Blacks, women to be released

By The Associated Press

Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini on Saturday ordered Iranian militants occupying the U.S. Embassy in Tehran to free all women and black hostages if they are absolved of "espionage," Radio Tehran reported. It said he acted out of Islamic mercy, but ordered the others held until the shah is returned to Iran.

All the hostages were reported to be in good condition, and there was no word on when the women and blacks, said to total about a dozen, would be freed. It is believed that the militants who invaded the embassy Nov. 4 are holding 60 to 62 Americans and eight non-Americans.

The Tehran broadcast, monitored in London and Kuwait, said the students agreed to release the group and would hold all other hostages until the shah is sent to Iran from New York, where he is undergoing cancer treatment.

Pars, the official Iranian news agency monitored in Nicosia, Cyprus, quoted a Foreign Ministry spokesman as saying the released hostages could leave Iran "either tomorrow (Sunday) or any other time."

The reports did not say who would determine if the hostages were or were not spies, but one of the Iranians in the embassy who was reached by telephone from Nicosia said they were engaged in making that decision.

Khomeini's son, Ahmad, went to the embassy, conferred with the invaders, and then left, according to a Tehran source. Foreign Affairs Supervisor Abolhassan Bani Sadr had asked him to escort the hostages to the Foreign Ministry once they are freed, according to the Pars report.

In Washington, the White House said it knew in advance of the plan to free the women and blacks, welcomed it and was doing all it could to secure the release of all of the hostages.

Khomeini called the embassy a "den of espionage and those professional spies will remain as they are until (Shah) Mohammad Reza Pahlavi is returned to be tried and until he has returned all that he has plundered.

"However, as Islam has a special respect towards women, and the blacks who have spent ages under American pressure and tyranny and may have come to Iran under pressure, therefore, mitigate their cases if it is proved that they have not committed acts of espionage.

"The noble Iranian nation will not give permission for the release of the rest of them, who will therefore remain under arrest until the American government acts according to the wish of the nation," Khomeini said.

A Tehran Radio broadcast said Ayatollah Mohammed Beheshti, secretary of the ruling Revolutionary Council, called a news conference for Sunday in Tehran to discuss major topics, but there was no elaboration.

The council, in another broadcast, declared that "as of this day," it would consider "any sit-in, hostage-taking and unwarranted strikes as counter-revolutionary and shall react to them." It gave few details but referred to industrial strife and unemployment while praising the seizure of the embassy.

The broadcast said "factories are shut down by uncalled for strikes or unwarranted sit-ins" and unemployemenbt "has been used as a pretext for threats and repeated sit-ins." It added, "these sit-ins, strikes, obstructions and pseudo-leftist hostage takings, while reducing and halting national production, are reaching a new height."

Earlier in the week, reports from Tehran said a mob had attacked the Labor Ministry to protest unemploiment.

Iran has expelled most foreign news agencies, and in a Radio Tehran broadeast received in London, a commentary said the Western news media were "propaganda facilities" for imperialism and Zionism.

The embassy captors released an Italian cook on Thursday, but remain yteadfast in their demands for the bedridden shah.

In Washington, Senate Democratic leader Robert C. Byrd said the United States was right in admitting the shah for medical treatment and would have done the same for Khomeini under similar circumstances.

President Carter has imposed an embargo on oil purchases from Iran, frozen Iranian government assets in U.S. banks and halted delivery of spare parts for Iran's air force.

But Bani Sadr said U.S. losses will far outweigh Iran's if the Carter administration steps up the economic war to free the hostages.

"There can be no war without losses and damage, but the losses suffered by the U.S. would be many times more than Iran's," Bani Sadr said. He was quoted in a Paris newspaper as saying Iran would no longer accept dollars, the universal currency for petroleum transactions, for its oil, in an effort to hit America's pocketbook. The oil minister denied the report, but Bani Sadr later reiterated the ban.

School zones confusing

But there is logic to the system

By MIKE SLATON
Staff Writer

Some have flashing lights. Some just have warning signs followed by a speed limit sign demanding drivers slow to 20 mph...or 25 mph...or 30 mph.

They are school zones or school crossings (the two are different) and their purpose is to protect Midland's children crossing busy streets on their way to and from school.

Few can deny the good intentions of that goal.

However, frustration is apparent among many Tall City drivers who slow down to peer at the signs' small print to learn the time of day that particular zone or crossing's speed limit is in effect.

Determining where that particular regulated speed area ends also can be a bit of a problem.

DIFFERENT TIMES, different speeds — the whole thing can be a defeating experience for conscientious drivers, especially when they find themselves tailgated, honked at and passed by other drivers who did not see or do not care to obey the signs.

There is some logic to the system, and Lt. Herman M. Wicker, who heads the Midland Police Department's traffic division, explained how the system of school zones and crossings is structured and regulated.

First, he divided the regulated speed areas into two categories: zones and crossings.

School crossings are just that — street crossings for children on their way to or from school. Crossings usually have regulated speed limits during the morning and again in the afternoon — for example, from 7:30 a.m. to 9 a.m. and from 2:30 p.m. to 4:30 p.m. School crossings may be near a school, but may also be in an area where children walk on their way to and from school.

A SCHOOL ZONE is the area adjacent to the school on all four sides and approaching the school for a certain distance.

Zones are usually in effect constantly from 7 a.m. to 5 p.m., Wicker said.

"Times on both crossing and zones signs differ due in part to the flow of traffic," said Wicker. "Rather than impede automobile traffic all day, times are adjusted to correspond with the times children are actually out of

First National announces top-level staff promotions

Jno. P. Butler, senior chairman of the board of The First National Bank of Midland, has announced the elevation of Wilbur A. Yeager Jr. from president to chairman of the board and Charles D. Fraser from executive vice president to president.

The promotions came at the regular monthly meeting of the bank's board of directors and will become effective Jan. 1, 1980.

Butler, who will remain active in his present position, said, "We are pleased to announce these changes in our management team as they are indicative of the tremendous growth which First National has enjoyed and which has resulted in its doubling in size in the past five years."

Figures compiled as of Sept. 30, 1979, show First National continues to be the largest independent bank in Texas and ranks 223 in overall size in the nation.

"We hope, and expect, the area's economy to continue this growth and that this bank will continue to provide the same level of service to the Permian Basin that it has during these past years," Butler added.

In addition to becoming chairman of the board, Yeager will continue to serve as an active corporate officer of the bank. A 1951 graduate of The University of Texas with a degree in petroleum engineering, Yeager joined First National in 1958. He became president of the bank in 1975.

Fraser, who will assume the responsibility for all of the bank's operations, is a native of Dallas and a 1958 graduate of The University of Texas with a master's degree in petroleum engineering. He worked for a major oil company and was a petroleum engineering consultant prior to joining First National in 1966.

He was named executive vice president of the bank in 1975.

The enigma of Iran

NEW YORK — It is often said that young people conventionally think they know more than their elders. I have come upon a situation which may well be the case, and it's in my own family. One of my nieces, Mary Byrne McDonnell, is a doctoral candidate at Columbia University and her dissertation will be on affairs in the Middle East and South East Asia, having majored in those studies through most of her college years. She also has a master's degree in international affairs.

Although J. Kingsbury Smith, national editor of the Hearst Newspapers, and I have interviewed the shah on a couple of occasions, I suspected that Mary Byrne knew more about the situation that we did. Accordingly, I asked her to send me a memorandum on her thinking.

This is the memo that she wrote:

OPEC price hike could push U.S. economy into recession

WASHINGTON (AP) — High-ranking Carter administration officials say that if oil-exporting nations decide on another big increase in prices, they could push the U.S. economy into a major recession.

"Another big oil price rise would be extremely difficult for us and the Western world generally to swallow," said one such official, who asked not to be named. He said it would make an already difficult economic situation much worse.

Officials agree that some increase is likely. But they disagree on whether the Iranian crisis has darkened the price outlook. Some feel it has; others say it should make no significant yifference. None wants to be quoted by name.

Members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries already have increased prices 60-70 percent this year, and they will meet in Caracas Dec. 17 to decide whether to raise them further in 1980.

One U.S. official said there is reason to believe OPEC may increase the price by a dollar or two over the current OPEC ceiling price of $23.50 a barrel, a hike that would not be disastrous.

A few OPEC nations, Nigeria, Libya and Algeria, already have broken the ceiling, with Nigeria's oil priced at $26.27 a barrel. Industry analysts have forecast a per-barrel increase of $2 to $4 at Caracas.

"Although we assume there will be some increase, oil prices are already so high at this point that it doesn't really make much difference whether they go up, or down, a dollar or two," a U.S. official said.

I wish you could find out who owns the property in the 1800 block of West Texas and see if something could be done about getting it cleaned up.

That is a shame and disgrace to Midland.

Lots are bad all over town. Looks like the city could pass out some tickets regarding this. — C.C.

ANSWER: The Inspections Department of the city of Midland has been notified, and AL was assured the department would check on the ownership of the property and take steps for the cleaning of the area.

In situations such as this the property owner is notified that the situation must be taken care of within a reasonable length of time. If the owner fails to respond, the city will mow and clean the property at the owner's expense.

However, this standard procedure takes more time, if the owners do not live in Midland. They must be located and notified before any action can be taken.

Concerning the Central YMCA. Could you please find out why this Y seems to gradually be changing into a private club for adults?

And, is it true that after the first of the year a fee will be charged for each class our children will be involved in, even though we have memberships?

Also, why are there not more activities for children? — Mary Elkins

ANSWER: A copy of your letter to Answer Line was forwarded to Joe M. Ellis Jr., executive director of the Central Y, to obtain the information you requested.

In reply, Mr. Ellis said, "I appreciate your concerns as expressed in your recent letter to Answer Line."

He goes on to explain that because of the Y's proximity to downtown Midland, it does have a high adult participation level at noon time and during the after-work hours. However, he points out, "38 percent of the total Central YMCA membership is made up of youth members between the ages of 6 months and 17 years."

Mr. Ellis also says it is true that beginning Jan. 1, there will be a small registration fee for classes, which has become necessary, according to Mr. Ellis, "because, we, like everyone else, have been affected by the high inflation rates. Program fees and membership dues are the only sources of revenue, as the Central Y does not receive funding from the United Way."

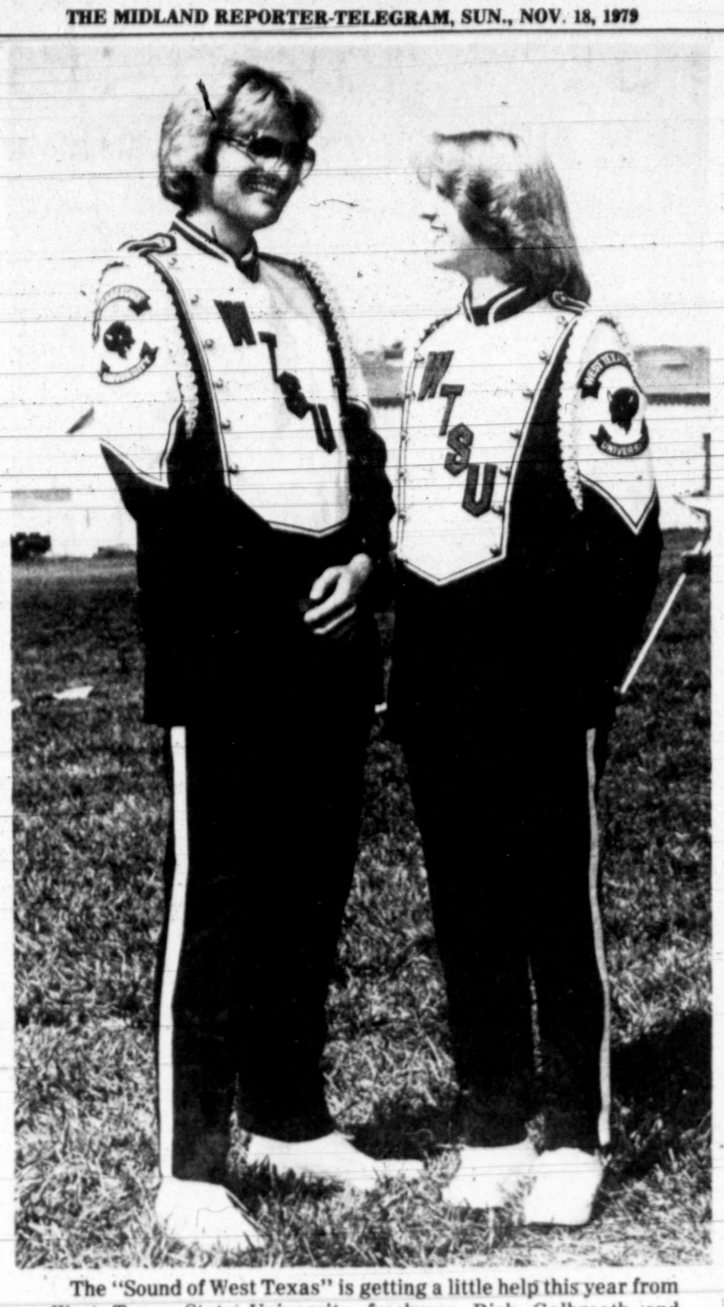
Mr. Ellis also includes a list of 24 activities the Y provides for youth. This program is similar to those of other Y's, he says. Also, "a significant factor related to youth programming for the Central YMCA is that a very small percentage of our youth members live within walking distance of our building. This means we do a lot of youth programming away from the building."

What can I do about getting rid of cockroaches in my home? — I.P.

ANSWER: In addition to the commercial insecticides, etc., available, here is something different we read recently and it was reported to be successful:

Mix one-fouth cup of sugar, one-fourth cup of boric acid powder and one-half cup of yellow cornmeal. Stir this thoroughly; pour into a squeeze bottle and squirt it along the sides of the drainboard, cupboards and other areas the cockroaches travel.

Use the mixture every week until the critters are no more.



The "Sound of West Texas" is getting a little help this year from West Texas State University freshmen Rick Galbreath and Barbara Day, both of Midland. Galbreath, a music education major, is the son of B.F. Galbreath, 4518 Erie Drive. Miss Day, an English major, is the daughter of Samuell Day, 4300 Boulder Drive.

Bird expert training macaws for possible 'seeing eye' duty

By ROBERT LOCKE

SUNLAND, Calif. (AP) — Hollywood animal trainer Ray D. Berwick says most people react with a skeptical chuckle when they hear he is training big red macaws to become "seeing eye birds" for the blind.

But he says a lot of skepticism fades when the scoffers see the birds perform.

Berwick, 52, and a bird-trainer for 2½ decades, said he became convinced that parrot-like birds could handle guide dog duties while training a cockatoo named Fred, former star of the now-canceled television series "Baretta."

Berwick, who talks to Fred in complete sentences, insists the bird "understands words probably as well as a 3- or 4-year-old kid."

It is too soon to judge if Berwick's birds might someday join guide dogs as mobile eyes for the blind — whether they could do the job or would be welcomed.

But a pair of colorful macaws named Sylvester and Jo-Jo, riding on homemade perches and manipulating bells, buzzers and straps, can lead their sighted trainers around an assortment of obstacles and even identify red or green traffic lights in exchange for bits of food.

Berwick admits the fairly simple, repetitive tasks at his noisy aviary-training center at Sunland, a semi-rural suburb of Los Angeles, are a long way from the real world.

But, he said in an interview, "We've only been at this for a couple of months. The next step is to go out on the sidewalks and teach them that it's not just here that they have to perform."

Berwick trains animals for movies and television. His credits include "The Birdman of Alcatraz" and, of course, Alfred Hitchcock's "The Birds."

Berwick says that big talking birds such as parrots, macaws and cockatoos offer some advantages over dogs as guides for the blind.

The most important, he said, is that the big birds live almost as long as humans, often reaching ages of 50 to 60 years compared to about 15 years for dogs. Berwick also says birds could be twice as fast as dogs, do not eat as much and do not have to be walked everyday.

He has formed a nonprofit corporation called Seeing Eye Avians and says several organizations for the blind have agreed to look at his birds.

Berwick has developed a mount something like the tray vendors hang from their necks at ball games. The bird perches near the front of the assembly and guides his master around a 30-foot obstacle course. By tugging with its beak on various loops and levers, the bird rings a bell to signal an impending obstacle or step and sets off buzzers of different tones for red or green lights.

Sample Social Security cards recalled

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Social Security Administration, afraid history might repeat itself, has recalled 1 million copies of a pamphlet showing a sample Social Security card that looked too authentic.

The blue-and-white card, complete with name and number, was pictured in a wallet on the front of a brochure intended for young workers.

Social Security chieftains had second thoughts about the brochure after a printer mailed the million copies to its 1,300 district offices at the end of October.

It brought back uncomfortable memories of a fiasco that erupted in 1938 after a New York wallet-maker put copies of his secretary's Social Security card in his wallet to show that they fit.

Thousands of people who bought the wallets thought they were getting a personal card for the then-fledgling retirement program. Over the next 24 years, Social Security got 40,000 wage reports from people who used the number on the wallet card — 078-05-1120.

Peggy Rhoades, the agency spokeswoman, said Thursday that the card depicted on the brochure is smaller than a real card and the seal is faded. But, she added, "We just didn't want to run the risk of anything like the New York wallet situation happening."

She said the brochure card also might tempt people who wanted a phony Social Security card.

She said the pamphlets, which cost $22,500 to print, would be re-used after "Sample" is stamped across the card or a hole is punched in it.

Bush brings campaign to Midland Tuesday

George Bush

George Bush, a former Midlander and a candidate for the Republican nomination for president, brings his campaign to the Tall City Tuesday.

He will come to Midland on a campaign swing that also will take him to Wichita Falls and Lubbock.

The three appearances will be his first in Texas since winning straw ballots in Iowa, Maine and Rhode Island.

Bush's day will start with a fund-raising breakfast in Wichita Falls. At noon he will attend a luncheon in Lubbock, followed by a press conference at 3:45 p.m. at the Midland Regional Airport.

Bush will finish the day in Midland with an evening fund-raising reception at the home of Robert Holt before returning to Houston.

Ohio governor says GOP should attack dependence on foreign oil

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Ohio Gov. James A. Rhodes predicted Saturday a Republican will be elected president in 1980 if he attacks "our overdependence on foreign oil by offering a program to burn coal and cut our oil imports by half or more."

"Energy is the issue," Rhodes said in a statement, "because our present energy shortage and price problems are at the heart of inflation, unemployment, high interest rates, weakened national defense posture and a deterioriating American standard of living."

Rhodes said the energy issue transcends historical political lines and gives Republicans a chance to attract more working people hurt hard by inflation.

"The energy crisis is a sham," he said, "a failure of our federal government in Washington to meet the needs of Americans. We have allowed our nation to be buffaloed by environmental and regulatory expremists with the result that our native energy resources are tied in red tape, and we must beg for OPEC oil at whatever cost."

GOP governors gather in Austin

To hear from candidates, discuss energy, trade

AUSTIN (AP) — Seventeen Republican governors are gathering here Sunday to hear from presidential candidates and to discuss what their states are doing about energy, foreign trade and fiscal responsibility.

The governors also will hear campaign appeals from GOP presidential candidates John Connally, Sen. Howard Baker, Sen. Larry Pressler, Benjamin Fernandez and Harold Stassen.

Sen. Robert Dole may attend if he can make schedule changes, Griffith said.

Those not appearing, mostly because of campaign schedule conflicts, were Ronald Reagan, George Bush, Rep. Phillip Crane, and Rep. John Anderson.

Former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger also will address the governors at the closing session of the two-day conference.

"We hope to give everyone an idea what the governors are doing in these critical areas compared to what is not happening at the national level," said Ralph Griffith, executive director of the Republican Governors Association.

Each candidate was asked to make a five-minute statement then be ready for about 10 minutes of questions from the governors.

"This conference is for the governors, the candidates are just our guests," said Griffith.

On Sunday night the governors, accompanied by those who contributed up to $200,000 for the conference, will be entertained at a showplace ranch south of Austin.

Gov. Otis R. Bowen, Indiana, opens the first general session, expected to attract about 800, on Monday morning. A panel, "Energy: What the States Are Doing," will feature Govs. Lamar Alexander, Tennessee; William P. Clements, Texas; John Dalton, Virgina and Pete du Pont, Delaware.

Gov. Richard Thornburg, Pennsylvania, will tell of his experiences during the Three-Mile Island nuclear emergency.

Former President Gerald Ford speaks Monday afternoon followed by a panel on fiscal responsibility that features Govs. Albert Quie, Minnesota; Lee Dreyfus, Wisconsin; Charles Thone, Nebraska; and Richard Snelling, Vermont.

A business session Monday is expected to consider resolutions from the various governors and proposed policy statements on the conference subjects.

A panel on foreign trade will include Govs. Victor Atiyeh, Oregon; Robert Ray, Iowa; William Milliken, Michigan; and James Thompson, Illinois.

Kennedy 2-1 favorite over Carter among labor leaders willing to say

WASHINGTON (AP) — Edward M. Kennedy enjoys a 2-1 advantage over Jimmy Carter among AFL-CIO leaders willing to commit themselves to a 1980 Democratic presidential candidate, a survey shows.

But an Associated Press check of 513 local, regional and national union leaders — more than half the delegates to the AFL-CIO convention in Washington — also indicates that many labor leaders haven't yet made up their minds.

The survey showed 187 favor Kennedy and 92 want Carter re-elected, while 195 are undecided between the two Democrats.

Another 14 delegates said they lean toward the Massachusetts senator, while 12 said they were leaning toward the president.

The third Democratic candidate, Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. of California, had scant support. Only seven delegates said they preferred or were leaning toward him.

Six delegates spread their choices among five Republican candidates.

The random survey was conducted Friday on the floor of the AFL-CIO convention. In brief interviews, the delegates were asked to state who they would most like to see elected president in 1980.

Carter and Kennedy are courting labor support for their campaigns. Unions, with their substantial financial, organizational and manpower resources, can be mighty forces in political contests.

The survey is consistent with previous estimates by most union leaders who say the rank-and-file favor Kennedy because of his name and his long pro-labor record in the Senate.

"Kennedy has more charisma and more leadership ability and he could move this country forward," said Paul Davis of Ohio, a vice president of the 50,000-member International Chemical Workers Union.

But that sentiment may not hold, some officials said.

"We had solid Kennedy support for a few months but sentiment is changing," said Martin J. Ward, president of the 228,000-member Plumbers Union. "The president has done a good job in the past year."

Several other delegates say they had been leaning toward Kennedy but are now giving Carter another look because they approve of the way he is handling the crisis in Iran.

"Kennedy is talking now of Camelot and Carter is talking of meat and potatoes," said one Printers union official who asked not to be named. "I like the way Carter is handling himself in Iran."

Many of the delegates who expressed no preference said they were waiting for their national leaders to decide whom to endorse.

On the other hand, the most solid support for a candidate came from delegates in unions that already have taken a position. For example, Kennedy had unanimous support among delegates surveyed from the 664,000-member Machinists union, the first to back Kennedy.

Connally offers Reagan a challenge in Florida

The Associated Press

Former California Gov. Ronald Reagan beat back a strong challenge by John Connally at Florida's Republican convention to snatch first place Saturday in a non-binding straw ballot viewed as an early test of strength in the battle for the presidency.

Reagan supporters danced in the aisles to ragtime music, stomped atop their chairs, tossed hot-air balloons and Indian feathers into the air and chanted his name.

Their candidate left Orlando to campaign in Iowa before the vote was taken, but was confident enough to leave a recorded victory speech.

Depending on how the results were interpreted, either Connally, a former Texas governor, or Illinois Rep. Philip Crane took second place. Both claimed the spot.

Meanwhile, the Democratic state convention in St. Petersburg had all the trappings of a pep rally for President Carter, who sent his wife, Rosalynn, as his representative.

Delegates stood on chairs to applaud Mrs. Carter, who walked up and down aisles shaking hands. She praised the president's handling of the Iranian crisis, saying he was "acting with calmness, courage and measured action."

She boasted that Carter has kept the country at peace. Carter is a heavy favorite in his party's nonbinding straw poll Sunday.

In the first-choice balloting at the Republican convention, Reagan received 483 or 36.4 percent of the 1,357 delegates. That came close to the 35 percent that Reagan supporters recently said the longtime front-runner would receive but was far short of the 2-1 victory margin organizers claimed several months ago.

Connally followed Reagan with 354 votes for 26.6 percent of the votes as the delegates' first choice for president.

In a separate second-choice vote, Crane received 461 votes or 34.7 percent. He was followed by former CIA director George Bush, who garnered 325 votes or 24.5 percent.

"I am delighted and very proud of the decision you have made...I am also very humble," Reagan said in his speech. "Nothing would please us more than Republicans in this state choosing us officially as your banner carrier."

The hall emptied as soon as the victory speeches ended.

Connally, who came here a day early to woo delegates, said he had hoped to come within 5 percent of Reagan but insisted the straw ballot showed it was a two-man race between him and Reagan.

"If I don't beat him, he's going to be the candidate," Connally said.

Crane and Bush also came early to campaign, and it showed in the voting. Bush, with 280 votes, and Crane, with 183, came in strong behind Reagan and Connally as the first choice of delegates.

The others on the ballot dropped dismally low: Senate Minority Leader Howard Baker of Tennessee and Kansas Sen. Bob Dole with nine votes each; South Dakota Sen. Larry Pressler with six; former Treasury Secretary William Simon and former Minnesota Gov. Harold Stassen with one each. There were no votes for California economist Ben Fernandez or Illinois Rep. John Anderson.

The straw ballots at the two state conventions, only concidentally held on the same weekend, are considered an early indicator of presidential strength. But the significance is purely psychological.

The state's actual delegates to both the Republican and Democratic national conventions will not be selected until the March 11 Florida primary. Florida will send 100 delegates to the Democratic National Convention and 51 delegates to the GOP convention.

At the Democratic convention hall, a dozen or so green and white Carter campaign signs dangled from the ceiling of the Bayfront Convention Center auditorium. But there was little sign of organized activity bly remember the Persians under King Barius as the opponents of Alexander the Great in the 3rd century B.C. At that time their polytheistic religion (worship of many deities) was called Zoroastrianism and they were ruled by emperors with the title Shahanshah, which means king of kings, a phrase familiar to us from the Bible.

From that time until the 7th century, when Iran was conquered by the Muslim Arabs, that country vacillated between periods of strength when a Shahanshah ruled Persia and conquered surrounding lands, and periods of disintegration when the lords of the king of kings broke away and established petty local kingships. Throughout this period, however, Persia remained a strong cultural, religious and linguistic entity.

The Persian language is more closely related to German than to Arabic and the Persian people are Aryan like ourselves, not Senites like their Arab neighbors.

Now we must shift perspectives and take a look at the Islamic World. Mohammad, born in 970 A.C. in Mecca (Saudi Arabia) is the prophet and founder of the Islamic religion. The word Islam means submission or resignation and a Muslim is one who submits, in this case to the will of God.

Prior to the preaching of Islam by Mohammad, the Arabs were polytheists. Mohammad preached the religion of one God and destroyed the idols and icons previously worshipped by the Arab people. As in the case of Christ, he was not initially accepted but after a lifetime of preaching was able to gather a small following.

After his death, these people appointed a successor whose title was caliph. Under the ages of the early caliphs, Mohammad's Arab followers conquered all of Arabia, converting its people to monotheism (one god). Then they began spreading eastward with the message.

When the Arab conquerors reached the borders of Perisa in the mid-7th century they found a great empire in the final stages of decline due to internal causes and they conquered it with little military trouble. Emotional resistance, however, to conquest by a less civilized culture with an alien religion was strong. Subcurrents of this feeling have resurfaced periodically with varying degrees of strength.

From Persia, the Arab empire borrowed many elements of material culture including the imperial trappings of the Shahanshah, court ceremony and pomp and administration techniques, which they needed to run their now sprawling empire. As the empire developed, so did the religion of Islam. Partly, in reaction to the adoption of an imperial attitude on the part of the caliphs, the followers of Islam broke into two sects.

The Sunni sect stayed with the caliphs and the Shi'a sect called for a return to the simple ways of the past as one of its major tenets. This led to a new conception of the caliphate as an inherited position evolving from Mohammad to his son-in-law, Ali, and his heirs, rather than as an elected position as had been the case. This Shi'a sect began in Iraq where the capital of the Arab empire had been during the caliphate of Ali. From there it spread to Iran where it is still today the most prominant branch of Islam in that country.

I would emphasize that it is not separate from Islam but simply a sect within Islam which differs from Sunni Islam mainly on the question of the leadership of Islam. The caliph had never possessed spiritual leadership in Islam, only political leadership.

However, the Shi'a sect attributed to the Imam, as Ali and his descendants are called, absolute personal rule in both a spiritual and a political format. Twelve Imams are recognized by the Persians as having ruled, although the twelfth disappeared arund 878 and his return is still awaited.

This is a very important point.

As these Imams ruled, a mythology grew up which attributes to them supernatural qualities and superhuman character and in some cases they were regarded as incarnations of the Godhead itself.

Now, let me return for a moment to Persian history. Since the 7th century the Persians have been under the thumb, culturally and religiously of the foreign Arabs. The present shah and his father tried to hark back to the pre-Islamic pas of their nation in an attempt to use the appeal of past grandeur to generate modernization and, eventually, a new leadership role in the area. In so doing they appealed to anti-Islamic, pro-Persian elements in the society, surrounding themselves with non-Muslims, upper class landowners, military men and foreigners, while openly flaunting the tenets of Islam and showing disdain for religious symbols, religious figures and middle and lower class religious sentiment.

Whenever one group is in power, there are bound to be opposition groups plotting, planning and awaiting the opportunity to seize power.

This has been true in Iran since 1953, when the history of the present Iranian revolution began. For years various separate groups opposed the shah for various reasons, but it was not until the early 70s that they joined together under the common banner of Islam and chose as their leader the exiled, but popular, Ayatollah (a title in the religious hierarchy similar to bishop) Khomeini.

Thus a basic split between the power of the government and the prestige of the religious was created.

Religious prestige in Islam is not based on what you think of yourself but on what others think of you and thus simply showing up in church is not enough. To gain the prestige reserved for religious figures you must be known as a good Muslim.

Initially Khomeini was called Imam, since he was the leader — secular and spiritual — of Shi'ite Iran. Within a few months, however, as his intense piety was observed by the masses, he began to be called THE IMAM, meaning the missing twelfth Imam, whose image is resplendent with all the supernatural qualities 10 centuries of waiting can give. To Iranians, the appearance of the twelfth Imam is equivalent to the second coming for Christians, or for Jews, the Messiah. Only in this context can his absolute power among the people be fully appreciated.

What we see today in Iran is the aftermath of this religiously inspired revoluton. The coalition which was formed to overthrow the shah is now fighting for supremacy among themselves and Khomeini's move to take over the U.S. Embassy must certainly be seen as an attempt on his part to prove his own strength.

Neighboring Iraq remains a mystery. The government has executed Communist plotters, yet it is wholly dependent on Russia for all of its military equipment, from helmets to tanks and aircraft. Its leaders take Iran's religious war seriously. Iraq's religion is Shi'a Moslem as is Khomeini's.

Russia probably will be deterred from using Iraq or any other Middle Eastern country from taking advantage of Iran's confusion, however, for fear that their own anti-Islamic, atheistic government might meet the fate of the shah.

Two men charged with unlawful use of pickup truck in Reagan County

BIG LAKE — Two men, charged with unlawful use of a pickup truck owned by Reagan County rancher Steve Coates, were in the Reagan County Jail late Saturday night in lieu of posting $10,000 bonds.

Charged before Peace Justice Pauline Stout were Tony Martinez, 23, of Mexico, alleged driver of the pickup, and Lupe Hernandez, 37, of San Angelo.

Martinez reportedly at one time had worked on ranch fences in Reagan County.

The two men, who allegedly stole Coates pickup from his ranch eight miles north of here Friday night, were arrested Saturday morning by Irion County Sheriff Delmon West after the pickup crashed into a culvert near Mertzon, about 43 miles east of here. The pickup was heavily damaged, but neither Martinez nor Hernandez was seriously injured.

The case was investigated by Reagan County Chief Deputy Sheriff Stacy Becknell.

High temperature in upper 60s forecast for Permian Basin today

The nip, which temporarily has sneaked out of autumn, should ease back into the Midland area at least by Tuesday.

Meanwhile, nighttime temperatures are forecast for the upper 40s, while the high today should be in the upper 60s, said a weatherman at the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport. The high Monday should peak into the lower 60s.

The cooling trend should return Monday night, but nippy temperatures approaching the freezing mark may not return until Tuesday, the weatherman said.

The high temperature Saturday was 70, 15 degrees off the record high of 85 degrees for a Nov. 17 in 1953. The record low for a Nov. 18 is 24 degrees set in 1959. Saturday's low was 40 degrees.

Southerly winds, under partly cloudy skies, today should be 15 to 20 mph, the weatherman said.

Showers pelted most of South Texas Saturday, popping up from Matagorda to Del Rio.

Most other sections reported cloudy skies.

36-year-old Odessan fatally stabbed

ODESSA — A 36-year-old Odessa man, Luther Thomas Busby, was fatally stabbed in the chest at his home on Odessa's southeast side Saturday afternoon, according to Odessa police.

Peace Justice Manuel Valles pronounced the man dead at 4 p.m., some 30 minutes after the stabbing. Police said Busby was stabbed once with a kitchen knife, which nicked his heart.

The victim's wife, Emma, 36, was arrested and jailed, according to police officials. Murder charges are to be filed against her today, police said.

Busby was employed by the Ector County Independent School District, police said.

Safety in school zones as simple as do's, don'ts

For the safety and protection of school children in compliance with state and city laws and school policy, the following list of "do's" and "don'ts" are given for parents when delivering and picking up students at schools.

Do's include:

—Pull to curb to load or unload students (city ordinance). If the passenger loading zone is congested, load or unload students from another adjacent street and let the students walk across school grounds to the building.

—Load or unload all students from the curb side of the vehicle.

—Instruct students to cross the street only at the crosswalk (state law).

—Instruct students to obey instructions of the student safety patrol.

—Instruct students to use the sidewalk area and to not walk in the street.

Don'ts include:

—Do not load or unload students from the traffic lane (city ordinance).

—Do not allow students to enter or exit from the left side of the vehicle into the traffic lane.

—Do not signal students to cross the street other than at a crosswalk area.

—Do not load or unload students in the crosswalk area (state law).

—Do not allow students to run in or across the street.

Morning times on the signs are usually the same, with afternoon times differing most.

"We could put up the same signs all over town but it would impede traffic unnecessarily," he said.

THERE WAS A TIME when school crossing and zone times were uniform, said Wicker, but that was before busing began.

"Early and late hours are due to busing, which makes the kids get up early and go home late," he explained.

The school zone or crossing begins with a rectangular speed limit sign which designates the speed. A triangular yellow sign precedes the speed limit sign to warn drivers of the regulated area.

At some heavy traffic areas, flashing lights are used to warn drivers of the zone. In the heaviest traffic areas, crossing guards are present.

In areas where there is not enough traffic to warrant a reduction of speed, there is simply a warning sign to let people know there is a school in the vicinity.

DETERMINING WHERE a zone or crossing ends can be a more complicated matter.

It officially ends with the speed limit sign on the opposite side of the street which regulates the speed of traffic from the other direction.

However, some of the yellow warning signs have "end zone" printed on the back. The message is a leftover from the days when another city engineer was in charge, said Wicker.

"It would be safe to assume that you are out of the zone when you reach that sign," he said.

The city now is erecting signs indicating a resumption of the normal speed for the area at the end of school zones and crossings. For instance, if the normal street speed is 35 mph and you have slowed to 20 mph for a school zone, normal speed may be resumed at the next 35 mph sign following the zone. Some of the city's school zones and crossings already have this system.

Enforcement of school zone and crossing regulations is handled by six officers in the traffic division who are backed up by regular patrol officers, said Wicker.

The officers patrol various school and crossing zones on an irregular basis usually when children are actually on the streets and when traffic is heaviest, he said.

"Basically most citizens obey the school speed laws. As a guess I'd say probably 85 percent of them obey the laws. Of the remaining 15 percent, about 10 percent don't realize they are in a school zone and 5 percent just don't care."

Planned Parenthood battle over...this year

By SUSAN TOTH
Staff Writer

The battle over Planned Parenthood's inclusion in the United Way community fund drive in Odessa and Big Spring is essentially over now as both campaigns draw to a close, but the battle lines already are being drawn for next year's clash, which could include the Midland fund drive.

In Odessa, where Odessans for Life represented the most vocal opposition to the agency's part in the United Way drive, the fund-raising campaign finished over-goal and on schedule, thanks in part to a significant effort from the "special gifts" division.

That group, which solicits support from large contributors reached 145 percent of its goal. Altogether, the Odessa United Way drive raised $617,309, or 100.4 percent of its $615,000 goal.

The Big Spring campaign is still under way, but UW officials express confidence they will reach their goal despite the vocal opposition of a pro-life group opposed to Planned Parenthood's part in the drive.

The Odessa campaign, which drew the most vocal opposition this year, contributes about $7,000 to the Perian Basin Planned Parenthood organization.

In Midland, where the contribution from United Way to the Planned Parenthood organization is $20,000, the protests were essentially non-existent this year, but plans already are under way to oppose the drive next year if Planned Parenthood still is a member agency.

Opposition to Planned Parenthood has been based primarily on its abortion counseling services, a practice used in about .07 percent of the agency's contacts, Planned Parenthood officials said.

Officials from Planned Parenthood of the Permian Basin — a regional organization which receives United Way funds from Midland, Odessa, Big Spring and Pecos — and the United Way campaigns in Midland, Odessa and Big Spring have said the agency will remain a United Way member agency.

The decision to keep the agency may focus more attention on the controversy next year. And next year, the battle may come to Midland.

"The people in Midland just didn't get organized early enough, and they didn't have a spokesman," Bill Price, head of Odessans for Life, said last week after a pro-life rally at an Odessa church where two Midlanders were among the many spoke out against Planned Parenthood.

"Next year, I feel sure we'll have more support from there."

The two speakers, Cindy Miller of the Texas Eagle Forum, and the Rev. H.A. Halsey, pastor of the Midland Bible Church, said they would keep up the fight against the abortion counseling service.

This year, however, no one group in Midland led the pro-life fight.

"No one even approached me about it," the Rev. Cliff Blackburn, pastor of St. Ann's Catholic Church, the largest Catholic congregation in the city.

The newly-appointed bishop of the diocese of San Angelo, which includes both Midland and Odessa, sent a letter of support to Odessans for Life last week applauding the group's pro-life stand.

Blackburn, however, agreed with the Rev. Charles Hassenauer, pastor of Our Lady of Guadalupe Catholic Church, who noted taking a stand now would be "anticlimactic."

There will be "low-keyed attention paid to this at parish council meetings to prepare the people maybe for next year," Hassenauer said.

"We might have a more organized attempt to publicly educate the people in our parish about Planned Parenthood being funded by United Way," Hassenauer noted, adding he felt it was more appropriate "to begin things in a gradual way for a more positive approach."

Mormon church court spends day hammering out specific charges

STERLING PARK, Va. (AP) — A Mormon church court that convened on Saturday to try Sonia Johnson for her active support of the proposed Equal Rights Amendment over church objections spent the day hammering out specific charges.

"I'm euphoric about the way things worked out," Mrs. Johson, 43, said in a telephone interview from her home here.

"We spent four hours having what we kind of light-heartedly called a pre-trial planning session. We realized that none of us understood what the issues were and had to agree on them."

Mrs. Johnson; Bishop Jeff Willis; Stephen Wilcox, a bishop's counselor; and Dick Brown, a member of the Sterling Park Ward, or parish, all agreed on what issues would be heard at the trial, set for Dec. 1.

Mrs. Johnson said the charges would focus on whether her pro-ERA activies hinder church missionary work, cause members to lose respect for their elders or give outsiders a false idea of the church.

Mrs. Johnson, a mother of four, was one of the four founders of Mormons for ERA, a nationwide group working for passage of the ERA. The Church of Jesus Christ of the Latter-day Saints, or the Mormon church, opposes the measure.

Mrs. Johnson has testified before congressional hearings on the ERA and has been active in trying to get the amendment passed by the Virginia General Assembly.

"I'm very suprised and pleased we worked together," Mrs. Johnson said. After first being told the trial would be delayed, she was given only 13 hours notice of Saturday's 11 a.m. hearing.

At the start of the session, she said, "we were all hostile and distrustful. But then we got it off our chests and got on with it.

"I just insisted on absolute openness ... I don't like to hide feelings. I just laid it to them."

While the church court was in closed session, supporters of Mrs. Johnson, including Mormons, non-Mormons, National Organization of Women members and other ERA activists, demonstrated outside.

Mrs. Johnson said she does not think her ERA work is wrong and will be prepared to defend herself on Dec. 1. She said plans to have a least three Mormon women from Utah and three Virginia ERA activists testify on her behalf.

The ERA, which would outlaw discrimination based on sex, must be ratified by 38 states by June 30, 1982, to become part of the U.S. Constitution. The original deadline was March 22, 1979, but was extended by act of Congress.

The ERA has been approved by 35 states, but five have since rescinded approval. The validity of that move still is in question and the Justice Department has said it is up to Congress to decide.

Bishop Willis will hear the trial along with Brown and Wilcox, although the bishop will decide the verdict alone. Willis, a personnel officer for the Central Intelligence Agency, was not available for comment.

The bishop could decide on exoneration, excommunication, probation, disfellowship or that the trial should not have been called. Disfellowship allows an individual to remain a member of the church but bars the member from sacraments and leadership positions.

Mrs. Johnson said she has her husband's support for her work and thought her family was as happy as she was over Saturday's meeting.

"They all seem to be pleased," she said. "If they're not pleased, they should be."

Mormon president undergoes surgery to remove blood clot

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Mormon President Spencer W. Kimball, 84, underwent surgery Saturday in which a blood clot was removed from over the right side of the brain and he was reported afterwards resting comfortably.

It was the second time in three months doctors removed a potentially fatal subdural hematoma from Kimball's skull.

"We feel that the outcome of this surgery will be very gratifying. Whether or not this is going to be a recurring thing, I don't know," Dr. Bruce F. Sorensen said at a news conference following surgery.

"We can do as many as we have to but I hope this is the last one," he said.

Sorensen said Kimball, leader of the 4.3 million-member Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, began complaining of a "fleeting numbness in his left arm" early in the week. But he was in excellent spirits when he was admitted Friday afternoon.

"He said if it's something that has to be done, 'Let's do it,'" Sorensen quoted Kimball as saying.

When asked if Kimball's busy schedule could have led to the hematoma, Sorensen said, "We were concerned about this," but "just because he was up and around" does not increase the risk.

"We would be concerned if he had some falls or stumbled. He does not recall any," Sorensen said.

He said a hematoma occurs when a "vein tears because of a jar or stress, especially as a person gets older."

Sorensen said Kimball will be in intensive care for three days, and in the hospital for 12 to 14 days.

Basques denounce the pope

MADRID, Spain (AP) — Persons claiming to be Basque separatists holding a government official for ransom denounced Pope John Paul II on Saturday for participating in what they called an "international campaign" that could endanger the official's life.

Telephone callers who said they represented the separatist organization ETA told a radio station in San Sebastian that Javier Ruperez, abducted in Madrid six days ago, would not be freed unless the government meets its demands. It seeks the release of five imprisoned ETA leaders and an investigation into alleged police torture.

The radio station said the calls seemed authentic.

The callers also said Amnesty International in London erred in denouncing the kidnapping.

The pope, at a Vatican audience last week, urged that Ruperez, a member of Parliament and director of foreign affairs for the ruling Centrist Party of Premier Adolfo Suarez, be released.

The callers accused the pontiff of taking part in an "insolent and hypocritical" campaign and said he "only agrees with violence when it is used against the oppressed."

DC-10 makes unscheduled landing after passenger attempts hitting pilot

BILLINGS, Mont. (AP) — A Northwest Airlines DC-10 made an unscheduled landing here Saturday after an unruly passenger tried to hit the pilot, Federal Aviation Administration officials said.

Spokesmen at the FAA regional communications office in Denver said Flight 28 from Seattle to Chicago's O'Hare Airport landed in Billings at 3:40 p.m. MST. FAA security guards, FBI agents and local law enforcement officers removed the passenger from the plane, which resumed its flight a short time later.

The FAA officials, who did not want to be identified, said the male passenger became unruly early in the flight and that the plane's captain walked back to the passenger compartment to calm him down. The passenger "took a swing at the captain, missed, and was subdued by another passenger," a spokesman said.

The incident took place over western Montana about 30 minutes before the plane reached Billings, officials said.

There were no reported injuries, and the names of the pilot and the passenger were not released. Northwest Airlines officers in Billings and Seattle declined comment and refused to say how many passengers were aboard the plane.

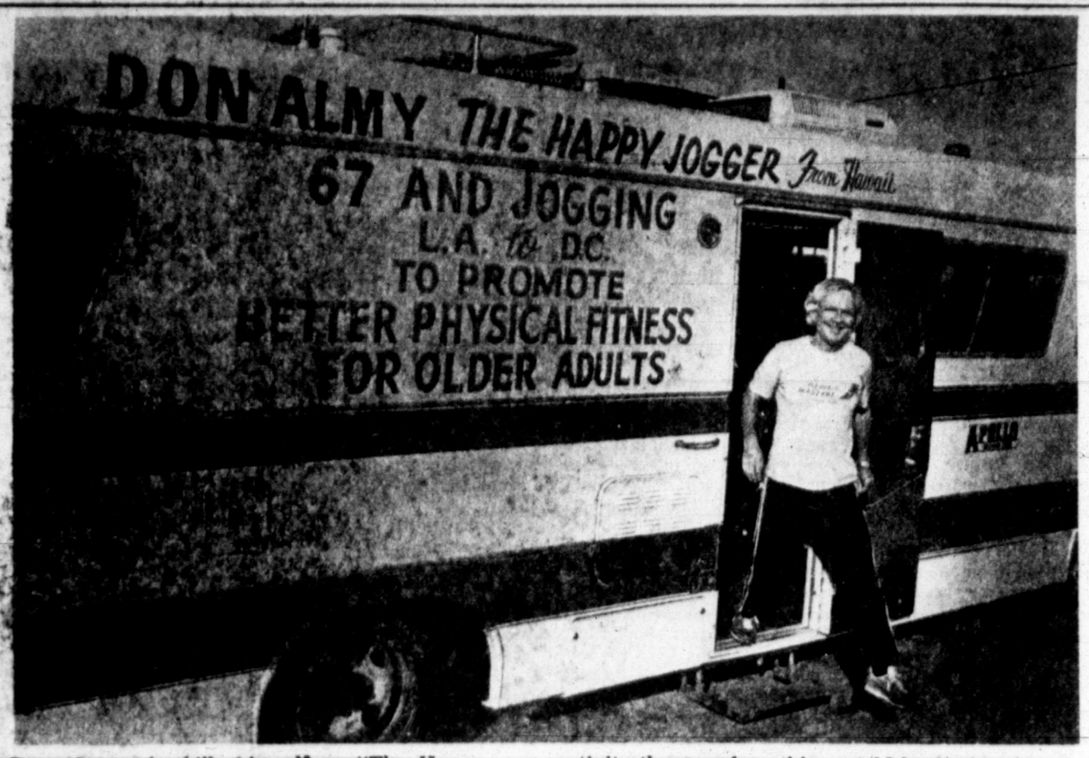
'Old man' jogging nation's elderly with fitness message



Don Almy, who bills himself as "The Happy Jogger from Hawaii," has found a certain happiness in telling older folks that that youthful feeling can be found in old age through exercise. "People think that the older they get the less activity they need; nothing could be further from the truth," says the 67-year-old runner. Almy was in Midland this weekend, jogging across the country — from "L.A. to D.C." (Staff Photo by Mike Kardos)

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Don Almy is an "old man" who's running with a mission.

He's jogging the 3,000 miles across the nation to tell older people that they're not as old as they might feel and that they can feel — and be — much better.

Almy is 67, but says he feels 47 and is more alive than ever.

"Our mission," he said as he and his wife, Camille, laid over in Midland this weekend midway through their year-long trip, "is to get the older people to stay active, to get them active, to get them to walking. They've got to replace the physical activity of working with something after they retire."

