Former Crane man sought following shooting

From Staff and Wire Reports

MEDINA, N.D. — Authorities scoured four states and two Canadian provinces today in a manhunt for a pair of suspects — one a former Crane, Texas, resident — after a shootout with an anti-tax "fanatic" left two U.S. marshals dead and three other officers wounded.

Police said the shooting Sunday was sparked as a team of U.S. marshals and local police tried to arrest Gordon Kahl, a probation violator and tax protester whose failure to file tax returns dates back to the early 1970s.

Two other suspects, one of them wounded in the stomach, were arrested late Sunday. They were identified as Kahl's son and daughter-in-law.

Kahl, 63, who at one time lived in Crane, is "a fanatic. He's one of those income tax fanatics," said U.S. Deputy Marshal Ordean Lee of the Fargo office.

The federal marshal's office in San Antonio said this morning that Kahl was sentenced for income tax evasion June 22, 1977, in U.S. District Court at Midland before Judge D.W. Suttles and received a five-year probated sentence.

Midland Reporter-Telegram file stories reveal that Kahl was taken to trial in April 1977 on charges of failing to file income tax returns during 1973 and 1974 when he resided in Crane. An Odessa resident at the time of his trial, he also was a member of the United Tax Action Patriots, a group claiming that the federal income tax is a subversion of American principles.

HE WAS FOUND guilty on two counts. Suttles sentenced Kahl to one year in prison for the first count and to one year in prison and a $2,000 fine on the second count. The latter, however, was suspended and Kahl was placed under five years' probation with supervision.

On the first count, Suttles said Kahl would be eligible for parole after serving one-third of his time. In addition, he would receive credit for the approximately 71 days he had spent in custody while undergoing psychiatric evaluation in Springfield, Mo.

Kahl's trial was one of the first tax evasion cases heard in the federal court at Midland. An assistant U.S. attorney told the jury then, "This is the most important case ever tried in this courtroom." Representing Kahl was attorney Lewis Terrell.

Lee said authorities believed Kahl to be dangerous because "he made statements he would not be taken. We knew he had guns."

The manhunt for Kahl, originally from Heaton, N.D., and another unidentified suspect, drew "almost the whole state of North Dakota...including the FBI and the Highway Patrol" into the search, Lee said.

Kahl's son, who was not further identified, was arrested at a Jamestown hospital where he was being treated for a gunshot wound to the stomach, said Chief U.S. Deputy Marshal Ron Evans.

THE MAN'S WIFE, whose identity was not released, also was arrested when she came in to inquire about him, Evans said. "Both have been charged with aiding and abetting on the assault of a federal officer," he said.

The names of the slain marshals and the two other law officers were not released late Sunday. U.S. Deputy Marshal James Hopson was reported in serious condition after being flown from a hospital in nearby Jamestown to Bismarck Hospital.

Condition reports were not immediately available on the other wounded officers.

North Dakota Gov. Allen Olson said he had put the entire resources of the state on the alert, including National Guard helicopters and all law enforcement agencies.

Authorities in Minnesota, Montana, South Dakota, Saskatchewan and Manitoba also were alerted.

Evans said automatic weapons fire started as "four U.S. marshals approached a vehicle they suspected" Kahl was in.

Moshe Arens accepts defense minister post

Related story, Page 8B

JERUSALEM (AP) — Moshe Arens, Israel's ambassador to Washington and a hard-liner on relations with the Arab states, accepted the post of defense minister today. Ariel Sharon bowed out of the job declaring he was not "a beaten man."

Sharon, blamed by an Israeli judicial commission for failing to prevent the Beirut massacre of Palestinians last September, remains in the Cabinet as a minister without portfolio.

Yehiel Kadishai, Prime Minister Menachem Begin's secretary, announced Arens' acceptance of the post shortly before Sharon took final leave of his office in a brief ceremony at Defense Ministry headquarters in Tel Aviv. He held the defense post for 18 months.

To the sound of trumpets, Sharon reviewed an honor guard and shook hands with the military's top generals outside his office. Some of his aides wept.

"I am not leaving here a beaten man," Sharon said in a brief speech that indicated he will attempt to continue influencing defense policy. "A man's strength does not lie in whatever position he holds."

Begin told a visiting delegation from the European Parliament in Jerusalem that the political changes prompted by the Beirut massacre probe "do not have and will not have any impact on the problem of peace in the Middle East. Nobody should be worried that the difficulties we face now internally will influence our wish to establish peace in the Middle East, in all sectors, with our neighbors."

Arens, who emigrated to the United States from Lithuania at the age of 14 and moved to Israel in 1950, is known to share Sharon's hard-line views but lacks what Sharon's critics call his abrasive manner.

He must be confirmed by the Cabinet and the Knesset, Israel's Parliament. But all the factions of Begin's ruling Likud coalition are believed to consider Arens acceptable and his confirmation is assured.

Arens, 57, attended high school in the Philadelphia area and trained as an aeronautical engineer at the California Institute of Technology and the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. He later designed aircraft and missiles in Israel and entered politics in 1973.

On Sunday, the Cabinet gave Begin temporary control of the Defense Ministry after accepting Sharon's resignation.

However, the Cabinet agreed to let Sharon stay in government, and an aide said the flamboyant former general is confident enough of his political future that he may run for prime minister when Begin leaves office.

"I am going to stay a member of the Cabinet and I'll be doing things the prime minister will ask me to do," Sharon said Sunday.

"Those who didn't want Sharon as chief of staff had to live with him as defense minister," his spokesman, Uri Dan, said Sunday. "Those who didn't want him as defense minister will have to live with him as prime minister."

Sharon agreed to leave his post after the Cabinet voted 16-1 last week to adopt the recommendations of the Beirut massacre commission, which found him responsible in the slayings of more than 700 Palestinian refugees.

Workers in Turin, Italy, clean up following a cinema fire in which over 60 people died. Firefighters were concerned that emergency exits at the theater may not have worked properly.

Threatened American layoffs shouldn't affect local service

FORT WORTH — American Airlines has toughened its stance with a union that is working without a contract, threatening to lay off some of the 10,500 Transport Workers Union members in three weeks. But workers at Midland Regional Airport won't be affected, according to a spokesman.

The nation's second-largest airline released a statement Saturday saying that if the union doesn't ratify the company's offer within three weeks, certain jobs performed by union members will be contracted out to other firms.

"In the event the TWU membership rejects the company's final offer, the company will commence implementing the work rule changes immediately," the statement said.

"Those changes will include contracting out some work now performed by TWU employees. As a result, these employees necessarily will have to be furloughed."

For now in Midland, it's business as usual for American Airlines, according to A. Jack McAdams, American Airlines manager at Midland Airport.

"We're going to give them until March 5," he said. "If they don't accept (the contract), then we'll see."

American Vice President Lowell Duncan said he did not know how many union workers might be laid off. But he said the layoff notices would be sent "immediately" after the March 5 deadline.

A nationwide strike was averted Friday night when the union agreed to put the proposal to a vote by membership. Union leaders, however, rejected the contract offer and urged American's TWU members to authorize a strike.

American officials said the company used its power under the Railway Labor Act to make changes in the terms of the contract that expired Sept. 1. The changes include work rule changes opposed by the union and a wage increase.

American says it is "implementing new wages and rules but not those that were in their final package," said union spokesman John Kerrigan. "It's similar but not as good."

Cinema fire kills over 60

Emergency exits cause concern

TURIN, Italy (AP) — Fire officials said today that all emergency exits were unlocked as required by law when firefighters arrived at the burning cinema where 64 people choked to death in billowing smoke Sunday evening.

It was the biggest death toll from a fire in Italy since World War II.

Many of the victims were dressed in Carnival costumes to celebrate the period of feasting and revelry before Lent.

One of the victims was identified as Bonnie Calvert, 28, a Los Angeles native who lived in Turin, an industrial center in northern Italy.

Cardinal Anastasio Ballestrero, archbishop of Turin, blessed the bodies before they were moved to the city morgue. A state of mourning was declared in the city, and Italian President Sando Pertini arrived at the morgue with tears in his eyes to pay his respects.

Three people were seriously injured and dozens of others were treated for smoke inhalation, officials said.

Giuseppe Basso, who was seated in the orchestra section of the theater, said the emergency exits didn't open immediately.

"I felt people pushing my shoulders," he said. "I tried to shield my little son so he wouldn't be crushed."

Raimondo Capella, 51, manager of the theater was arrested and charged with manslaughter. Police in Italy often arrest an owner or a manager of a building after a fire or other disaster and hold him pending investigation.

Deputy Fire Chief Bruno Nicolella said it would take months to determine the cause of the fire, but other officials said a short circuit was the most probable cause.

Hinckley stable after suicide try

WASHINGTON (AP) — Presidential assailant John Hinckley Jr. was in serious but stable condition today, hooked to a respirator, as authorities tried to determine where he got the drugs he took in an apparent suicide attempt.

Hinckley, 27, was found semi-conscious from an overdose Sunday morning on the floor of his room at St. Elizabeths Hospital, where he was confined after his acquittal by reason of insanity in the shooting of President Reagan. Authorities were unsure what Hinckley took.

Wayne Pines, a spokesman for St. Elizabeths, said it was a "reasonable assumption" that Hinckley had tried to commit suicide for the third time since he wounded Reagan and three other men outside the Washington Hilton Hotel in March 1981.

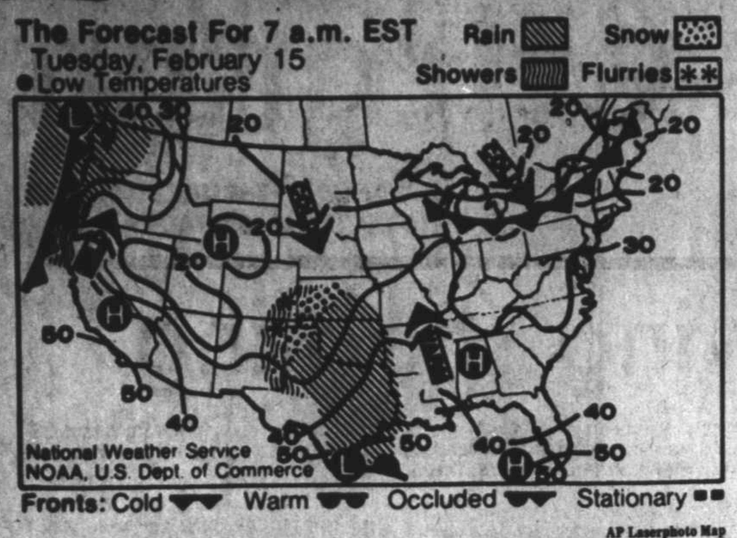
WEATHER SUMMARY



AP Laserphoto Map

The National Weather Service forecasts rain Tuesday from East Texas to southern Kansas with snow expected from the Panhandle to western Oklahoma. Rain is predicted for the Northwest. Cold weather is expected from the northern Plains to the Great Lakes, and warm weather should be in store for the Southeast.

Source of Hinckley's drugs sought

Hinckley was given cardio-pulmonary resuscitation and oxygen, and his color was blue and he was having difficulty breathing when he was brought to Greater Southeast Community Hospital, said Dr. James Levy, the hospital president.

"We will not be able to tell you for certainty for the next 24 to 48 hours whether he's out of the woods," Levy said.

Hospital spokesman Stephanie McNeill described Hinckley as "alert and oriented" early today.

"His vital signs are stabilizing," she said. "He is doing well for his situation...he does respond to commands."

Asked what Hinckley might have taken to cause the illness, Levy said: "I would imagine it would be medication that he might be taking in relation to why he's hospitalized at St. Elizabeths."

"He certainly took an excessive amount," Levy said. "We are not specifically clear exactly what substance he did take."

The Washington Post quoted sources in today's editions as saying Hinckley may have taken an overdose of a prescribed anti-depressant drug. Pines said the hospital is investigating whether Hinckley may have saved up some of his medication and then taken an overdose of it.

Asked if Hinckley was in danger of dying, Levy said "yes." Asked how great was the danger, he replied: "It's a little hard to characterize that. I can't give you a prognosis...He is stable, and we believe he'll be all right...He has improved but is still seriously ill."

He said Hinckley was in the critical care unit with 24-hour nurses and security guards. He said a tube in his throat prevented Hinckley from talking but that he had been able to respond to questions.

Pines would not flatly say that Hinckley tried to kill himself. Earlier Sunday, Detective Mike McClary of the District of Columbia police criminal investigation division, said: "He attempted to commit suicide this morning."

Hinckley was discovered lying face up on the floor of his room about 8:30 a.m. Sunday, according to Pines, who said he knew of no notes being found.

"There was vomit next to his head," he said. "There are indications he had fallen from the bed to the floor because the nightstand next to the bed had overturned."

Pines said that "normally a patient is not allowed to" possess excessive amounts of medications. He said Washington police were investigating.

Before Sunday's incident, Hinckley tried to kill himself at least twice following the Reagan assassination attempt.

In May 1981, Hinckley took a cache of Tylenol tablets while he was undergoing psychiatric tests at the Butner (N.C.) Correctional Facility.

The following November he used a jacket as a makeshift noose in an unsuccessful suicide try in the Fort Meade, Md., cell where he was being held awaiting trial.

In a report last August to the trial judge, Barrington D. Parker, psychiatrists at St. Elizabeths said Hinckley is "at the present time and will in the reasonable future be dangerous to himself and others."

They described Hinckley as an "unpredictably dangerous person" who "thinks daily about killing (actress) Jodie Foster."

"I don't necessarily agree with their opinion," Hinckley said shortly before Parker ordered him confined indefinitely to the mental hospital.

Last September, FBI and Justice Department sources said authorities had intercepted a letter in which Hinckley sought aid in obtaining a gun to help him escape from St. Elizabeths.

Weather makes holiday deliveries tough

By The Associated Press

Icy rain and snow invaded the Carolinas today as cold temperatures trailing the Blizzard of '83 kept roads snow-clogged and slippery for commuters and made flower deliveries difficult for Cupid's helpers on their Valentine's Day rounds.

Although snowplows cleared major thoroughfares Sunday from Richmond to Boston after the record blizzard that killed at least 70 people, authorities braced for congested rush hour traffic today.

"We're basically hoping for the best and preparing for whatever will come," said Harry Zacher of Philadelphia's public property division.

"It's going to be a long day," said John Simpson, president of New York's transit authority.

A new storm was spreading from Georgia to southern Virginia, with forecasts of up to 3 inches of snow and gales off the South Carolina coast. As temperatures warmed, the snow was expected to change to freezing rain, making driving treacherous.

By early today, trees and power lines glistened with ice in North Carolina and the weather service advised "extreme caution" for any outdoor activities.

The storm was expected to have little impact on the major metropolitan areas in the Northeast hit by the blizzard that dumped up to 3 feet of snow Friday and Saturday.

But the weather service said temperatures would remain on the cold side for the next five days, preventing any significant snow melt and promising a week of traffic problems.

"It looks like it's going to be cold and kind of sloppy for awhile," said Harry Gordon, with the National Weather Service's severe storm center in Kansas City, Mo.

Gordon said forecasters were surprised the storm's intensity over the mid-Atlantic states. "It took a zig where it should have zagged and brought a lot more snow," he said.

New York City is accessible by motor vehicle thanks to snow plows, which worked over the weekend clearing the more than 16 inches of snow the city received.

Temperatures dipped to 11 degrees below zero Sunday in Elkins, W.Va., a record for the date.

In New York, Washington, Philadelphia, Baltimore and Boston, streets remained clogged today with abandoned cars and trucks mired in waist-deep snow.

William A. Maas, executive vice president of Florists' Transworld Delivery, said florists seeking to fill Valentine's Day orders today were particularly hard hit by the inaccessible streets.

"Right now it looks like a disaster," said Baltimore flower shop owner Van Boylan.

FTD florists asked the governors of 11 storm-hit states to declare it Valentine's Week, which would give them some extra days to complete their rounds. The governors of Massachusetts and Maryland had agreed.

The weekend blizzard was "probably the worst in memory for many people," said Gordon, and "one of the worst" ever for the region.

"It's pretty if you're looking out, but this is quite enough," said Ruth Cowell, 65, of Verona, N.J., one of millions of people forced to dig out Sunday. "I don't want to shovel any more, thank you."

The storm was blamed in part for the sinking of a coal ship off the Virginia coast in which 24 crewmen were killed and for 46 other deaths in 10 states and the District of Columbia.

Florida, meanwhile, was hit by heavy rains. Fort Lauderdale got 4.56 inches by 7 p.m Sunday, accompanied by 30 mph winds.

Officials up and down the Eastern Seaboard toted up their cleanup costs and said they were enormous.

Warmth should be mainly in hearts

The warmth associated with Valentine's Day will be swept aside by cooler temperatures and blustery winds tonight and Tuesday, according to the forecast from the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport.

Tonight should be partly cloudy and colder with the low in the mid-30s and northwest winds 10-20 mph and gusty. Tuesday should be partly cloudy and colder with the high only reaching the upper 50s and winds north to northeast at 10-15 mph.

Sunday's high of 71 came within a dozen of the record high 83 set in 1962. The overnight low of 40 compares with a record low for this date of 15 set in 1951.

No precipitation during the 24 hours ending at 6 a.m. today leaves monthly and yearly totals at .08 of an inch and 1.22 inches, respectively.

Sunset tonight is at 6:34 p.m.; sunrise Tuesday comes at 7:31 a.m.

Phil Gramm returns to Washington today

DALLAS (AP) — Republican convert Phil Gramm, scheduled to return to Washington today to retake his 6th Congressional District seat in the U.S. House, says his re-election marks "the first gunfire of the 1984 elections."

The former Democrat, who resigned his seat after the party leadership stripped him of his seat on the House Budget Committee, said his victory in Saturday's special election strengthens his position on Capitol Hill.

"The fact that we got over 55 percent of the vote clearly gives me the strongest mandate that I've ever gone to Washington with," Gramm said after beating 10 opponents in a district stretching from Dallas to Houston.

House Republicans have promised him one of their seats on the Budget Committee. And Gramm said he's eager to renew his battle for reduced federal spending.

Gramm said in a telephone interview that his victory Saturday represents "the first gunfire of the 1984 elections, and we won the first battle. I'm going to do everything in my power to see that our president runs for re-election and that he is re-elected."

Gramm, a former Texas A&M University economics professor, won a third term as a Democrat last November. But the College Station resident, who helped steer President Reagan's economic programs to Congressional approval, resigned Jan. 5 and announced he would seek re-election as a Republican.

Reagan telephoned Gramm in College Station Saturday night with congratulations, telling Gramm he was a man of "courage, principles and high standards."

Democrats had argued in the heated campaign that the vote was a test of the popularity of Reaganomics in Texas.

Gramm could have switched parties without resigning and risking defeat in a special election.

And some of his opponents say he forced the special election to test his popularity as a Republican for a U.S. Senate race in 1984.

But, said Gramm, "I assume Sen. (John) Tower is going to run and I'm going to be his biggest supporter in the state."

And if the Republican Tower decides not to run again?

"Well, I've got a big job to do in the House, and I think the people who elected me did so to do that job and not to be looking," Gramm said.

Former Crane resident sought by authorities

"As they approached the vehicle, gunfire — automatic gunfire — erupted from the vehicle, striking three of the marshals and fatally wounding two of them," Evans said.

Medina Police Chief Darrell Graf, who was involved in the incident, said he believed he heard about 20 shots from his position, which was out of sight of the shooting.

"IT SEEMED LIKE there was just a roar of gunfire. That's all I remember about it," Graf said.

"They (the marshals) had set up some fire trucks and ambulances at the base of the hill prior to the incident. They apparently knew there was going to be a problem," Graf said.

"I'm sure they were treating this situation as such. However, I'm also sure that they were not expecting automatic gunfire to come from the vehicle," Evans said.

Later, the suspects apparently stole a Stutsman County deputy sheriff's car which is still missing, Evans said. Another car in which some of the suspects had fled was found abandoned later Sunday near Fessenden, N.D., about 60 miles northeast of Medina.

Medina, a farming community of about 500 people in south-central North Dakota, is about 75 miles east of Bismarck.

"The search is continuing and will continue until the two remaining suspects are caught," Evans said.

'Fanatic' Kahl well-known in Crane area for views

CRANE (AP) — Gordon Wendell Kahl, a "fanatic" tax protester sought in the fatal shooting of a U.S. marshal and a deputy in North Dakota, was well-known for his eccentric views when he lived here.

