Subway train collision kills 1, hurts 100

NEW YORK (AP) — One subway train plowed into the rear of another when 63-year-old signal lights failed outside a Brooklyn subway station Friday, officials said, killing a motorman and injuring more than 100 passengers.

John Simpson, president of the Transit Authority, said the signal lights that failed had been installed in 1918, adding they were one symptom of the decaying transit system.

The accident occurred less than 14 hours after the basic transit fare was boosted to 75 cents.

The motorman of the Manhattan-bound No. 2 train that ran through the lights was pinned in the wreckage for about three hours after the accident, and was pronounced dead when he was removed by emergency service personnel.

Authorities said they did not know whether the motorman, who was identified as Jessie Cole, 36, died on impact or while rescuers tried to extricate him.

Cole began as a conductor in 1970 and became a motorman in 1971, according to the Transit Authority.

Simpson said the lights were under repair Friday and went out completely five minutes before the accident, which occurred at 1:50 p.m.

He said the second train apparently went though a failed signal without making a radio check and rammed into the first train at about 10 miles an hour.

"It would appear to be human error," Simpson said. But he acknowledged the failure of the signal lights provoked the mishap.

An estimated 1000 passengers were aboard the two trains when they crashed. The city's Emergency Medical Service said about 100 people were injured, with 60 taken to three hospitals and about 40 treated at the scene.

Celebrations get good start for Fourth of July

By The Associated Press

There was plenty of gasoline and a good deal of rain in much of the nation Friday as summer's biggest getaway weekend began.

Most celebrations of the 205th anniversary of the signing of the Declaration of Independence were scheduled for today. But a few events — such as the "adoption" of an elephant by Senate Majority Leader Howard Baker, the end of a Mississippi steamboat race, and a rock'n'roll concert at Terminal Island federal prison in California — were on the day before the Fourth.

Many businesses, most federal offices and all U.S. stock, bond and financial markets were closed for the Independence Day holiday. Most retail stores were open, enticing shoppers with Fourth of July sales.

Millions of travelers took to the highways, bound for beaches and weekends out-of-doors, and the National Safety Council predicted as many as 550 people could die in traffic accidents over the three-day holiday.

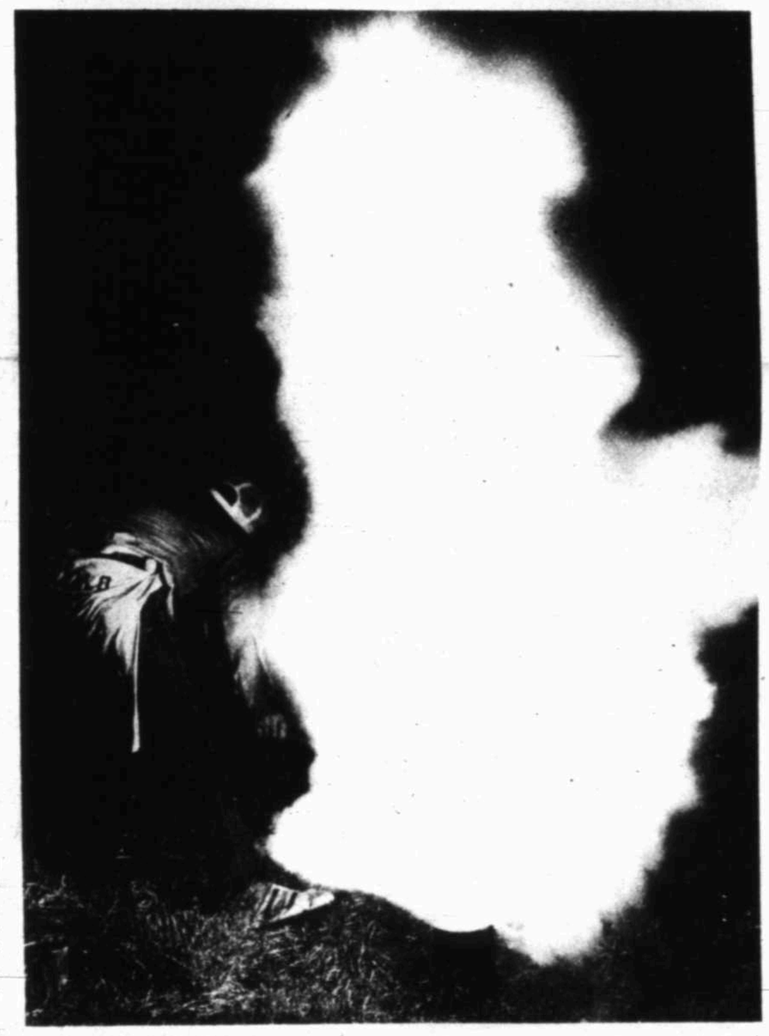

By late Friday afternoon, the death toll had topped 70.

Motorists found gasoline prices as much as 3 cents lower per gallon, the result of wholesale price cuts triggered by the world oil glut, increased competition and declining sales. Only on the West Coast, where demand for gasoline has declined more slowly, were prices climbing.

Rain washed out plans for a day in the sun in many areas. Showers and thunderstorms were reported in parts of the Midwest and upper Mississippi River Valley, as well as in the Southeast and along the Atlantic Coast.

In Pasadena, Texas, an 11-hour country music concert featured Mickey Gilley, Ernest Tubbs, Faron Young and others. The event, which continues Saturday, was planned after country music star Willie Nelson decided against his traditional July Fourth concert.

In Tennessee, the 10th annual Smithville Fiddlers' Jamboree opened for an expected 1,000 competitors, fireworks were planned at Opryland in Nashville, and Gov. Lamar Alexander marked his 41st birthday while trout fishing in the Smoky Mountains.

Polish, Soviet leaders meet

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko arrived here Friday hours after Premier Wojciech Jaruzelski announced he was bringing new faces into the Polish Cabinet to attack the country's economic crisis.

The official Polish news agency PAP said the 71-year-old Gromyko arrived about 5 p.m. and immediately met with Communist party chief Stanislaw Kania. PAP said "matters were discussed which are of interest to both parties and states."

The Soviet Communist Party Central Committee on June 10 harshly criticized Kania for not effectively dealing with Poland's crisis. Pro-Kremlin hardliners on the Polish Central Committee tried, unsuccessfully, to oust Kania from the party's helm during an emergency meeting.

In other developments:

— The government it had accused 9,723 people of corruption in connection with building trades "irregularities." Among the accused were 4,030 in senior executive posts including three former first secretaries of provincial party committees, as well as deputy premiers, ministers and heads of central offices. The Supreme Chamber of Control said criminal proceedings had been started against 500 persons.

— PAP said passersby grabbed a young man who was daubing paint on plaques of the Polish-Soviet Friendship Society in Lublin. The agency said the 21-year-old mechanic told police he was drunk, and his sentence was suspended. Several people have been arrested recently for defiling Soviet war memorials.

Gromyko, considered a Soviet pragmatist and expert on the West, arrived here 11 days before an estimated 2,000 Communist Party delegates, most of them attending a congress for their first time, convene. The congress is to choose new party leaders and debate the social and economic changes the government has made since the Gdansk accords were signed Aug. 31, 1980, to end nearly two months of labor unrest.

A hardline weekly publication, Reality, said half the delegates to the congress are members of Solidarity, the independent union that grew out of last summer's strikes. A Communist official said the figure was "wildly inflated.

Gromyko was scheduled to visit the "tomb of the unknown soldier" and a Soviet war memorial here Saturday and then start talks with the Communist Party's policy-setting Politburo and the entire, 140-member Central Committee, official sources reported.

Holiday death toll off to a fast start in Texas

By The Associated Press

The Department of Public Safety predicts 44 persons will die on state highways this Fourth of July weekend and Texans were well on the way to hitting that mark Friday.

At least 15 persons had died in motor vehicle accidents in the first 18 hours of the 78-hour reporting period from 6 p.m. Thursday to midnight Sunday. Five were pedestrians.

Here are details on how some died:

Three people were killed in a two car, head-on collision one mile west of Caldwell in Central Texas. They were identified as Walter Eugene Houston, 27, of Caldwell; James Roberts Stanley, 41, of Burleson and his passenger, William Wright Stanley, 62, of Caldwell.

Lee Carl Banks Sr., 60, was struck and killed by a car while attempting to cross Texas 288 in his home town of Rosharon in Brazoria County.

Another pedistrian fatality was Guadalupe G. Martinez, 29, of Clarkwood, who was struck by a vehicle while walking along the shoulder of Farm Market Road 2292 in Nueces County.

An unidentified woman whose age was estimated at about 30 was struck by a car Thursday night while walking in the eastbound lane of Texas 6 west of Clifton.

Jerry M. Lee, 29, of Aransas Pass, was killed when his motorcycle ran off the road late Thursday night 11 miles north of Hondo on Texas 173.

Dennis Monte Crowl, 20, of Austin, died when his motorcycle ran off a road in Austin shortly after midnight.

Paul Lawson, 20, of Inez, was killed Friday morning in a two-vehicle accident in Victoria.

Timothy Lynn McFarland, 25, of Port Arthur, died early Friday when the Jeep in which he was a passenger overturned 10 miles west of the city.

Kay Lawan Wright, 18, of Angleton, driving a pickup, was killed when it was involved in a head-on collision on a county road three miles west of Angleton.

Cecil Martin, 27, died at 5:10 a.m. Friday in a Dallas hospital from injuries received in motorcycle accident Thursday night.

There was no space at the hospital for 'baby boy Downing'

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — A tiny premature baby died after being denied special hospital care because doctors at one hospital heeded orders to cut costs and no space could be found in any other neonatal unit, officials said.

The death Thursday of "baby boy Downing" and the scramble to find special care for another infant who weighed 1 pound, 11 ounces at birth last week highlighted a problem one doctor said could result in the deaths of up to 15 babies a month in Florida.

Dr. John Curran, director of the neonatal unit at Tampa General Hospital — a facility equipped to handle the critical needs of babies born too early — said there was room for "baby boy Downing" at Tampa General.

But the boy was not admitted because the governing board of the hospital has ordered doctors to hold the number of occupied beds to 18 since June 11, when the hospital learned it would not be reimbursed by the Legislature for uncollectable bills, he said.

Curran said his unit has handled as many as 33 babies at once, and blamed the Legislature for a shortage of neonatal facilities he said could result in as many as 15 infant deaths a month in Florida.

He said the neonatal unit incurs some $2.5 million in uncollectable bills annually. Babies often must stay for a long time, and the costs of their care are often prohibitive, he said.

There are nine regional neonatal centers in the state, including Tampa's, and they sought $30 million from the Legislature but received $17 million. Because of the financial problems, other hospitals don't want to start new units.

"Anybody in the health care business feels terrible about the loss of a life whether we can prevent it or not. It makes you feel bad. It's even worse when it involves children," said Julian Rice, Tampa hospital director. "But I can't think of a thing we haven't done. The program is bigger than the Legislature is going to be able to fund."

The story of "baby boy Downing" began in his mother's bed in a rural area outside Dade City, 40 miles north of Tampa, at about 5 a.m. Thursday. He was two months premature and weighed 2 pounds, 6 ounces at birth.

His father, Carl Downing, an unemployed citrus worker, said he ran a half mile to a telephone to call an ambulance because he didn't have a car.

Pasco County Emergency Medical Service personnel completed the delivery, and Duncan Hitchcock, a spokesman, said the boy was in "poor condition" from the start.

The baby and mother were rushed to Dade City's Community General Hospital, where doctors began looking for a bed in a neonatal unit.

The infant was suffering from respiratory distress syndrome and "several attempts to resuscitate him were made all through the morning," said Community General Administrator Don Shaffett.

At 5:28 a.m., doctors called Tampa General, which has a system to pinpoint empty beds in neonatal units statewide.

At 5:36, Curran said Dade City officials were told no bed were available.

Curran said a nurse told Dade City hospital there was space at Tampa General, but hospital administrators 2ould have to approve the admission.

At 5:50, Dade City hospital was told Tampa General could not take the baby, Curran said.

He said the doctor involved "had taken the position we couldn't take the child. That is our direction. When he found the baby still hadn't been placed by 8:20 a.m., his conscience was bothering him and he initiated contact with the administration that we had to do something."

The next notation on the baby's hospital record was at 9:40 a.m.

"That's when Dade City canceled their request. The baby was dying," Curran said.

He said babies in worse condition have been saved at Tampa General. "We've had many smaller than that survive. If the child is supported with appropriate equipment, we would expect a 70 or 80 percent survival rate. We don't save them all, but this was a potentially salvageable child."

"Medically, we could have cared for this child," he added, "but by the time anybody got really involved, it was probably too late."

Meanwhile, in Augusta, Ga., Stephanie McElrath, the infant born Saturday in North Miami, continued to improve, officials said. She was flown out of state by the Air Force when no room could be found for her in any Florida hospital.

"She's started to move around a bit; she's a squirmy little baby," said Talmadge Memorial Hospital spokesman Alex Vaughn.

Weather not likely to be hot as the firecrackers today

If anything outside of fireworks is going to be as "hot as a firecracker" today, well, it won't be the weather.

It'll be a hot, all right, but somewhat cloudy and breezy day and possibly a wet one if the weatherman is reading his charts and electric gadgetry right.

The temperature for the Fourth of July is forecast to peak into the mid-90s today, said a weatherman at the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport, and the chances of a cloud-burst and thunderstorms today is 20 percent. For tonight, the weatherman is allowing a 30 percent chance for rain.

Winds are to be southerly to southeasterly at 5 to 10 mph today.

Friday's high temperature of 98 degrees was hardly worth mentioning, particularly since the record high for the day is a searing 104 degrees recorded last year.

The low temperature Friday morning was 68 degrees, while the record low for a July 4 was 60 degrees in 1972.

Bani-Sadr supporters criticized

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Liberal supporters of fugitive President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr have joined an alliance of "leftist and rightist hypocrites" against the Islamic republic, the speaker of Iran's Parliament charged Friday.

But Speaker Hashemi Rafsanjani claimed foes of the regime have been beaten back by the country's spiritual leader, Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini.

The Rafsanjani speech followed a Khomeini order Thursday that all Iranian citizens turn informant to ferret out "counter-revolutionaries."

Before dawn Friday, a firing squad executed a man accused of leading anti-government riots in the town of Kharadj near Tehran, Tehran Radio said. The shooting brought to 90 the total of officially announced executions since Bani-Sadr's ouster two weeks ago.

Rafsanjani charged in a sermon at Tehran University that liberal supporters of Bani-Sadr are united with the underground Marxist Mujahedeen Khalq in a "confrontation against the Islamic revolution." The sermon was broadcast by Tehran Radio and monitored in Beirut.

But he said Khomeini had moved "right on time to crack down on this alliance, hitting them with one blow after the other without leaving them a chance to breathe."

Rafsanjani was referring to the daily speeches and statements the ayatollah has been giving since the bomb massacre that killed Chief Justice Ayatollah Mohammad Hussein Beheshti and 73 other fundamentalist leaders and activists.

"I believe the blast was the product of cooperation between rightist and leftist hypocrites," Rafsanjani said, claiming Khomeini's dismissal of Bani-Sadr has "united the nation and the armed forces anew."

The explosion Sunday at the Tehran headquarters of the country's dominant Islamic Republic Party was the heaviest blow dealt the nation's ruling fundamentalist Moslem clergy since Khomeini's revolution toppled the monarchy in February 1979.

Khomeini has been publicly denouncing the Mujahedeen as "American agents" and calling for a nationwide manhunt to purge them.

The Mujahedeen is believed to have about 10,000 supporters and is considered the main opposition movement in Iran, advocating an Islamic brand of Marxism and a secularization of the Iranian revolution.

The Mujahedeen and other leftist and centrist nationalist groups attempted to block Bani-Sadr's impeachment by a series of anti-government riots last month. But the attempt failed and Bani-Sadr has since been on the run, with an arrest-on-sight order hanging over him.

"The liberals are the rightist face of hypocrisy, the Mujahedeen Khalq its leftist face," Rafsanjani said in the sermon.

Begin, Peres vie for power in Israel

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Jockeying for a coalition government kept Israel on edge Friday as Prime Minister Menachem Begin and Labor Party leader Shimon Peres vied for power in the country's closest election in history.

"I am forming a coalition," Begin repeatedly told well-wishers as incomplete election results showed a virtual tie between his Likud Party and Labor.

The key coalition partner, the National Religious Party, threw new talk of a national unity government into the political bargaining, but there were no indications that Begin and Peres were interested in forming what is known in Israel as a "wall-to-wall coalition."

Begin and Peres studiously avoided a chance to at least exchange friendly greetings at a pre-Independence Day reception given Friday by U.S. Ambassador Samuel Lewis. The ambassador declined to speculate which man would emerge the winner from Tuesday's election.

Despite the close vote, Begin stood the stronger chance to form a government with the religious parties that are members of his outgoing coalition. His cabinet secretary, Aryeh Naor, said a coalition would emerge in two weeks.

Israel Radio reported that the popular vote was a virtual tie, but the suspense won't end until Tuesday when the National Election Commission finishes apportioning the ballots among the 120 seats in Knesset, the Israeli Parliament, and releases the final tally.

At one point Friday, the state radio reported Labor ahead by a few hundred votes, but later Likud was said to be narrowly leading; either way a slim margin out of some 1.9 million votes cast.

No vote totals were released in order to avoid divulging a military secret: the number of voters in the army, whose ballots were being counted last.

The state radio predicted Labor and Likud each would win 48 Knesset seats, and said the NRP would take six and the ultra-Orthodox Agudat Israel would win four seats. A coalition with the two religious parties would give Begin a total of 58 seats, and with three more likely from the new Tami party, he would reach the bare majority of 61. Tami is an offshoot of the NRP.

The military vote could give an additional seat to either Likud or Labor, Israel Radio said.

In any case the vote was so close that many analysts predict an unstable government, with the likelihood of new elections in the near future.

DEATHS

D.H. Clark

Doyle H. Clark, 68, of 1500 Carol Drive, died Thursday in a Midland hospital.

