beeville in South Texas.

Lines with resistance grown at all three locations will be used in breeding programs to develop smut resistant hybrids, Rosenow said.

He and his co-workers are stydying other disease problems, including charcoal rot, a stalk rot induced by moisture stress during grain development, and maize dwarf mosaic caused by a virus transmitted by aphids.

Plains Wheat Harvest Pushed

COLLEGE STATION, Tex. (AP) — Farm and ranch soil moisture is good in most areas of the state although rain is needed over much of the Plains and western sections, Dr. Daniel Pfannstiel, director of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, says.

Wheat harvesting last week was confined generally to the High Plains where less than half the crop remains in the field, he said. Yields have been mostly good on the Plains but have been off in many other sections because of prolonged dry weather last winter and spring.

The general cotton harvest is about to start in South Texas, where the first bale was ginned June 22, Pfannstiel said.

Range and livestock conditions generally are good, although pastures and range grasses in the Plains and western sections need rain, Pfannstiel said.

District agricultural agents gave these reports:

Panhandle: Wheat harvesting is past the halfway point in most counties. Dryland yields are from 10 to 20 bushels per acre and irrigated yields range from 50 to 60 bushels. The second cutting of alfalfa is being baled. Forage conditions are below average.

South Plains: Cotton, corn and sorghum are making good progress. The wheat harvest is nearing completion. Yields have been fair to good. Ranges and pastures remain below average. Cattle are in fair shape.

Rolling Plains: Cotton and sorghum are making good progress but additional rain is needed in some counties. The second cutting of alfalfa is complete. Farmers are plowing wheat fields and cultivating cotton. Range and livestock conditions are mostly good.

Northeast: Small grain harvesting is complete. Hay crops are making good growth. Early cotton is blooming. Some peanuts and soybeans remain to be planted. Livestock and pasture conditions are good.

Far West: All crops are making good growth, although they would benefit from a good rain. Pastures and ranges also need moisture. The small grain harvest is complete. Harvesting of cantaloupes and onions is increasing.

West Central: Most small grains have been harvested. Yields are low. Cotton is making good progress but some boll weevils are active. Some early sorghum is heading. Sorghum midges are increasing. Ranges and pastures need rain.

Central: The small grain harvest is complete. Hay making is widespread. Good yields and quality are reported. Sorghum midge numbers are rising. Early peanut fields are making good growth. Range and livestock conditions are good to excellent.

East: Hay making is active. Yields are fair to good. Some sorghum and peanuts are still being planted. Corn is being harvested for roasting ears. Vegetables are in full production. Pastures and ranges are providing good grazing.

Southeast and Upper Gulf Coast: All crops are making good progress. Some wheat is still being harvested with yields ranging from 28 to 35 bushels per acre. Hay making is active. Insects are damaging the pecan crop.

South Central: Cotton, corn and sorghum are making good progress. Peanut planting is active. Hay harvesting is in full swing. Insects are increasing in pecans. Pasture and livestock conditions are good but additional rain would help.

Southwest: Sorghum and corn are ripening rapidly. Cantaloupe harvesting remains active. The onion and cucumber harvests are about complete. Ranges are in good to excellent shape. More rain would help. Screwworm infestations continue in livestock.

Coastal Bend: Harvesting of small grains and flax is about complete. Yields are poor. Cotton is setting a heavy crop. Corn is in the hard dough stage. The sorghum harvest has started. Watermelon harvesting is in full swing. Pastures and ranges need rain.

South: Corn and sorghum harvesting is increasing. Harvesting of cantaloupes and watermelons is about complete. Pastures and ranges could use rain.

Farm Price For Wool Up Sharply

WASHINGTON (AP) — The farm price of wool has jumped sharply this year because U.S. production is not keeping up with a rising demand from textile mills, and imports have soared as a result, according to the Agriculture Department.

Wool prices at the farm averaged 70 cents a pound in May, the highest in more than two years, including 85 cents a pound in Texas and 40 to 50 cents in the eastern states, the department's Outlook and Situation Board said. Further increases are expected.

"Most of the price increase is due to runups in prices of the medium and coarser grades of wool, reflecting a relative shift in demand toward heavier woolen fabrics in the United States and abroad," the board said.

"For the year farm prices are likely to average in the 65 to 70 cent per pound range, up from last year's 45-cent average."

In the first four months of this year, wool imports totaled 16.3 million pounds, compared with 3.1 million during the same period of 1975, the report said.

CB Operators Get Warning

AUSTIN (AP)—CB operators who travel in Canada or Mexico could lose their radios, with no insurance to protect them, if they don't abide by those countries' regulations, State Insurance Board chairman Joe Christie said Thursday.

