Midland's percent increase in homes sold puts city in its own class

By Stewart Doreen
sdoreen@mrt.com

The Texas Association of Realtors' mid-year review of real estate shows Midland is the most expensive city in West Texas and comparable to larger metropolitan areas in the state.

The review indicated the median price for a home sold between January and June of 2017 was $246,000, which is 5.1 percent higher than last year.

That median price was higher than the median price in Odessa ($170,000), San Angelo ($165,000), Amarillo ($163,700), Lubbock ($155,000), Abilene ($152,000) and El Paso ($146,904).

Midland's median price was greater than the median price of a home sold in the state during the same period ($221,000). It was also higher than the median price in San Antonio ($210,000) and Houston ($229,000) but lower than Dallas/Fort Worth ($254,269) and Austin ($295,000).

The report showed the availability of homes priced under $200,000 in the Midland statistical area has decreased 0.9 percent since 2014, and the most popular prices ranges inside the MSA were $200,000-$299,999 (32.5 percent), $100,000-$199,999 (28 percent) and $300,000-$399,999 (17.8 percent).

Other notables from the report included:

- The number of active listings (484) was down 26.8 percent from 2016 (year to date).
- The months of inventory (2.7) was down 1.3 months from June 2016.
- The average days a home sold stayed on the market was 54 days, down two days compared to 2016 (YTD).

Criminal justice reform is win for prosecutors, community

LAURA NODOLF
Midland County District Attorney

Editor's note: This is the second in series of opinion articles addressing criminal justice reform.

Since joining the District Attorney's Office in 2003, I have had the pleasure of representing the state of Texas in prosecutions ranging from class C traffic tickets to capital murder. Unfortunately during that time, I've also witnessed crime rates in Midland increase across the board, with a growing number of cases particularly involving narcotics and crimes against children.

Prosecutors are constantly balancing a whole host of crimes, with children and narcotics-related offenses being just two — albeit very important — areas of concern. While prosecutors need to spend time assisting victims of all crimes, we also need and want to help the most vulnerable members of our society, children, and assist narcotics offenders to a point of personal responsibility.

With rising crime rates only making the courts' balancing act even more intri-

MDC's deal with Weir is part of a larger plan

■ COMMENTARY

By Trevor Hawes
thawes@mrt.com

The Midland Development Corp. recently made public its intention to strike a deal with Weir Oil and Gas to bring the engineering and oilfield services company to Midland. Some, though, might question why incentivizing an oil and gas company is within the purview of the MDC's mission to foster economic diversity, given that oil and gas is the dominant industry here.

It's all part of a larger plan.

Since its inception in January 2002, the MDC has attempted to bring other industries to town. Most notable is XCOR Aerospace, in which the Type A quarter-cent, sales-tax funded development group spent more than $10 million in an attempt to see the future of space become realized at the now-named Midland International Air & Space Port.

XCOR recently announced mass layoffs and likely won't meet the MDC's employee headcount requirements this year. Plus, a spaceplane has yet to take off or land in Midland. Seeing such a marvel seems a long way off.

The strategy of today's MDC, however, has changed sharply over the past few years. Chairman Brent Hilliard has said to me many times that he treats the MDC as an investment group with a diverse portfolio and clear focus.

Drawing Weir to the city is part of the plan to increase the tax base and to enhance businesses already here, which is also part of the MDC's stated goals. It satisfies the criteria of making investments that garner positive returns and benefit the city's tax rolls.

Our model puts economic losses from Harvey at $240.9 billion

THE ECONOMIST
By M. Ray Perryman

Hurricane Harvey has affected lives across the state and nation. The catastrophic storm not only caused significant damage when it made landfall near Corpus Christi, but has also gone down in history as the wettest ever in the continental United States, with devastating flooding in and around Houston. In addition to the tragic loss of life, the destruction of homes and businesses is causing further distress. The human suffering is of paramount importance, and the emotional losses are enormous.

The economy has also clearly been affected. Although the floodwaters have now largely receded, it will be some time before the full extent of the damages can be measured. It is, however, widely recognized that the cost will exceed those of Hurricane Katrina, which had been the costliest storm to date. Time will be required for repair of buildings and infrastructure, and the loss of business activity will be substantial.

The damages associated with Harvey are expected to be higher because of the intensity of the storm and the significantly larger population affected. The region's critical role in the nation's energy industry and associated supply chains further increase the effects of the storm. The best available, most recent estimate from AccuWeather indicates the damage caused by Harvey could be as high as $190 billion (property loss and near-term business interruption), making it equal to the cost from Hurricanes Katrina and Sandy combined. This estimate is obviously preliminary and it will be months before a clear picture can be obtained. Texas has requested between $120 billion and $150 billion in Federal aid, an amount which is in keeping with this estimate.

Damages are only a part of the economic implications, however. Any economic stimulus, whether positive or negative, leads to additional responses and multiple rounds of business activity. Business operations have been interrupted, causing lost revenue and profits even beyond the damage to facilities. In many cases, these revenues cannot be recouped. Productivity has also been affected as workers are either absent due to problems with their homes and property or less effective on the job as they deal with those issues. According to calculations from our models, even a 10 percent drop in productivity for two months in the immediate and directly affected areas could bring a loss of almost $3 billion in gross product.

On the other hand, the act of repairing buildings and infrastructure damaged by wind and water leads to an increase in spending in the construction sector. Suppliers of the goods and services needed to get things back to normal will see additional opportunities due to Harvey. Replacing personal items, vehicles, furniture, and everything else will increase retail activity in the region. These benefits partially offset the overall losses.

In an effort to offer an initial quantification of possible outcomes, we analyzed the potential economic impact of a storm of Harvey's magnitude on overall economic activity. This analysis reflects a dynamic pattern of recovery typical of property loss and economic responses on past major Gulf Coast storms. We fully accounted for the significance of the refining and port infrastructure in the area and its linkage to overall national activity. We also considered the latest information regarding insurance patterns and typical patterns in Federal aid. In addition, the offsetting effects of the rebuilding process were included. (It's a complex process, but we have analyzed similar issues related to Gulf Coast storms on numerous occasions.)

We used our US Multi-Regional Impact Assessment System and our econometric models to measure the dynamic effects of Hurricane Harvey on the economy based on the most current estimates of damages and losses. The Impact Assessment System essentially measures the economic responses to a stimulus; in other words, it counts the successive rounds of business activity set off by the stimulus (in this case, the hurricane). The system has been in use for more than 35 years (with updates and refinements) and has been utilized on hundreds of occasions by clients ranging from large government agencies to private sector firms; it has also been peer reviewed.

Based on this model, we estimate that when multiplier effects and the various positive and negative aspects of the economics of the storm are considered, the impact of Hurricane Harvey could include losses to the U.S. economy (which would be observed over an extended period of time) of $145 billion in real gross domestic product (constant 2009 dollars), $95.9 billion in real personal income, and more than one million person-years of employment.

The bulk of the impact falls on Texas and Louisiana, with Texas seeing losses of $110.3 billion in real gross state product.

BBB warns consumers of price gouging at the pump in Harvey's wake

BETTER BUSINESS BUREAU

The destruction left by Hurricane Harvey has caused many Texas residents to rush to the pump, resulting in long lines and in some cases supply shortages. Unfortunately, some gas stations may take advantage of the high demand of fuel.

According to the Texas Attorney General, the agency received 500 complaints last week regarding allegations of high gas prices in Dallas, including amounts ranging from $6-$8 dollars per gallon. The Attorney General warned gas stations against any attempt to take advantage of Texas consumers by fraudulent action in the wake of Hurricane Harvey.

Price gouging is illegal, and the Office of the Attorney General has authority to prosecute any business that engages in price gouging after a disaster has been declared by the Governor. The Texas Deceptive Trade Practices-Consumer Protection Act forbids selling or leasing fuel, food, medicine or another necessity at an excessive price.

The AG's office has stated in most cases the price at the pump is not due to price gouging. However, they are prepared to act if gas prices in a Governor declared disaster area spike beyond what the normal market forces set.

If you or someone you know has experienced price gouging, BBB has the following advice.

■ Contact law enforcement. Victims of the fraud can call the attorney general's Consumer Protection Hotline at 1-800-621-0508, emailing consumeremergency@oag.texas.gov, or filing a complaint online at www.texasattorneygeneral.gov. Consumers are encouraged to submit photos or copies of their gas receipts along with their complaint.

■ Report it on BBB's Scam Tracker. In addition to contacting the attorney general, consumers are encouraged to report scams to BBB's Scam Tracker. BBB's Scam Tracker allows consumers to keep track of scams in their area. It also helps BBB investigate and warn others by reporting what you know.

Harvey, Irma show value of Strategic Petroleum Reserve, energy experts say

By Jordan Blum
Houston Chronicle

The U.S. this year began the process of slowly selling a large chunk of its Strategic Petroleum Reserve through 2025.

But after refinery outages and temporary fuel shortages caused by Hurricane Harvey in Texas and the potential for further disruptions as Irma approaches Florida, energy experts on Friday said the nation's emergency reserves are proving to be valuable.

It's foolish to "mindlessly sell it off" as President Donald Trump has proposed in his budget, said Bob McNally, energy adviser for former President George W. Bush and a fellow at Columbia University's Center on Global Energy Policy. Trump proposed selling nearly half of the remaining reserves over a decade to reduce the federal debt.

These storms show the value of an ample Strategic Petroleum Reserve, McNally said.

The reserve, the world's largest stockpile of emergency oil, is held in four salt caverns in Texas and Louisiana. The largest is south of Houston, at Bryan Mound in Freeport.

After Harvey shut down nearly 25 percent of the nation's fuel-making capacity along the Texas Gulf Coast, Energy Secretary Rick Perry authorized the release of 5.3 million barrels of crude oil to refineries owned by Phillips 66, Valero Energy and Marathon Petroleum. That oil is supposed to be replenished by the companies as part of their contracts.

Those release provided the refineries with enough crude to produce gasoline. Nevertheless, fuel prices spiked and there was a run on gasoline at stations throughout Texas.

The petroleum reserve was created in 1975, two years after the Arab oil embargo, to ensure the country couldn't be held hostage by foreign oil interests.

But the current U.S. shale oil boom is evidence to some that the U.S. produces enough oil and no longer needs large reserves.

The U.S. has about 675 million barrels of oil in the reserve. But, dating back to 2015, Congress has authorized the sale of about 190 million barrels of oil to fill budget holes. By 2025, the reserve could be 25 percent smaller, and Trump wants to deplete it further.

The current sentiment in Washington is that a strong reserve is no longer needed, said Guy Caruso, a former chief of the U.S. Energy Information Administration under Bush who's now a senior adviser at the Center for Strategic and International Studies, a nonpartisan think tank.

"The mood in Congress tends to lean more toward selling off the SPR than adding to it," Caruso said.

Ernest Moniz, a U.S. energy secretary under President Barack Obama, has argued in favor of modernizing, rather than shrinking, the reserve, so the oil can more easily be tapped into and moved to where it's needed. The reserve can help stabilize oil prices, he's said in recent months.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Sunday, Sept. 10, 2017:

This year offers many opportunities that stem from those you know. Personal exchanges and a better sense of direction help you bond more easily. Be willing to make a dream a reality. If you are single, you will meet someone with ease. But alas, is this the right person? Time will be your friend in the pursuit of your answer. If you are attached, the two of you consciously achieve a long-term goal, which could involve a special trip or travel of some sort. TAURUS could be even more stubborn than you.

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
★★★★ Opt to incorporate a more mental or spiritual slant into your day. A conversation over a meal or even just walking can root out more of your feelings toward an older or creative person. You will be drawn to new experiences. Tonight: Put on a favorite piece of music. This Week: You might say what you want, but the anger behind the words might be all that others hear.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
★★★★★ Your steadfast perspective allows greater stability, making risk-taking more acceptable and less destabilizing. A loved one wants to tap into your perspective. Appreciate this person's sensitivity while helping him or her support him- or herself. Tonight: Incorporate a favorite dessert. This Week: You might opt for a new approach to managing your funds.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
★★★★★ One-on-one relating elicits more vulnerability and authenticity. However, be sure to take some personal time for yourself. Building a stronger tie with greater security will be the natural outcome. Tonight: Time for some celebration! This Week: Go for what you want.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)
★★★★ You could be wondering how to bring up a hot topic with a certain group of friends. There might not be a "right" way; just dive right in. Ask for a loved one's feedback, if need be. Be careful, as others' responses are not likely to be what you had anticipated. Tonight: At a favorite haunt. This Week: Don't hold back.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
★★★★★ You could see a personal matter in a new light once you start opening up and discussing it with someone who has had a similar experience. Often there is a discrepancy between how we view a personal matter and what others see. Be more willing to listen to what others have to say. Tonight: Your treat. This Week: You are a star wherever you go.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
★★★★ You could see a personal issue much differently from how you have in the recent past. Others discover how much more relaxed and understanding you have become. These qualities were always in you, but you didn't choose to express them until now. Tonight: Don't resist a new experience! This Week: Be prepared to take the lead on a project.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
★★★★ Relate directly to one individual and understand more of his or her logic. You cannot change what is going on, but you can accept it. You might realize that recent events were not directed toward you. Tonight: Be a duo. This Week: See what is possible before returning to the same old routine.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)
★★★★★ Understand the importance of a discussion that someone else initiates. You might not be able to change the conversation, but you can gain insight into this person. Don't take this relationship for granted. Tonight: Stay centered, but process the topic at hand. This Week: Enjoy others trying to impress you.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
★★★★ You could be in the midst of a major change. Others might not be as aware of what has been going on as you might like. Be open, and you'll gain a better perspective of what to do and when. An older friend could be demanding. Tonight: Someone admires you. This Week: Realize what others want, whether they verbalize it or not.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
★★★★ Deal directly with a loved one who means a lot to you; he or she often has been a source of unusual yet valid ideas. Investigate new possibilities without committing. Your creativity surges because of this person. Tonight: Break past a self-imposed restriction. This Week: Remain more easy going, but don't lose the quality of efficiency.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
★★★★ A personal matter could occupy your time. You might want to spend more time at home with your family. Some of you will opt for some extra R and R. Whatever you choose to do, you will want to keep matters uncomplicated. Tonight: Special time for a loved one. This Week: Make it a point to understand where a child is coming from.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
★★★★ Others seek you out. Fortunately, you might be more receptive than you have been in the recent past. Once you finish a round of calls, texts and emails, make or confirm plans to be with a favorite person. Social as you are, you need quality time with a loved one. Tonight: Add more spice to a bond. This Week: Come to terms with what is possible before saying "yes" or "no."

$73 billion in real personal income, and 771.6 thousand job years when multiplier effects are considered. The losses in Louisiana over time are estimated at $8.7 billion in real gross state product, $5.7 billion in real personal income, and 60.8 thousand job years.

These values represent about 7 percent of the annual output and income levels of Texas. However, they don't happen all at once but will instead be felt irregularly over an extended period. The effect on the Texas economy is clearly significant, but even so, it is not likely to derail the state's long-term pattern of growth for a significant period of time. The underlying forces driving regional growth have not been fundamentally altered. The pace of recovery will depend on many factors, some of them related to public policy responses in a difficult legislative environment. In the end, however, the Gulf Coast economy will resume its expansionary path.

cate, it begs the question: "Where is a prosecutor's time best spent?"

Between Jan. 1, 2016 and Sept. 4, 2017, the Midland County District Attorney's Office received 192 cases that involve child victims under the age of 17. That is one case approximately every three days. These offenses often involve facts where the perpetrator is someone the victim is related to or lives with and loves. Unfortunately, these types of crimes also involve details that would make many adults uncomfortable to speak about. Hopefully, the child victim has the support of their family. However, there are cases where the family does not believe the child or has turned its back on them altogether. Either way, somewhere along the line, someone has betrayed that child's trust.

Once the case is received in the District Attorney's Office, a specific felony prosecutor is assigned. They review the case to determine if there is enough evidence to prove the case beyond a reasonable doubt. The prosecutor will then meet with the family and the child to walk them through the criminal justice system. This is often unfamiliar and scary territory. The most commonly asked questions is, "Will my child have to testify?" The answer is overwhelmingly, "Yes." Not only is the possibility of testifying at trial terrifying for the parent, but also for the child. The prosecutor has to work closely with the family and the child to prepare them for trial. This requires that the prosecutor ensure the child is telling the truth before subsequently presenting their testimony to a jury. We do this through a series of meetings, interviews, and even taking children to the courtroom to familiarize them with the layout.

These prosecutions take an enormous amount of time and resources to see that justice is done — and that is appropriate because we are not only dealing with child victims, but we are also dealing with the potential liberty of the alleged defendant. These are serious cases that need serious attention.

It is for these reasons that specialty courts like the Veterans Treatment Court, the Mental Health Court and the newly established Drug Court are so important. Many people who are addicted to narcotics enter the criminal justice system because of controlled substances or because they have committed a non-violent crime, like shoplifting, so they can purchase controlled substances. For years, the answer to that type of criminal behavior was to incarcerate them. However, warehousing non-violent offenders is costly to Midlanders, does not contribute positively to public safety, and does not lead the perpetrator to take responsibility for their actions. Violent offenders, on the other hand, need to be tried expediently and incarcerated sufficiently to protect the community.

As the district attorney, I have to ensure that the resources available to the prosecutors are being used as efficiently and effectively as possible.

I want to make sure we are addressing the crime and the offender in a way that deters bad behavior while offering opportunities for non-violent offenders to take responsibility for their actions and become productive members of society. Specialty courts, especially the Drug Court, offer that alternative. Specialty court programs require a lot of hard work of the defendant. A defendant must be willing to accept responsibility for their actions and express a desire to address their substance abuse issues before they are accepted into a specialty court. Once a defendant accepts responsibility, the court will work with them through a series of phases to establish stability and sobriety. Responsibility, stability and sobriety are at the core of ensuring that a defendant will not reoffend and thus become a productive Midlander.

