County to begin drug testing for officers, new employees

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

Midland County's new drug screening program requires all law enforcement officers and any new employees to render a negative test result if they hope to obtain or keep their job.

County Commissioners Monday invoked the special order following a 3-1 vote of the court. The policy will go into effect May 1.

"The use of illegal drugs and the abuse of controlled substances by employees of Midland County is totally unacceptable and conflicts with all aspects of efficient, proper and honest county government," County Judge Bill Anders said as he signed the order.

Commissioner Scott Welch voted against the policy, citing his concern with a 9th Circuit Court of Appeals decision, ruling that a California transportation company's random drug testing program was an invasion of privacy.

He had urged commissioners to delay action on the policy until previous rulings made their way through the appellate process.

However, County Attorney Mark Dettman said he is certain that the U.S. Supreme Court will act to resolve conflicting appellate court rulings and observed that he doesn't foresee any legal ramifications from the county's policy.

"I believe there is a compelling state interest to justify random testing for law enforcement personnel," the county attorney said. "With non-law enforcement personnel, testing should be necessary only if there is an independent showing of reasonable suspicion."

Under the county policy, drug screening will be required of all new hires as a condition of their employment. The program — mirrored after the city of Midland's — demands a negative test showing no use of illicit drugs or abuse of controlled substances.

The policy also authorizes random testing of all law enforcement personnel to go hand-in-hand with Sheriff Gary Painter's two-month-old new employee drug screening program.

And, any county department head who has "reasonable suspicion," may ask that an employee be tested for drug usage, Dettman said.

Excessive absences, tardiness, lack of productivity, personality changes and difficulties in performing duties are partial definitions of "reasonable suspicion" that would necessitate drug testing authorization from the county judge or his designee on the court, the county attorney said.

Commissioners Monday also hired Harrison & Associates Forensic Laboratories, 606 N. Weatherford St., to administer the drug screening at a cost of $25 per test. The company specializes in urinalysis drug detection methods, including Thin Layer Chromatography and Gas Chromatography/Mass Spec.

Shiite hijackers talk of their martyrdom

LARNACA, Cyprus (AP) — The Arab hijackers of a Kuwaiti jetliner said today they have named their aircraft "the plane of greatest martyrdom and death" and claimed they have put on death shrouds.

One hijacker made the declaration in a statement radioed to Larnaca Airport control tower. He cited Koranic verses usually read at funerals that said "those killed in the name of God are always alive."

PLO chairman Yasser Arafat, meanwhile, was quoted today as saying the hijackers want to fly to Algeria and "arrangements are being made to this end." The Kuwait News Agency said Arafat told reporters in Kuwait he expected the hijacking to end tonight. And Cypriot government spokesman Akis Fantis said the chances of storming the plane at Larnaca were "zero."

At one point today, the hijackers radioed the control tower demanding the plane be refueled in 45 minutes. The deadline passed without incident after the Palestine Liberation Organization chief in Cyprus and his deputy went out on the tarmac and spoke with the hijackers.

One hijacker later radioed that they had extended the deadline "for a short time...to permit the mediators to act" in getting the plane refueled.

"We are warning against false promises," he said in broken English.

When a C-130 military transport landed a short time later, one of the hijackers screamed over the radio: "Identify this plane."

The tower replied it was a Greek air force plane carrying supplies and was "nothing to worry about."

The hijacker, his voice calming, replied: "My men were about to shoot at it."

Earlier today, the hijackers of the Kuwait Airways Boeing 747, who shot and killed a second passenger Monday, again threatened the lives of their nearly 50 hostages. The hijackers are demanding Kuwait free 17 convicted terrorists and have said they want to leave for an unspecified "neutral country."

Market may sustain increase in oil price

By ALLEN E. HOWLAND
Assistant Business/Oil Editor

The jury is still out on whether oil markets can consolidate Monday's $1.01 jump in oil prices to the highest level of the year.

Morning market evidence from the New York Mercantile Exchange indicates a timid yes, with prices up another 8 cents to $17.97 by midmorning.

However, the current price run-up, ignited by speculation that OPEC will orchestrate a broad effort to constrict world supplies, is being called unsustainable by some analysts.

"Psychologically, I think we may have broken into a new trading range, but I don't see a long continuation of rising prices," said Anthony Annunzio, senior vice president and energy trader for Shearson Lehman Hutton, in a telephone interview late Monday from Houston.

But other traders attach more significance to Monday's move.

"This is not a flash in the pan. This is the beginning of a bull move," Peter Beutel, assistant director of Elders Futures Inc., a New York energy futures trading concern, told the Associated Press.

"The real story is the oil market cycle has turned; it's ready to go higher."

Closer to home, crude oil purchasers are taking a "wait and see" attitude. "Higher prices are encouraging, but we'll have to see if we can find some stability in the higher range," said one buyer.

Many West Texas crude purchasers raised their posted price 50 cents to $16.50, effective Monday. Among those who have raised their postings are Conoco, Enron, Marathon, Permian, Phillips, Pride, Sun and Texaco, according to a quick check of buyers this morning.

Monday's close of $17.89 was the highest since Dec. 11, when the January-delivery price closed at $18.27 a barrel.

Wayne Malone, president of Pride Pipeline in Abilene said that with posted prices at $16.50 there is enough room in the market for some slippage in spot market prices without an adverse effect on postings.

In addition, prices would need to break above $18 and stay for "a least a couple of days" before the next 50-cent uptick in posted prices to $17, he said.

Traders attributed the sharp rises to a weekend meeting of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries' price-monitoring committee, which stated it would enlist help from non-OPEC producers to restrain crude output.

Does Oscar make Cher 'somebody?'

By LINDA DEUTSCH

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Winning an Oscar for best actress may not make Cher the "somebody" her mother wanted, but it sure helps a lot.

Cher completed a dazzling career climb from lightweight rock singer to glamorous superstar when she won Hollywood's ultimate tribute at Monday night's 60th annual Academy Awards.

Her lusty portrayal of an Italian widow torn between two suitors who happen to be brothers gave her the nod over acclaimed performances by Glenn Close in "Fatal Attraction," Meryl Streep in "Ironweed," Holly Hunter for "Broadcast News" and Sally Kirkland of "Anna."

"When I was a little girl, my mother said, 'I really want you to be something,'" said Cher. Clutching her Oscar, she concluded, "I don't think this means that I am somebody. But I guess I'm on my way. Thank you."

Cher, known for her outrageous garb at past Oscars, was slightly subdued this time in a form-revealing costume with strategically placed spangles.

Backstage, she said of her movie queen getup: "I think Theda Bara would probably be proud of me," referring to the famed "vamp" of the silent screen.

Bubonic plague warnings follow diagnosis in human

By RICK BROWN
Assistant City Editor

In the wake of the first human case of bubonic plague identified in West Texas, health authorities are recommending continued vigilance for pet-owners and people who are in constant contact with the area's rangelands.

Guy Moore, a Texas Department of Health disease control specialist, could offer few details Monday of a 40-year-old Fort Stockton man who contracted the disease in February, but has since recovered.

Moore described the man as an "outdoorsman" who may have been bitten by a plague-infected flea.

Symptoms the man exhibited were a severe headache, "several days" of high fever in the 105-degree range and "bubos," or large lymph gland swellings at his armpit, Moore said. The man was treated with antibiotics at Pecos County Hospital in Fort Stockton and released in late February, he said. The disease control specialist could not release the recovered man's name.

"The investigation is still going on trying to piece together activities" which led to his infection, Moore said.

The man is "doing fine," he said. "He had been out-of-doors in one of the areas where we found dead rodents," said Moore. "He hadn't noticed any flea bites, but he had been ill."

Meanwhile, TDH crews collecting animal blood specimens in a wide area of West Texas have recorded the disease's progression from mainly small animals like rats and rabbits to larger predators, Moore said.

Air Force could spend month probing crash

By STEVE LEVINE
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — An Air Force investigating board is expected to take at least a month determining the cause of an F-4C Phantom II reconnaissance jet crash into a public warehouse east of downtown Austin Monday.

The two-man crew ejected before the crash and escaped with minor injuries. Air Force spokesman Lt. David Fruck said the unarmed plane "was returning from a low-level training mission" when it crashed at 12:15 p.m. Monday.

The plane is attached to the 67th Tactical Reconnaissance Wing at Bergstrom Air Force Base near Austin. The crash occurred about one mile northwest of Bergstrom.

Fruck identified the crewmen as Col. Roger Grimsley, 57, the pilot, of Leesburg, Ohio, and Capt. Terence Ganiko, 30, the weapons systems officer, of Honolulu, Hawaii.

Sam Wilson, Austin Emergency Medical Services supervisor, said both men "were jangled around a little bit during their landing," but reported only minor neck and back pain. "Both of them were awake, conscious, alert when we got on the scene," he said.

The warehouse is about one-quarter mile from Austin's Montopolis neighborhood. Manuel Foy of Austin, who watched the crash, said the plane took a sudden turn before the crew ejected. "It looked like they tried to avoid the population," he said.

Foy and other eyewitnesses said that the jet was afire before the crew ejected and that it exploded shortly after the two men parachuted to safety.

Lynn McDonald, manager of Riverside Drive Self Storage Center, said she left the warehouse for lunch about five minutes before the accident and watched the plane come down from a nearby hill. "I had an angel on my shoulder is all I can tell you," she said.

McDonald said one man had checked into his storage locker, which was "right next" to the crash site, shortly before the accident.

Israel threatens to deport Palestinians

JERUSALEM (AP) — Despite U.S. criticism, Israel today threatened to deport more Palestinians from the occupied territories to break a 4-month-old uprising. On Monday, Israel expelled eight Arabs to neighboring Lebanon.

In another development, Israeli soldiers killed two Palestinians on Monday during clashes in the occupied West Bank. Eight Arabs were wounded.

The deaths brought to 143 the number of Arabs killed since rioting began Dec. 8. Two Israelis have been killed — a teenage settler and a soldier.

Israel on Monday issued deportation orders for 12 other Palestinians. Among them were six Arabs from the West Bank village of Beita, where an Israeli settler girl and two Palestinians were killed in a clash last week.

"There are a list of others slated for deportation. We will not hesitate to deport them if we find it necessary," Shmuel Goren, a defense official who administers the West Bank, told Israel radio today.

Israeli sources, speaking on condition of anonymity, said they drew up a list of 200 Palestinians who were slated for expulsion in January but sharply reduced the number at the time, following an appeal from the United States.

Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir, interviewed today by Army radio, said he hoped the expulsions would crush the wave of Arab rioting in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip, which were captured in the 1967 Middle East war.

"We know other countries and people in other countries are not happy with this, but we have to take care of our security and not them," Shamir said.

Critics on Monday claimed the expulsions were aimed at appeasing Jewish settlers, who were angered by an army report saying the girl, 15-year-old Tirza Porat, was accidentally killed by a bullet from a gun a settler used while guarding a group of Jewish hikers. Settlers say the girl was killed by Arabs.

In Washington, State Department spokesman Charles Redman on Monday said the expulsions "only further inflame passions" and violate international human rights agreements.

Israeli troops killed two Palestinians on Monday after a patrol was attacked by dozens of protesters who threw stones and bottles in the West Bank village of Rai near Nablus, the army said.

Arab doctors and hospital officials said Israeli soldiers on Monday wounded eight Palestinians: three in Rai, including an 11-year-old girl and a 14-year-old boy; four Arabs in Nablus; and another in Jenin.

Also Monday, the army said 4,800 Arabs have been arrested since Dec.

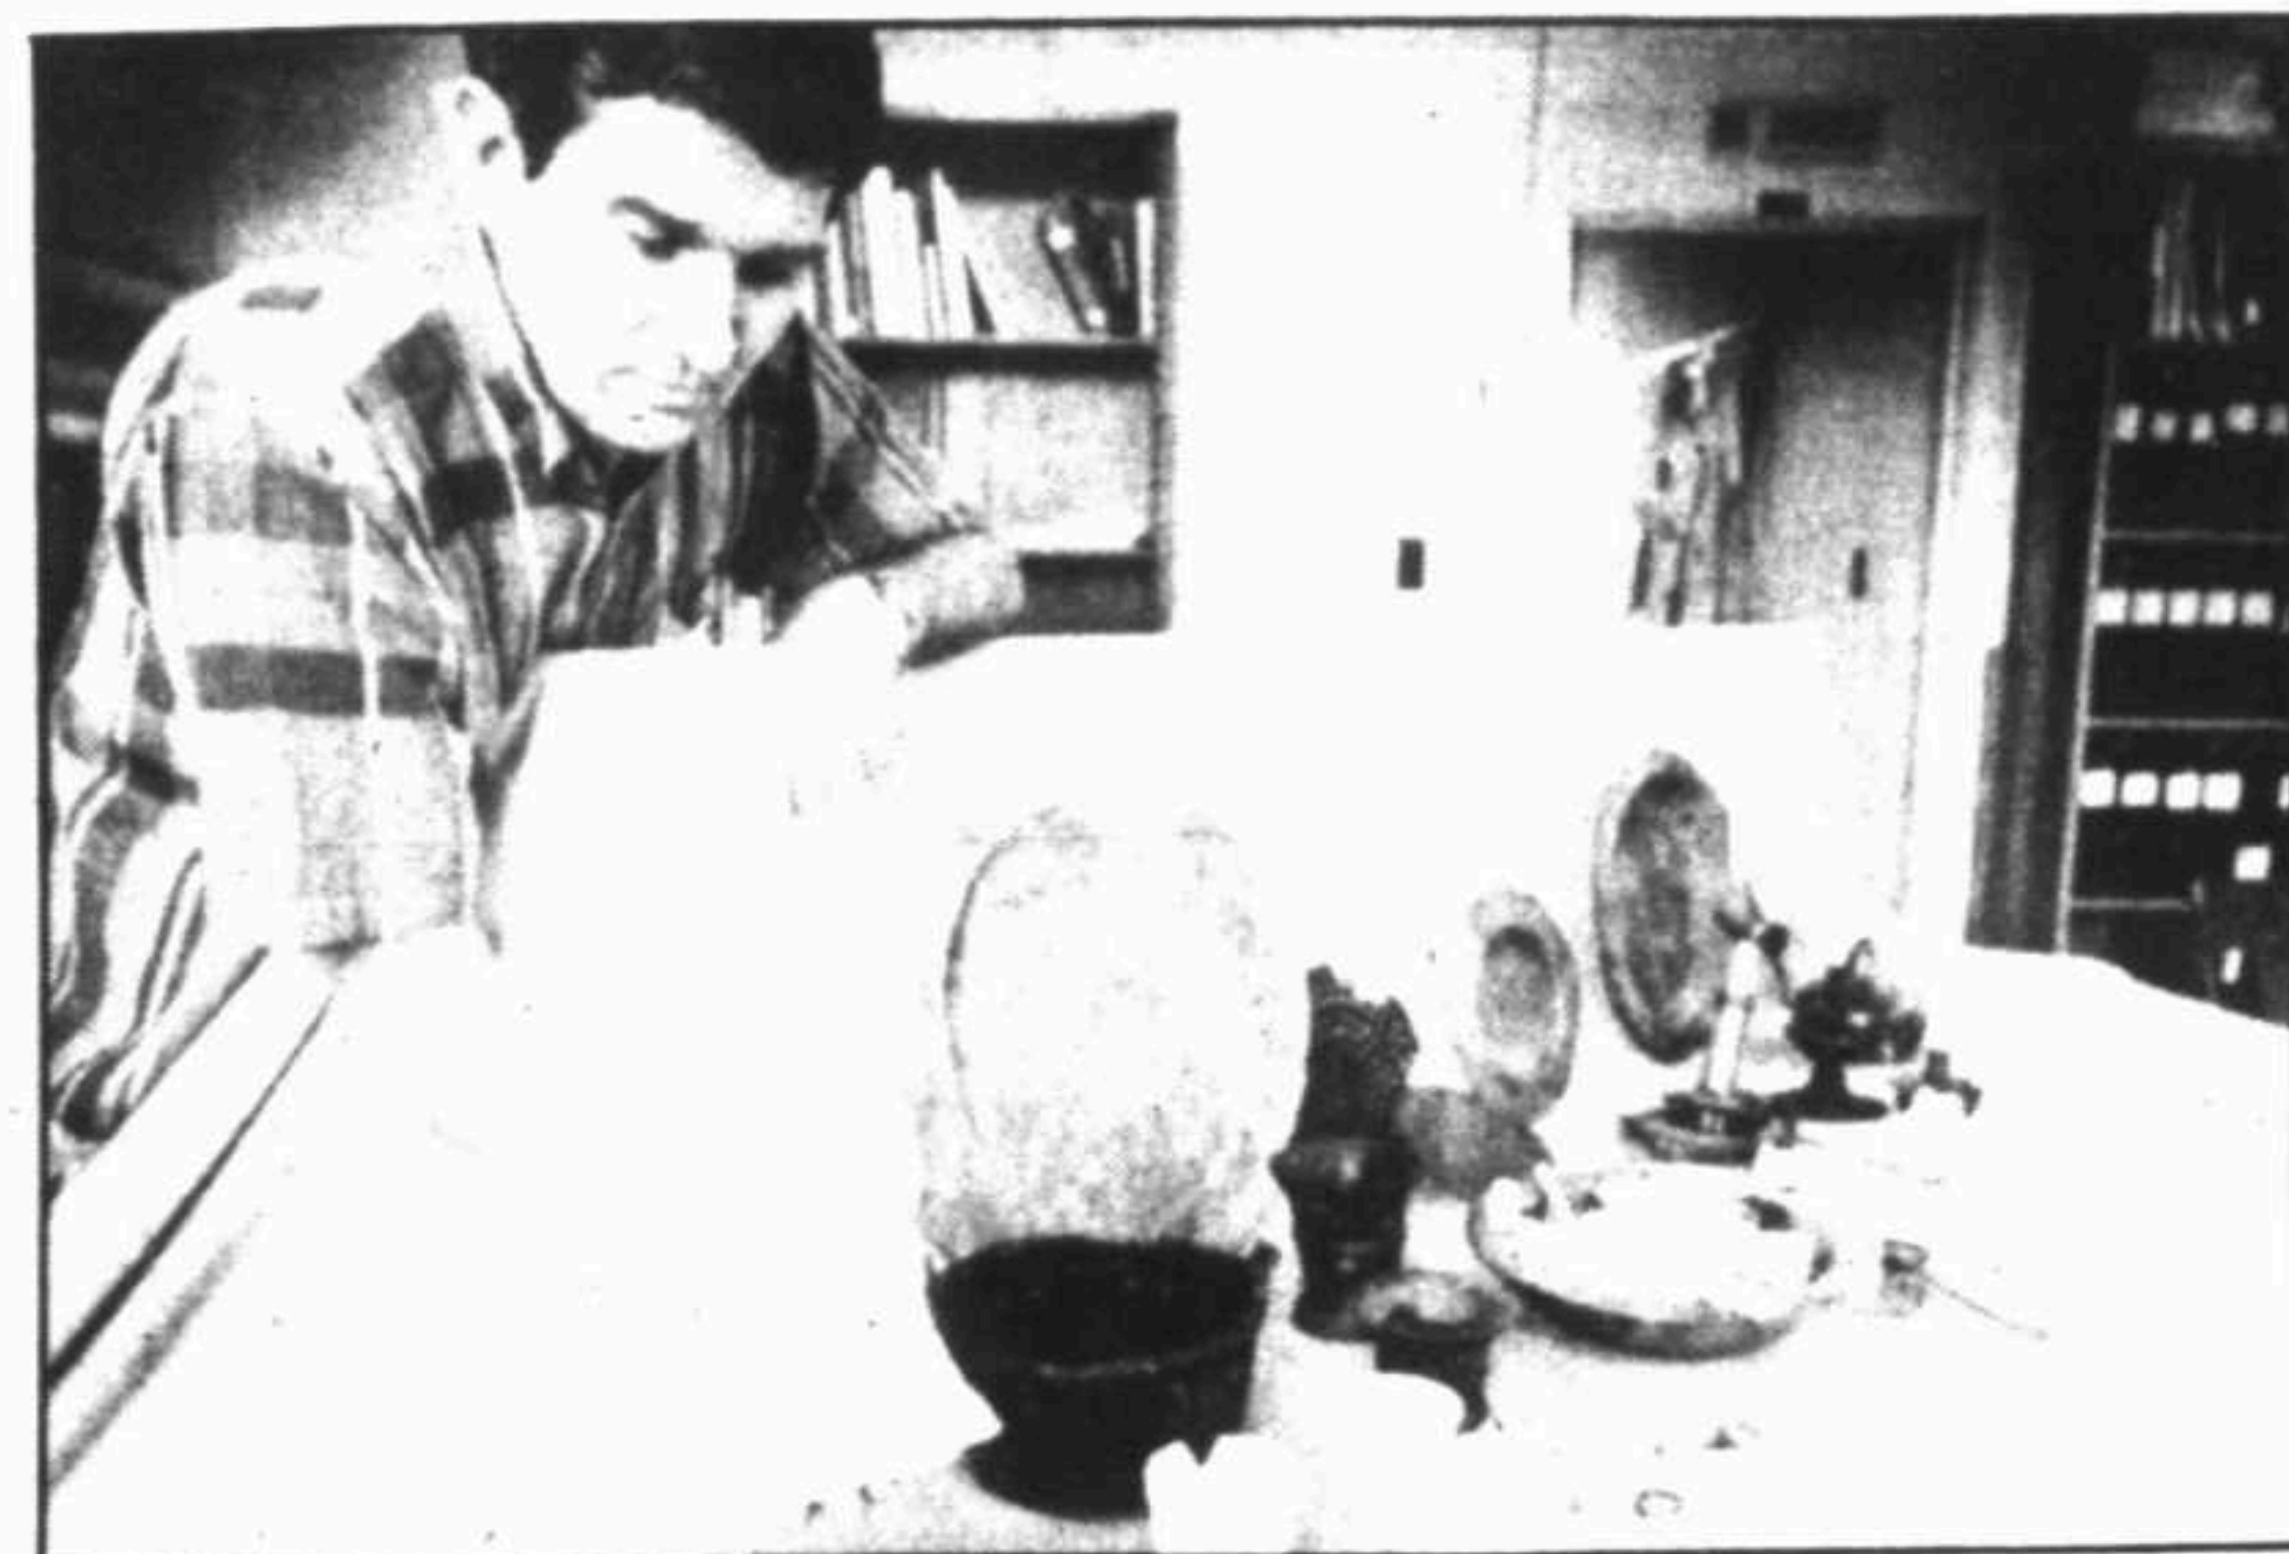

8. Of those, 500 were convicted, 3,400 await trial and 900 are held in administrative detention, which allows imprisonment without trial for six months.

The eight deportees, five from the Gaza Strip and three from the West Bank, arrived in Lebanon's Bekaa valley on Monday night and asked to be handed over to the International Red Cross.

An army helicopter flew the men to Israel's self-proclaimed security zone in southern Lebanon. They were handed $50 each and led to two waiting taxis.

Israel Television showed some of the men carrying belongings in plastic bags. As the taxis drove off, one of the deportees made the V for victory sign with his fingers.

The army described the deportees as senior members of terror groups and said some were "organizers and instigators" of anti-Israeli protests.

Nautical archeologist Dr. Don Hamilton of Texas A&M displays a cricket, preserved with trappings of port life buried at sea when an earthquake 300 years ago destroyed Port Royal, Jamaica.

Undersea archeologists bring Port Royal to surface

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Nearly 300 years after an earthquake buried part of a pirate port called the "wickedest city" of its time, undersea archeologists are hauling up a booty of history.

Before its partial destruction in 1692, Port Royal, located across the bay from modern day Kingston, Jamaica, rivaled Boston as a center of British commerce in the Americas.

About half the port was submerged when a roughly 30-minute series of tremors dropped blocks of the city into the sea, killing about 2,000 people.

During seven seasons of excavation, researchers have found numerous artifacts from the sunken city. The project will be featured May 2 in the PBS series, "Underwater Discoveries."

Among other items discovered was a partial skeleton of a child, probably no older than 6, said project leader Dr. Don Hamilton, a Texas A&M faculty member and a conservation specialist with the Institute of Nautical Archaeology, which is affiliated with Texas A&M.

The child appeared to have been crushed by a falling wall as he attempted to flee toward safety, but Hamilton said the quake's rubble made it impossible to determine if the child was fleeing for the safety of outside or inwards through a door to the perceived safety of home.

Other finds indicate residents and visitors apparently liked tobacco because a fourth of the nearly 5,000 artifacts recovered have been pipes or parts of pipes, Hamilton said.

Of particular interest in the most recent round of excavations, however, is what appears to be part of the living quarters of well-to-do merchants. Remains of a window complete with its slender lead frame have been recovered where the front of a two-story house smashed to the street during one of the tremors, Hamilton said.

From what is probably the kitchen have come brass cooking pots, sieves, pewter bowls, a woman's handmade gold ring, candlesticks and porcelain dishes. The almost-intact remains of a cricket were found in an unbroken wine bottle excavated where mud had trapped the insect.

Much conservation of the artifacts takes place at Port Royal but numerous items are temporarily brought back to Texas A&M in College Station for further conservation and as teaching aids before being returned to the Jamaican government, he said.

Port Royal, once home to English buccanniers and to a young naval officer named Horatio Nelson, boasted a well-to-do population of about 8,000 at the time of the quake.

OSCARS

She held her Oscar aloft and declared, "If I can win this statue I think anybody can do anything."

The awards to Cher and Michael Douglas for his portrayal of the vengeful insider trader of "Wall Street" won loud audience approval.

Best supporting performers were Olympia Dukakis, as Cher's outspoken Italian mother coping with a wayward husband in "Moonstruck," and Sean Connery, the hard-fisted, incorruptible Chicago beat cop in "The Untouchables."

Douglas, who also starred in this year's box office hit, "Fatal Attraction," paid tribute to his father, Kirk Douglas, for encouraging his career and "helping a son step out of the shadow" of his famous father.

The conquering giant of Monday's 60th annual Academy Awards was "The Last Emperor," a sweeping saga of Chinese history that took nine Oscars — the most won by any film in 26 years.

The epic, shot on location in China and directed by an Italian, was one of several nominees with a foreign director. This led presenter Robin Williams to declare jokingly that along with the Oscar Academy was presenting "a green card" to the winner.

In addition to best picture, "The Last Emperor" won in every category in which it was nominated, including screenplay adaptation, costumes, original score, art direction, cinematography, sound, editing and the directing award to acclaimed filmmaker Bernardo Bertolucci.

"As an Italian, as a European, the Academy Awards has always seemed to me like a distant ceremony," said Bertolucci, "something fascinating, remote. Something I really didn't belong to. Then, one day, 'The Last Emperor' got nine nominations and everything changed immediately."

The director, who surprised the industry by winning permission from the Chinese government to film a story with political overtones within Beijing's fabled Forbidden City, offered "a Chinese kowtow to the Academy," saying, "This is one of the strongest emotions of my life and I can't hide it."

The movie's nine Oscars marked the biggest haul since "West Side Story" took 10 in 1962. The all-time champ, Ben Hur, won 11 in 1960.

"Moonstruck" took three Oscars, but the critically acclaimed "Hope and Glory" and crowd-pleasers "Good Morning, Vietnam" and "Broadcast News" struck out despite having five, one and seven nominations, respectively.

The Oscar audience of 6,300 cheered loudly for the supporting actor and actress awards.

"OK, Michael, let's go!" exclaimed Miss Dukakis as she held her Oscar aloft. She was referring to her cou-

Others discounted the move as a temporary spike in a market that remains basically unchanged. They attributed it to misinformation speculation about OPEC's strategy and influence.

"Nothing of substance came out of OPEC's (pricing) meeting over the weekend to change the market, but there is a significant change of attitude in the market," Annunzio said.

