Food stamps

A debit-style card replacing food stamps and welfare checks in Texas will be implemented in the Midland-Odessa area Sunday. The Lone Star card was demonstrated by State Comptroller John Sharp at Everybody's Fiesta Foods, 2200 Rankin Highway, Friday morning. Abolishing paper food stamps will reduce overhead associated with processing and lessen the incidence of fraud, Sharp said. To demonstrate the inconvenience and extensive processing associated with food stamps, $1 million worth of stamps — overseen by two armed guards — were displayed at the grocery store. That's the amount one bank, Texas Commerce Bank, processed in just one month in the Permian Basin. Story page 6A

Wilson withdraws

SACRAMENTO, Calif. — His campaign coffers empty and his standing in the polls negligible, Gov. Pete Wilson withdrew Friday from the 1996 presidential race, the first in the 10-man Republican field to quit. "My conscience tells me to go on would be unfair to all whose higher hopes simply will not be met," the 62-year-old governor said in a lunch-hour resignation speech. Story page 8A

Nicole's voice ends closing arguments

■ Attorney's place Simpson's fate in hands of jurors; Judge Ito warns them to ignore exhortations that "the world is watching."

Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — O.J. Simpson's fate was placed into the hands of 12 anonymous citizens Friday, after they saw the battered face and heard the desperate voice of Nicole Brown Simpson and were warned to ignore lawyers' exhortations that "the world is watching."

Three hundred sixty-eight days after jury selection began, Judge Lance Ito ordered the panel to decide the case based on the evidence.

Moments earlier, prosecutor Marcia Clark completed her presentation by playing an audiotape of 911 calls Ms. Simpson made over the years. As the tape played, Clark flashed on a giant courtroom screen pictures of Ms. Simpson's bruised face after various beatings and a final, bloody portrait of the murder victim in death.

"I don't have to say anything else," Clark intoned solemnly after the tape was played.

"Ladies and gentlemen, on behalf of the people of California ... we ask you to find the defendant, Orenthal James Simpson, guilty of murder in the first degree."

Then, Ito spoke to the panel for final instructions.

"You are not partisans or advocates, but impartial judges of the fact," he told the 12 jurors and two alternates who have been sequestered since Jan. 11.

He reminded them that both prosecutors and defense attorneys had argued that "the world is

Survivors honor pilot's 'homecoming'

World War II pilot Robert True Lane's homecoming was commemorated Friday at Confederate Air Force headquarters more than 50 years after he was killed in action on Dec. 24, 1944, in the Battle of the Bulge.

Lane's Republic P-47D Thunderbolt fighter-bomber was shot down over the Belgium-German border by a German Luftwaffe Focke-Wulf Fw. 190 fighter.

He had been missing in action until August 1994 when skeletal remains of Lane and his powerful aircraft were discovered in a wooded pasture in western Germany.

Lane's homecoming was observed by surviving members of his 36th Fighter Group of the old U.S. Army Air Forces' Ninth Air Force and the Smithsonian Institution's Air & Space magazine staff. They dedicated a bronze plaque to the 36th Fighter Group's 86 pilots, including Lane, "who died heroically in combat in World War II in defense of the United States of America."

For 50 years, Lane, a 22-year-old pilot from Maine, had "remained with his

Officials investigate crash of B-26 Marauder that killed 5

By Tonie Miller-Uzzel
Staff writer

No new information has been released concerning Thursday's crash of a World War II-era bomber that was preparing for AirSho '95, according to a supervisor at the National Transportation Safety Board.

Matthew Ellis, a NTSB supervisor in Fort Worth, said two investigators are in Midland looking into the crash of the Martin B-26 Marauder in Ector County. All five men on board were killed.

Ellis said he had no contact with the investigators on Friday. A representative of Midland International Airport said she had not heard from the investigators since Thursday night.

The plane, nicknamed "Carolyn," crashed about 11 a.m. Thursday about 18 miles southwest of Confederate Air Force headquarters at Midland International Airport, where the aircraft originated, officials said.

Five partially intact bodies were recovered. They were identified as Walter A. Wooton of Harlingen, John Thomas Cloyd of El Paso, Vernon E. Thorp of Ocala, Fla., Colin Dunwell of Surrey, England, and Chris Gardner of Essex, England.

Thorp and Wooton — two of the CAF's most experienced pilots — were flying the plane, CAF officials said.

Investigators said Thursday they didn't know if the aircraft attempted to crash land or went down unexpectedly.

The B-26 was on its second training flight this week, a federal investigator said. "Carolyn" was the only flying Marauder in the world.

Two oil-field workers about one-tenth of a mile from the crash site told investigators the aircraft was flying southwesterly when it went down.

Wreckage was spread out for 200 to 300 yards, Mashburn estimated.

The plane burst into flames after impact; no explosion was reported, officials said. "There's a couple of pretty large indentations in the ground where it looks like the two engines hit," Mashburn said.

The tragedy has not changed plans for the air show today and Sunday, CAF officials said.

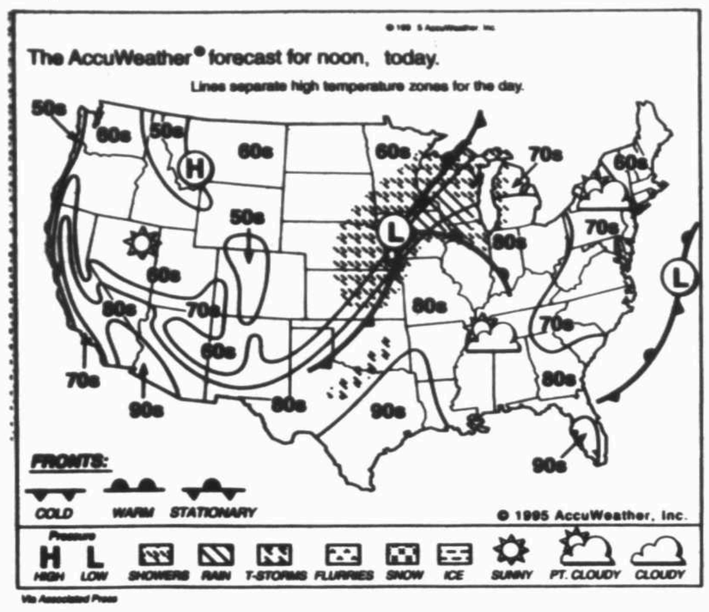

"This is our homecoming, and we are dedicating the AirSho to those comrades who we lost," a CAF official said Thursday.

World War II aircraft, piloted by flying colonels within the 7,000-member CAF, will fly the missing-man formation during the air show as a tribute to the fallen airmen.

Also, flags at CAF headquarters are flying at half-staff in honor of the men.

Hospital releases abandoned baby

AUSTIN (AP) — An abandoned premature baby boy found covered with fire ants on a Williamson County road earlier this month has been released from the hospital.

The Texas Department of Protective and Regulatory Services officials said the infant, previously known as Baby Doe, was released from Seton Medical Center to his foster family Friday.

The boy was born two weeks premature and brought to Seton after being found Sept. 6 on County Road 188, just east of Georgetown. He suffered from fire ant bites over 25 percent of his body.

He also tested positive for cocaine exposure and was diagnosed hypothermic and hypoglycemic.

The department said the baby will now be known as David Williamson. Caseworkers named the child because "the name refers to one who is strong ... He is named Williamson because he was found in Williamson County," the statement said.

VICTIM: Simpson double-murder case goes to jury watching," he but told them that should have no influence on their verdict.

The jurors were expressionless as they filed into the jury room.

Three minutes after the case was submitted at 4:08 p.m. on the courtroom clock, a jury room buzzer sounded three times. The judge had told the jury to use the buzzer after a foreman was selected. However, it wasn't announced whether one had been picked.

"Maybe they've got a verdict and we can all go home," defense attorney Johnnie Cochran Jr. quipped.

Laughter erupted, breaking a palpable tension that had built during the final moments of Clark's rebuttal. In pleading for a conviction, Clark summoned up the beaten face and desperate voice of Ms. Simpson, who was murdered along with friend Ronald Goldman on June 12, 1994.

"Usually, I feel I'm the only one left to speak for the victims," she said. "But Nicole and Ron are speaking to you."

She urged jurors to listen to the resignation in Ms. Simpson's voice in one 911 call and consider the words she spoke to a detective who responded to a domestic violence call at her home six years before the murders: "He's going to kill me."

Clark suggested that Goldman was a hero in the effort to convict his killer because, "Ron, struggling so valiantly, forced the killer to leave evidence."

"They told you with their blood, with their hair ... that he did it — Orenthal Simpson," she said.

The judge's final instructions and the majority-black jury's departure to begin deliberations marked the end of a convulsive yearlong battle involving a popular sports legend. It placed the criminal justice system itself on trial and raised disturbing issues of racism within the Los Angeles Police Department.

The final session on Friday was as contentious as any, with Cochran and Barry Scheck peppering Clark with a fusillade of objections — more than 60 in all — that fragmented portions of her argument.

But in the final moments, the courtroom fell silent as the photographs and the tapes of Ms. Simpson provided a dramatic finish.

In the spectator section, Ms. Simpson's sisters Tanya and Denise Brown held their hands over their ears and wept with their mother, Juditha.

Goldman's family was in tears.

Simpson looked away from the jury.

To the end, jurors were expressionless.

Normally, final arguments proceed uninterrupted. But during her final rebuttal, Clark elicited admonishments from the judge in addition to the defense's repeated objections.

Ito at first barked, "Sit down!" at protesting defense lawyers but eventually dismissed jurors from the courtroom to talk to attorneys.

He told Clark, "You're close to the line" and warned her to stop expressing her opinions rather than argue the evidence.

She shot back that she was entitled to respond to the fiery oratory of Cochran, who, she said, had appealed to jurors' emotions outside the evidence.

Ito said Cochran stayed within the law: "It was very artfully phrased."

Clark complained that Cochran had attacked the prosecutors and they should be able to respond.

"When counsel takes off the gloves and makes personal attacks and says basically we're criminals, we have ethical obligations," she said.

In anticipation of the impending climax, the street outside the courthouse was barricaded by police early Friday. The crowds that gathered were bigger than usual, and many people were kept across the street.

Some cheered as defense attorneys arrived.

Supporters on both sides played on a theme of Cochran's closing argument: There were shirts that read, "If it doesn't fit then you must acquit," and a sign that said, "If they acquit, they're full of (expletive)."

The task of answering Cochran's most incendiary demand — that jurors acquit Simpson because a racist detective may have framed him — fell to Christopher Darden, a black prosecutor who addressed jurors first.

"It's time to stand up. It is time to stand up," he said in his quietly intense rebuttal. "The Constitution says a man has no right to kill and get away with it just because one of the investigating officers is a racist."

Darden reminded jurors of Cochran's exhortation to return a verdict they could live with the day after.

"If you were to acquit him, what explanation would you give?" Darden asked. "Would you say it's because of racism in the LAPD?"

While telling jurors he was "eternally grateful that Mark Fuhrman was exposed for what he is," Darden also implored jurors: "Don't let them get you fired up because Mark Fuhrman is a racist."

"Racism blinds you," he told the panel of nine blacks, two whites and a Hispanic.

In his final chance to win over jurors, Darden cast his low-key presentation as a calm, reasoned antidote to Cochran's fevered defense of Simpson.

The prosecutor implied that defense lawyers were using Simpson's status as a football legend to place him in a category that would not allow conviction.

"No one is above the law — not the police, not the rich," Darden said. "O.J. Simpson is not above the law."

Darden drew furious objections when he said of Simpson, "Everybody knows he killed."

Referring to Simpson's standing as a football hero, Darden said, "You talk about heroes. A hero is a man who would run into a life-threatening situation to rescue a woman," he said.

Ignoring defense interruptions, Darden declared: "The evidence is there. You just have to find your way through the smoke. .. It all points to him as the killer."

When Clark took over, she incurred vehement objections when she told jurors she had been a defense attorney in the past, gave it up and took a pay cut because she liked the "luxury" of being able to dismiss a case if she thought there was inadequate evidence. She began to say she would have done that in the Simpson case if she didn't believe he was guilty — but objections stopped the show and jurors were asked to leave.

HONOR: Survivors remember fallen comrades

(From 1A)

plane awaiting his homecoming," reads the plaque. The inscription salutes the aviator with this eulogy: "Fly Forever in Your Glorious Thunderbolt."

During the 36th Fighter Group's dedication at the onset of the CAF's AirSho'95, a P-47 Thunderbolt and a Curtiss-Wright P-40 Warhawk flew overhead in tribute to Lane and the 36th's other fallen pilots.

Unearthing the remains of Lane and his P-47 Thunderbolt and the chronicle of his life and the role of the Thunderbolt and its pilots are detailed in the Air & Space magazine's October-November article, "Homecoming," by aviation writer Stephan Wilkinson.

Air & Space senior editor Linda Shiner joined the 36th Fighter Group reunion and unveiled the plaque.

Lane, piloting his P-47D Thunderbolt, nicknamed "Scrumptious Bette" after his sweetheart, was on his 34th mission when he went down in 1944 and became numbered among America's 78,000 missing-in-action warriors. All told, 405,000 Americans died in the 1939-1945 war.

Californian Tom Glenn, a 36th Fighter Group pilot who organized the reunion and tribute, on Friday recalled that Lane as "a helluva nice guy.

"Roger was friendly," the white-haired Glenn said, reflecting. "He was the guy who was always smiling."

"Most of our guys were 21, 22, 23" years old," he said. "The senior pilots were only about 26 or 27. You never forget those guys because of the circumstances."

Death, a mundane part of war, "happened to so many guys," Glenn said, remembering.

But after "your closest buddy got killed" and you suffered in that grief, "you never had anyone that close after that," Glenn said. "You had really good friends. And you were sad when they were shot down and killed, but you never allowed yourself to get that close to anybody again. You didn't realize that they would be killed — that's what it amounted to."

The 36th Fighter Group launched the Thunderbolt from France and England. It could fly more than 400 miles per hour.

The group was relegated to flying ground support, strafing and bombing, to protect Allied forces and to destroy enemy strongholds, such as anti-aircraft bunkers, and locomotives, trucks, bridges and tunnels.

"We got the dirty work, the dive-bombing and strafing, where your losses are God-knows how many times higher than the regular fighter squadrons" of P-51 Mustangs, P-38 Lightnings and other fighters, Glenn said.

The 36th Fighter Group's P-47 pilots initially were trained as fighter pilots and learned dive-bombing techniques on-the-job.

"After awhile, we got exceptionally good at hitting our targets," Glenn said. "We developed a technique to do it. If you missed your target, it was embarrassing, because by that time, we had honed our skills."

Meanwhile, the England-based Eighth Air Force, "got all the PR and all the glory," Glenn said. "Those guys flew 25 missions, and they went home. We had the crappy work and really came up on the short end of the stick in promotions and decorations and combat time."

The 36th Fighter Group's Neil Smith, who now lives in Mississippi, said, "you are not in a position to be sympathetic, because you are going out the next day for the same thing.

"And you really can't handle it emotionally, unless you can put it out of your mind and deal with the problems at hand (on) the day that the problems come up," Smith said. "You can't dwell in the past."

Smith, who remembered the P-47 as a rugged airplane, said that the pilots "loved it. It would perform. And it would bring you back. And that's the main thing."

Smith, who was born in 1920, was flying combat at age 22 and today has a 23-year-old son, who is an instructor pilot.

"I look upon him as being a kid," Smith said. "I would hate to see him flying in combat. I would rather fight another war myself rather than see him go in and do the same thing that I did."

Smith, who "had a wing man blown out of the sky right beside me" in combat, "finally got a bullet hole out in the aileron, and I felt so proud of it because I am no longer a 'virgin.'"

The Thunderbolt was "built for high altitude as a fighter but it ended up, when it was in service over in Europe, being more of a low-altitude support plane for the infantry and the armor forces — the ground forces," he said. "We strafed and bombed. We knocked out locomotives, trucks, tanks, tunnels, bridges — utilitarian-type work instead of the more glamorous air battles.

"The P-51s got more of that because they had a little more range than we had. The P-47 has not been given as much credit as it is due for the role that it played in the war. I think the P-51 and the P-38 probably have been glamorized for their aesthetic beauty more than the P-47."

Of the Thunderbolt and other aircraft that he, Glenn, Lane and the others in the 36th Fighter Group flew during the war, Smith said, "You learn to use the good qualities of them and to handle the bad qualities - if they have got any. And, of course, it (the aircraft) becomes just like a member of your family after you have flown it for awhile. You do things and react without even thinking about it."

Real estate school to start classes Monday

From Staff Reports

The formation of a new real estate propitiatory school, REC College of Real Estate, was recently announced by Joanne Langston, Pat Orseth and Richard Langston, owners of The Real Estate Central Group.

Sandy Hicks, formerly of Midland College and West Texas' only real estate instructor certified by the Texas Real Estate Teachers Association, will be the principal instructor and operations manager.

On Monday the school will begin accelerated classes in core courses approved for real estate licensing requirements. Principals of Real Estate will begin on Monday; the Law of Agency will begin Oct. 9. Both day and evening sessions are scheduled for most topics. A wider range of advanced courses for the experienced Realtor is being developed and should be offered within the next few months, Mrs. Langston said.

"Our goals in establishing the school were to offer the entire West Texas real estate community more choices in educational courses, more flexibility in scheduling and a greater depth of staff," she added.

"We also wanted to be able to respond to prelicensees and licensees who need a particular course within a specific time frame. Again, our flexibility in scheduling, depth of staff and permanent classroom should enable us to offer courses as requested, even for a very low minimum number of students," Mrs. Langston said.

Mrs. Hicks said that one of the more unusual aspects of the school will be an invitation to all area brokers of records and sales managers to attend any of the college's sessions at no charge.

"We feel the exchange of experiences and ideas and the opportunity to share the most up-to-date information on changes in our profession will be a great help to us all," Mrs. Hicks said. "In fact, we hope to utilize many of these area brokers and professionals as instructors or guest speakers. We do want to have the ability to serve the entire West Texas market, even to the point of taking the courses to a group of out-of-town students in necessary."

The school will be located at 1908 W. Wall Ave., Suite C.

For additional information, call the school at 687-3010; Mrs. Hicks at 570-1028; or Mrs. Langston at 685-0400.

Suspect in Paris bombings dies in shootout with police

PARIS (AP) — The main suspect in a string of terror bombings at a subway station, a school and tourist sites was killed Friday night in a shootout with police at a village bus stop in eastern France.

The killing of Khaled Kelkal, a 24-year-old delinquent who became the most wanted man in France, culminated a massive manhunt rarely seen in France, which has been on high security alert since mid-summer. It came two days after he narrowly escaped police as they moved in on his forest hideout near the eastern city of Lyon.

Refusing to give up, Kelkal — wearing army-style khakis and combat boots — fired at police Friday night as they approached him at a bus stop near Vaugneray, outside Lyon. They shot back and fatally wounded him, police said. No one else was injured.

Kelkal, an Algerian who had lived in an immigrant suburb of Lyon, was the main suspect in the series of six bombings and failed bombings that have killed seven people and injured more than 100. The first attack was July 25, when a suburban train car was torn apart by a blast in Paris' Latin Quarter. Other bombs targeted passers-by near the Arc de Triomphe, shoppers at an outdoor market and a Jewish school outside Lyon in which seven people were injured, none students.

Investigators suspect that Islamic extremists engaged in an insurgency in Algeria are behind the wave of terrorism. Kelkal's alleged relationship with them remains vague. His family claimed they had not seen him since June.

Kelkal's fingerprints were found on the adhesive tape attaching a detonator to a bomb that failed to explode beside a high-speed train track Aug. 26.

Kelkal's pictures, dating back several years and showing a boyish face with tousled hair, have been posted all over France.

Police have made numerous sweeps through fundamentalist neighboroods in their search for suspects. Soldiers have been put on the streets, trash cans sealed in Paris and other major cities and other precautions taken to try to prevent another bombing.

U.S. citizen dies following Palestinians' interrogation

EIN YABROUD, West Bank (AP) — Palestinian-American Azzam Musleh was playing cards in a coffee shop when three men, without explanation, escorted him to a car and drove him to Palestinian secret police headquarters.

Some 30 hours later, Musleh was dead.

His body was returned to the Musleh family at 2:30 a.m. Friday. Musleh's 20-year-old son, Shaheed, said he believed his father was tortured in detention.

"There are signs of beatings and cigarette burns on the body," said Shaheed. Cuts, welts and bruises were visible on Musleh's face before burial on Friday.

U.S. officials on Friday demanded an investigation into the case, the latest indication that PLO security forces are violating human rights in their zeal to curb Palestinian militants' threat to the peace process.

"This is not an auspicious beginning," said Kathleen Riley, the U.S. consul in Jerusalem, referring to the newly signed Israel-PLO accord on Palestinian self-rule in the West Bank.

Villagers in Ein Yabroud recognized the men who drove Musleh away from the coffee shop Wednesday night as agents under Yassir Arafat's West Bank security chief, Jibril Rajoub, Shaheed said.

Concerned when he wasn't home within a few hours, one of his relatives called Musleh's mobile phone. Musleh picked up, said "I'm with those who took me, here in Jericho," and then the call was cut off, said Tawfiq Sableh, 43, an in-law.