One requirement is that they obtain a permit to use their equipment in the country they are entering.

Failure to do so could result in confiscation of their radios, Christie said.

Confiscation by authorities is not considered an "accidental loss" under most insurance policies, he said.

New Acala Cotton Variety Released

LAS CRUCES, N.M. (Special)—Acala 1517 E-1, a shorter-season variety of American cotton, has been released by the New Mexico Agricultural Experiment Station.

The new variety is planted at five locations in southern New Mexico and seed should be available in 1977.

Barring unforeseen circumstances, the foundation seed will be available from the New Mexico Crop Improvement Association, according to Dr. Marvin L. Wilson, associate director of the experiment station and chairman of the varietal release committee.

Acala 1517E-1 was developed at Las Cruces as strain B8040. Evaluation was by Dick D. Davis, Norman Malm; Carl E. Barnes, Roy L. wood and C. R. Roberts, all of New Mexico State University.

Acala 1517E-1 offers cultural versatility to New Mexico farmers, according to the release committee. Yield is about the same as Acala 1517-70, but Acala 1517E-1 performs better under conditions of late planting, short seasons, dense populations, high fertility and excess water, or a combination of those factors.

Acala 1517-70 is favored over 1517E-1 by early plantings, thin stands, long seasons, low fertility or water stress.

Acala 1517E-1 is an earlier blooming plant (about six days) and reaches peak bloom about seven days earlier, said Wilson. The first open boll appears 10-11 days earlier than 1517-70.

Acala 1517E-1 is recommended in all areas of New Mexico's cotton-producing area where once-over harvesting is practiced or where planting is delayed past May 5 (May 1 in the northern half of the cotton-producing area), he said.

It also is recommended in any situation where fertility is high, following lettuce for example.

Wilson said, planting before May 1 is not recommended, since 1517E-1 has shown poorer germination in cold soils than Acala 1517-70. Good stands are essential to good yields in short-statured cotton, he noted.

Mature Acala 1517E-1 plants are about four inches shorter than Acala 1517-70. The plant also is narrower with slightly smaller bolls, and is more storm resistant than Avala 1517-70.

Fiber strength properties of the two varieties are similar. In micronaire, Acala 1517E-1 had a higher reading in every comparison test, averaging about 0.4 micronaire units more.

Fiber elongation is clearly better than 1517-70, said Wilson.

Disease resistance of the two varieties is about the same, he said. Both are highly tolerant to Verticillium wilt and resistant to races one and two of bacterial blight.

Marketing Year Begins Earlier

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department has put into effect a change in handling wheat statistics which immediately shows that the U.S. reserve of bread grain has been larger all along than the previous records have indicated.

No illegal bookkeeping is involved. The new system, in fact, was ordered by Congress last year and is intended to portray the wheat supply situation more realistically than in the past.

The change simply involves moving the beginning of the wheat marketing year up one month. Historically, the USDA's wheat marketing year used for statistical purposes began July 1 and ran through the next June 30. Now it will begin June 1 and extend through the following May 31.

Several reports issued last week were the first to incorporate the new bookkeeping year. Revisions also have been issued showing the wheat situation on the new June 1 basis for the past decade.

Many years ago little wheat was harvested before July 1. So what was left over from previous crops on that date was used as a benchmark for computing the total supply — the old-crop wheat plus grain from the new harvest — for the following year.

But harvest starting times have changed with modern varieties, combines, drying equipment and transportation. Thus, by July 1, much new wheat already has been harvested, delivered to elevators and — in some cases — on its way to port facilities for delivery abroad.

In effect, counting this "new" wheat, there has been much more grain available on July 1 than the old system of bookkeeping has indicated.

The archaic wheat year really came under fire a few years ago when, after big export sales to Russia and other countries, there were alarms that the U.S. supply might run out before the new harvest was ready and that bread might soar to $1 a loaf.

None of that happened, although the average farm price of wheat did rise to a record of $5.52 a bushel on Feb. 15, 1974, according to USDA. At the time, growers, grain trade experts and many members of Congress pointed out the fallacy of using July 1 wheat supply estimates as a benchmark for judging the situation.

Using the new June 1 starting date, the department says that there were 665 million bushels of wheat in the U.S. stockpile from previous crops. The old method had projected the "old-crop" reserve would be 543 million bushels going into the 1976-77 marketing year on July 1.

Last year's reserve, carryover, carryout, carryin — the terms mean the same — on June 1 was 430 million bushels, compared with the old July 1 total of 327 million used earlier.