Law enforcement officers here remembered him as not only a tax protester, but as a right-wing "anarchist" who believed that county sheriffs were the only legitimate law enforcement officers, and who quarreled with government authority to the point that he refused to get a driver's license.

"He didn't believe in nothing, only what he wanted to, you might say," said Crane County Sheriff Raymond Weatherby.

"He's a crazy son of a b—," Weatherby said, adding Kahl was not known for violence in this small community 30 miles south of Odessa.

Weatherby said Kahl had spent some nights in his jail in the 1970s after repeated convictions for driving without a license.

For a number of years in the early 1970s, Kahl had rented a house here in the winter, and returned to his North Dakota farm in the spring, Weatherby said. He first was arrested on a driver's license violation in April 1974, said Crane police spokeswoman D. Rohrig.

But Kahl, father of three children, "worked steady" at his job as a toolpusher for J.D. Richardson's small oil company here, said a co-worker who refused to be identified. The job ended when Kahl went on trial for refusing to pay income taxes, she said.

Jonas said federal officers in Texas were told in November 1982 that Kahl might be on his way back to the state, but he was not found then.

Threatened layoffs shouldn't affect local airline service

From Staff and Wire Reports

The union, which represents a third of American's personnel and includes maintenance, baggage service and flight operations employees, had said it would strike at midnight EST Friday, when a 30-day "cooling off" period expired.

Duncan said the airline, in the event of a strike, would have attempted to maintain 75 percent of its flights and service to all its destinations.

Union leaders predict the membership will reject the contract proposal.

"The company has been extremely arrogant," said TWU president William Lindner. "They have refused to bargain on our issues. They will only bargain on their issues."

He predicted it will take "several weeks" for union members to ratify or reject American's contract offer.

Duncan said the latest offer includes a 21 percent wage increase over three years and lifetime job security to current union members, as well as early retirement and moving incentives.

The airline is demanding work rule changes it calls "cross-utilization" — the power to use the same employees on different jobs. American also would be able to hire part-time workers, a move the union has resisted.

"The cross-utilization is absolutely necessary. We cannot have a new contract without it," said Duncan.

The union also has balked at a proposal to establish a new, lower wage scale for workers hired after the contract went into effect.

A headline in Saturday's edition of The Midland Reporter-Telegram on a story concerning a police officer was incorrect. The headline should have noted, as did the story, that the officer was suspended, not dismissed.

Police skeptical over racehorse's safety

DUBLIN, Ireland (AP) — Detectives hunting for the kidnapped racing stallion Shergar admit they are stymied and believe there is a strong possibility the $13 million double-Derby winner is dead.

Dublin Police Chief Supt. Jim Murphy, who is leading the five-day-old search, on Sunday told reporters he had no clues to Shergar's whereabouts and appealed to the kidnappers to send proof the animal was either dead or alive.

"We have nothing to go on to convince us the animal is still alive," Murphy said. "Lack of any sort of communication from the gang is causing deep concern. I now deeply fear for Shergar's fate."

An armed gang last Tuesday night snatched the racehorse from a stud farm at Newbridge in County Kildare, Ireland's bluegrass country west of Dublin.

Some observers interpreted Murphy's statement as a bid to flush the horsenappers into the open after a deluge of confusing hoax calls that have hampered the investigation.

Police sources in Dublin said they believe there have been no genuine calls since last Thursday, whan an unidentified man demanded $2.6 million ransom for Shergar.

Murphy repeated that he has advised Shergar's owners, a 40-member syndicate headed by the Aga Khan, that they would not pay any ransom. The Aga Khan, spiritual leader of the world's 15 million Ismaili Moslems, is also a European-based racing and industrial magnate.

Town hopes to capitalize on its annual one-day fame

The tiny Texas town of Valentine wants to pick itself up by the bootstraps and try to profit from its name. Mayor Jesus Calderon says the town's promotion of its name in greeting cards, a proposed chili cookoff and from its Valentine's Day dance could help put it on the map.

VALENTINE (AP) — The tiny West Texas town of Valentine has decided to cash in on its annual one-day fame.

For years, Valentine's 300 residents have endured the deluge of dumb Valentine's Day jokes, requests for letters postmarked in the shape of a heart and silly questions such as where Cupid lives.

Now, Mayor Jesus Calderon wants to promote Valentine's Day because he believes it is his town's best chance for publicity and profit.

"I mean, how many Valentines are there in the world? So we might as well take advantage of it," the 32-year-old mayor said.

Besides its name and backdrop to the Davis Mountains, Valentine has little of interest to offer a visitor.

A veteran Southern Pacific railroad brakeman who has traveled the 155 miles between El Paso and Valentine for decades said the town has "nothing for no one."

Five U.S. border patrolmen sipping coffee at The Mile Post Cafe laughed when asked if the two-gas station town had any tourist potential.

Even Mother Nature has been cruel to Valentine.

In the 1930s, an earthquake shook Valentine so severely that walls split a foot from their foundations and the underground water table dropped hundreds of feet, Calderon said.

Valentine, once a thriving cattle town where steer were assembled for transport East and West, nearly dried up.

Deeper wells and improved watering techniques used by agribusinesses such as Southwest Farms have allowed Valentine to double the past decade to about 300 residents.

Calderon now wants his town to profit from its 24-hour fame.

A Valentine's Day chili cook-off such as that sponsored by the town of Terlingua could generate publicity and pad Valentine's pocketbook, Calderon said.

The town already has scheduled the coronation of its Valentine's Day queen, with four local high school maidens vying for the crown. The high school also holds an annual Valentine's Day boys' and girls' basketball tournament.

Further, Valentine's post office plans to continue stamping letters mailed on Valentine's Day with its special heart-shaped stamp. Last year, about 30,000 letter-senders nationwide requested the free service.

Sandy Spalding, center, and her mother, Ruthmary Jordon, right, visit with a guest at Pride House, a "bed and breakfast", inn in Jefferson. Mrs. Spaulding has set up a toll-free number for a directory of quaint inns acorss the country. Mrs. Jordon owns Pride House, one such establishment in East Texas.

Call 'Innformation' about quaint inns

MARSHALL (AP) — A love of "bed and breakfast" inns by a former resident of Jefferson, 25 miles north of here, sparked an idea that has evolved into a service for travelers throughout the United States.

Sandy Spalding's idea was to set up a toll-free number for a directory of unusual, quaint "bed and breakfast" inns, which tourists would not normally know about. That's "Innformation."

"With the service, you can call to find out where the inns are, what accommodations they have, and a price range," Mrs. Spalding said.

She and her husband, Ray, restored the Pride House in Jefferson several years ago.

"When I left the Pride House, I discovered there needed to be some sort of central directory. I also realized it didn't need to be paper anymore," she said.

Mrs. Spalding said she knew many "bed and breakfast" accommodations were not full during the week. Through her service, some of these vacancies could be filled by tourists or businessmen looking for a quiet place with a personal touch.

Mrs. Spalding's service now lists more than 500 inns. The service is paid for by the inns.

"Their costs are based on their size, number of accommodations and prices," she said.

Inns are listed in the service "by invitation only," Mrs. Spalding said. The inns are "special places to stay, and each one recommended has been checked and reviewed," she added.

"Each one offers something special, whether it's a fireplace in the room or a rate of $12 a night."

The toll-free number, 1-800-USA-INNS, is available 18 hours each day. It is Oregon-based, which prevents residents in that state from using the service.

Mrs. Spalding said 10 operators work short shifts to answer calls.

The service contains inns in each state with nightly rates ranging from $12 to more than $100.

"We've got anything you want," she said, adding that more inns are learning about the toll-free number. "They are calling me."

The trend for "bed and breakfast" inns is growing rapidly, Mrs. Spalding said.

"It's the easiest accommodation in the world. When you've tried both (inns vs. motels), you'll never know why you used to stay at motels," she said.

She said a love for hotels and motels developed when she was a teen-ager. "I read the book, 'Hotel,' when I was about 16 and have been fascinated with the operation of them ever since," Mrs. Spalding said.

When she and her husband decided to restore the Pride House and make it into a "bed and breakfast" inn, "I really did not have a clear idea of what a bed and breakfast really was," she said.

While they were restoring the house, her husband gave her the gift of staying in a "bed and breakfast" inn in another state. "I knew that's what the Pride House would be like when I came back."

Each "bed and breakfast" inn is operated differently, she said. The feature all of them share, however, is "personal service and warm hospitality."

The Pride House, Wise Manor, the Terry House, Hale House, the Excelsior House and New Jefferson Inn are listed in the directory.

"I want to keep it going," Mrs. Spalding said.

Passersby rescue four from Dallas fire

DALLAS (AP) — Two passersby kicked their way into a burning apartment building, woke two residents during a door-to-door search and helped an 11-year-old girl and her 9-month-old brother to safety, authorities said.

No injuries were reported as a result of the fire early Sunday, but the blaze left behind an estimated $45,000 in damages to the two-story frame building, located in East Dallas, according to fire investigators.

The fire appeared to be arson and witnesses described three suspects, said Lt. Kent Miller, a fire department investigator.

Dock C. Green III, a 31-year-old East Dallas resident, said he and Richard Wimbley, 31, of Terrell, were working late when they spotted the fire.

Computer is saving money

BAY CITY (AP) — Two seasoned nuclear plant builders have construction of the South Texas Nuclear Project on schedule and under budget for the first time, and officials say a computer deserves much of the credit.

A Houston Lighting & Power report says $238 million was spent building the $5.5 billion plant in 1982, "a cumulative underrun of $21 million for the year."

The facility, which is intended to serve the cities of Houston, San Antonio, Austin and Corpus Christi, is under construction near here, about 70 miles southwest of Houston.

Brian McCullough, construction manager for the chief engineer, the Bechtel Power Corp., said the construction pace sped up partly because of a new computer system, the Materials Labor Control System.

The plant has been plagued by cost overruns and delays for years.

When Houston Lighting & Power and its three partners began building it in 1973, the estimated final price tag was less than $1 billion and the plant was to begin generating electricity in 1980. The completion date has since been pushed to 1987.

The report said the recent savings came in spending on permanent plant equipment, construction materials and subcontracts.

Don Beeth, head of nuclear information for the utility, said the report is the first time in the history of the project that work was under budget and on schedule.

Bechtel and Ebasco Services Inc. began work in June. The project lay dormant for months after Houston Lighting & Power fired Brown & Root Inc. as chief engineer and the company resigned as chief contractor in late 1981.

Officials say the computer instantly answers construction questions.

Lovestruck show symptoms similar to those of addicts, mentally ill

By The Associated Press

The patient's endorphins are up, the lymphocytes are performing better and there's extra action in the limbic system.

No question about this Valentine's Day diagnosis — the patient is in love.

Poets have studied love for centuries, pondering its symptoms and effects in beautiful, carefully chosen words.

But physicians are studying love, too. And they say a loss of appetite, a tendency to not see another's faults and a general euphoric, healthy feeling are more than emotional occurrences among the lovestruck. There's a physiological basis for them.

"Romantic love involves several intense forms of brain arousal triggered by contact with, or thoughts about, some specific person," Dr. Michael R. Liebowitz writes in "The Chemistry of Love."

"Your body feels different — more bouncy, more energetic, and in need of less food and sleep."

Recent medical literature indicates people are healthier when they're in love, says Susan Delaney, staff psychiatrist at the Menninger Foundaton in Topeka, Kan.

Levels of lactic acid in the blood drop, making the person less tired, and endorphins, which produce a natural high or sense of well-being, increase, Ms. Delaney said.

Lymphocytes, the white blood cells that fight germs, perform better, "so we have fewer colds," she said. And there's more activity in the limbic system, the part of the brain that runs all automatic functions in the body.

"When the limbic system gets charged up there's a good chance for increased activity in all parts of the body," Ms. Delaney said.

A lovestruck person's heart may actually go pitty-pat, says Dr. Robert Baum, a cardiologist at the Rose Medical Center in Denver. "In times of emotional excitement, your heart rate increases and some people can feel their own heart beating."

People in love "can hardly devote their mind to anything else," said Dr. Chester Scrignar, clinical professor at the Tulane School of Medicine in New Orleans. "You can measure their physical response and see they're really concentrating on that relationship."

AP Laserphoto

Clear weather and temperatures in the high 70s drew this couple to the beach at Will Rogers State Park in Pacific Palisades Saturday, where they warmed up for Valentine's Day today.

That's why people once regarded romantic love as a mental disease that made the victim behave irrationally.

Romantic love is "an altered state of consciousness in the category of drugs and meditation that produces all sorts of irrational behavior," said Roy F. Baumeister, who teaches psychology at Case Western Reserve University in Cleveland.

Liebowitz, director of the Anxiety Disorders Clinic at the New York State Psychiatric Institute, has noted similarities between the emotional state of love and the effect of taking a stimulant drug.

ANSWERS TO BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AKJ62 ♡AJ2 ◇Q52 ♣95
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Dble	Rdble	2 ♠

What action do you take?
A.—If you answered that you don't know, you are right! Partner has promised another bid with his redouble. If he does not have a spade fit, your best result could be obtained by doubling the enemy, even at a low level. Pass, and allow partner to make the decision.

Q.2—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠AJ83 ♡92 ◇K982 ♣A87
The bidding has proceeded:

East	South	West	North
1 ♡	Dble	Pass	1 ♠
Pass	?

What action do you take?
A.—You have a minimum takeout double, and there is only one way to show that—you must pass at this turn. If you raised to two spades, you are showing about an ace more than you actually hold.

Q.3—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠8 ♡J9542 ◇8762 ♣763
The bidding has proceeded:

West	North	East	South
1 ♠	Dble	Rdble	?

What action do you take?
A.—If you elected to pass, you need to brush up on your basic bidding theory. There is a distinct danger that, if you take no action, partner will run to one spade, and that is hardly where you want to play the hand. Bid one heart. That promises nothing in the way of strength—it simply tells partner that you have a strong preference for hearts over any other suit.

Q.4—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠8752 ♡KJ93 ◇765 ♣94
The bidding has proceeded:

West	North	East	South
1 ♠	Dble	Rdble	?

What action do you take?
A.—The last problem should steer you to the right answer to this one. Despite the fact that you have two honors in hearts, you cannot be sure that you want to play the hand in that strain. Since you have support for all three unbid suits, you want to play in partner's best suit. Pass, and let partner choose.

Q.5—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠KQ5 ♡AK7 ◇A983 ♣J73
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South
1 ♠	1 ♡	?

What do you bid now?
A.—A cue-bid of two hearts would be acceptable, but it would be our second choice, because you might have trouble later in the auction convincing partner that you have a flat hand with two heart stoppers. We feel that slam is unlikely unless partner has more than a minimum opening bid. Had East passed, you would have responded three no trump, we suggest that you should still make that bid—it describes your holding exactly and leaves it up to partner to make a move.

Q.6—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠7 ♡A982 ◇KQ10953 ♣J6
Partner opens the bidding with one no trump. What do you respond?
A.—We would not fault you greatly if you elected to jump to three diamonds, but that runs the risk of missing a 4-4 heart spot. We would start with two clubs—the Stayman Convention. If opener does not show a heart suit, we would make one more move with three diamonds. That leaves open all our options—we can play in no trump, hearts or diamonds, and we have also made a mild try for slam.

Premature to say interferon useful in treatment of MS

Dear Dr. Solomon: Is it true that interferon has been used to cure multiple sclerosis? A friend of mine told me he read about it. — Phil, St. Paul, Minn.

Dear Phil: Interferon has been used in experimental trials of its effectiveness in patients with multiple sclerosis, but these studies are very preliminary. Any conclusion that interferon is helpful in treating the disease would be premature at best.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I understand you will be giving seminars around the country regarding your stop-smoking treatments so that other physicians can do it. I think that is just great, because I can't afford to fly to Baltimore. How can my physician go about attending this seminar? — Mr. R.R., Seattle, Wash.

Dear Mr. R.R.: I will be giving seminars for physicians across the country detailing my anti-smoking treatment. It is being conducted by Consultants in Medical Education.

If your physician would like to call them, the number is 301-284-3238.

Dear Dr. Solomon: Does it make any sense for a person to sit behind a desk all week and then go out on Sunday and kill himself with exercise? I have read your book "Stop Smoking, Lose Weight" so I know you have a chapter on exercise, but watching a ball game on television is about as much exercise as I think the normal person should have. If I'm wrong, I'd like to know why. — George, Nashville, Tenn.

Dear George: The example you give is so extreme that it is really no argument against exercise. If you re-read my book, you will see that I advocate regular exercise, not one day of exercise and six days of inactivity. The phrase "Use it or lose it" applies to an entire range of human activities, both physical and mental. A muscle that is not used will atrophy and so will a mind that is not used.

Dr. Walter M. Bortz II, of the Palo Alton, Calif., Medical Clinic, notes that many biological changes that are usually attributed to the aging process are actually a consequence of lack of use, and are therefore subject to correction. I am not suggesting that a 70-year-old person can function like a 25-year-old athlete, but there are many people in their seventies and older who function better than people half their age.

When a new drug is being developed, researchers evaluate it for safety, effectiveness and economy. A regular program of exercise is safe, effective, and cheap, and there's no drug on the market that can match it in terms of its success in countering the aging process.

For Angela, Skokie, Ill.: It has been reported that both pressure and heart rate rise when a person is talking. Studies of 178 subjects by Dr. James J. Lynch, of the University of Maryland School of Medicine, showed that blood pressure increased significantly in 93 percent.

These results were independent of the subject's age, sex or environment.

(If you have a medical question, write to Neil Solomon, M.D., 1726 Reisterstown Road, Baltimore, Md. 21208. Dr. Solomon cannot give personal replies but will answer as many questions as possible in his column).

Researcher: Diet drug could lead to strokes

SAN DIEGO (AP) — A medical researcher says a drug used in some over-the-counter diet pills and nasal decongestants could lead to strokes, high blood pressure or serious psychiatric problems.

Dr. Shirley Mueller identified the drug as phenylpropanolamine, which is also known by its inititals PPA.

"The drug counters are crammed with it (PPA)," she said.

According to Ms. Mueller, 15 diet products available at pharmacies contain either PPA or PPA and caffeine, a combination that seems to make the drug's side effects even stronger.

Ms. Mueller said she became aware of the problems when some of her patients suffered ill effects after taking medication that contained PPA.

The drug is also found in pills advertised in magazines as subsitutes for amphetamines, Ms. Mueller said.

These pills and medication containing PPA can be bought without a prescription. She did say that the dosage of PPA was smaller in nasal decongestants, and therefore not quite as dangerous.

Knowledge saves

Don't dash outside right now to scan the sky, but you should be aware tornado season is rapidly approaching. In this part of the country that means you had better be prepared for the worst because the worst just might occur.

One of the most dangerous types of spring and summer storms is the tornado, deadly twisting wind that can wreak millions of dollars worth of damage — and claim hundreds of lives — in a community in a matter of minutes.

Knowledge can save your life if a tornado strikes and as anyone who has spent a spring in Midland knows, threatening weather isn't uncommon in the Tall City. It's not uncommon elsewhere in the nation either, substantiated by the fact that in 1981 there were 773 tornado storms nationwide that claimed 24 lives, according to the National Weather Service. And that wasn't the worst year on record by far.

In 1979 when a tornado swept through Wichita Falls, 44 people lost their lives. According to the National Weather Service and news reports, 40 of those who died were either outside their homes or in an automobile. Many might have lived if they had stayed indoors.

Working on the theory that knowing what to do when a tornado occurs can save your life, the City of Midland and National Weather Service are currently distributing a pamphlet called "When a tornado threatens." The pamphlet, which you'll be receiving in your utility bill, contains valuable information about how you can protect your life and, to a degree, your property if a tornado strikes.

Read the pamphlet and keep it handy so you can refer to it if the weather becomes violent. It could save your life.

Withdraw from Lebanon

In October 1956, the Israeli army invaded and captured the Sinai, driving to the East Bank of the newly nationalized Suez Canal. The British and French sought to get the canal back and secretly supported the invasion.

But the United States would not approve. President Eisenhower called on the Israeli army to withdraw. Israel refused, Prime Minister Ben-Gurion saying no force whatever was going to make Israel evacuate the Sinai.

Then the American president raised the threat of economic sanctions, saying in a televised talk to the nation: "Should a nation which attacks and occupies foreign territory in the face of U.N. disapproval be allowed to impose conditions on its own withdrawal? If we agree that armed attack can properly achieve the purpose of the assailant, then I fear we will have turned back the clock of international order."

Finally, Israel withdrew, on condition that the Egyptians would lift their blockade of Israeli shipping in the Straits of Tiran.