He added, "Right now we are defining the top end of a new trading range, which I expect could turn out to fluctuate between $17 or $17.50 to about $19.50, for the next three months or so."

"It will take much more significant price increase than this to bring drilling activity back up, which is what we need," said Larry Springer, director of communications for the Texas Independent Producers and Royalty Owners.

"I see the OPEC thing as a fairly empty public relations gesture," said Carol Epstein, an analyst at Petroleum Analysis Ltd., a New York consulting and publishing concern.

"I don't see any fundamental turning around here," The AP reported that Ms. Epstein's view was based partly on efforts by some OPEC members, notably key producer Saudi Arabia, to move into the refining or "downstream" end of the oil business. This suggests OPEC itself believes the surplus of crude oil on world markets will persist, which makes refining more attractive.

Nevertheless, some analysts said the move by the OPEC price monitoring committee was significant because the idea of cooperation was initiated by eight non-OPEC exporters.

Emissaries from Mexico, China, Oman, Angola, Colombia, Egypt, Brunei and Malaysia, who met last month, concluded that coordination with OPEC could help combat weak prices and excessive supplies.

"There's momentum to have detente between OPEC and non-OPEC producers," said petroleum consultant Daniel Yergen, president of Cambridge Energy Research Associates, in Massachusetts, the New York Times reported.

OPEC's 13 members produce about 17.5 million barrels daily. Production from the non-OPEC exporters interested in cooperating with the cartel totals about 8 million barrels daily. An agreement between them would affect production that accounts for more than half the consumption in the non-communist world.

Speakes says he faked quotes for Reagan

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former White House spokesman Larry Speakes says he attributed remarks on major foreign policy issues to President Reagan that the president did not make, in one case because the president himself "had almost nothing to say."

Speakes, in his new book, describes two occasions on which he attributed remarks to Reagan that he says the president never made.

Speakes says that after a Korean Air Lines plane carrying 61 Americans was shot down in 1983, he credited statements made by Secretary of State George Shultz to Reagan.

And he says that during Reagan's summit meeting with Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev in Geneva in 1985 he attributed to Reagan remarks that he and an assistant press secretary, Mark Weinberg, had manufactured.

Speakes, who often boasted that he never lied to the press during his six years as Reagan's chief spokesman, makes the statements in his book, "Speaking Out," scheduled for publication next month by Charles Scribner's Sons.

Reagan met with the National Security Council and with congressional leaders after a Soviet plane shot down the KAL aircraft on Aug. 31, 1983.

Speakes says Shultz declared during the congressional leaders' meeting that the incident was not a problem between the United States and the Soviet Union but "a Soviet versus the world problem."

"Since the president had had almost nothing to say during the National Security and congressional leadership meetings, I made presidential quotes out of Shultz' comment about the incident pitting the whole world against the Soviet Union, as well as some of Shultz' suggestions about what retaliatory steps we should take," Speakes writes.

"My decision to put Shultz' words in Reagan's mouth played well and neither of them complained."

Attorney says Meese wanted to hire Wallach

WASHINGTON (AP) — Attorney General Edwin Meese III wanted longtime friend E. Robert Wallach to join the Justice Department last spring, despite the growing Wedtech scandal that eventually led to Wallach's indictment on racketeering charges.

The attorney general knew at the time that Wallach was a witness in the Wedtech case, a lawyer for Meese said Monday. But the attorney, James Roca, said Meese did not yet know that his friend was a target of the criminal investigation.

Meese discussed hiring Wallach to the $77,500-a-year job of counselor to the attorney general.

"Meese recalls that he was clearly interested in having Bob Wallach at that time come into the department, but that no formal offer was ever advanced to him," Roca said.

The arrangement between the two men was that "Wallach had to make some decisions about what he wanted to do, whether he was interested," said Roca, adding that Wallach was "to get back" to Meese. But that never took place because Meese was then notified that Wallach was under criminal investigation, he said.

Meese and Wallach discussed the Justice Department job in late March or early April 1987, said Roca.

Around April 8, 1987, the attorney general was notified formally under an administrative mechanism involving the FBI that Wallach was a subject of the criminal investigation into Wedtech Corp.

The federal grand jury that eventually indicted Wallach alleged that he and Meese's financial manager, Wedtech consultant W. Franklin Chinn, had funneled hundreds of thousands of dollars in payments from the Bronx, N.Y., defense contractor in an attempt to influence Meese and other public officials to help the company.

Meese, too, is now under criminal investigation. Independent counsel James McKay has been looking at Meese's own efforts on behalf of Wedtech and another venture involving Wallach, a planned $1 billion Iraqi pipeline.

Roca said that at the time of the job discussions with Wallach, "it was Mr. Meese's understanding that Wallach's role in the (Wedtech) investigation was simply as a witness." He said Meese "had no reason to believe that Mr. Wallach had been engaged in any kind of impropriety."

Meanwhile, it was reported that Meese's choice to fill the No. 2 post at the Justice Department has expressed misgivings about Meese's relationship with Wallach.

Shultz: Soviets to pull out of Afghanistan

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State George Shultz admits it will be hard to end the fighting between Afghanistan's rebels and the Soviet-backed government, but predicts the withdrawal of Soviet troops will bring some stability to the war-torn nation.

"I expect that the Soviet Union will withdraw fully from Afghanistan, and then the people of Afghanistan have got to work things out," Shultz said. "That's their right and their problem."

The secretary met with reporters after President Reagan announced on Monday that he was dispatching Shultz to Geneva to sign the troop-withdrawal accords negotiated last week between Afghanistan and Pakistan.

Reagan lauded the U.S.-backed rebels, who have battled the Kabul regime since the 1979 Soviet invasion.

"This development would not have been possible had it not been for the valiant struggle of the Afghan people to rid their country of foreign occupation," Reagan said. "We take great pride in having assisted the Afghan people in this triumph and they can count on our continued support."

Asked about charges from conservatives that the agreement is a sell-out of the rebels, Reagan replied, "We are not."

Under the agreement, the United States and Soviet Union will guarantee a plan dictating the removal of the Red Army's 115,000 troops from Afghanistan.

The plan has been worked out under the auspices of the United Nations and is expected to be signed on Thursday.

The pullout is set to begin May 15, only two weeks before Reagan is scheduled to fly to Moscow for his fourth summit session with Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev.

For a deceptive play to work, you must do it smoothly. If you hesitate for even a fraction of a second, you give away the position completely. We do not know the name of the defender who brought off the coup on today's hand, but whoever he is we want him to accept this column as our tribute.

The auction was interesting. South felt his hand was worth a try for game after North made a jump rebid. Since his main feature was his excellent spade suit, he chose to rebid it. When North showed no interest for the moment, South simply corrected to four diamonds, then chose to accept four spades as the final contract even though he knew his side might have only a seven-card fit.

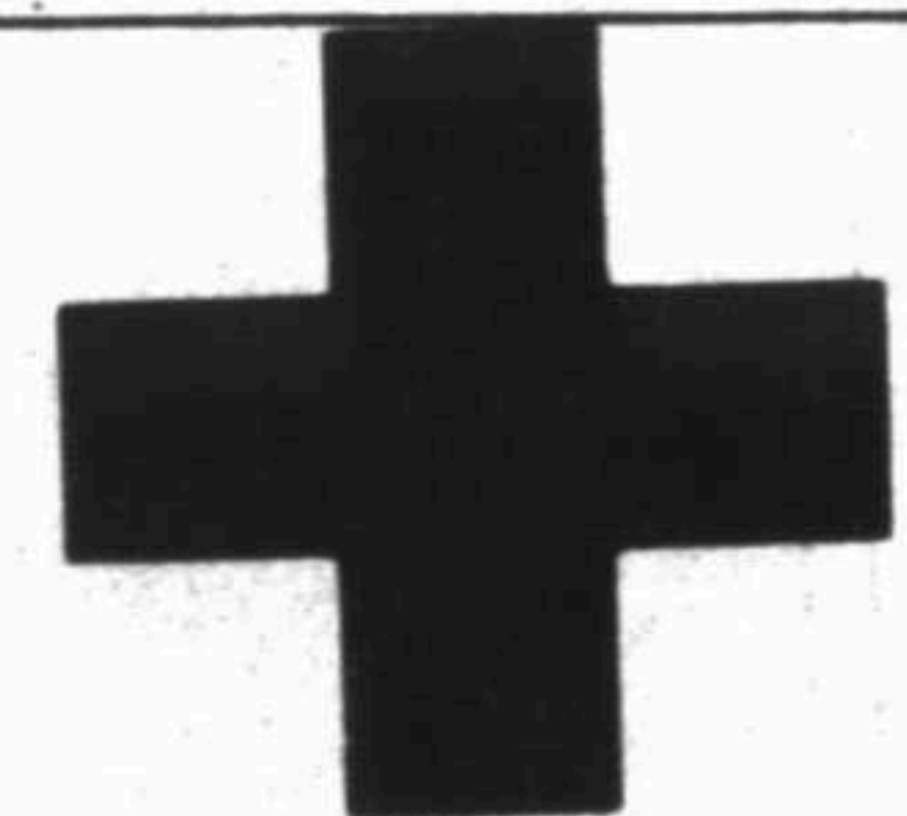

West led the king of hearts, then shifted to the queen of clubs. There was no reason to hold up, so declarer won and led a trump to his nine. Without a hitch, West followed with the six. South thought he was in declarer heaven. He crossed to dummy my with a diamond and confidently repeated the trump finesse. His world fell apart when West took the queen and returned a diamond. Suddenly, four long diamonds withered on the vine. Declarer won only four spade tricks, two diamonds and one club—down three.

Note that if West wins the queen of spades at trick three, declarer has no trouble fulfilling his contract. The best the defenders can do is to take one more club trick. Thereafter, declarer can win any return, draw trumps and score his diamonds for his contract.

Cher as big a hit with fans outside Shrine Auditorium as with stars inside

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Cher was as big a hit outside the Shrine Auditorium as inside, drawing gasps from more than a thousand fans packed into street grandstands when she stepped from her limousine in a stunning see-through gown.

"Go, go, go, go," chanted fans on each side of a red-carpeted walkway leading to the cavernous hall, as nominees arrived Monday amid a hullabaloo that has become an annual rite of the Academy Awards ceremony.

Cher, who won best actress for "Moonstruck," continued her tradition of outrageous outfits despite the seeming consensus among the stars this year for toned-down, mostly black fashions — in variations of long, short, strapless, body-hugging and black-on-white or white-on-black.

Arriving fashionably late in the 90-degree heat, Cher knocked the scream meter off the scale when she stepped from her limousine in a diaphanous outfit partly covered by a dark black cape and swept into the auditorium.

However, for a time the Oscar ritual of hasty introductions, interviews and cheers for favorite stars gave way to a traffic jam, perhaps caused by the show's move from its longtime home at the Dorothy Chandler Pavilion in the Los Angeles Music Center.

"Please make room for the people outside to get in!" Oscars greeter Army Archerd pleaded over a loudspeaker as arriving members of the Academy of Motion Pictures Arts and Sciences and nominees backed up at the auditorium's doors as showtime neared.

"We are working in very tight quarters," said Archerd. "The Academy has decided to be here for three years, so you better get used to it."

"Booooo," shouted the crowd packed into bleachers alongside the walkway.

The 60th annual Oscars marked the award show's first return to the Shrine, on the edge of an old neighborhood next to the University of Southern California, since 1947.

"The traffic was so bad I was being asphyxiated in the limo," said character actor Peter Mark Richman, who appears in TV's "Bonanza: The Next Generation."

Fans dressed in shorts, sandals and T-shirts watched a 10-block procession of limousines and frequented a garden hose that was set up by the Academy for curbside refreshment in the heat.

Fifteen minutes before showtime, actresses Meryl Streep and Glenn Close, who is nine months pregnant, were seen walking quickly up Jefferson Boulevard to the theater to make it on time.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Sean Connery, the quintessential Agent 007 in such James Bond films as "Dr. No" and "Never Say Never Again," won his first Oscar Monday night for his portrayal of the steely Irish cop in "The Untouchables."

Connery received his second standing ovation of the evening as he accepted the best supporting actor award, saying "patience is truly a virtue."

His first standing ovation came at the top of the 60th annual Academy Awards ceremony when he introduced the visual effects award amid a spectacular backdrop of cinematic magic.

In a 30-year film career, which includes about 40 pictures, Connery's Oscar also represented his first

Cher

Academy Award nomination. Winning created a certain dilemma, Connery said on stage, because he had promised to give the award to his wife.

"This evening I discovered backstage that they're worth $15,000 and now I'm not so sure," he said, then added, "I'm only kidding." The statuettes actually are worth about $200 each.

He ended his acceptance speech by saying: "If such a thing as a wish accompanied this award, mine would be that we ended the writers' strike."

The strike by the Writers Guild of America against movie and television producers is now in its fifth week.

Connery was handpicked by Ian Fleming to play James Bond in "Dr. No," and starred in six more of the spy films including 1963's "Never Say Never Again." He also has appeared in such films as "The Great Train Robbery" and "The Name of the Rose."

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "Babette's Feast," a Danish movie about two pious, unmarried sisters who take a political refugee into their home, won best foreign language film at the Academy Awards.

"It's the first time a Danish movie can take an Oscar home," director Gabriel Axel, who spent 14 years trying to get the movie made, said as he accepted the award Monday night.

"I am very grateful for this honor and I want to thank you Academy members from the bottom of my heart."

Also nominated were "Au Revoir Les Enfants," France; "Course Completed," Spain; "The Family," Italy, and "Pathfinder," Norway.

Axel has divided his career between his native Denmark and France.

"Babette's Feast" portrayed the lives of the sisters who took in a political refugee named Babette (Stephane Audran) fleeing the French revolution.

The refugee, a former world-class chef, later repays their kindness by devoting her winnings from a lottery to creation of a sumptuous feast.

The film, titled "Babette's Gaestebud" in Denmark, was based on a short story by Isak Dinesen, whose book "Out of Africa" was the basis for the 1986 best movie Oscar winner.

Thirty countries submitted movies for consideration as best foreign film for this year's Academy Awards ceremony. The record for foreign submissions was 32 in 1984, according to Bob Werden, an Academy spokesman.

NEW YORK (AP) — A reporter for The Philadelphia Inquirer whose Pulitzer Prize was challenged by a magazine that ran a similar story says he had no doubt his award would be upheld.

The Pulitzer board's executive committee said Monday it saw no reason to question the award to Tim Weiner, who won the national reporting prize for a 1987 series on the Defense Department's "black budget" for secret projects.

The National Journal last week asked the board to reconsider the Inquirer's prize.

The Washington-based weekly magazine said Weiner's series was "a blatant and egregious case of building a news story according to someone else's blueprint," namely, the magazine's March 1, 1986, cover story about the black budget. It contended that Weiner's story broke no new ground.

In Philadelphia Monday, Weiner called the National Journal's challenge "a false charge and a phony controversy."

"I never had any doubts it would be resolved this way," he said. "It's been very instructive being on the other end of the telescope."

Primary balloting isn't finished yet

Voter turnout for today's runoff election is expected to be extremely light. That's typical when no major races or issues are on the ballot to draw voters to the polls.

But for six Republicans and four Democrats on the Midland County ballot, today's election is extremely important. It marks the culmination of months of hard, tireless effort. For all the other candidates the March "Super Tuesday" primary was either the end of the campaign trail or the end until this fall, when the candidates will begin campaigning for the November general election. But for these 10 candidates, "Super Tuesday" was merely the warm-up session; today's balloting is their final exam.

These candidates are Republicans Beau Boulter of Amarillo and Wesley Gilbreath of Houston, seeking the nomination to oppose longtime Democratic U.S. Sen. Lloyd Bentsen; Ed Emmett of Round Rock and P.S. "Sam" Ervin of Dallas, hoping to win the nomination to oppose Democratic Texas Railroad Commissioner "Jim" Nugent; and Nathan Hecht and Ronald Block, seeking the nomination to the Place 2 seat on the Texas Supreme Court.

On the Democratic ballot, Midland County Precinct 3 Commissioner, Scott Welch, is seeking the nomination to another term. He is opposed by Louisa Valencia. Also on the Democratic ballot W.L. Hudson of Wichita Falls and Charles E. McDonald of Bangs are seeking the nomination for the District 14 seat on the State Board of Education.

These candidates and positions deserve as much of the voters' attention as was given to the other candidates in March. This election should not be decided by a small number of the state's voters.

If you haven't already cast your ballot, please take the time to stop at the polls today and help pick these future leaders of the state and Midland County. Your vote is important. Make it count.

Another View:

Death by stone, bullet

Tirza Porat, a 15-year-old Israeli, fell to the ground in the West Bank last Wednesday. She was killed by Palestinian hurled stones or by a bullet from the gun of an Israeli protector. But however and by whomever, both sides are accountable — just as both are responsible for the more than 130 Palestinians who have been killed during uprisings over the last months.

Inexcusably, Prime Minister Shamir says that Palestinian rioters will be crushed "like grasshoppers." Does this man, a leader of Jews who were trampled on for centuries because they were Jews, believe that human beings are insects?

Meanwhile, no wiser leadership is shown by King Hussein of Jordan, King Fahd of Saudi Arabia, President Assad of Syria or Yasser Arafat of the Palestine Liberation Organization. Palestinians die, and these leaders play games of maneuver within their own countries and the Arab world.

Surely they know why Israel fears to try peace with its neighbors, who have sought for decades to destroy it. Surely these leaders recognize the need to state, out loud and unambiguously, their intent to live in peace with the Jewish state of Israel. Only one Arab leader, Anwar Sadat, understood and acted for genuine peace. Perhaps that's what cost him his life. Perhaps he saved the lives of millions.

Secretary of State George Shultz is trying, in bewildering fashion, to help bridge the chasm. He wanders around the Middle East every few weeks trying to create the basis for negotiations. If that's even possible under present political conditions, it would tax the abilities of a full-time American emissary. Does Shultz, a man of realism and accomplishment, think that his episodic journeys will produce serious negotiations?

None of this is meant to make light of the practical difficulties. Terms and procedures for negotiations must be carefully prepared and will be fearfully difficult to resolve. But that process, and the deeper one of making political and psychological adjustments, cannot even begin until "insects" become human, until Tirza and the Palestinian Tirzas are seen not as symbols but as children.

And the humanizing cannot start until leaders act like statesmen. That is the paramount missing ingredient — the commitment by the leaders to give peace a chance, to see if peace is not better than the present hell.

If the kings and presidents follow the path of Sadat, Israelis will respond as they did for him. If Arab leaders hide behind international conferences and U.S. secretaries of state, Israelis will draw other conclusions. And so should Palestinians, who might conclude that their Arab brethren see them more as pawns than as people.

Arab leaders will also know when an Israeli government seeks peace. It will be, it can be, only when Israel clearly accepts the principle of negotiations based on trading land for peace. That principle has been the foundation of the Camp David accords, whereby the Sinai was returned to Egypt. That principle is also the crux of U.N. Resolutions 242 and 338, which have been accepted by Shamir's predecessors.

The terrible events of the last months and days demonstrate above all that in the end Palestinians and Israelis have to make peace with each other.

Drug firm wants to avoid foreign risk

WASHINGTON — The Pfizer drug company is lobbying hard on Capitol Hill for two bills that would make it next to impossible for foreigners to win sizable lawsuits against Pfizer or any other company over faulty products.

Pfizer has reason to worry: The company finally withdrew its convexo-concave Bjork-Shiley heart valves from the market in late 1986 after the Food and Drug Administration had recalled the valve twice. An investigation found serious manufacturing problems at the Irvine, Calif., plant where about 80,000 of the valves were produced. About half of those valves were implanted in foreigners. One hundred forty-seven deaths have been traced to broken Bjork-Shiley heart valves, according to a Pfizer report to the FDA in January.

Jack Anderson

The bills, filed late last year by Rep. Dan Glickman, D-Kan., and Sen. Howell Heflin, D-Ala., would force foreigners to take their product liability suits to federal courts instead of state courts. The legislation would also require federal judges to apply the laws of the foreigners' home-lands. Foreign courts, for the most part, are not as generous with awards to the victims of faulty products. Currently, federal judges can choose between U.S. and foreign laws.

Aides for Heflin and Glickman argue that the legislation would make American companies more competitive in the international marketplace. If U.S. companies don't have to pay massive judgments to foreigners who sue in American courts, the lawmakers figure the firms will be able to lower their prices to compete with overseas manufacturers.

Proponents of the bills could not tell our associate Stewart Harris just how much the bills would mean to American companies slugging it out in the trenches of the trade war. On the other hand, the benefits to Pfizer would be enormous.

Pfizer's subsidiary, Shiley, has reportedly settled heart-valve lawsuits for as much as $1 million. Many of the settlements are being made in California, where the heart valve was made, and where liberal court procedures apply to such cases. Not all of the 40,000 valves implanted in foreigners are necessarily defective, but it appears that Pfizer could save hundreds of millions of dollars if even a fraction of the foreigners were prevented from winning hefty lawsuits in American courts.

Pfizer's lobbyist did not return calls to his Washington office. Consumer advocate Ralph Nader and his Congress Watch are preparing a lobbying blitz against what they have dubbed the "Pfizer bailout."

Lobbyists pushing the bills say that Nader's raiders are ignoring the possibility that U.S. consumers will pay the price if American companies must continue to protect themselves from foreign lawsuits. As an example, respected attorney Douglas Besharov of the American Enterprise Institute said liability insurance adds about 10 percent to the price of general aviation aircraft built in this country. Not surprisingly, Boeing Co. also supports the legislation.

Besharov also points out that another provision of the legislation would enable American consumers to bring their lawsuits against foreign manufacturers in American courts. Currently, Americans have to sue the domestic distributor if they want to bring the suit in U.S. court.

But Congress Watch attorney Eric Hard says the proponents are just trying to cloak their bills in respectability. He says American consumers could suffer if the law is passed because U.S. companies might be more inclined to market unsafe products knowing that foreigners would probably receive smaller awards in the United States.

The future of the bills is uncertain. Judiciary Committee chairman Peter Rodino, D-N.J., is staunchly opposed to playing with tort reform, but has promised hearings in the House. Hearings have not yet been scheduled in the Senate.

FAULTY DRUG TESTS — Investigators for the House Government Operations Committee have learned that the reliability of drug tests varies with the lab doing the tests. There is no national standard for laboratories to meet before they do the tests. According to the investigators, false results on the tests have cost people their jobs. They cited the case of one Vietnam veteran who was so opposed to drugs that he refused to take painkillers when he lost a finger in an accident. But the man lost his job after he tested positive for marijuana use. He has remained unemployed ever since, while vehemently denying that he used marijuana.

Other labs have failed to detect traces of drugs deliberately planted in urine samples by researchers. Certain labs have trouble finding one out of 10 drugs in urine samples. Investigators recommend a second test to confirm any positive result. Congress is considering a national standard for laboratories.

Party pro tells aide Gore should 'cool it'

WASHINGTON — A pointed "cool it" to Sen. Al Gore Jr.'s harsh rhetoric in the New York presidential primary went to a key Gore aide from top Democratic Party professional Mark Siegel in a recent telephone conversation.

Taking the call in his office here from the senator's aide in New York, where Gore's explosive attacks have battered against the Rev. Jesse Jackson and front-runner Gov. Michael Dukakis, Siegel asked whether Gore should be thanked for "doing George Bush's dirty work for him" by undermining Dukakis.

Even worse for Gore, said Siegel, is the senator's future. Siegel, a Democratic National Committeeman, warned that roughing up Dukakis and Jackson in his campaign for a nomination no one thinks he can possibly obtain will not make Al Gore the most popular Democrat in the Senate and could damage his political future.

BYE-BYE MEESE?
Key political strategists for George Bush count on Edwin Meese III being gone as attorney general by the time the Republican National Convention convenes at New Orleans in August.

That expectation is expressed when the vice president's men are asked whether the attorney general's difficulties will be a presidential campaign problem. They do not relish the prospect of Bush being hounded all fall by embarrassing Meese questions.

A footnote: The latest drug-trafficking revelations in Senate hearings add urgency to mid-level staff recommendations in the Bush campaign that a more vigorous anti-drug program is needed. So far, nothing has been done.

DUKE'S 'NO' TO KITTY
After a hot family fight, fought well within the rules of the Marquess of Queensberry, Gov. Michael Dukakis flatly rejected a strong appeal from his wife Kitty and his close friend Nick Mitropoulos to "take on" Jesse Jackson and directly question his qualifications to become the nation's chief executive.

Dukakis listened carefully, first to his wife and then to his friend, before emphatically replying that under no conditions would he change the tenor of his campaign by aiming it negatively at Jackson. If he had to be nominated that way, he said, he did not want the nomination — and besides, alienating the party's huge black vote could defeat him in the election.

HELMS VS. INF JUGGERNAUT
Well aware that not even all the king's horses and all the king's men can stop Senate ratification of the INF treaty, banning intermediate-range nuclear weapons, Sen. Jesse Helms and a dozen other treaty foes are fashioning a filibuster-by-amendment attack, not a straight-out, old-fashioned talkathon.

President Reagan's absolute target for a final Senate vote is late May, just before his summit journey to Moscow. Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev has informed the U.S. that he wants no summit with Reagan unless the full ratification process for the treaty has been completed.

The strategy of Helms, the conservative leader, and such other treaty opponents as Democratic Sen. Richard C. Shelby and GOP Sens. Malcolm Wallop and Steve Symms will be to propose more than 100 amendments, with "extended debate" and a separate roll-call vote on each of them. That could delay the ratification countdown, making it dangerously late for meeting Reagan's deadline.

SIMON'S SUSPENSION
The decision by Illinois Sen. Paul Simon to suspend rather than end his presidential campaign runs counter to advice from fund-raisers who fear for his re-election to the Senate in 1990.

Russell Hemenway, head of the National Committee for an Effective Congress (which helps liberal candidates), advised Simon to get out of the race totally, release his delegates and endorse nobody. That route would keep Simon out of the black-vs.-white crossfire caused by Jackson's candidacy.

Simon's decision to keep the delegates was in response to demands by his Democratic backers in Illinois. If those delegates ultimately are used to stop Jackson, Simon could be in trouble with the big black vote back home.

U.S. ignorance of reality not fooling Israelis

When the U.S. government publicly criticized Israel's handling of the riots and voted for a UN resolution condemning Israel, I said at the time it was a stupid thing to do.

It was. Predictably it encouraged the Palestinian fanatics and brought on more violence and lessened the opportunity for a peaceful resolution. Anyone with common sense and a minimum knowledge of the Middle East knew that it would.

For proof of my point, I offer the words of Maher Abu Khater, editor of Al Fajr, an English-language weekly, as quoted in a Reuters dispatch shortly after the U.S. reaction. He is describing the reaction of the Palestinian youth to the U.S. response.

If two months of protests gets America to press Shamir (Israeli prime minister) for self-rule, then four months will bring a UN force and a year will see Israel pull out in disgust as it did from Lebanon, Khater said.

What the U.S. did was reward the rioters and signal to them that their rioting was producing results. Consequently more riots. Now, instead of about 30, there are 116 dead Palestinians and more to come. Now, instead of any opportunity to pursue a solution by negotiation, Israel has no choice but to wrest control away from the extremists by force.

The extremists, of course, as they have always done, kill any Palestinian who dares to suggest a negotiated settlement. Their current game plan is to keep the trouble going indefinitely until the West, whipped up by the simple-minded TV coverage, forces Israel out.

That will be the day the water in the Dead Sea is sweet to drink. If the American government wishes to play a positive role, then it should demand publicly that the riots cease, support Israel against the lynch mob in the United Nations, and demand that Palestinians appoint a negotiating team to participate in talks.

