Arafat missive controversial

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — PLO chief Yasser Arafat signed an ambiguous statement aimed at opening direct talks with the United States, but his spokesman at the United Nations speedily denied that it represented recognition of Israel's right to exist.

The daily artillery duels on the outskirts of the besieged capital resumed this morning and a Palestine Liberation Organization communique said guerrillas repulsed an Israeli landing attempt on west Beirut's Mediterranean beach. In Tel Aviv, the Israeli military command said there was no landing attempt.

Israeli warplanes raided Beirut twice Sunday, bombing the city's besieged Moslem sector for the fourth consecutive day.

Shortly before the second raid Sunday night, a Republican member of a U.S. congressional delegation, Rep. Paul McCloskey of California, showed reporters a document signed by Arafat that said: "Chairman Arafat accepts all U.N. resolutions relevant to the Palestinian question."

McCloskey told a news conference in the "no man's land" between Moslem West Beirut and Christian East Beirut that the statement applied to U.N. Security Council resolutions 242 and 338 recognizing Israel's right to exist.

McCloskey first said an Arafat aide had written on the back of the document a list of U.N. resolutions that presumably included 242 and 338. But when an Associated Press reporter who saw the backside of the document noted there was no reference to resolution 242, McCloskey said, "No, it's not (listed), but he (Arafat) kept saying all of them, including 242."

The PLO's U.N. observer, Zehdi Terzi, said that was not true and pointed out that 242 refers to the "refugee question," not to the Palestinians specifically. He told reporters in New York that Arafat's endorsement applied to U.N. General Assembly resolution 181 calling for separate Palestinian and Jewish states.

The head of PLO's mission to the U.N. offices in Geneva, Daoud Barakat, said the document signed by Arafat does not represent a change in the PLO's position. "Arafat has said this a hundred times, but the Americans wanted it on paper," he said.

The Israeli Cabinet said the McCloskey-Arafat announcement "joins a long line of announcements in the past aiming only to obtain propaganda advantages."

But Egyptian president Hosni Mubarak said in a speech in Cairo that Arafat's statement was "a very good opening for a peaceful and good solution" of the Middle East crisis.

McCloskey said he believed Arafat's statement was sufficient to warrant U.S. recognition of the PLO. But the State Department said it would study the record of the Beirut meetings, and the White House recommended "extreme caution."

Press keeps Beirut hotel alive, well

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Windows are crisscrossed with masking tape to keep them from shattering during a shelling. Barrels block off streets on each side of the building to keep car bombs away. The executive office suite contains a stock of assault rifles.

The Commodore Hotel, home base for 175 foreign journalists covering Israel's invasion of Lebanon, is thriving despite the war in west Beirut where Palestinian guerrillas are trapped by encircling Israeli forces.

"The Commodore operates better in war than in peace," said Yussef Nazzal, 39-year-old Jordanian proprietor of what has become a virtual international press center.

The lobby, often strewn with television equipment, is a gathering place for members of Lebanon's parliament, officials of the Palestine Liberation Organization, relief workers, doctors, prominent Lebanese businessmen and the few remaining western diplomats left in the besieged Moslem sector of the capital.

Hotel policy requires that guns and grenades be checked at the reception desk, where Teletype and telex machines clatter almost around the clock.

An unspoken agreement has kept the Commodore a neutral zone, relatively free of interfactional shootouts and shelling exchanges. But the seven-story, 150-room hotel has not been entirely immune from violence, as a notice posted near the elevators indicates.

"In case of shooting around the hotel, the management insists that neither television cameramen nor photographers attempt to take pictures. This

Is it legal?

Which animals may be kept within Midland city limits and which ones may not is a confusing issue. The animal control says one thing, the game warden says another and the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department in Austin keeps changing its mind. This 4-year-old, 300-pound lioness, named Annie-poo, is kept by her owner, Larry Hamilton, at his place of business inside the city limits. It's pretty much all right with everyone because Annie-poo is kept in a comfortable and safe pen — and she is treated well.

Haze surrounds animal laws

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

Animals are divided into categories such as game, non-game, fur-bearing, wild, protected, endangered, exotic, livestock and domestic — sort of.

Actually, there isn't much of a question about what's domestic. Cats and dogs are domestic.

Livestock is anything out on a farm, such as cows, horses and chickens, according to Dalton Byerly, director of Midland Animal Control.

Domestic animals are allowed in the city limits. Livestock is not. Sort of.

A type of "grandfather clause," according to Byerly, applies to persons in newly-annexed districts who possess livestock at the time of annexation. But when those livestock die, they can't be replaced with other livestock.

"Animals are anything that has a vertebrae," Byerly said. "Humans are animals."

ALTHOUGH THERE are no specific city ordinances dealing with facilities in which animals may be kept, or any actually dealing with what type of animal can be kept except those specified under state and federal laws or in dealing with the treatment of the animal, Byerly did say that "no animal can be in the city limits free."

The laws pertaining to which animals can be legally possessed as pets, or as a business, and how they must be housed, or leashed, are conflicting and confusing. While the animal shelter says one thing, the game warden says another. And the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department, some say, doesn't even know.

"If the state says you can have them, then we say you can have them under conditions set by the City of Midland," Byerly said. "We don't have anything written down. We just look at them on an individual basis — when we know they exist."

Usually, when the animal control is notified that someone has 16 cats in his house, the person who calls is the one who is aggravated by them. Although the rule-of-thumb limit is that a person cannot possess more than four cats and four dogs in the city, if a person had 100 dogs and cats and no one ever knew about it, the animal control wouldn't receive a report. Therefore, the animals obviously would not be bothering anyone and nothing would be done about them.

"WE AREN'T going to go out there and make these people get rid of them unless there is a situation and if the conditions are such that it's not advisable (to have that many pets). Then we'll enforce the law," Byerly said.

If the animal control is notified of a

Tax cuts touchy subject

WASHINGTON (AP) — Democratic leaders in the House are showing reluctance to leave many fingerprints on election-year spending cuts and tax increases, hoping Republicans will take the political lumps for the legislation President Reagan wants.

Several Democratic-controlled committees in the House are continuing work this week on legislation to carry out the mandated spending reductions and tax hikes called for in the budget blueprint Congress enacted earlier this year.

In the GOP-controlled Senate, meanwhile, debate resumes today on a constitutional amendment to balance the budget.

Later in the week, the Senate is expected to consider a $12.2 billion package of spending cuts.

That follows Senate action last week on a measure to raise taxes by $99 billion over three years and trim spending on Medicare, Medicaid and welfare programs by another $17.5 billion.

That bill has gone to the House, where Democrats are indicating that the tax-writing Ways and Means Committee may do little more than bring the basic Senate-passed tax package to the House floor.

"I don't pick up a lot of movement for Democrats to be creative on this package," said Rep. Leon E. Panetta, D-Calif.

House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., was more blunt, saying the tax measure should be "a Republican bill" and it should be up to the GOP to force compliance with the Republican-drafted budget resolution.

In addition, some House committees already have demonstrated a reluctance to live up to the cuts mandated for them.

The House Post Office and Civil Service Committee voted along party lines last week to endorse only $113 million in spending cuts over three years instead of the $3.2 billion mandated.

Panetta, who heads a Budget Committee task force overseeing the progress of meeting the mandated budget cuts, said Republicans will be given a chance to offer an amendment on the House floor to achieve the higher level of cuts, including a 4 percent ceiling on cost-of-living adjustments for more than three million federal retirees that the committee declined to consider.

Overall, Democrats hope to force Republicans to vote one at a time on several controversial cuts, but GOP leaders would prefer one overall vote, in part to shield their members from having to vote on cuts in popular programs in a campaign season.

The emerging Democratic strategy had Republican leaders fuming last week and predicting another series of bitter battles on the House floor to win the spending cuts the administration is seeking to hold down deficits.

One element of the spending cut package that is expected to pass the House easily this week is a measure to trim veterans' programs by $550 million over three years, including a mortgage fee of one half of one percentage point on most Veterans Administration-backed loans — an average fee estimated at about $285 — as well as relatively minor changes in various veterans' benefit programs.

It is expected to clear the House because it is attached to a provision providing a 7.4 percent cost-of-living increase for veterans' pension and compensation programs.

In other action this week, the House is expected to approve a $177.1 billion defense authorization bill that accommodates the president's planned military buildup.

Proposed 1982-83 city budget roughly one-third higher

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

The city's proposed budget for 1982-83 reflects almost a 25 percent increase in its General Fund and is one-third higher overall than the present budget, according to figures in the proposed budget that was filed late Friday afternoon with the city secretary's office.

The General Fund, which is that supported by tax dollars, calls for spending $29.9 million next year as opposed to the current budget of $23.3 million. Adding in the airport, water and sewer funds — which are sustained by user fees and not property tax dollars — the total budget hits $48 million next year. The current operating budget was set at $34.7 million.

City Manager James Brown has outlined the increases in a memo to Mayor G. Thane Akins. The budget and proposed tax rate will be announced by the mayor during a news conference at 10 a.m. Tuesday in City Hall Council Chambers.

Brown's memo accompanies the budget on file and states that it represents a 7 percent cost of living increase.

For 1981-82, city employees received a 12 percent cost of living raise Oct. 1, 1981, and another 5 percent hike April 1, he noted.

"The General Fund shows an overall increase of $6,554,084," Brown said in his memo.

Of that amount, "$800,000 is due to extending the 5 percent cost of living raise, which was given in April 1982." Another $2,680,000 is for hiring 90 new employees, including the cost of their fringe benefits.

Of these 90 new workers, 30 will be additional police officers and 26 will be additional fire department personnel. The latter are being added to staff the two new fire substations in north Midland which should be completed by the end of the fiscal year, according to a City Hall spokesman.

Another $1,200,000 is for the 7 percent cost of living increase proposed for Oct. 1, related Brown's memo.

"Other than personal services, there are increases totaling $1,874,084. Of this amount, $1,250,000 is in hire of equipment with the major increases being in streets, sanitation, police and fire departments. Bulk of the remaining $624,000 is in the liability insurance premiums, traffic, sanitation, streets, police, fire and MidTran for operational costs other than personnel and hire of equipment."

Brown suggested in his memo that to balance the General Fund budget, the council could increase garbage fees by 16 percent, raise ad valorem taxes by 4 cents and take $357,000 from the unappropriated General Fund balance.

Current tax rate is 39.5 cents per $100 valuation. The proposed tax rate would be 43.5 cents.

Administration insists Salvadoran rights improved

WASHINGTON (AP) — Administration officials say El Salvador's military still commits serious human rights abuses, but they argue that enough progress has been made for President Reagan to certify this week that U.S. aid should continue.

The killing of non-combatants suspected of supporting or sympathizing with leftist insurgents was one of the problems cited by U.S. officials in both interviews and internal State Department documents. Another was the Army's failure to take prisoners in battle.

Elliott Abrams, assistant secretary of state for human rights, said the political violence in El Salvador remains "horrible," but that recent improvements justify Reagan's certification.

Congress requires the president to certify every six months that the Salvadoran government is making "a concerted and significant effort to comply with internationally recognized human rights" or cut off U.S. military aid, which totaled $81 million this year.

Reagan signed the first certification last January. The second one is due by Wednesday.

Meanwhile, The Washington Post said in today's editions that Deane Hinton, the U.S. ambassador, reportedly urged Salvadoran President Alvaro Magana in San Salvador to put a stop to torture before severe damage is done to U.S. public support for El Salvador.

The Post said Hinton reportedly made his plea to Magana last month after U.S. officials learned that a volunteer with the humanitarian group Green Cross had allegedly been tortured in May by the National Police.

The U.S. embassy also knows of several other documented cases of torture involving various government security forces, the paper quoted official sources as saying.

Abrams, in an interview, pointed to the disciplining of some brutal military officers and a downward trend in the numbers of political murders as reasons for certification.

This year, the number of political killings has averaged about 300 a month by the U.S. Embassy's count and slightly less than 500 a month by count of church-related groups.

Those figures compare to many months in the 2½-year-old civil war when more than 1,000 political killings were reported. A total of about 34,000 non-combatants have died in the violence, with human rights groups blaming the government for most of the deaths.

Midlander dies in accident

STERLING CITY — A 29-year-old Midland man died late Saturday night when the car he was driving overturned on U.S. 87 10.5 miles south of here.

Jesse Michael Lewallen of 1010 W. Missouri Ave. was traveling south on U.S. 87 when the accident occurred at 11:25 a.m., Department of Public Safety investigators said. They said his car ran off the left side of the roadway, ran through the median, crossed the northbound lane and overturned, coming to rest in the northbound lane.

Lewallen, who was partially ejected from the vehicle, was pronounced dead at 12:15 a.m. Sunday by Sterling County Justice of the Peace Ed Edwards.

Lewallen's body was taken to Johnson's Funeral Home in San Angelo and then to Newnie W. Ellis Funeral Home in Midland, where services are pending.

The accident was investigated by Trooper James Lange of San Angelo.

Animal yesses, nos often very confusing

cruelty case involving animals, "we don't go out and write them a citation," Byerly continued. Often, he added, the owner cannot afford to keep the pet properly, and the animal control will help him provide for his pet.

"If he's a good owner, responsible and shares with his pet, then we'll find him food or a longer chain," he explained. "We want to work with them and educate them. We don't want to penalize the animal. We're going to kill it if we can't find it a home."

But as far as "undomesticated" animals go, that's another story.

Larry Hamilton keeps a 3-year-old, 400-pound lioness named "Annie-poo" at his business on the Garden City Highway, inside of the city limits. Annie-poo's massive paws are declawed, but her massive teeth remain intact in her massive head.

SHE IS well cared for, has plenty of room, a stone-and-wire inside-outside shelter that is provided with a heater for the winter months, a fence around that, a bowling ball that she bats around like it was rubber because she destroys rubber balls, and a bite that is ten times worse than the bite of a dog, according to her owner. She's been vaccinated for distemper and rabies, she eats a healthy 15 to 20 pounds of raw chicken or meat a day, she's happy and she is used to living with people, not other lions.

"She knows she couldn't make it on her own," Hamilton said. "She's used to human contact. She's just a feline pet."

And she is legally kept in the city limits.

"I wish we didn't have a lion in the city limits," Byerly said. "But he (Hamilton) is in compliance with the city. The facility is good; the lion is declawed.

"If they have the facility for it, following the conditions set by the city, then they can have them (wild animals). But they better know what the conditions are before they buy it."

Easy enough, but who knows what the conditions and laws really are?

Mike Kuhn keeps two seven-week-old raccoons in the city limits. He said he bought them at a Midland pet store, where they were obtained from a ranch in Iowa where some 500 raccoons are raised.

ONE DAY HE said he was walking his raccoons in a small park on Cuthbert Avenue off Big Spring Street when he was approached by two animal control officers. After asking him where his leash was — he didn't have one — and telling him to get one and not return to the park with his pets, the officers gave him some papers pertaining to restrictions for, not raccoons, but dogs.

Two weeks later he said he was walking the raccoons unleashed and was stopped by two other animal control officers.

"They were real friendly," he said, so he told them about his earlier experience. "They asked me where I'd been stopped before, and I said, 'right here.'

"They told me that it was fine with them if I didn't have a leash and that the other two officers were out of their jurisdiction.

"It's real confusing," he added. "Everybody says something different."

According to another Midland raccoon owner, the animal control said it was legal to have a raccoon if it is a "domestic" one — one that was raised in captivity and whose parents were raised in captivity. Her raccoon is apparently "from the wilds," so she doesn't want to be identified.

SHE SAID SHE found the then-tiny raccoon in the arms of a boy on a motorcycle. When she asked him where he obtained it, he told her in the woods. Maybe he did and maybe he didn't, but she paid him $75 for it.

"He was going to kill it," she said. "I've got it in with a litter of kittens. The mother cat washes her and cleans her and taught her how to use the litter box. She'd nurse her but the raccoon is bigger than she is.

"We've got three German shepherds and a tiny dog and she plays with them. She's as tame as she can be.

"It's not fair," she continued. "If a hunter kills a mother raccoon, it's a misdemeanor to pick up the orphan. They (the animal control) told me they could literally take it away from you and kill it."

"I don't care if they are hand-raised or not, raccoons and skunks are the most dangerous," Byerly said. "They are more susceptible to having rabies."

"If you keep a raccoon for five months, or 107 days, and it doesn't have rabies, it probably won't have them, unless it gets bit by a rabid dog or something," the unidentified woman said her veterinarian told her. But, she added, vaccinations are not given to raccoons because they might infect the raccoon with rabies.

"WE DON'T know how vaccines affect skunks or raccoons," Byerly said. "There hasn't been a vaccine developed that immunizes them."

Skunks and raccoons are listed as fur-bearing animals, according to Gary Mitchell, game warden. In order to possess a fur-bearing animal, a person must recieve a fur bearer's permit from the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department in Austin.

"You can't have them as pets," Mitchell said. "You also have to be in business."

The permits, he explained, are issued only if the person is raising the animals for the purpose of selling them, and even then, the person only can sell them during the proper season.

"It'd take about 30 to 40 days to get all the information you need about these laws," he added. Indeed.

According to an amendment to Section 1, Subchapter B, Chapter 63, of the Parks and Wildlife Code, provided by Byerly, "Sec. 63.103. SALE OF CERTAIN LIVE ANIMALS. (a) No person may sell or possess for the purpose of sale in this state a living armadillo, squirrel, skunk, bobcat, porcupine, raccoon, wolf, coyote, bear, fox or opossum."

That means a person could only possess such animals mentioned above as pets, and not as a business venture — at least that is what it says on the surface.

BYERLY SAID he doesn't have the date that the amendment, labeled House Bill 952 in the upper right-hand corner, was passed. Also, he pointed out that the amendment includes several "this-section-does-not-apply-to's" and total understanding of the amendment would come only after study of the total act.

If it even then could be understood.

According to Rita Kellogg, of Pets Galore, which happens to sell raccoons, "they (Texas Parks and Wildlife Department) need to get their act together.

"When I called Austin, there was stuff that they thought was legal that I knew was illegal," she said.

According to Ms. Kellogg, skunks have been banned, for sale or ownership, for two years. She said that she recently called Austin and was told skunks were legal to own as pets. She said she told them they were the ones who had notified her that they were illegal a couple of years ago.

"I called Austin about getting a fresh-water sting-ray for a display," she said. "Then I asked them about piranhas. I know that they are illegal. The guy on the phone said some are and some aren't. But he didn't know which ones were which."

The raccoons sold at Pets Galore are raised on a fur farm in another state, Ms. Kellogg said. "These animals have been raised in cages for generations. That's legal. But who is going to know if it is wild or domestic?"

The unidentified woman with the supposedly wild raccoon agreed.

"You know, all animals get along together," she said, referring to the way her raccoon has adjusted to life with a litter of kittens, a cat, two German shepherds and a small dog.

"It's the people that don't get along with them. I think there are certain circumstances where the law says something — but you might want to question the humanity of it."

Proposed budget increases General Fund by 25 percent

through water bills to the customers, Brown said the budget shows a "projected increase in expenditures of $5,913,553. Here again is a 7 percent cost of living and provision for 10 new employees."

He outlined the seven largest increases coming in: electric power costs, $225,000; water charges by the Colorado River Municipal Water District, $630,000; debt service for bonds that will be sold for constructing a sewage disposal system, $4,034,750; new employees, $200,000; payments to General Fund, $137,596; cost of living increase, $155,000; and miscellaneous, $261,207.

"To balance the water and sewer fund, we are projecting a $3 per month increase in residential sewer rates and a like percent in commercial rates," the city manager stated. Budget for that division totals up to $13.1 million.

The airport fund, also self-sustaining, reflects an increase in expenses of $382,825 next year. Brown pointed out that fund still reflects a surplus of $1,161,205.

Major increase in expenses in that division amounts to about $200,000 in personal services for six new employees and cost of living hike. Total budget amounts to $3.05 million.

"The airport is facing the need for larger capital expenditures and the extra funds will reduce the amount of bonds that would need to be sold to complete the projects," Brown stated.