Shaheed then drove to Rajoub's headquarters to find his father. After many denials that Musleh was being held, an officer, who gave his name as Abu Said, said Musleh would be released the next day, Shaheed said.

Japan indicts servicemen in rape case

TOKYO (AP) — Three U.S. servicemen were indicted Friday in the rape of a 12-year-old Okinawan girl and handed over to Japanese authorities in a case that has spurred demands for revision of the U.S.-Japan security alliance.

If convicted, the servicemen could get life sentences.

The rape, and a rule that allowed the suspects to stay on a U.S. base until they were indicted, have caused an uproar on Okinawa, one of the United States' most important military outposts in the Pacific.

The case has buttressed efforts to revise the terms under which 45,000 U.S. troops are stationed in Japan. Some in Okinawa, where more than 60 percent of the troops are based, want the burden shifted to other parts of Japan. Leftists have demanded that all the U.S. troops go home.

In a speech to Parliament on Friday, Prime Minister Tomiichi Murayama called the rape "extremely regrettable" and demanded that the U.S. military prevent such a crime from happening again.

Okinawa Gov. Masahide Ota said he would refuse to force local landlords to renew contracts with the U.S. government on land the U.S. military uses. Some private landlords have said they do not want to renew the contracts, some of which expire next year or in 1997.

The three suspects in the rape — Marine Pfc. Rodrico Harp, 21, of Griffin, Ga.; Marine Pfc. Kendrick M. Ledet, 20, of Waycross, Ga.; and Navy Seaman Marcus D. Gill, 22, of Woodville, Texas — were formally charged with rape resulting in injury, and arrest and confinement.

Rape resulting in injury carries a maximum sentence of life in prison.

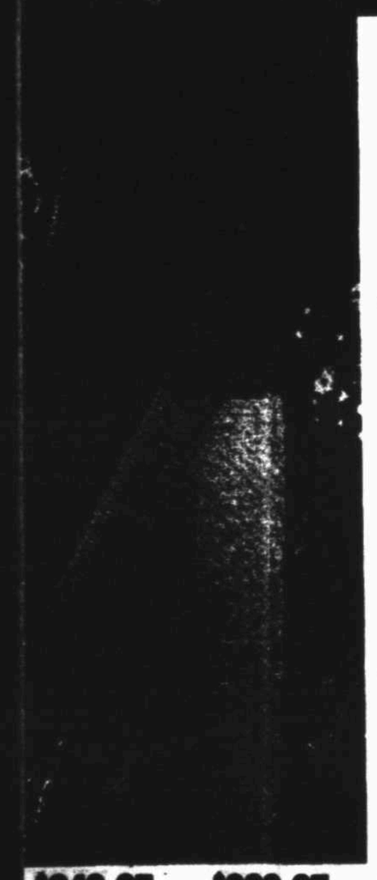

The three were taken to a Japanese detention center from the U.S. base where they have been confined since the Sept. 4 attack. A three-judge panel at the Naha District Court in Okinawa's capital will hear the case, which is expected to begin within months.

Police probe discovery of dead body

From Staff Reports

Midland police officers are investigating the discovery of a body that was believed to have been involved in a traffic accident Thursday evening.

Police received a call Friday morning concerning a dead body that was found in the 1100 block of South Midland Drive in a vacant field, Sgt. David Garcia said.

The body was identified as David Lynn Tovar, 33. He was found by people walking by the field.

The body may be linked to a disturbance that occurred Thursday at the Taco Villa at Midland Drive and Andrews Highway, Garcia said.

A fight broke out shortly before 11 p.m. in the drive-through of the restaurant. Witnesses told police that one of the vehicles involved was gray and headed southbound on Midland Drive before officers arrived.

At 11:07 p.m. Thursday, a major traffic accident was reported in the 1100 block of South Midland Drive. The driver of a gray station wagon had apparently lost control on the curve, struck the curb, flipped or rolled several times before striking a telephone/electrical pole. The pole was sheared in half, which knocked power out in the immediate area.

Officers at the scene did not find anyone in or around the vehicle and no one was found in a search of the immediate area, Garcia said.

The discovery of Tovar's body Friday indicated to officers that there was a connection between the disturbance at Taco Villa and the subsequent accident, Garcia said.

Preliminary reports link the accident to the body, he said.

"However, we are still reconstructing the accident and trying to determine if Tovar was alone in the vehicle and exactly what happened," Garcia said.

An autopsy has been ordered and the body was taken to Lubbock.

The Police Department is "looking into how the body was overlooked. We cannot speculate on how this happened until all personnel at the scene on Thursday, Sept. 28, are interviewed," Garcia said.

A search warrant was executed at 9338 W. 26th St. in Odessa. Approximately two grams of methamphetamine and assorted drug paraphernalia, with an estimated street value at $200, were seized, according to the report.

Theft: Four tires and rims, valued at $1,100, were stolen from 3101 Garden City Highway, reported Rudy Grenado at 9:30 a.m.

Theft: An air-conditioning unit was taken from outside the residence at 1943 English Drive, reported Bill Scott at 2:21 p.m.

Burglary of a vehicle: Wedding rings were taken from an unlocked vehicle at 2613 N. Midland Drive. It was reported at 4:01 p.m.

Anyone having information concerning these incidents should contact the Police Department at 685-7108 or Crime Stoppers at 694-TIPS.

Official: Replacing food stamps to reduce overhead, fraud

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

A debit-style card replacing food stamps and welfare checks in Texas will be implemented in the Midland-Odessa area Sunday.

The Lone Star card was demonstrated by State Comptroller John Sharp at Everybody's Fiesta Foods, 2200 Rankin Highway, Friday morning.

Abolishing paper food stamps will reduce overhead associated with processing and lessen the incidence of fraud, Sharp said.

To demonstrate the inconvenience and extensive processing associated with food stamps, $1 million worth of stamps — overseen by two armed guards — were displayed at the grocery store. That's the amount one bank, Texas Commerce Bank, processed in just one month in the Permian Basin.

"You will never again see this mess in Midland, Texas," Sharp said, referring to the clear plastic bags of stamps.

Instead, food stamp recipients will use a plastic debit card at grocery stores where there's a compatible machine.

Users will not receive change — one problem with paper food stamps — and users cannot sell stamps or trade for drugs. "It only works in one place ... in a grocery store. It doesn't work on a downtown street corner," Sharp said.

Any money seen handed to debit-card holders at grocery stores will be for welfare payments credited on the card, Sharp said.

In addition to saving the state money and reducing fraud, consumers may benefit as well.

"The added savings that we will have due to this program will be tremendous," said Jay Lawrence, co-owner of Everybody's Fiesta Foods. More savings will be passed down to shoppers at the grocery store — at least Everybody's Fiesta Foods, according to Lawrence.

The Midland-Odessa area is part of the fourth phase to implement the debit-type cards in Texas. The new system also will begin simultaneously in Abilene, Brownsville, Corpus Christi, Harlingen, Laredo, McAllen, San Angelo and Wichita Falls.

In Midland County in fiscal year 1994, there were 13,833 food stamp recipients issued a total value of $11,063,529. And there were 3,556 welfare — Aid to Families with Dependent Children (AFDC) — recipients getting a total of $2,440,554.

That same year, in Ector County, 23,854 people received $19,853,997 in food stamps, and 6,851 people received $4,770,386 in AFDC disbursements.

The fifth and final phase of the debit card implementation will begin next month in parts of central and east Texas

Bookstore to hold quilt exhibit today

From Staff Reports

Fans of airplanes and lovers of soft, cuddly quilts can satisfy both interests at the exhibit, "Flying High: The Airplane in Quilts" at Midland's Pages & Prints Bookstore.

The display features small quilts and quilt blocks depicting airplanes, toy planes, rockets and similar flight designs. Pages & Prints is in the Plaza Oaks Shopping Center, Wadley and Garfield, and will be open from 9 a.m. to 6:30 p.m. today.

The showing is coordinated by Ms. Ragi Marino, who curated a similar exhibit for the Mid-American Air Museum at Liberal, Kan. The show traveled to museums from Colorado to Michigan.

Ms. Marino's book, "Flying High: The Airplane in Quilts," brings to vivid life the history of airplanes in quilts. In addition to color photographs, the book contains several previously unpublished quilt block patterns.

For additional information, call the bookstore at 570-5173.

Lawyers for Nichols, McVeigh file motions to dismiss indictment

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Arguing that prosecutors committed a host of constitutional and procedural sins, lawyers for bombing suspects Terry Nichols and Timothy McVeigh filed 11 motions Friday seeking to have their indictment dismissed.

Nichols and McVeigh are each charged with 11 counts in the April 19 federal building bombing that killed 169 people. If convicted, they could face the death penalty.

The first three counts fall under federal anti-terrorism laws that prohibit using a weapon of mass destruction. The final eight counts are federal murder charges in the death of eight federal law enforcement agents.

One of six motions filed by Michael Tigar, Nichols' lawyer, argues that the three anti-terrorism counts should be dismissed because the laws violate the Eighth Amendment ban on cruel and unusual punishment.

"The offenses listed are not proportional to capital punishment," Tigar wrote.

McVeigh's team filed five motions on the same grounds. Both teams asked for hearings. The trial is set for May 17.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Steve Mullins would not discuss Tigar's motions in detail, saying prosecutors had not read all the documents. He said they will comment next week.

One legal expert speculated that the motions will probably not pose a serious obstacle for the prosecution.

"Their strategy here is to nitpick this thing," said David Clark, a professor at the University of Tulsa College of Law. "The worst that could happen is that they'd have to file a new indictment. It's not going to stop anything."

The indictment accuses McVeigh and Nichols of obtaining the components of the bomb and involvement the robbery of an Arkansas gun dealer, but does not tie those incidents to a conspiracy to bomb the federal building, Tigar argued.

"The government is trying to make an end run around the Fifth Amendment grand jury indictment process and Timothy McVeigh's Sixth Amendment right to be informed of the charges against him by polluting ... the indictment with what are essentially at least nine sub-counts of property crimes," McVeigh lawyer Robert Wyatt wrote.

Citing the 10th Amendment's bestowal of powers not specifically granted the federal government upon the states, Tigar also challenged the first two counts on the grounds that crimes such as homicide have traditionally been prosecuted by states, not the federal government.

The final eight counts should be dismissed because of a procedural mistake, Tigar said. Each count simply lists the name, title and agency of the slain officers without spelling out the offense.

Also Friday, Tigar objected to U.S. District Judge Wayne Alley's decision to hold the trial in Lawton, arguing that the southwestern Oklahoma location will be inconvenient for attorneys and witnesses.

Wilson withdraws bid for 1996 GOP nomination, cites low funds

■ More nation news/3B

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (NYT) — His campaign coffers empty and his standing in the polls negligible, Gov. Pete Wilson withdrew Friday from the 1996 presidential race, the first in the 10-man Republican field to quit.

"My conscience tells me to go on would be unfair to all whose higher hopes simply will not be met," the 62-year-old governor said in a brief lunch-hour resignation speech in Sacramento to several hundred cheering supporters and campaign workers. But come the year 2000, he added pointedly, he might try again.

Wilson's departure had seemed increasingly probable in recent weeks as he continued to lag in the polls and in fund raising, and will probably have little effect on the eventual outcome of the contest.

That, as much as anything, is the measure of how little was achieved by a candidate who only months ago had been widely viewed as Sen. Bob Dole's toughest rival for the nomination, and was regarded by the White House as President Clinton's most formidable Republican rival.

After all, the Wilson campaign originated in the governor's office of the nation's richest, most populous and most politically important state.

Wilson had hoped that his mostly moderate brand of Republicanism would position him as the alternative candidate if more conservative leaders like Dole, begin to falter. He believed that once the faltering began, the party would conclude that a candidate closer to the political center would run best against Clinton, the presumed Democratic nominee.

But as Dole began to falter a bit, Wilson gained no strength in the polls, remaining below 5 percent in most of them even after he adopted hard conservative stands on some issues.

The disenchanted drifted mainly into the "undecided" column, unpersuaded by the governor's wooden, rather narrow calls from the stump for a total overhaul of welfare programs and anti-crime efforts, a halt to federal involvement in the abortion dispute and an end to illegal immigration and affirmative action.

With Colin Powell, the retired Army general and former chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, emerging on the political scene, as well as Ross Perot's move this week to form a third party, Wilson's strategy of presenting himself as the moderate alternative to Senator Dole seemed even more tenuous.

Still, the governor's departure from the race is likely to bring little benefit to Powell, should he decide to run. If anything, Wilson's experience in recent months suggests that a Republican candidate who holds moderate position, as Powell does, too, will find the going difficult.

As might be expected, the Republicans still in the race tried to portray Wilson's withdrawal as helping their candidacies. "Pete Wilson took a hard-nosed, disciplined run at Bob Dole," said the Kansas senator's campaign manager, Scott Reed. "No candidate was more focused or more determined than Wilson, yet Dole was not dented. That shows deep depth of support for Bob Dole."

Former Gov. Lamar Alexander of Tennessee, who attacked Wilson at every turn, Friday portrayed himself as the only major candidate who is based outside Washington. "Governor Wilson's withdrawal makes this campaign a very clear choice between two respected Washington senators," Alexander said, alluding to Dole and Sen. Phil Gramm of Texas, "and one governor with executive experience from outside Washington, D.C."

BIG SPRING

PLANES, TRAINS & AUTOMOBILES

BIG SPRING — Want to learn how to fly, reach speeds up to 235 mph and heights up to around 23,000 feet? Ever think of flying model airplanes?

"The only thing is, you don't get in ours," said James Sawyer, a member of the Big Spring Model Aircraft Association and the club's field marshall.

His duties include coordinating events such as the recent Float Fly held at Comanche Trail Park Lake.

Sawyer, who works at the federal prison, became involved in this hobby about three years ago when he made a trade for a radio and a little trainer airplane.

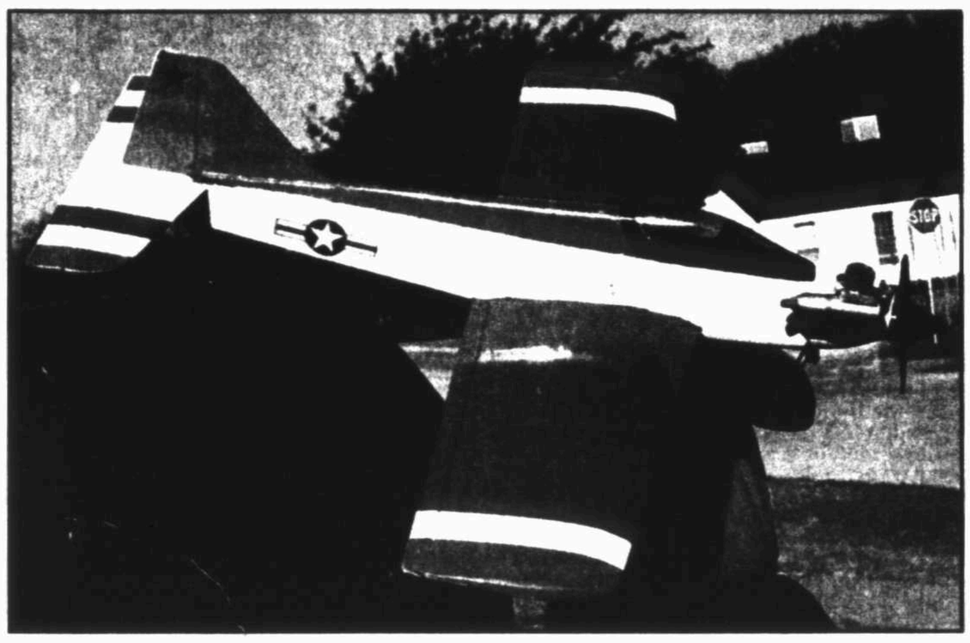

"I tried to teach myself how to fly it. I crashed it a few times," Sawyer said.

When a friend later saw his broken plane, he asked Sawyer if he was ever going to put it back together.

"I said, 'Yeah, if I could find somebody to teach me to fly the thing.'"

So his friend did.

"I had always wanted to fly. I think just about anybody is fascinated by airplanes," Sawyer said, explaining what draws not only him, but others to model airplanes.

"We've got young to very old. We've got people from all walks of life doing it — from oil-field workers, to doctors and engineers."

Initial start-up costs for the model airplane hobby are not as high as one might think. To be ready to fly with radio equipment, an engine, and other hardware, $350 will get someone in on the ground level.

The planes, which do require assembly, are made of balsa wood, hardwood spruce and light plywood. The different parts are cut out of sheets of balsa; elaborate sets of plans show which pieces to glue together. The glue, "thin and real strong," is similar to super glue. An iron-on film covers the planes instead of paint, which adds a lot of weight.

Some hobbyists will create a plane without using a kit.

A completed plane that may have a wingspan of 7 feet may weigh only 7 pounds without hardware. Electronics and other hardware will double a plane's weight.

The gas-powered engines that propel the planes run on a mixture of methanol, nitromethane and a caster synthetic blend. The radios have a range in air from three to five miles.

"You're not going to lose range of it before you lose sight of it," Sawyer said.

The Big Spring Model Aircraft Association has about 35 members; approximately 25 are active members and there are six licensed pilots. A member must be certified by Academy of Model Aeronautics to fly without BIG SPRING — Mike Madry was not necessarily planning to become immersed in model trains, but that is what he did for nearly two years.

Several years ago, while a college student, Madry worked as a maintenance-keeper for Big Spring Main Street, an organization committed to the revitalization of the downtown area. One day his boss told him to go down to the storefront at the corner of Main and Second streets. Main Street was financing some of what was going on at the store and Madry was told to offer his help.

When Madry met the men, they were just beginning to build a frame for what would turn out to be an elaborate model railroad display.

Madry was drawn by the enthusiasm of the men and the stories they told of a time when, "the railroad was a huge part of this city," he said.

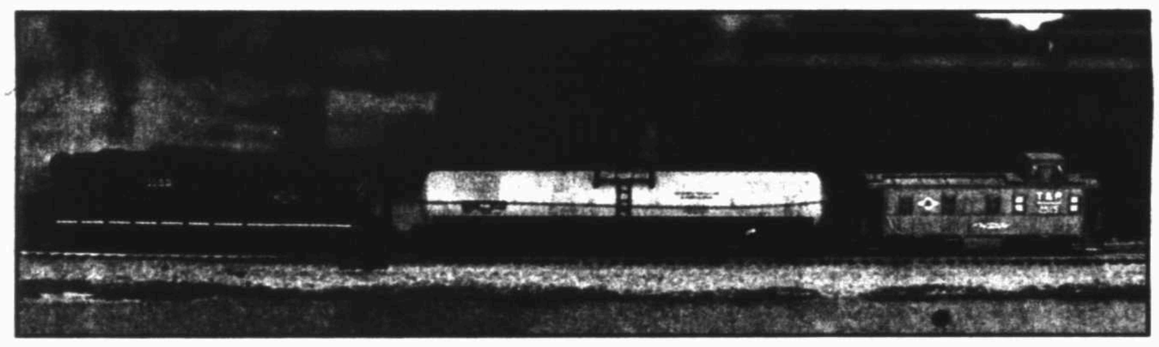

"Other than the fact you have a spring here, a water supply, the railroad is what made Big Spring. Their interest in the railroad is rooted in the fact that at one time or another they had family or they knew a good friend who worked for the railroad here.

" They say things like, 'The railroad was a part of my life,' or 'my granddad was with the railroad,' or 'my uncle got smashed by the railroad.'

"I got to talking to those guys, and you know ... these old guys have some stories. They started telling me about trains and the railroad, and lo and behold, the next thing you know I had a tool in my hand," Madry said. "After that it was over. From that day on I was hooked."

For the next two years, he spent eight hours at the store almost everyday build-

The Big Spring Radio-Controlled track at Comanche Trail Park has bumps, jumps, banks and turns and provides loads of RC racing fun for entire family.

There exists a kind of car racing in which the driver stands six feet off the ground and watches his car go around a track. Steering is via radio control and these little cars are hot! We are not talking about the little plastic remote control cars that the kids get from Toy's 'R' Us or Walmart either. We are talking about graphite-chassied, titanium reinforced, radio controlled off road cars, with limited-slip differentials and oil-filled shocks. These rugged little cars can negotiate just about any terrain at speeds up to 40 mph, can jump off four foot banks and land on all fours, or hit a curb, roll over and keep going.

"This is the most addictive sport I've ever gotten into in my life. Ask my wife," said an enthusiastic Steve Madry, the President and founder of the Big Spring Radio Control club (BSRC). The club was started eight weeks ago, has eighteen members, and already has a dirt track at Comanche Trail Park.

Madry, who is currently a salesman at Neighbors Autos, has always been drawn to radio controlled sports. He flew model airplanes as a kid, and sees an advantage that cars have over planes.

"If you take a plane and wreck it, then you walk out there in the middle of a pasture with a shoe box, pick up a six foot wing span and take home the parts. If you wreck this thing here (pointing to one of his cars) you just go and kick it over. You can't hardly do any damage to the things," he said as he threw one across the room to land on a concrete floor.

Indeed, with titanium shocks and rods, extra heavy duty bumpers, graphite chassis, and ultra light motor plates, these little bundles of energy are designed for speed and rigidity.

