Isaac Asimov

Author Asimov dies

NEW YORK — Isaac Asimov, whose nearly 500 books ranged from science fiction foretelling an era in which mankind and benign robots spread across the galaxy to science fact, histories and humor, died Monday at age 72. He died of heart and kidney failure at New York University Hospital, said his brother, Stanley Asimov, a vice president of Newsday. The most popular of Asimov's novels and stories were excursions into a future in which Earth is forgotten by a humanity that spreads through the stars, ruled by a galactic "Foundation" and served by robots. Asimov also was one of the most widely read popularizers of science fact, as well as a prolific writer on subjects that amused or interested him, including literature, humor and opera, light and grand.

Administration supports Pa.'s abortion-curbs law

WASHINGTON (AP) — Seeking to overturn the Supreme Court's 1973 ruling legalizing abortion, the Bush administration asked the court Monday to uphold a Pennsylvania law that imposes a 24-hour waiting period and requires women to notify their husbands before ending a pregnancy.

In a friend-of-the-court brief, the Justice Department reiterated its longstanding position that women do not have a fundamental right to have an abortion and that the 1973 decision in Roe vs. Wade was wrongly decided.

The brief filed by Solicitor General Kenneth W. Starr asked the high court to uphold Pennsylvania's law and argued that states could impose even stricter curbs.

The Justice Department said the court could impose an outright ban on abortions because

Clinton, Brown trade jabs; Tsongas might be factor

NEW YORK (AP) — Democrats Bill Clinton and Jerry Brown traded a final barrage of charges Monday but then shook hands on the final day of campaigning before high-stakes primaries in New York, Wisconsin and Kansas.

"This is now for the voters to decide," Clinton said. "We each argue that we have better plans for change."

Both candidates said Paul Tsongas, who dropped out of the race three weeks ago, could receive a substantial number of votes in New York, the biggest prize in today's balloting with 244 delegates.

The state is crucial for both active candidates: front-runner

High court's rule tightens 'sting' limits

■ Supreme Court, by 5-4 vote, overturns a federal pornography conviction on grounds of entrapment.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court on Monday limited some undercover "sting" operations when it ruled that a Nebraska farmer was entrapped by postal agents who coaxed him for two years to buy mail-order child pornography.

By a 5-4 vote, the justices said the farmer lacked predisposition to commit a crime and only purchased the contraband material after the prolonged solicitation of the government.

While the ruling is a defeat for law enforcement officials and a surprise from an increasingly conservative court, its impact could prove limited.

The court's four dissenters said the decision is a major departure that could hobble investigators. But the majority said the ruling represents no change from standards that have let the government conduct sweeping undercover investigations into political corruption, drug dealing and fencing of stolen goods.

Legal experts, acknowledging surprise at the outcome, said the decision bars "relentless" pursuit of people but will not hamper legitimate law enforcement.

Justice Byron R. White wrote for the court, "In their zeal to enforce the law, government agents may not originate a criminal design, implant in an innocent person's mind the disposition to commit a criminal act and then induce commission of the crime so that the government may prosecute."

He was joined by Justices Harry A. Blackmun, John Paul Stevens, David H. Souter and Clarence Thomas.

Thomas' vote surprised many because the newest justice generally has taken a tough approach to crime and punishment.

United Way: We serve Midland

By Debbie Lincecum

Local United Way officials said they hope the scandal involving a former national president won't discourage Midlanders from giving to the charity.

"The people we're punishing if we don't give, are the people we serve," said Jane Wolf, executive director.

A report released last week showed William Aramony, former president of United Way of America, misspent the organization's funds, among other questionable practices.

"But what the United Way is really about is the 36,000 (local) people who needed help last year," said Charles Spence, Reporter-Telegram publisher and volunteer chair of the agency's

Union workers defy Caterpillar ultimatum

EAST PEORIA, Ill. (AP) — Caterpillar Inc. said nearly 400 United Auto Workers crossed picket lines Monday, but thousands more defied a company ultimatum to return to work or risk losing their jobs.

Union officials disputed the company's figures, saying only a few dozen union members crossed the lines.

The strike by 13,000 Illinois employees of Caterpillar, the world's largest manufacturer of earth-moving equipment, began Nov. 3. The plants have been staffed by 4,000 reassigned salaried and management personnel.

Supporters blame Tower's 2nd wife for circulating stories

EDITOR'S NOTE: He was a Bible-quoting, hymn-singing U.S. senator accused of being a hard-drinking, skirt-chasing Lothario. A Republican from a Democratic state, he was British in appearance but Texan at heart. John Tower was often contradictory and always controversial. But when he died a year ago, his remarkable legacy was all but lost in the plane crash that killed him. Part 3 of a five-part series.

By Mike Cochran
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — One person caught up in the John Tower media innuendo was Kim Garven, a Texan who worked for Tower the last seven years of his life and who remains fiercely loyal.

She was one of two secretaries Tower took with him to Geneva for the strategic arms negotiations. A story leaked to the press implied that Tower was sexually involved with two secretaries, allegations never proved and vehemently denied.

Tower was furious, Ms. Garven said, which was borne out in his book.

Condemning the report as an astounding lie, Tower said: "Of all the things that were said during the confirmation, it was the one that made me the angriest. Innocent people were being vilified in order to damage me."

When a television reporter telephoned Ms. Garven and questioned her about the allegations, she was caught by surprise. But only for a moment. Turning to a companion, she said:

"Somebody take this phone before I say something I shouldn't."

Almost daily, she said, "We were dodging bullets. It wasn't exciting and it wasn't fun. It was just unfortunate and unfair."

The Pentagon hassle led CBS, at the end of the "Face the Nation" program, to revive Barry Goldwater's memorable line:

"If they chased every man or woman out of this town who had shacked up with somebody else or gotten drunk, there'd be no government."

One of the most bizarre stories put Tower in a private home near River Oaks Country Club in Houston and dancing with a Russian ballerina purported to be his mistress. According to the unsubstantiated account, Tower and the young lady climbed atop a piano and began to

Military detains critics as Peru's constitution is suspended

LIMA, Peru (AP) — The military and President Alberto Fujimori shut down magazines and radio stations and detained opposition politicians Monday after suspending the constitution and sending tanks to surround Congress.

The United States called Fujimori's state of emergency declaration "regrettable" and cut aid to Peru. Latin American leaders, fearing a return to dictatorship after a decade of democratization in the region, condemned the move as a "classic coup."

Soldiers halted cars and searched civilians on Lima's outskirts and patrolled in force downtown. Parliamentary leaders were under house arrest and former President Alan Garcia went into hiding.

As Fujimori swore in three new Cabinet members at the presidental palace Monday night, across town lawmakers gathered but were kept from entering a hall by troops.

A congresswoman slapped a soldier, and a tear gas grenade was fired into the crowd.

Sen. Raul Ferrero rushed forward and was beaten down with nighsticks. Other lawmakers moved to help him up, and another politician was hit. Police fired into the air, sending reporters and bystanders ducking for cover behind cars.

"We will meet again. in public, tomorrow!" shouted Aurelio Loret de Mola, the vice president of the Chamber of Deputies, with gas-induced tears streaming down his face. "If they stop us, we will meet again the next day."

Journalists were under close watch: at The Associated Press office, three soldiers in olive uniforms watched cartoons on television through the day, resting their Belgian-made rifles against a desk.

Fujimori justified the state of emergency saying legislative and judicial corruption were shackling his efforts to rouse Peru from a deep recession and combat a 12-year-old guerrilla insurgency that has shifted from mountain strongholds to Lima shantytowns.

Nearly 25,000 people have died in political violence since the Shining Path took up arms in 1980.

The Shining Path has been seeking to provoke a military coup as part of its strategy. Its hope is that a repressive military regime will push Peruvians to support its insurgency.

Fujimori has lacked control of Congress since taking office in July 1990, and early on forged an alliance with the military. In recent months he had been warring with Congress, and legislators had begun rescinding presidential decrees.

The military, which ruled Peru from 1968 to 1980 and remains the leading institutional power in this country of 22 million people, said the emergency decree would speed economic recovery, put down the insurgency and rebuild government institutions.

Many Peruvians have been unhappy with Congress, which they view as corrupt. The judiciary has been criticized for setting accused guerrillas free on technical grounds.

Fujimori promised a plebiscite for a "new legislative structure." He gave no date for the vote.

The announcement came just after the arrival of Bernard Aronson, top State Department official for Latin America. U.S. officials in Washington said Aronson would suspend his trip and return home.

The White House suspended the $45 million of the $237 million in 1991 military and economic aid to Peru that had yet to be disbursed.

U.S. advisers work with Peru in its coca-producing jungles, the biggest source for the world's cocaine. Fujimori, concerned about the livelihood of 250,000 Peruvian peasants who produce coca, expressed unhappiness in February with President Bush's drug war strategy.

Fujimori's moves heightened fears of the military on the continent that first were raised by an attempted coup in Venezuela in February.

The military closed the magazines Caretas and Si, and soldiers sacked the home of a Cable News Network stringer, Fernando Yovera, who was Interior Ministry spokesman during Garcia's presidency.

Yeltsin wins first battle in Congress

MOSCOW (AP) — President Boris Yeltsin won an initial victory in the Russian Congress on Monday by keeping a no-confidence vote off the agenda, but opponents said they would continue trying to reduce his powers.

Yeltsin clearly did not have firm control over the 1,046-member Congress of People's Deputies, meeting this week for the first time since the collapse of the Soviet Union last December.

The Congress appeared to be about evenly divided between supporters of Yeltsin and opponents, mainly former Communists, who want to slow his economic reforms, force his Cabinet to resign and adopt a constitution that removes his broad decree-making powers.

Yeltsin said Sunday he might "correct" some of his reforms, hinting at wage and price controls, but he said it would be "suicide" to transfer power to parliament because it would cripple the transition to a free market.

Yeltsin is in no danger of losing the presidency. But he could be pushed — either during or after the Congress — into giving up his post as prime minister and thoroughly revamping the Cabinet that he lightly shuffled last week.

Monday's voting gave no clear sign which way the Congress would go.

U.S. off target on bomb claims, inspections show

WASHINGTON (AP) — More than a year later, it is clear that the Bush administration was off target in its Gulf War claims that allied bombing "pretty well eliminated" Saddam Hussein's nuclear capability.

Some important nuclear sites were hardly touched, U.N. inspectors have discovered. In other cases, buildings were hit but the equipment inside unharmed.

Some targets were damaged or destroyed even though allied war planners didn't realize the targets were tied to the nuclear program.

Two small Iraqi nuclear reactors were demolished early in the aerial bombardment, but since the war's end 13 months ago the world has learned that Saddam's atomic ambition was far grander than the war planners imagined.

"We didn't understand what targets were important," said Gary Milhollin, director of the Wisconsin Project on Nuclear Arms Control, a private group in Washington.

During the war, administration officials gave the impression that the intensive allied bombing campaign had wiped out the threat of a nuclear armed Saddam.

"We've pretty well eliminated his nuclear research and production capabilities," Defense Secretary Dick Cheney declared on Feb. 3, 17 days into the air campaign.

Two days later Cheney said: "His nuclear capability has been pretty well demolished."

Asked about the administration's early claims of success, Cheney's spokesman, Pete Williams, said last week: "We know now that we didn't hit as much as we could have. They concealed a lot."

He added: "But the fact is we stopped it in its tracks, and the U.N. inspection team is dismantling the rest of it."

The International Atomic Energy Agency on March 25 ordered the destruction of key buildings and equipment at al Atheer, a weapons laboratory and production site that escaped nearly unscathed during allied air strikes. Inspectors are scheduled to arrive at the site 20 miles southwest of Baghdad on Tuesday to supervise the demolition.

Al Atheer and other elements of the Iraqi nuclear program remain standing not because allied bombers missed them. The allies didn't target the facilities because they didn't know they existed — or didn't realize their nuclear role.

"Our major failure was an intelligence failure," said William Arkin, director of military research at Greenpeace USA. Arkin visited sites throughout Iraq after the war and has studied the effects of the allied bombing.

The U.S. military also was mistaken in thinking that bombing alone would end Iraq's nuclear potential, Arkin said.

"If you want an analogy, you can say al Atheer is the Los Alamos of the Iraqi nuclear program," said nuclear physicist Paul Zimmerman, referring to the U.S. weapons design laboratory that assembled the first atomic bombs in the 1940s.

U.S. intelligence knew of the existence of al Atheer before the start of the war. But the 100-building complex was not among 31 targets in Iraq listed as related to Iraq's nuclear, chemical or biological weapons development programs, according to sources familiar with Air Force target planning documents.

Al Atheer was described on the target list as "Al Atheer Materials Research Center" in the category of military production and support, one source said. It was lightly bombed.

Of the 31 targets believed to be related to Iraq's weapons of mass destruction, only three were identified on the target list as nuclear-related, sources said. They were Tuwaitha, the main nuclear research and production center; al Qaim, which produced a building block for enriched uranium as well as phosphate fertilizer; and a uranium processing plant at al Jezira.

RULING: Farmer was entrapped, high court says

(From 1A)

for the dissenters, said the ruling "redefines predisposition and introduces a new requirement that government sting operations have a reasonable suspicion of illegal activity before contacting a suspect."

She was joined by Chief Justice William H. Rehnquist and Justices Antonin Scalia and Anthony M. Kennedy.

Legal experts said O'Connor exaggerated the impact, and they hailed the ruling.

"There are good guidelines here that will protect some people who need protection," said Paul Marcus, a law professor at the College of William & Mary. "You can't pursue someone so relentlessly."

The decision will not affect such undercover operations as Abscam, which ensnared members of Congress who accepted bribes, or the investigation that resulted in the drug conviction of District of Columbia Mayor Marion Barry, he said.

William Greenhalgh, a law professor at Georgetown University, said, "If the Justice Department is educable, it may well send out a memo to all agencies that they'll have to be a lot more careful."

But Assistant Attorney General Robert S. Mueller III said the court's decision was "generally limited" to the particulars of the Nebraska case, and "will not affect the government's sting operations in the areas of narcotics trafficking and similar crimes — sting operations that have long been upheld by the courts."

The case stems from the investigation of Keith Jacobson, 61, of Newman Grove, Neb.

Police found Jacobson's name on a San Diego, Calif., pornography bookstore's mailing list in 1984. He had ordered two nudist magazines from the store that were legal to purchase.

Postal inspectors continuously solicited Jacobson through the mail to buy illegal pornography. Investigators said he voluntarily responded to mailed questionnaires asking him about his interests in sexually explicit material.

He was convicted of receiving in 1987 a copy of a magazine called "Boys Who Love Boys." In the magazine, "11-year-old and 14-year-old boys get it on in every way possible," according to a catalog description.

Jacobson was sentenced to two years probation and 250 hours of community service. He lost his job as a school-bus driver the morning after he was charged.

The government said sting operations are vital to its attack on the clandestine "kiddie porn" industry and the sexual exploitation of children. Without undercover work aimed at recipients, officials say, distributors of the material can easily escape detection and prosecution.