Services were held Friday in the Newnie W. Ellis Funeral Home chapel with the Rev. Bill Skaggs of Kelview Heights Baptist Church officiating. Graveside services will be at 4 p.m Saturday in DeAnn, Ark. Local arrangements were under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

Clark was born Aug. 31, 1913, in Badcaw, Ark. He attended school there, moving to Denver City, Texas, in 1946, and then to Midland in 1951. He owned and operated D.H. Clark Construction in Midland, retiring three years ago. He was a member of the Baptist church.

Survivors include four daughters, Joyce Seale of Yucca Valley, Calif., Betty Culp of Midland, Opal Letterman of Haskell and Linda Brown of Wichita Falls; a brother, Lewis Clark of Tyler; and 10 grandchildren.

Ann Livingston

Graveside services for Ann L. Livingston, 70, of 1104 W. Washington St., will be at 5:30 p.m. Sunday at Evergreen Cemetery in Crockett, Texas, under the direction of Waller Funeral Home of Crockett. Local arrangements were handled by Newnie W. Ellis Funeral Home.

Mrs. Livingston died Wednesday in a Midland nursing home.

She was born Jan. 4, 1911, in Crockett and spent her early life there. She moved to Houston, where she lived until moving to Midland in 1952. She was a member of Kelview Heights Baptist Church.

Survivors include her husband, J.D. Livingston of Midland; a brother, John H. Beard of Nacogdoches; and two sisters, Mrs. George M. Jones and Evelyn Baldee, both of Crockett.

W.L. Faller

Warren L. Faller, 59, of 901 Storey Ave., died Thursday in a Midland hospital.

Services will be at 3 p.m. Monday in the sanctuary of First United Methodist Church. Burial will follow at Resthaven Memorial Park under the direction of Newnie W. Ellis Funeral Home.

Faller was born Aug. 10, 1921, in Kansas City, Mo. He grew up in Kansas City, except for a short period when he moved with his family to San Antonio. He graduated from the University of Missouri in 1941. He entered the U.S. Navy, serving as a first lieutenant during World War II. After his discharge he moved to Lubbock where he worked for the Chamber of Commerce for several years. He then went to work for National Cash Register Co., moving to Midland as a branch manager. In 1955 he opened his own real estate office in Midland and became an appraiser shortly after opening the office. He married Elizabeth Anthony in Midland in 1954.

Faller was a member of the First United Methodist Church. He also was a member of Midland Board of Realtors, Texas Association of Realtors, National Association of Realtors, National Association of Real Estate Appraisers, Odessa Board of Realtors, Chamber of Commerce, former member of the Midland Planning and Zoning Commission, Midland West Rotary Club and Permian Chapter of the Sons of the American Revolution.

Survivors include his wife, Elizabeth Faller of Midland; a son, Tony Faller of Midland; two daughters, Leaf Faller and Christina Faller, both of Midland; and two sisters, Jacqueline Cobia of Savannah, Ga., and Betty Jones of Mountain Home, Ark.

H.C. Christian

Services for Herman C. Christian, 52, of 3500 Hyde Park Ave., will be at 11 a.m. Monday in St. Luke's United Methodist Church with the Rev. O.A. McBrayer, pastor, officiating. Burial will be in Resthaven Memorial Park, directed by Newnie W. Ellis Funeral Home.

Christian died Friday in a Midland hospital.

He was born Nov. 12, 1928, in Wanette, Okla., attended schools in Shawnee, Okla., was graduated from the University of Oklahoma in 1951, and was married to Delores Bonner on March 11, 1955, in Shawnee, Okla.

Christian, a geophysicist, joined Continental Oil Co. (Conoco) in 1954 in Ponca City, Okla., worked for Continental Oil Co. for 14 years and for Gulf Oil Co. for 13 years.

He had lived in various places in the Southwest and in California before he moved to Midland in 1978.

He was a member of St. Luke's United Methodist Church, the Permian Basin Society of Exploration Geophysicists and the American Association of Petroleum Geologists.

Survivors include his wife; two sons, Douglas Herbert Christian of Bakersfield, Calif., and Ronald Eugene Christian of Glendale, Calif., and two sisters, Dorothy Akin of Shawnee, Okla., and Roma Dee Johnson of Texas.

The family has requested that memorials be directed to St. Luke's United Methodist Church or to the Midland Chapter of the American Diabetes Association.

Mary White

KNOX CITY — Services for Mary Elizabeth White, 65, of Knox City, mother of Mrs. T.E. (Virginia Dell) Branham and Mrs. Dennis R. (Vickie Lynn) Stevens, both of Midland, will be at 2 p.m. Sunday in the First Baptist Church here with the Rev. John Gillispie, pastor, officiating. He will be assisted by Jimmy Rogers.

Burial will be in Knox City Cemetery, directed by Smith Funeral Home.

Mrs. White died early Friday in a Midland hospital following a lengthy illness.

She was born May 5, 1916, in Houston, Miss., and was married to Truman White on July 5, 1937, in Anson. He died on June 9, 1980. Mrs. White was a member of the First Baptist Church.

Other survivors include a son, a daughter, a brother, a sister, 12 grandchildren, seven great-grandchildren, a great-great-grandchild, two nieces, two newphews and great nieces and nephews.

Odessan accidentally shot by wife while rabbit hunting

ODESSA — An Odessa man who went rabbit hunting with his wife in a pasture northwest of Odessa was accidentally shot Saturday by a ricocheting bullet fired by his wife from his own rifle.

The man, James Daniel Reno, 29, was listed in stable condition Saturday night in Medical Center Hospital's Intensive Care Unit, a hospital spokesman said.

"A ricocheting bullet hit him between the eyes," said Ector County Deputy Sherff Joe Jones, who investigated the accident. The mishap occurred shortly before 3 p.m. northwest of FM 1936 and 42nd Street here.

Jones lost a lot of blood, the deputy said.

Reno was struck by a .22-caliber slug.

No charges will be filed against the wife, Brenda, the deputy sheriff said.

The couple was standing some distance apart when the wife fired off the round, which hit her husband.

The deputy said the man was conscious and talking after the shooting.

Acid spilled

ABILENE, Texas (AP) — A tank of muriatic acid collapsed and spilled at a plant here, forming a potentially dangerous cloud of gas before firefighters dispersed it an hour later.

Fire Chief James Pogue said no injuries were reported after the tank fell at the Cen-Tex Acid and Frac Co. The acid solution, used in the oil well servicing industry, ran down a creek but firemen diluted it.

"Once the cloud disappeared, we were in pretty good shape," Pogue said.

There was no danger from fire or explosion, he said.

Cen-Tex manager Doyle Hildebrand said the tank "just fell. All of a sudden I heard a hell of a noise."

He estimated damage to the tank at $4,000 and $3,500 for lost acid.

Birthday wish granted

With the Sacramento Valley heat nearing the 100 degree mark, all little Eli Dodson of Oroville, Calif., wanted for his fourth birthday was a "big green popsicle." His parents, Dale and Susan Dodson, granted his birthday wish by presenting Eli with a 300-pound popsicle made with the cooperation of Dodson's employers at a local ice plant. The giant treat complete with twin sticks was made using 33 pounds of sugar and 72 packages of Kool-Aid. Eli, giving the creation a good lick, had 30 friends assisting him.

NEA president says many believe in public schools

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Reports of declining confidence in the public school system have been greatly exaggerated, the president of the National Education Association said Friday.

"We find that those who are closest to the process — parents and students — have a great deal of confidence in the public schools," Willard H. McGuire said in an interview during the NEA's 119th annual meeting.

Nearly 10,000 delegates are attending the convention of 1.7 million-member NEA, the nation's largest teachers' union. The meeting runs through Tuesday.

McGuire said the public school system is under attack by those who would substitute a private school system and by "idea vigilantes" who would crusade for their own "rigid educational philosophy."

Ninety percent of the nation's students in kindergarten through 12th grade attend public schools, he said, and that percentage has remained stable.

The number of private schools, however, particularly those based on fundamantalist Christian philosophy, has increased.

"There are parents who have a specific need that they believe will be met by a private school," McGuire said. "We have no quarrel with that as long as they are willing to pay for it."

The NEA opposes tuition tax credits for parents of private school students, saying such allowances take money out of the public school system.

In the case of the Christian school movement, McGuire said those parents believe their children will receive moral training different from that received in the public schools.

"There is an inference that there is no moral training in public schools. But public schools are filled with moral and religious people who by their actions would instill moral values. But they would not be pushing a particular dogma," he said.

McGuire also disputed criticism that public schools have moved away from the basics of education.

"Public schools have never left the basics. They are important as a foundation for other learning. But public education also has contained a great deal more," he said.

McGuire, who taught algebra and Spanish in public schools in Minnesota before being elected NEA vice president and then president, agreed that public education does have problems.

However, he maintained that most of those problems stem from insufficient finding, which leads to program cuts.

"Public education is an absolute necessity for our society. It has provided the opportunity for countless million of persons to achieve what they never would never otherwise have been able to achieve.

"The option ought to exist for any parent or student to choose a private education. But that option should not endanger the opportunities of other students," he said.

Science programs may get the ax

WASHINGTON (AP) — After the House hastily approved its version of the federal budget this year, many members were alarmed to find they had failed to include money for the National Science Foundation and research funds for three other agencies.

But Republicans who purposely caused the omission were happy. They felt they improved their chances of later substituting lower budget figures in place of the original Democratic requests.

GOP leaders will get that opportunity because money for the foundation and agencies must be considered as separate bills if appropriations to those bodies are to continue.

"The bills will be vulnerable. It's going to be hard to argue against cuts when they come up," admitted Tom Moss, Democratic staff director for the research subcommittee of the House Science and Technology Committee.

The Reagan administration is eager to reduce funds for science education in public high schools and universities as well as certain international research agreements included in the NSF budget.

GOP leaders also will get a chance to limit funding for scattered community projects in the three other agencies: The Environmental Protection Agency, the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration and the Federal Emergency Management Agency.

Thanks to numerous Democratic defections in the House, GOP leaders were able to pass Reagan's overall budget package June 26. In the process, they restored funds for the controversial Clinch River, Tenn., nuclear breeder reactor. And they cut funds for other projects which the committee had proposed.

The Science Foundation's proposed $1.16 billion budget was part of the committee package, the result of being approved by a Democratic majority in the Science and Technology Committee.

But the money was deleted by Republicans who constructed the large substitute budget bill that eventually was passed. A handful of Democrats who objected to that tactic backed down when Republicans promised to reinsert the funds later in the day.

But the real GOP strategy, to have separate bills on the since appropriations, was obvious when the massive bill passed without the science money. Now chances appear good that Democratic defectors could help Republicans cut the science appropriation in a later floor vote.

"There is $127 million in the National Science Foundation budget above the Reagan request," said Gerald Jenks, the committee's Republican staff director. "We wanted a chance to make an amendment to that."

Rep. Doug Walgren, chairman of the research subcommitee, said the Republican maneuver in breaking the science budgets out for separate votes is better than what might have happened in this year's hurried budget process.

"It would have been worse if the Republicans quickly came up with some low figures and just rolled them into the overall bill," said Walgren, D-Pa. "I would much rather have the whole House develop funding for these agencies than the Republican leadership controlling it in a giant bill."

Rep. Don Fuqua, D-Fla., chairman of the parent Science and Technology Committee, said he would "act with all deliberate speed" to revive the projects under separate legislation. He said he was optimistic of success.

"This is no time for panic within the scientific community," he said.

Committee staffers said exposing the independent science budgets to scrutiny in separate bills should create problems only for NSF because proposed Republican figures for the other agencies are similar to Democratic proposals.

The Science and Technology panel set FEMA's proposed budget at about $93 million, NOAA's at $498.5 million and EPA's at $306 million.

Reagan asked for $91 million for FEMA. His requests for NOAA and EPA also were similar to the amounts the committee approved.

Clinch River, which former President Carter tried to halt because he feared the plutonium it produced could lead to the spread of nuclear weapons, managed to survive the budget battle.

Fuqua's panel had reduced Reagan's $233 million request for the Clinch River breeder reactor to $42 million and used part of the savings to increase funds for solar and other alternative energy programs.

But the House rejected that approach and restored the full amount for the nuclear project. In the process, it sidetracked the increased money the committee had proposed for solar and other alternative energy research.

Bargain nights being scrapped

CHICAGO (AP) — Plitt Theatres Inc. says Tuesday bargain nights are being scrapped because the nation's third-largest theater chain was losing money on the $1 admissions that sent attendance skyrocketing.

A major supplier, Warner Bros., "wants to charge us more for the admission of the patron than we were getting from the patron; otherwise we would not be able to show the films," explained Harold Klein, executive vice president of the chain.

Medicaid may feel budget pinch, too

WASHINGTON (AP) — State governments, already beset by mounting Medicaid bills, may have to choose between limiting eligibility or raising taxes if Congress approves tighter restraints on federal health spending.

A limit, or cap, on the federal contribution to Medicaid — which pays the health bills of nearly one in every 10 Americans — is the centerpiece of President Reagan's proposed reductions in health spending.

The president's limit of a 5 percent increase over current Medicaid spending is the most far-reaching and controversial of his health initiatives. It was put forward as a way to slow the growth rate of the program, which has equaled more than 15 percent a year for the past five years.

The fate of the cap is unclear — the Senate adopted it with some changes; the House rejected the whole idea. But Reagan succeeded in circumscribing the debate in Congress — members wrangled over where to cut health spending, not whether it should be done.

No one has yet compiled the potential effect on Medicaid of all the House and Senate actions last week.

"Although both the Senate and House proposals (for overall health spending) are somewhat different than what the president proposed, the dollar figures under the three proposals are not radically different," said Tom Antone, a lobbyist for the Department of Health and Human Services.

The differences will have to be ironed out by a conference committee of the two houses.

Medicaid was not the only area in which one house or the other deviated from the president's policy blueprint.

—In the much-discussed wholesale transfer of social programs to the states through block grants, each chamber agreed to three health grants in place of the administration's two. Funds generally would be cut about 25 percent, as the president asked, but Congress attached more strings on policy-making.

Interest groups insist that the reductions, paired with inflation, will lead to service cutbacks in programs as diverse as mental health and family planning.

—The Senate declined to drop the Professional Standards Review Organizations, the physician review groups which were supposed to hold down health costs. The House adopted a longer period for phasing them out th$n the president sought.

—Both chambers agreed to close Public Health Service hospitals, first established to serve merchant seamen. But each provided a few months for local governments or others to try to keep them open.

—The House kept many existing programs independent, outside of block grants.

Even where the administration failed to win on substance it made substantial headway.

Both the House and Senate agreed to a variety of changes in Medicare — the federally funded health-care program for the elderly — to save between $1.2 billion and $1.6 billion in the federal budget. Some changes would raise costs for beneficiaries.

The Senate, for instance would raise the hospitalization deductible to $75 from $50. The House would raise it to $70.

The Senate also adopted another far-reaching change in Medicaid. The minimum federal contribution to Medicaid would be reduced from 50 percent to 40 percent. It can exceed 80 percent in poor states.

Only 12 states — Alaska, California, Connecticut, Delaware, Hawaii, Illinois, Maryland, Michigan, Nevada, New Jersey, Washington and Wyoming — and the District of Columbia would be affected, but they have huge programs. California and New York alone accounted for one-third of all Medicaid outlays in 1979.

Exiled Soviet sees new patriotism in U.S.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Exiled Soviet conductor Mstislav Rostropovich views the United States on this Fourth of July weekend as a country of "totally extraordinary" beauty whose people are united in strong new feelings of patriotism.

In advance of a nationally broadcast holiday concert Saturday night at the Capitol, Rostropovich said the National Symphony Orchestra is planning a tour of the American hinterland.

"One of our future projects is to have the orchestra go to the smallest towns and villages in America, to play for people who have never heard live orchestra music," he said in the interview. "I want us to play for the farmers, to be pioneers of music where there was none before."

Cuddling his long-haired miniature dachsund Pooksie, Rostropovich said bringing music to the people outside the big-city concert halls "fills me with great joy." This, he said, is why he and the orchestra consider their free summer concerts at the Capitol so important.

He also disclosed that the symphony will embark in February on its first European tour since the world-renowned cellist became its music director in October 1977.

The orchestra will visit eight countries in three weeks — Switzerland, Germany, Austria, Holland, England, Belgium, France and Spain. Fund-raising efforts are under way to cover the $1.5 million cost of the tour. Among the first donations was a $50,000 gift from German publisher Axel Springer, given during a recent concert appearance by Rostropovich in Berlin.

The outdoor concert Saturday night, fourth in a series of Fourth of July engagements by the National Symphony, was being carried live for the first time on many of the 286 television stations of the Public Broadcasting Service network, as well as National Public Radio.

The concert, featuring Pearl Bailey singing patriotic songs and actor E.G. Marshall as guest host, was financed largely by Congress and corporate donors.

Rostropovich and his wife, singer Galina Vishnevskaya, left the Soviet Union in 1974 with their government's blessing after they complained of being deprived of their artistic liberty. Four years later, in March 1978, the Soviet government stripped them of their citizenship, accusing Rostropovich of "acts harmful to the prestige of the U.S.S.R."

Since he arrived in the United States in 1974, Rostropovich said, "My impressions of America have deepened and changed.

"First, I'm absolutely convinced that the nature and environment of a land has a great influence on its people. Americans are a people of a grand sweep, to the same extent as their country. The beauty of this country and its variety are totally extraordinary.

"And during the time I have spent here, with a great deal of pleasure, I have noticed that Americans have crystallized feelings of patriotism towards their country.

"I think perhaps it is connected to a greater and greater extent with difficulties they face around the world, and the suffering the people went through during the Vietnam War. I think the people have come to treasure their country more, and the country as a whole has become more united than ever before."

He loves America so thoroughly now, he says, that "I am even ready to forgive Washington its sauna-like atmosphere."

Rostropovich, 54, still has a dream of returning to the Soviet Union to perform, but believes that day must await removal of barriers between his native and adopted homelands.

"They threw me out, and so far no one has invited me back," he said with a laugh.

Shot misses Protestant leader

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — A gunman fired a single shot Friday at a police car carrying the Rev. Ian Paisley through Belfast, but the bullet missed and the extremist Protestant leader was unharmed, the Royal Ulster Constabulary reported.

An anonymous caller telephoned Belfast news organizations and claimed responsibility in the name of the Irish National Liberation Army, but he did not say whether the target was Paisley or the police car.

