Control 'bothers' Wallace

VICTORIA, Texas (AP) — The chairman of the Texas Railroad Commission said it bothers him that Congress is regulating the oil industry, yet apparently knows very little about it.

Most members of Congress seem to think of gasoline just as something that comes through the pump at the service station, Mack Wallace charged Thursday at an annual meeting of members of the American Petroleum Institute.

"They don't realize that you can't buy a pair of glasses, go to the grocery store and buy a steak, or buy a bottle of aspirin — because that bottle's made out of plastic — without depending on the oil and gas industry. It (the industry) touches every human life, every minute of every day," Wallace said.

He criticized the stand of Eastern congressmen, led by Massachusetts Sen. Edward Kennedy, he said, who advocate the purchase of Arab oil over increased domestic supplies.

The United States doesn't have enough natural gas available for peak demand, and it's dangerous to have to depend upon upon an unstable Mideast, added Wallace, whose agency regulates the oil and gas industry in Texas.

He said Congress has the ability to "create" a surplus or a shortage. He recalled the gasoline crisis of 1973 and said the Texas Railroad Commission predicted "as far back as 1953" that foreign imports would overwhelm the American oil industry's ability to produce.

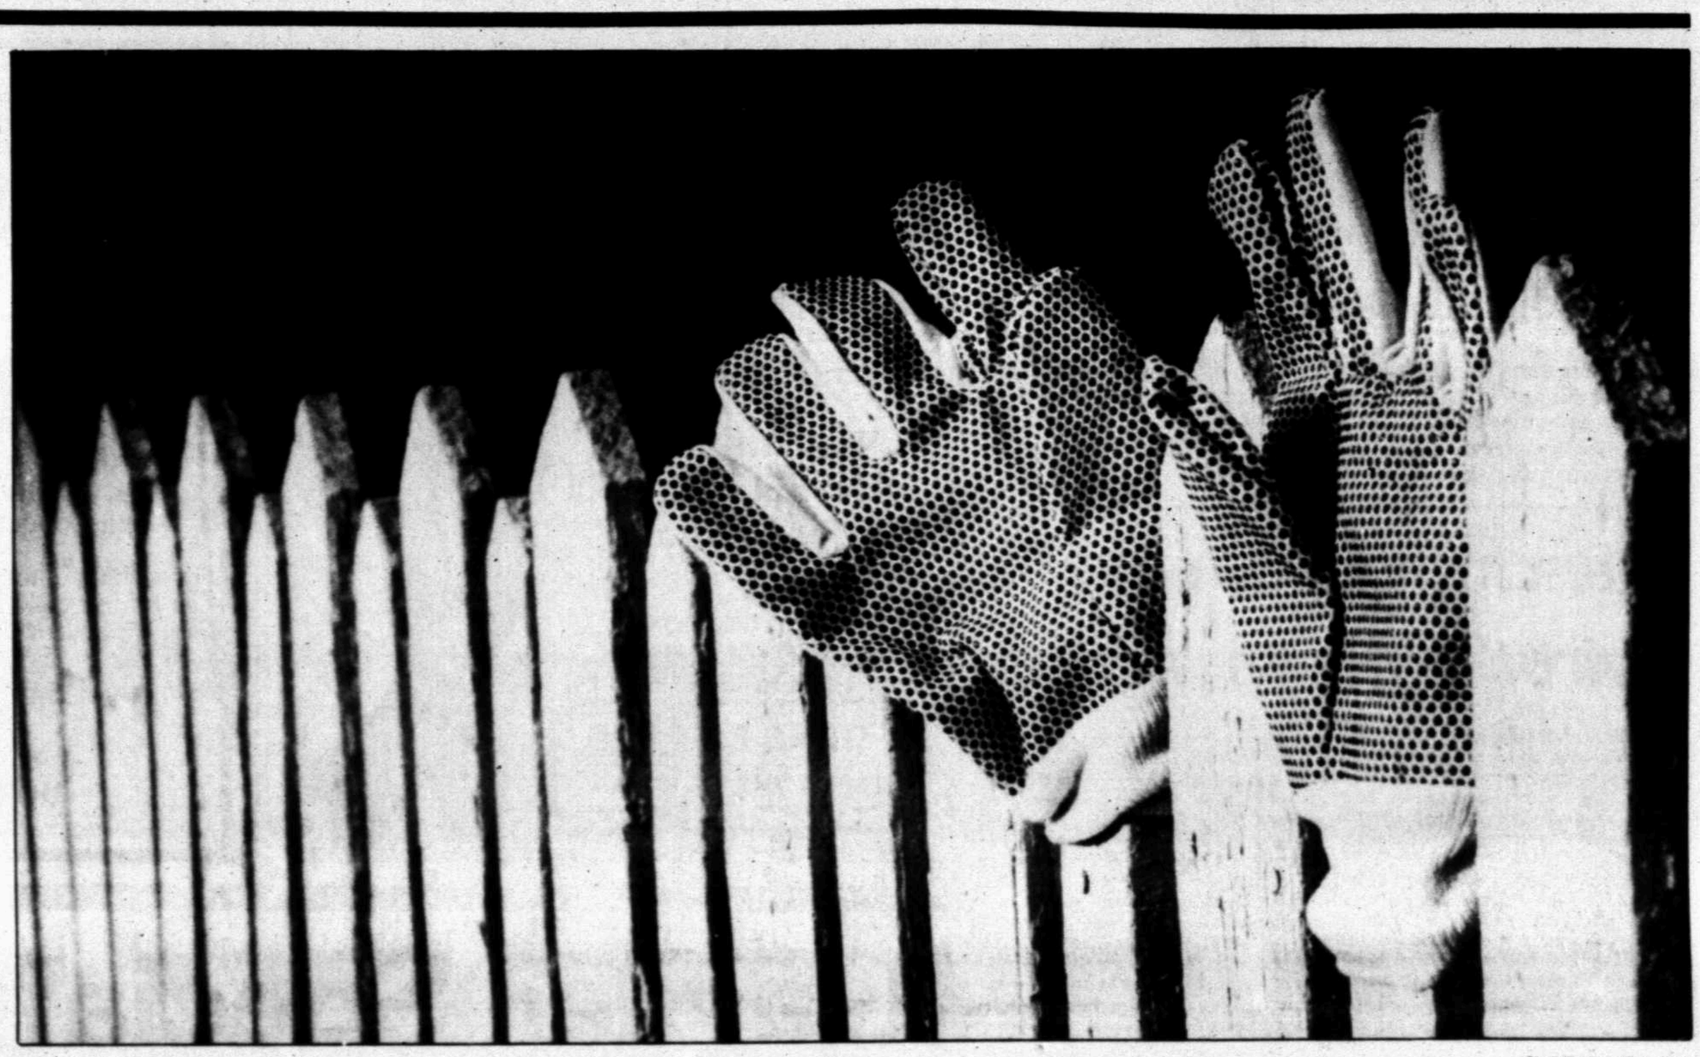

"If you don't have the proper incentives from the United States Congress you're out of business," he said. Forty percent of this nation's gas by 1986 will come from wells that have not yet been drilled, he said.

Congress has the key to solving the "boom or bust situation" faced by the industry, Wallace said.

"They have to give the industry the green light," he said. The resources are there, he maintained. Only 30 percent of the Gulf of Mexico Shelf tracts are offered for lease, and there also are vast areas in the West to be considered, he said.

"Who is speaking for the American production of oil and gas? You can't depend upon unstable sources for your future," Wallace said.

"If I told you that the air you breathe depended upon another country, you'd get upset because you can only survive several minutes without it. Yet, we are very dependent on oil for our lives, and it can make you dependent upon another nation. It can destroy your life, maybe not as quickly as if they controlled the air. It would take longer, but the result would be the same."

Grenada medals outnumber soldiers

By FRED S. HOFFMAN
AP Military Writer

WASHINGTON — It took nine days and 7,000 troops, but the Army is giving 8,612 medals to reward individual performance in last year's Grenada campaign, including a batch to chairbound personnel who got no closer to the fighting than the Pentagon.

The Army, calling its awards system a "valuable and effective leadership tool to build unit morale and esprit," said on Thursday that 275 of the decorations were for valor, for wounds or for combat deaths.

The rest, for individual performance, included 4,581 commendation medals, 2,495 achievement medals, 681 Bronze Stars and a variety of other decorations for meritorious service.

The fighting began Oct. 25 following a bloody coup by a Marxist faction and ended Nov. 2. Since then, the U.S. military force on the island has been cut to 225 people performing civic action and similar chores.

"Many support and staff personnel received these awards for their support of the Grenada operation outside of the actual combat zone or for service in Grenada after hostilities had ceased," the Army said.

Pentagon personnel got 50 of the achievement medals.

Other awards were given to staff and rear-area support troops at Fort Bragg, N.C., home of the 82nd Airborne Division; Fort Stewart, Ga., and Fort Lewis, Wash., bases for Army Rangers; and the headquarters of the Army's Forces Command in Atlanta.

The other services, which had many fewer men on or over the Caribbean island last fall, have granted only a handful of individual medals.

Some additional awards may be granted but nowhere as lavishly as the Army, according to indications from the Marines, Navy and Air Force.

It indicated that the decisions on awards were made by unit commanders. The 82nd Airborne Division led with 6,708 individual awards.

The Marine Corps reported granting 10 Purple Heart medals for combat deaths and wounds, with an additional 100 recommendations for bravery being studied. The Marines had about 1,000 men ashore in Grenada during the battle. However, the corps has approved a unit commendation for the full 22nd Marine Amphibious Unit, including about 1,800 men who apparently remained on ships offshore.

The Navy said it has awarded seven Purple Hearts for combat deaths or wounds and added that "to date, no individual award recommendations had been received at the Navy Department level."

About 50 Navy men either went ashore on Grenada or flew aboard aircraft in what the Navy called a "possible combat situation."

California couple may have had other 'sex slaves'

POMONA, Calif. (AP) — A couple charged with forcing a teen-age girl to become a sex slave and prostitute while starving her into an 80-pound "skeleton with yellow skin" may have had other victims, authorities say.

Theodore Glaum, 54, and his wife, Mildred, 36, were being held without bond on nine felony counts pending a Municipal Court bail hearing set for today.

The 18-year-old victim was enrolled at an Anchorage, Alaska, high school for problem students when she came to California to attend the US Festival last Memorial Day weekend, police said. She allegedly was held captive by the Glaums from June until Saturday night.

Irwindale police Detective Ken Aguayo said police are investigating the possibility that other girls were victims of the couple as well. He noted that witnesses have reported seeing the Glaums with a young woman who fit the victim's description, but that some of the reported sightings were before the girl was in the area.

"We are just starting the intense investigation," Aguayo said. "Now it's going to stem and branch out like a tree."

The young woman's condition has improved in the past few days while she has been treated at an unidentified hospital under police protection, he said.

"She is under a doctor's care," he said. "She is eating a heck of a lot of food. She is even starting to smile a little bit."

When the teen-ager arrived in California, "she was 160 pounds, 5-foot-7, blond-haired," Aguayo said. "When we found her she was 80 pounds....

"She said that in the last two weeks she had been given only three pieces of bread, a spoon of gravy and a glass of water," he said. "She couldn't lift her feet but a few inches off the ground because she had no muscles left due to dehydration and malnutrition."

The girl's mother, who had heard from her only once since June, expressed relief in a telephone interview from Anchorage.

"I knew in my heart that she was alive, and I thought that since I didn't hear from her, she must be held captive somewhere," she said. "I felt that she may have gotten into a religious cult, and maybe was brainwashed."

The Glaums pleaded innocent at separate arraignments Thursday to one count each of conspiracy, attempted murder, sodomy, oral copulation, procurement, deriving support from prostitution, involuntary servitude and two counts of forcible rape.

Visiting Judge Thomas Kelly set an April 10 preliminary hearing, said Deputy District Attorney David Disco.

The Glaums were arrested Saturday night by Sgt. Mickey Nygard and Officer Gil Cuen, who spotted the emaciated girl sitting in the back of a motorhome parked outside a closed liquor store in Irwindale, a suburb 25 miles east of downtown Los Angeles.

The patrolmen first thought the girl was suffering from anorexia nervosa, an illness characterized by refusal to eat.

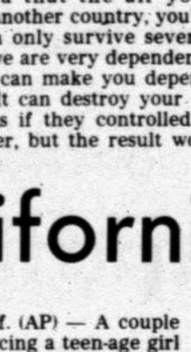

"She was near death," Aguayo said. "If you looked at a skeleton with yellow skin, you'd know something was wrong, too."

The couple allegedly kept the girl tied up in the vehicle while offering her sexual services to men at campsites and other locations. She was raped an untold number of times, police said.

Lasater has 'fresh, new' vision for mayor's office

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the second of an eight-part series examining the candidates for school, city, college and hospital boards.

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

Frank Lasater

It's a case of the young untried attempting to push aside the older experienced hand. With almost a generation gap between the two candidates, Frank Lasater at 33 is calling for "fresh, new leadership" in his race to win out over incumbent G. Thane Akins, 50, for mayor.

"Now is the time for Midland to change leadership," said the younger candidate. "It's a healthy cycle. You need a fresh look, fresh blood. The situation is to the point in Midland today where we need a change and it won't be solved by current leadership. It boils down to leadership and style. I understand what it takes to supply broad-range policies."

It's not that Lasater dislikes Akins. "I'm in agreement with Thane on national politics and also on some personal issues. We just disagree on how local government should be run."

While they are in harmony on the need for street repairs, they don't agree on comments made of the local government by the Texas Research League and on how to approach the budget deficit problems.

ON STREETS, Lasater would opt for a bond issue, as would Akins, to handle the large dollar repairs. A tax increase, said Lasater, should be used as a last resort.

The city is operating on a budget that includes a $2.1 million deficit, with the money coming out of surplus. Lasater said the city needs to look at "innovative new ideas" for getting out of the deficit situation. He suggested looking at selling the sanitation department to a private company and setting up an arrangement where the city would receive a royalty each year.

He also suggested a commission, similar to President Reagan's Grace Commission, to find waste which could be eliminated in city government.

Turning to the city's $9 million surplus — which should have $7 million at the end of this fiscal year — Lasater said only $4.5 million is needed as a minimum surplus. To hire 25 new police officers — another of his goals — he said the money could come out of the surplus for the first year.

To continue funding these increased costs, Lasater expects the sales tax revenue to increase as the economy bounces back. "I feel the economy is turning upward and that sales tax revenue will increase."

Although the mayor has indicated the need for more police officers decreased with the slump, Lasater feels they are still needed.

"DETECTIVES HAVE 60 cases apiece to work. They don't have enough officers to work the case load. Defense of citizens should be a priority of government. Government is not going to be perfect and money won't solve it. But when outlaws start coming in, we need to stand up and correct it."

Lasater approves of the various neighborhood watch programs, "but you can't say that's a complete answer. We still can't get away from the role of government to protect its citizens."

In his campaign, Lasater has referred repeatedly to a report on Midland prepared by the Texas Research League. The report was critical of the way Midland is handling its council-manager form of government.

Kennedy wants strict conditions on aid

Edward Kennedy

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Edward M. Kennedy predicts he will persuade the Senate to place more stringent conditions on military aid to El Salvador, where the Pentagon says U.S. servicemen have come under rebel fire three times in five months.

A compromise proposal for $61.7 million in emergency military aid to the war-torn Central American country, a little more than a third of what the administration originally asked, is expected to pass the Republican-controlled Senate next week.

The proposal was provisionally adopted by a voice vote late Thursday and then the matter was put aside until Monday while efforts continued to reach an agreement ending a filibuster by Kennedy and other opponents.

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee scheduled action today on a separate measure limiting the number of U.S. advisers in El Salvador and conditioning further military aid on presidential and congressional findings that the Salvadoran government is making human rights and other reforms.

Kennedy said he would offer an amendment to the bill being considered on the floor cutting the amount to $21 million. He said he would also propose restrictions on any further aid, including a requirement that right-wing death squads be eliminated and that the Salvadoran government negotiate unconditionally with leftist rebels.

On Wednesday, noting a press report that U.S. airplanes are supporting Salvadoran combat units, Kennedy offered an amendment restricting presidential power to send troops to El Salvador or Nicaragua for combat.

He lost, 72-23, with four Republicans and 19 Democrats supporting the amendment.

"I was in the Senate 20 years ago when it passed the Gulf of Tonkin resolution, which was used as the justification for our involvement in Vietnam," Kennedy told reporters. "I am very much concerned that today might have been the Gulf of Tonkin resolution No. 2 with regard to American policy in Central America."

Sen. James Sasser, D-Tenn., read to the Senate a reply that he said he received Wednesday from a Pentagan official telling him, in response to questions, that U.S. servicemen had been under fire in El Salvador in November, in February and again this month.

The Pentagon response said no Americans were injured in the attacks on a camp at San Miguel, El Salvador, and the Salvadoran Naval Base at La Union. It said 17 U.S. Army trainers and five Navy trainers are stationed at San Miguel and 10 Army personnel at La Union.

At the State Department, the U.S. ambassador to El Salvador, Thomas Pickering, told a news conference that "On no occasion that I know of did any of them (U.S. servicemen) have to fire back or were put in a position where they needed to fire back. They did what they were supposed to do ... find shelter and stay out of the way."

Sasser said that when he visited Honduras seven weeks ago officers of the U.S. Southern Command told him the United States did not have trainers at San Miguel or La Union. Lake, however, said, "We weren't trying to hide it."

The Pentagon says there are 69 U.S. military personnel in El Salvador, including 55 advisers to the Salvadoran armed forces, and 14 servicemen attached to the U.S. Embassy in El Salvador. One adviser was assassinated last year in San Salvador.

The rejected Kennedy amendment would have required a declaration of war or other congressional enactment before U.S. troops could be sent to El Salvador or Nicaragua for combat, except to evacuate American citizens or to ward off an attack upon the United States.

Sen. Pete Wilson, R-Calif., said he believed the amendment was an unconstitutional restriction on presidential power and "even if constitutional, would hamstring the president of the United States unwisely."

Kennedy, however, took note of a Washington Post report quoting a senior Salvadoran Army officer as saying U.S. aircraft are providing communications and reconaissance support for Salvadoran troops during combat operations.

French troops leave Beirut's 'green line'

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — French peacekeeping troops withdrew from Beirut's battle-scarred "green line" today, and warring Moslem and Christian militias reportedly agreed to disengage their forces in the mid-city area.

About 500 French troops, the last unit of the four-nation peacekeeping force left in the capital, evacuated their positions this morning at the museum crossing on the line between Christian east Beirut and Moslem west Beirut.

They drove in convoys from their headquarters near the crossing to the harbor, where they prepared to board ships for the journey to France.

The French government had said the last unit would leave Beirut by Saturday, concluding a week-long evacuation operation.

The French departure ends the presence of the multinational force that was deployed in the capital in September 1982 after the Israeli invasion of Lebanon. The U.S., Italian and British contingents have already pulled out.

Lebanese government sources, meanwhile, said the principal warring factions have agreed to pull back roughly 700 yards each from current positions along the three-mile "green line" to help stablize a cease-fire.

Subcommittees have been set up to oversee the disengagement with the help of 40 French observers who arrived Wednesday and took up positions with Lebanese police at the neutralized museum crossing Thursday, the sources said.

The subcommittees also were charged with ensuring security on the main roads from the city to the airport and harbor in order to reopen them sometime next week, the sources said. They declined to be named in keeping with government regulations.

Agreement on these moves was reached in a meeting late Thursday by the newly formed Higher Security-Political Committee under President Amin Gemayel at the government palace in suburban Baabda east of Beirut.

"The president and higher committee are racing against time to get a cease-fire firmly in place before the French departure," one administration source said. "They are taking measures on the ground to actually end the civil war."

The higher committee was formed Wednesday from political and military representatives of the main Christian, Shiite Moslem and Druse militias, as well as the Lebanese army.

The airport and harbor have been closed since Feb. 6 when Shiite and Druse militiamen wrested control of west Beirut from the army.

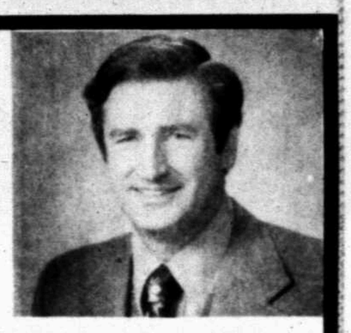

On Thursday, a Christian Phalangist militia gave up its positions along Lebanon's coastal highway and headed for Beirut as part of a new agreement with the rival Druse faction.

The Lebanese Forces militia removed tanks, jeeps and armored personnel carriers from the strip of road they held between the Israeli line at the Awali River and the city of Damour, 12 miles south of Beirut.

El Salvador prepares for runoff

D'Aubuisson seeks 'respect'

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Right-wing presidential candidate Roberto d'Aubuisson, toning down his harsh rhetoric, says an expected runoff between him and a moderate Christian Democrat should be conducted with respect for one another's "image."

D'Aubuisson conceded first-round victory Thursday to Jose Napoleon Duarte in Sunday's presidential election. But unofficial tallies indicate Duarte did not receive the clear majority needed to avoid a runoff, which is expected to be held May 6.

D'Aubuisson said his party, the ultra-conservative Republican Nationalist Alliance, won about 31 percent of the vote in the eight-man race while Duarte won 44 percent. The Christian Democrats give similar figures, saying Duarte won about 45 percent and d'Aubuisson came in second with about 30 percent.

The Central Election Council has been working round-the-clock on the official count, which probably will not be complete before the weekend.

During the campaign the fiery d'Aubuisson often denounced Duarte as "that crazy man" and a "liar." He also accused the Christian Democrat of representing the interests of the leftist guerrilla movement.

Duarte favors negotiations with the rebels who have fought the U.S.-backed government for 4½ years. D'Aubuisson believes they should be crushed militarily.

But Thursday, d'Aubuisson said if his party wins the runoff it would consider Christian Democratic strength in forming a government.

"At no moment will we ignore that there is a large and greatly representative force which follows the Christian Democrats," he said at a news conference at party headquarters.

Reagan's envoy visits Honduras

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras (AP) — President Reagan's new envoy for Central America visited Honduras just ahead of new joint U.S.-Honduran military maneuvers and praised a four-nation effort to curb armed conflict in the region.

In neighboring Nicaragua, two cargo boats struck mines near a port Thursday, and the defense minister blamed "North American commandos." The minister, Humberto Ortega, left for the Soviet Union and North Korea in search of military aid.

U.S. Ambassador Harry Shlaudeman arrived Thursday in Honduras and met with President Robert Suazo Cordova and other government officials. The content of the discussions was not revealed.

In a statement to reporters, Shlaudeman praised the efforts of the Contadora group to negotiate peaceful solutions to conflicts in Central America. The group consists of Mexico, Venezuela, Colombia and Panama.

"The Contadora process is active in the search for a formula to reduce the tensions that exist in the (Central American) zone," said Shlaudeman, who was sworn in Monday to replace Richard Stone.

The Contadora group, formed in January 1983, has developed a peace plan that stresses non-military solutions. Its proposals include a reduction of foreign military personnel.

The Foreign Ministry in Costa Rica said Shlaudeman would visit that country today. State Department officials have said the envoy also will visit Guatemala, El Salvador and Nicaragua during his week-long trip, but would not disclose the exact itinerary for security reasons.

Two Nicaraguan cargo boats struck mines Thursday near the port of Corinto.

Slim chance for rain diminishing Saturday

From Staff and Wire Reports

A slight hope for rain to wash down a dirt-blown Permian Basin will disappear Saturday, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport.

The less than 20 percent chance of isolated showers or thunderstorms tonight will combine with a low in the middle 40s and gusty southeasterly winds at 15-25 mph.

Saturday will dawn with partly cloudy skies, a high in the upper 60s and southeasterly winds at a decreased 10-20 mph.

Thursday's high of 66 missed the record high of 95, set in 1963, by 29 degrees. The overnight low of 45 was 22 degrees warmer than 1937's record low for the date of 23.

STATE

Scattered showers pushed into West and Central Texas before dawn today as a new front approached the state.

High-level clouds dominated the western half of the state, while fair skies prevailed in the east.

Pre-dawn temperatures ranged from the middle 30s across the Panhandle to the middle 60s in the western Trans Pecos. At 4 a.m., Amarillo reported the coolest reading in Texas with 34, while El Paso clocked in on the other end of the scale at 65 degrees.

A ridge of high pressure extending through East and Central Texas kept light northeasterly winds over most of the state, except for South Texas and the High Plains, where southwesterly winds at 10 to 20 mph were common.

NATION

From Alabama to Massachusetts, people were taking stock today of the damage done by a major spring storm that unleashed deadly tornadoes in the Carolinas, heavy rains along the coast, and deep snow in the Northeast.

The snowfall diminished today over New England, southeastern New York state and New Jersey, but high winds continued to cause drifts.

At Worcester, Mass., the snow reached 16 inches; 13 inches at Litchfield, Mass.; 15 inches in central New York state, and 26 inches at Greentown, Pa.

The storm system triggered coastal flooding, snapped electrical lines to thousands of customers and forced many to flee their homes.

The Carolinas began the cleanup from tornadoes that struck that area Wednesday, leaving many people dead or injured and damaging property with winds and flooding.

Mayor candidate has 'fresh' view

"The city manager needs to be provided with a broad policy," said Lasater. "The staff should be given jobs and then the council should get out of the way. It happens in nearly every department; the council is taking too active a role. The Research League brings this out; my independent research verified it."

Lasater has focused on streets as a major problem, singling out potholes, synchronization of traffic lights and drainage.

"Odessa doesn't have potholes. Paving contractors say we waste a lot of money on streets; that it's not being done right," said the candidate.

HE COMPLAINED about the timing of traffic lights, making traffic start and stop. That, he contended, is contributing to the poor quality of the streets and is tearing up the vehicles.

"Odessa has an active preventive maintenance program. The League says Midland doesn't have one. I'm sure it's going to take longer than two years to fix the streets."

In calling for better communication with the citizens, Lasater said he would turn the part-time volunteer job of mayor into almost a full-time job, devoting 40 hours a week to the job if necessary. He also would schedule town hall meetings at night "to find out what the citizens are concerned about."

He criticized the mayor for saying his telephone number was listed and he wore a beeper. "I didn't say he was inaccessible. I said he didn't communicate."

Diversifying the local economy should mean an active role is taken by the mayor. "To bring industry or any type of business to Midland takes an active sales job by the mayor. You have to sell them on Midland."

Lasater said over the years he has been involved in professional, not civic, organizations including Texas Association of Realtors, Permian Basin Geophysical Society, Permian Basin Petroleum Association and Young Presidents Organization.

WHILE LASATER has cited his business experience as former president of Flare Inc., some of Akins' supporters have criticized his practices with that company, saying he was forced to resign.

Lasater denied it. "Flare is a public company and those people have a right to their opinion." Lasater said back in October two of the major stockholders had some financial problems and were no longer able to pay their loans. They felt the company should create short-term profits; Lasater preferred long-range objectives.

"It was short-term vs. long-term. They owned over 50 percent of the stock. I felt that (short-term) would violate what the board of directors wanted to do and I resigned. I was asked seven times to stay; I was not asked to resign."

If elected to mayor, Lasater said he would expect to spend four years in the position. "Four years is long enough for anybody."

New snowstorm building in Rockies

By DANA FIELDS
Associated Press Writer

A monster storm that claimed 76 lives swept into the Atlantic today as crews worked to restore power to nearly half a million homes that went dark in an onslaught of hurricane-force winds and up to 2 feet of snow.

But a new snowstorm was building in the southern Rockies.

Many of the thousands of people who fled flooding along the coast from Virginia to New England spent the night in emergency shelters, but most were returning to their homes today.

Born early this week as a West Texas sandstorm, the storm system carried a deadly arsenal that included tornadoes that killed at least 60 people in the Carolinas and winds that gusted to 80 mph in New England and southern New York.

The storm was located today off Massachusetts' Cape Cod, which was briefly cut off Thursday when accidents closed two bridges connected to the mainland. A Coast Guard helicopter rescued 23 crewmen from a Maltese freighter that ran aground on the cape late Thursday.