President Reagan has made an effort to get the Israeli army to withdraw from Lebanon, which Israel invaded last June in the face of U.S. disapproval.

But the Reagan response has, so far, been much weaker than the Eisenhower response in 1956.

He told newsmen at the White House last Monday, "It's true we disagree (with the government of Israel) on this particular issue about getting out of Lebanon." He added, "Israel is delaying, we believe, unnecessarily in that." And, later, he said: "Also I think that there's a certain moral point that we think the Israelis are neglecting or not observing. And that is the new government of Lebanon, after all these years of revolution and upheaval, has asked all the foreign forces to leave."

Those are mild words, considering the circumstances. There is no way to get the remaining Palestine Liberation Organization and Syrian forces to withdraw from northern Lebanon so long as the Israeli forces continue to occupy southern Lebanon. And the impasse in Lebanon makes progress impossible on the Reagan peace plan which calls for involving the Kingdom of Jordan in a settlement of Palestinian claims to the West Bank of the Jordan River and the Gaza Strip.

Another View:

Cutting health costs

The Reagan administration is finally beginning to enunciate a strategy for restraining the rapid rise of health-care costs. Although the plan is far from comprehensive, it has some rather promising features.

It is largely based on the belief that patients would request less care (or that doctors would order less) if patients had to bear a bigger share of the expense. Thus, the administration is calling for substantially larger co-payments by Medicare patients, modest but nonetheless new co-payments by Medicaid patients and taxation of employer-paid health insurance premiums above a certain level.

According to a recently reported study by the Rand Corp., the Medicare co-payment requirement would save the government money not just by shifting more of the cost to the patients but also by discouraging hospitalization in borderline cases. The study indicated that 7 percent fewer people would be admitted to hospitals. The study found no significant reduction of health-care utilization under the proposed Medicaid co-payment, perhaps because it was only nominal — $1 to $2 for each visit to the doctor.

If cost-effectiveness were all that mattered, the case would be rather simple. Co-payments could be jacked up until costs were brought into line. But a decent society must also consider the possibility that undue economic hardship would result or that some patients would be denied essential care.

Medicaid patients are poor. So are some of those on Medicare. Thus, while co-payment can be helpful, it will need to be carefully calibrated to achieve the optimum efficiency without inflicting real hardship. Perhaps a means test will have to be used to determine who makes co-payments and who doesn't.

In order to make deep inroads against the escalation of health-care costs, the government needs to do much more than require co-payments under government programs. It needs to give physicians and hospitals incentives to hold down the cost of care rather than to inflate it. Health maintenance organizations, at least in their model form, provide a logical answer. A HMO agrees to meet the health-care needs of a certain population for a fixed amount per capita or per family. That takes away the traditional, built-in incentive for unnecessary services.

Some observers believe that the administration's plan to tax large health insurance premiums would stimulate interest in HMOs by causing employers and employees to seek less costly coverage. If so, that would be a point strongly in the plan's favor.

Overall, the administration's proposals are not a bad start toward coping with a vast problem.

CHARLEY REESE

U.S. image falling with morality

Unless we the people demand that our national government stand for what is right instead of for what is profitable or politically expedient, we who are alive today will see this nation collapse.

Charley Reese

A government which is deceitful, cowardly, and tries to buy off its enemies with other people's lives and freedom can no more prosper than an individual with such a bad character.

In the beginning, America stood for what is right. People around the world loved the United States, for it represented to them confirmation of their dream of living as free men under a government which protected rights and created a just society.

Beginning with the election of Woodrow Wilson, however, our national government fell into the hands of Wall Street. Since then, it has stood for big business and both the Constitution and the welfare of the American people became secondary considerations. Today, the United States is more hated than loved. Even other nations which have democratic governments no longer trust us. And we, the American people, have become cynical about our own government.

Look at the record. At the end of World War II, we handed over to Joseph Stalin 600,000 people who had fled his tyranny. Many of them committed suicide rather than go back to the prisons and firing squads. We bargained away the freedom of the people of Eastern Europe, North Korea, and the Baltic States. Later, we abandoned the free Chinese and now, 34 year later, we have abandoned them a second time.

In the Korean War, our government settled for a stalemate for the first time in our history. In the Vietnam War, our government put Americans in harm's way and then imposed restrictions and limitations on their ability to fight. After a frightful waste of lives and money, our national government abandoned the South Vietnamese, signing a so-called peace treaty that left the North Vietnamese army in place in the South. To assauge our conscience, we promised the South Vietnamese we would supply them with arms. The Congress broke that promise. The people of Indochina, millions of whom had believed us when we told them to fight, were betrayed to cruel tyrannies.

When the people of East Germany, Poland, Hungary, and Czechoslovakia rose against our common foe, we did nothing but watch them die. We have replaced the Monroe Doctrine with the Rockefeller Doctrine. The Rockefeller Doctrine says the Caribbean and Gulf of Mexico are not important but the Persian Gulf, where the family oil concessions are, is worth Americans dying to protect.

Anti-communist rhetoric is for domestic consumption to justify the defense budget, but our real policy is trade and aid. We are literally selling whips to slave-owners while mouthing pious platitudes about freedom. A nation which once sent Marines to rescue a single kidnapped American, put Cuban patriots on a beach at the infamous Bay of Pigs and then denied them the air cover they had been promised.

The nations and people who thought we would support them because they shared our ideals have one by one been betrayed and abandoned. Our national government serves banking and oil interests, not the cause of freedom. The newest intended victim to be put on the altar of Big Business is Israel. Like the Nationalist Chinese, they have no oil reserves or big bank accounts with which to purchase our support.

I don't often write about religion, but I believe there is a God and I believe He loves a righteous nation. I don't think it's an accident that 3 million Israelis have withstood the efforts of 120 million Arabs to destroy them in six wars. I don't think it's an accident that the military power of the Soviet Union has risen in inverse proportion to our own decline in morality.

If you are really concerned about the prospects for a nuclear war, you should pay more attention to morality than to arms control.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Land scheme gets U.S.-Israeli support

WASHINGTON — The Reagan administration, with Israel as a partner, is quietly working on a multimillion-dollar land-development plan in Costa Rica. The scheme involves buying up land along the Nicaraguan-Costa Rican border, clearing roads through the wilderness and moving in thousands of settlers.

Jack Anderson

Although the development plan is being promoted strictly on economic grounds, there are secret political considerations behind it. The Costa Rican border settlement, combined with the military buildup in Honduras, would create a giant strategic pincers physically isolating Nicaragua by land.

The U.S. Agency for International Development will ask Congress for about $10 million to finance the settlement for the first year. Israel will provide the technical expertise, presumably based on its experience with settlements in the West Bank area. (An Israeli source bristled at the use of the word "settlement" in connection with the project, but other sources said the term is appropriate.)

The eventual cost of the land development will run more than $100 million, the Costa Ricans estimate. One source put the final figure at $500 million.

AID officials will try to sell the plan to Congress on its economic merits. They have given it the innocuous title, "Northern Zone Infrastructure Development."

But the geopolitical motive was laid out candidly in a cable last month to the State Department from our ambassador to Costa Rica, Francis McNeil. The confidential cable, seen by my associate Bob Sherman, explains the real reason for the ambitious settlement program.

"The GOCR (Government of Costa Rica) has been extremely concerned with developing its northern zone because of continuing: 1) incursions into Costa Rican territory by armed bands from Nicaragua; 2) 'stop and search' incidents involving Costa Rican boat traffic on the San Juan River ... 3) saturation of the area by extremely powerful signals from Nicaraguan radio and television stations," the cable said.

Incursions from leftist Nicaragua "have made the Costa Ricans extremely nervous," McNeil cabled, adding: "Development of the region has become a number one priority of the (Government of Costa Rica) which they hope will address what they consider a serious immediate and long-term security problem."

The border-settlements plan has involved negotiations at the very top. President Reagan discussed the project with Costa Rican President Luis Alberto Monge last June, and again on Reagan's Latin American tour in December. Reagan pledged his support in a letter to Monge dated last Sept. 20.

Late last year, a special task force chaired by Costa Rican Vice President Alberto Fait, with representatives from the United States and Israel, was organized to begin detailed planning. In addition to Israeli Ambassador David Tourgeman, experts from an Israeli firm, Tahal Consulting Engineers, have been involved in the project for months.

It is hard to justify the ambitious settlement operation on economic grounds. Though Costa Rica has problems, overpopulation is not one of them.

Furthermore, the northern areas that are to be opened up for settlers are mostly marginal land that will have to be drained or otherwise improved before it is suitable for agriculture. Yet the plan calls for supporting up to 1,000 families on each 50 acres of land along the border.

In fact, one administration source acknowledged that AID would never have given such an economically risky project top priority if it weren't for the political implications.

Ambassador McNeil recognized this in his confidential cable, when he warned: "It is essential that the land purchases be expeditiously and quietly carried out to ... avoid land invasions organized by leftists which would nullify the project's geopolitical objectives ..."

In other words, though the administration evidently hopes to hide from the American public the political point of the settlement program, it does not expect Nicaragua's leftist sympathizers to be fooled.

INSIDE REPORT:

Complaints of regal presidency seen

WASHINGTON — Republican politicians are concerned that plans for President Reagan to spend a full week in California accompanying Queen Elizabeth II on her Western visit (Feb. 26-March 7) will reopen complaints of a regal presidency carried on amidst lingering hard economic times.

Rowland Evans

In contrast, newly-elected Republican Gov. George Deukmejian of California has refused to attend any more than two events on the British monarch's tour — one in San Diego and the other in Sacramento — despite strong urging to the contrary. But Michael Deaver, deputy White House chief of staff who has spent lots of time in California advancing the royal visit, has refused suggestions that the president follow the governor's example. "Mike really likes this royal stuff," another presidential aide said of Deaver.

Robert Novak

A footnote: The White House was stunned when it saw the guest list for the queen's dinner in San Francisco and found a profusion of supporters for Democratic mayor Dianne Feinstein to the exclusion of Republican faithful. Surprisingly, the Reagan aide who went to the mat to change things was the president's national security adviser, William P. Clark.

ANOTHER GLENN GOOF

The latest in Sen. John Glenn's series of bloopers in his quest for the Democratic presidential nomination is to schedule a fund-raiser in Boston March 6, in ignorance that the Massachusetts Democratic Party is holding its big fund-raising dinner there three nights earlier.

Whether or not the Glenn and party dinners will be competing for the same dollar is a matter of debate. More important is the fact that, because of his own dinner, Glenn planned not to attend the March 3 affair. It is another in the series of "cattle shows" for all Democratic presidential hopefuls (with Sen. Edward M. Kennedy as master of ceremonies).

State Sen. Chet Atkins, the Massachusetts Democratic state chairman, has told the Glenn camp that failure to attend the dinner would make the senator "odd man out" in the state. Specifically, it would hurt Glenn's chances in the presidential straw vote to be held at the Democratic state convention in Springfield April 9.

SENATE GOP MISHAPS

The prospect that the Democrats will regain control of the Senate in the 1984 election, greatly enhanced by Majority Leader Howard Baker's decision not to seek re-election, could grow with possible retirement of another Republican veteran: Sen. Mark Hatfield, chairman of the Appropriations Committee.

Hatfield has said nothing publicly, but word is spreading on Capitol Hill that he might pack it in after 18 years in the Senate. With Hatfield not running, Republicans in Oregon would have a less than even chance to elect his successor.

A footnote: Republican politicians are furious that the White House did nothing to talk a big gun into running for Baker's seat from Tennessee. In the absence of coaxing from the Oval Office, the three leading possibilities — Gov. Lamar Alexander, Trade Ambassador William Brock and ex-governor Winfield Dunn — all are saying no. That makes Democratic representative Albert Gore Jr. a prohibitive early favorite to win Baker's seat.

WHITE HOUSE CLEANOUT

An inquiry to the Oval Office by White House domestic policy chief Ed Harper's secretary as to when her boss could get a new photograph taken with the president was taken as a sign he may be leaving soon — part of a widening cleanout of presidential staffers that began with senior aide Rich Williamson.

Such a photo request is often a sign that an aide is leaving and anxious to get a picture with Reagan before he goes. In fact, Harper likely will be gone by mid-year. He has made few waves since replacing Dr. Martin Anderson as policy chief a year ago and, while a vastly more adept administrator than his predecessor, has had no more influence on policy.

A footnote: White House spokesmen David Gergen and Larry Speakes were outraged when it was announced that an outsider was being brought in to study effectiveness of communications policy. They protested to chief of staff James Baker, who mollified them by saying the study would transcend communications and extend to other White House operations. Gergen long has been a target of fellow staffers for quick removal, but has been protected by Baker until now.

PERCY'S PROWESS

Chances for the planned conservative challenge by Rep. Tom Corcoran against Sen. Charles H. Percy in next year's Illinois Republican primary look so bleak that some influential conservatives may soon privately urge Corcoran to pull out.

Not only does Percy, as chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, have President Reagan's tacit support; the senator also has mended fences with Illinois party regulars once determined to purge him. "I think so valuable a conservative as Tom (Corcoran) should seriously consider whether he wants to give up a safe (House) seat," one conservative leader told us.

A tough primary contest is viewed by Democrats as necessary for a serious general election challenge of Percy. In addition, the challenger most desired by Democrats, the highly-esteemed Rep. Paul Simon, told us chances are 95 percent against his running.

Extension Service has worksheet for PIK calculations

By EARNEST C. KIKER
Midland County Extension Agent — Agriculture

Whether a farmer decides to participate in the new payment-in-kind (PIK) program this year depends on his individual situation. Each farmer has to assess his operation and his financial situation, and he's got to "put the pencil" to all parts of the program as they apply to his business. There is no substitute for working through the program and making all the calculations you can at this point.

The Extension Service has prepared a special worksheet, available through county agents, that can help farmers with their calculations.

Farmers need to know their variable costs, which are crucial in determining participation in PIK. If a farmer is just covering variable costs in his crop production, participation will likely pay.

Of course, farmers need to consider deficiency payments when they're making their calculations. These payments are based on the difference between target prices spelled out in the farm program and average market prices. These payments could be substantial this year, particularly for wheat and cotton. However, deficiency payments can be made only on planted acres, so this makes participation in the PIK program less attractive.

IF A PRODUCER has a tight profit margin, he's a good candidate for participation in the program, while a farmer with a wider profit margin might question taking part.

The program should also be advantageous to farmers with high operating costs and to those with marginal cropland. Farmers with low-yielding land might consider putting more of it into the program.

Although it's difficult to generalize about the program, we feel that corn and grain sorghum farmers will find it advantageous to participate, except in those areas (mainly southern and coastal areas) whre they have put considerable expenses for herbicides and fertilizer into the land in preparation for planting.

Cotton farmers will need to look closely at their operating costs in making a decision, while wheat farmers may find it difficult to participate at any level. Rice growers will need to consider participating at the 80 percent or higher level.

THE PIK PROGRAM is designed to take cropland out of production and pay participating farmers with surplus commodities, many of which are in government storage. Payments would be in like commodities — a cotton farmer would be paid in cotton and a corn farmer in corn. The farmer can dispose of the commodity in any way he wishes, except putting it back into government storage.

The program is aimed at reducing farm product surpluses and eventually raising prices. Just what effect it will have on prices depends on a lot of things, such as the degree of farmer participation and possible major foreign sales.

PIK commodities will become available in the fall, when market prices could soften, particularly if farmer participation in the program is low.

Farmers should seek all the information they can get regarding the PIK program. County ASCS officials will administer the program and should have the latest information available as it comes from the U.S. Department of Agriculture. Program details could change, since the USDA has until Feb. 25 to issue final regulations. The sign-up deadline for farmers is March 11.

To vegetable gardeners preparing for spring planting, controlling soil insects is the first step. Soil insects can reduce vegetable quality and yields if not controlled.

Among destructive soil insects are wireworms, white grubs, seed corn maggots, cabbage maggots, mole crickets, sowbugs, slugs, snails and cutworms. Some destroy plant seeds, roots, tubers and underground stem parts while others cut off young plants at or near the soil surface.

For effective control, mix insecticides into the soil at a depth of 4-6 inches, at least two weeks before the garden is planted. Most soil insects can be controlled with diazinon 25 percent liquid concentration or Spectracide 6000 applied as a 5 percent granule. Granules usually give the best control. If cutworms or sowbugs become a problem after the garden is planted, spread 5 percent Sevin bait over the soil surface. This bait, containing metaldehyde, will also control slugs and snails. However, it isn't formulated to be mixed into soil.

GARDEN SITES planted for the first time or previously in grass or weeds are more likely to harbor damaging soil pests. Before treating with an insecticide, inspect the garden site by taking soil samples at several locations to a depth of 5 to 6 inches. Remove one square-foot section of soil from each location and record the number of soil insect pests present. As a general rule, an average of one or more soil insects per sample suggests the need for insecticide treatment.

Before applying any pesticide always read and follow label instructions.

Have you given your fruit and nut trees their annual "lube job"? This refers to an application of dormant oil to control scale insects. Why control scale insects? To save the tree. If a scale insect such as the San Jose scale or white peach gets started, it could kill a tree.

Dormant oil can be purchased at stores where garden supplies are sold. Be sure to follow all label directions and apply the mixture when the temperature is between 40-70 degrees. Don't apply if a freeze is likely within 48 hours or if the tree has budded. As its name says, dormant oil is applied when the tree is dormant, and spraying flowers and leaves could cause leaf burn and flower drop.

Scale insects are difficult for most people to detect, so dormant oil should be applied yearly. Sooner or later your tree will probably be attacked by scale insects, so guard against them with an application of dormant oil.

A grape producers' meeting, sponsored by the Texas Grape Growers Association, will be held Thursday, Feb. 17 from 7 to 9:30 p.m. in the Auditorium at the Texas A&M University Research & Extension Center in Lubbock. Officials: Rural areas should aid themselves

WASHINGTON (AP) — As the Reagan administration sees it, the development of rural America should be left mostly to those who live in the small towns, farms and "country" environs of larger cities.

But officials say there are some things the federal government can and should do to help states and communities improve the quality of life for more than 57 million Americans who live outside of metropolitan areas.

The plan recently was sent to Congress by Agriculture Secretary John Block as the administration's "rural development strategy" for the 1980s.

It was submitted shortly after President Reagan sent Congress a proposed budget for the year beginning Oct. 1 which included a 23 percent cut in the Agriculture Department's programs for small community and rural development operations.

The report, "Better Country: A Strategy for Rural Development in the 1980s," was drawn up to comply with the Rural Development Policy Act of 1980.

"After a century of decline, many areas of rural America have experienced remarkable revitalization in the last decade," the report said.

"Rural employment growth outpaced urban job progress by one-third in the last decade. The rural economy continued to diversify far beyond its traditional base in agriculture, with major expansions in manufacturing, services and trades.

"Significant advances in health, housing education and other living standards also came to much of rural America over the past 10 years."

But there are still areas which are clouded by "poverty, isolation and decay of facilities," the report added.

"On the average, rural America still lags behind urban America in measurable indicators of income, education and housing conditions, though some argue that lower costs of living may offset part of the rural disadvantage."

A 25-member National Advisory Council on Rural Development was appointed by Block.

Agriculture Department: Butter production down 2 percent

WASHINGTON (AP) — Butter production in the last three months of 1982 totaled 295 million pounds, down 2 percent from the fourth quarter of 1981, says the Agriculture Department.

But the output of American-type cheese, meanwhile, was up 4 percent from a year earlier to 634 million pounds in the October-December quarter, the USDA's Crop Reporting Board said in a recent report.

Production of non-fat dry milk for human use, at 297 million pounds, was up 2 percent from year-earlier levels.

The report also said that production of creamed cottage cheese in the fourth quarter declined 1 percent from a year earlier to 174 million pounds. Low-fat cottage cheese, at 47 million pounds, was down 2 percent

Alfalfa's story one of progress

WASHINGTON (AP) — A University of Wisconsin scientist says alfalfa "is a tremendous story of progress" in the nation's No. 1 dairy state and has contributed greatly to American consumers.

Alfalfa is prized by animal nutritionists throughout the world for its value as forage to help produce meat and dairy products for millions of people.

Harlow G. Hodgson, assistant to the director of the Agricultural Experiment Station at the University of Wisconsin, says that as late as 1889 there were only 460 acres of alfalfa in the state.

"Today it is Wisconsin's most important crop, growing on more than four million acres, providing 12-14 million tons of forage with a value of $600-$700 million," he said.

