In wake of break, jail security to be stepped up

By RICHARD ORR
Staff Writer

While Chief of Police Wayne Gideon doesn't think security at the city jail has been lax, he will be taking steps to ensure that a repeat of last week's jail break won't happen.

Foremost among them are the prospect of closed-circuit TV monitoring of the lockup and the possibility of hiring additional jail personnel. Also, windows on the second-floor will be kept locked and inmates will no longer be allowed to place tissue paper on the light fixtures to shield their eyes while they sleep.

The windows had been allowed to be kept open to enhance air flow in the jail's evaporative cooling system, and the tissue paper had the effect of darkening the cellblock from which four federal prisoners escaped June 11. They were still at large this morning and are considered armed and dangerous.

"Contrary to what some people think," said Gideon, "the majority of prisoners are intelligent and all they have to do up there is plot ways to beat the system."

Terming the break "very, very well-planned," Gideon said the escapees employed a rope made of blanket strips, a walkie-talkie and a mop handle in the breakout. The walkie-talkie was used to communicate with accomplices on the outside and had been smuggled into the jail by a trusty. The trusty may be charged with aiding and abetting the escape when the ongoing investigation is completed.

Using the mop handle and the makeshift rope, the prisoners were able push out a heavy wire mesh screen on the bottom portion of the open second-floor window and haul several hacksaw blades and a large pipe wrench into the jail. They then spent two to three days cutting through the bars that separated them from the window — periodically disposing of the metal filings and using toothpaste that matched the color of the bars to conceal their efforts.

Although the jail "is frequently checked," noted Gideon, inmates can hear jailers coming down the corridors and have time to hide what they may be doing. Gideon said the federal prisoners were last "thoroughly checked" at 10 p.m. June 10. The night jailer goes off duty at 11 p.m., and it's then up to the desk sergeant to check inmates until the day jailer comes on duty in the morning.

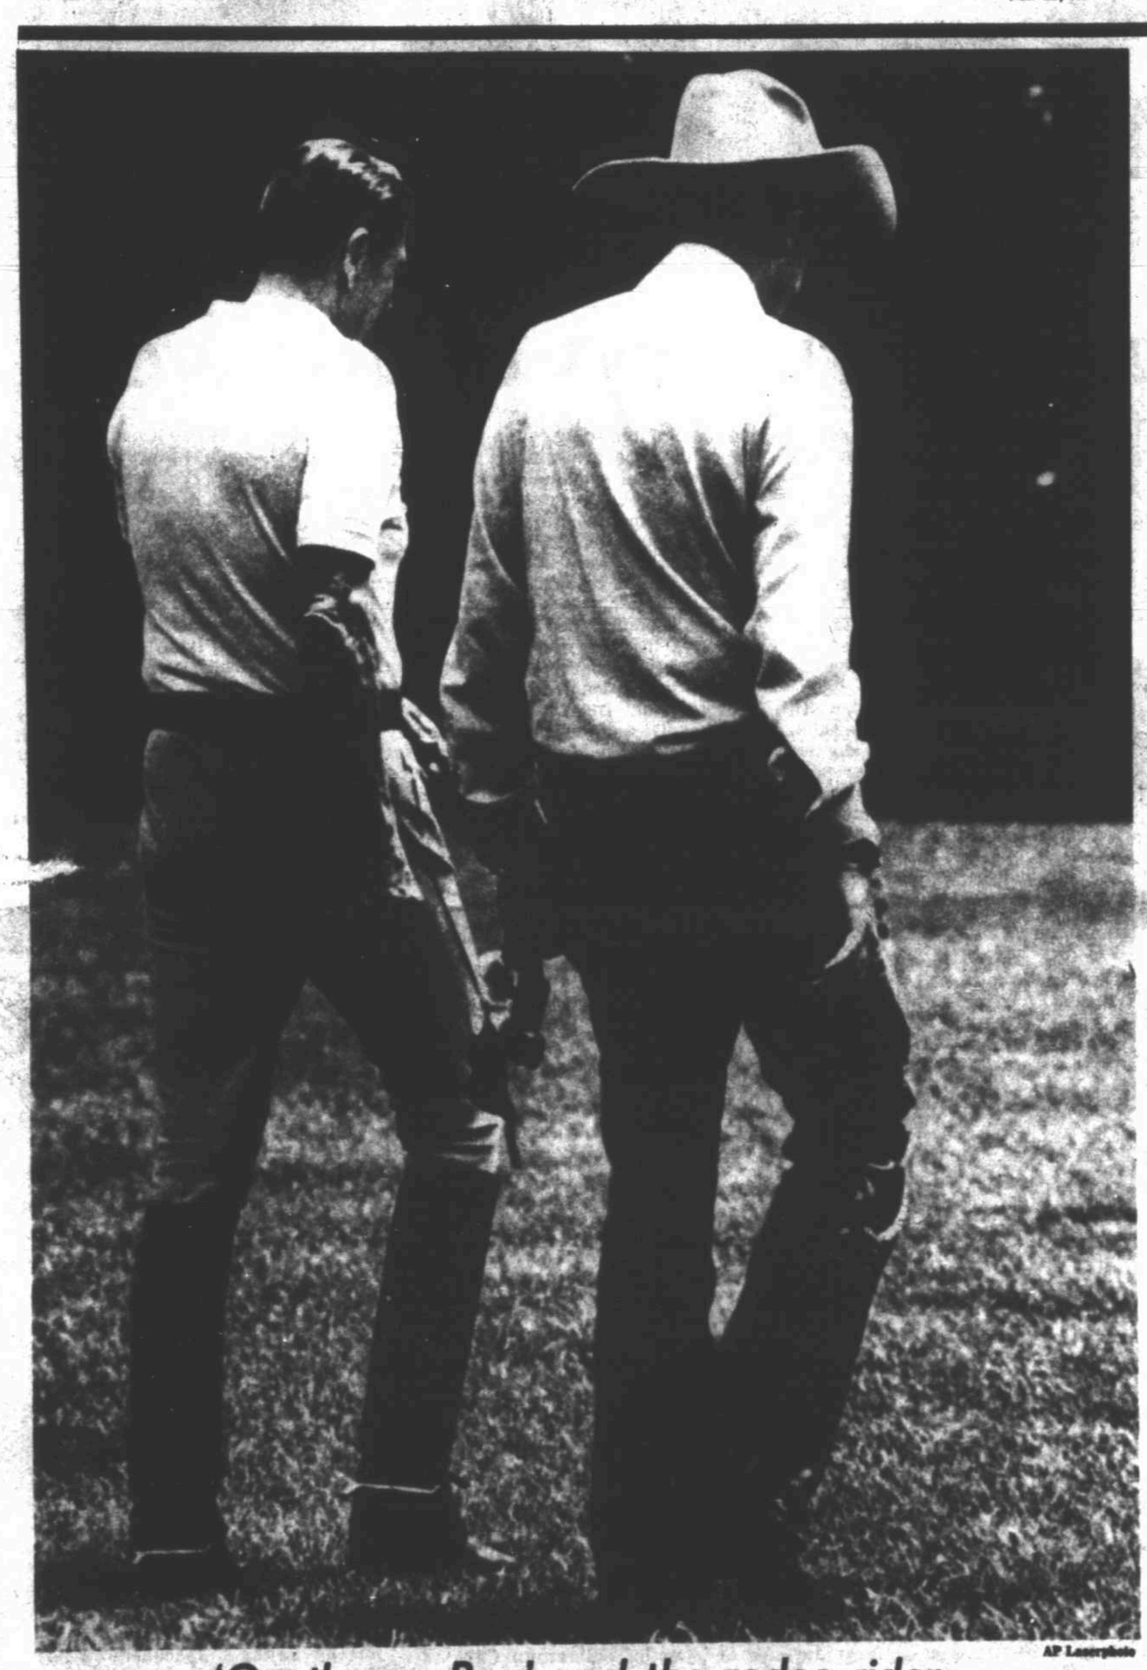

But the desk sergeant has other responsibilities and, according to Gideon, additional jailers need to be employed by the department. Other measures to tighten security are under consideration.

'Gentleman Ron' and the rodeo rider

President Reagan, left, dressed in eastern riding attire, walks with Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige, dressed in western wear and carrying spurs, to the presidential helicopter on the South Lawn of the White House. The two Wednesday flew to Quantico Marine Base, Quantico, Va., to share a favorite pastime — horseback riding.

House panel busy rewriting tax bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Republican-controlled Senate Finance Committee today began writing a tax-cut bill that likely will parallel President Reagan's proposal as House tax-writers considered major changes in the president's plan.

The House Ways and Means Committee, where Democrats have a 2-1 majority, voted Wednesday to reject Reagan's formula for cutting business taxes. The committee today began drafting details of its own proposal.

Traditionally the Senate Finance Committee begins work on tax legislation only after the House panel writes its bill. But senators are starting early in an effort to insure a tax cut can become effective Oct. 1.

Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan., who heads the finance committee, said today, "Now is the time to act. Taxpayers have been kept in suspense long enough.... We have a chance to show how effective Congress can be in promptly addressing the needs of the nation."

Dole said his committee will try to complete work on the bill one week from today. Under that schedule, it would be considering personal tax cuts at least a week before the House panel.

The House panel is endorsing a plan that would lower the maximum corporate tax and allow businesses to write off equipment investments all at once.

Key committee Democrats also have agreed to speed up Reagan's proposed reduction of the "marriage tax" on two-income couples as part of a two-year tax cut that would target most of the relief toward those earning less than $50,000 a year.

The House committee's business tax plan would provide about the same half-trillion dollars in tax relief over the next 10 years that Reagan sought, but in a far different way.

As a stimulus to business investment, Reagan proposed that companies be allowed a quicker tax write-off — or depreciation — of money spent for buildings and machinery. Most expenditures could be recovered through tax deductions over 15, five or three years.

The House committee, by a 20-14 vote Wednesday, recommended instead that businesses be allowed to write off the price of most machinery in the year it is bought.

The commmittee's plan also would reduce the maximum corporate tax rate from the current 46 percent to 34 percent by 1986 and aim other cuts at helping small business. But the Democratic plan would eliminate the investment tax credit, which now can wipe out up to 10 percent of the taxes a business owes.

The committee has not decided how most buildings should be treated in its plan. But members agreed to a Reagan-backed proposal, designed to help deteriorating inner cities, that would liberalize the investment tax credit for rehabilitating buildings.

Rep. Barber B. Conable of New York, the House comittee's senior Republican, assailed the substitute as "a pig in a poke" that is geared to large corporations and does nothing to ensure added investment.

Commissioners hear few complaints on valuations

By ED TODD

Midland County commissioners turned "tax men" Wednesday, reduced the assessed valuations on oil, gas and other minerals and on the capital structure of Midland's six banks by 20 percent, and, like the fellow waiting for the street car that never showed up, just waited.

The wrath of the taxpayers seemed to bypass the commissioners, who were into their final meeting as the board of equalization. They received nary a complaint on the county's $1.66 billion in assessed valuations.

"We need a domino game started," jested Commissioner Win Brown amid the lull of waiting.

Complaints were almost nil last year, too.

"They (taxpayers) just wanted to complain about taxes in general," recalled Commissioner Durward Wright. He said the taxpayers weren't unhappy with the county's valuations on taxable property, but were using the commissioners "as a sounding board," Wright said.

The board began its day-long wait by knocking off 20 percent of the assessed valuations of banks and on oil, gas and other minerals appraised on 1981 values.

"They (the banks and minerals) had 1981 values, and all the other (real) property had 1957 valuations," Commissioner Charlie Welch said in explaining why the valuations were reduced to make them equitable with other property.

While the Midland banks and countywide minerals were subject to the "inflationary" values of 1980 or 1981, other property is being taxed by the county on values of the late 1950s. "That can hardly be equal," said Welch.

"The situation was out of bounds, but we corrected it," he said.

Representations of the banks expressed much satisfaction with the measures, which the county's board of equalization accorded mineral interests last year but not then to the banks.

"Charlie, we appreciated it (the 20 percent cut) then too," said Ray Clayton, the Tulsa, Okla., tax representative for Cities Services Co.

"We're glad to be a part of Midland County," he said. With a value in excess of $100 million, Cities Services is Midland County's largest taxpayer.

"We're glad to have you," said Wright.

Midland County's tax revenue is based on $1.6 billion in assessed valuations. County tax revenue in 1981 is expected to total $5 million, though the new county tax rate has not yet

U.S., Iraq negotiating a U.N. resolution

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The United States and Iraq are trying to negotiate a veto-proof U.N. Security Council resolution that would censure Israel for its destruction of an Iraqi nuclear reactor.

The Reagan administration said, meanwhile, it could not support Israel's claim that Iraq was planning to build an atomic bomb at the Baghdad reactor. That assessment drew a sharp rbuke from Isael's friends in Congress.

"There's been some movement, there's been some hope" of negotiating a resolution acceptable to all sides, U.S. Ambassador Jeane J. Kirpatrick told reporters Wednesday night after working for two hours on a draft resolution with Iraqi Foreign Minister Saadoun Hammadi, Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim and the ambassadors of Britain and Mexico.

She said she would confer with officials in Washington on the new draft.

Hammadi said there "could be a consensus or there could be a breakdown."

Mrs. Kirkpatrick would not say whether the draft called for sanctions against Israel. U.S. officials have said privately that Washington might support a resolution condemning Israel's June 7 raid and calling for compensation to Iraq, but certainly would veto sanctions or "reparations."

The 15-member council has spent five days debating Iraq's demand that Israel be punished for destroying the Baghdad reactor. Israel claims it bombed the reactor to stall Iraqi plans to build atomic bombs for use against the Jewish state.

It takes nine affirmative council votes to adopt a resolution, but any of the five permanent members — the United States, the Soviet Union, China, France or Britain — can veto it.

Efforts to extinguish fire at Rankin well site delayed

From Staff and Wire Reports

RANKIN — Preparations are being made for the use of explosives in an effort to kill an oil well fire that has been burning out of control for six days about seven miles southwest of this West Texas town.

Oil well fire experts Boots & Coots Inc., along with about 50 other contracted firefighters, will try to halt the blaze by blowing out the well with explosives, but it probably won't happen until sometime next week, officials from Terra Resources, the Houston firm that owns the well, said this morning.

Iron debris is being cleared from the site to prevent re-ignition of escaping oil and gas once the fire is put out.

The initial explosion last Friday, possibly the result of a pressure build-up, destroyed three mobile homes and a derrick, officials said. A six-member drilling crew at the site when the fire broke out escaped unharmed.

Officials said the cause of the fire is still under investigation.

Bentsen may be hard to beat

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. John Tower, R-Texas, has warned fellow Republicans that Democratic Sen. Lloyd Bentsen will be hard to defeat in the 1982 elections.

"I think Lloyd is in very good position politically in the state and will be a very formidable candidate," said Tower.

Rep. Jim Collins of Dallas and State Sen. Walter Mengden are contemplating a challenge of Bentsen, but neither has asked his advice, Tower said.

His advice, he said, "would depend on who the person was and what the political situation was at the time. But I would think it would be fairly confidential advice, and I would not tell the press."

In a news conference, Tower refused to be drawn into any remarks that might be taken as critical of Bentsen, who three years ago took a virtually neutral position and gave little support to the race that then-Rep. Bob Krueger made against Tower.

A reporter asked Tower's opinion of a pollster's view that the best way for Republicans to beat Bentsen is to portray him as a wealthy Texan out of touch with the voters.

"I think I'd have no comment on that," Tower said.

Shouldn't the GOP concentrate its resources toward reelecting Gov. Bill Clements and getting more Republicans elected to the House, somebody else asked?

"I think obviously the major Republican effort should be on winnable races. Period," Tower said.

"Obviously, there are some very qualified Democrats whose views on national issues probably more closely coincide with the consensus Republican view than with the consensus Democratic view. Obviously we'd like to have them," Tower said.

Tower was asked specifically if Reps. Phil Gramm of College Station and Kent Hance of Lubbock, who have played leading roles in pushing President Reagan's spending and tax cut programs, are among the "very qualified" possible converts.

"I'm not going to call out names," Tower said.

A rose for Sakowitz

Mayor Pro Tem Tom Sloan, left, joins Mrs. Bernard Sakowitz and her son, Robert T. Sakowitz, in symbolically planting a yellow rose bush at the groundbreaking ceremonies at Midland Park Mall Wednesday. Sakowitz, an exclusive fashion specialty store, is scheduled to open in spring of 1982.

Sakowitz construction under way

The "yellow rose of Texas" brought special meaning to groundbreaking ceremonies for Sakowitz at Midland Park Mall Wednesday as Mayor Pro Tem Tom Sloan joined Chairman of the Board, President and Chief Executive Officer Robert T. Sakowitz in manning shovels to symbolically plant a yellow rose bush at the construction site.

According to Sakowitz, the yellow rose — which also adorned tables, hosts and hostesses at the private luncheon following the groundbreaking — signified Sakowitz' pride in being "the last privately owned fashion chain in Texas."

Construction of the 35,000-square-foot store to be located at the Mall is expected to be completed by the spring of 1982.

"We have advanced our projected opening date of fall 1982 to spring because we sensed the enthusiasm of the West Texas residents about our new home in Midland-Odessa," Sakowitz said. "We look forward to serving our new friends who believe in Sakowitz concept of specialized merchandising and personal service in an elegant but intimate surrounding."

Designed by Hellmuth, Obata and Kassabaum, Inc., the newest Sakowitz store will be constructed by Area Builders.

The interior structural design utilizes a unique system of varying ceiling heights and floor levels, angular walls and a sunken center court with a skylight to create an unusual diamond-shaped spatial experience, according to Sakowitz spokespersons. The effect of the lighting tends to create openess in the center accessories and home furnishings areas, gradually diminishing to the perimeters to the apparel sections.

"We have also included a central area for selected accessories for the home," Sakowitz said. "Our new store has been designed to cater to the particular needs and desires of the Midland-Odessa residents."

The store represents a floor plan that has been designed from original inception utilizing the special Sakowitz "I.D.A. concept of merchandising — innovational, directional and acceptational." Innovational areas of merchandise and fashion are located in the center core of the store, directional areas fan out from the center and acceptational areas form the perimeter.

To simplify shopping, each member of the Sakowitz staff will be trained to cater to an individual client regardless of store department areas. "We call this approach 'one to one' service and it's already been proven successful in the Sakowitz II stores at Champions and NASA in Houston," Sakowitz said. "It also facilitates total wardrobe planning, a growing trend in sophisticated fashion shopping throughout America. The old department store staffing by physical departmental separation, or what I call the 'that's not my table' approach to customer service, is more than obsolete today; it is annoying. One to one is more professional to an individual's shopping mindset."

All fixtures, wall coverings and furniture will be custom made to Sakowitz specifications. Counter fixtures will be made of natural Bird's Eye Maple complimenting the angular plexiglas and chrome floor fixtures. Floor coverings will be soft salmon-toned imported marble, seafoam green and mauve carpeting with highlighted areas in grey with dark grey banding. Wall coverings will be in pastel shades of seafoam green and mauve to blend with the floor coverings.

Sakowitz, Inc. is the 79-year-old privately owned and family operated fashion specialty store with headquarters in Houston. Beginning in 1902 in Galveston, the brothers Simon and Tobais Sakowitz opened a haberdashery for men's and boys' apparel. Since then, Sakowitz has added more than 15 stores.

Gradual warming trend continues in Permian Basin

The record-low temperatures in the upper 40s that greeted residents of the Permian Basin Tuesday and Wednesday mornings became more seasonable today, as the mercury dipped only to 64 degrees, far above the all-time low for the date of 52 set in 1945.

The front which swept through the area Monday and plummeted temperatures has dissipated, and early morning temperatures should be in the mid-60s the next couple of days, according to the National Weather Service.

The afternoon high Wednesday reached 87 degrees — moderate in comparison with the record high of 106 set in 1973 — and the warming trend should push Friday's high up to the mid-90s.

Although skies are expected to exhibit early morning cloudiness, no rainfall is expected. The yearly total stands at 6.58 inches, with 0.43 of that recorded during the first half of June.

Partly cloudy skies and warm temperatures were forecast for all of Texas today.

Highs were to be in the 80s and 90s except in the Big Bend area of Southwest Texas where readings were to be around or slightly above the 100-degree mark.

Skies were clear over most of Texas early today. No rain was being reported in the drenched, flood-stricken South Central Texas area early today.

Skies were mostly clear around the state early today. Early morning temperatures were in the 60s and 70s. Extremes ranged from 60 at El Paso to 76 at Port Arthur, Houston and McAllen.

Isolated thunderstorms rumbled from the upper Mississippi Valley into Michigan early today, scattered thundershowers fell in parts of Florida and the Carolinas, and light rain was reported along the Washington coast.

Harrelson friend may testify before Wood grand jury

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — A man described as a lifelong friend of convicted hired killer Charles V. Harrelson has been called to testify before a grand jury investigating the assassination of a federal judge.

George Edward "Pete" Kay, a Huntsville nightclub operator, was subpoenaed Wednesday but waited all day without being called. He is expected to take the stand today in the panel's investigation of the 1979 shooting death of U.S. District Judge John H. Wood Jr.

Kay was asked to testify as the grand jury looked for evidence of any link between Harrelson and convicted narcotics trafficker Jimmy Chagra.

Government attorneys have listed Harrelson and Chagra as "targets" of the two-year-old investigation.

Kay's attorney, Jim Moore of Houston, said he expected Kay to be offered immunity and compelled to testify. Two others who have refused to answer questions under similar circumstances have been jailed for civil contempt of court.

The bearded Kay would not comment on whether he would testify under immunity and Moore said, "we'd better wait and see what the government is going to do."

The grand jury interrogated eight witnesses on Wednesday, including a casino dice dealer who once received a $6,600 tip from Chagra and two Florida pilots who flew Chagra to Las Vegas.

The panel, meeting for the first time in a month, also pursued an alleged "payoff" for Wood's assassination in 1979.

Robert Mike Springer, who said he was a dice dealer at Binion's Horsehoe Casino in Las Vegas, said he was questioned about whether he remembered Chagra and Harrelson gambling together in 1979.

"They (jurors) thought I could connect Chagra and that other guy (Harrelson), and I couldn't," Springer told reporters after his appearance.

Springer said, however, he remembered Chagra because the high-stakes gambler "toked" (tipped) him $6,600 one time, but that by house rules the tip had to be divided with all other casino employees on that shift.

He said he did not know Harrelson or Harrelson's wife, Joan Starr Harrelson, who reportedly gambled at the same casino.

Fort Lauderdale charter pilots Dan Pavelka and Bill Dimauro said they were questioned about the all-night flight of Chagra and two Mexican maids from Florida to Las Vegas.

Pavelka said Chagra used the alias "Jimmy Alexander" on the Lear Jet flight and he remembered nothing special about it.

Pavelka said he was shown "a bunch of pictures" and he recognized Chagra and Earl McLennan, a Coral Springs, Fla., man held in contempt on May 8 for refusing to testify in the Wood investigation.

McLennan was sentenced to one-year in prison at Boston on May 12 for aiding and abetting Chagra during a six-month period that Chagra was a fugitive.

The prosecutor also "must have reeled off 30 names, but I never recognized any of them" except one name that sounded like a Florida automobile dealer, Pavelka said.

Pavelka said he also was asked whether he flew Chagra's wife, Elizabeth, to Corpus Christi on June 18, 1979. That is the date investigators have questioned other witnesses about in regard to an alleged payoff to Harrelson's step-daughter on Padre Island.

He said he told the jurors he had never been to South Texas before.

Also appearing Wednesday were the father, brother and an acquaintance of Houston policeman Carl Nelius, who testified earlier this year about some .243-caliber rifles he purchased years ago.

Nelius' attorney said then that investigators were checking all the .243-caliber rifles sold in the United States in recent years and was trying to account for one of the weapons Nelius had purchased.

The two Nelius family members and the third man declined to identify themselves to news reporters.

Wood, 63, was shot in the back with a single .243-caliber bullet on May 29, 1979, outside his San Antonio apartment. He had been scheduled to preside at Chagra's trial on a drug-related continuing criminal enterprise charge.

Chagra jumped bond after he subsequently was convicted in Austin in August 1979, was captured in Las Vegas in February 1980 and currently is serving a 30 year prison term without parole.

Harrelson, a native of Lovelady near Huntsville who served a 15-year sentence for a hired killing, is held without bond at the Harris County Jail in Houston on state narcotics, weapons and gambling paraphernalia charges.

Also testifying Wednesday were two middle-age men with gray hair who would not reveal their identities to reporters.

Two other witnesses were jailed for civil contempt for refusing to testify after being granted immunity and compelled to answer questions.

been determined by Commissioners' Court.

The capital structure of Midland's banks account for about 6 percent of the $1.6 billion in countywide valuations, while oil, gas and minerals account for about 30 percent of the total valuations, according to Midland County Tax Assessor-Collector Frances Shuffield.

The 20 percent blanket reductions on the banks's assessed values dropped the amount on which they will be taxed by the county from $95.6 million to $76.5 million.

The decrease dropped the assessed valuations on the county's 1,058 oil-and-gas leases from $650 million to $520 million, said Jim Rapier, district manager for Pritchard & Abbott, valuation engineers who place values on Midland County's minerals. P&A places values on reserves of mineral property and on well-head equipment and tank batteries.

"I think the banks were very pleased (with the 20 percent reduction)," said Ms. Shuffield, who also noted the satisfaction of the oil industry here. "The people were happy" with valuations set by the county.

"We got some increases and some decrease (on other values)," she said.

Wednesday's meeting was the last time the county commissioners will meet as the board of equalization. Under the central appraisal system enacted by law, the board of equalization for Midland' six taxing entities is to be appointed by the Midland County Tax Appraisal District.

Homes reported burglarized

In theft and burglary complaints filed with city police during the past 24 hours, R.H. Wilson of 4622 Princeton Ave. said his residence was broken into and assorted items worth $2,083 were taken.

An employee of the Continental Trailways bus station, 703 W. Wall Ave., told officers $300 in cash was missing from a cabinet in the establishment, and Thomas Jones of 1215 S. Dallas St. said cash, watches and a camera worth a total of $570 were stolen from his residence. Entry was gained through a bedroom window.

And Joe Salazar, 1204 W. Tennessee Ave. reported that his home was burglarized. Missing were 200 old pennies, $250 worth of silver dollars, assorted tools and buck knife. Total loss was placed at $890.

State joins investigation into adulterated orange juice

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Concerned about the reputation of the state's premier product, the Florida Citrus Department has joined federal officials in an investigation into adulterated orange juice.

The state authorities and the U.S. Food and Drug Administration are looking into charges that a number of out-of-state processors are using pulp from Florida oranges and other additives in what is supposed to be 100-percent pure juice.

Most of the orange juice consumed in the nation comes from Florida, which has strict guidelines for processing fruit into juice.

For the past two years, however, leaders of the state's billion-dollar industry have been complaining to the FDA that a number of out-of-state processors have been using pulp waste, sugar or sugar substitutes and other additives without saying so on their labels. This is added to pure juice to "stretch" it and cut costs.

The procedure is a violation of FDA standards of identity, which require that 100-percent orange juice not be derived from pulp. The pulp legally can be used to make orange drinks, orange soda pop or animal feeds.

But now, because of an amendment by U.S. Sen. Lawton Chiles, D-Fla., to an appropriations bill, the FDA has field personnel to make spot checks of processors and packagers. The Florida department also has been turning over its findings to the federal agency.

FDA spokesman Wayne Pines said in Washington on Wednesday that the agency expects to complete its investigation within 60 days.

Should the probe turn up violations, the fake juice could be seized and the makers forced to stop producing it. The manufacturers also would be subject to criminal penalties, Pines said.

Although no health question is involved, the practice puts ethical processors at a disadvantage because using pulp is cheaper than making juice wholly from oranges, Pines said.

Dr. Bernie Lester, executive director of the Florida Citrus Department, said there is concern that widespread publicity about the problem will hurt sales of all orange juice. He said the department is assuring consumers the product packed in Florida is 100-percent pure juice.

Judge refuses to order more busing for Houston

By SHARON HERBAUGH
Associated Press Writer

HOUSTON (AP) — In a stinging indictment of forced busing, a federal judge says Houston's public schools have done the best they can to achieve racial balance and should be required to do nothing more.

"Court-imposed busing is extremely disruptive to public education," U.S. District Judge Robert O'Conor wrote in a 39-page memorandum and order issued Wednesday.

"It tends to divert attention from the foremost goal of the schools to provide the highest quality education for all students and to exacerbate racial conflicts and biases," the ruling said.

The decision by O'Conor was the latest chapter in a desegration suit filed against the Houston Independent School District nearly a quarter of a century ago.

The original suit was filed in September 1956 on behalf of a 9-year-old black girl who was denied admittance at an all-white elementary school two blocks from her home. The Justice Department intervened on her behalf in the 1960s, and Hispanics entered the case in the 1970s.

Since then, O'Conor said, "The HISD has taken legally required affirmative action to achieve the greatest possible degree of school desegregation, having taken into account the practicalities of the situation."

O'Conor's ruling declaring the Houston district "unitary" requires school officials to report student enrollments by race every six months for the next three years.

Former school board president Tarrant Fendley said the ruling was a salute to the Houston school district. "The fact the judge has declared the system unitary is a congratulatory comment to all the people over many years who have worked so very diligently to see this come about," he said.

A spokesman for the Justice Department here said it was "too early" to decide if the ruling would be appealed.

The plaintiffs, including Delores Ross Phlegm who is now 34 years old, could not be reached for comment immediately.

In his order, O'Conor expressed a distate for busing, noting Houston's streets were congested with traffic and the school district spans about 313 miles.

"Widespread compulsory busing of HISD students would exceed the remedy necessary," he said.

O'Conor noted that 97 of the district's 238 schools were one-race schools, with at least 90 percent of the student body in one racial group. But he said that simply could not be helped.

"The diminishing white population makes it impossible to integrate the one-race minority school in the inner city of Houston," O'Conor said. "There are simply not enough white students in the HISD."

The judge said the proportion of white students in Houston's school has decreased from about half in 1970 to 27.3 percent today.

O'Conor, the fourth federal judge to preside over the long and complicated case, also said the school district has successfully integrated its faculty and staff.

"This Court approves of the HISD's demonstrated efforts and success in completely desegregating its teachers, administrators and other personnel," the judge declared. He denied a motion by the plaintiffs to order a change in the racial ratio of the faculty.

The ruling ends the 24-year-old litigation at the district court level, although it could be appealed.

Last June, O'Conor denied a Justice Department request to seek a desegration plan that would have lumped the Houston district in with 22 suburban district.

In his ruling Wednesday, O'Conor frequently praised Houston's integration efforts.

"The HISD has acted in good faith in carrying out its plan for dismantling the state-imposed dual system and there are no feasible alternative plans that are more promising in providing effective relief," the judge said.

O'Conor said he opposed busing because it "puts the full burden of remedial action...on the children and parents."

Busing did not work here in the past and would not work today, he said.

"The limited busing imposed...in 1970 was woefully ineffective over its five-year history," O'Conor wrote. One reason, he said, was the "white flight" from public schools.

"The majority of the white non-Hispanic students involved in the pairings had either moved or enrolled in private school and were not present in September as had been projected by the Court," O'Conor said.

He said he was aware "of the Supreme Court's holding that fear of white flight 'cannot...be accepted as a reason for achieving anything less than complete uprooting of the dual public school system.'

"However, in considering various permissible plans, one calculated to minimize white boycotts may be preferred," O'Conor said.

Anti-busing filibuster continues

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Majority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr. says a one-man filibuster against an anti-busing amendment may go on intermittently for days, but he plans no immediate effort to halt it.

"I don't plan to do it right away," Baker, R-Tenn., told reporters. "We will probably use up most of the week on this and other bills."

It takes 60 votes to limit debate in the Senate. Minority Leader Robert C. Byrd, D-W. Va., said there "might be" that many votes to cut off the filibuster by Sen. Lowell Weicker, R-Conn.

"Support for that type of amendment has been pretty strong in the past," Byrd said.

Weicker conceded that he has no hopes of preventing adoption of the amendment, telling the Senate that "clearly the votes are here."

The amendment, sponsored by Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., would bar Justice Department lawyers from seeking court-ordered busing for school integration. It is proposed as part of a $2.46 billion authorization bill for the department. A similar amendment was adopted in the House.

Congress approved such an amendment as part of a Justice Department spending bill last November, but then-President Carter vetoed the bill on grounds that the amendment unconstitutionally infringed on the powers of the executive branch of government.

President Reagan has said he regards busing for racial integration as a failure, but deputy White House press secretary Karna Small said no advance announcement would be made as to whether the president would sign a bill with such an amendment.

Judge's refusal seen as 'victory'

HOUSTON (AP) — A federal judge's refusal to order further desegregation efforts in city schools is "a tremendous victory," Superintendent Billy Reagan says — but government attorneys say they may appeal the decision.

Reagan said he hopes Wednesday — the day the ruling was handed down by U.S. District Judge Robert O'Conor — "goes down as the day of accomplishment, of having closed a chapter in the history of Houston, Texas and the nation that no one can look back on with pride."

O'Conor ruled that the Houston Independent School District had done its best to achieve racial balance. His order was the most recent in a suit filed in 1956 in behalf of a black girl who was denied admittance to an all-white school two blocks from her home.

"Our job is now to provide equality of access to educational opportunities for all children in this district...and to maintain integrated schools," Reagan said.

John O'Sullivan, secretary-treasurer of the Houston Federation of Teachers, also approved of the ruling, saying "most teachers will applaud the fact that they don't have to deal with yet another of bureaucracy."

Attorneys for the plaintiffs said they were not surprised by the ruling, and did not rule out the possibility of an appeal to the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals.

"We won't appeal just for the hell of it," said Weldon Berry, attorney for the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. He said he would base his decision on the chance of success.

Judge won't allow intervention

SHREVEPORT, La. (AP) — A federal judge has denied efforts by an assistant professor at Southern University-Shreveport to intervene in the already-settled Caddo Parish school desegregation case.

June Phillips argued that the desegregation plan worked a hardship on black children, closing schools they attended, leaving others in schools for which no special programs had been provided.

The judge said both the U.S. Justice Department and the Caddo Parish School Board said her statistics were inaccurate. But more important, she filed after the case was already settled.

"In view of the fact that the court has found (her) attempted intervention to be untimely, it follows that any further filings by her will not be considered," said U.S.District Judge Tom Stagg in his ruling.

Rejection of plan requested

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — The Legal Defense Fund of the NAACP has recommended that the federal government reject South Carolina's $19.5 million plan to desegregate its colleges and universities, a spokesman says.

"There are important weaknesses that should be modified before it is accepted," said Elliott Lichtman, an attorney for the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

Litchtman said late Wednesday that the objections centered on what the civil rights group considers duplication of programs at predominantly black South Carolina State College and three predominantly white campuses.