A Coast Guard helicopter and two Coast Guard boats today searched for a 65-foot fishing boat carrying four passengers which disappeared off the coast of Montauk on Long Island during the height of the storm Thursday.

Warnings of gale winds and coastal floods were posted today in New Jersey, New York, Connecticut, Rhode Island, New Hampshire and Maine as the storm drove off the Northeast, pulling tides 6 to 10 feet above normal. Northeast winds up to 35 mph threatened Virginia's Eastern Shore with what forecasters called "major" beach erosion.

Parts of Maine, New Hampshire and Vermont got more than a foot of snow overnight. Flurries that could amount to another inch or two were falling in northern New England and upstate New York.

Meanwhile, another storm forming in the southern Rockies prompted high wind warnings today in Utah's Wasatch mountains, where winds ere gusing to 60 mph.

Snow fell today in the Rockies from northern Arizona to Colorado, where up to 8 inches was expected in the mountains.

Power lines snapped under ice or were felled by trees nearly as fast as crews could replace them Thursday, and utility companies from Delaware to Massachusetts — where 150,000 homes were without power late Thursday — said it could be two to three days before all electricity was restored.

"This is our worst storm in 15 years in terms of rate of damage," said Walter Salvi of Boston Edison Co., which reported 100,000 customers without power late Thursday. Utility crews from New York and Vermont were imported to assist in Massachusetts.

The worst damage was along the 260-mile arc of tornado destruction in the Carolinas, where the cleanup continued today as National Guard troops stood guard against looters and survivors traded tales of miracle escapes.

Among the heaviest snowfalls were 16 inches in Worcester, Mass., 13 inches in Litchfield, Conn., 15 inches in three central New York counties and 26 inches at Greentown, Pa.

In Pennsylvania, where two people died in weather related-accidents and one suffered a fatal heart attack trudging through snow, a Mertztown couple managed to scramble from their car stalled on railroad tracks just in time to see it demolished by a Conrail freight train.

Firefighters watch for signs that brush fires re-igniting

KERRVILLE, Texas (AP) — Firefighters were expected to stand watch throughout today to make sure brush fires that consumed six houses, a wildlife management center and 3,500 acres of Hill Country land don't ignite again.

"...There are are still hot spots. You get a wind come up, all it takes is for it to blow an ember from it into the grass, and you've got trouble again," Kerrville Fire Capt. Steve Langlinais said Thursday night.

"They'll watch all four fires throughout Friday, I'd say ... to make sure it doesn't break out again," Langlinais said of the fires, which were pronounced under control at 10 a.m. Thursday.

Winds gusting up to 60 mph helped the fires to spread on Tuesday and Wednesday. But winds were calm on Thursday, and that eased the attempt to get the blazes under control.

Kerrville Fire Marshal John Mann said the next step is to find out what caused the fires.

"We probably won't know for at least three days. We need to spend a little bit of time and backtrack to find out the exact origin of the fire."

He said he is not ruling out arson just because the fires were miles apart.

Dry vegetation, high winds and temperatures over 100 degrees combined for "the worst kind of conditions you want while fighting a fire," Mann said.

"The freeze back in December made everything especially dry and we ended 1983 with a minus count for rainfall," he said. "We haven't even had much rain in 1984 and when everything's so dry, the fire can really spread."

No one was hurt, the fire marshal said, except for firefighters with "minor injuries like smoke inhalation, debris in the eyes or the typical cuts and bruises."

Plans to divert lava flow studied

VOLCANO, Hawaii (AP) — With a wall of lava creeping forward just five miles from Hawaii's second largest city, officials studied ways to divert Mauna Loa's fiery flow as some people voluntarily left their homes and others held "house warming" parties.

But early today observers reported that a new lobe or finger of lava had branched to the north away from the flow, apparently diverting some lava and perhaps lessening the threat to Hilo, said Bobby Kamara, a spokesman for the U.S. Geological Survey's Hawaiian Volcano Observatory.

Observatory officials "don't know the extent of the lobe, but they don't feel the threat is as immediate," said Kamara.

No dwellings were immediately threatened Thursday by the volcano's inexorable outpouring of 2,000-degree molten rock, and no evacuations had been ordered, county civil defense officials said. But scientists said the speed and direction of the flow could change at any moment.

"The city is now in a stand-by situation," said Hawaii County Mayor Herbert Matayoshi, who signed a declaration of emergency for the east and southeast portions of the county.

County officials were reconsidering a previously rejected plan to build earthen dikes to divert the sizzling river away from the city of 40,000. Changing terrain near the front of the flow might make such an effort feasible, Matayoshi said.

"There is a randomness to the flow which is hard to predict at this time," said Robert Decke, scientist in charge of the U.S. Geological Survey's Hawaiian Volcano Observatory. "The earlier you try to predict that, the greater the room for error."

Matayoshi advised Hilo-area residents to "say a prayer" and keep abreast of the situation by following radio and newspaper reports.

Some residents have opted to leave their homes rather than second-guess the volcano's intentions, said Harry Kim, Hawaii County civil defense administrator.

Among the residents of the Kaumana area of Hilo, the developed property closest to the lava flow, the reaction was mixed.

"We've been having parties up here every night. We've been calling them house warmings," said Daryl Smith, 30.

Democratic presidential hopeful Gary Hart is accompanied by his wife Lee as he speaks to the crowd at the Red Parrot Disco in New York Thursday night. Hart is preparing for the New York Primary set for Tuesday.

Hart: Mondale makes 'back-door use' of money

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer

Gary Hart is accusing Walter Mondale's campaign of making "back-door use" of money from special interest political committees, while the former vice president says his chief rival for the Democratic presidential nomination has turned his back on the nation's cities.

Hart, trailing in recent polls in New York state as the crucial Tuesday primary looms, went on national network television Thursday night with an appeal his aides said was aimed at presenting his "new ideas" to an uncertain electorate.

He also used it to confront Mondale's claim of experience. "Those who are experienced in the wrong decisions can't be relied on to make the right decisions in a crisis," Hart said.

Mondale kept up his intense attack on Hart, saying the Colorado senator has "a very, very bad record on housing" and little interest in urban issues. Mondale spoke Thursday at an urban-issues forum and in a written rundown on some of Hart's Senate votes.

"Throughout his Senate career, he has turned his back on many of the programs and commitments that aid our cities," said the document distributed by Mondale's campaign. It said Hart's record showed "a pattern of neglect of the needs of America's cities."

Hart, sticking to New York City again today, told the same forum Thursday that despite their sometimes bitter debate, he and Mondale have no serious differences on civil rights, education, support of Israel or the environment.

His pollster, Dottie Lynch, said many New Yorkers have indicated they are sympathetic to Hart but skeptical about his views.

Campaigning in New York, Mondale responded to criticism about the use of political action committees' money by independent groups set up to support Mondale's candidacy.

Mondale has refused to accept money from political action committees, as has Hart, and Mondale said he would "prefer" that independent committees supporting him not accept the money either.

But federal records show many of the so-called "delegate committees," legally independent but working in support of Mondale, have taken thousands of dollars from PACs backed by organized labor and other groups.

Agents stop plan for drugs at Olympics

MIAMI (AP) — Federal agents have broken up a Colombian drug ring that planned to flood Los Angeles with cocaine during the Summer Olympics, authorities say.

A Drug Enforcement Administration agent posing as a pilot infiltrated the band of smugglers, agreeing to pick up cocaine in Colombia and fly it to Miami for further distribution, according to an affidavit filed in U.S. District Court.

Four Colombian men and a Cuban woman have been arrested and four more people are being sought, Assistant U.S. Attorney Richard Gregorie said Thursday. Cocaine with a street value of $70 million also was seized, the DEA said.

DEA Agent Peter Sarron, in his affidavit, said he penetrated the ring and agreed to fly to Colombia to pick up 200 kilograms — 440 pounds — of cocaine.

One of those arrested, Fernando Alvarran Velez, 37, "said he had a large distribution network in Los Angeles and he wanted to know if the agents could transport part of the next load to the Los Angeles area," Sarron said in his affidavit.

"Alvarran said that because of the Olympics, it became necessary for him to deliver large amounts to that area."

At a March 9 meeting in Miami, Alvarran produced a map of Colombia and pointed to an area where some 200 pounds of cocaine would be waiting on a remote runway, according to Sarron's statement.

With the cooperation of Colombian police, Sarron said, he and a fellow agent flew to Colombia, picked up about 627 pounds of cocaine and returned it to Miami.

Sarron said Alvarran suggested that because of a Colombian crackdown on narcotics, Sarron should take as much cocaine as possible out of the country.

The arrests were made Wednesday, shortly after Sarron and the informant returned to Miami with the cocaine.

The five are charged with conspiracy to violate narcotics laws, importation of cocaine and possession with intent to distribute cocaine. They were being held pending bond hearings.

OAS director on two payrolls

WASHINGTON (AP) — Three months before he was scheduled to step down as secretary general of the Organization of American States, Alejandro Orfila joined a public relations and lobbying firm and has begun receiving $25,000 in salary, The Washington Post reported in Friday editions.

The newspaper said Orfila, whose term as OAS secretary general ends on Saturday, confirmed in an interview that he began receiving payments from his new employer, Gray and Co. At the same time, Orfila collected his monthly salary of $7,328 from the OAS.

Orfila received an annual salary of $87,937 from the OAS, a 31-nation organization trying to promote peace and prosperity in the Western Hemisphere. Orfila's new job at Gray and Co. pays $300,000, the Post reported.

Jaime Ospina, an OAS spokesman, said Thursday night he had no information on the Post story and could not comment on it.

Orfila, a former Argentine ambassador who has been secretary general for nine years, said his employment at Gray was not improper because he became a "lame duck secretary general" after he announced his resignation last November and agreed to stay on past Dec. 31, 1983.

He will be succeeded as OAS chief by Joao Baena Soares, a Brazilian diplomat.

OAS rules and regulations states "the secretary general and the assistant secretary general must refrain from using or appearing to use their office for the purpose of private gain for themselves or other persons."

Panel considers fate of politician

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — Judges in the impeachment trial of Nebraska Attorney General Paul L. Douglas must decide whether the case is a "political matter" or whether his dealings with a failed savings company compromised his office.

Four days of testimony ended Thursday, but it will be some time before the seven state judges making up the Court of Impeachment reach a decision, said Chief Justice pro tem Leslie Boslaugh.

Douglas, 56, is the first Nebraska public official to face such a trial in 91 years, and he would be removed from office and disqualified from ever holding a public post again if the panel votes against him by a 5-2 or greater margin.

The case against the three-term Republican centers on his dealings with Commonwealth Savings Co., which was declared insolvent Nov. 1.

In the articles of impeachment adopted by the Legislature on March 14, Douglas was accused of failing to investigate possible criminal activity at Commonwealth, an industrial loan and investment company. Other charges involved his personal business dealings ith Commonwealth and former Commonwealth officer Marvin Copple.

Prosecutor Richard Kopf argued Thursday that the evidence showed "to a moral certainty" that Douglas was guilty of one or more of the six specific offenses cited in the articles of impeachment.

But Douglas' attorney, William Morrow Jr., contended the impeachment "was returned as a political matter based on inference, innuendo and insinuation." He said the evidence failed to show Douglas had broken the law or breached his official duties.

The panel, which must review thousands of pages of records before reaching a decision, is still considering a renewed motion from Morrow to dismiss the proceedings and acquit Douglas.

Speaker of the Legislature William Nichol said he hoped the court's ultimate decision would be accepted as "the right decision, even though it might not agree with everyone's invdividual views."

"It should be said that the process has worked in an orderly fashion and the case has gone to the highest court in the state," Nichol said.

'Rhetoric' of candidates draws concern

WASHINGTON (AP) — Gerald Ford, Jimmy Carter and six ex-secretaries of state, concerned a candidate might say something about the Mideast he couldn't take back if elected, are appealing to the presidential candidates to avoid "excesses of rhetoric" about U.S. foreign policy.

The risk in the nuclear age can be great, says the statement drafted by Douglass Cater, a former White House adviser, and signed by the former presidents and secretaries of state.

Cater, president of Washington College on Maryland's Eastern Shore, says he first became alarmed 24 years ago when John F. Kennedy and Richard M. Nixon debated whether the United States should defend Quemoy and Matsu if China attacked the off-shore islands held by the Nationalists.

"There has been at least one instance in every campaign since that caused me concern," he said Thursday in an interview.

Cater said his concern was raised this year by what the candidates were saying about the Middle East.

He solicited the support of former Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger when he attended a conference last week at the Lyndon B. Johnson School of Public Affairs at the University of Texas and then circulated the statement.

Former presidents Ford and Carter signed. So did Dean Rusk, William P. Rogers, Cyrus R. Vance, Edmund S. Muskie and Alexander M. Haig Jr. That meant Cater had the endorsement of every ex-secretary of state who served since 1961.

No one turned him down. As it turned out, they all agreed that U.S. foreign policy should be shielded from campaign excesses.

Cater had experience in Washington as an editor of Reporter magazine and then as a special assistant to President Johnson on health and education. He has headed Washington College in Chestertown, Md., for almost two years.

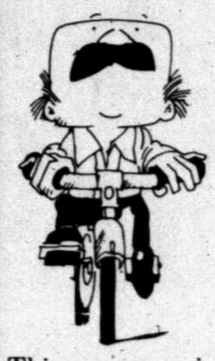

One of the things on Cater's mind is that a candidate might say something in the heat of the campaign that could become binding on U.S. foreign policy if he won the presidency.

And, in the meantime, Cater said, "friends and foes of the United States can be made nervous while the campaign is going on."

If a candidate has done "a lot of soul-searching" and has decided to take a precise stand, even on a sensitive foreign policy issue, that's all right with Cater.

"Nobody can close off that right," he said.

Mechanic facing trial

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — A West German auto mechanic who will stand trial in May on charges of trying to buy classified U.S. military secrets for East Germany could face life imprisonment if convicted.

Ernst Ludwig Forbrich, 43, was ordered held without bond Thursday after pleading innocent to espionage charges for allegedly trying to buy a classsified document from MacDill Air Force base.

Federal agents say they arrested Forbrich at a motel after he made a down payment for the document, which the FBI said could "cause serious damage to the national defense." An unidentified 39-year-old American, a civilian employee of the base, has also been arrested in the case, authorities said.

Request considered

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The district attorney's office was considering a resubmitted request from the Sheriff's Department that the son of a Watts grocer be charged with murder in a shooting death that sparked gang attacks on the family's store.

The district attorney had previously declined to file charges against James Hawkine Jr., 40, saying it couldn't determine who was carrying the shotgun that killed Anttwon "Tony" Thomas, 19, during a struggle in the store last September.

Members of the Hawkins family said Hawkins wrestled the weapon away from Thomas, but Sheriff's Lt. Tony Toomey said Wednesday a witness testified during pretrial hearings for 13 alleged gang members that he saw the younger Hawkins with the weapon just before the shooting.

Plants represent hi-tech

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — Two new General Motors Corp. plants for a new generation of full-size luxury cars represent "the brave new world of vast technological advances," GM officials say.

Unveiled Thursday, the high-tech plants in Orion Township outside Pontiac and in Wentzville, Mo., near St. Louis, cost a combined $1 billion. The Orion plant employs 157 robots that will produce full-size Cadillac deVille and Oldsmobile 98 cars, while the Wentzville facility will turn out the Olds 98 and Buick Electra.

FAA orders review

MIAMI (AP) — The Federal Aviation Administration has ordered a review of its security program because it wants to know whether "security measures have been breached" in the wake of two hijackings to Cuba this week, an official says.

FAA spokesman Jack Barker said Thursday that there was no apparent security lapse when a man demanding $5 million hijacked a Piedmont Aviation jet to Havana on Tuesday, but the circumstances surrounding Wednesday's hijacking of a Delta Air Lines jet to the communist island are still being reviewed.

An official for New Orleans International Airport, where the Delta jet originated, said the liquid the hijacker threatened to light was apparently an alcoholic drink.

FDA probes tampering

NEW YORK (AP) — The Food and Drug Administration says it has found no manufacturing problems in the production of Girl Scout cookies, and that "me too" tampering may be the source of foreign objects found in the sweets.

Frances Hesselbein, Girl Scouts national director, said Thursday that her group was conducting its own investigation and that she agreed with the FDA's findings.

In a statement, the FDA said Thursday that the presence of pins and other objects in the cookies "appears to have no pattern ... and many may be 'me too' tamperings" prompted by previous tampering reports.

Jews warn candidates

NEW YORK (AP) — Officials of the American Jewish Committee have warned the Democratic presidential contenders that a pro-Israel posture will not automatically win them the support of Jews because other issues matter as well.

"There is no doubt that Israel is a terribly important item of concern to most American Jews," said Howard I. Friedman, president of the committee, at a news conference. But he said other domestic and foreign issues are important.

"They want to hear about these things from candidates. They don't want to be patronized by just being talked to about Israel," said Friedman.

Former Vice President Walter Mondale and Sen. Gary Hart have each claimed to be the greater friend of Israel.

Supreme Court last hope for 'Candy Man'

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — A lawyer for Ronald Clark O'Bryan, dubbed "the Candy Man" for murdering his young son with cyanide-laced Halloween treats, looked to the U.S. Supreme Court today as the last hope for blocking O'Bryan's execution, set for Saturday.

In seeking a fourth reprieve, attorney Stefan Presser said Thursday that he would argue in an appeal to Justice Byron White that death by injection is cruel and unusual punishment.

"I would think if we don't have a stay in hand" from White, attorneys will be unable to halt the execution, said Presser, of the American Civil Liberties Union.

O'Bryan, a 39-year-old former optician from the Houston suburb of Deer Park, has vigorously denied killing his 8-year-old son, Timothy, on Oct. 31, 1974. He claims authorities used him as a scapegoat because they could not solve the highly publicized murder.

Other requests for reprieves for O'Bryan were rejected Thursday by a federal judge in Houston and the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans.

The Supreme Court earlier this week turned down a request for a new trial for O'Bryan, who has won three previous stays of execution.

Prosecutors allege that he put cyanide into five 22-inch plastic tubes filled with powdered confection. Two of the tubes went to O'Bryan's son and 5-year-old daughter, Elizabeth, and three other children were given the remaining candy, but only Timothy ate it.

O'Bryan was accused of plotting the death of his son and daughter to collect $62,000 in life insurance and handing out the extra poisoned candy to cover his tracks.

Also on Thursday, an Austin accountant and an 18-year-old college student who will witness the execution delivered a hand-written plea for mercy from O'Bryan to Gov. Mark White.

The governor has said he is "not inclined" to grant a 30-day extension of O'Bryan's sentence, as he is empowered to do by law.

The governor said the public would have little confidence in a system that allowed almost nine years to elapse before a sentence was carried out.

Witnesses will watch O'Bryan's execution

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — Before Ronald Clark O'Bryan invited 18-year-old Kim Manganaro to watch him die, he did the polite thing: He asked her mother if it was all right.

"I'm old enough to decide for myself," said Miss Manganaro, "but he asked my mother anyway. That's like Ron — very polite."

Miss Manganaro, a Texas A&M University freshman, is one of five personal witness selected by O'Bryan to witness his execution by poisonous injection in the Texas death house before dawn Saturday.

O'Bryan, 39, was convicted of the 1974 Halloween poisoning murder of his son, Timothy. The boy was 8 years old when he died and would be about the same age as Miss Manganaro if he had lived.

Miss Manganaro became friends with O'Bryan after they started exchanging letters last October and she has visited him on death row since then.

She saw him there on Wednesday and then went to Austin on Thursday to deliver a hand-written plea from O'Bryan to the office of Gov. Mark White.

Today, she is to carry the plea to the Board of Pardons and Paroles. She is scheduled, also, to visit O'Bryan at a holding cell a few paces from the death chamber.

Miss Manganaro said in an interview that her interest in O'Bryan is not romantic, but friendship.

"It's concern for another human being. No romance," she said. "You can love a person a lot of different ways. The love between us is as a friend."

Miss Manganaro is a journalism student at Texas A&M. Last October, after another Texas inmate was executed, she wrote a letter to a Houston newspaper in which she expressed opposition to the death penalty.

O'Bryan sent her a letter and a correspondence began. She found the condemned man to be sensitive, caring and "the type of friend everybody would like to have."

Neighborhood remembers Halloween

PASADENA (AP) — The effects of a Halloween horror tale on this Houston suburb are likely to last long after the execution of Ronald Clark O'Bryan, the man convicted of killing his son with poisoned trick-or-treat candy.

O'Bryan admitted handing out five tubes of a powdered confection called Pixy Stix on a rainy Halloween night almost 10 years ago. Examination of the candy later showed that each tube contained enough cyanide to kill several people.

Only Timothy Marc O'Bryan, the 8-year-old son of Ronald Clark O'Bryan, sampled the candy. The youngster died in great pain within hours.

Four other children, including O'Bryan's 5-year-old daughter, Elizabeth, also received the candy. But they did not taste it.

Now, those children are young adults, living with memories of a bizarre night that changed their lives forever.

Changed, too, are the lives of the adults who best remember the suspicion and anguish that turned neighbor against neighbor and, later, helped turn strangers into friends.

O'Bryan, after his son was dead, told police that he received five Pixy Stix from a man at a house in Pasadena. He said he got the candy while he and his two children, along with Jimmy Bates and Bates' son, Mark, 8, were trick-or-treating. O'Bryan said he held the candy and distributed it, at Bates' house, to his children, to Mark Bates and to Kimberly Bates, 11, Mark's sister.

The Bates' doorbell rang and a group of children trick-or-treated at the door. O'Bryan gave the candy to Whitney Parker, a 10-year-old who knew O'Bryan as a church leader.

Prosecutors later said O'Bryan handed out five candies to cover his true intent — to murder his two children for $62,000 in insurance. O'Bryan claimed he was innocent.

Parker, now a 20-year-old college student, still is chilled at the memory of that Halloween.

He recalled he returned home with the candy and got ready for bed. In his pajamas, he decided to eat the Pixy Stix, the prize of his Halloween candy collection. Parker said he was unable to open the stapled plastic tube and started down stairs to get a knife.

Parker's stepfather, Charles Hudgins, stopped him.

"He told me it was bedtime and to put the candy up and that I could eat it tomorrow," remembers Parker. He put the candy away and went to sleep.

At 2 a.m., the phone rang. Neighbors had been alerted by a police friend that a child had died of poison received in candy collected nearby. Hudgins took his son's candy and later gave it to the police. A lab test showed the Pixy Stix contained enough cyanide to kill several people.

Parker was saved because he couldn't open the tube.

That same evening, a mother's caution saved the life of Mark Bates.

He also prized the Pixy Stix and wanted to eat it before bedtime. But his mother told him it was "outdoor candy" and to save it for the next day. That tube, along with one given Kimberly Bates, also contained cyanide.

White unlikely to grant stay of execution

HOUSTON (AP) — Gov. Mark White says he would find it difficult to grant a stay of execution for Ronald Clark O'Bryan, the condemned child killer known as the "Candy Man."

White, who was in Houston to attend a conference on education, said the public would lose confidence in a system that allowed 10 years to elapse before a court's sentence resulted in punishment. The governor is empowered to grant a 30-day stay of execution.

"People are entitled to see the judgment of the courts carried out," White said Thursday.

O'Bryan is scheduled to die before dawn Saturday for the 1974 killing of his 8-year-old son, Timothy. The boy was poisoned with Halloween candy. O'Bryan was convicted in 1975 and sentenced to die.

Youngsters bring candor to television

NEW YORK (AP) — Alan Greenspan, an economic adviser to Republican Presidents Ford and Reagan, has shown he can bob and weave with the best of them when questioned by professional journalists on "Meet the Press" or "Face the Nation."

Surely, Alan Greenspan can evade a panel of high school questioners with equal aplomb.

Well, maybe not.

A panel of youngsters from New York-area high schools will be seen interviewing Greenspan Thursday afternoon on public television's "Why in the World" series, and the hunch here is that PBS is onto something big. Let's call it "out-of-the-mouths-of-babes journalism."

Whatever it is, children and adults alike will find it more informative than most of the grave, polite news panel shows that rarely offer true insights into America's decision makers.

One way to make that point would be to compare the Greenspan interview on "Why in the World," taped in January, with his last appearance on NBC's "Meet the Press" in July.

One thing the comparison shows is that policymakers may be more likely to relax their guard with high school students and answer questions more directly.

Greenspan was asked on both programs to state whether he favors a tax increase.

He gave this roundabout answer on "Meet the Press:" "It is by no means obvious — in fact, I would suspect the evidence suggests the contrary — that a tax increase wholly by itself would end up financing higher expenditures rather than a lower deficit. So (how) I would think most people who have been looking at the subject would come out, as it were, with a recommendation, is to somehow tie any tax increase to expenditure restraint to insure that if you do raise taxes you get the deficit down."

Was that a 'yes,' or a 'no?' Tune in for this answer to the same question on "Why In The World:"

"I think clearly a midcourse correction is required. And a tax increase should be part of that."

Comparing the two programs also demonstrates that youngsters sometimes ask more interesting questions than reporters.

"Meet the Press" panelists asked several questions about the federal deficit. The questions were standard stuff which invited programmed responses from Greenspan — questions like, is it possible that huge federal deficits will mean higher interest rates, high enough to choke off the recovery in the housing and auto industries?

But high school questioner Alan Dickar got a lot further by challenging Greenspan to explain Reagan's failure to balance the budget by 1984.

Mastering technique is all well and good. Every once in a while, however, a hand comes along where no amount of technique will help. What you need then is an ounce of deception—the ability to create an illusion.

We would overcall one spade with the West hand, even at this vulnerability. We are not sure what effect that would have had on the final contract. And North might have been wiser to pass rather than bid with his sub-minimum hand. Certainly, he should have corrected to four hearts—his hand could be worthless to partner at a no trump contract.

Against three no trump West led the king of spades, and declarer won the ace. He realized that, if he cashed both the ace and king of hearts, the defenders would never permit him to get to dummy with the jack of spades. And if he couldn't enjoy the hearts, he wasn't going to make his contract.

South decided that his best chance was to create a false picture of his hand. So at trick two he cashed the ace of hearts and then exited with a spade. What he was trying to accomplish was to make the defenders think that he held a blank ace of hearts.

West certainly believed that. For reasons best known to himself, he won the queen of spades and could see no reason not to establish his suit. He continued with a third spade, and the world came to end.

When the table's jack of spades won the trick, declarer jettisoned the king of hearts from his hand. He was still in dummy to cash four more heart tricks, which brought his total to nine—two spades, five hearts and the two minor aces.

You can argue that West shouldn't have been taken in by declarer's ruse, and he should certainly be rapped over the knuckles for winning the second spade. But who are we to quarrel with success.

Getting caught

Engraved over the entrance of the Internal Revenue Service's Washington, D.C. headquarters are the words, "Taxes are what we pay for civilized society."

More than a few Americans apparently disagree with that statement, made famous by Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes. Evidence of that fact is verified by the increasing number of Americans who simply refuse to pay their income taxes.

In fact a recent edition of Fortune magazine noted that "by the IRS's reckoning, more and more Americans simply aren't paying or pay less than they owe. Underreporting of income, overstatement of deductions, and failure to file any return at all cost the Treasury an estimated $100 billion in 1983, up from roughly $30 billion in 1973."

Uncle Sam is fighting back. Armed with improved data-processing equipment and some tough new legal weaponry, the IRS is pouring more money and manpower into collecting the billions of dollars owed the government in back taxes and penalties, and the service says that in the future those who fail to report interest earned and so forth on their tax returns — or fail to file at all — will face even greater risk of getting caught.

That's the way it should be. If the nation is going to collect income taxes it should do so in as fair and equitable a manner as possible. Those who attempt to dodge their responsibility to society should face equal risk of being apprehended and appropriately punished.

Otherwise any number of individuals can argue that the system is unfair and make an effective point. But just because one doesn't agree with the tax laws the nation operates under is not legal justification to refuse to pay. If one opposes laws, that person should work within the system to change the laws — not break them.