RC cars have a wide appeal. It draws father and son and whole families. "My dad, myself, and my two brothers (one of whom is Mike Madry) are involved in it.," Steve Madry said. "Anybody can get into this. A ing landscapes with a miniature replica of Signal Mountain and Big Spring's freight station and old roundhouse. He wired the complex array of rail yards and tracks that make the display run, and he put together a myriad of different train cars. The work he did there is "one of the things that I'm really, really proud of," he said.

TRAINS: Models mirror reality

Most of the model trains and other train-related items were donated by W.B. "Doc" Hardy, who has another model train collection in a room at his house.

The display contains more than $3,500 worth of "rolling stock," more than 450 feet of track, many collectible locomotives and other antiques related to the railroad and a seemingly by-gone era.

The final and most important product of all of this effort and time, though, is an elaborate and impressive train display. And, although it is mostly done, this work of art has sat unnoticed in the heart of Big Spring for the past year or two.

Hardy and Madry like to refer to the fruits of their labor as the Big Spring Railroad Museum, and hope that public interest and a little financial backing will enable it to be open to the public.

Combine interest in the railroad with the pure nostalgia of model trains and it is easy to see how this hobby could become an obsession.

"The first thing that came out that a kid could own that he could control was an electrical train track," Madry said.

Besides control, the intrigue of model trains is in the re-creation of a miniature reality. Hobbyists spend much time absorbed in intricate detailing. Miniature railings, ladders, and decals — many that are readable only with a magnifying glass — adorn most replicas.

A model train set and a track do not stand alone, however. To fully replicate reality, creating miniature towns and landscape must be designed for the trains to travel through. This part is just as much a part of the hobby as the trains themselves and is where the creativity comes in. verything from colored sand and specific glues to plaster of Paris and sandpaper play an artistic role.

You can get "anyone from 80 to 8 involved in an intense miniature landscape," Madry said. "There is a definite connection and it's there for everybody. It's kind of like going fishing. You go in there and do your thing and there's nothing between you and what you're doing. After you're through, you have a sense of accomplishment."

But it seems that for some, the replication of reality is not complete until it has been fully imitated. "You talk to the old guys who are into trains and they would rather do nothing else then put on that hat and run those trains," Madry said. "They want to blow the whistle at exactly a certain decibel and it has to be blown 500 feet before you reach the crossing, just the way it used to be."

For the real die-hard addicts, the obsession with trains reaches into all aspects of life. Some people won't consider a house unless it can accommodate their hobby. Others build their trains into the house with holes cut in walls so that their trains can chug-chug-chug from room to room.

PLANES: The fun is in the flying plane, but our lease requires it for insurance purposes, Sawyer said.

The academy provides members with a liability policy because losing control of a plane is always a possibility. "Some of these planes travel in excess of 200 miles per hour. You sure don't want one to hit you," he said.

Club members can be found flying at their field just about every Sunday, and it is a family affair.

"We're pretty family-oriented," Sawyer said. "We have club picnics where we go out and fly, and cook hot dogs and hamburgers, and just make a day of it with the family."

The club is involved in the community. Members have flown in air shows and participate in an annual show at the Big Spring mall.

Last year Sawyer was invited to the public library's Book It program for children. They were studying air, space and flight. Demonstrations were given on how the planes operate.

One of Sawyer's roles in the club is trainer. Because the likelihood of crashing is great for a novice flier, learning with someone more experienced is very important.

"Unless you just have an unlimited budget, it's almost impossible to learn on your own. It's best to get somebody to help you," he said.

To train, two sets of controls can be wired together. The trainer gets the plane in the air, levels it off, and pulls a spring-loaded switch on his control box that allows the trainee to fly the plane with his control. Should the trainee get in trouble, the trainer can release the switch on his control box and assume command of the plane instantly, Sawyer said.

"It keeps us from crashing a lot of planes," Sawyer said.

Although usually thought of as a hobby, there is a competitive side to model airplanes. Worldwide competitions are held each year and everything from hand-launched rubber-band-propelled gliders to high- speed aerobatics planes can be seen.

The fun for most people, though, is simply in the mystery and serenity of flying. "We don't do a lot of competing. Mostly we just go out and enjoy ourselves, and fly," Sawyer said. "Fly for fun."

CARS: RC racing has wide appeal

woman can be just as competitive as a man, and a kid can be more competitive than any of us. It just depends on getting accustomed to your equipment."

A beginner can get started for about two-hundred and fifty dollars with good used equipment, and five-hundred dollars with new equipment. That initial investment makes one ready to race and includes electronic controls, a body, wheels, a motor, extra gears, a couple of battery packs, and a charger. The sky is the limit when it comes to upgrading options though. Items like ball-bearings, hot motors, and high dollar battery packs can be added, all in the pursuit of speed.

Radio controlled racing is both hobby and sport.

"It's a hobby because you build the equipment that you race and you maintain it, so it requires time like a hobby," Madry said. "When you get out to these races and see these guys competing, though - it's a sport. You put 10 idiots with five-hundred to one-thousand dollars a piece worth of equipment on the track and say go - and watch! Its a sport my friend!"

Races are four minute heats in which 6 to 8 miniature hot rods maneuver around a dirt track with bumps, jumps, banks, and turns. 'Turn marshals', as they are called, are stationed around the track to flip over cars should they wind up on their backs.

And although a car can be modified in a variety of ways, no matter what someone does to their car mechanically, driving skill takes over "at the time you say go."

Madry commented, "The beauty of off road is that you're not necessarily racing against the guy next to you, you're running against the clock - how quickly, how well you can negotiate the track. In off road the track evens up everybody."

If RC racing does not sound competitive enough so far then consider this. Points accumulated based on race standings in sanctioned local and regional compititions can make a person eligible to race in the National Qualifiers in Dallas. Quite a bit of money can be won by the winners of the bigger races, and corporate sponsorships can be had as well. The Big Spring Radio Control club has received much support from the city. "The city was infinitely helpful" in the construction of the track by providing dirt from the local landfill. The club's lease requirements at Comanche Trail Park are simply that insurance be kept up on the track and that the city receives $10 per year per club member, which is the cost of a membership.

Members have a voice in what happens with the track, and are given the combination to the locks at the track so that they can practice any time they may desire.

Steve Madry says about The Big Spring Radio Control club, "Big Spring has always been a town that has had very little for anyone to do. This is a golden opportunity for some good, clean fun that anyone can get involved in. We want everyone involved in it. The city of Big Spring needs more of this kind of thing. The guys that fly the planes and we that drive the radio controlled cars and trucks are out there to help anybody at anytime who is interested in this kind of sport. All someone has to do is pick up the phone and call, and we'll take them by the hand and show them what to buy and what not to buy. And we'll let them come out and try our stuff and see if they enjoy the sport or want to even get into it."

When asked what reasons he could give for people to get involved in RC racing, Steve Madry gave three.

First of all, "Why not?"

Second, "The people we deal with out there are some of the nicest, most helpful, easiest to get along with people you would ever imagine being around, and they are from all walks of life. I've got doctors, lawyers, and kids that support their habit through a paper route - everybody."

The third reason involved personal behavior: "I haven't stepped into a bar or dance hall in the year I've been involved in it. My wife doesn't have to worry about where I am. I'm either home or at the track!"

Governor frees retarded man who confessed to murder he didn't commit

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — A retarded man who was sent to prison 8 1/2 years ago for murder won a pardon Friday after the governor concluded that police "manipulated a weak mind" into confessing to a crime he didn't commit.

"I didn't do what they said. I'm just glad it's over," Johnny Lee Wilson, 30, said after passing through the towering iron gates of Jefferson City Correctional Center. Wiping away tears, the former school janitor said: "I feel wonderful, absolutely wonderful."

Wilson had admitted beating an elderly woman to death and setting her house on fire. He pleaded no-contest in 1987 to avoid the possibility of the death penalty and was sentenced to life in prison without parole.

On Thursday, however, Gov. Mel Carnahan concluded after a year-long review that investigators in a small Ozarks town fed Wilson details about the 1986 slaying of Pauline Martz, 79.

"It is clear that Johnny Lee Wilson's confession is false and inaccurate. Furthermore, there is no evidence to corroborate or substantiate it. Quite to the contrary," Carnahan said.

The governor agreed with Wilson's supporters that he confessed to please police. Investigators "manipulated a weak mind," Carnahan said. Wilson's IQ is estimated to be in the 60s or 70s.

Martz was bound and gagged, beaten and left to die in her burning home in Aurora in what appeared to be a robbery. Authorities questioned Wilson after a witness said he made incriminating comments at the murder scene, which drew a crowd in the town of 6,400.

But the witness who reported the statements later recanted, and murderer Chris Brownfield, serving a life sentence in Kansas, told Carnahan by letter that he killed Martz. He is in prison for a slaying committed in Kansas 16 days after Martz was killed.

However, Brownfield's account doesn't match many details in the case, and he has been unwilling to come to Missouri to repeat his claim without getting immunity.

Carnahan said he doesn't know who killed Martz. And Lawrence County Prosecutor Robert George, whose predecessor put Wilson put behind bars, wouldn't say whether he will reopen the case.

George had opposed Wilson's release and said he was disappointed by the pardon, but added: "I respect the office of the governor, and the governor's authority to take this action."

Transcripts of Wilson's interrogation showed that police officers repeatedly told him facts that only the killer and authorities might know and that the suggestible Wilson readily blended them into his responses.

"It was clear that Wilson was ready to agree with whatever the interrogator asked or stated," said Joe Bednar, the governor's legal counsel who reviewed the case.

According to the transcripts, Wilson was asked at one point to describe what Martz was wearing and responded: "A blouse of some sort, I can't tell what color."

"Try to think," said the officer, who wasn't identified. "These little details are important, and it's important that, that you tell the true story as most accurate as possible. Because that will show that you're trying to tell the truth. This is an important time."

Wilson: "I'll say it was white, probably a white or bluish blouse."

Officer: "OK. How about bluish. I'll go for that.

Wilson: "Yeah."

Officer: "How about bluish-green maybe?"

Wilson: "Yeah."

Bednar said Martz wasn't wearing a blouse at all. A sleeve made of sweatshirt material was found on the burned remains.

The transcripts show officers telling Wilson other details that he later offered back to them, such as how she was bound and where the body was found.

Commissioner orders savings on liability premiums

AUSTIN (AP) — Insurance companies must lower liability premiums a total of $428.7 million next year to pass on to consumers savings from sweeping civil justice reforms.

Texas Insurance Commissioner Elton Bomer announced the reductions Friday, but both the industry and consumers groups were less than satisfied by the figures.

"The decision I announce today is one of the first steps in ensuring that Texas consumers reap all benefits of lower costs to insurers as a result of tort reform," Bomer said.

The 1995 Texas Legislature mandated the rollbacks so consumers would benefit from civil justice reforms expected to lower costs to insurance companies.

The lion's share of the savings will be felt by Texas businesses, which are subjected to the most liability and the most lawsuits, Bomer said.

"Tort reform is aimed primarily at businesses and commercial enterprise," Bomer said. "Almost two-thirds of the savings are expected to go to businesses, which ultimately will result in lower costs to consumers."

Consumers groups, however, were disappointed by the reductions.

When the rollback was debated by lawmakers, the Insurance Department estimated that savings would be as high as $864 million next year, including a reduction of about 15 percent in personal auto liability rates.

Bomer approved a 6 percent reduction in auto liability.

"This is your classic bait-and-switch scheme," said Dan Lambe, program director of Texas Citizen Action. "The insurance industry fooled us with promises of big savings and stuck us with weaker civil justice laws and minimal reductions in rates."

Rob Schneider, senior staff attorney for Consumers Union, accused Bomer of coddling the insurance industry.

"This was his one best chance to hold the industry accountable for their promises on tort reform. For all the consumers whose eyes were focused on this decision, the commissioner blinked," he said.

Bomer, however, said the initial figures were estimates based on an early draft of the rollback legislation, the timetable of which was later changed to phase in savings over five years. The commissioner will reexamine the rates annually until 2000, and he predicted the savings would eventually reach $864 million.

"We'll be working toward that number. This is a good installment on that," he said.

Rep. Mark Stiles, D-Beaumont, who authored the rollback legislation, supported Bomer's reductions.

"This reduction ... is not just going to be money back in people's pockets," Stiles said. "They are monies that are available to do other things in the state of Texas besides paying the high cost of insurance premiums that were a reflection of a tort system that was out of whack."

He said he looked forward to seeing more savings in the future.

"This is only the first year of an ongoing process that's going to take six years," he said.

Insurance companies also looked to the future, but with the hope that the imposed savings would be changed in their favor when the effects of reforms are better known.

"The weight of the evidence could easily have justified a more conservative set of rollback figures," said Rick Gentry, regional vice president of the Insurance Information Institute.

"In future years, as we gain actual experience under the reformed laws, the commissioner and his staff should have quantifiable loss experience to adjust the rollback figures," he said.

Bomer's rollbacks were generally at the high end or above the recommendations made last month by his staff, who recommended a total savings of about $341 million.

LIFE WATCH

Sweet stuff

You probably know that sugar can make you fat and help rot your teeth. But some experts now suggest that eating excessive sugar could age you prematurely and shorten your lifespan.

So far, most of the research has been done on animals. But it is thought that the same detrimental biochemical changes from table sugar suffered by laboratory animals would pertain to humans.

According to a series of recent studies by Roger B. McDonald and colleagues at the University of California at Davis, rats allowed to eat as much table sugar as they wanted had early deaths. Rats allowed only 60 percent as much table sugar lived about 35 percent longer than the rats who ate freely of sugar.

Just restricting calories can increase survival, but that was not the whole story. Rats eating equal calories in starchy carbohydrates also lived about 20 percent longer than the heavy sugar eaters. Researchers theorize that excessive sugar ultimately generates free radical chemicals that mess up proteins and accelerate the aging process, causing disease and premature death.

Ginseng vs. cancer

Ginseng is a root that has been used for thousands of years in Asian cultures as a health and longevity tonic. Ginseng may also help prevent certain cancers, according to new evidence.

Researchers at the Korea Cancer Center Hospital in Seoul asked patients with cancer and without cancer whether or not they used ginseng. The finding: Those who consumed ginseng had only half the risk of particular cancers as nonconsumers — notably cancers of the mouth, pharynx, esophagus, stomach, colon, rectum, liver, pancreas, larynx, lung and ovary.

Further, the longer the subjects had used ginseng, the lower their cancer risk. Using ginseng only one year reduced cancer risk slightly and it declined progressively over 20 years of use.

Interestingly, not all types of ginseng worked. Most apt to reduce cancer chances were fresh ginseng extract, white ginseng extract, white ginseng powder and red ginseng. Oddly, fresh ginseng slices, fresh ginseng juice and white ginseng tea were not tied to reduced cancer risk. Other laboratory and animal studies suggest that ginseng contains antioxidant chemicals that may help it could help ward off cancer.

Fat chance

Sure, you're cutting down on fatty snacks. But are you really cutting down on calories? There are more reduced-fat, low-fat and no-fat snacks in supermarkets than ever before. But some of them have nearly as many calories as the full-fat versions.

So says the Mayo Clinic Health Letter. One example: 2 tablespoons of regular peanut butter has 17 fat grams; the same amount of reduced-fat peanut butter has 12 grams of fat. But both have the same number of calories — 190. Similarly, 1 ounce of regular pretzels has 2 grams of fat; fat-free pretzels have none. Still, both contain 110 calories. Some cookie companies cut the fat, but use more sugar to buck up taste. Consequently calorie-savings are sometimes insignificant, so you can gain weight even though you eat fat-free or reduced-fat snacks.

Mayo Clinic's experts note that fruits and vegetables are still better snacks than reduced-fat cookies or chips. If you want nutrition-packed low-fat, low-calorie snacks, go for strawberries, carrot sticks and apples.

Hip fractures

ATLANTA (AP) — Hip fractures pose a serious health risk, especially for older women, according to the Arthritis Foundation.

To help reduce hip fractures, the foundation recommends these steps: walk for exercise (this alone can reduce the risk of fracture by 30 percent); reduce caffeine intake; have your vision checked; maintain a healthy body weigh; and stop smoking. The foundation also notes a doctor can assess the overall risk for hip fractures with an interview and a simple physical examination.

Air Force fitness program boosts trainees

By Don Driver
Hearst News Service

SAN ANTONIO — Candi Dotson's gray jogging shorts and T-shirt were soaked with sweat like those of the other 400 basic trainees on the Physical Conditioning Pad at Lackland AFB as the recruits went through the paces of their morning workout.

"Hey, airman, quit hitting the ground!" a training instructor barked at another recruit, who was flopping on the turf during a push-up drill. "Any day now, get down there, any day."

Dotson, an 18-year-old recruit from Ninety-Six, S.C., was in the final stretch of the six-week basic course featuring a new physical conditioning regimen that some recruits actually like.

"When I got here I had hardly any upper body strength," Dotson said. "But I think I've accomplished more under the new PT (physical training) system than I would have under the old. I feel a lot more in shape."

That's military music to the ears of Air Force brass who are into the eighth month of a revamped physical conditioning program for recruits.

The Air Force wants the recruits to be not only more physically fit when they leave basic training but armed with the skills and desire to carry their conditioning program throughout their military career and on into civilian life.

"We're not just focusing on physical fitness per se, we're trying to create lifestyle changes," said Col. Wolf Gesch, commander of the 737th Training Group at Lackland Air Force Base, which oversees training for all Air Force recruits.

"We're seeing up to 50 percent improvement in some of our folks in physical conditioning," he said. "If you experience that kind of change (as a recruit) you'll be motivated."

Gesch recalls that in the early 1970s, the Air Force fashioned its physical training program after that used in the Canadian armed forces.

"How ironic that now, in 1995, the Canadian Air Force recently came to visit us and took back with them lessons learned on how the U.S. Air Force now does physical conditioning," he said.

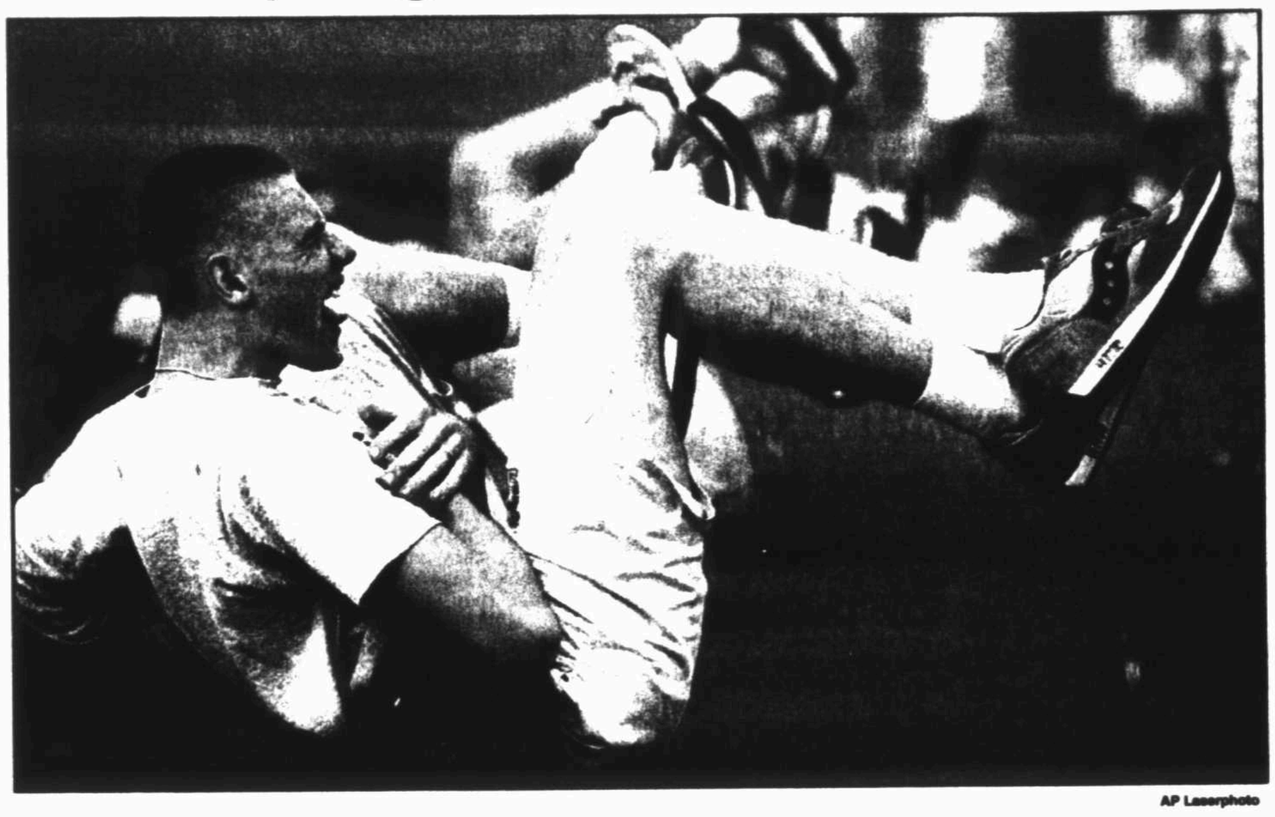

The changes are part of an overhaul of the Air Force basic training regimen begun in 1992. Lackland, the only basic training site for the service, annually graduates 35,000 airmen. Training takes 30 days and has an attrition rate of 8 percent.

