Boomtown views

A cement jungle, full of construction and concrete, is one view of Midland. In Sunday's Reporter-Telegram, some Midland students give fresh and, in some cases, extremely creative views of how the boomtown syndrome has affected their lives.

Stuffed animals

Karl Brosig of Western Taxidermy makes his living by transforming lifeless skins into animals as they appeared in real life. Find out about the details of this natural history display in Sunday's Lifestyle section.

'Killer Bridge'

Despite a shift in federal highway funds, the state highway department managed to repair Midland's "Killer Bridge," an overpass east of town that's been the scene of two fatal truck accidents in the past year. Read about it in Sunday's Reporter-Telegram.

Reagan warns Israel on AWACS sale

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration, unable to sway Senate opponents, is telling Israel that the sale of AWACS radar planes to Saudi Arabia is none of its business and warning Congress that "you'll bear the responsibilities" if the deal is defeated.

President Reagan and Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. appeared on two different fronts Thursday to try to prod the Senate into accepting the $8.5 billion arms sale.

Reagan also pledged to protect the Saudi monarchy from a revolutionary takeover and Haig said there would be no more compromising to save the AWACS sale on Capitol Hill.

But Sen. John Glenn of Ohio, a Democrat whose support is considered essential if the sale is to go through, said the deal "is doomed to defeat" unless the Saudis are willing to accept joint manning of the aircraft.

Haig told the Senate Foreign Relations Committee that an agreement with the Saudis ensures that American training crews would be aboard the planes into the 1990s. But he said the Saudis would not accept the permanent joint U.S.-Saudi crewing proposed by Glenn.

Reagan, meanwhile, told a White House news conference that the sale "significantly enhances our own vital national security interests in the Middle East."

Contending that the sale "poses no threat to Israel now or in the future," the president said: "While we must always take into account the vital interests of our allies, American security interests must remain our internal responsibility. It is not the business of other nations to make American foreign policy."

Asked if he could guarantee that the AWACS would not fall into enemy hands if the Saudi monarchy fell in an Iran-type revolution, Reagan said:

"I can make that guarantee that it will not compromise our security. ... I have to say that Saudi Arabia, we will not permit another Iran."

Without providing specifics, Reagan said "there is no way we could stand by" and see Saudi Arabia taken over by anyone who wanted to cut off its oil exports.

Congress now has until Oct. 31 to try to veto the $8.5 billion sale of five Airborne Warning and Control System radar planes and F-15 jet fighter weaponry.

Both the Senate committee and the House Foreign Affairs Committee are now lined up to vote against the sale next week. A House veto is likely Oct. 13, but the Senate vote is still too close to call.

At the Senate hearing, Sen. Larry Pressler, R-S.D., told Haig that he could see nothing new in the Saudi assurances and asked if the administration can make any further changes to avoid defeat.

"This issue is of such significance that I think the president is going to do what he thinks is right — win or lose," Haig replied.

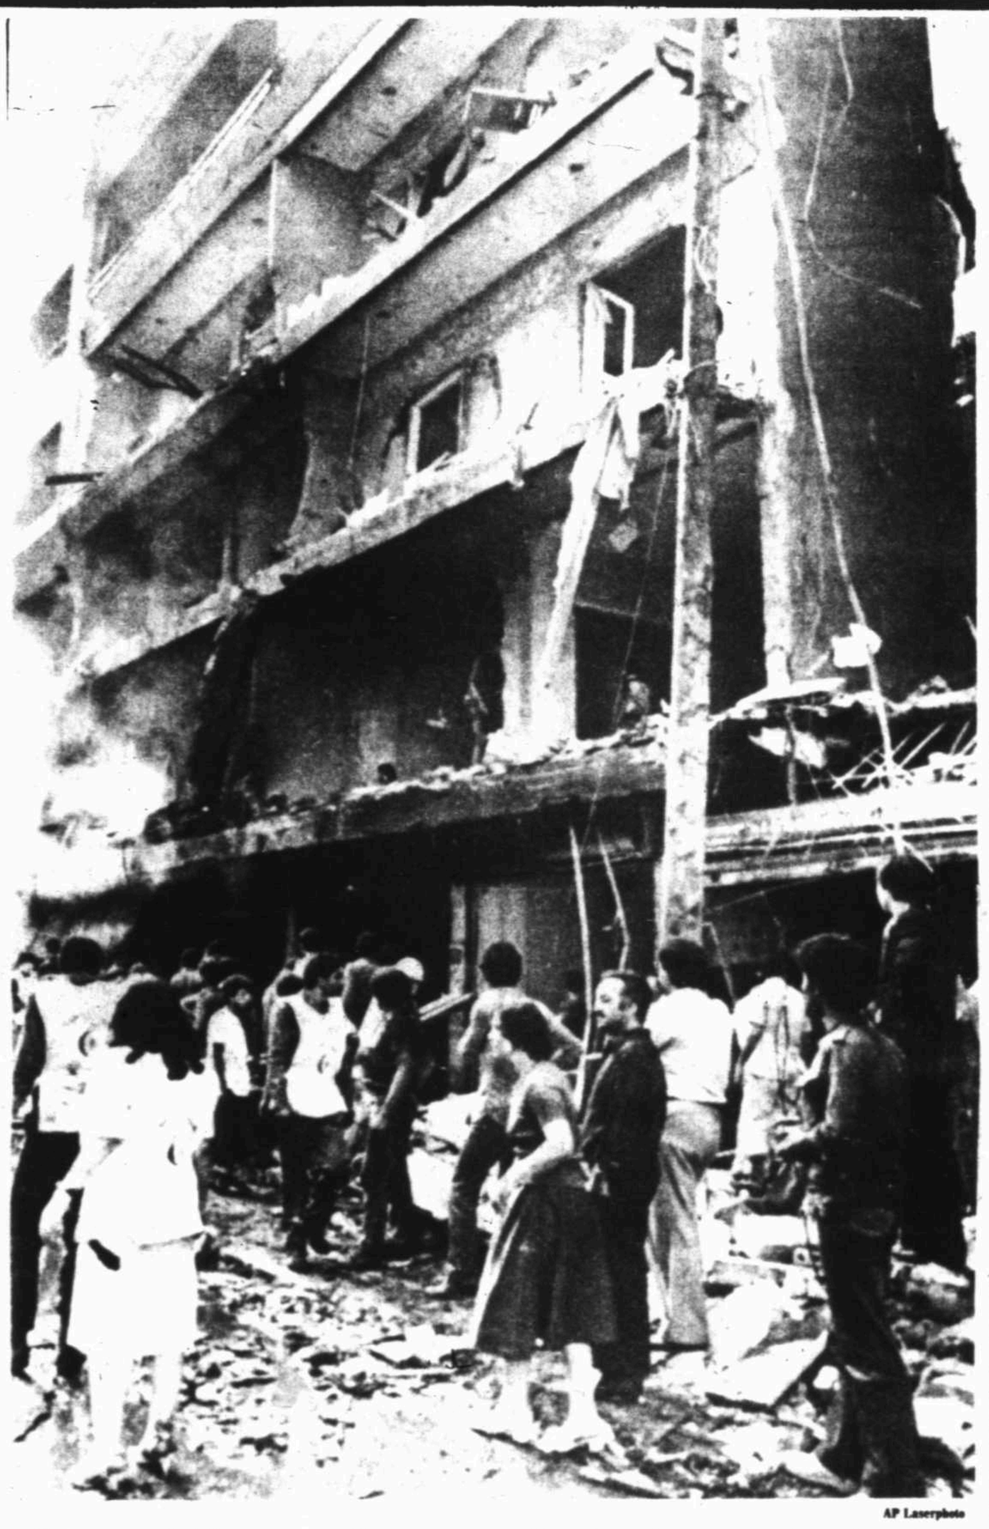

"And if you in your responsible way decide not to support it, you'll bear the responsibilities for that vote — and be held accountable by the electorate, by the American people and by your own consciences for whether it was right and what consequences it did or did not lead to," he said.

Earlier, Glenn told Haig that he cannot accept the sale as is because it lacks joint crewing and because the Saudi planes would not be fully equipped to guide U.S. as well as Saudi forces in a Middle East war.

"You would defeat it on the basis of that?" Haig asked.

"Yes," Glenn replied.

"Well, senator, I think that would be tragic," Haig said.

Pedestrians view damage caused by a car bomb blast in front of the Palestinian Liberation offices in west Beirut, Lebanon, Thursday. The explosion ripped through the nerve center of the PLO, killing at least 83 and wounding 300.

PLO may retaliate for bombing

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — The PLO declared today "the option is always open" for retaliation against Israel for the car-bomb explosion at a Palestinian headquarters that left 83 dead and more than 300 wounded. Meanwhile, another bomb went off in southern Lebanon, wrecking an empty Shiite Moslem school.

"This is a new kind of war with Israel and we have to get accustomed to it...The option is always open" for striking back, said the Palestine Liberation Organization's spokesman, Mahmoud Labady, a survivor of Thursday's explosion in Beirut.

Labady, in an interview with The Associated Press in his shattered offices, reiterated the PLO contention that the spate of bombings against Palestinian targets in Lebanon was an Israeli violation of the July 24 cease-fire.

Police reported a 165-pound bomb went off in the primary school in the southern Lebanese Shiite Moslem village of Jargou today, causing extensive damage but no casualties. They said the school was empty because of the Moslem Sabbath, and that two people were arrested in connection with the blast.

The PLO command said none of its leaders were hurt in the Beirut explosion Thursday. But a pro-Moscow faction, the Democratic Front for the Liberation of Palestine, claimed a member of the PLO Central Committee member, Haj Sami, and his wife were killed in their apartment.

Jobless rate up to 7.5 percent

By The Associated Press

Weakness in the economy has apparently spread beyond the slumping housing industry, costing many more Americans their jobs this past month.

The Labor Department reported today that a big increase in jobless adults boosted the nation's unemployment rate to 7.5 percent last month, from 7.2 percent in August.

Nearly 8 million were out of work in September, about 300,000 more than in August. And the number of "discouraged workers" — those who have abondoned their job searches — grew by 1.1 million in the third quarter, the department said.

On Thursday, the government reported a 1.9 percent drop in August orders for new manufactured goods. That was the first monthly decline since January and supported some analysts' belief that the economy is growing weaker.

In another sign of sagging economic activity, the Commerce Department reported construction spending in August dropped 1.6 percent from July.

City police may get higher pay increase

City police — and possibly all municipal employees — may be getting a higher pay increase than the 6 percent across-the-board hike already allocated in the new fiscal budget.

"I feel confident we'll probably do something more than what's been set up in the original budget," Mayor G. Thane Akins said Thursday. "But as far as the actual numbers are concerned, I don't know what that number will be."

The issue will be discussed at the city council meeting Oct. 13. Among the details that need to be ironed out, according to Akins, is whether to give the increase at one time or spread it out in two increments during the year. The city's new fiscal year began Thursday.

Another matter that will require resolution is whether to grant an additional pay hike to all city employees or consider raises on a department-by-department basis, according to how much money the employees in a given department currently receive.

"We haven't settled on anything yet," said Akins.

Odessa city employees just obtained an across-the-board hike of 15 percent, with a minimum of $200 per month for lower paid personnel. Officials there said the increase was necessary to attract and keep competent help in the wake of a growing turnover rate.

The turnover rate in Midland has been as high as 100 percent in some departments, according to Assistant City Manager Fred Poe.

Sales of All Saver certificates steady

By BILL MODISETT
Staff Writer

Sales of the new tax-exempt All Saver certificates got off to a steady start in Midland banking and savings and loan institutions Thursday. But representatives of the financial institutions predicted better sales today since the interest rate on the certificates will drop on Monday.

Richard Smith, an investments officer with The First National Bank, noted this morning that "our sales were steady" Thursday. "We were very busy yesterday and expect more sales today due to the change of rates Monday," he added.

Initial offering of the certificates promised an interest rate of 12.61 percent. But the certificates, which are based on the auction average yield of one-year Treasury bills, will offer only a 12.14 percent interest rate beginning Monday. The 12.14 percent rate will be offered until another rate takes effect Nov. 2.

"I think we will see a lot of interest on the CD (certificate of deposit) throughout the period it's offered, which is the first of October through Dec. 31, 1982," speculated Smith.

First National had "three or four extra people" on duty Thursday to meet the anticipated volume of business brought about by the initial sales of the certificates, Smith said.

The certificates, which mature in one year and bear the interest rate for the entire period which was in effect when they were purchased, have held the attention of savers for some time. Smith noted that an individual in a 35 percent tax bracket would have to receive a 19 percent interest rate on another CD to earn 12.61 percent while an individual in a 40 percent tax bracket would have to get a 21 percent rate on another CD to draw the 12.61 percent return.

Congress has limited the interest rate paid to savers by banking institutions and savings and loan associations to 70 percent of the average annual investment yield on 52-week Treasury bills. Thursday's T-bill auction determined that yield to be 17.31 percent.

Marilon Howell of Midland National Bank's CD department said that Thursday's activity was similarly steady, but that she expected selling to pick up today. She said that on Thursday people were buying everything "from the $500 all the way up."

"We've had a lot of calls for several weeks now," noted Toby Smith, a new accounts counselor for Citizens Savings & Loan Association. While Thursday selling activity was steady and the certificates seem well received by the public, she anticipated activity to increase today prior to Monday's interest rate drop.

Movie to be filmed in Midland area

'Waltz Across Texas' to feature oil business

By GEORGIA TEMPLE
Staff Writer

It is to be a love story. Set against the search for black gold, "Waltz Across Texas" will be filmed in 38 days beginning Wednesday.

All 25 locations are in the Midland area.

That was the game plan announced Thursday afternoon during a press conference at Midland Regional Airport. On hand to explain the project were executive producer Martin Jurow, co-producer Scott Rosenfelt and leads Anne Archer and Terry Jastrow.

Jastrow is the Midland connection.

The son of Mr. and Mrs. K.M. Jastrow of Jastrow Gallery, he spent his formative years in Midland, leaving after he graduated from high school for the University of Houston and a golf scholarship. From there, he went to a job waiting for him in New York at ABC Sports. By the age of 22, Jastrow was the youngest producer in the network's history.

As far as "Waltz Across Texas" goes, in the beginning there was Jastrow and his idea.

"Having been raised in Midland and having seen the exposure" Midland had received in the publications of Town and Country and W (both did stories on Midland's ultra-rich society), he wanted to offer a different slant to the public, Jastrow said. For him, these magazines only presented a "small percent of the people in Midland — 3 to 5 percent."

He used the characterization of the oil man in the movie "Giant" as an example of the type of attitude the "rest of the world has of this town (Midland)" saying, "I had never seen that guy that was supposed to be the independent oil man."

Referring to his childhood spent as the son of an oil man he said, "It's a roller coaster existence. My dad would buy three cars for the family one year and the next year have to go out and sell them all."

Jastrow wanted to portray "the wonderful romance and excitment of the oil business."

That was over two years ago. He shared this idea with his wife, Miss Archer. Together, they began the long and often trying task of making this dream a reality.

Last fall, both were in Midland to announce their prospective project. At that time, they explained this was to be an independent project, the first to be produced under the auspice of Astor Corporation formed by Miss Archer and Jastrow.

Many films are independently financed. What makes this one possibly unique is that it may be the first one almost totally financed by those involved in the subject — oil men.

The list of investors includes Miss Archer and Jastrow, who have put up their ranch in Colorado as collateral.

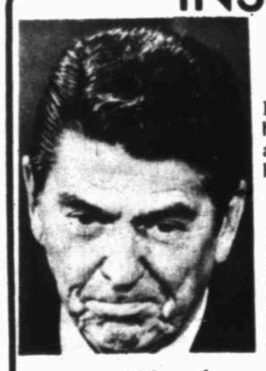

The project will bring into the Midland-Odessa economy "at least $1.5 million" during the six weeks of filming, Jurow said Thursday. "We like to come into a community and work very solidly with the community," he said.

Jurow's experience includes producing such films as "The Pink Panther," "The Great Race," "Breakfast at Tiffany's" and "The Hanging Tree." He and Miss Archer have known each other for as long as her lifetime; he's her godfather.

The movie will also "employ at least 200 in this

The Boy Scouts' motto applied to President Reagan at his press conference Thursday as he had obviously done his homework. It showed in an air of easy confidence — a contrast from his last press conference.

Reagan unlikely to get all budget cuts

By DAVID ESPO
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan is threatening to use his veto power to make scaled-down spending targets stick in Congress, but even his allies concede he is unlikely to get all the budget cuts he wants.

"I will sign no legislation that would bust the budget and violate our commitment to hold down federal spending," Reagan declared Thursday at a nationally broadcast news conference.

Shortly afterward, however, House Republican leader Robert H. Michel of Illinois said he doubted Congress would give Reagan his entire package of $13 billion in 1982 spending cuts and $3 billion in tax increases.

"Even if we don't achieve the $16 billion...there's nothing sacrosanct about that figure," Michel said. "If he gets another $10 billion in cuts, he obviously isn't going to veto it. Anything we get beyond what we got is that much more."

The new package of cuts and tax increases outlined last week, intended to hold the 1982 budget deficit to $43.1 billion, comes on top of the $35 billion in spending reductions that Congress voted earlier.

At his news conference, Reagan declined to say in advance what legislation he had in mind when he said he was ready to veto money bills.

"I would have to see a bill and what finally winds up on my desk before I would give an answer as to veto or not," he said.

Speaking on the day his first round of budget cuts went into effect, Reagan said his economic program would take time to achieve results. But he vowed, "We will not be swayed from our plan by every changing current, every passing trend or every short-term fluctuation."

Reagan said that despite the cuts, the government would continue to take care of people who "are totally dependent" on assistance.

"What we call the safety net is still in place," he said.

WHILE REAGAN brandished his veto threat, budget director David A. Stockman pressed the case for deeper spending cuts and a group of moderate and liberal House Republians reaffirmed their objection to deeper cuts in social programs without more reductions than Reagan wants in defense.

"We don't want to take round two of domestic without round one of defense," said an aide to Rep. Carl Pursell, R-Mich., the leader of the self-described "gypsy moth" group of GOP House members.

The first test of Reagan's ability to prevail on his new round of budget cuts is likely to come next week, when the House debates legislation providing funds for the departments of Labor, Health and Human Services and Education.

House Republican aides say the measure is about $2 billion over Reagan's budget target, but Pursell's aide said the group of moderate Republicans vowed to fight anticipated amendments to make cuts.

Stockman ran into criticism before the House Budget Committee, where he appealed for more cuts but provided few details of the presidnt's new package.

"Those of us who do not disagree with your goals, but have disagreed with some of the specifics of your policy are troubled by the fact that before this last round of cuts even goes into effect, we are already faced with another set," said Rep. James Jones, D-Okla., the panel's chairman.

Stockman said more than half the job remains to be done if Congress is to achieve Reagan's target of a balanced budget in 1984.

"The current budget outlook — in the absence of further policy actions — is for budget deficits of about $60 billion in each of the years 1982-1984," he said.

THE WHITE HOUSE, meanwhile, asked Congress on Thursday to withhold spending $737.2 million for a variety of programs, including the Appalachian Regional Commission, a synthetic fuel plant and funds unclaimed by participants in the government's infamous Tuskegee syphilis study.

Outlining the movie "Waltz Across Texas" that will start filming Wednesday in the Midland area are, from left, producer Martin Jurow, actress Anne Archer, actor Terry Jastrow and associate producer Scott Rosenfelt. Jastrow, a native of Midland, came up with the idea of a movie which tells the story of the independent oil man.

area — behind and in front of the camera," Jurow said, "with eight to 10 people having speaking parts."

Announcement of other cast members also was made Thursday. They include Noah Vera of the television series the "Rockford Files;" Mary Kay Place of the television series "Mary Hartman, Mary Hartman;" Richard Fonsworth of "A Picture Comes a Horseman;" Josh Taylor of television's soap opera "Days of Our Lives;" Ben Piazza; and Savannah Smith.

Ernie Day will be the director. Waylon Jennings will sing the theme song, "Waltz Across Texas With You."

Although the film deals with the oil business, it was repeatedly stressed Thursday by all those there that it is "a love story."

As Miss Archer said, "Terry and I met as actors in an acting class in L.A. We had the opportunity for six or seven months to act together. We realized there was a wonderful chemistry between us and it would be a shame not to get it on film."

In the movie Miss Archer, whose most recent film credit is the soon to be released Universal Pictures' "Green Ice" with Ryan O'Neal and Omar Sharif, will play an East Coast geologist with business, not monkey-business, on her mind. Jastrow will play an independent oil man.

Cooler temperatures expected

Cooler temperatures, slightly windy days and a chance of rain should accompany Midlanders into the first week of October.

The forecast calls for a 20 percent chance of rain through Saturday with temperatures teetering from the upper 70s to the low 80s, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport.

Low tonight is expected to fall in the low 60s with a slight chance of thundershowers. High Saturday should be in the low 80s.

Thursday's 80-degree mark fell short of the 1951 record high temperature of 98 for the day and the overnight record low of 42 set in 1965 was an even 22 degrees short of 64 overnight low.

Winds are expected to travel from the east 5-10 mph, becoming southeasterly tonight 10-15 mph, increasing to 15-20 mph on Saturday.

Jewelry store victim of 'sting'

Another local jewelry store has fallen victim to a scam whereby someone comes in, looks at expensive earrings, then switches them for cheap imitations.

Dillard's Fine Jewelry in Midland Park Mall reported to police Thursday that a pair of 18-karat gold earrings worth $3,100 had been replaced by a pair worth $100.

A store employee told officers two black men and a black woman had been looking at the earrings during the past week. The switch was discovered Thursday. Similar thefts have been reported by two other jewelry stores in the past two weeks. Another jeweler told police he had sold eight pairs of imitation earrings recently to persons matching the description of the suspects.

Odessa police today also reported an earring switch at a jewelry store in Permian Mall. In that case, the loss amounted to $1,000.

Police Roundup

In a burglary complaint to Midland police Thursday, Brad Patteson of 1200 W. Missouri said someone entered his home by breaking a bedroom window. Taken were two television sets and an AM-FM stereo set. Total loss was placed at $550.

Burfeind taken off critical list

Grace Burfeind, injured in a traffic accident six weeks ago, has been taken off the critical list and was tranferred Wednesday from the intensive care unit to a private room at Midland Memorial Hospital.

Although she remains in a coma from a severe brain injury, a hospital spokeswoman today said Mrs. Burfeind, 33, of 4708 Brookdale, is responding to treatment and is now listed in serious condition.

She was injured when her car was struck broadside by a pickup at the intersection of Powell Street and Illinois Avenue the morning of Aug. 15. Driver of the pickup and his passenger suffered minor injuries in the crash.

Chamber forms search committee to replace Tyler

Midland Chamber of Commerce President William E. Ortloff has announced the formation of a special search committee to find a replacement for the late Frederick B. Tyler, who died Saturday of an apparent heart attack at the family's lake home near Granite Shoals.

Tyler had served as executive vice president of the Midland Chamber of Commerce since 1965. He was recognized as a longtime civic and chamber of commerce leader.

In making the announcement, Ortloff said the search committee will begin work immediately and will make reports of their progress to the chamber executive committee.

"We recognize that the search committee will have a very difficult time in replacing a person of Tyler's stature, but I'm sure the search committee, the chamber executive committee and the chamber board will act in the best interest of the organization and the community," Ortloff said.

In the interim, Ortloff said the chamber's executive committee had requested that Grant Billingsley, manager of economic development for the chamber, serve as acting executive vice president.

President defines defense course

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, announcing probably the most important military decision of his presidency, is setting a decades-long course for defense against what he considers a growing Soviet ability to wage all-out war.

While sources said the Reagan defense plan being unveiled plans for a scaled-down MX missile deployment in the West and a new B-1 bomber, the exact scope of the MX system and where the nuclear missiles will be located were a closely held secret.

Reports that the Reagan plan would include 100 MX missiles scattered amid 1,000 shelters were labeled "so many errors" by administration spokesmen, but sources indicated it was the number of shelters — not missiles — that may have been wrong. The sources also said Reagan had not decided exactly where the missiles will be put.

Actual construction of the shelters is not scheduled to begin until 1984, so delaying a choice of sites would not hold up putting the missiles in place.

The most likely locations are on government-owned land in Nevada, with other possible sites in Utah or in existing Minuteman missile silos in North Dakota, Montana and Wyoming.

SOME 400 OF the 1,000 Minuteman silos could be easily modified for the MX, but critics have contended these shelters are vulnerable to destruction by advanced Soviet weapons unless a second layer of defense — anti-ballistic missiles — are put in place.

Whatever the configuration of the plan, it will form the basis of U.S. defense policy for years because major weapons systems are not born in a day, or even a decade.

A new generation of missiles such as the MX was first discussed in the mid-1960s, for instance, and the first MX, 10 nuclear warheads, will not be operational until the mid-1980s.

As for the B-1, development of a new bomber has been an Air Force priority since before the last B-52s — the stratofortresses — were produced in 1962. And sources say that at the same time the B-1 is being built, development will continue on the even more advanced, radar-eluding Stealth bomber, expected to be ready in the 1990s.

Former President Carter's MX plan called for 200 missiles to be shuttled among 4,600 shelters. The idea was to force the Soviets, whose increasingly accurate missiles make current fixed U.S. sites vulnerable, to use more than 4,000 of their nuclear warheads to wipe out just 200 American missiles.

Carter canceled production of the B-1 in 1977, maintaining that the bomber could not penetrate Soviet air defenses, but the Air Force has since been developing a more advanced version known as the B-1B.

An Air Force spokesman, Maj. Don Brownlee, said Thursday that the advanced plane would be low-flying, making it better able to elude Soviet radar. The new craft also would include "part of the Stealth technology" designed to make it less visible to radar, he said.

Grain sales to Soviets could set new record

MOSCOW (AP) — U.S.-Soviet diplomatic relations are in a post-detente deep-freeze, but the Reagan administration expects American grain sales to the Soviet Union to set a new record in the 12 months.