The change to a June 1 marketing year starting date does not mean one bit more or less wheat. But it does provide farmers, the grain trade and the public with a more realistic accounting of how much grain there is on hand at a time when another new crop is ready for harvest.

Also changed to the June 1 year from July 1 were oats, barley, rye and flaxseed. Marketing years for other major commodities were not changed.

The marketing year for corn and sorghum begins on Oct. 1; soybeans Sept. 1; and cotton Aug. 1.

Americans Flock To Switzerland

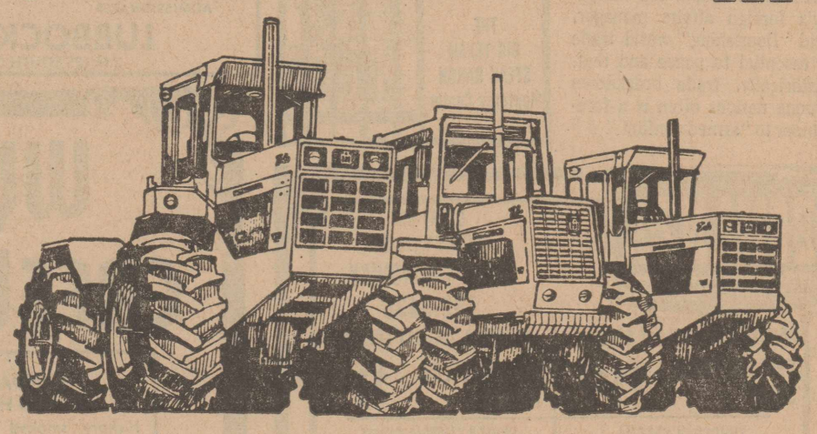

NEW YORK (UPI) — Switzerland is once again proving a popular destination for American tourists, according to the Swiss National Tourist Office. It said American overnight stays was up more than 13 per cent for the first quarter of 1976 compared with the same period last year.

Many Americans are taking advantage of many discount offers and moneysaving plans offered by Switzerland, such as the Swiss Holiday Pass, the Half-Fare Pass and the Swiss Travel Invention, a spokesman said.

Murphy Chronicles Jazz For Unique 'Library'

By MARK KAUTZ

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Turk Murphy, who has brought traditional jazz to thousands here and around the world, is more than a trombonist — he's also a student and historian of a uniquely American music.

The gray-haired Murphy has dedicated more than 40 years to studying and preserving the music he plays and has compiled a library that contains 10,000 to 20,000 songs that he transcribed onto sheet music.

Since the musicians who first played Dixieland never wrote it down, Murphy's work represents a historic collection of American music.

"I wasn't able to go to college, so I decided to make the most of my career in music," Murphy says about why he began the library.

He often jots down from memory the chords, melody and harmony lines of a song after a jam session or during breaks, and he has managed to research the origins of many songs.

"High Society," for instance, originally was a Belgian march, and "Careless Love" and "Didn't He Ramble" were Elizabethan folk songs, he said.

"'Didn't He Ramble' was part of the lyrics to a tune called 'Ram of Derby,' which was George Washington's favorite song," he added.

Murphy corresponds with musicians throughout the world, and many ask for his arrangements. It sometimes takes him a half day to locate the song in his voluminous files, but he fills each request.

Traditional jazz, as Murphy prefers to call his music, got its start in New Orleans and was popularized by piano player Jellyroll Morton and trumpeters King Oliver, Bunk Johnson — who claimed he taught "Satchmo" how to play — and "Satchmo" himself, Louis Armstrong.

Murphy says he tries to avoid the term "Dixieland" since it often is used to describe music as "old hat or corny" and evokes certain racial prejudices he opposes.

Murphy, whose real first name is Melvin, was raised in Williams, Calif., a small farming town north of Sacramento. He was nicknamed "the Terrible Turk" on the high school football team, and it stuck. It was during high school that he decided to play the trombone, mostly because "trombone players marched in front of the band."

Murphy began playing local jobs on weekends when he was 15. Unable to attend college during the depression, he instead played with several swing bands and later with a jazz band.

In 1948 in San Francisco, Murphy started his own band, consisting of trombone, trumpet, bass, clarinet, piano and banjo or drums.

In 1955, Murphy was asked to pick out a song and arrange it for Armstrong. He picked a tune from "The Threepenny Opera" that neither Murphy nor the famed trumpeter believed would be successful. When asked whether he wanted the $350 arranging fee or a copyright and future royalties, Murphy settled for the flat fee.

"That was one of my bigger mistakes," recalled Murphy. The song, "Mack the Knife," was successful for Armstrong and later became a million seller for singer Bobby Darin.