Hodgson, who retired some years ago as an agronomist in the Agriculture Department, has written and spoken frequently about the importance of pastures and forage crops to the world's food supply.

Others have suggested that many food-deficit countries might be able to produce significantly more food by concentating on improved forage for livestock instead of spending so much on grain imports.

Alfalfa is a legume. Its roots have nodules which contain types of bacteria capable of taking nitrogen from the air and making it available to the plant. Thus, unlike corn and wheat, alfalfa needs no nitrogen fertilizer.

Hodgson's latest views on alfalfa were published recently by the university's College of Agricultural and Life Sciences in an issue of Research for a Growing Wisconsin.

"The annual value of the crop far exceeds all the expenditures for alfalfa research since 1900," Hodgson said. "The benefit, initially realized by farmers, ultimately comes to consumers in the form of a more-than-adequate supply of dairy products at bargain prices."

Alfalfa's success in Wisconsin is one of the classic success stories of research and applied techniques triumphing over natural adversities.

Coast Guard personnel unload bodies off of the back deck of the Coast Guard cutter Point Highland at the Coast Guard station in Chincoteague, Virginia, Saturday. The cutter brought in 19 victims of the sinking of the coal ship Marine Electric which sank Saturday about 30 miles off of the Virginia coast (see map, left).

Ship's survivor hung onto life ring

PORTSMOUTH, Va. (AP) — A survivor of a ship that left 33 men dead or mwssing when it sank in stormy weather off the Virginia coast hung onto a life ring and watched as five companions "one by one, just slipped away,"

At least 24 crew members of the World War II-vintage Marine Electric were killed in Saturday's sinking, with nine others missing and presumed dead, officials said. Three men survived.

Rescuers have found no sign of the missing crew members, and the Coast Guard called off its search at dusk Sunday.

"If we thought that there was any possibility of their still being alive, of course we wouldn't have suspended the search," said Lt. J.M. Krupa.

The ship, carrying 27,000 tons of coal, sank about 30 miles off the Virginia coast in a frigid sea with up to 20-foot waves.

The Coast Guard said it would not resume the search unless something unforseen developed.

One survivor, 28-year-old Paul C. Dewey of Norfolk, spoke with his wife by telephone from a hospital bed Sunday.

"He said he was on the side of the boat that was listing real bad...and then it just flipped. He said he didn't know a ship could go down that fast," said Mrs. Dewey, who is estranged from her husband and asked that her first name not be used. She lives in a southeastern Virginia city near Portsmouth.

After Dewey was thrown into cold, wind-whipped water, he clung to a life ring and spotted some of his companions who were alive at that time, Mrs. Dewey said.

"He was trying to get to them, but he couldn't. The waves were just washing them away," she said.

Another survivor, Eugene S. Kelly, 31, of Norwell, Mass., told his wife Sunday that the ship suddenly overturned. Kelly told his wife, Judy, that he was wearing a life jacket and grabbed a floating life ring.

Five other men also grabbed the ring but "in the next two hours, one by one, they just slipped away," she said.

The third survivor was identified as Robert M Cusick, 59, of Scituate, Mass. All three men were taken to Peninsula General Hospital in Salisbury, Md., for treatment of hypothermia. They were listed in satisfactory condition Sunday.

A former crewman of the Marine Electric said the ship had a history of mechanical failures. The vessel lost a propeller and a rudder in separate incidents during the past five years, Calvin L. Johnson, a former fireman and engineman aboard the ship, told the Wilmington News Journal on Saturday.

"The guys and I were talking about the Marine Electric on Thursday down at the Union Hall (in Philadelphia)," said Johnson, 58, who has been a merchant seaman for 40 years. "We were talking about when something would happen to her...It makes you feel real strange."

The Marine Electric was built 39 years ago as a World War II transport.

Krupa said the Coast Guard's Marine Safety Office in Norfolk would conduct an investigation. Ira Furman, spokesman for the National Transportation Safety Board, which also will conduct an inquiry, speculated that the winter storm that slammed into the Eastern seaboard may have been a factor.

EPA wants negotiated settlement with agency critic Hugh Kaufman

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Environmental Protection Agency, in a surprise development, asked for time today to seek a negotiated settlement with an agency whistleblower whose allegations have triggered a half-dozen congressional investigations of the agency.

EPA attorneys asked for at least an hour's delay to the start of a hearing into allegations of illegal harassment of Hugh Kaufman, a vocal critic of EPA's hazardous waste program.

Drew Moran, the EPA attorney, gave no details of what type of compromise the agency might be willing to offer to keep the hearing from going forward. The EPA had asked for the administrative hearing in an effort to overturn an adverse ruling by the Labor Department that officials had violated Kaufman's freedom of speech by improper investigations into his personal life.

Deputy Chief Administrative Judge Everett E. Thomas granted the request and attorneys for both sides began meeting behind closed doors in a nearby conference room.

Moran's request led to speculation that the agency may be trying to drop the appeal now that Kaufman's boss, Rita M. Lavelle, has been fired by President Reagan.

One of the charges against Ms. Lavelle was that she lied under oath to a House subcommittee when she denied ordering an investigation of Kaufman and said she wanted to have him fired.

Kaufman's allegations and the firing have led five House subcommittees and a Senate committee to begin separate investigations into the agency's handling of the $1.6 billion fund being used to clean up the country's worst hazardous waste sites.

The furor is turning the 40-year-old Kaufman into the most celebrated government whistleblower since A. Ernest Fitzgerald touched off a long-running controversy in 1969 by disclosing a $2 billion cost-overrun on the C5-A aircraft.

Kaufman, whose original charge of harassment was against Lavelle, said Sunday he now believes she is being made a "fall guy" for agency mismanagement and political favoritism in the Superfund program.

"Rita is at the bottom of the totem pole, not at the top. This hearing should get out more of the facts on how high up the totem pole all of this has gone," Kaufman said.

Rita M. Lavelle

Kaufman has accused the agency of illegally spying on him by tape recording an address he made to a citizens' group concerned about a proposed chemical dump in Meadville, Pa. Kaufman once said the agency even took pictures of him entering a motel room in Meadville with a woman — who turned out to be his wife.

EPA officials deny that any motel pictures were taken, but they have confirmed that an investigator was sent to check on Kaufman's whereabouts as part of an investigation into a possible payroll violation. Kaufman says the real reason for the domestic surveillance was an appearance he made on CBS-TV's "60 Minutes," during which he accused EPA officials of turning their backs on environmental dangers.

Richard M. Campbell, EPA's former assistant inspector general, said in an interview Friday the payroll violation was a "25-cent case" and he had argued against sending someone from his office to Meadville.

It was Campbell's affidavit to a House subcommittee that led to an allegation of perjury against Ms. Lavelle.

Horse auction 'sale of the century'

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — A crowd of more than 2,000 jammed into a barn at the state fairgrounds here to watch an auction of 69 horses that previously were part of oilman Kenneth Tureaud's Tulsa-based Saket Racing Stables.

Race horse trainers and owners from across the country paid a total of $1.7 million at the auction Saturday.

Women wrapped in mink coats stood arm-in-arm with men who wore gold and diamond jewelry, tall cowboy hats and leather jackets as the horses were paraded along a platform blanketed with wood chips.

"This sale is going to be a barn-burner," predicted Weleetka quarterhorse trainer Jim Winkle before the auction. "All the biggies are here. This is kind of the sale of the century."

"I think a lot of people showed up expecting to find a bargain. I know I did," said Ky Luddington of Freedom. "But there are no bargains here."

Luddington, who owns about 15 quarterhorses, said the sale would be an indicator of the current horse market.

"Even if you don't buy, you get to see what these particular bloodlines will bring," he said.

Tureaud, formerly of Tulsa, operated Saket Petroleum Co. until October, when he was forced into bankruptcy by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp.

Children killed because they saw too much

DETROIT (AP) — Two children killed along with three adults may have been stabbed to death because they had seen too much, and the slayings "probably" were drug-related, police said.

The bodies of two men and the two children were found in a house on Detroit's southwest side Sunday and the body of a woman believed to be the children's mother was found later in a motel about two miles away, said Detroit police Officer Wayne Roberts.

Police do not have any suspects in the deaths, which are presumed to be related, said Lt. Fred Williams.

"Probably, narcotics will play a part in this in some way," said police Lt. Gerald Stewart, who said drug paraphernalia were found at the house and in the motel room.

He would not say whether any drugs were found, and police refused to say whether any weapons were recovered.

The bodies of the men and children were found by an unidentified man who lived at the house and who had called there about 10 a.m. Sunday and became worried when a child answered the phone, Williams said.

A telephone tip, probably from a motel employee, led to the discovery of the woman's body, police said. She apparently was strangled.

The victims tentatively were identified as Betty Bradley, believed to be in her 20s; her brother, Patrick Shelly, 26; Gene Carr, 30, and Mrs. Bradley's two children, Miles, 7, and Angeletta, 8.

Moonshine used as energy source

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Using a recipe acquired from a moonshiner in Arkansas, Rodger Seratt has turned 180-proof grain alcohol into a viable energy source for home and car.

"We're getting ready to see a lot of alcohol fuel used in homes," Seratt said at the Energy Expo in Oklahoma City's Myriad Convention Center over the weekend.

"With utility bills going crazy, people will be looking for viable alternatives," he said.

Seratt has built a log-style home in his hometown of Poplar Bluff, Mo., to prove the alcohol fuel's efficiency. He said the log-style home was chosen because of its energy-saving capabilities.

Seratt first began exploring the alcohol fuel business in 1978. While a student at the University of Arkansas in Fayetteville, Seratt started "Rent-a-Lemon," a car rental agency offering old cars at cheap rates.

"But most of my business was on the weekends and when gas stations started closing on Saturday and Sunday...Well, business just dropped," Seratt said.

Armed with the knowledge that race car drivers often used alcohol as a fuel, and aided by his high school hobby of tinkering with engines, Seratt designed a carburetor that could use either alcohol or gasoline.

"But I didn't know how to make the alcohol, but I knew a man who did," he said.

Seratt contacted a moonshiner, who helped him set up his first alcohol-producing apparatus.

"Since that time, I've had governors, senators and even the head of the Alliance of Central American Nations call me about my work," he said.

A upsurge in the use of alcohol fuel — such as gasohol — kept Seratt on the road publicizing his research. But in recent months, the fuel's popularity has waned.

"People aren't too worried about fuel for their cars any more," Seratt said.

For that reason, and because of skyrocketing utility bills. Seratt switched to the home energy field.

Tests show water not contaminated

LAKE PROVIDENCE, La. (AP) — Residents of this small northeast Louisiana city were given permission to drink their water again after tests showed the public water system was free of cyanide.

City officials shut down the public water system Saturday night after an anonymous caller claimed the system had been contaminated with the deadly chemical.

Upsets make it tough on tournament selectors

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

The college basketball weekend included its usual quota of upsets topped by No. 12 Villanova's victory over top-ranked North Carolina.

Then there was No. 5 UCLA losing to unranked Oregon State and Tulane, barely .500 against the rest of the teams it has played, scoring its second victory in a week over No. 9 Memphis State. Three teams at the bottom of the rankings — No. 17 Illinois State, No. 18 Purdue and No. 19 Minnesota — each dropped its second straight.

It adds up to competitive, exciting college basketball, a trend that makes the job of the NCAA Tournament selection committee and its chairman, Dave Gavitt, that much more difficult.

"THIS TREND has been there the last couple of years," said Gavitt, who also serves as commissioner of the Big East Conference. "What's made the task tough is that every year it seems there's another new conference and for every new conference there's an automatic qualifier and that takes one at-large team from the pool."

This year, Gavitt's committee will invite 52 schools to the annual hoedown — the largest field in history. That includes 24 at-large teams.

"Of the 24 we have to pick at-large, 18 or 20 will be easy," Gavitt said. "It's always the last four to six that are tough. There are so many that are really deserving."

LAST YEAR, the tournament had 20 at-large teams. The increase of four more teams this year was balanced by a plan in which four games will match eight of conference champions at the start of the tournament. "That loosened the constraint on the number of spots," Gavitt said.

The parity and balance in the game insures an exciting, competitive tournament, something that excites Gavitt.

"There will be some one-sided games in the first rounds," he said. "History would indicate that. But from the second round on, I expect we'll have some incredible games. Last year, James Madison and North Carolina played in the second round. You couldn't ask for a more exciting game than that."

The Tar Heels survived that one, winning 52-50 and going on to the national championship. The game put James Madison on the basketball map.

"IT JUST indicates that there are more and more good teams out there," Gavitt continued.

But not so many that the tournament can go much farther in scope. "I think 48 is a good number with 24 at-large," Gavitt said.

Part of the improved competitive climate in the game is due to a second network (CBS) showing college games, according to Gavitt. The extra exposure increases top matchups

"Look at Houston. They're ranked No. 6 and Syracuse is ranked No. 15. But Syracuse beat Houston. That matchup never occurs if there isn't a second network showing games. That's healthy for the game."

Gavitt thinks there will be more surprises in the final weeks of the regular season.

"It's bound to happen, especially in strong conferences like the SEC and the Big East. There are just too many tough games to get through.

"THE SEC used to be Kentucky and nine other teams. Now all of them are having good years. Alabama is at the bottom of the conference, 3-9 in the league. But they've beaten (highly-regarded) UCLA and Georgetown."

"The Big East has five really outstanding teams and all of a sudden you've got a Pitt, which beat St. John's and Syracuse in the same week.

"Then there's the Sun Belt Conference with good teams increasing interest in places like Mobile, Tampa, Richmond and Norfolk."

Where does all this leave Gavitt and his committee?

With some tough decisions to make. Tough but pleasant.

Golly gee, What fun

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — They had fun, they provided some outstanding entertainment for the sellout crowd at the Forum and a national TV audience and they were proud to be in the game.

"This was the type of game you could enjoy by playing in it or simply sitting on the bench and watching it," Boston center Robert Parrish said Sunday after the East's 132-123 victory over the West in the 33rd National Basketball Association All-Star Game."

"It was a great show," said losing coach Pat Riley of Los Angeles. "Both sides really put on a super show for the fans."

"It was a well-played, exciting, close game," said forward Jamaal Wilkes of the Lakers. "It was ideal for the fans who deserve to see something like this."

"I think the game lived up to the NBA standard of exciting All-Star Games that have been played in the past," said forward David Thompson of Seattle and the West. "Everybody on the court was there because they are the best at what they do. The game showcased some great talent and that's constructive for the league."

"It was fun," said Detroit guard Isiah Thomas, who had 19 points for the winners. "I loved it."

NBA

"I was just tickled pink to be here — win, lose or draw," said Phoenix forward Maurice Lucas of the West. "It's quite an honor."

Heading the show was Philadelphia's Julius Erving, who scored 25 points for the East and was named the MVP for the second time, an honor he first won six years ago. Earvin "Magic" Johnson of the Lakers provided a different kind of show, handing out an All-Star record 16 assists for the losing squad.

"We enjoyed ourselves out there," said Johnson, who also had 17 points. "You're always disappointed when you lose, but it doesn't bother me that the East won for the fourth straight year. It doesn't necessarily mean that they have the best players."

Many players on both teams said they were impressed by the unselfishness of their teammates in looking for the open man and passing the ball. San Antonio center Artis Gilmore exhibited a different sort of unselfishness, asking late in the game to be taken out so hometown favorite Kareem Abdul-Jabbar could go back in the game.

Arkansas seeks No. 21 against SMU

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. (AP) — Arkansas, fresh from its 20th victory in 21 games, takes on Southern Methodist in a Southwest Conference game tonight.

Arkansas Coach Eddie Sutton said Sunday's practice was short. "SMU does a lot of the same things Texas A&M did," he said. "Therefore, we didn't practice very long."

Arkansas defeated SMU 63-56 earlier this year at Dallas, despite the work of SMU guard Butch Moore, who hit seven out of eight from the field that game. "We had trouble containing Moore at Dallas," Sutton said. "We have to do a better job on him. Darrell Walker will cover him." Walker is a senior guard.

Saturday night in Fayetteville, Arkansas defeated Texas A&M 62-55. For the seventh straight season, the Razorbacks have won 20 or more games. "Every year our No. 1 goal is to win the Southwest Conference," Sutton said. "One of our other goals is to win 20 games. Most people in basketball feel if you win 20 you've had a great year. We're not satisfied with 20, we're gonna win some more games."

Sutton said he doesn't think the Southwest Conference as a whole is as good as it was last year. "The top teams are as good, but the bottom ones aren't," he said. "We can't be complacent, we have to get better."

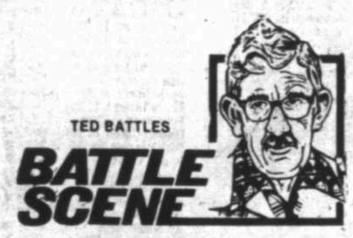
The Arkansas coach said he thinks Houston has a chance to go unbeaten in the conference this year. "I think they're the No. 1 team in the country. It looks like the championship will boil down to Houston and Arkansas."

Saturday, Walker scored 12 points and junior guard Alvin Robertson scored 10, all during the second half.

Walker and Robertson scored only one field goal each in the first 20 minutes. Walker finished with 17 points. Junior guard Ricky Norton scored 10 points for the Razorbacks, a career high.

Leading the Aggies was Tyren Naulls with 19 points. Claude Riley scored 12 and Roy Jones and Doug Lee scored 10 each for A&M. Reggie Roberts, averaging 14 points a game for A&M, was suspended from Saturday's game.

WJCC adopts new tournament format



Midland College still needs another win or two to clinch its third straight Western Junior College Conference title, but the Chaps' win over Amarillo College Thursday night nailed down a spot in the Region V tournament March 4-5-6.

Under rules changes for Region V qualifying, everybody still has a chance to make the WJCC's Final Four regional qualifiers who, along with four teams from the Eastern Conference, will compose the tournament field.

In the past, the top three teams in the final standings automatically earned Region V berths. The fourth and fifth place teams met in a "playin" game to determine the other team.

UNDER THE new arrangement, the top two teams qualify automatically. With four games to go, Midland and South Plains College would be the automatic qualifiers. However, the other two vacancies this year will be determined by an eight-team playoff.

Third place will play 10th, fourth meets No. 9, fifth meets No. 8 and No. 6 plays No. 7 in first round games. The two survivors of the second round games then would join the first and second place teams.

The new set up is a life-saver for a team like Howard College, a month ago one of the WJCC's top contenders, but relegated to the ranks of the also-rans after a series of ravaging injuries. It also keeps alive a flicker of hope for tailenders like Odessa College and New Mexico Military Institute while a Western Texas College can hope that its steady improvement over the last month will not go unrewarded.

AS THE season enters its final two weeks, Midland College holds a three-game lead over second place South Plains. After a non-conference loss to Howard and a league loss to Amarillo College upon return from the Christmas break, the Chaparrals didn't look like a team that would dominate the race.

Last year, Midland finished 17-1 in WJCC, but never ruled with the iron hand it has this year. Most of those 17 wins involved harrowing, finger-nail nibbling finishes in which MC rolled up big leads and then threatened to blow it.

The reason, of course, was a lack of squad depth. Coach Jerry Stone played the final two months with only eight players. In addition, MC's style of play was to go all-out all-the-way. The Chaps could race to a 20-25 point lead in a matter of minutes when clicking on all cylinders, but when the shots refused to fall and the dead-run passes began to miss their mark, they could dissipate a lead almost as quickly.

This year, with a full-squad, the bench has enabled the Chaps to play with more consistency and the contributions made by the reserves have increased in importance as the season has progressed.

Another factor in contributing to the reduction of cardiac finishes has been maturity. Citing Thursday's win against Amarillo, Stone said, "Once we got a lead, we were able to set the pace with our control game. This team takes care of the ball and the lead better than last year's team."

AS IMPRESSIVE as the Chaps have been, Jackie Phinnessee feels that in some games the team has been preoccupied. "Ever since the loss in Amarillo, we had been pointing to the return game and it has been hard to keep our minds on the team we are playing next."

The 6-6 Tennesseean has been one of the reasons Stone can look to the bench with more confidence.

His play in the second half against Amarillo Thursday helped swing the balance in the Chaps' favor. Phinnessee is a throw back to Ernie Tate, who played for th Chaps three years ago. When he enters the game, the fans stir in expectation. When he goes up for a rebound, one half expects him to bring down a hunk of the rafters with it. There's no doubt about who has the ball.

"Yes, I knew Ernie," he says, "We met at Fort Hood. He had just finished playing and I played there three years after he left."