PRIMARY: Rivals swap jabs on eve of crucial vote

(From 1A)

Clinton is looking for a convincing win to diminish the significance of Brown's challenge; Brown wants a good showing to affirm his status as a serious candidate.

New York has proved a rough-and-tumble battleground over the last two weeks. Every point of contention has been magnified by the aggressive Manhattan media as the candidates jockeyed for support among fractious voting blocs including blacks, labor and Jewish voters.

Pollster Lee Miringoff of the Marist College Institute for Public Opinion called it a close contest, with Clinton slightly ahead and an unusually high 20 percent of voters still undecided.

"I think, at this point, Clinton has to have a very good day to reach 50 (percent)," Miringoff said. "That's because it's become a 2½-person race" when Tsongas is taken into consideration.

Tsongas, the former Massachusetts senator, suspended his campaign nearly three weeks ago but is urging people to vote for him and appears to be toying with a reentry. Over the weekend, he promised an announcement on Wednesday.

Clinton, after amassing a huge delegate lead last month with victories on Super Tuesday and then in Michigan and Illinois, was forced to take Brown on after the former California governor squeaked past him in Connecticut's primary and added victories in Vermont and Alaska.

Overall, Clinton has 1,078 delegates to 439 for Tsongas and 165 for Brown.

Brown called the New York race "very close" but sought to lower expectations. "We'd like one more vote than the other side but anything the voters give us will give us the encouragement to go on," he said.

At a statehouse rally in Albany where a number of Tsongas signs bobbed in the crowd, Brown said a vote for him would send the signal, "Get off the dime, Washington, we want a country that works for all of us."

Clinton and Brown went head-to-head Monday in a televised mini-debate on NBC's "Today" show to start their final day of campaigning.

Brown jabbed at Clinton for playing golf at an all-white club, saying it "validates institutional racism." That drew an angry retort from the Arkansas governor, who then swiped at Brown on race issues, too.

"Jerry Brown knows I'm not racist," Clinton said. "I have demonstrated in a Southern climate all my life a deep commitment to civil rights and equal opportunity."

Clinton then recalled a 1975 remark Brown made, quoting the former California governor as saying, "We ought to let the white kids teach the black kids to read, the black kids teach the white kids to fight.' That was a horrible thing for him to say. I did not run a television ad on it."

"You did the one (ad) lying about my abortion position," Brown shot back. At one point, Clinton interjected, "Don't scream, Jerry."

But right after that hot exchange, the rivals engaged in a polite discussion on "Donahue."

CURBS: Administration asks court to uphold law

(From 1A)

"the protection of human life — in or out of the womb — is certainly the most compelling interest that a state can advance."

The brief said that if the court declined to overturn the 1973 decision it should apply the reasoning adopted in its 1989 decision in Webster vs. Reproductive Health Services and find that Pennsylvania's abortion law is valid because it advances a "legitimate state interest."

If it takes this narrower approach, the court should "make clear that the liberty interest recognized in Webster does not rise to the exceptional level of a fundamental right."

The administration's filing drew praise from the National Right to Life Committee, Inc. By adopting the Justice Department's position, the high court "would effectively overturn Roe vs. Wade and allow the states to directly limit the reasons for which abortions may be performed," the group's legislative director, Douglas Johnson said in a statement.

The Justice Department action came one day after an estimated 500,000 protesters marched in Washington in the biggest demonstration ever held by abortion rights' activists.

Pennsylvania's law is valid because it advances legitimate state concerns that women make informed decisions before having an abortion, the Justice Department's brief said.

The provision requiring a woman to notify her husband of plans to have an abortion "can help protect the life of a fetus, the integrity of the family unit, and the husband's interests in procreation within marriage and the potential life of his unborn child."

Planned Parenthood and other abortion rights organizations appealed to the Supreme Court last year after a federal appellate court upheld most provisions of the law, including the 24-hour waiting period and one that required parental permission for teen-agers to obtain abortions.

But the 3rd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals struck down the spousal notification provision, saying it imposed an undue burden on a woman's right to have an abortion under the high court's 1973 decision in Roe vs. Wade.

The Justice Department brief said the 3rd Circuit decision was incorrect by applying the "undue burden" test enunciated by Justice Sandra Day O'Connor in a concurring opinion in the 1989 case.

Because abortion is not a fundamental right, the Justice Department said, the court should apply a more deferential standard to state legislatures when reviewing abortion laws.

DEFY: Thousands of workers ignore ultimatum

(From 1A)

patterned contract.

Both sides said they were pleased with Monday's events. The company said it would begin hiring replacement workers in a few weeks.

"With the unemployment rate at 9 percent in Illinois, I don't think we'll have much trouble," said Caterpillar Vice President Wayne Zimmerman.

Although only about 3 percent of the strikers crossed picket lines, Zimmerman called it "a positive sign" for the company. He said union workers have about three weeks to reclaim their jobs before the first replacement workers arrive in the factories.

In the coming days, "I think we'll get a good majority of our UAW people back," the company's president, Jerry Flaherty, predicted at a morning news conference with Zimmerman. "We won't have to hire many replacements at all."

Union officials predicted the union still would negotiate a contract.

"We're going to win," said UAW secretary-treasurer Bill Casstevens as he walked through thousands of cheering union members who mobbed three gates at Caterpillar's huge East Peoria complex.

"We won Round 1. But the battle's not over," he added. "Practically nobody crossed. Just a trickle here and there. A handful at a few places."

At Caterpillar plants in several Illinois communities, thousands rallied in advance of the 7:30 a.m. deadline the company had set for the workers' return.

The rallies were peaceful and the strikers jubilant but vocal in their defiance of Caterpillar.

"This is no game. This is a war to get a contract," said Tom Shults, a 28-year employee dressed in fatigues and carrying a bullhorn to shout at "scabs" driving past.

Some of the UAW members who crossed picket lines rode in car pools with the salaried and management personnel who have run the plants during the strike.

Strikers and company security photographed each other with still cameras and video cameras. The passing of each car was recorded and scrutinized with binoculars. License plates of each vehicle were copied by union members.

Bob Hughes, a 24-year Caterpillar veteran, cursed at a friend and fellow UAW member who entered the Aurora plant by car.

"It makes me sick," he said. "They are screwing my family and they're screwing themselves. If we hold out another week we can win this thing. This is the last card that Caterpillar has to play."

Caterpillar spokesman Bill Lane said the confrontation is far from over.

ATTORNEY: Stretcher dives into office's tasks been talking on the phone about once a week or so."

Stretcher was hired Jan. 23 to replace David Reagan, under whom Stretcher worked for several years. In fact, Stretcher got his start in the profession as a prosecutor in Midland Municipal Court in 1983.

Now he's assigned to supervise a staff of five attorneys, overseeing the legal aspect of city operations. Stretcher said there is a legal issue in almost everything the city does, a fact he finds somewhat distressing.

"In the society we live in, there are getting to be more and more legal ramifications," he said. "It's a shame cities need so many lawyers. But, in reality, you'd better consider the legal aspect of every question."

Still, the work excites him.

While working in Midland, Stretcher tried his hand at administration, moving briefly to an assistant city manager position. But he soon was back in the attorney's office.

"It's always a challenge, always something new," he said. "That's why we like it."

After eight years in Midland, Stretcher left in July to become city attorney in Sugar Land, a suburb of Houston. But in January, hearing of Reagan's plans to leave, he said the prospect of returning to the Tall City was too much to pass up.

A native of Millsap, Stretcher received a bachelor's of science degree at East Texas State University. He earned a law degree at Texas Tech in 1981.

Stretcher and his staff will spend the next few days dividing up the work among the various ongoing projects.

"I don't think I'll change much," Stretcher said. "There may be a few minor changes, but nothing drastic."

board of directors.

"The United Way is about helping a battered wife, a rape victim or a child," Spence said.

He expressed confidence that the national organization's leaders, volunteers from prominent corporations and groups, would make sure abuses will never happen again.

"We're all mad, we're all disappointed with what has happened," Ms. Wolf said. "But we can't forget all the good the United Way can do."

She praised the national organization's commitment to new technology and expanding its services to local agencies.

"There's a lot of good coming out of the United Way of America," Ms. Wolf said.

Since the controversy, national board members have agreed to implement new controls on spending and formed a search committee to find a new president. They are implementing changes in the organization's structure, enlarging the scope of the board and planning more frequent meetings.

United Way of Midland's dues this year would amount to about $27,000 — less than one cent of each dollar given, and make up a fraction of the national organization's $27 million budget, officials said.

Spence said the board of directors has not yet agreed to pay the national dues this year.

An independent, non-profit organization, the United Way of Midland has its own charter and by-laws. It has been soliciting funds for community services since 1945.

Midlanders with questions about the charity can call the office, Ms. Wolf said. The public also is welcome to attend the local agency's next board of directors meeting on April 16 at the Girl Scout program center.

"I don't want to ... minimize what has happened," Ms. Wolf said. "I'm just so concerned that we all remember what we're about."

TOWER: U.S. senator's death may have been a metaphor of his life

(From 1A)

disrobe.

"Daddy take his clothes off?" said Tower's daughter, Penny Cook. "Hell, you can't even get him out of his suit jacket in public!"

Supporters blamed Tower's second wife, Washington lawyer Lilla Burt Cummings, for circulating stories of his drinking and womanizing. Her divorce petition did give rise to such suspicions.

They had married in 1977, separated in 1985 and divorced in 1988.

Alleging "marital misconduct," she requested depositions from a Texas socialite, a television personality and a maid hired by her husband in Geneva.

While acknowledging infidelities in his first marriage, Tower said he did not run around on Ms. Cummings.

"Proving that I had been unfaithful to my second wife would have been impossible because it never happened," he said.

However, he credited Ms. Cummings for curbing his drinking. She gave him an ultimatum: Either her or Johnnie Walker Black.

HE MADE the wrong choice, say Tower's friends, aides and colleagues.

"Nobody on Tower's staff who went up against Lilla will ever go to hell," said Ms. Garven, "because we've all been there once."

Ms. Cummings, who refused to be interviewed for this article, was banned from Tower's campaign office during the stormy 1978 race against former U.S. Rep Bob Krueger.

When traveling once on Air Force One, she kept President Reagan and the presidential party waiting at the airport half an hour.

"She did it on purpose," Tower's business partner, Larry Nelson, said. "She did it simply to embarrass John and to position herself in his heart and mind as more important than the president."

Perhaps that is why it also has been said that Nancy Reagan disliked her immensely.

"I don't know how to explain Lilla except to say that great men sometimes have great flaws," said Sen. John McCain, R-Ariz., one of Tower's closest friends.

Former aides painfully recall how she fired or drove off some of Tower's top operatives and how it almost cost him the 1978 election against Krueger.

He admitted later he and Lilla made almost every mistake imaginable.

ALTHOUGH TOWER indicated on occasion he was physically drawn to Ms. Cummings, he never said so publicly. In his book, he wrote:

"I was attracted to Lilla for her deep intellectual capacity, her mastery of the English language and her strong personality. We shared many interests and philosophical views. . . ."

Unlike some others, he did not blame her unduly for his downfall.

"I don't so much resent my rejection by the Senate as the way it was done," Tower said, accusing his former colleagues of hypocrisy and betrayal in the defense nomination hearings.

"That left scars that never healed to the day he died," said Dallas attorney and longtime friend Paul Eggers.

The night before the Senate vote on his nomination as defense secretary, Tower and his daughters shared a spaghetti and wine dinner in his hotel suite, recalling family stories and joking about their days on the campaign trail.

In a last-ditch attempt to rescue his nomination, Tower had pledged on national television to give up drinking if he got the defense post.

But he now knew it was over, Ms. Cook said.

"Nobody died and we've still got each other," Jeanne Cox remembers her father saying. "Let's get it over with and get on with our lives."

At 4 p.m. on March 9, 1989, the Senate voted 53-47 to reject the nomination. With a three-vote swing, there would have been a tie. And Vice President Quayle would have cast the pivotal vote on Tower's behalf.

A FOOTNOTE: Sen. Chris Dodd of Connecticut was one of only three Democrats voting for the nominee. In 1967, Tower was one of five who refused to censure his father.

"I did not hold an IOU on Chris, but I did hold an expectation that he would judge me fairly, and I wasn't disappointed," Tower said.

With Ms. Garven at his side, Tower marched silently downstairs to face the press.

He called for an end to the "bitterness, rancor and anger" and thanked the president who nominated him, his old colleagues who supported him and the "thousands of Americans" who encouraged him.

"I will be recorded as the first cabinet nominee in the history of the Republic to be rejected in the first 90 days of a presidency and perhaps be harshly judged," he said.

"And yet there is no finding that I have ever breached established ethical standards or been derelict in my duty."

He said he hoped his successor would be quickly confirmed, wished him Godspeed and walked from the Pentagon for the last time.

"I have never seen anyone trashed on such flimsy evidence," said New Hampshire Republican Sen. Warren Rudman.

On APRIL 5, 1990, the New York Times printed a story in which Tower compared Capitol Hill with Beirut.

In Lebanon, he said, "They hurl a grenade at someone or shoot a machine gun. Up here, it's a little more subtle, but just as ruthless, just as brutal.

"They kill you in a different way."

Precisely one year later, wielding his book in a fight for vindication, his plane went down just short of its destination.

In that context, his death may have been a metaphor of his life. And in one last twist of irony, it was a Georgia senator who brought him down and it was in Georgia where it all ended.

"Without a doubt, he was still battling Nunn," said Nancy Palm, a longtime Houston GOP activist called "Napalm" by friend and foe. "Tower was in Nunn's backyard when he died."

Not altogether humorously, Ms. Garven proposed an alternate title for Tower's book: "I Was Raped by a Nunn."

Nunn declined requests for an interview but recycled a 1991 statement that said in part:

"John Tower was a patriot whose love of country and belief in a strong national defense characterized his many years of distinguished public service."

Iraq repression of Kurds 'ugly'

When Iraq's powerful, modern army wages high-tech war against overmatched Kurdish guerrillas, killing and uprooting innocent civilian populations, Americans know what to call it. Ugly repression, verging perhaps on genocide.

What then should Americans think when Turkish forces attack Kurds in southeastern Turkey? Or when Turkish planes bomb Iraqi Kurdish areas, as they have at least five times in the past month?

The American response has been muted, for understandable reasons. Turkey has a democratically elected government. It is a NATO ally and a valued member of the coalition against Saddam Hussein. And it faces an armed Kurdish guerrilla movement operating out of sanctuaries in Iraq and Syria.

But none of this justifies Turkey's ugly repression against Kurdish civilians. In Turkey as in Iraq, an abused people desperately needs the international community to demand restraint.

The Kurds, a non-Arab people related to the Iranians, briefly enjoyed recognition as a separate nation after World War I, when the defeated Ottoman Empire was subdivided by the victorious Allies. But under pressure from Turkey, provisions for an independent Kurdistan were abandoned.

Instead the Kurds became a persecuted minority scattered under several flags. More than 10 million live in Turkey, about 4 million each in Iran and Iraq, the remainder in Syria and the nearby republics of the former Soviet Union.