It is rather pointless to pressure

Israel to agree to talks when the PLO has already announced that no Palestinian except those they approve may participate in them. As for the international conference Secretary of State George Shultz is pushing, that's hogwash. If Jordan and Syria won't sit down at the table, recognize Israel's existence, and agree to negotiate a permanent peace, then there will be no peace.

What Shultz has in mind is to force Israel to concede the physical security of ground in exchange for an American guarantee — similar, no doubt, to the American guarantee given to South Vietnam, Laos and Cambodia. American officials may be ignorant of history but the Israelis are not. All Shultz and the Palestinians are going to do is guarantee the election of Shamir and his Likud coalition.

Americans should recognize this reality. The Arab countries have the power to make peace. Israel does not. It is not Israel which threatens the Arabs, it is the Arabs who threaten Israel. Barely 4 million people in a country of 30,000 square kilometers cannot threaten 130 million people occupying 15 million square kilometers. Especially as the latter have purchased over $100 billion worth of advanced armaments in recent years.

I, for one, am tired of the phoniness of American policy. Everytime the administration has pushed a sale of advanced weapons for Saudi Arabia it has argued that such sales buy influence — despite the fact the Saudis, to their honor, always publicly disavow that. Now the Saudis are buying long-range missiles from China. Where is the influence repeated weapons sales have allegedly purchased? Where is the influence earned by that ridiculous exercise of protecting 11 Kuwaiti ships in the Persian Gulf? Where, for that matter, is the influence with China, allegedly purchased by the U.S. embracing a hostile, communist government guilty of mass murder and genocide?

The answer is the U.S. has no influence. Weakness and concessions and failure to keep promises never buys influence. It buys contempt.

You want proof? Look how a two-bit dictator in Panama successfully defies the colossus of el norte. Americans had better wake up to reality before it bites them.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Tuesday, April 12, the 103rd day of 1988. There are 263 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:
On April 12, 1945, Franklin Delano Roosevelt, the 32nd President of the United States, died of a cerebral hemorrhage in Warm Springs, Ga., at age 63 — just three months after beginning an unprecedented fourth term in office. Vice President Harry S. Truman became the nation's 33rd chief executive.

On this date:
In 1606, England adopted as its flag the original version of the Union Jack.

In 1861, the Civil War began as Confederate forces fired on Fort Sumter in South Carolina.

In 1862, Union volunteers led by James J. Andrews stole a Confederate train near Marietta, Ga., but were later caught. (This episode inspired the Buster Keaton comedy "The General.")

In 1877, the catcher's mask was first used in a baseball game.

In 1955, the Salk vaccine against polio was declared safe and effective.

In 1961, Soviet cosmonaut Yuri Gagarin became the first man to fly in space, orbiting the Earth once before making a safe landing.

In 1975, the U.S. Embassy in Phnom Penh was closed, and the last of the American personnel, including Ambassador John Gunther Dean, evacuated in the face of advancing Khmer Rouge forces.

In 1980, the U.S. Olympic Committee's House of Delegates endorsed, by a 2-1 margin, President Carter's call for a boycott of the Moscow Summer Olympics.

In 1981, the space shuttle Columbia, carrying astronauts Robert Crippen and John Young, blasted off on its first test flight.

In 1984, the space shuttle Challenger's crew placed a satellite it had retrieved and repaired back into orbit.

Democrats debate; Dukakis cheered on

Associated Press

The New York primary seemed more and more like a referendum on the Midwest, as the presidential candidates spent another day cautiously raising the explosive issue of Israeli-Palestinian conflict. And a little Hollywood glitter rubbed off on the campaign of Michael Dukakis, as his cousin Olympia picked up an Academy Award.

"OK, Michael, let's go!" Olympia Dukakis called as she accepted her Oscar for best supporting actress for her performance in the comedy "Moonstruck." Dukakis, at a restaurant in New York that figured in the film, called his cousin to congratulate her, and said her triumph "may be a sign of good things to come in New York."

A week before the New York primary, with its 255 delegates at stake, the three Democratic contenders were meeting today for their first full-scale debate since last month's Super Tuesday campaign.

Republican George Bush, his party's all-but-certain nominee, kicked off a three-day New York campaign swing and said he wasn't worried that the more suspenseful Democratic race was stealing the spotlight.

"We don't have all the excitement that exists on the Democratic side, but we have a lot more unity and fewer problems," he told a crowd at a shopping mall in White Plains.

Jesse Jackson's campaign manager, Gerald Austin, said over the weekend that he hoped the New York primary wouldn't be a "one-issue" campaign. But Midwest topics dominated for another day on Monday. Nearly one-quarter of New York Democratic voters are Jewish, and matters affecting Israel have been the focus of the primary campaign.

Bush, touring an IBM plant in Thornwood, N.Y., called himself "a good friend of Israel" and said American Jews should vote for him and not a Democrat.

Dukakis, speaking to Jewish leaders, said Arab leaders are responsible for the violence in the Israeli-occupied territories. He said neither the young stone-throwers nor the Israeli government bear the blame.

"It is not the generation of young Palestinians who have grown up in uncertainty, and who have been taught by their elders to hate," he said.

"It is not a government in Jerusalem that struggles to maintain order while seeking an opportunity to negotiate with responsible Arab leaders about the future of the territories... It is, regrettably, Arab leaders... who have time and again rejected the chance to sit down with Israel and negotiate a permanent peace in the Middle East," said the Massachusetts governor.

Jesse Jackson, in a delicate position because he made comments in 1984 that offended many Jews, continued to put distance between himself and Palestine Liberation Organization chief Yasser Arafat.

Jackson called the PLO leader one of the "most extreme elements" in the conflict, and urged Jewish and Arab-Americans to hold talks themselves in an effort to find common ground.

Report argues if teachers are professionals

NEW YORK (AP) — A decade of school reform has produced stacks of legislation, higher teacher pay and tighter teaching requirements but has left unresolved whether teachers are full-fledged professionals, a report says.

"By sheer volume of legislation, it is clear that teaching has been 'reformed,'" said the 80-page Rand Corp. report, "The Evolution of Teacher Policy," released Monday.

"Teaching policy is up for grabs — and there are lots of people grabbing," it said.

The net result of hundreds of education-related bills enacted during the past decade has been contradiction and confusion, concluded the report by researchers Linda Darling-Hammond and Barnett Barry.

School reform has yet to settle whether teachers are professionals possessing a body of knowledge and capable of dealing with the individual needs of students, or whether they are merely "semiskilled workers" needing constant supervision, the researchers said.

Still, the report found that average salaries rose 31 percent from 1981 to 1986 to $25,240, and 19 states adopted minimum salary schedules. More recent figures from the National Education Association estimate average salaries at $28,000 this year.

Starting salaries are also up, but not enough to close the gap between teaching and other professions. According to NEA figures, the average was $17,500 in 1987, while beginning accountants, chemists, computer specialists and engineers, for example, all earned in excess of $20,000.

Overall, the average teacher's purchasing power is practically unchanged from 1971-72 levels, according to the analysis.

Nearly all states considered performance-based pay systems, including merit pay, from 1983 to 1986. But such programs often have encountered delays because of teacher opposition and lack of funds.

Twenty-seven states enacted tougher teacher training requirements, including testing of academic ability and minimum grade-point averages. States are increasingly stressing liberal arts background over education courses.

"Paradoxically, for a number of states, improving teacher preparation seems to mean reducing the amount of time devoted to traditional teacher education," the report said.

By 1986, 46 states required teacher competency testing for admission to teacher education or certification or both. But such testing has stalled in many states because of lack of funding or questions about the tests' validity.

Girls not winning share of PSAT tests, group says

WASHINGTON (AP) — A group critical of standardized tests charged today that girls are not winning their fair share of National Merit Scholarships to attend college.

The National Merit Scholarship Corp.'s reliance on the Preliminary Scholastic Aptitude Test to select its 15,000 semifinalists each year "is extraordinarily irresponsible" and costs women "millions of dollars each year" in scholarships, said Sarah Stockwell of FairTest.

The activists group said it suspected that minorities are underrepresented among the ranks of National Merit Scholarship winners, despite special awards earmarked for black students.

Marianne Roderick, a senior vice president of the National Merit Scholarship Corp. in Evanston, Ill., said 63 percent of this year's National Merit semifinalists are boys.

"It has been true over a number of years that boys outnumber girls by about 60-40, sometimes a little more, sometimes a little less," she said.

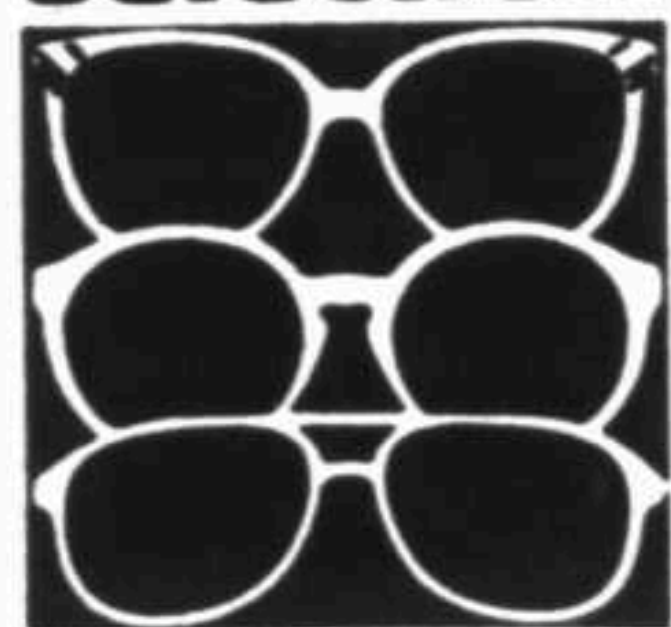

She defended the use of the standardized test to select semifinalists, saying, "The merit program is open to more than a million youngsters who enter it each year and we have no quotas regarding boys or girls or ethnic origin or anything else."

Maryland to ban sale of cheap handguns

ANNAPOLIS, Md. (AP) — The first state law in the nation to ban the sale of cheap handguns known as Saturday Night Specials cleared the General Assembly and was sent to the governor, who has promised to sign it.

Despite a fierce lobbying effort by the National Rifle Association, the bill was passed Monday night with support from top state officials and Sarah Brady, wife of James Brady, President Reagan's press secretary.

Mrs. Brady told legislators at an earlier hearing that a $29 handgun that would be banned under the Maryland law was used by John Hinckley in his 1981 assassination attempt that wounded the president and left husband partially disabled.

Democratic House Speaker R. Clayton Mitchell said the 95-41 vote in the House of Delegates a few hours before the 1988 legislative session ended "seems to be a first, a giant step forward."

"I'm hoping Congress will look at what Maryland did," said Attorney General J. Joseph Curran. "That's where this action is needed."

Youth hit by tax returns

WASHINGTON (AP) — Millions of young Americans are filling out federal tax returns for the first time as Friday's filing deadline approaches, and many of them are learning that you don't always get a refund.

Several new provisions affecting students who work part-time and youngsters under the age of 14 took effect in 1987 and are being felt on returns filed this year. The net effect is to complicate the finances of these people and, in many cases, of their parents.

The Internal Revenue Service estimates 3.3 million people are having to file returns for the first time because a section of the 1986 law denies a personal exemption, worth $1,900 for 1987, to those who can be claimed as a dependent by a parent or someone else.

In addition, young people can lose a good portion of their $2,540 standard deduction by being claimed by a parent. And thresholds for filing are lower than in the past.

Galaxy raises questions

NEW YORK (AP) — Astronomers may have to change their ideas about the early universe because of the discovery of the oldest and most distant galaxy ever observed, researchers said.

The galaxy, about 10 times the size of the Milky Way, was formed before the universe was a mere 2 billion years old, said its discoverer, Simon Lilly of the University of Hawaii at Manoa.

Researchers have previously found indirect evidence of galaxies forming at extreme distances, but this is the first clear observation of a mature galaxy at those distances, Lilly said Monday in a telephone interview.

"This pushes back the time at which galaxies formed in the early universe," he said.

The discovery could force a revision in astronomers' conception of the universe, Lilly said.

Animal patent revealed

WASHINGTON (NYT) — The United States Patent and Trademark Office plans to announce its first patent on an animal on Tuesday, an official said Monday night.

Inventors are eager to patent animals, including livestock, that have been transformed through gene splicing and other techniques of biotechnology.

The Washington Post said in its

Tuesday editions that the first patent would go to Harvard scientists for a genetically altered mouse.

The mice are to be used in research, financed by the BiDu Pontel Company, to test cancer treatments in animals.

Woman causes near-wrecks

PEORIA, Ill. (AP) — A woman in a see-through, fish-net body suit disrupted traffic, caused several near-wrecks and ended up being arrested, authorities said.

Police said Dolly May Jane McCloud, 21, of East Peoria, was arrested Saturday on charges of public indecency and disorderly conduct, as well as obstructing police, authorities said.

According to police, an unidentified driver reported several motorists nearly collided when they suddenly slowed to look at Ms. McCloud.

Feeling "Old"?

or can I do something?

Aging doesn't mean you have to feel tired all the time. A thorough physical examination will help discover any conditions which call for improving the physiologic and immunologic processes in the body.

Lifestyle measures such as adopting a healthy emotional outlook, proper diet, exercise, and avoidance of harmful substances are all important. We refer to this as "health enhancement."

Is there more to health enhancement?

Dr. E. W. McCullough prescribes several new physiologic treatments involving:

1) Tissue oxygenators — to give off oxygen to ischemic (anemic) tissues.

- 2) Anti-oxidants — to remove free radicals.
- 3) Cell energizers — to increase cell energy.
- 4) Fat burners — to burn fat instead of carbohydrates.
- 5) Metabolic catalyzers — to accelerate building up or tearing down of protein.
- 6) Plus other methods to correct glandular imbalances, cholesterol abnormalities, and circulation problems.

If you want to do something to feel better, you are invited to consult with Dr. McCullough.

Area teens may have found new drug

Police say some youths inhale freon

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

Area teen-agers may have found a new recreational drug — the refrigerant freon — that is unregulated and deadly, Midland police warned Monday.

On March 25, an 18-year-old Midland man died after ingesting liquid freon from a pressurized can, according to police reports. The death was the tragic result of a need to "get high" which has led teens to abuse inhalants for decades, according to Det. Sgt. Andy Glasscock.

The March 25 accident was the second time detectives had discovered use of freon by teens, Glasscock said. "It all started at the mall bombing," the officer said referring to a March 16 incident at Midland Park Mall. "When we went down in the drain after the bombing, we found five or six empty cans of freon."

"Then when we started talking to some of the kids that had been hanging around down there, they told us about the freon."

At least five teens in one group admitted they were using the refrigerant regularly, Glasscock said.

"They would get a rush, feel light-headed," Glasscock said he was told of effect of the freon fumes. "It was almost like speed."

Investigators thought the group at the mall was isolated — until 10 days ago, when two 14-year-old San Jacinto Junior High students were found behind a local fast food outlet.

The two boys allegedly had shoplifted two cans of freon after school and were inhaling the fumes when police arrived.

"And it wasn't their first time," Glasscock said. "What scares me is these kids say a lot of them are doing this. We want parents to be aware of it."

"It is one of the deadliest forms of getting high that you can imagine."

Midland County Sheriff Gary Painter said his office has received no reports of freon abuse by teens.

"The first I ever heard about it was about a week or two ago," Painter said, "and I am surprised these kids are using it because it is so deadly."

Officers face a difficult task stopping the abuse of freon, because it is available at convenience stores, auto parts stores, and its sale is unregulated, Painter said.

"I have no idea what can be done," he said. "Because it is not illegal to sell it" to individuals.

In Odessa, police Cpl. John McAnnon said he knew of no reports involving the abuse of freon.

The refrigerant — which also comes in large industrial sizes not available to the general public — commonly is sold in 14 ounce cans. A valve connected to a "charge line" is necessary to access the chemical, according to officers.

Please see FREON, Page 2B

These cans of freon were confiscated 10 days ago from two 14-year-old boys who were inhaling the contents behind a local fast food outlet. Midland police Det. Sgt. Andy Glasscock says he is worried the use of the dangerous substance — which has resulted in a death — is becoming increasingly popular here.

Ector's Augesen cleared of misuse of county funds

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — An audit report effectively clearing Ector County District Attorney Eric Augesen of any wrongdoing concerning use of funds for undercover investigations was heard and accepted Monday by county commissioners.

In presenting the audit report prepared by County Auditor Bill Hicks, Treasurer Susie Rippey Quinn told commissioners recommendations by Hicks for certain changes in record and bookkeeping procedures are being implemented to avoid questionable practices in the future.

The audit, Hicks said in his final report, "Included a detail check of every transaction" that had taken place in the district attorney's hot check, restitution and special drug funds.

The audit was prompted when it was learned Augesen had been using funds from the settlement of bond forfeitures to cover the expenses of an undercover drug investigation.

The district attorney defended his actions, saying he had obtained an order signed by the county's four district judges. However, some of the district judges, while admitting they had signed the order, said they had not realized what they were approving.

Hicks' audit found not all expenditures made from the district attorney's hot check fund had met a "two-pronged test" established by the Texas attorney general but, he added, "We are satisfied that the intent of those expenditures were for official county business and none of those funds were expended for personal gain for the district attorney."

Concerning the district attorney's bond forfeiture expense funds, Hicks said that, while the use of such funds "is a legal approach," all bond forfeiture funds should be remitted by the district attorney to the county treasurer and, if additional funds are required for drug and/or law-related investigations the decision to release such funds should be made by Ector County Commissioners.

As to the district attorney's revenue fund, Hicks recommended bound, pre-numbered receipt books in triplicate be used. He said the original copy should be issued to the person, agency or department submitting restitution, with the first receipt copy attached to a monthly fund activity report and the second copy retained in the receipt book for permanent record.

When the audit was first announced, Augesen expressed concern undercover operatives could be jeopardized. To avoid this possibility, Hicks said, Texas Ranger Capt. Gene Powell audited the district attorney's Special Drug Fund "to insure confidentiality of a drug investigation taking place at this time."

Others in the competition included the Clearwater (Fla.) Sun, Midland (Mich.) Daily News, Edwardsville (Ill.) Intelligencer, and Huron (Mich.) Daily Tribune.

SMU fraternity cook getting out of the kitchen

By HELEN BRYANT

DALLAS (AP) — The Kappa Alpha Psi chapter at Southern Methodist University face a crisis: When Zella is gone, who's going to scramble the eggs, fry the drumettes, hear the confessions, take home the spare animals and stop the food fights?

Morehead

After 35 years of that kind of heat, Azella Morehead, known to KAs simply as Zella, is getting out of the fraternity kitchen.

"I'll be 63 years old in May," she said. "It's my legs. They hurt. Otherwise I'd still be here." Her retirement takes effect when school ends in May.

"But there's one thing I'm going to do for them before I get out of here," she said, smiling. "I've got to give them their favorite chocolate cake... I use Ex-Lax in the icing," she said, chortling. "I've done it down through the years. I haven't done it this year yet, but every time they see a chocolate cake, they expect it."

She smiled. "I'm going to miss 'em."

Cooking for 105 fraternity brothers — 400 meal servings a week — has been demanding, but Zella said life with the KAs never has been dull.

One night recently, "I cooked dinner for 85 to 100 people," she said. "I was on my feet all day cooking. Then around 4:30, here come these pledges and they took away dinner, took everything, even my uncooked rolls. I said, 'Don't take my rolls,' but they took those, too."

The purloined meal was given to a downtown shelter, and the KAs had to fend for themselves.

Dinner means a lot to the KAs, so it often becomes the target of pledge pranks. Zella remembered one year when the pledges decided to steal her instead of the dinner. They took her out to eat while the KAs were left sitting at empty tables.

Zella used to forbid refrigerator-raiding, going so far as to put thick chains on the refrigerator door when she went home at night. Housemother Billie Daniel persuaded her to relent, and snacking now is allowed as long as Zella's kitchen isn't messed up.

"I leave a note," she said. "Clean the kitchen, or no food."

She's been known to stop food fights at knife point.

The fights "don't happen very often," she said. "Just when they get all riled up I just get my board or my knife and go out there, and they stop."

KA Ted Kolman, a sophomore who says Zella "will be dearly missed," recalled an evening when dining-room language started getting a little loud and rough. "She came out with this big old board and said, 'You all be quiet or I'll come out there and whip your butts.' Nobody said a word after that."

Daniel said fraternity members tell Zella everything about their lives and frequently ask her advice.

As if to prove the point, sophomore Brian Elliott bounded into the kitchen, wearing an impossibly broad grin, to tell Zella about a successful date.

"I'm in love!" he announced, and kissed Zella on the cheek.

Zella takes particular delight in telling stories about KA alumni who still live in Dallas.

"I'm gon' tell one on Little Dobbie," she said. "That's Richard McPike. One time he was crawling up in a sorority house, crawling into his girl's room. But she thought it was a prowler, so she called the police on the little goat."

Zella's specialties are Zellaburgers, chicken-fried steak and fried chicken. Her chicken is so well-known that non-KAs often drop by to swipe a drumette.

"It's in the agreement," Zella said, "that I will come back and cook the chicken during rush."

AWARDS

Wilcott also received a third place award, totaling $100, for a photo of Jessica McClure being brought out of the abandoned water well in which she had been trapped.

Corporate certificates denoting special achievement during the year were awarded to Rick Brown, spot news; former reporter Ramona Nye, features; Antoinette Moore, headlines; Julie Hillrichs, personal enterprise; and to former Reporter-Telegram photographers Kent Porter, Ron Jaap and Scott Rathburn. Jaap and Rathburn are now on the photo staff of the Beaumont Enterprise.

The awards followed by several weeks announcements that staffers had taken four second place awards, a third place and a honorable mention in 1987 statewide Associated Press contest.

Judge 'threatens' to run for Supreme Court chief justice

AUSTIN (AP) — A state Court of Appeals judge running for the Supreme Court of Texas threatened to run against the "vulnerable" chief justice, a fellow Republican, if party leaders opposed his own candidacy.

Charles Howell, a judge on the 5th Court of Appeals in Dallas, said in an affidavit that newly appointed Chief Justice Thomas Phillips was "vulnerable on the issues of maturity and experience."

Howell said he warned state party officials in January that he would run against Phillips in the March 8 primary if they let a candidate oppose Howell in his own race.

The appellate judge released the 30-page account in an effort to disqualify the Supreme Court from hearing a lawsuit in which he is involved. The suit, on appeal, concerns the sale of land in Dallas County.

Mark Sanders, a spokesman for the state Republican Party, denied that the party recruited a candidate against Howell and said the GOP was "perplexed" that Howell would criticize his own party.

Howell told state party leaders of his plans in a meeting Jan. 4, the day of the filing deadline, he said in his affidavit.

Rumors began reaching him late last year that state party leaders were upset about his announcement in December to oppose incumbent Democrat Justice Raul Gonzalez for another term in the November general election, Howell said.

"Within a few days, rumors were being relayed to me by my Republican friends that certain of my critics within the Republican Party considered that my candidacy was too controversial and that the Hon. Barbara Culver, then a (state) district judge in Midland, was being pressed to file against me in the Republican primary," Howell said.

Culver confirmed she had been approached about making the race and said she talked with Howell several times on the question before she opted not to run and was appointed to a vacancy on the court by Republican Governor Bill Clements.

With only minutes before the filing deadline, Howell said he was convinced he would have no opponent if he stayed in the race for Gonzalez's Place 3 seat on the court. He had no opposition and the two square off in November.

Hicks' audit found $1,275 from the Bond Forfeiture Expenses Fund had been deposited in the Restitution Fund.

Additionally, the auditor said, the district attorney was "holding" $3,000 in checks from ASA Bonding for bond forfeitures where court forfeiture orders were rescinded by district judges.

Hicks recommended the $3,000 be returned to the bonding company "since there appears to be no authority for the county to hold these funds." He further recommended the $1,275 be withdrawn from the Restitution Fund and remitted to the county treasurer.

In conclusion, Hicks said, "Our detailed audit revealed several weaknesses in the accounting procedures for all of the funds in this department. These have been addressed and we are presently in the process of implementing stronger accounting procedures."

While observing that "some expenditures... were not fully documented," the auditor said, "We did not find any intent on the part of the district attorney to misappropriate funds belonging to the county."

Hicks noted Augesen has agreed to comply with all requests and recommendations concerning the audit.

FREON

Midland Deputy Police Chief Billy Ray said the decision was made to publicize the problem because of the extraordinary potential for injuries or more deaths.

"I am concerned that parents will not realize the problem is going on," Ray said. "If they could see the paraphernalia, and see what we are seeing, maybe they would be more aware of it."

Ray said he "has heard about" freon used as an inhalant, "but not cases like this."

When the freon is used as an inhalant, the can must be held in a certain position, Glascock said. If it is inverted, the abuser will instead inhale liquid freon and "it will kill him," he said.

"It's not a new thing, but it is for here, and it is becoming a problem," Glascock said.

"We are trying not to panic anyone, but we want them to be aware of it."

Attempted burglary suspect arrested

From Staff Reports

A 21-year-old Midland man is in police custody following his arrest early today after an attempted burglary, police said.

According to police reports, about 12:45 a.m., a woman living in the 4500 block of Wood Drive reported a possible burglar at a window. After the woman turned all lights on in the house, the man continued to try and gain entry until the woman screamed and he ran off, reports said.

A few minutes later after a short chase the man was arrested in the 4600 block of Billingsley Boulevard near Wal-Mart, police spokesman Cpl. Jim White said.

Officers also found a stolen car near where the man was arrested, White said.

Explosion information sought

This week, Crime Stoppers is seeking information on an explosion which occurred in a storm drain at Midland Park Mall.

In the early morning hours of March 16, a bomb was detonated in a pipe under the west parking lot of the mall. The force of the explosion was the equivalent of several sticks of dynamite, investigators said. It caused considerable damage to the drain system and surrounding parking lot. A length of speaker wire was found leading away from the scene of the explosion, which means the bomb was set off electrically, investigators said.

Crime Stoppers is offering a $1,000 cash reward, this week only, for information that leads to the arrest and indictment of the persons responsible for the bombing.

Crime Stoppers in Midland can be reached at 694-TIPS, and in Odessa at 333-TIPS. Callers can remain anonymous.

Spring style has romance, fun

By PATRICIA DIBSIE
Copley News Service

Romance is in the air for spring. So is minimalism. A good mix of these two equal but disparate fashion trends is illustrated by the look of a flower print dress, fitted to the body from bust to hips by elasticized thread for a seersuckerlike pucker. The wide bottom flounce shows the brightness of the colors in the print and gives a flirtatious flare around the knees.

Whether it's a minimal silhouette, rose images or the elegant pants on this season's scene, the look is put-together.

The body-hugging designs of today's minimal clothes are uniquely suited to fit bodies. If you think you can't wear minimal designs, try on several spare, fitted styles. Then pare down the way you put yourself together to tap into this trend. There is an accent on dramatic brights. No floppy scarves or full skirts.

Romantic touches are not fussy, either, though they have tended to be overdone in the past. This year's newest flower prints look more like an artist's painting than a fabric print.

The rose is the most popular theme. Some of the rose prints are reminiscent of slipcover chintz, and some of the flower scarves look like botanical prints. Colors range from bright primaries to soft pastels.

While minimalism and romantic are the two extremes in fashion this spring, in between are the wearable clothes that most of us will choose for our busy lives. These include: Skirts somewhere around the knee, rather than mid-thigh as shown by the designers.

CITY SHORTS with jackets, which look like real winners for travel and weekend play.

A jacket cropped somewhere around the waist to wear with a short skirt styled with the same high-rise waist.

A flower print scarf, blouse or dress.

A silk flower for the waist, hat, hair or lapel.

Fashion has to keep up with spring weather and the seasonal idea of rebirth, something new.