The administration announced Thursday it has offered Moscow 23 million metric tons of America's wheat and corn crops and expects the Kremlin to buy at least 18 million tons.

At current prices of $150 to $170 a ton, Soviet purchases could total $2.7 billion to $3.06 billion in the year ending Sept. 30, 1982.

But the New York Times reported that grain market analysts in Washington said this would not be enough to raise U.S. farm prices for corn and wheat immediately.

"It was about what we'd expected," the Times quoted analyst Larry Engstrom as saying. "The farmers and the secretary of agriculture were hoping for an indication of even more, given the poor prices they're getting now."

Agriculture Undersecretary Selley Lodwick, after two days of negotiations with Soviet officials, told a news conference in Moscow Thursday:

"After reviewing both the U.S. supply and demand situation, we have concluded that the Soviet Union will be a substantial buyer of U.S. grain in the coming year."

The United States is now in the last year of a six-year agreement committing the Soviet Union to buy between 6 million and 8 million metric tons a year from the United States, but any more must be negotiated.

The 23-million-ton maximum thus would be nearly triple the amount previously authorized for sale in the next year.

Grain sales above 8 million metric tons were embargoed by the Carter administration in punishment for the Soviet military intervention in Afghanistan. The embargo was lifted after 16 months by President Reagan.

Family returns home after Texas experience

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — Jim and Sue Marshall are back in Michigan again and vow never to return to Texas.

"After two weeks, I knew it wouldn't work out," Mrs. Marshall said of the family's trek from their Munith home in northeast Jackson County to Houston in search of a better life.

Marshall, 36, quit his job as storeroom keeper with Consumers Power Co. in Jackson when promised higher pay as a relief pumper for 50 oil wells.

But a year in the Sun Belt did not bring all the couple and their four children had wanted.

"One guy asked me, 'you're a foreigner, aren't you?' " Marshall recalled. "I finally understood that what he meant was that I was from up north."

The children, including 2-year-old twins Bobby and Sarah, even wished they could trade the swarms of biting fire ants that plagued them when they played outside for some Michigan mosquitoes.

Their son, Corey, 12, and daughter, Shawn, 17, found school discipline stricter than they were used to in Michigan.

"They use a paddle," Corey said. "If you get in trouble they pop you once and you can't giggle or they will pop you again."

The Marshalls also faced unexpectedly high utility, food and housing costs. Utility bills for their 14 foot by 70 foot trailer averaged $165 a month, Mrs. Marshall said.

Even though Marshall has not found a job since returning to Michigan, the couple maintained it is good to be back where they feel at home.

Not everybody gets excited about Cowboy cheerleaders

KENT, Ohio (AP) — The ballyhooed appearance Oct. 10 of the Dallas Cowboy cheerleaders at a Kent State University football game has caused some in the university's community to jeer instead of cheer.

Kent State officials thought they had come up with a great drawing attraction when they landed the professional cheerleaders to perform at homecoming festivities.

The Dallas Cowboy cheerleaders are members of a 34-member squad that roots at Dallas' professional football team's home games in Irving, Texas. The cheerleaders go elsewhere a few times a year.

Ticket sales are up for the homecoming game pitting Northern Illinois University against Kent State.

And critics have spoken.

Mary Ellen Warden, president of the Kent Women's Organization, said some student groups may oppose the appearance.

"It just seems to perpetuate all the stereotypes about women," she said. "I'm kind of disgusted at the university."

Kent City Councilman Christopher Myers, a member of the alumni association, branded the cheerleaders "a professional bump and grind group." He said the traditional college homecoming festivities will "play second fiddle" to the Dallas Cowboy cheerleaders.

Kent State football games, in recent years, haven't filled even half of the 30,000 seats in Dix Stadium. This time, however, homecoming crowd predictions range from 17,000 to 25,000.

"With good weather, I expect the largest crowd in 10 years," said Charles W. Ingler, vice president for university affairs.

"Frankly, we've been considering many promotional ideas," Ingler said. "We badly need the gate receipts that come from good attendance at our stadium events."

Kent State will be the second college performance for the squad, whose blue halter blouses and white shorts and vests are familiar sights to television viewers of nationally broadcast Dallas games.

The squad is not charging a fee, but the university is responsible for expenses. An alumnus who owns the University Inn has donated lodging for the squad.

Survivors lose first round in Pantex suit

AMARILLO (AP) — The survivors of three men killed in a 1977 explosion at the Pantex Nuclear Weapons Assembly plant have lost the first round in their suit against the federal government.

U.S. District Judge Mary Lou Robinson not only ruled the federal government was not responsible for the deaths, but also ordered the plaintiffs to reimburse the government for court costs. U.S. Attorney William Johnson said the costs would not exceed $500.

"We will take it to a higher court ... We will take it to the Supreme Court," said Norma Grimes, the widow of one of the victims.

"I still think we have grounds to stand on," she added.

Survivors of the three victims had filed wrongful death suits against the government and asked for $750,000 in damages. Robinson heard the case in a non-jury trial in February.

Chester Grimes, Johnnie Hendershot and Ray Tucker were killed in the explosion on March 3, 1977 when one of them was "contact machining" LX-09, a plastic explosive. Contacting machining means an operator works directly with an explosive without safety barriers.

The procedure was prohibited under U.S. Energy Research and Development Administration regulations that required the work with explosives to be done from behind a safety barrier by using a closed-circuit camera.

Attorneys for the survivors of the victims had argued the government was liable in the deaths because the federal agency had extended the plant's 1969 exemption from regulations barring contact machining.

ERDA had continued the exemption in 1972 and 1975 based on safety tests conducted by Mason-Hanger explosives experts and the $2.1 million cost of the safety equipment.

Robinson ruled the government was not liable because the deaths did not result directly from the actions of a federal employee. And she said ERDA "did not fail to exercise reasonable care" by relying on data from Mason-Hanger's own explosives experts in granting the continuing exemption.

Robinson said the federal government was responsible for protecting the employees of its contractor or warning the contractor of the danger. Mason-Hanger was aware of the danger involved in the explosives processing, Robinson said.

Frances Tucker, the widow of engineering technician Ray Tucker said, "I think they should have ruled the other way. I think it was proven beyond a doubt that the machinery was out-dated."

Tucker's daughter, Sonia Dumas, said she was "certainly not surprised" by the decision, but declined to comment further until her attorney returned from out of state.

The Pantex plant is located about 17 miles northeast of Amarillo and serves as a final assembly point for U.S.-manufactured nuclear weapons.

No-no gifts auctioned to clean U.S. basement

WASHINGTON (AP) — Uncle Sam cleaned out the government's basement and found a Russian tea set, two Korean suits, four Henry Kissinger busts and other no-no gifts that netted $55,422.50 for the Treasury.

Thursday's auction of gifts from foreign governments to U.S. officials didn't balance the federal budget. In fact, the goverment fell short of its $60,000 goal.

And the bargains were in the eye of the beholder.

The two men's suits, size 42-long, gifts from Korea to former Rep. Herman Badillo, D-N.Y., were sold for $45. A picture made of duck, cardinal and quail feathers netted $270, while the Russian tea set was sold for $2,300. And a soiled suede Gucci handbag was auctioned off for $175.

It was the first time the government had given the public a chance to buy the gifts, some of which had been stored away since passage of a 1977 law that forbids U.S. officials from accepting gifts from foreign governments.The law covers all items valued over $100.

Tall buildings hide view of state Capitol

AP Laserphoto

The western view of the Texas Capitol is blocked by the Westgate Building, one of several Austin high-rises that hides the Capitol.

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — From her third-floor office Lynn Hough has a clear view of the gaudy gold American Bank, the black monolith of the Austin National Bank and other downtown bank towers.

The 290-foot tower of American Bank blocks her view of the state Capitol, a landmark that is fast becoming hidden by new bank buildings.

It's a visual onslaught that began with the construction of the 24-story Westgate Building in 1965.

Like many Austinites who have called her at the City Planning Department, Ms. Hough does not like to look at the boxy bank towers. She wants to see the Capitol.

"There's nothing for the eye to linger on. Nothing to excite the imagination," she said, gazing out the window.

As Austin gets bigger, the Capitol seems to get smaller. The 309-foot building used to dominate the skyline. Those days are gone, and some Austinites want to keep it from getting worse.

Being able to see the Capitol is important to the city and the state, said University of Texas Architecture Professor Blake Alexander. It goes beyond quick glances at a nice old building, he said.

"It's extremely important to the future of the quality and character of Austin. Our concern is that without guidelines, the development of downtown Austin will completely destroy the Capitol as a major visual element of the city," he said.

"Every one of them tries to attract attention," he said of the high-rises. "When you have 25 major elements on the skyline trying to attract attention, it doesn't really help any one of them, and it certainly destroys the effectiveness of the Capitol."

Supporters of clear views — the ones that remain — of the Capitol want the city to put restrictions on future downtown skyscrapers. Ms. Hough is working on a study to be presented to the City Planning Commission.

SHE HAS FOUND only 11 remaining clear views of the Capitol from public areas. Ms. Hough wants the city to protect those views.

"Every community needs some sort of symbol, some sort of reminder of its past ... Certainly, the banks don't fulfill that function, although they are the most dominant feature in the skyline now," she said.

Ms. Hough, an architecture graduate of UT, is almost romantic about the pink granite Capitol. It's an architectural "wonder," she said, replete with "intricacies" that are absent from the bank buildings.

Downtown, without a view of the Capitol, is a "canyon maze of ugly buildings," she said.

"If we could just salvage just one good view of the Capitol...," she said.

Bernard Snyder laughed when asked about saving Capitol views.

"I consider it a minor problem," said Snyder, a member of the Planning Commission.

It's too late to worry about it, according to Snyder, a commercial real estate broker who used to own ladies clothing stores.

"The state, for whatever reason, has not paid a lot of attention to how tall its buildings are. The university hasn't taken the Capitol into consideration," he said.

Snyder said the city itself is obstructing a view of the Capitol with its new police building.

RESTRICTIONS ON downtown buildings would place a "penalty on the few." The answer would have been to do something about it years ago, Snyder said.

"I wish we could have done something about it before. For whatever reason, we chose not to," he said.

Downtown Austin poses a contradiction in goals for the city. Many stores are closing. New office buildings are the hope for keeping the area vibrant. Land costs are such that you have to build a tall building to make it worthwhile.

Robert Fry, president of United Bank, said looking at the Capitol is nice, but building Austin is more important.

"What I'll say and what I'd like to say are two different things," he said of critics of Austin skyscrapers.

"With the cost of land, you have to build up," said Fry.

"The city has got to grow," he said. "The Capitol is there and it always will be. We'll always be able to see it. You can't preserve the skyline for 20 miles around the city and expect the city to prosper and grow."

The 16-story United Bank is the newest to rise near the Capitol. In a column about protecting views of the Capitol, Austin American-Statesman Editor Ray Mariotti praised the new building. The bank chairman "took a classy design, furnished it elegantly, highlighted it with an art treasure trove."

What Mariotti didn't like is the sign around the top — "a neon ad that invades the sky."

Helicopter rider jumps to death

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — A man on a helicopter ride at the State Fair of Oklahoma jumped 300 feet to his death, breaking loose from the pilot and his two companions who had tried to restrain him, police said.

Police Lt. Walt Kostiuk said the man had been arguing with his two companions in the helicopter before he jumped Thursday night.

Officers declined to identify the victim pending notification of relatives.

Kostiuk said the victim and his companions had boarded the craft for the ride, which allows passengers to hover over the fairgrounds.

When the argument broke out, the man suddenly tried to force open the helicopter's door while the craft was high above the ground. As the companions and the pilot tried to pull him back, the craft descended to about 300 feet, and the man leaped, Kostiuk said.

The body landed in a field, police said.

Astronomers find a lot of nothing fills big hole in space

WASHINGTON (AP) — What's big enough to hold 2,000 galaxies with their billions of stars and still not be crowded? Absolutely nothing.

And that's what astronomers found deep in space — a big area of nothing, a huge void that makes up more than 1 percent of the entire visible universe.

Scientists said Thursday that the vast region of empty space appears almost devoid of galaxies or other large bodies.

Dr. Robert Kirshner of the University of Michigan at Ann Arbor said it is larger than any previously detected, so vast that 2,000 galaxies the size of the Milky Way ordinarily would be found within a space of that size.

"We've known for a long time that there are voids out there, but nothing like this," Kirshner said in a telephone interview. "It's a much bigger thing than anybody expected."

Astronomers said this "hole" in space is about 300 million light years across. By comparison, a galaxy like the Milky Way is a meer 100,000 light years in diameter.

A light year is the distance light travels through space in a year at 186,326 miles per second, or about 6 trillion miles.

Kirshner said the void is about 400 million light years from our solar system and increasing in size as galaxies of stars near its boundaries pull closer together because of their gravity.

The astronomer said the void probably is not totally empty and could contain some gases and maybe even small galaxies too tiny to be seen from Earth. In any case, he added, there isn't much there.

Scientists have long known that galaxies tend to clump together into clusters, but it was only recently that they started paying attention to the voids between them.

As part of a program to map galactic clusters in three dimensions to learn about their formation, an effort partially funded by the National Science Foundation, scientists now must examine those voids, Kirshner said.

Many cosmologists who study the origin and nature of the universe believe that galaxies were once more evenly distributed across the heavens.

But Dr. Paul L. Schechter of the Kitt Peak National Observatory in Arizona, one of those who discovered the super void, said this changed with time.

According to the theory, he said, galaxies in denser regions came together to form clusters and those in less dense regions moved away to form voids.

Schechter said that when the universe, estimated to be about 15 billion years old, was very young, "the density of stars and galaxies may have been nearly equal in the two kinds of regions."

The scientists found the super void when they turned telescopes in the direction of the constellation Bootes.

"To have found a population density of less than three times the average would have been a rare find," Schechter said. "But finding that the density is about 10 times less than the average is exceedingly hard to understand."

Other scientists involved in the discovery were Dr. Augustus Oemler Jr. of Yale University and Dr. Stephen A. Shectman of the Mount Wilson and Las Campanas Observatories, headquartered in Pasadena, Calif.

Population shifts may force district pairs

AUSTIN (AP) — Comptroller Bob Bullock's stand-in on the Legislative Redistricting Board has denied reports that Bullock is trying to "get" certain senators by eliminating their districts.

But, said Robert Spellings, a senatorial redistricting plan can satisfy legal requirements only if it "pairs" two West Texas senators and two East Texas senators.

Population shifts mean each of those two areas must give up a senator, said Spellings, Bullock's redistricting consultant and former deputy.

Lynn Moak, an aide to Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, chairman of the board, said such pairings of senators are unnecessary.

The five-member board has until midnight Oct. 28 to draw new House and Senate districts. Bullock is under treatment for alcoholism in California, but Spellings said he will return Oct. 23.

Spellings denied reports that Bullock instructed him to draw plans that would "pair" Sen. Ed Howard, D-Texarkana, with Sen. Roy Blake, D-Nacogdoches, and Sen. Grant Jones, D-Abilene, with some other senator, such as Ray Farabee, D-Wichita Falls, or Bob Glasgow, D-Stephenville.

"I will swear on my children's head he has never told me, 'Go pair those people.' ... I'll take a lie detector test," Spellings said in a telephone interview.

Howard and Jones have drawn Bullock's ire in recent months, and Jones has talked of running for comptroller.

A friend of Bullock suggested Bullock might have "popped off" that he would like to "get" Howard or Jones through redistricting but never intended to follow through.

"My plan will have an East Texas pair and a West Texas pair. ... It is obvious from a legal standpoint you have to make those pairs. ... Personalities don't make any difference to me — they just don't," Spellings said.

Legal requirements districts must meet under the federal Voting Rights Act and U.S. Supreme Court decisions include equality of population, protection of minority voting strength, compactness and community of interest.

Wood grand jury continues probe

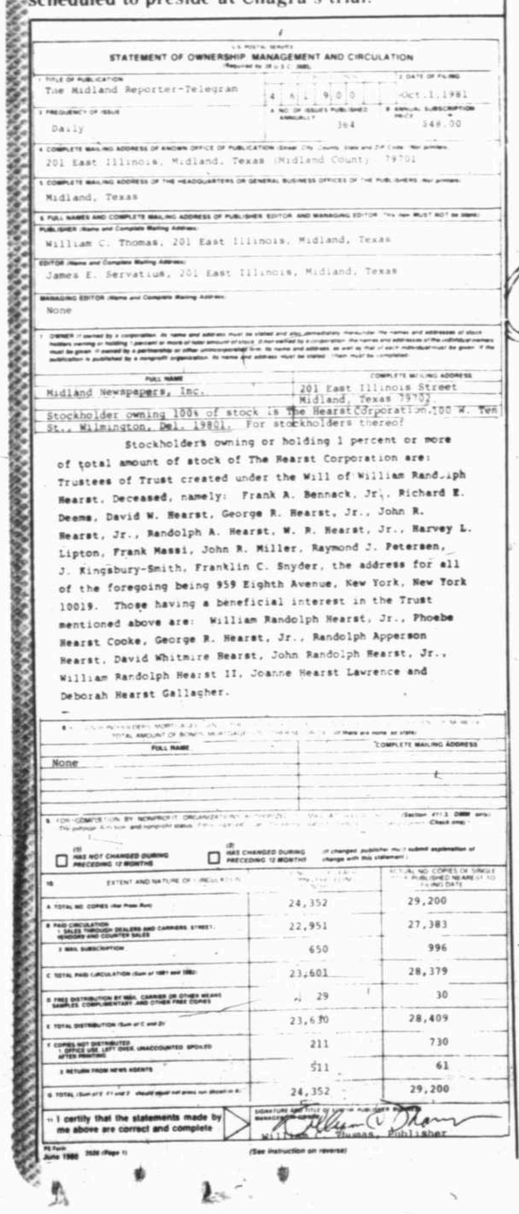

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The grand jury investigating U.S. District Judge John H. Wood Jr.'s slaying has questioned the step-daughter of convicted hired killer Charles V. Harrelson and two acquaintances of convicted narcotics trafficker Jimmy Chagra.

Beverly Myrick, 20, of Irving, Texas, told reporters that she previously had been questioned about a rifle before being subpoeanaed for the Thursday session.

Her mother, Jo Ann Starr Harrelson, has been indicted in Dallas on charges she used a false name to purchase a rifle capable of firing a .223-caliber slug, the same type of bullet that killed Wood on May 29, 1979.

Mrs. Harrelson's other daughter, Teresa Starr Jasper, has been jailed for six months after refusing to answer grand jury questions about her parents during a March appearance.

Government attorneys have revealed through questioning grand jury witnesses that they suspect Harrelson was hired by Chagra to kill Wood, who was scheduled to preside at Chagra's trial.

A necessary force

The events of April 24, 1980, are burned deeply into the minds of most Americans.

That's the date on which injury was added to insult for the United States. An attempt to rescue the hostages Iran had held since Nov. 4, 1979, ended in tragedy in an Iranian desert when two rescue aircraft collided. Eight soldiers were killed in that nightmare and another five were injured.

The events that followed the failure of that mission dramatically stressed the importance of taking steps to prevent the recurrence of the tragedy. Few Americans will ever forget the desecration of the burned bodies of the American servicemen who died in the valiant mission. Or the mockery of the United States' military. Or the despicable refusal of Iranian officials to observe the ordinary rules of common decency in regard to another nation's fallen warriors.

Those events graphically showed the United States in a state of total unpreparedness. At that point it was clear that the country must never be caught again in such a situation.

Now, according to the man who led the 90-man rescue force into Iran, the United States has a rescue team at the ready. If another situation evolves similar to the one that occurred in Tehran, the team will be ready to launch an immediate rescue effort.

In 1979, Beckwith noted, the United States could not act quickly enough because it lacked intelligence data and a rescue team.

For obvious reasons Col. Charlie Beckwith would not reveal details of the specialized rescue team. Speaking on ABC-TV's Good Morning, America show, Beckwith noted that "Now we've got a team of aviators. Of course, the Delta force has always been cocked and loaded, among others, and we have a team ready to go. So now, sort of, the ball's in the intelligence court."

That's commendable. It would be extremely unwise for the United States to continuue to ignore the wave of anti-American sentiment that has been sweeping the globe in recent years. There's little doubt there will be more crises develop that will necessitate some response from the United States, but short of a full-scale declaration of war.

The government has an obligation to protect its diplomatic personnel abroad. This is an important step toward fulfilling that obligation.

Jumping to conclusions

In an interview in Time magazine, Claude Cheysson, foreign minister of France, said of American policy in Latin America:

"There will be cases where there will be differences because you will be tempted to jump to the conclusion that because a country has relations with Cuba or because its Prime Minister has a beard and dresses in a funny paratrooper commando uniform, we should not be on speaking terms with them. We don't accept that. It's much too simple."

We wonder what Cheysson would have said had he been his country's foreign minister in 1939. Would it have been the following?

"You will be tempted to jump to the conclusion that because a country has relations with Germany, or because its chancellor has a moustache and dresses in a funny brown shirt, we should not be on speaking terms with him. We don't accept that. That is much too simple."

American opposition to Cuban President Fidel Castro is not based on his beard or his uniform but on the fact that he is a Soviet surrogate bent on armed incursion into African nations and on disrupting democratic Latin American nations, including Colombia, which broke relations with Cuba for that very reason.

In short, the U.S. opposes Castro for the same reasons we opposed Hitler, a earlier despot no Frenchman should ever forget.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Friday, Oct. 2, the 275th day of 1981. There are 90 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Oct. 2, 1979, Pope John Paul the II delivered his most comprehensive statement on international affairs in an address to the U.N. General Assembly in New York.

On this date:

In 1940, H.M.S. Empress of Britain, carrying child war refugees to Canada, was sunk.

In 1963, the government of Honduras was overthrown in an Army coup.

In 1974, China hailed the Arab use of oil as a weapon, saying it would help the Third World struggle against imperialism.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Cutbacks may affect DOE enforcement plan

WASHINGTON — As the president desperately tightens the federal budget to stem the swelling deficit, he is losing billions of dollars through false economy. The Energy Department's enforcement arm should be strengthened, not cut back, so it can recover the billions of dollars that the oil companies overcharged consumers during the price controls of the 1970s.

Jack Anderson

Two internal DOE memos reviewed by my associate Tony Capaccio suggest the magnitude of the ripoffs.

One of the memos, dated May 26, was prepared by L.K. Jones, the agency's top expert on the way middlemen manipulated oil prices to bilk the consumer. "Of all the segments of the industry, the crude oil reseller segment was probably the most corrupt," Jones wrote.

The situation "takes on the proportions of a national scandal," Jones told his superiors. "If we do not prosecute violators, then the consumers have been ripped off to the tune of $8-$10 billion."

Yet prosecution is being hampered by low morale in the enforcement section, caused by widespread fears that there will be serious "reductions in force" — that is, firings. And the DOE brass have done little to dispel these fears, according to investigators for the House Energy and Commerce Committee.

"We have a few good people who no doubt will work until Doomsday," Jones wrote, adding: "We have many, however, who feel they are not being supported at this critical stage of the program."

Commenting on a department work plan that set priorities on cases to be handled before Sept. 30, the end of the fiscal year, Jones said the computer information on which the plan was based "significantly understates potential violations and tends to mislead." He estimated that the lowest priority cases "may have potential violations of almost $3 billion."

Substantial work in the area of middleman gouges would be left undone by Sept. 30, Jones warned — "anywhere from 85 to 110 cases." They are "some of the most significant and egregious cases we have uncovered ... (involving) firms that have been indicted, will be indicted or probably would be referred to the Department of Justice if we could complete the audits."

The oil industry's attorneys have also had their eyes on the calendar — and on the possibility of severe cutbacks in enforcement personnel. "Lawyers have told me that their strategy is to outlast us," Jones wrote. "They firmly believe if they can obstruct or thwart audits beyond September, no one will be left to do the audits. What's bad is that they are probably right."

Acting DOE Special Counsel Avron Landesman confirmed Jones's gloomy prediction exactly one month later in another memo. "We have already lost about 25 percent of our field staff," he told his superiors. "In addition, we have already lost a good number of attorneys, including some who have worked for years on particular audits and enforcement cases."

One major impediment to completion of some cases, Landesman warned, is the uncertain status of the so-called "V factor" — a complex regulation that covers the calculation of costs that can be assigned to the various products refined from a barrel of crude oil.

As I reported earlier this year, the oil industry has been trying to have the V factor killed. The administration has been reviewing the rule and may well decide to abolish it. If that happens, many of DOE's overcharge cases would be undercut.

In a private letter to Energy Secretary James Edwards, Rep. Toby Moffett, D-Conn., warned that continued stalling on the V factor review "raises serious questions concerning the administration's pledge to continue an effective enforcement action against major oil companies."

Footnote: If the overcharges are ever recovered, which is increasingly unlikely, some of the money probably would be refunded to consumers and some would wind up in the federal treasury.

●

DOUBLE STANDARD: The administration has found a particularly shabby way of saving an estimated $200 million next year: It has ruled that certain honorably discharged veterans are ineligible for unemployment benefits while they're looking for civilian jobs.

Not all those who are honorably separated from the service are accorded this kick in the teeth. Men and women who are asked to leave on medical or other grounds can collect unemployment compensation. Only those who decide not to re-enlist and voluntarily quit when their hitch is up are refused jobless benefits.

What really makes the situation unfair, though, is that troublemakers, misfits, incompetents and other sad sacks who get kicked out of the service with a general discharge are eligible for unemployment pay.

Two recent examples reported by the New York State veterans office show how the new system works: An honorably discharged vet who left at the end of his four-year hitch was told he couldn't qualify for unemployment benefits. Another man, who had caused so much trouble he was asked to leave after serving only a year and two months, was granted a general discharge — and is eligible for jobless payments.