The Kurds have suffered most in Iraq, where outsiders — including the U.S. — have used them repeatedly as strategic pawns, then abandoned them to Baghdad's cruel revenge. They've been driven from their villages, intentionally starved, fired on from the air and the ground, even massacred with poison gas. Now, in blatant violation of last year's Security Council resolution, the Iraqi Army again advances on Kurdish lines.

Turkey's huge Kurdish population has fared better by comparison, but its situation is deteriorating rapidly. Turkish Kurds have been subject to systematic human rights violations, including torture. And now they're caught between military and guerrilla fire.

In both countries, Kurds are in acute danger. The international community is not required to support separatist demands for a Kurdish state. But it is morally bound to demand that both Baghdad and Ankara cease their ugly repression of Kurdish civilians before it becomes genocide.

ANOTHER VIEW

Scandal not about checks

Deluged by angry constituents, Congress is hurrying to cut back its perquisites.

The Senate stationery store will stop selling gifts at cost, House members will lose free medical prescriptions, the cost to use the House gym will rise to $400 per year and there is talk of putting clamps on foreign travel.

These moves come in the wake of the House bank scandal in which hundreds of members were caught writing insufficient checks without penalty.

If the business of the nation were being conducted efficiently and laws passed by Congress were reasonable, few voters would be unhappy with giving legislators the minor perks that should come with the job.

But that is not the case. The United States economy is in decline largely because the heavy hand of the federal government restricts and complicates its activities at every turn. The nation's total debt is approaching $4 trillion and rising by $500 billion a year and Congress can't bring itself to face the problem, much less solve it.

In short, the nation's business is in horrible disarray and Congress is mostly responsible.

The uproar isn't really about bad checks; it is about bad government. And cutting a few minor perks just for show won't change that.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Tuesday, April 7, the 98th day of 1992. There are 268 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On April 7, 1862, Union forces led by Gen. Ulysses S. Grant defeated the Confederates at the Battle of Shiloh in Tennessee.

On this date:

In 1927, an audience in New York saw an image of Commerce Secretary Herbert Hoover in the first successful long-distance demonstration of television.

In 1939, Italy invaded Albania, which offered only token resistance. (Less than a week later, Italy annexed Albania.)

In 1947, auto pioneer Henry Ford died in Dearborn, Mich., at age 83.

In 1949, the Rodgers and Hammerstein musical "South Pacific" opened on Broadway.

In 1953, the United Nations General Assembly elected Dag Hammarskjold of Sweden to be secretary-general.

In 1957, the last of New York's electric trolleys completed its final run from Queens to Manhattan.

In 1966, the United States recovered a hydrogen bomb it had lost off the coast of Spain.

In 1976, China's leadership deposed Deputy Prime Minister Deng Xiaoping and appointed Hua Kuo-feng prime minister and first deputy chairman of the Communist Party.

In 1983, space shuttle astronauts Story Musgrave and Don Peterson took the first U.S. space walk in almost a decade as they worked in the open cargo bay of Challenger for nearly four hours.

Ten years ago: Britain announced it would sink any Argentine ships that came within 200 miles of the disputed Falkland Islands, beginning April 12.

F.A. Hayek becomes a prophet vindicated

The petty things we mortals tuck away in our mental attics! From a lunch years ago with F.A. Hayek, the world's then-greatest living economist, the detail I recall most vividly is how, trying to pour cream into his dark-brown coffee cup, he missed the cup and creamed the saucer.

Murchison

Why embalm this preposterous detail? I think I know. It may well have been the only time in his long and glorious career that Friedrich Hayek, winner of the Nobel Prize for economics, missed the mark.

Hayek, who died in late March, was right when the world was wrong — right, moreover, about the right things, such as the harm and futility of government economic planning and the necessity of a climate of freedom for the cultivation of human dignity and prosperity.

Just how right he was, the Soviet Union — which abominated him — proved obligingly by collapsing in the last two years of Hayek's life.

He was a smallish, rather wizened-looking man with a white mustache: not at all voluble, as I recall; seemingly unconcerned with overwhelming listeners by the force of his genius. This marked him down as a true prophet rather than a publicity-courting celebrity. He knew that ideas do not depend on rhetorical force but on internal validity.

Hayek came to international notice in 1944 — one of the grimmest years of a grim century — with a profoundly observant book, "The Road to Serfdom." He meant it originally as "a warning to the socialist intelligentsia of England," who were then gearing up to extinguish as much residual human liberty as they could uncover and stamp on. Reader's Digest gave the book Page 1 treatment, and from there it went 'round the world — alas, to less than universal acclaim.

The 1940s, of where-are-you-now-Joe-Dimaggio fame, were unkind not just to the human victims of war but to human aspirations. The Nazi state and the Soviet state, so often portrayed as opposites, were of a piece: heavy-booted, domineering, controlling. The British socialists had a better cultivated regard for freedom but withal a totalitarian streak. In America, land of the free, the New Deal and Fair Deal presupposed the ability of elites to maintain prosperity through collective action.

Hayek understood better than most in his day the folly of regulation and government control. He had after all, in his Austrian youth, been a socialist! No omnicompetent state could decide the best use for resources; only individuals, acting to please themselves, could effectively organize an economy.

Thanks in no small way to Hayek, we know this now. Or do we? Hayek, steeped in the ways of government and bureaucracy, could point to the irrationality of government interference with economic endeavor. But for all the breadth of his learning, he never gave a thoroughly satisfactory account of why this same irrationality persists. If we know so much more than we knew in 1944, why does federal spending represent a quarter of this country's wealth? Why is the federal bureaucracy larger than the U.S. military? Why are taxes and regulation increasing, rather than decreasing? Why do politicians clamor for even more of both commodities?

No one ever went broke, P.T. Barnum observed, underestimating the taste of the public. Or its cupidity, its forgetfulness? I exclude no one here. We are all of us members of this vast public. We love freedom in principle; in practice we tend to marginalize it: to whittle away at it with tariffs, subsidies, regulations, and the like. Just one swig from the bottle of collectivism to make us feel better; the last one — honest! — then it's back to freedom. Sure.

Churchill came close to an accurate diagnosis when he described socialism as "the creed of envy." Envy, indeed: the desire for that which others have; a sin stemming from a still-greater one — pride.

Brown, Perot would be better in White House

With Jerry Brown at bat and H. Ross Perot on deck, the Politics-As-Usual team will have a tough time pitching themselves out of this inning.

We better all hope they don't and that either Brown or Perot ends up in the White House. I can think of four trillion reasons why this is so.

Reese

Now you may think there is a huge gap between former California Gov. Jerry Brown and Texas billionaire H. Ross Perot. On the single most important issue, there is no gap at all. Both of these men, from their own different perspectives, recognize that the United States is doomed if we pursue politics as usual. Both recognize there is a nation-threatening crisis in our political system. Both are honest men. Neither one is for sale.

Just recognizing the problem not only unites them but puts them both ten steps ahead of all the rest of the candidates. As one or the other observed, the main difference between Bill Clinton and George Bush is that one of them likes the job and one of them would like to have it.

Brown continues to press Clinton in the Democratic primaries and Perot has promised that if ordinary people get him on the ballot in 50 states as an independent, he will run for president, finance his own campaign, and ask of people only $5 per head as interest money.

As Perot himself recognizes, the Republican and Democratic parties have erected a complex obstacle course all third parties must run before they can reach the ballot. The odds are against a Perot candidacy.

Brown, limiting himself to $100 contributions, also has an obstacle course to run — Clinton's organization, big buck contributors, and big media lovers — but Brown has outlasted two senators and a former senator, who all withdrew or suspended their campaigns in defeat and in debt.

Let's face it. If we were Las Vegas types, we'd bet on Clinton for the Democratic nod and Bush for the general election win. By the time those experts in nastiness, the Republicans, get through dropping shoes on Clinton, he'll think he's Imelda Marcos and start shopping around for a sex change operation. We'll have four more years of bad government. Hanging over us, like the old specter of nuclear war, will be Dan Quayle, ready to be shown where the Oval Office is located should Bush's health and our luck fail completely.

But we are not Las Vegas types. We are citizens who are frightened about the prospects of politics as usual. We are people, I hope, who would rather vote for the right man than for the man the odds-makers pick to win.

I'm rooting for Jerry Brown, but if you like Perot, get out there and get him on the ballot. It would be wonderful for a change for the American voters to have a choice between two good men rather than having to vote for a marginal difference. If all else fails and the choice is Bush or a marginal difference, I'll take the marginal difference.

As for the four trillion reasons why we can no longer afford politics as usual, those represent the accumulated deficits. We can say we owe $4 trillion but the number has no existential meaning for us. We really can't comprehend it.

It is expressed numerically as $4,000,000,000,000. Still, hard to comprehend. I can tell you this. Very soon Americans will be taxed $300 billion just to pay one year's interest on this debt that is owed to banks, foreign and domestic, and other wealthy individuals and corporate investors, foreign and domestic.

What $4 trillion in accumulated deficits means is that the government has sold our children, our grandchildren and our great-grandchildren into a lifetime of tax-bondage. They will be taxed heavily to pay it and they will get nothing for it. If we don't change direction, we'll join the Soviet Union on the dust heap of history.

Stock car racing drives politically correct away

Darlington, S.C. — I've had some great memories in my life. I played golf with Arnold Palmer, I saw Pavorotti in the park in London. I heard Willie Nelson sing "Precious Memories" in the backyard of the Carter White House. I once took the "Take It off, Take it All Off" Noxema shaving cream girl to dinner.

But Sunday.

Grizzard

Sunday, I was the grand marshal of the TranSouth 500 automobile race at the historic Darlington Motor Speedway.

How I became grand marshal of the TranSouth 500 automobile race is a long story.

I think it's because I write a lot about how much I love the South, and there are very few things more Southern than a stock car race.

A politically correct person would have had a heart attack here. There were more Confederate flags waving in the cool, spring air than were carried across that open field during Pickett's deathly charge at Gettysburg.

Lots of guys drinking beer with their shirts off. Lots of girls you could look at and just know they would pronounce dance as "daintz."

Good people, good people, even if they are a little off in the P.C. department.

People with whom I grew up. People I'd still pick if I were involved in anything from a broken beer bottle fight to a rat killing.

So, on national television, as grand marshal I got on the public address system to tell the drivers they could crank.

Normally, one says, "Gentlemen, start your engines."

I tried a little Southern flair and said, "Gentlemen, y'all can crank 'em up."

It worked. About 8-zillion horsepower went off behind me. The ground trembled.

Next, I had to ride in the pace car that led the racers onto the track.

I was in a convertible. I was supposed to sit up on the trunk and wave at the crowd.

A large man got into the back seat with me.

"I'm here to hold you in the car," he said.

Hold me in the car?

"We're going to go pretty fast," he explained. "Don't want anybody flying out of the car."

What have I gotten myself into?

So there I am sitting on the back of a car with a man holding my leg and all that horsepower snarling and snorting behind me.

What grit I didn't get in my mouth, I got into my eyes.

I waved at the crowd. The crowd waved back. I'm certain they thought, "Who is this idiot?"

We picked up speed. My mouth is full of grit and I'm blind. We started at the back of pit row. We pulled off the track and back into the front of the pits. Behind me it sounded like World War II.

The race cars continued on the track. All except one, which had pulled back into the pit with some sort of mechanical problem.

And had its nose on our bumper.

I am three feet from the front of a stock car barreling down on me.

"Who was that?" I asked, once I was safely out of the convertible.

"They call him 'Swervin' Ernie,' " I was told.

Oh.

I watched the start of the race from behind the pit wall, just a few feet from the track. A girl gave me a piece of wax and said, "Bite this in two and put a piece in each of your ears. You can go deaf down here."

Stock car racing, which I hadn't been around since I was a kid sportswriter 25 years ago, hadn't changed all that much.

It's still loud, it's still fast, it's still Southern, and it's still the sport of the working man and woman, God bless them all.

You be politically correct. I'll hang out with those who say, "Tars" for "tires," take off their shirts and knock down their suds and love the noise and the furor of stock car racing.

I hadn't realized how much I had missed it.

Group calls for stop to tests on animals

WASHINGTON (AP) — An animals right group on Monday accused the Defense Department of conducting a cruel and wasteful "war on animals" by killing half a million monkeys and other animals each year in secretive research experiments.

The group, In Defense of Animals, urged an immediate moratorium on spending for such research, which is intended to provide information about the effects on soldiers of wounds inflicted by nuclear and conventional weapons.

"The research being done now, as it was in the past, is useless," John Bachman, a retired Air Force officer who spent 10 years working on animal radiation experiments at Brooks Air Force Base told a news conference.

Bachman said there is no reliable correlation between an animal's response to radiation or other wounds and the likely response of a human pilot, soldier or sailor.

"It's an academic pursuit," not one with scientific merit, said Donald Barnes, who spent 16 years as a military psychologist involved in radiation experiments on monkeys and other primates at the School of Aerospace Medicine at Brooks.

Barnes said of his 16-year effort: "It was all in vain, every bit of it."

The rights group released a report accusing the Defense Department of "a pattern of gross neglect and abuse" of animals in research laboratories and a "contempt for civilian oversight" of the projects, which it said cost about $110 million a year. The Pentagon runs 58 military research laboratories.

Defense uses animated tapes to analyze beating

SIMI VALLEY, Calif. (AP) — Defense attorneys gave a preview Monday of expert testimony they want to present on behalf of four police officers charged with beating a motorist. Prosecutors asked that it be barred.

Carley Ward, a biomechanical engineer who applies engineering principles to the human body to analyze injuries, presented computerized videotapes intended to illustrate how hard Officer Laurence Powell struck motorist Rodney King.

The tapes, which weren't shown to the jury, used animation techniques to duplicate the positions of King and Powell when Powell beat the motorist with a police baton.

Using her tapes and other data, including King's X-rays, Ms. Ward concluded the broken bones in King's face weren't caused by Powell's baton but by King's fall to the ground.

Prosecutors asked that Ms. Ward's evidence not be allowed into the trial, saying it didn't meet standards of the scientific community.

The March 3, 1991, beating of King, who is black, by four white officers was videotaped by a bystander and shown repeatedly on television.

On trial are Powell, 29, Officers Theodore Briseno, 39, and Timothy Wind, 31, and Sgt. Stacey Koon, 41.

Another defense witness also has testified King's facial injuries were caused by his fall. Ms. Ward said she reached that conclusion by considering the extent of his injuries.

"They extend from the area under his eye down the side of his face to the upper jaw," she said. "There's extensive fracturing. I believe this is consistent with something that is going to contact that area that is a flat surface."

She said it was possible King suffered a "glancing blow" to the head but asserted Powell wasn't in the right position to hit King with a full power stroke.

Dow demonstrates anti-graffiti paint

SAN FRANCISCO (NYT) — Dow Chemical Co. chemist Donald Schmidt held up a piece of vinyl and drew a felt-tip pen across it.

As the pen skipped across one section without making a mark, he proclaimed the latest, greatest weapon against graffiti: a transparent water-based coating that can be applied easily with spray, brush or roller.

