Gen. Marshall Warns America On 'Terrors' Of Atomic Age

Biennial Report Says Intensive Scientific Research And Trained Citizen-Army Needed Against Menace

By ELTON C. FAY
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, Oct. 9—Gen. George C. Marshall tonight lifted the lid on an arsenal of "terrifying" new weapons and warned an America entering the atomic age that it must "prepare or perish."

To cope with the menace of scientific mass destruction and to enforce our will for peace with strength," the Army chief of staff urged:

1—Intense scientific research and development.

2—A permanent peacetime citizen-army, trained and ready to take up arms—but "not a large standing Army subject to the behest of a group of schemers."

"Unbroken" Training

General Marshall proposed a year's "unbroken" training—as opposed to brief periods spread over several years—for "all men who might someday have to fight for their nation."

In a biennial report to Secretary of War Patterson, Marshall said that the atomic bomb is not alone among the scientific advances "that make the possibilities of the future so terrifying."

Because "it is so important that the people of the United States realize the possibilities of the future," Marshall said, he asked Gen. H. H. Arnold, Army Air forces chief, to estimate the capabilities of modern weapons. And here are some of the hitherto highly secret developments Arnold reported:

"We can direct rockets to targets by electronic devices and new instruments which guide them accurately to sources of heat, light, and magnetism. Drawn by their own fuses such rockets will streak unerringly to the heart of big factories, attracted by the heat of the furnaces. They are so sensitive that in the space of a large room they aim themselves toward a man who enters, in reaction to the heat of his body."

Jet-Propelled Bombers

Within the next few years there will be produced jet-propelled bombers with speeds of 500 to 600 miles per hour, flying to targets 1,500 miles distant at altitudes above 40,000 feet. Development of even greater bombers, to operate in the stratosphere at supersonic speeds and carrying bomb loads of more than 100,000 pounds already is certain.

"These aircraft will have sufficient range to attack any spot on the earth and return to a friendly base," Arnold reported.

"At this very moment we are making a single bomb weighing 45,000 pounds to keep pace with the bomber, already under construction, which will carry such a load. Air ordnance engineers have blue-printed a bomb weighing 100,000 pounds."

Improvement of our jet fighters "may well produce within the next five years an aircraft cap-

Solons Seek Law To Guard Atom Secrets

WASHINGTON, Oct. 9 (AP) — The backlash of Hiroshima's death bomb rolled through Congress today with these mixed results:

1. The House Military committee heard a demand for legislation that would "prevent the President from going to a conference in a few months and trading off this (atomic bomb) secret."

2. A Senate committee was advised by Dr. Harlow Shapley, Harvard university actronomer, that "it is selfish, and perhaps dangerous," to conceal a secret that "can be of value to the whole world."

Confident of Advances

3. C. F. Kettering, noted inventor told the same Senate committee he was confident the United States can keep up with the march of science.

Top [illegible] the House committee [illegible] of War Patterson and Maj. Gen. Leslie R. Groves, commander of the huge Manhattan district organization that produced the Hiroshima holocaust.

Several committee members declared bluntly that they wanted a law—not President Truman's word alone—that the atom bomb will be kept secret from the world.

This sentiment was voiced at a hearing on a bill creating an atomic energy commission with greater power than any other commission in this nation's history.

Wants More Safeguard

Rep. Thomason (D-Tex) noted that the bill gives final say to the President on disclosure of atomic secrets, not to Congress, and he declared:

"I don't want this secret leaking out to any other country. Let's write it in, so this secret will be retained."

Secretary Patterson told the committee that the proposed commission, representing all phases of the country's life, is necessary because no one individual should have such responsibility. Even the winning of the war seems minor, he said, compared to the importance of full control over the power of the atom.

General Groves, with his knowledge of the bomb, bore the brunt

GEN. GEORGE C. MARSHALL

Marshall Lauds Russia, Britain

WASHINGTON, Oct. 9. (AP)—Gen. George C. Marshall said tonight only the heroic stand of Russia and Britain saved the United States from having to fight a war on its own soil.

"Our close approach to that terrifying situation," the Army chief of staff said in his war report, "should have a sobering influence on Americans for generations to come."

Marshall paid high tribute to Russia and Britain for continuing to fight back against the enemy "in the black days" when Germany and Japan conquered great sections of both Europe and Asia and threatened to take both completely.

Can Take Little Credit

"In good conscience," he said, "this nation can take little credit for its part in staving off disaster in those critical days.

"It is certain that the refusal of the British and Russian peoples to accept what appeared to be inevitable defeat was the great factor in the salvage of our civilization."

Marshall disclosed that at the time of the German surrender every American combat division, without exception, was overseas arrayed either against Germany or Japan. All but two saw action.

"The formed military forces of the nation were completely committed overseas to bring about our victory in Europe and keep sufficient pressure on Japan so that she could not dig in and stave off final defeat," said the chief of staff.

Significance Cited

"The significance of these facts should be carefuly considered. Even with two-thirds of the German Army engaged by Russia, it took every man the nation saw fit to mobilize to do our part of the job in Europe and, at the same time, to keep the Japanese enemy under control in the Pacific.

"What would have been the result had the Red Army been defeated and the British islands invaded, we can only guess. The possibility is rather terrifying."

Enormous Cost In Lives Cited

WASHINGTON, Oct. 9. (AP)—American Army deaths in battle in World War II are four times those of World War I.

In fact, more Americans died than in five earlier wars combined. These were the Revolution, War of 1812, Mexican war, Civil war (including both Union and Confederate deaths), and Spanish-American.

In these five wars 192,581 Americans lost their lives, the World War I figure was 58,510; the World War II figure is 205,000 plus.

Enormous Cost Cited

Gen. George C. Marshall made the comparison tonight in his chief of staff's report "so that there can be no misunderstanding of the enormous cost of this conflict, for which we were so completely unprepared."

He spoke of lives lost and physical miseries involved, rather than money.

"There is no pay scale high enough to buy the services of a single soldier during even a few minutes of the agony of combat," he said.

Yet, the great toll of American lives is far less than the toll of the enemy. About eight Germans, Italians and Japanese died for every American killed in battle, Marshall said, adding there were 1,592,600 enemy battle dead.

(The general's report made no attempt to estimate the number of killed for the other Allies. Russia's announcements have been lumped into a general category of killed, wounded and missing, making it difficult to arrive at any total of killed for the Allied powers.)

His figures dealt with the Army alone. Combined Army and Navy deaths are about 260,000, And combined American casualities, including dead, wounded, missing and prisoners, exceed 1,070,000.

While battlefield deaths soared, deaths in the Army from other causes dropped to a new low due, Marshall said, to stellar work of the Army Medical corps and new medicines and preventatives.

Civil Experts Taking Armed Forces Reins

By ERNEST B. VACCARO
Associated Press Staff Writer

TIPTONVILLE, Tenn., Oct. 9—President Truman was understood tonight to have given his approval to an overhauling of the armed forces to put the greater emphasis on technical skills of reserve experts from civilian life.

The reshuffling of responsibilities is already underway in the Navy where 13 reservists recently were elevated to the rank of rear admiral and 35 to that of commodore.

War Leaders Retiring

Meanwhile, Gen. Brehon Somervell, chief of the Army Service forces, is expected to leave his post soon to take an important job in private industry. Gen. George C. Marshall, War department chief of staff, is expected to retire before Christmas.

Other expected changes include Gen. Henry (Hap) Arnold, chief of the Army Air forces, who wants to retire because of his health, and Fleet Admiral Ernest J. King, chief of naval operations, who already has indicated his desire for retirement.

There was no comment from President Truman's party here at Reelfoot lake where he is resting before speaking tomorrow at the dedication of the Tennessee Valley authority's Kentucky dam at Gilbertsville, Ky.

Specialists Said Needed

It has been known for some time that high-ranking advisors believe that academy men have been used in many instances where specialists were preferable.

Already, it was learned, key posts in the Navy yards are being shifted to reservists with what the President likes to call technical know-how. Other key bureaus of the Navy are being reorganized with experts from civilian life who were called into the service during the war.

Somervell, the Army officer who supervised most of the gigantic Army construction program during the war, has been offered a financially attractive job in industry. He has not yet submitted his request to leave to the President but such a move is known to be imminent.

Undersecretary's Post

Meanwhile, the President has not indicated his choice for the post of undersecretary of war, made vacant by the promotion of Robert P. Patterson to succeed the retired Henry L. Stimson.

President Truman today ate country cooking and puzzled over the excitement created by his announcement that this country will not share the secret of the atomic bomb with other nations.

The President thought he had made it perfectly clear in his recent message to Congress that the know-how behind the bomb's perfection would not be disclosed. In the message he proposed international agreements to outlaw the weapon's use.

Snyder Leaves Suddenly

The sudden departure for Washington this morning of John W. Snyder, reconversion director, created another wave of excitement.

Press Secretary Charles G. Ross said he did not know the nature of the business, or whether it concerned the labor crisis, but only that Snyder had received "two or three calls" early in the day.

The President will leave early tomorrow for Gilbertsville, Ky., for a speech dedicating the big Kentucky dam of the Tennessee Valley authority. He will return to the White House early tomorrow evening in time to receive President Rios of Chile on a state visit Thursday.

GI Student Fee May Be Raised

WASHINGTON, Oct. 9 (AP) — The amount the government will pay toward the cost of educating veterans in Texas state colleges remained unsettled tonight, but college officials from the state held out hope that the figure would be their requested $100 per semester.

Dean F. C. Bolton, executive vice president of Texas Agricultural and Mechanical college, said after conferences at the Veterans administration "a satisfactory agreement" seems likely but the decision will not be forthcoming for two weeks.

Educators Optimistic

"We all feel it is going to be settled in a satisfactory way," Bolton said. "They appear anxious at the administration to find a solution to the problem. I'm encouraged to think they will agree to our proposal of $100 per semester."

With him were Dr. Harmon Lowman, president Stephen F. Austin State Teachers college at Huntsville; C. D. Simmons, comptroller of University of Texas, and W. M. Whyburn, president of Texas Tech, at Lubbock.

Dr. Lowman also expressed confidence that the Veterans administration would eventually agree to the Texas request.

"The difficulty has arisen in the Official Says Nylons To Be Available Soon

NEW YORK, Oct. 9 (AP)—Reasonable quantities of nylon hosiery should begin to appear in stores about two weeks from now, Earl Constantine, president of the National Association of Hosiery manufacturers, said today.

From that point on supplies should increase gradually, he told the fall conference of the National Retail Dry Goods association merchandising division.

Constantine warned that stores probably would have to allot nylons for some time to come.

Japs Seeking Full Reform

(By The Associated Press)

TOKYO, Wednesday, Oct. 10.—Movement developed within Japan today to completely reform the defeated nation's parliamentary body—so long amenable to every whim of the war machine—and to fight Communism as an avowed foe of the emperor system.

Domei reported a group of members of the Diet, forming themselves into a "commission for investigation into the reconstruction of Japan," sought:

Dissolution of Parliament to permit the reformation of a legislative body keyed to reconstruction.

A new political party "comprising men of ability in all branches of national life."

To Fight Communism

Leaders of a national federation of toilers resolved at another meeting to "wage a determined fight against Communism which aims at extermination of our unique national policy under the emperor."

New stringent government orders were issued against flourishing black market transactions between Japanese and American soldiers. Japanese police were ordered to arrest any Japanese buying or trading goods on the streets.

The Japanese education ministry announced two expulsions of high school principals as it carried out a general program to purge schools of militaristic tendencies.

Punishment Pledged

Premier Kijuri Shidehara told the world yesterday that punishment would be dealt Japanese officials who trampled the rights of people, but refused to discuss whether Japan was guilty of starting the Pacific war.

While the chief of the new Nippon government was making public his views in a nationwide broadcast, American authorities uncovered and placed under Allied guard Japan's rich reserves of gold, silver and platinum valued at more than $250,000,000.

Possible Loot Sought

Other American headquarters officials began the task of going through Japanese records to discover what part of the huge sum might be loot taken from conquered countries.

An immediate investigation show that the Japanese Army and Navy had not accounted for a single penny of their expenditures since 1937.

American experts, studying records of the hoard, promised new developments soon. They declined to say what these might be, but there was believed to be some connection with the overdue financial report which General MacArthur ordered the Japanese government to make within two weeks of Sept. 22, including the emperor's personal fortune.

Many persons here express belief that the emperor's wealth may be assessed at no more than 400,-

Navy Lowers Points To Release Doctors

WASHINGTON, Oct. 8 (AP)—The Navy today lowered its point score for the discharge of medical officers from 60 to 53.

An announcement said that 4,000 Navy reserve physicians will become eligible for release under the new score by January 1, 1946.

The Navy Medical corps, both regular and reserve, has a present strength of 13,700. Under the 60-point score discharge system it is estimated that only 1,700 medical officers would have been eligible for discharge by the first of next year.

There was no announcement today on a general reduction in Navy point scores, which Undersecretary Artemus Gates said last week would be made soon.

'Strong Man' Peron Forced Out By Army

BUENOS AIRES, Oct. 9 (AP) — Col. Juan Peron, vice president and "strong man" of the Argentine government, was forced to resign today by the Army which put him in [illegible]

Some early reports said he had been arrested, but later it was established that he had returned to his apartment from the war ministry. There many young Army officers visited him, passing through a heavy guard thrown around the building.

Apparently President Edelmiro Farrell was carrying on as head of the military government, without the assistance of Peron, although an unconfirmed dispatch from Montevideo, Uruguay, quoting "the highest official source," had reported him under arrest.

A storm of opposition to Peron's military government, brewing both within and without the nation for weeks, burst today on the head of Peron when the big Campo De Mayo garrison in suburban Buenos Aires turned against him. The 10,000 troops stationed there had been Peron's chief support.