The minimal idea has been with us for several years now, and is especially suited to the bodies women have created through their interest in health and fitness. But where did all the flowers, and more particularly this season's hot rose prints, come from?

Christian Lacroix started it in Paris last year when he used cabbage-rose-size prints for his eye-catching little party dresses for winter. The dresses were short, to mid-thigh, which was a radical departure from the mid-calf length where skirts then were hovering.

The fashion press and women who buy expensive couture styles thought that the dresses were wonderful. And American designers, from Bill Blass to Ralph Lauren, caught both the flower and short ideas for their spring collections, shown in New York in November.

Roses began to bloom in the spring collections and city shorts were resurrected from the summer doldrums of the year before for the women who didn't want to buy minis. In an above-knee length, city shorts are a fashionable alternative.

Other designers, such as California's Michelle Lamy, picked up on Lacroix's clashing colors to doll up the black stretch sheaths she had introduced last season.

Lamy added pink and green or fuchsia and orange bows along with brightly colored long gloves, a different color for each arm. The result? Fresh and kooky.

MANY OF the top New York and Paris designers have built their '88 spring collections around the pants look, particularly tailored pants with the new, high-rise waist.

For daytime it's the fuller trouser in an abundance of textures. The jackets are long and every bit as tailored as a man's suit. Yes, they're a little softer than a man's suit coat, and yes, they're accessorized with something feminine — a broach or large red rose will do.

Another big look is the short, waist-cropped jacket. They come in plaids and stripes (it's still a woman's world when it comes to fashion). Another popular jacket is the modernistic jacket (the broad-shoulder, boxy look) with no collar or buttons. The look is futuristic — snappy and architecturally inspired fashion.

The fashionable jacket length has as much leeway as do skirt lengths this season. The long and short jacket looks are just different enough to make last year's wardrobe seem terribly dated.

Forget last year's figure-fitting pants paired with the hot blazer of two years ago. That look is out. There's no recycling this time around.

Pants, according to New York's Seventh Avenue designers, travel with style to the office. But deep-six any pair in your closet made with stretch fabrics.

This is the year for the more traditional cotton twill, linen and cotton jersey. And don't forget your silk. It's the essence of sophistication and a must for any well-dressed woman. Gabardine holds its shape and looks more expensive than it really is — a must for every well-equipped closet.

Pant shapes are clean and basic — with frills and frou-frou few and far between. Trousers are looser, more fluid with deep soft pleats and higher waisted. They should be slightly tapered for shape.

DEAR ABBY

Banner proves to be lifesaver

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Some time ago you printed an address in your column to send for banners that motorists could put on their cars to call police if they needed help on the road. I am so glad I sent for one because it proved to be a lifesaver.

My car broke down on an interstate road at night. It was raining hard and the road was between two hills. We were locked in our car for several hours when a state trooper spotted the "Please Call Police" banner I had placed on the inside of the rear window. He stopped, summoned a tow truck and stayed with us until help arrived. Needless to say, we were very grateful.

Abby, please urge your readers to send for this banner. Every motorist should have one in the glove compartment. At $4 it was the best bargain I ever got. — HELEN GALLETTA, ALIQUIPPA, PA.

DEAR HELEN: Write to: WCIL-BANNERS, P.O. Box 66042, Los Angeles, Calif. 90066. The cost is $4 per banner, postage and handling included. Make your tax-deductible check or money order payable to WCIL-BANNERS. The Westside Center for Independent Living exists to help disabled people live independently.

DEAR ABBY: I would like to give the following advice to "Depressed Down South," who was convicted of shoplifting.

By statute, in California a person may expunge a criminal record if she or he meets certain conditions.

Expungement is not a pardon or a complete "cleansing" of the criminal record; rather, it is a "cleansing" of the record for limited purposes. For example, a person who obtains an expungement in California is not required to disclose the conviction that was expunged on employment applications (usually, after expungement, disclosure is only required for governmental jobs). Thus, an individual who has obtained an expungement could honestly, and legally, answer no to a conviction-related question on a job application, depending on the type of job being sought.

I suggest that "Depressed Down South" either hire a lawyer or do some legal research to find out whether the state in which she committed the crime permits expungement, or "cleansing" the record through some other method, so that she may exercise her rights and proceed with her career. — GLORIA M. SANCHEZ, ESQ., SANTA ANA, CALIF.

DEAR MS. SANCHEZ: Thank you for a letter that many will find helpful.

DEAR ABBY: I am a teacher in a small school in Arkansas. We just started a new program, giving "prizes" to the students who have been "good." That means they have never been tardy, and never been absent from school.

Abby, what are our schools coming to? Why are we paying our future adults to come to school? And why are we rewarding them for not being late? Where have the parent and self-motivation gone? — YOUNG TEACHER

DEAR TEACHER: To reward excellence is a good idea, but to "pay" students for getting to school on time is a little much. In the good old days, it wasn't what you'd get if you did, it was what you'd get if you didn't, that kept the children in line.

DEAR ABBY: The letter from the lady who dislikes dirty jokes reminded me of something that has been bothering me for quite a while. Writing to you about it may not accomplish anything, but at least I'll get it off my chest.

I have been an avid movie fan for almost 50 years. For many years, my husband and I went to a movie once a week. During World War II, we went to two movies a week.

In recent years, we go to two — maybe three — movies a year. Why don't we go more often? Because the language in most movies today is just plain vulgar! Abby, nudity I can take — but the foul language is disgusting.

I'm no prude. I sometimes resort to swearing myself, but to sit for two hours and listen to nothing but "s—" an "f—" in every other sentence is not my idea of entertainment.

I suppose because the young movie-makers use that kind of language in their everyday conversation, they think everybody else does. Well, everybody else doesn't!

This is especially frustrating for us because we live within walking distance of a theater with 10 screens — and we can't find a clean one to go to. — FORMER MOVIE FAN, ARROYO GRANDE, CALIF.

DEAR FORMER FAN: Amen, sister!

Problems? Write to Abby. For a personal, unpublished reply, send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to Abby, P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069. All correspondence is confidential.

AT WIT'S END

Attention, I.R.S. shoppers ...

By ERMA BOMBECK

This is a competitive world, so I knew it was only a matter of time before you could shop around for a better price on your income taxes.

The General Accounting Office told a House subcommittee that in a spot check of the IRS, 39 percent of its answers were wrong. The amount of taxes or the amount of refund seemed to change depending on who answered the phone.

This seems to be carrying free enterprise a bit far, but why not? For years, we've seen discount houses spring up and prices on name brands cut to the quick. And I don't know of anyone who, in the face of a serious diagnosis, has not shopped for a second opinion.

Probably the most blatant discrepancy in prices has to be the airlines. When you buy your ticket, where you buy your ticket, where you sit, what day of the week you travel, how long you stay, and whether or not you're related to someone who works for the airline have a great impact on how much you pay for your fare. There are no two people on the plane who have paid the same price.

With my last book, I discovered that even with an author's discount, I paid more for it than the people who bought it over the counter. It was discounted before I finished writing it.

But back to the IRS. It was an idea whose time had come. It has always been difficult dealing with a monopoly. It exudes such power, and there is no court of appeals. When that little figure appears on the bottom line of your return, it's as if God is speaking.

To date, the IRS has gotten in excess of 22 million calls from puzzled taxpayers. It's not as bad as it sounds. I suspect most of them are in search of a better bottom line.

There are no indications that filing a tax return is going to get easier. Every year the frustration among taxpayers grows. It wouldn't surprise me if the IRS someday offered membership in a price club-type operation called Tax Mart ... your one-stop shop for refunds. Buy a membership and save on designer deductions.

Or possibly a Tax-of-the-Month Club, where you're offered a deduction each month either to take or reject at a special price.

Remember, you have only three more shopping days till you file.

Special fashions have 'elegant ease'

Associated Press

"Pretty, yet pain-free" is the philosophy behind a line of fashion clothing and accessories aimed at women who have physical problems. Like arthritis, in getting dressed.

Irwin Taylor, a Rochester, N.Y.-based company named for its designers, Janet Irwin and Pattie Taylor, produces clothing with easy closures for those who have difficulty in hooking, tying, snapping or buttoning.

A shirtwaist, for example, opens halfway down the front for easy "step-in" dressing and fastens with a zipper-like strip of Velcro to eliminate buttoning.

Irwin and Taylor say they worked with occupational and physical therapists to develop the clothing. Research, they say, showed many women between the ages of 46 and 65 needed pants that didn't require pulling on. Many others had difficulty with buttons or hooks-and-eyes.

According to the American Cancer Society, one out of ten women will develop breast cancer sometime in her lifetime. It is currently estimated that over 37,000 women die each year as a result of breast cancer.

Ninety percent of breast cancers are diagnosed by women or their physicians finding a lump in the breast. Women who are diagnosed with a lump large enough to feel have a 50 percent five year survival rate. A woman who is diagnosed as having breast cancer by mammography, before a lump can be felt, has a 97% five year survival rate and a 90% 10 year survival rate. (The cost is only $50.00)

A mammogram can detect a cancer this small, even before it can be felt.

Miami detective pleads for new heart

HOUSTON (AP) — A Miami police detective who has been kept alive for five weeks by an experimental heart pump says he wants a real heart so he can go home.

"I want to walk through my front door and see my grandson who's waiting there for me. The doctors can't do anything for me until I get a heart," Kenneth Bradley said during a news conference Monday, his 49th birthday.

Bradley, who is able to walk a short distance, was suffering from heart failure and near death when he was admitted to the Texas Heart Institute two months ago, said Dr. O. Howard Frazier. He received the circulatory assist device March 10 when he was comatose and had a failing liver and kidneys.

"I'm looking for a heart so if you have a spare one, send it my way federal express," he joked with reporters.

Bradley, a 15-year veteran with the Dade County Metropolitan Police Department, was diagnosed with a deteriorating heart disease six months ago and was transferred to Houston because Miami didn't have the facilities to handle him.

Frazier said Bradley was an ideal candidate for the heart pump made by Woburn, Mass.-based Thermedics Inc. Doctors at the Institute stopped putting artificial hearts in patients a year ago, although work continues on a permanent implantable artificial heart, he said.

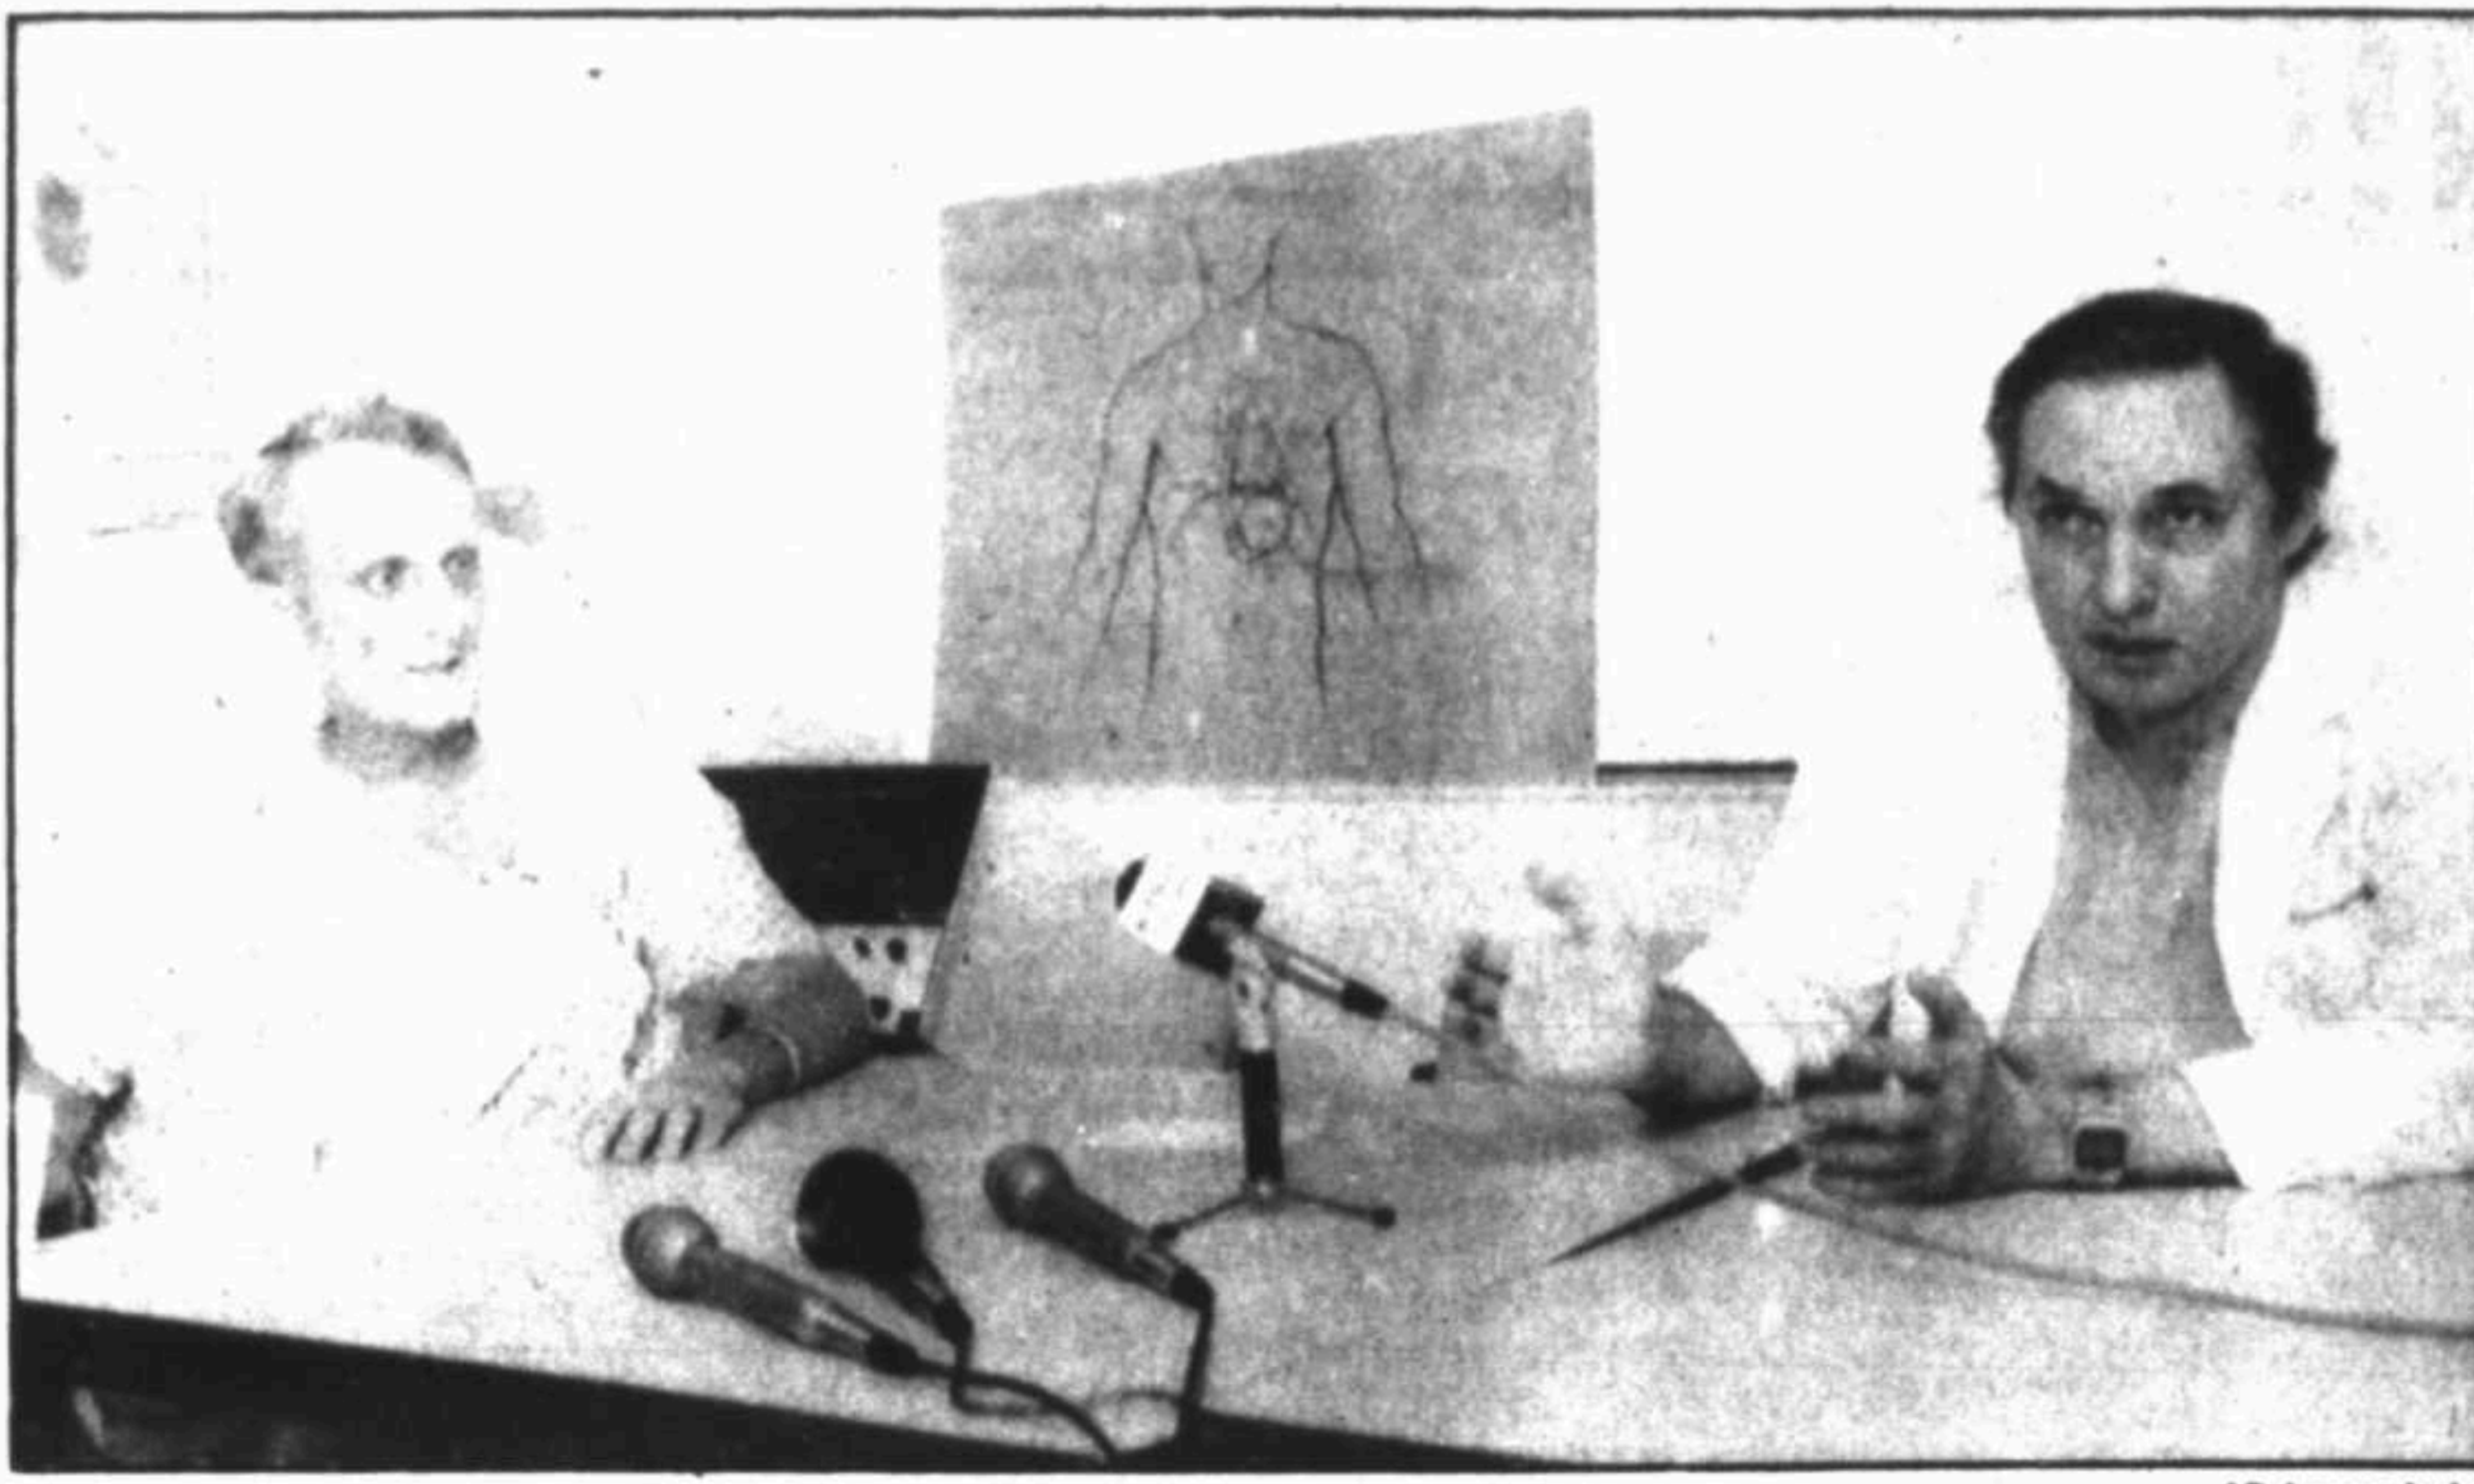

Like the total artificial heart, the new device is designed to help support the patient's failing heart until a human transplant can be performed. The main difference is that the device is smaller than an artificial heart, which is too large to fit in the average person's chest.

The heart pump also reduces the likelihood that clots would form from which could lead to strokes, a problem common with artificial hearts.

The device is designed to assist the pumping function of one of the two main pumping heart chambers, or ventricles.

The device is usually positioned in the abdominal cavity.

Blood is channeled into the circular device by Kenneth Bradley, left, 49, is a Miami police detective awaiting a heart transplant in Houston. Dr. O. Howard Frazier, right, said way of an inlet conduit which is attached to the left ventricle. When the natural heart empties blood into the mechanical pump, an external control system triggers a programmed air pulse to initiate pumping.

The pressurized chamber of the device then pushes on a flexible diaphragm to propel the blood out through an outlet conduit which is attached to the aorta, the main artery. One-way valves located on either side of the device's pumping chamber keep blood flowing in only one direction.

a pump was implanted in Bradley five weeks ago and is helping support his failing heart until a donor heart can be found.

The Texas Heart Institute is one of four facilities in the country authorized by the Food and Drug Administration to implant the investigative device.

Victor Poirier, senior vice president for Thermedics, said his company is in the process of developing a pump with a miniature electric motor that would allow the patient to return home and work while waiting for a transplant.

Six other patients at the Institute have had the heart pumps implanted as a bridge to transplant. Three were transplanted successfully.

Panel disappointed more hospitals didn't attend AIDS hearings

AUSTIN (AP) — Several members of the Legislative Task Force on AIDS say they would have liked more hospitals to have participated in public hearings on how the state can best deal with the disease and its financial burdens.

The Houston Chronicle reports that most of the 550 Texas hospitals invited to the hearings ignored the forums, with all but 18 hospitals or hospital systems not responding to the invitation.

Public fear of AIDS and the risk of losing the business of non-AIDS patients to other institutions may have persuaded hospital officials to bypass the public forums, the Chronicle said.

"It's a touchy marketing issue," said King Hillier, financial officer for the publicly supported Harris County Hospital District. "Those for-profit hospitals are in there to make money. They're treating AIDS patients, but they don't want their hospital to be associated with AIDS."

The legislative task force crossed the state during February and March, taking testimony from individuals, AIDS support groups, doctors, charities and insurance industry representatives.

Only 18 hospitals or hospital systems — eight government-owned, seven church-operated and one proprietary — had representatives talk about the problems that AIDS has caused for the health care industry.

"There are several other hospitals here who treat AIDS patients, but they downplay it," said Dr. Ron Anderson, president of Dallas' Parkland Memorial Hospital. "They don't want to get known as the AIDS hospital from a marketing point of view."

Tom Young, administrator of the Austin-owned Brackenridge Hospital, said he didn't attend the hearing because he believed the best testimony on the issue could be provided by institutions such as Parkland and the Harris County Hospital District, public facilities heavily involved in AIDS patient care.

"I don't think the quality of the deliberation is improved by having incessant duplication of testimony," Young said.

He also said he wasn't concerned about the public perception of Brackenridge as an AIDS hospital because all Austin hospitals care for AIDS patients.

"I don't think any hospital wants to be known as the AIDS hospital. There still are a lot of people who are not completely informed. But I don't think that's the reason hospitals are not out there testifying," added Jack Campbell, executive director of St. David's Community Hospital in Austin.

"There are several other hospitals here who treat AIDS patients, but they downplay it. They don't want to get known as the AIDS hospital from a marketing point of view."

— Dr. Ron Anderson, Dallas' Parkland Memorial Hospital

Campbell said his hospital prefers to work through the Texas Hospital Association, a trade and lobby group representing almost every hospital in the state.

AIDS is an expensive illness to treat. The legislative task force was assigned with finding how much of the burden should be carried by the health care industry, the insurance business and government.

For proprietary and non-profit hospitals, questions revolve around whether the state will force insurance companies to provide coverage for AIDS and AIDS-related conditions, or whether alternative insurance programs will be offered.

Without such guarantees, those hospitals could suffer financial losses from treating AIDS patients and might have to raise fees for other patients to cover such losses, the Chronicle reported.

For public hospitals, the issue is one of how to pay for AIDS patients who have become indigent because of the loss of insurance or wages.

"I would like to have heard some of the tax-paying hospitals explain some of the adverse consequences of AIDS patients on their facilities," said task force member Larry Fitzgerald, a vice president with American Medical International, which has 10 hospitals in the Houston area.

Fitzgerald said he doesn't believe hospitals avoided the hearings because of public image problems, but he said hospital administrators are aware of the public fears about AIDS.

Business of horse breeding racing at fast pace

DALLAS (AP) — More than two years before the first tracks are scheduled to open in Texas, the business of breeding and racing thoroughbreds has quickened the pace, industry spokesmen say.

Gains in sales and production, rising prices and a growing market for land by out-of-state breeders have all been attributed to the new legislation approved by voters.

"If this (pari-mutuel) hadn't passed, you can't believe the number of people who would have left, who would have taken their horse operations to Oklahoma or Louisiana," said Richard Shepherd, a veterinarian and breeder who is vice president of the Texas Thoroughbred Breeders' Association. "The horse business needed a boost."

Though many developments, such as the purchase of training-track properties, won't take place until the locations of major tracks are decided, breeders, track operators and others say approval of the gambling bill has boosted an ailing industry.

Spokesmen say a number of equine economic indicators registered gains from 1987 because of the new legislation. The number of Texas quarter horses tattooed for racing identification rose from 501 in 1987 to 2,236 in the first quarter of 1988.

A new yearling sale for racing quarter horses, scheduled in Fort Worth in September, is expected to become an annual event.

Sales company owner Gary Simpson of Oklahoma said the 300-horse sale in Fort Worth is attracting attention from top breeders around the country, who see Texas as a major new market.

"You're having farms looked at every day in the state of Texas by out-of-state people," he said. "There's been more mares bred this year than in the last two years."

Construction of new facilities is also up. A major equine medical center is planned between Dallas and Denton; its backers expect about $1 million a year in business.

"This is definitely (due to) the pari-mutuel situation," said Jake Hersman, one of 15 veterinarians behind the project.

Ten million dollars in improvements are planned at the Trinity Meadows track west of Fort Worth and at Ross Downs in Colleyville. Several other existing Texas tracks also are planning on putting in large-scale improvements to prepare for pari-mutuel operation.