The anti-graffiti paint, seven years in development, is not only kind to the environment, but could lead in a few years to a host of easy-to-clean products, said Schmidt.

Among them are car finishes from which bugs and other road grime wipe off without strong detergents or scrubbing, wallpaper that shows no trace of kids' experiments with lipsticks and nail polish, and — perhaps most important to urban residents — buses and walls that spray paint and oversized felt-tip markers will not mar, Dow representatives said.

Monday's demonstration, which included similar displays of plastics, painted metal and other surfaces that the new material appeared to protect, came on the first day of the annual meeting of the American Chemical Society.

Nonstick coatings to which common paints do not adhere are nothing new, but most of those on the market are hard to apply and are based on chemical solvents that can be noxious or environmentally hazardous.

"More tests are needed, of course," Schmidt said, "but we feel that this new material has very low potential for toxicity."

One thing the material lacks is a simple, catchy name.

Armed robbers steal $1 million from casino

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Gamblers at a crowded casino scattered Monday as robbers set off smoke bombs, grabbed a money bag from an armored car guard and escaped with an estimated $1 million in cash and checks.

Two armed men ignited two smoke bombs just before 8 a.m. and stole a satchel of cash and checks as the guard carried it from the casino cage at the Stardust Hotel.

"People were running through the casino yelling, 'They've got guns. They've got bombs,'" said Pat Shumaker of Chattanooga, Tenn. "People were running through the kitchen, running for the exits, hiding behind tables."

The two men grabbed the satchel, knocked the guard to the floor, then grabbed his gun and fled to a waiting station wagon driven by a third suspect, said police Sgt. Mike Thompson.

The three later abandoned the station wagon and fled in a different car, Thompson said. They had not been caught by midday.

Stardust spokeswoman Kathy Espin estimated the loss at approximately $1 million.

Ms. Espin said the money technically belonged to Loomis Armored Inc., the armored car company, since the guard had signed for the money.

No injuries were reported, although several customers complained of inhaling the smoke that drifted through the sprawling casino.

Thompson said the chemical mixture used to create the smoke was carried in two large soft drink containers.

Senate panel hears cable bill

By Bob Deans
N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — Is the federal government coddling the cable industry?

Cable television's broadcasting competitors say yes, and they want Washington to either raise its business costs, cut subscription rates or reduce the kinds of programs it can air.

One of the cable industry's leading figures, Ted Turner of Atlanta-based Turner Broadcasting System, Inc., cried foul at a Senate hearing Monday. He said the network giants were poor sports who want to hike cable rates for consumers because the networks are losing audiences to programming such as CNN.

"These guys are trying to get the rules changed because we're getting in their pockets a little," Turner told the patents, copyrights and trademarks subcommittee of the Senate Judiciary Committee.

At issue is an 83-page bill that has passed the Senate and is being debated in the House. Known as the "cable bill," the legislation would regulate cable subscription rates — now set only by the cable companies — in markets in which there is little or no competition among cable companies. Depending on how that definition might be interpreted, it could apply to most cities and towns.

The bill would also make cable companies like Turner's begin paying to retransmit programming that comes from on-air television stations. The cable companies counter that the change would drive up costs to consumers, an argument the National Association of Broadcasters rejects.

Proponents of the bill say it is needed to bring communications regulations up to date with a $3 billion cable television industry that now accounts for one in three television viewers, yet is still protected as an infant industry.

"It's time to end the subsidy of the cable industry," said Doug Wills, spokesman for the National Association of Broadcasters, a Washington-based trade group representing the major networks and 1,100 American television stations.

"Cable is a monopoly, and because they have no competition they should be regulated, until such a time that competition is introduced," said Wills.

"This has very big implications," said the panel's chairman, Sen. Orrin G. Hatch, R-Utah. "If we really don't have competition, then we've got to look at this whole area very seriously," Hatch said.

"Now, cable has grown into a 3,000-pound guerilla," Jack Valenti, president and chief executive officer of the Motion Picture Association of America, told the Senate subcommittee Monday.

In 1976, when cable television was in its infancy, the federal government decreed that cable stations would be allowed to pick up, at no charge, programs from commercial, on-air, television stations and retransmit those programs over their cable systems.

The idea was to enable cable companies to provide audiences with a broad package of options, at relatively low cost, to make cable a viable alternative to the three networks that dominated American television.

The National Association of Broadcasters argues, however, that cable operations are reaping windfall profits as a result of their special status, charging customers upwards of $20 a month for programming that costs the cable companies between $2.50 and $3.24 per month, per subscriber.

"This is really about stamping out monopoly practices, lowering rates and introducing competition," said Wills.

Richards sees special session in early May

■ Governor's plans are likely to be made public by Thursday, press secretary Bill Cryer says.

Associated Press

AUSTIN — Gov. Ann Richards said Monday she likely will call lawmakers into a special session on public school funding the first or second week of May.

Richards said some of her staff began meeting with members of the Legislature this week to brief them about her plan, which press secretary Bill Cryer said likely would be made public Thursday.

"So far, everything looks very good. I can't expect to get 100 percent agreement, but I think there is an amazing unanimity," Richards said.

"I'll know after we've made a survey of the House membership and of the Senate membership where we think we are in terms of votes. But I feel pretty good about it," she said.

The Texas Supreme Court in January threw out the third school finance plan since 1989 and gave the Legislature until June 1993 to write another one.

Richards declined to discuss details of her proposal, saying she hasn't finalized it yet.

Her staff in recent weeks has indicated she was considering a plan to remove businesses from local school property tax rolls and put them into a statewide tax pool. That money then would be distributed to all schools.

Richards said she will meet this week with education groups, teachers and school administrators to explain her plan and gather reaction to it.

The governor said she didn't want to summon lawmakers to Austin for a session unless "I feel like we're in some shape to be successful in passage."

If not, she said, "We'll go back to the drawing board." But for now, she said, "I'm feeling very affirmative, and I feel like the session is going to come off."

Richards said her proposal will include a provision on improvements in student performance — so-called "quality" issues — in addition to equalizing school funding.

"The one component that I'm going to insist on is that I'm not going to get involved in another school funding plan that doesn't provide quality. I want a measurement in that system that is able to say to taxpayers 'This is what you're spending your money for and here's what you're getting for it,'" she said.

Richards said one reason she wants a May special session is to give lawmakers a chance to put on the November ballot portions of her plan that would require a constitutional amendment.

> 'The one component that I'm going to insist on is that I'm not going to get involved in another school funding plan that doesn't provide quality.'
> —Gov. Ann Richards

"That gives you plenty of the time for the public to become acquainted with the proposal; it gives you plenty of time for passage in the Legislature," she said.

Lawmakers so far haven't been united behind any single plan.

For example, House Speaker Gib Lewis, D-Fort Worth, recently proposed consolidating the state's more than 1,000 independent school districts into 188 county or multi-county districts.

But Richards and many legislators have said such a plan would be too controversial to win passage.

Gov. Ann Richards admires a replica of a plaque displayed at the London home of the Texas Legation from 1842-'45. The replica was given to Richards in Austin Monday by Christopher and Jane Green, left, to mark 150 years of friendship between Texas and Great Britain. Richards later announced she expects to call a special session of the Legislature in early May.

Smokey Joe Woods reckoned that if Dizzy Dean could do it, so could he.

He gave it a whirl and became, so he claims without seeming to brag, the world's "winningest" baseball pitcher.

But unlike Dean, Smokey Joe never made it to the major league. But he figured he could.

"Dizzy Dean went up (to the St. Louis Cardinals) as a baseball pitcher," Smokey Joe recalled about 60 years after he strutted his pitching stuff before Dean, "and I was a baseball pitcher. I said 'If he can make it, I can make it.' I could, too."

But he didn't.

He tried.

A batter's line drive down third base crashed into his leg, as Smokey Joe was trying to steal home base. He spun into a flip. His ankle went into a cast. And he missed his chance for a tryout with the Cardinals in the spring of 1935.

"Ha!" Smokey Joe laughed.

He kept going.

Cast off, he went back to playing baseball for the U.S. Army Air Corps at Kelly Field at San Antonio. His job in the Air Corps was to keep the airplanes airworthy while

Jury sentences man to 13 years in prison for Midland murder

Staff Report

A jury sentenced a Midland man to 13 years in prison following 4½ hours of deliberation Monday during the penalty phase of his murder trial.

Willie Lane Jr., 58, of 1621 Magnolia St., showed no emotion as the sentence was read by 142nd District Court Judge Pat Baskin.

Lane was convicted of murder Friday in connection with the April 27, 1991, shooting death of Melvin Burton Jr., 61, of 1315 E. Chestnut St.

According to police reports, Lane shot Burton three times with a .38-caliber pistol following an argument between the two men at the New Dew #4, a Lee Street nightclub.

Following the shooting, Lane drove himself to the Police Department and surrendered to officers.

Assistant District Attorney John Westbrook, who prosecuted the case, said he was satisfied with the jury's verdict.

"They obviously listened to all the evidence and determined that probation was not a punishment they wanted to consider for the offense of murder. The length of penitentiary sentence is something I'm sure they deliberated about and, in their minds, felt it was the proper punishment in this case."

MC to offer presentations on life after high school

Staff Report

Is there life after high school? Midland College will attempt to answer that question for students at Midland and Lee high schools with a series of presentations today and Thursday.

"What we have done is divided the presentations into three general areas: for those who are still undecided, those planning to attend Midland College, and those currently planning to leave home," said Jan Reed, MC student activities director.

MC's faculty and staff are presenting most of the sessions. Community leaders, bankers and employment specialists will also participate.

Joseph Baressi Jr., Midland Independent School District superintendent, and David Daniel, MC president, each will speak on college education or the alternatives to seeking a degree.

Joan Baskin, former Midland Chamber of Commerce president, will speak at both high schools on "What Do You Want? What Will You Settle For?"

"Not all students are going to attend Midland College after graduation, and not all students are going to leave home to attend a large university. At this point, some of the students will not have made up their minds. What we are trying to do is make them aware of the options which they have and some of the responsibilities they will face," Ms. Reed said.

Many of the presentations are being given in the form of quiz shows, slide presentations, videos and other graphics.

Baressi and Daniel will speak on "There is Life After High School" 8:30 a.m. today in the LHS auditorium.

Lee students undecided about their future may attend one of two 9:30 a.m. sessions — "It's Your

Mosbacher Sr. predicts Perot 'honeymoon' will end if he runs

By Bennett Roth
Hearst News Service

HOUSTON — Bush campaign chairman Robert Mosbacher Sr. predicted Friday the "honeymoon" Texas business man H. Ross Perot is enjoying with the news media would soon end if he decides to run for president.

"He has had a nice honeymoon being on all the leading talk shows," Mosbacher said. "This has been the fun part. But if he does get in he will be subject to the same scrutiny as anyone else."

Mosbacher was in Houston to attend a reception of the Host Committee, a group of local businessmen and civic leaders involved in planning for the GOP convention in August at the Astrodome.

Mosbacher, founder of Houston-based Mosbacher Energy, said he has known Perot for 20 years and has done business with the Dallas billionaire.

"He's a good businessmen," Mosbacher said. "But this will be a new experience for him."

Perot said recently he would consider an independent bid for president if he could get on the ballot in 50 states. He even named retired Adm. James Stockdale, a former Vietnam POW, as his interim vice-president to qualify to get on the ballot in several states.

Mosbacher said the Bush campaign is taking Perot's possible bid seriously.

"Anybody with his abilities and money doesn't do things lightly," Mosbacher said. "We are trying to prepare for whomever the opposition might be."

While political observers have been uncertain which party Perot's independent bid would hurt most, Mosbacher speculated the conservative businessman would draw more Democrat voters.

Winter Texans head north for summer

By Eduardo Montes
Associated Press writer

SAN BENITO — Vera and Russ Eckert didn't have much time to talk. They fidgeted in their seats and began to get up during the slightest lull in the conversation.

After five months in South Texas, the Eckerts were anxious to return to the "ice and snow."

"We're not happy you understand," said Mrs. Eckert, a Cincinnati resident. "We better get back to business. The tax man wants us. They can't run the state of Ohio without our money apparently."

Then they were gone, back to the north. Dwindling in the distance on the road behind them was the RV park they call home during the winter months.

SMOKE: Midland man recalls try for majors

(From 1B)

the pilots were out flying.

Before that, in his first hitch in the Army infantry at Fort Sam Houston, Smokey Joe was doing some practice pitching when a vacationing Dizzy Dean showed up. Dean was watching Smokey Joe fire off some of his hot pitches — the overhand loose-wrist drop ball — a "downer" in baseball lingo.

Like Smokey Joe, Dean played Army baseball before he went to the majors to become one of baseball's braggingest pitchers. After his pitching arm failed and he went into radio work, Dean became notorious for his quaint and folksy announcing style and language slurs, such as "slud" for slid and "throwed" for thrown.

Dean was popular and, like Smokey Joe, was a proud man.

"Three days after I was in the Army, never had the 'Articles of War' told to me," Smokey Joe said, "I struck out 14 kids right out in front of my barracks."

Later, but still in the early 1930s, Dean was with the Cardinals and, like Smokey Joe, had played ball for the Army at San Antonio.

"He (Dizzy Dean) told (shortstop) Pee Wee Reese 'You ought to see that Smokey Joe downer,' " Smokey Joe said. " 'It's just like a ball rolling off a table. It just drops straight down.' "

Smokey, who now is 80 years old and is steaming toward 100, threw thousands of speeding balls over home plate.

By his notion, he became the "winningest pitcher that ever lived. I lost two games from high school all the way to Nuremburg" — from 1926 on the high-school field at Center, to 1945 at the end of World War II in Europe.

In batting in high-school baseball, Smokey Joe said he hit up to .800 — scored eight base hits each 10 times he was at bat.

"I ain't never hit less than .349," he said. "That was at Kelly Field."

And on the pitcher's mound, he "smoked" the hard balls.

Smokey Joe, whose given name is William Frederick, picked up his nickname from an old Boston Red Sox pitcher, Smokey Joe Wood, who smoked balls.

"Anytime your name was Woods (or Wood) and you throwed a fast ball," Smokey Joe said, "you're smoking."

Smokey Joe first hitched up with Army baseball in 1931 mainly because he wanted to play ball and "You couldn't get a job and didn't have no money to go to college."

Two years earlier, at the outset of the Depression, his father's mercantile store failed. And Smokey Joe was job hunting.

Times were so hard, he couldn't even get a job picking cotton at Sweetwater. But the Army took him.

Between hitches in the Army, he took up yodeling the blues similarly to Jimmie Rodgers, but that didn't pay. He tried crooning like Bing Crosby. That didn't pay off, either.

So, he re-enlisted, got a chance to try out for the St. Louis Cardinals but blew that with the line-drive hit on the shin while he was trying to steal home base. He worked on Air Corps airplanes and played Army baseball.

Once again out of the service, Smokey Joe headed to West Texas in 1937, where he started playing baseball — mostly for entertainment — for the Oil Patch League. The league, which played at such places as Iraan, Ozona, Texon, Big Lake, McCamey and Crane, was loaded with former major and minor league players and managers.