Those projects he referred to include expansion of the parking lot and revising the road system around the Terminal building.

"The increases in the size of the budget as presented are necessitated by the growth of the city and our efforts to maintain our basic services that we feel the citizens expect of the city government," Brown concluded in his memo.

A public hearing on the budget and proposed tax rate will be held at the City Council's Aug. 24 session.

Men rob Odessa fast food restaurant

ODESSA — Two men wearing ski masks over their faces and armed with pistols robbed an Odessa fast food franchise of an undetermined amount of money late Sunday, police said.

Kevin Thelps, manager of the Kentucky Fried Chicken franchise at 2217 West County Road, told police the two men, armed with pistols, entered the franchise through the back door about 10:45 p.m. Sunday. They ordered two of the store's employees to lie on the floor and then ordered Thelps' wife and child into the walk-in refrigerator.

They then ordered the two employees lying on the floor into the refrigerator.

Another employee, seeing what was occurring, fled the store by a side door and summoned police. Meanwhile, the robbers took an undetermined amount of money and fled on foot.

One of the men was described as 24 to 29 years of age, 5 feet, 7 inches to 5 feet, 9 inches tall, weighing 150 to 170 pounds. He was wearing a multicolor white, blue and red ski mask, black gloves and carried a silver-plated automatic pistol.

The other robber was described as 24 to 29 years of age, 5 feet, 9 inches to 6 feet tall, weighing 170 to 190 pounds. He was wearing a black ski mask, black gloves and carried a black-colored pistol.

California man in serious condition after being struck twice on highway

A 25-year-old Santa Ana, Calif., man was listed in serious condition this morning in the critical care unit of Midland Memorial Hospital where he was undergoing treatment for injuries suffered when he was struck by two vehicles just after midnight on U.S. 80.

Hospital officials said Santos Uriel Navarro was being treated for a fractured skull and contusions.

Police reports indicated Navarro was standing in the traffic lane of U.S. 80 a little more than a half-mile east of Loop 250 when he was first struck by an unknown vehicle which threw him into the path of a vehicle driven by Calvin Kevin Gillette, 21, of 1404 W. Louisiana Ave.

The first vehicle to strike Navarro left the scene and police officials say there are no clues as to the identity of the driver.

In other police reports this morning, Lea Evert Masters of 3202 Princeton reported the theft of a diamond wedding ring valued at $12,000.

The woman told police the ring was taken between 6 p.m. last Monday and 10:25 p.m. Sunday as she was moving into her residence from her previous address at 2808 Princeton.

Odessan dead after traffic accident

JUNCTION — An Odessa man is dead and another man is in critical condition in a San Antonio hospital following a motorcycle accident 15 miles east of here early Sunday.

Peter A. Warrington, 35, of Odessa was pronounced dead at the scene, according to the Department of Public Safety.

Todd N. Torrey, 23, of Abbeville, La., was transported to Methodist Hospital in San Antonio where he was listed in critical condition this morning.

According to the DPS, Warrington was driving east on Interstate 10 when the motorcycle ran off the side of the road and overturned.

Thunderstorm chance 30 percent

The Midland area can expect a 30 percent chance of thunderstorms tonight and again late Tuesday afternoon. Tonight's low could reach 70 while Tuesday's high should edge into the mid-90s.

Southeasterly winds at 5 to 10 mph tonight should continue through Tuesday.

Sunday's high of 97 fell six degrees short of the 103 record in 1974. The overnight low of 70 easily avoided the brisk record 62 set in 1976.

Possible thunderstorms could push monthly and yearly precipitation totals past 3.21 and 9.49 inches.

Journalists keep hotel booming during bombing endangers not only their lives but those of the guests and staff. Those not prepared to cooperate may check out of the hotel."

The notice stemmed from a street battle early this month between two leftist Lebanese militias over a vacant apartment house nearby.

The gunmen turned the weapons on photographers who tried to film the battle and a machine gun mounted on a pickup truck was aimed into the lobby, where patrons dived behind couches.

"It is, without doubt, one of the most dangerous places in the world," said Nazzal.

He explained in an interview that he stays on in west Beirut because he likes challenges and because of long-term friendships with journalists.

"I'm thinking about having new T-shirts made to thank the press for saving west Beirut. The people here have the press to thank for saving their lives, and I satisfied my ego that I helped the press function to make that possible," said Nazzal, who acts as banker, press adviser and psychiatrist to his guests.

Nazzal said he has won over most local militias and guerrillas to the idea that the press coverage has helped stave off an Israeli onslaught into west Beirut through descriptions and pictures of destruction.

"It has been a slow process but most of them now accept the press," he added.

But in the early days of Israel's siege of the Palestinian enclave that began June 13 there were fears that extremist guerrilla factions might seize the journalists as hostages.

Those fears led to the collection of 10 AK-47 rifles, 14 ammunition clips and a Beretta submachine gun in an alcove of Nazzal's office in the hotel.

The most difficult task, however, has been keeping the journalists and 75 hotel staffers fed and finding enough fuel to keep the lights on and the Teletypes and telex machines running.

"When the invasion started I could see it coming to Beirut and I thought of two things that were needed to keep this place alive: cash money, in the millions, and fuel," Nazzal said, adding that he has loaned his journalist clients four million Lebanese lira ($750,000) to date.

The cash also gives the Commodore

Yussef Nazzal, 39-year-old millionaire proprietor of Beirut's Commodore Hotel, right, stands behind the hotel's reception desk with desk clerk Michael Zgheib. Home base for 175 journalists covering Israel's invasion of Beirut, the hotel thrives despite the war in West Beirut, where Palestinian guerrillas are trapped by Israeli forces.

priority on the black market, where steaks and fresh shrimp can still be purchased, even if at four or five times the normal price.

At times during the siege, Israel and its Maronite Christian allies in east Beirut have cut off the water and power and blocked fuel and food trucks from entering west Beirut.

Nevertheless, a truck carrying 3,700 gallons of diesel oil for the hotel generator got through the blockade recently and the hotel staff brought in more by canvassing office and apartment buildings and buying up unused stocks at up to eight times the pre-invasion price of about 80 cents a gallon.

A few hotels remain open but none caters to the foreign press like the Commodore, which charges $70 a day for a room and still has a touch of class — a concert pianist named Anwar Maatouk — and a sense of humor — a gray African parrot named Coco who whistles a perfect imitation of an incoming shell.

Third World countries to discuss media troubles

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Western culture's dominance of what the people of the Third World read and watch will come under fire again at UNESCO's second world cultural conference opening in Mexico City today.

Sources close to the U.N. Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization said the United States and other Western countries won't be able to prevent the two-week, 100-nation conference from adopting recommendations that governments do more to regulate cultural pursuits, especially in the field of communications.

The conference will see a renewal of the drive by Third World countries, which UNESCO Director-General Amadou Mahtar M'Bow of Senegal has fostered, for a "new world information order" to replace Western news agencies by national news agencies in Asia, Africa and Latin America.

Governments of the developing countries charge that their news media are dependent for news on Western agencies that ignore their special needs. They also charge that the Western media, in reporting from their countries, concentrate on news unfavorable to them and ignore favorable news.

Clements, other Southern governors meeting

HILTON HEAD ISLAND, S.C. (AP) — The governors of nine Southern states and Puerto Rico got down to work today on a pile of resolutions on topics ranging from the insanity defense to President Reagan's "new federalism."

The Southern Governors Association's annual conference, which convened on this resort island Sunday, tackled energy issues this morning, including the management of nuclear waste and the future of coal.

The afternoon was devoted to education topics, among them a "report card" on Southern states' progress toward quality education.

Texas Gov. Bill Clements has said he will unveil a national energy policy Tuesday. Last week, Clements, a Republican, said the Reagan administration's energy policies were "in limbo."

But South Carolina Gov. Dick Riley says the key issue at the meeting is the economy.

"I think it's the dominant issue that all face as governors," said Riley, who chairs the association this year.

Riley told a news conference Sunday his state continues to have "very high unemployment" and, "The textile industry is suffering."

Small businesses are "dead in the water or altogether dead," he said.

The governors will consider 16 nonbinding measures on such issues as the insanity defense, drunken driving, high-level nuclear waste management, and the federal role in crime control.

The $80,000 tab for the conference is being picked up by corporations or business groups, including utilities, textile companies, banks, oil companies and national retailers.

Among those attending is Sen. Ernest F. Hollings, D-S.C., who is considering a presidential bid in 1984.

Canoeists ease through the Big Thicket on Village Creek near Saratoga. Naturalist Nick Rodes, a volunteer tour guide, knows the perils and the pleasures of the 20-30 million acres of the national preserve. He spends his weekends taking canoeists down the meandering waterways of the preserve.

Big Thicket canoe guides don't lose people

SARATOGA, Texas (AP) — "The secret to guides is they don't lose their people," says naturalist Nick Rodes.

He knows the perils and the pleasures of the 2½-3½ million acres of dense forest and waterways known as Big Thicket.

Rodes was hired as a consultant about eight years ago when the area conservationists wanted to open parts of the Big Thicket up to visitors. Many of the museum's programs are a result of his work.

He was hired a few years later as museum director, but because of budget cuts the museum now employs only two people. Consequently, Rodes guides canoeists strictly as a volunteer service.

"The typical conservationists want to save land," Rodes says, "but they don't have over-the-horizon goals. Once you save it, what do you do with it? They didn't have any idea of what to do for visitors."

Work to preserve the wilderness of Big Thicket began in 1964. In 1974 it was officially set aside as a national preserve.

Visitor programs have expanded from simple hikes to combined canoe trips and hikes — and include just about everything in between. General trips are led by Rodes or Rick Puckitt. Close-up tours — catered to individual requests — are led by experts in many scientific fields: ornithology, botany, entomology, forest ecology, mycology, mamalogy, geography, geology, herpetology, horticulture and aquatic biology.

"If we don't know the answer, we will look it up," Roces says.

Rodes, who teaches advanced biology at Kountze High School, molds his guide role to suit the characters of his followers. If they want to talk, he's an entertaining and skillful lecturer. If the participants prefer to splash about on their own, Rodes contently stretches back on a sandbar, rests his head in the clasp of his hands and seems to disappear in the depths of his own thoughts.

"This is no Mickey Mouse trip," Rodes warns his canoeists before leaving the museum grounds. "There are no hot dog stands or telephones out there. Relax — that's what you want to do, I think."

Each canoe trip begins with an orientation lecture, not only filling in followers on what to expect during the eight-hour trip, but also explaining to them what the Big Thicket is, where it is and what is known about its past.

Big Thicket is roughly bounded by the Trinity River on the west, the Sabine and Neches Rivers on the east, Woodville and Lake Livingston on the north and Pine Island Bayou on the south.

The density of the Big Thicket has lured different people for different reasons.

Rodes says some of the people at Honey Island are thought to be the decendants of the "draft dodgers" of the Civil War.

Like a therapist, Rodes reverts from a direct to an indirect role. Sometimes he is silent, keeping a watchful eye on novice canoeists floundering awkwardly with submerged cypress knees. Other times he is outspoken, adding color to the trips by sharing bits and pieces of his knowledge.

But he is always there.

Two Americans kidnapped in Zimbabwe

BULAWAYO, Zimbabwe (AP) — Trackers conducting a massive air-and-ground manhunt in the bush country of western Zimbabwe were closing in today on gunmen who abducted two young Americans and four other foreign tourists, officials directing the search said.

"The noose is tightening around them," one intelligence officer told The Associated Press. He would not say what the hunters would do if they spotted the gunmen, who search officials said are threatening to kill the captives by Friday if their demands are not met.

Government officials, who asked not to be named, said the searchers on Sunday picked up the tracks of the party in the Tsholotsho tribal reserve which touches the border with Botswana. Police imposed a dawn-to-dusk curfew on the reserve over the weekend and threatened to shoot violators on sight.

Helicopter gunships, ground-attack aircraft, crack paratroopers and police with tracker dogs have joined the hunt for the gunmen, believed to be ex-guerrillas loyal to opposition leader Joshua Nkomo's Zimbabwe African People's Union.

Armed with AK-47 assault rifles, the kidnappers were believed to be forcing their captives on a brisk march through the thorn-trees and scrub that blanket Matabeleland province in western Zimbabwe, searchers said.

Government officials said the kidnappers number between six and 12 and are demanding the freedom of two Nkomo lieutenants and other unidentified political prisoners held by Prime Minister Robert Mugabe's government for allegedly plotting a coup.

The abductors forced their hostages into the bush Friday after halting their Bedford truck with a roadblock of fallen trees on a highway 40 miles north of Metabeleland's capital of Bulawayo.

Those held as hostages were identified as Brett Baldwin, a 23-year-old student, and Kevin Ellis, a 24-year-old hotel worker, both of Seattle, Wash., Australians Tony Bajzelj, 25, from Tasmania, and William Butler, 31, from Newscastle; and Britons James Greenwell, 18, a student from Liverpool, and Martyn Hodgson, 35, a civil engineer from Peterborough.

Four other foreign tourists, a man and three women, were released shortly after the kidnapping and asked to deliver a message with the gunmen's demands to authorities in Bulawayo.

The tourists were on the last leg of a motoring safari across Africa.

Men gossip most, says columnist

WASHINGTON (AP) — The capital's premier gossip columnist says the biggest gossips in town are...

Secretaries? No.

Wives? No.

"Men gossip the most," said Diana McLellan, author of a recently published book called "Ear on Washington," a chronicle of the capital's gossip network: who blabs, why and what they say.

"At least 80 percent of my sources are men," she says.

For seven years, Mrs. McLellan has been writing a sassy newspaper column about the adventures and escapades of the capital's bigshots, climbers and manipulators.

She awards Chinese woks to newlyweds, announces who is pregnant or, in her words, "expecting more than the mailman," laments for the divorced, drops hints about affairs and tells who was seen with whom at what parties or restaurants.

"It's the human condition," Mrs. McLellan said in a recent interview about her book, written for Arbor House Publishing Co. in New York. "The news is so serious here, and everyone takes himself so passionately seriously. You need gossip. It's the unifying theme."

Her book consists of 300 pages of anecdotes about the importance of image, romance, fashion, manners, protocol, dining and money for those who ride the Washington merry-go-round.

"In Washington," she writes, "your most important possession is not your Mercedes. Toss away your diamonds; abandon hope of love. Here, you cultivate your image."

"The Ear" column was first launched in 1975 by the now-defunct Washington Star. Mrs. McLellan delighted readers by dubbing The Washington Post, the "O.P." for "other paper," and infuriated Post executives and staffers by printing frequent items about their personal lives.

When the Star died last summer, the "O.P." picked up the syndicated column which Mrs. McLellan said is printed in about a dozen newspapers.

There have been some changes in the column since Mrs. McLellan went to work for the Post. Not only does she omit Post gossip, but she said each item now must be verified by two sources. Also, Post lawyers must approve each column.

Mrs. McLellan said lawyers had checked the column last October when she falsely asserted that Jimmy Carter had bugged the Blair House residence of President-elect Ronald Reagan and his wife, Nancy, prior to the inauguration. Carter was furious and threatened to sue the Post if the paper did not retract the item and apologize. The Post eventually did both.

"I couldn't explain it without getting a lot of people in trouble, including me," Mrs. McLellan said when asked recently about the incident. "But yes, the lawyers approved it."

Mrs. McLellan said she and her assistant get more than 50 phone calls a day, "depending on the weather." Cloudy days are best, she added, and nobody calls when it rains. An answering machine keeps the gossip churning 24-hours-a-day.

Those most likely to call, Mrs. McLellan said, "are people in pivotal jobs who gossip to make a point, to give someone a hard time, to show they are indignant at special favors for those who don't deserve them."

In Washington, she said, "gossip that goes to a columnist is usually motivated politically."

What doesn't she print?

"Nothing that makes people feel creepy when they read it, like tragedies about children," she said. "And I don't think I should be the first person to let someone know her husband is having an affair."

Mrs. McLellan is a short woman most identifiable by her curly blonde hair and distinct British accent. She was born in Leicester, England, the daughter of a British military officer and moved to Washington in 1957 when her father was assigned to the British embassy.

If you believe her official resume, she has worked as a poodle portraitist, a dress designer, a saleslady, a telephone operator and a homes fashion reporter.

Burn victim undergoing operations

GALVESTON, Texas (AP) — Rachel Schultz, a 7-year-old girl severely burned when a Pan American jetliner plowed through her Kenner, La., neighborhood, is "bouncing back and forth between reality," a hospital official here says.

The little girl was burned over 80 percent of her body and now is undergoing a series of operations at the Shriners Burn Institute here to remove the damaged tissue.

"She's going to go through a lot of bouts of being a very sick child before she makes it ... if she makes it," said nursing director Jim Winkler.

Doctors have said burn victims like Rachel have about a 50-50 chance for survival.

"She gets delirious, then she's cognizant, then she's delirious, then she comes back again," Winkler said.

"She can be compared metabolically to a long-distance runner who can't stop running. That's the demand that this thing is putting on her body. She is just running and running and running and can't stop," he said.

Rachel was flown here July 11, three days after Pan Am Flight 759 crashed shortly after takeoff. Rachel's 11-year-old sister and 153 other people were killed in the disaster.

Skin severely burned by the jet's fuel is being replaced with tissue from cadavers to hold in body fluids, reduce the chance of infection and buy time until the donor skin can be replaced with grafts from Rachel's scalp.

"About 20 percent of her 80 percent has been replaced with her own skin. The rest is cadaver," Winkler said.

The cost to treat a burn victim averages about $250,000, but the bill is paid by Shriners.

Q.1 — Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠95 ♡A105 ◇Q642 ♣Q983
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	Pass	1 NT	Pass
2 ♡	Pass	?

What action do you take?

A. — You fulfilled your obligation with your first response. Now you should retire gracefully from the auction. There is no reason why you should give a false preference to two spades — hearts should be as good a contract, or better, than spades. Pass.

Q.2 — As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠A ♡J7 ◇KJ92 ♣AKJ1073
The bidding has proceeded:

West	North	East	South
Pass	Pass	Pass	1 ♠
1 ♠	2 ◇	2 ♠	?

What do you bid now?

A. — Don't give up on slam too quickly. Even though partner couldn't open the bidding, he did come in freely at the two-level. Almost any hand where he has a heart control could easily produce a slam. Start your probe with a cue-bid of three spades. When you later bid five diamonds, partner should get the message of what you need for slam.

Q.3 — Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠Q105 ♡AQ6 ◇A873 ♣K97
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
Pass	Pass	1 ◇	Pass
1 ♠	Pass	1 NT	Pass
2 ♡	Pass	?

What action do you take?

A. — Thus far, you have only told partner that you have a minimum opening bid. In fact, you are maximum for your bidding to this point, with a wealth of controls, and a fit for both of his suits. The only way to advise partner of how much your hand has improved is by taking a jump preference to three spades.

Q.4 — As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠AQ95 ♡KQJ82 ♣8763
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ◇	Pass	1 ♡	Pass
2 ♠	Pass	?

What do you bid now?

A. — From a discouraging start, the auction has taken a turn for the better. Normally, we would suggest that you raise clubs now to establish a fit, but that could land you in the wrong contract — three no trump or four hearts might be the only makable game. We suggest a bid of two spades. Depending on partner's rebid, you can then raise clubs. That shows the three-suited nature of your hand, and will allow partner to proceed naturally.

Q.5 — Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠95 ♡KQ7 ◇AJ83 ♣Q1087
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	Pass	1 ◇	Pass
1 ♡	Pass	3 ♠	Pass
3 ♠	Dble	?

What action do you take?

A. — Many players would now make the mistake of bidding three no trump. But ask yourself why didn't partner make that bid? The only explanation is that he has doubt about a no trump contract because his spade holding is inadequate. Since your spades cannot allay those doubts, we suggest you show your heart support. Partner will know that you have only three hearts, but the 4-3 fit could play extremely well.

Q.6 — Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠J1074 ♡K983 ◇A6 ♣AK8
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Dble	2 ♠	Dble

What action do you take?