The NAACP also believes the governor can do more by power of appointment to integrate the state's board for technical and comprehensive education and the State College Board of Trustees, he said. The trustees govern the College of Charleston, Francis Marion College and Lander College.

Space may give clues to quakes

By BOB CORBETT
Copley News Service

Scientists are now beginning to reach out billions of light-years into space to measure movements in the Earth's crust that amount to only a few centimeters a year, a mere fraction of an inch.

Their hope is that these minute motions in the manner that the Earth exercises -- stretches, contracts, swells and subsides -- will give them a clue to the nature and mechanisms of earthquakes, one of the world's most terrifying and destructive natural phenomena and one of the least understood.

Despite a lot of claims and halfway successes, no one has yet come up with a sure way to predict earthquakes.

The new project is called ARIES, for Astronomical Radio Interferometric Earth Survey, and is being run by the Jet Propulsion Laboratory in Pasadena, Calif.

However, the project is so widely based that it involves the cooperation of a number of scientific centers.

Eventually, the program will garner readings from the entire western portion of the United States.

The ideale and the JPL scientists are just now putting the concept to work, said Dr. John Davidson, operations director for the ARIES program.

"The quasars represent fixed points in the sky," Davidson said in a recent interview. They are so far out, he explained, that they don't move like the ordinary stars man can see in the heavens on a clear night. To us, they seem constant.

The ARIES project will monitor about 17 of the brightest known quasars over many years to come, he indicated. One of them, known only as 3C 273 after its catalog number, is more than 8 billion light-years from Earth.

A light-year is the distance that light travels, at 186,000 miles per second, in one year. That amounts to more than 6 trillion miles. So, when you're talking about the distance to quasars, you're dealing with trillions times billions of miles.

And yet, according to Davidson, these quasars will allow scientists to measure the movement of the Earth's mobile crust at rates of only a centimeter or two a year.

That is the kind of information that geophysicists need, he said, to gain a handle on earthquake prediction. Actually, Davidson said, he doesn't like the phrase earthquake prediction. It suggests, he said, an ability to predict a year, a day, a time for an earthquake.

Another JPL expert, Charles Vegos, noted that the contractions, upliftings and subsidence of the Earth's crust have been associated at times with major earthquakes. The recent great Chinese earthquakes and the Long Beach, Calif., earthquake back in the 1930s are examples, he noted.

More recently, there has been the case of the Palmdale Bulge, in which the earth, over a wide area of Southern California from Santa Barbara to the border areas of Arizona, rose between 25 and 40 centimeters and then subsided about half that distance. The bulge became an ominous factor for a while in the 1970s. The readings, however, have since been challenged by other researchers on the ground that the Earth-based measurements were in error.

The debate over the bulge has continued to the present day.

The quasar readings could provide a solution to the argument.

Although Davidson doesn't like "prediction," he is interested in what he calls "earthquake" hazard reduction. That expression, he explained, means being able to identify regions of the country and time spans during which such areas might be at high risk of experiencing tremors.

Such an ability, he said, would allow local governments and others to prepare to limit the dangers, to alert hospitals to get fire trucks out of fire stations and to mobilize civilian defense systems.

"It would help a lot in human terms," he said.

The ARIES program, he said, depends on receiving accurate readings from the quasars at points whose locations are well defined.

These are dozens of sites that will be utilized by the ARIES project with its mobile four-meter radio antenna and several known radio observatories such as Goldstone and Owens Valley.

It's a process called very long base line interferometry, which means, in simple terms, receiving simultaneous signals from a fixed source at scattered listening stations.

The antennae at these locations read the radio signals from the quasars on particular wavelengths, portions of the electromagnetic spectrum which cannot be seen by the eye, Davidson explained.

In addition to the fact that the quasars are fixed points, he noted, they also give out fixed signals. He called them "flickers."

The system that has been developed by the ARIES programs, he said, is designed to read those flickers, first at one station and then another. The time difference between the signals arriving at two different sites is not much, but it is enough to allow the scientists to calculate the distance between the two points within just centimeters.

By multiplying such readings over many source points on earth and comparing them with readings from a large number of quasars, Davidson said, scientists hope to get a kind of living picture of the pulsations that occur in the Earth's crust.

WORLD'S MOST SENSATIONAL JAILBREAK!

About that time King Herod moved against some of the believers, and killed the apostle James (John's brother). When Herod saw how much this pleased the Jewish leaders, he arrested Peter during the Passover celebration and imprisoned him, placing him under the guard of 16 soldiers. Herod's intention was to deliver Peter to the Jews for execution after the Passover. But earnest prayer was going up to God from the Church for his safety all the time he was in prison.

The night before he was to be executed, he was asleep, double-chained between two soldiers with others standing guard before the prison gate, when suddenly there was a light in the cell and an angel of the Lord stood beside Peter! The angel slapped him on the side to awaken him and said, "Quick! Get up!" And the chains fell off his wrists! Then the angel told him, "Get dressed and put on your shoes." And he did. "Now put on your coat and follow me!" the angel ordered.

So Peter left the cell, following the angel. But all the time he thought it was a dream or vision, and didn't believe it was really happening. They passed the first and second cell blocks and came to the iron gate to the street, and this opened to them of its own accord! So they passed through and walked along together for a block, and then the angel left him.

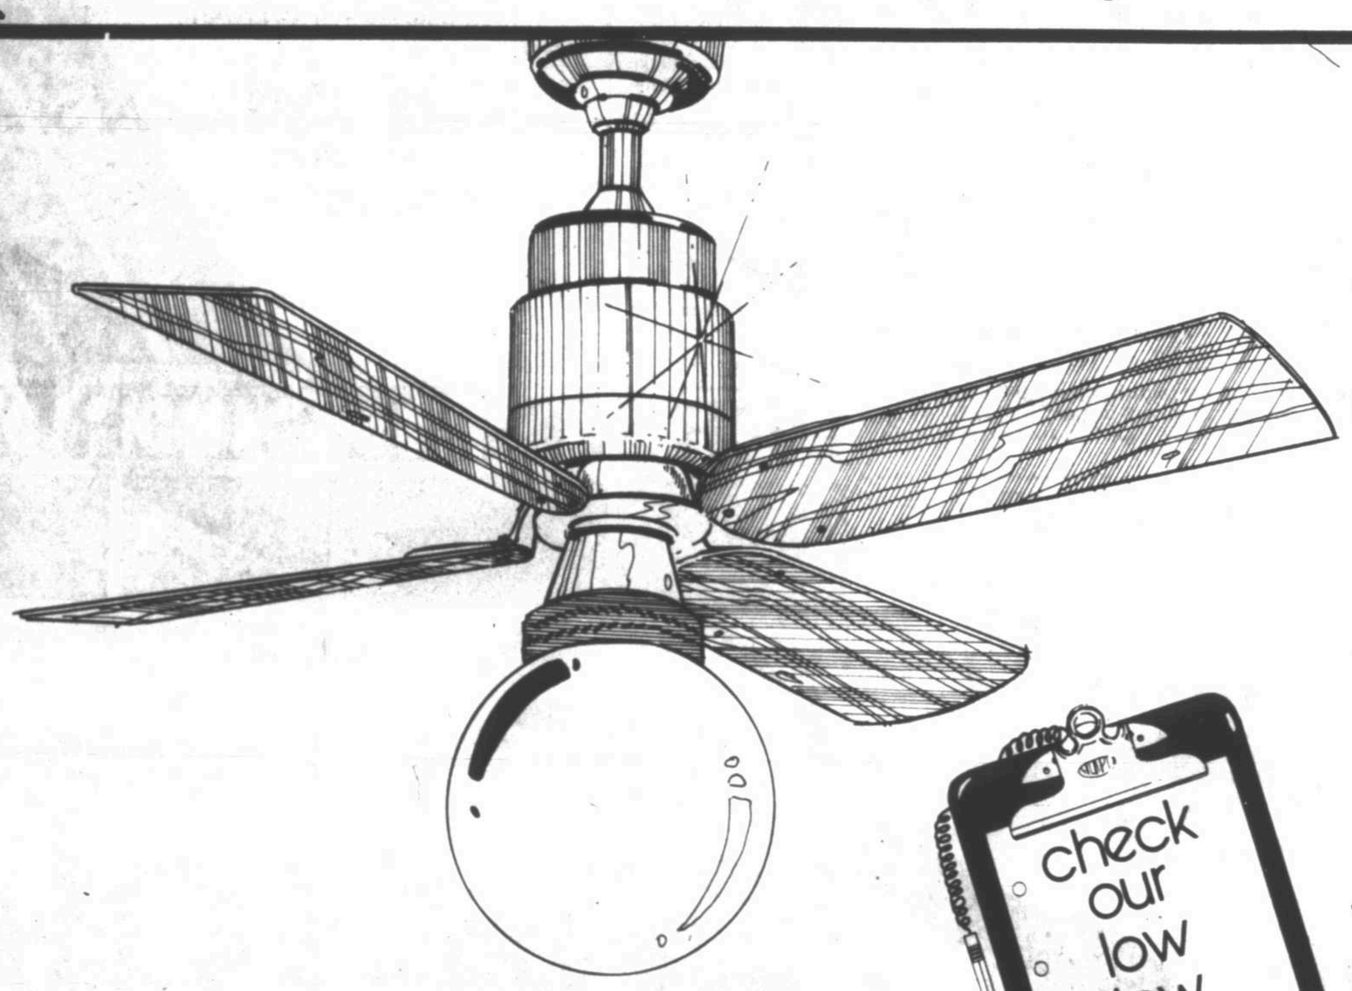

Peter finally realized what had happened! "It's really true!" he said to himself. "The Lord has sent His angel and saved me from Herod and from what the Jews were hoping to do to me!"

Cancer researcher defends smoking study

TOKYO (AP) — A Japanese cancer researcher who concluded that wives of smokers were more likely to contract lung disease than wives of nonsmokers rejected Wednesday a challenge by the Tobacco Institute that a mathematical error renders his conclusions invalid.

In Dr. Takeshi Hirayama's 14-year study — involving about 143,000 women and 122,000 men — women whose husbands smoked more than a pack of cigarettes a day were found to have a lung cancer risk 2.08 times greater than wives of nonsmokers.

Hirayama, chief epidemiologist of the National Cancer Center Research Insititute in Tokyo, said in a telephone interview that he used a standardized computer program developed at the government-run National Cancer Institute in Washington. He said his calculations were checked and rechecked by a medical journal before being published last January.

"Before it was published it was screened by the British Medical Journal. Unless the article is cleared it can never be published. That is the usual procedure for any manuscript," said Hirayama, a former research associate at the Sloan-Kettering Institute in New York.

The Tobacco Institute, lobbying arm of the American tobacco industry, said Nathan Mantel, the biostatistician from George Washington University who developed the program used by Hirayama, has confirmed an error was made at a critical point in the calculations.

Hirayama rejected the claim.

"Either his original formula is wrong or he made a mistake. There is no other possibility. When I was at the National Cancer Institute I studied the program," he said.

Hirayama said the Tobacco Institute or Mantel should publish their results in a scientific journal so their evidence can be examined.

Researchers have been "neglecting the importance and serious health consequences of passive smoking," Hirayama said. He said all smoking studies that divide subjects into just two groups — smokers and nonsmokers — should now be recalculated because they did not distinguish passive smokers from nonsmokers.

"They are underestimating the risks of direct smoking" by including "passive" smokers in the non-smoking population of research studies, he contended.

Families find Grand Tetons can be perfect trip

By DON CHAPMAN
Copley News Service

The Grand Tetons offer a wide range of western vacation opportunities in a magnificent setting. Families will find the Tetons one of the most rewarding destinations for a western motor trip.

Here you can go hiking, mountain climbing or horseback riding. Water sports include fishing, boating and swimming.

You can sunbathe, enjoy golf or tennis, take nature walksor pursue photography in a splendid setting. On photo or nature walks it isn't at all unusual to encounter deer, buffalo, elk and moose in their native habitat.

There are scenic float trips down the Snake River or sight-seeing tours by boat or bus. Try the shopping and entertainment attractions in the colorful town of Jackson, with its boarded sidewalks and authentic western flavor.

A guided float trip down the Snake River is one of the best ways for visitors to capture the ageless beauty of the isolated area.

Professionally trained boatmen guide the rafts with large wooden sweeps or paddles fitted to the bow and stern, giving passengers the opportunity to practice their photography or just sit back and absorb the stunning beauty of nature.

One trip lasts three hours and another of six hours includes a picnic. Both outings include round-trip bus transportation to and from the river.

During the morning hours raft passengers often catch sight of such rare birds as the osprey, heron and occasionally a trumpeter swan or an American bald eagle. Throughout the journey the snowcapped peaks of the Teton range form the backdrop.

After a stop at Deadman's Bar you'll float between long, narrow sandbars and aspen-lined riverbanks.

The short trip costs $14 for adults and $7 for youngsters. The longer trip is priced at $21.50 for adults and $14 for children. There is a minimum age of 6 for youngsters taking to the river.

The Grand Teton Lodge Company operates major visitor facilities in Grand Teton National Park. this year the facilities, 6,400-feet above sea level, opened in May at Colter Bay Village, followed by Jackson Lake Lodge and Jenny Lake Lodge in June. All facilities close for the year September 27.

Jackson Lake Lodge first opened July 11, 1955. It now contains 385 rooms, 42 in the main lodge building and 343 in adjacent motor lodge units. Most rooms have two double beds and all have tiled bath with tub and shower. The main dining room seats 425 persons at a serving with 87 additional seats in an adjoining room. Single and double rates are $46 to $68. The lodge is located five miles north of Moran Junction, Wyo., on U.S. Highways 26, 89, 187 and 287. It is 23 miles from the South Gate of Yellowstone National Park.

Jenny Lake Lodge was homesteaded in 1922 and opened as a dude ranch a year later. The five original cabins are still in use and the original main building with its sapling ceiling and stone fireplace is the present guest lounge.

In September, 1930, it was purchased as part of the land acquisition program for Grand Teton National Park. The well-appointed but rustic accommodations at Jenny Lake Lodge answer the needs of park visitors desiring longer stays and an informal atmosphere with every comfort. Rates here begin at $150 daily for two persons including breakfast and dinner. Horseback riding and use of bicycles are also included in the room rate.

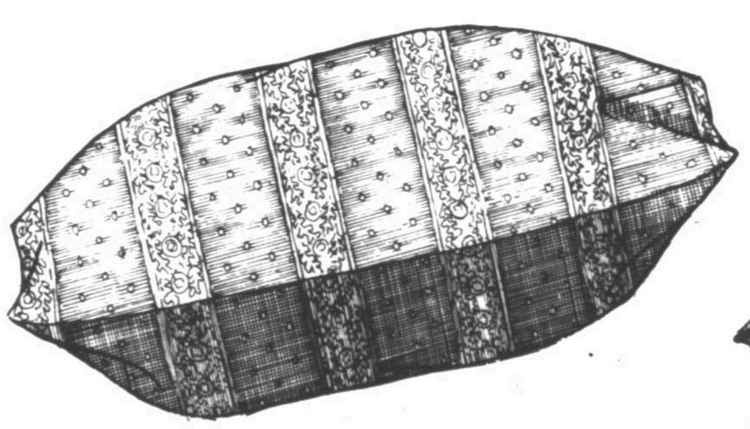

Colter Bay Village offers budget accommodations for vacationing families. Facilities include log cabins, tent cabins and a trailer area with complete hookups.

National Park facilities include an amphitheater, swimming beach, campgrounds, visitors' center and an Indian Arts Museum.

No right to comfort

The Supreme Court has determined that "comfortable prisons" are not guaranteed to inmates by the U.S. Constitution. We never thought they were.

In fact, we always assumed that prisons were designed to house those whose actions made it impossible for them to remain free in society and who, because of their acts, needed to be punished. Punishment is not supposed to be nice or fun; otherwise it wouldn't be punishment and the deterrence value of incarceration would be diminished.

Locking a human being behind bars isn't an easy thing to do, though, and the humanitarian aspect became hopelessly tangled in the total issue. Soon, it seemed, we had lost sight of the question and the courts appeared just as confused.

Now, however, the Supreme Court has clarified the picture, ruling in a suit that originated in Ohio that the Constitution does not guarantee comfortable prisons and that two inmates may be housed in a cell designed for one. The common practice of "double celling" does not necessarily violate the Constitution's protection against cruel and unusual punishment, the high court ruled.

Doubtless there will be those who will claim that this is just another step backward for those promoting penal reform. We hope it isn't; we don't think it is. Society has an obligation to rehabilitate those offenders who can and will subject themselves to rehabilitation. And we must always guard against cruel and unusual punishment in this nation's prisons.

But prison is no cake walk. That was never the intent and until a better method is found for protecting society from those who have demonstrated their inability to live with the law, prisons will continue to exist.

Prisons will not be pretty or nice. Unfortunately, that's the way life is. Hopefully, the only individuals who end up in a prison will be those who deserve their punishment, but society can only go so far in the interest of protecting innocent individuals before the efforts become counterproductive.

"The Constitution does not mandate comfortable prisons," Justice Lewis F. Powell said of the Supreme Court decision, "and prisons which house persons convicted of serious crimes cannot be free of discomfort."

Changing the age

The late, great General Omar Bradley once lamented that the world is filled with nuclear giants and ethical midgets. He was concerned about the presence of bombs big enough to wipe out civilization in the hands of allegedly civilized people who don't know enough to control them.

France is a sad example of one of the ethical midgets General Bradley had in mind. Why in the name of peace and humanity should France feed the wherewithal of nuclear destruction to a country like Iraq, situated in a Middle East tinder box where the scratch of a match can set off a war?

France is not the only midget, and Iraq is not the only villain. Every nation that aids and abets the proliferation of atomic weaponry must in all conscience share the guilt of unethical conduct. And that includes a United States government that decided to keep on sending nuclear material to India despite India's refusal to be monitored, and despite objections by the Nuclear Regulatory Commission.

Nuclear proliferation has indeed become a giant-size menace to mankind. If we can untangle ourselves from the mesh of arguments for and against the Israeli raid on Iraq, the unnerving fact remains that the building of atom bombs has gone too far, and in the interest of humanity must be curtailed.

No greater challenge faces the Western Powers in general, the Reagan administration in particular, than to wage relentless war against the most destructive force ever invented by man. The Age of the Atom must be turned into the Age of Peace — or else.

ART BUCHWALD

Perfect wedding present is a home — customized!

Art Buchwald

The June weddings are upon us, and once again everyone is trying to figure out what kind of present to buy newlyweds. Many friends call up parents and ask, "What do Phillippe and Jacqueline need?"

The Whelans have decided to deal with their son's wedding in a very practical way.

I was over at their house while the calls were coming in.

Phil, the father, said to the first caller, "They would like a window. Yes, that's right, a window. No, it doesn't have to have shutters. Any window will do."

He told the next caller, "The kids would love a chimney attached to a fireplace."

The third caller was told, "They're dying for a linoleum floor. I don't have the measurements, but I'll let you know in a few days."

Phil marked everything down in a book.

I asked him what he was doing?

"Well, people want to buy the kids something they need. What they need is a house. So every time someone calls, Sherry or I ask the person for a piece of it. We've got 12 windows promised, a ceiling for the living room, two walls for the bedroom and light fixtures for the bathroom. If the Holbrookes come through with a front door, and the Evans with a kitchen door, we can start telling people they want a roof."

"A roof is an awfully expensive wedding present," I said.

"We don't expect one person to give them a roof. But if we can talk 10 of our friends into going in on it, we can get Phillippe's aunt to give them the shingles."

"That's a great idea. What happens if a wedding present arrives without consultation with you?"

"We take it back to the store and exchange it for a bag of cement."

The phone rang again. Phil said, "Yeah, it was a lovely wedding wasn't it? What do they want? I heard Jacqueline say she'd love a kitchen sink. What pattern? It really doesn't matter as long as it goes with her cabinets. No, she doesn't have cabinets yet, but we're still hoping. That's very nice of you."

Phil made a notation in the book. "We're moving right along."

"Once you get all the stuff together, who is going to build the house?"

"Phillippe's best man and ushers said they would work on it. My present to the kids is to pay someone to supervise the construction. It will be a rather tricky job since most of the presents won't match."

"Anyone come through with lumber yet?"

"People have offered, but we're holding out for redwood. I think Jacqueline's uncle might come across because she's his favorite niece. The Dumbartons sent us a stack of plywod, and Sherry was outraged because we gave them a Cuisinart when their son got married."

The phone rang again. "Teresa," said Phil, "how nice of you to call. No, the kids have linens and towels. Someone beat you to a coffeemaker. They also have an electric can opener. Let me think, what do they really want? I've got it! A gas furnace. They told me that if anyone asks just to say the thing that would make them the happiest would be a nice furnace to keep their love warm. Thanks for calling, Teresa, and best to Joe."

"I didn't think she'd go for it," Phil said, writing it in his book. "Particularly because when their kids got married we only gave them bookends. By the way, what brings you over?"

"Ann asked me to drop by and find out what Phillippe and Jacqueline needed but I see they have everything, so we'll just get them a nice pair of candlesticks."

"They don't want candlesticks," Phil said. "They want a lot."

"A lot of what?"

"A lot to build their house on. It doesn't have to be a large one. Phillippe hates to mow the lawn."

"Can I think about it?"

"Sure. Talk it over with Ann. Women know more than men do about what kind of lots newlyweds want."

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Reporter describes violence in Lebanon

Jack Anderson

WASHINGTON — Battle scenes in faraway places, which seem so remote on the television screen, can suddenly become personal when a friend gets involved. I took an intensely personal interest in the shelling of an obscure Falangist outpost in the mountains east of Beirut the other day. The exploding shrapnel almost hit my roving correspondent, Peter Grant.

The indefatigable Grant had gone to that dreary, shell-pocked, painfully divided piece of earth called Lebanon to seek some insight into the complex struggle between Moslem and Christian forces. He headed straight for the front lines to see for himself what the fighting was all about.

My reporter, escorted by a 28-year-old militiaman named Claude, arrived at a Falangist command post in a ski lodge early on a Sunday morning. Below them, the Mediterranean sparkled in the sun. Patches of melting snow were pocked by mortar shellholes.

"At the headquarters, we exchanged our Renault for a four-wheel-drive truck, and were joined by three khaki-clad soldiers, all carrying U.S.-made MO M-16 rifles," Grant wrote. Off they went toward the front lines. Soon the shelling started.

"As we began passing Falangist gun emplacements and camouflaged tanks, we could hear the Syrian guns on the other side of the ridge, and see the shells landing about half a mile away near a shack at the top of a ski lift. Still far away."

They were hoping to reach a vantage point from which to look down on the Bekaa Valley, but before they reached the top of the ridge, soldiers at a Falangist bunker shouted at them to stop. A Syrian tank was around the next bend, they said.

From an observation post a few yards up the ridge, Grant and his escort peered over the sandbags. But the camouflaged tank was not visible.

"Climbing back down to the bunker, the war still seemed remote to me," Grant wrote. "It didn't seem possible the invisible Syrians could pose any danger.

"But suddenly I heard the unmistakable whine of an incoming shell — close. I heard somebody yell, but it was too late. The shell burst about 15 yards away on the path we had just come down. The concussion almost knocked me over, but I was able to join the mad dash into the bunker.

"Then I looked back and saw one of the soldiers, a 17-year-old named Jacques waving his M-16 wildly. His left arm dangled uselessly, nearly severed by a shrapnel wound near the elbow. His right arm was also bleeding. In a gesture of rage or defiance, he emptied his M-16 in the air."

The wounded soldier was lifted onto the truck. Grant and his escort clambered aboard. Thus began an intimate, harrowing struggle to keep the young soldier from bleeding to death on a wild ride down the mountain.

"I gave Claude my handkerchief, which he used as a tourniquet, while I tried to keep some pressure on the largest wound," Grant wrote. "Finally, the ambulance that had been radioed for met us and sped off to the hospital in Beirut."

Claude had been wounded four times and wore an artificial arm. When Grant expressed dismay over young Jacques, Claude shrugged and said, "This is not a picnic, it is war. If it was a picnic, I would have brought along my girlfriend."

They stopped by a waterfall on the mountain to wash the wounded soldier's blood from their hands and clothes. "Human beings are very ugly on the inside," Claude observed.

Footnote: Grant inquired about Jacques two days later. He was told the young man will at least regain the use of his right arm. The doctors were still hoping they wouldn't have to amputate the left arm.

PENTAGON PIPELINE: A top-secret Defense Intelligence Agency report, written several months before the Israeli attack upon Iraq's nuclear facilities, confirmed that Iraq was developing into a nuclear threat. Warned the report: "Iraq has certainly developed a nuclear capability unmatched by its allies, with a potential for threatening Israel which has not existed before ... With the development of the Osirak reactor, (Iraq) is probably intent on acquiring the material and technology for arming these missiles with nuclear warheads."

— The real villain in the dangerous Israeli-Iraq confrontation is France. The United States made repeated secret attempts to persuade the French not to ship enriched weapons-grade uranium to Iraq. Even Saudi Arabia and Syria pleaded secretly with the French not to promote Iraqi nuclear development, without strict safeguards. These Arab neighbors feared Iraq wanted to dominate the Persian Gulf area. But the French thirst for Iraqi oil was too great. They agreed to deliver 70 to 80 kilos of uranium suitable for manufacturing nuclear warheads. All it takes to build one bomb is 20 kilos.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Thursday, June 18, the 169th day of 1981. There are 196 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On June 18, 1815, the British defeated French forces under Napoleon in the Battle of Waterloo in Belgium.

On this date:

In 1778, American forces entered Philadelphia as the British withdrew during the Revolutionary War.

In 1812, the United States declared war on Britain.

In 1965, Air Vice Marshal Nguyen Cao Ky assumed office as premier of South Vietnam, and vowed to defeat the Viet Cong.

And in 1973, after a meeting at the White House, Soviet Communist Party chief Leonid Brezhnev and President Nixon pledged to strive together for peace.

Ten years ago: a U.S. sky marshal, diguised as a pilot, subdued a would-be hijacker at a North Carolina airport and thwarted an attempt to hijack an airliner to Cuba.

Five years ago: the United States urged all American citizens in Lebanon to leave that war-ravaged country.

One year ago: the International Institute for Strategic Studies warned the world was entering a period of "real danger" because of the breakdown of U.S.-Soviet detente.

INSIDE REPORT:

Afghans pleading for American resistance to invasion

By ROWLAND EVANS AND ROBERT NOVAK

Evans

PESHAWAR, Pakistan — A mirthless wind churned up the deep ridges from Soviet-occupied Afghanistan at the Khyber Pass, a lonely point on the 1,400-mile border that has now been crossed by nearly 2 million Afghans in one of history's most heroic refugee tides.

This is part of the still-rising human cost of the vast extension of the Russian empire that the czars could not achieve against the power of the British empire. For the first time, Pakistan now looks across the Khyber Pass to a Soviet fiefdom, chillingly described to the Pakistan ambassador in Moscow in these words: "You are now our neighbor."

But the fiefdom seethes with hostility. Like the tide of refugees, the resistance shows no signs of weakening. One reason for that is the fiber of the Afghan tribesmen — tough, independent and not to be tamed even by MI-24 helicopter gunships. But without the safe refugee haven in and near this border city in Pakistan, the resistance inside Afghanistan would be difficult if not impossible to sustain.

Peshawar is the capital of the northwest frontier province. It is over-the-border headquarters for a dozen major resistance groups carrying the guerrilla war to the Russians and their Afghan fifth column. A leader of one of these groups, whose name is Najibullah, fingered a smudged Soviet passport in his whitewashed office in Peshawar. The passport was taken from a Soviet soldier in Afghanistan who will never return to Mother Russia.

"Only 21," Najibullah said, studying the birthdate on the passport. "Young to die."

A native of Kabul, Afghanistan's capital, Najibullah is 32 years old, also young to live so close to death. He learned English as a student at the University of Hawaii in the mid-'70s, returning to Kabul where he joined the resistance after the communist coup of 1978. That meant converting his fundamentalist Islamic movement from politics to war. It meant organizing small fighting units, rounding up arms and ammunition and developing guerrilla war tactics against the Soviets and what is left of the Afghan regular army.

All this, with only a semblance of outside help — except for the blessing of hospitality offered by Pakistan.

To the freedom-fighters, called Mujaheddin, the U.S. is a non-player in the resistance drama now taking place beyond the fabled Khyber Pass. "I have not heard much on the BBC about demonstrations in your city streets against Soviet genocide," Najibullah told us. The British Broadcasting Overseas service is the only source of news inside Afghanistan, broadcasting in the native Pooshtu tongue (the Voice of America has no such service). To the Mujaheddin, to be without transistor radio — and rifle — is to not be dressed.

Najibullah remembered what happened in the States during Vietnam, when the Americans fought another communist invasion. He also remembered President Reagan's failure to follow his own suggestion during an ABC television interview last March. Reagan had spoken of the U.S. sending small arms to the Afghan resistance.

But military help from outside is not so important as U.S. efforts to make the Russians suffer for their brutal invasion. "America should discharge its responsibility as human beings. We are not asking for arms. If you treated Soviet aggression with the right punishment of economic boycott and political pressure, that is all we ask," Najibullah said. Termination of the grain embargo devastated the resistance movement.

This leader, who is one among many similar leaders in the fight for survival of Afgahnistan, claimed that 500,000 members of his Islamic faction are now out of Afghanistan and living in the mud-hut and tent villages supplied by Pakistan. They stretch for miles around this capital of the northwest frontier.

Outside his untidy ground-floor office, resistance fighters temporarily out of Afghanistan on rotation studied dozens of black-and-white photographs, tacked up on every wall of the small courtyard, that celebrated Mujaheddin victories and Soviet disasters.

These symbols spoke silently. Against that silence, Najibullah was pleading for a strong response from the West, especially from the U.S., to the butchery of his homeland.

Mountain goats to be evicted in style

PORT ANGELES, Wash. (AP) — Although unwanted mountain goats destroying the alpine plants of Olympic National Park are being evicted next week, they will get first-class treatment all the way: air transport, family plan travel and air-conditioned trucks.

The goats help contribute to the breathtaking scenery of the northwest Washington park, but the National Park Service says the overcrowded herds are tearing apart the flowery meadows that attract thousands of visitors every year.

Stripped roots, damaged soil and hundreds of deep hoofprints are the result of roughly 700 goats now living in the park.

"What scares us to death," said park ecologist Ed Schreiner, pointing to a scarred hillside, "is this is what the whole park could be like." He said the damage is "exponential," accelerating in leaps and bounds.

The unwanted residents will be lured with chunks of salt, captured in large nets, and transported by helicopter and truck to places where they will be more welcome, park officials say.

Because of the expense, only about 50 or 60 goats will be removed each year for the next three years from the 180-animal herd near Hurricane Ridge, leaving about 60 goats in the herd after new births and new arrivals, said Don Jackson, assistant park superintendent.

Officials will use the thinning of the Hurricane Ridge herd as a test to see if further removals are feasible.

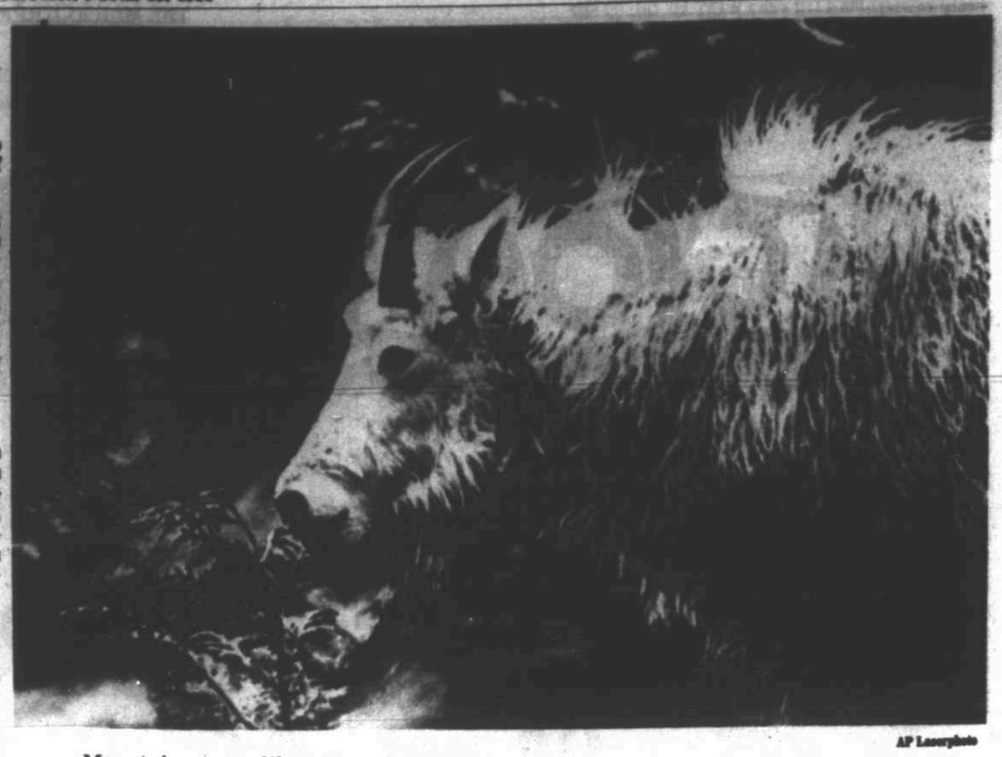

The goats were introduced to the Olympic Mountain range in the 1920s by local hunters. Hunting has not been allowed since the area became a national park in 1938, leaving the herds to flourish while the terrain suffered from their unchecked growth.

The goats, found from Alaska to the Northwest, have long, shaggy white hair and stand up to 3½ feet high at the shoulder. The males have long beards and curving black horns that can grow to a foot long. Despite their beauty, there has been little protest to the planned thinning of the herds.

The goats like to eat dainty flowers. About 80 percent of Olympic daisy plants in some areas have been eaten and many other flower species can no longer reproduce by seed because of grazing pressures, Schreiner said.

The goats cause even greater damage when they roll around in meadows until only dust is left, he said. The slow-growing alpine vegetation takes many years to recover.

Once captured in nets, the goats will be blindfolded to calm them, checked by a veterinarian, and given antibiotics and a mild tranquilizer. They will then be crated, with families marked so that nannies and kids are released together.

Mountain goats like this one will be trapped and removed from the Olympic National Park, starting in the next several weeks, because of damage they have inflicted in the park.

PCBs creating a 'ticking time bomb'

WAUKEGAN, Ill. (AP) — Up to 8 million pounds of toxic PCBs randomly dumped in northern Illinois and southern Wisconsin during the past three decades is creating what one government official calls a "ticking time bomb."

No one knows exactly where all the poisonous chemicals are.

Efforts to find them have uncovered PCBs at a playground in this northern Illinois city of 65,000, in one family's well water and in sufficient quantity to create "very high" contamination of a creek that flows into Lake Michigan. The lake is the source of drinking water for 10 million people.