David Birdwell began building the Brandywine Hills training track and stable in Mansfield two years ago, "betting on passage" of pari-mutuel legislation. He started accepting horses for boarding and training in January.

Reform and Control Act requires authorities to keep the records and forbid the INS from using them to deport anyone.

"Eventually, when someone applies for citizenship, we will still need his or her records," she said. "The confidentiality provision protects those aliens who were denied amnesty."

Ramona Flores, deputy director of the INS regional processing center in Dallas, said the 1986 Immigration

Consul says aliens would trust INS if records destroyed

EL PASO (AP) — Undocumented immigrants will trust immigration officials more if the federal government destroys records of aliens who are denied amnesty, the Mexican consul says.

"There is fear among undocumented people that if they apply for amnesty and are denied, their records can later be used to find them, and to deport them," Enrique Bu-

Jones, Mexico's consul in El Paso, said last week.

"What will happen to their records is the great question," he said. "I think if the INS would say the records will be destroyed completely, to the point of inaccessibility, confidence in the INS would rise dramatically."

But Immigration and Naturalization Service officials said the records won't be used to deport illegal immigrants after the May 4 amnesty application deadline, and that the documents will be needed in future years to process applications for amnesty, permanent residency and citizenship.

STATE IN BRIEF

Order granted to inspect Otwell's children's home

AUSTIN (AP) — A state district judge today granted an order for Texas officials to inspect a compound established by the Rev. W.N. Otwell in rural Tarrant County and to remove children found there.

State District Judge Paul Davis, who in 1986 ruled that Otwell was illegally operating an unlicensed boys' home near Fort Worth, granted the request by the attorney general's office and Texas Department of Human Services.

Otwell was not represented at the hearing. On Monday, he issued a news release saying he would not bow to a "godless" state law requiring the licensing of child care homes.

Assistant Attorney General Sue Berkel said the inspection of the compound established by Otwell this year, which has not been licensed as a boys' home, could occur as soon as the court order is signed later today. Included in the state's request for an order was the ability to call in law enforcement help to obtain documents and remove children who are not related to people at the compound. Ms. Berkel said law enforcement officials would be called on only if necessary.

3 family members killed

KAUFMAN (AP) — Three members of a family were killed Monday when their car flipped into a creek, authorities said.

Ricky Lee Minter, 32, and his daughter Cassandra Renee, 8, escaped the sinking car. But his wife, Doris Rogers Minter, 33, and two sons, Ricky Lee Minter Jr., 11, and Jonathan Lee Minter, 6, died.

The car, which was being driven by Mrs. Minter, slammed into a guardrail at a bridge on Texas Highway 34. The car flipped on its roof in the water and was sinking, but Minter was able to get out, said Joel Smith of the Texas Department of Public Safety.

He pulled Cassandra to the bank and dove back into the water, but could not find the car, Smith said.

Minter and his daughter walked more than a mile to the Kaufman County Law Enforcement Center. Kaufman County deputies searched for the car and recovered the bodies.

Father on trial for death

DALLAS (AP) — Jury selection continued Monday night in the felony trial of a Dallas man charged with fatally injuring his 3-month-old daughter.

Thomas Roosevelt Haggins, 25, who was convicted on similar charges six years ago in El Paso, was freed under an early-release program after serving less than four years of a 10-year sentence for fatally injuring a nine-month old stepdaughter, Latisha.

Haggins, a hospital orderly, is charged with fatally injuring Sheila Tasby. She suffered bruises to the head, and brain and eye hemorrhages.

An autopsy concluded she had died of several blows to the head, violent shaking and whiplash, while Haggins contends the girl died from a fall from six-foot high bassinette.

Kidnapper sentenced to life

BEAUMONT (AP) — Videotaped statements played a crucial role in the conviction and life sentence given a man in connection with May 1986 abduction of a woman who was never seen again, attorneys said.

On Monday, jurors in State District Judge Henry G. Dalehite's court took just 15 minutes to convict John Robert King of aggravated kidnapping in the disappearance of Galveston waitress Shelley Sikes. They deliberated 40 minutes before giving him life in prison and a $10,000 fine.

New Chinese Cabinet has younger members

BEIJING (AP) — China's legislature approved a new Cabinet today that includes younger members more closely tied to economic reforms of senior leader Deng Xiaoping and Communist Party General Secretary Zhao Ziyang.

The 2,850 delegates of the National People's Congress also passed constitutional amendments sanctioning private businesses and the right to transfer use of land.

Delegates confirmed 41 ministerial posts, named three vice premiers and appointed nine as state councilors to the State Council, or Cabinet.

They also trimmed the council as part of government efforts to become more efficient, eliminating posts for two vice premiers, two state councilors and four ministers.

Qian Qichen, 60, who has been vice foreign minister in charge of relations with the Soviet Union, succeeded Wu Xueqian as foreign minister, while Gen. Qin Jiwei, 74, a member of the Politburo and head of the Beijing Military Region, took over the Defense Ministry from ailing Zhang Aiping, 78.

The three vice premiers who will serve under Premier Li Peng are outgoing Foreign Minister Wu, 67, State Planning Commission Minister Yao Yilin, 71, and Tian Jiyun, 59. Yao and Tian previously served as vice premiers.

Ten of the 41 ministers are new, as are seven of the nine state councilors. The average age of the premier, vice premiers and nine councilors dropped from 67 to 61.

The state councilors include people closely identified with Zhao's economic reforms and policy of opening to the outside world, such as new State Education Commission Minister Li Tieying and Beijing Mayor Chen Xitong and Chen Junsheng, who also retained his post of secretary general of the State Council.

One constitutional amendment guarantees the rights and interests of the 21.5 million Chinese now working in 13.7 million private businesses. Private entrepreneurs, operating small food and clothing stalls and restaurants, now account for almost 13 percent of the nation's total retail sales.

Rightist party in El Salvador seeks recount

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — The rightist party that won last month's legislative elections has filed a request for a vote recount in La Union, the country's easternmost province.

The Central Elections Council last week announced that the rightist Nationalist Republican Alliance, or Arena, had won 30 of 60 seats in the unicameral legislature in nationwide elections held March 20.

All 60 seats in the Assembly were decided, as well as municipal authorities in 262 towns and cities. The council said the incumbent Christian Democratic Party won 23 Assembly seats and the National Conciliation Party won seven.

Arena, which won 178 of the municipalities, claimed it also gained an outright majority in the Assembly. It charged the Christian Democrats with trying to "steal" a deputy in La Union.

Alan Paton, author of 'Cry, the Beloved Country,' dies

From Staff and Wire Reports

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — Alan Paton, who wrote a searing depiction of black suffering under apartheid in his novel "Cry, the Beloved Country," died early today of throat cancer. He was 85.

Paton, the nation's foremost writer and a leading voice against apartheid, died at his estate outside the coastal city of Durban, said his wife, Anne.

"He went peacefully, happy to have been in his own bed," Mrs. Paton said.

Paton was hospitalized last week at St. Augustine's Hospital in Durban, 400 miles southeast of Johannesburg, where he underwent unsuccessful throat surgery. He was released Monday so he could spend his final hours at home, Mrs. Paton said.

"Cry, the Beloved Country," Paton's first novel, is cited as the most compelling story of the heartbreak of South Africa's system of racial segregation. Published in 1948, it tells the story of a Zulu priest's search for his son, who is wanted by police for the murder of a white man.

The novel has outsold every book in South Africa except the Bible. It has sold 15 million copies in 20 languages and was made into a movie and a play.

"I have one great fear in my heart," says the main black character at the end of the book. "One day when they (the whites) have turned to loving they will find we are turned to hating."

That passage has been quoted often by Anglican Archbishop Desmond Tutu, the prominent anti-apartheid campaigner and Nobel Peace prize laureate.

The Rev. Denis Hurley, Roman Catholic archbishop of Durban, praised Paton for "his deep concern for people and for justice."

President P.W. Botha said of Paton: "Although he was a noted critic of the government, he was respected for his sincerity, never failing to temper his criticism with a recognition of positive developments and the realities of the situation."

Paton, who was white, wrote only four works of fiction, but he spent decades writing articles, speaking and campaigning against apartheid, which provides privilege for South Africa's 5 million whites and controls the 26.5 million blacks.

In his third novel, "Ah, But Your Land is Beautiful," Paton covered the first 10 years of National Party rule, up to 1958. The novel was written in 1961, 28 years after "Too Late the Phalarope," his novel about mixed-race marriages. Paton said the reason he waited so long to write another novel was he had lost faith in the medium as a means of expressing history accurately.

"Ah, But Your Land is Beautiful" told of resistance to the Nationalists' introduction of major apartheid laws, including bans on interracial marriage and sex; control of blacks' movements; confiscation of black land; and the creation of a major security apparatus.

Paton vowed to keep silent after the 1968 banning of the multi-racial Liberal Party he helped found, but he began speaking out publicly again

PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP) — A Cabinet minister said Panama will be flexible with American companies caught between local law and U.S. economic sanctions aimed at ousting the nation's strongman, Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega.

In another development, hundreds of teachers peacefully demonstrated Monday, chanting "We don't want communism!" and "Pineapple-face, you must go!" a reference to Noriega's jowly, pockmarked face.

The teachers demonstrated more than two hours at the Ministry of Education Monday, demanding to be paid. Opposition leaders plan daily demonstrations throughout the week, even though recent protests in the 10-month campaign by the opposition to oust Noriega have been poorly attended or blocked by police.

The problem faced by U.S. companies was discussed Monday by Commerce and Industries Minister Mario Rognoni at a meeting with 30 representatives of American companies.

"The way the act has come out, if they comply with the Panamanian laws they are defying the American law and if they comply with the American law they are defying the Panamanian law. We hope to find a medium solution," he said.

Friday, President Reagan invoked a law banning Americans and U.S. companies from making tax and other payments to the government.

Noriega, head of Panama's 15,000-member Defense Forces and the power behind the civilian government, is under separate indictments by two federal grand juries in Florida on narcotics trafficking charges.

The United States recognizes Eric Arturo Delvalle as Panama's president. Reagan ordered the tax payments to be directed into an escrow account set up for Delvalle, who was deposed in February after trying to fire Noriega.

The order was the latest in a string of economic sanctions enacted by the Reagan administration in a bid to force Noriega to step down.

Rognoni said the government is looking for ways to keep American companies operating in Panama, where U.S. investment totals about $3.5 billion.

Much depends on how Washington interprets the law, he said.

"We are sad that the measures are going to affect American companies that have been traditionally friends of Panama, that have been part of our development," Rognoni said. "They have been with us many decades, some of them from the start of our country."

Fred Denton, executive director of the American Chamber of Commerce in Panama City, said Rognoni made no threats against American companies.

The Treasury Department is expected to issue clearer guidelines and exceptions to the order soon.

The United States previously ordered $50 million in Panamanian funds frozen in American banks, provoking an economic crisis that has kept Panamanian banks closed since March 3.

The government has failed to meet public payrolls for over a month. Panamanians with paychecks have been unable to cash them or gain access to their savings.

Panamanian industry could be "virtually paralyzed" within two months because of the bank closures, said Carlos Valencia, president of the Panama Industrial Association.

U.S. pleased suspects won't be let go

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — The U.S. Embassy applauded a decision by President Jose Napoleon Duarte that revoked an amnesty for three men charged in the 1985 slaying of six Americans.

Duarte cited an international treaty as the legal basis for denying amnesty to the three suspects, said Rene Valdivieso, the secretary of the Martial Court, who announced the decision Monday.

"On the issue of amnesty, it has been the position of the U.S. government that this attack on innocent unarmed persons should not go unpunished," said U.S. Embassy spokesman Joseph McManus. "We welcome President Duarte's decision to forward the case to the courts where evidence can be brought and a decision rendered."

Thirteen people were killed on June 19, 1985, when assailants wearing Salvadoran army uniforms opened fire with automatic weapons on patrons at two outdoor cafes in San Salvador. Among the dead were four off-duty Marines and two U.S. businessmen.

The Marines, who were guards at the U.S. Embassy, wore civilian clothes and sat at two tables with other young people when the attackers drove up.

A little-known Cruz Urban Guerrilla Commandos, claimed responsibility for the killings. The group is an offshoot of one of the five guerrilla armies that form the Farabundo Marti National Liberation Front, which has been fighting the U.S.-backed Salvadoran government for eight years.

Juan Garcia Melendez and Jose Dimas Aguilar are charged with helping plan the "Pink Zone massacre," named after the fashionable district of shops and restaurants where the killings occurred.

William Rivas Bolanos is the only one of the three the government alleges was among the gunmen.

None of the three has been tried. Eight other people, who are fugitives, allegedly took part in the crime.

Duarte's government decreed a broad amnesty in November 1987 as part of a regional peace accord.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Contras to resume talks

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — Nicaraguan rebels agreed to a call from the leftist Sandinista government to resume technical talks on a cease-fire plan that had stalled over arms shipments to the U.S.-supported Contras.

In another development, the opposition newspaper La Prensa received a fresh supply of newsprint from the government Monday and said it would resume publication today for the first time since April 5.

Cristiana Chamorro, La Prensa assistant director, said the paper received 42 tons of newsprint from the government-owned monopoly at mid-day Monday, too late for La Prensa editors to put out an afternoon edition.

La Prensa had attributed the cutoff of newsprint to "discrimination of the government." It noted that Barricada, the Sandinista party mouthpiece, and the pro-government El Nuevo Diario continued to publish without interruption.

Iran claims major advance

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Iran today claimed its forces advanced into northeast Iraq, killing or wounding more than 2,000 Iraqis and capturing border highlands. Iraq said the assault was repulsed.

Iraq reported it fired a long-range missile into Tehran and two into the northwestern city of Tabriz. Shipping executives said Iran attacked and set ablaze a Saudi Arabian tanker in the Persian Gulf.

Iran said there were civilian casualties in the attacks on its cities. It did not specify how many.

Iran's official Islamic Republic News Agency, monitored in Nicosia, claimed Iraqi warplanes today dropped chemical bombs on Iranian troops in Sulaimaniyeh province as Iraq's forces were losing ground in the latest offensive in the 7½-year-old war. IRNA said Iranian troops were equipped with gas masks and protective clothing, "but many were injured." It did not elaborate.

Graham opens China tour

BEIJING (AP) — U.S. evangelist Billy Graham today opened a 16-day tour of China, where he will preach and sightsee.

"This is my first time to set foot on Chinese soil," the 69-year-old Southern Baptist minister said on arrival. "It's something I have looked forward to and dreamed of all my life."

Graham, his wife, Ruth, and their eldest son came at the invitation of the Chinese People's Association for Friendship with Foreign Countries and the China Christian Council.

The evangelist, who has preached in more than 60 countries, including the Soviet Union and Eastern Europe, said he was visiting as a tourist and pilgrim to his wife's birthplace.

Sandy Lyle...from bunker, world's premier golfer.

Lyle stands alone after Amen finish

By GORDON S. WHITE Jr.
N.Y. Times News Service

AUGUSTA, Ga. — Sandy Lyle pulled himself together after nearly falling apart around Amen Corner, then dug himself out of a bunker with one of the more memorable major-tournament shots to win the 52d Masters on Sunday.

With the victory, Lyle suddenly stood alone as the premier golfer in the world.

Seve Ballesteros of Spain and Greg Norman of Australia may still have their champions, but at this moment, Alexander Walter Barr Lyle, a 30-year-old who was born in England of Scottish parents and now lives in England, is simply the best there is.

Without the eye-catching, macho swagger of Ballesteros or Norman, the quiet and almost bashful, 6-foot-1-inch, curly haired Lyle has all the shots those two have. What counts more, he has many more impressive victories than they have.

While Lyle may have the edge on Norman and Ballesteros now, it is probably true that they join him in making up the finest trio of golfers in the world. No American golfer is at the same level. Mark McCumber, Paul Azinger, Ben Crenshaw, Chip Beck, Payne Stewart, Tom Kite, Mark Calcavecchia and others are doing well, but the current center of power in golf is overseas.

Two of the last three majors have been won by British golfers. Last year, Nick Faldo of England won the British Open, a tournament no American has won since 1963. Five of the last 11 Masters have been won by foreign golfers: Gary Player of South Africa in 1976, Ballesteros in 1980 and 1983, Bernhard Langer of West Germany in 1985, and now Lyle, the first British golfer to win at Augusta National.

Golf came naturally to Lyle, the son of Alex Lyle, a club pro and greens-ju keeper. Sandy Lyle grew up on fairways and greens, and broke 80 before he was 10.

While there are thousands of golfers with the swing, the putting stroke and the other mechanical talents to score well, there are few with the courage and temperament necessary to prevent collapse of nerve.

"He is totally unflappable," Calcavecchia said after finishing second by a stroke Sunday. "I've never seen him lose his temper on the course."

Calcavecchia said he had no doubt Lyle would reach the 18th green with his second shot from the huge bunker 145 yards away, and added that he never doubted Lyle would sink the 10-foot birdie putt. Lyle, however, was discouraged as he walked off the 18th tee moments after driving his 1-iron shot into the bunker. "I thought it was over," he said.

The ball had a decent lie — sitting up on the sand, not down in it — but twice before he hit the shot, Lyle said, he had to "reach down into the bottom of my stomach" to regroup.

Still, with the nerve derived from hundreds of pressure experiences in competitive golf, Lyle hit a nearly perfect shot out of the sand to the back of the 18th green. When the ball rolled back and stopped only 10 feet above the cup, Lyle was a stroke from victory — a stroke he sent into the heart of the cup.

The historic shot from the sand trap will go down in Masters lore, with Larry Mize's chip into the cup on the second playoff hole to beat Norman last year, and with Gene Sarazen's fairway wood for a double eagle at No. 15 in 1935 to force a playoff he then won over Craig Wood.

The Masters was the latest in an impressive list of victories that has moved Lyle to the top. He is a member of both the American and European professional tours, and this was his third victory of 1988 on the PGA Tour: he won the Greater Greensboro Open the week before the Masters and the Phoenix Open in February.

Lyle, who had won the Greensboro event in 1986 for his first triumph on the American circuit, also won the Players Championship in 1987, giving him four American triumphs in the last 54 weeks including one major.

Lyle's parents, natives of Glasgow, moved to Shrewsbury, England, in 1955 when his father took a club job there. Three years later, Sandy was born in Shrewsbury. He has never lived in Scotland.

Halos win to even series 2-2

From Staff Reports

SAN ANTONIO— Dan Grunhard hit two solo homers to lead the Midland Angels to an 8-2 victory over the San Antonio Missions Monday to square the Texas League series at 2-2.

The teams play the final game tonight before the Angels move on to El Paso for a five-game series.

Chris Collins worked six innings to get the win and Greg LaFever took the loss.

JOE MITCHELL provided the scoring punch and Adrian Meagher and Jamie Brisco combined to pitch a four-hitter to lead El Paso to a 5-1 victory over the Wichita Pilots.

Two games, Shreveport at Arkansas and Tulsa at Jackson, were postponed because of rain.

Mitchell had a two-run homer in the second inning and a run-scoring single in the third inning to account for three of the El Paso runs.

Jim Tatum singled home Wichita's only run in the seventh inning.

The trouble with Gurney....he doesn't look like a race driver

The thing about Dan Gurney is, he never looked like a race driver. Until he got in the car.

He had these collar-ad good looks, a dimpled smile, all his teeth and hair. If you knew he was a sportsman, you might guess tennis.

You wouldn't be at all surprised to learn that he was born on Long Island and that Dad was with the Metropolitan Opera and Mom was involved in Junior League charities. If you knew there was a vehicle involved in what he did, you'd guess sailboat. Nobody in the Gurney family ever had a wrench in his hand before Dan.

Murray

They didn't make the machine Dan Gurney couldn't race. You name it, motorcycle, sports car, stock car, Indy car, off-road truck. Oval at Indy, the streets of Monte Carlo or in the rain at night through the trees of LeMans or hairpin turns in the Pyrenees, Gurney went fast — and often first. You may have noticed in the recent story on the late, great Jimmy Clark that the driver Jimmy most feared to see in his rear-view mirror was Dan Gurney.

CLARK WAS not alone. A whole generation of racers grew up to curse under their breath and stand on the gas pedal when Gurney's car showed up.

He was more than just a chauffeur. Gurney understood as well as any mechanic the complex explosions of the automobile engine and the delicate machineries of handling and tuning. He was as American as iced tea but the racing Establishment was always surprised that he spoke English and didn't wear a monocle because he was so identified with Continental racing.

Gurney actually learned to drive in the hilly roadways around Riverside but went to Europe where he was so successful so early that the great Enzo Ferrari himself signed him up.

IF IT HAD wheels, Gurney could win with it — the Belgian Grand Prix, the French Grand Prix twice, the Mexican Grand Prix, Brand's Hatch. He won the first Grand Prix ever won by Porsche. He drove Jaguars, Cobras, Lotuses. He won at LeMans with A.J. Foyt.

European grand Prix racers usually steered clear of Indianapolis. The brutish, claustrophobic, recklessly competitive 500 miles there were a far cry from a champagne-and-silkscarf run around the French Riviera or the Black Forest. Some great foreign drivers, notably Juan Fangio had taken one look at Indy's turns and gone gladly back to Mille Miglia.

Gurney not only teed it up at Indy with the best and toughest of American drivers, he was in a large sense responsible for the rear-engine revolution there.

The circumstances were that Gurney not only drove in the 1962 race, he paid the fare for the English designer, Colin Chapman, to go to the Speedway and investigate the possibility of putting a Ford power plant in a Lotus chassis.

They made history. The next year, Chapman returned with two Lotus Fords. Gurney piloted one and Clark the other. Clark finished second, Gurney seventh, and Indy racing was never the same again.

"It didn't take Einstein to realize engines should be in the rear," Gurney says with a shrug. "Indy just didn't want to do it."

GURNEY is one of only five drivers who finished second two years in a row at Indy and the only one who finished second, second, third and then retired.

He didn't leave the pits, just the track. He never won there in the cockpit but the Eagle cars he designed and built won three times.

The trouble with Gurney is, he still has the look of the all-American boy on his way to football practice. They've never had to peel Dan Gurney off a wall or cut him out of charred wreckage. In his 50s, he doesn't look markedly different from the kid who used to drag on 1-5 and the Newhall grade in the '50s.

He'll climb into a race car again Saturday at the Toyota Grand Prix of Long Beach (California) in an 11-turn, 10-lap pro-celebrity race competition in which a dozen of America's brand names from football fields to TV sitcoms will find out what it's like out there in cars with full roll cages, window nets, on-board fire extinguishers and competition springs.

Unless Robert Redford shows up, the one who looks most like a movie star will probably be Gurney. It's not till they drop the flag and head for the corners that Dan looks like a race driver. Then he looks like what he was: one of the best, if not the best, ever.

Soto four-hits Giants

Associated Press

Mario Soto has learned his lessons well.

Some of the educating has come painfully — Soto underwent shoulder surgery and missed all but the first few weeks of last season while on the disabled list.

Soto took a major step in coming back from that hiatus with a strong spring training. After faltering on opening day, the former ace of the Cincinnati pitching staff threw a four-hitter Wednesday night in leading the Reds past the San Francisco Giants 4-0.

"I used to have fun throwing 145 pitches in a game and trying to blow people away," Soto said after he walked three and struck out five. "Now I try to get out of an inning with five or six pitches."

Soto has learned how to pitch without heat. He once threw 95 mph and loved to challenge hitters. Now, his fastball travels about 85 mph and Soto has become a trickster.

While Soto was making the biggest step in his comeback, the Chicago Cubs and Pittsburgh Pirates continued their surprising early ascensions. Pittsburgh beat Philadelphia 5-1 and Chicago took St. Louis 6-1.

Soto, who also capped a four-run rally in the fourth inning with an RBI single, pitched his first complete game since April 24, 1986, when he shut out Houston on a three-hitter. He started six games last year in an aborted comeback attempt and his last victory was May 11. He went on the disabled list to stay May 22.

The Pirates played a game ahead of the Cubs in the NL East. Certainly, it's early to be talking about standings, but, in Pittsburgh, they rarely get to see the top of the division.

Pirates 5, Phillies 1

The Pirates played a game ahead of the Cubs in the NL East. Certainly, it's early to be talking about standings, but, in Pittsburgh, they rarely get to see the top of the division.

Orioles' Larry Sheets dives back into first as Indians' Willie Upshaw makes the tag.

Cubs 6, Cardinals 0

Greg Maddux, who pitched a shut-out last week, almost had another one. He blanked St. Louis for eight innings, then Bob Horner doubled for the 1,000th hit of his career and Terry Pendleton singled him home.

Chicago, off to its best start since winning seven of its first eight games in 1985, improved to 5-1, the NL East's best record. St. Louis dipped to 1-5.

American League

Indians 7, Orioles 2

"You hope it doesn't end, but you know anything can happen," Indians left-hander Greg Swindell said night after he pitched his second complete game of the season, putting Cleveland in first place in the American League East with a 7-2 victory over the winless Baltimore Orioles.

The victory was Cleveland's sixth straight after losing to Texas on opening day. Coupled with New York's 17-9 loss at Toronto earlier Monday, it put the Indians a half-game ahead of the 5-1 Yankees. That game was the only other contest in the AL, with Milwaukee at Boston postponed by rain.

The Indians, off to their best start since 1966, haven't been alone in first at any point in any season since April 16, 1983. They shared first briefly in May 1986.

Blue Jays 17, Yankees 9

The Yankees suffered their first loss in what nearly was the longest nine-inning game in American League history. Kelly Gruber hit two home runs, and Rick Leach and Ernie Whitt had two RBI apiece in a six-run first inning for Toronto, which had 20 hits.

The Yankees had won their first five games for the club's best start since 1933.

Bullets, Pacers post NBA wins

Associated Press

Playoff pressure and a clock ticking toward zero brought out the best in Darrell Walker and John Long.

Walker's 20-footer with one second remaining Monday night gave the Washington Bullets an 86-85 victory over Atlanta, and the Indiana Pacers edged New Jersey 95-93 when Long hit an 18-footer at the buzzer.

Indiana's victory left the Pacers in seventh place in the five-team race for three NBA Eastern Conference playoff spots. Washington and New York, which beat Detroit 114-111 in overtime, are tied for eighth, another half-game back, and Philadelphia is in 10th, 1 1/2 games behind the Bullets and Knicks.

Walker, averaging less than six points per game, came off the bench to lead the Bullets with 19 points. He has been the subject of criticism after Washington traded Michael Adams and Jay Vincent to Denver for Walker and Mark Alarie.

Elsewhere, it was Philadelphia 115, Milwaukee 102; Denver 123, Phoenix 119; and Utah 113, Golden State 102.

Atlanta made up a 19-6 deficit and pulled ahead 85-83 on John Battle's eight-footer with 50 seconds left. The Bullets then made it 86-84 when John Williams hit one of two free throws with 32 seconds left.

Atlanta's Spud Webb missed a short jumper with six seconds left and the Bullets called a timeout to set up Walker's game-winner.

76ers 115, Bucks 102
Philadelphia stayed close in the playoff race and broke a four-game losing streak as Charles Barkley scored 31 points at Milwaukee.

