Saudi Arabia hikes its oil prices by $2

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — Taking what it said was a step toward OPEC pricing unity, Saudi Arabia — the oil cartel's largest producer and America's chief foreign oil supplier — raised its price from $28 to $30 a barrel. In return, OPEC militants agreed to freeze their $35 to $37 a barrel prices, until mid-December.

U.S. economists predicted the $2 a barrel Saudi increase would add less than one cent a gallon to the retail price of gasoline and heating oil in the United States.

The surprise Saudi price hike took effect immediately after it was announced Wednesday night, as the 13-nation Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries concluded an often acrimonious three-day meeting in Vienna. The new Saudi price is 125 percent above the $13.34 it was charging on Jan. 1, 1979.

Rene Ortiz, the cartel's secretary general, said the OPEC oil ministers reviewed the world market and decided that excessive stockpiling by the industrialized nations justified the increase.

"There's no hole in the world that could absorb more oil," he told reporters early today, describing the world glut caused by largely by high Saudi production.

Ortiz said the oil ministers unanimously backed the plan which at Saudi Arabia's request cuts the official OPEC benchmark price from $32 to $30 for a 42-gallon barrel. However, since OPEC militants will not be rolling back their prices, the net result is an increase of $2 a barrel by Saudi Arabia, which produces one-third of OPEC's daily output of 27 million barrels.

"Our price will remain at $35," Iranian Oil Minister Ali Akbar Moinfar told reporters early today. "It's a great victory for OPEC. We've come to some compromise. We are happy."

Iran's allies, Libya and Algeria, charge $37 a barrel for their oil, as does Nigeria.

In return for the Saudi increase, the militants pledged to freeze their prices until at least Dec. 15, the date of the next OPEC pricing session to be held in Bali, Indonesia. That blocks the price "leapfrogging" in which other OPEC members have raised prices each time the Saudis boosted theirs.

To help assure that the militants don't break their pledge, the Saudis said they will continue to produce 9.5 million barrels of oil a day, a rate that virtually guarantees a continued world market glut and makes it hard for the militants to sell oil their high priced oil.

Saudi production is about 1 million barrels a day higher than they themselves prefer. They agreed to it in July, 1979 in response to a U.S. request to offset losses caused by production decreases stemming from the Islamic revolution in Iran.

Saudi officials said their agreement to boost their price, the lowest charged by any cartel member, was intended to help unify the organization's prices and move toward another effort to adopt a long-term price and production strategy.

Some observers said the Saudi increase represented a retreat. Saudi Oil Minister Sheik Ahmed Zaki Yamani had said early Wednesday that his country would not raise its price unless the militants in the cartel lowered theirs.

Ortiz said the Saudi reversal came after Saudi officials here conferred by telephone with government leaders in Riyadh, the nation's capital.

"We believe we have to be serious," Venezuelan Energy and Mining Minister Humberto Calderon-Berti told reporters. "If we agree on prices, then maybe we can apply the long-term strategy in January. The (long-term) formula is good for the prestige of the organization."

The long-term strategy proposed by Saudi Arabia would set up OPEC's first mechanism for joint production controls to maintain what the cartel sees as adequate market supplies. It would automatically raise prices by relatively small amounts every three months to keep up with world inflation, currency fluctuations and economic growth in industrial countries.

Iran and other militants blocked agreement on the strategy in Vienna by OPEC's oil, finance and foreign ministers who debated it on Monday and Tuesday.

The militants argued for higher and faster price increases and demanded Saudi Arabia cut its production to dry up the market glut before they would discuss the long-term plan.

The 10 OPEC nations that supported the plan said it would be brought up again at an oil ministers' meeting in Baghdad, Iraq late next month. They said they hope it will be approved at a summit meeting of OPEC heads of state in Baghdad in early November.

Iranian officials huddle during the Vienna meeting of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries. They announced they would freeze their $35 to $37 a barrel crude prices until mid-December following Saudi Arabia's announcement it would hike its price from $28 to $30. The moves were seen as a step toward OPEC pricing unity. (AP Laserphoto)

UT lease sale sets bonus records

By JOE SALMAN
Oil Editor

"The oil patch in West Texas is alive and well."

So said State Land Commissioner Bob Armstrong Wednesday as cash bonuses were piling up on the way to an all-time high University of Texas lease auction.

More than 400 bidders, filling the second floor ballroom of the Midland Hilton, seemed more than eager to spend their company's money or their own money as they sent the record bonus total to $44,191,500 for 130,243.242 acres of leases in 374 tracts, almost tripling the previous record of $17,870,500 set in the same room in 1977.

Giving the sale its biggest single tract boost was Texaco Inc. E. H. Watkins, land representative for the operator, nodded his head and $3.6 million bought a 320.350-acre lease seven miles northwest of Pyote in Ward County.

The price, the highest for a single tract in the 69-year history of University of Texas lease auctions, figures out at $11,237.70 per acre. The previous single tract total was $1 million, paid in the early 1950s for an Andrews County lease by Sinclair Oil & Gas Co. That money went for a 160-acre plot.

Monsanto Co., with regional offices in Midland, was the top purchaser among the 74 successful bidders — paying $7,102,000 for 67 tracts. The company's highest bid was $510,000 for 321.15 acres in Andrews County. The per-acre price was $1,588.04.

The record price paid by Texaco,

Longer ZIPs coming

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite complaints Americans will be driven "digit dizzy," a U.S. Postal Service official says ZIP codes will be expanded to nine numbers for all the nation's 79 million addresses by the end of next year.

Michael S. Coughlin, assistant postmaster general, told a House Government Operations subcommittee that a major benefit of the longer code will be increased efficiency and "longer periods of time between rate increases."

"We hope!" was the skeptical reply of Rep. David Evans, D-Ind., who chaired the hearing into the ZIP code change.

The Postal Service plans to begin distributing new code assignments — adding four new digits to the present code — next February. Large-volume mailers are first on the list, with home addresses to be included by the end of the year.

"Z stands for Zip-posterous," declared Ray Geiger, editor of the Farmers' Almanac, who has spearheaded a nationwide campaign to zap the new ZIP. ZIP stands for Zone Improvement Program.

"What you're telling us is to zap the nine-digit code to keep us from getting digit dizzy," said Rep. Richardson Preyer, D-N.C.

Geiger, in his blast against the expanded ZIP codes, also said that if any of the complicated computers needed to read the longer code ever broke down, mail would be sent flying pell-mell across the country.

Geiger said the firm that publishes the Farmers' Almanac, which has a circulation of 6 million copies in the United States and Canada, also has mailing lists for other products.

Hospital trustees suggest writing off $105,000

By SUE FAHLGREN
Staff Writer

The Midland Memorial Hospital board of trustees recommended approval of a $105,042 special write-off package of 475 bad debt accounts Wednesday at its regular monthly meeting.

The package was the second for the hospital in as many months used to purge the financial backlog at the hospital. The accounts to be written off are accounts with "no payment action" for 150 days or more.

The finance committee for the trustees recommended the write-off in conjunction with last month's write- off package of $333,000. The accounts, which are forwarded to the hospital's collection agency, are mostly small amounts, according to finance committee spokesman Doug Scharbauer.

"We feel the writing off of this amount — this $105,042.99 — would get us pretty current on these accounts," Scharbauer said.

Previously, the hospital had been behind almost three months in its regular billing procedures. Part of the delay for the new bills going out to former patients, the finance committee had explained, was because the hospital billing agents were spending so much time with old accounts. The writing off of some of these old accounts would help get the billing system up to date, committee spokesmen said.

"This process used to be done at year end....We've just moved it up a little," Scharbauer explained to the board.

"We might still collect on these," he added. "There will still be collection agents trying to collect on these."

In addition to the special write-off, the monthly bad debt and indigent care write-offs amounted to $76,977. Of that total, $61,098 went to 242 bad debt accounts and $15,878 went to 16 indigent accounts.

Permian Airways closes to work out expansion

By SUE FAHLGREN
Staff Writer

Permian Airways president Chuck Ceppi said today the airline's indefinite shutdown Wednesday was done to give the company's board of directors time to find additional funds for an expansion of the airlines — and not because of any other financial problems.

"We got to the point where our business was requiring more seat availability than our planes had," Ceppi said.

The Midland-based commuter airline laid off some 41 employees Wednesday and shut down flights of four aircrafts indefinitely until investors could be found for an expansion of the airlines.

Simply, Ceppi said of the planes, "We had outgrown them."

Ceppi said one small aircraft that the airline is currently using costs about $350,000. The company, he said, wants to obtain two new planes — costing about $1,300,000 each — immediately and two more by next year to update and continue the airline's service. This would bring the total cost near $5 million, he said.

"It was a decision of the board of directors to find alternate sources of finances for the continuation of the growth of the company," Ceppi said.

Permian currently flies some 558 commuter flights a month between Midland, San Angelo, Lubbock, Amarillo, San Antonio and Carlsbad, N.M.

It is the only airline in West Texas offering service to San Angelo and Amarillom, Ceppi said.

The shutdown is causing the airlines to lose $5,800 a day in average revenue from its passengers. But, Ceppi said the move was a necessary one.

"It was a very, very difficult deci-

Cotton prices soar

By the Associated Press

A blistering hot and bone dry Texas summer coupled with the laws of supply and demand have pushed the price of cotton skyward.

Cotton futures almost hit the dollar-per-pound mark last week and economists and merchants credit the dramatic price increase to the weather.

Tuesday's average price of 92.29 cents for the nine major Texas markets is "the highest price anyone can remember," said Texas Agriculture Commissioner Reagan Brown.

Brown said economists have predicted the futures market will soon reach $1 per pound with even further increases ahead.

The dry Texas summer with its record-breaking heat killed many of the cotton plants before they could grow.

Part five: The business of government resumed

By MERLE MILLER

It was politics that drew John F. Kennedy to Texas in November 1963 — an ideological feud involving the supporters of Lyndon Johnson, his protege Gov. John Connally, and Sen. Ralph Yarborough.

George Reedy, a former White House press secretary: "The conservative forces in Texas were definitely on the rise, and all the indications were that the administration was heading into real trouble in that state. It was strongly felt by the Kennedy people that he had to make an appearance in the state in order to recapture lost ground...it was a question of popular feeling."

A lot of people thought it was not a good idea for Kennedy himself to go. Kennedy laughed off the warning signs, and Air Force One landed in San Antonio, the first stop, on November 21. The president and Jackie were greeted warmly. She was especially pleased; it was her first political trip since the primaries in 1960.

Kenneth O'Donnell, Kennedy's political right hand: "We landed in Dallas with everybody on the plane in love with each other. When we were riding through Dallas on our way from the airport to the Trade Mart luncheon, I said to Dave Powers, 'There's certainly nothing wrong with this crowd.' "

Rufus Youngblood, the Secret Service agent guarding Lyndon Johnson that day: "Suddenly, there was an explosive noise — distinct, sharp, resounding. Nothing that could be mistaken for the incessant backfiring of the motorcycles, but in the instant I heard it I could not be certain if it had been a firecracker, bullet, bomb or some other explosive device. I looked around quickly and saw nothing to indicate its source.

"But the movements in the president's car were not normal. Kennedy seemed to be falling to his left, and there was a sudden movement among the agents in the car directly ahead of us. I turned instinctively in my seat and, with my left hand, I grasped Lyndon Johnson's right shoulder and with all the leverage I could exert from a sitting position I forced him downward. 'Get down! Get down!' "

OVER THE RADIO crackled an urgent message. "Halfback (the code name for the presidential follow-up car). Halfback to Lawson. The president's been hit. Get us to the hospital, fast but safe!"

Lyndon: "They just almost shoved us into the hospital, into the first room that they'd come to down the corridor. They pulled all the shades in the room, closed the door, and we sat there and endured the agony and waited for reports that came in from time to time."

Jack Bell of the Associated Press: "We pulled into the ambulance entrance and we all boiled out of the car to see what happened. Gov. Connally was helped out of the car. His shirt was red in front with blood. I ran up to the White House limousine.... There the president was lying on his back in the back seat, and there was pools of blood — and inch of blood maybe — over the floor of the car. There were some twisted roses lying in it. I turned to the Secret Service man who was standing as a sort of sentinel there, and I said, 'That is the president, isn't it?' He said, 'Yes.' I said, 'Is he dead?' He said, 'I don't think so, but I don't know.' "

At 1:10 p.m., a Secret Service agent entered the room where Lyndon and Lady Bird were waiting and told the vice president that they should begin planning to return to Washington immediately. Johnson said that that was a decision the Secret Service should make only with the approval of Kenneth O'Donnell.

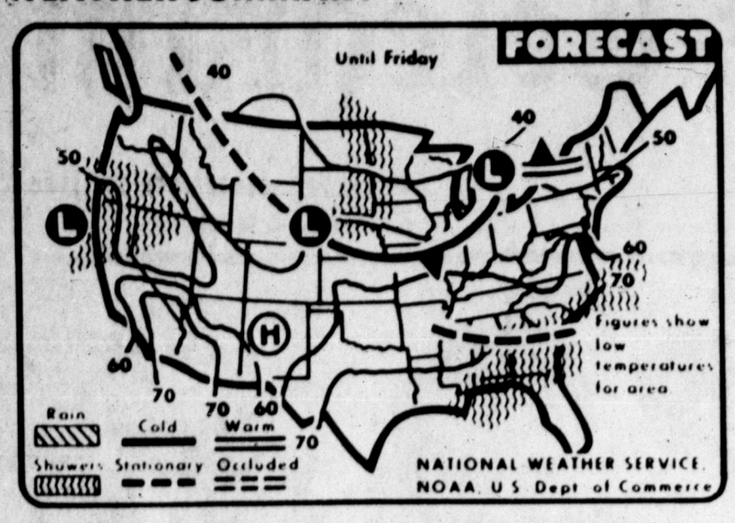

At 1:20 p.m., the agent, Emory Roberts, returned — to tell Johnson that Kennedy was gone.

LATER JOHNSON RECALLED: "I asked that the announcement be made after we had left the room and were in an unmarked car en route to the presidential plane, so that if it were an international conspiracy and they were out to destroy our form of government and the leaders in that government that we should minimize the opportunity for doing so.

"I think the first thought I had was

Candidates may have new motto

They want to 'Be Prepared!' for debate

By The Associated Press

"Be Prepared!" may be the motto of the major presidential candidates as well as the Boy Scouts.

Republican nominee Ronald Reagan and independent candidate John B. Anderson dropped off the campaign trail Wednesday to ready for their nationally televised debate Sunday.

And President Carter, who has refused to take part in that debate, was at the White House and said to be preparing for his news conference late this afternoon — which was also to be before the television cameras.

On Wednesday, Reagan — who has been trying to make the president's refusal to debate a major issue — personally called on Carter to change his mind and take part in the debate in Baltimore sponsored by the League of Women Voters.

"If (Carter) does not debate he will be telling the American people that he will not — that he cannot — defend his record," Reagan said. "And if he cannot defend his record, I believe that the American people on Nov. 4 will tell him that they cannot defend his record either."

Meanwhile, the League of Women Voters announced Wednesday it had decided not to place an empty chair on the stage during the debate as had been considered to dramatize Carter's absence.

"We do not intend to let the 'empty chair' controversy overshadow the opportunity of the American people to focus on the candidates' discussion of the issues," said Ruth Hinerfeld, the league's national president.

Related stories, Page 12A

She said league officials "deeply regret" the president's decision not to attend and added that the invitation remains open to him.

As for Anderson, he gained two court victories Wednesday that seem to insure he will be on the general election ballots in Maryland and Maine.

The 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Richmond, Va., upheld a U.S. District Court decision invalidating Maryland's March 3 deadline for filing as a candidate. It concluded the early filing deadline did not further "state interests in any respect."

Maryland's attorney general, Stephen H. Sachs, said he did not intend to appeal but might change his mind depending on the outcome of a case involving Ohio now before the U.S. Supreme Court.

In Boston, the 1st Circuit Court of Appeals in Boston upheld a decision by U.S. District Judge Edward T. Gignoux, who ruled that Anderson was entitled to be on Maine's ballot because the state's filing deadline of April 1 discriminated against independent candidates.

A spokesman for Maine's attorney general had no comment on the appellate court ruling.

While President Carter was not campaigning Wednesday, his chief spokesman released what he said was a forged federal memo that seemed designed to hurt the president. The purported National Security Council document recommended the CIA launch "clandestine operations to create divisiveness between American blacks and African nationalists.

White House spokesman Jody Powell said he had "no basis on which to know who is responsible," but he suggested the forged memo might have been the work of hostile foreign intelligence agency or a domestic political group.

In noting that the document might be related to "the domestic political situation," Powell did not specifically mention any of Carter's political rivals.

The release of the document came the day after Carter suggested in Atlanta that Reagan was stirring racial hatred through his mention of states' rights and the Ku Klux Klan.

Reagan used the phrases in speeches more than two weeks ago, and Republican vice presidential candidate George Bush on Wednesday accused Carter of taking the "low road" in trying to portray Reagan as a racist.

Both the president and Reagan are battling to secure votes in the South, Carter's native region and a major factor in his election victory in 1976, and the black vote could be important in the efforts of the two candidates.

which incidentally was the only lease the company bought, was for a tract near the Poquito multipay field and the War-Wink, South (Wolfcamp) field. The operator recently completed a 1,014-barrel-per day Wolfcamp producer 3/4 mile east of the record-setting tract.

Dr. Sterling Fly Jr., a member of the Board for Lease of University Lands, said, as the sale was nearing its end Wednesday that "moving the sale to Midland from Austin in 1977 was the smartest thing the state ever did. I wish I could claim credit for it."

Armstrong, who was all smiles as the money for The University of Texas System's permanent fund kept piling up, agreed with Fly that the move was a "smart one."

He announced at the end of the sale that the Board for Lease would conduct its next auction here in February 1981, with cut-off date for nominations Nov. 10.

Blake Moore of Paris, veteran auctioneer, said "this is the first time in the 18 years that I have been auctioning off University of Texas leases that every tract offered was sold.

Commission records show that it is the first time in history that all leases were sold.

That is only one of the records set by the sale. Others include: highest per-acre price paid, $11,237.70; highest total sale, $44,191,500; most tracts purchased by one operator, 67 by Monsanto; most number of successful bidders, 74; longest auction, from 10 a.m. to 7:30 p.m; and highest single tract purchase, $3.6 million.

Board for Lease member James L. Powell, and UT Board of Regents chairman Dan C. Williams were on hand throughout most of Wednesday's sale.

sion to make," he said, "but it was very necessary."

In essence, Ceppi said, "the company needs money to continue its growth and it is presently reorganizing its financial situation."

He said the airline industry was a "very capital-intensive" one and that "the company cannot afford the intense cost of growth."

The company's board of directors met Wednesday to discuss potential investors. Ceppi said the privately owned company would be seeking private funds in this venture.

Until Permian resumes its flights, commuter flights to cities like Amarillo and Lubbock are going through Dallas via Southwest or Braniff airlines.

Lois Regan of Travel Time travel agency said that the agency was not having too much problem rescheduling its passengers.

"There has been a little inconvenience for our customers, but price-wise, there's not that much difference," Ms. Regan said, adding that Permian's prices were a little higher than most. She said the agency was rescheduling flights with Southwest and Braniff. The only other problem for the passengers, then, she said was "that connection where they would just be flying straight through."

A spokesperson from Adventure Travel said that agency was not having problems rescheduling Permian passengers on other flights, but said the agency did previously have problems with passengers already scheduled to fly Permian.

"We have not had any problem scheduling the passengers," the spokesperson said. "But, we have had people who arrive at the airport and find they do not have a seat." In other words, Permian "would have overbooked them."

But, the spokesperson added, "overbooking is a common practice in the airline industry."

Ceppi said the passengers that would have the most difficult time during the shutdown would be those from San Angelo and from Carlsbad, N.M., where airline service is limited.

"The cities that are hurting are Carlsbad and San Angelo," he said. Carlsbad residents must fly through Albuquerque for adjoining flights to Texas and San Angeloans must go through Dallas to get anywhere.

"They have a saying," Ceppi said of the problem, " 'On your way to hell from San Angelo, you have to go through Dallas.' "

Ceppi explained Permian "had no competition on our routes."

The 17-month-old airlines made "drastic changes in June," Ceppi said, to increase services. Now, he said, the company, which he considers to be only three months old, is undergoing more changes.

"The airline has made tremendous strides forward," he said, "and we have done what we need to do."

Ceppi said he had no idea when the airline service would resume.

about the new policies to be set up for bad debt accounts, Scharbauer said no definite policy was ready to be discussed.

"We are looking into some very stringent policies for controlling...our bad debts," he said. "We don't like to look at that figure each month just like I'm sure you don't," he told board members. But, he added, "we haven't formulated them (the new policies) exactly yet, but we do have some good ideas."

The finance committee also asked for a transfer of $130,000 from the general fund for operations in September. Scharbauer said the new amount would bring the total figure of transferred funds to $480,000 for the year, compared to a budget for transfers of $756,000. He further explained approximately $400,000 of that total was used to pay for indigent care patients.

In other board news, the trustees heard progress reports from the data processing department and the medical records department on their implementation of the Tribrook management study suggestions.

Further, the board members approved a recommendation for additional insurance coverage, following a report from insurance consultant firm Wyatt and Co. The increased coverage is an additional amount on the liability insurance on members of the board of directors, board of trustees, board of governors and the hospital administration. The increase was from a total coverage of $1 million to top coverage of $5 million. The cost of the insurance increased from a three-year coverage cost of $700,100 to a three-year cost of $705,700.

The board also heard a report on the progress of the certificates of need for the hospital's six proposed improvement areas: the new physical therapy room; the new linen storage room, the new medical records room, the new doctors' conference room, the expanded laboratory and the conversion of the CT scan to a body scan.

The board of directors was to meet today at 2 p.m. to give final approval on the trustees' recommendation.

EPA gives automakers some regulatory changes

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Environmental Protection Agency, trying to balance President Carter's desire to help the slumping auto industry with the agency's mission to protect air quality, has given automakers some but not all of the regulatory changes they sought.

The EPA scrapped two regulations outright and delayed the implementation of three other exhaust standards for one year. But in three areas, the agency rejected automaker requests for relaxing air standards.

In completing the initial review, EPA officials said Wednesday the approved changes would save automakers more than $600 million through 1982 at a time when the industry is expected "to experience the most significant cash flow problems."

EPA Administrator Douglas Costle conceded that the changes would result "in some air quality penalty," but he maintained that they did not "represent any compromise of our fundamental goals."

On a July 8 visit to Detroit, Carter unveiled the administration's economic aid plan to help U.S. automakers, who may lose as much as $8 billion this year, partly because of increased competition from foreign cars.

As part of the aid plan, Carter directed the EPA to relax air regulations when doing so would not sacrifice "public health, safety and the environment."

The EPA announced immediately it was abandoning a rule that would have required all 1984 model cars to meet emission standards at high altitudes, at a cost of $500 million.

The EPA also said it was dropping a requirement that 1982 models meet exhaust standards at all possible idle-speed settings of the carburetor. One estimate said that would have cost $250 million to $350 million annually.

The changes announced Wednesday will have a smaller impact since they dealt only with small and heavy trucks. The EPA put off from 1983 to the 1984 model year a requirement that light-duty trucks meet tougher hydrocarbon and carbon monoxide emission standards. The EPA also delayed from 1983 to 1984 implementing an evaporative hydrocarbon standard for heavy-duty trucks.

The three delays will save the auto industry $91 million in capital costs through 1982, the EPA said.

Costle refused to raise the national limits for ozone in the atmosphere. He also turned down automaker suggestions to relax the 1984 exhaust-emission standards for trucks and liberalize the 1985 standard for the number of small particles diesel car exhausts can emit.

"Many urban areas still have significant public health problems related to excessive levels of motor vehicle air pollutants," Costle said. "I have had to very carefully select areas of regulatory change which will not undermine the significant improvements that are needed in the next several years."

Appaloosa club to host playday

The West Texas Appaloosa Horse Club is holding the second playday of its circuit for year-end high point Saturday at 5 p.m. at the 4-H Arena, behind the Midland County Exhibit Building.

Club membership is not required for participation. The competition is open to all breeds. The entry fee is $2 per class with four age groups — 9 and under, 13 and under, 14 to 18 and open — being offered. The six points and six horse system will be used. A rider may enter only once per class and age group. No chaps, jackets or romals are required.

Following the regular classes there will be a dash for cash. The race will be a Figure 8 pattern starting and ending in the center. Entry fee is $5. First place will earn half the total with the club keeping the other half.

The remaining playdays are scheduled for Oct. 4 and 18. For more information call 683-8842

Warming trend, clear skies should continue for area

Skies will remain clear over Midland and most of the Permian Basin through Friday and the area should experience a warming trend.

Forecasters at the National Weather Service office at Midland Regional Airport predict the low tonight will drop into the middle 60s and the high on Friday will reach the middle 90s.

Winds tonight will be light and variable, but they should become southerly and blow at 10-15 mph on Friday.

Wednesday's high only reached 83 degrees, much cooler than the record high for that date of 98 degrees set three years ago. Low this morning was 60. Record low for today's date is 47 degrees set in 1971.

Around the Permian Basin this morning, communities were reporting generally fair skies and cool temperatures.

Clear skies and warming temperatures dominated the Texas weather scene today.

Forecasts called for clear skies and warmer temperatures statewide.

Highs were to be mostly in the 80s and 90s although readings alon the Rio Grande were expected to reach the 100-degree mark.

Man, struck with baseball bat, now in critical condition

A Midland man was in critical condition this morning in Midland Memorial Hospital after being struck with a baseball bat Wednesday night. A neurosurgeon was called, and Patrick Herbert Armstrong, 4005 Anetta Drive, underwent emergency surgery Wednesday night.

According to police, the assault apparently was the result of an argument at 4001 Anetta. Armstrong reportedly was struck first in the left side and then on the head.

A motorcycle accident Wednesday night resulted in minor injuries to the rider. According to reports, Rowland Albert Turney, 2410 W. Illinois Ave., and Jeffery Glenn Harris, 3200 W. Illinois, collided in the 2400 block of W. Ohio at 8:30 p.m. According to reports, Harris drove himself home on the motorcycle.

Three people were injured in a two-car collision shortly before 10 a.m. Wednesday. John Keaton Grubbs, 3301 Fannin St., and Lasalle Scurlock Jr., 1210 E. Cottonwood Ave., collided at the intersection of C Street and Illinois Avenue. Injured were two passengers in Grubbs' vehicle. Lottie Mae Grubbs, 54, and Loetta Northcutt, 52, were treated at Midland Memorial Hospital emergency room and released. Also injured was Scurlock, who was also treated and released.

A 7:30 a.m. accident Wednesday sent two people to Midland Memorial emergency room.

Bobby Gene Marsh, 1900 Morgan Way, was southbound on Front Street, exiting a private drive. Virginia Sue Reynolds, Route 2 Box 208, Space 29, was westbound on Front. The two vehicles collided in the 1300 block of East Front. Ms. Reynolds and her passenger, Brenda Sexson, were treated and released from the hospital.

Firemen were called to Midland Memorial Hospital twice Wednesday for trash fires.

The first was at 3:26 p.m. On their arrival, firemen found trash burning in a trash compactor.

Then at 4:10 p.m., they returned to Midland Memorial, where they discovered the trash was again smoldering.

The majority of the remaining calls by the Midland Fire Department were calls for ambulances. Five people were transported by CFD ambulance since 1 p.m. Wednesday.

Decision on legislative 'rider' on housing program uncertain

Although the Senate began deliberation Wednesday on legislation that could make or break Midland County's mortgage financing program, Program Vice Chairman Don Hellinghausen said that, as of this morning, he had not heard anything on the fate of the "rider."

The Midland County Housing Finance Corp. is a program to help single-family households get into houses by providing low-interest bond money. Maximum income for a household applying for a loan will be $40,000 per year — not $45,000 as previously reported. And 25 percent of the bond issue will be reserved for those low-income families who earn $20,000 or less in a year.

So far, the bond program's underwriters have placed or sold $19.3 million of the $40 million in bonds.

Interest rates for the program would be from 10¼ to 10¾ percent, slightly higher than the 9¼ percent offered in a similar city program in December 1979.

But the program is under the shadow of proposed legislation that would prevent the program's tax-exempt status, thus killing the program. U.S. Rep. Al Ullman of Oregon authored the rider that would prevent the tax-exemption.

"We have been advised that this thing will not fly" if the bonds don't get a tax-exempt status, Durward Wright, a member of the Housing Finance Corp., said last Friday in a news conference.

Hellinghausen said Texas' congressmen and senators are "in touch" with the budget committee and are hoping to "kill the rider."

Should those congressmen and senators be successful, would-be homeowners in Midland County will begin lining up at 8 a.m. Oct. 9 at Chaparral Center to apply for the home mortgage loans.

No link seen between Texas, Shreveport rapes

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) — Investigators trailing a man who has raped at least 16 West Texas women say there is nothing to link cases here to similar brutal attacks in Shreveport, La.

Two Shreveport investigators, armed with stacks of reports on the local assaults, flew here this week to compare notes with officers pursuing the "Traveling Rapist."

But after two days of discussions, investigators from both states decided there was no connection, said Hal Hensley of the Lubbock District Attorney's office.

Fracas focuses attention on law

By KAY CRITES
Staff Writer

As a result of a fracas at Lee High School Youth Center Sept. 5, an old law with a few new twists has been brought to the attention of local law enforcement agencies. And, during a press conference with Sheriff Dallas Smith, Police Chief Wayne Gideon and school officials this morning, Smith and Gideon promised strict enforcement of this newly changed state statute.

As of early 1979, it was only illegal to possess alcoholic beverages on school grounds when an athletic event was under way. However, as of late 1979, that law was changed.

It is now illegal to possess alcoholic beverages anywhere on school grounds at any time of day or night. Consumption isn't even required. As Gideon said, "Merely possession is enough now."

Those arrested under the new statute will be arrested and "will be transported to the courthouse and faced with making bond or, depending on the time of day or evening, entering a plea of one sort or another. The court will then set a fine. It's not like a speeding ticket." The statute is a Class C misdemeanor carrying a maximum penalty of a $200 fine.

School officials notified law enforcement officials of the new statute. Until it was brought to their attention, neither Smith nor Gideon were aware of the changes, since the statute is part of the educational code.

"The schools felt we should all move into an area where we enforce this statute more rigidly and therefore we have decided to do so," Smith said.

"Basically what we're trying to point out is that the statute has been changed to include an area that it did not include before. A situation we see quite often is several vehicles and groups gathered together (drinking). This will have to be discontinued. They are subject to arrest and, simply, when the officers see this, they will enforce the statute."

Also present at the press conference this morning were Midland High Principal Jack Stone, Lee High Principal Joe Smith and Bill Worley, president of both high school youth centers.

"I would like to say," said Joe Smith, "our school board and our superintendent have made it perfectly clear to the building administrators they want us cracking down on the use of alcoholic beverages and drugs on our campuses. We have that mandate and we solicited the help of the police department and the sheriff's office to enforce it."

Joe Smith added that,under Midland Independent School District codes, at a school-sponsored event, first offenses of this law will result in a suspension of five days; second offenses, 10 days; and subsequent offenses, possible dismissal from school.

"Before, it had been a lax situation that they were asked to go home, and that didn't work, so...in the summer this policy was set up."

"A common situation," said Sheriff Smith, "is one pickup with three or four people in it. They will say it wasn't mine and I wasn't drinking. A good policy if you are not involved or not drinking is that if you're not there, you don't have to explain anything."

China's 'Gang of Four' going on trial Friday

PEKING (AP) — Mao Tse-tung's widow and the other members of China's infamous Gang of Four will go on trial Friday before the supreme court on charges of trying to usurp state power, diplomatic sources said.

Chinese authorities did not confirm the date. But they have said the trial will begin soon, be closed, that there will be no announcement until after a verdict is reached, and that the four will not be sentenced to death.

The trial is expected to be politically explosive. Some of the defendants are expected to name names, possibly accuse Mao himself and set the stage for the ultimate downgrading of the late Communist Party chairman.

The four were arrested Oct. 22, 1976, three weeks after Mao's death and have been imprisoned since that time.