Otherwise, they'll find themselves in a predicament similar to his of five years ago.

"I WAS A SICK MAN WHEN I WAS 62," said the 5-foot-7 retired career Air Force officer. He weighed 195 pounds then and felt the certainty of an impending heart attack or stroke.

He chose to seek health and well-being.

"They (the Air Force) retired me 20 percent disabled (in 1965) because of my heart, (but) that's all gone now. The five prescription drugs I used to take are gone now, including the sedatives."

Today, five years after he got into running, Almy bills himself as "The Happy Jogger from Hawaii."

Why did a man, bordering on the "twilight years" of life, finally decide to rekindle his aging body with a semblance of youth — that "feeling good" feeling?

"I decided I ought to do something about my health," said Almy, who was a researcher in life science in the Air Force.

"I knew enough about the physical condition of people and medicine that I was heading for a stroke or a heart attack, and I was the only one who could do anything about it."

He did.

HIS CONVERSION TO RUNNING, JOGGING and eating wholesome foods came in 1974.

He turned to Dr. Kenneth Cooper's "Aerobics" and started on a walking and running regime.

He discarded his pills, dropped his weight by 40 pounds, began feeling revitalized, and began sharing the truth he found in exercise. He has run in 10 marathons since his conversion.

Almy has retired to Hawaii, where he heads up a program for "Physical Fitness for Older Adults" and is working on a master's degree — his third — in gerontology at the University of Hawaii. And he keeps fit by helping others get — and keep — in shape.

"In Hawaii, I have a lot of running friends." But few are in his age bracket.

"There's not many older men to run with, and the younger men run faster than I. And that leaves me with the young women. A lot of my running friends are young women."

ALMY'S WIFE, A RETIRED UNIVERSITY special education teacher and an opera singer, doesn't mind the company he keeps on the jogging trail.

"She thinks that's fine," he said. "Keeps me running."

His wife, who is recovering from a stroke she suffered a year and a half ago, drives their 30-foot self-contained road home, tabbed "The Barge" from Verdi's opera "Aida," along the route.

Now, the cross-country jogging he is doing is, by his own admission, a gimmick. (He's really running — jogging — 10 or 12 miles a day the whole way.)

THE JOGGING SCHEME GETS THE ATTENTION he needs to get his physical fitness message in newspapers and on television and radio and across to older folks. And he makes the opportunity to speak to older people, who are in need of fitness, at club meetings, in nursing homes and wherever they'll listen to his message.

"The gimmick," he admitted, "is an old man running across the country."

Now, Almy neither looks nor acts like an "old man."

"I don't feel like an old man," he said in his Midland stopover. "When I was 62, I was an old man — a sick old man. Now, I feel like I'm 47."

Almy is the personification of his fitness-for-older-people message.

"I tell them to learn something about good nutrition. I tell everybody that they're never too old. They're never too weak to get around and get on a physical fitness program. And you'll benefit from it."

Almy delights to share his optimistic message to the older citizens and to younger ones who, if they live long enough, too, will be old people.

"Many of the ills of the aged are reversible, as it was in my case," he said. "These senility and other (ills and) problems of the aging can be forestalled and, in many cases, can be reversed.

"Get on a diet and exercise program," he said he tells his aging listeners. "It's never too late."

PUC grants boundary changes

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The Public Utility Commission has granted General Telephone Co. of the Southwest an amended certificate to change exchange area boundaries within Irion County.

The PUC also granted Texas Electric Service Co. certificates for a substation in Winkler County and a transmission line and substation in Ector County.

General Telephone's certificate was amended to change its Mertzon Exchange Area boundary within Irion County to include an area which previously was uncertified.

The amendment will bring two subscribers and a numbr of applicants for service within the Mertzon Exchange.

TESCO plans to locate the 3.75 megavolt-amp substation beneath an existing 69 kilovolt transmission line east of Wink in Winkler County.

The estimated cost of the substation is $117,924. TESCO sought the substation on grounds it was necessary to improve its voltage regulation and reduce the feeder loan and exposure on its existing 12 kilovolt distribution system.

The Ector County transmission line and substation will cost an estimated $529,628 and will serve the AMOCO North Cowden Plant.

TESCO plans to construct 2.5 miles of 138-kilovolt transmission line which will tap the existing Moss-Holt line approximately ¼ mile north of FM 158 and then run easterly to the plant.

The line and substation are needed to provide service to the expanded plant.

Plenty of fuel available for holiday; Permian Basin leads pricing trend

HOUSTON (AP) — Texas motorists over the Thanksgiving holidays should have little difficulty finding gasoline but probably will find at least two full-service grades selling for more than $1 a gallon.

That was the message Friday from the American Automobile Association in releasing its monthly report on Texas gasoline availability.

The survey of 419 service stations indicated the average full-service price for premium gasoline is $1.001, compared with 98.8 cents a month ago. Premium unleaded passed the $1 mark last month and was said by the AAA to be holding a steady $1.002 average.

The highest averages listed in the survey report were $1.009 for premium full-service in Waco and the Midland-Odessa area. The lowest average was 89.7 cents for self-service regular in El Paso.

Diesel fuel ranged from a low of 92.6 cents a gallon in the Beaumont-Port Arthur area to a high of $1.009 in San Antonio.

The AAA said 47 percent of the stations expect to be open Thanksgiving Day, 44 percent on Sundays, 56 percent Saturday nights and 38 percent weekday nights.

Only 6 percent reported 24-hour operations.

Average full-service prices were 94.6 cents for regular, compared with 93.7 in October; 98.2 for premium, up from 97.1; $1.001 for premium, up from 98.8.

Strong quake reported in Fiji

SUVA, Fiji (AP) — A strong earthquake rocked islands in northern Fiji early today, causing damage, officials said. There were no immediate reports of casualties.

Laucala, one of the islands hit, is owned by New York publisher Malcolm Forbes, owner of Forbes business magazine. First reports said there was damage to a number of new buildings on Laucala, and to the island's jetty.

CAPP HA$ IT

Custom Homes

A Unique Idea—
In 1946, Capp Homes created the Finish-It-Yourself House™ program. Since then, over 60,000 Capp families have built their dream home and saved a bundle. You can too. Whether we build from your plans or ours, you get exactly what you want. Flexibility in custom-design is our password.

You Become the General Contractor—
General contractors buy the basic materials to build a home. They do some of the work themselves and hire sub-contractors for the rest. They mark up all their costs and pass it on to the buyer. They manage the project. We say you can do the same. Maybe better.

After Capp custom erects and encloses your home on the lot and foundation you provide, you take over. Do the finishing you want, and hire tradesmen for the rest. Of course, the more you do, the more you save.

Quality Finishing Touches—
The kitchen cabinets are magnificent. Appliances and bathroom fixtures are color-coordinated to your taste. The lighting, carpeting and everything you select from Capp will say quality. And they're all included in the price you sign for.

Construction Financing

Stop Waiting—
To stay ahead of inflation, you want to build now. Waiting for interest rates to drop next year may be a losing game. Today, your building lot and a small deposit may be all you need to get started with Capp.

Construction Money—
As a qualified buyer, Capp can provide you with all the construction money you need to finish your home. This loan covers all the materials Capp provides, including all structural materials and our full complement of finishing materials, appliances and fixtures. It also includes extra funds to buy things that Capp doesn't sell, like your foundation, masonry work, landscaping, or paying off your building lot.

Delayed Payment Feature—
Your construction loan works like a bank account. You draw on it as you need it, and you only pay interest on what you use. Then too, there's our liberal delayed payment feature. In fact, some Capp customers finish their new home and convert the total construction loan into permanent financing, before any construction loan payments fall due. Ask your Capp Representative for details.

Mortgage Money

Complete "One Stop" Home Financing—
Capp Homes total financing program is one of the best available. In addition to a construction loan, Capp offers qualified buyers a firm commitment to obtain a long term, permanent mortgage at competitive rates.

Capp Mortgage Money—
When you have completed the finishing work on your Capp Home, we can immediately convert your construction loan into a Capp permanent mortgage. Our full staff of financing experts will help you with all the details. We make it easy to build.

Your New Home—
It's something you shouldn't wait for any longer. Next year, housing prices will inevitably go up. But if you order now, Capp will protect your price for six full months, provided you start building within that time. It's like getting a 1980 house at 1979 prices, with all the financing you need. Act now. See your local Capp Representative for your free 100-page Home Planning Guide, or send the coupon below.

Survivors of fiery plane crash thank God and pilot for survival

GRAND CANYON, Ariz. (AP) — The 41 French tourists who lived through a fiery plane crash at the south rim of the Grand Canyon thanked God and the pilot for their "miraculous" survival.

A crew member, flight attendant Judy Morse, was hailed as a heroine for directing the speedy evacuation of the burning plane. Nine persons, including two crewmen, were injured, but none was killed.

In halting English and rapid French, the passengers told how the Nevada Airlines twin-engine Martin 404 prop plane lost power and crashed Friday after taking off for a return flight to Las Vegas.

"We are just happy to be alive," said Phillipe Georges, 30, a Paris restaurant owner.

"I was thinking this was my last moment," said passenger Guy Maysounave, 32, also of Paris.

"When the plane crashed, I was thinking of death and my family," added Jean-Michael Lajeanne, 30, through an interpreter.

Using gestures to mime the diving action of the plane, Lajeanne said "The driver of the plane, the pilot, he was very nice," meaning heroic.

Capt. William R. Blewett, 52, of Las Vegas, said the plane lost power in its left engine as it took off from Grand Canyon airport. He attempted to circle back to the runway but was losing altitude and hunted for a clearing in the rough, pine-covered terrain.

He spotted an area of open brush about 1½ mile from the runway and the plane began its descent. The craft's left wing struck a tree on the edge of the clearing, skidded along the ground and crashed into another tree.

Georges said: "We opened by ourselves the emergency exit. We have to go out. There were flames on the right side. The left motor had stopped. We crawled out and got out."

Miss Morse was sitting in a small flight attendants' cabin at the rear of the plane. The crash threw her seat through a partition separating her from the passengers' cabin.

She said the victims were calm. "In an emergency situation like that, I don't think language is a barrier. I think people know what you want them to do instictively. All I knew was to get them out as quickly as I could."

The injured were taken to the Grand Canyon clinic with an assortment of cuts, bruises and broken bones.

Dr. John Jamison of the clinic said: "It's amazing that no one was killed. As it is, the injuries are not all that bad."

Judge cites 'overwhelming' evidence of suffering, orders prison closed

DENVER (AP) — Saying the evidence of suffering was "overwhelming," a federal judge has ruled in favor of an inmates' suit to close Colorado's maximum security prison unit and ordered the facility never be used again after a replacement is complete.

U.S. District Judge John Kane's ruling followed a month-long trial. The American Civil Liberties Union had brought the class action suit for about 900 maximum security prisoners.

Although he said the maximum security unit at Canon City couldn't be closed immediately, Kane warned that "Old Max" must not be used again, not even as a standby, after the $11 million unit now under construction is opened in early 1981.

"I've not yet decided to order the immediate closure of Cellhouse 3 but I'm persuaded in that direction," Kane said.

Kane ordered an immediate inspection of Cellhouse 3 inmates by a mental health team and ordered that a full-time doctor and round-the-clock nursing staff be made available.

Opposing factions in Korea to cooperate on constitution

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — In an unprecedented display of unity, the head of the ruling Democratic Republican Party visted the leader of the opposition New Democrats Satuday and the two agreed to cooperate on writing a new constitution.

Former Prime Minister Kim Jong-pil, newly elected chief of the DRP, said his visit to Kim Young-sam was a courtesy call, but they issued a statement saying they would work together on drafting a constitution to guarantee smooth change-overs in the national leadership.

The constitution will replace one imposed by President Park Chung-hee, who was assassinated Oct. 26 by the head of the Korean Central Intelligence Agency. The killer is under arrest and awaiting trial.

Park, a general, became president following a military coup in 1961 and rewrote the constitution in 1972 to give him greater powers.

Leaders of South Korea's two main parties were not on speaking terms at the time of Park's death, and the Saturday meeting marked the first time the head of the ruling party had called on the opposition leader.

Their joint announcement, issued after the 30-minute meeting, kept the conciliatory tone of recent statements by both parties.

Newspapers, which are under martial law censorship, carried front-page photographs of the two men shaking hands. It was the first time Kim Young-sam's photo had been published since he was voted out of the National Assembly Oct. 3 by the ruling party for criticizing Park.

Choi Kyu-hah, named acting president by the Cabinet hours after the assassination, has said the 2,583-member electoral college will meet next month to chose Park's successor, who will rule while the constitution is rewritten. Choi is the front runner to fill the interim post.

In a nationally broadcast speech earlier this month, Choi said new elections would be held as soon as possible after the new charter was approved, but he set no date.

Kim Jong-pil said after the meeting Saturday, "It may take up to one year to draft a new constitution as sufficient discussions are needed."

Her car was stolen, wrecked but it had only just begun

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Her car was stolen, then wrecked and her daughter was raped. But a Milwaukee woman's troubles were only beginning.

First, she got a $1,600 bill for the medical expenses of one of the men charged with the rape, for injuries he suffered when the car was wrecked.

Then the state told her she had to post a $2,300 security deposit because of the crash, or lose her license to drive. The state later rescinded its request, but the city asked $1,260 for damages to a police squad car involved in the accident.

"It was bad enough my daughter was assaulted and my car was demolished," the woman said. "Then I had to go through the trouble of getting a lawyer, trying to straighten all this out. I'm not the criminal and I had to get legal advice."

"They raped my daughter, tore up my car and I'm stuck with their bills," the woman said. "I don't believe it."

The woman was not identified because state law prohibits identification of rape victims or their relatives.

The trouble began in June, when the woman's daughter, 18, was sitting in a car, waiting for a friend. Two men stole the car with her in it, then raped her and let her go, police said.

Police later spotted the car and began a chase, which ended when the car went through a roadblock and crashed into two vehicles, one of them a police squad car.

Then in August, the victim's mother said she received the $1,600 hospital bill for treatment of injuries suffered by one of the two men.

"When I got the bill, I said, 'This is crazy'," she said. "I tore it up. I couldn't believe they would send me the bill just because it was my car."

In October, the state Transportation Department notified her that she faced a possible suspension of her driver's license because her car was involved in the accident and told her to make a security deposit.

This month, the city attorney's office sent the woman a notice that damage to the police car involved in the accident.

"We are attaching hereto a statement to cover the cost of repairing damaged City of Milwaukee property, for which you are responsible or liable," she was told.

The woman's attorney, Thomas Jacobson, said the notice of driver's license suspension was withdrawn after he contacted state officials and explained the circumstances to them. But he said he's still trying to clear up the other matters.

"This is just a further indication of bureaucratic insensitivity in the computer age of dealing with very human problems," Jacobson said.

Meanwhile, in Circuit Court on Friday, Arthur F. Williams, 18, was sentenced to 10 years in the Green Bay Correctional Institution on convictions for false imprisonment and second-degree sexual assault. Sentencing is scheduled Dec. 19 for the other man convicted on similar charges, Michael J. Scott, also 18.

Former Cambodian ruler threatens to resume fight

PEKING (AP) — Former Cambodian ruler Prince Norodom Sihanouk, angered by Vietnam's refusal to open negotiations with him, said Saturday, "I will go back to the jungles of Cambodia to fight."

"Vietnam has totally rejected me and my proposals for peaceful negotiations so I have no longer any choice. I will now lead the armed struggle against the Vietnamese colonization of Cambodia," Sihanouk told reporters here. He said he made his decision Friday when the Vietnamese returned his latest negotiation offer to him unopened.

It was evident Sihanouk would not immediately plunge into the jungles of Cambodia, where Khmer Rouge guerrillas of ousted Premier Pol Pot are battling Vietnamese troops and soldiers of the Heng Samrin regime. Vietnam, with Soviet backing, invaded Cambodia last winter and helped Heng Samrin's rebels depose Pol Pot.

Sihanouk, who plans to begin a four-month tour of Europe this week, said he would ask China for the weapons and ammunition to arm between 20,000 and 30,000 volunteers recruited from Cambodia, the United States and refugee camps in Asia. He said he was confident China would reply favorably, although he has made no official request to the Chinese government, which is supporting Pol Pot.

Sihanouk said he will never ally himself to Pol Pot. He has accused the Pol Pot regime of killing millions of Cambodians, including 20 of the prince's own relatives. But he said he also would not attack Khmer Rouge guerrillas because they are now fighting as nationalists against Vietnam.

OC presents 'The Hobbit' today

ODESSA — The Odessa College drama department's production of "The Hobbit" will have a matinee presentation at 2:30 p.m. today.

The play by J.R.R. Tolkien will have final performances next Friday and Saturday nights in the Globe of the Great Southwest, located at 2308 Shakespeare Road, on the south edge of the Odessa College campus.

"The Hobbit" has been staged and directed by Jane Ann Crum, a member of the OC drama department.

Tickets for today's matinee will be available at the Globe box office in advance of show time. Tickets for the concluding performances at 8 p.m. Friday and Saturday also will be available at the box office on performance evenings.

HEW heads to keep hands off

WASHINGTON (AP) — HEW Secretary Patricia Roberts Harris, warning that "we will not tolerate sexual harassment in this department," has ordered agency supervisors to keep their hands off subordinates.

Mrs. Harris, in a memo sent to all department heads in the 150,000-employee agency, also instructed her Equal Employment Opportunity officers to "accept and investigate complaints alleging sexual harassment."

A handful of other federal agencies have sent out similar memos, but HEW is the first to give employees a formal mechanism for complaints about sexual harassment, according to a personnel official.

The Harris memo, sent out last month, said sexual harassment "has recently surfaced not only as a major employment problem for women but also as a component of sex discrimination."

"While sexual harassment need not necessarily involve a male supervisor and a female subordinate, this has been the most common situation in which the problem arises," she said. "But pressure can come from a person of either sex against a person of the opposite or same sex and from peers as well as supervisors."

Relatives given hope for end of their ordeal

By The Associated Press

Relatives of the women and blacks among the American hostages being held hostage in Iran were given hope Saturday that their two-week ordeal may be nearing an end.

But they weren't getting their hopes too high. The mother of one woman being held captive in the American embassy in Tehran didn't even cancel a shopping trip.

Expressing the feelings of many of the others, Delia Williams Mallory of Albany, N.Y., whose grandson is a Marine corporal, said, "I'm just sitting here hoping its true."

Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini on Saturday ordered the release of several black men and six or seven women. But the religious leader said that before they are freed, they must be proved innocent of spying. The rest of the estimated 60 hostages still will be held captive by Islamic militants.

There was no official announcement on when the blacks and women would be released, but the Iranian news agency said those freed could leave Iran on their own "either tomorrow or any other time."

Laura Mae Reeder, 45, who works in the Energy Department's printing office in Washinton D.C., is the mother of Marine Sgt. William E. Quarles. She said State Department personnel "called and told me that he might be one of the hostages that might be released."

"I think it's nice that they're letting some of them go, but I think it would be nicer if they let all of them go," she said.

Kevin Gross, 16, whose sister, Kathy, also is among the hostages, said his family also got a call from the State Department.

"They told us they'd call us back if and when they find out if Kathy's one of the women to be freed," Gross said by telephone from his home in Cambridge Springs, Pa.

"It's good. Really good," Gross said.

The youth said his mother, May, had gone shopping.

"My mother had been planning this shopping trip for a long time," he said. "And she was feeling pretty good about what she heard, so it didn't bother her to go. But if anything big happens, we go get her right away."

Mrs. Mallory, who reared her 22-year-old grandson, Marine Cpl. Westley Williams, said he had been in Iran just a month when he was taken hostage. She said she has been in almost daily contact with the State Department since Nov. 5 when she was notified of the embassy takeover.

"I'm glad they are finally doing something," she said. "I just wish they would release everybody, but I'll be very happy if he comes home.

"I'm still praying for them all."

Cartel agent says anarchy will soon topple Khomeini

SEATTLE (AP) — The U.S. agent for Iran's industrial cartel says it's only a matter of time before anarchy topples the radical Moslem regime of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini.

Virgil Morgan Sr. of Everett said Iran's domestic economy is "already in chaos, with unemployment running 40 to 50 percent. I look for anarchy collapsing the present government as the people run out of food and heating oil."

Morgan's International Services Inc. has maintained communications with Iran throughout the revolution that overthrew Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi earlier this year, the seizure of the U.S. Embassy in Tehran by Moslem students and President Carter's freeze of Iranian assets in the United States.

As Iranian commerce's U.S. agent, Morgan has for five years arranged sales for Iranian businesses "of everything from a 14-burner gas stove for a corporation president's home, to trucks, to God only knows what else."

Morgan sends Telex messages via a foreign corporation "in a country friendly to Iran" to Iranian companies, and remains in touch with business leaders who have fled their country.

He said the self-exiled business leaders "would probably contribute to someone trying to overthrow Khomeini. Virtually every top-level businessman fled immediately as the revolution came in."

Iran appeals to Arab leaders

By The Associated Press

Iranian Foreign Affairs Supervisor Abolhassan Bani Sadr called Arab ambassadors to a meeting in Tehran on Saturday to explain the seizure of the U.S. Embassy by Iranian militants and then sent a statement to their nations asking why they did not support Iran, Radio Tehran reported.

According to the broadcast, monitored in London and Kuwait, the statement said, in part:

"The majority of the Arab foreign ministers have sided with America. It is no great surprise for the American government to believe right to be on its side in the issue of the occupation of the American embassy. But the decision of the majority of your foreign ministers is very strange.

M-O Symphony instrumentalists to be spotlighted during concerts

Instrumentalists of the Midland-Odessa Symphony will be in the spotlight during the orchestra's second pair of season subscription concerts.

The concerts will be at 8 p.m. Monday in Odessa's Permian High School, and 8 p.m. Tuesday in the auditorium of Midland's Lee High School. Dr. Thomas Hohstadt will conduct.

Symphony season tickets will be valid for either event and, in addition, single tickets will be available for purchase at the door before the start of the concert each night.

Programmed for the concerts are the Concerto for Wind Instruments, Tympani, Percussion and String Orchestra, by Swiss composer Frank Martin, and a transcription of the Organ Concerto, Opus 4, No. 4, by G.F. Handel.

In addition, the Thouvenel Quartet, Midland's string quartet-in-residence, will be heard in a work by 20th Century American composer Morton Gould. The work is titled "A Vivaldi Gallery."

Admitting shah right, says Byrd

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States was right in admitting the Shah of Iran for medical treatment, and probably would have done the same for the bitter enemy who deposed the shah, Senate Democratic leader Robert C. Byrd said Saturday.

Byrd commented at his weekly news conference as some 60 American hostages at the U.S. Embassy in Tehran heared the end of their second week in captivity.

With the benefit of hindsight, Byrd said, the U.S. government probably should have decreased its personnel at the embassy or even "should have taken them all out" before admitting the shah.

But as for allowing the shah to come to New York, the apparent spark that ignited the embassy takeover by militant Islamic students, Byrd said the U.S. government "did the right thing in letting the shah come here for treatment of a terminal illness."

"I don't know of any person who ought to be turned away," Byrd said, even if it were "the Ayatollah Khomeini himself who needed medical help, if he had a terminal illness."

Byrd said he was encouraged by Khomeini's request Saturday that the students release about a dozen women and blacks at the embassy.

"I think it's a positive and certainly encouraging indication the Iranians may have become sensitive to the international feelings in opposition to their holding of the hostages," he said.

Byrd said he supports the Carter administration's decision to halt U.S. imports of Iranian oil and the freezing of Iranian government assets in the United States.

Government asks court for ban

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government asked an appeals court Saturday night to reinstate a ban an Iran-related demonstrations near the White House.

The Justice Department argued in a 16-page brief that the lives of American hostages at the U.S. Embassy in Tehran could be jeopardized by retaliation if a demonstration here turned to violence and pro-Iran demonstrators were injured.

"Any violence associated with such a demonstration could be a catalyst for tragedy," the brief said.

U.S. District Judge Aubrey E. Robinson Jr. ruled Friday that the ban ordered by President Carter violated the First Amendment protection of free speech.

Robinson said the government failed to demonstrate a sufficient connection "between any events that might potentially arise ... and subsequent occurrances in Iran."

But the Justice Department argued Saturday that it was not seeking a total ban on demonstrations, but only a ban on those near the White House.

Government attorneys said they wanted a march scheduled for Tuesday by American and Iranian students to be moved "to sites less charged with danger to helpless hostages because they (sites other than the White House) are less associated with governmental authority."

The brief said 400 students were expected to march from Lafayette Park opposite the White House, through the streets of Washington to the Iranian Embassy.

The government brief said there was a "substantial risk that acts of violence would be attempted against Iranian students and would likely receive press coverage in Tehran ... and would present a clear and present danger to the lives of the hostages" if demonstrations are permitted near the White House.

Palestinians demonstrate against deportation plan

GAZA, Occupied Gaza Strip (AP) — Palestinians in the West Bank and Gaza Strip demonstrated Saturday with hunger strikes, business shutdowns and sit-ins against Israel's plan to deport Nablus Mayor Bassam Shakaa.

Israeli troops thwarted an organized one-day hunger strike by Palestinian Arab mayors who had planned to meet at Red Cross headquarters here.

Soldiers stopped some of the mayors as they left their West Bank towns. They stopped others at the edge of Gaza. Gaza Mayor Rashid A-Shawa was turned back before he had walked 100 yards from his home.

The protests were non-violent except for one reported rock-throwing incident in the Arab sector of Jerusalem.

Shakaa was arrested last Sunday and a committee of Israel's Cabinet formally decided on Wednesday to banish him from the occupied West Bank of the Jordan River, where he is mayor of the largest town, Nablus.

No formal charges have been brought against Shakaa, but the government claims he is sympathetic to PLO terrorist attacks and cites his record of resistance to Israeli rule and frequent anti-Israeli statements, which it says amount to incitement. Shakaa has appealed the deportation order to Israel's Supreme Court, which has scheduled a hearing on the case for Thursday.

Saturday's hunger strikes were declared in sympathy with Shakaa, who refused solid food for the second day. General strikes closed businesses in most West Bank and Gaza towns. All three West Bank universities were closed Saturday, normally a school day, and a group of Arab students at Najr University in Nablus announced a one-day hunger strike.

Seven mayors from the Ramallah area were blocked on the road to Gaza. They went to the neighboring town of El Bireh, took over the Red Cross office there and fasted for the day.

"We will continue to fast at home until tomorrow morning," Ramallah Mayor Kerim Khalaf said over the telephone.

Mayors from 29 West Bank and Gaza town resigned after Israel decided to deport Shakaa to Jordan. If the resignations are not withdrawn, Israel might have to take over government operations in these towns, seen as an embarrassment during its talks with Egypt and the United States on Palestinian autonomy in the West Bank and Gaza.

During an interview in his Gaza home, Shawa aid the head of the Egyptian delegation, Izzat Abdul Latif, had telephoned him from Tel Aviv a few days earlier to say Egypt was concerned about Shakaa.

Shawa said the Egyptians "are doing what they can. I told him that he can see how the Israelis treat us. This is what they mean by autonomy."

Cease-fire to be 'within few days'

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — Prime Minister Abel Muzorewa said today he expects a cease-fire "within the next few days" in embattled Zimbabwe Rhodesia.

Muzorewa, on his way back to Salisbury from the London peace talks, said military commanders of government troops and Patriotic Front guerrillas are working out the details of a cease-fire. He spoke with newsmen aboard his plane during a stopover at Nairobi Airport.

Muzorewa also said he was "quite satisified" with the progress of the 10-week-old London conference. The talks are aimed at securing peace and an internationally recognized, black-majority government in the breakaway British colony.

On Thursday, guerrilla leaders Joshua Nkomo and Robert Mugabe accepted a British plan opening the way to formal independence for Zimbabwe Rhodesia. Muzorewa had agreed earlier to the plan for direct rule.

The major breakthrough in the long-stalled talks came after British Foreign Secretary Lord Carrington agreed the guerrillas — like the government troops — would come under the authority of the British governor. The guerrilla leaders had feared their fighters would be outlaws.

Cease-fire negotiations began Friday. Carrington, chairman of the London talks, proposed strict separation of the 12,000-man government army and the estimated 16,000-member guerrilla force while a British governor supervises elections for a new black-majority government.

Muzorewa, who said he would return to London to sign the final independence agreement, said he would welcome observers from Commonwealth nations to witness the upcoming general elections in which Zimbabwe Rhodesia's new government will be chosen. But he said obsevers from certain countries, which he did not identify, would not be acceptable because of their attitude during the guerrilla war that has gripped the country for sevcen years.

U.S. to resume normal relations with Bolivia

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States welcomed on Saturday Bolivia's return to constitutional rule and said it plans to resume normal aid and diplomatic relations with that country.

State Department spokesman Hodding Carter called Bolivia's return to democratic processes a "dramatic victory for the Bolivian people."

On Friday, Col. Alberto Natusch resigned after two weeks as president and the Bolivian Congress unanimously elected Congresswoman Lidia Gueiler as his replacement. She will serve pending new elections next May.

Howard County school for deaf approved

BIG SPRING — The proposal for a technical-vocational post-secondary school for the deaf to be operated by Howard College here has been approved by the Texas Education Agency, according to Dr. Charles Hays, college president.

"The deaf school is the most innovative movement at a college level offered in recent history," Hays said.

"It should provide a 'shot in the arm' for Big Spring and Howard College."

Jimmy Taylor, a college board member agreed: "A lot of people will move here in order to provide the type of education for their children that they can't get elsewhere."

The college's feasibility study on the school was prepared by Mary Dudley, assistant to the president.

The school is to be located at the Big Spring Industrial Air Park, which is the site of the former Webb Air Force Base.

The school is to be located on a 67.5-acre site and is to include a 62,000-square-foot hospital, 32,000-square-foot classroom building, swimming pool and bath house and other facilities.

Hays said Howard College is expecting about $500,000 in state funds initially to operate the school and that the college has yet to tap resources for addition revenue.

Sul Ross to get justice grant

ALPINE — Sul Ross State University's Criminal Justice Department has been approved for a $4,000 grant for a corrections internship program for students majoring in criminal justice.

"Beginning with the spring semester, we will place corrections interns at the Davis Mountain Achievement Center in Fort Davis and with the Permian Basin Dual Probation Service in Alpine," said John Hudgens, chairman of the department.

Agency sponsors of the internship programs are Ismael Sanchez of the probation service and Patricia Watts with the achievement center.

"Our students have the rare opportunity to apply classroom theory to actual practice in a supervised internship environment before being exposed to the job market," said Hudgens. "When they leave Sul Ross, they not only have a quality education, but experience as well."

Sul Ross was notified of the grant by the Texas College and University System Coordinating Board.

New Catfish Hill under way

ANDREWS — Elwood Hill, Odessa restaurateur and former sheriff of Ector County, has broken ground for a new Catfish Hill restaurant in Andrews. Hill was sheriff earlier in the 1970s.

Dawson may have wet-dry vote

LAMESA — Dawson County voters soon may be going to the polls to put bootleggers out of business in a wet-dry election.

The Dawson County Commissioners may call an election based on a pro-wet petition being circulated by Mr. and Mrs. Israel Ybanez. Heading off the effort are the Rev. and Mrs. Jim Mosley.

The petition calls for a local option election to legalize the sale of beer for off-premise consumption in Commissioner Precinct 2, which includes Ackerly in southeast Dawson County and near the four corners of Borden, Dawson, Howard, and Martin counties.

Lamesa is "dry," and the sale of alcoholic beverages is prohibited throughout the county.

McCamey to drill new water well

McCAMEY — The city of McCamey will drill another water well in the McCamey field 16 miles south of here as the result of a cave-in of sand and gravel in the No. 5 well.

The council recently voted unanimously to drill the well.

Publisher praises cornbread

ANDREWS — The cook-off mania has ignored cornbread, it seems, so James Roberts has made himself the champion of cornbread.

Cook-offs pervade the land and hail such dishes and entrees as yams, black-eyed peas, shrimp, potatoes, pies, barbecues, strawberries, watermelon, pecans, cantaloupes, eggplant, squash, pinto beans flounder, snapper and...chili.

"We have an infinite variety of chili cook-offs — most of which leave the impression that they are sponsored by imbeciles, prepared by idiots and served up to the dim-witted," wrote Roberts in his Drifting Sands column in the Andrew County News, which he edits and publishes.

Cornbread has been slighted.

"Cornbread is as important to the history of this state as branch water and beef jerky," he wrote. "The land was cleared, the trees felled, the soil tilled, the wildcats drilled, the schools built and the roads paved with cornbread on the mind and in the belly," cornbread-man Roberts declared.

It's indispensible to the Southern way of living and eating.

Cornmeal and/or cornbread is necessary for properly preparing and/or properly eating catfish, dressing, fried okra, pork chops, stew, red beans and so many, many so forths.

Who can imagine red beans without cornbread? And where would sweet milk be without cornbread?

"Properly prepared cornbread is as happy with black-eyed peas and pinto beans as a dead hog in the sunshine," Roberts wrote.

And, like he noted: "Cornbread and sweet milk sustained saint and sinner alike on a Sunday night" back in those days of yore.

Big Spring facility gets new head

BIG SPRING — Eddie Drake, acting director of the Big Spring Halfway House for alcoholics since Oct. 1, has been named director, according to John Bennett, chairman of the house's board of director.

Drake, who succeeds William C. "Dub" Nelson, who resigned, is a former therapist-counselor at the Big Spring State Hospital. He worked in alcoholism at the former Big Spring De-Tox Center.

Soil conservation called most underrated priority

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. John Culver, D-Iowa, says soil conservation "is our most underrated priority" and should rate with energy and oil supplies in the public eye.

"I acknowledge that it may be a far-out thought, but it would be the ultimate irony if the Arabs elected to conserve their oil while we continued to export our topsoil to the Gulf of Mexico — and run out of topsoil before they ran out of oil," Culver said Thursday.

The Iowan referred to the millions of tons of soil that wash way from valuable cropland each year, carried into streams where it pollutes water and winds up as silt deposits.

Culver's remarks were in a speech prepared for a National Conference on Soil Conservation Policies. The two-day meeting is sponsored by the Soil Conservation Society of America, the National Association of Conservation Districts and the Agriculture Department.

In his keynote address, Culver said he appeared "as an angry advocate for a total commitment by our nation to this priority problem" of conservation.

Government programs have helped and would work if properly used, he said. But those have been too little "and if we wait much longer, it will be too late," Culver said.

Farmers have "a basic commitment to good stewardship of the land they farm" but should not be blamed for not investing in conservation measures that don't pay a reasonable return on the investment, he said.

"You can't blame farmers for being confused by the conflicting admonitions to 'produce more now' yet 'conserve your land's productivity for the future'," Culver said.

Although it was not mentioned in Culver's prepared text, government regulations requiring farmers to take part of their land from crop production have been suspended for 1980 crops of wheat, corn and other feedgrains.

Farmers' cost-income squeeze should get worse

WASHINGTON (AP) — Farmers not only can expect a sharp decline in net income next year but could see farm real estate prices go up only by about one-third of what they did in 1979, according to government analysts.

At the same time, they say, production expenses, interest rates and total debts will continue to bite deeply into farmers' operations and lifestyles.

In fact, by the time 1981 arrives, farmers' equities in U.S. agriculture — what they would have left if they sold out and paid all their bills — probably will gain only slightly.

This is the view of various analysts at the Agriculture Department's recent outlook conference. The figures, however, are still only projections but have some solid reasons for being published.

No catastrophic decline in commodity prices is in sight, the experts said, but here is the way one of them put it:

"Crop and livestock prices are expected to at least maintain 1979 record levels through 1980, and cash receipts likely will rise to new record highs.

"However, the outlook is for substantially increased production expenses which will more than offset income gains, reducing net farm income."

Net farm income — measured in current dollars with no adjustment for inflation — is expected to be about $32 billion this year. In 1980, according to USDA, farmers might see a 20 percent decline to around $25 billion or so.

George Hoffman of the department's Economics, Statistics and Cooperatives Service said forecasting farm income for 1980 at this time is subject to many statistical hazards.

Commodity prices could shift because of many reasons, including bad weather in the United States or in other parts of the world, the general economy and U.S. trade policies.

Thus, Hoffman said, "Net farm income is extremely sensitive to small changes in average prices. For example, at current levels a 1 percent increase in prices received by farmers translates directly to a $1.3 billion increase in cash receipts and net income."

The prospect of reduced net income also will have a slowdown effect on soaring farm real estate prices, according to the analysts.

Farmland values will continue to go up, however, Michael Boehlje of Iowa State University told the conference.

"Although recent events in the money markets are expected to result in higher rates of interest on farm mortgages, mortgage funds and long-term financing through installment contracts appear to be readily available, and the higher interest rates are not expected to have a significant depressing effect on the farm real estate market," Boehlje said.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Vietnam vets' problems tough

Dear Dr. Solomon: I was in the Army during World War II, and I can assure you I did not have any easy time of it. But I came home, overcame a number of obstacles and adjusted. However, my son, who served in Vietnam, is still having a hard time getting himself straightened out, and I'm running out of patience. Don't you think it's high time he got a steady job and settled down? — Vet.

Dear Vet: Granted that World War II was no easier on GIs than the war in Vietnam, the two conflicts did differ sufficiently so that their effects on those doing the fighting were different.

In the first place, the entire nation was united during World War II. The men — and women — in uniform occupied a place of honor. Contrast this state of affairs with the divisions that the war in Vietnam produced in this country.

Contrast the fact that for the most part the troops doing the fighting would much rather have remained at home, they were treated as if they had been responsible for the war. Instead of bands and parades when they returned, they found hostility and condemnation. Dr. Charles Figley, director of the Family Research Institute at the University of Cincinnati, says that many Vietnam veterans felt their country had betrayed them.

Dr. Figley advances other reasons that veterans found the war in Vietnam so stressful and have taken so long to adjust. First, it was a limited war with limited commitment. For the solider in the field, this means that his primary goal simply was to survive. Those who did then felt guilty about buddies they left behind.

The rapid transition from combat to home — sometimes within the space of 72 hours — added to the stress. The veteran simply did not have enough time to work out his feelings. Dr. David Spiegel, another psychiatrist, says that the veterans did not have time to go through a mourning process about their losses, whether the loss was a friend, a part of their body or other.

The veterans themselves realize the special nature of the Vietnam war. John Kerry describes the Vietnam veteran as cautious, suspicious and cynical. He attributes this to the fact that there were no rules to fight by and no clear lines of demarcation between the GIs and the enemy. And to compound the situation, there were no comparable sacrifices by the people who remained at home.

Dr. Jack Ewalt, director of mental health for the Veterans Administration, reports that as of September 1979, 9,000 Vietnam veterans were in VA hospitals; of these, 64 percent were in psychiatric units. He notes that the stress reactions seen in Vietnam veterans are not too different from those that were seen after prior wars; however, the Vietnam veterans show the reaction at a later date.

It might be advisable for your son to seek professional help with his problems. The best way his family can aid him in readjusting is be providing compassion rather than condemnation.

Armed Forces News

Midland's Battery C of the Third Battalion, 133rd Field Artillery of the Texas Army National Guard will be redesignated as an engineer unit next month, according to plans announced recently in Austin.

The change to Company D, 111th Engineer Battalion is part of a statewide plan to improve the overall readiness and training posture of the 49th Armored Division, the largest troop element of the Texas Guard.

The artillery unit is being moved closer to range facilities at Ft. Bliss in El Paso and consolidated with an element now located in Big Spring.

The change will not result in any loss of jobs in the community and is expected to provide new job training opportunities in new skills related to the engineer unit mission.

Airman Roger D. Gray, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harold C. Gray of Crane, has been assigned to Sheppard Air Force Base in Wichita Falls after completing Air Force basic training.

Curb on teen-age driving proposed

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — The popular teen-age recreation of "cruising" would come to a screeching halt in Tennessee if legislators accept a proposal designed to help save gasoline.

Rep. Bill Richardson, D-Columbia, proposed to deny driver's licenses to anyone under 18 — unless they have a high school diploma or a special need to drive.

"These are extraordinary times that are going to call for extraordinary sacrifices, especially in the light of the Iranian crisis," he said Friday. His bill, he said, is designed to clear the streets "of kids who are just cruising."

The father of eight, Richardson said he knows from experience that teen-agers "are very big on pleasure driving."

"I remember the thrill of driving my first car and since six of my children have already reached 16, I've been periodically refreshed on the meaning of the early driving experience."

Richardson said he hoped young drivers "will seriously consider the need for this particular sacrifice and realize that this is one significant way they can help their nation's energy conservation problem."

Tennessee youngsters now can be licensed to drive at 16. Richardson said they still could drive if they hold a steady job, have family health problems and or no other way to get to and from school. Richardson called it an alternative to gasoline station closings or rationing plans which "usually hit the workers the hardest."

The state Safety Department said about 54,000 of the state's 2.7 million licensed drivers are under 18.

Californian picks good spot for his heart attack

SAN JOSE, Calif. (AP) — If Donald Waite had suffered his heart attack anywhere else, he probably would be dead.

But Waite, 51, a San Jose furniture dealer, collapsed last week in his car outside a hospital just as a cardiac support class happened by.

The class, consisting of a heart surgeon, a physician's assistant and several nurses, quickly grabbed the heart-reviving equipment in a nearby classroom and went to work.

"If he hadn't gotten the immediate attention that he received, he would be in the morgue right now," said the surgeon, Dr. T.E. Dye.

Waite, of Moraga, Calif., had left his San Jose furniture store complaining of indigestion and headed for the hospital. That's when his car smashed into a tree in front of O'Connor Hospital, just as the cardiac support class was ending for the day.

The Midland Petroleum Club's new building, located at the intersection of Marienfeld and Wall streets, will be a two-story structure of approximately 40,000 square feet. Slightly larger than the present site on North Big Spring Street, private dining rooms and the major banquet rooms comprise most of the additional space. Members hope the building will be completed by the fall of 1980. (Staff Photo by Bruce Partain)

Project Business fills educational need

There is a great need for free enterprise education, and Project Business is designed to fill that void, according to Gary Petersen, executive director of Junior Achievement of Midland.

The program, sponsored jointly by Junior Achievement and the Midland school district, is designed to teach ninth graders about the American business system.

"People are our greatest resource," Petersen said at a kickoff luncheon for the program last week.

Ten local business firms donate the time of an executive who serves as a "consultant" to teach a weekly class in free enterprise.

Other firms donate funds for any materials needed.

The program stresses "hands-on" practical information about business from people who have been there.

A highlight of the 10-week program is a field trip to a local business. After the trip, students discuss the types of careers available there, types of work done and training and education needed for the jobs.

Consultants cover three major topics during the quarter, with a review of economics and choosing a career always included. The third main topic is chosen from a list including the market system, money and banking, financial statements and consumerism.

Each topic is covered in three main parts, with discussion followed by an action phase followed by career information.

The discussion phase is directed by the consultant with the help of the teacher in the class to make sure he's communicating. "We have a real vocabulary gap," Petersen noted. "Some of the kids think capital is where the company headquarters are before the classes start."

The action phase can include the field trip or role-playing activities.

Career information is one of the major benefits of the program from the school's point of view, according to Dr. Bob Carter, social studies coordinator for MISD.

A survey of student preferences showed career information was a high priority for the students as well, he noted.

The program was such a success during its first year last year, the program has almost doubled the number of classes and students involved with session scheduled during the last two quarters of the school year.

Consultants serving in the first quarter will be Ira Adams of Texas Electric Service Co., Andy Reed with Compressor Systems, Randall Davis of Monsanto, Phillip Hoppman of Elcor, Ned Rogers with Drilco Industrial, Fred Middleton of the First National Bank, Glen Berry of Sleephaven Bedding Co., Steve Holt of Midland National Bank, Mike Sparkman of Stubbeman, McRae, Sealy, Laughlin & Browder, and Kay Boles of Texaco.l

Sponsoring firms include Elcor, Union Oil of California, Cities Service, First National Bank of Midland, Midland National Bank, Parker Dilling, Milchem, Texas Electric Service Co., Compressor Systems and Stubbeman, McRae, Sealy, Laughlin & Browder.

Sally English and Dwight Bellamy from Midland Freshman School and Ricky Long and Cindy Truitt from Lee Freshman School are teachers whose classes will be involved.

Husband awarded alimony

ARLINGTON HEIGHTS, Ill. (AP) — A man who kept house for 17 years while his wife taught school and continued her education has been awarded $200 a month in alimony for one year.

Cook County Circuit Judge Edward E. Plusdrak also ruled Friday that William Bradley, 40, will get to visit his two sons, whose custody was awarded to his former wife.

"My sons were crying. They wanted to stay with me," he said after the decision. "I'm going to appeal the case to try to win custody of the boys."

The alimony will be paid by Bradley's former wife, Eunice, 40, a special education teacher at a suburban Northbrook high school. She has earned a master's degree and completed work toward a doctorate.

The Bradleys were divorced three months ago, but the alimony and child-custody matters had not been settled.

Bradley's attorney, Richard Gigante, argued that his client worked outside the home for only three of the 17 years the couple was married and did the cooking, washing, shopping and other domestic tasks the rest of that time.

Mrs. Bradley, who earns $14,000 a year, contended that Bradley chose not to work and that she could not support two households.

However, Plusdrak ordered her to pay Bradley, a free-lance writer with a psychology degree from Michigan State University, alimony for one year whether he works or not.

"The roles were reversed here," Plusdrak said. "And under our present law, either spouse has a right to rehabilitation. I don't want him to become a public charge.

"This will give him a chance to get on his feet and get a job," the judge added. "It is not a case of not having enough education. He already has a college degree."

The judge also ordered that the couple's home, appraised at $75,000, be sold within four years and the proceeds divided equally.

Richard Templeton, national president of America's Society of Divorced Men, said the award is one of the biggest in the nation for an ex-husband.

Commissioners to begin property negotiations

Midland County Commissioners will meet in a special session Monday to consider beginning negotiations for property needed for Loop 250.

Those negotiations will be based on appraisals approved by the commissioners during their regular meeting last Monday, according to a news release from County Judge Bill Ahders.

Commissioners also are expected to consider right-of-way acquisition for Loop 250 on the west side of Midland and right-of-way acquisition for FM 1788 from Interstate 20 to a point three miles south.

Henry Pearson and Charles Muery of the State Department of Highways and Public Transportation are expected to be present for Monday's special meeting. That meeting will begin at 10 a.m. in the commissioners' courtroom on the second floor of Midland County Courthouse.

Wind pushes oil from tanker toward Galveston's beaches

GALVESTON, Texas (AP) — A trickle of oil leaking from the Burmah Agate was pushed toward the beaches of Galveston Island Saturday by southeasterly winds, the Coast Guard said.

But the small amount of light crude that might reach the coast would look more like a scum than an oil slick, said Coast Guard spokesman Larry Clark.

He said skimming boats and barriers deployed around the burning tanker, which collided Nov. 1 with the freighter Mimosa about 4.5 miles from the eastern tip of the island, were having trouble finding enough oil to pick up.

The bodies of 17 crewmen — 16 from the Burmah Agate and one from the Mimosa — have been recovered. Another 15 tanker crewmen remain missing and are presumed dead.

BART unions to vote on new contract

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Members of two Bay Area Rapid Transit system unions, who have been off the job for 2½ months, vote today whether to accept a new contract that includes a compromise on the ticklish cost-of-living issue.

It was a dispute over the cost-of-living allowance that led to the shutdown of the BART system Aug. 31. Transit officials maintained that the 1,650 union workers have been on strike, but the union has said they were locked out by management.

After months of off-and-on negotiations, both sides announced the new agreement Friday night.

If the contract is approved by members of United Public Employees Local 390 and Amalgamated Transit Union Local 1555, BART officials say that full service can resume within a week.

The two unions represent train operators, ticket agents and maintenance workers.

A union official, who asked not to be identified, said the three-year pact provides a 3 percent wage increase in July 1981, with a gradual transfer of retirment fund payments from employees to management between January 1980 and the date of the raise.

The transfer will give employees about a 4 percent increase in take-home pay, the official said. Transit workers currently receive an average annual salary of $18,000 to $24,000.

It also provides for a wage increase of one cent an hour for every .4 percent rise in the cost-of-living index beginning July 1, 1981, according to the official.

