Prop Sought For Dollar

U.S. Moves To Force Up Interest Rates

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government rushed to the rescue of the faltering dollar Friday by trying to force up interest rates in the United States.

If the plan works, it may help control rising prices and increase the value of the dollar overseas, government officials said.

In the meantime, short-term credit costs to businesses and some other borrowers may go up, economists said.

The Federal Reserve, which controls the nation's money supply, took action by raising the discount rate, the interest rate banks must pay to borrow money from the government.

Effective Monday

The discount rate was raised from 7¼ percent to 7¾ percent, effective Monday. It was only the fifth time in 15 years the discount rate has been used for international purposes.

"The action was taken in view of recent disorderly conditions in foreign exchange markets as well as the continuing serious domestic inflationary problem," the Federal Reserve said.

After the announcement, the dollar moved up in value on foreign exchange markets and the stock market rallied.

The Carter administration applauded the action by the Federal Reserve, which is independent of the executive branch.

Called Essential

"The administration fully understands the reasons for this action. It is essential that we control inflation if we are to have a strong dollar and sustainable economic growth," a White House statement said.

"As we have said, there will be a series of continuing actions over the next several weeks to deal with these problems," it added.

The administration has promised some kind of continuing actions because of a steep decline in the dollar against other currencies. In the past 12 months the dollar has lost 33 percent against the Swiss franc, 30 percent against the Japanese yen and lesser amounts against weaker currencies. The decline had gotten worse in the past week.

Imports Cost More

That has meant imported products in the United States are more expensive and American travelers abroad must pay higher prices. It also erodes the dollar as the world's dominant currency.

Traders on foreign exchanges say the main reason for the dollar's decline is the inflation problem in the United States and the country's trade deficit with other countries.

Rising interest rates are intended to reduce the money supply and help reduce inflation. They also make U.S. investments more attractive to foreigners. If the money comes into this country, there are fewer dollars overseas and their value starts to increase again.

Trade Deficit

More spending in this country could also improve the country's trade deficit.

However, the Federal Reserve has clearly been concerned about the domestic damage that rising interest rates can cause. The chairman of the Fed, G. William Miller, has said that unless inflation is controlled, the agency might be forced to tighten credit so much that a recession may result.

The Commerce Department released a report Friday indicating that inflation during the spring was worse than previously predicted but that economic growth was stronger.

It said the inflation rate was 10.7 percent, worse than the 10.1 percent reported a month earlier. However, the economy grew at an annual rate of 8 percent, a stronger rate than the 7.4 percent estimated earlier.

The administration is expecting both consumer prices and the economy to grow more slowly in the second half.

The discount rate will now be the highest since a 7¾ percent rate Jan. 6, 1975. That was exceeded only by an 8 percent rate from April through June in 1974.

The rate dropped to 5½ percent Jan. 19, 1976, and increased steadily the last two years.

The growth of 8 percent in the gross national product for the second quarter was the best quarterly performance by the American economy since the 9.3 percent growth recorded in early 1976.

GNP declined 0.1 percent in the first three months of 1978 because of crippling winter weather in some parts of the nation and widespread effects of the coal strike.

The government forecast in July economic growth for the year would average 4.1 percent — about the present average for the first six months of the year.

Growth of the GNP in terms of constant 1972 dollars went from $1.354 trillion in the first quarter of 1978 to $1.38 trillion in the second quarter.

FAIR CATCH — First Lady Rosalynn Carter prepares to catch the brief case tossed by the president as the couple boarded a helicopter on the White House lawn preparatory to departing for Plains, Ga., and the start of a vacation. First Lady Flies Goodyear Blimp

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Rosalynn Carter piloted the Goodyear blimp high above suburban Virginia Friday in a dream-come-true outing arranged as a surprise 51st birthday present.

"She wanted to do that more than anything in the world," said Mrs. Carter's press secretary, Mary Hoyt, after the first lady spent about half an hour in one of the helium-filled blimps often used to provide aerial television coverage of sporting events.

The outing, arranged as a birthday "surprise" by White House staffers, occurred shortly before the presidential family left for Plains, Ga., and a joint birthday party for Mrs. Carter and her mother-in-law, Lillian Carter, who turned 80 Tuesday.

Before their departure, White House staffers decorated the lawns of the executive mansion with "happy birthday" signs.

The weekend stay in Plains will launch a two-week, high adventure vacation that will take the president and Mrs. Carter white-water rafting and wilderness camping in various western national parku.

Mrs. Hoyt said the blimp outing was kept secret from Mrs. Carter until she was packing to leave on the vacation trip.

She said Mrs. Carter took the controls for a time once the vehicle was aloft over Dulles International Airport and learned to "float it" as it cruised above the Virginia suburbs.

"Sme really enjoyed it," Mrs. Hoyt said.

She said Mrs. Carter had wanted a ride in the blimp after daughter Amy, 10, raved about her own experience in the lighter-than-air craft.n

Goodyear officials and their families presented Mrs. Carter with a yellow-and-white frosted cake inscribed "Happy Birthday from America," and with gifts that included a miniature blimp and a blimp-styled bottle of after-shave lotion for the president.

HEW Official Applauds Magnet School Program

By JEFF SOUTH
Avalanche-Journal Staff

ILES ELEMENTARY School's innovative magnet program may be a "national model" for quality instruction and voluntary racial integration, says a top official in the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

"This is one of the most exciting projects I have seen in some time. When you walk into the building, you can feel the enthusiasm of the staff. It's terrific," said Dr. Peter Relic, the No. 2 administrator in HEW's education division, after visiting Iles Friday.

"So much here is unique — for instance, the close relationship between the school system and the Texas Tech University college of education. Add to that the school's emphasis on the arts, and you've got a program with the potential for being a national model."

The visit by Relic, the government's deputy assistant secretary for education, coincided with "Information Day" on the Lubbock Independent School District court-ordered integration plan.

As part of the activities, hundreds of students did something that will become pretty routine after Aug. 29 — they rode a bus to school across town.

Accompanied by parents and even grandparents, elementary pupils toured the facilities and met the principals of the "sister schools" they will attend under the plan.

The "Information Day," which also involved affected students in the former Struggs Junior High area, was cosponsored by the school district and Lubbock's Opportunity for Our Kids, a desegregation transition group.

Volunteer Students Sought

In the desegregation plan, previously all-minority Iles is special in that it will not receive white students by mandatory reassignments. Instead, Iles will offer unique enrichment opportunities — such as early-morning and late-afternoon activities — to attract transfer students voluntarily from throughout the city.

Relic, whose office is in Washington, D.C., came to Lubbock from Dallas, the regional HEW headquarters.

"When I visit a regional office, I try to make it out to one of the outstanding school programs in that part of the country. I've heard so much about Iles, I wanted to come here and see for myself," Relic said.

Faculty Meeting Held

"Believe me, there is no more important and exciting program than this one."

Relic spoke to the Iles faculty and school system officials in the Iles cafeteria. He then held a press conference in the "greenhouse" — a part of the building that in itself says a lot about the magnet program.

The "greenhouse" used to be two separate conventional classrooms. But the district now has removed the wall and will utilize the large carpeted area — adorned with plants — for instruction of students 4 to 6 years old.

Such variable-age groupings reflect the school's "non-graded" format. Iles also will be non-graded in another sense; instead of traditional report cards, evaluation will be done primarily by teacher-

Erstwhile Mayoral Candidate Sought In Perjury Matter

By JACK DOUGLAS
Avalanche-Journal Staff

CARL Earl Wheeler was released from the Lubbock County Jail Friday afternoon after being incarcerated about four months for a crime officials in the Criminal District Attorney's Office now say he did not commit.

The 29-year-old Wheeler walked away from his cell about 5 p.m., an hour after aggravated perjury charges were filed against Leland G. Kelly, 22, of 3212 22nd St., who accused Wheeler of robbing him April 19.

Kelly, an unsuccessful mayoral candidate last April, had not been arrested by late Friday, a sheriff's spokesman said.

Wheeler, of 2404 E. 9th St., was arrested several days after Kelly filed his complaint with the police department. Unable to post $25,000 bond, he had been held in the county jail until his release Friday. Wheeler was indicted by a grand jury June 7.

Further investigation into the case, however, apparently convinced Dist. Atty. Alton Griffin that Wheeler was innocent of the charges and prompted Griffin to seek the man's accuser.

Earl Charles Wheeler, Carl's father, told D.A. investigators in a signed affidavit that he taped two telephone conversations between himself and Kelly, and that Kelly offered in both conversations to drop the charge against the elder Wheeler's son for money.

"I have listened to portions of two tapes in the district attorney's office today (Friday)," the affidavit reads. "They are the tapes recorded by me and my conversations with Leland Kelly," it continues.

The third degree felony charge against Kelly was filed in Justice of the Peace Charles Smith's court.

"Further investigation reveals that the aggravated robbery with which the defendant is charged did not occur and the complaining witness in this case is this day being charged with the felony offense of aggravated perjury," the formal motion to dismiss charges against Wheeler reads.

"As far as our office is concerned, there are no charges pending against him (Wheeler)," Asst. Dist. Atty. Tom Cannon said Friday.

According to reports, Kelly told police he was robbed of $250 by a man he later identified as Wheeler about 11:30 p.m. April 19 in front of a club at Idalou Road and East Broadway.

He said he was getting out of his car

Fire, Police Strike Ends In Memphis

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Mayor Wyeth Chandler announced Friday night that a settlement had been reached with striking police and firefighters, ending a week-old labor dispute in Tennessee's largest city. He lifted a 10 p.m.-to-6 a.m. curfew.

The final hours of negotiations between Chandler and union officials were filled with confusion.

Stomping and yelling, the 1,100 members of the Memphis Police Association and 1,400 members of the International Association of Firefighters had ratified two-year agreements earlier Friday, only to have Chandler question provisions of the contracts.

Even while the mayor and union leaders were meeting to iron out last minute differences, police returned to work for the start of the 4 p.m. shift.

However, David Baker, Memphis Police Association president, ordered them back off the job about two hours later in response to a snag in the talks with Chandler.

After the two sides reached final agreement, Baker said police would return to work at midnight. Firefighters were planning to return to work at the start of the 7 a.m. shift today.

"The one thing we have proved to the man uptown is that we are united," Baker said, telling some 500 angry policemen that the last-minute contract dispute had been worked out.

The policemen, many still in uniform and carrying their pistols, gathered at a city park near the Board of Education building after being pulled back off the job. Some of them had stripped off their uniform shirts and gunbelts and pulled worn picket signs from the trunks of their cars as they arrived.

When Baker arrived, he assured his members the dispute had been settled in their favor.

Baker said the dispute had centered on contract language involving a wage reopener clause in the two-year contract. "We wanted a one-year contract; we got a one-year wage reopener," Baker said.

Man Who Found God In Prison Fails In Plea For Probation

By FRANK PATRICK
Avalanche-Journal Staff

WINIFRED WELDON OWENS confessed, then gave testimony. He could have been a religious convert or a defendant in a courtroom.

In fact, he was both.

Officials and a handful of spectators listened attentively Friday as Owens, after pleading guilty to felony theft, told how he had been touched — literally — after praying to God.

"I was in the hospital. It was the lowest point in my life," the tall, angular dark-haired man said. He was serving a three-year sentence in an Oklahoma prison, convicted of driving and wrecking a stolen car while intoxicated.

It was midnight. Owens said he had just finished reading a devotional book, had plumbed to the depths in self-analysis and realized his 38-year-old life had been wasted.

"My wife had told me she was thinking about a divorce. I realized I might not see my children again that I loved and had brought into the world."

The book, Owens said, had said God should be thanked for everything. He began giving thanks.

"I said 'Thank you for the divorce, thank for the broken neck...'"

At that point, the defendant said, he felt two hands upon him, straightening his neck. It was then, Owens indicated, that he became a believer in God.

"He's performed several miracles this year that I can testify to," he said.

It was the testimony of a man with a lengthy record, who by his own admission had been in jail approximately 30 times. Prosecutor Bonner Smith questioned him in Dist. Judge John McFall's courtroom.

"And each time you've been given a new chance?" Owens agreed that was the case. "And you really want us to believe you can change the habits of a lifetime?"

Owens insisted his life was changed. He said he wanted to make restitution ("I've never paid off anybody in my life; I've always gone to prison").

Owens's freedom on the theft charge was at stake. He had turned down an offer of eight years from prosecutors, saying the time might even be easier than probation. But he wanted the probation to make restitution, support his family and serve the Lord.

Owens even offered to enter into an agreement that he could be indicted as an habitual criminal, with a possible life sentence, if he did not make it on probation.

As the prosecutor pointed to chances the defendant had had before, defense attorney Mackey Hancock frowned toward the counsel table. He stood.

"I really don't know what a defense lawyer can say in a situation like this... I think possibly we have a man here who believes a life of crime leads nowhere but to hell fire and damnation."

McFall then did what he gets paid for. He judged.

"There's no reason for me to doubt your sincerity," he said. But: "I can't grant probation, I just couldn't do it..."

McFall indicated he wanted to help, though. He assessed a six-year, not an eight-year prison term, and ordered any unadjudicated cases to be dismissed.

Court recessed. A small boy burst into the courtroom. "Daddy!" he said.

Owens' face split into a broad grin. He was still smiling as he waited for an elevator, a deputy beside him, preparatory to returning to jail.

Sixth Flood Victim Found At Albany

ALBANY (AP) — Bulldozers pushed through a pile of rubble and sediment Friday in Hubbard Creek and uncovered the body of a sixth victim of flood waters which ravished this West Texas community the night of Aug. 3.

The body of M. O. "Cobb" Mills of Albany was found about 3:45 p.m. inside his buried pickup truck. Private contractors, working on a cleanup and search contract with Shackelford County, also unearthed a stock trailer and a boat trailer.

Reason Behind Russia's End To Suit Unknown

WASHINGTON (AP) — The State Department on Friday welcomed the Soviet Union's abandonment of the slander prosecution of two American reporters. But officials said it was too early to tell whether the decision represented a Soviet effort to halt the downward spiral in relations between the superpowers.

The Soviets, through Moscow City Court Judge Lev Almazov, announced that they were dropping their insistence that reporters Craig Whitney of the New York Times and Harold Piper of the Baltimore Sun publish retractions of stories quoting anonymous dissidents who believed that Soviet authorities doctored the broadcast confession of an ex-dissident.

"We welcome the decision to stop the legal proceedings. We hope and expect this will be the end of the matter," said department spokesman Thomas Reston.

Speaking privately, administration Soviet Union experts said they believed the Soviets had decided the time had come to limit the damage the slander prosecution had done and might have done to relations.

In the past, Soviet actions against American reporters have been followed by reciprocal actions against Soviet reporters. In this case, though, the administration told the Soviets its retaliation might go to other areas of U.S.-Soviet relations.

So, the officials said, the Soviets decided to settle for the fines totaling $3,438 paid by Whitney and Piper and stop pressing for the retractions. Had they pursued the case, it probably would have ended with the expulsion of both reporters for refusing to retract their stories.

"They've made their point. They've asserted a certain jurisdiction over American correspondents in Moscow. I would not characterize it as a positive act, but it's less negative than it could have been," one official said.

Whether the decision to drop the case heralds a warming trend in U.S.-Soviet relations remains to be seen. Reston said there was no chance that the administration would reconsider its refusal to allow the sale of a large computer to TASS, the Soviet news agency. That sale was blocked because of Soviet trials of dissidents.

"We don't think it (the decision to drop the slander suit) calls for a positive response on our part, except to negotiate in good faith on the specific matters we've been discussing, like SALT," an official said.

The SALT negotiations have yet to resolve a number of thorny problems, including questions of missile modernization and the Soviets' Backfire bomber, the official said. But he added that both sides appear to be trying earnestly to reach an agreement.

"I think it's safe to say the Soviets have not been pleased with the way things are going between us. But whether they will make changes in their approach to human rights, or to Africa, or to arms negotiations remains to be seen," the official said.

New Standard Set On Car ID Numbers

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Department of Transportation has issued a new federal standard for a car's identification number to make the number more useful in combating auto theft and improve efficiency of safety recall campaigns.

Currently the standard requires only that an identification number be on passenger cars, that it be unique to a particular manufacturer in any 10-year period, and that it be located so that it is readable from outside the vehicle.

The new standard requires manufacturers to provide an identification number that will uniquely identify each motor vehicle, without duplication, for a 30-year period. It would have to contain 16 characters plus a check digit. For passenger cars, the identification would include manufacturer, make and type of vehicle, model, line, series, engine type, and the year of manufacturer.

Policeman Guilty In Civil Rights Case

HOUSTON (AP) — A former Houston policeman pleaded guilty Friday to conspiring to violate the civil rights of a Louisiana teen-ager, shot to death after a high-speed chase last year.

James A. Estes, 29, also agreed to testify against fellow officers charged in the death of Randall Allan Webster, 17, of Shreveport.

U.S. Magistrate H. Lingo Platter deferred sentencing until Estes testifies against other officers. Estes faces a maximum penalty of one year in prison and a $1,000 fine.

Webster was shot to death Feb. 8, 1977, after he had been stopped in southeast Houston following a chase over the freeways and roads of the city.

Former officers Danny Howard Mays, 31, Norval Wayne Holloway Jr., 29, Paul Danford Dillon, 37, and Robert Steven Bloodworth, 24, were indicted June 2 on civil rights violations, conspiracy and perjury.

William E. Byrd, 24, who was Estes' patrol car partner at the time of the shooting, earlier pleaded guilty to a charge of knowing a felony had been committed but failing to report it.

Byrd and another former officer, John Thomas Olin, 27, are expected to testify for the prosecution.

Under questioning Friday by Assistant U.S. Attorney Lupe Salinas, Estes said he and Byrd arrived at the scene of the shooting and were told that Mays had hit Webster on the head and that Mays' gun had discharged.

Estes testified that Holloway asked if anyone had a pistol to place near the youth to make it appear he had threatened or fired at the officers.

Estes said that Byrd had an extra pistol and it was put near the youth's body.

Police To Recreate Kennedy Assassination

DALLAS (AP) — Acoustical experts will record gunfire around Dealey Plaza Sunday morning in a sound simulation of the Kennedy assassination for the House Select Committee on Assassinations.

Police and the Federal Aviation Administration were asked earlier this month to do everything possible to limit noise in the area from 5:30 a.m. to 9:30 a.m.

Dallas police sharpshooters will attempt to recreate the sound of the bullets that killed President John F. Kennedy almost 15 years ago.

Experts from Bolt, Beranek and Newman of Boston will record the gunshots fired from the Texas School Book Depository. The firm is the same which analyzed the 18½ minute gap on President Nixon's White House tapes.

They will try to determine if more than three shots were fired at the presidential motorcade Nov. 22, 1963. The sounds caught Sunday will be compared with a Dallas police tape recording made the day of the assassination, which some say indicates a fourth shot was fired.

About 30 police tactical officers will seal off the area.

"This is not really going to be a time when public relations for police improve," said officer Dave Beidelman. "But we've got to have the area secured, and we're going to be very strict about it. The major reasons are to keep down noise and prevent any danger from ricocheting bullets."

Police are expected to fire Italian rifles, similar to the one allegedly used by Lee Harvey Oswald, at sand traps in metal boxes placed in the street. No automobiles will be used in the simulation.

High Court To Avoid Abilene Liquor Issue

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Supreme Court Friday refused to get into the Abilene wet-dry election controversy.

Attorneys for both sides said later they were unsure what effect, if any, the ruling would have on the complicated case.

The Supreme Court denied Sherman McBeath, administrator of the Texas Alcoholic Beverage Commission, authority to ask the court for a mandamus that would ban District Judge Charles Mathews of Austin from taking part in the case.

However, the high court said it was not expressing any opinion on Mathews' jurisdiction in the case.

Initial results of a June 17 local option election in Abilene, which has been dry for many years, showed voters favoring sales of liquor and beer by about 100 votes. However, the Taylor County commissioners court threw out one voting box when they made the canvass July 10 and said the dry forces won. Abilene District Judge Don Lane ordered the commissioners to count the box and a second canvass on July 20 showed the wet forces won.

Then Mathews ruled that Lane should not have ordered the second canvass, which left the July 10 tally for the drys in effect. He also issued a temporary restraining order to stop the Alcoholic Beveral Commission from issuing any liquor and beer permits for Abilene. On Aug. 14 Mathews said the restraining order would be extended for another 10 days while lawyers submitted more legal arguments.

He also declared the July 20 canvass favoring the Wets was void.

Meanwhile, wet forces in Abilene filed a contest of the election. No date has been set for a hearing.

Jules Verne Tale Inspires Intrepid Balloonists

PARIS (AP) — America's trans-Atlantic balloonists, hooked on "moving with the clouds like a particle of air," are dreaming of a new air adventure taken from the romantic pages of Jules Verne: a trip around the world in 30 days.

"I have a new one," Ben Abruzzo announced Friday with Maxie Anderson and Larry Newman of the Double Eagle II. "That's to build a bigger balloon — and it can be done — and we'd go to a higher altitude and we'd go around the world in 30 days, fly all the way around the world, entirely circumnavigate the globe."

On a bet, Verne's fictional Phileas Fogg and his sidekick Passepartout went around the world in 80 days, partly by balloon.

Abruzzo, 48; Anderson, 44, and Newman, 31, all from Albuquerque, N.M., ended the world's first Atlantic balloon crossing in a wheat field 60 miles west of Paris Thursday night. The 3,200-mile flight started the previous Friday in Presque Isle, Maine.

After a night of champagne celebrations, the trio, dubbed the "new Lindberghs" by the French press, told a news conference they will fly to London, probably Saturday, to collect a dinner wagered with a British balloon team that narrowly missed a similar crossing attempt last month.

Although they won the bet, the three said they will buy the dinner and discuss with the Britons — Maj. Christopher Davey, 34, and Donald Cameron, 39 — why the Double Eagle II succeeded at something that had eluded others in 17 previous trans-Atlantic attempts over the past 105 years.

Davey telephoned Abruzzo Thursday to congratulate the trio and accuse them good-naturedly of "adding insult to injury" by flying directly over Somerset, the major base for the Balloon Society of England, and over Davey's army barracks.

The three Americans spent Friday sightseeing. They later relaxed at a bistro by the Seine River while their wives visited the world-famous fashion house Chanel.

The French welcomed the balloonists with hoopla reminiscent of Charles Lindbergh's arrival here after his solo trans-Alantic flight in 1927.

Bartenders served "Le Ballon" cocktails. Normally blase Parisians flocked to the American Embassy residence to get a glimpse of the three heroes and newspapers devoted pages to photos and stories about the flight.

The three are without passports. They say they either accidentally threw them overboard when they jettisoned equipment to gain altitude near the Irish coast, or lost them when they were mobbed by admirers after their landing. The American Embassy is arranging for new ones.

Anderson mused to reporters about the momentous flight over the ocean:

"It's so quiet up there, so empty. You move with the clouds like a particle of air. You stand on the balcony and watch the world go by below. It's such a magnificent sight..."

Near the landing site children guarded treasured bits of the balloon they had chewed off. Souvenir hunters shredded the 112-foot-high balloon when it landed. The red-and-yellow gondola was saved and moved to Evreux, six miles from where they landed.

There was little left of the 3½-acre wheat field near the farming hamlet of Miserey where the three landed. The wheat, ready to harvest, was ruined by the crowds.

"We were delighted to have the balloon land on our farm, but frankly — how can I put this nicely — we would hope to have some compensation for our wheat field," Rachel Coquerel said. Her son Roger, 51, farms the family's 80 acres.

In Paris, Newman said the three had always planned to pay for any damage caused by their landing.

In Washington, a spokeswoman for the Smithsonian Institution said the institution has asked for the gondola, the equipment, the written record of the flight and any fabric remaining from the balloon for display in the room that houses the Apollo 11 moonship, Lindbergh's Spirit of St. Louis and the Wright brothers' plane.

The flight of the helium-filled Double Eagle quickly stirred new interest in ballooning. In London, Whitbread Co., a major brewer, put what it says is the world's largest hot-air balloon up for sale for one British pound, or $1.95. The balloon, which stands 154 feet tall when inflated, and can carry 30 people, was used in an advertising campaign that has been discontinued.

Among those interested are the men who built the balloon — Maj. Davey and Cameron.

And A Gag For Andy, Too?

WHETHER THE Carter administration, and especially the White House, is "getting its act together" or not remains a question.

But, there is no question but that there is a new way of handling things in the up to now free-wheeling atmosphere of "doing one's own thing" among the President's top people.

In brief, the White House has moved to put a damper on comments by everyone from Cabinet rank on down when it comes to policy statements.

THIS FIRST became evident with the arrival of Gerald Rafshoon, the Atlanta public relations man Mr. Carter has hired to improve his "image."

The latest in a series of "buttoning up" top-level official's comments came the past few days.

In one instance, House and Urban Development Sec. Patricia Harris canceled an appearance before a Congressional committee rather than change her planned statement on the Federal Reserve's tight money policy.

In another, Barry Bosworth, director of the Council on Wage and Price Stability, was told future statements about labor's role in his anti-inflation fight must be approved first by a new panel headed by Labor Sec. Ray Marshall. Bosworth had been accused by AFL-CIO George Meany of taking the side of business in his public pronouncements.

THESE MOVES came two weeks after the White House had forced presidential aide Midge Costanza to cancel a television appearance. Later, she resigned, citing differences of style and approach with the administration.

All of this naturally has Washington buzzing as to what Mr. Carter and the White House will do next.

While we would hope that the President does not swing the pendulum too far in the other direction, there is no question but that part of the administration's problem has been top echelon "spokesmen" galloping off in all directions the past year and a half.

WHILE MR. CARTER was making a statement in one part of town, the nation or overseas, one of his aides was saying something which seemed contradictory elsewhere.

Of course, in fairness to the aides, it must be noted that the President himself has been about as guilty as anyone in tossing out off-the-cuff comments on everything from energy to the Mideast.

And, then there is the case of UN Ambassador Andrew Young, who holds some sort of record for "clarifications" by a top official.

If in Mr. Carter's new crackdown he has included the loose-lipped UN Ambassador-At-Large, then the danger of "censorship" might be worth it!

AN EDITORIAL:

Strange Bedfellows, Indeed...

IT'S GONNA BE tough to beat the Illinois Senate race this year in the politics-makes-strange-bedfellows sweepstakes.

Democratic candidate Alex Seith, a Cook County lawyer and leader in the Council on Foreign Affairs in Chicago, is being heavily touted in his race against GOP Sen. Charles H. Percy by none other than M. Stanton Evans, a conservative honcho and syndicated columnist whose offerings appear weekly in The Avalanche-Journal morning editions.

EVANS, FORMER chairman of the American Conservative Union and contributing editor of the right-wing "Human Events" weekly, is beating the drums for Seith both in the magazine and in fund-raising letters to conservatives across the country.

Seith and Evans are old college chums from Yale, but there's more to it than that. Conservatives loathe Percy, one of the few relatively liberal Republicans left in the Senate.

And Seith, according to Newspaper Enterprise Assn. sources, is hoping Evans can help him woo GOP voters in Illinois who share that disenchantment with the incumbent.

Seith apparently is gambling that machine Democrats in Chicago will pull the lever for anyone running on the Democratic ticket—notwithstanding his viewpoints or allies—and that enough conservatives can be lured over to give him the edge over Percy.

Seith's effort to position himself to the right of Percy has already irked many Illinois liberals.

"Furthermore, his rather difficult personality has offended other potential supporters," write Martha Angle and Robert Walters.

SEITH'S ORIGINAL advertising consultants, the Washington firm of Rothstein-Buckley, pulled out after the primary election this year—reportedly, Angle and Walters said, "because they found Seith too temperamental to work with comfortably."

Percy held only a 42-30 edge over Seith in one Gannett newspaper poll published in the spring—not a strong showing against a little-known challenger. But the senator's campaign workers insist he's in better shape than that survey would indicate.

Because, you see, they're expecting returns from their OWN statewide survey by national GOP pollster Robert Teeter any day now.

ART BUCHWALD:

Deaths Of Their Reports Gravely Unexaggerated

(Repeated By Request)

WASHINGTON—This is a government of reports and studies. No matter what happens in this nation, the first solution is to appoint a commission to study it.

The commissions take one year, two years, some even longer, and then they make their report to the President. If the President agrees with the report it's released to the nation. If he or his staff disagrees with it it is buried. But where?

Just by chance I discovered the secret burial grounds of reports and studies made by presidential commissions.

THE CEMETERY IS located on a hill overlooking the upper Potomac. It is a quiet and deserted place, and only the chirping of birds or the call of a hoot owl can be heard.

Mr. Gottfried Snellenbach has been caretaker of the burial area for government reports ever since the Harding Administration, and after I had assured him I would not dig up any of the graves he let me enter the large, well-kept grounds.

"We've got some of the great reports of all times buried here," Mr. Snellenbach told me.

"We've got reports that cost $20 million, and we've got reports that cost $2,000, but in the end they all wind up here, buried six feet under."

"SIR, WHAT KIND of reports are resting here?"

"It might be better to ask what kind of reports aren't buried here. We have reports on violence, the Communist threat, housing, health care, law and order. You name it, and we've buried it."

"How does a report find its final resting spot in this setting?"

"Well, as you know, the President is always appointing a commission to study something or other, and after the study they're supposed to hand in a report.

"Now, lots of times the President has no intention of paying any attention to the report and it's dead before it's even written. Other times someone on the President's staff reads a report handed in by a commission and says, 'This stuff is dynamite. We have to kill it.'

"IN SOME CASES the President says, 'Let's release this report to the press and then bury it.' Occasionally a report will just die of heartbreak because nobody pays any attention to it.

"In any case, after the report is dead it has to be buried, because if you're President you don't want someone finding it at a later date and using it against you.

"So every week each report that has died is placed in a pine box and loaded on a government hearse and brought up here, where we have a simple ceremony before lowering it into the ground.

"If it's a blue-ribbon panel report that's been killed in action, we give it a 21-gun salute. Otherwise, we lay it to rest with as little fuss as possible."

"THIS CEMETERY goes for miles and miles," I said.

"No one knows how many reports have been buried here by the different Presidents."

"Mr. Snellenbach, this is a beautiful cemetery and very impressive. But why does the government go to so much trouble and expense to keep it up for nothing more than paper reports?"

"You must understand that most of the men asked to serve on presidential commissions are very important citizens. They spend months and years working on these reports, and they feel very close to them.

"When their reports are killed or buried, these men feel a personal loss. Many days you will see them sitting here next to the tombstones of their studies, tears rolling down their cheeks. No matter how long you work here, it still gets to you."

Lightly Speaking...

Two wary heavyweights clinched and pawed their way around the ring.

In the bored stillness, this man's voice was heard in every corner of the arena. "Hit him now, Joe," he advised. "You got the wind with you."

Overheard: "Sometimes I get the feeling I'm only a summer rerun on the television screen of life."

ROWLAND EVANS AND ROBERT NOVAK:

The Dresser Debacle

EVANS

WASHINGTON—Madcap confusion over President Carter's trade policy toward Moscow climaxed on Aug. 10 when national security adviser Zbigniew Brzezinski read a headline in the Washington Post that the celebrated Dresser sale of oil-drilling technology to the Soviets had been approved by Commerce Secretary Juanita Kreps.

With Secretary of State Cyrus Vance listening in on an extension, Brzezinski made an urgent phone call to Mrs. Kreps to ask: is it "too late" to reverse this? "No," replied the secretary of commerce.

Commerce Department officials, who had pushed hard inside the government for approval of the $140 million drill-bit plant for the Russians, held their breath—waiting for the new order clearly suggested by Brzezinski's question. It never came.

THAT INCIDENT captures the ambivalence at highest administration levels on whether and how much to use U.S. technology as a political weapon to moderate Soviet violations of human rights commitments, harassment of American businessmen in Moscow and other political wrongs.

Having marched up the hill last month flying the banner of trade reprisals against the Kremlin, Uncle Sam was now marching back down with approval of the drill-bit plant (to be built by Dresser Industries of Dallas).

Hence, the familiar questions: What is Jimmy Carter really up to? What does he want?

Once again, the President has raised a specific expectation by policy pronouncements pointing in one direction—then, without preparation or explanation, going in the other.

HE RETAINS HIS new power to veto energy-related technology sales to Moscow. But judging from the Dresser case, the Kremlin can be excused for not panicking.

On Brzezinski's desk when he read that headline was a sharply pointed letter to Carter from Sen. Henry M. Jackson in his capacity as chairman of the permanent investigations subcommittee.

"Given your new policy of controlling energy-related technology," Jackson wrote on Aug. 7, "it would be ironic if the largest such transfer in recent years were the first to be consummated under your new policy guidelines."

Delivered three days before the Commerce Department leaked its final approval of export licenses for the Dresser drill-bit plant, Jackson's letter flashed a political danger sign.

Jackson revealed just how far he wants to go to block the Dresser shipment: a full-scale investigation of its military and political implications at a time of heightened U.S.-Soviet tensions.

JACKSON'S SUBCOMMITTEE staff is now digging into economic facts that may well refute this contention by Mrs. Kreps: if the Russians were denied the Dresser plant, they could buy everything connected with it—including such high technology as electronic beam welders—in Western Europe, Japan or even Eastern Europe.

So Jackson's letter was a polite request for the President to postpone final approval on the Dresser plant "while the subcommittee is inquiring into" national security matters raised by the sale.

The only answer to his letter was the Washington Post headline disclosing that the Commerce Department had preempted him. Far from backing down, Jackson still intends to put pressure on the administration by pushing his investigation.

HE HAS POWERFUL allies, one of whom is Energy Secretary James Schlesinger. Schlesinger's office notified Rauer Myer, director of export control in Commerce, by letter on Aug. 4 that Dr. Schlesinger strongly opposed an export license for the electronic beam welder.

Oddly, this went unmentioned when the Commerce Department informed Brzezinski that every agency involved in the matter—with the technical exception of the State Department—had approved the sale.

The reservation of State, strictly temporary, was tied to Soviet treatment of Francis Jay Crawford, the American businessman hauled from his car and arrested on trumped-up currency-violation charges.

The Crawford outrage delayed the State Department only until Aug. 8. Immediately thereafter, Commerce formally approved the package.