Col. Eduardo Avalos, whom Peron had elevated to the rank of brigadier general and placed in charge of the garrison, turned the tables on his old crony in a grim behind-the-scenes struggle for power. The Montevideo report said Avalos was in control of the situation.

The announcement of Peron's resignation said also that Farrell's ministers, meeting today, had decided to hold national elections April 1, 1946, to elect a new president.

Crowds Jeer Police

Demonstrations were touched off in the city as word spread of Peron's downfall. Crowds jeered mounted police, who have been the spearhead of repressive measures recently instituted by the government. Sao Paulo law students joined by medical students and medical faculty members paraded through main streets proclaiming solidarity with Argentine professors and students.

Peron's candidacy for the presidency had been one of the major causes of the growing opposition to him.

In June of 1943, Gen. Arturo Rawson set out from Campo De Mayo at the head of 10,000 troops, overthrowing the Castillo government, bringing the Army into politics and power, and making himself president of Argentina—for two days.

By coincidence or not, Rawson was under arrest at Campo De Mayo today with other officers jailed after an abortive attempt at armed uprising at provincial Cordoba two weeks ago.

He declared himself "very happy" at the developments.

There was no display of military force connected with today's ouster, except for the take-off of planes of two Army squadrons. Buenos Aires troops remained in barracks, and reports from Cordoba La Plata, Mendoza and other provincial capitals said their garrisons were "completely calm."

Laval Assessed Traitor's Death

PARIS, Oct. 9 (AP)—Swarthy, White-tied Pierre Laval—the butcher's son whose nimble brain carried him to the head of his nation and down at last to a traitor's dungeon—was condemned tonight to die before a firing squad for betraying France.

Albert Naud, chief of defense counsel, said he had requested an interview with Gen. De Gaulle and would seek to have the five-day trial annulled because of "the attitude of the judge and jury."

Earlier Naud had said Laval had told him he would not appeal to De Gaulle for clemency.

Had Expected It

The 62-year-old Vichy premier, who headed his government twice in peacetime and once again when he led it into a honeymoon with Nazi Germany, heard the verdict in a dungeon beneath his trial courtroom, his attorney said, and calmly commented:

"It was what I expected all along."

He then turned back to the writing of a defense of his career.

A jury of 24, plus three judges who also voted, deliberated but an hour and two minutes before convicting Laval of intelligence with the enemy and attacking the security of the state.

The verdict climaxed an historic trial in which Laval twice was evicted and finally refused to appear after bitter exchanges between the defendant and the judges and jurors.

National Indignity

In addition to the death sentence, the court condemned Laval to national indignity, stripping him of citizenship rights, and ordered his property confiscated.

There were reports in official quarters that the sentence might be commuted to life imprisonment, by order of Gen. De Gaulle.

De Gaulle, as head of the French government, alone has the power to modify the sentence. Reports of a possible commutation were based on severe criticism of the trial by Paris newspapers, Public sentiment, although strong against Laval, was aroused by such incidents as jurors shouting "swine" at the defendant, and calling out "you ought to be shot."

Compromise Plan Drawn

(By The Associated Press)

UNION leaders and soft coal producers "should be able to agree" today, Secretary of Labor Schwellenbach announced, on a new compromise offer to be made by him to halt the strikes involving nearly half the nation's bituminous coal mines.

Schwellenbach disclosed last night, after a four-hour conference between the two sides ended without any agreement, that he would offer the compromise today at 9 a. m. (CST).

Lewis Plan Rejected

Union Chief John L. Lewis had made public his terms for getting the miners back to work, but the operators wanted to add a paragraph to the Lewis plan, to which Lewis would not agree.

Schwellenbach reported, however, that "I don't think they are very far apart."

Other major labor developments:

1. Scattered new strikes and the spread of the soft coal dispute boosted to 457,000 the number away from work in strikes and stoppages.

2. Soldiers unloaded the Queen Elizabeth when she arrived in the strikebound port of New York with 15,000 troops, mail and baggage.

3. Federal labor conciliators intervened in wage controversies between Ford, Chrysler and General Motors and their 514,000 employes.

Ask Negotiations

At 3 p. m. (CST) yesterday, Lewis and a committee of his United Mine Workers gave to Schwellenbach their proposal for settling the coal dispute, which has cut into steel production.

Lewis' plan called for the return to work of striking mine foremen and further negotiations on the disputed issue of recognizing their union for collective bargaining purposes.

The operators sought to add a paragraph saying it was agreed the parties were "not waiving the respective positions heretofore taken by said parties except as such position may be modified in the negotiations, contending they needed it to protect their position that they have never negotiated with the foremen's union.

Lewis had declared he and his associates were "left waiting at the church" while the operators "filibustered" to draft a counter-proposal.

The strike has spread over six

Grain And Cotton Prospects Wane

Crop authorities in Lubbock were conceding a grain crop only 25 to 40 per cent of last year's harvest on the South Plains, and watched plummeting cotton prospects as lowering skies, intermittent rain and cooler weather continued Tuesday night.

Highest recording in this area was at Lamesa where 2 inches fell up to 6 p. m., the Panhandle & Santa Fe railroad dispatcher at Slaton reported. Sudan and Littlefield had 1.5 inches, and Plainview 1.25 inches as next highest.

Lubbock's official recording at the State Experiment station was .76 inch up to 6 p. m. Other cities included Brownfield, Anton and Lorenzo, 1 inch; Crosbyton, .75; Ralls, Ropes, Bledsoe, Tulia, Texaco, Post, Snyder and Sweetwater .5 inch.

An average of .5 inch of rain has fallen from Altus, Okla., to Presido, the dispatcher said, which is less than half the average for the area extending from Clovis, N. M., and Amarillo to Lubbock to Lamesa.

No heavy rains were reported during the past 24 hours, the heaviest precipitation being recorded at El Paso, where 1.77 inches were reported, and at Trinidad and Rosser on the Trinity river, which had 1.64 and 1.35 inches respectively.

Cotton men said, in effect, that continued rain would lower grade of cotton that is opened, would delay maturity date of all the crop and that:

Size Of National Debt, Lack Of Tax Cut Blamed On 'Profligate Spending'...

GOP Says U. S. Can't Be World Santa Claus

By FRANCIS M LEMAY
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, Oct. 9—Republican members of the House Ways and Means committee declared tonight "we cannot continue to play Santa Claus to the other nations of the earth and remain solvent."

Filing their "supplemental views" on the $5,300,000,000 peacetime tax-cutting bill, the Republicans blamed the size of the national debt on "profligate spending," and stated:

"Further reductions in tax rates can only be made if the administration will cut out wasteful and unnecessary spending."

The minority committeemen made their "Santa Claus" statement at a time when Britain and other nations are seeking loans in this country. They said:

"The demands upon the federal treasury are becoming increasingly heavy and the time has come for the administration to take an inventory of our assets and liabilities with view to determining what we should do and how far we can go. . . .

"Only a solvent American can help meet the post war problems of the world.

"Billions will be needed to provide adequate care for those who return home maimed and wounded. The dependents of those who made the supreme sacrifice must be secured against want and uncertainty if we would do our full duty to our heroic dead. Those sacred obligations must come before all other considerations."

The Republicans said the $5,300,000,000 tax cut is good, "but it is not enough." They added: "The country will expect further and more substantial reductions in the next tax bill which will be taken up at the next session of Congress."

The tax reduction bill approved by the ways and means committee come before the House Thursday and, with bi-partisan support is expected to be passed speedily. It would sweep 12,000,000 low income persons off the income tax rolls completely in 1946, and assure at least a 10 per cent cut for other individual taxpayers.

Claiming large credit for the bill, the Republicans said:

'It was through our efforts that substantial tax reductions were obtained for business generally, especially for those who did not earn excess profits.

"It was through our efforts that substantial tax reductions were secured for all individual income taxpayers. We also urged and supported the repeal of the very troublesome and confusing capital stock tax and the declared value excess profits tax."

The Republicans deplored the fact that the committee proposed only partial repeal of the excess profits tax next year. Their statement concluded:

"Reconversion of business and reemployment of labor are the pressing problems before the nation today. Nothing will stimulate and encourage these two elements of our economy as much as a sound, fair and forthright tax program. . . . Balanced budget and debt retirement have ever been the traditional fiscal policy of the Republican party."

New Jap Cabinet Playing Vital Role In Transition For Nation

By LOUIS F. KEEMLE
United Press Staff Writer

The new Japanese cabinet is generally recognized as "liberal" in complexion, but too much cannot be expected of it.

The term is comparative. The new premier, Baron Kijuro Shidehara, is a vast improvement over his predecessor, Prince Higashi-Kuni, who was long identified with Japanese militarism and expansion.

Had Foresaw Trouble

Shidehara is definitely not militaristic in thought and never was. It is on the record that he resigned as foreign minister in protest against the Army's seizure of Manchuria in 1931. At that time, he told Miles W. Vaughn of the United Press:

"Japan is taking the wrong direction and you can expect much bad news henceforth."

Being opposed to Japanese militarism is hardly enough, however. Militarism has been discredited in Japan by the crushing war defeat and American occupation. Even if the occupation authorities permitted it, a man of Higashi-Kuni's type would not be likely to last long as head of the post-war government, in view of the new freedom of political thought and action decreed by Gen. Douglas MacArthur.

Fixed Role Of Defeat

The brief regime of the Emperor's cousin was admittedly transitionary. It took care of the difficult surrender period, and since it represented the old order to a large extent, served the useful purpose of fixing its role of defeat in the public mind.

Although Shidehara has tried to form a government free as possible from the taint of war responsibility, his government likewise is transitional. It is expected to stay in office only until after the election scheduled for next year, when it will step aside in favor of the party making the best showing at the polls.

Shidehara is an old man of 73. No member of his cabinet is of the young, aggressive type, capable of leading a new, progressive movement. The new public welfare minister, Dr. Hitoshi Ashida, may be capable of some liberal pressure. He was president of the independent newspaper Japan Times before it was subjected to various mergers and subsidized by the foreign office, and he is regarded as a probable leader of Japan's infant liberal movement.

What Shidehara's cabinet can accomplish, if the premier fulfills his promises, is to ensure an orderly transition into a new political set-up, instead of permitting hotheads and extremists from trying to change overnight a system centuries old and steeped in tradition.

Must Await Vote

Such a balance-check should prove salutary. The United States has declared itself not averse to political revolution in Japan, but it cannot permit chaos and anarchy. Until the Socialists, Communists and the growing Labor party can demonstrate their popular following, it would be manifestly impossible to permit them more than a minor share of the government at this stage.

Such fundamentals as breaking up the large Japanese landed estates and freeing the peasants from feudal bondage have to be approached with caution, although the move is desirable and may be supported by the Socialists, Communists and Labor.

At the same time, the military caste must be destroyed, the state Shinto religion abolished, the imperial system modified, and the financial oligarchy broken up. The need for haste is much less imperative than a house-cleaning which, although gradual, will be in the long run thorough.

British To Keep War Emergency Powers

LONDON, Oct. 9. (AP)—The British labor government intends to retain wartime emergency powers possibly for five years, Home Secretary James Chuter Ede disclosed in Commons today.

His statement came soon after Commons reassembled to tackle its big budget of work, ranging from the economic problems of post-war trade and reconversion to the problems of peacetime foreign policy.

Ede reminded the British lawmakers that the present emergency powers act would expire Feb. 24, 1946. He announced that the government would introduce legislation as soon as possible to maintain "the necessary residue of power over the transitional period."

State Guard Meeting Set For Oct. 20-21

LUFKIN, Oct. 9 (AP)—Brig. Gen. Arthur B. Knickerbocker, commanding the Texas State Guard, today was asked to coordinate a meeting of battalion commanders, scheduled for Oct. 15, with the annual convention of the Texas State Guard officers association in Austin on Oct. 20-21.

Lt. Col. Glenn Burgess, program chairman of the officers convention, in a letter to the general, pointed out that, in the interest of saving time and money, the two meetings could be held on the dates of the officers meeting, which had been scheduled previously.

Burgess declared that both meetings had the same purpose—developing a program for a state militia now that the war is over.

Gov. Kerr Criticises Federal Oil Control

OKLAHOMA CITY, Oct. 9. (AP)—Gov. Robert S. Kerr voiced at a hearing of the Federal Power commission today "Oklahoma's unalterable opposition to any extension of federal control over the oil and gas industry within the state."

Kerr said the states, not only individually, but collectively, already were doing "a magnificent job" through the coordinating efforts of the Interstate Oil Compact commission.

The power commission's hearing here, one of a series of four in the midwest, is a fact-finding inquiry into the natural gas industry.

More than 32,000,000 pounds of ammonium chloride, used chiefly in tanner's bate, flour aging and soldering and galvanizing fluxes, were produced in the United States during the first half of 1943.

Diplomats Frankly Skeptical Of Early Meeting Of Troubled Big 3

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, Oct. 9—Diplomatic officials are frankly skeptical about the prospects for any early meeting of President Truman, Generalissimo Stalin and Prime Minister Attlee to have another try at laying a basis for European peace.

They are skeptical on two counts primarily—whether any meeting will be held in the near future; also, whether if one were held it would be very successful.

Failure of Conference

Talk of a Big Three session came into the picture again today with Foreign Minister Bevin's disclosure to Parliament that during the foreign ministers' meeting at London the chiefs of government of the United States, Britain and Moscow tried and failed, like their foreign ministers, to solve the problem which blocked the council.

Superficially this was the question whether France and China should be allowed to sit in on discussions of Balkan peace treaties during the formative stages. Russia said no. Britain and the United States said yes. This is admittedly a minor point; the real issues involved are much deeper. It is those issues which have to be solved at least to some extent if progress is to be made.