A survey revealed that many units reported recent basic training graduates were in poor physical condition. The Air Force began the new physical conditioning program in January to address that issue.

Recruits have been prohibited from smoking during their basic course for years. But now they also receive instruction on health, nutrition and diet; the former 1-1/2-mile run has been increased to 2 miles; and the "daily dozen" calisthenics have been replaced by a 20-station exercise routine geared to total-body training.

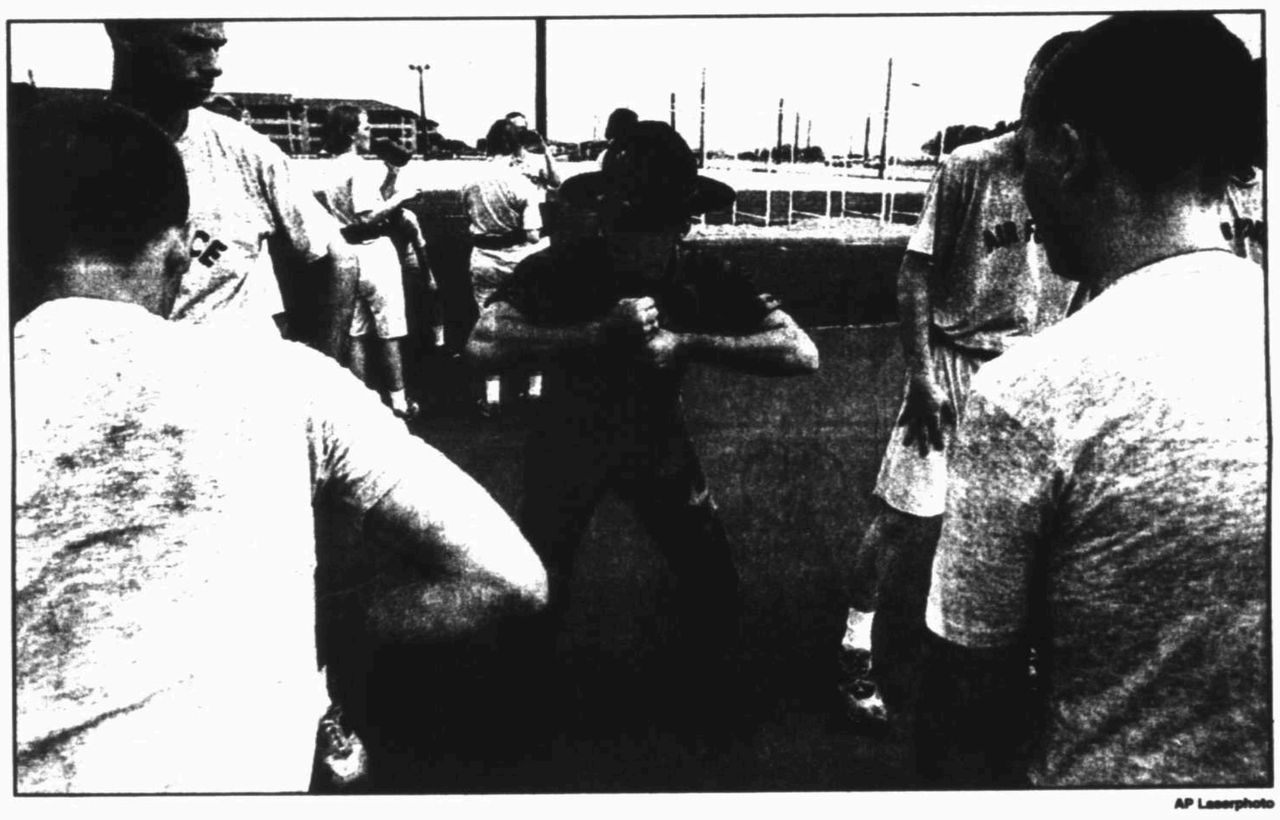

The PC Pad, as it is called, is a poured urethane surface which recruits find more flexible than the hard South Texas

Experts worry about risk factor of 'wonder drug'

By Cathryn Creno
N.Y. Times News Service

PHOENIX — It's a one-shot jet-lag remedy, estrogen suppressant and sex-drive stimulant, according to "Newsweek" and three new big-selling books. The hormone supplement melatonin is being bought off health-food store shelves faster than clerks can restock it.

But is melatonin really an antidote to age-related hormone problems, as suggested in books like "The Melatonin Miracle," by Drs. Walter Pierpaoli and William Regelson? And is it really safe to pop a nightly hormone supplement the way you might take vitamin C?

Many doctors — and even some alternative-health practitioners — are warning patients to be cautious and not believe everything they read about the so-called melatonin miracle.

"I'm very pro-alternative medicine, but melatonin is far too powerful a drug to be taken lightly," said Dr. Samuel Benjamin, project director of the Arizona Center for Health and Medicine in Phoenix. "What they are selling is a synthetic, not a natural hormone, and there is no clear evidence that it is safe."

Benjamin said he does not plan to recommend melatonin to his patients unless more conclusive scientific research on the pill's safety appears. "Right now, what we know is melatonin can cause nausea and it can suppress ovarian and testicular function."

But melatonin's influence on sex hormones is a plus to of Pierpaoli, an Italian physician and an expert on aging. While others are investigating melatonin's potential as an ovulation-blocking birth-control pill, Pierpaoli believes it can be a midlife sex rejuvenator.

"Melatonin promises not only to maintain and restore an interest in sex, but, our research has shown, it actually helps rejuvenate sex hormones," he writes.

However, Kareen O'Brien, dean of clinical sciences at the Southwest College of Naturopathic Medicine in Scottsdale, Ariz., said she would suggest patients first experiment with less potent remedies, like Chinese herbal tonics.

"Melatonin might be the solution for one person, but not the next," she said.

Children benefit from physical exam at start of adolescence

By Dr. Paula Prezioso
Associated Press

It can take several years for an adolescent to go through puberty. In girls, the process generally begins between the ages of 9 and 12. Physical maturation in boys usually begins between the ages of 10 to 14. As they go through puberty, adolescents generally experience growth spurts, development of the genitals and emergence of secondary sexual characteristics such as facial, underarm and pubic hair.

It is common for young men and women to become a little embarrassed about their bodies as they develop. At this time, they may feel more comfortable talking with a physician of the same gender. To make discussion easier for youngsters, the doctor can set aside time to talk first with the parent in the room, then with the child alone and finally again with the parent present. It may also be preferable to have the parent of the same gender accompany the child to the doctor's office to make it easier to include the parent in the discussion. These discussions about the physiology of puberty can reassure youngsters and correct rumors about what is and what is not normal as their bodies mature.

Commonly asked questions tend to differ by gender. Young women usually have questions about menstruation. Doctors may discuss dietary supplements such as iron that is generally lost during menstruation. Doctors may also mention the importance of calcium intake for women during and after puberty.

Young men may ask about changes in their voices, when they can begin shaving and participation in weight lifting and other sports. Doctors generally discourage weight lifting until puberty is completed. There is a greater risk of injury during the maturation process since young muscle development isn't yet that of an adult.

Inviting the parent to discuss these issues afterward may encourage further talks about puberty after the visit to the doctor.

Laser treatment sometimes used to help people look better

By Dr. Vicki J. Levine
Associated Press

Laser light can help people look better. For a baby born with a disfiguring skin feature, a teen-ager who is having second thoughts about a highly visible tattoo, or an adult who develops brown skin spots caused by chronic sun exposure, laser therapy often can wipe the slate clean.

Lasers emit concentrated light rays that pack a lot of energy. That energy breaks the molecular bonds of pigments in skin lesions, which thus are broken down.

A port wine stain is such a lesion that can be treated by laser. It is an abnormal collection of blood vessels that can be present when a baby is born. Treatment with a pulsed dye laser — a laser is named by the material that emits the light — often can remove it successfully without scarring.

The same kind of laser can remove a hemangioma, a bright red spot caused by overgrowth of blood vessels, which also can develop at or after birth. For the brownish skin discolorations called cafe-au-lait spots, seen in infants and children, a ruby laser will be used.

Getting a tattoo might seem to be fun, but removing one is serious business. Older methods generally left a scar on the skin. Nowadays, for removal use either a ruby laser or a Nd-Yag laser is likely to be used. Since scarring is rare, complete removal may require six to ten sessions, done with injections of local anesthesia. The cost can run from $1,000 to $3,000. Single-color tattoos, such as the black tattoos sometimes applied by amateurs, are easiest to remove. Multicolored, professional tattoos are the hardest to treat with lasers.

A surprising number of people have tattoos these days, including women who have tattoos for cosmetic reasons, such as permanent eye liner, skin blush or lip liner, and then change their mind and seek removal.

"Liver spots" — brown spots resulting from sun exposure — generally can be removed in a single laser session per spot. One or more sessions might be needed to remove telangiecasias, the visible blood vessels sometimes present on the face of adults. The treatment rarely leaves a scar, but it can cause temporary purplish discoloration of the treated area, which goes away within two weeks.

Use of lasers to remove moles is controversial, primarily because a mole can give rise to the malignant form of skin cancer called melanoma. The physician will want to do a microscopic examination of a removed mole to check on the risk of melanoma. Ordinary surgery allows such an examination, but laser treatment doesn't.

The carbon dioxide lasers can be used to remove wrinkles, giving a laser version of a chemical peel. One theory is that the irritation caused by the laser bean stimulates the body to produce more collagen, the essential protein of the skin, thus smoothing away the wrinkles.

Most medical insurers do not cover such purely cosmetic use of lasers. Coverage might be available for treatment of congenital skin defects, however.

FITNESS: New Air Force is program fit for life ground.

(From 1C)

The pad can accommodate hundreds of trainees, who go through each exercise station in small groups for 30 seconds of exercise before a whistle blows, and they rush off to the next stop on the circuit.

"U.S. Air Force," they yell as they go through the exercises, about half of which involve the use of sandbags. The sandbags, weighing from 5 to 40 pounds, are cheaper and easier to maintain than weights.

And, based on advice from fitness experts, the morning physical fitness routine has been rescheduled until after breakfast, since trainees are stronger — and have fewer physical problems — after they have eaten.

"We didn't design the PC program with crusty old colonels sitting around a conference table," Gesch said, adding it was developed from recommendations by experts in the various fields.

In the last quarter, male recruits showed a 25 percent improvement in their conditioning, while women showed a 49 percent improvement, officials said.

Justin Needle used to play basketball in college and said the physical conditioning "has got me back to where I used to be" during his athletic days.

He is scheduled to go to language school after basic, and the training instructors are doing their best to help by giving him a whole new appreciation for words.

"When they're yelling at us, it's when we're doing something wrong," said the 21-year-old native of Utica, N.Y. "When we're doing something wrong, they have to correct us."

Recruits such as Heather Leet, 18, of Millinocket, Maine, have even grown to like the physical conditioning.

"It makes you feel good," she said. "You just feel revved up for the day — it's an excellent stress reliever."

An initial physical fitness assessment greets each recruit. Instead of running with their training flights during training, they are placed into one of five fitness-ability groups for their morning runs based on their fitness scores from that first test.

Under the former physical conditioning program, a recruit would run about 20 total miles during the six-week course. Now, they run between 60 and 80 miles during their training. The results: Run-time improvements are three to five times greater than under the former program, officials said.

A pilot program featuring "all healthy" foods recently ended at one training squadron's dining hall. Officials are awaiting a report on the findings.

Many of the training instructors — the Air Force doesn't use the term drill sergeants — have been to the Army's master fitness instructor course.

And while they still keep trainees on their toes, they spend much of their time during physical conditioning training leading by example and acting as coaches, said Tech. Sgt. Fred Driver, 31, the master fitness trainer for the 320th Training Squadron.

"I enjoy it — it makes it a lot more flexible," he said.

It's all part of the training instructor's job of taking kids — who show up with blue jeans, Air Jordans and the occasional Walkman around the neck — and turning them into disciplined airmen in six weeks.

"They're the heroes in this system," Gesch said of the training instructors. "They build our Air Force and its foundation every day. They're the best of the best."

Heart bypass may be safer than angioplasty for some diabetics

By Paul Recer

BETHESDA, Md. (AP) — Diabetic patients with blockages in two or more coronary arteries had a lower death rate when treated with bypass surgery than when treated with angioplasty, the National Institutes of Health announced recently.

NIH scientists reported that a five-year study showed that diabetic patients who received heart bypass surgery had a death rate of 19 percent, while those treated with angioplasty — a technique that reams out blocked arteries — had a death rate of 35 percent.

The announcement came in the form of a clinical alert, a process designed to notify physicians of major new medical findings.

"The findings from this study will have a major impact on the care of diabetes patients with coronary heart disease," said Dr. Claude Lenfant, director of the National Heart, Lung and Blood Institute. The institute recommended that surgeons use coronary artery bypass procedures instead of angioplasty for diabetic patients on drug therapy who have multiple artery blockages, and who have not before received either type of coronary surgery. The findings came from a study funded by the institute and involved 1,829 patients.

There are about 14 million Americans with diabetes and about 65 percent of them die from some form of heart or blood vessel disease. In 1993, physicians performed about 362,000 angioplasty procedures and about 309,000 bypass surgeries on general heart patients. Angioplasty costs about $15,000 while the cost of coronary artery bypass surgery is about $30,000.

Study finds that exercise can help beat the blues

By Ira Dreyfuss

WASHINGTON (AP) — Exercise does more than improve the body. It lifts the spirits, researchers say.

Exercise can help to fight depression, according to an article in a medical journal, The Physician and Sportsmedicine. Many doctors prescribe exercise along with drug treatment and psychotherapy, the report said.

However, a separate researcher cautions that not everyone can expect benefits, and he says the idea that exercise causes the improvement is not proved.

"Many physicians have started to use exercise as an important adjunct treatment," said the article's authors, Drs. George Nicoloff of St. Mary's Hospital, Grand Rapids, Mich., and Thomas L. Schwenk of the University of Michigan Medical School, Ann Arbor.

Previous studies have found that clinically depressed patients who start exercising have improved moods, the review article said. One study of nine patients in psychotherapy and nine who started to run found that running improved mental health scores as much as therapy did. Other researchers who reviewed data from many studies found that exercise combined with therapy was better than therapy alone.

However, the benefits don't show up in all forms of depression, said researcher Bill Morgan, director of the Sport Psychology Laboratory at the University of Wisconsin. They seem not to apply to bipolar depression, where periods of depression are offset with periods of intense excitement, he said. "I am unaware of any compelling, systematic evidence" that physical activity affects bipolar depression, Morgan said.

And the journal article reported that exercise does not work better than tricyclics, a common form of anti-depression drug. It cited two studies in which the addition of exercise to drug therapy made no meaningful difference.

To make exercise work, the program has to be one the exerciser can stick with, so Nicoloff and Schwenk advised other doctors against ordering a tough regimen. Mild to moderately depressed people may benefit from only a little exercise, they said.

The type of exercise can vary, because research has not found a specific regime that's psychologically best, the article said. However, the same amount of aerobic activity that works for the nondepressed seem to help the depressed, it said. For example, one set of guidelines for psychological benefit calls for two to five workouts a week for 30 to 40 minutes each at 60 percent to 70 percent of maximal heart rate, plus five to 10 minutes each of warmup and cooldown, it said.

Patients with depression probably are more easily discouraged by exercise, so doctors should keep close track of how their patients are doing with the exercise program and keep them motivated, the article said.

Researchers don't know why exercise can fight depression, but they have some ideas, Nicoloff and Schwenk said. One idea is that exercise gives the patient something to think about besides his or her problems. Another is that exercise is something of a triumph, offering a way to gain control over part of a person's life. Exercise may also cause physiological changes in chemicals that affect the brain, producing a feeling of euphoria, the article said.

Exercise not only helps to improve the moods of the depressed, it also seems to help ward off depression, the report said. One group of researchers found that exercise reduced depression ratings in the depressed and in the healthy.

Morgan, however, argues that there is no cause-and-effect proof that exercise battles depression. Patients may improve simply because they are being offered exercise as therapy and therefore believe they should improve, he said. Researchers have difficulty factoring out this possibility from their studies, and doctors face a similar problem in therapy.

Morgan also does not think much of the idea that exercise must work or physicians wouldn't prescribe it. That's not proof, either, he said. And conventional medical belief isn't necessarily right, he added: physicians once prescribed bloodletting.

Painful heel syndrome common with aging

By Dr. Michael L. Freedman

NEW YORK (AP) — If your feet hurt when you walk, it might be because of aging heels.

The pads of fatty tissue on the heels of the feet get thinner with age. The step-by-step pressure on the heel as you walk can cause continual pain, especially for people who are overweight or do work that has them on their feet most of the day.

The condition is common enough to have its own name: painful heel syndrome. About 3 million cases of painful heel syndrome are diagnosed every year, almost all of them in people 40 and older. The good news is that the pain comes and goes of itself and that bouts of it can be eased by relatively simple self-treatment.

Start with good shoes, built for walking and with rubber or thick-cushioned heels. Women should not wear high heels or thin-soled flats. Shock-absorbing heel pads or molded inserts can help ease persistent pain.

Physically, one cause of painful heel syndrome is inflammation of the tough band of protective fiber on the sole of the foot. Plantar fasciitis, as the condition is called, occurs when the muscles attached to the plantar fascia tissue at the heel tear away because of stress.

The pain tends to be worse first thing in the morning or after a long period sitting down. It lessens after a half hour or so of walking. The pain can be relieved by massaging the heel with ice for five minutes or by taking over-the-counter pain relievers.

You can help it go away by taking as much pressure as possible off the foot, for example, by switching from jogging to an exercise such as swimming or cycling. Special stretching exercises for the foot can be done 5 or 10 minutes a day.

Generally the painful heel will get better of itself in about nine months or so, but persistent pain calls for a visit to the doctor. Foot pain can be caused by a variety of other conditions, such as neuritis, arthritis and tendinitis, which a doctor can diagnose and treat effectively.

If you want to join the fastest-growing segment of the American population — people over 80 — you can learn something from those who are already in it.

A study of older people, average age 89, who were living in their own or relatives' homes found a number of characteristics in common.

These older people kept active in community affairs, the church or politics.

They had frequent contacts with friends, neighbors and family, maintaining continuing social ties.

Their self-evaluation described their health as good, with more than half saying it had remained the same for at least five years.

And they showed the ability to adapt to the often painful changes that occur with age, such as the loss of loved ones and health problems such as arthritis and heart trouble.

Their mental health generally was good; only one in 10 had mild or moderate depression.

They had some help when it was needed. Three of four had difficulty with housework, shopping, personal grooming or transportation, and they were helped by members of their immediate family.

And they had one major fear, that they would someday be placed in a nursing home. The researchers who did the study said that special services tailored to the needs of people in this age group could allay that fear and save society money by keeping them in their own homes.

Cardiomyopathy is weakening of heart muscle

By Dr. Sydney J. Mehl
Associated Press

When people drink too much alcohol or sniff cocaine, a potentially fatal heart condition called cardiomyopathy may be lurking in the background.

Cardiomyopathy is a weakening of the heart muscle that has many causes. Among the most prominent these days are drug abuse and alcoholism.

An important cause of cardiomyopathy can be infection by a virus or a parasite.

Other causes include the toxic effects of cancer chemotherapy or genetic factors.

One rare cardiomyopathy occurs in some women following childbirth. Called post-partum cardiomyopathy; it can go into remission after a short period of time.

In South and Central America, a frequent cause of cardiomyopathy is Chagas' disease, a parasitic infection that has affected millions of people.

But perhaps the most common cause of cardiomyopathy in the United States today is alcoholism.

It may result from a direct toxic effect of alcohol on the heart muscle or from the malnutrition that may accompany excessive drinking.

Giving up alcohol can reduce the risk of cardiomyopathy and may limit its progression when it has already begun.

Some cases of cardiomyopathy are described as idiopathic, meaning that doctors simply don't know the cause.

The symptoms of cardiomyopathy include fatigue, shortness of breath, swelling of the legs caused by an accumulation of fluid, palpitations of the heart and sometimes chest pain.

Most symptoms are due to the fact that the heart isn't pumping blood as efficiently as it should.

Sometimes that's because the heart becomes dilated, as the muscle is abnormally stretched — sometimes because the muscle becomes abnormally thick.

Treatment of dilated cardiomyopathy can start with identification of the cause.

If it's alcoholism or drug abuse, the obvious first step is to get the patient to stop the causative agent.

Medical treatment includes reduction of salt intake and a variety of drugs that strengthen the heart or make it easier to pump blood vasodilators, digitalis, medications that prevent abnormalities of heart rhythm, and diuretics that flush fluid out of the body.

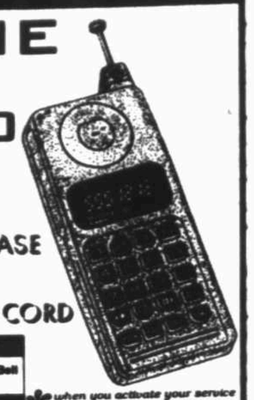

Cardiomyopathy can lead to congestive heart failure, a condition in which the body fills with fluid because the heart progressively diminishes in its ability to pump blood.