AN ANGRY Schlesinger was not informed about the final Commerce Department decision until he read it in the paper. His Energy Department normally is not involved in export control policy, but the President had made Schlesinger an adviser on the Dresser plant because of his background as former director of Central Intelligence and secretary of defense.

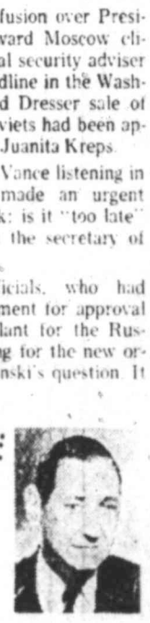

How far Schlesinger will now go to block the license for the electronic beam welder is uncertain, but he is concerned that this piece of technology has military value.

Beyond that, Schlesinger agrees with Jackson that approval of the Dresser plant makes a farce of the administration's new policy of restraining sale of energy-related technology to the Soviet Union.

It also raises this question: what signal did Jimmy Carter really mean to send the Russians when he got tough last month?

HENRY J. TAYLOR:

By Any Name...

PRESIDENT CARTER apparently fails to understand the full thrust of Communism. Sometimes he seems to understand it and then—as usual—backtracks. But the fact remains: The age-old system of despotism now passes under the name of Communism.

Today there are 14 Communist parties in the world. Their combined membership is not more than 44 million. They rule 1.2 billion people in 14 nations. This means that the ruling Red minority is less than four percent of the majority it rules.

Moreover, this minority rule is enforced by a minority within the ridiculously small minority. Typically, the real power rests with a tightly knit little band of Central Committee members who are the fraction of the Communist party members that belong to the Politboro.

THEIR METHOD is simply to shut out public participation in the Communist Party in their basic concept of minority rule.

For example, the Soviet Union has about 252 million people. Communist Party leader Leonid I. Brezhnev announced officially that in the Soviet Union the Communist Party has 14 million members. The Communists rule the other 228 million people, they are second-class citizens.

Red China is the same: 19 million Communist party members control more than 800 million people. The secret police apparatus is the dreaded, iron-fisted Public Security Bureau (Hai Wai-Tiao).

Both are police states—sinister empires casting their dark shadows across about a third of mankind.

OF ALL THE world's countries, these two have spilled more of their own people's blood and brutalized them with such passion that you wonder how the people are still under two national umbrellas.

The dreaded Soviet secret police, the KGB, has the practiced silence of a big cat in the jungle. Surely the first right in any country is the right to leave.

But, on all Soviet frontiers, the KGB has at least 250,000 border guards. And if you can get an exit visa it costs the equivalent of about $1,000.

The guards unit at the Kremlin wears special uniforms distinguishing it from all other KGB units. The Moscow police force is an integral part of the Red Army militia. It is backed up by the elite Motorized Infantry Division.

BEFORE WORLD WAR II Estonia, Latavia and Lithuania were independent nations. But the Soviet operates on the principle that might makes right. All three were forcibly annexed into the U.S.S.R.

The Soviet intimidation and faithlessness applied there is probably the most horrible on record. They border on the U.S.S.R. and the Helsinki Pact ratified the security of the Soviet's eastern frontier.

In respect to human rights, Moscow also violated the Helsinki Pact in Angola, Ethiopia, Mozambique and elsewhere as well as in the Warsaw Pact countries.

Meanwhile, in the last 60 years—since Lenin staged the Soviet revolution—the Soviet has acquired more territory by war than any country on earth. And in satellite countries the Soviet controls the nation's own politics about 90 percent.

Unfortunately, President Carter has a great deal of homework.

In a physician's waiting room: "An apple a day doesn't do it."

Keep an open mind. Something might fall in.

VIRGINIA PAYETTE:

Rat Race Ruins Us

NOW THAT THE taxpayers have their revolt going nicely, there are rumbles from another direction: The businessmen are in a revolutionary mood.

Over what? Over all the government regulations, what else?

Any day now the executives of America are going to get mad enough to rise up against their sea of paper work troubles and, by rebellion, end them. It's the only way they'll ever get their companies back.

The way it is now, the government's the real boss of every business in the country.

It tells the owners which employes they can hire, those they can fire and, more importantly, those they can't.

IT TELLS THEM how to run their plants, how to provide for their workers' health and safety, how to price their products, what their wage scale should be, and the extent to which they can compete.

It requires them to act as government tax collectors through a federal withholding plan.

And it requires tons and tons of forms to be filled out and mailed in to assure the bureaucrats their regulations are being carried out all along the line. If they ever bother to read them, that is.

Just thinking about what all this adds up to—in money and manhours—is enough to trigger any executive into a "paper work revolt." Weapons? Electronic copiers firing blank forms. In triplicate, of course.

ON THE DOLLAR side, everybody seems to agree that the price of government regulation this year will be around (brace yourselves) $103 billion.

That includes the $32 billion private industry spends on federal forms, most of which, according to the recently dissolved commission on paper work, is "absolutely unnecessary."

That's on top of the $33 billion industries spend to meet government regulations regarding environment, safety, health and other requirements.

And there are more than 4,400 different federal forms that have to be filled out. This takes a staggering 143 million manhours every year.

There's more. Once the government makes the regulations, it has to process the compliance reports and make sure nobody cheats. This costs around $3.2 billion.

WHICH BRINGS US to the inflationary angle.

Nobody's absolutely sure just what the economic impact of regulatory red tape really is, but President Carter's wage and price expert, Barry Bosworth, is willing to go out on a limb with a guess. He says it could boost inflation by as much as three-quarters of a percentage point this year alone.

What it does do, for sure, is make everything cost more.

Take new houses. Builders complain that all the regulations, codes and laws on the books can drag out construction by as much as two years and add $2,500 to the price before you even figure in the higher costs of labor and materials.

That means consumers, who are expected to build two million homes this year, will be paying out $4 million extra because of regulations.

AUTOMOBILES? Required safety and pollution features increase the price of an average passenger model by $666. And, if customers buy the expected 11 million new cars this year, their "compliance costs" will come to around $7 billion.

But that's not the end of it. That extra equipment makes the automobiles heavier, which means they guzzle more gas. And there's another regulation cost of $3 billion for motorists.

There's no way of telling how much manufacturers spend to meet the requirements of the Occupational Safety and Health Administration.

The total number of its standards is mind-boggling, but any householder knows that what factory owners spend is passed along to him in the form of higher prices.

THE STEEL INDUSTRY complains that the $1 billion a year it spends on pollution controls has forced steel up to a non-competitive $8 a ton.

Dry cleaners, chemical plants, auto-body shops and manufacturers are screaming that the government's campaign to ban all cancer-causing agents from work areas could cost them more than $120 billion.

And without any hard proof that the suspected carcinogens are authentically harmful.

President Carter is aware of the burden and he's trying to do something about it. Bitter businessmen say he's going to have to come up with something better than good intentions—and fast. As of now, the regulation rat race is getting worse every year.

IT HAS REACHED the point where, as one executive puts it: "The government has more to say about running my business than I do. And it's running it the way it does everything—right into the red.

"My labor costs are up, my compliance costs are up and, naturally, my prices are going up. I am sick to death of it—and so are my customers."

Maybe Carter can put down their protests with his "regulatory budget plan," a sort of paper work peace treaty.

But I can tell you one thing—he'd better not put it in writing.

L.M. BOYD:

...Pass It On

THERE ARE more recognized morons among men than among women. Likewise, more recognized geniuses among men than among women.

But the intelligence of men and women at the median are just about equal. I mean in those areas of semi-bright, bright and ultra-bright. The mentality of the female seems to be more stable than that of the male for some mysterious reason.

Therefore, researchers conclude, the decisions of women tend to be more predictable than those of men. If true, your typical fair-haired scatterbrain is more likely to be a blond than a blonde.

First bandleader to appear with his group on television was none other than Mr. Fred Waring with his Pennsylvanians, the same Mr. Waring, incidentally, who invented the Waring blender.

Some Old West historians contend that the Colt revolver used by New Mexico Sheriff Pat Garrett to kill Billy the Kid was originally the gun of wild Bill Hickok, serial No. 130345, with "Wild Bill" engraved on its butt. Maybe so, don't know.

Oil Firm Announces Gas Find In Coastal Tap

NEW YORK (AP) — Texaco Inc. said Friday it had found a second source of natural gas in its exploratory well in the Baltimore Canyon 100 miles off the New Jersey coast, but the company backed off an earlier announcement that oil also had been discovered.

The latest gas discovery was made just before midnight Thursday at a depth of 13,000 feet in the 15,000-foot deep well. The natural gas flowed at a rate of 9.4 million cubic feet a day. The earlier find, discovered Sunday and announced Monday, is 14,000 feet deep and is flowing at 7.5 million cubic feet per day.

Texaco said the natural gas that surfaced Thursday brought with it about 100 gallons of "liquid petroleum" for each million cubic feet of gas.

Texaco spokesman J.S. Hiltunen said earlier Friday that the liquid petroleum, which he said could be defined as low-quality oil, "is a bonus, actually. We weren't expecting it."

But Hiltunen later said the liquid petroleum was actually condensed natural gas, created as the gas reached the surface and cooled.

"We haven't come across oil as such, per se," he added.

Hiltunen said, however, that the company was not ruling out an eventual discovery of oil at the site.

Industry sources said finding some liquid petroleum in natural gas is not uncommon, because natural gas is produced as the result of high pressures and hot temperatures on oil.

"The only significance (of the Texaco liquid petroleum) that I could give at this stage of the game is that the temperatures and pressures were not enough to 'cook' all the oil, so it's encouraging on that basis," said an industry source who asked that his name not be used.

Texaco said it was still uncertain whether the area would produce enough natural gas to be worth putting it into production, and tests to determine that could take another year.

But Texaco said the two natural gas finds "confirm the presence of significant gas reserves at this location."

Texaco officials said Monday that to justify building a production platform and pipeline to shore, the area would have to produce 200 million cubic feet of gas a day and have a reserve of at least a trillion cubic feet of gas. The United States uses 20 trillion cubic feet of natural gas a year.

Texaco's gas discovery Sunday was the first made in the area. Two previous exploratory wells drilled by Shell and Continental Oil, about 25 miles west of Texaco's well, found nothing.

Exxon is drilling a well closer to the Texaco project, but so far has turned up nothing. Exxon plans to drill deeper. Mobil, Gulf and Houston Oil Mineral also have exploratory wells in the Baltimore Canyon area.

Texaco and five smaller partners paid the federal government $16.83 million for the right to drill in the 5,693-acre block following an auction of drilling rights in August 1976.

The Baltimore Canyon is among the first in a new generation of offshore gas and oil reserves that government and petroleum industry officials hope will help cut the nation's reliance on foreign fuels.

Other areas under development are to the north and south of the Baltimore Canyon area in the Atlantic and off the coast of Atlanta. Offshore wells in the Gulf of Mexico and off California are already producing about one-sixth of the nation's domestic petroleum.

Oil Terminal Would Help Clean Air

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A unique agreement that would clear the way for a huge Alaskan oil terminal in nearby Long Beach while also cleaning up Southern California's air was announced Friday.

"This is the first time business and government have come together to match economic expansion and environmental benefits," Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. said at a news conference. "This proves environmental quality and economic expansion can go hand in hand."

The agreement signed Friday by Standard Oil of Ohio (Sohio) and the Southern California Edison Co. calls for Sohio to spend about $78 million for pollution control equipment at an Edison generating plant in Long Beach. Sohio would also spend $3 million to $5 million to reduce pollution from 13 Southern California dry cleaning plants.

Sohio first announced plans for the $525 million terminal in 1975 but ran into objections from the California Air Resources Board (ARB), which contended the project would seriously damage air quality in the already smoggy Southern California air basin. The terminal is part of a massive project to feed Alaskan crude oil to the Midwest through about 1,000 miles of pipeline stretching from Long Beach to Midland, Texas.

The project must still be approved by the ARB, the South Coast Air Quality Management District and voters in Long Beach, where a referendum opposing the project is on the November ballot. A favorable ruling from the Internal Revenue Service is also needed.

"This is the first time our pollution 'trade-off' policy has been applied to a large project and it sets a major precedent for industrial development in the nation," Brown said. "Often before, new industrial growth has meant a growth in air pollution. But under a new procedure developed by the ARB, this Alaskan oil terminal will be built without increasing smog levels. In fact, some improvement in air quality will almost certainly come about."

California's tradeoff policy, later adopted as part of the 1977 federal Clean Air Act, requires business to remove as much or more pollution as any new project would create. However, while federal rules require eliminating one pound of pollutant for each pound created, a one-for-one tradeoff, state law mandates a 1.2 for 1 tradeoff in an attempt to clean up the air.

Lubbock Area Sidesteps Spectacular Phenomena

Seven cows died when they were struck by lightning northwest of Duluth, Minn., during heavy thunderstorms which moved through Minnesota, Wisconsin and Illinois, and a moderately strong earthquake shook south central Alaska Friday.

Rainfall totals from the storms in the midwest were moderate, despite the electrical activity, with readings including precipitation at .15 inch at Duluth and .25 at Minneapolis-St. Paul, .05 at Chicago, .26 at Miswaukee and .34 at Indianapolis.

Heavier rainfall totals were recorded to the east, with 1.25 at Louisville, as rains filled streams and small rivers in much of northern Kentucky.

In Alaska, the Palmer Observatory said the tremor which shook part of the state Friday, registered a 5.9 on the Richter scale.

The quake was centered 45 miles southwest of Homer and about 145 miles south of Anchorage. It was felt as far away as Fairbanks, more than 500 miles from the epicenter.

In Homer, a fishing community on the Kenai Peninsula, Greg McCullough of the Alaska State Troopers said, " You definitely could feel it; things moved and the building creaked. But everything is intact as far as we can tell."

Gene Pardini, a bartender, was in the 17th floor lounge of the Anchorage Westward Hilton Hotel, when the quake occurred. "The room swayed very nicely and casually," he said.

Jim Victory, who was putting a roof on an Anchorage home at the time of the quake, said he had to struggle, but managed to hold on to the roof.

Every tremor revives the memory of the 1964 Alaska earthquake, which registered 8.5 on the Richter scale—the largest ever recorded in North America..and claimed more than 100 lives and caused ore than $500 million in damages throughout the state.

The balance of the nation reported mild to hot temperatures, with expected for today.

On the South Plains of Texas, high temperatures again ranged around and to 100 degrees, with Lubbock's official high recorded at 98.

The forecast called for slightly cooler temperatures today, with a high in Lubbock in the high 80s, low temperatures in the mid 60s tonight.

Lightning Bigger Threat Than Most People Think

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

By the time you finish reading this sentence, lightning will have struck the earth's surface more than 100 times.

"Summertime," says the weather bureau, "is lightning time." On the average, lightning kills more people every year than either hurricanes or tornados; annual property damage tops $100 million.

The National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration says that lightning hits the earth 100 times a second; there are 1,800 thunderstorms in progress at any given moment.

Michael Mogil of the National Weather Service said about 100 persons are reported killed by lightning each year, but he estimated that the actual death toll is about double that.

Several factors make it hard to pinpoint the number of deaths caused by lightning. The weather service, said Mogil, relies on newspaper reports for its statistics and some deaths simply don't make the papers. Other deaths caused by lightning may be attributed to something else. If, for example, someone dies in a fire started by lightning, the fire, and not the lightning, will probably be listed as the cause of death.

Mogil said most of the deaths are avoidable. "Common sense could cut the death and injury toll substantially," he said.

One problem, Mogil said, is that "people don't feel sufficiently threatened." Just as they ignore hurricane warnings, they ignore the danger signs of an approaching thunderstorm.

Joggers, for example, are reluctant to stop their exercise. The rain feels nice and cool. They continue running. And they may run into trouble. So far this year, Mogil said, two people have been struck by lightning while jogging; one died.

Lightning occurs during thunderstorms which are caused by warm, moist air rising into cold air above. A flow of electrical current can travel from cloud to cloud, from cloud to ground or, where high structures are involved, from ground to cloud.

A number of myths have grown up about lightning and failure to separate fact from fantasy could be fatal.

It is fact, for example, that you are fairly safe inside your home, as long as the doors and windows are closed. Most deaths and injuries occur outdoors; almost half of all people killed by lightning are engaged in outdoor recreation. (Eighty percent of those killed are male, apparently because men and boys are outside more often.)

It is fantasy, in contrast, to rely on rubber-soled shoes to protect you. Lightning can carry a charge of up to 100 million volts. The rubber sole, said Mogil, "is insignificant as an insulator."

It is also fantasy to believe that lightning never strikes twice. "That's dead wrong," said Ed Weigel of the National Weather Service, noting that the Empire State Building in New York is a frequent target. The conditions that attract the lightning bolt the first time will attract it again.

A giant thunderstorm can develop in as little as 30 minutes. It's time to start protecting yourself when you see the clouds gathering. As a general rule, you should avoid high places, metal and water. Among specific safety guidelines:

—If you are outside, seek shelter in a house or other large building. Steer clear of sheds or small buildings in isolated areas.

—If you can't reach a building, get in your car. Assuming that the car is not a convertible, it will act as a cage to protect you. The metal picks up the lightning, conducts it around you and into the ground. Stay in the car. Keep windows, doors and sun roof shut.

—Do not stand under a tall tree. "The worst thing that people do is find themselves a big, natural leafy umbrella," Weigel said. If lightning strikes, electricity can run down the trunk, through the roots, into the ground and, from there, into your body.

—Try to find a low area. Avoid hill tops. If you are in the woods, look for a spot with small trees. Golfers should get rid of clubs which could attract lightning.

—Stay away from the water. Get to shore if at all possible. Get rid of your fishing pole.

—If you are riding a bicycle, motorcycle or tractor, get off. The rubber tires won't protect you.

—If you are caught in a flat, open field, bend down and put your hands on your knees. Do not lie down. The idea, said Weigel, is to present as low a profile as possible while maintaining minimum contact with the ground.

—If you are inside, close windows and doors. Lightning can strike through an open window. Stay away from large appliances.

—Don't take a bath. The bathtub is metal and electricity striking the plumbing system can be conducted into the tub and through the water.

—Don't talk on the telephone unless it's absolutely necessary. Electricity can travel through telephone wires.

Students Requesting Indian Classification

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — At least 50 Jefferson County students, most of them white, are asking that they be classified as American Indians in what school officials say may be an effort to avoid court-ordered busing.

David Espin, assistant superintendent of pupil personnel, said the switch to the Indian classification, a minority status, would exempt the students from busing.

The students can change their classification by having their parents sign a notarized statement that their child is a member of a minority. School officials cannot challenge the word of the parents, Espin said, because they don't have time to trace a student's background.

FBI Wants To Avoid Bank Heist Cases

WASHINGTON (AP) — The FBI won an ally Friday in its effort to leave bank robbery investigations to local police agencies, thus freeing itself to concentrate on such things as organized crime and political corruption.

Congressional auditors told the Senate Judiciary Committee the FBI is on the right track and should go even further in reducing its enforcement role against bank robbers.

However, spokesmen for financial institutions argued that the nation's top law enforcement agency should not get out of the bank robbery investigation business, saying local police cannot do the job alone.

The Justice Department has proposed cutting the FBI bank robbery budget on grounds that the agency's efforts against organized crime, white collar crime, racketeering and public corruption merit a higher priority.

However, Sen. Charles Mathias Jr., R-Md., who presided over the Friday's hearing, has been fighting the proposed cuts.

The FBI's position was supported by William J. Anderson, deputy director for general government in the General Accounting Office, the auditing arm of Congress. He presented highlights of an unpublished GAO report on federal bank robbery investigation.

"We concluded from our work that the attorney general should direct the FBI to establish and carry out a plan to minimize its investigative involvement in bank robberies," Anderson said.

Specifically, the GAO recommended that the FBI limit itself to assisting in interstate investigations and serving as a clearinghouse to link bank robberies in different states.

Robert L. Keuch, deputy assistant attorney general in the criminal division, said reduction of the federal role in bank robbery investigations "has been evolving over several years."

However, he added, "The GAO seems to go too far in projecting a role for the bureau that would make it merely a clearinghouse for information. We don't contemplate that."

George N. McGrath of Conway, S.C., chairman of the insurance and protective committee of the U.S. League of Savings Associations, said 66 per cent of bank crimes in 1977 were solved and the FBI helped in 76 per cent of the solutions.

"Without the continued support and expertise of the FBI, I have grave doubts that the solution rate for these crimes will approach such levels," he said.

"The FBI has taken its licks over the past few years. But don't make any mistake about the situation. To people who find themselves facing a gun as they work behind a teller's counter, FBI agents are heroes," McGrath said.

Wilbur N. Melin of New York, representing the National Association of Mutual Savings Banks, said the proposed cut in FBI funds "will be interpreted as a clear signal to the criminal community that law enforcement efforts in this area are being de-emphasized, and this can be expected to result in an increase in the number of overall incidents."

President Carter's budget for the FBI proposed a 22 percent reduction, amounting to $5.1 million and 202 jobs, in funds to combat forcible crimes against banking institutions. At Mathias' suggestion, the Senate limited the reduction to 10 percent.

The GAO said most bank robberies are solved by simple investigative techniques which local police could perform. It said interstate investigation played a role in only nine of 191 solutions it studied.

D.A. Drops Bribery Charge Against Mayor

LAREDO (AP) — Webb County District Attorney Charles Borchers said Friday he will drop bribery charges against former Mayor J.C. Martin Jr.

That decision followed an instructed verdict of innocent for Central Power Light Co. and it district manager, Carlton Whitworth, Thursday by a state district court judge.

The judge ruled on a defense motion after the prosecution had presented its case. CPL was charged with trying to influence Martin to set favorable electric rates. Testimony revealed Martin had been given free service by the utility.

Researchers Report Progress Against Cancer

AUSTIN (AP) — Cancer research centers are now curing "systemic cancers" such as those that have spread to the bones, Dr. R. Lee Clark said Friday.

"I've never said that before," asserted Clark, president emeritus of the University of Texas Cancer Center in Houston — which operates M.D. Anderson Hospital and Tumor Institute.

Clark gave a report to the Legislative Budget Board on "The Impact of Cancer in Texas" and later talked to reporters.

"I can say now . . . we are curing systemic or generalized cancer with a combination of treatments," Clark said.

He said it now appears that about 50 percent of those treated in major cancer centers for bone tumors will survive five years. This is the time commonly used for pronouncing a patient cured.

"Five years ago that figure was 8 percent," Clark added.

He also said five-year survivals are recorded in 70 percent of the cases of kidney tumors in children and muscle tumors, where the rate was only 10 percent a decade ago.

Fifty-five percent of children with leukemia now remain free of the disease five or more years after treatment, compared with none 30 years ago, Clark said.

The breakthroughs in treating systemic cancers have been largely through chemotherapy and immunotherapy — using drugs that exploit the body's own immune responses to attack tumors, he said.

Clark told the budget board the incidence of lung cancer is higher in Texas than the national average and is "almost epidemic in proportion." Lung cancer accounts for one in every four cancer deaths, he said.

A detailed national cancer survey of 10 major cities showed the Dallas-Fort Worth area — used as one of the samples — had a higher than average incidence of leukemia, melanoma, Hodgkin's disease and cancer of the pancreas, cervix, oral cavity, ovary, kidney and thyroid.

Clark predicted there will be 36,957 new cases of cancer reported in Texas in 1980, with at least four times that many people being treated for previously diagnosed cancers.

While Texas' population rose about 9 percent between 1969 and 1976, cancer deaths increased 26 percent, Clark said.

He said that while out-patient care is one way to reduce medical costs, most insurance policies pay the full cost of radiation treatments only if the patient is hospitalized.

Walk-in patients must pay 20 percent of their radiation therapy costs under most policies, Clark said.

Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, budget board chairman, asked for bill drafts on legislation requiring insurance policies to pay all the costs of radiation therapy for in-patients and out-patients.

He also called for proposed legislation requiring physicians to report to the state on the number of cancer patients they see. This would provide follow-up data that Clark said is vital to cancer research.

Veteran Complainer Assails Poe, Texts

AUSTIN (AP) — Edgar Allen Poe's "gruesome " poem, "The Raven," does not belong in a ninth grade classroom, conservative textbook reviewer Norma Gabler declared Friday.

"You don't need to see television. You can get enough gore and violence in the classroom," she told the State Textbook Committee. "We don't object to Poe as a writer. He does write other things, though."

The Longview critic marked her 17th consecutive appearance at the annual textbook hearings where books proposed for adoption are assailed by reviewers and defended by publishers.

The hearings end Tuesday, and the committee will make recommendations Sept. 11 to the State Board of Education, which adopts books, Nov. 11.

"I think it's time we tell our young people that there's something good about America," Mrs. Gabler said about one of several American history texts she found objectionable.

"The American Adventure, Vol. 2" by Allyn Bacon publishers devotes too much space to the Vietnam War, Watergate and farmworker leader Cesar Chavez, while leaving out temperance leader Carry Nation, Mrs. Gabler said.

In response, company representative Frank Cronin said the book was balanced and "definitely within the (state textbook) proclamation that the problems of American be discussed."

During a morning session, Mrs. Gabler went through detailed objections to 28 history, literature and reading books. Her pre-filed objections and the publishers' responses filled almost 10 volumes of material.

Her complaints ranged from objections to pop art pictures of the Mona Lisa with a mustache, to the way a publisher addressed her in written responses.

"Fifteen times, the publisher has referred to me as a 'Ms.' The publisher knows I'm an 'M-R-S,' " she said of Houghton-Mifflin Co.

During a break, the textbook hearing veteran complained that this year's batch of proposed texts is "worse" than previous years.

"There's so much of the problems of America included and not enough of the achievements," she said, adding that none of the history books proposed for adoption passed her standard of fairness.

"We don't object to violence," she said of several objections to "gory, gruesome" literature selections. "That's a part of life, but we do object to a steady diet of it, particularly for seventh and eighth grade students."

Descendants of the Battenberg family, founded through a morganatic marriage, have ascended to all the thrones of Europe.

U.S. To Eye Latin Conference

By United Press International

U.S. Christians who have supported "liberation theology" in Latin America as a means of lining up the church on the side of the poor and the oppressed are anxiously watching preparations for this fall's Latin American bishops' conference.

The meeting, known as CELAM III, will be the first gathering of the region's bishops since Pope Paul VI convoked the second general conference of Latin American bishops which met at Medellin, Colombia in 1968.

The Medellin meeting has been called the turning point in the Roman Catholic church's life in Latin America.

In a series of documents adopted by the bishops, the church denounced the enormous gap between rich and poor and described the economic inequality as a "situation of sin" caused by "institutional violence."

The bishops also spoke harshly of capitalism as a system that was as inhuman as communism.

The bishops' statements at Medellin provided a framework of justification for liberation theology — a reading of the Bible that sees Jesus, and in turn the church, in the role of social and economic liberator of the poor and the oppressed.

Increasingly, such a reading pitted the church against the growing number of Latin and Central American military regimes and the large landowners with a stake in maintaining the social and economic status quo.

In Latin America, following Medellin, the church plunged into the struggle for social change with the result that some 700 priests, nuns and bishops have been murdered, exiled, tortured or arrested and harassed in the past decade.

In October, the bishops will gather once again, this time in Puebla, Mexico.

Already, church conservatives and progressives are engaged in a struggle over the conference's preparatory working documents that will set the agenda and tone for the meeting.

Progressives are fearful that the Puebla meeting will be controlled by conservatives seeking to undo the social action accomplishments of Medellin.

Conservatives, on the other hand, are concerned that the Mexico meeting, if controlled by the progressives, will further radicalize the church and put the stamp of approval on a theology of religious Marxism.

Two representatives of the U.S. hierarchy, Archbishop John Roach of St. Paul-Minneapolis, vice president of the National Conference of Catholic Bishops, and Precious Blood Father Joseph Charron, associate general secretary of the U.S. Catholic Conference, will attend the meeting.

Liberation theology, as it has developed in Latin America since Medellin, has had a major impact on theological thought in the United States, as well.

In an open letter to the church in Latin America, some 60 U.S. theologians and church officials, representing Protestant as well as Catholic groups, expressed the fear that the Puebla meeting would undo the work of Medellin.

Saying that the Latin American bishops "have become our conscience," the 60 said they perceived "certain negative indications" about the forthcoming meeting.

Salvation Army Moves Couple To San Angelo

Maj. Avedis Kasarjian and his wife, commanding officers of the Lubbock Salvation Army Corps since 1974, have been reassigned to San Angelo.

They will report there Tuesday.

The Kasarjians will be replaced by Capt. and Mrs. Phillip Murphy, who are currently commanding officers at the corps in Sherman.

The major was a director of the Lubbock Lions Club, chaplain of the South Plains Shrine Club, a past treasurer of the SPIRES organization, and a member of Khiva Shrine, the Lubbock Ministerial Association, and Yellowhouse Masonic Lodge 841.

Mrs. Kasarjian, who shares equal rank, is a member of the Order of the Eastern Star.

Since 1958, they also have served in Houston, Pasadena, Sherman, Odessa, Port Arthur, Dallas, Temple, and Galveston.

The couple has two daughters, Mrs. Mario Leal of Waco and Jackie of the home.

Jackie, a senior at Lubbock High School, was an officer for the Westerners and was accepted in the Flag Corps of the school. She is a member of the Order of Rainbow for Girls.

Maj. Kasarjian said he feels his biggest success in Lubbock has been the establishment of a five-phase counseling program for battered women, teenagers with drug problems, suicide prevention, alcoholism and domestic problems.

"We really love Lubbock and the people here and hate to leave since our daughter is a senior at Lubbock High School," he added. "I suppose there is always that feeling about going to another appointment," he said. "We are following some fine officers there (San Angelo) and we are optimistic. But in Lubbock, once you get the sand in your shoes it's hard to get it out of your system."

It will be the 12th move in 26 years for the Kasarjians. They have been in Lubbock for four years. "Capt. and Mrs. Paul Murphy are very young and enterprising. The only good thing we feel about leaving Lubbock is our successors. They have promised to keep our work going and to build on our foundation."

"Money collected at the congregation will be distributed from Churches of Christ in Medina, Albany, Graham and Bandera," church minister Joe Barnett said.

Many Predictions Made About Papal Election

Church News

ROME (AP) — Pick a number. Draw a card. Consult a fortune teller. The dubious results are about as uncertain — and diverse — as predictions circulating on the choice of the pope-to-be.

"The Dutchman," says a fellow airline passenger, referring to the archbishop of Utrecht and long-time Vatican chief of Christian unity efforts, Cardinal Johannes Willebrands.

"The Vatican 'Henry Kissinger,'" says a Rome taxi driver, alluding to the much-traveled Cardinal Sergio Pignedoli, head of the Vatican's Secretariat for Non-Christians.

The miscellany of answers and non-answers prevailed among ordinary people and also the oracles — the "chiromantes" as the Romans call them — as well as among the veteran Vaticanologists gathered for the electing conclave starting next Friday.

"Who knows, it could be me. I'm Catholic," said Sergio Chairotti, a Roman tour supervisor, and he's right about the possibility — any male Catholic is eligible.

However, there hasn't been a layman picked since seven centuries ago, when stymied cardinals sought out a devout mountain hermit, Peter of Morrone, who abdicated after four bumbling months as Pope Celestine.

For exactly 600 years, the office always has gone to one of the princes of the church, a cardinal, and that's considered almost inevitable this time. But not in the modern era has there been such a profusion of reputed "papabili," papal possibilities.

Nor have there ever been so many electors — the expanded College of Cardinals — with such broad representation from the Third World. These factors, and the deep issues agitating the church, have left the selection "wide open," as one Vatican expert put it.

"We prefer the two 'P's' but it looks as if one of the two 'B's' is going to get it," said the Rev. John Inzetta, one of a pair of vacationing Brooklyn priests.

They foresaw the job going to Cardinal Giovanni Benelli, a right-hand man of the late Pope Paul VI who has a power base in the Vatican and currently serves as archbishop of Florence.

The Brooklynites considered the suave Cardinal Sebastino Baggio, head of the Vatican's Congregation for Bishops, a close competitor, but they said they have hopes for their "P" favorites.

These are Pignedoli, and Cardinal Eduardo Pironio, the Argentinian who heads the Vatican office for religious orders of priests and nuns.

Madam Nuvo, the fortune teller, of Indian descent and a fervent Catholic, said, "God will send this man. He is strong and powerful, and comes from a poor peasant family to the north."

That, among the touted names, seems to apply most to Cardinal Jean Villot, the Frenchman born of a poor peasant family and now Vatican secretary of state and the "camerlengo," or chamberlain, in charge of Vatican routine between papacies.

Madam Nuvo claimed she could name the man, "but it is too sacred," and refused to do it. "He is not among the bald ones. (Another clue to the full-headed Villot.) Many people will believe this new pope. A lot did not believe the old pope."

"Another John — we want another Pope John," said a Roman parking lot attendant, referring to Paul's predecessor, Pope John XXIII.

"The chances of Cardinal Cooke ought to be pretty good — he's a good man," said a vacationing New Yorker, Jason Whitman, apparently unaware in citing New York's Cardinal Terence Cooke of the sentiment against a pope from the world's most powerful and richest nation.

A brunette airline stewardess, Evelyn Lieberman of Manhattan, added this bit to to the conundrum: "My mother keeps up with these things, and she says it will be the first non-Italian for 500 years. You can be sure of that."

Churches Confronted By Copyright Laws

By DAVID E. ANDERSON
United Press International Writer

One church in Washington, D.C. uses a slide projector-like device to project the words of new songs to the front of the congregation.

"We know its a violation of the copyright laws," a church leader said, "and we're trying to get permissions but they're sometimes very hard to get."

Since the liturgical revival of the mid-1960s, churches have increasingly found themselves in the midst of a legal and moral dilemma — the desire to introduce their congregations to new music and worship forms.

The dilemma comes about because much of the new music, whether it be sacred or, as often the case, secular, is protected by copyrights by the author and any unauthorized use is illegal as well as an infringement on the author or composer's livlihood.

Neverthless, in thousands of churches across the country, worshippers are using mimeographed or illegally duplicated song sheets every Sunday as they gather to pray and sing.

"Church musicians have been grossly, wilfkully wrong for many years in the practice of photocopying copyrighted music without permission," according to William J. Reynolds, secretary of the church music department of the Southern Baptist Convention Sunday School Board.