Utilizing the resources available through specialty courts provides prosecutors the time to focus necessary attention on crimes against children and dangerous offenders and still have sufficient resources remaining to properly assist victims of crime. All while keeping a careful eye on the dollars Midland taxpayers send us to steward.

At the end of the day, justice is a community-wide effort and the District Attorney's Office is proud and eager to serve that effort as effectively and efficiently as possible. We aim to see that non-violent offenders have a path to personal responsibility, seek restoration and healing for crime victims, and will do all that we can to see that we reserve ample resources to ensure those who truly endanger our city are off the streets.

I would also like to encourage citizens to visit the Midland County District Attorney's Office on Facebook. You can message us with concerns or ideas.

Police: Money, drugs behind Arlington slayings

Associated Press

ARLINGTON — A Texas medical examiner's office says a man whose dismembered body was found at separate locations in Arlington was shot to death, as was his girlfriend.

Police Lt. Christopher Cook told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram that the slaying of 27-year-old Erick "Diablo" Zelaya is believed to be the result of illegal drugs and money.

Cook says Zelaya's 17-year-old girlfriend, Iris Chirinos, may have been targeted simply because she was with Zelaya when he was killed.

The Tarrant County medical examiner's office ruled Friday that both victims died of gunshot wounds.

Zelaya's head was found Sept. 2 near a walking trail in a wooded area. The rest of his body and Chirinos' body were later found buried behind an Arlington house after investigators acted on a tip.

Two suspects were arrested. Jail records on Saturday show one was no longer in custody, while the second was being held on suspicion of murder.

County set to adopt budget, tax rate

From staff reports

Midland County is scheduled to adopt a 2017-18 budget and a tax rate during the Commissioners' Court meeting Monday. Residents will have the opportunity to share comments about the budget before the adoption.

The county proposed a $70 million general fund budget for the upcoming fiscal year, an amount that includes $43.4 million for personnel expenditures and $26.6 million for operating expenditures.

Also, the proposed budget estimates general fund revenue totals at $68.5 million, with sales tax and property tax as the top revenue sources. It anticipates a general fund revenue balance of $61.3 million at the end of this fiscal year and $53.5 million at the end of 2017-18.

The county proposed a tax rate of 15.5992 cents per $100 valuation, which is more than 9 percent above the effective rate of 14.1823 cents. Midland County commissioners previously heard residents' comments about the proposed rate at two public hearings.

At Monday's meeting, commissioners will discuss and take action on budget requests from Midland County department heads and elected officials. The commissioners' decisions could change amounts in the budget.

Following the action item, the meeting agenda includes a public hearing on the budget and the adoption of a budget and tax rate.

Nearly $3 million in Hotel/Motel Fund expenditures go before the council

From staff reports

The Midland City Council will make decisions at its meeting Tuesday regarding more than $2.839 million in Hotel/Motel funding.

Of the $2,839,766 to be voted on, more than 71 percent is slotted to go to the Midland Chamber of Commerce, according to city documents. That money includes CVB ($1.372 million), Sports and Entertainment Association of Midland ($250,000), Star-Spangled Salute ($75,000) and Midland Convention Center operations ($325,967).

Other larger contributions from the hotel-motel fund include:

- $160,000 to the Arts Council of Midland;
- $125,800 to the Midland Softball Association;
- $50,000 to the High Sky Wing;
- $50,000 to the Museum of the Southwest;
- $46,000 to Midland United Girls Softball (MUGS);
- $44,000 to City of Midland Aquatics.

According to a city report on Hotel/Motel Fund requests, there were 30 requesting agencies, and the Hotel-Motel Fund board allocated $3,236,560 for fiscal year 2017-18 — a 5 percent reduction from last year.

The Hotel/Motel tax can be provided for organizations that put "heads in beds," according to the state. The Texas Municipal League has written that funded projects must attract overnight tourists to the city's hotels and motels, thus promoting the hotel industry.

Expenditures, according to the TML, also must fit into one of nine statutorily authorized categories, including convention and visitors centers, convention registration, advertising the city, promotion of the arts, historical restoration and preservation, sports events in a county with less than 1 million in population, enhancing or upgrading sports facilities or sports fields, tourist transportation systems and signage directing the public to sights and attractions that are visited frequently by hotel guests in the city.

Other Hotel/Motel Fund requests on this agenda include:

- 3:23 Ministries, $38,000
- Bush Tennis Center, $30,000
- Bush Childhood Home, $15,000
- I-20 Wildlife Preserve, $15,000
- Midland Community Theatre, $30,000
- Midland County Public Library Foundation, $30,000
- Midland High Basketball boosters, $12,000
- Midland Hispanic Chamber, $30,000
- Midland Storytelling Festival, $15,000
- Permian Basin Opera, $15,000
- Permian Basin Petroleum Museum, $30,000
- Sibley Learning Center Foundation, $1,800
- Promising Projects (Tall City Blues Fest), $15,000
- Wayne Needham Ultimate Calf Roping, $14,000
- UTPB (intercollegiate athletics), $20,000
- West Texas Classic Softball, $15,000

Other organizations not on this agenda

- Midland Athletic Association Tournament of Champions, $20,000
- Midland College Athletics, $45,000
- Midland County Fair, $50,000
- Rock the Desert, $50,000

MDC

From 1A

Weir signed its end of the agreement Friday morning. The MDC board will vote Monday on its end of the bargain. Here's a brief rundown of what's involved:

- Weir will build a $20 million building and spend $9.6 million on so-called personal property, such as fixture and furnishings, which puts the 96,000-square-foot facility's tally at about $30 million.
- Weir will buy 20 acres of land at a price of $20,000 per acre; however, it won't be on the tax rolls at that rate. Rather, the land will be valued at $65,000 an acre.
- The MDC will offer Weir a $1.8 million forgivable loan to be paid in five equal installments for keeping a payroll of no less than $6 million for five years. Starting payroll must be $870,000.
- The MDC will pay Weir $1.35 million to have infrastructure such as water and sewer lines built on the entire 73.62 tract of land, an investment the MDC was obligated to make no matter which entity occupied the property.

This seems like a good deal for all parties involved. Weir currently has three facilities in the area: two in Odessa and one in Midland County. After a similar deal fell through with the city of Odessa in May, Weir contemplated building its customer service facility in Oklahoma, taking many local jobs with it. That's when the MDC stepped in.

The result will be the creation of more jobs in Midland, an expansion of the tax base and improvement in servicing the oil and gas industry. Plus, MDC officials estimate the remaining 50 acres at the business park could be worth at least $80,000 per acre after infrastructure is in place.

If you're keeping score, that's about $3.2 million to bring a $30 million facility to Midland. It's an example of Hilliard's mantra of turning "small dollars into large dollars." In the pre-Hilliard-at-the-helm era, the MDC spent large dollars in a few high-risk aerospace diversification efforts that haven't panned out yet.

Today, the MDC makes many practical and diverse small-dollar, low-risk investments in development.

It has put a few million dollars each toward several transportation projects such as the Loop 250 overpass at county roads 1150 and 60, a $21.5 million project slated to begin in 2019. The MDC put several million dollars toward bringing chemical and electrical engineering programs to the University of Texas of the Permian Basin engineering college, a new building for which is being built in the city of Midland.

The MDC has also invested in drawing quality physicians to the area, expanding vocational education for high school students, starting an entrepreneurship program and constructing a maker space at the Center for Energy and Economic Development to help the next great invention be developed in Midland, not elsewhere.

While aerospace has defined the MDC's strongest efforts the past five years, its future involves much more. The wider net covers transportation, infrastructure, education, health care and entrepreneurship, along with aerospace.

Economic development should be more than big bets on a single area of investment, and the MDC's new philosophy sets the stage for great, diverse returns.

Rail Runner eyes service cuts amid mandated safety upgrades

Associated Press

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. — Expensive federal safety standards may force New Mexico to cut service levels for the state's commuter rail line, state officials said.

The Rail Runner is facing a short deadline and an estimated $50 million cost to implement a state-of-the-art train safety system called Positive Train Control, KRQE-TV in Albuquerque reported.

State officials acknowledge the Rail Runner is unlikely to meet a Dec. 31, 2018, deadline for installing the safety system. They have submitted a limited operations plan that may result in a reduction in the number of daily passenger trains.

The Rio Metro Regional Transit District believes it will take $50 million to get the system installed on Rail Runner's 96-mile track between Santa Fe and Belen, Rio spokeswoman Augusta Meyers said. The transit district oversees the Rail Runner.

"When you stick a $50 million price tag on a safety enhancement, it is a burden," Meyers said.

The required technology upgrade is an automatic, computer controlled braking system. It uses GPS satellites, radio towers and ground sensors to track where trains are moving and how fast they're going.

The safety system is aimed at preventing high-speed derailments or crashes.

In 2008, federal lawmakers passed a bill mandating the installation of Positive Train Control on all passenger rail systems. Lawmakers originally set 2015 as the deadline to install the system. That deadline has since been extended to Dec. 31, 2018.

But since 2008, Rio Metro and the state have only set aside a fraction of the money needed for the technology.

While train operators say the Rail Runner has been involved in 17 crashes since it first began service in 2006, Meyers told KRQE News 13 that none of the incidents could have been prevented by a Positive Train Control safety system.

The Rail Runner has submitted a "formal request for limited operations," according to a quarterly progress report that the Rail Runner submitted to the Federal Railroad Administration on the safety system implementation in August.

Almanac forecast: Hurricanes will favor Atlantic Seaboard

By Kathy McCormack
Associated Press

CONCORD, N.H. — The annual Old Farmer's Almanac, which claims an 80 percent accuracy rate in its forecasts, predicted the possibility of a major hurricane along the Atlantic Seaboard, but didn't have the same insight about the Gulf Coast.

When it came out a year ago, the venerable guide to weather, planting and homespun advice said the best chances for a major hurricane this year would be in the early part of September, from Florida to North Carolina. As of Friday, there were three active hurricanes in the Atlantic and Gulf of Mexico, with Hurricane Irma remaining a powerful threat to Florida. And the hurricane season still has two more months to go.

Almanac compilers in Dublin, New Hampshire, base predictions on a "secret formula" going back to 1792 that's influenced by sunspots, climatology and meteorology and refined by modern scientific calculations.

Almanac editor Janice Stillman said a hurricane the size and scope of Harvey would've been difficult to forecast.

"The Gulf Coast was not in our direct line of sight, so to speak," she said. "It was not a named area, although, it's certainly a normal target, if you will, for hurricanes at any time."

Believed to be North America's oldest continuously published periodical, the almanac is not to be confused with The Farmer's Almanac based in Maine, which is in its 200th year and came out last month.

The 226th edition of the Old Farmer's Almanac comes out Tuesday, with predictions for 2018.

Although scientists don't trust its unconventional weather formula, it's still a tradition that remains popular with loyal readers. The almanac, founded by Robert B. Thomas, prints 3 million copies a year, and has 1.5 million Facebook followers. It also produces garden guides, newsletters, cookbooks as well as a special almanac for children every two years.

Among its articles this year are 33 "stellar" moments in time, little-known facts about parsley, and a salute to chiffons, such as the fabric, the singing group and the baked goods. Trends getting attention include stylists re-creating hairstyles of ancient Romans, real estate agents using neighborhood "walk scores" to sell houses, and "doga" class — for dogs doing yoga with their owners.

Almanac reader Kate Bowen, 35, of Putney, Vermont, is among a group of farmers profiled in its main article on the growing number of ethnically, racially and culturally diverse farmers in the United States.

Bowen, who with her husband expanded the farm from just selling forest products to raising livestock, is an advocate for protecting farms, helping veterans on the farm, and getting a fair price for food.

"I've actually always loved the almanac and we've always had a copy around our farm and found it interesting, especially the stuff about the moon cycles," she said. "We've always enjoyed hoping for a lot of snow."

Hurricane Irma lashes Cuba; Jose poses threat elsewhere

By Desmond Boylan

CAIBARIEN, Cuba — Irma battered Cuba with deafening winds and relentless rain Saturday, while a second hurricane, Jose, threatened to lash already-reeling islands elsewhere in the Caribbean.

Cuban coastal cities were clobbered by high winds from Irma that upended trees, toppled utility poles and scattered debris across streets.

Roads were blocked, and witnesses said a provincial museum near the eye of the storm was in ruins.

There were no immediate reports of casualties in Cuba in addition to the 22 dead left in Irma's wake across the Caribbean, where the storm ravaged such lush resort islands as St. Martin, St. Barts, St. Thomas, Barbuda and Anguilla.

Many of Irma's victims fled their battered islands on ferries and fishing boats for fear Jose would destroy or drench anything Irma left untouched.

On the Dutch side of St. Martin, an island divided between French and Dutch control, an estimated 70 percent of the homes were destroyed by Irma, according to the Dutch government.

Officials said Jose was forecast to dump more rain on the island's buildings, many of which lost their roofs to Irma.

The U.S. State Department helped more than 500 Americans fly out of St. Martin, starting with those in need of urgent medical care, said spokeswoman Heather Nauert.

Carol Basch, a 53-year-old tourist from Savannah, Georgia, took refuge during the storm in the bathroom of her St. Martin hotel room after windows shattered.

She stayed there praying for about four hours, surrounding herself with pillows.

"I kept saying, 'Lord, please stop this, and soon, soon,'" said Basch, who was evacuated to Puerto Rico. "I'm glad I'm alive. I didn't think I was going to make it."

Some islands received a last-minute reprieve from Jose as it passed by.

The U.S. National Hurricane Center downgraded a hurricane warning for Barbuda and Anguilla.

A hurricane watch also was discontinued for nearby Antigua.

By late Saturday afternoon, Irma passed Cuba and slowly chugged toward Florida with winds of 125 mph (205 kmh).

Jose was 85 miles (135 kilometers) northeast of the Leeward Islands, with winds of 145 mph (230 kmh).

As Irma rolled in, Cuban soldiers went through coastal towns to force people to evacuate, taking people to shelters at government buildings and schools — and even caves.

Video images from northern and eastern Cuba showed uprooted utility poles and signs, many downed trees and extensive damage to roofs.

Eastern Cuba, a major sugarcane-growing area and home to many poor, rural communities, faced a staggering recovery, with its economy in tatters even before the storm hit due to years of neglect and lack of investment.

Civil Defense official Gergorio Torres said authorities were trying to tally the extent of the damage, which appeared concentrated in banana-growing areas.

More than 5,000 tourists were evacuated from the keys off Cuba's north-central coast, where the government has built dozens of all-inclusive resorts in recent years.

In much of central Cuba, power was cut off and downed trees blocked roads.

In Caibarien, a small coastal city about 200 miles (320 kilometers) east of Havana, winds downed power lines and a three-block area was under water.

Many residents stayed put, hoping to ride out the storm.

Looting was reported on St. Martin. Curfews were imposed there and on St. Barts, and French and Dutch authorities announced plans to send hundreds more troops and police to keep order.

French President Emmanuel Macron, whose popularity has been sinking over unpopular domestic policies, held an emergency meeting as he came under criticism from stranded residents in the country's Caribbean territories.

Far-right leader Marine Le Pen, who lost the presidential election in May, accused the government of having "totally insufficient" emergency and security measures.

French Prime Minister Edouard Philippe insisted that the government's support for Irma's victims isn't "empty words" and that it was "completely mobilized" to rescue and rebuild.

It was not immediately known whether U.S. President Donald Trump's luxury property on St. Martin had been damaged.

The storm peeled off her roof, rained water inside, and sheared paint from her walls.

"Our hurricane-proof door was bending in, it was warping ... and the entire house was shaking like it was an earthquake," she said.

Thompson, the head of the English department at Anguilla's only high school, said: "I don't even know something that's not destroyed. There's nothing here that hasn't been ripped apart by Irma."

Few cities can handle Amazon's new headquarters

■ COMMENTARY

By Conor Sen
Bloomberg View

Which cities will lead the economy of tomorrow? And who will decide? Often it's an amorphous mass of companies and people over time, drifting to where land is cheap and weather is warm. Sometimes it's one company, choosing in one moment. Like now, when Amazon decides where to locate its second corporate headquarters.

The scale of Amazon.com Inc.'s undertaking — over time, needing up to 8 million square feet of office space and 50,000 well-paid employees — is unlike anything seen in recent memory. The only thing comparable would be cities bidding for the Summer Olympics. Amazon's Request for Proposal narrows the list significantly in terms of the number of cities realistically able to bid for such a project.

First, the labor force needs for the headquarters dramatically shrink the number of metro areas able to bid. Amazon says it's considering metro areas of a million or more, but realistically to provide 50,000 employees a metro area is going to need to be significantly larger than that.

Consider a place like Pittsburgh. Its metro area is 2.35 million people, and its labor force is 1.2 million. But the size of its labor force hasn't grown in 25 years. Even with the talent its well-respected universities produce ... is Amazon, a company that thinks of growth in terms of decades, going to locate a headquarters in a place where it might have to hire over 4 percent of the metro area's labor force with uncertainty over whether that labor force will ever grow?

The next factor that will reduce the list of possibilities is the need for a suitable international airport. It's hard to say what exactly constitutes an international airport — you can fly from Hartford, Connecticut, to Canada — but as with everything Amazon does, higher volumes or higher capacity will probably be seen as more favorable. The list of most-trafficked international airports is full of the usual suspects — large coastal cities and major airline hubs. One additional factor to consider is that the airlines with the highest market share in Amazon's hometown of Seattle are Alaska Airlines, which serves primarily West Coast destinations, and Delta Air Lines, which is based in Atlanta.