Big Three Not Cure All

Authorities here suggested that Big Three sessions are not necessarily a cure all for the world's ills. They said time and patience are more likely to offer cures.

Here is the way the situation looks as respects possibility of a Big Three meeting:

The July sessions of Stalin and Truman, first with Churchill and then with Attlee, paved the way for the ill-fated foreign ministers session in London in September. The principles laid down at Berlin are regarded as sound. The failure to which they gave rise is attributed to misunderstandings, conflicting aims and diverse purposes which it may take a long time to iron out.

Authoritative Action

Bevin's report that the heads of state were unable to agree any more than their foreign ministers means that Molotov, Byrnes and Bevin were speaking at London with the full force of their governments behind them.

Secretary Byrnes says that the basic issue at Berlin was whether the three great powers should dictate the peace to their allies. Russian spokesmen have argued that the Western Allies tried to change the Berlin agreements on writing Balkan peace treaties. No one here regards the issues as susceptible to quick solution. However, this particular problem may eventually be resolved.

Discharged Army Vet Shot; Charges Filed

BEAUMONT, Oct. 9 (AP)—Funeral services were held at Cleveland, today for Jack Davis, 26-year-old discharged Army veteran who died of gunshot wounds Sunday near Dayton.

G. D. Rogers, 63, a bartender at the night club where Davis was fatally wounded, was indicted by the Liberty county grand jury Monday on a charge of murder. He was released on a $5,000 bond after charges were filed against him in the fatal shooting.

Chinese Communist Leader Assassinated In Chungking Street

CHUNGKING, Oct. 9 (U.P.)—Li Hsao-Shih, prominent Chinese Communist leader, was assassinated last night while riding through the streets of Chungking in an automobile.

Communist sources said the assassination might have been engineered by reactionary Kumintang elements in an attempt to sabotage Kuomintang-Communist peace talks.

Was Associate Editor

Li, 39 year old secretary of Chungking headquarters of the Communist 18th Group army and associate editor of the Communist newspaper Hsin Jih Pao, was shot while returning home from visiting a friend at Nankai university.

Li's chauffeur took him to Chungking municipal hospital, then disappeared. Li died an hour and 17 minutes later.

Communist sources, suggesting it might have been a case of mistaken identity, said Li closely resembled Chow En-Lai, one of the leading Communist negotiators in the current talks with the ruling Kuomintang party.

Li was riding in the car in which how often traveled to Nankai university, the newspaper said.

Judge Ben H. Rice Is Sworn Into Office

MARLIN, Oct. 9. (AP) — Judge Ben H. Rice received the oath of office as federal judge of the western district of Texas here today

It was administered by his uncle, Col. George H. Carter, in the office where they were law partners from 1926 to 1940 when Judge Rice was elected chief justice of the Tenth Court of Civil appeals at Waco.

Judge Rice immediately wired Governor Coke R. Stevenson his resignation as chief Justice.

Col. Carter has practiced law for 48 years but never has held a notary public appointment qualifying him to administer public oaths. He qualified during the past two weeks for the specific purpose of swearing in Judge Rice.

Judge Rice was recommended by U. S. Senator Tom Connally several weeks ago for the place of federal judge of the Western district of Texas, to fill a vacancy caused by the death of Judge Walter A. Keeling, who died January 22, 1945.

PARKING PROBLEMS

THE writer does not drive a car, so when we mention this growing evil in downtown Lubbock it is because it has been brought to our attention by friends who do drive. Parking places are almost impossible to find around the stores and are out of the question near the banks. Working people often use part of their lunch-eon hour to do their banking and when they spend about 20 minutes of that time driving around in a futile attempt to park their car you can see it leaves little time left for business and for lunch.

We thought the main excuse the city had for imposing the parking meters was to prevent curbs downtown from being used as all-day parking spots. It seems to us that our city's prosperity depends in some degree on making it possible for cash customers to park as near as possible to retail stores, banks, etc.

We wonder if it would be out of the question to reserve a reasonable amount of curb space near the banks as ten-minute parking zones (similar to the places in front of the post office), in furtherance of the general proposition that the more parking space there is the better the interests of the community are served.

DON'T INTERRUPT

WAIT a minute while this self-termed City Mother suggests another idea for civic improvement; it concerns the street markers, placed at street and avenue intersections several years ago. Have you noticed how many of the concrete slabs have toppled over? Others are covered with weeds or sand or both.

We are wondering if the unemployment problem, if we have one here, could be met for a few days by hiring men to straighten those markers.

BOOKS AND PLOTS

WE seldom find ourself liking a movie with a gloomy setting as much as we liked the book which furnished the plot. For example take the novels, "A Tree Grows in Brooklyn" and "A Bell for Adano." Both books were followed closely in the screen productions, but squalor, bombed cities and other unpleasantries seem less unpleasant in ones imagination than they do in the detailed sticking to facts in the technical departments of the movie industry.

TWO APPEALS

A LUBBOCK mother who is applying hot blankets to her child who is a victim of poliomyelitis is asking the loan of a wringer, since the coverings are too hot to manipulate by hand.

A seaman here on leave is seeking the whereabo[illegible] parents of one Richard Rogers, who was killed aboard ship last August. He was a friend of the seaman and is anxious to talk with his parents.

If you can help with either of these appeals, will you please telephone the American Red Cross office, 8534, and ask for Mrs. Marguerite Stiles?

VETERANS' WELCOME

A LUBBOCK couple returning from San Antonio Monday said Fredericksburg, birthplace of Adm. Chester W. Nimitz, is swept as clean as a plate, flags fly from residences and buildings and welcome signs are everywhere. They said there was such an air of expectancy, they were sorry to come on home, but since the visit isn't scheduled until Saturday they couldn't wait.

That called to mind something that the Plainsman mentioned not long ago; a welcome planned for our own service men. It's true we haven't admirals and generals on our honor roll but we do have heroes and we wish a heroes' welcome could be planned for them. What do you think?

NEW SHOPPERS

SEVERAL million new wives are looking forward to the day when they can shop for their households for the first time. That should be a factor in the promised postwar boom.

Think of the furniture, the furnishings, the carpets, the yard furniture, the linens that are "musts" on those lists that have been compiled by being sent back and forth across the seas to the young husbands on a South Pacific island, a bleak outpost in the Aleutians, in the foxholes, on board ship, even in POW camps. And now it won't be long (we hope) before those lists will come true.

Four Million Cheer Adm. Nimitz In Colorful New York Welcome

NEW YORK, Oct. 9 (AP)—Cheered by millions, Fleet Admiral Chester W. Nimitz rode through wind-whipped paper storms on Broadway today and then told an assemblage at City hall that never again should the United States "risk the threat which weakness invites."

Chief Police Inspector John J. O'Connell estimated 4,000,000 persons acclaimed the Pacific hero on his triumphal, 22-mile motor ride from La Guardia airport to City hall and then up Fifth avenue to the Waldorf Astoria.

Must Remain Strong

At City hall, the Admiral received the city's gold medal of honor and was made an honorary citizen of New York.

It was the first official reception extended by the city to a Naval hero since Admiral George Dewey took New York by storm in 1889.

Nearly 4,000 Navy, Marine and Coast Guard personnel, marching in the first full military parade here since the start of the war, preceded the Admiral's motorcade up the famed mile-long hero's canyon of lower Broadway.

Outside City hall, standing on a platform built in the form of the prow of a ship and painted Navy blue, Nimitz told a crowd estimated at 350,000:

"We must make certain now and for the future that the peace is secure. We must remain strong. We must retain adequate sea power to ensure that we do not lose the peace."

Follows Heroes' Route

The Admiral urged that the next generation be given "a heritage of strength so that our citizens may live without having to spend their blood in battle."

"That is our job for today," he said. "It is the message which the officers and men of the Pacific fleet would deliver to you if they were here."

Following a route taken at earlier welcomes for Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower and Gen. Jonathan M. Wainwright, the Admiral's motorcade rolled from City hall up Fifth avenue to the Waldorf Astoria. There he was guest of honor at a dinner tonight.

From the moment Nimitz arrived at La Guardia field the reception was a five-star program.

Optimist Week Holds Spotlight For Club

At the regular weekly luncheon meeting of the Optimist club Tuesday at the Hilton hotel, Optimist week was observed with wives of members present and each Lubbock service club represented at the meeting.

In the absence of I. E. McWhirter of Fort Worth, who was to address the club Tuesday, Dr. A. W. Young of the Texas Tech agriculture faculty spoke on the meaning of optimism. McWhirter was to have flown to Lubbock, but his plane was grounded due to bad weather.

Representatives of other civic clubs present were DeWitt Landis, Kiwanis; Dr. F. G. Harbaugh, Lions; Alex McDonald, Rotary; Gradie Bownds, American Business club; Glenn Woody, Junior Chamber of Commerce. Also introduced was Palmer Black of the Amarillo Optimist club.

M. L. Shepherd introduced Dr. Young who explained that "the annual observance each October of Optimist week by all Optimist clubs is to call attention to the need for confidence, cheerfulness, friendliness and optimism in our daily lives." In the course of his talk the speaker pointed out that agencies are at work every day undermining public opinion and bringing doubt and indecision into the minds of the people. He used optimism and the working together in unity of clear-thinking individuals as the best weapon with which to combat these forces.

Other guests for the meeting besides those mentioned were John T. Ashford, USNR, survivor of the USS Indianapolis; 1st. Lt. Kenneth Neill, returned from bombing missions over Tokyo; Bob Taylor, U. S. Army; Ralph Smith of Dallas; Dr. and Mrs. C. E. Hereford, W. C. Mitchell, Raymond Burford, Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Deering; Turner Adams, Irvin Jones, Truett Hutto, Des Abbott, C. B. Tully and Wayne Henly, all of Lubbock.

Chedester is seeking a helper and to date has been unable to obtain one. He has requested a man, at least 17 years old, who knows the county and is able to handle cattle.

Herd owners will be notified as to time and date of testing. There is no charge for this service, rendered by the government, and full details can be had at the office of Jason O. Gordon, Lubbock county agent, Fourteenth and Ave. Q.

Orderly Reconversion Necessary To Stable Economy, Krug Warns

By CHARLES B. DEGGES
United Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, Oct. 9—War Production Chairman J. A. Krug predicted today that unemployment will decline by spring and that reconversion will be completed by the end of 1946—unless strikes or other disturbing factors interfere.

Krug's final report also forecast that the decline in industrial production and national income will be halted early in 1946 with the gross national output levelling off at a rate of around $155,000,000,000 a year. WPB said the war peak was $207,000,000,000 a year and the 1939 rate was $88,500,000,000 a year.

Orderly Reconversion

"It should be emphasized," Krug warned, "that whatever forecasts are made in this report are based on the assumption of an orderly reconversion and would have to be modified in the event of prolonged and widespread labor disputes, extensive inventory hoarding, serious disruption of the price structure, and other unforeseen circumstances."

The reconversion release of some 17,000,000 workers and potential workers from the armed services and munitions plants, he added, will involve "far-reaching adjustments" that "will inevitably hurt."

"We must, therefore, expect a period of hesitation, confusion, and uncertainty," Krug said. "But the basic economic factors are favorable, if not to an immediate full recovery, at least to establishing early in 1946 a floor on production and employment through the remainder of the reconversion period."

Optimistic Outlook

Krug's forecasts were made in his final report in which he reviewed America's industrial contribution to its World War II victory and painted an optimistic picture of reconversion and the future generally. The WPB will be ended Nov. 3 and Krug will leave government. A civilian production agency will succeed WPB.

By the first quarter of 1946, Krug said, the shrinkage in government spending for war purposes is expected to be offset by expansion of civilian goods production so that early in that year capital expenditures will be gaining in momentum.

Metals Available

Krug outlined the materials outlook as follows:

Aluminum and magnesium—"more capacity . . . than we know what to do with."

Copper and steel—"Plenty. . . . In virtually all shapes and forms to satisfy demand if there is no hoarding."

Cattlehide leather—"Plentiful supply that "will show up in due course in increased quantities of civilian shoes."

Lumber—Fourth quarter supply "a billion board feet—more than 15 per cent above requirements for consumption, and a month or so more of drying time will cure the present tightness in seasoned lumber."

Paper and paperboard—"New supplies of pulp from Sweden are now relieving the shortage except in newsprint, which for a little time must continue to be restricted."

Shortages Of Textiles

Cotton textiles—"World-wide shortage continues. . . . But civilians . . . will receive about 2,000,000,000 yards in the fourth quarter of 1945, about a third more than they were allotted for the third quarter."

Lead and far east imports including sisal fibres, tin, antimony and natural rubber—"most serious remaining shortages." "All five of these are international problems"; "for some time to come, supplies available to the United States will not be adequate to meet unrestricted demand." But "with careful allocation and restriction of less essential uses, it is expected that these shortages will be prevented from impeding reconversion"; "tin situation . . . worst of all . . . shortage will hit many reconverting industries" and "all uses must be kept under strict control for some time."

Building materials, and heating and plumbing supplies—"situation exceedingly tight. . . . Active steps are being taken by WPB to expand output . . . including expediting of production equipment, support of some requests for price increases, and support of wage increases in such industries as soil pipe and brick where manpower shortages are attributable to unattractive wage rates."

A drive is under way to prevent the loss of war products and other shipments due to faulty packing. A surprisingly large portion of vital war products damager for this reason before reaching the fighting front. Last year a loss of $60,000,000 was sustained because of faulty packing, according to the Railway Express.

Hi-Y Leaders Speak At Lions Luncheon

Lubbock Lions at their regular luncheon Tuesday noon in the Hilton hotel heard members of the Hi-Y club at Lubbock Senior High school explain the purpose and objectives of their organization.