After all, Justice Holmes' statement says it all. Taxes are what we pay for a civilized society. Those who aren't paying are living outside society.

Capture of a terrorist

The Dublin government has handed over to Northern Ireland authorities Dominic "Mad Dog" McGlinchey, the leader of the outlawed Irish National Liberation Army.

It was the first time that Ireland had sent a terrorist fugitive to face trial in Ulster since the island was partitioned between the independent south and the British-ruled north in 1921.

McGlinchey is wanted for killing a 63-year-old grandmother in County Antrim in March 1977. She died when terrorists tried to kill her son, a police reservist.

Mad Dog boasted to an Irish journalist last year that he had killed at least 30 people since 1972 in Northern Ireland. He said he has taken part in more than 200 bombings and shootings.

The Irish republic's special anti-terrorist task force surrounded an isolated cottage near Shannon airport on Ireland's west coast. One policeman was wounded before McGlinchey was captured. The High Court in Dublin then approved of McGlinchey's extradition to Northern Ireland.

This act greatly strengthens the position of the Irish government in negotiations aimed at reunifying the island. It proves the sincerity with which Dublin rejects terrorism in the north.

It would be healthy and hopeful if those few Americans who are romantic about the northern rebels came to feel the same repugnance for the tactics of blood.

Learning experience

Last week, men's and women's basketball teams of Western Texas College were privileged to compete in the Region V basketball tournaments held at Midland College's Chaparral Center.

I want to take this opportunity to acknowledge how splendidly this tournament was conducted, knowing that much, much work and expertise are involved in an undertaking of this nature. In short, quality tournaments such as this don't "just happen."

Much of the credit goes, of course, to the venerable athletic director of Midland College, Delnor Poss, and Mike Stevens, director of the Chaparral Center, as well as members of the Midland Sports Association and Boosters. I know that Midland College President Dr. Jess Parrish is proud of the work of Mr. Poss and Mr. Stevens and their staff, of the Sports Association which hosted the event, and of the fine fans of Midland who provide such fine support.

Next year, Western Texas College will have the opportunity to host these tournaments. We will lean heavily on Mr. Poss, and others of Midland to "go to school" on their experiences. In so doing, we have a chance of doing a good job, too.

Home prices irk would-be buyer

I am a disgusted former would-be home buyer who is certainly galled by the greed of many of the sellers of houses in Midland. A home was advertised in the 50's. The owner said he bought it in the 50's, but get this, it was bought for $34,000! And that was in 1980. Have houses that were built in 1948 appreciated 36% since 1980?

This particular owner acted as if his interest rate was higher than the current one, when the county clerk's office deed records show that his interest rate is in fact 9%, and the beat goes on...

To what extent does the truth in advertising law apply to homes? I would like to keep Ralph Nader out of this, but we do definitely need some buyers with the utmost of discretion to push down the artificial level of prices of most houses in the fair city of Midland.

Pentagon seeking — informants!

WASHINGTON — My past reports on the theft of property from military bases has spurred Pentagon officials into action. They are searching relentlessly not for the thieves but for my informants.

Jack Anderson

An estimated $10 million in precious metals alone disappear each year from under military noses. Other valuables — everything from armaments to office supplies — are stolen by the crate. Yet officials seem more concerned about covering up the scandal than halting the depredations.

For example, 175 M16 automatic rifles have disappeared from Fort Belvoir, Va., outside Washington. This would be a valuable haul for any terrorist group.

At first, officials claimed the missing weapons were less sophisticated, Vietnam-era M14s. Then they suggested that the "supposed" loss was due merely to the transposition of several serial numbers. A spokesman said the Defense Logistics Agency was satisfied that all the rifles had been accounted for.

After this assurance, the officials then proceeded to chastise Belvoir property office administrators — not for mishandling the weapons but for leaking information about the loss. All outgoing telephone calls from the office were monitored in an attempt to unmask my sources.

The official line now is that there are "no shortages." But informants inside and outside Fort Belvoir told my reporter William Bartman that investigators for the Defense Logistics Agency have been working overtime trying in vain to figure out what happened to the 175 missing rifles.

Here are some other thefts that have been reported to me by conscientious citizens:

— At Fort Belvoir — a vertiable thieves' market for military hardware — my sources estimate that from $30,000 to $40,000 worth of property disappear each month. The losses are quietly covered up by the Defense Logistics Agency.

— At the Norfolk, Va., Naval Air Station, several million dollars worth of byrellium, a precious metal alloy used in fighter plane brake shoes, disappeared during a three-month period last year. Some of the valuable stuff (it sells for about $120 a pound) reportedly vanished from aircraft carriers. The Navy confirmed that an investigation of "suspected theft of byrellium" is under way.

— After denying my earlier report on the disappearance of $750,000 worth of precious metals at the Colts Neck, N.J., recycling center, the Defense Logistics Agency installed television monitors at key locations to watch for thefts — that it had insisted weren't occurring.

Administrators of the precious metals recovery program, meanwhile, have withheld from Congress documents that would show how huge the losses are. One document reveals that participating agencies turn in an average of only about 17 percent of the precious metals expected of them — an indication of either widespread theft or incredible waste.

Footnote: Two Army investigators recently turned up at the Philadelphia Navy Yard to investigate wholesale thefts that officials denied were occurring. They left their unmarked van unattended. It was promptly stolen.

HALL OF HEROES: When Thomas Taylor, a Washington, D.C., fireman, burst into a burning home earlier this year, he didn't know what to expect. What he found was three children — ages 3, 5 and 7 — who had been overcome by smoke.

There was no time to wait for the rescue squad. So Taylor and a couple of his partners began administering mouth-to-mouth resuscitation as they carried the children out of the blazing home. The three children survived, thanks to the firemen's quick thinking.

Taylor, a veteran firefighter, considered his act all in the day's work. "That's what we get paid to do," he said.

DEALING WITH TORTURE: Amnesty International, the London-based human rights organization, is issuing a report next week on the incidence of torture by various governments since 1980. The group will put forth a 12-point plan to eliminate this barbaric practice. The proposals include legal prohibition, outlawing of evidence acquired by torture and compensation for victims.

"Any government that wishes to stop torture has the means to do so," the report points out. "It is a question of political will."

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Friday, March 30, the 90th day of 1984. There are 276 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On March 30, 1981, John Hinckley Jr. shot and wounded President Reagan, news secretary James Brady, a secret service agent and a police officer outside the Washington Hilton Hotel.

On this date:

In 1852, Dr. Albert Sonnenberg and Philip Rechten of Bremen, Germany patented an electric whale killing machine.

In 1858, Hyman Lipman of Philadelphia patented a pencil with an attached eraser.

In 1867, Secretary of State William Seward signed a treaty with the Russian minister to purchase Alaska for $7.2 million.

In 1909, the Queensboro Bridge opened, linking the New York City boroughs of Manhattan and Queens.

In 1951, Ethel and Julius Rosenberg were convicted of conspiring to commit espionage for the Soviet Union.

And in 1964, John Glenn withdrew from the Ohio Senate race because of injuries suffered in a bathroom fall.

Ten years ago: Secretary of State Henry Kissinger married Nancy Maginnes in Arlington, Va.

Five years ago: Gov. Richard Thornburgh advised children and pregnant women to stay at least five miles away from the crippled Three Mile Island nuclear power plant as radioactivity continued to leak at the Pennsylvania facility.

One year ago: President Reagan said he'd cut back on the planned deployment of new U.S. medium-range missiles in western Europe if the Soviets would reduce theirs in Europe and Asia.

Today's Birthdays: Singer Frankie Laine is 71 years old. Actor John Astin is 54. Actor Warren Beatty is 46. And singer-songwriter Eric Clapton is 39.

Thought for Today: "No man can be good, or great, or happy, except through inward efforts of his own." — Frederick William Robertson, English clergyman (1816-1853).

Another View:

Caught in the middle

President Reagan so far has failed in his quest to bring peace to the Middle East, but it certainly isn't for lack of trying. In fact, a case could be made that the president's policies have failed because their reach exceeded the grasp of Arab leaders. The failure should be blamed on them, not on the American president.

Jordan's King Hussein refuses to guarantee that American-made weapons President Reagan offered to sell him would not be used against Israel, and then angrily accuses Mr. Reagan with caving in to Israeli pressure by not selling him the weapons.

Saudi Arabia charges the Reagan administration with an unwillingness to use its military and economic muscle to force concessions from Israel, even though the Saudis have exasperated even Arabists in the State Department with their inability to influence the Syrians and PLO extremists they bankroll.

Hussein's charges, the most recent and most publicized example of President Reagan's "failure," are the most groundless. Hussein wants all sorts of American military and economic support to help him keep Arafat, Assad and Khomeini away from his shaky throne. Yet Hussein continues to contend "there is no way by which anyone should imagine it would be possible for Arabs to sit down and talk with Israel."

Hussein has not only been invited to participate in peace talks to solve the Palestinian problem, he has been begged — by two American administrations. Yet he has never quite mustered the courage to do so.

Ronald Reagan, on the other hand,, has the courage to use every bit of political muscle he has to break the Middle East deadlock. He allowed his diplomatic representatives to meet with the PLO. He offered military aid to Saudi Arabia and to Jordan. He accepted the bloody role of referee in Lebanon far longer than he should have in hopes that reason would prevail among fanatics.

In reality, Ronald Reagan is like a referee waiting in the ring for two hesitant boxers to leave the security of their dressing rooms. While the boxers battle each other in their sheltered havens, the referee is left alone in the ring to endure the wrath of a crowd that expected to see more action for its money.

Reagan wants China trade act

WASHINGTON — The White House, fresh from a bitter victory over liberal Commerce Department traders, now aims at a double-header trade win by defeating Senate conservatives on a completely different issue: an attempt to crimp high-tech trade with communist China on the eve of President Reagan's Peking trip.

Rowland Evans

On China trade, the president should overcome Republican conservatives in the Senate who are usually his allies. But victory there would lack the high drama of his recent decision against Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige, who wanted Assistant Secretary of Defense Richard Perle fired or muzzled as the Pentagon's sentinel on trade with communist states.

Robert Novak

Resolution last week of the long battle between the business-dominated, trade-oriented Commerce Department and the security-minded Pentagon signaled a key move by national security adviser Robert McFarlane into the administration's trade-policy swamp. It was McFarlane who was primarily responsible for persuading President Reagan to give Perle and his boss, Secretary of Defense Caspar Weinberger, their victory over Baldrige.

McFarlane's new target is to terminate any threat to Reagan's election-year trip to China. His move could mark a belated end to chaos in the administration's high level trade policy.

Simmering warfare between commerce-hungry Baldrige, facing record trade deficits, and Perle, Weinberger's top guardian against high-tech handouts to the Soviet bloc, peaked in December. That was when an espionage coup by the Soviets was averted at the last minute: West Germany intercepted a high-powered U.S. computer system bound for Moscow.

Weinberger was immediately asked if the Pentagon had examined the computer export license "before issuing it." He said no, that was up to the Commerce Department. But he went on to say that the Pentagon must have power in the future to deny such licenses for high technology that might be illegally routed to the Soviet bloc.

That was challenge enough, but what really infuriated Baldrige and his trade officials was a background briefing given the press by a supposedly anonymous high Pentagon official the next day. The official blamed the Commerce Department for making "a very serious mistake" and for being "careless" in having approved the computer license.

The anonymous official was Perle. When Baldrige found out, he went to Weinberger and asked that Perle either be fired or relieved of his duties as the Pentagon's high-tech watchdog. Naturally, Weinberger refused. Although no word of that Baldrige-Weinberger spat has leaked until now, the climax of their struggle came late last week with McFarlane's ruling.

For the first time, the Pentagon now has a White-House-imposed equal say with Commerce over individual export licenses for high-tech equipment bought here by non-communist countries for possible transshipment to communist-bloc states.

As for Reagan's China trip, McFarlane's effort to clear away the land mines pits him against tougher opponents. The anti-China trade amendment to the Export Administration Act was written by Sen. Jesse Helms, the conservative leader. In effect, it applies high-tech trade restrictions to Peking similar to those in effect against the Soviet bloc. It contradicts the "differentiation" policy espoused by Reagan after much ideological tension, a policy that treats communist China differently from the Soviet Union.

Although Senate liberals seldom agree with Helms, his amendment includes a provision designed to compel China to sign the Nuclear Non-proliferation Treaty, a litmus-test treaty for most liberals. That strengthens it. The Senate-passed bill is about to go to conference with a much different House version on regulating all U.S. trade.

The president and his advisers want final passage of the Export Administration Act before the start of Reagan's April 23 trip to China, confident that Congress will spare him the embarrassment of taking the Helms amendment with him. If McFarlane, fresh from imposing his will on the Commerce Department, can do the same with powerful Jesse Helms and his Senate allies, three years of trade chaos might end.

Dallas-bound flight hijacked to Cuba

GRAPEVINE (AP) — Betty Allen changed plans and boarded Delta Air Lines Flight 357 from New Orleans to Dallas-Fort Worth because it was scheduled to arrive sooner than her previously scheduled flight. She said she'd never try that again.

The 90-minute flight actually took Mrs. Allen and other passengers on Flight 357 more than 11 hours. The plane was hijacked to Cuba by a man brandishing a bottle of liquid he said was gasoline and a cigarette lighter.

The man, identified as Severo Acosta, about 35, was arrested early Thursday by Cuban authorities and the passengers returned safely to the United States, authorities said. It was the second air piracy in two days and the 13th hijacking of a U.S. airliner to Cuba in 10 months.

"We got on that plane to save time," Mrs. Allen said. "We'll probably never do that again."

Most passengers, weary from their long ordeal, arrived at the Dallas-Fort Worth Regional Airport Thursday morning. Many sported "I Love Cuba" gimme caps and credited flight attendants and a sparse passenger load with keeping a tense situation under control.

Bo Catalan of Dallas waited several hours at the airport here Wednesday night for the arrival of her boyfriend, Tom Schrader, on Flight 357.

"At about 11:30 the screen said 'Cancelled.' I asked the ticket agent and he said it had been hijacked and would be here in the morning," Ms. Catalan said. "It didn't sink in until later. I heard a news story about it on the radio driving home from the airport and I just burst into tears."

The plane, which left New Orleans with 19 passengers and a crew of seven, was commandeered Wednesday night over Louisiana and landed in Havana around 11:36 p.m. CST, Federal Aviation Administration officials said.

"I thought we were probably not in great danger. But there's always that one chance in 100 he might go completely off his bean and set the plane on fire," said Schrader Thursday morning.

He was wearing an "I Love Cuba" baseball cap and holding a box of Cuban cigars he bought in Havana airport's duty-free shop during the stopover. Many of the passengers said they bought souvenirs while on the ground at Jose Marti International Airport.

The 25 people landed at Miami International Airport at 1:55 a.m. CST Thursday, said Jim Ewing, a Delta spokesman in Atlanta. All of the passengers continued to Atlanta on another flight, but a few made alternate connections there, Delta officials here said.

Schrader said shortly after takeoff from New Orleans he went toward the rear restroom, but stopped when the hijacker began waving his arms wildly and telling him to stay away.

Dallas businessman James Johnson said the hijacker kept one flight attendant next to him on a jumpseat in the rear of the plane.

"He just sat in the back of the plane. He said he had gasoline and if they tried anything he'd kill the stewardess," Johnson said. "It was kind of tense. You really can't gamble (to overpower the hijacker) because these people are nuts."

Justices go to fund-raiser in Houston

AUSTIN (AP) — Five of the nine Texas Supreme Court justices flew to Houston last week — courtesy of a lawyer who has cases pending before the court — and attended a political fund-raiser for one of the justices, The Dallas Morning News reported today.

But Justice Bill Kilgarlin, who made the trip, said he and the others did not participate in the March 21 fund-raiser for Justice C.L. Ray.

"I wouldn't characterize it as a trip to Houston on behalf of C.L. Ray," Kilgarlin said. "I didn't go down (to Houston) for that purpose. I didn't even participate in the meeting."

The Texas Code of Judicial Conduct prohibits the use of a judge's prestige to help, or appear to help, the private interests of others or to raise funds for a political organization.

Ray, a Democrat, is running a heated primary race against Shelby Sharpe of Fort Worth.

The five justices — Ray, Kilgarlin, Robert (Maurice) Campbell, Ted Z. Robertson and Franklin Spears — flew to Houston the evening of March 21 aboard a prop-jet plane owned and piloted by Austin trial lawyer Tom Davis, Kilgarlin said.

Davis, who said he charged the Ray campaign $175 for the trip, has several cases pending before the Supreme Court.

Davis called the Houston event "unusual."

"I don't know if it has ever happened before," Davis said Thursday. "But in my (33) years of practicing law, I have never seen this kind of campaign because they (the justices) feel it is an attack on the court as a whole and they don't want to see this kind of campaign be successful."

Ray is the only Supreme Court incumbent who has an opponent this year.

Sharpe is running against Ray.

Former Supreme Court Chief Justice Robert W. Calvert, who is supporting Sharpe in the May 5 primary, said the Houston trip was "beneth the dignity of the judges."

The fund-raiser, which was held at the Century Club on the 71st floor of the Allied Bank Tower in downtown Houston, garnered $12,250 for the Ray campaign, The News reported.

Spears, who is unopposed for reelection, made the opening comments at the event, which was attended by 25 to 30 plaintiffs' lawyers, Davis said.

James W. Kronzer, a prominent trial and appellate lawyer, said Spears "made a pitch, I guess you would say, speaking for the five (justices), about the type and nature of the campaign that is being waged" by Sharpe.

Kilgarlin said none of the other justices heard Ray's talk, although they had been at the gathering earlier in the evening. Kilgarlin also said he "didn't hear anything about the campaign" and had flown to Houston primarily to attend a later dinner with a group of Houston trial lawyers.

Students won't be charged for counterfeiting

SAN ANGELO (AP) — Four high school students who admitted using a school printing press to produce counterfeit $20 bills will not face criminal charges, authorities said.

A county grand jury declined Thursday to press charges against the four and the matter will be left to school authorities and the students' parents to deal with, said District Attorney Dick Alcala.

The students, who attend Lake View and Central high schools, were ordered to spend 30 days at the school district's Student Adjustment Center, officials said. All four were old enough to have faced charges in adult court, Alcala said.

Lake View Principal Herschel Duckworth said the students will receive individual counseling during their stay at the adjustment center while attending regular academic classes.

The investigation began after a printing teacher at Lake View noticed an impression of a $20 bill in the printing blanket of a table top offset press used in his class, Duckworth said.

Changing city, changing time leaves New York system idle

NEW YORK (AP) — Every day, thousands of New Yorkers hurtle past underground time capsules — dusty, quiet places where the Dodgers are still from Brooklyn and Gary Cooper is the fresh-faced star of "Beau Geste."

Somewhere between Hoboken, N.J., and Penn Station lies 1954. Right below City Hall it's 1945.

They are abandoned stations in the New York subway system, left idle by the demands of a changing city and a changing time. Sealed from entry above ground and largely protected from change below, they are dark, hidden reminders of the city's past.

At least a half-dozen abandoned subway stations remain within the jurisdiction of the New York Transit Authority. One is in the system operated by the Port Authority Trans-Hudson Corp., otherwise known as PATH, which connects the city with northern New Jersey.

The Transit Authority's City Hall station is probably the finest of the lot. With its elegant tiled arches and antique brass chandeliers, it represents opulence long since faded from the city's better-used stations.

"The City Hall station is itself a time capsule," said Hugh Dunne, assistant to the Transit Authority's vice president for rapid transit.

"When you go there, you sort of hear the footsteps of the early riders," he said. "It's a landmark of the city, and so designated by the Landmarks Preservation Commission. But it's totally inaccessible to the public."

The City Hall station opened in 1904, one of the first stations in the New York subway system. It closed Dec. 31, 1945, because it was too short for the new, longer trains then coming into use. There was no sense in expanding the station, Dunne said, because the next one along the line, the Brooklyn Bridge station, was only 600 feet away.

In the case of PATH's abandoned 19th Street station, it was simply a matter of declining demand.

When the station opened in 1912 to whisk suburban commuters between Manhattan and Hoboken, it was located in the city's commercial hub. By the time the station was closed in 1954, the hub had spun elsewhere and 19th Street was off the track of most New Jersey-bound commuters.

The brass light fixtures are gone now, and there are signs that the station has been visited. Fingertips have scrawled graffiti into the thick gray dust covering the white tile walls.

"Debbie 11-83 3 a.m.," one inscription reads. "Big Mack, John 10-26-83," says another.

"I believe we've had occasions of juveniles walking down from other stations," said PATH operations examiner Lester Doll. "In fact, I was told it was a pledge for a fraternity: 'You go down to the old 19th Street station and write your name on the wall in dust.'"

He gazed around the desolate station, lit this day for a visitor but ordinarily dark and forbidding. "I can think of a lot better places to have a party," he said.

If anyone was planning a party in the 19th Street station, they wouldn't have to worry about wall decorations. Those are provided in ample supply by leftover billboards.

The tattered signs, their colors still sharp, could tell future archaeologists that "Three Coins in the Fountain" had played at the State Theater in Jersey City, that a young actress named Cloris Leachman had had a minor role in "King of Hearts" on Broadway, and that all rides on Tuesdays and Thursdays at the Palisades Amusement Park, which no longer exists, had cost 5 cents.

Elsewhere in the station, the now-extinct Herald-Tribune — "the modern newspaper" — boasted "the most complete baseball coverage: Giants, Yankees, Dodgers." The Daily News, which has survived, bragged that it was "on the spot when the news is hot."

Most of the posters have been torn by vandals, and that has yielded an unexpected bonus. As one ad has been peeled away, other, older signs have been exposed.

There's a poster for the movie "Beau Geste" with Gary Cooper — released in 1939. Another poster shows soldiers with flat, World War I-style helmets. "Keep the home front strong," the sign reads. "Give to the Greater New York Fund."

Convict borrows engineer's identity

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — David J. Sleeter was applying for a high-security job when authorities told him that, according to police records, he had served time in prison. That was news to Sleeter, who learned that a convict had adopted his identity.

The convict, who has identified himself as Willie Lewis Weathers Jr., began using Sleeter's identity — right down to his birthdate, Social Security number and driver's license number — and kept it up while serving a year in prison for voluntary manslaughter.

The district attorney's office is now trying to determine how and why Weathers managed to carry out the charade throughout his prison term.

Sleeter, an engineer with BDM Corp., is trying to clear his name from police records.

Sleeter himself declined comment because he and BDM attorneys are looking into the case.

Police said Weathers assumed Sleeter's identity sometime before his January 1982 arrest for manslaughter.

Authorities say Sleeter never lost his wallet or driver's license, but had lived at a married student housing complex at the University of New Mexico, as had Weathers.

Ex-astronaut still enjoys exciting life

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Former moonwalker James B. Irwin says he would suit up again if he could somehow wangle a spot on the next rocket headed out of Earth's atmosphere.

But, confessed the Pittsburgh-born, now-retired astronaut, he would see things quite differently from that Apollo 15 mission back in 1971 when he thought he was on the verge of being superhuman.

"I thought I was super-healthy, super-fit," Irwin, 53, said in an interview during a recent visit here. He now lives in Colorado Springs, Colo., with his wife, Mary, and their children, Joy, Jill, James, Jan and Joe.

The world watched on television, not seeing and not knowing that Irwin was having serious heart problems that even after landing were thought to be only the result of his time in space.

At Lowry Air Force Base, Irwin cut short a handball game and within 30 minutes was in intensive care.

A heart attack.

"I said to myself, 'How could that be?' I've been a pilot. I've been to the moon, I can do anything. People who have heart attacks are people who don't exercise, who are overweight, who smoke. I've always been a great physical specimen. I've been a health nut all my life."

The man who spent 295 hours and 11 minutes in space, nearly 20 of them outside a protective spacecraft, said he was "humbled" by his heart attack. He said he then knew how fragile the human body is. But recovery seemed remarkable until he had to be taken from a ski slope by helicopter as he suffered another attack. Bypass surgery followed.

"It looked like my mission, my life, was being cut short," said Irwin. "Yet, I didn't want to just exist. I wanted to live."

He said his life had already begun to take a serious turn when he gazed out into space, back at Earth, then ahead to the moon. It was spiritual in nature. It ultimately led to Irwin's founding an evangelical organization known as High Flight.

But the immediate problem was his deteriorating health.

At that point, Irwin discovered Nathan Pritikin's book on a diet that steered away from fats and animal protein. His New Year's resolution for 1977 was to follow the diet he had read about.

It worked.

"Instead of getting worse, I was getting better. I began jogging and in 1978 got to the point where I could climb Pike's Peak and then jog once I was at the top. That's something I could never do before, even when I was young."

He is also between 20 and 30 pounds lighter than he was when he was in the astronaut program.

Irwin is back on the ski slopes and ready to travel anywhere to talk about space and God, and travel he does. He is also firmly committed to his diet and his preaching-teaching.

"You either participate in life or leave it," he remarked. "I am participating."

His life now back in order, on a spiritual and physical balance, Irwin said he was looking for new frontiers. But there's one frontier he and only a handful of others have visited that he would now like to visit again — space.

"If they called me today, I'd go back into the space program tonight, tomorrow, whenever.

"I think I'd make an excellent choice for another moon shot. Wouldn't it be nice if NASA would invite me to go as a coronary patient to see what the effect would be?"

Coaches still have critics

Final Four

SEATTLE (AP) — Collectively, their teams have won 113 games this season. Collectively, they now have brought their basketball teams this far on 12 occasions.

But Joe B. Hall of Kentucky, Guy Lewis of Houston, Terry Holland of Virginia and, in his own way, John Thompson of Georgetown are castigated as coaches who somehow should be doing it better, or at least differently.

Out of their previous eight trips to the NCAA's Final Four, only once has one of these men come away with a championship — Hall in 1978.

Never mind that Bobby Knight of Indiana, acknowledged as one of the game's resident bench geniuses — and America's Olympic basketball coach — isn't here.

NEVER MIND that Ray Meyer of DePaul, who closed out a 42-year, 724-victory career this season, isn't here.

Never mind that Coach Dean Smith of top-ranked, top-seeded North Carolina isn't here.

Hall, Lewis, Holland and Thompson are here, where 49 other coaches who began the NCAA tournament three weeks ago aren't — but three of them will go home empty-handed once again. And they will be remembered, and criticized, for it.

Few fans will remember that Long Island University, Rider, Houston Baptist and a fistful of other teams played one game in this tournament, then packed up for good. But, just as most fans remember how the Philadelphia 76ers used to say "We owe you one" every time they were knocked out of the National Basketball Association playoffs; how the Brooklyn Dodgers used to "wait 'til next year" World Series after World Series; how the Minnesota Vikings reached the Super Bowl four times but "couldn't win the big one," three of these Final Four teams and their coaches will wear "loser" collars come next Monday night.

LEWIS, MAKING his third consecutive visit to the Final Four and his fifth overall without even one title to go with it, wore that collar last year after Phi Slama Jama went into a four-minute shell at the close of the championship game. His Houston Cougars were almost running North Carolina State into the boards when their offense was suddenly orchestrated into a crawl. In those final minutes, a 52-46 lead evaporated and the Wolfpack won 54-52.

Lewis also has been criticized as a coach who recruits exactly the kind of players to fit his system, then doesn't bother to teach it to them when the game is on the line.

HALL, WHOSE 'Cats lost the 1975 title game to a UCLA team saying farewell to its coach, John Wooden, likewise is considered by many to be an exceptional recruiter but less than awesome as a bench coach.