A. — Don't hit the panic button just because you have a three-card club suit. Partner has the opportunity to introduce a major suit over the double of one club, but did not do so. Therefore, you cannot expect to have a better fit than you do in clubs. Since partner probably has five clubs for his raise and your values are prime, you should expect to make two clubs even against a trump stack.

O'Neil Ford's touch

O'Neil Ford had a way of capturing the best of the past and combining it with the best of today to give society exeedingly fine architecture.

Ford, who died last week at the age of 76, was considered by many to have been the greatest Texas architect of his day. That certainly isn't an overstatement; most of his peers sing the glories of his architectural accomplishments.

No foreigner to the Tall City, Ford teamed with Midland architect Frank Welch in the creation of such Midland landmarks as Theatre Midland and Midland Center. At the time of his death he was involved in the design of Mission Country Club between Midland and Odessa. Midland's architecture is the richer for Ford's skilled efforts.

But his design skills were praised internationally as well. The true mark of an architect's greatness — as with any artist — is in acceptance of his designs on a large scale. It goes without saying that Ford's designs have met that test time and again. Architecture, in Ford's view, was intended to conserve the past, to provide a glimpse of our heritage. His designs accomplish that goal in blending of Spanish, Mexican and pioneer Texan styling.

The National Council on the Arts had recognized Ford's greatness by declaring him a National Historic Landmark. That he was and through the numerous monuments he designed around the state and nation his memory will live on for years to come.

O'Neil Ford left an indelible mark on our society.

Evil deeds, evil men

Lots of Americans harbor romantic notions about the Irish Republican Army and the nationalist cause associated with it. But the contemporary IRA showed its true face in London recently.

The terrorist bombings that killed nine persons and wounded 52 others were criminal acts committed by criminals. Among the victims seriously wounded were children and old-age pensioners, some of whom may die. The miracle is that many more were not maimed or killed.

The "military targets" of these two attacks were a ceremonial cavalry troop on parade and a British army band playing for a crowd of tourists and British civilians, including many children.

Sinn Fein, the political arm of the Provisional IRA and the group that claimed responsibility for the bombings, declared that it had acted in defense of the internationally recognized right of all peoples to self-determination.

Self-determination? The Republic of Ireland has been a free and independent state since 1922. The six northern counties that remained an integral part of Britain did so by choice then and do so by choice now.

Even Sinn Fein doesn't deny that any plebiscite today in Northern Ireland would be won by Ulster loyalists, despite a 13-year campaign of IRA terrorism intended to drive the British out and force a union with the Irish Republic.

The London bombings may presage a renewed terrorist campaign within England itself. If so, it is probably timed to deter the Thatcher government from granting a larger measure of home rule to Northern Ireland.

Sinn Fein might want to consult the Argentines, now experts on the subject of Margaret Thatcher's resolve, about the prospects for cowing the present British government.

In the meantime, those Americans who have contributed funds for Irish nationalists in Northern Ireland would do well to consider whether their dollars are going for humanitarian aid, or terrorist bombs for evil men.

Another View:

Unlock the steering

President Reagan took office promising that prosperity was assured if only the nation applied some rigid rules to economic policy and never looked back.

You would get the same results that he has achieved with the economy if you were to lock your car's steering wheel before you headed down a winding mountain road.

Fortunately, the Federal Reserve Board, which has been left to steer the economy pretty much on its own, is slightly less rigid and far more alarmed about the devastating effect of stubbornly high interest rates.

Paul Volcker, chairman of the Federal Reserve, told Congress Tuesday that, while he is not ready to relax the growth of the supply of money, he will not tighten up any further next year.

The Fed obviously has gone beyond that, building bank reserves to allow the interest rate that its member banks charge one another for short-term loans (federal-funds rate) to fall. For the first time since December, it has reduced the interest rate that the Federal Reserve itself charges member banks.

Only time will tell, however, whether the Federal Reserve made its moves soon enough or went far enough. The Fed makes its decisions in secret meetings, and chooses carefully among a small ration of words when it talks about itself.

Still, the Federal Reserve's cautious move toward lower interest rates is the one good sign in an economy that is unraveling so fast that businessmen are abandoning the Reagan program in increasing numbers.

Unemployment keeps rising; in the steel industry, for example, one-third of the workforce is idle — a depression by 1930s standards. Bankruptcies set new records weekly. Sales keep falling, along with new housing starts.

Edward G. Jefferson, chairman of Du Pont Co., thinks the time has come to "address ourselves not to inflation but to recovery." Other businessmen urge cutbacks in defense spending and cancellation of a tax cut scheduled for next July as means of cutting the huge federal deficits that help keep interest rates high.

The White House will hear none of it. A spokesman says that the president has no fallback plan and that the administration intends to sit tight until the present plan takes hold.

If the White House will not budge, Congress must — in step with the Federal Reserve. Nothing that it does will turn the economy around smartly, but it may be able to cut the nation's losses.

Congress should challenge defense spending more vigorously. A soft economy is no proper foundation for hard-line arguments on defense. Next year's tax cut should be canceled. The money will not be used to spend America out of the recession, and would be better used to reduce the deficit and, in turn, interest rates.

Congress should ignore White House objections and raise the gasoline tax. The revenue would create construction jobs and finance useful work: rebuilding major highways.

Congress should postpone further budget cuts. Taking money out of the hands of the needy or near-needy in hard times is both inhumane and poor economic policy.

None of those actions would guarantee a recovery, but they would make it easier to steer the economy through treacherous terrain. They would unlock the steering wheel on the winding mountain road.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Quixotic Hunt blackmailer raised a stink

WASHINGTON — The person who tried to blackmail the richest man in Texas is an unlikely desperado. He may have been motivated as much by a quixotic zeal to punish the billionaire as by any desire for personal gain.

Jack Anderson

Last March, I broke the bizarre story that an anonymous extortionist had demanded a $440,000 loan from Nelson Bunker Hunt, the oil and commodities tycoon. In return for this "loan," the blackmailer promised not to report to the authorities that Hunt had arranged an $87,000 bribe to Rep. George Hansen, R-Idaho.

The indignant Hansen took the blackmail plot to the Justice Department, protesting that he had been maligned. This apparently unnerved the blackmailer. For a second letter to Hunt, signed "Gordon Warner," asked the Texas tycoon to forget the whole thing.

But it was too late; the FBI was already on his trail. So the mouse that roared at Nelson Bunker Hunt — and then tried to creep back into his hole — crawled mournfully out again and turned himself in to the federal authorities.

Arthur Greenhill Emens III, 35, is to be sentenced in U.S. District Court today. More skillful in plea bargaining than in extortion, Emens agreed to plead guilty to a single count of blackmail, in return for the dropping of all other charges the government might have brought against him.

Friends and former co-workers describe Emens as a "private person," not at all menacing, with intense brown eyes, a beard and a general look of learnedness that makes him seem too academic for the sordid business of blackmail. He was a member of the Audubon Society.

While attending Columbia University, Emens worked in Harlem as a tutor, teaching a black youth named Walter how to read. Later, in Oklahoma City, he and his wife organized a neighborhood watchdog group to protect a residential area of senior citizens. They are now sponsoring an orphan in Indonesia through the Christian Children's Fund.

In Orlando, Fla., Emens was a volunteer in the city's Big Brothers/Big Sisters program. He now lives in Winter Park, Fla.

Professionally, Emens has worked for Price Waterhouse as a tax accountant, for Cargill Investors Service in Chicago as a commodities trader and for Ming & Co. Inc. in Oklahoma City in the same capacity.

It was at Ming that he discovered the evidence that he thought Hunt would pay $440,000 to keep quiet. It involved an $87,000 profit that Hansen's wife, Connie, had made on a silver transaction through Ming.

Hunt had recommended the commodities firm to Mrs. Hansen, but had nothing to do with the transaction. And the Hansens have a legal separation of their financial affairs, as Idaho law allows.

It was also at Ming that Emens typed the two letters to Hunt — signing the one "Gordon Warner" signature with the wrong hand to throw off investigators.

Close associates of the quixotic Emens told my associate Tony Capaccio that a likely motive for his ill-starred extortion attempt was displeasure at Hunt for allegedly causing the wild fluctuations in silver prices in January 1980, which hurt many small investors.

The Hansen connection seemed to be a way to punish Hunt for his supposed sins. Emens attorney, James L. Lyons, would not comment on the case, beyond saying his client was "extremely remorseful."

More than a year after Hansen informed the Justice Department of the blackmail attempt, meanwhile, a grand jury is still investigating Emens' charges of impropriety. As part of his plea bargain, Emens agreed to give the investigators the evidence he had thought was worth $440,000.

A check of Hansen's legislative record shows no action he has taken that would have directly benefited Hunt, and the congressman is confident that no such evidence exists. But there are some people at the Justice Department who would dearly love to make a case against the rich Nelson Bunker Hunt.

As the skunk who ambled into Hunt's lawn party, Emens has succeeded in raising a stink.

CONFIDENTIAL FILE: The Liberian army, which took control of the African nation in a bloody coup two years ago, is "sorely deficient in training, discipline, command and control, and communications," wrote a U.S. official after firsthand observation of the 5,500-man army. "A gruesome illustration of the army's ineffectiveness," the official's internal report noted, "was the fact that during the executions following the ... overthrow, the soldiers were such poor shots that the victims had to be tied to stakes and fired at from point-blank range before the killers could successfully carry out their task."

— Mother Russia may rule the Soviet bloc, but the satellites' technological skills are sometimes embarrassing. For example, a recent CIA report concluded that an East German computer was "a major improvement over Soviet computer models and other previously examined Soviet computers ..." In fact, the CIA report said the East German computers might even become competitive with Western models in the Third World market.

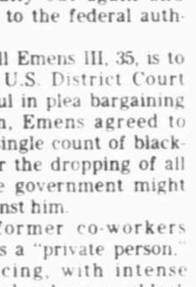
INSIDE REPORT:

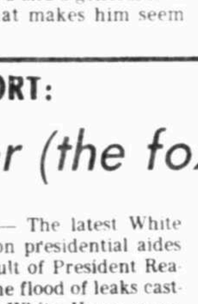
Baker (the fox) gets job guarding chickens

WASHINGTON — The latest White House gag order on presidential aides was the direct result of President Reagan's anger over the flood of leaks casting aspersions on White House counselor Edwin Meese, the president's oldest political aide.



Rowland Evans

The irony of the latest White House plumbing crisis is that while chief of staff James Baker is leading the search for culprits, Baker and his closest aides are widely perceived as the principal anti-Meese leakers.



Robert Novak

Meese has been regularly disparaged in inside stories by White House reporters with regular access to Baker and Michael Deaver, deputy chief of staff. Thus, Baker, considered a master leaker, is in the anomalous position of conducting an anti-leak witch-hunt.

REAGAN'S SS BURDEN

Accepting the advice of his pollsters and rejecting words of caution from Republican politicians, President Reagan will go to the nation to defend his Social Security policies.

Experienced politicians regard such a move as overly defensive and playing in the enemy's court. But pollsters Richard Wirthlin and Robert Teeter have convinced the senior White House staff that Democratic attacks on Social Security during the coming mid-term campaign must be anticipated with a preemptive strike by the president.

Accordingly, there has not been any real debate in the White House over whether Reagan should go to the public on the issue — only whether he should give a full-blown 20-minute televised speech or weave Social Security into some other speech. The latter course is probable, perhaps in Reagan's next press conference.

UNDERMINING REAGAN

Sen. Alphonse D'Amato of New York hinted to Prime Minister Menachem Begin during a trip to Israel that a military assault on West Beirut in defiance of President Reagan's wishes would have congressional approval.

Briefing administration officials on his return to Washington, D'Amato said he was convinced that the Israelis would have to assault the PLO redoubt in West Beirut sooner or later, despite Reagan's tough oral message to Begin two weeks ago demanding cessation of all hostilities.

D'Amato left the impression in his briefings that he had told Begin he would have important congressional support if he decides to end U.S. mediation efforts by invading West Beirut. Other senators who often support Israel's position even when it conflicts with the U.S. position are known to have given Begin similar advice.

ROSTOW BLOCKED

With the Reagan administration entering its 19th month, arms control (ACDA) director Eugene Debs Rostow is still hog-tied by conservative senators blocking his choices for two key posts, a stalemate that dramatizes ideological splits hurting the administration.

The nominations to top ACDA posts of Robert Gray, formerly key aide to Democratic senator Alan Cranston, and Norman Terrell, a major negotiator of the Law of the Sea Treaty (scorned by Reagan), have been put on "hold" by five conservative Republican senators including Jesse Helms and Steve Symms. Their grievance: Neither Gray nor Terrell comes close to sharing Ronald Reagan's skepticism about arms control.

Rostow, a neo-conservative Democrat, is so disturbed by the long delay in staffing his agency that he has hinted at resignation. He wrote a letter to Senate Minority Leader Howard Baker beseeching him to break the stalemate, but Baker so far has failed to do so. Rostow's crippled agency crawls along, a victim of Republican fratricide.

BUDGET BALANCING POLITICS

The fine hand of political consultant Arthur Finkelstein showed through President Reagan's extravaganza Capitol Hill rally for the balanced budget amendment to the Constitution.

Finkelstein, who lately gained access to the White House inner sanctum as confidential adviser to senior presidential aide Michael K. Deaver, never has thought tax reduction had much political velocity. Both the balanced budget proposal and the hoopla of the rally carry the Finkelstein brand.

A footnote: The White House ordered civil servants rounded up to cheer Reagan's speech in front of the Capitol, but some flatly refused to attend. The pleas of political appointees to recruit workers at the Energy Department, where forced furloughs and dismissals abound, were greeted with sarcastic laughter.

CHARLEY REESE

Balancing fed budget takes courage

Before the Congress is a resolution offering a Constitutional amendment that would require a balanced federal budget. It looks like the Congress will pass it.

Charley Reese

But before you get excited, let me point out a couple of ugly facts. The Congress could, if it chose to do so, balance the budget this year. Ought that not make you suspicious of people who are willing to vote for a balance-the-budget constitutional amendment resolution but who are unwilling to balance the budget?

The Congress has the sole authority in fiscal matters. It doesn't have to pay a toot to the president's wishes. To balance the budget, all it has to do is to cut $100 billion in spending or levy $100 billion in additional taxes. The Congress has always had the power to balance the budget and when it does not do so, it's not because it can't; it's because it won't.

This constitutional amendment is a bit of fairy dust to throw in the eyes of the voters. These guys will vote for the resolution which will give the states a chance to ratify the amendment. They will come home, beating their chests about having voted to balance the budget — hoping the voters will not ask them the logical question: If you are in favor of a balance-the-budget constitutional amendment, why don't you vote to balance the budget without it?

Furthermore, even if the amendment is ratified, future Congresses will evade it. They will simply shift items to the "off budget" category so that what you will end up with is a balanced "budget" with a hugh off-the-budget deficit.

To be honest, the problem is not in Washington. The reason the Congress will not balance the budget is that it believes that if it cut $100 billion in spending or added $100 billion in taxes, the voters would turn them out of office.

You have no idea how much a politician loves being a congressman and with what utter horror most of them view the prospects of having to become plain civilians again. After all, it's easy to get used to being pampered, fussed over, over-paid and over-perked.

My point is that we won't ever balance the federal budget until a majority of Americans make it clear that they want a balanced budget, in practice as well as theory. That means we are going to have to give up some federal programs, doles and other goodies.

People on Social Security, on federal pensions are going to have to say, "Okay, freeze my cost-of-living increase at 3 percent a year or eliminate it." Veterans are going to have to say, "Okay, restructure veterans benefits and give them only to those veterans who have really earned them." And so forth.

When Gerald Ford was president, he occasionally held meetings around the country in which people could come in and present requests or complaints about the federal government. One such meeting was held in Fort Lauderdale, Fla., a conservative, affluent and Republican city. I read the transcript of the entire day's proceedings. Not one single person appeared to complain about high taxes or excessive spending. Without exception, every person who appeared wanted the federal government to do something that involved spending.

That's why I say the budget will be balanced when we, the American people, make it clear we want it balanced and not before, amendment or no amendment.

To quote the famous Pogo Possum: "We have met the enemy — and he is us."

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Monday, July 26, the 207th day of 1982. There are 158 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On July 26, 1953, Fidel Castro's forces began their revolt in Cuba, attacking an army barracks in Santiago.

On this date:

In 1952, Eva Peron, the wife of Argentine President Juan Peron, died.

In 1956, Egyptian President Gamal Abdel Nasser nationalized the Suez Canal.

In 1963, more than 1,000 people were killed in an earthquake in Yugoslavia.

In 1976, Japan's former prime minister, Kakuei Tanaka, was arrested for alleged involvement in the Lockheed Aircraft payoff scandal.

Ten years ago: U.S. intelligence sources said it appeared the Soviet Union was removing most of its warplanes assigned with Soviet crews to the Egyptian air force.

Five years ago: Prime Minister Menachem Begin formally approved three controversial Israeli settlements in former Arab territory on the west bank of the Jordan.

Thought for today: Fame always brings loneliness. Success is as ice cold as the north pole. — Vicki Baum, Austrian-born writer (1888-1960).

Charles Hillman, foreground, says the members of his black professional theater touring company wanted to grapple with "mythologies and stereotypes" when they got together about five years ago. Now, however, due to financial problems compounded by new federal programs, keeping the company going may turn into a myth itself.

Going getting rougher for troupe

DALLAS (AP) — Charles Hillman says the members of his black professional theater touring company wanted to grapple with "mythologies and stereotypes" when they banded together five years ago.

Instead, the group faces the reality of dwindling financial support and the growing possibility of failure.

Since Hillman and three other Dallas performers started the Afro-American Theater Alliance, audiences have been steadily pouring in. Money, however, has not.

Many nationally known companies are strapped for funds, so a local group like the Alliance has little hope of a government grant, Hillman said.

"We've been struggling and working out-of-pocket for years," he said. "But the Reagan years have just about made this impossible. It's the marketplace. Artists are going under. Nobody can afford to do this for free."

The Alliance was intended to give people who rarely get to the theater a chance to see black artists at work.

"Rarely does a black child see other blacks performing in theater or on TV," said Hillman, the group's managing director. "But when they saw us, they saw blacks in a positive perspective — not something from 'Tarzan.'

"We wanted to be dealing with mythologies and stereotypes and show them that black theater is as legitimate as any art form."

Since the Alliance mounted its first 20 shows in 1978, production has been financially difficult, although actors receive only a small fee. The shows cost $1,000 each to mount — and all the money came out of the actors' pockets.

"One of the reasons we kept going was because of the good response we received," Hillman said.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Ultrasound benefits outweigh risks

Dear Dr. Solomon: My daughter is pregnant and her obstetrician is using ultrasound to check up on her condition. Is there any chance that this can hurt the baby? — Mrs. L.R., Montgomery, Ala.

Dear Mrs. R.: According to Dr. Charles Hohler of the University of Miami School of Medicine the benefits to be gained from ultrasound outweigh the risks. He says there is no specific reason not to use ultrasound for fetal diagnosis.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I have been breast-feeding my little boy because of all the positive benefits I've read about. But my son is suffering from a case of colic. Though it isn't constant, it is regular enough for concern. Should I stop breast-feeding him? — Q.T., Baltimore

Dear Q.T.: Speak with your pediatrician about your baby's colic and how best to handle the situation. Part or all of your baby's colic problems may be due to the diversity of your diet. It has been found, in a study by Drs. R.W. Evans, R.A. Allardryce and D. M. Fergusson at the Christ Church Clinical School of Medicine in New Zealand, that the number of infant colic attacks was significantly increased when the mother ate either fruit or chocolate.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My son is 14 years old and he does not seem to have started maturing. He doesn't talk about it but I think it bothers him. Is there any treatment for this or do we just have to wait until nature gets good and ready? — Mrs. D.P., Youngstown, Ohio

Dear Mrs. P.: The answer to your question rests in part on your son's testosterone level. If it is in the normal pubertal range, you can be assured that puberty will occur spontaneously even though it has apparently been delayed. However, if the delay bothers your son, there is treatment available that has been shown to be effective.