Once you've winnowed the list to large metropolitan areas with robust international airports, other considerations come into play. Amazon says "a highly educated labor force is critical and a strong university system is required." Would that take cities like Dallas and Charlotte out of consideration, or would being a couple hours from highly respected universities be good enough?

Costs are stated as an important factor as well. It's "easy" to identify large metro areas with robust airports and deep, educated talent pools, but those tend to be tremendously expensive. Being in Seattle, Amazon surely sees how much being based in Seattle, which is cheaper than the San Francisco Bay Area, helps with recruiting. It might make sense for an expansion of five thousand employees, but will Amazon really try to hire 50,000 employees in a metro like Vancouver, San Francisco, Toronto, Boston, New York or Washington — an area that's already expensive?

Tax incentives play a role too. To some extent this is a question of "who wants it the most." For all other considerations, Chicago would be an attractive destination. But the city and state are broke. Are Chicago and Illinois willing to offer billions of dollars in tax incentives, trying to compete with younger, "hungrier" Sun Belt metros? And Chicago's another metro area with no clear prospects for labor force growth, even if its existing talent base is large and deep.

There are some softer cultural factors that are difficult to quantify as well. Will flirtations with anti-gay laws under a guise of "religious liberty" (and anti-trans "bathroom bills") hurt the causes of the large metro areas in North Carolina, Georgia and Texas? Will Toronto's case be helped or hurt by the political environment under President Donald Trump? (After all, he has waged a personal war against Amazon.) Will Washington's case be strengthened by Amazon CEO Jeff Bezos's purchase of The Washington Post? Will geographic diversity — perhaps a place in a time zone other than Pacific — be seen as attractive?

This is the Olympics of corporate relocations. The winning city will be able to offer a large metro area, a deep and educated talent pool with a strong local university system, a robust international airport, sufficient highway and transit infrastructure, a reasonable cost of living, a welcoming culture, a business-friendly environment, likely eye-popping tax incentives, and a local business and political community able to work together to make a convincing pitch.

By my tally, the options are: Toronto, Boston, Washington, Atlanta, Dallas or Denver.

What you need to know about the Equifax data breach

NEW YORK — Equifax, one of the three main credit reporting companies, said last week that a major data breach exposed Social Security numbers and other important information of millions of people.

The breach affected about 143 million in the United States, as well as some people in Canada and the United Kingdom, but Equifax didn't provide a number. Hackers had access to the data between May and July, Equifax said. The company discovered the hack on July 29 and publicly announced it more than a month later on Thursday.

Here's what else you need to know about the breach:

What information was taken?

Hackers had access to Social Security numbers, birth dates, addresses, driver's license numbers, credit card numbers and other information. Those are all crucial pieces of personal data that criminals could use to commit identity theft. Those are what John Ulzheimer, an independent credit consultant who previously worked at Equifax, called "the crown jewels of personal information."

Equifax's security lapse could be the largest theft involving Social Security numbers, one of the most common methods used to confirm a person's identity in the U.S. The data breach is especially damaging to Equifax, since its entire business revolves around being a secure storehouse and providing a clear financial profile of consumers that lenders and other businesses can trust. The credit profiles it holds contain personal information, like how much people owe on their houses and whether they have court judgments against them.

Am I affected?

Equifax set up a site, equifaxsecurity2017.com, where you can type in your last name and six digits of your Social Security number to find out if your data may have been compromised. Consumers can also call 866-447-7559 for information. The company says it will send mail to all who had personally identifiable information stolen.

Equifax is also offering free credit monitoring for a year. The company says the service will search suspicious sites for your Social Security number, give you access to your Equifax report and other offerings. You can sign up at the same site listed above, and the deadline to do so is Nov. 21.

Initially, though, there was a catch — signing up would also commit you to binding arbitration with the credit monitor, which would mean giving up your right to sue. Several politicians and consumer groups have criticized this provision. Democrats in the House and Senate called on the company to pull back that requirement. Late Friday, Equifax said the arbitration language that appears on its website "will not apply to this cybersecurity incident."

What should I do?

You can view your credit reports for free at AnnualCreditReport.com. You're entitled to get a free copy of your credit report from each of the three big agencies once every 12 months. Review it closely for unauthorized accounts or any mistakes.

You can consider freezing your credit reports, but it comes with some downsides. A freeze stops thieves from opening new credit cards or loans in your name, but it also prevents you from opening new accounts. So each time you apply for a credit card, mortgage or loan, you need to lift the freeze a few days beforehand.

Freezes can be done online at the websites of the three credit reporting agencies — Equifax, Experian and TransUnion. You'll need to freeze all three reports for the best protection. Each company will give you a code that you'll need again in order to lift the freeze, so keep it in a safe place. When you plan to apply for a credit card, mortgage, or other loan you'll need to go back to each site and lift the freeze.

The credit reporting agencies may charge a fee, usually under $10, depending on which state you live in. But it's free for residents of some states, including Maine, New Jersey and South Carolina.

A freeze doesn't protect you from everything: thieves can still file a fraudulent tax return in your name or charge things to your already opened credit card accounts. A freeze won't affect your credit score or report. The report stays open and is updated to keep track of your debts, payments and other information.

How did this happen?

Equifax is blaming an unspecified "website application vulnerability." Security experts say it's hard to say for sure without more information, but such vulnerabilities typically don't require a lot of sophistication to exploit.

Rich Mogull, who runs the security research firm Securosis, says the web app breach suggests "things are broken down in a couple of different areas." He says someone likely made a programming or configuration mistake.

Corporate culture could also be a factor. Often, Mogull says, corporate security is underfunded or isn't given the authority it needs to make sure application developers do what's right.

Ryan Kalember of the security company Proofpoint says that even if the vulnerability was known and fixable, "coordination between app developers and security teams in a lot of organizations are not on the best of terms."

For Trump and Ryan, a tortured relationship grows more so

By Erica Werner and Jonathan Lemire

It started out cold as ice, and then turned warm and friendly. Now the tortured relationship between President Donald Trump and House Speaker Paul Ryan has gone cool again, with the Republican president making clear he has no qualms about bucking the GOP leader to cut deals with his Democratic foes.

The two men dined at the White House Thursday night and discussed legislative challenges ahead for the fall, a get-together that was scheduled over Congress' August recess, long before the head-spinning events of last week. In a moment that stunned Washington, Trump cut a debt and disaster aid deal Wednesday with Congress' Democratic leaders as Ryan and Senate Majority Leader Mitch McConnell watched on helplessly, after lobbying unsuccessfully for much different terms.

The moment distilled the inherent tensions between Trump, 71, a former Democrat and ideologically flexible deal-maker, and Ryan, 47, a loyal Republican whose discomfort with Trump led him to withhold his endorsement for weeks last year.

After Trump was elected the two papered over their differences and even developed a rapport, talking frequently during health care negotiations earlier this year, as each understood they needed the other to advance individual and shared goals. But their phone calls have tapered off of late and Trump has expressed his frustration with GOP leaders on multiple fronts, culminating in the president's decision to ditch them and join hands with the Democrats instead.

Trump exulted in his newly bipartisan approach Thursday, declaring it "a great thing for our country," while Ryan mostly grinned and bore it.

At the Capitol on Wednesday, Ryan had deemed a three-month debt ceiling increase as "unworkable" and "ridiculous." Yet an hour later, Trump overruled his strong objections to side with the Democrats.

The president's rebuff on the debt came just days after Trump ignored Ryan's pleas not to end the program to aid immigrants brought to the country as children and living here illegally. Instead, Trump ended the program and tossed the issue to Congress to resolve in six months.

A spokeswoman for Ryan, AshLee Strong, said Friday that the speaker and Trump "have a good relationship and are in frequent communication as the two work to advance the legislative priorities Republicans promised, including tax reform. In fact, they talked five times this week," including the dinner.

The House on Friday passed the $15 billion in disaster aid and a three-month government funding extension, sending it to Trump.

Trump flashes independent streak in pursuit of deal

President Donald Trump was in the mood to celebrate after cutting a big deal with opposition Democrats.

Joshing with Northeastern officials in the Cabinet Room, Trump hailed New York Democrat Andrew Cuomo as "my governor" and traded banter with Senate Democratic leader Chuck Schumer, another fellow New Yorker.

"If you just dropped in from outer space, you wouldn't know what the last eight months have been like," said Rep. Peter King, R-N.Y., recalling the friendly exchanges between Trump and Schumer during the meeting with New York and New Jersey lawmakers.

That would be the same Schumer whom the president had previously slammed as a "clown" and "Cryin' Chuck."

And now?

"In some ways it's almost like they were completing each other's sentences," King said.

On display at that chummy scene Thursday was the Trump who's emerged in full this past week: Trump the independent.

A president who spent months catering to the Republican conservative wing now appears unbound by ideology and untethered by party allegiances.

It's not a complete surprise to his fellow Republicans. They long have worried that Trump, a former Democrat, might shift with the political winds. But Trump's overtures to Democrats have left Republicans in an awkward and perplexing position, undercut by their leader and unsure of what's next.

"Our grass roots are very confused," said Rep. Mark Meadows, R-N.C., head of the conservative House Freedom Caucus, on MSNBC Friday. Meadows said he viewed the deal as a "unique situation because of the devastation in Texas."

Almanac forecast: Hurricanes will favor Atlantic Seaboard

By Kathy McCormack
Associated Press

CONCORD, N.H. — The annual Old Farmer's Almanac, which claims an 80 percent accuracy rate in its forecasts, predicted the possibility of a major hurricane along the Atlantic Seaboard, but didn't have the same insight about the Gulf Coast.

When it came out a year ago, the venerable guide to weather, planting and homespun advice said the best chances for a major hurricane this year would be in the early part of September, from Florida to North Carolina. As of Friday, there were three active hurricanes in the Atlantic and Gulf of Mexico, with Hurricane Irma remaining a powerful threat to Florida. And the hurricane season still has two more months to go.

Almanac compilers in Dublin, New Hampshire, base predictions on a "secret formula" going back to 1792 that's influenced by sunspots, climatology and meteorology and refined by modern scientific calculations.

Almanac editor Janice Stillman said a hurricane the size and scope of Harvey would've been difficult to forecast.

"The Gulf Coast was not in our direct line of sight, so to speak," she said. "It was not a named area, although, it's certainly a normal target, if you will, for hurricanes at any time."

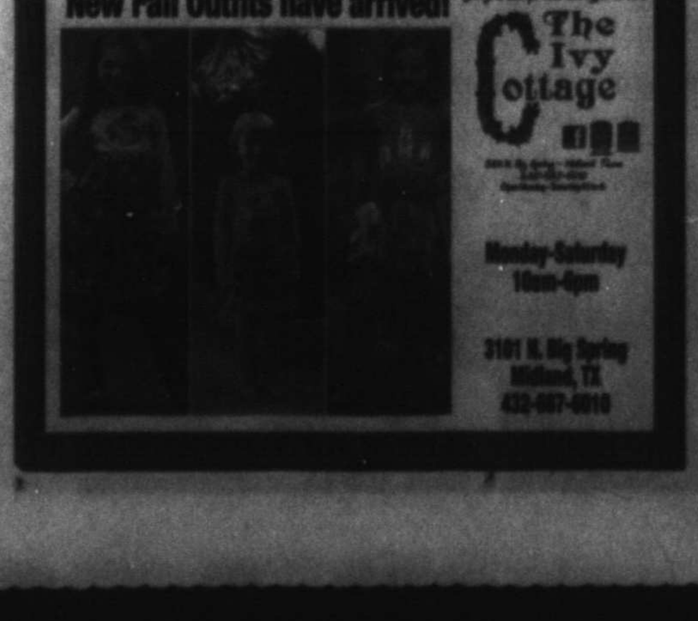
But the city and state are broke. Are Chicago and Illinois willing to offer billions of dollars in tax incentives, trying to compete with younger, "hungrier" Sun Belt metros? And Chicago's another metro area with no clear prospects for labor force growth, even if its existing talent base is large and deep.

There are some softer cultural factors that are difficult to quantify as well. Will flirtations with anti-gay laws under a guise of "religious liberty" (and anti-trans "bathroom bills") hurt the causes of the large metro areas in North Carolina, Georgia and Texas? Will Toronto's case be helped or hurt by the political environment under President Donald Trump? (After all, he has waged a personal war against Amazon.) Will Washington's case be strengthened by Amazon CEO Jeff Bezos's purchase of The Washington Post? Will geographic diversity — perhaps a place in a time zone other than Pacific — be seen as attractive?

This is the Olympics of corporate relocations. The winning city will be able to offer a large metro area, a deep and educated talent pool with a strong local university system, a robust international airport, sufficient highway and transit infrastructure, a reasonable cost of living, a welcoming culture, a business-friendly environment, likely eye-popping tax incentives, and a local business and political community able to work together to make a convincing pitch.

By my tally, the options are: Toronto, Boston, Washington, Atlanta, Dallas or Denver.



What you need to know about the Equifax data breach

NEW YORK — Equifax, one of the three major credit reporting companies, said last week that a major data breach exposed Social Security numbers and other important information of millions of people.

The breach affected about 143 million in the United States, as well as some people in Canada and the United Kingdom, but Equifax didn't provide a number. Hackers had access to the data between May and July, Equifax said. The company discovered the hack on July 29 and publicly announced it more than a month later on Thursday.

Here's what else you need to know about the breach:

What information was taken?

Hackers had access to Social Security numbers, birth dates, addresses, driver's license numbers, credit card numbers and other information. Those are all crucial pieces of personal data that criminals could use to commit identity theft. Those are what John Ulzheimer, an independent credit consultant who previously worked at Equifax, called "the crown jewels of personal information."

Equifax's security lapse could be the largest theft involving Social Security numbers, one of the most common methods used to confirm a person's identity in the U.S. The data breach is especially damaging to Equifax, since its entire business revolves around being a secure storehouse and providing a clear financial profile of consumers that lenders and other businesses can trust. The credit profiles it holds contain personal information, like how much people owe on their houses and whether they have court judgments against them.

Am I affected?

Equifax set up a site, equifaxsecurity2017.com, where you can type in your last name and six digits of your Social Security number to find out if your data may have been compromised. Consumers can also call 866-447-7559 for information. The company says it will send mail to all who had personally identifiable information stolen.

Equifax is also offering free credit monitoring for a year. The company says the service will search suspicious uses for your Social Security number, give you access to your Equifax report and other offerings. You can sign up at the same site listed above, and the deadline to do so is Nov. 21.

Initially, though, there was a catch — signing up would also commit you to binding arbitration with the credit monitor, which would mean giving up your right to sue. Several politicians and consumer groups have criticized the provision. Democrats in the House and Senate called on the company to pull back that requirement. Late Friday, Equifax said the arbitration language that appears on its website "will not apply to this cybersecurity incident."

What should I do?

You can review your credit reports for free at AnnualCreditReport.com. You're entitled to get a free copy of your credit report from each of the three big agencies once every 12 months. Review it closely for unauthorized accounts or any mistakes.

You can consider freezing your credit reports, but it comes with some downsides. A freeze stops thieves from opening new credit cards or loans in your name, but it also prevents you from opening new accounts. So each time you apply for a credit card, mortgage or loan, you need to lift the freeze a few days beforehand.

Freezes can be done online at the websites of the three credit reporting agencies — Equifax, Experian and TransUnion. You'll need to freeze all three reports for the best protection. Each company will give you a code that you'll need again in order to lift the freeze, so keep it in a safe place. When you plan to apply for a credit card, mortgage, or other loan you'll need to go back to each site and lift the freeze.

The credit reporting agencies may charge a fee, usually under $10, depending on which state you live in. But it's free for residents of some states, including Maine, New Jersey and South Carolina.

A freeze doesn't protect you from everything: thieves can still file a fraudulent tax return in your name or charge things to your already opened credit card accounts. A freeze won't affect your credit score or report. The report stays open and is updated to keep track of your debts, payments and other information.

How did this happen?

Equifax is blaming an unspecified "website application vulnerability." Security experts say it's hard to say for sure without more information, but such vulnerabilities typically don't require a lot of sophistication to exploit.

Rich Mogull, who runs the security research firm Securosis, says the web app breach suggests "things are broken down in a couple of different areas." He says someone likely made a programming or configuration mistake.

Corporate culture could also be a factor. Often, Mogull says, corporate security is underfunded or isn't given the authority it needs to make sure application developers do what's right.

Ryan Kalember of the security company Proofpoint says that even if the vulnerability was known and fixable, "coordination between app developers and security teams in a lot of organizations are not on the best of terms."

For Trump and Ryan, a tortured relationship grows more so

By Erica Werner and Jonathan Lemire
Associated Press

It started out cold as ice, and then turned warm and friendly. Now the tortured relationship between President Donald Trump and House Speaker Paul Ryan has gone cool again, with the Republican president making clear he has no qualms about bucking the GOP leader to cut deals with his Democratic foes.

The two men dined at the White House Thursday night and discussed legislative challenges ahead for the fall, a get-together that was scheduled over Congress' August recess, long before the head-spinning events of last week. In a moment that stunned Washington, Trump cut a debt and disaster aid deal Wednesday with Congress' Democratic leaders as Ryan and Senate Majority Leader Mitch McConnell watched on helplessly, after lobbying unsuccessfully for much different terms.

The moment distilled the inherent tensions between Trump, 71, a former Democrat and ideologically flexible deal-maker, and Ryan, 47, a loyal Republican whose discomfort with Trump led him to withhold his endorsement for weeks last year.