Walter Price and R. O. Bennett were program chairmen and speakers included George Morris, Hi-Y president, who gave a brief history of the national organization; Jim Johnson, vice president, who outlined social objectives; and Ray Simmons, who told of the religious objectives of the club. Ronald Bennett played piano selections between talks.

Prior to the talks, H. D. Woods, member of the Veterans Civic Service committee of Lubbock, explained functions of the organization and its efforts to aid returning servicemen in their rehabilitation problems. The American Legion, American Business club, Lubbock Chamber of Commerce, Junior Chamber of Commerce, Kiwanis, Lions, Ministerial Alliance, Optimist, Rotary and Texas Federated Women's clubs are members of the committee, Woods pointed out, thereby coordinating rehabilitation efforts in Lubbock. Woods also cited observance of National Employ the Handicapped week here and urged employers to assist any disabled veterans in securing employment.

Visitors at the luncheon included: Cecil Dickey, discharged service man; Emmett Kerr, club member just back from service; Lt. Leslie Young of the Navy; Murray Elson of Amarillo, J. B. Rutledge of Austin, G. W. Parker of Ft. Worth, A. Wacker of El Paso, E. M. Wright of Coweta, Okla., Wilburn Dixon of Plainview, John E. Jackson, just discharged from service, and Agnew Wyatt of Chattanooga, Tenn.

Paul Hardwick presided at the luncheon in the absence of President R. C. Harvey.

Honest, Level-Headed Leadership Said Cure For Ills Of Texas U.

AUSTIN, Oct. 9 (AP)—Level-headed leadership, based on realistic thinking, will cure the real or imaginary illness of the University of Texas, acting University President T. S. Painter asserted today.

In a statement read at a general faculty meeting, Painter (who is attending a meeting of the American Association of Universities in North Carolina) declared the institution is suffering from no mortal illness, and its prospects have never been brighter.

Level Heads Needed

He added:

"All we need is some level-headed leadership.

"By this I do not mean the soapbox type of leadership and juvenile effusion. I mean the leadership which must be furnished the experienced members of the faculty who have been soundly trained in the great universities of this country, who know what a real university ought to be and who will do their part to make the University of Texas outstanding. When all is said and done, it is you, the faculty, who make the institution first, second or third rate."

Dr. Painter declared that although the probationary order of the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools against the university should not be minimized, the severity of the blow has been cushioned at least in the educational world.

Largely Administrative

This is because, he explained, the association investigating committee's report found that the squabble leading to probation was largely administrative "in which there were faults on both sides and the tenure was not an issue . . . and academic freedom is reasonably safeguarded here."

Probation was ordered by the association following its investigation of incidents involving the board of regents and Dr. Homer P. Rainey who was discharged as president by the board last November.

Dr. Painter told the faculty that he was named acting president not because he wanted the position but by a twist of fate and added that he had a feeling of confidence in the present board of regents.

"Each member of the board is deeply and sincerely interested in doing everything possible to make this a better university," he asserted.

ATHENS, Oct. 9 (U.P.)—The Greek government has resigned, it was announced officially today.

Voulgaris called on Archbishop Damaskinos, regent of Greece, to discuss the situation. After the conference the resignation of the government was announced.

Athens newspapers published a report that 500 American troops were expected to come to Athens from Italy to supervise the elections.

Rep. Karl Mundt, R., S. D., who was in Athens on a junket, said the troops would be in Greece as observers and not supervisors of the elections.

Tulsa Adds More Strength For Saturday Battle Here

TULSA, Oct. 9 (Special)—Bolstered during the past week by addition of five former Navy trainees but proven ineffective in the important aerial game, the University of Tulsa Hurricane this week faces arduous passing drills before embarking on the long journey to Lubbock, Tex., to meet the Texas Tech Red Raiders Saturday night.

Overall importance of additions to the Tulsa squad cannot yet be assessed, but apparently significant aid will come at two positions at least. It was Bob Smith, 1943 Tulsa freshman back, who led back with him from naval aviation training four other players: Bob Phillips and Ray Swanke, ends, and L. R. King and Lloyd Barron, wingbacks. All played together last season on the Iowa Seahawks team.

Started Last Week

Smith and Phillips played in the 19-0 victory over Drake university last Saturday night, and the former was impressive from scrimmage. The lanky youngster rushed his way to 89 yards net in 12 tries, scoring one touchdown on a 13-yard dash off tackle. Phillips played about one quarter, handling himself well defensively but failing to catch two passes.

Coach Henry Frnka was glad enough to get by the Drake encounter with the 19-0 margin, but was depressed by the continued miserable display of his passing game. In four years at Tulsa, no Frnka eleven has looked so impotent in the air. Whereas previous Tulsa teams have surpassed ground gains by aerial thrusts, setting numerous national records, the 1945 team has yet to show any passing power.

Win Three Straight

In the 32-0 rout of West Texas State Teachers, J. R. Boone, sophomore starting tailback, and Jim Finks, freshman successor, tried vainly to hit receivers, coming up with a record of only two completions in 14 attempts. Against Drake the identical record was made, but this time it was the receivers who couldn't hold well-placed passes. Even the five of nine mark, set in the opening game as Tulsa defeated Wichita, 31-0, is no consolation to Frnka.

"If we don't get our passing going this week," the Tulsa coach said, "we're about through. You can say that we're going to throw and catch until dark every day until we get the job done. It's that important."

Boone and Finks have done nearly all of the Tulsa passing to date, Jake Halter and Buck Spencer having passed only four times in games. As the tailback handles all the aerial work, however, Smith may be expected to move quickly into the passing role in time for the Texas Tech game.

In fact, observers of Tulsa practices last week were impressed by the punting, as well as the passing and running, of the Smith lad. Some predict he will replace the flying Boone as the starting tailback before the season ends. If he does, it will be one of those amazing football twists, for Smith participated in only five high school games, as a senior at Tulsa Will Rogers high, and was a reserve blocking back as a Hurricane freshman.

Frnka has not announced a traveling squad for the Texas Tech game, but it is believed about 35 players will make the journey. The Hurricane will probably leave here Thursday night by bus, expecting

Raiders Dig In For Tulsa Tilt

Rain was no hamper at Tech stadium Tuesday afternoon, and Coach Dell Morgan splashed the Red Raiders through a lengthy session designed to polish the offense on both ground and air, and also get the boys used to wet grounds should the present weather conditions continue.

Coach Morgan also spent a lot of time Tuesday in building a pass defense against the Tulsa aerial attack that Coach Frnka of the Tulsa club moans is not up to par.

Take No Chances

But the Red Raiders are putting no real stock in the stories from the Sooner state that the Tulsa air attack is not up to par. Frnka has announced from Tulsa that his Golden Hurricanes would spend the entire week in perfecting an overhead game.

Doug McSwain, who has been playing a guard position all year, has been shifted to a tackle post, hoping to add strength to the tackle slots of the Red Raiders. McSwain was a member of the state championship grid eleven at San Angelo a couple of years ago.

Three new faces have been added to the Red Raider squad, all of them discharged veterans. Pete Moulton, another former San Angelo boy, has been working a little at tackle.

Other New Faces

Two boys from Mexia joined the Red Raiders this week, both recently discharged from the Navy. They have not gotten in shape yet, however, and have seen very little action. They are Robert Stringfellow and Bobby Sewell.

"Time is too short, and we need the work too badly," was Morgan's decision when rain started falling at Tech stadium Tuesday, and the boys kept digging in.

Another bleak spot in the picture is the illness of Arthur Shahan. Shahan missed a lot of the Texas ball game when he suffered an attack of asthma, and doctors have ordered him to slow down on his football until this is cleared up. Shahan likely will see some action against Tulsa, but it may be limited.

Morgan has been spending much of his time this week in trying to discover potent reserve strength from the boys on the bench, and has been trying out many combinations during the scrimmage sessions.

Louisville Wins In Overtime At Newark

NEWARK, Oct. 9 (AP)—Successive walks to Pinch Hitter Lindsay Deal and Ben Steiner on eight straight pitches by Karl Drews in the 11th inning tonight gave Louisville a 5-3 decision over Newark and a second straight Little World Series triumph.

Drews and Rex Cecil had been hooked up in a neat pitching duel until the giant-sized Yankee farmhand lost his control after two Bears' errors in the second overtime inning.

LIONS SELL STAR

DETROIT, Oct. 9 (AP)—Art Van Tone, 27-year-old right halfback of the Detroit Lions, was sold outright today to the Pittsburgh Steelers, officials of the Detroit entry in the National Football League announced.

ENLARGE HOUSE FIELD

AUSTIN, Oct. 9 (AP)—Plans to increase the seating capacity of House park, the Austin High school football stadium, to 15,000 were approved by the schools athletic council last night.

to reach Lubbock late Friday in time for a final pre-game workout.

Westerners Get Indoor Workout

The weather threw another hitch into the schedule of the Lubbock Westerners Tuesday afternoon, and Coach George Philbrick was forced into a gym for the workout.

"There are several colds showing up now, and we couldn't take any needless chances," Philbrick said.

Work Indoors

The team worked indoors, getting in lots of running, but very little work that would look like real football. This will leave the club only one day in the week for hard drills in which to get into shape for the opening league battle.

Several boys, who have been on the injured list, are still on the sidelines, but holding out hopes that they will all be ready to play by Friday night.

Reports from Borger indicate that the Westerners will be facing a big, heavy and powerful team. The Borger line will outweigh the Lubbock line, anchored with a 260 pound tackle.

Electra Beat Borger

Borger suffered its third defeat in a row last Friday night at the hands of the Electra Tigers. Electra won 27 to 6. Reports also stated that Borger showed lots of power when on the offense, and a fast improving club in this department.

"But Electra held the ball most of the night, and Borger had little chance to exploit that power," say those who saw the Borger game last week.

The Westerners are still working under Coach Philbrick, with head mentor, Dixie White, still confined to his home with the flu.

Philbrick was checking weather reports, and scanning the skies, last night in hopes that he would see some signs of clearing weather which would allow the Westerners at least one good workout before the opening league battle.

Preston Smith Tops SWC Ground Gainers

(By The Associated Press)

Texas A. and M.'s Preston Smith may be out of action for awhile due to injuries received in the Oklahoma game last Saturday but the Cadet freshman fullback has a ground-gaining total that may stand up until he can return to the line-up.

Southwest Conference statistics, released by James H. Stewart, executive secretary, show Smith, who gained a net of 42 yards against Oklahoma before going out, to have a total of 319 yards on 51 carries, which is 49 yards ahead of Sammie Pierce of Baylor. In third place is Art Sweet, big Texas fullback who has rolled up 180 on 26 runs.

There was no change in the passing leadership, with Leon Joslin, Texas Christian fresman, still tops with 364 yards on 25 completions, but there was considerable shifting around in the spots below Joslin. Maxie Bell of Texas, who was eighth last week, now is second with 181 yards on eight connections. Howard Maley of Southern Methodist went from fifth to third with 175 yards on 26 completions and Tom Daniel of A. and M. slipped from third to fourth with 164 yards on 14.

One of the best individual marks was Jim Plyler's punting average of 39.1 yards for Texas. Plyler averaged 41.8 against Texas Tech. Jack Price of Baylor didn't play last week but he went into second place anyway with his 37.2 average.

In punt returns Bud Canada of Arkansas moved to the top with 127 yards on nine runs. Bob Goode of Texas A. and M. is second with 104 on two returns.

In pass receiving Paul Page of Southern Methodist has caught the most—eight for 76 yards—but Charley Tatom of Texas has the most in gains—taking four for 126 yards.

Texas moved in as the top offensive team with 1,053 yards. A. and M. is second with 908 and Texas Christian third with 868. Defensively, A. and M. is far ahead, holding three opponents to 200 yards rushing and passing. Baylor is second with 270 for the opposition.

All teams have now played three games, thus the figures are an accurate index of strength.

SARATOGA STARTS HOME

PEARL HARBOR, Oct. 9 (AP)—The veteran aircraft carrier Saratoga will sail tomorrow for San Francisco on her third trip to the United States since the war ended, with 3,800 veterans eligible for discharges, Navy headquarters announced here today.

Cubs, Tigers Close World Series Today

CHICAGO, Oct. 9 (AP)—With only one day of rest, Hank Borowy will haul his sagging muscles to the hill tomorrow and try to pitch the Chicago Cubs to victory over the Detroit Tigers in the seventh and deciding game of the 1945 World Series.

Manager Charlie Grimm, his curving corps shot to pieces in yesterday's hectic struggle that saw his club win out 8 to 7 in 12 innings to deadlock the classic, had little choice other than to call again on the slender right-hander who already had appeared in three games and had racked up two victories.

Newhouser Is Back

For the Tigers it will, of course, be left-handed Hal Newhouser, the famous "invalid" who forgot his pain long enough on Sunday to elbow an 8 to 4 win in his second try at the Bruins.

While Borowy will be a weary young man from trying to pitch the Cubs to the championship almost unaided, Newhouser will go to the mound with his left shoulder shot full of narcotic to deaden the pain of a "lump" which lately has made every throw a misery.

The odds on the final game were 2 to 3 in favor of the Tigers. With interest at fever heat here after yesterday's heroic duel, which probably was the greatest spectators' game in World Series history, the final was a sell-out before noon. The forecast was for dry and somewhat warmer weather than the 50-degree chill which numbed the bones yesterday .

Cubs Scent Victory

Cub fans, scenting their first world championship in 37 years, were confident that Borowy had enough left to go on and pitch his former rivals in the American League down to defeat.