"Churches of all sizes have been involved in this trangression of the copyright law," he said, adding that the unauthorized duplication of music is the "major problem" with the copqright law with regard to Southern Baptist churches.

"Flagrantly photocopying music in this manner is just as illegal as taking money out of a man's pocket," Reynolds said.

"You cannot honestly sing the gospel and tell the good news of Jesus while you're singing from illegally duplicated music," he said.

Reynolds recommended that if churches have duplicated music in their libraries, "they should destroy it. It is evidence of copyright infringement and it is illegal."

Some religious music publishers have gone to court in an effort to force churches to get permission — and in some cases pay — to use copyrighted material.

"There is a matter of Christian ethics involved," Reynolds said. "Even if everybody is doing it, it doesn't make it right."

A slightly different copyright case involving the Roman Catholic church is now moving through the courts.

At stake in this case is the degree of control that the church's bishops can exercise in allocating markets for the sale of both officially approved and even unofficial prayer texts.

Publisher Harry Costello filed a $250,000 suit against the U.S. bishops charging them with restraint of trade because he cannot sell some 7,500 copies of a breviary — prayerbook — he imported from Ireland.

The case is currently before Judge Ruth Green of the U.S. District Court for the District of Columbia. Judge Green is currently studying one of the copyright issues connected with the antitrust suit and no resolution of the suit is expected before autumn.

If Costello wins his suit, it could conceivably ease the situation for some publishers of alternative liturgies and texts.

Revival Draws To Close

A revival featuring the Rev. Bob Harrison will end this weekend at Trinity Church at 7002 Canton.

BREAKFAST CEREAL RELIGION

Ever read the side panel on a breakfast cereal carton? Usually we are told that this food provides us with a minimum daily requirement of certain vitamins and minerals. We are not experts on nutrition . . . but we do promote man's religious needs. We urge people to attend and support our churches. We believe you can't build spiritual vitality on minimal standards. Therefore, we don't guarantee that an hour in Sunday School will provide Christy with some percentage of the spiritual stamina life requires.

If you're bringing Christy to church every week, fortifying your own faith with sincere worship, and trying to cultivate Christian attitudes and a Christian atmosphere in your home—then you're fully aware that character and conviction grow from maximum standards.

Students, Parents Get Busing Plan Preview

parent-student conferences.

Relic noted that with Tech focusing its resources on Iles, the school will be able to offer "personalized, individualized" instruction, more so than at other schools. Besides basic skills, Iles will put a "strong emphasis on the arts," Relic said. The school will have, for example, a piano laboratory for students.

"Too often we've relegated the arts to secondary importance," Relic said.

He said he is impressed with the staff of Iles and the Lubbock district in general, praising the "teachers and administrators who are determined to find better ways of motivating and teaching children."

School officials originally had expected Iles to attract only about 50 white students the first year. But transfer applications are approaching three times that figure — which would make Iles a white majority school.

Relic said the "magnet-school concept by itself cannot achieve desegregation." But in conjunction with other tools, such as Lubbock's mandatory reassignments, a magnet program can be effective, he said.

The important thing about a magnet program, Relic said, is that it "not be developed solely for desegregation," but rather to enhance the overall quality of education in the school district.

"This is what I see happening at Iles. All the people are talking about here is quality education for every child," he said.

Meanwhile, at other elementary schools Friday, students and parents were getting a preview of the 1978-79 school year, which begins Aug. 29.

The "Information Day" bus trips were intended especially for children who will serve integration reassignments during the first semester of the coming year.

However, many families also sent youngsters who won't be affected until the second semester or future school years. Several students to be reassigned this fall were accompanied by brothers and sisters.

A number of parents said they were so impressed with their sister schools that they may opt to have their children assigned for both semesters of the coming year. And, they said, they may decide to keep the family together by sending even those children not required to be reassigned.

Most students already were familiar with their sister campuses. They had visited them during exchange programs in the spring.

Buses made three round trips between neighborhood elementary schools and corresponding sister schools. In addition, buses took youngsters and parents from Struggs to the junior high schools of Atkins, Hutchinson and O.L. Slaton.

The school system's integration plan, to be carried out with 40 new buses, will involve transporting about 2,000 elementary children and 300 secondary students daily.

Each predominantly white elementary school here will send the white students in one or two grade levels to a corresponding previously minority school. The students will be divided into two groups: those whose last names begin with A through L will go the first semester, others the second semester.

The previously minority schools involved in the integration plan are Guadalupe (which now includes the recently closed Sanders Elementary zone), Iles (which will receive white students by voluntary transfers), Mahon, Martin, Posey and Wheatley.

Besides receiving whites, each of these minority campuses will send minority students to corresponding white schools. Minority students with A-through-L last names will be reassigned for grades one, three and five, others for grades two, four and six.

Also under the integration plan, Southeast Elementary has been closed and its students assigned to Brown Elementary.

At the secondary level, Struggs has been closed as a junior high. Seventh-graders in that area will go to Atkins, eighth-graders to Hutchinson and ninth-graders to O.L. Slaton.

The Struggs facility has been combined with Dunbar High as a magnet high school to offer specialized vocational and academic courses.

Carter Claims Big Energy Plan Gain

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter claimed a major legislative breakthrough Friday on energy legislation, one month after he told world leaders that the United States would face up to its fuel supply problems.

Carter and congressional energy leaders said they have obtained agreements on a natural gas compromise, which they expect to inject new life into the president's stalled energy program.

At the Bonn economic summit last month, the president had assured the leaders of six other non-communist industrialized nations that the United States would soon take measures to conserve its consumption of oil and other energy resources.

Two Persuaded

Carter and Vice President Walter F. Mondale personally persuaded two reluctant House members to sign a congressional conference report Thursday night, allowing the Senate to begin final congressional action on the conference.

James Flug, director of the consumer organization Energy Action, said the bill would cost residential users $50 billion over the next seven years.

However, Energy Secretary James R. Schlesinger said the cost would be a maximum of $4 billion for consumers by 1985.

The agreement calls for natural gas prices to be deregulated in 1985, with a series of increases over the next seven years.

Ceiling To Rise

Natural gas is currently priced at $1.47 per thousand cubic feet, but under the compromise the ceiling would rise immediately to $2, with an additional 10 percent over the next seven years.

Schlesinger said the measure would result in inflation being reduced because the bill would encourage some domestic producers to release supplies of natural gas. Some producers in Louisiana and Texas are refusing to ship gas outside their states because doing so would submit the gas to regulated federal prices, which the producers claim are too low.

Democratic Reps. Charles Rangel of New York and James Corman of California had been steadfast foes of the compromise until Thursday, when they were summoned to the White House.

Both Had Objected

They had both objected to the compromise as being too expensive for consumers and too generous to natural gas producers.

Carter said there were no deals made on other issues to obtain agreement from the last two among 13 House members whose signatures were needed to keep the compromise alive.

Two other holdouts, Republican Sens. James McClure of Idaho and Pete Domenici of New Mexico, also signed the compromise agreement at the White House.

Although the president spoke as if congressional passage of the natural gas bill were an accomplished fact, the compromise still faces a major fight in the Senate.

"This is a major step forward under the most difficult of circumstances," Carter said in taking the unusual step of personally announcing a congressional agreement.

Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, said Friday there will be "extended debate" when the natural gas compromise comes before the Senate, probably after the congressional Labor Day recess.

Metzenbaum denounced the compromise as inflationary and too expensive for consumers.

Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., chairman of the Senate Energy Committee, acknowledged that the natural gas vote will be "razor thin."

Jackson said the key factor in persuading the last handful of House members and senators to sign the conference report was a fear raised by the president that failure to pass an energy bill by Congress would cause a further decline in the value of the dollar abroad.

"The psychological effect on the dollar could be extremely serious," he said.

Britisher Says Ray Felt Like 'Hero' After King Slaying

WASHINGTON (AP) — James Earl Ray told a Scotland Yard inspector before his return to the United States in 1968 that he killed Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. and expected it would make him "a national hero," according to evidence unveiled Friday.

Ray denied making any such confession during his incarceration in England while awaiting extradition to America, but he said "That is probably the most damaging statement made against me." Ray's attorney, Mark Lane, heatedly declared the allegations lacked credibility.

Later, the panel virtually demolished a tale by a man quoted in Lane's book on the King murder, "Code Name Zorro," — a story which the lawyer and author said supported Ray's alibi. The man admitted he lied to Lane and the National Enquirer newspaper when he said he saw Ray several blocks from the murder scene at the time of the killing.

Interview Revealed

But first, while Ray was on the witness stand for the third day of interrogation by the House assassinations committee, Rep. Samuel L. Devine, R-Ohio, revealed a recent interview by the panel's staff with the former Scotland Yard official, now retired.

Devine quoted Alexander Anthony Eist as saying he was Ray's nearly constant guard during the weeks of his imprisonment in London, and thus became something of a friend of the fugitive.

Eist, now a pubkeeper, was asked by the committee's investigators on Aug. 4 whether he recalled Ray actually admitting the killing of King, or, instead, merely acknowledged a connection with the murder weapon.

"Oh, no, no, no," Eist replied. "During the course of the conversation, he definitely, he didn't actually come out with it, but it was there in the conversation that he'd done it."

At another point, Eist said, "He was telling me that after the shooting (on April 4, 1968), when he left this place he panicked and threw the gun away ... I mean there isn't any doubt from the conversation that he told me that he was admitting to me that he had done the murder."

Asked if Ray expressed a hatred of blacks — something Ray has long denied — Eist said, "There wasn't any doubt at all. He just hated black people. In fact, he said he was trying to go to Africa to try to shoot some more," when he was arrested at London's airport on June 5, 1968.

"Mad About Publicity"

"He was telling me," Eist went on in the interview, "that for him to have shot a black man of note in certain parts of America would make him into a national hero anyway. He seemed absolutely mad about publicity. He really wanted it."

Eist said that Ray predicted he would make $250,000 to $500,000 for the killing because "he would have no shortage of friends, no shortage of fundraisers. He would get them to go on TV and ... he could write books."

After the entire interview was read into the committee's record, Ray was asked to respond and said simply: "That is probably the most damaging statement made against me ... It is false." Ray then charged that the interview of Eist was evidence that the panel "intends to crucify me."

Eist Denounced

Lane, his attorney, returned to Ray's side about that time and said he had just placed a call to a barrister in England who denounced Eist as corrupt and called him "a disgrace to the England police force." Lane said his British contact told him Eist had been forced off the job for unlawful conduct.

In London, a spokesman for Scotland Yard said Eist was charged in 1976 with conspiracy to "pervert the course of justice" in connection with jewel robberies, but was found innocent of the charges earlier this year.

Scotland Yard also confirmed that Eist was one of the police officers who questioned Ray after his arrest.

Called "Outrageous"

Ray's attorney said that for the panel to have sprung Eist's statement on his client was wholly unjustified. "I have never, in 28 years of practicing law, seen anything as terrible and as outrageous as this," he said.

The acting committee chairman, Rep. Richardson Preyer, D-N.C., promised that the committee would pursue the issue of Eist's credibility. Eist, meanwhile, was quoted by Devine as saying he had long ago reported his conversations with Ray to superiors who likely could substantiate such reports.

Rep. Louis Stokes, D-Ohio, said the committee had planned to disclose only excerpts of Eist's statement until Lane demanded that the entire statement be read into the record.

Director Cites Overcrowded Condition Of Texas Prisons

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas prisons are so overcrowded that 700 inmates sleep on floors, the director of the penal system said Friday.

W. J. Estelle told the Legislative Budget Board the Texas Department of Corrections needs $130 million over the next two years to construct space for its mushrooming convict population.

He said a slowdown in granting paroles swelled the prison headcount to 3,000 more than it would be if the State Board of Pardons and Paroles were working at last year's pace.

The board also heard that despite the state surplus and growth revenue, the Legislature probably will have little money for new expenditure programs.

"There is no room for any new programs or increases except those caused by inflation," observed Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, board chairman.

Board members instructed the staff to draft 1980-81 spending recommendations starting with a 5.1 percent annual pay raise for state employees. This would add $421.5 million to payroll costs for the next biennium.

New prison construction could be a victim of the present freeze on new taxes and legislative decisions to cut state revenue by $491.4 million by repealing the sales tax on utility bills.

New Prison Unit

Estelle's proposal includes $83.5 million for a brand new prison unit, which would be built at a still undetermined site. When the board of corrections tried to buy Monte Cristo Farms near Edinburg, Attorney General John Hill ruled the purchase violated provisions in the 1978-79 general appropriation bill.

Asked by Hobby where the board now plans to build the new prison, Estelle said, "Somewhere within the confines of the state of Texas."

He said he also wants $750,000 to build temporary housing for 700 inmates who are, in effect, the third men in cells designed for one prisoner.

"We've got to do something to get these people off the floor," he said.

Paroles Down

He told the board that paroles are down 35 percent from a year ago, or 3,000 inmates. Paroles are granted by the governor on advice of the board of pardons and paroles.

Estelle later told reporters the prison system houses 24,358 persons, or 3,500 more than a year ago. He acknowledged the growth figure would be only 500 if paroles had been granted at last year's pace.

Asked if he had ever pushed the board to speed up paroles, he said, "We have had discussions, but it is not my role to challenge their wisdom or decision-making process."

He said he no longer stands by his statement that 40 percent of the prison population were good candidates for immediate parole.

"That was five years ago. The inmate population is different now. I wouldn't make that statement today," Estelle said.

He described prison inmates as younger, "less motivated, harder to motivate, harder to manage" and more intelligent, with more convicted of violent crimes.

"We don't know what a true first offender is like. Everybody we get has been on probation once or twice," Estelle said.

The prison director also was quick to say he wasn't about to recommend parole simply to reduce the number of inmates.

"Parole decisions need to be based on the merits of the individual case, not considerations of the prison population. . . But the fact remains there has been a 35 percent decrease in paroles," he said.

George Killinger, pardons and paroles board chairman, said Estelle was comparing this year's parole releases with an abnormally high output in 1977.

He said the 8,950 paroles last year — compared with 4,725 during the first 10 months of the current fiscal year — resulted from a speedup in processing cases.

Fire, Police Strike Ends In Memphis

"They can play word games if they want."

The bitter strike cut sharply into the number of tourists who had been expected in town for the first anniversary of Elvis Presley's death on Wednesday.

Chandler imposed a dusk-to-dawn curfew which helped keep the peace. Some looting was reported Tuesday night, when the city was blacked out because of a power failure blamed on a security guard's vandalism.

The contract approved by the strikers allows them to return to their jobs without penalty. This had been a stumbling block in the negotiations, with Chandler insisting the strikers should return to work as rookies.

At 8 a.m., hundreds of policemen streamed into a labor headquarters and ratified a contract that had been hammered out the night before by a group of labor, civic and business leaders, then presented to union and city officials.

Baker was greeted with thunderous applause as he entered the stuffy, smoke-filled auditorium. Baker was to have appeared Friday morning before a state judge on a contempt citation, but the charge was dropped by the city once the union ratified the contract.

Two hours later, Kuhron Huddleston, president of the 1,400-member Local 1784 of the International Firefighters Association strode to the stage with a standing ovation and presented the contract to his members.

The contracts call for policemen and firemen to receive a 6 percent pay hike retroactive to July, plus a $30-a-month across-the-board raise in April, 1979. Wages could be renegotiated — with non-binding arbitration if necessary — next July.

The police contract included a negotiated settlement of damages that occurred since policemen walked off their jobs at 11 p.m. Aug. 10. Huddleston said his orgranization would donate $10,000 toward the city's fire prevention fund.

"There was no cause for reprisal on damages," Huddleston said. "We are well aware the city experienced chaos and damage during this turmoil so we readily donated $10,000 to our fire prevention fund."

Firefighters walked off their jobs Aug. 14 in a wildcat effort that was sanctioned by the union a day later.

$1 Coin Called Hope For Ailing $2 Bill

NEW YORK (AP) — The Treasury is hoping that a $1 coin will breathe new life into the $2 bill, which has been languishing in dresser drawers, bank vaults and hidden pockets of wallets since it was reintroduced more than two years ago.

The government began printing $2 bills in April, 1976 after a 38-year lapse, but the public has shunned them — for reasons that include inconvenience, fear of confusion with other bills and superstitution.

Treasury officials hope to change that with a copper-nickel $1 coin a bit larger than a quarter. It would replace the current Eisenhower dollar, which is the same size as the old large silver dollar. Approval by Congress is considered near.

"If the $1 coin flies, the $2 bill could too," said Seymour Berry, director of the Bureau of Printing and Engraving, which makes bills. Stella Hackel, director of the Mint, which makes coins, agrees.

The thinking is that people will use pocket change when they want a dollar and thus be more likely to use $2 bills from their wallets.

Does that mean the end of the dollar bill? Treasury officials won't say. But they do say the $2 bill hasn't sold yet.

The story of the new $2 bill begins in 1938, when the government stopped printing its old series of $2 bills for lack of demand. The last of those were taken out of circulation in 1966.

By 1976, however, new rounds of inflation had placed many items out of the $1 bill's reach, and the government decided the $2 bill might now be convenient enough to catch on. If it did, fewer new $2 bills would be needed than $1 bills, and the government estimated it could save $9 million a year on printing costs.

So far, the Bureau of Printing and Engraving has issued 647 million $2 bills. But most sit in bank vaults and an unknown number of others are hoarded by speculators or have been tucked away as curiosities.

"When the $2 bill was reissued, it was not promoted properly," said Under Secretary of the Treasury Bette B. Anderson. "One reason we may have dragged our heels is that we were hoping we could coordinate it with the new $1 coin."

Bankers, however, are concerned that things may work out differently — that the prejudice against the bills may rub off on the coins. The American Bankers Association has told Congress there is no great demand for the new coin among either the public or retailers.

Certainly, there is little demand for the bills.

"Nobody wants them," head teller Barbara Kelly of the Boatmen's Bank and Trust Co. in Kansas City says. "About one out of three customers who receive them give them back," says Wendy Carville, spokeswoman for Wells Fargo Bank in San Francisco.

Treasury officials are reluctant to discuss the problems, saying it usually takes five to eight years to put a new type of currency into circulation. "It hasn't been given a chance to circulate," said Berry. "Given the right kind of impetus, there is no reason the $2 bill shouldn't circulate."

False Accusation Of Robbery Seen

when a man with a pistol confronted him and demanded his money.

Wheeler, also in a signed affidavit, told the district attorney's office he knew Kelly when Kelly was running for mayor and that he did meet with him April 19 in the parking lot.

"I have not seen him since," Wheeler said to district attorney investigators. "I was arrested a few days later for robbing him (Kelly). I did not rob him."

Cannon said the aggravated perjury charge is the result of Kelly's having taken an oath before he went before the grand jury in June.

"Leland George Kelly was not the victim of an aggravated robbery... Earl Wheeler did not commit said aggravated robbery and did not use and exhibit a handgun," the formal complaint lodged against Kelly reads. The complaint says that Kelly made the "false statement with knowledge of the statement's meaning and with intent to deceive."

When a candidate for mayor, Kelly was a 21-year-old Tech student who said he wanted to "make changes" on city boards and commissions.

In his campaign speeches, he promised to appoint "people who really care about the work instead of those who just want the name."

In the April 3 city election, Kelly received 286 votes, or 3.1 percent of the total votes cast.

Arizona Drug Case Arrests Revealed

TUCSON (AP) — Reputed mobster Charles J. "Batts" Battaglia, 61, was arrested with four other men in the first Arizona case to link organized crime to heroin traffic, U.S. Attorney Mike Hawkins said Friday.

Battaglia, of Tucson, was named in a felony warrant Thursday, along with Salvatore Rina, 69, who moved recently from New York to Tucson. Others apprehended were Robert L. Talbot, 34, of Tucson, Michel Catalanotto, 51, of New York, and Albert P. Anastasio, 37, of Tucson, Hawkins said.

Identity of the fifth man was withheld pending his arrest.

The five were charged with conspiracy to transport stolen property in interstate or foreign commerce and conspiracy to possess heroin with intent to distribute it.

Alleged In-House Flasher Sought By City Police

Police Friday were searching for a Mexican-American man about 40 years old who earlier in the day reportedly exposed himself to a 24-year-old Lubbock woman.

The woman told police the man knocked on the door of her 41st Street residence and, thinking it was a neighbor, she told him to come in the house.

She said the man asked to use a telephone and after telling him that she didn't have one he asked to use the bathroom.

The woman said the man didn't wait for her answer but went straight to the bathroom. She said he left the door open, and then came back into the front portion of the residence, still exposed.

She told officers that she ran from the house and the man followed her outside. She said the man asked her to pray for him before he left on foot headed northeast across a nearby vacant lot.

Roy Williamson, owner of Williamson Maytag at 1911 Ave. Q, said burglars, who apparently entered the store by driving a vehicle into the rear overhead door of the store, got away with five televisions, valued at about $1,572.

Mrs. Homer Wilson of 4602 9th St. told police that she discovered that burglars had taken a $370 fuel injection system electronic control unit from her vehicle when it wouldn't start Friday morning. She said the burglars also caused about $180 damage to the car when they removed the part.

Willette Merrell said burglars who broke a window in her 2906 Ave. P home Friday made off with a $140 television. She said the intruders also ransacked the residence but took nothing else.

Wanda Black, owner of Mr. BB's Hamburgers at 2212 4th St., said burglars took $98 worth of food from the establishment, including 12 pounds of hamburger meat, french fries and cheese.

Burglars who broke into the pharmacy at the Piggly Wiggly grocery store at 106 N. University Ave. late Thursday or early Friday got away with about $75 worth of barbiturates, according to store manager Vladimir Romanov. Romanov said the burglars also caused about $125 damage to two doors they pried to get inside the pharmacy.

A 35-year-old Lubbock woman told police she was raped and then robbed of $56 by an intruder at her home on San Jose Drive about 11 p.m. Thursday.

The woman said she was asleep when the man, who had apparently crawled through a bedroom window, grabbed her and then hit her in the arm with a large stick, possibly a baseball bat.

The man allegedly told the woman he was going to rape her and warned her not to struggle. He then raped her, the woman told police, took the money from her shorts pocket and left.

Another woman said she also was in the house when the suspect entered, but managed to escape. She said that as she left the house, she saw another man outside who allegedly had raped her about a month before.

The women described the suspects as Mexican-Americans in their late teens or mid-20s.

Another woman told sheriff's deputies that an ex-boyfriend came to her house in West Lubbock about 9:20 a.m. Thursday, coaxed her into his car and drove her to Slaton, Idalou and the Roosevelt Community before stopping near Lake Ransom Canyon and attempting to rape her.

After a brief struggle, the woman said, the man said he had decided not to rape her. He reportedly drove her to his Lubbock home, where she managed to escape about 4 p.m. and notify authorities.

Another Lubbock woman told police she was assaulted by her fiance about 2:30 a.m. today after he discovered an ex-schoolmate at her house.

She said the man chased the friend out of the house, and returned to assault her.

According to reports, the woman told police her boyfriend cut her across the nose with a knife, hit her in the wrist with a tire tool, struck her in the ankle with a bed rail and hit her in the head with a coffee table.

She said about 3:30 a.m. today she managed to run to the home of a neighbor who took her to Health Sciences Center Hospital, where she was treated and released.

Police were told recently by an administrator of a nursing home in the city that one of her aides had slapped an 80-year-old woman staying at the home.

The administrator told authorities the employee was fired after the assault came to light.

Darry Lynn Stiggers of 1918 9th St., Apt. 10, said a man armed with a broken bar glass came after him about 1:30 a.m. today at a nightspot in the 2400 block of Marshall Street.

Stiggers said he was cut twice in the hand, and his attacker was also cut. He said another man pulled a gun on him just before both suspects left in a rust-colored Ford Pinto driven by someone named Robert.

The mother of a 12-year-old boy told police her son was shot with a pellet gun about 9:30 p.m. Friday as he rode his bicycle in the 200 block of David Avenue.

The boy said he was riding away from three other boys who had been giving him some trouble when he was shot, the pellet lodging in his back.

The youngster was not hurt seriously, and the case has been turned over to juvenile authorities.

Jay Vaughn of 2304 27th St. said his barn was burglarized Wednesday night and $2,095 in tools taken. Thursday morning, Mike Armstrong of Rt. 7, Box 217, Lubbock, who lives near Vaughn's barn, notified sheriff's deputies that he discovered his house virtually emptied by intruders.

Among other things, Armstrong reported missing a bedroom suite, washer and dryer, freezer, refrigerator, kitchen table and chairs, television, stereo equipment and cooking utensils.

Two pistols, valued at $153.38, were reported stolen Thursday from Furr's Family Center, 34th Street and Quaker Avenue.

Frank T. Kell of 5210 43rd St. told officer he lost $450 in tools that were taken from his open garage between 7:45 a.m. and 8 p.m. Thursday.

A guitar, amplifier and pocket watch were reported stolen from Melvin G. Rice's 2317 Auburn St. residence. The missing items, thought to have been taken between 11:15 p.m. Thursday and early this morning, were estimated at more than a $1,000 loss.

NAACP Members Dissatisfied With Disposition Of Shooting

By KAY BELL
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Lubbock NAACP members "are not satisfied" with the police department's internal investigation into the Wednesday shooting death of 27-year-old Tommy Earl Davis, a spokesman for the group told the Avalanche-Journal Friday.

The Rev. Roy Jones, president of the local chapter, said the branch has begun its own investigation into the incident and also have contacted "our out-of-town resources."

"We have several questions (about the shooting)," Jones said, "which I don't think have been fully answered."

One of the group's major concerns, Jones said, is that three police officers could not subdue one man.

According to police reports, officers Richard Foster, Max Wilkinson and Pat Hastings were inside the 1710 E. 14th St. residence Davis shared with his father and brother at the time of the shooting.

Officers Foster, Wilkinson and Ernest Rendleman arrived at the scene shortly before 11 p.m. to answer a family disturbance call and were told by Davis' father, Tommy Lee, that his son was in the house and had been shooting at him and other persons in the area.

Hastings arrived shortly afterward, reports indicate, and struggled with Davis for control of a .22-caliber pistol that Davis reportedly had been firing.

As the men struggled across the room, Davis' gun went off, according to reports, and Hastings jumped back. Davis reportedly rolled over and pointed the gun at Foster, who then fired at Davis with Hastings' gun that he had picked up from the floor after it fell from the officer's holster during the melee.

Jones said that he and other NAACP members feel, however, that the three trained officers should have been able to control Davis without resorting to gun fire.

Additionally, Jones said, the branch questions the two trips inside the Davis residence officers made that night.

Upon first arriving at the house, reports indicate, Foster, Wilkinson and Rendleman went inside the home with Davis' brother, Lester, and found Tommy sprawled across the bed, seemingly asleep.

After getting no response from Davis, the men went outside and again talked with the man's father, according to reports, before re-entering with guns drawn.

"We don't understand how they could allow themselves to be placed in that position," Jones said.

Police Chief J.T. Alley said, however, that police procedure demanded the second confrontation with Davis.

When the officers first arrived, Alley said, they were answering a family disturbance call. But by the time they got to the scene, he said, the disturbance had "cooled down."

"It was his (Davis') house, private property and the reason for the call (the shooting) had stopped when the officers arrived," Alley said.

But, after talking with Davis' father a second time, he said, the situation evolved into an "unwanted guest" problem.

"His father told the men that he wanted (Davis) or the gun out of the house," Alley said. "The officers went back in to comply with the request since it was his father's house."

No formal request for an FBI investigation into the shooting had been filed late Friday, but Jones said the NAACP "certainly is going to follow up on the incident."

"We're not going to get to the point of throwing rocks and bottles and marching," he said, "but we're not going to sit still and let things blow over."

The police department concluded its investigation of the shooting Thursday and evidence was turned over to the Criminal District Attorney's office. No charges have been filed in the shooting and Assistant District Attorney Tom Cannon said none are anticipated for the time being.

The case will be presented to the Sept. 11 grand jury, Cannon said.

Authorities still are awaiting autopsy results, which were "hand delivered" to Austin Friday, and Justice of the Peace Wayne LeCroy is withholding a ruling pending final laboratory results.

Gaines Deputies Probe Fiery Death Of Man, 22

SEMINOLE (Special) — Gaines County Sheriff's deputies are investigating the death of a 22-year-old Bovina man who was found inside his burned pickup truck early Thursday.

Authorities discovered the burning vehicle, which contained the body of Dannie Lynn McKay, about 6:30 a.m. just southwest of Higginbotham.

Denver City and Seminole Fire Department units were called to the scene. Seminole Fire Chief Dexter Parker said the cause of the fire is still under investigation.

Parker was pronounced dead by Seminole Justice of the Peace Fronia Cox, who is withholding a ruling pending completion of the sheriff's office investigation.

Graveside services for McKay will be at 2:30 p.m. Sunday in the Bovina Cemetery with the Rev. Jerry Rockwell, pastor of the Friona First Baptist Church, and the Rev. Denzil Lionard, pastor of the Canadian First Baptist Church, officiating.

Burial will be under direction of Parsons-Ellis Funeral Home of Friona.

Bar Group Wants More Courts

The Lubbock County Bar Association voted Friday to try to obtain two additional courts, but rejected a proposal to switch to the rotational method of filing cases.

The resolutions to endorse the need for a third county court-at-law and a sixth district court passed handily.

The two court resolutions authorized a committee to try to place the subject on the Commissioners Court agenda at the first opportunity.

They also called for contact with local members of the state legislature, with the idea of presenting the proposals for action at the next session.

The rotational filing proposal was narrowly defeated by a show of hands.

Under it, civil cases would be filed in each court on a rotating basis. Attorneys in civil cases are currently free to choose the court in which they wish to file the cases.

Proponents argued that the rotational method would possibly be more efficient and could equalize backlogs in the future.

Opponents felt individual attorneys should retain the freedom of choice as to which court in which they filed a suit.

Sundown Board Hikes Tax 29 Cents

SUNDOWN (Special) — The Sundown school board Friday night approved a 29 cent tax increase, raising last year's $1.05 per $100 valuation to $1.34.

This year's budget, according to Rip Lasiter, superintendent, is projected at $2,998,655 which includes the $773,899 bond payment for the new elementary school.

If the tax rate is applied this year as last year, $2,351,483 in revenue will be produced. This is a shortage of $647,172.

Included in this shortage is a $380,000 override on the building program which represents 18 cents of the the 29 cent increase.

The remaining 11 cents of the increase will be used for furnishing the new classrooms and equipping the new library and resource center.

Basically the tax breakdown is 35 cents per $100 evaluation for the bond payment and the remaining 99 cents is for maintenance and operation.

Year-Long Record Theft Reported

Executives from J.C. Penney Co. have notifed authorities that about $18,000 worth of tapes and records has been stolen from their store at South Plains Mall in the past year.

Leland Duckworth, manager of the department store at 6002 Slide Road, was one of several executives who told police he feels the theft was committed by someone working in the store.

More than $6,000 worth of merchandise, thought to have been stolen from store at the mall, has been found at a music store in the city, according to police Det. Earl Rankin.

A suspect in the case is a man the owner of the music store says he has been buying records and tapes from for the past year at $2 each, reports show. Some of the merchandise reportedly still had a Penney's price tag on it when it was discovered in the music store.

The owner of the music store told police he has purchased almost $11,000 worth of records and tapes from the suspect in the past year, and has receipts for checks written to the man totaling $5,421.

Women's Work Status Predicted

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Labor Department predicts that women will make up 45 percent of the civilian work force by 1990 compared to 41 percent last year.

The department also issued three growth projections for the labor force during the 1980s. It said the work force would increase from 97.4 million people in 1977 to 125.6 million in 1990 under a high-growth projection; to 119.4 million based on an intermediate-growth prediction and 113.5 million in a low-growth trend.

Retired Men Do (Card-Playing) Time In City Jail

LITCHFIELD, Neb. (NEA) — As much time as the old boys spend in jail, you'd think they were habitual criminals.

It's nothing serious, though. They just go to jail when they sneak away from their jobs and chores.

Mayor Floyd Holm does a lot of time — but never in solitary. There's usually plenty of company — four, five, six, maybe 10 guys. All are "retired or tired," says Leo Haller.

"Never know who's gonna be in here," says Byrel Lang as he lights up his pipe and blows out a big cloud of smoke. It thickens the air even more and drifts toward the pink tin ceiling.

No women, of course. And no phone. Nothing interrupts the hucklebuck game — except the noon whistle. The players scatter when they hear the signal for lunch.

"Go home, have dinner, come back, just like when he was working," Jim Spencer says as the cards are shuffled and slapped on the white porcelain-covered table.

"Brand new game, bid two."

"Nope, can't raise it."

"Diamonds."

"Stay."

Hucklebuck goes fast, so it's hard to keep track of who is saying what. Spencer says they play "a good four hours, four and a half every day."

The game is something like pitch, the players explain, only with five cards instead of six. The idea is to make points by taking tricks.

All but the most innocent know that in these friendly little games a little spare change is bound to change hands. But doesn't it get old, playing the same thing all the time?

"Must not," says Haller, chuckling.

"Don't seem to," says Dale Beckhoff. "Never run outa players."

The boys get to laughing. Jokes about their typical jailhouse language follow. Walter Roelle remarks that if their sessions were recorded, they'd "be worse than the Nixon tapes."

The cards are dealt again.

"Gimme five."

"Gimme two."

"Gimme the ace."

"Just didn't give me that moonshooter that time, did you?"

The players sit on an assortment of chairs. All of the chairs are old, some of them crippled. One has a broken leg treated with a splint held in place with three bolts.

The walls, like the ceiling, are pink. The paint is peeling and the plaster is cracked in places.

A piece of cardboard covers one of the window spaces in the door. Old sheets or some kind of white paper mellow the sunlight from the two south windows, but there is still a view of the outdoor toilet. The room is maybe 20 feet long by 10 feet wide.

Cigarette butts are crushed on the concrete floor, where Missy, a dark colored dog of uncertain pedigree, dozes contendly near the old oil stove.

"She's the best hucklebuck player in town, never misses," says Haller, who adopted her.

There is junk all over the place — old pipes, old paint cans, glass jugs, an open sack of cement, an old white safe in a corner with a box of Christmas lights next to it.