Besides Mao's widow, Jiang Qing, who has been dubbed the ringleader, the Gang includes former Politburo members Zhang Chungqiao, Yao Wen Yuan, and Wang Hungwen.

The four have been accused of responsibility for the worst excesses of the 1966-76 Cultural Revolution in which thousands were persecuted and died.

In a famous cartoon by their critics they were depicted smashing a classroom apart and shouting slogans such as:

"We'd rather have ignorant workers than educated exploiters. So much for knowledge-above-all-else. We'd rather have the weeds of socialism than the seeds of capitalism."

Today their philosophy is condemned by Chinese leaders who praise higher education, higher living standards, high production and above all, stability and unity.

Currently they have no followers as such, although the Chinese press still denounces what it calls their lingering ultra-leftist line and those who would put politics before modernization.

Deng Xiaoping, mainspring of the modernization drive and current party vice chairman, was purged by the gang which claimed to be carrying out the orders of Mao himself, who was ailing.

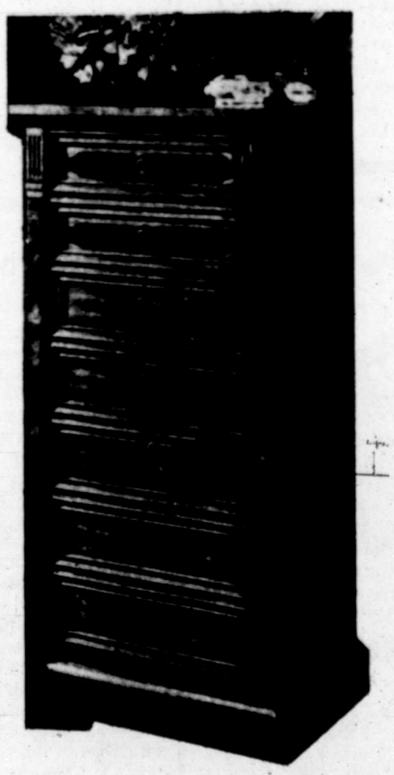

Earlier this month Deng said of Mao's widow: "She is a very, very evil woman. She is so evil that any evil thing you say about her isn't evil enough." Asked to rate her wickedness, Deng replied, "She is a thousand times a thousand below zero."

At last, progress

It's probably difficult for many Americans to accept the fact that the Majlis, the Iranian parliament, actually is preparing to take a constructive step forward in the hostage crisis. But that apparently is what's happening.

In fact, on Tuesday the Majlis, torn by arguments over an open or closed debate concerning the hostages, delayed a full-scale debate and instead set up a special committee to deal with the fate of the hostages.

Obviously, the Iranian people and the parliament members still are divided on ways of resolving the hostage issue. Some members of the Majlis contended a closed debate on the hostages is essential while others maintained that an open session is necessary.

The parliament finally voted against the closed-door idea.

We're extremely pleased that now, after more than 10 months, something finally is being done in respect to the hostages. But now our other fears are beginning to surface just like we knew they would.

The Iranians still claim that some of the 52 Americans they took hostage when they seized the American embassy in Tehran last Nov. 4 were functioning as spies. That allegation has been denied by the United States government.

The repercussions threatened will not be pleasant if the Americans are convicted of spying. Members of the Majlis have said those found guilty of spying will be executed. The others will be released "on conditions," according to some Iranians.

While these threats sound ominous, during the past year we've witnessed the way in which Iran's leaders flip-flop on various issues. They change their minds, they change the rules and they lie outright.

But even the mounting pressures brought on in light of the prospective debate on the hostages is sweet relief from the frustrations of the past months. At least all of us here in the United States see the slim hope of a resolution to this problem.

Of course we all know that a solution likely will not be fast in coming. There are too many Iranian demands, too many American objections, too many potential snags to ensnarl negotiations.

At least the process appears to have begun. Now we must wait and watch and pray some more.

THE BIBLE
CAN YOU QUOTE IT?

1. Nazareth, the small town in the north border of the plain of Esdraelon, is not mentioned in the O.T. nor in the writings of Josephus. Here Jesus spent the obscure years of his boyhood. ART BUCHWALD

Art Buchwald

WASHINGTON — In the last few months everyone is taking a new look at Polish jokes.

"How many Poles does it take to make a government fall in Warsaw?"

"How many Poles does it take to drive the Kremlin up the wall?"

"One, if he's asking for secret union elections."

"How do you know when a Polish coal miner is mad?"

"When, despite all his perks, he tells the Communist Party to go to hell."

"When was the last time a Polish worker ate meat?"

"Two weeks before he went out on strike and closed down the shipyards."

"What does a Pole say to a deputy premier when the premier tells him he has to work longer hours for less pay?"

"You're fired."

"What does a Pole carry in his lunch pail?"

"Secret pamphlets telling his working comrades what is really going on in the country."

"How does a Pole keep the Russians from invading the country?"

"By not taking any money from the CIA."

"How long does it take a Pole to make an omelet?"

"Twenty minutes to make it, and four hours to stand in line to buy the eggs."

"What does a Polish worker do to show he believes in the Communist system?"

"He goes to Mass every day."

"How many Poles does it take to screw in a light bulb?"

"None, if their strike leaders tell them to shut off the electricity."

"What does the Party manager of a Polish factory do when his workers decide to sit in?"

"He gets out of the place as fast as he can."

"What does a Pole say to his wife at night?"

"If I'm not home by six tomorrow evening, you'll know the strike is on."

"What does a Polish wife say to her husband at night?"

"It's about time. You can throw your dirty clothes over the fence."

"How many Poles does it take to repair a motorcycle?"

"None, because they can't get the spare parts to repair anything."

"What does a Polish government official say when a Soviet official complains he is not happy with what is going on in Poland?"

"Sue me."

"How do you get a Pole to work?"

"By granting amnesty to all strikers who have been arrested, guaranteeing more freedom in the press, giving him a pay raise and promising to get off his back."

"What does an East German worker say to a Pole when he meets him in a bar?"

"The drinks are on us. Now tell us how you did it."

I know these new jokes aren't boffos, but we can take comfort in the fact that they're even less funny to the people who used to tell Polish jokes in the Soviet Union.

Non-military weapons could prove effective

By PHYLLIS SCHLAFLY
Copley News Service

Henry Kissinger's policy of "linkage" with the Soviet Union is dead, and the sooner we bury its carcass and plant new flowers over its grave, the better off our nation will be.

No safe or enduring foreign policy can be built on an illusion which has been proven false by reality.

Henry's linkage theory asserted that economic interdependence between the United States and the USSR would convince the Kremlin bosses that cooperation is more to their self-interest than confrontation or aggression. The Kremlin took the fruits of linkage — U.S. high technology, credits and trade — and moved into Afghanistan.

In addition to the essential shoring up of our military strength which is our first priority, our government must learn how to use the powerful non-military weapons which America has available. In the game of international power and influence, they can be immensely valuable.

First, we must stop the Western contribution to the Soviet military-industrial complex through high-technology transfers and trade.

The respected foreign policy columnist Arnaud de Borchgrave recently quoted a European Common Market high commission as saying this is "such an explosive subject that it has almost become taboo to talk about it."

But this issue must be faced. The U.S. unilateral high-technology embargo contains many loopholes and inconsistencies, and our leadership has been so uncertain that other Western nations apparently feel no need to join any embargo.

A Western technology and trade embargo would deal a crippling blow to Soviet weapons and industrial production and productivity.

A second non-military weapon would be to deny further low-cost credits to the Soviet bloc. This would exacerbate its hard-currency shortage and greatly reduce what the Soviets can buy from the West.

Another highly taboo subject, especially in New York banking circles, is the estimated $60 billion which the Soviet bloc now owes the West, and the fact that much of that incredible debt was created on highly favorable, low-interest terms which are not available to American business borrowers.

It is frequently argued that we can't afford to tighten up on lending terms to the Soviet bloc because those governments will simply default on their outstanding loans.

That is, indeed, a possibility because they provided no collateral, and Western banks cannot force collections.

A third non-military weapon is to expand our espionage, pass stronger anti-espionage laws, expel all the KGB operatives we can find, and limit the number of Soviet bloc personnel with diplomatic passports. The Soviets use their embassies and consulates for political warfare, espionage and propaganda, and we should expose what they are doing.

At the very least, we should limit the Soviet bloc embassies and consulates to the same number of people as U.S. diplomatic personnel stationed in their countries. This would substantially cut the number of KBG operatives in our own country.

During the last year, Canada, Japan, France, New Zealand and Sweden have all expelled Soviet spies operating under diplomatic cover. A higher rate of expulsions would not only hamper their espionage, but would encourage more defections, a very tender and exploitable Achilles' heel of the Soviet bloc.

A fourth non-military weapon is to beef up the Pablum currently propagated by the Voice of America, Radio Free Europe and Radio Liberty, and use those stations to air hard-hitting anti-Communist reports which would exploit weaknesses in the Soviet system such as their treatment of Jews, Christians, Moslems, intellectuals and dissidents. U.S. radio stations should tell, not conceal, the truth about the Communist system.

A fifth non-military weapon is to use the propaganda forum afforded by the United Nations to support freedom, free enterprise and Western values. The United Nations isn't good for anything else. We might as well make motions, introduce resolutions, and sound off with Western ideas, instead of always only reacting to Communist bloc ploys.

American women on threshold of political breakthrough

By CLAYTON FRITCHEY
(c) 1980, Newsday

WASHINGTON — Despite the momentous changes in Chinese leadership emerging from the historic Communist Party congress in Peking, one thing remains the same: the exclusion of women from the hierarchy of the ruling Politburo.

The Chinese leaders, with some justification, like to talk about the emancipation of women, but by and large it amounts to granting women the privilege of working as hard or harder than men, yet denying them significant political recognition or reward.

Since the Peoples Republic was established more than 30 years ago, only three women have attained Politburo status, and then only because they were married to the most powerful leaders of the Chinese revolution: Mao Tse-tung, Lin Piao and Chou En-lai. The widow of Chou, now 77, is currently the only woman in the Politburo, but hers is merely a minor role. Mao's widow, of course, is presently awaiting trial as one of the "Gang of Four."

In the Soviet Union, the record is even worse. Its 14-member Politburo is exclusively male, as it nearly always has been. And no women have figured in the new Polish shake-up, following labor strikes there, on in the new Yugoslavian lineup following the death of Tito.

In both communist and non-communist countries, women have begun to make a dent at the lower and intermediate levels of government, but few are at the top except in Britain and India, where Margaret Thatcher and Indira Gandhi are the prime ministers. Even they, however, have not appointed other women to key posts in their administrations.

The United States is in no position to brag about its own record. Not only has no woman been president or vice president, but none has ever held any of the offices in the line of succession: Speaker of the House, president pro tem of the Senate, secretary of state, secretary of the treasury, secretary of defense, attorney general.

A decade ago, Richard Nixon predicted there would be a woman U.S. president in the next 50 years, and he added: "A woman can and should be able to do any political job that a man can do." Nevertheless, he never appointed a woman to the Cabinet or Supreme Court or to any other post that might lead to the White House.

Long before the 1980 primaries, Rosalynn Carter said she believed it was "just a matter of time" before the United States had a woman president. Still, neither the Democrats nor the Republicans showed any serious interest this year in nominating a woman for even second place on the presidential tickets.

At the recent United Nations World Conference on Women at Copenhagen, Grethe Moller, a member of the Danish parliament, noted that a female politician cannot make a mistake without embarrassing all other women.

"Khruschev," she said, "and other men can go into the U.N. and behave in all sorts of ways, taking off their shoes and things, but if women show any emotion in political life, they're having their period or they're having their menopause."

She was not exaggerating. Only a few years ago, Dr. Edgar Berman, a close adviser to the late Sen. Hubert Humphrey and a member of the Democratic Party's Committee on National Priorities, clashed with Rep. Patsy Mink of Hawaii over her plea for the Democrats to give "the cause of women's rights the highest priority it deserves."

Dr. Berman insisted that physical factors — particularly the menstrual cycle and menopause — disqualified women from key executive jobs. "If you had an investment in a bank," the good doctor said to Mrs. Mink, "you wouldn't want the president of your bank making a loan under these raging hormonal influences at that particular period." And he wasn't joking. At the Copenhagen conference the delegates were asked, "If you were the prime minister of your country, what would you do to change things?" The Third World women replied with one voice: Wipe out illiteracy among women.

Most developed countries, however, have already gone well beyond that. In the United States, the Census Bureau reports, more women than men are enrolled in American colleges. Perhaps even more importantly, women voters now outnumber men, and they also hold down almost as many jobs.

The combination of these potent factors suggests that American women are on the verge of an irresistible political breakthrough. Many party leaders think this will show up in the next Congress. For the last 20 years, the number of women in Congress has never exceeded 20, but the present betting is that this barrier will at last be broken after the Nov. 4 election.

A new crop of women, springing up from local and state victories of the 1970s, are aspiring for national public office in 1980. "The caliber of women running this year is light-years ahead of previous years," says the director of the National Women's Educational Fund. "There is now a career ladder in politics for women that flows up from the states."

Billy's telephone records released

Conversations with Libyan leaders revealed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Almost immediately after learning last spring that White House officials knew of his planned Libyan oil deal, Billy Carter began placing telephone calls to an oil consultant and Libyan officials, telephone records obtained by Senate investigators indicate.

The records were released at a special Senate subcommittee hearing Wednesday at which White House national security adviser Zbigniew Brzezinski hotly denied trying to cut Billy Carter's Libyan connection to keep it from damaging President Carter's re-election chances.

The panel has scheduled no further hearings in its investigation of Billy Carter's activities and his refusal to register as a foreign agent until Justice Department investigators learned he had received $220,000 from the radical Arab government.

The telephone records — of calls believed to have been made by Billy Carter and others connected with the affair — show calls to New York oil consultant Jack McGregor and the Libyan Embassy in Washington were made last April 1 and 2.

On April 1, Brzezinski warned Billy Carter that Libya might exploit the deal to damage U.S. foreign policy and embarrass the president.

The president's brother testified earlier that he assumed Brzezinski's call meant his telephone had been bugged, but he denied he told Libyans about the conversation or his suspicion.

Philip W. Tone, special counsel to the subcommittee, said his investigators are tracing the calls to determine whether they were relevant to the case.

Brzezinski testified Wednesday that he learned of Billy Carter's projected oil deal from an intelligence report brought to his attention by CIA Director Stansfield Turner. When he complained about it to the president's brother, Brzezinski said, he was told to mind his own business.

The records show that four minutes after talking with Brzezinski, a call was placed from Billy Carter's home in Buena Vista, Ga., to McGregor, an old friend from the Marine Corps who had suggested a Libyan deal.

The next morning, the records show, a call was made from the Best Western Motel in Americus, Ga., Billy Carter's base of operations, to the Libyan Embassy, followed by another call to McGregor in New York. That afternoon, a call was made from the home of Carter's associate, Henry "Randy" Coleman, to the Libyan Embassy, the records show.

McGregor testified earlier that he informally advised the president's brother on setting up an oil deal, although not the specific one worked out with Charter Oil Co. that could have netted the younger Carter millions of dollars in commissions. The Jacksonville, Fla., company agreed to buy Libyan oil secured through Billy Carter, but negotiations broke down on Libya's supplying it.

Brzezinski said the intelligence report also had been given to law enforcement authorities. But Sen. Charles McC. Mathias, R-Md., said that as a result of Brzezinski's call, "Billy gets intelligence information while the assistant attorney general has to wait until June to get it." Mathias suggested that was evidence of incompetence, rather than impropriety.

Sen. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina, the subcommittee's ranking Republican, charged that Brzezinski, Attorney General Benjamin Civiletti and Turner all worked to keep the Billy Carter matter from becoming a political issue.

"I consider those to be a series of groundless assertions," Brzezinski replied.

"There is substantial evidence," Thurmond continued, "that you were acting as the president's political troubleshooter, trying to prevent Billy from doing something that would hurt the political fortunes of the president."

"I consider that to be a highly improper insinuation, an innuendo that is not justified by the facts," Brzezinski said.

He said he assumes Thurmond's motives are "patriotism and a desire to establish truth," but added, "I resent the allegation you are making regarding my motives."

Thurmond responded, "We are trying to get at the truth, but we're not sure you're telling it. How do you account for the fact ..."

"Excuse me, senator, excuse me," Brzezinski interrupted. "You may not be sure. I know I am telling the truth."

Brzezinski added that "there was no impropriety in anything that occurred."

First Abscam-related resignation submitted

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — City Councilman George X. Schwartz, convicted of charges stemming from the FBI's Abscam operation, has become the first public official to resign as a result of the undercover investigation of alleged political corruption.

In a brief letter to his successor, Council President Pro Tempore Joseph Coleman, Schwartz said his resignation would be effective at the start of today's council meeting.

He said he would pursue all possible appeals of his conviction and added, "I did not and still do not believe that I am guilty."

The former council president announced his intentions Wednesday, saying he would relinquish his seat pending the outcome of appeals.

Meanwhile, a federal judge scheduled a hearing today on defense motions filed by attorneys for Schwartz and fellow City Councilman Harry P. Jannotti.

One of the motions is for acquittal, asking U.S. District Court Judge John P. Fullam, who presided over the eight-day trial of the councilmen, to overturn the jury verdict.

Schwartz, 65, and Jannotti, 56, were convicted Tuesday of conspiring to commit extortion. Schwartz, a council member for two decades, also was convicted of conspiring to violate federal racketeering statutes.

The two lawmakers, once two of the most powerful men in town, were filmed accepting a total of $40,000 in payoffs from undercover FBI agents posing as frontmen for an Arab sheik who wanted to build a $36-million hotel in the city. The $40,000 changed hands after the two politicians boasted of their political clout.

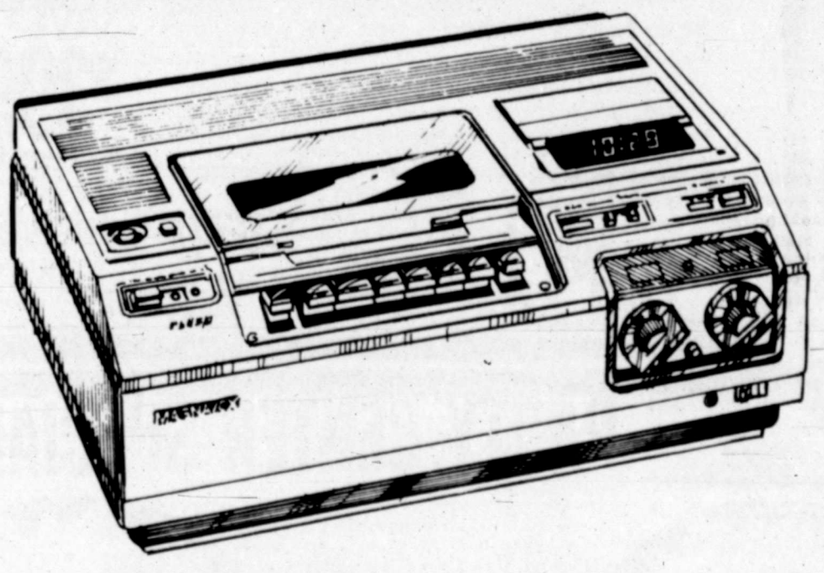

It is not known what effect Schwartz' resignation will have on Jannotti and Louis C. Johanson, another council member who was convicted Aug. 31 in a separate Abscam trial in Brooklyn, N.Y.

But in a formal opinion Tuesday, City Solicitor Alan J. Davis said they will automatically forfeit office upon sentencing. No sentencing date has been set in either Abscam case.

Earlier this month, Rep. Richard Kelly of Florida became the first official indicted on Abscam charges to lose a re-election attempt.

Black Cuban cosmonaut may be next in space

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union is expected to send a Cuban cosmonaut, possibly a black, into space at "any moment" to visit two Soviets orbiting the earth in a space laboratory, Cuban sources said today.

The sources said two Cubans — one a black man and the other white — are in training for a flight and one of them would be picked. A Cuban would be the seventh non-Soviet sent into space under the Soviet space program. A black would be the first ever in space.

A Cuban diplomatic source said the shot was officially scheduled for "mid-September." Speculation that a shot was imminent was heightened by a visit to the Soviet Union by Cuban Defense Minister Raul Castro. Sources said he visited the Star City cosmonaut training center near Moscow on Wednesday.

Soviet officials have never announced in advance the date of a space shot or the names of cosmonauts.

But Western space experts say officials of the Soviet intercosmos program, which has already launched six non-Soviet cosmonauts into space, have told them the next trip will include a Cuban.

Tass recently reported that cosmonauts from Cuba, Mongolia and Romania were "successfully preparing" for space flight, and stressed the "intensive training" of the Cubans.

Two Soviet cosmonauts, Valery Ryumin and Leonid Popov, have been circling the earth aboard the Salyut-6 space laboratory since April 9. They are now within two weeks of breaking the record of 175 days and 36 minutes in orbit set by the Soviets last year.

The cosmonauts have already been visited by three pairs of cosmonauts, including a Hungarian and a Vietnamese. The Soviets have also launched Czechoslovak, Polish, East German and Bulgarian cosmonauts under the intercosmos program. Each was accompanied by a Soviet crew chief.

Riots changed students' attitudes

By DAVID CAMPBELL
Staff Writer

1968 was a year of universal student unrest in Europe, United States and Mexico. However, Mexico was also the scene of a massive student riot resulting in the deaths of thousands of students at the hands of the Mexican Army and police.

As a result of it and other factors, student values and attitudes changed, according to Pedro Hector Rivas Figuero, vice-rector for the Universidad Autonoma del Noreste in Terreon, Mexico.

The distinguished Mexican educator spoke to a small crowd of mostly sociology students and instructors Wednesday morning at Midland College's Allison Fine Arts auditorium.

Prior to the 1968 riot, many students began questioning the injustice of society and its values, he said.

Many Mexican students said they believed that learning was meaningless and impersonal, Figuero noted. Most of them felt they were being treated as a number, not as a human being.

"There was a need on the students' part to find an identity," the educator said.

The student bodies from the National Autonomous University of Mexico and National Polytechnic Institute banded together and held demonstrations criticizing society's ills. At one time, these two schools were considered enemies, particularly in sports, he said.

Students involved in the demonstrations began destroying property owned by the rich or the poor, he said.

On Oct. 2, 1968, the Mexican Army and police surrounded a massive student protest in one part of Mexico City and began firing at the students, Figuero recalled.

According to some Western estimates, as many as 20,000 to 25,000 persons were killed, he said. Those surviving the shooting were arrested and sent to Army bases where they were imprisoned.

Figuero noted that most demonstrating students were looking for the establishment of a socialist state. "If everything turns out as we have planned it, everything will be a socialist state," Figuero said as he read from a page of a dead student's diary dated Oct. 2, 1968.

As a result of the riots, the National Autonomous University began to divide its campuses to other parts of Mexico.

Personalized instruction became more emphasized and students received more power in conducting the affairs of the upper Mexican education system.

Even with this much power, Mexican students became pragmatic. "How much will I be able to earn with this degree?" was the question most students asked when they completed their education.

Persons obtaining degrees in Mexico are automatically given social status, Figuero said. But, the work situation in Mexico has limited the number of jobs college graduates can get.

Only those students who have been tested and prepared for certain jobs will get them, he said.

Most Mexican students feel that "everyone should do as I see as what is right, but not I," he said of the present student attitude.

Unfortunately, this prevailing attitude has introduced more sexual promiscuity, drug abuse and crime among the young.

"Young people pay more attention to divorce rather than marriage and more attention to abortion rather than pregancy," he said.

"This has made more young students easier prey to sex, drug abuse and crime," he said of the attitude's effect on other generations of students.

"I believe the pendulum has swung back into balance," he said of the riot's effect on students, "but for how long that will last is uncertain."

Helicopters buzzing U.S. Embassy in Kabul

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (AP) — Low-flying military helicopters have been buzzing the U.S. Embassy in the Afghan capital of Kabul since a Soviet soldier sought asylum there last Monday, an Asian diplomatic source said here today.

The informant, quoting reports from Kabul, said it was not clear whether the Soviet-built choppers carried Afghan or Soviet markings.

The source, who declined to be identified, said the 14 Americans still stationed in the Afghan capital were being subjected to "general harassment." He quoted reports saying police were searching the diplomats' cars and restricting their access to the embassy grounds.

He also said additional Afghan security police have been stationed at eight non-communist embassies in Kabul, apparently to head off any further defections by Soviet troops.

The State Department says the Soviet Union has demanded the U.S. Embassy in Kabul hand over the Soviet enlisted man who slipped past Afghan security men and entered the compound on Monday. A department spokesman said the man has been given temporary refuge and would not be surrendered.

The presence of the soldier, said to be from a construction brigade, has prompted fears among U.S. officials that the Soviets might use force to try to retrieve him.

The United States has informed Soviet and Afghan authorities it is holding them responsible for the security of the embassy and its staff.

However a former Afghan Foreign Ministry official, who recently defected to Pakistan, said here that he doubted the impact of any protest lodged with the Afghan government.

Tanks surrounding OAS offices in El Salvador

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Salvadoran troops and tanks ringed a branch office of the Organization of American States for a second day today, maintaining a tense standoff with hostage-holding guerrillas demanding an end to martial law.

Leftist guerrillas shot their way into the office Wednesday and took seven hostages, including director Albino Roman y Vega, a Nicaraguan. One policeman was reported wounded.

Immediately after the takeover, the guerrillas said they would hold the hostages until the ruling civilian-military junta ended its "state of siege," released political prisoners and halted alleged repression against striking workers.

The state of seige, a form of martial law that suspended constitutional guarantees, was imposed last March in an effort to curb political violence in this Central American nation.

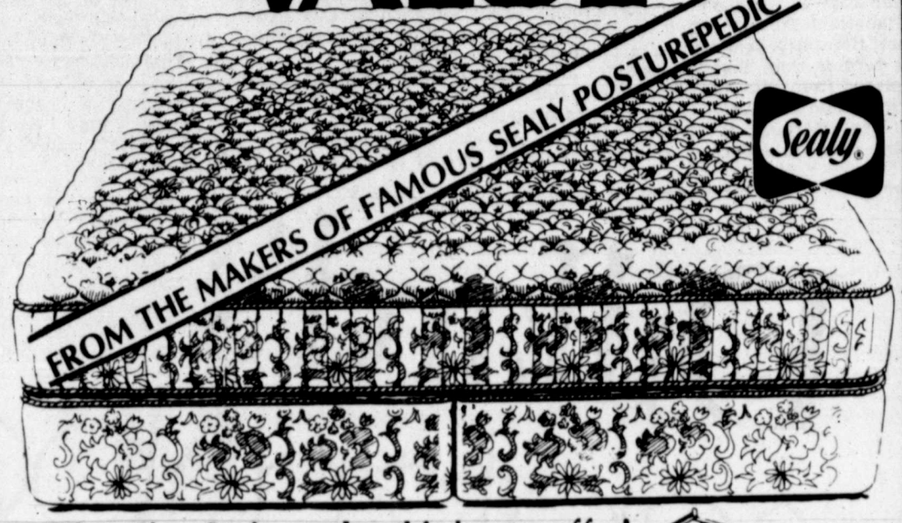

The Democratic Revolutionary Front, a gathering of leftist and union groups, called a news conference Wednesday night to say it had ordered the takeover. It said 30 guerrillas were involved.

Leftist occupations of embassies, churches and government buildings have been popular here for years, but the storming of the OAS office was the first major takeover in months.

One guerrilla group, the People's Revolutionary Army, claimed responsibility for an attack Tuesday on the American Embassy. Three Chinese-made rocket grenades were fired at the mission. Two of them hit, damaging a number of offices, but no one was hurt, a U.S. spokesman said.

Political violence here has increased despite the suspension of constitutional rights.

Hoffman wants book to fund river group

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Former Yippie leader ABBIE HOFFMAN says he wants to donate most of the money from his forthcoming book to his "Save the River" Committee.

Hoffman was in Portland for a taping of the Phil Donahue talk show for broadcast today.

The Internal Revenue Service has slapped a lien on the earnings Hoffman could make from his book, "Soon To Be A Major Motion Picture." Hoffman said he would like most of the money, if released, to go to his St. Lawrence River environmental group.

"Every single penny is assigned to people," Hoffman said. "I suppose I'll make some money on it."

Hoffman had been a fugitive since 1974 after jumping bail on a charge he sold cocaine to an undercover police officer in 1973. He was released from jail in New York on Tuesday after posting $10,000 of a $25,000 bail.

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — In the 1950s, a Florida State University student known as "Buddy" dropped out of school and became an actor, but he didn't forget his FSU friends.

And on Wednesday, BURT REYNOLDS gave $600,000 to help set up an endowed professorship in theater.

A football injury cut short Reynolds' career as a college halfback, but since leaving school, he's continued to work toward a bachelor's degree.

Reynolds said he was "extremely fortunate" to be able to make such a contribution to help others, "especially since this help is being channeled through the university which gave me so much opportunity to grow and develop."

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — GOV. ELLA GRASSO, forced to cancel a traditional appearance at the Eastern States Exposition, says she remains on a sharply limited work schedule due to the after-effects of cancer treatment.

Mrs. Grasso failed to make the 30-mile trip to the exposition in West Springfield, Mass., on Wednesday, where it was "Connecticut Day." Lt. Gov. William A. O'Neill substituted for her.

It was the latest in a series of cancellations forced on Mrs. Grasso by the gastritis she is suffering. The stomach ailment is believed to be a result of radiation treatment she received earlier this year.

She underwent a hysterectomy to remove cancer from her uterus in early April.

LONDON (AP) — True or not, add the name of LADY DIANA SPENCER, 19, to the list of lovelies rumored to be romantically linked to Britain's PRINCE CHARLES.

Lady Spencer told newsmen Wednesday she had seen the prince "But I can't say anything about it." She said Buckingham Palace had not advised her how to cope with the inevitable publicity.

Charles' love life remains a lively topic of debate among the British. The 31-year-old heir to the throne has said "around 30" is the right time to marry.

The latest rumor was first reported by Nigel Dempster, gossip columnist for the London Daily Mail. He also said Charles was admonished by his father Prince Philip to "Hurry up or you'll miss the boat."

$2,000 awarded

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — A woman who said she was haunted with nightmares of being chased by Coca-Cola bottles after a Coke bottle exploded in her hand has been awarded $2,000 by a Circuit Court jury.

Elizabeth N. Brown of suburban Mount Juliet, who had sought $45,000 in damages, said Wednesday she was unhappy with the award.

"I'm very disappointed by the size of the judgment," said Mrs. Brown.

Geologist favors missile system

Science group hears explanation, implications

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

"The MX missile system has emerged into a very viable system and I'm an advocate for it," said a Midland geologist Wednesday in speaking before the Society of Independent Professional Earth Scientists.

The organization — which includes engineers, seismologists and geologists — met in Midland Country Club for an explanation of the proposed MX system and its geographical and geological implications.

Melzer worked with the Air Force from 1969 to 1978 at Kirtland Air Force Base in Albuquerque, N.M., spending much of his time studying the structures to house such missiles and resist nuclear blasts.

To explain the MX missile and the reasons why it has been developed, Melzer showed an Air Force film to clear up some of the confusion surrounding the project.

"There has been a lot of uncertainty associated with the MX, but I think we're seeing some direction," he told the gathering. "We'll get the system," in one form or another.

THE PLAN CALLS for 200 MX missiles — designed to be the largest allowed under the SALT agreement — stored in underground shelters. For each missile, the government will build 23 shelters in a cluster. The additional 22 shelters for each missile is a major part of the plan to confuse the Soviets as to where the missile is being stored.

To hit one missile, Melzer said, the Soviets would have to bomb all 23 shelters. And before that could happen, the U.S. would have sufficient time to retaliate an attack.

To build the system, however, a large amount of land is needed and must fit numerous criteria. Only two places in the U.S. qualified: an area in Nevada and Utah, and an area in West Texas and Eastern New Mexico.

The Air Force is favoring the Nevada-Utah site because all 200 missile could be placed in that one area, said Melzer. If West Texas was selected, it would only be to house half the missiles. The other half would go in Nevada-Utah.

While he was in the Air Force, Melzer said he studied how intense heat and ground shock from a nuclear explosion would affect the structure housing a missile. "We had to design the shelter with walls thick enough to withstand the motion from a nuclear blast," said Melzer. And the transport carrying the missile required a design that would allow it to plow through debris from a blast.