If the Fordham graduate should turn the trick, he will become the ninth hurler in history to win three games in a single series. Christy Mathewson, Babe Adams, Jack Coombs and Stanley Coveleskie each racked up three victories without a defeat.

The Cubs star, who shut out the Tigers 9-0 in the opening game, but was knocked from the hill in the sixth inning of his second appearance on Sunday, looked steady as a rock as he held the Detroiters scoreless through the final four frames of yesterday's sizzler, until Stan Hack could deliver his game-winning single—oops, double—in the 12th.

Greenburg Is Cleared

There was a lot of satisfaction, some of it not quiet, that the official scorers changed their decision on Hank Greenberg's game-losing "error." What Hack hit to score Billy Schuster with the deciding run was by almost any yardstick a double to the left field wall, and the squabbling broke out in the press box about two seconds after the official arbiters made their decision known.

At first the defenders of Greenberg were content to say merely that the ball had skimmed over his shoulder after taking a bad bounce, but by mid-evining it was clear that the pellet had struck a boulder and shot at least 10 feet over the unhappy outfielder's noggin. At that point the scorers gave up, foregathered in a phone booth and officially absolved Hank of all blame for the Tiger defeat.

Hack's hit, his fourth of the game and 11th of the series, put the veteran third-baseman far out in front of the sluggers of both teams with the gorgeous average of .440 in six games. By some strange alchemy, he had managed to score only once, and he is the Bruins' lead-off batter.

CHAMP IS DISCHARGED

NEW YORK, Oct. 9 (AP)—Light Heavyweight Champion Gus Lesnevich today received his honorable discharge from the Coast Guard after 44 months of service and said he would like to get a bout with either Heavyweight King Joe Louis or Billy Conn.

Australia's native forests consist primarily of hardwood trees.

Chandler To Leave Senate About Nov. 1

CHICAGO, Oct. 9 (AP)—Senator A. N. "Happy" Chandler told a joint meeting of the two major leagues here today he would resign "soon" from the Senate to devote his entire time to his $50,000-a-year job as baseball commissioner, and it was learned reliably that the date set was Nov. 1.

Chandler himself refused to confirm Nov. 1 as the exact date, saying he would send his resignation by mail to Gov. Simeon S. Willis, and that it would be announced from Frankfort, Ky., the capital.

"Buy A War Bond TODAY"

Fans Hold All-Night Watch For Tickets

CHICAGO, Oct. 9 (AP)—Wild-eyed, hardy fans—many of them keeping an all-night vigil—stormed Wrigley field ticket booths for three and a half hours today to gobble up a sell-out batch of 36,200 reserved seats for tomorrow's World Series finale between the Chicago Cubs and the Detroit Tigers.

It was the second time in baseball history that a seventh World Series contest produced a pre-game sellout, the others also involving the Tigers when they closed against the St. Louis Cardinals in the 1934 series at Detroit.

When the ticket windows opened at 8 a. m. (Chicago time), there was a shivering, but noisy queue of between 6,000 and 7,000 fans on hand. By 11:30, all the reserved ducats were gone, but at 2 p. m. there were still hundreds of hopeful fans still straggling around the ticket booths.

Fans began the ticket watch at 7 o'clock last night and one patient chap, Paul Sams of Waukegan, Ill., was huddled under a makeshift tent at the park since 5:45 p. m., yesterday.

A dreary dawn which broke in 33-degree weather found the waiters wrapped in lumber jackets, overcoats, blankets, ear-muffs and mittens. Refuse cans were pressed into service as stoves by some 3,000 men and women who kept in line overnight.

Litter Of 30 Rabbits Sets Bunny Record

PORTLAND, Ore., Oct. 9 (AP)—A rabbit record—30 bunnies born and 28 still hopping healthily at a month old—was claimed here today.

Rabbitry owner Mrs. R. L. Jones didn't think the litter was particularly surprising until the "bunny birth contest" broke out here. Gust Karos, another rabbit raiser, announced a 25-bunny litter recently, and challenged anyone to top it. Mrs. Jones' rabbits did.

GEN. HERREN RETURNS

NEW YORK, Oct. 9 (AP)—Brig. Gen. Thomas W. Herren, former commandant of a cavalry school at Fort Riley, Kan., was the ranking Army officer on board the Queen Elizabeth which docked here today. A resident of Dadeville, Ala., the general said he was anxious to get back with his wife and two boys, now in El Paso.

HALFPENNY AS CAPTAIN

AUSTIN, Oct. 9 (U.P.)—Jack Halfpenny, stellar Longhorn back from Dallas, will co-captain the University of Texas team next Saturday in the game with Oklahoma university at Dallas.

Nuernberg In Spotlight

There Must Be No Dilly-Dallying

IT was in medieval Nuernberg that the first pocket watch, a queer contrivance shaped like a goose egg, was made. It was in Nuernberg that wire-drawing was invented.

It was there, within this ancient walled city of moats and drawbridges, that Hitler and his Nazi chieftains met in 1933 to proclaim the founding of the Third Reich and its reign of blood.

It is there that the doom of Nazism will soon be written. Among the bomb-wrecked red sandstone structures that date from the time of Frederick II, a court—one of the first of its kind in the history of the world—will begin the trial of the surviving Nazi leaders for their war crimes.

The United Nations War Crimes commission has arranged for an International Military tribunal to try the major war criminals, and Francis Biddle, former head of the United States Department of Justice, will leave soon for his duties in this connection. The Tribunal will consist of four members—one each from Britain, the United States, Russia and France—and one alternate each. A president will be chosen from the four members for each trial. Decisions will be by a majority vote, with the president's vote deciding in case of a tie.

The document defines war criminals as having committed any of these three crimes: those against peace, the "planning, preparation, initiation or waging of a war of aggression, or a war in violation of international treaties . . . or conspiracy for the accomplishment of any of the foregoing; "violations of the laws or customs of war," including murder, ill-treatment or deportation to slave labor or civilians, ill-treatment or murder of war prisoners or hostages, and other offenses . . . against humanity."

Among those named for trial are: Reich Marshal Hermann Goering, Rudolf Hess, Joachim von Ribbentrop, Franz von Papen, Walther Funk, Hjalmar Schacht, Alfred Rosenberg, Julius Streicher, Robert Ley, Hans Frank, Ernst Kaltenbrunner, Field Marshal Gen. Wilhelm Weitel, Adm. Karl Doenitz, Grand Adm. Eric Raeder, Gustav Krupp von Bohlen und Halbach, Baldur von Schirach, Fritz Sauckel, Albert Speer, Martin Bormann, Col. Gen. Gustav Jodl, Baron Konstantin von Neurath, Arthur Seyss-Inquart, Hans Fritzsche and Wilhelm Frick.

Despite of the preparations being made for this precedent-breaking trial, there are arch cynics who predict that it will never be held. They contend there is no earthly law, no international legal procedure, under which these Nazi demons can be tried for their crimes against humanity.

While it is not as simple as trials under the Laws of Moses, "a tooth for a tooth, an eye for an eye," no technicality must be permitted to prevent the prosecution of those responsible for the outrages against civilization that this generation has witnessed. The blood of the million dead cry for justice.

This must not be another Leipzig such as belatedly followed the first World War. This time there must be no dilly-dallying.

In this trial, we have another chance to hand out the warning sign for all the world to see and heed: "Aggressive war does not pay. The wages of sin are death."

Elliott's Bad Loan

INTERVIEWED in Los Angeles, Elliott Roosevelt is quoted as saying that he does not feel any moral obligation to repay the two men who lent him a total of $250,000 or any responsibility to reimburse the United States treasury for its tax loss on what has been officially described as "a bad debt."

The son of the late President, who had previously told how he borrowed a total of $600,000 and put it into a Texas radio network which he organized in 1938, said that he made John Hartford, president of the Great Atlantic and Pacific Tea company, from whom he borrowed $200,000, and David Baird, New York insurance broker, from whom he obtained $50,000, an offer to turn over all of his net assets including the stock which they held as collateral in connection of these loans.

"They chose not to accept the offer for their own reasons, of which reasons I have not been advised," Elliott said.

While the public may blame Elliott Roosevelt for his reasoning and his self-justification, those who attempt to make political capital by trying to use the loan incident to discredit the late President are "barking up the wrong tree."

Yet it is equally falacious to try to justify Elliott Roosevelt for the "easy out" he has taken. There have been men of honor who paid their debts even when it ruined them.

Back in 1836, Francis Richard Lubbock, who later became governor of this state, went bankrupt in New Orleans. He let his creditors have everything except his horse, although he could have withheld some of the firm's funds which had been invested from his wife's estate.

Later Lubbock wrote: "I was always glad I did the honorable thing."

Elliott Roosevelt, if he ever had a political future, did not aid it when he permitted his debts to be cancelled for a few cents on the dollar.

Today's couplet: Conditions on this mundane globe are growing bad and worse; we'd like a long vacation on some island universe.

II

I spent the first two years of my life shuttling between New York, California, and Hawaii, where my mother sought to regain her health. She had been seriously ill after I was born, and father never wanted her to return to the operatic stage. Her determination to do so, however, created a break between them that widened with the years, until they eventually became separated.

This situation was a great grief to my father and made him unhappy on my account, for I never had a home life in the sense that most people think of one. That is to say, I can not remember a single warmly familiar spot from which I could set out or to which I could return.

I was two years old when we sailed to Europe to join my grandmother, then at the height of her theatrical triumphs. My brother was sent to school in England while mother resumed her singing.

Mother and grandmama often told me about my first appearance on any stage. It happened during the year of 1908 in Turin, Italy. Mother was singing there in Puccini's operas in an effort to condition her voice for heavier roles after her long illness. The child used in the last act of "Madame Butterfly" to impersonate the baby was taken ill during the performance. Grandmama, a hound for punishment, offered my services as a solution to the dilemma.

I was, of course, too small to walk properly and used to do most of my traveling by crawling on the floor. In the last act of the opera, Madame Butterfly sets the child in the middle of the stage and gives him American and Japanese flags to play with, then retires behind a screen upstage to commit hari-kari and sings the aria, "Piccolo Idolo, Addio." This is the "punch" of the whole opera, and the audience is supposed to be filled with deep emotion. Although used to peculiar noises in theaters, the row mother was making behind the screen aroused my curiosity. I probably thought some one was murdering her and she needed help, so I turned my back on the footlights and started to crawl toward the screen on my hands and knees, showing to the audience a little pair of white buttocks.

It stopped the show.

I was five-and-a-half years old when we arrived in Russia.

I commenced ballet school almost at once, going to a school for children kept by an old French woman, Madame Verdain. I do not have any of the usual happy childhood recollections about the place but remember there was always a Russian priest in black robes sneaking in and out of doorways, and my grandmother slapped me almost every time she came to call for me, because it was so cold and because I fought with most of the pupils, especially a boy phenomenon who played the piano and wore thick glasses. I don't remember much about it, but I think I must have done a good job on him, because they took me away after that to another school for a year, where I progressed to music and languages.

The Nelidova Ballet School held examinations in dancing which were decisive for professional children, and the weeks before them were filled with constant naggings and slappings from my grandmother, on the "spare the rod and spoil the child" principle, and rare moments with my mother when she deplored my hands. I have always had powerful hands, a handicap in ballet (no pun intended) but good for piano. I played extremely well for a child, and they told mother I could be a concert pianist. I learned the guitar from grandmother, the concertina and banjo for fun. They overworked me at home, and I was always tired and cold.

There were long discussions about my appearance. Mother decided I had good feet and eyes, but grandmama thought me hopeless, on account of my Irish blood. The inferiority complex brought on by these criticisms nearly cost me my exam. In addition, there were arguments over my dress, a white "tutu" with rosebuds.

On the examination day they tweaked and poked at me for an hour before I danced, until I was completely worn out; then mother sat down with the teachers and some decrepit old gentlemen who were, I suppose, "balletomanes" looking for future Pavlovas. Everything I had learned went out of my head. I seldom cried as a child but bottled up my emotions, which made matters worse.

There is a movement in ballet called a "grande jetee," really very simple, needing only balance on arrival. Unfortunately I overdid it when I stopped on my toe, lost my balance, and landed flat on my "tutu" in a sitting position amid a horrified silence.

All the same they passed me, for I eventually recovered my composure and outdid the other pupils in a "Pizzicato" by Drigo, on my toes, which were always my best feature.

After a performance of "Boris Godunov" in Moscow, mother became very ill with a sore throat that developed into quinsy. Grandmama gave up contracts to nurse her, and as the allowance my father could send was not enough for so much expense, we gradually became financially embarrassed. Princess Soltikoff, an old friend of mother's, took me to stay with her.

After her illness, mother went with grandmama for some time, to regain her health in the warmer climate of the Crimea, and on her return it was decided something had to be done with me. I think mother must have been too ill to be consulted about the future, but obviously I could not accept the hospitality of Princess Soltikoff indefinitely, so grandmama took the situation in hand, arranging for me to work in a children's troupe called the "Orgainsky Wonder Children." Ograinsky, owner and director, agreed to train me, and I was to receive a small salary for my work in the act, for a period of three years, the contract then to be renewed.

'Beast Of Belsen' Lays Blame On Superiors

LUENEBURG, Oct. 9. (U.P.) — Josef Kramer, commander of the Belsen concentration camp, testified today that Nazi superiors answered his pleas for help by dumping 38,000 more prisoners into the camp in nine days.

Kramer, the "Beast of Belsen," testified for a second day in his own defense at the British military trial of 45 Nazi guards and commanders of the Belsen and Oswiecim camps.

At one point Kramer intimated that the inmates of Belsen were "too lazy" rather than too weak to leave their pesthold barracks. A ripple of derision swept the courtroom.

"I thought it better that the prisoners should have a roof over their heads than live in the open where they might have died of the cold," Kramer said when he was questioned about conditions at Belsen.