He said that the original union demand of a cost-of-living increase in lieu of a pay raise was largely met by the agreement.

BART General Manager Keith Bernard confirmed that a cost-of-living agreement was part of the agreement but declined to give details.

The union official said the tentative agreement grants amnesty to 472 union members BART management had accused of disrupting operations, with only union leaders Jim Danzy and John Maher facing suspensions.

The proposed pact also includes substantially increased medical benefits, vacation increases and two new paid holidays — Mexican Independence Day and Chinese New Year's, the official said.

The inter-county rail system remained closed for nearly two months before management began running limited service between the East Bay and San Francisco last month.

Strike continues as rubbish mounts in impromptu dumps

HONOLULU (AP) — The piles of rubbish at impromptu dumps cropping up throughout these tropical islands continue to grow higher, but the offer of wages apparently hasn't yet grown high enough as a strike by public blue-collar workers enters its fifth week.

Federal mediator Gayle Wineriter, after meeting with the striking United Public Workers and state and county representatives until just before midnight Friday, scheduled a new bargaining session for Monday. He declined to comment on what progress, if any, was being made.

Midlanders gather at auto show

Browsers, serious buyers take a look at 1980 models

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

While hundreds of folks were eyeing, touching and climbing into new 1980 model cars in Midland's second big auto show, Margo Barvin was skating in circles.

She didn't seem the least bit interested.

"It's just new cars they brought from the lots?" she asked, as she roller-skated 'round the mile-loop at Midland College. Her chocolate poodle, Jenny, eagerly ran at her side.

"Yes," came a reply.

"It's nothing special," she then surmised.

Perhaps not to Ms. Barvin, a 32-year-old anesthetist who took up roller skating after she developed a knee problem in jogging.

BUT SOME OTHERS, especially the likes of Neil Florer, would view the show much differently.

"It's good," said Florer, chairman of the event, sponsored by the nine-member Midland New Car and Truck Dealers Association. "It's about 20 percent (turnout) over last year. We're seeing couples more than anything.... We're seeing everything. We're getting a mixture — many (aged) 40 and up. They look like serious buyers."

He reckoned that about 16,000 visited the two-day show last year. This year, between 20,000 and 25,000 are expected to have viewed the 1980 models by the time the free show closes at 6 p.m. today.

Approximately 140 new cars, pickup trucks and vans, priced from $4,000 to $21,000, were on display in and just outside Chaparral Center. They ranged from imported and U.S.-made sub-compacts to economical down-sized and full-size luxury sedans and coupes.

And many more "used cars," driven by dealers and auto show-goers, were on the parking lot. There was no traffic or parking problem, though.

Larry Campbell, the Chaparral Center director who seemed impressed with the turnout, was particularly pleased with the 1978 crowd. He figured that about 1,500 to 2,000 people visited the show per hour on the second day of the weekend show last year.

"It was unbelieveable," Campbell said. "The parking lot looked like we had a rock concert." He and Florer were standing amid new cars just outside the center.

THE INSIDE OF Chaparral Center was more like a toned-down county fair than a rock concert. At times, gentle swing music of the 1940s was playing over the sound system.

Attractive young women, such as Jody Scott, were giving away souvenirs, such as yardsticks, key rings and ice scrapers, which bore names of the advertisers, such as the car-financing banks and automobile dealers. Ms. Scott was handing out yardsticks bearing the name of one of Midland's six banks.

Car salesman George Head was announcing drawings for prizes — from U.S. Savings Bonds to tape players to jackets — over the public-address system.

"It's been a good, steady crowd," Head said at one point between the twice-hourly drawings. "We're really pleased, very pleased."

And Grant "The Great" Davis, a 16-year-old Odessa magician, was performing playing-card and other tricks for an equally young crowd.

"Oh, man," decried a young onlooker, "I can do that."

Nearby, Midlander Steve Conley and his wife, Kim, were looking over some compact '80 models, as he held their two-week-old baby, Makinzie, in his arms.

The father didn't appear overly impressed by the cars.

"They're all right," Conley said in his browsing. "Pretty high, though."

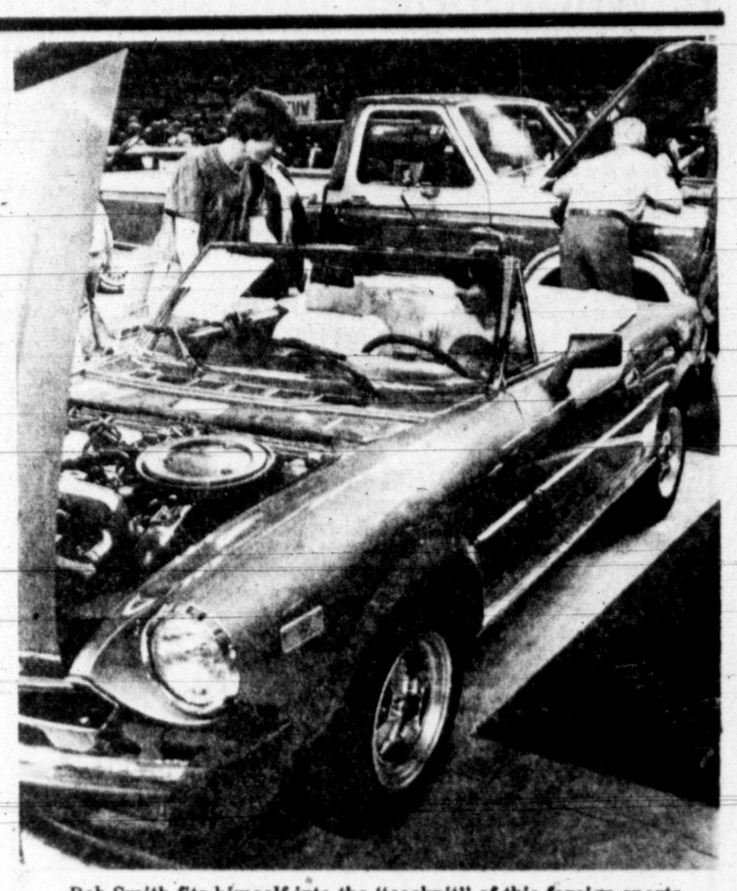
Elsewhere in the center, Tom Wingo was checking out a luxury sedan.

"Looks real nice, too," he allowed, "...If we could get some more gas" to fuel and run the automobiles.

While others were more or less "car shopping," Ms. Barvin was finishing up on her roller-skating rounds on the asphalt pavement and was about to wheel home.

"It's really a lot of fun to roller skate," she said while working up a sweat. "But it's hard," she said of trying to overcome the drag of tiny wheels running over the asphalt.

"People laugh, they smile, they giggle," as they watch her skating down, or up, the street and on the campus, Ms. Barvin said. "Makes me feel good."



Bob Smith fits himself into the "cockpit" of this foreign sports car Saturday in the new-car show at Midland College's Chaparral Center, as Chuck Schitoskey peers into the road machine. The weekend show, sponsored by the Midland New Car and Truck Dealers Association, continues from 1 to 6 p.m. today. (Staff Photo by Mike Kardos)

Cambodian troops keep supply post in Thailand

By SETH MYDANS

MARKER 53, Thailand (AP) — Officially neutral Thailand is allowing anti-Vietnamese Cambodian troops to run a supply base on its territory and Thai troops are coordinating with them in activities along the Thai-Cambodian border.

An Associated Press reporter and photographer were taken last week on a 15-man Thai marine border patrol that included two of the Cambodian soldiers loyal to the Communist regime of Premier Pol Pot, ousted last January during a Vietnamese-led invasion that installed a new Communist regime under Heng Samrin.

The Pol Pot soldiers served as guides for the Thai patrol, communicating with the Thai captain by whistling when they plunged ahead into the jungle.

THE SUPPLY CAMP, visited by reporters at Ban Laem about 500 yards inside Thailand, included three storehouses with hundreds of sacks of rice and salt, and what appeared to be officers' quarters built neatly from bamboo and thatch.

It was guarded by Pol Pot guerrillas who have set up their own roadblock on that soil just a few hundred yards from a Thai marine camp.

The visiting newsmen saw armed Pol Pot soldiers inside Thailand on the approaches to the camp and several Pol Pot soldiers lounging in the camp's huts with Communist-made AK-47 rifles and other weapons.

One day after the reporters visited the supply camp, Ban Laem was closed to foreign correspondents. Asked about the supply camp, a spokesman for the Supreme Command in Bangkok, Thailand's capital, said the camp was in Thai territory but was used as a distribution point for international aid to food-short Cambodia.

ASKED ABOUT THE Cambodians there, the spokesman said the Thai marine units in the area sometimes found themselves "short-handed" and had to recruit Cambodians to "watch over the area." He denied any of the Cambodians in the camp were armed.

The Pol Pot supply camp is in a jungle area near the village of Ban Laem, 150 miles southeast of Bangkok. About 10,000 Cambodians fled into Thailand through Ban Laem last week during a heavy Vietnamese attack.

Many of those who fled were Pol Pot soldiers, and all but 1,000 suffering from illness or fatigue returned to Cambodia when the fighting had died down, after being fed and rested in Thailand.

On the patrol, the Thai troops waited on their side of the stream that forms the border while their captain and the two Pol Pot soldiers, accompanied by the reporters, crossed quietly up a steep embankment into Cambodia.

THEY VISITED WHAT the captain said was a Pol Pot infantry camp just across the frontier that had been evacuated three days before under Vietnamese attacks. There were signs of a quick departure, with remnants of cooking fires, a few articles of clothing and two flashlights near a small hut and dugout bunkers.

The Cambodian guides, wearing rubber sandals and carrying U.S.-made M-16 rifles, walked silently into the surrounding jungle as the Thai captain crouched hatless holding a 45 pistol. They returned carrying a sack of AK-47 bullets.

About a half mile downstream, at one of about 100 markers along the 500-mile border, the patrol stopped at what appeared to be an abandoned Pol Pot truck repair depot.

Again the black-shirted guides walked deeper into Cambodia, in silence broken only by the knocking of stands of bamboo, as Thai soldiers crouched at the border marker.

The frames of abandoned bamboo huts, a set of bunkers and the hulks of a half dozen trucks were clustered around the granite marker which in the Thai, Cambodian and French languages said "Cambodia" on one side and "Siam," the historic name of Thailand, on the other.

BACK AT THE MARINE camp at Ban Laem, the captain went over a field map with a Pol Pot informant, and pointed to four towns about six miles inside Cambodia where he claimed Vietnamese troops and Soviet advisers had strongholds.

He said the border region now belongs to the Vietnamese, after their operation three days earlier, and that the normally close Thai contacts with the Pol Pot forces in this region had been strained.

An hour's drive farther south into the seacoast province of Trad, there were reports that Pol Pot re-supply lines had been further hurt by a Vietnamese takeover of Cambodia's southern coast.

Thai sources in Trad told The Associated Press that Chinese ships had been supplying Pol Pot troops in small estuaries but that this line of supply was now cut off.

Thailand still recognizes the Pol Pot government, as does the United Nations. Vietnam has questioned Thailand's neutrality because it has allowed Pol Pot's deputy premier, Ieng Sary, and other officials to pass back and forth through Thai territory.

Pennsylvania GOP committee elects six at-large delegates

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) — The Republican State Committee on Saturday elected six at-large delegates to the party's national convention, including two who support Ronald Reagan and one who prefers George Bush.

All of the delegates, the first to be selected by either party nationwide, are not legally bound to any candidate and are officially uncommitted.

But Reagan, the former California governor, has clear support from U.S. Sen. Richard Schweiker and Republican National Committeeman Drew Lewis.

Schweiker was Reagan's vice presidential choice in 1976 while Lewis, a Montgomery County businessman, heads Reagan's Pennsylvania campaign.

Bush, the former CIA director, has the backing of Elsie Hillman, also a member of the Republican National Committee and the wife of a Pittsburgh industrialist.

The other three delegates elected were Gov. Richard Thornburgh, Lt. Gov. William Scranton III and U.S. Sen. John Heinz.

Thornburgh has said he would support Gerald Ford if the former president changed his mind and became a candidate. But the governor lists himself as uncommitted.

Both Scranton and Heinz are also firmly uncommitted.

Lewis was Ford's state campaign manager in 1976, with Ford carrying the state delegation 93-10. Reagan did not run in the 1976 Pennsylvania primary.

FARM-RANCH ROUNDUP

Midlander purchases horses at King Ranch

KINGSVILLE — William "Bill" Blakemore II of Midland bought a filly and a colt for $11,200 at the 28th annual King Ranch Foundation Sale, which was attended by 3,000 buyers from around the world.

Sixty buyers laid down $537,500 for the sale of 25 bulls, 45 heifers, 10 stallions and 19 mares.

The average price per pure bred Santa Gertrudis bull was $5,190.

The high-selling bull went for $13,000 to the Nine Bar Ranches of Cypress, and the top-selling heifer went to Blackwater Farms of Jasper, Ala., for $7,000.

Earl Abel of Ralls, the top horse buyer, paid $17,000 for a yearling stallion, San Peppy Sam. GLS Farms of West Chicago, Ill., purchased Peppy's Vibora, a yearling filly, for $16,500.

The sale was dedicated to the late Richard M. Kleberg Jr., past chairman of the board of the King Ranch.

1,800 expected at cotton meeting

MEMPHIS, Tenn. — More than 1,800 cotton producers, ginners, warehousemen, cottonseed crushers, merchants, textile manufacturers and cooperative representatives across the Cotton Belt are expected to attend the National Cotton Council's 42nd annual meeting Jan. 27-29 in New Orleans, La.

Grady youth has champion capon

STANTON — Grady High School student Frank Acosta showed the grand champion capon, and Kara Welch showed the reserve grand champion and champion trio at the annual Martin County Junior Capon Show in which 105 birds as big as Thanksgiving turkeys were entered.

The show, sponsored by the Martin County Chamber of Commerce, was open to Future Farmers of America and 4-H Club students in the county.

Acosta's "steered" bird was sold for $200 to H&H Distributors, and Marathon Rancher Sammy Yates paid $160 for Miss Welch's trio.

FORT WORTH — More than $300,000 in premiums will be up for grabs in the 84th annual running of the Southwestern Exposition and Fat Stock Show Jan. 23-Feb. 3 in the Will Rogers Coliseum in Fort Worth, said W.R. Watt Jr., show president-manager.

The show's rodeo purse exceeds $160,000.

Some 5,800 premium lists outlining rules, premiums and other information have been mailed out to potential exhibitors, he said.

Exhibitors of cattle, sheep, swine, horses, donkeys and mules must have their completed entry forms into the stock show office by Dec. 10. Exhibitors of poultry, rabbit and pigeons have until Jan. 15 to register.

Premium lists have been mailed,but those who did not get lists and would like them may write to show headquarters at P.O. Box 150, Fort Worth, Texas 76101.

Does U.S. encourage fewer farms?

LUBBOCK — "The Family Farm Task Force," formed to evaluate the role of government in determining the structure of agriculture, now is concerned that the effect of federal policies is accelerating "the trend toward fewer and larger farms," says Susan Sechler, Task Force director and deputy director of the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Office of Economics, Policy Analysis and Budget.

And concerned, too, about the fate of the family farm of whatever size are West Texas farmers and agri-supporters, such as Donald Johnson, executive vice president of the Plains Cotton Growers Inc., Lubbock.

"The family farm is indeed a part of our heritage and the very foundation of our national culture," said Johnson, "but there is inherent danger for agriculture when Washington sets out to draw a line between family and non-family farms and then designs federal tax laws, farm programs and other policies to protect one at the expense of the other.

Is a family farm a 40-acre strawberry patch in California, a 160-acre corn and hog farm in Iowa or even a 1,000- or 2,000-acre West Texas cotton farm?

"The prevailing philosophy in Washington seem to be that 'big is bad,'" said Johnson, "and if that philosophy prevails when the 1981 farm program and future tax policies are written, commercial agriculture will be in trouble."

One of a series of five "national dialogue" hearings on the structure of agriculture will be held Dec. 6 in Wichita Falls. Comments on the question may be sent to Project Coordinator, Structure of Agriculture, USDA, Washington, D.C. 20250.

In the past, preserving the family farm was a matter of legislation to protect it against low prices, natural disasters, market manipulators and other "common enemies" of agriculture producers. And the government may endanger some family farms by deciding to label them "non-family" according to certain guidelines.

Local officals blamed for desegregation suits

WASHINGTON (AP) — Local officials are largely to blame for protracted legal battles with the federal government over school desegregation, says the Department of Health, Education and Welfare's newly named civil rights chief.

"A lot of problems with school boards could have been cut off at the pass," said Roma Stewart, a lawyer appointed to succeed the resigned David Tatel as director of the Office for Civil Rights.

Ms. Stewart, who officially does not begin her duties until early December, said there is too great a reliance on HEW to come up with solutions that state and local officials will find palatable.

"There wouldn't be a problem if the school boards would end their segregative attitudes and policies," she said in an interview late last week.

Farm wives face same issues as other women

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) — Issues facing American agriculture cannot be separated from those facing the nation's women, a government professor told the third annual convention of Women Involved in Farm Economics here Saturday.

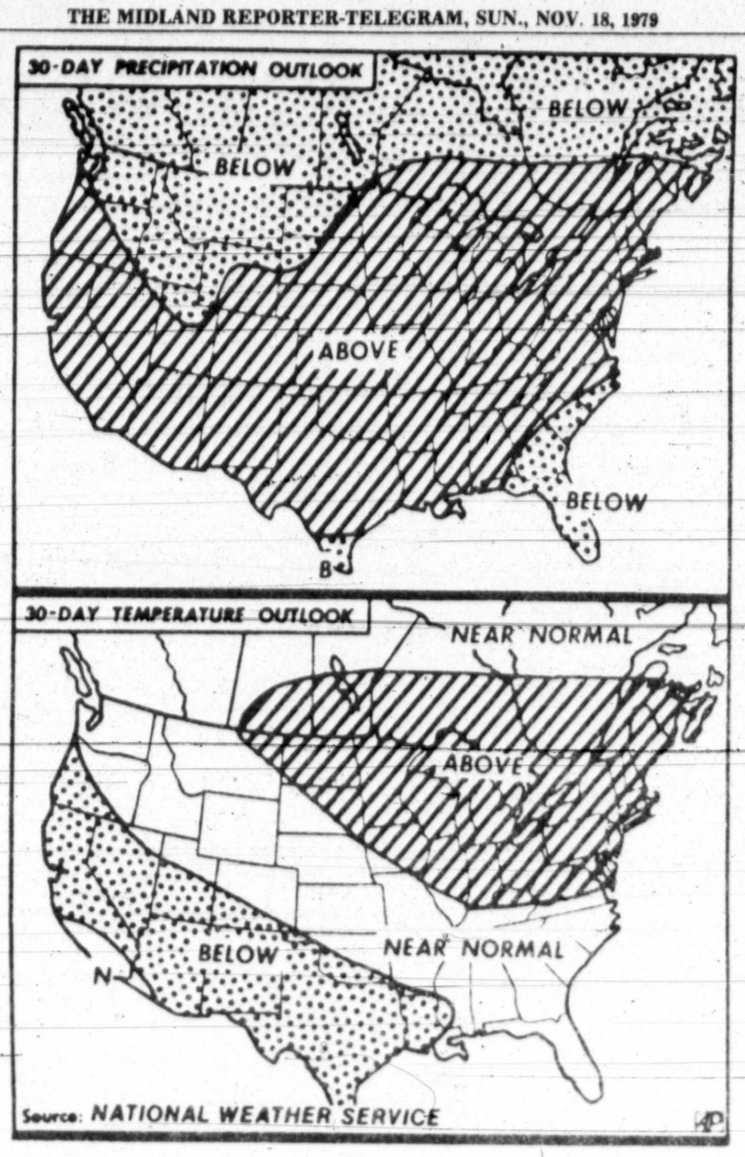
"Farm wives must be treated both as farmers and as women," said Frances Hill, a professor at the University of Texas.

"More and more women are doing work on the farm... In the past, such work was hidden, but as women become more outspoken, their labors become more evident," she said.

About 250 members of the non-partisan agricultural organization attended the three-day convention which ends Sunday.

The delegates also watched a demonstration of a gasohol still. Betty Majors, the WIFE national president from Osecola, Neb., said the group has made the task of furnishing farmers and ranchers with information on gasohol its top priority.

"The present Iranian crisis is again a mandate to the American people that we can no longer remain dependent upon foreign nations for our energy source. We must look for renewable energy fuels, like gasohol," Mrs. Majors said.



The 30-day precipitation outlook for the Permian Basin is for below average temperatures and above average precipitation, according to the National Weather Service. (AP Laserphoto)

Trial paints Dr. Burkhalter as either in love or murderer

BROWNSVILLE, Texas (AP) — Evidence in his attempted capital murder trial paints Dr. Archie Herman Burkhalter as either a man hopelessly in love with his ex-wife or a calculating mind allegedly bent on trying to kill his former spouse's new husband.

Burkhalter, 51, once owned the Pasadena Memorial Hospital and built a successful medical practice during his 22 years of marriage to his wife, Laurita.

He now is accused of hiring two men to kill the man his ex-wife married.

Since the Feb. 15 shooting of John Hensley on South Padre Island and Burkhalter's indictment in the case, the doctor sold the hospital and has moved to Fredericksburg. He describes himself as a pecan farmer.

He lives with his son, Mark, one of four children from his marriage. The short, slight man continues to support his ex-wife's mother who lives off his allowance in a house he built for her in Huntsville.

Four months before the rifle blast that blinded Hensley, the pipe-smoking doctor mailed his ex-wife said he mailed her a copy of a private investigator's report on her.

"Will send the ones the last few days on John if you like," she said he added in handwriting. "Regardless, I'll always love you."

A separate note attached to the report reads, "I have let it be known to everyone my desperate love for you ... Love you always, Herman."

The report was dated Sept. 29, 1978, and has been entered into evidence in the case.

Feedback research at NTSU

DALLAS (AP) — Volunteers at a North Texas State University clinic are finding they can control a variety of ailments by using their own biological rhythms, such as a pulse, to master their responses to physical disorders.

The process the clinic uses is called biofeedback — a technique that gives the volunteers information about their bodies through auditory or visual signals.

About 100 people have come into the Denton clinic over the past three years, said Dr. Howard Hughes, associate professor of psychology at NTSU.

Their maladies have included tension and migraine headaches, skin disorders such as psoriasis, hyperactivity, ulcers and epilepsy.

"A fair percentage of the cases" have succeeeded in learning to control their ailments, Hughes said.

Hughes said persons with headaches, ulcers and high blood pressure have shown the greatest improvement, although his group has not studied some disorders as extensively as others.

"In learning trials, most cases can control blood pressure," Hughes said. "We've been pretty successful in hypertension."

In biofeedback, a person is hooked up to a machine that records "some kind of physiological response" such as blood pressure, heart rate, muscle tension or skin temperature, Hughes said.

A normal heart rate, for example, will be "fed back" to a person in the form of a certain tone. As the heart rate increases, the frequency of the tone changes.

Volcanos erupt in the Galapagos

QUITO, Ecuador (AP) — Three volcanos spouted fire and lava Saturday on the largest island in the Galapagos Archipelago, but radio reports said there was little danger on the other islands to rare animal species that inspired English biologist Charles Darwin.

The volcanos erupted earlier this week on Isabela Island, threatening one of the island's three main villages and disabling two Ecuadoran navy radio stations. On Friday, the newspaper El Universo reported many birds and animals had been killed and others sought refuge on Isabela's beaches.

The paper, published in the Ecuadoran port city of Guayaquil, said Isabela's 700 residents were preparing for possible evacuation. Radio operators on nearby islands said Ecuador's navy and air force sent boats and planes to Isabela with emergency supplies.

Amateur radio operators in Guayaquil said the Voice of the Galapagos radio station on San Christobal Island reported the volcanic eruptions were spectacular but did not seriously threaten most of the archipelago's animal and plant species, which it said were located on other smaller islands and rocks.

The archipelago's 13 islands, 17 islets and 47 huge rocks serve as a sanctuary for giant tortoises, flightless cormants, "dragon" iguana and other rare species.

Darwin, who sailed to the Galapagos aboard the Beagle in 1835, was struck by the differences between related species isolated from each other in the archipelago, which is spread over 2,868 square miles in the Pacific Ocean.

Drawing from those observations, he formulated his theory of evolution based on natural selection, set forth in the "Origin of Species" in 1859.

Isabela, 700 miles west of Ecuador in the Pacific Ocean, is a 1.77 square mile island. The total land mass of the archipelago, which straddles the Equator, is three square miles.

Volcanic action is frequent in the archipelago, but it is unusual for three volcanos to be simultaneously active on one island. The first to erupt was Sierra Negra, dormant for 39 years until Tuesday morning. Two others, not named in sketchy reports reaching the mainland, erupted on Thursday afternoon and two others remain dormant.

The islands were discovered by Spanish explorers in 1535 and for several hundred years gave haven to pirates and whalers. The archipelago has belonged to Ecuador since 1832.

House member says he thinks mortgage rates will decrease

AUSTIN (AP) — The head of the House watchdog committee on interest rates thinks home mortgage rates will be back to 10 percent or lower within the next two years.

However, if they are not, there will be another bitter fight over interest rates in the 1981 Legislature, Rep. Jerry "Nub" Donaldson, D-Gatesville, said in a radio interview (State Capital Dateline) Eye) recorded Friday for use Sunday.

Donaldson is chairman of the House Committee on Financial Institutions, which was assigned the job of judging the effectiveness of 1979 legislation that raised the ceiling on home interest loan rates from 10 to 12 percent.

"My belief and hope is that the prime interest rate will be below 10 percent in the next 14 months and if it is, the problem is going to kind of go away. ... As far as credit and interest rates are concerned, the Legislature is always going to be dealing from crisis to crisis and approaching something without plenty of time to decide what is the best approach to take," he said.

Donaldson noted that the 1979 bill automatically "self-destructs" in two years, restoring the 10 percent maximum set by the state constitution unless the 1981 Legislature takes action on a new interest rates ceiling.

"My hope is that interest rates generally will fall below 10 percent when our ceiling automatically drops back to 10 percent on home mortgages," he said. "If 14 months from now the national market is still 11 or 11¼ percent I feel sure there will be another bill to extend it for two more years. That would be absolutely necessary."

Donaldson, who said he is committeed to a race for House speaker in 1983, said he personally thought "we would be better off if we did not have an absolute ceiling on interest rates. ... Unfortunately our arbitary ceiling of 12 percent will prevent those people who can afford to buy a home from doing so.

"The more you control a situation, the more you mess it up."

Rent, utility costs drive students back to dorms

By JOHN NOLAN

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn. (AP) — High off-campus rents and rising gasoline prices are contributing to what some university officials see as a new college trend — a return to dormitory living.

"Upperclassmen, traditionally those who decide to spend some period living off campus, are returning to the campus living facilities more than ever," said Bob Tomlinson, director of residential life at the University of Alabama. "Many are deciding to spend all four undergraduate years in a dormitory these days."

Tomlinson said about half the university's undergraduate population, nearly 7,000, are living on the Tuscaloosa, Ala., campus, which he said is a record.

"It's a problem that has been brought on because of inflation and the high cost of energy," said Edward Boling, University of Tennessee president. "The students are finding that when they go out into the market, the rents are simply prohibitive.

"If rents were still reasonable and the energy costs were not still with us, I'm not sure they would still be living with us. I'd say it's these two things that are driving them back to live with us."

APARTMENTS AROUND the University of Tennessee cost about $175-$210 per month for one bedroom, $200-$260 for two bedrooms. Dorm rooms at Tennessee average about $250 for a three-month quarter. Married students can get space in university-owned buildings for between $115 and $200 a month.

Officials at several universities said the increased demand for dorm rooms has created a housing crunch.

Middle Tennessee State University and the University of Tennessee's Knoxville and Chattanooga campuses were forced to lodge students in motels and hotels this term when more applied for campus housing than officials could place.

At the University of Wisconsin-Madison, associate housing director L.E. Halle said the number of applications is increasing every year. Last year, the university had 2,000 more applications than it could accommodate. Halle said this year the university housed 6,700 single and 1,100 married students, or about 18 percent of the campus enrollment.

HALLE SAID HE BELIEVES student demand has increased because UW housing costs have not risen as much as private housing prices.

At Tufts University in Medford, Mass., near Boston, assistant housing director Helen Glickman said the back-to-campus trend has been going on for the past few years.

"It's getting a little cheaper to live on campus, depending on what your financial set-up is," she said. "It's also a little more convenient. You don't have to deal with landlord hassles."

She said Tufts has housing for 2,950 students in an undergraduate population of 4,500. A room costs $685 per semester, up from $632 last year. That's still considered a competitive price in the neighborhood, where an average two-bedroom apartment might rent for $325 a month.

Bill Fox, dean of campus life at Emory University in Atlanta, said the demand for on-campus housing has increased significantly in the past five years. "We are operating now at maximum," he said.

REAL ESTATE AROUND EMORY is in great demand and rents have risen steadily. Fox also said he has heard at least one student say gasoline prices caused him to seek an on-campus room.

"While our enrollment has increased and that is a factor, I don't think that explains the phenomenon," Fox said.

At Central Connecticut State College, housing director Peter Vieira said, "The gas crunch has compounded it and made it a little more severe." He said more commuter students applied for dorm rooms this year.

Dan Hallenbeck, University of Georgia housing director, said the university has begun the fall quarter the past two or three years with more than 100 percent occupancy in dorms. This year he turned away more than 350 students who wanted on-campus housing. Georgia can house about 6,300 students on the Athens campus.

HALLE, AT WISCONSIN-MADISON, said increased transportation costs make campus living more convenient and cheaper.

Physician given libel damages in suit against former students

KANSAS CITY, Kan. (AP) — A jury awarded $44,000 in damages Saturday to a white former University of Kansas Medical School physician who sued four of his black students for libel because they charged him with discrimination.

The jury's decision awarded Dr. Dante G. Scarpelli $1,000 in compensatory damages and $10,000 in punitive damages from each of the four defendants, former medical students at the school.

THE VERDICT BY THE WYANdotte District Court jury of eight men and four women came after nearly three days of deliberations.

Attorneys for the defendants had said the case was an important test for affirmative action programs in the United States, saying it would have national impact on the ability of minority students to seek redress for racial discrimination.

The lead defense attorney said he would ask for a new trial and, if that failed, would appeal "all the way to the Supreme Court if necessary."

Scarpelli, a former physician at the University of Kansas Medical Center, said the trial's outcome would erase any belief among his colleagues that he may be prejudiced against blacks, and said it would not damage the civil rights movement.

"From the very beginning, I looked upon this as simply a case of libel, and I wanted to have my day in court," Scarpelli said. "I would have done exactly the same thing if four white students had said the same things."

HIS LIBEL SUIT WAS FILED against a medical school official and the four black doctors who were then students at the hospital. Scarpelli charged that his reputation and professional standing were damaged when the defendants filed a complaint in 1974 that he discriminated against black students.

"It (the verdict) shouldn't make one iota of difference to the civil rights situation in this country. It shouldn't make any difference in deterring blacks from bringing charges against a white if he thinks he has been treated unfairly," Scarpelli said.

"I believe in upward mobility and equal opportunity for the black man, everything the civil rights movement stands for," he said. "As far as I'm concerned the sword of justice has two edges, and this time it cut in my favor."

James I. Meyerson, an assistant general counsel for the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, said the verdict represented a serious threat not only to blacks, but also to women seeking relief from sexual harassment and union members with complaints against management.

"It is a statement of the position of our society at this time on the status of race relations, and it's not a good one," Meyerson said. "We're all in serious, serious trouble. But I think history will prove the doctors (the defendants) correct," adding he was confident an appeal would reverse the decision.

THE 1974 COMPLAINT against Scarpelli, then chairman of the pathology and oncology department, was filed with the University of Kansas Medical School. The physician, now chairman of the pathology department at Northwestern University in Evanston, Ill., sought $650,000 in damages.

The trial was the second for the libel case. In February 1978 a mistrial was declared after a jury deadlocked 11-1 in Scarpelli's favor after nearly three weeks of testimony. The second trial began Oct. 29.

The school official in the original suit — Chester J. Rempson, a former affirmative action officer at the medical school who now lives in Mississippi — was severed from the case before the trial ended.

The four remaining defendants were Drs. Nolan Jones, Ernest Turner, Charles Lee and Charles Floyd, all former students. Jones and Turner have post-residency fellowships in Boston and Los Angeles, Lee is a resident at the medical center and Floyd is a resident at a Los Angeles hospital.

THE STUDENTS FILED A FIVE-page complaint April 3, 1974, charging Scarpelli with "willful and unlawful discrimination" against black medical students. The complaint was dismissed after a hearing before a faculty panel.

James I. Meyerson, an assistant general counsel for the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, headed the defense team for the students in the second trial. Meyerson said the case could affect affirmative action programs and specifically the rights of minorities to complain about racial discrimination.

A decision in favor of Scarpelli could have "a chilling effect on the ability of anyone within the university setting to challenge" discriminatory practices, Meyerson said.

Health panel sets election

The governing body of the Permian Basin Health Systems Agency is scheduled to elect new officers at its regular monthly meeting Monday.

The 7:30 p.m. meeting will be in the conference room of the Permian Basin Regional Planning Commission at Midland Regional Airport.

The agency's grant application and proposed budget will be reviewed by the governing body. A public hearing on the matter should be scheduled Dec. 1.

The agency also has completed a revised draft of the Permian Basin Health Systems Plan for 1980 and the 1980-81 annual implementation plan.

The governing body is scheduled to review both those documents and set a public hearing on them.

Midland man Dad's president

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — W.C. Montgomery of Midland has been elected president of the Dad's Association at the University of Texas at Austin, at the group's annual Dad's Day meeting Saturday.

Seventeen vice presidents also were elected for the 1979-80 year, including Frank K. Cahoon of Midland.

J. Sam Winters of Austin was re-elected treasurer and Vincent R. Dinino of Austin, was re-elected director of the association with Warren Gould, University of Texas Development Office, named executive secretary.

Consumer group urges safety labels for caffeine

WASHINGTON (AP) — A consumer group concerned about women's intake of caffeine during pregnancy urged the government anew Saturday to require warning labels on coffee and tea.

The Center for Science in the Public Interest also said it has sent letters to 12,500 obstetricians and gynecologists and 1,500 midwives urging them to advise pregnant women not to consume caffeine.

Coffee and tea are the main source of the stimulant for most pregnant women, but it also is an ingredient in cola beverages and some over-the-counter drugs.

Michael Jacobson, director of the non-profit, activist group, said tests on animals and humans have linked caffeine to such birth defects as cleft palate, heart defects and missing fingers or toes, and possibly to reproductive problems.

The center, which began its anti-caffeine campaign in 1976, filed a new petition with the Food and Drug Administration asking it to require the warning labels. It also suggested the FDA launch a drive to tell pregnant women about caffeine.

Wayne Pines, spokesman for FDA, said the agency already is "working very actively" on caffeine. "We're in the process now of developing regulations on caffeine. One option is to require a label warning for pregnant women," Pines said.

Another option would be to remove caffeine as an ingredient in cola drinks, Pines added. He said he does not know when the FDA will come up with its proposals.

Jacobson said two studies have indicated that as little as five cups of coffee a day can have "significant effects" on the fetus. He claimed that each year 400,000 pregnant women drink that much coffee routinely.

But Jacobson could not say how many problem pregnancies and abnormal births could be blamed on caffeine.

"We hope that health officials and women recognize that caffeine is a drug and should be avoided in pregnancy," he said. "There is all benefit and no cost associated with this simple preventive measure."

George Boecklin, president of the National Coffee Association, said he would not comment on the center's petition until he had seen it.

Caffeine content in coffee ranges from 20 to 176 milligrams per cup. Tea contains between 8 and 107 milligrams. About 88 percent of the public's caffeine consumption in foods comes from coffee and tea, Jacobson said.

Drivers, beware! Ticketing to start at post office

Drivers, beware!

The center of the street is studded with traffic buttons, signs are out and the Midland Police Department is ready to start issuing citations to drivers violating traffic laws at the new Main Street entrance to the Main Post Office parking lot, 100 E. Wall Ave.

Only northbound traffic on Main Street may turn into the new entrance, according to Lt. Herman M. Wicker of the Midland Police Department. Left turns from Main Street into the post office parking lot are prohibited.

The reason is traffic congestion in the Wall Avenue — Main Street intersection caused by southbound cars attempting to turn into the parking lot entrance.

Violators will be ticketed beginning Monday, according to Wicker.

New Florida derailment; No expected evacuations

AUBURNDALE, Fla. (AP) — A tank filled with liquid propane sprang a leak when a boxcar from a derailed Seaboard Coast Line freight train fell on it Saturday, but officials quickly stopped the flow of gas and safely moved the tank, police said.

There was no fire, but firefighters stood by while a crane lifted the boxcar off the 500-gallon propane tank lying alongside the railbed. It was not part of the derailed train.

Auburndale Fire Chief Jim Hancock said the only danger remaining from the derailment was three derailed cars carrying ammonia nitrate. None of the cars was leaking, and Hancock said officials hoped to have them cleaned up by Saturday night.

Wreckage was stacked when as many as 37 cars derailed in an industrial section of this Central Florida town.

There were no explosions or fires and no injuries were reported in the late-morning accident, said Police Sgt. Charles King. He said no evacuations were planned.

Most were box cars and hopper cars. Onlookers said the derailment started several cars behind the engines pulling the southbound train.

"It's a mountain of cars," said Ben Parrish, production manager of a Purex Corp. plant located beside the track. "They're stacked up on top of each other and all of them are smashed and bent up pretty good."

Parrish said the pile was about 100 yards away from a four-lane overpass for State Road 92. "It certainly would have taken that bridge out had it happened any closer," he said.

Parrish said he was inside the plant when it happened. "It sounded like a crash, just a huge, long crash," he said. "It sounded like a car wreck, only it lasted a lot longer."

The derailment came six days after a dangerous train wreck in the Florida Panhandle. That one, near Molino last Sunday, was followed by a series of gigantic explosions from chemical- and gas-laden tank cars and forced the evacuation of about 500 people.

The cars were destroyed last week by a series of controlled blasts, and all residents were allowed to return home.

Arabs meet, but arrive at no decisions

TUNIS, Tunisia (AP) — Arab foreign ministers ended a three-day meeting Saturday without reaching accord on how to ease tension in southern Lebanon or increase pressure on Israel, Egypt and the United States.

The ministers met to prepare for an Arab League summit meeting due to open here Tuesday without Egypt, which was expelled from the league after it negotiated the Camp David peace pact with Israel and the United States last year.

Arab League sources said the ministers agreed on the need to intensify the Arab struggle against Israel and the boycott of Egypt, but failed to resolve their most crucial differences.

The sources said the ministers abandoned discussion of a draft communique when it became clear the text would not be accepted by both the radical and moderate wings in the 20-member league.

USS Intrepid fans hoping for its move to New York

NEW YORK (AP) — Fans of the aircraft carrier USS Intrepid hope to have the heroic World War II ship, now in mothballs in Philadelphia, on exhibit as a museum here in time for the city's next Fourth of July harbor festival.

They've formed the Intrepid Museum Foundation to convert the 903-foot long ship into an International Aerospace and Naval Museum which would be open to the public at a permanent berth on the Hudson River.

Skyscraper builder Zachary Fisher, the foundation's executive vice president, said the non-profit organization has satisfied the Navy Department's requirements in applying for custody of the 36-year-old Essex class carrier.

"When the foundation submits proof of its $3 million financial responsibility in mid-January, the Intrepid will be towed to the former Brooklyn Navy Yard where $1.5 million will be earmarked for the ship's conversion," he said.

"If the remodeling schedule works out, the Intrepid's move from Brooklyn to Manhattan may be part of the Big Apple's Fourth of July ceremonies."

Because of the hazards of towing such a giant ship from Philadelphia to New York in winter weather, the journey of the carrier is planned for mid-March.

Despite serious battle damage on three occasions during World War II, the Intrepid destroyed over 650 enemy aircraft and 80 ships.

It served as the prime recovery ship for America's space program twice, picking up Scott Carpenter in his Mercury capsule in 1962 and Astronauts John W. Young and Virgil I. "Gus" Grissom in th Gemini spacecraft "Molly Brown" in 1965.

Zachary said the aerospace museum complex will demonstrate all aspects of flight and document the development of seaborne commerce and defense.

It will include halls of space technolgy, commercial, military and early flight aircraft, models of battleships of the 50 states, merchant marine activities and the lunar module "Intrepid" plus the first American Air Corps balloon in President Lincoln's time, also named "Intrepid."

Intrepid also will be used for conventions and meetings, according to Zachary.

But, how do I get a ship this size down to the sea?

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — The problem was not one your average do-it-yourself handyman often confronts.

The problem was how to get the boat he built in his backyard down to the river, and shove it in, when the boat weighed 70 tons; was 100-feet long, as long as a 10-story building is tall; and 35-feet wide, wider than the road to the river, 10 miles away.

"Took me 3½ years to build it," Tom Meanley said. "The neighbors laughed. They joked about whether I knew something they didn't; whether what I was building was another Noah's ark.

"What a sweet sight it was when she slid into the Mississippi, and floated. It was a proud moment, I'll tell you."

The boat Tom Meanley built in his backyard was the Memphis Queen III, a sternwheeler, a steel-hulled replica of the grand old packet steamers of Mississippi legend and song.

It is certainly no less impressive, cubit for cubit, than Noah's boat. It is three decks tall, snow white trimmed in saloon red, with ironwork as lacy as a French negligee.

Every day it seduces as many as 400 passengers at a time for excursions on the river, dreamy cruises to a romantic past.

"My pride and joy," Tom Meanley said.

Texan dies in accident in Missouri

DONIPHAN, Mo. (AP) — A 30-year-old Highlands, Texas, man died Saturday after the vehicle he was riding in ran off the road and overturned about nine miles north of Doniphan in the southeast section of the state, the Highway Patrol reported.

The patrol identified the victim as James R. Dale. The patrol said he was thrown from the vehicle when it overturned. He died later at a local hospital.

Another man in the vehicle, Rector E. Dale, 53, of Doniphan, also was thrown from the wreck. He was hospitalized with critical injuries.

Lions, Rotary to hold Thanksgiving meeting Wednesday, at Hilton

The annual, joint Thanksgiving meeting of the Midland Downtown Lions and Rotary Clubs will be held Wednesday noon in the Midland Hilton.

Larry W. VanSteenberg, minister of the Golf Course Road Church of Christ, and a member of the Lions Club, will be the speaker.

John R. Seay is president of the Rotary Club, and Ray Gwyn heads the Lions Club.

The two service clubs were organized in 1928 ,and almost ever since that time, they have been meeting in joint session on the Wednesday before Thanksgiving Day, with the Lions Club serving as the host group, since the regular Rotary Club meeting date annually falls on the holiday.

Evacuees home

MISSISSAUGA, Ontario (AP) — The last of 223,000 persons evacuated from this town were back home today, one day after workers drained the remaining 20 tons of deadly chlorine gas from a tanker ruptured in a train wreck.

About 134,000 evacuees returned home Tuesday, but the threat of the toxic gas kept 89,000 away from home until late Friday, when workers emptied the car, which originally held 90 tons.

The evacuation began early Sunday, hours after the pre-midnight derailment of 25 chemical tankers in a 106-car freight. Reports said the train derailed because a wheel bearing burned out, leading to an axle break that touched off explosions and fires in several propane tankers.

It was the largest evacuation ever in Canada, and authorities promised a full investigation.. No serious injuries were reported to civilians, but eight firemen were hospitalized after inhaling deadly fumes near the chlorine tanker.

Steelmen reject wage proposal

PITTSBURGH (AP) — U.S. Steel Corp. workers in Gary, Ind., voted on Saturday to join their Pennsylvania counterparts and reject a wage freeze proposed as a job guarantee, the United Steelworkers union said.

Workers at the American Bridge division fabricating plant in Gary voted 440-34 against U.S. Steel's proposal, thus risking the loss of their jobs, said Mike Drapkin, a USW spokesman.

The nation's largest steelmaker claims that it cannot compete with smaller fabricators who are not part of the basic steel agreement between the nine largest steel companies and the USW.

The company offered 1,600 workers at three fabricating plants the choice of dropping out of the basic steel agreement or facing the possible closings of their plants. The USW said it would put the issue to a rank-and-file vote.

On Friday, USW members at the American Bridge plant in nearby Ambridge also defied the company'w threat, by a vote of 650-432. Workers at a third, smaller, plant in Pittsburgh were scheduled to vote Sunday.

U.S. Steel, which had asked the USW for an answer by Nov. 20, is expected to decide the plants' fate at its board of directors meeting Nov. 27.

Basic steel wages, the highest industrial earnings in the nation, average $13.50 an hour with fringe benefits, as compared with $9 an hour for steelworkers not covered under the pact.

Innovation Center at Salt Lake boosts inventors' bubbles

By GEORGE TIBBITS

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Steven Root had an idea — "a little plastic pocket calculator where everyone can get up in the morning, punch a few buttons and know what the weather is."

He built a computerized machine — not quite pocket-sized, but close — that predicts weather up to 24 hours in advance. But after spending $5,000 and four years and making the rounds of electronics companies, he'd gotten nowhere.

"I was one of those lone-star inventors trying to do everything myself," said Root, 26, a meteorologist in Salt Lake City. "My wife was beating me over the head saying, 'No more expenses. No more projects.'"

Then Root contacted the Utah Innovation Center.

IT IS ONE of four centers set up with help from the National Science Foundation to guide inventions from scratchy figures on paper to saleable products. The center is now building another prototype for Root, conducting a market study and giving Root advice on how to be a successful businessman.

Without the center, Root said he would be lost. "I probably wouldn't be anywhere, doing the same old things," he said.

Root's machine is one of hundreds of gadgets nursed into being since NSF began the program in 1973. The centers have overseen such projects as video games, interior climate controls, medical equipment and bicycle transmissions.

ON THE OTHER hand, attempts have been made at windmill-powered cars, automatic toilet seat lifters and women's garments that spray sexual assailants with tear gas.

In six years, NSF has provided $4 million in seed money for centers at the University of Utah, University of Oregon, Massachusetts Institute of Technology and Carnegie-Mellon University. NSF program manager Robert Colton said the centers have started between 25 and 30 new businesses, some now earning as much as $10 million a year.

"We made some rough calculations on return ... and we figure it's close to one and a half to two times the original investment," said Colton.

USING faculty members and some outside consultants to evaluate ideas, the centers give suggestions for improving designs, help build prototypes, promote products and offer sales advice and sometimes money to start a business. Most run classes on product development and entrepreneurship through the universities' business schools.

William Bowen, Utah center administrator, said his staffers can help inventors avoid fraudulent promoters. "Inventors are intense people — they really put a lot of emotion into their projects and are vunerable to being exploited," he said.

"The thing I have appreciated most in working with NSF is that they have given us the freedom to fail," said Oregon center director Gerald Udell. "That's the cornerstone of an environment that stimulates creativity."

THE OREGON center has had its share of failures. The anti-rape garment, for instance.

"We gave that a very poor evaluation," Udell said. "That was a success in that we told the inventor to forget it."

Overall, Colton said, the program has been so successful that more than 40 other schools have asked NSF for help to set up their own centers. He said legislation currently before Congress would provide more money to expand the program.

Among Oregon's successes have been a folding luggage cart, a process for separating hydrogen from water for use as fuel and a franchising plan for wood-burning stoves. MIT has produced television games and a gold bar forgery detector.

CMU CLIENTS include two successful businesses in the Pittsburgh area — one producing computerized climate controls for buildings, the other remote controls for heavy equipment.

The Utah center has six projects under way, including an automatic bicycle transmission and a probe which uses light transmitted along a fiber to make delicate temperature measurements inside the body.

All four centers still rely on grant money and school support. But Bowen said his center hopes to become self-supporting, by obtaining part ownerships or royalties from companies it helps start.

IN 10 YEARS, if we've been successful, the university would own stock in some exciting companies," he said.

Unlike the Oregon center — which looks at any idea the public sends in, charging $25 to $50 for a 33-point computer evaluation — Utah accepts only about one out of six proposals it receives.