Paisley, who has round-the-clock police protection, was being driven home from an interview at studios of the British Broadcasting Corp., an RUC spokesman said. He said that when the shot rang out, the car sped away.

The INLA, along with the Irish Republican Army, is fighting to drive the British out of Northern Ireland. Both groups are supported mostly by Roman Catholics. Paisley's Democratic Unionist Party staunchly opposes any weakening of British control in this predominantly Protestant province.

The incident took place shortly after British Northern Ireland Secretary Humphrey Atkins warned Paisley that authorities were examining his vow to raise a "Protestant army" to fight the IRA. Atkins said Paisley would not be allowed to break the law.

"Everybody, no matter who they are, is subject to the law," Atkins said in a London interview with Britain's Independent Television News. He said Paisley's remarks to a rally of his supporters Thursday night in Sixmilecross, 60 miles west of here in County Tyrone, were "being studied" by police.

On Thursday, Britain announced it would form a non-sectarian Northern Ireland Council to advise him on running the province. He said it would have no legislative autority but would be the first step toward restoration of local political authority. Protestant and Catholic leaders rejected the idea.

The 55-year-old Paisley marched 2,000 men in military formation to the Thursday rally, where he said Northern Ireland's Protestants face a "solemn choice ... Shall we allow ourselves to be killed and murdered by the IRA or shall we go out and kill the killers?"

But after Atkins' appearance on ITN, Paisley denied he was proposing to take the law into his own hands.

"If a person comes to kill me and I kill that person, I would not say I am acting outside the law," he said.

The leader of the predominantly Roman Catholic Social Democratic and Labor Party, John Hume, said Paisley should be arrested for incitement to violence and murder.

The long-distance exchange took place as the first in a new group of IRA hunger strikers edged closer to death at the Maze Prison near Belfast and debate raged over an appearance by the prisoner's daughter on American television.

Joe McDonnell, a 30-year-old convicted IRA gunman, was in the 56th day of his fast seeking special treatment amounting to political prisoner status. He was given the Last Rites of the Roman Catholic church Thursday, a spokesman for Sinn Fein, the IRA's political wing, said.

McDonnell was the first of eight men to have taken up the protest from four others who carried it through to death in May. The British government has refused to accede to their demands, saying that would give political legitimacy to the IRA's violent campaign.

McDonnell's 10-year-old daughter Bernadette appeared on the ABC TV program "Good Morning America" Thursday and urged Americans to ask President Reagan to call British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher with a plea that she "do something."

Bernadette was interviewed along with the child of a Protestant family. The two are among 160 youngsters spending the summer in the United States as part of Project Children, which tries to give Northern Ireland's children a few weeks' break from the violence that has claimed at least 2,123 lives there in 12 years.

The government-run British Information Service called Bernadette"s appearance a "publicity stunt," and a spokesman for the Foreign Office said such use of a child was "abhorrent."

Danish holiday falls victim to age

REBILD, Denmark (AP) — The Rebild Festival on the Fourth of July is known throughout American communities of northern Europe as a touch of home on Independence Day.

But organizers of the traditional celebration, now in its 70th year, say it may fall victim to a generation gap.

"We've got to attact young people to the society, that's the only way it will survive, of course," said Knud Hvorup, secretary-general of the Illinois-based Rebild National Park Society. "The original generations are dead, or dying."

The Rebild National Park Society, with chapters in most of the 50 states, was organized in 1912 by three Danish-born Chicagoans who bought 450 acres of the scenic Rold Forest in northern Jutland, from where most of the Danish emigrants to the United States originated.

They deeded it to then King Christian X, stipulating the forested and heather-draped land should be maintained in its natural state and always open to the public.

The society claims 700 members in the United States and 800 in Denmark. In the states, Solvang, in southern California, is the largest chapter, with about 100 members.

Today, an "Abraham Lincoln" log cabin museum houses memorabilia donated by Danish-Americans and symbolizing their contributions to the United States.

Each year, the Fourth of July is celebrated at the park. This week, workers installed flagpoles along the Avenue of the States.

Saturday's guest American speaker will be singer Pat Boone, invited to talk about this year's theme, "the value of the family as a basis for our society."

President Reagan, while governor of California in 1972, was a speaker. Other speakers included former President Richard Nixon, the late Sen. Hubert Humphrey, the late U.S. Supreme Court Justice Earl Warren and television newsman Walter Conkrite.

In 1947, the grounds were packed with 50,000 people. The crowds have grown smaller in each succeeding year, with most of those attending of the older generations.

"A young chap may say, 'I know my grandfather, or my great-grandfather, was a Dane, but I don't even know where Denmark is," says Hvorup. "We've got to create an interest among the youth."

Some society members say the insistence on tradition is contributing to the disinterest by the young Danish-Americans or the Danes here with American ties.

China gives U.S. stiff warning over Taiwan

PEKING (AP) — The official news agency Xinhua said Friday that China may have to use force against Taiwan if U.S. policymakers abide by the U.S.-Taiwan Relations Act.

The news agency, in a warning about possible deterioration of U.S.-China relations, also said "it is extremely ridiculous to say that 'China needs the United States more' in coping with the Soviet menace." And it added China can do without U.S. aid in its modernization drive if necessary.

"Sino-U.S. relations have traversed a long and tortuous road and are now at another crucial moment of whether to advance in the direction as charted in the Sino-U.S. communique or to retrogress because of the Taiwan Relations Act," Xinhua declared.

In Washington, spokesman Joe Reap said the State Department would have no immediate comment.

President Reagan has stated he intends to uphold the act. It was passed by Congress to govern U.S. relations with Taiwan after the United States broke official ties with Taipei to establish diplomatic relations with Peking on Jan. 1, 1979.

The act provides for U.S. defensive arms sales to Taiwan, seat of the rival Nationalist Chinese Government. China contends the act gives an official character to U.S.-Taiwan relations, despite U.S. pledges to keep relations with Taiwan on an unofficial basis.

Xinhua demanded that U.S. policymakers "free themselves from the interference of the Taiwan Relations Act."

The strong warning follows a visit to Peking last month by U.S. Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr.

Earlier Chinese assessments said Haig's visit brought some progress in U.S.-China relations, but denounced Reagan's stand on the Taiwan Relations Act.

Xinhua questioned Haig's statement that China came to a better understanding of U.S. policy toward Taiwan because of his trip.

Xinhua said China was trying to accomplish reunification with Taiwan in a peaceful manner.

"But the provisions in the Taiwan Relations Act, which interfere in the internal affairs of China, can only encourage the Taiwanese authorities to reject peaceful talks and oppose peaceful unification," the state-run agency said. "As a result, China may be forced to resort to non-peaceful methods to settle the Taiwan problem against its wish."

Turning to the Soviet issue, Xinhua said the United States alone is unable to deal with the Soviet challenge and cited statements by Haig and other U.S. officials who have said the United States strategically benefited by the Sino-Soviet rift.

Religious party holds key to next government

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — In his sunglasses and somber black hat, Yosef Burg looks like one more elderly Jew living out his years in the Promised Land, unnoticed by the boisterous Sabra generation growing up around him.

But that nondescript quality is what makes the best political power brokers here, and although some say Burg is a fading force, he leads the party that holds the key to Israel's future government.

Burg's National Religious Party, known to Israelis by its Hebrew acronym Mafdal, has served in every Israeli Cabinet. And with Tuesday's election results heading toward a tie, the Mafdal's political stock has shot up.

Both Prime Minister Menachem Begin and Labor Party leader Shimon Peres are trying to set up a coalition, and it was no surprise when, with the ballots still being counted, they both hastened to meet with pale, portly Yosef Burg.

Begin and Peres appear to be winning 48 or 49 seats apiece in the 120-member Parliament — a gain for both. Ironically, the NRP's leverage has grown even though voters deserted it in favor of the major parties. The NRP is likely to win only half the 12 seats it controlled in the outgoing Parliament.

Along with the smaller Agudat Israel party, which won four seats, the NRP has been the guardian angel of orthodox Judaism in a country that has been overwhelmingly secular and socialist-minded in the 33 years of its existence.

Although its dues-paying membership has rarely topped 100,000, the NRP has been indispensable to every Israeli prime minister.

As the price of its loyalty, Burg's party has managed to impose a string of religious restrictions on daily life. Together with Agudat Israel, it maintains a ban on Reform and Conservative Jewish faith activities in Israel, controls all Jewish marriage and divorce, restricts abortion, keeps religious women out of the army, keeps the government's kitchens kosher and prevents public transportation from serving much of the country on the Sabbath.

Burg was born in 1909 in in Germany. He immigrated to Palestine in the 1930's and became deeply involved in Zionist politics. After World War II, he returned to Europe in search of Jewish orphans of the Holocaust on a mission to bring them here.

Elected to Israel's first Parliament, he became minister of health in 1951 and has served in every Cabinet since.

As interior minister for the past decade, he has wielded enormous influence through the state funds he allocates to local authorities. And in 1979 he was named chief negotiator on autonomy for the Palestinians of the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip.

Although he lives by rigid orthodox law, Burg has always known when to compromise in political life. And although Israelis think it scandalous that the Mafdal should have any influence over their private lives, they tend to forget how stringently the Agudat Israel — governed by a Council of Torah Sages — would enforce religious laws, should that party hold sway.

"The NRP, which might make the most diehard English Tory seem like a moderate, is in fact moderate in Israeli terms," says Chaim Bermant, a leading commentator on Jewish affairs.

In private, Burg is a brilliant scholar with an eclectic mind entirely undimmed by his 72 years. He speaks Hebrew, German, English, French and two dialects of Spanish, and is teaching himself Arabic now that he is negotiating autonomy with the Arabs.

Europe's kings and queens to attend the royal wedding

LONDON (AP) — Four kings, five queens, five princes and three princesses have accepted invitations to the wedding of Prince Charles and Lady Diana Spencer, Buckingham Palace announced Friday.

Acceptances have come from the king and queen of Belgium, the king and the crown prince and princess of Norway, the queen of Denmark and the crown prince, the king and queen of Sweden, the king and queen of Spain, Prince Claus and the queen of the Netherlands, the prince and princess of Liechtenstein, the grand duke and duchess of Luxembourg, Princess Grace of Monaco and her son, the hereditary prince.

Thepalace also announced that by royal command, 300 handicapped people will have a spectacular view of the newlyweds when they return to Buckingham Palace after the July 29 wedding.

The prince, patron of the International Year of the Disabled campaign, has invited the handicapped to take the places normally reserved for a guard of honor in the palace forecourt.

Actress Julie Andrews talks with a friend during a weekend press junket hosted by her husband, Blake Edwards, recently at the Beverly Hills Hotel. Miss Andrews stars in Edwards' newest production, "S.O.B." along with William Holden, Robert Preston, Loretta Swit and Shelley Winters. The film is scheduled to open nationwide on July 1.

Box office boom predicted

NEW YORK (AP) — Honest marketing, rapid word-of-mouth communication and a surge of popular films will make this summer the best ever for the financially ailing film industry, a Paramount Pictures executive predicts.

"Variety," the entertainment industry trade publication, reports domestic box office receipts have been dropping steadily for the past two years, despite an increase in ticket prices.

"That's all about to end," says Gordon Weaver, senior vice president of worldwide marketing for Paramount Pictures.

Weaver says that with the release this summer of such blockbuster films as Paramount's "Raiders of the Lost Ark," Warner Bros.' "Superman II," Universal's "Cannonball Run" and the new James Bond film from United Artists, "For Your Eyes Only," the public will return to the theaters in droves.

"The consumer is still the ultimate critic," says Weaver, "and that's why there's a direct cause-and-effect relationship between success at the box office and the quality of films.

"If the consumer doesn't like a film," he says, "the word spreads like wildfire, especially with today's instant communications. Look at what happened to 'Heaven's Gate.' It took two days for word-of-mouth to kill that film."

It took about the same amount of time for positive word to get out that "Raiders of the Lost Ark" and "Superman II" were movies to see.

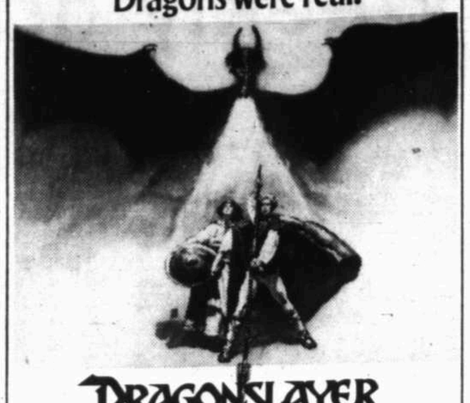

"Raiders" grossed $10 million on its opening weekend. But what is even more phenomenal and practically unheard of, says Weaver, is that grosses for the following Monday were higher than opening day in several cities, presumably because of strong word-of-mouth advertising.

"Traditionally," he says, "you drop 50 to 75 percent on Monday and don't begin to start picking up until the end of the week. If this trend continues, 'Raiders' will be one of the five top grossing movies of all time."

Meanwhile, "Superman II," which took in $14 million its first weekend, could become the highest-grossing movie ever made, if it continues to break box office records.

"What's happening," Weaver explains, "is that people are getting back into the habit of going to the movies instead of staying home or doing something else.

Dragons were real.

Korean singer owes success to American soldier

PERRINE, Fla. (AP) — When the first American soldiers marched into Taegu, South Korea, after the United States entered the Korean War in 1950, city folk were frightened by the size of the white-skinned troops. The adults sent 12-year-old Lee Sohn as their official greeter.

"I don't know why, but I wasn't scared at all and, besides, they looked friendly to me," recalled Sohn, a professional singer who says he owes his success to an American soldier.

As Sohn accompanied the troops to their tent city set up outside Taegu that day, a friendship that would dramatically change his life began.

"I was fascinated because he had blond hair and blue eyes," said Sohn. "I talked to him in Korean and he replied in English. We didn't understand a single word we said to each other."

That particular GI turned out to be an Army radio announcer, a corporal whose first name was Bruce. "I forgot his last name, and I had trouble pronouncing his first name. I called him 'Bluce.'"

As time passed, Bruce taught young Sohn to speak English. "He told me the best way to learn to speak without an accent was to sing songs. The first one he taught me was 'You Are My Sunshine.'"

From that ditty, Sohn went on to learn the top U.S. tunes of the 1950s. He sang them all day long, unaware how pleasing his crystal-clear voice was to the troops so far from home.

The fighting ended July 27, 1953, and most of the U.S. soldiers left. The ensuing years were tough ones for Sohn. Bruce was gone, his father was dead, the family home was destroyed and Sohn was the breadwinner for his mother, four sisters and a brother.

"We moved to Seoul and lived in a hut that I built. I raised chickens and pigs to support my family. But, I kept on singing a lot — mostly American pop songs." U.S. music grew in popularity in Korea, bringing an array of Korean vocalists trying to imitate their American cunterpart.

By 1955, Sohn was 17 and studying agriculture in Seoul University. He still worked his small farm, did odd jobs and sang.

One day, his campus friends secretly arranged for him to sing in an amateur hour at a swank teahouse in Seoul.

"I remember I had holes in my pants and old cowboy boots on. I sang an old western ballad I've since forgotten, 'Love is a Many Splendored Thing' and 'True Love.' I brought the house down and the owner gave me a tip that was more than I earned in a month. And he gave me a job."

Sohn was an overnight hit and in a year he was the most famous pop singer in Korea. By the time he was 22, he had made 20 movies, his records sold in the millions, and he was rich.

It was then he came to the United States.

"I had reached the top and there was nowhere left to go. Besides I had always wanted to be an American," said Sohn.

His sister Mihija won the Miss Korea beauty contest that year and was to compete in the Miss Universe pageant in Miami Beach.

"I took what money I could and chaperoned my sister to South Florida. I remember I had a suite of rooms in the most expensive hotel on the beach and then went looking for a job."

He soon found his Korean fame meant nothing in the country he loved from afar. But he landed a job at Place Pigalle, a popular Miami Beach nightclub at the time. From there, he performed in big-name nightclubs around the United States and on national television shows.

Sohn, citing loyalty, remained as Place Pigalle's headliner all these years and, through marriage, is now related to the owner, Harry Rich.

"Success is nice and fame is flattering," said Sohn, philosophical at 42. "I quit all the traveling a number of years ago when I came home one day and looked at my family and they were strangers to me."

He's been married to Marlis for 20 years and the couple has a 17-year-old son and 13-year-old daughter.

Now he stays close to home with only an occasional short trip to perform elsewhere, and is concentrating on composing. He said he hopes to have some of his music published soon.

Film well-made, inspired

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer

DRAGONSLAYER is another return to boyhood pleasures by young filmmakers. This time Matthew Robbins (director-writer) and Hal Barwood (producer-writer) seek to recreate the fantasy adventure — as epitomized by the Disney animated features — which they enjoyed in their recent youth. The result is a well-made, sometimes inspired flight of imagination that employs the latest cinematic wizardry. Peter MacNicol, apprentice to sorceror Ralph Richardson, uses his newfound powers to save a kingdom — and his love, Caitlin Clarke, from an evil-tempered dragon.

The young players are engaging, and Richardson contributes believability to the fantastic happenings. Robbins-Barwood have captured the feeling of the Dark Ages; their climax proves a drawback, being overly mystical and extended. Rated PG, with ample scares for young children.

It's never too late for a person to "settle down." Just ask 121-year-old Arthur Reed who celebrated his birthday last week. (Social Security records confirm his age). Next year he plans to marry for the fourth time. "But I won't get no old woman. Not over 35," he insists.

LBJ would approve of Reagan's techniques

By ROBERT E. THOMPSON
Chief, Washington Bureau
Hearst Feature Service

WASHINGTON — Lyndon Johnson would not approve of Ronald Reagan's objectives, but he most certainly would approve of Ronald Reagan's technique.

The reason is that the tactics Reagan is using to dismantle Johnson's Great Society program are the tactics Johnson used to pass the Great Society program in the 1960s.

In personality and approach to government, Reagan, the charming, conservative Californian, differs drastically from Johnson, the expansive, pragmatic Texan, whose record as an architect of liberal reform stands second only to that of Franklin D. Roosevelt in the annals of the presidency.

But Reagan and his chief lieutenants realize better than any White House crew since Johnson's day that the way to move Congress is to indulge in old fashioned horse trading. In the Johnson era, it was called wheeling and dealing.