Dr. Melvin M. Grumbach, chairman of the department of pediatrics at the University of California, San Francisco, School of Medicine, says that treatment with testosterone can be helpful in boys with delayed onset of puberty. Similar treatment with estrogen may be used in girls with delayed onset of puberty. In my patients I have found that both girls and boys can be helped with appropriate medication.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My husband's doctor told my husband to eat more fiber in order to lower his cholesterol. Does this make sense to you? — T.Y., Philadelphia

Dear T.Y.: It has been said that fiber in general lowers the cholesterol level. Actually, specific types of fiber lower cholesterol. One type is pectin, which is found in fruits such as apples and oranges. This is the substance used to make jelly. Other types are the gums, such as guar and locust bean. Rolled oats and soybean hulls also lower cholesterol. Cellulose and wheat bran have been widely advertised as lowering cholesterol, but Dr. A. Stewart Truswell, a leading British authority, reports that wheat fiber is ineffective, and cellulose is only effective if used in very large quantities.

'Bear' Bryant to don acting shoes for debut with former team star

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — Football coaches Paul "Bear" Bryant of Alabama and Pat Dye of Auburn will move from the sidelines to the stage next week, making their theatrical debuts in the same bit part.

Each will appear in one performance during a six-show run in Birmingham of "Guys and Dolls," a musical comedy about New York gamblers.

'Bear' Bryant

The coaches-turned-actors will play a bum at the Salvation Army and will be on stage only a minute, long enough to finish a bowl of soup and walk off without saying a word.

Bryant will appear Monday, wearing his trademark houndstooth hat. Dye will appear Tuesday.

For Bryant, the part reunites him with one of his former players and the star of the show, Joe Namath. Namath played at Alabama and later was quarterback for the New York Jets in the National Football League.

"Coach Bryant won't have any lines in the play, but then he doesn't have to," said director James Hatcher. "His presence will certainly be felt. We're just delighted he's going to be with us."

•••

WARREN, Ohio (AP) — Actor Sylvester Stallone, whose "Rocky" movies helped spur new interest in boxing, watched a real-life championship fight and told the crowd he wished he had done "Rocky III" differently.

S. Stallone

Surveying 17,500 people gathered Saturday at an outdoor high school stadium to watch local hero Ray "Boom Boom" Mancini sucessfully defend his lightweight title, Stallone said he wanted to film the fight scenes for "Rocky III" outdoors.

"But the producers said we'd never get a crowd large enough," said Stallone, who portrayed heavyweight champion Rocky Balboa in his three Rocky movies, all commercial successes.

"I don't know if I'm going to do a 'Rocky IV,' because the legs are going fast," Stallone said. "But if I do, this is where I'll do it."

•••

DAYTON, Ohio (AP) — Airline executive and former astronaut Frank Borman and Sen. Barry M. Goldwater were among four aviation figures enshrined in the National Aviation Hall of Fame.

Frank Borman

They were inducted Saturday along with the late Frederick Rentschler and the late Wernher von Braun.

Borman, chief executive officer of Eastern Airlines, was honored for his contributions to aeronautics and the space program. Borman was a member of the Gemini 7 earth-orbiting mission and flew in the first manned flight to orbit the moon.

Goldwater, R-Ariz., was lauded for his national defense efforts and for promoting the development of private and commercial aviation during his five-term career. He flew 12,000 hours in 150 different types of aircraft during his military career.

Rentschler, who died in 1956, was a pioneer in the development of aircraft engines, established one of the first transcontinental airlines and helped develop the helicopter.

Von Braun, who died in 1977, directed NASA's Space Flight Center. He helped develop rockets which eventually led to manned space flight and deep space probes.

Ninety-seven flight pioneers have been honored by the hall, which was chartered by Congress in 1964.

BOULDER, Colo. (AP) — Timothy Leary, the Harvard psychologist who turned drug guru, has put a new twist on the 1960s call to "turn on, tune in and drop out."

It's now: "Turn on, tune in and please take over. The same old crew...(is) still in power," he said Saturday.

Leary said the "beat generation" of the 1950s and the hippies of the 1960s have had little effect so far on U.S. politics.

He was attending a panel discussion on the beat generation — a label applied to underground writers and poets of the 1950s — and its impact on American culture in the 80s.

Also speaking were poet Allen Ginsberg, novelist William Burroughs and anti-war activist Abbie Hoffman. They gathered before about 750 people during a conference on the late Jack Kerouac, author of 19 books, including "On the Road."

Ginsberg said the beat generation was less a social protest than "a declaration of the unconditioned mind, a visionary declaration."

"Who were we?" he asked. " A bunch of dopes sitting around trying to figure out where we were. Everyone else was a bunch of dopes, too, but they didn't know it."

Burroughs, author of "Junkie" and "The Soft Machine," said the beats hit a cultural nerve in their depiction of the alienation, restlessness and dissatisfaction of Americans in the 1950s.

SRSU gets money for scholarships

ALPINE — Conoco Oil Co., a division of DuPont Chemical Co., has given the Sul Ross State University Department of Business Administration $2,000 for student scholarships.

Dr. Edward Marcin, chairman of the business department, received the check recently from D.W. Matthews, division manager of Conoco's Midland Division. Marcin said Conoco has contributed $2,000 a year for the last eight years to the business department.

"The funds have been used by the department to award scholarships to deserving high school students," Marcin said. "This yearly contribution by Conoco helps both the students and the community and is appreciated by both."

Pilot of helicopter that killed Morrow changes mind, decides to watch film

CULVER CITY, Calif. (AP) — The pilot of a helicopter that crashed on a movie set, killing actor Vic Morrow and two children, says he has changed his mind and agreed to help review films of the stunt accident.

Meanwhile, Morrow was eulogized Sunday as an actor at the peak of his talents, who gave the best performance of his career for the "Twilight Zone" before being killed in a stunt for the movie's final scene.

The helicopter pilot, Darcey Wingo, initially refused to join federal and state investigators at a special showing scheduled today of what he called "the holocaust sequence," because he did not want to relive the ordeal.

But Wingo said he changed his mind because he wanted to learn exactly why his Bell UH-1 helicopter slammed into the shallow Santa Clara River on Friday, killing Morrow and two child actors, My-Ca Dihn Le, 7, of Cerritos, and Renee Shinn Chen, 7, of Pasadena.

Parts of the helicopter have been sent to Washington, D.C., for tests that could show if the explosions during a Vietnam battle sequence were too powerful.

'Stripper' doesn't get to see Pope

VATICAN CITY (AP) — An Italian man was confined to a hospital for psychiatric observation after he stripped to his undershorts in St. Peter's Square, climbed onto a car and demanded to see Pope John Paul II, police reported.

Enrico Negri, 35, was taken by police to San Filippo Neri Hospital after he stripped in the square where about 2,000 tourists and faithful had gathered Sunday to hear the pope's noon message, which was broadcast over loudspeakers.

Acceus Serrant, a Haitian refugee dying of leukemia, is reunited Sunday with his wife, Marie-Louina, at Skokie Valley Community Hospital, Skokie, Ill. Serrant, an employee of the hospital, was united with his wife through the aid of coworkers who learned of his grave condition.

CHICAGO (AP) — When Acceus Serrant fled from Haiti four years ago, he hoped that one day his wife could join him. She finally arrived, but only as the soft-spoken hospital janitor lay terminally ill with leukemia.

"It's like a miracle — for him, for her and for us," said Trudy Coplan, social services director at the suburban Skokie Valley Community Hospital.

The reunion Sunday came only after efforts by hospital workers and the mother of a U.S. senator to obtain State Department permission for the visit.

"I didn't think people would bring themselves out to help so much," said Serrant, 47.

Serrant came to work at the hospital after he fled Haiti in 1978 and was granted political asylum in the United States. He left his wife, Marie-Louina, and their five children in Haiti.

While in the United States, he sent every penny he could spare to his family, hoping they could one day join him.

But about a month ago, Serrant was diagnosed as having leukemia, and he began to deteriorate "very, very" rapidly, according to hospital spokeswoman Patricia Brown. Although he is receiving chemotherapy, he is not expected to recover, she said.

Because hospital workers knew about Serrant's 38-year-old wife, they began to investigate ways of bringing her to see him.

"He is a special employee, and their hearts went out to him," said Mrs. Janine Raymond, co-chairwoman of a program to help Haitian refugees. Hospital workers contacted her in an attempt to help Serrant.

An attorney for Serrant had been unable, working through regular State Department channels, to get a temporary visa for Mrs. Serrant. So hospital employees sent a letter signed by more than 200 people asking Sen. Charles H. Percy, R-Ill., to help.

Even Percy's mother, Elizabeth, was contacted — by a friend who heard of Serrant's plight from one of the hospital workers.

Mrs. Percy arranged to have someone from the hospital call one night when her son was visiting, said Scott Cohen, a Percy aide. The next day, Percy called the State Department.

The State Department at first turned down Percy's request, then relented and gave Mrs. Serrant a 60-day visa, Cohen said.

"They are often concerned about foreigners coming and staying," Cohen said. "But this was clearly a humanitarian situation."

Serrant's fellow staffers were present Sunday to greet Mrs. Serrant, who speaks no English, give her a bouquet of roses and escort her to her husband's room.

With a broad smile, she embraced and kissed him.

Resettlement workers prepare to free Haitians from Krome detention camp

MIAMI (AP) — Resettlement workers are preparing for the release of more Haitian refugees from the Krome Avenue detention camp, and one official predicted almost all would be free by Saturday.

Seventeen Haitians, some held up to 15 months, were paroled Friday into Miami's Little Haiti colony in the first release of refugees under a June 29 ruling by U.S. District Judge Eugene Spellman.

The Rev. Fritz Bazin said resettlement workers would go to the southwest Dade County camp today with approved sponsors to release at least 20 more of the 390 Haitians still being held.

The camp "could almost be empty by the end of the week," Bazin said.

Government officials said Sunday they were prepared to release all Haitians who had sponsors.

"We're telling the Haitians to pack their bags. It looks like a lot of them will be paroled into the community, although that doesn't mean Krome will close," said Immigration and Naturalization Service spokeswoman Beverly McFarland.

About 77 people are being held in Krome for different reasons, and the camp will "always have 50 to 100 people of other nationalities," she said.

Spellman ordered the release "forthwith" of about 1,800 Haitians being held in detention camps around the country. He ruled the government had failed to notify the public last fall of a change in its detention policy.

The Justice Department in September began a toughened interdiction and detention policy to stop the flow of Haitians sailing to Florida. Up to 2,000 Haitians a month arrived in southern Florida last summer.

Krome, a 15½-acre former missile base, held nearly 2,000 Haitians last year before other federal facilities were opened.

The Haitians are being resettled by Bazin and representatives of four other church agencies. Bazin represents the Bishop's Fund of the Episcopal Church in Miami.

Bazin visited the Krome camp Sunday to calm the detainees. "There's a bit of anxiety among them now," he said.

Urban cowboy fad fades, but inflated prices don't

HELENA, Mont. (AP) — "Urban cowboys" and their fancy clothes have mostly ridden into the sunset, but prices forced up by the fad have left real cowpokes facing bills up to $300 for a full set of duds.

The price of Western apparel leaped like a bronco in recent years as big-city dudes climbed into western clothes, or fancier variations like silk pants and fringed shirts.

Western wear dealers in Montana found their orders backlogged for months, sometimes a year or more. Business was as good as it was gaudy.

"It was good while it lasted — it's kinda hard to beat those figures — but we're going back to normal now," said Barbara Lindquist, manager of the Western Sportsman in Missoula.

"We're back to regular business with ranchers and true Western styles. It isn't as flashy. The fringes and the satins, that's all gone."

But not the high prices.

"Prices are not down a bit — hats, boots, nothing," said Tat Cain of Miles City Saddlery.

The dealers say a working cowboy may spend $200 to $300 on a full set of work clothes. Most of it goes on his head and his feet.

Texas civic leaders describe Amon Carter Jr. as 'institution'

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — The funeral of Amon G. Carter Jr. was planned today in this city, where mourners said the businessman, newspaper publisher and civic leader was "an institution."

Carter, 62, publisher and board chairman of the Fort Worth Star-Telegram, had a heart attack Saturday while driving on a Dallas freeway. He died at the Parkland Memorial Hospital emergency room.

Funeral services were to be at 3 p.m. today at First Methodist Church.

"Amon Carter Jr., and his father before him, was an institution in Fort Worth — synonymous with the Fort Worth Star-Telegram and the hopes and aspirations of this city," said Executive Editor Jack B. Tinsley.

Carter was a director of American Airlines, which his father Amon G. Carter helped found, and of the Texas Rangers baseball team. He also was executive board chairman of the Southwestern Exposition and Fat Stock Show, and a director of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce and Amon Carter Museum of Western Art.

Japanese flood toll at 230; 133 missing

By SHIGEYOSHI KIMURA

TOKYO (AP) — The death toll from torrential rains in southwest Japan rose to 230 today with 89 injured and 133 others still missing as rescuers pulled more bodies from muddy rubble and collapsed buildings.

Police said Nagasaki City, the hardest-hit area where 22 inches of rain fell Friday night, was still paralyzed. One-third of the city's 447,000 residents had no fuel or drinking water, and uncollected garbage was rotting on streetcorners, city officials said.

"Because of this terrible disaster, we can't predict when the city will return to normal," municipal official Mitsuyoshi Taira said. He could not estimate total damage in monetary terms.

Thousands of Nagasaki residents lined up to buy food from a large supermarket that escaped damage, but most small shops were flooded and remained closed, Taira said.

Of those known dead, 197 people were killed in Nagasaki City, 560 miles south of Tokyo. In five other states in southwest Japan, 33 were reported killed.

Police said more than 6,000 Self-Defense Force soldiers, policemen and firemen continued search-and-rescue operations for people feared buried under mud from overflown rivers and more than 1,200 landslides.

The search for victims is expected to take days or weeks because of massive amounts of displaced mud.

Eyeglasses: A most spectacular history

ST. LOUIS (AP)—Although eyeglasses to aid vision were invented in Europe about 1287 A.D., it wasn't until the early 1700s that frames with temple pieces similar to today's eyeglasses came into use, according to research by the American Optometric Associatrion (AOA).

The earliest visual aids were merely round lenses framed in bone, horn, brass or silver and were either held by hand or carefully balanced on the nose. But by the 1500s nearsighted people were using leather straps to keep double lenses on their heads, or sometimes metal spikes to attach them to hats.

In the 1600s light steel frames were popular, as were the lorgnette and the monocle. It was only about 1730 that frames with earpieces started being worn. Designed to be sturdy, they were made of gold, silver, brass and steel. In Spain and China, tortoise shell glasses were considered quite fashionable and were thought to bring good luck to the wearer.

TODAY, CONSUMERS CAN CHOOSE from hundreds of eyeglass frames in a wide variety of shapes, sizes and styles. Generally, well-made frames are available at reasonable cost and frame selection is an area in which consumers can cut the cost of eyeglasses substantially, says the AOA, which has headquarters in St. Louis.

Good quality frames are available in most price ranges but consumers need to know how to judge quality to find them, advises the AOA, which offers these guidelines:

•The frame should be well made, the right size, fit comfortably on the nose and ears, and compatible with your facial structure.

•Try on the frames to see if they suit your face.

•With plastic frames, gently pull the temples apart to see if they flex and then return to the original position.

•If you are athletically inclinded, ask about the frames' ability to sustain frontal impact during sports.

•With metal frames, make sure the temple pieces are smooth and that there is no extra metal at the bridge, nosepiece or temple.

•If a metal frame has a plastic inserted bridge, be sure it is securely locked in place.

•Look for hinges made of high-grade steel, joined with screws or rivets.

•Ask if you lenses will fit into the frames selected. Thicker prescription lenses can fall out of frames not made to hold them.

EYEGLASS FRAMES can highlight good facial features and help play down less attractive features. Generally, thin or wire frames look best on faces with smaller, delicate features, while thicker, larger frames can enhance a broader face.

Aluminum, plastic and wire frames are currently popular among eyeglass wearers. Favorite frame colors for 1982 are earth tones, gray, rose, plum, translucent and, that old standby, tortoise shell.

While the choice of frame color depends largely on personal preference, a good rule to keep in mind when selecting frame colors is that dark-haired and dark-skinned people often look well in gold, silver, dark brown, black and bright colors; fair-haired, light-skinned people's looks may be enhanced with pastels, amber, gray, silver or light tortoise shell frames.

WHAT ARE THE SHAPES of frames to come? According to the American Optometric Association, the new look in eyeglasses for the '80s may take a turn from the large, round plastic frames of the past couple of years, to smaller, more oval frames. Due to the state of the economy, eyeglass wearers may be less interested in styling novelties and more concerned with durability and "all purpose" frames. It is also anticipated that the boom in contact lenses will continue.

Of course, whatever eyeglass frame, shape, color and style you choose, be sure the prescription of your lenses is correct or you will have wasted a lot of time and money, warns the AOA, which recommends a complete professional eye examination annually for all family members.

Starch blockers may be causing illness

By NICK PROVENZA
Hearst Feature Service

SEATTLE — Dieting is seldom a joy, but federal officials say many people are getting downright sick from the latest weight reducing rage — starch blockers.

So many people are reporting problems like cramps, vomiting and diarrhea that the Food and Drug Administration has called a halt to further marketing of the reputed diet aids until manufacturers can prove the product is safe. The FDA also is investigating five hospitalization incidents linked to use of the starch blockers.

STARCH BLOCKERS generally come in pill form and cost between $5 and $20 for 50 tablets. They are marketed over the counter in so-called "nutrition centers" and do not require a prescription. The pills are said to block the digestion of starch, preventing the body from taking in calories found in such starchy foods as potatoes, bread and pasta.

The pill's ingredients, derived chiefly from white navy beans or kidney beans, block a powerful enzyme known as alfa amylase which is secreted by the pancreas. The enzyme ordinarily changes the starch into glucose (sugar), which can then be used by the body. Starch blockers prevent that from happening.

NUTRITION EXPERTS say that if the product works as advertised, undigested starches make their way into the large bowel, where they ordinarily aren't found in quantity. Bacteria in the bowel then begin to digest starches; that's what is believed to cause the gas, cramps and diarrhea reported by some users.

"The main thing I have against it is that the rationale doesn't make sense to me," said Dr. John Brunzell, a University of Washington medical professor specializing in the study of metabolism. "Starch blockers cannot work without the stuff getting into the intestines and without causing bloating, gas and related problems."

BRUNZELL ALSO BELIEVES that blocking starches can increase the percentage of fat in one's diet, and a diet high in fat could pose problems for the heart and circulatory system. He fears, too, that a combination low-calorie diet and a product that might cause diarrhea and serious loss of potassium could also cause heart irregularity and sudden death. Deaths have not been reported, however, in connection with the starch blockers.

Starch blockers are not new. Brunzell said German researchers began investigating the properties of starch blockers 20 years ago to help diabetics control their weight. The more than 130 commercially-produced brands of blockers in the U.S. today generally employ a block that German researchers looked at and discarded in favor of another. Similar work on search blockers for the benefit of diabetes patients continues at research centers in California.

DESPITE THE CONTROVERSY, a Tacoma, Wash., physician has distributed one brand of starch blocker to more than 400 patients in the past year. Dr. Milan Pazourek said he will continue to use the product as part of his weight loss regimen unless the FDA's action kills future sales of starch blockers.

Pazourek has been using a starch blocker produced by a New Jersey company since 1981, but isn't as enthusiastic about the product as he once was. Pazourek said he still uses the product but "not too often. It's not working as well as we expected," he said.

THE 400 TO 500 patients to whom he has recommended the product have not reported ill-effects, aside from some bloating or water retention, he said. The starch block he employs is only a small part of his three-part weight-loss program of nutrition, behavior modification and exercise, he added.