"I could have been a rich man," says Murphy with a laugh.

Murphy's group remained almost constantly on the road until 1960 when Murphy and piano player Pete Cluter opened Earthquake McGoon's night club, where they've been ever since.

They took the club's name from a character in Al Capp's "Li'l Abner" comic strip. When Murphy asked his friend Capp for permission to use the name, the cartoonist set down only one condition — Murphy would have to "play good jazz and keep his nose clean!"

"I think we've done that so far," said Murphy.

In medieval England the salt cellar was a social boundary at the dinner table. High-ranking guests sat above the ornate silver container closer to the head of the table, lesser guests below it. King Canute's laws provided that a social climber could be "pelted out of his place by bones at the discretion of the company."

The first printing press in America was set up in Rhode Island in 1727.

John McCormack, Former House Speaker, Still Works Hard At 84

By GENE BERNHARDT

WASHINGTON (UPI) — His face is still gaunt and only recently has his ramrod posture relaxed slightly.

At 84, John W. McCormack, former speaker of the U.S. House of Representatives, still puts in a full work week listening to his Boston "constituents" who refuse to acknowledge that he retired from public life nearly six years ago.

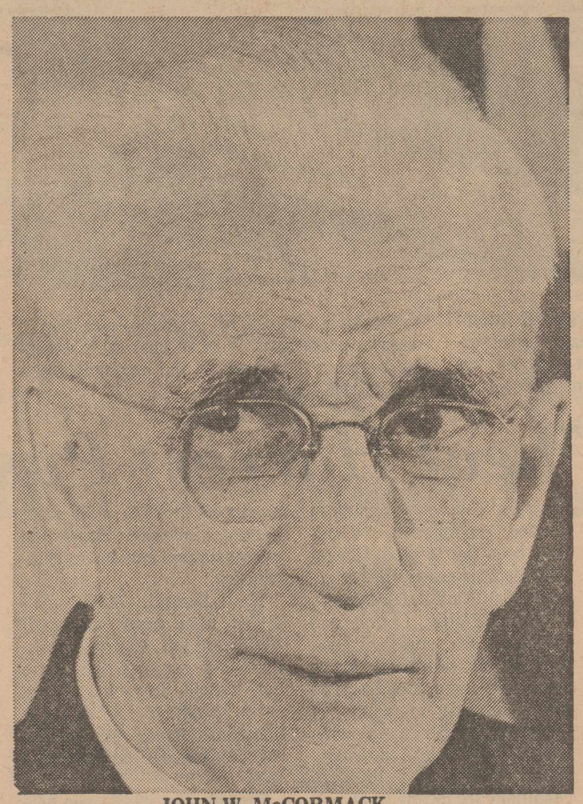

"Many people drop by to discuss matters with me. They're still asking me for favors, like jobs. I try to help them," McCormack said during a recent visit to the House.

When McCormack announced his retirement in 1970, after 43 years as a congressman and the last eight as speaker, he said it was a decision he and his devoted wife, Harriet, had made two years earlier.

His retirement came at a time when his top aide, Martin Sweig, had been indicted by a federal grand jury on charges of influence peddling in his name, and restless young House members were accusing the elderly McCormack of ineffective leadership.

McCormack was never involved in the Sweig case, in which Sweig was convicted of perjury and sentenced to 30 months in prison. A lobbyist friend, the late Nathan Voloshen, also was convicted.

"He was not guilty of anything, except that perjury thing," McCormack said. He sees Sweig regularly since his former aide took a job with John Hancock Insurance Co., in Boston.

JOHN W. McCORMACK
Still Maintains Busy Pace

McCormack's only change in his way of life has been to cut his cigar consumption from 15 a day to "about a dozen." He puts in six to seven hours a day, five days a week, in a tax-paid, furnished office in the Boston Post Office building.

Since McCormack was the only living former speaker, the House made permanent a provision for lifelong funds to maintain an office with secretarial help, postage and utilities for McCormack, in lieu of rent payments to the General Services Administration.

Two secretaries are paid $14,500 a year each to handle his "official work."

McCormack, whose loyalty to the Democratic party was second only to his late wife and his Roman Catholic religious faith, said the Democrats can beat President Ford in November no matter who they nominate — assuming Ronald Reagan doesn't do it first. He refused to say who he prefers for the Democratic nomination.

If the postal service is to balance its budget, the General Accounting Office estimates the per ounce cost of first class mail in 1984 at 34 cents.

Suzanne Pleshette Says TV 'Marriage' Terrific

By BOB THOMAS

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "I think we have a terrific marriage. Our feelings about each other are mature, and we appreciate each other as human beings."