Whatever named is attached to the procedure, it means buying congressional votes by offering presidential favors.

Johnson, who spent a quarter century of Capitol Hill and became a master power broker, thrived on the process of promising a dam here, a highway there and a housing development somewhere else in return for votes on his key legislative proposals.

That is the same procedure--albeit on a somewhat more modest scale--that Reagan and his associates have followed in pushing through the House a series of monumental budget cuts that will eliminate or sharply curtail many of the social programs that came into being during the Great Society. Their performance was masterful last week when they won, by 217 to 210, passage of the budget reconciliation bill, which lumped all spending reductions into a single measure and eliminated the prospect of congressmen having to vote on individual cuts that might prove unpopular back home.

Unlike Johnson, who personally was brilliant at bargaining for congressional votes, Reagan kept himself somewhat remote from the nitty-gritty of the trading process.

To conservative Southern Democrats, whose votes he desperately needed, he simply suggested in telephone call after telephone call that "my people" would take care of issues--such as sugar prices and energy development--that were important to the congressmen and their constituencies.

"My people," in this instance, referred to the Office of Management and Budget team led by David Stockman, the White House congressional liaison crew headed by Max Friedersdorf and the House leadership captained by Rep. Robert Michel of Illinois.

Stockman conceded that a lot of "adjustments" and "accomodations" were made as the House neared the critical vote. But he contended that they were "in the margin" and would not have a major impact on the budget.

Whatever the long range impact of the promises and pledges made by the administration to Southern Democrats, the technique paid off for Reagan.

Six killed when car struck by bus

KISSIMMEE, Fla. (AP) — Six members of a single family were killed Friday when their car went out of control and was struck by a Greyhound bus, the Florida Highway patrol said.

It took more than an hour to remove the six from wreckage of their their rented compact. The dead included a 41-year-old man, his 35-year-old wife, two young girls, a boy and an infant.

Authorities withheld the victims' names pending notification of next of kin.

A Florida Turnpike spokesman said the vehicles collided on the turnpike a few minutes after 4 p.m. south of this central Florida town.

President Reagan laughs at remarks by Henry Kissinger at a dinner Thursday in Washington. The president attended the dinner hosted by the Center for Strategic and International Studies of Georgetown University.

Schenectady used to the jokes

SCHENECTADY, N.Y. (AP) — It's been more than half a century since comedian George Burns played Proctor's Theatre here as a young vaudevillian. Burns is still around. So is Proctor's Theater. And so are the jokes about Schenectady.

Schenectadians are used to the jokes. They have a well-developed sense of self-deprecation from more than 300 years of living in a city that has written itself a place in history, and then listed it under a name no one can spell and few can pronounce.

In one of his half-dozen books on Schenectady, local historian Larry Hart claims at least 78 different spellings for the city's name dating to 1661, when Arent Van Curler, a Dutch fur trader, brought a group of families to settle a wilderness outpost along the Mohawk River.

The derivation of the word "Schenectady" is as difficult to pin down as the spelling. Choose between the Dutch phrase "Schoonachtendeel," meaning a beautiful and valuable piece of land, and the Indian "Schaghnecthatie," referring to the land beyond the pine plains. There are countless other variations.

Some comedians insist that the name is an Indian phrase meaning "end of the trail." Mayor Frank Duci disagrees.

"I think they just make fun of us because it's so hard to spell the name," said Duci, who treats Schenectady jokes like ethnic jokes — he tolerates them but doesn't tell them.

In 1977, Duci chided President Jimmy Carter in a letter for Carter's joking reference to Schenectady as the city that was burned in the film "Gone With The Wind," which had just been shown on network television.

Carter's effort to have a laugh on Northerners — and put Schenectady rather than Atlanta in flames — is understandable. He was stationed here as a young naval officer in the 1950s, learning nuclear engineering. He once told a reporter that he'd never seen so much snow in his life.

For the record, Schenectady hasn't been burned to the ground since 1690, when a raiding party of French soldiers and Indians made their way down from Canada to avenge a British foray on Montreal. They were bound for Albany, but the weather was so bitterly cold that they stopped at Schenectady and burned it instead.

Several U.S. presidents other than Carter have known Schenectady. George Washington slept here; Chester Arthur was raised and educated here; Ronald Reagan legitimized his nickname "Dutch" here when he was made a Patroon — an honorary Schenectadian — during an appearance as a spokesman for General Electric Co.

Duci recalls addressing a Kiwanis meeting in Alaska once. No one could spell Schenectady, he said, but everyone had heard of GE. If there is a single element that ties Schenectady to a place in history, it is General Electric — "the plant," or "the shop" — to the nearly 23,000 who work there. It made Schenectady the heart of an industry that changed the nation's way of living.

It was here along the Erie Canal in 1886 that Thomas Edison bought a pair of abandoned buildings in which to build the generators that were to power his recently invented light bulb and scores of other appliances.

Schenectady quickly got over its initial resentment of Edison's "intrusion." New York City business tycoons were not so welcoming.

In 1892, when financier J.P. Morgan engineered the merger of the Edison General Electric Co. with a competing Massachusetts firm, Edison's name was conspicuously absent from the new corporate name — the General Electric Co.

GE pioneered the idea of corporate research, putting scientists on the payroll to do nothing but experiment and create. Such an environment attracted the hunchbacked mathematical genius, Charles Steinmetz, and brought other GE scientists Nobel prizes in 1940 and 1973.

Few Schenectadians today could explain exactly what Steinmetz did to earn the admiration of the world's scientific community, aside from his experiments in manmade lightning and alternating current. But Steinmetz had 195 scientific patents to his credit and was eulogized by Edison when he died in 1923.

Some people say Schenectady's best years are behind it, that the city's "Golden Age," begun in the heady days of Edison, peaked in the 1930s when the population swelled to nearly 100,000.

Much of the city's growth came during the administration of Socialist Mayor George Lunn, who served three terms in the second decade of this century.

Before he broke with the Socialists in 1916, Lunn initiated a number of "radical" projects that remain in one form or another today — a vast parks system, city garbage collection and free medical and dental care for children.

Although Duci talks of the city's future — particularly the rebirth of its long-eroded downtown business district — the past is never far from his mind.

"We're working on a sesquicentennial celebration for August," he said, showing off a button with a picture of an ancient train. This is the 150th anniversary of the "DeWitt Clinton," the nation's first steam locomotive in regular service. It ran from Albany, the state capital, to Schenectady.

92-year-old man jailed for refusing to pay alimony

CLEARWATER, Fla. (AP) — A 92-year-old man is serving 30 days in jail for refusing to pay his ex-wife $1,200 in alimony.

"He would rather sit in jail than pay it to her," Redford Smith, attorney for Robert A. Rabinof, said Thursday. "He doesn't think she deserves it."

Rabinof, a St. Petersburg man whom Smith described as virtually deaf and blind, refuses to continue $400 monthly payments to the second wife he married at age 82.

He entered the Pinellas County Jail Monday, when Circuit Judge William Walker imposed the sentence for contempt of court.

Mrs. Rabinof could not be reached for comment.

The couple was divorced in February. Mrs. Rabinof filed a motion when her ex-husband failed to make his monthly payment in February and March. The action w$s dropped when he turned over the money.

"He said he regretted paying the first penny, and in court said he wouldn't pay her any more money," Smith said.

The attorney said his client does not believe he got a fair decision in February because of his hearing problems. Smith said he has to shout at Rabinof when they talk and he still can't hear the questions. Rabinof wants to file a motion claiming the original judgment was made on erroneous grounds, Smith said.

"He's not likely to prevail. His situation under the law is not all that cheery. In all likelihood, he will have to pay the $400 a month," the lawyer said.

High cancer rate found among homosexual men

ATLANTA (AP) — A rare form of cancer has been found at an unusually high rate among homosexual men in New York and California, the national Centers for Disease Control reported Friday.

During the past 30 months, 20 homosexual men in New York City and six in California were found to have Kaposi's sarcoma, an often fatal form of cancer, the center said.

Eight victims died within two years of the diagnosis, the CDC said in its Morbidity and Mortality Weekly Report.

Doctors who found the cancer are alerting other physicians who treat large numbers of homosexual men to help identify further cases and to shorten the delay in offering chemotherapy.

The nationwide incidence of Kaposi's sarcoma has been estimated by the CDC to be about two cases in every 3 million people annually. The disease in the United States primarily affects men older than 50, but the recent cases among homosexuals occurred in younger men, the center said.

The cancer has been thought usually to appear first in spots on the legs and then progress slowly over about 10 years. In the recent cases, however, the disease first appeared as one or more violet-colored spots or lumps in various locations on the body. Because the spots generally do not itch or cause other noticeable symptoms, they can be mistaken for bruises. The cancer sometimes causes swollen lymph glands and can spread quickly throughout the body.

No previous association between the disease and sexual preference had been found. It was the second time this year the CDC reported unusual illnesses among homosexuals.

The CDC said last month that five homosexuals in California had Pneumocystis pneumonia, a rare pneumonia usually found in people with severe immune deficiencies. The centers reported on Friday that 10 additional cases of the disease had been reported among homosexuals.

Kaposi's sarcoma also is generally associated with immune deficiencies. Doctors are not sure why the cancer and other illnesses are occurring among homosexual men, although many of the victims had flaws in their immune systems, the report said.

"It is not clear if or how the clustering of Kaposi's sarcoma, pneumocystis and other serious diseases in homosexual men is related," the CDC said. "What is known is that the patients with Pneumocystis pneumonia ... showed evidence of impaired cellular immunity."

One of the few tourist attractions in the highlands of Paupa New Guinea are these mudmen who pretend to be hitchhiking recently near their village. The mudmen got their name years ago when members of their tribe used similar clay masks to frighten their enemies.

Minister accused of forgery

CONROE, Texas (AP) — A former lay minister has been accused of forging the a church member's signature on a deed tranferring 2.5 acres of land in Walker County to his brother, a government official said Tuesday.

A Montgomery County grand jury indicted Dearing Jones, 50 and a former lay minister with the First United Methodist Church, in connection with the alleged fradulent 1976 land deal.

Montgomery County Assistant District Attorney Jerry Winfree said Jones allegedly sold a half interest in the land in 1975 to Ercell Knight, the church pianist.

A year later, the indictment charged, a deed purportedly signed by Mrs. Knnight was filed, transferring her half interest to C.M. Ellisor of Huntsville, and John Jones, a Walker County rancher and brother of the former minister.

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Sunday, July 5, 1981

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Those born on this date are hospitable, highly organized and often intractable. In the coming months, you may have to be a bit less independent-minded in order to advance your career, business goals. Others may have more control over your destiny than you do right now. A romantic relationship is both relaxing and interesting. Your generosity is the only thing that stands in the way of attaining real wealth. Do not indulge in reckless spending just to impress your loved ones. They would not be happy if they knew the sacrifices you might have to make later on.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You need some time alone today to bring your life into clearer focus. Explain your plans in advance to mate or partner. The location of your home influences how you celebrate this holiday Sunday.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): This can be an outstanding day for personal relationships. Put more emphasis on being sensitive, affectionate and understanding. The outlook for romance is bright.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): The promise of a happy day greets you this morning! Your instinctive good manners will pay off handsomely in romance. Mate is loyal, supportive.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Avoid negotiating new business deals today. Seek a change of scenery. Loved one may make an unusual request. Try to fulfill it if at all possible. Keep expenses within reasonable limits.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You may find a certain poem or song inspirational now. Rely on your intuition. It should prove quite reliable! A telephone call is enlightening.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Fight an urge to grab the limelight. Be willing to listen to other viewpoints when discussing finances. Seek the company of someone who shares your interests this evening.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A loyal friend may show new romantic interest in you. Draw on your sense of balance and fair play. Take steps to avoid what could be an embarrassing dilemma.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Face up to the reality of an unhappy situation and take steps to remedy it. If single, you may be in for a pleasant surprise. A change of scenery is favored.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): An excellent day for reflection. Share a secret with loved one. Romance may be moving in a new direction or coming to a conclusion. Private meeting helps resolve marital conflict.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Be honest in your relationship. Refuse to be pushed into making unrealistic promises. Remain cool even if mate's comments add to your agitation over a money matter.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Look before you leap where either employment or romance is concerned. Your self-confidence is restored. Luck is on your side! Keep your emotions under tighter control.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Your powers of observation serve you well in family situations. You learn about the future by looking at the past. Member of opposite sex seems overly materialistic.

Clay sculpture a mystery

By The Los Angeles Times

NORTHRIDGE, Calif. — The congregation of Temple Ahavat Shalom is attempting to unravel the mystery over the origin of a clay sculpture left in a trash bag on its doorstep.

"It's a beautiful work of art," said Rabbi Solomon Kleinman of the temple in a northwestern suburb of Los Angeles. "It has been so admired that we plan to have a number of castings made and the pieces sold in temple gift shops nationally to benefit our youth program. We want to thank the artist."

The wall hanging, which weighs nearly 40 pounds and measures roughly two by three feet, is of a bearded man, his fingers on the pages of a book.

"In this work the artist caught the look of the Jew through the ages," Kleinman said. "Learning is the heart of the Jewish religious experience; study is the central task of the Jew.

"The old man holding his book typifies all that is embraced in the Torah tradition, the whole enterprise of learning."

Kleinman said the sculpted face reflects both the sadness of the Jewish past "and a sense of confidence concerning its future."

The artwork showed up on a seldom used doorstep at the temple last fall, Kleinman said, just before High Holy Days.

"At first, I thought our gardener or janitor had just forgotten a bag of rubbish.

'No till' farming urged

By The Los Angeles Times

DENISON, Iowa — The battle to minimize soil erosion has sparked a revolution across the prairie, one that may signal an end to yet another classic American scene — well manicured, carefully tilled fields generally associated with spring and planting time.

There is a growing movement, particularly in the Midwest, to convince farmers that they should reduce or totally stop working their soil.

Farmers are being advised to leave the ground untouched from one year to the next, planting in the spring by cutting a narrow groove through residue left from the previous autumn's harvest.

Problems... Problems

People chuckle when they see a baby who seems to have the weight of the world on his shoulders. What can he possibly be thinking about that makes him seem so pensive?

His thoughts probably aren't very serious, for babies often strike delightful and comical poses that enliven the family photo album.

But babies grow up and become adults, with real problems and difficult decisions to make.

Don't forget, as your baby matures, to emphasize those things that will enable him to cope with his future. Don't forget love, discipline, understanding . . . and especially, don't forget his spiritual training.

Jesuits encouraged to study Marxism

By ROBERT BARR
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The head of the worldwide order of Jesuit priests has has told them that "Marxist analysis, as a whole, is something we cannot accept," but that they could work with any of its efforts for the common good.

In line with Roman Catholicism's wary stance toward Marxist theory — as distinguished from Soviet Communism — Jesuits were encouraged to study Marxism, try to understand its attractions and 'be open to practical cooperation with Marxists.

The relationship between Christianity and Marxism is an immediate and explosive issue for the church in Latin America, where "liberation theologians" link some Marxist ideas with Christian objectives of justice.

Pope John Paul II has identified the church with the poor, but has told priests and nuns to stay out politics — a line often difficult to draw in practice. A priest who feels he is advocating justice may find himself accused of "subversion" or of being a "Marxist."

Some in the church have openly embraced Marxism, while rejecting the dogmatic atheism of Soviet-style Communism.

The Rev. Pedro Arrupe, the Jesuits' superior general, told them in a letter, recently published in English, that they can accept some viewpoints which come from Marxist analysis, such as these:

"Attention to economic factors, to property structures, to economic interests which motiviate this or that group; or again, a sensitivity to the exploitation that victimizes entire classes..."

In practice, Arrupe warned, it is impossible for most people to adopt Marxist insights without also embracing the notion of class struggle or the rigid, materialist determinism identified with Marxist-Leninist ideology.

"Although Marxist analysis does not directly imply acceptance of Marxist philosophy as a whole ... as it is normally understood it implies in fact a concept of human history which contradicts the Christian view of man and society and leads to strategies which threaten Christian values and attitudes," Arrupe wrote.

However, "we ought not to refuse practical, cooperation ... where the common good seems to call for it," he added.

"We must ever act in accordance with our faith and the principles of action that it inspires. So let us behave in such a way that Christianity can be seen to be a message that has greater value for humankind than any concept, however useful, of Marxist analysis," he wrote.

"I don't think the superior general at all wants us to stop learning from Marxism," said Rev. Arthur F. McGovern. "He is concerned about people who would almost substitute Marxism for their faith."

McGovern, a Jesuit, is the author of "Marxism: An American Christian Perspective," in which he argues for the adoption of some insights from Marx's criticism of capitalism.

"A lot of times the distinction is not made between the Marxist critique and the Marxist solution," McGovern said in a telephone interview from Mexico City. "Marxism is basically a critique. I would totally disavow Communism."

In his book, McGovern contends that "Marxist analysis can be separated from traditional Marxist philosophical views," that Marx's method can be adopted without embracing atheism or advocating violent revolution.

He notes that papal encyclicals have harshly criticized the abuses of capitalism, even while condemning Marxism or communism.

In Latin Aca Marxism is part of the dominant intellectual structure, and Catholics have to deal with it, McGovern said.

"We certainly approach Marxism as an ideology — and with a certain caution, but with a certain necessity," said Rev. Paul Newpower, director of Media Relations for the Maryknoll Order.

"Those labelN¾3s thrown at us — Marxist, radical, leftist — are very lethal to our missionary work."

Two Maryknoll nuns were murdered last year in El Salvador.

Christians should not reject Marxism out of hand, nor adopt it entirely, said Rev. Peter Henriot, a Jesuit. He is director of the Center of Concern in Washington, an independent center for the study of social questions.

"Christians should be post-Marxist," he said, taking "very seriously the insights and categories, but moving beyond them where necessary."

So-called "scientific" Marxism, Henriot added, is shut off from the "deepest values that move people, particularly religious values."

In a pastoral letter adopted last year, U. S. Catholic bishops declared that "religious beliefs are clearly incompatible with Marx's theory as he developed it."

But the bishops held out the possibility that some streams of Marxism may develop along lines which would dissolve the antagonism between Marxism and Christianity.