If Abe Lemons hadn't been fired at Texas, Jackie would be playing for the Longorns this year. When Abe was

Eagle on 18 wins it for Aoki

AP Laserphoto

Isao Aoki ...sudden winner.

HONOLULU (AP) — Everyone was thinking playoff.

"I was trying to prepare myself, mentally prepare myself, for a playoff," said Jack Renner.

"My only thought," Isao Aoki said through an interpreter, "was to get it close and make a birdie and go to a playoff."

But the playoff wasn't necessary in the $325,000 Hawaiian Open golf tournament.

Aoki, trailing by one stroke, pitched in from the light rough from 128 yards out for an eagle-3 on the 18th hole Sunday, making him the first Japanese to win on the American PGA Tour.

It had something of a nightmare quality for the composed, self-contained Renner, however. He was sitting in the scorers' tent as the leader, his day's work done, and Aoki, the only man who could catch him, was chopping up the 539-yard 18th.

After driving into the rough, Aoki hooked his second shot into the gallery.

"The ball hit a spectator and came back out," Renner said. "It would have been a difficult birdie from there, but I was trying to prepare myself for a playoff. He's one of the world's best short-game players."

But Aoki's wedge shot covered the flag, took one hop and ducked into the cup for an eagle.

Aggies, Mustangs recruiting winners

HOUSTON (AP) — Texas A&M and Southern Methodist came away with the pick of the high school football crop this year, but the Southwest Conference's other seven teams signed their share of talent, the league's recruiting coordinators say.

The officials gave the Aggies six first-place votes and Southern Methodist University, three, in a poll published Sunday by the Houston Chronicle. The paper consulted recruiting coordinators at eight schools and an assistant coach at the University of Houston, which has no coordinator.

Officials were not allowed to vote for their own schools.

"I thought the talent was pretty evenly spread around," said Ken Dabbs of Texas. "Everybody got their share of players. I don't think anybody had a poor year."

Players committed themselves in national letters of intent Wednesday.

The group named Texas-bound running back Edwin Simmons of Hawkins the top offensive recruit, giving him three first-place votes. SMU's Jeff Atkins, a 5-11, 205-pound running back from Fort Worth Eastern Hills, got 2½ votes.

Jay Muller, 6-3, 230-pound tackle going from Conroe to A&M, and Aaron Grant, a 6-1, 195-pound safety from Richardson Lake Highlands who is bound for Baylor, got two votes apiece as the top defensive players.

The Aggies and the Mustangs ranked at least third on every ballot for the best overall recruiting job.

The top two were followed by Texas; Arkansas; Baylor and Houston in a fifth-place tie; Texas Tech; Texas Christian; and Rice.

Scypion in line for Hagler fight

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Wilford Scypion, not Frank "The Animal" Fletcher, has apparently earned the right to fight Marvin Hagler for the world middleweight crown.

Scypion boosted his hopes with a unanimous 12-round decision Sunday over Fletcher, who had been guaranteed a May 20 title shot at Hagler if he beat Scypion. Hagler successfully defended his title Friday night, stopping Englishman Tony Sibson in the sixth round in Worcester, Mass.

Scypion's victory gave him the United States Boxing Association crown.

Scypion, 24, of Port Arthur, Texas, raised his record to 26-3 with 20 knockouts. The fact that the World Boxing Council ranked him sixth, while rating Fletcher second, was a source of motivation.

Fletcher, 28, who is from nearby Philadelphia, fell to 16-3-1 with 11 knockouts.

Haley decisions Mamby

CLEVELAND (AP) — This time, as was the case last June, it could have gone either way. And once again, Leroy Haley came away with the World Boxing Council super lightweight crown.

"This man fought 27 rounds with me, and it was a close 27 rounds," Haley said Sunday after earning a narrow but unanimous 12-round decision over former champion Saoul Mamby.

Haley had taken the 140-pound title from Mamby last June 26 in a 15-round split decision.

Jun Sok Hwang searches for elusive Don Curry in title fight at Fort Worth.

Curry hurts hand in title defense

FORT WORTH (AP) — Donald (The Cobra) Curry, the new World Boxing Association welterweight champion, hopes to defend his title in two months if nothing is seriously wrong with his right hand.

Curry, a Texan, hurt his hand in the 12th round of his unanimous 15-round title decision Sunday night over gutsy South Korean Jun Sok Hwang in a bloody brawl.

"I hope it's not broken, I hope it's just a sprain," said Curry, who was to undergo X-rays today.

The surprising Hwang decked Curry for the first time in his professional career with a right uppercut in the seventh round, but the Fort Worth native made the underdog Asian battler pay for it.

Curry came back to pummel Hwang into a bloody mess. Hwang gamely hung on to finish the fight with his nose streaming blood onto his white trunks.

"This guy was a tough customer," said Curry. "I hurt my hand hitting him in the head in the 12th round. He took a lot of punishment and had a very hard head."

The 21-year-old Curry will defend his title against Roger Stafford April 15, probably in Italy.

"Stafford's a boxer, he's more my kind of fighter," said Curry.

Hwang, 21, the Oriental Pacific Boxing Federation champion, would anchor himself in a corner and dare the counter-punching Curry to come after him.

Curry, 146¼, got caught coming in once and Hwang, 147, landed a solid right that sent the champion sprawling.

"He didn't hurt me when he knocked me down but he landed some other punches that did," said Curry.

Hwang said through an interpreter that he got tired of chasing Curry all over the ring.

"That's not the way boxing should be. It should not be hit and run," said Hwang, who would wave for Curry to come after him.

Kings finally end misery

NHL

By The Associated Press

The Los Angeles Kings have ended their dismal Philadelphia story, but the unbeaten streak of Boston goalie Pete Peeters is one game away from a record.

At Philadelphia, Marcel Dionne scored two goals, including the game-winner, and assisted on another as the Kings won 5-4 Sunday night for their first victory over the Flyers since 1974. Los Angeles, which was 0-26-6 against Philadelphia in their last 32 meetings, erased 2-0 and 3-2 deficits.

Despite a team total of just seven first-period shots, Dionne and Doug Smith beat Flyers goalie Pelle Lindbergh in the opening period, the first time since Jan.18 that a team scored twice against the Flyers in a period.

In the second period, after LA's Charlie Simmer tied it 3-3, Jim Fox gave the Kings the lead on a power-play goal.Dionne notched his game-winner at 1:21 of the final period, making it 5-3.

Bruins 3, Canucks 1

Peeters stretched his unbeaten streak to 31 games and the Bruins made it 17 in a row without a loss.

Rick Middleton's two goals helped Peeters extend his unbeaten record to 26-0-5 after yielding a power-play goal to Stan Smyl early in the second period. The NHL goaltending record of 32 games without a loss was set by Boston Coach Gerry Cheevers in the 1971-72 season when he led the Bruins to the Stanley Cup.The Bruins are unbeaten in their last 22 games at Boston Garden.

Nordiques 5, Black Hawks 4

At Chicago, Quebec's Anton Stastny scored his fifth game-winning goal in the Nordiques' last eight victories, a shot from the crease midway through the final period for his 25th goal of the season. It came just 28 seconds after Chicago's Denis Savard tied the score 4-4 to climax a three-goal Chicago burst in the third period.Michel Goulet scored his 41st and 42nd goals for Quebec.

Capitals 6, Jets 1

At Landover, Md., Ken Houston scored in the opening minute to trigger Washington's triumph as the Capitals set a club record for victories in a season. The victory put the Caps in a second-place tie with the New York Islanders in the Patrick Division and gave them 69 points, one shy of the club record.Glen Currie also scored in the first period and assisted on Gaetan Duchesne's short-handed goal that gave Washington a 3-0 lead at 7:34 of the second period.

Whalers 5, Maple Leafs 3

At Hartford, Conn., the Whalers' Blaine Stoughton scored three goals in a game for the seventh time in his NHL career. He got one goal in each period and iced the victory on a power-play goal with 4:56 remaining after the Maple Leafs pulled within 4-3 on scores by Greg Terrion and Rick Vaive. Toronto has won only one of its last 37 road games.

USFL no threat to established NFL, says new league chief

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

In the mind of Commissioner Chet Simmons, the new United States Football League is a tasty hors d'oeuvre to whet the appetite of the country's ravenous football fans.

"We should feed off each other's success," said the former TV entrepreneur, insisting that his revolutionary spring-summer circuit poses no threat to the old, firmly established National Football League.

"We hope our success will bring greater succes to the NFL and vice versa."

Instead of war, an uneasy peaceful co-existence is the aim of the boss of the fledgling league, who vows there will be no raiding or intruding upon the preserves of either the NFL or the Canadian Football League.

"Pete Rozelle and I go back many years to when I was negotiating TV contracts as president of NBC Sports," Simmons said, referring to the NFL commissioner.

"I haven't heard much from him lately — both of us have been very busy, but I received a nice letter when our plans for a new league were first announced.

"We have publicly stated that we will not interfere in either the NFL or CFL. I think both of us feel that the new league, if successful, will be good for pro football."

The arrangement is similar to that which had prevailed for years between the NFL and CFL.

"We hope we can have the same agreement with the USFL that we long have had with the NFL — no tampering," said Jake Gaudaur, longtime commissioner of the CFL with headquarters in Toronto. "I lave known Simmons a long time. I feel we can have a very nice relationship. A few of our people and administrators and coaches have gone to the USFL but we haven't lost anybody that's irreplaceable.

"You can expect this where people are looking for an upgrading of their position."

Two Canadian head coaches have gone into the USFL — Hugh Campbell formerly of Edmonton Eskimos to the Los Angeles Express and Ray Jauch, of the Winnipeg Blue Bombers to the Washington Federals.

The USFL has dipped into CFL front offices for administrative personnel, Jim Spivital moved from Saskatchewan to the Michigan Panthers as general manager as an example, but this talent is generally considered open game.

Such moves don't result from raids but through negotiations and often with league agreement.

Gaudaur recalled that more than a quarter of a century ago the CFL was threatened with a tampering suit by George Halas of the Chicago Bears and he personally made a trip to Philadelphia to work out an agreement with Bert Bell, then the NFL commissioner.

"It wasn't a signed document — just our words and a handshake," the Canadian commissioner said. "It has been inviolate since. I remember once George Blanda, who was then 27, wanted to come into our league.

"We felt he was too near the end of his career and decided against it. What little did I know."

Blanda went on to play into his 40s as a quarterback and place kicker.

Despite skepticism that fans will accept pro football in the offseason, Simmons said he and the USFL's well-heeled owners don't regard the project as a gamble.

"A national survey showed that 76 percent of the respondents would watch football at this time of year, (March through early July)" he said. "We are encouraged by the advance season ticket sales and our TV contracts (ABC and ESPN for a reported $35 million) give us a solid starting base.

"We think we struck at just the right time, coming right after the NFL strike which left fans half nourished. Also we are entering a cable TV boom. Prospects are limitless."

Shakespeare named to grid Hall

NEW YORK (AP) — Former Notre Dame halfback Bill Shakespeare, hero of one of the most famous rallies in college football history, was one of five men named to the National Football Foundation's College Hall of Fame today in the deceased category.

Besides Shakespeare, others named to the Hall of Fame were Southern California guard John Baker, Army quarterback Arnold Galiffa, Michigan center Ernie Vick and Frank Murray, who coached at Marquette and Virginia.

The selections were made by the foundation's Honors Court. The deceased Hall of Famers will be inducted at special on-campus ceremonies next fall prior to a home game to be designated by their respective universities.

Shakespeare was the hero of Notre Dame's 18-13 triumph over Ohio State in 1935. The Irish trailed 13-0 entering the final period but eventually won on Shakespeare's touchdown pass to Wayne Milner with 32 seconds remaining. Shakespeare died in 1974.

Baker, who won four football letters at Southern Cal, kicked the field goal with one minute to play that gave the Trojans a 16-14 triumph in 1971 that snapped a 26-game Notre Dame unbeaten streak. Baker died in 1979.

Galiffa, who died in 1978, was a standout quarterback at West Point from 1947-49 and also played baseball and basketball. He served in the Army for two years before receiving an appointment to the Military Academy and later was on active duty for three years during the Korean War.

Vick, who won four letters at Michigan, was named to the 1921 All-America team by Walter Camp.

Villanova upsets North Carolina, 56-53

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — About the hardest part of 12th-ranked Villanova's 56-53 upset of top-ranked North Carolina was getting the Wildcats from their campus to an airport and eventually to Chapel Hill.

This weekend's blizzard closed down Philadelphia's airport. Thus, to get to Chapel Hill, Villanova took a bus from its campus to Atlantic City, N.J. From there, the Wildcats a charter flight to the Raleigh-Durham Airport, about 30 minutes from Chapel Hill.

"The rough part just was hanging around school waiting," said center John Pinone. "We had to wait about three hours to find out what time we were leaving. It makes you tired and groggy just hanging around waiting to see what you're going to do."

Villanova certainly didn't wait around once it reached Carmichael Auditorium in Chapel Hill. The Wildcats took a 10-point lead in the second half, then used three clutch free throws by Dwayne McClain to put an end to North Carolina's 18-game winning streak.

The Tar Heels trailed third-ranked Virginia by 16 points last week, but rallied and pulled out a one-point victory. The Wildcats were aware of that, but said they weren't too worried about their own chances.

"We feel when there's three or four minutes to go and we've got the lead, we're not gonna lose," said Pinone, whose 14 points led the Wildcat attack.

Villanova seized the lead by scoring the first seven points. North Carolina, meanwhile, needed a basket by Matt Doherty to break an 0-for-5 slump. The Wildcat lead grew to 21-12 before a Sam Perkins dunk tied the score at 23 late in the first half.

Michael Jordan's follow shot early in the second half gave the Tar Heels their first lead at 31-30. Villanova regained control, but North Carolina tied the score at 35-all on Jim Braddock's jumper with 12:30 left.

BUSINESS BRIEFS

Price drop lead by energy

WASHINGTON (AP) — The record 1 percent drop in wholesale prices last month was led by falling energy prices.

The government said Friday that wholesale energy prices fell 4.2 percent, the biggest decline since the Labor Department began keeping those records in 1974.

In the past 12 months, the rate of wholesale inflation has been 2.1 percent. That is the slowest pace of increase for a 12-month period in 15 years.

"It suggests 1983 is going to be a year of surprisingly low inflation, just as was 1982," said Allen Sinai, senior economist at the Lexington, Mass., consulting firm of Data Resources Inc.

The seasonally adjusted 1 percent decline in the measure was the steepest fall since the index was compiled in 1947. The January drop compared with a 0.2 percent increase in December and a 0.6 percent gain in November, the department said.

Last month, wholesale natural gas prices were down a surprising 2.7 percent; home heating oil costs fell 9.7 percent, and gasoline prices tumbled 3.3 percent.

Consumer confidence higher

NEW YORK (AP) — Consumer confidence grew slightly last month, but fewer people were planning a major purchase in the coming six months, a new survey said.

The Conference Board, a business-sponsored research group, said today its index of consumer confidence rose about four points to 57.6, based on 100 for 1969-70.

"Consumers are clearly in a wait-and-see mood," said Fabian Linden, executive director of the board's Consumer Research Center. "While they are less pessimistic than they were in December, the vast majority do not expect things to change very much over the next six months."

The board's index of buying plans fell to 66.3 from 75.2 in December, marking the second consecutive monthly drop. The index measures people's intent to buy such items as automobiles, houses and major appliances in the coming six months.

Sixty percent of the people interviewed said jobs were hard to get, compared with 62 percent in December. Fifty-two percent said business conditions were "bad," compared with December's 59 percent.

Continental Air moving soon

HOUSTON (AP) — Continental Airlines Corp. is planning to move its corporate headquarters and executive offices from Los Angeles to Houston by July 1.

The company, formed Oct. 31 after Texas Air Corp. acquired Continental Airlines and merged it with Texas International Airlines, will retain a base of operations in Los Angeles, Continental President Stephen M. Wolf said Friday.

He said the decision was made because "Houston has emerged as the largest hub of Continental's operations and it is clear that our corporate headquarters, including the executive offices and a number of staff departments, should be located in Houston."

Wolf estimated that the move would send about 125 people from Los Angeles to Houston and slightly fewer from Houston to Los Angeles. He said 4,100 employees would be based here and 4,000 in Los Angeles.

No jobs will be lost through the move, Continental spokesman Bruce Hicks said.

The company will now base in Houston its divisions in marketing, sales and services, finance, legal, personnel, properties and facilities and flight operations as well as the executive offices.

Los Angeles will house divisions in maintenance, engineering, data processing, revenue accounting, a extensive flight kitchen facility, a major reservations center and a crew base for the western United States and the South Pacific.

IMF boosts emergency fund

WASHINGTON (AP) — The International Monetary Fund has been given authority to boost by 47.5 percent its emergency lending fund to help debtor nations stave off default and avoid triggering an international financial panic.

Finance ministers from around the world agreed Friday to the increase, which was a compromise between the United States and other major industrial powers.

The 47.5 percent increase would raise the IMF's lending pool from a current about $66.5 billion to $98 billion by the end of 1983, providing the increases are approved by the national legislature of each member country.

The United States' share would come to about $8.5 billion. Congress may be reluctant to approve that much because of proposed cutbacks in domestic spending.

The Reagan administration had argued for an increase, however, saying that it was essential to manage the most perilous debt crisis the international financial system has faced since World War II.

Chase pursuing Chicago Rose

CHICAGO (AP) — Officials of Rose & Co. of Chicago, the nation's fourth largest discount broker, say Chase Manhattan Corp. is negotiating to acquire it.

Rose President John L. Rose said Friday that "discussions are underway that might lead to the acquisition of Rose by Chase."

Chase Manhattan Corp. is a New York-based holding company for Chase Manhattan Bank, third largest in the United States.

A Chase spokesman would not comment on the timing of any announcement, but said purchase of a "quality discount broker" would be in accord with Chase's objective of "providing a full range of services to our customers not only in New York but in selected markets nationwide."

Rose & Co. executes about 2,000 trades daily and at the end of last year showed capital of $4 million.

Its acquisition would follow a series of moves by banks to enter the discount brokerage business.

UAW begins contract talks

DEARBORN, Mich. (AP) — The United Auto Workers union has begun contract talks which could play a significant role in whether a Japanese consortium buys most of Ford Motor Co.'s Rouge Steel subsidiary.

The consortium wants a new labor contract with 4,000 U.S. workers which would make the money-losing steelmaker "cost competitive with other U.S. producers," Donald Ephlin, UAW vice president in charge of the union's Ford department, said Friday at a news conference.

He declined to be more specific.

Ford is handling the talks for the consortium, headed by the Japanese steelmaker Nippon Kokan, and expects to complete the talks next month.

Rouge Steel workers, with total labor costs of more than $20 per hour, earn about twice as much as Japanese steelworkers in wages and benefits.

Rouge Steel workers also earn more than other U.S. steelworkers, although Ephlin said he did not know how much.

Ford plans new guarantees

DETROIT (AP) — Ford Motor Co. plans to guarantee repairs on certain cars and trucks for as long as customers own the vehicles, a company spokesman says.

"The dealer and Ford guarantee service repairs," under the proposed program, Michael Davis, public affairs manager of the Ford parts and service division said Saturday. "The customer pays for the repairs and, as long as he or she has the vehicle, never has to pay again for the same repair."

The automaker has enlisted 30 percent of its dealers for the lifetime guarantee, but wants the rest of its dealers to commit themselves before advertising the offer, Davis said.

The buyer of any new car would be obligated to have repairs done by the dealer who sold it, and any subsequent repairs for the same complaint would be free, he said.

The warranty would not include standard maintenance such as oil and filter changes, but applies to major mechanical items such as the engine or transmission, Davis said.

"Basically, it's to encourage owners of Ford products to continue to get their cars serviced at the dealership," Davis said.

Ford currently offers a plan in which it pays service and maintenance costs, including oil and filter changes, on selected cars for two to three years or 24,000 to 36,000 miles.

Congress swamped with mail

By OTTO KREISHER
Copley News Service

WASHINGTON — Every mail delivery to the congressional offices brings more of the letters, post cards and preprinted stubs, adding to record-setting totals for an orchestrated outpouring of public sentiment.

Some offices compare the flood of mail to correspondence received during the height of the Panama Canal treaty debate. Others match the totals against mail received on abortion or gun control legislation.

Whatever the issue used for comparision, the consensus from congressional mailrooms is that the current deluge is surpassing all the others in volume.

The issue evoking all the mail is one small provision of the $98 billion tax package enacted last August.