It's Bowen's job to break the news when staffers think an idea won't work. "The worst are those who are hanging their whole heart on a concept," he said.

ONE MAN turned away, he said, claimed to have invented an anti-gravity device through a "not-known theory of physics" he discovered by examining a top and a flat disc.

"It was a Frisbee," Bowen said.

Haig talks of running

DENVER (AP) — Citing his experience as former President Richard Nixon's chief of staff, Gen. Alexander Haig said that he has the credentials to be president and will decide by next month whether to seek the job.

Haig said his other option is to run for a U.S. Senate seat in his native Pennsylvania.

Haig has been mentioned as a potential Republican presidential candidate since his retirement in 1978 as commander of North Atlantic Treaty Organization forces.

He said his decision on whether to run for president "would be determined by whether or not it would contribute to the good of the United States."

His remarks came at a news conference before speaking to the Humanitarian Awards Dinner of the Denver chapter of the National Conference of Christians and Jews.

Intelligence chief says spy ring Britain-wide

LONDON (AP) — A former British intelligence chief said on Saturday the Soviet spy ring that used Queen Elizabeth II's art curator, Anthony Blunt, had stretched throughout Britain. An art dealer, now dead, was reported to have been the ring's likely paymaster.

George Young, who until his retirement in 1961 headed the MI6 security department handling foreign operations, said in an interview with Independent Television News, "seven or eight others were under suspicion," besides Blunt, the eminent, 72-year-old art historian now in hiding from the press.

Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher disclosed Blunt's spy activities to Parliament after a magazine named him as the "fourth man" in a Soviet ring that included defectors Guy Burgess, Donald Maclean and Kim Philby.

Young said the other suspected men, whom he did not identify, were questioned by Scotland Yard's Special Branch. That branch deals with political activity in Britain. The suspects in government posts, he said, were asked to leave and apparently nobody was prosecuted.

"The implications of the whole affair seemed to stretch throughout the United Kingdom," Young said. He noted there might have been communist spy cells in other universities besides Cambridge, where Blunt recruited spy talent in the 1930s.

The London Daily Telegraph quoted London art world sources as saying the late Tomas Harris, a wealthy art dealer and friend of Blunt from their Cambridge days, probably paid the British spies.

The Telegraph's art correspondent, Frances Gibb, said her sources believed Harris paid the spies in valuable paintings or drawings as well as cash.

Harris was known as the world's greatest expert on the Spanish painter Francisco Goya, and he bequeathed his Goyas to the British Museum. Harris was killed in 1964 in a car crash on the Spanish island of Majorca.

Harris and Blunt worked for British Intelligence during World War II, as did Burgess, Maclean and Philby, the trio who defected to Moscow in the 1950s and 1960s in Britain's most notorious spy scandal.

The influential Times of London also mentioned Harris on Saturday.

The Times said Blunt "gave away his role" in an obituary of Harris written for a forthcoming reference book. It said the obituary described their wartime activity in a double-agent operation codenamed Garbo, but gave no other details.

The Times printed three letters from sympathizers with Blunt, saying he was being hounded. One was from a 30-year friend, London antique dealer Brian Sewell, who said he drove Blunt into hiding.

Sewell said the government dishonored itself by publicizing the case because Blunt was granted immunity from prosecution in exchange for his confession in 1964.

National clamor continued over why Blunt kept his art advisory post at Buckingham Palace after he confessed, and why government ministers were not told for 15 years.

The newpaper Daily Mail reported without attribution that the queen was informed Blunt was a traitor. The palace refused to confirm it.

Labor Party lawmaker Martin Flanery said, "The government must expose and unmask the faceless men in high places who shielded a confessed spy. I cannot help but suspect that because Blunt belongs to the upper reaches of the establishment some kind of freemasonry (sympathetic reaction) was invoked to protect him."

An unidentified man carries a young man, whose nose is bleeding, from the fire that erupted when a dark green Pontiac hit a yellow cab at the corner of 8th and Flower, in Los Angeles, early Saturday morning. The vehicles then swerved into the windows of a busy all-night restaurant and immediately exploded. The driver and the passenger of the cab were killed. One customer was injured while trying to escape the flames through a broken restaurant window. The driver of the Pontiac was also injured.

5 die after names appear in purported mob ledger

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Five labor leaders and gambling-interests personalities figure prominently in a purported mob ledger, and all were slain after the dates their names appeared, the Arizona Republic said Saturday.

In another copyright story centering on what some say could be a diary of organized crime finances or could be fiction, the Phoenix newspaper noted that four of the five deaths remain unsolved.

The Republic said authorities in Utah, California and Arizona were investigating the contents of the purported diary. In Washington, the FBI said it had been aware of the document since 1977 and had investigated it without confirming its authenticity. The agency also said it has no current investigation under way in connection with the document.

In Utah, Michael Deamer, chief deputy attorney general, said his office had reviewed the diary and was convinced by the FBI that it was a forgery but that "some of our investigators, however, didn't buy the FBI story at all." An Arizona investigator said the document could be a fictionalized account and had "zero value" as potential courtroom evidence.

On Friday, the newspaper said the document indicated that former President Nixon and four of his key aides received payments totaling $650,000 after Nixon pardoned former Teamsters boss Jimmy Hoffa.

Hoffa, convicted in 1964 for jury tampering and mail fraud, was sentenced to 13 years in prison. Nixon commuted the sentence in 1971 on condition that Hoffa have nothing to do with the union until March 1980, when his original sentence would have expired.

Hoffa disappeared from a Detroit parking lot in 1975 amid reports he had been slain.

A source close to Nixon has denounced the document as false.

Others cited by the Republic as prominent in the purported diary include:

—Al Bramlett, head of the 23,000-member Culinary Workers' Union in Las Vegas, Nev., whose bullet-riddled body was found in the desert about a month after he was abducted from a Las Vegas airport.

—Tamara Rand, a San Diego businesswoman who was found shot to death in the kitchen of her home. Los Angeles and San Diego officials say her death may have been ordered because of her attempts to gain a degree of control in Las Vegas casino operations.

—G. William Coulthard, former Nevada state legislator and ex-FBI agent, who died when a dynamite blast destroyed the car he was attempting to move from near a Las Vegas bank in 1972.

Military recruiting job not sought as much as formerly

WASHINGTON (AP) — Military recruiting used to be considered very good duty.

Not any more.

The pressures on recruiters to produce enough volunteers are intense. And the available pool of military-age youths is shrinking. Quality young men and women are increasingly hard to attract into uniform.

As a result, some recruiters allegedly have helped sub-standard volunteers cheat on entrance examinations and allegedly have connived in falsifying records or otherwise cut corners.

The Army, which has experienced the most trouble in meeting its recruiting requirements, has been embarrassed by its worst recruiter scandal since the draft ended more than six years ago.

Investigations in all of the Army's 57 recruiting districts have led to the relief of 288 sergeants, almost half of them in five Southern and Southwestern regions — Montgomery, Ala., 43; Charlotte, N.C., 30; Dallas, 24; Richmond, Va., 23; and Atlanta, 19.

Three recruiters in the Charlotte district, where the probes began earlier this year, were tried by courts-martial and acquitted. Five others are awaiting trial.

Prodded by persistant reports of improprieties, the Navy, Marine Corps and Air Force all have focused critical attention on their recruiter corps.

In the past year, the Navy has acted against 20 recruiters in the Chicago and Newark, N.J., areas. The Marines have replaced seven recruiters in Pittsburgh.

The Air Force, which has consistantly enjoyed a better volunteer crop than the other services, is scrutinizing the activities of about 15 recruiters.

Pentagon manpower chief Robert Pirie rejects contentions that there has been "widespread fraud and widespread compromise" of entrance tests.

Pirie argues that only a small percentage of the more than 14,000 recruiters have resorted to shady practices.

But he acknowledges he is concerned because, Pirie says, the misdeeds of a few "are tarring and degrading and essentially counteracting the efforts" of the majority.

"We have developed internal checks" designed to disclose irregularities and prevent the problem from getting out of hand, Pirie says.

At the same time, Pirie and Gen. Edward C. Meyer, Army chief of staff, say they are moving to provide more help for recruiters.

Among other things, Pirie says, efforts will be made to provide "a decent recruiting office in a decent location in town."

Meyer has appealed to friends of the Army around the country to persuade high school principals to allow recruiters access to students. The Army's top officer says about 25 percent of the nation's high schools bar military recruiters from their grounds.

Defense manpower officials hope to spend more money on advertising, particularly on prime-time television, to stimulate interest among the young.

Perhaps the most important initiative involves sending more non-commissioned officers into the field to help round up recruits. "More recruiters, and therefore less pressure on each recruiter" is the way Pirie describes the objective.

But that may not be easy, despite extra pay, chances to live in the civilian community and improved opportunities for promotion that go with the job of recruiting.

The Army said last week it has been unable to get enough additional sergeants to volunteer for recruiting duty. So, for the first time, it has decided to order about 1,000 of what it calls the Army's "best soldiers" to serve as recruiters.

2 die after taxi slams into all-night restaurant

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A car believed fleeing the scene of a purse-snatching hit a taxi broadside and slammed it into a crowded restaurant early Saturday, killing two persons and critically injuring a third, police said.

The cab burst into flames, setting the restaurant afire, and several other diners were cut by flying glass, the authorities said.

The driver of the cab and his passenger were killed and a woman inside the restaurant was critically injured, said traffic Sgt. G.E. Brents. The woman, who was cut by flying glass, was taken to USC Medical Center.

A teen-age girl driving a dark green Pontiac with three or four passengers raced through a red light at a downtown intersection, nicked the front of a pickup truck and crashed into the taxi, Brents said.

The cab spun out of control and crashed into the side of the Ginny Jones Eating Emporium, erupting in flames.

Two of the girl's passengers allegedly had just snatched a woman's purse a few blocks from the scene of the accident at 1:39 a.m., Brent said.

The teen-age driver, who was also taken to USC Medical Center, was booked for investigation of manslaughter, Brents said. Two of the car's passengers were booked for investigation of robbery.

Police did not release their names. Two other passengers may have escaped from the wreckage and run away before authorities arrived, Brent said.

Cleaver freed, charge dropped

OAKLAND (AP) — A state judge says he will probably put former Black Panther leader Eldrige Cleaver on probation after prosecutors dropped attempted murder charges against him in exchange for his pleading guilty to assault.

Superior Court Judge Winton McKibben said that the only thing which would prevent his putting Cleaver on probation would be an unfavorable report from the probation department.

That report is due to be finished by Dec. 21, the date Cleaver is to be sentenced for assaulting Oakland police in a wild shootout in 1968.

McKibben said that if the report is unfavorable, Cleaver would be allowed to withdraw his guilty plea and face trial.

HOW MUCH CAN I AFFORD?

How much you can afford to spend for a house? There are two methods of determining this figure which have been in use for many years.

One method says you can afford a house valuedat 21/2 times your annual income (including both husband and wife). Sof if your combined income is $30,000, you can probably swing a $75,000 home. But this kiad of mathematics may not be the idoal answer for you A $75,000 house may be too much to handle for a $30,000 a year income if one makes a small down payment or a high interest rate is involved; or if the tax rate is extremely high, or his or her life style demands on the heavy expenditures.

The second way to figure is to take the monthly payment for the house (principal, interest, taxes and insurance) plus utilities, and if this doesn't consume more than 25% of your monthly take-home pay, then you are in a good position.

One last note to remeber - as the years roll on yo can expect your income to increase by both your ability to earn more and the ever increasing inflationary spiral which includes income. As your income continues to rise over the years, it will offset your major house expense (mortage can, and interest) which will remain the same throughout the life of the loan.

Old, young compete in Second International Whistle-Off

By CHARLES HILLINGER
The Los Angeles Times

CARSON CITY, Nev. — They came from all over North America recently to this state capital just to whistle.

The young, the old and the in-between, all proponents of pucker power, came here to compete in the World's Second International Whistle-Off.

Some whistled to tape recordings of symphonic orchestras. Some whistled to bagpipes, harmonicas of kazoos. Others to the accompaniment of Fred Yount's Carson City Orchestra.

Nelson Christensen, 39, an attorney from Hawaii, whistled while smoking two cigars. And he whistled while accompanied by David Paquette, a piano player, who flew across the Pacific with him.

Lillian (Aunt Lilly) Williams, 87, of Clarksville, Ark., better known as "America's whistling sweetheart," brought the house down as she whistled and danced at the same time.

Five-year-old Mike Hatch was the youngest of more than 50 performers. Mike, a local boy, whistled a church hymn, "Ring the Bells of Heaven."

Roy Thoreson, 48, took a couple days off his job as a whistling railroad brakeman for the Canadian Pacific in Calgary to whistle a few tunes and won the title as the Whistle-Off's grand champion.

Mitch Hider, 40, of Alpine, Ore., and Dan Bernstein, 30, of Riverside, Calif., brought their mothers along. Eva Kassis, Hider's mother, and Belle Bernstein sat on a stage while their sons whistled in duet "Let Me Call You Sweetheart" and other nostalgic numbers.

The women sat in profile facing each other a la Whistler's Mother, both wearing black dresses, white bonnets and shawls.

Hider, like one of the Seven Dwarfs, whistles while he works. He whistles at weddings, baptisms, bar mitzvahs, private and public parties and funerals. "I'll Whistle Anywhere" is a motto on Hider's business card. Bernstein, when not whistling, is a motto on Hider's business card. Bernstein, when not whistling, is a reporter for the Riverside-Press Enterprise in Riverside, Calif.

Some, including Dr. Horatio Q. Birdbath of 770 Lovers Lane, Vacaville, Calif., are professional whistlers.

Birdbath is a through-the-tooth whistler with 300 different birdcalls in his repertoire. He performed with Spike Jones for 20 years and was the glugger on the hit tune "Cocktail for Two."

From Tequilla, Mex., came Francisco Hernandez, 20, known as "Juanito el Silbador" (Johnny the Whistler), who appeared to be one of the most popular contestants.

The Whistle-Off took place on Nevada's state Capitol mall in the shadows of the 1870 native-stone statehouse.

Eric (Radar) Vernon, 26, a Durham, N.C., attorney who is a two-finger high-pressure whistler, warned spectators with expensive watches to beware because his shrill whistle is known to shatter watch crystals.

Among the professions represented by whistlers, lawyers predominated.

Attorney Harvey Pollock, 46, of Winnipeg, who regularly whistles with Canadian symphony orchestras, thrilled the crowd with his rendition of Rossini's "Overture to the Barber of Seville."

Pollock was the grand champion of the first Whisttle-Off in 1977.

The judges were a prestigious group of nine whistlers from the United States and Canada, including Muzzy Marcellino, 67, for years vocalist with Phil Harris and Ted Fiorito and the whistler for the score of John Wayne's movie "The High and the Mighty."

Jason Serinus, 34, a professional whistler and one of the judges, is so far into whistling that he changed his last named several years ago to Serinus, the genus of songbirds of which the canary is a member.

Also judging was the Rev. Clifford Pratt, 58, pastor of San Francisco's First Church of God, author of "The Whistling Book" and a credentialed whistling professor with the University of California.

Winners of the various categories in the Whistle-Off were awarded 18-inch-tall wooden whistle trophies.

Houston candidates sling mud before Tuesday's runoff voting

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Mayor Jim McConn and Councilman Louis Macey promised not to get personal in their campaigns for the mayoral runoff election set for Tuesday.

That promise died on the vine, however, as each candidate has accused the other of using misleading campaign techniques.

Meanwhile, McConn has managed to garner the most public support, with endorsements from the city's largest Hispanic and black organizations, four incumbent councilmen, three newly elected councilmen and Police Chief Harry Caldwell.

Macey said McConn's campaign literature in the black community was deliberately designed to divide the city, especially the phrase, "Don't let the Republicans close the door at City Hall."

Noting that the election was non-partisan, the councilman said the statement was an effort to mislead black voters into thinking he would not represent them.

McConn said he resented Macey's advertisements alleging the mayor is a big spender and a gambler, an allusion to a controversial loan McConn received to pay off Las Vegas gambling debts last January.

The two candidates, who have been bitter rivals in most areas of city government, continued to voice their differences on the disannexation of the Clear Lake area and the handling of the city's traffic problem.

While McConn is fighting efforts by Clear Lake to nullify its annexation by Houston, Macey is backing the community's effort, saying Houston can't provide proper services.

Macey said he believes the Metropolitan Transit Authority should provide more money and assistance in helping solve the traffic mess. He accused McConn of not considering traffic a high enough priority.

He said the city has no funds available for projects designed to improve the flow of traffic at crowded intersections.

McConn said the MTA will be joining with the city in cooperative financing of mutually beneficial projects. And he said there are now several projects on the drawing boards to improve the traffic flow.

The mayor said solving long-range traffic problems doesn't happen overnight, but his administration has taken the initial steps.

Lance case develops new issue

ATLANTA (AP) — A three-day hearing on a motion to dismiss bank fraud conspiracy charges against former federal budget director Bert Lance spotlighted an issue not mentioned in the motion.

Testimony ended Thursday on the motion to dismiss "because of the government's commitment not to prosecute, prejudicial pre-indictment delay, and because the prosecution was brought for an improper purpose."

Midway through the hearing, defense attorney Nickolas Chilivis charged there had been illegal collusion between federal agencies in the early stages of the investigation.

Lance and co-defendants Richard T. Carr, Thomas M. Mitchell and H. Jackson Mullins were warned in the summer of 1978 that they were targets of a criminal investigation. Earlier, they had testified in proceedings by the Securities and Exchange Commission and the comptroller of the currency, and Chilivis said he learned that transcripts from the administrative bodies were shared with the Justice Department team looking into possible criminal charges.

"The government was in essence shooting fish in a barrel," Chilivis said.

Prosecutor Marvin Loewy said the civil proceedings "were not a subterfuge to gather evidence from the defendants."

Magistrate Allen L. Chancey Jr. said he would let the attorneys file briefs before he makes a recommendation on the motion to U.S. District Judge Charles A. Moye.

The only defendant to appear at the hearing was Carr, former president of the Northwest Georgia Bank in Ringgold. Carr testified that he would have refused to give testimony before the SEC in November 1977 if he had known a criminal investigation was under way.

Arkansas split end Bobby Duckworth (27) falls backward trying to reach a long pass deflected by Texas A&M free safety Van Barnett (31) in second quarter of Saturday afternoon's Southwest Conference game in College Station. The pass from Kevin Scanlon fell incomplete but Arkansas went on to win the game, 22-10. (AP Laserphoto)

Scanlon sparks Hogs to win over Aggies

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Arkansas' Kevin Scanlon picked Texas A&M apart with his passing and Darryl Bowles rushed over 100 yards and scored on runs of 22 and 8 yards as the eighth-ranked Hogs defeated the Aggies 22-10 Saturday and then stood by to consider bowl invitations.

The victory boosted the Razorbacks to a 9-1 season record and kept them on pace for a possible trip to the Cotton Bowl as the Southwest Conference representative with a 6-1 record.

SUGAR BOWL officials also watched the game and were expected to offer the Razorbacks a conditional bid to their bowl if Arkansas failed to make the Cotton Bowl.

Scanlon, the SWC's leading percentage passer, ripped up the Aggie defense starting in the second quarter when the Hogs took a 10-0 lead on a 45-yard field goal by Ish Ordonez and a 22-yard run by Bowles.

The Aggies, trying to play the role of spoiler in the SWC, struck back in the third quarter for their only scoring drive that ended with David Hardy's 27-yard field goal.

But Ordonez returned twice in the fourth quarter to add field goals of 25 and 41 yards and Bowles added an 8-yard touchdown run in the final three minutes.

A&M QUARTERBACK Mike Mosley added the game's final points on a 20-yard run with 1:43 to play.

The Aggies are 4-5 for the season and 2-4 in SWC games.

After a scoreless first quarter, Arkansas started loosening the Aggie defense with an effective blend of Scanlon's passing and Bowles running.

Prior to Ordonez' 45-yard field goal, Scanlon completed passes of 12 yards to Gary Anderson and 16-yards to Bobby Duckworth and Bowles rushed 16 and 11 yards. The drive ended at the A&M 28 on a motion penalty and a 9-yard loss by Scanlon.

SCANLON HIT wide receiver Robert Farrell for 21 yards and Duckworth for 16 more prior to Bowles first touchdown.

In addition to his three field goals, Ordonez also missed on a 32-yard kick.

Bowles gained 169 yards on 16 carries to go with his two touchdowns.

Stephenson debut highly successful as Bulldogs win

DEL RIO — Jack Stephenson made his debut as Midland High's new head basketball coach here Saturday night with a 78-52 victory over the Del Rio Rams.

Herbert Johnson, the talented 6-foot-9 junior, led the way with 23 points, but three other Bulldogs climbed into double figures. Postman Horace Brown contributed to the cause with a big 16-point effort and Darrin Matlock added 12 more. Guard Perry Bolger, the leading scorer on last year's JV team, hit for 10 markers in the game.

DEL RIO jumped to a narrow 15-14 lead after the first quarter, but the Bulldogs erupted for 24 points in the second period while Del Rio produced only nine. That gave the Bulldogs a 38-24 lead at the half and victory was never in doubt after that. The Bulldogs reeled off 26 points in the fourth period for another big quarter.

Ruben Ramirez was the only Ram able to hit in double figures against the Bulldogs. He had 19 points.

"The kids played hard and pressed hard, and I was pleased with the effort," Stephenson said after the win. "It was our first ball game, and we threw the ball away a few times, but they (Del Rio) did too. It was a win and that was a plus for us. But I thought the effort was just great, and that pleases me the most."

MIDLAND HIGH is now 1-0 on the year while the Rams are 0-1.

Coach Eddie Shirley's JVs took up where they left off last year with a 68-52 victory over the Rams. The Bullpups were 24-2 under Shirley last year. Sharnowsky led the way with 19 points while Jackson contributed 11.

The Bulldogs and Bullpups will be in action again Monday against Fort Stockton in the Chaparral Center. JV action begins at 6 p.m. while the varsities tangle at 8 p.m.

Jones scores four times

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Sophomore A.J. "Jam" Jones slashed for four touchdowns — two on split-second pitchouts from quarterback Donnie Little — as sixth-ranked Texas defeated Texas Christian 35-10 in Southwest Conference play Saturday.

Little also scored on a one-yard dive as the Longhorns raised their record to 8-1 and stayed in the thick of the major bowl picture. TCU dropped to 2-7-1 for the season.

Jones, the nation's No. 15 rusher, scored on runs of 3, 5, 4 and 3 yards. Jones, a 200-pounder, finished with 127 yards on 20 carries and caught two passes for 32 yards.

INTERMITTENT RAIN had little effect on Little, who guided Texas to a 28-0 lead in just over a quarter before leaving the game for good with sore ankles.

The Horned Frogs scored in the second quarter on a 27-yard pass from quarterback Steve Stamp to Phillip Epps and on a 23-yard field goal in the fourth quarter by Greg Porter.

WITHOUT LITTLE, the Texas offense sputtered without a score until freshman Rick McIvor took the Longhorns 80 yards for their fifth touchdown. Jones scored from the 3.

A 53-yard punt return by all-America safety Johnnie Johnson set up Jones' second touchdown for Texas, which led 28-7 at the half, and a Johnson interception at the Longhorn 37 triggered the march for Jones' third TD plunge.

Jones four touchdown runs and 24 points tied a single game record for Texas.

Defensive end Tim Campbell blocked a TCU punt, but McIvor fumbled at the Horned Frog 12 to spoil a late scoring bid by Texas. The Longhorns also lost a scoring opportunity just before halftime when No. 2 quarterback Herkie Walls threw an interception in the TCU end zone.

WALLS ALSO fumbled a punt, and McIvor directed the Texas offense for most of the second half.

Texas benefited from good field position as Ricky Churchman recovered a fumble by Jimmy Allen at the TCU 3 to set up Jones' first touchdown.

The Longhorns marched 48 yards for Little's touchdown run after a 16-yard punt return by Walls. Johnson's long punt return to the TCU 11 set up the third score, as Texas took a 21-0 first quarter lead.

Texas increased its lead to 28-0 on a 63-yard drive with Jones sprinting for 32 yards and Rodney Tate for 20. Jones scored from the 4 with 12:36 remaining in the second period.

TWO CRUCIAL penalties — one for holding on a punt and another for off sides on a third-down sack of Stamp — aided TCU's 91-yard drive for its first score late in the second period.

Texas Christian drove 82 yards for Porter's field goal early in the fourth quarter, but did not threaten again as Texas ran 14 plays and consumed nearly half of the final period on its final scoring drive of 80 yards.

SMU whips Tech

IRVING, Texas (AP) — Southern Methodist quarterback Jim Bob Taylor rifled a record-tying four touchdown passes, three of them to All-America wide receiver Emanuel Tolbert Saturday, and the Mustangs routed Texas Tech 35-10 in a Southwest Conference game.

TAYLOR THREW three of his scoring passes in a 28-point second quarter explosion which was highlighted by Dick Blaylock's 64-yard punt return for a touchdown.

The scoring passes tied an SWC record held by 18 other players who did it 20 times.

Tolbert caught touchdown passes of 21, 13, and 13 yards, and Gary Smith snared a 42-yard scoring bomb off Taylor's suddenly accurate arm.

Tolbert now holds the all-time SWC reception record at 25.

SMU is now 5-5 for the year and 3-4 in SWC play as the Mustangs beat the Red Raiders for the first time in eight years. Tech is 3-5-2 for the year and 2-4-1 in the league.

Baylor, Florida State, Ohio State accept bowls

By The Associated Press

Ohio State won the Big Ten football championship and gained a berth in the Rose Bowl with an 18-15 victory over Michigan as the postseason picture began to take shape Saturday. But there are still numerous holes to fill.

By virtue of its victory over the Wolverines, the Buckeyes will play at Pasadena on New Year's Day against the winner of the Pacific-10 championship, which will be either Southern Cal or Washington.

DESPITE LOSING, Michigan still received a bowl bid. The Wolverines agreed to play in the Gator Bowl on Dec. 28 against North Carolina, a 13-7 winner Saturday over Virginia.

Meanwhile, one of the berths was filled in the Orange Bowl when fifth-ranked Florida State was invited to play there Jan. 1 against the winner of the Nebraska-Oklahoma game next Saturday, which will decide the Big Eight title.

The loser of the Nebraska-Oklahoma contest will wind up in the Cotton Bowl on New Year's Day against the winner of the Southwest Conference, which could be any one of four teams. Houston, Texas and Arkansas are still in the running in the SWC race and Baylor has a very slim, mathematical chance.

EITHER TEXAS or Arkansas will be invited to the Sugar Bowl, depending on who makes the Cotton Bowl and how they fare in their final games. The Sun Bowl is also interested in Houston, Texas and Arkansas, plus Washington if it doesn't go to the Rose Bowl.

The Southeastern Conference champion, either No. 1 Alabama or Georgia, will host the Sugar Bowl game in New Orleans on Jan. 1. The Crimson Tide continued unbeaten Saturday with a 30-0 decision over Miami, Fla., but could lose out on the Sugar Bowl should they lose Dec. 1 to Auburn.

Elsewhere, Penn State was invited to face 20th-ranked Tulane in the Liberty Bowl in Memphis, Tenn., on Dec. 22. The Nittany Lions defeated No. 18 Temple 22-7 Saturday while Tulane, tied with Baylor for No. 20, was idle.

Temple accepted a bid to play in the Garden State Bowl in East Rutherford, N.J., Dec. 15 against a team to be determined.

TWO MORE Big Ten teams will be going to bowls this season. Purdue, a 37-21 victor over Indiana, accepted a bid to the Bluebonnet Bowl in Houston on Dec. 31 against an opponent to be named. Indiana, meanwhile, will go to the Holiday Bowl in San Diego on Dec. 21.

The host team in the Holiday Bowl will be either Brigham Young or San Diego State, who play Saturday for the Western Athletic Conference title. BYU clinched at least a tie for the WAC championship with a 27-0 victory over Utah Saturday.

Should the Cougars lose to San Diego State, the Cougars could wind up in the Bluebonnet or Fiesta Bowl.

It will be Clemson hosting Baylor in the Peach Bowl Dec. 31 in Atlanta as both teams accepted bids extended to them Saturday.

THE BAYLOR Bears, who have only gone to one postseason bowl in the past 16 years, accepted their bid shortly after defeating Rice 45-14 Saturday. Baylor has a 7-3 record, with a game remaining against Texas.

Clemson, celebrating its 16-10 victory over Notre Dame, did not officially accept its bid until late Saturday. The Tigers, who will host the game, are 8-2 with a game remaining against South Carolina.

Pittsburgh, the nation's No. 11 team, accepted a bid to the Fiesta Bowl in Tempe, Ariz., on Dec. 25 after defeating Army 40-0 Saturday.

South Carolina accepted a bid to play in the Hall of Fame Bowl in Birmingham, Ala., on Dec. 29 after a 35-14 victory over Wake Forest. The Gamecocks' opponent is yet to be determined.

The Deacons, meanwhile, got one of the berths in the Tangerine Bowl in Orlando, Fla., on Dec. 22.

Alabama rolls past Miami for 10th victory

TUSCALOOSA, Ala. (AP) — Quarterback Steadman Shealy passed for 187 yards and a touchdown and Alabama's stingy defense intercepted five passes as the top-ranked Tide dominated Miami of Florida 30-0 in a nationally televised football game Saturday.

THE VICTORY was Alabama's 10th of the season and 19th in a row, the longest current string in the nation. It was the Tide's fifth shutout of the season, a year in which Bama has average giving up only four points a game.

The five interceptions, all by different backs, gave Alabama 25 for the season, breaking the record of 24 set by the 1952, 1966 and 1968 teams.

If Alabama can defeat Auburn two weeks from now, it will be the host team in the Jan. 1 Sugar Bowl for the third straight year. However, a loss to Auburn would put Georgia in that bowl. Auburn defeated Georgia 33-13 Saturday.

Shealy teamed with Tim Travis on a 56-yard scoring pass play on Alabama's second possession, with Travis far behind all Hurricane defenders when the ball reached him.

SHEALY'S 187 yards came on nine completions in 15 attempts.

Alabama, which now has 48 consecutive victories at Tuscaloosa, got touchdowns on short runs by Major Ogilvie and James Haney and three field goals by Alan McElroy.

Keith Pugh, who missed several games with a shoulder injury, came back in style, catching seven passes for 126 Alabama yards.

Miami's only threat when Jim Joiner returned a kickoff 65 yards to the Alabama 35 in the first period, but Randy Scott's interception at the 26 halted that.

Miami quarterbacks Jim Kelly and Mike Rodrigue filled the air with long passes with hardly any success. In fact, of the first 11 passes, nine were incomplete and two were intercepted.

THE HURRICANES completed only six of 28 passes for a mere 47 yards, and could manage only 84 yards on the ground.

Meanwhile, Alabama rolled up 444 yards total offense, with 26 first downs to only eight for the Hurricanes.

Miami, given little chance against Alabama, hurt itself by getting nine penalties for 80 yards.

Alabama interceptors in addition to Scott were Jeremiah Castille, Ricky Tucker, Tommy Wilcox and Al Blue, a freshman from Maitland, Fla., whose interception was the one that set the record.

Miami, now 4-5, travels to Tokyo, Japan, for a game against Notre Dame Sunday, Nov. 25, while Alabama will end its season with the Dec. 1 clash with cross-state rival Auburn before preparing for its 21st consecutive postseason bowl.

Midland's Junior Miller stars in Huskers' win

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — Nebraska quarterback Jeff Quinn connected with tight end Junior Miller of Midland, Tex. for two touchdowns and fullback Andra Franklin rammed two yards for a touchdown, leading the third-ranked Cornhuskers to a 34-3 triumph Saturday over Iowa State.

The victory by Nebraska set up a Big Eight conference championship showdown next week with Oklahoma, with the Cornhuskers owning a 6-0 league record.

A 22-yard field goal with 1:37 left by Iowa State's Alex Giffords deprived Nebraska, 10-0, of its fourth shutout.

Ignited by Quinn, who was making only his second start of the year, Nebraska exploded for 25 points in the second quarter.

Field goals of 27 and 24 yards by Dean Sukup sent the Cornhuskers to a 6-0 lead. Quinn then pegged a 13-yarder to Miller, Franklin banged into the end zone for his touchdown and Miller capped the surge by hauling in a 19-yard Quinn aerial.

Stymied in the third quarter, Nebraska marched 65 yards to its final touchdown midway through the final period. Quinn got the score on a 1-yard sneak.

Iowa State fell to 3-7 for the season and 2-4 in the Big Eight. Preceding Giffords' late field goal, the Cyclones' only scoring bids fizzled at the Nebraska 38 in the third quarter.

Bullets hand Jazz 11th straight loss

LANDOVER, Md. (AP) — Elvin Hayes scored 24 points and Roger Phegley came off the bench to add 21 and helped the Bullets send the Utah Jazz to its eleventh straight loss, 111-103 in the National Basketball Association Saturday night.

Phegley connected on eight straight shots in the first half to spark Washington to a 58-44 advantage at intermission.

The Bullets built their lead to 19 points, 67-48 early in the third quarter, but with Adrian Dantley getting 15 points, the Jazz reduced their deficit to 84-76 at the end of the period.

Don Williams' steal and layup tied the score at 88 with 8:19 to play. Following a timeout, the Bullets scored six straight points to take a lead they never lost.

Sims paces OU to narrow win

COLUMBIA, Mo. (AP) — Billy Sims rushed for 282 yards Saturday, including a spectacular 70-yard scoring gallop in the third quarter, and No. 7 Oklahoma overcame an aroused Missouri with a 24-22 Big Eight football victory.

Missouri, behind the passing wizardry and running of quarterback Phil Bradley, led the favored Sooners twice and missed on a 37-yard field goal attempt with three minutes left that would have won the game.

Oklahoma trailed at halftime 9-7, but Sims, on the third play of the second half, broke free on his 70-yard scoring jaunt. Missouri cornerback Johnnie Poe hit the 1978 Heishman Trophy winner at the 30 and spun him completely around, but Sims kept his feet, accelerated and ducked Kevin Potter at the 20.

Bradley, who hit 16 of 22 passes for 222 yards, scampered 68 yards for a fourth-quarter Missouri touchdown with 9:01 remaining. But his two-point conversion pass for tight end Andy Gibler was broken up in the end zone by Jay Jimerson. Oklahoma, now 9-1 and set for a Big Eight championship showdown with Nebraska next week, punted the ball to the Tigers with about 3:50 left in the game.

Gerry Ellis, who scored twice for the Tigers on runs of 1 and 9 yards, sped 37 yards to the Oklahoma 25 with 3:18 remaining. But on third and 8 from the 23, Bradley was stopped for a 3-yard gain and Ron Verrilli, who kicked a 39-yard field goal in the first quarter, missed from 37 yards, his effort torpedoed by a high snap from center.

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — Julie Shea led North Carolina State to victory Saturday in the Association of Intercollegiate Athletics for Women (AIAW) cross country championships.

Shea finished the 5,000-meter course in 16:35, 1.9 seconds in front of Virginia's Margaret Groos. Lynn Jennings of Princeton was third in 16:40.7.

In team standings, North Carolina State took first with 108 points to 120 for second-place Oregon. Penn State was third at 138, Wisconsin fourth with 142, Arizona fifth with 181 and Virginia sixth at 206.

In Division II, Joan Corbin of Seattle Pacific was the top individual finisher at 17:10 as Air Force easily won the team championship. The Air Force team had 79 total points to 105 for second-place Seattle Pacific and 164 for third-place Villanova.

In Division III, Joan Benoit of Bowdoin was the top finisher at 17:14. California State-Hayward took top team honors with a 56 score followed by St. Olaf, 74, and Wisconsin-LaCrosse.

Because of a computer breakdown, all results were unofficial. AIAW officials said final results would not be in until this coming week.

Midland, Lee girls capture three cage wins

DALLAS — The Midland High and Midland Lee girls basketball teams won three of four games on a two-day eastern swing here Friday and Saturday to open the 1979-80 basketball season.

MIDLAND HIGH, District 5-4A's co-champions last year, is now 2-0 on the year after defeating Dallas' Bishop Lynch, 45-37, on Friday and Dallas' Bryan Adams, 52-48, Saturday. The Lee girls, 5-4A's playoff representative the last two years, is now 1-1 after dropping a 72-29 decision to Dallas' South Oak Cliff on Friday and defeating Dallas's Bishop Lynch, 59-47, on Saturday.

LaShell Schrock paced MHS' Friday victory over Bishop Lynch with a 13-point effort while Sandra Rock and Margaret Christian each aided the cause with 11 points each. In Saturday's win, Christian led the way over Bryan Adams with a 16-point production. Rock pumped in 11 points again while Schrock added 10 more.

THE REBELS produced very little offense against South Oak Cliff, but rebounded Saturday with a 59 point effort against Bishop Lynch. Leshia Watkins led the way with 18 points and Gale Wilson added 13 more. Judy Taylor also got into double figures with 11 points. Wilson was the only player in double figures against SOC on Friday with 10 points. Watkins was next with five.

Midland High travels to Lubbock Monterey Tuesday for their next outing of the season. Lee is open until 8 p.m. Friday when they play El Paso Ysleta at Midland High. Midland High will play El Paso High at 6 p.m. on the same card. Lee will then entertain El Baso Bel Air at the Lee gym at 11 a.m. Saturday.

Chunk one great cage story

TERRY WILLIAMSON

When Jack Stephenson took over the basketball reigns at Midland High last summer, it had all the makings of a great story. You know the one where the former assistant comes back to haunt the teacher.

Most Midlanders, including me, had visions of a District 5-4A version of Bo Schembechler against Woody Hays. Remember that rivalry?

Just in case you have a short memory, Stephenson was the assistant coach at Midland Lee for eight years under Paul Stueckler. It was a good union. We got used to seeing Stueckler and Stephenson sitting on the same bench with the same thoughts. And winning basketball games.

Well, as fate would have it, Stephenson left for Snyder three years back to take his first head coaching job. Last year he guided the AAA Tigers to the playoffs. And now he is back in Midland wearing Purple.

Wearing Purple? Now that is going to be strange for a while. When MHS plays Lee, I hope someone will help Jack find the right bench to sit on.

And here was the chance for Paul and Jack to start tossing darts and begin the story that we all had in mind. But I guess it's hard for friends to participate in that type of thing because they are still friends and I have no reason to doubt that.

In fact, they are down playing the whole thing. They just want to figure out ways to win games and don't seemed to be concerned with the former connection.

"I guess it was a big thing to play a former assistant in the beginning, but I've gone through this so many times now that it's not really anything new. After all, I've been through 18 seasons at Lee and six more years at Austin High in El Paso. I've played against a lot of former assistants during that time. And, you know, it's kind of fun to see your assistants move up to bigger things," Stueckler said.

In fact, Stephenson is not the only former assistant in 5-4A this year that Stueckler will be facing. Big Spring's Ed Haller was with Paul at Austin High as a student teacher. El Paso Irvin's Alvis Glidewell is another former assistant. Hank Felix, now at Austin High, is a former player of Stueckler's as is Tony Harper of El Paso Burges and Mike Harper of El Paso Jefferson.

It's really not surprising that many of Stueckler's former players and assistants have taken head coaching jobs. After all, Paul has produced four 5-4A championship teams and has been a co-champion on two other occasions. Also he won four district championships at Austin High in six years.

Stephenson has not escaped the MHS-Lee rivalry question, however. "That's the question people ask me about all the time. But I don't think this will be a major transition for me. For example, my team at Snyder last year split with Midland High and won the two games we played against Lee. So, I've been through that already. It's not really a big deal. In fact, when I was at Lee, I always wanted Midland High to win if we didn't. I was always for the city of Midland. I have always been opposed to any bitterness between the two schools," Stephenson stated.

Stueckler, now entering his 19th season as Midland Lee's only basketball coach the school has ever had, is by far the dean of the 5-4A coaching ranks. Abilene Cooper's Marc Case, entering his sixth season, is second and Odessa High's Joe Tubbs, in just his second year, is next in line. Stephenson, Haller, San Angelo's Rick Harvey, Odessa Permian's Charles Patillo and Abilene High's Doug Pierce are all rookies on the 5-4A front.

Case, however, may go into loop play as the 5-4A favorite with the likes of Woody Martin, Terry Orr and Kyle Stuard returning to the squad, but he is aware of the difference coaching makes.

"I hear that Lee may not have a great deal of talent, but as long as Paul is there, they will be competitive. Stueckler's teams never give you anything and I think that is because Paul is such a competitor. And Jack has been in that atmosphere for a long time. I don't really know of two more competitive coaches around. I know Cooper is going to have to work for every win in district this year," Case said.

One thing is clear. Lee fans don't have any adjusting to do. Stueckler's presence is as comfortable as the morning cup of coffee. But I hope Jack will give us some time to adjust. And I'm going to help out by showing Stephenson where to sit when Midland plays Lee this year.

Baylor defeats hapless Rice

WACO, Texas (AP) — Quarterback Mike Brannan raced for two touchdowns and threw for another Saturday as 20th-ranked Baylor thrashed Rice 45-14 in a Southwest Conference game. Sources said the victory means the Bears will play in the Peach Bowl.

Brannan, a red-shirt freshman, connected with tight end Raymond Cockrell for a 38-yard touchdown pass play on the fourth play of the game to give Baylor a 7-0 lead after only 51 seconds.

Brannan then added an 11-yard touchdown run with 1:12 remaining in the first period.

With Baylor leading 31-0 midway through the third quarter, Mike Singletary intercepted to give the Bears the ball at the Rice 31-yard-line. On the next play, Brannan ducked through the right side of the line on an option keeper and galloped for a touchdown.

Brannan finished with 101 yards rushing on 14 carries as Baylor racked up more than 420 yards on the ground, a school record.

Walter Abercrombie, Mike Lively and Mickey Elam accounted for Baylor's other three touchdowns and Robert Bledsoe hit a 48-yard field goal in the third quarter.

COM tankers are qualifiers

EL PASO — Andrew Jordan and Lori Thompson each qualified in two events Saturday for the North swimming team that will duel the South in Dallas Dec. 2.

They were among five City of Midland swim team members to qualify for the prestigious meet during qualifying here. The top three finishers in each event — with the exception of competitors in the 10-under division — qualified for the star squads.

Jordan nabbed victories in the 13-14 boys' 100 breaststroke (1:11.63) and the 11-12 boys' 500 freestyle (5:31.42) while Thompson notched triumphs in the senior girls' 500 free (5:17.55) and 13-14 girls' 200 backstroke (2:19.79).

As of late Saturday night, freestyle competition had just begun and no results were available.

The only other COM winner in Saturday's early action was Carrie Mayes, who copped the senior girls' 200 breaststroke in 2:20.50 and earned a berth with the North squad.

Other qualifiers were Leslie Dunbar, second in the 11-12 girls' 100 butterfly and Suzi Simpson, third in the 13-14 girls' 200 butterfly.

Florida State batters Memphis State, 66-17

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — Jimmy Jordan awakened Florida State's offense with three second-quarter touchdown passes and the Orange Bowl-bound Seminoles went on to batter Memphis State 66-17 Saturday night.

Florida State, which improved its record to 10-0, will appear in the New Years Day bowl in Miami against the Big Eight champion. The fifth-ranked Seminoles accepted the bid an hour before Saturday night's kickoff.

FSU led 24-3 at the half, but quickly turned the game into a rout in the third quarter when linebacker Paul Piurowski returned an interception 29 yards for a touchdown and defensive back Keith Jones ran 16 yards for a touchdown with a blocked punt.

Jordan played the first half only and completed 18 of 29 passes for 189 yards. Backup quarterback Wally Woodham played the third quarter completing three of six tosses for 59 yards, and receiver Jackie Flowers caught 11 first-half passes for 117 yards.

The Tigers, now 4-6, scored early in the fourth quarter when Dennis Bradshaw connected with tight end Ken Dunek with a 51-yard touchdown pass.

The first quarter ended in a 3-3 tie, but Jordan lifted the Seminoles in the second quarter with a 24-yard touchdown pass to Flowers, a 4-yard pass to Hardis Johnson and a 5-yard TD pass to Grady King with 18 seconds left in the half.

McCamey plays in Andrews

The bi-district playoff game between District 6-A champion McCamey Badgers and District 5-A kingpin Seagraves Eagles will be Friday night at 7:30 at the Mustang Bowl in Andrews, officials announced Saturday.

McCamey clinched the 6-A crown with a 26-12 victory over Rankin. The Badgers will bring a 4-0 district mark and 8-1-1 overall ledger into the contest.

Seagraves, 7-0 in 5-A and 10-0 for the campaign, is ranked fourth in the Associated Press survey of Class A schools. The Eagles, boasting one of the stingiest defenses in the state, closed the regular season with a 42-0 rout of Ropes.

Kentucky nabs 31-3 SEC win

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Quarterback Juan Portela, a sophomore who started the season as a wide receiver, hit Felix Wilson with touchdown passes of 62 and 43 yards Saturday to lead Kentucky to a 31-3 Southeastern Conference football victory over winless Florida.

Wilson's game total of six receptions for 157 yards gave him a Kentucky career receiving record of 1,499 yards, bettering the 1,422 yards Larry Seiple set in 1964-66.

Portela replaced Terry Henry as Kentucky quarterback late in the first quarter and immediately picked up a sluggish Wildcat offense. Wilson got behind the Florida secondary and Portela hit him in full stride for a 62-yard touchdown early in the second quarter.

The next time Kentucky got the ball, Wilson took a short pass and sliced between Florida defenders for his 43-yard score.

Florida managed a 52-yard field goal by Brian Clark in the first quarter after defensive back Derrick Burdgess intercepted a Henry pass at the Kentucky 39. Kentucky's Rick Strein kicked a tying 31-yard field goal early in the second quarter.

City of Midland Swim Team members prepare to leave for El Paso for the important qualifying meet for berths on the North swimming squad, which will duel the South in a meet later this year. (Staff Photo by Mike Kardos)

West Texas defeats Drake

CANYON, Texas (AP) — Danny Clark broke loose for scoring runs of 30 and 58 yards Saturday as West Texas State defeated Drake, 28-18, and won its second Missouri Valley Conference title in the past three years.

West Texas State finished the season with a 5-0 conference record, but were winless outside the league. Drake ended its season 3-8 overall and 1-4 in the league.

West Texas scored in the first quarter on a 32-yard pass interception return by Freddie Whitley. The Buffaloes exploded for 21 points in the second quarter on Clark's heroics and a 39-yard touchdown pass from Larry Thompson to Ricky Collinsworth.

Cowboys face Redskins today

By BRUCE LOWITT
AP Sports Writer

Until last Monday night, most pro football insiders would have been willing to all but guarantee that the Dallas Cowboys would be the National Conference's entry in the Super Bowl.

Now, though, there's some question whether they'll even win their own division. After Philadelphia burned them 31-21, the Cowboys' NFC East lead over the Eagles and the Washington Redskins was reduced to one game.

TODAY, THINGS could get straightened out a bit — or the division lead could end up in a three-way tie. The Cowboys, 8-3, play the first of their two games against the 'Skins, 7-4, in Washington while the Eagles, also 7-4, return home to face the St. Louis Cardinals.

Incidentally, the once-laughable New York Giants must now be considered a playoff contender, too. They've gone from 0-5 to 5-6 (their only loss in six weeks a 16-14 heartbreaker to Dallas) and visit Tampa Bay today.

It was the then-winless Giants who handed the then-unbeaten Bucs their first loss this year six weeks ago.

Today's other games are Pittsburgh at San Diego, Baltimore at New England, Green Bay at Buffalo, Miami at Cleveland, the New York Jets at Chicago, Detroit at Minnesota, Cincinnati at Houston, Denver at San Francisco, Kansas City at Oakland and New Orleans at Seattle. On Monday it's Atlanta at Los Angeles.

THE REDSKINS fondly remember their meeting with the Cowboys in Washington, a 9-5 victory — and when asked if he thought they could repeat, Coach Jack Pardee replied: "If we play them the way we played them in the first game last year, if we play as hard as we can, sure we can beat them ... We're going to beat Dallas. I like our matchups against them and I like playing in RFK Stadium against them. Our record at home against the Cowboys is pretty good."