●

POLITICAL POTPOURRI: New Jersey's controversial Democratic governor, Brendan Byrne, decided to take a trip abroad during the campaign to succeed him — reportedly at the "near request" of the party chieftains. They don't want their man Jim Florio tagged with the Byrne label — as his opponent Tom Kean is trying to do — and apparently figured "out of sight, out of mind."

— Senate Majority Leader Howard Baker's warning to the financial community to reduce interest rates or face credit controls has brought angry response — not just from the bankers, but from some of his Republican colleagues in the Senate as well. "Howard was all wrong," said one.

INSIDE REPORT:

Latest NSC blunder gave ammunition to Reagan's advisers

WASHINGTON — The prospect of humiliating defeat on the AWACS deal is traced inside the administration to President Reagan's decision to denature his National Security Council staff instead of using it as a last line of protection against errors of Cabinet departments.

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

Persian Gulf security for the industrialized democracies is the obvious first cost of losing the sale of the AWACS radar planes to Saudi Arabia. Other costs are mounting fast: a move bruited about the Senate to block Britain from selling its Nimrod radar aircraft to the Saudis; ominous reports from Riyadh that the Saudis may reduce oil production if the AWACS deal fails, inflating energy costs for the West.

Reagan's senior advisers, staggered that such ill fortune could suddenly descend on the president, are contemplating restoration of the NSC staff to its muscular state of past administrations. Enlarged in power by Presidents Kennedy and Nixon, the NSC system coordinated national security and protected the president from parochial departmental games.

The AWACS deal is no parochial game. It has the full support of State, Defense and the CIA. But the NSC staff no longer acts as an inside arbiter to warn the president a deal could go sour. So, Secretary of Defense Caspar Weinberger rammed it through the National Security Council last spring, without portents of political disaster getting aired in Ronald Reagan's Oval Office. Instead of protecting the president's interests, the NSC staff became the errand boy assigned to line up Senate votes.

That made NSC staff director Richard V. Allen the chief headhunter in the Republican-controlled Senate. Allen is the first national security assistant not to have automatic access to the president and reports instead to all-powerful presidential counselor Edwin Meese III.

The decision to place Meese between himself and Allen was Reagan's device to deny power to his NSC staff, partly out of deference to Secretary of State Alexander Haig, partly to consummate his campaign pledge to denature the NSC staff. But Meese has a vast array of responsibilities, with little time for AWACS. Thus, Allen has had the responsibility without the authority.

The downgrading of Allen and his staff has cost Reagan dearly. Although Allen and his senior aides pretend otherwise, Reagan has been the target of constant end runs by Cabinet members knowing they could bypass the NSC apparatus to gain favored treatment.

A bitter case in point was Weinberger's secretive studies of the MX mobile missile controversy. With little warning, Weinberger brought his own MX solution — now discarded — directly to the National Security Council itself. He asked on-the-spot support from the NSC to make the MX airborne before that possibility had had full study by the NSC staff.

Secretary of Agriculture John Block used similar tactics to win the president's consent on ending the Soviet grain embargo. Reagan had promised to do that during the campaign, but the decision came before Haig and Weinberger had made their case against it. Using Cabinet-level access to the president to personally lobby critical decisions reduces the impact of conflicting points of view. The NSC staff, no longer a coordinating arm of the presidency, cannot prevent this.

During the first eight months of the Reagan presidency, Allen's staff was repeatedly bypassed and ignored by department heads. Haig, Weinberger and Allen have an informal agreement to show each other their public speeches before they are made, but Allen does not use his staff to review them. Haig's major speech in New Orleans on U.S.-Soviet relations was first read in the newspapers by Soviet experts on Allen's staff.

Departmental feuding over arms control policy is "at the danger point," in the words of one high official. The NSC staff is in no position to assert authority. A dispute between Defense and State over whether to hold those talks in Geneva or Vienna lasted two months, causing one participant to leave a meeting in disgust. But the NSC staff lacked jurisdiction to resolve it.

These examples are insignificant compared to imminent defeat on the AWACS deal. When Allen and his staff were ordered to round up those Senate votes, their timetable called for mobilizing presidential lobbying in mid-July. But the NSC was told to be quiet until Israeli Prime Minister Menahem Begin finished his U.S. visit.

Ceding that time may deliver another blow to a president already reeling from domestic trials. But this latest blunder provides ammunition for presidential advisers who recognize Reagan's mistake in making errand boys out of his NSC staff.

MARK RUSSELL SAYS

Here's a suggestion for balancing the budget which might work — a telethon. Or rather, a Budgethon.

●

The Budgethon could get off to a rousing start with the Air Force Band which is now a trio in civilian clothes. They had to cut the defense budget somewhere.

●

Then, Bob Hope comes on singing a parody of his theme song — "Thanks, for the memories — my friends, this is no joke — I gave when Ronnie spoke — then I bought the Pentagon and now I'm nearly broke."

●

Suspense builds on the Budgethon as Ed McMahan runs out with a check from Saudi Arabia. Then, the toteboard lights up and Tony Orlando sings "Tie a Yellow Ribbon Round Khomeini's Throat."

CHARLEY REESE

Religion can improve society

My new hot water heater broke the other day and it set me to thinking about morality. You may wonder what morality has to do with hot water heaters. The answer is, everything.

One of the premises that has clouded men's minds in recent decades is that so far as the individual is concerned, laws and government are important, but religion and morality are not. This is a complete inversion of the truth.

Charley Reese

My hot water heater, for example, is not only legal, but almost hidden by government-mandated information labels. It meets every single requirement of every single bureaucracy which has anything to do at all with the manufacture, distribution and sale of hot water heaters. Yet, for all that, it broke.

You see, what makes machines work or not work is the integrity of the people who design and build them. Integrity, being a condition of the human mind, is beyond the reach of government. If the men and women who design and build machines are honest and conscientious, you will get machines that work reliably. If they are neither, you will get machines that meet government specifications but which will fail.

In recent years, consumer protection has become a big deal. People like Ralph Nader have made a living out of it as well as used it as a whip with which to attack capitalism. People who worship the state have used it as an excuse to expand the powers of government. Still, the quality of our products has declined precipitously.

The answer to shoddy workmanship as well as declining productivity is really in religion, which is the best vehicle for teaching people morality. Humanists and Objectivists and Communists have all tried to devise a system of morality devoid of religion, but they have all failed. Sure, you can construct one intellectually, but you can't persuade more than a tiny minority to practice it.

All the consumer laws in the world can't protect you from a dishonest mechanic. The only function even a good law can serve is to be the basis of recovering damages after you have already been injured.

The best consumer protection is the honest mechanic, the honest merchant, the honest worker, and honesty cannot be legislated or purchased — but it can be taught by family and religious institutions. Both capitalism, as Ayn Rand has pointed out, and a free republic, as George Washington pointed out, are dependent on the morality of the people. Neither one can survive among corrupt people.

Perhaps it is no accident that while our attention has been focused on laws and institutions, the morality which is the foundation of both has been mercilessly assaulted. Religion has been ridiculed, in some cases subverted, and driven out of public life. Situational ethics, which is no ethics at all, have become the state religion.

Consequently, with the foundation gone, our society is collapsing on our heads. Our hot water heaters break. Our cars don't work. Our institutions become ineffective. Not only can't Johnny read or write, but he can't work very well either. The courts become a joke. The cities decay. Not only the streets but our homes become dangerous places.

We are bombarded with solutions — all aimed at more laws or institutional tinkering — while the only solution is ignored. Either we, as individuals, will return to morality or we'll be destroyed because evil always destroys itself.

You can't fix a society. You can only repair the individuals in it. And religion, not government, is best equipped to do that.

Mrs. Ruth Finley, 51, Wichita, Kan., is escorted into the police station in Wichita Thursday night. After 1 1/2 hours of questioning, Mrs. Finley admitted to police she had sent them on a four-year wild goose case.

'The Poet' letters written by victim

By MICHAEL BATES
Associated Press Writer

WICHITA, Kan. (AP) — After telling police for four years that she lived in terror of threatening notes from a mysterious verse-writer dubbed "The Poet," a 51-year-old woman was found to be mailing the letters to herself, police said.

The letters also taunted the police who were investigating the widely publicized case, and authorities had branded the writer a "psychopath."

"The case has been concluded," Wichita's deputy police chief, John Coonrod, announced late Thursday night.

"I think in layman's terms, you can say 'The Poet' was a figment of a person's imagination and that person was the victim, Ruth Finley."

Mrs. Finley, 51, of Wichita, confessed that she was "The Poet" about 1½ hours after detectives began questioning her Thursday night, Coonrod said, and was placed under a doctor's care at a hospital.

"The Poet" letters originally threatened to reveal that Mrs. Finley had been branded on both thighs with a flatiron in a 1946 sexual attack.

During the four years of police investigation, Mrs. Finley claimed "The Poet" had abducted her once and stabbed her while attempting to abduct her a second time.

She also claimed he burned a Christmas wreath on her front porch, threw urine on the porch, cut her telephone lines, asked a florist to send her a black flower, and requested that a construction company tear up her driveway.

A source close to the investigation told The Associated Press that police got a break when someone not involved with the case saw Mrs. Finley mailing a letter. Police staked out a mailbox and watched as Mrs. Finley mailed more letters over two weeks, the source said.

Some of the letters, examined after police called in postal authorities, were from "The Poet" to Mrs. Finley, the source said. They were linked to others she had mailed by comparing the torn perforation marks on the stamps.

Investigators photographed Mrs. Finley mailing the letters, the source added.

Police became suspicious because there were no witnesses to the alleged November 1978 abduction or the August 1979 attempted abduction and stabbing, which, Mrs. Finley said, occurred in public places. Mrs. Finley also aroused suspicion because of her calm manner when discussing the attacks, the source said.

Coonrod said that, for the most part, Mrs. Finley knew what tactics police were using, making it possible for her to avoid detection.

"The Poet" taunted police in one letter that said: "If any had a brain, No one wold (sic) have pain. Good or evil, my secret shall not be known. I unnoticed go my way. I may just prosper for 1 day."

Police Chief Richard LaMunyon assumed command of the probe about two weeks ago after his wife, Sharron, was threatened in letters. He assigned additional manpower to the case and intensified surveillance to include a 24-hour watch on Mrs. Finley and her husband.

Search warrants executed Thursday led to the recovery of the tablets Mrs. Finley used to write the letters and used carbon paper from trashcans in her home and office, police sources said.

Early last year, police had said "The Poet" stole writing material from the woman during the 1978 abduction.

Ed Finley was questioned Thursday afternoon and passed a polygraph examination during which he denied knowledge of his wife's activities as "The Poet," police said.

"I was duped probably more than anybody else," said Donald Schrag, a Wichita psychologist who participated in the investigation. "The reason the case was solved was because of real good police work."

Schrag said although Mrs. Finley said she did not know why she created "The Poet," he believes her actions were linked to unresolved feelings about her attack in 1946.

"She never, I suspect, was emotionally able to cope with that," he said.

He described the letter writing, which grew to as many as 10 a week during the past month, as a compulsion.

"She knew she was doing it, but she couldn't stop," he said.

Kidnapped woman returns home

INDEPENDENCE, Va. (AP) — A 68-year-old Grayson County woman was on her way back home today after she was kidnapped last week and driven to Texas, police say.

When Nannie O. Cox got home from work last Friday about 3 p.m., she was confronted by two men wearing stocking masks. One had a pistol.

The pair tied her up and remained in the home until that night. Under cover of darkness, they put her in her 1978 Mercury and drove off with her.

Mrs. Cox works at the Grayson Garment Co. and had been paid at the end of the week. The money apparently served as traveling funds for the men.

They made their way across the country to Texas and tried to get into Mexico but had some difficulty at the border and were unable to cross, police said.

They ended up in San Antonio, Texas, where they placed a call to Mrs. Cox's son, Jamie Cox of Roanoke County, demanding that he wire them $500 in ransom. The callers told Cox they would cross the border into Mexico after they got the money, and then release his mother.

Authorities in Grayson County already were working on the assumption that Mrs. Cox had been kidnapped.

She had been reported missing by co-workers when she didn't appear at the garment plant Monday. Deputies found some grocery purchases she apparently had made the previous Friday sitting on a table in the home rather than having been put in a refrigerator.

Thatcher endorses U.S. economic policies

By PETER O'LOUGHLIN
Associated Press Writer

MELBOURNE, Australia (AP) — British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher today strongly endorsed President Reagan's economic policies, saying the U.S. fight against inflation is "important to all of us."

Speaking a luncheon for Australian businessmen, Mrs. Thatcher said uncertainty about the effect of Reagan's policies had set off international stock market fluctuations.

"We have experienced some days of worldwide uncertainty in financial markets," said Mrs. Thatcher, in Melbourne to attend the British Commonwealth summit.

"The main source of this uncertainty has been developments in the United States and the attempts of the markets to assess what they mean for the world economy.

"Concern about the future of interest rates has been a large part of this, because the world is one vast capital market," she said.

Britain "entirely supports' the U.S. fight against inflation and "welcomes further measures just announced by President Reagan."

"We applaud his determination to reduce the United States' budget deficit. We see success in reducing that deficit as of great importance in making possible lower American interest rates consistent with reducing inflation," she said.

Uncertainty over Reagan's economic policy and his request last week for a second round of budget cuts have let to big fluctuations on world stock markets.

However, Mrs. Thatcher expressed optimism about the future.

"It is easy for economists in the middle of one of the deepest recessions in recent years, to be despondent about world prospects," she said.

"Catalysmic prophesies, doom and gloom, certainly provide a supply of sensational headlines for which there is a ready market.

"But any thoughtful observer should take a somewhat calmer and longer view of history and the future."

The british leader concluded on an upbeat note, saying, "I believe there is a chance that granted peace, the remaining years of the eighties could continue that long run of prosperity which has so enriched our lives since World War II."

Increased dairy subsidies could trigger higher prices

By BOB FICK
Associated Press Level

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department boosted dairy subsidies 3 percent today, costing the government an extra $ million a day and possibly triggering higher prices for consumers.

Shortly before the government action was announced late Thursday, however, the House voted 328-58 overwhelmingly to roll back the increase. The Senate still must act on the bill.

Agriculture Secretary John R. Block immediately pledged to lower the support level as soon as Congress gives him the authority, but department economists said the predicted rise in consumer prices may never be rolled back.

Milk support levels, frozen at $13.10 a hundred pound for the past year, automatically increased to $13.49 on Thursday because Congress has not yet approved a new package of commodity support programs to replace those that expired earlier in the week.

While the higher support price was technically in effect Thursday, officials said the Commodity Credit Corp., on advice of attorneys, delayed any milk purchases, hoping for congressional action.

But when the reprieve didn't come, Block announced that the CCC would begin buying up milk at the higher price.

To keep prices up for dairy farmers, the CCC buys commercial dairy products and stores them so that the price for goods sold on the open market remains near the support level.

Even without that emergency legislation, the support level will drop once Congress passes the new farm bill, probably within a month.

Until the rollback, however, the higher supports will cost the government an extra $7 million to $10 million a week.

And officials said any increase for any length of time could give retailers, who have seen their profit margins erode in the last year, a reason to increase consumer prices and keep them there even after the higher support price ends.

The emergency bill passed the House with the reluctant votes of most dairy-state congressmen. Several indicated, however, that they hoped to win backing from their colleagues for a new dairy program that would provide more support in the long run than President Reagan would like.

The Senate already has approved a new dairy program along the lines Reagan wanted, and the House, which will consider dairy supports next week, has been expected to adopt much the same plan.

Holiday Inns Inc. charged with bribery, providing 'escorts'

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — New Jersey's Casino Control Commission plans hearings on charges that Holiday Inns Inc. bribed foreign officials and that Harrah's of Nevada, a gaming company later bought by Holiday Inns, once provided prostitutes to gamblers.

The Attorney General's Division of Gaming Enforcement, which issued a report on the companies Thursday, said it had uncovered evidence "of serious import on the question of licensure" for Holiday Inns and its $145-million, 504-room Harrah's Marina casino hotel here.

Commission spokesman Ben Borowsky said the commissioners will begin hearings on the report Oct. 14. Harrah's Marina is operating on a one-year temporary casino permit that expires Nov. 23 and cannot be renewed.

Holiday Inns spokesman Jerry Broadhurst denied the company or its Harrah's subsidiary have been involved in wrongdoing and predicted the commission would grant a permanent license.

The corporation, based in Memphis, Tenn., owns 99 percent interest in Harrah's Marina, which opened last Nov. 23.

U.S. inches toward metric system

BY JEFF RISTINE
Copley News Service

A few years ago, when the price of gasoline crept toward a dollar a gallon, many service stations came face to face with the metric system — and most reacted by turning around and running in the opposite direction.

Gas station owners whose pumps couldn't register three-digit prices had a choice of spending $$200 or more for new equipment that would do so, or spend a mere $$50 per pump by converting the price to so many cents per liter.

Even given that strong financial incentive, only one in five of the nation's gas pumps today use liter pricing, according to John Donnelly, director of public awareness for the U.S. Metric Board.

He sees two basic reasons for anti-metric sentiment: "First is the normal human resistance to change," he said in an interview. "You're comfortable with something ... why go through the headache of messing with it?"

The other complication, he said, is "a misplaced system of nationalism and chauvinism." The Metric Board has heard from plenty of people who think the rest of the world ought to switch over to the American way of miles and pounds, Donnelly said.

Donnelly said the Metric Board, an independent federal agency that has existed only three years, takes a deliberately neutral approach to metric conversion.

It sees its role not to promote or encourage metrics but rather conduct research, make it available to business and industry, and increase the public's familiarity with metric terms through radio and television spots.

The board has no regulatory or enforcement power, and it is limited by a government decree that any conversion to metrics should be purely voluntary.

Despite the continuing resistance, metric measurements are inching — perhaps one should say centimetering — their way into public consciousness.

Trouble may be brewing for Reagan administration

WASHINGTON (AP) — Could it be that the well-oiled Reagan machinery is starting to creak just a little?

Item: The controversial school lunch regulations, proposed but never implemented, are pulled back. Budget director David Stockman says there may have been a "bureaucratic goof."

Item: The Treasury secretary reveals that the revenue sharing program will end in 1984. Within hours, the White House says he is wrong.

Item: The administration's efforts to fight a congressional veto of the proposed sale of AWACS airplanes to Saudi Arabia raises the greatest risk of defeat on Capitol Hill President Reagan has faced.

The first two are elements in the confusion that emerged in the hours after the president made his fifth nationally televised attempt to rally the nation behind his economic plan.

The latter represents a reminder that this president and his aides can miscalculate, just like their predecessors.

After a string of successes that extended to the new president's springtime honeymoon to an unusually mild Washington August, the first hints of autumn are carrying with them clear signals that trouble may be afoot for the White House.

The president's attitude, meanwhile, appeared to be one of confidence.

While Wall Street, in its initial reaction to last Thursday's speech, sent stock prices tumbling by the close of business last week, the president declared that he was unconcerned by the fall.

"No," he said, he wasn't worried, "because I don't have any" stocks.

Later, he may have thought better of that answer.

As he was leaving for Camp David, Md., he walked down a rubber mat extended over a dusty bare patch in the White House lawn toward his waiting helicopter. Reporters shouted for his attention and after the president performed a now-standard pantomime indicating he couldn't hear them clearly, he turned back to talk with them.

"I don't know what the reason is 'for the market misfortune,' " he said, "but I'm not going to take the blame."

With that, a few whacks at government programs "being abused by people who are getting benefits they're not entitled to," and a jibe at senators opposed to the AWACS sale, he walked back up the rubber mat, boarded the helicopter and flew to his weekend hideaway.

As the president took off, he left behind several key aides who were working hard that Friday afternoon answering questions about school lunches and revenue sharing.

Earlier that morning, Stockman, the director of the Office of Management and Budget, told reporters that the school lunch proposals had been withdrawn. Among other things, they would have let school dietitians reduce youngsters' milk allotments and call ketchup and pickle relish vegetables instead of condiments.

Hines-Wood has much experience in reupholstering of fine furniture

Business News
Advertising and Publicity Paid For By Firms In These Columns

Hines-Wood Upholstering Co. brings 30 years experience to their new location at 1105 N. Midkiff. Owner Denton Hines is wise in the ways of restoring fine old furniture and encourages anyone interested in preserving their favorite pieces to contact him at 694-8891 or stop by the shop between the hours of 7 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

When a piece of furniture is brought into the shop, it is stripped to the frame. Any necessary repair work is done to the frame, after which the springs are re-tied. The furniture is re-felted and then covered.

Aside from the fact that you may like the style and comfort of the furniture you now own better than makes and styles on the market at this time, the sturdy wood frames of older pieces are often more substantial, and the cost to recover about half of what the same piece in the same fabric would be new.

The shop features a large selection of fabric from which to choose, and Hines-Wood has samples of almost everything that is milled in the U.S. To acquaint people with what can be done with older furniture, Hines-Wood will only charge for the fabric, no labor charges, on pieces recovered in fabric purchased there. Pick-up and delivery service is free anywhere within the city limits, while out-of-town pick-up and delivery is available at an extra charge. Your furniture will not be picked up until work is to begin on it, so it is usually out of you home just a week to 10 days. Fabric orders take about 10 days to two weeks.

Doris McPeak, an interior decorator, is now associated with Hines-Wood. She will assist you in choosing custom drapes, mini-blinds and carpeting for your home.

For fine quality materials and expert workmanship at reasonable prices, visit Hines-Wood Upholstering Co. in their new location at 1105 N. Midkiff and help celebrate their 30th anniversary in business.

Attempt thwarted

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — The San Antonio Development Agency has thwarted an attempt by a Canadian firm to take over four buildings in St. Paul Square being developed by several people, including Dallas Cowboys players Harvey Martin and Drew Pearson.

The SADA board Tuesday approved a plan for St. Paul Square Joint Venture, which includes the two football players, to avoid the takeover attempt by signing with a new financial partner. Under the plan, Joint Venture will buy out its present partner, Western Securities Ltd., of Canada.

Western Securities recently had moved to buy full ownership of the four buildings in the redevelopment area just east of downtown.

Fixed-fare program begun

By AL WATTS
Hearst Feature Service

A Chicago businessman, who flies about 150,000 miles a year, recently doled out $19,900 to American Airlines for a plastic-card pass good for 25,000 miles of air travel over each of the next five years.

The purchase by David L. Paul, chairman and chief executive of the Westport Co., a real estate investment firm, was the first under a fixed-fare pass program announced by American, according to David Frailey, spokesman for the airline.

The new passes, costing from $8,000 to $250,000 and good for periods ranging from five years to the rest of a buyer's life, are the latest marketing gimmick designed to spur sagging air travel and to raise capital for the troubled airline industry. The passes are geared toward business executives who fly frequently.

A few hours after the first pass sale to Paul, American officials reported that an unnamed Dallas executive had made "a commitment" to buy a $250,000 lifetime pass, but no contract had yet been signed.

Paul said from his Chicago office that he carefully calculated whether he should buy one of the passes "and I finally figured it will save me money since I am flying on business about three days of every week." Paul said he weighed buying the five-year pass on the basis of a 9 percent annual inflation rate and a possible return of 20 percent on a theoretical investment.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Hyperactive child is overactive

Dear Dr. Solomon: One of my neighbor's children is a holy terror. He fights, breaks things, and takes what he wants when he wants it. My neighbor says he's a hyperactive child; I say he's a menace. Is every child who misbehaves considered hyperactive? — Ellie, Madison, N.J.

Dear Ellie: A child who is physically aggressive and destructive — in other words, an unsocialized child — does not necessarily fall into the same category as a hyperactive child. However, a child can be both hyperactive and unsocialized.

Researchers from the University of Iowa College of Medicine who studied 175 patients admitted to the Child Psychiatry Clinic describe the hyperactive child as overactive and having a short attention span; on the other hand, the aggressive, unsocialized child was described as destructive, undisciplined, and often involved in such behavior as fighting, verbal abuse, and fire-setting.

Dear Dr. Solomon: A friend of mine who is employed as a pharmacist by a large drugstore chain tells me that toothpaste is classified as a drug. If anything, I would expect it to be included under cosmetics. On what basis can toothpaste be considered a drug? — Blake, Fort Worth, Texas

Dear Blake: The classification of a product as a cosmetic or a drug depends on the purpose for which the manufacturer says it is to be used. People use cosmetics to make themselves more attractive or to enhance their personal appearance. On the other hand, they use drugs in an effort to improve their health or to treat disease.

If all a toothpaste is supposed to do is to make teeth whiter — that is, to enhance the user's appearance — it would be classified as a cosmetic. But if the manufacturer also claims that it will prevent tooth decay, which is a disease condition, the toothpaste then becomes a drug or, possibly, both a drug and a cosmetic.

Dear Dr. Solomon: For some time I have been debating going to the Pill, but keep putting it off. Now I think I've found a good reason for doing so. I have suffered from migraine headaches for some time, and a friend of mine, who is a pharmacist, tels me that birth control pills will provide relief. Is this true? — Nell, Petersburg, Va.

Dear Nell: Oral contraceptives may — and I emphasize "may" — spell relief for some migraine-prone women, but not for all. The rationale is that birth control pills maintain a steady estrogen level, a condition similar to that during the latter stages of pregancy when estrogen is high.

However, some authorities maintain that certain women who suffer from migraine attacks may be adversely affected by oral contraceptives and other estrogen supplements. Before you make a decision, a detailed discussion with your gynecologist about the pros and cons of birth control pills in your particular case seems in order.

(If you have a medical question, write to Neil Solomon, M.D., 1726 Reisterstown Road, Baltimore, Md. 21208. Dr. Solomon cannot give personal replies but will answer as many questions as possible in his column.)

Your Once-in-a-Lifetime Opportunity
TAX FREE SAVINGS

If your Tax Bracket is:	The Interest Rate needed to net 12.61% after Income Taxes is:
50%	25.22%
40%	21.02%
30%	18.01%

Figures based on Gibraltar's current Tax Free Savings rate of 12.61% (70% of average yield on one year Treasury Bill).