After Trump was elected the two papered over their differences and even developed a rapport, talking frequently during health care negotiations earlier this year, as each understood they needed the other to advance individual and shared goals. But their phone calls have tapered off of late and Trump has expressed his frustration with GOP leaders on multiple fronts, culminating in the president's decision to ditch them and join hands with the Democrats instead.

Trump exulted in his newly bipartisan approach Thursday, declaring it "a great thing for our country," while Ryan mostly grinned and bore it.

At the Capitol on Wednesday, Ryan had deemed a three-month debt ceiling increase as "unworkable" and "ridiculous." Yet an hour later, Trump overruled his strong objections to side with the Democrats.

The president's rebuff on the debt came just days after Trump ignored Ryan's pleas not to end the program to aid immigrants brought to the country as children and living here illegally. Instead, Trump ended the program and tossed the issue to Congress to resolve in six months.

A spokeswoman for Ryan, AshLee Strong, said Friday that the speaker and Trump "have a good relationship and are in frequent communication as the two work to advance the legislative priorities Republicans promised, including tax reform. In fact, they talked five times this week," including the dinner.

The House on Friday passed the $15 billion in disaster aid and a three-month government funding extension, sending it to Trump.

Trump flashes independent streak in pursuit of deal

By Erica Werner and Jonathan Lemire
Associated Press

President Donald Trump was in the mood to celebrate after cutting a big deal with opposition Democrats.

Joshing with Northeastern officials in the Cabinet Room, Trump hailed New York Democrat Andrew Cuomo as "my governor" and traded banter with Senate Democratic leader Chuck Schumer, another fellow New Yorker.

"If you just dropped in from outer space, you wouldn't know what the last eight months have been like," said Rep. Peter King, R-N.Y., recalling the friendly exchanges between Trump and Schumer during the meeting with New York and New Jersey lawmakers.

That would be the same Schumer whom the president had previously slammed as a "clown" and "Cryin' Chuck."

And now?

"In some ways it's almost like they were completing each other's sentences," King said.

On display at that chummy scene Thursday was the Trump who's emerged in full this past week: Trump the independent.

A president who spent months catering to the Republican conservative wing now appears unbound by ideology and untethered by party allegiances.

It's not a complete surprise to his fellow Republicans. They long have worried that Trump, a former Democrat, might shift with the political winds. But Trump's overtures to Democrats have left Republicans in an awkward and perplexing position, undercut by their leader and unsure of what's next.

"Our grass roots are very confused," said Rep. Mark Meadows, R-N.C., head of the conservative House Freedom Caucus, on MSNBC Friday. Meadows said he viewed the deal as a "unique situation because of the devastation in Texas."

Trump's deal with Democrats to raise the U.S. borrowing limit and keep the government running for three month months — all in the name of speeding relief to hurricane victims — quickly passed Congress and gave him the opportunity to savor a victory after months of legislative setbacks.

In book, Clinton admits mistakes, casts blame for 2016 loss

In a candid and pointed new book, Hillary Clinton relives her stunning defeat to Donald Trump, admitting to personal mistakes and defending campaign strategy even as her return to the stage refocuses attention on a race Democrats still can't believe they lost.

Clinton is unsparing in her criticism of Trump and also lays out some of the factors she believes contributed to her loss: interference from Russian hackers, accusations leveled at her by former FBI Director James Comey, a divisive primary battle with Bernie Sanders, even her gender. She also addresses common criticisms of her campaign, including the idea that she didn't have a compelling narrative for seeking the presidency and that she ignored Midwestern turf where Trump picked up enough white working-class voters to win several battleground states.

"Some critics have said that everything hinged on me not campaigning enough in the Midwest," Clinton writes in the book "What Happened." "And I suppose it is possible that a few more trips to Saginaw or a few more ads on the air in Waukesha could have tipped a couple of thousand voters here or there."

The iPhone is 10. Where does Apple go from here?

HAYLEY TSUKAYAMA & JENA MCGREGOR
The Washington Post

When Apple chief executive Tim Cook steps onto the stage Tuesday to introduce its 10th anniversary iPhone, tech enthusiasts and business analysts alike will be looking for a glimpse of Apple's future.

It is a high-stakes moment for a company 10 years after it released what was its most revolutionary product of the century: the original iPhone. This iteration could prove a test of its consumer tech dominance as it faces a bevy of challenges: Samsung seems to have resumed its smartphone momentum with the new Galaxy Note 8, Apple trails competitors like Google in the home hub space, Siri's artificial intelligence isn't as advanced as others, and it is losing to Amazon as an entertainment innovator.

For Apple and Cook, some are wondering: Is this the moment they reclaim the mantle as tech's top innovator?

Apple's disruptive reputation was famously first forged by Cook's predecessor Steve Jobs, whose showmanship turned such product announcements into glimmering spectacles of consumer technology. Indeed, Cook will speak in the Steve Jobs Theater on Apple's new $5 billion campus.

"It is a big deal," said Andy Hargreaves, an analyst at Pacific Crest Securities who has a rating similar to a hold on Apple's stock. "They have this space ship new campus where they're holding the event. It is the 10th anniversary. It's supposed to be the most innovative phone they've come out with in years. If they disappoint, it will bear a mark on him."

Cook's tenure at Apple's helm has been characterized by considerable financial success. Apple's share price has climbed 734 percent on his watch, compared with 138 percent for the Standard & Poor's 500 stock index.

It is up close to 60 percent over this point last year, headed into the event, and the company's stockpile of cash topped $250 billion this year. Revenue for Apple's services business over the past four quarters, which includes sales from the iTunes and App stores, reached $27.8 billion — the size of a Fortune 100 company. And Apple has seen its wearable devices — including headphones and watches — become as big as a Fortune 500 company in just a couple of years.

But Apple fans, who crave the days when the company changed the world with revolutionary products, are eager to see more of those industry-disrupting ideas. So far, despite a recognition of the enormous task of repeating the iPhone's runaway success, analysts say nothing under Cook's watch has fit that bill yet for a wide swath of consumers.

"Everybody still wonders if there's going to be a Jobsian twist and we just haven't seen it," said Scott Anthony, managing partner of the consulting firm Innosight, which was founded by Clayton Christensen, a guru in disruptive innovation. "It's hard to denigrate someone who has grown Apple the way he has grown it, but I think the world hungers for an Apple that continues to truly surprise and delight us."

The hope is that the 10th-anniversary edition of the iPhone will offer that. That phone, one of three predicted to be announced this week, is expected to get a design overhaul. Analysts expect wireless charging and a nearly all-screen front with no home button, which will make the phone appear more like a sheet of glass — both features that Samsung has already incorporated. One premium feature they hope to see is advanced cameras for facial recognition, which among other uses could put Apple a step ahead on offering innovative financial transactions.

But Apple's biggest splashes haven't always come from being first with new technology — and aren't always recognized immediately for their impact. Many have struck a chord with consumers because of their polish and industrial design, such as the candy-colored iMac or the sleek iPod, said Tim Bajarin, a longtime Apple analyst from Creative Strategies. A new design, Bajarin said, gives Apple a chance to show the evolution of the company over the past decade — and forecast where it's headed next.

One area where Apple does seem to be making a mark is in augmented reality (AR), which lets developers use the phone's camera to blend the digital and physical worlds. In June, Apple unveiled its ARKit, a set of tools for developers, and Cook has touted it as a big deal: In a recent earnings call, he said, "I think AR is

Floridians say online retailers let them down ahead of Irma

By Adriana Gomez Licon
Associated Press

MIAMI — Maya Kogul was in California when Hurricane Irma began twirling toward Florida. She knew stores would run out of key supplies before she got back to her downtown Miami home earlier this week, so she placed an order for three cases of water through a Nestle water delivery company. She waited and waited, but the order didn't come.

More than 50 Floridians told The Associated Press that they did not receive flashlights, battery-operated radios, boxed milk, water bottles and first-aid kits after placing orders on Amazon.com and Nestle's Ready-Refresh.

Amazon spokeswoman Amanda Ip said that deliveries were experiencing delays because of the weather conditions. ReadyRefresh posted an apology Friday on Twitter for service disruptions and delivery delays.

"It was frustrating having to run around last minute," said Kogul, a 31-year-old mother of a 2-year-old girl. "By delivery date it was already evacuation time. By the time I realized I wasn't getting the delivery, it was almost Thursday evening. I didn't know they were not going to come."

Several customers said that online retailers let them down at the worst possible moment and even before weather deteriorated. They said on Saturday that they received cancellation notifications only after evacuations had begun in their neighborhoods and markets' shelves had emptied. Some had placed orders as early as Monday.

Others said their packages had arrived in Miami but were either stuck at a sorting facility for a few days or delayed because of problems with couriers.

Many of the customers who spoke to the AP said Amazon had directed them to UPS for complaints. The courier said in a statement that their facilities suspended operations as officials rolled out announcements of evacuations, delaying orders that were out for delivery on Thursday and Friday. UPS spokeswoman Jennifer Cook said the company is offering to waive any fees to send their packages to another address that is not under evacuation order.

Mar Enriquez, 41, placed an order on Amazon for what seemed to him like an innovative bag that expands when it comes in contact with water to use as a barrier, like a sandbag. He had heard it worked for friends who braved Hurricane Harvey in Houston, so he bought it on Monday using his Prime membership that offers speedier deliveries. Enriquez was set to leave for New York City on Friday after his suburb was evacuated because of the risk of storm surge.

"On Thursday, they told me everything was fine," he said. But his package got stuck at a sorting facility in the Miami suburb of Doral, probably because couriers were swamped with orders and not able to deliver them all. "You put your confidence on this. You pay for the extra Prime membership, but they failed us in the worst and most-needed moment."

The office of Florida's attorney general was not able to identify whether package delays were widespread. The office said it has received more than 8,000 complaints about alleged price gouging ahead of the storm.

Loyal Amazon customers say they understand the large volume of orders placed this week may have made deliveries impossible, especially as millions were told to evacuate their neighborhood and likely abandon work commitments.

But Christine Huyn, a 38-year-old fitness instructor, said the companies should have been upfront. She ordered a portable air conditioner from Amazon for a room where she will be hunkering with her two children.

"I lost my chance because they guaranteed it would be here. They gave us a false sense of security," she said.

What she remembers the most from Hurricane Andrew in 1992 as a child is how hot it was, and the fact her family had no electricity for weeks.

"I really was crying when they told me it wouldn't be here, because I was thinking of my kids," she said. "The heat is going to be horrendous."

AP Sources: Feds probe Uber's tracking of Lyft drivers

By Tom Krisher and Tom Hays
Associated Press

DETROIT — The Justice Department in Manhattan is investigating whether Uber illegally used software to track drivers for Lyft, its main ride-hailing competitor, to gain an advantage in attracting and recruiting drivers, according to two people familiar with the probe.

The FBI and the U.S. Attorney's Office in New York's Southern District want to know if use of the software, which created fake customer accounts, broke any federal laws, said the people, who didn't want to be identified because they were not authorized to discuss the case publicly.

An Uber spokeswoman said Friday it is cooperating in the probe and that use of the software has been discontinued. The U.S. Attorney's Office would not comment on the case.

The investigation adds to mounting legal problems for Uber, including allegations of corporate espionage involving autonomous vehicle technology and at least one other federal investigation into use of software to thwart local government efforts to monitor its operations. Earlier this year, Uber's board ousted co-founder and CEO Travis Kalanick in a move to fix cultural problems within the company. Last month it replaced him with former Expedia CEO Dara Khosrowshahi, who has inherited the legal troubles.

The latest probe apparently centers on software known inside Uber as "Hell." A federal class-action lawsuit filed by a Lyft driver in San Francisco alleges that Uber developed the "spyware" that allowed it to pose as Lyft customers and gain access to its computer systems. The software let Uber access the location of up to eight Lyft drivers at one time and get their unique Lyft identification number. Uber then used that number to track the drivers' locations, the lawsuit alleged.

big and profound, and this is one of those huge things that we'll look back at and marvel on the start of it."

For instance, a painter could use an app to remotely map the contours and square footage of a room and offer an estimate for the cost without having to visit the home, said Gene Munster, managing partner at Loup Ventures and a longtime Apple analyst. That might be something the painter would be willing to pay, he suggests, $100 a year for, helping to drive up revenue from an App Store that tends to more typically deal in one-time $3 purchases.

In other words, Munster sees the expected move toward AR technology as having a symbiotic relationship with an increasingly critical — if less sexy — part of Apple's business model: its services business. Not only will it be essential to maintaining downloads of apps that will increasingly feature AR tech, but it presents an opportunity for higher value apps and subscriptions that could further drive that revenue growth.

If it works, Munster said, it will be a huge moment for Apple. "I think people won't recognize that it was a defining event until probably two years from now," he said. The event may be being held at the new headquarters - arguably the last product Steve Jobs, who conceived of the campus, ever created — but "I think more broadly it's kind of appropriate that Apple starts down this road of really innovating themselves beyond their core business in this new campus."

Though a small part of Apple's overall revenue, at just 12 percent, its services business has been growing at a double-digit rate in recent years, and will account for an estimated 35 percent of Apple's revenue growth this year.

That's had payoff for the stock. Investors like stability rather than the variability that comes with new technology cycles, Munster said. More sustainable revenue from services could help drive up the stock price. The most exciting expected features for the new, high-end iPhone — the screen, the facial recognition, the new cameras — serve the double purpose of offering cutting-edge hardware that also supports Apple services such as streaming video or Apple Pay.

Not everyone is convinced about AR's potential. "It's unclear to me whether or not AR is a big game changer that can drive software sales or App Store sales for a long period of time," Hargreaves said.

But the steady approach Munster describes fits with the company's management by Cook, who as chief operating officer built the logistics and supply chain system that helped make the iPhone the hit it is now. And analysts expect that Cook will do his best Tuesday to use the next iPhone to tie together past and future, home runs and base hits.

What will matter most is whether consumers, who have slowed their pace of buying new iPhones in the last two years, get the message, said Jan Dawson of Jackdaw Research. "If they're able to launch new iPhones next week that move the needle in terms of growth rate, it goes a long way toward answering those criticisms about Cook's ability to lead Apple."

And while Jobs may always cast a shadow on Apple, that doesn't have to be a bad thing, Bajarin said.

"Steve's legacy is not going away," he said. "They'll continue to drive the company around Steve's vision. But this is, more and more, becoming the company of Tim Cook. And that's why in that sense they can use the 10th anniversary as a critical juncture. It takes on more of Cook's vision and personality — guided by Steve Jobs's vision."

What to expect from the new iPhone

- Three models of the iPhone, most focus on a premium 10th-anniversary version
- Premium model expected to have an all-screen front, with no home button
- 10th-anniversary model will also have a new camera, capable of advanced facial recognition — perhaps for use with Apple Pay
- Wireless charging, potentially on all models
- Compatible with augmented-reality apps

A Confederate memorial 'ain't history if it ain't true'

Editor's note: This op-ed first ran in the Dallas Morning News. We are running it with Williams' permission.

MICHAEL WILLIAMS
Lee graduate

In 1971, I graduated from Robert E. Lee High School in Midland. I was among the first students to attend grades 10-12 together following lengthy litigation. I was an honor student, a star on the track team, Mr. Valuable, and the elected student body vice president. Years later, I joined first lady Laura Bush and Gen. Tommy Franks in the inaugural class of distinguished alumni.

Attending a high school named after the Confederacy's most prominent army general did not significantly assault my young psyche. It did not negatively affect my life's journey. However, I would have greatly appreciated not being led on to the sports battlefield behind the "Stars and Bars" or having to hear the melody for that wretched phrase, "Oh, I wish I was in the land of cotton" at every student event. Hooray! Hooray! Today's black students are relieved of that insult.

Logic and experience counsel against the wholesale indiscriminate removal of all Confederate remembrances, schools, monuments, statues and plaques from state activities or property. We cannot nor ought not attempt to erase evidence of our state and nation's history. Good or bad, that history helps make us who we are. But the continued prominent presence of Confederate iconography on state property requires, at a minimum, that such iconography advance whole, real and legitimate historical truths.

Years ago, the Texas State Historian told me the reason Texas seceded from the Union and fought with the Confederacy. He said clearly and unequivocally slavery was that reason. He shared original source materials that reliably establish that fact.

So, it's impossible to defend iconography like the "Children of the Confederacy Creed" plaque on the Capitol building. The plaque remarkably claims, "that the war between the states was not a rebellion, nor was its underlying cause to sustain slavery."

Let's be honest. That's a lie. That plaque and any other Confederate iconography that purports to lie about the history of the Civil War has no business being affixed to the Capitol of the state of Texas or on any public property. It ain't history if it ain't true.

Midland Lee opened in 1961 just shy of 100 years after Robert E. Lee surrendered to Ulysses S. Grant at Appomattox Courthouse on April 9, 1865. Midlanders undoubtedly intended to honor the southern leader. But the timing suggests something much greater than a nod to antebellum history was at play.

Nearly every Robert E. Lee school in the country commenced after the 1954 United States Supreme Court's seminal decision in Brown v. Board of Education. The message was clear as white Southerners gave the Warren court the proverbial middle finger. "We're still in charge."

For Confederate iconography to remain in a public place of honor it should advance our understanding of whole, real and legitimate historical truths. We fail in that regard

MISD administrators got it wrong with decision about 'Dixie'

ERNEST ANGELO JR.
Former mayor of Midland

I returned to Midland after several months out of the state and was disappointed to learn that political correctness had come to Midland, the last place I expected to see it. The officials at Midland ISD have succumbed to political pressure and prohibited the Lee High School band from playing "Dixie." After more than 50 years of performances that thrilled fans of all races with essentially no complaints, today's "leaders" have panicked and made a decision that affects the whole student body and the community of Midland.