After that, he headed to San Francisco, played musical spoons on the Uncle Benny Walker radio talent show, and, in 1940, rejoined the Air Corps.

Into the war effort, Smokey Joe became line chief for Gen. Otto P. Weyland, who commanded U.S. Army Air Forces fighters in England.

Smokey Joe's baseball playing tuckered out at war's end.

Afterward, he sold tobacco, worked for the old Civil Aeronautics Administration, served in the Berlin Airlift, repaired and serviced warplanes in the Korean and Vietnam wars, managed a Wichita Falls motel, and finally, in looking for a place to retire in the late 1960s, settled down in Midland.

Since then, Smokey Joe has dabbled in the marketplace to turn dollars into gold, played around with politics to restore the gold standard, feuded with the Veterans Administration to restore his health, sanctioned war only to protect the homeland and the Bill of Rights, studied prophecy and warned about the coming of the end times when wars and rumors of wars, strife and earthquakes are prevalent, and talked about the "good old days" and old-time baseball.

"There was no foolishness" in school," Smokey Joe said. "You learned the ABCs, science, math, English, agriculture. They wouldn't turn you loose unless you knew it."

"School, war, and the Depression ... will wise you up pretty good," Smokey Joe said. "That's the reason I started studying the Bible and prophecy. We are in the end times. It won't be long now. It's just like the monkey that got his tail cut in the lawn mower. It won't be long now."

Though he's not throwing hard balls anymore, Smokey Joe is still pitching and smoking.

Prison officials set to vote

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas prison officials are scheduled to decide Friday whether to use a state law to allow the early release of about 2,900 inmates over the next two months.

The decision, contemplated to help relieve county jails with a backlog of about 14,000 inmates sentenced to state prison, was postponed in March.

Chairman Selden Hale of the Texas Board of Criminal Justice said then that the delay was needed because of "hysteria" over reports about the release of offenders.

Hale, of Amarillo, told the Austin American-Statesman that political pressures could make board members vote against invoking the Prison Management Act.

WINTER: Temporary Texans head north for the summer

(From 1B)

The Eckerts are "Winter Texans," that roving breed of retirees that chases the comfortable climes: going south for the winter, north for the summer. The seasonal residents visit the Rio Grande Valley by the thousands every year.

An estimated 84,000 Winter Texans were living in RVs, mobile homes, apartments, condos and hotels at the height of the season last year, according to a study conducted at the University of Texas-Pan American. They contributed more than $200 million to the economy during the 1990-'91 tourist season, the study said.

So understandably, merchants are sorry to see them go. "Every year, once the Winter Texans leave, our sales drop almost in half," said Joe Rodriguez, a stocker at an HEB grocery store in nearby Harlingen. "When they're here, our sales never drop."

The temporary Texans begin rolling into the region about mid-October, their fishing poles and square-dancing duds, tennis rackets and golf clubs in tow. They reverse the process a few months later, going north in the spring. Most, like the Eckerts, are usually gone by mid-April.

What lures them, they say, is the weather, the comfort, the friendliness of the Valley. And that down home feeling.

"I always say we have the best of two worlds," said Thelma Robertson, a retired nurse from tiny Elizabethtown, Ill. "I'm always anxious to get here. I look forward to going back, too."

Today's home movies are still boring, even with camcorder technology

By Erma Bombeck

Bombeck

Well, the NFL has finally discovered what amateur video buffs have known for years — no one wants to see a replay of your movies.

Our video camera has gone to that big Toys-R-Us graveyard, along with the tennis ball machine, a trampoline, 8mm camera and cross country skis.

When we first got the camcorder, no one was safe. For the first time we had sound. We could actually hear guests yelling, "Turn that thing off" or, "What am I supposed to say?" when a camera was jammed in their faces.

A couple of times we took the camcorder on vacations so we could show our children what a Buddhist temple looks like when it is out of focus, or their mother pointing to a street vendor saying, "He is selling something."

The kids probably had the best time with it. At Christmas, they would belch "Ave Maria" or put a sticky bow on the dog's tail and film him going around in circles. My personal favorite was of one kid lying flat on his back aiming the camera up on a subject to capture a bloated face and then having the subject whisper, "Rosebud."

Very few people wanted to see the films replayed. (Or played for the first time, actually.)

Probably the finest hour of the camcorder was the occasion of my parents' 50th wedding anniversary party. The uncut version runs seven hours, 35 minutes; the edited version, 29 minutes. There is always great pressure from my mother for me to watch the long version.

We call it the "Heaven's Gate" of home videos. It's not that we aren't sentimental; it's just that we're insensitive.

Erma Bombeck's column is distributed by Universal Press Syndicate.

SonSilks selections create mood, look of spring in your home

Springtime creates images of verdant greenery, bursts of multicolored flora, brisk breezes carrying with them delightful scents of fruits and flowers. Waterfalls gurgle, birds sing, chimes ring in harmony with the wind. In all these senses Sonsilks is the complete experience of spring.

It's the perfect shop to find just about everything you need to bring the fresh beauty of this season into your home. Silk florals abound. You can delight in the displays of wisteria, hibiscus, hyacinth, daffodils and many, many more. Of course, all flowers are the best of quality. Some of the finest are handwrapped by American Prestige.

Sonsilks' artful collection of plants and flowers includes the "new look" in silks — soft, powdery, soothing to the eye and soft and supple to the touch. Also enjoy the profusion of brilliant sunflowers and vegetable vines that include squash, cucumbers and carrots. For picture perfect arrangements there's an exquisite array of brass, crystal and ceramic containers, not to mention a bounty of beautiful baskets.

To set the mood of springtime in your home, choose from the vast selection of fragrances in subtly delightful of potpourris. And don't forget the candles — a huge variety to go with the multitude of candleholders in different styles, sizes and motifs. Look for the large selection of Root candles.

For the patio, how about stakes with decorative oil lamps to sparkle and glow through the warm spring and summer evenings? There are also many charming of bird feeders, all kinds of whimsical windsocks and precision-tuned windchimes.

Easter is just around the corner. Sonsilks boasts a vast choice of gifts and decorations especially for that holiday. A perfect Easter present might just be a piece or two from the newly arrived Alexander Nevsky collection of filigree design collectibles — made even more precious by their USSR label.

These pieces are exquisitely crafted in fine silver or gold filigree and include miniature jewel boxes, salt cellars and candy dishes. Also perfect for Easter giving is most anything from Sonsilks' impressively large selection of fashion jewelry. Handcrafted hearts and crosses (some in shadowboxes) in sterling silver and brass by Jeep Collins are always an ideal choice.

Rings, bracelets, pewter, crystal and pearls — watches, bangles, beads also abound — all unique and superlatively stylish. Including lovingly handcrafted pewter necklaces and lots of newly arrived sterling silver pieces.

To decorate for the upcoming holiday, choose from SonSilks' collection of bisque eggs, silver lace egg ornaments, delightfully unique lights and Easter decorations.

Home gifts are always welcome — even when you buy them for yourself. Sonsilks offers exquisite framed prints and lovely mirrors — custom-made crescents and swags can be created to top them — by Sonsilks own artisans. And don't forget, SonSilks is the home for Silver Deer collectibles.

Then there are delightfully old-fashioned hankies, in cotton and linen, and romantic enameled music boxes. They can be ordered with your very own special photo, picture, drawing or memento on the top.

You might also choose from jewelry pouches or closet organizers, brass, copper and pewter containers, exquisite statuary, fragile figurines, decorative pillows, carefully crafted canes and backscratchers — and so much more.

Sonsilks is conveniently located between Mervyn's and Service Merchandise in Midland Plaza. Store hours are 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through Saturday. Visa, MasterCard and Discover are welcome. So are layaways. Gift wrap is complimentary on regularly priced merchandise. Call 694-1602 for more information.

Sonsilks is the perfect shop to help you celebrate springtime. Find all manner of exquisite decorative items, splendid silk flowers and foliage, collectibles and gifts to delight most anyone's heart. Also look for the large display of beautiful decorative items for Easter.

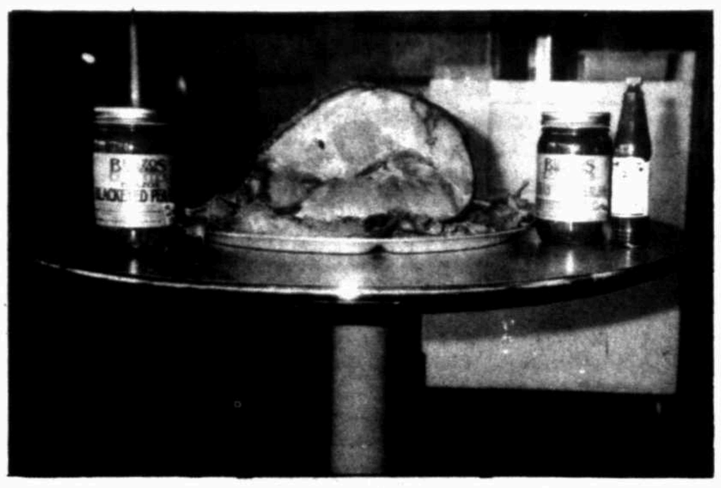
Ranch House Meats offers delicious Easter hams at savings



Delicious smoked, spiral-sliced, honey-glazed hams are the centerpieces of unforgettable Easter dinners. Ranch House now offers $3 off half and whole hams through April 18.

Not only can Ranch House Meats help make preparing a delectable Easter dinner easier, but from now through April 18 they're offering $3 off every mouth- watering spiral-sliced half or whole ham. Small halfs range from 6 to 7 pounds, large halfs are 8 to 9 pounds and whole hams are 14 to 17 pounds.

With Easter just around the corner, this sale is very well timed. It's also the only ham sale Ranch House offers during the year.

Ranch House's incomparable honey glazed ham is just the thing to delight family and friends this coming holiday. This very fresh bone-in ham is hardwood smoked. According to Greg Golden, bone-in ham, since it's a natural and not a compressed product, offers superior taste.

After being smoked to perfection, a Ranch House ham is honey-glazed with an exquisite combination of honey, sugar and secret spices (which Golden won't reveal). Then it's spiral sliced to produce attractive, uniform pieces of epicurean delight. Ranch House, incidentally, is the only place in the Permian Basin that spiral-slices their own meat.

Of course, you don't have to wait for a special occasion to try delicious Ranch House meats. Ranch House's offerings are perfect almost any day of the week for busy working families.

If ham doesn't strike your fancy on a particular day, or for a particular occasion, you might consider a juicy, fully-cooked smoked turkey or turkey breast. Then there's the very popular smoked brisket. Not to mention beef tenderloin, peppered beef, bacon and ham or dried sausage.

Most of Ranch House's meats are mesquite smoked. That process became a Texas tradition when early cowboys discovered that the ugly little trees that grew on the prairies emitted a sweet, pungent aroma that permeated cuts of meat with its succulent smoke. It also created an incomparable taste.

Ranch House also caters. They will deliver their special mesquite-smoked meats and scrumptious fresh-baked bread and set it up with a vegetable tray. They also furnish mayonnaise, mustard, napkins, plates, etc. And, for parties of nine or more, local delivery is free.

Looking for an ideal gift? Ranch House makes up baskets and boxes. What a delicious way to remember a special occasion.

Ranch House is so proud of the products they offer in their store, they sell them with unconditional guarantees.

Greg and Julie Golden, Ranch House's friendly owners, are both Midland natives. They grew up here and established their business here. So they believe that they understand the kinds of foods and service they their friends and neighbors like and want. They work very hard, and very successfully, to produce it.

By the way, if you're anywhere near the Loop at lunch time, stop in for a delicious sandwich — and the home-cooked soup of the day. A real noontime pick-me-up!

Ranch House is located at 3001 W. Loop in Midland Plaza just south of Service Merchandise, Call 699-0695 for information.

Mid-West Door & Window offers April storm door savings

If home improvements are on your list of "things to do," look to the experts at Mid-West Door & Window. Whether it's siding, gutters, replacement or storm windows, skylights, patio and entry doors, storm doors, sunscreens or plain screens, Mid-West has a complete line of quality products to choose from. All of which can enhance the beauty of your home as well as increase its value and energy efficiency. And through the end of April, you can save 10 percent on selected storm doors!

Mid-West offers replacement windows in a variety of styles and sizes from several manufacturers. Whether you want wooden or aluminum framed windows, the options are great. Tinted and insulated glass, thermal break aluminum frames, low maintenance clad exteriors on wooden windows, grilles and many more features are available in double or single hung, sliding, fixed picture windows, casements, awning and the ever-popular bay and bow windows.

Skylights and roof windows are a relatively simple way to light up any room, especially one in the interior part of the home. They are available with clear or tinted glass or acrylic domes. Some roof windows are available with electric operators.

Storm windows are another specialty at Mid-West Door & Window. These aluminum windows mount to the outside of the home's existing windows and are available in different finishes and prices to allow you to pick the one that best suits your home and your pocketbook. Storm windows are a protective investment in regard to heating and cooling, dust, protection from hail, noise and other elements. Mid-West sells only custom-fitted storm windows to assure the best fit and the least amount of air and dust infiltration.

Today's homeowner must always look to the future when remodeling or doing home improvements. In today's resale market, a home's "curb appeal" has become most important. What better way to accomplish this than with steel siding installed by the experts at Mid-West Door & Window. Siding, soffitt and fascia can make your home virtually maintenance free as well. Steel siding is available in a variety of beautiful colors and styles. It gives a home the appearance of real wood plus the strength and durability of steel.

A new entry door is another way to add "curb appeal" to a home. Mid-West offers doors of all styles from the elegance of beautiful wood with leaded glass to the Peachtree steel doors for the harshest exposures. The Peachtree steel doors can be plain and simple, or, by installing Visador Lites with leaded and beveled glass, they can fit into any decor.

One of the most popular home improvement projects today is the replacement of old, worn out sliding patio doors. Most of these older doors are single glazed, drafty and extremely inefficient. Mid-West has the aluminum sliding patio doors with insulated glass and frames in either white or bronze, or the popular wood doors that are hinged with either one or both doors opening. These are available with a clad exterior to reduce maintenance and protect the wood. Regardless of the style you choose, you can be assured that your door will operate properly, be airtight and beautify your home.

Mid-West can also make aluminum screens or rescreen existing frames. Also featured are storm doors from the practical to the elegant. The "Forever Guard" security storm door is quickly becoming a favorite for its beauty and security features. Mid-West also sells and installs gutter.

Call 682-4632 or come by the showroom at 2400 W. Front and see all the displays. Mid-West Door and Window has been in business since 1976 and assures service after the sale. Free estimates are available.

Mid-West Door & Windows's van is parked outside of an Old Midland home where skilled professionals are replacing old wooden windows with insulated aluminum units. This is just one of the many home improvements Mid-West Door & Window can be called upon to execute.

Mansfield Chiropractic & Rehabilitation offers pain relief

"Chiropractic is a branch of the healing arts that relieves pain and restores normal body function by influencing the nervous system through the manipulation of the spine," said Dr. Dale Mansfield of the Mansfield Chiropractic & Rehabilitation Center.