Count on Tax Free Savings beginning October 1st.
No taxable interest in the Money Market can match the net yield of Gibraltar's new once-in-a-lifetime Tax Free Savings Certificate for people in many tax brackets.
President Reagan's Tax Bill recently passed by Congress allows Texas' largest and America's first insured savings association to offer you this significant, one-time tax exclusion.
Gibraltar's new 12-Month Tax Free Savings Certificate lets you earn up to a lifetime aggregate of $1,000 or $2,000 interest Tax Free. Married couples filing joint returns can exclude up to $2,000 interest. Individuals can exclude $1,000 interest. Based on today's rate, married couples can exclude from their taxes all the interest earned on a 12-Month Tax Free Savings investment of $15,860.43. Individuals $7,930.21.

Tax Free Interest means more net interest.
The minimum deposit on this 12-Month Certificate is $500. The tax exclusion is lost if account is closed before one year, plus the applicable penalty with premature withdrawal.

Because the interest is Tax Free, the annual yield can be almost twice as high as the stated tax free rate, depending on your tax bracket.

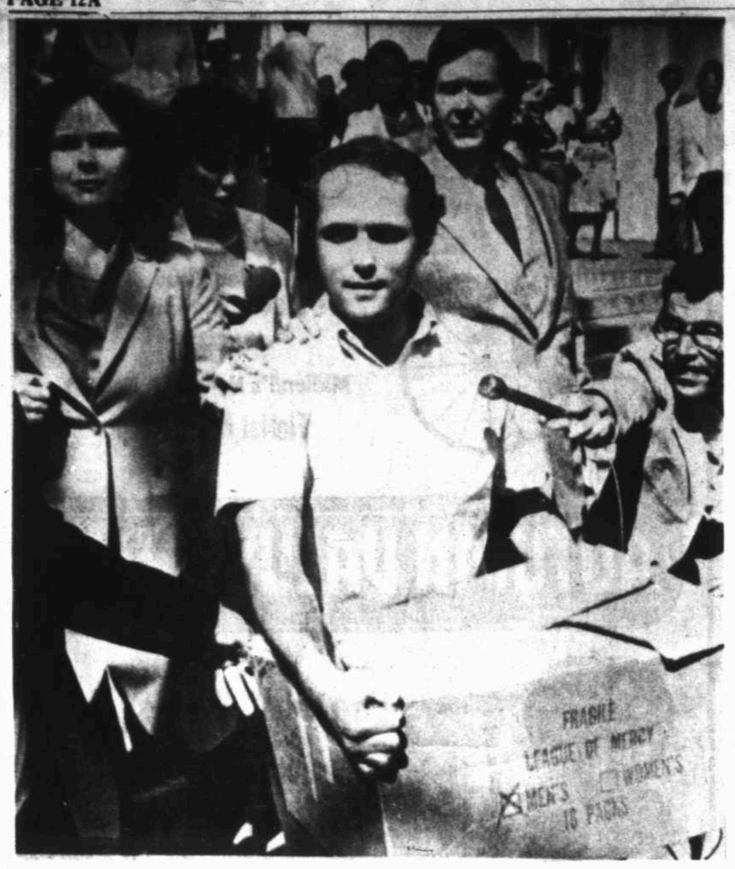

Gibraltar's highest yield ever.
Most people will find that Gibraltar's Tax Free Savings pays the highest net yield they've ever earned on savings.
For example, if you are in a 50% tax bracket, your Tax Free yield is equal to a taxable rate well above 20%.

Count on Texas' largest for more.
Stop paying Uncle Sam up to half of your interest earnings. Invest in Gibraltar's new once-in-a-lifetime Tax Free Savings Certificate and earn up to a lifetime aggregate of $1,000 or $2,000 interest Tax Free. Your Gibraltar Savings counselor can help you set up your Tax Free account.
Your money is safer at Gibraltar Savings. We're Texas' largest and America's first insured. With an asset strength of $3.4 billion. Reserve strength that exceeds any savings association in the state. And savings that are insured up to $100,000 by the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation.

Larry Layton, the only person to be tried in the Guyana airstrip ambush that killed California Congressman Leo Ryan and four others, walks out of a San Francisco jail Thursday for the first time since his 1978 arrest.

Layton faces second trial, out on bond

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Facing a second trial on charges of conspiring to kill a U.S. congressman, former Peoples Temple member Larry Layton has returned home for the first time since he was jailed in 1978.

"I'm glad to be going home," Layton said Thursday as he stood in shirtsleeves on the steps of the Hall of Justice, clutching a box containing his belongings.

"I'm glad the jury understood the case," he said of his trial, which ended last Saturday with a hung jury. Prosecutors said Thursday they planned to try Layton for a second time.

Looking pale and drawn, Layton climbed into a waiting car with his father and said the sunshine felt "great."

Earlier, in federal court, U.S. District Judge Robert F. Peckham had granted a $50,000 personal recognizance bond for Layton after government attorneys said they planned to bring him to a second trial.

Peckham set Dec. 1 for the second trial, but defense attorney Tony Tamburello said he believed prosecutors have yet to decide whether to try Layton even though they have indicated they would.

"I think the prosecution needs to rethink their case ... I think the formal decision has yet to be made," he said.

The first trial, which lasted six weeks, reportedly cost taxpayers $1.5 million.

"It's kind of agonizing for anyone to have to go through a second trial, so it's kind of difficult for him," Tamburello said.

The first trial ended after 44 hours of deliberation with the panel split 11-1 to acquit Layton of two counts of conspiracy to kill Rep. Leo Ryan.

Doctors test synthetic growth hormone

HOUSTON (AP) — Doctors who injected a 10-year-old Houston girl with the first dose of an experimental synthetic growth hormone said they were excited by the promise the new drug holds for children abnormally short because of glanular deficiencies.

Doctors at the Baylor College of Medicine said the synthetic hormone may be the answer to a shortage of the natural hormone that has severely restricted the number of children who could be treated.

"We're excited about this because in the past there have been serious problems with supply and demand that have limited the number of children who could receive the (natural) hormone," said Dr. Rebecca T. Kirkland, a pediatrician at the Baylor College of Medicine.

She said the only source of the natural hormone has been the pituitary glands of cadavers. She said the hormone cost each patient $5,000 a year and was so scarce it could only be given to children whose pituitary gland did not produce the substance at all.

Ms. Kirkland said the synthetic hormone could be an abundant and less expensive alternative.

Ms. Kirkland and Dr. George W. Clayton, professor of pediatrics at Baylor and director of the Baylor Clinical Research Center, administered the first dose of the synthetic hormone Thursday to 10-year-old Shannon Pillow of Houston.

Shannon appears to be about 6 years old because of an injury to her pituitary gland caused by a car accident.

She will continue to take the shots three times a week for a year, said Hazel Haby, spokesman for the Texas Children's Hospital, where the Baylor clinical center is located.

Shannon is about 44 inches tall. Doctors say a normal 10-year-old girl should be about 54 inches.

The synthetic substance was made by Genetech Inc. of South San Francisco, Calif. The tests were funded by Genetech as part of a clinical trial supervised by Dr. Selna Kapland of the University of California at San Francisco.

The synthetic drug is produced by taking bits of human growth hormone DNA, the substance in cells that determines hereditary, and combining them with E. coli bacteria. The bacteria then copy the DNA code and reproduce it.

"The hormone will not add inches to genetically determined height, but it can help children who are abnormally short because of deficient or ineffective growth hormones in their pituitary gland," Ms. Kirkland said.

Ms. Kirkland said Shannon was chosen to be first to receive the new drug by "a lucky draw."

President Ronald Reagan holds up 318 pages of documents during his news conference Thursday at the White House. Reagan said the 318 pages of regulations on disbursing funds to states would be replaced by six pages governing grant funds.

Reagan rehearsed well for news conference

WASHINGTON (AP) — From an opening quip to a fortuitous letter of praise in his pocket, President Reagan was really ready for his latest news conference.

He had rehearsed well, and it showed in an air of easy confidence noticeably in contrast to what White House aides admitted was a stumbling performance in Reagan's last televised meeting with reporters in June.

The result may be more frequent news conferences in the future.

The president prepared for Thursday's 35-minute session for two days, instead of one as he had in the past.

He entered the East Room of the White House smiling and won a quick laugh as he chided himself about the infrequency of his news conferences — four in eight months: "Welcome to my first annual press conference."

He breezed through questions on the economy, but the news came when he said he would not allow Saudi Arabia to suffer the revolutionary fate of Iran.

Deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes said Reagan had consulted by telephone with Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. in preparation for the anticipated questions on Saudi Arabia and the proposed $8.5 billion sale of Airborne Warming and Control System airplanes and other sophisticated military equipment to the kingdom.

Reagan was ready with his props, too.

Moments before the president arrived, Speakes placed on the lectern two sets of papers: one, 318 pages that Reagan said were the regulations for 57 categorical grant programs that were consolidated into block grants; the other, six pages of regulations "that will now apply to the nine block grants."

And as soon as he saw an opportunity to refer to the papers, he did.

Reagan was talking about the impact of replacing grants for specific purposes — categorical grants — with the broader block grants that give states and local governments greater discretion about their use.

"Now, the effect of that is going to be — well, I can show you, knowing that I was going to be asked about some of this," he said, holding up the two sets of documents.

'The Wave' depicts teacher's lesson

NEW YORK (AP) — Ron Jones was teaching his pupils in a wealthy California suburb about the murder of Jews in Nazi Germany. Suddenly the lesson got out of hand, and the atmosphere that led to mindless slaughter in Germany threatened to take over an American high school.

The story of how that could happen in real life, 11 years ago at Cubberly School in Palo Alto, Calif., is the subject of a television movie, "The Wave," appearing Sunday, Oct. 4 from 7-8 p.m. EDT on ABC.

Jones, in an interview Thursday, said it all started with a question from one of his pupils. How could Germans after the war deny any knowledge or responsibility for the Nazi holocaust?

He decided to devote the next class period to a demonstration of Nazi rule. He darkened the classroom. He played Wagnerian music.

"I wrote on the blackboard, 'Strength Through Discipline.' I had them practice cryptic, sharp answers to my questions."

But it became clear the next day that the lesson in Nazism had worked deep changes in his classroom. "When I came to class the next day, I was shocked to see the students were totally silent, sitting at attention. I thought I should continue."

For several days, the experiment grew more elaborate. Jones invented a "Third Wave" salute, a raised cupped hand. He issued membership cards for the group Jones was "Fuehrer" of.

"My own feelings were beginning to change. I was excited at how learning seemed to increase in this environment. I gave a homework assignment and people seemed to do it," Jones said.

But this holocaust lesson had spread throughout the school by the third and fourth days. Over a hundred kids were crowding into his classroom. "Third Wave" banners were going up in the library. Even the principal was returning the party salute. Members of the group were verbally abusing and scuffling with non-members.

Jones was now nervous, trying to figure how best to end this experiment — which had drawn barely a murmur of protest from parents, teachers or anyone else.

Williams says suit may cost $1 million

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Harrison A. Williams Jr. says it may eventually cost him $1 million in legal fees to fight his conviction in the Abscam case and protect his seat in the Senate.

"I will never walk away from this fight," Williams told reporters Thursday. "In terms of justice for every American, it is the most important of my career," he said.

The New Jersey Democrat, found guilty of bribery and conspiracy charges, is seeking seeking $1 million in compensatory damages and $5 million in punitive damages from Justice Department officials, agents and operatives involved in the Abscam case. The suit was filed Wednesday in U.S. District Court.

Williams told a news conference that he arrived at the compensatory damage figure by making a "fair estimate" of what his legal bills would be "before we are through."

He has formed a legal defense fund, which reported raising $147,427 as of June 30. Williams said he and his wife have also spent an unspecified amount of personal funds.

"I don't count on being destitute out of this," he said. "I didn't bring this action to make a lot of money."

In addition to his appeal of his conviction, Williams also faces disciplinary action in the Senate. The Senate ethics committee recommended last month that he be expelled.

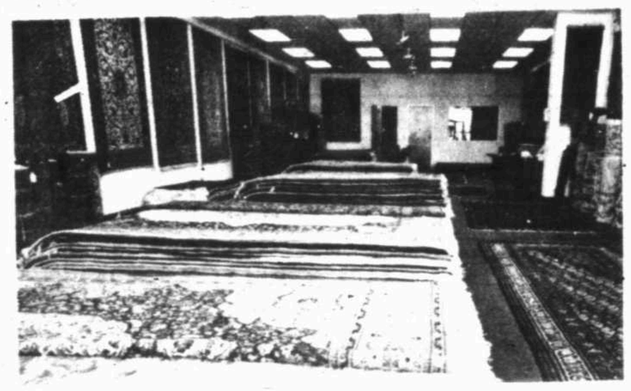

The full Senate is expected to begin debate in November on whether Williams should be the first senator ousted since the Civil War and the first expelled for an offense other than treason.

Williams said the Senate risks making a "grave mistake" and being taken in by a con man if it expels him for his conduct in the Abscam case.

The four-term veteran has insisted he did nothing wrong, and that he was framed in part through the efforts of FBI operative Melvin Weinberg, a convicted con man and one of those named in Williams' civil suit.

He said he is working on material to be presented to each member of the Senate next week which should demonstrate "I didn't do anything wrong."

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Saturday, October 3, 1981

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: The late Warner Oland, who starred in the Charlie Chan movies that are still popular on late-night and cable TV, was born on this date. In the year ahead, employment affairs show new promise and progress. The financial outlook improves, and so do your domestic relationships. Although you may decide to slow down your social pace a bit, romance remains both exciting and intriguing. Count on beauty to play a special role in your plan! Generous and hard working, you are always willing to lend a helping hand to those in need. Be careful not to shortchange loved ones of their fair share of your time, attention.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Romance is glamorous and unpredictable this weekend. Stay on your toes! Active participation in sports could prove a pleasant diversion and keep you feeling fit at the same time.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You have a lot of self-discipline today. Tackle those household chores that you have been postponing. The news regarding a loved one's health is good now. Romance is delightful.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Refuse to sign anything without first giving careful scrutiny to the fine print. A secret love is happy. Kind words will help smooth things over with a family member.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Dismiss all thoughts of business today. Games played either outdoors or indoors will provide hours of fun. Invite small fry to join in! Friendly discussion with family members helps keep expenses down.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A good day to complete household projects or run errands. Divide up the chores. Family members will be glad to pitch in. Have lunch with an old friend; you gain new insights.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Jot down creative ideas for future reference. A friendly game will delight children. Group activities are likely to have more appeal than one-to-one relationships this evening.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): The object of your affection will share some astounding news. Do not postpone trips. Old friends, former neighbors will give you a royal welcome.

SCORPIO (Oct.23-Nov. 21): Enlist the cooperation of family members when trying to trim expenses. A self-improvement project boosts your ego. Use diplomacy when faced with a dilemma.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Be willing to meet mate halfway. Avoid becoming involved in petty squabbles. Loved ones will applaud your attitude and actions.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You have lots of good luck this weekend. You move farther away from some people and closer to others. An out-of-the-way spot makes an ideal place for a rendezvous.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Greet the unexpected with your usual good sense. A neighbor may be a bit a pest. Be tactful but firm. Your knowledge of a special subject comes in hand.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Get out and about today, and put your energies to good use: do not wait to receive encouragement from others. You have to move forward on your own. Romance is delightful.

There are some card combinations that you might have to work out at the table. Others, however, have been written about so often that you should recognize them as soon as you see them. Here's an example of the latter from the Ruitenboer Tournament in Holland.

There was no holding North in check after his partner opened the bidding with one spade. He launched straight into Blackwood and settled in the small slam when he learned that a king was missing. The contract was rather optimistic, but South's technique justified his partner's bidding.

West held a rather uninspiring collection. Still, a heart lead would have left declarer with no chance for his contract as the cards lie. However, we can attach no blame to him for his choice of a low diamond.

Declarer won in dummy, cashed the ace of spades and was delighted to see the queen of spades appear on the next round of the suit. The only remaining problem was to hold the heart losers to one. Declarer drew the last trump and then proceeded to strip the hand. He cashed four rounds of clubs, sluffing one of his hearts, and then came to his hand with the ace of diamonds. That reduced both declarer and dummy to one trump and three hearts.

Now declarer led a heart, and the defenders were helpless. Declarer intended covering any heart that West played. If West played low, declarer would insert the seven. East could win the trick cheaply, but he would either have to lead a heart into dummy's ace-queen, or else lead a minor suit and present declarer with a ruff-sluff.

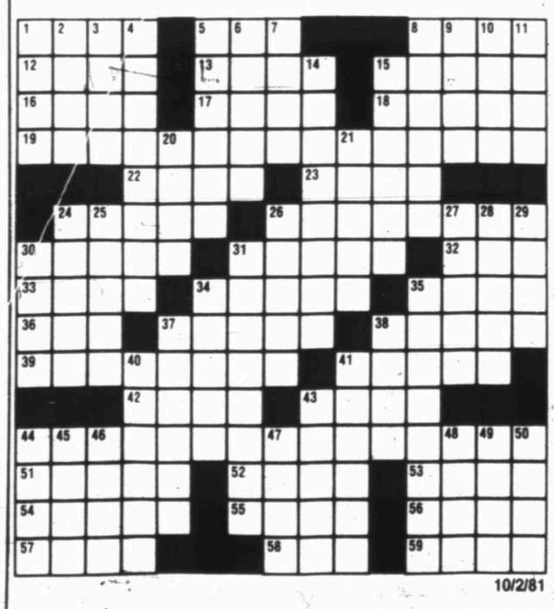

It would be no different if West produced the nine. Declarer would insert dummy's queen, and the combination of the ace in dummy and the 10-8 in declarer's hand would again constitute a tenace position.

'Gone With The Wind' is considered a classic

In 1939, it was estimated that more than 10 million people had read Margaret Mitchell's "Gone With The Wind." This figure established a new chapter in publishing history.

Ms. Mitchell's book, which won the Pulitzer prize for fiction in 1937, was written over a 10-year period, during which she almost went blind. In 1939, her novel was made into a movie, one which has been a top box office seller since then. It is considered a film classic.

"Gone With The Wind," produced by David O. Selznick, starring Vivian Leigh as Scarlett O'Hara, Clark Gable as Rhett Butler, Olivia de Havilland as Melanie Hamilton and Leslie Howard as Ashley Wilkes, closed Thursday night at the Westwood Cinema, 4310 Andrews Highway.

The movie was considered a first in several areas. Its heroine, Scarlett, was one of the original silver screen feminists.

At the time, no actress in Hollywood did not want, in fact covet, the role. All tried out and all were rejected. Selznick wanted an unknown.

Although a massive nationwide hunt was put into effect, the result was nil. The filming had to begin. The movie scenes which could be shot without the heroine were underway before Selznick found his Scarlett. And he found her by chance.

Miss Leigh was on the lot with a friend during the filming of one of the scenes of the burning of Atlanta. When Selznick saw her, he knew she was the one. Although Miss Leigh was virtually unknown to U.S. audiences, she was an established actress in her home country, England.

"Gone With The Wind" was the first major motion picture which used profanity. In the book, Rhett's closing line was "Frankly my dear, I don't give a damn." This may be tame to 1980 audiences, but in 1939 it wasn't. It had never been done before.

ENTERTAINMENT

The last time I had seen "Gone with The Wind" was in the late '60s in Lubbock. This does not include the time it was televised, which does not count. Nothing can replace the big silver screen for those of us who remember. To see a movie, such as "Gone With The Wind," on television is to not see it at all.

Monday night I saw it again. In more ways than one, it was like stepping into yesterday.

First of all, the Westwood Cinema brought back memories of what movie theaters are supposed to be like. The seats are soft and comfortable. They actually recline back, making the expression "sit back and enjoy the show," vastly appropriate.

And at the Westwood, one doesn't feel like a boxed-sardine as is so often the case in the small-roomed, mini-screened theaters of today.

It has been said that the reason screens have become less than bigger-than-life is because most of the current film stars don't have the charisma to fill the big screen. Perhaps that is the case. I don't know, not having seen most on one to be able to compare.

What I do know is Miss Leigh, Miss de Havilland, Gable and Howard had no difficulty filling the big screen. In fact, it would be hard to imagine any of them, especially Gable, on a small modern screen.

Although the sound is bad in a few places, the pageantry is well perserved. It was a delightful evening. I laughed more at the humor than I had before, although, or perhaps because, it was sometimes dated. The love story was as I had remembered it — tragic.

Performances by Hattie McDaniel as Mammy, Laura Hope Crews as Aunt "Pitty-pat" Hamilton and Butterfly McQueen as Prissy were as memorable as I remembered them to be.

The audience size was disappointing which was surprising in an area that prides itself on singing "Dixie" at the Summer Mummers and espouses regret at the small number of G-rated films that the family can attend together.

This movie left me eager to see the next, which I've never seen before — "Dr. Zhivago."

Bostwick stars in 'Red Flag — the Ultimate Game'

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — It's called "Red Flag — The Ultimate Game," and it's not one of those things you play on a television screen, at least not entirely. The jet-powered dog fights are for real; lives have been lost.

A television movie bearing that title appears on CBS Saturday night, with Barry Bostwick and William Devane starring. The Marble Arch production was filmed mostly at Nellis Air Force Base, where the real Red Flag game is played. Listen to Bostwick explain:

"The whole thing started at Nellis a couple of years ago. The Air Force trained some of its best fliers to think, act and fly like Russians. Their rooms are bedecked with Russian flags, they learn the Russian language and Russian tactics. The idea is to study the Russian mind and philosophy, to find out what kind of people they are, so that the fliers can make split-second decisions the way Russians would.

"Then the Air Force brings in the other side, American pilots as well as those from foreign countries. They engage in mock combat with the (pseudo) Russians, firing electronically. The results are charted on a screen not unlike a television game, and the pilots are told the results via radio.

"The purpose of the game is to give pilots the closest thing to combat experience. Most fliers who lose their lives and equipment have done so during the first 10 missions. After that, the percentage of loss decreases in quantum leaps.

"Another disturbing statistic is that in World War II one pilot was killed for every 30 of the enemy. In the Vietnam War it was one to one."

Bostwick said that producer-journalist Peter S. Greenberg learned about the Red Flag game on a news assignment. Lacking help from the Air Force, Greenberg sought documentation through the Freedom of Information Act. His findings indicated a high number of fatalities resulting from the game, and his research led to the TV drama.

"The Air Force gave full approval to the script — after certain changes," Bostwick reported. "Greenberg felt that Red Flag wasted lives, and he attempted to ask, Do we need such a deadly game? The final script was changed to leave judgment up to the viewer.

"Red Flag" is another evidence in Barry Bostwick's career, which has had a number of quantum leaps, though not enough to make his a household name.

The first break was playing Danny Zuto in the original Broadway production of "Grease." Then came "The Rocky Horror Show," which attracted a never-ending cult. He continued with the Hollywood spoof, "Movie, Movie," mini-series "Scruples" and "Moviola" (as John Gilbert), the short-lived series "Foul Play."

The 36-year-old Californian says that the biggest boost to his career came last summer when he played the antic buccaneer in the Los Angeles Civic Light Opera's "The Pirates of Penzance." His was a marvelous performance, combining elements of Errol Flynn and Mel Brooks.

"'Pirates' created a lot of action," said the lanky actor, still bearded from the role. "I've got a couple of movies lined up for this year, and I think I'll have a feature film career, which is where I want to go."

'Saturday Night Live' returns

NEW YORK (AP) — Since Chevy, Gilda, John, Dan, Jane and Bill went Hollywood, no member of "Saturday Night Live" or any of its clones has gained any noticeable public recognition. Even today's weekend TV freaks would be hard-pressed to identify the names of their favorite troupe members.

So one measure of the appeal of NBC's "Saturday Night Live," which returns Saturday, will be the public's familiarity with the new cast. If a star emerges, like Chevy Chase did six years ago, "SNL" will have taken a big step.

"In its heyday, the audience knew the actors as friends," said Dick Ebersol, producer of the new "SNL."

"The public had a sense that there were fights backstage, that John (Belushi) and Jane (Curtin) didn't get along. We did bits on John borrowing money for drugs and on what Gilda (Radner) ate during the week.

"There were scenes from the back lockers, with Dan (Ackroyd) and his motorcycle. We never took a straight slice of life, we bogused it up a bit. But it all had pseudo-humanizing effects."

Ice Capades is a must for the 'young at heart'

ODESSA — "Oh, she looks real. Can I touch her? If I do, she may go away. But, oh, I want to," she thought.

Without speaking, the little girl reached out her hand ever so gently. Then she pulled it back, just as carefully. Her awestruck brown eyes were limpid pools of desire. She wanted to touch this glittery fairy queen.

She reached out again very slowly, but, just before she touched the skater and without moving her arm, she snapped her wrist back. Holding her arm still, she slowly moved her hand down toward the skater's arm. Once again, she stopped. Then, as if she just couldn't stand it any longer and almost in slow motion, she relaxed her hand down onto the skater's arm.

Poof. She wasn't gone. Instead, she smiled at her.

The girl's mouth and eyes were both wide open as she touched her again. But she couldn't speak to her, it was enough just to be able to lightly pat her arm.

"Fairy tales can come true,
They can happen to you,
If you're young at heart..."
from "Young At Heart"

The wonder and delight which danced in the eyes and across the children's faces at Wednesday night's Ice Capades made the evening more than worthwhile. It made it a necessity for those who have children from about age 5 to 12.

It might also be required viewing for the "young at heart" of all ages. The colorful costumes and fantasy inspiring routines of this ice extravaganza appeared to be enjoyed by all those there, regardless of their age.

Of special interest to the young was one of the evening's first numbers — The Magic Machine. This act brought to life such characters as Fred Flintstone, Scooby-Doo, Yogi Bear, Barney Rubble, Jabberjaws, Raggedy Ann and Andy, plus others. During its performance, children were allowed to sit right next to the arena. At the number's conclusion, the various characters shook hands and chatted with the kids.