I believe the decision was wrong but equally so was the manner in which it was handled. There was no chance for public input or any opportunity for reasonable debate. If anyone believes this will help bring Midlanders together they are not living in the real world.

The ignorance about U.S. history in general and, in this case, about "Dixie," is so pervasive that I expect no one in the administration knows that it purportedly was written by an Ohioan and first performed in New York City in the late 1850s. It was such a favorite of President Abraham Lincoln that, at a public gathering the day after the Civil War ended, he is quoted as having said "I propose now closing up by playing a certain piece of music. I thought 'Dixie' one of the best tunes I ever heard. I ask the band to give a good turn about it."

An article in the New York Tribune in 1908 said "though 'Dixie' became a song of the South, the hearts of Northern people never grew cold to it. President Lincoln loved it and to the day (1908), it is the most popular song in the country irrespective of section."

My point is that you can forget the good and make something bad out of most anything or anybody. When you start caving to pressure there is no end to it, today "Dixie," tomorrow Robert E. Lee (North East ISD inside San Antonio just did). You cannot change or erase history by "burying your head in the sand," and appeasement will get you nowhere. The radical left and its naive followers already are attacking the existence

Confederate imagery battle is about who we are, who we want to be

Editor's note: Lance Stewart is a graduate of Lee High School and is currently living in Charlottesville, Virginia.

LANCE STEWART
Lee graduate

I have been thinking for some weeks about the question of whether the events in Charlottesville, Virginia, might cause the residents of Midland to consider re-naming Robert E. Lee High School. I recently learned that there is an active, and what seems to be a painful, community discussion underway.

I'm a member of the class of '87, and am proud to have been raised in Midland and attended Midland Lee. Like too many of us, I never returned after college, eventually settling in Charlottesville.

As a youth, I never gave a thought to the name of the school. We students of Lee treated each other with respect, regardless of race or creed, at least in my experience. (I can't pretend to say with any certainty what my minority classmates experienced, or how they felt then or feel today about the name of their high school, the prominent Confederate flag or playing "Dixie" in the band.) I feel that my own experience was likely shaped by the fact that my class was among the first to be bussed between elementary schools; when you play on the schoolground as children, and black and white and Hispanic kids go to each other's 10th birthday parties, your racial attitudes are formed to be open. Or more open, at least, than preceding generations.

I moved to Charlottesville in 1998, a community which finds itself a battleground. Many longtime residents wish well enough had been left alone. Just as many are strident in their desire for change. I have personally been a quiet (honestly, a mute) supporter of removing the statue of Robert E. Lee for years, because it is a stark reminder of past problems in a town that fought school integration and made many poor decisions during that era regarding treatment of African-Americans, which haunt us still today. Charlottesville struggles to find a way to move past our history, and on to a future without explicit or implicit racism. The world now knows of the tragedies that followed the decision to remove the statue. We have deeply felt wounds. We are in shock. We are mustering our courage to go on and to bridge political and racial divides.

But that's Charlottesville. Midland is Midland. Midland hasn't had the same conversations over time, isn't in the eye of the storm of the nation's discussion on race, and will make its own decision in its own time. I get that. I really do. This is not a call for action.

There are some things that I and others around me have learned, though, that I am compelled to share. I don't believe Midland has heard the final word on this debate. If what's happening in Charlottesville and so many other communities is any indication, the dialouge in Midland will likely escalate as old wounds are opened and heated words exchanged. I hope that dialouge can be tempered and shaped by civility, self-honesty and unfearful examination of all of the past.

I want to put in the minds of my friends and fellow alumni one point about the erection of historical monuments and similar decisions (like the naming of a school) by past generations: which is to consider the context of that past generation's decision and the statement that was being made at the time.

I recently read a fascinating article about the political climate in the 1920s, when the Charlottesville statue was erected, as relates to issues of race and a nationwide movement to erect civil war statues. Historian Adam Goodheart makes it plain (in PolticoMagazine) that the Charlottesville Lee statue was an unequivocal statement by community leaders about where it stood on the issue of race. The KKK was experiencing a massive resurgence at the time, with as many as 5 million members actively and openly committing atrocities and seeking to influence politics at the highest level.

Why is what Charlottesville did in 1924 relevant to a decision made by Midland leadership prior to the school's opening in 1961? Simply that the decision itself should be considered in context.

Midland needed a new school because of a major oil boom population increase. Why "Robert E. Lee High School," at that time, in a place far removed from the battlegrounds of the Civil War? Midland itself was settled and founded well after the 1865 end of the war. There remained a few Battle of the Alamo heroes to name schools after, and any number of great Americans and local citizens to honor.

In 1961, when Midland Lee opened, the nation was being rocked by a divisive and increasingly bloody battle of a different kind. In 1955, after several years of hearings, the Supreme Court ordered the lower federal courts to require the desegregation of American schools "with all deliberate speed." That decision was resisted by many states, cities and school systems. Despite the Supreme Court ruling, Midland Lee opened as an all-white school, not integrating until 1968. The decision to build a segregated high school during that time, and to name it after a Confederate general, indicates that community leaders had no intention of integrating schools. No intention of treating all its children equally. The naming strongly suggests that it was the express desire of those in power that their children should not have to sit next to minority children in class, or play with them at recess, or attend each other's birthday parties. I doubt that it was an intentional act of suppression, but rather an intentional act of protection against something that they didn't or couldn't understand.

I would hope that, as the discussion moves forward, some consideration be given by alumni of what it is that's being defended and what's being resisted; assuming that the "defenders" are normal, conservative-leaning citizens and the "resistors" are normal, liberal-leaning citizens.

The defenders' position is straight forward. It's reactive. It's visceral. It feels as though their sense of self, their personal history, even their honor, are being brought into question. The symbols of the remote past are merely that, and nothing more.

The resistors' responses are also somewhat reactive and visceral. What happened, they think, to the Better America we've been building for the last 50 years? Robert E. Lee the man is not the target of the resistors. The Confederate flag and the very complex legacy of those who sacrificed in its name — whatever you feel about them — have since been stolen by the Ku Klux Klan and the unbalanced fringe elements who today outnumber them. The alt-right demonstrators in Charlottesville waved that flag while they chanted, "Blood and Soil!" the battle cry of the Nazis against which Americans from every state and of every political persuasion fought and died.

What's being defended are our core American values — the right to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness — and a comforting view of the past.

What's being resisted is the perversion of our core American values — the right to life, liberty and pursuit of happiness — and the symbols used to promote that effort.

If what's being defended and what's being resisted sound a lot alike, it's because they are.

Yet the divide is wide.

The continuing debates in Midland and in Charlottesville won't be easily resolved, but we should make every effort to ensure that that they be peacefully and civilly conducted.

Ultimately, personally, our aims are similar.

We must be mindful of the past, honest with ourselves and others, focused on outcomes. We must put ourselves aside and focus on the children of today and of tomorrow; about the messages those children receive about who we think that they are and what they can become.

Ultimately, personally, my own aim is to make that happen.

of memorials to Washington and Jefferson and even Lincoln not to mention every reference to the Confederacy. Interesting that they don't object to multiple memorials for KKK Grand Kleegle Robert Byrd, but of course they wouldn't. He was a left wing, Democrat senator.

Our four children are graduates of Lee, and Penny and I have been supporters of the school, and especially the band, for many years. I well remember Mrs. Thurman leading cheers waving a large rebel flag as her son starred on the football field and the opportunity to be present when the Lee band marched and played Dixie in President Reagan's Inaugural Parade in 1981.

Lee Principal Stan VanHoozer, and the administration, can say all they want about the decision being solely" to keep the band kids safe," but it is obvious that the decision was made out of fear and submission to pressure. It is unfortunate that they have created this distraction at a time when our whole community should be laser focused on correcting the abysmal academic standing of MISD.

Under these circumstances, to remove them is not erasing history. It's acknowledging that the story we're being told is not the whole truth — is not the full history — and, accordingly, is unworthy of public veneration.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Can't erase what Lee stood for

Since the majority of Midlanders claim to be God-fearing people, may I quote the Word of God?

"Jesus replied, Love the Lord your God with all your heart and with all your soul and with all your mind. This is the first and greatest commandment. And the second is like it: Love your neighbor as yourself."
Matthew 22:37-39

With those verses in mind, may I quote Gen. Robert E. Lee?

"Let us pray for ourselves, that we may not lose the word 'concern' out of our Christian vocabulary. Let us pray for our nation. Let us pray for those who have never known Jesus Christ and redeeming love, for moral forces everywhere, for our national leaders. Let prayer be our passion. Let prayer be our practice."

"What a cruel thing war is ... to fill our hearts with hatred instead of love for our neighbors."

"Remember, we are all one country now. Dismiss from your mind all sectional feeling, and bring them up to be Americans."

"I believe it to be the duty of everyone to unite in the restoration of the country and the reestablishment of peace and harmony."

"I have fought against the people of the North because I believed they were seeking to wrest from the South dearest rights. But I have never cherished toward them bitter or vindictive feelings. And have never seen the day when I did not pray for them."

Concerning slavery, Lee had this to say;

"There are few, I believe, in this enlightened age, who will not acknowledge that slavery as an institution is a moral and political evil."

"So far from engaging in a war to perpetuate slavery, I am rejoiced that slavery is abolished!"

In time-honored reference to the recent history cleansing, this quote from the General seems appropriate;

"A land without memories is a people without liberty."

And finally, for the God-fearing Midlanders, this one more quote from Robert E. Lee;

"In all my perplexities and distresses, the Bible has never failed to give me light and strength."

For those of you that wishes to change names on school buildings, bring down monuments, and erase history with lies told you by the ignorant and hate-filled; when that day of Judgment comes, my bet is on the general over you. Revelation 22:20

"Did Hurricane Harvey hammer home the reality of climate change?"

Yes: Hurricane Harvey shows climate change is real

WAYNE MADSEN
Tribune News Service

The real scientists, not the fossil fuel industry shills, have been proven correct.

Rising atmospheric and sea temperatures brought about by the incessant production of environmentally destructive, heat-trapping greenhouse gases have ensured that what were called "500-year storms" are now happening every couple of years.

Hurricane Harvey saw areas of Texas never prone to flooding deluged with up to 50 inches of rain. Interstate highways were turned into raging rivers. The second floors of many homes and apartment buildings were reached by flood waters.

But the epochal flooding of Houston and several other areas of Texas do not represent a one-off event.

As Texas counted the dead and tallied up the billions of dollars in damage caused by Harvey, South Asia saw 1,200 deaths and millions of people made homeless by unusually powerful monsoon rains that left cities in Bangladesh, India, Nepal and Pakistan under water.

In July, unprecedented rains flooded subway stations and turned streets into lakes in Istanbul, one of Europe's most populous cities.

There's no doubt about it: With drastic climate change, the world is experiencing historic storms more often.

Hurricane Katrina did to New Orleans and southern Louisiana in 2005 what Harvey did to Houston and surrounding environs this year — an entire metropolitan area was affected, and the impact will be long-lasting.

Hurricane Rita, which followed Katrina in 2005, served as a stark wake-up call for Houston, which was well-prepared for the wind event but could have never foreseen the floods wrought by Harvey.

Superstorm Sandy in 2012 put New York City on notice that it was not immune to the effects of climate change. Flooded subways and major Internet switching centers in Manhattan were a reality and not fodder for disaster movies.

The Carolinas were continuing to rebuild from 2016's Hurricane Matthew unprecedented flooding when Harvey struck Texas.

Demands for assistance from such federal entities as the National Flood Insurance Program reached new levels and put new stresses on the already in-debt flood relief fund.

The National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration has counted an average of 15 named Atlantic storms each year from 1995 to 2012, an increase from years past. The frequency of the storms was directly attributed to warming oceans resulting from our warming atmosphere.

The simultaneous collapsing of ice formations in Antarctica and the Arctic will have irreversible effects on coastal flooding, sea currents and the abundance of marine life.

The collapse of marine ecosystems is already having disastrous results for species up and down the marine food chain. Eventually, the top of that food chain, humankind, will suffer from oceans devoid of sustaining food resources.

With Miami streets now flooding during non-storm-related tides, a Harvey-like storm striking Miami would leave permanent changes to the shorelines.

President Donald Trump calls climate change a Chinese-manufactured "hoax."

Perhaps when the president's Mar-a-Lago estate in Palm Beach, Fla., is inundated by the rising waters of the Atlantic Ocean, he might come to his senses about the realities behind global climate change and understand that his reliance on fake science has put more than his golfing and banquet buddies at risk.

No: Hurricanes have plagued Texas for a long time

WHITT FLORA
Tribune News Service

The pundits at elite East Coast media outlets — The New York Times, Washington Post, NBC, CNN and their many satellites — wasted no time in rushing to judgment.

Torrential rains were still flooding a huge area of southeast Texas when they proclaimed Hurricane Harvey a prime example of devastating climate change.

They received standing applause from Al Gore and his legion of federally funded climate alarmists across the country — but they were jarringly wrong.

Hurricane Harvey is a horrible, extreme case of the weather that typically ravages Texas' Gulf Coast but it has nothing to do with global climate change.

Some in the burgeoning climate disaster industry claim that Harvey was directly caused by man-made climate change, or, at the very least, was made significantly worse by it.

Sen. Bernie Sanders, the independent from Vermont, for example, said, "Is some of the intensity and the magnitude of this related to climate change? I think most scientists believe it is."

And he's been joined by countless others making frenzied calls for more government action and saying climate change will make extreme storms more severe.

But for some historical perspective, consider what happened in 1900, when the worst hurricane in American history roared into the port of Galveston, destroying thousands of buildings and killing an estimated 6,000-12,000 people. Harvey, thus far, has accounted for less than 100 fatalities.

University of Washington atmospheric scientist Cliff Mass said climate change did not cause Hurricane Harvey.

"You can't really pin global warming for something this extreme," Mass said.

William Happer, an emeritus professor of physics at Princeton University and a former director of energy research of the U.S. Department of Energy, is also among those highly skeptical of global warming as generally explained by mainstream media.

"Climate has been changing since the Earth was formed — some 4.5 billion years ago," he wrote in an op-ed earlier this year. "Climate changes on every time scale — whether decades, centuries or millennia. The climate of Greenland was warm enough for farming around the year 1100 A.D., but by 1500, the Little Ice Age drove Norse settlers out. There is no opportunity for a hoax, since climate change is so well documented by historical and geophysical records."

Debate between skeptical academics like Happer and his undoubting colleagues doing research with federal grants will likely continue ad infinitum.

In the meantime, tens of thousands of Texans are homeless, hungry and quite possibly shell-shocked.

DACA is unconstitutional, as Obama admitted

HANS A. VON SPAKOVSKY
The Heritage Foundation

President Donald Trump has caught a lot of heat for rescinding the Deferred Action for Childhood Arrivals program with a six-month wind-down. Few people seem aware that he's ending an administrative amnesty for illegal aliens that President Barack Obama lacked the constitutional and legal authority to implement.

How do we know? Because even Obama admitted it — repeatedly.

Responding in October 2010 to demands that he implement immigration reforms unilaterally, Obama declared, "I am not king. I can't do these things just by myself." In March 2011, he said that with "respect to the notion that I can just suspend deportations through executive order, that's just not the case." In May 2011, he acknowledged that he couldn't "just bypass Congress and change the (immigration) law myself. ... That's not how a democracy works."

Yet in 2012, he did it anyway. He put DACA in place to provide pseudo-legal status to illegal aliens brought to the U.S. as minors, including as teenagers. He promised them that they wouldn't be deported and provided them with work authorizations and access to Social Security and other government benefits.

And he did this despite the fact that the immigration laws passed by Congress do not give the president the ability to do this. Indeed, Congress specifically rejected bills to provide such benefits.

As Attorney General Jeff Sessions pointed out last week, DACA "contributed to a surge of unaccompanied minors on the southern border that yielded terrible humanitarian consequences." Because most DACA beneficiaries are now adults, "it also denied jobs to hundreds of thousands of Americans by allowing those same jobs to go to illegal aliens," Sessions said.

The unconstitutionality of Obama's actions were confirmed when Obama tried to implement a second, similar program in 2014 called the Deferred Action for Parents of Americans and Lawful Permanent Residents program, or DAPA. Like DACA, DAPA provided an administrative amnesty for illegal aliens who came to the U.S. as adults and gave them work authorizations and access to government benefits.

The Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals upheld a nationwide injunction against DAPA, which the Supreme Court allowed to stand. As the Fifth Circuit said, the fact that the president declined to enforce the law and remove illegal aliens "does not transform presence deemed unlawful by Congress into lawful presence and confer eligibility for otherwise unavailable benefits based on that change."

Under our Constitution, Congress has plenary authority over immigration. The president only has the authority delegated to him by Congress — and Congress has never given the president the power to provide a pseudo-amnesty and government benefits to illegal aliens.

The DACA program suffers from exactly the same constitutional infirmities as DAPA. A number of states have threatened to sue the administration to stop the DACA program. In the face of that threat, Trump really had no choice. General Sessions' legal conclusion was that DACA "is vulnerable to the same legal and constitutional challenges that the courts recognized with respect to the DAPA program."

The place to have the debate about what to do about illegal aliens who were minors when they came to this country is in the halls of Congress, not the White House. Failure to correct this unilateral, unconstitutional overreach would set a dangerous precedent that weakens our constitutional balance of powers. As law professor Jonathan Turley said, "If a president can claim sweeping discretion to suspend key federal laws, the entire legislative process becomes little more than a pretense."

When it comes to immigration, Attorney General Sessions was correct when he said that the "compassionate thing is to end the lawlessness, enforce our laws, and, if Congress chooses to make changes to those laws, to do so through the process set forth by our Founders in a way that advances the interests of the nation." That is essential to preserving our constitutional republic.