The majority of the doctor's patients have spinal-related problems such as headaches, neck and back pains and/or numbness of the hands and feet.

New patients at the Center undergo neurological and orthopaedic tests to determine the cause of their pain. Once Mansfield, or his new associate Dr. Terry Hamilton, determine that an individual will indeed benefit from chiropractic care, a program is created for that specific person.

"To relieve pain you need to create flexibility and strengthen the involved area," Mansfield said. "Flexibility comes through chiropractic manipulation and strengthening comes through rehabilitation."

Once the desired flexibility has been achieved through manipulation, the patient is ready for rehabilitation therapy. This is done in addition to spinal manipulation for an overall favorable spinal condition. The doctors supervise and provide a restricted exercise program working with Rick Allard and other members of the staff. Allard has six years experience in rehabilitation therapy, which inspires a great deal of confidence in his patients. In addition to exercise, massage therapy is used to help relax the patient and restore circulation.

Experience abounds at Mansfield Chiropractic & Rehabilitation Center. Mansfield, a graduate of Texas Chiropractic College, is also a Board Qualified Chiropractic Orthopaedist. He has been in practice for 19 years, 11 of them in Midland.

Among his staff are two Certified Chiropractic Assistants, Lyn Anderson and Edith Williams who have 13 years of combined experience.

New on board is Terry Hamilton, a graduate of Parker College of Chiropractic. He is very enthusiastic about his work and community. Also his upcoming nuptials — he and Marla Carlson will soon be married.

In addition to assisting individuals who are in pain, Mansfield Chiropractic and Rehabilitation Center is going the extra mile in helping individuals avoid unnecessary physical damage.

They offer a course called "The Back School," every Thursday at 6 p.m. The class is held at no charge. Designed to educate individuals on how to avoid back injury, this course is also available to employers on their own premises. Call 682-2527 for information.

Though most patients come to Mansfield Chiropractic & Rehabilitation Center through either physician or personal referral, they are currently accepting new patients.

Mansfield Chiropractic & Rehabilitation Center accepts Worker's Compensation and personal insurance. They are located at 3100 North "A" St., Bldg. B, Suite 100 in Midland. Hours are 9 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. and 2:30 to 6 p.m. on Mondays, Wednesdays and Thursdays. Hours Tuesdays and Fridays are 9 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. Rehab is also open 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. on Saturday.

Could chiropractic care benefit you? "If we can help we'll let you know. If we can't we'll tell you that also," Mansfield said.

Call 682-2527 for information or appointments.

DEAR ABBY

End of marriage is painful whether by death, divorce

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: A few months ago, you had a letter in your column written by "Myra" — a woman whose husband had died of cancer three years ago, at the age of 39. I've been wanting to write to you about this for a long time, but I never had the guts.

Van Buren

My husband died of cancer three years ago — he was 35. I also encountered people who compared death with divorce. I had one person tell me that I was "lucky" because my love had just died — but her love was "murdered" when her husband found somebody else. I was devastated! I didn't feel "lucky."

I've had to deal with people who think I am a rich widow because I've started to redecorate the house so there wouldn't be so many memories to haunt me. They didn't see it as a way of coping with my loss — they saw "the rich widow" out having a wonderful time with the insurance money.

I could write a book. Maybe one day I will, but I think I've said enough. Thank you, Abby, for letting me have my say. — I DON'T FEEL LUCKY

DEAR DON'T FEEL LUCKY: Myra's letter inspired a bale of mail from widows and divorcees. None felt "lucky." Read on:

DEAR ABBY: This is in response to the woman who lost her 39-year-old husband to cancer, and didn't know what to make of the remark, "It has to be much easier losing your husband through death than losing a mate by divorce."

Not only is divorce the death of a dream that was too short-lived, or didn't work out, it is also the death of an intimate relationship, the death of a family and the death of financial support.

Few outsiders allow a divorcee time to grieve. Nobody attends the "funeral," nobody takes up a collection to see her through the rough spots, and there is no available life insurance.

When one is a widow (or widower), there are no fights over child custody, living quarters or possessions acquired during the life of the marriage — and friends and relatives on both sides are still glad to see you. They invite you to weddings, graduations, baptisms, etc. Your memories of a wonderful marriage are yours forever, to be treasured for a lifetime. — FAMILY COUNSELOR IN ST. PAUL, MINN.

DEAR ABBY: After going through a very painful divorce, I confess, at times I thought how much less painful it would have been if my husband had died.

A death brings the bereaved widow support from both her family and community.

With a divorce, people whisper behind your back about what "really happened" — and what you must have done to drive him away. A widow's children will not go to school and hear classmates say, "My parents said they saw your father out dancing last night with a pretty young girl." (Children can be so very cruel.)

As a divorcee, my self-esteem hit an all-time low because of the way a divorcee is perceived.

Whoever thought up that expression "gay divorcee" must have been dreaming. A widow gets sympathy and understanding. A divorcee gets speculation and gossip. — ANOTHER DIVORCEE

Cities duel over 'Surf City' tag

HUNTINGTON BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Even if Jan & Dean were thinking of Huntington Beach when they sang their 1963 hit "Surf City," the town doesn't have the right to hog the name, say residents of a competing beach city.

Surfers and city leaders in Santa Cruz, nearly 400 miles up the Pacific Coast, are protesting a resolution introduced by a Huntington Beach assemblyman to make "Surf City Huntington Beach" the city's official name.

"It's just a matter of pride," Santa Cruz Mayor Don Lane said Thursday. "Santa Cruz has used the term Surf City to describe itself for many years."

Mac Reed, who works at Santa Cruz's surfing museum, said the song was meant to be about "a mythical California place."

Natalie Kotch, founder of the Huntington Beach International Surfing Museum, said Huntington Beach warrants the name Surf City because of its ideal surfing conditions and long association with the sport.

Dean Torrance, a Huntington Beach resident who was one-half of the early '60s singing duo, joined Assemblyman Tom Mays in unveiling the renaming measure last month.

NEW YORK (AP) — Mookie Blaylock of the New Jersey Nets, who averaged 19 points, 10.5 assists and 3.5 steals per game, was named on Monday as the NBA's player of the week for the period ending Sunday.

Blaylock, a former star at Midland College, led the Nets to a 4-0 record for the week as the team continued to be a strong contender for its first playoff berth since 1986.

Humphrey test

SUWANEE, Ga. (AP) — Denver running back Bobby Humphrey arrived at Atlanta Falcons headquarters today for a physical and may work out for the team on Tuesday.

Falcons officials said if today's physical went well and insurance concerns were resolved, the former Alabama star may be tested Tuesday by Falcons personnel director Ken Herock.

Humphrey's agent has been granted permission to speak to clubs interested in him, in advance of a possible trade.

Sale close

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Japanese-led offer to buy the Seattle Mariners has the backing of baseball commissioner Fay Vincent, a congressman said Monday.

"The commissioner said he very strongly supports the deal," said Rep. Norm Dicks, a Washington Democrat. "I don't want to say that it's a done deal until they vote, but I sure came away with the feeling he was very strongly committed to it."

Baseball's 10-man ownership committee will meet Wednesday to consider the deal, and committee chairman Fred Kuhlmann of the St. Louis Cardinals said he expects the panel to issue a recommendation.

San Diego nips Reds

Associated Press

CINCINNATI — Darrin Jackson's ninth-inning homer off Jose Rijo snapped Cincinnati's streak of nine consecutive opening day victories Monday and gave San Diego a 4-3 win.

Rijo, 15-6 last year, gave up two costly homers in nine innings: a solo homer by Fred McGriff that put the Padres ahead 3-2 in the sixth, and Jackson's leadoff homer after the Reds had tied it in the eighth.

NL

Jackson, who hit a career-high 21 homers last year, pulled a 2-0 pitch over the left-field wall. Randy Myers, traded from the Reds to the Padres over the winter, closed the ninth for the save.

Bruce Hurst gave up seven hits and three runs in seven innings before yielding to Jose Melendez, who got the victory with one perfect inning.

The Reds are coming off their best spring training in 56 years. It carried over in their hitting: Glenn Braggs, Reggie Sanders and Joe Oliver, their top three spring hitters, drove in runs for a 3-all tie after seven innings.

Final One: It's Duke

■ The Blue Devils finish a wire-to-wire season as No. 1 in college basketball with a victory over Michigan in the championship finals.

By Jim O'Connell
AP Basketball Writer

MINNEAPOLIS — History didn't come easy for the Duke Blue Devils. Nevertheless, history they made, energized at last by their star, Christian Laettner.

They became the first team in 19 years to repeat as NCAA champions Monday night with a 71-51 victory over Michigan's Fab Five freshmen, the youngest team to ever vie for the title.

"We won last year, but it's the best feeling to go out in my last game at Duke on a winning note," Laettner said.

Duke also finished its season without spending one day of the season without the No. 1 ranking — a wire-to-wire season.

After missing six of eight shots and making a season-high seven turnovers in the first half, Laettner finished with 19 points and seven rebounds.

"He was throwing up bricks and we were still down just one point," Duke coach Mike Krzyzewski said. "I knew if we could turn up the emotion and get him back in the game we'd have a shot."

"I don't think we were emotionally drained," Laettner said. "I missed some shots and Michigan played well. I was playing really weak and we weren't rebounding. In the second half, we did a better job. I wasn't physically or emotionally drained."

Not since UCLA ended a seven-year reign as national champions in 1973 had a team managed to win two in a row.

Duke did it the hard way, with national player of the year Laettner struggling for the second straight game and another starter hobbled by injury.

Laettner, who personally lifted the Blue Devils to two of their five straight Final Four appearances with buzzer-beaters, rebounded from his worst half of the year to lead a closing 23-6 Duke charge.

Duke's defensive pressure, meanwhile, limited Michigan to only 20 second-half points on 29 percent shooting — nine for 31. The Wolverines, who led 31-30 at halftime, shot only 38 percent for the game and had their lowest point total in eight years. It was also the lowest losing score in a championship game since 1981, when Indiana beat North Carolina 63-50.

Bobby Hurley, the floor leader who matched his career high of 26 points against Indiana in the semifinals, hit only three of 12 shots in the championship game but had seven assists with his nine points and was named Most Outstanding Player of the Final Four.

"It wasn't a pretty game," Hurley said, "but we got the job done."

Grant Hill had a terrific all-around game for Duke with 18 points, 10 rebounds, five assists, three steals and two blocks. Thomas Hill added 16 points and seven rebounds for the Blue Devils.

"Coach just challenged us at halftime to play better," Grant Hill said. "We just

New park good for Orioles

■ Baltimore defeats Cleveland, 2-0, in the debut of Oriole Park at Camden Yards.

Associated Press

BALTIMORE — An old-fashioned ballpark opened with old-fashioned baseball.

The Baltimore Orioles moved into their new stadium in style Monday, beating the Cleveland Indians 2-0 behind bunting, baserunning and brilliant pitching by Rick Sutcliffe.

A crowd of 44,568, including President Bush, showed up at Oriole Park at Camden Yards and saw Baltimore become the first team since 1977 to win its stadium opener.

Camden Yards, with its modern-day amenities and an old-time flavor, was the focus of the day, rather than the team. But Sutcliffe gave the fans more to look at than the city skyline beyond center field, the bricked, 94-year-old warehouse beyond right and the 25-foot scoreboard built into the right-field wall.

AL

Sutcliffe, signed as a free agent, struck out six and walked one in his 17th career shutout, and first complete game since 1989. The 35-year-old Sutcliffe, the oldest pitcher ever to start an Orioles' opener, allowed only two runners to get as far as second base in his first American League game since 1984, when he was traded from Cleveland to the Chicago Cubs.

Cleveland starter Charles Nagy didn't allow a runner past first base until the fifth inning, when Baltimore took a 2-0 lead. After Sam Horn walked and took second on a one-out single by Leo Gomez, Chris Hoiles drove in a run with a ground-rule double that bounced over the center-field wall. Billy Ripken then executed a perfect suicide squeeze to score Gomez.

Cleveland's Paul Sorrento got the first hit in the new stadium, a looping single in the second that glanced off the glove of center fielder Mike Devereaux. With two out and Sorrento on second, Devereaux saved a run by racing to the wall to catch a drive by Sandy Alomar. The Indians, who lost a club-record 105 games last season, did not threaten again.

The Orioles did what Montreal, Minnesota, Toronto and the Chicago White Sox failed to do by winning the first game at their new park. Toronto was the last team to start at home with a win, doing it in 1977 at Exhibition Stadium, but the Blue Jays later lost their opener at SkyDome.

Bush helped Baltimore inaugurate Oriole Park at Camden Yards on a picture-perfect afternoon, and once again his ceremonial pitch wound up in the dirt.

Bush said his left-handed toss "just ran out of gas" halfway to home plate.

He fared better alongside Orioles broadcaster Jon Miller, with whom the president briefly shared a mircophone and some good-natured ribbing.

"President George Bush, play-by-play man. Incredible. All the networks are calling right now," Miller told a television audience.

"Are they?" Bush asked. "What do they pay?"

Blyleven on Angel roster list

Staff Report

The Midland Angels' opening day roster, just released from Arizona, will include a 21-year major league veteran, an NFL wide receiver, a player just back from Italy and nine familiar faces.

Bert Blyleven, the 21-year veteran, is the key name on the list as he is attempting a comeback following rotator cuff surgeries in Oct. of 1990 and April of 1991.

Blyleven last pitched in the major leagues on Aug. 10 of 1990. His career dates back to 1969. Entering this season, Blyleven has pitched only 21 games in the minor leagues, the last being in 1970.

He is a veteran of two World Series, two All-Star games and three League Championship Series. He ranks 26th on the all-time win list (279) and is fourth among all-time strikeout leaders (3,631).

This is the second consecutive year that Midland will host a "big name" trying to save a career. Last year Fernando Valenzuela packed Angels Stadium with over 5,000 fans.

Midland opens the season in San Antonio Friday after a public workout and media day in Midland Thursday at 4:45 p.m.

Among the outfielders for the Angels will be John Jackson and Tony Brown. Jackson is a wide receiver for the NFL's Phoenix Cardinals. Brown spent last season playing pro ball in Italy.

Among the nine players returning to Midland are pitchers Clemente Acosta, Marvin Cobb and Mark Zappelli. Brett Merriman, who pitched briefly in Midland in 1990, also returns.

Other familiar faces are catcher Mick Billmeyer, infielders Terry Taylor and Walt McConnell and outfielder Bobby Jones.

Other team members are pitchers Dave Adams, Joe Kraemer, Steve Peck, Darryl Scott and Paul Swingle, catcher Matt Stark, infielders Ron Correia, Corey Kapano, Jeff Kipila, Ray Martinez and J.R. Phillips, and outfielder Jim Edmonds.

NL: San Francisco makes life miserable for Dodgers

(From 1C)

Giants 8, Dodgers 1

LOS ANGELES — Six months later and the Giants are still making life miserable for the Dodgers.

Bill Swift, who came to San Francisco from Seattle in the Kevin Mitchell trade over the winter, made his first start after 88 relief appearances a winning one as the Giants beat Los Angeles. Every Giant starter had a hit.