Also at the show's close, the starswho had dazzled those there with their expertise on ice, stepped outside the ring into the walkway area and talked with the children.

Attired in royalty-styled sparkling golden robes, they appeared to have walked out of the pages of fantasyland.

Once inside the arena again, their robes lit up as did the entire inside of Ector County Coliseum with slowly flashing soft white lights. The skaters danced as the lights circled and swirled across the arena's walls and ceiling. This finale, "Centennial of Light," represented the entire company's celebration of the invention of the electric light by Thomas A. Edison.

Exciting performances were turned in by soloist Valerie McBroom and adagio skaters Chuck and Sue Shaull. Also Bill Tilghman and Lori Benton skated quite well together and alone.

Miss McBroom's skating style showed flair combined with a graceful and lyrical execution. She was a delight to watch.

The Shaulls, who are brother and sister, skated as one together and were quite daring in their deliverance of several movements. Miss Schaull's final leap into his arms at the close of one of their numbers caused one observer to say, "That takes a lot of faith. I bet they hardly ever argue the day of a performance."

Although Gail Hamula and Frank Sweiding have been skating partners since 1976, winning the Gold Medal at the International Grand Prix competition in St. Gervais, France in 1977, they appeared shaky Wednesday night skating more like two skaters who have just begun to perform together.

Sandy Lenz did not perform. At least, her name was not announced at the close of the show when all of the stars paraded out for the grand finale. But then, it was difficult at times to be certain who was on the ice because, for many of the solo and adagio numbers, no skaters' names were announced.

Michael Tokar's second routine was more commanding than his first. In it, his movements were cleaner and more dramatic.

Presented at the show were four comedy routines. The first was a performance by Brad Doug, which was at the show's opening before "The Magic Machine." It took some time for the box office to find the necessary tickets and I missed this number. Sorry Brad.

The others were good, with Don Dunfield carrying the honors. His diving routine had to be seen to be appreciated. He certainly demonstrated his proficiency at comedic gymnastics.

This is not to say that Bob Mac and Company didn't do an admirable job — they did. And perhaps one of the funniest moments of the evening was stolen by an audience member.

Just as it appeared that Bob Mac and Bob Moskalyk were about to fling Karen Jubert into the audience, a woman sitting on the front row threw popcorn over her back covering those sitting behind her. Then, when singled out, she covered her face with the program.

If it was staged, and it may have been, it was nevertheless well timed and drew one of the biggest laughs of the evening.

The weakest of the comedy routines was Tommy Miller and Company's sailor routine. It was not bad; it was just not as funny as the others. Perhaps this was because most of the action was predictable.

The Ice Capattes and Ice Cadets presented colorful routines throughout the show. Unfortunately, during one number, one girl fell twice and another once. Otherwise, their combined performances were well executed.

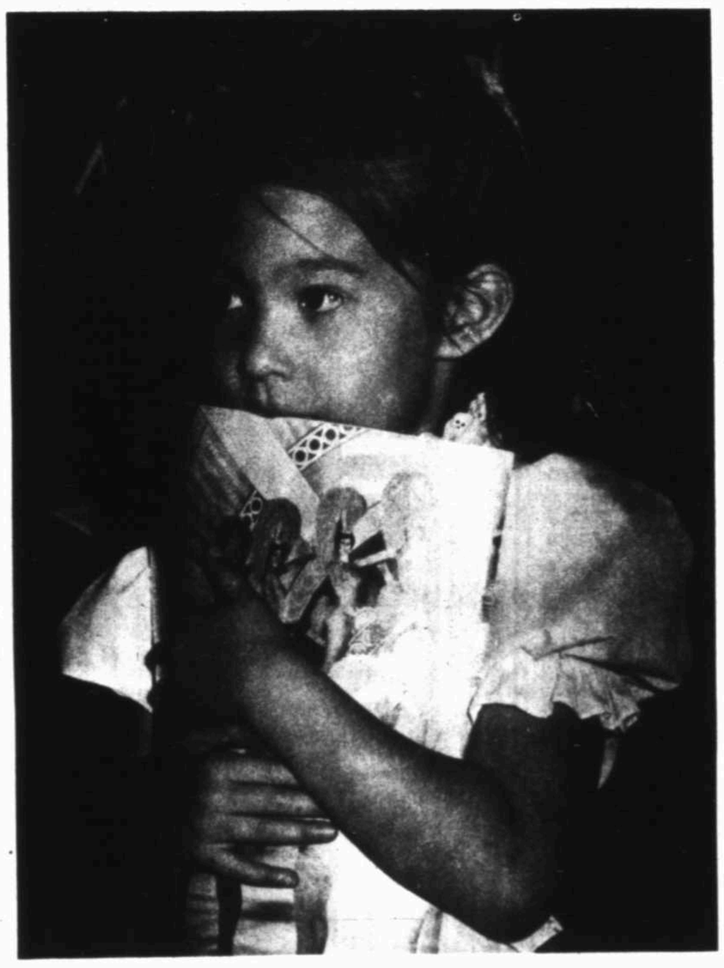

Performances left include 7:30 today and Saturday, 3 p.m. Saturday and 2 and 6 p.m. Sunday. Tickets, priced at $6, $7 and $8, may be purchased in Midland at the special ticket booth set up in Midland Park Mall, or they may be charged by phone on Visa and MasterCharge by calling 563-1210 or 1-367-6658.

Film not shown in Israel

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — The award-winning film, "Playing for Time" will not be televised in Israel because of star Vanessa Redgrave's strong anti-Israeli views, a spokeswoman for Israel Television said today.

Asked whether the made-for-TV film about Auschwitz would be broadcast, spokeswoman Ariella Ravdal said "the decision in principle is negative."

She quoted Yosef Lapid, director of the National Broadcasting Authority, as saying: "We'll screen that film when Ms. Redgrave prays at the Wailing Wall."

Juvenile criminals major border problem

By JESUS RANGEL
Copley News Service

MEXICALI, Mexico — Seventeen-year-old Hector crossed the desert from Sinaloa to Mexicali with his younger brother last year to look for work.

The relatives the boys planned to stay with, however, were in California looking for work themselves. After a few weeks of living on the streets, Hector and his brother were arrested for allegedly raping a 14-year-old girl.

Fourteen-year-old Gloria grew up in Mexicali. Her parents and 10 brothers and sisters still live in the two-room wooden shack where she was born. There wasn't enough food to go around.

Gloria was picked up by police earlier this year for knocking down an old woman and stealing her groceries. "This is the first time I've done anything," she said. "I just want to go home."

ALFREDO, 15, also living in the Mexicali area, was left alone by his parents last year when they crossed the border to look for work. He was arrested a short time later for stealing a motorcycle.

He doesn't know when his parents will return.

The three youths are symptomatic of what Baja California officials say is rapidly becoming the state's No. 1 social problem: juvenile delinquency.

Like their counterparts in California's urban areas, law enforcement officials in Mexicali and Tijuana say they are spending most of their working hours simply responding to complaints about juvenile criminals. And, as the cases of Hector, Gloria and Alfredo illustrate, the crimes run the gamut of the police blotter.

The officials don't know why the delinquency rate is increasing. But they suspect that demographics have something to do with it.

MORE THAN 71 percent of Baja California's population is under 21, and more than 61 percent under 18. Nationwide in Mexico, 54 percent of the population is under 21.

Further aggravating the problem is the state's geographic location. An increasing number of the juveniles arrested are from elsewhere in Mexico, having migrated to the border area, alone or with their families, looking for a better life.

Then there is the rapidly increasing number of Mexicali and Tijuana children abandoned by their parents when they cross the border to look for work.

There are no hard statistics, but law enforcement estimate that about a third of the 60 to 70 juveniles arrested each night in the state come from elsewhere in Mexico. The impact of the migration — and poverty — is illustrated by the types of crimes the youths are accused of.

"The majority are picked up because of robbery for objects of necessity," said Enrique Galvan, director of the state education department's cultural agency. "That includes food, money and clothing."

The typical juvenile delinquent, he said, is male, unemployed, a grade school dropout and has been abandoned by parents looking for work in the United States. "It reflects the demographic pressure of migration," he said.

Public opinion, which officials consider the best indicator of how the problem is growing, has recently turned angry — even vicious — in its clamor that something be done about juvenile delinquency.

CERTAIN SECTORS of the population, mainly businessmen, have become resentful about the millions of dollars a year in property damage attributable to youths. Of late, they have begun demanding, in increasingly strident tones, that the age at which youths may be tried in court as adults be lowered from 18 to 16.

Ruben Granados, owner of an appliance store on Mexicali's east side, said he lost more than $$6,000 last year after three break-ins by juveniles.

"Tell a (juvenile) that if he does this or that wrong, he'll go to jail for 20 years," he suggested. "Then we'll be able to stop this foolishness."

AARON NOYOLA, owner of a pharmacy in Mexicali's north side, said he favors lowering the age limit for certain offenses. "There are some innocent kids who go to jail sometimes," he said. "I want to protect them. But it's the bad kids that hang around thinking of malicious things to do that I'm in favor of throwing in jail."

Other sectors, including community activists and the wives of the state's four mayors, are equally strident in citing the need to attack the root cause of the problem, such as poverty and the lack of adequate educational opportunities and recreational facilities.

But they do not deny that the problem exists.

So far, Baja California Gov. Roberto de la Madrid has sided with the liberals, rejecting the idea of lowering the age limit.

"IT IS THE position of the government that prevention should come first," said Alejandro Rosas Romandia, the state attorney general. "The governor said it was more important to take other measures instead of lowering the age. He felt we should intensify the prevention and rehabilitation campaign instead."

That campaign is a part of a reorganization instituted in 1979 by De la Madrid to deal with juvenile delinquency. Responsibility for dealing with juveniles was taken away from several agencies scattered throughout the state and given to a newly created Department of Education and Social Welfare.

The various agencies — delinquency prevention, cultural activities, sports and education — were combined. Following California's example, the reorganization effectively removed juveniles from the state's criminal justice system.

PRIOR TO DE la Madrid's administration, less than 35 percent of the Baja California budget was devoted to education and delinquency prevention. Now, the Department of Education and Social Welfare accounts for almost half of the $$5.8 billion budget, said Dr. Miguel Angel Cardenas, the department's director.

"It's a change from a legalistic to a humanistic approach," he said. "Now we are stressing development rather than punishment."

Prior to the reorganization, he added, there was no legal distinction between juvenile and adult criminals. Under a 1945 state law, prosecution was the responsibility of a combined youth and adult authority.

"There was absolutely no mechanism for rehabilitation," Cardenas said. "They (juveniles) were often thrown in the same jails as adults."

Hearst offers grants

NEW YORK — During the 1981-82 academic year, journalism students at 79 colleges and universities throughout the U.S. will compete for $104,525 in scholarships and grants offered by the William Randolph Hearst Foundation.

Now in its 22nd year, the Journalism Awards Program consists of six monthly writing competitions and one photojournalism contest. Monthly winners in both categories will travel to San Francisco in May 1982 to compete for additional scholarships.

During the school year, 60 monthly scholarships are awarded. These grants range from $100 to $1,200. Twenty scholarships are awarded in the finalist competition — these range from $350 to $2,000.

The Foundation matches all scholarships with grants of the same amount going to the schools and colleges of all winning students.

The Awards Program is conducted under the auspices of the American Association of Schools and Departments of Journalism. Deans and professors from the 79 colleges represent the AASDJ in monitoring the program.

O'Connor sponsors exercise class for court employees

WASHINGTON (AP) — The sign-up rate by women employees of the Supreme Court has been brisk for daily early morning exercises sponsored by the court's newest justice.

One of Justice Sandra Day O'Connor's clerks circulated a memo earlier this week inviting "women employees" to join the exercises, starting Monday, to be supervised by a YWCA instructor.

Clerk Deborah Merritt said the classes will be held in the court's tiny gymnnasium, referred to by law clerks who have played basketball with Justice Byron White as "the highest court in the land."

One of the morning recruits confessed, however, that she was more interested in meeting the top court's new jurist than in starting the workday with grunts and groans.

CHICAGO (AP) — Actor Danny Thomas has been chosen to receive the annual Mother Cabrini award from the Columbus-Cuneo-Cabrini Medical Center, hospital officials say.

Thomas was chosen because he fits the ideals of Mother Cabrini for dedication to research for childhood illnesses, said Stephen Rugg, chairman of the Dec. 5 dinner at which the actor will be honored.

Thomas established the St. Jude Children's Research Hospital in Memphis, Tenn.

Last year, the hospital presented the award to opera singer Luciano Pavarotti and Father Peter Smith.

The award, announced Thursday, is named for St. Frances Xavier Cabrini. The Italian immigrant was canonized in 1946 — the first American citizen to be so honored.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Gary Coleman and Tandem Productions each lost a round in their lawsuits relating to the 13-year-old actor's contract dispute with producers of the hit TV series "Diff'rent Strokes."

Coleman has been absent from the set since production for the current season began last month.

"Gary's going to school," said Stanton Stein, one of Coleman's lawyers.

In Santa Monica Superior Court, Judge Richard Choate on Wednesday threw out Coleman's request that the pact giving him $30,000 an episode this season be reviewed under state law regarding contracts with minors.

But on the same day Los Angeles Superior Court Judge Leon Savitch refused Tandem's request for an injunction prohibiting Coleman rom working anywhere else. Savitch said Tandem had failed to prove the need for the injunction in the face of sworn statements in which Coleman's father, W.G. Coleman, and his manager, Vic Perillo, said the youth was not seeking work elsewhere in the entertainment industry.

Man regains use of fingers in surgical marathon

By FRED BAYLES
Associated Press Writer

BOSTON (AP) — Following an industrial accident early last month, Michael Bates believed he faced a future without hands.

The 21-year-old Drewsville, N.H., man was caught in an iron press Sept. 4 at a Bel Falls, Vt., plant.

But 44 doctors, nurses and technicians labored during a 46-hour "surgical marathon" to reattach seven of eight severely mangled fingers to his hands.

Now, Bates says he has no doubts he'll gain full use of his hands.

"The way I feel is they are going to work — I'm going to make them work," he said Thursday, his hands swathed in bandages. "The doctors spent a lot of time on me, and I'd like to show them they did a good job."

Dr. James W. May Jr., who headed the surgical team, said he believed the operation marked the first time surgeons have been able to replace that many fingers. He said the operation also marked the longest time a Massachusetts General Hospital patient has been under general anesthesia.

Bates has limited movement in the fingers, but May said it will take a year of physical therapy before doctors know how much function he will have in his hands. The patient may also have to undergo more surgery, including skin grafts.

Bates received emergency treatement at Rockingham Memorial Hospital in Bellows Falls and arrived in Boston by ambulance 2½ hours after the accident. While he received emergency treatment, pairs of surgeons working with microscopes prepared each finger for reattachment, labeling a total of 16 nerve endings, 24 tendons, and 24 arteries and veins.

May said the fingers were crushed at the base, making surgery more difficult. He said surgeons had to cut about three-quarters of an inch from each finger to eliminate the most serious damage.

Surgeons had to graft veins from Bates' arms and feet to sections of the fingers.

During the reattachment, pairs of surgeons, operating in shifts, worked on each hand. May said he worked about 20 hours and missed his 10th wedding anniversary.

All eight of the fingers were originally reattached, but May said the little finger on the patient's right hand had to be partially amputated after it began to lose circulation.

Controversial cancer drug used in Japan

By K.P. HONG
Associated Press Writer

TOKYO (AP) — Maruyama Vaccine, a controversial drug used by an estimated 30,000 cancer victims without official sanction, will be supplied to patients through hospitals and clinics across the nation, Health and Welfare Ministry officials said today.

The vaccine, first discovered as a treatment for tuberculosis in the mid-1940s, has been used by Dr. Chisato Maruyama to treat 133,000 inoperable cancer patients in the past 15 years. It had been available only at the Nippon Medical College Hospital in Tokyo.

Some 2,000 persons from 53 countries also have been given the vaccine. The U.S. Food and Drug Administration, while not recognizing the vaccine, has designated several American doctors who can dispense it. The late actor Steve McQueen reportedly received the drug shortly before his death from lung cancer at a Mexican clinic in Nov. 1980.

Officials said the ministry and the drug's manufacturer, Geria Shunyaku Kogyo Co., have agreed to supply the vaccine commercially nationwide as an "experimental medicine."

The ministry stopped short of officially sanctioning the medication, and debate still rages over its effectiveness.

The agreement was the result of recent negotiations between the ministry and the manufacturer. In earlier talks last August, the ministry refused to approve commercial production of the drug on grounds that there was no proof that it works. At that time, the ministry agreed to allow cancer patients to continue treatments on an experimental basis.

The agreement with Geria will allow Nippon Medical College to act as the main coordinator in supplying the vaccine to an estimated 4,000 doctors around the country now dispensing the drug, and others who wish to use it.

Normally, costs of dispensing experimental drugs are borne by the manufacturer, ministry officials said. But because of the huge number of patients using Maruyama Vaccine, doctors are being allowed to charge patients for the drug.

At present, hundreds of friends and relatives of terminally ill cancer patients line up at the Tokyo medical college to receive 40 days' worth of inoculations for a "donation" of 5,000 yen, the equivalent of $21.60.

Faster depreciation means higher phone bills

WASHINGTON (AP) — In action sure to raise both local and long-distance rates next year, the Federal Communications Commission is moving to allow telephone companies to speed depreciation of their equipment.

The change, approved by the commission last November, was set in motion Thursday when the agency told American Telephone & Telegraph Co. how much faster it should depreciate its equipment.

The new procedure will mean that consumers face a $1.04 billion increase nationally in local and long-distance rates over the next year. The increases, including about $800 million in local rates, are expected to start showing up in customer bills sometime early in 1982.

The commission said the faster depreciation is justified because of the rapid pace at which equipment is being outdated by technological advances.

Depreciation is the process in which a company estimates the useful life of a piece of equipment and then recovers a percentage of the cost each year. For a regulated utility, the percentage recovered each year becomes an expense that must be considered in setting rates.

Under the present policy, a company cannot depreciate as much equipment cost as it's entitled to if the equipment has to be replaced sooner than expected.

In recent years, equipment has undergone such rapid improvement that items like phone switches originally expected to last 20 years are lasting only five or 10, drastically increasing the amount of unrecovered depreciation.

The FCC said the change will benefit consumers over the long term because companies will not have to turn to expensive money markets to finance construction and can introduce advanced equipment more rapidly.

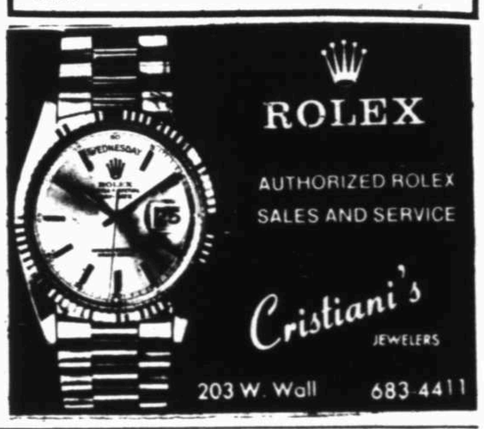

The FCC's response to the problem was to allow phone companies to tie their annual depreciation writeoffs more closely to the actual lifetime of the equipment.

Grass growth

Chart shows growth pattern of leaves, roots and rhizomes in a bluegrass lawn: Fall fertilizing increases late-season growth, especially of rhizomes. These sideway stems, which produce new grass plants, grow vigorously into late fall, thickening the lawn and also preparing it for early green-up next spring.

Fall is an important growth period for lawns

MARYSVILLE, Ohio — If your lawn looks tired this fall, maybe it's just hungry. That observation comes from the scientists at O.M. Scott and Sons, the lawn people, whose research shows that lawns by now have used up the nutrients put down last spring and are in need of feeding again.

According to Scotts agronmist Dr. John Long, fall is the season when perennial grass plants such as bluegrasses and fescues reap the greatest benefit from fertilizer. The nutrients that exist naturally in the soil are not sufficient to support the kind of actively growing green carpet that most people enjoy.

Lawns fertilized in the fall experience especially vigorous growth, says Dr. Long. This is when the bluegrasses and similar perennials multiply most rapidly, putting forth tillers and underground stems, called rhizomes. Growing outwards from the parent plant, the tillers and rhizomes emerge as new seedlings, thickening the lawn and helping to fill in bare spots. Bluegrasses continue to reproduce in this way into late fall.

Cooler weather, often accompanied by increased rainfall, also favors growth. In addition, the competition from annual weeds such as crabgrass for nutrients and territory is on the decline. Grass plants have begun to store up carbohydrates against the rigors of winter, and root growth is stimulated.

Scotts experts recommend fertlizing twice in the fall with a slow-release fertilizer that has a high nitrogen content such as 27-3-3. The feedings should be six to eight weeks apart in early and late fall before the ground freezes.

"Fall is the most delightful time of all to have a nice green lawn, since so much greenery is fading or gone," notes Dr. Long, pointing out that "lawns fed in the fall are the first to green up in the spring."

Scatter daffodil and crocus bulbs randomly to naturalize

By TOM STEVENSON
The Washington Post

Q: My mother gave me a lot of daffodil and crocus bulbs to plant in my yard: she suggested that I naturalize them. How do you do it? I didn't want to let her know I didn't know.

A: Scatter the bulbs randomly across the lawn, at the base of trees or around shrubs, and plant them where they fall. In the spring they will bloom as if they just happened to grow there, like wild flowers. Plant large bulbs four inches deep, small ones two inches deep. As time goes by and the bulbs multiply, you can have masses of spring color in your yard year after year with little effort.

Q: Tree roots are a problem in my yard. What causes them to come up to the surface and what can I do about it?

A: Roots of several kinds of trees, particularly those of silver maple, elm and willow, which are fast-growing, eventually come to the surface. A shade-tolerant ground cover such as pachysandra may be your best bet. If you cut the roots off, the tree may topple over in a heavy wind storm.

Q: My two dogwood trees have curled leaves with a brown edge around them. What is the cause?

A: In most cases this is due to a lack of water. You may think you have watered them well, but remember the roots of the dogwood may be as deep as two feet and it would take 9 to 12 hours with a lawn sprinkler to soak the soil to that depth.

Q: We have a bad slope on our lawn. It is hard to grow grass there and when it does grow it is hard to cut. Is there a ground cover that would work there?

A: Shore juniper, which grows to a height of one foot and spreads to four or five feet, and Bar Harbor juniper which grows to a height of one to two feet and spreads to three or four feet would be fine. Both are attractive. Shore will tolerate partial shade and Bar Harbor needs full sun.

Q: I bring in lettuce from my garden and it stays fresh for only 3 or 4 days. Is there some way to do better?

A: Researchers have found that high temperatures have the most adverse effect on the storage life o lettuce. Shredded lettucestored at approximately 34 degrees F remains fresh for about 26 days compared oo 10 days for the same kind at approximately 50 degrees

Also important is a gas-tight container that allows 50 percent longer storage life than common polyethylene bags.

Test soil for nitrogen if fruit won't produce

By TOM STEVENSON
The Washington Post

Gardeners are often perplexed when blossoms drop from tomatoes, peppers and cucumber plants without setting fruit. There may be several reasons for this.

One cause is too much nitrogen fertilizer, which can result in a lot of green leaves but no fruit. Test your soil before planting and follow soil test recommendations to prevent the application of too much nitrogeon.

Too much shade or not enough light is another cause of poor fruit set. This usually results in spindly or leggy plants. Most fruiting vegetables do best in full sun all day, or at least most of the day.

Poor pollination can cause poor fruit set. Vine crops like cucumers and squash require bees for pollination. Wild bees are usually present. But when plants are sprayed with Sevin (insecticide) during the day, many of the bees may be killed.

To ensure pollination of sweet corn, plant at least three rows at each planting. Three rows 25 feet long are better than one row 75 feet long.

Tomatoes, peppers, beans and peas are self-pollinated and require no special row arrangement.

Extreme temperatures can reduce fruit set. If temperatures during flowering are too low--below 55 degrees--or too high--above 90 degrees--the pollen grains of warm season crops are usually no good. This is particularly true of tomatoes.

Constantly wet soil conditions can cause fruits to fall off the plants. This is especially true of pepper plants in poorly drained soils.

Growing vegetables is only half the game. You've got to pick them right, too. Take lima beans, for example. If they stay on the bush too long, they are likely to be less tasty and flavorful.

Picking too early is wasteful, so look for a happy medium. A good way to tell when the bean is ready to pick is the change in color. Green seeded types of limas turn white as they become over-mature. Speckled seeded types develop specks or blotches as the green color fades.

Picking snap beans at the right time is important, too. Pick them when pods are fully developed but when seeds are no more than 50 percent of their normal size. If you let them stay on the bush too long, you'll have beans with too much fiber.

The real test of gardening know-how is picking sweet corn at just the right time. Experience is the only thing that will make you an expert.

It's a shame to waste yield by picking the ears when they are grossly immature. On the other hand, corn left on the stalk too long isn't good for much but feeding livestock.

Social access

NEW YORK (AP) — For the many solo men and women traveling today on business, a market-research expert suggests an acceptable way to meet people.

"If restaurants in hotels promoted the option of dining at a 'family style' table for 'single' diners, the clientele would be enthusiastic and the word would spread, improving business for the restaurant, too," said Judith Langer, president of a market-research firm here and publisher of "The Langer Report," which studies consumer attitudes and behavior.

After-frost gardening

By TOM STEVENSON
(c) 1981, The Washington Post

Several kinds of vegetables from the garden can continue to be enjoyed when frost puts an end to the season outdoors.

When frost is predicted, pick tomatoes that have started to change from dark green to pale-whiteish green (called mature green), also those turning pink.

Wash and let them dry off before you store them. Wiping the soil off may cause sand scarring, which might lead to decay.

Store those showing red in separate containers from green ones. Pack green ones in shallow boxes or trays for ripening. Keep them out of sunlight.