The Newspaper BIBLE

GOD'S "OPEN HEART SURGERY" WORKS!

Paul and Silas traveled through Phrygia and Galatia, because the Holy Spirit had told them not to go into the Turkish province of Asia at that time.

Then going along the borders of Mysia they headed north for the province of Bithynia, but again the Spirit of Jesus said no. So instead they went on through Mysia province to the city of Troas.

That night Paul had a vision. In his dream he saw a man over in Macedonia, Greece, pleading with him, "Come over here and help us."

Well, that settled it. We would go to Macedonia, for we could only conclude that God was sending us to preach the Good News there. We went aboard a boat at Troas, and sailed straight across to Samothrace, and the next day on to Neapolis, and finally reached Philippi, a Roman colony just inside the Macedonian border, and stayed there several days.

On the Sabbath, we went a little way outside the city to a river bank where we understood some people met for prayer; and we taught the Scriptures to some women who came. One of them was Lydia, a saleswoman from Thyatira, a merchant of purple cloth. She was already a worshiper of God and, as she listened to us, the Lord opened her heart and she accepted all that Paul was saying. She was baptized along with all her household and asked us to be her guests. "If you agree that I am faithful to the Lord," she said, "come and stay at my home." And she urged us until we did.

Betsy Ross celebrates

Adrian, Mich. (AP) — For Betsy Ross, this Fourth of July will be a very special one. Not only is it her eighth birthday, but she also will have been an American citizen for eight days.

"I feel proud, glad," Betsy said of her naturalization. Even though she didn't have to take a normal citizenship test, she was a bit frightened by the procedure, she said.

Betsy was abandoned in Pusan City, Korea, when she was barely 2, said her dad, Bill Ross. When the Rosses adopted her about six months later and named her Elizabeth, she spoke only Korean.

Because he and his wife don't speak Korean, Ross said, Betsy has forgotten the little she knew, but they have tried to maintain her interest in Korean culture.

Betsy attends Lincoln Elementary School in Adrian and loves gymnastics, Ross said.

She has a sister, Brenda, 13, and a Vietnamese foster brother, Tran Bo Chau Phan, 19, who is a freshman at Michigan State University.

Saturday Nights Alive planned for Midland Christian singles

A night of entertainment and fellowship is being planned by the single Christian adults of Midland beginning at 6 p.m. July 18 at Haley Park, adjacent to the Planetarium on Indiana Avenue and Avenue L.

Saturday Nights Alive is designed to reach all single Christian adults in the Permian Basin area, offering them an opportunity to enjoy Christian entertainment and fellowship.

The evening's entertainment includes performances by recording artists Jamie Owens-Collins and Mary Ann Kirtley. The Rev. Mark Fowler, who specializes in ministering to singles, will speak.

Fowler is a 1969 summa cum laude graduate of Houston Baptist University with a bachelor of arts in English and sociology. Besides being yearbook editor, freshman class president, student body vice-president, student body president and a member of Omicron Delta Kappa, he participated for two years with the After-Dinner Players, a Christian drama group.

A 1972 masters in divinity graduate of the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary at Louisville, Ky., Fowler is currently enrolled in a doctoral program through San Francisco Theological Seminary.

Since December of 1977, Fowler has served as a minister to single adults at First Baptist Church at San Antonio. Fowler is a frequent speaker at convocations of singles and has for the last six years spoken at the annual Labor Day Single Adult Conference sponsored by the Baptist Sunday School Board.

The public is invited to attend the 6 to 9 p.m. Freedom Fair being held at St. Luke's United Methodist Church, 3011 W. Kansas Ave., Sunday.

A country fair theme will be carried out with food booths, game booths, a white elephant booth, a petting zoo for children, turtle races, clowns and Charles Nelson's western band to entertain throughout the evening.

Concluding the celebration will be a partiotic sing-a-long and Pat Baskin, district judge of the 142nd District Court, will be the guest speaker.

●

Connie Lynn, a Christian recording artist from Kansas City, Kan., will perform at 10:50 a.m. Sunday at the Christian Life Center, 2901 W. Kansas Ave.

Ms. Lynn has performed across the United States, in New Zealand, Australia and Europe. Her performance background includes Jesus festivals, federal prisons, women's groups and numerous television programs including the 700 Club.

Throughout her high school years she sang weekly with the Extra Dimensions on the Christ Unlimited television program produced by Kansas City Youth for Christ and aired nationally. After graduation, she travieled over 500,000 miles with the professional touring group The Renaissance.

The public is invited to attend.

The Westside Church of Christ, meeting at 1410 W. Illinois Ave., has announced the arrival of its pulpit minister Al Jolly, whose first day with the church will be Sunday.

Jolly and his wife, Mary, come to Midland from Cabot, Ark., where he served as minister for the last five years. Before that time he was with the University Church of Christ at Shreveport, La., the College Church of Christ at Searcy, Ark. and the Sylvan Hills Church of Christ at North Little Rock, Ark.

In his 20 years of preaching, Jolly has conducted over 100 evangelistic meetings in 20 states and three foreign countries. He has participated in various congregational training programs in Arkansas, Texas and Oklahoma.

He also has been active in youth work including Christian camps, youth meetings, banquets and vacation Bible schools. He has appeared on the lectureship programs of Harding University at Searcy, Ark., and Abilene Christian University at Abilene. He also hosts a weekly television show for children, "Jolly Bible Time," originating at Shreveport.

The Jollys are the parents of two daughters who reside in Atlanta, Ga.

Victim faced murder charge

LOS ANGELES (AP) — One of the four victims of Wednesday's bloody attack in a Laurel Canyon home was once himself charged with murder in the slaying of a reputed drug informer, officials said Friday.

Ronald Launius, 37, who was bludgeoned to death in the three-story home in the Hollywood Hills, was never tried on the murder charge following the death of a key witness, according to Officer Stephen Schuck of the Sutter County sheriff's department.

Launius' wife, Susan, 29, is in stable but critical condition at Cedars Sinai Hospital with head and neck injuries. A hospital spokesman said Friday she was able to speak with detectives.

Although police have revealed no motives for the brutal slayings, speculation has centered around drugs as a possible motive.

Joy Miller, 46, who was leasing the house, had been arrested on drug-dealing charges in 1980 and was awaiting trial at the time of the killings.

In May 1974, Launius, was arrested on a warrant for the murder of Gary James Moore in July of 1973, Schuck said.

The district attorney of Sutter County, which is north of Sacramento in Northern California, alleged at the time that Moore and Launius had been involved in a $10,000 drug deal.

The case never came to trial because Carl David Smith, 42, the key prosecution witness, died in July 1974 in a shootout with police in an incident involving another drug arrest, Schuck said. Charges against Launius and a co-defendant were dropped.

However, in 1974 Launius was convicted on federal charges of smuggling heroin, cocaine and barbiturates from Mexico and sentenced to eight years in federal prison. The Air Force veteran had been aquitted in 1972 on drug and gun counts in Yuba City.

As police continued their investigation, further details of the victims' backgrounds emerged.

Al Albergate, a spokesman for the Los Angeles County district attorney's office, said Friday that one of Ms. Miller's co-defendants on the drug charges has associated with organized crime figures.

But Albergate warned that links between William John Vlick, 53, and mob figures were "tenuous." Vlick and another co-defendant, Rosemary Barbara McKee, live two blocks from the house where Miller and three others were murdered.

In addition to Ms. Miller and Launius, those slain were identified as William Deverell, 44, who reportedly also lived at the house, and Barbara Lee Richardson, 22, of Sacramento.

Cedars Sinai Hosoital spokesman Larry Baum said Mrs. Launius, who suffered head injuries, has regained consciousness "at times."

Autopsies were underway on the four victims to try to determine the type of weapon used in the slayings. However, John W. Finken, a senior investigator in the coroner's office, said it would be "a long, drawn-out process."

Ms. Miller was facing felony drug-possession charges and was suspected of dealing drugs worth thousands of dollars, according to court records. She was arrested at the rented house June 4, 1980, and faced a pretrial hearig July 20 on harges of possessing cocaine and heroin and possessing methaqualone for sale. She was free on $1,000 bail.

Her co-defendants, Vlick and Rosemary Barbara McKee, were arrested in a raid at their home two blocks away on the same day. Police affidavits say officers found $59,000 in cash, 400 grams of heroin and 500 methaqualone tablets at the house.

The complaint against Vlick and Ms. McKee also included stolen property charges, and one police report said stolen furs and jewelry were confiscated from Ms. Miller's home. No such charges were filed against Ms. Miller.

"Actually, her part in the case was rather small," said Dennis Choate, the deputy district attorney who filed the charges in the case. "It's a seven-part complaint and (Ms.) Miller is only charged with the three drug counts. She's not mentioned in the stolen property counts."

Investigators allege in court documents that Ms. Miller sold drugs for Vlick and then turned over large sums of money to him.

However, Choate cautioned that the alleged dru; operation was "smaller than most" and only receiving attention because of the brutal slayings.

Defense considering opinion poll to weigh prejudice of Atlantans

ATLANTA (AP) — Defense lawyers for Wayne B. Williams may have an opinion poll conducted to see if he could receive a fair trial in this city terrorized by the slayings of 28 young blacks, a source close to the defense said Friday.

Williams, 23, a black free-lance cameraman, is charged with murder in the slaying of the oldest and most recent victim, Nathaniel Cater. The poll under consideration would measure the degree of local prejudice against Williams, the source said.

The source, who is privy to the planning of defense strategy and asked not to be identified, estimated the cost of a scientific poll at about $10,000.

Lawyers for Williams are not convinced his trial should be moved from Fulton County, which embraces most of Atlanta. Lawyer Mary Welcome said in a recent interview that Atlantans are particularly aware of the mistakes and failures of the special police task force probing the slayings of 28 young blacks since July 1979.

"The potential jurors would be very cognizant and would hold the prosecutors' feet to the fire," Ms. Welcome said. She said she had not made up her mind whether to seek a change in venue, and said publicity may have been less prejudicial here than elsewhere in Georgia.

When Williams was held for a grand jury June 23, District Attorney Lewis Slaton said he would seek an indictment within 30 days. Slaton has stated since that he would oppose a change of venue.

"We have a cosmopolitan community here. There are different kinds of people to draw from," Slaton said.

Superior Court juries in Fulton County usually are predominantly black, reflecting the racial makeup of Aolanta, which is two-thirds black. In the Williams case, prosecutors and defense lawyers agree, it is difficult to tell what influence a jury's racial makeup would have on a verdict.

His face had become a familiar sight on television broadcasts long before he was arrested and charged with Cater's slaying June 21. Since his arrest, law officials have said publicly they are investigating him in connection with some of the other killings.

Williams, an electronics whiz and music talent scout, has been the target of intense local and national publicity since June 3, when he was taken to FBI headquarters for nearly 12 hours of interrogation.

The source close to the defense team said the poll must consider how familiar Atlantans are with Williams and whether they have formed an opinion about his guilt or innocence in the Cater slaying.

Goshen residents start bid to secede from state

GOSHEN, Mass. (AP) — Although it's flanked by tranquil rolling hills and steeped in two centuries of tradition, all is not quiet in this western Massachusetts community of 652.

Saying they are fed up with government red tape, the townspeople of Goshen voted at a special town meeting this week to secede from the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

The vote was a symbolic gesture of frustration at dealing with incompetent state bureaucrats, concedes secessionist leader Kim Dresser. But he says it reflects the private feelings held by many of the state's western residents toward "bunglers" on Beacon Hill.

And Dresser says he's serious about trying to organize a 51st state if he attracts enough support from the state's five westernmost counties of Worcester, Hampden, Hampshire, Franklin and Berkshire.

"WE ARE just following in the footsteps of our forefathers at the Boston Tea Party," Dresser, a member of the town's finance committee, said Wednesday.

He introduced the secession resolution to 32 town meeting members gathered in a library basement draped with patriotic red, white and blue bunting and quilts made by school children to mark Goshen's 200th birthday.

On the stage, the spot traditionally reserved for the state flag has been usurped by the Goshen standard, which boasts a green pine tree centered in a coat of arms on one side and a frowning Indian with a bow and arrow on the other.

"It's been a long-standing joke that western Massachusetts ought to secede," said Dresser, 28, who runs the town's only gas station $nd a television repair shop. "Everything centers around that one hub in Boston. There's an old joke that the people in Boston don't know anything exists beyond Worcester except Indians."

THERE HAS been no response to the vote from officials at the state capital 130 miles away from this rural corner of Hampshire County.

The vote to secede was prompted by a state order directing the town to revalue its property and pay $23,500 for a state certified assessor, Dresser said. Town officials complain they could do the job themselves for only $5,000.

Goshen itself has few bureaucrats. The town spends about $35,000 of its $450,000 budget to pay three full-time Highway Department workers and about 17 part-time officials. About 96 percent of the budget is spent on "some form of state mandate," Dresser said.

Goshen residents interviewed Wednesday directed many complaints toward a state government they say is preoccupied with eastern Massachusetts.

"Boston dictates to this end of the state and we have to pay for it," said Claude Hill, 83.

He said people are annoyed at Boston officials who want to siphon water from the Connecticut River to increase their drinking water supply.

CHARLIE SEARS, 75, whose ancestors settled here in 1836, complained that the salt the state used on Goshen roads last winter fouled some community wells.

His wife, Louise, a member of the school committee, was unhappy about state-mandated costs for special education, which Dresser says took a $20,000 bite out of the town budget last year.

But not all of those who resent dealing with the state think secession is the answer.

"I don't agree with all the things we have to do, but I don't think voting to secede will solve anything," said town Treasurer Phyllis Mollison. "People resent being told what to do. They like to make their own decisions. But I don't think it would make it any better being in another state."

Museum traces taxes

JERUSALEM (AP) — Once it was wine, wheat, gold and dancing women. Today the government just settles for money. Taxes are an ancient and enduring human burden, an Israeli museum shows citizens of one of the world's most highly taxed countries.

In the musty exhibition hall of the Israel Tax Museum are samples of Phoenician tax receipts — hieroglyphs on fragments of a clay bowl — dating back more than 3,000 years.

A reproduction of a mosaic showing farmers of Ur, birthplace of the biblical patriarch Abraham, paying tribute to the authorities of the day, tries to tell modern Israelis that paying taxes is a time-honored tradition.

"No one will ever love taxes, but they should understand them and have sympathy for what taxes are about," explained Avraham Mende'el, director of the museum.

Located on the ground floor of the State Revenues Administration building in Jerusalem, the museum is visited by 15,000 Israelis a year, many of them schoolchildren brought there as part of a drive to eradicate widespread tax evasion in this country.

Complaining about taxes is just as much a part of tradition, as a letter from an outraged Israeli citizen shows. The document on display says: "In my official capacity, I hereby appoint you Emperor of Japan and the islands of the Pacific Ocean. This appointment is just as realistic as your assessment of my income for the year 1954-55."

The museum focuses on taxation in the Holy Land. On exhibit are the elaborate cursive tax regulations set by te Turks wo ruled here for 400 years. They include receipts for fees paid to cut trees, sow fields and pasture livestock.

After the Britsh took over rom the Turks in 1917, the high commissioner decreed a reduction in tithes "in iew of the seious position caused by the small yields of both summer and winter crops this year."

Preacher is spreading the word on the picket lines

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Carrying protest signs is the way the Rev. Mel Perry spreads the gospel, whether he's picketing adult bookstores, the Ku Klux Klan or a Southern Baptist convention.

"If the Lord provides us the means to go protest, we'll go protest," said Perry, 51, pastor of the 30-member Grace Bible Presbyterian Church near Nashville. "There's no place to quit."

Perry, who describes himself as a "fundamental Bible-believing Presbyterian," raised his first protest sign as a student in California 25 years ago when a Russian Baptist spoke at a Los Angeles church. The Russian belonged to a church registered by the Communist Party, and Perry believed he was a Soviet agent.

"To me, it's just an extension of freedom of speech," the minister said in an interview. "If you don't have the money to reach people by buying radio and television time, you look for some other method to get your message out.

"Picketing is a good way of getting what we want before the public. When you're standing out there, it's difficult for the public to ignore you. I just wish more ministers would see the need for doing it, then I wouldn't have to do it so much," he said.

People or events he believes to be communist-inspired are favorite targets of Perry's protests, which are often no more than the balding preacher marching alone holding hand-painted signs aloft.

His targets have included a Bowling Green, Ky., firm that sold Soviet-built tractors, President Richard Nixon's peaceful coexistence policy toward communists announced at the 1972 Republican National Convention, Communist Party chief Leonid Brezhnev's 1973 visit to Washington and President Jimmy Carter's decision to formally recognize China in 1978.

He picketed homosexuals who were protesting singer Anita Bryant's 1978 appearance at a Southern Baptist convention in Atlanta and he picketed the Rev. Billy Graham's crusades in Nashville, Cincinnati and Houston after Graham's visits to Poland and Hungary. Protest targets also included a motel that provided customers X-rated movies and an assortment of adult bookstores, liquor stores and massage parlors in Nashville.

"All of this relates to righteousness," the preacher said. "The Bible says righteousness will exalt a nation. So I'm a minister. I'm standing for right. I'm standing for liberty. I'm standing for freedom. God is the author of liberty."

Perry marched alone last year against a Ku Klux Klan rally and cross burning in Tullahoma, Tenn. "The Klan contributes to the communist cause because they'd like to see a race war in this country," he said.

His most recent exploit was at the annual convention of Southern Baptists in Los Angeles last month. Perry rode a bus from Nashville to California to express his view that every word in the original Biblical text is inspired by God. He wound up with his picture in Newsweek magazine.

The Bible Presbyterian Church, led by Dr. Carl McIntire of Collingswood, N.J., broke away from the United Presbyterian Church in 1938 due to theological differences.

Last month, Perry was joined in Houston by a fellow Bible Presbyterian minister from New Orleans for a protest at the joint meeting of the denomination's two largest congregations — the Presbyterian Church in the United States and the United Presbyterian Church in the USA.

The reason? "Liberals are in control of them," he said. "When liberals get in control, they just don't tolerate the fundamentalists."

A native of Franklin, Ky., Perry was raised in Nashville. He still lives with his parents. He was ordained a Bible Presbyterian minister in 1962 and organized his church in Madison, a Nashville suburb. The prefabricated stee building sits on a five-acre tract; Perry says he has to mow the grass himself because the Sunday offerings are so sparse.