One final option for some patients with severe heart failure caused by cardiomyopathy is a heart transplant.

'Shaq attack' would just be too much for Hakeem's injured back

NEW YORK — The Shaq attack may be too much for Hakeem's back.

Citing a strained lower back, Hakeem Olajuwon on Friday pulled out of a one-on-one contest with Shaquille O'Neal. The pay-per-view television show from Atlantic City was canceled.

Olajuwon said he was "extremely disappointed" to miss Saturday's heavily promoted matchup, which had $1 million in prize money at stake.

The Houston Rockets center injured his back about a week ago while in London to promote a basketball tournament.

In a statement Friday, O'Neal said he was "disappointed and sorry ... about Hakeem's injury. I hope he recovers soon."

The event would have been the first on-court meeting between the two centers since the Rockets swept O'Neal and the Orlando Magic in the National Basketball Association finals last June.

Elizabeth Taylor to head back to surgery.

NEW YORK — First, Elizabeth Taylor had her left hip replaced. Then she had her right hip replaced. Now, she's headed back for more surgery.

Taylor summoned her doctor to her California home two weeks ago to show him that her second hip replacement had left her with an exaggerated limp, columnist Liz Smith reported Friday.

The actress, who has used a cane recently, had surgery to replace her right hip in June, just 15 months after doctors replaced her left hip. She injured the right hip while doing aerobics in the pool of her Bel-Air estate.

"I will not be a cripple," Taylor told Smith. "I will not use crutches or a walker. I will get over this and get on with my life."

Taylor spokeswoman Sharine Sheikh confirmed the actress will have surgery in several weeks but wouldn't provide details.

Earlier this month, Taylor, 63, was hospitalized for three days with an irregular heartbeat.

VIENNA, Austria — "Beauty and The Beast" made a big hit in a city better known for Johann Strauss and opera.

The Tony Award-winning musical, which is based on the Disney animated feature, drew standing ovations and loud cheers at its Thursday night opening.

Walt Disney chief Michael Eisner, magician David Copperfield and director Roman Polanski were among those attending the European premiere and a lavish party at Vienna's resplendent, mock-Gothic city hall.

With musicals increasingly becoming big business in Austria and Germany, the producers spent an estimated $2.7 million for a faithful recreation of the Broadway hit.

LONDON — A rugby star linked to Princess Diana is separating from his wife of 15 months.

Newspapers last month reported a relationship between Will Carling, captain of England's World Cup rugby team, and Diana, estranged wife of the heir to the British throne.

Carling, 29, was photographed visiting her Kensington Palace home.

The English Rugby Union, announcing the Carlings' separation on Friday, said "no one else is involved" in the decision.

Six weeks ago, Julia Carling had vowed the marriage would survive her husband's friendship with Princess Diana.

"It hurts me very much to face losing my husband in a manner which has become outside my control," said Mrs. Carling, 30.

Diana separated from Prince Charles in 1992.

PORTLAND, Ore. — Oregonians have apparently read enough about the travails of Sen. Bob Packwood.

"The Packwood Report," which contains the full text of documents made public three weeks ago by the Senate Ethics Committee, was delivered to bookstores this week. Sales of the $10 book have been anything but brisk.

"We've sold less than 10," said Powell's Bookstore night manager Chris Faatz. "People are probably satiated. God knows I am and I hope Bob is."

Packwood resigned Sept. 8 after the committee recommended his ouster over allegations of sexual and official misconduct.

Rebels down 'Dogs 45-3 in 4-5A opener

■ Midland Lee makes big plays in win over cross-town rival Midland High to remain undefeated for the season.

By Stewart Doreen
Sports Writer

Friday night's District 4-5A opener between Midland High and Midland Lee was all about big plays.

Lee made a lot of them and Midland High couldn't make any in the 45-3 Rebel win at Memorial Stadium.

"They got people who can make big plays," MHS coach Ronnie Reeger said. "They come at you with good athletes. I thought we got whipped."

Midland Lee, 4-0 for the season and 1-0 in district play, spanked Midland High for 522 total yards on the night and 454 on the ground.

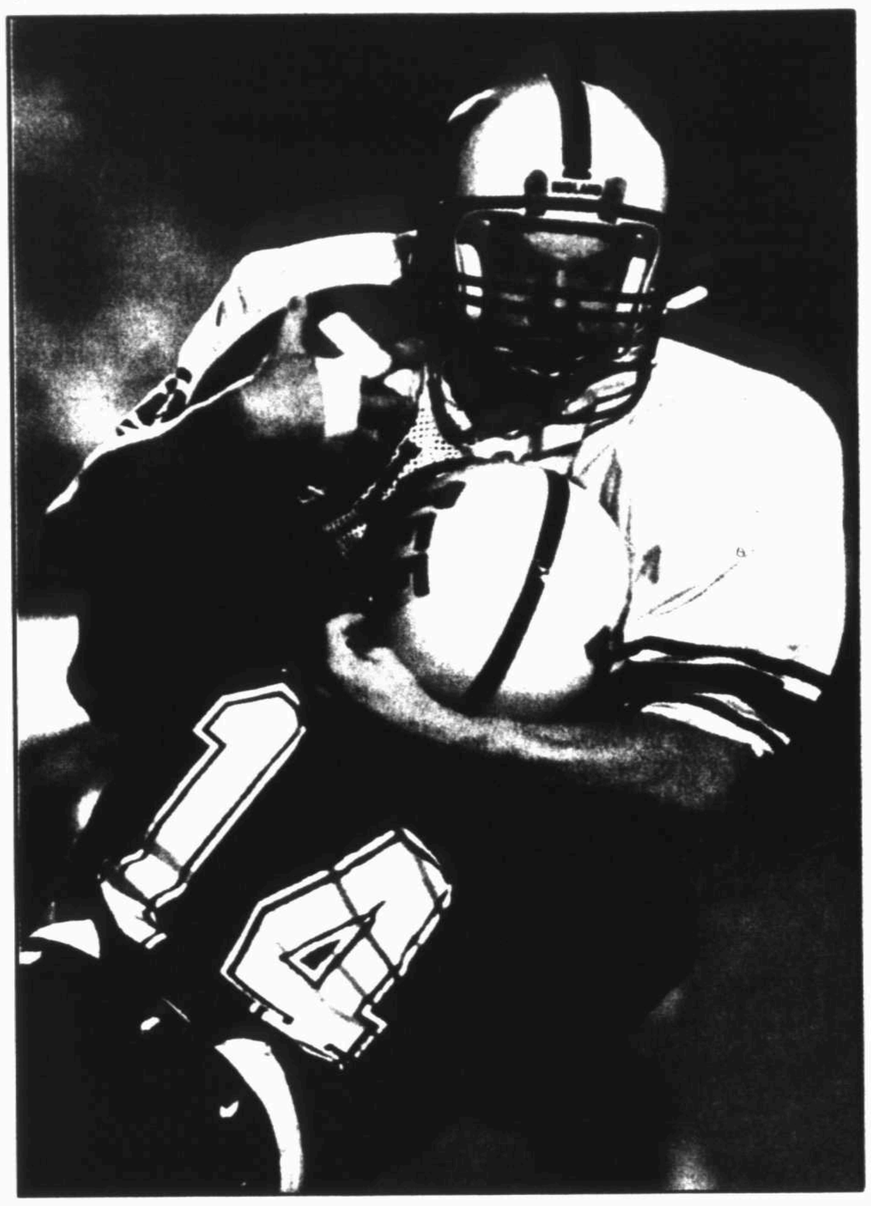

Leading the way for the Rebels was Alex Strambler. The Rebels' starting running back went into the game trailing teammate and back-up running back, Josh Norman, in rushing yards. Strambler, who said on Wednesday that he would get his chances Friday, made the most of those chances and rushed 16 times for 226 yards and three touchdowns. It was Strambler's first 200-yard game and second 100-yard game of the year.

Backfield mate, Stephen Hunter, also got in the act with six carries for 116 yards, the first 100-yard game of his career. The fullback also had a key 40-yard pass reception in the first quarter to set Lee's first touchdown. Norman, however, said the credit for Friday night's onslaught was the performance of the big guys up front.

"The line did a good job up front and we picked up," Hunter said. "I was happy with what I did but I give thanks to the line because they blew big holes for us to run into."

Those plays started in the first quarter as Midland Lee took its second drive of the game and ran into a Midland High defense that seemed ready for a 60-

Lee offense silences critics

Strambler, Hunter turn in career games for Rebs

By Terry Williamson

The story at the beginning of the football season said that Midland Lee would be a top-notch defensive team, but could they score. One figured they would have to win games by scores like 7-0.

Well, after Lee's 45-3 bombing of Midland High Friday night, the Rebels are averaging 51.5 points per outing on offense and keep rolling up numbers that are only fitting of a powerhouse.

Powerhouse, or not, the Rebels are generating huge offensive statistics and they just keep getting better. With a big play offense Friday, Lee generated a season high 522 yards of offense and got career highs from both tailback Alex Strambler, who cracked the 200-yard barrier (226) for the first time ever, and fullback Stephen Hunter, who had his first 100-yard rushing game (116).

Strambler never doubted that Lee could turn huge offensive numbers.

"We work hard in practice, we have a good line, we have a great backup tailback (Josh Norman, who led the league in rushing for the first three weeks of the season) and a great coaching staff," Strambler said. "What more do you need?

"People can say what they want, but when you put an opponent on the field with us, we are going to play hard."

Strambler, the starting tailback for Lee, has almost had to live in the shadow of the sophomore Norman, who got the most yards in mop-up roles of Lee's early lopsided victories. Strambler promised that his numbers would rise once district play started. A career best isn't a bad way to start.

"We've worked hard for this and it's paying off," Strambler said. "I owe it all to our offensive line."

Hunter was replaced as the team's fullback a year ago by smallish Theo Macklin, but he has returned in a big way to the starting lineup. He now has that 100-yard game, including a back breaking 80-yard TD run in the third quarter of play.

"This really feels good," Hunter said. "The line just had huge holes for me. On the touchdown, I just read the blocks and cut back and it was there. I just

Permian extends OHS streak to 31

By Sean Wallace
Sports Writer

ODESSA — The Permian Panthers got a wake-up call in a near loss to Amarillo last week. This week it was lights out for Odessa High.

The No. 2 Panthers rolled up 388 yards rushing and controlled the entire second half, coming away with a 26-7 win over Odessa High in both team's District 4-5A opener at Ratliff Stadium.

A capacity crowd of 19,500 saw the state's second-ranked team by the Associated Press get 220 yards from Ja'Quay Wilburn and 106 from L.C. Ward, the first time the Panthers have had two 100-yard rushers against Odessa High since 1988.

The win extends Permian's (4-0, 1-0) unbeaten streak over Odessa High to 31 games after both teams entered the contest unbeaten for the first time in their 37 meetings. The loss dropped the Bronchos to 3-1 and 0-1.

Odessa High's LaQueencey Williams, who came into the game as the district's leading rusher, was held to 84 yards on 19 carries. He had only two carries over 12 yards.

"He's a great ball player and he's got a good offensive line, so that's a credit to our defense."

The Bronchos stayed with the Panthers through the first half and were only down by five (12-7) at the break, thanks to some clock mismanagement by Permian. The Panthers, not wanting a repeat performance of what happened against Amarillo and two weeks ago against College Station A&M Consolidated, scored on its first possession of the second half and never looked back.

"When we came into halftime two weeks ago (against A&M Consolidated), I told them there were 17 points on the board, and three of them we gave to A&M. Tonight I gave up seven right before the half," Permian head coach Randy Mayes said. "There were some miscues in the first half on both sides of the ball and I said 'if you do something bad, you've got to go out there and do something good in the second half.' They did that and that was the key to winning."

The first time the Panthers got the ball in the second half, Wilburn got loose on a 52-yard touchdown run, his second 50-yard score of the night.

"Buddy (Brooks) and (David) Bobo did a good job of making sure of where they were getting lined up and we tried to attack from there," Mayes said of his offensive linemen.

Permian's final score came with 7:34 left in the game on a 1-yard plunge by Ward. The score was set up by a 44-yard pass from Jeff Dinger to Jeremy Marin.

The Panthers used their ball-control offense and rushing attack in the first half to perfection, rolling up 210 yards on the ground and taking a five-point halftime lead.

Rankin flat, but tops Bearkats in Class A tilt

■ Red Devils end two-game losing streak with a hard-fought 12-6 win over Garden City.

By Tom Ruiz
MRT Correspondent

RANKIN — During the late 1980's and early 90's the Rankin Red Devils and Garden City Bearkats met in some epic battles with a district titles and playoff berths oftne on the line.

This year both teams just are seeking some type of respectability. These once proud programs have fallen on hard times lately.

But the Red Devils took their first step towards rebuilding with a hard fought 12-6 win over the 0-4 Bearkats here Friday night.

Rankin's task wasn't pretty, they accumulated 90 yards of penalties. "We played flat for some reason" explained Rankin coach Greg Althof.

But the Red Devils came up with the big plays when they needed them.

In the first quarter Garden City had driven from their own 50 yard line to the Rankin 20. And on third and eight, Scott Alaniz stepped in front of a Bradley Batla pass to halt the Bearkat drive.

On Garden City's second possession of the second quarter, the Rankin defense made the game's second big play when James Gaines received a gift from Garden City's Bradley when he hit Gaines right in the hands with a pass and Gaines raced the other 40 yards with the interception for a 6-0 lead.

On their ensuing possession, the Bearkats went on a 16-play, 80-yard scoring drive. Allen Fuchs tied the score on a 5-yard run.

Rankin, however, opened the third quarter by kicking the ball out of bounds three consecutive times. The Bearkats took advantage of the penalties by starting at their own 34.

Two plays later Ryan Seidenberger blasted his way 42 yards to the Rankin 25.

Stanton turns away former coach in win over Colorado City

By Mike Butts
Sports Writer

STANTON — Stanton beat Colorado City 28-21 Friday. And the season will never be the same for coaches Mark Cotton and Bill Grissom.

Less reporters will call. Less friends will stop them in the halls to ask how they feel about this week's game. And less butterflies will churn their stomachs before kickoff.

Colorado City coach Grissom returned to Stanton after four years of head coaching there to go against Cotton, his former assistant for 17 years. Cotton's crew made the big plays on offense and Grissom's made the more costly errors as Stanton's Buffaloes improved to 4-0. Cotton called Grissom his "best friend in the world" after the game and both coaches were happy to get the reunion contest over with.

"I haven't slept well this week and I'm sure he hasn't either," Cotton said. "I think both of us could have gotten in a car at 7:30 and driven off and let somebody else play this game."

But they stayed, and Grissom isn't sure if he wants this to be a continuous rivalry.

"Maybe we can concentrate on doing some coaching now," Grissom said. "It's good to have something like that but we may not play each other again."

Cotton has taken what he learned from Grissom to build the Buffaloes into a versatile force on offense. Stanton

Final week sees bizarre baseball

NEW YORK (AP) — In this year of the wild card, there are plenty of signs that major league baseball is playing with less than a full deck.

As the strike-shortened season hits its final weekend, the Seattle Mariners might win their first division title — and then leave town. There was Kirby Puckett's beanball, Greg Harris' ambidextrous antics and Randy Myers' Bruce Lee impression.

It's all just a warmup for baseball's first eight-team postseason playoff — a development that has purists holding their noses and fans of potential wild cards holding their breath.

This short, strange season featured no 20-game winners, nobody with 200 hits. A pitcher from Japan started the All-Star Game. George Steinbrenner did not fire his manager. The California Angels entered the wild-card race by going 10-27 over the last six weeks, blowing a once-insurmountable 11-game division lead while keeping playoff hopes alive.

Replacing them in first place were the Mariners, although fans were leaving the soldout Kingdome wondering if their heroes were exiting, too. Despite their record, the Mariners expect to lose $30 million this year.

Their its owners will sell the team off unless a new stadium is built.

Strange? Not compared to Thursday, when the baseball gods watched bizarre ballpark happenings in both leagues.

— Montreal Expos pitcher Harris threw righty, lefty and righty again in a single inning against the Cincinnati Reds, making him the majors' first ambidextrous pitcher since Elton "Ice Box" Chamberlain in 1888.

Right-hander Harris retired Cincinnati's Reggie Sanders before sliding his special six-fingered glove onto the other hand and becoming left-hander Harris. His first pitch sailed to the screen as both dugouts jeered. But after walking Hal Morris, Harris retired an embarrassed Eddie Taubensee on a groundout.

Right-hander Harris closed out the inning by retiring Bret Boone.

— Randy Myers of the Chicago Cubs gave up a two-run homer in a tie game at Wrigley Field, angering 27-year-old bond trader John Murray. The fan jumped onto the field and charged Myers.

Bad move.

"I knew that Randy was going to do one of those martial arts things," said Cubs shortstop Shawon Dunston. "I was afraid Randy was going to snap his neck. I know Randy."

Murray did not know Randy, a 6-foot-1, 230-pound martial arts aficionado who delivered a forearm shiver and kept the fan in his custody until security led him away.

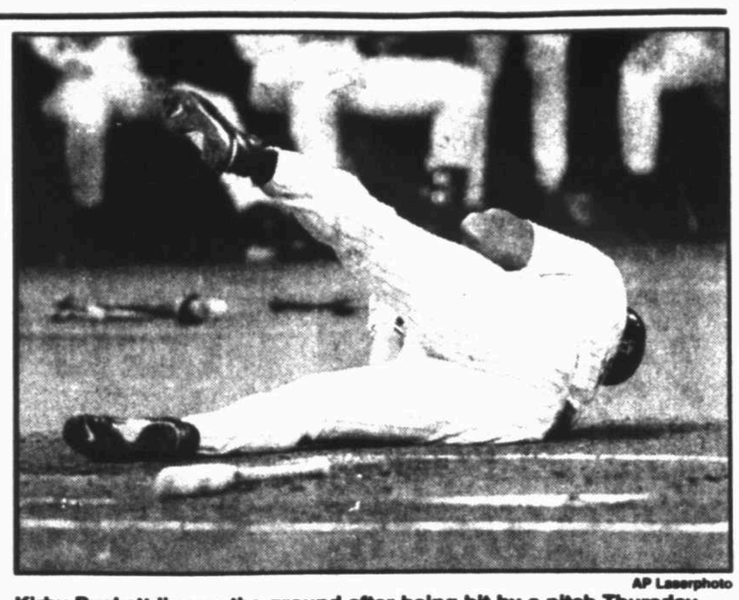

— Puckett suffered a broken jaw in a scary beaning that ended his season early. Cleveland right-hander Dennis Martinez drilled Puckett in the face, knocking two teeth loose.

Although it was an accidental beaning in a meaningless game, Minnesota starter Frank Rodriguez came out the next inning and hit Albert Belle in the left shoulder with his first pitch. Belle was escorted halfway to first by the home plate umpire to prevent a brawl.

The 144-game schedule — the result of the bitter strike that canceled last year's postseason and the first part of this year's regular season — also obscured some impressive achievements.

Belle rapped 49 homers; in a normal year, he'd still have 21 games left to chase Ruth and Maris. Greg Maddux of the Atlanta Braves became the first pitcher since Hall of Famer Walter Johnson (1918-19) to post back-to-back seasons with ERAs under 1.80; unfortunately, he did it in two strike-shortened years.

There is good news: For the first time in two years, the World Series will be played. But a word of caution: There's still no contract between the union and management, meaning Opening Day 1996 already is in jeopardy.

Cubs rally again, drop Astros

The Associated Press

■ NL Roundup

CHICAGO — The comeback Chicago Cubs did it again Friday, scoring three times in the ninth inning to tie before beating the Houston Astros 4-3 in the 10th on Luis Gonzalez's one-out single to stay alive in the NL wild-card race.

The rally came just one day after Chicago became the only major league team this century to come back from six deficits in a game, defeating Houston 12-11 in 11 innings.

The Cubs' eighth straight victory still left them in a precarious position for the playoffs. They needed Colorado to lose its three remaining games to San Francisco, including the one played later Friday. And Chicago still had to close out the regular season by beating Houston again Saturday and Sunday.

The Astros, who lost their third straight game — all in extra innings — entered Friday one game behind Colorado.

Chicago's 10th-inning rally started when Doug Brocail (6-4) walked Jose Hernandez. After Mark Grace singled Hernandez to third, Brocail intentionally walked Sammy Sosa. Shawon Dunston's grounder forced Hernandez at home before Gonzalez lined a 1-2 pitch past diving first baseman Jeff Bagwell.

Gonzalez, acquired from Houston earlier this season, also figured in the ninth-inning comeback.

Mets 6, Braves 3

NEW YORK — Rico Brogna drove in three runs with two singles and Bobby Jones scattered seven hits in eight innings as New York extended its winning streak to four by defeating Atlanta.

Tom Glavine (16-7) who only lasted four innings, yielded six runs on eight hits and three walks in his first start of the season against the Mets, and ended his three-game win streak. Fred McGriff and Ryan Klesko each hit solo homers for the Braves, who won their previous three games.