Instead of relief, he said, he got so many additional thousands that he could not supply sufficient food and water. The German front and German army communications already had broken down, he added.

"Buy A War Bond TODAY"

Looking At Life ------ By Erich Brandeis

I SAW a cartoon in the paper today which reminded me of a conversation I had with "Bugs" Baer, the humorist, a couple of weeks ago.

"Bugs" has a lovely country home here in Connecticut, one of those old affairs with wide floor boards and many fireplaces and acres and acres of land.

But those old places require lots of help and constant repairs and, in the long run, are mostly trouble.

"Bugs" also has an apartment in New York. It is on the fifteenth floor of an apartment house and the elevator operators were threatening to strike, and, with the weather getting cold, the Baers like to spend part of their time in New York, where there are heat and running water and push buttons and service.

BRANDEIS

"I can hardly wait," he said to me, "until those prefabricated houses are ready.

"Just imagine—all you build is a concrete platform, and the house comes to you all cut to size and all you have to do is get a couple of carpenters, and in a few days it's all put together, ready to move in.

"And when you get tired of where you are, you take the house apart, sell your lot, buy yourself another one and put the house back up again.

"What's the use having a great big old house with all its troubles and expense, when for a couple of thousand dollars you can have the latest in living?"

"Bugs" certainly had me sold on the idea. But this morning I saw a cartoon which showed a discharged soldier and his young wife with a plan of one of these houses—and beautiful plans they were!—all for $2500. So they went to a contractor who sat down and did some figuring and finally submitted an estimate to them which showed that the $2500 house, all put up, would cost them $17,000 "leaving out the heating and plumbing and using tarpaper on the roof and outside walls—that is, if we can get labor and materials."

MY WIFE and I have been planning on getting one of those prefabricated houses for quite a while now. We, too, are getting tired of "fixing" and repairing and of the water supply going wrong and the electricity going off and of leaks and this and that.

I have wanted to sell our place and make a good profit on it. But my wife won't let me.

"We've got the house," she says, "and while it isn't just what we want, at least it is more than a dream.

"It is a place to keep us warm, and it is a roof over our heads.

"What good is a profit if you don't know where you can get another place as good?

"You can't put your furniture in an architect's plan nor can you sleep under a magazine advertisement, no matter how beautiful it is.

"A house is a house," she ended her lecture, "but 'Bugs' Baer is a humorist."

We are going to stay in our house with the reasonable expectation of keeping out of the snow and the ice this winter.

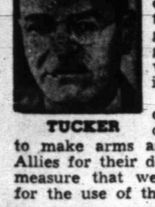

But we shall continue to dream.

The National Whirligig

H. R. 3750 Is "Hot Potato"

WASHINGTON
By Ray Tucker

THE difficulties and possible misunderstandings involved in unscrambling our wartime relationships with our Allies were vividly illustrated when a House Judiciary Subcommittee recently held an executive session on H. R. 3750. The incident also revealed that international mishaps may occur because Federal officials themselves are uninformed about complex problems assigned to them.

TUCKER

H. R. 3750 amends the first War Powers Act to give Alien Property Custodian James E. Markham the authority to return seized assets to friendly Allies whose territory was once occupied by German forces. When the Nazis invaded France, Belguim, Holland and Norway, we grabbed those countries' holdings were to prevent Hitler from claiming them.

The property consisted mainly of patents. When we entered the conflict, we utilitzed some of them to make arms and shipped the weapons to our Allies for their defense. It is also proposed in the measure that we reimburse the original owners for the use of their patents.

FLARE-UP: Democratic and Republican members flared up when Major Ray M. Harris, patent counsel for the legal branch of the Army Services, explained the deal.

"Let me get this straight," interrupted Representative Emanuel Celler of Brooklyn, Subcommittee chairman and ordinarily a loyal Administration man. "We are now engaged in canceling our advances under lend-lease. Now, on top of that, we have to pay claims on patents which were used in these lend-lease transactions, and which are owned by friendly Allies. Is that correct?"

"Yes," replied Major Harris.

HOT: Representative Earl C. Michener is a good Michigan Republican, but he is not a particularly aggressive member of the opposition. Indeed, there are times when his tolerance and mildness irritate partisan leaders. But even he leaped into the argument when it appeared that Uncle Sam was being sold down the international river, not once but twice.

"Is this the situation?" he asked. "We used three patents to manufacture implements of war and delivered them to our Allies under lend-lease, and got no return. Is that right?"

"Yes," answered Major Harris.

"And now we have to pay royalties for the privilege of making the weapons of war which we gave them?"

"Yes, sir," avowed the officer.

The Subcommittee regarded these admissions as so sensational that it refused to assume responsibility for any decision on H. R. 3750. It reported the measure to the full Judiciary Committee for consideration and action, "without recommendation."

"It was too hot a world potato for them to handle, especially in view of Keynes-Halifax-Truman-Byrnes debates on cancellation of the forty-nine-billion-dollar lend-lease bill and the proposals that Uncle Sam lend billions to lend-lease beneficiaries at low or no interest for fifty years.

FACTS: Unfortunately for Major Harris and the critical Congressmen, the facts in the files of the A. P. C.'s office refute their fears. And yet this kind of misinformation is bandied about official circles every day in the year, which, little by little, poisons the springs of world good will and earns Uncle Sam the nickname of "Uncle Shylock."

It so happens that only ten patents, belonging to nationals of France, Holland, Belgium and Norway, are involved. When their countries were conquered by the Nazis, we took over their properties in self-defense. We acted as their executor, issuing licensing under their patents to American manufacturers and collecting royalties which we placed in escrow on behalf of the individual (not governmental) owners. The amount of money in these transactions comes to about one million dollars.

Only two of the patents, both French, were utilized in the manufacture of implements of war (plane motors), and the royalties are quite small. The other patents, which contributed mainly to the output of some civilian goods, belonged to Norwegian, Dutch and Belgian nations. Their countries were not lend-lease beneficiaries.

CLAMBAKE: No British patents are concerned in the settlement proposed in H. R. 3750. In fact, London is not mentioned in the bill because the legislation applies only to the countries which were occupied by the Nazis.

Democratic and Republican Congressmen may yet make a howl over this deal when and if H. R. 3750 reaches the floor. Partisan suspicions that it packs dynamite are evidenced by the action of Mr Celler's Subcommittee in referring it to the full membership for final action. All the ingredients of a bipartisan political clambake seem to be cooking. But the critics will make a mountain out of this molehill at their own peril, for the facts are against them.

MORAL: There still may be plenty of opportunity to assail pre-Truman deals for forgiving our Allies their debts and advancing billions of dollars with no thought of repayment. But the 'economic isolationists"—a new group rapidly forming on Capitol Hill—should hold their rifles for bigger game.

Major Harris did not mean to give the M. C.s a wrong impression or to lead them astray. He simply did not know or try to ascertain the facts in the matter. He was not a good reporter.

The moral, if any, is that this sort of lack of cooperation among Government officials dealing with international problems—State, War, Navy, the Foreign Economic Administration, the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, the Alien Property Custodian—can mess up postwar negotiations and lead to an atomic smashup some years hence.

TEXAS
By Gordon Shearer

AUSTIN—The State Comptroller's department is faced with one of the toughest jobs in Texas—that of determining the just value of natural gas.

And the odds are heavy that the whole procedure will end up in courts for final decision.

The situation is the result of a new law. State officials say its shifts from the Comptroller, as specified in the old statute, to the producer the burden of proving a fair market value for natural gas. On the basis of the market value, the state calculates the amount of taxes which must be paid on production.

First to be hailed before Comptroller officials is the Sinclair-Prairie Oil Company on its operations in the gigantic Panhandle gas field.

Representatives of the oil company contend that the new law does not permit introduction of reports on production of other companies. Instead, they assert, the law specifies that the Comptroller may use expert testimony to refute market values used by the producer.

At any rate, at the first hearing on Sinclair's values, the Comptroller wasn't satisfied with the amount of information obtained from the company. More was requested. The hearing was recessed until October 18 to give Sinclair time to get additional data.

One of the most interested observers at the Sinclair hearing was E. H. Foster, attorney for Phillips Petroleum company—one of the largest producers of natural gas in the country. Some of Phillips' values may be checked later.

Beware the person who starts in soft-soaping you. The chances are that he's getting ready to try to clean you.

At any rate, a person who eats utility beef isn't guilty of chewing the fat.

Urgent Note In President's Message

Atomic Bomb Frightening Thing

By THOMAS L. STOKES
Special Correspondent

WASHINGTON—There was an urgent note throughout President Truman's message to Congress on the atomic bomb.

There was, likewise, an emphasis in several ways on the meaning of the discovery of the atomic principle. He said it is "a new force too revolutionary to consider in the framework of old ideas." And, at another point, he said that it "began a new era in the history of civilization."

STOKES

Again: "It may some day prove to be more revolutionary in the development of human society than the invention of the wheel, the use of metals, or the steam and internal combustion engine."

All these were ways of saying that it embodies social forces that undoubtedly will lead us in time to recast our forms of society and government, nationally as well as international. This is for a double reason. It is the most dangerous weapon we know anything about in war, capable of wiping out whole civilizations, figuratively almost in the flicker of an eye. It is, at the same time, a source of energy most productive of improvement and change in peacetime living.

President Recognized Situation

The President recognized this by his twin proposals—control by the government, representing the people, for peacetime development, which is in itself revolutionary; and international control for preservation of peace.

In his view of the meaning of the discovery, in his approach to its control, and in his demand for haste, the President was reflecting the conclusions of the scientists who worked, in isolation, to bring about this discovery.

There is a great human story, as it is coming out in reports of these scientists, of the effect on these men of putting together an amazing monster. They had lots of time to think as they worked at it.

Some present-day James Joyce should put it together in one of those steam-of-consciousness novels.

THE thing frightened them. When they saw what they were letting loose upon the world they were driven to some basic thinking, and in directions in which the average scientist usually does not indulge himself.

For the first time, scientists began to think hard about politics, the art of government, and how men accommodate themselves to political organization. One person who has considerable contact with some of them said they are far ahead of the politicians in recognizing what the discovery meant to politics itself and to political forms.

Their thinking proceeded from certain basic facts.

Production Is Only Secret

One is that there is no secret in the fundamental research, what President Truman called "the essential theoretical knowledge." The only secret is in production. Another is that the peace time development of atomic energy will always be available for war purposes. A third is that there is no countermeasure, no way to combat the atomic bomb.

From this they drew the conclusion that there will be an armament race unless there is international control, and this the president spoke of, too. For with the secret of production, which can't be kept long, and with a peacetime industry available for war use and providing continual improvements, nations constantly would be trying to get a more effective form of atomic bomb.

ANOTHER conclusion, and this is something to be considered, is that development even for peaceful purposes should not become a matter of competition among nations but should also be subject to international control. For development for peaceful purposes is also development for military purposes.

This projects another concept in international control, and could acquire what the president called a departure from "the framework of old ideas." He did not, himself, suggest this.

All of these considerations explain the urgent note for haste in meeting the problem of control, both nationally and internationally, which ran through President Truman's message.

Bottom Falls Out Of Crude Oil Output

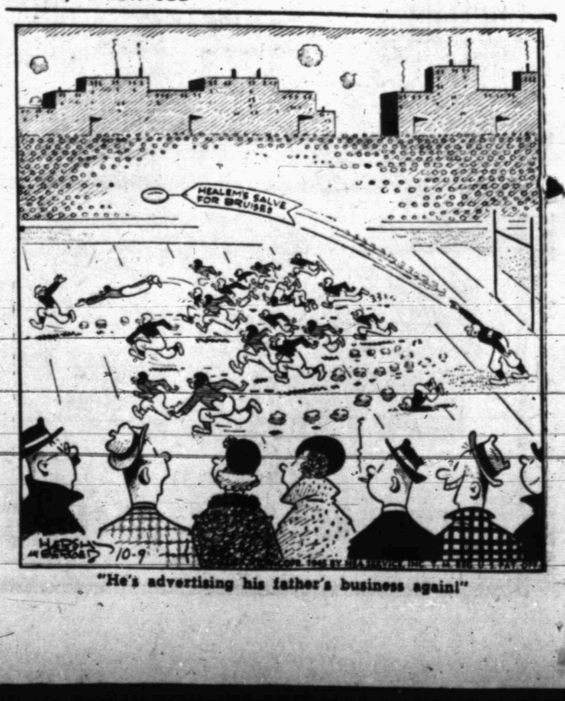

TULSA, Oct. 9 (U.P.)—Because of the refinery strikes, the bottom fell out of the nation's crude oil production last week with a decrease of 862,650 barrels daily, the Oil & Gas Journal reported today.

The slump brought the nation's daily average to 3,618,500 barrels from 4,481,150 the preceding week—or more than 1,300,000 barrels a day below the all-time record reached before V-J day last summer.

Texas accounted for 702,400 barrels of the total decrease, dropping to 1,187,100 barrels daily following an official allowable cutback resulting from strikes that paralyzed the Gulf Coast refining industry. Illinois output also sagged 54,500 barrels to 134,700. California declined 45,150 to 815,000. Kansas was down 20,350 to 252,150. Oklahoma dropped 7,850 to 383,450, and Louisiana was off 7,350 to 355,500.

The Nile river is about 4,000 miles long.

General Marshall Warns America On Terrors Of Coming Atomic Age

able of the speed of sound and of reaching targets 2,000 miles away at altitudes above 50,000 feet."

Can Aid Or Destroy

Discovery of the secret of atomic power, said Marshall, "can be man's greatest benefit" or "it can destroy him." Then the general added:

"It is against the latter terrible possibility that this nation must prepare or perish.