His congregation once was twice as large with 60 people, Perry said, but "some of them got a little upset with this picketing."

"I was given an ultimatum that if I didn't get off this, I was going to lose some members. I just couldn't do it, so I lost some members," he said.

Perry said he reads newspapers to find causes he feels he should protest. In 1979, he began the year with a New Year's Day protest of U.S. recognition of the "godless and atheistic" government of the People's Republic of China and ended it with a Christmas Eve picket against a suburban Nashville nightclub he suspected was thinking about introducing nude dancing.

As he walked with 15 followers through the empty streets of downtown Nashville during the anti-China protest, a reporter spotted a sign saying, "UNICEF Aids Communism."

"That's from another protest," Perry explained. "We use both sides of a poster to be economical."

The fortunes of home ownership

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

A man's home is more than a castle these days. It's often a paper fortune.

Consider just a couple of examples:

—A 35-year-old, two-bedroom home in Dallas that sold for $25,000 in 1972 went for $75,000 last year.

—A Fairfield County, Conn., house that cost $66,000 in 1975 was sold in 1981 for $276,000.

From 1972 to 1980, the Consumer Price Index just about doubled. The sale price of that house in Dallas tripled. From 1975 to 1981, the CPI increased about one and a-half times. But the Fairfield County house brought four times as much this year as it did six years ago.

The Dallas and Fairfield County stories are not unusual.

"Real estate is very simple," said Eugene Kelly, vice president of William Pitt Inc., a real estate agency in Fairfield County. "It's a supply and demand situation. As long as you have corporations coming into the area, there'll be new employees who must buy houses. That demand keeps prices rising."

The demand, of course, varies from area to area. Regions that are booming economically tend to have the highest housing prices. Overall, however, an estimated one-fifth of the U.S. population moves from one place to another every year. That means millions of men and women buying and selling houses.

A joint report from the Department of Housing and Urban Development and the Census Bureau shows that the value of single-family homes increased more sharply in the last decade than the incomes of the people who owned those homes.

Between 1973 and 1979 alone, the median value of single-family, owner-occupied homes went up 95 percent. The median income of the homeowners went up 59 percent. That means people's wealth — on paper at least — was rising faster than their income would indicate.

"In fact," said Duane T. McGou;h of HUD, "during much of the 1970s, homeowners were found to have negative costs." The value of their homes, their equity, was increasing not only faster than their incomes, but also faster than the costs of ownership.

For people who bought houses before the current price spiral, the rise in real estate values has made it easier to "trade up," selling an existing house and using the profit as a down payment on a new and more expensive home.

mark and Mary Sullivan bought their first house in 1975 in Bridgeport, Conn. They paid $39,000, put 10 percent down and took out a mortgage for the rest at 9¼ percent, winding up with a monthly payment of $340.

In 1979, the Sullivans sold their house in Bridgeport for $58,000 and moved to Vernon, Conn. They bought a new house for $61,000, put one-third down and took out an 11 percent mortgage for the remainder. Their monthly payment was $450 — a noticeable jump, according to Sullivan, but a manageable one.

Rising interest rates, however, are making it harder for families to meet monthly payments — even if they have the cushion of profit from the sale of an existing home. If Sullivan bought his $61,000 house today, he'd probably have to cope with an interest rate of about 16 percent. If he put the same one-third down, he'd have a monthly payment of almost $550.

"People are still trading up, but not as much as they want to," said a spokeswoman for DRESCO, Inc., a real estate research firm in Dallas.

A group of handicapped climbers join hands on top of Mount Rainier Friday when they reached the summit of the 14,410-foot mountain. The climbers included five blind climbers, two who are deaf, one with an artificial leg and an epileptic.

Climbers triumphant

PARADISE, Wash. (AP) — Five blind climbers with Braille maps, one man with an artificial leg, an epileptic and two deaf adventurers completed a joyful trudge Friday to the snow-capped summit of 14,410-foot Mount Rainier.

The nine climbers could be heard over two-way radio, cheering and applauding as they unfurled flags and hugged each other in triumph over what they called the mistaken notion that the horizons of the handicapped are limited.

The climb "really tore up" the artificial leg of Chuck O'Brien, 35, of Philadelphia, who lost his limb in the Vietnam War. "But I'll make it," he said. "My spirit is really up."

Richard Rose, 36, of Vancouver, Wash., strode onto the summit, exclaiming, "There's one for the epileptics!" Rose spurred a landmark Supreme Court decision on the rights of epileptics who suffer job discrimination.

Eleven handicapped climbers and several guides set out for the summit Wednesday and those who made it were a full day ahead of their Fourth of July goal. Only two turned back.

First to reach the sun-bathed mountaintop were O'Brien; blind Kirk Adams, 19, of Snohomish, Wash.; deaf Alec Naiman, 27, of New York City; and guide and veteran mountaineer Jim Whittaker, the first American atop Mount Everest.

Minutes later, the four joined hands with the rest of the climbers and guides for a short jaunt across the white brow of the summit to sign a logbook, attesting to their success.

Their high base camp, the 11,500-foot-high Ingraham Flats, is near an 80-foot crevasse and a quarter mile from the spot where an icefall claimed the lives of 11 climbers June 21. That accident was considered a fluke, and Whittaker said this climb was relatively safe.

Also reaching the summit were Sheila Holzworth, 19, of Des Moines, Iowa, blinded at age 10; Frederick Noesner, 34, of Glenside, Pa., who lost his sight in childhood; Douglas Wakefield, 39, of Arlington, Va., blind since birth; Paul Stefurak, 35, of Federal Way, Wash., the president of the Seattle Recreation Club for the Deaf; and Justin McDevitt, 29, of Rosemont, Pa., blind since birth.

They planned to hike back to the base camp to sleep, and then to descend to Paradise Lodge at the 5,400-foot level by about noon Saturday.

Raymond Keith, 41, of Arlington, Va., blind since age 11, dropped out of the climb at the 12,800-foot level Friday, suffering nausea from altitude sickness. A guide remained with him.

Dr. Judith Oehler, 34, of Hingham, Mass., a blind diabetic, did not feel she could make the final assault and remained at Ingraham Flats. The group reached the camp Thursday night after climbing more than a vertical mile.

Decision on Supreme Court vacancy expected soon

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan is expected to announce soon his nominee to fill the first vacancy on the nine-member Supreme Court since 1975.

The retirement of Associate Justice Potter Stewart was effective at the end of the day Friday and there are hints his successor could be named within a few days.

Among those on a narrow list of candidates is Sandra D. O'Connor, an Arizona appeals court judge. She would be the first woman to serve on the court.

Bill Jacquin, president of the Arizon Chamber of Commerce, said she was interviewed at the White House on Wednesday.

The New York Times reported Saturday that Mrs. O'Connor is among "fewer than five" people in contention for the job.

The Washington Star said others on the so-called short list include former Solicitor General Robert H. Bork, Judge J. Clifford Wallace of the 9th U.S. Circuit Cort of Appeals and Utah Supreme Court Justice Dallin Oaks.

Here, at a glance, is the lineup of Supreme Court justices, listed according to the president who nominated them; giving dates of their birth, of Senate action on their nomination, and when they took office.

ONE VACANCY

Reagan has not announced his nominee for the vacancy created by the retirement of Stewart.

Stewart, born Jan. 23, 1915, in Jackson, Mich.; was appointed during a Senate recess Oct. 14, 1958, taking office that day. He was then nominated by President Eisenhower Jan. 17, 1959; confirmed by the Senate May 5, 1959; and again took the oath of office May 15, 1959. Stewart retired effective Friday in letter to Reagan dated May 18. Reagan accepted Stewart's decision to retire when it was announced June 18.

EIGHT JUSTICES

Here are the eight justices now on the bench:

Nominated by Reagan

—None.

Nominated by Carter

—None.

Nominated by Ford

—Associate Justice John P. Stevens, born April 20, 1920, in Chicago; nominated by President Ford Dec. 1, 1975; confirmed by the Senate Dec. 17, 1975; took office Dec. 19, 1975.

Nominated by Nixon

—Associate Justice William H. Rehnquist, born Oct. 1, 1924, in Milwaukee; nominated by President Nixon Oct. 21, 1971; confirmed by the Senate Dec. 10, 1971; took office Jan. 7, 1972.

—Associate Justice Lewis F. Powell Jr., born Sept. 19, 1907, in Suffolk, Va.; nominated by President Nixon Oct. 21, 1971; confirmed by the Senate Dec. 6, 1971; took office Jan. 7, 1972.

—Associate Justice Harry A. Blackmun, born Nov. 12, 1908, in Nashville, Ill.; nominated by President Nixon April 14, 1970; confirmed by the Senate May 12, 1970; took office June 9, 1970.

—Chief Justice Warren E. Burger, born Sept. 17, 1907, in St. Paul, Minn.; nominated by President Nixon May 22, 1969; confirmed by the Senate June 9, 1969; took office June 23, 1969.

Protest prompts 31 arrests

WASHINGTON (AP) — Climaxing a month-long series of demonstrations, 31 people were arrested on the White House lawn Friday as they staged a sit-down protest against Reagan administration budget cuts and U.S. involvement in El Salvador.

Minutes later, about 40 protesters blocked traffic on Pennsylvania Avenue in front of the presidential mansion by sitting in a circle, joining hands and singing. They were removed by city police, who later said no arrests were made.

The actions brought to a close a campaign of protests sponsored by two community-action organizations, the Community for Creative Non-Violence and the Jonah House.

Secret Service spokesman Dick Hartwig said the 31 arrests Friday brought to approximately 195 the total for the overall protest series. Earlier this week, when the total was 154, Secret Service spokesman Laurie Davis said, "It's the largest group-type arrest we have record of."

Hartwig said 15 men, 14 women and two juveniles were arrested in Friday's sit-down demonstration and were charged with "failure to quit," or leave, the premises. Conviction on the charge, a misdemeanor, is punishable by six months in jail and a $100 fine.

President Reagan was at home during the protest but it was not known to what extent he was aware of the demonstration taking place outside.

The group staging the sit-down demonstration had entered the grounds by going through on a regular White House tour — a tactic used throughout the series of protests.

After leaving the presidential residence, they broke away from an assigned pathway and sat down on the north lawn of the White House grounds, holding hands and forming a large circle as they read a statement protesting the El Salvador situation.

The protesters also displayed black-and-white photographs portraying alleged atrocities committed by Salvadoran government troops and security forces in that strife-torn Central American nation.

"We come here today bearing evidence of the sufferings of the Salvadoran people," the group's statement said. "The pictures we carry with us bear witness to the fruits of U.S. military aid and assistance to the Salvadoran government."

The demonstrators also said they were praying for "all those who are victims of the Reagan budget proposals" and "all who are victims of militarism and nuclear war preparations."

About 25 Secret Service officers made the arrests. Several protesters were dragged across the lawn when they would not accompany the officers voluntarily. A crowd of onlookers, watching from outside the White House gates, began applauding and singing — apparently in sympathy — as the demonstrators were led away.

Among the group of demonstrators who blocked Pennsylvania Avenue after the White House sit-down demonstration was Philip Berrigan, 57, of Baltimore, a former Catholic priest who first gained national attention when he was arrested for several protests against the Vietnam war a decade ago.

He and his brother, the Rev. Daniel Berrigan, 60, of New York, along with six other antiwar activists are currently appealing their March 6 conviction on charges of breaking into a General Electric Co. plant in King of Prussia, Pa., and damaging nuclear missile nose cones being manufactured there.

In a brief interview Friday, Philip Berrigan said he was "terrified" of the prospect that the American public may grow to accept U.S. involvement in El Salvador, "just as so many folks kind of went into an accommodation with Vietnam and the genocide there."

He said he was hoping for "a resurgence of conscience" and widespread public reaction against Reagan administration cutbacks in social programs. But he added: "That awakening doesn't seem to be happening on any sort of major scale."

Jesse Jackson attacks 'Al Jolson syndrome'

DENVER (AP) — In perhaps the most impassioned attack on President Reagan during the NAACP convention here, the Rev. Jesse Jackson accused the president of using racism to promote his economic policies.

In a 90-minute address Thursday night, Jackson said Reagan uses the "Al Jolson syndrome" to equate social and welfare programs with blacks.

"For every black on welfare, there are four whites," Jackson said. "But Reagan puts a black face on it and people throw rocks."

Jolson was a vaudeville and film star of the 1920s and 30s who performed in "black face" makeup.

Following the speech — which was peppered with biblical references and revival-tent-style oration — more than 500 people chanted "I Am Somebody" and other slogans for five minutes as Jackson shouted and pounded the podium with his fists.

Jackson also said that leaders of the national black civil rights movements will work together against the economic and social policies of the Reagan administration.

"We're going to make a radical shift from black tribalism to a new confederation," Jackson said.

"We will resist to the last ounce of breath in our bodies," he said. "We came here as slaves against our will ... we must never let white America forget that."

Jackson said black civil rights leaders converged on Denver this week at the request of NAACP Executive Director Benjamin Hooks and agreed to the renewed coalition.

The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People convention was in its final day Friday.

Jackson — president of Operation PUSH, for People United to Save Humanity — said Reagan's victory in the 1980 election was the result of "fear and frustration" on the part of voters.

"They thought Reagan was sunlight at the end of the tunnel, but it was nothing more than a train coming this way," Jackson said.

He attacked American foreign policy in Latin America as "gunboat diplomacy," called the administration's human rights policies "the ideology of might" and said proposed federal budget cuts are "surgery of the American poor without anaesthetic."

Jackson devoted some time to an endorsement of a proposed 10-year extension for the enforcement provisions of the Voting Rights Act of 1965. Without it, blacks could be "redistricted" out of office by local governments in the South and elsewhere that seek to dilute the black vote, Jackson said.

IF YOU WANT TO BE MORE THAN A MANAGER

QUIT!

That's Right, quit wasting your time in a dead end job where your biggest responsibility is unlocking the doors in the morning. If you are ready for more responsibility in a management position that will constantly challenge your ability to think and get things done, then you are ready to switch to Kentucky Fried Chicken.

Since WE'RE #1 in the industry, we can offer you the chance to earn between $11,000 and $13,000 in your first year, and that's at the entry level. Store managers can earn much more!

We also give you health insurance for you and your dependents that's 100% company paid, free life insurance, sick pay, vacations, a retirement program, profit sharing, and a number of other extras that make life just a little easier.

And on top of that, we have one of the most attainable and lucrative bonus programs in the industry.

But being #1 we're only interested in people that consider themselves #1 . If you think you have the drive, ambition, determination and talent that it takes to be successful in the quick service restaurant industry, give us a call. There is no telling what can happen when two #1's get together.

For immediate attention, Please call:

Owners preparing end to strike?

NEW YORK (AP) — The two sides in the major league players strike met separately Friday amid reports that the club owners were preparing a major push to end the walkout that has brought a Fourth of July without big league baseball.

The strike, over the issue of free-agent compensation, entered its fourth week Friday. It has wiped out 274 games so far, including 13 Friday night, as well as canceling the holiday weekend slates generally considered to be some of baseball's best drawing cards.

FEDERAL MEDIATOR Kenneth Moffett called both sides back to the bargaining table at 10 a.m. CDT today, and there were indications that a new proposal by the owners was in the works.

The New York Times quoted unidentified management sources Friday as saying that pressure was building on the Player Relations Committee, the owners' bargaining arm, to end the strike quickly.

The owners, the Times said, want to try to end the first midseason strike in professional sports history in America in time to save the All-Star Game scheduled for Cleveland July 14 and to make a National Labor Relations Board hearing on an unfair-labor practice charge, set to begin Monday, unnecessary.

According to the Times' sources, the owners are not so much concerned about the outcome of the hearing as about the testimony that might come from some of their brethren on the witness stand. Threats of fines up to $500,000 have kept most of the owners quiet about the negotiations, but the self-imposed gag rule could not apply to testimony under oath, the Times said.

AT THE Player Relations Committee, Hal Middlesworth, a spokesman for director Ray Grebey, declined to comment on the report.

"Ray is talking with his negotiating team" of presidents Chub Feeney of the National League and Lee MacPhail of the American League, and counsel Barry Rona, Middlesworth said.

Asked if Grebey had talked with any owners about a new proposal, Middlesworth said: "He's in constant touch with others in management."

The reports of possible movement by the owners followed a 90-minute negotiating session Thursday, which had ended abruptly when Grebey asked Moffett for a recess.

Donald Fehr, counsel to the Major League Players Association, said Friday that he had seen seen no signs at the previous day's session that management was ready to change its position on professional compensation for teams losing high-quality players in the free-agent draft.

"All we have seen is that we had a general meeting. We expected to resume talks after lunch, and they said they couldn't get back," said Fehr, who spent Friday huddled with Marvin Miller, the executive director of the Players Association.

The fact that Grebey suddenly asked for more than a day's recess in the talks was no sign that a breakthrough might be imminent, Fehr said.

"You can read anything into it that you want," he said. "My wife seems to thinks it's just a nasty move on their part to keep me away from a family picnic. But she has her own ax to grind."

Lefferts tames El Paso

Owen's hit is decisive blow

Midland's Cubs swept the final two games to earn a 3-3 series split with the El Paso Diablos and conclude a successful homestand of seven victories and five losses to open the second half Texas League West Division pennant race.

A two-run single by shortstop Dave Owen proved to be the decisive blow as Midland erupted for four second-inning runs on the way to a 5-3 win before Kiwanis Club Fireworks night crowd of 3,271 fans, the largest throng of the season, at Cubs Stadium.

Lefthander Craig Lefferts pitched 7 1/3 innings of nine-hit ball to notch his seventh win, but needed rally-dousing relief help from lefthander Norm Churchill in the eighth and Rob Blyth in the ninth to nail it down.

THE CUBS didn't hit any home runs while El Paso lost two $2.80 souvenirs over the fence as Jerry Lane soloed to left in the second and John Skorochocki hit his fourth of the season in the eighth. It was the latter blow that started the bullpen heating up.

Eddie Irvine opened the eighth with an infield hit and took second as third baseman Fritz Connally's hurried throw wound up in the El Paso bullpen. Skorochocki then powered his homer to right to narrow Midland's lead to 5-3.