Actually the lock-up is in the next room, partitioned off by an old quilt hanging over the arched doorway. The card room is really what used to be the city hall. But it's more fun to say its the jail.

People ask where someone is, explains Village Clerk Thelma Lang, Byrel's wife. And the reply is, "Oh, he's in jail." When Mayor Holm was in the hospital, the gang sent him cards reading, "We miss you at the jail."

She says it's a standard joke for someone to swear he was not at the jail — "but everyone knows they're down there everyday."

After all, Litchfield has a population of only about 300.

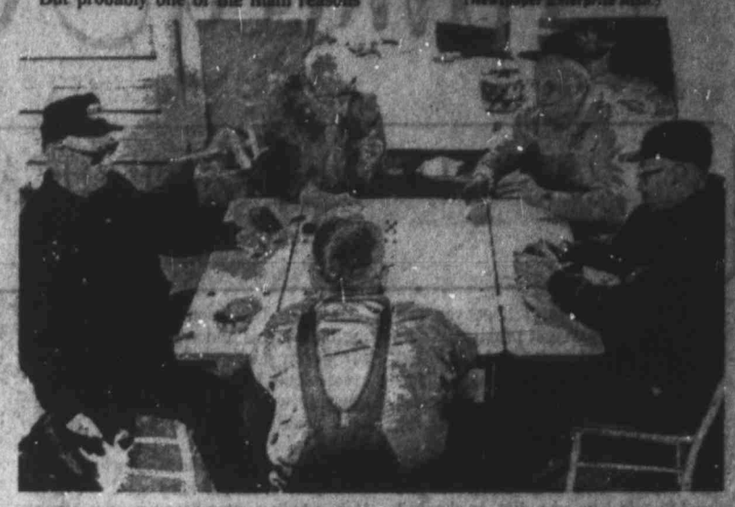

Although the jail is off limits to women, the wives don't mind a bit, says Mrs. Lang. They figure it's better than if the men spent their time in the taverns.

She says her women friends also agree it's better than having the men hanging around the house. "I mean, we'd sign that in blood," she laughs.

Another feature of the place, Mrs. Lang says, is the way it brings together men from all occupations. Before the fellows started playing hucklebuck, she explains, "I don't believe any of them had the same interests."

But probably one of the main reasons the old jail is so popular, she says, is that the players don't have to worry about how they look or whether they're wearing clean clothes. "And," she adds, "those who smoke can be just as smelly as they want."

Suit Brought Over Mixup Of Graves

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — For 17 years, Beatrice Daigle went to the grave by her late husband's headstone to pray for his soul and leave flowers. Then she found out someone else was buried there.

Mrs. Daigle, 73, was so upset by the discovery that she has brought a $250,000 suit against the Roman Catholic Diocese of Providence, the Church of the Precious Blood in Woonsocket and St. John the Baptist Cemetery in Bellingham, Mass.

The suit, filed in Providence Superior Court on Wednesday, claims that Mrs. Daigle suffers "severe emotional trauma and distress" because of the cemetery's alleged negligence.

Doris Gazaille, Mrs. Daigle's daughter, said the family has visited the cemetery since 1961 when Raymond Daigle was buried. "It's amazing," Mrs. Gazaille said of the mixup.

The Woonsocket church had sold her the plot.

"I don't really believe you'd say we're angry, more like hurt," she said. "It hurts when you feel you're going to your father, and in my mother's case, her husband, and it turns out that you've never actually been on his grave ... The trauma is just unbelievable."

The suit alleges the error in grave sites was discovered on April 26 when cemetery workers opened the grave marked Plot 126 and discovered the body of a woman, Jeanne Champagne.

The grave was opened at Mrs. Daigle's request so her husband could be moved to a family plot.

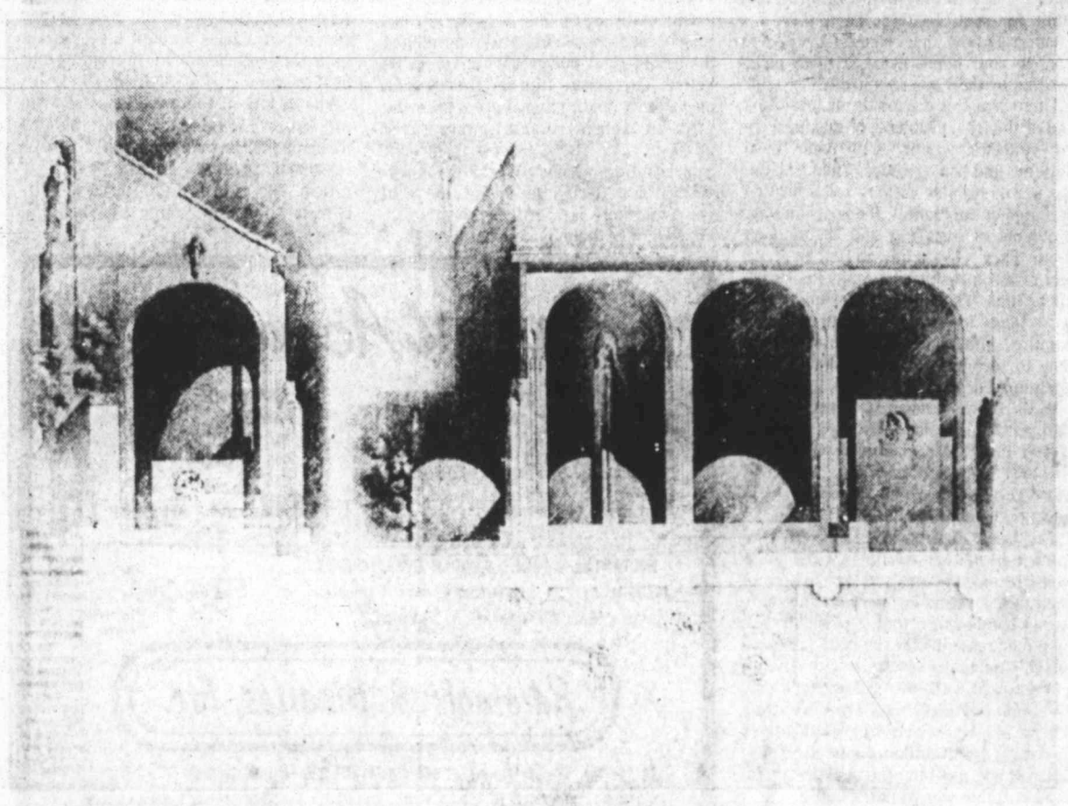

Mrs. Daigle's complaint says she was present when cemetery workers discovered the wrong body in Daigle's grave and then proceeded to dig up adjacent plots, finding his body in Plot 129.

Raymond Myette, manager of the church-owned cemetery, said Daigle was buried in a section where graves are lined up "one next to the other."

Myette said the graves were dug about four inches apart but the four-inch allowance was not reflected in placement of some headstones and other markers.

Myette said he did not understand why Mrs. Daigle and her family were so upset.

"See, my family, we have a mausoleum with 20 places in there," he said. "Memorial Day, when we go there, we stand in front of the door and we say a little prayer. We're not standing exactly in front of my father's drawer or my mother. But we're praying there."

CRANBROOK ACADEMY — This pencil-and-ink drawing by architect Eliel Saarinen of the Cranbrook Academy in Michigan is one of over 200 drawings comprising the "200 Years of American Architectural Drawing" exhibit to be shown beginning Sept. 8 in Fort Worth's Amon Carter Museum. This exhibit, funded in part by the National Endowment for the Arts and the New York State Council on the Arts, features for the first time the drawings of more than 80 architects as works of art. The exhibit will run until Oct. 22.

Fort Worth Museum To Host Architectural Drawings Show

"200 Years of American Architectural Drawing," an exhibition jointly organized by the Architectural League of New York and the American Federation of Arts, will open at the Amon Carter Museum in Fort Worth Sept. 8 and continue through Oct. 22.

The show contains drawings by more than 80 architects and was made possible in parts by grants from the National Endowment for the Arts, the New York State Council on the Arts, the Graham Foundation and the Architectural League of New York. The selection of over 200 drawings in the exhibition offers a crosssection of American architectural drawing from Thomas Jefferson to Frank Lloyd Wright and contemporary architects. Works for the exhibition were drawn from libraries, historical socieities and museums throughout the century.

All the works in the exhibition were selected on the basis of their own merits, the clarity with which they reveal the intent of the architect and the skill with which they convey the relationship between the drawing and the design process involved in producing the building.

This exhibition represents the first time architectural drawings have been treated as intrinsic works of art independently from their building projects.

The exhibition is divided into six sections: 1776-1819, which includes drawings by John Trumbull, Thomas Jefferson and Charles Bulfinch; 1820-1861 representing William Strickland, Calvert Vaux, James Dakin and others; 1862-1889, the Victorian period, which includes drawings by Frank Furness, Richard Morris Hunt and Henry Hobson Richardson; 1890-1919, the period which introduced the skyscraper to America, includes drawings by Cass Gilbert, Charles and Henry Greene, Marion Mahoney, Walter Burley Griffin and Louis Sullivan; 1920-1944, the period which includes drawings by Richard Neutra, Eliel Saarinen, Ludwig Mies van der Rohe and Frank Lloyd Wright; and 1945-1976, the period which includes works by Louis Kahn, Paul Rudolph, Eero Saarinen and Robert Venturi.

The exhibition has traveled to the Art institute of Chicago, the Jacksonville Art Museum and the Cranbook Academy of Arts prior to its stay at the Amon Carter Museum. It originally opened at the Cooper-Hewitt Museum, the Smithsonian Institutor National Museum of Design in New York. It has received critical acclaim throughout its travels.

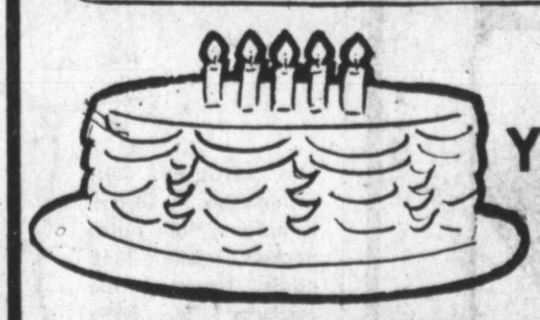

New York Times critic Ada Louise Huxtable said of the exhibition, "By any definition, this is a major show, and it is also a superb one, both as a record of the American building genius and as a moving experience of a consistently subtle and exquisite esthetic. Many of the drawings are breathtaking in their technical mastery and expressive skills, and their beauty is further enriched by their revelation of conceptual ideals. Here is architecture as it comes straight from the mind and the eye and the heart, before the spoilers get to it."

During the exhibition a special film series on architecture will be presented at 4 p.m. each Tuesday and Thursday in the museum theater. The programs will each last approximately one hour and will feature several short films organized around a central theme. Admission to the series will be free. Programs and dates in the series are:

Sept. 12 — Frank Lloyd Wright
Sept. 14 — Classical Architecture
Sept. 19 — Antonio Gaudi and Builders of the Bauhaus
Sept. 21 — Modern Britain, Brazillia and Japan
Sept. 26 — Louis Kahn, Eero Saarinen, I.M. Pei and Philip Johnson

TO YOUR GOOD HEALTH

BY
DR. GEORGE C. THOSTESON

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I hope you can help me with my weight problem. Everyone says I do not look like I weigh 150 pounds, but I do. I am a 16-year-old female, 5 feet, 8 inches, and of muscular build. My face seems OK along with my arms and legs. It's my stomach that is extra large. It bulges and looks terrible. What causes weight to gather in one place? Should I go on a diet, or should I do spot reducing? I heard that if I lose weight I would lose it in the face first. Is this true? — Miss S.K.

If you are a large-framed (big-boned) person, which you seem to be, the 150 pounds at your height is not overweight, although you are at the heavy end of the normal range. You tell me elsewhere in your letter that you are athletic. Even so, the activity might not be of the kind that calls abdominal muscles into play.

I doubt the need to reduce. Rather, find some good exercises that strengthen the abdominal muscles. You may lose a couple of pounds in the bargain. The reason people think weight loss comes in the face first is that it is noticeable there sooner than in other places. Food restriction dieting will not help spot reducing, and there is no exercise to lose fat at any one specific point in the body. Nature provides a natural fat-cushion about the midsection to protect the abdominal organs. It is one of the first places where excess fat appears. For the same reason it shows up around another convenient fat cushion (the derriere).

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I have been having hard stools and was surprised when my doctor told me I probably needed greater bulk in my diet. Seems to me the opposite would be true. Do you believe bulk would help? — B.W.

Yours is a common misconception — that bulk produces hard stool. In fact, lack of bulk is often the cause of this condition. Many older persons lose their taste for such food, so the bowel's need for activity is not satisfied. The result, hard stool. Another factor can be lack of liquid, so be sure you are getting sufficient amounts along with the bulk. If you continue to have trouble, your doctor can prescribe one of the effective stool softeners. See my material on constipation, "How to Stop Constipation," which will explain how these things occur. For a copy send 35 cents and a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Dr. Thosteson, P.O. Box 11210, Chicago, Ill. 60611.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: For the past six months or so I have noticed a yellowish discharge. I have noticed it more recently. I had a cancer smear several months ago and it came back negative, but I did not mention the discharge at the time. It doesn't appear during menstruation. I am quite concerned. Should I worry about this? — Miss R.L.

Discharges are not uncommon among young females and usually represent the shedding of cells from the cervix and vagina. However, a yellowish discharge, as you report, is more ominous, and very likely means an infection somewhere in the genital tract. The fact that it is more or less continuous makes this an even stronger possibility. Have it checked. It is very likely an organism that can yield to appropriate antibiotic or antifungal medicine.

• • •

Dear Dr. Thosteson: The report that raisins contain a cancer-causing agent is of great concern to me. I have been eating them for 10 years. Should I quit? — M.M.F.

You didn't read the report carefully. Raisins do not contain any cancer-causing agent. About a year ago there was an incident in which it was suspected that some raisins had been contaminated. It was an isolated unconfirmed incident, and probably the one that caused your needless concern. Raisins are healthful. You can continue eating them to your heart's content if you like them.

• • •

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My 15-year-old son walks with his feet toed-in quite noticeably. I am told this will correct itself. He walked at nine months. Is there anything that should be done now, or should we wait and see if the condition corrects itself? — C.E.

Have the lad seen by an orthopedist, who can tell you if there is any muscle abnormality (as tibial torsion). If there isn't, the legs will correct themselves.

• • •

You can lose weight if you really want to! Dr. Thosteson's booklet, "Lost Secrets of Reducing," tells you how — naturally and without gimmicks — to the level best suited to your individual needs. For a copy write to Dr. Thosteson, P.O. Box 11210, Chicago, Ill. 60611, enclosing a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and 50 cents.

Dr. Thosteson welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

Solar Heating Can Cause 'Financial Burn'

By LEROY POPE

NEW YORK (UPI) — Things are starting to happen so fast in the realm of solar energy that people who set out to heat their homes by the sun's rays sometimes get badly burned, financially speaking.

The blunt truth is that only one in seven of existing American homes is suitable for solar heating, says architect Malcolm Wells, who with engineer Irwin Spetgang has just written a book entitled "How to Buy Solar Heating Without Getting Burnt" (Rodale Press, Emmaus, Pa.).

"Virtually all one-and two-family homes built from now on in the United States will be designed, insulated and oriented effectively for solar heating," Wells said. "It is even possible that, ultimately, homes in half the area of the country can be heated entirely by the sun's rays. But at the moment, many people are unwisely trying to put solar heating in houses that simply aren't suitable."

On the other hand, Wells said, solar hot water heaters can be installed in practically all existing homes because that only requires a collector area of up to 40 square feat.

The Wells-Spetgang book goes into another aspect of solar home heating that usually is overlooked.

"You must change your lifestyle at home in addition to changing the design of your house if you expect to make solar heating work," Wells told UPI. "Don't imagine solar heating will let you go back to the free and easy living style that we enjoyed before the Arab oil embargo — it won't. Solar heating depends on storing the sun's heat in glauber salts, water or a rockpile amd using the stored heat carefully. That means the solar heated house must be better insulated than a house heated by oil, gas or coal. It also means you must turn the thermostat down lower when you are away, must depend more on blankets for warmth during the night, also must not heat rooms unnecessarily."

A study just published by the country's largest bank, Bank of America of San Francisco, says bluntly that investing in solar home heating is a costly venture, but that it will pay off in reduced utility bills and improved value of the property if it is done right.

Wells and Spetgang tell you how to do it right.

First they show how to determine if your house really is suitably oriented and built for solar heating. Then there's a chapter on how much you must expect to change your home living style to make heating by the sun's rays work.

There is a full discussion of insulating and of the legal problems of making a solar collector comply with your local building and zoning codes. Then, the authors go into the various solar heating systems on the market, the costs and the problems of installing and maintaining them. They tell you how to find an architect or a contractor who really knows solar heating. There's a chapter on getting bank loans to finance the rather costly venture. And there are warnings about how to recognize fraudulent or inferior equipment deals.

Wells is a well-known architect who has designed many solar houses. He also designed the RCA's elaborate pavilion at the 1964 World's Fair in New York and more recently designed Raven Rocks, a new "cave home" community in Ohio.

The Bank of America study also contains information on the various solar home heating systems and how to finance their purchase and installation. The study warns homeowners that it probably will take many months for the system to save enough fuel to pay for itself.

Wells told UPI the glassmakers may give solar heating a big lift by deve' ,ing a type of glass which will let the sun's heat pass from outdoors into the house but will not allow the infrared rays to escape the other way from the house.

Meanwhile, the Department of Agriculture disclosed that newly developed plastic lenses that concentrate sunlight intensively on water pipes present the possibility of using solar heat fairly soon not only for space heating but for generating electricity and other industrial purposes.

On test runs, these plastic lenses have created temperatures as high as 437 degrees F. The lenses concentrate sunlight about tenfold. The department said they could be produced for as little as 25 cents a square foot. They have been made experimentally of flexible acrylic film but the government scientists who developed them said rigid polycarbonate would be better. The plastic film is grooved with up to 1,000 unidirectional grooves to the yard, cut at angles varying from near zero to 45 degrees. These grooves form light concentrating prisms. When the yard-wide film is bent into an arc, the light concentration is further greatly increased. The light is concentrated on a black heat-absorbing water pipe to make flash steam. At the department's laboratory in Berkeley, Calif., the pipe also was encased in a glass vacuum tube, further improving efficiency by preventing any heat escape.

The beauty of these plastic solar heating lenses, says DOA Chemist Shlomo Rosenbaum, is that they can be made reasonably in almost any size or configuration. The state of California presently is testing them on a large greenhouse at Watsonville, Calif.

ANN LANDERS

DREAMY NIGHTWEAR — This beautifully tucked long coat in nylon satin shelters a matching gown. The long sweeping coat is accented with buttons.

Dear Miss Landers: In all my years, I have never been moved to write to someone like you. However, one of today's letters really hit home.

I applaud your advice to the woman who confirmed to her dying sister that she had terminal cancer. I was in a similar situation a year ago. Only one physician out of a dozen gave me a ten percent chance to live through surgery. Without it they said I would die within six months.

My wife and I prepared for more than a month for the operation. We faced all the emotions — fear, anger and denial. Then came resignation and finally, peace. My wife allowed me to lean on her, and we planned together for her life alone.

Had we not been instructed by a very wise friend we would have been unable to do this. A person who is very ill knows what is going on inside himself. Silence only builds and confirms one's fears. It also robs people of hours and days that could be spent pleasurably and productively when the truth is admitted and discussed.

Our relatives went to pieces when I entered the hospital. The day of surgery was worse. I found myself comforting my parents, in-laws, and others. Looking back, it was a strange scene.

Somehow I survived. Today I am in good health. My wife and I are closer than ever. We now know that if the conclusion had been different, we would have at least "done our thing" and prepared for whatever the future had in store for us.

Your advice is super. Ann. Keep it up. — A Reader In Stamford, Conn., Who Delights In Your Common Sense

Dear Reader: A letter such as yours means a great deal to me. Thanks for writing.

Dear Ann Landers: Our 24-year-old told us last night that he is marrying Rosanna next month. She is a lovely girl and we are very fond of her. Rosanna and Ed have gone together two years. We feel she has made our son a far better person.

Problem: Rosanna's parents live 55 miles from here. We have never met them. Ed says it's just as well because they are crazy. We are giving the wedding because the bride's parents live in a tiny studio apartment and cannot afford even the simplest kind of affair.

Rosanna wants to be married in our garden with just a few close friends and her sister and brothers present. Both Rosanna and Ed have told us it would be useless to invite her parents to the wedding because they are very "strange" and don't go anywhere. This is a touchy situation, to say the least, and my husband and I are at a loss to know what to do. Will you help us? — In The Middle

Dear Middle: By all means telephone Rosanna's parents and invite them to your home to become acquainted and discuss the wedding plans. If they refuse, you will have at least made the effort.

And by all means send them an invitation to the wedding — regardless. If they choose not to attend you will still have the satisfaction and peace of mind that comes with knowing you did the right thing.

CONFIDENTIAL to Dying to Know: Don't die. It won't help. I never divulge any information about the people who write to me. Sorry — "No Name, No City, No State" means just that.

Do you feel awkward, self-conscious — lonely? Welcome to the club. There's help for you in Ann Landers' booklet, "The Key to Popularity." Send 50 cents in coin with your request and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11995, Chicago, Illinois 60611.

Hints from Heloise

HELLO:

A tidbit of information for all you lemon lovers.

I am sure you know that if you are going to use a fresh lemon (or a not so fresh one, for that matter) if you will roll it on the counter with your hand a few times before slicing, you will get oodles more juice.

Well, as I was fixing lemons to serve with fish one evening, and doing the rolling, a friend was in the kitchen with me and remarked about it.

Then she really flipped out when I cut the lemon in half. I always use halves. I think there is nothing worse than trying to squeeze lemon juice out of one measly little slice. You get more on your hands than on the fish.

My trick is to cut it at an angle — like Oriental cooks do with vegetables.

I think there is more surface exposed and more juice comes out. It's very easy to handle this way. The juice kinda runs down the angle. Hugs — Heloise

HINTS FROM HIM

DEAR HELOISE:

Here is an easy way to wash the outside of your windows and screens:

I used dishwashing liquid in a sprayer jar that attaches to the garden hose. One can use as much detergent as needed by activating the hand lever. When lever is not activated just clear cold water is applied under pressure from the hose.

I also washed the siding on the house and the patio furniture. An old towel is excellent for drying the furniture. Windows need not be dried.

Try it. It's easy and does a great job. — Arthur W. Schmod

DEAR HELOISE:

Would you kindly tell your readers never to take a bath with pierced earrings on. I lost one of mine this way down the drain. It was a gold one, a gift from my sweet husband on Valentine's Day.

I had my ears pierced only five months ago. It's very convenient.

If I had been told what I just told you, it would not have happened. Maybe some ladies will be helped by this. — 69 Years Young

O.K., ladies — take it from the younger set — those dangling beauties are too precious to lose! Take 'em off too when you bathe. — Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

If your child leaves a lot of apple on the core, try taking the core out first. They like the hole in the apple and there's no waste. — Lillian Cressman

DEAR HELOISE:

Our family discovered that there was a need for something to hold shampoo, soap, etc., in the shower.

We had a shower caddy that you could hang on the shower head, but it was too high up for my daughter. To solve this problem I hung it on the towel rack at the end of our shower. Now it works great! — K.S.

DEAR HELOISE:

Just love your hints and always have a cup of coffee when I read them. Thought you might like this hint I have been doing for years.

When making an afghan or anything large, keep your work in a pillowcase. It will stay clean; also is easy to work with. — Mrs. Henry Keyes

• • •

DEAR HELOISE:

I like to cook my macaroni and noodles the "Heloise way." Bring water to a boil, add macaroni or noodles, bring to a boil again and cover tightly with a lid.

Remove from the fire immediately and let stand for 20 minutes. Drain and use as usual.

It's cooked to perfection with no boiling over. Works for spaghetti, too. — Mary Robert

• • •

DEAR HELOISE:

This idea came to me when I became worried that my children were getting too much sugar from pre-sweetened cold cereals. (Which, by the way, is their favorite breakfast.)

Many popular cereals of the same grain come in both unsweetened and pre-sweetened forms. Now I buy one of each and mix them together in a large storage container.

It could be mixed and returned to the cereal boxes for storage.

My children now have their favorite breakfast with half the sugar, and it's still plenty sweet. And I enjoy the convenience — no spilled sugar! — R. Dague

North remarked with considerable acerbity, "People who have no idea about how to play the dummy should not open with four-card major suits. Then maybe their partners could get to play the hand properly."

"I was just unlucky," replied South. "If East held either club honor, I would have made the contract."

South had drawn trumps and led a club from dummy. Later on he had led a second club to wind up with three club losers.

He was unlucky. He also had misplayed a sure thing contract.

At trick one he should ruff a diamond. Then a trump to his hand, a second diamond ruff, a second trump to his hand, a discard of a heart on his ace of diamonds, three rounds of hearts with the third one ruffed in dummy. Finally, after all that preparation, he then leads a club from dummy.

West would win that club, but would be stone cold dead. A red card lead would allow a ruff in one hand and a club discard from the other, and a club lead would set up a club trick for South.

Mohair Popular Fiber For Garments

NEW YORK (NEA) — Dr. James Davis probably grinned and dug his toe in the gravel and said, "Aw, you didn't have to do that, chief."

(Inside, he was probably thinking, swell. The first mate could go mad and who knows how long it'll take to get back to the good ol' U.S. of A., and I've got to worry about these — these things with the funny hair...)

It was 1849 and Davis was waving goodbye to the sultan of Turkey who was thrilled with how much Davis knew about raising cotton. That's what the sultan had asked us for, someone to tell him about cotton.

As Davis climbed aboard ship, here was the sultan's token of appreciation scrambling up with him: seven "real good" female angora goats and two males.

By 1860, they — the goats — were enjoying life in central and southwestern Texas, in between San Antonio and San Angelo, and Waco and Fort Stockton. They yawned and nibbled happily on the wheat; forb, a broadleafed plant; live oak; and sometimes mesquite.

Pretty soon what you had in Texas, and still have, is a mohair industry, mohair being the funny hair from the angora goat who refuses to eat anywhere but in Texas, Turkey, and South Africa.

Give or take a little, that's how Fred Campbell, executive director in San Angelo, recently explained on the phone how it all started.

"There are between three and four thousand angora goat ranchers in Texas," he said. "This year the industry will run close to 35 million dollars from the sale of mohair. And another 35 million from the sale of kids within the industry."

But that's not so great. "There was a terrific fall-out in the industry in the late '60 and early '70s because of low prices," he said. "Lots of people quite the business. And whereas there were four million angora goats here in 1965, at last count in January, there were 1,070,000."

Predators are part of the problem, too. Coyotes and eagles and animals just passing who stop to grab a new-born kid while the female is off grazing. ("She's got to make a living, too," Campbell said.)

Still, the industry is hanging in there because mohair is a fiber designers continue to demand. It feels so good, for one thing.

"The best quality," he said, "is called 'fall kid hair' because the kid is born in February and March and shorn first in August and September. The hair is very soft and fine with a lightweight hand to it. Mohair becomes increasingly coarse as the goats get older."

But it's tough enough at any age to take a beating. Noted Campbell, "Mohair is one of the strongest animal fibers in the world. It's next to impossible to wear out, and it can be dyed any color beautifully. Our goats are the better quality, all white."

A native crop with all that going for it, you'd think we'd have our pick of it at a good price. But, he said, "Ninety-five percent of our clip is exported, mostly to the United Kingdom, then Europe. It's impossible to process mohair here because of high labor costs, environmental regulations regarding water pollution, tax laws, the control of predators and a number of other things."

Well, before it goes aft and starboard, or maybe after it docks in Liverpool, the hair gets a good going over.

Snatched from the goat's back, it's sorted according to quality, then washed and carted. "Carting means the matted locks are loosened," Campbell said, "which results in fibers coming off in a rope-like state called saliver. The saliver is then coiled into cans."

The coils then get combed and all the nasty things goats are heir to — their own short fibers, vegetable particles, old buttons — get picked out. Then the hair is "drawn" into yarn and usually blended with wool or acrylic.

Finally, it turns into a cowl-neck sweater or a vest with pockets or a long coat that'll cost you an arm and a leg. But it won't wear out and in, say, four, five years, you can pull it out of the closet again when the style comes back.

Dental Assembly Line Has Very Few Amenities

By Tom Tiede

FLORENCE, S.C. (NEA)-The temperature is 87. Humidity, 68. Flies chew on bloody bandages spilled in the alleys. Workmen shovel bits from the human mouth into dumpsters. And all along Palmetto Street people are sprawled uncomfortably, bored or in pain, looking like citizens of Dante's Inferno.

TOM TIEDE

Welcome to Toothtown, USA. Groan.

This is the capital of one-day dental service in America. Five cuspid clinics operate assembly line ministrations that Henry Ford would envy. As many as 200,000 people come here each year, most to have their old tusks removed in the morning, and replaced by shiny new packages in time for dinner.

It's insanity, say many customers. But it's cheap. Teeth can be extracted from $3 to $10 each. Oral hygiene is performed for only $7 to $15. And the biggest bargain of all is the never ending sale on falsies: Toothtown's clinics will install full upper and lower dentures for as little as $60.

Naturally, at such prices, the amenities are spare. Hence the scenes of Inferno. At Sexton's, the largest of the clinics, there are a fourth as few waiting chairs as waiting patients. Restless, dazed with procaine, the crowd thus takes to the streets to spit gore at cockroaches under the shade trees.

The surrounding community tries to aid the patients to some extent. Motels have special wake-up services so that customers may be assured of making chair appointments throughout the day. A gas station next to Sexton's sells ice packs. And cafe waitresses will chop luncheon burgers almost into gruel.

Yet the suffering persists. Sexton's customers receive numbers for service, much the same as in crowded bakeries, and so must hang glumly around until their digits are called. What to do? Kick stones and pray it won't rain; the Sexton parking lot is underfilled with dental clay, and when it's wet it reeks.

The parking lot underfill was the idea of Dr. Claude Sexton, the now dead founder of Toothtown. Sexton opened Florence's first clinic, in 1925, and became widely popular when he refused to raise prices along with non-clinic dentists. He kept rates low by skinflinting — i.e., recycling dental clay in the parking lot.

HOLD BREATH — AND WAIT — Take a number, wait and pray for dry weather — Dr. Claude Sexton, the clinic's late founder, paved the parking lot with recycled dental clay to save money. When it's wet it reeks.

Eventually, Sexton's cost cutting paid of handsomely. For years he was the largest taxpayer in South Carolina, and when he died in 1975 he left an estate of $4 million. Four more clinics have since been built, though the founder's operation remains the largest and least expensive.

The clinics all operate under one philosophy: "Get 'em in and get 'em out." Sexton's opens at 3 a.m., under a plastic sign whose light is buried by moths. In lieu of professional counseling, patients are given information booklets. Then they fill out brief data forms. Payment is by cash or credit card.

Normally, according to the American Dental Association, it takes about seven chair hours and many weeks to install manufactured choppers. At Sexton's it's usually done before the 6 p.m. closing. The clinics have their own laboratories, and their own denturists; teeth are turned out as if they were stamped by dies.

The patient's ordeal is thus hectic. Dr. Norman Birch, a New York dentist who has been a Sexton patient, says the clinics are an organized version of musical chairs. Patients sit down, open wide, then move on. Signs point this way: "Bites to Hall 1." Treatment is courteous, but there is no time for familiarity.

Nor is there time for aftercare. Customers come from across North America, and leave following service. Dr. Birch says he did not even try his new teeth here, and instead had them mailed to his home. What happens if the teeth don't fit, or hemorrhaging begins? Ah, that's what the clinic's critics would like to know.

Naturally enough, the critics are non-clinic dentists, the profession's establishment. T. Carrol Player, for example. He's a local practitioner, down the street from Sexton's who believes rush-through dentistry is "grossly irresponsible."

Sometimes, Dr. Player adds, cut-rate dentistry can also be risky. He says hospital emergency rooms up and down the East Coast have had to care to Toothtown's homebound patients. "If you have trouble," Player grumps, "you can't even get your money back. The clinics will only send you advice and instructions."

Criticism apart, however, the clinics here must be doing something right. Sexton's director, Dr. H.L. Eagerton, says his place treats up to 300 patients a day, and the summer waiting list is three months long. Max Hamilton, of the Florence Chamber of Commerce, estimates the clinics earn at least $8 million annually.

Business is so good that Sexton's has told the publication "Dental Economics" that it plans to open up six new clinics in the country next year. And, Allah be praised, there is even a growing foreign interest: reportedly, a Middle Eastern minister of health has asked Sexton's to help set up a clinic for Arabs.

Ex-Presidential Aide's Son Killed In Car Crash

WASHINGTON (AP) — The 16-year-old son of Bobby Baker was killed in a traffic accident, the police said Friday. Bobby Baker, once a protege of the late President Lyndon B. Johnson, was secretary of the Senate when Johnson was Senate majority leader.

Baker's son, Lyndon John Baker, was killed Thursday night when he lost control of his car at high speed.

Bobby Baker served 16½ months in prison in 1971-72 for parlaying his $19,600 annual Senate salary into $2 million through influence-peddling and other illegal acts.

Two Burglars Ruin Reunion With Shooting

HOUSTON (AP) — Lucille Allen had cooked a big dinner and was waiting for two daughters and a son-in-law to arrive for the family reunion.

One daughter had flown to Houston from her home in Nigeria to be on hand for the big gathering Thursday.

The food grew cold and the mother began to worry when the telephone rang and her son-in-law screamed, "Come help up. We have been shot."

Mrs. Allen and other family members drove to the son-in-law's home, about one mile away.

There they found one daughter, Debbie Alexander, 27, a Houston nurse; another daughter, Sandra Akindohum, 35, from Nigeria, and the son-in-law, Edward Alexander, 39, a Houston security guard, suffering from gunshot wounds.

The two daughters were in poor condition Friday and Alexander in critical condition.

Police said Alexander had stopped by his home to pick up something before joining the family reunion. Officers said he apparently surprised two burglars. Gunfire was heard. His wife jumped from the car and ran toward the house.