One thing's for sure; Redskins quarterback Joe Theismann isn't likely to be surprised or befuddled by Dallas' defense. "The flex defense is standard terminology in all our playbooks," said Pardee. "We know Dallas has the flex. We don't know who else might use it, but it's something we've got to be ready for throughout the year. It's just part of our overall offseason planning.

"This is one of the easiest coaching weeks in the year," Pardee added, reflecting on the teams' intense rivalry. "All you've got to do is put the film on the machine. You know the players are going to get ready for the Cowboys ... When you're facing the perennial division champion, a team that plays in the Super Bowl and is our main competition for our success, it comes out a little special. You've got to get by them.

"At this point, I just want to beat them because they're on our schedule. They're a divisional opponent and they're leading our division. That's enough incentive right there."

The Eagles, who escaped with a 24-20 victory in St. Louis five weeks ago, must find a way to slow down Ottis Anderson. The Cardinals' sensational rookie rushed for 105 yards in last Sunday's 30-28 loss to Washington and has 1,105 yards for the year, second only to Walter Payton's 1,154 yards for Chicago. The Eagles got some experience handling 100-yard runners last Monday night when they limited Dallas' Tony Dorsett to 53 yards.

THE GIANTS are considered longshots for an NFC wild-card berth, being two games behind the Eagles and 'Skins and one back of the Bears and New Orleans (each 6-5) — but they're riding high behind rookie quarterback Phil Simms. Their winning ways started the same time he took over — the day their 3-4 defense threw a monkey wrench into Tampa Bay's offense and produced a 17-14 New York victory. The Bucs, at 8-3, are tied with Dallas for the NFC's best record and lead Chicago by two games in the Central Division.

The Steelers are the NFL's highest scoring club with 294 points to San Diego's 270 and will be trying to lengthen a four-game streak in which they have allowed a touchdown or less. In their last four games they've won by margins of 42-7, 14-3, 38-7 and 30-3. Further, Pittsburgh is 6-0 lifetime against the Chargers.

The Steelers, the winningest club in the NFL this year at 9-2, are also trying to retain their American Conference Central lead (one game over Houston, two over Cleveland) while the Chargers, 8-3, are trying to break the deadlock with Denver atop the AFC West.

Also tied for first are New England and Miami, each at 7-4 in the AFC East, while New Orleans, at 6-5, is one game ahead of Los Angeles.

Oilers to battle luckless Bengals

HOUSTON (AP) — The luckless Cincinnati Bengals, with a losing streak as long as their injury list, and the Houston Oilers, smelling a playoff berth for the second time in as many years, meet in the Astrodome Sunday in a National Football League game.

The Oilers, 8-3 and on the crest of a three-game winning streak, won't be taking the Bengals, 2-9, lightly.

"I've said every time we've played them that Cincinnati has some of the best personnel in the league," Oiler Coach Bum Phillips said. "We're playing Cincinnati this week, and that had better be the only game we're interested in."

Phillips will admit, however, that he has glanced at the rest of Houston's schedule, which includes a Thanksgiving Day game against the Dallas Cowboys and a return bout Dec. 10 against Pittsburgh.

"It's horrible to lose to anybody, but a loss now would be really tough," Phillips said. "We've just got to hope we can win our games and get down to Pittsburgh again."

Despite apair of impressive victories over Pittsburgh and Philadelphia and the strong passing of quarterback Ken Anderson, the Bengals have been victims of narrow defeats all season, losing four of the contests by a total of five points.

Cincinnati jumped ahead of San Diego last week, but eventually lost 26-24 despite Anderson's third-straight 300-yard passing performance.

As for Sunday's match against the Oilers, Rice said, "We had a great week of work and the spirit has been good."

The Bengals, with 26 players having two years experience or less, played the Oilers to a 27-27 standoff earlier this season before losing 30-27 in overtime on Tony Fritch's field goal.

Raiders fall

Flowers and free safety Ted Watts, who along with two reserve offensive linemen, were benched for the game by Coach Rex Dockery for missing curfew Friday night.

The landslide started after place kicker Bill Adams' 23-yard field goal gave Tech a 3-0 first quarter lead.

The Red Raiders scored a consolation touchdown with 36 seconds left on a five-yard pass from quarterback Jim Hart to Anthony Hutchison.

SMU Coach Ron Meyer mercifully yanked Taylor with 3:19 left in the third quarter after he had completed 11 of 22 passes for 205 yards. Freshman Layne Walker took over.

Freshman tailback Craig James gained 93 yards on 12 carries to lead the ground game.

East Carolina whips North Texas

GREENVILLE, N.C. (AP) — East Carolina was led by quarterback Leander Green, who threw three scoring touchdowns, as the Pirates swamped North Texas State, 49-16, Saturday in college football.

North Texas State led by 13-7 at the end of the first quarter. Eagle halfback Malcolm Jones scored the first touchdown of the game after Paul Nance recovered a Pirate fumble. East Carolina came back with a 63-yard touchdown by Anthony Collins, but the Eagles moved in front again after an 85-yard touchdown pass by Jones.

In the second quarter, Green began the Pirate's dominance of the rest of the game with a 78-yard touchdown pass. The Pirates moved into a solid lead with an 80-yard touchdown by Theodore Sutton.

North Texas State's Whit Smith put the Eagles on the board for the last time with a field goal to make the score 21-16.

The second half belonged to the Pirates, with Collins' scoring an 87-yard touchdown in the third quarter. Green passed to Billy Ray Washington to make the score 42-16 on the first play after Collins' touchdown.

In the fourth quarter, another Green pass to Washington made the score 49-16.

East Carolina is now 6-3-1, while North Texas State is 5-6.

Texas A&I wins Lone Star crown

SAN MARCOS, Texas (AP) — Robert Poole rushed for 153 yards and two touchdowns as Texas A&I clinched the Lone Star Conference championship with a 42-10 win over Southwest Texas Saturday.

The win marked the sixth time this decade that Texas A&I, 9-1 on the year and 6-1 in the conference, won the conference title.

Texas A&I got on the board early with a 31-yard field goal by Martin Kaiser and Poole's 26 yard scoring romp.

But Southwest Texas, 7-4 for the season and 3-4 in the conference, took a 10-9 lead into the half on the strength of Terry Whitman's 27-yard field goal and Shan Johanson's one yard plunge.

But Texas A&I erupted for 33 second half points. Martin Stroman led the offensive barrage, running for one touchdown and throwing to John Herrera for another. Poole added a score with a 1-yard plunge, Tommy Richards ran over from 11 yards out and Randy Creators lofted a 7-yard scoring pass to Ned Butler.

Midland College downs Angelo State, 100-72

Johnson joined sophomores Robert Tate and Kenneth "Big Time" Young on the all-tournament team.

The Chaparrals begin play Thanksgiving day in the Amarillo Classic.

Raleigh Freeman notched 11 points for MC and received double-figure assistance from Chucky McGill, Tim Shelby and Derrick Wilson, who each pocketed 10 markers.

Jack McHale, with 21 points, and Monty Sutton, with 20, led Angelo State.

Lee drops cage opener

LUBBOCK — A rusty first quarter proved to be the downfall of the Midland Lee Rebels here Saturday night as the Rebs opened the basketball season with a 68-61 loss to Lubbock Monterey's Plainsmen.

Monterey jumped to a 19-9 margin in the first period and the Rebels could never make up the deficit. The Rebels cut the margin to 35-28 at the half and then had a standoff in the second half with both teams scoring 17 in the third period and 16 in the fourth quarter. It was the first quarter that spelled defeat in this one.

Ian Hyslop and Trav Clardy both scored 23 points for the Plainsmen to share high point honors and Steve Wooten added 10 more to the cause.

Lee's David Keys led the Rebels with 16 points while Tim Walker had 11 and Norris Lane added 10.

Three teams placed at 66, but third went to Bill Martin and Jack Huff on a card playoff while fourth went to J. C. Williamson and Tom Garber and fifth went to Bill Dillon and Flake Tompkins. Joe Stickney and Charles Perry posted a 67 while Gene McDaniel and Ed Blackhaller managed a 68.

California upends Stanford by 21-14

STANFORD, Calif. (AP) — Rich Campbell of California completed a record-setting passing performance with a fourth-period touchdown pass to tight end Joe Rose, and safety Ron Coccimiglio knocked down a Stanford pass at the goal line with 35 seconds remaining Saturday to save a 21-14 victory for the Bears.

Cal ended a three-game losing streak in its 82-year Big Game football series against Stanford and finished this season with a winning record, 6-5, by grabbing the Pacific-10 thriller. Stanford finished 5-5-1.

Campbell, Cal's junior quarterback, threw for three touchdowns and 314 yards. His season yardage total of 2,618 established a school record.

Stanford's Turk Schonert threw his 18th and 19th touchdown passes of the season, with the second of the day pulling the Cardinals into a 14-14 tie early in the third quarter. Cal lost a fumble at the Stanford 19-yard line late in the third period but drove 43 yards in the last quarter to win.

Rose, who caught a 23-yard touchdown pass on Cal's first possession, scored the game-winner on a 17-yard toss. One official ruled Rose was out of bounds behind the end zone on the catch, but the decision was overruled by referee John Barger.

Stanford drove 78 yards to the Cal 2 before Coccimiglio broke up the fourth-down pass which Schonert aimed at Mike Dotterer.

Odessa Ector captures District 2-AAA title

ODESSA — Odessa Ector claimed the District 2-AAA football championship at W. T. Barrett Stadium Saturday night with a 20-12 victory over the Monahans Loboes.

The victory, which gives Ector a 4-0 district and 9-1 overall record, catapults the Eagles into Saturday's bi-district clash with District 1-AAA champion Lubbock Estacado. That game will be played at 2 p.m. in Barrett.

It was a solid ground game that helped Ector against Monahans, the Eagles piling up 317 yards from their infantry.

And a tough Ector defense allowed the Loboes just 83 rushing yards and 112 through the air.

Following a scoreless defensive standoff in the first quarter, Ector found paydirt in the second quarter when talented tailback James Ricks bolted eight yards for a touchdown. Bruce Ray converted the extra point, giving Ector a 7-0 lead that the Eagles took to the locker room at halftime.

In the third period, the Eagles struck again, this time with Jimmy Stoglin racing the final 14 yards. The kick failed, but Ector remained on top 13-0.

Monahans, 2-2 in district and 6-4 overall, made a game of it early in the fourth quarter when Marvin Hogan sliced into the end zone from one yard out. The kick failed and it was 13-6.

But the Eagles tucked the crown away when wingback Johnny Pride blazed 13 yards on a reverse. Ray's point after ran the count to 20-6.

Monahans scored once more, with seven seconds remaining, when quarterback Benny Hernandez hit Rusty Roark with a 25-yard touchdown pass.

A few ducks, quail in freezer

By JON CHASE

I have made tracks over a large portion of the state during the last couple of weeks and have put quite a few ducks and quail in the freezer.

I finally got in on some of the spectacular South Texas quail hunting two weekends ago. I had the priveledge of hunting on the Kibbe Cattle Company land in Duval County. My father and I were invited by Robert Kibbe to hunt on his ranch and, although Robert wasn't able to join us, a fine fellow named George Saenz was the substitute host.

George filled the bill and put us on more coveys of bob white quail than I had imagined possible. We limited in about three hours of hunting and, regretfully, left a large number of birds in the thick brush that we were unable to find.

The South Texas quail hunting is everything it is cracked up to be and then some. I wish it were closer to Midland, but the hunting is so good that the long drive is worth it for the avid quail hunter.

Last weekend, I was back on the Pecos River out of Monahans for a combination duck and quail hunt. The quail hunting was less than spectacular, but a few ducks have started to move in.

I had heard reports of pintails in our area, but the only ducks I killed last Saturday and Sunday were bufflehead. I went to the river this past Thursday and limited on Widgeon. I didn't see any other ducks, with the exception of a flight of mallards that were out of range.

It seems that it is still too early for the large number of ducks and the myriad species to move into our area. Every year I rush the duck hunting and usually have to wait until the middle of December for the mallards, teal and pintails to arrive in any large concentrations.

Some more cold weather and heavy cloud cover would help the duck hunting immensely. It is hard to decoy ducks on warm days with cloudless skies and we haven't had much of anything else. The best chance of killing ducks, until the weather changes, is jump shooting on stock tanks or the Pecos River.

The reports I have been getting from area quail hunters indicate that there are more blue quail in this country than we have had in years. I have talked to several Midland residents who have quail leases in the county and most have been very happy with the hunting this year. Limits seem to be the rule rather than the exception and this is with a 20 bird limit.

The game biologists seem to have hit the nail on the head with their prediction of a bountiful quail crop state-wide.

Saturday's opening of deer season should have been a good one although a little colder weather would have been nice. As with the quail crop, the Texas deer herd is said to be in better shape than it has been in years. Spring and early summer rain produced near ideal habitat in most areas and the deer herd is healthy and growing some fine racks.

As usual, the larger heads will come from the traditional big deer counties such as LaSalle, Duval and Dimitt. The Hill Country deer are more plentiful, but don't attain the weight or antler development found in the cactus country of South Texas.

Thanks for the West Texas Welcome!

Since construction began in May of this year, we've been anxious to get to know our new neighbors and begin operations from our new facility. People here in the Permian Basin have been most helpful and cordial, and we at Metal-X invite you to visit our plant at any time.

The Metal-X Corporation West Texas Division is the first expansion of Metal-X Corporation of Texas, a Houston-based company headed by Bill Sparks, a Lubbock native who started the company in early 1976. Herman Dancy manages the new division.

Our new building occupies 19,000 square feet on a seven-and-a-half-acre plot on Interstate 20, near Midland Regional Air Terminal. From this facility, Metal-X Corporation will supply bar stock, rods and metal alloy materials to the requirements of industry throughout the Permian Basin, Southeastern New Mexico and the panhandle regions of Texas and Oklahoma.

Call or come and see us — we're here to serve you. And again, thanks for the welcome!

Mike D'Andrea (96) and Jim Laughlin (5) put the pressure on Michigan's Bryan Virgil (2) and block punt to help Ohio State defeat the Wolverines, 18-15 to win the Big 10 championship and gain a berth in the Rose Bowl. The blocked punt was the turning point of the game played before more than 106,000 in Ann Arbor, Mich., Saturday. (AP Laserphoto).

Ohio State nails down berth to 1980 Rose Bowl

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — Ohio State's Jim Laughlin and Ben Lee blocked a fourth-quarter punt attempt by Michigan's Bryan Virgil and Buckeye Todd Bell scooped it up and ran it in for a touchown to give Ohio State an 18-15 victory and the Big Ten football championship Saturday.

Bell scooped the ball up at the Michigan 20-yard line and scampered untouched into the end zone with 1:21 left in the game.

Michigan, a four-point underdog against the third-ranked Buckeyes, jumped to a surprising 7-6 halftime lead when quarterback John Wangler connected with fleet freshman wide receiver Anthony Carter for a 59-yard touchdown pass play with 1:30 left in the second quarter.

The Buckeyes stayed in the game as Vlade Janakievski booted second-quarter field goals of 23 and 25 yards.

Then, on their first possession of the second half, the Buckeyes marched 51 yards in 13 plays, capped by an 18-yard touchdown strike from sophomore quarterback Art Schlichter to Chuck Hunter, who beat Michigan defensive halfback Mike Jolly in the left corner of the end zone.

Michigan bounced right back, however, taking the ensuing kickoff and marching 80 yards in seven plays — the key being a 66-yard toss from Wangler to Carter. Wolverine fullback Roosevelt Smith concluded the drive by diving across from the 1-yard line, then plunging for the 2-point conversion.

The Buckeyes, who earned a trip to the Rose Bowl game with their championship, finished the season 11-0 and 8-0 in the Big Ten. It marked Ohio State's first unbeaten, untied season since 1975, the last time the Buckeyes went to the Rose Bowl.

Michigan, which accepted a bid to appear in the Gator Bowl on Dec. 28 against an opponent yet to be named, finished 8-3 overall and 6-2 in the Big Ten.

Ohio State Coach Erle Bruce, facing a Michigan team for the first time in his coaching career, got some good advice from an expert before Saturday's game — Woody Hayes.

"Play them tough; that's what it takes to beat Michigan," Bruce said Hayes told him earlier in the week.

And that's exactly what the Buckeyes did as they punched out an 18-15 victory over Michigan to win the Big Ten championship Saturday.

Ohio State had fallen behind the Wolverines 15-12, but the Buckeyes' Jim Laughlin and Ben Lee blocked a fourth-quarter punt attempt by Michigan's Bryan Virgil and Todd Bell scooped it up and ran the loose ball in for the winning touchdown.

It was the second time in three weeks Bell had returned a blocked punt for a touchdown, the first coming in the Buckeyes' 44-7 victory over Illinois.

"I have to give Him credit," Bell said. "I just thank God. Laughlin got the block. I saw the ball start rolling toward the goal line. I just picked it up."

Bruce said the game left him mentally drained.

"I knew our defense would stay in there and play a great game," Bruce said, holding a Rose Bowl tie in hand.

Michigan coach Bo Schembechler called the blocked punt the key to game.

"Our punting is so bad," the Michigan coach said. "Our kicking game has beaten us all year."

Huskies topple Cougars

SEATTLE (AP) — Tom Flick passed 20 yards to Paul Skansi and Vince Coby ran 3 yards for touchdowns in the second quarter Saturday as 16th-ranked Washington remained [illegible] the Rose Bowl picture with a [illegible] Conference football [illegible]-stage.

Washington, 5-2 overall and 6-1 in the Pac-10, and Washington State, 4-7 overall and 3-5 in the conference, played on a dark and gloomy day that included a driving rainstorm in the fourth quarter.

After a scoreless first period, the Huskies drove for two touchdowns and a 14-0 halftime lead.

Washington went ahead 17-0 at 10:22 in the third quarter on a 29-yard field goal by Mike Lansford. The Cougars got their lone tally on a 19-yard run by quarterback Steve Grant at 13:12 of the final period.

The Huskies can win a trip to Pasadena, Calif., on New Year's Day if UCLA upsets No. 4 Southern California in Los Angeles on Nov. 24.

Washington lost to Southern Cal 24-17 last weekend but got new life in the Rose Bowl race when Arizona State was forced by the Pac-10 to forfeit its conference victories Thursday night.

Even if the Trojans defeat UCLA, Washington was expected to get a bid for another bowl.

Washington's first touchdown came on a 57-yard, seven-play drive after the Cougars got a 38-yard quick kick by fullback Brian Sickler on a third-and-14 situation at the Washington 19.

Georgia Tech ruins Navy's bowl chances

ATLANTA (AP) — Georgia Tech sophomore quarterback Mike Kelley teamed with split end Kris Kentera for three touchdown bombs in passing the Yellow Jackets to a 24-14 college football victory over Navy Saturday, knocking the Midshipmen from bowl consideration.

Kelley, who set three single-season school passing records Saturday, connected with Kentera on a pair of 27-yard scoring pass plays and another of 40 yards. Kelley's tosses also set up a 32-yard field goal by Johnny Smith as the Yellow Jackets, 4-5-1, added to their third consecutive triumph.

Navy, 6-4, losing for the fourth consecutive time, scored on a 43-yard TD pass play from quarterback Bob Powers to Curt Gainer and on a 1-yard run by Ed Meyers. Meyers ran for 183 yards in 26 attempts.

Representatives from the Tangerine, Hall of Fame and Peach bowls were on hand to tender a possible bid to Navy if the Midshipmen had defeated Tech.

Kelley set season records for pass attempts, completions and yards. He completed 16 of 30 passes for 361 yards Saturday.

Auburn whips Georgia to deny Bulldogs trip to Sugar Bowl

ATHENS, Ga. (AP) — Fifteenth-ranked Auburn, led by the brilliant running of James Brooks and Joe Cribbs, crushed Georgia 33-13 Saturday and denied the Bulldogs the Southeastern Conference championship and a berth in the Sugar Bowl on New Year's Day.

Brooks, who scored on second-half runs of 67 and 44 yards, gained 200 yards and Cribbs, who tallied twice on 1-yard plunges, added 166 yards rushing as the Tigers did the Sugar Bowl a favor for the second straight year.

The Sugar Bowl now has an opportunity to land top-ranked Alabama in its postseason event, provided the Crimson Tide is able to beat Auburn at Birmingham, Ala., on Dec. 1. Auburn had held Georgia to a 22-22 deadlock one year ago, denying the Bullodgs the Sugar Bowl berth and handing it instead to Alabama, which captured the national title in New Orleans with a victory over Penn State.

BYU nears WAC title

PROVO, Utah (AP) — Quarterback Marc Wilson passed for 374 yards and one touchdown as 10th-ranked Brigham Young crushed Utah 27-0 to ensure the Cougars at least tie for the Western Athletic Conference football crown.

The victory kept BYU's record a spotless 10-0 and one win away from a Holiday Bowl berth against Indiana.

Wilson, the nation's total offense leader, completed 23 of 37 passes and tied an NCAA season record with his seventh game of 300 yards or better in total offense.

The Cougars struck for 17 points in the first quarter in coasting to their sixth straight WAC win. Utah fell to 6-6 and 5-2 in the conference.

first possession of the game and was on the receiving end of an 18-yard touchdown pass from Wilson in the third quarter, the Cougar's final score of the game. Utah, which had upset the WAC champions 23-22 last year, found its running game stifled by an aroused BYU defense.

Women's basketball opens AIAW play this week

PHILADELPHIA — The Association of Intercollegiate Athletics for Women (AIAW) Division I basketball season, which gets under way this week, has a new look to the race for the championship. The story should be the same as last year, however, when the title game ends at Central Michigan in March.

Old Dominion is the near-unanimous choice to defend its title despite the loss of two key players. The Monarchs received all but one of the 40 first-place ballots in the preseason voting by the board of women's coaches that selects the weekly top 20. Stephen F. Austin recieved the other first-place vote.

The Monarchs lost highly-regarded freshman Beth Wilkerson from Kentucky and senior Jan Trombly with leg injuries during preseason practice. That situation could be a disaster anywhere else. At Old Dominion, all it has meant is a few alterations in the game plan.

Four starters return from the team that beat second-ranked Louisiana Tech for the AIAW title last March. That group includes 5-foot-10 All-America guard Nancy Lieberman, winner of the Wade Trophy that goes to the top junior or senior player in the country, and 6-5 All-America center Inge Nissen.

This year Nissen, a senior, moves to power-forward to make room for 6-8 Anne Donovan, the nation's number one freshman from northern New Jersey. The addition gives Old Dominion the tallest frontcourt in American women's basketball history.

Another newcomer who will help the Monarchs seem unstoppable is senior forward Chris Critellu, a transfer from Laurentian College. Sophomore Rhonda Rompola and senior Angela Cotman return at guard.

The Monarchs are so deep that Coach Marianne Stanley feels "we should be able to take our shot any time we go down the floor if we're executing properly."

Meanwhile, second-ranked Louisiana Tech has its own injury problem. Elinor Griffin, a 6-5 senior center, injured her leg during tryouts for the Spartacade team last summer and will be out until January. But the Techsters have sophomore stars Pam Kelly and Angela Turner back to go with key recruits Jennifer White from Tennessee and 6-2 Tia Sossamon from Missouri.

Third-ranked Stephen F. Austin returns five starts led by 6-1 All-America Rosie Walker. Coach Sue Gunter, who will also coach the U.S. Olympic squad, added depth with Pam Crawford and Bonnie Buchanan. Says Gunter, "If we (her team) don't do well, and if we (the U.S.) don't qualify for the Olympics, I'm going to defect to Bulgaria."

Topsy turvy is what describes this play when Purdue fullback Mike Augustyniak (23) goes over head first for first of three touchdowns Saturday against Indiana in Bloomington, Ind. Kevin Kenley (30) and Chuck Alexander (46) make the hit too late to stop the Boilermaker. (AP Laserphoto).

Purdue outlasts Indiana, 37-21 in season finale

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. (AP) — Purdue's Mike Augustyniak scored three touchdowns Saturday and the 12th-ranked Boilermakers survived a rash of pass interference calls to beat Indiana 37-21 in a Big Ten season finale between bowl-bound teams.

The Boilermakers later accepted a bid to play in the Bluebonnet Bowl in Houston Dec. 31 while Indiana, completing its best regular season since 1967, accepted a berth in the Holiday Bowl at San Diego on Dec. 21.

"The key to the game was our controlling the line of scrimmage," said Purdue Coach Jim Young. "We took everything away from them but pass interference."

For the game, Purdue was penalized 10 times for 158 yards, including three times for interfering with Indiana receivers, setting up two Hoosier scores.

Indiana was held to just 49 yards rushing the entire game.

"I thought they overwhelmed us at the line of the scrimmage," said Hoosier Coach Lee Corso. "It was a great credit to us that we didn't let down and that we kept our composure after the first half. In the second half, we got a little more intense at the line and that really helped."

Young, winning the game against Indiana for the second time in his three years as Purdue coach, said: "It was a great game for us to win. The last six games we've played great. We've been a tough football team."

Stanhouse signs with Los Angeles

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Free agent Don Stanhouse, one of baseball's top relief pitchers, has agreed to terms for a five-year contract with the Los Angeles Dodgers, club vice president Al Campanis said Saturday.

Earlier this week, the Dodgers signed another free agent pitcher, Dave Goltz. Stanhouse, 28, saved 21 games for the American League champion Baltimore Orioles last season and is credited with 45 saves over the past two years.

"We set out to obtain the best starting pitcher and the best relief pitcher available in the re-entry draft and we did just that in signing Dave Goltz and Stanhouse," said Campanis.

"I've always considered the Dodgers an organization with a great deal of class and I'm thrilled to join them," said Stanhouse said of his move to the National League club.

Stanhouse said he had considered "both Milwaukee and Philadelphia, but I've wanted to wear Dodger blue for a long time. I wanted to sign with a contender for the 1980 World Series."

Stanhouse was the workhorse for the Orioles last season as he compiled a 7-3 record and a 2.84 ERA in 52 games. He finished 46 of the 52 games for a .884 percentage — the best mark in the majors.

Seeking McGuire successor

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — The University of South Carolina Board of Trustees Saturday authorized a search to begin for a successor to head basketball Coach Frank McGuire.

The motion by trustee Paul Goldsmith of Greenville was passed unanimously after the trustees formally ratified a contract with McGuire, calling for him to step aside after the 1979-80 season, his 16th as coach of the Gamecocks.

Under the agreement, reached in October, McGuire will serve as a special consultant through next June 30.

Duke slips past Kentucky five

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. (AP) — Big Mike Gminski scored 21 points, five in overtime, as Duke slipped past Kentucky 82-76 Saturday in the Basketball Hall of Fame Tip-Off Classic that marked the start of the college season.

The victory for Duke, ranked No. 3 in The Associated Press preseason poll, avenged the 1978 loss to Kentucky in the NCAA finals — the last time the two teams met.

Kentucky, ranked No. 2 in the preseason poll, got 22 points from skyscraper Sam Bowie, the 7-foot-1 freshman, but Duke outscored the Wildcats 10-4 in the five-minute overtime after Bob Bender's driving layup with three seconds left in regulation forced the extra session.

Kyle Macy's two free throws with 27 seconds left had given Kentucky a 72-70 lead as the Wildcats stormed back from a 42-35 halftime deficit.

But in overtime, Vince Taylor dropped in two free throws after LaVon Williams scored twice from the foul line for Kentucky. Gminski then converted on a three-point play that broke the deadlock, then scored another basket moments later.

Duke jumped out to leads of 11-2, 19-8 and 26-14 as Kentucky's sloppy ball handling and the Blue Devil's man-to-man defense stifled the Wildcats early in the game.

Bowie's baskets cut the Duke lead to one point late in the first half, and he went on a scoring binge in the second as Kentucky outscored Duke 28-14.

But Eugene Banks, who scored 17 points before fouling out, sparked a comeback and Bender streaked in from the right side to tie the game.

The game to benefit the Basketball Hall of Fame in Springfield drew a packed crowd of 8,939 to the Civic Center in the city that calls itself the birthplace of basketball. The game counts in both teams' regular season records but not in the maximum number of contests allowed by the NCAA in a regular season.

Air Force tops Vandy by 30-29

AIR FORCE ACADEMY, Colo. (AP) — Quarterback Dave Ziebart hit diving freshman split end Andy Bark with a 14-yard scoring pass as time expired and Jim Sturch added the clinching extra point as Air Force closed out its college football season Saturday with a dramatic 30-29 triumph over Vanderbilt.

Bark's reception capped a desperation drive for the Falcons, who had taken a 23-21 lead with 5:32 left in the game but saw the advantage disappear with a Vanderbilt touchdown and a safety.

Following a fumbled punt recovery by Air Force, Frank Mordica burst 14 yards off the left side for a touchdown with 2:47 left and the Vanderbilt defense tackled Ziebart in the end zone less than a minute later to seemingly ice the victory.

Commodore quarterback Van Heflin ran 70 and 80 yards for touchdowns, and he accounted for another score on an 8-yard pass to flanker Preston Brown as Vanderbilt built a 21-14 lead early in the second half.

Air Force then took a 23-21 edge on three field goals by Sturch. Air Force ended its season at 2-9 while Vanderbilt dropped to 1-9.

Pitt thrashes Army, 40-0 with freshman quarterback

WEST POINT, N.Y. (AP) — Rooster Jones scored twice on short runs in the first nine minutes and 11th-ranked Pittsburgh rolled to a 40-0 college football victory Saturday over hapless Army.

Pitt's aerial combination of freshman quarterback Dan Marino and 230-pound tight end Benjie Pryor picked Army's secondary apart. They teamed on five completions for 69 yards in the first half as the Panthers breezed to their eighth consecutive triumph and ninth in 10 games this season.

Pitt then went to its locker room to discuss a bowl bid amid indications that they would acccept an invitation from the Fiesta Bowl at Tempe, Ariz.

While the Panthers were stomping Army, 2-7-1, on offense, the Pitt defense held the outmanned Cadets to 41 yards in total offense in the first half and sacked the quarterback five times.

A crunching blind-side tackle by All-American defensive end Hugh Green early in the second period put Earle Mulrane, Army's starter, out of action with a concussion.

Jones capped Pitt's first two possessions with touchdown plunges of two yards and one yard. The Panthers completed their 28-0 first-half bulge on Mark Schubert's 27-yard field goal, a 33-yard touchdown pass from halfback Fred Jacobs to Kenny Bowles and Randy McMillan's two yard smash with 28 seconds left in the second quarter.

Pitt continued its assualt in the second half scoring on a 28-yard Schubert field goal, a safety when second-string nose guard J.C. Pelusi sacked quarterbak Jerrel Bennett in the end zone and a 7-yard pass from Marino to Ralph Still on the first play of the fourth quarter.

Brochures on MCT mailed by thousands

Colorful brochures advertising Midland Community Theatre's 1980 membership season, and listing the stage attractions scheduled for presentation during the season, have gone out by the thousands in recent days to theater members and potential members in towns and cities throughout this region.

Costs of preparing and printing the promotional piece were underwritten by a grant from the Atlantic Richfield Co., through its Atlantic Richfield Foundation.

A check for the $10,000 grant was presented recently to MCT executive director Art Cole and William C. Morrow, president of MCT's board of governors, by Clarence Cardwell, ARCO vice president in charge of the company's Permian District, and Lorin Cassady, ARCO's district accounting director.

MCT's 1980 season will begin with the traditional Broadway musical. This year's attraction is "Mame," based on the Patrick Dennis best-seller, "Auntie Mame." The musical, with music and lyrics by Jerry Herman, will open on Feb. 1 and continue throughout the month.

Coming in March is a British import, a zany comedy with an intriguing title, "No Sex, Please, We're British."

Scheduled for presentation in May is a brand-new play by Jerome Lawrence and Roert E. Lee, "First Monday in October," which revolves around the first woman justice of the U.S. Supreme Court.

Coming in early June is a special treat — a second musical. It is "I Do! I Do!," the melodic and nostalgic story of a couple and their 50 years of marriage. The musical by Tom Jomnes and Harvey Schmidt is a favorite with many theater-goers in the city, having been presented here previously with great success.

ENTERTAINMENT

After the traditional summer hiatus, MCT's continues the season in October with a new thriller, "Deathtrap," by Ira Levin. The season concludes in late November with a production of a classic comedy, "Light Up the Sky" by Moss Hart, which is being brought back in response to popular demand.

Meanwhile, three additional productions are planned in Theatre Two, the smaller, arena-type stage area inside Theatre Midland.

Booked for presentation in that theater are a new play from Ireland, "The Poker Session," by Hugh Leonard, scheduled to open Feb. 15, to be followed in late May by a new play from Broadway, "The Gin Game," by D.L. Coburn. The third and final attraction in the arena theater is to be Hnrik Ibsen's classic drama, "A Doll's House," scheduled for next October.

Several categories of season membership are available to the public, including regular, single, sponsor, patron, sustaining, contributing and benefactor membership. Full information about each category and the special benefits of each may be obtained from the Midland Community Theatre business office, 682-2544.

Painting new addition to collection

FORT WORTH — A noteworthy oil painting by 19th Century American artist Seth Eastman is a major new addition to the permanent collection of Fort Worth's Amon Carter Museum.

The painting, "Ball Play of the Sioux on the St. Peters River in Winter," was completed in the winter of 1848 while Eastman, a captain in the U.S. Army, was stationed at Fort Snelling, Minn.

The fort overlooked the junction of the St. Peters River and the Mississippi River, seven miles below the Falls of St. Anthony. Eastman spent five years at the fort and produced more than 400 pictures while there. This painting was probably the second of about 75 oils he did at the military installation.

Eastman was a skilled observer of Sioux life who recorded almost every aspect of the Indians' daily routines, from hunting and camp life to the elaborate sports and games in which they participated. The sport shown in the Carter Museum acquisition is an early form of lacrosse. It was a popular game played by both southern and northern tribes. The Cherokees termed the sport "little brother of war" because it provided excellent training for combat.

"Ball Play of the Sioux" was originally sold by Eastman in 1850 to the American Art Union, an organization founded in 1830 to promote fine arts in America.

For a small annual fee, union members received several prints, often engraved after paintings which later were distributed by the union. Each year in December, paintings acquired by the union during the year were distributed to its membersd through a lottery system. It was through these circumstances that the Eastman painting was first acquired by Mrs. S.L. Treadwell of New York.

The painting subsequently disappeared from sight for many years until recent acquisition by the Carter Museum.

The public is invited to view the new acquisition. The Carter Museum is located on Camp Bowie Boulevard in Fort Worth's "museum complex" which also includes the Kimbell Art Museum and the Fort Worth Art Museum. The Carter Museum is open to the public without charge weekdays and Sunday afternoons.

'Happy Apple' final production

"The Happy Apple," a comedy import from Britain, is the final major production of Midland Community Theatre's 1979 season.

The light-hearted comedy from London, "translated" from the British to the American idiom and scene, will open at Theatre Midland Nov. 30, with 13 additional performances scheduled through Dec. 15.

The box office will open Wednesday morning to accept seat reservations from MCT season members for the 14 performances. Tickets will go on sale to the public Nov. 26. The MCT box office telephone number is 682-4111.

"The Happy Apple" centers around three bright young advertising executives who decide to branch out on their own from their "parent" advertising agency on Madison Avenue in Manhattan.

However, without the benefits of professionally-gathered research surveys, the three find themselves on the brink of financial disaster.

At that point, the young businessmen discover a virtual gold mine in their own office: Their secretary has the uncanny ability to accurately predict how the public will react to any product, thus giving the partners all the statistics and research they need — for only one percent of the profits! Then, just when it appears that their problems are over, the fun really begins.

"The Happy Apple," written by Jack Pulman, was first presented at the Apollo Theatre in London in 1970, where it enjoyed long-running success.

MCT's production is staged and directed by MCT executive director Art Cole. MCT administrative intern Beth Thomas is stage-managing the show.

MCT newcomer Vicki Leaverton is in the role of the extraordinary secretary, Nancy, and her three bosses are portrayed by Bill Salt, Jim Hicks and Jerry Green.

Others in the cast include Brian Sayre, Leonard Caryl, Ed Clements, Linda Salt, Darrell White and Dr. Norman Gould.

Dallas Opera presents taut, dramatic love story

DALLAS — "Manon Lescaut," a tautly dramatic love story by Giacomo Puccini, is the second production of Dallas Civic Opera's 1979 season.

The opera had its Dallas premiere this weekend with a performance Friday night in the State Fair Music Hall.

Additional presentations are scheduled for 2:30 p.m. today and 8 p.m. Wednesday. Tickets, subject to availability, will be for sale at the Music Hall box office in advance of curtain time each day.

"Manon Lescaut" ranges from the decadent luxury of 19th Century Parisian society to the barren wastes of an American desert and tells of the love affair between the Chevalier des Grieux and Manon Lescaut, a beautiful young girl of 18. The plot is quite similar to that of French composer Massenet's "Manon," which the Dallas Civic Opera presented in its 1977 season. Both operas are based on the same story.

Still to come in Dallas Civic Opera's current season are Georges Bizet's seldom-performed opera, "The Pearl Fishers," which will have presentations on Nov. 30 and Dec. 2 and 4, and Giuseppe Verdi's monumental operatic masterwork, "Aida," scheduled for presentation Dec. 14, 16 and 18.

Single tickets for a performance of these two remaining operatic productions may be mail-ordered from Dallas Civic Opera, 3000 Turtle Creek Plaza, Dallas 75219. The DCO telephone number is 214-528-9850.

When the fiercely independent residents of Hyampom, Calif., talk about going to the city, they mean Hayfork, 24 miles away. Hyampom has a two-man sawmill run by Milt Mortensen, left, and Rick Rickstrew. (Los Angeles Times Photo by Ben Olender)

Tiny town of 350 refuses state aid

By CHARLES HILLINGER
The Los Angeles Times

HYAMPOM, Calif. — This tiny town in a small Shangri-La-like valley surrounded by towering mountains is one of the most remote communities in California.

And perhaps the most fiercely independent.

When the state offered Hyampom $18,700 a while back to spend on whatever townspeople wanted in the way of recreation facilities, Hyampomians refused the money.

"We know there is no such thing as free money," explains Louise Garrett, 70, retired schoolteacher and lifelong resident.

"Hyampomians knew there had to be strings attached, that we would be saddled with rules and regulations, something we don't need around here."

Hyampom, population 350, has no political official — only a community council with 40 dues-paying members who meet once a month.

When Hyampomians talk about going to the city, they're talking about going to Hayfork — 24 miles by a narrow and steep country road.

And Hayfork with 2,000 people is itself 65 miles west of Redding by narrow and steep country road.

Hyampom is the end of the line and no one drives through Hyampom on the way to somewhere else.

How did the residents of Hyampom find Hyampom?

"You're either lost and stumble upon it, or you're born here," says barmaid Lorraine Brown.

"Those of us who weren't born here moved here for the quiet and solitude," says Don Ward, 59. "I'm holed up here so I don't have to fight the streetcars and traffic in Los Angeles."

"Hell, Don, there haven't been any streetcars in L.A. in years," chimes in Gene Rickstrew, operator of the local two-man sawmill.

"Really?" replies Ward with obvious surprise. "That's the best news I've heard about L.A. in a long time."

News travels slowly in Hyampom.

The most excitement ever in Hyampom was six years ago when Hamms brewery made a TV commercial in the local saloon. Most Hyampomians have never seen the commercial because reception on the one TV channel here is at best pretty fuzzy.

"To this day we wonder how those people from Hamms ever found this place," says Bil Bailey.

This place is so remote strangers are never seen here in winter and seldom in summer. "There's just no reason for strangers coming here," says Harry Killert, a local logger.

The valley is 3 miles long, a half mile wide, made up of a few small ranches and the town. The south fork of the Trinity River bisects the valley.

The smallest lots in town are five acres. There hasn't been room for population growth in years.

Professor declares business pioneers eyeing outer space

ATHENS, Ohio (AP) — Once private enterprise sees the money that can be made by mining an asteroid, businesses will be jostling for the chance to set up shop in outer space, an Ohio University professor predicts.

John Kraus said many look at space now the way many Easterners must have viewed California just before the gold rush: it's interesting enough, but no one really wants to go there.

However, he said, space is "where mankind's future lies — it offers a tremendous potential for energy, materials and room for expansion."

"Just wait until it's demonstrated that you can use solar power to mine an asteroid for profit," said Kraus, visiting professor of electrical engineering at OU. "Then everyone will want to be in on it."

Kraus, regularly director of the Ohio State-Ohio Wesleyan radio observatory, is teaching a fall class called "Engineering Perspectives on the Future from a Cosmic Standpoint."

The mining of mineral-rich asteroids, even immediately, is not an outlandish idea, he said.

"All this is technically feasible right now," he said. "It's simply a matter of doing it, getting the go-ahead from the necessary government agencies."

Exploration of space has so far been the domain of major governments because of its exorbitant cost, Kraus said. But he said the next century will see private enterprise moving into space to establish mining programs that will require them to construct space cities and factories.

He envisions businesses pooling their finances to fund this exploration and construction in a manner not unlike the pioneering Hudson Bay Co. and other historical cooperatives that mined the resources of the New World.

Europe plans energy cutbacks to keep warm this winter

By MARCUS ELIASON

PARIS (AP) — A West Berlin firm is trying to get heat from dishwater. Holland is having two extra Christmas holidays rather than heat its public buildings. Copenhagen's Christmas lights will be turned off early this year.

A Swiss machine-tool company which lowered its thermostats to 64 degrees to save energy is giving its 1,000 workers fur-lined slippers and wristlets. In Yugoslavia, the first lines for heating oil have been sighted.

Actually, the situation in most of Western Europe is better than it was at the start of last winter — if only on paper — mainly because of careful fuel stockpiling aimed at hedging against further price increases.

The European Common Market says its nine member nations have 115 days' worth of stocks, compared with 104 a year ago. That, says an official of the Paris-based International Energy Agency, is "enough to cope with a reasonably hard winter."

But the price of heating oil paid by the consumer has gone up by as much as 50 percent in some countries, and no one wants to guess what will happen if winter is harsh.

Europe's bleak mood is captured by a notice in the lobby of a middle-class Paris apartment block, put up this fall after tenants were without hot water for two weeks.

It explains that normal supplies ran out too fast and emergency replenishments were unobtainable this past summer. "There will be no emergency supplies this winter either, so we must all economize," it says.

France has lowered the heat in all government buildings by two degrees, to 66 degrees. It has also cut by 10 percent the amount of heating oil any building can buy.

Holland, Italy and Austria have lowered thermostats to 68, Britain to 64.

Chilly Sweden, which uses 25 percent of its oil imports on heating, ended last winter with a 17 percent shortfall in its oil reserves and says its situation "is shaky and requires continual preparedness."

But it has an emergency rationing setup that "can be activated at the push of a button," says Disa Byman, spokeswoman of the National Energy-Saving Committee.

Britain pays $103 to every homeowner who insulates his attic. Denmark, France and West Germany reimburse part of the cost of sealing homes or exempt the expense from taxes. The United States has a similiar tax deduction.

The Soviet government has demanded "very strict control" over energy use. Turn-off-the-light signs have gone up in many government buildings, and the Komsomol, the Communist Party youth organization, has sent squads around the country to help enterprises find ways of saving energy.

Czechoslovakia has canceled all allocations of coal and coke for country houses, and piles of logs are turning up outside the villas of the well-to-do.

State forest wood can be bought very cheaply, and the government pays most of the transport costs. Timber authorities say sales have multiplied sevenfold over last year, while the only firm in Prague that insulates windows is booked solid and has hired 10 new employees.

A West Berlin company is working on a pump that would syphon the heat out of dishwater as it goes down the drain and use it to warm the home.

Danish manufacturers of wood-burning stoves say they cannot keep up with demand, and many Danes comb the beaches for driftwood to burn.

The Danes have responded well to economy measures introduced in 1973, but nonetheless the energy squeeze will be felt in poignant style when, for the first time since the great energy crisis of 1973-74, the colored lights go off at 11 p.m. on Christmas Eve instead of burning all night.

The energy crisis shows up sharp disparities.

While West Germany allows any speed on its highways, and any temperature in its public buildings, Italy fears oil supply shortfalls of 4 percent to 8 percent this winter, depending on the weather.

Both Germany and Italy buy much of their oil on the higher-priced spot markets. But while the West German mark apparently can stand prices of $40 a barrel, Italy's hard-pressed economy cannot.

Nevertheless, Mayor Carlo Monni of Pontedera near Pisa has won national attention for defying government orders to keep the heat turned off until Nov. 15.

With the weather at freezing point and the town's children catching more colds than usual, the mayor said "health comes first" and turned on the heat.

His people acclaimed him a hero — the first, ironically, that the energy crisis has produced in Europe.

Copenhagen honors Knudsen

DETROIT (AP) — The late William Knudsen, who was president of General Motors Corp. and production director of the War Department's office of production management during World War II, was honored in his native Copenhagen, Denmark, recently.

Queen Margrethe led her subjects in commemorating the 100th anniversary of Knudsen's birth by opening a special photographic exhibition of his life, times and contributions to Detroit's automobile industry.

Knudsen emigrated from Copenhagen in 1900. A bronze plaque commemorates his birthplace here.

Ex-POW opposes women in combat

By JIM ADAMS

WASHINGTON (AP) — A former prisoner of war in Vietnam appealed to congressmen Friday not to put women into combat lest they face the life of a "crawling animal" that he suffered during seven years in a Hanoi prison.

Retired Adm. Jeremiah Denton said "it would be insanity to subject women to the horrors of war." He said, too, that women should be kept off the battlefield to save "the institution of the family."

Denton, whose book "When Hell Was in Session" became a television movie, testified before the House military personnel subcommittee as it completed a week of hearings on women in the military and whether they should be put into combat.

He said he was once "reduced to a crawling animal" with boils all over his face after he was bound hand and foot in a filthy cell with an overflowing tin can for a toilet.

"I just don't like to think of a young lady spending 10 days and nights like that," he said.

Another time, he said, Vietnamese guards tortured him and other prisoners for five days by repeatedly yanking their shackled legs hard against iron cell bars.

"I would hate to see a woman in that situation," he testified.

Denton said that another time he and a fellow prisoner forced a showdown during a forced march of prisoners through Hanoi streets, adding that he did not think two women could have done it.

Hundreds of people lining the streets were kicking and hitting the prisoners and throwing rocks and other objects at them, he said.

When a young man kicked him in the groin, Denton said, he and the prisoner to whom he was chained acted as though they were going to choke the man to death. He said guards pulled the man away to avoid an incident that might have triggered a riot.

"I don't believe two young ladies would have been able to pull off such a showdown confrontation," Denton said.

Denton also told the subcommittee that aside from the danger of women becoming POWs, he believes putting them into combat would violate American values.

He said the United States is losing its moral fiber and "the fact that this nation is considering sending our young women, young ladies, to war is one more bridge too far."

"Let's start thinking of national survival in terms of saving the institution of the family," he said.

But Dr. Carol Parr, executive director of the Women's Equity Action League, told the subcommittee that women should share any combat jobs for which they are physically qualified.

"Women should share the role of the protector, not just be protected," she said.

A Menninger Foundation psychiatrist, Dr. Harold M. Voth, testified that putting women into any combat "is a tragic error that must be avoided."

Marines accomplished job before surrendering

By GEORGE C. WILSON
The Washington Post

QUANTICO, Va. — American TV viewers saw film clips of the U.S. Marine guards succumbing to the Tehran mob without firing a shot in resistance. But those embassy guards "accomplished their mission," according to their commander, by holding back the Iranian demonstrators long enough to destroy the embassy code machines and other secret material.

"This was not like the Pueblo," said Col. James L. Cooper in a reference to the Navy spyship which the North Koreans captured in 1968 before the crew could destroy her secrets.

Cooper, who commands the 1,100 Marines guarding U.S. outposts in Iran and 101 other nations, provided an insight into what the government as a whole is up against in turbulent Third World Countries.

Cooper said in an interview that security of U.S. outposts "is predecated on the assumption that the host government will fulfill its responsibility under international law of protecting diplomatic missions; not only ours, but everybody's."

Marines guarding U.S. embassies in a crisis are "supposed to conduct delaying actions to give the embassy time to button up; to evacuate some personnel and move others to safe havens ... and to give the host government time to react."

IT WORKED OUT that way, Cooper said, in recent demonstrations at U.S. embassies in Bonn, San Salvador and Beirut. The host government came to the rescue in each case.