John Hansen flew out to left but when John Evans doubled, Manager George Enright summoned Churchill. Norm responded by getting Texas League home run leader Stan Davis on a softliner to second and Lane on a grounder to second. However, when Willie Lozado opened the ninth with a single, that brought a quick call for Rob Blyth's wicked slider. Blyth got Al Manning on a fly to right and then Bill Schroeder on a snappy 4-6-3 double play to end the game.

Midland's winning rally in the second came against lefthander Mike Madden, who pitched a four-hit win against the Cubs here in April, but was shelled in both outings in this series. Jack Upton opened the second by singling against his old Colorado State teammate. Connally walked but Joe Carter grounded into a force at second. Randy LaVigne walked to load the bases and Carmelo Martinez beat out a high chop to third that plated one run as Manning desperately tried for the force at second, his only play. Another high chopper by Mike Shepston to first got in a second run and then Owen punched his single to right, plating LaVigne and Martinez.

MIDLAND'S only extra base hit of the night came when Javier Fierro, still smouldering after having a 13-game hitting streak snapped the night before, dropped a sinking liner into short center to open the third. Irvine made a bold dive for it, but it bounced by him for a triple.

Upton, 4-for-6 against Madden in the series, then singled up the middle to make it 5-1. That was Midland's scoring for the night, but it proved to be enough. After Lane's one out homer in the second, Lefferts scattered three hits over the next five innings until the eighth. The win squares Lefferts' record at 2-2 against the Diablos while Madden slipped to 1-2 against Midland.

Midland now embarks on its first road trip of the second half and how the Cubs fare in the six-game series at San Antonio may be significant. In the first half, swept a five-game series in the Mission City, a rout that ended the Cubs as a viable factor in the first half race. But the Cubs have been a team that has encountered difficulties on the road all season. At one point, Midland was 5-25 in games played in hostile arenas. However, they concluded a recent Amarillo-El Paso swing with five wins in their last seven games.

For the season against San Antonio, the Cubs are 5-10.

BRUIN BREWIN'S—Midland returns home next Saturday night to open a 10-game stand against Jackson and Arkansas of the TL East...With Friday's win, Midland is 23-20 at home and 17-14 since Enright took over as manager...Joe Carter was 9-for-25 with 4 rbi in the El Paso series and Connally was 8-for-20...Midland will present a little different pitching look for the Dodgers with Jon Perlman to make his debut in San Antonio. Jon and Randy Clark now give Enright two righthanded starters. Southpaws Mike Thompson, Craig Lefferts and Mike King are the other starters...

Chris Evert Lloyd

Evert give Mandlikova Wimbledon net lesson

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Chris Evert Lloyd gave Hana Mandlikova a tennis lesson she will long remember in winning the Wimbledon women's singles final.

The more experienced American took advantage of the teenager's nervousness to hammer home her superiority with every relentless stroke in a 6-2, 6-2 triumph Friday.

IT WAS a victory that Lloyd, 26, clearly relished. It was her third Wimbledon championship and halted a run of three successive final defeats.

And, afterward, she underlined her message to the young Czechoslovakian.

"Hana must learn that talent alone is not enough," Lloyd said. "She didn't use her head at all. She made errors and played sloppily.

"I was hungry and determined. When we engaged in long rallies, I came out on top."

Mandlikova, who never got into her game, said: "She didn't beat me. I beat myself."

That suggestion clearly ruffled Lloyd, who took advantage of all Mandlikova's errors, but also hit a number of excellent winners from the baseline.

"WHEN I am determined, I am still the best, and I proved that today," she said after her 60-minute victory.

She also quashed all talk of her imminent retirement to raise a family.

"Every year I come back here I play better on grass and feel more comfortable," she said. "I would like to come back for the sheer challenge of playing and proving myself even more on grass.

"If I enjoy playing, then I will come back. I still think I am young at 26."

Lloyd became the first woman to win the Wimbledon title without dropping a set since Billie Jean King in 1967. She lost only 26 games in seven matches.

"No player pushed me in the tournament. I pushed myself," she said. "A big part of my game is being hungry and determined. I have the edge over the others in this respect."

BECAUSE LLOYD has talked of having children, many tennis followers felt this would be her last Wimbledon.

"I am not pregnant," she said with a smile. "I can't go beyond that."

Strike threatening Chandler's party

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — The major league baseball strike is threatening to ruin Albert Benjamin "Happy" Chandler's birthday party.

The former Kentucky governor, U.S. senator and commissioner of baseball will be 83 on July 14.

He had planned to celebrate the day with the present commissioner, Bowie Kuhn, and about 77,000 other baseball fans at the All-Star Game in Cleveland.

BUT THE party appears doomed by the players' strike, which started June 12 over the issue of free-agent compensation.

Chandler's mood has belied his nickname since the walkout began.

"It's a tragic situation," he said in an interview after a round of golf with New York Mets second baseman Doug Flynn. "I've lamented the fact that it ever started. It's been on my mind every day ...

"I don't question their (the players') right to have a union, but I'm constitutionally opposed to strikes against the government and strikes against baseball. This strike is against the American people and they're not entitled to do that.

"There are two sides to every story, of course, but now they seem to be hardening themselves against an agreement."

Chandler switched political allegiances more than once in his long career, but his devotion to baseball never wavered.

That devotion — and some talent as a pitcher — led him to the bush leagues of North Dakota and Kentucky in the 1920s after law school at Harvard and the University of Kentucky.

IT LATER induced him to resign from the Senate in 1945 to succeed Kenesaw Mountain Landis as commissioner.

Chandler was known as a player's commissioner during his seven-year term. Branch Rickey got credit for making Jackie Robinson the major leagues' first black player, but Chandler made it possible.

Defying a 15-1 vote by owners against the move, Chandler approved the transfer of Robinson's contract from Montreal to the Brooklyn Dodgers.

One of his most cherished possessions, Chandler said, is a silver trophy he received from a group of players after the owners refused to extend his contract in 1952.

But even in those days, baseball had labor problems.

Chandler said there was an attempt to organize a players union while he was commissioner and several players threatened to strike one night before a game in Pittsburgh.

"I told them if they struck, we were going to play the game and I was going to suspend them," he said.

ASKED IF he would have made the same threat today, Chandler said: "I sure would, but I'm not going to second-guess the commissioner."

Chandler, who usually is at Kuhn's side for World Series and All-Star games, has been fiercely supportive of Kuhn in all the commissioner's scrapes with owners or players.

Kuhn is being criticized for his neutrality in the current impasse, but Chandler said: "He's a decent chap, a splendid gentleman and he does what he's supposed to do to protect the integrity of baseball. But every player's got an agent, every owner's got a lawyer and, most of the time, when the commissioner makes a decision, they sue him.

"I'm a bit sad for them (the players) because of the way they've tried to bypass the commissioner. I think they'd be better off if they had turned to him."

McEnroe has chance to quiet critics

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — John McEnroe, twice fined in a week and heavily hammered by the press, had his big chance to silence his critics today against Bjorn Borg for the Wimbledon men's single title.

The final was a repeat of their memorable match last year when Borg was pushed to five sets and barely hung onto his crown. The 25-year-old Swede was trying to win for a record-tying sixth straight year.

McEnroe, a hero in defeat in last year's final, has been in deep disgrace in this year's tournament. No player in Wimbledon's 104-year history has ever been in so much trouble.

THE TOURNAMENT committee fined McEnroe $1,500 for clashes with the umpire and referee in his first-round match last week. It slapped on another fine of $750 Friday following scenes in a doubles match, and recommended that the Men's International Professional Tennis Council fine McEnroe an additional $2,500.

And nothing had been done by Friday night about his stormiest match of all — the semifinal against Rod Frawley, in which McEnroe disputed line calls and was warned and penalized.

No one doubts McEnroe's tennis talent. He has all the shots in the book. His temperament is another matter.

If it's Mac the Mouth playing for the Wimbledon title today, he could land in still more trouble.

If it's Mac the Maestro, he could end Borg's long reign.

The Swede has lived dangerously in his defense of the title. Roscoe Tanner took him to five sets and stretched him to the very last shot of the 1979 final. McEnroe took him to the brink last year.

JIMMY CONNORS led Borg by two sets to love in Thursday's semifinal before the Swede fought back in one of the greatest matches ever played at Wimbledon.

Arthur Ashe, former Wimbledon champion and present U.S. Davis Cup captain, has an insight into McEnroe's behavior.

"It is impossible for him to change quickly, but he is trying," Ashe said. "It may not look like it, but he is trying for sure."

Ashe feels McEnroe will keep himself under control during the final.

"He will be brilliant, no question, but there will be a few fireworks. He won't put himself in a situation where he will be defaulted."

Ashe also thinks that McEnroe has been given a raw deal here.

"I think 70 percent of the time he is right. Some of the line calls are atrocious," Ashe said.

Is McEnroe good enough to beat Borg?

"I can't understand how he ever loses to him on grass," said Rod Frawley, McEnroe's semifinal victim.

"I GIVE McEnroe a good shot," said Ashe. "He has played two five-set matches with Borg in the last year, and won the last at the U.S. Open. He has to feel good about that."

Borg has proven his quality time after time. No one plays the big points, or fifth sets, better.

But if McEnroe keeps his hot blood in check, he has a real chance of ending the most magical run in modern tennis history.

On Friday, Chris Evert Lloyd taught Hana Mandlikova a lesson she will never forget in winning the women's final 6-2, 6-2.

Powers stuns Western

OAK BROOK, Ill. (AP) — Greg Powers, a non-winner on the tour who feels "deep down inside I can excel at golf," shot a blistering 5-under-paz'67 for a two-round, record-tying 136, and he takes a two-stroke lead into today's third round of the 78th Western Open.

The 35-year old native New Yorker had a 31 on the back nine Friday to tie the record set at Butler National last year by Larry Ziegler.

Powers' 136 also tied the 36-hole Butler record set by Bob Dickson in 1976 and gave him a two-shot lead over Don Pooley, the first-round leader who had a 2-under-par 70 for a 138 total.

Despite some jokes from his fellow pros, Powers continued to use a 1-iron off the the tee Friday.

He used it 10 times in the opening round Thursday when he shot a 69 and nine times in the second round — despite Lee Trevino's crack that if "he uses the 1-iron that often, in one year he'll look like Chi Chi Rodriguez."

POWERS LAUGHED and said, "I read that somewhere, and my wife thought it was funny. But I weigh 200 pounds and I think Cheech goes about 120 pounds."

Regardless, Powers has no intention of getting away from his game plan. "I'll stick to it tomorrow, but if I fall behind with about five holes left Sunday, then I'll go to my driver. I'm anxious for the next two days to unfold."

"I'm hitting the ball well tee-to-green, and the 1-iron keeps me in the fairway," Powers said. "As long as I'm in the fairway, I can play aggressive."

Powers birdied the first three holes of the back nine to climb into a tie with Pooley at 6-under-par.

"That's when I got excited and 3-putted," said Powers, who can double his previous high winnings for a year if he takes down the $54,000 first place prize. He won $27,000 in 1978 and has earned $26,000 so far this year.

A birdie on No. 15 with a 15-foot putt put him back into a tie for the lead, and birdie putts of 12 and 25 feet on the next two holes gave Powers his two-stroke advantage.

Pooley didn't have a bogey over the hazardous, 7,097-yard layout and sank a 20-foot putt at the sixth before closing his round with a spectacular 35-foot putt at No. 18.

"I didn't have too many birdies, but I had some exciting pars," said Pooley, who saved par on three successive holes with one putts, twice coming out of bunkers.

One of the more exciting rounds was posted by Joe Inman, who had a 71 for a 140 and a three-way tie for third with Tom Kite and Jim Simons.

Inman parr%d tHe first seven holes and had only one par on the last 11 as he came up with six birdies, three bogeys and a double-bogey.

"There was a lot of excitement on those last 11 holes," said Inman. "Whenever I made a bad swing, it cost me."

Missing the cut were defending champion Scott Simpson, who had a 151 snd last year set the four-round course record of 281, and former champions Larry Nelson, Al Geiberger, Jim Jamieson and Billy Casper.

Bradley, Stephenson share Jackson lead

DORION, Quebec (AP) — Defending champion Pat Bradley and Jan Stephenson each fired a 6-under-par 66 Friday to share the lead after the second round of the Ladies Professional Golf Association's $200,000 Peter Jackson Classic.

Bradley and Stephenson, now at 9-under par in the 72-hole event, had started the day in a four-way tie for second after posting a 69 on Thursday.

Sandra Haynie, who shared the first-round lead with Janet Coles, is in second place, two strokes behind, ayter carding a 3-under-par 69 over the 6,287-yard, par-72, Summerlea Golf Club course. The 38-year-old tour veteran has a two-round total of 137.

Coles, meanwhile, managed an even-par 72 and slipped into a fourth-place tie with Jo Ann Washam at 140. Washam had a second-round 69.

Patty Hayes moved into third place with a 138 total after posting a 5-under-par 67.

JoAnne Carner is in fifth place at 141, while Nancy Lopez-Melton, who shot a 72, is one stroke back at 142.

Bradley and Stephenson finished second and third respectively in the Sarah Coventry tournament at Rochester, N.Y., last week.

The 30-year-old Bradley missed a chance to grab sole possession of the lead when she bogeyed the 18th hole, missing a five-foot putt.

Bradley's problems on the 18th hole began when her tee shot landed in a divot. Using a 4-iron on her second shot, she hooked the ball into the rough on the left side of the fairway.

Bradley pitched well from the thicket and landed on the fringe of the green. After coming within five feet of the cup, she missed what seemed to be an easy par and settled for a bogey-six. It was the only bogey of her round, which included seven birdies.

Until her putting woes on the 18th green, Bradley was outstanding in that part of her game, sinking four 15-footers.

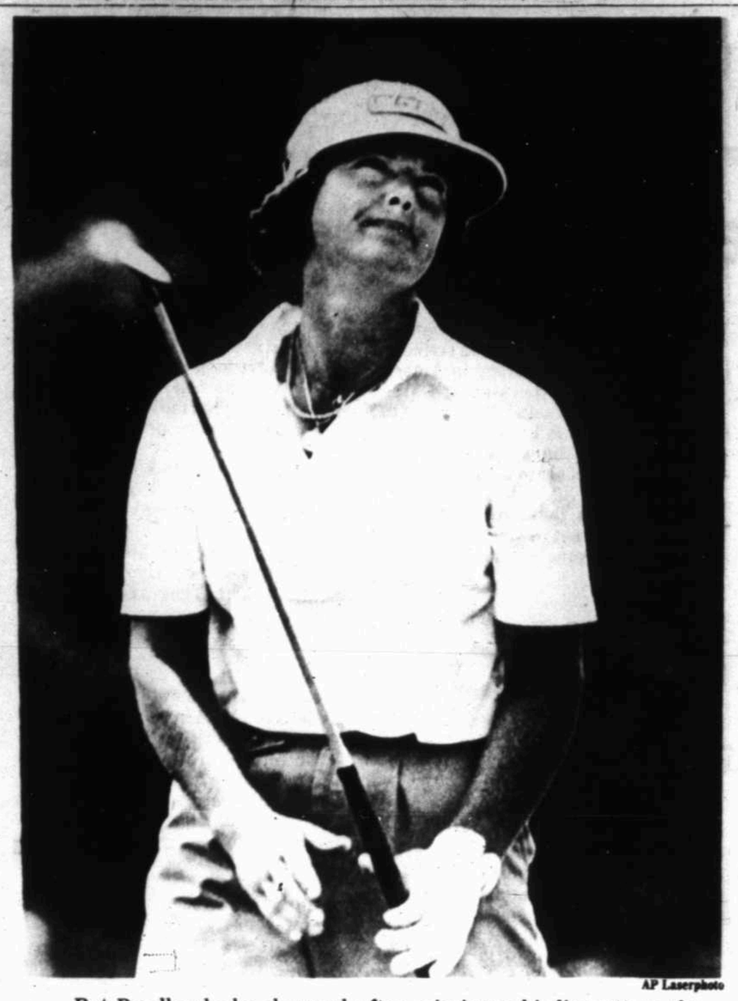

"It was almost a perfect round for me, except for the 18th," said Bradley. "I was concentrating today on hitting the greens and run for the putt and it worked out well.

"I think I only missed three greens at the most, although a couple of balls were on the fringe," Bradley added.

Stephenson, the flashy Australian, had her only real problem on the 16th hole when she failed to sink a shot from five feet. But she rebounded to birdie the 17th and 18th.

The 29-year-old Stephenson came within inches of collecting a hole-in-one on the par-3, 15th hole. Using a 5-iron, she was about eight inches from the pin and tapped in a birdie, one of seven she collected in the round.

Haynie got off to a miserable start by bogeying the first hole, a par-4. But on the sixth, she sank a seven-footer for a par and it seemed to change her fortunes. She rolled in a 30-footer for a birdie on the seventh hole and collected birdies on both nine and 10.

Pat 2 SB shorter than Bob Griese

By Melvin Durslag
Hearst Feature Service

When people used to ask Pat Haden how much shorter he stood than Bob Griese, Haden would reply:

"Griese is two Super Bowls taller than I am."

The imputation seemed to be that if Bob hadn't won two Super Bowls with the Miami Dolphins, the height of the two wouldn't be noticeably different.

Generously, the altitude of Griese was listed by Miami at 6 feet 1 and Haden is in the books at Los Angeles at 5 feet 11 although the two, side by side, are separated by only a fraction.

The relativity of size for those playing quarterback in the National Football League always seemed to provoke discussion during the incumbency of Griese, who, on a wistful note, tendered his resignation the other day. He offered the logical explanation that he had a bum shoulder and performed a line of work in which that condition couldn't be tolerated.

WHETHER HE stands 6 feet 1, or 5-11½, Griese is smaller than the picture quarterback you are asked to accept in the NFL these days, yet must be remembered as one of the most significant performers ever to play that position.

He played it 14 years at Miami, transforming himself from a sidearm thrower in college to a conventional thrower in a pro game in which his team did infinitely more than its share of winning.