Jones, who had lost his two previous decisions, allowed three runs on seven hits, striking out eight and walking one. John Franco pitched the ninth for his 28th save.

Cardinals 3, Pirates 2

ST. LOUIS — Donovan Osborne won his fourth game of the month — and the season — and St. Louis beat Pittsburgh as the NL's worst two teams began a season-ending three-game series.

The Cardinals, who entered the night 22 1/2 games behind Cincinnati in the NL Central, ended a five-game losing streak. Pittsburgh, 26 games back, has lost six of seven. Friday night's defeat took two minutes less than two hours.

Osborne (4-6) hadn't won in more than two years before beating San Diego on Sept. 8, and he's won three of four starts since then, with a 2.20 ERA this month. In seven innings, he allowed two runs on six hits.

Tom Henke, appearing in his first game in eight days, worked the ninth for his 35th save and the 310th of his career. That ties Rich Gossage for fifth on the career list.

Marlins 5, Phillies 2

MIAMI — Chris Hammond and two relievers combined on a three-hitter as Florida remained in contention for a second-place finish in the NL East by beating Philadelphia.

Kurt Abbott and Bob Natal homered for the Marlins, who closed within 1 1/2 games of the second-place Phillies with two games remaining.

Hammond (9-6) allowed one run and two hits in seven innings and struck out five to tie Charlie Hough's 1993 club record of 126 strikeouts in a season. Hammond won for only the second time since returning from the disabled list Aug. 18.

Terry Mathews pitched a perfect eighth and Robb Nen gave up a walk and an RBI triple to Gary Varsho in the ninth.

Reds 14, Expos 9

MONTREAL — Cincinnati built a 13-0 lead in the first three innings, then held off a late Montreal charge to beat the Expos.

Mark Portugal (11-10) allowed three singles in five shutout innings and also drove in two runs in separate at-bats during the Reds' seven-run second inning.

Montreal, which outhit the Reds 15-13, rallied for three runs in the sixth off Xavier Hernandez and six more in the seventh against four Cincinnati relievers.

Mariners top Texas, clinch tie for West

The Associated Press

■ AL Roundup

ARLINGTON — The Seattle Mariners clinched a tie for the AL West title Friday night with a come-from-behind 4-3 victory over the Texas Rangers.

Edgar and Tino Martinez had back-to-back sacrifice flies in the eighth inning for Seattle, won for the 15th time in 16 games. The Mariners stood to clinch their first division crown if Oakland defeated California in a late game.

Red Sox 11, Brewers 9

MILWAUKEE — John Valentin drove in four runs and Bill Haselman knocked in three Friday night as the Boston Red Sox outscored the Milwaukee Brewers 11-9.

The Red Sox, who clinched the AL East against Milwaukee on Sept. 20, got 16 hits and Erik Hanson (15-5) won despite giving up seven runs on nine hits and three walks in five innings.

Rick Aguilera pitched the ninth for his 32nd save.

Ricky Bones (10-12) gave up 10 earned runs on 10 hits in three innings, and the Brewers lost for the 24th time in 30 games.

White Sox 4, Twins 3

CHICAGO — Pinch-hitter Chris Snopek hit a run-scoring single with one out in the bottom of the ninth that gave Chicago a victory over Minnesota.

Lance Johnson led off the ninth with a single off reliever Eddie Guardado (4-9) and moved to second on a passed ball by Matt Walbeck. Tim Raines sacrificed Johnson to third before Snopek singled off Dave Stevens, hitting the ball over shortstop and into left-center.

Matt Karschner (4-2) pitched the final two innings for the victory, giving up only one hit. The White Sox came back from a 3-0 deficit.

Indians 9, Royals 2

CLEVELAND — Paul Sorrento hit two of Cleveland's three home runs Friday night, and Orel Hershiser was sharp in his last tune-up for the playoffs as the Cleveland Indians beat the Kansas City Royals 9-2.

Eddie Murray also homered for the Indians, who built their AL Central lead over the second-place Royals to 28 games. Although baseball's realignment into three divisions makes such comparisons less meaningful, the Indians' lead is the largest in modern baseball history.

The Indians, leading 3-2, broke it open with six runs in the eighth.

Yankees 4, Blue Jays 3

TORONTO — With the wild-card spot on the line, the New York Yankees pulled off their first ninth-inning comeback of the season Friday night when Pat Kelly's two-run homer capped a four-run rally for a 4-3 victory over Toronto.

The Yankees, who won their 10th straight over the Blue Jays, cut their magic number for clinching a playoff spot to two over California, which played later at home against Oakland.

Orioles 6, Tigers 0

BALTIMORE — Kevin Brown allowed five hits in Baltimore's third straight shutout and Bobby Bonilla drove in three runs as the Orioles beat the Detroit Tigers 6-0 Friday night.

Rafael Palmeiro had two hits and scored a run for the Orioles, who have won nine of 11. Bonilla went 3-for-4 with a two-run triple and an RBI single to extend his hitting streak to 18 games, matching his career high.

Brown (10-9) struck out six and walked one in winning his third successive start. It was his third complete game of the season.

Lack of huge rivalry worries Switzer

The Associated Press

■ NFL Roundup

The passion might have gone out of the Cowboys-Redskins rivalry just a little bit, and that signals trouble for Dallas coach Barry Switzer. He thinks about Detroit's 27-24 victory over San Francisco last Monday night, and red lights go off.

"After Monday night, it points out that anybody could beat anybody in this league," Switzer said. "We've got to get ready to play every game and hope we remain healthy."

On Sunday, the two teams meet in Washington in a game that once would have marked the start of real warfare in the NFC East. But Dallas leads the division at 4-0 and Washington is 1-3.

Despite some pretty good offensive statistics, the Redskins can't seem to score this year behind young quarterback Gus Frerotte. The Washington offense is ranked fourth in the league, and the Redskins are second in running only to Dallas.

The problem is, of 16 possessions inside the opposing 20-yard line this season, the Redskins have just four touchdowns.

"There's no way to explain it," Frerotte said. "It's definitely not a psychological thing. It's just going out and playing football.

"The other team is covering guys, or we're not completing the passes, whatever, but it's definitely not psychological."

In other games Sunday, it's the New York Giants at San Francisco, New England at Atlanta, St. Louis at Indianapolis, Miami at Cincinnati, Tampa Bay at Carolina, Philadelphia at New Orleans, Kansas City at Arizona, Jacksonville at Houston, Denver at Seattle, and San Diego at Pittsburgh. Sunday night, Oakland is at the New York Jets.

The Monday night game has Buffalo at Cleveland.

The Giants (1-3) seem consigned to the fact that San Francisco (3-1) is going to be looking for redemption after its surprising loss to Detroit.

"As an observer, I would have liked the 49ers to beat them 50-0 and we could be the team that goes out there and surprises them," Giants quarterback Dave Brown said.

With Deion Sanders gone from last year's Super Bowl defense and 49ers defensive tackle Bryant Young out with torn ankle ligaments, the Giants still hope to be able to exploit the same weakness Detroit found. That was a susceptibility to the short pass.

"We certainly are going to try to take advantage of anything the defense will give you," Giants coach Dan Reeves said.

The Patriots go into Atlanta without injured QB Drew Bledsoe, banking on backup Scott Zolak to breathe some life into their offense. Last year, the Patriots scored 39 touchdowns. This year, they've scored just one in a 1-2 start.

The Falcons are off to a 3-1 start — but against teams with a combined 1-10 record. The Patriots' losses, meanwhile, have come against San Francisco and Miami.

The Rams are off to a 4-0 start and haven't had a turnover yet this season. One more game like that, and they'll set a record for the cleanest getaway in NFL history.

"It's going to be real unfortunate for the first person to turn the football over, because they're going to take a whole lot of flak," said St. Louis running back Jerome Bettis.

The Rams won only four games in all of last year before moving out of Los Angeles.

Miami at Cincinnati marks the renewal of a little father-son rivalry, Don Shula as Dolphins coach, David Shula as Bengals coach. But dad's team is 3-0, Dave's is 2-2, and the younger Shula isn't as concerned about winning over the dinner table as he is winning over the gridiron.

The younger Shula said he talked with his players in a team meeting "about the Dolphins and about what it would mean to win a game like this."

As much as it would mean to the Bengals, however, it would mean even more to the Dolphins, who might actually be headed somewhere.

$93 million in financing separates Oilers from Nashville

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — The state will be responsible for almost $93 million of the perhaps $300 million Tennessee will need to lure the Houston Oilers to Nashville.

However, when pressed by reporters, Finance Commissioner Bob Corker refused to say state government will put up $93 million to lure the NFL to Nashville.

The apparent discrepancy stems from the nature of the state's investment. For example, Tennessee will underwrite $55 million in bonds to help build a new stadium for the Oilers if they decide to leave Houston.

That money does not represent an outlay of funds, since the bonds will be retired with proceeds from concessions, ticket sales and other revenues the state will see because of the Oilers.

Corker said the $12.5 million gap between what Tennessee State University can afford to play in a new football stadium and what the state agreed to pay won't hurt Nashville's efforts to get the Oilers.

A signed agreement between Gov. Don Sundquist and Nashville Mayor Phil Bredesen spells out the state's participation, including money from TSU's 25-year lease.

It originally called for the Tigers to pay $750,000 a year, but TSU President James Hefner said the school can only afford $251,000. The state will make up the difference.

"We knew there was a gap there, and we all just agreed to somehow or another, we'd figure out a way to fill that gap," Corker said.

Nashville and the Oilers have agreed to negotiate exclusively until Oct. 20. The franchise plans to start talks with Houston, on a non-exclusive basis, on Dec. 1.

Bredesen is set to present his financial plan to the Metro City Council on Thursday. Corker said he will make a public presentation in a week to 10 days.

The state package includes:

— Underwriting $55 million in bonds

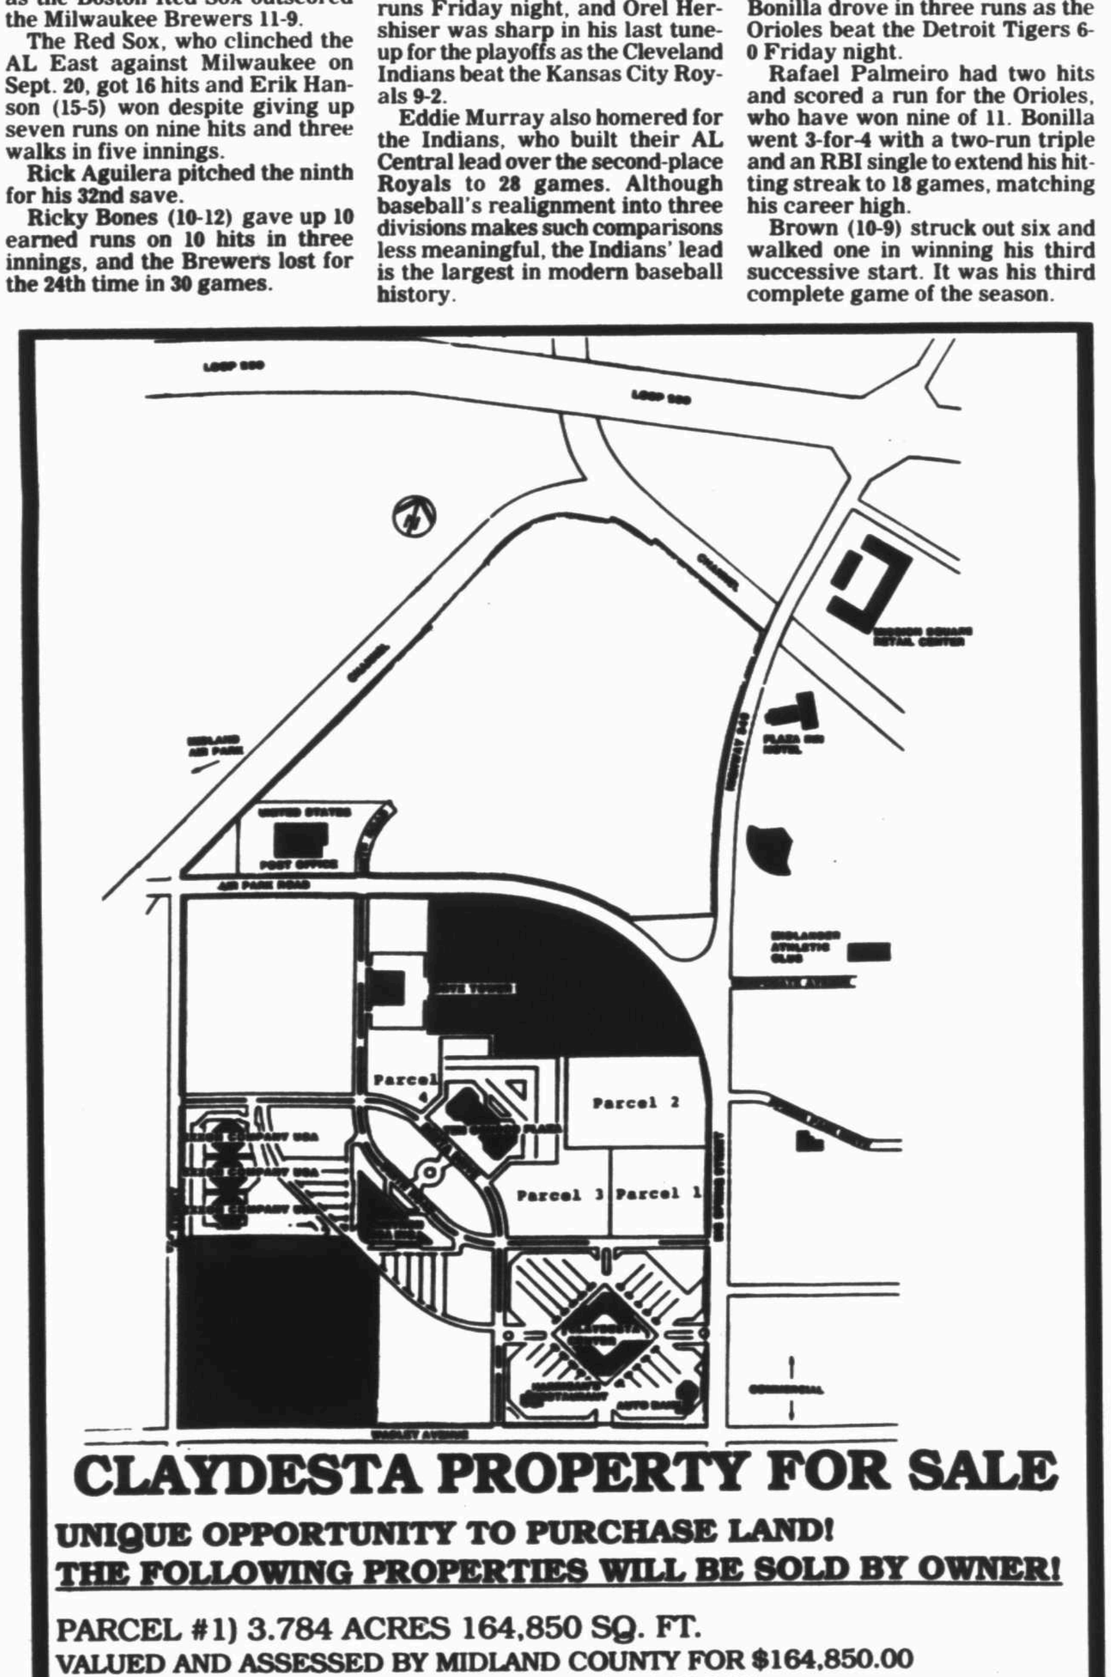

— $12 million in infrastructure improvements

— $5 million to help develop parking

— $2 million in real estate to be used to relocate businesses

— $18.75 million for the TSU lease.

The Tennessean reported Friday that the preferred site is the east bank of the Cumberland River, across from downtown Nashville. Bredesen has said he prefers a downtown site for the stadium.

Anderson to resign post as Detroit Tigers skipper

DETROIT (AP) — The Detroit Tigers called a news conference Monday at which Sparky Anderson will announce his resignation, ending a 17-year run with the Tigers, the Detroit Free Press reported Saturday.

Anderson, 61, will complete the final year of a two-year contract extension Sunday when the Tigers close out the regular season at Baltimore. The contract paid Anderson $1 million a year.

The Free Press reported in its Saturday editions that indications are that the Tigers and Anderson have jointly agreed that he will not return. His departure isn't expected to be announced as a firing. The newspaper did not cite the source of its report.

During his tenure, the Tigers won the World Series in 1984 and the American League East title in 1987. Anderson also was on board in 1989 when the Tigers lost 103 games.

Anderson guided the Tigers to more wins than any other manager in the club's history, compiling a 1,331-1,246 record. The Tigers are 60-82 this season.

Before managing the Tigers, he led the Cincinnati Reds into four World Series, winning two in 1975 and 1976. His overall major league record of 2,194-1,832 ranks him third in victories behind only Connie Mack and John McGraw.

Anderson had hinted broadly in the last few weeks that this would be his last season with the Tigers. He said he would wait until the season was over to meet with club president John McHale Jr. and make it official.

Adams, 3 shots back, ties tour eagle mark in round

The Associated Press

■ Golf

PINE MOUNTAIN, Ga. — Steve Stricker shot a bogey-free 67 Friday and held a two-stroke lead over Glen Day, who also had a 67, after two rounds of the Buick Challenge.

Former Midland Lee golfer John Adams tied a tour record with three eagles in one round, shooting a 68 and leading a group of eight golfers three shots behind Stricker. Adams is the eighth player to have three birdies in a round.

Stricker, a three-year PGA Tour pro in search of his first victory, played in the morning when the wind was down and made four of his five birdies on his back nine. He had an 11-under-par 133 total for two trips around the Mountain View Golf Course at Callaway Gardens.

Defending champion Steve Elkington, the winner of last month's PGA, shot a 74 and missed the cut of 1-under 143 in the $900,000 event formerly known as the Southern Open.

Starting on No. 10, Stricker's only birdie on his front side was on the par-3 12th, when he hit a 6-iron to seven feet. He followed that with 4-foot birdie putts on Nos. 1 and 2 and a 10-footer on the par-4 4th hole.

Stricker's final birdie was on the par-5 7th, when he reached the green in two and two-putted from 80 feet.

Day, who began the day four under after a first-round 68, birdied his last two holes, making putts of 25 and 20 feet. He made five birdies on the back nine.

Adams eagled the first three par-5s he played, chipping in twice. On No. 2, he holed a 20-foot bunker shot. On 7, Adams knocked in a sand wedge from 60 yards.

For his third eagle, Adams reached No. 11 with a 2-iron on his second shot, then made a 15-foot putt. He bogeyed the only other par-5, No. 15, after driving into the trees on the left. The last golfer to make three eagles in one round was Dave Stockton Jr. at last year's Walt Disney World Classic.

Joining Adams at 136 were Ted Tryba, Justin Leonard, Jeff Sluman, Larry Nelson, Steve Lowery and Fred Funk. Nelson's 7-under 65 was the low score of the day.

Senior Vantage Championship

CLEMMONS, N.C. — Hale Irwin promises he's not that much better than most on the Senior PGA Tour. It just seems that way since the three-time U.S. Open champion joined the over-50 circuit in June.

Irwin shot a 6-under-par 66 in the first round of the $1.5 million tournament at Tanglewood to take a one-shot lead over Mike Hill and journeyman Bob E. Smith.

It was a classic fall day for golf in North Carolina as 51 of 78 players shot par or better on the 6,706-yard layout. There were 14 eagles.

Irwin has eight top 10 finishes in eight senior events so far, earning close to $500,000 in a few months — or more than $61,000 per tournament. Eleven of Irwin's last 13 rounds have been under 70, and he hasn't shot a round over 71 in his last five tournaments.

Irwin shot a 4-under 32 on the front side, including a 30-foot birdie putt on the first hole that got his round off to a good start. He made two other long birdie putts — a 20-footer on No. 8 and a 15-footer on No. 17 — on the sandy and bumpy greens, a hot topic among the players prior to the opening round.

Leading money winner Dave Stockton is another shot off the pace along with Isao Aoki, who had gotten to six under but lost shots after bogeys at Nos. 13 and 17.

Chuck Montalbano, O.J. Simpson's former golf teacher at Riviera Country Club, was in a group of eight tied at 69.

LPGA Fieldcrest Cannon Classic

CORNELIUS, N.C. — Gail Graham shot a 4-under-par 68 and took a one-stroke lead over first-round leader Hiromi Kobayashi halfway through the inaugural LPGA Fieldcrest Cannon Classic.

Graham took advantage of an early starting time as brisk winds off Lake Norman had afternoon scores soaring. Starting at the 10th tee in the third group of the day, Graham parred the first seven holes in a morning chill before making the turn with consecutive birdies. She also birdied No. 6, a 381-yard par-4.

Kobayashi, who started the round with a one-stroke lead after an opening 65, fought through the wind to a 71.

Britain's Karen Lunn had a 67 early in the day and was tied with Beth Daniel, two shots behind Graham.

Daniel, one of two tied for second at the start of the round, struggled early. On two of the first three holes, wind held up approach shots and resulted in bogeys.

Nancy Lopez, Juli Inkster, Tammie Green and leading tour rookie Pat Hurst joined Brandi Burton and Elaine Crosby at 138.