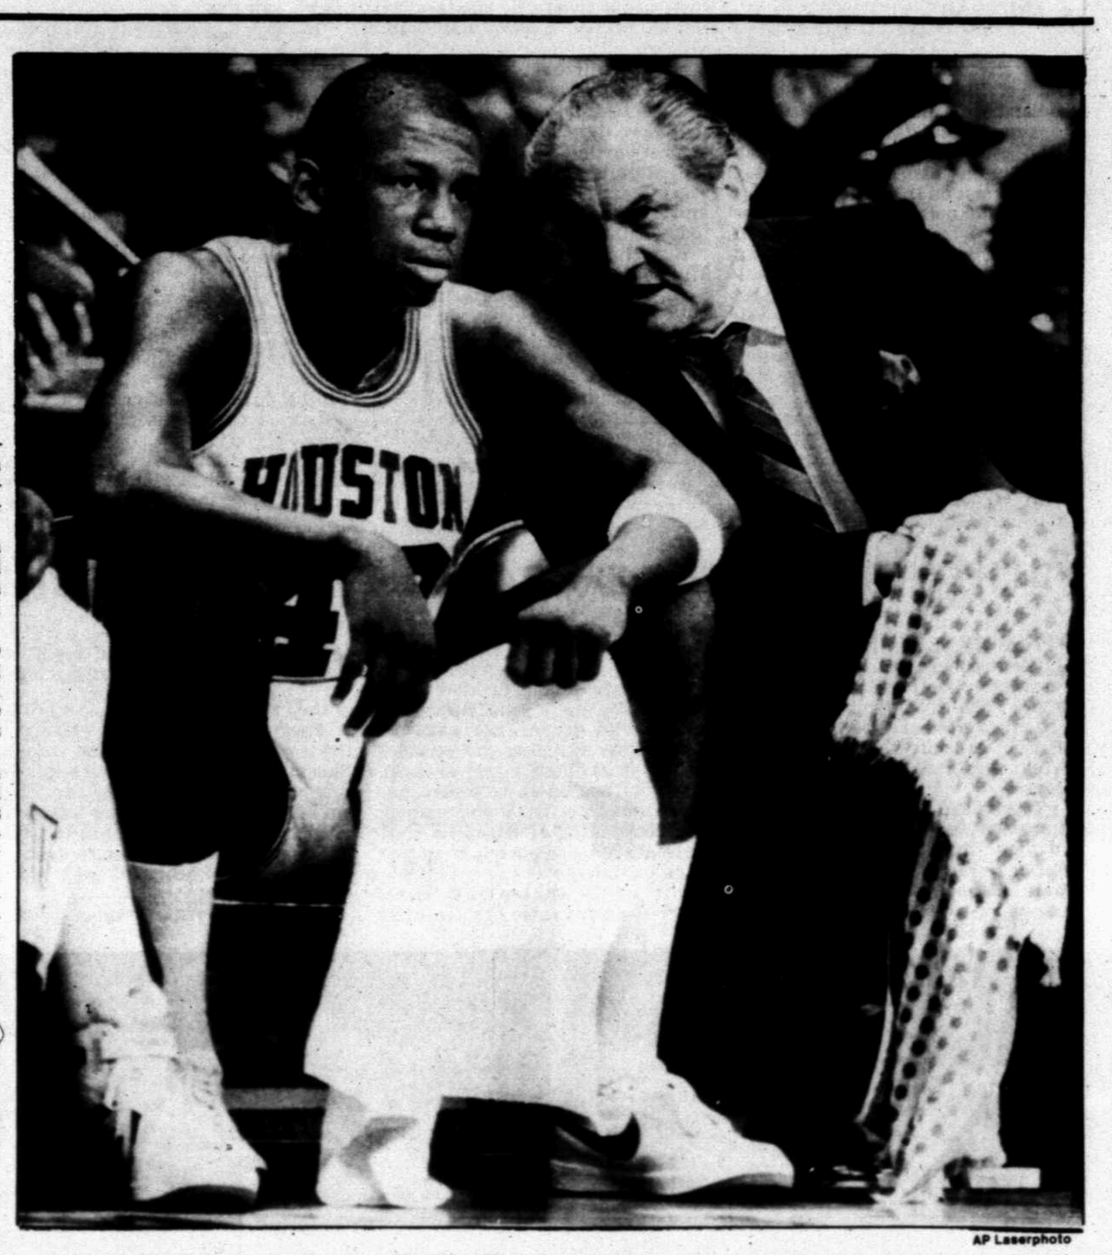

Last year was a particularly rough one for the man who succeeded Adolph Rupp — which just happens to be the name borne by the Wildcats' home arena and by the trophy awarded to the college basketball Coach of the Year. Last year, Kentucky, which for years had haughtily ignored Louisville, finally was forced into an intrastate match by the luck of the NCAA draw — and lost in overtime in the regionals after blowing a 10-point lead.

HOLLAND IS in a more unique situation. That he has managed to get Virginia this far this year is considered quite a feat since the Cavaliers are — for the first time in four seasons — playing without Ralph Sampson, college basketball's three-time Player of the Year.

But what of those four seasons? With the game's most dominant player, he still failed to win an NCAA championship, the last two times falling short even of the Final Four.

In Sampson's freshman season the Cavaliers weren't invited to the NCAA tournament, so they went to New York and won the National Invitation Tournament, an event increasingly cast as a collection of also-rans and ho-hums who fail to get caught up in the NCAA's ever-expanding net of playoff teams.

Virginia is the only unranked team in the Final Four, a feat in itself. Nevertheless, should the Cavaliers fail to go all the way, Holland will find he has yet more explaining to do.

Darla Smith wins 4-5A medalist

BIG SPRING—San Angelo shot a final round 386 to beat out Midland High for the District 4-5A girls golf title at Big Spring Thursday, but both teams qualified for the regionals at Lubbock April 16-17.

Midland's Darla Smith posted a 93 at Comanche Trails to tie San Angelo's Sherry Weatherby for first place in the medal competition over the regulation holes. Both girls had 268, Weatherby finishing with a strong 84. However, Darla responded to the challenge by winning the sudden death playoff with a par on the par five third hole.

Lesa Burnett of Midland Lee took third place with a 92-275 while Midland's Stacy Owens shot a final round 104—283 for fourth place. Midland's Shelli Childers also finished in the top 10 with a 316.

Meyer named Coach of Year

SEATTLE (AP) — Ray Meyer, who recently completed his 42nd and final season as DePaul coach, today was chosen college basketball's coach of the year by AP.

Meyer, 70, got 46½ votes from a nationwide panel of 163 sports writers and broadcasters to win the award for the second time in his career. He also won in 1980.

Dean Smith, who guided North Carolina to a 28-3, finished second with 34½ votes.

DePaul posted a 27-3 record without a superstar or perhaps even a star, and was the nation's fourth-ranked team and a sentimental favorite for the NCAA championship, which the Blue Demons had never won in 13 tournament tries under Meyer.

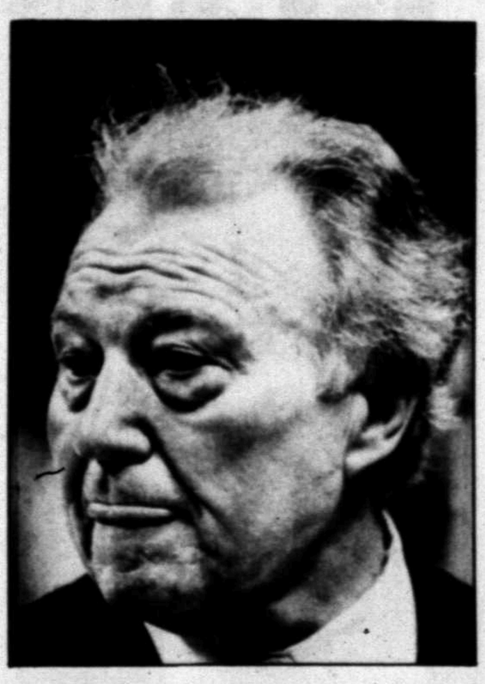

Jordan named AP Player

SEATTLE (AP) — Michael Jordan, North Carolina junior, was named AP college basketball player of the year by an overwhelming margin.

Jordan, a 6-foot-6 guard, received 100 votes from a panel of 162 writers and broadcasters.

Sam Perkins, Jordan's teammate, finished second with 13 votes and was followed by Oklahoma's Wayman Tisdale (12 votes), Houston's Akeem Olajuwon (11) and Georgetown's Patrick Ewing (9).

The voting was done before postseason play. All were chosen to the AP All-America first team earlier this month by a separate panel.

DePaul's Ray Meyer bites his lip after Blue Demons lost to Wake Forest in overtime last week in the final game of his 42-year career, but he received some consolation today when he was named College Coach of the Year by AP.

Tale of Two Cities

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — In Baltimore, there was pain and anger. In Indianapolis, there was happiness mixed with understanding.

The long-rumored, on-again-off-again move of the National Football League Baltimore Colts was confirmed by the team's coach and general counsel Thursday and Indianapolis Mayor William H. Hudnut III reacted by with relief-tinged joy.

"I am of course sorry for my friends in Baltimore," Hudnut said at a news conference where he confirmed that a preliminary agreement had been reached. "While I'm sorry that Baltimore is broken-hearted this afternoon, I'm grateful that Indianapolis can rejoice."

The mayor refused to discuss details of the agreement reached between representatives of Colts' owner Robert Irsay and former Indianapolis Deputy Mayor David Frick, who represented the city. He said details would be disclosed at Saturday's meeting of the Capital Improvement Board, which has the final say on use of the new 61,300-seat Hoosier Dome, where the team will play.

"I'm here today to respond to the announcements that were made by the representatives of Mr. Irsay (Baltimore Coach Frank Kush and team general counsel Michael Chernoff) that they are leaving Baltimore and to say that we are going to welcome them to Indianapolis," Hudnut said.

The mayor was careful to point out that the deal was not complete until all parties have signed the necessary agreements.

"We do not have, technically speaking, a deal yet," Hudnut said.

Hudnut said he hoped to have all agreements signed by Monday.

Indianapolis fans were in no mood to wait.

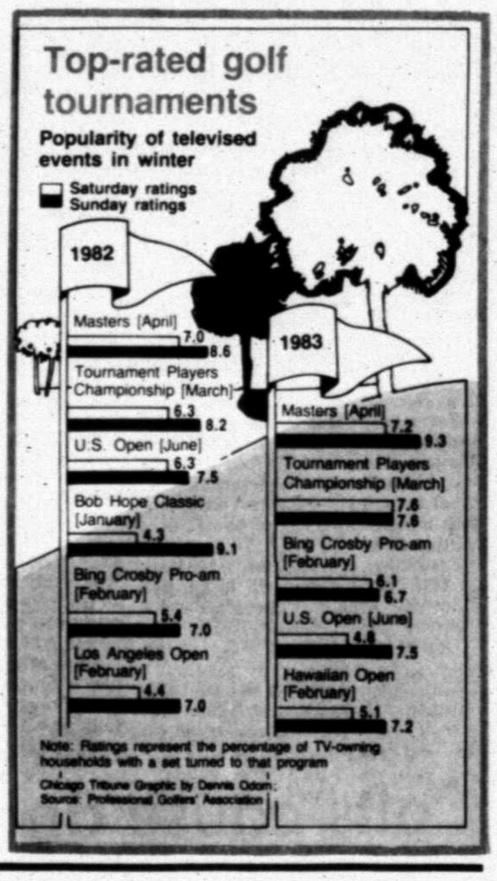

"Everybody was screaming and yelling . . ." when word came of the Colts' move, said Beth Barnes, assistant manager of Churchill's, a bar located downtown not far from the Hoosier Dome.

Similar sentiments were expressed throughout the city.

The first indication that the move was imminent came Wednesday night when moving vans arrived at the Colts' suburban Baltimore training facility and office and began to load equipment. They were on their way Thursday.

The method of the move particularly upset Baltimore Mayor William D. Schaefer.

TED BATTLES

So it was Simon who threw the wrench

William E. Simon is chairman of Wesray Corporation and Gibson Greeting Cards, as well. He is a former Administrator of the Federal Energy office and as Secretary of the Treasury in 1974 headed the world's largest law enforcement agency.

As a member of the board of directors he is associated with a half dozen energy companies and is the author of a best seller, A Time For Truth. He is president of the United States Olympic Committee (USOC) and has been involved in the Olympic movement for a couple of decades.

His list of credits is as long as Akeem Olajuwon's arm. He even belongs to the Alfafa Club of Washington, D.C., and to the Conservative Book Club.

At the Petroleum Club the other afternoon William Simon, a self-confessed entpreneur, discussed the pending presidential race, past presidential races, the economy—its past, present and future, and his conviction that the oil business had hit "rock bottom. The only place to go is up."

HE ALSO addressed the impending Olympics, the security, smog and the posture of the Russians toward the Los Angeles Games.

Yet, the most stunning information came when he revealed, in answer to a query, that he lived in New Jersey, "near Morristown" and made the unsolicited confession that it was indeed he who threw the monkey wrench.

"Morristown? My sister didn't live far from Summit, Meyersville."

"I've lived in Green Village for years," Simon said.

"That's just up the road from where she lived, Meyersville Center, the big house on the corner, where the road turns to go to Madam Bey's training camp. It has a barn along the road and instead of a hayloft, there's a grange hall."

Simon knew the place well. "That's by the Great Swamp," he contributed.

"That's right, she lived right on the edge of the Swamp. In fact, for a while the area was being considered for a jetport and it was their land that was being looked at...."

Simon jumped in, even as he must have then, "Yes, I know. We crushed that."

ACTUALLY, the interview was to discuss the state of the Olympic Games, not the property of my sister and her husband, and the question of security for a Games that will be scattered over 4,500 square miles of Southern California. Can security be guaranteed for the participants?

Simon said in 20 years association with the Games, "I've never seen a Games that is trouble free. A major controversy has surrounded every games from Mexico City to Montreal to Carter's stupid boycott of the Moscow Olympics."

"Sure, there is concern, but the security for the Los Angeles Games will be the most comprehensive of any Olympics."

Simon feels having the athletes spread out in dorms on three college campus, rather than in the customary one Olympic Village, will be beneficial for keeping security much easier.

What about the concern of the Russians? "I think they are more concerned about who might get out rather than who might get in."

As for the problems of steroids, a demanding concern in the wake of the Pan-American Games scandals last summer, Simon points out, that most of the steroid improprieties came in the strength events. "There are 150 banned substances and all the athletes will be tested."

ACCORDING to Simon, every Olympic Games has shown a profit. "Even Montreal made $116 million on the Games, but Mayor Drapeau built subways, housing, venues for competition and called them all the Olympics."

Los Angeles is spending less than seven per cent of the $9 million Moscow budgeted for the Olympics in 1980. "We've had to construct two facilities for competition and they were built by funds from private industry and will be donated to the campuses on which they were built after the Olympics."

Simon also discounts fears that the Los Angeles smog will effect the performances of the athletes. "A lot of places are worse. It is not as bad as Mexico City, where the altitude was 8,000 to 9,000 feet and the smog is worse than it is in LA. Bob Beamon set a world record in the broad jump and other records were set. It won't effect world class athletes."

After the U.S. boycott of Moscow, did Simon think the Russians had something retaliatory in mind? "No, it's to their benefit to be there, so they'll be there."

Some charge that for the benefit of prime time eastern TV, some Olympic events will be held late in the day, when the traffic and smog are worst in the LA area. Simon shakes his head on this one, "What do I think? It's gonna be a mess."

HE BRISTLES at charges that the Los Angeles Games is becoming too commercial. He points out Calgary will get $225 million for the '88 games while TV is paying only $209 million for the LA games.

He declares the criticism that the Torch Tour to raise funds for the Olympics is a "non-issue. The countries that protest the commercialism of the Games are the ones who want all the money. They don't turn down the TV money...and the money raised on that Torch Tour will benefit lot of organizations and youth."

All very interesting, but it doesn't alter the fact that it's a small world. "Green Village..."

"That's right, I belong to the Skeet and Trap club there," says Simon, a reknowned marksman, "I like to shoot, but you know, about 30 deer feed in the fields nearby most of the year, but I just couldn't bring myself to shoot one."

And one reason Simon threw that monkey wrench...the Great Swamp is now a bird and wildlife preserve.

Snyder muzzles Bulldogs, 10-8

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

Put the word non-conference in front of the word baseball and the Midland High Bulldogs fall apart. It happened again Thursday at Memorial Stadium diamond when defending state 4A champion Snyder hung a 10-8 defeat on the Bulldogs.

It's really nothing new. MHS owns a meager 2-7 non-conference record this year, but stand 4-1 and tied for second place in the 4-5A race. Bulldog coach Tim Whalen is hoping his troops return to district form by Saturday when they meet Abilene High in an effort to set up a Tuesday showdown with league leading Midland Lee.

"We can't take a game like this too seriously since the district race is the important thing, but I saw some things I didn't like. We made too many errors and what hurt is that they came from our starters. Our bench played pretty well," said Whalen.

"I hope this wakes them up for Saturday because it's back to business then. I'm going to tell our kids that they didn't compete very well against Snyder."

Snyder is not a poor team. The Tigers have a rich baseball tradition and will enter 2-4A district play today with an 8-5 season mark.

But the thing that hurt MHS Thursday against the Tigers was a 5-run third inning where the Bulldogs didn't help thier own cause. Snyder got those five runs on only one hit, a three-run fence busting blast from Charles Bollinger. The Bulldogs committed three errors in the frame to go with a couple of wild pitches from starter Mike Boswell.

Snyder then led by a 6-1 count and the Bulldogs had to play catchup the rest of the way.

The Bulldogs got three runs in the third on a two-run single by Keith Clay and a single by Mike Timlin to narrow the margin to 6-4. But Snyder got a single run on Bollinger's single in the fourth off reliever Mike Gonzales and another in the fifth on a single by Bobby Velasquez.

Bollinger, a mainstay on last year's championship team, had four RBI and picked up a save with a good relief performance.

MHS tried to stay in the game with three runs in the fifth as Jeff Magness hit a two-run triple to left and scored on Timlin's sacrifice fly. Snyder came back with two sixth inning runs on a sacrifice fly by Velasquez and a wild pitch by Gonzales.

Then the Bulldogs had a real chance to pull this one out of the fire in the bottom of the sixth. With one run and only one out and the bases loaded, Magness, who had delivered a key hit in the fifth, bounced into a double play. Bollinger KOed the side in the seventh to send the Tigers home with a victory.

But the Bulldogs have been the surprise team in the 4-5A race thus far and they return to that turf Saturday against Abilene High.

Bulldog Note: It was Alan Foret who scored Midland High's winning run against San Angelo Tuesday instead of Timlin. The San Angelo scorekeeper didn't note that Foret was inserted as a pinch runner for Timlin in that game.

Hungry Phoenix now eyes at Saints, Dolphins

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — The Phoenix Metropolitan Sports Foundation, unsuccessful in its bid to get the Baltimore Colts, says it will now look to lure other National Football League teams to Arizona — such as the New Orleans Saints or the Miami Dolphins.

"There have been a lot of rumbles about various franchises that are unhappy with their present situations, like in the lease situation with their respective stadiums," said foundation president Eddie Lynch.

"I talked to several of those club owners at the NFL meetings in Hawaii last week. I do know that more than one was interested in talking with us, but not until the Robert Irsay situation was resolved one way or another."

Irsay, the Colts' owner, has moveed his franchise to Indianapolis after considering Phoenix as a possible relocation site as well as staying put in Baltimore.

Both the Dolphins and Saints reportedly have lease problems and Lynch said Phoenix could be "the No. 1 candidate" for acquiring one of the teams.

"New Orleans is paying through the nose (for its Superdome lease). Plus they're not happy about a lot of things," Lynch said. "They can get out of their lease, which has just one year to go. They would have to pay the damages, which are substantial, but they have indicated their willingness to do so."

Miami officials, however, have talked of building a new stadium and Lynch's group envisions a domed facility to be built here "by the fall of 1988" for both pro football and major league baseball.

"It's only a matter of time before baseball is here," Lynch said. "People know Phoenix is a very viable market with its demographics and its growth factor. We wanted a football team now because I don't think expansion is going to happen for perhaps another four of five years."

Gators menace golfers

PONTE VEDRA, Fla. (AP) — For three years the 17th hole at the Players Club has lain beneath the Florida sun, calm and placid but possessing the potential menace of a sleeping 'gator.

"I can see the possibility," Ed Sneed said a couple of years ago, "that with a severe wind, we might not be able to finish the hole."

It's a little par-3, about 130 yards, usually an 8- or 9-iron shot. But it's all over water. The green is an island in a lake.

For two years, however, at the annual championship of golf's touring pros, the wind did not blow, at least not severely. The select field at the Tournament Players Championship handled the test of the 17th in routine fashion.

Thursday, the wind blew. It blew in gale-force blasts, 45 miles per hour and higher. "The most wind I've ever played in," said Hal Sutton.

And it was feeding time at the zoo.

The 17th gobbled up 64 golf balls, more than five dozen, a figure that is believed to be unprecedented on the Tour.

TPC Golf

Last year, for the entire four rounds of the Tournament Players Championship, 52 balls were hit into the water on the 17th. That figure was equalled at 4:30 Thursday afternoon when former U.S. Open champ Andy North pumped one in. And it was only seconds later — the time required for North to tee up another ball — that the record was broken.

Jim Thorpe was one of the fortunate few to get by it without damage, a feat that helped considerably in compiling his first round-leading total of 68, 4-under-par.

He was quick to point out, however, that he played late in the day, when the winds had subsided to 10-20 miles per hour with higher gusts, nowhere nearly as severe as the howling blasts of the morning.

"The afternoon players definitely had a couple of strokes advantage," said Thorpe, the only man in the field able to complete 18 holes without a bogey.

John Mahaffey, who fought the worst of the winds for a 69, agreed.

"I've been out here for 14 years, and I can't recall playing in wind conditions that severe," Mahaffey said. He said he'd had rounds of 61 and 62 in other tournaments in other years, "but neither of those rounds was as good as this.

"With the exception of one swing, that's the best I've ever played," said the former PGA champion.

The one swing, however, was a costly one. It produced one of those 64 balls in the water on the 17th. And it produced a double bogey. The double bogey, in turn, helped make that mini-monster of a hole the toughest the pros have encountered. For the entire field, it played to an average of 3.85. That's more than a quarter-stroke (.27) higher than the storied 16th at Cypress Point, statistically the toughest on the Tour in each of the last two years.

Johnny Miller, who birdied three of the last five holes, Masters champ Seve Ballesteros of Spain and South African Nick Price had 70s.

Colts cause anger and happiness

He said he was sad "that this team so rich in tradition had to sneak out in the middle of the night."

A Baltimore bank Thursday night filed an attachment against the Colts assets toward the-more-than $2.3 million it said the team owes Baltimore County. Attorney Michael Colglazier, representing the Equitable Bank, said the purpose of the attachment, "is to make sure the indebtedness will be paid."

If the debts, which Irsay owes for back rent and concessions at Memorial Stadium, are not paid, the assets will be seized, Colglazier said.

The bank is representing the creditors, whom Colglazier would not name.

Baltimore officials, editors and fans were furious with Irsay, who they said had betrayed them by not notifying him of his final decision.

"Somehow there was something grossly fitting about Robert Irsay taking off by cover of night, during a storm, lacking even the common decency to inform the mayor of Baltimore of his decision," said a Baltimore Evening Sun editorial.

One fan at the Owings Mills training complex, Brian Yaniger, said, "It's sickening, it's unbelievable, the callousness of this man. Just because he happens to have a couple of bucks, he can tear a whole city down on his whims."

Maryland's governor said the midnight move was symbolic of the kind of thing "we've been dealing with all along," adding that he wondered whether Irsay had ever dealt in good faith as the city tried to outbid both Indianapolis and Phoenix, Ariz., for the franchise.

Hughes and Schaefer said they would explore the possibility of getting another franchise. "I think they (the NFL) have an obligation to give us priority as far as an expansion team is concerned," Hughes said.

Asked about possible legal action in Baltimore to keep the team by claiming it on the basis of eminent domain, Hudnut answered, "I'm not a lawyer.

Hagler makes title defense

From wire reports

BOXING—Marvelous Marvin Hagler defends his undisputed middleweight title for the ninth time tonight in a bout against Argentina's Juan Domingo Roldan. Hagler, who hasn't lost in 33 fights, is a prohibitive favorite. The 29-year-old champion went 15 rounds for the first time since winning the title his last time out against Roberto Duran and predicts this fight won't last nearly as long. "I want to show the monster is back. I'm looking for vindication after the Duran fight."...

BASKETBALL—The University of Alaska-Anchorage is being accused by the NCAA of dozens of recruiting violations. Jacksonville gets 20 in one inning

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Jacksonville erupted for 20 runs in the seventh inning — an NCAA record — to outslug Akron 35-24 in a college baseball game Thursday.

Jacksonville sent 24 players to the plate in the inning, another NCAA record, and accumulated 13 hits, five walks, three errors and one hit batsman in overcoming an 18-9 deficit.

After Rob Schlicher popped out to start the inning, Jacksonville's next 18 batters reached base.

The Jacksonville attack featured 30 hits, including six home runs, a triple and eight doubles. Bob Silver had five hits and nine RBI as the Dolphins, who have scored 67 runs in their past three games, moved to 24-9 for the season.

Akron, which lost despite an 18-hit attack, fell to 8-3. The losers scored four runs in the third inning, eight in the fourth, five in the seventh and six in the eighth.

Braves' Perez is hopeful

SANTO DOMINGO, D.R. (AP) — Pending a review of a drug conviction against him, Pascual Perez is back playing baseball and says he's counting on pitching the "fifth game" of the season for the Atlanta Braves.

"I believe I'll be leaving for Atlanta on Friday (April 6) and I hope they save the fifth game of the season for me to pitch," Perez said Thursday.

New track gets test in junior relays meet

From Staff Reports

The new track surface recently installed at Memorial Stadium caused the postponement of this year's Tall City Junior Relays, but 11 junior high school boys' track teams from Midland and Odessa will test the improvements Saturday when the 1984 Relays commence.

"In the past we've had teams come to the meet from San Angelo, Sweetwater, Snyder, Big Spring," said Midland Independent School District Assistant Athletic Director Edwin Nixon. "This year, because of the installation of the new track, the meet was later. The other schools made are now obligated to other committments."

Still, it is a solid bet that the meet will have worthy competition. From Midland, teams representing Lee and Midland freshman, Goddard, Alamo, and San Jacinto are competing. Odessa junior highs in the fray are Hood, Crockett, Ector, Nimitz, Bonham and Bowie.

Nixon, for 28 years the head track coach at Midland High, said the finals are slated to start at 1:30. Running events are slightly different for the ninth graders.

All divisions are competing in the 400 meter relay, the 600 meters, the 65 meter high hurdles, the 100 meters, the 220 hurdles, the 200 meters and the 1200 meters.

Seventh and eighth graders will have shorter events in the 300 meters and the 1200 meter relay, while ninth graders will move a notch higher with a 400 meter dash and a 1600 meter relay.

The one-day event begins with the scratch meeting at 9 a.m. Field events begin at 9:45 a.m., and running events are scheduled to begin fifteen minutes later.

Bill Lee finds a team

MONCTON, New Brunswick (AP) — Former major league pitcher Bill Lee will be playing for the Moncton Mets this summer and fans can expect his usual mix of baseball and philosophy.

Lee, 37, signed a one-year contract Thursday with the Mets of the New Brunswick Senior Baseball League and provided the sort of comments expected of the "Spaceman," as he is known.

The shaggy beard is gone and the hair has turned gray, but his approach to baseball remains irreverent. Too many people, he said at a news conference, take the sport seriously.

"That doesn't bother me. The people who just have a thirst for winning are the people who will die young.

Cardinals pick to replace Phils

By Associated Press

In one season, the St. Louis Cardinals went from World Series champions to fourth place in the East.

They finished four games below .500 and 11 games back of the division-champion Phillies.

Manager Whitey Herzog stood by helplessly as his pitching staff went from one of the best in the league to one of the worst.

"I don't think they can all be that bad again," Herzog says. "I think that's impossible."

Last season, the NL East finished like this: Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Montreal, St. Louis, Chicago and New York.

This year, it will look more like this: St. Louis, Pittsburgh, Montreal, Philadelphia, Chicago and New York.