The Dodgers entered the final weekend of the 1991 season tied for first place in the NL West with Atlanta. But two Los Angeles losses to the Giants at Candlestick Park and two wins by the Braves over Houston put an end to the race.

Swift (1-0), who relieved in 71 games for the Mariners last season, blanked the Dodgers until the eighth inning. Making his first start since Aug. 22, 1990, Swift allowed seven hits and one run in 7⅔ innings.

Ramon Martinez (0-1), a winner of 37 games over the last two seasons, had a horrible time in his first opening day start, allowing seven hits, walking three and hitting a batter in 2⅔ innings. He was fortunate to allow only three runs.

The Giants scored twice in the second. Rookie Royce Clayton led off with a single and came around to score on a pair of infield outs and a passed ball by Mike Scioscia. Then, with two outs and nobody on base, Darren Lewis singled, Mike Felder walked and Will Clark singled home Lewis.

The Giants got another run in the third on singles by Cory Snyder, Robby Thompson and Kirt Manwaring. John Candelaria relieved Martinez with two outs and the bases loaded and induced Felder to ground to short, ending the inning.

Snyder, signed by the Giants as a non-roster free agent during the off-season, robbed Scioscia of a solo homer in the fifth, leaping above the top of the right-field fence to catch Scioscia's long drive.

Pirates 2, Expos 0

PITTSBURGH — Doug Drabek pitched like the Cy Young Award winner of 1990 with eight shutout innings and the Pittsburgh Pirates — shutout losers in their last two home openers — beat the Montreal Expos 2-0 on Monday night.

Drabek, winner of just one of his first seven decisions last year before finishing 15-14, allowed five singles and also drove in a run in the Pirates' two-run second inning.

The Expos, wearing their new road uniforms, had been 5-0 against Pittsburgh on opening day.

Pittsburgh had won just four times in its previous 12 season openers and had lost six of their last eight on opening day. Montreal has lost five of its last six openers on the road.

Mets 4, Cardinals 2

ST. LOUIS — Bobby Bonilla, the Mets' $29 million man, hit two home runs, including a two-run shot in the 10th inning to give New York a victory over St. Louis.

The victory made Jeff Torborg a winner in his managerial debut with New York, and gave the Mets their 16th triumph in the last 18 season openers.

After finishing in fifth place last season in the NL East, the Mets revamped their lineup over the winter by adding free agents Bonilla, Eddie Murray and Willie Randolph. It was a one-man show in the opener, though, as Bonilla went 3-for-5 with three RBIs.

Vince Coleman led off the 10th with a bunt single, narrowly avoiding a sweeping tag by first baseman Andres Galarraga, and advanced on a sacrifice before Bonilla homered off loser Lee Smith. Bonilla hit a hanging slider deep into the lower right-field seats and then broke into a big smile rounding the bases.

Smith, who led the major leagues with 47 saves in 53 chances last season, blew his first opportunity this year when he gave up a run in the ninth on two hits and pinch-hitter Mackey Sasser's RBI groundout.

(From 1C)

Blue Jays 4, Tigers 2

DETROIT — Sooner or later, Jack Morris was bound to give up a run.

Morris, who finished last year with the most memorable shutout in World Series history, started this season with eight more scoreless innings. He made his debut for Toronto a winning one, pitching a five-hitter and leading the Blue Jays past Detroit in the first game of 1992.

Cecil Fielder and Rob Deer homered in the ninth inning against Detroit's former ace. But this time Morris did not need a shutout, as he did in Game 7 of the World Series, when he pitched a 10-inning, seven-hitter that gave Minnesota a 1-0 victory over Atlanta and gave him the MVP award.

Morris, who became a free agent soon after the Series and signed with Toronto for $10.85 million for two years, was pitching for his third team in three seasons. The Blue Jays got him to be their ace, and that he was.

Morris struck out seven, walked three and was in trouble just once before the ninth.

Twins 4, Brewers 2

MILWAUKEE — Chuck Knoblauch, last season's rookie of the year, was the star of opening day for Minnesota.

Knoblauch's fourth single of the game scored Greg Gagne with the go-ahead run in the ninth inning as the Twins opened defense of their world championship by beating Milwaukee.

Woosnam plans for title

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — Ian Woosnam made careful plans for the defense of his title in the 56th Masters.

He planned the champions dinner. "A typical Welsh meal, hare," he said.

After an early arrival in the United States, he planned the same routine that resulted in a green jacket last year at Augusta: one big, get-it-out-of-the-way press conference; then nothing but practice, concentration on his game, no interruptions.

He had it all planned.

Woosnam, however, had not planned on the yips.

But he's got them — a full-blown case of them — and all the fears and nerves and indecisions and frustrations that go with golf's most dreaded putting malady.

And that affliction makes everything else secondary going into the start of his defense Thursday at the Augusta National Golf Club.

"I'd like to be able to make a reasonable defense. I'm a bit down," the 5-foot-4 Woosnam admitted.

So down, in fact, there was a hint he was even looking beyond the Masters to some future time when he may be more likely to contend in one of golf's major events.

"Maybe it'll all come right by the (British) Open championship," Woosnam said.

It is a far different situation, he said, than a year ago when he came in with such high hopes and expectations — expectations that were achieved with his roundabout, one-putt par on the final hole.

His dramatic, one-stroke victory provided Woosnam with his first major-tournament title.

Rebs, 'Cats meet today

Staff Report

With the first half of the District 4-5A baseball season coming to a close today, it is a bit early to write off anybody in the race for the two playoff berths.

But as Midland Lee hosts San Angelo in a 4 p.m. game at Johnson Field, the Rebels are facing an almost "must-win" game against the Bobcats. Lee (8-8 overall) and San Angelo (9-8-1) are both 2-3 in district play, but hang only one game out of second place, which is occupied by Odessa Permian and Abilene High.

In other 4-5A games today, Abilene Cooper takes its perfect 5-0 league record to Permian's McCanlies Field, while Odessa High (0-5) travels to AHS. Midland High (3-3) is idle today.

The Rebels are expected to start junior righthander Julian Urquidez (4-0) on the mound, while the Bobcats should counter with Alan Mow (6-2). Lee is coming off what some 4-5A observers count as an upset loss at AHS, 7-3, while San Angelo defeated Permian 5-1 Saturday in San Angelo.

The Rebs do boast the second-most potent offense in the district while hitting .340 as a team in 4-5A games. Over that span, senior leftfielder Smily Hinojos has batted .800 to lay claim to the league batting lead.

Rightfielder Jake Krautsch is hitting at a .750 clip, while shortstop Allen Chase (.500) and first baseman Sean McIntosh (.438) are both over the .400 mark.

While scoring runs hasn't been a problem for Lee — the Rebels average eight runs per district game — holding the opposition has been. Lee pitchers have combined for an 8.54 ERA in league games and the defense is averaging more than two errors a game.

NCAA: Duke rolls to national crown tried to come and play hard. Michigan played hard. I'm just so happy we came through in the stretch."

(From 1C)

However, it was Laettner's long-distance shooting that sparked Duke, which trailed 31-30 at halftime.

Laettner's 3-pointer 44 seconds into the second half gave Duke the lead for good, 35-33. Another 3-pointer by Laettner with 11:05 left gave the Blue Devils a 46-39 lead, and they took off from there.

"The second half, we had no semblance of order on offense," Michigan coach Steve Fisher said. "And I think it was as much their defense as anything. We unbraveled with some bad shots and you can't do that against a good team."

Krzyzewski, who has taken Duke to six Final Fours in the last seven years, hugged his players on the sidelines as the game wound down and waved to Blue Devil fans in the stands.

Krzyzewski became the ninth coach to win more than one national championship and just the fifth to win them consecutively. His career record in the NCAA tournament is 33-7, an .825 winning percentage which ties him for fourth place with UCLA's John Wooden.

Chris Webber led Michigan with 14 points and 11 rebounds, while Jalen Rose added 11 points for the Wolverines.

Both were in early foul trouble, and Rose picked up his fourth with 12:45 to play, while Webber's fourth came with 5:17 left.

Duke tied the second-largest winning margin in NCAA championship game history, topped only by UNLV's 30-point blowout of the Blue Devils two years ago and equaled by Ohio State over California in 1960.

But the loss couldn't overshadow what Michigan did this season, especially after Fisher switched to five freshmen starters eight weeks ago.

These Wolverines, who were still in high school when Fisher took Michigan to its first national championship as an interim coach in 1989, learned a lesson against Duke: The game takes 40 minutes.

After Michigan closed to 48-45 on a layup by Rose, Duke spread the floor and took over the inside to score 23 of the last 29 points, 12 by Grant Hill. The Blue Devils committed only two turnovers in the second half, none by Laettner.

Coody withdraws

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — Former champion Charles Coody withdrew from the Masters on Monday, leaving a starting field of 85. Coody, the 1971 champion, telephoned tournament officials and said he has a pinched nerve in his neck.

First-timers: PGA champion John Daly leads a group of 14 players making their first Masters appearance.

Other American first-timers are Russ Cochran, Brad Faxon, Lee Janzen, David Peoples, Kenny Perry, Dillard Pruitt and amateurs David Berganio and Mitchell Voges.

Foreign players scheduled for their first tour of Augusta National Golf Club course are Fulton Allem of South Africa, David Feherty of Northern Ireland, Colin Montgomerie of Scotland, Steven Richardson of England and amateur Gary Wolstenholme of England.

Old-timers: Arnold Palmer will be competing in his 38th consecutive Masters, Gary Player in his 37th and Jack Nicklaus in his 34th. The Big Three of an earlier era have won a combined total of 13 Masters.

Unknown qualifier: Dillard Pruitt qualified for his first Masters with a victory last year in the Chattanooga Classic.

Pruitt, however, was unaware the tournament was a qualifying event for golf's annual spring gathering in Augusta.

Previously, when Chattanooga had been played opposite another PGA Tour event, the winner had not qualified for the Masters and Pruitt was unaware of the change in status.

"When I got the invitation in the mail," Pruitt said, "I thought it was a joke; that somebody was playing a joke on me."

Eventually, he discovered the invitation was genuine and "I was running around yelling and laughing. A wonderful surprise," he said.

Bannister makes Ranger roster

SEATTLE (AP) — The Texas Rangers finalized their 25-man roster Monday by signing pitcher Floyd Bannister to a one-year contract and placing pitcher Scott Chiamparino on the 60-day disabled list.

The Rangers announced they had purchased the contracts of non-roster invitees Steve Fireovid, Jeff Robinson and Wayne Rosenthal, all pitchers, and John Cangelosi, an outfielder, from Oklahoma City.

Chiamparino underwent surgery to his right elbow last July.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

TUESDAY, APRIL 7, 1992

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Look forward to more relaxation and less stress. Influential people back your ideas. Domestic and career affairs stabilize by August. Timely home repairs in late fall will increase your property's resale value. Put your loved ones' needs first in November. A holiday family gathering is well worth the trouble and expense. Nurture new business contacts early in 1993. Spending more time on research will pay off handsomely by next spring. Romance reaches a high point in March of 1993.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: director Francis Ford Coppola, actor James Garner, TV host David Frost, singer Janis Ian.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Unfamiliar and distant locales hold the promise of adventure. Postpone major business and career moves until more information is available. A favorable verdict is announced.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Be careful not to plunge into anything. A hasty announcement could gum up the works. A secret love affair could alter your life forever. Confide in your friends before going public.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Long-range financial planning is essential now. Someone at a distance could become a benefactor. Keep a low profile. A run-in with someone in authority could jeopardize career progress.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Allies both near and far are at your disposal today. Team up for a fruitful collaboration. You are poised to win support from those holding the money cards.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Away from the limelight, your spirits might wilt. Be adventuresome and explore new territory; you could wind up center stage after all! Keep up with your studies if still in school.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You can reach your top stride in both employment affairs and personal relations today. Utilize established lines of communication and you will cruise right along.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): People may not be all they seem. Stay on your guard when dealing with strangers. Romance could be a letdown. Maybe you need an evening to yourself. Read a novel or watch a video.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Surprising news or an unexpected encounter could leave you walking on air. Rubbing elbows with VIPs helps you raise money and get favorable publicity. Romance is favored!

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Beware of indulging in office gossip today; it could prove quite damaging. Keep in touch with distant contacts — they can play a major role in a business triumph. Keep appointments on time.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You have a tendency to splurge in the name of fun. Ask yourself, "Is it worth the cost?". Great things happen when you get reacquainted with a former co-worker.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Use the phone, mail or fax machine to get your ideas on the table. A timely discussion is essential. Be bold. Romance intensifies when you reveal what is in your heart.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Your sensitivity and compassion help you draw extra close to people. Joining an organization will let you fulfill your wishes. Great results come when you trust your instincts.

TODAY'S CHILDREN are candid, confident and interested in a casual lifestyle. They dislike dressing up. Once these restless Aries finish a project, they are immediately off to something new. Their interest in precision and mathematics makes them excellent architects or engineers. Aries' attention to detail is legendary! Opening lead: Ace of ◇

Over the past decade, the most successful pair in the U.S. has been Jeff Meckstroth and Eric Rodwell. Of late, Tony Forrester and Andy Robson have been recognized as one of Europe's great combinations. These four players locked horns when Great Britain met the U.S. in a qualifying round of the World Team Olympiad in Yokohama, Japan, last year.

Robson elected to open the West hand with a weak no trump. Judging by North's cue-bid of four diamonds, South's balancing bid of two clubs must have shown a two-suiter, and a highly optimistic four-heart contract was reached.

West led the ace of diamonds and continued the suit. Meckstroth discarded a spade from hand on the king of diamonds and immediately led a spade to the jack and ace.

West returned a spade to declarer's king. The ace and king of clubs were cashed and a club ruff set up two long cards in the suit. Judging accurately from West's jump to three diamonds that the defender's distribution was 2-2-6-3, and that the king of hearts was on his right, since West had already shown up with 10 points and was known to have additional values in diamonds, declarer simply cashed the ace of hearts and continued with a trump. Whether East played the jack or the king, declarer could lose no more than one trump trick to go with the spade and diamond losers.

Needless to say, no other North-South pair came close to bidding and making a game.

Report: Boesky sues his wife for $1 million a year in alimony

NEW YORK— Ivan Boesky, the Wall Street speculator who served two years in prison for insider trading, is suing his wife for $1 million a year in alimony, a newspaper reported Monday.

Boesky

The case called Anonymous I vs. Anonymous II was filed in civil court last month asking $20,000 a week for "interim financial support" for Boesky, the New York Post reported.

Seema Boesky sued earlier this year to end the couple's 30-year marriage.

"I should not be forced ... to incur further debt while (she) redecorates the marital estate and her penthouse apartment ... and has personal expenses of almost $42,000 per month," the Post quoted Boesky as telling the court.

A gag order prevents lawyers from discussing the case, the Post said.

Boesky pleaded guilty in 1986 and was sentenced the following year to three years in prison and ordered to pay a $100 million fine.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Melissa Gilbert-Brinkman said she wanted to do more than just play a foil to comedian Rosie O'Donnell in their new Fox-TV series.