ONE PART OF the plan which causes Melzer some concern is the window on each shelter to allow verification, as called for in the SALT treaty. His worry centers on how that window would affect the structure's strength and capability to handle blasts.

Several people, including Republican presidential candidate Ronald Reagan, have suggested the MX be located in the same areas as the Minuteman missiles. But Melzer explained these spots, in the northern part of the U.S., haven't been acceptable to the Air Force.

For the MX plan to be successful, the missile must be mobile. "There are four to five months a year up north when it couldn't be mobile," he said, explaining the roads must be in good condition for the transport to carry the missiles.

Estimated cost of the system is $33 billion in 1980 dollars, said Melzer, who believes the money is justified. "But how do you come up with $33 billion," he asked.

The time to get the project under way is closing in on the United States, Melzer remarked. He explained that the Defense Department reported the U.S. would be at its maximum "vulnerability" for the next four to five years. If construction started soon, the first leg of the project should be done by 1986.

The other two legs of the country's defense triad — bombers and submarines — would suffice in case of attack.

THE MINUTEMAN system was termed "highly vulnerable." Because of the "Soviets' accuracy and warhead yield," the smaller missile can be destroyed in one hit, he explained.

"If they change the MX system in any way," said the geologist, "it will delay it."

Military officials have noted the country needs to be on the road to constructing a new system by 1985. Melzer said others have put the date at 1982 due to "the deployment of new missiles in Russia."

And "the Air Force is working frantically on the MX missile," he added.

The missile plan isn't new. When the Minuteman missile was drawn up in the 1950s, Melzer said planners realized the need some day for a mobile land-based missile. Advance thinking was done at that time, but studies didn't begin until about 1973.

"By 1975, a big effort was started on the MX. The nation realized it was needing it then," he said.

Now the Air Force must convince the public and politicians.

Unemployment claims hit five-month low mark

Another indication that U.S. economy may be steadying

WASHINGTON (AP) — New claims for unemployment insurance dropped to a five-month low in early September, the government reports, providing yet another indication that the nation's faltering economy may be steadying at last.

"It's premature to say the recession is over, but the economy is proving stronger than anyone anticipated," Labor Department economist Nancy Barrett said Wednesday. "It could be a pause in the recession or something more permanent. We just don't know yet."

Department officials said a seasonally adjusted 493,000 people filed new claims during the week ending Sept. 6, a drop of 20,000 from the week before and the lowest figure since the first week of April.

And there were other developments bolstering the impression of a recuperating economy.

The Federal Reserve Board reported Wednesday that U.S. manufacturers operated at 74.5 percent of capacity in August, marking the first rise in that economic barometer in 11 months.

The rate of utilization was only 0.1 percent above the July rate and still far below the August 1979 level of 84.9 percent, however. The rate was 12.7 percent under the last high, in March 1979, and 5.5 percent above the last low, which occurred during the 1975 recession.

That report followed Tuesday's announcement by the Federal Reserve that production from the nation's factories and mines increased by 0.5 percent in August after a six-month decline.

Those two reports indicate increased activity that could mark the turning point in the recession that has bogged down the nation's economy most of the year.

But Ms. Barrett warned that the economy may be adjusting temporarily from the second quarter, "when the bottom just dropped out," rather than staging a lasting recovery.

Courtenay M. Slater, chief economist for the Commerce Department, has said she thinks the recession ended in August. She expects the economy will show modest growth in the third quarter, but warns that unemployment is likely to continue rising for several months.

The new Labor Department report suggests the nation's unemployment rate will be lower this fall than had been expected, however — a boon to President Carter at the height of the election season.

Officially, the administration forecasts an 8.5 percent rate by the end of 1980, but economists doubt unemployment will change much from August's 7.6 percent level — which means about 8 million people are officially listed as unemployed — until after the Nov. 4 election. Only one more jobless report will be released before then, for September. The October figures will not be released until Nov. 7.

In another development, the Commerce Department reported that housing starts rose 12 percent in August — the third consecutive monthly rise. But economists cautioned that the housing recovery may be stopped by rising interest rates.

And the industry is still far from normal. Housing units on which construction began in the first eight months of 1980 totaled 787,000, down from the 1,292,100 in the same period last year.

And the August figures, if continued for 12 months, would result in a seasonally adjusted rate of 1,399,000 units a year — down from the 2 million in both 1977 and 1978 and 1.75 million for all of last year.

Few attend hearing on redistricting

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

Only five persons testified Wednesday at the public hearing on redistricting held in City Hall Council Chambers, and they urged the panel to wait for final population figures from the U.S. Census Bureau.

The state House Committee on Regions, Compacts and Districts held the hearing to gather preliminary data needed by the State Legislature in 1981 for redrawing House, Senate and Congressional district lines. Chairing the session was Tim Von Dohlen. Also attending were Gerald Hill, vice chairman, Gary Thompson and Larry Shaw.

In his opening remarks, Von Dohlen stated the issue of redistricting is critical to Texas. An influx of people in the last 10 years may result in Texas gaining two, and possibly three, new congressional seats.

Because the final census figures won't be available until April 1, 1981, and the legislative session closes on May 31, the House will have only 60 days to "accomplish the task of redistricting."

HIS COMMITTEE'S work centers around five areas: working to obtain as accurate a count as possible in the 1980 census, complying with the Voting Rights Act to assure equal access for minority groups, following the legal requirements for reapportionment, setting up computer capabilities to be used by the State Legislature in reapportionment and holding a series of statewide hearings on the matter.

The Midland session was the third hearing in a series of 13 scheduled throughout Texas. Von Dohlen said the hearing here covered Midland, Odessa, Lamesa, Big Spring, Levelland, Seminole, Andrews, Fort Stockton, Snyder, Sterling City and San Angelo.

Walter Ashby, senior planner for the city of Midland, pointed out the city's preliminary census counts were below what had been estimated. Specific information set out in blocks wasn't provided the city with which to compare figures, he claimed.

He pointed out that household size in Midland had decreased by half a person since 1970. The city has grown 18 to 20 percent in those 10 years and the number of housing units has jumped by 28 to 30 percent.

Preliminary figures of 66,998 could be readjusted to as much as 72,000, Ashby said.

POPULATION SHIFTS within the city for the last 10 years show the most growth in the north and northwest sectors. The center of the community has dropped some.

When questioned about the number of minorities, Ashby said his office didn't "have good minority information. In 1970, it was 12 percent Mexican-American and 10 percent black. I suspect it hasn't changed drastically."

The final population count for Midland County should be around 83,000, he added.

Fred Tyler, executive vice president of the Midland Chamber of Commerce, advocated Midland's remaining in the 19th Congressional District, which is currently handled by U.S. Rep. Kent Hance. And Tyler added his approval of the current state House and Senate districts.

Charleen Rosebery, president of the Midland League of Women Voters, pushed for continuance of the "one-man, one-vote" rule and pointed out Supreme Court cases concerning the drawing of district lines.

She advocated the rule of thumb of not having more than 5 percent deviation in the population count per district, and to keep each district compact.

Von Dohlen mentioned the size of Texas sometimes keeps the districts from being compact. "We have a wide area of separation between population, especially in the West Texas area."

Stephen Wilkinson, planner for San Angelo, reiterated the census count problem, adding that some areas had been missed in the count.

LIKE ASHBY, Wilkinson had no figures for the minority population.

Representing the Odessa Chamber of Commerce task force on redistricting was Patrick Munn who advised the committee a report will be ready on Odessa's recommendations by mid-October.

He, too, complained about the low census count, lodging his hopes that the final figures would be higher. In the past 10 years, he said, Odessa has seen more industries move in, "a new mall, a regional academic health center, two new elementary schools and a plan for a North Route to Midland."

While about 35 persons from local and area legislative bodies attended, Von Dohlen said he was surprised that only five presented any testimony. He realized it may seem early to start on the project, but he expects more comments to come from the larger cities.

The chairman mentioned that preliminary census figures reflect a substantial growth for El Paso, which means that the east part of that congressional district may be moved into another area. In redrawing the lines, it is feasible for all of Ector County to be included in the 19th Congressional District, instead of just half, he said.

One of the new congressional seats definitely will be in the Houston area, according to Von Dohlen. Another could be in the Dallas-Fort Worth area and a possible third in central Texas.

"THE PROBLEMS of redistricting are not that great to Midland," he said, noting later that Tom Craddick who represents the 68th district in the state House, could have his reduced.

Early census figures have put Midland County's population at 88,000. Von Dohlen said the top limit for a district is 90,000.

Craddick, who attended the hearing, said afterward that reducing the size of his district wouldn't present a problem to him.

Currently, his district also covers Glasscock, Reagan and Upton counties. "We all have common interests — oil, gas and farming. And I've found it easy to represent those people."

Chevron energy report:

$1 billion Chevron refinery improvement

Allows greater use of "heavy" crudes.

Chevron's profits help finance this massive project to maintain the flow of fuels for homes, cars, and planes.

It's easier to get gasoline out of "light" crude than "heavy" crude. But, in the years ahead light crude will be less plentiful—so America must have refineries which can process heavy crude efficiently.

To meet this challenge, Chevron will spend more than $1 billion over the next three years—the largest single-project investment in our history—to modify our Pascagoula refinery in Mississippi.

Chevron's profits, along with other cash from operations, are the primary source of capital for this refinery improvement project.

Worldwide, our total capital and exploratory investments during 1980 will be $3.4 billion, an amount 50% greater than 1979, and almost twice last year's earnings.

Reagan confident about debate

MIDDLEBURG, Va. (AP) — Ronald Reagan, settling down with his briefing books to prepare for Sunday's debate with John Anderson, is acting confident the forum already has given him an important political victory over President Carter.

Returning from a campaign trip to Texas, Reagan held a news conference on Wednesday at Dulles Airport to read a statement urging Carter to change his mind and join the debate in Baltimore on Sunday night.

For added measure, the Republican presidential candidate chided the president for not holding enough news conferences.

Carter is holding one today, a fact Reagan professed to be unaware of when asked if it had any relation to his own decision to meet with reporters.

The former California governor was holding his first formal news conference since Aug. 28. And while demanding that Carter debate him, Reagan has shown little inclination to agree to a face-to-face debate with the president without independent candidate Anderson also on the platform.

Anderson was among the Republican rivals Reagan debated twice during the GOP primary election campaign — in Manchester, N.H., and Chicago.

Reagan aides feel that on both occasions their candidate came off better than the Illinois congressman. But neither debate was a one-on-one matchup.

The Baltimore debate, sponsored by the League of Women Voters, will feature Reagan and Anderson only.

In the days leading to the debate, Reagan tried to make Carter's refusal to join him and Anderson in Baltimore a major campaign issue.

He opened his news conference by reading a statement calling on Carter to change his mind and saying that "apparently Mr. Carter would like to hide his record and his performance from the American people....

"If he does not debate he will be telling the American people that he will not — that he cannot — defend his record. And if he cannot defend his record, I believe that the American people on Nov. 4 will tell him that they cannot defend his record either."

Reagan also pointed out that Carter has held only one press conference since April 29 and only seven all year.

That prompted reporters to ask Reagan why he has held so few press conferences during the past month when aides have tried to keep the candidate focused on the economy, which they feel is the issue of most interest to voters as well as where Carter is most vulnerable.

Reagan responded that campaign situations are poor times for press conferences, although during the primary election campaign he often held several a day.

"I think we all know," said Reagan, "you could be asked a question that has nothing to do with the issues or is not relevent to the points we are trying to make, and that becomes the news and no one hears about what it was you were trying to say."

Republican vice presidential candidate George Bush flashes a thumbs-up sign and gives a wink as the Ohio State University band plays the school's fight song following Bush's speech to the state GOP convention in Columbus Wednesday night. With Bush is his wife, Barbara. (AP Laserphoto)

Anderson's team bolstered by federal court victories

WASHINGTON (AP) — Independent presidential candidate John B. Anderson, who is studying Ronald Reagan's latest statements in advance of their debate, has two federal court victories to bolster him for the Sunday night contest.

Anderson is home in Washington today, and has said he will be studying some of the Republican nominee's specific positions for the League of Women Voters debate in Baltimore. He also has said, however, that he knows Reagan's general stance well enough to require no deep study.

As he returned Wednesday from a 12-day campaign trip, a raspy-voiced Anderson noted there was one preparation he planned for the contest.

"I'm going to rest my voice," he said.

Also on Wednesday, Anderson won two victories that seem to insure him a place on the presidential ballots in Maryland and Maine.

In Maryland, state Attorney General Stephen H. Sachs said he will not appeal a court ruling ordering the listing of Anderson as an independent candidate on the state's Nov. 4 general election ballot.

Sachs said he was satisfied with the ruling Wednesday by a three-judge panel of the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Richmond, Va. But Sachs said Maryland will be watching the outcome of a Supreme Court review of a similar case in which Ohio is trying to keep Anderson off its November ballot.

The appellate court upheld a U.S. District Court decision invalidating an March 3 deadline for filing as a candidate. It concluded the early filing deadline did not further "state interests in any respect."

Also on Wednesday, the 1st Circuit Court of Appeals in Boston upheld a lower court decision guaranteeing Anderson a place on Maine's presidential ballot. The three-judge panel affirmed a decision by U.S. District Judge Edward T. Gignoux in Portland and rejected an appeal by Maine's attorney general.

Gignoux ruled earlier this summer that Anderson was entitled to have his name on the ballot because Maine's early filing deadline of April 1 discriminated against independent candidates.

Carter spokesman releases allegedly 'forged' memo

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter's chief spokesman — releasing what he said was a forged government memo recommending covert CIA operations to foster division between American and African blacks — said the document had the earmarks of a "professional" effort to discredit the president.

White House press secretary Jody Powell said Wednesday that the fake National Security Council document has been circulated to reporters and added it might have been done by a hostile foreign intelligence acency or a domestic political group.

However, he added: "We have no basis on which to know who is responsible for doing this."

In mentioning that the document might be related to "the domestic political situation," Powell did not specifically mention any of Carter's political rivals.

Powell's release of the document came the day after the president, campaigning in Atlanta, accused Republican candidate Ronald Reagan of stirring racial hatred through his mention of states' rights and the Ku Klux Klan.

Reagan used the phrases in speeches more than two weeks ago, and Republican vice presidential candidate George Bush on Wednesday accused Carter of taking the "low road" in trying to portray Reagan as a racist.

Both the president and Reagan are battling for votes in the South. Carter's 1976 victory was boosted by his home region, but this year Reagan is mounting a serious challenge there. The votes of blacks, therefore, will be important to both candidates.

The document that Powell released was dated March 17, 1978, labeled "Secret," and named Presidential Review Memorandum No. 46. The subject was African nationalists and American blacks.

Powell also released what he said was the real presidential review memo 46. It was dated May 4, 1979, and stamped "unclassified." The subject was a review of U.S. policies toward Central America.

The document on Africa states the "nationalist liberation movement in black Africa" could incite blacks in the United States and suggests ways to prevent that.

It recommends the CIA launch "special clandestine operations... to generate mistrust and hostility in American and world opinion against joint activity of the two forces and to cause division among black African radical nationalist groups and their leaders."

It also suggests that the "FBI should mount surveillance operations against black African representatives and collect sensitive information on those, especially at the U.N., who oppose U.S. policy toward South Africa.

"The information should include facts on their links with the leaders of the black movement in the United States, thus making possible at least partial neutralization of the adverse effects of their activity," the document said.

Powell said the National Security Council has asked the attorney general and the CIA to investigate the matter.

The document was denounced as a "crude forgery" by Jill Schuker, spokeswoman for America's chief U.N. delegate, Donald F. McHenry.

"Our African policy has been one to be proud of," she said.

Powell said of the document: "It's a forgery, but it has all the earmarks of a very professional job done to discredit the president, the administration's policy toward Africa, our relations with American black leaders and the president's adviser on national security affairs.

Paraguay hunting for Somoza assassins

Anastasio Somoza

ASUNCION, Paraguay (AP) — Paraguayan authorities pressed a massive manhunt today for the guerrilla squad that assassinated ousted Nicaraguan dictator Anastasio Somoza in a hail of machine-gun and bazooka fire so devastating his mistress could identify the body only through his wristwatch.

Somoza's financial adviser and chauffeur also died in the Wednesday morning attack in the Paraguayan capital.

Police closed the Asuncion airport and sealed the country's borders with Argentina and Brazil in an effort to keep the attackers from leaving the country. Paraguayan authorities say they think six people took part in the fusilade that left the 54-year-old Somoza riddled with some two dozen bullets and his limousine demolished.

Authorities say Somoza's bodyguards, who returned the attackers fire from a car trailing the ousted strongman's limosine, wounded one of the assailants. The government has called on citizens to report anyone seeking medical attention for a bullet wound.

The right-wing government of Paraguayan President Alfredo Stroessner, the friend who granted Somoza asylum after his ouster by Nicaragua's Sandinista guerrillas in 1979, distributed photographs of a man and a woman believed to have taken part in the ambush. The two, identified as Hugo Alfredo Irurzun and Silvia Mercedes Hodgers, were described as members of the Peoples Revolutionary Army, a left-wing Argentine guerrilla group.

Officials offered a reward of $40,000 for information leading to the capture of the two, whose photos were picked out of police files by witnesses to the slaying.

Police said several persons had been arrested for "investigation in connection with the assassination." They gave no details.

Interior Minister Augusto Montanaro described the slaying as "a criminal attack almost certainly perpetrated by a group of foreign terrorists heavily armed with bazookas, automatic rifles and pistols of U.S. fabrication."

In Washington, the Carter administration, accused by Somoza of contributing to his downfall by failing to provide support, reacted with caution. "Naturally we deplore any assassination no matter where it occurs or who is affected," said spokesman John Trattner.

Nicaraguans by the thousands greeted news of Somoza's death by pouring into the streets for celebrations. Violeta Chamorro, the widow of slain journalist Joaquin Chamorro, said: "Sooner or later God had to do justice." Chamorro's death, blamed on Somoza's government, sparked the final, bloody uprising which toppled Somoza in July 1979 and ended 43 year of Somoza family rule in Nicaragua.

Nicaraguans celebrate assassination

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — "Like a sudden holiday," thousands of Nicaraguans jammed the streets of Managua, dancing, singing and celebrating the bold and bloody assassination of Anastasio Somoza, the ousted ruler who dreamed of restoring his grip on this Central American nation.

Leaders of the Sandinista National Liberation Front that overthrew Somoza toured the streets shouting joy over the deed.

Somoza, his chauffeur and a financial adviser were killed Wednesday in Asuncion, Paraguay in a machine-gun and bazooka ambush that left the former leader's limosine a mass of twisted wreckage. Paraguayan authorities are pressing a countrywide manhunt for six guerrillas believed to have carried out the attack.

Somoza had been living in Paraguay for the past year.

The Sandinista National Directorate assembled in the dictator's old fortress for a celebration, then issued a statement "confirming the killing of genocidist Anastasio Somoza Debayle. We join in the popular rejoicing of the people of Sandino that sees its dream of justice fulfilled."

Augusto Cesar Sandino was the Nicaraguan revolutionary general killed by Somoza's father after leading a guerrilla campaign against U.S. Marines in Nicaragua in the 1920s and 1930s. The Sandinistas take their name from him.

The Nicaraguan Red Cross estimates some 50,000 people died in the year of fighting that ended shortly after Somoza fled Nicaragua July 17, 1979.

Rafael Cordoba Rivas, a member of the junta that took power after the fall of the 43-year Somoza family dynasty, commented, "Like I said 20 days ago, until Somoza dies, Nicaragua would never be completely free. The reaction here in Managua is one of great joy. It has turned out to be like a sudden holiday."

The Sandinista newspaper Barricada said Somoza was killed "like a dog on a corner." It also published a photo of the slain Somoza and of his father Anastasio Somoza Garcia, who was gunned down in 1956. The paper left blank a square representing Somoza Debayle's son, Anastasio Somoza Portocarrero, who now resides in Miami.

Hugo Torres, secretary of the Council of State, said the murder of Somoza was "a big blow against the counterrevolution."

Somoza, who took refuge in Paraguay in August of last year, had said in recent weeks he intended to regain power in his homeland. "I am full of energy and courage to fight. I will return and conquer Nicaragua," he was quoted this week as saying in an interview with the West German magazine Quick.

In Tegucigalpa, Honduras, where a large number of Somoza's former National Guardsmen live in exile, an anonymous caller told the Associated Press, "With the death of the general ends all effort to recover power in Nicaragua...the Somoza era is extinguished with the killing of our leader, the only leader we had."

A Honduran government spokesman "repudiated" the assassination, but there were indications of happiness in the streets, especially among leftist groups.

The widow of a newspaper publisher whose death was blamed on the Somoza family said the assassination was "God's justice."

"It was time. I knew that God had to do justice some day and Somoza's hour has come," said Violeta Chamorro, widow of Pedro Joaquin Chamorro. He was the publisher of the newspaper La Prensa, and his murder in January of 1978 sparked the final offensive against the Somoza regime.

Mrs. Chamorro was an original member of the junta that took over following Somoza's overthrow. She resigned earlier this year for health reasons.

Xavier Chamorro, publisher of El Nuevo Diario and brother of the slain journalist, said, "I always believed that sooner or later somebody would do justice." He added, "Somoza was executed ... but with his death he still does not pay for all the crimes he committed."

No time to be friends with U.S., say Texans

ABILENE, Texas (AP) — A biographer of Anastasio Somoza and a Texas congressman say the former Nicaraguan leader's assassination may make world leaders hesitant to be friendly to the United States.

Jack Cox, an Abilene businessman and author of a book about Somoza, said the former dictator knew he was marked for death, but refused to live in fear.

"He had stated to me he knew the Marxists wanted him dead and exercised every precaution, and that he was not going to live in fear," said Cox, a former Texas legislator and the 1962 Republican gubernatorial nominee who lived in Nicaragua from 1972 to 1976.

"He was a symbol, more than anything else, of Western ideals. He was strongly pro-United States in all his thinking," Cox said, adding that Wednesday's assassination in Paraguay "might make people who are pro-United States more fearful of taking a stand with us."

Those sentiments were echoed by U.S. Rep. Charles Wilson in Washington.

"This is no time to be a friend of the United States," the Lufkin Democrat said. "I am saddened at the violent death of a lifelong friend of the United States as well as a personal friend."

Cox said he was shocked by the killing, although Somoza had told him he knew he was the target of an assassination plot.

"The Marxists had stated publicly they would kill Somoza sooner or later and that they did have hit teams out to get him. We talked about it many many times," Cox said.

Wilson said he did not understand American diplomatic policies toward the new Sandinista revolutionary regime that took power last year.

"In Nicaragua, the United State deliberately traded an undemocratic, dictatorial, capitalistic, pro-American regime for an even more undemocratic, more dictatorial, Marxist, anti-American regime," he said.

Business of government resumed

that this was a terrifying thing that may have international consequences, that this might be an international conspiracy of some kind. And I knew, of course, that I was on my own....."

As the president's body was carried from the hospital to the hearse, in a bronze coffin, Charles Roberts, Newsweek editor, recalls: "Mrs. Kennedy was walking on the right side of it. She was walking with her left hand on the casket and was really in a state of what I would call medical shock, with an almost glazed look on her face. She seemed almost unaware of what was happening and, curiously, had a kind of little frozen smile on her face. I had the feeling that if somebody had literally fired a pistol in front of her face that she would just have blinked. It seemed that she was absolutely out of this world."

As soon as Johnson reached the plane, Air Force One, he called Bobby Kennedy, the attorney general, to ask his advice and judgment on where he should take the oath, under what circumstances, and who should administer it.

Lyndon: "He gave me his immediate reaction, that the oath should be taken in Dallas at once. I said, 'Well, I don't have the oath.' He said, 'I'll have it given to you right away.' And very businesslike, although I guess he must have been suffering more than almost anyone else except Mrs. Kennedy."

LATER, LBJ WROTE that the most unbearable moment of the day was when Jackie arrived at the plane with the president's body.

"It was a tragic thing to observe Mrs. Kennedy," he wrote. "Here was this delicate, beautiful lady, always elegant, always fastidious, always the fashion plate. And I remember her getting off the plane in Dallas a few hours before and contrasting that with how she looked when she got back on the plane.... What that morning was a beautiful pink garment that was the last word in fashion and style was now streaked and caked and soiled throughout with her husband's blood. Mrs. Johnson asked her if she wouldn't come in and let her help change her clothes and she said no."

Sid Davis, then with Westinghouse Broadcasting Co.: "Judge Sarah Hughes (Johnson's personal friend, whom he had requested to give the swearing-in) arrived at the plane and was handed the oath. She said we ought to proceed. Johnson said, 'No, let's see if Mrs. Kennedy can stand this.' And so they went back, and she said she'd like to come out and she did."

Sarah Hughes: "When Mrs. Kennedy came into the compartment, Vice President Johnson told her to stand on his left and Mrs. Johnson to stand on his right. And I leaned over to Mrs. Kennedy and said, 'I loved your husband very much.'

"Mrs. Johnson turned to her and told her who I was, that I was a district judge who had been appointed by her husband. Then I read the oath of office, and the vice president repeated it after me.... Then he immediately leaned over and kissed his wife and Mrs. Kennedy."

Charles Roberts recalled that the trip back to Washington was like traveling in a tunnel: "All the shades were drawn when we got aboard, I suppose for security reasons." The curtains stayed closed all the way back to Washington.

THERE ALSO WAS TENSION between some members of the Johnson faction and the Kennedy staff.

Charles Bartlett, columnist: "I personally think that the bitterness that developed from the whole airplane ride was largely due to the real shock of the Kennedy staff who had seen their president destroyed. And they had a hard time adjusting to it. But in all the piecing together I could do, I couldn't really find any real ugliness or insensitivity on Johnson's part."

Charles Roberts recalls: "To me Johnson's conduct in that period — I think we took two hours 12 minutes — was perhaps his finest hour. He couldn't have been more considerate, not only of Jackie but of all the Kennedy people. He was thoughtful. He was thinking ahead. There was nothing unseemly at all about his takeover. He was not grasping for power."

The business of government resumed in a national mood of deepest gloom. On the day after Kennedy's assassination, Johnson called together the cabinet and the other high-ranking decision-makers and told them he wanted them to stay on.

Clark Clifford, a close presidential advisor: "It was very clear that after the assassination, President Kennedy's popularity grew all the time. He was revered in a manner after his death that perhaps didn't exist before his death. He had become a martyr president and I think President Johnson felt that it was advisable to keep that team."

ON THE DAY AFTER JFK was buried, the new president went to his White House office to find a long handwritten note signed by Jacqueline Kennedy:

"Dear Mr. President,

"Thank you for walking yesterday — behind Jack. You did not have to do that — I am sure many people forbid you to take such a risk — but you did it anyway.

"Thank you for your letters to my children. What those letters will mean to them later — you can imagine. The touching thing is, they have always loved you so much, they were most moved to have a letter from you now.

"And most of all, Mr. President, thank you for the way you have always treated me — the way you and Lady Bird have always been to me — before, when Jack was alive, and now as President.

"But more than that, we were friends, all four of us.....

"It was so strange — last night I was wandering through this house —

"There in the Treaty Room is your chandelier, and I had it framed — the paper we all signed — you — Senator Dirksen and Mike Mansfield — underneath I had written 'The Day the Vice President brought the East Room chandelier back from the Capitol.'

"Then in the library I showed Bobby the Lincoln Record Book you gave —

"You see all you gave — and now you are called upon to give so much more....."

The torch had indeed been passed, and Camelot was giving way to a new style and spirit.

U.S., China sign four agreements

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States and the People's Republic of China have agreed on terms for resuming flights between the two nations, fixing limits on textile exports from China to this country and other trade issues.

The agreements are expected to increase trade between the two countries this year to over $4 billion — more than the level of trade between the United States and the Soviet Union.

President Carter and Chinese Vice Premier Bo Yibo signed four accords in a Rose Garden ceremony Wednesday. Carter called the agreement with China the completion of a 20-month process of normalizing relations and said it was "one of the most important achievements of my presidency."

The agreements will:

— Establish the first commercial airline traffic betweeen the two nations since the communists took over China 30 years ago. The initial route will be between New York and Peking voa San Francisco or Los Angeles, Honolulu and Tokyo or anothr point in Japan.

— Fix limits on how many textile products China can sell to the United States through 1982. These limits are higher than those imposed unilaterally by the United States on such items as cotton gloves, knit shirts, blouses, trousers and sweaters.

— Open all U.S. ports to Chinese merchant ships and all Chinese ports to American vessels.

— Permit China to open consulates in Honolulu, Chicago and New York in addition to existing offices in San Francisco and Houston. The United States will open consulates in three Chinese cities yet to be selected. It already has consulates in Shanghai and Canton.

Still to be negotiated by a U.S.-China Joint Economic Committee are agreements on financing by the U.S. Export-Import Bank of Chinese projects, possible exemption of U.S. companies from China's newly created income tax and possible U.S. credit to China so it can purchase American commodities.

The Commerce Department has predicted that trade between China and the United States will reach $10 billion a year by 1985. Two years ago, before China was granted "most favored nation" status, it amounted to about $1 billion a year.

Pyramid scheme results in arrests

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — In their second raid on a pyramid-type operation in the past month, local police have charged six people with operating "endless chain schemes."

Officers said 35 persons were involved in a pyramid party at a local business firm when officers raided it night. They confiscated $2,500 in cash and some brochures explaining how the pyramid game is played.

FBI officials' trial begins

WASHINGTON (AP) — After three days of jury selection, prosecution and defense attorneys are presenting their cases in the federal conspiracy trial of two former FBI officials charged with authorizing illegal break-ins in the early 1970s.

A jury of eight women and four men was seated late Wednesday afternoon, and the jurors and six alternates were immediately sequestered for the duration of the trial, expected to last six weeks.

Metric making slow progress in America

By ROBERT ESTILL
Copley News Service

WASHINGTON — Although it is not happening as fast as Congress envisioned, America is moving to metrics.

The conversion is occurring slowly, voluntarily and, in most cases, with an eye on profit and ease of doing business.

A public which would be wary of an overnight switch to a new system is coming to grips with it almost daily.

The metric system — which has been around for years in a less visible role, such as prescriptions for medicine — is gradually coming into its own.

It has been liquor by the liter since Jan. 1 as a result of a new federal regulation that was actually sought by the wine and liquor industry.

Many soft drinks also are sold by the liter, and supermarkets contain a myriad of metric markings. While pre-packed foods still are sold by the customary pound pricing, the equivalent in grams is designated on many of the canned and packaged foodstuffs.

Gasoline is dispensed by the liter at about 10 percent of the pumps in the nation and as many as 30 percent of the pumps in California.

Although the federal Department of Transportation was scuttled in an attempt several years ago to convert road signs to metrics, many routes in the country contain both mile and kilometer markings as part of an educational process.

Sporting events, particularly track and field events, are becoming increasingly metric to benefit athletes with an eye on the international Olympic competitions.

The automotive industry, with a need to compete in foreign as well as domestic markets, was thinking metric even before 1975 when Congress adopted the Metric Conversion Act and created the U.S. Metric Board to coordinate the conversion and conduct educational programs.

General Motors started a 10-year metric conversion program in 1973. Ford hopes to complete its conversion by 1985, and Chrylser could be metric by the end of the decade.

There usually is a profit motive behind every conversion, with few changes occurring just for the sake of change, according to Malcolm O'Hagan, executive director of the Metric Board.

"People have to look for the appropriate opportunity and incentives to introduce metrics," O'Hagan said.

In the case of gasoline, the change occurred when the price went over 99.9 cents a gallon. That meant service stations either had to use a half-gallon price (and many states have or are in the process of setting deadlines for half-pricing), adding an extra digit or converting to liters. The liter mechanism on the pump costs about $50 to install, about a fourth the cost of adding an extra digit to sell it by the gallon, O'Hagan said.

The liquor industry wanted the change to liters so its products could be compared fairly with imported potables, particularly wines.

"In the case of the soft drinks in the new two-liter bottles, it was a new bottle in a new size and a new technology," O'Hagan said. "It did not cost any more to make two-liter bottles than to make half-gallons (there are 3.8 liters to a gallon). I think under our voluntary system, that is the way the metric system is going to progress. It will occur only where there is some incentive."