St. Louis

The Cardinals stumbled to a team ERA of 3.79 last season after compiling a figure of 3.67 the year before. Joaquin Andujar was 6-16, Bob Forsch 10-12, John Stuper 12-11 and Dave LaPoint 12-9. Stuper's 3.68 ERA was the best on the staff. At the same time, relief ace Bruce Sutter was 4-23, 9-10 and 21 saves.

But with these men back in form — and newcomers like Neil Allen, Kevin Hagen and Rick Ownbey to push them along — Herzog says "this is the toughest pitching staff I've ever had to cut."

While lacking real power, the Cards have speed and some of the finest hitting in the game with players like Hendrick, Smith, McGee, David Green, Darrell Porter and Ken Oberkfell.

Pittsburgh

Detroit Tigers Manager Sparky Anderson called Pittsburgh's pitching staff the finest in the league with starters John Candelaria, Larry McWilliams, Jose DeLeon, Lee Tunnell and newcomer John Tudor, acquired from Boston for Mike Easler. In the bullpen there's Kent Tekulve, Rod Scurry, Manny Sarmiento and Cecilio Guante.

The Tudor trade may have exacerbated Pittsburgh's only real weakness — lack of power. Jason Thompson carries most of that load, but rookie Doug Frobel is expected to help out. For sheer hitting, the Pirates have Bill Madlock, Tony Pena, Johnny Ray and free-agent acquisition Amos Otis.

NL East

Montreal

They've fooled us too many times, and even the acquisition of Pete Rose won't help this time. The Expos aren't even the best team in the league on paper this year.

They rate well in pitching, led by Steve Rogers and Jeff Reardon, and they've got some good hitters in Andre Dawson, Gary Carter, Tim Wallach and Terry Francona.

Philadelphia

The strength of this club is pitching, but even that's not certain. With the best season of his career, John Denny won the Cy Young. Steve Carlton is 39 and coming off a losing season. Charlie Hudson is one year past rookie status, and the other starter is up-and-down Marty Bystrom. The real strength is the bullpen, with Al Holland and Willie Hernandez.

Mike Schmidt and Gary Matthews can hit, but Schmidt is the only reliable source of power on the club.

Chicago

The Cubs have one of the best hitting teams in the division and have more power than their competition. Leon Durham, although injured three times last year, is a legitimate 20-plus homer man. Power abounds also in Ron Cey, Jody Davis, Keith Moreland, Bill Buckner and second-year outfielder Mel Hall.

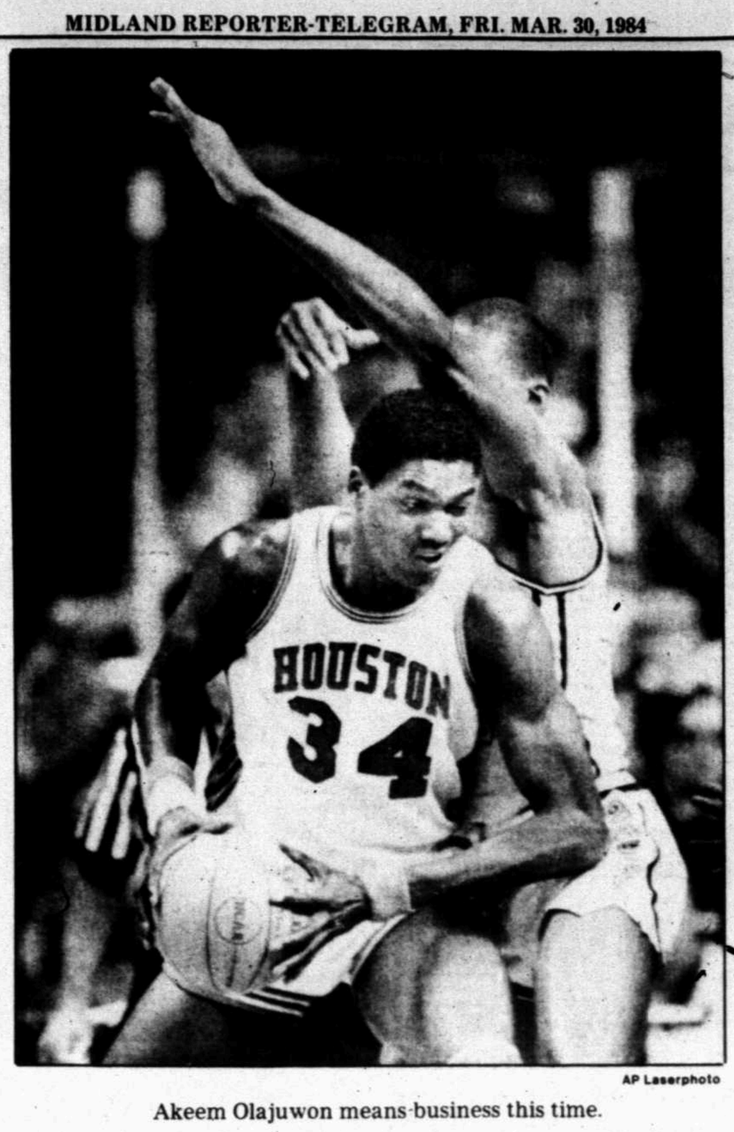

Defensively the Cubs also rate well, but the pitching hurts. Chicago dropped Fergie Jenkins, leaving Dick Ruthven, Dickie Noles, Steve Trout and Scott Sanderson, acquired from Montreal, as the top four. The best pitcher on the club is reliever Lee Smith.

New York

The Mets may not even be as good as they were last year when they finished 22 games back.

Neither second base nor shortstop is set, and even the catcher's spot may be up for grabs. The only secure job up the middle belongs to center fielder Mookie Wilson.

The Mets have some hitting in 1983 Rookie of the Year Darryl Strawberry, Keith Hernandez, Wilson, Hubie Brooks and pinch-hitter Rusty Staub.

Akeem Olajuwon means business this time.

Cougars concentrate on game, this time

SEATTLE (AP) — For the Houston Cougars, it's all quiet on the western front. For Coach Terry Holland of Virginia, it's quiet confidence.

A year ago in Albuquerque, N.M., the Cougars blew into town in high style, soaking up the atmosphere of the Final Four. They were favored to win the NCAA championship and they played the role to the hilt — until they lost 54-52 to big underdog North Carolina State in the championship game.

Akeem Olajuwon, the 7-foot reigning master of Phi Slama Jama, and the rest of the Cougar fraternity have decided this year to concentrate on basketball and not the "distractions" that surround the Final Four.

On Thursday, the fifth-ranked Cougars and their coach, Guy Lewis, arrived in Seattle virtually unannounced. They are staying out of sight, mentally preparing for Saturday's semifinal against this year's big underdog, the unranked Virginia Cavaliers.

Holland, on the other hand, conducted an informal news conference and said the memory of the upset victory by the Wolfpack in last year's championship game is buoying his spirits.

"There have been Cinderella teams before," Holland said, "but I think N.C. State's was the first one that actually won the championship. That does make people say, 'Hey, a team from nowhere can win the championship.' I'm confident it can be done."

If they do, they'll avenge a 74-65 loss in Houston last Feb. 18.

"I think the revenge motive might help you a little bit to get fired up," Holland said, "but when you're playing in the Final Four I don't think you need anything to fire you up."

And if they hope to win, they'll have to stop more than Olajuwon, the Houston co-captain whose 29 points on 14-for-16 from the field and 12 rebounds led the Cougars to a 68-63 Midwest Regional championship victory over Wake Forest. The Cavaliers also will have to deal with 6-7 senior forward and co-captain Michael Young.

Trades may pay off for Padres

One in a Series
By JOHN NELSON
AP Sports Writer

Over the past two years, the San Diego Padres have been one of the most active clubs in baseball in the free-agent market, first signing Steve Garvey and then Rich Gossage.

But the Padres also have been quietly developing their own talent, waiting for a time when it finally would pay off.

"I see a lot of progress for the future," says Padres GM Jack McKeon. "The most important thing is the experience gained playing together."

With this combination of star-quality imports and homegrown talent, San Diego appears ready to make its move in the NL West. Last year, the Padres finished fourth, 10 games behind the division-leading Los Angeles Dodgers.

MANAGER DICK Williams thinks his club can close the gap this year with "a solid nucleus of players and a strong group of talented youngsters."

Last year, the NL West looked like this at season's close: Los Angeles, Atlanta, Houston, San Diego, San Francisco, Cincinnati.

In 1984, it should look like this: Los Angeles, San Diego, Atlanta, Houston, San Francisco, Cincinnati.

Los Angeles

One year past their season of rebuilding, the Dodgers could run away from all but the Padres in the NL West in 1984. They get high marks for hitting, hitting with power and pitching. Despite the loss of reliever Steve Howe, who was suspended for a year for drug use, the Dodgers may have the best pitching in the division.

The starting rotation is superb, with Fernando Valenzuela, Rick Honeycutt, Jerry Reuss, Alejandro Pena and Bob Welch. Tom Niedenfuer did a good job in Howe's role last season.

Pedro Guerrero, Ken Landreaux, Steve Sax and second-year players Mike Marshall and Greg Brock ought to provide enough runs, with the help of a strong bench manned by Rick Monday and newcomer Bob Bailor, who will replace Derrel Thomas as the club's utility player.

San Diego

With the addition of Gossage for the bullpen, the Padres rate almost as high as the Dodgers in pitching. The starters include Dave Dravecky, Tim Lollar, Eric Show, Mark Thurmond, Dennis Rasmussen, Andy Hawkins and Ed Whitson.

The Padres also have good hitters in Garvey, Terry Kennedy, Garry Templeton, Luis Salazar, Tony Gwynn and Alan Wiggins, and last season's minor league player of the year, Kevin McReynolds, is being groomed for a spot in the outfield.

NL West

Atlanta

Pitching probably will be the downfall of the Braves. Gone from the staff is veteran Phil Niekro, who was released. And Pascual Perez' status is uncertain because of a conviction of a lesser charge of possession of cocaine. Second-year pro Ken Dayley will take Niekro's spot, and the other job is up for grabs among Pete Falcone, Rick Camp and Rick Mahler. Len Barker and Craig McMurtry are the other starters.

Reliever Steve Bedrosian wanted to start, but with Gene Garber coming off a season fraught with arm trouble, Manager Joe Torre will keep "Bedrock" in the bullpen.

Still, Atlanta will win some games with sheer power, supplied by Dale Murphy, Bob Horner, Chris Chambliss and Claudell Washington.

Houston

Astros Manager Bob Lillis likes to point out that his club has just what it takes to win, "a little bit of everything." Unfortunately, Houston may not have quite enough of anything.

Pitching, defense and speed are the Astros' strong points, but, while lacking power, they do have some bona fide hitters in Ray Knight, Dickie Thon, Phil Garner and Jose Cruz. Thon could be the best all-around shortstop in the league, quick afoot, sure with a glove and last year driving in 79 runs with 20 homers.

San Francisco

While possessing both decent hitting and pitching, the Giants seem a little short in each category to compete effectively yet. The defense — a shuffleboard of players — could improve, and Chili Davis provides some speed.

Jack Clark is coming off a poor season in which he hit 20 homers with only 66 RBI.

Cincinnati

The Reds made some strides with the acquisitions of Dave Parker and Tony Perez, and outfielder Gary Redus and catcher Dann Bilardello are each one year older. But then again so are Dan Driessen, Dave Concepcion and Cesar Cedeno.

Cincinnati has some good pitching in Mario Soto, runner-up for the Cy Young, and Bruce Berenyi, but it thins out quickly, especially with Frank Pastore coming off a 9-12 season and Tom Hume getting only nine saves last season.

After two-year trial, coaches favor clock

SEATTLE (AP) — After two years of experimenting, U.S. college basketball coaches are ready to accept a shot clock. And they may be ready to install it for next season.

The NCAA Rules Committee will decide next week whether to install a 45-second shot clock in the sport.

For the first time, a majority of coaches favor the clock, according to a National Association of Basketball Coaches survey announced Thursday.

"I have no idea what the NCAA Rules Committee is going to do," said Vanderbilt Coach C.M. Newton, rules committee chairman. "It's a very conservative group."

The survey found 53 percent of NCAA coaches approving a 45-second shot clock, which 11 conferences experimented with this season.

If the rules committee goes along, it also must decide whether to have a shot clock for the entire game or turn it off in the final minutes.

SJ only 3rd to win two in row

HOUSTON (AP) — San Jacinto Junior College basketball Coach Ronnie Arrow compared his team to a rock and four pebbles when the Ravens started out this season in defense of their National Junior College Athletic Association championship.

Walter Berry was the rock and the pebbles represented the rest of the team.

But Arrow has had to upgrade his analogy to an avalanche after his team became only the third team in history to win back-to-back national junior college titles in Hutchinson, Kan., last week.

"Walter became a boulder and the rest became rocks," Arrow said. "They all grew up a little at the national tournament. There was no way we could have won without Walter or the cast of team members to go with Walter."

BERRY PLANS to return to St. John's uiversity where he became scholastically ineligible last year. He was voted the MVP in the NJCAA tournament scoring 152 points and grabbing 52 rebounds in four games.

"Walter grew up in the national tournament," Arrow said. "He had trouble all year with keeping his intensity but he never lost it in the national tournament."

Guard Ron Singleton, a 6-foot guard from Dallas, contributed 20 points in a 86-82 victory over Independence, Kan., in the championship game.

"In the last six or seven minutes of the game when they sagged inside on Walter, Singleton and (Lou) Hill kept us in the game hitting from outside," Arrow said.

THE RAVENS completed the season with a 35-2 record, the same standard they established in winning the title last year, and averaged 99.6 points per game.

All five of the Raven starters averaged in double figures led by Berry, who hit 28 points and averaged 14 rebounds per game.

Arrow said he the Ravens' 1984 title was very satisfying since he started the season with only one starter, Singleton, returning from the 1983 title team.

"This team came farther in one season than any team I've had since I came to San Jacinto," Arrow said.

Arrow predicts an impressive major college career for Berry at St. John's.

"Most of the season, he sort of went at his own pace," Arrow said. "But he's always been able to halfstep and still be the best guy on the block."

SINGLETON also is likely bound for a major college program along with starting forward Linwood Moye, who averaged 14 points this season and joined Berry on the NJCAA all-tournament team.

Arrow said he would have four to six players returning next season as the Ravens go for an unprecedented third consecutive title.

"But I'm not going to think about that for a while," Arrow said. "I'm going to enjoy this for a while."

Miffed Bill Buckner benched

Hall unhappy, too

MESA, Ariz. (AP) — Embattled Chicago first-baseman Bill Buckner figures the Cubs "must be a pennant-winner" now that a trade with the Phillies has apparently left him relegated to a pinch-hitting role.

"They must have improved themselves a ... lot," he said facetiously Wednesday, referring to a trade Tuesday that brought left fielder Gary Matthews, center fielder Bob Dernier, and pitcher Porfi Altamirano to Chicago in exchange for reliever Bill Campbell and former Midland Cub catcher Mike Diaz.

The deal means Leon Durham will move from left field to first base, his natural position, leaving Buckner the odd-man out. A .296 lifetime hitter and the 1980 National League batting champion, Buckner will be paid $600,000 a year to watch the game from the dugout.

"IF ALL THEY need me for is pinch-hitting," he said. "That means this team must be a pennant-winner. I'll collect my paycheck and sit on the bench."

He noted that he just bought a new set of golf clubs and "maybe I'll take up golf."

But he first teed off on the Cub brass, including General Manager Dallas Green and Vice President Charlie Fox.

"I can't stand Fox," Buckner said. "Fox is behind it. I haven't talked to him in months, but I'd like to. I went in to talk to Dallas. ... He says he doesn't care about paying me all that money to sit on the bench. ... I just wish the Cubs would stop playing games with me."

THE DEAL also left Cubs center fielder Mel Hall, another ex-Midland Cub, miffed because he, too, appears headed to part-time duty.

"I don't understand it," Hall said. "Philadelphia had him (Dernier) penciled to go to the minors, and he comes here and gets a starting job. I don't want to get into comparing his abilities with mine ... but there's no way he can fill my shoes out there."

Williams new Steelworkers president

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Lynn Williams claimed victory today as the first Canadian president of the million-member United Steelworkers of America, but union treasurer Frank McKee refused to concede defeat and an aide said he likely will challenge the vote in court.

An Associated Press survey of unofficial returns early today from the union's 23 districts in the United States and Canada showed Williams with 137,619 votes to 79,111 for McKee.

If the official tally upholds his win, Williams will serve the remaining two years in the term of Lloyd McBride, who died Nov. 6.

Williams, 59, who was union secretary, and McKee, 63, have been at odds since Williams was elected temporary president of the nation's sixth largest union upon McBride's death.

The two had run on the same slate with McBride in the union's 1977 elections, serving together in an administration that last year agreed to nearly $3 billion in wage and benefit concessions for a membership diminished by layoffs and plant closings.

McKee, a 20-year millhand at Bethlehem Steel Corp.'s Seattle plant, claims Canadian steel imports have robbed U.S. steelworkers of jobs. Campaigning mainly against Williams' citizenship, McKee vowed he would not let the USW's 150,000 Canadians "take over our union."

This week, he asked U.S. Attorney General William French Smith to investigate the distribution of ballots to the USW's three Canadian districts.

He said a procedural change that let sealed packs of ballots pass through the hands of Williams supporters "tainted" the election. Williams said time constraints and unreliable mail service in Canada necessitated the change.

"It's not over until the fat lady sings," a defiant McKee said after Williams claimed victory.

McKee aide Mike Drapkin said the result of voting in the Canadian districts, which heavily favored Williams, "most likely" will be challenged in court.

"I don't know where (Williams) is coming up with these figures. This thing is still alive," Drapkin said.

Williams' campaign staff reported returns of 141,009 votes for Williams and 88,445 votes for McKee. Official results were not expected for several days as certified totals are mailed from locals to the USW's Pittsburgh headquarters.

Closing any gap between the union's U.S. and Canadian members is "where I intend to start," Williams said. "I think any rift will be quickly healed."

Williams, who has negotiated many contracts but worked in a mill for only a few months during college, would have to run for election next year to serve a full, four-year term. McKee's term as treasurer also expires in two years.

Williams said his priorities as president will be to build the union's sagging membership and prop up wages by trying to help improve America's economy. He'd do that by lobbying for the passage of a five-year quota limiting steel imports to 15 percent of the U.S. market and backing a joint USW-Bethlehem Steel trade suit against imports.

The USW also represents workers in heavy industry, including shipping, mining and the manufacture of appliances, toys and sporting goods.

Powell field gains prolific Wolfcamp stepout

The ever-surprising Powell(8300) field has yielded yet another surprise with a major step out to the north.

Rockland Oil Co., Midland, has potentialed its mile-and-half step out for 919 bopd and 595 cfpd. The 2 Powell (20) was completed in the Wolfcamp with peforations at 8396-8416 and was drilled to a TD of 8500 with 5 1/2 in. casing set to that depth.

The well was drilled on a small feature in a detrital area with mixed porosity zones and small, overlapping reservoirs.

"It's hard to say how a well will come up in this area," said Rockland Exploration Manager, Doug Wight, "the porosity sections will sometimes be as thick as 34 feet and other times they will be very thin. Operators that have turned up good porosity sections in the field are:Coastal States, Dorchester and Monsanto, which have drilled south in the Powell 8300 field.

Rockland is currently conducting more seismic testing on its leasehold and has concluded that possibly five more wells could be drilled in Section 20. Rockwell has other features in the section to test, and also plans to drill another well on the feature proven by the 2 Powell (20).

Chapman Exploration is reported to have tested a prolific Wolfcamp well in Section 8, north of the Rockwell section, which may connect the Powell(8300) detrital area. Formation tops and porosity sections in the two wells are proving similar. If that is the case, the area of interest will be increase another one or two sections to the north.

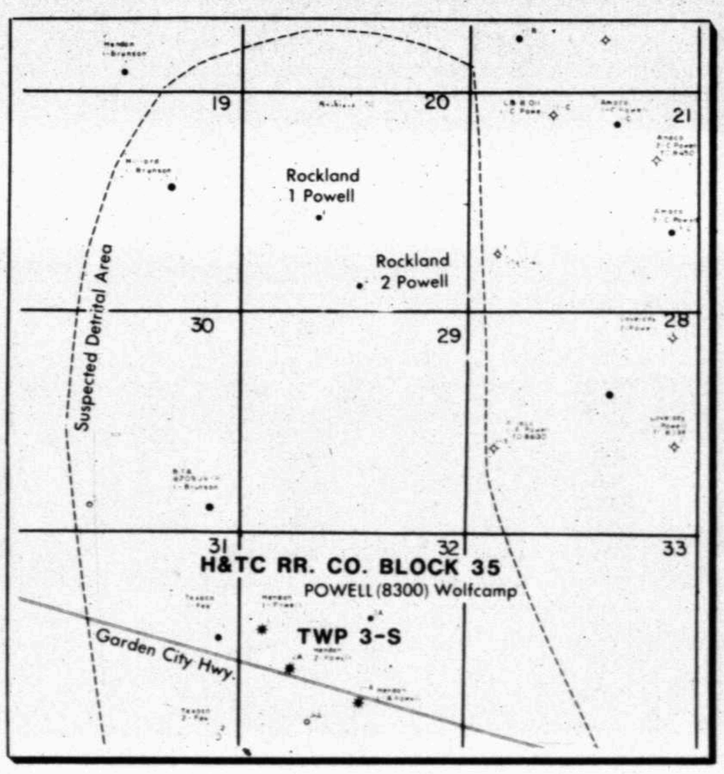

Rockland Geologist, Lawson Gullette, estimates that possibly another 15-20 strong wells may be drilled in the 4-5 section of interest to the north of the Hendon discoveries. Interest to the east may be cooled in favor of northward development as a result of a dry hole in Section 21 drilled by Coquina.

Completions in the area have proven relatively simple, according to Rockland. The 2 Powell (20) was cleaned up with 250 gallons of acid and started flowing.

However, the initial Rockland well, 1 Powell (20), required 3000 gallons of acid for cleanup and was followed by an oil frac, yet the well only tested for 192 bopd on initial production and has now tapered off to 35-40 bopd. Rockland attributes a difference in porosity between the two wells.

Rockland Oil Co. is owned by Milton Jones, a former Midlander, now of Houston. "We are elephant hunters," said Wight, "we go for high risk, high return prospects."

Rockland is currently engaged in a 14,000 foot wildcat in Andrews, a 60-well development San Andres development program and projects in the Ouachita trend in Arkansaa and Oklahoma.

Area of interest in the Powell(8300) field is now spreading north.

EPA proposes to ban gasohol, alcohol mix

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Environmental Protection Agency has formally proposed to ban a particular alcohol-gasoline blend in an action the seller says could mean the end of gasohol, once pitched as the solution to the energy crisis of the automobile.

The agency says Petrocoal, a blend of methanol with unleaded gasoline, makes cars flunk the pollution test for the amount of gasoline vapors a stationary car may give off.

In a notice published in Wednesday's Federal Register, the agency asked for comments by May 29 on its proposal to revoke the waiver that permits Petrocoal to be sold.

Petrocoal is sold by firms holding licenses from American Methyl Corp. of Salt Lake City, which makes some of the additives used in the blend.

That firm's lawyer, Scott N. Stone of Washington, said Thursday of EPA's proposal: "I think it's wrong, and it has some big implications for the country."

"Given EPA's reasons, it can't logically stop with Petrocoal.... It has to go back and examine gasohol and all the other waivers."

A key study on which EPA relied showed that gasohol makes cars flunk the same test, he said. EPA's announcement did not refer to that, and there was no answer Thursday at the organization that sponsored the study, the Coordinating Research Council in Atlanta.

A General Motors Corp. official, however, said his company had reached the same conclusion — that gasohol makes cars flunk the evaporation test.

John Topping, an assistant to Joseph A. Cannon, assistant EPA administrator for air programs, said the agency had no other action pending on alcohol-gasoline blends, "and on the current facts none is anticipated."

Three kinds of alcohol are used in fuel. Gasohol uses ethanol, generally in concentrations of less than 10 percent ethanol. This gets a substantial federal tax break.

Petrocoal combines methanol and butanol in gasoline. The two alcohols together are supposed to be 15 percent of the blend. EPA said it appeared the combined concentration was somewhat less, with 9.2 percent methanol and 3.2 percent butanol the closest approximation.

Alcohol was widely publicized in the 1970s as a way to extend vulnerable fuel supplies through blending with gasoline and, in the long run, as a fuel in its own right.

With gasoline supplies ample and prices stable in recent years, interest in blends has declined.

Alcohol Week, a trade publication, says ethanol-gasoline blends now account for 4.45 percent of the nation's gasoline sales and methanol-gasoline blends account for 3.65 percent.

Indicators reflect growth

The Midland chamber of Commerce has released February's economic indicators and according to Grant Billingsley, executive vice president of the chamber, the new statistics are encouraging.

The indicators are a reflection of the communitiy's economic health. While February's construction activity is down considerably compared to the same time one year ago, the employment picture is much improved.

"The indicators show that employment continues to improve which is a sign that we may have turned the corner," Billingsley said.

April 1-7 Business, Industry Week

AUSTIN — Governor Mark White has designated the 32nd observance of Texas Business and Industry Week for April 1-7.

The week is set aside for all Texans to pay heed to the contributions that busiess and industry make to both the sate and local economies.

The theme selected for this year's observance is "Insuring Texas' Future Today."

White's proclamation of Texas Business and Industry Week states that "Business and Industry are vital links between the state's resources and the gods and services which makes our daly lives more rewarding and enjoyable."

Fortune lists young millionaires

NEW YORK (AP) — Five men and a woman, all under 30, are Fortune's unsung tycoons, the magazine reported in this week's editions.

It said the six were the only little-known entrepreneurs it could find that made their millions by their own efforts and before age 30.

It rejected three who are well known: Apple Computer magnate Steven Jobs, 29; William Gates, 28, whose Microsoft Corp. is the largest privately held producer of microcomputer software; and Xavier Roberts, 28, creator of the Cabbage Patch mania.

Fortune's six relatively unknowns are:

Brett Johnson, 25, who started selling caps at Harvard University football games while a student and parlayed $1,500 from his grandmother into Crowd Caps Inc. The company's customers now include Coca-Cola Co. and General Motors Corp. and it could gross $15 million this year.

Sharon Corr, 27, who runs a health store in Chicago with her husband, Robert, and invented Corr's Natural Beverages, which could take in $20 million this year.

Terry Dorman, 27, who founded a screen printing business in his basement and last year Dorman Bogdonoff Co., which began making circuits for big electronics companies, grossed $7 million.

David Schlessinger, 29, who opened a discount bookstore while in college and runs a 15-store chain in Philadelphia with annual sales of $10 million.

William Baker, 28, who designed the word-prcessing software for the IBM PC and last year sold the company, Information Unlimited Software, in a deal that could bring him $10 million.

Robert Roenigk Jr., 29, who bought a Computer-Land franchise in Houston in 1981 and now runs six stores grossing $17 million a year.

Mexico's GDP down 4.7 percent

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Mexico's gross domestic product dropped by 4.7 percent in 1983 from the previous year, the central bank reported Thursday, confirming the dire state of the nation's economy.

The Banco de Mexico, in its annual report of Mexico's financial condition, said this was the second consecutive year for a decline in GDP — the total of goods and services produced.

In 1982, GDP was pegged at a decline of 0.5 percent over the previous year, the first negative rate since 1932. At the current exchange rate for peso, the GDP is about $840 billion.

The government is predicting a growth rate between 0 and 1 percent for 1984 as the long recovery from its worst economic crisis in decades begins.

Inflation, measured by the consumer price index, increased nearly 81 percent between December 1982 and December 1983, the report said. The previous 12-month period saw inflation at about 100 percent and the bank said the comparison underestimates the slowdown in the momentum of rising prices.

Last year's inflationary upswing was caused by two major factors — the after-effects of the 1982 peso devaluations and uncapped inflationary pressures which have been artificially maintained by raising subsidies to producers and consumers, the bank said.