That provision will require financial institutions and corporations to begin withholding 10 percent of the interest or dividends they pay to individual investors or savers. The money will be sent to the Internal Revenue Service as a prepayment of taxes due on the earnings.

THE BANKS, savings and loan institutions, credit unions and other financial institutions are waging a massive campaign to get Congress to repeal the withholding requirement before it goes into effect July 1.

As part of that effort, the financial institutions are including statements or other correspondence they send to their investors, savers or members special bulletins warning about the impending withholding and asking them to write their representatives and senators urging them to support repeal. Most of the bulletins provide a coupon or post card to be signed and mailed to the members of Congress, and those account for about 80 percent of the mail.

The campaign has been a great success, to the regret of congressional postal workers and mailroom employees.

Senate Democratic Leader Robert C. Byrd said his office has received 15,000 pieces of mail from his West Virginia constituents on the withholding provision. He said that was a greater volume than he received in opposition to gun control.

A legislative aide to Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., said they had received about 40,000 pieces of mail in the last week, the peak of a mountain of mail that has been arriving for almost a month.

CRANSTON'S AIDE said the torrent of mail was exceeding totals received on the Panama Canal treaty, the previous record.

Sen. Pete Wilson, D-Calif., received 20,000 pieces of mail on the issue last week, his press aide said.

Several legislative assistants handling the mail on the interest and dividend withholding complained that the financial institutions are not explaining that the new provision includes several major exceptions that will exclude many savers and investors from having part of their interest or dividends withheld.

"There is a lot of misinformation being provided by the financial institutions," Cranston's aide said.

"What is really the shame is the mail from a lot of retired people who live on their savings" and appear to be freightened they will lose 10 percent of their earnings, he said. "These are the people who most likely are not covered."

The legislative aide to Rep. Ron Packard, R-Carlsbad, said "there is a lot of misinformation on this. Some people think they will be taxed to 10 percent of their savings."

"Some of the senior citizens are being scared by the institutions," he said.

THE MAILERS sent out by the financial institutions do not, for the most part, explain the exemptions in the law.

The withholding requirement does not cover anyone who earns less then $150 a year on interest or dividends — which would take about $3,000 in a passbook savings account to earn.

The law also exempts persons over age 65 if they earn less than $8,000 a year, or $15,000 for couples, regardless of how much they earn in interest or dividends.

But there is no indication of that in the bulletins sent out by most of the institutions.

An example is the message sent out by the Rohr Employees Federal Credit Union to its members.

"Save our savings" cries the headline on the message that tells its members the law "will hit you and me right in our savings accounts."

THE ROHR letter says the "10 percent withholding tax will be imposed against all dividends and interest you earn on your savings. This means that even before you see that money 10% of it will be withheld by the federal government."

Because of the withholding, the message said, "you will have 10% less in your savings balance to draw interest on."

The new law "will also increase operating costs for your credit union" which will mean less in dividends, the Rohr credit union said.

Legislative aides familiar with the issue say the financial institutions' concern over the hassle and the potential cost of the withholding requirement is the main reason for their opposition.

In testifying against the provision last year, financial institution representatives said it would cost them as much to set up and operate the system as it would raise in additional revenues.

But congressional experts say the withholding should be a relatively easy procedure for most highly computerized financial institutions. And, they note, the institutions will be able to hold onto the money they withhold for up to 30 days, meaning an interest-free loan of the government's money.

THE EARNINGS on that 30-day "float" could cover most of the costs of operating the system, the congressional consultants said. Any other documented expense could be a tax deductible business expense.

Supporters of the withholding provision say it will prevent the loss of millions of tax dollars each year from people forgetting or deliberately not reporting their interest and dividend earnings.

The combination of these previously avoided taxes and the earnings the government will experience by having the money in hand for part of the year, instead of waiting until the tax returns are filed in the spring, is expected to give the government $1.3 billion in additional revenues this fiscal year, growing to $5.2 billion a year by 1987.

Cranston, among others, supports the withholding provision because the additional revenue will help reduce the soaring federal deficits. In the letters sent in response to the mail on the withholding issue, Cranston explains that fact, plus the exemptions the financial institutions do not tell about. Cranston voted for the tax withholding last year.

Sen. Wilson, who opposed the tax package during his campaign last year, has not taken a position on repealing the withholding provision, his aides said.

Because of the flood of opposition to the withholding provision, more than two dozen bills have been introduced to repeal it.

But House Speaker Thomas P. "Tip" O'Neill, D-Mass., and Senate Finance Committee Chairman Robert Dole, R-Kan., have said they oppose repeal, indicating there is little chance the provision will be canceled before the July 1 effective date, if at all.

Conservatives Reagan, Thatcher somewhat similar

By ROBERT LEKACHMAN
The Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

A late January week in London highlights major similarities as well as some differences between Reaganism and Thatcherism. Notoriously, the two conservative leaders share an aversion to government and taxes and an enthusiasm for old-fashioned virtues.

While briskly scolding striking waterworkers, British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher exhorted them to practice Victorian work ethics, possibly with wages to match. Emulating President Reagan's destruction of the flight controllers union, she promises to break the waterworkers strike no matter what the cost in public inconvenience.

In both countries, inflation has declined and unemployment has risen. Here, England leads the way. At more than 13 percent, its unemployment is a sickening three points higher than ours. In fairness to the prime minister, she has had a year longer than her transatlantic colleague to precipitate bankruptcies, layoffs and plant closings.

In one important way, British Conservatives have been luckier than our Republicans. Thatcher has had a nice little war. Not only did the Brits teach the Argies a sharp lesson, but the Commission of Inquiry headed by Lord Franks commended the government in large print and hinted only in subordinate clauses that just possibly the war might have been avoided if Lord Carrington, foreign minister at the time, or Thatcher herself had made it sufficiently clear to Gen. Leopoldo F. Galtieri that invasion meant war.

IN FACT, the prime minister is doing so well in the opinion polls, and the opposition so poorly, that pundits speculate that she will call an early general election, possibly in May or June, before the Falklands aura fades and the cost of defending distant islands forever and ever becomes more obvious to the taxpaying public.

Reagan, of course, is in worse shape, just about where Jimmy Carter was at this point in his term. Lacking a parallel to the Falklands, compelled to retreat in disarray on the pipeline embargo, getting nowhere with his zero-zero missile plan and mired in Lebanon, our chief executive must put all his political chips on economic recovery and hope that this time the jump in the leading indicators is for real.

Here at home, of course, the burning question is, has our president, a man of few but stubborn ideas, concurred in the general verdict that Reaganomics is a dead duck and that the time accordingly has come to emulate Franklin Roosevelt, Reagan's occasional hero, by trying something new?

Always indulgent to American presidents, the London Economist thinks that Reagan has learned something in the last two years about economic reality. Already his agents have encouraged the Fed to junk the monetarism so warmly applauded in high White House circles in 1981 and early in 1982. His State of the Union concession that government really does have a responsibility to promote recovery brought him in touch with the advanced thought of the 1930s. And the budget does advocate, however implausibly, stand-by tax increases if deficits prove intractable.

It is also nice to hear the president inviting the cooperation of Democrats. Unfortunately, his budgetary plans for next year contradict optimistic theories that Reagan has become a convert to conventional economics, if anyone knows what that is, and moderated his fiscal priorities accordingly.

THE NEW budget, contrary to the expressed preferences of important Republican moderates such as Sens. Robert Dole of Kansas, Howard H. Baker Jr. of Tennessee and Pete Domenici of New Mexico, continues the assault as before upon food stamps, child nutrition, Medicare and Medicaid. The defense concessions are trivial. The president and Secretary of Defense Caspar W. Weinberger seem as eager as ever to fund the nuttiest of the Pentagon's new weapon systems.

Proving probably that hope springs eternal, informed British opinion takes the line that, despite the president's wish to push Pentagon spending up by at least 9 percent after inflation and make life harder for the usual losers — the elderly, unemployed and sick — he really is prepared to compromise with angry Democrats and dissatisfied members of his own party, accept genuine curtailment of the Pentagon's swollen budget and tacitly concede that it is unrealistic further to shred the famous safety net in the midst of the worst recession in four decades.

In due course we shall discover the depth of our president's devotion to social Darwinism. But the tenor of politics in both England and this country is profoundly dispiriting. In this, John Maynard Keynes' centenary year, leading politicians in both countries have abandoned full employment as a policy target and implicitly accepted for the indefinite future unemployment levels regarded as intolerable a generation ago. In the worst month of the severest of three Eisenhower recessions, unemployment touched 7.6 percent. The present administration expects it to linger two or three points above that figure for several years of presumed economic expansion.

In her country, Thatcher has lowered public expectations of economic performance to the point that British pollsters report widespread skepticism about the Labor Party's promise to reduce unemployment from 3 million to 1 million. Yet it was not very long ago that even the second figure was generally taken to be dangerous to the political health and longevity of any government that countenanced it.

OUR OWN trendy, high-tech, Atari Democrats carefully avoid terms such as full employment and references to the all-but-forgotten Humphrey-Hawkins Act. Indeed, only students of legislative archeology are likely to recall that the 1983 unemployment target in Humphrey-Hawkins is 4 percent. How quaint! Democrats should be advocating at a minimum public jobs programs on a $30 billion annual scale. Instead, they are nerving themselves to float a meager $5 billion scheme.

In both countries, the division between the prosperous and the impoverished widens. Social services are starved. Families lose their homes. Workers in the prime years of their careers despair of ever finding new employment. For this jaundiced traveler, it is difficult to decide whether affairs march to more disastrous conclusions in Great Britain or in the land of the partially free and the home of the occasionally brave.

InterNorth chief says balance sheet is clean

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — After closing the books on "a very difficult year," InterNorth President Sam F. Segnar said the Omaha-based company has ended an employee wage freeze and has entered 1983 with "a clean balance sheet."

He said the diversified energy company also has been working on plans to develop and install fuel-efficient natural gas equipment for customers who are designated by "duly appointed people" as needing assistance in paying fuel bills.

The assistance program, still in the research and development stage, is being financed by InterNorth. Segnar said the company would ask regulatory agencies to allow InterNorth to pass along installation costs to all customers.

Segnar was interviewed last week before InterNorth released financial results for 1982, a year in which the company took losses of millions of dollars on three major investments that turned sour.

The investments are InterNorth's share in a long-delayed Alaska pipeline, the company's two coal mines near Meeker, Colo., and two Polish-built tankers that were used infrequently.

"We never have had a year like 1982 when everything we are in was under pressure," Segnar said. "We had to make adjustments that were pretty much unprecedented, like asking our people to go without salary increases."

Although the wage freeze has ended for 11,000 InterNorth employees, Segnar said a hiring freeze will continue into 1983. Total employment has declined through attrition by about 1,000 since one year ago, he said.

In the interview, Segnar said he hadn't planned to announce until later InterNorth's move to assist residents who can't pay for natural gas, a commodity that has increased in price about 20 percent each year for the last six years.

He said InterNorth engineers have been working for some time to perfect safe, fuel-efficient heating systems designed to heat individual rooms in a house rather than all of it.

Continued research into fuel-efficient, natural gas room heaters is possible because of recent technological advances in the way small units can be vented and supplied with natural gas, he said.

As an example, Segnar said "quick-disconnect couplings" have opened the way for development of portable natural gas heaters.

The couplings, approved for safety and efficiency by the American Gas Association, operate somewhat like a central vacuum cleaner, giving occupants "a chance

Reagan may offer arms compromise

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, trying to break an arms negotiating deadlock with Moscow, may offer the Soviets a temporary agreement that falls short of eliminating all medium-range nuclear missiles in Europe, says Vice President George Bush.

Faced with Moscow's rejection of the U.S. "zero option" proposal, Bush said Reagan "will be making a determination whether we should do something different in order to encourage the Soviets to do what we've asked."

Bush insisted the administration is not backing away from its "zero option" plan of eliminating all medium-range missiles. But he added:

"Maybe there is a way, an intermediate way, to get from here to an objective that every thinking person, including the Soviets, should share, and it is that that the president is considering right now."

Bush returned last week from a 12-day trip through Europe, where allied leaders strongly endorsed Reagan's plan.

At the same time, the European officials suggested that interim steps should be taken if agreement cannot be achieved by year's end.

An interim pact presumably would call for a reduction in the current Soviet arsenel of missiles aimed at Western Europe, and a cutback in the number of Pershing II and cruise missiles that the United States is scheduled to begin deploying in NATO countries at the end of the year.

Interviewed Sunday on CBS-TV's "Face the Nation," Bush said there is a "distinct possibility" that a "zero option" agreement can be negotiated before the yearend deployment.

While saying he personally believes the Soviets are interested in reducing the threat of nuclear warfare, Bush said Moscow's negotiators "are not showing it."

"They are being very iron-willed," said Bush. "Part of the reason they're not showing it is because they think they can win a propaganda battle," and keep the United States from proceeding on schedule with its deployment of new missiles in Europe.

Bush said that if an agreement is not reached, "that deployment date is set and we are not going to vacillate and pull away from it."

While saying that Reagan is considering an interim agreement, Bush remarked, "We are not going to depart from this moral objective: ridding the world, if you will, banishing forever, an entire generation of these weapons."

On another front, Bush said he was worried about the state of U.S.-Israeli relations, which have been aggravated by the continued presence of Israeli troops in Lebanon.

"I worry about it very much," Bush said. But he added, "I don't see it getting out of hand."

He said the United States was prepared to do whatever is necessary, along with other countries, to promote the withdrawal of foreign forces from Lebanon.

On another topic, Bush said "clearly it would be difficult" for the United States to deal with Soviet leader Yuri Andropov if he is conclusively linked with the assassination attempt against Pope John Paul II.

Klaus Barbie was moved from the Fort Montluc Prison in Lyon, France, to one in Saint Joseph Saturday in this truck.

Forget past, Barbie says about charges

PARIS (AP) — Insisting "the past is the past," former Gestapo leader Klaus Barbie says he should not be retried on charges of executing or ordering the deaths of thousands of French Jews and resistance fighters during World War II.

In a television interview broadcast Sunday night, Barbie argued that only those who lose wars face punishment for war crimes.

"Until now, no general, no official person of the allies has been accused of a so-called war crime because after the war, they liquidated in their favor all of those problems," said Barbie.

Barbie, known as the "Butcher of Lyon," was head of the Gestapo in that French city during the wartime Nazi occupation.

He was convicted twice by postwar tribunals and sentenced to death in absentia for the torture, execution and deportation to concentration camps of thousands of Jews and other people from 1942 to 1944.

Barbie lived in Bolivia under an assumed name until this month, when he was expelled, returned to France and charged with "crimes against humanity." France has abolished the death penalty, but he faces life imprisonment if convicted in a retrial that has yet to be scheduled.

The former Nazi was interviewed by a Bolivian television crew during his long flight from La Paz to Lyon on Feb. 5.

"I did my duty...I was chief of the anti-resistance group in France. My particular job was the war against the French resistance...The past is the past, it is buried."

"I did my duty," said Barbie, who was moved late Saturday from the Fort Montluc Prison in Lyon to the more secure Saint Joseph facility. "I was chief of the anti-resistance group in France. My particular job was the war against the French resistance."

In the 15-minute tape broadcast by the television station TF1, Barbie added: "The past is the past, it is buried."

The interviewer asked him if he believed "France, Europe, the world should forget your crimes."

Barbie replied: "Yes, absolutely, because so many new crimes have happened, more than 100 wars after the Second World War, and all the recent crimes which are known to the public. I have forgotten."

Barbie said war crimes trials against former Nazis were unjust, "a trial of the winner against the loser, and a trial of this kind can never render justice."

Arens seems calmer than Sharon

Diplomat should view job differently, press says

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Moshe Arens, Prime Minister Menachem Begin's choice for defense minister, may bring a more pragmatic and calm temperament to the job than the flamboyant and combative Ariel Sharon, according to the Israeli press.

Moshe Arens

Arens, 57, is a hardliner who opposed Israel's peace treaty with Egypt, and his policy recommendations may be just as tough as Sharon's. But the softspoken diplomat is expected to be less likely to seek fights with Washington than Sharon, who angered the Reagan administration by accusing it of blocking Israel from a peace treaty with Lebanon.

Arens went to high school and college in the United States and is just completing a year as Israel's ambassador to Washington.

U.S. officials had expressed worry that the hawkish Arens might be difficult to deal with, but Israeli press reports say he was generally considered a success.

Arens was born in Lithuania. He emigrated to the United States with his family when he was 14 and attended high school in the Philadelphia area.

He then studied engineering at both the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and the California Institute of Technology.

Arens associated with right-wing Jewish groups in his youth and moved to Israel in 1950. He settled on a farm community near Jerusalem, then went back to the United States for studies in aeronautical engineering. He has said he is proudest of his work designing aircraft and missiles produced in Israel for both the Israeli armed forces and for export.

In 1973 Arens entered politics, joining the Herut Party that is the core of Begin's Likud Bloc. After Begin's 1977 election victory he became chairman of Parliament's most prestigious body, the Foreign Affairs and Security Committee.

The hatless Midland County Sheriff Dallas Smith and Sheriff's Lt. Bill Decker look over drawings of the sheriff's courthouse remodeling project with working inmates.

Convicts' toil

While their swords have not yet been made into plowshares, sheriff's deputies last week set aside their guns and handcuffs and joined forces with "criminal types."

They picked up hammers and nails, screwguns and other tools and worked beside inmates in expanding the sheriff's offices in the Midland County Courthouse.

The toil was the economical means to an end: Converting about half the space of the former tax office in the courthouse basement to offices for Sheriff Dallas Smith. The sheriff estimated that "contracting" the work to deputies and inmates cost about one-tenth of what a commercial builder might charge. Materials cost the county about $2,700; a builder might charge $25,000 to $27,000 for the same work.

Inmates worked for good time rather than for pay.

"They're paying their debt to society, and this is a partial payment," reasoned Midland County Commissioner Durward Wright. "There's nothing cruel or inhumane about it. They enyoy the work."

Aside from getting respite from the drab confinement of jailhouse living, most of the prisoners who performed skilled and unskilled labor at the sheriff's bidding will be credited with double or triple time for their deeds. For those who have penitentiary time to do, it'll enhance their records when they're transferred to the Texas Department of Corrections.

"I enjoy doing this better than sitting upstairs (in jail)," said a 30-year-old Midlander who was jailed for failure to make child support payments and for theft of "two of my wife's rings."

"RIDING HERD" on the prisoners and deputies was sheriff's Lt. Bill Decker, who for a week traded his Smith & Wesson .357-caliber Magnum for a 16-ounce red-handled Plumb hammer. "I had rather carry this than a gun, anyway," said Decker. "I do all the thinking and figuring for everybody else (except the sheriff) and hope I'm not wrong."

Decker's work crew built offices for the sheriff's Criminal Investigation Division and Civil Warrants Division. Work started Feb. 5 after the sheriff received the commissioners' approval and continued from early morn 'til the 10 o'clock news.

Frank "Topper" Adams, one of Decker's jail hands, for a moment was "just goofing off" on the job. An 18-year-old television cable contractor from Arkansas, he had been placed on probation for 10 years for delivery of marijuana, fined $2,500 and ordered to serve 30 days in jail "no matter what." Unlike most of the working prisoners, he won't get a break — double or triple time — for helping. "I get out of this thing March 9, and I'm going back home," Adams said.

"It beats being upstairs; that's for sure," volunteered Jerrett McFarland, a 20-year-old journeyman electrician who ran afoul of the law by possessing cocaine and committing robbery.

Raymond Bennett, 17, who is bound to the penitentiary under a two-year probation, was helping with sheet rocking and putting up studs and frames. The work, he said, is a break from his "eat, sleep and watch TV" jail routine.

"I DON'T MIND the work," said 18-year-old Greg Phillips, who is penitentiary-bound for violation of probation for burglary. "Instead of getting paid money, I get paid time." For every day at work, he gets credit for three days of jail time; if he's just sitting in the jail, his time is on a one-for-one basis. "So, they're giving us a break to let us work."

Andy Anderson does some electrical work in lieu of being holed up in jail.

Thirty-six-year-old convicted robber Ernest Mashburn, who's back in Midland on a bench warrant, volunteered for the sheriff's construction project.

"I was tired of lying around up there and getting out of shape. This (work) keeps me in shape."

In the prison, he was helping construct cell blocks.

"I was working in construction in the free world," Mashburn said. "I enjoy it."

During each work shift, an armed deputy stood guard at the work area's entrance. Among deputies working with the prisoners were Bennie Fishback, Gerald Hall, B. John McDaniel and CID Lt. Bryan Cook, who has "been around building as long as I've been around."