"I was afraid of that, to be honest," said Gilbert-Brinkman, best known for her role in the long-running television series "Little House on the Prairie."

"But they gave me an opportunity, so I proved myself able to do comedy," she said Sunday.

In "Stand By Your Man," Gilbert-Brinkman and O'Donnell portray sisters who move in together after their husbands are imprisoned for bank robbery.

Gilbert-Brinkman said of her character, "She's one of those women who you think is flighty and empty and isn't going to make it. But when the chips are down, she's very strong."

MIAMI — Marjory Stoneman Douglas, who has spent her adult life fighting to preserve the Florida Everglades, is celebrating her 102nd birthday, a spokeswoman said Monday.

Plans were for a quiet observance for Mrs. Douglas, who remains weak after being hospitalized for a week in February for fatigue, said her secretary Martha Hubbart.

Mrs. Douglas lead the successful push in 1947 to designate 1.6 million acres of the "River of Grass" as Everglades National Park. The region has been dramatically altered by the population explosion in southern Florida and by development.

Fund-raisers are planned April 18 for Everglades restoration projects in honor of Mrs. Douglas' birthday.

BALTIMORE — Jim Brady said designers have done a great job making Baltimore's new baseball stadium open to people in wheelchairs and those with other physical hardships.

"This is a place that's friendly to me and to so many of my friends who are fans with disabilities. This ballpark welcomes us," said the former White House press secretary at a ceremony in front of the Orioles' dugout Sunday.

The first regular season game at Oriole Park at Camden Yards was scheduled Monday against the Cleveland Indians.

Brady, who has been in a wheelchair since being shot during the attempted assassination of President Ronald Reagan in 1981, said the stadium's low concession stands, five elevators, incline ramps and wide corridors make it the most accessible of any major league park in the nation.

NEW YORK — Simone de Beauvoir and Jean-Paul Sartre were a singular couple in 20th-century intellectual life. On Monday night, Francine Du Plessix Gray, writer of novels and non-fiction, and Richard Howard, poet and poetry editor of The Paris Review, will read excerpts of the couple's letters in an evening sponsored by La Maison Francaise of New York University in conjunction with Arcade Publishing and Charles Scribner's Sons, publishers of two new anthologies of their correspondence.

Reading letters aloud requires a particular form of subtlety, Ms. Gray said. "They shouldn't be hammed up with dramatic reading. I don't think letters are ever suited to that. They should be read with attention to the emotional nuance. They should be made as personal, with intimacy of voice, as possible."

Ms. Gray described herself as a "big fan of Simone de Beauvoir. Her 'Second Sex' is the most majestic text for women's studies that has ever been published," she said. But the letters that interested her the most were those of 1939 and 1940, "those written during the coming of war in France."

"I remember as a child getting my gas mask; I remember the shelters," she said.

But there is also humor in the letters, Ms. Gray said. "We always think of Sartre as an austere academic man, but she calls him 'My dear little man in your sweet little blue pajamas.' It is hard to picture Sartre in his sweet little blue pajamas."

Prices rally

NEW YORK — Oil prices rallied Monday, reaching new highs for the year as a series of refinery troubles pushed up gasoline futures.

West Texas Intermediate for delivery in May settled at $20.45 per barrel, up 16 cents, on the New York Mercantile Exchange.

Local crude purchasers such as Scurlock Permian, Navajo Refining and Texaco Trading and Transportation raised their posted price 25 cents to $19.25

The benchmark U.S. crude had not settled that high since early December but has been soaring ahead in a rally that pushed up the price by more than $1 per barrel last week alone.

With the gasoline moving higher, other petroleum futures went along.

Natural gas prices were mixed, with contracts for delivery in May settling at $1.315 per 1,000 cubic feet, down 0.4 cent.

At the New York Mercantile Exchange, lower-grade sour crude for delivery in May settled at $17.85 per barrel, up 15 cents.

Dollar slumps

NEW YORK — The dollar settled mostly lower on world foreign exchange markets Monday as attention focused on European currencies.

In Tokyo, the dollar fell 0.17 yen to close at 133.40 yen.

In London, the British pound rose to $1.7500 from $1.7430 late Friday.

Stocks climb

NEW YORK — Stock prices rose broadly Monday in moderate trading, led by a continued rally in energy stocks.

It was the second straight increase in the Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks, which shot up 26.38 points to 3,275.49.

Advancing issues outnumbered declining ones by about 3 to 2 on the New York Stock Exchange.

T-bills fall

WASHINGTON — Interest rates on short-term Treasury securities fell in Monday's auction to the lowest level in seven weeks.

The Treasury Department sold $11.5 billion in three-month bills at an average discount rate of 3.95 percent, down from 4.08 percent last week.

Analysts: Oil rally temporary surprise

■ Big oil company, service company stocks lead Dow to strong gains.

Associated Press

HOUSTON — A surge in major oil company stocks in recent days brought an unseasonable surprise for industry analysts, who cautioned Monday the situation probably won't last.

"I think it's a short-term correction that the market is doing," Dale Steffes of Houston-based Planning and Forecasting Consultants said. "I don't see any big shortage of oil or energy in the world to cause it (the price) to stay up."

Big oil company stocks and those of their service companies led the Dow to strong gains on Friday and again on Monday, with seven of the 10 most active stocks related to petroleum. Texaco, which finished up 2 to 61, had more than 1.9 million shares traded Monday to be the second most active property behind AT&T, with 2.2 million shares traded..

Likewise, Exxon finished 1⅞ up to 57¾; Unocal was up 1¾ to 22⅞; USX-Marathon was up 1¼ to 22; Schlumberger rose 3⅝ to 58⅛; and Baker Hughes was up 1⅛ to 17¾. Of those most traded, only Pacific Gas & Electric dropped ¼ to 29¼.

"This is just probably within the normal cycle of missing on consumption, missing on production and missing on inventories," said Steffes, who predicted the oil bust of the mid-1980s. "All three of them are in cycle right now to be favorable to oil prices. I think that cycle will play out relatively fast.

"Then we'll be a little bit lower as the domestic exploration dollar moves overseas and becomes more productive," Steffes said. "Then world production will be up, I don't know about consumption and I don't know about inventories."

Ken Burke of Ernst & Young in Houston said the surge was a result of unexpected gains over low futures estimates.

"We had a market in place with respect to crude oil that was expecting a low-price scenario for the next year or two," Burke said. Now with Libya facing United Nations sanctions and others changes forcing a "fairly substantial" cutback in the price standards for nations belonging to the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, the surge was inevitable.

"We've seen oil prices going up overall a dollar last week," Burke said. "The major oils that had been valued in those low-price expectations saw that gain."

Both men said part of the surge resulted from a favorable report from the International Energy Agency in Paris, which indicated demand in the world was growing and could be up by 400,000 barrels a day.

"That's why it's a surprise," Burke said. "This is a traditionally weak time. When you look at the fundamentals, they're better than they were expected to be, so that waved through commodities markets and that's reflected through the majors."

Steffes said OPEC also could no longer count on Americans' dependence on foreign oil to keep prices high. He said major American firms also were curtailing domestic and Mideast drilling.

"That's going to make them weaker," Steffes said of OPEC. "We have American companies going to Latin America and other non-OPEC countries."

He said Texaco, for example, recently made a major find in Malaysia. Other companies are looking to Colombia or Brazil. He also predicted the breakup of the old Soviet Union would make that area "ripe for that investment dollar."

Most expensive motorcycle

Honda Motor Co. announced Monday it will launch the world's most expensive motorcycle in the Japanese market on May 25. The Honda NR sports motorcycle, shown here, is powered with a 747cc V-4 engine and is equipped with a high-performance suspension. It is priced at $39,000 because it uses expensive materials like titanium and magnesium to make it light.

Overall debt of consumers falls modestly

WASHINGTON (AP) — The overall debt of American consumers fell modestly in February despite a sharp increase in credit card borrowing, the government said Monday.

Consumer credit fell $199 million to $729.3 billion, a 0.3 percent decline at a seasonally adjusted annual rate, the Federal Reserve said. That followed a revised 0.1 percent rise in January, originally reported as a 0.3 percent drop.

In advance, most economists were expecting a $500 million or so increase in February, but they were not overly concerned by the unanticipated drop because other reports have shown sales gains at auto showrooms and department stores.

"We know spending was pretty good so the fact that consumer credit is declining modestly suggests consumers are still paying for things with cash," said economist Samuel D. Kahan of Fuji Securities Inc. in Chicago.

For all of 1991, consumer debt fell 0.8 percent, the first drop in 33 years.

GM makes Smith its new president

DETROIT (AP) — General Motors Corp. changed presidents Monday, installing what the company called more aggressive management to cut costs and regain profitability.

Vice Chairman John F. Smith was made president and chief operating officer while President Lloyd Reuss was made a vice president in charge of new vehicles.

GM has been struggling with record losses, which reached $4.5 billion in 1991. The company is in the midst of a huge restructuring that will close 21 plants and cut 74,000 jobs by 1995.

There had been rumors in Detroit and Wall Street last fall that Reuss was on the way out. But in December, GM Chairman Robert Stempel said, "Lloyd's my man."

A statement by the company left it unclear whether the change was Reuss's decision. The board of directors, of which Reuss is a member, voted unanimously after Stempel recommended the changes, the company said.

Mitchell to reorganize exploration, production

HOUSTON (AP) — Mitchell Energy & Development Corp. said Monday it will cut back on exploration to focus more on developing its existing oil and gas properties.

George P. Mitchell, president and chairman of The Woodlands-based company, said reorganization of its exploration and production division will be a major part of an overall plan to improve the company's competitiveness and enhance stock values.

Mitchell said the plan, which should be fully implemented during this fiscal year, will include cutbacks and disposition of some non-strategic assets.

The reorganization has been prompted by chronically depressed market prices for natural gas, Mitchell said.

"We've been hoping that the situation would improve, but it is increasingly apparent that it is in the company's best interest to reduce our exploration activity consistent with current market conditions, work on our excellent inventory of development prospects, and possibly acquire additional properties that we could further develop," he said.

Mitchell said the company hopes this year to fund normal operations from cash flow so that its overall debt can be maintained or reduced.

The reorganization will mean a first-quarter charge against earnings, Mitchell said, but he said the amount had not yet been determined. No other information on the plan was released.

As part of the exploration and production division slimdown, a voluntary early retirement plan will be offered to eligible salaried division employees.

Don Covey, division president, said some 50 to 60 of the division's 660 employees will be offered voluntary retirement.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Investor looks for best use of inheritance

By Bill Doyle

Q: I have an 8 percent mortgage, with $27,000 still to be paid. Due to an inheritance, I have $80,000 at my disposal. I'd love to pay off the mortgage balance and be finished with it, but I do have two children yet to go to college and a non-working spouse. I'm 41 years old, make about $50,000 a year and have $80,000 in a savings plan at work.

Doyle

Is there a formula to calculate the best way for me to go?

A: Not really. No one formula fits all family situations, each of which has its own variables. Even some general rules have to be bent occasionally. Here's an example: Any time money you have on hand is earning less than you are paying in loan interest, it pays to eliminate your debts. That's basic and incontrovertible, despite what some highbinders claim.

So, if the money you inherited is earning less than 8 percent, you would come out ahead – at least temporarily – by paying off your mortgage. On the other hand, if your inheritance is earning more than 8 percent, you would lose – now and in the long run – by retiring the mortgage.

That said, considering the low interest rates available from safe investments these days, it would seem you should have a mortgage-burning party. However, you present one of those variables mentioned above: college costs. If you will need that inherited money to pay for the kids' higher education, retain your mortgage. Its 8 percent rate is quite attractive and, by the time your children get their sheepskins, you might be earning more than 8 percent on whatever part of the inheritance you have left.

Q: I'm 71 years old. I'm not interested in growth mutual funds and I'm out of the stock market. I have an $80,255 certificate of deposit coming due later this month.

How can I invest the money so that it is tax-free and receives a higher interest rate than I could obtain by just rolling over the CD?

A: You can't, without taking on very high risk. Since you are "out of the market" – evidently after being in it – it's apparent you want to avoid risk. Smart thinking, unless you have a good deal more than that $80,255 tucked away someplace.

Investments producing tax-free interest always pay lower rates than taxable investments of similar quality. That's because issuers of tax-free investments, such as high-quality municipal bonds, don't have to pay high rates to attract buyers.

Low-quality "munis "do pay higher interest. But they carry with them risks of failure to meet interest payments and failure to redeem the bonds at face value when they mature.

My advice is to put the $80,255 into a CD with a maturity no longer than one year and hope interest rates rise by the time that CD is due to be rolled over.

Q: My wife and I plan to retire next year, when I will be 621/2. We own our home and a vacation cottage. Currently, we have $247,000 invested and will have another $221,000 to invest.

We are considering spreading that money among nine mutual funds: two growth funds, two growth-income funds, three income funds and two fixed-income funds.

If we dollar cost average into those funds monthly, where can we park our cash short-term to earn higher interest than is available in a money market?

A: Money market mutual funds traditionally have had higher yields than bank money market deposit accounts, which are quite different. In recent years, however, the gap has narrowed and now is virtually non-existent.

Your plan calls for nine monthly transfers into the mutual funds you picked. Dollar cost averaging – putting the same amount of money into the same security at fixed intervals – is a great way to invest. Do it! And stop fretting about relatively small differences in yield on your "cash position."

Broadway play offers Japanese translation

By Michael Kuchwara
Associated Press writer

NEW YORK — The language barrier has been broken on Broadway, at least for Japanese theatergoers who don't understand English.

"Shimada," which began preview performances Monday at the Broadhurst Theater, has become the first Broadway play to offer audiences simultaneous Japanese translation. The $1.5 million production opens April 23 and stars Ben Gazzara, Ellen Burstyn, Estelle Parsons and the actor Mako.

"We want to make the show more accessible, not only to Japanese residents here, but to the large number of Japanese tourists who come to New York and do go to Broadway, but usually only to musicals," said Richard Seader, one of the producers of "Shimada."

The market could be sizable. Seader said the New York metropolitan area is home to some 80,000 to 90,000 Japanese citizens who work in the United States. And more than 417,000 Japanese tourists visited New York in 1990, the last year for which figures were available, according to the New York Visitors and Convention Bureau.

"Shimada," written by Australian playwright Jill Shearer, is a drama that should appeal to American and Japanese audiences, Seader said.

"The play is about the Japanese acquiring foreign businesses," he explained. "It deals with what our headlines are proclaiming every day. But it's a personal story, too. It concerns a man who was a prisoner of war in World War II Burma and the prison guard who watched him."

The Japanese translation was recorded by a Japanese actor and actress. It will be about 95 percent dialogue and 5 percent description.

"The recording heard by audiences will be controlled by a sound engineer in the back of the theater," Seader said. "Audiences will be able to rent headsets hooked up to our regular sound system, although the Japanese translation will be on a separate channel from our system for the hearing-impaired. There will be no interference."

The cost will be $5 per headset, Seader said.