Mature green tomatoes reach an eating-ripe stage at 65 to 70 degrees F. in about 14 days. Ripening can be slowed down by holding them at 55 degrees. At 55 degrees mature green ones need 25 to 28 days to ripen. Less mature ones need more time to ripen. A room with moderately moist air is best; too much dampness encourages decay. If too dry, they shrivel.

A well-ventilated basement under a house with central heating may be used for short-term storage of potatoes, sweet potatoes and onions. But to store vegetables and fruits over winter in a basement that has a furnace, you will need to partition off a room and insulate it.

Cellars under houses without central heat have long been used successfully for winter storage of fruits and vegetables. These cellars usually have an out ide entrance and a dirt floor. The foor is a means of ventilating the cellar and regulating the temperature.

Cauliflower, cucumbers, eggplant and peppers, under proper moisture and temperature conditions, may be stored for several days to a month or more. Chives and parsley may be transplanted to pots and grown indoors for winter use.

The correct temperature is a must for successful storage of most vegetables. Late cabbage should be stored as near 32 degrees F. as possible, also late celery, endive, onions, parsnips and cauliflower. Cucumbers, eggplant and pepper can be stored for several weeks in a cool, moderately moist place at 55 degrees; sweet potatoes at 55 to 60; white potatoes at 35 to 40; pumpkins and squashes at 55, and miscellaneous root crops as near 32 as possible.

Apples can be kept through fall and winter, moderately moist, at 32, also grapes for 1 to 2 months, grapefruit for 4 to 6 weeks and oranges for 4 to 6 weeks.

For long-term storage of apples, the temperature should be as close to 32 as possible. In general, apples ripen about four times as fast at 50 as at 32. They become overripe rapidly at 70 or above.

Apples must be protected from freezing (28 to 30 degrees) and shriveling, to prevent which moderate moisture is required. Pick them when they are mature but still hard.

For proper flavor and texture, pears must be ripened after harvest. Pick them when they are fully mature but still hard and green. They are ready for picking when they change from deep green to pale green. If stored too long or at too high a temper$ture (75 or above), they break down without ripening.

Turnips and rutabagas give off odors and should not be stored in your basement or home cellar. They can be stored with other root crops and vegetables in an outdoor cellar or pit.

HINTS FROM HELOISE

Going on a trip? Try these packing hints

DEAR HELOISE:

So you too toss items into your suitcase as you think of them! It's one of my favorite packing shortcuts!

I also save small plastic jars and bottles and plastic bags of all sizes and shapes.

In these, I carry just the amounts of makeup, shampoo, etc., that I think I'll need on the trip. I put laundry soap powder into a zip-top sandwich bag, powder in a pill bottle, a tiny sewing kit in another one.

Loose items go into three plastic bags: one for my bedside table, (medicines, nail polish, tiny travel alarm clock); one for the bathroom (toothbrush, etc., — items which I use every day); and one for emergencies and items used only occasionally. I pack clothes in other plastic bags.

I always carry a little ball of twine for a clothesline and two suction cup hooks to attach to tiles or mirrors.

For foreign travel, I carry a half roll of flattened toilet tissue with the cardboard tube removed. This can double for facial tissues if necessary. I also pack a partly used bar of soap in a small plastic bag and a tiny flashlight which takes a single AA battery.

I've been using Heloise hints ever since their beginnings almost and this is the first time I've had anything to contribute as I'm a better traveler than I am a housekeeper! — Mary Ida Burnite

+ + +

While I can't vouch for your abilities as a housekeeper, you sure have traveling know-how down pat!

Travel tips are very good to have when the time comes, for know-how makes traveling so much easier. You're a luv... — Heloise

FOOT WARMER

Dear Heloise: At night, even under tons of blankets, my feet are always cold. So, to warm them, I fill a two-liter plastic bottle with hot water, then put the cap on tight. (Check carefully for any leakage. — H.)

I wrap a small towel around it and put it under the covers at the foot of the bed.

I think it works better than a hot water bottle as there is more warm area for my feet to touch! — Reader

SCISSORS

Dear Heloise: An initial investment which will more than pay for itself in terms of time and convenience is to have scissors stashed in different places.

Of course, a pair in the kitchen is indispensable but it's also handy to have one in the laundry to snip off loose threads. Also, a pair in your dresser drawer. — M.H.

PEELING PEARS

Dear Heloise: To remove skin from pears easily, put them in a wire sieve or cheese cloth and dip them into boiling water.

Bartlett pears require about one minute in the boiling water, Kieffer pears require from three to five minutes in the boiling water. Other varieties may require different timings, so check one or two of the pears that you are going to use.

The skins do not slip off as easily as the skins of peaches do but they can be pulled off in much less time than it takes to peel them. Also, the fruit is much smoother, so looks prettier when canned.

I have used this method for several years and it really works. — Elsie Hudson

HINTS FROM HIM

Dear Heloise: After removing the pictures when washing walls, nails or hooks usually are left as is. Here is a hint I think will save many adhesive bandage strips and foul words:

Just hang a tad of cloth or a bit of colored yarn on the hook or nail. This will let you know the nail is still there and will save you a cut hand, torn sponge or ripped cloth as nails are hard to spot on some walls. — Henry Covaleski

STICKER USES

Dear Heloise: Save the little magazine sweepstake stickers which come in the mail for those times when you have stamps with no glue.

Moisten one of the stickers slightly and rub the stamp over it. Sufficient glue will rub off onto the stamp to allow it to stick.

I keep these little stickers in my stationery box so they will always be handy. — Mrs. Mary Solomon

On the house

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

If you have ever done any gluing around the house, you know there is a big difference between gluing two things merely to hold them together and bonding them so they can withstand stress.

Since the rungs of a chair are there specifically to add strength to the construction of a piece of furniture which must resist the strain of considerable weight, they necessarily must be in good condition. When a rung shrinks and becomes loose, as often happens after a period of protracted dryness, it loses all or part of its effectiveness. Tightening the rung at once can prevent much worse structural damage, but more important, it can prevent injury.

The main ingredient in the repairs of a loose chair rung is glue — not just any glue, but one that is powerful enough to hold up at a point where stress is inevitable. Before going any farther, it must be pointed out that this discussion is about chairs used inside a house, not outside. For exterior chairs, the glue must be waterproof, a term that makes resorcinol glue the logical choice. If it is used, the two parts of it must be mixed exactly according to the instructions on the label.

For inside chair rungs, epoxy is a good selection. It, too, usually comes in two containers, the contents of which must be mixed. Plastic resins and caseins also are good. Also, consider the use of glue injector and similar small assistance tools for getting the glue in hard-to-reach areas, such as the ends of rungs which are loose but cannot be pulled out far enough to spread the glue properly.

The popular cyanoacrylate adhesives, which can bond your fingers together if not handled carefully, lose some of their strength when used on porous materials. But a new version of them is especially for woods and leathers and can be used for chair rungs, although it is a bit expensive if very much is required. In using any adhesive in this category, follow the directions carefully in regard to the limited amounts that must be applied as well as to whether the adhesive must be applied to one or both surfaces to be bonded.

New glue seldom holds well to old glue. Scrape off as much of the old glue as possible from the part of the rung that can be reached. Most of the time, by working firmly but slowly, you can pull back one leg of a chair just enough to apply the glue to the rung end.

There are regular chair clamps to wind around the legs of the chair to keep the rungs tightly in place while the glue sets, but ordinary clothesline or something similar can be used in their place.

DEAR ABBY

Wheel of fortune spins out of control

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I bought my future father-in-law a season lottery ticket last Christmas, and when I gave it to him, I jokingly said that this would be the winning ticket and we would split the payoff when he won.

Well, imagine the shock when one month later he hit the $50,000 big one on that ticket! I was as thrilled as my future in-laws were, but as time went by, I wasn't offered any part of the winnings. My future mother-in-law could see the hurt in me, so I finally told her I thought I should have shared in the winnings, and she said, "If I were a bookie, I would only get 4 percent." I don't have to tell you how that made me feel. Then I was given $1,000.

I have since married their son, but the hurt is still there as far as my feelings are concerned.

What are your thoughts about this, Abby? Do you think I was treated fairly? Or shouldn't I have received half? — FEELS GYPPED

DEAR FEELS: You say YOU jokingly suggested to your then-future father-in-law that you'd split the winnings if he won, which does not constitute a commitment on HIS part, unless he agreed. Did he? If so, you were indeed gypped. If not, I think a $1,000 gift wasn't too shabby.

DEAR ABBY: You recently published a letter from the "Tattooed Man," asking how to remove a tattoo. May I make a suggestion? If he doesn't want to have the tattoo surgically removed, he can buy some Lydia O'Leary Cover Mark at a drugstore or the cosmetic department of a department store. It's a flesh-colored cream that can be applied directly over the tattoo. It will not rub off or wash off. In fact, it stays on so well it requires another product to remove it. Being a tattooed lady myself, I know it works. — TATTOOED IN PORTLAND, ORE.

DEAR TATTOOED: Thanks! For years I've recommended Lydia O'Leary's Cover Mark to "hide" birthmarks.

I am also informed that some dermatologists remove tattoos by LASER — a new technique that leaves no scarring.

DEAR ABBY: I work in a relatively small office with four men and one other woman secretary. The problem is not the work — it's the odor! The other secretary drowns herself in some kind of foul-smelling perfume that makes me utterly nauseated. The fragrance does not mix with her chemistry, and she uses so much it's overpowering. The men here find it intolerable, too.

How does one tactfully break the news to her that her perfume is offensive?

With the exception of this one problem, I would feel great about my job. I really could use your advice on the subject since she's a nice person and I don't want to hurt her feelings. — GOTTA BREATHE IN NEW ORLEANS

DEAR GOTTA: Believe it or not, some people "drown" themselves in perfume because their own sense of smell is deficient. Tell her privately, in a gentle, friendly way, that you are allergic to her perfume, and would she please try another brand and apply it sparingly.

CONFIDENTIAL TO M. IN NOE VALLEY, CALIF.: Face reality! Acceptance of what has happened is the first step in overcoming the consequences of any misfortune.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I spend almost every weekend with my brother and his wife at their summer home.

Last Saturday, when we were there, their phone rang and because my sister-in-law was busy preparing dinner, I answered it. The caller identified himself as someone from the local radio station and said if I could answer three questions I would win $50. He asked the three questions, which I answered correctly, then he asked me for my name and address and I automatically gave him my name and address. When I hung up my sister-in-law began screaming at me, saying it was her home and her telephone and I should have given the caller her name and address. She said I had some nerve giving my own name and address — that she knew the answers to those questions and she should get the $50.

Abby, my first thought after winning the money was, "I will take everyone out for a nice dinner."

I feel terrible about the whole thing because we had been good friends for years and now she's mad at me. I apologized and even offered her the money, but she said she wouldn't take it.

Did I do something so terribly wrong? How can I make amends? — FEELING AWFUL IN N.Y.

DEAR FEELING: Your automatic response was understandable and certainly not "wrong." I think you've done all you can. If she wants to stay mad, you haven't lost a very good friend.

DEAR ABBY: I enjoy your stuff. When I attended Tulane University, I told my professor that I was raised in Shreveport, La.

He said, "You RAISE hogs and REAR children."

You mentioned that you were raised in a small town. Tell me Abby, were you raised or reared? Love and kisses, — HENRY

DEAR HENRY: In "The Careful Writer," the late Theodore M. Bernstein put it this way: "At one time, a war raged (and some skirmishes are still going on) against the use of 'raise' to describe what parents do to children. The battle cry was, 'you raise pigs, but you rear children.' However, in this country at least, the war is over; we raise both pigs and children, and some parents will testify that you can't always tell the difference."

Steiff teddy bears are collector's items

By JUDI HUNT
Hearst Feature Service

SEATTLE — Sue Guldjord has passed the age when it took a stuffed teddy bear to get to sleep at night.

But she still collects the cuddly, furry brown symbol of childhood, and "yes, I do occasionally take one to bed. But mostly I have them in the dining room so the children can enjoy them."

It is obvious, however, that she isn't the only adult taken with teddy bears, especially when they're the bears made by the manufacturers of the original teddy bear, Steiff.

Steiff bears, handmade pretty much as they have been since Richard Steiff first designed them in 1903, aren't cheap. Average prices range from $40 to $70 range, and some go over $100.

Guldjord has 10 of them, which puts her in some rarefied company, according to Hans-Otto Steiff. "Jackie Onassis has a Steiff bear, Princess Caroline of Monaco has a whole collection and just about every royal family that you can think of, including the British, have purchased them for their children."

But Americans are the German company's best importers, accounting for at least half of the firm's output. And it has been that way since the beginning, Steiff says.

"The first time the bears were presented at the Leipzeg Fair, which is a city now in East Germany, no one showed any interest in the bear, because it was expensive. It was made from a national fiber culled from the mohair goat and it was painstakingly made by hand, and it was beautiful, but it cost a lot of money."

Until the last day when an American buyer, bored with looking for something new to take home for his store, dropped into the Steiff booth. "He took the bear in hand and cuddled it and told my uncle he wanted 3,000 of them. At first my uncle didn't pay any attention because he didn't quite believe what he had heard. Finally the man got through to him and the first Steiff bears were on their way to the United States."

The bears were an instant hit, especially when a decorator for the White House decided to use them as table decorations for the wedding of President Theodore Roosevelt's daughter Alice.

"That's when the bear got it's name. Someone jokingly asked if the bears had a name and some joker said yes, 'Teddy'," Steiff says. "That was because the president was a great hunter of bears and wild game."

The bears and other stuffed Steiff animals — giraffes, dogs, lions, tigers and even mice — have been gaining in popularity ever since. Steiff knows why people spend money for his company's product — "they want quality that will last" — but like so many others, he is unable to explain the appeal of the teddy bear in general.

"No one knows what it is about the teddy bear that makes it so beloved by children and adults alike," he says. "Perhaps it's because he's soft and cuddly, a lovable creature who doesn't bite, won't talk back and always is there when you need him, no matter what your age.

'Older people, especially those who are alone in nursing homes or apartments where they can't have real pets, find them as comforting as children do, so I really don't know. I do know it is one of the first if not the first toys, that people buy for their babies."

The Steiff bear has been manufactured almost non-stop since Richard Steiff made the first prototype, "except of course for a few years during World War II when, of course, workers went to war and Germans had other things to think about than teddy bears," he says.

Although the plant, near a German village called Giengen, was damaged, it was rebuilt with U.S. help and has been prospering since. But the teddy bear has changed.

"The nose and arms are shorter and we now use artificial plush to cover most of the bears," Steiff says. "But we think it is as cuddly as ever."

No ships, but no shortage of admirals either

By KURT J. REPANSHEK
Associated Press Writer

RICHWOOD, W.Va. (AP) — Harbored deep in West Virginia's central mountains, the Cherry River Navy counts Babe Ruth, Robert F. Kennedy and various members of England's Parliament among its past and present admiralty.

"Since the beginning, my best estimate would be that there are 18,000 to 20,000 admirals," said John Teets, who along with four others formed the organization in 1937. "We have admirals in every state."

The CRN also recognizes admirals in Mexico, New Zealand, Peru, Puerto Rico, Samoa, Scotland, South Africa, Taiwan, the Virgin Islands, West Germany, England, Japan and a fistful of other countries, the 85-year-old Teets said as smoke from his cigar swirled toward the ceiling.

Admiralties in the CRN are issued to draw attention to "the far-reaching influence" of the recipients, he said. "All admirals are commissioned upon recommendation of somebody that admires them for the contributions they are making today, or have made, not only in West Virginia but in other states."

Ruth's attachment to the CRN is noted at the Baseball Hall of Fame in Cooperstown, N.Y., which has stored the Sultan of Swat's membership card with the rest of his memorabilia.

Thomas Bradley, Los Angeles' mayor has been commissioned, as have Dwight D. Eisenhower, Jack Dempsey and Damon Runyon, who publicized the navy in his national newspaper column.

All have been entered into an organization that draws its name from a mountain stream, barely deep enough to buoy a rowboat, that ripples along its bed past Richwood.

In fact, said Teets, the CRN's birth had more to do with roads than with rivers. In the early 1900s, Richwood — about 100 miles from Elkins, Beckley, Buckhannon and Staunton, Va. — thrived on its lumber industry, he said. But there was no major roadway linking the four towns.

The Baltimore & Ohio railway ran a line into Richwood, and W.Va. 39 terminated at the Nicholas County town. However, the 29 miles between Richwood and Marlinton, which was connected by road to Staunton, was all forest, Teets said.

For 20 years Richwood businessmen trekked to Charleston to persuade lawmakers of the need for the "missing link," he said.

Finally, in April 1937, while trout fishing with friends along the Cherry River, the idea to form the CRN as a means to get a road came about, Teets said. A charter was drawn up and 50 commissions were sent to governors, sports figures and other dignitaries to bring attention to Richwood, Teets said.

Letters of acceptance streamed into Richwood, and were posted in the window of the Nicholas County Republican, the town's newspaper at the time, Teets recalled. Each week brought more acceptances, and the imaginary naval force gained clout that would be used in the battle for a road linking Richwood with Marlinton, he said.

In the summer of 1937, the navy sailed for Charleston with the support of industrial groups in Nicholas and Pocahontas counties. Leaders met with the state roads commissioner and demanded a road.

Nine weeks later construction began on the "missing link," and in 1945 it was completed.

With its first mission a success, the CRN continued to promote civic pride and local improvements. Its membership also continued to grow.

From 1937, when more than 400 admirals visited Richwood for the navy's first "maneuvers," through 1941, the CRN was host for the Cherry River Festival.

The navy was dormant from World War II until 1960, when an Old Timers' Day Reunion was held in Richwood. In 1962 the maneuvers were resumed as a periodic event coinciding with the Cherry River Festival, Teets said.

Eye contact important

Do you look 'em straight in the eye?

Your personality is often judged — rightly or wrongly — from how you use your eyes, says Dorothy Taylor, a family life education specialist.

If you make a lot of eye contact, you are probably thought to be friendly, out-going and self-confident, she says.

If you avoid eye contact, you may be seen less favorably — as evasive, shy, defensive or indifferent.

Ms. Taylor is on the home economics staff of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System.

Headache?

Headache? The pain could get even worse if you take too many drugs, warns Dr. Joel Sapier in a recent issue of Woman's Day magazine.

Dr. Sapir, director of the Michigan Headache and Neurological Institute, says that one sure sign of an overdose is consumption of more than one hundred aspirin or other common painkillers per month.

Replace shower curtains

If you still have a shower curtain around your bathtub, how many times have you been standing under the shower and had the curtain sneak up and tickle your legs? If the plastic curtain is still cold, it can give you quite a shock. Another drawback to curtains is that they too often allow water to get out on the bathroom floor. Maybe you should consider a glass shower enclosure.

Actually there are both plastic and glass doors now available in kit form. The plastic isn't as elegant looking, but it has some advantages. It's lighter in weight for easier handling and is also break-proof. However, the tempered glass doesn't break very easily, and the glass isn't subject to scratching as is the plastic. For a kid's room, I'd say go plastic; for a fancy guest bathroom, go glass.

The kit for a standard tub will have a bottom rail 5 feet long. You may have to cut this off slightly so it will fit. It should be about a sixteenth of an inch less than the distance along the edge of the tub. Place this tailored bottom rail on the tub edge and be sure to measure the distance from the outer edge at both ends so this piece is perfectly lined up. When this piece is in place, mark a line on the tub. A felt marker or grease pencil will do, or you can put a few strips of masking tape along the outer edge to be sure you can line it up later.

The upright pieces should now be placed at each end separately. Use a level to be sure they are plumb. Use masking tape to hold these pieces in place against the walls if necessary. Mark the screw holes on the wall through the uprights. Also mark the top of each upright. Even if they extend higher than the tiles around the tub, they are not to be cut off. If you do, you have doors that won't fit.

When all the marking is done, you can remove the uprights and go to work on the screw holes. In tile, you should use a carbide tipped drill bit. Also use a nail and gently tap at each mark to scar the glazed surface before drilling. It's best to have a variable speed drill and to use a slow speed. You'll be drilling a hole large enough for a masonry anchor that will hold the screws. In some kits the anchors will be supplied. If not, get anchors the proper size for the screws.

Place the top rail from the marks made at the top of the uprights, and if need be cut it off so it's a sixteenth of an inch less than the distance across from wall to wall.

The kit will have adhesive for attaching the bottom tub rail. Be sure that the tub surface is clean and dry. Apply the adhesive to the rail, and then press it in place, making sure it's lined up with your marks. I've found better results with silicone sealant than with the adhesive in the kits, but since the uprights will be securing the bottom rail, the adhesive is really there so water can't work its way under the rail.

The side rails also need adhesive as well as the screws. Some kits have top rails that interlock, and others that are held in place by screws. The instructions with the kit may tell you to assemble the top and side pieces before attaching the uprights to the wall. Either way, it's a simple installation.

There are also bumper pieces that go in each upright so the doors don't slam.

The doors fit into the tracks of the upper rail. The rollers ride in these tracks and hang suspended into the bottom tracks. Just lift 'em into the upper track, move it over into the corresponding lower track, and lower it in place. Most rollers are adjustable so the door can be raised or lowered lightly so it doesn't hang low enough to bind or high enough to allow water to come under.

If the door has a texture on one side, this side goes out so the smooth side will receive the water and soap scum. The smooth surface is easier cleaned.

Be sure to follow the instructions with the kit. My aim was to show you how easily shower doors could be installed so you could do away with the shower curtains... and the surprise cold "gotcha."

Get yourself systemized

Don't drown in a sea of business papers. Handle each piece only once with a system, says Nancy Granovsky, a family resource management specialist.

Set up four categories for papers:
- to do
- to file
- to give away
- to throw away

Mrs. Granovsky is on the home eceonomics staff of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University.

Don't pay incorrect bills

Don't, says financial expert Jane Bryant Quinn in a recent issue of Woman's Day magazine.

Quinn ways that you don't have to automatically pay the disputed amount, or late charges either. There's an excellent free brochure on the subject.

Reagan's revolution jolting old energy schemes

By MARTIN CRUTSINGER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nowhere has Ronald Reagan's revolution in government had more of an impact than in the field of energy.

Declaring that the marketplace rather than government bureaucrats should be making America's energy decisions, Reagan has moved swiftly to dismantle policies put together over the last seven years by three presidents and Congress.

The changes began as soon as Reagan took office. He removed the remaining price controls on crude oil and gasoline and overturned a Carter administration decision to clamp thermostat controls on public buildings.

So far the Energy Department has targeted over 200 of its nearly 300 regulations for modification or repeal. This review is going hand-in-hand with the budget process as the administration seeks to cut funds in energy areas it does not wish to pursue.

Among the policies changed by Reagan:

— Today, the government's power to allocate fuel supplies and to impose price controls during a shortage expires. While Americans won't notice any difference immediately because the world is now enjoying a surplus, critics say crude oil disruptions like the ones which have happened twice in the past decade could prove disastrous without government controls. But the administration says even if gasoline rises to $5 a gallon, the free market is still a better way to handle the problem.

— Also gone today is the government's office in charge of setting up a coupon gasoline rationing program. The administration decided that the $105 million price for setting up this stand-by authority was too high a price for a plan they considered an administrative nightmare.

— Consumers shopping for new appliances won't be aided by government efficiency standards requiring the appliances to meet certain energy-use levels. The Reagan administration has been trying since taking office to get out of issuing the standards required by Congress for everything from refrigerators to water heaters. So far, the administration has yet to issue any of the standards required by Congress.

— The administration has cut the budget of a program pushed by the Carter administration to require utility companies to offer customers low-cost energy audits to show them how to weatherize their homes. Utilities are still required to offer the audits but some may drag their feet since the federal government will not be monitoring the effort.

— The poor will be hit with a double blow under Reagan's policy. Heating oil prices are rising following decontrol, but at the same time Reagan has cut the government's assistance program to help the poor pay fuel bills. Reagan wants to spend only $1.4 billion for energy aid, one-fourth the current level. If Congress goes along, it would mean the 9 million poor people who have about 25 percent of their fuel bills picked up by the government would see that money cut by 25 percent.

— Another low-income program which installs insulation and performs other weatherization projects for poor people is being cut. Reagan wants to eliminate the $182 million program entirely but Congress so far has gone along with only $32 million in cuts. Since beginning in 1977, 700,000 homes have been weatherized.

— Consumers also won't be able to go down to their local bank and get a subsidized govenment loan to help them finance conservation and solar additions to their homes. Congress had approved $1.6 billion for the Solar and Energy Conservation Bank but the administration is trying to kill the whole idea. So far Congress hasn't gone along, but the $25 million left for the bank is only enough to fund a demonstration project in one city, not offer the loans nationwide, supporters say.

— Reagan has also aimed his budget ax at the most popular energy program — tax credits for homeowners and businesses for installing solar equipment or weatherizing their homes. Reagan has not yet spelled out how he would reduce these credits but one plan under study would eliminate them completely.

— Reagan's budget sharply cuts the government's outreach efforts to promote solar power and conservation. Eliminated entirely are plans to build four regional energy centers to dispense information on solar power to the public. Gone also are smaller efforts such as one in which the Energy Department awarded presidential cerificates to groups doing their part for energy conservation.

This fact was noted by an unhappy group of Cub Scouts in Oakland, Calif., who worked for the certificate but were informed the government was no longer handing them out.

In a letter to Reagan, they said, "We are very mad. ... Because of what you did, we think people won't really care about conserving. And they will waste energy. You're canceling smart stuff, good ideas. Why were you elected president?"

Communist crude is infiltrating western markets

BY BERNARD D. KAPLAN
European Correspondent
HearstFeature Service

PARIS — Someone new has entered the international oil picture — the Russians. Oil industry experts say that attractively-priced Soviet crude has, for the first time, begun reaching Western European spot markets in sizeable quantities.