Midland inmates toil building new offices

The remodeling project was the sheriff's idea; he needed more space for his operations. He had the manpower to get the work done in the old tax office, which has been vacant since last fall when the tax and elections offices were relocated to a new annex. Commissioners haven't decided what to do with the other half of the old tax office which the sheriff won't be using.

"IT'S THE SHERIFF'S deal, and I back it wholeheartedly," said County Judge Bill Ahders, who cited the project's favorable economics. "We are strapped for money."

Commissioners may ask the sheriff to assign his more trusted prisoners to other county work projects, such as greasing and oiling county vehicles and machinery, cleaning out borrow ditches and building and maintaining roads.

"We're not only strapped for money," said Commissioner Win Brown, "but we're utilizing their (the prisoners') expertise."

Putting prisoners on the county's work force also got the approval of Commissioner C. DeWayne Davis.

"I think this is something we are going to see more utilization of in the future," he said. "They can earn some time and gain fresh air. And they're not the meanest people in the world."

Likewise, Commissioner C. Wallace "Wally" Craig was pleased with the idea. "It's logical, productive and very economical."

The sheriff offered his viewpoint:

"You've got to hustle and think to put this thing together," Smith said. "They (the commissioners) are businessmen, and they're willing to experiment...I saw how we could build this and save $25,000."

The sheriff said he was willing to put together work forces from among his 80 to 100 prisoners. But such enterprise would entail hiring additional deputies to supervise the work gangs and expenses, such as outfitting the working prisoners.

"I told them (commissioners) if they want to work that out, that's fine with me. It's not a free ride...It'll cost them something."

Oil wells near Odessa leaking lethal fumes

ODESSA (AP) — A councilman says the concentrations of lethal gas may lead to "another Love Canal," but the city has still approved plans to build apartments near some oil wells leaking the fumes, experts say.

Oil wells "are what made Odessa grow, and we can't say we're going to stop the growth because oil wells are in the way," said council member Houston Seabolt.

Walter Reid, owner of an Odessa testing laboratory, warned the City Council that high levels of the foul-smelling gas were found near the 1.7-acre site annexed by the city for future apartment development.

Seven members of a family were killed Feb. 2, 1975 near Denver City, 70 miles north of here, when hydrogen sulfide gas from a well 150 feet from their home seeped along the ground and engulfed the house.

According to the American National Standards Institute, death can occur after exposure to doses of 500 to 700 parts per million of hydrogen sulfide in oxygen. The Denver City family was killed, autopsies showed, by concentrations of 50,000 parts per million.

A recent sample of oil taken by Tenneco Oil Co. officials from batteries of tanks near the annexation site contained hydrogen sulfide concentrations of 20,000 parts per million.

And despite strict state standards, concentrations of the gas, which smells like rotten gas, are increasing in Odessa, experts say.

"It's more of an odor nuisance than a health hazard," said Neil J. Carman, environmental quality expert with the Texas Air Control Board's Odessa office.

"There's a very sour gas out there. The fields out there and the wells are going more sour, and it's common knowledge that the level of (hydrogen sulfide) is increasing."

Odessans breathe a concentration every day of 0.02 parts per million, Carman said.

Reid said he is concerned about potential dangers to people moving closer to oil fields.

And councilman Seabolt agrees.

Odessa, Seabolt said, could be "looking at another Love Canal," referring to the area of upstate New York poisoned by industrial chemicals.

Jury deliberations to continue in Smalley trial

DALLAS (AP) — After two days off, a panel of federal court jurors were scheduled to pick up today where they left off — deciding whether a British international arms dealer undermined the U.S. government by illegally shipping American-made weapons.

U.S. District Judge Robert Hill recessed the trial of 42-year-old British subject Ian Smalley for the weekend after jurors had deliberated for 90 minutes Friday.

Smalley, charged with illegally shipping tanks to Iran and anti-tank missles to Iraq, contends he was part of a U.S. plot to bolster's Iran military during the hostage crisis.

In final arguments, prosecutors labeled Smalley a notorious international arms merchant who allegedly offered to sell nuclear weapons-grade plutonium to the highest bidder.

"How in the world are we ever going to stop wars with people like Ian Smalley running loose to sell weapons to anybody who will buy?" asked U.S. Attorney James Rolfe in two hours of closing arguments.

If convicted, Smalley, who claims he's not a "Bluebeard," could be sentenced to as much as 70 years in prison and fined up to $61,000.

Arms sales and Smalley's other business dealings have made him rich enough to live anywhere he wants, and Smalley maintains a number of foreign residences.

He prefers the role of rich Texas cattleman, however, and spends much of his time on a 2,000-acre ranch southwest of here.

"I drill a little oil, raise a little beef — I'm just a good ol' boy. I'm really not a Bluebeard," he said.

Prosecutors say Smalley found a lucrative deal in the Iran-Iraq war.

"He wants to sell tanks to Iran and anti-tank weapons to Iraq," Rolfe said.

Lead defense attorney Richard "Racehorse" Haynes of Houston countered that the government's key witness against Smalley had lied, and bilked the licensed arms dealer of $1.2 million.

Two persons die in head-on accident

MONAHANS — Two persons died and four others were injured in a head-on traffic accident near here late Saturday afternoon.

Pronounced dead at the scene by Ward County Justice of the Peace Sue Mullins were 33-year-old Odis Bryan of Monahans and Darrell Titsworth, 39, also of Monahans.

In satisfactory condition at Ward County Memorial Hospital today was Karen Miller Bryan, 33, of Monahans. She suffered facial lacerations and broken ribs in the crash, which occurred shortly before 6 p.m. Saturday and also injured three other unidentified persons.

According to the Department of Public Safety, the Bryan woman was eastbound on U.S. Highway 80 about a half-mile west of Monahans when the 1972 Ford station wagon she was driving was hit by Titsworth's 1972 Chevrolet.

Chinese welcome Year of the Pig

PEKING (AP) — The Year of the Pig, which promises prosperity, has been welcomed in China by lunar new year celebrations enlivened by the abundance resulting from the country's new consumer-oriented policies.

The last Year of the Pig in 1971 fell during the height of the Cultural Revolution, the decade of vicious political struggles and egalitarian poverty that began in 1966.

This year, huge fireworks displays lasting far into the night attested to the people's new enthusiasm and buying power. A total of 250 types of fireworks were on the market this year, compared with 88 last year.

The Year of the Pig, which began Sunday, is the end of the lunar 12-year cycle and is regarded as a favorable period. It follow the Year of the Dog and precedes the Year of the Mouse.

In the countryside and the suburbs, peasants celebrated the new year with traditional lion dances to ward off evil spirits. Some painted their faces, others danced on stilts.

A new flexibility in China's economy has meant that almost anything goes in the countryside as long as farm production increases and the state gets its share.

Bird lives along cliffs

The murre is a bird that lives in cliff-top colonies along the coasts of the North Atlantic and North Pacific oceans. Its egg ends in a point. If it is pushed, the egg generally rolls in a tight circle and, instead of falling off the rocky cliff, remains on the ledge.

Jerry Ford skillfully plays ex-presidents' course

By PAUL HENDRICKSON
The Los Angeles Times — Washington Post News Service

RANCHO MIRAGE, Calif. — Everything is behind gates and walls. The sun is bone white, and so are the golf carts. There's a Frank Sinatra Drive. There's a Bob Hope Drive. About a year ago they made a Gerald R. Ford Drive.

If you're staying in old Palm Springs, at a '30s oasis called the Ingleside Inn (Lily Pons had a villa there for a dozen years), they fetch you from the airport in a Rolls. Ingleside has a fleet of Rollses.

Out on Palm Canyon Drive, on the way to a former president's house, you go past the Gene Autry Hotel, and, believe it or not, Gene himself is propped at the pool deck. He wears a bola tie and brown boots and he wobbles when he walks. Heck, yeah, he'll give you an autograph. "From your old pal, Gene Autry," he scribbles in a hand gone tremulous.

Somewhere in their hearts they are just small-town boys come home. Gerald Rudolph Ford, a small-town boy from Michigan who made impossibly good, gimps across his study to pick up a telephone. "HELLO," he says in that flat, guileless, Middlewesterner's voice that might just as easily belong to a shellac salesman at the Grand Rapids Wood Finishing Co.

BUT THIS IS no irate contractor calling; this is Richard Nixon on the phone from back East where it is cold as igloos and nearly 1 p.m. Out here it is 9:45 a.m. They haven't raked the pools yet.

The 38th president covers the mouthpiece. "Uh, would you mind stepping out for a moment? I'm going to talk to President Nixon. I put a call in to him earlier this morning. His birthday was yesterday, you know. He turned 70. I'll be 70 myself on July 14. I'll be glad to give you a report of our talk presently."

In the next room, a suddenly alert receptionist can be heard to say: "Mr. President, I have the president on the line now, and I'll put him through." She pushes another button and says: "Mr. President, I have the president on the line, and I'm going to put you right through."

Fifteen minutes later the chief executive who never let ambition devour him (or even get him into a half nelson), who tried to keep his dreams pure as silver (but didn't quite, of course, because he was human), is seated again in a wing chair in his memento-strewn office. Henry Kissinger is staring down benevolently from a frame on the wall. The Kodachrome day is washing in. The most contented Republican in America, retired but not idle, has his pipe and coffee beside him. He rubs the knee of his window-plaid golf slack and says this:

"Oh, Dick was in great spirits. We talked a little about reaching 70 — he told me he'd commiserate when I got there. I don't get to see him much anymore. I saw him when we went to Egypt for Mr. Sadat's funeral. I guess you could say we have a 'proper' relationship now. I think Dick realizes — I think we both realize — that anything more would do neither of us any good. But he is a friend of mine, and I don't abandon my friends."

THERE IS THE SLIGHTEST halt in his voice; as a child Gerald Ford had bouts with stuttering. "You know, that business of the pardoning always comes up when I go out to speak on campuses. Usually you get the question from someone who is still bitter about it. You can sense it immediately by the way the questioner begins. And invariably a funny thing happens: The audience ends up applauding me. You see, I think what happened is that the American people understood it after the fact. But I don't worry about it — and it's always gratifying to get that applause."

Who in his wildest Grand Rapids hair could have guessed it was going to end up this good? The journey of Jerry Ford, from the cold dunes of Lake Michigan to the cauterizing sun of Palm Springs (with a presidency in between), seems more fantastical, somehow, than the journeys of some other small-town American boys who also made good this century: Harry Truman, Dwight Eisenhower, Lyndon Johnson, Jimmy Carter.

THIS IS THE KID who used to run concessions at Alex Demar's amusement park, who worked lunches at Bill Skougis' restaurant across from South High, whose big-boned, loving mama had but three simple rules: Tell the truth, work hard, come to dinner on time.

And now, with a rich man's pleasures and a rich man's havens, with all the fame of his former office but none of its griefs, Jerry Ford plays golf with Jack Nicklaus; gives speeches for fabulous sums; teaches and travels nearly at his will ("I've been to 98 colleges and universities, taught over 500 classes,"); has a son who acts in a TV soap opera ("Oh, yes, I'm going to tune him in right over there after while"); hosts symposiums with world leaders and chief executive officers; sits on eight corporate boards (including 20th Century-Fox, which reportedly pays him $50,000 a year for the privilege); and is otherwise estimated to earn a king's ransom "retirement" salary of $1 million a year.

And when it gets too hot, he goes to Vail.

"We go June 1 to Colorado," he is saying in those reassuring, middle-border cadences. "It gets to 115 here in the summer, and if you play golf at all, you play at night or at six or seven in the morning. We grew up on the shores of Lake Michigan, and so we love water. After we lost the election in 1976, we thought seriously about going back to Michigan. But Betty had that bad arthritis, you know. So we looked at Florida, we looked at Arizona, we looked out here. The dampness in Florida turned us off. Then we found we had more good friends in this area than elsewhere. It was dry and warm. It was good for her health, and it was good for my golf game."

WHAT YOU SENSE most in the first few minutes in the presence of Gerald Ford, history's "instant president," is something other than physical appearance or lush surroundings: Here is someone not brooding in his soul over imagined slings and outrageous fates and long-ago bruises. Or even recent bruises, for that matter. In the spring of 1981, a recently deposed Jimmy Carter was reported in Newsweek to have suggested Jerry Ford was using the ex-presidency to get rich. Ford was hot about that for awhile (though he didn't exactly deny it), although the two seem fast friends now. Today he will have only warm words and a seeming perspective about the man who beat him in a close election.

"Sure, losing that election in 1976 truly hurt Betty and me. We felt we were doing as good a job as possible under very difficult circumstances. But we weren't going to sit and cry about it. I think President Carter won that election because of an exploitation of a mood in the country. Oh, I don't mean 'exploitation' in the bad sense. What I mean was that the country had been healed and people were restless and looking for something totally new. And Jimmy Carter came along. But that's okay. We lost in a good fight."

RANCHO MIRAGE is part of the new Palm Springs. To get to Gerald Ford's place, you take a left on Country Club and then a right on Sand Dune Road. Sand Dune is more a lane than a road, and at the end of it are a guard house and an electronic gate. The Secret Service — one of them is in Earth Shoes and putter pants — buzzes you through. The gate retracts. "Park over there," a mustached man with a radio in his ear says politely. People wander about — caretakers, clerical staff, somebody with dry cleaning over his shoulder. The immediate air is of relaxed scrutiny, low-key vigilance. None would dare speak loudly.

The low-slung villa where Ford has his office and permanent staff of seven used to belong to Ginger Rogers. Ford bought into this golfscape (you could eat out of the sandtraps) in 1977 from his friend and now eighbor, Leonard Firestone. Across Country Club Road, in another closed-off pleasure dome called The Springs, is Spiro Agnew's place. At least that's what people say.

Lee Simmons, who is Ford's personal traveling aide, says he gets glimpses of Agnew or his wife at the Post Office now and then. Simmons, who has a Jackie Gleason Inverrary golf hat on this morning, used to be chief steward on Air Force One. He worked in the White House for 22 years, but gave it up to come to the sun of California to work for Jerry Ford. "It's only snowed once since we've been here," Simmons says. And heck, that wasn't even here. That was over in Palm Springs.

Ford's home is right over there, across a fairway. In the green middle distance is a pole with a limp flag hanging on it. The pole is standing in a little napkin of clipped turf. It's about an eight iron shot from here, and Jerry Ford, the bogey man, could probably play the hole from his living room.

HE SPEAKS WARMLY of his old golfing pal, Tip O'Neill. "He's been out here to play. We don't agree on much politically, but we do like to play together. No, we really don't talk politics on the course. We keep our mind on the game." He says nice things about Howard Baker and some others from the old days and then adds: "I don't know those younger fellows in Washington." It sounds the tiniest bit wistful. His pipe is in its tray. Little curls of smoke are making mares' tails toward the ceiling.

What exactly is an ex-president for, anyway? Membership in the world's most exclusive club is up at the moment — to three. In Britain former heads of state usually get shunted off to some dignified official assignment or other, but Americans don't quite seem to know what to do with their former chief executives. The last time in recent memory an ex-president held an official government job was when Harry Truman asked Herbert Hoover to chair a commission on government reorganization.

In some ways being an ex-president seems a splendid curse.

In the matter of being an ex-president, Ford says: "I'm not looking for a job, I don't want to be appointed to anything, I'm not running for anything." It was not always thus, of course. Ford spent considerable time between 1976 and 1980 denying interest in a presidential candidacy, only to try to hurl his hat back into the ring in the spring of 1980, and then again at the convention in July. Some felt the decent and easy-going Jerry Ford had dissembled.

"I SAY I DON'T want a job, but I do want input," he says. "I strongly feel that former presidents should be called on, and called on regularly. I don't think it should be structured. I don't think there should be a 'council.' Now in the case of President Carter, he called in four specific areas. And President Reagan has always been receptive."

Discovery of new childhood leukemia raises survival rates

By HARRY NELSON
The Los Angeles Times — Washington Post News Service

An observation by a sharp-eyed University of Southern California pathologist has led to a significant improvement in the treatment of a group of childhood leukemia patients who until recently rarely survived beyond one year.

The pathologist, Dr. Robert J. Lukes, discovered that this group of patients, who comprise about 25 percent of the youngsters with acute lymphocytic leukemia, are victims of a new disease that has been hidden amidst cases of the more common form of leukemia.

By recognizing that they are victims of a different kind of leukemia — which requires a different treatment — a USC team headed by Dr. Alexandra M. Levine has reported that 70 percent of these patients are now surviving nearly five years.

Levine was one of a dozen USC cancer experts who gave reports to reporters prior to the dedication Thursday of the Kenneth Norris Jr. Cancer Hospital and Research Institute on the medical school campus.

The new $37 million structure houses basic and applied science laboratories as well as a 60-bed hospital for the treatment of cancer patients who may benefit from a number of research programs underway for cancers that affect the genito-urinary system, prostate, blood, brain, ovaries and uterus.

According to Dr. Denman Hammond, a USC scientist who heads the Childrens Cancer Study Group, a national organization of cancer scientists who treat children, Lukes' observation that what was thought to be a single disease is really several diseases will have spin-offs for other kinds of cancer as well.

"I feel sure that researchers will soon be able to differentiate other kinds of cancers into subgroups," he said. He and other scientists believe that the failure so far to be able to make the same kind of differentiation accounts for a major share of treatment failures.

"We once thought that all acute lymphocytic leukemia was the same but it is not," Hammond said. "Lukes now says that all tumors are mixes."

Another possible reason for treatment failure in some cases was raised by Levine who is looking into the question of patient compliance with orders that they take drugs they know are likely to make them sick.

"We tell patients that anticancer drugs may cause nausea, vomiting, hair loss and other things but that we can't guarantee they will work. It's possible that patients don't take their chemotherapy," she said.

Levine said that the only study in the medical literature on patient compliance among acute lymphocytic leukemia indicated that 33 percent of parents of young patients did not give a treatment drug, prednisone, to their child. In the older adolescent group, who presumably were trusted to take the pill on their own, 59 percent apparently did not do so.

Whether patients take their medicine is important not only to them as individuals, Levine said, but — if they are on experimental protocol treatment programs — also to all other persons with their disease.

The reason, she explained, is because the evaluation that scientists make of such treatment programs will not be accurate and may cause promising treatments to be abandoned.

The USC team has received a three-year grant from the National Cancer Institute to study whether leukemia patients are taking their drugs and whether it is possible to improve compliance. They intend to do this by means of patient education and behavior modification program. Blood samples will be taken periodically for analysis to see whether patients are taking their drugs.

Thermal cloth factory provides workers stable employment

By DICK SARGE

TOWER CITY, Pa. (AP) — John Morgan may not be listed among the greatest innovators of American industry, but an invention the Schuylkill County man developed in 1958 continues to provide some of the most stable employment in Pennsylvania.

During these tough economic times, Marconi's wireless and Cyrus McCormick's reaper can't hold a candle to Morgan's development of a circular fabric to produce lightweight thermal underwear.

"There hasn't been a layoff in all the 26 years I've been here," said Alma Kasputis, an office secretary at the Bestok plant here, and a long-time employee of J.E. Morgan Knitting Mills Inc.

According to her, the 132 employees at the plant cut, sew and package up to 8,000 dozen of men's and boys' thermal shirts a week, while another 128 workers at a plant in Williamstown, Dauphin County, turn out a like quantity of boys' thermal pants and ladies' tops and bottoms in a five-day, 40-hour workweek.

The knitted material is received in 150-foot bundles from the parent facility in Hometown, Schuylkill County, by truck, which takes back a fully loaded trailer of finished goods.

The call to production, or to "skivvies" so to speak, is all because of the demand for Morgan's two-piece underwear — which offers effective insulation without the bulk, weight and general discomfort of the old-style, button-up wool, flannel or heavy cotton long johns and union suits.

The firm enjoys more than half the thermal underwear market in the United States, said Don Klinger, a Tower City plant manager.

DEAR ABBY

Woman of stature finds man who stacks up

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: A wedding is taking place because of you. Four years ago I wrote the following letter to you:

"Dear Abby: For years I have suffered from an inferiority complex because of my height. It has ruined my whole life. I am a woman, 5 feet 9. I love to dance, but in heels I'm taller than the average man, and I feel like a fool when a man looks up at me.

"I am uncomfortable unless I wear flats. I won't even walk to the coffee machine at work because I feel so conspicuous. I became so desperate I even asked my doctor if he knew of some kind of operation to shorten the bones in my legs, but he said no one has ever attempted such an operation. I told him I would be more than willing to be the first.