The random dumping occurred before the 1977 government ban on the manufacture of PCBs — polychlorinated biphenyls — suspected of causing cancer, birth defects and other problems. It has been used in the United States since 1929, mainly as a lubricant and coolant in industrial machinery and electrical equipment.

Federal officials have known for years that up to 2 million pounds of PCBs was dumped by Outboard Marine Corp., which makes boat motors, into Waukegan harbor, 25 miles north of Chicago. The company used the chemical to lubricate aluminum die-casting machines.

But only within the last year have federal officials joined local efforts to track down millions of pounds of the chemical apparently dumped on land.

Lake County Health Department officials fear that the PCBs will work their way into ground water, Lake Michigan and the food chain. The harbor dumping already has been linked to dangerous levels of PCBs in fish.

"We feel we are sitting on a ticking time bomb," Tom Nedved, director of the health department's environmental health division, said last week.

The missing PCBs were first described in a letter from Outboard Marine to the EPA, datdd March 15, 1976, but officials have concentrated their efforts on the harbor dumping because it presented a more immediate threat.

Outboard Marine attorney Hugh Thomas estimates that between 5.9 and 6.7 million pounds of PCBs were given to refuse collectors to haul away, presumably to dispose of in dumps and landfills. EPA attorney Kay Jacobs puts the figure at 8 million pounds.

Outboard Marine officials say they don't know where the waste haulers took the chemicals because 20 years ago there were no disposal restrictions.

PBRPC directors OK budget of more than $3 million

By SUE FAHLGREN
Staff Writer

The directors of the Permian Basin Regional Planning Commission Wednesday approved their 1981-82 fiscal year budget of more than $3 million dollars, almost cutting the previous year's budget figure in half.

Showing a 47 percent decrease in spending, the budget dropped from $6,001,823 during the current fiscal year to $3,184,606 for 1981-1982.

"These decreases come from the CETA public jobs elimination and the discontinuance of the HUD 701 program, plus some minor cuts in other programs," Executive Director Ernie Crawford explained at the PBRPC's regular monthly meeting. "The PBRPC full-time staff has been reduced from 61 to 43 employees."

Crawford said additional federal and state budget cutbacks could have further effects on the PBRPC before the coming fiscal year is completed.

"There are many unknown elements that could affect the budget during the fiscal year, such as the proposed phasing out of the Health Systems Agency, the Federal Block Grant Program to states,...the receipt of CETA consortium bonuses and CETA carry-in funds that may become available and an increase to state appropriated criminal justice and alcohol funds," he said.

The new budget will go into effect July 1; however, Crawford said the fiscal year could later be adjusted to coincide with the federal and state fiscal years which run from October through September.

In other PBRPC news, Upton County Judge Peggy Garner reported Boeing Engineering and Construction Company and Solar Energy Research Institute (SERI) has chosen Rankin as a government test site for a solar desalination plant. In January, a Boeing representative announced plans for two plants — one in the United States and one in Saudi Arabia — to turn brackish water into cleaner drinking water.

The Rankin-McCamey area site was selected over Brownsville for the U.S. plant. The final test site should begin operations there in early 1983.

Decisions made Wednesday include:

—Approval of a recommendation for a financial distress grant for $196,296 from the Department of Health and Human Services for the continued funding of Permian Basin Community Centers for Mental Health and Mental Retardation.

—Approval of an application from Sun Square Associates for project mortgage insurance for a 100-unit apartment complex in Andrews to the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

—Approval of an application to HUD for project mortgage insurance for a 54-unit apartment complex in Seminole from Moore, Holder and Shephard.

—Tabling of a project mortgage insurance application to HUD for a 100-unit apartment complex in Big Spring from Ybarra, Kayler and Gaylor due to an unplotted zoning area.

—Approval of an application to HUD for a direct loan for construction of a 50-unit housing project for the elderly and handicapped persons in Northridge Retirement Center in north Lamesa.

—Approval of the 1981-1986 Permian Basin Health Systems Plan, which ranks Drug Abuse and Alcohol Abuse as the top two concerns for the area, respectively.

—Approval of an application to the Community Services Administration for a continuation grant of $49,800 from the Pecos County Community Action Agency for a multi-purpose center in Fort Stockton.

—Approval of state's request for Title V continuation funds from the Department of Labor for $3,202,000.

Taped testimony says man supervised killings

WESTBURY, N.Y. (AP) — A man accused of heading a Nazi death camp during World War II supervised the executions of Jews, communists and political liberals, and occasionally shot the victims a final time himself "to be sure," according to videotaped testimony.

The testimony in U.S. District Court here Wednesday was part of a Justice Department attempt to have the citizenship of Karl Linnas, 61, revoked on the grounds he lied about his past to become a U.S. citizen. The government ultimately wants to deport him.

Four people whose testimony was videotaped in the Soviet Union all said Linnas had been head of the camp and had been in some way involved in executions. They all identified him from a photograph.

The government says Linnas, a retired draftsman-engineer who lives on Long Island, was involved in beatings, shootings and killings at the Tartu Concentration Camp in Estonia during the war, preparing "death lists" and selecting people, primarily Jews, communists and liberals, to die.

Linnas, who came to this country in 1951 and became a citizen in 1960, denies the charges, saying that during the war he was a student who was drafted into the Estonian army.

Richard Seibach, 49, who was in a car pool with Linnas took the stand Wednesday. In 1962, Seibach testified, he talked to Linnas about the defendant's conviction and death sentence in the Soviet Union in absentia for war crimes.

He said Linnas denied that he had killed anyone but admitted that he had been a guard at the camp.

In a statement taped in the Soviet Union, Hans Laats, 66, a guard at the Tartu camp, said he had once accompanied Linnas to a site outside the camp where prisoners were shot.

"He pronounced the sentence, saying that 'in the name of the Estonian Republic and the German army you have been condemned to death,' and then he gave the order to the (firing) squad," Laats said.

Describing the scene, he said the prisoners knelt at the edge of a ditch.

"The shooters were behind him, and then Linnas told them to fire .... When they (the prisoners) were already lying down at the bottom of the ditch, he shot, just in case, to be sure," said Laats, who served 12 years of a 20-year term for his activities at the camp.

Another recorded witness, Elmer Puusepp, 74, a political prisoner in the Tartu camp for three years, said that he once saw Linnas herding Jews from a school into a bus.

Puusepp said he heard Linnas tell the Jews: "We are taking you to Riga (the capital of Estonia). Do not leave anything behind because you are not coming back here any more because we will take you away."

He said he never saw any of those people again but observed the bus standing empty near the camp a short time later.

"Nobody can make a trip to Riga and back in such a short time," he said.

Earnings reported

NEW YORK (AP) — American Telephone & Telegraph Co., the world's largest corporation, reports profits in the three months ended May 31 were a record $1.62 billion, up 10.8 percent from the same 1980 period.

Analysts said the results, released Wednesday, were about as expected, but added if the Federal Communications Commission grants a pending rate-increase request, earnings could improve substantially.

In the latest three-month period, earnings amounted to $2.06 a share on revenues of $13.9 billion.

California fire 90% controlled

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The 6,640-acre Murrieta brushfire that killed a 6-year-old boy and injured nine other people was 90 percent controlled early today, and firefighters were estimating that it would be extinguished by tonight.

While most of Southern California's fires were contained a day earlier, a sudden wind shift late Wednesday whipped the Murrieta flames into such a frenzy that 1,000 acres were charred within 15 minutes, fire officials said. However, the winds died down later Wednesday night.

"The break in the winds would be the main reason" for the containment, said Riverside County Fire Department spokesman Freeman Rogers.

The 6-year-old boy was fatally injured when he was caught with nine others in a firestorm near his family's mobile home.

The unidentified boy died Wednesday night from third-degree burns over 100 percent of his body, said San Bernardino County Medical Center nursing supervisor Della Strickland. His 1½-year-old sister was in critical condition with third-degree burns over 80 percent of her body. Their parents had second-and third-degree burns over various parts of their bodies, Ms. Strickland said.

Five of the injured firefighters were airlifted to the burn center at Sherman Oaks Community Hospital near Los Angeles with first and second-degree buns. They wereidentified as Lee Davis, Becky Jones, Kim Price, John Vipond and Joanna Calahan. No ages or addresses were available.

Fireman Ted Schaffer was treated and released from the Mission Valley Medical Center in Lake Elsinore, Rogers said.

More than 400 firefighters fought the 6,600-acre blaze, which began Monday afternoon. Firefighters believed they had the fire 90 percent contained before it broke free Wednesday.

Two other Riverside County firefighters were burned when a 700-acre fire in the Dawson Canyon area broke out Wednesday. Both were taken to San Bernardino County Medical Center in critical condition.

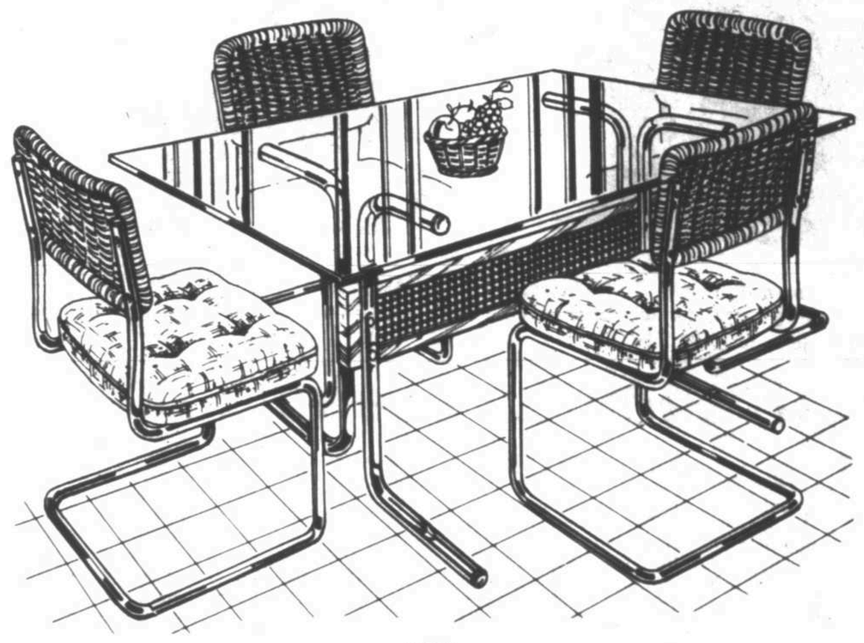

Other fires in Riverside County destroyed 300 acres and four homes in Reche Canyon and 750 acres of brushland near Perris.

An 11,400 acre fire near Aguanga was contained Wednesday evening.

More than 75 homes have been destroyed or damaged and more than 55,000 acres of brushland consumed in the wave of fires that began with the 100-plus degree temperatures Monday. But winds died down in most areas Wednesday, giving firefighters a chance to control some of the blazes.

The 8,000-acre Tierrasanta fire in northeastern San Diego was contained Wednesday.

Woman jumps to her death

NEW YORK (AP) — Kathleen Shally, 49, was the target of an eviction suit brought by the Barbizon Hotel, a well-known East Side hostelry where she lived for three years.

In turn, she sued the hotel for $1.3 million, charging its management with harassment, and her lawyer said she was eager to fight them in court.

But 10 minutes before the trial was to start in civil court Wednesday morning, Miss Shally pulled a chair to an open window of her eighth-floor room, got in it and jumped out the window to her death, police said.

Her lawyer, S. David Oliner, said the other principals in the case, the judge and the six-member jury were waiting in the courtroom when they were told Miss Shally had jumped from the Barbizon.

"I was and still am shocked, terribly shocked by the death," Oliner said.

Representatives of the hotel had no comment, but Oliner said he believed they, along with the judge and potential witnesses in the case, were "equally shocked and disturbed."

For more than half a century, the hotel on East 63rd Street was known as the Barbizon Hotel for Women, whose tenants included such celebrities as Grace Kelly and Liza Minnelli. In February, male lodgers were admitted for the first time.

In court papers filed March 27, its owners, Barbilex Associates, sought to evict Miss Shally. They claimed she had not paid rent on her $348.21 a month room since July 1980 and was in arrears by nearly $2,800.

Polish seamen Romauld J. Polkowski, left, and Tomaz Nawalany, who abandoned the Polish ship Kapitan Ledochowski in Astoria, Ore., leave immigration headquarters late Wednesday afer presenting their request for political asylum.

Polish seamen seeking asylum

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Two Polish seamen seeking political asylum in the United States are being held by immigration offficials here after their ship left the country without them.

A third seaman was reported missing by officers of the Polish-registered Kapitan Ledochowski that docked in the Port of Astoria early Tuesday. Immigration officials said Wednesday night that they had not heard from the third seaman.

Carl Houseman, deputy director of the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service in Portland, said Romauld J. Polkowski and Tomaz Nawalany were taken into custody by the U.S. Coast Guard.

Houseman said Antoni Pawlak, the third man, did not turn himself in, but the other two men told officials that he also wants asylum.

Houseman said investigators brought the two men to Portland, where they will be released if there are no reasons to keep them in custody.

Polkowski and Nawalany told investigators, "we desire not to live under communism," Houseman said.

The regional director of the INS is empowered to grant asylum. The law provides that asylum may be granted to persons being persecuted by their own government.

"We have crewmen or stowaways ask for asylum about twice a year," Houseman said.

He said 50 to 100 applications for asylum are pending in Portland, most from people from troubled nations such as Iran, El Salvador and Nicaragua.

The Kapitan Ledochowski, which loaded supplies in Astoria, transports frozen fish from Polish processing ships to home ports.

Prince Charles dances with First Lady

NEW YORK (AP) — Prince Charles danced with first lady Nancy Reagan under a tent at Lincoln Center after a day that included a bird's-eye view of the city via helicopter, luncheon aboard a yacht and a performance of his very own Royal Ballet.

The gala evening was the climax of a whirlwind 24-hour visit that was to end this morning with the heir to the British throne leaving for home from Kennedy Airport.

Throughout the long day Wednesday, with irate Irish-Americans constantly on the perimeter, the young Prince of Wales maintained a calm and smiling exterior. Even when four of the Irish invaded the Metropolitan Opera House, shouting obscenities and "murderer" before they were hauled out, the prince scarcely appeared to notice.

When the prince moved from the front row of the box after the disturbances, a Met spokesman said it was only so he could talk to other people in the box.

Security was so tight for the princely visit that police bomb-sniffing dogs patrolled the performing arts center not only before his arrival, but off and on during the reception, the ballet's performance of "The Sleeping Beauty" and the gala under the tent.

Uniformed and plainclothes police walked the roofs of the opera house and other Lincoln Center buildings throughout the affair, armed with carbines.

Several thousand Irish-Americans gathered in a park across from Lincoln Center to shout "British Murderer Go Home."

One of the demonstrators was Sean Sands, whose brother, Bobby, died in a Northern Ireland jail after a hunger strike protesting treatment of Irish Republican Army prisoners. Northern Ireland is part of the United Kingdom. Sands said he asked for a meeting with Prince Charles, but a spokesman replied that the prince "didn't want to get involved in politics."

With the exception of the Irish protesters, the prince received warm greetings throughout the day.

Mayor Edward Koch, who accompanied him on a lunchtime trip aboard the yacht of publisher Malcolm Forbes, gave Charles the key to the city. Koch pronounced the lunch "fit for a prince and a mayor" and revealed that he had discovered the 32-year-old prince is "going to be bald."

Koch made the revelation at a City Hall news conference while the television lights reflected off his own bald pate but assured the British people their future king wouldn't end up like a "billiard ball." He said the prince has just a thin patch on the back of his head.

"You cannot see it," said the mayor. "Only if you are very observant like me. I'm an expert on this."

The prince himself had nothing to say about hair and very little to say about anything else.

Norwegian city focal point of potential global encounter

By L. EDGAR PRINA
Copley News Service

WASHINGTON -- If World War III should come, it might very well start here on the Soviet border, not far from the icy Barents Sea.

That is what the folks of this small city of 4,000 on the Veranger Fjord and the battalion of 450 troops that guards this side of the Iron Curtain believe and live with.

They remember the terrible June day in 1968 when they feared the worst. So does Col. Tore Oppegaard, the Norwegian border commissioner, who recalled it during a briefing in his office in nearby Storskog.

"The Soviets moved an army division up to the border, with its tanks pointing their guns at Norwegian observation posts," he said. "They came out of the fog early in the morning and were suddenly at the border."

The Kremlin caper fortunately turned out to be scare tactics. According to Oppegaard, a tall, blond, slightly tubby man, the Soviets apparently wanted to demonstrate their opposition to any allied military exercises in northern Norway. There had been talk of the same. The division withdrew after three days.

(Norway does not allow such exercises in the north. It would not even agree to the prepositioning of U.S. Marine Corps equipment as far north as 64 degrees, insisting that it be stored near Trondheim, some 750 miles southwest of Kirkenes. Nor does Norway allow any foreign military forces or nuclear weapons to be based on its soil in peacetime.)

"We never permit allied forces to come into the border area," the commissioner said. "We have a common and closed border. We have decent and correct relations with the Soviets."

The 140-mile-long border is a northern extension of the Iron Curtain. There is a double fence of barbed wire strung along the entire way -- mostly to keep Soviet citizens in.

While no mines have been planted, there is a lane of sand, which is kept raked and contains a sensor system that sounds an alarm at the nearest border station when triggered. Soviet citizens are not allowed to approach closer than two miles of the border zone.

Oppegaard, whose Soviet opposite number is a lieutenant colonel in the KGB, said "illegal agents" cross the border "both ways," but he declined to elaborate.

The most recent border incident occurred two summers ago when a Soviet soldier crossed over and asked for asylum. Norway, which has no extradition treaty with the USSR, granted it.

According to Oppegaard, there is some tourist traffic, but it is virtually a one-way street -- to the Soviet Union. Last year, for example, 11,500 persons from Norway entered the USSR at Kirkenes-Storskog while only 33, all of them members of official delegations, crossed into Norway.

Oppegaard said the Soviet travel agency, Intourist, promotes vacations on the Black Sea at heavily subsidized prices.

"It's quite popular here to go to the Black Sea, because it is much cheaper than going to the Mediterranean," he said. "You go by bus to Nikel (where they mine nickel) and catch a train there for Murmansk. Then you board an airliner for the Black Sea."

The cost: about $400 for transportation, hotel and meals for one week.

The Norwegian border troops, all of whom are volunteers, do not think much about vacations in the Soviet Union. They must recall the tales of the small band of Spartans who fought to the death at Thermopylae against the invading Persians in 480 B.C. For they have what amounts to a suicide mission, too, if the Russians come.

"Our mission is to make the war," Lt. Col. Vigard Aabrek, commander of the South Varanger garrison said.

He made it plain that the Norwegians want NATO to know that even in the unlikely event of an isolated Soviet attack on northern Norway, they are expected to respond.

Couple arrested

NEW YORK (AP) — A Bronx couple, described by police as "people of substance," have been arrested for tying up and handcuffing their four young children whenever they had to go out, police report.

Michael Vitale, 35, and his wife Anna, 27, were charged with endangering the welfare of minors when they showed up at a nearby stationhouse to claim their children, who had escaped their latest imprisonment and had gone to police.

"They felt this was something they had to do," said Detective Alan Sperling. "They said the kids had tried to start a fire other times when left alone."

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Friday, June 19, 1981

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Those sharing this birthday have a flair for the dramatic and are often attracted to a career in the performing arts. Award-winning actress Gena Rowlands was born on this date, as were Louis Jourdan and those two late great character actors Dame Mae Whitty and Charles Coburn. Your restless energy could lead to your pursuing two different, absorbing occupations simultaneously. One might be your regular job while the other is a noble cause to benefit mankind. Finances will be sensitive in the months ahead. Avoid making hasty promises. Romance may not be as serious as you would like. Play waiting game!

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Loved one's audacious acts may leave you puzzled until you get the bill. Put your foot down! You need to be totally candid about how you feel and what you expect.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): A neighbor acts helpful but there could be strings attached. Be on guard! You can lose out where love is concerned if you act immature. Be both patient and tactful.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Be more realistic about your goals, aspirations. Seek mate or partner's cooperation. A change of lifestyle could be rewarding. Request advice from those who know you best.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Get an early start today! An important business conference may be part of the picture. Good news from the financial front. Get together with a few close friends tonight.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Map out a definite plan for the next few months if hoping to make major changes. You will need the cooperation of your mate or partner. Family members offer support.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Act generously toward others and they will probably reciprocate Be helpful but not intrusive when dealing with neighbors. Loved one's compliment buoys your spirits. Show your delight.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Fortunately, your level of concentration is high today. Tackle complex projects. Teamwork is a necessity and a pleasure. Expect a change to be made in a social engagement.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Overtime will both fatten your paycheck and cause a change in your social plans. Tend to financial matters in a timely fashion. Bankers are easier to deal with now.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Cooperation is the keynote today. Make a special effort to get along better with others. Do not expect too much from romance this evening. Prospects improve by the weekend.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): A good day to deal with people at a distance. You may feel obligated to render financial assistance to the family of a longtime associate. A will could be involved.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20—Feb. 18): Individuals living in far-off places will be responsive to your requests. Put your financial affairs in order. Avoid speculative ventures. Romance is best postponed.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Continue work on a project you started yesterday. Results may be mixed at first, but eventually you will profit both financially and spiritually. Romance is favorable.

The bidding:

Opening lead: Queen of ♠.

"Attack is the best means of defense" is an old cliche, but it is often true. That applies as much at the bridge table as it does to other endeavors.

South's jump overcall was of the weak variety that is growing in popularity. While South's hand does not qualify by text-book standards, the vulnerability was in his favor and his seventh heart gave him a measure of safety. With his powerful hand and two top trumps, North could do no less than raise to game.

West led the queen of clubs and East rose with the ace, felling declarer's king. It seemed that the defenders would be sure to get two diamond tricks, but the setting trick was not easy to find. With East constantly on lead, it looked as if declarer would have all the time in the world to draw trumps, and then set up the diamond suit to assure himself of all the discards he might need.

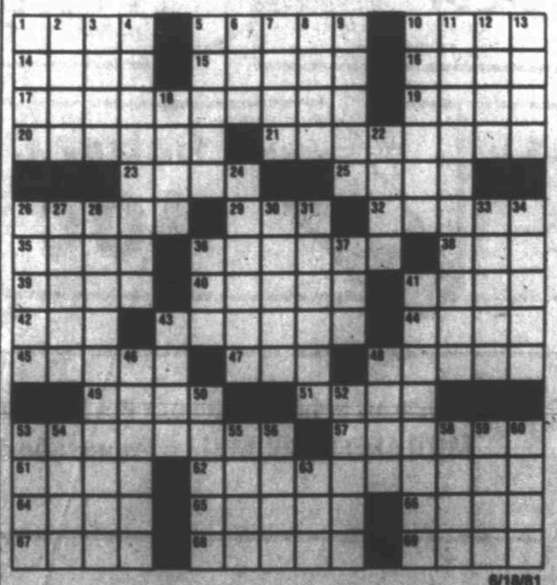

East realized that, to neutralize dummy's long suit, he would have to knock out dummy's side entries. That would involve leading a spade and giving up all hope of a trick in that suit, but that was not critical—the chances of scoring the king of spades were slight, at best.

The spade shift proved devastating. If declarer tried to set up diamonds immediately, East would simply lead spades every time he gained the lead. Declarer would have to ruff the king of spades with one of dummy's trump honors, and West's jack of trumps would then become the setting trick. And it would not help declarer to draw trumps before trying to set up the diamonds. He would have no entries to dummy's diamonds and, by the time East won the second diamond trick, he would be able to cash the king of spades for the setting trick.

Rubber bridge clubs throughout the country use the four-deal bridge format. Do they know something you don't? Charles Goren's "Four-Deal Bridge" will teach you the strategies and tactics of this fast-paced action game that provides the cure for unending rubbers. London paper says Charles receives 'sour hello' in New York

LONDON (AP) — Prince Charles got a cool reception in New York City, British newspapers complained today.

"New York's Sour Hello," said the conservative Daily Express in a banner headline, while the more restrained Times of London reported that the heir to the British throne received "a coolish welcome."

Anti-British demonstrations by Irish Republican Army sympathizers and criticisms by New York state and city officials of British policy in Northern Ireland were treated prominently in the British press.

Charles, due back in Britain later today, made his first visit to New York to attend a gala performance by Britain's Royal Ballet Company.

New York City Mayor Edward Koch was widely reported as saying that if British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher had been the visitor he would have "socked it to her" over strife-torn Northern Ireland.

Lt. Gov. Mario Cuomo grabbed the attention of Fleet Street, Britain's newspaper row, by noting before Charles arrived that the prince symbolized Britain's "oppressive system" in Northern Ireland.

The Times said that apart from political criticisms, "There was also a mean-spirited quarrel about who should pay the $300,000 for police protection during his 24-hour stay." Because the prince is not a head of state, the federal government declined to pay for security, leaving the city to pick up the tab.

The Times said Charles, complaining of laryngitis, was a "bit sharp" with reporters, while the Express said he "seemed niggled."

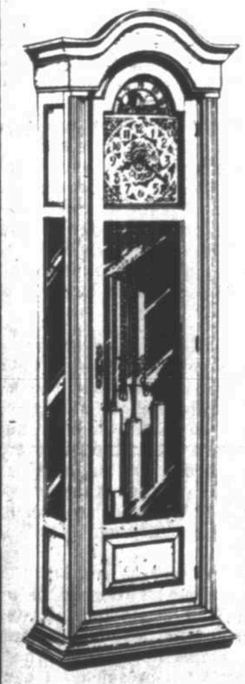

"Mob Rages at Charles," the mass circulation tabloid Sun said of the demonstrators. The Sun's headline quoted Koch as saying: "The British Should Just Get the Hell Out of Ireland."

Iranian president missing

By FAROUK NASSAR
Associated Press Writer

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Tehran's revolutionary prosecutor alerted airports and border checkpoints today to prevent missing President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr from fleeing Iran, the state radio in Tehran reported.

Prosecutor Assadollah Lajavardi said contact with the beleaguered president has been lost for the last two days, prompting the alert at the airports and border posts.

This was the first official confirmation that Bani-Sadr had disappeared. Earlier reports said the president was on the run from his fundamentalist foes.

"I have not got any information on him or his family," Bani-Sadr's sister Robabeh Sakineh, a nuclear physicist, said when reached in her Tehran residence by telephone from The Associated Press office in Beirut. "We have entrusted him to God. May God keep him."

Other sources in Tehran said there were unconfirmed reports that the now-powerless president had taken refuge in his native city Hamadan, in western Iran, as the nation's parliament prepared to debate his political fate on Saturday.

There was speculation that the first elected president in Iran's history was planning to flee to Paris, where he spent 16 years in exile during the reign of the late Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi.

But Mehdi Bazargan, Iran's first post-revolution prime minister and a Bani-Sadr friend and supporter, told The AP in a telephone interview he believed the president still was somewhere in the capital.

"He is more likely in Tehran. But I am only guessing," Bazargan said. "We, my wife and I, called on him and his wife at his presidential residence four days ago. We saw them."

Since that visit, Bazargan said, Islamic Revolutionary Guards seized the residence and are still surrounding it.

Bazargan said he and his supporters in the Freedom Movement and the moderate National Front Party have resolved to boycott Saturday's debate and all other open sessions of Parliament "because we are being threatened and insulted and we are all in physical danger."

Bani-Sadr, 47, has not been seen in public since Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, the leader of the revolutionary regime, stripped him last week of his last position of power, commander-in-chief of the armed forces. His office stopped answering telephone calls from abroad Wednesday.

Meanwhile, Bani-Sadr's foes controlling the Majlis, Iran's parliament, agreed Wednesday on ground rules for the debate on his performance as president. It is expected to end in a vote recommending that Khomeini remove him from office and possibly that he be put on trial.

Sources in Tehran, reached by telephone from Beirut, said the procedures approved for the debate were a modification of those recommended by the 120 deputies who proposed the arraignment of the president.

A two-thirds majority of those present will be required to approve a motion recommending Bani-Sadr's dismissal instead of the simple majority proposed by the sponsors of the debate. And the president's supporters and his opponents will each be given five hours to argue their cases instead of 10 as proposed by the sponsors.

There was doubt, however, that in the present political climate anyone would appear on Bani-Sadr's behalf. Reporters attending the Majlis session Wednesday said none of his supporters were present. And the government, which like the Majlis is controlled by his enemies in the Islamic Republican Party, has been arresting Bani-Sadr men still holding official positions.

The Tehran sources said 181 of the 215 Majlis members attended the session, and 143 of them voted in favor of the procedure for debating and judging the competence of the urbane, French-educated president. It could not be learned, however, whether any of the rest voted against the rules or all of them abstained.

Several thousand people demonstrated outside during the five-hour session, chanting slogans that urged the deputies to speed up the debate, a spokesman for the Majlis public relations office said. But after the vote, the debate was recessed until Saturday.

When Bani-Sadr is dismissed or resigns, the presidency will be taken over by a triumvirate of three leaders of the Islamic Republican Party: Supreme Court President Mohammad Beheshti, Majlis Speaker Hashemi Rafsanjani and Prime Minister Mohammad Ali Rajai.

The party is dominated by fundamentalist Shiite Moslem clerics, and Beheshti and Rafsanjani are both ayatollahs, the highest Shiite religious rank.

Soldier charged in shootings found insane

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — An American soldier charged with murdering four fellow soldiers during rifle practice on a firing range has been found to be insane and will be returned to the United States for treatment, a military spokesman said today.

The spokesman said an Army sanity board returned its findings Wednesday after evaluating Spec. 4 Archie R. Bell III, 21, of Long Branch, N.J. After his treatment, Bell could still be brought to trial on the charges of murder and attempted murder.

Four American soldiers were killed and a fifth was wounded in a spray of M-16 automatic rifle fire June 5 on the range at Camp Casey, 24 miles north of Seoul.

Bell's arrest was announced soon after the shootings. Five days later, the 8th U.S. Army announced that a second American soldier, Pvt. Lacy M. Harrington, 19, of Baltimore, was arrested and charged with murder — but in only one of the four deaths.

The spokesman said today that Harrington also has been evaluated by a sanity board, but its findings have not yet been disclosed. The spokesman said Harrington remained in the custody of military authorities at the 8th U.S. Army confinement facility, Camp Humphreys, south of Seoul.

At the time Harrington's arrest was announced, the army said investigators were trying to determine if there had been collusion between the two men and if the was a racial motive to the shootings. Harrington and Bell are black and the five soldiers who were shot were white.

The spokesman said today the possible racial motive is still under investigation and has not been ruled out. He declined to provide further details of the investigation.

In Bell's case, the spokesman said, the sanity board "found that Bell was insane at the time of the June 5 incident and that he does not possess sufficient mental capacity to cooperate in his own defense."

Hunger strikers in poor condition

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Four Polish hunger strikers are in poor condition after fasting for 18 days, suffering from lack of sugar, exhaustion and apathy, a spokeswoman for the independent union Solidarity said.

The strikers are seeking clemency for two brothers, Jerzy and Ryszard Kowalczyk, sentenced to 25 years in prison in 1971 for blowing up a building in the southern city of Opole. A parliamentary committee studying their case is expected to submit a clemency petition this week to the Council of State, which can issue pardons.

The Solidarity spokeswoman said if the strikers' condition continues to deteriorate, the four will be taken to a hospital and fed intravenously.

China, U.S. operating secret listening post

NEW YORK (AP) — The United States and China are jointly operating a listening post in China to monitor Soviet missile tests, according to published reports.

The eavesdropping facility, which has been in operation for the past year, is in a western region close to the Soviet border and has filled a critical vacuum created when similar stations in Iran were lost during the Iranian revolution two years ago, The New York Times quotes senior American officials as saying.

The American officials had sough to keep the existence of the intelligence-gathering station a secret, fearing that disclosure could adversely affect both countries' relations with the Soviet Union, reports by the Times and NBC news said.

What's cooking?

Patty Hodges

Patty Hodges is a very busy woman.

She works part-time at Mildred's Flower Shop and is an active member of Fannin Terrace Baptist Church, where she takes care of the flowers, teaches an adult woman's Sunday school class and sings in the choir. And she is extremely active in working with cancer patients.

Patty, who is in remission from bone cancer herself, was instrumental in starting the "I Can Cope" classes for cancer patients and their families. She is presently working to start a new program for cancer patients called "CanSurmount," and has been asked to serve as chairman of that program. Patty said that persons interested in finding out more about "CanSurmount," may call the American Cancer Society at 563-0204.

She and her husband, Bob, have three married sons. Randy and his wife, Nadine, live in White Oak, Kelly and Brenda recently moved to Midland and Mark and Sharla also live in Midland.

Her hobbies include designing and sewing clothes and cooking. The following recipe for Apricot Fried Pies using canned biscuit dough is one she developed herself. She says she ran out of shortening when making fried pies one day and decided to try using the biscuit dough instead.

She says this recipe is perfect for the busy working woman because it's so fast and easy. "It's not all that expensive, either," she notes.

To insure that the pies turn out, Patty offered some special hints. First, make sure that FLAKY biscuit dough is used. Next, the filling should be completely cooled before placing in the crust. Also, she says its extremely important that the oil for frying be very hot.

APRICOT FRIED PIES

2 cans flaky biscuit dough
Vegetable oil for frying
Powdered sugar, optional

Roll biscuits out (one at a time) on a floured surface to make thin circle. Place one heaping tablespoon of filling on each biscuit and fold over to make half circle. Crimp edges together and fry in approximately ½-inch of very hot vegetable oil (preferably in an electric skillet) until brown on both sides. Dust with powdered sugar if desired.

FILLING:

2 cans (16-oz. each) apricot halves in extra-light syrup
1¼ cups sugar
1 stick margarine
5 level tblsp. cornstarch mixed with ¼ cup water to make paste

Combine apricots, sugar and margarine and cook, stirring constantly, over low heat until mixture boils and fruit is soft. Add cornstarch paste and cook for two minutes until thickened.

The wine critic's dilemma

By DAN BERGER
Copley News Service

Most wines are living products. The good ones are made to improve with bottle age, which is why making blanket statements about any young wine is dangerous.

But the wine critic must evaluate wines soon after release, usually while the wine is still recovering from its violent fermentation, bottling and shipment. At that stage it can't show itself off properly.

Often, when tasting young wines, my notes have the following words tossed in: disjointed, bottle shock, dumb, awkward, needs time. Wines getting these comments aren't downgraded. I'm simply noting they will probably improve, given some peace and quiet.

Ideally I should evaluate all wines upon release, to determine their quality while they are still commercially available.

It would be easy, as I've seen done, to rate only wines on the market for a year or more. By then they would have recovered from any shipping shock, and would have acquired some bottle bouquet. They would then be closer to what the wine maker intended. But by then most of them would have long since been off most store shelves, and any such evaluation would do you little good.

One wine hard to evaluate when young is Gewurztraminer. The spice character inherent in the grape often doesn't come across until the wine has had at least six months of bottle age.