Pazourek thinks that it will only be a matter of time before the products will be eliminated from the market altogether. "Once it comes under consideration as a prescription drug by the FDA, it will die. No company's going to take the money loss to prove that starch blockers are safe."

Rainbow generation: No more dull undies

By JOHN MEEHAN
Copley News Service

Chances are that you and I are members of the white-underwear generation.

It's a sizable group. Anyone old enough to be outfitting kids this fall is apt to be part of the white undergarment set.

The original Henry Ford once offered a car in any color you wanted, as long as that color was black. About the same time, and for years after, the underwear that today's parents wore came in one color — white.

Welcome to the rainbow generation! Today's youngsters approach fall and the three R's dressed in colored underwear that would make Joseph's coat of many colors look pale by comparison.

What's more, the kids are sporting the likenesses of such popular characters as Superman, Yoda, GI Joe, Wonder Woman, Barbie (of doll fame) and even characters from the "Dukes of Hazzard" on their underwear.

All told, it's a not-so-quiet revolution, sparked by a Kentucky-based company. For it came to pass that a brain trust gathered in the mid-1970s at Union Underwear Co. decided kids would go for a little color under their blue jeans.

While mothers slumbered, retailers began offering Underoos underwear. That is simply a catchy trademark for what is boys' and girls' underwear in many colors, complete with the likenesses of comic book heroes, TV characters and even characters from "Star Wars."

The new look had a serious commercial purpose. Sales figures are closely guarded in the highly competitive clothing industry. But it's been estimated that kids between 2 and 12 represent an annual market of about 250 million sets of underwear.

As colored underwear captured the kids, there were smiles all around at the underwear factories. And, perhaps surprisingly, those who work with children are smiling, too. Listen to Dr. Sandra L. Graves, director of the Institute for Expressive Therapies at a major Midwestern university.

"The objects, artifacts and costumes that children have available aid in their development. To be creative, they must first develop their imagination. So if a child identifies with a superhero, for example, or a wise old man figure, he is growing, making a little person a little bit bigger."

We did it by wearing an old towel for a cape or by using Mom's and Dad's cast-off clothes. Today, kids do it with underwear of many colors — and many characters.

Ahh, progress. While my own ways are too set for me to jump into Spiderman undies, I'm with him in spirit when my young son jumps into his.

DEAR ABBY

Informed children won't be silent victims

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I am a psychiatrist who works closely with a child development specialist in Bangor, Me. As an example of the power for good that your column has, we want to share this story:

Two years ago, a teacher in a nearby town gave her class an assignment to bring in a news item for class discussion. Expecting current events and human interest stories, the teacher was surprised when a quiet 12-year-old approached her desk with a clipping from your column about a girl who was being sexually abused (raped), and said, "This is happening to me."

The teacher and the school's guidance person obtained our help in providing supportive counseling during the difficult process in which the child was placed in foster care because her mother "stood by" her husband (the child's stepfather) and called her daughter a "lying bitch."

You have many young readers. We urge you to encourage children to seek help from their school guidance people, doctors or community health centers (listed in the Yellow Pages) if they are being involved sexually by adults. You may use our names or sign us, "Concerned Professionals." — LAWRENCE C. SALVESEN, M.D., PATRICIA SMITH RANZONI, M.Ed.

DEAR CONCERNED: The importance of your message cannot be overstated. Whenever I publish a letter from someone who has been sexually abused as a child, I am inundated with letters from readers saying that this has happened to them. (Many confide that they had lived with that ugly secret for as long as 40 and 50 years — too ashamed to tell anybody.)

It is the responsibility of ADULTS to teach children (3- and 4-year-olds are not too young to understand) that it is not OK for ANYONE to touch their private parts, and if someone does, the child should tell a trusted adult immediately. Stress that even if the person who has made these advances has threatened to "kill" her (or him — little boys are molested, too) the child must tell anyway and be assured she will be protected.

Some facts: Today in the U.S. there is a one-in-four chance that a child will be the victim of incest, child molestation or rape by the time he or she reaches 18 years of age. Statistics tell us that 80 percent of the offenders had themselves been physically or sexually abused as children.

All 50 states now have reporting statutes, which are laws that require professionals who work with children to notify public authorities of instances of suspected child abuse (including physical, emotional, sexual) and sometimes neglect.

HINTS FROM HELOISE

Mother's Chinese Chicken

DEAR FRIENDS:

We have gotten some wonderful letters with your favorite recipes, and now it is my turn to share with you one of mine. This is the way my mother made what she called "Chinese Chicken."

The hard part about writing this is that Mother never cooked following a recipe, and I have never been able to measure exactly either. So, bear with me when I say a glub, glub, or a pinch of this or that. That's what is really great about this recipe — you can add, stretch or change any way you want to.

Remember to write down your recipes — it's so important. After years of my mother's saying "a little of this," a "dash of that," I finally scribbled it down on a 3x5 card, thank heavens! I would not have been able to remember it if I had not... so, get your favorite family recipes down on paper now.

Here goes:

1 chicken; 1 large onion, thinly sliced from top to stem; 1 stalk celery, thinly sliced diagonally, including leaves (most important); 2 chicken bouillon cubes; celery salt and salt (can do without salt) and pepper to taste; cornstarch; pimientos, optional — add for color, depending on what else you are serving.

Boil chicken in enough water to cover. Remove from pan and reserve the broth; bone and dice the chicken. Add onion, celery, bouillion cubes, celery salt, salt (if you're using it) and pepper, onion and seasoning to broth and simmer until tender (I like them slightly crunchy). Add enough cornstarch to thicken and a few drops of yellow food coloring if the sauce is gray looking. Stir and cook until thickened. Add diced chicken to sauce and heat through. That's it!!

Now the real trick is the rice. Mother always put this chicken over saffron rice, but nowadays, saffron is one of the most expensive spices in the world... so this is how my family makes "mock" saffron rice.

Add a dash of butter, just a pinch or two of curry powder and several drops of yellow food coloring to the water — enough to make it nice and saffron-colored.

Remember this trick whenever you serve rice. Think of the color scheme of the food you are serving, and if white is too blah, just add a few drops of yellow or even red to the rice.

Enjoy! — Heloise

PESKY PANTYHOSE

Dear Heloise: I always had trouble with pantyhose riding down from my waist.

Even buying a size larger didn't solve the problem. So I cut the elastic off the waist of an old pair and stitched it onto the waist of a new pair using my zigzag stitch.

No more sliding down. — Murrill Smith

SUMMER FUN

Dear Heloise: To make playtime fun for preschool-age children during the long summer months, give them a pail of water and a paint brush.

Let them pretend they are painting the garage door, out buildings, the fence, sidewalk, lawn chairs, etc.

The sun keeps drying it and the children keep painting. Helps the grandparents while babysitting, too. — Mrs. F. Wisenbarger

YUM-M-M-M

Dear Heloise: Any variety of stale snack crackers (cheese, sesame, etc.) can be used to make a delicious bread coating for chicken or pork chops.

Just grind them in the blender or food processor. — Mrs. Ray Kaluzny

How about your food-budget stretchers? If you've found a way to use leftovers that other homemakers don't know about, Heloise sure would like to hear and she'll use the best in her column even though she can't thank you individually. Write Heloise, P.O. Box 32000, San Antonio, TX 78216.

Recession puts squeeze on small winemakers

By LAURIE ITOW
Hearst Feature Service

SAN FRANCISCO — As winemakers prepare for the annual grape crush in September, some of California's small, young wineries are facing another kind of squeeze — one brought on by the recession.

High production costs, high interest rates on loans and keen competition have forced some owners to sell, liquidate or recruit investors in an attempt to stay in business. George Vare, an investment and marketing consultant for the wine industry, says the state's small wineries are struggling largely because they lack adequate financing.

The number of tiny wineries in California ballooned during the 1970s, when people were lured by the mystique and glamour of making wine and when California's wine labels drew new-found acclaim. In Napa Valley, for instance, there were about 25 wineries 20 years ago. Today, there are about 140 and most of them are small – producing less than 50,000 cases a year.

Vare says few new owners understood the economics of winemaking. He estimates that a minimum of $1.5 million to $2 million in working capital is necessary to start a winery. The money is needed just to cover the grape crush and the blending and aging of the wine. Inventory costs are high. Red wines are aged an average two years and white wines for six months to a year before they're sold.

Because continued growth is projected for wine consumption nationwide, Vare says winemaking eventually can lead to steady, long-term financial rewards. But it can take five years before a winery will break even and up to 10 years before a vintner will see a profit. During that time, a winery might lose $500,000.

Those problems have been exacerbated by the recession. Wineries that were forced to borrow money are getting killed by high interest rates. Some enterprises which might have survived in better times are changing hands.

Richard Carey, a former college instructor turned vintner, became one of those victims. With $90,000 in savings and investments, Carey opened the Richard Carey Winery in San Leandro in 1977.

In the winery's first year, Carey was supported by his biochemist wife June, while he and an assistant produced 3,000 cases of wine from grapes purchased from growers. His wife then quit her job to join the winery, and the couple worked seven days a week, 14 hours a day.

By 1980, Carey needed funds to buy equipment, hire employes and expand. A business consultant advised him to borrow about $300,000 for a few months, while the consultant recruited investors, Carey says. But the investors never materialized.

In the meantime, the interest rate on his loan, which was 6.5 points above the prime rate, fluctuated as high as 28 percent. And Carey's loan had grown to about $750,000.

The winery in 1980 produced 33,000 cases of wine and had $600,000 in sales. Carey had no trouble selling his product, but revenues fell far short of covering his expenses.

In May 1981, Carey filed for bankruptcy. After losing his home and selling the winery for $400,000, Carey says some suppliers and creditors were still left with unpaid bills totaling $900,000.

Carey is now the winemaker for the Montali Winery in Berkeley, which this year will produce wines with his signature on their label. During bankruptcy proceedings, another vintner purchases the right to use the Richard Carey label. Carey isn't connected with that winery.

Vare estimates that about 50 of the state's 350 small wineries are looking for "financial assistance in one form or another." Bankruptcies, sales and liquidations in the past year have destroyed the Napa Valley myth that the wine business is immune to the recession, he says.

Financial problems have been compounded by ferocious competition. If retailers had 15 good chardonnays from Napa to choose from three years ago, Vare says, they now have access to 60 good chardonnays. "And they can't afford to carry all of them. They might decide to restrict their stock to 25."

Although there's no industry definition for a "small" winery, Vare says a small winery could be described as one that annually produces less than 50,000 cases of wine, compared to the millions of cases made by the big wineries such as Gallo and Almaden. Each case totals 2.38 gallons in 12 bottles.

Overall, the small wineries make 2 to 5 percent of the 358.2 million gallons of wine produced in California each year.

Jack Daniels, of Wilson Daniels Ltd., a wine marketing company, says the financial problems caused by the recession have been complicated by the fact that some foreign wines are being sold at cheaper prices. That's possible because governments such as Italy subsidize their wine industry. French wines also dropped in price because of the falling franc, which gave the American dollar more buying power.

European companies legaly obligated to abide by embargo

By OSWALD JOHNSTON
Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — European companies covered by President Reagan's order blocking use of U.S.-developed technology to build the Soviet Union's Siberian natural-gas pipeline are legally obligated by contract to abide by the embargo, administration officials said Sunday.

France and Italy directly challenged Reagan's embargo order last week, instructing French and Italian companies involved in the pipeline construction project to honor their contracts with the Soviet Union and ignore the U.S. ban.

Britain and Germany — the two other West European partners in the project — have likewise suggested that their contracts with the Soviets will take precedence over the U.S. decision to block transfer of American technology necessary for the pipeline, which would carry Siberian gas to Western Europe.

But U.S. officials said Sunday that existing contracts — between the American companies whose technology is subject to Reagan's embargo order and European companies that bulid the equipment under license — contain clauses binding the European companies to the 1949 Export Control Act, the same legislation Reagan invoked in imposing the embargo.

"There is a clause in all these sorts of contracts which in effect says, 'We will abide by the Export Control Act and we recognize that things could change,' " a senior official said.

The Commerce Department, which is responsible for administering the Export Control Act, and therefore for enforcing Reagan's embargo order, is studying how to respond to the decisions by France and Italy to disregard Reagan's order.

"The French are enforcing their contracts with the Soviet Union — but not their contracts with us," an official said.

The key U.S. company in the dispute is General Electric Co., the originator of technologically advanced turbines required for the compressor stations that will drive the gas through the Soviet pipeline.

General Electric signed contracts with companies in France, Britain, Italy and West Germany permitting those firms to build the turbines under license, utilizing some key parts manufactured by G.E. and relying on G.E. technology.

The U.S. Embassy in Paris last week made public the key clause in the contract between G.E. and Alsthom-Atlantique, the French company licensed to build turbine blades for the compressors. It said:

"To facilitate the furnishing of data under this agreement, Alsthom hereby gives its assurance in regard to any General Electric origin data that unless prior authorization is obtained from the U.S. Office of Export Administration, Alsthom will not knowingly export to any country group Y (legislative code for Eastern Bloc countries, including the Soviet Union) any direct product of such technical data if such direct product is identified by the code letter A."

Reagan put the turbine technology in the category of "code letter A" when he imposed the embargo June 18.

Other companies with which G.E. has signed contracts to build the turbines or parts necessary for their manufacture are: John Brown Engineering Ltd. of Britain, Nuovo Pignone, a state-owned Italian company, and AEG-Telefunken of West Germany.

Originally, the administration applied sanctions against the Soviet Union to punish it for involvement in the imposition of martial law in Poland last December. Last month, Reagan expanded sanctions on oil and gas equipment to include equipment produced abroad under U.S. licenses.

The administration strongly opposes construction of the pipeline, arguing that it will provide the Kremlin with hard currency for a military buildup and that it will make the United States' Western European allies dependent on Soviet gas supplies and thus vulnerable to pressure from Moscow.

The European partners in the pipeline project have strongly objected to Reagan's unilateral action in imposing an embargo on a matter that affects their economies as well as their energy supplies.

California motorists unknowingly sold gasohol, air board investigating

By RICHARD O'REILLY
Los Angeles Tims-Washington Post News Service

SAN FRANCISCO — Motorists throughout California are unknowingly being sold gasoline mixed with alcohol, the staff of the California state Air Resources Board said last week. But the mixture apparently has little effect on auto performance or mileage, although it increases air pollution.

Officials of several of the companies named in a report by the board denied doing anything wrong, claiming that they are merely taking advantage of state and federal laws that encourage the use of alcohol as an additive to raise the octane level of gasoline. They said there is no requirement that they label the mixture as gasohol.

But the staff of the Air Resources Board said that what it terms "alcohol contaminated gasoline" has less alcohol in it than standard gasohol, which is a mixture of 90 percent gasoline and 10 percent alcohol.

The staff said that wholesalers can make a higher profit by using alcohol to reach required octane levels than they can by buying pure gasoline of the same octane rating from refineries. The staff speculated that profit would be even higher if wholesalers also are claiming a state gasohol tax credit even when the amount of alcohol added does not meet state standards.

A spokesman for the State Board of Equalization said it plans to investigate whether gasohol tax credits have been improperly claimed.

Wholesalers contacted by the Los Angeles Times said that they claimed the gasohol tax credits only when a tanker load had actually received a 10 percent alcohol blend, and not in all cases of gasoline sold to retailers.

A spokesman for the state Bureau of Measurement Standards said his agency is finding that sometimes the unlabeled mixture does not meet octane requirements, which can cause engines to ping. He indicated that prosecutions could result at those stations where unlabeled gasohol does not meet the octane number posted on the pump.

Air Resources Board officials said gasoline distributors are adding alcohol to regular grades of leaded and unleaded gasoline and selling the mixture as premium-grade gasoline, making a higher profit in the process, especially if they are claiming the tax credit.

The practice, first noted by state officials last year, apparently is limited to service stations that buy gasoline from independent distributors. The only major-brand stations identified in the report were those of Texaco, but they were leased operations and bought their gasoline from suppliers other than Texaco.

Of more than 600 gasoline samples collected by the Divison of Measurement Standards throughout the state, 34 percent of the Southern California samples had unlabeled alcohol content of less than 10 percent, according to Jim Johnson, program supervisor for petroleum products. In Northern California, 29 percent of the samples showed similar results.

Gasohol sales grew tenfold last year — from about 3 million gallons a month in January 1981, to about 30 million gallons a month last December, according to the Air Resources Board staff. There is no way to determine how much of that increase resulted from sales of gasohol labeled as gasoline.

As for the air-pollution impact, the staff said that while gasohol burns cleaner in a car engine, producing less hydrocarbon and carbon monoxide emissions, it creates more oxides of nitrogen. Also, the increased hydrocarbons from its evaporation during transit, storage and refueling are more than 20 times as great as the reduction in hydrocarbons out the tailpipe.

Gasoline prices are falling once more

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Gasoline prices have begun falling again after steady increases since mid-April, in a victory for price-conscious drivers who cut back on demand, an oil industry analyst says.

Analyst Dan Lundberg said Sunday that the average price nationwide for all grades, including tax, has fallen by about one-quarter of a cent per gallon. The average was $1.2948 on Friday, compared to $1.2975 in the last survey two weeks earlier.

The price of gas had been climbing steadily since a mid-April low of about $1.18 a gallon, according to Lundberg's survey of stations around the nation.

"There was a sharp increase of 12 cents a gallon between mid-April and the end of June, but gasoline is still nine cents less than the all-time high of March of 1981, which was $1.38 a gallon," Lundberg said. "After that sharp rise, prices have stabilized."

He attributed the stabilization to motorists who have become "price-sensitive."

"Not only did they get in the habit of conserving, but they are driving better mileage cars and driving by objective," he said.

Lundberg's weekly oil industry review, The Lundberg Letter, noted Friday that even though more Americans are driving more cars, gas consumption nationwide has dropped dramatically since 1978, with the largest decrease in Iowa and the smallest in Alaska.

The newsletter said consumption fell 11 percent between 1978 and 1981. In 1978, the peak year, Americans used 115.2 billion gallons of gasoline, compared with 102.5 billion gallons in 1981.

The newsletter projected this year's figure would be "very close to 100 billion gallons."

Per capita consumption of gasoline dropped 13.87 percent — from 519 gallons in 1978 to 447 gallons in 1981, it said.

Wyoming had the highest per-capita gas consumption last year — 741 gallons — while New York had the lowest, 300 gallons.

Hughes Tool plans more layoffs soon

HOUSTON (SWN) — The Hughes Tool Division of Hughes Tool Company has announced an additional manpower reduction in its Houston manufacturing operation. A full two week notice has been given to approximately 475 bargaining unit employes, who will assume layoff status at the end of their normal workday on Friday, August 6, 1982. The layoff covers employees with seniority date of 42 months or less and is approximately three percent of Hughes Tool Company's work force in the U.S.

The move was necessitated in light of the continued decline in U.S. drilling activity. Rigs in the U.S. have fallen from 4,530 at the beginning of the year to 2,694 this past Monday, a decline of nearly 41 percent. There have been few indications of any short range, significant improvement in rig activity. Hughes Tool Division manufactures and markets rock bits and tool joints to worldwide oil and gas drilling operations.

The Company also indicated that it is continuing reductions in salary grade personnel and reducing other expenses where possible.

Jones and president Russell Richardson have announced ten Midlanders have been named to the new bank's board of directors, and three new officers have also been appointed.

During a recent stockholders meeting, directors elected were Dick Bench, Clyde Brown, Curtis Guss, Burton B. Jones, H. C. McCulloch, Russ Richardson, Harriet Faudree Roberts, Cecil Robinson, G. D. Vann, and Margaret White.

Named to the staff were Kim Biggerstaff, assistant vice president; Liz Harrell, cashier; and Margaret White, vice president.

Biggerstaff assumes her position after serving as assistant cashier at Burleson State Bank. Her duties will include new accounts and certificates of deposit.

White, a long time Midland resident, is an independent oil and gas lease broker and holds memberships in the American Association of Petroleum Landmen and the Permian Basin Petroleum Land Men's Association.