The burglars opened fire and the woman fell.

"My other daughter hid on the back seat of the car, but they must have seen her because they put the gun to the car window and shot her in the back," Mrs. Allen said.

CAB Establishes New Charter Rules

WASHINGTON (AP) — It will be as simple for airline passengers to take a charter flight as it is on a scheduled airline under new regulations approved by the Civil Aeronautics Board.

The rules eliminate the minimum length of stay abroad, minimum or maximum size of charter flight groups and other requirements that frequently confused charter air passengers.

One passenger may be enough to form a charter flight, compared to the minimum size of 20 or 40 persons previously required for charter groups.

The new rules took effect on Thursday.

Addict Kicks Habit, Donates Kidney To Sister

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Percy Morgan donated a kidney to save his sister Carolyn's life in an act of love that, in turn, may have rescued him from drug addiction and crime.

The young man's devotion to his sister forced him for medical reasons to kick a long-time heroin habit that had given him nothing but "grief, misery, jailhouses, heartache, pain and hurting other people.

"I did it for the love of my sister. I got one kidney and if it comes down to this one, she can have it," he said.

Percy, 23, and Carolyn, 19, talked of their love for each other and of their hopes for the future in interviews from their hospital beds in Milwaukee County Medical Complex. Both were listed in satisfactory condition Thursday.

It was in November of last year that Morgan's mother told him his sister might die if she did not receive the kidney transplant. He was in jail at the time.

"All my other brothers and sisters said they were going to do it, but when it got down to show and tell, they wouldn't do it," said Morgan, the seventh of 10 children.

"Everyone else was scared," said Miss Morgan. "If it hadn't been for Percy I would still be on the machine."

Since he was 17, Morgan, an affable man whose wide smile comes easily, had been on and off heroin and spent 23 months in jail on various charges including burglary, grand theft and shoplifting.

Meanwhile, his sister had been in and out of hospitals since 1975 when her kidney problem was discovered, and she had been on dialysis machines for nearly a year. She had both kidneys removed in April.

"They said I could live on the machine, but they didn't say how long," she said. "Some live for 10 years. They didn't say how long."

Miss Morgan has not been on dialysis since the transplant surgery Friday. "It started working right away," she said.

She said that she didn't think her brother would stay off drugs to donate the kidney until two weeks ago when he began methadone treatment and pre-transplant tests. "Then I knew he would," she said. "He saved my life."

He broke appointments at a methadone center three times before he finally went into the hospital.

"I cried wolf too many times. I made up my mind. There's no more dope in my life," he said.

Hospital spokesmen said a healthy kidney could be transplanted from a donor who was taking heroin. But the hospital will not provide heroin, and it was safer for Morgan to be on methadone, partly because of the unknown ingredients used to cut heroin, they said.

Now, with only one kidney, it is critical that he stay away from drugs.

"Doctors say if I mess with drugs with one kidney, I'll be heading for an early grave," Morgan said.

Morgan, who passed a high school equivalency test, said he has had only one job in his life and it lasted just nine months.

Now, he has been promised a job and would like to go to Milwaukee School of Engineering and someday help youths with drug problems.

"Young people don't listen to anybody," he said, "But I've been on both sides of the ball park. I'd like to be a dynamite drug counselor and help young people get their lives together."

KICKED HABIT FOR TRANSPLANT — Percy Morgan, left, and his sister, Carolyn, 19 are shown in their beds at Milwaukee County Medical Complex. Percy, 23, says his determination to donate a kidney to hs sister forced him to kick his heroin habit. Both were reported in satisfactory condition following last week's transplant operation. Vasectomy Suit Dismissal Okay

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — The dismissal of a suit brought on behalf of a baby girl that argued the child should not have been born was upheld Friday by the Alabama Supreme Court.

The state's highest court ruled there is "no legal right not to be born," in dismissing the suit which charged that a doctor's negligence in performing a sterilization operation allowed the patient to father a child.

The decision came in a suit filed on behalf of the child, Rachael Nicole Elliott, against Dr. Harry G. Brown of Florence. The suit alleged that the physician "improperly" performed a vasectomy on her father, Therman Elliott, on June 1, 1974, resulting in her conception and a "wrongful life."

Brown's motion to dismiss the suit was first granted in circuit court in Lauderdale County. In upholding the lower court's action, the Supreme Court said:

"There is no legal right not to be born and the plaintiff has no cause of action for 'wrongful life'."

The court further observed that "a legal right not to be born is alien to the public policy of this State to protect and preserve human life."

The child's father and his wife also filed suit against the physician. Those suits were not affected by the dismissal of the suit in the child's name and await trial.

Swedish Palates Pleased By Lake Tahoe Crayfish

By DONALD J. FREDERICK
National Georgraphic News Service

WASHINGTON — This summer many Swedes will raise their glasses in a hearty "Skol" to an immigrant from Lake Tahoe — the crayfish.

Few countries hold king crayfish in such high esteem as Sweden. In August the country's gourmands consume thousands of the tasty crustaceans, washing them down with aquavit at parties that often outlast the midnight sun. So it was a national disaster when a plague-like infection almost stripped the lakes of their treasure in the 1960s.

Commercial fishing for crayfish was banned, and foreign imports soared along with prices. Intent on restocking their troubled waters, the Swedes looked to the United States and discovered a rich source of crayfish — Lake Tahoe — with more than 56 million of the crustaceans, reports the National Geographic Society.

Working with the California Department of Fish and Game and the Swedish Fishery Research Board, Dr. Charles R. Goldman, a limnologist at the University of California at Davis, and Dr. Sture Abrahamsson, a zoologist at the University of Lund, Sweden, arranged an airlift of 60,000 crayfish from Lake Tahoe to Sweden.

The crayfish were flown to a fish hatchery near Lund, where they were carefully studied and tested.

"Years of previous study taught us that the California crayfish, Pacifastacus leniusculus, carries the same infection, but isn't affected by it," says Dr. Goldman. "We wanted to make sure that the newcomers wouldn't make matters worse, so they were subjected to intensive research; their offspring proved to be free of the infection and were used to stock the depleted Swedish lakes."

Enter your own permanent numbers in the chart in the bottom right-hand corner. To figure your own permanent numbers, follow these three steps:

Step 1: From the year chart, find the numbers corresponding to your year of birth. For instance, if you were born in 1947, your number for Physical would be 21, Emotional 17, Intellectual 19. Note whether your numbers are preceded by an A or B; this will be used for Step 2.

Step 2: Now find the corresponding number for the month you were born. If your month is February, and your year numbers were preceded by a B, your month numbers would be 8 for Physical, 3 for Emotional and 31 for Intellectual. Enter your own numbers in the figure chart for Step 2.

Step 3: In the figure chart, enter your day of birth three times, one each for Physical (P), Emotional (E) and Intellectual (I). (If you were born on April 3, for instance, place a 3 in each column.)

Add the three columns to derive your permanent biorhythm numbers for your Physical, Emotional and Intellectual cycles. Now you can refer to today's rhythms.

Financier Finishes Prison Sentence

LOMPOC, Calif. (AP) — Financier Bernard Cornfeld was released from the minimum-security federal prison Friday after serving a 90-day sentence for defrauding Pacific Telephone Co. by using a "blue box" to evade charges for overseas calls.

Cornfeld, 48, released at 6 a.m., probably returned to the Los Angeles area, warden Larry Taylor said.

Cornfeld, whose Swiss-based Investors Overseas Services empire collapsed eight years ago, entered Lompoc on May 29 after being granted a three-week delay to clear up legal problems in Switzerland.

He was convicted in August 1976 on three charges of using "blue boxes" to bilk the telephone company out of about $1,000 a month on long distance charges.

FBI Offers Money For Information

BOSTON (AP) — The FBI is offering a $10,000 reward for information leading to the arrest of Katherine Ann Power, who has been wanted for eight years in connection with a bank robbery and the killing of a patrolman.

Miss Power, a former Brandeis student from Denver, is wanted in connection with a 1970 holdup of a bank in Boston and the killing of a patrolman in the getaway. Richard Bates, special agent in charge of the Boston FBI office, said the reward is "very unusual, a very rare thing for the FBI to do."

INVESTORS' GUIDE

By BILL DOYLE

Q. I am a single woman and worked all my life, until I retired last May at 68. I receive $340 Social Security each month and pay $300 rent. I have $45,000 in savings accounts and $20,000 in a safe deposit box.

My problem is that I have to use some of my money to live on each week. Should I keep taking money out of the safe deposit box? Or, can you tell me how to invest the $20,000 to get more income?

A. You should — immediately — take the $20,000 out of the safe deposit box and put it into a savings account, where it will start earning interest.

The money you worked so hard for isn't working for you while it's sitting in a safe deposit box. Except for a reserve, for emergency purposes, money should always be put to work. This is especially true for retired people, who need all the income they can get.

After you have all $65,000 working for you in savings accounts, you can then think about putting a major portion into investments providing more than the 5 or 5¼ percent interest paid on savings accounts.

I really feel that quality corporate bonds or the common stocks of good utility stocks — where you can get about 9 percent — would be right for you. But, if you want to steer clear of the market — because there is some risk involved — you should put most of your money into insured savings certificates.

You can get up to 8 percent on savings certificates. With about $3,000 kept in a regular savings account as an emergency reserve, you could have $62,000 working for you in savings certificates. At 8 percent, that money in certificates would produce $4,960 a year. That kind of extra income should help ease your retirement worries.

• • •

Q. I have been advised by a mutual fund sales representative to redeem the shares of the mutual fund I now own, because the management and yield of that fund "do not meet today's conditions and are below standard." He suggests I put the $12,000 into an "income type" mutual fund he represents, at an 8½ percent sales charge.

I could transfer my money from the fund I now have to an income fund managed by the same organization for a very small charge. I don't want to be taken in by a fast talker. What do you advise?

A. If that mutual fund peddler shows up at your house, lock the door. If he telephones, hang up. It's clear that he's pushing that mutual fund with the 8½ percent commission — of which he would get the lion's share.

Of the two income funds you named in your letter, the one into which you could switch for a small charge has done just as well as the one the salesman is touting. Most organizations which sponsor two or more mutual funds allow shareholders to switch for a $5 bookkeeping fee. Do that and you won't be 8½ percent behind the eightball.

• • •

Q. Where can I cash the coupons from tax-exempt municipal bonds? Also, where can I cash the bonds when they mature? Is there a fee?

A. Clip each coupon as it comes due by cutting it off the bond. Take the coupon to your bank and either deposit it or get cash for it.

When a bond matures, take it to your bank or brokerage firm and ask the banker or broker to present the bond for redemption. When the bond is redeemed, the money will be credited to your account.

Fees? That depends on the policy of the individual bank or brokerage firm. Most banks cash coupons, without any fee, as a convenience for customers. Handling the redemption of a bond, which involves more details, might result in a charge. Much depends on how good a customer you are.

Tycoon Pushes Pulp Complex

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (AP) — American business tycoon Daniel K. Ludwig, one of the richest men in the world, is pushing ahead with the development of a vast pulp and paper complex in Brazil's Amazon Jungle, oblivious to talk that he may be overextending himself financially and could be creating social and ecological problems in this country.

Earlier this year, Ludwig had a complete pulp mill and an accompanying power-generating plant towed on special floating platforms three-fifths of the way around the world from Japan to his custom-planted tree farm along Brazil's Jari River, an Amazon tributary. The platforms were too big to fit through the Panama Canal.

Ludwig, whose personal fortune is reported to be over $3 billion, foresees a worldwide paper-products shortage in coming years. So he has put in meticulously selected fast-growing trees on 250,000 acres of once untouched South American tropical rain forest. They will be the raw material for the Japanese-built mill, which is to turn out 750 tons of pulp a day by 1981. The pulp then can be made into almost anything, ranging from tissue paper to newsprint to particleboard, depending on consumer needs.

It is hard to get precise information on the financing for this project. Ludwig never gives interviews, and he has issued recent orders to his employees to avoid newsmen. Ludwig had allowed a relaxation of his press rules several months ago, but he clamped down again because of what he felt were "hatchet jobs" by some writers.

"Mr. Ludwig is disillusioned with the press," an aide in Rio said.

Nevertheless, it has been possible to glean some idea of what is going on with Ludwig's Brazilian holdings because he has been borrowing large sums of money on various fronts, including an estimated $400 million from big U.S. banks such as Chase Manhattan, Manufacturers Hanover Trust Co. and First National Bank of Boston.

Spending at the Jari timber and pulp complex is running at about $10 million a month, according to people in the know. The total investment to be made there is estimated at $650 million. The pulp mill and power plant cost a total of $250 million. Also, they were financed in yen, which could mean even more cost in dollar terms because the dollar has fallen sharply against the Japanese currency.

But financial experts dismiss opinions raised in the newspaper and magazine articles Ludwig didn't like that Ludwig is financially overextended. "It simply is good business practice to borrow against your assets," one outside banker said. "And when you've got a lot of assets, you can borrow a lot of money. This is a sound project. Those trees are growing, and there's that mill ready to go into production."

Ludwig, who is 81 and has no heirs, plans to leave much of his fortune to cancer research. He made his original billions in shipping. Other holdings of his include coal mines in West Virginia and Australia, orange groves in Panama, hotels in Acapulco, an oil refinery in Scotland and real estate in New York City.

The Amazon project itself is quite diversified.

A Kaolin factory there already is producing. Kaolin is a clay-like substance used in cosmetics, dishes, bond paper and anti-diarrhea medicine.

Airline Trying To Recover From Strike

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Northwest Airlines is trying to resume full service in the wake of a 109-day pilots strike that hobbled transportation and caused problems for travelers and businesses across the Northern United States.

The striking pilots must be recertified for flying because they were out of the cockpit for more than 90 days in the dispute that ended early last Tuesday. The strike, the third-longest in the airline's history, cost the pilots thousands of dollars in lost pay but gained them an average increase of more than $10,000 a year in wages and benefits. The average pilot already made a salary of $49,000 a year.

And the airline says it made about $20 million during the second quarter of the year, even though the strike forced a severe cutback in service for two of those three months.

But people and companies who depend on Northwest often fared worse.

In Billings, Mont., florists found the only way to get roses for Mother's Day was by bus. "You can imagine what roses looked like sitting in a bus," said florist Joe Hopper. Customers returned many of the flowers.

Travelers complained about trips from Detroit to Denver via Atlanta. A cargo of adopted Korean orphans, bound for new homes in the Twin Cities, was stranded in the Orient. A wholesale florist in Minneapolis said he lost thousands because he couldn't fly in flowers from the West.

The strike generally put a squeeze of freight destined for the West Coast, the South and New York.

Montana Gov. Thomas Judge said the strike cost his state at least $40 million. The Minnesota Revenue Department estimates the strike reduced tax revenue by $1 million a month.

Feds Oppose Laser Firms' Merger Plans

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The government filed a civil antitrust suit Friday challenging a merger of two laser equipment-producing firms.

The suit, filed in federal court in San Francisco, opposed the 1976 acquisition of Laserplane Corp. of Dayton, Ohio, by Spectra-Physics Inc., of Mountain View, Calif.

The Justice Department says that Laserplane is the world's largest producer of machine control Lasers and Spectra-Physics was the world's leading producer of construction lasers.

The department said a construction laser is used in an enclosed place such as a building or tunnel where the intense beam of light is used by machine operators as a guide.

A machine control laser is used outdoors to control machines in such activities as agriculture and road construction where they assure straight lines, for example, for irrigation ditches and road grading.

The Justice Department said both firms make both products and that prior to the acquisition Spectra-Physics controlled 24 percent of the sales of construction lasers in this country and Laserplane had 23 percent. The department said Spectra-Physics had 1976 sales of $8.6 million worldwide and $3.7 million in the United States for construction lasers.

Unique Approach Marks Career Of Fuller

Poet, Engineer Reviews Career

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — In 1927, Buckminster Fuller, then 32, stood on the shores of Lake Michigan and pondered whether to take his life.

He was considered a crackpot — a tinkerer of weird ideas and gadgets, a man who had disgraced his family by being thrown out of Harvard (not once, but twice), a man who had just lost his job.

Standing there, on "a jump-or-think basis," as he later put it, he concluded: "You do not have the right to eliminate yourself. You do not belong to you. You belong to the universe."

And so was spared the life of one of the world's great thinkers — the man who became known as "the first poet of technology."

Fuller, now 83, entered a hospital in Bangor, Maine, on Tuesday after complaining of chest pains while vacationing. His condition was good Thursday, with doctors saying he had not suffered a heart attack and more tests were planned.

Who is Fuller? A man out of step with his time, yet an influence on it. He has been called "the greatest living genius of industrial-technical realization in building." He calls himself just "Bucky" Fuller and urges everyone else to.

He is a man who refuses to believe there is anything that cannot be done. "Man knows so much and does so little," he says.

He is best known for his discovery, a quarter-century ago, of what he calls the "geodesic dome" — not his first find but the one that forever dispelled the notion that he was just a crackpot.

The structure occurs in nature and can be built by man. It is as self-sufficient as a butterfly's wing and as strong as an egg shell. It depends on no heavy vaults or flying buttresses to support it.

Its strength is derived instead from a complex of alternating squares and triangles which produce a phenomenal strength-to-weight ratio when pressure is applied to to any point on the structure.

It crops up all over in nature — in viruses, in the cornea of the eye. Fuller patented it in 1954 — almost like getting a patent on gravity. Within 10 years, the domes had spread throughout the world.

So one of Fuller's inventions is finally lining his pockets with gold. It grossed about $1 million just in the first decade.

The domes have housed Marines from Antarctica to Okinawa, radar installations along the 4,500 miles of the Distant Early Warning lines, and global trade fairs.

The Russians saw one dome at the 1959 U.S. exhibit in Moscow and bought it. Nikita Khrushchev got the name wrong but was impressed. "Mr. J. Buckingham Fuller must come to Russia and teach our engineers," he said.

But Fuller does not teach only engineers. Harvard invited him back — 45 years after he was booted out the second time — to be the Charles Eliot Norton Professor of Poetry, a distinction he's shared with e.e. cummings, Robert Frost and Archibald MacLeish. He is also a professor emeritus at the University of Pennsylvania.

Born in Milton, Mass., in 1895, the son of a merchant, Fuller comes from a long line of New England ministers and lawyers. A great-aunt, Margaret Fuller, was an associate of Emerson and Thoreau.

Before the dome, he worked on modular housing and a distortion-free map, and he spent a good bit of energy trying to improve two items on which modern man depends — the automobile and the bathroom.

His Dymaxion Car of the 1930s was a dramatic departure in design. In an age of boxy cars, this three-wheeled, rear-engined machine looked like an egg. It was air-conditioned, got 40 miles to the gallon, and its 90 horsepower engine could move it at 120 mph.

His Dymaxion Bathroom was designed to cut the costs and make easy the installation of bathrooms by stamping them out like an auto body.

He was so excited, he had it mounted on the back of a truck and drove it around Long Island. A friend recalls: "He went tearing around town, he had some child sitting on the john, and he was throwing toilet paper all over the place."

But neither the car nor the bathroom was ever mass-produced, so they made him little or no money. But, then, Fuller has always said: "My criteria for success isn't making money, it's making sense."

Throughout his life, he's moved from one discovery to another, seldom taking time to convert them to money-making ventures.

"Big business is only interested in what you can make money on in three or four years," he once said. "All I was concerned with was whether my designs worked."

In 1959, Fuller accepted a $12,000 appointment as a research professor at Southern Illinois University. Twelve years later he went to Philadelphia to take on the title of World Fellow in Residence, bestowed by four schools — the University of Pennsylvania, Bryn Mawr College, Haverford College and Swarthmore College. He also lectures around the world, on subjects from architecture to ecology.

In an interview last summer, he put his goals this way:

"What I am interested in is solving human problems — by artifacts instead of by political reforms. I know I'm not going to get anywhere trying to persuade people. But if I use the right artifacts they will use them spontaneously.

"It is as if there are all these people on the side of a roaring gorge, and there is plenty of food but it all is on the other side. So if I build them a bridge over the gorge, they will automatically use the bridge. I don't say anything. I just build bridges."

'Batman' Gets Sentence For Fraud

NEW YORK (AP) — Assemblyman David Greenberg, once part of the "Batman and Robin" police team, was sentenced Friday to two years in prison and a $10,000 fine on his conviction on mail fraud and obstruction of justice charges.

U.S. District Judge Edward R. Neaher refused Greenberg's request to make two one-year sentences concurrent saying, "As a public official he violated a public trust by urging people to break the laws which he had sworn to uphold."

Greenberg, the "Batman" half of the team whose exploits were chronicled in the book and movie "Super Cops," was convicted by a jury in the federal court in Brooklyn on June 30 after a three-week trial.

With the sentencing, he lost the Assembly seat to which he was elected in 1976. His lawyer told the court he had resigned the office.

The 34-year-old Democrat was convicted of defrauding the federal Small Business Administration concering an $86,000 disaster loan he sought to repair hurricane damage to an apartment house he owned.

Testimony at the trial indicated he submitted phony bills to the SBA and included damages to the building before it was hit by the storm.

He also was accused of inducing a former business partner to perjure himself before a grand jury that was investigating Greenberg's business dealings.

REHEARSAL TIME — Contestants in the Miss Black America pageant rehearse Wednesday for Friday night's round of competition in Philadelphia. Young Boy Dazzles Maestro

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Concert violinist Henryk Szeryng was so impressed by 11-year-old Michael Ludwig's ability to fiddle around, that the musician has promised to bring the boy a full-sized violin and take an active part in his musical education

So how did an otherwise normal seventh grader — whose pastimes include whiffle ball and stamp collecting — come to the attention of one of the world's most renowned violinists?

The answer lies with Michael's father, Irving Ludwig, himself a violinist with the Philadelphia Orchestra. Ludwig has been his son's music teacher since Michael was six years old.

"We had a quarter-sized violin and Michael was able to sing whatever he heard. He had a good musical ear," Ludwig said.

Michael's progress earned him admittance to the prestigious Curtis Institute, usually open to music students of college age.

Szeryng recently sat and Michael took out his violin and played the first movement of Mendelssohn's Violin Concerto.

Then for the clincher, Michael raced through an exercise at breakneck speed, bringing Szeryng to his feet. "You're fantastic," the maestro said.

Szeryng, now on tour in Europe, said he will bring Michael a full-sized violin, which could cost from $3,000 to $25,000, when he returns in November.

Says $4 For Fine Enough

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — The city of Columbus had better be happy with a $4 payment for a traffic ticket, says Jerry Kegley, 27, of Ashley, Ohio, because that's all he intends to pay.

Kegley was ticketed for making an illegal left turn in downtown Columbus July 20, according to traffic court records.

He sent back the final notice on his court summons, a $4 money order and a note.

"Here's $4," the note read. "That's all I owe and all I'm paying.

"I figure 30 cents for your wasted gas and $3.70 for the officer's time. He was a good fellow so I'll pay that.

"But as for the rest of the money, forget it. You'll never get it. And as for getting me, forget that too. 'Cause I'm a hermit and you'll never find me."

A traffic court referee has issued an order that Kegley be brought into court, court officials said.

The usual fine for an illegal left turn is $28.

Student Hustles For Degree

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Mike DiMaio hustled his way through the University of Florida.

He taught the hustle, tango, fox-trot and other fancy steps at a downtown dance studio to earn money so could get a degree in microbiology.

The student from Tampa also took part in a variety of campus activities and will receive an alunni association-sponsored leadership award at his Aug. 26 commencement.

He was a varsity cheerleader, a member of the student union board of managers, the interfraternity council, two honorary leadership societies, a social fraternity and the campus speakers bureau.

In addition, DiMaio worked to prevent juvenile delinquency through the Big Brothers organization.

"I have to budget my time carefully," he said. "You learn when you get involved with activities not to waste time."

DiMaio, 22, hopes to go on to medical school.

Toronto Snubs Wagon Train

TORONTO (AP) — Members of a U.S.-based wagon train, who traveled about 145 miles for the opening of the Canadian National Exhibition, have left the city saying they were disappointed at the reception they received.

Walt Dubbeld, of Independence, Iowa, a scout for the train, said Thursday, "We've been treated like dirt since we got here."

He said the group members, most of them U.S. citizens, felt they had been snubbed by city and exhibition officials.

The wagon train of about 165 persons in 18 wagons and two buggies made the trip at their own expense from Queenston, N.Y.

The wagon train started last Friday and arrived in Toronto on Tuesday.

Wagonmaster Rick Mocon, who lives in Millbrook, Ont., said that when they arrived "the exhibition people didn't want anything to do with us."

Judy Albert, whose home is in Michigan, said "never again will we come to Toronto."

Ray Still Guilty, Kelley Says

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Former FBI Director Clarence Kelley said Friday that testimony by James Earl Ray on the killing of Martin Luther King Jr., has not shown any new evidence of any conspiracy in the 1968 slaying.

"I am of the opinion that the story is as it was investigated by the FBI," Kelley said at a news conference. "If additional leads come up, they traditionally have been pursued. But there has been nothing to counter the original and definite conclusion that Martin Luther King was slain by James Earl Ray."

The FBI has been under fire in the case, with civil rights leaders and Ray's attorney charging that the federal agency was behind a conspiracy to kill King.

Kelley had called the news conference to announce that he would not run for mayor of Kansas City. He said he would, however, accept an appointment to the city's Police Board if it were offered.

Underwater Record Broken

OTTAWA (AP) — While Diana Nyad and Stella Taylor were failing in their attempts to reach complete open water ocean swims, British Army diver Steve Cooke was floating about in a tank breaking what he said was the record for underwater endurance.

Cooke, a 22-year-old lance corporal, stayed submerged in a water-filled tank for five days, 21 hours and 16 minutes. When he emerged from the converted milk tank on Wednesday, Cooke was greeted by British military and civilian officials.

Barren Region Of Panhandle Stores Methods Of Survival

FRITCH, Texas (UPI) — Ed Day, stopping in a rugged draw that jutted off Lake Meredith, turned the fist-size hunk of flint in his hand.

He picked up a second rock the length of a butcher knife and knocked the two together so that they rang like scraps of steel.

"Flint breaks like glass," he told the half-dozen hikers in the Alibates National Monument.

"It's so sharp you can shave with it," he said and proved it by scraping off a square-inch patch of hair on his forearm. "To some people without any metal it's difficult to imagine flint's importance. I call it 'the sharp edge of survival'".

The path, reached after a bumpy ride down a dusty dirt road, stretched through meadows of blossoming yellow wildflowers and the dagger leaves of the yucca. A horned toad darted at Jay's feet.

"The yucca is almost like having a little grocery or hardware store in your backyard. It's difficult to imagine living without any stores at all. Your style of living would change immediately," said Day, 43.

For about 12,000 years, man has wandered the same gullies along the recently created Lake Meredith on the Canadian River, finding the same source of flint outcropped in a 10-square-mile area near this Panhandle city. The so-called Alibates flint was valued by Indians because of its strength and its rainbow hues.

The monument was authorized in 1965 but is still largely undeveloped. Plans include construction in three or four years of a visitors center and a paved road to the site where early man once dug the flint.

Day, a park technician, has prowled the dry creekbeds of the region since he was a boy growing up in Fritch. A former truck driver, he applied to the National Park Service several years ago after reading a newspaper advertisement.

On this spring day, he was taking three rangers and a Miami couple on a tour of the ancient quarries.

"That's what this national monument is all about," he said. "About the value and use of flint by a people that didn't have any metal."

Man, from the earliest PaleoIndians who roamed the Texas Plains in search of mammoths, camels, bison and horses 12,000 years ago, apparently has used the Canadian River as a "highway" and trade route. They traded the colorful Texas flint for Pacific coast seashells, painted Pueblo pottery and Minnesota pipestone.

"It was a very practical commodity," said Wes Phillips, a park management assistant. "I guess they thought of flint as we think of gasoline. It's just something you have to have."

Most evidence of actual mining of the flint started as early as 1000 A.D. by permanent Indian settlers, who built stone and adobe villages.

In about 1450, the nomadic Apaches displaced the sedentary farmers. The Apaches, Kiowas and Cheyennes lived in the area when the Spanish explorers began arriving in 1541, although the importance of the flint gradually diminished with the introduction of rifles.

THAILAND FIGHTING

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — In the six months ending in July, about 250 communist insurgents were killed in fighting, 110 others were captured and 400 surrendered to Thai authorities, a military spokesman said Friday. Thailand's roughly 10,000 insurgents have confined their activities to the countryside, following the Maoist principle of isolating cities.

WHAT'S UP

A capsule view of tastes, interests and attitudes

What's up in predictions?

The earth is in for a battering during the rest of the 20th century. That's the word from a panel of psychics whose predictions are collected in scientist Jeffrey Goodman's new book, "We Are the Earthquake Generation."

Here are some of the events foreseen and when to expect them:

— Large-scale earthquakes occur in California, western Canada and Alaska. San Diego, Los Angeles and San Francisco are destroyed. (1980-1985).

— Weather grows increasingly harsh. (1980-1985)

— A major earthquake wrecks most of New York City. (1980-1985).

— Tidal waves and earthquakes severely damage India and Japan. (1985-1990)

— "Unusual" behavior displayed by North American animals and fish. (1985-1990)

— Major sections of the western United States fall into the sea. Pacific coastline re-established in Nebraska and Kansas. (1990-2000)

— Portions of Wisconsin, Michigan, Illinois, Louisiana, Texas and several Atlantic seaboard states are covered with water. (1990-2000)

— Africa is torn apart by earthquake-activated faults and rifts. (1990-2000)

— United States undergoes severe economic setbacks, including fuel shortages and famines. (1990-2000)

— New climates are established. For exmample, Alaska becomes temperate while Florida becomes cool or frigid.(-2000)

— Jesus Christ returns with many helpers.(2000)

— Space people visit earth. (2000)

— Cancer is cured (2030)

What's up in law firms?

LEON JAWORSKI

Leon Jaworski has again returned to his native Texas after heading the House investigation into charges of Korean influence buying. But the former Watergate special prosecutor won't have to stand on the unemployment line; he is a partner in one of the nation's largest law firms.

According to the ABA Journal, these are the 11 law firms in the U.S. employing 200 attorneys or more and the numbers of lawyers each has on staff:

1. Baker and McKenzie (Chicago), 396.
2. Sherman and Sterling (New York), 260.
3. Vinson and Elkins (Houston), 253.
4. Morgan, Lewis and Bockius (Philadelphia), 246.
5. Fullbright and Jaworski (Houston), 225.
6. Sidley and Austin (Chicago), 218.
7. Pillsbury, Madison and Sutro (San Francisco), 218.

What's up in stunts

The making of Burt Reynold's new movie "Hooper" was heaven for the 30 stuntmen and women on the picture. And for the man calling the shots, it was the culmination of 20 years of gambling life and limb for moviegoer's entertainment.

That man is Hal Needham, the former Hollywood stuntman who stunned everyone when his first directing effort "Smokey and the Bandit" became the second highest grossing movie of last year. "Hooper" looks every bit the winner "Smokey" was, and in many ways it's Needham's own story.

His first stunt was was a wing-walking episode in Jimmy Stewart's "The Spirit of St. Louis." Since then Needham has broken his back twice and 42 other bones, as well, while providing the nerve tightening action in such films as "French Connection II," "Little Big Man," "The Longest Yard," "The Man Who Loved Cat Dancing" and "White Lighting." Obviously the reason he and Burt Reynolds have become such good pals is revealed by that list.

Just last year, he tried to break the land speed record of 650 m.p.h., but made it to only 619.90. He's not trying it again.

"I'm not going to put my neck on the line again," says Needham. "Things are going to great for me now. I'd be a fool to risk it all now to gratify my ego."

Think twice about parking your car on a Boston street. According to a recent survey by a leading insurance company, Beantown has the highest auto theft rate in the nation.

CARTER and DREYFUSS: UFO believers?

What's up in films?

Many Americans started worrying about military coups when word leaked out in the midst of Watergate that "Patton" was President Nixon's favorite movie. Hence, the staff of "US" magazine had to do considerable snooping to find out President Carter's top films.

According to a number of Carter's friends and associates, his favorite flicks are:

— "Close Encounters of the Third Kind"
— "The Treasure of the Sierra Madre"
— "Casablanca"
— "The Big Sleep"
— "The Odd Couple"
— "Barefoot in the Park
— "Around the World in 80 Days"
— "Dona Flor and Her Two Husbands"

The president has reportedly seen "Close Encounters" at least twice. Perhaps Carter, who claims he once saw a UFO, sympathizes with the character played in the film by Richard Dreyfuss, who has difficulty convincing others that he saw beings from outer space.

What's up in sound?

Does Frank Sinatra come out of your stereo speakers sounding like Dolly Parton? If so, you may profit from these 10 suggestions for inexpensively improving sound quality offered by Clement Meadmore in his new book, "All Sound and No Frills" (Panethon, $3.95).

1. Place speakers 6 feet apart in small rooms and 8 feet apart in large rooms.
2. Move speakers away from walls.
3. Angle speakers toward the center of the room.
4. Position speakers at ear level.
5. Create space under speakers with legs, bricks or like items.
6. Connect speakers with 14-gauge lamp wire.
7. Make sure your listening room has carpet, upholstered furniture or heavy curtains to absorb some of the sound and prevent echo.
8. Keep records and stylus clean and dusted. Don't smoke; that gums up electronics and coats records.
9. Mount the turntable shelf on a wall rather than supporting it from the floor. That will prevent walking on the floor from shaking the turntable.
10. Do not have an air conditioner or other noisemaker in the same room with speakers.

'Chess Nuts' Gravitate To Championship Site

BAGUIO, Philippines (UPI) — They sit patiently in the restaurants and coffee shops, the chess buffs.

Often, they don't talk for hours, hunching over and moving only their arms and fingers, working their portable boards. The extreme cases shift salt cellars over coffee cups, lost in their own thoughts.

To the outsider, they are a peculiar breed. Their preoccupation is called a sport, which applies only because it fits into no other category.

From perhaps 30 or 40 countries, they have come to the world chess championships and they speak to each other with a 64-square playing board and 32 pieces whose history is lost in the dark ages and beyond.