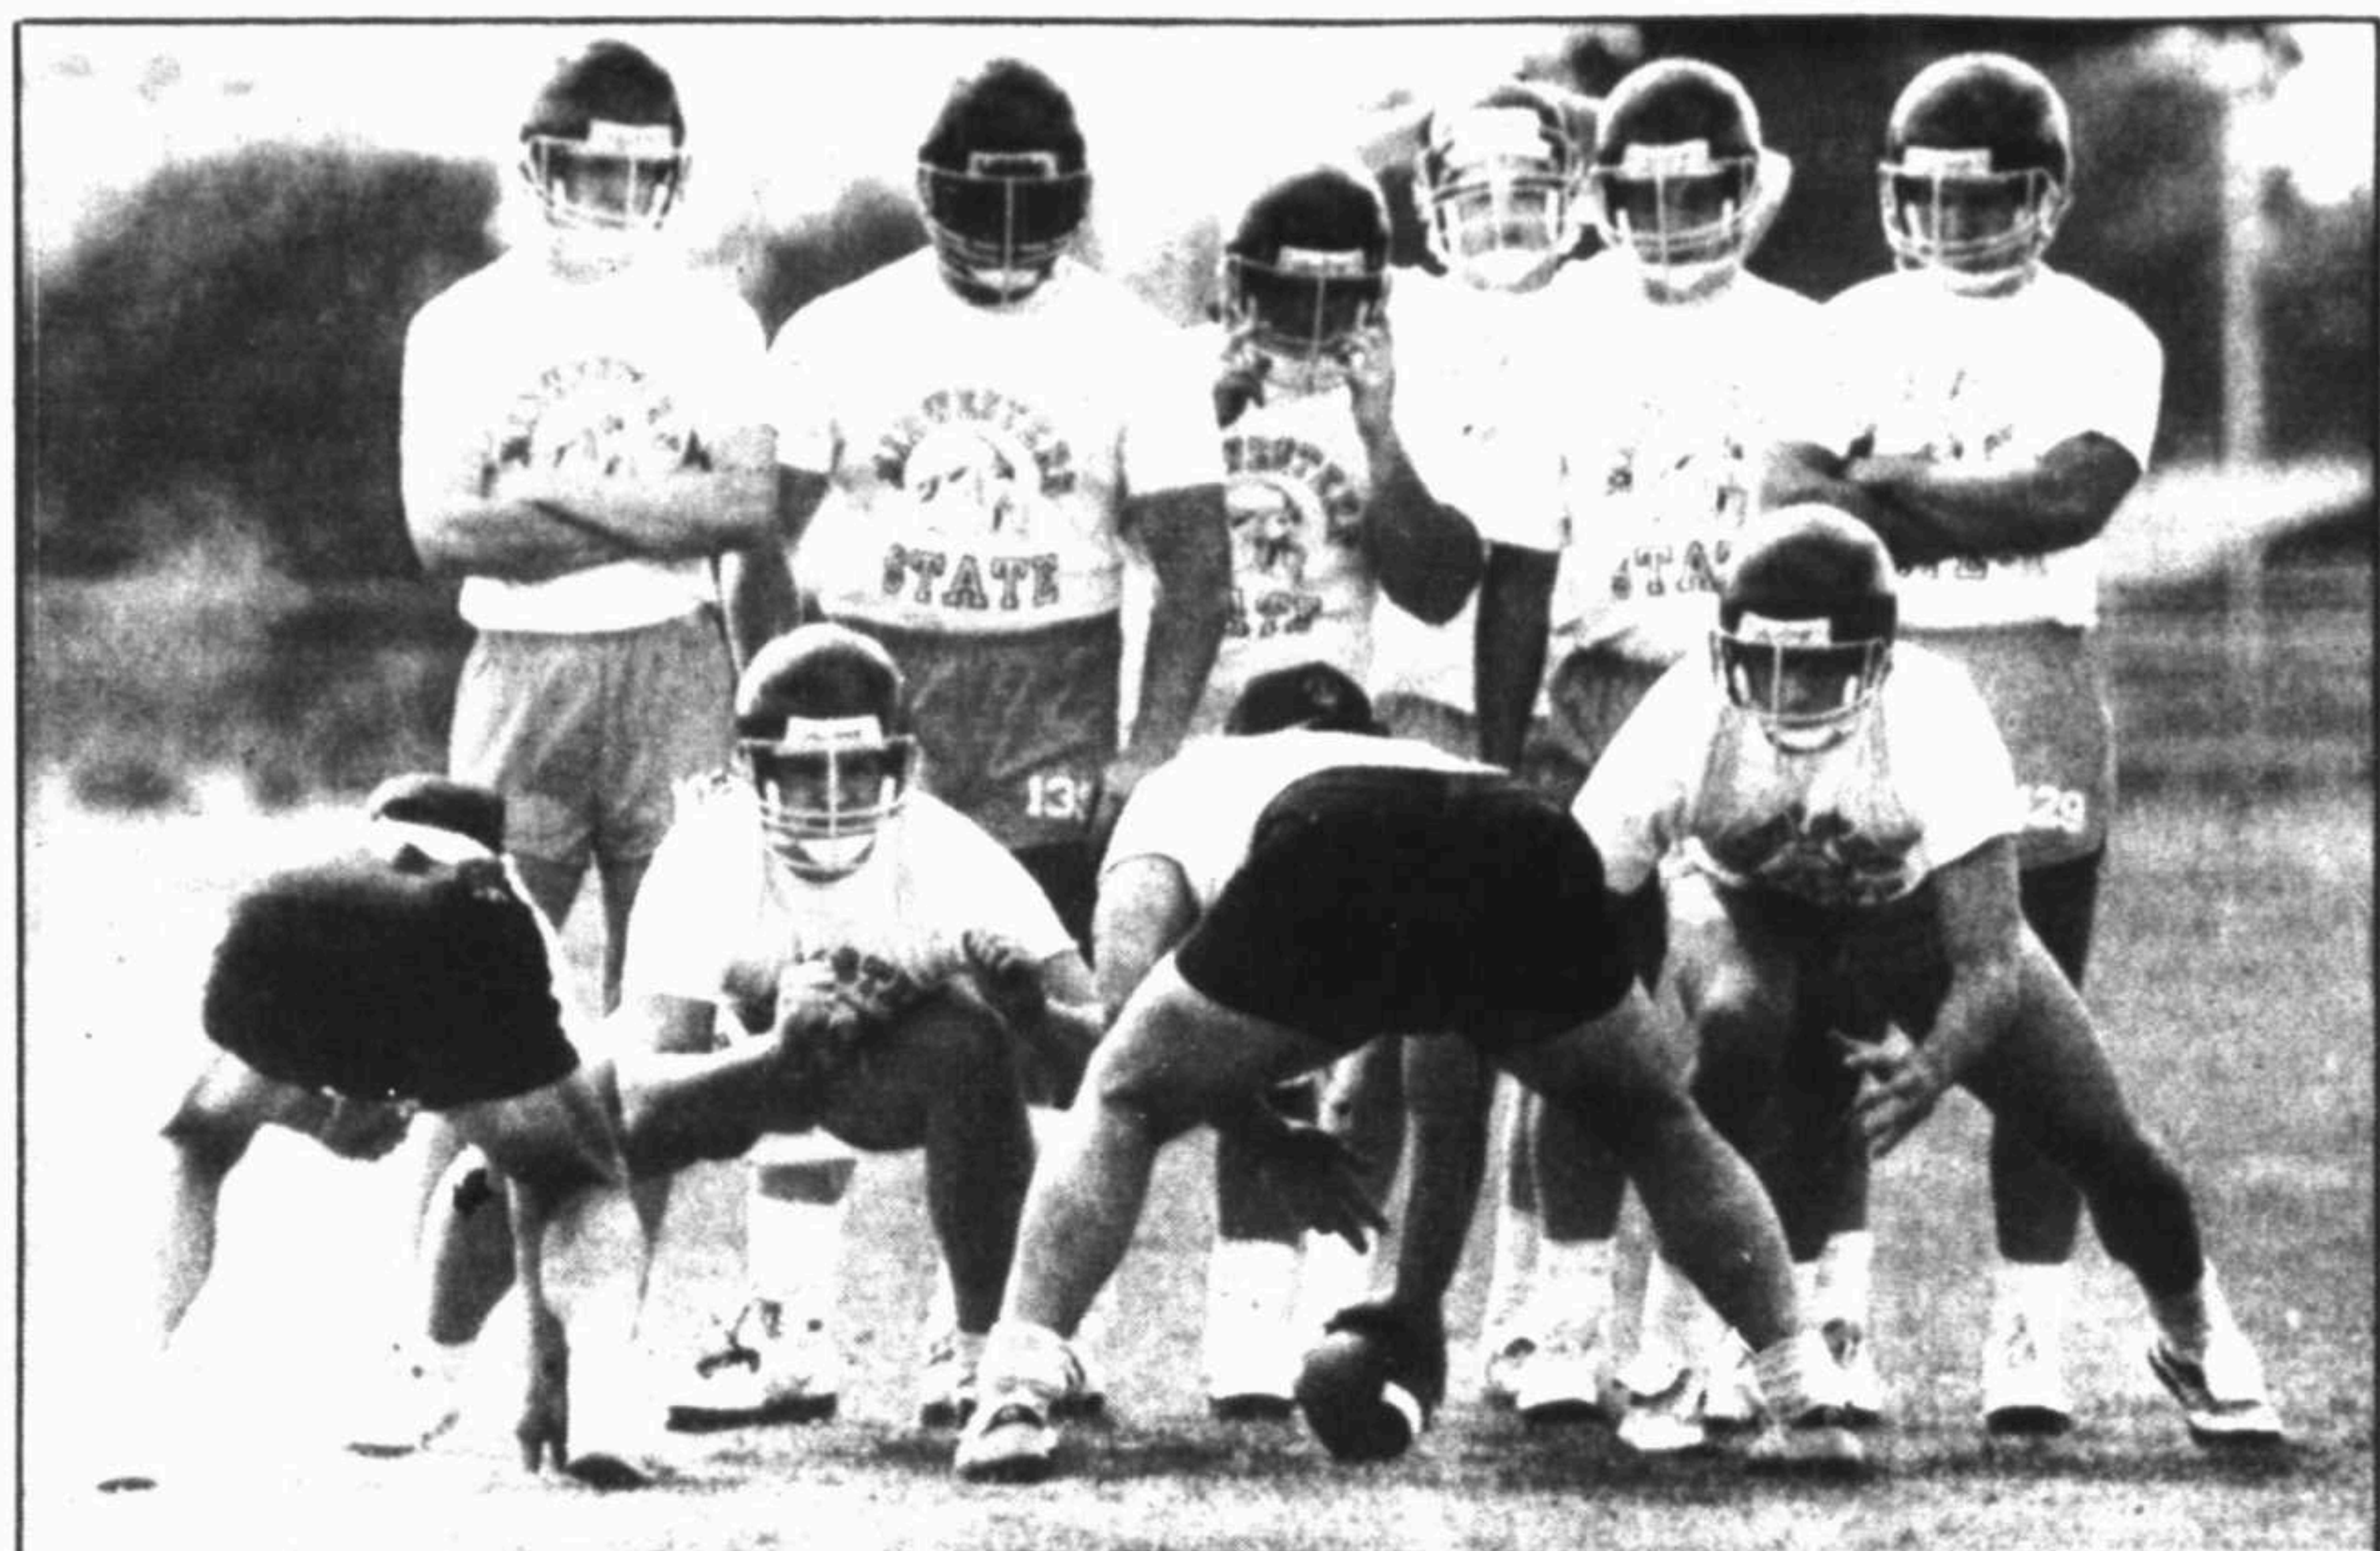

Knicks 114, Pistons 111

New York stayed tied with Washington as Patrick Ewing scored 36 points, including a go-ahead turnaround jumper with 23 seconds left in overtime against Detroit.

Jazz 113, Warriors 102
Utah broke a three-game losing streak as Thurl Bailey scored 11 of his 26 points during a decisive 198 run at Golden State.

Nuggets 123, Suns 119
Denver won for the 11th time in 12 games and broke a four-game losing streak at Phoenix as Lafayette Lever scored 26 points and Michael Adams 23, including five 3-point goals to stretch his NBA-record streak to 37.

Kentucky Derby: The Woody and Wayne show again?

First Practice

Midwestern State University at Wichita Falls MSU opens the season against Howard Payne begins spring practice in preparation for its first season since the sport was abandoned in 1956. Sept. 3.

Winning Colors, Forty-Niner duel?

By STEVEN CRIST
N.Y. Times News Service

The outlook for the Kentucky Derby May 7 is starting to seem a lot like the Derby picture of just four years ago.

Consider the two leading characters: The first is a colt bred and owned by Claiborne Farm, trained by Woody Stephens, and sired by the nation's leading stallion. He spends winters in Florida and then heads to Keeneland for his final preparations. Four years ago, the part was played by Swale; this time, Forty Niner fits the role.

THE SECOND is a stout filly trained by D. Wayne Lukas, who wins her first start against males in smashing, front-running style and suddenly becomes a hot Derby horse. Four years ago it was Althea, who won the 1984 Arkansas Derby, and this time it is Winning Colors, who trounced the boys in the Santa Anita Derby Saturday. As Lukas said after the victory by Winning Colors, "It looks like it's going to be the Woody and Wayne show again."

Lukas, though, is hoping for a different outcome this time. In 1984, Swale collared Althea on the far turn and ran off to an easy Derby victory while the filly finished 19th as the favorite. Winning Colors will try to join Regret in 1915 and Genuine Risk in 1980 as the only fillies to win the roses.

FORTY NINER and Winning Colors were the big winners in the weekend's round of Derby prep races, while Seeking the Gold and the California colts took backward steps.

Forty Niner solidified his position as the Derby favorite with the best race of his career, a five-length victory over Buoy in the Lafayette Stakes at Keeneland Friday.

His final time of 1:22 for seven furlongs was outstanding, and even his final furlong in an apparently dull 0:13.2 was a lot better than it looks. The Keeneland stretch was very tiring, and the final furlong of four other seven-furlong races on the card was timed in more than 14 seconds.

The race did little to answer the widespread doubts about Forty Niner's ability to negotiate the mile-and-a-quarter Derby distance, but the colt is clearly flourishing and is simply a faster horse than his rivals at this stage of their careers. He will have his final tune-up in the mile-and-a-half Kentucky Stakes at Keeneland Saturday.

WINNING COLORS earned herself a trip to the Derby with a 7 1/4-length front-running romp in the Santa Anita Derby. Was she that good or were the eight colts who couldn't get near her that bad? A little of both, probably. The daughter of Caro, bigger than any of her eight male rivals Saturday, is unlikely to scamper off to such an untested lead in a full Derby field.

Haugen loses, then wins back IBF title

TACOMA, Wash. (AP) — Greg Haugen is still the International Boxing Federation lightweight champion, but for 30 minutes he thought he had been dethroned by Miguel Santana.

In what had to be one of professional boxing's most bizarre endings, there were two verdicts: initially a Santana victory and then a Haugen win.

About a half-hour after Santana's hand had been raised in apparent victory by referee Jim Cassidy of Portland, Ore., when Haugen could not answer the bell for the 12th round because of a severe cut in his right eyebrow, Haugen entered the postfight interview room to congratulate Santana.

That's when IBF officials came in and reversed themselves. They said Haugen, not Santana, was the real winner.

Haugen was too stunned to even say anything before leaving to have the two-inch gash in his right eyebrow repaired at St. Joseph Hospital in Tacoma. Santana, a native of Puerto Rico who speaks only Spanish, sat in his chair and smiled.

Santana's trainer, Lenny DeJesus, of New York City, thought his fighter had been robbed.

"My fighter's hand was raised in victory and my fighter was awarded this fight," said the distressed DeJesus.

"I knew the fight was going to be stopped because the cut was one of the worst I've seen in years," said George Chermers, Haugen's 73-year-old trainer. "I knew if he (Haugen) was ahead on the scorecards he was going to win the fight because that's the way the IBF rules are."

It's the balk of the game

By BEN WALKER
AP Baseball Writer

Take me out to the balkgame. This year, the talk is balk in the big leagues. They're everywhere — 73 in 73 games so far — and the balking shows no sign of slowing down.

"Are you telling me this was the intent of the thing, turning this into a farce?" ranted Milwaukee Brewers president Bud Selig, who saw his team called for an American League record five balks Sunday.

Don't worry, Bud. Your club has plenty of company. At this rate, last year's record of 356 balks will be broken next month.

In the AL, where six balks were called in the first week last season, an absurd 51 have been committed. In the National League, which accounted for 217 balks in 1987, there have been 22 compared to 13 last year.

Bob Welch...it's frustrating.

AND MORE are coming. "Gentlemen, this is the way it's going to be," AL umpire Larry Barnett said. "If they continue to abuse the rule, we'll continue to see what happened. Believe me, I'm not in a contest with the other six crew chiefs to call the most balks."

Barnett's crew detected six in the Milwaukee-New York Yankees game. Umpire Rocky Roe saw Balb No. 6 and dramatically waved his arms, prompting Brewers manager Tom Trebelhorn to say: "If you're going to call a balk, call it. But he put on a show, like he was finishing one of Tchaikovsky's biggest numbers."

Fittingly, Tchaikovsky's Symphony No. 6 was entitled "Pathétique."

That's how the balk situation is this year — pathetic.

"It's bad for the game of baseball," Kansas City manager John Wathan said after a five-balk affair. "I don't like it at all. It could be a mess."

IT ALREADY is. Pitchers are paranoid, managers are moaning and fans are getting fed up with the constant interruptions.

Umpires, meanwhile, are doing their jobs. AL President Bobby Brown and National League President Bary Giamatti instructed their men in blue this year to make sure pitchers come to a "discernable" stop in their set position and do not shuffle their feet.

That's been the rule, and umpires called it that way during spring training. Many players, however, guessed the crackdown would stop when the regular season started.

Guess again. "It's definitely frustrating," said

Oakland pitcher Bob Welch, called for three balks Sunday. "It plays with your mind."

MILWAUKEE'S Ted Higuera, who committed two balks last season, was also flagged three times Sunday.

"This year, balks are a big problem for pitchers," Higuera said. "It's hard to concentrate. I don't understand it."

Some pitchers are so worried they've gone to full windups with runners on third base, rather than risk going to a set and balking home a run, as Baltimore's Mike Boddicker did twice during the weekend. Those windups also have more runners trying to steal home, as Minnesota's Dan Gladden did successfully Friday night.

film. If he can do that one time, there's no reason why he can't do it 50 times (a game)," Bowes said.

BOWES acknowledges Jones isn't quick enough for defense; he plans to put Jones on the offensive line only, although the idea of a 7-footer with arms raised rushing the quarterback is tempting.

Bowes wants Jones to get down to about 310, and then plans to build him back up to 320 or so, with muscle. It might take two years. Jones will sit out as a redshirt freshman year and Bowes hopes he'll be able to play by his third year in school.

His weight already cost him a chance to compete in his favorite sport — wrestling. After winning the junior varsity championship as a 6-8, 336-pound freshman in his first year in the sport, the state school sports association passed a rule that banned anyone weighing more than 275 pounds from wrestling.

Vermont raises biggest gr idder

By MIKE RECHT

ESSEX JUNCTION, Vt. (AP) — Robert Jones is about to enter the college football world of offensive linemen, a world of obscurity in which players are seldom noticed, seldom publicized and never get the game ball.

But Jones might change all that. Stories already are being written about him, and he's only 17, still in high school.

What makes him noticeable is his height and his weight. Jones is 7 feet tall and weighs 348 pounds.

That kind of size helped make him a northern section all-state player as a lineman on both offense and defense while playing for Division I state champion Essex Junction. Last season was his first full season on offense.

NEIGHBORING NEW Hampshire will be next to get a look at him when he enrolls in the fall at the University of New Hampshire.

UNH Coach Bill Bowes said Jones is the biggest player he's seen play football in 22 years, and that certainly had something to do with the Division I Yankee Conference school offering a scholarship when no one else did.

Indiana took a look at him, and so did Syracuse, Penn State, Maine and Northeastern, but it never went any farther, Jones said.

"People hear 350, 6-11 (Jones says 7-0) and they think 'no movement, no quickness,'" Bowes said. "But he has some quickness."

Watching Jones on film, Bowes saw him "take a blocker and throw him off like nothing, and then run to the sideline and make the tackle. If he can move his feet a little, they're not going to go through him."

"He's a project, but let's be frank. If he were a totally accomplished player now, we wouldn't be getting him," Bowes said.

"But if we're going to take a risk, we may as well do it with a guy that big who shows some evidence on

Shooter didn't even yell 'fore'

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — When Kurt N. Tietz told his buddies at work Monday that he'd had lots of luck on the golf course during the weekend, he wasn't talking about a hole-in-one.

Tietz, 35, was talking about the .36-caliber slug that hit him in the back Saturday while he was sitting in a golf cart at the South Grove Golf Course.

"If it had been in the spine, neck or head, it would be a different story today," said Tietz, who was back on the job as an assistant engineer with the Indianapolis Power & Light Co.

"Can't get much luckier than that. Any other direction, and..."

Tietz said he was waiting to tee off when he leaned forward to pick up a soft drink can and the stray bullet struck him in the lower back.

"It is kind of hard to explain," said Tietz. "It felt like being hit by a golf ball — a drive on the fly — at full force."

When Tietz and his partner, Steve Flecker, couldn't find the wayward golf ball, they began to examine the injury.

"It pushed the shirt in behind the bullet and it was sticking out a little like a nail," Tietz said.

Doctors at Methodist Hospital made an incision around the bullet and then grabbed the material and pulled the slug out, said Tietz, who was released from the hospital after being treated.

Flecker said neither he, Tietz nor any of the golfers nearby recalled hearing a shot fired.

"It was kind of scary, a little unnerving. It came out of nowhere," Flecker said.

However, firefighters from Station 23 near the course told police they thought they had heard gunshots minutes before they were called to the golf course to give first aid.

Despite the scare, Tietz and Flecker said they planned to return to the course this weekend for another round.

"The odds of that happening once are ridiculous. The odds of it happening twice aren't even worth figuring out," Flecker said.

Bud Baker abandons 'camping out' plans

From Staff Reports

Bud Baker cashed in at the Kerrville Bass Club Invitational on Lake Amistad last weekend.

The Midland angler, who is sponsored by Cajun Boats 100 and Falcon Marine, won the $1,000 first prize and, if there is such a thing as a photo finish in fishing, this was it.

"I caught five bass weighing 14.95 pounds. That was the winning weight," says Bud. "It was just one ounce more than second place and beat out third place by just two ounces."

So now, instead of camping out in a tent, Baker will compete in the big bass tournament at Kentucky Lake in Tennessee April 30-May 1 in style.

"I just made reservations for a motel room. And I bought a new top for my boat," informs Baker. "So I made good use of my prize money."

Bud will be part of the six-man Cajun-100 National team at Kentucky Lake, where first prize will be $10,000.

Baker also made some noise as a hot bowler a couple of seasons back. "But I cooled off, so I've been sticking with my other expensive hobby, fishing, lately."

WT Fishing

Variety abounded in catches at Lake E.V. Spence last weekend, but the striped bass provided most of the action with Darrell Lester landing a 28 pounder and an 18 1/4 pounder.

Black Bass were active and white bass reports were encouraging.

Handy Driver, Midland, took a 3 1/2 pound small-mouth and Mayria Ammon, Andrews, took 13 white bass out of Wildcat Fish-A-Rama. At Paint Creek, Doug Christensen and Jim Cauthen, Midland, landed nine blacks, the largest 3 3/4 pounds....Shane Dixon and Jeremy Jones, Andrews, took nine channels....

At Lake Thomas, several strings of 10 to 20 crappie were brought in with the catches in one to three feet wester. A few blacks were taken in the brush on the west end....

Big Fish Catches

The Texas Parks and Wildlife Department is recognizing Texans who catch big — but not record-sized — fish with a "Big Fish Award" certificate.

To gain the recognition, a fisherman must legally catch a fish heavier than the minimum weight established for that species and provide the department with some simple documentation.

After catching a fish which might qualify for the award, a fisherman needs to complete an application form, weigh the fish on a scale certified for trade by the Texas Department of Agriculture, obtain the signatures of two witnesses to the weighing, then send the application to the department headquarters in Austin.

Species eligible for the awards, and the required minimum weights, are:

Spotted seatrout, 7 pounds; black drum, 35 pounds; southern flounder, 6 pounds; largemouth bass, 8 pounds; king mackerel, 30 pounds; red snapper, 20 pounds; smallmouth bass, 4 pounds; spotted bass, 4 pounds; crappie, 3 pounds; white bass, 3 pounds; striped bass, 15 pounds; hybrid striped bass, 8 pounds; channel catfish, 12 pounds; blue catfish, 35 pounds; flathead catfish, 50 pounds; walleye, 6 pounds; rainbow and brown trout, 2 pounds; sunfish, 1 pound.

O-State still No. 1

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — It's getting to be like a broken record. For the 10th straight week, Oklahoma State is the No. 1 team in the Collegiate Baseball-ESPN poll of college baseball teams.

The Cowboys, 31-1, who have held the top spot in the poll all season, are leading the country in scoring, averaging 12.03 runs per game and are undefeated in 19 home games. The Cowboys, paced by shortstop Monty Fariss with 16 home runs, have hit a total of 66 this season, with 44 coming in the last 14 games.

Fresno State, 37-6, moved from third place to second, while Arizona State, 38-8 and winner of 18 straight, leaped from 11th to third. Texas, 41-7, dropped from second to fourth; Texas A&M, 36-8, climbed from sixth to fifth; Miami, Fla., 35-6-1, fell from fourth to sixth; Loyola Marymount, 35-9, slipped from fifth to seventh; California State-Fullerton, 28-10, stayed in eighth; Louisiana State, 26-9, jumped from 18th place to ninth, and Mississippi State, 24-8, moved down from seventh to 10th.

Rounding out the top 25: Michigan, 23-7; California, 28-15; Clemson, 33-6; Stanford, 25-13; Wichita State, 22-7; Washington State, 27-7; Nebraska, 25-8; Nevada-Las Vegas, 29-11; Florida State, 30-9-1; New Orleans, 28-11;

Rebel netters primed for 4-5A tournament

From Staff Reports

Midland Lee's tennis squad heads into Saturday's District 4-5A meet at San Angelo with renewed optimism following victories over the weekend in the 15-team Amarillo tournament in which the Rebels boys beat out Amarillo Tascosa and Amarillo High, the second and third place finishers. Lee's A girls finished tied for second with Carlsbad as Amarillo High took first and the girls B team took first.

"It was our best tournament showing of the year," said Lee Coach Bobby Connell. "And the good play could carry over into the district tournament Friday and Saturday."

Rebel netters reached the finals in three events and the semifinals in three others with Shannon Grainger and Julie Shelton brought home the B Girls Doubles title with a 6-1, 3-6, 6-2 win over Caprock's Giles-Ardoff. Grainger-Shelton pulled an ironman stunt, playing all their matches on Friday and as a bonus their victory gave Lee the B team title with Caprock and Amarillo tied for second. In A Girls Doubles, Shelly Slyker-Degen Donnelly bowed to Easley-Mariyappa, Amarillo, 6-1, 6-0 in the finals while In A Boys Doubles, Eric McDonald and Lance Cunningham made it to the finals before losing to Canyon's Brewer Foster and Jody Casey 7-6, 6-2.

Jody Casey-Burke Bradford made it to the A Boys Doubles finals; Steve Lintzen reached the A Boys Singles semis before losing to Darrin Hollabaugh, Caprock, 2-6, 6-3, 6-3. Also Leslie Dobbs gained the A Girls Doubles semis before losing to Sabine Liebenhoff, Amarillo, 6-3, 6-4.

"Both boys doubles teams lost to the tournament's No. 1 seed," said Connell. "McDonald and Cunningham took out the won over the No. 2 seed in three sets."

Donnelly and Slyker took out the No. 1 seeded team, but lost the next day to the No.5 seed after Slyker became sick at 4 a.m. in the motel and didn't get up until just before match time.

'72 Olympics runner to speak in Odessa

By FRANK MORGAN

Area racing takes a giant step forward this week-end when former Olympian Jeff Galloway comes to Odessa for the Run Around the Globe. Galloway will speak at the pre-race dinner at the Odessa Hilton Friday and compete in the 5K or 15K the next morning.