The Dolphins under Griese rose to a great force in football, very much as the Packers did under Starr, the colts under Unitas and the old Browns under Graham. That indefinable unity that develops between coach and quarterback on teams that rise to uncommon sucess was present in Miami in the relationship between Griese and Don Shula, who dredged out three conference championships in a row between 1971 and '73, including a record unmatched in the modern structure of pro football.

THAT WAS the season of 17-0 that Miami put together in 1972 in a year in which Griese spent part of the time in a sling.

"I remember that year so clearly," says George Herbert Allen, who preceded Griese in retirement with a shoulder perfectly functional. "We beat Miami, 27-24, in our final preseason game that year. And Miami made us its 17th offical victim in the Super Bowl five months later."

Indeed, that was the game in which Griese almost lost his job to Garo Yepremian, who, picking up a loose ball on a field goal formation, threw the pass heard around the world.

When it was intercepted by Washington and returned to a touchdown, Griese exhaled deeply, secure in the feeling he wouldn't be replaced by a guy 5 feet 7 with no hair.

If he had been, Haden, at least, would be taller than another quarterback in fooball today.

The retirement of Griese at only 36 ruffles George Allen, because George not only was a quiet admirer of Bob's work for years, but feels any performer of 36 leaves the game with too much tread.

"You would have to say," reflects Allen, "that all things considered, Griese was one of the modern game's most important quarterbacks. In my book, his longest suit was reading coverage. Offhand, in fact, I can't think of another quarterback since Unitas who did this quite as well as Bob. His art was calmness, always throwing away from your strength."

"WHAT ELSE did he do that caught your fancy?" George was asked.

"He was probably the best cadence quarterback in the game," he responded. "By that I mean, he changed cadence so cunningly when he called signals that he forced iron-fisted discipline on the part of the defense to avoid being tricked into a penalty.

Buying Cubs not Trib's best move

By SHIRLEY POVICH
Special to The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The Chicago Tribune for years advertised itself, with enduring modesty, as The World's Greatest Newspaper. In June, the Trib may have qualified as the world's greatest something else, not necessarily flattering. For $20.5 million it bought 80 percent of the worst baseball team in the National League.

By its action, the Tribune was promising to save the Cubs for Chicago, against any threat the city would lose its failing National League franchise. In that sense, it was the Tribune to the rescue, and the newspaper wil be instantly loved in Chicago.

BUT FOR how long? The number of club owners with a hold on the affections of a city's fans is not only fewer than few, but begs the challenge to name one. This is because all owners operate in a forbidding system that decrees that for every two teams that win pennants there must be 24 losers. In most cities, fans tend to become fretful after a look at the league's standings, and love for a team owner can grow faint.

It is a misalliance, anyway, ownership of a baseball team by a newspaper, an association more to be avoided than sought. The inherent dangers and embarrassments are many, and in another year, even the next one, a reflective Chicago Tribune could be asking itself: "Wherefore have we done such an ill-considered thing as to buy a ball club? Oh, Wisdom, why did you desert us? Why did we not know of the folly of a newspaper to meddle with the making of the news?"

The instant danger for a newspaper is that a city's fans will tend to view the paper in terms of an inept baseball team it owns: your ballclub is a bumbler and that goes for your newspaper, too.

Sure, the Tribune and the fans will have dreams of pennants for the Cubs. But there hasn't been one for 35 years and the present state of the Cubs, in last place and hopeless, indicates no early end of the famine. For every defeat, every bonehead play, every booted ground ball the Tribune will be guilty by association.

AND IF the Cubs don't improve quickly, there is a prospect that Chicago fans will direct toward the new ownership the loathing they felt for the last one, which, to cut their losses, sold off so many of the team's stars.

It was Chicago Sun-Times columnist Mike Royko who, in one sentence, once described both the Cubs' ownership and the team, referring to "The nickel-biting Wrigley family which put a team of clowns on the field year after year."

A newspaper doesn't need this image. The Tribune is more in need of friends in Chicago than critics. It has been in a longtime circulation war with the aggressive Sun-Times anyway, and fans do tend to confuse an inept ball club with the ownership.

Granted, its purchase of the Cubs could be an immediate plus for the Tribune. But it is known that the long haul can beget fans who grow fretful and tend to measure their appreciation of the ownership by the standings of the clubs.

The St. Paul Pioneer Press Dispatch owned that city's baseball team many years ago, "and we were glad to get rid of it," said J. Russell Wiggins, then the editor of that newspaper. "It was too sticky."

THE WASHINGTON Post once owned part of the Washington Senators' expansion franchise from 1961 to 1964. But its late publisher, Phillip Graham, bought 20 percent of the team only to keep the faith with a consortium of eight other investors he urged to help restore baseball to Washington. The team never was identified as a Washington Post undertaking.

Graham's purchase was a stopgap measure and he rejected permanent ownership. He did not want The Post in the direct line of fire. Three years later The Post gladly sold its shares. Meanwhile, Katharine Graham and her mother, the late Agnes Meyer, found themselves sitting on the board of directors of the Senators, leading Katharine Graham to remark at one point, "Why couldn't Phil have bought something we know something about, like an art gallery?"

Another communications empire, the Columbia Broadcasting System, bought and operated the New York Yankees for nine years. It was a disaster. CBS took over a pennant-winning team and never won another pennant. In 1973 they sold to George Steinbrenner for $10 million the team they bought for $11.2 million in 1964. It was the only time in modern baseball history that a team was sold for less

The Tribune's editors have pledged that coverage of the team would be completely objective.

Even Merrill Lynch Pierce Fenner and Smith, those pragmatic folks excelled by none in giving the fish eye to a balance sheet, were once bullish on baseball. In the summer of 1980, the firm considered acquiring the White Sox as a possible investment plum for its customers seeking a tax shelter. One appeal of the White Sox for Merrill Lynch was the team's voluptuous $5.5 million carry-forward tax loss. But it was finally concluded that at $20 million the price was not right, although another bidder concluded it was.

The $20.5 million paid for the Cubs did not appear to be a glowing investment. It includes Wrigley Field, but not the land it is built on. Also, the Cub losses for the 1981 season already were projected at $3 million.

The Heat Is On is winner

RUIDOSO DOWNS, N.M. (AP) — The Heat Is On is a filly who sailed to a 2¾-length win in the sixth race on Friday's program at Ruidoso Downs.

It was one of 27 first-round qualifying heats leading to the estimated $680,000 Rainbow Futurity at 400 yards. The Rainbow Futurity is the second leg of the Triple Crown for two-year-olds.

The top two finishers in each of Friday's 27 trials will join the 54 survivors from Thursday's stanza in the final qualifying runoff on July 9. In that round, they'll be running against the clock. Those chalking up the 10 fastest times will advance into the grand finale on July 26, shooting at a victory purse of about $238,000.

The Heat Is On looked like a champ while winning her trial heat in 20:39 seconds. It was among the fastest clockings of the long afternoon. The win payoff was a meager $3.

A newcomer who made a big impression was Rebelier, who won the 24th race.

Federal judge dismisses Yank suit

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — A federal judge has dismissed a $4.5 million damage suit filed by the New York Yankees following the death of catcher Thurman Munson in an airplane crash two years ago.

U.S. District Judge Leroy J. Contie on Thursday dismissed the lawsuit, filed Aug. 2, 1980 — the one-year anniversary of Munson's death.

IN A 16-page opinion, Contie ruled that the Yankees were not entitled to collect $4.5 million — the value of Munson's contract — or any damages from Cessna Aircraft, which sold Munson the airplane and Flightsafety International Inc., which trained him to fly the jet.

Contie's ruling was made on a motion by Cessna to dismiss the case.

The Yankees could not be reached for comment Friday on the ruling.

Still pending before Contie is a $42 million suit against Cessna and Flightsafety filed by Munson's widow, Diana, and the couple's three children.

BOTH SUITS contended that Cessna and Flightsafety were negligent in training Munson to fly the jet airplane, which Munson had purchased less than a month before he was killed.

In documents filed in both cases, Cessna and Flightsafety have contended that it was Munson who was negligent because he was piloting the jet before having completed training with Flightsafety instructors.

The National Transportation Safety Board ruled that the crash was caused by pilot error.

Contie ruled the Yankees were not entitled to collect damages under the club's claim for loss of Munson's services or under Ohio's wrongful death laws.

STATE LAW permits wrongful death suits only by surviving family members. "Obviously, the New York Yankees do not fit within this exclusive class of beneficiaries," Contie said.

He said the value of Munson's contract "is based on the physical ability of Munson to play baseball and at the time that Munson died, the contract for his professional services was rendered valueless."

Contie cited several cases, including a ruling against a hockey team that sought damages from a motorist who ran into the club's goalie, to show that Cessna and Flightsafety owe nothing to the Yankees.

Aboard the plane when it crashed and burned were David Hall of Canton, a pilot and friend of Munson, and Jerry Anderson, another Canton-area friend of Munson. Both men escaped the burning plane, but were unable to free Munson.

Farris, Saptington lead at George Clark meet

D.D. Farris and Jack Saptington hold a slender one-stroke lead Friday after the opening round of division one play of the 17th annual George Clark Golf Tournament at the Midland Country Club.

Right on the heels of the leaders, are the teams of Ed Moses-John Goodrich and Tom Stovell-Richard Lamphere with a rounds of 59.

Tim Thompson and Rodney Satterwhite are resting in third place, three strokes off the pace set by Farris and Saptington.

Three teams are tied with 62s and three more are even at 63.

In division two, Tommy Withrow and Horace Robb grabbed a one-stroke lead over the teams of Foy Brantley-Jim Ormond and J.C.Williamson-Ralph Williamson. Withrow-Robb turned in a 58 with the runner-ups carding 59s.

Jack Eddens and George Shattel are sitting in third alone after a round of 60.

Bob Hover won the closest to the hole contest with when his ball stopped four feet, 11 inches from the hole.

Plank, McDaniel lead

Bob Plank and Alan McDaniel combined for a 53 to take the lead after Friday's opening day Florida Scramble at the Green Tree Country Club.

Tied for second, just two strokes off the pace, are the teams of Joel Mays-Lloyd MacDonald and Jim Lloyds and Dale Spencer.

There is a logjam for third with four teams tied at 56. Five more teams are knotted at 57, just four strokes behind the leaders.

Friday's play was a Florida Scramble, while today's play will be a combined low net of two-some and Sunday's format will be the best ball of twosome.

Winner of Friday's long driving contest was Jamie Winkel.

Petty expects interesting Firecracker

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Richard Petty expects Saturday's Firecracker 400 Grand National stock car race to be "real interesting."

Petty, who celebrated his 44th birthday Wednesday, would like nothing better than a victory as a belated present.

BUT STOCK car racing's all-time victory leader, with 194 career triumphs, has not enjoyed the same success at Daytona International Speedway in the summer that he has had in the spring.

Petty has won the prestigious Daytona 500, which is run annually in February, an unprecedented seven times, including this year. But he's taken the July 4 race just twice — the last time in 1977.

"I don't know why I do so much better here in the 500," Petty said. "It's hotter here in July, but it's hotter for everybody."

Petty, who never has been known as a great qualifier, will start Saturday's race 14th with a top lap of 189.323 mph.

His 21-year-old son, Kyle, even wound up ahead of him, qualifying 10th at 190.163.

"It's the best I've ever run here," Kyle said. "And when I came into the garage area, my daddy said, 'Stop being a showoff. You know I can't run that quick.'"

Cale Yarborough, who is a great qualifier at Daytona, will lead the field into the 10 a.m. EDT start of the 400-mile event.

Yarborough, winning a pole at Daytona for a record eighth time, recorded the top qualifying lap of 192.852 mph. Rookie Mike Alexander, who qualified 15th, was clocked at 189.136.

"The qualifying speeds were down a little this year from the spring race because of the heat and humidity, but I expect, with so many cars so close in speed, we're going to have a very fast race," said Yarborough, who has won the Firecracker three times.

PETTY SMILED when the story was mentioned.

"I didn't do too good, did I?" he said with a shrug. "I run about as good as I always do qualifying here. I always say it's more important to finish in front than to start there.

"But there sure is a bunch of cars in that 189 to 192 (mph) range," Petty added. "That ought to make things real interesting."

ONE DRIVER who'd like to be a lot faster than he's been going here is Darrell Waltrip, who leads all drivers this season with four poles and five victories.

Waltrip, who never has won a race at Daytona, qualified a disappointing 19th, turning a top lap of 187.555.

"We haven't run since we got here," he said. "And I learned a long time ago, when you roll it off the truck at Daytona or Talladega, if you run then, you run good. If you don't run, you don't good.

"Maybe we can get it all sorted out in the race," Waltrip added. "But this just makes it tougher."

Buddy Baker, who crashed during practice Thursday and missed the first session of time trials, was the fastest of the second day qualifiers at 190.082.

Princeton upset at Henley Regatta

HENLEY-ON-THAMES, England (AP) — Trinity College of Hartford, Conn., completed an extraordinary second day at the Henley Royal Regatta Friday when its heavyweight crew reversed two previous defeats this season and beat Princeton University.

THE VICTORY, by three-quarters of a length, followed a dramatic race earlier in the day in the Thames Challenge Cup, when Trinity's lightweight crew failed by 4 feet to beat the heavyweights of Thames Rowing Club.

Trinity's heavyweights were themselves up against lightweights but in the form of the eastern lightweight sprint champions — formidable opponents who started off favorites to win the clash for a third time.

But the changeable Henley weather, which moved from sunshine to rain and wind and back again, played an important hand. The headwinds grew stronger, rain began to fall and conditions suddenly favored the heavier crew.

"We were terribly disappointed," said Princeton Coach Gary Kilpatrick, "but we decided to finish the season by getting experience against heavyweights and this sort of thing can always happen. In flat water I'm sure we could have taken them again."

WITH ABOUT 30 strokes to go, only half a length separated the two boats. But Princeton suddenly fell back and Trinity, a small college with only 700 students, had won a notable revenge.

"Sure the conditions suited us," said Coach Norman Graf, "but we have improved. Academic work comes first for us and rowing second, so we tend to improve late in the season when we have more time to devote to it."

Trinity thus joined Yale University, the University of Washington and Williams College to make four American crews in the Ladies Plate last eight.

Williams will meet Trinity College of Dublin in the quarterfinals. The seeded Irish crew eliminated Orange Coast College of California by 2½ lengths.

If Dublin wins and Yale beat Durham University, these two great rivals will meet for the third year running. Yale won by a few feet and half-length in the last two years before going on to win the Plate each time.

Yale's victory Friday came over Oriel College, Oxford, and was achieved by its junior varsity heavyweights.

There was a shock in store, however, for Yale's senior heavyweights, eastern sprint champions and winners of the Harvard-Yale race for the first time since 1962.

THE CREW suffered a 1¾-length defeat to Oxford and Thames Tradesmens' Rowing Club in a terrible day for the United States in Henley's premier event, the Grand Challenge Cup.

"I never dreamed they could beat us like this," said Yale Coach Tony Johnson. "They got in front and never let us do what we thought we could."

Johnson acknowledged, however, that Yale's opponents had five of this year's successful Oxford boat race crew, plus one silver and one bronze medallist from the Olympic Games last summer.

Boston University lost to Leander and Tyrian, the British national squad, while seeded Cornell University lost by 11-3 lengths to the University of London.

Only the University of Washington, which had a bye, survived from the United States in the last four.

Howell, Varner lead Hi-Lo meet

Betty Howell and Bernice Varner teamed up to emerge as winners in the Ladies' Hi-Lo Golf Tournament Friday on Ranchland Hills Country Club's greens. They scored 59 points.

Tying for second place with scores of 63 were the teams of Ova Smith and Dorothy Campbell, and Shirley Mays and Lou Haskins.

The team of Sylvia Alvarado and Ann Lockhart scored 64.

Damp ducks' instincts out of quack

VANCOUVER, British Columbia (AP) — The ugliest June on record has some water birds thinking there isn't going to be a summer this year, so they're not getting in the mood for nesting, a zoo curator says.

Larry LeSage, curator of the Stanley Park zoo, said the rain and dull skies have impaired the reproductive instincts of ducks, geese and swans, and they aren't nesting properly. They think summer is over or hasn't begun, he said.

June 1981 has been the wettest and cloudiest June in recorded Vancouver history. The 146.3 hours of sunshine undercut the previous low of 150.1 hours set in 1946, and the 4.9 inches of rain beat the previous record of 4.5 inches set in 1956.

That might sound dandy for ducks, but LeSage says quacking mallards are leaving Stanley Park's amed Lost Lagoon in search of drier ground, and zoo animals accustomed to sunnier climates have been kept indoors next to the furnace.

Where is North Dakota?

BISMARCK, N.D. (AP) — Debra L. Hollingsworth of Murfreesboro, Tenn., and some friends have their doubts about whether the state of North Dakota actually exists, and she has written Gov. Allen Olson to find out.

The letter listed several reasons for doubt:

"1. No one we know has ever seen a picture of North Dakota.

"2. Likewise, no one we know has ever seen a license plate or postmark from your fair state (?).

"3. No one we have ever talked to knows anyone from North Dakota (or at least anyone who will admit it).

"4. One person we know actually tried to catch a plane from North Dakota ... and it never arrived."

Olson responded in kind that "no one we know has ever seen a picture of Debra L. Hollingsworth," and he said he'd provide "sufficient evidence" there is a North Dakota — if Ms. Hollingsworth can prove she exists.

Regan says economy 'receding'

By VIC OSTROWIDZKI
Hearst Feature Service

WASHINGTON — Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan said this week that the American economy is slowing down and may slide into "a very mild recession" by mid-summer.

But the treasury chief quickly pointed out that the nation is winning its fight against inflation, a good sign for quick economic recovery later in the year.

Regan called for swift enactment of President Reagan's economic program of tax and spending cuts, saying they would provide the stage for pickup in economic activity later this year and a healthy expansion thereafter.

)The secretary told reporters at a breakfast meeting in his Treasury Departmnt dining room that the administration intends to stick to tight economic policies for as long as it takes to beat inflation.

He predicted single-digit interest rates by 1982 and said he expects unemployment to edge upwards by "tenths of a percent" in tomorrow's government measure of joblessness.

The secretary said that despite high interest rates the government is paying, this year's deficit will be smaller than expected by "several billion dollars," hovering around $51 billion.

The original projection was for a $55 billion deficit, but some administration figures had speculated that it could climb to $60 billion.