"They're really weird," said a hotel desk clerk at The Pines, one of Baguio's two best hotels and the temporary home of world challenger Viktor Korchnoi. "They are very nice people. But they keep forgetting their room numbers."

(World champion Anatoly Karpov of the Soviet union stays behind KGB guards at a secluded villa.)

Certainly to the outsider chess buffs are, well, different.

A popular pun making the rounds among the non-buffs here has a group of elderly chess players sitting in a hotel room when it catches fire. They play on obliviously, until firmen come to rescue them, carrying them bodily from the room, still fingering their magnetic boards.

This is known as "pulling the old chess nuts out of the fire."

All known chess fans and experts here are men, and most of their apparently indulgent wives have been left at home while the men use family funds to finance their obsession with the toughest mental game of skill known to man.

To them, a vocabulary suffers for lack of knowledge of queen's gambit declined, squared knights and running pawns. Nimzo-Indian is a pithy, descriptive, meaningful term.

But sometimes likes have attracted, breaking the law of magnetic polarity.

While an international grandmaster here watches and analyzes games, his wife works on her book on bullfighting techniques.

Another grandmaster each night pulls in — literally — to the convention center press room towing a huge, cased "portable" typewriter. Every night he asks the same small coterie of friends who speak English if they want to take his typewriter for a walk.

And every night one of them does, around the press room once, chortling.

To their credit, most of them are tolerant to outsiders who show an interest, but who can't tell a nimzo from a gizmo.

Like a harried parent to a pitied, stunted child they take 30 seconds or so to explain in words of one syllable what is happening.

"Well, it's easy to see that wild queen is going to give a lot of trouble after that rook sacrifice," says one.

Oh, sure.

So far, the 1978 championship has not even come close to the 1972 Bobby Fischer-Boris Spassky Iceland encounter for color, of course.

They haven't had to lock up the scissors and count the knives, for example.

But Korchnoi raged through The Pines Hotel coffee shop the other evening after he felt a woman was staring at him. In several languages, the Russian defector shouted, pointed and claimed the woman was upsetting him.

"Well, yes," said a Korchnoi friend. "He is playing for $550,000 and you should be able to look at him like any other celebrity.

"But it's so damned embarrassing when you do, you know."

The fights over chairs, flags, yogurt and a para-psychologist are partly put-ons, of course, in a war that is a very real mental strain on the participants.

But they also are serious. Chess buffs are that way.

Korchnoi Calls For Time-Out

BAGUIO, Philippines (UPI) — Chess challenger Viktor Korchnoi, holding a "winning" position but running short of time in the adjourned 13th game of the world chess championship, called a time-out Friday to further study the board.

Korchnoi, who sacrificed a rook Thursday in an effort to throw soviet whiz kid and world champion Anatoly Karpov on the defensive, sealed his 41st move at adjournment Tmursday then used one of his allowed three time-outs to force a further delay so he could prepare for all possible Karpov moves.

"White is winning," British international master Harry Golomber said.

Korchnoi's major problem, as usual, was time. He took 40 minutes to make his sealed 41st move and, as a result, will have to make his next 15 moves in 20 minutes when play resumes Sunday.

under complicated world championship rules, the adjourned 13th game will not resume until Sunday. Tme 14th game, with Karpov playing white, will begin on schedule Saturday and if it, too, is adjourned the champion and challenger will have two unfinished games to complete.

When play on the 13th resumes Sunday, Karpov is expected to come well-prepared and could well blitz the 47-year-old challenger if he is not properly prepared.

"There are some chances to win," British grandmaster Michael Stean, a Korchnoi aide, said. "There are six possible kinds of moves. If there are six, then the Russians will have to think as much."

Stean said Korchnoi analyzed the position all of Thursday night and into the early morning hours Friday.

In the adjourned position, Karpov was cramped while Korchnoi was on the attack and enjoyed great mobility of pieces. In addition, the challenger had three connected pawns, which could be used to win a new queen.

"The sacrifice was a very good one," British grandmaster Raymond Keene, another Korchnoi aide, said. "He may be under time trouble because it took him so long to make the sealed move.

"If it were Karpov playing white, he would have made the sealed move in 10 minutes because he will be satisfied with just a good move," Keene said. "But Korchnoi analyzes more deeply."

After 12 completed games, the contest for the world chess title and $550,000 in prize money is tied 1-1. The first man to take six games is the winner.

The time-out requested by Korchnoi was the second time a game had been delayed. Karpov asked for a delay of the 12th game to rest after he was beaten in the 11th.

Jury Awards Woman Test-Tube Damages

NEW YORK (AP) — A federal court jury awarded Doris Del Zio $50,000 in damages Friday for emotional stress inflicted on her when a test-tube baby experiment was halted at Columbia Presbyterian Medical Center five years ago. She had sued for $1.55 million.

The jury of four women and two men also made a token award in favor of her husband, John, of $3 — $1 each against the three defendants: Columbia Presbyterian; its chief gynecologist and obstetrician, Dr. Raymond Vande Wiele, and the operators of the hospital, Columbia University.

In its unanimous decision, however, the jury found Vande Wiele innocent of wrongfully converting property belonging to Mrs. Del Zio — the test tube containing the developing embryo which was to have been implanted in her body.

The jury broke down the award to Mrs. Del Zio this way: $25,000 against Vande Wiele and $12,500 each against Columbia Presbyterian and Columbia University. It was Vande Wiele who physically confiscated the embryo to end the experiment.

Vande Wiele testified that he interrupted Dr. Landrum Shettles' procedure because he feared it might prove fatal to Mrs. Del Zio or that an infant born as a result might turn out to be a "monstrosity."

Moreover, Vande Wiele maintained, neither Shettles nor his colleague, Dr. William Sweeney, had cleared their experiment in advance with Columbia Presbyterian.

The trial testimony showed that 20 to 30 minutes before he ordered the test tube removed from the incubator, Vande Wiele had talked by phone to the head of the Medical Center.

Mrs. Del Zio, who had a daughter by a previous marriage, said she underwent the experiment because she desperately wanted a child by her second husband and was prevented from normal conception by blocked Fallopian tubes.

She said the abrupt interference by Vande Wiele had a tremendous adverse emotional effect on her, for which she sought damages.

The jury had been given the case at 5:21 p.m. Thursday, near the conclusion of a fifth week of trial, and returned its verdict some 26 hours later to U.S. District Judge Charles Stewart.

Interest in the trial that began July 17 was spurred midway in the testimony by the announcement that an English woman had given birth to the world's first test tube infant.

JESUS RALLY

MERCER, Pa. (AP) — About 14,000 persons gathered on a hillside and sang praise to Jesus at the beginning of a religious rally in Mercer County. The three-day event opened Thursday on a 300-acre dairy farm owned by Ralph Watson off Interstate 80. Most people spent the afternoon in an open air arena, where the name "Jesus" was spelled out in letters four stories high behind a large stage.

Governors To Join In Climb?

AUGUSTA, Maine (UPI) — New Hampshire Gov. Meldrim H. Thomson, never one to back down from a challenge, has issued one to Maine Gov. James B. Longley — climb mile-high Mt. Katahdin with him, officials said Friday.

"Gov. Thomson said he'll climb Mt. Katahdin sometime in September," Maynard F. Marsh, Maine commissioner of Inland Fisheries and Wildlife, told Longley at the monthly cabinet meeting. "He asked if you would like to join him."

"I don't think he can keep up with me," Longley chuckled. But Marsh advised Longley, the nation's only independent governor, Thomson was an "experienced climber."

"Well then it's about time he recognized a good mountain," Longley responded.

Government Trying To Cut Down Migration

Masai: Africa's Roving Cattlemen

Most of the world's cattlemen are conservatives. Their hardy lifestyles and traditions are difficult to change. The cowboy of the old American southwest, the Karamojong in Uganda, the Somali herdsman in northern Kenya, or the legendary Masai of Tanzania and Kenya share a common contempt for farming and stationary occupations.

For the 125,000 residents of Masailand, a 54,000-square-mile strip in northern Tanzania that inches over the border into Kenya, tradition means a lifetime of tending the herds and searching for grazing lands and water.

Historically, the Masai roamed as far north as Mount Kenya, as far south as Mount Kilimanjaro, to the shores of Lake Victoria on the west, and as far east as the beaches of the Indian Ocean.

But over the past several decades, at the urging of local government officials and because of severe drought, the Masai have limited their migration. To coordinate programs designed to bring the Masai into the national economy, the Tanzanian government found it necessary to establish two administrative districts, Monduli and Kiteto, or northern and southern Masailand, which have a total of 900,000 animals.

Suspicious of strangers, Masai women cover their faces with a forearm to avoid picture-taking. But the elders, men in their 40s, will stomp boldly forward to challenge any outsiders who approach the boma, a compound where Masai families live.

"They must know exactly why you have come," says Israel Ole Karyongi, an American-educated Masai who co-manages the Masai Livestock Project in Tanzania, which is assisted by the Agency for International Development, the World Bank, and other donors.

The Rongaltaika Bomba, named for an official who supervises it, is perched high atop a slope covered with dried yellow grasses and volcanic rock fragments. It is a six-foot high encirclement of stiff brush designed to keep the cattle in and intruders out.

Two teenage boys appear at the opening to the boma as a group of AID officials approach. They smile and run to summon their elders. The first elder appears, a man in his late 30s. He inquires in Maa, the language of the Masai. The group is escorted to a rest hut outside the boma for a meeting. The elder is joined by the two boys.

On this day, the elder is willing to discuss the newly-completed all-weather road built with U.S. drought funds. "We use it, of course, to drive our cattle to go to the market, and to take our sick to the hospital. It is a help to us."

Masai problems vary only slightly from boma to boma. The primary concern is usually the welfare of the animals, for a Masai's wealth and social status is measured by the number of animals he owns.

"It's been raining and there are a lot of mosquitoes and disease (malaria). We are worried about the goats. Many of them have diarrhea and several have died. We can't tell why this is happening, but the cattle are OK and the donkeys never get sick." Usually it is the tse-tse fly or the east coast (tick) fever that afflicts Masai herds.

This boma, about 50 miles outside Arusha, has been linked by road to other bomas through Masailand. For six years, the project has been trying to get the Masai to limit their migration to areas with enough grass and water to support their herds.

To date, AID has provided $3.6 million in assistance, which enables the Masai to learn modern animal husbandry, new range management, marketing, and disease control. The project also helps the Tanzania Livestock Marketing Company establish and operate primary and secondary markets, develop and plan stock routes, and construct holding pens. Other benefits of the project: ranching associations have been formed, six centers for veterinary services have opened, and, most notably, 136 miles of access roads have been built.

Only about 25 Masai have received a higher education, and Karyongi is one of them. He was born in Naberera in south Masailand 34 years ago. After primary school in Tanzania, he studied at Egerton College in Kenya and later at New Mexico State University in the U.S. where he earned a bachelor's degree in animal production. After further study at New Mxico State, he returned home last year to become acting regional livestock development officer.

Karongi has few of the traditional facial markings of the slitted and stretched ear lobes that characterize the Masai. Western ideas have impacted heavily on his lifestyles. He and his wife, Pewinah, and their three children no longer live in the boma. But the Masai have a way of reminding their own about their origin and traditions, he says.

"The elders tell you don't forget home. They are constantly reminding the young of their customs. When I return home, I still have to follow the customs closely."

A big change, he says, is the fact that the Masai are now willing to let their children attend school. "This thing of the government going into the boma and taking children for school has passed. There is very little resistance except with the girls. Some come home for the holidays and are not allowed to return. Like most African societies, Masai culture is male-dominated.

"They are even slowly changing their eating habits by combining rice and wheat with their corn flour. Practically everyone wants tea in the mornings." Traditionally, the Masai lived almost exclusively on dried meat and milk. About 10 cows were always kept in milk to feed the boma.

The big problem in Masailand is to hold down the number of cattle, but "you have to do a very big selling job to get the people to limit the size of their herds," Karyongi says.

The scarcity of prime grazing lands in Tanzania is forcing the government to impose limits on land use and herd size.

"Another problem is that most people won't settle down so as to benefit from the projects. The land is very dry and they feel they must keep moving to feed the herds." To slow this migration the government's village settlement program has been designed to settle people in areas that will support them.

"We don't move that much any more," Karyongi observes. "Fifteen years ago we did, but the government has given the Masai a lot of facilities, mostly schools and dispensaries. As a result, the people have better diets and are wearing better clothing. So it is in their interest to stay put."

A lot of mystique still surrounds the Masai's reputation as a warrior tribe. The reputation, stemming from their cattle-raiding days, made them virtually unapproachable. Consequently, they were unable to benefit from government programs. Karyongi feels that much of the Masai reputation is undeserved.

"We were very brave during times of war, but I don't accept that we are hostile. We are just very brave people. The whole problem centered around cattle and fighting over grazing rights."

Traditionally there were skirmishes in the Mara region, Sukumaland, and the Tanga region.

"The Masai never noticed the different territory. In fact about 25,000 Masai lived on the Kenya side of the border. They would just cross borders and eventually found themselves having to fight other tribes."

Now civilization threatens their livestock-raising traditions. Grazing lands are diminishing and a few Masai are even turning to farming two- or three-acre shambas, or gardens, to produce food.

On the range, the cattle must compete with other aggressive grazers: fledgling herds of goats and donkeys that display the uncanny ability of surviving in arid lands. There is also competition with wildlife and predators.

Colby Hatfield, of Denver, Colo., who has a doctorate from Catholic University in Washington, D.C., has spent years researching "the agricultural people near Lake Victoria." Since joining the project in 1973, Hatfield has become fascinated by Masai culture.

"Masai are not wanderers by any stretch of the imagination. They move but within a prescribed area. We did a survey that showed they made a major move only once in the last 10 years." Hatfield says the lack of migration is due in part to the government's efforts to keep bomas within walking distance of water and forage.

Hatfield has also paid close attention to boma organization and says boma basically resembles a corral. Each one houses 3 to 12 families. "But today the average boma has about 12 people," he says.

Masai society is structured into a heirarchy of elders and warrior groups. Age sets all relationships. For example, boys are circumcised at 12 to 14, and the newly-circumcised comprise one age group while the "morani," or warrior, stage reflects yet another group. The elders are also divided into age categories.

"Theoretically there is no control of animals or political power until a young man becomes an elder," Hatfield explains. "Masai women remain as children for life, having no formal power of their own. They are wards of the husband. But informally a women's power can be tremendous, derived from power vested in her son. She serves as custodian of her son's animals in the event he is not of age. When there is a marriage, she gets animals from her husband and son-in-law. She is always vying with relatives to build the animal herds of her son."

The morani's responsibility varies, but he is generally entrusted with dipping the animals, digging wells, and the defense of the boma, Hatfield says.

Last year was the first time in six years that Masailand has received its normal rainfall. Like many parts of Africa, there has been severe drought. Before the road was built there was no way for the government to know which villages were short of food.

The project emphasis is on cattle rather than the Masai. But the Masai will benefit more than any group from the national effort to build a commercial cattle industry because of their total involvement with livestock.

The Range Development Act of the late 1960s set aside a number of areas in the country for seasonal grazing livestock. With AID assistance and support from the United Nations Food and Agricultural Organization, a number of ranching associations were formed to insure cooperation. People were resettled in areas that could support them. Schools, dispensaries and water facilities were planned accordingly. AID's technical assistance included advisers, vehicles, and equipment for a maintenance shop at Arusha. In addition, an Indian/East Pakistan strand of bull was bred and distributed locally on an experimental basis to help increase milk production and produce disease-resistant animals.

AID support also helped the government field three well digging crews. Twelve tractors, two motorized graders, two drilling machines, and trucks plus spare parts totalling $250,000 resulted from this assistance. This created employment for six mechanics and 15 helpers.

Bob Booth, AID water resource manager for the project, says that the need for a reliable water source cannot be over-emphasized in Masailand. Booth, from Memphis, is supervising the construction of small dams and wells.

"The Masai would be willing to build small supplies (dams), but they prefer larger structures with two-or three-year storage as security to keep the cattle alive. They would like to have smaller and more sources of water for the livestock, but they are secure with larger ones because small dams often do not stand up during the rainy seasons. There is little forage, so when it rains the run-off is great.

"There are no major springs in Masailand. Drillers have gone down as far as 2,000 feet without hitting water. This area really needs 600 million gallons of water." The goal is to have at least one permanent source of water for each of the 22 ranching associations being planned, he added.

At the district development office in Monduli, Issac Isae, who has a BS from New Mexico State, is also involved in this work. He supervises 200 people in all areas of live stock production. Isae's area includes not only Masai but 30 different groups — Chagas, Pare, Sukauma, and others.

"There is tremendous interest in livestock development here. The people contribute money for cattle dips and other projects. They even came up with 50,000 shillings for the Monduli juu Dam and they are buying improved animals, food concentrates, and spray guns."

Plant Clones Turning Profits

HOLLYWOOD, Fla. (UPI) — Ray Oglesby calls them "Test Tube Babies" and he's got thousands and thousands of them in his laboratory, all cloned from selected parents.

But he's talking about plants and says the idea isn't as futuristic as it sounds.

"Anyone who has rooted a cutting has cloned a plant," Oglesby says.

Technology, though, has taken the art out of the backyard and into the laboratory where the air is sterile and filtered, humidity and light are rigidly controlled and each plant operation is performed by hand.

That means high costs. Oglesby's tissue culture lab, described as the biggest in the world at present, cost $130,000. And Oglesby says he is just beginning to break even after three years in production. But he says more and more nurserymen are asking for the plants produced in test tubes.

Oglesby, with 13 employees, produced 250,000 plants last year and says this year it can go to a million or more. Each plant cutters has his own crop, in 70,000 test tubes with brightly colored red, purple and yellow tops, in a sanitized storage room where the lights blaze 16 hours a day.

The laboratory technique is vastly more complicated than sticking a cutting in a water glass and waiting for it to sprout roots. But the rewards make it worthwhile. A single plant can multiply to more than a million within a year by using plant hormones to speed up growth.

Simply put, tissue culture or plant cloning involves taking the tiny growing tip from the plant, washing it in a sterile solution and putting it into a growing medium in a test tube.

The media mix — inorganic salts, simple sugar, water, hormones and agar made from seaweed — is the key to the development of tissue culture and it has been readily available only for a few years. By manipulating the contents, the grower can force the plant to grow, multiply or form roots as he wishes.

With a 30-year background as a wholesale nurseryman, Oglesby and his lab manager, Randy Strode, already were producing about 60 varieties of plants for commercial sale when he became interested in plant cloning three years ago. He came back from a seminar at the W. Alton Jones Cell Science Center in Lake Placid, N.Y., thinking, "If they can do it there, I can do it here — and will."

Since then he has experimented with about 100 varieties of foliage and ornamental plants, looking for the right media mix to make them grow.

Tissue culture has a six-to-eight-week growing cycle, equal to a year in the field. Plants in each test tube then are removed, divided and placed in new test tubes for another growing period.

Most of the plants are sold to other nurseries which in turn grow them bigger and sell them to the public. Oglesby generally sells them for a quarter each, much more than the cost of growing from a seed. "It's definitely a very expensive way to grow them, but they produce large, fast-growing plants that are free of any diseases," Strode said.

And they save the nurserymen time in getting the plants ready for market.

For example the Spathiphyllum usually takes 9 to 12 months from seed to be ready for sale. Tissue culture plants take from 6 to 9 months — a three-month savings.

Oglesby offers his plants to the public — complete with test tube, instructions and birth certificate telling when the plant was cloned — at $6.95 each.

Oglesby's enthusiasm for this growing field knows few bounds. He's already cloning a $1,500 orchid plant, "the largest known ed catiey in the world," and by next Mother's Day, "I expect to have a quarter of a million of them for sale" at under $10.

One day, Oglesby hopes he can supply farm plants for the nation's grain and vegetable fields. Tissue culture is still too expensive in America compared with the classic seeding methods. But not in other countries. "Taiwan has potatoes, England apples, France grapes and Australia strawberries," he says.

The problem with big U.S farmers is that they "don't look at production from the plant as much as they do at their initial cost," Oglesby said.

"I hope that when I get this building paid for, I can experiment with the feasibility of agronomic crops. Because this," he says holding up one of his test tubes, "is a way of feeding the world."

Ban On Nitrites Improbable

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government is still uncertain what to do about the meat-curing preservative sodium nitrite since new tests on animals have shown nitrites might raise the risk of cancer in humans.

An Agriculture Department official said the government could either ban sodium nitrite immediately or phase it out gradually. The official said no final decision is expected until the end of the year, although contingency plans are being drawn up to meet both options.

Top department policy makers believe a gradual phasing out of the preservative would be the preferred approach, but some consumer groups have demanded an immediate ban.

Nitrite is used in 7 percent of the foods marketed in the United States to prevent deadly botulism poisoning and to give such meat products as cooked hams, hot dogs and bacon their familiar color and flavor.

A 50-page contingency plan drafted jointly by the Food and Drug Administrsation and Agriculture Department says the nation's meat-freezing capacity would have to be doubled if that turns out to be the only alternative to using nitrites to preserve foods.

Both agencies asked the Justice Department to decide whether they could legally wait action on the matter, preferring the gradual phase-out approach.

The FDA is required by law to ban immediately any food additive shown to cause cancer in animals or humans. The Agriculture Department also under the law must ban the use of harmful substances in meats.

The Justice Department opinion is expected early next week, said Assistant Agriculture Secretary Carol Foreman.

Officials Raise Expected Exports In Current Year

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Officials have raised the estimate of anticipated record U. S. agricultural exports for the fiscal year ending Sept. 30 to $26.6 billion.

The forecast was raised from a May estimate of $25.5 billion. The previous record of $24 billion in agricultural exports was set last year.

Stepped up exports to the Soviets and developing nations contributed to the increase.

Higher prices for farm porducts raised the monetary value of exports, but tonnage also is expected to rise 15 percent to 117.6 million metric tons. The May estimate had forecast tonnage for the fiscal year to be 113.3 million tons, up from last year's level of 102.2 million tons.

U. S. agricultural imports are expected to rise marginally to $13.7 billion to produce an agricultural trade surplus of $12.9 billion.

PLAINS AGRICULTURE

By DUANE HOWELL

THIS WEEK'S CATTLE ON FEED REPORT "shows that feeders would be well advised to temper their 'turn-around' optimism for a few months."

So says John Kuker, market acalyst with the Texas Cattle Feeders Association, who noted that the report showed placements during July were up 6 percent from the same month in 1977 but 10 percent under the placements of a month earlier.

"These are cattle that a year ago were going directly to slaughter," Kuker said. "This year, instead, they're going into the feedyard — which means we'll have ample supplies of fed cattle for the next two or three months."

The TCFA analyst called the report "basically neutral, according to the experts' predictions," but noted both futures and beef markets made strong negative moves in the initial aftermath of the report but not necessarily because of it.

KUKER BLAMED PSYCHOLOGY and unwillingness of retailers to become large beef buyers for the losses, noting fed cattle supplies are not in surplus of demand.

"The problem with this market — if you can call it a problem at $50 or $51 is basic insecurity," Kuker said. "Packers and feeders just aren't pushing for higher prices — they're scared the market will turn against them."

Kuker said that, while July placements were well ahead of last year, marketings also were ahead — and, in fact, exceeded placements.

"We're slowly seeing these numbers come down," said Kuker. "And the on-feed weights also are settling back as more and more of the new cattle are being brought in at lighter weights."

MEANWHILE, AN ECONOMIST WITH THE Federal Reserve Bank of Chicago said this week that fed cattle prices in the third quarter could hover at current levels in the low $50s per hundredweight level or maybe edge even lower.

Don Langford added that the outlook for cattle prices appears generally favorable for the producer in the long term, although clouded by several uncertainties.

He said feeder cattle prices could rise in view of tight supplies of feeder steers and heifers and a strong demand for feedlot replacements.

With total commerical cattle slaughter on the decline, consumer incomes rising, and employment high, a strong consumer beef demand could perhaps maintain high cattle prices despite large fed cattle marketings, Langford said.

But in light of the record retail beef prices this spring, evidence of mounting consumer resistance to high beef prices could be reflected in the second half through reduced per capita beef purchases.

Grain Futures

CHICAGO (AP) — Grain futures posted moderate gains, but soybeans were pared by late profit-taking and finished steady on the Chicago Board of Trade today.

A slowdown of country grain movement contributed to the higher grain prices. Light sales by farmers could reflect erratic price movements of recent days, a broker said.

Cattle Futures Up In Trading

By Reuters

CHICAGO — Cattle futures ended 20 to 102 points higher led by October at the highest in 1½ weeks. August expired at 80 to 100 higher at the high for the day, Friday on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange. Voulme was 21,642 cars.

Traders noted continued technical support after the recent decline with light arrivals and improved beef, also constructive factors. Beef held steady at noon with traders looking for aggressive featuring after the recent 9½ cents decline.

Wholesale beef was unchanged at 78½ cents a pound. Cash cattle were up 50 cents to $1, with the best top being $52 per hundredweight at Illinois direct.

Slaughter was 134,000 head and there were 53 deliveries. The six major terminals expect 16,600 head Monday.

Feeder cattle futures closed 57 higher to 10 lower. Expiring August led the advance with 204 sales against 353 open. Sales totalled 2,524 contracts.

Back months were lower led by January after April slipped 32 on spread selling against purchase of nearby contracts. Prices rose to three-week highs on good technical support after the sharp decline earlier in the week.

Deliveries numbered 45 and the six markets expect 600 head Monday.

Hog futures shot up the daily limit level of 150 in expiring August before ending 2 to 127 higher with August still leading. Sales were 4,880 cars. The market rallied sharply after slipping 35 in distant October.

Fresh demand was noted after lagains with light hog runs and higher prices inspiring support. Light kill and firmness in cash hams at noon offset easier tone to loins.

Wholesale hams were unchanged to up 1 cent at 85 to 87 cents a pound, f.o.b. river points, which was the highest since February. Cash hogs were steady to up to $1 with the best top at $51 per hundredweight. The day's slaughter was 250,000 head. A total of 26,000 head is expected by the six major terminals on Monday.

Pork belly (bacon) futures ended 160 lower to 60 higher. Nearby August was down most with only May and July higher. The nearby fell 175 and March rose 87 early. Volume totalled 3,300 cars.

The nearby contract continued to weaken under adverse effects of the conflicting nitrate reports. Traders also noted some lower cash bellies at noon and slow race of storage withdrawals. There was also evening up ahead of the cold storage report,

Wholesale bacon was off 1 to up ¾ cent at 49 to 56 cents a pound, f.o.b. river.

Chicago mercantile exchange floor traders comments on the USDA cold storage report for frozen pork bellies were mostly neutral to possibly negative. Stocks at 44.6 million pounds versus a revised 75 million pounds a month ago indicated reduction of 31.4 million pounds. Holdings were at the high end of the range of guesstimated 40 to 45 million pounds and were sharply above the 29.9 million pounds a year earlier.

Belly futures could move lower Monday with the figures adding more pressure to a market already under aggressive selling in view of the adverse affects of nitrate studies.

RICH TROVE — This collection of bronze vessels and armor are seen just as they were discovered in Greece in the main chamber of a Macedonian tomb 2,300 years later. The large circular object may have encased a ceremonial shield of ivory and gold. The excavation, near the village of Vergina, also yielded some ivory miniature heads, two golden caskets containing bones and four wall paintings. Manolis Andronicos, professor of archeology at the University of Thessaloniki who discovered the tomb, attributes the bones in one of the caskets to Philip II of Macedon, father of Alexander the Great, who was assassinated in 336 B.C. under mysterious circumstances. Macedonian Tomb Yields Regal Treasures

By DONALD J. FREDERICK
National Geographic News Service

WASHINGTON — A gold casket filled with bones of contention found in northern Greece has stirred up an archaeological tempest in a 2,300-year-old tomb complex.

ANDRONICOS

The two tombs and the bones date from the epic age of Philip II of Macedon, the father of Alexander the Great. Manolis Andronicos, professor of archaeology at the University of Thessaloniki, who found the casket and directed excavations at the site near the village of Verginia, believes that one of the tombs was Philip's and the bones are his.

"I'll be the first to announce any facts disproving my hypothesis that the tomb is Philip's," writes Dr. Andronicos in the July National Geographic. "But according to my findings the artifacts date from between 350 and 325 B.C., and Philip was the only Macedonian king to die in that period."

A magnificient golden quiver found in the tomb's antechamber prompts Dr. Andronicos to ask, "Who else but a king would own this?" Two pieces of leg armor found next to the quiver gave further evidence of a kingly presence. One was shorter than the other, and scholars know that Philip was lame.

Lack of definite proof or specific inscriptions led some experts to challenge the professor's identification. The fact that the main chamber of the tomb was less lavish than might be expected also has raised doubts.

Dr. Andronicos counters that, since Philip was assassinated with the possible complicity of his fourth wife Olympias, the burial may have taken place hastily, without time for the usual finishing touches on the tomb's inner walls.

Whatever the ultimate identification, the find at Vergina remains a triumph of modern archeology.

The excavation yielded a cornucopia of ancient treasures. Among them: four large wall paintings created by Greek artists of the fourth century B.C.; gold, silver, bronze, and iron objects that are masterly examples of the ancient art of metalworking; and an array of weapons that fills in gaps of knowledge about Macedonian culture.

Even more remarkable was the discovery of four miniature ivory portraits — each less than an inch high. Dr. Andronicos had no trouble in identifying two of the ivory miniatures.

"I had at first looked at these relics quickly," he recalls. "But when I examined the heads more closely, I could not believe my eyes: It was an excellent portrait of Philip. Here was a mature man with a somewhat fatigued expression, an injured eye, but clearly with great strength of character.

"Shaken by my discovery, I picked up a second head and searched it carefully. It seemed impossible that I could be mistaken; this was the most beautiful sculpture of Alexander the Great that I had ever seen."

Black Money Mecca Shows Decay

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) — Along a few blocks of an old street near Atlanta's financial district lie the remains what once was the heart of black business in America.

Now, along the six-block area of Auburn Avenue called Sweet Auburn, there is a hodge-podge of vacant stores, abandoned movie houses and old nightclubs, the elements in varying degrees of disrepair.

In the late 19th and early 20th Century, Auburn Avenue was the center of the black financial world in this country.

In fact, until the 1960s, one block on Auburn reportedly housed the greatest concentration of black financial power in the nation. In recent years, black businesses have moved up and out.

Auburn Avenue is known to most people today for landmarks associated with the civil rights movement — the Ebenezer Baptist Church where Martin Luther King Jr. was co-pastor with his father, the King burial site and the Martin Luther King Jr. Center for Social Change, the Wheat Street Baptist Church, the Big Bethel African-Methodist Church and the black-owned Atlanta Daily World.

The real estate office of William Calloway, 70, was on Auburn Avenue for more than 45 years. But Calloway has moved downtown, and his office on the 10th floor of the Equitable Building looks over the street where he and thousands of others got their start.

The very success of the men who started on Auburn Avenue contributed to its deterioration. The successful moved to greener pastures.

"We have a more educated black populous here than in most cities, because we have six individual black colleges," Calloway said. "I think education was the difference. We were smart enough to do these things — and to patronize each other. It's always been hard for the black man, but we helped each other.

"Other cities didn't have that sort of educated clientele," Calloway said. "We have no utopia. We have our problems. But we have some pretty sturdy blacks in the leadership roles."

Sweet Auburn was settled immediately after the Civil War, when blacks saw little opportunity for business association with whites.

In 1932, Calloway said, before the formation of the first black insurance company in the nation, there were only five blacks in Atlanta who qualified for automobile liability insurance.

"The insurance companies figured that when a white man and a black man were involved in an automobile accident, it was no mystery about whose fault it was," he said.

Now the black-owned Atlanta Life Insurance Co. is one of the few remaining financial institutions on the street.

The street extends east out of downtown Atlanta. The first few blocks are mostly parking lots, but at Auburn and Piedmont is the Atlanta Daily World — the first black-owned daily newspaper.

That is the beginning of Sweet Auburn, so called by John Wesley Dobbs, grandfather of Mayor Maynard Jackson of Atlanta, who took the name from the poem "The Deserted Village," by Oliver Goldsmith.

Dobbs reportedly said that Auburn was "sweet" because unlike black business communities elsewhere, it wasn't across railroad tracks.

Part of the street is on the National Register of Historic Places.

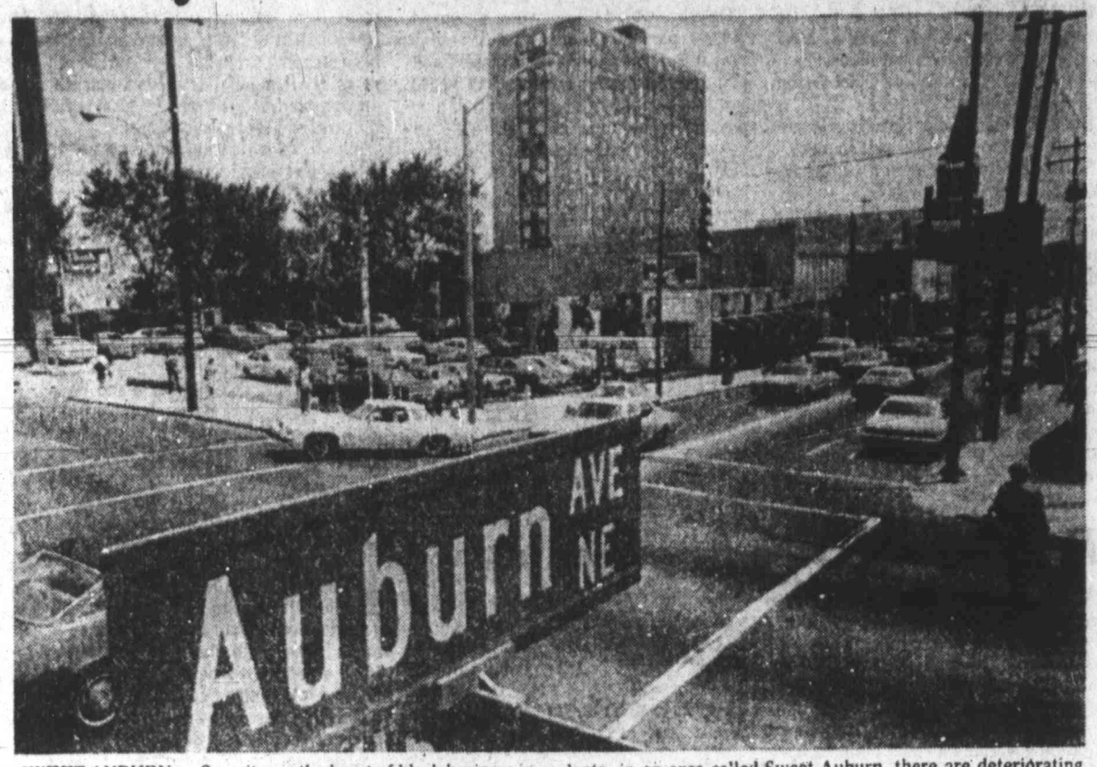

It was in this area that Martin Luther King Jr. was born, and it was here that the enterprises of Heman E. Perry became a springboard for black businessmen who left Atlanta to seek fortunes in Chicago, Detroit, New York and other cities of the North.