Galloway, former All-American from Wesleyan University, competed in the 10,000 meters in the '72 Olympics. In 1973, he set an American 10-mile record of 47:49.

Galloway is the author of "Galloway's Book on Running", currently outselling all other running books, combined.

Galloway's training philosophy is to "blend strategic rest into a running program so that people can have more fun and not get injured." He places training emphasis on quality mileage rather than on quantity.

GALLOWAY recommends older runners cut back on the number of days they run, but says they can run longer on those days. He adopted an every-other-day schedule about two years ago and says it has improved his running.

"Running is even more enjoyable now," Galloway says, "because I no longer am under any pressure to win or to meet a specific goal." Galloway still races, but doesn't try to win. He does occasional speed work but does not try to peak for a certain race.

Galloway trained with Frank Shorter and Jack Bacherle in preparing for the 1972 Olympics. All three made the team after training two months in Vail's high altitude. Shorter won the gold medal in the marathon and took fifth in the 10K.

GALLOWAY's true character is revealed by his personal sacrifice to help Bacherle qualify for the team. Galloway, primarily a marathoner, also ran the 10,000 meters in the trials. He said he ran the race of his life to finish second to Shorter. Bacherle was the best in the 10K, but finished fourth and was ultimately disqualified for a bumping incident.

Later in the week at the marathon trials, Galloway helped Bacherle make the team. It was 95 degrees at the race's start so the two decided that 2:18 would qualify for the team. After five miles, they were in 100th place, but maintained their pace and began moving up. At 15 miles, they were only seven seconds off the 2:18 pace.

Bacherle, tiring, and Galloway entered the stadium in third and fourth place. As he rounded the final turn, Galloway stepped off the track and allowed Bacherle to pass him for the final spot on the team.

Galloway refuses to speculate on whether he could have won a medal in the Olympic marathon. "I was just glad to be able to help someone out and help my friend make the team."

That attitude continues to show forth even now. Galloway conducts annual seminars and training camps to help runners. He also owns a running store in Atlanta and is considering authoring another book.

Many of the 30 local runners followed Galloway's training program for last year's White Rock Marathon and all of them finished the race.

Congress may override trade veto

By IRVIN MOLOTSKY
N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — Jim Wright, the speaker of the House, suggested Monday that Congress could override a veto if President Reagan rejected the trade bill that is nearing completion.

Wright made this comment at a briefing for reporters as Congress returned from its Easter recess and conferees from the House and Senate prepared for the final stage of talks. Several contentious issues remained unresolved.

"We hope to be able to schedule a conference on it next week," the Texas Democrat said of the bill. Its purpose is to reduce the great imbalance of American imports over exports by, among other things, making American products more competitive in markets abroad.

The House minority leader, Rep. Robert Michel, R-Ill., said he expected the conferees to delete or modify provisions of the bill that Reagan objects to.

"I think there's an opportunity to take a look and see where we are, to see if a provision is onerous enough to provoke a veto," said Michel.

In the Senate, overriding a presidential veto would probably be a tougher task. Several of the bill's provisions that the administration opposes won Senate approval by a smaller majority than the two-thirds that is needed to overturn a veto.

Reagan has warned of a veto unless two sections are modified. One would require advance notification when plants are to be closed, and the other would make foreign investors disclose their holdings in the United States.

Wright said the bill had "enormous popularity" among both Republicans and Democrats.

As for presidential opposition to the 60-day notice of plant closings, the speaker said: "I don't understand why the White House would consider that more important than stopping the closing of American plants. They're just serving the cause of a small group who want to close plants surreptitiously."

Wright said of the foreign investment disclosure: "It's a perfectly good provision. Twenty-seven percent of bank ownership is foreign. I think Americans are entitled to know this. What is there to hide? Why should we fear the truth being known?"

US-Soviet trade called inadequate

USSR calls for bilateral tradetreaty

By FELICITY BARRINGER
New York Times News Service

MOSCOW — Commerce Secretary C. William Verity Jr. was offered warm greetings and words of reproof upon his arrival here Monday as Soviet Prime Minister Nikolai I. Ryzhkov criticized American-Soviet trade relations as inadequate.

Ryzhkov called for a bilateral trade treaty "on the principles of equality and non-discrimination."

Verity heads the American delegation to the 10th meeting of the Joint Commercial Commission, the two governments' main bilateral forum for discussing trade issues.

That meeting coincides with a meeting of the principal private American-Soviet trade organization, the U.S.-U.S.S.R. Trade and Economic Council. It has brought a delegation of 500 American business leaders — the largest so far — to Moscow to talk about possible ventures with Soviet agencies in trade or manufacturing.

One of the leaders was James Verrant, senior vice president of Honeywell, who announced plans to equip the Soviets with automated systems for the production of fertilizer. The Soviets hope more such arrangements will be forthcoming.

During a Kremlin meeting with Verity, Ryzhkov complained that commercial and economic relations "are yet at an unsatisfactory level." Tass, the official news agency, said.

"The volume and contents of these relations are not in keeping either with the potentials of the two countries or their position in the system of world economic ties," Tass said in paraphrasing his remarks.

An earlier Tass interview with Aleksandr Kachanov, first deputy minister for foreign economic relations, focused on a longstanding Soviet contention that Washington is responsible for "a whole number of discriminatory measures hampering" bilateral trade relations. According to Tass, he blamed the United States as the cause of a slow and stuttering economic relationship.

Kachanov called for elimination of unspecified trade barriers, a move that he said would "make it possible to widen commercial and economic ties between the two countries considerably."

He added: "If this is not done, their development will be as difficult as it is at present." At another point, he said: "The widening of Soviet-American trade is a political rather than an economic matter."

Although Kachanov was not specific, Western experts cited some longstanding Soviet complaints, like the exclusion of Moscow from Washington's most-favored-nation status. If the Soviet Union were included, it would receive trade terms as favorable as those granted to other American trading partners. Moscow is also unhappy with the tight Western export controls on various technologies deemed strategically sensitive.

PIPELINES

Tule Lake gathering system set

From Staff Reports

Midland-based Citigas Corp. will begin construction of a New Mexico gathering system that will connect gas production in northern Roosevelt County with California markets, according to Roger Crawford, chief executive officer.

Citigas' proposed 8.3-mile, Tule Lake Pipeline will cross Roosevelt and Chaves Counties, connecting the Tule Lake field to Transwestern's 24-inch pipeline. The line will also allow several shut-in gas wells to tie into the four-inch diameter steel pipeline.

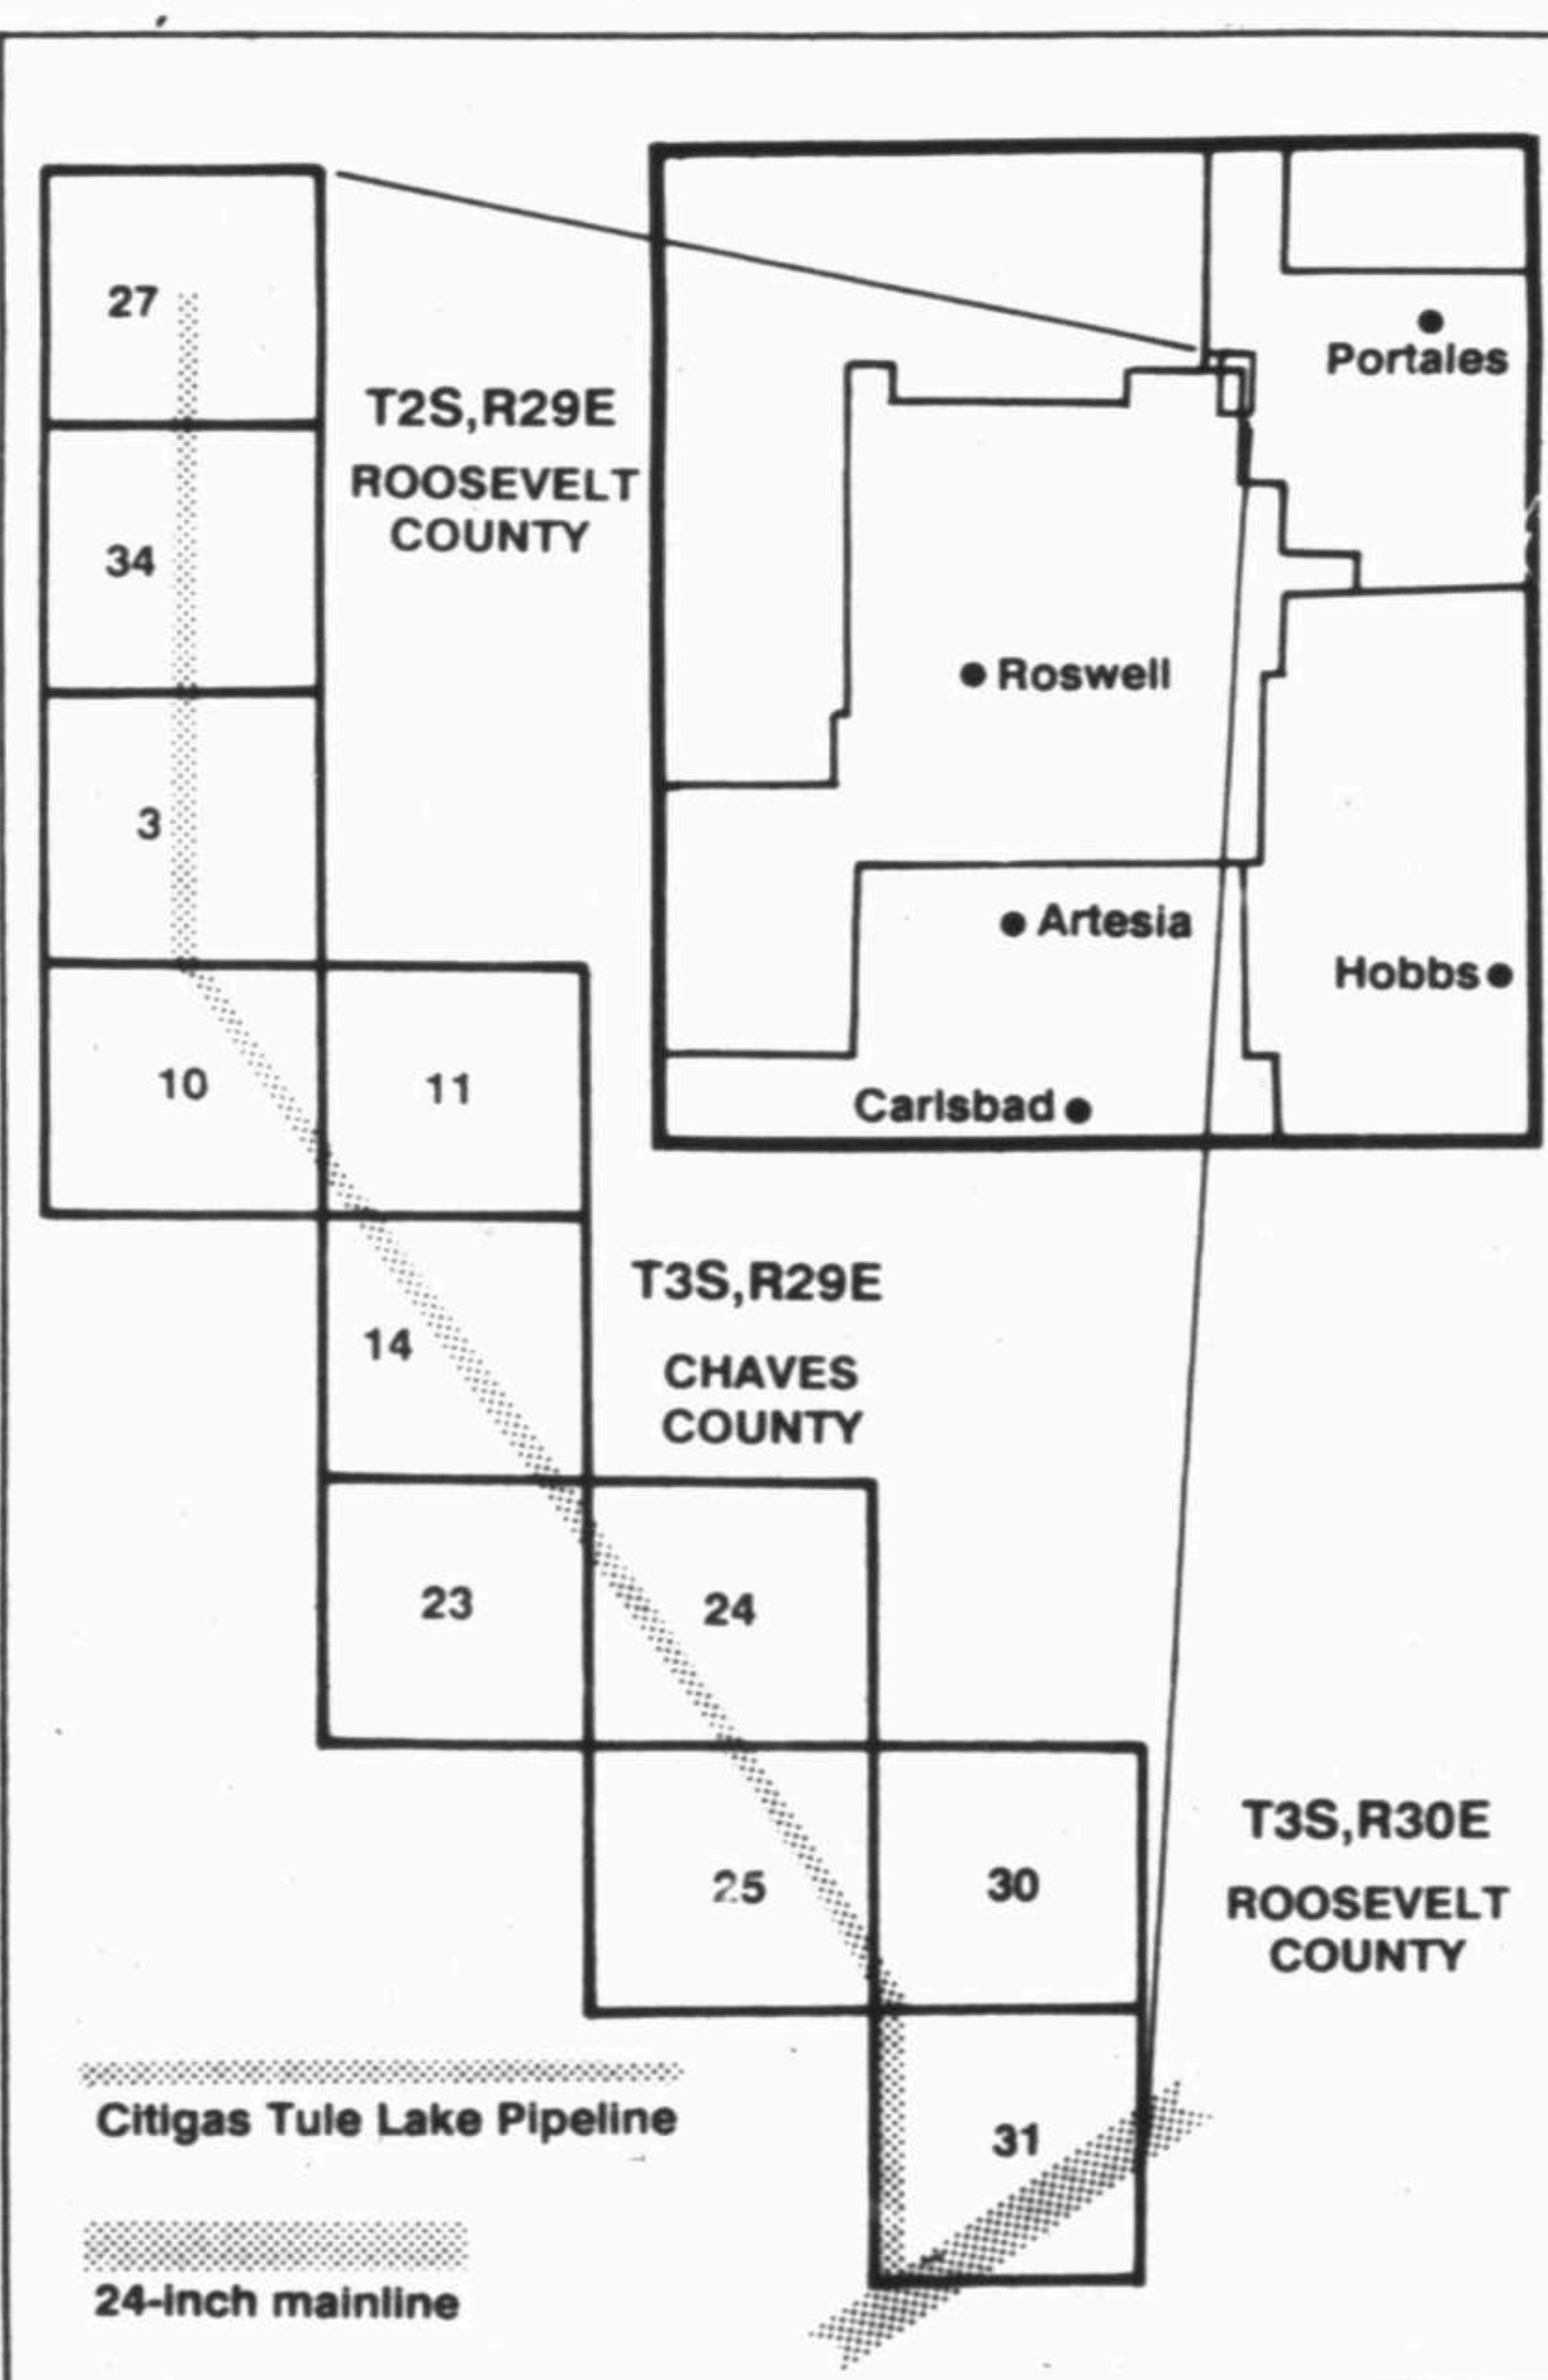

Located 35 miles southwest of Portales, near Elida. It is located approximately 40 miles northeast of Pecos Slope Abo production and about 60 miles northeast of Roswell.

Pipe is now being unloaded along the right-of-way beginning today and welding will commence immediately.

The new pipeline will connect with an existing 24-inch diameter line that transports natural gas from Texas and New Mexico to the west coast. The Citigas pipeline begins in T-2S, R-29-E, and ends in T-3S, R-30-E, Roosevelt County.

The new gas wells produce from Ordovician and Pennsylvanian formations. One of the wells was completed for a calculated open flow of 2.5 million cubic feet of gas per day, from perforations of 7,066 to 7,062 feet. This well has a shut-in tubing pressure of 1,946 pounds per square inch.

"We expect the pipeline to spur drilling activity in the area," said Crawford.

Citigas' proposed new Tule Lake gathering system will connect new gas production in Roosevelt county with markets in California.

School bonds explained to black chamber

By MELLA McEWEN
Business/Oil Writer

A representative of the Midland Independent School District was a guest at Monday's meeting of the Midland Black Chamber of Entrepreneurs, explaining the reasons the MISD Board of Trustees has called a bond election May 7.

Larry Lusby, director of computer and special services for MISD, explained that the bond issue was needed to build more classrooms to handle the expected increase in enrollment between 1988 and 1992.

He explained the need arose because of the rising number of births in Midland since 1980, and because the state, through House Bill 72, had mandated a student-teacher ratio of not more than 22:1 for the early grades.

Lusby informed the group that MISD analysts projected that school enrollment would have risen 15 percent by 1992, based on the current school enrollment.

Lusby said that from May 1987 through the end of February 1988, enrollment in grades kindergarten through third grade had risen from 6,601 to 7,018, while enrollment in grades kindergarten through sixth grade had grown from 10,677 to 11,271.

"This does contradict what we'd heard about people leaving Midland because of the economic situation. Actually, we have a net in-migration — more people are moving into Midland than are moving out."

Lusby illustrated the need for more classrooms by pointing out that in 1977 there were 1,130 first graders. Of those, 85 percent or 912 "survived" and are now seniors at Midland's two high schools.

There are currently 1,966 first graders in Midland schools. "Assuming an 85 percent survival rate we're going to have 1,700 seniors 11 years from now," he stated.

Shearson defends role in Koppers takeover try

WASHINGTON (AP) — The investment banking firm Shearson Lehman Hutton Inc. came under attack during a congressional hearing for what one senator said was its role as a corporate raider in a hostile takeover.

"In effect, what we have is a bank acting as a corporate raider," Sen. Jim Sasser, D-Tenn., said Monday at a hearing of the Senate Banking Committee. The committee met for three hours on the attempted takeover of Pittsburgh-based Koppers by Beazer PLC of Britain, which is being advised by Shearson Lehman.

"Shearson is only the first to cross a line that Wall Street believes will be obliterated by others racing across it in the future," said Sen. John Heinz, R-Pa., referring to the distinction between banking and commerce.

Steven B. Woltz, managing director of Shearson, said the firm's role was limited to providing short-term, or "bridge," financing for Beazer's tender offer and giving advice. Such financing is "typical for investment banks in deals of this kind," he said.

Woltz acknowledged that Shearson is contributing equity of its own — $23 million — to the bidding group, but he said management and control of the group would be held by Beazer PLC.

Texaco looks to sell German subsidiary

NEW YORK — Texaco Inc. is negotiating to sell its German subsidiary as part of its post-bankruptcy restructuring plan, company executives told their German subordinates last week in Hamburg.

The unit is expected to bring about $1.6 billion. The negotiations raise the possibility that Texaco will dispose of substantially more than the $3 billion in assets it said it would sell when it disclosed in February its plan for coming out of bankruptcy.

The sale of Deutsche Texaco and other assets would serve three purposes: to raise cash to meet Texaco's debts and to raise value for shareholders, and to reshape the company on its own terms, perhaps heading off a takeover attempt by investors with a different idea of what Texaco should sell and what it should retain.

The potential buyers have not been identified, but a Texaco official said the company was negotiating with several parties. He added that oil-exporting nations were not involved.

Texaco has previously said that it was negotiating with an oil-exporting nation, widely reported to be Saudi Arabia, for sale of a half-interest in three domestic refineries, and in recent weeks it has sent out scores of letters soliciting bids for the sale of 60 million barrels of oil in the ground in this country.

Oil prices near $18 level

From Staff and Wire Reports

Oil prices continued their upward trend, rising 8 cents to stand at $17.97 at midmorning.

Oil prices had risen sharply on Monday on news that the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries would meet with other oil producers to discuss restricting production in an effort to secure higher prices.

Prices increased for both futures contracts and oil for prompt delivery.

On the New York Mercantile Exchange, the key contract for May delivery of West Texas Intermediate crude oil jumped $1.02 to close at $17.89 a 42-gallon barrel, its highest level since early January.

Among refined oil products traded on the exchange, wholesale heating oil, which usually begins to trend downward in the spring, rose 2.42 cents, to 47.88 cents a gallon. Wholesale unleaded gasoline jumped 2.18 cents, to 50.95 cents a gallon.

Dollar little changed, gold rises

LONDON (AP) — The dollar was little changed against most major foreign currencies in light European trading early today. Gold prices rose.

Dealers said they expected the dollar to trade within a narrow range before Wednesday's meeting of finance ministers from the seven major industrialized democracies and the release of U.S. trade figures for February on Thursday.

Few traders predicted any sharp improvement in the merchandise trade deficit from January's shortfall of $12.44 billion.

In Tokyo, the dollar rose to a closing 126.50 Japanese yen from 125.71 yen at Monday's close. Later, in London, it edged up to 126.53 yen.

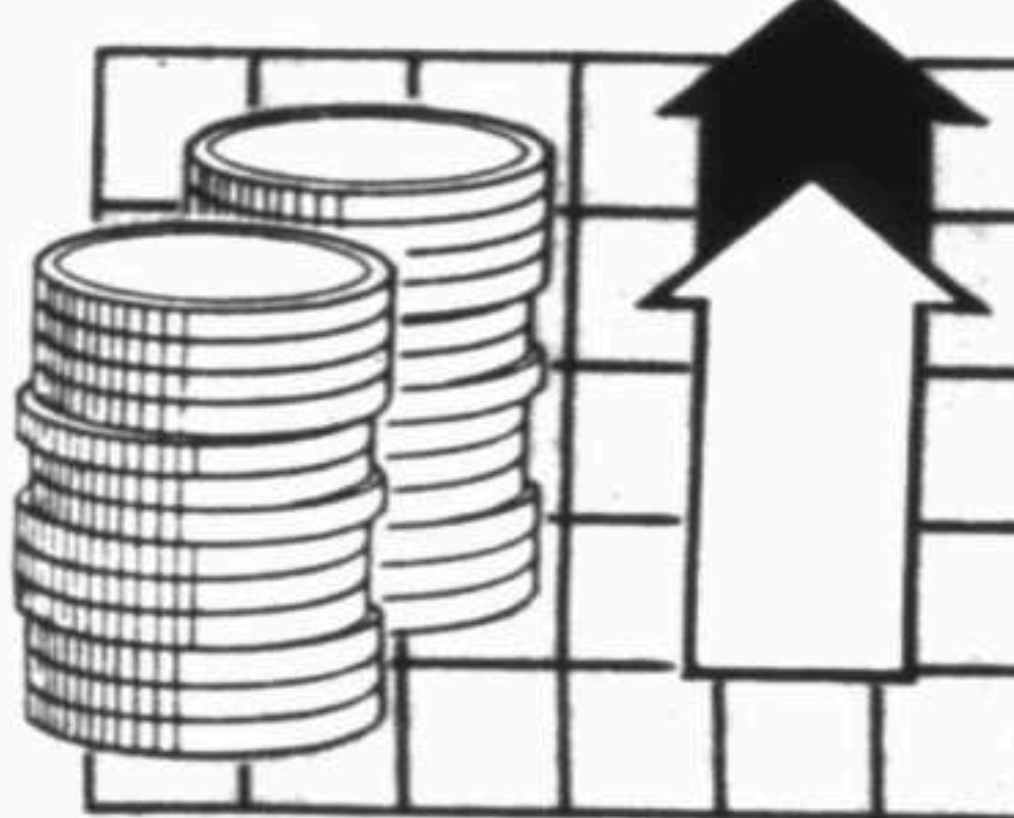

Other dollar rates at mid-morning, compared with late Monday:

- 1.6853 West German marks, down from 1.6855
- 1.3957 Swiss francs, up from 1.3953
- 5.7180 French francs, up from 5.7145
- 1.8897 Dutch guilders, down from 1.8910
- 1.249.75 Italian lire, up from 1.249.50
- 1.2390 Canadian dollars, unchanged

In London, the British pound fell to $1.848 from $1.856 late Monday. Gold opened in London at a bid price of $450.50 a troy ounce, up from $449.50 bid late Monday. At mid-morning today, the city's five major bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $450.20.

In Zurich, the bid price was $450.20, up from $449.00 bid late Monday. Earlier, in Hong Kong, gold rose to a closing bid of $452.21 from $451.95 at Monday's close.

Silver bullion rose in London to a bid price of $6.44 a troy ounce, up from a $6.42 bid late Monday.