"Atomic power will affect the peaceful life of every individual on earth. And it will at the same time affect every instrument and technique of destruction."

How close was the race with the Nazis for this secret was indicated in a discussion by Marshall of the reasons for the Allied invasion of the European continent. One reason was to shorten the war by facilitating the advance of Russian forces from the east, said the general. The other he described this way:

"At the same time German technological advances such as in the development of atomic explosives made it imperative that we attack before these terrible weapons could be turned against us."

No Mention of Japs

There was no mention in Marshall's report of a corresponding technological menace by Japan. Indeed, the general made a point of the fact that there was little real contact between the Germans and the Japanese, expressing himself this way:

"The Axis, as a matter of fact, existed on paper only."

He presented evaluations by the War department general staff of the German, Italian and Japanese objectives. They reported that:

Italy's declaration of war was contrary to an agreement with Germany; Mussolini's action in attacking Greece and Egypt forced the Germans into the Balkan and African campaigns, resulting in over-extension of the German lines.

Hope For Jap Aid

There is no evidence of "close strategic coordination between Germany and Japan. The German general staff recognized that Japan was bound by the neutrality pact with Russia but hoped that the Japanese would tie down strong British and American land, sea and air forces in the Far East.

"In the absence of any evidence so far to the contrary, it is believed that Japan also acted unilaterally and not in accordance with a unified strategic plan."

It was plain, in Marshall's meticulous tracing of conferences and campaigns relating to the European and Pacific wars, that the Allies used this lack of unified strategy by the Axis to defeat the enemies separately. Italy was driven from the war and the European invasion mounted while Japan was held at bay in the Pacific. Then came Japan's turn—intensified air bombardment, closing in of land and sea forces on the empire, an atomic bomb dropped on Hiroshima on August 6, Soviet entry into the war two days later, another atom bomb on Nagasaki on August 9. Next day, Aug. 10, brought a request for surrender terms.

Invasion Plan Details

Marshall's report presented details of the plans for invading Japan, made unnecessary by the capitulation. They were two-fold, one designated by the operational code name "Olympic," the other "Coronet." They would have worked as follows:

Olympic—A three pronged assault on southern Kyushuin the fall of this year (Marshall said in recent testimony before Congress that the target date was November 1). The invading force would have been the Sixth Army, consisting of the 1st and 11th Army corps and the 5th Marine Amphibious corps. The three groups would have landed at Miyazaki,Ariaka Wan and one beaches west of Kagoshima, all on the south and southeastern corners of Kyushu. A diversionary feint off Shikoku, at the southern end of the main island of Honshu, would have been carried out by the 10th corps.

Coronet—Scheduled for the early spring of 1946 and carried out by the 8th and 10th armies, made up of nine infantry, two armored and three Marine divisions. The immediate target was the Tokyo plain of eastern Honshu. They were to have been followed ashore by the 1st Army, made up of 10 infantry divisions. The plan was to destroy the Japanese Army on Honshu, occupy the Tokyo-Yokohoma area, then fan out for a cleanup of the remaining enemy islands.

Continuous Research

In his discussion of technological attainments, Marshall said that the necessity for continuous research "is now clear to all and it should not be too difficult to obtain the necessary appropriations for this purpose during peacetime."

There is, however, always much reluctance to spend funds for improvement of war-making instruments, "particularly where there is no peacetime usefulness in the product," he commented.

The general foresaw the growth of a "highly dangerous and attractive doctrine"—"that to protect itself this nation need only to rely on its machine power, that it will need no manpower." Such a doctrine, said he, "will be closely akin to the doctrine of negative defense which destroyed France." He asserted:

Power Of Attack

"The only effective defense a nation can now maintain is the power of attack. And that power can not be in machinery alone. There must be men to man the machines. And there must be men to come to close grips with the enemy and tear his operating bases and his productive establishment away from his before the war can end."

It was upon this statement that Marshall predicated his case for a national defense system composed of a trained reserve of citizen soldiers and a compact regular Army comprised largely of a strategic force, "heavy air power." But before detailing his views on this point Marshall presented what he said was his own conception of "what is required to prevent another international catastrophe."

His philosophy was this:

"We have tried since the birth of our nation to promote our love of peace by a display of weakness. This course has failed us utterly, cost us millions of lives and billions of treasure. The reasons are quite understandable. The world does not seriously regard the desire of the weak. Weakness presents too great a temptation to the strong, particularly to the bully who schemes for wealth and power . . .

"We have ignored the hard realities of world affairs. We have been purely idealistic.

"We must start, I think, with a correction of the tragic misunderstanding that a security policy is a war policy . . .

Would Court Disaster

"In order to establish an international system for preventing wars, peace-loving peoples of the world are demonstrating an eagerness to send their representatives to such conferences as those at Dumbarton Oaks and San Francisco with the fervent hope that they may find a practical solution.

"Yet, until it is proved that such a solution has been found to prevent wars, a rich nation which lays down its arms as we have done after every war in our history, will court disaster. The existence of the complex and fearful instruments of destruction now available make this a simple truth which is, in my opinion, undebatable."

Into Front Line of Conflict

Marshall observed that the techniques of war have brought the United States, its homes and factories into the front line of world conflict and then commented:

"It no longer appears practical to continue what we once conceived as hemispheric defense as a satisfactory basis for our security."

The hemispheric defense policy developed in the years immediately preceding American entry into World War II and was implemented by the construction of a chain of huge United States military, naval and air bases through the Caribbean and the eastern coast of South America.

In discussing a system by which the nation can remain strong without bankrupting itself on military expenditures, Marshall emphasized the need for universal military training. Such a system would make it possible to fill immediately, in time of emergency the ranks of the Navy, the Army, the National Guard and the organized reserve. The armed forces thus would be ready for almost immediate deployment to counter initial hostile moves.

Respect From World

"By this method," said Marshall, "we would establish, for generations to come, a national military policy: (1) Which is entirely within the financial capabilities of our peacetime economy and is absolutely democratic in its nature, and (2) which places the military world and therefore the political world on notice that this vast power, linked to our tremendous resources, wealth, and production, is immediately available. There can be no question that all the nations of the world will respect our views accordingly, creating at least a probability of peace on earth and good will among men rather than disaster upon disaster in a tormented world."

In this connection, Marshall associated the universal training plan with pending peace negotiations.

"The time of our decision on the question of universal military training is urgent," he said. "The officials of the State department have been strongly of the opinion that a decision in this matter prior to the final peace negotiations would greatly strengthen the hand of the United States in securing the acceptance of a genuine organization to handle international differences."

Wants Unbroken Period"

Marshall emphasized that universal military training was not universal military service.

He proposed that trainees have "an unbroken period" of one year instruction. They would be in an organization separate from combat organizations, maintained for training purposes only. Once trained, they would be freed of further connection with the Army unless they chose to join the National Guard, an organized reserve unit or the regular Army. But "when the nation is in jeopardy they could be called, by a committee of local neighbors, in order of priority and under such conditions as directed at that time by the Congress."

The general rated the National Guard as of first importance in the citizen-army. He said it must be ready to take its place in the first line of defense and not be dependent upon a year or more of training. The essential requirements for such a system is universal training from which to draw volunteers for the guards.

Organized Reserve

The second important component of the citizen-army, said Marshall, "is the organized reserve which creates a pool of well-trained men and officers."

The ROTC should be enlarged and strengthened, established on a higher level "comparable to the academic levels of college education in which the young men of ROTC are engaged," Marshall said. This would be possible, he added, if the student had participated in universal military training, which would mean he would enter ROTC as far advanced as his predecessors were after two and a half years of the original three-year course.

Marshall set forth four major functions of the regular Army in peacetime:

It should be partially deployed in the Pacific and Caribbean, ready to protect the nation against a sudden hostile thrust. ("It is obvious," the general wrote, "that another war would start with a lightning attack to take us unaware. The pace of the attack would be at supersonic speed of rocket weapons closely followed by a striking force which would seek to exploit the initial and critical advantage. We must be sufficiently prepared against such a threat to hold the enemy at a distance until we can rapidly mobilize our strength.")

Security For Bases

It should provide security for outlying bases. ("We quickly lost the Philippines, Guam and Wake islands at the beginning of this war").

It should furnish the overhead, the higher headquarters to "keep the machine and the plans up to date for whatever national emergency we may face in the future."

It should "provide the knowledge, the expert personnel, and the installation for training the citizen-soldier."

Six Persons Injured In Bus-Auto Crash

A collision involving an automobile and a Texas, New Mexico & Oklahoma Coaches bus three miles south of Woodrow early Tuesday resulted in slight injuries to six persons.

Investigating officials of the state highway patrol said they had not completed interviews of those affected and had not completed their report. They said the bus lay on its side after the collision and that the car was badly damaged.

Report On Injured

From a physician at West Texas hospital, the following report was obtained:

Capt. R. A. Hobbs, 22, of Denver, Colo., suffered a bruised chest.

Melvin E. Johnson, 19, had a bruised right shoulder and knee.

L. J. Wilcox, 19, a Texas Tech student, had a bruised chest.

Harvey Williamson, 51, a railroad conductor of Amarillo, suffered a fractured right thumb.

R. C. Cummings, 23, a negro soldier, had an injured elbow and a broken tooth.

N. R. Greenbaum, 19, a soldier stationed at Big Spring Army Air field, had abrasions of each ankle.

Jess C. Levens, vice president and general manager of the T. M. N. & O., said Bill Green, about 32, was driver of the bus, which was running from Big Spring to Lubbock. There were 24 passengers aboard. It was misting rain and the highway was slippery, Levens and state police indicated. The crash happened about 1:30 or 1:40 o'clock. Hospital reports indicated that Greenbaum was driver of the automobile.

None of the victims was admitted to the hospital. Only emergency attention was required, or examination.

Plains Weather

against frost. We won't have anything but bollies if frost were to hit too early."

Result In Lower Grades

They explained that continued weather of the sort that brought dankness and a low of 42 degrees early today to the South Plains undoubtedly would result in lower grades and roughginned cotton that would result in undesirable market qualities, as well as a sharply reduced yield.

Such conditions over a wide section of the South and Southwest has caused the government's estimate to be reduced another 200,000 or more bales, cotton men said.

Of possibly more importance, continued rain would cause a "progressive distress" of the cotton farmer. Already, one cotton authority here said, the Lubbock county crop is expected to be no higher than 25,000 bales, as compared with 97- to 98,000 bales of last year's crop—the South Plains crop to be not more than 100,000 bales, as compared with last year's 500- to 550,000 bales.

Grain Damage Less

Damage to grain, it was explained, should be "much less noticeable at this stage than to cotton."

It probably would require another 10 days of rainfall before there would be any "appreciable" damage. There has been no head damage reported, especially among the hard "berry" grains like Martin maize, hegari and Plainsman maize, all of which is straight standing and capable too of shedding moisture better than some other grains, notably those of the soft kernel kinds. Another 30 days of unfavorable weather, however, could caues even those hard grains to fall over and sprout in the head. Before that stage would come staining of grain to an extent that would cause its value as seed to deteriorate some in the grain markets, it was explained.

Not Generally Matured

The reason for the grain crop's ability to withstand unfavorable conditions more than cotton is found in the crop's not having generally matured. Only in irrigated fields has an abundance of grain ripened. The immature grain, while it could be damaged by too much rainfall, will not sprout.

At the experiment substation east of the city, Don L. Jones, superintendent, put the cotton situation this way:

That cotton which has opened chances a lowering of grade, but sunshine, if not delayed long, could restore possibilities if there were no wind to blow the water-weighted cotton out before it dries. Continued damp weather could lower the grade one point, perhaps, which could mean a loss of approximately $5 a bale.

interpretation by the administration of the Texas out-of-state tuition fee," he commented.

"Whereas the cost to a resident of Texas is $25 per semester, we have a reciprocal arrangement with other states to assess an out-of-state student in an amount equal to that which a Texan would pay in the other state concerned."

Because the Texas group held out for the position that the actual cost of instructing a student was approximately $100, veterans officials seemed to come around to that position, Dr. Lowman added.

The $100 figure would be paid to state institutions, regardless of whether the student was resident of Texas, college officials said.

NEW YORK REPORT

NEW YORK, Oct. 9 (AP) — Cotton futures were reactionary in moderate trading today as commission house profit taking and hedge selling met only limited mill and local buying. The belief that the Pace parity measure will not pass and further technical adjustments following the recent sharp run-up in prices had a depressing effect. There were predictions of frost in some parts of the cotton belt.

Futures closed 40 to 70 cents a bale lower.

of the questioning.

He said:

"If Hitler had waited to develon this bomb, then started his attack, the war would have been over in two or three days and the world capital would be in Berlin."

Thus, Groves said, this commission should be so well supplied with authority that it can do almost anything considered necessary at a moment's notice. He said there isn't any room to make any mistakes on the atom bomb because "the first mistake may be national suicide."

Others Lack "Know-How"

Groves said he didn't think any other country had the "skill and ingenuity," the know-how, the money and all the other essentials to "catch up" on the atom bomb for some years. But he said this is no time to sit back and wait for them because when the first one was dropped, topnotch scientists the world over would "deduce" a lot of the so-called secrets.

Japan and Germany worked on it but were nowhere near fruition, he said.

"It was too big for Japan and they knew it," he added.

Groves said under questioning there were some foreigners employed on the bomb and there was nothing to prevent them from going abroad and divulging some of the secrets. But then he added that the "ingenuity of the American worker and management is a secret I don't think any other nation has."

Can Get Information

Moreover, he went on, some of the equipment "can be made only in the United States or possibly Switzerland." There is a way to find out when any other nation is catching up, he said, by noting when "they tip their hands" by placing orders for this equipment.