"We're not going to maintain our missions by force of arms. Physically, we couldn't do it" with the Marine guards available," he said. This means that "when the host government isn't going to protect an embassy, you can no longer guarantee the safety of the people there. The Marine Corp can't take up the slack."

Turning to the U.S. Embassy in Tehran specifically, Cooper said it would take at least a battalion of some 800 combat Marines to protect the 27-acre compound full of buildings and natural cover for terrorists.

On Nov. 4, the day of the takeover, Cooper said three Marines were manning their assigned posts. One was inside the control booth in the entrance of the embassy, a second was patroling inside the building and the third was guarding the ambassador's residence. There were 10 other Marines off duty at the time.

Cooper said that about 3,000 Iranian demonstrators started to mill around outside the U.S. embassy. The demonstration escalated to violence gradually, Cooper said.

STATE DEPARTMENT officials have said that they had reduced the embassy staff to a minimum before the takeover, had strengthened the doors and taken other measures for fear some kind of violence might occur.

As it became apparent that the demonstrators were bent on violence, Cooper said, the Marine guards fired tear gas at them to slow down their advance. Washington officials learned through a phone connection with the embassy, the colonel continued, that the code machines and related equipment inside the embassy were about to be blown up.

"We're going to do it," is what the State Department officials heard before the phone connection was broken, Cooper said. "I'm confident the Marines accomplished their mission by buying time" to allow this destruction of sensitive material, Cooper said.

Each of the three Marines guarding the embassy in Tehran had access to a 12-gauge, pump shotgun loaded with five shells containing 27 pellets of number four shot. One such pellet can kill a person. The Marines also carried .38 calibre pistols and had canisters of tear gas to fire at the crowd.

"A Marine guard is trained never to draw his weapon unless he's going to fire it," said Cooper.

THE DECISION on whether to fire at the crowd was up to the State Department security officer on duty that day at the embassy, Cooper said. He decided against shooting at the unarmed crowd of 3,000, the colonel continued.

Cooper said that those advocating some kind of rescue of the American hostages in Tehran do not appreciate the difficulties or the risks involved.

For one thing he said, there is no place nearby from which to launch a surprise attack. If you're going to go in there in force, you're going to war.

"The question then becomes whether it's worth jeopardizing the lives of the hostages and the rescue party." Asked if the Marine Corps could not duplicate the Israeli rescue at Entebbe, Cooper replied:

"I didn't say we couldn't do it. I asked, 'Is it worth it?' Tehran is a long way from anything. The only thing that's close is the Soviet Union. Perhaps we should call on their good offices."

Haynes to represent policemen

HOUSTON (AP) — Defense lawyer Richard "Racehorse" Haynes has been hired to represent for two policemen involved in the fatal shooting of Reggie Lee Jackson.

Haynes, back in Houston after successfully defending millionaire Cullen Davis on a solicitation of murder charge in Fort Worth, would not say Friday who hired him in the Jackson case. Police Chief Harry Caldwell has asked the City Council to authorize funds for legal representation for the two officers.

Jackson was shot to death Sept. 26.

Officers R.W. Robinson and J.C. Valentino said Jackson was shot as he pointed a gun at them as he and a second man were fleeing after Jackson's car was stopped on a traffic matter. Several civilians, however, have said no second man was involved and that they heard someone, apparently Jackson, pleading for his life.

Valentino and Jackson are still on police duty.

The case is being investigated by the Police Department's internal affairs division, the Harris County district attorney's civil rights division, the FBI and a federal grand jury.

District Attorney John B. Holmes has indicated a district judge might be asked to convene a public court of inquiry.

Haynes said he would oppose such an inquiry.

"It's too susceptible to be used as a political power vehicle," Haynes said.

The proper place to investigate is a grand jury, Haynes said.

"The concept behind a grand jury is a viable one, they have no ax to grind," he said.

Haynes said Caldwell must believe the officers innocent of wrong doing in that they have not been fired.

"It would be easier for him to throw them to the wolves," he said.

Stand-in pig eaten at dinner

CHICAGO (AP) — A stand-in pig was devoured at a benefit dinner given by Gov. James R. Thompson where the menu called for servings of Bigfoot, the Illinois state fair's 1979 grand champion porker that brought a record $13,500.

The story of the "ringer" was reported in Friday's edition of the Chicago Tribune.

Instead of grand champion chops and roasts, the meat was from a run-of-the-barn pig at the Oct. 21 benefit auction and dinner hosted by Thompson in the Executive Mansion to raise money for the University of Illinois.

But the charity went off as planned and generated more than $20,000 for the Illini athletic and animal science departments, officials said.

Bigfoot, a 236-pound Duroc-Hampshire crossbred barrow, was exhibited at the fair by Byron Mackey, 14, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Mackey of Cisco. Butterfly Porkchopper Inc., a group of pork industry men, bought the grand champion at auction, also to raise funds for Illinois.

The day after the auction, Bigfoot became ill. He was treated with sulfa drugs and taken to the university, the Tribune said. Bigfoot was slaughtered later, and the sulfa residues in the carcass prevented its sale for human consumption under Food and Drug Administration regulations.

The Mackey family provided a substitute pig for the Executive Mansion auction and dinner. John Homeier, a Springfield oil company executive and one of the Butterfly Porkchoppers, paid the top price — $3,000 for the pig's tail — but said he knew he wasn't buying the tail of the grand champion.

"I was a member of the U. of I. basketball team in the late 1950s, and I want to support the university," he said.

Sid Hutchcraft, executive vice president of the Illinois Pork Producers Association, said he does not know if Thompson or other buyers knew about the switch.

"But I doubt if they would even be concerned about that," he said. "They were mainly concerned about the publicity they would get from the sale and about helping the U. of I."

An alligator captured in a residential area in southern Florida is muzzled with tape and ropes. Wildlife experts in the Southeast fear that the species' classification as threatened or endangered is producing a crop of "SuperGators" — large, numerous and living dangerously close to man. (AP Laserphoto)

Alligators make frightening comeback in Sunbelt states

By RICK SPRATLING

MIAMI (AP) — Just a dozen years ago, after being shot, snared and speared for generations, the American alligator was considered so precariously scarce that it was declared an endangered species.

But the alligator turned out to be as tough as it is ugly, bouncing back with surprising speed in wide areas of the nation's Sunbelt.

Alligators are being hauled away as nuisances in some states, legally killed by the thousands in Louisiana and served up as a delicacy in Florida restaurants.

"We're up to our ears in alligators," says Louisiana Wildlife and Fisheries spokesman Frank Davis.

There's even a chance, one expert says, that extended protection may be producing a new generation of SuperGators — big, numerous and living uncomfortably close to man.

The federal government still officially classifies the alligator as either endangered or threatened. But federal and state biologists agree the population is thriving in many areas.

"It's fantastic," says Dave Peterson, endangered species coordinator at the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service office in Jacksonville, Fla.

What no one anticipated, Peterson says, is that alligators which are not being poached and prodded would devote prodigious effort to making baby alligators.

In the late 1950s conservationists feared alligators had been reduced to perhaps only 100,000 animals scattered across 10 Southern states. In the 1960s, officials began protective action. Florida banned alligator hunting in 1962. The alligator was formally declared an endangered species by the federal government in 1967. Hide exporting was banned two years later, shutting off a lucrative international market.

Suddenly the alligator was protected from its only real enemy, man.

"As far back as the white man's been in Florida, alligators had been exploited," says Tommy Hines, who directs Florida's alligator research program from a Gainsville laboratory. "We can document hides being sold as early as 1800 in Miami. The population was exploited with very little control for 160 to 170 years."

Today, Florida's alligator population is variously estimated at 500,000 to 1 million, Louisiana's around 300,000, with fewer in Texas, Arkansas, Mississippi, Georgia, Alabama, the Carolinas and Oklahoma.

Hines says there's no way to know for sure how many there are.

"What we do know," he said. "is that they're widespread, and the population is increasing — in some cases 25 to 30 percent a year."

He said some Florida lakes already seem to be approaching capacity.

In Lake Griffin near Leesburg, Fla., where much of the lakefront is lined with houses, "There's a large population of large alligators, some in excess of 12 feet, with a density of 60 to 70 alligators per mile of shoreline," Hines said.

Florida researchers have documented about 35 alligator attacks on humans since 1947. Three persons were killed. Hines said no one knows what will happen as more people meet more alligators.

"If an animal is hungry and something is swimming in the water he'd just as soon eat one thing as another," Hines said. "In the last few years they haven't been persecuted as much. A lot of them have lost their fear. It's not a matter of being aggressive. It's just a matter of eating."

Florida and Louisiana have recently instituted control programs.

State-licensed hunters now kill about 2,000 nuisance alligators a year in Florida. The state auctions the hides and gives the hunter 70 percent of the money. Last month, the game commission authorized sale of alligator meat. About 25 restaurants have applied for permits.

"The amazing thing is the reception," said Mike Hurst, whose New River Storehouse restaurant in Fort Lauderdale sells about 300 alligator-lobster-conch combination plates a week at $12.95. "I mean, people really like it."

The United States and 54 member nations of the International Trade Convention on Endangered Species agreed this year to permit limited trading in alligator products. In mid-October the Fish and Wildlife Service ended its decade-long ban on hide exports. Many states, however, still restrict trade.

Louisiana has allowed limited alligator hunting in recent years and this year expanded the hunt to 16 parishes. An estimated 16,000 alligators were killed.

Georgia and Mississippi no longer consider alligators endangered but still protect them by outlawing their killing.

South Carolina has an alligator surplus in some spots, and officials say development may eventually prove a greater threat than poaching.

"The problem in the next 15 to 20 years is destruction of habitat," said John Sealy, a state endangered-species coordinator. "Hilton Head is a good example. Where you get development in alligator habitat, like golf courses, eventually you get man-alligator conflicts. Usually the alligator loses."

In Alabama, state Game and Fish Division Director Charles Kelley said the alligator has made a "phenomenal" comeback and he's trying to have it removed from the federal endangered species list.

"It's just illogical to keep them on the list when we get frequent calls about 'gators eating dogs and going in people's yards," Kelley said. "You can't convince people who see them in their yards that 'gators are endangered. They think it's the people who are endangered by the alligators."

Church tries to exclude woman

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) — A fight is brewing between a Lubbock woman and a church that would rather not have her as a worshiper.

The Lyons Chapel Baptist Church was granted a temporary restraining order against Bobbie Greenwood. State District Judge Thomas Clinton granted the order last week.

He set a Nov. 26 hearing on whether to make the injunction permanent. Members of the congregation said in the petition that she regularly interrupts services with loud and profane language and threats against members.

"They did what?" Mrs. Greenwood said Friday night when she learned of the injunction.

"It's a whole congregation, and you mean one person can threaten a whole church? There's something crooked there. I don't know what any of this is about, but I'm going to get me a lawyer and find out. It's all false, and I'm really tired of this kind of mess," she said.

The Rev. Floyd Perry Jr. said despite being expelled from church membership in July 1978 for "creating a disturbance amongst the flock," Mrs. Greenwood has continued to attend meetings periodically and create a scene.

"She is talking and disturbing others around her. They get up and move elsewhere but it doesn't seem to make any difference. She has stood up in the middle of services several times," said Perry, the church's senior minister.

"We aren't angry with her. We wish her the very best that can possibly come her way, but we just can't have this continue. Would you want it in your church? I have the responsibility to see there is a harmonious atmosphere," he added.

"I can't see that there would be any conflict of church and state. The only thing I can trace back on it is there is a statute that prohibits this type of conduct. The members are entitled to a peaceful meeting, and they contend they can't seem to be able to control her," the judge said.

The lawsuit didn't say why Mrs. Greenwood was excluded from the church.

"She was making a nuisance of herself, the same thing she's doing now. She was voted out of fellowship, which means she was supposed to go someplace else. She kept coming and we kept ignoring her, or trying to ignore her, and she kept coming," Perry said.

Lie detector use questioned

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The Sunset Advisory Commission staff says serious constitutional and ethical questions surround the use of lie detector tests by employers on their employees.

Staff members Friday told the commission 17 states prohibit employers from using lie detector tests. The staff report also said Texas may want to impose such a ban.

"Serious constitutional guarantees concerning a person's right to privacy may be violated through such polygraph testing, especially where economic factors due to unemployment may reduce the voluntary nature of a person's consent to be tested," the report said.

The Board of Polygraph Examiners is one of five state boards now being reviewed by the commission. The boards will go out of business in 1982 if not approved by the 1981 Legislature. The commission — four senators and four representatives — will make recommendations on the boards.

The staff reports recommended tighter control over the use of lie detector equipment.

Staff members suggested three alternatives. The first would maintain the current board, but add procedural and administrative changes. The second alternative would abolish the board and give its powers to the Department of Public Safety.

The third alternative would give the powers to the DPS and ban the use of lie detector tests in employment situations.

Commission members were told the use of polygraph exams has increased greatly in recent years. The six-member board, created in 1965, regulates 458 licensed polygraph examiners in Texas.

"A review of board operations indicates that the board has only partially achieved its objective of efficient and effective regulation," the report said.

It stated the growing use of polygraph equipment by employers has increased "the public's need for protection" because of "possible infringements of privacy rights, the intrusive nature of the polygraph, and the unproven validity of the technique in such situations."

The report said the 17 states cited varying reasons for the ban on such tests. Some said "there is considerable disagreement concerning the accuracy" of the equipment. Others said the tests may be so intrusive as to be objectionable."

Vintage car racers a rare breed

By PAUL DEAN
The Los Angeles Times

RIVERSIDE, Calif. — The reasons for what these drivers do are as diehard as the cars they campaign, this time at a track about 50 miles east of Los Angeles.

Jan Voboril, up to his elbows in the buffed brass and cast aluminum engine room of a 1916 Lancia Keppa, with its wooden fan and riveted leather belting, explains:

"Because I don't like to have car in garage to look at and polish twice a week. The car built to race, some say it won the Vanderbilt Cup but that not true, and so I race. In old country (Czechoslovakia) my family always drive old cars and I learn driving on 1928 Tatra, flat four and air cooled."

Peter Sprague, wiping, always flicking dust from the bible-black bus that is his supercharged, 4.5-liter Bentley from Britain, says this:

"It's a small-boy trip, it's fun, and give me an hour on a couch and I could probably come up with a monosyllabic explanation. But it's having people look at you. It's driving up to a Beverly Hills restaurant with Kirk Douglas as your passenger. Did you know that James Bond drove a 1930 Bentley on weekends because that's what Ian Fleming drove? And did you know that Phil Hill (former world driving champion) drives the Bentley that Fleming owned?"

Mrs. Lynn Yakel tugs harder on the broad, airplane-type lapstrap that makes her part of the floor of her hand-assembled, aluminum-bodied, gull-winged, quarter-century-old Mercedes 300SL, and looks inside herself:

"It's a challenge, man over machine, being a participant, not a spectator. And much more fun than drag boats, which I used to drive. There's also a little Walter Mitty here because I believe Juan Manuel Fangio was the greatest driver of them all, of them all. Did you see my license plate? It says FANGIO."

Then the driver, the romantic and the hero worshiper burbled and hummed onto and around the 2.75-mile wriggle of Riverside International Raceway on a recent weekend to risk bending three cars worth $200,000 — and to be small change among 100 other racing classics worth $9 million.

Officially, this two-day game of Italian-British—German-French-American roulette was postered as the Historic Car Races of the Hollywood-headquartered Vintage Auto Racing Association. VARA is dedicated to automobile preservation and keeps 'em rolling as the Conferderate Air Force seeks to keep 'em flying and the Society for Creative Anachronism wants to keep King Arthur alive and jousting.

Informally, however, the daring extravagance represented by pitting priceless racer wheel-to-wheel against irreplaceable motor car may easily be compared to swinging at a softball with a Stradivarius and liding into the Mona Lisa as second base.

And there's no argument that classic, vintage and historical automobile racing — a full passion in Europe since the '30s but still only a five-year-love affair in Calfiornia — is a sport for the sybaritic and filthy rich.

Even press releases for the Riverside meet spoke of "extremely affluent" drivers and owners "prominent in the social haute monde" wheeling cars of "astronomical intrinsic values."

The entry list underscored those superlatives.

It included Lancia pilot Voboril of Los Angeles, a custom-wood craftsman that in Europe is several quantum jumps up on being a carpenter. Voboril owns nine cars, all Italian-made Lancias and Fiats.

Mrs. Yakel of nearby La Habra is better known as Dr. Roberta Nichols to fellow engineers at Aerospace Corp., and she and her husband, an aerodynamicist, own three Mercedes 300SLs tagged at $50,000 apiece.

Then there's Bentley owner Sprague of New York, a self-described entrepreneur who in 1975 purchased Britain's prestigious but failed Aston Martin Co., lock, stock and carburetor. He now is remanufacturing 007's work and weekend wheels for those willing to spend $80,000 on something that comes with Wilton carpeting and walnut paneling but no fireplace.

Famous sons came to Riverside with Jim Luckman, heir of architect Charles Luckman, running his 1959 Cooper Monaco against the thundering 1963 Cobra sports racer of Robin Adrian, son of actress Janet Gaynor.

Physicians, artists, investment brokers, professors and former race drivers fleshed the roster of high professionals and so did Encino, Calif., attorney Jerry Rosenstock, who was programmed as owning 11 rare cars, said the number is 13 but in an interview could only count and describe 10, which gives you some idea of the heady nonchalance and wealth of his hobby.

Extensive soil fertility program main Extension objective for '80

By CHARLES W. GREEN
Midland County Extension Agent — Agriculture

Another week of excellent weather permitted area cotton producers to continue harvest of a generally bumper cotton crop, and cotton is beginning to stack up at the gins. This has been one of the best harvest seasons in a number of years from the standpoint of good weather, which is fortunate since the cotton is loose on the stalk and would be subject to loss with any kind of inclement weather.

MIDLAND COUNTY PRODUCERS are right in the middle of harvesting what may be a record cotton crop in bales for one year. This will be remembered as a year with generally good soil moisture. However, there are always thoughts about next year, and our thoughts point to the need to manage closer.

Soil testing is just one of the management tools available, but it helps remove fertility guesswork and unwarranted fertilizer costs. If we are not taking advantage of soil testing, then many of us are guessing about crop fettility needs. With the continued increase in production costs, including fertilizers, it is important that fertilization practices be adequate for economical levels of production.

Economical, or profitable, fertilization is highly dependent on the nutrient status of the soil. It is important that the soil's capacity to supply nutrients be considered in deciding how to ferttilize. Soil tests are a good source of information on which to base an evaluation of soil nutrients, and now is a good time to start plans for next year.

A MAIN THRUST in next year's Extension program in crops will be on a county intensified soil fertility program. Basically, the program involves the following phases: (1) A soil testing campaign. Our goal is at least 100 soil samples made this year. (2) Result demonstrations. Large test plots will be designed to test crop response to recommended levels of nutrients on several farms, dry and irrigated, under the supervision of Dr. Dale Pennington, extension soil chemist, Lubbock. (3) Infrared photography. Aerial photos, using infra-red technique, will pinpoint crop response to various fertilizrs and methods of application. The soil sampling phase of the program will be initiated as follows:

(1) The Midland Farmer's Cooperative will keep a supply of soil sampling cartons, information sheets and sampling instructions for convenience of producers.

(2) Soil samples should be taken as soon as harvest is complete and before stalks are shredded. Sampling should be representative of the field. Several spots should be sampled in each field of similar soil, topography and crop history and then mixed for a composite sample to represent the field. Look for the areas of reduced growth, smaller bolls, lighter color and yields, etc., and concentrate on these for sampling.

(3) Mark soil cartons with name, address and field number, and keep these in your records for for proper identification.

(4) Complete information sheets, giving all information called for and other pertinent information concerning any problems encountered in past years. Indicate the yield goal you wish to consider.

(5) Bring the filled soil cartons, completed information sheets and required fees back to Midland Farmer's Cooperative. We will make arrangements to get them to Lubbock to the soils lab. Results will be available four days after they are received.

HERE ARE SOME TIPS on taking good samples. As with all thins, proper tools to accomplish the task are required. Suitable tools include the soil sampke probe, soil auger, or a sharp shooter shovel. Also, a two-gallon plastic bucket is needed for mixing the sample to prevent contamination of the soil sample and, therefore, an erroneous soil analysis.

Normally, a soil sample at plow depth (about six inches) is adequate. If a subsoil sample has never been taken, then take samples from several sites to look at nutrient status below the surface. Subsoil fertility status is very important to deep-rooted crops, such as alfalfa, and enormously important to tree crops, such as pecans.

Next, the question that needs answering is "How many subsamples and what size field should a single sample represent?" If a field is uniform, 10 to 15 subsamples per 100 acres should be adequate for a good soil analysis. Fewer subsamples and a larger area are all right if the field has never been fertilized.

Prior to taking small samples, scrape any litter from the surface, then use a sharp shooter to dig a V-shaped hole. Take a half-inch slice of soil from the smooth side of the hold. Repeat in 10 to 15 different places. Place subsamples in a clean container (plaster bucket or paper sack), mix thoroughly and take out approximately one pint for the composite sample.

Soil testing is also available for the home gardener. Information sheets for lawn, gradens and ornamental soil analysis and soil cartons are available at the Extension Office.

Dave Cesar is known as Backdoor Dave at the circus, where he makes sure that the kids don't sneak in or the bears sneak out. (Los Angeles Times Photo by Ken Hively)

Backdoor Dave circus landmark

By AL MARTINEZ
The Los Angeles Times

INGLEWOOD, Calif. — There was Backdoor Dave in his $600 butterscotch-colored suit, standing in the sunshine by the ramp that leads into the Forum, humming a little tune and watching the elephants go by.

His mama made the suit, so the price is just an estimate based on the doubleknit material and her 40 hours of work, Dave explains.

"I got 60 suits," he says in a drawl as soft as a Memphis morning, "and 87 hats. That's the way you gotta dress at the circus." He smiles ever so slightly.

It's all a kind of quiet joke with Backdoor Dave, whose real name is Dave Caesar. They call him Backdoor because he's the backdoor man at the Ringling Brothers & Barnum and Bailey Circus, which was recently in town in this city next door to Los Angeles.

He's had the job since December, making sure kids don't sneak in or bears sneak out, and that celebrities get the proper treatment.

"There ain't another job like it in the world," Dave says contentedly. "It soothes the soul."

He looks up as clowns and midgets and ponies troop by, a flash of brilliant reds and golds, a glitter of sequins.

"I'm really glad I ran away with the circus," he says.

That's the joke. That's why he smiles to himself. There he is at age 34, a big, hulking 200-pounder who one day last year decided he'd had it with the rock 'n' roll life he was living, so he went to his mama and said he was going to run off with the circus.

"Fine," she said, packing a suitcase, "I'm goin' with you." And she did.

Now she works at the souvenir stand and Dave guards the back door, and they love it. The clowns. The man on 10-foot stilts. The aerialists...The music.

What he gave up was not just your average lunch pail job, but life in the fast lane as a booking agent out of Memphis, working with stars like James Brown and Little Richard and groups like the Doors and Black Oak Arkansas.

He was getting 15 percent of acts he'd book at $50,000 a night in New York and Chicago and Atlanta. Backdoor Dave had built the business over a 19-year period, and it was big.

"Hell," he says, "there were times we wouldn't even take a phone call unless they had a $25,000 guarantee."

He also had a music hall and some craft shops, and a 120-acre farm in the Ozarks with a 6,000-square-foot house...

"But then," he says softly, "it occurred to me one day that what had once been a romance had become a business. Everything was fading away...."

"Ladies and gentlemen and children of all ages..."

Ringmaster Kit Haskett's amplified voice drifted out from the arena and up the corridor where Dave stands, listening.

"...Producers Irvin Feld and Kenneth Feld proudly present the 109th edition..."

"Listen to that," Dave says, staring toward the arena entrance.

"...of the Ringling Brothers & Barnum and Bailey Circus..."

He stands, not moving.

"...the Greatest Show on Earth!"

When the music starts, Backdoor Dave hunches his shoulders slightly and shakes his head. "Every time I hear that I get goose bumps," he says.

What got him to thinking about leaving the booking business, he says, in addition to the fun draining out of the business, was the fact that it was all getting to his stomach.

Dave scratches his thick black beard and thinks about it.

"It was the tension, and all that time on the road," he says. "They used to call me the Fuller Brush Man of the Music Business. I'd travel so much. Finally I ended up losing half my guts and spending 27 days in the hospital.

"When you go through that kind of thing, you begin looking for something a little mellower...."

Dave's uncle, Frank (Whitey) Creamer, had been a lion tamer in the old days, a cat man, and Dave remembered watching him as a kid.

So he headed for the Barnum and Bailey winter quarters in Florida and told the guard he wanted a job. The guard told him to sit there.

"Well," Dave drawls, "I sat there for two days and finally someone came by and said 'I've got a job working props,' and I said, 'I'll take it.' "

Dave began wearing the fancy outfits, mostly Western-cut, because of the celebrities he escorts from the back door to the arena.

Pretty soon it became his trademark and mama offered to make the suits. She doesn't make the hats. He buys them.

"I've become a kind of front man for the show," says Backdoor Dave, not unaware of the contradiction in terms. "What I'd like to be is an advance man."

But, meanwhile, he likes hanging around the rear entrance, talking to people who come looking for work and cautioning little kids that they're just too young to run away with the circus.

"You've got to be at least 33," he winks.

In the distance, drums roll and trumpets blare.

Lonely elephant soon to move

By RICK HAMPSON

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. (AP) — This city will lose a favorite daughter and Los Angeles will gain several tons when the Forest Park Zoo's only, lonely, elephant is trucked to a new home on the West Coast.

Morganetta, the city's unofficial mascot and the only elephant residing in western Massachusetts, will move to the Los Angeles Zoo before Christmas, officials announced last week.

The 15-year-old has not seen another elephant since she was brought here from Thailand in 1965 — and her disposition is souring, says zookeeper Peter Jaskievic. In Los Angeles, the 6,000-pound adolescent will live with two other Asian elephants and have a chance to mate.

"She will have a good home, believe me," said Michael Crotty, the zoo's curator of mammals.

"Anyone who really cares about the animal knows she's not in the proper setting here," said Park Director Richard A. Fitch.

Not everyone agreed.

"It's going to take a hell of a lot of convincing for me to say yes to this," said Park Commission member Daniel Walsh. He said his panel must approve the transfer of Morganetta, an animal he called "an institution."

Morganetta's impending departure "has generated a certain amount of hysteria," noted Park Commissioner Benedict Breitung. But Park Commission Chairman Anthony Scibelli said if it came to a vote, "it'd be 4-to-1 in favor of sending her out West."

Mayor Theodore Dimauro urged compassion: "It is kind of selfish for us to disregard what is best for her. I am sure there will be some people who will think the cost factor is the only reason for this, but it is not."

The city spends $30,000 a year maintaining Morganetta, who along with a one-eyed old polar bear named Snowball is a survivor of what once was a popular zoo with several hundred animals.

As the zoo faltered in the 1970s because of problems ranging from disease to neighborhood hostility, most of the animals were sold, destroyed or sent away.

Gonzaga College students poke fun at Ralph Nader

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP) — A decade ago, consumer activist Ralph Nader, now an opponent of nuclear energy, gained national attention when he criticized the Chevrolet Corvair in his book "Unsafe At Any Speed."

Now, students at Gonzaga University's Roncalli Hall have presented Nader with a "nuclear-powered Corvair." Mike Reilly, Roncalli resident director, said the 45 residents of the dormitory planned the presentation as a prank.

The conventionally powered car was returned to its owner.

Nader also was presented with title to a year of meals at the dormitory cafeteria, which Reilly said Nader declined.

EASY HOLIDAY TURKEY

Cherish Grandma's tradition without her hard work.

In this day of space exploration and disco dancing, it's nice to know you can still find comfort in the time-tested holiday traditions without all of the work of Grandma's time. The aroma and succulent goodness of whole roast turkey with stuffing still weaves its magic web, drawing family and friends together.

Even though modern technology has complicated our lives in many ways, improved cooking methods and convenient packaged foods make putting together the festive feast easier than ever.

SOME TIPS YOU MAY FIND HELPFUL

Selecting the Turkey — Whole turkeys, ranging in size from six to more than 30 pounds, are available fresh or frozen and may be prebasted. When deciding what size to buy, allow one pound of turkey for each person. This provides generous servings for the holiday meal, as well as welcome leftovers for those special recipes.

Thawing — If turkey is frozen, do not thaw at room temperature. Leave turkey in original bag and use one of the following methods:

- No hurry: Place on tray in refrigerator for three to four days (24 hours for each five pounds of turkey).
- Fastest: Cover with cold water, changing water frequently (1/2 hour per pound of turkey).

Refrigerate or cook turkey as soon as thawed. For maximum eating quality, refreezing uncooked turkey is not recommended.

Preparation for Roasting — Remove plastic wrap from thawed turkey. Remove giblets and neck from the body and neck cavities. To remove the neck, it may be necessary to release the legs from the band of skin or wire hock lock. Rinse the turkey inside and out with cool water, then pat dry with a paper towel or clean cloth. When stuffing the turkey, spoon prepared stuffing loosely into body and neck cavities. Cook extra stuffing separately in a covered casserole for 30 minutes at 350°F. Return legs to hock lock or band of skin or tie loosely. Tuck tips of wings "akimbo" under back of turkey. Neck skin should be skewered to back with a poultry pin or round toothpick to provide a neat appearance at the table.

Preparing the Stuffing — Packaged toasted croutons, available with an already baked-in blend of thyme, rosemary, black pepper, oregano, onion powder and sage make the preparation easy and the stuffing delicious. Follow the stuffing guide below.

Poultry Weight	6 to 8 lbs.	9 to 11 lbs.	12 to 15 lbs.	16 to 19 lbs.	20 lbs. and over
Herb seasoned croutons (7-oz. pkg. 7 cups)	1 pkg.	1-1/2 pkgs.	2 pkgs.	2-1/2 pkgs.	3 pkgs.
Melted margarine or butter	1/2 to 2/3 cup	3/4 to 1 cup	1 to 1-1/4 cups	1-1/4 to 1-1/2 cups	1-1/2 to 2 cups
Hot water or stock	1-1/2 cups	2-1/4 cups	3 cups	3-3/4 cups	4-1/2 cups
For Celery-Onion Stuffing
Finely chopped celery	1/2 cup	1 cup	1 cup	1-1/4 cups	1-1/2 cups
Chopped onions	1/4 cup	1/2 cup	1/2 cup	2/3 cup	3/4 cup

For a basic stuffing, pour herb seasoned croutons into a large mixing bowl. Add melted margarine or butter while tossing gently. Stir lightly while adding hot water or stock. The amount of water may be varied depending on preference for a fluffy or more moist stuffing.

For Celery-Onion Stuffing, cook celery and onions in the melted margarine until tender before mixing with croutons. Individualize the stuffing by adding giblets, oysters, chestnuts, chopped apples or mushrooms.

Spoon prepared stuffing loosely into body and neck cavities of the turkey, and cook any extra stuffing separately in a covered casserole for 30 minutes at 350°F. Continue to prepare turkey for roasting as directed above. To check for stuffing doneness, insert thermometer into stuffing in body cavity. Thermometer should read 165°F.

THREE ROASTING METHODS TO CHOOSE FROM

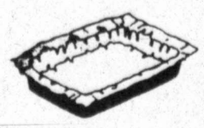
No matter which of the three methods you choose for roasting, aluminum foil and nylon oven cooking bags eliminate much of the tedious effort in preparing the holiday bird. Meat stays moist and flavorful. Cleanup is a snap.

Factors that affect roasting times include variations in (1) ovens, (2) shape of turkeys and (3) degree of thawing. These variations make it important to begin checking for doneness 30 minutes to one hour before the end of the recommended roasting time.

Turkey is done when meat thermometer registers 180°F. to 185°F., thick part of drumstick feels soft when pressed with thumb and forefinger, or drumstick moves easily. Stuffing in a turkey needs to reach 165°F. to be sufficiently cooked.

Let turkey stand at room temperature for 15 to 20 minutes for easier carving.

Foil-Tent Low Temperature Roasting —



Line a shallow roasting pan with heavy duty aluminum foil. Place turkey breast side up on rack in foil-lined pan. If a meat thermometer is used, insert into center of thigh next to body not touching bone.

Place a "tent" of heavy duty aluminum foil loosely over turkey to prevent over-browning. To make tent, tear off a sheet of foil 5 to 10 inches longer than turkey. Crease foil crosswise through center and place over turkey, crimping onto sides of pan to hold in place. Place in non-preheated oven — roast according to chart. Turkey may be basted. Foil tent may be removed during the last half hour for a final browning.

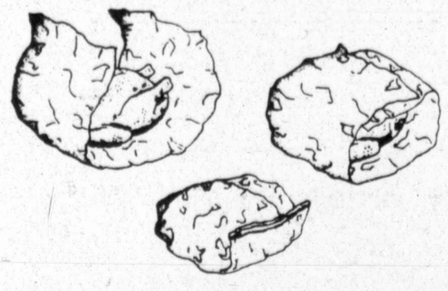
APPROXIMATE ROASTING TIMES FOR FOIL-TENT TURKEY

Non-preheated oven temperature: 325°F.
Internal temperature: 180-185°F.
Stuffing temperature: 165°F.

Weight	Unstuffed	Stuffed
8 to 12 lbs.	3 to 4 hrs.	4 to 5 hrs.
12 to 16 lbs.	3-1/2 to 5 hrs.	4-1/2 to 6 hrs.
16 to 20 lbs.	4-1/2 to 6 hrs.	5-1/2 to 7 hrs.
20 to 24 lbs.	5-1/2 to 6-1/2 hrs.	6-1/2 to 7-1/2 hrs.

A slick trick for removing turkey from the pan: Fold a long strip of heavy duty aluminum foil over and over to make a strong band about three inches wide. Place one or two of these strips in pan, then lay turkey on top of them. Roll or fold ends down close to sides of pan. When turkey is done and ready to be removed from pan, grasp ends of foil band and lift to serving platter. Two strips, one under breast end and the other under thighs, are almost essential for removing 18-25 pound birds.

Fully-Wrapped High Temperature Roasting —



This is the completely "wrapped in foil" method of roasting turkeys at high temperature. It was originally created to save time and to keep birds juicy. There is less evaporation of moisture so more broth for gravy.

Place prepared bird, breast side up, on sheet of heavy duty aluminum foil. (Small turkeys are laid across width of foil; large turkeys, lengthwise.) If necessary, for very large bird, join two lengths of foil using double fold. Pad wing tips, tail and ends of drumsticks with small folds of foil. Bring long sides of foil up, overlapping on breast of bird three inches. Close ends by folding foil up three inches to hold juices. Wrap loosely and do not seal airtight to allow heat circulation inside.

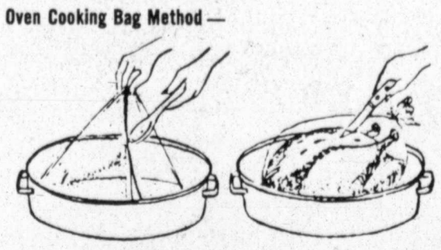
Insert meat thermometer through foil into center of thigh next to body, not touching bone. Place wrapped turkey, breast side up, in a shallow roasting pan. Place in non-preheated oven — roast according to chart. To brown turkey, open and turn back foil 20 minutes before roasting is finished. Continue roasting until meat thermometer reads 180-185°F.

APPROXIMATE TIMES FOR FULLY-WRAPPED TURKEY

Non preheated oven temperature: 450°F.
Internal temperature: 180-185°F.
Stuffing temperature: 165°F.

Weight	Unstuffed	Stuffed
6 to 10 lbs.	1-3/4 to 2 hrs.	2 to 2-1/2 hrs.
10 to 12 lbs.	2 to 2-1/4 hrs.	2-1/2 to 2-3/4 hrs.
12 to 16 lbs.	2-1/4 to 3 hrs.	2-3/4 to 3-1/2 hrs.
16 to 20 lbs.	3 to 3-1/2 hrs.	3-1/2 to 4 hrs.
20 to 24 lbs.	3-1/2 to 4-1/4 hrs.	4 to 4-3/4 hrs.

Oven Cooking Bag Method —



Preheat oven to 350°F. Shake one tablespoon flour in oven cooking bag. Place oven cooking bag in sturdy roasting pan, large enough to contain bag, as it puffs up during cooking. Since poultry tends to stick to cooking surfaces, place a few slices of onion and celery in bottom of bag.

Brush dry surface of prepared turkey with soft butter or margarine. Sprinkle with seasonings. Place turkey inside bag; close bag loosely with tie provided. Make six half-inch slits in top of bag. If using a meat thermometer, insert it through the bag into the center of thigh next to body, not touching bone.

Place in preheated oven — roast according to chart. Be sure that oven cooking bag does not touch oven walls or rack. If meat thermometer is not used, check turkey during last half hour of cooking time.

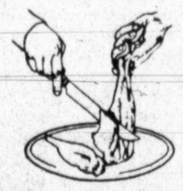
APPROXIMATE TIMES FOR OVEN COOKING BAG METHOD

Preheated oven temperature: 350°F.
Internal temperature: 180-185°F.
Stuffing temperature: 165°F.

Weight	Unstuffed	Stuffed
8 to 12 lbs.	2 to 2-1/2 hrs.	2-1/2 to 3 hrs.
12 to 15 lbs.	2-1/2 to 3 hrs.	3 to 3-1/2 hrs.
15 to 20 lbs.	3 to 3-1/2 hrs.	3-1/2 to 4 hrs.
20 to 24 lbs.	3-1/2 to 4 hrs.	4 to 4-1/2 hrs.

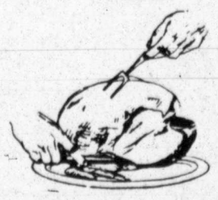
CARVING GUIDE

1. Remove drumstick and thigh — To remove drumstick and thigh, press leg away from body. Joint connecting leg to backbone will oftentimes snap free or may be severed easily with knife point. Cut dark meat completely from body by following body contour carefully with knife.



2. Slicing dark meat — Place drumstick and thigh on separate plate and cut through connecting joint. Both pieces may be individually sliced. Tilt drumstick to convenient angle, slicing towards plate as shown in illustration.

3. Slicing thigh — To slice thigh meat, hold firmly on plate with fork. Cut even slices parallel to the bone.



4. Preparing breast — In preparing breast for easy slicing, place knife parallel and as close to wing as possible. Make deep cut into breast, cutting right to bone. This is your base cut. All breast slices will stop at this horizontal cut.

5. Carving breasts — After base cut, begin to slice breast. Carve downward, ending at base cut. Start each new slice slightly higher up on breast. Keep slices thin and even.

AFTER THE FEAST: Remove stuffing before refrigerating the cooked turkey. Store turkey and dressing separately wrapped in aluminum foil. Use within 2-3 days, or freeze for use within 2-3 months.

Q. — We have wood paneling in the family room in our house. It has never been given any finish since we have been in the house, which is about eight years. My husband said he liked the non-gloss surface of the wood and did not want to put on anything that would make the wood shiny. Now, however, the wood appears dull and lifeless. Can we clean it with something that won't give it a gloss and yet will make it appear lively again?

A. — There are several ways this can be done. The simplest is to buy a liquid that removes grease, grime, smudges and finger marks and brings out the natural beauty of the wood. A product of this type can be purchased in a hardware store, lumber yard, building supply establishment and in many supermarkets. Look on the shelves where waxes and cleaners are located.

Q. — I expect to finish our basement during the winter months. At which point during the job should I call in the electrician?

A. — Follow the old advice of contractors: "Do it when the walls are open." After you have completed the framework, but have not installed the ceiling and walls, make some kind of sketch showing exactly where you want every light, every outlet and every telephone. Then get the electrician. Always lean in the direction of extra lights and extra outlets. It is much less expensive to have them and not use them than to discover months later, as so often happens, that you need additional wiring.

Custody law favoring moms being challenged in courts

CHEYENNE, Okla. (AP) — The section of the state's child custody law favoring mothers is being challenged in Roger Mills County District Court by a Reydon man who wants to keep his young son.

Jeff Yowell was granted split custody of his 3-year-old son, Jeffrey Allen, this past week by District Judge Giles Peterson.

Under the court order, Yowell will have custody for six months, then his former wife, Elizabeth, will have custody for six months. Then a final decision will be made.

Oklahoma law says, "If the child be of tender years, then it should be given to its mother."

The year-long split custody is a trial period to determine the ability of each parent to care for the child.

Dana Archer, Yowell's attorney, said she plans to challenge state law under the 14th Amendment, which guarantees due process of law.

Mrs. Jesse Heath, chairman of the Junior Leaugue theatre committee, is pictured in the final stages of aging through makeup producted by Art Cole, executive director of Midland Community Theatre. Mrs. Heath was "aged" 50 years in a demonstration presented to seventh and eighth grade speech and drama students.

Students tour Theatre Midland

Approximately 300 seventh and eight grade speech and drama students saw the "magical" transformation of a young lady to an old woman in a theatre makeup demonstration by Art Cole at Theatre Midland.

The students were taken on a two-hour tour under the direction of Art Cole, executive director of the Midland Community Theatre, and in cooperation with Midland Indepent School District (MISD) and the Junior league of Midland, Inc.

The new endeavor to introduce beginning speech and drama students to theatre was highly successful, according to Mrs. Jesse Heath, chairman of the league's theatre committee.

Cole demonstrated the effects of makup by using Mrs. Heath as a subject. He totally transformed her into an elderly person while the students viewed the different steps of applying makeup.

Mrs. Jack Fryar, coordinator of fine arts for MISD and speech and drama students assisted Mrs. H. L. Landua Jr., Junior League member, in writing a curriculum which incorporated the goals and objectives for students in theatre study. This curriculum guide was used by the league docents, including Mrs. Steve Betton, Mrs. Dean Wolf, Mrs. Tevis Herd and Mrs. Coley Cowden. They conducted a tour of the entire theatre for the students, and explained theatrical terminology, sound effects and lighting.

In addition to the makeup demonstration, Cole also welcomed the students to the theatre and told the history of theatre in Midland, with emphasis on the importance that the volunteer has played in sustaining the program.

Assisting with the tour were John Michael Warburton, technical director, and Beth Thomas, theatre intern.

Desk and Derrick Club visits Big Bend

Members of the Desk and Derrick Club traveled to Big Bend National Park and the Chisos Mountains on a field trip last weekend.

Forty-six club members made the trip which was led by Dan Kozak, geologist for John L. Cox. Mrs. Kozak accompanied him.

The group stayed overnight at Cavalry Post Motel in Lajitas. This town was visited by Comanche Indian raiding parties into old Mexico during the late 1800's and by Lt. Echols, U.S. Army, in 1860, with his "camel caravan." American troops also occupied the town after the Pearl Harbor attack.

Other points of interest visited by the group were the historic town of TErlingua, also scene of the annual Chili Cookoff; Santa Elena Canyon; Castolon Village, which was an Army post in 1914-20 during Mexican border troubles and is now a general store; Goat Mountain; Chisos Mountain Lodge; Lost Mine Trail; and Panther Junction.

AT WIT'S END

The fashion slip-up

By ERMA BOMBECK

When dresses went above my knees, my slips were too long.

When dresses dropped below my thighs, my slips were too short.

This year was one of those phenomenal years that occur once in a person's lifetime. The length of the dress and the slip was compatible. Do you have any idea what the odds are of having a dress and slip that come out even? The same odds as having your car washed on a sunny day: 10,000 to one.

Then one night my husband said, "What's that white lump oozing out of the slits in your dress?"

"It's my slip," I said.

"It looks terrible."

The simple truth is every skirt and every dress on the racks this year have slits in varying lengths from the knee to the thigh to My Heavens, don't back into a room!

To date, I have not found a way to solve the problem. I have tried doing the Bette Midler Shuffle, where you take steps so small your feet never leave the floor. This eliminates drafts and movement, but takes you 30 minutes to walk across a small room.

I've tried the Handbag Coverup, where you conveniently place your handbag in front of every opening that is exposed, making you as nervous as a woman with chocolate breath at a Weight Watchers meeting.

The Six-Inch Slip has been invaluable to me. It starts at the waist and ends up just above the hips. However, there are two hazards you must consider. If the dress is sheer, you can never appear in a room where there is light, and if the dress is silk, the static from your pantyhose will make you look like a newly-papered powder room.

There are some people who are naive enough to think you can sew the slits together and eliminate the problem. This nonsense usually comes from women whose pantyhose bag at the knee.

I walked into a room the other night and my husband whispered, "What's that lump around your waist?"

"It's my slip rolled up."

"Then what's that white lump oozing out of the slits in your dress?"

"It's my leg."

He was going to ask another question but thought better of it.

Sorority plans Christmas party

A Christmas party for residents of Trinity Towers was planned for Dec. 6 by the Preceptor Alpha Omega chapter of Beta Sigma Phi sorority.

The group met in the home of Joe Beverley, 3527 Stanolind St.

A children's group from Alamo Baptist Church will help entertain with a program of carols and skits at the party. Also planned was a couple's party Dec. 1 in the home of Mary Carrens, 4302 Boulder. This will also include a rush party for new members.

Reports were given on several members who sold poppies for the Veterans of Foreign Wars, a project of all the Beta Sigma Phi sororities in Midland.

Nothing else feels like real gold

DEAR ABBY

Won't stand for sitting

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I have been a grandmother since I was 37. I'm 40 now, and my daughter-in-law and I have a big difference of opinion about what a grandmother is supposed to do.

I have told my daughter-in-law and my son that from now on I will not baby-sit for free while they go out and have a good time. I will baby-sit in an emergency, or if my daughter-in-law has a doctor's appointment, but for no other reason will I sit for free. If they have to pay me like they pay any other sitter, they won't just dump the baby on me and run, or phone me up to come over and watch the baby for "a few minutes" which always seem to run to three or four hours. Don't get me wrong, Abby. I love my grandchild, but I can't make my daughter-in-law realize that grandmothers were not put on earth to take care of their grandchildren.

I have my son, his wife and the baby over every Sunday for dinner and two or three times during the week, but I don't want the full responsibility of looking after the baby while the parents are out having fun. Am I wrong? How do other grandmothers feel? By the way, Abby, if you're a grandmother, how do you handle the sitting problem?—NO SITTER

DEAR NO SITTER: I'm a grandmother with no sitter problem because my grandchildren live 2,000 miles away. But if I lived in the same city I would have to draw straws with the other grandmother for the privilege of sitting. She loves it. Bless her.

DEAR ABBY: Please, please tell teenagers that they can become pregnant without "going all the way." That is what happened to me.

My boyfriend of two years and I were very close, but we never actually went all the way. Nevertheless, I was seven months pregnant when I got married although I was still a virgin. My doctor even said so.

I love my husband and my son, but I am sorry I became pregnant when I did. It stood in the way of my finishing college.—LEARNED THE HARD WAY

DEAR LEARNED: I have stated that fact in my column many times, but it bears repeating. Perhaps your experience will be more effective than my warning. I hope so.

DEAR ABBY: I am writing in response to a letter signed READY TO KILL — the young woman who was at the end of her patience with a neighbor's barking dog.

If she lives in Hawaii, she can call the Hawaiian Human Society. Their staff will tape-record the continuous barking, and with that evidence, confront the owner of the dog. Humane Society staff will then work with the dog owner to correct the dog's behavior. They continue to monitor the situation and, if the barking persists, the Humane Society contacts the local police, who are empowered to issue a summons to the owner. (And they DO issue such summonses.)

I would be surprised if other major cities did not have such a noise-abatement program sponsored by the local Humane Society.—CHERLY N. IN HONOLULU

DEAR CHERLY: If other communities do not have such a program, they should have! It's good to know that in Hawaii they don't have to take the matter of barking dogs into their own lovely hula hands.

DEAR ABBY: I fell hard for a man I work with. I'll call him Mel. Mel is married. I'm single. We rendezvoused during long lunch hours, and any evenings he could get away.

Mel's old lady got wind of our romance, so he said we had to cool it for a while.

Well, his old lady is no dummy. She said as long as we worked together she wouldn't feel comfortable. She even threatened to go to the boss, so I agreed to find another job.