The poor are more than the homeless, the hungry, and those without money for medicine and utilities. They are also the sick, the unwanted, the unloved, the addicted. Some of these people live within the walls of our own homes. If the poor go without, it's not because God has abandoned them. It may well be that we have failed to hear or respond to God's invitation to let Him help them through us. We all love Jesus. We all hope to be with Him for all eternity. He has told us not to expect to see Him in heaven if we can't recognize Him NOW in the sick and the lonely – such as in the mentally ill man walking the streets talking to an unseen companion, in the elderly woman sitting ignored in the nursing home, or even in the embittered neighbor who irritates us so much. We are called to see and love Jesus in all of these people even when we don't feel like it. Love is a decision, not a feeling. The poor are a gift that God has bestowed on us so that through them we might learn to come closer to Him.

God bless all of you who cherish God's special children we call the poor through your contributions to help the needy, either personally or through Helping Hands. Thank you very, very much!

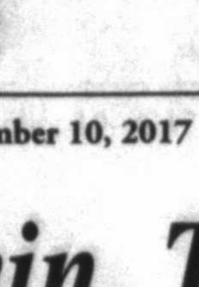
Desperate for a win, Trump shafts his party

■ President's agenda will fail because he doesn't know what he's doing



JONAH GOLDBERG

Tribune News Service

The news that President Trump abandoned Republicans to strike a deal with congressional Democrats on a three-month extension of the debt limit yielded a predictable response from his predictable cheerleaders: It was brilliant and typically shrewd for the author of "The Art of the Deal" to take the very first offer the Democrats made and ask for nothing in return.

Less obsequious observers on the right claimed that this was the long-prophesied moment. The seventh seal had been broken. Donald Trump was "pivoting" at last. "The pivot is real and it's spectacular!" proclaimed Ben Domenech, the publisher of The Federalist.

In the lexicon of Trumpism and anti-Trumpism, "pivot" has many meanings. But in this context, pivot means to reach across party lines and work with Democrats, giving the shaft to his own party, or at least to the conservatives in the GOP.

Such a move has been feared by many conservatives from the earliest days of Trump's candidacy. The former New York Democrat holds no deep love for ideological conservatism, and many of his favorite issues — protectionism, infrastructure, etc. — are more naturally part of the Democratic portfolio.

But those fears didn't pan out at first. The president and congressional Republicans tried to mimic the Democrats in the wake of Barack Obama's victory in 2008 and run the table, particularly on Obamacare "repeal and replace," on a partisan basis. Unfortunately, the GOP couldn't get it done. This infuriated many conservatives, Republicans and Donald Trump himself, and to some extent rightly so.

For years, Republicans said that if they could win both Congress and the White House there'd be nothing they couldn't do. Whether this was a lie or just wishful thinking is debatable. Regardless, they failed for several reasons. The Republican majority in the Senate is much narrower than the Democratic majority was when Obama was elected. Many GOP leaders never thought Trump would win, and so they hadn't prepared for victory. Also, the Republican Party is divided along a host of fault lines, and a large swath of the Republican caucus has no experience at actually governing.

This is why Trump's decision to throw Sen. Mitch McConnell and Speaker Paul Ryan under the bus was greeted with such glee by many Trump boosters. They place the blame for all of Trump's myriad blunders on the GOP "establishment." They'd rather see Trump pivot and work with Democrats if it means Trump can declare victory about something and if it makes the establishment look bad. What was once a fear is now a hope.

The problem is there's another reason Congress has disappointed the president and his most ardent supporters: Donald Trump doesn't know what he's doing.

Even under the best circumstances, major legislation cannot get out of Congress without robust presidential leadership. I wish it were otherwise, because the Congress is the first branch of government and should take the lead. But in the modern era, you can't outsource the big stuff to Congress. Trump didn't know this and refuses to learn.

For instance, earlier in the week the White House said Trump was ending the Deferred Action for Child Arrivals program, which lets undocumented immigrants brought to this country as children stay here. Attorney General Jeff Sessions came out and said it was unconstitutional. But when the press — and former president Obama — castigated Trump as heartless and cruel, the president made it clear he wants Congress to restore the program by passing legislation. And if it doesn't, he suggested, he might keep the program via the same means his AG had just described as unconstitutional.

Mark Krikorian, the leading intellectual advocate for a more restricted immigration policy, should be a natural ally of this White House. He told the New York Times, "(Trump's) being pulled in a bunch of different directions, and because he doesn't have any strong ideological anchor, or deep knowledge of the issue, he ends up sort of not knowing what to do." Instead, the president goes with his gut on everything, letting himself be baited by negative TV coverage.

There are many reasons why the pivot theory won't pan out. Trump has made himself too radioactive with the Democratic rank-and-file. Most of his agenda is equally radioactive. But the main reason it will fail is that, contrary to wishful theories that Trump is playing "four-dimensional chess," the president doesn't really know what he's doing.

OUR VIEW

City needs someone who can connect with the entire community

The Midland Chamber of Commerce's "state of" luncheons and "annual meetings" have made awareness an integral part of the presentation.

These meetings educate those who get caught up in the business of daily life or those who don't keep up with the news provided by this newspaper.

But as last week's meeting showed us, reporting the problems and challenges is much different than coming up with solutions. And maybe the biggest take-a-way from the event reflected the biggest problem with our growing community.

Is there a person or group of people who can speak — not to the chamber crowd — but to the greater community? Because when it comes to preaching to that different choir, that person or group hasn't been identified or come forward, and that is a huge problem.

Midland is a unique community. Our readers are probably tired of us repeatedly describing our community as unique, but that doesn't make it any less true.

When it comes to education, there are more private schools per capita in Midland than any community in the state.

When it comes to dealing with growth, Midland has many people who have lived here long enough that they aren't concerned with attracting the next generation of Midlanders (and certainly not at the expense of their pocketbook).

When it comes to getting younger, there is an asterisk. Midland, indeed, is becoming a younger community. One city official recently said the average age of a Midland resident is about 32.

The problem here is that the younger generation might as well be generation apathy because they act as if they have no intention of getting involved in community-building. They see Midland as a stop in their journey to the next place in life. As long as that attitude prevails, a growing community will miss a needed voice.

There are those — and it was said again last week — that Midland needs to become a city that can compete with larger metropolitan cities for qualified employees. The same people believe tax dollars must be prioritized to create quality-of-life amenities that will keep residents happy and not looking elsewhere. We are not sure if a park will make the difference between a person staying and leaving.

Our hope is Midland will get back to the basics. We hope our leaders will concentrate on making sure we have the essentials (education, roads, water, sewer, public safety) and then worry about the extras. We haven't accomplished the essentials, so worrying about the extras seems pointless.

Either way, one thing is for sure. Our community needs those people who are capable of connecting with a larger group of Midlanders. We need people who can talk with the most conservative among us, the younger residents, the people who don't plan to stay here for a long time and the people who have made Midland their home for decades.

During the next two months, Councilman J. Ross Lacy will get his chance, and that makes the November election even more interesting, because we might get not only better roads but a person who has found the ability to connect with the community. Considering the trials and tribulations of the community during the last few years, we are not sure which would be the more remarkable and result.

Dreamer solution needed years ago

■ Debacle involving undocumented youth leaves plenty of anger to go around

RUBEN NAVARRETTE

Washington Post Writers Group

For writers, happiness is overrated. Some of the best columns have been fueled by anger.

And now that President Trump has turned upside down the lives of about 800,000 hardworking but undocumented young people — all by springing a trap set by his predecessor, Barack Obama, to win re-election in 2012 — I have plenty of anger to go around.

Above all, I'm angry with Trump. Whether he is calling Mexican immigrants criminals, or questioning whether a "Mexican" federal judge born in the United States can adjudicate fairly, or pardoning retired Sheriff Joe Arpaio after the lawman-turned-outlaw defied a federal court order and continued to profile Latinos, this president seems to enjoy inflicting pain and humiliation on America's largest minority.

Now, in the deepest cut, the White House has ended the program known as Deferred Action for Childhood Arrivals (DACA). Congress has six months to find a solution that allows recipients to stay in the country legally.

I'm no psychiatrist. But the same president who appeared to defend white racists at Charlottesville sees red when it comes to brown people.

Trump will never be remembered by history as a great president; he's too small, weak, petty and thin-skinned. But he may well go down as the most brazenly anti-Latino president in the last 60 years. It was in the 1956 presidential election that the Republican ticket of Dwight Eisenhower and Richard Nixon threw out the first pitch to Latino voters in Nixon's home state of California and put that demographic on the political map.

Thanks to Hurricane Donald, the GOP now stands accused of — as NBC News veteran Tom Brokaw put it — "declaring war on Hispanics in this country." On MSNBC's "Morning Joe," where the liberal hosts seem to care more about defending immigrants since Trump became president, Brokaw called the termination of DACA "a continuation of the Republican determination to cut out Hispanic votes on their side, for as long as we can see."

In the new horror movie "It," there is that moment when a group of kids realize that a clown is evil.

For Dreamers — who came here as children and, intent on conquering the world, became better at being "American" than the native-born, who think the world owes them a living — that moment came (last) week when the clown in the Oval Office showed his teeth.

Meanwhile, let's not forget the accomplice. Trump may have fired the shot but it was Obama who loaded the gun.

Half a million undocumented young people who wanted to believe that this country loved them half as much as they loved the country put their trust in the pretty words of a president who sprinkled them like fertilizer. In exchange for a two-year work permit, and a chance to prove themselves to America, they foolishly handed over to Immigration and Customs Enforcement their fingerprints, home addresses and the names of undocumented family members.

Good plan. What could go wrong? This time bomb was bound to explode. That was the idea.

Stick with me. The D in DACA stands for "deferred." What is being deferred? Despite what some wildly misinformed elements of the Latino left tried to tell me (that)week, it was never legalization. It was always deportation. It's baffling to me that there are liberals who are so eager to praise Obama that they actually believe that DACA put young people on a path to citizenship.

That's idiotic. DACA was only intended to do one thing: Put young people on a bus or plane to their home country. In fact, when you think about it, those 800,000 young people who enrolled are already in ICE custody. They're just on a temporary furlough.

We might as well add them to the tally of the 3 million people that Obama deported the old-fashioned way to alleviate the anxiety of African-Americans and white union members who aren't up to the task of competing with foreign workers.

My friends on the left think I'm being too hard on the Dreamers. When you're drowning, they say, you'll reach for anything.

Maybe. But that shouldn't include an anvil.

Americans are right to be angry. Let's channel that anger into something positive. We need something that DACA wasn't: a permanent legislative solution. And instead of an elitist giveaway to Dreamers, we need a remedy that extends to their parents. And we needed it, oh, about five years ago.

Midland takes Weir, Odessa takes kick to the rear

GUEST VIEW

Odessa American

Odessa, meet the city of Midland's secret weapon — the finest economic development trio in Tall City history: Odessa City Council members Barbara Graff, Filiberto Gonzales and Malcolm Hamilton.

Midland officials announced late last week they have sealed a deal with oilfield services giant Weir Oil & Gas to locate a nearly $30 million consolidated service center in their fair city. As part of the deal, Weir also has agreed to a starting payroll of at least $870,000 and to maintain a payroll of not less than $6 million for a period of five years through 2022, as reported in the Midland Reporter-Telegram.

We think our newspaper colleagues in Midland were being rather kind when they wrote: "Odessa's loss looks to be Midland's gain."

We'll be a little less euphemistic: Midland was smart enough to capitalize on an economic development deal that Graff, Gonzales and Hamilton were dumb enough to turn down.

Recall that in May, after inexplicably firing Odessa Development Corp. Chairman Jimmy Breaux, Graff, Gonzales and Hamilton turned down the Weir deal for Odessa. They did so in spite of the fact that the ODC board and its compliance committee wholeheartedly recommended the deal after considerable time and treasure was spent by local economic development officials, a local private developer and Weir officials to come to terms. And Graff, Gonzales and Hamilton voted "No" even though doing so meant the very likelihood that Weir would go somewhere else, shutting down its Odessa office and possibly eliminating some local jobs in the process.

Some on the council believed Weir would come here anyway and that the city need not sweeten the pot. The argument was also put forth that the new jobs created would actually be current jobs, shuffled from one company in town to another, and that there would probably not be a net gain.

And they also argued that Odessa should diversify its economic development focus and that they were going to be very selective with the oil-related companies they agree to incentivize in the future.

The "net jobs" argument defies basic logic. When one local company loses an employee to another local company, that company then looks to fill the vacancy, oftentimes hiring someone from outside our market. One only has to look at our growing population to realize that people are moving here primarily for the increased oil-sector job openings, including openings created when one company expands or another loses an employee to a competitor.

They are not moving here to go to kindergarten!

As for the council members' diversification argument, apparently they did not fully comprehend the recent study Economist Ray Perryman furnished the ODC. He certainly applauded efforts toward diversification. But he was also quick to point out that the oil and gas sector is this region's bread and butter. And we clearly should continue any and all measures to capitalize on that.

It should be a case of diversifying our local businesses and growing our oil & gas sector. Not promoting one at the expense of another.

But alas, when politicians get involved in economic development — such as the way Graff, Gonzales and Hamilton have inserted themselves — they only seem capable of creating a scenario of winners and losers. And when, as in this case, they second-guess the advice of people who actually know something about economic development, they tend to have a miserable track record for picking winners.

In fact, in this case the proof has been laid bare for all to see that Graff, Gonzales and Hamilton made Odessa a big loser.

We will reiterate what we opined in May: We firmly believe that Graff, Gonzales and Hamilton do not truly represent Odessa. We consider them an embarrassment.

And voters of this city who share in this embarrassment need to start working now to ensure that through the election process, truly qualified and responsible candidates are elected to the City Council in the future.

And that a few years from now, the likes of Graff, Gonzales and Hamilton need only go to City Hall to pay their water bill.

Time to take a look at some new laws, lynching of Santa

Ignorance is odd. Sometimes, it's bliss. But in a courtroom, we're told it's no excuse.

As a law-abiding Texan, you're expected to know every law on the books. Seems like a lot of homework, but that's the fact, Jack. With that in mind, I refer you to my colleague Chuck Lindell's recent story about the 700 or so new Texas laws that took effect Sept. 1.

Quick side note: A belated happy fiscal new year to all. State government advanced to fiscal 2018 on Sept. 1 after a wild night of Fiscal New Year's Eve debauchery by those party animals at the Legislative Budget Board.

Back to the new laws. Lindell told you about important new laws such as no more texting while driving. He also told you of the lifting of bans on hunting feral hogs and coyotes from hot air balloons and on open carry of daggers, stilettos, Bowie knives, swords, spears, throwing knives and any instrument with a blade longer than 5 1/2 inches. (Caution: I'd be careful about daggers, stilettos, Bowie knives, swords, spears, throwing knives, etc., on hot air balloons.)

I'm here to tell you about laws we shall lump under the heading "other." Included will be a reference to the only state historical marker I'm aware of that mentions the lynching of Santa Claus. You know you want to hear about that. Stay tuned.

First, thanks to a new law proffered by Reps. Donna Howard, D-Austin, and Paul Workman, R-Austin. Our Fair City now has the official state botanical garden and arboretum. We're not getting a new facility, but House Bill 394 designates the Lady Bird Johnson Wildflower Center as the official state botanical garden.

Another new law you're responsible for knowing sets new rules for guns and bows and arrows near the Canadian River in Potter County.

"Interested parties contend that civilians are discharging firearms and shooting arrows from bows in and on the beds and banks of a certain portion of the Canadian River and that the bullets and arrows are crossing into private property," says the analysis of HB 1771.

The new law places weapons restrictions "on the bed or bank of the segment of the Canadian River extending from the intersection of U.S. Highways 287 and 87 and the Canadian River to a point 1.2 miles west of the intersection, marked by a structure serving as a railroad trestle, and to a point 1.5 miles east of the intersection, where the Canadian River enters the Lake Meredith National Recreational Area."

Please mark that on your maps. You're welcome.

HB 2079 tells the Texas Historical Commission to develop a music history trail program to promote and preserve our state's music history.

"The bill requires the program, at a minimum, to include designation of locations or organizations that are historically significant to Texas' musical heritage," says the bill analysis. HB 2079 also requires the adoption of "an icon, symbol or other identifying device to represent such a designation."

Here's something else you need to know: As of Sept. 1, the structure being constructed on Texas 6 in Eastland County adjacent to Lake Cisco, connecting the two sides of Sandy Creek, has been named the Bedford-Carmichael Bridge.

There's some great Texas history here, history about which I had been blissfully ignorant pre-Senate Bill 1037. A bridge and a large portion of Texas 6 was washed away in June 2016 flooding. Construction of the new bridge is in its final stages. That's the recent history. Here's the older history: The bridge will be named for former Cisco Police Chief G.E. "Bit" Bedford and Eastland County Deputy George Carmichael. Both died as result of what the bill analysis calls "the historic Santa Claus bank robbery of 1927."

The Santa Claus bank robbery? I've always had suspicions about how that seemingly jolly guy financed his global philanthropy. Here's the deal, according to the Texas State Historical Association's "Handbook of Texas": On Dec. 23, 1927, three ex-cons and a fourth man held up the First National Bank in Cisco as part of a crime spree.

"As the group neared the bank, Marshall Ratliff donned a Santa Claus suit he had borrowed from Mrs. Midge Tellet, who ran the boarding house where they had been staying in Wichita Falls. They let Ratliff out several blocks from the bank. Followed by children attracted to 'Santa,' Ratliff joined the other three in an alley and led the way into the bank," we're told. "He did not respond to the greetings directed at Santa, and the other three drew their guns, indicating that it was a holdup."