There has been some confusion about the law since it was passed five years ago.

"People thought Congress mandated conversion, and that 1985 was the date," O'Hagan said. "There is no date. And there is no mandate."

Congress had anticipated that there would be no need for the Metric Board after 1985, but the conversion process is moving so slowly that O'Hagan figures the board will continue making studies and conducting educational programs for at least another five years and probably longer. Although O'Hagan says the board's job is not metric promotion but education, he concedes it is a thin line.

"It is very hard to speak about the benefits of the metric system without seeming to be promoting," he said.

But the federal push — whether called promotion or education — is moving the conversion along more slowly than expected for a variety of reasons.

"In terms of industry, the economic conditions are not favorable," O'Hagan said.

Elevating the mundane: Life becomes charming and poignant when the small objects of everyday existence are beautiful to handle and behold. So the Japanese believe.

Pier 1's collection of Uchiwa, non-folding fans, depict scenes from old prints as well as paintings from the Noh Theater: Kabuki actors and high-ranking courtesans who fascinated the society of old Japan.

Corner gas station uses $50,000 computer

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — It's the old corner gas station down on Assembly Street, where you can catch a bit of shade on a steamy day under the peeling brick portico. It's where the Cromer brothers sell peanuts.

And if you don't like peanuts, the Cromer boys, James and J.D., whomp up a corn dog and soda or a mound of cotton candy.

J.D. may draw the soft drink himself, and he works fast. That's one reason — the great service — for the $50,000 computer behind the counter, keeping tabs on a business that should gross $3 million this year.

The Cromers aren't just running a peanut stand. Their business is cheap thrills wholesale — carnival trinkets, candy and gum, plastic games, pennants, prizes and party favors.

They sell cotton candy machines, hot dog roasters and other concession equipment to schools, carnival companies and civic clubs. They have bingo and raffle supplies, candy apple cookers and vending machines.

Their warehouse is a fantasyland of vampire teeth, big plastic ears, rubber spiders, noisemakers and balloons by the hundreds, thousands, tens of thousands.

"Used to be we'd buy a thousand of this or that," James says. "Now we buy just about everything in truckloads."

But it all began with the peanuts and a wisecracking sign put up by the late Julian D. Cromer that still has tourists doing double-takes 43 years later.

Julian was James' and J.D.'s father. His sign says "Cromer's Peanuts, Guaranteed Worst In Town."

A competitor had been telling everyone that Cromer's peanuts were no good. Julian's wry response not only assured his success, it made his business a landmark. And the enterprise has been expanding ever since.

As James tells it, a carnival operator wanted to know why she couldn't buy popcorn supplies along with the peanuts. "We thought it was a good idea, so dad finally gave us $500, and we got a popcorn popper, cotton candy machine and snow cone machine.

DEAR ABBY

Only little boys kiss and tell

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I am a 23-year-old, fairly popular male who dates a variety of girlfriends.

Abby, how come every time I date a new girl, the guys ask me if the girl fools around and did I score with her? They don't even ask me if I like her, or how nice she is, etc.

What is a good comeback line to use when I'm asked these questions?—B. K., in Minn.

Dear B. K.: Don't dignify juvenile questions with any kind of "comeback." Little boys kiss and tell. Grown men do not report scoring or striking out.

DEAR ABBY: I was dating a guy I really liked for about six months. (I'll call him Marty.) He proposed a couple of times, but I'm 23 and not ready for marriage yet. We had some really good times together.

The problem started when Marty lost his temper and gave me a hard shove. For a minute I was afraid he was going to hit me, but he didn't. (Not then.) When it happened a second time, I decided to stay away from him, but he called and apologized, saying he'd been drinking and was upset about something else, so I saw him again.

One night while Marty and I were out, I ran into an old friend (male) so I stopped to talk to him for a few minutes. Later that evening Marty accused me of coming on to the old boyfriend, and he really lost his temper and started hitting me.

Abby, he beat me so badly I ended up in a hospital! After I was discharged Marty said he didn't mean it, he loved me and swore it would never happen again.

I should have learned my lesson months ago when he first started shoving me around, but no, I had to learn the hard way.

I hope this letter will be a warning to other women not to wait as long as I did to tell these macho jerks to hit the road.—J.N.D., PITTSBURGH

DEAR J.N.D.: If only a few women learn that the most violent beatings always begin with a shove, a punch or a twisted arm, it will be well worth a shot in this column.

FDA warns women using Rely product to switch until tests completed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Although it doesn't know why, the government says women who use Rely tampons seem to run a greater, yet still very small, risk of contracting toxic shock syndrome.

And until its laboratory tests are finished, the government says, women who use the brand should switch to another brand of tampon or use sanitary napkins at least some of the time.

Wednesday's warning by the Food and Drug Administration and the Center for Disease Control cited a CDC study that found 71 percent of 50 women who contracted the sometimes-fatal disease during the summer had used the product.

Procter & Gamble, Rely's manufacturer, challenged the government's findings, saying they were based on fragmentary information.

TWENTY-FIVE DEATHS have been attributed to the newly recognized malady since 1975. Its victims are nearly always women, usually no more than 30 years old.

The CDC believes the disease is caused by an infection involving Staphylococcus aureus, a bacterium that may occur in up to 15 percent of the female population.

Victims experience a rapid drop in blood pressure often resulting in shock, sudden high fevers, vomiting, diarrhea and a sunburn-like rash, often on the fingers and toes, which is followed by peeling skin.

The CDC linked tampons to the disease in June, but without singling out any brand. The agency also said then that it saw no reason for women to stop using tampons.

Asked why Rely was now being cited, Dr. Kathryn Shands, a CDC epidemiologist, said officials believed they "have an obligation to inform American women when we find a factor which we think is a risk for them."

THE CDC CONTACTED 50 of 52 women known to have suffered from toxic shock syndrome in July and August. As a check on its findings, the agency also surveyed 150 women of similar ages and from the same parts of the country.

All the women who suffered the disease had used tampons during their last menstrual period, as had 83 percent of the other group.

But Rely, while used by 26 percent of the control group, was the choice of 71 percent of the disease's victims.

An FDA spokesman who requested anonymity said an unconfirmed theory holds that Rely's absorbent material, tiny cellulose sponges held together by a wrapping material, may act as a breeding agent for the bacteria because of the way the tampon is constructed.

While tampons generally came under suspicion because they could trap the bacteria and provide a good environment for their growth, the Rely has been especially suspect because of its peculiar construction.

THE GOVERNMENT GAVE Procter & Gamble and the four other major tampon makers until a week from today to comment on the CDC study and on other research into the tampon-toxic shock link.

Procter & Gamble promised to cooperate in the search for the cause of the disease, adding that "singling out one brand ... may give the misleading impression that the problem has been solved."

The FDA, which regulates tampons as medical devices, will then have several options, including ordering package warning labels or proposing a recall.

One study, by the Wisconsin state health department, estimated the risk of contracting the disease at about 3 out of 100,000 women of menstruating age per year.

Other studies have been conducted by the Minnesota and Los Angeles County, Calif., health departments.

Sidney Wolfe, head of the Ralph Nader-affiliated Public Citizen Health Research Group, said the FDA should have removed Rely from the market immediately.

Rely was first marketed in the Midwest in 1974. From there, it was introducted in the western United States and, earlier this year, went into nationwide distribution. A company spokesman, also requesting anonymity, said it was considered a "success," although sales figures were not

Young girl gets new liver

DENVER (AP) — Laura and Mike Pagel fretted in a hospital waiting room for 10 hours as doctors worked to give their 8-year-old daughter Traci a new liver, the only operation that could save her life.

"It was just one big relief to see that doctor smile when he walked out of the operating room," said Laura Pagel.

Traci, of Streamwood, Ill., sat in her mother's arms Wednesday following the successful liver transplant operation.

"We were told we could have watched the operation but we would have been too nervous," Mrs. Pagel said. "All we could do was sit and wait while the doctors worked on her."

Her husband said, "Our happiness is so great, we just can't explain it, we can't tell you how good it feels to have her alive. We've waited a very long time for this day, through eight years of hard times and prayer. Now, we hope our luck will change."

Traci has had a malfunctioning liver since birth. In a normal child, the liver helps eliminate waste chemicals and process the vitamins vital to growth.

Because of her liver problem, Traci weighs just 33 pounds, about half the size of most children her age. She has spent much of her life in hospitals.

Dr. Thomas Starzl, head of the operating team, took the liver of a 4-year-old girl who had suffered irreparable brain damage and implanted the organ in Traci on Tuesday at the University of Colorado Transplant Center.

Starzl, who pioneered the liver transplant operation, said Traci was in stable condition Wednesday.

Mrs. Pagel and her husband will stay with friends in Denver to be near Traci during her recovery period, which doctors estimate will require up to two months.

Traci's father operates a fork lift five days a week and then goes to a second job as a courier for Federal Express to help pay for Traci's medical bills. Mrs. Pagel said Streamwood residents have raised more than $24,000 to pay for the family's trips to Denver.

"We just can't believe how generous people have been with their money, as well as their time," Mrs. Pagel said. "The firemen in our hometown have stood on the street corners and collected money in their boots to help us."

The transplant has risks, as only half of all liver transplant patients survive a year after surgery.

Wanda said she found this recipe she makes only for special occasions in a magazine about 12 years ago.

SNOW-PEAKED FROZEN TORTE

¾ cup lemone juice
2 tsps. finely grated lemon peel
2 cups granulated sugar
dash salt
½ cup water
11 eggs
1 quart heavy or whipping cream
1¼ cups confectioners' sugar
2½ tbsps. all-purpose flour
¼ tsp. double-acting baking powder
½ tsp. vanilla extract
2 cups chopped walnuts
1 cup chopped pecans
dash cream of tartar

A week or so before serving, in a saucepan put ¾ cup lemon juice, 2 tsps. finely grated lemon peel, 1¼ cups granulated sugar, dash salt and ¼ cup water and simmer 10 minutes then add ¼ cup of cold water.

Meanwhile, in medium bowl, with electric mixer at high speed, beat 6 egg yolks until very thick (refrigerate egg whites, covered). With mixer at low speed, slowly beat lemon mixture into egg yolks. Pour mixture into double boiler, cook, stirring, until thickened. Refrigerate until cool.

Whip 1 quart heavy or whipping cream until soft peaks form. Fold into lemon mixture. Turn into a 15½"x10½"x1" jelly-roll pan; freeze mousee; wrap; freeze again.

Several days before serving, make Nut Tort this way; in bowl beat 5 egg yolks with mixer at high speed until very thick; then beat in 1¼ cups confectioners' sugar, 2½ tbsps. regular all-purpose flour, ¼ tsp. double-acting baking powder and ½ tsp. vanilla extract.

Heat oven to 300 F. Into batter stir 2 cups finely chopped walnuts and 1 cup finely chopped pecans. Then beat 5 egg whites until stiff, but not dry. Fold completely into nut mixture. Turn into another greased, floured 15½"x10½"x1" jelly-roll pan; spread level and bake for 45 minutes. Cut crosswise, at once, into 3 equal pieces. Remove with wide spatula to wire rack to cool. Remove reserved egg whites from refrigerator.

Unwrap and cut mousse, crosswise, into 3 equal pieces. Place 1 nut layer on small cookie sheet, top with 1 mousse layer, repeat, alternating 2 nut and 1 mousse layers. (Keep 1 mousse layer frozen to be used for dessert later.) Place torte, on cookie sheet, in freezer.

Beat up reserved egg whites with dash cream of tartar, gradually beat in ¾ cup granulated sugar, beating stiff. Use to frost torte, peaking meringue. Freeze.

Early on seving day heat oven to 500 F. Lightly brown meringue on torte (it takes 3 or 4 minutes); return to freezer.

To serve, cut into 1-inch-thick crosswise slices, then cut each slice in half lengthwise, place on serving plates and let stand at room temperature about 10 minutes. Makes about 24 servings.

Flats flatter fall fashions

NEW YORK (AP) — Tired of teetering on high heels? It's time to come down to earth because flats are back for fall in bright colors, new textures and jazzed-up styles, according to The Footwear Council.

Footwear trends of the season reflect a return to a classic look, the Council reports. Loafers, moccasins, oxfords and simple pumps dominate fall's well-heeled scene.

These low-heeled shoes combined with fashion's higher hemlines mean that more leg will be showing. Thus, "leg-dressing" has become an important factor in fall's fashion silhouette. Although sheer stockings may have been the perfect complement to mid-length skirts and high heels, fall's new lower-heel and higher-hemline fashions demand a change, the Council points out.

To achieve the most flattering look, it's best to wear flats with textured, patterned and opaque stockings, socks and leg warmers. This gives the legs new interest and decreases the visual distance from heel to hem.

The Footwear Council offers the following tips to add a fresh dimension to your own autumn outfits:

—Start your fall wardrobe from the bottom up. Select shoes with an eye towards fashion, comfort, and quality. Picks of the season include timeless, versatile styles to mix and match with a number of outfits.

—Try wearing two different types of leg coverings at once — a jazzy pair of argyles over ribbed, solid-color tights will look super with the new oxfords. Anklets work well with patterned or opaque stockings when matched with pumps.

Delta Sigma Theta sorority encourages voter registration

Members of the Midland Alumnae Chapter of Delta Sigma Theta Sorority Inc. have joined forces to help get more of the eligible Midland voters registered by the Oct. 3 deadline.

The sorority members have been working the past two Saturdays at local grocery stores. "We plan to continue our efforts at the grocery stores and by walking blocks if necessary," said Betty Merritt, chairman of voter registration in the group.

"Our project is designed to address the need for more registered voters in Midland," she said. "By this, we hope to foster the people's awareness of the immense power and influence of the vote and to motivate more citizens to participate in political decisions," she said.

"Delta Sigma Theta urges everyone to use their influence at the polls and register today," she added.

Delicacies of the deep are popular fare

By TOM HOGE
AP Wine and Food Writer

According to legend, a page was added to our American culture when a Pilgrim Father happened to be strolling along a lonely New England beach. He saw a group of Indians cooking clams and fish over hot rocks covered with steaming seaweed.

Fortunately the Indians were friendly and they initiated the settler into the mysteries of the clambake.

His fellow colonists liked it so well they gradually added touches of their own until the simple bake began growing into a multicourse banquet. Today it runs the gamut from creamy New England chowder and steamed clams to lobsters, sausages, corn, chicken and, finally, slabs of apple pie.

New England was the cradle of the clambake, but it is not the only region to pay tribute to the mollusk and its finny cousins.

Virginia marks the opening of the oyster season each September with festivals featuring oyster stew, barbecued oysters and oysters pickled Southern style in cloves and vinegar.

Tennessee, home of the Southern fish fry, serves tons of catfish crackling crisp every year, along with cornmeal hush puppies.

In Florida, fish and crustaceans are so plentiful that the state stages a year-round series of seafood fetes. Florida favorites include scallops paprika, barbecued eel and tender turtle steaks from the great loggerheads that swim in the warm waters off Key West.

Mississippi's gulf city of Biloxi is famed as a shrimp and oyster port where a crew may haul in as much as 50,000 pounds of shrimp in a single season.

Shrimp festivals are the thing in Biloxi, with such specialties as jambalaya, gumbo and shrimp stuffed in eggplant and tomatoes. Here's the recipe for a jambalaya that was the centerpiece of one festival.

JAMBALAYA

½ cup olive oil
1 large onion, chopped
1 medium sweet green pepper, diced
1 cup celery ribs, diced
2 garlic cloves, minced
1 can tomato sauce (about 12 ounces)
1 large potato, diced
1½ pounds raw shrimp, peeled and deveined
1 cup raw rice, well washed

Fry, in olive oil about 20 minutes over low heat, onion, green pepper, celery and garlic. Add can tomato sauce. In separate pot in quart of water, boil diced potato till soft. Add potato to tomato sauce-vegetable mix and simmer another 20 minutes. Add raw shrimp and cook 15 minutes more. Finally, add rice and potato water to mixture and simmer another 20 minutes till mixture is virtually dry. Serve with green salad, crusty French bread and chilled rose wine. Serves 4-6.

Reader request: Plan flan with fresh fruit

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

DEAR CECILY: My husband and I enjoy the flan — a rich custard with a caramelized sugar sauce — we order for dessert in a Spanish restaurant. Recently a friend told me that in Spain the flan is sometimes served with fresh fruit. Would you give a recipe for the flan and suggest the fruit we might serve with it? — GOURMET.

DEAR GOURMET: I have never encountered flan served with fruit in the United States, but I read long ago that it was not unusual to do so in Spain. As a result I tried a lovely recipe for the flan and offered it with fresh peaches. The combination was delicious. Fresh peaches from California may be with us until mid-October, so if you can capture some you and your husband can enjoy this dessert at home. — C. B.

PEACH FLAN

2-3rds cup sugar
6 large eggs
1 pint half-and-half
1 teaspoon vanilla
1 pound (4 medium) ripe peaches
Orange juice

Pour 1-3rd cup of the sugar into a heavy 8-inch skillet (an enameled iron one is fine) in an even layer. Cook over medium heat, stirring constantly with a wooden spoon, until the sugar turns yellow and lumpy and then becomes a golden-brown liquid — 5 to 10 minutes. Immediately pour into a warmed, round 8- by 2-inch pan from a 3-tier party cake pan set. Quickly tilt pan to evenly cover bottom; set aside.

With a hand-operated rotary egg beater or a whisk beat eggs until yolks and whites are just blended; add the remaining 1-3rd cup sugar and beat to blend; add the half-and-half and vanilla and beat gently to blend. Strain through a fine-mesh strainer into prepared pan. Set into the round 12- by 2-inch pan from the 3-tier party cake pan set. Into outer pan pour enough hot tap water to come up about as high as custard.

Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven until a small metal spatula inserted between center and edge of flan comes out lean — about 35 minutes. Remove flan from water bath; cool in the 12-inch pan filled with cold water. Remove flan from water; cover tightly with saran and chill. Before serving, peel and slice peaches; douse with a little orange juice. Loosen edges of flan and unmold into a wide shallow serving bowl; surround with the peaches. If at hand, garnish with a large mint sprig.

Makes 6 servings.

Abortion ruling may be felt

Medicaid funding may begin disappearing

By RICHARD CARELLI

WASHINGTON (AP) — Women on welfare now face the reality of a Supreme Court ruling announced 2½ months ago as Medicaid money for most abortions begins to disappear, perhaps today.

With a one-sentence ruling, the nation's highest court refused Wednesday to reconsider its June 30 decision freeing the federal government and individual states from having to pay for most abortions wanted by poor women.

In the seven years since the Supreme Court legalized abortions, about one-third of the more than 1 million legal abortions performed in the United States each year have been paid through Medicaid.

The June ruling upheld the constitutionality of the so-called Hyde amendment, a congressional restriction on Medicaid spending for abortions.

Named for Rep. Henry Hyde, R-Ill., its original sponsor, the appropriations measure bars Medicaid spending for abortions except when a woman's life would be endangered by childbirth or in cases of promptly reported rape or incest.

The measure is expected to lower the number of Medicaid abortions each year to fewer than 2,000.

Individual states still can choose to pay for all or most Medicaid abortions. Such payment by many states appears doubtful, however, without matching federal dollars and in the face of growing political pressure to follow Congress' lead.

Nine states and the District of Columbia made local Medicaid money regularly available for all medically necessary abortions even when the Hyde amendment was in effect. The states are Alaska, Colorado, Hawaii, Michigan, New York, Washington, Maryland, North Carolina and Oregon.

The Department of Health and Human Services continued paying for all medically necessary abortions while a coalition of some 280 groups and individual poor women asked the high court to reconsider.

Health Care Financing Administration spokeswoman Carol Rowan said the court's action Wednesday will have an immediate effect.

"We will go back under the Hyde amendment rulings," she said.

Government lawyers estimated that it might take as long as a week for the money flow to be cut off nationwide.

An official statement from Health and Human Services Secretary Patricia Harris was expected sometime today.

Under the Supreme Court's landmark decision in 1973, women enjoy a constitutional right to abort their pregnancies, at least during the first six months. The court's 5-4 majority last June said, however, that just because poor women have such a right does not mean the government has to foot the bill.

Plan would restore revenue sharing

WASHINGTON (AP) — The $2.3 billion state portion of federal revenue sharing, a victim of the unsuccessful drive to balance the 1981 budget, would be restored in 1982 under a Senate Finance Committee plan.

The committee also agreed Wednesday to set the trigger for a $1 billion anti-recession aid program at 7.5 percent unemployment, slightly less than the current jobless rate.

The panel was expected to complete work today on a proposed five-year extension of the general revenue-sharing program, which also sends $4.6 billion a year to local governments.

On an 11-7 vote, the Finance Committee agreed to resume the $2.3 billion state revenue-sharing program despite arguments from some senators that the federal government could not afford giving money to states while it was running budget deficits.

"The federal government has no revenues to share," said Sen. Harry Byrd, I-Va.

A general revenue-sharing bill, approved by the House Government Operations Committee, does not include any money for states although, like the Finance Committee bill, it provides $4.6 billion for local governments.

The Finance Committee also voted 10-5 to raise the national trigger for the anti-recession program from 6.5 percent to 7.5 percent unemployment for the most recent quarter.

Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y., opposed the higher trigger, arguing that it showed Congress was "getting used to high unemployment."

But Sen. John Chafee, R-R.I., said the proposed 6.5 percent trigger would be "too low" and would result in extremely high costs to the government.

Using the 7.5 percent trigger, however, still would put the anti-recession program into effect under current economic conditions. Unemployment over the most recent quarter has been about 7.6 percent.

In the House revenue-sharing bill, the $1 billion anti-recession aid program would be triggered by two consecutive quarterly declines in both the Gross National Product and wages adjusted for inflation.

An anti-recession fiscal assistance program is designed to help particularly hard-hit communities. President Carter endorsed the proposal in his recent economic revitalization package.

States holding down medical costs

BOSTON (AP) — Six states that dictate how much hospitals can charge for rooms appear to be succeeding in their efforts to hold down medical costs, a new study says.

The report, released today in the New England Journal of Medicine, said that although hospital charges are going up rapidly everywhere, annual increases are 3 percentage points lower in states that have rate-setting agencies.

"Substantial reductions in the rate of increase in the cost of a hospital stay can be attributed to the cost-containment programs," said researchers at Johns Hopkins University and the Maryland Health Services Cost Review Commission.

But in the same issue, the head of one hospital complained that the trend eventually could reduce the quality of care delivered by hospitals.

According to the most recent figures available, Americans spend $60 billion a year on hospital bills. Those costs have quadrupled since 1965 and doubled since 1975.

Six states — Connecticut, Maryland, Massachusetts, New Jersey, New York and Washington — have agencies that set rates for hospital rooms and for other hospital services, such as use of laboratories and operating rooms.

Researchers found that for the past three years, the average annual rate of increase in hospital costs has been 11 percent in rate-setting states and 14 percent in other states.

In his accompanying editorial, Dr. Charles A. Sanders, general director of Massachusetts General Hospital, conceded the boards may be working and said the finding "must be extraordinarily satisfying" for people interested in saving money.

But the rate-setting agencies pay attention solely to short-term economies, he said.

"The unhappy but inevitable result of this narrow attitude is erosion of services," he said. "If such a course is perpetuated, the entire hospital system could follow the course of the railroads, the post office, or any of the public utilities: service industries robbed by government intervention of initiative, high performance and effectiveness."

Air Force probing ejection

By The Associated Press

Officials said an Air Force staff sergeant who ejected himself from a B-52 flying a training mission over central Arkansas did so because he thought the plane had gone into an uncontrolled dive and would crash.

Officials at Barksdale Air Force Base, La., said Wednesday that Sgt. Charles J. Johnson, 26, experienced a sensation of weightlessness and activated his ejector seat.

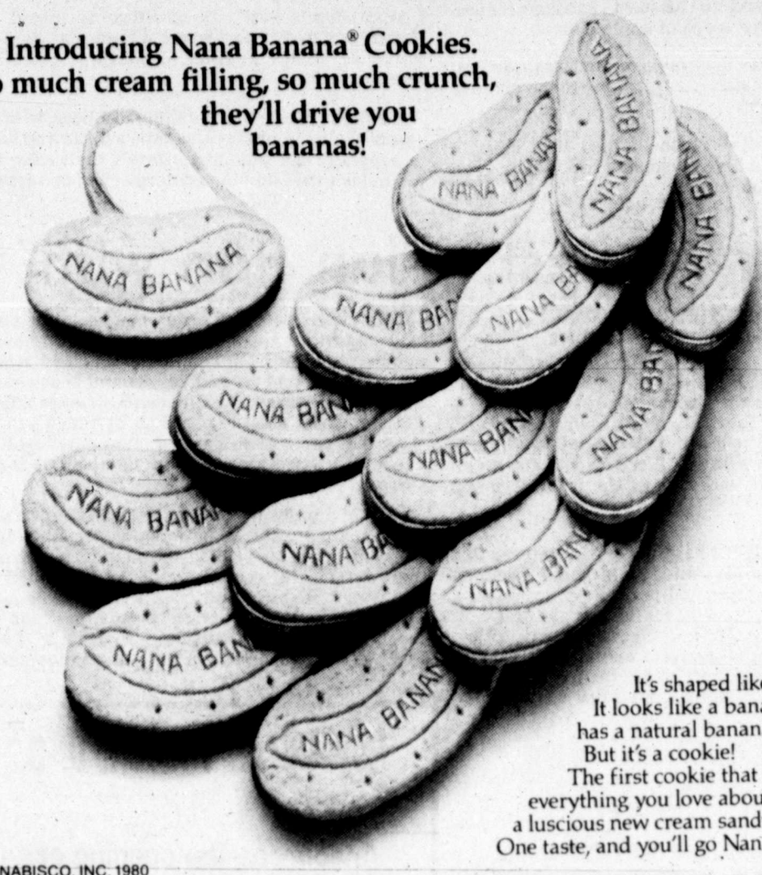

He floated to earth from an altitude of 29,000 feet, or about 5½ miles, landing in remote woods in Grant County.

Johnson hiked about 10 miles through the rural area and along state Highway 46 until a passing motorist gave him a ride to Sheridan.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Caffeine causes many problems

Dear Dr. Solomon: My wife is never satisfied. Now that she's gotten me to give up cigarettes, she's after my coffee. I realize she's concerned about my health; she says she's too young to be a widow and doesn't look good in black, but enough is enough. I knew the cigarettes weren't doing me any good and that I should have stopped smoking long ago, but does coffee fall into the same category? And if it does, what about the decaffeinated version? — Fred.

Dear Fred: Although consumer groups have petitioned the Food and Drug Administration (FDA) to remove caffeine from its GRAB list — that is, substances generally recognized as safe — the lore is still put on its possible harmful effects. The concern about caffeine was prompted in part by laboratory tests that showed that caffeine can cause brith defects in rats and other animals.

The FDA notes that caffeine is a drug found naturally in coffee, tea, cocoa and chocolate. In addition, it is added to a variety of cola beverages as well as baked goods, frozen dairy products, candy, gelatins and puddings. As a result, almost all age groups are exposed to it in some form.

Caffeine acts as a stimulant to the central nervous system, and can lead to nervousness, irritability, sleeplessness, anxiety and heart palpitations. It also is used in a number of over-the-counter drugs including some designed to alleviate the symptoms of headaches, colds and allergies.

Many people, apparently not willing to assume that caffeine is safe, have either cut down on their coffee consumption or switched to a decaffeinated brand. The caffeine in these brands generally is removed by chemicals, either by applying the solvent directly to the bean or by using heated water to extrace the caffeine, and then using the solvent to separate it from the resulting solution.

A potentially serious complication arose a few years ago when it was learned that high doses of the chemical used at the time to remove the caffeine — trichloroethylene — caused liver cancer in mice. At present, most companies use methylene chloride for this purpose. Hosever, methylene chloride belongs to the same family of chemicals as does trichloroethylene, and it currently is being tested by the National Cancer Institute. If methylene chloride is banned, manufacturers will have to develop other methods of removing the caffeine from coffee.

As you can seem there is no simple answer to your question. The effect of caffeine differs from one individual to another and depends on the amount consumed. Many people drink coffee in moderation with no ill effects. I suggest you check with your physician and let him be the judge of shether you should cut down on the amount of coffee you consume, switch to a decaffeinated brand or eliminate it entirely from your diet.

(If you have a medical problem, see your doctor. If you have a medical question, write to Neil Solomon, M.D., 1726 Reisterstown Road, Baltimore, Md. 21208. Dr. Solomon cannot give personal replies but will answer as many questions as possible in his column.)

Journalists get a glimpse of military

SIMONSTOWN, South Africa (AP) — The tightly guarded gates of fortress South Africa opened a crack recently to give outsiders a rare glimpse at the workings of the most powerful military machine in sub-Saharan Africa.

A group of foreign journalists were permitted to visit the nation's Simonstown naval base, in a sheltered harbor south of Cape Town, where as many as 50 ships can berth at one time — more than the navy has. The reporters saw, among other things, sailors undergoing submarine-warfare training in modern simulators.

Crewmen jolted back and forth in a life-size submarine control room on pneumatic stilts. They fought steering controls and groped for hand holds as naval officers, to the amplified sounds of roaring water, punched a fatal water leak into a computer. The submarine "sank" with all hands.

In another room of the multimillion dollar submarine headquarters, sailors used other computer simulators to track enemy ships through a periscope and sink them with torpedoes.

South Africa has 63,000 men and women under arms and a mobilization strength of 404,000, according to the authoritative International Institute for Strategic Studies in London.

And, in spite of international arms embargoes because of its apartheid race segregation policies, this white-governed nation has its own factories turning out an array of sophisticated weaponry, including jet aircraft, missiles, artillery, armored vehicles, infantry weapons and missile patrol craft.

If it doesn't have them already — South African government officials are deliberately vague — South Africa is known to have the technological capability to manufacture nuclear weapons.

South Africa's military budget for this year is the equivalent of $2.5 billion, and high gold prices in London, New York and Zurich help pay for it. South Africa is the world's largest producer of gold.

The South African navy has three Daphne-class, diesel submarines delivered from France 10 years ago. But Capt. Cyril Lautenbach, supervisor of the 2,500 workers in the base's shipyard, estimated that the navy now has the technological expertise to build its own subs, although "it wouldn't be cost effective."

In addition to the three submarines, the navy has three frigates for anti-submarine warfare, six guided-missile patrol boats — with six more on order from the local manufacturer — one destroyer, five large patrol craft, five coastal mine sweepers and an assortment of smaller harbor craft. It is not a superpower navy but no black African nation can yet match it.

Military strategy as promulgated by the government calls for defense of South Africa only, without becoming involved in East-West struggles.

This was not always so. Traditionally, South Africa identified with the West and cooperated openly with its armed forces, including NATO. Relations with Britain, the former colonial power, were especially strong.

Appraisals help separate old junk from treasures

NEW YORK (AP) — The elderly Russian emigre and his wife rode the bus to Sotheby Parke Bernet's new gallery for "Heirloom Discovery Day" carrying a tea service, a few bowls and other decorative items.

They went home, a gallery spokesman said, with the knowledge that the small objects from the old country were worth an estimated $100,000.

But the couple didn't immediately put the objects up for sale. They said they liked having their treasures around and would think about it a while.

The appraisal, which continues through Thursday, is being held to celebrate the opening of the gallery at 72nd Street and York Avenue, an offshoot of Sotheby's Madison Avenue auction house.

When the gallery opened Tuesday with Gov. Hugh Carey and Mayor Edward Koch in attendance, there were 150 people waiting outside with possible treasures. During the day, some 1,200 had their antiques and art objects appraised by the gallery's experts.

First in line was a neighborhood woman with a Tiffany inkwell. She was told it was worth from $300 to $500. A Kirman rug pulled out of a closet brought an estimate of $7,000 to $9,000.

Another woman, told her 19th-century Oriental panel was worth $3,000 to $5,000, said she would stop using it as a tablecloth and bedspread.

Peter Bednar, who came from Plains, Pa., to have his Tiffany water-lily lamp appraised, also consigned his treasure when he found out it was worth $30,000 to $50,000. He said he paid $500 for it 10 years ago, adding he could use the money for the restaurant he wanted to build alongside his motel.