Suzanne Pleshette was talking about her marriage — but which one?

1. The marriage she shares with psychologist Bob Hartley every Saturday night on "The Bob Newhart Show."?

2. The one she has had with Dean Jones in Disney movies like the just-completed, "The Shaggy D.A."?

3. Her marriage to Darren McGavin in seven films, including the television epic, "Law and Order."?

4. Her eight-year, off-screen union to businessman Thomas Gallagher III?

The answer to the above question is 1.

Indeed Suzanne's relationship with Newhart on the CBS series is one of the major reasons for its success. "Emily is not smarter than Bob, nor is she manipulative, like most wives in television series," the actress declared. "She is appreciative of Bob's idiosyncracies, and he respects her desire for an identity of her own.

"Our relationship wasn't always that way. When the show started out four years ago, Emily seemed much younger. This despite the fact that she was a 30-year-old woman who had waited until she was 28 to get married.

"In the beginning, the writers concentrated on the domestic side of Emily's life with little concern about her career as a school teacher. Last season we had two shows at her school; this year she has been promoted to vice principal, so I think there will be even more involvement at school.

"At first Emily's reactions were not womanly, but that has changed, too. The writers were reluctant to inject 'Suzannisms' but now I can pretty much play myself. I am the more outgoing, the more demonstrative half of the couple. That is true in my own marriage to Tommy, and it is also true in Bob's marriage to Ginny."

Suzanne Pleshette didn't always play the wife. When she came to films after Broadway success, she found herself typed in another way.

SUZANNE PLESHETTE
Which Marriage Is She Talking About?

"Actresses with dark hair and deep voices always are cast as the bad girl, or the bad-good girl," she remarked. "I rarely got the man at the end of the movie. Or if I did, he died in my arms."

Occasionally she returns to the femme fatale — as she did playing June Mathis in the TV biography of Rudolph Valentino. Mostly she's playing wives. And she observed that the Hartleys' late marriage is being copied by today's generation.

"I think marriage is making a comeback," she commented. "I see it in my own friends and in my friends' children. They're marrying later, but for righter reasons.

"In my own generation, if you weren't married by the time you were 21, it was oldmaid time. You got your catch right out of college and settled right down into middle-class morality. After a number of years couples realized that they weren't meant for each other.

"Most of the people I know are on their second marriage, and those are the happy ones. Because husband and wife know why they are getting married."

"The Bob Newhart Show" has just started filming its fifth season, and Miss Pleshette figures it will go for a sixth. "We finished 11th for the season and were never out of the top 20." Will the patter of little feet be heard in the Hartley's Chicago apartment?

"I don't think so," said Suzanne. "Strangely enough, my original contract stated that Emily Hartley would have a baby if I was pregnant. When the show started I was pregnant, but I didn't know I was going to have a miscarriage. I haven't gotten pregnant again, and I think the bank is closed.

Backgammon by Omar Sharif

Black rolls 5-1. How should he play?

ANSWER TO BACKGAMMON PROBLEM

There is no question about how Black should take the 5. He has only one move—to bear off a man from the 5-point. The question is how should he play the 1: by moving a man from the 5-point to the 4-point, or by dropping a man from the 3-point to the 2-point?

Playing a man from the 3-point to the 2-point has one advantage: On Black's next roll, he will not leave another blot. However, that is still one roll away. The more immediate problem is the blot Black must leave when he makes this move.

Let's consider the possibilities. If Black leaves the blot on his 5-point, he can be hit by any 4 (11 possibilities out of 36) or by 3-1 (2 chances out of 36). In other words, White stands to hit the blot with 13 combinations and to miss with 23.

If Black uses the 1 to move his man from the 5-point to the 4-point, he can only be hit by a 3. To put it in simple terms, there are 11 combinations that will hit now, and 25 that will miss. Thus, Black can improve his chances of escaping without being hit by moving the man from the 5-point to the 4-point.

TIP: When you have to leave a direct shot (i.e., a blot that is fewer than 6 points away from an opposing man), the closer you are to that man, the better your chances of not getting hit.

SAMMY, THE WONDER CHILD

At the age of 6, Sammy Reshevsky was a chess prodigy, and at the age of 8 was already giving simultaneous exhibitions all over the world. Here is one of them he won in his 1920 Berlin exhibitions.

WHITE: Reshevsky
BLACK: L. Doery.

1.	P-K4	P-K4
2.	P-KB4	PxP
3.	B-B4	B-K2
4.	N-KB3	B-R5ch

13.	KxP	QxBPch
14.	K-N3	B-R5ch (e)
15.	QxB	QxB?
16.	Q-Q8 mate.

(a) 5. K-B1 is recommended nowadays.