The fall of GDP in real terms, using 1970 prices, indicates the nation's economic base has fallen since mid-1982 mainly because of inflation, which reduced purchasing power, and controlled prices which discouraged production.

Domestic expenditures fell 9.8 percent and total consumption fell 5.5 percent while the gross fixed investment went down 25.3 percent.

South, West to continue job growth

WASHINGTON (AP) — The South and West will continue to see the nation's fastest growth in jobs during the rest of this century, studies by a Washington research group show.

But the two studies also find some orelatively good employment news ofor the Northeast and Midwest oin the future.

Houston leads in job growth in reports covering both the rest of this decade and through the year 2000, the National Planning Association reports.

Other top centers of job growth are expected to be San Diego, Dallas, Los Angeles, Anaheim, Calif. and Washington, oD.C.

The planning association study of job growth anticipated through the year 2000 was published in the April issue of American Demographics magazine. olts findings are similar to a report issued in February by the same private, non-profit research group ocovering job growth through 1990.

The longer-term study by economist Martin K. Holdrich anticipates that, through the end of the century, four metropolitan areas in the country will have a net loss of jobs and population. They are New York City, Elmira, N.Y., Utica, N.Y., and Jersey City, N.J.

But the news isn't all bad for the Northern states in Holdrich's study. He expects the manufacturing base in the area to remain relatively stable, and for new industries to begin locating in suburban areas in the Northeast and upper Midwest.

Such states as Ohio and Michigan have attracted industry in the past through public facilities, skilled labor oand the availability of water, transportation and raw materials. And, oHoldrich writes, they will continue to do so in the future.

Growth in the Sun Belt will be faster than in the Frost Belt, he anticipates, but it "will not necessarily come at the expense of the Northeast and upper Midwest.

Judge urges Continental, union to talk

HOUSTON (AP) — A federal judge said he won't decide whether Continental Airlines must reinstate a labor contract with a flight dispatchers group until the airline and union attempt further talks.

U.S. Bankruptcy Judge R. F. Wheless said that, according to a Supreme Court ruling, parties must make "reasonable efforts" to reach an agreement before a labor contract can be rejected or changed.

Wheless had indicated last week that he might require Continental to reinstate a labor agreement with the 41-member Transport Workers Union that was negotiated before Continental filed for protection from creditors under federal bankruptcy laws.

But in clarifying last week's comments, Wheless said, "I'm not certain what the final outcome of the particular matter would be."

Wheless said he told the Transport Workers Union not to present evidence for reinstating the prebankruptcy contract until "efforts to reach an agreed solution have been exhausted."

Stock market loses

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market declined slightly today, faced with signs of persistent strength in economic activity.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials dropped 2.93 to 1,167.82 by noontime.

Losers held a 7-6 lead over gainers among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

As long as economic activity keeps expanding at a brisk pace, many Wall Streeters believe, interest rates are unlikely to decline and the possibility increases of a revival of inflation.

Shell Oil led the active list, up ¼ at 55¾. Royal Dutch-Shell Group plans a $55-a-share tender offer next week for the approximately 30 percent of Shell Oil stock it doesn't already own.

The NYSE's composite index slipped .04 to 91.74. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was down .02 at 210.83.

Volume on the Big Board totaled 31.76 million shares at noontime, against 42.37 million at the same point Thursday.

Midday prices were unchanged to $1.65 a bale higher than the previous close. May 81.40, Jul 81.13, Oct 77.50, Dec 75.34, Mar 76.48, May b76.40 and Jul b76.90.

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

To obtain your certificate, 'order out' for shares

BY BILL DOYLE

Q. About 20 years ago, I invested in a mutual fund and arranged to have my dividends and capital gains distributions reinvested to buy additional shares. The brokerage firm through which I invested went bankrupt and my account was transferred to a different brokerage. That firm went bust and my account was transferred again. It is now at a brokerage that sends me statements every three months.

Each statement shows some of my shares are being held by the brokerage firm and that I have the rest — 250 shares. I do not have a certificate for 250 shares. How can I obtain a certificate for those 250 shares, as well as the shares being held by the brokerage?

Doyle

A. You can get a certificate for the shares listed as being held for you by contacting that brokerage firm and "ordering out" those shares. A certificate for the shares will then be issued in your name and sent to you.

There's really no reason to do that. The shares the brokerage firm holds for you are safe. That brokerage firm is acting as your "nominee." You are the "beneficial owner" — the real owner of those shares. The quarterly statements you receive are your proof of ownership.

Getting a certificate for the 250 shares the statements listed as being held by you is a different story. That indicates that, somewhere along the line, a certificate for those shares was issued in your name and delivered to you.

Back in the 1960s, when many brokerages went bankrupt, there was a "paper work crunch" on Wall Street. Record-keeping at many firms was a mess. Often times, certificaes were lost or never delivered.

I suggest you contact the firm now handling your account, the mutual fund and the fund's transfer agent. If you never received a 250-share certificate, one should be issued to you. Or, those 250 shares should be listed as being held for you.

At this late date, you might have trouble proving your point. You should have taken action years ago, when you received the very first statement listing 250 shares as being held by you.

Q. On the advice of my broker, I invested in a mutual fund two years ago. The fund pays no dividends, but it will produce a nice profit if I cash it in now. The broker suggests I do so and invest in a mutual fund managed by a different company and that pays a high dividend. I am retired, in my 70s and looking for a high yield on my investment. Would following the broker's suggestion be a wise way to go?

A. Anyone looking for a high yield should get out of a mutual fund or any other investment paying no dividend — or low dividends or interest — and put his or her money into something paying high dividends or interest. That's basic.

However, the question pops up as to why that broker put you into the mutual fund you now have. It's unlikely your financial position was much different two short years ago than it is now.

Could it be that the broker's main interest is collecting a fat commission every time you invest? I'd be mighty cautious of any broker who tries to switch you from one fund to another every couple of years.

Q. Recently, I have been hurt — real hard — by a drop in value of the mutual fund in which I have invested. The people who run the fund are being paid to be investment experts. What cooks?

A. Some "experts" — like idols — turn out to have feet of clay. Some mutual fund managers are better than others, but none makes the right investment moves all the time. During periods of generally declining stock prices, such as we have seen lately, precious few mutual funds rise in value — or even stay unchanged.

If you thought your mutual fund was impervious to loss during "down markets," you've had a rude and sad awakening. However, you should have known there was risk involved, before you invested.

Q. My U.S. Savings Bonds are in beneficiary form — in my name "payable on death" to someone else. Can I change the beneficiary without his consent?

A. That depends on exactly what type of savings bonds you have. If they are E or H bonds, signatures of both the owner and the beneficaiary are required to change the beneficiary. If they are the newer EE of HH bonds, the beneficiary can be changeg without the present beneficiary's signature.

• • •

Q. I exchanged my Series E bonds for Series H bonds in order to get the current interest paid on H bonds. Those bonds are in a safe deposit box at a bank near where I formerly lived. I have moved to a different state and am concerned that the semiannual H bond interest checks will not reach me.

Where should I write to notify them of my change of address?

A. Write to Bureau of the Public Debt, P.O. Box 1328, Parkersburg, West Virginia 26102. That office is located at 200 Third Street in Parkersburg but has changed its mailing address to the post office box. That's supposed to speed things up.

MGF defers filing annual report until agreement can be reached

By JULIE FAUBEL
Business-Energy Writer

MGF Oil Corp. announced Wednesday it will defer filing its 1983 annual report (form 10-K) with the Securities and Exchange Commission until an agreement can be reached with its secured lenders for restructuring a $156 million bank debt.

W. Phillip Marcum, president of the financially troubled oil company, said MGF is "close" to reaching and agreement with its lenders and expects negotiations to be completed in April. Once an agreement has been reached, MGF will file its annual report on or before April 30, Marcum said.

"We are negotiating for a completely new long-term credit arrangement and we are very close to signing a new agreement. This is a piece of significant news for our stockholders and we wanted to hold off unitl we can include it in the annual report."

MGF had announced it had deferred an interest payment, due Dec. 1, 1983, of about $848,000 on its 8 1/4 percent convertible subordinated guaranteed debentures because the company was in default under its secured bank loan agreement.

Marcum said once an agreement is reached with these secured lenders, MGF will present a plan to its subordinated debtors, including those holding the 8 1/4 percent debentures and other unsecured creditors which will involve restructuring substantially all of its subordinated and unsecured indebtedness.

"It's going to take cooperation from everyone, however, if we get this restructuring agreement squared away — that's a big piece of our puzzle. If we're successful in our efforts, then MGF will become a very, very viable company."

Restructuring its debt is crucial for MGF to reorganize outside the federal bankruptcy courts, Marcum has said before.

In 1982, the company reported a net loss of more than $80 million for the year. The company spent most of 1983 cutting back, reorganizing and negotiating its existing debt with lenders as it recorded further losses ($43.3 million for first nine months) in the year.

In April, MGF received good news as it was awarded a petroleum concession by the Thailand government to explore for and produce oil from an area of approximately 1.3 million acres.

In June, three MGF bondholders tried unsuccessfully to force the company into bankruptcy after it missed a $5.4 million interest payment. In September, MGF shareholders gave the company a vote of confidence as they approved several key issues which were vital to MGF's continued success. Also during September, MGF restructured about $238.6 million in debt.

Marcum said the restructuring process will take about six months, and though it is a long time, he believes it's worth the time because it will enable the company to be in a much better financial position.

Despite its financial troubles, according to Marcum, MGF had a relatively good year in 1983. The company has 10 rigs actively drilling for the major oil companies which, Marcum said, was a vote of confidence.

During 1983 MGF made about 190 trades on its acreage which resulted in the company participating in some form in 100 wells. "We found quite a bit of oil and gas for the company last year at practically zero costs."

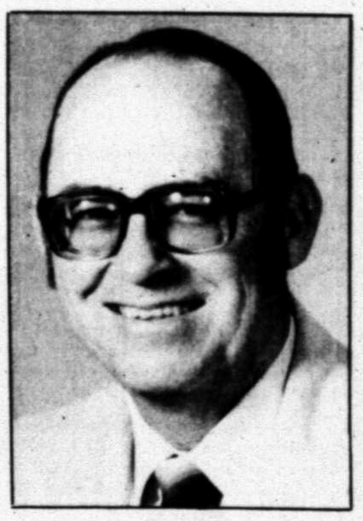

MGF's Thialand project is progressing "extremely well" Marcum said. While all of the seismic data has not been completed, Marcum said he and the other operators were pleased with the results so far.

"All of the information we get continues to reinforce our feeling this is a top quality project."

Shell Oil Co., has drilled many wells in the same region, Marcum said. "One well, only 1.7 miles away, is currently producing 12,000 barrels which is up from the 4,600 it was producing one year ago. It has been projected the well could be producing as much as 40,000 barrels by 1985."

Marcum is optimistic agreements with MGF's lenders and bond holders will be reached.

"We've come along way and we still have a way to go but if we can get everything together MGF will do quite well."

Oil firm analyst says U.S. must alter Mideast policy

Copley News Service

The United States is "drifting" dangerously in its Middle East policy and "desperately" needs a new approach, an oil company analyst told the San Diego World Affairs Council Thursday.

"Washington is drifting more than it ever has," David Mellon, foreign political analyst for Standard Oil Co. of Indiana, said in a luncheon address to an audience of about 200. "That is frightening in its implications. We desperately need a new, cohesive, intelligent Middle East policy."

Later, in an interview, he acknowledged "a distinct possibility things will flare up in the Persian Gulf."

But, responding to Colorado Sen. Gary Hart's charge that former Vice President Walter Mondale would, if elected president, "send American young men in there to fight for oil for West Germany," Mellon said that naval and air power would be used first in any Persian Gulf fighting, and "only in the last resort would President Reagan or any Democrat commit ground forces" to the area.

Persian Gulf oil, which could be cut off if Iran, now engaged in a war with Iraq, sealed the Strait of Hormuz, goes mainly to Europe and Japan.

But, added Mellon, "when Hart says it's a Japanese problem, he's talking about rearming Japan, and that's a sensitive issue, fraught with grave implications."

Device allows woman to talk

'Grandmotherly type' speaks with flat, computer-age voice

By MARK LEWIS
Staff Writer

At first, the contrast between Vera Lloyd and her voice is startling. She looks like a typically warm, friendly, grandmotherly type, but she speaks with the flat, metallic voice of the computer age.

A few minutes of conversation are all it takes to discover that Mrs. Lloyd is, indeed, warm, friendly and a grandmother (and also a great-grandmother, she hastens to point out). The discrepancy between her vocal and visual images is due to the loss of her larnyx to cancer, a loss which has forced her to rely on an electrolarnyx for communication.

This hand-held, battery-driven device, when she activates it and presses it against a certain point on her throat, emits a throbbing buzz which gives Mrs. Lloyd the vibrations she needs to form sounds and make words. But this electric buzz also gives her voice its uninflected, somewhat artificial quality.

"Some people can't understand me, especially when I talk too fast," says Mrs. Lloyd. "So I always carry a notebook. I'm not bashful about it or ashamed of it, like a lot of people are."

Actually, Mrs. Lloyd is not difficult to understand at all. And it's remarkable how quickly a listener begins to hear her personality reflected in her voice. After a while, even the soft drawl of her native Oklahoma can be detected.

"I don't feel impaired," says the 31-year Midland resident. "I've adjusted to it very quickly."

Where her voice is concerned, Mrs. Lloyd has always had to make adjustments. Her vocal cords were removed in 1940, after which she was able to speak in a soft but audible voice until 1982, when the cancer returned. After her larnyx was removed at a Midland hospital, she underwent radiation therapy for six weeks, then began a series of weekly sessions at the Permian Basin Rehabilitation Center in Odessa to learn how to use her electrolarnyx.

Now, according to Mrs. Lloyd, her doctor says "things couldn't look better" about the cancer, and she's very happy with her electrolarnyx. "I'm getting better with it every day."

She breathes through her stoma, an opening in her trachea that she covers with a bib, which acts as a filter.

"But it doesn't keep me from doing yardwork," she says. "I've always been active — I'm 70 years old, and I walk 2½ miles a day, five days a week."

Mrs. Lloyd has been a widow for 12 years, and her son, her three grandchildren and her two great-grandchildren all live in California. But for companionship she has the 25 members of the Lost Chords Club, an organization of people who have lost their larnyxes. They meet once a month at the Rehabilitation Center.

This and other services she receives through the center are partially underwritten by Easter Seals, according to Lynn Leever, director of the Speech and Language Department for the center.

"The funds we receive from Easter Seals directly benefit our patients," says Ms. Leever. "And 90 percent of funds donated in this area directly benefit this area."

Any Midlander watching the Easter Seals telethon this weekend who wonders exactly where his contribution would go need look no further than 1603 N. Marienfeld, where Mrs. Lloyd will also be watching (on KOSA-Channel 7, from Saturday night at 10:30 to Sunday evening at 6).

Her only real problem now, aside from occasional trouble with the letter "s" and the number "6", is a tendency to talk too long on the telephone.

"Sometimes I chit-chat so long I run down the battery."

City's economy, Perot's proposals dominate forum

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

Midland's boom-and-bust economy and H. Ross Perot's recommended school curriculum changes dominated questions of school board and city council candidates Thursday evening from a crowd of about 60 persons who filled the Community Room at Texas American Bank.

The candidates forum was sponsored by the League of Women Voters and Uptown Chapter of Business and Professional Women. Although the candidates concentrated on the races' issues, they kept the atmosphere light, with one candidate described as raising his own basketball team and another suggesting putting a dam on Wadley Avenue to solve the water problem.

Attending were mayoral candidates G. Thane Akins and Frank Lasater; City Council Place 4 incumbent Steve Davidson; Place 5 challengers Col. Wilson Banks and Bart Hotchkiss; school board Place 3 contestants Fred Newman and James Ramsoure; and Place 4 candidates Don McCarty, Joe Reed and Bobby Williams.

It was the mayor's race and contest for Place 5 on the City Council which drew more questions from the audience.

ALL RUNNING for the City Council and mayor's position agreed they would seek and use federal Community Development Block Grant funds. Akins, the incumbent mayor, said the city has received the funds for the past three years, with much of the money directed to housing rehabilitation and street paving. Lasater suggested using more of the federal money for street paving than for irrigating parks.

Davidson noted four years ago when he first ran for office he couldn't answer that question because the city wasn't applying for the federal funds. After the election, he became the swing vote in favor of the funds. Banks noted that as former city aviation director he applied for federal funds for the two airports. And Hotchkiss suggested the council first study what the city would have to give up to get more federal funds.

Negotiations for the city's future water supply were alluded to in opening remarks. When questioned later, Akins said the council became aware of the problem during the long hot summer last year. Stacy Dam, a project planned by the Colorado River Municipal Water District which would aid West Texas, is hung up in the Texas Supreme Court.

"It would be a tragedy if that dam doesn't go forward. We're trying to cover the future with underground sources," said Akins. Davidson added that the city purchased T-Bar Ranch in Winkler County about 10 years ago as a future source.

In a joking manner, Banks suggested the city could put a dam on Wadley to catch the water after it rains.

QUESTIONED ABOUT town hall meetings — a platform suggested by Lasater — Akins said the council had tried meeting at night for the public's convenience; but no one showed up. "If the interest is there, I'll be more than happy to have a town hall meeting."

Banks, with his experience as a city employee, was asked if the city manager had enough authority to do his job. "There's no doubt in my mind that he does have enough authority. He's responsible for the daily routine operation of the city."

Lasater and Akins tangled over the Texas Research League report on the city government. The challenger said he had asked police officers if they would want a salary increase or more officers and they all opted for the latter.

The report's 11 recommendations, according to Akins, were for the most part being implemented by the time the study was released in January 1983. One criticism was that the Planning and Zoning Department was uncooperative. But the mayor noted that the study had been conducted during the city's boom, and at one point Midland was handling more planning and zoning applications than was the city of Dallas.

"It would be a tragedy if (Stacy Dam) doesn't go forward. We're trying to cover the future with underground sources."
— Midland Mayor Thane Akins

In his opening remarks, Akins mentioned the city's period of "unprecedented growth and traumatic slump in the oil and gas industry. It was a challenge to us on the City Council to handle a different set of problems."

Lasater, in his statement, talked of a time for new leadership and new ideas and the same problems that keep appearing.

SCHOOL BOARD candidates addressed the statewide issues of changes proposed for the curriculum which would eliminate some extracurricular activities and also the need for support from parents in educating their children.

McCarty contended that MISD should stand for an "independent school district," which sets its own standards.

Newman listed four responsibilities of the school board: to the youngsters and their education, to the taxpayer, to teachers and administrators and to the community.

Ramsoure, a former board member, said the school district needs to find ways that young people "can achieve their utmost" and help must come from the home. He also suggested that programs be flexible so students can go from vocational to academic classes.

Reed, who admitted that with seven offspring "my primary interest, obviously, is children," noted that parent feedback is important to a board member. MISD should be "dedicated to well-rounded programs including extra-curricular programs. A school board member must be willing to compromise and keep the lines of communication open."

And Williams, who joked that he wasn't raising his own basketball team as Reed was, pointed out that with his 19 years in law enforcement he has worked with many of Midland's youth. "I love children. They are our concern and will be a part of my life as long as I live." He added that he is "afraid" of Perot's recommended changes.

"THEY CANNOT and will not work in West Texas," Williams said.

Before the election April 7, the candidates are scheduled to appear at least two more times. The first is today at 7:30 p.m. at Park Center YMCA. This forum is being sponsored by the Midland chapter of Black Democrats.

On Tuesday, they will appear at a forum from 5 to 6:30 p.m. in the Midland Room at First City National Bank. The sponsoring group is Tall City Republican Women.

On Wednesday, the mayor's candidates will be facing off before the Midland County Young Republicans club at noon in Midland Center.

MMH indigent care costs questioned

Hospital boards' guest of honor not spared any slashes by 'Knife'

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

The legality of questioning indigents about their citizenship and whether it might serve as a deterrent to family members in Mexico who also may cross the border to seek medical help arose during a discussion on non-emergency medical service for the indigents at Midland Memorial Hospital.

Indigents presently are not asked to show their "green card," according to MMH officials during a regular board meeting of the Midland County Hospital District directors Thursday.

While a contract for referring critically ill neonates, babies under 28-days-old, to the more sophisticated medical services at Fort Worth's Childrens Hospital was approved, directors asked about covering costs for indigent illegal aliens and non-Midland County residents who are transferred to other hospitals.

Much of the expense of caring for indigents comes from having to transfer patients, particularly neonates and burn victims, to better-equipped facilities.

PERSONS QUALIFYING for free care under the MCHD indigent policy meet specific criteria, determined on a sliding scale that factors in income and the number of dependents.

Directors approved paying $100,000 of a $232,100 bill to Fort Worth's Childrens Hospital for indigent patients. The hospital district's total indigent care costs for the fiscal year to date had risen to $735,000 by the end of February.

Three types of patients may be referred to Fort Worth, according to MMH Vice President of Finance Ron Peterson: The fully-insured or those who are capable of paying for services; those under Medicaid; and the poor and needy who qualify for MCHD indigent care.

Terms of the renewed contract only apply to Medicaid and indigent patients, Peterson said. The agreement with the Fort Worth hospital states MCHD will pay 80 percent of the charges after Medicaid coverage expires, up to 90 days. The local hospital district will pay 50 percent of the bills after that. The days in the Fort Worth hospital must be continuous and a 30-day termination clause is included for either party.

With a walking cane in hand, Dr. Thomas P. Marinis was ceremoniously deposited into a rocking chair to begin Thursday's meeting of hospital boards that whittled away on the surgeon's 34 years of service.

On staff since MMH opened in 1950, Marinis chuckled through a private showing, made in 1978 and shown courtesy of Summer Mummers and the Midland Community Theatre, of him as the busty nurse assisting Dr. Jake "Knife" Shapiro. The film clip spanned the surgery of a sword victim who was forced to fill out stacks of papers in the emergency room while Shapiro was pulled off the golf course and given a stiff drink before strolling into the operating room. The guest of honor wasn't spared any slashes when Shapiro's arm-waving surgical procedures punctured Marinis' "breasts" while the two pulled several items from the patient's stomach, including a long stream of tape with a "Nixon Now" button attached to the end.

"This has been a big part of my life and I've enjoyed every moment of it," Marinis said, accepting a plaque of appreciation. While walking out amid handshakes and back-slaps, the 66-year-old former chief of staff was overheard as saying, "Old surgeons don't die, we just cut loose."

In other action Thursday, trustees and directors were told the number of patient days continued to fall below budget as they have since November, according to MMH Vice President of Finance Ron Peterson. "For the year-to-date, we are not only 1,476 days under budget but as of February 29, we are also 99 days below actual (patient days) for the previous year," he reported.

Usage of ancillary services, however, continued to rise with X-ray completing 15 percent more procedures than last year. Pharmacy showed an 11 percent gain, lab a 9 percent gain and respiratory therapy a 60 percent gain over last year's figures.

More than $500,000 was reported in revenues over expenses for February, bringing the total figure for the fiscal year to $1,869,000, a $215,000 increase over the expected figure.

Directors approved the purchase of a renal dialysis machine for $14,264.50. The hemodialysis equipment will be funded by a private donor. The dialysis machine will be used for in-hospital patients.

(See HOSPITAL, Page 2C)

"It covers only patients that we request they take," said Ted Kerr, MMH attorney. "It won't cover a Midlander who just shows up (in Fort Worth)."

THE AGREEMENT with the Fort Worth facility is more cost efficient than contracting with Lubbock General, which requires MMH to pay 80 percent of charges after Medicaid coverage expires, Peterson said.

When asked if the contract with Fort Worth would cover illegal aliens, Peterson said MMH notifies Fort Worth that the patient is not a citizen before treatment; Fort Worth then can deny responsibilities for any charges. "And our portion will probably be bad debt," Peterson said.

Director Dr. Walter Parks asked if the state required county hospitals to cover the costs of local indigents who had to be transferred to other facilities. "Or are we just being nice guys?"

"A lot don't," answered MMH President Ray Branson, adding those hospitals have prompted Gov. Mark White to assign the Task Force on Indigent Care to study the problem.

"I think we're just touching the surface here," Director Pat Estes said. "I think (costs of providing medical services) are going to continue (to escalate.)"

SOME TEXAS hospitals are blaming Mexican-national indigents who cross over for services and disappear back behind the border as the source of financial deficits at the facilities.

After questioning the payment of indigent care costs for one person who she believed "is not now nor ever has been a resident of Midland County," Director Wanda Mohr asked if the patient's residential status could be checked. According to Kerr, "payment of (county) taxes alone does not qualify you as a Midland County resident."

Paying for elective or non-threatening surgeries for indigents also was discussed.

"The hospital district has been responsible for indigent elective surgery before," Branson said.

"But if we find out they have no money and it's elective surgery, we question them," Peterson said.

Issue of Lasater's length of residency raised

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

When Frank Lasater signed the deed to his new house on Sept. 7, 1983, he didn't know he was sliding into the mayor's race with one toe over the deadline.

The issue of Lasater's length of residency in Midland was raised Wednesday evening with the doubt that he had not lived the required six months within the city limits before the filing deadline.

That six months deadline would be Sept. 7.

Lasater said his immediate reaction was one of shock. "I'd been in Midland since 1959 except for the time I went to school and was in the Marines. I pulled out all my paperwork. The home was deeded to me on Sept. 7. I guess I just made it by the skin of my teeth."

According to the Texas Municipal Election Law a mayor's candidate in a home-rule city, such as Midland, is required to live in the city at least six months prior to the filing deadline, which was March 7. Lasater, who said he had been living about 10 miles south of town at Sky Ranch about 15 months, signed the deed on Sept. 7 for his new house at 5451 Juniper Court. That property lies within 5 feet of the city limits, he said.

Assistant City Attorney David Reagan said residency requirements are tough for the courts to prove.

"Residency is complicated. It's too difficult to decide when this becomes a person's residence," said Reagan, who added that the courts look at intent. Taken into consideration would be factors such as working at a business within the city limits, when the deed on a house was signed and where he's registered to vote.

The Elections Adminstration office verified that Lasater is registered as a voter at his Juniper address.

The only way Lasater's name could be removed from the ballot is by his challenger, Mayor G. Thane Akins. Reagan said the city could not remove the name.

Akins said Thursday evening that Lasater's residency is not an issue in the race. "If he says he's qualified legally, I don't have any problem with it."

Lasater said at the time he purchased his home, he was still president of a company and had no intention of running for mayor. He resigned his position from Flare, Inc., in January and filed his papers for the race on Feb. 17.

Tenants leaving complex with clothes on their backs

HOUSTON (AP) — As a southwest Houston apartment complex prepares to start its clothing-optional policy, some tenants are leaving the complex with their clothes on their backs.

The Fieldstone Apartments announced in January that starting April 1 they would become Club Fieldstone, a private living club with a nudist policy in the swimming pool, Jacuzzi and sauna.

Other sections of the complex are clothing-optional, and tenants who wish to remain clothed would live in an outer perimeter of apartments in the complex.

Tenants estimate that only 30 percent of the complex's 270 apartments will be occupied.

Fieldstone managers aren't saying how many units are occupied, but tenants say they expect the previous 83 percent occupancy rate of the complex to drop to 30 percent.

"Ever since this was announced, I don't think 10 people have moved in," said a 27-year-old carpenter who plans to move out in April. He said he thinks "a lot of perverts will move in instead of normal people. I believe they'll get older, uglier people.

"They say I have to be nude to go in the Jacuzzi," he said."Who are they to tell me? What are they going to do — take me out and beat me up and take my pants off?"

Veal Johnson, a nudist and vice president of Corsun Financial Corps., which manages the complex, said he expects to complex to be full and have a waiting list by July.

But Corsun made a similar prediction for April 1.

The complex has paid as much as $4,000 in moving expenses for tenants who decided to leave. Another $200,000 was spent on secuirity, fences and walls.

Former tenant Les Moreland said "Now I hope it falls flat on its face and I have the last laugh."

"I personally tried hard to get them to modify the required nudity by the pool," said Dr. David Hoyer, 28, a physician who planned to move out Wednesday. 'I'd have stayed another six months if swim suits were optional."