Amy Fruhwirth, Helen Alfredsson, Kim Saiki and Vicki Fergon were four strokes behind.

Irvan steals spotlight on return

By Mike Harris
AP Motorsports Writer

NORTH WILKESBORO, N.C. — Ernie Irvan stole the spotlight from pole-winner Ted Musgrave on Friday at North Wilkesboro Speedway as he officially began his Winston Cup comeback.

Irvan, who sustained near-fatal injuries in a crash on Aug. 20, 1994 during a practice session at Michigan International Speedway, qualified seventh for Sunday's Tyson Holly Farms 400 on the .625-mile oval.

Still bothered by double vision in his left eye — the only remnant of the crash that left him in a coma for several days — Irvan turned his lap of 117.641 mph with a black patch fixed tightly over his damaged eye.

As he drove his Robert Yates Racing Ford back onto pit road after his qualifying effort, the unusually big Friday crowd of more than 20,000 stood and gave Irvan an ovation.

"Now I'm excited," Irvan said. "We've been working up to this for a long time. ... You know we came up here and tested and everything went very well. Still, it didn't matter what we did in testing and it didn't matter what we did in practice. It matters when you have to do it."

Irvan grinned and added, "There are still other steps we've got to take. Right now, we've got to say, 'Man, we've accomplished this.' We ran the best we've run today, and it feels good to get out a year after and be able to do it again."

Asked if he noticed the fans' reaction, Irvan said, "When I took the green flag for qualifying, even the Earnhardt fans were on their feet and cheering for me. That was exciting."

Irvan had to immediately get ready to qualify for Saturday's 150-lap SuperTruck race, which will be his first taste of competition since his accident. Even being the last of 41 drivers to make his qualifying attempt, Irvan stayed pumped up and finished second to pole-winner Mike Skinner, the series point leader.

Ernie Irvan returns to Winston Cup racing after a near-fatal crash.

Meanwhile, teammates Musgrave and Mark Martin, both driving Ford Thunderbirds for Roush Racing, swept the front row for Sunday's 400-lap Winston Cup event.

Martin set the target at 118.353 and Musgrave rose to the challenge, taking the pole away with a lap of 118.396. The time differential between the laps was 0.007 seconds.

Asked if it bothered him that Irvan stole some of his glory, Musgrave, who earned his fourth career pole, said, "I've had a pole in less than the last year. Let him have the attention. He needs it more than I do right now."

Musgrave said he has no problem with racing against Irvan, even with that eyepatch.

"I've got to believe right now, if Ernie believes he's ready to be back, he's ready," Musgrave said. "I'll go out there and race wheel-to-wheel with him. I have confidence in him. If he wasn't ready, I don't think he'd be out there."

As for winning his first pole of the season, Musgrave said, "I was a little worried. Last year, we had three poles and they came fast and furious. This year, it looked like we weren't going to get any.

"We were running out of time and we needed that pole for our sponsor and to get in the (Busch) Clash. Mark said he was looking for a drafting partner (in the race for the previous season's pole winners). He's got one now."

Musgrave is the 13th different pole winner in 27 events this season.

Bobby Hamilton, riding a hot streak that has seen him finish in the top five in each of his last three starts, looked strong again Friday, putting his Pontiac Grand Prix in the third spot at 118.085.

Brothers Darrell and Michael Waltrip were next at 117.937 and 117.813, followed by Dale Jarrett, the man who took Irvan's seat this season and is now his teammate, at 117.721, Irvan, Ken Schrader at 117.635, Morgan Shepherd at 117.506 and Sterling Marlin at 117.469.

Dale Earnhardt, coming off a victory Sunday at Martinsville, Va., and heading into this weekend trailing Winston Cup series leader Jeff Gordon by 275 points, was 13th at 117.261, just ahead of Gordon's 117.090.

NASCAR's recent change to qualifying the top 25 in the opening round, instead of the top 20, guaranteed starting positions to Elton Sawyer, Bobby Labonte, Brett Bodine, Ricky Rudd and Hut Stricklin.

Among the drivers who will either have to try again or stand on their first-day laps in the final round of time trials on Saturday were Dick Trickle, Steve Grissom, Bill Elliott, John Andretti, Lake Speed and Kyle Petty.

NASCAR would not allow Greg Sacks to qualify Friday, penalizing the team because it has exceeded the yearly limit of seven test sessions. Sacks will be allowed to try to qualify on Saturday.

BIG: Strambler TD breaks stingy MHS defense in first half minute fight. The Bulldogs had stoped the Rebels on one attempt to go for it on fourth down earlier in the first quarter.

The Rebels were in Midland High territory and were facing a fourth-and-10 on the MHS 43. It was there when quarterback John Thurman took the ball back to pass and scrambled for the first down, fighting for every yard. That play and the succeeding two after it, Norman's 40-yard reception and Strambler's 13-yard touchdown run, broke the stingy Midland High defense and gave the Rebels confidence.

That confidence soared as the defense continued to come up big for the Rebels. The "Boys of Smash" came through with stop after stop throughout the first half that not only held MHS to nine yards in total offense for the half but let Lee coach John Parchman have the freedom to continue drives on fourth downs. The Rebels did that four times in the half, making two of those times.

"They are a great defensive football team," Reeger said. "They are extremely quick and run to the ball so well. We had nothing offensively. We knew it was hard to sustain drives when they got big plays offensively."

At the half, the Rebels, who have scored on 21 of 25 first half drives during the season, did receive a 45-yard touchdown run from Strambler and Clay Boyd's 37-yard field goal to end the half 17-0.

The Rebels carried the momentum into the second half as Strambler scored on Lee's third play of the half with a 58-yard touchdown.

Midland High, 2-2 and 0-1, did have one very impressive drive on the Rebels following Strambler's score. The 19-play drive that took almost nine minutes off the clock saw the Bulldogs take control of the offensive line. MHS, however, settled for a 37-yard field goal from David Leaverton.

Hunter put to rest any hopes of a Midland High comeback on Lee's first play of its next possession. The fullback blasted through a huge gap in the right side of the line and went 80 yards for the touchdown.

The wind, which was nothing but a whisper, in Midland High's sails would go away for good as mental mistakes and more Rebel defense gave Lee the ball quickly and in good field position.

The beneficiary was the offense that banged out two more scores (one on Thurman's two-yard run and the other on Norman's one-yard run). Both came in the fourth quarter.

Norman, the district's second-leading rusher coming into the game, saw limited time and rushed for 76 yards on six carries.

Midland High will host Abilene Cooper, which won its district opener against Abilene High 17-14 next Friday. Lee will travel to Abilene High.

SILENCE: Lee backs have good night in victory

(From 1D)

need to keep this up."

Of course, these numbers don't happen without the men up front and guard Tim Hill, a newcomer to the Lee starting line, liked the numbers put up by Strambler and Hunter.

"It makes us (the line) feel really good when the backs have a good night," Hill said. "You know that you did a good job when they have the yards. We changed a few things up at the half and it all clicked for us."

Midland High held Lee from the end zone on three possessions in the first half, the best any team has done this year, but the Rebels still put 17 points in lights. Lee has now scored on 21 of 25 first half possessions and ended the night by scoring on seven of 11 possessions against the Bulldogs. Two of those possessions were quarter-ending possessions when the clock could have been a help in stopping the drives.

The Bulldogs had only one strong drive against Lee, ending in David Leaverton's automatic 37-yard field goal. The drive had five first downs in it, but the Bulldogs could never mount any consistency. Hunter answered that drive with his 80-yard TD romp and then MHS botched the kickoff at its one-yard line. Things just broke down.

Leaverton did have one of the game's most exciting moments when he boomed an unheard of 80-yard punt in the first half. His kickoffs often sailed out of the end zone. In fact, Lee's Clay Boyd also was booming kickoffs far into the end zone.

There was no wondering who the best team was on this night. It will be interesting to see how both teams react in the coming weeks.

MOJO: Panthers have two backs with 100-plus yards

(From 1D)

Wilburn had 108 yards in the half and scored Permian's only touchdown of the first two periods on a 56-yard run.

Permian took the opening kickoff and moved to its own 44 when Wilburn took a pitch from Prann and found a hole in the Odessa High defense, sprinting 56 yards up the right sideline for the score and a 7-0 Permian lead.

Permian got the ball back on a fumble recovery on the Odessa 45 but the drive stalled as Permian punter Jeff Dinger pinned the Bronchos back on their own 2-yard line.

The Bronchos tried three running plays with little success, then gave Permian a gift. The snap from center on fourth down sailed over the head of Odessa's Jesse Bersoza and out of the end zone, handing the Panthers two points and a nine-point lead.

Permian jumped ahead 12-0 midway through the second quarter when Jeremy White nailed a 42-yard field goal with six minutes left in the half.

The Bronchos could not move the ball with any degree of consistency until late in the first half when they finally put a score on the board.

Williams capped a nine-play, 59-yard drive with a two-yard dive up the middle that cut the Panthers' lead to 12-7.

The Bronchos converted two third-down situations in the drive, highlighted by Josh Linney's 35-yard burst up the middle. It was the first touchdown scored on the Permian first team defense this season.

The Panthers missed a chance to take a larger lead into halftime as their final drive of the half ended at the Odessa High 1-yard line as time ran out. Wilburn got loose down the sidelines and pulled in a 38-yard pass from Prann — his only completion in just two attempts in the first half — which put the Panthers in scoring position at the Odessa High 10.

Following an unsportsman-like conduct penalty that pushed the Panthers back to the 25, they ran four straight rushing plays to get the ball down to the 3-yard line with 12 seconds left. The Panthers used their last time out of the half to set up the final play, but Odessa linebacker Jesse Waters stopped Permian's L.C. Ward just short of the goal line and time ran out before Permian could get off another play.

Coogs survive Abilene High

ABILENE — Abilene Cooper came from behind Friday night to survive a 17-14 scare from cross town rival Abilene High in the District 4-5A football opener for both teams.

Cooper is now 2-2 on the season and 1-0 in league play while Abilene High falls to 1-3 and 0-1.

Cooper trailed 7-0 in the first quarter, but scored 10 second period points for a 10-7 lead at the half and never trailed again even though AHS scored a late TD.

Cooper's Michael Anderson had a huge night, passing for 202 yards in the victory. This had been a Cooper trouble spot in its last two games. Abilene High's Nathan Mays had 149 yards rushing.

Cooper will travel to Midland High Friday while Abilene High will host Midland Lee.

Cooper and Lee won't meet until Week 9. If Midland High can pull the home upset this week against Cooper, the District 4-5A race will be thrown into a wild scramble.

San Angelo gets first win of season

SAN ANGELO — Lubbock Coronado failed to complete a two-point conversion with 1:03 left to play and fell to San Angelo Central 29-27 in a non-conference football game.

It was the first victory of the season for the 1-3 Bobcats and it was the second loss by Coronado to a District 4-5A team this season, also losing 20-17 to Odessa High.

San Angelo quarterback August Pfluger rushed for 94 yards and a TD. He also threw for a touchdown. Yabrodrick Ward led all rushers with 130 yards for Coronado.

San Angelo opens 4-5A play next Friday with a road trip to Odessa High, a loser to Odessa Permian Friday.

Coronado now owns a meager 1-20 record against teams from District 4-5A. The Mustangs are favored to make a strong playoff run in District 3-4A this season and could again face a 4-5A team if that happens.

Trinity falls to Union 79-34

Midland Trinity fell to Union in six-man football action 79-34 Thursday night in non-district action.

Trinity, 2-2 for the season, received a 32-yard touchdown and two extra points plays. Richard McMillan scored on plays of 33 and 18 yards and had a reception for an extra point. Daniel Scott added two touchdowns while Michael Salgado had an extra point.

Trinity had 280 yards in offense but that paled in comparison to the 629 yards from Union. Robert Correa had seven touchdowns for Union. Wade McWilliams had three scores. Eric Franco and Howard Huffman had one each.

Trinity will play Marathon next Saturday at 6 p.m.

BUFFS: Stanton players get hugs from former coach after game rushed for 222 yards, thanks partly to the return of fullback Todd Davis, and passed for 212. The Buff coach thought the game was incorrectly billed as a contest between he and his former head coach.

(From 1D)

"It wasn't a battle between Bill and me, or between our kids and Bill's kids," Cotton said. "It was a battle between football teams. Right now, I'm thrilled about the win but I also feel for him in the loss."

The new Wolves' coach hugged two of his former players after the game and squeezed hands with some former assistants.

"I wish Coach Grissom was still on our side," Buff receiver Jason Hopper said. "but I know he wants to go out and start a new program before he retires. We're real fortunate to still have Coach Cotton and Todd back."

Grissom could have just as well been the one feeling for Cotton if not for three fumbles by his Wolves. Colorado City sophomore tailback Arian Emmerson ran for 200 yards on 28 carries and scored a touchdown and the Wolves had a 14-13 halftime lead.

"I'll have nightmares about No. 20 (Emmerson) for two more years if we play them," Cotton said. "He's an unbelievable running back, but I think the reason he's so much better this year is because of Bill Grissom — he's made him tougher."

Despite Emmerson's running, a fumble on Colorado City's opening possession led to a 43-yard Stanton touchdown drive and a fumble on the kick off that opened the fourth quarter led to another Buff touchdown.

Colorado City, which lost this game at home last year 34-13, also failed to score on fourth down from the Stanton 1-yard line trailing 28-14 with 7:14 left in the game.

Meanwhile, Davis, who had to leave the team before the last game last year because of discipline problems, moved back to Stanton 3 1/2 weeks ago and rushed for 131 yards and a fourth quarter touchdown in his return.

"I knew he was going to be back, we just hoped and prayed we could contain him, and we did except on a couple of occasions," Grissom said of the player who scored 13 touchdowns and rushed for 892 yards for his Buffalo team last year.

Stanton quarterback Taylor Looney threw touchdown passes to Leo McAlister and Hopper and tailback Chris Carroll added 79 yards rushing and the game's first touchdown. Davis' 26-yard run put Stanton up 28-14 in the fourth quarter.

SWC: Beginning of the end

Texas Tech and Baylor kick off the first league game of the final season

By Kevin O'Hanlon
Associated Press Writer

DALLAS — On a football field in Waco, the Southwest Conference begins its last autumn.

A young man will boot a football into the air at Floyd Casey Stadium Saturday as Baylor and Texas Tech start the first conference game of SWC's final season.

And on Dec. 2, Houston and Rice will close the SWC's rich, 81-year gridiron history as the eight conference schools prepare to join three other leagues beginning in 1996.

"It does make me sad," said Tech coach Spike Dykes. "It's just been a big part of my life. It's like losing a dog or friend. The legacy and the mystique ... think of all of the people who've played in this conference."

Doak Walker. Sammy Baugh. Buddy Dial. Eric Dickerson and Craig James. Earl Campbell. Kyle Rote, Don Meredith and Hubert Bechtol. Bobby Layne. John David Crow. Puny Wilson, Ox Dietrich and Cap Murrah. Froggie Williams and Botchy Koch. Davey O'Brien. Roosevelt Leaks. Donny Irons. Andre Ware and Wilson Whitley.

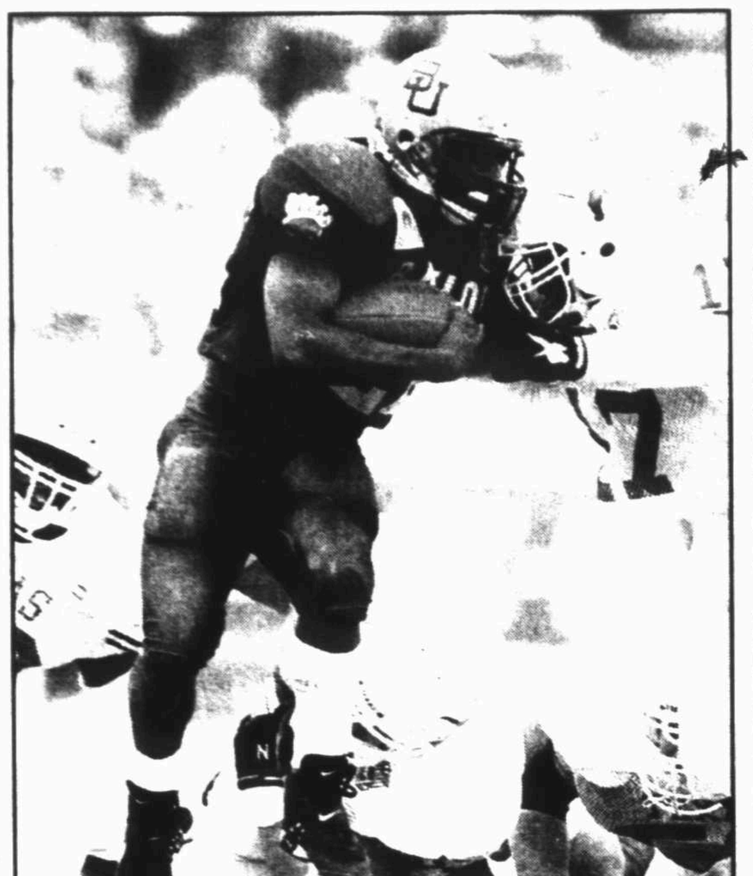

Think of the coaches.

Darrell Royal. Paul "Bear" Bryant. Frank Broyles. Jess Neely, D.X. Bible and Matty Bell. R.C. Slocum. Grant Teaff and Gene Stallings.

And think of the games. Oh, the games. Nearly 2,000 of them and all those Cotton Bowls.

And what about that time in 1956 when TCU and A&M — in Bryant's next to last year at A&M — played as a tornado raged past the stadium?

Baylor sophomore running back Jerod Douglas, shown in action last year against Texas, hopes the Bears start strong in the final SWC season.

The Grand ol' Southwest Conference is about to become a memory.

"It's like where you have someone that has some type of terminal illness and you knew all along they weren't going to make it," said A&M's Slocum. "But then you get down to that point right at the end and the finality begins setting in."

Baylor, Texas, Texas Tech and A&M will join the present Big 8 schools to form the Big 12. TCU, Rice, and SMU will join the Western Athletic Conference and Houston will join Conference USA.

Royal, who compiled a 167-47-5 record at Texas from 1957-1976 and won three national championships, said he could see the end coming when Arkansas pulled out of the league after the 1991 season.

"It was just a matter of time. That's something that was predictable," Royal said. "When Arkansas left, it was plain that the conference was going to break up."

Broyles, who coached against Royal at Arkansas from 1958 to 1976, said it hurts seeing the break up.

"It's with deep regrets that I watch it," he said. "The history. Such tremendous tradition and history. To see it pushed aside just breaks my heart and it breaks everybody in Arkansas' heart. It's part of the blood of the people of Arkansas."

Most of those involved in the SWC say they feel bittersweet about the new conference affiliations

"I'm tickled to death that we were included in the Big 12," Dykes said. "But at the expense of the Southwest Conference. I think that's a shame."

Said Baylor coach Chuck Reedy: "I'm trying to go about the season accepting what has happened and looking forward to new friends and new alliances, but also taking and maintaining the friends we've had from the past."

Baugh remembers coaching exploits

ROTAN, Texas (AP) — After Sugar Bowls, Cotton Bowls and NFL titles, is there one football game Sammy Baugh might find more memorable than any other?

Perhaps Texas Christian's 1936 Sugar Bowl victory or the Horned Frogs' 1937 Sugar Bowl triumph? Maybe the stunning 1936 upset of unbeaten, untied, Sugar Bowl-bound Santa Clara?

How about one of the five NFL championship games during his 16 years with the Washington Redskins? Or the time when he passed for four touchdowns and intercepted four passes in a game against the Detroit Lions?

Or that famous six-touchdown day against the old Chicago Cardinals?

Baugh had one candidate:

The year was 1958, and Baugh was coaching at tiny Hardin-Simmons University in Abilene, about 85 miles east of his ranch. He had gone there in 1955 to assist an old friend, Murray Evans, and somehow ended up as the head coach.

Baugh had inherited chilling schedules that took the Cowboys on the road almost every week to play the likes of Georgia, Auburn, Mississippi, Arizona State and Arkansas.

This particular week, H-SU was headed to Baton Rouge to play Louisiana State. Paul Dietzel's Tigers, with All-Americans Billy Cannon and Max Fugler, were unbeaten and en route to the national championship.

"We knew they were going to run over us," Baugh says. "So we prepared to keep from losing, to keep the ball away from them."

The scheme was to pass for eight yards on first down, then try to run twice for a first down against a fearsome defense known as the "Chinese Bandits."

"We couldn't throw shorter passes because we couldn't make more than two yards," Baugh laughs.

As he remembers it, the plan worked pretty well: "They couldn't get the damn ball."

But right before halftime, H-SU centered the ball over the punter's head and LSU converted a turnover into a touchdown. Then, in the second half, H-SU launched a time-consuming drive to the Tiger goal but fumbled away the ball.

"We had the ball more than they did, but we gave them two touchdowns," Baugh says. "And I think they ended up beating us two touchdowns. That's how close that game was."

The score was in fact 20-6. And an LSU coach later called Baugh to say that no LSU opponent did a better job of ball control than his Cowboys.

"I thought you ought to tell your boys," he said.