I loved my job, but I'm the one who had to quit. Why?—NAMELESS NINNY

DEAR NINNY: Because you agreed to. (P.S. There's a lesson to be learned here. Never fish off the company dock!)

Wedding bells in your future? Whether your lifestyle is bridal gown or blue jeans, Abby lays it all out for you in her booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding." Send $1 and a long, stamped (28 cents) self-addressed envelope to Abby: in care of this newspaper.

How Does One Clean A Chimney?
VERY CAREFULLY
Why does one clean a chimney? There are a number of reasons but mainly they get dirty. When chimneys are dirty, the fire doesn't burn well. Dirty chimneys sometimes emit offensive odors. When dirty the damper cannot close properly, which causes a loss of heat in the winter and air conditioning in the summer. And last but not least, when chimneys are dirty they sometimes catch on fire (which immediately causes an emergency and a disaster).
When should a chimney be cleaned? When it is not in use of course-you can't clean one with a fire in it. If you wish to be completely safe, have your chimney cleaned after 3 to 3½ cords of wood is burned in it.

Hat, hairdo say 'I do' for you

By PATSY GORDON
Lifestyle Writer

The 1979 holidays soon will be in full swing — a time of special parties where special clothes will be in order.

Gala events can be made into real glamour occasions with the new marriage of hat and hair for evening dressup.

Enchanting small hats with new coordinated hairdos give an exciting dimension to after dark glamour for the holiday season.

Women can face the music with the "look at me" mood that abounds in the new fashion excitement.

Hairdos by Ogilvie and hats designed by Frank Olive are in the forefront of the trend and offer suggestions for that individual chic.

The youthful, cascading pony tail has a night life of its own in tandem with the forward thrust satin and jewelled cuff cap.

A gentle after dark mood is mirrored in this hairdo swept up into large side rolls while the back is fashioned into a light, high twist. The gold brimmed tear-drop cap is gently nestled between the high rolls.

This is a real glamour occasion look. A softly flowing upsweep hairdo is balanced at the other side with a rakishly angled feathered evening cap.

Knowledge of garment finish important

COLLEGE STATION — Know about garment or fabric "finishes" — since they affect performance and appearance, says a clothing specialist.

ANTISTATIC finishes reduce clinging, and they are lost after repeated laundering. They are mainly used on lingerie and sleepwear.

ANTISEPTIC finishes resist bacteria and prevent damage and decay from perspiration.

They are permanent and often are found on socks, underwear, shoes — and luggage.

FLAME-RESISTANT finishes reduce flammability — but they don't prevent dangers and risks of fire completely.

Most are on children's clothing and sleepwear.

Drawbacks include stiffening fabric, and a reduction of the fabric's strength, absorbency and abrasion resistance.

Home furnishings fashion

By The AP

If you've got a sofa that's big and squashy with rounded, oversize arms and a curvaceous, arched back, prepare to enjoy being at the height of home furnishings fashion.

Judging by the new, upholstered furniture displayed at North Carolina's national furniture market in October, a large number of such sofas and chairs should soon be appearing in retail stores.

At the home furnishings market, overscaled sofas and chairs, much softer than in the past, shared top billing with new modular-seating groups. Manufacturers plainly had functionality and multiple purpose uses on their minds as they introduced to retailers a variety of innovative seating systems. Sofas that also feature table surfaces as part of the design were shown by several manufacturers.

At Selig Mfg. Co., for example, designer Cindi Mufson created a modular group that includes pie-shaped, upholstered tables as part of the seating. The slender wedge-shaped tables blend in with the seats, but offer a convenient surface exactly where it is needed.

At Pearson Co., a division of Lane, a traditional sofa was shown with a fold-down shelf at each end. When upright, the shelves provide surfaces that function as end tables. Another version of the sofa has three collapsible shelves at the rear of the sofa. The shelves are folded out of the way when not needed.

A trade newspaper noted that more manufacturers are offering sleep sofa options than in the past. In some cases, manufacturers have made it possible to obtain any sofa in their line as a sleep sofa.

One such is Stratford Furniture which showed for the first time a sectional seating group with a twin bed in one section and a double bed in another.

Each year, fabrics on new sofas seem to become more attractive. This market was no exception.

Rumors circulate about The Upper Crust

Have you heard all the rumors about The Upper Crust? Dinner for two will cost you $100. Men have to wear a coat and tie and women can't wear pantsuits. It takes three weeks to get a reservation. A cup of coffee is $2.75. You can't have a drink in the lounge unless you eat dinner too. They are closed one day a week, but no one is sure which one.

Does that sound too rich for your blood? Well, as gossip goes, it is all a lot of exaggeration...

The only $100 ever spent by a twosome at dinner included an $80 bottle of wine. The Upper Crust is only slightly more expensive than the local steak places. Two people can have a fantastic dinner with wine for under $30. Lunch may run you $6 a person (but Margueritas and Bloody Marys are 50¢ at lunch and there is a $3.75 daily special.)

As far as dress code, you would look out of place in a T-shirt, worn out jeans and thongs. But women can and do wear nice jeans and pantsuits. Men DO NOT have to wear coats or ties.

If you want to call for a reservation because you have a party of 5 or more, or need a birthday cake, or want to make sure and avoid any wait, by all means, call to arrange it. But two ladies at lunch or two couples at dinner can usually be seated within a very short time without a reservation.

A cup of coffee is 60¢ with unlimited refills and real cream. Yes, there is an Upper Crust Coffee for $2.75. It has 2 oz. of liquer in it, has whipped cream on top, and refills are $2.75.

There is entertainment in the lounge Thursday, Friday and Saturday nights. And there is a 2 for 1 Happy Hour seven days a week from 4 to 7 P.M.

Since the Upper Crust is open seven days a week for lunch and dinner, you don't have to wonder when they are closed. Lunch on Sunday is called Brunch and has some specialty breakfast items plus champagne for 75¢ a glass.

The Upper Crust is the most comfortably elegant place to dine in Midland-Odessa. The service is very attentive. Once you arrive you will forget the time, relax and enjoy the best of food prepared by Walter Jaeger (a real Swiss chef) and his sous chef, David Leding. Next time you eat out, try The Upper Crust...in casual dress. The Upper Crust is an affordably elegant restaurant where you will be treated like a guest instead of a customer.

SUPER HANDYMAN

'Mothball' your mower

By AL CARRELL

If you've had about all the lawn mowing you can enjoy for this year, you should "mothball" the power mower until next spring. In fact, if you'll take a few steps right now, the old mower may even be willing to start next year. If you don't, you may find that it will have to have some expensive repairs before it will trim your crabgrass.

One mistake many people make is to leave fuel in the tank over the winter. The gasoline will evaporate and leave gummy desposits in the tank. Next spring, the new gasoline will carry these deposits into the carburetor to clog up the works. The best way to remove fuel is to run the mower engine until it's all burned. Remember though, you never want to go off and leave a running mower unattended even if it's about to run out of gas. After it sputters to a stop, there may still be a small amount of fuel in the tank. Wrap a lint-free cloth around a broom handle and stick it into the tank to absorb any traces that are left. Be sure you leave plenty of the cloth up out of the tank to hold to so you don't lose it in there.

While the engine is still hot from running, drain the oil if your mower is the 4-cycle type that has a crankcase. Don't rush this draining process because the last traces that will drain will possibly be the dirt or sludge in the oil. Besides, the parts will be too hot to work with for a while. Be sure the mower is positioned so the drain is at the lowest possible point for the most complete drainage.

When the draining is done and the machine is cooled down, clean it completely. The housing underneath a rotary mower can be very clogged with compacted dirt and clippings. Now even though you know there's no fuel left in the mower, disconnect the spark plug wire and make sure there's no possible contact. You still want to make sure there can't be an accidental start from your turning the blade.

Turn the mower on its side to clean the housing. Be sure it's not resting on any of its flimsier parts. Light deposits can be hosed away. The heavier messes will need to be scraped with a putty knife, and then wire brushed. While you're there, inspect the blade for sharpness, nicks or other damage. Any repair or maintenance is easier done now when there are no vital fluids in the mower than when it's filled up. After you're through with the underneath, spray the entire surface under there with a spray lube.

Next clean the rest of the parts. This includes the top of the housing and the exterior of the engine with particular attention paid to the fins up there. These are very important to the cooling of the engine in operation. Wrap a rag around a large screwdriver tip to get any sludge from between the fins.

Clean the air filter if it's the foam type. Wash it thoroughly in a detergent and water solution. Then rinse it completely and squeeze it dry. When it's completely clean, it should be saturated with engine oil. Squeeze it to distribute the oil throughout the filter, and also to remove any excess. If you have another type filter, replace it with a new one if it's dirty.

Remove and check the spark plug. I always put in a new one at the beginning of each season so I skip that step. Some people clean and gap their plugs rather than replace them and get several years out of them. While the plug is out, put about two tablespoons of engine oil into the spark plug hole. Now turn over the engine four or five times so the oil will be distributed inside. This will protect the insides against corrosion.

Everything else that moves could probably take a shot of lubrication. This includes the wheels, control levers and whatever else could rust or corrode. With all this done, you're ready to refill the crankcase with new oil if your mower is that type.

To store the mower, it's a good idea to put it up on blocks so the weight won't flatten out the tires. Then cover it with an old bed sheet to keep dirt and dust off. Some people use a plastic sheet to cover the mower, but this can trap moisture which can do some damage. If you take care of your mower now, it'll be ready to take care of the jungle next year without a trip to the mower repair hospital.

NEWCOMER'S CORNER

By MARILYN DYER

'Tis the season! Some people spend the entire year preparing for Christmas, but three weeks will do it for me. You know the type I mean—they're the ones in the tourist gift shops looking for the perfect gift for Aunt Martha while the rest of their family are awestruck at the majesty of Niagara Falls or the Grand Canyon.

They are the ones who sew, paint and construct countless homemade wonders and salt them away for the big day. They take the kids to the "North Pole or Santa Claus Land USA" in July to see jolly old St. Nick and his elves at the workshop in ninety degree temperatures.

SOME TIME in October, their fruit cake binge starts, and they invest a king's ransom in candied fruit and nuts to make cakes as gifts for their friends — even if they hate the stuff. By Thanksgiving time, there are at least 18 dozen cookies in their freezers and their shopping is completed.

I tried one year—about 20 years ago— to do the shopping and cookie baking in November, and by December, I felt I had already had it. When the bells started to ring on the street corners and the decorations appeared and the tinny-sounding versions of "Rudolph the Red-nosed Reindeer" were heard in all the five and ten cent stores, I began to get the spirit and went out and bought everyone another gift. Then, I baked cookies at the last minute to replenish the dwindling frozen supply.

THE ONE THING I do early is the Christmas cards because I make ours, and that takes time, especially if ideas aren't plentiful. People who move often, have an ever-enlarging list and appeciate hearing from friends in former locations so very much.

I try to include a little, hand-written message, but promise NEVER to send a typewritten epistle telling who came and went at our house each month, how smart our kids are and which one just went into braces, where we found good motels on our vacation or what new furniture, appliances or cars we bought this year.

I also promise not to tell my friends in Minesota, Chicago, Ohio or Pennsylvania how warm it is here in Texas, and how sorry I am for them—just "Merry Christmas Y'awl."

House against full combat role for women

WASHINGTON (AP) — A House subcommittee holding hearings on the role of women in the military is solidly against allowing women to fight in combat situations.

Interviews with six of the eight members of the House military personnel subcommittee found only one who favors a full combat role for women.

"If women want equality, they should be equal in everything," said Delegate Antonio Borja Won Pat, D-Guam, who has a vote on the subcommittee although he has no vote in Congress. "I have two daughters in the military."

The majority opposed the idea — and also indicated opposition to a Carter administration proposal that Congress repeal Navy and Air Force bans against women serving in combat.

They said they wanted to hear more about that proposal, however.

Conversation pieces to live with

WICHITA, Kan. (AP) — Even as a kid, Frank Jensen saw beauty in the old gears, sockets and wheels that lay rusting on his father's Kansas farm.

Now he's preserving those antiques in butcher-block tables, magazine racks and even hat stands.

Jensen,46, describes his nostalgic creations as "conversation pieces you can live with."

For 18 months, the high school English teacher has spent his free Saturdays traveling to farm auctions. He buys farm machinery and takes it apart. Then he welds, sandblasts and paints. Later he affixes the iron to reclaimed oak.

"This type of furniture has the warmth you can stand in your living room," he says.

A cigar stub clenched in his teeth and heavy pea jacket on his back, Jensen sifts through a pile of machinery he has dumped in his backyard in Wichita. He refuses to see it as junk metal. To him, it's unfinished furniture.

"Take this wheel," he says, picking up a rusting hunk of iron. "There are all sorts of beautiful things like this back here."

Corn binders, cultivators, and plows are among his ample stock.

"I'm just not quite sure how to use some of them yet," he says. "But I'll find a way."

He has managed to make 40 pieces, some of which he sold during a recent weekend open house. The prices ranged from $12 for a tiny ashtray stand to $1,200 for a butcher-block table.

The raw material for his furniture is inexpensive and easy to find on farms in the Midwest. But the hours spent shopping at auctions, dreaming up designs and shaping the metal and wood boosts the price of the finished version.

Jensen's furniture may be the first — and last — of its kind.

Women complain government pays too little attention to action

Copley News Service

WASHINGTON--Carter administration reaction to women's rights proposals made two years ago at the national women's conference in Houston has been "wholly inadequate," a coalition of women's organizations charged last week.

Congress, state and local governments also were criticized for their lack of attention to the "plan of action," a document of 165 proposals.

To counter the lack of progress, the coalition of 80 national women's organizations, called the Continuing Committee of the National Women's Conference, said it would push political candidates to take stands on women's issues and attempt to get women's rights put into the 1980 platforms of the political parties.

"We will demand that the candidates take action on the (Houston) plan during the 1980 campaign. Words are not enough," stated former New York Rep. Bella Abzug, who headed the Houston conference in 1977.

The plan of action ranges from supporting ratification of the Equal Rights Amendment to support of federal funding of abortions and improving social and health care services to elderly women.

The continuing committee will attempt to set up debates on women's issues not only for presidential candidates but also for candidates in congressional and state races.

Other actions include holding seminars across the country to educate women on how to run as delegates for the political conventions. Both parties hope to have a 50 percent representation of women delegates.

The continuing committee will not support a particular political candidate, said its co-chair Anne B. Turpeau.

Forty organizations, or only half of the continuing committee's membership organizations representing nine million American women, signed the committee's campaign strategy platform. Those that signed included both political parties, the American Association of University Women, the League of Women Voters and the Girl Scouts.

Turpeau said she expected most of the 80 organization to back the campaign strategy once it is given more time to circulate.

Turpeau said the "women's movement is growing and not diminishing," but characterized the White House and Congress' action on the Houston proposals to improve the status of women as being "wholy inadequate."

She criticized the Carter administration for inadequately funding its women's programs, mainly the presidential advisory Committee for Women and the interdepartmental Task Force on Women.

The advisory committee, headed by Lynda Bird Robb, suffers "from a lack of resources" and no budget, and the Task Force has yet to come forth with any initiatives, she complained.

"There have been few federal actions in the last two years which deal with the economic survival of women," Turpeau stated.

She threw barbs at Congress as well. Last year, Turpeau said, Congress passed only one bill —the pregnancy benefits package—which was favorable to women.

In 1978, its only action was to extend the ratification deadline of the Equal Rights Amendment and to include displaced homemakers in employment training programs.

"A major setback has been the failure of Congress to remove veterans' preference in federal jobs. And although there has been a dramatic increase in the numbers of employed women with small children, there has been no significant new legislation to improve the quality or quantity of child care in America," Turpeau contended.

She also criticized Congress for "eroding the principle of motherhood by choice," with its ban against federal funding of abortions.

On the positive side, Turpeau praised the Carter administration for increasing Small Business Administration loans to women, and for setting up offices within the department of Health and Welfare on domestic violence and adolescent pregnancy.

Vote on windfall tax issue symbolic

By HELEN DEWAR
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The oil industry lost a first test vote on the windfall profits tax Friday as the Senate began what promises to be lengthy debate on the controversial tax proposal.

By a vote of 53 to 32, the Senate rejected a surprise move by oil-state senators to reduce the levy that the House has voted to impose on the so-called windfall profits that oil companies will reap from the administration's decontrol of oil prices.

The vote was largely symbolic because it would not affect the Senate Finance Committee's already scaled-down version of the tax, which, along with scores of amendments, is currently pending before the Senate.

But it was an early testing of the waters that appeared to give little encouragement to those who would either strengthen or weaken the Finance Committee bill, which Chairman Russell B. Long, D-La., is attempting to sell to the Senate as a "balanced" compromise.

The committee's bill would recapture an estimated $138 billion of the nearly $1 trillion that oil companies are expected to receive from decontrol over the next 10 years, while the House bill would take in about $277 billion. The proposal the Senate rejected Friday would have trimmed the House bill's anticipated revenues to about $240 billion.

Friday's vote also gave oil-state lawmakers a chance to twit the Carter administration, which is urging the Senate to increase the bite of its proposed tax to bring it more inline with the House bill.

In proposing to cut the House-approved tax levy from 60 percent to 50 percent on most categories of oil, Sen. David L. Boren, D-Okla., reminded the Senate that the administration's initial proposal was for a 50 percent levy.

"The president was right then," said Boren. "It (the 50 percent proposal) makes even more sense today. It's an opportunity," he added to the amusement of his colleagues, "to support the president of the United States."

Sen. Howard M. Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, one of the Senate's strongest critics of oil price decontrol and of the watered-down Senate measure, saw another possible motive behind the vote. It gave wavering senators a chance to "make a record against being too good to the oil companies" by voting against the Boren proposal and then supporting the Finance Committee's bill.

For Long, an oil-state senator who supported Boren, the vote also showed that there are those who would reduce the tax as well as those who would increase it — all the better for the committee bill's reputation as a compromise.

In opening arguments on behalf of the committee proposal, Long characterized the proposal as "the largest tax increase ever levied on a single American industry." At the same time he said it was a "compromise between revenue considerations and the need to provide the proper production incentives" for the oil industry.

Along the same lines, Sen. William V. Roth, R-Del., a Finance Committee backer of the bill, described it as a compromise "between those who would want to kick the hell out of Big Oil and those who want to get in bed with Big Oil."

On the other hand, Metzenbaum said the central issue should be Carter's decision to decontrol oil prices, which he described as "by far the biggest giveaway in American history" and a probable disincentive to expand oil production because companies stand to rake in more profits by waiting until the tax phases out. Unlike the House bill, the Senate proposal would phase out the tax over a number of years.

Boren characterized his proposal as a clear-cut choice between increasing oil production or increasing taxes. Even if his approach were followed, said Boren, the tax would still be "larger than any tax increase in history."

O'Neill slated for SPE talk

The Midland Operations Study Group of the Permian Basin Section of the Society of Petroleum Engineers of AIME will hold a luncheon meeting at 11:30 a.m. Monday in the American Legion Hall, 501 Airpark Road, Midland.

The speaker will be Richard O'Neill, marketing manager, Domestic Oil Well Systems, for TRW Reda Pump Co., Bartlesville, Okla.

He joined TRW Reda in 1970 as district applications engineer at Casper, Wyo. He was appointed manager of Domestic Oil Well Systems in the Bartlesville office in 1976.

He currently is in charge of sales for Reda's oilfield equipment in the United States.

His topic will be "Application of Submergible Pumps in The Permian Basin."

Colombia strike finals

HOUSTON — Houston Oil & Minerals of Colombia has announced the completion of its No. 2 Cano Garza as an oil discovery in the Llanos Basin of Colombia.

The discovery is northeast of Villavicencio in the Casanarea area. On production test, the well flowed at a cumulative rate of 850 barrels of 33-gravity oil per day from perforatied intervals at 9,431-9,441 feet and 9,458-9,468 feet.

Plans are underway to re-enter and completed the No. 1 Cano Garza which was drilled earlier this year but was not completed due to mechanical difficulties. The No. 1 is 3,000 feet southwest of No. 2.

The association contract area covering 1.3 million acres is held by Elf Aquitaine as operator, 36.5 percent; Houston Oil & Minerals of Colombia, 36 percent, and Louisiana Land and Exploration Co., 37.5 percent. Ecopetrol, the government-owned oil company, has the option to exercise its right to a 50 percent working interet and to join in field development.

Underwood new president

William C. "Bill" Underwood was recently elected president and chief executive officer of Texas Universal Petroleum Co., with corporate headquarters at 1250 Gilbrater Savings Building, Midland.

Underwood is president and manager at Wm. Underwood Inc., devoted to oil, real estate and ranching and will retain his position in that firm.

F. E. Leaseburg

Leaseburg promoted

Floyd E. Leaseburg II has been promoted by Exxon Co., U.S.A. to division engineering manager and transfered from the South Texas Division at Kingsville, to Midland.

He replaces Charles E. Fields who has been transferred to the Pensacola, Fla., District, Southeastern Division, as district manager.

He is a member of the Society of Petroleum Engineers of AIME and the American Petroleum Institute.

Rial reports revenues

Rial Oil Co. announced financial results for its first quarter ending September 30, 1979.

Net income was $1,125,837, or $.36 per share, on revenues of $5,968,338. Comparable figures for the first quarter of the previous fiscal year were net income of $1,034,665, or $.40 per share, on revenues of $5,871,378.

The company indicateed that, as expected, earnings growth has been slightly slowed during the first quarter due to a continuing increase in the company's percentage participation in wells that it drills and operates and a downturn in the contract drilling business during a portion of the first quarter.

It is anticipated that increased oil and gas sales that will accure to the company from its higher percentage interest as additional wells begin producing will have a favorable impact on the company's earnings by fiscal year end.

The combined effect o higher oil and gas prices and increased production has already led to a near doubling of oil and gas sales over the first quarter of last year from $969,000 to $1,908,000.

SEPM slates Tuesday meet

Global petroleum industry faces challenge, opportunity

TULSA, Okla. — The global oil and gas industry, supplier of more than 70 percent of the world's energy, is about to enter a decade of unprecedented challenge and opportunity, reports the Oil & Gas Journal.

During the next 10 years, non-Communist energy demand will continue to rise, if only at half the pre-embargo rate.

Depsite the slowing effects of conservation and sluggish economies, staggered by a 70 percent increase in oil prices this year, energy consumption is forecast to grow by three to three and one-half percent a year in non-Communist countries as a group and one and one-half to two percent in the U.S., the weekly business magazine reports.

Nevertheless, energy supply will have to strain to keep pace with even this more modest growth in demand.

Production of crude oil will be restrained by mounting reluctance of key members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries to expand production.

If OPEC flow plateaus, and if significant new supplies aren't brought on production elsewhere, non-Communist crude output could peak during the 1980s — as early as 1985, according to some projections. In face, there are warnings from British Petroleum Corp. and the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency of even earlier peaks.

ON TOP OF this, major importers will soon have to compete with Communist nations for a portion of non-Communist supply. The Soviet bloc, a net exporter of one million barrels a day, is expected to become an inporter early in the decade.

The U.S.S.R. disputes CIA predictions that its production will peak this year or next. But the Soviets have notified eartern European customers that any increased demand must be met from other sources.

The Journal reports that the 1980s will be pivotal decade for the U.S. petroleum industry.

That's a consensus of industry leaders facing a host of uncertainties as they lay plans to cope with persistent oil-supply problems.

Foremost among the uncertainties are government policies and how much foreign oil will be available.

Industry executives fear that U.S. government actions on prices and taxes won't yeild sufficient capital for the massive buildup in exploration and development required to boost domestic oil and gas production — or even to arrest the decline.

THE TASK FACING the U.S. industry in the 1980s is a monumental one indeed. Most forecasts for the coming decade, including those by the government, assume domestic production of oil and gas at about present levels. But that alone would be a tremendous accomplishment.

The U.S. currently is producing all-out at the rate of some three billion barrels of oil and 20 trillion cubic feet of gas annually. If production is to be maintained at these levels, the U.S. during the next decade would produce roughly 30 billion barrels of oil and 200 trillion cubic feet of gas. Those volumes exceed present U.S. reserves of oil (27.8 billion barrels as of Jan. 1, 1979) and equal present gas reserves (200.3 trillion cubic feet).

Thus, to hold production at current levels until 1990, the industry will have to find and develop reserves in this one decade at least to total current proved reserves of oil and gas.

Assuming a constant for reserves added per well drilled, U.S. operators would have to drill about twice as many wells as they are now drilling to add reserves of this magnitude. That would be nearly 100,000 wells a year. The U.S. industry drilled 48,513 wells in 1978. Reserves meanwhile dropped 1.7 billion for oil and eight trillion cubic feet of gas.

Reserves added replaced less than half the domestic oil produced and three-fifths of the gas.

The Journal says the U.S. is awash in natural resources to support a synthetic fuels industry which almost certainly will be born as a commercial enterprise during the 1980s.

THE OIL INDUSTRY in general is solidly behind development of these resources to help reduce the nation's rising rate of dependence on energy imports.

But oilmen virtually to a man seriously doubt that U.S. synfuel resources can fulfill the role President Carter has assigned to them: producing the equivalent of 2.5 million barrels a day of oil by 1990. There simply are too many obstacles — extremely high costs, pioneering technology, and institutional barriers such as stringent environmental rules.

Uppermost among the nation's treasure of alternate energy sources are coal gasification/liquification, oil shale, and tar sands. Also available, for gas production, are geopressured brine, coal seams, eastern Devonian shale, and western tight sands. And renewable sources include things such as biomass conversion and solar power, the Journal points out.

Together they make up a formidable array of resources that in theory could fuel the U.S. economy for hundreds of years.

Meanwhile, can coal, America's most abundant fossil fuel, achieve the big production goal assigned to it in Carter's energy strategy for the decade?

Probably not, say coal executives.

NOT SUPRISINGLY, they blame government policies and regulations for the roadblocks thrown up to any big increase in coal production and consumption during the decade ahead, the Journal reports.

The upshot is that coal won't be able to carry a huge added burden in the U.S. energy supply mix. And that means continued supply pressure on the nation's dominant energy sources — oil and gas.

Exploring alternatives, this week's Journal says that nuclear power holds the promise of helping to fuel a much larger share of the U.S. industrial machine.

And it could do so safely depsite the vigorous — sometimes violent — objections of environmentalists. Most industry energy analysts agree on those points.

But they also agree that environmental and safety protests amount to an almost insurmountable roadblock to big increases in the amount of nuclear power the U.S. will be able to tap during the 1980s.

Oil, banking industries alike in numerous ways

By MAX B. SKELTON
AP Oil Writer

HOUSTON (AP) — Robert C. Thompson says the petroleum and banking industries are quite different in makeup but share a number of similar characteristics.

Thompson, Shell Oil Co. vice president for finance, recently told a group of Indiana bankers products of both industries are more expensive, in current dollar terms, than at any time in modern history.

"Your product, in interest rate terms, still is cheap if inflation is appropriately considered (and) it's also reasonably priced when your cost of money is considered," he said.

"My industry's product, energy, also reflects good value. A substantial share of domestic crude oil and natural gas is sold today at prices below replacement costs."

Further, Thompson added, the prices for petroleum products such as motor gasoline, jet fuel and heating oil do not fully reflect the cost of foreign crude purchases made to supplement domestic sources, even when these costs are averaged with those of price-controlled domestic crude.

"Neither of us seems to be able to explain these basic facts of our respective businesses to the public's satisfaction," he said.

"Many view your interest rates and our product prices as root causes of inflation."

Thompson said most people take inflation very seriously, very personally.

"The erosion of a dollar's purchasing power threatens security, thwarts an individual's plans and hopes for today and tomorrow, frustration builds, targets are sought," he said.

"And, because people tend to personalize economic phenomena, you and I often become 'the bad guys,' personifications of inflation and its disastrous effects."

Thompson said banks and the oil industry get a good bit of 'guidance' from state and federal government.

"While we both operate in a highly competitive environment characterized by a lack of concentration, our occasional joint venture business activities sometimes send an eager bureaucrat on a wild goose chase seeking evidence of hanky-panky," he said.

"Usually, he finds none. But our acquittal often feels like hollow victory."

He added "It seems many just don't trust us to make appropriate free market judgments on resource allocation to fulfill the public's demand and need."

"A frequent result: efficient operators are required, by mandate, to subsidize inefficient operators, and the bigger we are, the more our business activities are scrutinized, in micro detail, by government auditors and examiners," he said.

"Yet, our published operating and financial reports are viewed with skepticism and disbelief."

Thompson said both industries also make money.

"We have to," he said. "Our ability to serve our customers depends on our financial well-being. The track record of both our industries is one of sustained capital growth highly dependent on a satisfactory level of earnings sufficient to provide a direct source of reinvestment capital and to provide a capital structure enabling us to compete for outside capital."

Thompson said both industries have found it necessary to supplement retained earnings with outside capital.

"But, while people may not think 'profit' is a dirty word, many do question the level of our profits," he said.

"They fail to realize that profit growth in current dollar terms often is no improvement in return on capital employed."

He said both industries are vital, essential parts of the private sector business community.

"Both of us are committed to the private enterprise system," he said. "Because of this, we share a responsibility to state the reasons of our beliefs clearly, unequivocally, and in a language people can understand. If we do not, we have no one to blame but ourselves if our businesses and our country's economic system are attacked and degraded."

Thompson said the climate of distrust and doubt must be changed if the nation is to solve its current energy and economic problems with minimal discomfort and dislocation.

Petroleum imports show increase first six months

WASHINGTON — Total gross petroleum imports (crude oil plus products) for the first six months of the year averaged 8,143,000 barrels per day, the American Petroleum Institute estimated reported. Net imports (total imports minus exports) for the same period averaged 7,730,000 barrels per day.

According to the API's Monthly Statistical Report, total gross imports for the first six months were 4.6 percent higher than the 7,788,000 barrels per day in the comparable period of 1978 and total net imports were 3.2 percent higher than the 7,490,000 barrels per day in the first six months of last year. However, the API said, "crude imports in June were still below required levels."

As a result of this shortfall, the API said, total domestic deliveries of gasoline for the first six months averaged 7,094,000 barrels per day, 2.6 percent less than the 7,281,000 barrels per day delivered during the January-June period last year. The decline in June was even pronounced. During the month gasoline deliveries from primary storage averaged 7,153,000 barrels per day — 9.7 percent less than the 7,917,000 barrels per day delivered in June 1978.

The Report noted that "Replenishment of depleted inventories continued in June with the addition of about 34 million barrels to total stocks." Despite this increase total stocks at the end of June stood at 1,132,200,000 barrels, tow percent lower than the 1,155,100,000 level of June 30, 1978. Crude oil stocks were 0.9 percent lower and distillate fuel oil stocks (home heating oil and diesel fuel) were 8.9 percent lower.

"For the first time in three months," the Report said, "gasoline inventories edged into the Department of Energy's projected normal range." On June 30 gasoline inventories stood at 231.9 million barrels — 5.6 percent higher than the 219.7 million level of June 30, 1978. However, according to the Report, "gasoline stocks are still at least 10 million barrels less than normal and almost 25 million barrels less than in June 1977."

A slight decline in domestic crude production for the first six months was reported by the API. For the January-June period, domestic crude production averaged 8,559,000 barrels per day — one percent less than the 8,646,000 barrels per day average of the first six months last year. The Institute also repoted that domestic crude production declined 4.2 percent in June from 8,822,000 barrels per day last year to 8,448,000 barrels per day. About half of this reduction was attributed to a two and one-half day disruption of the Alyeska pipeline and a "concomitant production decrease for the month of about 100,000 barrels per day."

Basin rotary rig count continues upward swing

As drilling activity in the Permian Basin of West Texas and Southeast New Mexico continues to climb, another 1979 record was set in the two-state area as Reed Rock Bit Co. reported 309 rigs making hole.

Last week the tally showed 308 rigs going and a year ago at this time the Reed survey counted only 265 rigs.

Lea County, N.M., lead the survey again this week as 44 operations were spotted going. The previous count was 39.

Eddy County kept second place on the survey, having lost four units from the last count, reporting 28 operations.

Pecos County remained the West Texas leader in drilling activity with 22 active rigs. The previous count showed 21.

Andrews and Ward counties each reported 16 rigs going. Andrews decreased activity by three from the last count, while Ward kept its same tally of 16.

Crockett County reported a gain of two and 12 rigs, while Hockley and Howard counties each reported 10. Gaines County picked up one unit as nine were spotted making hole.

Complete drilling activity on the Reed survey is listed in the table below.

Bill would curb FTC's powers

WASHINGTON (AP) — An advertisement offering Florida land at $2,500 an acre is literally true. What it fails to say is that the land is under water.

The Federal Trade Commission, which now has the responsibility for preventing unfair advertising, says it would be powerless to act in such a typical case under a pending Senate bill.

"Bait-and-switch" advertising, another staple for FTC cases for many years, could also be outside the agency's authority under the bill, the commissioners said.

In "bait-and-switch" schemes, consumers are lured into a store by advertising offering a super bargain. Once there, they are urged to buy something different, normally a more expensive item.

The 31-page letter signed by all five commissioners was the first detailed response from the agency to a bill introduced last week by Sen. Wendell H. Ford, D-Ky., chairman of the Commerce consumer subcommittee that has oversight jurisdiction over the FTC.

The FTC response came the same day Stuart Eizenstat, President Carter's domestic policy assistant, expressed similar sentiments in a separate letter to Ford.

Both letters praised Ford proposals to make the FTC conform to procedural steps recommended by Carter. However, both also raised serious questions about Ford's proposal to remove FTC jurisdiction over "unfair" advertising.

"We acknowledge that that formula is extremely broad," Eizenstat wrote. "But surely the correct cure is not to preclude the commission completely from protecting the public against advertising which is literally true, but, through the omission of material facts or other strategems, is misleading or unfair."

The FTC said the Ford proposal "would have crippling and unintended effects on the commission's ability to do its job."

Eizenstat said, "Even if the committee believes that the broad authority over advertising held by the commission for the past 60 years has occasionally been unwisely administered, it would be tragic to respond by cutting the heart out of a law that is a bulwark of consumer confidence in our national marketplace."

The Carter aide asked Ford to meet with administration officials before his subcommittee acts on the bill, which the senator had said would be this week. A spokesman for Ford was unavailable for comment on the letters.

Consumer advocates strongly opposed the Ford bill when he announced it last week. A spokesman for the U.S. Chamber of Commerce expressed general approval.

Sales down nationally.... except in toy departments

Copley News Service

National retailers have reported their monthly sales, and once again, the results are dreary: J.C. Penney up 1.5 percent. Sears up 0.2. Edison Bros. Stores down 0.3.

Then out popped the quarterly report of Toys "R" Us: Sales up 36.2 percent in the third quarter. Adjusted to take out the effect of new stores, sales are up 26 percent for the third quarter and 31 percent for the full nine months.

What goes here? Are toys contracyclical? Wasn't the toy industry going to go into a grave as a result of the declining child population?

As interviews reveal, the toy industry is, indeed, relatively strong this year—in fact, looking forward to a good Christmas. Yes, the toy industry is, in a sense, recession-proof. It continued to grow right through the last recession and sees no reason it won't repeat the trick.

Moreover, the toy industry is enjoying a temporary reprieve from its long-scheduled demographic deterioration. From 1974 to 1978, the child population did, in fact, decline.

(For example, there were 28 percent fewer babies born in 1977 than in 1959.)

Demographers—noting that America's birth rate was an astonishing 60 percent higher in the 1950s than it is today—see the child population slumping later in the next decade. However, there could be a 2 to 3 percent increase in annual births through the 1982-1983-1984 period.

This birth buoyancy will help spur the business, but there are other factors at work, too: Most dramatic is the big boom in electronic toys. Also, partly as a result of this year's gasoline crisis and declining purchasing power, there seems to be an increase in family game activity. Instead of taking that trip to Atlantic City, the family does the next best thing—touring Boardwalk and Park Place via a game of Monopoly.

"Toys are not as subject to discretionary income trends as you would think. We expect a good Christmas," said Norman Ricken, vice president for finance of New Jersey-based Toys "R" Us.

Medical costs fault of society

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — Medical costs may be inflated by too much expensive testing but much of the blame rests with a society that values technology over a doctors' judgment, a medical professor says.

Despite complaints of rising health costs, "the public likes tests. Society is more impressed with tests than with human judgments, although those are often more important," Dr. Harvey Feigenbaum of Indiana University Medical Center said Tuesday.

"That is the reason for the proliferation of these tests," he told a news conference during an American Heart Association conference here.

"Society doesn't recognize the importance of the human computer who puts all of these things together and makes the decisions," he argued. "They don't reward that adequately. They reward the person who does the (testing) procedures."

He particularly complained that insurance plans readily pay top dollar for technological wizardry, but are reluctant to pay for a consultation that might involve only a health history and physical examination. And that, he said, "is the most effective coronary test we have."

He and others on the panel also noted that fear of malpractice suits may lead many doctors to protect themselves by ordering almost every test imaginable.

Dr. Elliot Rapaport, chief of cardiology at San Francisco General Hospital, said such comments are not an attack on the technology explosion that has given doctors sophisticated new machines that watch, test and probe the heart with a precision unimaginable scarcely a decade or so ago.

"Each of these different procedures has its role and can provide us with valuable information," Rapaport said. "What we are saying is that they should not be used indiscriminately."

Dr. Arnold M. Weissler, chairman of the Wayne State University department of medicine, said decisions on such a vital question as the amount of testing must be based on objective evidence and there's not enough to say for sure whether too many tests are used.

He urged legitimate, scientific studies to answer the question.

House, Senate headed for high stakes battle

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House and Senate, their dispute over abortion financing unresolved, are heading toward another high stakes battle that could affect the operations of four major federal departments.

The stage for another impasse was set Tuesday when the House included its strict language on abortion aid in emergency legislation needed to keep money flowing to those departments after Nov. 20.

The next step is up to the Senate Appropriations Committee, which scheduled a meeting today to write its own version of the bill. Neither that committee nor the full Senate has ever accepted the abortion language being insisted on by the House.

The abortion feud, coupled with a controversial pay raise for congressmen, set off the congressional battle last month that resulted in an estimated 1.5 million federal employees going on half-pay temporarily.

That impasse ended only after the Senate agreed to modify existing abortion financing language through Nov. 20. The House now insists that the Senate make that modification effective through next Sept. 30 and that it also drop another key provision.

There was no debate on the abortion provision as the House quickly passed the emergency bill. In fact, the only provision that attracted much debate at all was an amendment by Rep. Robert Bauman, R-Md., to prohibit any money from going for military or economic assistance to Iran.

Because no U.S. funds now go to Iran, the amendment was more show than substance. But it allowed the House to go on record, 378-0, as protesting Iran's failure to free some 60 Americans taken hostage by students at the U.S. Embassy in Tehran.

The new emergency bill is needed because Congress has not finished work on regular appropriations bills to finance the operations of the departments of Defense; Labor; Transportation; and Health, Education and Welfare for the current fiscal year, which started Oct. 1.

The emergency money bill would keep those agencies operating along the lines of last year's budget through next Sept. 30, or until regular financing bills are passed.

The House abortion provision would limit federal aid for abortions for poor women to cases where the life of the mother is directly threatened.

Field rules approved

AUSTIN — The Railroad Commission approved amendments to operating rules for two west Texas fields which could lead to the recovery of an additional 15.4 million barrels of oil.

The amendments involved revision of well spacing rules and options in the size of proration units which will alllow additional infill drilling within the Robertson, North (Clearfork 7100) Fields in Gaines County and the Sweetwater (Canyon Sand) Field in Fisher and Nolan Counties.

Additional recovery of 14.8 million barrels of oil is in prospect from the Robertson, North area with today's adoption of these operating rules:

1. Consolidation of the Robertson and Robertson, North (Clearfork 7100) Fields and their redesignation of Robertson, North (Clearfork 7100) Field.
2. Forty-acre proration units withj the option to drill the second well on 20-acre fractional units.
3. Spacing of 467 feet from lease lines and 660 feet between wells.
4. Production allocation based on 100 percent acreage with the top well allowable retained at 121 barrels daily.

additionally, the commission approved Exxon's proposed cooperative waterflood recovery project on the operator's Fee Eubanks leases.

The amended rules sought by Synergy for the Sweetwater (Canyon sand) could lead to the recovery of an additional 600,000 barrels of oil through infill drilling. The field has been produced with secondary recovery techniques since 1960 with cumulative output amounting to more than 3.8 million barrels.

The new rules for Sweetwater (Canyon sand) allow spacing of 330 feet from lease lines and 933 feet between wells, and 20-acre optional proration units.

Texas production reported

AUSTIN — Texas oil and gas wells produced 608,552,025 Mcf of gas in August 1979, up 2.25 percent from field runs a year earlier.

Marketed gas production totaled 519,479,372 Mcf and reflected a 3.13 percent increase from the August 1978 volume. Marketed production is the total gas to transmission lines, carbon black and plant fuel and lease use.

Gas exported from Texas in August totaled 243,195,773 Mcf. Natural Gas Pipeline Co. of America was the month's largest exporter, moving 73,744,993 Mcf of gas which 32,634,315 Mcf was Texas-produced gas.

Exports of Texas-produced gas in August totaled 168,276,384 Mcf and reflected a 14.37 percent decrease from the year earlier month.

Texas gas production in August came from 199,964 oil and gas wells.

In July 1979, Texas wells produced 608,766,690 Mcf of gas. Marketed gas production in July totaled 516,503,088 Mcf.

Refinery runs down

AUSTIN — Fifty-eight refineries in Texas processed 146,706,758 barrels of crude oil and hydrocarbon blends during August 1979, according to their reports to the Railroad Commission.

This volume compares with 150,330,789 barrels in the previous August, the Commission's Administrative Services Division reported in its monthly recapitulation of Texas refinery operations. Inputs of crude oil and blends totaled 150,221,573 barrels in July 1979.

Texas refineries ran 122,236,352 barrels of crude oil in August compared to 129,256,975 barrels in August 1978 and 126,856,671 barrels in July 1979.

Products manufactured in August 1979 totaled 146,275,779 barrels, down from 150,560,159 barrels in the same month the previous year, and down from the 148,768,994 barrels in July 1979.

August 1979 manufacture of motor gasoline totaled 55,830,263 barrels, compared to 63,470,395 barrels in the year-earlier month and 58,853,158 barrels in July of 1979.

Texas refineries manufactured 11,207,583 barrels of home heating oil in August 1979 — an increase of 20,200 barrels from the year-earlier volume. July 1979 output was 12,355,633 barrels.

Amoco reports success in marketing of gasohol

NEW ORLEANS, La. — Amoco Oil Co.'s gasohol market test to date "has been singularly successful and continued testing is warranted," an Amoco marketing executive said.

"This view is largely seconded by our dealers who, being close to the local response, are generally quite pleased with the reception that the gasohol has gotten," said Joe Gibbs, Amoco's marketing general manager.

Amoco, which began test marketing the gasoline-alcohol mix in four Midwest markets this summer, feels strongly that the consumer is "the best and final judge" of gasohol's worth, Gibbs said.

It would be worng, he added, for the government to mandate use of gasohol or to force refiners to supply unleaded gasoline to gasohol blenders.

"This is no way to increase freedom of choice to the consumer," Gibbs said. "Its a good way to force refineries into misallocating resources, and its a good way to get all other potential solutions virtually outlawed in a time of stress and gas lines."

Amoco's preliminary test results show that "gasohol will be dependent on some form of subsidization for at least the near term," he said.

The company's sales results in Fremont, Neb., and Ottumwa, Iowa, where gasohol is exempt from most or all state motor fuel taxes, are much more encouraging than those in Madison, Wis., and Decatur, Ill., where the product receives no state tax exemption, Gibbs said.

Also, he added, "neither Decatur nor Madison has the rural concerns we find in Ottumwa and Fremont. Moreover, Madison was — of the four test areas — the least aware of the presence of gasohol either locally or nationally."

The company's market research tests in the four markets show that customer awareness of gasohol is quite high and, in Ottumwa, 80 to 88 percent of the users of gasohol felt that gasohol's performance in their cars was as good or better than gasoline.

In a national survey, however, Gibbs said that among those favoring gasohol, 41 percent do so to help alleviate the fuel shortage, 24 percent to help the farmer, and 20 percent for clean engine or ecological reasons. Better performance and improved mileage ranked fifth and sixth on the list.

From a supply standpoint, Gibbs noted there is not nearly enough alcohol production to make a meaningful contribution to the country's gasoline supplies, although the government is creating incentives for additional alcohol production.

Gas film available

A new 15-minute educational film entitled "Natural Gas-Delivered Energy" designed for students of upper elementary grades through senior high, is now available from the American Gas Association. The film also may be of interest to consumer groups, civic organizations and employee communications programs.

The film describes the transmission and distribution of natural gas energy with an emphasis on the distribution of gas to residential users. It also discusses the workings of gas meters, compressors and regulators in bringing natural gas into the home. Computerized customer service terminals at local gas utilities and the use of gas company service trucks to provide better service to gas consumers is also examined in the new A.G.A. film.

"Natural Gas-Delivered Energy," a 16mm color presentation, can be purchased for $60.00. Those interested in previewing the film may do so for $10. For futher information, contact Peggy Norris, manager, Educational Services, at A.G.A.

Fred Diamond

Manager announced

Fred Diamond has been named operational division manager of coring equipment manufacturing for Diamond Oil Well Drilling Co. in Midland.

He joined DOWDCO in September 1978. His industry career started in 1935 at Shereveport, La., where he was an employee of Butler Machine Works.

His 43 years in the manufacturing field include being general manager for the construction of a tool joint rebuilding plant in Alaska.

Diamond recently has been supervising the layout and building of DOWDCO's newly-completed machine shop for the manufacture of core barrels.

Records revealed

Olix Industries Inc. of Midland announced record financial results through the first three quarters of 1979.

Net Earnings of 34 cents per share represents a 13 percent increase over the like period in 1978.

Earnings for the third quarter were $217,000 or 11 cents per share versus $96,000 or 7 cents per chare in 1978. This represents a 57 percent improvement in earnings per share of 1978.

Total revenues increased with $9,325,000 recorded through the first nine months.

The revenues from oil and gas sales and royalties increased to $748,000 for the quarter, a 22 percent increase over the second quarter of 1979.

Furniture sales exceeded $2,420,000 for the quarter and $7,325,000 for the nine months. These results represent a 26 percent improvement over the same 1978 perior, Kenn S. George, president of Olix, said.

Texaco unit scheduled

PORT ARTHUR — Texaco Inc. is planning to upgrade its gasoline manufacturing facilities through the construction of a 40,000-barrel-per-day catalytic reforming unit at the company's Port Arthur refinery.

"This new unit will not only increase the motor gasoline volumes in Texaco's U.S. system up to two and a half percent, or about 475,000 gallons a day, but will also increasse our capability for production of unleaded gasoline," Maurice F. Granville, chairman of the board, said.

Construction is expected to be completed in 1983, Granville said.

The cost of the unit will be approximately $180 million and will be financed internally by the reinvestment of the company's earnings rather than through outside borrowings, Granville said.

Construction of the unit will result in the replacement of two older and less energy-efficient catalytic reforming units at the plant. Granville said the older units have a capacity of 20,000 barrels per day.

Application okayed

AUSTIN — The Railroad Commission approved the application of Conoco, Inc. for a surface mining operation for uranium in northern Live Oak County.

The commission authorized the issuance of a 10-year mining permit during a conference on Surface Mining and Reclamation Division matters.

The operation is 81/2 miles northeast of Three Rivers between Sulphur Creek and FM 1358. The permit area consists of approximately 259 acrea. Actual mining will involve 25 acres but will affect 198 acres.

Railroad Commission reports offshore Texas oil production

AUSTIN — State and federal leases in offshore and coastal Texas petroleum provinces produced 232,937 barrels of crude oil during August 1979 in contrast to 122,738 barrels in the same month of 1978 and 211,879 barrels in July 1979.

Gas Well gas production on state and federal leases amounted to 65,458,177 Mcf in August against 17,496,773 Mcf a year earlier and 60,133,671 Mcf in July.

Casinghead gas production totaled 438,751 Mcf in August against 288,337 Mcf in the same month of 1978 and 437,481 Mcf in July.

Condensate production on the state and federal leases amounted to 271,764 barrels in August, up from 118,269 barrels a year earlier and 254,030 barrels in July.