Joining Midland American with seven years' banking experience, Harrell will serve in the area of operations for the bank. Formerly employed by another financial institution in Midland, Harrell is currently a member of the board of directors of the Midland Chapter of the American Institute of Banking.

According to Richardson, Midland American's location, at the corner of Loop 250 and Midland Drive, makes it possible to conveniently serve the rapidly-expanding northwest section of Midland.

The bank is capitalized at $1 million with a predicted asset total of $7 million to $10 million at the end of its first year of operation.

Along with a full service format, Midland American offers Petro-Plus Club, a checking account that provides free personalized checks, no-service-charge checking, free cashiers' checks, travelers checks and money orders; as well as free photo copies and notary services; and an accidental death policy to all members, for a monthly fee.

Stock market loses

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market posted a moderate loss today amid some disappointment over the latest Federal Reserve statistics on the money supply.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, up 33.58 points in the last three weeks, dropped 3.42 to 827.15 by noontime.

Losers held a 7-4 lead over gainers among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues, and some large banks today lowered their prime lending rates from 16 to 15½ percent.

Hughes Tool led the active list, up ⅞ at 17⅝ in trading that included a 500,000-share block at 17. The company reported second-quarter earnings of 81 cents a share, against $1.13 in the like period last year.

The NYSE's composite index lost .28 to 63.52. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was off .73 at 256.09.

Volume on the Big Board came to 18.62 million shares at noontime, against 21.73 million at the same point Friday.

Larger deficit agreed; Size still up in air

WASHINGTON (AP) — Government officials are predicting that the size of the budget deficit for 1983 will be larger than previously anticipated, but they don't agree on how much larger.

Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan said Sunday a revised budget review shows the deficit will be "somewhere in the neighborhood of $110 billion to $114 billion." Others say that's underestimating the condition.

Regan's prediction would be an increase of as much as $10 billion over the $104 billion red-ink estimate Congress made just one month ago when it adopted a new budget plan for the year beginning Oct. 1.

The treasury secretary's comments came during an interview on CBS' "Face The Nation."

Other officials in the administration and the Congress, however, say the projection is based on an overly optimistic forecast of a quick end to the recession and relatively healthy economic growth later this year.

Chief White House economist Murray L. Weidenbaum said last week he thought the budget forecast was a little too optimistic to suit him.

Additionally, the non-partisan Congressional Budget Office, using more likely economic forecasts, expects a deficit of $140 billion.

When asked if the administration was being less than honest in its soon-to-be-released forecast, Regan said he personally thinks the forecast may be a little on the pessimistic side. On balance, he said, "the administration honestly believes that this is the kind of recovery we will have."

The administration's forecast will predict the economy will grow at an annual rate of about 4.5 percent for the rest of the year, a pace private economists generally believe is unrealistic.

Even administration economists, speaking privately, acknowledge the economic and budget deficits forecast are too rosy. But they express concern that a more realistic outlook showing the deficit soaring by $20 billion or more could be too discouraging in an election year for Congress, which is anguishing over every $1 billion in cuts facing it.

When he came into office, President Reagan promised to balance the budget by 1983.

The largest deficit on record is $66.4 billion, coming in 1976. That record will be broken in fiscal 1982 as the deficit is certain to exceed $100 billion.

Interest rates have been the prime cause of the economy's difficulties. Regan said he was convinced "they'll be quite a bit less than they are now" by the end of the year.

When asked about Senate action last week that halved the business deductions for the expense of entertaining clients, Regan said he thinks the administration will go along with it, but wants to see what the House is going to do.

He said the administration wants to "get at the question of cash tips that are not being reported by those who work in restaurants and bars." He suggested that some type of reconciliation could be made between these two ideas in a Senate-House conference on the tax bill.

Federal Reserve Board Chairman Paul A. Volcker, appearing on ABC's "This Week with David Brinkley," said Congress must address the continued deficits to help solve the problem of high interest rates.

Volcker said that "under current conditions" he favors the Republican bill calling for a record $98.5 billion in tax increases passed by the Senate last week. But he added that he would be happier to see additional cuts in spending.

The chairman has been the focus of sharp criticism because of the Fed's tight money policy, which many believe have helped prop up interest rates.

Volcker refused to outline his policy for the coming year, but hinted that interest rates might be coming down.

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

'Bucket shops' unusual due to audits of brokers

By BILL DOYLE

Q. I asked my broker to send me the certificate for stock I had purchased. After three requests I finally received the certificate. It was dated after the third request and more than six months after I had paid for the stock.

Between the time I paid for the stock and the certificate was delivered to me, the price dropped $4 a share. This would have allowed the broker to hold my money and pocket the difference. Is it ethical for him to do this?

A. Of course not. It would be unethical and illegal for a broker to do that. It's also most unlikely. What you're suggesting is called "bucketing," a practice outlawed long ago.

Doyle

This is not to say it never happens. But brokerage firms are under the surveillance and are audited by the stock exchanges of which they are members and the Securities and Exchange Commission. "Bucket shops" are few and far between and are usually nailed to the regulatory wall in a hurry.

Assuming your broker is on the up and up, you became the owner of that stock not on the date the certificate was issued but on the date the broker bought it for you.

After you placed your order to buy, the broker sent you a confirmation statement showing a "trade date" and a "settlement date." The trade date was the day which the stock was purchased. The settlement date, normally five business days later, was the date by which you had to pay for the stock.

The certificate couldn't be issued in your name until some later date, after transfer out of the seller's name to your name was completed. The six-month delay in getting the certificate indicates some foul-up and perhaps inefficient service. But it didn't change the fact that you became the owner of the stock on the trade date.

Q. I sold 100 shares of stock, at $46 a share, on May 7. The confirmation I received from the brokerage firm indicated that, after deduction of $45.16 in commission and fee, the amount due to me would be $4,544.84 on the settlement date of May 14. In between those two dates the stock went "ex-dividend," with a dividend payment of 50 cents a share to holders of record May 14.

When I went to deliver the stock certificate and collect the $4,544.84 indicated as due to me, the brokerage firm deducted $50 for the amount of the dividend and gave me a check for $4,504.84. I have since received a $50 dividend check from the company whose stock I sold. But here's what I want to know. Was the $50 withholding by the brokerage firm proper?

A. Sure, it was. That 50-cent-a-share dividend was payable to stockholders of record as of the close of business Friday, May 14. Under the rules that stock went ex-dividend at the opening of stock exchange trading Monday, May 10. Remember, ex-dividend means "without dividend."

Anyone who bought that stock on or after Monday, May 10, was not entitled to that dividend. Anyone who sold that stock on or before Friday, May 7, was not entitled to that dividend. You weren't entitled to the dividend.

There wasn't time to transfer ownership of the 100 shares you sold into the name of the person who bought those 100 shares, so that the buyer's name would appear on the company's record books at the close of business on the May 14 record date.

The brokerage firm, knowing you would get the $50 dividend, deducted that amount from the money you had coming and sent that $50 to the person who bought the shares you sold.

You have since received a $50 check for a dividend you weren't entitled to. The $50 deduction by the broker evens that out. You didn't lose any money on the deal.

Investors must decide to live well or sleep well

By CHET CURRIER

NEW YORK (AP) — Before deciding where to invest your money, according to an old Wall Street precept, you should decide whether your greatest concern is living well or sleeping well.

To live well, presumably, you aim for the greatest possible return on your money.

To sleep well, you minimize your risk. But safety almost always comes at a price — a lower return on your investment.

This tradeoff between perceived risk and potential reward is very much in evidence these days in money-market mutual fund investing.

No money fund carries any absolute guarantee. All are considered relatively safe, and none has ever run into trouble through a default on any of the securities in its portfolio.

Nevertheless, safety-conscious savers lately have been flocking to a specialized breed of funds that invests only in securities of the U.S. government, which is considered just about the world's best credit risk. Since early this year, the number of these funds has doubled, from 25 to 50.

"The risk differences between money funds are of virtually no consequence in normal times," observed the No-Load Fund Investor, a quarterly newsletter based in Hastings-on-Hudson, N.Y.

But as the recession of 1981-82 drags on, the letter added, "we appear to be entering a period of mounting concerns over the economic outlook and an increase in near and actual corporate bankruptcies."

What is the price of "safety" in this environment? Depending on your point of view, it is considerable, or negligible.

According to the No-Load Fund Investor, the yield produced by "government-only" money funds averaged an annual rate of 12.9 percent in the second quarter of this year.

Other funds, which may invest in such things as bank certificates of deposit and commercial paper issued by corporations, had an average yield of 13.7 percent in the same period.

On a typical $25,000 investment, by the newsletter's calculations, the government-only funds returned $806 in the April-June period, $50 less than was available in a standard fund.

At one extreme, according to the letter, one very conservative fund, invested only in U.S. Treasury bills, would have earned $769 on that $25,000 investment.

At the other end of the yield charts was a fund classified as "aggressive" by such organizations as William E. Donoghue's Money Fund Report, because of its large holdings of commercial paper rated a notch or two below the top levels.

A $25,000 investment in this fund would have returned $894 in the second quarter.

The difference in yield between the two funds thus was $125 over three months. Assuming the spread between the two remained constant, that would add up to $500 over the space of a year.

U.S. dollar shows little change against most foreign currencies

LONDON (AP) — The value of the U.S. dollar showed little change against leading foreign currencies in early trading today. Gold bullion prices fell.

European currency dealers said foreign markets had been expecting a drop in the U.S. money supply, but the $100 million decrease was less than anticipated and the market reaction had run its course. They said no clear trends were apparent.

Earlier in Tokyo, the dollar sagged to a six-week low at today's opening but recovered somewhat to close at 250.50 yen, 0.60 yen lower than Friday's finish.

The British pound edged up to $1.7620 from Friday's $1.7615 close.

Other dollar rates compared with Friday's late rate were:

2.4018 West German marks, up from 2.4015

2.0283 Swiss francs, down from 2.0285

6.6873 French francs, up from 6.6775

2.6555 Dutch guilders, down from 2.6558

1,350.50 Italian lire, up from 1,350.05

1.2605 Canadian dollars, up from 1.2558

London's five major bullion dealers fixed a recommended morning gold price of $357 a Troy ounce, down $7.50 from Friday's close. In Zurich, the precious metal traded in a median range of $356.88, down $6.62.

In Hong Kong, gold closed at $355.93, a drop of $5.40 from Saturday.

Silver was quoted in London at 3 cents lower, $7.15 a Troy ounce.

RRC gives April production

AUSTIN — Railroad Commission Chariman Jim Nugent announced that Texas oil and gas wells produced 514,491,982 Mcf of gas in April, down 6.88 percent from field runs a year earlier.

Marketed gas production totaled 432,068,820 Mcf and reflects a 6.8 percent decrease from the April 1981 volume. Marketed production is the total gas to transmission lines, carbon black and plant fuel and lease use.

Gas exported from Texas in April totaled 289,001,490 Mcf. Natural Gas Pipeline Co. of America was the month's largest exporter, moving 74,811,666 Mcf of gas of which was Texas produced gas.

Exports of Texas-produced gas in April totaled 209,219,248 Mcf, and reflected a 4.43 percent increase from the year-earlier-month.

Texas gas production in April came from 225,715 oil and gas wells.

In March 1982, Texas wells produced 528,665,528 Mcf of gas. Marketed gas-production in March totaled 444,846,804 Mcf. March exports of Texas-produced gas totaled 209,704,969 Mcf.

Through the first four months of this year, Texas produced 2,088,216,311 Mcf of gas. For the same period, marketed gas production totaled 1,766,980,501 Mcf.

The RRC announced recently 17 permits to operate new pipelines in Texas were granted by the RRC in June.

Through the first six months of this year, the Commission has issued 81 permits to operate new lines. For the same period last year, 77 permits were approved.

Ten of the permits in June were for gathering pipelines, four were for trunk transmission lines, one was for a gas plant, and two were for other or multi-purpose lines.

Gathering lines bring oil and gas from production leases, while a trunk transmission line is a larger diameter line into which smaller lines connect.

Sixteen of the newly-permitted lines will transport gas, while one will move petroleum products..

Private pipeline accounted for all the permits last month.

In June, eight permits were granted for lines in Sutheast Texas, three in the Refugio area, two each in East Texas and deep South Texas, and one each in West Central Texas and the San Angelo area.

Gathering lines approved:

Prudential Gas Products, San Antonio, gas, Houston County; Stewart Petroleum Co., Fort Worth, gas, Galveston County; South Texas Gathering Co., Houston, gas, Walker County; Coldeto Systems Inc., Houston, gas, Victoria County; Venus Oil Co., San Antonio, gas, Matagorda County (offshsore); B.D.K. Production Co. Inc., Victoria, gas Colorado, Colorado County; Amoco Production Co., Corpus Christi, gas, Webb County; Bruce F. and Dan J. Harrison, Houston, gas, Fort Bend County; Southeastern Resurce Corp., Fort Worth, gas, Brown County; Texas Crude Inc., Houston, gas, Chambers County.

The Railroad Commission recently denied the request of Arkansas Louisiana Gas Co (Arkla) to abandon a gas pipeline serving 13 rural customers in Upshur and Gregg counties.

At a hearing held on the Arkla request, the company said that liquid hydrocarbons in the line could freeze during winter and cause regulator malfunctions which could be dangerous to the public. Arkla also maintained that the steps necessary to remedy the situation would be too costly.

However, the Commission has determined the less costly steps could be taken to take care of the problem. No evidence has been found of any loss of service or equipment malfunction in the past.

Arkla offered a 250-gallon propane tank and 675 gallons of propane to each customer, but all of them opposed the company's application to the Commission.

Today's action by the Commission also requires Arkla to file a plan of action within 60 days to remedy the possible unsafe conditions.

The Commission announced 63 refineries in Texas processed 123,850,765 barrels of crude oil and hydrocarbon blends during April 1982. Through the first four months of 1982, Texas refineries ran 481,810,110 barrels.

April's volume compares with 123,707,232 barrels in the same month a year ago, the Commission's Oil and Gas Division reported in its monthly recapitulation of Texas refinery operations. Inputs of crude oil and blends totaled 123,601,299 barrels in March 1982.

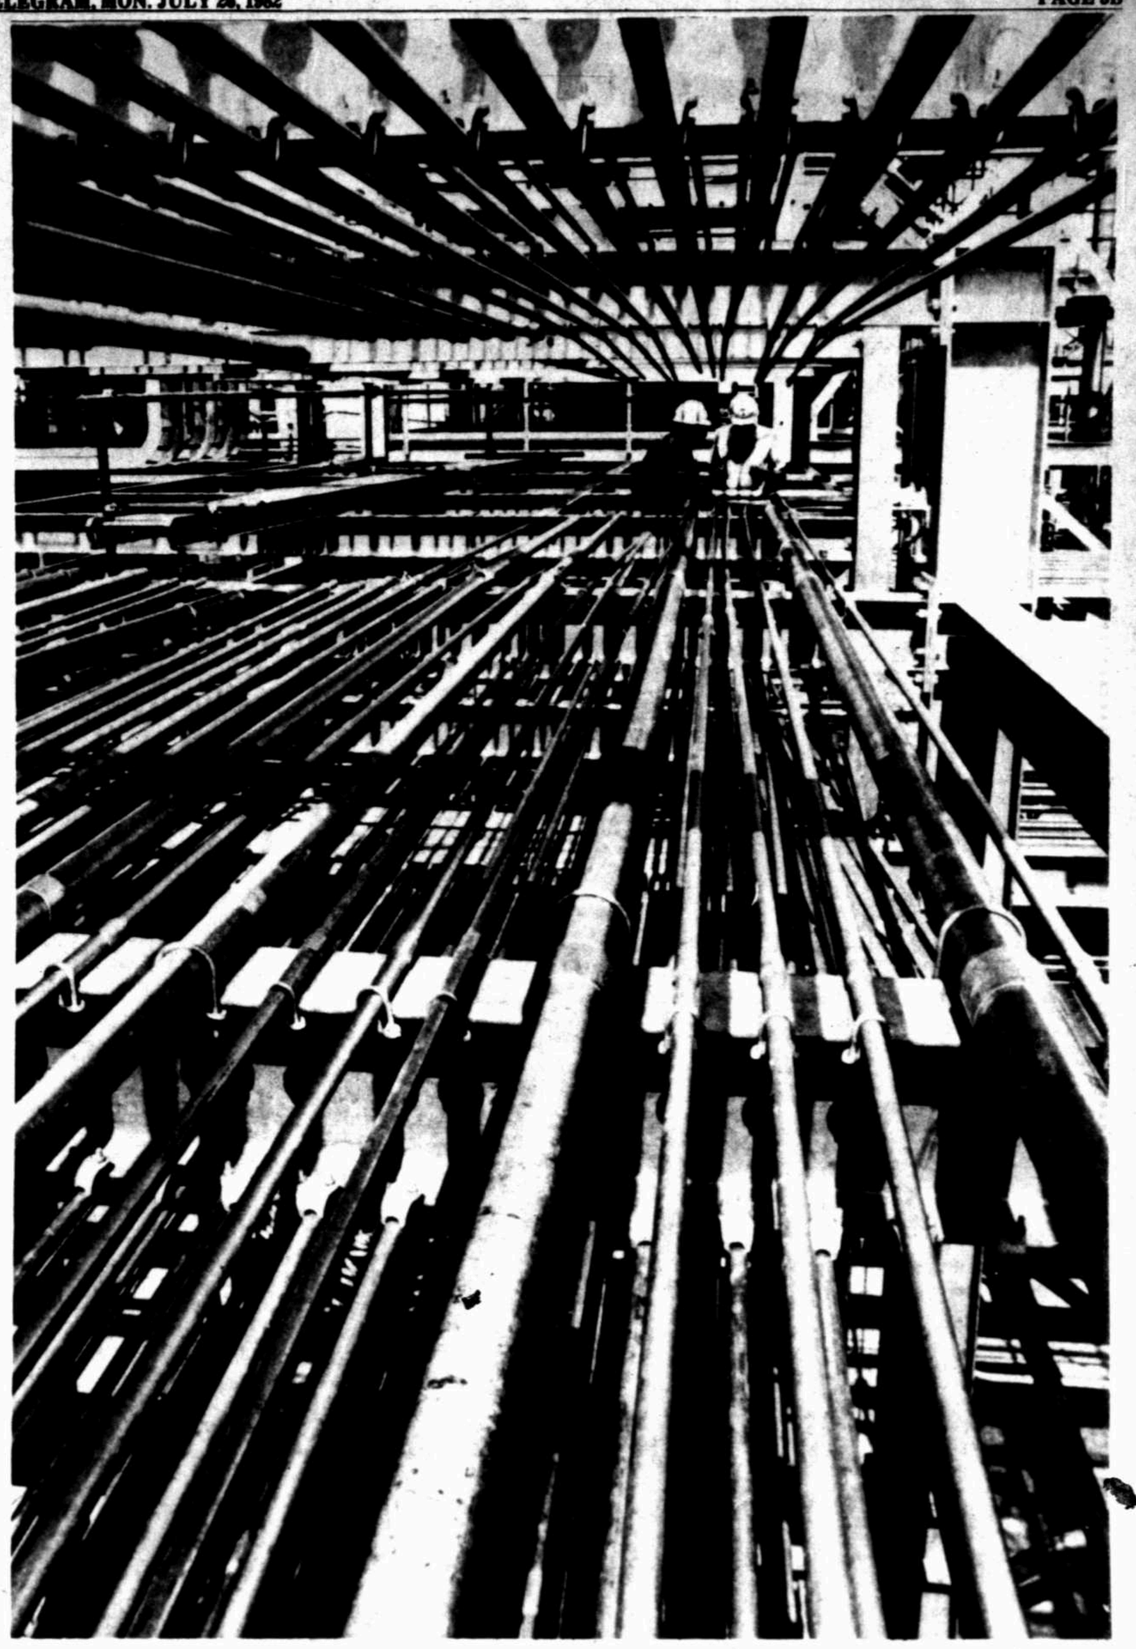
Texas refineries ran 93,816,467 barrels of crude oil in April compared to 100,647,048 barrels in April 10981 and 94,349,195 barrels in March 1982.