Thinking back on that episode, Baugh says: "I was never prouder."

NBA Roundup

Spurs sign Elliott, steal Herrera from Rockets

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The San Antonio Spurs signed Sean Elliott and four other players Friday, a week before the team begins training camp.

"Sean Elliott is going to be here for life. He is a Spur. That's not going to change," declared Spurs general manager Gregg Popovich, who said all summer he wanted Elliott to remain with the team.

Elliott, a forward entering his seventh year in the NBA, became a free agent after last season. He was the Spurs' second leading scorer last season, averaging 18.1 points, 3.5 rebounds and 2.5 assists.

"They knew I wanted to stay here. They knew I didn't want to go anywhere," said Elliott, who was drafted by the Spurs, spent several season with the team, was traded to Detroit, then returned last year. "I think the biggest thing is the organization showed me a lot of respect."

Terms of his multiyear contract were not disclosed. However, the Spurs called it a "lucrative" deal in a prepared statement.

Also Friday, the Spurs signed forward Carl Herrera, who has spent his four years in the league with the Houston Rockets. He averaged 6.8 points and 4.6 rebounds last season while playing alongside Hakeem Olajuwon.

Herrera expects his experience with Olajuwon will make it easy for him to adjust to playing with David Robinson and the Spurs.

"You've got a good center, good guards. My job will be almost the same — get rebounds and play defense," Herrera said.

The Spurs also signed Greg "Cadillac" Anderson, a forward and center who previously has played for the Spurs and spent last year in Atlanta; Brad Lohaus, a forward and center from the Miami Heat; and Doc Rivers, a 13-year veteran guard who played for San Antonio last season.

And the preseason transactions aren't over yet.

"We're going to keep working at it," Popovich said. "We're just going to keep looking at big bodies."

Houston bolsters front court with Bryant as Olajuwon back in question

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston Rockets gave Hakeem Olajuwon some front-court help Friday, announcing a multi-year free-agent deal with former Portland power forward Mark Bryant.

The Rockets also kept an eye on their MVP center, who on Friday pulled out of his one-on-one pay TV contest with Shaquille O'Neal in Atlantic City, N.J., complaining of an aching back.

Olajuwon has a bi-lateral sprain in the lower back, according to Dr. Francis Pflum, who examined him Friday in Atlantic City.

"It appears that it is not a permanent injury," Pflum said.

Nonetheless, the word sent shudders through Rockets coach Rudy Tomjanovich.

"It always does," Tomjanovich said. "That phone rings, you get that call, and I'm learning to adjust to that ... I don't think anyone feels it's something that's going to hold him up a long time."

Bryant, 30, will be the front-running candidate to start at power forward for the Rockets, and he can back up Olajuwon at center. Contract terms were not announced.

Rockets vice president Bob Weinhauer called Bryant "the person we've been searching for awhile," and Tomjanovich said Bryant fits perfectly into his scrappy roster. Because of a log-jam of power forwards at Portland, Bryant has never had much chance to show what he can do.

"It's tough for a competitive guy to sit on the bench when he does have talent to play," Tomjanovich said. "I'm always looking for guys who have paid their dues and really appreciate playing time and being on a good team."

The 6-foot-9, 245-pound Bryant spent his first seven NBA seasons as a reserve with the Trail Blazers. He played only sparingly last year, averaging five points and 3.3 rebounds in 49 games. He has averaged 4.9 points and 3.5 rebounds in less than 15 minutes per game through his career.

"My last year didn't go to my liking, and I'm looking forward to this opportunity to get the chance to play," he said.

Bryant boosts the Rockets' physical presence under the boards, something they haven't had since trading Otis Thorpe to Portland last February for Clyde Drexler and Tracy Murray.

"I'm not scared to throw the body around. I'm not scared to get a foul," Bryant said.

NHL players appear set for Olympic action

NEW YORK (AP) — Commissioner Gary Bettman got approval from the NHL Board of Governors on Friday for league players to participate in the 1998 Olympics at Japan, and he gained an extra two years of labor peace in the bargain.

A few details involving the world championships and Canada Cup competition still were to be worked out with the International Ice Hockey Federation and the International Olympic Committee, but it appeared the NHL participation at Nagano was set.

NHL senior vice president and chief operating officer Steve Solomon attended Friday's meeting of the IIHF in Budapest, Hungary. "There are some items still open, some details to be solved," IIHF spokesman Kimmo Leinonen said.

As part of the Olympic agreement, both the league and NHL Players Association agreed to waive the reopener clause in their Collective Bargaining Agreement, reached after an acrimonious 105-day lockout that disrupted last season. The original deal allowed either side to reopen the contract after the 1997-98 season. Without it in place, the current agreement stretches until the year 2000.

"All sides have given up reopeners," Bettman said. "Both sides concluded it made sense in the context of building the sport. If the Olympics are as beneficial as we think they'll be, let's take advantage of it. It says a lot about how relations between the players association and the league have evolved in the last year.

"There's nothing wrong with labor peace."

Bettman and Bob Goodenow, head of the players association, canceled plans to fly to Budapest late Friday.

Goodenow said the Olympic participation was not a done deal because of details still being worked on in Hungary. "There's still work to be done," he said. "If everything falls in place, we've agreed to the reopener."

Norman Green, owner of the Dallas Stars, said waiving the reopener clause was a positive for both sides. "We've been talking about Olympic involvement for 20 years," he said. "Finally, it's been accomplished. In order to do that, it made sense that we have no labor conflicts."

The league sees the Olympics as an opportunity for hockey to gain prime-time television exposure for its top players.

In order for NHL players to participate in the Olympics, the league will shut down the 1997-98 season for 16 days. Bettman said the 82-game schedule would remain in place and the time would be made up with shorter training camps and "less than a handful of days of adjustment."

Green called hockey the centerpiece of the Winter Games and said the shutdown of the season should not be a problem. "A lot of people believe you should have the best players in the world. It comes at mid-season and that's always been a problem. The benefits outweigh the difficulties. To have billions of people watching the game of hockey, it's a wonderful thing for us."

The first week of the Olympics would include a eight-country preliminary hockey tournament with two of the teams advancing to the second week against teams from Canada, the United States, Russia, Czechoslovakia, Sweden and Finland, consisting largely of NHL players.

Lawyer says New Mexico St. assistant innocent of academic fraud

LAS CRUCES, N.M. (AP) — The lawyer representing a former New Mexico State assistant coach accused in a probe of the school's basketball program said Friday his client is taking the fall for head coach Neil McCarthy.

Attorney Jim Darnell of El Paso, Texas, said former Aggies assistant coach Gar Forman is innocent of alleged wrongdoing stemming from the school's investigation into academic fraud involving transfer athletes.

Darnell said school administrators were protecting McCarthy from possible sanctions resulting from the scandal's fallout. In clearing the head coach, Darnell said administrators were trying "to build a Chinese wall between him (McCarthy) and reality."

McCarthy has declined comment, saying the NCAA has admonished him to refrain from speaking on the investigation.

Darnell said Forman, now an assistant coach at Iowa State, cooperated with the school's internal investigation, as well as with an ongoing NCAA investigation. Results of the NCAA inquiry are expected next month.

Both investigations center on how several recruits allegedly obtained fraudulent academic credits from Southeastern College of the Assemblies of God in Lakeland, Fla. Many of New Mexico State's junior college transfers gained eligibility through credits from Southeastern.

Cadillac: Full-sized luxury

Along the flanks of Cadillac's top-flight DeVille Concours, immense slabs of sheet-metal make this full-size sedan look enormous and luxuriant, conveying the image of a limousine of a machine fitted with fancy features and packed with the latest in go-power hardware.

Concours has all of the features this overt-image implies, but there's also an attribute concealed within the mass of metal and its sophisticated electronic and mechanical systems, a surprise which may only be detected by slipping behind the padded steering wheel.

You see, this thing's a dreamboat to drive.

Who would imagine a vehicle so big and complicated in terms of mechanics could be a pleasure to maneuver too?

Components added to the 1996 edition make Concours even more user-friendly, and the list extends from practicalities like steering, suspension and safety systems to fancifuls such as the new entertainment package and even an early warning device on the windshield which can detect rain drops and deploy wipers automatically when needed.

The name, by the way, comes from a French phrase for an automotive display known as the concours d'elegance, whereby entries are judged solely for their glamorous appearance.

This elegant Concours would fare well in such a show because its appearance suggests opulence and, yes, wealth.

Bold side panels become hallmarks with their vertical exclamations and gently curving caps at the rear which roll onto the long deck of the trunk. Yet at the front, an expressive hoodline slopes delicately downward to the broad presentation of chrome in a classic grille that showcases the Cadillac wreath-encircled emblem.

A wide bumper wraps around corners, then lines run the length of sides before uniting in back below rear lamps.

Four side doors seem easily defined by upper pillars, with glass in the rear doors highlighted by elegant vertical off-center sections.

Inside the fancy Concours cabin, seating expands for up to six passengers, although the front seat splits into individual areas to isolate the driver if desired.

Power controls for the driver's seat bring 8-way movements with two memory units so two different drivers (a husband and wife, perhaps) may select custom positions, then lock them in place for later automatic recall.

Everything else about this car suggests control by power, of course, such as the automatic climate system, power windows and door locks, and power outside mirrors.

From Cadillac, you would expect such fancies, however, because the brand has long been associated with features of luxury and convenience.

What you might not expect with Concours stems from the precision of the mechanical systems that translate into features which make this big car easy to drive.

In a word, it all comes down to Northstar.

Originally, Northstar represented an advanced Cadillac V8 engine but today the concept has been enlarged into an entire system of dazzling controls which encompass engine, transmission, steering and suspension elements.

Heart of the matter remains that beefy powerplant.

Constructed entirely from aluminum, the block displaces 4.6 liters and features a twin-cam configuration and four valves per cylinder with 100,000-mile intervals for service.

Linked to the engine, an electronically controlled Northstar 4T80-E automatic transaxle puts four forward gears in an adaptive shifter which adjusts the engine's output for rapid but quiet movement from one gear to the next.

Northstar's independent suspension package, which continuously varies settings by sensing the type of road surface traveled, brings firmer damping on rough spots but softer damping on smooth pavement.

Magnasteer, another unique Cadillac label which describes a new variable-effort steering system, employs electronic controls for magnetic torsion to raise or lower the amount of effort required to steer. At lower speed, such as when parking Concours, you'll feel less pressure so the steering wheel turns easily, but at higher speed, like on a highway, pressure increases so only a slight movement of the wheel will turn the car quickly and responsively.

Daytime running lamps, mandated by federal law for all cars later in the decade, appear now on Concours.

A variety of other safety features come with Concours, beginning with massive dual air-bags for front riders.

Together, all systems signify pleasurable driving.

My Concours road tests, working north and east from Traverse City, occurred across rolling hills along the lower peninsula of Michigan.

Two-laned routes provided opportunities to pass slower traffic, and the Northstar V8 excelled in moving so much mass quickly down the road. Deep valleys brought curvy sets, which Concours handled with road-gripping ease.

Hard to believe such a big car behaves so well, but Concours with Northstar aboard creates something special.

1930 Model A

One of the best-loved and most dependable of all vintage cars is Ford's second Model A series! This letter designation was originally used on Ford's very first production model of 1903. But the better-known Model A is the series of 1928 to earw '32, which offered numerous refinements over the long-running (1908M2 to 1927) Model T series.

The Model A that was introduced in late '27 for the 1928 model year offered four-wheel mechanical brakes, a doubling of horsepower (40 instead of 20), and a new sliding-gear manual transmission (replacing the primitive foot-pedal-controlled planetary band Model T setup). And the Model A for 1928 was completely restyled, made to resemble a miniversion of Ford's topline Lincoln automobile. More color choices were offered, as wel.

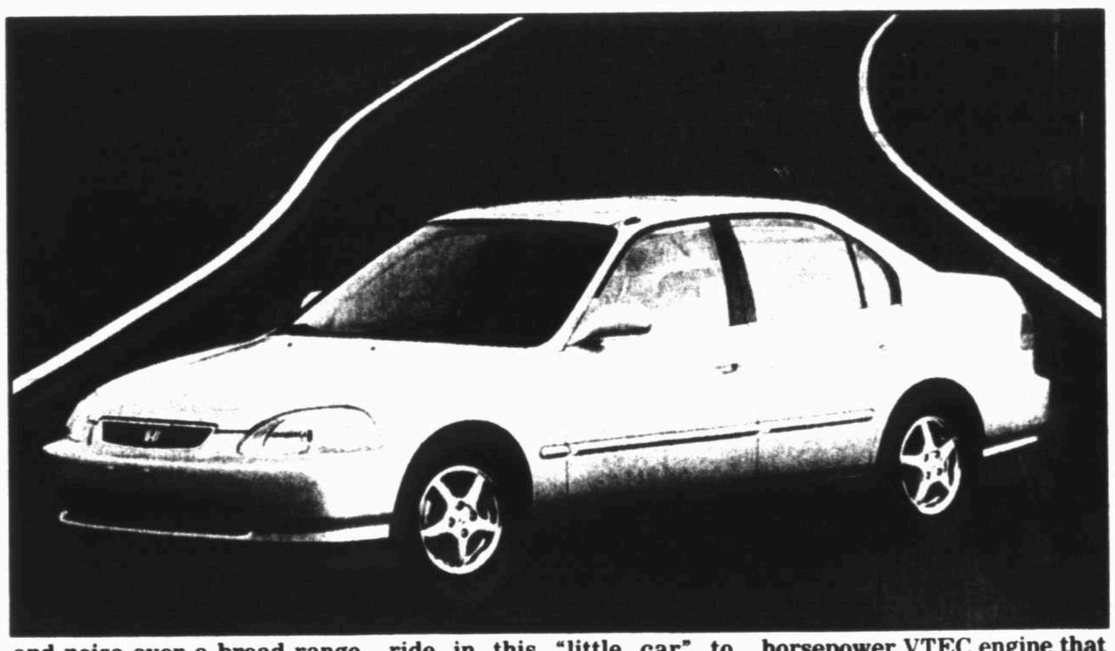

One of the most fascinating things about this Model A is the wide variety of body types and variations available at different periods of its 41/2-year run. There were the Roadster (Standard or Deluxe); soft-top Sport Coupe (which resembled a convertible, but was not); the Convertible Cabriolet (with folding top and vertical windshield, or later slant-windshield type); Tudor (two-door) Sedan (and later Deluxe variations); Fordor (four-door) Sedan (in several types, with five or seven windows, with soft or steel-backed rear quarters, Standard or Deluxe, and with Town Sedan and 1931 slant-windshield variations); Victoria Coupe (1931, with soft or steelbacked rear quarters); Convertible Sedan; rare luxury Town Car; Taxi; and Phaeton (four-door convertible touring car). Also, the illustrated Deluxe Phaeton (the rare two-door variety, available from June 1930 on).

Final 1931 Model A Fords were continuations of the 1931 models ... Model Bs and Vas were ready.

Over a million of the Model A Tudor Sedans were produced, yet the most commonly seen type is the steelbacked five-window coupe.

Two-door Deluxe Phaeton production: 3,946 in later 1930, and 2,229 in 1931.

Honda Civic: Large comfort in compact package

Getting back in the driver's seat was a long-awaited pleasure. What made it even more enjoyable was the car I drove: a 1996 Honda Civic EX sedan.

With major surgery behind me and a sore back improving by the day, my main concern was to test-drive a car that would go easy on me. I wanted a car that didn't necessitate a struggle to get in and out, was manageable in size, and didn't require too much exertion for me to get around. To borrow a term from the computer world, I wanted to get behind the wheel of a car that was "user friendly." The all-new Civic was the perfect choice.

These all-new Civics are available as sedan, coupe or hatchback models in DX, LX and EX trim levels. I decided on the EX model, which I'm told will probably sell for the same thing it did last year: $16,280, an pretty much loaded with everything. The Honda people are still doing their arithmetic regarding the exact price.

The Civic comes in various X models such as the HX Coupe with a VTEC lean burn engine. Some cars have the Continuously Variable Transmission (CVT) while others offer a choice of five-speed manual transmission or the four-speed electronically controlled automatic. The automatic has a logic grade control for smoother shifting when climbing or descending hills.

My choice was the five-speed manual transmission because I'm hooked on Honda's smooth gear boxes. You can almost toss the shifter knob in the right direction and it drops right into gear. Besides, I wanted to get back into real test-driving as quickly as possible and a manual transmission is the way to go — if the car has a smooth transmission.

Because of my sore back, getting in and out of the car played a major consideration in selecting a car. The doors of this sedan are manageable in size; it didn't require a long reach to grab the handle to close them. Yet, access to the driver's seat is about as good as any car on the road. Even other Honda products aren't as accessible as this sixth generation Civic sedan.

Another concern was visibility. Again, due to the tender back, I didn't want to be driving a car that I had to stretch or sit upright in order to see. This Civic, with its new design, was perfect, with even better forward visibility this year due to the lower cowl and hoodline.

The improved styling provides the Civic with a very distinctive appearance. With the long, low lines, the sedan appears much larger than it actually is. On the other hand, it feels like a small car when it comes to handling and maneuverability. Nevertheless, the interior seems to have more room than previous models.

Even though this sedan is a small car, it has a lot of large-car sophistication. The noise level in the Civic is low and there is very little vibration and harshness. Of course, the NVH factor (noise, vibration and harshness) is the latest concern with all manufacturers. With Honda, they have put in a new exhaust system, intake system, engine mounts and redesigned engine components to reduce the vibration and noise over a broad range of frequencies. In addition, they have applied a lot of vibration-dampening materials to various areas of the body. Because the entire suspension geometry has been changed, you really have to ride in this "little car" to appreciate its "big car" performance.

If I wanted to nit pick, I would have preferred a stronger engine. Don't misunderstand, there is absolutely nothing wrong with the 127-horsepower VTEC engine that is under the hood, but I felt so comfortable behind the wheel of this sedan that I had a strong urge to get up and go; I'm ready for more horsepower. Oh, it's great to be back in the driver's seat.

Dear Doctor: I own a 1982 Toyota Corolla with a 1.8 liter four-cylinder engine and automatic transmission. Lately, upon hard acceleration, it makes a terrible ticking noise when I let up on the gas pedal. The noise sounds like it is coming from the exhaust. I also noticed a burning smell when this happens. A friend said it could be a valve in the engine. What do you think? Sze W.

Dear Sze: If the noise is coming from the exhaust system, you could have a broken catalytic converter, head shield, muffler or pipe. Some exhaust pipes have a tousle wall and could make a ticking noise. The same holds true for the muffler and catalytic converter. Take the car to your local shop. When the car is on a lift, hit the exhaust with a rubber mallet and listen for a rattle sound. If this does not work, the next step is a six channel chassis ear and a road test to find where the noise is coming from. The six channel chassis ear has six clips that are attached to specific areas. They connect to a small box with a dial. The technician turns the dial and listens for the loudest sound. Once he has the loudest sound, he knows this is the area that is the source of your problem.

Dear Doctor: We traded a 1992 Ford Aerostar XL in for a used 1994 Aerostar XLT. The 1994 had 21,000 miles on it at time of purchase. We are experiencing oil consumption problems and have to put in a quart of oil every 1,200 miles. We took the Aerostar back to the dealer and were told a quart oil per 1,200 miles is normal. I even had the Ford factory rep look at the van and he said the quart per 1,200 miles is normal. We disagree. What is your opinion. Becky P.

Dear Becky: The dealer and the Ford representative are right; a quart of oil per 750 miles is considered normal by some of the manufacturers. An engine has to use a small amount of oil. Sometimes unburned gasoline replaces the missing oil in the oil pan (crankcase) giving the indication that the engine is not burning oil. If this is your only complaint with the Aerostar you did very good.

Dear Doctor: I own a 1987 Ford Taurus LX sedan. I have noticed water on the drivers floor mat and in the trunk. Where does the water come from? Cordell G.

Dear Cordell: Any water leak should be repaired as soon as possible. The water in the front usually comes in from the windshield seal. If it is in the trunk the problem is usually the trunk weather seal. Whoever checks the leak should pull up the rug to make sure there is no rust starting to build up.

Dear Doctor: I own a 1985 Camaro Z28 that has a 5-liter V-8 engine with a four-barrel carburetor. I have a problem starting the engine in the morning or after sitting several hours. I have to pump the accelerator several times and crank the engine three or four times. The car has 120,000 miles on it but runs great — other than the cold start problem. Before I take it back to the shop, what do you suggest might be the cause? Martin L.

Dear Martin: Your Camaro is equipped with a four-barrel Quadrajet carburetor. It is one of the best overall carburetor to date. However, over the years there have been a couple of simple-to-fix problems. Before starting the engine in the morning, remove the air filter. Check to see if the choke plate is closed tight. Second, open the choke plate, pump the accelerator and look down the primary chamber area for a squirt of gas when you pump the accelerator. The choke plate must be closed tight and there must be a squirt of gas when pumping the accelerator. If either is missing the engine will not start up properly when left for four hours or more.

If the accelerator pump squirts gas just after the engine is shut off and does not squirt after sitting for a few hours, remove the carburetor and check it for leaking plugs in the main body that can be epoxy sealed. Do not replace the carburetor with another type. The Quardrajet delivers good power and fuel mileage.