(b) For a youngster, Sammy was surely well up in the book knowledge of the day!

(d) If 12...RxN; 13. BxRch, QxB; 14. QxQch, KxQ; 15. P-K5, etc.

(e) Nothing hleps now: If 14...QxB; 15. N-Q6 d.ch., or 14...Q-N3ch; 15. QxQ followed by RxB; or 14...R-N1ch; 15. N-N5ch, followed by BxR.

The solution is to the problem above is: 1. B-N2, PxQ; 2. B-Q4 mate; or 1...P-K4; 2. Q-B8 mate; or 1...P-K7; 2. QxB mate; or 1...PxR; 2. Q-B8 mate; etc.

Many Stars Enjoy 'Ego Trip' That Goes With Presidential Campaigns

By BOB THOMAS

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "I learned a lesson from Watergate that I don't want to learn again. Too many of us were sitting still while our liberties were being trod upon. That was a close shave, too close for me. I decided I must do something for my country."

Actor George Peppard speaks with fervor as he addresses audiences from Altoona, Pa., to El Paso, Tex., in behalf of his candidate, Jimmy Carter. Peppard, star of "How The West Was Won," "The Carpetbaggers" and television's "Banecek," typifies the campaigning celebrity, much prized by candidates.

Once mostly a glamorous adjunct to campaigns, the celebrity in politics is now a vital figure.

Lyn Nofziger, campaign aide for Ronald Reagan and a veteran of California politics, explains: "Celebrities help bring out the crowds. They're also good as surrogate speakers when the governor can't attend an event; they are well-spoken and can appeal to crowds.

"People can identify with their favorites in films and television, and that kind of identity can rub off on the candidate."

Nofziger added that movie and TV stars also help attract money, which is what campaigns run on, especially in this television age.

With federal laws restricting cash contributions to candidates, fund-raising affairs featuring big-name performers have taken on a new importance. The Allman Brothers raised $50,000 for Carter at a Providence, R.I., concert. Barbra Streisand, Simon and Garfunkle, Nichols and May, and others have brought thousands of dollars to political campaigns in recent years.

Some stars admit they enjoy the ego trip in traveling with a man who may be president. But most seem motivated by their own political convictions. George Peppard is an example.

"My only previous activity in politics was attending two cocktail parties for Houston Fluornoy," said the Peppard. (Republican Fluornoy was defeated for California governor by Edmund G. Brown Jr. in 1974). "Watergate changed my thinking.

"I saw Jimmy Carter on TV before the Wisconsin primary, and I said to my wife, 'That sounds like the truth.' I followed his progress and read his position papers and biography. Then I called Atlanta and said, 'I'd like to help Governor Carter.' He himself called back and said, 'I need money, I need votes, I need help.' "

Californians listened to a parade of celebrities speaking for candidates in the June 8 primary. Henry Fonda appeared on TV to plug his son-in-law, Tom Hayden, for the Senate, as did Will Geer, grandpa of "The Waltons."

James Stewart has campaigned in the East and in California for Reagan. Others who have rallied to Reagan are John Wayne, Efrem Zimbalist Jr., Ken Curtis and Lloyd Nolan.

Committed to the Ford camp are Cary Grant, Glenn Ford, Sonny Bono, Zsa Zsa and Eva Gabor, Hugh O'Brien, Ed Nelson, Ron Ely and Jayne Meadows.

On the Democratic side, Brown has attracted Candice Bergen, Warren Beatty and Jack Lemmon. With his obvious appeal to younger voters, Brown has made use of pop music performers in his campaign. Ronnee Blakely and Keith Carradine, who appeared in the film "Nashville," performed their songs at Maryland rallies. The Eagles, Linda Ronstadt and Jackson Browne starred in a fund-raising concert for Brown, and the group Chicago added its endorsement with two fund-raising shows.

Cary Grant, like Peppard, is a newcomer to politics. He escorted Betty Ford to campaign affairs in California, and he explained his reasons for supporting the President: "We are at peace now and President Ford and our Secretary of State are doing their best to keep it that way."