The elderly couple brought only a small part of a collection the husband started more than 40 years ago.

The Russian, who wished to remain anonymous for fear of burglars, said he came to the United States in 1921 and got a job sweeping floors in a millinery factory.

Before long, he owned the factory and began to pick up things that reminded him of his native country — things a poor lad like himself could never have owned in the days of the Czar.

They weren't too hard to find here in those days, because both Russian emigres who fled the revolution and the Soviet government itself were selling off treasures.

One was a vase made by Ovchinnikov of Moscow in the late 19th century. The old man recalled paying $150 for it. Sotheby's expert on Russian decorative art, Gerard Hill, told him it was worth $10,000 to $12,000.

Nuts

U.S. edges ahead of Iran in world pistachio nut race

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States has edged ahead of Iran in the world's pistachio nut race and is gaining rapidly on Turkey, the leader.

But Australia, a late starter, may be gaining in the pecan event, traditionaly dominated by the United States in the world tree-nut finals.

It's all there in the Agriculture Department's annual report on "Nuts" published by the Foreign Agricultural Service, a 135-page statistical treatise about all sorts of nuts from almonds to walnuts.

"In recent years, as incomes have risen and consumers' tastes have included more natural foods, there has been a strong surge in demand for most tree nuts," it said.

"This increase in demand has resulted in higher prices that have encouraged increased plantings by the major producing countries and, in a few cases, encouraged non-producers to begin production."

Reviewing the nut situation, the report noted:

—The United States has begun producing pistachios, with the likelihood of becoming one of the world's largest suppliers in the near future.

—Commercial cashew production began in the early 1970s in Brzil. The major cashew-producing countries in East Africa have begun the processing and exporting of cashew kernels.

—Pecan production, once limited to North America, is in the experimental stage in Australia, South Africa and Israel.

—While statistics are generally not available, it is known that macadamia production is expanding in several areas of the world.

Take pistachios. Without any reference to last year's revolutionary turmoil, the American hostages or other developments, the report showed Iran's pistachio output in 1979 plummeted to 10,000 metric tons of commercial production from 60,000 in 1978.

Perhaps most dramatically, U.S. pistachio production, which was not even reported as recently as 1976, rose to 4,100 metric tons in 1977, dipped to 2,300 in 1978 and then jumped to 15,600 metric tons last year.

Pecan production on a global basis was reported at 129,600 metric tons in 1979, dominated by the U.S. output of 95,500 metric tons.

But beginning in 1976, the report showed, Australia had a commercial pecan output of 100 metric tons. That grew to 400 in 1977 and to 600 metric tons in 1978. The report did not show last year's Australian pecan harvest.

A metric ton is 2,205 pounds. The weights are on the basis of unshelled nuts.

When it comes to almonds and walnuts, the United States is still the big producer.

Last year's U.S. almond harvest of 158,100 metric tons accounted for three-quarters of the world's commercial production. And walnut production, at 263,200 metric tons, was 72 percent of the world output.

Direct marketing plan gets boost

Would aid farmers selling directly to consumers

WASHINGTON (AP) — Proponents of federal aid to help farmers sell food directly to consumers are getting a boost from a recent General Accounting Office report that gradually is making the rounds on Capitol Hill.

The GAO report, which was issued two months ago, also is helping to revive support in the Agriculture Department, where officials had expected the program to end this year.

According to two sources, who asked not to be named, there is a possibility bills will be introduced to extend the program. The GAO report advocates a beefed up direct-sales effort.

One said Tuesday there is "a fair chance" of Congress acting on such legislation if it returns to work after the Nov. 4 elections. It appears likely Congress will return, probably on Nov. 12.

In the Farmer-to-Consumer Direct Marketing Act of 1976, Congress authorized $3 million for the pilot program through Sept. 30, 1980. The money was made available as grants to states which, in turn, carried out various programs.

Those projects were conducted in 23 states and Puerto Rico. Surveys also were made to see how effective the programs were.

Preliminary results, including a survey made in 1978 — final results of those in 1979 and 1980 were not available — are encouraging, says the GAO report.

For example, the 1978 survey showed that in six states — Indiana, Michigan, New Jersey, North Carolina, Ohio and Pennsylvania — some 60,750 farmers, about 15 percent of all those in the six states, sold nearly $260 million worth of products directly to consumers.

The report said that according to the USDA those six-state sales in 1978 would have been projected nationwide to almost $1.6 billion.

"In some regions, especially in the Northeast, people are becoming more and more concerned about the extreme reliance on other regions or countries for most of their food and the resulting possibility of disruption of food supplies," the GAO report said. "This concern was amplified in mid-1979 by the oil crunch and truckers' strikes."

The report said not all types of farm goods can be grown in each region or area, but the "opportunity exists for some greater degree of local food independence" through stepped-up direct marketing.

"As farmer-to-consumer direct marketing increases, small-volume producers may be persuaded to keep their land and-or increase production," it said. "Not only could farm income be improved and consumers be provided with fresher, lower-cost food, but dependence on out-of-region food sources and on long-distance transportation may be reduced."

But the GAO recommended improvements in the federal program to make direct-sales projects more effective if Congress does extend the program. Better coordination with state, local and private activities is one area for improvement, it said.

Rain hampering world harvests

WASHINGTON (AP) — Hot, dry weather continues in many parts of the United States while rain is hampering harvests in Canada and the Soviet Union.

The Joint Agricultural Weather Facility of the departments of Commerce and Agriculture on Tuesday said that during the Sept. 8-14 period "hot weather continued to produce record high temperatures" in the mid-South.

"Only scattered shower activity occurred from Oklahoma to the Southeast and up the East Coast to Maryland, where soil moisture reserves are very short," it said.

"The remnants of tropical storm Danielle produced beneficial rain in large portions of Texas and into New Mexico, improving prospects for winter wheat sowing and rangeland recovery."

Millions of acres of crops were damaged from heat and drought earlier this summer, too severely for significant recovery regardless of recent rains, however.

The corn harvest, as an example, was estimated last week by the Agriculture Department at 6.53 billion bushels, down 16 percent from last year's record.

In the Soviet Union, wet weather continued to cause the quality of winter grain harvested in northwest European USSR to deteriorate and to delay planting winter grain for the 1981 harvest.

Light rain "maintained favorable winter grain sowing conditions" in the Ukraine and heavier rainfall in parts of the North Caucasus and lower Volga Valley "improved soil moisture for germination of winter grains" already planted, the report said.

Wet weather in Canada continued to hamper ripening of the wheat crop and caused delays in the northern and eastern crop areas of the Canadian prairie.

U.S. oat prices rise enough so that reserve program loans are called in WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department says prices of oats have risen enough so that the government is calling in loans made to farmers when they stored their grain in the reserve program.

Ray Fitzgerald, head of the department's Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service, said Wednesday prices of oats at the farm recently averaged above the "call" price of $1.68 a bushel.

House authorizes president to designate 'Agriculture Day'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House has passed a resolution authorizing the president to proclaim next March 19 as "National Agriculture Day."

Passed by a voice vote and sponsored by more than 230 House members, the measure now goes to the Senate.

The bill asks the president to issue the proclamation calling on all Americans to hold ceremonies pointing out the mutual dependence of farm and city people.

Coup put lid on fundamentalists

ANKARA, Turkey (AP) — In banning all political activity, the Turkish military put the lid on an Islamic fundamentalist movement that has led an increasingly strident campaign to move Turkey away from its pro-Western stance.

A fundamentalist rally on Sept. 6, during which hundreds refused to stand for Turkey's national anthem, provoked the generals who consider themselves the guardians of the secular precepts of modern Turkey, according to Turkish observers and Western diplomats.

Gen. Kenan Evren, who led the military coup last Friday, described the rally at a news conference Tuesday as one of those events that "have opened the eyes of our people. They saw the full magnitude of the danger."

While observers discount the possibility of a groundswell for an Islamic revolution like that which swept neighboring Iran, Islamic extremists had become increasingly vocal with the support of the country's third largest political party, the National Salvation Party.

In recent months, these groups introduced a bill in Parliament to require the teaching of Arabic in elementary schools and successfully lobbied for an annex for Moslem prayers in Istanbul's Hagia Sophia, which was built as a Christian church, turned into a mosque and then declared a museum by Kemal Ataturk, who created a secular state from the ruins of the Ottoman Empire in 1922.

At the same time, the fundamentalists stepped up their campaign for this predominantly Moslem nation to break relations with Israel and to move closer to the Arab world.

One week before the coup, the Salvation Party mustered the support of opposition groups in Parliament and ousted Foreign Minister Hayrettin Erkmen in a censure motion questioning the government's ties with Israel, its commitments to the North Atlantic Treaty Organization and its alleged failure to support the Moslem rebels in Afghanistan.

As invited representatives of Iraq, Pakistan, Sudan, the Palestine Liberation Organization and Afghan refugees looked on, thousands of fundamentalists called for the seizure of Jerusalem from the Israelis. Some held up banners in Arabic asking for the introduction in Turkey of the Shariat, the Moslem legal code. The banners said, "Shariat will come, violence will end."

Moslem priests have long spoken out against trends toward Westernization in Turkey, including the introduction of television, the wearing of blue jeans and ostentatious shows of wealth.

The National Salvation Party was formed in 1972, a successor to the National Order Party banned by the constitutional court on grounds of anti-secular activities. It runs strongest in provincial areas of the country, appealing to Moslem fundamentalists, small businessmen and small landowners.

In rounding up political leaders, the army picked up Erbakan and put him on the island of Uwunada off Izmir, along with the leader of a far-right party, Alpaslan Turkes. The Salvation Party's 29 members of Parliament have also reportedly been picked up.

The party's organ, the National Gazette, continues to publish, printing the military communiques without comment.

"All the hopes and ambitions of Islamic groups have fallen into pieces," said one newspaper editorial writer privately. "Like all other extremist activity in Turkey, they will try hard to keep a low profile and not provoke the army into a large-scale crackdown."

'How to Pack for Traveling' is set at MC

James Bramlett, director of the Community Services department at Midland College, has announced the scheduling of a new one-evening short course which was not listed in the current bulletin.

"How to Pack for Traveling," is a two-hour course meeting 7-9 p.m. Oct. 6. Course instructor is Sue Snelson.

While the course is mainly directed toward women, Bramlett noted that it will also appeal to men who have not done extensive traveling.

"Sue is going to teach students how to pack a suitcase," he said. "That may sound elementary to some, but what Sue teaches will surprise and enlighten even the seasoned traveler."

Mrs. Snelson, who has traveled more than 100,000 miles in the past three years, has the packing routine down to a science. She can pack enough clothing, shoes, toiletries, food items and even medicine in a bag small enough to fit under the seat of an airplane, according to Bramlett.

"Don't ask the tour guide" might be an appropiate title for Mrs. Snelson's course.

"I've heard so many travelers say they were going to ask their guides how much they should pack and what they should take along on a trip," Mrs. Snelson stated.

Avoiding such pitfalls is only a portion of what students will learn during the evening. Mrs. Snelson will pass along traveling tips, information about currency in Europe, how much money to take and the best methods for carrying it.

"How to Pack for Traveling" is appropriately scheduled prior to the Thanksgiving and Christmas season when many people will be planning holiday trips.

The fee for the course is $5 and Bramlett suggests that students preregister as soon as possible to reserve space in the class. Pre-registration is in room 156 of the MC Administration Building between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m. weekdays. The office will remain open during the lunch hour.

Fresno society keeps Civil War alive

SELMA, Calif. — Cannonades mingled with the crash of musketry fire — reminiscent of such traditional battlegrounds as Shiloh, Antietam and Gettysburg — echo throughout the an Joaquin Valley as the Civil War re-Enactment Society, Inc., a Fresno-based organization of some 50 members, seeks to preserve an awareness of the bloody conflict of 1861-65 that divided the nation.

Selma, a small agricultural center 15 miles south of Fresno that is known as the raisin capital of the world, celebrated its 100th anniversary recently. The soldiers in Union blue and Confederate gray had marched in the local parade, and then were to bivouac for the night at Pioneer Village, a complex of historic buildings that the community is developing into a park. The Johnny Rebs and Billy Yanks found the campground hot and dry. The children who accompanied their parents were irritable, and wives complained of the dust clouds swirling around the parade ground. Col. Vern Johnson, commanding officer of the unit made a popular tactical decision. He ordered tents struck, and a motorized column moved out in the direction of a shadier campsite in Fresno.

"We have a busy schedule during the summer," Johnson explained. "We appeared at a chili cook-off at Coalinga, and then on Father's Day we were over at Groveland on the north side of Yosemite. They always have a big celebration there every year. We put on a skirmish for them.

"Our biggest battle so far this year was in Madera, just north of Fresno. We were there for July 4th, and we staged the Confederate retreat from Gettysburg right in the town park. It's a pretty spot, with trees, a stream and bridges over it. The cannon was booming, rifles popping, and guys falling over like they were hit. We rehe$rse all that beforehand, just like when you're making a movie. The Confederates were b$dly outnumbered, however. We seem to have more Union blue uniforms that Confederate gray ones. But the people loved it."

The round of San Joaquin Valley celebrations is keeping Johnson's little army constantly on the march. They're also shooting up a lot of gunpowder.

"Each man supplies his own," Lt. Mike Walsh a Fresno teacher said, "but in one battle scene we've exploded $75 worth of ammunition in the cannon, not counting all the rifle fire. The Army doesn't subisidze us, so we hope for contributions."

Membership in the organization is open to volunteer enlistment. Recruits can elect to become either Confederate or Union soldiers, as the two opposing factions are needed to shoot at one another in mock battles. The enlistee provides his uniform and accoutrements. Some, like Col. Johnson have acquired authentic weapons and other equipment of the period, but these are considered too valuable to carry in the field. Replicas of Civil War rifles and pistols, which fire cap and ball charges, are used. Each newcomer starts as a private, but there is the opportunity for advancement.

Unarmed vice president pursues, catches bank robber

HOUMA, La. (AP) — A fleet-footed bank vice president thwarted the getaway of a thief who had robbed the American Bank & Trust Co. of two paper sacks full of cash.

"A customer pointed him out to me and I saw him rounding the corner, going around the bend, " said M.C. Perry, adding the robbery was so quick hardly anyone other than the teller knew about it.

Although he was not armed, Perry ran after the thief and caught up quickly.

"I shouted to him to stop, drop the bags and back up against a telephone pole," Perry said. "He did — would you believe it!"

The money was recovered, but officials would not say how Much.

As for Perry? "I don't want to make a habit of this," he said "I came home a little early to drink a cup of coffee and sit down and think about it all."

Cuban hijack policy pleases U. S.

MIAMI (AP) — Homeless Cuban refugees at Miami's Tent City were horrified to hear the news from Havana that they cannot return to their homeland, but U.S. officials were pleased the Cuban government promised stiff penalties for hijackers.

The Castro government's warning this week was the closest step toward cooperation between the two governments since a wave of hijackings to Cuba — nearly all blamed on homesick refugees — began on Aug. 10.

But within 24 hours, another plane had been hijacked and diverted to Havana. Federal Aviation Administration officials said the hijackers of the Detla Air Lines jet, bound from Atlanta for Columbia, S.C., early today, were Cubans.

The announcement in the Communist Party newspaper Granma turned back U.S. efforts to return dissatisfied veterans of the "Freedom Flotilla" boatlift which has brought 123,000 refugees to the United States since Fidel Castro opened the port of Mariel in April.

"It is necessary to reiterate that those who abandon the fatherland have no return: they went on a one-way trip," the Granma report said.

The statement also warned hijackers of "drastic penal measures" or "return to the United States to be judged in that country."

Cuban officials had said hijackers would be prosecuted, but U.S. officials had complained that lack of word on the fate of hijackers who reach Cuba fueled rumors among refugees here that sky pirates were being released to their families.

The announcement was greeted with some dismay in Miami's Tent City refugee camp.

"I don't know how, but I'm going back," said Lazaro Silva, 27, one of the 89 Tent City refugees who want to return to Cuba.

"That's horrible," said a tearful Maria González. "I wake up crying every day and go to bed crying every evening. I have two other daughters in Cuba. I have nothing here."

But Secretary of State Edmund Muskie welcomed the announcement.

"These positive actions will help curb one of the most common and dangerous forms of international terrorism," he said in a statement.

"We're delighted," said Federal Aviation Administration spokesman Fred Ferrar, who added that the knowledge that they're headed for jail and possible return to the United States should deter would-be hijackers.

Meanwhile, U.S. Coast Guard officials announced new measures aimed at putting an end to the continuing trickle of refugees from Cuba. The Coast Guard, after stopping 13 Cuba-bound boats on Monday, said its blockade was beefed up to "completely stop the illegal boatlift."

Fifteen cutters and nine U.S. Navy minesweepers and patrol boats are now on patrol in the Florida Straits, with Navy and Coast Guard planes also flying surveillance routes, said Rear Adm. Benedict L. Stabile, the Coast Guard's 7th District commander.

Although President Carter ordered the blockade May 14, about 100 refugees a day have continued to arrive in recent months aboard small boats that slipped through the blockade, comprised of nine to 13 Coast Guard cutters until this month.

Nitrite case points up need for law changes

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government's initial response to a study that seemed to link nitrites used as meat preservatives with caneer demonstrates the need to revise the nation's food safety laws, a House committee has been told.

Assistant Agriculture Secretary Carol Tucker Foreman acknowledged Tuesday before the House Agriculture Committee that it may seem the government has changed direction on the nitrite issue.

"In August 1978 we announced to the public that it might be necessary to discontinue the use of nitrite as a curing agent in meat and poultry," Ms. Foreman said. "Two years later we said, 'Never mind.' "

She said her department and the Food and Drug Administration tried to stress that their response to the early test findings was only tentative.

But that did nothing to halt the storm of controversy.

"From the outset it (the nitrite issue) has been a regulator's nightmare — with bacon and breakfast, hot dogs and baseball on one side, and the potential risk of cancer on the other," Ms. Foreman said.

The issue also has pointed out problems with current food safety laws.

In 1978, the Agriculture Department and the FDA announced that studies done at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology suggested a link between nitrites and cancer.

The government began laying plans to phase out nitrite curing agents and find alternatives to the compounds, used primarily to prevent botulism, a deadly form of food poisoning.

However, the USDA announced last month that a review of the MIT study has failed to confirm its findings.

Ms. Foreman and Jere E. Goyan, the FDA commissioner, testified that the initial results of the study left their agencies with little legal choice except to proceed with plans to ban nitrites.

Under a provison of food safety law known as the Delaney clause, the use of a food or color additive is prohibited if the substance is shown "to induce cancer when ingested by man or animals or shown to induce cancer when man or animals are exposed to it by any 'appropriate test'."

Rep. William C. Wampler of Virginia, the ranking Republican on the Agriculture Committee, said, "Twenty-two years after the adoption of the Delaney clause, it is time to reconsider the scientific assumptions on which that law was based."

Representatives of the meat industry agreed that the laws need to be revised.

Residents flee scene of derailment

CUSTER CITY, Pa. (AP) — Residents of this rural Pennsylvania town fled their homes shortly before several cars in a derailed train carrying crude oil exploded, unleashing a tower of flames, authorities said.

Several homes were destroyed, police said, and firefighters battled the blaze for several hours Wednesday night before gaining enough control to allow residents back to homes that were not damaged.

"The people are coming back. The fire's out. The danger's over," a Bradford police dispatcher said early today.

Police identified the train as a B&O freight train. The B&O Railroad is part of the Chessie System.

The train derailed about 10 p.m. Wednesday, spilling about 10 cars filled with oil, officials said. The rest of the 84-car train, including another 10 tankers, was pulled away.

Also aboard the train was a cargo of caustic soda. Firefighters feared that it might react chemically with water and called in firefighting crews equipped with foam.

Authorities also called in petroleum fire specialists from oil refineries nearby.

Cause of the fire was not determined immediately. It was not immediately known how may homes were consumed by the oil-fed fire.

"Flames were going 300 to 400 yards in the air," said Earnest Wilkerson, who fled with his wife and two children from their home less than a mile from the crash site.

"I was watching 'Shogun' on TV. All of the sudden the whole side of the house lit up. I opened the curtains and saw flames shooting in the air."

An evacuation center was set up at the nearby Bradford High School, but only a few people took advantage of it.

JIMMY'S WHITE HOUSE

Willie Nelson rates top entertainer with president, staff

By MAUREEN SANTINI

WASHINGTON (AP) — If there is one person who generates more hero worship among the White House staff than President Carter himself, it is undoubtedly country singer Willie Nelson. And when it comes to Nelson's White House fans, Carter is at the top of the list.

So it was not surprising that Carter rearranged his schedule Saturday night to attend Nelson's benefit concert for the campaign at the Merriweather Post Pavilion in nearby Columbia, Md. Nor that most members of his senior staff showed up.

What was a bit surprising was some of their attire. Carter didn't wear blue jeans — opting instead for dark pants and a sport shirt. The Maryland officials who accompanied him all wore dark business suits.

But the White House staff members were in country dress, blending perfectly into the young crowd. Jack Watson, White House chief of staff, added a big cowboy hat to his outfit of blue jeans and a blue denim vest. So did the president's physician, Rear Adm. William Lukash.

JIMMY CARTER has lived in the nation's capital for 3½ years, but he apparently has yet to learn his way around town.

A White House visitor once asked the president how to get to Georgetown, a fashionable residential and shopping section of the city less than two miles down Pennsylvania Avenue from the executive mansion. Carter said he had jogged along the tow path that borders the C&O Canal in Georgetown, but had no idea how to get there, according to a new book about Rosalynn Carter.

The book's author concluded that Carter's lack of knowledge of his surroundings stemmed from the fact that he hasn't driven a car in years and frequently is reading or talking to staff members when he is chauffered around.

IT USED TO BE standard practice, when a high-ranking officer visited a military base, for the resident commander to order the troops out ahead of time to "police the area," picking up cigarette butts, waste paper and any debris that might catch the eye of the brass.

The practice was immortalized in an old military expression: If it moves, salute it. If it doesn't move, pick it up. If you can't pick it up, paint it.

But when the commander-in-chief flew to Philadelphia recently and landed at the naval shipyard there, the all-volunteer force appeared to have had the day off. The propeller wash of Marine One, the presidential helicopter, sent cigarette butts and beer bottle caps flying across the Marine parade ground being used as a landing pad.

If he noticed, Carter, a former naval officer, didn't mention it as he strode from the field to his waiting limousine to drive into South Philadelphia to push his re-election campaign.

"We didn't think he'd use the shipyard," said one somewhat embarrassed Navy officer. "It's customary to leave the military out of campaign appearances."

THE NEWSPAPER BIBLE

Are you building on a good foundation?

God, in His kindness, has taught me how to be an expert builder. I have laid the foundation and Apollos has built on it. But he who builds on the foundation must be very careful.

For no one can ever lay any other real foundation than that one we already have—Jesus Christ.

But there are various kinds of materials that can be used to build on that foundation. Some use gold and silver and jewels; and some build with sticks, and hay, or even straw!

There is going to come a time of testing at Christ's Judgment Day to see what kind of material each builder has used. Everyone's work will be put through the fire so that all can see whether or not it keeps its value, and what was really accomplished.

Then every workman who has built on the foundation with the right materials, and whose work still stands, will get his pay.

But if the house he has built burns up, he will have a great loss. He himself will be saved, but like a man escaping through a wall of flames.

Don't you realize that all of you together are the house of God, and that the Spirit of God lives among you in His house?

If anyone defiles and spoils God's home, God will destroy him. For God's home is holy and clean, and you are that home.

Stop fooling yourselves. If you count yourself above average in intelligence, as judged by this world's standards, you had better put this all aside and be a fool rather than let it hold you back from the true wisdom from above.

For the wisdom of this world is foolishness to God. As it says in the book of Job, God uses man's own brilliance to trap him; he stumbles over his own "wisdom" and falls.

And again, in the book of Psalms, we are told that the Lord knows full well how the human mind reasons, and how foolish and futile it is.

Some say hike want hurt much

By WILLIAM GLASGALL
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — American motorists and homeowners shouldn't suffer much from Saudi Arabia's decision to raise the price of its crude oil by $2 a barrel, industry analysts say.

The Saudi increase will add "less than a cent a gallon" to average U.S. retail gasoline or heating-oil prices if dealers choose to pass the increase to consumers, said Tom Peake, manager of the economics department of Standard Oil Co. of California.

There will be "an insignificant increase" in oil-product prices in the United States, amounting to as little as "a quarter-cent-a-gallon," said economist John Lichtblau of the Petroleum Industry Research Foundation in New York.

The new Saudi Arabian price of $30 for a 42-gallon barrel of crude, announced Wednesday after a three-day meeting of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, is 125 percent above the $13.34-a-barrel OPEC's largest member was charging on Jan. 1, 1979.

OPEC oil ministers also agreed to cut the cartel's official base price from $32 a barrel to $30 and to freeze prices of all members except the Saudis' until the ministers meet in Bali, Indonesia, on Dec. 15.

Because no member's price will decline as Saudi Arabia's rises, the cartel's move amounts to a 70 cents-a-barrel, or 2 percent, increase in the average OPEC price to about $32.20 a barrel, analysts said.

But Lichtblau cautioned the Saudi increase "was a clear move toward a $32-a-barrel level" for the country that produces one-third of OPEC's oil. Saudi Arabia's price had been $4 under the former official OPEC base price.

Saudi Arabia provided the United States with 1.35 million barrels of oil a day in the first five months of 1980, equivalent to 8 percent of U.S. oil needs, according to Department of Energy statistics.

The impact of the $2-a-barrel Saudi price boost will be "less than the effect of decontrol," said Peake, referring to the lifting of federal price controls on crude oil produced in the United States.

Despite the upward pressures on crude prices, U.S. retail gasoline and heating oil prices have risen little since early summer because demand has been slumping.

"The oil market is extremely soft" following the more than 130 percent jump in OPEC prices since January 1979 which came after the revolution in Iran and subsequent Iranian oil production cutbacks, said Peake.

"There's a surplus of oil in world markets in excess of 1 million barrels a day," said William Brown, an economist at Chase Econometric Associates Inc. in Bala Cynwyd, Pa. According to Peake, the slump in oil use has left industry storage tanks "about as full as they can get."

Saudi Arabia said before its price increase was revealed that it would not cut its 9.5 million barrels-a-day oil output this year despite the world oil oversupply.

The Saudi refusal to reduce production could extend the oil glut, bring pressure on OPEC hawks including Libya, Algeria and Iran, to limit future price increases, and unify the cartel's current free-for-all pricing system.

The cartel's prices traditionally have been based on the charge for crude oil from Saudi Arabia, and the Saudis since last year have been attempting to win acceptance of a long-term program of moderate OPEC price increases every quarter.

The plan would tie the price of OPEC oil to changes in inflation, economic growth and foreign-exchange rates in the West and could be adopted at the December oil ministers' meeting in Indonesia.

"Toward year-end, price unity will be reached," Lichtblau said.

Stock market loses

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices rose sharply in early trading today but then fell back after reaching a 3½-year high. Volume was heavy in the aftermath of the OPEC meeting that failed to take decisive action to reduce the oil glut.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks, up more than 7 points in early trading, was down .85 to 964.76 after two hours. The Dow average, which gained 15.36 points the previous day, was briefly above 967. It has not closed that high since March 16, 1977.

Advances outnumbered declines by a 4-3 margin among New York Stock Exchange issues.

The Commerce Department reported personal income of Americans rose 0.8 percent in August, barely half the July rise and providing evidence the recovery from the recession is not a sharp one.

Evidence of an end to the recession had played a role in the rally, with the government on Wednesday reporting rising housing starts and factory operating rates.

During the sharp rise Wednesday it was thought there would be no oil price rise as a result of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries meeting in Vienna. But after the market closed Saudi Arabia agreed to raise its price by $2 a 42-gallon barrel, to $30.

Oil issues were mixed today. Texaco fell ⅛ to 34⅞, Atlantic Richfield was unchanged at 47¾ and Mobil climbed ⅛ to 69¾.

American Telephone & Telegraph fell ⅛ to 53¾. It reported higher earnings on Wednesday.

Technology issues also turned mixed. Storage Technology added ⅝ to 22¼. At the American Stock Exchange, Amdahl fell 2¼ to 30¼.

Big Board volume totaled a heavy 30.91 million shares in the first two hours of trading as the NYSE's composite index was unchanged at 74.57.

BUSINESS MIRROR

Reader's Digest issues brand new publication

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — In her 59th year, The Reader's Digest, self-described as "that worldly lady with the common touch," has given birth. Her first, it's a test-tube creation, conceived after long deliberation.

The new publication, named Families and carrying a Sept. 23 date, is probably the most carefully marketed product to reach the newsstands in years, having been pretested, tested, retested. It is, itself, a test.

In some markets, for example, it will cost $1.25, in others the price will be $1.95, and in still others it will cost $2.49 and contain 48 additional editorial pages. Sales to price-size ratios will be studied.

Some markets will be supported by newspaper advertisements, others by television, and some by radio. In certain markets no advertising at all is planned. Sales-ad ratios will be scrutinized for promotion guidance.

Readers are expected to help. In every 15th issue of the 400,000 print run a questionnaire will solicit reader responses, and future issues conceivably could be changed because of recommendations or criticisms.

In fact, the first issue of Families will probably produce as much information for the Reader's Digest people as it will for readers, and they will ponder and digest that information for many months.

Though the new publication is destined to be a monthly, the next issue won't be until April, a "confirmation" issue, and the regular monthly schedule isn't likely to begin until October of next year.

"We are more conservative than other publications about this," says Richard McLoughlin, publisher of both the Digest and Families. "We are approaching it prudently." The Digest, he reminds you, has never done anything of the sort before; it never published another magazine.

"Maybe a million people want this magazine, maybe five million,' said McLoughlin. "We don't really know until we put it out." But, he said, "we have an awful lot of hope."

In spite of the reliance on cold marketing science, Families is a product also of human feelings and convictions.

"We had considered many ideas in the past but it wasn't until now that we had one that produced a feeling in the gut," McLoughlin said. Probably five or six ideas were aborted in the past six years, he said, because "nobody had a feeling in their belly about them."

Families — note the plural — gave many Digest people that feeling. The family is "diversifying," said McLoughlin, father of five. "Mine is a conventional family, but we have divorced mothers, single fathers, stepparents, working mothers ..." In short, diversity.

And a diverse subject matter: acne, puberty, bed-wetting, pot, family backpacking, the value of the dollar, communicating, custody, dating, school marks, college, careers, emotional disturbance. Almost endless.

To find its stories the Digest will read everything available in newspapers, magazines and books, and probably will search through the contents of speeches and seminar discussions. Then it will condense.

Polish workers confused, worried

URSUS, Poland (AP) — "People in Poland used to sit in their chairs and watch the world go by. But now they are afraid. They just watch their chairs," said a young man outside the main gate at the Ursus tractor factory.

The young man, who asked that his name not be used, was referring to the doubts, confusion and insecurity among his 20,000 fellow workers at this plant because of rivalry between independent and state-controlled unions.

The rivalry is expected to intensify with word from Gdansk that independent unions from all over Poland will unite into a confederation. That will make Poland the only Soviet bloc country with rival national labor groups.

Many workers here and at other factories in Poland appear confused by the slogans and claims of the two groups and are uncertain which organization will better protect their interests.

The decisions of workers at this plant and others in Poland will determine the future of the country's independent labor movement and of the liberalization wave sweeping the country.

So far the tide appears to have been in favor of the independence forces. But the old trade unions have the advantage of money and state backing and are mounting a counterattack, promising to reform themselves while guaranteeing social and economic benefits.

In the new spirit of reform, the state-controlled steelworkers union has called for a congress next month to consider withdrawing from the Central Council of Trade Unions and operating independently.

And the metalworkers union, which represents employees at Ursus, is also expected to call such a meeting.

But many free trade union activists see this as a ploy by the old, state-run outfits to win back members by passing themselves off as "autonomous" labor groups.

"Well certainly that is what is happening now," said Janusz Onyszkiewicz, a leader of Mazowsze, an independent trade union federation in the Warsaw area.

"By changing their slogans, they are taking a bit of the wind out of our sails. So far they have managed to create a significant amount of confusion."

The degree of confusion was apparent at the Ursus plant, a factory complex in a grimy suburb of Warsaw known for its politically active employees.