Chardonnay and French white Burgundy are other examples of wines that suffer in youth. In even great Chardonnays, the main flavor elements often are buried behind facades when the wine is young. Young, high-alcohol Chardonnays are, on first glance, appealing — huge, fruity, wood-drenched monsters that assault the mouth with a plethora of flavors.

But such high alcohol wines often burn out rapidly.

On the other hand, Chardonnays of balance — handsome "little" wines with delicacy, grace, and good fruit offset by an acquaintance wih oak — often don't taste great when young yet blossom with a year or three into elegant beauties.

One wine that didn't show its true colors on first release was the 1978 Chateau Montelena "Napa" Chardonnay. The wine was closed-in and although it had good fruit, it was disjointed — all of its interesting parts were not yet harmonious.

When I first tasted this $12 wine alongside its less expensive brother, the '78 Montelena "California" ($9), I was convinced the cheaper wine was better value. Today, less than a year later, the Napa-designated wine is decidedly better: opulent fruit-spice flavors, superior finish — a wine with a great future.

The critic's job is easy when a wine is so well-balanced that even in youth it displays classic lines — fruit in harmony with wood, good acidity and a generous but not heavy-handed mouthfeel.

Arthritis study

Don't count on curing arthritis by moving to a different climate.

According to the current Family Circle magazine's "Here's News in Medicine" column, a recent medical study indicates that while factors such as season and climate may affect the comfort and activity of some rheumatoid arthritis patients, they do not affect the disease itself.

DEAR ABBY

Man wants woman with health, not wealth

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I may be the first 80-year-old man to ask you for advice, but I need some help. After 57 years of a good marriage, my dear wife passed away last year. Now I would like to meet a sensible woman to invite out or to my home occasionally.

My friends want to fix me up with women who are much too young for me. (A man who has daughters 53 and 55 years old does not want to go out with a woman who is 40 or even 50. In fact, I don't want a woman who is under 70!)

I'm not interested in any woman's money as I retired with substantial income. I am in good health, play tennis three times a week, and walk no less than five miles every day, rain or shine. I enjoy traveling and can do anything a man half my age can do, but I don't go overboard on anything.

I would like a refined woman with a good sense of humor who doesn't run to doctors every day, and preferably one who can play a good game of gin rummy.

So where is she? — LOOKING IN N.Y.

DEAR LOOKING: Have you looked in Florida and California? There are more women there who fit your description than in all the other states combined. But I warn you, if your identity ever becomes known, you'll have to give up walking and start running or get a bicycle.

DEAR ABBY: I have neighbors who are very good people and I don't want to get them into trouble, but lately they've been doing something that is terribly wrong, although their intentions are good.

They have an 11-year-old son who started to wet the bed about a year ago. They took him to a doctor who found nothing physically wrong with him, so they took him to a psychiatrist. He said the boy was all right, so they just assumed he could quit wetting the bed if he really wanted to. If he woke up wet, they paddled him, and made him wash his own pajamas and sheets every morning.

Now they put a diaper on him and make him play outside in the front yard wearing only a diaper, a T-shirt, shoes and socks. All the kids tease him. He's a nice, polite kid, and I hate to see him humiliated this way.

Maybe if the parents see this in the paper they will change their tactics. I hope so. — JACKSONVILLE, FLA.

DEAR JACKSONVILLE: Well-meaning or not, those parents are being unspeakably cruel to the boy. Should they miss this column, please suggest that they buy a Wee Alert Wet Buzzer (Sears catalog lists it). I have recommended this inexpensive device for years, and according to my readers, it's worked wonders.

DEAR ABBY: We have no ashtrays in our home as a signal to smokers that we do not want them to smoke. (My wife is allergic to cigarette smoke.)

We recently gave a dinner party. There were four smokers present who lit their cigarettes from the candles on the table and dropped the ashes on their plates! They puffed all through dinner. It was disgusting.

How can a host and hostess keep their guests from smoking, short of asking them not to? — DISGUSTED

DEAR DISGUSTED: Most smokers have become more considerate. They ask if anyone objects before they light up. Those who light up without asking should be told at once that their smoke is offensive.

Alcoholic husband needs AA

By SHIRLEY BRIGHT BOODY
Copley News Service

Dear Shirley: I think my husband is an alcoholic but every time I try to talk to him about it, he gets mad and tells me to mind my own business. He is 53 years old, 5-foot-11, and weighs about 215 pounds.

He travels for a large company, and is away from home four or five days a week. I know he drinks a lot when he is away, but he says he has to, because it helps his business. When he is home, he often skips meals because he gets too drunk to eat. He does take a lot of vitamin pills, because he thinks they protect his health.

The last time he went to the doctor, he lied and told him he ate a perfectly balanced diet and drank very moderately. The doctor called me and said my husband's blood pressure was up, that he had to lose weight and he had something called hypervitaminosis. What causes that?

Can you tell me how to get my husband to eat better and stop drinking so much? I would really appreciate any suggestions. — Mrs. C.N.

Dear Mrs. C.N.: I believe you husband needs more help than you can give. I would contact your local AA (Alcoholics Anonymous) group, and start going yourself. THey help families of alcoholics to cope with the problems. No one can cure an alcoholic, until he recognizes the situation and accepts help, to cure himself.

Hypervitaminosis means excessive intake of vitamins, especially vitamins A and niacin. It is fairly common in alcoholics, who often are heavy users of the over-the-counter vitamins and excessively self-medicate to help cope with their drinking problems.

Prepare regular meals for your husband, following his doctor's orders for him. Omit salt, hard fats and concentrate on low-calorie meals with fresh fruits and vegetables, chicken and fish, skim milk and dairy products and some whole grains. Beyond that, try to relax. Let AA help — they can, and will.

Dear Shirley: In September of 1979 I had a heart attack, and my diet was one of the big factors.

I've always worked hard, been with the bank here for 20 years, raised two children, keep my home going and always had time to do a kind deed for friends.

I am at the end of my rope. I have no willpower. I cook desserts, breads and I always feed six to 20 extra people a week.

Please help me if you can. I've gained 10 pounds this winter and I know it's gonna get me, but I can't take it off because I cook big meals and I eat all hours of the day and night. — Mrs. D.M.

Dear Mrs. D.M.: I think you are one of those people who is much too good-hearted for your own heart to stand. You run the great risk of another heart attack or stroke to feed six to 20 extra people a week. What for? Must you buy their good will with free meals, and at the expense of your own health?

No one is forcing you to cook desserts, breads and huge meals. You are doing it to yourself, and you must stop this nonsense yourself. Be honest with your friends, and they will respect you for it.

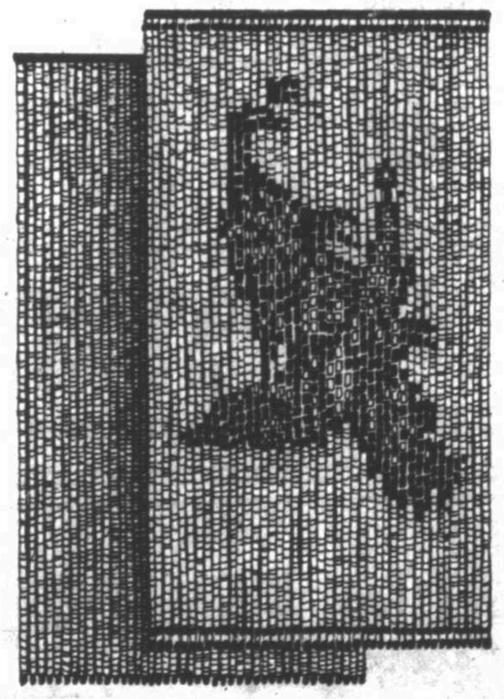

As long as you have all that food around, you will of course eat it, and then scold yourself for lack of willpower.

Stop this no-win situation, before it stops you. Start my program now, and you can entertain friends in a much healthier way.

Summer is picnic season, and peanuts are an ingredient to remember when making easy, yet elegant picnic foods. Featured in the recipes for Curried Chicken Salad and Strawberry Peanut Bars, peanuts are an easy way to add flavor and crunch to the picnic menu.

Use peanuts to make summer picnics elegant as well easy

Picnics come in all shapes and sizes. Some are casual brown bag affairs, while others include china and candlelight in a quiet spot in the woods.

Some picnics are an event in themselves with an entire block of neighbors involved in a once a year get-together, while others are held in celebration of a sporting event like a tennis match or a baseball game.

Next time you're planning a picnic, turn traditional picnic foods such as chicken and bar cookies into elegant fare. Take the following recipes from the Peanut Advisory Board for Curried Chicken Salad and Peanut Strawberry Bars.

The salad calls for basic ingredients including chicken, celery and mayonnaise. To add a special touch, curry and chutney are added as well as peanuts. In the Strawberry Peanut Bar recipe, a simple bar cookie is dressed up with the addition of a colorful topping of fresh strawberries and chopped peanuts.

The setting and serving pieces also help make a picnic elegant, so choose a special location for your next family outing. Pack a basket for an open-air conert and include cloth napkins and china. Or, plan a floating supper on the boat with flowers, moonlight and nautical serving pieces.

Bake in a 375 F. oven for 15 minutes or until slightly browned around edges. Remove pan from oven and spread with strawberry mixture. Sprinkle with remaining ¼ cup peanuts. Moveable feast: From Spain to Denmark

By JEANNETTE BRANIN
Copley News Service

"Progressive dinners" — moving from home to home for various courses — always have been popular among young couples. It's a good way to show off a new home, or a new baby, or just to offer hospitality without the work of preparing the entire dinner.

Consider making a progressive dinner a culinary trip abroad. The soup course could be Gazpacho, inspired by Spain's sunny Andalusia area. Salad could be Tabbouleh, favored by many Mediterranean nations, scooped from a bowl with romaine leaves. The main course might be Ratatouille, beloved in Provence, the southern region of France. For dessert, move in imagination to Denmark, for hot Camembert with fresh fruit and black currant jame.

Here are good and tested recipes for the international progressive dinner:

ZESTY GAZPACHO SOUP

1 (10.5 oz.) can condensed beef broth
One and one-half cup vegetable juice or 1 (12 oz.) can vegetable juice
1 cup seeded and chopped cucumber
One-half cup seeded and chopped tomato
One-half cup chopped green pepper
1 tbsp. lemon juice
2 small cloves garlic, crushed
Dash of liquid hot pepper seasoning

In a large bowl, combine beef broth, vegetable juice, cucumber, tomato, green pepper, onion, lemon juice, garlic and hot pepper seasoning. Stir until blended. Cover and refrigerate at least 4 hours or until serving time. Serve with crackers, bread sticks, or corn and sesame chips. Makes four cups.

ALMOND TABBOULEH

1 cup bulgur (cracked wheat)
Two-thirds cup sliced green onions
One-half cup lightly packed chopped parsley
2 tbsps. chopped mint
Two-thirds cup chopped natural almonds, toasted
One-half cup raisins
One-third cup lemon juice
One-fourth cup vegetable oil
One-half tsp. salt
One-fourth pepper
Romaine lettuce leaves.

Measure bulgur into large bowl. Pour boiling water over it just to cover. Set aside about 30 minutes until water is completely absorbed. Add remaining ingredients except Romaine. Toss thoroughly. Cover and chill at least two hours. To serve, spoon wheat mixture into serving dish, accompany with Romaine leaves to be used as scoops. Makes six servings.

RATATOUILLE PROVENCALE

1 large eggplant
One-third cup French olive oil
1 green pepper, chopped
3 cloves garlic, chopped
2 onions, chopped
4 tomatoes, chopped
2 zucchini, diced
1 tsp. Herbes de Provence
Salt and pepper
One-half lb. French cheese, Beaumont, St. Paulin or Emmental, thinly sliced

Cut eggplant in half lengthwise and scoop out pulp, leaving shell one-half-inch thick. Dice eggplant pulp Heat oil and saute green pepper, garlic and onions for 10 minutes. Add diced eggplant, tomatoes, zucchini and herbs. Simmer for 15 to 20 minutes or until vegetables are mushy. Season to taste with salt and pepper. Spoon mixture into reserved eggplant shells. Top with cheese slices and bake in preheated moderate oven, 350 degrees, for 30 minutes or until cheese is melted and lightly browned. Makes about four servings.

GOLDEN FRIED CAMEMBERT

Canned Danish Camembert
Egg white, lightly beaten
Flour for coating
Plain fine bread crumbs, for coating
Cooking oil
Butter

Chill Camembert and cut into small wedges. Coat with egg white, flour, then egg white again. Cover evenly with bread crumbs. Refrigerate. Just before serving, saute cheese until golden in small amount of hot oil and butter, turning to brown on all sides. Drain on paper towels. Serve with toast rounds, fresh fruit and black currant jam.

Caraway Potatoes go great with corned beef

What should you serve with corned beef?

Buttery Caraway Potatoes and Cabbage are the perfect menu-mates. To make four servings, peel six small, new potatoes and cook in boiling, salted water until tender, about 20 minutes. Drain well; set aside.

Melt 3 tablespoons butter in large skillet; add three cups sliced green cabbage (about one pound), one teaspoon caraway seed, one-fourth teaspoon salt and one-eighth teaspoon pepper.

Cook, covered, until cabbage is crisp tender, about three minutes. Add cooked potatoes; heat to serving temperature.

Vegetarian cooking

Microwave meatless main dishes

By CLARE BARRETT
Copley News Service

If you're into microwave cooking with a meatless slant, there is a new cookbook that you'll want to have. It's Vol. 7 in a series of microwave cookbooks by Litton, titled "Fruits and Vegetables."

Published by Van Nostrand Reinhold, it's in hardcover and sells for $10.95. A good value at that, for this is a fabulous cookbook, beautifully photographed and full of original ideas for the microwave preparation of fruit and vegetable dishes.

While this is not a vegetarian cookbook, Litton surely knows its vegetables! From artichokes to jicama to yams, all are treated with creativity and respect. Those recipes that do call for meat can be easily altered to do without by an enterprising vegetarian chef.

The fruit creations are mostly desserts, many too sugary for my taste, but again they are subject to adaptation.

The following recipes will give you a sample of what the cookbook has to offer, minus the photographs, which add much to the instructional value and eye appeal of the book. Look for it at your local bookstore.

VEGETABLE LASAGNA

8 ozs. fresh mushrooms, coarsely chopped
1 green pepper, chopped
1 medium onion, chopped
1 clove garlic, pressed or minced
2 tbsps. olive oil
1 (16 oz.) can whole tomatoes
1 (16 oz.) tomato paste
One-third cup red wine or water
1 tbsp. parsley flakes
One and one-half tsps. salt, divided
2 tsps. sugar
1 tsp. basil leaves
1 tsp. oregano leaves
2 bay leaves
1 (15 oz.) carton ricotta cheese or 2 cups large-curd cottage cheese
2 eggs
One-half cup grated parmesan cheese, divided
One-fourth tsp. black pepper
9 lasagna noodles, cooked
3 cups shredded mozzarella cheese

Combine mushrooms, green pepper, onion, garlic and oil in 3-quart casserole, cover. Microwave at high 6 to 8 minutes, or until tender, stirring once.

Stir in tomatoes, paste, wine, parsley flakes, one teaspoon salt, sugar, basil, oregano and bay leaves. Microwave at high uncovered, five minutes, stir.

Reduce power to 50 percent (medium). Microwave 30 minutes or until flavors are blended and mixture is thickened, stirring two or three times. Remove bay leaves.

Mix together in medium bowl ricotta, eggs, one-fourth cup Parmesan, one-half teaspoon salt and black pepper. In 12x8-inch baking dish layer one-third each of noodles, ricotta mixture, sauce and mozzarella. Repeat twice, sprinkle with one-fourth cup Parmesan.

Microwave at 50 percent (medium) 20 minutes, or until hot and bubbly rotating dish one-half turn once. Let stand 12 minutes to set. Serves eight.

STUFFED ARTICHOKES

4 medium artichokes
One-fourth cup lemon juice
One-fourth cup water
One-fourth cup chopped green onion
One-fourth cup chopped celery
1 clove garlic, pressed or minced
1 tbsp. butter or margarine
1 (12 oz.) pkg. frozen spinach souffle, defrosted (see note)
One-half cup fine dry bread crumbs
One and one-half tsps. parsley flakes
Dash pepper
One-half cup shredded Cheddar cheese

Trim artichokes 1 inch from top and close to base. Cut off sharp tips of outer leaves, brush with lemon juice. In 8x8-inch baking dish place artichokes and water. Cover tightly with plastic wrap. Microwave at high six minutes, or until just tender, rotating dish one-half turn after half the cooking time. Set aside.

In small dish microwave green onion, celery, garlic and butter at High 2 to 3 minutes, or until tender, stirring after half the cooking time. Stir in souffle, bread crumbs, parsley and pepper. Open the center of each artichoke to form a well. Remove some of the center leaves and scrape out choke, stuff artichokes wih spinach. Rearrange in 8x8-inch baking dish. Cover with plastic wrap.

Microwave at high 6 minutes, or until filling is hot, base is fork tender and leaves can be removed with slight tug, rotating dish one-half turn after half the cooking time. Sprinkle each artichoke with one-fourth of cheese. Re-cover. Microwave at high 1 to 2 minutes, or until cheese melts, rotating dish one-half turn after half the time. Serves four.

Note: To defrost, remove from foil package and place in small bowl. Microwave at 50 percent (medium) 4 to 5 minutes or until softened, breaking up with fork after half the cooking time.

No two dishes alike in Pakistan

By TOM HOGE
AP Wine and Food Writer

A restaurant billed as home of the only Pakistani cuisine in New York has another distinction: the chefs and patrons eat two different types of food.

"Our cooks, at their own request, eat 'peasant' food, a specialty of Pakistan's Punjab region," I was told by Naeem Ahmed, manager of New York's Shezan Restaurant, "while our guests are served 'holiday' fare. The latter are dishes that are featured only on special occasions in Pakistan."

This doesn't mean that peasant food served in the kitchen is inferior in any way to that which appears on the dining room menus.

"Peasant food requires the best of ingredients and a minimum of cooking," Ahmed said. "It is also hotter than holiday food, with more pepper added." Something that might turn Western customers off.

Pakistani food in general is less hot, however, than that of India, Ahmed said. There's another difference. Hindu Indians do not eat red meat as a rule, whereas Moslem Pakistanis do.

Pork is forbidden to most Pakistanis, but they go in for beef, lamb and seafood, grilled, barbecued or cooked with the curries for which the subcontinent is famous.

The curries of India and Pakistan also differ. The Indian variety puts the main accent on the curry sauces, whereas the Pakistanis stress the meat.

In America, curry for most of us means a yellow powder ready to add to a dish. In Pakistan, it is a complicated mixture of spices, including coriander, saffron, and cumin blended according to each cook's taste in an onion-based sauce.

It is said that on a Pakistani menu, no two dishes are spiced the same way, but all should be seasoned so that no one flavor dominates.

Pakistani chefs marinate meats and seafood in spices, then grill them in tandooris, or clay ovens. They also make cold dishes like Raita, a warm-weather favorite. Here's the recipe.

1 medium cucumber
1 quart natural whole-milk yogurt
Salt to taste
2 teaspoons sugar
½ cup golden raisins
½ cup black currants
½ teaspoon paprika
½ cup finely chopped parsley
½ teaspoon cumin seeds

Peel and grate cucumber fine. Blend yogurt in mixing bowl with wire whisk. Add a little milk if consistency is too thick. Add cucumber, salt and sugar and mix well. In each of 6 small bowls place 6 to 8 raisins, and 10 to 12 currants. Spoon yogurt mixture into each bowl. Sprinkle paprika, parsley and cumin seeds over yogurt mixture. Place in refrigerator one hour before serving. Serves 6.

The big lie in the meat case

By MERLE ELLIS

Many times in this column I have lamented the mislabeling of ground meat. I have called it a lie — and I do again — to label ground beef "ground chuck," "ground round," or "ground sirloin." It is totally illogical to assume that any butcher can take the bone out of a sirloin steak, grind the remaining meat and sell it for less than the steak with the bone left in. Anybody who knows anything about meat knows that "ground sirloin" is not that at all.

It has also been made obvious to me recently that the Better Business Bureau knows nothing about meat!

Late last year, I saw a television commercial for a steak sauce. I've seen it several times since. It's a commercial for what I am sure is a good product, but I took offense at what they were saying to sell it. In the commercial, a man asks rhetorically: ". . . What is ground beef but ground steak?"

The answer is that it's anything but. Ground beef is NOT ground steak, and suggesting that it is is a disservice to the consumer. We have enough problems trying to make ends meet without that kind of misrepresentation on television or in the meat case.

I wrote a letter expressing my concerns to the Better Business Bureau. I received the following reply:

"Dear Mr. Ellis:

"Your letter . . . regarding advertising for A-1 Steak Sauce has been referred to me for follow-up.

"In your letter you mentioned concern about the statement, 'What is ground beef but ground steak?' NAD (National Advertising Division) looked into the matter and found that all grades of hamburger are ground from beef that can also be sold as a cut of steak. For example, as you must know, beef chuck ground, beef round ground and beef sirloin top ground are all ground from beef that can be sold as a variety of steaks and roasts. Even ground beef, which has a lower lean-to-fat ratio, comes from the flank cut of beef, which can also be sold as a steak.

Enclosed is a chart from the National Livestock and Meat Board that I think makes legitimate the reference in the commercial that 'ground beef' is, indeed, 'ground steak.'

"Sincerely,
Lisa E. Rafkin,
Advertising Review Specialist"

I appreciate the time and trouble devoted to "resolving" my concerns, but I remain unconvinced. Simple logic alone is enough to blow holes in the BBB's findings.

It is true that one muscle of the flank can be and is sold as a steak. The price of that steak in most markets is in excess of $4 per pound. They would have me believe that grinding that steak allows it to be sold as ground beef for less than $2 a pound. Ah, the magic of the meat grinder!

The truth of the matter is that after the flank steak is removed, the remainder of the flank portion of the beef is used for grinding because it is far too tough for any other use. The round and chuck portions of the beef also have parts too tough to be used as steak, and they are traditionally ground. They are the trimmings of chuck and round — the shank and heel, the plate and neck — not the "steaks and roasts."

Impetus for women's drinking under study

GRAND FORKS, N.D. (AP) — Conflict about traditional sex roles and major losses or life transitions may be among the principal underlying causes of alcoholism among American women, says a psychologist at the University of North Dakota.

"Alcoholic women are more likely to show a discrepancy between how they consciously feel about traditional sex roles and how they actually behave," says the researcher, Dr. Sharon C. Wilsnack, associate professor of psychology at the university's Medical School.

For example, she explains, on an overt level they may indicate strong support for traditional feminine roles such as being a wife and mother and trying to look attractive, while on psychological tests they score as more assertive, independent and dominant than the non-alcoholics.

In other instances, the sex-role conflict, rather than being internal, may be with the woman's social environment, as in the case of a strong, self-assertive, independent woman whose husband wants her to stay home and be a full-time wife and homemaker.

Ms. Wilsnack says other key factors in causing women to drink excessively are major losses or life transitions such as divorce, separation, death of husband or parent, a miscarriage or other gynecological problems, menopause, and the so-called "empty-nest syndrome."

One study, for example, found that 26 percent of women in alcoholic treatment programs had tried unsuccessfully to have children, compared with just 4 percent in a control group composed of non-alcoholic women.

The whole picture of alcoholism among women is complicated by what appears to be a "sexual double standard" that treats women's drinking and alcohol abuse as more immoral and deviant than men's, she added.

"If such a double standard does exist," Ms. Wilsnack said, "it could set up a vicious circle of drinking leading to social disapproval, and social disapproval leading to more drinking. If social disapproval is stronger toward women's drinking, this could make problem drinking develop more rapidly for women than for men.

"In addition, since drinking has traditionally been considered a more masculine than feminine activity, drinking may help women express the traditional masculine side of sex-role conflicts or may help symbolize their liberation from traditional female roles," she added.

Ms. Wilsnack, one of the first researchers to probe the area of women's drinking, recently received a $500,000 grant from the National Institute on Alcohol Abuse and Alcoholism to expand her research, a project that will include 1½-hour interviews with 1,000 women and 500 men.

The data will be fed into the university's IBM computer to analyze life events and how they influence drinking behavior, as well as other possible causes of women's drinking.

"It's an enormously complex undertaking," Ms. Wilsnack said. "It would never be possible to analyze this kind of data without the computer."

On the basis of her research, Ms. Wilsnack feels that if life stress does play a greater role in women's drinking problems than men's this might have important implications for treating and preventing alcohol abuse in women.

"For example, it would suggest that women undergoing life crises or life transitions (such as a recently divorced or recently widowed women) are at particularly high risk for the development of alcohol problems," she said.

"Preventive interventions such as alcohol education, support groups, or training in coping skills, might keep these high-risk women from turning to alcohol to cope with their difficult life situations."

Until recent years, most research dealing with alcohol abuse and alcoholism was conducted with only male subjects, Ms. Wilsnack pointed out.

"If women were given any thought at all, it was generally assumed that findings from studies of alcoholic men would apply equally well to alcoholic women. In the past 10 years, however, women's drinking has become a major social issue.

"Research on women's drinking and drinking problems has increased markedly, but it has concentrated largely on white, middle-class, married, heterosexual women," she added. "Our new study will include women from a range of ethnic and socio-economic levels."

Full society role urged for disabled

NEW YORK (AP) — Dr. Anne Carlsen was honored recently as recipient of the 18th annual "Woman of Conscience Award" presented by the National Council of Women of the United States.

Ms. Carlsen, herself disabled from birth, has worked as a teacher of the disabled for 43 years. She has been administrator of the Crippled Children's School-Hospital in Jamestown, N.D., renamed the Anne Carlsen School in her honor, since 1950.

"It is a great honor for me to be selected," she said during the awards ceremonies here. She said that as a representative of 35 million disabled persons in the United States, "I am eager that each one of them have a chance of full participation in our society."

Ms. Carlsen identified five problem areas for the disabled: social acceptance, education, employment, transportation and housing. She said work in these areas would require the cooperation of the disabled and the non-disabled as well.

"We have come a long way in giving the disabled a chance to participate in our society, but we still have a long way to go," she said.

Her remarks were echoed by the keynote speaker, Dr. Howard Rusk, founder of New York University's Institute of Rehabilitative Medicine.

"We have a long way to go, tremendous numbers of people, all kinds of problems," Rusk said.

AT WIT'S END

Conversational combat leaves tongue tied

By ERMA BOMBECK

Does anyone else suffer from "latent genius"?

My brain is just not geared for conversational combat. Put it in a situation that requires speed, cunning and excessive cuteness and it'll stall every time.

It doesn't wake up until after a door slams, the phone is hung up, the party is over, or Johnny Carson is saying good night.

I fantasize about being approached by a tall, dark stranger and having him say, "Have you ever thought of leaving your husband?" and I'd yawn, "Why should I settle for polyester when I have ultra-suede at home, if you get my drift."

Then he says, "I admire your flippancy."

And I reply, "Then you'll love the movie."

"Please," he begs, as I turn to leave, "I love to talk to liberated women who know who they are."

I sigh, "When I can't stand the heat . . . I'll go back to the kitchen."

He says, "Would you mind if I sent that in to Reader's Digest?" and I shrug, "Whatever makes your wheels spin."

It never happens that way. The only time a man asked me if I had ever thought of leaving my husband I answered, "Where?" and dropped a smoked oyster in his drink.

A lot of people are brilliant when they're angry. Not me. I usually end up with a colorful, "Well, we'll see about that" or "Sticks and stones will break my bones but words will never harm me."

I suspect a lot of it stems from a basic shyness or insecurity. All I know is I am dynamite in the car by myself behind the steering wheel. There is no one who can top me in quick retorts, asides, innuendoes, plays on words and insights. I could convulse a convention of nuclear protesters.

That is where I rehearsed a comment I was going to deliver at a dinner honoring Arthur Hailey a few years ago. The speech was devastatingly hilarious and I began to feel sorry for poor Mr. Hailey, who would fade into oblivion as the guests crowded around my silver tongue.

At the dinner, I cleared my throat and said, "Mr. Hailey, I've written everything you've ever read."

Luckily, I mumbled and no one heard me.

Warning for sunbathers

In the long run, tanning doesn't improve your health or your looks, says Dr. T.C. Doele, head of an American Medical Association department that has made a lengthy study.

Says he: "Excessive exposure to the sun over a period of years can and often does lead to skin cancer. Tanning promotes premature aging of the skin. The teen-age girl who bakes in the sun each year may find that when she is 40 her skin looks many years older, with leathery texture, wrinkles, skin folds and sagging skin."

Soil erosion costly

Each year, erosion robs the United States of enough soil to cover Iowa with a layer an inch thick, and this often comes from the best land. The annual loss is 5.5 billion tons despite persistent efforts to bring the total down.

Seal's lungs amazing

The breathing capacity of a harp seal is amazing. With lungs no larger than ours, this mammal can dive at least 600 feet and remain underwater about 30 minutes.

Too many doctors?

There will be far more physicians than needed by the year 2000, according to a four-year study by the Graduate Medical Education National Advisory Committee. Its report says there will be 145,000 more doctors than needed.

Planning makes entertainment easy and fun, winemaker says

NEW YORK (AP) — The livin' is easy in summer, and that's the way entertaining should be too, believes Aldo Cella, of Cella Wines, who offers pointers that will allow the host or hostess to enjoy the party as much as the guests:

—Cookouts are fun and simple, especially when you don't care to wear a chef's hat throughout the evening. Provide a variety of meats, vegetables, sauces and skewers and let the guests barbecue their own kabobs just the way they like them.

—Wine, beer and soft drinks can be kept chilled in large, lined trash cans filled with ice chunks and a little water. Drinks will always be accessible and refrigerator space will be available for other needs.

—Simple dishes for a buffet appeal to a variety of tastes and diets. Add a special flair with a few accompanying sauces and garnishes, which guests can use if they wish.

—Cook for crowds in small batches, rather than in large quantities. Recipes should not be multiplied by more than two for best results.

—Arrange food in the order in which it will be eaten. Plates always go first, flatware and napkins go last.

—Choose foods that will remain attractive and not spoil.

—Vary colors and textures to make foods on a platter look more appetizing.

—Plan the table with enough space between foods to eliminate crowding. Two serving lines are helpful, with doubles of everything along both sides.

—Decorate buffet tables with foods. An edible watermelon "basket' filled with fresh fruits or a sparkling wine punch with fruit slices are as eye-appealing as they are refreshing.

—With taste trends toward lightness, a simple yet colorful buffet alternative can be created with a variety of chilled wines or wine-based drinks, an array of cheeses, breads, crackers and fruits, and plenty of sliced vegetables, along with dips.

—It is helpful to have someone assist in serving and available to explain unusual dishes.

—Brightly colored paper cloths, napkins, plates and cups and matching plastic utensils look attractive and save cleanup time.

—Garbage cans placed in strategic spots around the yard will encourage your guests to keep things tidied up.

—Make sure your guest list is limited to a number that can be accommodated comfortably inside as well as outside in case of rain.

—Protection from an unexpected change in the weather can be provided by tents, which are easy to put up and which can add a festive touch to any summer occasion.

HINTS FROM HELOISE

Discourage pigeons with a hoot

DEAR HELOISE:

In your column you offer many helpful household suggestions covering a wide variety of subjects. While this may be out of the ordinary, we definitely need help as we have a most annoying, dirty and polluting problem regarding pigeons.

They are a real health hazard and we have done everything possible to get rid of them, but all to no avail.

Several of our friends have suggested we write to you. If you could recommend an effective control of these pests, we would greatly appreciate it.

Thank you for your kind attention and hoping to hear from you at your earliest convenience. — Joseph P. Kelly

+ + +

Well, I got to scratching my head and searching those files and, believe it or not, I came up with a letter I had received from a dear lady a few years back with the same problem.

Let me share her solution and perhaps it'll work for you too:

"Pigeons would build nests in the columns above the church porch where my husband was the preacher," she wrote. "When we'd come to church on Sunday morning, eggs would have rolled out of the nest and splattered on the porch.

"I remembered someone telling me to put a ceramic owl (painted to look natural) where the pigeons nest and it would get rid of them.

I placed a ceramic owl above each column and it worked! 'Twas almost miraculous the way the pigeons would fly to the outside of the porch, cock their heads in question and, after a few looks, take off and never come back."

So, Mr. Kelly, unless that preacher's wife had an inside connection, the owl trick may be the answer.

If some of my readers have a more down-to-earth solution to this problem, drop me a line in care of your local newspaper. — Hugs, Heloise

SMART MOVE

Dear Heloise: The last time we moved, I didn't want to have to wash all the glassware and other breakables because they got dirty since I usually packed them in newspaper.

This time I used paper towels. As I unpacked, I simply saved the used (but still clean) towels for cleaning, and everything I had packed stayed clean.

A real timesaver when time is so limited. — Mary Anne Lienhard

EASY REMOVAL

Dear Heloise: When putting adhesive-backed paper on cabinet shelves or in drawers, I only remove one or two inches of the protective backing.

This leaves enough adhesive to hold the paper securely in place but, when it comes time to remove the paper, the job is much easier. — S.L. Bryson

OPERATING AND MAINTENANCE

Dear Heloise: My husband stores his lawnmower, snow tractor, trimmer, plus all his other power tools in the garage.

Since they all come with operating and maintenance instructions, I cover each sheet or booklet with plastic and tack it on the inside wall of the garage above where the tools are stored.

He can see them at a glance and doesn't have to come into the house to look up a diagram of parts or how-to instructions.

And best of all, they never get misplaced. They have been there for years. — Mrs. Eleanor Wallace

Decor score: Ingenuity 'stretches' fabric

By BARBARA HARTUNG
Copley News Service

Q. I am moving from one apartment to another and will be taking my bedspread and bedroom draperies with me.

My new bedroom windows require much more fabric than I have and I'm not able to get more in the same print. How should I drape the new windows?

The bedspread and drapery fabric I have is a fuchsia, pink, green, yellow and white. Walls and carpeting are an off-white. — W.B.

A. There are several ways to use fabric that don't require yards of pleated or gathered material. One is to bond or fuse two different fabrics, using bondable material that you iron between the two layers of fabric.

Stretch the fabric across the window in a flat manner and cut through the center to create a tieback effect, folding back the material, to expose the other side of the fabric — usually in a contrasting but coordinating pattern or color.

For your room you might select a pink and white stripe that would look well with your floral pattern. Use the stripe elsewhere in the room on a skirted table, picture mats, a lampshade and even in a closet on boxes.

Still another way to use a small amount of fabric would be to laminate what fabric you do have to window shades. Any extra material could be used to cover a small cornice box for concealing the top of the shade.

Q. I need some suggestions concerning wall hangings for two walls in my living room. What I've seen are winter scenes and that's not what I want for year-round.

My sofa and matching love seat are a cotton print of white, cream, brown, light and dark blue.

My cocktail tables are of medium dark wood, and the connecting dining room is of light wood and chrome. What colors would go best? — S.Y.