"Abby, you can't imagine what a miserable feeling it is to walk into a room and pray to God that there is someone there taller than you are. Would you believe that I have even considered taking my life? I'm sure there are other girls who feel the same way.

"Any advice you can give me will be appreciated. Don't tell me to see a psychiatrist because that is where my problem has already landed me. Signed ... Tall in Canada"

You replied:

"Dear Tall: Since you've already wisely consulted a psychiatrist, you must surely know that it's your ATTITUDE — not your ALTITUDE — that needs changing.

"You are much too self-centered in assuming all eyes are constantly focused on you. Not true!

"Instead of those negative feelings you have about your height, stand tall, throw your shoulders back, chin up, and come on proud, confident and alive! If you have two good arms, legs, eyes, a voice and a mind, thank God in your prayers!

"Get rid of those flats (they make you shuffle); wear heels. It will improve your figure. Practice walking with grace and dignity. You get no sympathy from here, dear. Now get going, and remember those prayers of gratitude."

Well, Abby, I took your advice. I not only started to pray, I also started to judge men by what they were, not how tall they stood. It took me three years to get rid of the feeling that unless the man I was with was taller than I, we would look foolish together.

A year ago I met a man who stands 5 feet 5, but in my eyes he's 6 feet 5! He told me that he had grown up feeling self-conscious about being "short," but he overcame it by rising above his peers scholastically.

We're being married in June, and you're invited! — COULDN'T BE HAPPIER

PIER

DEAR ABBY: When you receive an invitation to a wedding or anniversary reception and it requests "no gifts," what should you do?

Do you take a gift, or give those being honored money instead? Or do you go empty-handed? That just doesn't seem right to me. — CONFUSED

DEAR CONFUSED: Respect their wishes and go empty-handed. Then, make a contribution to a charity in which they are particularly interested — in honor of the occasion.

CONFIDENTIAL TO YOU: St. Valentine's Day is here again, and it's time to remind you to be a sweetheart. Call a friend you've been meaning to write to for months and say, "I'm thinking about you." Visit a shut-in, compliment your teen-ager, clean your closets and make Goodwill happy, donate some blood, tell your parents you appreciate them, send a donation to your favorite charity, forgive an enemy, spay your dog, neuter your cat, take a lonely person to lunch, fix up a date for someone who doesn't have many, smile and thank God you're able to, and don't wait until next St. Valentine's Day to be a sweetheart. Love, ABBY

(If you hate to write letters because you don't know what to say, send for Abby's complete booklet on letter-writing. Send $2 and a long, stamped (37 cents), self-addressed envelope to Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

Sophie (Meryl Streep) tenderly holds Nathan (Kevin Kline) in a scene from "Sophie's Choice."

Streep 'inspired' as Styron's Sophie

A Review

The movie "Sophie's Choice," based on William Styron's best-selling novel of that name, was written and directed by Alan J. Pakula ("The Sterile Cuckoo," "Klute," "All The President's Men."). In it Pakula makes some choices of his own — some good and some not.

Among his good ones is casting Meryl Streep as Sophie. He was, understandably, looking for a European actress for the part of the enigmatic Sophie Zawistowska, a Polish Catholic who was imprisoned in Auschwitz and somehow survived — to her shame and humiliation.

But Meryl Streep becomes Sophie, not just because she studied Polish and German intensively for several months before the filming of "Sophie's Choice," and provides the movie with that credibility, but because she has internalized the fear and pathos of that woman and that time.

That she has been criticized in the past for being a "technical" actress, and therefore not somehow as deserving of praise, may be put behind her now with this performance. For this time she is inspired as well as technically on track.

Another choice that writer-director Pakula made was not so on target. He chose to have the movie's protagonist, the autobiographical Styron character, narrate parts of the movie.

With a measured and distinctly regional voice that was the underpinning of the enormously successful TV series, "The Waltons," we are similarly introduced to "Sophie's Choice." But this time the voice of retrospect belongs to Stingo, a transplanted southerner (portrayed by Texas-born and -reared Peter MacNicol).

It is his story of living, loving and growing as a writer in Brooklyn that serves as a framework for Sophie's tale — shot in close-up by the loving yet revealing hand of photographer Nestor Almendros with impressionist images.

But this narration is intrusive, could have been eliminated without affecting the plot and forced me to muse about a possible subtitle — "John Boy goes to Brooklyn."

In fact, at times Sophie's return to the days in Auschwitz interrupted the flow of the movie. Yes, we want to know what really happened to her there, but in a style reminiscent of John Fowles' novels, we get several endings. Which version is the true one and whether we ever get the real story is something perhaps only William Styron knows.

What Pakula chose so rightly was to keep the physical elements of the film to a minimum. There is the "Pink Palace" boardinghouse where the three live — so named because it was painted with army surplus pink paint — Coney Island, scenes from Sophie's past and the recurring image of a bridge.

But in this tidy effort to eliminate all but the essentials, only Sophie is left with enough character development. Nathan and Stingo are incidental. Even so, Kevin Kline as Nathan is marvelous, suggesting his true nature long before it is revealed.

"Sophie's Choice," rated R, is a movie shot in several styles which blend at times and detract at times. It is an ambitious effort that seems shorter than its more than two-and-a-half hour length, and is a provocative variation on the holocaust theme. One image that is sure to stay with you is Meryl Streep's tortured face as she watches her daughter taken away for extermination. That "choice" she makes, and many others, make an interesting if unsettling movie and Miss Streep's nomination for an Academy award as best actress is assured.

Businessmen learn worth of good joke

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Because luncheon speeches sometimes seem like an invitation to snooze, corporations are turning to professional joke writers to give their speakers a little more punch — and a few more punch lines.

Business leaders have found a good reason to keep their eyes on the laughter curve: Comedy can be cost-effective. In other words, yuks mean bucks.

"In today's world of information overload, there is stiff competition for your message to be heard. Humor gives you an edge," said Malcolm Kushner, one of the three funny people at Golden Gate Writers, a company specializing in one-liners.

The lawyer-turned-gag writer says "the audience is usually so relieved and happy to hear a joke, it doesn't take much to make them laugh."

Kushner says a good joke can blunt hostile barbs from shareholders or pointed questions from reporters — and actually help business.

"Norman Cousins says humor can cure cancer," Kushner observed. "It must be able to improve sales."

Take these examples...please:

A Pacific Telephone speaker advises the audience that there's some bad news and some good news. The bad news is that long distance rates are going up. The good news is that the continents are drifting closer together.

Then, tongue-in-cheek, the speaker lists some of the contributions the Bell System has made to society. It pioneered satellite communication. It invented the transistor. And, of course, it gave Superman a place to change clothes.

Get it? Well, Pacific Telephone not only got it, but sent it to mid-level managers throughout California. Soon, the company hopes, community groups all over the Golden State will be chuckling.

"Some of the stuff is very funny," says Bill Knox, assistant manager for external affairs, explaining why Pacific Telephone hired Kushner's firm. Other companies that use humor to mellow serious remarks include Wells Fargo Bank, Phillips Petroleum and Viacom Cablevision.

"Humor, if used correctly and tastefully, can be a real plus," said Dan Droege, corporate communications manager for Phillips Petroleum Co. of Bartlesville, Okla. He suggests "more than a few funnies up front."

Droege said executives use humor because they want "people to understand that they're human, too, not just corporate robots in pinstripe suits."

Phillips subscribes to Bob Orben's newsletter, "Current Comedy." Orben, who lives in Arlington, Va., is a former comedy writer for Red Skelton, Dick Gregory and others. He also wrote speeches for former President Gerald Ford.

Comedian Lewis ties knot Sunday

KEY BISCAYNE, Fla. (AP) — A happy Jerry Lewis, newly married to a 32-year-old dancer in a private ceremony, joked that his change of status won't be slowing him down.

Lewis and SanDee Pitnick were wed Sunday. It was the second marriage for both.

The comedian, who recently underwent heart surgery, said he and his bride chose Sunday for the ceremony because it was Feb. 13, and 13 is Lewis' lucky number.

The wedding was described as "very small, very private," by Craig Wood, spokesman for Lewis' favorite charity, the Muscular Dystrophy Association. Wood said none of the comedian's famous friends attended the nuptials.

Lewis joked with photographers as the newlyweds left an elevator at the Sonesta Beach Hotel for a private dinner after the service.

When someone in the crowd of people gathered in the lobby yelled, "Are you going to settle down now?" Lewis responded, 'I'll settle down when (Israeli Prime Minister Menachem) Begin runs the Vatican."

The couple would not discuss their honeymoon plans.

"If you guys run out of film, I've got plenty more in my pocket," bantered the 56-year-old entertainer.

The comedian went home from a Las Vegas hospital on New Year's Day after undergoing double bypass heart surgery, and was given a check up last week by his friend, prominent surgeon Dr. Michael DeBakey.

DeBakey gave the comedian permission to resume a normal life, but ordered him to quit smoking and watch his diet, Wood said.

Frank Sinatra, Sammy Davis Jr. and Dean Martin ham it up during Sunday's Valentine Love-In II, a fund-raiser for Palm Springs' Desert Hospital.

Over 900 guests pay $1,000 each to attend

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — Former President Gerald Ford and Angie Dickinson were among 900 notables at a "Valentine Love-In II," organized by Frank Sinatra to benefit this resort city's Desert Hospital.

Guests paid $1,000 each to frolic at the Saturday night party in Palm Springs' Canyon Hotel, sipping champagne and feasting on a five-course Italian dinner.

Sinatra teamed with Sammy Davis Jr. and Dean Martin to regale the crowd with routines from their "Rat Pack" days in Las Vegas.

Celebrating along with Ford were Gregory and Veronique Peck, Glenn and Cynthia Ford; Robert Wagner and actress Jill St. John; Kirk and Anne Douglas; James and Gloria Stewart; Gene and Jackie Autry, and Felicia Lemmon and Jack Valenti.

Sinatra's first "Valentine Love-In" raised $2 million in February 1980 for Desert Springs Hospital's initial expansion. Ticket receipts and donations from this year's gala are earmarked for continuing development.

NEW YORK (AP) — The "uptown Eastern prig" who played the American diplomat Leslie Sloat in the television saga "The Winds of War" says he really wanted the racier Byron Henry role.

"If I had been a name, I would have gotten it," actor David Dukes, 37, said. "I guess I was too uptown Eastern prig for the part."

Jan-Michael Vincent won the role of the impetuous Byron in the week-long ABC miniseries which concluded Sunday.

Dukes, a veteran of the New York stage, TV and movies, admitted in this week's People magazine that the Leslie Sloat part had its perks, including doing many scenes with Ali McGraw, who played Natalie Jastrow.

"I was very attracted to Ali," he said, though he said he repressed all temptation.

CINCINNATI (AP) — Tim Reid is acting in an NBC mid-season replacement series called "Teachers Only" for two reasons: to make a living and because it means "at least another black can be seen on television by a black youngster...in a positive image."

Tim Reid

Network television cuts black actors out of programming, according to Reid, who formerly appeared on the CBS series "WKRP in Cincinnati."

"They have these lines they put out that American people don't want to see blacks on television," said Reid, who played the black disc jockey Venus Flytrap.

In an interview published in Sunday's editions of The Cincinnati Enquirer, Reid cited two recent programs, "Malibu" and "The Winds of War," for their unrealistic treatment of blacks on network TV.

"This is 1983 and in Malibu you aren't going to see any blacks?" Reid said. "And a lot of blacks served in the Army in World War II. Why is it the only black I've seen so far (in the first three installments of "The Winds of War") is a guy holding a silver tray and serving champagne?"

"If some future generation were to judge history by what they could now see on American television, they would come to the conclusion there were very few blacks involved in anything important," he said.

Julia Cioth, foreground, guides the core of a whip through a braiding machine at the Westfield Whip Co. A 100-year-old factory houses one of the last whip manufacturers in the nation.

Westfield whips

Text and Photos by The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post New Service

The tidy, little manufacturing city of Westfield in southern Massachusetts used to be known as the "Whip Capital of the World."

Even today, this city in the midst of rolling farm land clings to its old title. Among the businesses in town are "Whip City Auto," "Whip City Driving School," "Whip City Tool and Die Corp.," "Whip City Tire Co." and "Ye Olde Whip Cafe."

Until the early 20th century, 37 manufacturers, many of them located along the rust-colored Westfield River, produced several million buggy whips a year. Until, that is, Henry Ford came along and delivered a solar plexus blow to the whole industry.

Today, in this city of about 30,000 about 15 miles west of Springfield, just one of those factories is still around, having more than survived the proliferation of the automobile.

The Westfield Whip Co., owned by former Westfield Mayor Harold J. Martin, a latecomer to the trade, still turns out several hundred thousand whips a year, the bulk of them for the harness racing industry.

"There is still a need for whips. A lot of people don't know that, particularly those who haven't seen a horse in a while," said Martin, a crusty, old former newspaperman who assumes few folks would know a "Zebu Azo" from an "Anti-Rattler."

Martin founded Westfield Whip in 1945, while unemployed. Today, about a dozen workers turn out whips in a 100-year-old brick factory on the banks of the Westfield River.

"It was supposed to have been a stopgap, but that was 37 years ago and I'm still here," Martin said. "When I first came to Westfield, I didn't even know they made whips here."

By 1948, Martin's few remaining competitors had closed their doors forever. But Martin says that his company is still doing well. So well, in fact, that he cannot keep up with the demand.

Martin said that there are other whip manufacturers in the country, but claims "only we still do it the Westfield way, the quality way. The others make a cheaper, simpler whip."

In the mid-1800s, Westfield produced up to 95 percent of all the whips in America. They were "made by a hundred processes and of materials from the ends of the earth and the depths of the sea," bragged the Yankee peddlers who carried the city's wares across the country.

Back then, the 200 types of whips made might have included such materials as whale bone, catgut, bull hide, fossil gum, linseed oil, elephant tusk, flax rattan and a number of precious stones and jewels. Catalogs from such firms as the defunct Cargill, Cook and Co. advertised wares in the late 1800s from 25 cents to $25.

For a few customers, the sky was the limit, so Westfield also produced custom-made whips, such as the silver-encrusted one made for Southern politician and orator Henry Clay in the mid-19th century.

One whip in the catalog was described as a "genuine English Holly, with natural knots, a dog knee stalk, fine rabbit bitten, 3 1/4 inch, with a sterling silver ferrule."

Today, besides making whips for the harness racing industry, Martin produces a wide variety of driving and riding whips, and what is called a lunge whip, the kind used by circus animal trainers. He said that his whips, other than those that are custom-made, range in price from $13 to $18.

Although there are different processes for making different kinds of whips, they all start off with a core of some flexible material, such as rawhide or fiberglass. In the mid-1800s, the core of some whips was made from whalebone. In some processes, strips of rattan are glued around the core, machine finished, then wound with thread.

Just when the whip industry began in Westfield is open to question. Some historians say that it began with Westfield farmer Joseph Jokes in the early 1800s. It seems that Jokes was tired of his neighbors breaking off branches from hickory trees on his farm to coax their horses, so he began making crude whips of wood and pieces of horsehide and selling them.

But the title of "Father of the Whip Industry" has been bestowed upon Hiram Hull of Windsor, Conn., who was brought to Westfield in the beginning of the 19th century to improve the industry. Before Hull introduced "modern" machinery to whipmaking, Westfield women used to braid the whips at home by hand.

Those famous Westfield whips were even touted as the product that made America move faster, or at least goaded the horses that pulled the nation's wagons of goods and materials.

"A real snapping, curling licking was never possible with the maximum of sting and maximum of wound until Westfield produced whips," it was reported in one magazine of the time.

The one problem Westfield's last whip maker has had over the years has been a shortage of quality rawhide, which has forced the company to turn to fiberglass during the last decade.

"I don't know why the quality of the hides has been so bad. Some people say it has to do with an additive (to feed) that is used in the stockyards. It fattens the beef, but fattens the hide as well," he said.

He said, however, that he recently found a source of quality rawhide somewhere in the West but that he would not divulge where for competitive reasons.

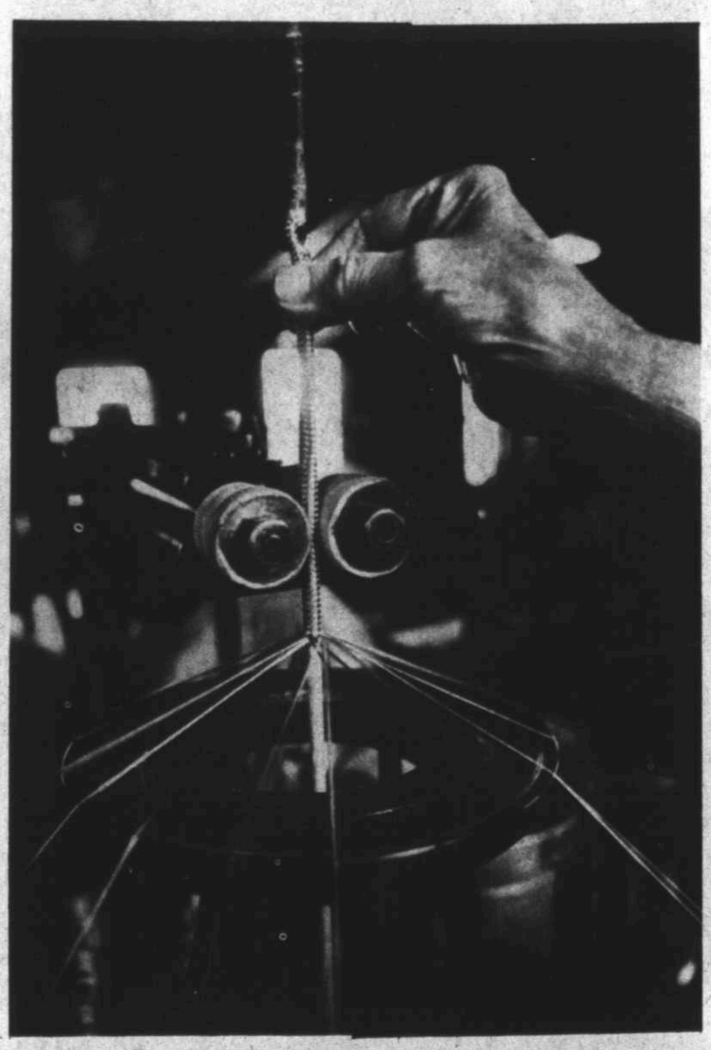
Although the whip industry dominated life in Westfield between the Civil War and World War I, it was obvious by the time the doughboys began returning home that the industry was in trouble. As automobiles became cheaper and more available, the need for buggy whips declined.

Some whip companies turned to making golf clubs. Others began manufacturing bicycles. In fact, the Columbia Bicycle Co. moved from Hartford to Westfield after the war to take advantage of the number of abandoned factories.

The decline of the buggy whip industry has been used by economics teachers as an example of how an industry can be all but wiped out by technological advancement. When more and more automobiles began rolling off Ford's assembly lines, there was a popular saying that "Nothing, including Confederate money, is quite as worthless as stock in a buggy whip factory."

One would be hard pressed, however, to convince the forward-looking Martin of that.

"By 1983, we'll be shipping rawhide whips to harness racers in Europe, as well as Australia and New Zealand," he said. "The harness industry has a real need for quality whips."



This machine braids whips, a job that Westfield housewives used to do by hand at home in the early 19th century.

Cora Mesick, a 10-year veteran at the whip company, carefully examines a buggy whip to check its quality — an important ingredient in making whips the "Westfield way."

Introducing...
Mission Square Plaza
Retail and Office Condominiums

Owning is better than renting.

If you're presently renting retail or office space, you already know some of the disadvantages-frequent cost-of-living rent increases, leases that give the landlord all the advantages, costly sales overrides on your retail sales. In short, you're not in control.

From a pure economic standpoint, ownership beats renting. Consider these advantages:

* You mortgage payments are fixed and not subject to escalation or overrides to a landlord.
* You receive tax deductions for interest and tax payments.
* You get a tax deduction for depreciation over the next 15 years.
* You have control over your space, and no one can cancel your lease.
* You can buy enough space to meet your future growth plans and lease the expansion area until it's needed.
* All maintenance and upkeep is furnished through the Owner's Association.
* Your real estate investment gains value.

In addition to all this, Mission Square is strategically located in one of the city's fastest growing areas; North Big Spring and Loop 250, just northeast of ClayDesta Plaza.

Mission Square is an ideal location for professionals, service businesses, and a variety of retails stores. Contact our office now, for a full color brochure and further details.