Products manufactured in April 1981 and 94,349,195 barrels in March 1982.

Products manufactured in April 1982 totaled 123,855,258 barrels, down from 124,924,365 barrels in the same month the previous year, and up from the 123,855,099 barrels in March 1982.

April 1982 manufacture of motor gasoline totaled 51,752,932 barrels, compared to 47,696,522 barrels in the year-earlier month and 51,153,969 barrels in March 0f 1982.

Texas refineries manufactured 9,326,307 barrels of home heating oil in April 1982 - a decrease of 1,977,405 barrels from the year-earlier volume. March 1982 output was 8,297,656 barrels.



Two workers at the Tenneco Chemicals Inc. plant now under construction on the Houston Ship Channel seem tiny amid the maze of piping at a new facility to make 2-ethyl hexanol and phthalic anhydride. The output will be used as raw materials for plasticizers, polyester resins, synthetic lubricants and other specialty chemicals. The project is a joint venture of Tenneco Chemicals and the USS Chemicals Division of U.S. Steel Corp.

'Presidential cyclers' feeling bullish

By CHET CURRIER
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Students of a phenomenon known as the "presidential cycle" are feeling pretty bullish about the stock-market outlook these days.

True, the market has been battered in the past year and a half by a prolonged recession and heated controversy over the government's economic policies.

But a check of recent history shows that these conditions, however painful and chaotic, are not unusual at this point in the current administration's term.

In fact, some analysts point out, many of the same financial woes that have occurred in Ronald Reagan's presidency so far have past echoes in the early days of the administrations of John Kennedy, or Lyndon Johnson, or Richard Nixon.

According to the presidential cycle theory, stock prices almost always drop in the first two years after a presidential election — and they almost always rise in the following two years.

Since 1960, analysts at the brokerage firm of Bache Halsey Stuart Shields report, the Dow Jones average of 30 industrials has posted a net loss of 826.02 points in the two-year periods following presidential elections (the figures include 1982 results through June 30).

In the second half of presidential terms, by contrast, the average has risen 1,040.32 points.

The contrast is so great that it's difficult to ascribe it to mere chance, the Bache analysts suggest.

"The basis of the presidential cycle in the stock market is that the political tolerance for painful restrictive policies is greater two or three years before a presidential election year than in the presidential election year itself," the firm said.

"Although elements of a four-year presidential cycle can be discerned in the stock market over the last 200 years, it has been most dominant since 1960, when the belief that the economy could be 'fine-tuned' became widespread."

Presumably, any president would prefer to avoid recessions altogether. But when confronted with difficult economic choices that pose the threat of a business slump, most chief executives apparently prefer to make them early in their terms of office.

In the view of the Bache analysts, one president who deviated somewhat from this pattern was Jimmy Carter. In 1978, they said, "Carter and his Federal Reserve chairman, William Miller, chose to postpone the monetary restraint and recession which might have occurred."

By 1980, they pointed out, Carter was faced with rapid inflation, and a recession that developed only months before the election. On Nov. 5, 1980, he lost by a one-sided vote.

Now, Bache maintained, "the decision of President Reagan to tolerate a tight enough monetary policy to trigger the 1981-82 recession only a year after the 1980 recession should restore the four-year policy cycle to its normal tempo.

"While fiscal policy is currently stalemated by political conflict in the Congress, the best chance to shift to a more disciplined fiscal policy will occur in the first half of 1983.

"Finally, the painful side effects of a disinflationary monetary policy are most intense in the early stages, before the financial and economic system has had time to adjust. By 1984, an anti-inflationary monetary policy should be less disruptive than it has been in 1980-82.

"Thus, the odds are good that the presidential cycle will persist, with a substantial gain in the stock market from the congressional midterm elections in 1982 to the presidential election in 1984."

Story behind Money Market Funds table

William E. Donoghue

William E. Donoghue, whose money market fund table appears each Friday in the energy/business pages of The Reporter-Telegram, is known to millions of Americans through his book, "William E. Donoghue's Complete Money Market Guide," which became a major best-seller in 1981. It was on the New York Times list for 18 weeks, and more than a half-million copies have been sold in paperback.

Donoghue began compiling the figures for a money table for use in one of his newsletters in 1975, and since 1979 it has been appearing in newspapers including The New York Times and The Chicago Tribune. Today it is delivered by wire from The Tribune Company Syndicate to newspapers across the country.

His figures include all money funds with assets of $100 million or more that are available to individual investors. The numbers are reported weekly, and represent the findings of Donoghue's associates at the end of the day each Wednesday.

The five columns of the charts are:

1. Net Assets — The size of the fund or amount that fund has to invest, given in millions of dollars.

2. The name of the fund, abbreviated as little as possible to avoid confusion. The funds are listed alphabetically, with the exception of those listed under brokerage houses such as Merrill Lynch or Dean Witter funds.

3. Average Maturity Figures — The average amount of time (expressed in days) before a fund's portfolio of securities would mature.

4. 7-Day Yield — Yield to the investor for the previous seven-day week, based on dividends actually paid to the investor. Calculated as of the close of the business day each Wednesday with the exception of a week in which Thursday is a holiday, and then the reporting is as of the close of the business day on Tuesday.

5. 30-Day Yield — The yield to the investor for the previous 30 days.

At the bottom of the table is the Average Maturity in a dollar-weighted average of all funds included in the complete "Money Fund Report." It expresses the consensus of all portfolio managers in the money fund industry about the direction of short-term interest rates.

The Seven-Day and Thirty-Day Average Yields are simple averages of all funds included in the Money Fund Report.

Cultural revolution in auto industry

By H. JOSEF HEBERT
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. automakers must undergo "close to a cultural revolution," including fundamental changes at all levels, if they are to survive against foreign competition, according to a study released today.

While the report cited reasons for optimism, it also said the U.S. industry may one day move a "substantial portion" of its production overseas and two-thirds of all cars sold in America may eventually be built abroad.

The two-year study was conducted for the National Science Foundation by a panel of management experts from universities, research organizations, the auto industry and labor.

It noted that American manufacturers have shown a "willingness" to accept broad changes and "a good deal of adaptability" as they have come to realize "the question is now one of survival."

The experts alluded to recent agreements between the United Auto Workers and the Ford Motor Co. and General Motors Corp. aimed at cutting labor costs and increasing productivity. They also noted a willingness by the industry to bring in new top-level management with fresh ideas.

But the study concluded:

"In the case of productivity, product quality and the role of the work force, we are talking about something close to a cultural revolution ... in the way the business is managed and the way that people of all levels participate in the enterprise."

The 12-member panel, headed by Harvard University business professor William J. Abernathy outlined three scenarios that the U.S. auto industry may follow in the coming years, but declined to favor any one of them. The study said there is "some evidence" in favor of all three.

One scenario calls for the U.S. industry to shrink dramatically with foreign producers building an increased number of cars in the United States; another envisions U.S. firms surviving only by transferring substantial production facilities overseas; and a third calls for the industry to recoup its world market position by making fundamental changes and developing innovative vehicles.

Much of the report focused on competition from Japanese automakers, which have accounted for more than a quarter of U.S. sales in recent years.

The study said that lower productions costs, including up to a 60 percent advantage in labor costs has allowed the Japanese to produce their cars $750 to $1,500 cheaper that U.S. producers.

Because Japanese cars are sold at prices comparable to U.S. models the lower production costs give the Japanese a higher profit margin and more room to develop new technologies, the study said.

But the panel said that Japan's advantage is not primarily advanced technology but in superior management techniques.

The Japanese, for example, may save as much as $100 to $150 in the production of each vehicle because of less absenteeism than among U.S. workers, the study said.

"Cumulated over several million vehicles, the absolute impact (of this absenteeism) is quite sizable," the study said.

Alex blisters Open field

By ERIC PREWITT

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — Janet Alex had reason to feel confident, Beth Daniel reason to feel jinxed going into the final nine holes of play in the 30th U.S. Women's Open Golf Championship.

"I birdied the eighth and ninth holes, and when I stood over my drive at 10, I said, 'This is it. It's time to get aggressive.' I was super-confident," said Alex, the 26-year-old Pennsylvanian who rode that confidence to a fourth-round 68 and a six-stroke victory Sunday.

Alex had made a pair of 40-foot birdie putts on Saturday, but in the final round, her shots to the green were so accurate that the longest of her six birdie putts was an 8-footer.

She began the day in third place, two strokes off the lead, and ended it by claiming her first title as a professional. Her 72-hole total of 283, 5-under-par on the Del Paso Country Club course, earned her $27,315 of the Open's $175,000 purse.

On one of Daniel's 76 strokes, at the eighth green, no club touched the ball.

"I was over the ball putting for a birdie, and all of a sudden I was putting for a par. The ball moved, I had to take a stroke for that, and made a bogey," said Daniel, who was tied for the lead when the ball mysteriously moved as she addressed it.

"I didn't see it move. That shows what a fine person Beth is. She could have just gone ahead and hit it," said Carner, Daniel's playing partner. "I don't think Beth ever recovered from that."

Daniel and Carner, tied with Alex for the lead after getting pars at the 10th and 11th holes, both collapsed on the final holes. Carner bogeyed the last four holes to take a 75.

The 4-under 68 by Alex was the best score for the four days of the tournament.

"I only missed two fairways today and a total of six all week," said Alex, whose professional career began five years ago after she left Slippery Rock Teacher's College.

"I was going to be a teacher — until I tried it for two days.

Mets tame Diablos; Tulsa drills Dodgers

By The Associated Press

Darryl Strawberry's two-run homer was the difference as the Jackson Mets took a 4-2 Texas League baseball victory over the El Paso Diablos.

In other Texas League action Sunday, Amarillo whipped Arkansas 9-4, and Tulsa defeated San Antonio, 13-5.

Strawberry's homer came in the seventh inning with the score tied at 1-1 and was one of 12 hits pounded out by the Mets.

Both El Paso runs came on homers. Eric Payton homered in the first inning and Bill Foley had a solo homer in the ninth.

Jeff Bittiger, 9-4, was the winning pitcher. The loser was Dan Burns, 6-3.

Mike Martin had a three-run homer as part of a four-run outburst in the first inning as the Amarillo Gold Sox went on to whip the Arkansas Travelers, 9-4.

Jimmy Thomas had a two-run homer in the eighth and Gold Sox teammate Luis Quinones had a solo homer in the fifth inning.

With exhibition win over Borg

Connors adds final touch

CITY OF INDUSTRY, Calif. (AP) — It was only an "exhibition match," and Jimmy Connors was facing a foe who hadn't played much tennis recently.

Still, the victory over Bjorn Borg Sunday seemed to add a final stamp of authenticity to Connors' triumph at Wimbledon.

Combining fine net play with a consistent serve and an effective assortment of lobs and passing shots, Connors whipped Borg 5-7, 6-2, 6-2, 6-7, 6-2 in the finals of the $100,000 Michelob Light Cup.

The matchup pitted reigning Wimbledon champion Connors and five-time Wimbledon king Borg, who was conspicious by his absence when Connors won the title recently. Borg skipped Wimbledon because he didn't want to have to play in qualifying.

Connors said after his victory Sunday that the prize money — $50,000 to the winner, $25,000 to the loser — wasn't his prime motivation.

"It was probably the pride..." he said. "We respect each other and the kind of game we each play."

Borg, who has played in just two tournaments this year and hasn't won an event, said: "It was a good match. I'm not 100 percent yet. I didn't expect to do so well.

"He was hitting the ball well, but I was tired, then mentally tired and I made errors."

The finals of the two-day, four-player event lasted three hours and 39 minutes in smoggy, sweltering heat. On-court temperatures topped 100 degrees during much of the match viewed by a sellout crowd of some 8,000 at the Industry Hills-Sheraton Resort tennis complex.

It was only Connors' ninth victory in 24 meetings with Borg.

"He's won the last 11 times we've played," Connors, 29, said, "so every-time I beat him is a good time."

Abila fights Muniz tonight

ODESSA — Three professional boxers, fighting out of manager Rick Fleetwood's stable, will get into the ring tonight as part of the Charles "Tuffy" Hostetler-Cookie Wallace Texas Heavyweight Championship at Ector County Coliseum.

The most experienced of the Tall City boxers on the card is 118-pound Richard Abila, 6-0, against Houston's Enrique Muniz, 19-8. The fight is scheduled for eight rounds.

David Bates, 2-0-1, will take on Jesse Rodriquez of Austin.

Spitz, Gregory win skate title

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Elisa Spitz still blinks at bright lights 2½ weeks after suffering a concussion during skating practice. Greg Louganis spends much of his time explaining the lingering effects of a should injury, and fellow diver Bruce Kimball is just back in competition after losing his spleen as the result of an automobile accident.

Spitz, 19, of Short Hills, N.J., teamed with Scott Gregory to win the ice dancing gold medal for the second year in a row.

She fell during a practice session earlier this month and suffered a concussion. Her vision was still blurred as late as last week, and it was doubtful the pair would participate.

"But we took it on a day-to-day basis and Luddy said let's try it," Spitz said, referring to their coach, Ron Ludington. The lights, she said, annoyed her during the competition at the Market Square Arena, but after her medal performance, she grinned and said: "It felt great."

Spitz-Gregory, from the Wilmington (Del.) Skate Club, were unanimous first-place choices after both Saturday's compulsory firgures and Sunday's free dance. The silver medal went to Renee Roca and Donald Adair, of Flatrock, Mich., while Susan Wayne of Haverford, Pa., and Joseph Druar of Rosemont, Pa., took the bronze.

Louganis, a veteran at 22, won his second gold of the five-day-old festival, taking the men's platform diving title.

Also making the team was Kimball 19, a close friend of Louganis, who finished second in the platform competition Sunday. Doctors removed his spleen following the crash last October, in which he also suffered a cut liver, and it's been just seven weeks since he returned to diving.

Kimball said there had been "a few times when I had my doubts" about coming back from the crash.

"I'm a more determined human being," he said. "If anything, it's made me a more determined person. It hasn't made me a more determined diver. I've learned there are more important things."

Sunday was the busiest day of the 11-day-long Festival, being held this year for the fourth time, with competition in 23 of the 33 sports. And it completed a weekend in which 27 Festival records were smashed.

SPORTS IN BRIEF

Calvin Peete

Peete wins golf

By The Associated Press

GOLF

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. — Calvin Peete shot a final-round 2-under-par 69 and posted a 2-stroke victory over Bruce Lietzke in the storm-shortened $350,000 Anheuser-Busch Golf Classic.

Peete, who also won the Greater Milwaukee Open two weeks ago, had a 10-under-par 203 total for the 54-hole tournament and earned a $63,000 top prize.

SACRAMENTO, Calif. — Janet Alex, posting her first victory as a professional, stormed past favored JoAnne Carner and Beth Daniel with a final round 4-under-par 68 to win the 30th U.S. Women's Open Championship by six strokes.

Alex, 26, finished with a 72-hole total of 283, five under par, pulling away from the pack over the last five holes.

Two-time Open champ Carner and Daniel both collapsed in the stretch, finishing in a four-way tie for second at 289. Carner shot a final-round 75, while Daniel had a 76. Donna White, with a 72, and Sandra Haynie, with a 71, also were at 289.

SOTOGRANDE, Spain — Rose Jones of the United States won the $15,000 women's Spanish Open Golf Tournament by five strokes.

TRACK AND FIELD

INDIANAPOLIS — Carl Lewis uncorked the second-best long jump in history, soaring 28 feet, 9¼ inches in the National Sports Festival. Only Bob Beamon's world-record leap of 29-2½ at Mexico City during the 1968 Olympic Games is better than Lewis' effort.

TENNIS

WASHINGTON- Seventeen-year-old Jimmy Arias stunned No.2 seed and defending champion Jose Luis Clerc of Argentina 3-6, 6-2, 6-4 to gain the final of the $240,000 D.C. National Bank Tennis Classic.

Arias will play top seed Ivan Lendl of Czechoslovakia, who defeated No.4 seed Yannick Noah of France 6-3, 6-3, in tonight's final.

SANTA CLARA, Cal. — Martina Navratilova defeated Bettina Bunge 6-4, 6-4 and Chris Evret Lloyd defeated Claudia Kohde 2-6, 6-1, 6-3 to give the United States its seventh straight triumph in the $200,000 Federation Cup.

HORSE RACING

RUIDOSO DOWNS, N.M. — Yankee Win, a brilliant 2-year-old quarter horse filly, conquered a talented field of speedsters and a sloppy track Sunday to win the $728,085 Rainbow Futurity at Ruidoso Downs, her eighth victory in nine starts this season to earn $253,079. Bartendress finished second, but was disqualified and placed last because the young filly veered sharply right midway through the stretch and collided with Miss Azure Te Bug. As a result, Mr Master Bug was moved up to second and the pre-race favorite, Shaken Not Stirred, was awarded third place.

District playoffs

Play in the High Junior district tournament gets under way with pregame ceremonies at 5:30 p.m. today at Cubs Stadium. At 6 p.m, San Angelo plays Odessa while Midland faces CUTS (Crane-Upton County) at 8:30 p.m.

Torrez shows old touch, 5-0

(Compiled from R-T wires)

The talk early in the season was that Boston pitcher Mike Torrez might be washed up. But lately Torrez has been discounting that theory. The latest attempt was his 5-0 shutout of the Minnesota Twins. "Mike is pitching right now, like he did at the end of last season," Red Sox Manager Ralph Houk said of his big righthander who got relief help from Mark Clear in the victory. "He's challenging the hitters now, it looks to me."

Twins Manager Billy Gardner, whose team took two of the three-game series, said the Twins let Torrez off the hook by leaving 12 men on base. "He was struggling a couple of innings but we couldn't get the big hit."

But Boston got it. Wade Boggs hit a three-run homer and Carney Lansford hit a solo shot and drove in a run with a sacrafice fly.

A YANKEE Stadium crowd of 51,561 came to see California Angels slugger Reggie Jackson battle his former teammates. Instead, they saw Mickey Mahler, a little-known 29-year-old lefthander, enjoy a moment in the sun. Jackson, had an infield hit and a walk in three at-bats before being lifted for a defensive replacement in the eighth inning of the Angels' 6-4 victory.

Mahler pitched 6 2/3 innings of four-hit shutout relief, striking out five and walking two to gain his first American League triumph as he snapped the Yankees' winning streak at three games and ended the Angels' three-game losing streak.

California trailed 4-3 when Fred Lynn opened the fourth inning with his second double of the game and rwached third on Ron Jackson's single. After Tim Foli struck out, Bob Boone reached on an error by third baseman Graig Nettles, allowing Lynn to score. Jackson took third and Boone moved to second on the throw. George Frazier replaced Yankee starter Tommy John, 6-8, and Brian Downing greeted him with a sacrifice fly, scoring Jackson. The Angels added an insurance run in the eighth on a triple by Rob Wilfong and Jackson's single...

JOHN Lowenstein figures his offseason weight training of the past several years has had a cumulative effect. The Baltimore left fielder, who had never hit more than 12 home runs in a season, crashed his 15th and 16th, driving in four runs as the Orioles defeated the Oakland A's 6-2, completing a three-game sweep. "I'm stronger and I'm batting against some right-handers I never played against before."

Lowenstein connected with two aboard in the fourth inning and led off the seventh with another homer. Brian Kingman, 1-8, was warned after the next pitch decked Cal Ripken Jr., and then was ejected following an ensuing argument. Umpire Durwood Merrill said he ejected Kingman after the Oakland pitcher threatened to "knock everyone down who stepped up there."

ROBIN Yount almost spoiled a perfect day for Larry Gura. Yount's two home runs were the only hits Milwaukee managed until Gura faltered in the seventh and reliever Mike Armstrong came in to put the finishing touches on a 6-4 Kansas City victory. "It seems like whenever I make a mistake, somebody hits a home run," Gura said.