According to Dan Smith, a London-based oil analyst, the increasing flow of Soviet oil reaching the West has contributed to the softening of prices, especially on the Rotterdam spot market. A "spot" market is one on which individual consignments of crude are auctioned to the highest bidder. The Rotterdam market is the world's largest and is closely watched as a harbinger of oil price trends.

The Soviet Union is the world's biggest oil producer, but, until recently, its production has been almost exclusively consumed within the communist bloc. Now some of its oil has been diverted to the West.

"This seems to indicate a switch in Soviet policy," Smith explained. "It appears Moscow has decided to use a portion of its oil surplus as it uses its gold mine production -- to finance imports of food and high technology from the West."

Western authorities had assumed several considerations, including politics, inhibited the Russians in employing its oil this way. Soviet extraction costs are high. Demand within the communist bloc is great and rising. Moreover, Moscow's efforts to extend its influence in the Middle East will not be improved if Arab oil exporters see it is now competing for Western customers.

However, it seems clear that the Russians' need for hard currency has overridden all of these factors, at least for the time being.

Smith described them as "bending over backwards" to make their oil an attractive proposition.

"At $32 a barrel for Urals crude, the price is good and, furthermore, the credit terms are especially favorable," he said. "The Russians have told Rotterdam traders that credit charges begin from the day of discharge (at the point of consignment) rather than the day of loading, which is the common practice. That can save buyers a substantial amount of money."

He added that the switch in Soviet selling strategy appears to be purely a commercial question without direct political overtones. "They need the hard currency and that's all there is to it," he said. "There could never be a question of Soviet oil becoming a dominant factor in Western oil markets. But it is already clear they aren't kidding about selling relatively large amounts. The Soviet tankers arriving at Rotterdam are in the 150,000-ton class and up. This could go on for some time."

Some experts believe the decision to sell oil to the West was influenced by the fall in the price of gold during the past 18 months. In their view, Soviet planning in regard to Western purchases was based on a world gold price well above the $600 per ounce level. Instead, gold has fallen nearly $200 below that price. Unloading greater quantities of gold would only lower the price further. Instead, the Russians apparently decided to "diversify" by selling oil.

Western estimates of the size of Soviet oil reserves have fluctuated wildly over the years. Now, however, it is generally believed that they are substantial enough to insure Russia will remain a major producer for the next four or five decades.

Their allies, East Germany and Poland, especially, have been pleading for increased shipments of oil from Moscow but have met with little satisfaction. The Russians have claimed production shortfalls. Obviously, Russian reluctance to deliver does not stem from shortage but from a lack of enthusiasm at having to sell oil to their partners at artificially low prices under agreements reached by Comecon, the Eastern bloc's counterpart to the Common Market.

In one of the few good deals they get from the Russians, the Eastern Europeans buy the latter's oil for about half the world price. They also pay for it in their own currency, unuseable for buying goods in the West. Neither fact leaves the Russians overjoyed.

State offshore yield increases

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — State leases in bays, inlets and the Gulf of Mexico produced 88,960 barrels of oil in July, an increase of 32,649 barrels from July 1980, the Texas Railroad Commission said Thursday.

The commission said offshore crude oil production in July represented 3.6 percent of total crude production in Texas for that month.

Permian looks better on paper than MHS

Bulldogs are ready for Mojo tonight in District 5-5A opener

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Sports Writer

If football is strictly a battle that can be sized up on paper, then the Midland High Bulldogs would appear to be in for a long night at Memorial Stadium today when they tangle with the Odessa Permian Panthers at 8 p.m. to open the District 5-5A campaign.

Let's see now. Midland High is 1-2 on the year, Permian is 3-0. It will be Midland High's fifth-ranked offense against Permian's second-ranked defense. Permian has the sixth-ranked district offensive team, but Midland High's defense is ranked sixth in the league also. Permian has scored 69 points in three non-conference games while MHS has tallied 57. Midland High has also given up 63 points this year while Permian has allowed only 14.

And there is more. Permian has won 19 of the 22 games the two teams have played against each other. Midland High's last win over Mojo came in 1973, some four coaches ago. Permian is the defending state 5A football champs and ranked fourth in the Harris Rating System this year. MHS hasn't won a district title since the 1940s and Harris says that 150 teams in the state are better. Permian has also run its unbeaten streak to 20 games while MHS is on a two-game losing streak. In the last three years, the closest a Bulldog team has come to posting a victory over Permian is 24 points.

It doesn't look too good for the home folks, but Permian's John Wilkins, coach of the year in Texas, doesn't see it quite as simple as the paper work seems to make it for his Panthers.

"This is a new year with new teams and the past will have no bearing on this game," Wilkins says. "Midland High has some weapons. Wesley Williams and Ricky Madrid are both capable of going all the way at any time and Wally Kleine is a great blocker and receiver. He may be the best tight end around. And Joe Goebel has to be one of the top defensive players in the state.

"Perhaps Midland High has been a little inconsistent on offense this year with some big turnovers, but our offensive team has been spotty at best. We are not throwing the ball well at all and we have been fortunate with turnovers. Our opponents have committed 13 turnovers to our five, so we have been lucky too.

"There is no question that this is a big game for both teams. Tradition says you don't win this league with two losses and you have one foot in a bucket if you drop that first one. We had a good week of practice the first week, but this week has been poor. I don't know the reasons for that, but we would have liked to have had it the other way round."

But MHS boss Pat Culpepper is not trying to lessen the problems his team faces tonight. "Our football team will have to jell on the field against the defending state champions. That is not a good position to be in, but if our team does jell, I think it can be a very close contest. If we do jell, everybody in the stands will know it. You won't have to tell anyone about it."

The MHS offense again has a new look with John Hibbitts moving to fullback and Wesley Williams back to halfback with Ricky Madrid. Madrid is the sixth leading rusher in district with 184 yards while Williams is eighth with 165 yards. Tight end Wally Kleine is the loop's fifth leading receiver with 74 yards and two touchdowns. So MHS does have some big weapons to use against the stingy Mojo defense.

Defensively, the Bulldogs also should get a boost with the return of tackle Richard Magness, who is now full speed after suffering a badly sprained ankle before the Brownwood scrimmage. That should take some of the pressure off guards Joe Goebel and James Day, who have been defensive standouts this year.

The Bulldog defense will have to stop Permian fullback Dale Carr if they hope to stay in the game against Permian. Carr is the district's fourth leading rusher with 248 yards and a 5.1 per yard carry average with four touchdowns.

"Permian's attack revolves around their fullback," Culpepper notes. "Carr is one of the best athletes in West Texas. Keith Brooks of Andrews is a good one and I think Carr is on that type of level. The genius of Wilkins shows with the way he has retooled his offense to blend with the players he has. Sometimes I think they should make Permian take finger print tests to see if they are playing the same people every year. All the Permian teams look very similiar."

If MHS has any advantage in the game, it would appear to be in the passing department. Midland High has thrown for 169 yards this year and two touchdowns. Permian has tossed for 149 yards and given up defensively 189 yards in the air, the second worse pass defense in the league.

MHS quarterback Allen Chick has completed eight of 18 passes for 114 yards and two touchdowns while Permian's Coy Brown has completed nine passes for 107 yards, but has thrown 28 times.

Lee opens district with Odessa High

Tradition points to a close game tonight

ODESSA — Football teams have had two months of practice, a scrimmage game or two and three football games against tune-up opponents to prepare for the start of the 1981 District 5-5A football season. Now it's time to get down to the nitty-gritty.

Midland Lee and Odessa High open district play tonight at W.D. Barrett with what has become a traditionally tough football game for both schools, tough in the sense that neither team has dominated the other over the years. Especially so in the past six seasons.

FROM THOSE six games, each team has recorded three victories with the winning points being scored in the fourth quarter. Four of those games were decided by one point margins and last year's game nearly went into overtime. OHS avoided the extra period of play by breaking a 21-21 tie with a touchdown in the final 10 seconds of play on a three-yard run by quarterback Johnny Subia. OHS owns the series history with a 13-9 record.

"The first football game is always a very important football game and Lee and Odessa have been opening district for the last several years and they're just hard, all out war," said Rebel head coach Spike Dykes. "I certainly don't see any reason to believe it to be any different this year and of course they've got the district's No. 1 offensive football team."

The Bronchos are indeed No. 1 in offense this season with 652 yards rushing and 250 passing (highest in both categories) for a 902 total. OHS, out of the wishbone attack, is led in rushing by quarterback Derrick Shepard who has 254 yards on 41 carries for a 6.2 average which is good enough for third in the district.

IN THE pass department, Shepard has completed eight of 23 for 137 yards for two touchdowns.

"Odessa has an explosive offense and they wear out a chain and down box nearly every ball game," said Dykes. "Their quarterback Derrick Shepard is a tremendous football player and of course he's the catalist of their offense.

"They've got a very balanced offensive attack," continued Dykes. "They've got a real good backfield running out of the wishbone so they've got a triple option in effect both ways every time the ball is snapped which keeps the defense under constant pressure."

While OHS statistically has the best offense, Lee is second from the bottom on the 5-5A stat sheet with 553 yards rushing and 131 passing for a 684 total. The Rebels are led by fullback Calvin Riggs who has 228 yards (seventh individually) on 40 carries for a 5.7 average.

Quarterback Bart Ryan is seven for 16 passing for 137 yards and a touchdown.

ON THE other side of the coin, defense, the situation is exactly reversed with Lee leading the stat sheet giving up only 413 yards, 311 rushing and 102 passing while OHS is second from the bottom allowing 593 yards rushing and 151 passing for a 744 total.

"Midland Lee is looking real good, they're one of the favorites to win district this year," said OHS head coach Jerry Millsapps. "They're outstanding on defense, very tough defensively and they're a big strong team offensively."

Coach Dykes also feels that the Bronchos are a tough defensive team saying, "defensively they are very experienced with four defensive linemen starters returning from last year. They've played very well with the exception of the Hobbs game (a 42-28 defeat). That game got to be a scoring contest and it looks like Hobbs had the ball last. They are a real good solid football team led by a real good coaching staff. It's just going to be one of those head up football games.

Coach Millsapps didn't respond about his team with the same enthusiasm. He feels that "things haven't been going to good for us, we're struggling," he said. "I don't imagine we'll make much of a game out of it this year. I think they're a lot better than we are. They have 24 seniors and we play a lot of juniors. They are very experienced and we're not. I'd say they were inexperienced last year."

AND DESPITE what coach Dykes believes, coach Millsapps doesn't feel his team is that tough on defense. "We're not playing very good defense," he said. "Hell, we gave up 42 points against Hobbs defensively. You know we're not very good on defense."

Taking into consideration a couple differentview points, one that Hobbs has run over every Texas team it's played this season and the another that coach Millsapps could be, and probably is, trying to build up an over confidence ploy as an advantage, the game still looks to be a tough brawl between two strong teams. A team with the problems coach Millsapps says his team has must have something going for it to own a 2-1 record. Lee is 3-0.

One sour note for the Lee Rebels tonight is the loss of senior guard Eric Cooper to injury, a broken ankle, but coach Dykes has confidence in the two kids he has to send in as replacements.

"Any time you lose a starter, naturally it hurts you," he said. "We wish Eric was well but I have full confidence in the players taking his place — Tim Woodlee, a starter on the defensive unit at tackle, and Joe Carasco.

Midland Lee Offense

Odessa High Offense

Stadler grabs lead in Texas Open

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Maybe husky Californian Craig Stadler should take more vacations during the Tournament Players Association tour.

The rested, relaxed Stadler — who had hardly picked up a golf club in two weeks — ripped off nine birdie putts en route to a seven-under-par 63 that staked him to a one-stroke lead over Bruce Lietzke entering today's second round of the Texas Open Golf Tournament.

"I'm just having fun," Stadler laughed after mastering the 6,525-yard Oak Hills Country Club course, where he has never made a cut during his six-year career.

Stadler said he took a vacation from golf after tying for third at the LaJet Classic in Abilene two weeks ago, but still escaped with only two bogeys while guiding in the nine birdie putts, all from short range.

He said he had developed a hook during the layoff, but he cured that by hitting a one iron off the tee on several holes.

Stadler, winner of the 1981 Kemper Open, would like to add the $45,000 first prize money of the $250,000 tournament to the $205,829 in earnings that place him eighth on the Tournament Players Association tour.

But Lietzke, ranked fourth in earnings with $334,991 and three 1981 tournament wins, also needs top money to supplant Tom Kite, who is the tour's top money winner with $355,724.

Lietzke, who has never played well at Oak Hills before, rolled in 7 birdies, but missed a 10 footer on the 18th hole, to hold the lead briefly with his 64 until Stadler arrived with the day's low score.

Also figuring prominently in the race entering today's action were Ben Crenshaw, Charles Coody, Bill Britton, Bob Eastwood and Roger Maltbie who all shot 5-under 65s in the first round, two strokes behind the leader.

Kite was bunched with more than a dozen golfers at 68, while defending champion Lee Trevino, still fighting a year-long slump, managed only a 71 and needed improvement today to make the cut.

Area slate interesting as real season opens

By MIKE CRUVER
Sports Writer

Real season play opens in several area districts tonight and there are several appealling games.

Stanton opens District 5-AA action by invading Seagraves in a game that could play a vital role in the final district race. Both clubs are entering the game on the heels of upset losses. Stanton, 2-2, was shot down by Reagan County, 28-8, while Seagraves, 3-1, was humbled by McCamey, 19-12.

Last year, the Buffs defeated Seagraves for the first time since 1969, 27-21, in a wild affair.

Another game to keep an eye on will be the District 6-A lidlifter between Rankin and Iraan.

The Braves were picked by most preseason "experts" to challenge for the district crown. Iraan, 1-2, has ran into a bit of hard luck, losing to Reagan County and McCamey while defeating Eldorado. The Red Devils, 2-0-1, clubbed Marfa and Eldorado while playing McCamey to a scoreless tie.

In another District 6-A battle, Greenwood will be looking to get the district race started off on the right foot with a win over Sanderson. The Rangers will be performaning in front of their first football homecoming queen. Greenwood has defeated Klondike and Whiteface while falling to Sterling City. Sanderson brings a 1-2 record onto the Ranger's turf.

District 9-AA opens league play with Reagan County looking for its first district win since 1979 when the Owls host Menard. The Owls, 3-1, have been one of the area's most surprising teams while Menard has been a disappointment with its 1-3 record.

In the third week of District 2-AAAA warfare, Andrews — leading the district in almost all offensive areas — tangles with the weakest offensive unit — Lamesa. The Golden Tors are 0-4 overall, 0-2 in district, as they prepare to face the undefeated Mustangs (4-0, 2-0).

In non-district clashes, a patched up McCamey, 2-0-1, hosts Eldorado, 0-3. The Badgers starting left halfback, David Acosta, suffered a gunshot wound while hunting and is lost for the rest of the season.

Coach Larry Nabors was forced to make some lineup changes that worked out well in the win over Seagraves and he is hoping for the same results against Eldorado.

Crane (0-3) an inexperience team that has trouble moving the ball on the ground, will takes its Jeff Pinkston air attack on the road to Kermit, 3-1, tonight.

Pinkston has thrown the pigskin 97 times and completed 37 for 438 yards and two touchdowns. Senior end Randy Hicks has latched onto 10 of those tosses for 175 yards and two scores.

In a Saturday afternoon game at Simon Field slated to kickoff at 2 p.m., Midland Christian, 2-2, will try to bounce back from a thrashing last week when the Mustangs entertain Paint Creek.

This Week's Games

District 2-AAAA: Odessa Ector at Monahans; Lamesa at Andrews; Pecos at Fort Stockton; San Angelo Lakeview at Sweetwater; Snyder Open.

District 6-AAA: Crane at Kermit; Slaton at Seminole; Lubbock Cooper at Denver City; Coahoma at Colorado City.

District 5-AA: Stanton at Seagraves; Forsan at O'Donnell; Plains at Morton; Ropes Open.

District 6-AA: Marfa at Van Horn (District game); Eldorado at McCamey; Clint at Alpine.

District 9-AA: Ozona at Junction; Menard at Reagan County; Mason at Wall; Eldorado at McCamey (non-district).

District 6-A: Iraan at Rankin; Wink at Buena Vista; Grandfalls-Royalty at Balmorhea; Sanderson at Greenwood.

Astros, Expos stay on top

By Associated Press

The Houston Astros headed for Los Angeles, the Cincinnati Reds waited for the Atlanta Braves, the Montreal Expos journeyed to New York and the St.Louis Cardinals went to Pittsburgh.

The Astros and Expos stand on most solid ground as they attempt to join the Los Angeles Dodgers and Philadelphia Phillies in the best-of-five divisional playoffs which begin next week. Houston belted Cincinnati 8-1 Thursday to assume a 1½-game lead over the Reds in the West, which the Dodgers captured in the first half of the strike-interrupted campaign. Montreal downed the Pittsburgh Pirates 5-2 and is a half-game in front of St. Louis, which edged the first-half champion Phillies 3-2 in 10 innings after surviving a two-hour, 59-minute rain delay.

In games involving non-contenders, San Francisco topped Atlanta 6-2, Chicago and New York had their game fall victim to rain with the score knotted 2-2 through 8½ innings, and San Diego blanked Los Angeles for the second straight night, 1-0.

Houston will clinch the West title by beating the Dodgers twice in three games or once if the Reds lose a game to Atlanta.

Nolan Ryan, who pitched a record fifth no-hitter in his last outing on Saturday, held the Reds to seven hits. The Astros were helped by the wildness of seven Cincinnati pitchers who issued a total of 11 walks — three with the bases loaded — and Denny Walling slammed a two-run homer to highlight a five-run ninth-inning rally for the Astros.

Expos 5, Pirates 2

Larry Parrish tripled home three runs to back the pitching of Ray Burris and Jeff Reardon. The Expos, who barely missed winning the division the past two seasons, will win the NL East if they sweep the three-game series with the Mets this weekend, regardless of what St. Louis does.

Cardinals 3, Phillies 2

Keith Hernandez extended his hitting streak to 12 games with a 10th-inning RBI double that kept St. Louis right behind Montreal. With two out in the 10th, Garry Templeton singled and Hernandez lined a double down the left field line.

Giants 6, Braves 2

Former Braves pitcher Doyle Alexander beat Atlanta for the third time without a loss since being traded to the Giants last December.

Bob Horner homered for Atlanta, his seventh hit in nine at-bats.

Padres 1, Dodgers 0

Rookie Fred Kuhaulua scattered five hits, then yielded to Eric Show, another rookie, in the ninth. Show picked up his third save.

Fernando Valenzuela gave up only an unearned run but was a loser for the third straight time as the Dodgers fell for the 10th time in 13 games.

In the American League, Tigers' weekend series with the Milwaukee Brewers beginning tonight is a match made in heaven.

"It's a perfect way to settle it," Detroit's Kirk Gibson said of the series that will determine the second-season champion in the American League East. "We've got to go to Milwaukee and we've got to win two out of three. If we do, we deserve to win."

The Tigers dropped out of a first-place tie with the Brewers Thursday, losing to the Baltimore Orioles 5-4 in 10 innings despite Gibson's dramatic two-run, two-out ninth inning homer.

Gary Roenicke knocked in Eddie Murray with a sacrifice fly in the top of the 10th inning for the Orioles' winning run.

Ainge case goes to jury today

NEW YORK (AP) — The testimony is over, the summations complete and the court outbursts history in the case of Danny Ainge, the baseball player who wants to be a basketball player.

The trial was scheduled to go to the jury today after U.S. District Judge Lee P. Gagliardi charged the four men and two women who will decide Ainge's future.

Ainge, 22, a weak-hitting third baseman for the Toronto Blue Jays, decided June 10 that he would prefer to play basketball, the sport in which he excelled at Brigham Young University, especially last season when he averaged 24.4 points a game.

The Blue Jays brought the case against the Boston Celtics — who drafted Ainge June 9 — charging contract interference. The Celtics counter-charged the Blue Jays with anti-trust violations by virtue of a $300,000 addendum to the three-year contract Ainge signed on Sept. 15, 1980, prohibitng him from playing professional basketball.

Both charges were tossed out Thursday by Gagliardi. He decided the jury must rule on one simple issue — whether Peter Bavasi, the Blue Jays president, and Pat Gillick, the Blue Jays vice-president, rescinded Ainge's contract during discussions on June 10-11, as Ainge testified.

Tracy, Martina win in meet

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (AP) — Tracy Austin and Martina Navratilova are moving toward a rematch of last month's U.S. Open finals with their play in the $125,000 U.S. Women's Indoor Tennis championships.

Austin methodically defeated Peanut Louie 6-3, 6-2 Thursday night while Navratilova eliminated Lucia Romanov 6-2, 6-1. Both were second-round matches.

Austin, the defending Indoor champion, No. 1 seed and second-ranked player in the world behind Chris Evert Lloyd, won her 26th straight singles match, dating back to last July, when she was beaten by Pam Shriver in the quarterfinals at Wimbledon.

Austin will meet Sharon Walsh, a surprising 6-4, 6-2 victor over fifth-seeded Mima Jausovec, tonight in one quarterfinal match. Those two have never met before, but the 18-year old Austin doesn't see that as a disadvantge.

In another quarterfinal match tonight, Navratilova will face Barbara Potter, who advanced by beating Anne Hobbs 6-2, 6-1.

The final quarterfinal match pits Candy Reynolds against Julie Harrington.

Wendy Turnbull became the first player to qualify for the semifinals with a 7-6, 6-4 triumph over Anne Smith. She will play Saturday against the winner of the Navratilova-Potter match.

The U.S. Indoor, being held at the Met Center for the fourth straight year, is the first leg of a four-tournament combination called the Playtex Challenge.

Can undogs pull off more upsets?

By The Associated Press

Can Georgia Tech do it again? Can Iowa, which has pulled off two stunning upsets in three weeks, avoid becoming an upset victim? Will Oregon State take advantage of its big opportunity to join the ever-increasing list of 1981 giant-killers?

Those questions will be answered Saturday when the college football schedule goes from last week's riches (Southern Cal-Oklahoma, Penn State-Nebraska, Texas-Miami) to this week's rags (only one pairing of Associated Press Top Twenty teams, No. 20 Iowa State at fifth-ranked Oklahoma). The top teams are all heavy favorites.

Last week's forecasting follies took a nosedive. The score was 40 right, 23 wrong and one tie for a .635 percentage, dropping the overall count to 169-65-1—.722. Against the spread, last week produced a 15-15—.500 log. For the season, it's 52-53— .495.

Southern Cal (favored by 24) at Oregon State: Marcus Allen goes for a record fourth consecutive 200-yard rushing game, so the Trojans aren't about to let down after that thriller with Oklahoma ... Southern Cal 45-13.

Temple at Penn State (22): Having had a week off to get ready, Wayne Hardin's Owls probably will spring a few surprises. They have given Joe Paterno a few fits in the past, so that 22-point line must mean there's a powerhouse in the Nittany Valley ... Penn State 24-10.

Pitt (7½) at South Carolina: A rematch of last year's Gator Bowl, which Pitt won handily. The names are different — no more George Rogers, no more Hugh Green — but not the outcome ... Pitt 24-14.

Iowa State at Oklahoma (17½): Iowa State is unbeaten and may have been playing possum in shading West Texas State and Kent State around an impressive trouncing of Iowa. If there's a perfect time to catch Oklahoma, this is it, between USC and Texas. Nobody's perfect ... Oklahoma 34-13.

North Carolina (13½) at Georgia Tech: The Rambling Wreck stunned Alabama's Bear Bryant last month. Now comes Carolina's Kelvin Bryant, who has scored a mere 15 touchdowns in three games ... North Carolina 28-7.

Florida State at Ohio State (7½): On the road again — Nebraska, Ohio State, Notre Dame, Pitt, LSU — just can't wait to get on the road again ... Ohio State 28-14.

Michigan (17½) at Indiana: Bo Schembechler probably put the Wolverines through a fun week of practice after their close call with Navy. Just a little joke, folks ... Michigan 31-7.

Missouri vs. Mississippi State (6) at Jackson: Ol' Mizzou dropped Penn State and picked up MSU but the Tiger may have a Bulldog by the tail ... Mississippi State 21-14.

Iowa (20) at Northwestern: The Hawkeyes have pulled off two major upsets, the Wildcats have a 23-game losing streak. Logically, this should be the Upset Special of the Week ... Northwestern 17-13.

Navy (10½) at Yale: An added bonus, a second Upset Special ... Yale 21-13.

Two new sports added to Olympics

BADEN-BADEN, West Germany (AP) — The Olympic Games continue to grow. Two more sports — tennis and table tennis — will be in the program for 1988, and others are under consideration.

The International Olympic Committee Thursday considered adding baseball to the Games as well, but decided it needed more information from the International Amateur Baseball Federation.

Decisions were also deferred on roller skating, taekwondo karate, badminton, sumo wrestling and women's judo.

There was no sign of any limit being set on the size of the games. Juan Antonio Samaranch, president of the IOC, said this week he expects between 11,000 and 12,000 athletes at Los Angeles in 1984. Seoul in 1988 will probably host even more, with 23 sports on the schedule.

Tennis comes back into the Games for the first time since 1924. Table tennis has never been in the Olympics before.

Rebels lackluster in volleyball win

Sports Writer

According to Midland Lee head volleyball coach Janice Baulich, the Rebels played "just as hard as they had to to win" in defeating the Abilene Eagles, 10-15, 15-4, 15-3, on the Reb's court Thursday night in first-half District 5-5A play. The victory lifted Lee to 3-2 in district, 14-9 overall while Abilene dropped to 0-5 in district action.

Baulich sprang a surprise on Rebel fans by starting three reserves in the first set. Making their first start of the year were Beth Ann Northcott, Sylvia Ochotorena and Carrmall Scott.

Baulich stated, "I wanted to see how they would play under game conditions." When asked if she was that confidence the Rebs could win the match even if they lost the first set, Baulich replied, "No, I was taking a chance."

The changed lineup played a key role in the performance of the Rebels in the first set. The three new hands played hard and hustled. but they threw the timing off. On several occasions, Pam Landers or Rozena McCabe would be at the net and the set would be just a fraction of a second off.