A. I wouldn't worry too much about colors for your wall decorations. Instead look for something that really appeals to you and your family. Oftentimes you will see picture-perfect rooms with the paintings or prints taken from the colors of the rooms. But the overall effect is a lifeless one because the wall decorations don't reflect any personality.

If you are looking for unusual but good art work, particularly paintings with a reasonable price tag, check out the art cooperatives or university or art schools in your area. And don't overlook the secondhand shops.

Remember, too, that there are lots of wall items to choose from. Mirrors are pleasant and eye expanding. Also you can find marvelous yarn wall hangings. Or an interesting area rug could be great for a wall hanging.

Fabric shops, too, are good to visit. A few yards of fascinating fabric can be placed between stretchers and hung as a painting.

In choosing the items, look for the same natural colors you have in your sofa. Any of those colors or combinations of them would be lovely.

Q. Can you please give me some help on how to decorate a living room with dining room area off it. It's a small house but I would like to give a look of space if possible.

I have a new living room suite in a natural background with rust, gold and brown flowers on it.

Please let me know what color paint to get and what color carpet and drapes. — J.W.

A. Paint the walls a natural — as in the background of your fabric. Repeat that in the draperies to give one continuous sweep to the walls, expanding the space some.

If you desire, trim your draperies with some gold and rust and brown braid or tape to tie in your room's colors.

A warm, rich medium rust would be a great color for the carpet. Don't choose too dark a rust because then the dust and lint show.

Please send questions for Decor Score to Copley News Service, in care of this newspaper.

Cents-off coupons

It may not seem fair, but...a store owner can legally refuse to accept cents-off coupons, says refund specialist Susan Samtur in her current Family Circle magazine money management report.

In her 8-times-a-year reports for Family Circle, Ms. Samtur gives time-and-money saving tips on refunding and lists the latest cash, coupon and merchandise refunds.

Even though manufacturers pay the store the face value of a coupon, plus a 7 cent handling fee, food stores don't have to participate, says Samtur. "However," she notes, "If I encountered a store that refused my coupons, I would shop elsewhere." It's your option to do the same, she concludes, "especially when you consider the savings that coupons represent."

That new crop of names is actually 'recycled'

By DON KENDALL
AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Some old names in the Agriculture Department's complicated bureaucracy are being dusted off and recycled by the the Reagan administration.

The Economics and Statistics Service — which until recently was the Economics, Statistics and Cooperatives Service — will be the Economics Research Service or ERS as it was known for many years back in the 1960s and early 1970s.

Also, there is the ARS or Agricultural Research Service, the CSRC or Cooperative State Research Service and the ES or Extension Service, each headed by an administrator.

Previously, they were cranked into an umbrella agency called the Science and Education Administration, which is being abolished.

Those and other administrative actions were announced Wednesday by Agriculture Secretary John R. Block, who also abolished the Office of Environmental Quality.

It was created by Block's predecessor, Bob Bergland, on July 23, 1979, to give more emphasis to the Agriculture Department's responsibility under federal laws relating to environmental protection.

"This action does not mean we have less concern for environmental quality," Block said. "Rather, it is a desire to ensure better integration of these concerns with ongoing programs."

Prior to the creation of the Office of Environmental Quality almost two years ago, its function was a part of the office of the agriculture secretary. That was done on Jan. 1, 1970, under the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969, which directed federal agencies to beef up their environmental operations.

Block also established the Human Nutrition Information Service under the jurisdiction of the assistant secretary for food and consumer services. Human nutrition research itself will remain under the supervision of the department's director of science and education.

Earlier this month, Block announced the reorganization of the Food Safety and Quality Service, which was renamed the Food Safety and Inspection Service and moved from the jurisdiction of the assistant secretary for food and consumer services to the assistant secretary for marketing and transportation.

Farm credit program favored

By BOB FICK
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Farm Belt congressmen, worried about the economic problems facing young farmers just starting out, are pushing a new government-backed credit program they hope will keep the family farm in business.

"The fact is there's no financing mechanism available that really gives that person a chance to go out and get involved," says Rep. Byron Dorgan, D-N.D. "It's in our interest to see that they do."

Rep. Thomas Petri, R-Wis., said American farms disappeared at the rate of nearly 1,000 a week last year, and Rep. Berkley Bedell, D-Iowa, said his new credit plan recognizes "how important it is that we continue to have the family farm as the basis for American agriculture."

●

The House Agriculture subcommittees on family farms and credit are considering the proposal, which would provide millions of dollars of federal loan guarantees through states with lending programs especially targeted to young farmers trying making to make their first land purchases.

Those farmers would have to show that they can't get the credit anywhere else, including the government's farm lending arm, the Farmers Home Administration. About 20 states have either enacted such lending programs or have them under consideration.

But Frank Naylor, the undersecretary of agriculture overseeing that lending agency, told the subcommittees Wednesday that the FmHA is redirecting its efforts toward first-time farmers with emphasis on supervision by farm experts in the borrower's local area to help ensure their success and enable them to qualify for commercial credit within 10 years.

Al Haslebacher, deputy governor of the Farm Credit Administration, said the plan could help some farmers get started. But he cautioned that others could wind up worse off after getting the credit because they won't be able to earn enough from farming to make the payments on a mortgage for most of the value of the land.

"Current earnings have averaged only around 4 percent nationwide, far less than is required to pay the interest loan...when the purchase is highly leveraged," Haslebacher told the subcommittees.

"This leaves nothing for operating expenses or family living. In fact, it requires that other sources of earnings be available to make part of the mortgage payments," he said. "There could be more problems by lending people into trouble than by some not being able to get into the field."

Naylor said risk of default under the plan could be higher than in other government credit programs because those eligible for the new credit first would have to be rejected for a loan from the FmHA, which serves those who can't qualify for commercial credit.

"A review of the present beginning farmer situation indicates that well-intentioned efforts in the past often resulted in government loans being made to prospective producers who have only limited experience," Naylor said.

Rep. Arlan Stangeland, R-Minn., added, "Not everybody who wants to be a farmer can be a farmer. You have to have a little more than desire."

Wallace's position changed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Joan S. Wallace, the highest ranking black official in the Agriculture Department, has been shifted from her sub-Cabinet post to another job.

Mrs. Wallace will be director of the department's Office of International Cooperation and Development, effective July 6, Agriculture Secretary John R. Block said Wednesday.

Quentin West, currently head of the office, will continue to serve in another of his assignments, special assistant to the undersecretary for international affairs and commodity programs.

Mrs. Wallace has been assistant secretary for administration since Dec. 2, 1977, overseeing the personnel, finance, equal opportunity and management programs for the department's 96,426 full-time employees.

As head of the OICD, as the agency is called, Mrs. Wallace will be in charge of about 187 employees.

Officials said her salary will remain $50,112.

Block, in a statement, said the agency "is responsible for USDA's overall program to aid agricultural development" in many of the world's less-developed countries.

"This includes the responsibility for technical assistance, international training and development programs, as well as the coordination of international organizational affairs and scientific exchange and research agreements in transitional and developed countries," he said.

Mrs. Wallace was appointed to her sub-Cabinet post by Block's predecessor, Bob Bergland. Before joining the department, she was vice president for administration at Morgan State University in Baltimore, Md.

Cotton forecasts are down

WASHINGTON (AP) — World cotton production in 1980-81 is estimated at 65.3 million bales, down from last month's projection of 65.4 million, the Agriculture Department says.

The decrease was attributed to foreign output. The 1980 cotton crop estimate of 11.1 million bales remains unchanged, the department's Foreign Agricultural Service said Wednesday.

Meanwhile, cotton use this season is expected to be about 66.3 million bales, an increase of 100,000 from the May forecast, the agency said.

Global cotton stocks by Aug. 1, when the new 1981-82 year begins, are expected to be 20.1 million bales, about 200,000 bales less than forecast last month, the report said.

New Jersey mystery boy's father finally claims him

HAMILTON TOWNSHIP, N.J. (AP) — A smiling, freckle-faced, 9-year-old boy with a missing front tooth baffled police for almost two days before the mystery boy's father stepped forward.

Paul Furman of Beechwood ended what police called a "real mystery case" Wednesday night when he said the youngster is his son, Tony.

The lad, who told police his name was Tony Blaire, had claimed he was lost, but police weren't sure. Detective Anthony Romano said police had no idea how the youngster got to this township from his home, which is more than 40 miles away.

However, the child's 12-year-old brother, Paul, was still missing Tuesday night.

"He could be in New York by now," said Romano.

"I've been a policeman for 24 years, but I've never seen anything like him," Sgt. Robert Mohr said earlier Wednesday. "When a kid gets lost, the parents usually come in within a few hours, but not this time."

"He doesn't seem too eager to get back to wherever he came from," added Detective Nick Gaug. "He doesn't say much about his family and when we ask him a question he doesn't want to answer, he just gets quiet. When we pressed him, he clammed up."

A nationwide alert was issued to locate the parents or guardians of the boy who was picked in a woman's back yard here shortly before midnight on Monday.

Romano said the child was a "habitual runaway...he's done this at least 15 times before." The detective indicated Furman "has been having problems with the boy." He would not elaborate.

Young Tony does not know his father has found him, said Romano.

"The father is scared the boy would climb out of the window if he went home now," said Romano. The youngster went home Tuesday with Mohr, where he was to spend Wednesday night.

The Division of Youth and Family Services would assume responsibility for the child Thursday morning, said Romano.

Romano said a friend of the family saw an account of the missing boy on television and called Furman, who then called police. Furman identified his son from pictures at the police station.

Police were not convinced of the veracity of the boy's account of how he became lost while looking for his brother, whose name he gave to police as Eric.

In an interview Wednesday, before his father came forward, the boy said he recently came here from Florida where he said his "real Mom" lives.

Mohr said Wednesday the boy could stay with him as long as he wants.

"My whole family loves him," Mohr said. "My boy, Danny, is about his age and they're having a great time together."

In the interview, Tony said he doesn't mind if his family finds him, but adds that he would really like to stay with Mohr "until I'm 18 — then I'll go out and get a job like everybody else."

The search for Tony's parents centered on a report that two women in a pickup truck dropped the boy off outside the home of Mary O'Neill in this suburb of Trenton.

Mrs. O'Neill said the women told her they gave Tony and another boy a ride because their bicycle had a flat tire. She said they told her that the two boys "said they lived at my house."

Police said there has been no trace of the second boy, who Tony insists was his missing brother.

Tony stuck to the story he gave police, but at one point in the interview he referred to his brother as "Paul, I mean Eric."

Officials from the Division of Youth and Family Services said a doctor gave him a clean bill of health. They also said he had recent dental work.

"It appears Tony has been well-cared for," Gaug said.

Woman, 89, runs over, kills 99-year-old sister

DEANSBORO, N.Y. (AP) — A 99-year-old woman whose eyesight and hearing "weren't too good" stepped behind a car as her 89-year-old sister was backing it out of their driveway and was crushed to death, authorities say.

Eva R. Peck, 99, and her sister, Clara Adams, were "always together" during the more than 40 years they shared a home, said Barbara Ames, a neighbor with emergency medical training who rushed to the sisters' house after Wednesday's accident and tried to help.

"They were just the sweetest, loveliest, sharpest ladies you could ever meet," Mrs. Ames said.

Other neighbors who ran to the rescue jacked up the car, and ambulance attendants detected a faint heartbeat in Miss Peck, Mrs. Ames said. But she was pronounced dead on arrival at Faxton Hospital in Utica, 10 miles northeast of Deansboro.

"It's hard to believe this all happened," Mrs. Ames said. "We were all looking forward to (Miss Peck's) 100th birthday."

Oneida County Investigator Clifford Baker said, "Mrs. Adams was in an extreme emotional state." He said Miss Peck apparently stepped behind the car, and police were considering the killing accidental.

For four decades, the sisters shared a neat frame house within view of the home where they grew up in Deansboro, a farming community in central New York.

"They were really self-sufficient," Mrs. Ames said. "You'd drive by there and see that house so well kept up with the beautiful gardens. And Clara was always driving them somewhere."

"Miss Peck had some of the usual things you'd associate with being 99. Her hearing and her eyesight weren't too good," said Mrs. Ames. "But she was in very good shape, and very healthy."

Neighbors said Mrs. Adams, who had five children, began living with her unmarried sister after her husband died. Another relative, a nephew, lives across the street. Neighbors said the two women were nearly inseparable, frequently shopping and visiting friends together.

In 1978, police said, Mrs. Adams and Miss Peck were robbed of antiques, jewelry and about $70 in cash by three men who broke into the home while the two women were playing cards. The robbers shoved them into a corner and ripped out their telephone.

House fire kills girl

VIDOR, Texas (AP) — A state fire marshall is investigating the cause of a fire that killed 8-year-old girl who refused to follow 11 family members from their burning house, according to Volunteer Fire Marshall Dub Davis.

Davis declined to speculate on the cause of the fire, but a sheriff's deputy said he suspected a gas leak in the laundry room caused the fire.

Rachelle Packard was sleeping in an upstairs bedroom and refused to jump out of a window into her brother's arms, said 17-year-old Steve Packard. She then tried to run down the steps out of the house.

"I said, 'I said I can catch you,'" Packard said. "She said, 'I can't make it.' She made it down to the edge of the stairs before she must have passed out."

Her father, Bernard E. Packard, 42, returned to the house to rescue his daughter, but neighbors finally dragged him from the residence as the blaze intensified.

Packard was admitted to St. Elizabeth Hospital in nearby Beaumont, where he was reported in fair condition with facial burns.

The fire apparently began in the rear of the six-bedroom, two-story house and quickly engulfed more than half the residence, firefighters said.

Firefighters had to drain the family's swimming pool and send for a portable water tank to fight the fire, which was discovered by a paper carrier about 1:30 a.m.

Judge gets assignment

BEAUMONT, Texas (AP) — A Beaumont judge presiding over the trial of Vickie Daniel, accused of killing former Texas House Speaker Price Daniel Jr., says he will set up a pre-trial conference for attorneys in the case within two weeks.

Judge Leonard Giblin, of the 252nd District Court here, said Wednesday he had agreed to accept the trial assignment after being contacted by 2nd Administrative District Judge Max Rogers.

The case will be heard in Liberty County.

Pretrial hearings are scheduled for October in Liberty, but Liberty County District Attorney Carroll Wilborn said earlier this week that he hopes motions tied to the case can be "taken care of" before then.

Mrs. Daniel, 33, is accused of killing her husband with a single shot from a .22-caliber rifle Jan. 19 at the couple's ranch, a mile north of Liberty.

She won an emotional six-week battle April 23 for custody of her two young sons fathered by Daniel. Daniel's sister, Jean Daniel Murph, had filed suit to gain custody of 1-year-old Marion Price Daniel and 3-year-old Franklin Baldwin Daniel.

U.S. Secretary of State Alexander Haig Jr. reviews a Phillipine Army honor guard before paying homage to both American and Filipino World War II dead buried in adjoining cemeteries inside the military installation in the Manila suburb of Makati Thursday.

Haig calls for united stand

By R. GREGORY NOKES
Associated Press Writer

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr., speaking today at a memorial to America's World War II dead in the Pacific, said the monument was a reminder that Americans and other free peoples must stand together to confront "the forces of evil."

Haig laid a wreath at the base of the circular memorial to 36,279 servicemen killed or missing in action.

The sacrifices "of those heroes of 40 years ago must ... serve as a reminder that there are forces at work today who seek to force a stark change through bloodshed, through terrorism, through so-called wars of liberation," Haig said.

"Our presence here this morning reminds us that we too must sacrifice, sacrifice with vigilance and unity to ensure that we maintain collective strength to prevent the forces of evil, who would resort again to conflict, from having their way."

Haig also laid a wreath at a nearby cemetery for Filipino war dead.

The secretary had lunch with President Ferdinand E. Marcos at Malacanang Palace. The government radio station said Haig delivered President Reagan's congratulations on Marcos' re-election Tuesday and told him Vice President George Bush will represent the United States at his inauguration June 30.

Haig arrived in Manila Wednesday from China to meet with the foreign ministers of the five members of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations — Thailand, Indonesia, Malaysia, Singapore and the Philippines. The foreign ministers are holding their annual meeting and this year discussed ways of pressuring Vietnam to withdraw its 200,000 troops from Cambodia.

Habib meets Begin

JERUSALEM (AP) — U.S. envoy Philip C. Habib met today with Prime Minister Menachem Begin in search of a solution to the seven-week-old Lebanese missile crisis.

Although all signs suggested a deadlock, Israel Radio quoted what it called "qualified sources" in Israel and the United States as saying Israel was not expected to attack Syria's missiles in Lebanon militarily before the June 30 national election.

After his 2½-hour meeting with Begin, Habib's only comment was a statement which has become almost ritual during his mission: "The diplomatic process continues."

Habib met Begin amid efforts by the Israelis to soften the impact of a fiery speech the prime minister gave this week in which he vowed to tell Habib that if he could not get the missiles out, Israel would do the job.

Begin aides said this was not meant as an ultimatum and that no deadlines were being set for Habib's mission.

Israel claims the surface-to-air missiles that Syria wheeled into eastern Lebanon on April 29 and in the ensuing weeks are restricting the Israeli air force's freedom to intervene in the Lebanese civil war in defense of Israeli interests.

Syria says the missiles are defensive and will remain in place.

The chief of Israeli military intelligence, Maj. Gen. Yehoshua Saguy, has said he believes the Syrians are willing to fight a limited war with Israel rather than bow to pressure and remove the missiles.

Habib resumed his shuttle mission with trips to Damascus and Saudi Arabia last week before coming to Jerusalem.

Space shuttle conflicts developing

WASHINGTON (AP) — Joint military and civilian use of the manned space shuttle could create launch priority conflicts, and the two men likely to head the space agency say they have asked the White House for help in resolving them.

James M. Beggs and Hans Mark told a Senate committee Wednesday that they met last week with Richard V. Allen, President Reagan's national security adviser, "to set up the mechanics for dealing with this problem." They provided no details.

Reagan has nominated Beggs and Mark to be administrator and deputy administrator, respectively, of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration. They testified at their confirmation hearings before the Senate Commerce, Science and Transportation Committee.

Sen. Harrison Schmitt, R-N.M., a former astronaut who chaired the session, called them an "excellent team" and predicted the committee would send their nominations to the full Senate.

Beggs, 55, has been executive vice president of aerospace for General Dynamics in St. Louis since 1954. Mark, 52, a physicist, has been secretary of the Air Force since 1979. Both formerly served as NASA officials.

The Air Force plans to use NASA's space shuttle for several military missions, most of them secret, and Mark as secretary has been involved in that planning.

Schmitt noted that the civilian and military space programs, until now clearly separated, will be more integrated as both make use of the reflyable shuttles. He asked if this posed a problem.

"In the beginning when we have only a small number of shuttles, I foresee there will be some troubles with respect to the adjudication of disputes on flight priorities," Mark replied, indicating a military payload needed for national security might have to bump a scientific or a commercial payload.

Of the 67 operational shuttle flights booked into early 1987, the Air Force has contracted for 25 of them for Defense Department missions — such as deploying reconnaissance and other military satellites and for testing laser beams as killers of hostile satellites and missiles.

Governments of several nations have purchased space on shuttle flights, mainly for communications satellites, and a foreign policy issue might arise if one of those missions is delayed to make way for an Air Force payload.

Mark said he hoped that eventually the nation will have a fleet of 10 shuttles to reduce the possibility of priority conflicts. Money already is provided for four shuttles, and funds for an optional fifth vehicle is in the proposed fiscal 1982 budget.

The Air Force also is building its own shuttle launch facility at Vandenberg Air Force Base, Calif., and a shuttle control center at Peterson Air Force Base, Colo., but these won't be ready until 1984. Until then, the military payloads will be launched from NASA's facility at Cape Canaveral, Fla.

On those early military flights, NASA astronauts will be servicing and deploying the Air Force satellites from the spaceship's cargo bay, and the agency, known for its openness in releasing information, is somewhat concerned about how to handle the secrecy aspects of these missions.

Beggs said April's successful maiden flight of the first shuttle, the Columbia, had generated "a lot more interest among potential commercial users. It stimulated the marketplace. There was certainly a lot of discussion about the shuttle's potential at the recent Paris Air Show."

Both Beggs and Mark said the nation's next major goal in space should be a permanent manned orbiting station, using the shuttle to ferry up building materials, construction workers and the scientists, researchers, military men and others who inhabit it.

Soviets sentence activist

MOSCOW (AP) — A Soviet court today sentenced Jewish activist Viktor Brailovsky to more than three years of internal exile on charges of defaming the Soviet state, the defendant's wife said.

Irina Brailovsky said Judge Vladimir V. Bagdanov handed down a sentence of five years in exile.

Mercenary lured by advertisement, riches

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Court-appointed lawyers are to begin their defense today of three accused members of a band of would-be mercenaries who allegedly plotted to overthrow the island government of Dominica and set up a cocaine plant and other enterprises.

Their attorneys have argued that the defendants, all linked to the Ku Klux Klan, were lured into the scheme by a fast-talking ringleader who appealed to their sense of patriotism.

Prosecutors indicated their case was nearly finished with the testimony late Wednesday of Christopher B. Anderson, one of the seven men who pleaded guilty in plea bargain arrangements.

On trial in U.S. District Court are a national grand wizard of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, Stephen Donald Black, 27, of Birmingham, Ala.; long-active Klansman Joe Daniel Hawkins, 37, of Jackson, Miss.; and former Klansman Michael S. Norris, 21, of Tuscaloosa, Ala.

Anderson, 41, of Oklahoma City, said he was lured into the plot after an answering an classified advertisement in a newsletter, "L'Mercenaire."

The ad was placed by leader Michael Perdue, 32, of Houston, the government's main witness.

Transcripts of tapes entered into evidence Wednesday showed Perdue and Wolfgang Droege of Toronto planned to set up a cocaine processing laboratory to make the illicit drug for import to the United States.

Train offers jolting journey in elegance

ABOARD THE BANDEIRANTE, Brazil (AP) — Not far into the 695-mile train trip from Brazil's gleaming capital to the industrial center of Sao Paulo, a passenger may be pardoned for thinking the journey is the closest thing to riding on the back of a Brazilian armadillo.

The Bandeirante train — named for the bold Portuguese explorers who carried flags, or "bandeiras," as they settled the Brazilian interior 200 years ago — bounces along a single pair of rails at the less-than-breathless average speed of 30.8 mph.

The journey traverses flat plains, dotted with solitary trees and huge termite mounds inhabited by wild parrots, giant snakes and, indeed, armadillos. The train passes the ramshackle houses of subsistence farmers, where faces appear in rough-hewn windows along the way.

Further south, farm houses are surrounded by banana trees full of purple, unripened fruit. Cotton and coffee plantations along the way give a sense of what the American South of colonial days might have looked like.

There is an attempt at elegance on the Bandeirante train, refurbished since it last made this trip 10 years ago. There are comfortable recliner bed-seats in the first class car, and each passenger gets an individual pillow and blanket. The restaurant car serves inexpensive drinks, and the steak is reasonable.

But the reality of the trip sometimes seems like a Peter Sellers spoof.

The train has a sleeper car. But ticket sellers have warned that couples must produce their marriage certificates before paying the special passage of the equivalent of $30 dollars each. Other fares run between $15 and $20. The Federal Railway Authority later overruled the marriage requirement, but admonished that "libidinous acts" on its trains would be punished.

In the dining car, nicely dressed people are trying to sip their breakfast coffee just as the train lurches. A woman pours a drink down her decolletage. A waiter smiles sheepishly.

One traveler, a Harvard University graduate student, laughs at the mishap — until a fat man with a cane passing by loses his balance and tumbles into the student's lap.

Despite the glitches, the Bandeirante has become an instant hit. The platform of the modern train station in Brasilia is filled with passengers and curiosity-seekers. Entire families come to the station to look.

"Most of these people have never seen a passenger train before, except in the movies," said one young Brazilian ranch-owner as we gazed at children pressing their noses against the windows to get a look at the lucky passengers.

Motor vehicles have been the preferred mode of travel in this vast country, with a population of 120 million and a land mass larger than the contiguous 48 United States. A car can travel between Brasilia and Sao Paulo in about 12 hours. As the train plods along for 22½ hours, no fewer than 30 modern jetliners fly between the cities, in 85-minute flights.

The rancher said it was more convenient for him to take the train than either a bus or a plane from Brasilia to his home in Ribeirao Preto, 200 miles closer than Sao Paulo. "This trip takes two hours longer than the bus (which makes local stops), but I get a good night's sleep on the train," he said.

The Federal Transportation Ministry projects spending several billion dollars in the next decade to upgrade the nation's subpar rail lines.

Times Herald planning to open 10 foreign, national, state bureaus

DALLAS (AP) — Ten new foreign, national and state bureaus will be opened by The Dallas Times Herald, according to Editor Kenneth P. Johnson.

"In a continuing effort to provide our readers with the most comprehensive news coverage available in the Southwest, we are making a significant expansion in our coverage of international, national and state news, as well as cultural, political and business events," Johnson said in announcing the establishment of the new bureaus.

Jim Henderson, a Times Herald columnist, will become a national correspondent covering major stories throughout the United States and Robert Rivard will open a Central America bureau, Johnson said.

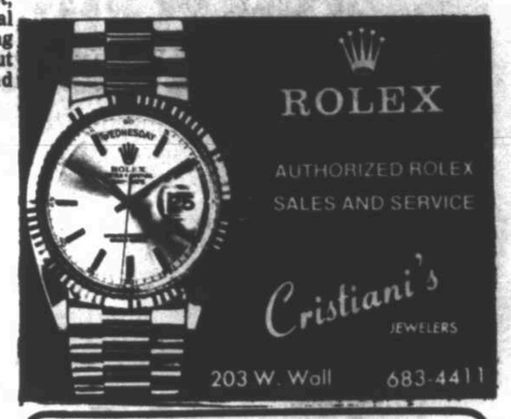

Johnson said the newspaper will also open bureaus in Toronto and New York City and said a political columnist will be appointed to the Times Herald's existing Washington bureau.

Sean Mitchell has been named as critic-at-large, covering leading cultural events across the country, Johnson said. Mitchell was honored this year as the recipient of the George Jean Nathan Award as the nation's outstanding drama critic.

Staff photographer Skeeter Hagler, winner of the 1980 Pulitzer Prize for photography, has been named chief photographer by Ray Adler, director of photograpy for the newspaper.

Seven new Texas bureaus will give the Times Herald 10 bureaus in the state, Johnson said, noting that no other newspaper in Texas has more than four major state bureaus.

The new Texas bureaus will be at El Paso, Harlingen, Lubbock, San Antonio, Tyler, Denton and Collin County.

U.S.-Soviet marriages can be a problem

By ROBERT GILLETTE
The Los Angeles Times

MOSCOW — The young American was in Moscow to marry his Soviet girlfriend, and he had come to the U.S. Embassy with a pressing question. How long, he asked, would he be legally responsible for the woman he was marrying?

It was an odd question for someone ostensibly in love and on the verge of a lifetime commitment. But to an experienced embassy officer, the symptoms were familiar. This would be only a marriage of convenience — arranged in the United States by the woman's friends or relatives to enable her to emigrate and quickly ended once she was legally in the United States.

Compared to the 60 to 70 genuine marriages every year between Americans and Soviets, the number of such marriages is small. But to diplomats — who strongly discourage them — they are a significant problem.

For one thing, they violate U.S. immigration law, which requires that an alien husband or wife be genuinely married to an American citizen to qualify for a U.S. entry visa. Equally important, diplomats say, such schemes only intensify official Soviet suspicion about real marriages between Russians and Americans and make it all the more likely that real Soviet spouses will be denied exit visas.

In some cases, the scheme begins when a Soviet emigre approaches an American student in the United States, offers anywhere from $2,000 to $5,000 in cash and pleads for help in winning freedom for a loved one. The money is meant to cover air fare to the Soviet Union and hotel bills while the student meets and begins dating.

Reagan will get to use Sequoia

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Sequoia, the presidential yacht sold in 1977 as an austerity gesture by Jimmy Carter, is returning to Washington for President Reagan's use.

Reagan had expressed an interest in obtaining a yacht since taking office, but he declined using federal money to buy one. Checks with the Navy and other agencies disclosed no available boats and the search had been discontinued.

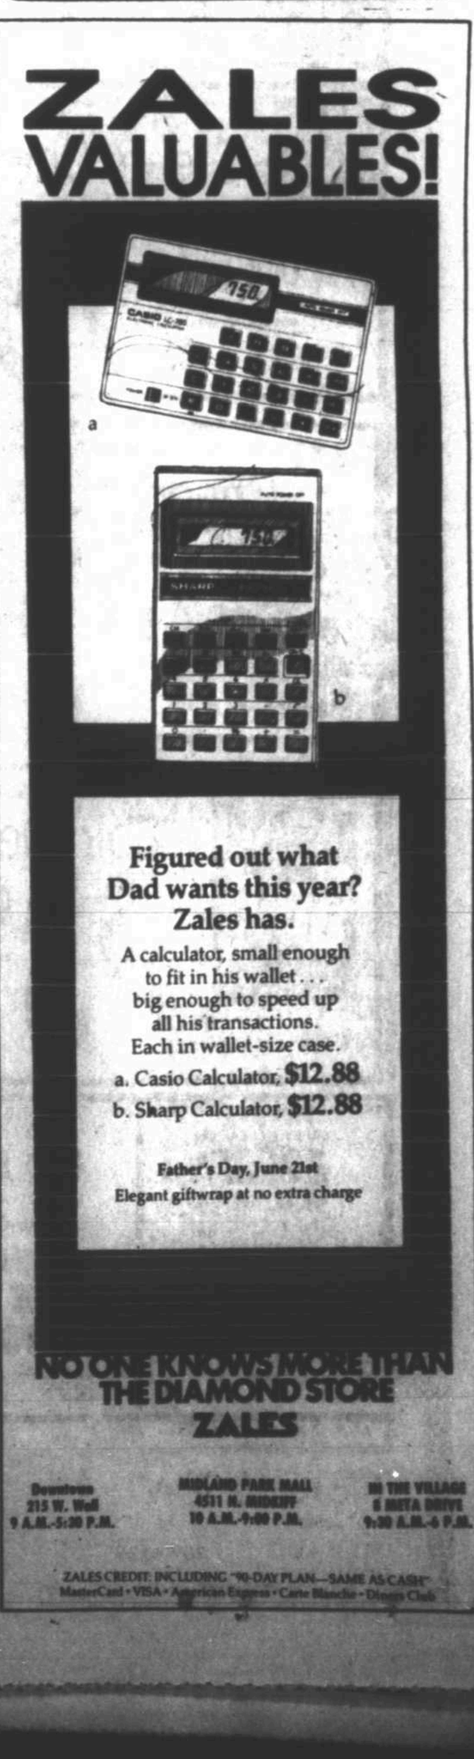

A group known as the Presidential Yacht Trust came to his rescue Tuesday, announcing it had purchased the 105-foot Sequoia and would make it available to the president and for special forums and other events.

Dr. Jon Staiger, director of the Ocean Learning Institute in Palm Beach, Fla., most recent owner of the vessel, confirmed the sale but declined to discuss the price. The institute, he said, retains an interest in the yacht.

The Sequoia began its trip north Monday and is expected to reach Washington on June 28, Staiger said. It will be kept on the Potomac in the summer and return to Florida in the winter for use by the institute, he said.

Thomas J. Tague, a spokesan for the trust, said money to buy and maintain the yacht was raised by private donations. The trust is chaired by Washington businessman Michael Dowd Gill, a nephew of former President Eisenhower.

Carter sold the yacht for $286,000. Since then it has changed hands several times and recently was appraised at between $800,000 and $1 million.

Doctors kill defective fetus, save normal twin

By DANIEL Q. HANEY
Associated Press Writer

BOSTON (AP) — Doctors punctured the heart of a defective 5-month-old fetus and left it to wither away in the womb beside its normal twin because the mother decided she "could not face the burden of caring for an abnormal child."

The procedure, done last year at New York's Mount Sinai School of Medicine, was the first successful operation of its kind in this country and only the second in the world, according to a report in today's New England Journal of Medicine.

It immediately was denounced by anti-abortion activists.

"I don't know of anybody in the Right to Life movement who would be complacent about this operation," said Vincent Euk, vice chairman of the New York State Right-to-Life Party.

The journal said Drs. Thomas D. Kerenyi and Usha Chitkara decided to try the procedure — already done successfully in Sweden — after a genetic test called amniocentesis revealed the 40-year-old woman was carrying one twin with Down's syndrome, which causes retardation and physical abnormalities. The two doctors held a news conference Wednesday in New York City.

The previously childless woman had been having trouble getting pregnant and "desperately wanted to have the normal child but could not face the burden of caring for an abnormal child the rest of her life," her doctors reported.

"If it (the operation) had been refused," the doctors said, "she would have chosen to abort both fetuses."

The doctors reported that the abnormal fetus was killed by withdrawing about half its blood through a hollow needle inserted in its heart, which then stopped beating.

About four months later, the woman delivered a normal baby boy, who now is 7 months old. The remains of the other fetus were delivered as paper-thin fragments of dead tissue.

A 1973 U.S. Supreme Court ruling gave women the right to obtain abortions during the second three months of pregnancy, although states may regulate how they can be performed. The doctors said that "out of an abundance of caution" they obtained an opinion from the New York Supreme Court acknowledging their right to perform the operation.

"We wanted to confirm from the court that the parents had the right to do this on behalf of the normal fetus," Kerenyi said in an interview.

It was the mother's opinion, the doctors said, that the presence of an abnormal twin would be an "unhealthy experience" for the normal one.

Kerenyi said he did not expect right-to-life activists to protest the operation, because "we saved the life, and that was the intent of the procedure. Otherwise, the mother would have aborted both fetuses."

But Richard Cowden, assistant media director for the New York Right to Life Committee, said, "We find the whole eugenical principle as very, very dangerous. ... We are critical of anyone who gets killed who is innocent."

There was no immediate comment from proponents of abortion rights.

"A quality of life decision was made by the mother, and that in itself was ethically non-defensible," Euk said.

"For all we know, the Down's syndrome child could have been trained to operate sophisticated, scientific equipment and make a contribution to society in that capacity," Euk said.

In the Swedish case, doctors killed one of two twin fetuses; the other was born prematurely but without harm.

The New York doctors told the parents about the risks involved: the chance of aborting both fetuses, prematurely delivering the surviving fetus, mistakenly killing the wrong fetus or harming the mother.

"After the parents decided to go ahead with the procedure, we were mainly concerned about performing it without inadvertently bringing harm to the normal fetus," the doctors wrote. "We realized that this was more important than the fate of the affected twin, and that the acceptance of this procedure in the future would hinge on the outcome for the normal unaffected twin."