In 1976 workers in Ursus and Radom staged strikes to protest meat price increaes which were eventually rolled back. And last July workers at Ursus were among the first to protest the meat price increases which eventually touched off the nationwide strikes in August that brought the government concessions.

This year a politically active group of workers at Ursus began organizing an independent trade union committee within days of the Aug. 31 agreement under which the government recongnized the right of workers to form independent unions.

The new Ursus group is affiliated with Mazowsze, a regional organization with members ranging from doctors to factory workers. Its temporary offices are in Warsaw's Club of Catholic Intelligensia, across the street from the Central Trade Union Council.

Elections to posts within Ursus' old trade union, which were to have been held from today until Monday, were suspended because so few workers took part, sources claimed.

One management official at the plant acknowledged that the new unions had gotten the jump on the old organizations and that the situation had left both workers and managers confused about the future.

"The new unions began organizing early," he said. "But there is more to operating a union than merely slogans. There are questions of finances and benefits."

One young worker who supports the independence movement said he thought at least some Ursus workers would be lured back to the old union by the promise of reform.

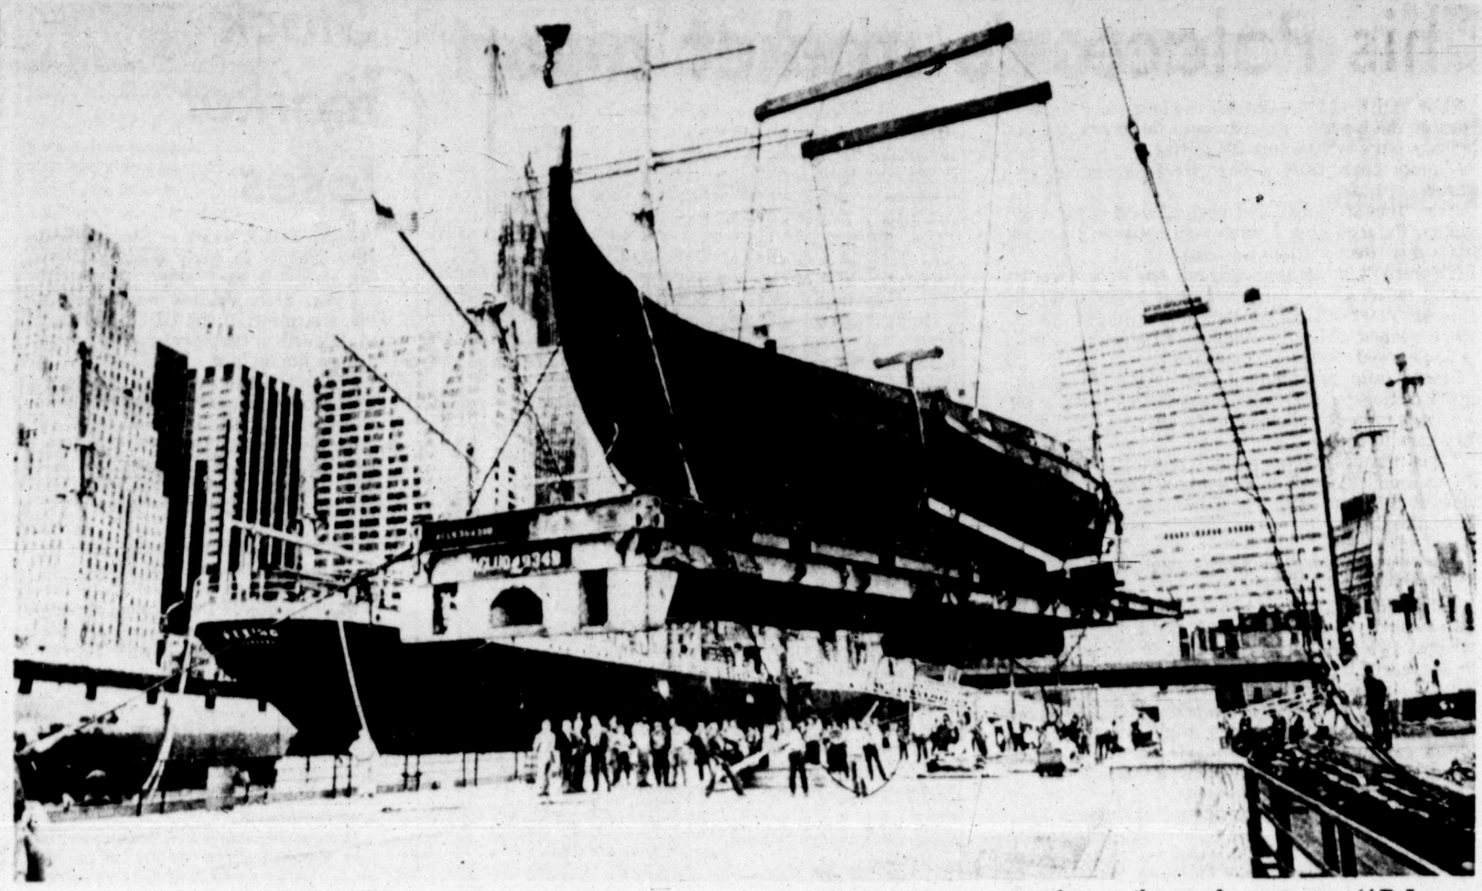

"A certain amount will come back," he said. "Management is using some pressure as far as financial problems are concerned. They tell people they may lose social benefits or not be able to borrow money from the union funds. In this way they try to get people to stay."

Worker sources say the financial benefits are frequently mentioned by management as a reason why workers should remain with their old unions.

But Onyszkiewicz said that under Polish labor law, many such funds, vacation homes and other benefits are actually the property of the factories and are only administered by the unions.

"It's a matter of reaching an agreement with management over who administers these things," he said. Polish labor unions do not receive state subsidies, he added, but operate largely from members' dues.

That would mean some large, independent organizations such as the ones in Gdansk might soon be on sound financial footing.

New lake OK'd

Prosecution rests case in KKK trial

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — The prosecution in the murder trial of four Ku Klux Klansmen and two American Nazis has rested its case after presenting seven weeks of testimony and such key evidence as videotapes of the November gunfire that claimed five lives.

The last of the tapes presented showed men firing guns at demonstrators at a Nov. 3 "Death to the Klan" rally sponsored by the Communist Worker's Party. Five party members and supporters were killed.

The trial, which has already lasted 13 weeks, was recessed on Wednesday. Proceedings are to resume Monday, when the defense is expected to begin a case based on a plea of self-defense.

Defense attorneys have indicated they will contend the defendants went to Greensboro on Nov. 3 to demonstrate peacefully and were ambushed by the protesters.

District Attorney Michael Schlosser has demanded the death penalty for the six. The state has not conducted an execution since 1961.

During the government's presentation, the otherwise drab courtroom took on the look of a yard sale as the prosecution spread its evidence before the all-white jury.

The evidence included a small arsenal of weapons, hundreds of photographs, CWP placards, a Confederate flag wrapped around a metal post with an American flag and bloody clothing.

Klansmen, openly identifying themselves, have been present throughout the trial, and one Klan leader often brought lunch to the defendants.

CWP members have refused to testify. In the early days of the trial, they frequently interrupted the proceedings or demonstrated outside the Guilford County Courthouse.

The other defendants are:

—Lawrence Morgan, 27, a Klansman from Lincolnton.

—David Matthews, 24, a Newton Klansman and father of three. His wife is expecting another child. A Guilford County sheriff's deputy who booked Matthews testified the defendant said: "They can't get me for all of them; I only got three."

—Roland Wood, 34, of Winston-Salem, a former Klansman and a Nazi when he was arrested. Wood now says he is a "born-again Christian."

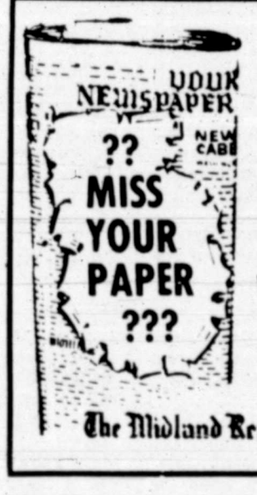

—Jack Fowler Jr., 37, also a former Klansman who now says he has dropped his affiliation with the Nazi party. Fowler, whose mother has died since his confinement, surrendered to the FBI after hitchhiking from Greensboro to Chicago.

Prosecutors have stressed that state law provides that someone participating in a felony resulting in a death can be convicted of first-degree murder even if that person did not do the actual killing.

The trial was expected to be a long one. Schlosser said recently that "not a stone has been left unturned in the preparation of this trial."

But, Schlosser said, "the omnipresence of three hate-oriented groups at every phase of the prosecution has hindered the orderly progression of the trial."

Crime wave has town worried

BUTLER, Mo. (AP) — A crime wave that left three people dead in three days has made a troubled town of this quiet farming community, which last recorded a homicide more than 18 years ago.

Residents are scurrying to buy door locks and seek security advice from police.

"People are nervous about going out to meetings of an evening," said C.A. Moore, editor of the Butler County News-Headliner. "They're getting extra locks put on their doors, and they're leaving lights on at night. They're just very uneasy. This is all anybody's talking about."

Joyce Welsh, 45, and Randall Fassler, 21, were shot to death Monday night at the Welsh home just northeast of Butler. Their deaths came 48 hours after Lyle Norman, a popular resident of the town of 4,000, was stabbed to death shortly after arriving home from a Caribbean cruise.

Adding to the uneasiness was a rash of burglaries at Butler businesses over the weekend.

Police received calls asking for tips on making homes more secure, and store owners reported increased lock sales.

A report that there had been a run on guns at local stores was "a rumor more than anything else," said police dispatcher Bill Cain. But he said he was "nearly positive" that some residents had purchased guns.

"People are a little on the skittish side," Cain said. "We haven't had anything like this in years and years and years."

Butler Police Chief Wayne Conaway said Saturday night's slaying was the first in the 18 years he has lived in the community, which is 60 miles south of Kansas City. He said authorities are questioning one man in that killing, but would not elaborate.

Police officer Ralph Silvers said Norman probably knew his killer and said authorities didn't believe the slaying was related to the double killing.

Police said Norman was stabbed 11 times. His 1979 automobile was taken, along with a wallet containing cash, credit cards and travelers checks. The automobile was found abandoned Monday near Texarkana, Ark.

Norman, a widower, lived alone and was scheduled to retire Friday from his job with the Butler post office. He had founded the Lyle Norman Players, a community group that performed charity benefits.

Mrs. Welsh, whose husband, Glen, was on a hunting trip to the Yukon, called Fasslers' parents on Monday night to say she was afraid there was a prowler in her home, the sheriff's office reported. The Fasslers are neighbors and their son worked for the farm implement company owned by Welsh.

Sheriff Leonard Hough said the Fasslers sent their son over to check.

The bound bodies of Mrs. Welsh and Fassler were found early Tuesday when the elder Fassler went to the home to see why his son had not reported to work.

Los Angeles in busing turmoil

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Public school officials were hustling today to comply with a state Supreme Court order that added thousands of students to a mandatory desegregation busing plan.

The Supreme Court's ruling adds 96 schools to the 57 previously contained in desegregation plan. The district, the nation's second largest public school system, has more than 700 schools serving 540,000 students.

The Los Angeles Board of Education was informed of the revamped plan Wednesday by Superior Court Judge Paul Egly, whose power to design the program was upheld by the high court.

In a letter to school board attorneys, Egly said his two special integration monitors must know by the close of business today how and when the board intends to include the schools in the program.

The 96 schools were among those axed from the plan by the board Monday night. An appeals court had granted the board authority to delete the schools Saturday, a decision later overruled by the Supreme Court.

School board attorneys sent a telegram Wednesday to the high court in San Francisco, demanding another hearing and threatening to take the matter again to the U.S. Supreme Court. Supreme Court Justice William Rehnquist last Friday refused to halt the dispute, which dates back to a civil rights suit first brought in 1963.

School Baord attorney G. William Shea said the state Supreme Court ruled on a petition brought by the American Civil Liberties Union on Tuesday before the board could respond.

"It's a denial of due process. They never heard our side of the story," Shea said Wednesday.

Meanwhile, classes opened quietly Wednesday with only a handful of peaceful demonstrations reported.

Witnesses said about 10 blacks picketing in favor of busing were outnumbered by 250 anti-busing white parents, but there were no arrests and no violence. Demonstrators also protested busing at White Point Elementary School, also in the harbor area. Both schools are in the mandatory plan.

This is the third year of mandatory busing in the 600-square-mile district, but Egly and school officials have been working on a final plan that was to have gone into effect Tuesday. It was to have been one of the largest integration programs in the nation, busing some 40,000 students in grades 1-9 at 153 elementary and junior high schools.

A few of the 96 schools restored by the high court ruling were to begin mandatory pupil reassignments Friday, with most following suit next week and all coming into line with the order by Sept. 29, district officials said.

This Palace not the Palace

A room costs $2.85 a day. No reservations required.

More than 50 blocks and several worlds away is another Palace Hotel. A room runs between $120 and $170 a day. Reservations advised.

If it weren't for the shared name, one Palace would hardly be aware of the other. But eager visitors, wanting reservations at the new midtown hotel which opened officially Monday, have been calling its 50-year-old namesake downtown.

Frank Gatto, president of The Palace Hotel Inc., and Ed Hogan, the hotel's manager, have been receiving more telephone calls for the new hotel than they care to take.

"This morning between 6 and 8, we got 20 calls," Hogan said. "A man in Argentina wanted a room between $100 and $150. Then there was a guy from Salt Lake City."

Gatto said he found the number of the new hotel in a newspaper and gives it out to callers who want the uptown Palace. "We don't take it out on them," he said. "It's not their fault.

"Last month we got calls from suppliers, people applying for a job and calling to see if we got their resumes, and we gave everybody the new number. We just want the Palace to straighten this out."

Security is tight at the new Palace Hotel, which boasts a sculpted wall clock by Augustus St. Gaudens and Stanford White, an Italian mosaic vaulted ceiling and Tiffany glass panels. Computerized keys and locks to rooms are changed after each guest.

Security is also tight at the old Palace Hotel. Gatto sits in a locked office off a cavernous room with folding chairs and cigarette and soda machines.

Dozens of men sit around the room — old men with white beards and thinning hair, young men with gaunt faces and thinning hair. One wears a suit. Most have only the barest of wardrobes.

The room is entered through a locked mesh gate. Heavily worn marble steps lead to the hotel. The landings, mustard and black linoleum tiles and dark green walls, are busy with hotel guests.

"It's my home," one guest mutters to no one in particular.

He leaves the building and walks out on the street beneath the battered blue and white metal Palace Hotel sign which flops back and forth on a street that earned its reputation from men who had seen better times.

"This is a men's lodging house," Gatto said. "It's for homeless, single men — men on the skids. We're their home. We're their family. We have a closeness with the men. There's a closeness between themselves.

"The men don't want to be photographed," he said. "Everybody wants to hurt us. They call us a flophouse."

The Palace Hotel on the Bowery has 500 rooms, each with a bed and a locker. Every floor has a bathroom.

At the Palace on Madison Avenue, there are 1,100 rooms, ranging from singles to two-bedroom suites. Bathrooms are equipped with telephones, scales, guest bathrobes, a lint remover, a bottle of mineral water, vials of shampoo and lotions, fragrant soap.

Dam breaks in India

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — A dam broke on a rain-swollen river, unleashing a flash flood that plunged two towns under at least 10 feet of water. Police feared the death toll would be high, the United News of India reported today.

UNI quoted police Superintendent B.B. Mishra as saying the flood Wednesday night swamped the towns of Gunupur and Gudari, about 350 miles southeast of Calcutta and about 45 miles inland from the Bay of Bengal in Orissa state.

Mishra said all 8,000 residents of Gudari were seriously affected by the flood from the raging Bansadhara River, and that several people were reported missing in nearby Gunupur, which has a population of 22,000, UNI reported.

Police here received a radio report from Gudari that it was inaccessible, Mishra said, and that a bank and the telegraph office in Gunupur were reported under three to five meters of water, according to UNI.

India has been battered by a fierce monsoon this year and the torrential rains have taken a heavy toll. UNI reported previously that the nationwide flood death toll had exceeded 1,600. In Uttar Pradesh, northern India, the most seriously affected state, it said nearly 40,000 villages had been submerged and 1.3 million houses damaged or destroyed.

Squatters give up school

FOREST HILL, La. (AP) — Mothers wept when a judge threatened daily fines unless they gave up a commandeered school building, and hours later the old school was empty. But the leader of a parents group resisting a desegregation order says makeshift classes will be on again next week — in church.

"We are going to our alternate plan. We probably won't have school (today), but we will be ready to go again by Monday," said Clyde Holloway, acting principal of the "squatters' school" at Forest Hill Elementary.

He told a crowd of about 500 — almost the entire population of the central Louisiana village — that classes would resume at three area churches.

"I think we are right, I think we are going to win, and we'll have Forest Hill School back before we know it," Holloway said.

Earlier, U.S. District Judge Nauman Scott told a packed courtroom that after midnight Wednesday, any adult found in the school would be subject to daily fines of $100 to $300.

Scott told 26 mothers and eight fathers subpoenaed early Wednesday he would not summon people to his court to be fined, but would simply put liens against their property.

"The court says that for every day you are in defiance there will be a fine," Scott said in issuing the restraining order. "I urge you to have the same forebearance that the court has exercised. What you do now is up to you, but I hope you will cooperate."

The parents took over the school and began classes on Sept. 9, after the school was closed under Scott's desegregation plan for Rapides Parish. The parents said they were not opposed to desegregation, but did not want to give up their community school, one of three closed by the plan.

The plan also imposed busing for 4,400 students. For the pupils of Forest Hill, it meant a daily 20-mile round trip. Of the 27,000 students in Rapides Parish, 9,000 are black.

Since the school was taken over, Forest Hills has been handling about 185 youngsters, including two black children. School officials say attendance elsewhere in the parish has been ragged but relatively normal.

At the evening meeting, attorney Chris Roy told the parents he will appeal "this silly, overbroad ruling" to the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans. He said closing the school denied the townspeople their rights of assembly and free speech.

He warned parents that the legal battle could get expensive if they challenged the ruling all the way to the U.S. Supreme Court.

At one point during the meeting, three large tin cans were circulated among the crowd, and many people tossed in $5 and $10 bills.

Forest Hill resident Doug Young said the parents would fight for one reason: "We are all here because we want to live in a rural area and because we want to send our kids to a small school. That's what it's all about."

Teachers still out on strike

By The Associated Press

Some 1,200 striking teachers in Michigan, Ohio and Washington have agreed to contract settlements that end their walkouts, but about 24,000 of their colleagues remain on strike in nine states.

The strikes were keeping about 550,000 students away from classes in Arizona, California, Illinois, Michigan, New Jersey, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island and Washington.

In Ann Arbor, Mich., about 1,050 teachers returned to their classrooms Wednesday, ending an extended summer vacation for 16,500 students.

The settlement increased the base teachers salary from $10,960 to $13,570. The last obstacle to an agreement was removed when teachers said they would participate in evening parent-teacher conferences if their pay was not docked because of the strike.

A walkout in Hubbard, Ohio, ended early today when the district's 161 teachers agreed to a contract that would increase base pay from $10,250 to $11,400. The strike affected 3,100 students.

And in the Lower Snoqualmie school district in Washington, a settlement was reached with 62 striking teachers that provided for raises of about 30 percent over three years. The strike had kept 1,200 students from classes.

Quite simply, no one knows more about tuning up your Honda than your Honda dealer.

With the way gasoline prices are today, your car should be as fuel-efficient as possible. A smart start is keeping your Honda finely tuned. And, if you're really smart, you'll choose a Honda dealer to do it.

Because he knows your car inside and out. And if something needs replacing, he's got genuine Honda parts. Ask for them.

In a good restaurant, when you buy a dinner, you get more than just food. You get service, a pleasant atmosphere, and a feeling that the owners would like you to come back.

It's the very same way that we like to sell used cars. Since our reputation is more "on the line" when we sell a used car, you can be sure we'll do everything we can to make our used car customer a satisfied customer.

Lee Rebs catch angry Plainview on rebound

Barry Corley

By BOB DILLON
Sports Writer

PLAINVIEW — Coach Spike Dykes' Midland Lee Rebels are improving and Coach Greg Sherwood's Plainview Bulldogs are hopping mad.

Mix that combination together and Friday night's battle here should prove to be very interesting.

Lee polished off Snyder, 17-7 and even though the offense is still inconsistant, Dykes likes the play of his defensive unit. Lee lost two weeks ago to a good Killeen outfit, 13-7 and last week, Killeen disposed of Austin Reagan, 27-7.

BOTH PLAINVIEW and Lee bring 1-1 records into Friday's 7:30 p.m. kickoff in Bulldog Stadium. Plainview opened the season with an impressive 21-12 victory over Lubbock Estacado and then lost a heart-breaker last week to Amarillo Tascosa, 21-20.

"We shouldn't have lost to Tascosa, but did," said Sherwood Wednesday. "We have a lot of bumps and bruises and know that Lee likes to hit, so it should be a physical game," added Sherwood. Sherwood is highly impressed with Lee's defensive play and the player of its linebackers.

"We just don't have that consistency that we need to be good on offense," stated Dykes.

DYKES DOES feel like his younger players are improving and that should be a plus when his Rebels open rugged District 5-5A play in two weeks against the speedy Odessa High Bronchos in Midland's Memorial Stadium.

"They (Plainview) have some small, fast backs and a big line and are always well-coached by Sherwood," said Dykes.

Up front, Sherwood has a pair of 230-pound tackles to help anchor down the offensive line in juniors Mark Smith and Randy Dorsey. Guard Billy Yarborough, a 200-pound junior, adds to the hefty size that the South Plains team has.

Tim Johnson (187) and Brit Mayberry (192) are the only two-way starters for the Bulldogs. Johnson plays guard on offense and tackle on the defensive unit while Mayberry plays tight end and linebacker.

PLAINVIEW'S DEFENSIVE unit is small, but quick with nobody over 200 pounds. Mayberry is the biggest defender for the Bulldogs.

Dykes has been pleased with the play of senior guards Keith Brown and Irl Conally. Brown is a 220-pound and Conally 215. Joining them in the forward wall are tackles Clyde Smith (210) and Ron Watson (180). The tight end is Kenneth Hardison (175) and spit end is Kenneth Brown, a 185-pounder. Both Hardison and Brown are juniors and both have good hands. Hardison has caught four passes for 38 yards and one touchdown while Brown has one catch for 26 yards. "Passing is department that we need lots of improvement," said Dykes.

Barry Corley, 170-pound senior, leads the offense along with fullback Calvin Riggs, a 190-pound junior and senior halfback Ridney Hemphill, 165-pounder. Riggs and Hemphill had touchdowns last week and Van Gravitt, a 190-pound junior, who also snaps the ball at center, booted a field goal against Snyder last

WT grid wars heat up Friday

If there was any doubt before that Andrews was the team to beat in District 2-4A, it was erased last Friday when the Mustangs stunned Midland High, 18-14, to boost its non-district record to 2-0.

The first team that will have the opportunity to beat the Ponies in league play will be Lake View when the Chiefs invade Andrews as 2-4A opens with a full schedule of games.

Also on tap will be Snyder (0-2) at Sweetwater (1-1), Pecos (2-0) at Monahans (1-1), Lamesa (1-1) at Fort Stockton (1-1).

Lake View, a district winner last year, brings a 1-1 record into district play after a shocking 21-0 loss to Stamford last week, a game in which Edward Gardner scored all the Stamford touchdowns. Coach Bill Shipman's Andrews' eleven has the same kind of threat in Van Pearcy, who already has college recrcuiters stumbling over one another in their haste to woo in the multi-talented tailback.

Elsewhere in the area, McCamey travels to Rankin in annual battle of Upton County, a game in which both teams bring 2-0 records into the fray. Reagan County, bouncing back from a last quarter blitz at the hands of McCamey, travels to Iraan, still looking for its first win. McCamey has played both, beating Reagan 26-7 and Iraan 21-19.

CRANE, 0-2 after a 47-0 loss to Monahans last week, draws another toughie in Stanton, 2-0. The Buffs rallied to win over Coahoma, 20-18, after trailing 18-0 last week.

Reserve quarterback Curtis Williams took over to spark the Buffs comeback, but Craig Eiland, slowed by an injury, booted the two decisive extra points.

Greenwood, 2-0, draws its toughest assignement of the young season when it hosts Klondike, the Rangers first home game of the season, a chore that has Coach Bobby Harrison biting his fingernails.

"Klondike is going to be tough. They are huge with five kids over 200 pounds. They have two all-staters in James Martin and Clay Holcomb and are blessed with good team speed," Harrison, in his fourth year at Greenwood, notes.

Although the Rangers are 2-0, Harrison, who coached at Eagle Pass for two years after graduating from Angelo State, isn't all that pleased with his offense.

Against Sterling City, Greenwood shoved over a late touchdown for an 8-0 win and then last

Astros pay for Soto's blunder

7-0 whitewash knocks Houston out of first

By JOE KAY

CINCINNATI (AP) — Mario Soto could sleep soundly Wednesday night.

The Cincinnati Reds right-hander, who lost a game to Los Angeles on Saturday with a ninth-inning balk, made short order of the Houston Astros in an 7-0 victory Wednesday.

Soto, 10-6, hurled a five-hitter to make up for his blunder that allowed the Dodgers' Derrel Thomas to score from third base. The Dodgers went on to sweep a three-game series with the Reds.

"I couldn't sleep that night," said Soto, who cried after the Saturday loss. "That was something that could have hurt me a lot. If we had won, we would have been 2½ games out. Instead, we were 4½ out.

"That was in my head all night long."

Soto presented a nightmare for Astros hitters Wednesday, mixing a fastball and change-up that gained the admiration of Houston catcher Alan Ashby.

"I know that some guys who have been around the National League said he has one of the best change-ups since (California pitcher Andy) Messersmith," Ashby said. "That's saying something."

The loss dropped Houston one game behind Los Angeles in the National League West. Cincinnati is 4½ games out of first.

Ray Knight cracked his third grand slam of the season in the fourth inning off Joe Niekro, 16-12, and drove in another run in the eighth with his third hit of the game, a single.

Knight has driven in 75 runs, second behind George Foster for Cincinnati, despite batting seventh in the lineup for most games.

"I feel more confident batting with runners on base," Knight said. "I don't like to hit with nobody out there. With men on base, it's more exciting.

"When I get excited, I'm a much better player. When nothing's at stake, I'm not as good a player."

Foster, who also homered off Niekro, called a team meeting before the game.

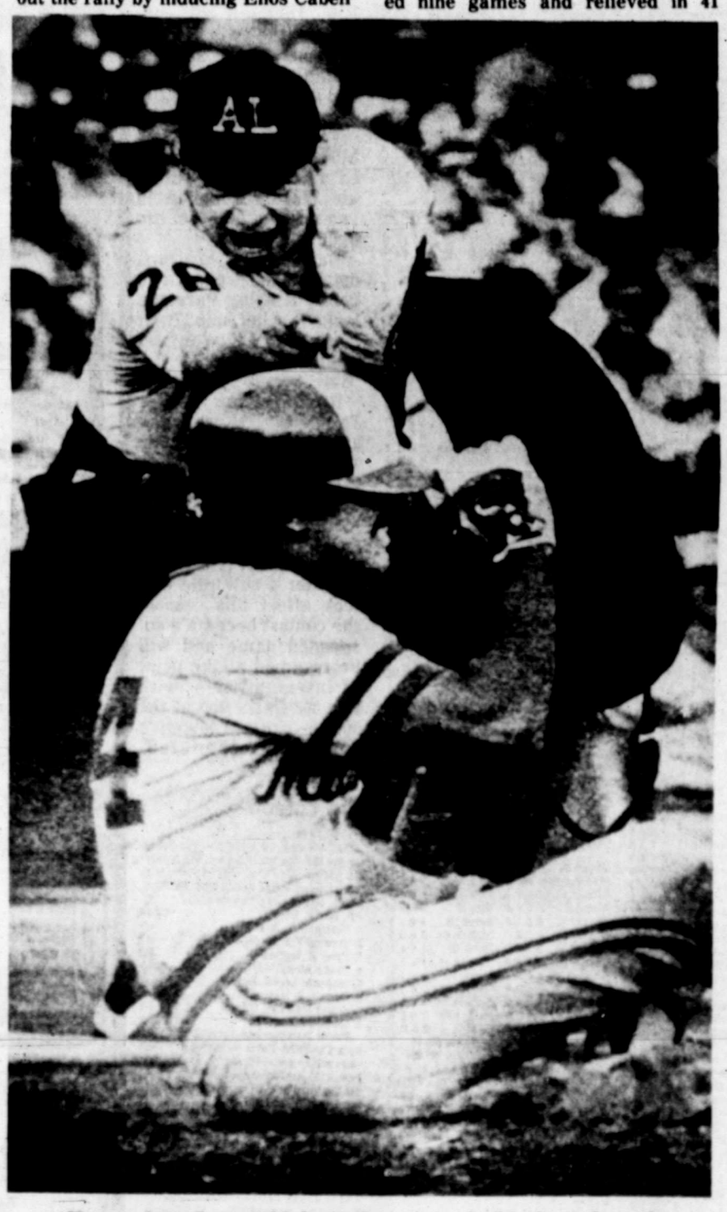

"A couple of players got up and talked," Knight reported. "It was a good meeting. There was not a lot of talking. We just expressed what we felt, that we can still win this thing."

Soto walked two batters in the first inning, but pitched out of the jam and didn't allow a baserunner as far as third base until the seventh.

Houston loaded the bases in the seventh with two out for their most serious scoring threat. Soto snuffed out the rally by inducing Enos Cabell to pop out. Ashby grounded out with two on and two out in the eighth.

Reds manager John McNamara decided Tuesday night to start Soto in place of Mike LaCoss. Soto has started nine games and relieved in 41 others.

"Everything we've asked of Mario, he's done — short relief, long relief, start," said Knight. "It broke my heart when I saw him in tears (Saturday), he wanted to win so badly."

MHS takes on 5-5A favorite

Midland High's Girls volleyball team swings back into action tonight seeking their second District 5-5A victory against Big Spring at the MHS gym. The JV game starts at 6:30 p.m.

It's a big game for Coach Linda Jolly's spikers since the Steers are tabbed as the district favorite. Midland's win over Odessa Permian Tuesday boosted the season's record to 8-4.

Midland Lee once again goes on the road, traveling to San Angelo. Lee dropped its district opener to Odessa High Tuesday night and Coach Linda Weikel's girls won't play a home match in league competition until Tuesday. Lee is 2-10 for the season.

Bullpups host Loboes at Stadium

The Midland High Bullpup junior varsity tangles with the Monahans JVs in Memorial Stadium at 7 p.m. today while earlier in the day, the Midland Sophomores battle the Midland Lee Sophs at the Lee practice field at 4:30 p.m.

Tall City JV and sophomore teams are off to a great start with no losses in five games. The Bullpups are 1-0 after beating Pecos two weeks ago, 19-0 while the MHS Sophs are 2-0 with wins over Pecos, 21-14 and Fort Stockton, 12-7. The Lee Sophs are 1-0 after beating the Lake View JVs, 13-8 two weeks ago and the Lee Stonewall Brigade JV is 1-0 after a nice 23-0 blanking of Snyder last week.

The Brigade has an open date this week after having a game with the Sands varsity called off.

In other games last week in JV action, Odessa Permian took a 29-0 victory over Crane; Abilene handed Abilene Cooper its second straight loss, 14-12 and Odessa High nipped Odessa Ector, 7-6. Big Spring lost to Sweetwater, but the score was unavaliable.

JV action tonight besides the Midland-Monahans game, finds Permian playing Ector in W.T. Barrett Stadium; The OHS Red JV, at Hobbs, N.M. and Abilene at Brownwood. Big Spring and Cooper are open this week.

Porter returns from baseball's dark side

Los Angeles Times

Everyone knows that certain professions breed a predilection for alcohol. Pressure jobs with challenges that come in bursts, problems that have to be scaled like 10,000-meter mountains. And conquests over them call for a congratulatory drink or two. Or 10. Journalists on deadline contend with this tension-packed existence. Television executives. Doctors, sometimes. Soldiers in war. Actors. Authors. Politicians. Businessmen.