Wells on state offshore leases in August produced 58,911 barrels of oil; 169,349 Mcf of casinghead gas, 18,434,940 Mcf of natural gas and 137,564 barrels of condensate.

Cost of nonconventional crude will rise with risk

AUSTIN — The cost of nonconventional oil in the future will rise as the risk involved in their extraction and refinement increase, says Dr. James W. McKie, professor and chairman of economics at The University of Texas at Austin.

However, as OPEC steadily increases the cost of oil, Dr. McKie adds, the production of nonconventional oil will become "more and more attractive."

Nonconventional oils, says Dr. Myron Dorfman, UT Austin professor and chairman of petroleum engineering, differ from conventional oil, which "flows readily from underground reservoirs into well bores and can be transported as a liquid under normal temperatures and sent to refineries."

Oil shale, tar sands and heavy oil are types of nonconventional oils discussed by Dr. McKie, Dr. Dorfman and Dr. Willem van Rensburg, UT Austion associate director of the Bureau of Economic Geology.

Dr. Dorfman, defining heavy oil, says that it is often heavier than water and heavier than the type of oil that is usually produced. The oil is extremely viscous and therefore will not flow readily, which necessitates the use of "exotic techniques" in extration.

Heavy oil and tar sands are found in more than 70 countries throughout the world, with the largest deposits found in the Orinoco area of Venezuela, according to Dr. van Rensburg.

"Most of the heavy oils in the United States," he says, "are in and around Utah," adding that some deposits also are found in Texas.

Dr. Dorfman, in commenting on the costs of producing heavy oil, says that most of the heavy oil in Texas and the U.S. mid-continent region will be uneconomical to produce as a result of the U.S. Department of Energy definition and decontrol of some heavy oil, but not all.

"They have put artificial criteria on this definition," says Dr. Dorfman. "They have based it on the specific gravity of the oil being just lighter than that of water."

Most of the heavy oil in Texas and the U.S. mid-continent does not fit under that classification, he explains, adding that it "will still command a controlled price of $5 a barrel or less."

In addition to heavy oil, Dr. van Rensburg believes, other forms of fossil fuels, such as oil shales, some of which "are nothing but lowgrade coals," should be utilized.

Such oil, says Dr. Dorfman, is extremely difficult to extract because the shales aren't truly petroluem, but are "precursors of petroleum." They are very heavy hydrocarbons encased in calcareous mud compacted over geological time, he explains. Large amounts of water are required in extraction and refinement, the operators are costly and the residue that remains can pose environmental problems.

Dr. van Rensburg believes that oil derived from coal is the one oil that is often neglected.

Such oil, he says, can be produced by three different routes: pyrolysis, hydroliquefaction or indirect liquefaction through gasification.

Synthesizing hydrocarbon liquids from gases already is being done commercially in South Africa, he adds.

Truckers hope to keep regulations

CHICAGO (AP) — Labor and truckers' association members have asked a joint U.S. House and Senate committee to oppose deregulating the trucking industry, saying deregulation would drive small truckers out of business and cause safety regulations to be ignored.

Legislation to take trucking out from under the Interstate Commerce Commission was opposed by both the Teamsters Union and the American Trucking Association at the hearing.

But some major manufacturers supported deregulation, saying it would stimulate competition in the industry.

The Senate Commerce Committee and the Surface Transportation Subcommittee of the House Committee on Public Works and Transportation began the two-day hearing on trucking de-regulation Friday morning in Chicago.

Committee members were considering proposals from the Carter administration and Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., that call for the removal of the ICC controls on the trucking industry.

Under present laws, the ICC determines the number of trucking firms allowed to operate nationwide, enforces safety regulations and requires truckers to service small and rural communities.

Manufacturers testified at the hearing that the regulations are overly restrictive, hurting the quality of service by shutting out competition.

"The trucking industry is a protected environment into which entry, competitive serivce and pricing are serverly restricted," Robert A. Warren testified on behalf of the National Association of Manufacturers.

Warren said ICC regulations have resulted in the waste of about 51 million gallons of fuel annually and protected high trucking rates.

Freezing of Iranian assets not first such action by U.S.

By KRISTIN GOFF
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — President Carter's decision to freeze Iranian assets in the United States, was not the first time the United States has taken such action against a foreign nation.

But it marked a significant escalation in the political and economic confrontation between the countries since Iranian students took 60 Americans hostage at the U.S. Embassy Nov. 4.

And its use came in a dramatically different context than in the past.

The United States currently has assets of Cambodia, North Vietnam and Cuba frozen. And only recently, the United States and China agreed to settle a dispute dating back to 1949 in which each country laid claim to the other's assets.

But the freeze on billions of dollars Iran holds in the United States, was among the largest ever imposed by the United States. The amount of funds involved is estimated at around $5 billion by the United States officials and about $12 billion by the Iranians.

And it came in response to what currency dealers say was a direct threat to the dollar with potentially broad economic implications for the U.S. economy.

MANY OF THOSE problems may remain, even after the hostage question is settled. Higher oil prices, for instance, are deemed to be an almost certain spinoff of the U.S.-Iranian confrontation.

Carter took swift but limited action this past week when the Iranians announced plans to withdraw all funds from the United States. While he did not officially break off all trade with Iran, he did block withdrawal of all funds owned by the Iranian government or its agencies unless specifically permitted by the United States government.

Treasury officials described the freeze as a necessary step to ensure that Iran would not walk out of an estimated $2.5 billion in loans from U.S. banks, and that the withdrawal of funds would be "orderly."

But in currency markets, speculation was widespread that Iran's intention was to force a run on the dollar, thus increasing economic pressure on the United States to meet its demands for the return of the deposed shah.

In fact, the currency did have a tumultuous week on exchange markets with violent ups and downs in response to Iranian-U.S. developments.

A second round of panic hit currency markets on Friday when one Iranian official reported — and a second denied — that Iran had stopped accepting dollars as payment for oil and had switched to a "market-basket" of other currencies instead.

THE DOLLAR, because it is the universal currency for buying oil from the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, has always been sensitive to oil news. But currency dealers were divided last week on how the market viewed the U.S. move to freeze Iranian assets.

Some argued that the freeze was a positive show of strength by the United States in response to attack on its citizens and threats to its currency. But others fear that the move to freeze the Iranian funds might undermine confidence of other OPEC nations who have a total of about $100 billion deposited in the United States.

By week's end the dollar had suffered losses against most major currencies, but not as drastic as during other periods of dollar crisis last year.

Economists say it is fairly certain that one cost of the U.S.-Iranian economic confrontation will be higher oil prices in the near future.

President Carter, in a move that met with wide approval among the American public, announced that the United States would halt purchases of oil from Iran, which last year provided 3 to 4 percent of the oil used in the United States. Iran took that one step further by announcing it would not sell oil to any American oil company for delivery anywhere in the world. The net result is that it will be more difficult and expensive for U.S. companies to replace oil once obtained from Iran, and that prices may be bid up once again.

It also could serve to encourage OPEC countries already arguing for a broad price increase when the oil cartel meets next month in Caracas, Venzuela to review prices.

THERE WERE REPORTS last week that a 10 percent increase might be recommended to oil ministers in an report being drafted this past week by economic ministers. The current OPEC price ceiling is $23.50 for a barrel of crude, but some countries have been charging more than that already.

In other business developments this past week:

—Major banks raised their prime lending rates to a record 15¾ percent from 15½ percent, drawing an immediate charge of "profiteering" from House Banking Committee Chairman Henry S. Reuss. Citibank, the first of the major banks to go to the higher rate said it was using restraint. Citibank said tight credit conditions actually justified a 16 percent increase.

Market holding ground in spite of financial war

By CHET CURRIER
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — After two weeks of the political and financial war of wills between Iran and the United States, the stock market is still holding its ground.

In the first few trading days after Iranian students seized the U.S. embassy in Tehran and took 60 Americans hostage, the market sank briefly to a new low for the year.

But since then it has recovered, to close Friday just about where it stood when the confrontation began.

"It is hard to imagine what the next hour will bring in the Iranian hostage situation," said Newton Zinder at E.F. Hutton & Co.

"But, so far, the market is weathering all the twists and turns in commendable fashion."

FRIDAY'S SESSION provided a case in point. Stock and bond prices fell at the opening, along with the dollar, on reports quoting Iran's foreign minister as saying the nation would no longer accept dollars in payment for its oil.

But the Wall Street markets steadied shortly afterward as the Iranian oil minister denied that such a decision had been made, saying, "I did not order this yet."

For the week, the Dow Jones average of 30 industrials rose 9.22 to 815.70, almost offsetting a 12.46-point loss in the preceding week.

The New York Stock Exchange's composite index of all its listed common stocks gained 1.37 to 59.11, and the American Stock Exchange market value index climbed 9.32 to 218.06.

Big Board volume averaged 29.85 million shares a day, against 25.88 million the week before.

HUGH JOHNSON, an analyst at First Albany Corp., said investing institutions generally seemed to have taken a wait-and-see approach to the Iranian situation.

"It is a potentially a very serious situation," he said. "But it is still an open question whether and how it will be resolved."

One explanation that has been advanced for the market's steady showing has been speculation that interest rates might be close to, or even past, a peak.

These hopes have drawn skeptical reactions from many credit experts, who contend they are premature. But even as several major banks were raising their prime lending rates from 15½ to 15¾ percent on Friday, the conjecture persisted that a turning point might be approaching.

JOHNSON POINTED to another evident reason for the market's steadiness — signs that the pace of the economy slowed in October after an unexpectedly strong third quarter.

"There is some evidence of a decline in business activity, which is a necessary forerunner to a decline in interest rates," he observed.

The government reported Thursday that industrial production inched up 0.1 percent in October, after seasonal adjustment, down from a 0.5 percent increase the month before.

Wall Streeters expect similar evidence in statistical reports during the coming week, Johnson said, on such subjects as personal income, new orders for durable goods and housing starts.

Some doubts have been raised, however, about whether a dropoff in economic activity will necessarily lead, as so many assume it will, an interest-rate decline.

Donald E. Maude at Merrill Lynch Government Securities cited two reasons in particular for such doubts. "Economic weakness should bring with it enlarged short-term business credit demands to finance involuntarily accumulated inventories," he said.

ADDITIONALLY, he said, interest rates are likely to stay high as long as inflation does. "Any major progress on the inflation front generally lags an economic downturn by months — and even quarters — at times."

...Or a dream world?

Midlander Bill Price touches on a number of significant facts in an article, "An American Dream or a Dream World?" which he has forwarded to The Reporter-Telegram. It reads as follows:

"The American dream is a high standard of living with the right to the pursuit of happiness as he sees fit and to live virtually free. Freedom will get sick and die if its economic health is not sound.

"Some politicians in America have conditioned themselves, and in my opinion, millions of Americans over the past 25 years, to believe in an economic dream world.

"It is a dream world in which we live to believe we can find a better future without having to do anything different or difficult about it ourselves. It's a dream world where we can have more government spending without higher taxes and greater inflation.

"We are living in a dream world to believe government can deliver an infinite economy for a high standard of living without real productivity, especially a government that is already spending more than it is taking in. A dream world is a place where people can be paid more without producing more.

"Real wealth is created from the profits of something produced, where customers, workers, managers, capital and technology come together successfully. Jobs are created by the customer. He can choose to buy the product. If it is not made right, is the wrong type, too expensive or late in arriving, then there is no job. In the end, it is the customer who is the real 'boss.'

"As Americans desiring a 'realistic' American dream, we must recognize these 'facts of life,' and for its preservation, before going to the polls to vote, we must determine which of those seeking election also recognize these facts.

"Personally, I believe Americans have the best way of life and the best country in the world to live in. I would like it preserved forever."

Caring and sharing

Individuals and groups do some of the nicest things during the Thanksgiving season, and one of the nicest and most thoughtful things is the special Thanksgiving service and dinner planned and sponsored by Our Lady of Guadalupe and St. Ann's Catholic Churches.

The event is for those persons in the community who may be alone this Thanksgiving and those who may be unable to prepare their own holiday meal. Isn't this great.

Those wishing to participate should telephone 683-8908 for information and invitations to the dinner and program which is scheduled at 5 p.m. Monday at Our Lady of Guadalupe Parish House.

Casa de Amigos and Midland College will provide transportation.

This is what Thanksgiving is all about — caring and sharing.

Victory in sight!

Thursday's annoucement that the Midland United Way campaign for 1980 was at the 94.7 percent mark was good and most encouraging news for all concerned.

Contributions and pledges at that time totaled $963,238. The goal is $1,017,000. Board chairman Allen K. Trobaugh is confident of success, promptly.

Chairman Bill Ortloff and his scores of volunteer workers are determined not to let the finance effort lag, and it appears their determination is producing the desired results.

It appears now that the campaign could be wrapped up successfully by Thanksgiving Day, or certainly by the end of the month. What a grateful expression of Thanksgiving this would be if the campaign could be pushed over the top this week.

This is the way to get the job done — the preferred Midland way, if you please.

ART BUCHWALD

Here's real estate market story heard across nation

Art Buchwald

WASHINGTON — If you want to know where the real estate market is at the moment, pay close attention.

Berman wanted to buy Shaw's house. This was okay with Shaw because he wanted to buy a Victorian home in Glencoe owned by the Katz family. Before Berman could buy Shaw's house, he had to sell his. Once Berman paid Shaw, then Shaw could buy the Victorian home from the Katz estate (Mrs. Katz died at the age of 90 and none of her children wanted it).

Berman put an advertisement in the newspaper saying his house was for sale. He heard from every real estate agent in the area. They all wanted to represent him in making the deal. One said she had a buyer — a Mr. Hardy.

Hardy came out to the house and said he would like to buy Berman's home, but in order to do so Hardy would have to sell his own house in Silver Lake. He put it on the market and the Glucksterns, who were about to have another child, thought the Silver Lake place would do just fine.

Gluckstern did not own a house — he rented. This seemed to solve the problem of Gluckstern having to find a buyer for his house first. Gluckstern told Hardy he would get a loan from the bank. Hardy called Berman and told him not to sell his house because he had a buyer for the Hardy home. Berman immediately called up Shaw and said, "I think I can swing the deal."

Shaw got so excited he called the Katz family lawyer and told him to draw up the papers.

Everyone sat around kitchen tables talking about how they were going to fix up their new houses.

Then the Glucksterns went to their bank and asked for a mortgage for the Hardy house.

The bank officer said, "We don't have any mortgage money."

"What kind of money do you have?"

"We don't have any money at all. If you'd like to open an account with us, we'll give you a toaster for your new house."

"Why would we need a toaster for our new house when we can't borrow the money to buy it?"

"It's not my fault. It's people like Landsberg who are responsible."

"Who's Landsberg?"

"He had an account here. But he withdrew all his money and put it in Treasury bonds. He told us that when we pay as much interest as the U.S. government does, he'll put his funds back in."

Gluckstern went to see Landsberg and said, "I can't buy Hardy's house because of you."

"Who told you that?" Landsberg said.

"Atwood, at the bank. He said you took all your money out and now he can't make any real estate loans."

"Atwood has plenty of money," Landsberg said. "He just doesn't want to tie it up in long-term mortgages. Ask him for a 90-day loan at 18 percent and he'll give it to you in a minute."

Gluckstern was not mollified. "How would you like it if someone took all his money out of the bank and prevented you from buying a house?"

"I have a house and a 5 percent mortgage. Don't complain to me. Go tell your story to the U.S. Treasury. They're the ones who are paying the high interest rates."

Gluckstern went to see the man at the Treasury who deals in bonds. "How come you're paying higher interest rates to Landsberg than the bank does?"

The Treasury bond man said, "Because the government needs the money."

"What does the government need the money for?"

"Well, for one thing, to help people find housing. Whether you know it or not, Americans are having a tough time these days buying a new home."

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Steve Smith is Ted's No. 1 man

By JACK ANDERSON

WASHINGTON — Ted Kennedy's presidential prospects rest heavily on the shoulders of a modishly dressed, reclusive political operative whom the Massachusetts senator has described as "the man who loves to say 'No.'"

He's Steve Smith, Teddy's brother-in-law and the chief of his presidential campaign. He has always maintained a cool, low-key profile amidst the high-powered Washington soirees and political whirl which surround the Kennedy clan. But Smith is emerging as the pivotal figure in family affairs and the man Teddy turns to in a crunch.

The husband of Ted's older sister Jean, the Brooklyn-born Smith is the perfect Boston pol. He loves to operate in the smoke-filled backrooms, shunning the spotlight. But he doesn't share his Irish friends' love for the blarney; he's a sharp-witted, hard-nosed political operator who dislikes small talk or red tape. He's impatient to get to the bottom line.

The handsome, elegantly groomed Smith, a shrewd businessman, has long handled the purse strings for the Kennedys, but he also has a reputation as a top-notch political organizer, an unobtrusive man-behind-the-scenes who's a stickler for detail.

Those close to Teddy say he has the same close, intimate relationship with Smith as had the senator's brothers, Jack and Robert. Teddy trusts Smith's judgment implicitly. "Everybody leans on him — everybody," confided one long-time friend of Smith's.

"He not only has the headaches of the family real estate and financial affairs, but whenever someone gets in trouble or gets an idea, Steve's the one who gets involved," explained another Kennedy insider.

If Smith had been around the night of the Chappaquiddick incident, suggested several Kennedy intimates, there never would have been the eight-hour delay in notifying authorities.

Smith has spent a good part of his adult life organizing one Kennedy campaign or another, often as de facto boss, but usually as a power behind the throne, who liked to have others out front while he ran the show from backstage.

He entered Ted Kennedy's hastily organized, helter-skelter run for the Oval Office reluctantly, however. According to friends, Smith wasn't initially enthusiastic about Ted's candidacy. His wife Jean was initially opposed, fearing for her brother's life, sources told our reporters Jack Mitchell and Matt Speiser.

Ted Kennedy finally resolved that delicate question with family members, including his wife Joan and mother Rose. Smith told us he decided to join the fray after his brother-in-law made a "personal" decision to be a candidate in 1980.

The Kennedy power brokers decided to make Steve campaign manager in order to keep the final decision-making power inside the family, and also because Smith's well-known reputation for trustworthiness made normally jealous members of the Kennedy clique more willing to take orders from the top.

Smith said, "My job is to coordinate; I have a broad range of experience and have the position I do because of the confidence between me and the candidate."

The Smiths are part of New York City's East Side social whirl and are regularly seen with such Broadway celebrities as Lauren Bacall and Adolph Green. New York City pols once encouraged Smith to run for the governor's mansion. But after thinking it over, he begged off, preferring to throw his weight to other candidates favored by the Kennedy machine.

A few of Smith's close friends, however, claim he has slowed down as a hard-drinking, bar-hopping pol. "Despite his playboy name, he's turned into a middle-aged sherry drinker," joked one buddy, who remembered the Steve Smith of the Bobby Kennedy years.

Smith's political acumen is universally respected by political movers and shakers and watchers alike. "He's a born organizer," said one observer, who added that though Smith was taking a bigger role in this campaign than in the past, he would probably tend to business affairs while other Kennedy advisers like former senators Dick Clark and Carl Wagner handled the political chores.

The normally unflappable Smith rarely loses his temper, though once after Bobby Kennedy lost in a 1968 primary, he blew his stack.

He got on the phone to Joe Cerrell, a Humphrey worker, to berate him for telling the press how Kennedy adviser Fred Dutton, now a lobbyist, had called ex-California Gov. Pat Brown an "ingrate" for backing Humphrey.

Smith told Cerrell he was willing to bet him $1,000 that the incident never happened. But when Cerrell insisted that it had, an irate Smith shot back that he was going to call Humphrey and have Cerrell fired. He later cooled off and never made the threatened phone call.

Whatever happens in the campaign; the rest of the Kennedy clan consider Smith a harbor in the storm. One journalist close to the family noted that Smith was one of the few family members who could get away with missing one of Rose Kennedy's legendary birthday dinners without causing a fuss.

Ted can also count on Steve without having to think of him as a future secretary of state or White House chief of staff. Almost all Smith's friends doubted he would accept any political job in a Kennedy administration, but would remain the unobtrusive man who's always there for the Kennedys when he's needed.

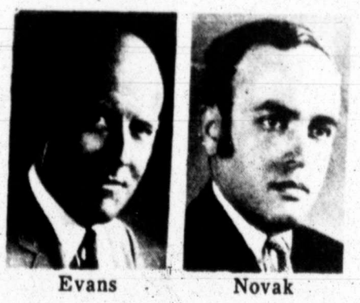
INSIDE REPORT:

It's Ford versus Reagan in California political maneuver

By ROWLAND EVANS AND ROBERT NOVAK



Evans Novak

WASHINGTON — Former President Gerald Ford has quietly signed a petition to end California's winner-take-all presidential primary in full knowledge of infuriating former Gov. Ronald Reagan, the front-running Republican presidential candidate.

Ford's decision shows that he still harbors serious hopes for a deadlock at the Republican National Convention, opening the way for him to become the nominee.

The petition for signatures, if successful, would put the controversy over winner-take-all, as opposed to proportional representation, on the June 3 primary election ballot for a decision by the voters. As the overwhelming favorite in the presidential primary to be held the same day, Reagan naturally wants to keep delegate selection as is: the winner of the primary capturing all 168 California delegates.

But when Ford was asked to sign the petition putting a referendum on the ballot to end winner-take-all in the only state that still has it, he quickly obliged. That shows that the former president, although steering clear of overt anti-Reagan actions, still entertains serious hopes for himself. His theory: If Reagan falls short and none of the lesser candidates really catch on, the party would turn to him.

If the referendum ending winner-take-all gets on the ballot and is approved by the voters, the June 3 primary vote would be apportioned, with Reagan surely getting the lion's share but not all.

CONNALLY'S OWN TRAP

Although John B. Connally's managers talk about ambushing front-runner Ronald Reagan in the early Southern primaries, his own sympathizers in New Hampshire fear Big John may be setting a trap for himself a week earlier in that state's primary, first in the nation.

Connally's New Hampshire organization today is no better than fifth best. Potential supporters contacted by Connally himself on periodic visits to the state received no follow-up calls. One prominent Republican who had been ready to sign on with Connally just two weeks ago has decided to stay neutral because of doubt that Connally really means business in New Hampshire.

The blase Connally attitude toward New Hampshire can partly be explained as a tactic of poor-mouthing. By downgrading his efforts, an 11th-hour burst of Boston-based television could give him a showing in the primary that, by contrast to the public expectation, would look unexpectedly high. But pro-Connally insiders fear a fourth place finish with 7 percent or so of the vote could destroy his credibility for future primaries — including the Southern races where he hopes to ambush Reagan.

A footnote: Campaign director Eddie Mahe is under heavy pressure by New Hampshire Connally aides who claim he really feels the New Hampshire primary just is not all that important.

KENNEDY'S CENTRIST

To offset the regiment of McGovernites now running his presidential campaign, Sen. Edward M. Kennedy is about to hire a well-known moderate Democrat: former Rep. James O'Hara of Michigan.

O'Hara is more a Hubert Humphrey than a "Scoop" Jackson Democrat and has been closely associated with the liberal United Auto-Workers (UAW). Nevertheless, he would be the first Kennedy campaign staffer who meets private complaints by Sen. Jackson and public complaints by the Coalition for a Democratic Majority (CDM) that Teddy's operation duplicate Sen. George McGovern's in 1972.

CHANGE TOWARD ANGOLA

Jonas Savimbi, doughty leader of anti-communist guerrillas in Angola, got no sympathy from the State Department during his recent visit to Washington.

Until last year, the U.S. gave backstage encouragement to Savimbi's forces in their tenacious political-military operations. In control of much of Angola's countryside, Savimbi probably would topple the Soviet-aligned regime were it not for the Cuban expeditionary force.

But in recent months, the Carter administration has improved relations with Angola's Marxist regime, Cubans or no Cubans. That was brought home to Savimbi on his Washington visit. According to Savimbi, he was told by State Department functionaries: We found we can do business with the communists, why can't you?

REAGAN'S P.O.W. PLOY

In his first full day as an announced presidential candidate, Ronald Reagan dipped deep into the bag of his old speech cards to find a way to attack two of the nation's most unpopular personalities, at least among Republicans: Ramsey Clark and Jane Fonda.

Reagan concluded his speech to a Boston rally by recounting his experiences with U.S. prisoners-of-war released by North Vietnam in 1973. Nobody had heard Reagan use this in a speech for at least five years. What had been genuinely moving then seemed inappropriate in late 1979.

But Reagan did evoke hisses and boos from the partisan Republican audience when he recalled how a P.O.W. had told him about being tortured for refusing to see Clark and Fonda when they visited Hanoi. Veteran Reagan-watchers suspected that Reagan, the retooled candidate in a brand new campaign, dipped into his old bag of cards solely to elicit crowd response against Ramsey and Jane.

THE BIBLE

CAN YOU QUOTE IT?

By LAVINA ROSS FOWLER AND ELIZABETH ROSS WIERSEMA

1. The following text is from the beautiful prayer hymn of the minor prophet, Habakkuk. A modern hymn has been taken from it, which is quite a favorite in some churches: "For the earth shall be filled with the knowledge of the glory of the Lord, as the waters ------." Hab. 2:14

2. Did Paul hold a difference of religion as a cause for divorce? 1 Cor. 7

3. Which of the Lord's parables hinges on the story of a "wedding garment?" Matt. 22:11-14

4. Give the original name of Israel, son of Isaac and twin brother of Esau. Gen. 32:27

5. Name the king of Tyre, who was a friend of King David and also of his son, Solomon. 1 Kings 5:1(K.J.) 3 Kings 5:1(Douay).

Four correct...excellent. Three correct...good.

No deficit of witty words noted in remarks by Lamesa emcee

LAMESA — Just about everyone who ever has had any money has had a deficit.

It's a minus of nothing.

And Lamesa's piquant and perennial emcee, Ray Renner, put his own meaning to the condition known by most all men in any station in life:

Deficit: "That's what you have when you have less than you had when you didn't have anything."

Renner, if ever at a loss for words, doesn't let on. He's a lawyer.

And the other night at the annual promote-Lamesa fete, otherwise known as the Chamber of Commerce banquet, he issued some friendly barbs.

"You ought to be married," Renner told bachelor Art Roberts, a former Lamesan who's manager of the Odessa Chamber of Commerce. He explained why:

"Someday, something is going to come along that you can't blame on the government," he told the young, suave man wearing the blue, pinstripe suit.

And Renner, the family man, turned to his wife, Cathy, who was seated at his right hand.

And he brought forth a phraseology from the wedding vows he pledged to abide by so many years ago: "...for better...or...for worse..." the marriage will last.

"Her contention," Renner said, "is that she couldn't have done worse, and I couldn't have done better."

She applauded, and he, in good humor, struck out.

Renner, still behaving himself, removed himself from the lectern and seated himself on a plane equal with the missus.

Moments later, he was up again to tease and entertain the audience. He referred to Big D, which he called "a sub-division of Lamesa."

"When we think of Dallas," he allowed, "we think of the Cowboys.... No," he paused, "turn that around....the cheerleaders."

Laugh.

Renner, at these yearly chamber happenings, invariably borders on the philosophical but never gets too heavy-handed or too outlandishly comical; he leaves that up to the speakers, if they can handle it.

He turned wise man:

"There are three kinds of people," he ventured: "Those who make things happen. Those who watch things happen. And those who wonder what happened."

●

Now, Ray Renner didn't say this, but he might have had he decided to put a twist to the Golden Rule:

"Do not do unto others as you would that they should do unto you. Their tastes may not be the same."

Irish dramatist-essayist George Bernard Shaw said that one.

And American radio-state comedian Fred Allen said this one, which anyone who has ever been involved in committee work surely would appreciate:

"Committee: a group of men who individually can do nothing but as a group decide that nothing can be done."

POSITIVE THINKING

Practice the presence of God; 'Release' your inner abilities

By NORMAN VINCENT PEALE

Many of us go through life in a vain but continuing search for happiness. Yet that great treasury of wisdom, the Bible, offers a precise technique for becoming a happy person, a method that too many of us ignore. It is stated in these words, "Whoso trusteth in the Lord, happy is he."

Why is this true? Because, when you place your full trust in God, when you practice God's presence, you become what I like to call a released person. You are released because you know that you can defeat any weakness, solve any problem and rise victorious over any defeat.

Those are indeed large claims, but I can confidently make them because there is resident in human nature and enormous power, an immense reservoir of force.

I am fond of quoting William James, the father of American psychology, who said that the greatest discovery of his time was not in the realm of materialistic science, but in the power of the subconscious mind touched by faith.

This power is tremendous. Let me illustrate. The newspapers some months ago carried the story of a woman who was in the garage with her husband when he was working underneath their automobile, which was on a jack. The jack slipped and the husband was pinned under the car and could not break free. There was no one to help the man except his wife, a woman of average strength.

No one, that is, but God, through faith in whom she was able to utilize the immense power I mentioned earlier, a power within ourselves which emerges in extraordinary crises.

This woman was able to put her hands under the car and lift it just enough to permit her husband to free himself. Later, when she tried to show him how she had lifted the car, she could not budge it.

Where did this woman's amazing power come from? From outside? No, the power was inside her. She became a released person and she was able to utilize it in this emergency.

I know of another case, and this time the man involved was an invalid, or thought he was. He was confined to a wheelchair and had been in this condition for several years. In the summer he would have himself wheeled down to the beach where he could watch the sea and the swimmers.

One day he saw his own 16-year-old son swim out too far and, tiring, begin to go under. He cried out for help but there were only some small children playing on the beach to hear him. Suddenly the father was able to spring from the wheel chair, throw off his clothes, dive into the sea, swim out to where his son was going under and bring the boy back safely to shore. He never sat in his wheelchair again.

Where did this man get his strength? From outside himself? No, it was inside him all the time; there is a fantastic store of power in every individual if he only realizes it and gets it released. What a burst of happiness we experience when we know our power over life.

"If ye have faith as a grain of mustard seed...nothing shall be impossible unto you." When the Bible says that, it is referring directly to the tremendous power in the individual. When you are defeated by everything that comes along in life, you are not happy. But when faith releases power in you, then you acquire with it a sublime yet humble confidence in yourself. Happy are the undefeated.

You will be a happy person when you learn to use this power within you because then, and only then, will you never be defeated by anything in this life. "Whoso trusteth in the Lord, happy is he."

Start today to put your trust in God and get the realization of a new power that can be yours through faith in God. Ultimately, through this new faith you will develop the conviction that no inner weakness or outer problem can defeat you.

In this feeling of confidence real hapiness lies.

World War II combat twins still serve Air Force together

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — At MacDill Air Force Base two men who flew side-by-side as World War II combat pilots discharge their duties today still side-by-side in adjoining offices.

They are Lt. Gen. Charles C. "Buck" Patillo and Maj. Gen. Cuthbert A. "Bill" Patillo — 55-year-old twin brothers.

Buck Patillo is vice director of the Air Force's Joint Deployment Agency, which is responsible for military transportation and troop management around the world.

Bill Patillo is deputy commander of the Air Force's Readiness Command, which has responsibility for 225,000 men.

At age 18, outside Atlanta where they grew up, the Patillo brothers enlisted in the Army Air Corps.

The government put them through flying school together, first at Lodwick School of Flying in Lakeland, then more training in Miami, Marianna and Punta Gorda, all in Florida.

From an Air Corps replacement depot in Tallahassee they were assigned to the 352nd Fighter Group outside London.

That led to their first separation. The brothers, then first lieutenants, were flying P-51 Mustangs, escorting heavy bombers on missions to Munich, Dresden, Berlin, strafing the German lines at the Battle of the Bulge in 1944.

Bill took a hit. His plane caught fire and he had to ditch in a field inside enemy lines.

He was taken prisoner and marched to a POW camp near Freising, Germany, where there were French, Russian, British and American prisoners.

"One morning I looked out this window and there was one of General Patton's great, big, old tanks staring down on us. They'd been shelling the camp for days, and now they were there," Bill says.

"The Germans were scared to death of the Russians, so they came to me and said they wanted to surrender to me. I accepted the surrender and went out to where those tanks were with a white flag."

Buck, meanwhile, had known his brother's plane was shot down. He was strafing the airfield when he heard the report over the radio.

But he didn't know what had happened to Bill for six weeks.

"I had been waiting all this time, not knowing where my brother was ... I had been expecting the worst."

One day an MP approached him on base and said, "Hey, did you hear about your brother...? He's over at the officer's club.

"I went over and we had a reunion — a wet one."

The Patillos were shipped home in December 1945 and flew with the Georgia National Guard until they re-enlisted in 1948 and went back to Europe. By this time, the Air Corps had been reorganized into the U.S. Air Force.

The twins helped organize the Skyblazers, an Air Force daredevil team, then flew with the jet-powered Thunderbirds, the Air Force's present aerobatics team, until the mid-1950s.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Giving thanks

To The Editor:

This is the time of the year our country has set aside for us to stop our busy schedules for a day and give thanks for our many blessings. I look back over this past year and realize how much our family has to be thankful for.

Last year at this time my husband was in Neuro Intensive Care in Dallas. He had undergone a series of neurosurgeries and was in a comma. We did not know for a number of weeks if he would pull through. The thing we were most thankful for on that Thanksgiving Day in 1978 was that he was still alive.

After seven weeks in intensive care and another ten weeks in the hospital, he came home to us. It has not been an easy year, but it has been a year full of blessings. My husband has had to work very hard to overcome many physical handicaps left as a result of hemorrhage. He has kept a fantastic attitude and has never given up.

Our family would like to take this occasion to say "Thank You" to so many of you who have been such a help to us this past year. We would like to say a special thanks to our employers, Carl Lawrence and Wayne Ulrich, for their support and understanding; and to the people we work with at C.F. Lawrence & Associates, Inc., and Midland Memorial Hospital for their concern and especially for providing our children with a nice Christmas last year. We would like to thank those of you for gifts, errands run, flowers and cash contributions. We would like to thank the medical staff of Midland Memorial Hospital and Dr. William McGavran for the excellent care given. We would like to thank all of you that provided the moral support we needed.

God bless each of you.

Don't give in

To The Editor:

On Nov. 9, 1979, KOSA-7 aired an interview held with several Iranian students from an Odessa college. In this interview, the students said the shah should be returned to Iran as the captors of the hostages in the American Embassy demanded. They added that if any of the hostages were killed, it would be the fault of the American government. They then asked whether the life of the shah was more valuable than the lives of 60 Americans.

This interview should convey to people in the Permian Basin and the nation the apparent disregard and malice the Iranians harbor for Americans, and America.

The particular students interviewed were stupid, also. If we sent the shah back to Iran, as demanded, every time some country wanted something from us, they would believe that all they would have to do would be snatch up some hostages and demand whatever they wanted. Also, if any of the hostages are killed, it will be the fault of the Iranians, not the American government.

This attitude held by the Iranian students is sufficient evidence we should send all of them back to study in their own country. Of course, they know there is not much to learn in Iran; a backward country fighting to stay backward.

To hell with their oil. If things get bad enough here, Mr. Carter and Congress will wise up to let prices for American oil at least rise to equal that of foreign competition. With that, Americans will find enough oil and gas in our country to fill the gap left by Iran and any other group of idiots trying to twist our arm.

Appeasing the Iranians by limiting the press coverage of Americans protesting against the Iranians as Carter asked is typical of Carter's no-action, no-nothing position on the American hostages and issues in general.

American Way

To The Editor:

Just a note to say that I, like many others, watch C-Span. This program shows politics at work, and is fascinating.

Politics at work is the American Way, and its virtues and faults are displayed in a drama superior to the usual soap opera. Because I watch regularly, and as much as possible, I am aware of several things.

A new viewer is at first, probably, most conscious of statements of the members which are obviously, and simply made "for the record." In this case, it's the Congressional Record. The phrase, for the record, has become a common figure of speech to most Americans, but with a different connotation. It is not a figure of speech for our representatives, but a literal and political fact of life.

Watching C-Span is educational. One thing I've learned is the control and the power held by the majority party. It's really eye-opening, watching C-Span.

More thoughts on C-Span later. Did you see House Leader Wright "work his will" about Southwest Airlines and Love Field? He called it letting the House work its will.

Hesitant reply

To The Editor:

Being a minister, especially of an un-orthodox persuasion, I am a little bit apprehensive in your advocacy of cream pies in the faces of those who preach "disgusting doctrines." As you and I know the nebulous nature of religious dogma (to say nothing of the thousands of other "disgusting" ideas held freely by most Americans) preached in the many denominations of our land would seem to give rise to people in our congregations lining up following the service shaking hands on one side and throwing a pie in the preacher's face with the other. Many parishoners are tempted enough as it is without your advocating it as your editorial policy.

More specifically, your "anti-atheism rally" editorial was a low blow for American journalism. (I know editors who would defend "atheism.") You do manage to embellish your thoughts with terms about rights and laws. (What was the fine for Mr. Hunter's simple assault — $15 — "it was worth it!")

Personally I hope your anti-atheism movement doesn't get off the ground (shades of Armageddon, when we choose up sides for or against God) and that you, and the rest of us, will hold our disgust within. For myself, when a chocolate cream pie is shoved in my face on the one side I shall turn the other cheek and take a lemon meringue on the other.

Speaking up

To The Editor:

My hat goes off to Dee Ann Osbourne for speaking up for the KISS concert.

The things that are being said about KISS were said about Elvis Presley, the Beatles, and other singing groups that become idolized by teen-agers. This isn't going to stop their records, posters or attending their concerts.

I personally stood in line for seven and a half hours to buy tickets for the Elvis Presley concert in Odessa. I would gladly stand in line again to get tickets for the KISS concert for my sons. I, myself, don't like their music but my sons don't like my music. And that doesn't mean we will be fighting each other and praying for something to happen to each others favorite singers.

I don't believe that this group will influence our children in a bad way. Here in our own town we have bad influences such as having porno books in neighborhood stores, out in plain sight.

I am really surprised that our kids haven't swamped the newspaper and college officials with letters telling them their opinion on the matter. Well, in my opinion that shows a lot for our kids. It shows me and I know I am not alone, that even though KISS has been around for a long time, it has not affected our children's moral standards.

College officials shouldn't feel frustrated because of the commotion this concert is creating. Because you are bringing a high quality concert to Midland and I, for one, congratulate your Chaparral Center.

And my answer to Mark Worley and the Midland Christian Church is, "Let him who is without sin cast the first stone."

Postal praise

To The Editor:

Hats off to the U.S. Postal Service! And a round of "boos" to machines that don't perform their assigned jobs.

In the mail last week I received a big, fat envelope which was hand-addressed, from the U.S. Postal Service. Inside was my bank statement which had been mailed to me unsealed. Picture, if you will, all those yellow checks flying all over the room when the envelope opened and that nice person who carefully picked them out of wherever they ended up and sent them on to me. Only two checks were missing, which is remarkable considering that I am a person who writes numerous checks. The next day another envelope came with the two missing checks. If the bank can teach that machine to lick envelopes as well as that Postal Service employee performed his or her job we will have the best of both worlds.

Get tough!

To The Editor:

Concerning the situation in Iran, I feel that our government should become diplomatically tough. President Carter should forget the SALT II treaties because the Soviet Union is encouraging the Iranian students. He also should cut off all trade and communication with Khomeini. With the situation as it is, I fear for the lives of the hostages. If Carter became tough they may have a chance. I encourage all Americans to write to the president and tell him to become diplomatically tough, then he may listen and do it.

Day care defeat

To The Editor:

It seems the Day Care Division of HEW has updated the guidelines of the federal inter-agency day-care requirements (FIDCR) so that the government has the exclusive right to indoctrinate your children. Get this, parents will have no voice under these revised guidelines, they will be merely observers of their child's social training.

We are told: "The federal government shares in the responsibility for providing leadership to enhance the emotional, physical, social and intellectual development of children."

The federal government would require state and local obedience to the new rules by monitoring of day-care centers. It would dictate nutritional standards and health requirements. It would also require a special program of activities for children.

The parents are not included in the decisions about programs before they are begun. Parents in the Soviet Union are likewise allowed to monitor their child's social indoctrination, but may not participate.

According to reliable sources a new agency will be set up to monitor day-care centers across the nation. The cost will be $3,000 to $5,000 a year per child and will increase in cost 33 percent per decade.

This plan of child control (FIDCR) is set for January 1980. This should enrage all loyal Americans and we should write our congressmen and not hesitate to tell them that if they propose or support such a bill that they will be out of office come next election. Write now so that this planned program of child-care will be soundly defeated. It's the "guidelines" of the Federal Inter-Agency Day-Care Requirements that needs to be defeated.

Alternative vote

To The Editor:

What's in a name? Recently a man in Louisiana legally changed his name to None Of The Above, with the stated intent to capture the votes of the disenchanted and disoriented electorate. The courts, however, have ruled that the name is deceptive and that it may not be used on the ballots in an effort to confuse the voters.

But despite the judicial upset of his aim, there still exists a viable alternative to show one's discontent in the voting booth. Too many, being dissatisfied with the choices presented on a ballot, never bother exercising their franchise. But instead of not voting at all, if one is dismayed with the issues or candidates, just refuse to choose either. Merely pull the recording lever. If the final tally is 250 votes for one alternative, 250 against, and 2,000 total votes cast, even the most stupid politician should be able to get the message.

Tasty entry

To The Editor:

It has been a long hot summer, the kind I like to nurture and mature pecans.

There have been problems, though — that soft hail we had back there in July gave me a real scare, but other than loosing a few leaves I came through it OK. Well in August I did get pretty dry once, and those insects, not to mention that awful pecan nut Case Bearer scare.

All in all it has been a pleasant year but there is one more thing that would make it perfect.

I have been hearing whispers in my neighborhood, some of my neighbors have won ribbons at the Midland County Pecan Show and some even won blue ribbons in the state competition. Isn't that something!

For 12 years I have been watered, fertilized, and pruned carefully and I have heard folks say delightful things about the taste of my pecans. I wonder why my owner doesn't enter me in the Midland County Pecan Show. Yes that would make it a perfect year.

Poor judgment

To The Editor:

I cannot understand how you have the poor judgment to publish the political cartoon that was in your Wednesday, November 7, issue.

The feature story of the day was devoted to Iranian hijacking with oil as their weapon, and you used a political cartoon that belittles the domestic oil industry. Is Jane Fonda now on your staff?

You should know the Middle East is a little less predictable and a lot more dangerous than a two-headed rattlesnake.

Teenage girl holds air reins

By ROB WOOD

JOHNSON SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — After graduating from college at 17, Jackie Parker says she decided she could do anything.

So far, she's earned a pretty impressive list of accomplishments.

At 19, she is the youngest flight controller at the National Aeronautics and Space Administration center in Houston, where she is preparing for a major role in next year's space shuttle flight.

AND THERE'S more.

—She completed high school at the age of 14.

—While at the University of Central Florida, she changed her major from math to computer science, and rather than fall behind her schedule, completed 41 hours of courses in one year.

—She earned her pilot's license shortly after graduation, mastering the skill to solo after one week of lessons.

—TO KEEP in top physical condition, she throws her 5-foot-2-inch, 105-pound frame into touch football, soccer, sailing, swimming, hiking, camping, and skiing.

"It just goes to show you," she said in a recent interview, "that if you believe in yourself, you can accomplish anything. And, you don't have to be a genius. I may be bright, but I'm sure not brilliant."

She does not discuss her IQ and NASA officials say it is classified personnel information.

MS. PARKER is in an 18-month intern program set up to provide on-the-job training for new flight control employees.

Her job when the space shuttle moves into orbit, probably next summer, will be to check the performance of five computers on board the craft. A NASA spokesman said her job is "high priority" in that her specialty is monitoring the computers during launch.

The controllers now are going through simulated missions, where problems are tossed out for quick solutions.

"We check everything for changes from normal and then respond," she said.

SHE IS ONE of about 150 flight controllers in the program, including two women who date back to the Skylab missions.

The other space center workers, Ms. Parker said, "accept me for my work and not my age. I guess they were a little curious when I first arrived. They didn't know what to expect, but they are all very, very friendly."

Now, she wants to be an astronaut.

"I am a realist and being an astronaut is a reality. I can fly. I have my math background. I have my computer science. I am physically fit. Why not?"

THERE ARE currently six women astronauts, the first having completed 18 months of training in September.

Applications for the astronaut program are accepted each year between Oct. 1 and Dec. 31, but Ms. Parker does not plan to apply this year.

There is no age requirement, but an applicant must either hold a master's degree in the sciences or must be working on such a degree.

Ms. Parker is not enrolled in a post-graduate program, but is in the process of determining what degree she will seek.

SHE SAID she would like to take a course "for emergency medical technicians. If I like it, I might go further into the medical field. And, I do want to pick up a course in engineering and one in physics."

hints from Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

I'm in need of help! I have two 5-pound sacks of granulated sugar that have become as hard as rocks. I tried putting one sack in a plastic bag and banging it against a cement floor, but only succeeded in breaking the bag instead of the sugar.

Do you have a suggestion?

Julia

Boy, for those of us with a sweet tooth, we don't like to be hampered with taking our "lumps" in lumps.

But there really is a simpler way of softening up that sugar other than damaging the garage floor.

Just put a slice of bread (color or texture makes no difference) on top of the sugar, brown or granulated, and after a couple of days you have soft, fresh sugar — but a hard slice of bread.

Now if you're in a hurry needing to get that recipe cooked, just heat your oven to 350 degrees, turn it off, and place the bag of sugar (if brown, remove it from the box first) on a sheet in the oven.

As the bag begins to get warm, the sugar begins to soften with no damage done to sugar or bag.

Heloise

JUST FOR BROLLIES!

DEAR HELOISE:

I found an old butter churn, and since my home is furnished in Early American style, I placed the churn by my front entrance and use it as an umbrella stand.

Amy Stitch

WHAT'S AT STAKE?

DEAR HELOISE:

For mothers who have children that enjoy drawing or doodling, purchase a roll of butcher paper.

It comes in large, white rolls, can be used for numerous things and lasts for years.

Ask your butcher, or the man at the meat counter, how you can obtain a roll.

Mrs. K. Tischner

DEAR READER:

This is your column. If you'd like to share a hint, ask a question or make a suggestion, write me care of this newspaper.

IT'S HALE AND HEARTY TOAST!

DEAR HELOISE:

While visiting my grandma, I wanted to make some toast but she didn't have a toaster.

So to keep from heating up the house with the oven, I took a large iron skillet, turned the heat low and put my slice of buttered bread into it.

Made perfect toast.

Kristie Hale, Age 10

THIS IS A JEWEL OF AN IDEA!

DEAR HELOISE:

I invented this hint all by myself.

You know the plastic containers that come in bubble gum machines? Well, after the prize is out, put your necklaces, rings and earrings and such in.

It keeps your jewelry separate and makes it easier to find.

Do you think this is a good idea?

Shellie Gothard, Age 11

I sure do, honey. I think you're a pretty smart cookie to come up with this one.

CANDI'S GEM!

DEAR HELOISE:

I have found an easy way to clean my diamond and ruby ring which has stones very close together and hard to clean.

I just let it soak in half ammonia and water for a few minutes; then rinse it with cold water.

There's no scrubbing and it looks like new.

KEY TO IT ALL!

DEAR HELOISE

I read your column every Sunday in our paper, and have used many of your hints.

I've told my daughter of numerous ideas to help protect the precious granddaughter — one being to place a folded towel over the bathroom door (or any other door with a lock) to prevent the baby or any child from locking herself inside the bathroom.

TRICK OF THE WEEK

DEAR HELOISE:

Get that old wedding gown cleaned and when you're having a baby shower cut the skirt off at the waist and sew it around a bassinet.

Sure beats having it lay in the closet turning yellow.

GOT A DATE?

DEAR HELOISE:

When clipping newspaper articles to be saved, always include the date and name of the paper it appeared in. Otherwise, the clipping loses its value.

You can cut off the date and name of the paper from the top of any page and attach it to the clipping you wish to save.

Mrs. L.K.H.

IT'S BERRY GOOD!

DEAR HELOISE:

How we love you! And I must tell you an easy way I've found to pick over cranberries.

Just take a large dinner plate, pour them onto it and start picking with both hands. You can see scads at once. Feel every one as you pick it up and, wow, in seconds the job is done.

Hope it helps others, as I love cranberries — both cooked whole and in jelly.