At that point, I'm imaging somebody yelled, "Ho, ho, hold it right there!" (And congratulations to me for getting that in the paper for about the 400th time.)

Child hostages were taken. Bedford and Carmichael were fatally wounded. A big ol' manhunt ensued.

An official state historical marker where the bank used to be says "the children and money were recovered; the robbers captured. Six persons were killed, eight injured. Later a mob lynched 'Santa' when he broke out of jail."

Should low-tax Texas have to shoulder more of Harvey's load?

LYDIA DEPILLIS

Houston Chronicle

On Wednesday, Congress approved about $8 billion in funding for Hurricane Harvey recovery — what President Donald Trump called a "down payment" on what could be a $100 billion rebuilding effort. The move seemed relatively non-controversial, with only three Representatives voting nay.

And then, a few hours after the House had voted, the Washington Post published an op-ed by two legal scholars arguing that Texans are undertaxed — paying less on average than residents of 45 other states — and should therefore be asked to repay more of the aid that Congress may see fit to dispense.

The implicit point is one that many northern liberals have made in the days following Harvey: Proudly anti-government Texas, which frequently rails against federal overreach, is now coming hat in hand to Washington, D.C.

Just like Texas politicians demand "personal responsibility" from their constituents, shouldn't the Lone Star State pull itself up by its bootstraps rather than receive a free ride courtesy of everyone else?

It's actually a tough question, but one that's worth thinking about as natural disasters become more common and the federal government is called upon to help more and more often.

To understand how disaster aid works, consider another analogy: Unlike safety net programs like food stamps and Medicaid, FEMA's grants for things like housing and debris removal are not "means tested," or distributed based on a state's ability to pay its own way. Rather, FEMA just asks the state to contribute one dollar for every three dollars it provides, as required by the Stafford Act of 1988.

Now, some have argued that creates a disincentive to raise enough revenue to invest in disaster prevention and response. Certainly Harris County hasn't done all that it could to mitigate the impact of catastrophic rainfall, such accelerate work on Project Brays, which was supposed to keep neighborhoods like Meyerland from flooding over again and again. Some measures don't even require extensive state funding, like simply imposing stronger laws against building in floodplains.

Also, the virtual guarantee of federal aid allows the state to not even use funds dedicated for use during unforeseen adverse circumstances. Gov. Greg Abbott foreclosed the possibility of a second special session, which means that Texas' $10 billion Rainy Day fund can't be tapped for another two years, even following a few of the rainyest days in the state's history.

The problem comes in when you think about how a state like Texas might actually respond to a demand that it finance a greater share of hurricane response.

Right now, although Texas is a low-tax state overall, that tax burden falls disproportionately on poor people. High property and sales taxes and the absence of an income tax means that folks in the lowest 20 percent of the income spectrum pay 12.5 percent of their earnings in state and local taxes, the seventh highest rate in the country, according to the Institute on Taxation and Economic Policy.

The best way to raise money in a more equitable fashion would be to impose both corporate and personal income taxes, but as my colleague Chris Tomlinson has written, that logical move is anathema to Texas politicians. With little room to grow other sources of revenue, Texas lawmakers may just choose to skimp on disaster relief, which is most necessary for low-income families — rather than pay whatever share the federal government might demand.

As another example, look at funding for other programs that serve low-income people. More than two thirds of the state's Health and Human Services budget comes from the federal government, in large part because of Medicaid spending. If Congress decreased the federal share of spending on Medicaid because Texas could theoretically raise taxes and make up the difference, would Texas' conservative legislature actually do that?

Despite the apparent justice of asking Texas to pony up more cash, doing so may have the effect of hurting those Texans who don't have the resources to help themselves.

We must understand impact of hydraulic fracturing

JENNIE LOU LEEDER

District 11 congressional candidate

There are those who will say, and perhaps have said, that because hydraulic fracturing is such a large part of the economy of West Texas, a candidate who wants to win should not be critical of the industry. I disagree. Because hydraulic fracturing is such a large part of our economy, I believe it's all the more important for us to ask that fracturing companies engage in sustainable, smart water use that considers not only the short-term profits, but the long-term health of the region.

Hydraulic fracturing has been part of the West Texas economy for about 70 years now, but it has only been recently that we have seen these massive fracs involving millions of gallons of fluid and hundreds of thousands or millions of pounds of sand. The fact is that long-term studies of the impact of fracturing on water tables and water systems are not available at this time, and so to conclude that hydraulic fracturing practices are entirely safe would seem premature.

While projects like Frac Focus, which encourage the disclosure and registry of chemicals used in the hydraulic fracturing process, provide important information on the potential contaminants to groundwater, the project only registers known contaminants and does not provide long-term monitoring for contaminants in groundwater and runoff. Recently, the Environmental Protection Agency reported that the potential exists for groundwater contamination from fracturing, especially through water withdrawal, accidental spills, improper injection of fracturing fluids, contact of wastewater with surface waters, and through improper disposal.

I appreciate that the Reporter-Telegram brought up the efforts of companies like Apache and Pioneer Natural Resources, companies that are working to bring more sustainable practices to the industry, not because they have to, but because they recognize the importance of protecting our land, air and water. My hope is that through the cooperation of independent scientists and oil industry operators, we can better understand the potential impact of hydraulic fracturing on those resources and develop sustainable, safe practices for the future.

Midland High still winless, but took a step forward

chadorn@mrt.com

The Midland High football team took a step forward in Thursday's 58-53 home loss to El Paso Montwood.

The Bulldogs found out they're capable of running the ball at a high level and that they have two quarterbacks that can move their offense down field.

On the down side, MHS (0-2) is still seeking its first win, and that doesn't sit well with first-year head coach Tim Anuszkiewicz.

"Kind of in a nutshell, I am proud of the direction that we're headed, but we're still not getting the results that we want," Anuszkiewicz said. "The expectation that we have is to win and that's where we want to get these guys is to win."

Limiting the big plays on defense has been the most glaring culprit in both Bulldogs' losses.

MHS allowed seven plays for 20-plus yards against El Paso Franklin in a 48-22 loss, and Montwood followed the same script with 10 plays for 20 yards or more.

The Rams had a potent quarterback-wide receiver combination with Andrew Fernandez (365 yards, 8 TDs) and Tyreese Andrus (235 receiving yards, 5 TDs) that carved up the MHS defense, and the slate doesn't get easier when the Bulldogs visit defending Class 6A Division II state champion DeSoto at 7:30 p.m. Friday.

Lee backing up confidence with impressive play

WILL KORN
wkorn@mrt.com

The last time the Lee football team played as well as it did against Abilene High on Friday night, legendary Rebel running back Cedric Benson was terrorizing opposing defenses across the state.

Lee put together a convincing all-around home debut against the Eagles in its 49-14 thrashing at Grande Communications Stadium — the Rebels' largest margin of victory over Abilene High since 2000.

It was also just Lee's fourth win against the Eagles since 2000, the end of a dominant era that saw the Rebels win 14 straight meetings between the two teams dating back to 1987.

With the exception of a few needless penalties in the first half, a pair of explosive plays allowed and a brief offensive sputter early in the second half, Lee put together about as thorough a performance as could have been asked for.

The offensive line, as expected, was physical and won the war up front rather easily. Abilene leaned on the blitz to try to force the issue defensively. But senior quarterback Colby Standard handled the pressure well and produced another fine evening, by completing 17 of his 27 passes for 245 yards and two touchdowns.

As he did in last week's win in El Paso, Standard made the right throws, avoided

RockHounds' Jordan Tarsovich hits against San Antonio in game four of the Texas League South Division playoff series on Saturday, at Security Bank Ballpark.

RockHounds force Game 5 with 6-3 victory

By Will Korn
wkorn@mrt.com

Midland RockHounds shortstop Jorge Mateo is probably known more for his blazing set of wheels than his clutch bat.

But Mateo, the Oakland Athletics' No. 4-ranked prospect, used his stick in big way on Saturday night at Security Bank Ballpark. With the RockHounds trailing 3-1, he ripped a bases-clearing double to left to lift Midland to a 6-3 victory over the visiting San Antonio Missions in Game 4 of the Texas League South Division Championship series.

"I give all the glory to God," Mateo said through translator and teammate Viosergy Rosa. "It was a big opportunity for me with the bases loaded and the team has always supported me through the struggles and the great times."

The win knotted the best-of-five series at 2-2 and for at least one more day, and kept the RockHounds' quest for their fourth consecutive league title alive. A deciding Game 5 is set for 6:05 p.m. today at San Antonio's Nelson Wolff Stadium, with the winner advancing to the TL championship series.

Prior to Mateo's game-winning base knock, which highlighted a five-run eighth inning, Midland had the look of a truly snakebitten club. The RockHounds had stranded 10 base runners entering the eighth and on four separate occasions, had failed to score after putting two runners on base.

As they did in Friday's 9-0 Game 3 win, the Missions struck first quickly with two runs in the first against Midland starter Heath Fillmyer. Luis Urias singled and was followed by a sacrifice fly off the bat of slugger Franmil Reyes. First baseman Josh Naylor later extended San Antonio's lead to 3-0 with a groundout in the fifth.

Fillmyer recovered following the shaky first inning and limited San Antonio to the three runs on nine hits over 6 2/3 innings. He struck out five and walked one in a no-decision.

Midland finally got on the board in the home fifth courtesy of an RBI single to left center by Rosa -- his 10th run driven in of the series. But against what has been the Texas League's premier bullpen all season long, the RockHounds were stymied for another two innings.

In the eighth, Midland got the action started with a pair of walks by Sheldon Neuse and Tyler Ramirez. Catcher Sean Murphy dropped a sacrifice bunt and advanced the runners, before Jordan Tarsovich walked to load the bases.

The Missions turned to TL regular season saves leader Trey Wingenter to face Mateo with one out. Three pitches later, the speedster brought a Midland crowd of 2,607 to their feet roaring as he handed the RockHounds the lead.

"We had a little bit of bad luck at the beginning and we didn't score many runs," said Mateo, finished the night 3-for-5 with

Elliott in, Beckham possibly out for season opener

By Schuyler Dixon
Associated Press

ARLINGTON — A month ago, the Dallas Cowboys figured to be without star running back Ezekiel Elliott for the opener while facing the New York Giants and dynamic receiver Odell Beckham Jr.

Now, Beckham is the one in doubt.

Elliott, the NFL rushing leader last season as a rookie, was already cleared to play in the opener Sunday night and on Friday, U.S. District Judge Amos Mazzant blocked his six-game suspension over a domestic violence case. It's uncertain whether an NFL appeal can get the suspension reinstated this season.

Beckham hasn't practiced since spraining his left ankle in a preseason game against Cleveland on Aug. 21 and that included all the preparations during game week.

So Eli Manning could be without his top receiver for his 200th consecutive start, but will have a new one in six-time Pro Bowler Brandon Marshall who signed as a free agent. The Giants are trying to win their fourth straight against the Cowboys after sweeping the NFC East champions last year.

"They got weapons now," Dallas defensive coordinator Rod Marinelli said. "Beckham, he's special obviously. Those are really good receivers. We know that. They're stocked up pretty well." Beckham is listed as questionable, which is supposed to mean a "50-50" chance of playing.

"You try and get better each and every day," Beckham said Wednesday. "I've been rehabbing an endless amount of hours and treatment, etc. So just trying to get it right."

Dak Prescott lost his debut as a rookie quarterback to the Giants in last year's opener before leading the Cowboys to a franchise-record 11 straight wins. The streak ended in a 10-7 loss at New York that was easily the worst game for the NFL Offensive Rookie of the Year.

Dez Bryant was shut down as well, getting one catch in each loss. But now Dallas' top receiver is coming off his first full offseason since his All-Pro year in 2014, which his teammates and coaches believe will make a difference.

"Two different teams than we were last year," Giants receiver Sterling Shepard said. "So, you kind of have to flush that down the toilet and move on."

Mayfield 3 TDs as No. 5 Sooners top No. 2 Buckeyes 31-16

By Mitch Stacy
Associated Press

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Baker Mayfield threw for 386 yards and three touchdowns as No. 5 Oklahoma pulled ahead in the second half to knock off No. 2 Ohio State 31-16 on Saturday night to give first-year head coach Lincoln Riley an early signature victory.

Mayfield lived up to his billing as a Heisman Trophy candidate in shifting the Sooners (2-0) into overdrive and piling up the yards in the second half as the Buckeyes' offense sputtered. Oklahoma took its first lead of the game near the end of the third quarter and cruised in the fourth.

Ohio State's title hopes didn't evaporate, but it will have to solve myriad offensive problems and play much better to get back in the hunt for the College Football Playoff. True freshman J.K. Dobbins again was a bright spot for the Buckeyes, rushing for 72 yards and a touchdown, but quarterback J.T. Barrett couldn't hit the big passes when he desperately needed them to extend drives. He often resorted to pulling the ball down and taking off himself.

Mayfield was sharp again, hitting 27 of 35 passes and tossing TD passes to Dimitri Flowers, Lee Morris and Trey Sermon.

Stephens tops Keys in US Open final for 1st Grand Slam title

By Howard Fendrich
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Sloane Stephens never looked shaken by the setting or the stakes in her first Grand Slam final. Her opponent, Madison Keys, most definitely did.

Stephens easily beat her close friend Keys 6-3, 6-0 to win the U.S. Open on Saturday, capping a remarkably rapid rise after sitting out 11 months because of foot surgery.

"I should just retire now," Stephens joked. "I told Maddie I'm never going to be able to top this. I mean, talk about a comeback."

The 83rd-ranked Stephens, who beat Venus Williams in the semifinals, is only the second unseeded woman to win the tournament in the Open era, which began in 1968.

A year ago, she sat out the U.S. Open altogether because of what turned out to be a stress fracture in her left foot. She had an operation in January, and made her season debut at Wimbledon in July, exiting in the first round. Lost her next match, too, in Washington.

Since then, she has gone 15-2, and her ranking has soared from outside the top 900 to what will be around No. 20 as of Monday. Oh, and, don't forget: She is now, and forever will be, a Grand Slam champion.

"I mean, things just have to come together," Stephens said, "and the last six weeks, five weeks, they really have." This was only the second time in the Open era that two women were making their Grand Slam final debuts against each other in New York. Stephens most certainly handled the occasion better, claiming the last eight games and making only six unforced errors — Keys had 30 — in the entire 61-minute mismatch.

"Sloane is truly one of my favorite people and to get to play her was really special. Obviously I didn't play my best tennis today and was disappointed," Keys said. "But Sloane, being the great friend that she is, was very supportive.

Walkover: Astros beaten by A's in both ends of doubleheader

By Michael Wagaman

OAKLAND, Calif. — Normally reliable Houston reliever Chris Devenski allowed two runs in the seventh inning, including Chad Pinder's tiebreaking homer with two outs, and the Astros lost 11-4 as the Oakland Athletics completed a doubleheader sweep Saturday.

Houston's third straight loss to the last-place A's loss dropped manager A.J. Hinch's ballclub into a tie with streaking Cleveland for the best record in the American League at 86-56. The Indians have won 17 straight.

The Astros' magic number for winning the AL West remained at eight, pending the Los Angeles Angels' game at Seattle later.

Houston lost the first game 11-1 when Astros pitchers forced in five runs with bases-loaded walks and the team tied a franchise record with 13 free passes.

The nightcap wasn't much better.

Jose Altuve hit his 23rd home run and inched closer to 200 hits, but the Astros couldn't hold an early three-run lead in the makeup of an April 16 rainout — the first at the Coliseum since 2014.

Houston led 4-3 on pinch hitter George Springer's sacrifice fly in the seventh that drove in Carlos Beltran.

Devenski (8-4) had allowed one earned run over his previous 15 appearances before getting touched up for two in the seventh.

The Astros' bullpen gave up nine runs overall and spoiled a mostly strong outing by starter Brad Peacock, who struck out nine. He allowed six runs and eight walk a batter since 2009 innings. Pinder homered again as part of Oakland's seven-run eighth.

Chris Hatcher (1-2) was tagged for both runs in the opener. Oakland sent Bobby Wahl (0-1) to the mound after Houston's Tyler Clippard issued the first bases-loaded walk to lead off the inning. Wahl struck out Derek Fisher with runners at the corners, but Alex Bregman brought in the first run with a fielder's choice. Jake Marisnick followed with a sacrifice fly to left.

Larson steals win in NASCAR regular season finale

By Hank Kurz Jr.
Associated Press

RICHMOND, Va. — Kyle Larson and his Chip Ganassi Racing team needed a break, and it came with two laps to go.

Running second to a dominant Martin Truex Jr. and itching for fresh tires and a shot at victory in overtime, Larson got it when Derrike Cope's car hit the wall, bringing out the seventh yellow flag of the night. Larson grabbed the lead on pit road and sailed to the victory.

"I'm really pumped for the playoffs, we've got a really good shot at the championship," Larson said. "I've got the greatest team out here and definitely the best pit crew. They were money all night long to gain spots. This win is a huge congrats to them."

And to Cope.

Truex, who clinched the regular-season NASCAR Cup title last week, had the race easily in hand until the 58-year-old Cope crashed with under four laps remaining. Truex then wrecked in overtime while racing with Denny Hamlin for position. The sequence cost him his fifth win of the season.

"A caution for a guy who shouldn't even have been out there," Truex said about Cope. "It's kind of ridiculous."

Dale Earnhardt Jr was officially eliminated from the playoffs with a 13th-place finish. He's retiring at the end of the season, and has never won a Cup title. Earnhardt stayed out during late-race pit stops, briefly assuming the lead with 15 laps to go, but the gamble didn't quite make the strategy pay off, never came.