But, catchers for the Kansas City Royals?! I mean, baseball's just a little boys' game, now, isn't it? Fun? A grown-up version of one o'cat. A guy was lucky if he could play baseball and postpone growing up to the last possible moment, wasn't he?

Oh, baseball players drink. A few beers with the guys after the game, a few laughs, a rehash of the ninth inning. That kind of thing. Boys will be boys. But it was not the dark, destructive kind of drinking practiced by people with serious hang-ups.

THE TROUBLE with that theory is that hitting, throwing, or catching the curveball has become as highly charged a part of big business as playing the commodities market. When you can lose a million dollars, it doesn't matter to your nervous system whether you lose it in carloadings or by taking a called third strike or hitting .198 for the season.

Darrell Porter of the Kansas City Royals was never your basic three-martini lunch executive. In fact, growing up in Oklahoma City, he was the guy the kids picked to drive when they went on a spree because all he drank was Coca-Cola. Darrell believed in the Frank Merriwell approach to athletics. To life. He didn't even drink coffee.

Porter, 28, is one of the best catchers in the American League. In fact, he led all catchers in voting for the Most Valuable Player last year. He was the starting catcher in the All-Star Game and the second catcher in league history to drive in 100 runs, score 100 and walk 100 times in one season.

BUT WHEN Darrell Porter left home for life in the bush leagues at Clinton, Iowa, in 1970, he was only 17, and he found out what a lot of young players before him had found out. Life between games in the bushes was (1) lonely and (2) boring. On the nights when you went 0-for-5, it was not much fun going back to the rooming house and staring at the ceiling. Clinton, Iowa, was not the Great White Way, but it did have beer by the can. A few beers, and you felt as if you had gone 5-for-5. Big Leagues, here I come.

Darrell did make the big leagues by 1973, but by that time he was also out of the beer leagues and into the scotch, pills and pot leagues.

It's one thing to drink with the boys in the hotel bar or at the discos casing the women. What worried Darrell Porter was, he began to go back to the hotel, lock the door and drink with Darrell Porter. "At first, I used to drink to become socially acceptable, to overcome loneliness or depression, or be able to talk easily with girls and to hustle women," he says.

But, when you go back to the hotel and just drink and watch Johnnie Carson, you got problems. Supply was not one of the problems. "You can get drugs on any street in Iowa, Wisconsin, Kansas or Missouri in this country. The most available drug, the most abused drug in the U.S., has neon signs pointing the way and takes credit cards. Your friendly neighborhood liquor store."

Recalls Porter: "But I trusted nobody. It was like I was afraid The Sporting News would find out I was an alcoholic. When I would have friends over and, the next day, they would tell me I had danced on the pool table or something like that, and I didn't remember it, I would get scared. I said 'Oh, you guys are lying.' But I knew

IN MILWAUKEE he went to a psychiatrist. "But I was afraid to tell him the truth," he recalls. The familiar spiral began -- wake up in the morning with a swollen head, red eyes and sour stomach. Take an amphetamine to get to the ballpark. Take a barbiturate to come down after the game. Take booze to get 'normal.'"

Oddly enough, his baseball skills were least affected. For one thing, with a bat and a glove in his hand, Darrell Porter was effective. With a glass in his hand, he was a mess.

Don Newcombe of the Dodgers was a practicing alcoholic himself in his baseball days. Fortunately for the game, The Sporting News and the game itself know all about it. Don made a clean breast of it. Don also knew the leagues were full of closet alcoholics. Part of his service to the game is to call on the training camps in the spring and, so to speak, flush them out. At this phase of the game, Newk is still a 20-game winner. And Porter was one catcher that he didn't shake off. Newk sent him to a Wickenberg, Ariz., treatment center and a new life.

If the Kansas City Royals finally get in a World Series this year, one guy who won't be drinking the clubhouse champagne is their All-Star catcher. Better than that, he won't be going home to a bottle of scotch hidden in a drawer either. Darrell Porter has already won his 1980 World Series -- and in a league and against a foe where it's not good enough to bat .300. You have to bat 1.000. All the time and forevermore.

Campbell listed as 'probable'

HOUSTON (AP) — On different occasions in Monday night's victory over Cleveland, Houston Oiler running back Earl Campbell was supposed to have injured his back, lost a contact lens and had a tooth knocked out.

The Oilers released their mid-week injury report Wednesday saying Campbell was a probable starter in Sunday's home opener against Baltimore with a groin pull.

Tyler may miss season

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — Los Angeles running back Wendell Tyler, a key factor as the Rams earned their first-ever Super Bowl berth last January, said Wednesday he may have to sit out the current National Football League season.

Tyler dislocated a hip in an auto accident in West Virginia on July 4. The former UCLA standout who rushed for 1,109 yards last year was expected to return to action sometime next month.

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

The New York Yankees have picked up some supporters in their bid to win the American League East title — the Kansas City Royals.

That was the general feeling expressed by the Royals Wednesday night after they clinched the AL West championship with a 5-0 victory over California in the first game of a doubleheader — they'd like to settle an old score with the Yankees in the AL pennant playoffs.

"It's not vengeance," pointed out Kansas City third baseman George Brett. "It's just wanting to regroup and regain your pride and self-respect. We were in Chicago one day and I saw a sign that said, 'Welcome Pennant Chokers.'"

That referred, of course, to the Royals' lack of success against the Yankees in three previous playoff meetings, in 1976, 1977 and 1978.

The clinching of their fourth West title in five years was the earliest in Royals' history. And the crowd of 25,908 at Royals Stadium was on its collective feet cheering when Dennis Leonard struck out Jason Thompson to end the game.

Leonard, 19-9, struck out nine and walked two in winning his ninth game in his last 10 decisions.

Willie Wilson singled and scored in the first inning when Kansas City took a 1-0 lead against Ralph Botting. Then Wilson drove in two runs with a second-inning single for all the runs that Leonard needed.

The Angels, last year's West champions, won the second game behind a five-RBI performance by Brian Downing. Brett, the major league's leading hitter, returned to the Kansas City lineup for the first time since injuring his hand on Sept. 6 and collected two singles in five at-bats to keep his average at .396.

Orioles 9, Tigers 3

Dan Graham, Terry Crowley and Rich Dauer combined to drive in seven runs as Baltimore defeated Detroit.

Graham clouted a two-run homer, his 11th in the second inning, and his RBI-single capped a three-run rally in the fifth. Crowley rapped a two-run single in the fifth and Dauer's third hit, a bases-loaded single in the seventh, drove in Baltimore's final two runs.

Indians 6, Red Sox 5

Jack Brohamer started the rally with a one-out single and gave way to Dybzinski. Tom Veryzer followed with a single off reliever Mike Torrez' leg, sending Dybzinski to second. Miguel Dilone forced Veryzer at second, but Alexander followed with a single off reliever Tom Burgmeier, scoring Dybzinski and handing the victory to Dan Spillner, 15-10.

A's 6, Rangers 4

Rickey Henderson set a club record with his 82nd stolen base as Oakland defeated Texas in a game that saw Rick Langford's complete-game streak come to an end at 22.

Langford, 17-11, failed to finish a game for Oakland for the first time since May 18, when he was pulled with one out to go in the ninth after giving up a two-run homer to Rusty Staub.

Twins 3-6, Brewers 2-1

Jerry Koosman, 13-13, scattered eight hits and Roy Smalley contributed a game-winning sacrifice fly in a three-run fifth inning, leading Minnesota over Milwaukee in the first game of their doubleheader.

Rob Wilfong hit his first career grand slam and Glenn Adams and Ron Jackson hit solo shots as the Twins scored six runs in the seventh inning to earn their second-game victory.

Mariners 4, White Sox 0

Floyd Bannister and Mike Parrott combined on a six-hitter and Reggie Walton knocked in two runs to lead Seattle over Chicago.

Bannister, 9-11, struck out five and walked two before needing Parrott's last-out relief help. Britt Burns, 13-13, was the loser.

Blue Jays 5, Yankees 3

Right fielder Reggie Jackson's three-base error on Ernie Whitt's single allowed two runs to score in the 10th inning and gave Toronto a 5-3 lead over New York before rain suspended the game one out later.

Under a new rule that took effect this season, the contest became a suspended game and will be resumed at the point of interruption — with two out in the top of the 10th — prior to tonight's regularly-scheduled game.

Helmet designed for ring training

MONTREAL (AP) — The referee of a fight that left boxer Ralph Racine in a coma says he has designed a helmet that could protect fighters during training.

Guy Jutras told the federal task force on boxing Wednesday that he spent days asking himself if he should have stopped the May fight before Racine took enough punches from Canadian lightweight champion Gaetan Hart to put him into a coma for four days.

The referee, who was cleared of blame, has developed a helmet that would use air bags for cushioning and a protruding bar to protect the chin. He also has developed gloves with air bags.

"I would never advocate these for professional bouts," Jutras told the commission. "A boxer spends 100 rounds in the ring training for every 10 rounds in a fight. The safety equipment would be for training only.

The task force was appointed after Racine's injury and the death of Cleveland Denny, also in a bout against Gaetan Hart in June. The commission is studying recommendations from boxing associations and individuals during a two-week tour of Canada that ends Sept. 26.

Bucs' MVP sinks Pirates for Phillies

Dodgers take over first

By WILLIAM R. BARNARD
AP Sports Writer

Tug McGraw was cuffed around so badly by the Pittsburgh Pirates last year that he was listed as their batting practice pitcher in the program at an offseason banquet.

But the flaky Philadelphia left-hander's two victories this season (he has 17 saves), have both come against the defending champion Pirates, including a 5-4 decision in 11 innings Wednesday night.

With the triumph, the Phillies cut Montreal's lead in the National League East to 1½-games when the Expos lost 5-2 to the New York Mets, while the Pirates stayed five games back. In other NL games, Los Angeles took over sole possession of first place in the West with a 2-1 victory over San Diego, while Cincinnati beat Houston 7-0, San Francisco blanked Atlanta 2-0 and St. Louis whipped Chicago 8-5.

McGraw, who was the self-proclaimed Pittsburgh Most Valuable Player in 1979, won't get any awards from the Pirates this season.

"I wouldn't have accepted the invitation to the banquet except I knew the Pirates would have been disappointed not to have their MVP there," McGraw said. "Maybe now the plane won't shake every time I fly over Pittsburgh."

The Pirates battled back from a 4-1 deficit against 22-game winner Steve Carlton to tie the game. But McGraw pitched two shutout innings and Sparky Lyle registered his first National League save after Garry Maddox led off the 11th for the Phillies with a single, stole second and third and scored on Del Unser's pinch-single.

Mets 5, Expos 2

Montreal had its East Division lead sliced as Lee Mazzilli drove in four runs for New York with a homer and a sacrifice fly.

The Expos led 2-0 until the fifth inning, when Jose Moreno, batting for winning pitcher Dyar Miller, 1-1, opened with a single, went to third on a double by Mookie Wilson and scored on Wally Backman's single. Then Mazzilli walloped his 16th home run of the season to give New York a 4-2 lead.

"Nobody said it would be easy. This just makes it more interesting," said Montreal Manager Dick Williams.

Dodgers 2, Padres 1

Rookie Jack Perconte scored one run and his bunt single brought home the decisive tally in the sixth inning as Los Angeles broke its first-place tie with Houston.

Don Sutton won his fourth straight game and 12th in 16 decisions this season by scattering seven hits in seven innings. Steve Howe allowed only one hit the final two innings to earn his 17th save.

Cards 8, Cubs 5

Leon Durham and Tito Landrum knocked in two runs apiece and St. Louis took advantage of two Chicago errors in the first inning to score three runs. John Vuckovich worked 72-3 innings to gain his 12th victory in 21 decisions.

Giants 2, Braves 0

Vida Blue pitched his third shutout of the season to break Atlanta's five-game winning streak. Jim Wohlford tripled in San Francisco's first run in the sixth inning and came home on Rennie Stennett's single.

Yastrzemski calls it a year

BOSTON (AP) — Slugger Carl Yastrzemski of the Boston Red Sox is calling it quits for the remainder of the 1980 baseball season rather than risk further injury.

"If we were a few games out, I'd take the chance, but when you're far out like we are what's the sense?" Yastrzemski said Wednesday night after sitting out Boston's 6-5 loss in 11 innings to Cleveland.

Yastrzemski, the only American League hitter ever to achieve 3,000 hits and 400 homers in his career.

Loss brings Cougars back to earth in SWC

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ

HOUSTON (AP) — The University of Houston football team enjoyed a pleasant spring and summer polishing their latest Southwest Conference and Cotton Bowl trophies.

Cougar Coach Bill Yeoman suggests perhaps they enjoyed it too much.

"They had a long and enjoyable spring and summer and the realities of getting ready for a football season are hard," said Yeoman, who tries to get the Cougars on track Saturday against Miami in the Astrodome.

"When you're told to go write a masterpiece, you begin to sweat. That's what we need to do, sweat a little."

THE COUGARS, upset by Arizona State 29-13 last week, have spent the week learning to execute the veer offense and the work starts at quarterback, Yeoman said.

Starter Terry Elston got off to a slow start against the Sun Devils and eventually left the game with a sprained ankle. He was held out of contact work in preseason drills and Yeoman says it showed in the opening game.

"We held him out because we couldn't afford to get him hurt," Yeoman said. "But now he's got a lot of hard work to do."

The Cougars also played part of the game without leading rusher Terald Clark, who suffered a leg injury. Both Elston and Clark will start Saturday's game but quarterback Brent Chinn and running back David Barrett will likely play.

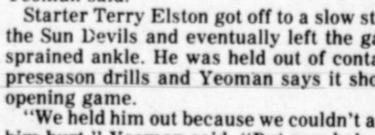

Chinn, a sophomore redshirt from Edna, responded to his first varsity action by completing five of 13 passes and had three intercepted. But Yeoman remained impressed with Chinn.

"HE'S GOT an excellent temperment," Yeoman said. "A lot of kids would have thrown up their hands after getting a handoff tipped and a pass intercepted. But Brent came right back and marched us 89 yards. That shows me something."

Elston, the master of fourth quarter comebacks last season, had it rougher as the starter. He completed 6 of 14 passes and had one intercepted before leaving the game.

Cougar assistant coach Doug Todd also noted that Elston played the Arizona State game with a knee brace, the result of a preseason practice injury.

Miami is 2-0 with victories over Louisville and Florida A&M. The Hurricane has allowed 12 first downs and a combined minus-40 yards rushing to its two opponents.

Upton County Battle matches Badgers, Devils

week "we did a decent job of running the ball," he admitted, pointing out the Rangers gained 258 infantry yards in a 31-6 win over Whiteface. "But we have been best overall on defense."

Defensive leaders have been Tommy Pyle, Oscar Lopez, Mickey Somers and Gary Rogers, stalwarts who go both ways.

INJURIES may be a problem this week with guard Richard Morris and tackle Jeff Perry doubtfuls.

Offensively, the Rangers are a run-oriented team. "We don't like to throw more than nine or 10 times a game," says Harrison. Lopez and Somers are the leading ball carriers while Larry Dickerson keeps opponents honest with an occasional pass to Ken Foshee or Pyle.

This is only the second season of varsity competition for Greenwood and only the third year for football at the school and the fast 2-0 start is somewhat of a surprise, especially in view of the fact that the team is composed primarily of juniors. Harrison feels the program is just getting off the ground and the future is bright, even though the Rangers will be competing in District 6-A where Rankin, ranked high in state ratings, is the favorite to win it all.

LAST YEAR McCamey defeated Rankin for the district title, but since then the teams have gone their separate ways and this one, while no less competitive, will be only for the bragging rights of Upton County.

Coach Larry Nabors figures it will take "good defense and no errors" to beat the Red Devils. Although Dennis Black has scored four touchdowns in two games, what worries Nabors is Rankin's balanced attack, "Against a Dwayne Turner team you never key on one or two players."

Turner also will be defensing a balanced attack. Running out of the wishbone, B.J. Terry and Ben Fergeson have both been effective while quarterback Ernest Valesquez' passing set up one TD and produced two others against Iraan.

"Last week he was 2-for-2, but just didn't pass," Nabors explained, pointing out that, despite a three touchdown last period in a 26-7 win over Reagan, "We moved the ball as well in the first half as in the second half. We just stopped making mistakes. As for Friday, the team that wins will be the team that makes the fewest mistakes."

Andrews establishes itself as team to beat

Everybody else is playing for fun, but District 2-4A gets mean this week. With nine teams in the league, it leaves room for only two non-conference games.

But don't try to tell anyone in Midland that Andrews was just playing for fun last week when the Mustangs won an exciting 18-14 decision from the Bulldogs. The Mustangs came to the Tall City ready to play. Coach Bill Shipman just hopes they are just as ready this week, because when the Mustangs host Lake View Friday night it count in the standings and the Chiefs figure to be a darkhorse contender in 2-4A. Last year, LV won its district and while it lost to Stamford by three touchdowns last week, it still remains a formidable force.

The rest of the West Texas districts continue to skirmish against non-league foes, but some of them are neighborhood battles and that should make it interesting.

One of the best will come when McCamey invades Rankin in a battle of unbeatens while Iraan-Reagan County and Stanton-Crane are other choice morsels.

Andrews 21, Lake View 7—Unless Mustangs let down after Midland high.

Snyder 12, Sweetwater 6—Tigers are 0-2, but this is the first 4A school they've faced.

Fort Stockton 27, Lamesa 13—Panthers ride Golden Tornadoes.

Coahoma 21, Tahoka 16— Stanton beat 'em both, but had more trouble with Bulldogs, still, it's at Tahoka and...

Stanton 28, Crane 14—Buffs at home and still unbeaten.

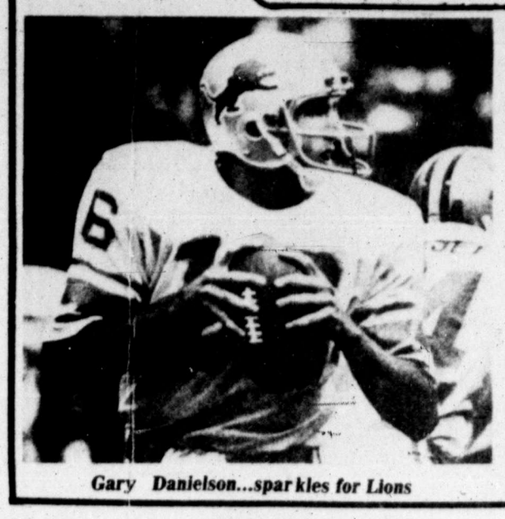

Brownfield 7, Seminole 6—Indians are 0-2 and Cubs are 1-0.

Reagan County 14, Iraan 10—Braves were ravaged by illness in last week's loss to Eldorado and looked better against McCamey than did the Owls, but Reagan it's AA against A so Owls get the nod.

Klondike 10, Greenwood 7—If Gold rushers are as good as every one seems to think, they should spoil Rangers' home opener, but it should be a good game.

Elsewhere...Plainview 14, Lee 7; Monterey 20, Midland 13; Temple 7, Abilene 6; Cooper 20, Eastern Hills 7; Brownwood 14, San Angelo 13; Odessa 21, Hobbs 7; Permian 17, Fort Worth Wyatt 0; Van Horn 7, Eunice 0.

Astros close in on gate mark

The Astros need 101,396 fans during their final homestand to break the all-time Houston season attendance record of 2,151,470 set in 1965, the first year of the Astrodome. That means the club will need to average 16,900 for the final six games against the Reds and Braves beginning Sept. 26...

Billy Sims and Eddie Murray, top scorers in the National Conference, have made a big difference in the Detroit Lions, but Coach Monte Clark is quick to point out, "We're a really young team, but we're trying to mature. We know each week is going to get tougher and tougher. The more successful we are, the more people are going to come looking for us."

The Lions offensive line averages 3.3 years in the NFL and quarterback Gary Danielson is in only his fourth year, but is second among NFC passers with 21 for 36, 419 yards and one touchdown. Sims has rushed for 287 yards and five touchdowns in two games...

Wimbledon champion Bjorn Borg and U.S. Open winner John McEnroe could meet in a "tie-breaker" on national television if Trans World International, the sports TV production house, can resolve the final details for a December meeting. Both have agreed in principle, but financial guarnatees and sit of the match remain to be resolved...

Putting the Texas Tech-North Carolina game on regional TV in the West Texas area and switching the kickoff time from 7:30 p.m. to 1 p.m., put a dent in the Jones Stadium gate last Saturday. One Tech official guesstimated that the combination of TV and a hot afternoon kickoff cost 5,000 fans. Apparently, the difference was more than made up for by TV swag and the recruiting benefits of tube exposure...

Despite the size of the score, Brad Wright, former Midland Lee quarterback, had a hot hand against Missouri last Saturday, hitting 12 of 14 passes in the first half. Then, the Tigers' three-touchdown burst in the space of a minute and a half in the second half blew the game open. Brad will lead the University of New Mexico into Jones Stadium Saturday night. Two years ago in Albuquerque, Brad gave the Tech defense fits with his passing...

Former Midland all-stater James Zachery, cut by the New York Jets just before the start of the NFL season, has signed with Montreal of the CFL and if you are watching one of the Alouette games on ESPN, the new 24-hour sports network, Zach is No. 65 on defense...

Midland Lee-Killeen drew 4,468 fans for the Memorial Stadium football opener, not bad considering the distance the Kangaroos had to come and the folks they consequently left home. And the Bulldogs-Mustangs did better financially than expected...

Don't overlook revitalized Amistad

KENNY REDIN'S

Fin & Feather

Add up the ingredients which make up an attractive fishing lake and Amistad Reservoir has them all.

The huge border impoundment near Del Rio contains some of the most beautiful, clear water one could wave a fishing rod at. It supports healthy populations of a half-dozen sport fish species and the surrounding area is rugged and beautiful enough to be a backdrop for a western movie.

Texas Parks and Wildlife Fisheries Director Bob Kemp said he takes greater pride in Amistad than any other lake. "Amistad is an example of taking a sorry fishing lake and making it into a super fishing lake."

He explained that prior to 1974, Amistad offered very little largemouth bass fishing and other species offered little for the angler. "We assigned a biologist to work Amistad fulltime, and subsequently stocked a tremendous number of nonactive sport fish in an effort to fill every available ecological niche in the lake."

Beginning in 1974, fishery crews began stocking striped bass, hybrid striped/white bass, Florida strain largemouths, walleyes, smallmouth, northern pike and tiger muskies.

In Texas, the term "fishing" is almost synonymous with "largemouth bass." Amistad ranked as the No. 1 bass tournament lake the first half of 1980, according to the TPWD's bass club postcard survey, which analyzed data from 155 clubs and 445 tournaments across the state.

The lake ranked first in pounds of bass caught per hour, and third in percent angler success and number of bass caught per hour.

The lake has native largemouths and introduced Florida strain largemouths. Biologist Jimmy Dean, San Antonio, said most of the techniques which work on other lakes will take largemouths at Amistad, but the clear water and rocky habitat call for some special tactics.

Dean advises that largemouths spend winter months near dropoffs and at depths of 20 to 30 feet, and may retreat there at other times as well. This calls for jigs, grubs and spoons which can get down to that depth effectively. Lighter lines are recommended because of the water's clarity.

As the weather warms, bass move to the tops of the ledges and into nearby shallow areas to spawn. March and April produce some excellent bass fishing. Spinners, jigs with plastic minnow or shad bodies and topwater lures are productive in spring and fall. As summer progresses, the bass move back into deeper water and near ledges, venturing into shallow water in the late afternoon to feed. October and November are also periods of increased activity for bass as they again move onto the ledges and shallow areas.

As good as the bass fishing is, Amistad would attract attention if there were no largemouths. Striped bass, hybrid stripers, walleyes and catfish make big contributions to the fishery, and smallmouth stocked in the Devil's River arm are expected to come on in the near future. Few lakes anywhere can match Amistad's variety.

The National Park Service controls access to the reservoir. There are four free boat ramps with parking, fishing cleaning and restroom facilities. Primitive camp sites are also available. A valid Texas fishing license is required for fishing the Texas side and a Mexican license is needed for the Mexican waters. Buoys mark the borderline.

Adding the final decorations atop the cake's icing is a statement long time Amistad guide H.C. (Smokey) Janes made, "There's more two and three pound bass in the lake than we can all catch. I would rate Amistad the top bass lake in the country."

R-T adds another outdoor columnist

Chuck Davis Outdoors will join Kenny Redin's Fin & Feather outdoor coverage in the Reporter-Telegram Thursdays and Sundays in the near future. Davis, who lives in Big Spring, has been a contributor to Sports Afield and Outdoor Life. Davis has fished from Mexico to the Atlantic and hunted sheep, moose, elk, bear antelope, turkey, whitetail, mule deer, small game, waterfowl and upland game birds. he has backpacked hundreds of miles, tent camped, horse-packed in Arizona, Utah and Montana. For outdoor readers, the addition of Davis should be an entertaining, informative addition.

Illini's Wilson ruled ineligible

URBANA, Ill. (AP) — A judge ruled Wednesday that University of Illinois quarterback David Wilson may not play football this year.

Circuit Court Judge Harry Clem agreed with the Big Ten Confernce that Wilson, who has led the Illini to two victories this season, is academically ineligible.

Clem lifted the injunction he had issued Sept. 2 allowing Wilson to play until his complicated eligibility case was resolved.

However, attorneys for the Big Ten said new information should be considered and that the injunction should be lifted immediately. The league's eligibility committee said it was given incorrect information last May when it decided Wilson could play in 1980.

Byron Gregory, representing the Big Ten, had asked the judge to bar Wilson until 1981.

Attorneys for Wilson and the University of Illinois had argued that the information Gregory mentioned was irrelevant to the quarterback's status.

World coffee production up

By DON KENDALL

WASHINGTON (AP) — World coffee production in 1980-81 is expected to be about 80.1 million bags, slightly more than forecast earlier this year, the Agriculture Department said Wednesday.

In its initial estimate on June 18, the department's Foreign Agricultural Service said the new crop would yield about 79.6 million bags, compared to 79.7 million produced in 1979-80.

The latest report also included revising upward to 80.1 million bags the amount of coffee produced last year. Thus, the forecast for 1980-81 is for virtually the same size of harvest, officials said.

A bag of grzen, unroasted coffee beans weighs 60 kilograms or about 132.2 pounds.

Exportable production, which represents total harvested coffee minus domestic consumption in producing countries, was estimated at 60.2 million bags, compared to 59.7 million forecast in June. The revised exportable output in 1979-80 was put at 60.6 million bags, compared to the earlier estimate of 60.2 million.

"Estimated production in North America is largely unchanged from the initial forecast except for El Salvador where the harvest could be larger if there is no flareup in domestic hostilities," the report said. "The estimate for Guatemala has been lowered by 100,000 bags."

In South America, coffee production was revised upward from June by 350,000 bags, due mainly to an increase of 500,000 bags now expected in Brazil's harvest, the world's biggest. The boost in Brazil more than offset a decline of 165,000 bags now expected in Peru, the report said.

Production in Africa was unchanged from three months ago except for a decline of 100,000 bags in Angola's prospective harvest. In Asia, the crop in the Philippines was raised by 50,000 bags from June.

Coffee production estimates by region and principal producing countries for 1980-81 and revised 1979-80 production, in thousands of bags, included:

North America, 14,943 bags and 14,566 — Costa Rica, 1,880 and 1,507; Dominican Republic, 1,000 and 700; El Salvador, 2,100 and 2,530; Guatemala, 2,600 and 2,647; Haiti, 555 and 655; Honduras, 1,312 and 1,250; Mexico, 3,700 and 3,610; and Nicaragua, 975 and 856.

South America, 37,870 and 38,240 — Brazil, 21,500 and 22,000; Colombia, 12,400 and 12,300; Ecuador, 1,485 and 1,474; Peru, 1,100 and 1,265; and Venezuela, 1,150 and 997.

Africa, 17,927 and 18,056 — Angola, 400 and 700; Cameroon, 1,500 and 1,600; Ethiopia, 3,100 and 2,963; Ivory Coast, 4,166 and 3,917; Kenya, 1,167 and 1,425; Madagascar, 1,166 and 1,200; Tanzania, 916 and 708; Uganda, 2,500 and 2,200; and Zaire, 1,400 and 1,400.

Asia and Oceania, 9,357 and 9,240 — India, 2,300 and 2,411; Indonesia, 5,239 and 5,024; Philippines, 750 and 690; and Papua New Guinea, 780 and 830.

RINGING THE BELL

Black church group observes centennial

With BOB TIEUEL

In spite of the high cost of gasoline, hotel rooms and other high costs caused by the never-ending, rising inflation, it is reported that some 25,000 delegates and visitors attended the centennial celebration of the National Baptist Convention, U.S.A., Inc. held recently in the Civic Center in Birmingham, Ala.

The convention returned to Alabama because of its founding in Montgomery in 1880, and this year's theme was "A Century with Christ." For some two and a half decades Dr. Joseph R. Jackson, Chicago, has guided the 6.3 million members, the largest black organization in the world. Dr. Jackson has recently authored a new boos, "A Story of Christian Activities — The History of the National Baptist Association, U.S.A., Inc."

One of the purposes stated in the constitution of the convention is to encourage and support Christian education. Dr. Jackson recently said: "Young people, whatever else you do, don't neglect or postpone your opportunity to get an education; for a trained mind and soul are worth more to you, to your race and to your nation than any material things you might possess." Jackson would encourage denominational schools to be independent of federal government support.

THE IMPORTANCE of one vote was demonstrated once again on the House floor in Washington earlier this summer when the 1980 fair housing bill kept its teeth by a single "aye." The 1980 bill puts teeth into the HUD procedures by giving administrative law judges jurisdiction over complaints of discrimination in housing with the authority to issue enforcement orders and to assess fines of up to $10,000.

An Oklahoma congressman, Mike Byner, got the House back on the right track when he offered an amendment that put teeth in the bill. The vote on the Byner amendment was 205 to 204. And as the Call puts it: Remember the 1980 housing bill when you say, "My vote doesn't count anyway." Perhaps, says the Call, racism is gradualllly dying. So live for the day when it draws its last breath.

JIMMY CARTER writes: "Dear Bob, we have continued and improved on programs of social justice that have become woven by Democrats into the fabric of the nation over the past half century. We have pressed forward with determination wherever it was necessary. The remarkable energy program, the Camp David agreements, opposition to Soviet aggression, more than eight million brand new jobs, human rights and much more.

"In the whole area where government relates to people — the ERA, Fair Housing Act, the equal opportunity laws, the human services — we shall also work with determination and care. We need your voice, and we need your financial support. Please send as much as you can as soon as you can to support our Democratic program this November. Make donations payable to Democratic National Committee, 1625 Massachusetts Ave. N.W., Washington, D.C. 20036."

We have also received an appeal from Ex-Gov. Ronald Reagan. Will publish portions of his letter in next column. Remember, bellringers, let us register and be prepared to vote in November.

RECENT GREAT QUOTES: "The new Department of Education will be responsible for more than the distribution of federal assistance. Its charge from Congress is to strengthen the federal commitment to ensuring access to equal educational opportunity for every individual; to increase the involvement of teachers, parents and students in planning and carrying out federal programs; to spur better research, and to increase the accountability of federal education programs to the president, the Congress and the public." — Willard McGuire, president, National Educational Association.

Bulldog gridders facing busy week

By JULIE GUYTON, VICKIE MADDEN and KATHY WOOD

The Bulldog football teams are really busy this week. This afternoon, the Sophomore team plays Lee starting at 4:30 at Lee High School. Tonight our JV challenges Monahans in Memorial Stadium at 7. The group has worked hard, so come and show you're behind them.

Wrapping up the week, the Varsity 'Dogs host Lubbock Monterrey at 8 p.m. Friday in Memorial Stadium. The game will be exciting and lots of fun.

The girls volleyball team is doing well this year. Tuesday, they played Permian in the Boys' Gym. Midland High won two out of three games. The high scorer in the games was Carol Blaschke. Congratulations! Tonight MHS plays Big Spring in the gym with the games starting at 6.

THE YOUTH CENTER is having another after-game dance Friday from 10 p.m. to 1 a.m. Students bringing their YC cards will be admitted for 50 cents. All others must pay $2. James Lee will be there to spin records.