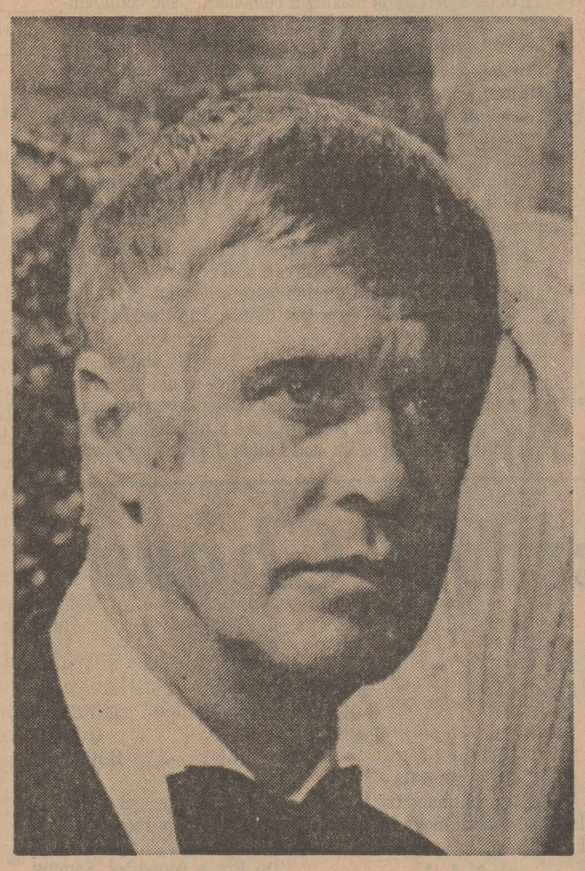

Some stars declined to enter the political arena. Redd Foxx ("Sanford and Son") said he turned down an invitation to escort Mrs. Jimmy Carter to Los Angeles appearances.

"I don't think stars should get involved in religion or politics," said the comedian.

Bob Hope is another of the stars who don't believe in campaigning. He has contributed to campaigns of friends like George Murphy and Stuart Symington and has entertained at fund-raisers. "But I've never stumped for a candidate except President Eisenhower.

"Once President Roosevelt asked me to appear for him. Albert Lasker, who was head of the advertising agency Lord and Thomas, advised me not to. 'Everybody buys Pepsodent (Hope's radio sponsor) — Republicans and Democrats," he said.

The use of entertainers in campaigning has been going on since the earliest days of the republic. Minstrel shows at torchlight rallies attracted voters in the South, Broadway stars performed for Tammany in New York, dance hall girls provided the come-on for politicians in the frontier West.

The Almanac
TODAY IN HISTORY

By United Press International

Today is Sunday, July 4, the 186th day of 1976 with 180 to follow.

The morning stars are Mercury and Jupiter.

The evening stars are Venus, Mars and Saturn.

Those born on this date are under the sign of Cancer.

American song writer Stephen Foster was born July 4, 1826.

On this day in history:

In 1802, the U.S. Military Academy was opened at West Point, N.Y., with the arrival of 10 cadets.

In 1826, former Presidents John Adams and Thomas Jefferson both died, on the 50th anniversary of their signing of the Declaration of Independence.

In 1946, the Philippine Republic came into existence after 47 years of U.S. sovereignty.

In 1960, the U.S. flag officially grew to 50 stars after admission of Hawaii into the Union almost a year earlier.

A thought for the day: In the U.S. Declaration of Independence, July 4, 1776, Thomas Jefferson said, "...We hold these truths to be self-evident: That all men are created equal; that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable rights; that among these are life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness."

Right Around Home

BEN MOFFETT

AMERICA'S NATIONAL parks have never been short of people, but visitors are showing up in the parks during this Bicentennial year at a rate that is a surprise even to the director of the National Park Service, Gary Everhardt.

"With the arrival of the Bicentennial we expected more visitors than ever in the parks," Director Everhardt said. "But the current rate of increase — 23 per cent above 1975 levels through April — will greatly exceed our projections if it continues through the summer.

By the end of April last year, the National Park System had recorded 47 million visits on the way to a record-setting total of 239 million for the year. The first four months of 1976 showed 58 million visits, setting a trend which may easily surpass the year's projected total of 252 million.

"The continuing popularity of the parks makes advance planning more important than ever," Everhardt said. "The National Park Service welcomes every visitor, but those who come prepared will get a lot more out of their visit and avoid a lot of headaches, too."

Write Ahead For Information

Writing ahead for basic information is the key to having a SUPER visit, that is, Safely, Using, Preserving and Enjoy the Resrouces at the parks.

Everhardt said the National Park Service is bringing the Bicentennial celebration to all parks this year. "Many are coming to our Bicentennial areas along the east coast, but there are many more who won't be able to make that trip this year, so we are celebrating the Bicentennial in all our parks from coast to coast," he said.

"Ours is a rich and vaired heritage and we can find as much inspiration in the lives of the pioneers and those who were here when the pioneers arrived as we can from the traditional revolutionary war shrines."

In order that all Americans have a chance to reflect upon their heritage, Everhardt said each park will have an approriate Bicentennial project this summer.