The operation was performed when the fetuses were 20 weeks old.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Swimmer's ear easy to treat

Dear Dr. Solomon: I love water sports and during the summer months I spend most of my free time at the beach. Last summer, while on vacation, I developed an ear infection that caused me a great deal of pain. In fact, it forced me to go to a local clinic for treatment. I guess I haven't given you much of a clue, but do you have any idea what the condition was and how it can be avoided? — Mike

Dear Mike: Since you say you spend most of you free time at the beach, an educated guess would be that you may have had a condition called "swimmer's ear," an inflammation of the skin of the ear canal. As the name suggests, it very often occurs among people who spend a great deal of time in the water, and is most prevalent in hot, humid areas.

An ear that is chronically damp becomes a breeding ground for bacteria and fungi, and this can eventually lead to pain and crusting in the ear. The pain generally increases with chewing and other movements of the jaw.

From a treatment standpoint, it is essential to identify the cause of the swimmer's ear, whether a fungus, virus, or bacteria, so that the proper medication can be prescribed. According to Dr. Howard S. Farmer, clinical associate professor of surgery at the Rutgers Medical school, treatment is fairly simple once the cause is identified.

If the ear is abscessed, it must be drained before any medication that is used can be effective. It may also be necessary to use suction to remove matter which might prevent the medication from reaching the infected area. Of course it is not advisable for the patient to go into the water until the condition has completely cleared up.

The only preventive measure is to keep the ear from remaining wet all the time. If you want to swim, do so for three to four hours at a time, and be certain to dry your ears thoroughly. This ounce of prevention may enable you to enjoy your summer at the beach without subjecting yourself to a recurrence of the painful swimmer's ear.

Dear Dr. Solomon: An uncle of mine who lives with me and my family has been diagnosed as having active tuberculosis. Is there anything I should be doing to protect myself and my family? — Mr. T.V.B.

Dear Mr. B.: Anyone who has been in close contact with an individual who has active tuberculosis should be screened. You don't even have to have lived under the same roof; even sharing an office in close proximity to each other calls for precautionary measures.

Specifically, you should arrange for a tuberculin skin test. If the result is negative, the test should be repeated six weeks after there is no longer any exposure to the infected person. If the second test is positive, then X rays are in order.

I suggest you check with your doctor, who can make all necessary arrangments for you and the other members of your family.

New surgeon general choice facing obstacles

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's choice for surgeon general is facing new obstacles in Congress, but his supporters vow to skirt procedural roadblocks and steer his nomination through the Senate.

House conferees on Wednesday effectively delayed the formal nomination of Dr. C. Everett Koop as surgeon general by refusing to modify an amendment that requires a surgeon general to be no older than 64. Koop is nearing 65.

Koop has been criticized most frequently because of his outspoken position against abortion. His critics say the Reagan administration nominated him only to satisfy anti-abortion activists who have supported the president. They also contend that he is politically intolerant and therefore is not a good choice for the high-visibility job of surgeon general.

The American Public Health Association, breaking its past record of neutrality, said it opposed the nomination, arguing that Koop does not have public health service experience.

Koop's nomination has been caught in a partisan crossfire not only because of his ideological stands but also because of the way the administration chose to advance his nomination. The amendment removing the age obstacle was attached to an unrelated credit card bill by Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., a maneuver which angered many House Democrats.

But Helms' amendment would not have removed another stumbling block to Koop's nomination. There also is a legal requirement that Public Health Service Corps officers retire at 64 and the Helms amendment did not address that barrier.

When the conferees met, Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, asked the House members to lay aside the Helms amendment and adopt new language that would make Koop eligible to be surgeon general. He noted that opponents of Koop still would have a chance to stop his nominatioon during the Senate confirmation process.

But the House members declined and adopted the flawed Helms amendment instead. Their action freed the fairly uncontroversial credit card bill for final action but left Koop's nomination "in limbo," Hatch said.

"We'll go through this again," Hatch said.

"I suspect somebody in the Senate will add another amendment to a must-have bill," he predicted.

Koop already is serving in the Reagan administration as deputy assistant secretary for health.

Hatch said he didn't expect the administration to give up on Koop's nomination.

Regulation on baby formula sought

WASHINGTON (AP) — A coalition of minority rights groups is asking the Reagan administration, which rejected an international code on infant formula marketing, to strictly regulate the industry in America.

The organizations say millions of dollars and thousands of lives can be saved by promoting breast feeding for babies born to poor people in this country.

The Senate, meanwhile, was voting today on a bipartisan resolution that expressed "concern" about the administration's position on the infant formula issue. The House on Tuesday said it was "dismayed" that the administration opposed the code.

Public Advocates Inc., a San Francisco law firm representing the minority rights coalition, told a House Commerce subcommitee Wednesday that the Food and Drug Administration should force formula makers to state on package labels that "Breast is Best."

The labels should be written in Spanish as well as English, the coalition said.

A spokesman for the baby formula industry said the rights groups were trying to force their ideas on the nation's mothers, regardless of their preference.

The Infant Formula Council of Atlanta, representing the formula makers, also said the rights groups were using outdated and misleading figures in seeking to scare people about the use of infant formula. There has been a sharp decline in infant deaths in the last 10 years, including those born to poorer families, the council said.

Robert C. Gelardi, head of the council, said opponents of formula "appeared to be proposing a campaign of enforced universal breast feeding regardless of the mother's or the physician's choice."

The United States stood alone last month as 118 other nations in the World Health Organization adopted a voluntary code aimed at controlling the advertising and marketing of infant formula in developing Third World countries.

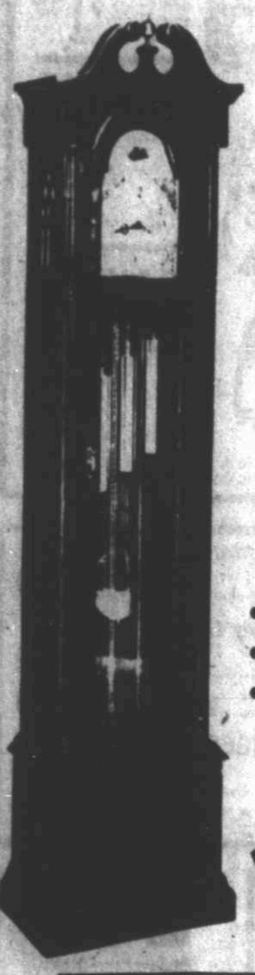

Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., who is sponsoring the Senate resolution with Sen. David Durenberger, R-Minn., said that "to cast the lone negative vote was detrimental to our national and international interests."

The resolution, introduced as an amendment to a measure authorizing $6 billion in spending by the State Department and related agencies, says Congress is "concerned" about the negative vote and "further concerned that the vote has subjected United States policy to widespread misinterpretation."

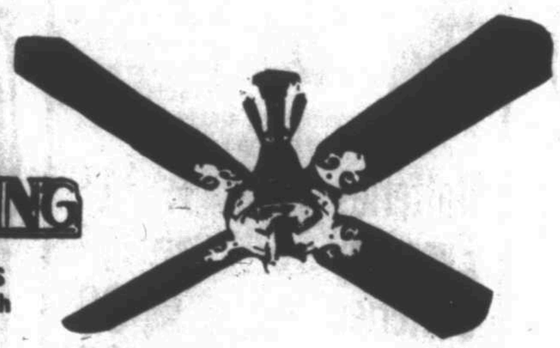

At the House Commerce subcommittee hearing Wednesday, Public Advocates also proposed that Medicaid payments be cut off to hospitals that permit formula makers to give away free samples to new mothers.

Negotiators resting on seventh day

By The Associated Press

And on the seventh day, the negotiators rested.

"I made the suggestion to both sides that they should leave here, rethink their positions, come back here Friday (at 3 p.m., EDT) prepared to go forward, address the issue and come to an agreement and conclusion," said Ken Moffett, who played shuttle diplomacy Wednesday, attempting to make peace between the striking players and the baseball owners.

No new proposals were offered during a two-hour session Wednesday, in which the two sides shot the breeze in separate rooms, never talking face-to-face. "If we did get together, an already deadlocked situation would get into a worse situation," Moffett said.

THE MEDIATOR, who has described these talks as "the most bizzare negotiations I've been involved in during 22 years as a mediator," was not optimistic that the one-day recess would inspire any changes at the bargaining table.

After all, there was a three-day recess before Tuesday's session, and when the parties got back together they discussed the progress made over the past 18 months — in just two hours. That's less than most games, and the games are played to a conclusion.

You remember baseball games, those nine-inning affairs unencumbered by the clock, which help a nation while away the lazy days and nights of summer.

If those games were being played today, they would have included Philadelphia and Houston in a rematch of last year's scintillating National League playoff and 10 other games, raising the casualty count to 87, one more than the total of missed games in the 13-day season-opening strike in 1972.

BUT INSTEAD of the Astrodome in Houston, Bob Boone of Philadelphia plans to play a round of golf and then take in a round of golf at the U.S. Open in Ardmore, Pa., near his home.

Boone, who has emerged as the main spokesman for the players' five-man negotiating team, said people missed the point when they expressed financial concern for only the players ny-the minimum salary level of $32,500. "The high-salary players have obligations and house payments to make, too," he said.

One player expressed what appeared to be a minority viewpoint, welcoming a season-long strike.

"I don't really care if it doesn't end at all," said pitcher Ron Davis of the New York Yankees. "If they want to take the whole year to settle this thing, let 'em.

"I've got enough money saved up to last me two years. I don't have any big expenses to worry about, so who cares?

"I WANT to just sit here and have fun watching my son grow up. I want to go fishing and have picnics. My friends are always coming to see me (pitch) on weekends. Now, I can go see them."

And in Baltimore, the report on Manager Earl Weaver's summer harvest was onions, radishes and lettuce — picked; zucchini, yellow squash and peas — ready, and green beans — "starting to form."

If there is to be a settlement and a baseball season by the time those beans are picked, then Moffett feels both sides have to give a little. The posture of the negotiators indicated the opposing viewpoints had hardened on the sole issue of the quality and form of compensation for free agents.

"We feel it's necessary for ownership to come forward with something," said Boone, who was joined at the negotiating table by Mark Belanger of Baltimore, Tom Seaver of Cincinnati, Steve Rogers of Montreal, Rusty Staub of the New York Mets and Don Fehr, counsel for the Major League Baseball Players Association.

"We've addressed their problem of equity (for lost free agents) in several different ways and in several different proposals, but they rejected every one."

The latest proposal for giving teams losing free agents a replacement player came a week ago. The players suggested each team would contribute four players from its 40-man roster into a pool, from which teams losing free agents can pick a replacement.

AMERICAN LEAGUE President Lee MacPhail, a member of the owners' negotiating unit, the Player Relations Committee, called that proposal "a step backward. The pro players they're offering are meaningless and we would get less than the amateur draft choice we currently get," he said.

There have been press reports that a minority of owners, particularly Ed Chiles of Texas and Edward Bennett Williams of Baltimore, was dissatisfied with the current tact of the Player Relations Committee, chaired by director Ray Grebey.

"We have 26 owners, and I've learned that nobody agrees on everything," Grebey said in an interview on ESPN Wednesday night. "We have some owners, a singular one or two, and in any multi-employer group you'll find a dissenting few. But we have more unity and more strength than we've ever had before."

THAT VIEW was supported by baseball's executive council ? composed of MacPhail, National League President Chub Feeney and eight owners — which issued a statement earlority of club owners consider outrageous and counterproductive to the resolution of the current collective bargaining issues, reports of owner dissatisfaction with the Player Relations Committee and totally disassociate themselves from any such view."

Ewing Kauffman, owner of the Kansas City Royals and a member of the executive council, said: "If the owners back down now, we're dead. Well, not dead, but we'd be in terrible shape when we have to negotiate our next contract with the players.

"The owners have a history in our negotiations with the players of never standing firm," he said in an interview with sports editor Joe McGuff in the Kansas City Star. "We've given and we've given and now we've come to the point where we can't give any more."

Lee Trevino may be sticking his tongue out at practice or, perhaps, he is licking his chops in anticipation of winning the U.S. Open which opened at Ardmore Thursday morning.

It's agreed: Open title up for grabs

ARDMORE, Pa. (AP) — Johnny Miller picks Bruce Lietzke. Lietzke picks Tom Watson. Watson picks Watson if he drives well. Jack Nicklaus? He chooses not to choose.

"I can't pick anybody, including myself," Nicklaus said.

It's not difficult to come up with a list of golfers whose game would seem to fit the snug, elegant Merion Golf Club, where 156 qualifiers tee off today in the 81st United States Open championship.

"ABOUT 20 people could win it," said Watson, naming Tom Kite, Lee Trevino, Raymond Floyd, Severiano Ballesteros, Tom Kite, John Mahaffey and Lanny Wadkins among them.

Lietzke, a three-time winner this year, is Miller's choice.

"He has the game to win the Open," Miller said. "He's been sort of overlooked, but he hits the greens in regulation, he's been playing well. I like his chances."

Miller isn't as high on Miller. His right shoulder has been hurting, the residue of a friendly arm-wrestling tussle 2½ years ago.

"If I do well it will be a surprise. I'm just going to go out and have some fun and smell the roses."

Lietzke says he's not putting well and dismisses his chances. Instead he picks Watson, "not because he's the best player, but because they've eliminated the driver in this tournament. That's Tom's biggest enemy."

Watson basically agrees.

"SHORT HITTERS have the advantage," said Watson, whose victories this year include the Masters, the Atlanta Classic and the New Orleans Open. "You have to play it like Hogan did, below the hole." Ben Hogan won here in 1950.

"My chances are good if I put the ball in the fairway," Watson said.

The driver is almost superfluous at Merion. It's needed on only three or four holes.

The Open is one of two majors that has eluded Watson, and a win over the 6,544-yard L-shaped course would satisfy his passion.

"I don't have a fixation or a phobia about winning the Open, but it's my No. 1 priority," Watson said.

And then there is Nicklaus, like Watson and Trevino always a force to consider.

HE'S PLAYED well recently. He finished second to Watson at the Masters. He's the defending champion. And, well, he's Nicklaus.

He's won four Opens. No one has ever won five. He likes Merion and over the years he's played it well.

As an amateur in 1960, he shot an incredible 269, beating par by 11 strokes.

To consider that feat, one needs only to know that par of 280 has never been broken in three previous Opens here.

Trevino said his ailing back is feeling better, that he played five straight days last week and that he's ready.

It was 1971 when Trevino and Nicklaus tied at the end of regulation, then played an 18-hole playoff which Trevino won.

NCIKLAUS AND Trevino were not the leaders the first three days — lesser knowns and unknowns were atop the leader board for a while.

But the two veterans, each now 41, found their way to the top by Sunday night.

If you were picking, you could do worse than picking them again.

Floyd and Kite have the more impressive credentials of the other major contenders. At 38, Floyd is enjoying the best season of his 19-year Tour career. He's won three times, including last week, and is second only to Watson on the money-winning list.

Kite, one of golf's more accurate strikers of the ball, has an amazing record of consistency. He's been seventh or better in his last seven starts.

Two former Open champs, Hale Irwin and Jerry Pate, often play their best on the tougher, more demanding courses, such as Merion.

Slow pitch big in Tall City

MSA has about 2,500 playing in leagues

By MIKE CRUVER
Sports Writer

It's a game that roughly 2,500 Midlanders play in organized leagues and untold numbers play just for fun. It generates several thousand dollars a year for the Midland sporting goods industry. It is usually played Monday through Sunday with the weekends set aside for tournament. There are spring, summer and fall leagues. Bowling? No, one of the fastest growing sports in Midland and throughout the country — slow pitch softball.

ACCORDING TO Cathy Sherman, public relations director of the Midland Softball Association and a member of the Coors' slow pitch team, there are 104 men's teams and 48 women's teamsthat play in the MSA program. Sherman said that the MSA has 13 leagues for men and six for women — eight teams are assigned to each league.

MSA leagues are American Softball Association sanctioned. The league games are played on the five fields at Hogan Park and the Washington field. Games start at 6:30 with five games being played on each field a night. Sherman added that there is a 55 minute time limit on each game. To keep the the action going, the MSA has adoped a run rule. According to Sherman the game is called if one team is ahead by 15 runs after four innings or 10 runs after five innings of play.

FOR THE benefit of the people attending church, the Church league does not play on Wednesday evenings.

Sherman said, "Softball is growing rapidly in Midland. The men's league is getting bigger every year but it is the women that have really grown. When I started playing five years ago there were maybe five teams. Now, there are 48 teams and I have ladies calling me just about every day waiting to get on a team."

OK, slow pitch is a growing game. You are interested in getting on a team. How do you go about it?

According to Sherman, the Parks and Recreation Department, 300 Baldwin, keeps a list of names interested in playing. When a manager needs a player he can call the department and pick up a player.

SHERMAN ADDED, "The best way for anyone to get on a team is just go out to a practice and ask the manager if he needs a player. It's funny, but most people would rather join an established team instead of starting up a team of their own."

Entering a team to play in the MSA leagues is not difficult. It costs $200 to $300, depending on whether the team will be playing 14 or 21 games, to enter a club with the association. Individually, in city players have to pay a $7 fee while out-of-town players must pay $9 each season.

MSA assumes no responsiblity for anyone getting hurt and there is no insurance available. Any injury and resulting medical costs is the responsiblity of the individual players according to Sherman.

THE LEAGUES are mostly designed for adults. In the ladies leagues, no one under the age of 18 came play. Men will allow 18 and unders to play but the youngster must have a signed minor release.

This year the MSA has added a new season to the program. In the past, the season were spring and summer but this year a fall season was voted in. The spring season runs April through June and the leagues play a 14 game schedule. In the summer season, July through August, a team plays a 14 or 21 game schedule plus as many tournaments as they want. The 14-game fall season will run September through November. Teams in the fall season can play in as many tournaments as they wish.

Sherman added, "The number of people playing has put a strain on the playing facilities. MSA is trying to raise the money for another field at Hogan Park."

THE JUNE Classic, a tournament that drew 60 men's teams and 23 women's teams, sponsored by Coors contributed all the profits to the MSA to help build the new field.

What happens if there is a dispute on the field. According to Sherman, a team can't protest an umpire's decision. Sherman added, "All umpires are ASA sanctioned."

If there is a question concerning the game other than an umpire's decision, the team can take it to the league representative and then the league commissioner to get a decision. If a team is dissatisfied with the decision, it can make an appeal to the MSA board. If an appeal is made to the board a team has to pay $10 to file.

THE MSA board: Bobby Watson, president; Aubrey Linne, past president; Dusty Dillard, secretary; Billy Rogers, treasurer; Cathy Sherman, public relations; Steve Daver, facilities director; Joe Amezcua, tournament director; and Rick Ferguson, umpires director; will hear the appeal. All decision made by the board are final.

The board has the added responsiblities of field maintance, the administrative tasks, scheduling of the leagues, providing umpires and any other problems that may arise in trying to provide a recreational program for 2,500 people.

Western gains finals as Mid City falls, 13-6

Western Red ripped the Mid City Pirates 13-6 Wednesday at the North Central League diamond to earn a berth in the finals of the National Little League city championship tournament.

Western will square off against North Central today at 6 p.m. at the same site to determine this year's city champion. The tournament is a single elimination affair.

Mid City, who had elminated the Tower champions Tuesday, fell from the tournament after running into Western's Chris Maddy. Maddy tossed a two-hitter while going the distance for Western.

Mid City scored five times in the sixth off Maddy, who had a no-hitter going into the frame. Phillip Alldridge ruined the no-hit bid with a single and Bo Brown added another single for the Pirates.

Western wasted no time in putting this one away as they scored three in the first, five in the second and four more in the third inning. DeJaun Norris led the charge with two singles and a double. Kerry Hinsley also added three singles. Maddy and Eric Davis also had doubles for the winners.

Khris Doan was tagged with the loss for Mid City. Clay Miller came on to pitch for the Pirates in the second.

Western drew the first round bye Tuesday and this was their first tournament outing. North Central gained the finals Tuesday by beating the Eastern champions. North Central drew the Wednesday bye.

Thompson hurls Cubs to win

EL PASO — Mike Thompson provided the pitching and Midland's hitters battered three El Paso pitchers for 13 hits as the Cubs topped the Diablos 8-2 Wednesday night in Texas League action here. The Cubs have now won two out of three in the six game series. The loss leaves El Paso tied for the top spot in the Western Division with San Antonio.

Thompson, who raised his record to 3-0, went 8⅔ innings before the Diablos could push across to runs to spoil his bid for a shutout. Tim Milner came in and ended the game with a strike out.

Midland wasted little time in getting on the scoreboard. In the first inning, the Cubs pushed two runs across against El Paso starter Mike Jones.

In the fourth, the Cubs added four more runs. Mel Hall and Javier Fierro hit back-to-back doubles to plate a run. Jack Upton followed with a RBI-single and Fritz Connally singled to put men at the corners. Carmelo Martinez then lashed a double to left field to score two more runs.

More Cub fireworks came in the eighth inning at the expense of Diablo reliever Gerry Ako. Ako, who served up a grand slam homer run to J. W. Mitchell in his first Texas League appearance, gave up doubles to Connally and Randy LaVigne as the Cubs added another run.

In the ninth, Craig Kornfeld singled and moved to third on an El Paso error. Fierro chased him home with the Cubs' fifth double of the contest.

El Paso's two runs came with two down in the bottom of the ninth. Ed Irvine and Wille Lozado had singled to put runners at first and second. Johnny Evans hit a fly ball to Martinez in right, but Martinez dropped the ball as two runs crossed the plate.

Milner then came in to make sure the Cubs' 24th win of the season didn't get away.

Rogers signs hefty pact

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Heisman Trophy winner George Rogers, the first player taken in the National Football League draft, signed a three-year contract today for the biggest sum ever given a rookie by the New Orleans Saints.

Team owner John Mecom Jr. would not say how much the former South Carolina running back will be making, but it was estimated at around $350,000 a season.

"It's a long term contract — three years — with an option," Mecom said.

By signing Rogers ended a bidding war with the Montreal Allouttes, which reportedly offered $250,000 a year for two seasons.

"I'm glad to be with the Saints," Rogers said.

"I'd just like to thank the people in Montreal for the hospitality they showed me."

"I'm sorry things didn't work out for them, but I really wanted to play in the NFL."

Dirt cars enter Pocono 500 race

LONG POND, Pa. (AP) — There could be a touch of nostalgia in this Sunday's Van Scoy Diamond Mines Pocono 500 championship auto race.

Joey Mattioli, general manager of Pocono International Raceway, announced Wednesday that four championship dirt cars have been entered for the $300,000 race for Indy-type cars.

THE DIRT cars, so-called because they are designed to race on dirt tracks, are front-engine roadsters, similar to the kind that raced at Indianapolis until the rear-end powered cars began to dominate in the 60s.

"They (the dirt cars) fit within all the U.S. Auto Club regulations for this race and are a welcome addition," Mattioli said. "They should give the fans quite an interesting perspective, running alongside the newer cars on a big track like Pocono where they can go so much faster."

ENTERED AS drivers for the cars are sprint car racers Smokey Snellbaker, Mark Alderson, Jackie Hewitt and Duke Cook, none of whom has ever driven in an Indy car race.

Mattioli said the four cars raise the number of entries for the race to "about 37."

Among those expected to be on hand for the 500-mile race are A.J. Foyt Jr., Tom Sneva and Indy Rookie of the Year Josele Garza of Mexico. Most of the other big names from Indy car racing have said they will pass up the event.

CHAMPIONSHIP Auto Racing Teams, USAC's chief sanctioning rival, has denied permission for any of its members to race at Pocono. The CART board of directors said the decision was made because the newer sanctioning body has a race scheduled June 28 at Atlanta International Raceway and feared that accidents and mechanical problems at Pocono could hurt the field for the later event.

HOWEVER, THERE is also the underlying fact that Pocono still has pending a $2.3 million lawsuit against CART and several of its individual members for allegedly boycotting the USAC-sanctioned Pocono race in 1979.

Spinks arrested by Detroit police

DETROIT (AP) — Leon Spinks, the former heavyweight champion, was arrested early today in Detroit after police said they stopped him for having expired license plates and found a gun in his 1980 Cadillac.

The former champ was arrested for carrying a concealed weapon in a motor vehicle and for a parking ticket that had not been paid, said Sgt. Arthur Williams of the Detroit Police Department's 12th Precinct.

Allen a coach with no team

By BUD POLIQUIN
Copley News Service

The questions follows George Allen around like a tail on a kite, flapping in the breeze but always there. Always. The kite soars, it dips, but there is no shaking the tail.

These days, George Allen is a coach without a team, a man in exile from the National Football League, a kite soaring and dipping over the 28 NFL franchises. And always there is the question. Always.

George, why are you not doing what you do best? George, why are you not coaching some football team somewhere?

"I WISH I had the answer to that," he said in an interview. "I don't know. Maybe the way I was dismissed from my last job, after only two pre-season games, did it. That made it look like I committed a murder or something."

Certainly, it wasn't any such crime that forced Los Angeles -- which had hired him only months earlier -- to fire Allen in 1978 before he even brought the Rams into September. Allen had been canned in pre-season before he even had the chance to lose a single game that mattered.

No, it isn't murder that has kept Allen off NFL sidelines for three years. It is his pushing, pushing, pushing mentality, his all-consuming and threatening workaholism, his madcap spending to ensure quality, his "the-future-is-now-and-to-hell-with-tomorrow" philosophy, his attitude that there only two ways to run a football team: George's way and the wrong way.

AND, BUNKY, if you don't like it, there's the door and don't let it bit you on the way out. And that goes from the ball boys right up to the owners. The bottom line? What you see of George Allen is what you get. And what you see is football's answer to Billy Martin.

"I had a chance recently to get back in," Allen said, "but with the particular club I talked to, the coach didn't have the final say on trades, he didn't have the final say on the draft and he had to accept the assistant coaches already on the job. I don't have to coach like that, you follow me?

"I didn't do anything differently in Los Angeles. All I did there was what I had done all along and everywhere else I had been, the team did not lose. I know what I have achieved. You can't erase the records and the accomplishments. On some teams, the coach is strictly a puppet. If a coach can't coach his way, he's not a coach. I'm not interested in that."

AND RIGHT now, the feeling is mutual. The NFL is not interested in George Allen. Oh, he says he's gotten feelers from football expansionist people in Memphis and Knoxville as well as "a group in the Midwest that I'm not at liberty to identify." And there have been reported conversations with the Green Bay Packers, the Montreal Alouettes and two would-be football leagues, the International and the United States.

But the facts remain that George Allen is on the outside looking in and that there is a growing feeling within the NFL that if you hire him, you're firing yourself.

And this, despite his records and accomplishments, including a 120-54-5 professional record during his 12 years as a head man and his overnight overhauls of the Rams in 1966 and of the Redskins in 1971.

"I'VE ALWAYS had rebuilding jobs," admitted Allen. "When I went to Los Angeles, they hadn't won in eight years and before I went to Washington, they had had one winning season in the previous 15 years and that was 7-5-2 with Lombardi."

Indeed, at each stop, with utilization of 16-hour workdays, he turned the franchise around. The year before Allen arrived in Los Angeles, the Rams went 4-10-0, his first season there, they were 8-6-0, his next 11-1-2. And the year before Allen arrived in Washington, the 'Skins went 6-8-0, his first season there, they were 9-4-1, his next 11-3-0.

The point? Question George Allen's methods, if you will, but when you're finished, look at the results.

"I HEAR all the time about these coaches saying they have five-year rebuilding programs and I say that's a crutch," Allen said. "There are teams in that league that have been rebuilding for 18 years."

Yet Allen, the greatest rebuilder of them all, a man who has taken seven of his 12 teams into post-season play, the man with a higher career-winning percentage than people named Tom Landry, Bud Grant, George Halas and Paul Brown, sits and waits for the phone.

Raider trial crawls ahead slowly

LOS ANGELES — The Oakland Raiders and Los Angeles Coliseum Commission were expected to call one final witness today in the antitrust suit against the National Football League, with the league then taking some two months to present its witnesses.

Raiders managing general partner Al Davis was scheduled to undergo redirect questioning by Joseph L. Alioto, who is representing the team in its bid to move to Los Angeles. The Raiders were then expected to call one final witness before resting their case.

A REMARK contained in a profile of Davis in the magazine "Inside Sports" provided a source of controversy during Wednesday's testimony.

Alioto protested a move by a defense lawyer to show jurors a statement implying that Davis admired Adolf Hitler.

The comment, contained in an "Inside Sports" profile of Davis, was shown to the jury briefly without an explantion of its context in the story. Davis admitted on the stand he had said, as reported: "I didn't hate Hitler. He captivated me. I knew he had to be stopped."

BUT ALIOTO said outside the court the quote referred to Davis' views as a 10-year-old boy watching the outbreak of World War II. Jurors were not informed of this.

Alioto accused attorney Joseph Cotchett, who is representing the co-defendant Rams in the case, of sneaking the comment before the jury and said, "If he did sneak it in, he should have put it in to context."

Alioto did not protest Cotchett's move in open court, instead making his complaints in the chambers of U.S. District Judge Harry Pregerson.

Cotchett apparently was trying to show that money and power were Davis' two chief motives for wanting to shift the Raiders from Oakland to the Los Angeles Coliseum.

DAVIS SAID under questioning, "I would rank power in a classification second to winning," adding that he needed to accept the most lucrative deal for his team because "I'm afraid that wealth will buy great players (in the future)."

Ex Ranger star inks with Indians

WICHITA FALLS — Jenni Anderson, a former Greenwood basketball star, will join the Midwestern State University Lady Indians this fall, according to MSU coach Gail Abrams.

Anderson graduated from Greenwood in 1979 and comes to MSU after two years at Western Texas College where she recently graduated. While at WTC, Jenni scored at an 8-point clip with six rebounds per outing. She played in 32 games last season. She is 5-10.

The race for the first half title in the Western Division tightened up as the San Antonio Dodgers moved to within three percentage points of the front running El Paso Diablos.

IN OTHER Texas League action, Shreveport beat Tulsa, 10-6, and Amarillo and San Antonio split a doubleheader. Amarillo won the opener, 9-5 and San Antonio took the nightcap, 7-4.

The 2-0 victory sparked by Poe's two RBI singles was the third straight shutout for Jackson over Arkansas and at the end of the game, the Mets had held their opponents at Smith Wills Stadium in Jackson scoreless for 40 consecutive innings.

Terry Leach, 3-1, picked up the pitching victory. Kevin Hagen, 3-5, was the loser.

Jim Rothford had a three-run homer in the first inning to help power the Shreveport Captains to a 10-6 victory over the Tulsa Drillers.

ROTHFORD HAD four hits in five trips to the plate, including the homer and a double. Catcher John Rabb also had a three-run homer for the Captains.

Pete O'Brien had a three-run homer for Tulsa and Tracy Cowger had a solo homer for the Drillers.

The winning pitcher was Ron Pisel, 2-1. The loser was Greg Hughes, 4-3.

Joe Lansford had a three-run home run as the Amarillo Gold Sox beat the San Antonio Dodgers, 9-5, in the first game of a doubleheader.

The Dodgers, playing with Los Angeles Dodgers manager Tommy Lasorda looking on, got a two-run homer from Mark Bradley and a bases-clearing double by Dale Holman.

ROSS JONES drove in two runs with a double to power the Dodgers to a 7-4 victory in the second game of the doubleheader.

Circular off-base on sport fishing

I came across a small circular the other day that was aimed at third and fourth grade students all across America. The circular, which is totally off-base within the concepts of sport fishing is printed and circulated by Kindness in Nature's Defense (KIND).

THIS ORGANIZATION is just another one of many so-called wildlife defender type groups that are spreading false statements to school-age children, regarding wildlife management. This organization evidently doesn't have the slightest idea of what wildlife conservation is really all about. Evidentally, they have never been sitting on a quiet river bank fishing for bream or catfish, watching young racoons play on the shoreline and witnessing a magnificient blue heron as he stalks the water's edge for dinner. To most anglers, when this occurs or they witness something like this, they could care less whether they catch a fish or not. If they do catch a fish, it's just an added bonus to their wonder day spent out-of-doors.

I just want you as sportmen to read some of the propaganda KIND is printing in their cirulars which are being distributed to our nation's schools.

"A FISH is a little animal like you except that to him water is like air to us."

Once two Chinese men were watching some fish. "Look how happily the fish are jumping in the water," said Chuang Tse. "That is the fish's joy."

"I know the fish's joy from my joy when I watch them from the bridge," said Chuang Tse.

When we see someone riding a new bicycle, we know just how he feels. When we see a person stub his toe or cut his finger, we know how that feels too. If we put ourselves in the place of any living creature, and use our imagination, we know how he feels, even if he doesn't look just like us!

Of course a fish has feeling too. Modern scientists stress this fact. A fish likes to live. He likes to jump and play as we do when we feel happy.

When a fish is caught on a cruel hook, he tries desperately to get away. He is fighting for his life. It is sporting for a big human being to laugh and call that fun?

WHEN THEY'VE begun to think, many grown-ups who used to fish, have given it up, and now instead of killing, they find fun in studying fish just as Chuange Tse did.

In clear waer much can be learned by watching fish from above. Those who swim in their homes, disturbing them as little as possible of course.

If you know people who just won't give up fishing even when you tell them it's not right to kill anything "just for fun," ask them to put the fish back in he water, or at the very least, to kill it at once.

To kill a fish, strike it on the head with a stick or a beach rock to put it out of its misery as quickly as possible. Or, put your thumb in its month and bend its head backwards, thus breaking its neck.

IT'S HARD, isn't it? To call such killing kind — but it's better than allowing the poor creature to flop up and down until it finally gasps out its life.

When we find ways of having fun that do not cause pain and death to any other living beings, we'll all be happier.

In the meantime — How would you like to be a fish?

Sportsmen, there you are. That's what's printed on these KIND circulars.

However, they left our quite a few points that should be mentioned. Let's go over some of them.

This know-it-all organization was correct in the statement, "A fish is a litti animal like you except to him water is like air to us."

They are incorrect when they think if we place ourselves and use our imagination, we know how a fish feels, even if he doesn't look just like us. My comment: Yes, I remember one time when I felt like a fish. It was just horrible. I lived in the ocean and searched for food for 12 days straight. However, on the twelfth day, I remember finding a school of sardines. I chased the sardines, hoping to catch one so that I might eat. But, just before I gaped-open my mouth to swallow a sardine, I got tangled up in a Japanese fishing net. I nearly died, while in the net for four days. As they were pulling in the net I escaped.

SINCE FISH have feelings too, just like humans, stress scientists, I remember another time when this fish told me about being hooked on a "cruel hook." It was dreadful. He told me he leaped out of the water several times. His last leap nearly ended in tragedy. As he was soaring several feet in the air, a sea gull came down and grasped the fish. Luckily, he dropped me before he swallowed. "I'm still scarred from that incident," said my fish friend. "The angler, however, let me go when he reeled me to the boat," said the little fish.

When KIND printed in their circular, "grownups who used to fish, have given it up because they thought about it," is entirely false. Now-a-days, there are more grownups and children fishing in the United States then ever.