Rep. Harness (R-Ind) asked about defense against the bomb and Groves said "we're not sleeping."

Under the bill the commission would control all resources connected with atomic energy, and anybody engaging in any research in it would have to have a license. That, Groves said, is to make sure the nation has a tight rein on this "most potent" force.

Man Found Hurt In North Part Of City

Edward Carroll, 26, found unconscious in 200-block Ave. H, about 7 o'clock Tuesday night, suffering from a laceration of the scalp, a head bruise, and abrasions on his face, was unable to recall what had happened to him.

He regained consciousness in Lubbock Memorial hospital where city police took him for treatment. He was found about a block from his residence and remembered leaving home afoot to keep a downtown appointment at 8 p. m.

A foul play theory was discounted as he still had his billfold, money and wristwatch. Carroll came here recently from Carlsbad, N. M., and was employed by an insurance company. He is an Army veteran and most recently served in the Merchant Marine. He has a wife and baby.

In his first broadcast to the Japanese people, the 73-year-old Shidehara urged Japan to get behind his new government and assist him in solving the severe economic problems facing gthe nation.

Shidehara reiterated that Japan's immediate tasks were those of providing food, housing and clothing for the people.

Of his future program the premier said: "I think my basic policy will reveal the truth to the people, regardless of whether it may be good or bad . . . therefore I will not make any promises which I won't be able to carry out."

Military Clique Out

Referring to the brighter side of the situation, Shidehara pointed out that "the military clique and bureaucrats" had lost their hold on political power and all politics and economics will be determined by the will of the majority."

Earlier, at a news conference with 40 foreign correspondents, the new chief of the Japanese government admitted that there were several regrettable points in Japan's share in the Pacific war, but added that he was not prepared to discuss whether his nation was guilty of starting the conflict.

Declaring that it was not his position to "criticize official documents issued by the Japanese government on the causes of the war," Shindehara said he believed that th ends sought by Japan through war could be achieved through diplomac

Clemenceau Says France Miserable But Retains Pride

The glory that once was France has gone, except for her population's stubborn resiliency—the misery and desolation that have blighted her resources and sapped her physical strength have her reeling as she faces a future poignantly uncertain.

Yet it is with pride, not as a nation of beggars, that she can call on the United States and other civilized nations for the tools and gold and goods that will allow her the chance to restore herself to what measure of destiny shall be hers.

Reverse Lend Lease

For did she not give in reverse lend lease to this country 490 millions—almost as much as the 500 millions she received for assistance to her civilians? Does she not appreciate the immeasurable aid in arms that cannot be evaluated in money?

And is it not true that civilized nations must face the long road together by backing the peace just as they backed the attack?

That was the sense of an address Tuesday night of Pierre Clemenceau, serving France in America as a member of the French Supply council, before Lubbock Knife and Fork club. Two hundred fifty-six persons jammed every chair in the ballroom of Hilton hotel for the dinner program.

Grandson Of "Tiger"

The grandson of the famous "Tiger of France," Georges Clemenceau, a French warrior who escaped to Dakar after the Germans had swept French resistance off its feet and subsequently was offered a captaincy in the U. S. Army for contributions he had made to American success in North Africa, relied on his extensive travel in this country before and after World War II for an understanding that, he said, had convinced him that "exploitation of the U. S. conception" not only would save France, but would implement the need for closer relations between the U. S. and France.

M. Clemenseau spoke with absorbing earnestness. "I would not attempt to change your beliefs," he said. "I came myself here to the United States numerous times, and I learned to want to know you much better—to become your unofficial ambassador to France. I have felt that I can do so better by explaining the relations between our two countries."

We're Not "Suckers"

"You are not—to use an expression—'suckers'," he said, referring to the vast amounts of monetary and productive sandbags this nation has thrown up against rising tides of aggression.

"France needs tools. Can we pay for them? Yes." He only qualified his promise of payment by saying the price could not be "tremendous—we cannot spend all our gold; we will need some to maintain our own standard."

Throughout, the speaker's address was of contrasting pictures: of a beaten France that is weaker than ever before in her modern history; of a population that has fallen heir to all the exigencies of warfare; yet of a France that can come back into the family of nations with something in her hands that will help reshape civilized behavior and economy if she is given the sympathetic assistance that she now must have or face the alternative of taking a seat even farther back in the assembly of European powers.

Altogether, M. Clemenceau's graceful manners, pleasant voice, Oxford-tipped French accept, fleeting humor and occasional lapse into Gallic idioms were uniformly pleasing to the crowd, and applause that greeted the close of his address was warm.

He was introduced by Dr. Weston A. Pettey.

Club's Building Plans Advance

Plans for a new clubhouse, costing not less than $75,000, were nearer realization as directors of the Lubbock Country club were authorized by stockholders Tuesday night to investigate other clubhouses, get estimates of costs, employ an architect to draw plans, and make a recommendation to the stockholders wihin 60 days.

New directors selected at the meeting, held in the clubhouse, were Walter G. Alderson, H. L. Allen, Charles H. Read and Fenner Tubbs. Of these, Tubbs replaces J. B. Crisler, and the other three are re-elected members. Holdovers are W. F. Eisenberg, C. L. Dean, Powell McWhirter, M. A. McLaughlin and J. D. Hassell, Jr. A meeting of the directors will be called soon to elect a president and vice-president from the directorate's membership.

The stockholder adopted a new constitution and by-laws and learned from the financial report that the club has $30,000 in its building fund.

Read, vice-president, presided in absence of Eisenberg, who is out of town. Paul Hardwick is secretary.

Soldiers turned stevedores in the port of New York, tied up nine days by a strike, when AFL longshoremen refused to unload mail and baggage from the Queen Elizabeth as she arrived with nearly 15,000 troops.

An Army spokesman said any would hold up the return of troops awaiting embarkation overseas. In addition to the unloading, the liner must be provisioned for departure Thursday.

Between 35,000 and 60,000 AFL longshoremen have been on strike in the world's busiest port for nine days but have been servicing troops transports. After two and a half hours on the Queen Elizabeth, they walked off in a dispute over the size of sling loads.

More than 200 ships are tied up at piers, the War Shipping administration said, and scores of others are standing in the harbor awaiting for berths.

In Detroit, federal labor conciliators intervened in wage disputes between 514,000 automobile workers and their employers—Ford, Chrysler and General Motors.

The CIO United Automobile Workers is campaigning for a 30 per cent wage rate increase in the automobile industry and has strike votes pending for this month and early November at the three big concerns.

Only a few minor strikes continued in the motor capital.

CORPUS CHRISTI, Oct.9 (AP)—The city council today named Jack Speer, city secretary, as city manager, under a new charter adopted by the voters last Saturday. The council said Speer's appointment will be effective "from week to week."

Mrs. Polking Dies Of Wreck Injuries

Injuries suffered before dawn Sunday when the automobile in which she and her husband were riding was in an accident near Marion, Kas., resulted in death Monday night of Mrs. Warren A. Polking, wife of Lt. Col. Polking, administrative officer (coordinator and compliance) of Lubbock Army Air field, in a Marion hospital.

The information came in a telegram addressed to Col. Howell M. Estes, jr., commanding officer of LAAF.

Col. Estes said there were few details known here. Col. Polking, until several weeks ago deputy commander at the field, and Mrs. Polking had left their 2514 Twenty-seventh home in Lubbock after the officer had taken recreational leave.

After the mishap the officer and Mrs. Polking were taken to the Marion hospital, where it was at first believed neither was seriously injured. It had been planned to move both victims today to the Army Air forces hospital at Salinas, Kas Col. Polking was taken to Salinas today, it was learned.

Mrs. Polking, formerly Miss Helen May Taylor of San Antonio, was younger than her 27-year-old much-decorated husband. The family came to Lubbock in February, after the officer had flown heavy bombardment craft from England against the Germans. Col. and Mrs. Polking had no children.

There was no information here to indicate when and where funeral services would be read.

Chungking Murder Mystery Rocks World, May Break Chinese Unity

By JAMES D. WHITE
Associated Press Staff Writer

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 9—The world's most important murder mystery right now is in Chungking, where somebody has shot a ranking Chinese Communist official in the back.

The worst that can come out of this murder is full-scale civil war in China, which is a big five power and key to peace in the Pacific.

About the best to be expected is a wave of suspicion which may drown China's hope for real internal unity.

Sincere Chinese Appalled

Sincere, patriotic Chinese are appalled by this potential deathblow to the important negotiations which have been going on in Chungking between the ins and the outs.

The ins are the men of the Kuomintang, the Nationalist party which was entrusted 20 years ago by Dr. Sun Yat-Sen with running the country and educating it for democracy.

The outs are the Communists, politically outlawed but seeking—with others—a voice in government.

Many Bitter Problems

The two factions still have many bitter problems to solve between themselves, but their leaders recently announced agreement to submerge their differences in negotiations now going on to unify China through political reform, and through compromise.

Someone, who may not have wanted that agreement to succeed, shot Li Shao-Shih, the secretary-general of the Communist party in Chungking.

What news the Kuomintang censor in Chungking has allowed to be cabled to this country provides no real evidence as to who that might be. It could be almost anyone. A personal enemy, for instance, although friends say Li had none.

May Bring Dual Charges

It's expectable that the Reds will accuse Kuomintang secret agents of doing it, and it's equally to be expected that the Kuomintang will claim it was a Communist plot to discredit the Kuomintang government in Chungking which has guaranteed Red delegates personal protection while they are negotiating.

Other elements could have done it, elements quite outside the two contending parties. Even Japanese influence could have had a hand, because the threat of Kuomintang-Communist unity in China was one of the things that spurred Japanese invasion of China in 1937.

Charges Presented In Mexican Murder Mill; Eye Witness Is Held

LAREDO, Oct. 9 (AP) — Federal Prosecutor Emilio Villalobos of Nuevo Laredo today presented to Federal District Judge Manuel Gomez Lomeli his charges against 26 men held in connection with the brutal slaying of 37 men and a woman on the shores of the Rio Grande during the past three months.

Judge Lomeli will now rule on whether Villalobos has presented enough evidence to warrant a trial.

Witness Is Found

Villalobos said that preliminary investigations have been concluded by his office, and that he had a witness to one of the killings. He said he was withholding the name of his witness for fear of reprisals by other members of what he called "the gang" still at large.

Villalobos said the witness told him he and a second man had been approached in Reynosa, Mexico, near McAllen, by a third man who offered to cross them from Mexico into Texas for five pesos.

He said he was crossed in a small boat, but his friend was held on the Mexican side by a group of men. The witness said just as he was getting out of the boat, he heard a shot on the Mexican side of the river.

He said he ran, with the man who was rowing his boat in pursuit. He said he escaped and reported to officers that he had crossed the river illegally.

He said he then hid in a cave until found recently by military investigators who had been checking into the series of slayings.

Villalobos charges a gang smuggled aliens into Texas, then on their return, killed them for the wages they carried.

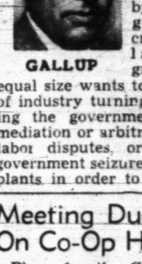

Government Should Take Firm Stand

Washington Should Step Into Strike Tieups, Public Says

By GEORGE GALLUP, Director
American Institute of Public Opinion

PRINCETON N J., October 9th. —With the nation swept by an almost unprecedented wave of labor troubles, the American public thinks the Federal Government should take a strong hand on strikes.

Those who want the government to take action include virtually all shades of opinion on the labor question.

GALLUP

One group wants to try to settle the present chaotic situation by having the government crack down on labor. Another group of about equal size wants to get the wheels of industry turning again by having the government provide for mediation or arbitration of current labor disputes, or by temporary government seizure of strike-bound plants in order to assure production. A third group wants action in favor of the workers.

But any way you look at it, the dominant note in peoples' thinking seems to be, "let's get the factories going". Only comparatively few think the government should maintain a hands-off policy or let the situation drift.

These facts are revealed in a cross-section survey of public opinion by the Institute, in which voters in all walks of life in each of the 48 states—including a full complement of labor union members, business and professional people, farmers, and others—were questioned.

The first issue put to them was this:

"Should the government take a stand on labor strikes during the present reconversion period?"

The vote:

Yes	74%
No	14
No Opinion	12

When the 74 per cent answering in the affirmative were asked, "What do you think it should do?" the replies fell into the following general groupings:

CRACK DOWN ON LABOR—prohibit strikes, punish strikers, control union leaders, abolish unions, force strikers back to work	24%
GET PRODUCTION GOING AGAIN—Step in with mediation or enforced arbitration, seize strike-bound plants and put men back to work	28
HELP LABOR—Support strikers, compel employers to be fair, raise wages	6

NO PROCEDURE NAMED	12

Texas Drys In Annual Assembly In Dallas

DALLAS, Oct. 9. (AP)—Dr. Herbert H. Parrish of Chicago, administrative director of the National Temperance movement, spoke before the United Texas Drys' 10th annual meeting today.

Dr. Parrish told the group, assembled at the Dallas First Baptist church, that "dry sentiment is rising rapidly in all portions of the nation. The people of the churches and other drys desire an agency through which they may work for sobriety and decency."

Other speakers at the meeting included Rev. R. E. Wright of Lufkin and Dr. W. R. White, pastor of the Austin First Baptist church.

To make leftover rolls palatable, sprinkle with some water and heat them in the top of a double boiler for ten minutes.

Burglar Takes Outfit To Match Cold Wave

HOUSTON, Oct. 9. (U.P)—When a norther hit Houston last night a burglar decided he'd better get dressed for the event.

So he broke into a tailor shop and carefully selected the best quality merchandise for a slender, rather tall man. He chose five overcoats, nine pairs of slacks, several winter suits, 12 shirts, two belts and a billfold.