Perry founded the Standard Life Insurance Co. He built the three-story building which housed his company, and a bank that became Citizens Trust Co., which flourishes as the sixth largest black-owned bank in the nation, according to Black Enterprise magazine.

Perry also founded a chain of drugstores, a laundry company and a real estate development firm, and was responsible for the first housing subdivision for blacks.

Another black business pioneer was Ben Davis, who built the country's first high-rise office building for black businesses. His six-story building still stands, although it is empty now. But for about 35 years, it was the only place in Atlanta where black doctors, lawyers and dentists could rent office space.

A weather-beaten sign hangs along the avenue, exhibiting the call-letters of radio WERD, the first black-owned station in the United States. It, too, has moved downtown, its call letters changed.

Coast Guard Intercepts Pot Freighter

NEW ORLEANS, (AP) — The Coast Guard said officers have seized a 111-foot coastal freighter off the coast of Texas and are escorting it ashore with a cargo of 35-to-40 tons of marijuana, with an estimated value of $25 million.

The vessel, the "Superfly Two," was first boarded two days ago about 210 miles east of Brownsville, Texas, the Coast Guard said.

A spokesman said Coast Guardsmen only Friday received permission to seize the boat.

The Coast Guard said all 16 members of the crew claimed to be Colombians. They were expected to arrive in Brownsville at noon Saturday, where the crew members will be turned over to Customs agents and U.S. marshals, the Coast Guard said.

A spokesman said the cutter "Durable" picked up the freighter on a routine patrol. He said it apparently was headed to Texas.

Corner Of 'Triangle' Charged

NEW YORK (AP) — The grand jury investigating the "love-triangle" murder of John Tupper has handed up a murder indictment against horse-trainer Howard "Buddy" Jacobson, it was revealed Friday.

The indictment was announced at a hearing when Jacobson was denied bail for the fourth time in two weeks.

During the third bail hearing on Wednesday, the prosecution told the court that reliable witnesses placed the sportsman-millionaire at the scene in the North Bronx where Tupper, 34, was found in a burning wooden chest — stabbed, beaten and shot seven times.

Model Melanie Cain, 23, has claimed that Jacobson killed Tupper because she left the horse trainer to live with Tupper.

The three-count indictment was for second-degree murder, criminal possession of a knife and a blunt instrument, and criminal possession of a weapon, according to Assistant District Attorney William Quinn. Quinn said the grand jury indicted Jacobson on Thursday, but the indictment will not be filed formally until Tuesday.

Raiders Ready Smiles

By DON HENRY
Executive Sports Editor

Friday night, Texas Tech footballers had their tongues hanging out for a purpose. This morning, depending on their physical condition, their tongues could be hanging out again.

But, this afternoon. . .

Ah, that's a different matter, and their hair will be down, their best smiles in place.

It's a time of preparing, getting ready, and the uniforms are new, shiny and unblemished by contact or grime of combat.

It's the preliminaries and Rex Dockery, and the new Raider head man plans to clear the deck of all preliminaries, so the big show can begin on Monday.

Friday night, the Raiders faced a battery of city physicians for the annual physical exams. This morning there will be more testing, and one of the tests will be a timed two-mile run. . . No, a pair of two-miles.

"Well, this gives a basis to go by," remarked Docker as he neared his starting point.

"If they can run that (two-mile), then we know how well they've worked this summer. We run them once, let them rest for two minutes, then run it again. It's a test of their legs, to see how they do when the stop and then have to go again.

"Coach (trainer Ken) Murray watches them; he is aware of their condition, and he knows how the heat can affect them (in early work)."

Dockery has a target time for three groups of gridders, the skilled positions (backs and wide receivers), tight ends-linebackers, and all down linemen.

But, after this, it's time to practice the smiles, for publicity pictures. The team will be dressed for the photographers this afternoon, but there is no contact work, no formal workout.

That will begin Monday, and Dockery wanted these other matters out of the way.

"They'll have Sunday off, then we can get started early Monday."

The early stuff will be a morning workout, as Dockery outlined a three-a-day schedule for the first three days of drills.

The NCAA forbids any contact equipment for three days anyway, so Dockery is using it to the fullest.

He plans a morning workout, a noontime drill then a late-afternoon session. Each will be devoted to a special area.

The morning exercises will be centered around individual technique training, with the noon session devoted to the kicking game and some passing. The afternoon workout will be for group work.

"We'll go back to two-a-days on Thursday," Dockery said, "but we won't make a decision on how we'll run our practices until then."

Dockery will be taking over a group which shows 31 lettermen from last year's 7-5 team. The Raiders will be gearing up to take on nationally rated Southern Cal in Los Angeles on Sept. 9.

But first, there are the cameras and that two-mile marathon.

Sabo's Birdies Top Nicklaus

HARRISON, N.Y. (AP) — Ed Sabo, who seemed embarrassed by what he had done, swept past Jack Nicklaus with birdies on his last two holes, finishing off a three-under-par 68 that gave him the second-round lead Friday in the $300,000 Westchester Golf Classic.

"What can I say?" the engaging Sabo said after taking the first lead of his career with a 135 total, seven shots under par on the tight, 6,603-yard Westchester Country Club course.

"I'm happy to be where I am, one up on him. But, he's the best there ever was, the best there'll ever be.

"We've just got started. There's two days to play yet."

Sabo, 29, in his third year of tour activity, hasn't finished higher than 16th since his rookie season and currently ranks 136th on the 1978 money winning list with $8,837.

Nicklaus, generally considered the finest player the game has known, winner of the British Open and three American tournaments this year, managed a 69 for 136.

"It wasn't a bad round of golf. I just

Cowboys, Houston Vie For State Championship

DALLAS (AP) — Thanks to needles and whirlpools the Houston Oilers will probably have their starting backfield ready for tonight's National Football League exhibition game against the World Champion Dallas Cowboys, who are as healthy as their record.

Oiler quarterback Dan Pastorini underwent acupuncture treatments after suffering a blow to his left thigh Monday night from Philadelphia linebacker Bill Bergey in a 28-10 loss to the Eagles.

"There is no comparison to the way the leg feels now and the way it felt Tuesday," said Pastorini.

Even on two good legs Pastorini may be in trouble with the way the Cowboy defense played in defeats of San Francisco and Denver.

Pastorini was cheered to learn that runningbacks Rob Carpenter and Ronnie Coleman, who missed the Monday night game with various hurts, will play tonight. In fact, rookie Tim Wilson was the only halfback available against the Eagles.

Earl Campbell, the Heisman Trophy winner from Texas, has been shuttled from fullback to halfback. He'll play halfback against the Cowboys in the 8 p.m. game at Texas Stadium which will draw a sellout crowd of 65,000.

Dallas coach Tom Landry said he will go with his starters for at least three quarters, and that is basically the plan of Houston coach Bum Phillips.

Landry said "I think it's going to take a couple more games to get our offense moving the way we want it to."

Landry has been disappointed with his running game and Houston wasn't exactly overwhelming in its last outing against Philadelphia. Rookie Steve Stropolo of Nicholls State was the leading Oiler rusher with a mere 21 yards.

Dallas is 2-0 in the preseason while Houston is exactly the reverse.

The Cowboys own an 8-3 lead over Houston in preseason games for the mythical "Texas Professional Football Championship" and are 2-0 over the Oilers in regular season meetings.

Phillips said there is a terse rivalry with the Cowboys but added "we play our preseason games to get ready for the regular season. We don't play Denver or Dallas. We try to play the best we're capable of playing and let the scoreboard take care of itself."

Landry said "We jelled last year in the fifth and sixth preseason games. The preseason is just too short."

The regular season begins for the Cowboys Monday night Sept. 4 when they play Baltimore.

In other contests tonight, Pittsburgh visits the New York Giants, Chicago is at Cincinnati, Tampa Bay plays at New Orleans, St. Louis visits Green Bay, Atlanta hosts Philadelphia, Denver is at Buffalo and the New York Jets play at San Diego.

On Sunday, Oakland plays at San Francisco and Kansas City is at New England with Detroit at Cleveland Monday night completing the third week of preseason games.

The weekend got off to an early start Thursday night with the Los Angeles Rams treating new coach Ray Malavasi to a 26-7 victory over the Seattle Seahawks.

Two other interconference games are set for tonight with the Giants of the National Conference hosting American Conference Pittsburgh and NFC Chicago at AFC Cincinnati. The Steelers are 2-0 and the Giants 1-1. Chicago and Cincinnati have both lost their first two exhibitions.

Besides Dallas-Houston, the weekend's other big geographical showdown is Sunday's Oakland-San Francisco matchup. The Raiders are 1-1 and the 49ers 0-2 after losing to Seattle 20-6 last week.

"It was not exactly a step in the direction we were hoping to take," said freshman 49er coach Pete McCulley. "We just had too many breakdowns."

O.J. Simpson will make his first appearance with the 49ers Sunday, club officials reported Friday.

Miami Attorney Contests TV Ring Blackout

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Pickets go up today, and a suit will be filed in federal court Monday seeking to stop the 200-mile television blackout of the Muhammad Ali-Leon Spinks heavyweight title fight, said Miami attorney Ellis Rubin.

The fight is scheduled in the state-owned Louisiana Superdome Sept. 15.

Some years ago, Rubin fought a lengthy court battle in an effort to stop blackouts of National Football League games.

"We filed 11 lawsuits, and we lost every one of them because we were faced with a special law which authorizes the NFL to black out games," Rubin said in an interview after a press conference here Friday.

"Only four sports have such authorization, and boxing is not one of them."

The NFL now lifts its blackouts on games which are sold out in advance. But Rubin said he couldn't commit himself to dropping the suit if he were guaranteed a similar voluntary lifting of the blackout for the fight.

"I couldn't make that commitment because of my obligation to the people who asked me to come here to fight for them," he said.

A group of local businessmen and politicians put up $3 million to land the fight here. Any return on their money must come from gate sales, since Top Rank, Inc., which holds the rights to the fight, kept the television rights.

Rubin said he sympathizes with the investors, but doesn't think they are doomed to financial disaster if the blackout is lifted.

"We heard the same argument from (NFL Commissioner) Pete Rozelle and the owners of the teams," he said.

"They're going to get the gate whether the blackout is lifted or not.

"The fight is like the Super Bowl or the Kentucky Derby. It's a special event, and people are going to go to it as a special event—a social event."

Rubin said pickets would begin marching today outside the studios of WVUE-TV, the local ABC affiliate.

He also called on ABC sports commentator Howard Cosell —who holds a law degree— to speak out against the blackout.

He said the blackout is a clear violation of interstate commerce, since the 200-mile radius includes portions of Mississippi, Alabama and Florida, as well as most of Louisiana

"The only people who can't see the fight on television are the people who own and support the Superdome," he said.

Sabo Holds Lead Position At Westchester

didn't have the ball awfully close to the hole, but I certainly have no complaints," said Nicklaus, who may be ending his American season in this rich event that he has won twice.

"It'd be nice to close out on the proper note," he said. "I always enjoy winning."

Although he is eligible for the World Series of Golf, which offers a $100,000 first prize, Nicklaus said he has not decided whether he will compete in that tournament at Akron, Ohio, in late September.

"That's just later in the year than I like to play golf," he said and noted that his two older sons have an important high school football game that conflicts.

Two strokes off the lead at 137 were former winner David Graham of Australia, Gibby Gilbert, Jerry Pate, Wally Armstrong and Mark Hayes. Hayes shot a second-round 67, Gilbert a 68, Graham and Armstrong had 69s and Pate carded a 68 that he said was about as high as he could have been. He didn't make a bogey and hit every green on a hot, humid afternoon.

First-round leader Barry Jaeckel slipped from an opening 65 to a 73 and was tied with about a dozen others at 138, three strokes off the pace going into the last 36 holes of the chase for the $60,000 first prize.

Among the others at four under par and their second-round scores were: Tom Watson, 68; Hubert Green, 68; Tom Kite, 70; Jerry McGee, 68; Dr. Gil Morgan, 67; Gary Vanier, 66; Alan Tapie, 68; Don January, 71; Larry Nelson, 69; Bob Eastwood, 66, and Alan Pate, 71.

John Mahaffey, the recent winner of the PGA and seeking a rare third consecutive victory, slipped to a 72 and was at 140, five shots back.

Texas Tech golfer Jeff Mitchell, after firing an opening-round 69, turned in a 75 for a 144 total and missed qualifying for the final two rounds.

Eagles Recall FG Specialist

CHESTER, Pa. (AP) — The Philadelphia Eagles reinstated place kicker Tim Mazzetti to their active roster Friday, just four days after cutting him.

Mazzetti, a free agent from the University of Pennsylvania, had done all the National Football League team's kicking in the last two preseason games, a 14-7 loss to New Orleans and a 28-10 victory over Houston.

He successfully converted five extra-point attempts, but did not try to kick any field goals.

He was restored to the roster because veteran kicker Nick Mike-Mayer is recovering from a pulled leg muscle.

Coach Dick Vermeil said Mazzetti would only kick off in today's game with the Atlanta Falcons.

"If we get close enough to kick a field goal and don't turn the ball over and don't score, then Nick will kick the field goal," Vermeil explained. "But I don't want him kicking any long ones because the muscle pull he is still recovering from is so important to a kicker, especially a soccer-style kicker."

Ex-Dolphins Cleared Of Drug Charges

NEW YORK (AP) — Randy Crowder and Don Reese, a pair of former defensive tackles for the Miami Dolphins who have spent the last year in jail on drug charges, were cleared Friday to return to the National Football League by Commissioner Pete Rozelle.

"After a thorough review of the cases of Randy Crowder and Don Reese, including a private meeting with them and their representatives yesterday, I have today informed all National Football League clubs that they are eligible to be signed to play in the NFL beginning with the current season," Rozelle said in a statement.

"In so ruling, I have taken into account all aspects of their cases, including their records during their one year's imprisonment, comments made by the court at the time of their sentencing last year and statments made by both during our meeting," the commissioner said.

Reese and Crowder were arrested in May of 1977 on charges of selling cocaine. They were sentenced last August to one year in jail and five years on probation for the crime.

"The charges. . .were serious ones and were of great concern to the National Football League," Rozelle continued. "Public confidence in professional football is paramount to its existence and the conduct of each individual involved in it forms a basis for that confidence."

As part of their reinstatement, Rozelle has ordered each player, if he is signed by an NFL team, to donate $5,000 of his first year's salary to a drug rehabilitation facility in the state of Florida. The commissioner added that he was attaching to their return to the NFL "conditions similiar to those of the strict probation imposed by the court."

Whitworth Ties For Top Spot In LPGA Meet

DEARBORN, Mich. (AP) — Kathy Whitworth birdied the final hole while Sandra Post bogeyed her final hole Friday, leaving them coleaders for the second consecutive day in the $150,000 LPGA tour event at the Dearborn Country Club.

Miss Whitworth sank a nine-foot putt on the par 4 ninth hole — her last hole of the day — for the birdie that gave her a one-under-par 71 and a 36-hole total of three-under 140.

Miss Post, who finished three groups behind Miss Whitworth, was five-under for the tourney at the ninth tee. She hit the green in regulation, but three-putted from 25 feet for a bogey to match Miss Whitworth's 71.

Both golfers shot 69s Thursday for a one-stroke lead over the field. Their two-day totals gave them a one-stroke lead over Debbie Austin's 141. Miss Austin shot the day's and the tournament's best round, a 68.

"Really, it was boring," the 39-year-old Miss Whitworth said of her round, which included two birdies, one bogey and 15 pars.

"I didn't putt that well. It was one of those days when nothing went in. The course played fairly easy."

It hasn't been playing that easy for most in the field of about 100. Only five golfers broke par for 36 holes, with two more at par 144 — Sally Little and Debbie Massey. Pat Meyers and Debbie Meisterlin were at 143.

"I'm just playing well, thinking well," said Miss Post, a 30-year-old Canadian. She is the eighth leading money winner on the tour this year with $62,000 in purses.

Miss Whitworth has won 79 tournaments in her career but is only 35th in winnings with $18,500. She lost to Miss Post in 1968 in an 18-hole playoff for the LPGA national championship. Miss Post was a 19-year-old rookie then.

Nancy Lopez, the sensational newcomer who has won eight tourneys this year, withdrew Thursday because of a sore shoulder.

Miss Austin, meanwhile, said she has been playing with a sore shoulder due to tendonitis.

Canadian Cheryll McConnell, at 150, was the only one of the six amateurs to make the cut at 156.

KINSELLA WINS RACE

TORONTO (AP) — John Kinsella, an Olympic champion from Oakbrook, Ill., has won a race across Lake Ontario, beating eight other swimmers and completing the 32-mile swim in about 14 hours. Kinsella reached the shore Wednesday and captured the $25,000 first prize offered by the Canadian National Exposition and a soft-drink manufacturer. Another $25,000 in prize money was to be handed out to the other competitors.

Broncos Lean On Size

Avalanche Journal Sports Staff

MEADOW — Rick Hulett's players love all the attention they have received in the preseason polls around West Texas. According to some predictions, the Broncos' strong defense will earn them the 3-B (South) district title in 1978.

However, with an apparent lack of offensive punch, Hulett thinks the "officials" may be forcasting prematurely.

"We've definitely got some size in the line, but the offensive backfield is questionable, and it takes time for a team to learn a new system," said the first-year coach.

With barely enough time to learn their names, Hulett met nine starters from last year's defensive corps. Leading the group are two all-district returnees Cat Soto (6-1, 210) at tackle and senior Marcus Cruz (150) at linebacker. Joining Cruz at will be 190-pound senior Eddie Ashburn.

"Our game is in the trenches," explains Hulett. With the linemen averaging just over 200 pounds per person, the Weatherford College graduate has the stats to back his claim.

The defense seems solid but can the offense score?

"We have good quickness in the backfield but we lack speed and experience," said the Broncos fourth coach in as many years. With the graduation of quarterback standout Martin Blair, Meadow is in search of a signal-caller that can operate the Broncos' I-formation.

Presently the job is between Blair's younger brother, Keith (a sophomore), and junior letterman Milton Sanchez. Until the offense can jell, Hulett said they "will have to use a ball-control attack.

"Our TDs will come on long drives," added Hulett, in his sixth year as a head coach.

The Broncos also lack depth with only 22 players on the roster and the head coach, eager to start the season, emphasized that his players will have to stay healthy if they are to live up to expectations.

Although an uncertain offense allows for conversation, Hulett admits that his players are enthusiastic about being picked No. 1.

And so is he.

USAC Ponders Higher Fuel Loads

MILWAUKEE (AP) — A special meeting of the U.S. Auto Club Competition Committee Friday voted to recommend to the full USAC Board of Directors rules changes that would permit higher fuel allotments and lower power settings on Indianapolis cars for 1979.

There was no agreement on making the changes for the remainder of 1978, which had been petitioned for by a group of teams now participating on the circuit. The petitioners staged a short-lived walkout two weeks prior to a race at College Station, Tex.

The Competition Committee met here in conjunction with preparations for Sunday's Bettenhausen 200 race for Indy cars at the Wisconsin Fairgrounds Speedway.

A boycott of the Bettenhausen race had been threatened by teams with cars powered by four-cylinder engines, which are being made obsolete this season by new eight-cylinder models. The teams backed off after the Texas incident, with a promise of review by the Competition Committee.

"The committee voted to change the miles per gallon formula from 1.8 to 1.5 and lower the boost pressure (power settings) from 80 inches to 74 for both qualifying and racing in 1979," a source told The Associated Press. "The vote was rather marginal."

The committee's vote is non-binding, and only a recommendation to the board, which is scheduled to meet Sept. 7. USAC President Dick King had promised to make the proposals to the board in a special conference call Monday had there been lopsided approval of any changes.

King said he didn't know whether the action would satisfy the petitioners.

"Only three of the 16 who signed the petition were involved in the meeting," King said. "I wouldn't begin to predict how they might react to the committee's action. I would guess they'll wait to see what the board does."

Qualifying for the Bettenhausen race is scheduled today.

Coons Grab Spotlight At Lake Placid

UTICA, N.Y. (AP) — Two young raccoons kept onlookers in howls of laughter Thursday at a news conference called to present the mascots of the 1980 Lake Placid Winter Olympics to Utica city officials.

The five-month-old raccoons are no strangers to show biz. They have already appeared on Good Morning America and are slated for The Tonight Show.

As in other promotional appearances, they were dressed in infants' undershirts emblazoned with Olympics logos.

The raccoons were found in June, apparently abandoned by their mother, and were taken to the Utica City Zoo, which will remain their home between promotional tours.

Nine Offensive Returnees Hold Key To Kress' Success

By PAUL McGATH
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

KRESS — If the Population sign for the town of Kress is accurate — 572 persons — then one-tenth of the community will be suited up in pads this autumn.

Coach Al Mitts' Kangaroo squad has 57 players currently going through two-a-days, a figure which brings a smile to the coach's face.

"This is the most I've ever had out," he said. "The kids are showing a lot of enthusiasm."

KNEES HIGH — Tulia coach Bill Martin shouts encouragement as his players go through agility drills this week. (AP Laserphoto)

Despite having lost 14 letterman, the Kangaroos return enough potential to launch a serious run at the District 3-A title. Nine starters return on offense and five on defense from a team which was 8-2 in 1977 and carried a 4-1 district record to finish runner-up to Vega.

In fact, the Kangaroos bobbled their championship hopes in the final game of last season with Vega, a contest which determined the district playoff representative.

"They beat us 13-0, but we had seven turnovers during the game," Mitts recalled. "We beat them everyway but on the scoreboard."

The impact of that game's outcome has not been lost on the Kangaroo players and coaching staff. Assistant Coach Clifford Smith had "Kill Vega" inscribed on his t-shirt the first day of workouts.

Kress, district champs two years ago and predicted by several publications to regain the throneroom, could well have its title bid determined early in the district schedule. . .like the first game.

The Kangaroos travel to Vega in the initial league contest for what many feel could be the championship game.

"It (playing Vega on the road to open distict) will put more pressure on us," Mitts admitted, "but we'd have to beat them anyway."

With the Longhorns first on the district slate, Mitts said he will have to alter his coaching strategy slightly.

"We brought the kids along slowly last year. There won't be any of that this year," he said.

The Kangaroos will be blessed with speed and quickness, Mitts said, coupled with experience at several key positions. However, a bumper crop of veteran players is unavailable.

"We feel real good about the attitude and the condition the kids showed up in," Mitts said. "We have several outstanding prospects, but I'd prefer to wait and see how they perform before I make any predictions."

Quarterback Henry Amador and halfback Eddie Johnson, both juniors, and senior fullback David Rascon, a converted guard, will likely form the starting backfield on an offense which features strictly and senior front wall.

Defensively, there are still questions to be answered as only Jody Blackerby, Rascon, Johnson, Timmy Williams and Jackie Scott have seen playing time.

Mitts admits that experience will be lacking in the defensive unit, but hopes it is stabilized before the Kangaroos' revenge match with Vega.

"The district is pretty even this time," he conceded. "It should be an interesting year."

Moses Wins Hurdles In Belgian Meet

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — Edwin Moses of the United States won the 400-meter hurdles in the Ivo van Damme Memorial track and field event Friday evening.

Moses ran 48.51 seconds, beating American James Walker, who was timed at 49.42, and Harry Schulting, 50.10.

Ivo van Damme, a Belgian 400 and 800-meter runner was killed in a car crash at the end of 1976.

Friday's meet is the second such event held in hommage to the Belgian athlete.

Hasely Crawford of Trinidad won the first heat in the 100 meters in 10.35, Leonard Silva of Cuba was second in 10.37, followed by another Cuban, Oswaldo Lara, 10.56.

Tulia To Major On Air Attack

TULIA — If all goes according to plan, the Hornets will travel a bit more by air than by land this fall, as first year head coach Bill Martin expects to develop the passing game.

"We feel like we'll be able to throw it. . . we'll just have to work on it," said Martin, who, after serving four years as an assistant, took the reins when Earl Miller went to Midland Lee.

"We're going to try to pass more," Martin commented. "We really have potental, but we're a long way from it.

"We've got some pretty good quarterbacks and receivers. They (the fans) haven't seen much passing around here. . . we've pretty much been a running team in the past.

Senior quarterback Ronnie Fox, who hit about 50 percent of his passes last season for the maroon and white-clad Hornets, will be counted upon to provide the thrust of the air attack.

Fox, 5-9, 150 pounds, will be backed up by junior Barry Cowan.

The receiving corps consists of seniors Tim Bliss, Terry Boyette, Angel Hernandez and juniors Alex Guiterrez and John Hurd.

Providing overland punch will be runningbacks Joe Padilla, Kevin Lair and Montey Jones. Padilla averaged 4.8 yards per tote last fall, while Lair, a 5-11, 190-pound fullback, is expected to aid in the ball-carrying chores.

The offensive and defensive lines should prove as one of the strongpoints of the team, Martin says. The expected starters average 190 pounds per man, a statistic which does not include the hefty presence of sophomore Dale Phillips, a 250-pounder.

Center Boyett Sanders, who alternates as a defensive end, should anchor both lines. Tackles Albert Bernal and James Avent weigh in at 255 and 240 pounds, respectively, while guard Kyle Inglis also tops the 200 mark. Bernal, a senior, also plays both sides of the scrimmage line.

It will be the defensive line which provides the stabilizing factor until the air game develops, Martin said.

"We lost a tough game to Idalou that cost us the district (4-AA) championship last year. This year we'll be young and inexperienced, although our defensive line will rank with the best of them."

The Hornets were 3-1 in league play in 1977 and 7-3 overall.

In addition to inexperience, Marton also bemoaned a lack of speed.

"We've got a lot of size, but no speed," he said.

Compounding those problems is the Hornets' nondistrict schedule which features AA powerhouses Spearman and Childress, both of which are expected to go some distance in the state playoffs.

"I hope we can just survive our first six games," he said. "Most of our kids don't have the games under their belts. We only have four kids with varsity playing time."

Sands Coach Shooting For Winning Season

By JIM FERGUSON
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

ACKERLY — Dickie Lepard doesn't think he bit off more than he could chew. But he does admit he's got a mouthful.

Lepard, a young Texas Tech graduate, took over the reins of the Sands Mustangs, a team long known as a grid doormat.

Last year the Mustangs failed to win a game in 10 starts, scoring only one touchdown in the process.

"People keep telling me if we only win one or two games then we'll have a good season," Lepard said. "But I don't look at it that way. For us to have a successful season, we'll have to win more than we lose. That's the way I look at it."

Lepard said the 22 gridders who reported to two-a-day workouts appear to want to change Sands' image as a football weakling.

"Their attitude has really been super so far," Lepardid. "They are ready to turn this thing around. But it's something that won't come overnight. It's going to take a lot of work."

Lepard pointed out that Sands has some of the best basketball players in the area, meaning some of the best athletes.

"There's no doubt that we've got the athletes here to turn it around," he explained. "They know what it's like to win, but not in football."

Last year, the Mustangs had one of the outstanding Class B cage teams in the state, winning over 30 games.

"For years, people have thought of Sands as only a basketball school," Lepard said. "But it seems the community is behind our football program and that makes a tremendous amount of difference. They are going to see a change this year."

Lepard pointed out that the team this season will be made up primarily of sophomores and juniors — meaning he is also looking past this season toward the next one.

"One of the things that has hurt is the coaching situation here," he said. "I believe they've had something like five coaches in six years. That's had to hurt. I plan sticking around and help build a stable program."

Assisting Lepard with the rebuilding program is Dennis Louarey, a graduate of Abilene Christian College.

Guiding the team will be senior quarterback David Moseley. However, Lepard said sophomore Shayne Wigington will also see considerable action at the signal-calling position.

In all, Sands returns 10 lettermen, losing only two to graduation.

"For years it has sort of been a joke down here," Lepard said. "But hopefully it won't be any more."

Early Slate To Toughen Bobcats

By RUSS PARSONS
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

DIMMITT— If Dimmitt can make it through the first part of the season, the district contests should almost seem like pieces of cake.

In their nondistrict games, the Bobcats face only one team that had a losing record last year.

Starting with Floydada (6-4 last season), coach Jerry Vance's charges then move on to District 5-AA co-champions Tahoka (9-1) and Slaton (7-3). After that is 4-AA runnerup Tulia and then finally 4-6 Lockney.

When you consider that Dimmitt only has 11 lettermen coming back from a 5-5 team, that stands as a heap of a test.

"We've got a pretty tough preseason schedule," said Vance. "Then we come back with Littlefield which won the district last year. We're going to be tested right off the bat."

If they can live through those first games, the Bobcats might be in pretty good shape. Although they only have six returning starters, three of them line up behind center in Vance's I-formation offense.

"Our fullback (Randy Roberts) was an all-district linebacker last year and our tailback (Randy Veals) was all-district as a safety in his sophomore year. But this is the first year we've gotten them all together.

"Injuries are what will to keep us from being good. If anybody gets hurt we're going to be hurting. Of course, that's just like any other AA ball club.

"Like I said, our backs are probably our strongest point. Our line is relatively inexperienced this year. We'll have to break in a lot of new people.

"But we feel like we'll be competitive. We're real satisfied with the kids so far. They've worked real hard in the off season and they're taking coaching real well."

Besides Veal and Roberts, Vance is pinning his hopes on returning starting quarterback Jack Stewart. This will give him a pretty sizeable backfield by most anybody's standards.

Veals, a two-year letterman, stands 6-1 and weighs 185. Roberts, the two-letter fullback, is also 6-1 but weighs in at 195. Stewart is the smallest of the group, a very respectable 6-0, 175.

Leading the way for them are three returning starters on the offensive line. Norris Cole (6-0, 200) will hub at center. Guard Tim Fewell is 5-10, 170 and tackle Kyle Wise is 5-10, 170.

There are a couple of sizeable fellows looking for a job in the two line vacancies. Emilio Sandoval, a 6-1, 180-pounder, and 6-0, 175 Gary Bruegal have the edges on the remaining guard and tackle slots. But 200-pound Leslie Heard and 175-pound Richard Martinez could provide some heavy competition.

Large Senior Group Boosts Post's Chances

By RUSS PARSONS
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

POST — Last year had to be a big disappointment for Post football coach Jackie Brownd. He finished with a fine 8-2 overall record and beat district champion Tahoka. But still the Antelopes finished well back in the pack in District 5-AA.

You see, Post finished with a 4-2 district record, and that just jidn't count for much in that conference last season. Tahoka and Slaton finished in a tie for first, and Frenship and Post in a tie for second. Tahoka had beaten Slaton in the regular season so it advanced into the state playoffs (and made it all the way to the quarter-finals). Frenship had beaten Post by a point in the regular season and so finished third.

Ana 8-2 record good for fourth place!

Brownd welcomes back only two offensive and three defensive starters off that squad, but there are a total of 22 seniors returning to camp.

"The kids have been working real hard," he said. "They all reported in good condition. I really hope our seniors provide some good leadership for us. We only have the five starters back, but our lettermen did play quite a bit for us. It just wasn't enough that they would be considered starters."

The returning starters are fullback Carlos Varella, wingback Cliff Kirkpatrick, halfback Tom Morris and center Leslie Looney.

Lettermen who are coming back are fullback Darrel Reece (who is giving Varella a run for his spot), quarterback Bryan Compton, tackles Greg Pollard, Kelly Baker and Danny Gunn, guard Rex Cash and ends Dale Redmon and Shorty Billberry. Those are just the ones Brownd figures will start this year.

But the district should, if anything, be tougher than it was last year. Tahoka returns a flood of talent, Slaton had 90 kids come out for practice, Roosevelt looked strong in its early practices, Frenship has some big linemen coming back, and Seminole is a newcomer to the district after competing in the Class AAA last season.

"I think to win this district we'll have to improve each week and the kids are going to have to get stronger each week," Brownd said.

Affirmed, Alydar Vie In Travers Stakes

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N.Y. (AP) — Affirmed and Alydar, the greatest of thoroughbred rivals, meet again today in the 109th running of the Travers Stakes. Injured jockey Steve Cauthen was expected to be among the anticipated 40,000 spectators jamming Saratoga Race Course, the track known as the "graveyard of favorites."

Only two other 3-year-olds will contest the 1¼-mile Travers, which is expected to produce a performance similar to the pulsating Belmont Stakes, in which Affirmed and Alydar battled head-and-head for a mile of the 1½-mile test. Affirmed beat Alydar by a head in the Belmont to become the 11th Triple Crown winner in history.

In the earlier legs, the Harbor View Farm colt beat Alydar by 1½ lengths in the Kentucky Derby and by a neck in the Preakness — all with 18-year-old Cauthen aboard.

Laffit Pincay, one of the nation's leading jockeys who campaigns on the West Coast, is due here this morning after an overnight stopover in Chicago en route from California. Jorge Velasquez, as usual, will ride Calumet Farm's Alydar, who has won only two of his nine meetings with Affirmed.

Laz Barrera, trainer of Affirmed, shrugged off the possibility that the jockey change could make a difference. "I have confidence in Affirmed. Pincay is a great jockey and has ridden him twice before," Barrera said. "Anytime you run a horse you got a chance of being best."

Secretariat, the 1973 Triple Crown winner, found that out here when Onion upset him in the '73 Whitney Stakes.