THEIR DEFINITION on how to kill a fish is disgusting. I think the best way to kill a fish is to set out hundreds of miles of long-lines, poison the water with toxic chemicals and drain lakes because they are polluted. Now, KIND can't beat my method of killing fish.

And I really like the method of killing a fish where you are suppose to put your thumb in the fish's mouth and pull back on his head in order to break the fish's neck. That would be an excellent way to kill a fish if he had a neck!

The next time I go fishing, I'm just going to take a stick of dynamite and a can of poison. This way, I'll catch more fish to eat and won't have to use the "cruel hook" method.

I would suggest writing to KIND and tell them of your plans. Let's kill all the fish we can with poison, illegal nets and dynamite. Then, KIND won't have to spend their hard-earned money to print their circulars.

You as cruel sportsmen, what do you think?

Spotlight on sprinters at track meet

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — The world record for the 100-meter dash, which has stood for 13 years, appears in jeopardy this weekend when a flock of brilliant sprinters, led by Carl Lewis, compete in the USA-Mobil outdoor track and field Championships.

Lewis, the world leader in the 100 this year with a sizzling clocking of 10.00 seconds, the third fastest in history and the best ever at sea level, will be pushed hard by some extremely strong opposition.

INCLUDED AMONG his rivals will be Mel Lattany (10.04), James Sanford (10.05), defending champion Stanley Floyd (10.10), Willie Gault (10.10), Jeff Phillips (10.14), Cuba's Silvio Leonard (10.15) and Olympic veterans Harvey Glance and Steve Riddick.

"You're going to see guys run 10.10 who might not get out of the heats" said meet director Al Baeta.

In the recent NCAA Championships at Baton Rouge, La., a time of 10.10 certainly would not have been good enough to finish in the top three in the final. Lewis, the sensational 19-year-old University of Houston sophomore, won with a wind-aided 9.99, followed by Phillips, from Tennessee, in 10.00 and Lattany from Georgia, in 10.06.

The world record is 9.95 by Jim Hines at the 1968 Olympic Games in Mexico City's 7,200-foot altittude.

The biggest surprise in the NCAA meet was the second-place finish of the unheralded Phillips. Although he has been running exceptionally well all season, he has not recieved the publicity of some of his fellow sprinters.

THE NCAA race gave him confidence and taught him a lesson.

"I know that I can run with the best of them," he said then, "but this is the second time in two weeks Carl has beat me on the lean. I guess I'll have to practice my lean more.

"I was ahead at about 55 meters, and then I saw Carl come up beside me and I knew that I'd really have to ru meet), I don't think he'll do it to me again. I'm going to run harder and lean more."

Sanford and Floyd, also members of the collegiate fraternity, missed the NCAA meet. Floyd is being red-shirted this season because his team, the University of Southern California, is on NCAA probation. Floyd is ineligible because he transferred from Auburn to Houston and under NCAA rules he must sit out one year of collegiate eligibility.

THAT, HOWEVER, has not prevented Sanford and Floyd from competing in invitational meets, and both have done that with sparkling success.

"He's the top Trojan sprinter of all time" Southern Cal Coach Vern Wolfe said of Sanford. "He can run with anyone in the world and should be a threat tc both the 100 and 200 world records."

Floyd, the world's No.1 ranked sprinter last year after beating Olympic champion Allan Wells of Scotland twice in three meetings in Europe after the Summer Games in Moscow, has been hampered by a strained hamstring this season. But he appears primed for the National Championships which begin Friday and run through Sunday.

"He should be ready," said Clyde Duncan, Houston's sprint coach.

However, no sprinter appears in better shape and has as much at stake as Lewis.

FOR THE third time this year, he will be going for a sprint-long jump double. He became the first athlete to do it in the NCAA Indoor Championships in March at Detroit, then he matched the feat last accomplished by the legendary Jesse Owens 45 years ago by doing it again at the NCAA Outdoor Championships.

In the National Championships — formerly known as the AAU meet and The Athletics Congress Championships — the precocious Lewis again will be attempting to duplicate a double last performed by Owens in 1936.

In the long jump, Lewis set a world indoor best of 27 feet, 10¼ inches earlier this year, and he has the best legal jump outdoors in the United States, 27-9½. He also has jumped 28-3¾, a performance that would have been the second best in history but was negated because it was wind-aided.

"I DON'T go to a meet to break records" said Lewis. "I go to win. I want to be consistent in what I do. I want to be No.1 in America and the world."

So far this year he has been No.1 in the world in both events, but he will be seriously challenged in the National. In addition to the wealth of talent on hand in the sprint, the long jump field includes Larry Myricks, the defending champion whose 27-11½ in the 1979 World Cup at Montreal is the best legal jump by an American at sea level, and 1976 Olympic Champion Arnie Robinson, a six-time national titleholder.

While Lewis' bid for another double is expected to hog the spotlight, woman shot-putter Maren Seidler will be shooting for a distinction of her own. She shares the record of most victories (11) in one event at the National Championships.

Days of two-sport pro are gone for ever

BOSTON (AP) — Gene Conley, perhaps the best known two-sport professional athlete in the country, says the days of the two-sport player are gone for good.

"I don't think anyone can do it today," Conley said when asked if he thought Toronto Blue Jay infielder Danny Ainge could play both baseball and professional basketball. Ainge was recently drafted by the Boston Celtics of the National Basketball Association.

Conley, who played 10 years of professional baseball between 1952 and 1963 and managed to put in seven years as a Boston Celtic at the same time, said he played both sports because he needed the money.

"I felt lucky to be picking up two checks, and with three kids, I needed the income," Conley told the Boston Herald American.

"With today's money," he said, "it would almost not be fair for an athlete to attempt two sports."

British actress and singer Twiggy takes a seat with her daughter Carly, two, after arriving Tuesday at London's Heathrow Airport from Los Angeles. List of nuclear arms accidents is growing

By RON ROACH
Copley News Service

Five accidents involving U.S. nuclear weapons -- including the first three ever confirmed by the Navy -- are on a new Department of Defense summary that brings the number of so-called "broken arrows" to 32 since 1950.

The most recent incident bearing that code name remains the Titan II missile explosion in Arkansas last September, which had been added to 26 Air Force nuclear-weapons accidents on a list released in 1977 on reporters' Freedom of Information Act requests.

The Navy accidents occurred between 1959 and 1968 and only brief or no details are given because of continued security precautions, Air Force Lt. Col. Mark Foutch, who prepared the summary at the Pentagon, said in a telephone interview.

The report stressed that "there never has ever been even a partial inadvertent U.S. nuclear detonation despite the very severe stresses imposed upon the weapons involved in these accidents."

When there were detonations, it was the high explosive in the weapons, which can shatter radioactive components. A sophisticated triggering device has prevented a weapon from accidentally yielding a nuclear blast.

These are the five accidents added to the list:

-- "Spring 1968 -- At Sea, Atlantic. Details remain classified." Foutch would only confirm that the accident involved the Navy and indicated that it had received publicity at the time.

It was in 1968 that the nuclear-powered attack submarine Scorpion, presumably carrying torpedoes with nuclear warheads, was lost in the mid-Atlantic. A court of inquiry failed to determine cause of the disaster.

-- Sept. 25, 1959, a Navy P-5M seaplane "ditched in Puget Sound off Whidbey Island, Wash. It was carrying an unarmed nuclear anti-submarine weapon containing no nuclear material. The weapon was not recovered."

-- Dec. 5, 1965, at sea in the Pacific, an A-4 attack bomber "loaded with one nuclear weapon rolled off the elevator of a U.S. aircraft carrier and fell into the sea. The pilot, aircraft and weapon were lost. The incident occurred more than 500 miles from land."

-- Nov. 10, 1950, outside the United States, "because of an in-flight aircraft emergency, a weapon containing no capsule of nuclear material was jettisoned over water from an altitude of 10,500 feet. A high-explosive detonation was observed."

For diplomatic reasons, the report said, the specific site of an accident outside the United States is classified, except for widely known B-52 crashes in Spain and Greenland during the 1960s, which the report says are the only two of the entire list that involved widespread radioactive contamination.

-- Nov. 13, 1963, at an Atomic Energy Commission Storage Igloo, Medina Base, Texas. "An explosion involving 123,000 pounds of high-explosive components of nuclear weapons caused minor injuries to three Atomic Energy Commission employees.

Gunman kills three, is shot by police following siege

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — A 37-year-old man who seized seven hostages in a bank and said he "wanted to be executed" was shot dead by police after killing three people, including his mother, officials said. Seven were wounded.

Police said the three-hour siege of terror ended Wednesday when William Bernard Griffin stepped into the view of a police sharpshooter after fatally wounding one of the hostages in the doorway of the Security Trust Co.

The shooting began shortly before noon when Griffin, following an apparent family dispute, took a shotgun to his mother's house in a normally quiet neighborhood on the city's west side. He killed her and a wallpaperhanger working at the house and seriously wounded his stepfather, police said.

Griffin left the house and headed toward the bank two blocks away, "walking fast with a rifle over his shoulder," said Scott Daitz, 27, of Greece, N.Y., who was delivering potato chips to a bar across the street from the bank.

"It looked like something wasn't right — you could just sense it — like he had something to do," Daitz said.

The gunman entered the bank, and then "a whole bunch of people came running out of the bank in all directions — just scattering," Daitz said.

Daitz's partner, Billy Winkler, ran across the street "to help get them out of there," Daitz said, but then a motorcycle policeman arrived, and "a shower of shots began."

Police said Griffin fired about 80 shots while holding seven people hostage. Four civilians and two police officers outside the bank were injured.

Norm Palermo, who was working in a building two doors away, said "everybody thought it was a bank robbery until the bullets started flying. Cars were just abandoned. People were stopping and running." Four nearby schools kept students inside.

Attempts to negotiate with the man failed, and a special-weapons team was called. Police Chief Delmar Leach said the gunman had the bank manager read a message over the telephone to law officers.

"The message said he wanted to be executed," Leach said. "He would give police a half-hour before he would start shooting the hostages."

Daitz said he stayed behind his truck for about an hour, then "felt wind go by my pants like an airgun. I looked down and there was a hole in my pants. After that, I ran."

After the hostages had been inside the bank about two hours, two employees escaped out a door, followed by a third — Margaret O. Moore, 30, of Rochester — who was shot and fatally wounded by the gunman, police said.

Authorities said that at that point the gunman came into their line of fire, and they shot him.

At St. Mary's Hospital, Officer Ronald Baker, 32, was listed in satisfactory condition after surgery for a chest wound. Curtis Dandridge, 67, was listed in critical condition.

Angela Harvey, 18, of Rochester was in satisfactory condition with a gunshot wound in the face. Robert Hudson, 39, of Spencerport, another police officer, was discharged after being treated for a gunshot wound on the hand.

At Strong Memorial, 56-year-old James Corcoran was in satisfactory condition with a shoulder wound. Amos Anderson, 53, the gunman's stepfather, was in guarded condition with an abdominal wound. Both are from Rochester.

Officials at Highland Hospital said John Beers, 20, of Rochester, was treated for a gunshot wound and released.

Search fails to produce plane

WAGONER, Okla. (AP) — A search of Arkansas River Navigation Channel backwater has failed to produce a plane that two women thought they might have seen earlier this month.

Oklahoma Highway Patrol lake rangers spent several hours Wednesday searching after receiving the report, which had triggered speculation the sighting might have been a plane missing since June 6.

That was about the date the women said they saw a plane's tail section sticking out of water along U.S. 69 south of Wagoner.

An Iowa family of the missing plane's pilot left Wednesday for Oklahoma and Arkansas in hopes of finding the two men.

Joyce Strand of Decorah, Iowa, her five children and the parents of her missing husband, Paul, were going to Mena, Ark., to begin posting reward signs, asking hikers to search for him. They planned to put up 2,500 posters in campgrounds and rural grocery stores announcing a $10,000 reward for help in finding the single-engine airplane and its two occupants.

Strand and a passenger, Raymond Haugen, both 50 and from Decorah, were returning by plane June 6 from a business trip to Brownsville, Texas.

The Civil Air Patrol has searched a 79,000-square-mile area in parts of Missouri, Iowa, Oklahoma, Arkanas and Texas for the plane. They halted the search, saying all leads have been exhausted. CAP spokesman Charles Oliver said, however, the mission would be reactivated if any reasonable leads are found.

Administration rebuked for doubting Israel

By JIM ADAMS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration is drawing a sharp rebuke from Israel's friends in Congress for questioning the Jewish state's assertion that its bombing of an Iraqi nuclear reactor was an act of self-defense.

Undersecretary of State Walter J. Stoessel testified at a House hearing Wednesday that the administration does not agree with Israel's declaration that Iraq had decided to develop nuclear weapons.

Several of Israel's House backers attacked Stoessel's assessment and Senate Democratic Whip Alan Cranston said he intended to refute it today at a Senate Foreign Relations Committee hearing.

Cranston refused to give details, but aides said he has evidence that international safeguards now in force would have been useless to keep Iraq from developing nuclear weapons.

Cranston said it is true that Iraq was not already developing nuclear weapons but said "there are compelling reasons to believe" it intended to do so if Israel had not destroyed its reactor.

"We can sit here and suggest they may not have exercized that option," Cranston said, "but Israel could not take that chance."

The argument stretches beyond semantics. U.S. law requires cutting off aid to Israel if its use of American-supplied planes to bomb the reactor June 7 was aggression and not an act of self-defense, as Israel says.

Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin said Sunday that he has "absolutely sure information from the best and most reliable sources" that Iraq intended to develop nuclear weapons and use them against Israel.

Although the Reagan administration has not decided whether Israel violated the U.S. aid law, Stoessel told two House subcommittees Wednesday that it does not agree with Begin's statement.

"We have not made any definitive conclusion that they (the Iraqis) were aiming at a weapons program," Stoessel testified.

"So you don't agree with Israel that Iraq was making a nuclear bomb?" Rep. Lee Hamilton, D-Ind., asked.

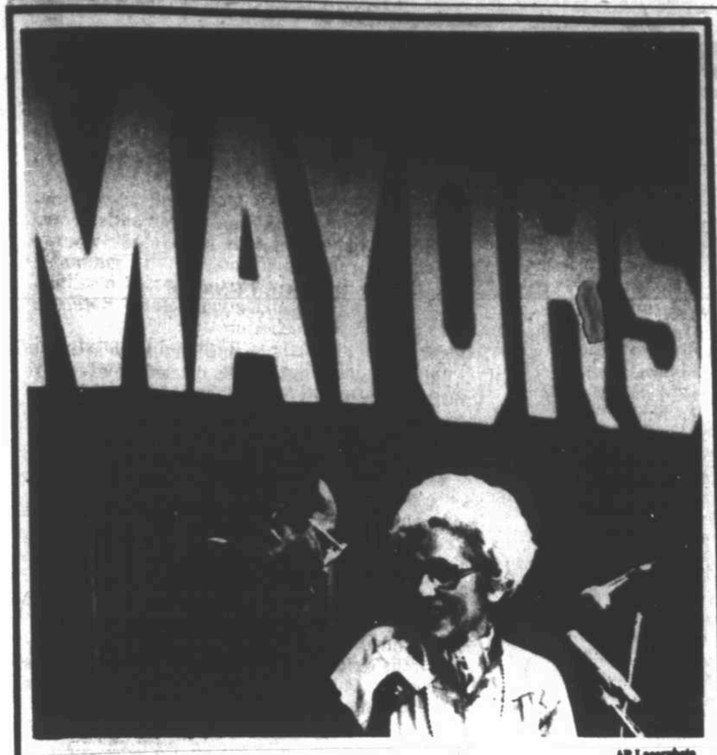

"No, we would not agree with that position by Israel," Stoessel said. "We were not able to make a definitive judgment ourselves which would confirm Israel's position."

"Do you agree that Iraq ultimately sought nuclear weapons?" Hamilton asked.

"No, we have no definitive confirmation of that," Stoessel said.

But he said "we were concerned about the Iraqi nuclear program ... because it would eventually give Iraq the capability to build an atomic weapon."

Rep. Stephen J. Solarz, D-N.Y., told Stoessel he was "amazed and appalled" by the administration's assessment.

Mayor Helen Boosalis of Lincoln, Neb., is congratulated by Mayor Richard Hatcher of Gary, Ind., as she was elected the new president of the U.S. Conference of Mayors Wednesday in Louisville.

Mayors conclude annual convention

By DON McLEOD
Associated Press Writer

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — The nation's mayors have ended their annual convention "in tune with the 1980s" but demanding that cities be given a fair shake by the Reagan administration.

For the first time in 50 years, the U.S. Conference of Mayors didn't ask for new federal money. But they made it clear they didn't want their cities to suffer steep cuts in federal funding either.

"I think we've seen some softening of earlier positions we've taken," said Mayor Helen Boosalis of Lincoln, Neb., a Democrat who took over as conference president Wednesday, the last day of the five-day meeting. "And I think we're in tune with the 1980s."

The conference, which began acrimoniously Saturday, adopted resolutions criticizing some Reagan programs, asking safeguards over others and demanding a better break in the federal budget.

Outgoing chairman Richard Hatcher of Gary, Ind., said the conference "expressed some great concerns regarding some of the (Reagan) policies that are currently under consideration.

"We are concerned about the poor in our cities, we are concerned with the working poor, we're concerned with the middle class, we are concerned about mass transit, we're concerned about health and our children and education," Hatcher said. "And I think those concerns have been reflected in the resolutions which have been adopted by this body."

One of those resolutions demanded "parity" for domestic programs with military spending and said urban programs should be funded "adequately to meet the needs of the nation's cities."

But language critical of President Reagan and the Pentagon was softened before the resolution passed by a bi-partisan 70-41 vote. Democrats control a majority of the nation's city halls.

Many of the mayors in both parties said they were concerned by a Reagan proposal to eliminate federal aid programs for local communities and convert them into block grants to the states.

Many speakers said they didn't trust the states to provide for the cities if given the money with no strings attached.

Republican Mayor Richard Carver of Peoria said the convention "suggests the U.S. Conference of Mayors is moving into the 1980s very much in step with the Reagan administration."

But when Carver attempted to get a resolution saying the mayors are unopposed to block grants in principle, he was voted down 92-37. The resolution that passed said, in effect, that if federal money is given to the states in block grants, the cities want built-in guarantees that the states will pass along the money to the cities fairly and efficiently.

French disclose secret agreement with Iraqis

PARIS (AP) — French officials have disclosed a secret agreement which they said gave France the right to oversee the operation of Iraq's nuclear reactor until 1989 to prevent the Arab nation from building a nuclear bomb.

The reactor in Baghdad was destroyed this month by an Israeli bombers. Israel said it had information that the Iraqis planned to use the reactor to manufacture atomic weapons.

Michael Pecqueur, chief administrator of the French Atomic Energy Commission, disclosed to reporters from the newspaper Le Monde and other newspapers and radio stations this week the terms of a secret agreement between France and Iraq signed in 1979.

Pecqueur said the agreement would have prevented Iraq from using the reactor to build a nuclear bomb. There was no immediate comment from Iraq.

The agreement, Pecqueur said, provided for all experimental programs to be developed by a joint committee of experts of the two countries, chaired by the heads of their atomic energy commissions.

French technicians were to take part in the operation of the reactor through 1989, with a constant French presence on the site, he said. Pecqueur said the French technicians, combined with inspections by the International Atomic Energy Agency, would totally prevent Iraq from developing atomic weapons.

He added that the French technicians as well as the IAEA inspectors would have easily detected the unauthorized irradiation or removal of the large quantities of uranium which would be involved in building a nuclear bomb.

France's immediate reaction would have been to stop deliveries of highly enriched uranium, and the amounts left in Iraq would have been insufficient to make a weapon, he said.

"Even if you envisage the worst hypothesis of a simultaneous renunciation of all engagements and controls, the fuel supply cutoff that would immediately result would make it impossible to produce militarily significant quantities of fissile material," Pecqueur was quoted as saying Thursday in a dispatch from Paris in the New York Times.

Le Monde said the agreement "above all had a political connotation, because it withdrew from Iraq all possibility of using the installations secretly."

The newspaper said that if the agreement had been made public from the start, "it would have enabled a lot of doubts about the controversial project to be lifted," but the administration of former President Valery Giscard d'Estaing did not wish it, "and today, it is too late."

Publicity surprises principal

HOUSTON (AP) — The principal of a school which had planned to offer a summer course to teach children to shoot guns says he is astounded by the amount of publicity the idea generated.

"Gosh, we got calls from everywhere," said Kenneth Royal, principal of Clear Lake Elementary School. "I got a letter from a gal in Chicago who said I was a legend in Chicago."

The course was canceled Wednesday because not enough students signed up.

"We only got about 11 and we needed 18 to make the class," Royal said.

Fasken 1981 Distinguished Friend of Schreiner College

KERRVILLE — Murray Fasken, senior chairman of the board of Midland National Bank, was honored here Wednesday night as the 1981 Distinguished Friend of Schreiner College.

More than 100 guests, including 35 people from Midland, joined the Schreiner College board of trustees at a banquet on campus honoring Fasken for his long service to Schreiner College. Fasken's wife, Celeste, and their three children, Andrew and Steve Fasken and Susan Hartin, also attended the reception and dinner.

Peter W. Baldwin, chairman of the Schreiner board of trustees, welcomed the group and then introduced President Sam Junkin, who delivered the banquet address.

"If a friend cares extravagantly," said Dr. Junkin, "rolls up his own sleeves to work alongside you, runs the risk with you when times are tough, longs for you to become more than you are, and helps you turn great dreams into realities — then Murray Fasken is a distinguished friend of Schreiner College."

Murray Fasken

Fasken was born in Toronto, Canada, but his family moved to Midland when he was a child and he graduated from Midland High School in 1934. He then earned a bachelor of arts degree in economics from Texas A&M University and served in the U.S. Army.

Joining Midland National Bank as a teller in 1950, Fasken began an active civic life, working to advance educational, medical, business and religious movements both in Midland and throughout the state.

In addition to serving Schreiner Institute and College as a trustee, he also served his alma mater as chairman of the Texas A&M University Development Foundation. He is past president of the Midland College Board of Trustees, Midland Chamber of Commerce and the Midland Country Club.

He has assumed trustee positions of the Midland First Presbyterian Church, Trinity Towers, the West Texas Boys Ranch and Midland Memorial Hospital. In addition, he is a member of the board of directors of First City Bancorporation of Texas, Inc.

In 1958, Fasken became president of Midland National Bank and was named chairman of the board in 1964. Last February, he became senior chairman of the board.

Schreiner College is a two-year liberal arts college.

Striking air controllers may be jailed

By H. JOSEF HEBERT
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration is prepared to prosecute air traffic controllers if they carry out their threat to strike next week and ground more than half the nation's commercial air traffic, says Transportation Secretary Drew Lewis.

Negotiations between the government and the controllers broke off Wednesday when union negotiators walked out of informal talks after rejecting the Federal Aviation Administration's wage offer.

Robert Poli, president of the Professional Air Traffic Controllers Organization (PATCO) said he stands firm on a 7 a.m. Monday strike deadline if an agreement is not reached by midnight Sunday.

Lewis said that while he wants to avoid a strike, the administration is prepared to move quickly in the courts to bring the controllers back to work if necessary. He said he would not rule out criminal prosecution of those who strike, even recommending that some controllers be jailed.

"We are not going to tolerate an illegal strike," Lewis told a news conference. By law, controllers are forbidden from striking and a federal court injunction against a walkout is in effect.

A strike would be felt across the economy as travelers and shippers of air freight would find long delays and no aircraft at all along many routes.

"If a strike occurs it will come at a high cost to the union, seriously inconvenience thousands of air travelers, and it will cause millions of dollars in economic loss to the airlines and to air commerce," Lewis said.

He called the controllers "among the best paid employees of the federal government" and accused them of "breaking faith" with the public with their demands for a minimum $10,000-a-year pay increase and other benefits.

Lewis described the FAA's wage offer as "serious and reasonable" and said it would cost the government $40 million a year, an overall figure he said the administration cannot exceed. The union's wage demands would cost three times that amount and are unjustified, he said.

Federal mediator Kenneth Moffett said he would try to get the two parties together again, but Lewis and union leaders made it clear that a wide gulf remains between the union's demands and the administration's offer.

One knowledgeable source said immense pressure will mount over the next few days to resume the talks and move toward an agreement. But those talks have been described all along as informal, and actual negotiations on a contract proposal have not yet begun.

Congress will determine the actual wage package, but the controllers want the Reagan administration to endorse their demands. Journeymen controllers now earn from $20,500 to $26,600 at low traffic density airports to a high of $37,800 to nearly $50,000 at high density centers and towers.

A walkout by the controllers would immediately throw the nation's air transport system into chaos. Airline industry officials estimate the cost to the airlines alone at $80 million to $100 million a day and some carriers may be forced to shut down.

Boston transit chief wants rate hikes

BOSTON (AP) — Area commuters will pay 75 cents to ride the subway and 50 cents or more on buses starting in August if the mass transit system's board of directors approves proposed fare hikes.

James F. O'Leary, general manager of the Massachusetts Bay Transportation Authority, requested the fare increases Wednesday at an emergency meeting.

O'Leary says the increase would allow the mass transit system to keep present services and perhaps restore some that were cut back earlier this year due to lack of funds. Otherwise, he warns, the system may go broke.

The board authorized O'Leary to submit his operating budget for the MBTA of $353.2 million, approximately $16 million more than the budget approved by the Advisory Board last December.

Under the proposal, higher express bus fares would vary with mileage. The present basic bus fare of 25 cents has not changed since 1968. Rapid transit prices doubled to 50 cents June 30, 1980.

The fares currently pay for about 24 percent of the MBTA's operating costs. But the House Committee on Transportation is pushing a bill that would force MBTA riders to pay one-third of the operating costs.

O'Leary said the fare hikes would give the MBTA approximately $24 million in additional revenue. His proposed budget would eliminate 536 jobs through attrition and retirements

O'Leary said it will not be necessary to seek financial help from the Legislature or the 79 cities and towns in the district.

VA Land Board to stop taking loan requests

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — With a waiting list of more than 14,000, the Texas Veterans' Land Board has voted to stop accepting requests for loans from veterans because the program is short on money.

The board, however, asked Gov. Bill Clements on Wednesday to allow the July 13 special legislative session to consider two proposals to keep the popular program alive.

Land Commissioner Bob Armstrong told Clements the program "is almost unbelievably sound."

Armstrong, chairman of the three-member board, wrote the governor that the Senate had approved the proposals during this year's regular session, but they were "bottled up in (House) subcommittee, reportedly at the instruction" of Speaker Bill Clayton.

With the long waiting list, "Obviously there is no lack of interest in the program. For that matter, no opposition, except perhaps that of the speaker, surfaced during the regular session."

Clayton responded that the special session would act on his proposal to set aside part of any state surplus for water projects "and to increase the interest on state bonds authorized but unissued. Should the governor include in the call the issuance of additional bonds, that would be considered in the ordinary way all legislation is considered."

"I do not in any way oppose the veterans' land program, but I believe there are alternatives which might provide better benefits," Clayton said.

The veterans' land program began in 1949, and since then nearly 73,000 veterans have purchased more than four million acres of Texas land. Nearly 31,000 of the veterans have paid their loans in full.

So far, $700 million in bonds have been authorized but only $74 million remain to be sold.

"We are almost out of money to lend now," Armstrong said in a statement, "and if we don't get some help from the Legislature, we have no choice but to stop taking applications."

The land board adopted a resolution asking the governor to include two proposed constitutional amendments in the special session. One would permit the board to sell its last $74 million in bonds at higher than the 6 percent interest ceiling, and the other would authorize an additional $250 million in bonds.

The program offers loans of up to $20,000 to purchase 10 or more acres. The current interest rate is 7 percent on a 40-year loan.

The state retains title to the land until the loans are paid in full.

"Repayment of the bonds is secured not only by the credit of the veteran," Armstrong told Clements, "but also by land which has uniformly escalated in value. As a result, the program has consistently received a triple A rating by the bond houses. The chances of the state having to make good on these bonds is virtually zero."

The board said 165,000 Vietnam veterans, 316,000 Korean veterans and 740,000 World War II veterans, plus reservists and national guardsmen who had four to six months active duty training are eligible for loans.

Gasohol steps wanted on Clements' agenda

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — State Rep. Larry Don Shaw, D-Big Spring, has asked Gov. Bill Clements to include two measures designed to encourage production and use of gasohol in Texas on his agenda for the special legislative session.

Clements has called the session for July 13, and his agenda includes repeal of the state ad valorem tax, creation of a water trust fund, congressional redistricting, revision of the property tax code and consideration of the medical practices act.

Shaw co-sponsored the two gasohol measures during the recent legislative session without Rockdale Rep. Dan Kubiak and San Antonio Sen. Bob Vale, but both measures failed to pass.

Kubiak's House Bill 24, exempting gasohol from the gasoline tax, died in the Senate, while Vale's Senate Bill 365, relating to the ownership requirment, failed to clear the House Liquor Regulation Committee.

Shaw said the ownership restriction "discourages plant investment by out-of-state companies who fear that gasohol will become uneconomical as a fuel if the heavily-subsidized federal synfuels development program is successful."

Fort Concho Landmark to be site of annual Frontier Days festivities

SAN ANGELO — Fort Concho National Historic Landmark will be the scene Saturday of Fort Concho Frontier Days which is part of San Angelo's Fiesta del Concho.

Frontier Days activities will run from 7 a.m. to noon at the restored Indian wars fort, East Avenue D and South Oakes Street. The actitivies include performances at 9:30 and 11 a.m. by members of the Alabama-Coushatta Indian tribe.

On display in front of Fort Concho's headquarters building will be the historic "Come and Take It" cannon over which the Texas Revolution began. The cannon was hidden for 100 years until a flood uncovered it on the Big Sandy in 1936, but it was not recognized as this historic relic until the late 1970s. This is the cannon's first exhibition west of Austin.

Other activities include a pancake breakfast, which kicks off the day's events, live exhibitions at the Officer's Quarter No. 5, a film festival at the Officer's Quarter No. 8, museum exhibits and a fiddling contest at 2 p.m. at Santa Fe Park.

More information on the fiddling contest may be obtained by calling John Stegall at 1-655-9171 or 1-944-0854.

Advertiser rejects sex, violence

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The nation's largest television advertiser has withdrawn sponsorship from more than 50 TV shows, saying a "large, serious and increasingly vocal segment of our population" is objecting to sex and violence.

"For sound commercial reasons, we are not going to let our advertising messages appear in an environment which we think many of our potential customers will find distasteful," said O.B. Butler, chairman of the board of Procter & Gamble Co.

In a Monday night speech to the Academy of Television Arts and Sciences, Butler did not list the programs from which Procter & Gamble is withdrawing.

PROCTOR & GAMBLE products include Ivory soap, Tide and Cheer detergents, Sure and Secret deodorants, Folgers coffee, Duncan Hines cake mixes, Charmin' toilet paper and many more. Last year, it had gross sales of more than $10 billion.

Butler said the company was not reacting to threats of consumer boycotts. He said sponsors "must be responsible for the environment in which our commercials appear" without turning that responsibility over "to any group, no matter how highly motivated and how well-intentioned they are, by permitting our program choices to be dictated by threats of boycott."

But he added, "we have simultaneously made an intense effort to listen very carefully to what the vocal critics, as well as the general public, have to say about the kind of television programs we sponsor."

A NUMBER OF conservative religious groups, including the Moral Majority Inc., have urged consumers to boycott the products of companies advertising on shows they deem immoral.

Cal Thomas, a Moral Majority vice president, applauded Butler's speech as "an extremely responsible statement."

The Moral Majority is a national organization founded by the Rev. Jerry Falwell of Lynchburg, Va., advocating a back-to-the-Bible morality in America.

It has joined a campaign by the Rev. Donald Wildmon's National Federation for Decency to urge boycotts of sponsors whose programs are judged offensive. The Coalition for Better Television has threatened a product boycott to begin in July if the warning to clean up "dirt, profanity, vulgarity and sex" on the screen went unheeded. Wildmon says the coalition claims about 300 groups nationwide.

BUTLER SAID Procter & Gamble has "withdrawn sponsorship from over 50 programs, including movies, for reasons of taste."

He said some sex or violence could be tolerated if it were considered integral to a program. Violence and sex in some films, such as "Roots" or "Holocaust," should not be viewed in the same light as "purely gratuitous 'jiggle' and unneccesarily bloodthirsty violence," he said.

"There is a large, serious and increasingly vocal segment of our population which believes that much of what you are teaching is destructive, that it tears at the character which enabled this country to become what it has become," Butler said.

LAST MONTH, some of the television industry's top decision-makers held a three-day workshop in Ojai, Calif., to discuss special interest groups such as the Moral Majority.

"Roots" producer Stan Margulies told the Ojai workshop that TV is too sensitive to criticism from such groups.

"Television is overreacting to pressure groups now because it has had a free ride for such a long time," he said. "Now, many groups are discovering the way to get a free ride is to attack television. We are not persuaded that the Moral Majority is a majority."

Astronaut leaving corps

HOUSTON (AP) — Alan L. Bean says he's through walking on the moon and plans instead to devote himself to painting it.

The 49-year-old Texan, the fourth man to walk on the lunar surface, announced Wednesday that he is retiring after 18 years in the astronaut corps effective June 26.

"I am going to sit in front of my easel and become as fine a painter of moonscapes as I can," Bean said.

The idea of becoming a career artist "did not just pop into my head," said Bean, who began studying art while in the Navy in the 1950s. "I've been doing more on weekends, going to museums and art shows. I decided if I was going to try and make a contribution, I had to start now."

He said no other artist has had a first-hand view of space.

"I could paint in general before I went to the moon, and took some lessons from a couple of artists, but there is no one around who can teach you to paint moonscapes," he said. "The atmospherics and the colors — mostly gray — are so different from what other artists have experienced."

Bean was the lunar module pilot on Apollo 12, man's second lunar landing mission in November 1969. He also commanded the July 28-Sept. 25, 1973 Skylab 3 mission.

Ford, Allen spark thrills in 'Raiders'

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer

RAIDERS OF THE LOST ARK is a thrill-a-minute throwback to the Saturday matinee serials that filmmakers George Lucas ("Star Wars") and Steven Spielberg ("Jaws") enjoyed in their youth (aren't they too young to remember Saturday matinees?).

Indiana Jones (Harrison Ford) and Marion Ravenwood (Karen Allen) could be any of the spunky heroes and heroines of cliffhangers of the '30s and '40s. But Lucas-Spielberg have upgraded the old formulas with $20 million worth of production values, modern special effects and a degree (not too much) of sophistication.

The result is entertainment that propels the audience inexorably from one excitement to the next. Among the many joys are the performances of the leads: Ford a cynical idealist with an uncanny sense of survival; Miss Allen a tender, liberated woman who can drink barroom toughs under the table and wear an evening gown in a desert tent. They're a modern-day Gable-Harlow.

The rating is PG, but parents with impressionable children should be warned about the shocks and violence.