Behind the hustle of Iris Burnett, Kelly Higgens and Lizzie Morris, the Eagles struggled to a 15-10 victory.

In the second set, Baulich started with her normal lineup (Landers, McCabe, Suzanne McGaha, Felicia Farias, Lesa Burnett and Debra Quintela). The impact of the regulars playing together was immediately felt.

Quintela served three straight winners as McCabe and McGaha scored on smashes and Landers took advantage of Abilene's second line slowness in reacting to the ball to dribbed a return in.

Some questionable line calls enabled the Eagles to tie the contest at 3-3 but that was to be the closest the Eagles could come the rest of the night.

Farias, McCabe and Burnett gunned in four serve points each as the Rebels coasted to the 15-4 victory.

In the third and deciding set, Landers turned in her best performance of the year to guide the Rebels to the win. Several times, Landers punched the ball just over the head of the Eagles' front line that the back line couldn't get to. In addition, she played hustling defense and had several good sets for the power spikes of McCabe, McGaha and Farias plus recording six serving points.

Baulich said, "It was a lackluster performance. We can play better."

Lee's junior varsity raised its district mark to 5-1 with a 15-13, 15-4 victory over the Eagles.

Cooper defeats MHS in volleyball

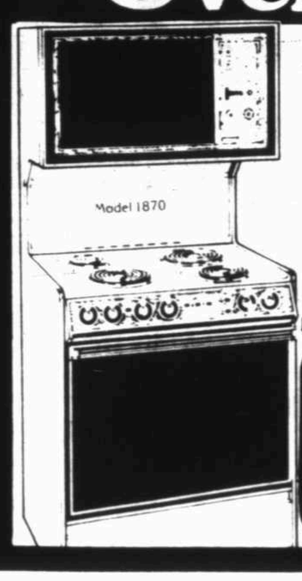

ABILENE — Midland High ran into serving problems again here Thursday night in dropping a 15-6, 15-8 District 5-5A volleyball decision to Abilene Cooper to fall to 12-9 on the year and 3-3 in the district race.

MHS led 6-1 in the first set and 4-0 in the second set before serving problems led to defeat.

The MHS Bullpups, however, ran their record to 13-3 on the year and 5-1 in district with a 9-15, 15-7, 15-7 win over the Cooper JVs.

The Bulldogs will host Lee Tuesday in the Lee gym to end first half district play with games at 6 and 7 p.m.

Lee JV belts Bronchos, 28-0

The Midland Lee junior varsity ran roughshod over the Odessa High Bronchos Thursday night at Memorial Stadium enroute to a 28-0 victory for a 1-0 record in district play (2-2 overall).

The Stonewall Brigade, led by halfback Tommy Joe DeWitt, who moved the ball practically at will, got the first of their four touchdowns in the opening quarter when DeWitt broke free from 29 yards out for the score. Kicker Kerry Robertson, four-for-four on point after attempts, added the bonus for a 7-0 lead.

The remainder of the first half was a series of mental mistakes on the part of both teams. Fumbles and penalties stopped each team from getting to the end zone and neither was able to take advantage of the others mistakes.

The third quarter brought new life to Lee as DeWitt broke free on a second jaunt to the goal line, this one covering 42 yards. Robertson's PAT made it 14-0.

Isaac Garnett scored the third touchdown of the night in the fourth quarter on a three-yard run that capped a 70-yard drive and a few plays later quarterback Mike Mercurio came into the game and threw a 50-yard touchdown pass to Carlton Johnson (his first of the season) for the game's final score.

Two title fights Saturday

ROSEMONT, Ill. (AP) — Marvin Hagler, the undisputed ruler of the middleweight division, will open a championship doubleheader Saturday night, but his ego isn't bruised.

"That's great. Get in, get out," said the 29-year-old Hagler of his curtain-raising role for which he will get $1 million.

Hagler will defend the title against rugged Mustafa Hamsho before Mike Weaver picks up a $750,000 check for defending the World Boxing Association heavyweight title against unbeaten James "Quick" Tillis at the 19,000-seat Horizon Arena. Both fights will be televised live by Home Box Office, a cable company, beginning at 8 p..m. CDT.

The purse is by far the biggest for Hagler in a 56-bout career during which he often took a smaller purse so that his opponent would get more.

"I've always taken the short end of the stick to get these guys into the ring with me," said Hagler, who takes a 52-2-2 record into his third defense of the title he won by stopping Alan Minter of England in the third round at London Sept. 27, 1980.

Hamsho, who seems to like rough-house fighting, earned his No. 1 World Boxing Council ranking and his No. 3 WBA rating this year with 10-round decisions in bruising fights against Curtis Park Feb. 15 in Atlantic City and against Minter June 6 at Las Vegas, Nev. His record is 32-1-1, with 19 knockouts.

"This is a fight I didn't want," said the 29-year-old Weaver, of Pomona, Calif., who had signed to fight unbeaten Gerry Cooney for what he says was $4 million. But he went along with a WBA ruling that he fight Tillis, of Chicago, rather than the top-ranked Cooney because Tills was the highest available contender last March when Weaver was supposed to signed for a mandatory defense.

Cooney is set to fight Larry Holmes for the WBC title for a purse of $10 million in March.

It will be Weaver's second defense of the title he won by knocking out John Tate with 45 seconds left March 31, 1980, almost two years after he had failed to win the WBC title when he was stopped by Holmes in the 12th round.

Weaver has a 23-9 record, with 16 knockouts, while Tillis, now ranked second by the WBA, is 20-0, with 16 knockouts.

Panther JVs crush MHS Bullpups, 34-12

ODESSA — The Permian junior varsity football team ran to a 26-0 halftime lead and went on to defeat the Midland High Bullpups, 34-12, here Thursday in a District 5-5A tussle.

MHS didn't get on the board until the third quarter when Terry McGowan busted a 70-yard run and Willie Swindell scored in the fourth period on a 35-yard run.

The Bullpups are now 1-2 on the year and will travel to Big Spring Thursday for a 7 p.m. game with the Steer junior varsity.

The Permian JV is unbeaten this year.

Americans big favorites in Davis Cup

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — A history of the Davis Cup is, generally, a history of tennis in the United States and Australia.

The two countries prepared to meet for the 38th time in Davis Cup competition today. The Yanks and the Aussies have been in the finals a total of 90 times and have 50 Davis Cup titles between them.

Arthur Ashe, who played in 10 Davis Cup matches, is the captain of this year's U.S. team that is a heavy favorite to beat the Australians in the semifinals beginning today.

The Americans are expected to win, thanks to the presence of John McEnroe, the world's top-ranked player, a 22-year-old millionaire and a veteran of four years of Davis Cup competition.

While the third-ranked player in the world, Jimmy Connors, decided to sit out the semifinals, there was never any doubt that McEnroe would play.

McEnroe said he likes the team format that takes a little of the loneliness out of the game.

McEnroe has an 18-3 Davis Cup record, including doubles play. One of those victories came in 1979 against Mark Edmondson, his opponent in the first match of the semifinals today.

But one of the American ace's losses was to Ivan Lendl in this year's quarterfinals against Czechoslovakia. McEnroe also lost last week in the quarterfinals of the Transamerica Open in San Francisco.

Such stumbles give hope to Edmondson, who is ranked 55th in the world.

Ashe chose Roscoe Tanner, who turns 30 Oct. 15, for today's other singles match against Australia's top player, Peter McNamara. Tanner was chosen over Eliot Teltcher, who won the Transamerica for his first major victory last week.

On Sunday, McNamara and McEnroe will square off in the first match, while Edmondson and Tanner will meet in the second. McEnroe and Peter Fleming will face McNamara and Phil Dent in Saturday's doubles match.

The team winning three matches advances to the championship against the winner of the Britian-Argentina semifinal. The matches are best-of-five sets with no tiebreakers.

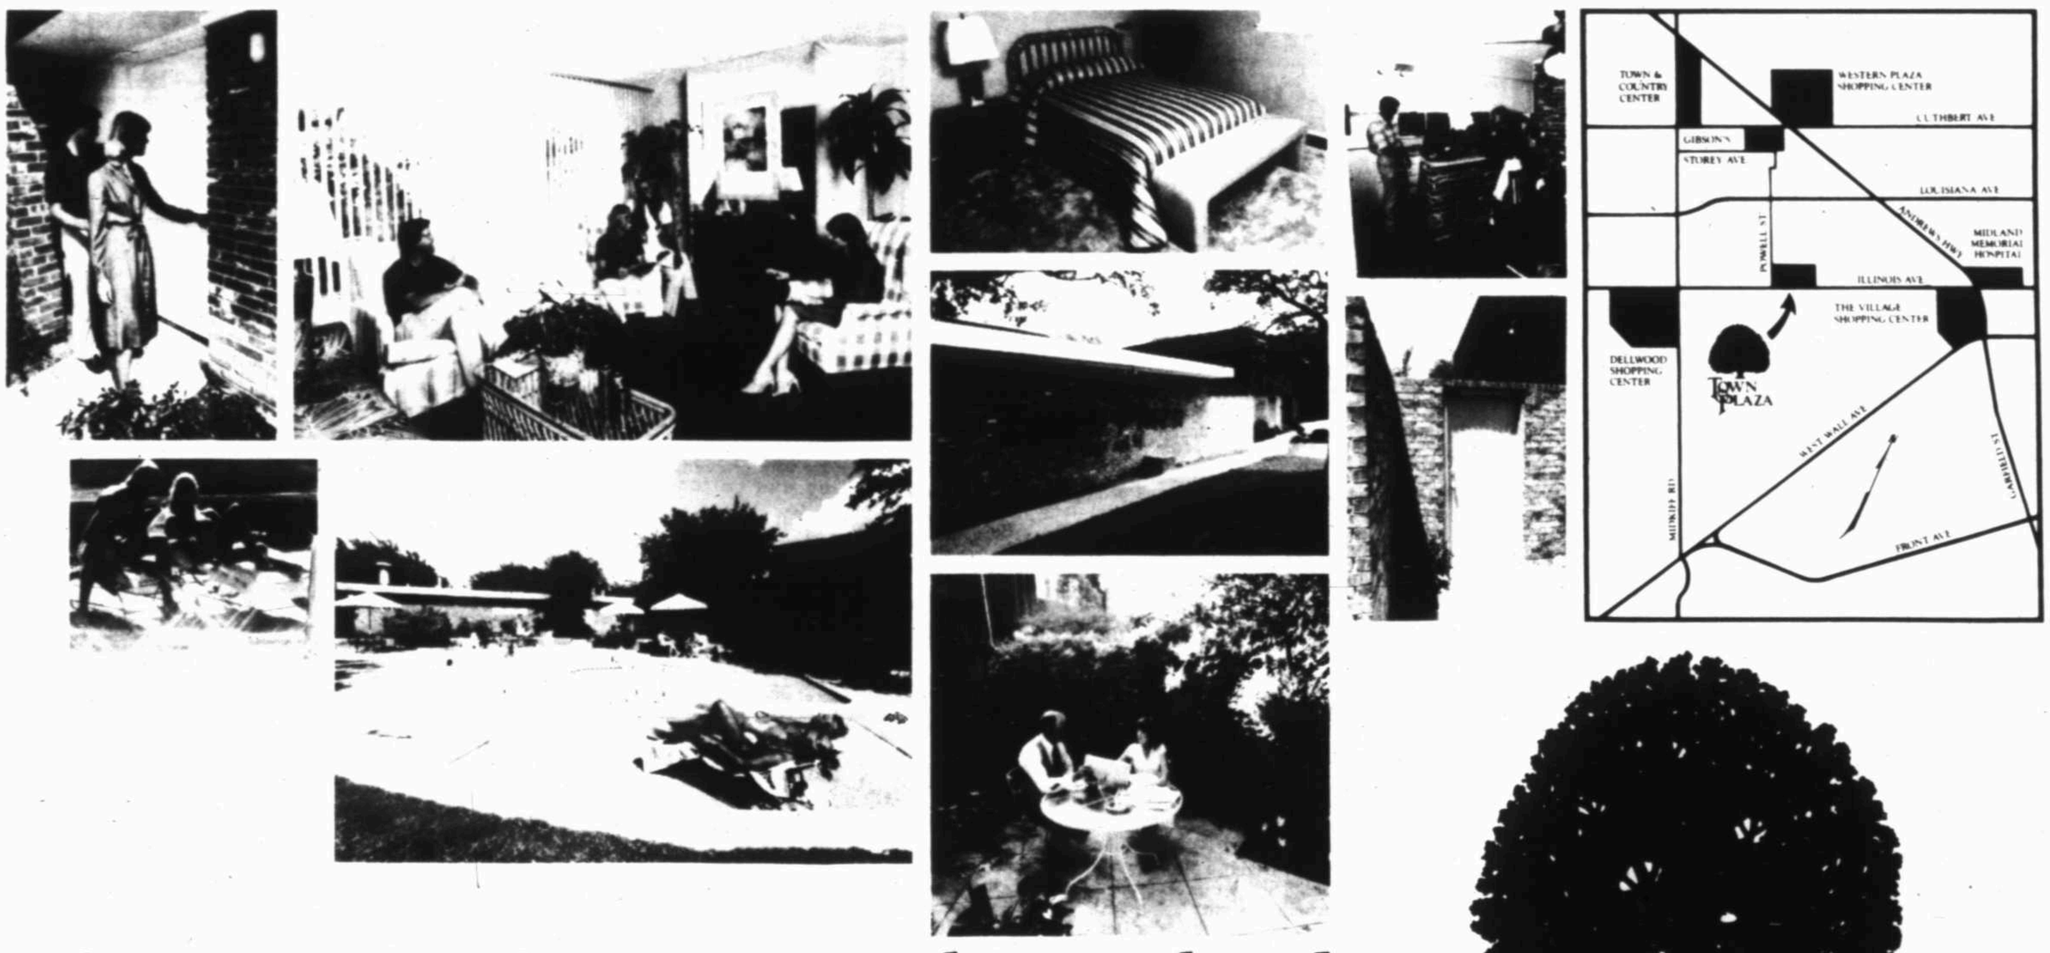

Tickets for the competition sold out in nine days when they went on sale a month ago, assuring sellout crowds of about 12,000 for each session.

Iran government claims huge election turnout

By SCHEHEREZADE FARAMARZI
Associated Press Writer

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's government claimed a huge turnout today in Iran's third post-revolution presidential election. But violence flared despite precautions and six guerrillas were killed, Tehran Radio said.

Revolutionary Guards and special volunteers were posted at polling places as Iranians voted for a successor to assassinated President Mohammad Ali Rajai and motorbikes — a favorite vehicle of hit-and-run assassins — were banned for the day.

The state-run radio reported six Mujahedeen Khalq guerrillas slain in three incidents in the central Iranian city of Shiraz.

The broadcast, monitored in Beirut, said a shootout between four anti-government guerrillas and the regime's Revolutionary Guards left two government foes dead and the other two arrested.

Three more guerrillas were reported killed and one arrested after allegedly opening fire on Revolutionary Guards pursuing their car.

The radio also said an armed guerrilla who attempted to stop a car and set it ablaze near an air force base in Shiraz was shot to death by military personnel.

Tehran Radio urged the nation's 20 million eligible voters to cast their ballots even if standing in long lines in the hot sun was "irritating."

The broadcast reminded them of the "oppressed martyrs...who burned amid flames of fire." The radio referred to fire-bombings that have killed Rajai, his prime minister and the founder of the Islamic Republican Party. The assassinations were blamed on the Mujahedeen Khalq.

The current IRP head, Ali Khamenei, was considered a shoo-in to become Iran's third president in 22 months and the first clergyman head of state.

Khamenei, 42, faced three token opponents. But Tehran Radio and the city's newspapers have stopped mentioning the other candidates, instead reporting the likelihood of Khamenei's victory when the votes are tallied next week.

Khomeini, the supreme leader of the revolutionary regime, stopped short of endorsing Khamenei by name but made clear in recent speeches that he wanted his election. A fifth candidate, Prime Minister Mohammad-Reza Kani, withdrew Thursday after announcing earlier he was going to vote for Khamenei.

Twenty-four of the 217 members of the Majlis, the Iranian Parliament, will also be elected.

The government was hoping for an even better turnout than the 15 million ballots cast July 24, when Rajai was elected to succeed President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr.

The voting age was lowered from 16 to 15. The election was held on a holiday, the Moslem Sabbath, and the ballot boxes were placed in the mosques to catch the throngs going there to pray.

To reassure the public, the governor of Tehran, Mustafa Tehrani, predicted "utmost calm" would prevail despite fierce street fighting in the capital Sunday between leftist guerrillas of the Mujahedeen Khalq and Khomeini's forces.

Tehrani told Pars that "committed Hezbollahi" members of the fanatic "Party of God," would help security forces ensure there were no disruptions.

Meanwhile, there was no letup in the government's war on its leftist opponents. The newspaper Kayhan reported 23 more people executed for "counterrevolutionary activity." The list of names indicated most of them were women.

This brought to 1,059 the number reported put to death since Bani-Sadr's ouster touched off the Mujahedeen's campaign of bombing and assassination against the fundamentalists.

Bani-Sadr, elected Iran's first president in January 1980, lost a power struggle with the Islamic Republican Party and the Majlis impeached him June 22. Khomeini dismissed him the next day. Rajai and Prime Minister Mohammad Javad Bahonar were assassinated by a Mujahedeen firebomb Aug. 30.

Khamenei is a hojatoleslam, the rank below ayatollah in the Shiite religious hierarchy. An early disciple of Khomeini, he was arrested several times during the monarchy and became a member of the Revolutionary Council that governed Iran after Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi was overthrown.

A spellbinder, he became Friday prayer leader in Tehran, a post of great influence. But he had to resign after a booby-trapped tape recorder he was using in a mosque blew up June 27 and severely injured his right arm and his windpipe.

Khomeini made him his personal representative on the Supreme Defense Council after Iraq invaded Iran a year ago, and after Bahonar was assassinated he succeeded him as secretary-general of the ruling party.

Choir will perform despite threatened demonstrations

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — A South African boys choir will be permitted to perform at Augusta College despite a pledge by the Black Student Union to stage demonstrations protesting that country's apartheid policy.

The college's student government association approved a resolution Thursday recommending that the Brankensberg Boys' Choir be permitted to perform on campus as scheduled Oct. 14. The resolution also condemned South Africa's apartheid policy.

Although the recommendation is not binding on the college administration, President Georgia Christenberry said the choir will appear as scheduled.

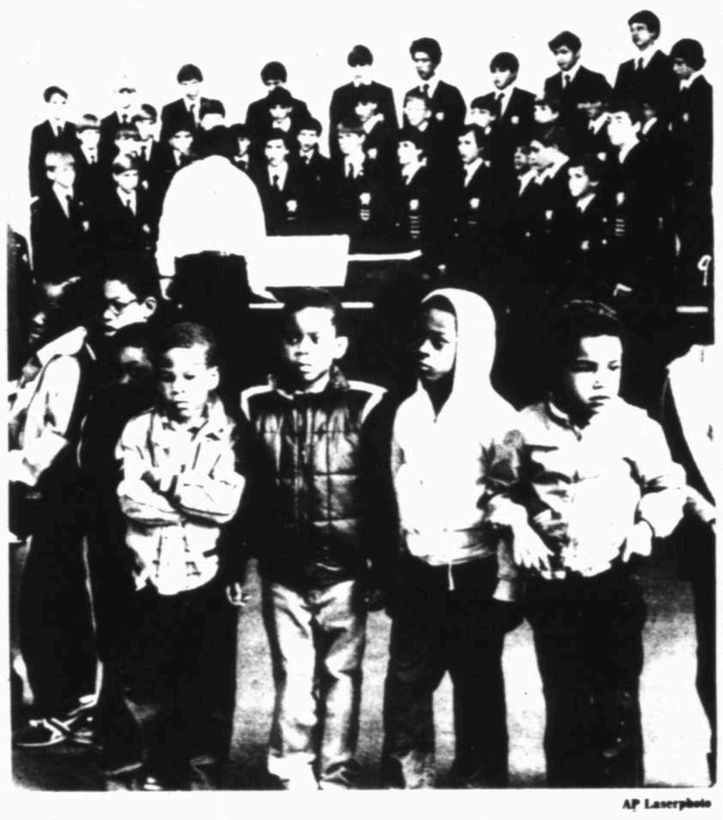

Officials of the Augusta-Richmond County branch of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People and the student government association at Paine College — a private, predominantly black college — have said their groups will consider aiding the Black Student Union in its protest.

The NAACP branch will meet early next week to discuss the visit by the choir and decide on a course of action, said branch President Georgene Hatcher-Seabrook.

During the student government association's debate on the resolution, Greg Cruey, a student senator, said it would set a dangerous precedent to cancel the show, calling it a question of freedom of speech.

Ed Tarver, a member of the Black Student Union, said the choir's appearance on campus will "increase tensions for blacks. I'm disappointed in the administration because they won't admit the choir is coming for political reasons."

The University of Georgia student union decided earlier this week to cancel an Oct. 10 appearance by the choir on the Athens campus.

Union leaders campaigning to oust Walesa

By THOMAS W. NETTER
Associated Press Writer

GDANSK, Poland (AP) — Three other union leaders are campaigning to replace Lech Walesa as chairman of Solidarity, but the union's congress is expected to re-elect the independent labor movement's best known figure.

A few hours after the challengers' names were announced Thursday, a highly placed union official reported: "The phones are ringing off the hook at the Gdansk headquarters. They are saying, 'We want Walesa to win.'"

Walesa, a 38-year-old electrician who led the Gdansk shipyard strikes last August that gave birth to Solidarity, has been accused of compromising with Poland's ruling Communist Party and running the union undemocratically. He threatened to quit the union if he was not re-elected.

The other candidates are Jan Rulewski, chief of Solidarity's Bydgoszcz chapter; Solidarity's No. 2 leader, Andrzej Gwiazda, and Szczecin shipyard union chief Marian Jurczyk. All favor tougher dealings with the government.

Balloting, to begin in the next few days, will continue until one candidate polls at least 50 percent of the 890 delegates meeting in a sports stadium in this Baltic port.

Rulewski, considered the most radical candidate, drew heavy applause in a speech Thursday when he suggested Poland reconsider its alliances with the Soviet Union and other Warsaw Pact nations.

"We should take advantage of the accords of Helsinki, which guarantee the right to leave international pacts and which guarantee sovereign rights," he said.

Walesa, who spoke to scattered applause, warned that the Communist Party has the power to destroy the 9.5-million-member union, which the government blames for many of Poland's economic and political problems.

Walesa also repeated recent government warning that the Soviet Union might impose economic sanctions on Poland if Solidarity did not temper its demands.

"In the winter, there may be problems because the tap can be turned off by our friends if we don't love them enough," he said.

Meanwhile, the government proposed price hikes of 300 to 400 percent for sugar, potatoes, flour, salt, marmalade, heating fuel, electricity and gasoline. It said prices would go up soon.

The government got a reprieve Thursday from its Western bankers. At a meeting in Vienna, they agreed to postpone repayment of 95 percent of the payments due this year for four years and then to spread the repayment over three years.

The amount was not immediately known.

Spy returns to East Germany in first step of swap

By ROBERT H. REID
Associated Press Writer

BONN, West Germany (AP) — The communist spy whose arrest seven years ago forced the resignation of Chancellor Willy Brandt has been returned to East Germany in the first step of an massive East-West prisoner swap, the Bonn government confirmed today.

Witnesses said earlier that a van carrying former Brandt aide Guenther Guillaume, 54, sped into communist territory Thursday night at a crossing point at Herleshausen, southeast of Kassel. Guillaume had been hospitalized at the Bonn University Clinic since Monday undergoing treatment for high blood pressure and a kidney ailment, officials said.

A government spokesman, in confirming Guillaume's release, said the exchange "had not yet been completed," indicating that others involved in the swap may not yet have been freed.

There has been speculation here for weeks that Guillaum's release could herald a trade that will bring freedom to as many as 3,000 East Germans.

West German newspapers reported last week that the exchange would also involve East bloc agents jailed in Denmark, France and South Africa.

But a reliable government source said Thursday that the South Africans had refused to release a jailed Soviet agent, Alexei Kuzlov, unless Moscow handed over imprisoned Jewish dissident Anatoli Shcharansky, a trade apparently rejected by the Soviets.

With the South Africans no longer in the deal, the spokesman said, the East Germans were expected to release fewer Western agents than first thought.

The Bonn government has never revealed how many of its agents were to be set free, but press reports put the figure between 30 and 60.

In addition, the East Germans were reportedly prepared to allow some 3,000 ordinary citizens to leave for the West to join family members who had already defected here.

Government sources said the West Germans would also release Renate Lutze, a former Defense Ministry clerk convicted in 1979 of handing over hundreds of secret documents to the East Germans, and three other agents.

In Copenhagen, Danish Justice Minister Ole Espersen confirmed the West Germans had asked for the release of convicted spy Joerg Meyer as part of the exchange. The minister said, however, that the request was "difficult" and gave no indication whether it would be approved.

There was no confirmation from Paris of West German press reports that the French had been asked to release East German Gen. Bernhard Zorn, jailed for allegedly photographing military installations near the French city of Lille.

Guillaume's release climaxed one of the most dramatic post-war coups for the East German's highly regarded State Security Service.

Passing themselves off as East German defectors, Guillaume and his wife Christel moved to the Frankfurt area in the 1960s and patiently worked their way into the local Social Democratic Party organization.

When Brandt became chancellor in 1969, Guillaume emerged as one of the West German leader's closest aides, with access to a wide range of party and government secrets.

Guillaume's arrest in 1974 proved such a shock to the Brandt government, already under fire from domestic critics on economic and social issues, that the Nobel Prize-winning chancellor stepped down.

The following year, Guillaume was sentenced to 13 years imprisonment for treason. His wife received an eight year term and was returned to East Germany in an spy swap last March.