At this time, Rasco would like to thank the 400-plus students who made our first dance of the year a great success. (Also, thanks for good behavior at the dance!) The YC appreciates the help of chaperones, Mr. and Mrs. Pace, Mr. and Mrs. Bolger and Mr. and Mrs. O'Grady.

Any student who wants a new record in the juke box, put your request in the suggestion box that is inside the YC doorway. Please do this before next Friday.

News for the 100 Club: There will be a cleanup at 7:15 a.m. Friday. All members need to come to the Youth Center, as there will be other business to discuss after the claenup.

A REMINDER to all Bulldogs: Next week is Howdy Week. The classes will be pitted against each other in a variety of activities to see which class has the most spirit. We think the Seniors will win.

The Chatter writers would like to wish Lee good luck and a safe journey as they travel to Plainview Friday night.

Indian college wins battle for survival

EDITOR'S NOTE — D-Q, an Indian college in California, appears to have won its battle with the federal government. Some obstacles remain in keeping the nine-year-old university open, but when school starts this month, most of the problems will be behind them.

By JENNIFER KERR

DAVIS, Calif. (AP) — A year ago, an Indian college created in discarded Army buildings and named for god-like figures with unpronounceable names seemed about to lose its nine-year struggle with the federal government.

But today, D-Q University is in its best shape ever.

The college is receiving $224,685 in long-delayed federal Indian college money. Its accreditation problems have improved. And when it begins classes in late September, D-Q will have its first full-time faculty and 200 students, 120 of them in a newly renovated dormitory with solar panels and a greenhouse.

"Compared to a year ago, things are really going well," says Steven Baldy, a Hoopa Indian and D-Q president.

"D-Q went through a tough year and a-half," says American Indian Movement founder Dennis Banks, a Chippewa and chancellor. "Now, we're turning the corner."

Obstacles remain, however. D-Q must reapply to renew the federal grant, and it must demonstrate to the Western Association of Schools and Colleges that it will have money, students, faculty and its land in the future.

D-Q, originally named Deganawidah-Quetzalcoatl in 1971 but later shortened because of the sacredness of the Iroquois and Aztec names, has been investigated over the years by numerous branches of the federal government.

"We have been audited by every audit possible. They even audit the auditors," says David Risling, a Hoopa Indian and D-Q board member. "We get accused of this and accused of that, and there's never been a single prosecution."

The idea for the school dates to 1970 when Risling, who heads the Native American Studies department at the nearby University of California at Davis, wanted education that would work for California Indians.

Standard education, he says, was trying to "mainstream" Indians, to change them into white men.

"You have to allow Indians to be Indians first, so they'll have an identity, then you can teach them how to live in the white world as Indians," Risling says.

D-Q's courses stress Indian culture, but also include skills that could be used in either the Indian or white communities, such as agriculture, social sciences and health care.

In 1970, Risling and others searched for federal surplus land and found the Army Communications Center site 10 miles west of Davis. It had been closed since 1956.

The Indian group, joined by a Mexican-American group, received a 30-year lease from the Department of Health, Education and Welfare to use the land for a college, but only after a lawsuit and occupation of the land.

The fledgling two-year college received grants from private foundations and in its early years also got federal money, including $3.2 million for migrant worker training. Most of that money went to families enrolled in the program, not to the college.

The Indian and Mexican-American sections split in 1978 because of differing goals and fund-raising and the passage by Congress of the Tribally Controlled Community College Assistance Act. Because that law required the college to have Indian board members and students, the Mexican-American board members resigned. The school is now almost all Indian.

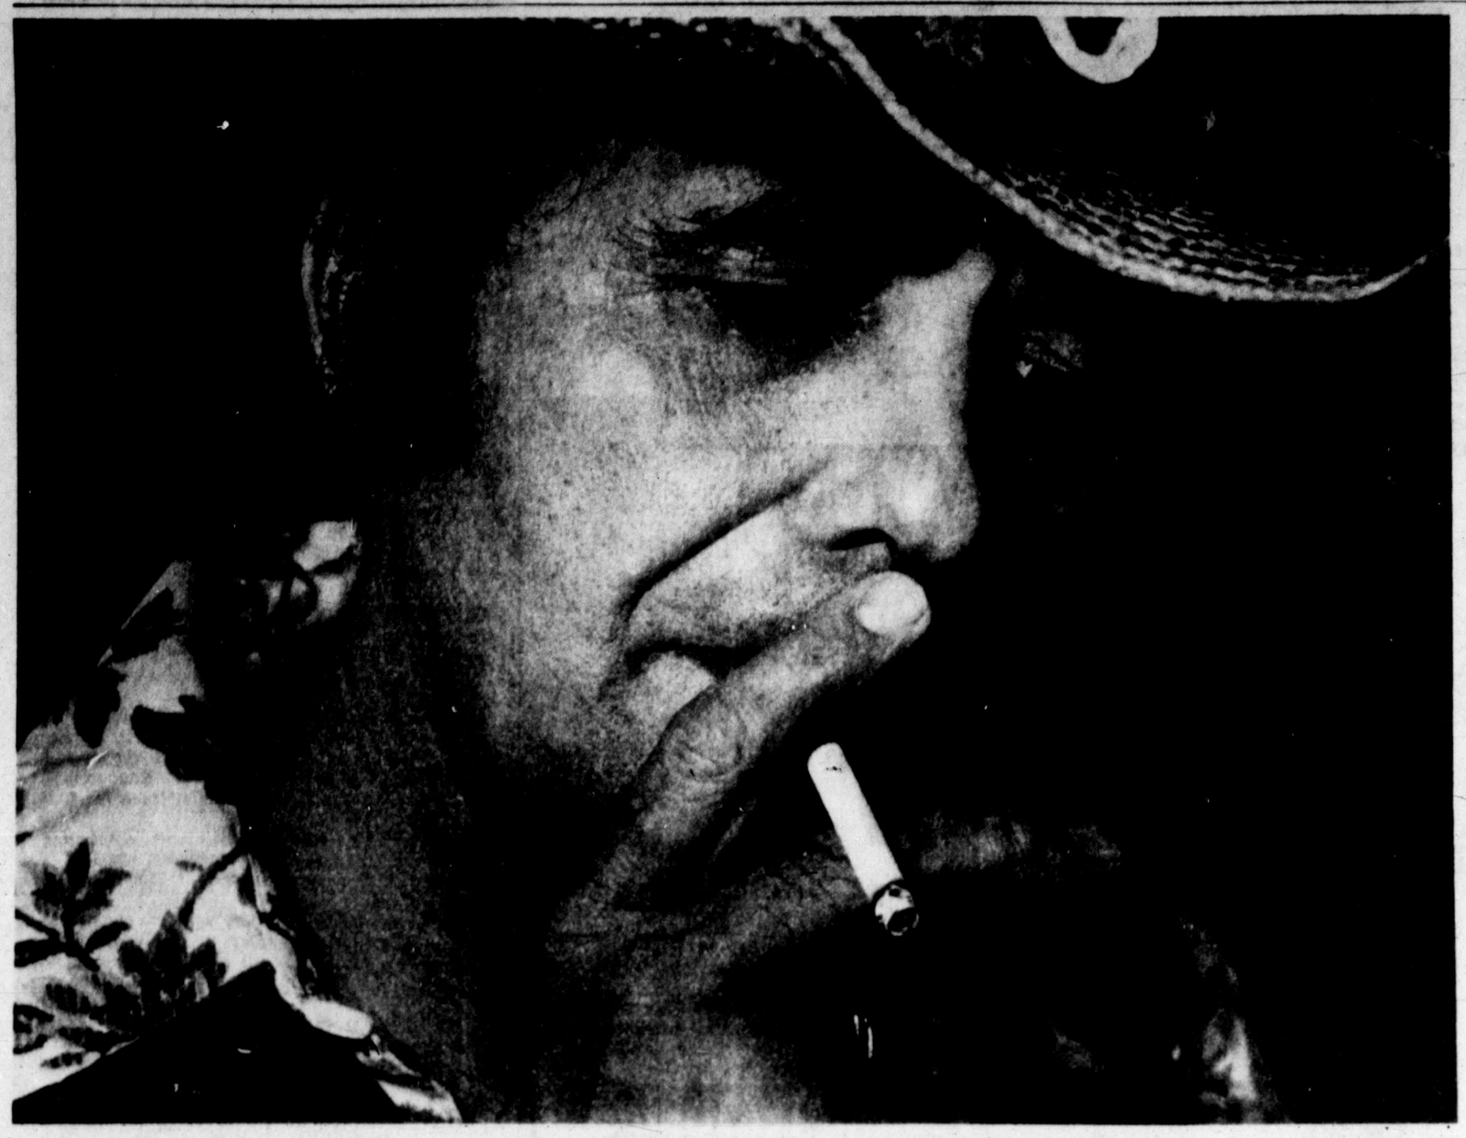

D-Q was in its deepest trouble early in 1979, when the federal Office of Education froze more than $200,000 in student scholarships because of suspected misuse of previous funds. But after an audit, it released the funds last October.

A still unresolved dispute is over a $100,000 Title III grant for developing colleges that D-Q sought from the Office of Education. Risling says the college received letters last fall from an aide to California Sen. Alan Cranston and HEW officials saying that it would get the grant.

A January story in the Washington Star said the team found only two students at D-Q and said it "does not exist as a school."

Baldy said most of the 100 students enrolled then were attending night classes and some, working on a solar project, were ignored by the team.

Bobby Bare relaxes in his bus before his recent Midland Stardust performance. Bare is well-known among country western fans for such old favorites as "500 Miles" and "Detroit City," and his more recent "The Winner," "Marie Laveaux," "Numbers" and "Pour Me Another Tequila Sheila." Bobby Bare began singing at age 17

He wanted to get out of work and meet girls

By GEORGIA TEMPLE
Staff Writer

Attired in jean cutoffs, red sweat shirt, blue socks, blue jogging shoes and cowboy hat, Bobby Bare and his band were on stage recently at the Midland Stardust checking the sound system before their evening concert. They were having fun and letting off steam at the same time.

They had just come 500 miles for the one night concert and were scheduled to be in Houston the next night. In fact, they've been on the road since January.

Their travels have included three European tours this year plus several trips to most major American cities.

"I've been in about every town and most of the major towns I work a lot," Bobby said.

Bare said he originally started performing because "I wanted to get out of work and meet girls." He was 17 and working for International Harvester in Springfield, Ohio.

"I was building pick-ups and discovered I could get paid for singing. I haven't worked since," he said with a laugh.

"I was just wandering around, going from place to place, playing joints and night clubs, when Chet Akins signed me to RCA and I did 'Shame On Me For Hurting You.'

"Now that I'm older it is work. When I was 17 and 18 it wasn't. But now it's hard to get up at 6 a.m., fly all day, do interviews, sound checks, rehearsals and two shows. I do it, but I can't keep up the same pace I used to."

ENTERTAINMENT

Bare, who said he runs and jogs to keep in shape, explained, again laughing, that his two favorite hobbies are "fishing and making love. And not necessarily in that order."

He is an avid fisherman and has competed in one of the national BASS tournaments.

"The tournament was at Cordell Hull. I caught a 6½-pound large mouth the day before the tournament. If I had caught it during the tournament, it would have been the big bass," Bobby said pensively.

Bobby prefers non-competitive fishing because he is doing it for fun and relaxation. Professional fishermen "would wear me out in no time. They hit a point, cast it like a machine gun and roar off again."

In fact one of his favorite fishing experiences was at Willie Nelson's home in Denver.

Another form of relaxation for Bobby and his band are the 20 or so movies they watch on video while they are traveling. This is in between their poker games, he explained.

With such an extensive traveling schedule he doesn't get to see his family very much.

When asked about them, he explained, again laughing, that he has three kids, two boys and a girl, "but I can't remember their names because I've been gone too long."

He added that on Sept. 6 they performed in Providence, R.I. They made a special trip to Nashville, where he lives, and "I saw them two hours that Sunday evening. Sometimes I take one of the boys (who are 14 and 12) on the road with me for a week or two."

Combining traveling and family life isn't easy.

"But it's what I do. Everybody's got to do what they do. And it's not like I dumped my family into a strange and weird lifestyle because it's always been that way."

For all of his easygoing, joking manner, his body language displays an inward tension which is most apparent when he talks music.

"I've committed myself to work harder in the last year or two. I should have made that commitment somewhat earlier.

"I probably needed good management two or three years before I did it, I've had three or four really great albums that the record company didn't give as much attention to as they would have if I'd had professional high powered management."

He said he hopes that performing remains interesting and adventurous because when I get bored with it, when it gets to be work, I'll quit."

And he has scheduled a rest break for he and his group after their Sept. 13 performance in Corpus Christi.

He wasn't sure what anyone else had planned, but he knew what he is going to do.

"I'm taking off for two weeks and I'm going fishing."

New 'Tonight Show' is lively, lean as planned

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Johnny Carson's hard-won 60-minute "Tonight Show" has made its debut and the new, shorter version of the late-night institution was precisely what its host said it would be — lively and lean.

Although the show's only concrete changes Tuesday were a new set and the elimination of a half hour, the smaller time frame changed the character of the show. There seemed to be more Carson, which should console advertisers who are paying considerably more for their "Tonight Show" commercials.

Carson went to the mat with NBC over the "Tonight Show" a year ago. Network President Fred Silverman, wanting more from NBC's brightest asset, suggested Carson might be asked to show up more on the show.

Carson had other notions. He announced that he wanted out after 17 years, then went to court contending that NBC's binds on him were illegal.

What Carson really wanted was what he eventually got — a shorter, less demanding "Tonight Show" and full ownership of it. The deal NBC finally gave him included a sweet production package for Johnny Carson Productions.

While Carson's show was shortened, Tom Snyder's "Tomorrow" show, was expanded from 60 to 90 minutes on Tuesday. Judging by the first edition of the new "Tonight Show," it was money well spent by NBC.

Carson opened with his traditional monologue, joking:

"We're giving Tom Snyder an extra half hour, did anyone tell him? I don't want him to walk out here with his hair still in hot rollers."

Carson then did one of his patented dialogues with announcer Ed McMahon, and by the time he called his first guest, Bette Midler, the show was nearly half over. Carson's other guest was regular visitor David Brenner, who skipped his monologue and sat down for a chat.

Two guests will apparently be the norm on the shorter show, with performers either doing their acts or joining Carson for conversation — but not both.

The effect is a faster paced "Tonight Show" that doesn't gently wind its viewers down to sleep, as did the old version.

When it was over Tuesday, Carson looked in the camera and repeated a line he'd used to close a 1,000 shows. This time he seemed to mean it: "I wish we had more time."

Charles has new romance

She said Buckingham Palace had not advised her on how to cope with the inevitable publicity.

Charles is on record saying that "around 30" is the right time to marry, and Britain's popular press has paired him off with a succession of young lovelies, from Luxembourg's Princess Marie-Astrid to Lady Jane Wellesley, Lady Amanda Knatchbull, Davina Sheffield, Sabrina Guinness and Anna Wallace.

Dempster reported Wednesday that Charles' father, Prince Philip, has told his son: "Hurry up or you'll miss the boat" in the marriage stakes.

Guilty plea in death

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A second brother has pleaded guilty to attempted capital murder in the death of rookie policeman Alfredo Araiza, 25, in suburban Live Oak last Jan. 17.

Robert Graham, 24, was sentenced to 10 years in prison.

He's hooked on fishing and 'Dallas'

By PETER J. BOYER
AP Television Writer

"I Shot J.R." — Bumper sticker on a car parked on a Dublin, Ireland, street.

"I Shot The Guy Who Says He Shot J.R." — Bumper sticker on another car, parked on the same Dublin street.

CONG, Ireland (AP) — Michael Ryan is a big, gentle, red-faced man who has spent his 60-plus years endeavoring to tempt brown trout out of the big lakes in these parts.

His technique is "dapping," not unlike fly fishing, except the fisherman dosn't have to cast. The omnipresent breeze sweeping across Lake Corrib does all the work, leaving the fisherman with time to talk. And Ryan does love to talk.

On this day, his subjects range from mayflies ("They're a trout's favorite lunch, but they die fast") to technique ("Wait 'til the water breaks then one-two-three and set the hook").

And J.R. Ewing.

The terrible incongruence wasn't especially pleasant, but it was irresistable. Here was a fellow who in 60-some years of living had never seen reason to venture beyond Galway, 23 miles away. He had avoided the temptations of Dublin, only a three-hour train ride, and what others might consider real work.

But "Dallas" had hooked him. He knew all the dark machinations of the family Ewing, all about J.R., Bobby, Miss Ellie and the Sue Ellen (who is his candidate as the culprit in the infamous shoooting). He claims that Mrs. Ryan likes to watch the show, an obvious pretense. That used to be my excuse.

All of Ireland, it turns out, is addicted to "Dallas."

A nice young couple from Wexport, County Mayo, honeymooning here, couldn't believe that an American wouldn't yet know who shot J.R. I tried to explain about the actors' strike and told them I could tell them anything they'd want to know about the pennant races.

They'd have none of it. They wanted "Dallas" talk.

"Dallas" has at least two popular songs here. One, instantly my favorite, is called "My Bottler Shot J.R." Its chorus goes something like this:

"Goodbye Jock, goodbye Sue Ellen, goodbye to Miss Ellie; if you escaped us 'ere today, we'll get you on the telly."

"Southfork, you see, is not the kind of place for you and me ... Now poor Cliff Barnes, he's not so slick, always getting the wrong end of the stick. He's had his problems, now here's another — he's not even Pam's brother."

Hmm. Los Angeles to Dallas, by way of Ireland. I'll have to talk to my travel agent.

'Chattanooga Choo Choo' now being made into movie

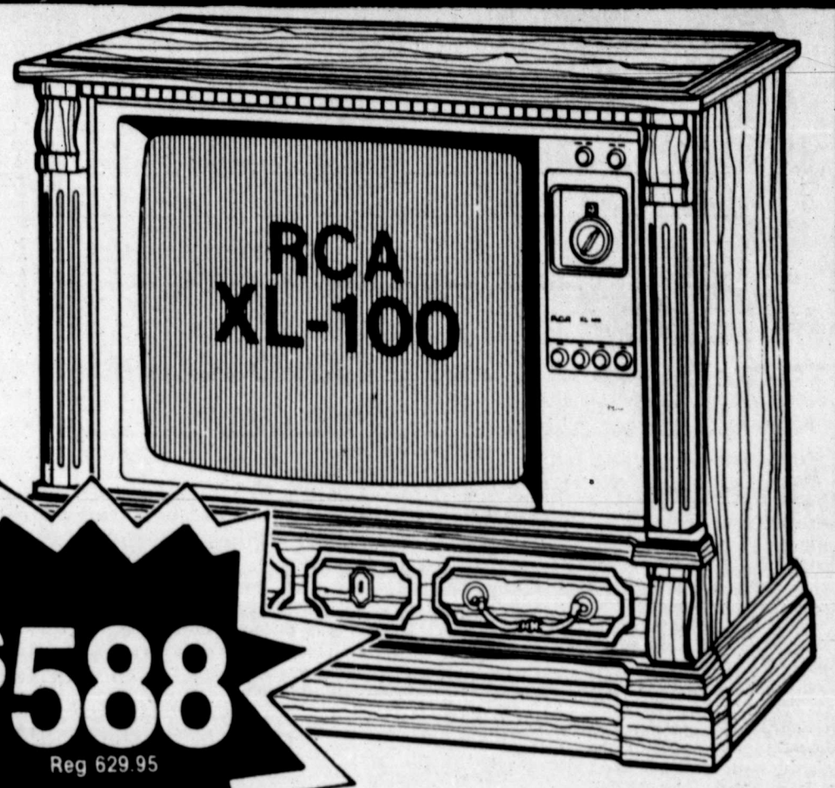

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Pardon me, boy, is that a movie on Track 29? The song "Chattanooga Choo Choo" is being made into a movie in the manner of "Harper Valley PTA."

Phil Borack has assigned novelist and screenwriter Tony Kendrick to write the screenplay. It was Borack who brought "Harper Valley PTA" to the movie screen

"Chattanooga Choo Choo" was written by Harry Warren and Mack Gordon and was introduced in the movie "Sun Valley Serenade."

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Discretion and discrimination are the passwords to increased business and financial success in the months just ahead. You will receive more proposals than you can handle! Choose carefully. Apply the highest possible standards when selecting romantic partner and confidants. Good luck has a beneficial effect on personal finances, and extra gains should be invested. Caution is advised where love is concerned. Not everyone has your desire for a long-term commitment.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Be open to suggestions from friends, associates. Special news about a relative lifts your spirits. Children are eager to share their experiences. Listen carefully!

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Conversation with member of the opposite sex may lead you to reconsider some long-held beliefs. In making final judgment, consult own conscience.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Some new starts are possible in business as the result of government action. You are now in position to move ahead, and there may be a new need for entertaining.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Work at an accelerated pace this morning and you may be able to get away for a long weekend. A special favor is apt to be granted. Show your appreciation!

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Conventional methods, procedures work best at place of employment today. Be sure to go through channels if suggesting a new plan of action.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A unique opportunity exists to bolster a business relationship. Good news could arrive regarding finances. An investment may prove more rewarding than expected.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Try to organize affairs at work so that a worry-free weekend can be enjoyed. Someone at a distance has need of special information. A no-frills travel plan could leave a lot to be desired.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Refuse to be discouraged by relative's unsympathetic comments. A quiet interlude with loved one will make this evening very special.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You may long for a chance to quit work and undertake a special project. Be sure this switch would make sense financially. Someone at a distance may have incorrect information.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): The intervention of a neutral party may be required to resolve a family dispute. Anticipating an encounter with an attractive newcomer can be more exciting than you care to admit.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You are looking just great now, and key individuals take notice. Discussing family matters with a friend could be a mistake. A matter of principle is involved.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): The immediate future holds several attractive new options. A short vacation may be in order. Mate, romantic partner could need more time to think things over.

Opening lead: King of ♠.

Here's another chance to see how accurately you can analyze a hand. After the king of clubs opening lead against five diamonds, how many tricks, and which, should declarer lose?

Note the bidding. North correctly rebid his six-card major, rather than support diamonds, and South's three-diamond rebid showed a good, long diamond suit and nothing much outside. However, when North could raise diamonds, South felt justified in going on to game because of his distributional features.

If declarer proceeds automatically, he will be defeated. Assume he wins the ace of clubs and leads to the king of spades. The defenders will take two spade tricks and a heart—down one.

A better play is to try to set up the heart suit. So after winning the ace of clubs, declarer cashes the ace of hearts. But an alert West can unblock the king of hearts under the ace, and declarer will again have to lose two spades and a heart.

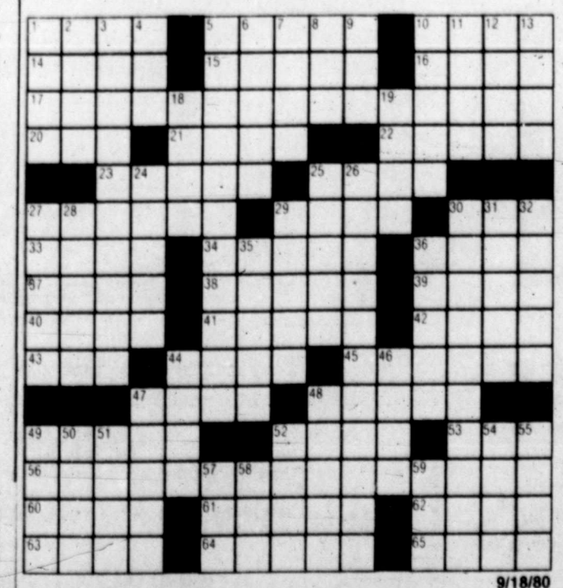

As the cards lie, declarer can make his contract if he comes to his hand with a club ruff and leads a heart. If West puts up the king, declarer ducks, while if West follows low, declarer wins the ace and returns a heart. Since this plan prevails only with this specific distribution, it cannot be recommended.

The line that succeeds against any 3-2 heart division, which is roughly a 17 percent better proposition than finding East with the ace of spades, is to allow the king of clubs to hold the first trick! Assume that West shifts to a trump. Declarer wins in hand, leads a heart to the ace, discards a heart on the ace of clubs and ruffs a heart. He gets back to dummy with the ten of diamonds and ruffs another heart. Dummy is re-entered with the ace of diamonds, and on the three long hearts, declarer sluffs three spades from his hand. So declarer loses only two tricks—the king of clubs and the ace of spades.

Rubber bridge clubs throughout the country use the four-deal bridge format. Do they know something you don't? Cycling and recycling: It all started with bike lanes

By JENNIFER KERR

The evolution of the bearded 36-year-old Gertman from a recycling rebel a decade ago mirrors the recent history of Davis, transformed from a conventional rural town with a small agricultural college to a sort of utopia bursting with optimism about its own solar-powered energy-saving future.

Gertman started collecting newspapers for recycling during the 1970 Earth Day fervor. He kept on when others faltered and now runs the recycling program for Davis Waste Removal, a private garbage firm.

Similarly, Davis' 3,000 townspeople took to all the modern fancies like bicycles and solar energy in a serious way. They made them city policy and found Davis being praised from coast to coast as a model energy-saving city.

THE TRANSFORMATION began in 1966, when the main issue in the city council election was whether to set up a system of bike lanes. The pro-lane people won. Davis now has more than 25 miles of lanes snaking around town.

Davis' downtown resembles few other downtowns. It has no tall buildings, no vacant lots, few stoplights, no parking meters. Dozens of bicycles are parked in front of all the stores, many of them old houses restored and surrounded by shade trees.

At a market, Ada Drake packed her groceries in the flowered box on the rear of her three-wheeled cycle. Mrs. Drake, 68, has been riding two to five miles a day since she moved to Davis about 10 years ago.

"I didn't want to walk and I don't drive," she said. "I don't like to ride in a car when I can ride a bike. It's cheaper. I can sit and look around. It's beautiful."

SHE THINKS OTHER cities will have to become more like Davis, where she said "people are more considerate" of bike riders.

The 1972 council election was the first after the voting age was lowered from 21 to 18. Three candidates who campaigned on slow-growth, recycling and public transit issues defeated business-oriented incumbents.

Growth was the first issue tackled. The city had been growing at an 11 percent annual rate and the existing city plan predicted a 1990 population of 90,000.

The new plan sets a 1990 limit of 50,000 people and limits the number of new houses and condominiums that can be built each year.

In 1973, caught up like everyone else with the problems of heating homes and fueling cars, council members turned their attention to energy.

THE RESULT WAS an ordinance establishing energy standards for new homes. It requires attic, floor and wall insulation, light-colored roofs and walls and landscaped shading of most windows.

The newest ordinance, which took effect Jan. 1, requires any homeowner who sells a house to have outfitted it with low-flow showerheads, weatherstripping, insulation and thermal blankets on water heaters.

While the ordinances do not require solar devices, many Davis developers have built big subdivisions and apartment complexes using the sun to heat water or the houses themselves.

The city council also got involved in waste disposal and recycling.

By 1972, Gertman's Resource Awareness Committee had a full-time recycling center on the University of California campus where people could bring newspapers, cans and bottles. But Davis Waste Removal still had the contract to haul garbage.

TWO YEARS LATER, when the council passed an ordinance requiring residents to separate garbage and newspapers, DWR decided it was too expensive to pick up the papers along curbs and turned the job over to Gertman's group.

"The volume went way up," Gertman recalled. "We were doing very well. The decision was made that it was economical for DWR to take the program over. RAC gladly gave the program up."

DWR built a recycling center next to its plant on the town's outskirts with a concrete pit so the cans, bottles and newspapers can easily be dropped into huge boxes and hauled away.

Last year, Gertman came full-cycle — he joined Davis Waste. Now DWR also picks up cardboard, and residents can bring in used motor oil for disposal.

GERTMAN THINKS the firm recycles about 70 percent of the newspaper used in Davis and about half the glass. It gets 120 tons of newspaper a month and about four tons of aluminum.

One of his future projects is turning brush and lawn clippings into compost for the Davis Community Gardens. For now, the branches, brush and grass trimmings picked up at curbside are dumped at a landfill.

Davis' energy projects are so organized there is even a standard tour a visitor can take by following a brochure. First lady Rosalynn Carter took the tour in March 1979; a few months later the president lauded Davis as a city that "has done a tremendous job."

Theory of Hanging Gardens of Babylon in raging dispute

By STEVE K. HINDY

BABYLON, Iraq (AP) — A battle of sorts is raging over the dusty baked-brick ramparts of this 5,000-year-old city, once home of such conquerors as Hammurabi the Lawgiver, Nebuchanezzar II and Alexander the Great.

Koldewey and his teams spent 15 years sifting through the brown brick rubble of ancient Babylon, in the barren desert plain 60 miles southwest of Baghdad. Using their knowledge of ancient building techniques and the descriptions of ancient historians they rebuilt Babylon, in their imaginations.

The famous Hanging Gardens were placed in the north corner of the Biblical King Nebuchanezzar's southern palace, high above the still visible foundations of 14 vaulted rooms and stone and pitch pavement.

"The Germans thought the gardens were over in that area, but we don't believe it," says Ismail Jassim Ali, a University of Baghdad archeologist.

"For one thing, look how far it is from the southern palace to the Euphrates River. How could they get water to the plants? There is a well in the palace, but how could they have pumped the water to the height of 75 feet they claimed for the gardens? And why would any king build a garden for his princess in the middle of a bustling commercial district like this used to be?"

Ali theorizes that either the Hanging Gardens of the Princess Omid were not as grand as the Germans envisioned, or they were hundreds of yards from the southern palace, perhaps in the summer palace among the palm groves on the banks of the Euphrates.

Armed with shovels, chisels and brushes, 1,200 workmen from Iraq's Department of Antiquities and 35 archeologists are swarming over the 17-square-mile ruin, reconstructing the cosmopolitan city that Nebuchanezzar II rebuilt in 605 B.C., and trying to disprove Koldewey's theory.

The department is two years into an eight-year, $37-million effort to prove its point.

Conveyor belts are strung from one end of the southern palace to the other. Walls are being rebuilt with bricks and mortar that is difficult to distinguish from the original, most of which was quarried over the centuries by the villagers inhabiting the mud huts of the Euphrates plain south of Baghdad.

There were nine gates through the two massive walls surrounding the moated city, and its east and west sides were linked by great bridges over the Euphrates. The Ishtar Gate still stands 39 feet high today, its walls bearing sacred animals, the Bull of Hadad and the serpent-headed Dragon of Marduk, in decorative relief.

The famous "Lion of Babylon," a worn black basalt stone hewn in the shape of a lion trampling a man, stands proudly on a concrete base several hundred yards from Ishtar Gate.

Among the grand structures to be rebuilt is the seven-story "House of the Foundation of Heaven and Earth," the "Ziggurat" that figures in the biblical tale of the "Tower of Babel."

The city goes back much farther than Nebuchanezzar's time. It is first mentioned by a king of the Akkadian Dynasty of the 24th century B.C. Under Hammurabi, it was the administrative and religious capital of Mesopotamia from 1792 to 1750 B.C.

After Nebuchanezzar, the Persian rulers Cyrus, Darius and Xerxes I conquered the city. Alexander the Great seized it in 331 B.C. and made it the capital of his Asiatic empire before dying in Babylon.

Dismissal decision due soon

DETROIT (AP) — A federal judge is expected to rule within two weeks on a Justice Department request for dismissal of a $2 million lawsuit filed by the family of slain civil rights worker Viola Liuzzo.

The government asked Tuesday for dismissal of the suit against the FBI. The family contends the FBI was responsible for the slaying of their mother, who was gunned down on an Alabama highway in 1965.

The fatal shot was fired from a passing car occupied by three Ku Klux Klan members and Gary Thomas Rowe, an FBI informant. Rowe was indicted in 1978 in connection with Mrs. Liuzzo's death and is fighting extradition from Georgia.

Credit hassle means death

AUSTIN (AP) — A 20-year-old man was shot to death by a grocery store owner Tuesday after he was refused credit on a bottle of wine and then broke the owner's car window, police said.

The victim was Kenneth McArthur, a 10th-grade dropout.

William Strange, owner of the Circle T Grocery and Drug store, was charged with murder and bond was set at $10,000.