The victory gave Kansas City a 7-5 advantage in their season series against the Brewers, including a 5-1 mark at Royals Stadium. The loss trimmed Milwaukee's lead over Boston in the Eastern Division to a half-game, while Kansas City remained two games in back of California in the West.

Gura and Armstrong combined on a five-hitter and Hal McRae drove in two runs as the Royals took the rubber game of the three-game series. Yount's homers accounted for the only Brewer baserunners until Gura, 11-7, gave up a double to Ted Simmons with one out in the seventh and Gorman Thomas and Ben Oglivie walked to load the bases.

GREG LUZINSKI doesn't want anyone to look at his statistics and get the wrong idea. The fact is, Comiskey Park is not a home run haven. "I know I've got only 13 home runs," said Luzinski, whose three-run shot in the first inning Sunday led LaMarr Hoyt and the Chicago White Sox to a 5-3 victory over the Toronto Blue Jays. "But this ball park has burned me a lot. The other night I hit three balls that should have been out if the wind hadn't been blowing in. And there have been a lot of times I've hit balls 415 feet in right-center and left-center only to have them caught. This is one of the toughest parks in all of baseball to hit home runs," said Luzinski. "Just look at the records. I think the White Sox record for home runs is 39 by Dick Allen."

Luzinski's homer came off Jim Clancy, 8-9, following Rudy Law's single and a walk to Tony Bernazard. Hoyt, 12-9, became the American League's first 12-game winner. The big right-hander, 9-0 before hitting a slump, struck out four and did not walk a batter. He halted Damaso's Garcia's hitting streak at 17 games.

DESPITE an 8-7 record, the pitching of Lary Sorensen has been somewhat of a disappointment for the Cleveland Indians. And even after pitching the club to a 5-3 victory over the Seattle Mariners the 26-year-old right-hander was less than impressed with himself.

Snyder, Swallow win Team title

It is often said the consistency is the name of the game and at this year's Midland Country Club High-Low Team Golf Championship the old adage was never more evident.

Larry Snyder and Jack Swallow shot identical rounds of 61 to capture the best-ball event, while first round leaders Bill Hickey and Bill Kennedy found the going much rougher. The first round leaders took 13 additional strokes to complete Sunday's second round.

Hickey and Kennedy opened the tournament with a 58 but that soared to a 71 Sunday to drop them back in the pack.

Snyder and Swallow were in fourth place after Saturday's round and their consistent play proved to be the difference in taking the handicapped event.

Bill Chancellor and Bob Jones finished one stroke off the pace to take second place. R.L. Spears and Jim Ward, who were tied with Chancellor and Jones for second place after the first round, finished third with rounds of 60 and 64.

Somehow Dodgers keep 'em on farm

An AP Sports Analysis

By KEN PETERS

LOS ANGELES — How do you keep 'em down on the farm when they're young, talented, eager and knocking the cover off the baseball?

A decade or so ago, there was a superior crop of minor league players serving their apprenticeships in the Los Angeles Dodgers' farm system, many of them at Albuquerque, N.M.

Among those who blossomed into major league stardom were Steve Garvey, Ron Cey, Davey Lopes, Bill Russell and Steve Yeager — players who formed the nucleus of the Dodgers for the past decade.

Now, as many players on the Los Angeles roster are reaching their mid-30s, a new generation of minor leaguers is banging on the Dodgers' door.

PITCHER Fernando Valenzuela, catcher Mike Scioscia, second baseman Steve Sax and outfielders Pedro Guerrero, Mike Marshall and Ron Roenicke are among those already summoned to Los Angeles on the forefront of the new wave. An outstanding group still is waiting.

Albuquerque's Dukes, longtime dominant team in the Triple A Pacific Coast League, have an explosive lineup that includes first baseman Greg Brock, 24; outfielders Candy Maldonado, 21, Tack Wilson, 26, and Mark Bradley, 25; shortstop Dave Anderson, 21, and catcher-utility man Dave Sax (Steve's brother), 23.

A recent check of hitting statistics of the Del Crandall-managed Dukes showed Brock was batting .321 with 35 homers and 107 runs batted in; Maldonado .320 with 19 homers; Wilson .389; Bradley .325 with nine homers, 80 RBI and 35 stolen bases; Anderson .346 with 24 steals, and Sax .311 with nine homers.

"We just had a bad week; our team batting average is down to .322," Pat McKernan, Dukes president and general manager, said with a chuckle.

For some reason, the Dukes have churned out more outstanding hitters than pitchers. But among the highly regarded mound prospects at Albuquerque are 21-year-old Rich Rodas, who is 10-3, and 19-year-old Sid Fernandez, 4-3.

"THERE ARE a lot of good prospects," said Al Campanis, Dodgers vice president for player personnel. "I guess you could say they've got a good bunch of hitters since they're leading the league in average."

Having an abundance of talented young players might present a problem. Some of them are bound to grow restless while awaiting a chance at major league stardom. Campanis, however, doesn't really regard that as a problem.

"Every player wants to play in the major leagues, and naturally if you have someone in front of you, you're not pleased," he said. "But situations generally work out. I believe in the old saying that you can't keep a good man down.

"If the player has the determination and drive and competiveness ... he'll play in the major leagues either for the Dodgers or some other club."

THE DODGERS' farm system has the reputation of being perhaps baseball's best.

"We're pleased with the results and the development," Campanis said. "We're a farm-oriented organization. You don't do too much anymore with trades because of the complexities in contracts. You try to develop your own players."

And there are by-products. Los Angeles Manager Tom Lasorda, who has served more than 30 years in the Dodger organization as a player, scout, coach and manager, was a minor league skipper in the system for seven years, including 1972 at Albuquerque.

UT Longhorns update counseling

By JACK KEEVER

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Wallace "Wally" Scott Jr., a Texas Longhorn football letterman 40 years ago, amused his colleagues on the University of Texas Athletic Council recently by telling a story of how grades were handled when he was playing.

Scott said an assistant coach "used to just put everybody in 'Marriage and Morals,' 'Biology 1,2,3' and home economics. In my day it was simple."

Not as simple as Scott would have you believe since he went on to get a law degree, but there is no question the process of guiding an athlete through college has gotten much more complex.

The University of Texas hired the nation's first "brain coach" in 1957 to reduce the number of Longhorn athletes who were flunking out, and that proved successful.

This year the university has hired a full-time assistant for academic counselor Joe Eivens. It also will expand its study hall for athletes, channel them into a course that teaches students how to study and make their departure easier by bringing in experts to advise them on how to cope with the outside world.

And, for the first time, weekly computer printouts will enable Eivens and women's academic counselor Sheila Rice to make sure an athlete has not dropped a course that could make him or her ineligible.

"That's what scares us to death," said Leon Black, assistant to the athletic director for student affairs. "An athlete must maintain 12 hours to be eligible, and the computer could give us a warning on the same day, and we could get to him in time."

Grade checks are made after six weeks.

"We try to avoid the forest fire by stamping out the brush fires," said Eivens.

Peer pressure is important in academics, too, Eivens said. For example, imagine 265-pound tackle Kenneth Sims beating on your door in the morning, telling you in no uncertain terms to "get out of bed and get to class."

"The defense behind me was good, and it seemed that every time they hit a line drive it was right at somebody," Sorensen said after surrendering two runs on six hits before Dan Spillner came on in the seventh inning to record his 12th save.

Sorenson, acquired from the St.Louis Cardinals in an offseason trade, was counted on to be a cornerstone of the Cleveland pitching staff. But he has a bloated earned run average of 4.85, partly because he has yielded 15 home runs, including a pair Sunday. Sorensen did not walk a Mariner, but afterwards joked, "If I had known that Richie Zisk and Al Cowens were going to hit home runs on 3-2 pitches, I would've walked two guys."

Toby Harrah cracked a solo home run for the Indians, his 19th, as Cleveland beat the Mariners for the ninth time in 12 meetings this season. Zisk's 11th homer, leading off the second inning, gave Seattle a 1-0 lead. Cleveland tied it in the bottom of the second when Rick Manning doubled and Miguel Dilone singled. The Indians took the lead for good off Jim Beattie, 6-7, in the fourth when Ron Hassey doubled, moved to third on a grounder and scored on Larry Milbourne's sacrifice fly.

ENOS CABELL'S infield single drove in Tom Brookens with the winning run in the bottom of the ninth inning as the Detroit Tigers edged the Texas Rangers 7-6 to sweep a doubleheader after the Tigers won the first game 7-2 on homers by Alan Trammell, Jerry Turner and Chet Lemon.

Rookie Dave Rucker, Detroit's fifth pitcher, got the victory, his first major league decision. In the opener, it was 2-2 in the seventh when Glenn Wilson singled and rode home on Trammell's fifth homer of the season, off Texas starter Danny Darwin, 6-6.

Ga. Tech tackle dies

ATLANTA (AP) — Georgia Tech senior offensive tackle Brian Yates, 21, of Seminole, Fla., was found dead in his room in a campus fraternity house Sunday, school spokesman Charles Harmon said.

Yates, the No. 3 tackle on the Yellow Jackets football team, apparently fell out of his upper bunk in the Sigma Nu fraternity house and struck his head on a chair, Harmon said. An autopsy was to be performed to determine the exact cause of death.

"We are shocked and deeply sorry. Brian was a fine person," Tech head football Coach Bill Curry said Sunday in a statement released from North Carolina, where he is attending an Atlantic Coast Conference football coaches meeting.

Yates' body was found by a roommate when he woke up Sunday morning, Harmon said.

Carlton's 50th shutout stops Dodgers for Phillies

(From R-T wires)

Steve Carlton fired a five-hitter for his 50th career shutout, hurling the Philadelphia Phillies to a 1-0 victory over the Los Angeles Dodgers, enabling enabled Philadelphia to remain in a virtual tie with St. Louis in the National League East, was Carlton's first in Los Angeles in 10 years. The last time he won in Dodger Stadium was July 23, 1972.

Manny Trillo, who tied a National League record for most consecutive errorless games, drove in the game's only run with a second-inning single off loser Jerry Reuss, 10-8. Bill Robinson, aboard on a fielder's choice, stole second and came home when Trillo singled through the middle.

Carlton, 13-8, who tied the Dodgers' Fernando Valenzuela for the most wins in the major leagues, struck out eight to take over the major-league lead with 168.

Trillo played his 85th consecutive errorless game to tie a National League record for second basemen set in 1970 by the New York Mets' Ken Boswell. Trillo has committed only one error this season, on a throw he made on the first ball he handled this season. Joe Morgan holds the major league record for most consecutive errorless games by a second baseman when he went 91 games in a row without an error for Cincinnati spanning two seasons (1977-78).

JOHN CANDELARIA, 7-4, faced the minimum 27 batters with a four-hit shutout while Dave Parker, Bill Madlock and Jason Thompson each drove in a pair of runs Sunday as the Pittsburgh Pirates buried the slumping Atlanta Braves 8-0. "He was in command all the way," Pirate Manager Chuck Tanner said of Candelaria. "That's as great as he can pitch. I think John Candelaria is one of the best pitchers in baseball. I've thought that ever since I've been here."

Candelaria gave up a pair of hits to Bob Horner and singles to Rafael Ramirez and Glenn Hubbard. But the Pirates caught Ramirez trying to steal and turned three double plays to take care of the Braves, who have been shut out in three of their last four games.

Candelaria got the only run he needed in the second inning when Parker's triple inside the first base line scored Thompson.

MANAGER WHITEY Herzog said a two-out double by George Hendrick producing a 4-3 victory Sunday over the Houston Astros was overdue for the St. Louis Cardinals. "I'll bet you if you look it up to see how may guys we've scored from first base with a double this year, it's been very few. We should hit better in the gap. We're that kind of hitters."

The outcome left St. Louis with a 22-12 record record in one-run decisions as Houston dropped to 10-19.

Hendrick's hit came off veteran right-hander Don Sutton, 9-7, after Houston had earned a 3-3 tie in the top of the eighth on Art Howe's RBI single. Bruce Sutter, 7-5, the fourth St. Louis hurler, got the win with 1 2/3 innings of relief...

CINCINNATI Reds right-hander Bruce Berenyi, 7-10, thought he was getting tired on the mound, until Manager Russ Nixon paid a visit. Berenyi went the distance to beat the Chicago Cubs 2-1 with a five-hitter that was inspired by a chat with Nixon.

The right-hander started the eighth inning forebodingly, walking leadoff batter Larry Bowa as the Reds clung to a 2-1 lead. That's when Nixon decided to take a stroll. "He said he was starting to get tired. I told him, 'As big and strong as you are, you shouldn't be tired with the few number of pitches you've thrown.'" That was all the inspiration Berenyi needed to retire the next three Cubs and go on to post his second complete game in 21 starts.

Two of the Cubs' five hits came off the bat of pitcher Ferguson Jenkins, 6-11, who went seven innings and gave up seven hits. "He also got our only RBI. I don't think you can ask much more from someone," said Cubs Manager Lee Elia.

Alex Trevino collected a pair of hits and drove in a run to support Berenyi's pitching. Trevino drove in Ron Oester with a triple that gave the Reds a 2-0 lead in the second inning...

CHILI DAVIS and Jack Clark belted run-scoring singles in the eighth inning and the San Francisco Giants erupted for three unearned runs to stun the Montreal Expos 3-2. Montreal's Scott Sanderson, 6-9, entered the eighth with a 1-0 lead and a three-hitter but was lifted after pinch-hitter Chamt Summers walked with one out and Duane Kuiper was safe on an error by shortstop Frank Taveras with two out. With runners on first and third, Jeff Reardon replaced Sanderson and Davis hit a first-pitch single to right to tie the score. Clark then lined a single off the glove of second baseman Mike Gates, enabling Kuiper to score for a 2-1 San Francisco lead. A throwing error by third baseman Tim Wallach on the same play allowed Davis to score the third Giants' run.

TONY GWYNN singled down the left field line over a drawn-in outfield to score Joe Pittman in the 10th inning and give the San Diego Padres a 3-2 victory over the New York Mets. With one out, Tim Flannery drew a walk off Neil Allen, 3-6. Pittman ran for Flannery and advanced to third on pinch-hitter Broderick Perkins's single to center. Allen then intentionally walked Gene Richards before Gwynn delivered his game-winning hit.

Luis DeLeon, 4-3, got the victory with three innings in relief of John Montefusco. The Padres sent the game into extra innings tied at 2-2 on Ruppert Jones' RBI single in the bottom of the ninth.

TROTTING—rank O'Mara admits there are times when his 210-pound bulk could be a disadvantage to him as a harness racing driver. But those times don't seem to occur when Mystic Park is racing. Saturday night at Yonkers, Mystic Park pulled O'Mara, who weighs about 60 pounds more than most good drivers, to victories in an elimination heat and in the final of the Yonkers Trot, the first race of the Triple Crown of Trotting. The performance underscored Mystic Park's versatility and makes him a leading contender for the Hambletonion, the second race of the Triple Crown, Aug. 7, at the Meadowlands. IN THE WILD

Red wolf no longer roams Southeast free

By BILL SCHULZ

ATLANTA — The red wolf no longer roams the hardwood bottoms of the Southeast. The three dozen or so survivors of a species, which once ranged from the Atlantic to Texas, are confined in three zoos.

"We have about 38, plus some pups, that's about it," said Dale Pedersen, director of the red wolf captive breeding project at the Point Defiance Zoo in Tacoma, Wash. There are two other breeding pairs — one at the St. Louis Zoo, the other at the Audubon Zoological Garden in New Orleans.

Officials in both St. Louis and New Orleans says they may have newborn pups hidden in dens, but they don't know for sure.

Pedersen said the zoos' captive breeding program is designed to raise wolves to be released in the wild.

The red wolf, a midsize major canine predator, roamed the United States before hunting and habitat destruction wiped it out.

It is smaller than its cousin, the gray wolf, which patrolled the northern forests, but larger than the coyote, the highly adaptable scrounger of the western plains.

Coloring varies from "what you would consider a rusty, red color to kind of a dark, tawny color," Pedersen said in a telephone interview.

They prey on what's available — rabbits, raccoon, nutria, small deer and occasional sheep.

Because wolves occasionally take livestock, they were killed. Bounties and other "control" programs were instituted. Between 1932 and 1964, about 50,000 red wolves were destroyed. Gray wolves met a similar fate, but a few survive in the wild.

Then in 1967, the red wolf was placed on the Endangered Species List. But by then, the process of hybridization was in gear. Red wolves, unable to find a mate of their own species, occasionally mate with a coyote. The tiny gene pool was being diluted.

Scientists decided in 1975 to try to capture as many of the remaining red wolves as they could. The animals were shipped to Tacoma, where a private captive breeding program was under way.

"We got our first animals, I would say, about 12 years ago," said Pedersen, a mink farmer who runs the capitve breeding program for the zoo. "The first animals that came in under Dr. Murray Johnson, of the University of Pudget Sound, who was doing some blood studies. It just kind of evolved from there."

In 1976 and 1978, pairs of red wolves were yeleased on Bulls Island, oyf the South Carolina Coast, to see if they would survive. The tests were considered successful and both pairs were recaptured.

Senior Geophysicist

ARCO Oil and Gas Company is one of the nation's foremost leaders in domestic oil and gas exploration and production. One reason is the consistent high quality of our seismic data interpretation. Another is our ability to recognize, develop and promote our most important natural resource--talented, creative professionals.

Our rapid growth, however, has now created more openings for senior-level explorationists than we can fill internally. This is why our district exploration management in Midland, Texas is seeking a geophysicist with 10 or more years experience. Your credentials must demonstrate familiarity with S-O-A geophysical data interpretation, and ability to apply data acquisition knowledge to help establish acquisition parameters. You also must be capable of delivering incisive oral and written presentations to management, and have clear field operations leadership potentials.

NORTHGATE $75,200

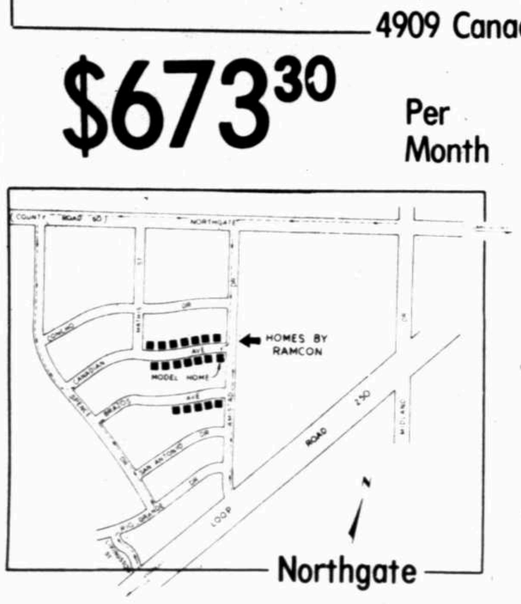
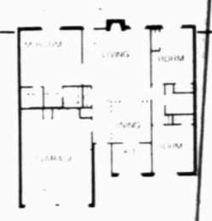
$673.30 Per Month





You can't afford NOT to buy any longer!

Total move in costs of $5250 is based on 5% down or $3800 & $1450 limited closing costs based on 15 days prepaid interest. The first year's payment of $673.30 (principal and interest only) is based on a loan amount of $71,400. The first year's payment and buyer qualification will be calculated equivalent to a rate of 7/8% for 95% loan-to-value. Interest will be charged at a rate of 15 7/8% for the first 6 months of the loan. After the first 6 months interest will be changed at the maximum 6 months Treasury Bill plus 4.25%. Payments on these mortgages are graduated so as to increase the principal and interest payments 7.50% each year for the next 4 years. At the end of the first 5 year period, the graduation in payments will cease. A new payment schedule will be computed using a variable rate mortgage to amortize the declining balance over the remaining 25 years of the mortgage bases upon the then current Treasury Bill rate plus 4.25%. The 7 1/2% maximum increase can be more if the original loan principal exceeds 125%. At each 5 year anniversary date, the payment may be adjusted to allow the remaining payments to fully amortize the loan. Annual percentage rate approximately 16.575%