Johnson said nudity will be mandatory in the designated areas "because there's no reason to have clothes in those areas."

But Johnson said the management will keep an eye out for loiterers.

"We can't have a voyeuristic situation develop," he said. "Some people are staying for the wrong reasons. We can't have a guy with 14 college buddies staring at the chicks, because they'll leave."

But Johnson said most people won't live at Club Fieldstone for the nudist policy.

"A person could live here for years and never get undressed," he said.

Change of venue granted in murder solicitation trial

From Staff Reports

ODESSA - A change of venue was granted Thursday by 70th Judicial District Judge Gene Ater in the murder solicitation trial of convicted killer John. C. Skelton.

Skelton, 54, a former Odessa oil field businessman, was convicted and sentenced to death by lethal injection in July 1983 for the April 1982 car-bombing murder of Joe Lee Neal.

On the same day he was sentenced to death, Skelton was named in four indictments which alleged that he attempted to hire his stepson and another man to kill two of his former business associates.

That trial was scheduled for Odessa, but Skelton's attorney, Jim Vollers, requested a change of venue on the grounds that extensive publicity on the case had made it impossible for Skelton to get a fair trial in Ector County.

After the hearing, Vollers expressed his satisfaction at Judge Ater's ruling.

"How can a man get a fair trial when the entire community knows he's been convicted of a capital crime?" asked Vollers.

KMID-Channel 2 News Director Mike Barker was subpoenaed by Vollers to testify about media coverage of Skelton's first trial.

"I did not think the coverage had been inflammatory," said Barker afterwards. "I think there are enough people out there who don't read the paper or watch TV" who could give Skelton a fair trial. "But I do feel there was an unusual amount of publicity, by the very nature of the case. It was an unusual murder trial."

Vollers said he didn't think the media had been inaccurate or biased, "but it was a sensational case. The trial needs to be moved beyond the scope of that publicity."

The new venue for Skelton's solicitation trial has not yet been announced. He is in the process of appealing his earlier conviction for murder.

New Midland Lions club receives charter at ceremony

From Staff Reports

The new Midland Suburban Lions Club received its charter Thursday night, and Everett J. (Ebb) Grindstaff, who just finished his term as president of Lions International, was on hand to pay tribute to Midland Lionism.

"It takes a certain type of individual to accomplish things, to become involved," said Grindstaff, after noting that this is Midland's ninth Lions Club.

Grindstaff, a Ballinger lawyer, spoke to a group of Lions from several Midland and out-of-town clubs who gathered for the charter ceremony at the Southside Lions club building in Midland. He stressed the importance of the individual clubs in accomplishing the goals of the international organization.

"We now live in a global world. What happens in El Salvador or Nicaragua also affects you and I," he said. "So today we must think globally, but act locally."

The charter was presented by District Governor C.E. McCain, of Midland. The Suburban Lions Club will mainly serve the area south of Interstate 20, according to its president, C.W. (Willie) Miles. It will meet on the second and fourth Thursday of each month at the Best Western Restaurant, in Midland.

Other officers of the new club are E.I. Boyce, first vice president; D.H. (Don) Edwards, second vice president; F.A. (Pete) Wright, third vice president; Marvin Jones, secretary-treasurer; John (Mickey) Beverly, Lion tamer; Boyd Reece, tail twister; and Art Shaw, Morris Davis, Gary Carnett and David Hanson, directors.

Sixty churches, groups sponsor 'Decision '84'

From Staff Reports

Sixty churches and organizations have joined together to bring evangelist Arthur Blessitt to Midland for a six-night crusade, "Decision '84," Sunday through April 6 at Chaparral Center.

Blessitt, who is from Los Angeles, was in Midland in December 1982, when he carried a cross through the downtown area. During the past 14 years, he has carried a 12-foot long, 6-foot wide, 90-pound cross 20,000 miles across six continents. He has appeared as a guest on many major television shows, including Tom Snyder's Tomorrow Show, David Susskind, Steve Allen and the Today Show. He has also appeared on numerous occasions on the 700 Club, PTL Club and the Praise the Lord Program.

He has been written about in People, Time, Newsweek and every major Christian publication.

Archie Dennis, who has toured the world presenting the message of Christ in song, will be the crusade soloist. A 500-voice choir and orchestra composed of volunteers from the sponsoring churches will also provide music nightly.

This representation of churches to sponsor the Decision '84 crusade represents many denominations throughout the Midland area. Pastors and representatives have been working together for a year planning this crusade.

The public is invited to attend. The crusade will begin daily at 7 p.m.

MMH board questions cost of indigent care

While looking over the indigent care list for February, directors asked if any of the patients were county jail inmates. They were referring to a stabbing victim and a patient who underwent surgery for gunshot wounds.

"Not that I know of," Peterson said, "but I can check. If county prisoners are brought to the office, they are supposed to notify me immediately."

THE COUNTY is responsible for medical costs of indigent prisoners. Commissioners had approached directors previously about the hospital district covering those expenses, but were refused.

"If the amount of money (needed for indigent care) keeps going up like it is, we're either going to have to change the policies or the taxes," Parks said.

"I definitely think we will have to review the policies," said Mrs. Estes.

Because no proof of citizenship is requested at MMH, Peterson said it is difficult to determine the number of indigents who are illegal aliens. Directors asked if the hospital could legally ask for proof.

Although Kerr said he saw no problems with asking for citizenship papers, he cautioned that just because a person doesn't have his green card with him doesn't mean he isn't a U.S. citizen. "Like not having a driver's license on you isn't proof that you don't have one."

"That (indigent care) policy does not deny needed health care for anyone," according to Branson. "I think that's what the district is for."

"We can't turn the people down, but we can create some public awareness that some of these people are illegal aliens. There has got to be some legal means to get the statistics on them," Director Frank Calhoun said.

"If Ted (Kerr) thinks it's not a problem asking, that would make us aware if (serving illegal aliens) is a major factor or not," he added.

"My thought is if you ask for the green card, they'll go back to Mexico and tell friends and family there is a threat of being picked up by the Border Patrol because we're asking for green cards," said Peterson, adding it may serve as a deterrent.

"There is an underground communication," President of the Board of Directors Tevis Herd agreed. "They know where to go for services and that they'll get it free. If we can properly do it, we need to cut down."

Decomposed body that of fugitive

BIG SPRING (AP) — A decomposed body found southwest of Big Spring last week has been identified as that of a fugitive wanted for a North Carolina murder.

Howard County Sheriff A.N. Standard identified the man Friday as Tommy Junior Johnson, 33, of Raleigh, N.C.

Johnson was wanted bu the FBI as an interstate fugitive in connection with a murder in Weldon, N.C. He was reported to be hitchhiking and traveling by bus across the country, Standard said.

His family reported they last heard from Johnson Dec. 21, 1983, from Las Vegas, Nev. He also had called from Ontario, Canada, the sheriff said.

The cause of Johnson's death still has not been determined, Standard said, "although our suspicion is homicide. We think there may have been neck wounds but the decomposition is so advanced we can't tell for sure."

Rabies vaccination clinic sponsored

From Staff Reports

A rabies vaccination clinic for dogs and cats will be sponsored by Birkhead Feed Store from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. Saturday at the store, located on the corner of East Wall and Terrell.

According to Scott Schiermeyer, manager of the store's front section, the public needs to remember the importance of vaccinating pets.

A fee of $10 per animal will be charged for the vaccination, license and tags. Midland veterinarians will give the vaccinations.

"People don't realize it, but animals become a real part of the family," Schiermeyer said. "They are like children to some people. Polio has just about been eradicated because of vaccinations, and if people stay on top of rabies vaccinations, it might happen with rabies, too."

While the public turned out in large numbers to have pets vaccinated during last year's outbreak of rabies, this year's response has been disappointing.

"Just because all of the skunks that had rabies last year are dead doesn't mean rabies is not still a problem," Schiermeyer said.

Man reports theft of equipment

From Staff Reports

In theft and burglary complaints to city police during the past 24 hours, Mark Perry of 4504 Meredith Place said baseball equipment worth $1,235 was taken from the driveway of his home Wednesday night.

Ronda Hope of 900 W. Tennessee told officers two diamond rings valued at a total of $1,000 were stolen from her residence after someone broke a window to gain entry Thursday.

Midland College student John McCauley reported the theft of a $500 watch from a weight room at the school. The theft occurred about 8 p.m. Thursday.

Police responding to a burglar alarm at the Firestone Tire Store, 709 N. Big Spring, about 3:40 a.m. today found that two rocks had been thrown through a front window. Taken was a color TV set worth $480. Damage to the window was estimated at $300.

Woman jailed on murder charge

From Staff Reports

A 24-year-old Midland woman remained jailed this morning in lieu of $50,000 bond set Thursday by Justice of the Peace Robert Pine.

Lorri LaNell Anderson of 2300 North A St., Apt. 110, is charged with murder in the death of 35-year-old Jon Marvin Whatley of Odessa. Whatley, Midland's first murder victim of 1984, was found shot to death in Ms. Anderson's apartment about 1 p.m. Wednesday.

She was arrested at an Odessa motel Wednesday night. A .25 caliber handgun was taken into evidence. Whatley had been shot twice in the chest and appeared to have been dead about 12 hours when his body was found. No motive has been established.

RRC seeks penalties

AUSTIN (AP) — The Railroad Commission on Thursday asked the state attorney general's office to seek civil penalties against Hemispheric Oil and Gas Inc. of Carrollton for violating anti-pollution regulations at an oil lease 11 miles south of Baird in West Texas.

The commission said its investigators on June 1, 1983, found three unauthorized pits containing salt water at the lease.

The purchase of a $24,63[illegible] nephroscopy machine, used to remove kidney stones, and a $6,152 laproscopic set, for gynecology procedures, also were approved. The nephroscopy machine will involve a smaller surgical procedure, according to Peterson. "It won't reduce the time a patient stays in the hospital (usually seven days) but they will virtually go back to work (as soon as they are released.)" Local urologists will be trained before having access to the procedure. The laproscopic set also will reduce the amount of surgery required for gynecology procedures.

Trustee Jim May, chairman of the building committee, reported construction on the parking garage east of the hospital was behind about 30 days. "We had hoped it would be completed by the end of April but it will be completed by the end of May, or it will be the end of May," he joked. The pay-parking proposals, opposed by the Image/Public Relations/Development Committee still have not been resolved, May said. Recommendations are expected to be given at the April meeting.

Ground-breaking ceremonies for the 77-bed expansion will be held at 10:30 a.m. April 17 on the roof above 1-West and the post critical care unit, weather permitting, according to Arlene Strickland, MMH Public Relations Director.

Using the theme of "Midland Memorial Hospital: Growing up in Midland," a person born in each of MMH's 34 years of existence will be on hand. A reception will follow.

Directors also set the dates of special meetings. Bids for the 77-bed expansion, submitted by 15 general contractors, will be opened at 3 p.m. Tuesday. The bids will be awarded and votes for directors will be canvassed at a special meeting scheduled for 1 p.m. April 9.

Campfire program expands children's services

By DAVID LEE FORREST
Lifestyle Writer

Campfire has gone mobile.

The youth activity organization has recently extended its range of services by using a van to transport a "Campfire on Wheels" program to children on the Midland's east side.

The Mabee Foundation donated $18,000 to purchase a Ford Club Wagon, according to program specialist Laura Sickles.

A United Way grant helps pay for staff salaries and miscellaneous expenses, she said.

Once a week Mrs. Sickles takes the van to Crockett, De Zavala, Ben Milam and Pease elementary schools to provide an hour of Campfire afterschool activities for first, second and third graders.

"It's the first program like it in Midland," she said.

DESPITE A STEREOTYPE of "Campfire girls," more than half of the members at Crockett are male.

Mrs. Sickles estimated 50 percent of about 120 participants in Midland are boys. Campfire became coed in 1979.

One recent afternoon "Campfire on Wheels" rolled to Crockett Elementary School where 22 students are enrolled in the program.

Mrs. Sickles and Liz Corralez, program assistant, had the activities indoors because of high winds and blowing dust.

At 3 p.m., children began bounding energetically into the school cafeteria. Boys chased each other around the tables — adding their own dramatic squealing tire sound effects — while Mrs. Sickles and Mrs. Corralez prepared for the program.

"RIGHT WHEN THE KIDS get out of school, they want to play a game," said Mrs. Sickles. "To tell them, 'We'll sit down again for 20 or 30 minutes,' doesn't work too well."

The two women gathered the children into a circle to recite "The Blue Bird Pledge" aloud:

"To have fun,
To learn to make things,
To remember to finish what I begin,
To keep my temper most of the time,
To learn about nature and living outdoors,
To have adventures with people, places and things,
To make friends."

Then to burn off a little excess energy, the children had a relay-style race. Their shoes were mixed together in a pile. The objective of the game was to race to the pile, find their own shoes, put them on and race back.

AFTER A FEW MINUTES of running and yelling, the victorious team was awarded with some bubble gum.

After the race one boy momentarily forgot the part of the Blue Bird pledge about holding his temper and hit another boy with one of his shoes.

"No, you don't do that!" said Mrs. Corralez. "You don't bop people on the head with a tennis shoe."

Mrs. Sickles pulled the two boys two one side and talked to them and they parted amicably.

Campfire tries to teach children to get along and "help them learn how to make new friends," said Mrs. Sickles. "And to give them a sense of belonging to a group."

"There was a need on the east side of town for the children," Mrs. Sickles said, to have this type of program. "If someone didn't go in and give them a program they wouldn't have one.

"IT'S TO GIVE the kids more of an open training and events they don't get in school."

The children next sat down to vote for their choice of a future field trip — a trip to Monahans Sandhills State Park, bowling or roller skating.

Inevitably, one child asked, "Can't we go to all three?"

"Hey, how do you spell 'skating'?" another asked.

After their written votes were collected to be counted with those from other schools, they had Kool-Aid and butter cookies.

Some stores donate goods such as refreshments to the program, but donors are often difficult to find, said Mrs. Sickles. Sponsors are also needed to help children from some poorer families pay their $14 annual dues, she said.

PARENTS CONTRIBUTE items for the children's community service projects as well as for refreshments.

Two of the group's upcoming projects are collecting Easter eggs for children at the Cerebral Palsy Center to have an Easter egg hunt and having a trash clean-up.

"We also try to teach them about citizenship," Mrs. Sickles said. "Each month we try to have service projects for the community."

PAST PROJECTS HAVE included making Christmas food baskets for local needy families and Valentine cards for patients in the Veterans Administration Hospital in Big Spring.

Working with some of poorer children in Campfire on Wheels Mrs. Sickles noticed, "The kids who had the least brought the most because they knew what it was like."

Family's jazz band creates harmony

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (AP) — When the Coulson family banded together to form a band, they created a musical group that has captivated audiences from coast to coast.

Dr. W. R. Coulson, a professor of psychology at United States International University in San Diego, is the leader of the Coulson Family Jazz Band. He, his wife, Jeannie, and all of their seven children have been band members at one time or another.

The Coulsons assembled the band because they were looking for a common activity to pull their family together.

"In today's families, it seems everyone is going his own way," Coulson says. "Mom has her feminist meetings; dad has Monday night football at the pub, and the kids are out with their pals. The family rarely gets together except in emergencies.

"Well, with band practice, we created our own emergency," he says. "We had to get together because we didn't want to give bad performances. We also had a lot of fun."

Coulson, 50, plays the cornet; Mrs. Coulson, 51, the drums; David, 27, trumpet; Gail, 26, banjo; Lainey, 24, flute and guitar; twins Tom and Dan, 21, trumpet and trombone respectively; Monica, 19, piano; Nancy, 17, tuba.

For more than a decade, the family has played their brand of Dixieland jazz at Disneyland, jazz festivals, churches, Rotary clubs and luncheons around the country, as well as at Washington D.C.'s Kennedy Center and the White House, where they entertained tourists waiting in line for tours.

They have played at San Diego professional tennis and soccer games and in the stadium parking lot before San Diego Charger football games. The band even competed on the television program, "The Gong Show," where they tied for first place but lost in the tie breaker.

Coulson calls their specialty "early jazz." "We started when the children were quite small. They couldn't stay up late, so we began to play early jazz," he explains with a laugh.

The band became exactly what the Coulsons hoped it would be — something their children could commit themselves to.

"Young people have a hard time feeling valued in our society," the USIU psychologist says. "It's very important for them to feel needed.

Coulson has researched the moral development of children and has found "it's very healthy to expect things of kids; to hold them to account. It helps them become well-balanced, responsible adults. They develop good habits early, and that spares them some pain when they become adults."

He suggests that all families find some common activity, whether it be a family business or something else, such as hobbies or sports. He cites sailing, running and organized youth sports such as Little League or Bobby Sox Softball as good examples. Coulson especially recommends activities parents enjoy.

"Too many popular theories hold that you should not impose your own interests on your children," he says. "But there are lots of people out there who want to impose THEIR interests on your children — drug pushers and so on. Shouldn't the parents be the ones to 'impose' on their children?"

Covenant House gives 'sanctuary' to youngsters

Hearst Feature Service

NEW YORK — Do you know where your children are? If they've run away from home and they're lucky, they've found Covenant House.

It's a sanctuary for youngsters under 21. The Covenant House here houses 200 young people who have fled from their pimps, from drug addicts and pushers, from child pornographers — or from parents who abused them. Some are young mothers with babies, but two-thirds are male.

Besides the Covenant House serving the Times Square area here, others are in Houston, Toronto, and Antigua in Guatemala. Soon, Boston and Fort Lauderdale will have these refuges for children.

They are given three meals a day, clean clothing, medical treatment and counselling, and a clean bed. The average stay is two weeks, but some stay five weeks and longer.

Covenant House staffers help these youngsters find homes, jobs, or a way back to their families. Until then, they are protected from those who have been preying on them.

Security guards and locked doors keep potential scavengers from the inhabitants of Covenant House. Incidents of violence have occurred when an angry pimp, for example, comes to get back his human meal-ticket.

Despite the best of intentions, only one-third of the youths who pass through Covenant House's Under 21 program manage to straighten out their lives. The others are lost. Nevertheless, an attempt to save them has been made; without Covenant House, that slender chance wouldn't exist.

There could be a Covenant House in any city that needs one. Because so many do need them, and because it costs money to run these sanctuaries, Father Bruce Ritter will be out of town for the next several weeks.

The 57-year-old Roman Catholic priest began Covenant House 16 years ago. It was, in a sense, inadvertent. It has become his life's work.

Teaching theology at a local college in 1968, Ritter was delivering a sermon to some students about the need to help others. He was asked bluntly why he didn't take his own advice. Ritter's reply was to resign and move into a tenement apartment on New York's drug- and crime-ridden lower East Side.

His neighbors repeatedly broke into the apartment and stole anything that could be sold, including Ritter's clothing. When, as he put it, the economic imbalance had been redressed, they left him alone. Until one night, when six teenagers knocked on his door and asked to stay the night.

The next morning, four others turned up. They never left. All had been victimized by pornographers and addicts who prostituted them. The Franciscan priest's tenement apartment became the first Covenant House.

Today, Covenant House comprises three connected buildings on Manhattan's west side, several blocks from Times Square. It is supported by private contributions (94 percent) and government funding (six percent). Of every dollar, 63 cents is spent on programs for Covenant House's young victims; 13 cents goes for administrative costs and 24 cents for fund-raising expenses. Covenant Houses spent $18 million last year.

The 15,000 children a year the organization provides with temporary refuge barely make a dent in what is recognized as a perhaps insoluble national tragedy.

Of the 1.5 million youngsters who run away each year in the United States, 400,000 don't return home. Estimates put the number of teenage male and female prostitutes at anywhere from the tens of thousands to 2.4 million. Almost a million child abuse cases are reported annually, and "kiddie porn" is an industry valued at a billion dollars a year.

Covenant Houses at best are fishnets that scoop out of the depths too few, sometimes too late. It is, simply, better than nothing.

When a child comes to a Covenant House, he or she is interviewed. If a minor, the parents must be notified. However, if abuse is suspected or alleged, the child is not forced to return home. If necessary, medical treatment is provided by four doctors, two of whom are full-time.

The youngster is told that, to stay, rules must be obeyed. Alcohol and narcotics are forbidden. The curfew is 9:30 p.m. They must be back at Covenant House on time. Young mothers must be indoors at 8 p.m. Three meals a day are served in the cafeteria. Movie tapes are shown in the afternoons on a large-screen TV thanks to a donated VHS video recorder.

Donated clothing replaces the garb the youngsters arrive in and, for job interviews, appropriate clothing is provided.

More than 250 staffers and about 60 volunteers work in the Manhattan Covenant House program. In Houston, where some 90 youngsters are cared for daily, the staff is smaller.

Father Ritter bases himself in New York, but he is travelling now, on a fund-raising tour. Any city can ask for his advice and help, a spokeswoman here said, but the priest must be invited.

DEAR ABBY

Grandma has dog dress for dinner

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: My randpa died, so Grandma came to live with us right after the first of the year. We have a bulldog named Tuffy, and Grandma isn't used to dogs. Anyway, whenever Tuffy comes around, Grandma makes a face and turns her head the other way. She spends most of her time in her room, but she always comes out to have dinner with the family.

One day last week she gave me a pair of pants she had knitted for Tuffy, and she asked me to please put the pants on him because she thinks it's disgusting to see him run around "naked." Abby, all dogs are naked and nobody cares.

Well, I put the pants on Tuffy and he didn't like it one bit, but it made Grandma happy. Mom and Dad say it won't hurt to put the pants on Tuffy when Grandma comes out of her room for dinner.

What do you think of this weird problem? — KEVIN (AGE 10)

DEAR KEVIN: I think I know who wears the pants at your house — and it's not Tuffy. Unless you want to pick a bone with Grandma, put the pants on Tuffy when she's around.

DEAR ABBY: I just turned 18 and my boyfriend is 22. We both work. We decided to live together, but my parents do not approve of the idea. They think if we are going to live together we should be married first.

Abby, neither of us is ready for marriage yet. Besides, when I get married I want it to be for keeps because my religion looks down on divorce. What do you say? — ST. LOUIS READER

DEAR READER: You are wise to realize that you aren't ready for marriage. But I know of no religion that "looks down" on divorce that doesn't also look down on fornication.

DEAR ABBY: Two days ago I made one of the most important decisions of my 26 years. I quit my job.

The reason: I was outnumbered by smokers. Out of 50 people employed at this company, only three were non-smokers. Imagine that! I worked for eight hours a day in a room that was 11-by-13 feet with three two-and-a-half-pack-a-day smokers.

Abby, except for their smoking, these people were friendly and pleasant, but I just couldn't deal with the smoke.

It was a shame that I had to leave a job I liked so much, but I know I was smart to leave. — PROUD OF MYSELF IN HAVERHILL, MASS.

DEAR PROUD: I don't know the laws in Haverhill with regard to a person's right to work in a smoke-free office, but had you lived in Minneapolis, San Francisco, Palo Alto or Sacramento, you would not have had to quit your job. The smokers would have had to quit smoking in the office.

DEAR ABBY: A housewife asked for a witty comeback when she was asked, "... and what do YOU do?"

I say, "I have 10 kids, a husband and an invalid mother-in-law living with me, and you ask me, 'What do I do?'!" — DOING PLENTY IN BOSTON

(Getting married? Whether you want a formal church wedding or a simple, "do-your-own thing" ceremony, get Abby's booklet. Send $1 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped (37 cents) envelope to: Abby's Wedding Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

College helps meet bilingual teacher need

FINDLAY, Ohio (AP) — Rosa Garcia remembers the difficulties of growing up where English wasn't spoken at home as she tried to get by in an American society where no other language was accepted.

Now a senior in the Bilingual-Multicultural Program at Findlay College, Miss Garcia works to help other Mexicans and Mexican-Americans avoid such problems.

"I know more or less how they feel," Miss Garcia said. "We never spoke English in my home until I was 12. When I first came to the schools in this country, I had to struggle."

Studies show that by the year 2000, Hispanics will be the largest minority group in the United States. By then, the three-year-old program at Findlay College expects to be graduating substantial numbers of bilingual teachers.

Already, a pipeline of sorts is developing between the 1,200-student liberal arts school and Houston, where demand for bilingual teachers is acute.

Bilingual education involves teaching students various subjects in two languages — English and their native language.

"We're getting in on something right when the need is there," said Jean Nye, who heads the college's program. It is one of two bilingual-multicultural programs in which graduates are certified by Ohio. The other is at Ohio State University.

Some Hispanic pupils are found in most big-city public schools. Of 8,000 non-English-speaking students in Ohio, an estimated 50 percent are Hispanic, said Jennifer Bell, a consultant in the Ohio Department of Education.

Ms. Nye got her idea for the program from a class she created and taught called "Practical Spanish for Elementary Teachers and Social Workers." She also focused her doctoral dissertation on teaching English in junior high schools in Puerto Rico.

"I'm a person who believes that language has to be useful," Ms. Nye said. "Even if our students that we train here are not in a special bilingual program, they'll be better teachers."

In the three years the program has been offered, enrollment has grown from seven to 64 majors. Most are pursuing Spanish with English, but other languages can be paired with English, Ms. Nye said.

"The main purpose of bilingual education is teaching English," she said.

In 1980, the Ohio Legislature passed a law that bilingual teachers should be certified. Concern over such programs grew from a 1974 U.S. Supreme Court decision that educational help had to be provided for students whose first language was not English. Currently, 23 states certify bilingual teachers.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

No treatment effective against asbestosis

Dear Dr. Solomon: I have listened to a lot of people talk about the dangers of working with asbestos, but I've never heard anyone say anything about how to treat the disease if a person gets it. What kind of treatment is best for a person who has been exposed to asbestos? — Marie, Dover, N.J.

Dear Marie: The reason you have not heard much discussion about the best form of treatment for asbestos-related diseases is that there is no effective treatment. Dr. Kaye H. Kilburn, director of the Barlow Occupational Health Center in Los Angeles, says that asbestosis, a disease that results from inhaling particles of asbestos, generally progresses even after the person is no longer exposed to the asbestos.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I used to think that my husband's snoring was funny, but I don't think so anymore. Is there any treatment for snoring and, if so, which would you recommend? — Mrs. G.P., Indianapolis, Ind.

Dear Mrs. P.: Snoring is a sign of obstructed breathing, and I don't think anyone would consider that funny. As for treatment, that depends on the underlying condition.

I have been able to help many of my patients stop snoring simply by treating their allergies; once the allergy is under control, the snoring stops. Other conditions, however, may require surgery. If your husband has not brought his snoring to the attention of his physician, I suggest that he do so. If it is bad enough for you to be disturbed by it, it should not be ignored any longer.

Dear Dr. Solomon: As I get closer to my 70th birthday, I am thankful that I am in good health, and maybe the problem I want to ask you about is a minor one. I find that I have to urinate more often as I get older, and if I don't get to a bathroom right away, I might even wet myself a little. Is this something I have to accept, or should I see a doctor about it? — Mr. F.A., St. Petersburg, Fla.

Dear Mr. A.: No patient of any age should accept any condition without trying to determine its cause and doing something about it, and I would urge you to see your physician.

The condition you describe is not uncommon in older individuals. Dr. Barry D. Weiss, of the University of Arizona Health Sciences Center in Tucson, explains that older persons feel the need to void when there are smaller amounts of urine in the bladder than is the case with younger persons. At the same time, once the urge to urinate is experienced, there is a reduced ability to delay it. Therefore, the person must get to a bathroom within a relative short time.

Both behavior modification and drugs have been used to treat this problem, and I suggest you discuss it with your physician.

For Arlen, Schenectady, New York: Chenodiol, a drug that dissolves cholesterol gallstones, has been approved by the Food and Drug Administration. However, it is recommended that the drug be used only for patients who might otherwise require surgery.

Neil Solomon, M.D., is a columnist for Los Angeles Times Syndicate. If you have a medical question, write Dr. Solomon at 1726 Reisterstown Road, Baltimore, Md. 21208. Dr. Solomon will not give personal replies but will answer as many questions as possible in his column.