Two Shows Touring Country

And in an effort to bring the 1777 spirit out of the East, two National Park Service road shows are touring the country. One, "People of '76" shows a cross-section of colonial life through the use of actors and craftspeopele in an 18th century village setting.

Another, "We've Come Back for a Little Look Around" features Ben Franklin and other American greats returning to find out what has become of the American experiment in liberty that Franklin helped inaugurate.

Have a SUPER trip!

If you are planning a vacation Right Around Home, write the Natinal Park Service, P.O. Box 728, Room P-1, Santa Fe. N.M. 87501, for a trip planning guide to those parks within an easy drive of you home.

Remote Arab Sheikhdom To Lure Tourists

FUJEIRAH, United Arab Emirates (UPI) — "The winter holiday playground of the future" seems an unlikely tag to attach to an Arab sheikhdom.

About one out of every four American colonists remained loyal to the British crown during the Revolutionary War, according to the National Geographic Society book, "We Americans."

But Sheikh Hamad Ibn Mohamed Al-Sharqi, the 28-year-old ruler of this poorest and remotest of the seven United Arab Emirates, envisions just that in a few years' time. The first hotels are scheduled for completion late next year.

Winter sunseekers will enjoy an unspoiled land of 25,000 persons, a moderate climate kept cool by the mountains of the Hajar ranging down to the Gulf of Oman, ancient mudbrick forts in nearly every village, smooth sandy beaches and a sea that boasts marlin and other game fish.

First presidential candidate to campaign in an airplane was New York Governor Franklin Delano Roosevelt, who flew in a Ford Tri-Motor from Albany to Chicago in 1932 to accept the Democratic nomination.

Singer Janis Ian Making Comeback At 25

By JOHN MOODY

At the age of 25, Ian has been to the top, bottom and back to the top of the rock music world.

Her hit single, "At 17," a bittersweet lament about the pains of growing up, won her the Grammy Award this year as the best female vocalist. It also established her in the ranks of sorely tried and genuinely true musicians.

Ten years ago she roared to the peak of musical prominence at the age of 15 with, "Society's Child," the first time the touchy topic of interracial dating had been squarely addressed in a rock song. She made an estimated $200,000 from the song, spent lavishly, and three years later, thanks to bad management and unpaid taxes, was broke.

Along with her income, her popularity went poof, and the same critics who had hosanaed Ian as the brightest young talent in rock music, had, by the time she was 20, written her off.

"I spent the last three years on concert tours, building things up so I could relax when I wanted and do what I wanted. It wasn't easy because I HATE touring."

What really worries her is being away from her Manhattan home, which she calls her source of inspiration.

"I spent some time in Los Angeles and got really aware of the difference between New York and any other town. There's an accessibility in New York. I took my dog out for a walk in the park and spent three hours just looking at the buildings and the people. That's where my songs come from."

"In 1974 I toured nine months, last year seven months and this year I'll be on the road for six months. And that kind of life stinks, let me tell you. I spent the last three weeks in 21 different hotels."

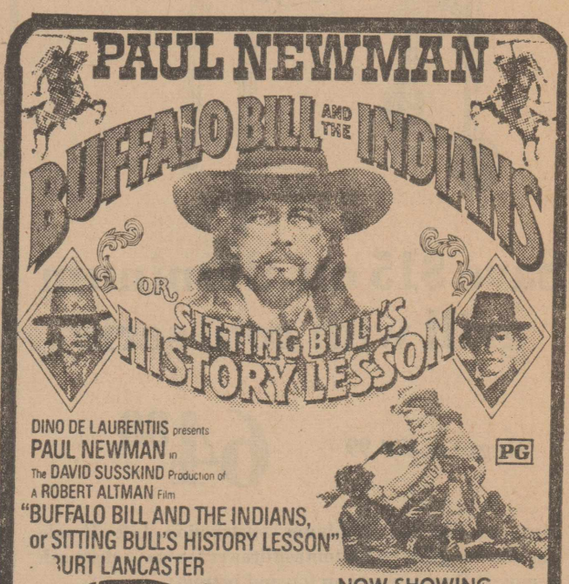

Her band — Claire Bay, the vocalist; Barry Lazarowitz, the drummer; Stu Woods on bass and Jeff Layton on guitar — keep her company, and put up with her picques.

"When you're cooped up with someone for a long time, and one member of the band is down, it spreads until everyone feels lousy."

"I'm a writer before I'm a singer, but if I don't perform no one will know what I've written. So I'm more or less forced onto the stage."

"I have as much experience as anyone in this business and I missed doing what I understood."