Cauthen, the nation's leading jockey in purses won (a record of more than $6 million) and victories last year, suffered shoulder and knee injuries in a spill here Aug. 9. Barrera made the decision to replace Cauthen on Tuesday and the jockey's agent, Lenny Goodman, said Friday that "there was no way he could ride Saturday. He should be up again next week.

John Veitch, Alydar's trainer, figures his colt will be the sentimental favorite because of his underdog role. "The elongated war is not over yet," he said, adding that he also expected the two colts to meet again in the fall.

Alydar has had two starts since his last meeting with Affirmed in the Belmont. The son of Raise A Native captured the Arlington Classic by 13 lengths and the Whitney by 10 lengths. In Affirmed's only start since the Belmont, in the Jim Dandy here, the Exclusive Native colt unleashed a powerful rush to just catch Sensitive Prince by a half-length.

Affirmed was installed as the early line 4-5 favorite with Alydar, owned by the Calumet Farm, rated even money. Meadowhill Stable's Nasty and Bold, winners of the American Derby and Brooklyn Handicap this year, was listed at 6-1 with Jean-Luc Samyn aboard.

Fernando Acevedo's Shake Shake Shake, who finished fifth in the Monmouth invitational and had been running in Puerto Rico before that, was a 15-1 outsider under Angel Cordero. All will carry 126 pounds.

Roth Seeks Bowling Title

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — Mark Roth goes after two Professional Bowlers Association records when the $60,000 Greater Buffalo Open begins today.

Roth, 1977 PBA player of the year, won last week's New England Open to tie the record for most victories in one year — seven — and he pulled to within $1,800 of Earl Anthony's single-season money record.

Roth, of North Arlington, N.J., has won $109,050 in just 20 tournaments, an average of more than $5,000 a week. He would have to finish sixth or better to pass the record of $110,833 set by Anthony in 1976.

Roth's seventh title this year tied Anthony and Billy Hardwick in the record books for the most wins in a year. This is the last tournament that Roth plans on bowling this summer, but there are five more stops in the fall tour.

He'll be challenged by 223 other pros and top amateurs in Buffalo where Tom Wright of Millbrae, Calif., is the defending champion.

Wright edged then-rookie Craig Custor of Whittier, Calif., in the final match last year to win his only PBA title.

Other top players in the tournament include two of the hottest pros this summer, Pete McCordic of Houston and Steve Neff of Sarasota, Fla. McCordic has five top-10 finishes this summer, and Neff has won more than $10,000 in his last three outings, including a victory in Houston.

Pole, East German Set World Marks

WEST BERLIN (AP) — Krystina Kasperczyk of Poland set a world record in the women's 400-meter hurdles Friday night, clocking 55.44 seconds.

The 29-year-old Warsaw runner broke the record held by Karin Rossley of East Germany by 19 hundreths of a second.

The record was set in the first event of a track and field meet accompanying the opening ceremony of the third world swimming championships at the Olympic stadium.

A second world record fell in the second event of the evening, when East Germany's Ulrike Bruhns sped to victory in the 1,000 meters in a time of 2:32.0, beating her own previous world mark of 2:32.5.

Brigitte Kraus of West Germany was second in 2:34.2, missing her own national record by one second.

Garvey's RBIs Carry Los Angeles Past Mets 7-3

By The Associated Press

Steve Garvey drove in four runs with a single and a three-run homer Friday night, as Los Angeles Dodgers left-hander Tommy John continued his mastery of the New York Mets with a 7-3 triumph.

The Dodgers had pulled to a 6-0 lead by the time John, 14-9, gave up a two-run homer to John Stearns and an RBI double by Elliott Maddox in the fourth inning. The Dodgers left-hander ran into trouble in the eighth inning when Steve Henderson and Willie Montanez singled with one out, but reliever Charlie Hough preserved John's ninth victory in 10 career decisions against New York.

Nino Espinosa, 9-11, contributed to his own downfall with an error that led to two first-inning runs and four consecutive walks which made it 3-0 in the third.

An inning later, John singled but was erased on a strange play one out later. Bill North lined a shot which caromed to second baseman Doug Flynn off Espinosa's foot. Flynn grabbed the ball 10 feet from John but missed the tag. He threw to first too late to get North but first baseman Montanez' throw to second was in time to get the sliding pitcher.

Reggie Smith followed with a single, then Garvey launched his 17th homer of the year over the fence in left center for a 6-0 Dodgers lead. Two more Mets error in the seventh — New York's third and fourth of the game — led to the Dodgers seventh run which John delivered with his second single of the contest.

RANGERS 4, ROYALS 3

The Texas Rangers, aided by two Kansas City errors and a wild pitch, scored four unearned runs and beat the Kansas City Royals 4-3 behind Doc Medich.

The Royals scored three runs the fifth with help from throwing errors by Medich, 7-6, and center fielder Juan Beniquez, who fielded a single and threw the ball into the Royals' dugout.

Richie Zisk struck out but reached first on a passed ball and eventually scored the winning run.

Mike Hargrove singled leading off the Texas first and took second on a wild pitch by rookie Rich Gale, who suffered only his fifth loss in 18 decisions. After Jim Sundberg beat out an infield hit, both runners scored when first baseman Pete LaCock threw wildly to second base on a double-play attempt.

In the Texas fourth, Bobby Bonds singled and took second on a throwing error by Fred Patek. Then Zisk struck out but was saved by the passed ball. John Lowenstein singled home Bonds and Zisk, who moved around to third, came home on a ground ball by Toby Harrah.

GIANTS 6, PHILLIES 5

Mike Ivie's fourth pinch-hit homer of the season carried the San Francisco Giants to a 6-5 victory over Philadelphia and handed the Phillies their the fifth straight loss.

Ivie's ninth homer of the season came off reliever Tug McGraw, 8-5, in the ninth inning after a double by Darrell Evans and a fielder's choice in which Evans was thrown out diving back into second.

Ivie is 11-for-26 as a pinch hitter this season with 19 RBI. The victory went to Gary Lavelle, 10-9, the third San Francisco pitcher, who relieved in the eighth when the Phillies tied the game 4-4.

Lavelle got out of a jam in the ninth after yielding a one-out RBI double to Garry Maddox. Maddox stole third as Lavelle was striking out Greg Luzinski, and the Giants got out of the inning when Maddox was out trying to steal home.

REDS 8, CUBS 3

George Foster and Johnny Bench belted consecutive home runs in the first inning and Joe Morgan's bases-loaded sacrifice fly provided the go-ahead run in the sixth as Cincinnati beat the Chicago Cubs 8-3.

Foster's 27th homer, a two-run shot to left-center field, gave the Reds a 2-0 lead off loser Dave Roberts 5-8. Bench followed with his 18th home run, making it 3-0.

PIRATES 6, ASTROS 3

Speedsters Frank Taveras and Omar Moreno scored two runs each to lead the Pittsburgh Pirates to a 6-3 victory over the Houston Astros.

Winning pitcher Jim Bibby, 7-7, added a solo home run, the first of his big league career, to help the Pirates to their fourth straight triumph. It was the third straight loss for Houston, which fell behind 2-0 in the opening inning. Taveras singled off loser Vern Ruhle, 2-1, stole second, and scored on a triple by Moreno, who came home on Dave Parker's ground out.

Taveras was hit by a pitch in the second inning, stole another base before Moreno was walked, then both raced home on singles by Parker and Willie Stargell.

Bibby, who had his homer in the fourth, had yielded a solo home run to Houston's Jose Cruz in the top of the inning.

Bibby got relief help from Ed Whitson, Grant Jackson, and Kent Tekulve, who notched his 21st save and made his 67th appearance this season, tops in the majors.

PADRES 3, EXPOS 2

Pinch-hitter Gene Tenace's sacrifice fly in the seventh inning capped a two-run rally and gave the San Diego Padres a 3-2 victory over the Montreal Expos.

The Padres trailed 2-1 going into the seventh, but they tied it after loading the bases of Montreal starter and loser Steve Rogers, 13-8, who suddenly became plagued by wildness.

Derrel Thomas led off the inning with a single and was sacrificed to second by Rick Sweet. Pinch-hitter Jerry Turner scratched out an infield single, and Gene Richards walked to load the bases.

Ozzie Smith worked Rogers for another walk, the Montreal pitcher's third of the night, to drive in the tying run before reliever Darold Knowles surrendered the sacrifice fly by Tenace, who pinch-hit for rookie Broderick Perkins.

Stan Bahnsen then relieved Knowles and retired Dave Winfield on a foul pop to end the inning.

The Padres scored their first run in the sixth on a walk to Smith, a single by Perkins and a fielder's choice by Winfield.

Padres' starter Eric Rasmussen, 12-9, got the victory with relief help from Mark Lee, who earned his first major league save.

BREWERS 2, TIGERS 0

Gorman Thomas lined a two-run, second-inning double to back Lary Sorensen's eight-hit pitching and lead the Milwaukee Brewers to a 2-0 victory over Detroit.

Sorensen, 15-8, allowed only three runners to reach scoring position as the Brewers extended their winning streak to six games and cooled off the Tigers, who had won 11 of 14.

Brewer pitching has allowed only six runs during the winning streak. A single by Larry Hisle and a walk to Cecil Cooper set up Thomas' two-run double, a line drive off Dave Rozema, 6-7, to the base of the left field wall.

WHITE SOX 7, INDIANS 1

A two-run triple by rookie Mike Squires and a two-run homer by Ralph Garr highlighted a four-run, first-inning rally that helped the Chicago White Sox to a 7-1 victory over the Cleveland Indians.

The White Sox scored four times off loser Rick Wise, 9-16, as Bob Molinaro led off with a single. Don Kessinger followed with a double, Squires tripled to deep center, and, after a line-out by Lamar Johnson, Garr drilled a high drive over the right field fence for his third homer of the season.

TWINS 4, BLUE JAYS 3

Glenn Adams lined a shot up the right-center field alley for a double to score Hosken Powell and give Minnesota a 4-3, 10th-inning victory over the Toronto Blue Jays.

Jeff Holly, 1-1, pitched four scoreless innings in relief of Dave Goltz, allowing two hits and walking four. Tom Murphy, 4-9, suffered the loss.

CARDINALS 5, BRAVES 1

George Hendrick's two-run single capped a four-run uprising in the fifth inning, sending St. Louis to a 5-1 triumph over Atlanta for the Cardinals' 11th success in 14 games.

Cards right-hander Pete Vuckovich, 11-9, spaced eight Atlanta hits through seven innings before he was relieved by Tom Bruno. Vuckovich lost his shutout bid in the seventh inning to Rowland Office's two-out RBI double. The Braves' Preston Hanna, 7-12, suffered his seventh straight setback and 11th loss in 12 decisions.

Redskins Edge Winless Colts On Late Pass

BALTIMORE (AP) — Joe Theismann hit Reggie Haynes on two passes for 57 yards in the fourth quarter, the second an 18-yard scoring toss, giving the Washington Redskins a 17-16 victory over the Baltimore Colts in a National Football League exhibition Friday night.

The Colts, winless in three preseason starts, had an apparent 29-yard scoring pass nullified by a holding penalty midway through the final quarter, and then scored on Ron Lee's five-yard run with 2:59 remaining. But Toni Linhart's extra point attempt failed after hitting the left upright.

Veteran Billy Kilmer, in his first preseason action, was the Washington quarterback during a 10-10 first half. Bert Jones started for Baltimore, before giving way to Bill Troup in the second half.

Baltimore took a 7-0 lead on a five-yard pass from Jones to Mack Alston, and then needed a 43-yard field goal by Linhart with two seconds left in the first half to forge a tie.

Mark Moseley booted a 36-yard Washington field goal early in the second quarter, and a two-yard run by Mike Thomas gave the Redskins, now 2-1, a 10-7 lead with 40 seconds remaining in the half.

A blocked punt by Larry Franklin, with Mark Murphy recovering on the Baltimore 36, set up the Moseley field goal in the second period.

Dolphins Trip Vikes 30-22

MIAMI (AP) — Linebacker Larry Gordon ran 35 yards with a fumble recovery for the winning touchdown and Bob Griese outdueled a vintage Fran Tarkenton Friday night as the Miami Dolphins defeated the Minnesota Vikings 30-22 in a National Football League preseason game.

The Dolphins were helped by two missed extra points, the second one blocked by linebacker Kim Bokamper.

Tarkenton, playing his first game since breaking a leg Nov. 7, threw two touchdown passes and completed 17 of 29 attempts for 209 yards.

Griese completed 11 of 17 passes for 136 yards to lead the Dolphins to their third victory in four exhibitions. The Vikings are 1-2 in preseason play.

SOUTHWEST AIRLINES — making a quantum leap in service this year with new flights in Lubbock, Midland-Odessa and three other Texas points — is planning to spread its wings even further soon both inside and outside the state.

Southwest plans to file an application in early 1978 to extend its routes to Amarillo and the Beaumont-Orange-Port Arthur area, hopefully in 1979, airline president Lamar Muse says.

And it hopes by 1979 or 1980, he told The Avalanche-Journal, to be operating a subsidiary company, Midway Airway, in the North.

That interstate operation would center on Chicago's close-to-town Midway Airport and serve 14 other markets, Buffalo, Cincinnati, Cleveland, Columbus, Dayton, Des Moines, Detroit, Kansas City, St. Louis, Louisville, Ky.; Memphis, Minneapolis-St.Paul, Omaha and Pittsburgh, he said.

An application for such service already has been filed with the Civil Aeronautics Board.

Southwest's expansion plans into Amarillo have nothing really to do with Continental Airlines' pull-out there, Muse said.

"We made that d Continental announc ping Amarillo."

Airport Bomb Kills Worker

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A spring-loaded pipe bomb exploded Saturday in a locker room at National Airport, killing one Federal Aviation Administration employe, but the FAA said there was no threat to air passengers and no disruption of airline opertions.

FAA and FBI officials said initial investigations gave them a good idea about the type of bomb used but no clue about the motive for the blast. They said there was no warning the bomb would go off.

An FAA spokesman, referring to the 1975 locker bomb explosion that killed 11 and injured 70 at New York's LaGuardia Airport, said: "This was no LaGuardia."

'Fight Crime' Reward Fund Leaps Ahead

THE "FIGHT CRIME NOW" reward fund — announced Wednesday by a group of anonymous citizens who want to help stem the mounting crime rate in Lubbock — has now climbed to $2,880.

Robert R. Norris, vice president and general manager of The Avalanche-Journal, announced Saturday that the newspaper would add $500 to the fund.

In addition, Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Dregne contributed $25 and three anonymous donors added $355 to help swell the total to $2,880.

Norris had announced earlier that The Avalanche-Journal, along with a local bank, would serve as the recipient for handling the fund, which will be held in trust.

From time to time, specific rewards will be offered for information leading to the arrest and conviction of persons who commit crimes against society, particularly armed robberies and assault cases.

Four citizens who requested anonymity to avoid the possibility of personalities becoming involved contributed $500 each to the fund to originally establish it.

The original $2,000 has been offered for information which leads to the arrest and conviction of one or more of the three persons who, without provocation, attacked, beat and shot 21-year-old Texas Tech student Jim Adair on Dec. 15 at the service station where he worked. The remainder ($880) will remain in reserve.

Adair only recently returned to his home in Richardson from a Dallas rehabilitation center, where he had undergone treatment since Jan. 17. Still partially paralyzed and wearing back and leg braces and using crutches or a wheelchair, he will remain home for about a month, after which a diagnosis will be made on his progress.

Further contributions may be made to the fund by sending them to the "Fight Crime Now Fund" in care of The Avalanche-Journal, Box 491, Lubbock 79408. Persons desiring to remain anonymous should attach a note when making the donation.

Monies received will be turned over to a bank to act as trustee, Norris said. "The newspaper in this instance is not acting or attempting to act as a law enforcement agent, but in the avenue of public service to encourage those who wish to do so to participate as citizens to help make Lubbock a better and safer place in

Denton's Phyllis George 'Still A Good Person'

By DICK KLEINER

HOLLYWOOD (NEA) -Is it possible for a Texas girl to become a Miss American, then a big, high-priced television star and then marry a Hollywood mogul and then divorce him and remain a good person?

"I am still a good person," says Phyllis George, who has done all that and more. It's tough enough for anybody to stay good these days, much less going through all the joys and temptations that Phyllis has gone through.

As an example of her goodness, she cites the following:

"Why just a few days ago, my mother was here and we were sitting at that table (pointing to one in the restaurant of the Westwood-Marquis Hotel) and I was dressed like I stepped out of the pages of W.

"I had on nice jeans and a floppy shirt and a vest. Very in-fashionable. My mother said I should go upstairs to my room and change, and not dress like that in public. And here I am, fully grown, married and divorced, and I went upstairs and changed into a nice dress."

After all, that's being very good.

Phyllis is doing great, as well as being good. Come fall, you'll see her as host (is it permissible to use the word 'hostess' any more?) of a new CBS show, "People." She is moving onward and upward from just the sports area where she first struck it rich.

It all began, of course, with her Miss Americaship. That was in 1971. She had grown up in Denton and her folks are still there, struggling vainly against the flood waters of her fame.

Phyllis's mother, who used to go to the supermarket in shorts with her hair in curlers, says she can't do that any more. As a celebrity's mother, she has to be careful about what she wears. People are always coming up to her, stopping her, talking about what Phyllis is doing now. So now she gets dressed up to go shopping.

"And my father," Phyllis says, "is now very much in demand to play at all the golf tournaments in Texas."

She is Denton's most famous product. A couple of years after she became Miss America, another Denton dazzler, Shirley Cothran, also went on to cop that title in Atlantic City. That's believed to be the only case of one city producing two Miss Americas.

"But Shirley went back to Denton," Phyllis says, "and joined the church and married her childhood sweetheart, while I went on to New York and everything. So they are kind of proud of me."

Proud is hardly the word. She is so much a figure of Denton municipal pride that she has to watch it.

"It got to be too much," she says. "They wanted to name a freeway after me. I couldn't let them do that. If there was an accident on it, they'd blame me."

Through it all, through the marriage and divorce which became grist for Hollywood gossip columnists' mills, Phyllis George has always managed to retain her quality of goodness. Even that sometimes oppresses her.

"They keep calling me 'wholesome' and 'refreshing,'" she says. "I get tired of being called 'wholesome' and 'refreshing.' If I hear 'refreshing' one more time, I think I will be sick."

She won't hear "refreshing" from me. I hate to see women sick. At the other end of the annoyance scale, Phyllis says, is the fact that people do not attribute any intelligence to her. She is, in the eyes of some, too beautiful to have any brains.

PHYLLIS GEORGE

"It's hard to overcome the suspicion in people's minds," she says, "that there is nothing up here (and she points to her head). Why is that? Why do they think that if you're pretty, you can't have any brains?"

It's an age-old question which has troubled pretty and brainy women for centuries.

She is also ambitious, as well as bright and beautiful. She wants to do things, go places, accomplish much.

"I love what I'm doing, but what I really want to do is be in movies. And I want to be in nice movies, not in stories where I have to take my clothes off.

"I think it's happening. I think my kind of movies is coming back. A friend of mine said that vogues are transitory and cycles are inevitable. I think the cycle of good pictures is coming back. Just in time for me, too."

Tech Department Gets HEW Grant To Aid Programs

The Department of Health, Education and Welfare has awarded a $20,060 grant to the public service education and public administration program at Texas Tech University.

The Center for Public Service at Texas Tech will use the money. The center is a joint effort of the Political Science Department and the College of Business Administration to enhance the master of public administration degree program.

Texas Tech has allocated the center $10,134 matching funds in faculty and staff time for the 1978-79 academic year.

The HEW grant will provide for the appointment of two adjunct professors from government service. The professors will be residence at intervals during each semester for short-term seminars, workshops, lectures, individual student tutorials and program development consultation.

To enhance the practical experience of the students and also provide service to small cities in the area, one former city manager will be employed as an adjunct professor on a full-time basis for the 1979 spring semester and first summer session.

The adjunct professor will offer a course in which students will work directly with small cities in need of management assistance.

The center will also provide visiting practitioners from such fields as personnel, budgeting, planning and criminal justice for one-day visits to the Texas Tech campus. Faculty members from other universities also may be included in the campus visits.

Money has been allocated to provide travel support for permanent members of the faculty, staff and students to attend training programs and professional conferences and for presentation of professional papers.

'Animal House' Tops List Of New Film Releases

FILMETER
A capsule look at cinema

FILMETER is compiled by Dick Kleiner in Hollywood and the N.E.A. staff in both Hollywood and New York.

NEW RELEASES

ANIMAL HOUSE (R) — John Belushi, Tim Matheson, Thomas Hulce. Comedy. Leave your raised consciousness at home and wallow. All the cliche college characters are here and the cast plays them to the hilt. Raucous and hysterical — a great movie to drink beer by. Warning: Topless cheerleaders and some verbal no-no's. GRADE: A-minus. (O'Brien)

CONVOY (R) — Kris Kristofferson, Ali McGraw, Ernest Borgnine. Action. Pointless and sprawling, this cheap ripoff of the CB pop song is maddeningly simplistic. Director Sam Peckinpah hits a new low. GRADE: F. (Posner)

EYES OF LAURA MARS (R) — Faye Dunaway, Tommie Lee Jones. Mystery. A basically good idea — a fashion photographer who sees visions of her friends' murders, and they all come true — is ruined by pretentiousness. Everything here is ovedone, from the direction to the costumes to the make-up. The end result is a film that tries to be different and only succeds in being bad. Caution: Gratuitous nudity, violence and raunchy vocabulary. GRADE: C-minus.

SGT. PEPPER's LONELY HEARTS CLUB BAND (PG) — Peter Frampton, several Gibb brothers. Rock operetta. Even our 8-year-old critic was bored, and old Beatles' fans were enraged by the sacrilege. Pathetic plot, overdone gags. GRADE: F.

GENERAL RELEASE

BUDDY HOLLY STORY, THE (PG) — Gary Busey, Don Stroud, Charlie Martin Smith. Biogrgaphical drama. When Buddy Holly died at the hage of 22 in a plane crash he was already a rock 'n roll legend. Now, nearly 20 years later, Gary Busey brings Holly alive again a touching, funny film that shows the life behind the legend. GRADE: A-minus. (Drake)

CAPRICORN ONE (PG) — James Brolin, Hal Holbrook, Brenda Vaccaro. Action-adventure. Plenty of action here, and something to think about, too. This suggests that the space program fakes a Mars landing — the astronauts are really in a Martian mock-up on Earth — and builds a great chase and survival thriller from that. GRADE: B-plus (and counting).

CHEAP DETECTIVE, THE (PG) — Peter Folk, Ann-Margret and a cast of dozens. Comedy-Mystery. This is Neil Simon's follow-up to "Murder by Death." It's a spoof of all those old Bogart movies. Most of it works, some of it doesn't, but you'll smile most of the way. The plot has more twists than a roomful of disco dancers, but don't worry about it. Just enjoy the gags and funny situations. GRADE: B-plus.

DRIVER, THE (R) — Ryan O'Neal, Bruce Dern, Isabelle Adjani, Ronee Blakeley. Melodrama. A getaway driver for bank robbers is the anti-hero of this low-key, slickly-made car-crash epic. It's a contest between him and the cop who'll do anything to get his man. Everybody is rotten in this one, but there are plenty of car chases to keep you busy. GRADE: B.

FOUL PLAY (PG) — Goldie Hawn, Chevy Chase. Comedy-thriller. The plot has more holes than an old Swiss cheese, but who cares? It's fun and scary to watch poor Goldie, the innocent, get involved with assassins and dwarfs and albinos and snakes and all kinds of strange goings-on. It's all very slick, with some laughs and some shrieks. GRADE: B-plus.

GREASE (PG) — John Travolta, Olivia Newton-John. Musical. Not much plot, but plenty of fun, energy and music. Travolta can't sing, but who cares? — he's a star. Slow direction stalls some of the musical numbers, but overall this has a very enjoyable quality, and it builds up to a great musical climax. It's all fine summer fluff. GRADE: B-plus.

HEAVEN CAN WAIT (PG) — Warren Beatty, Julie Christie, Dyan Cannon, Charles Grodin. Comedy. A cheerful, gentle fantasy about a Heavenly mistake concerning the death of a pro football player. So he gets another chance — and another body. This time, he's a tycoon, but he still wants to be a quarterback. Even the heavies are lovable in this upbeat film. GRADE: B-plus.

INTERNATIONAL VELVET (PG) — Tatum O'Neal, Christopher Plummer, Nanette Newman, Anthony Hopkins. Drama. Frankly sentimental, this belated sequel to "National Velvet" has Velvet, now 40-ish, adopting her orphaned niece and overseeing her desires to be an Olympic equestrienne. Fine for family viewing, but tending to be a bit over-sweet. GRADE: B.

JAWS 2 (PG) — Roy Scheider. Action-thriller. Here we go again, but this time it misses the mark. The story is poor, the direction is weak, the shark looks fishy. Some moments of excitement but generally pretty dull. Compared to the first one, this sequel is strickly a sinker. GRADE: C.

REVENGE OF THE PINK PANTHER (PG) — Peter Sellers, Dyan Cannon, Herbert Lom. Comedy. The old pink panther is turning a bit green with overripeness. This, the fifth in the series, has more plot than its predecessors, but the gags are less inventive, more repetitious. Still, you know what you are getting when you buy a ticket. GRADE: C-plus.

SWARM, THE (PG) — Michael Caine, Richard Widmark, Katherine Ross and an all-star cast. Disaster. Producer-director Irwin Allen, the father of the disaster movie, has been a busy bee on this one, but it's overlong and sometimes downright laughable. The swarms of killer bees have their moments of frightening —or disgusting — us, but the dialogue is dumb. GRADE: D (Wish it could have been a bee-plus).

(Film Grading: A — superb; B — good; C — average; D — poor; F — awful)

Chamber Music Dates Set For Waco Area

Waco (Special) — Five Chamber music concerts of enormous variety will be offered by the 1978-79 Distinguished Artist Series at the Baylor University School of Music.

The new season will begin on Thursday, Sept.21 with an extraordinary assemblage called the Tequila Mockingbird Chamber Ensemble, trio comprised in violin, vibraphone and lyric tuba, and specializing in works of the Baroque period.

The king's Singers, six male unaccompanied voices from London who have come to consider Waco a second home, will make an unprecendented fourth concert appearance at Baylor on Friday, Oct.20. Their uncanny tonal blending and wide repertoire have made them favorites with audiences around the world in the ten years they have been together.

One of the world's most distinguished string ensembles, the LaSalle Quartet, will perform on Thursday, Jan. 18. For more than 20 years and 33 international tours, the name LaSalle has stood for excellence in the performance of a wide variety of musical styles. Their 1971 album, "The New Vienna School" (the works of Schoenberg, Berg and Webern) created a sensation in the music world, and was called "a landmark in recorded music" by Time Magazine.

On Feb. 15, the New York-based Waverly Consrt, under the direction of Micheal Jaffee, will present "Las Cantigas de Santa Maria," a courtly entertainment of voices and instruments as it might have been seen in 13th century Spain. The Waverly Consort is generally considered to be the finest early music ensemble in the country, and their annual subscription series in New York's Alice Tully Hall is always sold out weeks in advance.

The 1978-79 Distinguished Artist Series will conclude March 28 with Trio Vienna, combining two of Europe's foremost virtuosi — flutist Wolfgang Schultz and basioonist Milan Turkovic — and pianist John Perry, who is one of America's finest chamber musicians.

Season tickets are now available at the Baylor University School of Music offices in Roxy Grove Hall. Regular admission tickets are $12 for the season; admission for students, senior citizens, and Baylor faculty members and staff is $6. Mail orders should be addressed to D.A.S. Tanker Explosion Detours Ohio Cars

PENINSULA, Ohio (AP) — Traffic on a portion of the Ohio Turnpike was detoured Friday to a single lane over a mile-long bridge following the explosion of a tanker truck.

The truck overturned Thursday night on the 182-foot-high bridge over the Cuyahoga River Valley in Summit County, dumping hundreds of gallons of burning fuel. Traffic engineers said the westbound bridge, one of twin spans, buckled and they doubted it would be reopened soon. Both bridges were closed following the accident. No one was hurt.

Book Deals With 'Little People'

LONDON (UPI) — Katharine M. Briggs has an odd occupation for a woman of 80. She is chief historian of the fairies.

And of pixies, hobgoblins, brownies or elves or any other "little people" who may or may not walk this earth.

"I suppose it's rather a lonely business knowing a lot about fairies now," Dr. Briggs said not long ago. "People today don't seem to mind believing in ghosts, but not in fairies."

It wasn't always that way, as Dr. Briggs points out in her scholarly new book, "The Vanishing People." From Roman times to our own, tales of all manner of magical folk have haunted human imaginations.

"All over the world," she says, "people have believed in a race of creatures, either superhuman or slightly subhuman, who are neither gods nor, strictly speaking, ghosts, who have much in common with humanity but who differ from men in their powers, properties and attributes."

Does she believe in these creatures herself? Dr. Briggs, white-haired and spry, doesn't say. But she has no doubt some people still do.

"A new road was being built," she relates, "and the road-builders went on strike rather than destroy a fairy palace in its route." A government commission rushed to the scene, questioned local people and decided "it would be wiser to re-route the road." The highway was built bypassing the fairy ring.

This happened in 1959 — less than 20 years ago — in Ireland.

It is true that for generations, fairies have been "seen" less and less — thus her book's title. Dozens of tales which she carefully records account for their disappearance. In some, whole fairy races march into hills and never reappear. In others they are driven away by tolling church bells.

"But for all that, the last rumors of the fairies linger on," Dr. Briggs says. "The fairies, older than the oldest gods of whom we have mythological records, still show here and there a flicker of their former life."

Katharine Briggs was middleaged before she tackled the job of recording that "former life" before it wholly disappears. It has helped make her world renowned.

She took an Oxford degree in 1918, but then moved to Scotland for the life of an Edwardian spinster gentlewoman occupied with girl scouts and amateur theatricals and no serious career at all.

"It was quite normal then not to take a job," she recalls.

After World War II she impulsively returned to Oxford to write a Ph.D. thesis on folklore. It concentrated on fairy beliefs.

Two books grew from her thesis. Then she took 10 years to produce a four-volume "Dictionary of Folklore," and got back to fairies two years ago with a monumental "Dictionary of Fairies."

Her latest documentary collection of weird fairy tales, published by Batsford, is subtitled "A study of traditional fairy beliefs." Hardly any of them escape her.

"Fairy beliefs are not a single thread but a twisted cord," she writes, "and it is a fascinating occupation to follow the separate strands."

She writes of mermaids, who "are generally supposed to have great medical skill," and of dwarfs, who are usually miners — as in "Snow White" — of gold, silver or precious stones. "They do not," Dr. Briggs says dryly, "seem to be so interested in coal."

She has chapters onn "fairy sports," on house spirits and fairy midwives, on the powers fairies wield and on whether fairies die.

Where did they come from, these tales of gnomes and bwachod, of dracs and leprechauns and kelpies, of spriggans and all the other varieties of "little people?"

Some, perhaps, from a Christian background, Dr. Briggs says. Some were invented to explain away mysteries like why a young person had to die. One theory is that fairies are pre-neolithic people, driven into the woods and underground with their knowlege of magic. Another is that fairies are the pagan dead, "not good enough for hell," who shrank in size over the centuries.

Cardinals Prepare To Elect New Pope

VATICAN CITY (AP) — The smoke signal works, tailors have completed an assortment of vestments for the new pontiff and the cardinals of the Roman Catholic Church who will elect the successor to Pope Paul VI are preparing for what many believe may be a short conclave.

On Friday morning a curl of white smoke rose from the chimney in the roof of the Sistine Chapel as Vatican workmen tested the system that will announce the election of a new pope to the world.

Once the conclave convenes next Friday behind the locked doors of the 15th century chapel, pilgrims, tourists and reporters will begin a vigil in St. Peter's Square to await the puffs of smoke that will come from the burning of the cardinals' ballots. White smoke signals the election of a new pope and black means the cardinals failed to reach a two-thirds majority.

Whomever the cardinals choose from among their ranks, the Gammarelli family, tailors to the popes for over two centuries, has a set of vestments ready for him.

Robes tailored for a short, stout pope, and two sets for a tall, thin pontiff went on display Friday at the Gammarelli's shop in Rome.

The vestments, including cassocks in lightweight wool and silk, capes, skullcaps and red satin shoes, will be delivered to the Vatican a day before the conclave starts.

The Congregation of Cardinals, in their daily gathering Friday, decided to start the secret deliberations at 4:30 p.m. (10:30 a.m. EDT) next Friday, 30 minutes earlier than originally planned.

The timing raised the possibility that the princes of the church might actually begin voting the same day they are sealed in the Sistine Chapel. They had not been expected to start balloting until Saturday, the day after the conclave begins.

The cardinals also decided that before they begin their deliberations they will concelebrate Mass in St. Peter's Basilica to seek "the help of the Holy Spirit" in electing a new pontiff. It will be the first joint celebration of Mass before the cardinals are sequestered.

The current consensus among Vatican experts and some cardinals is that the voting will be over within three or four days, if that long.

"Many cardinals feel that the conclave will be a short one," one Vatican source said.

Pope Paul VI, a heavy favorite, was elected on the third day and John XXIII, an outside choice, on the fourth in conclaves in which the cardinals voted twice a day. This time, although there appeared to be no single front-runner, there will be four ballots daily to further facilitate an election.

Vatican sources said the 19-day interregnum after the death of Pope Paul Aug. 6 and before the conclave enables the cardinals to huddle informally, perhaps narrowing the list of candidates or "papabili."

The strongest contenders usually mentioned are Italians, including Cardinals Sergio Pignedoli, 68, Sebastiano Baggio, 65 and Giovanni Benelli, 57. Among the non-Italians cited as "papabili" are Eduardo Pironio, 57, of Argentina and Johannes Willebrands, 68, of the Netherlands.

Ninty-five cardinals and thousands of worshippers attended a funeral Mass Friday in St. Peter's Basilica for Cardinal Yu Pin of China. The exiled archbishop of Nanking, who resided on the Nationalist Chinese island of Taiwan, died at the Vatican Wednesday after a heart attack. After the service his body was sent to Taipei for burial.

The cardinal's death dropped the number of cardinals voting for the new pope to 111.