Young boy masters use of 'bionic arm'

DALLAS (AP) — When Linda Brown asked her 4-year-old son Darren to "take off his arm" in a grocery store, she naturally attracted some stares.

And when she left a MacDonald's restaurant once carrying the arm in her hand, she suddenly realized she was the object of some horrified glances.

Darren, a bubbling, bright, brown-haired boy who was born without a left forearm, wears a mechanical prothesis that, his doctors say, makes him a technological wonder.

"He's the $6 million dollar 4-year-old," his mother boasts.

Darren's arm, nick-named "Jaws,", is a long way from "bionic," said Jim Thelen, director of the prothesis department at the Texas Scottish Rite Hospital for Crippled Children.

It has no feeling and the hand can only operate in two directions — open or closed, Thelen said.

But it is a sophisticated piece of equipment that is fitted to very few young children, Thelen said.

"Darren is a first for us. This arm has been used in some other parts of the country on children, but I doubt anyone this young," he said.

Linda Brown, a Delta Air Lines flight attendant, said she had hopes that Darren would have the same capabilities that a former test pilot had in the television show, "The Six Million Dollar Man."

The arm, Thelen explained as Darren stacked tiny blocks with his left hand, "is a long way from a bionic arm, if you consider a bionic arm to be like what you see on TV. We are a long way from that — maybe 60 or 70 years."

The mechanical, "myo-electric" arm is attached to Darren's elbow. A strong muscle contraction opens the hand, a mild contraction closes it.

"Eventually, we hope to have some feeling in them," Thelen said. "That will be the tremendous development of the century (in artificial limbs)."

Mrs. Brown said she is hopeful Darren will constantly use the rechargable arm.

"He's only had it a couple of days and he's getting so good at it, it's almost automatic," she said. "It's just great. I'm so excited, I can't stand it."

If Darren's case is a success, Thelen said, doctors will begin giving children protheses at even younger ages.

About 75 percent of all children reject protheses.

Survey: Today's teens more conservative,

By the Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — Today's teenaged students have a higher regard for their parents, worry more about nuclear war than about pollution and strongly believe in the effectiveness of American education, according to results of a national survey released Tuesday.

The "Mood of American Youth" survey is composed of responses from 986 students, ages 13 to 18, from around the country. The survey indicates that teens are far more conservative, increasingly share the concerns of adults and are less self-centered and rebellious than their counterparts in the '60s and '70s.

"They don't indulge in slogans and shouts. The ever-challenging and critical posture of the early 1970s youth has all but vanished," said Scott D. Thomson, executive director of the National Association of Secondary School Principals, which sponsored the survey. "They also show a strong desire for traditional home and family life," he said.

In 1974, when a similar survey was conducted, computer technology played a small role in the lives of teen-agers, said Janis Cromer, spokesman for D.C. School Superintendent Floretta D. McKenzie and author of a small book about the survey. The new survey, however, showed that computers have become increasingly relevant to teens.

The survey, conducted by National Family Opinion Research Inc., found that teen-agers think computer courses are only slightly less important than mathematics and English.

Video games finished third on a list of 16 hobbies, and 16.7 percent said that they want a computer-related job.

However, students at a news conference called to announce the results Tuesday said that the bewildering possibilities of the computer age are partly responsible for their stronger ties with their families.

"The world is getting more and more advanced, something to be a little scared of," said Donald Migliori, a 17-year-old senior az West Cranston High School in Cranston, R.I.

"The family is a good thing. It feels comfortable to go back to them for help, to ask questions," he added.

The survey said that between 64.5 percent and 82.6 percent of teens agreed with their mothers on such subjects as drugs, education, politics and sex, while between 53 and 75.6 percent agreed with their fathers' views on the same topics.

"We feel closer to our parents, and they have made some attempt to be closer to us," said Jill Neptune, a senior at Shawnee Mission East High School in Shawnee Mission, Kan.

Slightly more than 13.3 percent said they plan to marry right after high school. Only 5.7 percent of students surveyed 10 years ago felt the same way.

American education has been assailed by experts and has become a hot political issue, but the students surveyed do not share those concerns.

"Seventy-five percent gave their schools an A or a B in effectiveness, and less than 5 percent gave their schools a D or an F," said Cromer. "Eighty percent said that their teachers were up to date and effective."

Howard Miller II, a senior at Ballou High School here and the student member on the D.C. school board, agreed. "We do have pretty good schools and they have prepared us to be successful. They have helped us to develop leadership skills as well."

Koch...America's best known mayor

NEW YORK — As Mayor Edward Koch might ask — how's he doing as Media Mayor?

Good, good. He's America's best-known mayor. He's America's only mayor with a number one best-seller. Naturally, it's his autobiography. With unerring simplicity, it's called "Mayor." The publisher printed 180,000 copies; the public may well demand more.

Mayor Koch says his tale is a lesson in living politics. His fellow politicians consider it livid proof that Edward I. Koch is the only politician in America smart enough to write a dumb book. If literary royalties and political notoriety were what he wanted, he succeeded.

City officials here say the book is an unrelenting and short-sighted attack on everyone who spent more than 30 seconds in the same room with the mayor, now into his second term. (He lost the race for governor last year after reneging on his sworn word at Jerusalem's Wailing Wall never to seek any other office. Voters granted his wish. He also called rural upstaters "hicks" in a Playboy interview before the election.)

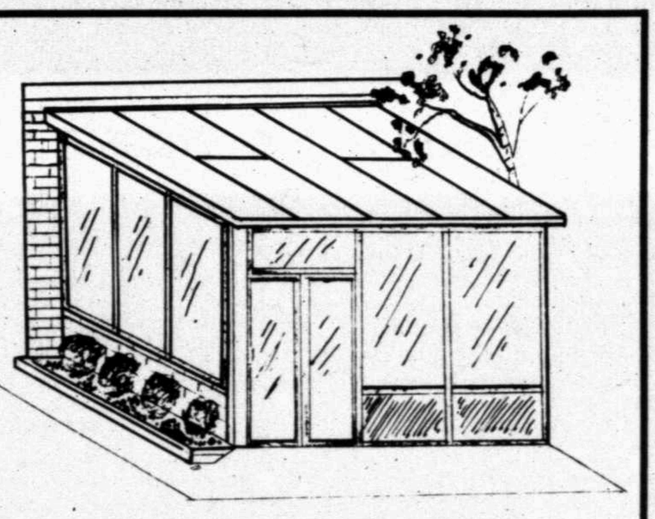

Since the book's publication on Feb. 13, its author has been expressing surprise that anyone is offended by "the truth," at least as he remembers it. The disagreements arose because hardly anyone recalls the incidents as the mayor put them down in his breezy, highly-readable style. Inevitably, he recalls putting down everyone, never losing an argument, and always turning out to be right.

But lately, Koch has been backpedalling into almost apologizing – which he denies, arguing that the truth needs no apology.

The mayor is not apologizing for himself or for the truth, of course. He is hitting the national publicity circuit to explain how so many overly-sensitive souls have misinterpreted his memoirs.

And as more potential readers see and hear New York City's media mayor, they become buyers of his book. If anything, Mayor Koch is entertaining – as he talks about himself or tells tales about his fellow politicians from presidents to his own aides.

And the media moguls are gobbling up the mayor. His publicity schedule almost puts those of the Democratic presidential candidates to shame. Koch has managed to govern this complex city and lionize himself. He taped a TV spot with Mr. T of "The A Team" to warn against housing discrimination. He taped a plea for information about a missing employee of a local TV station. That and his national book promotion marathon for just this week and last puts him into the jet set celebrity class.

Football league outlaws 'shakin', quakin' in end zone

By BEN WALKER
Associated Press Writer

No more wild, arm-waving rampages. Goodbye to creatively choreographed gyrations. See you later to shakin'-quakin'-really wave makin' dances.

From now on, any of those routines during a National Football League game seen by thousands of fans at a stadium and watched by millions at home on television is a five-yard penalty, thank you.

Owners of 26 of the league's 28 approved a new rule recently that has nothing to do with tackling, blocking or passing. Instead, it outlaws any "prolonged, excessive or premeditated celebration by individual players or groups."

Leave the high-flying splits to the cheerleaders. Football players roll in the mud and play football. No more fun for Virgil Seay and the rest of the Washington Redskins' "Fun Bunch."

"It was felt that any such demonstrations by players that were perceived as attempts to draw attention to themselves and could provoke opponents were not good," says Joe Browne, a spokesman for the NFL. "But the intent is not to prevent normal reactions."

Now, try telling Mark Gastineau, a beefy, 6-foot-5 defensive lineman for the New York Jets, what a "normal reaction" is.

Gastineau, who has appeared in tender television commercials with his mom, goes a little beserk when he tackles opposing quarterbacks. His "sack dance," basically, features him ferociously pumping his arms above his head while spinning around. Basically.

"I've done it out of excitement," says Gastineau, calmly and coolly. "There's going to be a lot of upset fans out there. Fans have told me they like to see my dance."

Opposing players, however, haven't always been so thrilled.

Last year, in a game against Los Angeles, Gastineau went blasting into Rams quarterback Vince Ferragamo, sacked him and then went into his dance. Jackie Slater of the Rams, who had let Gastineau escape, shoved Gastineau from behind.

And then Gastineau hit Slater — and on and on. It was a few minutes before the free-for-all ended and order was restored.

"That (the fight) may have been premeditated," Gastineau, in Arizona searching for Indian artifacts, said Thursday.

"Jackie Slater and I are very good friends," he said. "We talked at the Pro Bowl (the NFL's All-Star game). He said I got him there by getting him so much attention."

Gastineau's prediction for the new rule: "It will never last. It's a hard rule to enforce.

"I can't wait until a referee shows up at the Meadowlands before 60,000 roaring Jets fans and I get excited and go into my act, and he calls a penalty. I feel sorry for the guy."

Well, what is legal?

"Spontaneous acts are OK," says Don Shula, coach of the Miami Dolphins and a member of the NFL's competition committee. "If Gastineau jumps one time, it's fine."

Also within the rule is "spiking" the football, as in slamming it into the ground out of pleasure.

But, what about the Philadelphia Eagles' past practice of "rolling seven?" That's where delighted teammates gather in the end zone as if in a craps game, and then the player who scored the touchdown rolls the football like dice.

Hmm.

And what about Billy "White Shoes" Johnson of the Houston Oilers? After scoring he stands with the ball aloft, body and knees a-quivering, much like the "California Quake" perfected by Butch Johnson of the Dallas Cowbys.

Color that area "gray," says Browne.

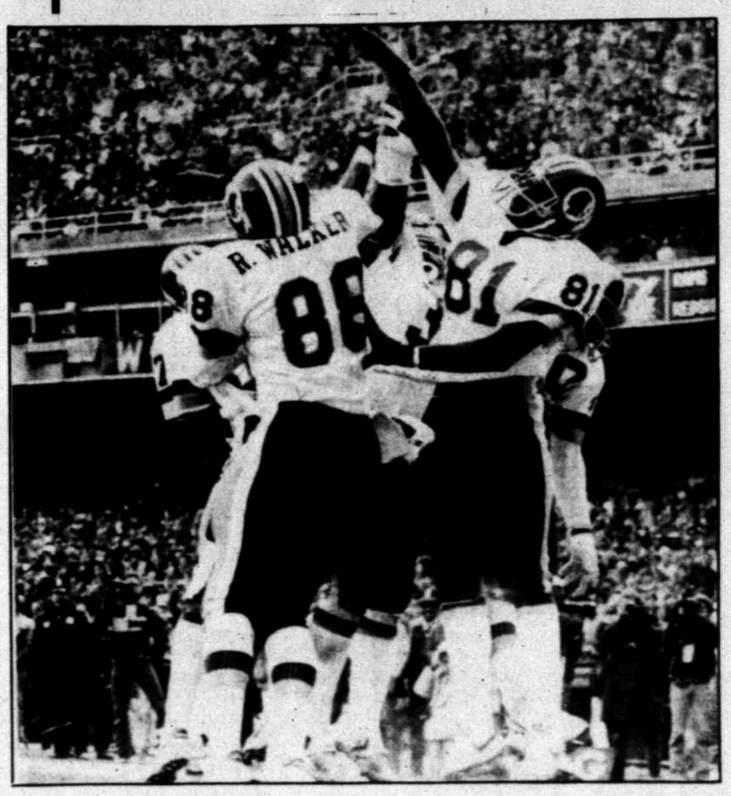

"Perhaps we might have more discussion on the rule before the season starts and then we'll probably also see next season what is black and what is white as the season goes along."

But back to Virgil Seay. He and the Fun Bunch, a group of usually six, meet in the end zone after a touchdown pass and stand in a circle, rocking back-and-forth, before all leap and join in slapping hands in the air in a group "high five."

No more of that.

"I'm really upset about this," says Seay. "It's ruined my day."

"Why are they picking on us? It seems like they're trying to take the fun out of pro football."

Washington Redskins' "Fun Bunch" celebrates in endzone after player makes touchdown. The NFL recently outlawed any "prolonged, excessive or premediated celebration by individual players or groups."

Pilot's skills key to survival

Hearst Feature Service

Despite the extent of computerized and redundant flight deck equipment on most airliners today, pilot skills are the key to survival in near-crash or crash-landing situations, a survey of airline incidents reveals.

"The pilot is in a potentially life-critical situation at all times," said Mel Hoagland, chairman of the Air Line Pilots Association (ALPA) Task Force on Cockpit Automation, in an article in the April issue of Popular Mechanics. The article examines a half-dozen crash situations, including interviews with the pilots and passengers involved. In each case, a pilot's quick-thinking, determination or ability to work quickly and closely with his crew made the difference.

Among the skillful landings examined are:

— The emergency-landing of an Air Canada jet that had run out of fuel. The pilot and crew used experience and raw muscle to guide the plane safely to an abandoned Canadian Air force landing strip.

— The safe return of a United Airlines DC-8, whose landing gear door wouldn't open. In this instance, the pilot not only brought in the plane without injury, but also kept the passengers fully informed and calm.

Ford Mustang a classic

DEARBORN, Mich. (AP) — The paint is nicked and part of its convertible top is missing, but the first Ford Mustang has taken its place as an automotive legend, right beside the likes of the Model T, the Auburn and the curved-dash Oldsmobile.

The sleek white Mustang with black interior was enshrined Thursday at the Henry Ford Museum, 20 years after it took America by storm in the spring of 1964 with its sporty long hood, high-performance engine and low price.

"This turned out to be a very significant car," said Randy Mason, transportation curator of the museum. " ... In 20 years of historic perspective, the Mustang has fared quite well."

The museum, one of the world's largest displays of automobiles, is operated by the Edison Institute and is not affiliated with Ford Motor Co.

The 1965 Mustang was turned out while Detroit was still the world's undisputed auto capital. The import tide and gasoline lines were a decade away, a federal tax rollback had put extra money in millions of pockets and the market was swelled by baby boom buyers looking for something sporty and inexpensive.

With the sticker price about $2,500, a buyer, with one-third down on a three-year loan at 10 percent interest, could drive away in a Mustang for $50 a month.

The car was credited as the creation of Lee Iacocca, the Ford president who now is chairman of Chrysler Corp., and Mason said it "brought a whole new automotive concept to this country."

Iacocca, always the showman, scored one of the Motor City's biggest public relations coups when he and his car were on the covers of both Time and Newsweek magazines on the day of the Mustang's official introduction — April 17, 1964.

Ford took 22,000 orders the first day.

The museum's car — the first one made and the first one sold — rolled off the Dearborn assembly line March 9, 1964, as the first of 418,812 Mustangs sold in the first 12 months of production. That was a worldwide record for a newly introduced car until topped in 1977-78 by the Ford Fairmont with 422,690.

Mustang collectors refer to the earliest cars, such as this one, as 1964½ models to distinguish them from later 1965s. The first cars had generators instead of alternators and smaller wheels.

Most early Mustangs came with carpeting at no extra cost, which was rare in those days, but radios cost extra.

The first car came equipped with automatic transmission and a 260-cubic inch V-8 engine. Another small-block V-8, Ford's workhorse 289, became the standard engine for the 1965 cars in the fall.

Ford pushed many combinations of carburetors, high-compression cylinder heads and valve arrangments so the Mustang could be souped up at the factory or later by the owner.

Imitators included the Chevrolet Camaro, Plymouth Barracuda and AMC Javelin. The car spawned hundreds of Mustang clubs and also inspired songs, such as soul singer Wilson Pickett's "Mustang Sally."

More than half a million Ford Mustangs were sold in 1965 and as many in 1966.

By last month, more than 4.8 million had been sold from assembly lines here and in Metuchen, N.J., and San Jose, Calif. Dearborn is again the only place where the Mustang is made.

Teacher draws fame with doodles

NEW BRAUNFELS, Texas (AP) — Welcome to Baker's World.

Baker's World is populated by cowboys and Indians, Lincolnesque high school principals and stubby coaches, Marines and band leaders and unicorns.

Getting to Baker's World is not easy.

"Hey," Bob Baker calls to one of the New Braunfels High School guidance counselors, "is this scratch paper?"

It is. Baker picks up a pencil. Baker draws. Baker's World appears, right in the counselor's office.

Art was on Bob Baker's mind when he went to Southwest Texas State on a football scholarship in the early 1960s, the kind of art developed by a high school kid who commmunicated bettter with a doodle than a paragraph.

"In the beginning, I went to college to be an artist," he said. "But when I started, that transition period was coming in with that modern art — you know, where they threw paint at the walls and painted with earthworms."

So Baker got out of art — formally — and into teaching. Seventeen years later, he's the New Braunfels offensive line coach, a history teacher and the high school's poison pen.

Few people escape the barbs of Baker's doodles, from statuesque principal John Turman — drawn stoop-shouldered to look like Lincoln or an Old West gunslinger — to 5-foot-6 track coach Lew Simmonds, often sketched in munchkin-like dimensions.

Band director Wayne Tucker has been a recent target, especially after he fell off the director's stand. A glassy-eyed, dazed Tucker is a regular resident of Baker's world.

Another regular is assistant principal Charles Engler.

One morning, Engler had to bodily remove a student from the building. By that afternoon, a cartoon of Engler, with boxing trunks and gloves, had appeared.

Mostly, Engler is portrayed as a Nazi, complete with the pointed Prussian helmet.

"Insulted? Heavens, no," Engler said of Baker's handiwork. "I collect them. It's been a real joy in my life.

"I think he could make a living with his sense of humor. He's terrifically talented, and everybody out here gets a kick out of it."

Baker never had formal art training, and most of his drawings never mature past the pencil-on-sketch-paper level.

But the drawings on old tests and leftover mimeograph paper are everywhere. Engler and Turman have them in their offices, at home; there's always one on the bulletin board in the teachers' lounge.

A folder full of Indians, cowboys, faculty members and Marines rides in Baker's briefcase as well.

"Here's some of them in here," he said, digging through grade books and pens and loose paper. "A lot of then are just lost or thrown away."

But then, that's what usually happens to doodles.

"I really don't consider myself an artist — artists are people like (Western artist Charlie) Russell, Norman Rockwell, the old masters," he said. "I doodle. Sometimes it comes out looking like somebody."

Like the German teacher who took one too many backward steps in his barn and fell out of the loft. A sketch of the teacher, with tools, nails and boards sailing out of the barn after him, is pinned to the bulletin board in the teacher's lounge.

But Baker's World has grown beyond the teacher's lounge and beyond the end of Baker's pencil. He has drawings in the Marine Corps magazine, on the New Braunfels' football program.

His unicorn, which usually is staring down the befuddled mascot of New Braunfels' football opponent, has greeted fans the last couple of seasons. It, along with the other projects, also has earned him a little money on the side — "Since the governor decided we didn't need a raise after all," he said.

"But it's basically an escape mechanism," he noted. "I found myself doing it at our (fall sports) banquet — and it was just about the best banquet we ever had. I was just doodling on the program."

In 1886, following a shipwreck off the west coast of Africa, an infant child became part of a family of apes who raised and protected him.
As he grew, he learned the laws of the jungle and eventually claimed the title, Lord of the Apes.
Yet, years later, when he was returned to civilization, he would remain uncertain as to which laws he should obey... those of man... or those of the jungle.
Now, the director of "Chariots of Fire" captures this epic adventure of a man caught between two different worlds.

Honoring Gielgud makes colleagues feel good

LONDON (AP) — Sir John Gielgud is turning 80, and in a city that takes its theater seriously, a crescendo of reminiscence is building.

Two books are being readied for publication to coincide with galas in Gielgud's honor around his birthday on April 14, and colleagues of the great British stage and screen actor are happy to recall his performances of the classics, the moments they shared on stage and his impact on actors 40 years his junior.

Ronald Harwood's "The Ages of Gielgud," a compilation of reminiscences about the actor-knight, will be launched at a dinner at the Garrick Club, the famed actors' watering-hole of which Gielgud is a member.

Pavilion Books, publishers of Gyles Brandreth's pictorial history, "John Gielgud: A Celebration," will hold a birthday gala at the Old Vic Theater, where Gielgud made his first stage appearance in 1921 as a herald in "Henry V."

The understudy and eventual successor to Noel Coward in "The Vortex" and "The Constant Nymph" in 1927, Gielgud began his Shakespearean successes in 1929, when he joined the Old Vic company to play Romeo, Richard II, Marc Antony and Macbeth.

In 1928, Gielgud made his first Broadway appearance in "The Patriot." He did "The Importance of Being Earnest" in 1947, and co-starred opposite the late Sir Ralph Richardson in David Storey's "Home" and Harold Pinter's "No Man's Land" in the 1970s.

Gielgud last appeared on the London stage in 1978 in Julian Mitchell's "Half-Life," his 126th theater role.

He won an Academy Award in 1981 for his performance as the fastidious valet opposite Dudley Moore in the movie, "Arthur." His other films have included, "Julius Caesar," "Richard III," "The Charge of the Light Brigade," "Lost Horizon," "Providence," "The Wicked Lady" and "Scandalous."

Gielgud also gave a critically acclaimed performance in the PBS miniseries, "Brideshead Revisited," playing the small but crucial part of Charles Ryder's father.

LONDON (AP) — Princess Diana has boosted another new fashion craze — this time, seamed black stockings with bow designs embroidered on each heel.

Today's British tabloids are full of close-up photographs of the decorated heels, together with puns about royal footnotes, fancy legwork and the 22-year-old princess being "the royal seam-stealer."

Diana, expecting her second baby in late September, wore the stockings on a visit Thursday to a London police training college.

Two papers immediately jumped on the fashion bandwagon with offers to readers of free pairs of stockings "just like Diana's." The stockings sell for about $14 in London stores.

Other trends the princess has spawned include the high-neck blouses and bobbed hairstyle she favored before her 1981 marriage to Prince Charles, and the black bow tie and white tuxedo she wore to a charity pop concert last month.

Christine Craft

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Christine Craft, who quit her job as a television newswoman to sue a Kansas City, Mo., station for sex discrimination, says she'll be returning to the tube this summer — covering the Democratic National Convention.

Ms. Craft, 39, says she's been hired to cover the San Francisco confab for Convention Television Network of Washington, D.C.

"It will be the official television program for the Democratic Party.... We'll be interviewing and talking to all of the candidates and delegates," she told a news conference in Omaha on Thursday.

Ms. Craft quit her position at a Santa Barbara, Calif., TV station last year to pursue her discrimination suit against Metromedia Inc., which owned KMBC-TV when she was fired as its co-anchor for what she claims were discriminatory reasons. In August, a jury in Kansas City awarded her half a million dollars in damages; Metromedia recently appealed the case again and is seeking a third trial.

SAN CLEMENTE, Calif. (AP) — Former President Richard Nixon is returning to his former seaside residence here, but not to stay — just as part of a four-day visit to Southern California from his New Jersey home.

A private reception for Nixon was planned for late this afternoon at La Casa Pacifica, the coastal home the former chief executive used as his Western White House. The home now is owned by Gavin Herbert, co-chairman of the Richard Nixon Presidential Archives Foundation.

Until Tuesday, Nixon will be a guest at the Rancho Mirage desert estate of Walter Annenberg, former ambassador to Great Britain, Nixon aide Nick Ruwe said Thursday.

Nixon's arrival in San Clemente was to begin with a tour of a 13-acre site chosen for construction of a library to house his papers, videotapes, presidential gifts and other mementos. The library is expected to cost $25 million, to be raised by a private foundation.

He is also scheduled to speak to about 150 people Sunday at the Eisenhower Medical Center in Rancho Mirage, Ruwe said.

T.G. Sheppard

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Visits from country singer T.G. Sheppard have been good medicine for a 15-year-old boy kept alive on a hospital respirator since September, the teen's mother says.

Sheppard drove in from nearby Gatlinburg this week for his third visit to James "Chuckie" Weeden.

Sheppard was appearing at the Tennessee Valley Fair in Knoxville in September soon after Weeden was admitted to St. Mary's Medical Center for a chronic lung disorder. Weeden wrote a note to nurses saying he wished he could see Sheppard perform, and they helped arrange for the singer to stop by.

Grace Weeden says the entertainer's visits have improved her son's spirit, but he's lost weight because he won't eat solid food.

During his latest visit Wednesday, Sheppard, whose hits include "Do You Want To Go To Heaven," "Last Cheater's Waltz" and "I Feel Like Loving You Again," gave the youngster a silver dollar and said, "I want you to eat so you can put on some weight and hold that lucky silver dollar."

LAKE FOREST, Ill. (AP) — Mary Hardwick Wood, widow of Gen. Robert E. Wood, long-time president and board chairman of Sears, Roebuck and Co., died Thursday at her Lake Forest home. She was 102.

MILDENHALL, England (AP) — Henry Brooke, Lord of Cumnor and a former home secretary, died Thursday at age 80.

Brooke rose to political prominence in 1958 as the ruling Conservative government's minister of housing and local government. He also served as secretary from 1962 to 1964.

Steel workers go on strike

METZ, France (AP) — Steelworkers went on strike in France's northeastern Lorraine district today, unrolling huge coils of steel across roads to block traffic and daubing paint on pictures of President Francois Mitterrand.

Workers from a plant near Marseille on the Riviera also staged demonstrations, temporarily blocking access to a major trade fair.

The workers are protesting a government plan announced Thursday to revitalize the nation's troubled steel industry, which is losing some $1.8 billion annually.

The plan calls for cutting up to 25,000 of the industry's 90,000 jobs by attrition and early retirement by 1987.

After news of the plan was released, demonstrations were held in several steelmaking cities — the most violent in Rehon where workers clashed Thursday with police and were repulsed with tear gas.

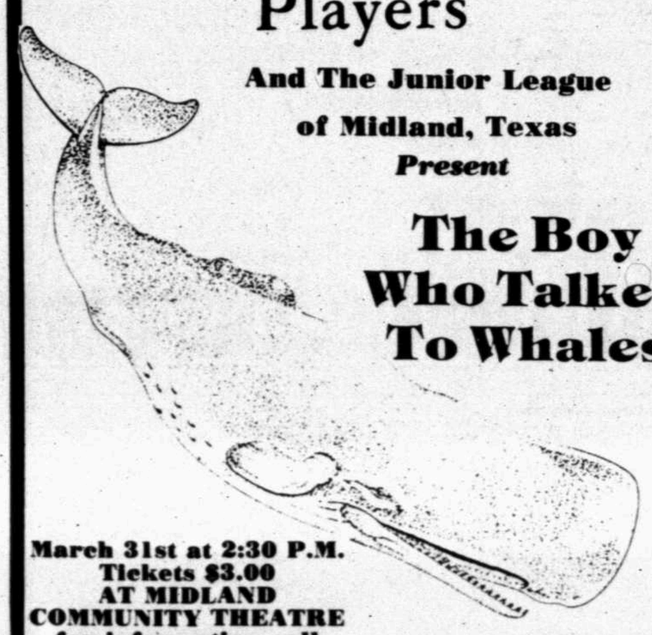

Workers also sealed off a plant at Neuves-Maison today by moving heavy vehicles across the entries and dumping loads of ash on the roads.