Stocks up despite seller resistance

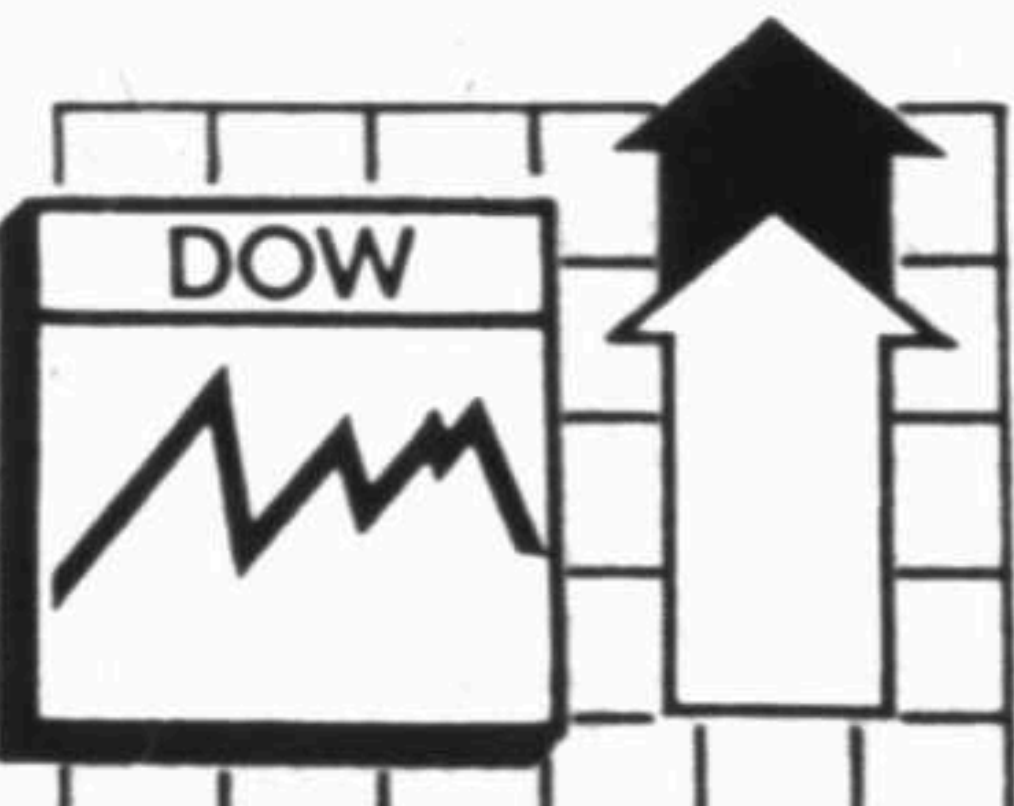

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market edged higher in quiet trading Monday, extending last week's rally despite some resistance from sellers.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks rose 5.80 to 2,095.99 on top of last week's 102.13-point jump to new closing highs since the crash last fall.

Advancing issues outnumbered declines by about 3 to 2 on the New York Stock Exchange, with 939 up, 632 down and 432 unchanged.

Big Board volume totaled 146.37 million shares, against 169.30 million in the previous session. The NYSE's composite index gained .44 to 152.47.

Stocks rose in the Tokyo and London markets as traders around the world looked for positive news on the dollar from meetings scheduled this week of the so-called Group of Seven industrialized nations.

BUSINESS IN BRIEF

Wagner, Brown expand bid for USG

CHICAGO (NYT) — Desert Partners, a group led by the Texas oilmen Jack E. Brown and Cyril Wagner Jr., said Monday that it had expanded its tender offer for the USG Corp. to 39 million shares from 21 million. The partnership, which made its $42-a-share offer for the nation's largest gypsum producer on Feb. 24, also extended the offer to midnight on April 22. About 12.6 million shares, or 25 percent of USG's common stock outstanding, had been tendered through last Friday, Desert Partners said.

USG declined to comment on these developments. The company's shares rose 87.5 cents, to $38, Monday on the New York Stock Exchange.

FAA issues final rules on smoking ban

WASHINGTON (AP) — The airline smoking ban that goes into effect April 23 on commercial aircraft will apply to any flight scheduled for two hours or less even if delays cause the flight to take longer, the Federal Aviation Administration says.

Congress required the smoking ban on short flights in legislation last year. The FAA issued its final rules on the prohibition Monday, although the general outline of the new restrictions has been known for months.

FTC revives R.J. Reynolds ad complaint

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Trade Commission has revived a complaint that an R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co. advertisement in 1985 misrepresented the results of a government study on the effects of smoking on health.

In a 4-1 vote Monday, the commission reversed a ruling made last August by an administrative law judge who had dismissed the complaint on grounds that the ad was an editorial and therefore was protected by First Amendment guarantees on freedom of speech.

Public unenthusiastic about new TV system

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — The American public may be less willing than the television industry believes to embrace a high-resolution TV system with improved picture quality, clearer images and more brilliant color, according to a new study.

The results of the study, released Monday by the Media Laboratory at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, "contradict the accepted wisdom ... which posits that high definition TV knocks the socks off everyone who sees it."

Sun announces gas find in Anadarko Basin

DALLAS (SWN) — Sun Exploration and Production Co. has announced the discovery of a gas well in the Anadarko Basin of Oklahoma that tested nearly four million cubic feet of natural gas per day (MMCF/D).

The James Mannering No. 1, located in Section 28, T17N-R17W, in Dewey County, Oklahoma, tested gas from the Hunton formation. The well flowed at a rate of 3.9 MMCF/D through an 18/64-inch choke with a flowing tubing pressure of 1,875 pounds per square inch from perforations between 13,552 and 13,566 feet. The discovery well is approximately 1.5 miles southeast of the nearest Hunton producer in the Putnam Field. The first offset is planned to spud by the end of the month.

Sun Operating Limited Partnership has a 60 percent interest in the discovery well. Sabine Corporation of Dallas has the remaining 40 percent interest.

HOUSTON (SWN) — Turbo Power Systems, a partnership of Transco Energy Ventures Company (TEVCO) and ACEC Power Systems Limited, announced that Turbo Power has been granted qualifying facility status by the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission (FERC) under the Public Utility Regulatory Policy Act.

This permit will enable Turbo Power to construct nine electric power cogeneration facilities in New Jersey, each facility capable of generating enough electric power to supply up to approximately 25,000 homes. The 15- to 30-megawatt facilities, which feature a new patented cogeneration technology, will be installed at measurement stations along the natural gas pipeline system of Transcontinental Gas Pipe Line Corporation (TGPL). Both TEVCO and TGPL are subsidiaries of Transco Energy Company.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Conservative investments best for retirees

By BILL DOYLE

Q. For the first time in our lives, my wife and I find that our income from Social Security, pension, bond investments and mortgage holdings exceeds our life style costs by $300 per month. We also have a small mutual fund investment and an adequate amount in a money market deposit account. We have excellent health insurance and our home is mortgage free.

It occurs to me that building up a highly liquid and stable reserve fund would be useful, since we have no large lump sum immediately available for emergencies.

We are considering buying a $300, one-year certificate of deposit every month until we have a reason to stop. As each CD matures, we would reinvest the principal, along with another monthly purchase. What do you think of this idea?

Doyle

A. It's good and, because it is a very conservative way of putting your extra money to work, it is well suited for people such as you. Retired folks should not take financial risks.

The one flaw in your plan is that you won't build up a large amount of readily accessible cash for quite some time. After one year, you will have $3,600 plus interest in CDs. But at any point in time, you'll be able to get your hands on only $300 of that money without redeeming a CD before maturity and paying early withdrawal penalties.

Nonetheless, your plan should work well and, over time, your CD investments will pyramid. Meanwhile, your money market deposit account will be your emergency fund. So you might consider fattening up that account before making monthly CD purchases. You can always tap the money market account without penalty.

Q. My husband and I have our bills paid off and, now that I have started to work, we can save about $1,300 per month. He is 52 and I am 46. We have very little savings at this time and wish to retire in 10 years. If we put the $1,300 into a CD each month, can you tell us how much we will have in 10 years?

A. Not with anything approaching accuracy. There's no way of knowing what interest you will get on CDs you purchase over the next 10 years. No one can predict, for sure, whether interest rates will remain level, rise or fall.

As a rough rule of thumb, however, here's approximately how much $1,300 put into CDs monthly will grow to after 10 years at various rates of interest compounded daily: at 6 percent, $215,300; at 7 percent, $227,850; at 8 percent, $241,350.

These numbers have to be approximate, because different banks and savings and loan associations use many different methods in calculating and crediting interest.

Q. I have a $10,000 certificate of deposit on which I let the interest accumulate. Instead of receiving a monthly check, I plan on getting another CD for the same amount shortly and letting the interest build up.

In a recent column you advised a lady with two large CDs to instruct the banks to send her interest checks monthly. Why is that better than letting the interest accumulate?

A. It isn't, in most cases. Taking monthly interest checks from CDs is the thing to do, only for people who need the money to meet living expenses. That was the case with the woman mentioned in the previous column. She is going to receive $180,000 from which she will require income. It would be foolish for her to allow interest to accumulate on her CDs.

For you and many other people, it is wise to leave interest in CDs to build up. Assuming the interest compounds, your interest earns more interest and you get an annual effective yield higher than your CD's stated interest rate. The more frequent the compounding, the higher the stated interest rate.

Since you obviously have no immediate need for your CD interest, leave it in to earn more for you.

Iowa attorney general sues Citibank over consumer law

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — State officials sued Citibank on Monday to force the banking company, the nation's biggest issuer of credit cards, to obey the differing consumer protection laws of each state where it operates.

Attorney General Tom Miller called the U.S. District Court suit filed here a landmark attempt to end the bank's practice of "exporting" the more lenient credit laws of South Dakota, where its credit card operation is based, to other states.

In the lawsuit, Miller argued that although the courts consistently have allowed banks to charge the maximum interest rate allowed in their home state wherever they operate, that ability should not extend to other consumer credit protections.

"I don't think we should have the situation where one state can set the public policy for 50 states," Miller said at a news conference announcing the suit. He said other states had indicated interest in joining the action.

Miller accused Citibank of collecting late charges and other fees that are allowed under South Dakota consumer credit law but are banned in Iowa.

"We are challenging the assumption that they can export the laws of states which have few consumer protections into states like Iowa that have stronger protections for their citizens," Miller said. "The suit could affect every bank that has a national credit card operation," he said.

Citibank is the banking subsidiary of the New York-based Citicorp, the nation's largest bank holding company.

The company has issued about 15 million credit cards nationwide but insists that South Dakota's consumer laws govern its cards wherever they are issued.

Citibank's Sioux Falls, S.D. office referred reporters' calls to its New York headquarters. Spokesman Bill McQuire in New York said the company had not seen the suit, but was confident that it complies with federal law.

Iowa lawmakers have deregulated credit card interest rates, but banned late payment fees and insufficient funds check charges, Miller said. Iowa also requires companies give three months notice before changing the terms of a credit card contract.

The suit seeks a ban on collection of the late payment fees, plus unspecified civil penalties and a refund of any payments collected.

The state targeted Citibank because it is the biggest card issuer, although other companies may be sued as well, Miller said. He said he failed in an attempt to reach an out-of-court settlement with Citibank.

Northeastern states dominate economic honor roll

WASHINGTON (AP) — States that spend tax money to retrain workers and help new businesses raise capital score well on an economic development report card released today by a private research organization.

Northeastern states with generally higher levels of government spending ranked near the top of a list compiled by the Corporation for Enterprise Development, which evaluated the vitality of the states' economies and their capacity to grow.

The states ranked near the bottom — most in the South, Plains and Mountain regions — are struggling with "boom-bust" economies heavily dependent on energy or agriculture.

"The Northeast is where today's economic action is," Robert Friedman, president of the research group, said in a statement. "But several up-and-coming states in the industrial Midwest and the New South ... are working aggressively to improve their economies."

The group, a non-profit organization which gets its money from unions, foundations and businesses, first issued its scorecard last year and plans to rank the states annually.

This year, Connecticut, Maryland, Massachusetts, New Jersey, Vermont and Minnesota headed the honor roll with grades of A or B in each of four areas: economic performance, business vitality, economic capacity and policy strength.

"These states have a longstanding commitment to public investments," Friedman said.

Minnesota was the only state from outside the East to make the top group. New Jersey and Vermont are new at the top. California and New York, which made the honor roll last year, slipped.

The next group of states, which did well overall in the 1988 ranking and which Friedman called "the contenders," were: Pennsylvania, Wisconsin, Washington, California, Maine, Delaware and Virginia.

Texas received a D for economic performance, Bs for business vitality and economic capacity and C for the effectiveness of policies, government and regulation, improvement of education and research and help for distressed communities.

States getting mostly Ds and Fs this year were Idaho, Nevada, South Dakota and the Southern states of Alabama, Louisiana, Mississippi, Oklahoma and Tennessee.

Arkansas, Georgia, North Carolina and South Carolina, which had ranked near the bottom in 1987, moved out of the lowest group of states.

The report cautioned that the rankings are relative and that a state's movement may not be due to any change within the state but could be caused by improvement or deterioration in other states.

Advanced Electrolysis can help you feel confident about your appearance

Jodi McGee of Advanced Electrolysis understands the embarrassment of unwanted facial hair. That and years of study are why she can give you the best electrolysis treatment in the Permian Basin.

"I've always had a hair problem," Jodi explained. "For years it was obvious and after each of my children was born it seemed to be even longer and darker."

After reading numerous articles on excessive facial hair, and even returning to her cosmetology books for advice, Jodi realized that only electrolysis offers a permanent solution to excessive facial hair problems.

"Then in my late thirties I had a crushing crisis," Jodi said. "I was under a very stressful situation for a lengthy period. My hair problem became even more obvious. I finally began tweezing some very long, dark hairs, little knowing that I was only contributing to my problem." As the tweezed hair grew back in it became stronger and there seemed to be more of it.

This is a common problem with temporary hair removal methods, as are scarring, rashes and itching, and pore distention. After inquiring discretely through friends, Jodi found a caring, dedicated professional electrologist.

"I called and made an appointment for a consultation," Jodi remembered. "That was when I not only solved my hair problem, I also changed my profession." During treatments Jodi inquired about learning the art of electrolysis. The desire to develop this skill and help others to be free of this unsightly problem led Jodi to her career.

"For over eight years now it is still as challenging as it was then," Jodi affirms. "I've studied every article and attended every seminar I could. Each new client is a friend to be made and a challenge to help them become the person they deserve to be."

Barbara Gordon recently joined the staff of Advanced Electrolysis.

"Barbara is one of the most caring, dedicated co-workers I had the privilege to work with," Jodi said. "We work together to help others." Here is what one satisfied client said about Jodi and Advanced Electrolysis:

"I have been having electrolysis treatments for more than seven years and with Jodi for the past year. She is the best in the business; very clean and professional."

"I don't go to Jodi just for electrolysis. She is my friend and there is a bond between us that most electrolysis don't have with their clients."

"This is something that affects your life. I find myself being more outgoing, less embarrassed in front of people. It has changed my life to have my hair problem under control. I would recommend Jodi to anyone with a hair problem."

For a free consultation call Advanced Electrolysis at 689-7200. Knowing you can be confident in the treatment of unwanted hair is the first step in solving your hair problem.

Storm windows from Lewellen Construction can help save money on your energy bill

Hot weather is on the way and once again you may be paying the price for air leaks around the windows. Cooling costs are increased when hot air slips in around those openings. Frustration is also increased when dust blows through as through no window was even there. High noise levels add to the aggravation.

Bill Lewellen of Lewellen Construction says quality storm windows, properly installed will make a significant difference. How significant? Well, 70 percent of a home's total energy loss is attributable to uninsulated windows, and government studies reveal that installation of storm windows can cut home owners' energy costs by 24 percent.

Stop by the Lewellen booth in Midland Park Mall anytime between April 14 and 17 and register to win the sweepstakes. If you have your windows installed now you'll also be prepared for the inevitable spring dust storms. In addition to keeping your home cooler, storm windows are very effective in reducing noise and keeping the dust out.

All the storm windows offered by Lewellen Construction are custom made to assure the goof fit needed for maximum protection. To best enhance your home's appearance, the windows are available in a wide variety of colors.

In addition to storm windows, Lewellens offers replacement windows, including a popular vinyl tilt-in model.

Of course, it is important not only to get quality windows, but to have those windows installed by a qualified company like Lewellen Construction. If the windows are installed incorrectly they won't be as effective.

Joan and Bill are committed to using only the finest material and providing you with the best workmanship available. This dedication is apparent in comments from dozens of satisfied customers, including Phyllis and Al Sutton, who recently had Lewellen Construction install a new roof, siding and trim on their house at 3632 Imperial.

"After checking prices and the quality of work available in the Midland area, we chose to have Lewellen Construction do the work on our house," said Phyllis Sutton. "The Lewellens provided references and we checked them out. They have a good reputation and it is well deserved. We are very pleased with the work they did."

Alfonso Flotte, who had storm windows and attic insulation added to his house at 611 W. Cowden, agreed saying, "Lewellen Construction did a very professional job. They were willing to help with the financing, and when the job was finished Bill came out and inspected all the work to make sure it was done correctly."

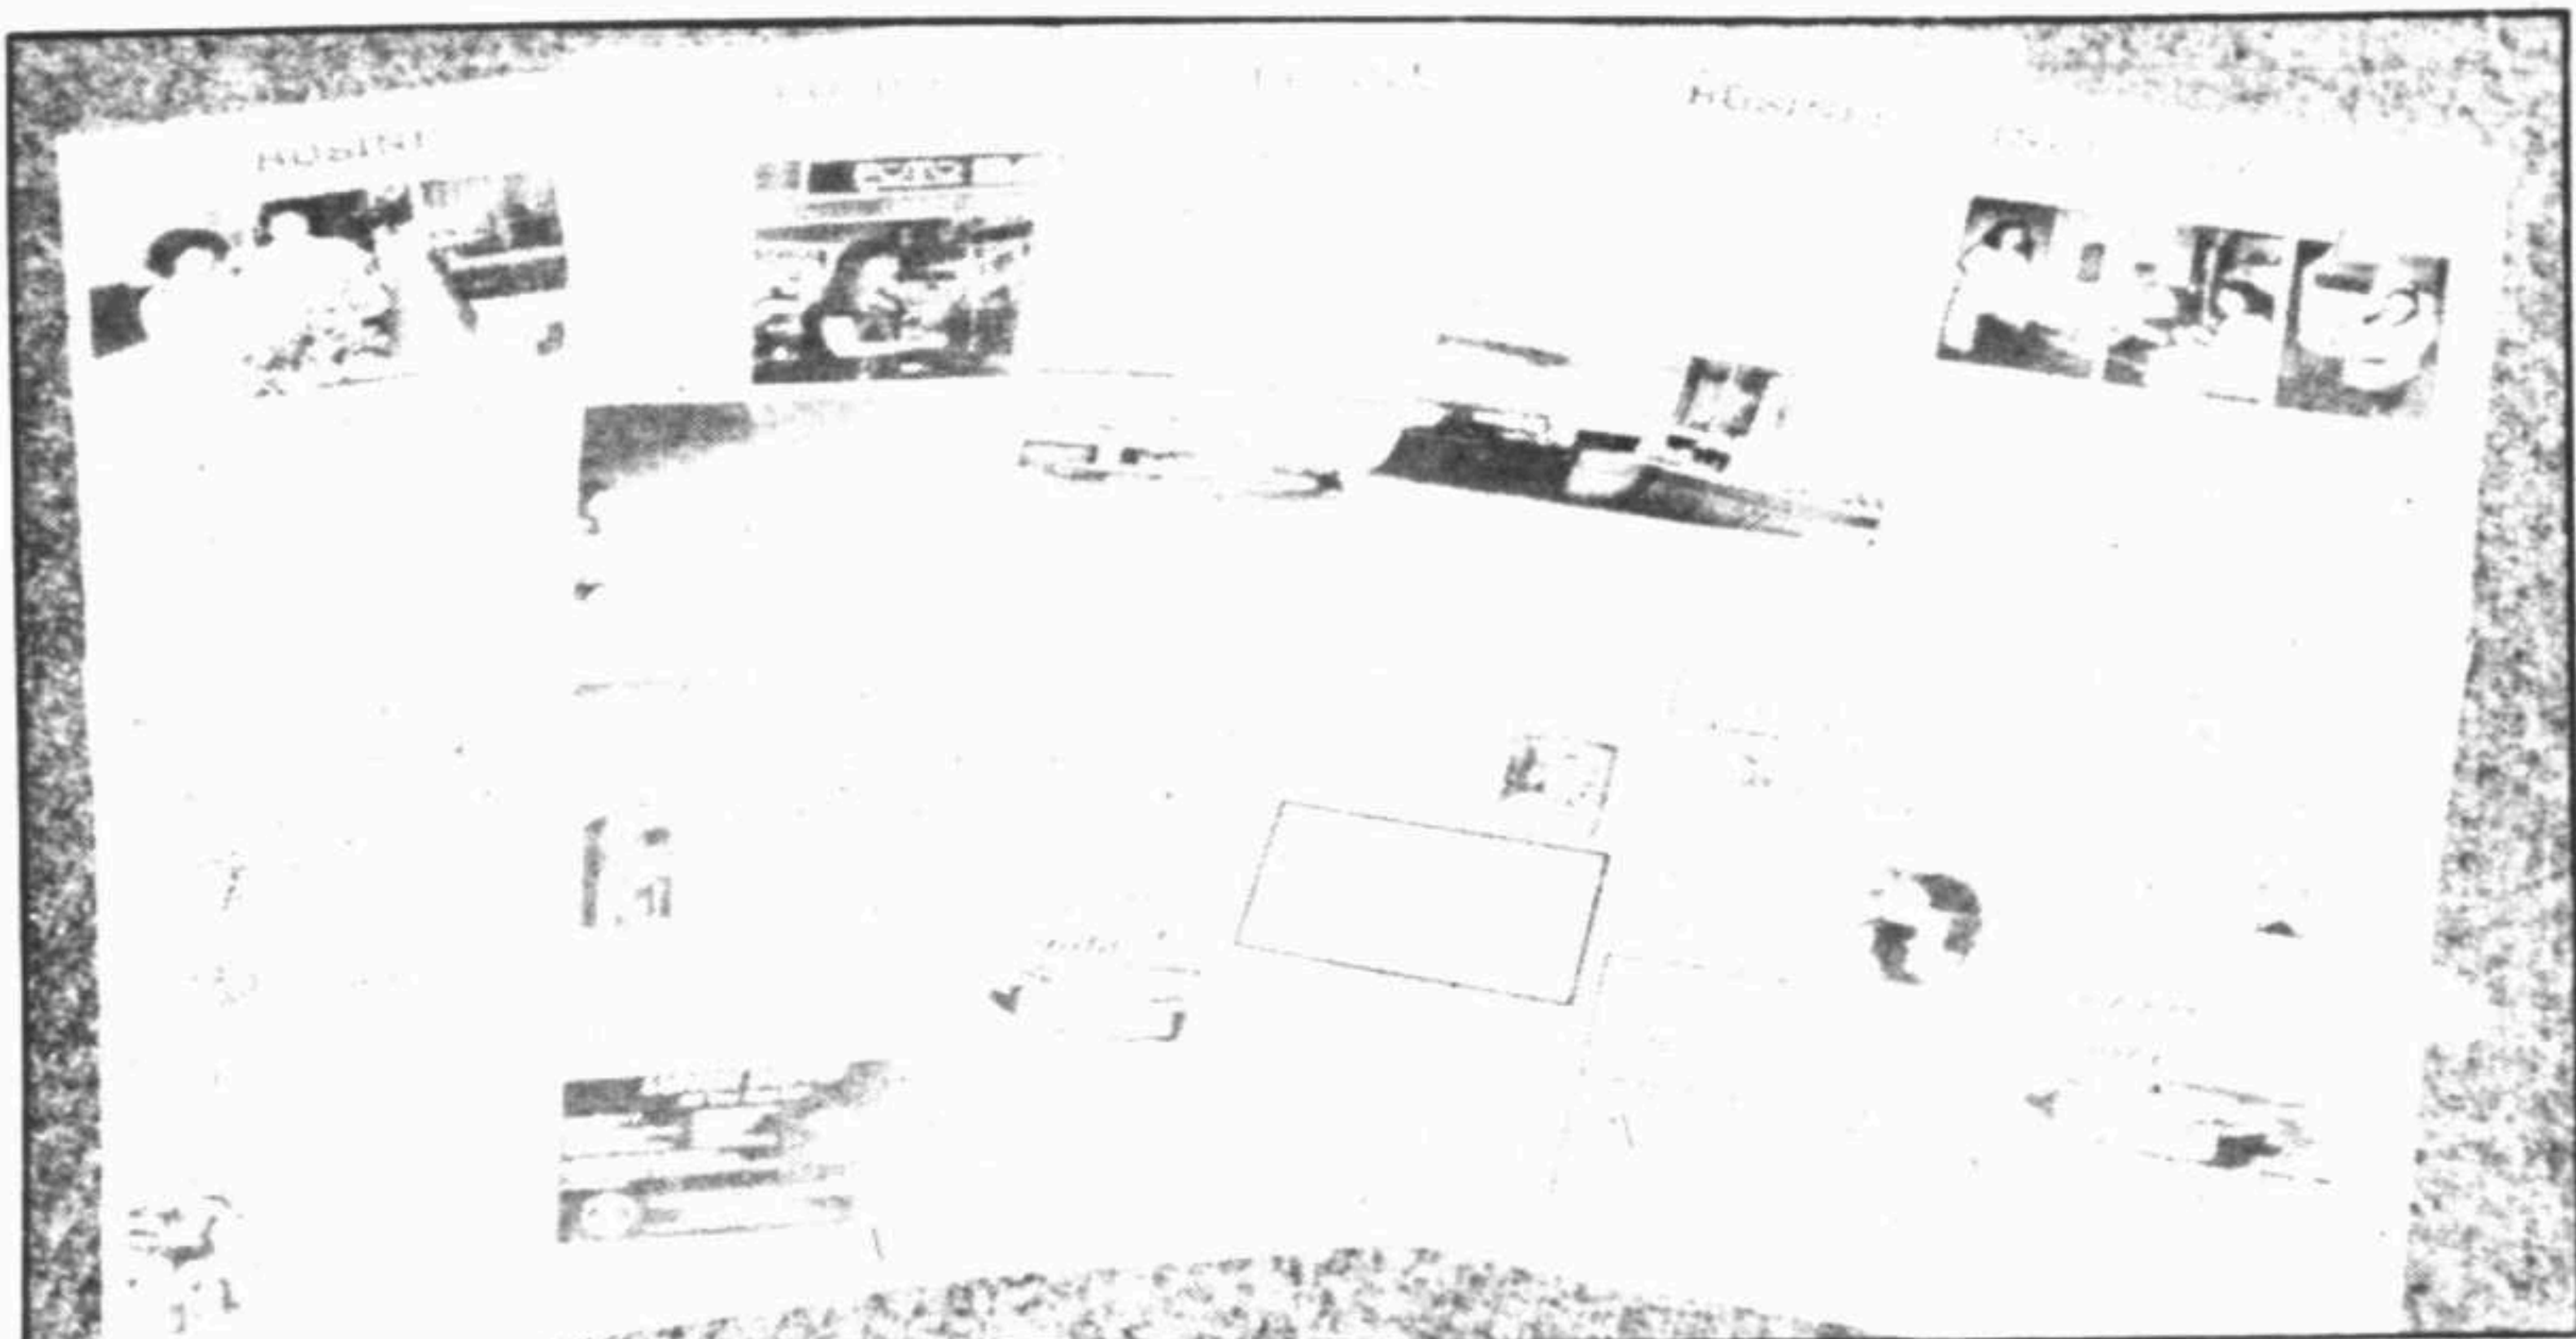

Lewellen does quality work at a fair price not only with windows, but also with steel siding, soffit, fascia, carport covers and roofing.

For more information on storm windows and doors, siding or general home repair and remodeling call Lewellen Construction at 686-8007.

Darla Schwartz invites everyone to stop by Dinette Designs and browse through the large selection of parsons chairs and glass table sets now available in a variety of colors and fabrics. Dinette Designs at 1025 N. Midkiff is open Monday through Saturday 10 a.m. to 6 p.m.