The right signal to call is 682-6222

Soap operas: They escaped P&G's 'spring cleaning'

By SCOTT KRAFT
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Floyd, the poor hospital handyman, is sleeping soundly. Lying beside him is Nola, a clerk at the hospital.

Nola has engineered a plot to get pregnant by Floyd and convince a young doctor-to-be, Kelly, that the child is his. Then Kelly will marry her, she reasons.

"I better go to Dr. Davenport soon, and he better tell me I'm pregnant or I'll never be able to trap Kelly into marrying me..." Nola is thinking.

She looks at Floyd. "...I'll be stuck with him."

So it went Wednesday afternoon in another episode of "The Guiding Light," one of six soap operas owned by Procter & Gamble Co.

P&G, television's biggest advertiser, whose soap products helped give birth to the television "soap" opera 30 years ago, is cleaning up its act on the tube. This week, it revealed that it decided not to sponsor 50 television programs last season because they exhibited too much sex or violence.

But the company's soap operas, with an audience of 10 million or more, escaped the washcloth.

●

Enter Rev. Donald E. Wildmon, a United Methodist minister who is head of the National Federation for Decency. He has taken out after some prime-time television shows patterned after soaps. He's in his office in Tupelo, Miss.

His group's effort to end sex and violence on television "is going to carry over to the soaps, too," he says. "You're going to see some changes in the soaps."

Are soap operas as sexually offensive to his group as some prime-time television shows? "More so," Wildmon says. But he hasn't launched a drive against the advertisers on daytime television. "We don't have the resources," he says.

●

Andy married Trish for her parents' money. But when Trish's parents disapproved of Andy, they disowned her. Andy left her. That was a year ago. Now Trish has come to see Andy, the villain of P&G's "The Guiding Light." They embrace, but Trish pulls away.

"Your turnaround is a little too quick for me to buy," she says.

"Then you have a very short memory because no matter what problems we were having, we never had a problem in bed," he says.

"No, but we thought we could solve all of our problems there, and that was wrong," she says. "I won't make that mistake again."

●

Enter P&G, the concerned parent of its soap operas. Advertisers rarely have control over the content of prime-time shows they sponsor. But a P&G representative oversees all phases of soap opera production to make sure they don't stray from propriety and taint the commercial image.

Tide, Joy, Zest, Secret and Safeguard interrupt people like Andy and Trish every seven minutes or so with scenes of dishpan hands, dirty clothes and stinky underarms.

Between the commercials, there are love affairs, children born out of wedlock, relationships on the rocks and child-custody squabbles.

Alas, P&G doesn't have the most popular shows these days. ABC's "General Hospital," 'All My Children" and "One Life to Live," top those charts. ABC says General Hospital's hour-long drama draws 13 to 20 million viewers a day.

But P&G's "Search for Tomorrow," which debuted on TV in 1951, is still running. Besides "Texas" and "The Guiding Light," P&G also owns "Another World," "Edge of Night" and "As the World Turns."

●

Enter a reporter. It's Wednesday afternoon. He's flipping from channel to channel. There's Barrett, a Vietnam veteran who sits at a desk with a handgun and contemplates suicide because his wife has left him for another man. It's in "Texas," a P&G soap opera on NBC.

Later, Elena, a virgin, is trying to convince Jeb that they should make love, again in "Texas."

P&G, many sponsors screen television shows

By CHRISTOPHER LINDSAY
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Procter & Gamble's revelation that it withheld its advertising from dozens of TV programs because they were too sexy or too violent calls attention to a longstanding effort by many corporate advertisers to ensure they're welcome in America's living rooms.

With threats of boycotts and hit lists, conservative groups recently have been trying to exploit the sensitive link between sponsors and broadcasters to get off the air programs that don't meet their standards of decency.

ABC-TV President James Duffy told The Cincinnati Enquirer that P&G withdrew sponsorship of 12 different shows on his network, including the movies "The Women's Room" and "East of Eden" and an episode of "Taxi" that involved a scene at a gay bar, as well as two episodes of "Dynasty" because the show's portrayal of big business was considered negative.

While some advertisers put their advertising dollars on highly rated programs regardless of content, others say they have long screened TV programming before it is broadcast to make certain their products are seen in an appropriate context and environment.

Pepsico, for example, has a longstanding policy against advertising its youth-oriented product amid sex and violence, said Al Goetz, spokesman for the fifth-ranked television advertiser.

"This is a decision we made long before Jerry Falwell" — the founder of Moral Majority Inc.

John Lowden, a vice president of International Telephone & Telegraph, says his company also was sensitive to complaints about gratuitous sex and violence "long before it was a popular issue."

But Lowden, whose company ranks 14th among television advertisers, acknowledged that Falwell "is having an impact."

R.E. Buchanan, a vice president for the J. Walter Thompson advertising agency, said its negotiators constantly audition TV programs in New York and Los Angeles.

One of the company's accounts, Kraft Foods, developed written guidelines nine years ago, he said, "and that's not unusual." Kraft's attitude is that "it is a visitor in the living room," said Buchanan.

How much sex and violence is considered too much sex and violence varies according to the judge, however.

"We recognize violence and sex as acceptable themes in adult programming," said Kathleen C. MacDonough, manager of corporate issues for General Foods Corp., which spent $71.9 million last year on TV ads.

"It is the treatment of those themes that we judge in deciding whether to advertise on a particular show," she said, adding that the company rejected more than 100 programs last year and has refused to advertise on certain programs for 20 years.

Hoffman launches effort against heroin addiction

NEW YORK (AP) — Abbie Hoffman — ex-Yippie, counter-culture hero and all-around activist — says he's planning to use his "celebrity status" to fight heroin addiction.

Hoffman, serving a jail sentence on a drug charge, said at a news conference Wednesday that addiction is a serious social problem — second only to "society's greed for money."

Hoffman, 44, called on others who have a "cultural impact" to join him in an anti-heroin advertising campaign.

Hoffman is serving a three-year sentence for selling $36,000 worth of cocaine to undercover police officers in 1973. He turned himself in earlier this year after spending seven years as a fugitive. On June 10, he began working at the Veritas Therapeutic Community drug clinic under a prison work-release program.

"I feel like the little kid with my finger stuck in the dike," he said. "It's not the same as saving a river from destruction. The problem is a flood here."

CONCORD, N.H. (AP) — President Reagan turned from acting to politics, but New Hampshire Gov. Hugh Gallen is headed the other way.

Hugh Gallen

The state film bureau says Gallen has gotten a bit part in a movie about the 1905 Japanese-Russian peace treaty, which was signed in Portsmouth, N.H. The five-hour film is a project of the Japanese Public Broadcasting System.

Gallen shouldn't have much trouble with his part, according to film bureau head Martha Leighton. The governor plays a governor — Gov. John McLane, who played host to the foreign diplomats 76 years ago.

Although he'll be getting fancied up in "formal attire of 1905," Ms. Leighton said it's tourism, not a yearning for the acting life, that prompted Gallen's participation.

"Twenty million Japanese are going to see this, and the Japanese are known as travelers," she said. "It doesn't take much to figure that there are going to be a lot of Japanese people here, saying, 'Can you please tell me where Portsmouth is?'"

NEW YORK (AP) — The class of 1982 at Georgetown University includes quite a few talented students. But few are as talented — or as outspoken — as 63-year-old Pearl Bailey.

Pearl Bailey

Miss Bailey, a high school dropout some years back, says college "makes you feel younger because it makes you stretch again."

In an interview in Good Housekeeping magazine, the celebrated entertainer, world traveler and conversationalist crowed about her 4.0 grade-point average, the equivalent of straight A's.

"Those gals fussing and fighting to be a '10' have nothing on ole Pearlie Mae," she said, adding that, with her grades, she considers herself a "red-hot four."

MASERU, Lesotho (AP) — Actress-activist Jane Fonda, spurned by officials in South Africa, has received a warmer welcome in this small mountainous kingdom surrounded by South African territory.

Miss Fonda, along with husband Tom Hayden and their two children, were denied visas Tuesday when they arrived in Johannesburg from New York City. They had been invited by students to speak at a university in Johannesburg, but officials of the white-ruled nation denied them entry without explanation.

"If they are making the progress that they say they are, and if they want to be understood, then it is in their interest to let people like us in to see all sides," Miss Fonda said after arrival to a VIP welcome in Lesotho Wednesday.

LONDON (AP) — Buckingham Palace is declining comment about published reports that Capt. Mark Phillips — the husband of Princess Anne — joined a raucous midnight party aboard a ferry in the English Channel.

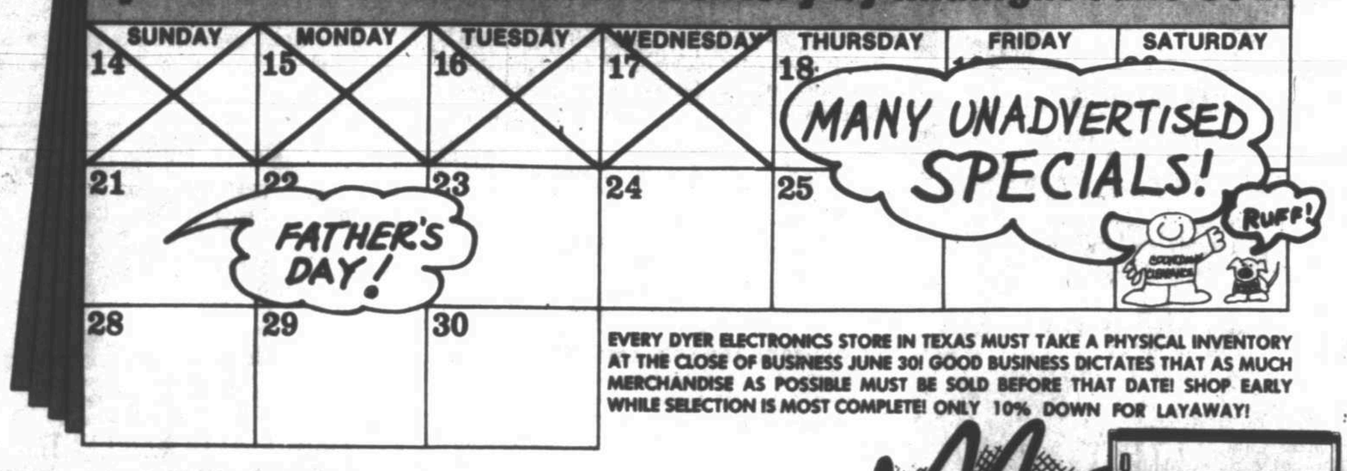

British newspapers Thursday quoted witnesses as saying Phillips, 32, hurled ice cubes around the vessel's bar and sprayed champagne around the lounge at the party nine days ago, when the British equestrian team was returning from winning a tournament in the Netherlands.

They said one barman yelled at Phillips: "What would your mother-in-law say if she knew about this?" Mother-in-law is Queen Elizabeth II.

Garland police officer J.S. Lamb examines the contents of the trunk of a getaway car used in the Wylie bank robbery Wednesday. The robbery suspects were arrested after arriving at a Garland house detectives had staked out. The wig and pistol were used in the robbery.

Man charged in bank holdups, shooting

DALLAS (AP) — Police say a busy bank robber — who held up three Dallas-area savings and loan offices within three days — apparently has been put out of business after he wounded a police officer in a holdup attempt.

Authorities apprehended William James Hensley, 47, at his Garland home Wednesday afternoon and charged him with the three stick-ups and with shooting a Wylie police officer during the third robbery.

Hensley was arraigned Wednesday in Garland by Municipal Judge Randall Grubbs on three counts of aggravated robbery and one count of attempted capital murder.

He was charged in connection with the Wednesday robberies of a bank at Wylie and a savings and loan association at McKinney and another savings and loan holdup Monday in Richardson, police said.

Hensley was in Collin County jail Wednesday in lieu of bonds totaling $175,000.

Also arrested was Betty Johnson, 43, who was charged with aggravated robbery in connection with the Wylie heist. Her bond was set at $25,000.

Wylie police officer Johnny Bridgefarmer was in Collin Memorial Hospital Wednesday night in "very good" condition with a gunshot wound to the hip, hospital officials said.

Wylie police would release no information on how Bridgefarmer was injured during the hold-up there, which occurred about an hour and a half after the McKinney bank was robbed shortly after noon Wednesday.

Bridgefarmer, 21, said Wednesday night from his hospital bed that he could not reveal details of the hold-up, only that the gunman "got the drop on me."

McKinney police said a man fitting Hensley's description walked into the Town and County Savings and Loan office Wednesday and demanded money from branch manager James Underwood.

The man said he had a gun and patted his back pocket, where Underwood told police he saw what appeared to be a pistol.

Richardson police said the same man involved in the other two robberies had entered the Trinity Savings and Loan shortly after noon Monday and robbed a teller at gunpoint.

Authorities said they were not sure how much money was taken in all three robberies and did not say whether any money had been recovered.

Gangs compared to organized crime

CHICAGO (AP) — Youth gang operations have taken on many of the same trappings and finesse of organized crime, an anonymous witness identified as a former gang leader has told a federal commission.

Street gangs no longer rule a readily identifiable or containable "turf" within a city, the witness — wearing a black hood and gloves — testified Wednesday from behind a protective partition.

Like organized crime, gangs boast interstate operations in extortion, drug trafficking and assassinations, he told the U.S. Attorney General's Task Force on Violent Crime, which has been holding hearings around the country.

His voice electronically altered, the witness said one gang had a five-state operation. It dispatched "ambassadors" to consolidate gangs from other states, such as Wisconsin and Indiana, he said.

The gang structure is like that used by organized crime in "every extent, with the exception of some investments," the witness said.

He was identified as a former leader of a 200-member gang who was convicted of armed robbery and assault and had spent eight years in Illinois penal institutions. The witness was escorted from the hearing room by federal marshals.

His description of sophisticated street-gang methods was part of a day-long series of hearings on street gangs, juvenile crime and narcotics.

The task force was appointed in March by Attorney General William French Smith. Illinois Gov. James R. Thompson, former U.S. attorney for the Northern District of Illinois and former Attorney General Griffin Bell are task force co-chairmen.

The former gang leader testified it is tougher today to keep out of gangs. He said, "You die more quickly. There's a lot more force being used (to join gangs) than there was 10 years ago."

Boys only 12 years old are pressured in the schools and on the streets, where paying a fee buys temporary freedom from harassment.

The witness also mentioned what authorities have deplored in recent years — the use of younger gang members to deal in drugs. As juveniles, they will receive lighter sentences, he said.

The witness testified that when he was 16 he formed a gang "out of survival. We began to perform drug dealing, stealing of guns, extortion and hits if necessary."

When a businessman is visited by gang members, "if he doesn't pay, physical restraints are used ultimately on himself, his family or his business," he said.

The former gang leader said he doesn't believe gangs would disappear if the government prosecuted the leaders. "Someone would just take their place."

The task force is preparing recommendations on steps the federal government can take to fight violent crime.

Financiers concerned nuclear plants may never be built

SEATTLE (AP) — Construction on two nuclear power plants in Washington state is on the verge of being halted for at least a year, with ominous symptoms for the health of other nuclear projects around the nation.

The Washington Public Power Supply System, a consortium of public utilities building five nuclear plants in Washington, must peddle $200 million in bonds every 45 days to finance them.

The plants, with a price tag of $23.9 billion, are touted as the largest construction project in the world — and the costliest. They could produce enough power to light five cities the size of Seattle.

WPPSS Managing Director Robert Ferguson was to formally ask his board today to halt construction on the two least-advanced plants for a year, hoping for better bond market conditions and firm demand for more power.

The two plants, one in south central Washington and the other in the western part of the state, carry an estimated price tag of $12 billion, making them the most expensive ever built in the United States.

"The ability of the market to continue to absorb this staggering amount of debt is certainly questionable," says a new report by the Drexel Burnham Lambert brokerage house of New York.

The story is the same across the nation, WPPSS says in its own defense. Because of financial problems, orders for 86 nuclear and coal-fired plants have been canceled in the past decade, according to the Atomic Industrial Forum.

No new nuclear projects have been committed in the last two years and orders for plants generating 25,000 megawatts of power have been canceled, the industry group says.

"Since we have the largest capital formation in the United States today, we're noticing it in the extreme," WPPSS spokesman Tom Hunt said. "The smallest rise in inflation and interest rates impacts us dramatically. The overall impact of market conditions and the amount of bonds we have sold, and need to sell, appears staggering."

Since Ferguson first made the mothballing proposal last month, the bond rating firm of Moody's has lowered its rating for the two plants by two notches.

Drilled to 3,810 feet, with 4 1/2 inch casing set at 3,711 feet, it is plugged back to 3,701 feet.

Court stops RRC prorating gas wells

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The 3rd Court of Civil Appeals stopped the Railroad Commission today from prorating gas produced from wells in the Boonsville Field pending an appeal of the proration order.

An Austin state district judge set aside the order, and the commission appealed to the 3rd Court of Civil Appeals.

The appeals court said it was shown during oral arguments May 15 that if the commission order is enforced pending appeal it would block production of 143 million cubic feet of gas per month until the case is settled.

The appeals court said it also was stated that most of the wells produce at capacity, but the commission has recently directed that one well be limited to 50 percent of capacity.

"Relators fear that other wells produced by them will be similarly restricted pending appeal," the appeals court said.

The Boonsville Field is in Wise, Jack, Parker and Denton counties.

The request for an injunction against the commission was filed by Mote Resources, Inc.; Twin Montana, Inc.; Sabio Oil & Gas, Inc.; Coke L. Gage Jr.; C.L. Gage Jr.; Reuben B. Knight; Richey Exploration Co.; Richey Drilling Co.; Ryder Scott Oil Co.; Decatur Glass Works; Seely Oil Co.; League Oil and Gas Co; and Wolfson Oil Co.

Joining the commission in its original appeal were Mitchell Energy Corp.; Enserch Exploration, Inc.; Dallas Production, Inc.; American Trading & Production Corp.; and Grace Petroleum Corp.

Bankruptcy trustee takes look at Everett records

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — A bankrupty trustee's first look at investments promotor Coy Everett's records indicates there may be only $7 million to $9 million in unpaid investments instead of the $15 million estimated by securities investigators.

The Oklahoma Securities Department has been investigating allegations of fraud involving Everett and two of his companies: CSC Oil Co., which promoted what investors hoped were "can't-fail" oil and gas investments guaranteeing a 50 percent profit, and Freedom Energy Corp., which sold drilling investments.

The complex financial dealings of Everett and the two oil firms now are in the hands of a federal bankruptcy trustee after Everett sought court protection in an effort to reorganize in the wake of lawsuits by investors and securities regulators.

Chicago transit may get fare hikes

CHICAGO (AP) — Members of three public bodies have put forth plans to boost the cost of train, bus, subway and taxi travel in the Chicago area, but some of the fare hikes hinge on whether state lawmakers are willing to help out the mass transit system.

The Regional Transportation Authority board on Wednesday approved a 12.5 percent fare increase for all mass transit carriers in the six-county Chicago area.

But the increases, coupled with $26 million in service cuts, would take effect only on the condition that the Legislature injects more money into the financially ailing system.

Also Wednesday, the Illinois Commerce Commission approved fare increases of 58 to 80 percent for three commuter railroads — the Burlington Northern, Illinois Central Gulf and the Milwaukee Road. It also approved a near-double fare increase, from 80 cents to $1.50, for a suburban carrier, West Towns Bus Co.

Another commuter railroad, the Chicago and North Western Transportation Co., has said it would ask the RTA to approve a 50 percent commuter fare hike.

And the Chicago City Council approved a 17.5 percent taxicab fare hike. Before the meter starts ticking, the cost of entering a cab will go up to $1 from 75 cents; the per-mile charge will be a dime higher at 90 cents.

Although both the RTA and the ICC have proposed fare increases, the transit agency is taking the commission to court, questioning whether it has the legal authority to raise fares.

ICC spokeswoman Patricia Maxwell said the commission acted only to keep the rail and bus lines running while the Legislature seeks a solution to the RTA's funding problems. If the Legislature comes up with a plan to enable the RTA to pay its carriers the money owed, the fares approved by the ICC would not have to go into effect, she said.

The ICC also ordered West Towns to resume service by Monday, and ordered another bus company, Suburban Transit System Inc., serving southwest areas, to explain why it had shut down. Both companies suspended service earlier this month because of a lack of subsidies by the cash-strapped RTA.

The RTA board said the fare increases and service cuts it approved will take effect "the first day of the month following the enactment into law by the General Assembly of a transit funding arrangement adequate to satisfy present and anticipated obligations."

The RTA, which regulates and subsidizes transit in the Chicago area, is more than $87 million in debt to its carriers.

Some lawmakers have said they want to see a fare increase as a sign of good faith before they vote for any bill that would funnel new money to the RTA.

The board approved a 10-cent hike in the 80-cent basic fare paid in the city and on suburban buses. Commuter rail fares would go up an average of 12.5 percent.

The fare hikes approved by the ICC for July 1 would increase fares by 75 percent for the Milwaukee Road and 80 percent for the Illinois Central Gulf. The commission also approved a three-step hike for the Burlington Northern that would boost fares by 58 percent by Sept. 1.

The fare hikes approved by the ICC affect 25,000 riders on the Milwaukee Road; 28,000 riders on the Illinois Central; and 23,000 riders on the Burlington Northern.

The railroads requested the increases from the ICC because the RTA owes them millions of dollars in overdue subsidies. Railroad officials said they feared they would not be operate past this month if fares were not increased.

In recent weeks, the RTA board has failed to approve two fare hikes.

The railroads also contend that because their contracts with the RTA expire at the end of this month, they will no longer have to ask the RTA for permission to raise fares.

Ford transmission study may reopen

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Ralph Nader group wants the government to reopen its investigation into alleged defects in Ford Motor Co. automatic transmissions and force Ford to recall 16 million automobiles for repairs.

The Center for Auto Safety, in petitioning a U.S. District Court, said fewer than 7 percent of the Ford owners who received warning labels ordered by the government have placed them on their vehicles.

Saying the company's warning program is not working, the center said Wednesday that the federal Traffic Safety Act requires that such a problem be solved by repairing the cars.

Ford early today denied that the warnings were "a flop" or that the transmissions were defective.

The Highway Traffic Safety Administration last summer warned of the safety problem, saying nearly 100 people had been killed and 1,700 injured when transmissions in Ford vehicles abruptly shifted from park to reverse while the car engines were idling. The cars involved were sold from 1970 to 1979.

But then-Transportation Secretary Neil Goldschmidt decided against a recall after Ford agreed last December to send warnings to the automobile owners along with stickers to put on the cars.

Nader, who is associated with the center, said in a petition adressed to the administrator of the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration that a survey of 750 vehicles and owners in San Francisco, Washington and Minneapolis showed that only 49 had put the warning labels on their cars.

"The warning labels have dismally flopped on this ground alone," Nader's letter said. "Even where the stickers have been placed on the cars by consumers, the accidents have continued to occur because the defect is in the vehicle, not the driver."

Nader asked Administrator Raymond A. Peck Jr. to reopen the investigation into the transmission problem and order a recall of the vehicles to make the repairs, which he said would cost $10 per car.

In its petition to the federal court, the Center for Auto Safety said at least six accidents, three of them involving injuries, have occurred since December because Ford automatic transmissions failed to hold or engage in park.

Ford spokesman Jerry L. Sloan responded that reports of people hurt or killed in Ford cars "may well be just like the other reports the center claims occurred because of this alleged problem ... The ones we've been able to check have turned out to be due to faulty reporting for the Center for Auto Safety rather than faulty transmissions."

"There is no defect in the operation nor in the design of Ford automatic transmissions," Sloan said.

GTE to try again for increase

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — General Telephone officials, unhappy with the tiny rate hike awarded Wednesday, say they'll be back real soon to try to get more money from its 1.3 million Texas customers.

The company wanted a $45.3 million rate hike package, but the Public Utility Commission, unimpressed with GTE service, granted only a $2 million increase.

Monthly rates for residential and business service will not be increased. The San Angelo-based company wanted to hike residential rates by up to $3.34 per month and business rates by up to $11.09 per month.

The commission voted 3-0 to approve a hearing examiner's report that also recommended continuing a $4 million annual penalty for bad service. A hearing will be held by December to determine how long the penalty should remain in effect.

R.W. Britt, president of General Telephone of the Southwest, said the small increase was inadquate.

"We have no alternative but coming back as rapidly as possible (with another rate increase request)," he said, adding another request could be filed by October.

The commission first ordered the $4 million penalty last year when GTE was granted a $35.1 million increase. Customers in the company's widespread Texas service area said the service is bad, sometimes worse than bad.

GTE lawyer Ward Wueste told the commission the penalty causes "a problem and a dilemma" for the company.

"We believe we've had a lot of progress. The progress has a price and that's why we're back here," he said. "It's cost us a lot of money and that's our dilemma."

Further improvements depend on attracting needed capital, said Theodore Brophy, chairman and chief executive officer of GTE. He said the company now meets 19 of 22 PUC service standards.

Brophy said the penalty "serves more as an impediment to improved service," but PUC Chairman George Cowden disagreed.

"Your own activity in the past few months shows the commission sent a message and you received it," he told GTE officials.

John Bell, who was PUC general counsel during last year's GTE rate hearing, appeared Wednesday for the Texas Municipal League, which wanted GTE to refund $9.6 million. Bell agreed with Cowden that the penalty has been effective.

"It's certainly not the ratepayers fault," he said of GTE's service problems. "It's kind of sad it took a penalty to get the company's attention."

The company's Belvidere, Ill., plant, where the subcompact Omni-Horizon models are produced, and the two K-car plants, in Detroit and Newark, Del., will operate two daily nine-hour shifts and the Warren, Mich., truck plant will operate a single daily nine-hour shift. GM recalling new cars

DETROIT (AP) — General Motors Corp. says it is recalling about 9,600 1981 Oldsmobiles and Cadillacs for inspection of nuts in the suspension that could loosen and affect the cars' steering.

There have been no reports of accidents or injuries resulting from the problem, GM said Wednesday.

The problem was discovered when an inspection of the tool used to tighten the nuts in the factory showed the tool was not working properly, said GM spokesman Harold Jackson.

He said GM tests showed if one of the nuts loosened enough to allow a bolt to fall out, it could cause the car to pull to one side or be difficult to steer on tight curves.

Certain 1981 Oldsmobile Toronados and Buick Rivieras and Cadillac Eldorados and Sevilles are affected. The cars will be inspected by dealers, and the nuts tightened if necessary at no charge to the owners, GM said.

New GM plant to open

SHREVEPORT, La. (AP) — The new General Motors assembly plant in Shreveport will begin turning out 45 small pickup trucks an hour on August 29, plant manager Bill Carter said.

The plant will employee 1,250 people, many of whom have already taken special training courses at a vocational-technical school, Carter said Wednesday.

To keep those people happy — and hoping to improve quality by doing so — workers will be involved in some decision-making previously considered the province of management, plant officials said.

Environmentalists criticize EPA choices

WASHINGTON (AP) — Conservation groups say Anne M. Gorsuch's first personnel decisions as head of the Environmental Protection Agency confirm their worst fears about what direction the agency will take: sharply curtailing anti-pollution efforts.

Mrs. Gorsuch, who was an attorney for Mountain Bell Telephone Co. in Denver before being picked for the EPA post, drew heavily from the ranks of corporate attorneys in picking her key policy advisers.

She announced eight appointments Wednesday, and seven of those selected are attorneys representing such clients as General Motors and Exxon.

Environmentalists charged that the people being picked have fought EPA regulations in private practice and now can be expected to lead a push to cut back EPA enforcement activities.

"These are people who have worked for industries that are opposed to what EPA is trying to do," said William Butler of the National Audubon Society.

"We think it is a clear choice of politics over cleanup," said Marchant Wentworth of Environmental Action Inc. "Many enforcement decisions will be made, we fear, by these political appointees who don't share a concern for the environment, but rather want to continue business as usual for pollutors."

The environmental groups were particularly unhappy with the selection of Miami attorney Frank A. Shepherd as the new associate administrator for legal counsel and enforcement.

One of Shepherd's clients was General Motors, a leading opponent of the auto emission requirements in the Clean Air Act.

Environmentalists also expressed concern with the choice of John E. Daniel as Mrs. Gorsuch's chief of staff. Daniel, an attorney, last year became a Washington lobbyist for Johns-Manville Corp., a leading manufacturer of asbestos. Before that, Daniel was director of legislative affairs for the American Paper Institute, chief lobbying group for the paper industry.

"What we are seeing at the EPA is what we have seen at other federal agencies, a wholesale infiltration of the regulator by the industries it is supposed to regulate," said Blake Early of the Sierra Club.

Mrs. Gorsuch's other appointments include:

—Robert M. Perry, a Houston attorney for Exxon Co. since 1969, as EPA's general counsel.

—Nolan E. Clark as associate administrator for policy and resource management. Clark is a member of the Washington law firm of Kirkland & Ellis, which is representing Dow Chemical Co. in its fight to keep the pesticide 2,4,5-T from being banned.

—William A. Sullivan Jr., a lawyer who ran a consulting firm for cities with steel mills, as deputy associate administrator for legal counsel and enforcement.

David Gergen outsider coming in

By MICHAEL PUTZEL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's new communications chief is a tall Southerner with an Ivy League education who only a few months ago was viewed as an outsider by some of Reagan's closest aides.

David R. Gergen, 39, gave up his title as White House staff director Wednesday to become assistant to the president for communications, a new position that puts him in charge of the press office, speechwriters and the communications office.

A graduate of Yale and Harvard Law School, Gergen has barely practiced law, although he is a member of the District of Columbia bar. He went from law school to the Navy, then joined the White House speechwriting staff of Ray Price in 1971, midway through Richard Nixon's first term.

When Price was elevated to counselor to the president at the start of Nixon's second term, Gergen took over the writing and research office and ran it until Nixon's resignation in August 1974. In that post, he was involved — as he put it — "in preparation of some of the papers" Nixon used to try to absolve himself of responsibility for the Watergate coverup that eventually forced his resignation.

In the Watergate-conscious months after Nixon's resignation, Gergen's name occasionally was mentioned as a candidate for "Deep Throat," the mysterious source who Washington Post reporter Bob Woodward said supplied some of his most critical information about the Watergate conspiracy.

"I'm in a cast of thousands," Gergen said when asked about the Deep Throat tag. "I've often said we should have a reunion of all the people who supposedly were Deep Throat, and we could fill Yankee Stadium. ... No, I was not. I deny it."

Although he has not had a formal role as press spokesman, Gergen long has maintained informal contacts with the White House press corps and has served as an adviser to top Reagan aides on handling news stories.

One senior White House aide, who asked not to be identified, said Wednesday's appointment "to some extent formalizes something that already had evolved."

Shortly after Reagan took office, Gergen told associates that his boss, chief of staff James A. Baker III, was really his own staff director. And Gergen frequently could be found overseeing the White House speechwriters or consulting with Baker, press secretary James S. Brady and other key aides about how best to portray Reagan's position on some issue.

But early in the administration — and even to some extent today — Gergen has been regarded as an outsider.

One former campaign aide called Gergen "a professional servant of Republican presidents ... whose name until recently was not familiar to Ronald Reagan."

Gergen's boss, chief of staff Baker, had a similar background and only a late-blooming relationship with the new president. The two worked together in Gerald R. Ford's White House and have been regarded with lingering suspicion by some Reagan loyalists who remember the bitterness of the contest between Ford and Reagan for the 1976 presidential nomination.

But both men have risen quickly in the Reagan White House.

Gergen, who claims to be 6-foot-4½ but admits he may be shaving that figure a bit, is a native of Durham, N.C.. He has lived in the Washington area for many years, however, and is on leave from a resident fellowship at American Enterprise Institute, the conservative think tank here that served as a government-in-waiting for many Republicans during the Carter years.

Agent Orange victims get new chance in court

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — Vietnam veterans living in New York have been given a new opportunity to sue over the effects of Agent Orange — the toxic defoliant blamed by many veterans for serious health problems.

The state's statute of limitations was suspended indefinitely Wednesday for New York veterans who have illnesses they think were caused by exposure to Agent Orange. Gov. Hugh Carey signed into law a bill suspending the statute of limitations for lawsuits against manufacturers of Agent Orange.

New Yorkers who served in Vietnam can now file personal damage suits in the courts within two years after illnesses they think were caused by exposure turn up.

Those veterans had been bound by the statute of limitations, which required that such suits be filed within three years of a veteran's exposure to the defoliant. Veterans' groups had claimed that many of the health problems suspected of being caused by the potent chemical were not known until the last few years.

"Birth defects or cancers may not show themselves for decade or more," said a chief sponsor of the bill, Assemblyman John Behan, R-Suffolk. "It is ludicrous to expect a veteran to bring a court suit before he knows of any injury. Until today, even their basic right to a day in court was jeopardized."

Behan, who lost both legs in combat in Vietnam, is one of 600,000 Vietnam-era veterans in New York.

Also under the new law, veterans who discovered Agent Orange-suspected health problems in the mid to late 1970s — after the statute of limitations ran out and before the new law — can file personal damage suits within the next year.

Viet vets camping on Reagan's steps

WASHINGTON (AP) — Eight Vietnam veterans on a hunger strike say they will camp out on President Reagan's doorstep until he invites them in for a discussion of their grievances.

But deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes says Reagan has no plans to see them.

The hunger strikers flew here Tuesday night from California, where some of them said they had taken no solid food since May 20. Michael Chapman, 29, a protester left behind, collapsed early Wednesday, the 20th day of his vigil. He was hospitalized.

"We're her for the duration," said spokesman Michael McCarthy. "We're going to end the war in Washington, where it began."

The protesters are demanding, among other things, independent research into the long-term health consequences of servicemen's exposure to the herbicide Agent Orange in Vietnam.

Twelve sympathizers — including Catherine Litchfield of Dedham, Mass., the mother of a serviceman killed in Vietnam — sat down on the White House lawn Wednesday and were arrested by the Secret Service.

McCarthy said the hunger strikers would seek a permit today to erect a tent in Lafayette Park, across the street from the White House. He said two of them would sleep each night in the tent.

During a bill-signing ceremony, Reagan was asked why he had not met with the demonstrators when he was in California.

"It wasn't possible for me to get out there," Reagan said.

He said he understood there were two groups of protesters, and the administratration satisfied one group by agreeing to spend more money for research into the effects of Agent Orange on the lives of the millions of Americans who served in Vietnam.

The demonstration started at a Veterans Administration hospital in Brentwood, Calif., near Los Angeles. Last week, the participants were evicted and set up a dozen tents in Glendale, Calif.

In addition to research on the effects of exposure to toxic herbicides, the demonstrators also are seeking medical examinations for all Vietnam veterans; a meeting with Reagan; and an investigation of the death of James R. Hopkins, a veteran who had been trying to win VA certification that his hearing loss was caused by his tour of duty in Vietnam. He died in May, apparently of an overdose of sleeping pills and alcohol.

The VA is investigating Agent Orange's impact, but says it knows of no link between the herbicide and any illness.