"That's what we needed, to be aggressive and we didn't get it. Houston [Truex] did, was the only shot we had."

Truex will still start the playoffs at the stretch as the favorite to win the championship because he earned the most points during the regular season. He's also his Furniture Row Racing team presented with the trophy.

Stephens tops Keys in US Open final for 1st Grand Slam title

By Howard Fendrich
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Sloane Stephens never looked shaken by the setting or the stakes in her first Grand Slam final. Her opponent, Madison Keys, most definitely did.

Stephens easily beat her close friend Keys 6-3, 6-0 to win the U.S. Open on Saturday, capping a remarkably rapid rise after sitting out 11 months because of foot surgery.

"I should just retire now," Stephens joked. "I told Maddie I'm never going to be able to top this. I mean, talk about a comeback."

The 83rd-ranked Stephens, who beat Venus Williams in the semifinals, is only the second unseeded woman to win the tournament in the Open era, which began in 1968.

A year ago, she sat out the U.S. Open altogether because of what turned out to be a stress fracture in her left foot. She had an operation in January, and made her season debut at Wimbledon in July, exiting in the first round. Lost her next match, too, in Washington.

Since then, she has gone 15-2, and her ranking has soared from outside the top 900 to what will be around No. 20 as of Monday. Oh, and, don't forget: She is now, and forever will be, a Grand Slam champion.

"I mean, things just have to come together," Stephens said, "and the last six weeks, five weeks, they really have." This was only the second time in the Open era that two women were making their Grand Slam final debuts against each other in New York. Stephens most certainly handled the occasion better, claiming the last eight games and making only six unforced errors — Keys had 30 — in the entire 61-minute mismatch.

"Sloane is truly one of my favorite people and to get to play her was really special. Obviously I didn't play my best tennis today and was disappointed," Keys said. "But Sloane, being the great friend that she is, was very supportive.

Midland added insurance with a single by Jermaine Curtis and a groundout by Rosa to stretch its lead to 6-3. Reliever Kyle Finnegan notched the win for the RockHounds with a scoreless ninth.

Chapman gets save, Yankees allow 1 hit to top Rangers 3-1

By Schuyler Dixon
Associated Press

ARLINGTON — Aroldis Chapman entered in the ninth inning of a save situation for the first time since he was removed as the New York Yankees' closer last month.

The hard-throwing left-hander made it look as easy as 1-2-3.

Chapman struck out two in a perfect ninth to finish a one-hitter in the Yankees' 3-1 win over the Texas Rangers on Saturday.

Tyler Austin hit a go-ahead single in the ninth inning for the wild card-leading Yankees.

"I feel good about him out there," manager Joe Girardi said. "This is a guy that's been too good for too long, for me, to lose it. It's good to get him back out there. He threw well."

Before the game, Girardi said he would prefer to settle on a closer over the committee approach he has employed since demoting Chapman after he gave up two runs in a non-save situation in a 9-6 loss at Boston on Aug. 18.

Chapman had his fifth scoreless outing in six appearances since, capping it with a swinging strikeout of pinch-hitter Mike Napoli on a 102 mph fastball for his team-leading 17th save in 21 chances.

"Really nice," said starter Luis Severino, who struck out 10 in seven innings in his first no-decision since July 15 at Boston. "I know he can throw a strike. I know he can get that role, that save."

The only hit off Severino was Brett Nicholas' run-scoring double with two outs in the fifth. Will Middlebrooks, the lone runner past second against Severino, scored from first.

David Robertson (7-2) pitched a perfect eighth.

Chase Headley drove in two runs without a hit — a tying sacrifice fly in the eighth and a bases-loaded walk for a 3-1 lead in the ninth.

Texas starter Andrew Cashner had a shutout while pitching into the eighth inning for just the second time this season, but left after hitting Todd Frazier with the first pitch of the eighth.

Alex Claudio gave up a single to pinch-hitter Matt Holliday, putting Frazier at third with no outs and setting up Headley's sacrifice fly an out later.

"I felt like I could have kept going, but I thought Frazier was going to come out swinging," Cashner said. "I wasn't trying to throw a strike and it just sailed on me."

Claudio (4-2) allowed four singles among eight batters he faced. Frazier was hit by a pitch again in the ninth by Ricky Rodriguez, who allowed Austin's go-ahead hit and Headley's walk.

New York Yankees relief pitcher Aroldis Chapman looks down at the plate after getting Texas Rangers' Mike Napoli to strike out for the final out in the ninth inning on Saturday in Arlington. The Yankees won 3-1.

Solid seve

Severino struck out 10 or more for the fifth time this season, the first since July 8 against Milwaukee. The 23-year-old right-hander is the first Yankees pitcher to allow one or no hits in at least seven innings since Michael Pineda against Baltimore on Sept. 22, 2014. "He was really good today," Girardi said. "It looked like he had great command of his fastball."

Another Gomez injury

Texas center fielder Carlos Gomez left after rolling his right ankle on a swing in the second inning. He didn't even make it halfway to first on the groundout and needed help getting off the field. He was on crutches with a walking boot after the game. Gomez missed a month in May and June with a hamstring strain and was on the 10-day disabled list last month to have a cyst removed behind his right shoulder.

Short hops

It was the fewest hits for the Rangers since opening day last season, when they beat Seattle 3-2 despite getting just one hit. ... Aaron Judge walked in the second inning to tie the major league rookie record of 106 by Cleveland's Les Fleming in 1942. ... Cashner's no-decision was the sixth time this season a Texas starter went at least seven innings allowing one or no runs without getting a win. ... The Yankees won for the eighth time this year when trailing after seven innings.

Walkover: Astros beaten by A's in both ends of doubleheader

By Michael Wagaman
Associated Press

OAKLAND, Calif. — Normally reliable Houston reliever Chris Devenski allowed two runs in the seventh inning, including Chad Pinder's tiebreaking homer with two outs, and the Astros lost 11-4 as the Oakland Athletics completed a doubleheader sweep Saturday.

Houston's third straight loss to the last-place A's loss dropped manager A.J. Hinch's ballclub into a tie with streaking Cleveland for the best record in the American League at 86-56. The Indians have won 17 straight.

The Astros' magic number for winning the AL West remained at eight, pending the Los Angeles Angels' game at Seattle later.

Houston lost the first game 11-1 when Astros pitchers forced in five runs with bases-loaded walks and the team tied a franchise record with 13 free passes.

The nightcap wasn't much better.

Jose Altuve hit his 23rd home run and inched closer to 200 hits, but the Astros couldn't hold an early three-run lead in the makeup of an April 16 rainout — the first at the Coliseum since 2014.

Houston led 4-3 on pinch hitter George Springer's sacrifice fly in the seventh that drove in Carlos Beltran.

Devenski (8-4) had allowed one earned run over his previous 15 appearances before getting touched up for two in the seventh.

The Astros' bullpen gave up nine runs overall and spoiled a mostly strong outing by starter Brad Peacock, who struck out nine, 14 allowed no runs and only 3 walks before exiting in the 5th inning. Pinder homered again as part of a 3-hit, 3-run eighth.

Chris Hatcher (1-2) was credited with the win.

The appeal to Oakland fans before Friday's game asking the most passionate fans to help create an extra-intimidating atmosphere brought a sellout crowd of 35,067 to the Coliseum, but Houston fans outnumbered the A's fans in the early innings.

Larson steals win in NASCAR regular season finale

By Hank Kurz Jr.
Associated Press

RICHMOND, Va. — Kyle Larson and his Chip Ganassi Racing team needed a break, and it came with two laps to go.

Running second to a dominant Martin Truex Jr. and itching for fresh tires and a shot at victory in overtime, Larson got it when Derrike Cope's car hit the wall, bringing out the seventh yellow flag of the night. Larson grabbed the lead on pit road and sailed to the victory.

"I'm really pumped for the playoffs, we've got a really good shot at the championship," Larson said. "I've got the greatest team out here and definitely the best pit crew. They were money all night long to gain spots. This win is a huge congrats to them."

And to Cope.

Truex, who clinched the regular-season NASCAR Cup title last week, had the race easily in hand until the 58-year-old Cope crashed with under four laps remaining. Truex then wrecked in overtime while racing with Denny Hamlin for position. The sequence cost him his fifth win of the season.

"A caution for a guy who shouldn't even have been out there," Truex said about Cope. "It's kind of ridiculous."

Dale Earnhardt Jr was officially eliminated from the playoffs with a 13th-place finish. He's retiring at the end of the season, and has never won a Cup title. Earnhardt stayed out during [illegible] stops, briefly assuming the lead for laps to go, but the caution that [illegible] made the strategy pay off instead.

"That's what we needed at the moment, and we didn't get it. Bummer deal. It was the only shot we had."

Stephens tops Keys in US Open final for 1st Grand Slam title

By Howard Fendrich
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Sloane Stephens never looked shaken by the setting or the stakes in her first Grand Slam final. Her opponent, Madison Keys, most definitely did.

Stephens easily beat her close friend Keys 6-3, 6-0 to win the U.S. Open on Saturday, capping a remarkably rapid rise after sitting out 11 months because of foot surgery.

"I should just retire now," Stephens joked. "I told Maddie I'm never going to be able to top this. I mean, talk about a comeback."

The 83rd-ranked Stephens, who beat Venus Williams in the semifinals, is only the second unseeded woman to win the tournament in the Open era, which began in 1968.

A year ago, she sat out the U.S. Open altogether because of what turned out to be a stress fracture in her left foot. She had an operation in January, and made her season debut at Wimbledon in July, exiting in the first round. Lost her next match, too, in Washington.

Since then, she has gone 15-2, and her ranking has soared from outside the top 900 to what will be around No. 20 as of Monday. Oh, and, don't forget: She is now, and forever will be, a Grand Slam champion.

"I mean, things just have to come together," Stephens said, "and the last six weeks, five weeks, they really have." This was only the second time in the Open era that two women were making their Grand Slam final debuts against each other in New York. Stephens most certainly handled the occasion better, claiming the last eight games and making only six unforced errors — Keys had 30 — in the entire 61-minute mismatch.

"Sloane is truly one of my favorite people and to get to play her was really special. Obviously I didn't play my best tennis today and was disappointed," Keys said. "But Sloane, being the great friend that she is, was very supportive.

Chapman gets save, Yankees allow 1 hit to top Rangers 3-1

By Schuyler Dixon
Associated Press

ARLINGTON — Aroldis Chapman entered in the ninth inning of a save situation for the first time since he was removed as the New York Yankees' closer last month.

The hard-throwing left-hander made it look as easy as 1-2-3.

Chapman struck out two in a perfect ninth to finish a one-hitter in the Yankees' 3-1 win over the Texas Rangers on Saturday.

Tyler Austin hit a go-ahead single in the ninth inning for the wild card-leading Yankees.

"I feel good about him out there," manager Joe Girardi said. "This is a guy that's been too good for too long, for me, to lose it. It's good to get him back out there. He threw well."

Before the game, Girardi said he would prefer to settle on a closer over the committee approach he has employed since demoting Chapman after he gave up two runs in a non-save situation in a 9-6 loss at Boston on Aug. 18.

Chapman had his fifth scoreless outing in six appearances since, capping it with a swinging strikeout of pinch-hitter Mike Napoli on a 102 mph fastball for his team-leading 17th save in 21 chances.

"Really nice," said starter Luis Severino, who struck out 10 in seven innings in his first no-decision since July 15 at Boston. "I know he can throw a strike. I know he can get that role, that save."

The only hit off Severino was Brett Nicholas' run-scoring double with two outs in the fifth. Will Middlebrooks, the lone runner past second against Severino, scored from first.

David Robertson (7-2) pitched a perfect eighth.

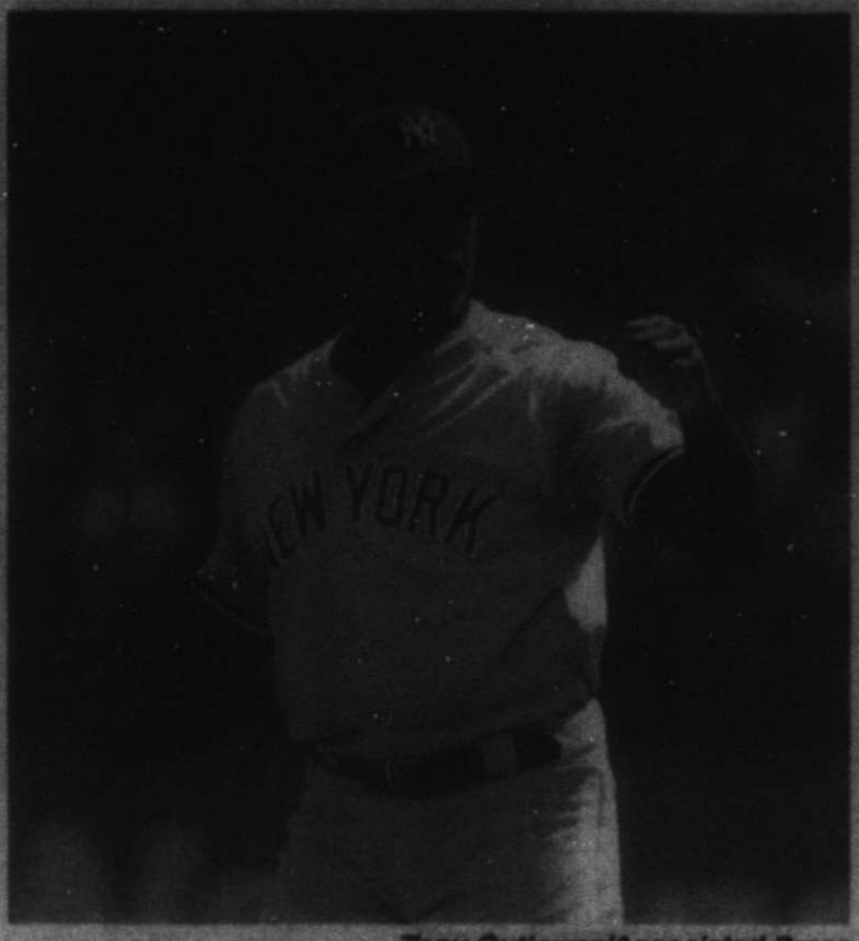
Chase Headley drove in two runs without a hit — a tying sacrifice fly in the eighth and a bases-loaded walk for a 3-1 lead in the ninth.

Texas starter Andrew Cashner had a shutout while pitching into the eighth inning for just the second time this season, but left after hitting Todd Frazier with the first pitch of the eighth.

Alex Claudio gave up a single to pinch-hitter Matt Holliday, putting Frazier at third with no outs and setting up Headley's sacrifice fly an out later.

"I felt like I could have kept going, but I thought Frazier was going to come out swinging," Cashner said. "I wasn't trying to throw a strike and it just sailed on me."

Claudio (4-2) allowed four singles among eight batters he faced. Frazier was hit by a pitch again in the ninth by Ricky Rodriguez, who allowed Austin's go-ahead hit and Headley's walk.



Tony Gutierrez/Associated Press

New York Yankees relief pitcher Aroldis Chapman looks down at the plate after getting Texas Rangers' Mike Napoli to strike out for the final out in the ninth inning on Saturday in Arlington. The Yankees won 3-1.

Solid save

Severino struck out 10 or more for the fifth time this season, the first since July 8 against Milwaukee. The 23-year-old right-hander is the first Yankees pitcher to allow one or no hits in at least seven innings since Michael Pineda against Baltimore on Sept. 22, 2014. "He was really good today," Girardi said. "It looked like he had great command of his fastball."

Another Gomez injury

Texas center fielder Carlos Gomez left after rolling his right ankle on a swing in the second inning. He didn't even make it halfway to first on the groundout and needed help getting off the field. He was on crutches with a walking boot after the game. Gomez missed a month in May and June with a hamstring strain and was on the 10-day disabled list last month to have a cyst removed behind his right shoulder.

Short hops

It was the fewest hits for the Rangers since opening day last season, when they beat Seattle 3-2 despite getting just one hit. ... Aaron Judge walked in the second inning to tie the major league rookie record of 106 by Cleveland's Les Fleming in 1942. ... Cashner's no-decision was the sixth time this season a Texas starter went at least seven innings allowing one or no runs without getting a win. ... The Yankees won for the eighth time this year when trailing after seven innings.

Houston Astros' Alex Bregman, left, is tagged out in a rundown between second and third base by Oakland Athletics' Marcus Semien (10) in the fifth inning of the game of a doubleheader on Saturday in Oakland, Calif.

Walkover: Astros beaten by A's in both ends of doubleheader

By Michael Wagaman
Associated Press

OAKLAND, Calif. — Normally reliable Houston reliever Chris Devenski allowed two runs in the seventh inning, including Chad Pinder's tiebreaking homer with two outs, and the Astros lost 11-4 as the Oakland Athletics completed a doubleheader sweep Saturday.

Houston's third straight loss to the last-place A's loss dropped manager A.J. Hinch's ballclub into a tie with streaking Cleveland for the best record in the American League at 86-56. The Indians have won 17 straight.

The Astros' magic number for winning the AL West remained at eight, pending the Los Angeles Angels' game at Seattle later.

Houston lost the first game 11-1 when Astros pitchers forced in five runs with bases-loaded walks and the team tied a franchise record with 13 free passes.

The nightcap wasn't much better.

Jose Altuve hit his 23rd home run and inched closer to 200 hits, but the Astros couldn't hold an early three-run lead in the makeup of an April 16 rainout — the first at the Coliseum since 2014.

Houston led 4-3 on pinch-hitter George Springer's sacrifice fly in the seventh that drove in Carlos Beltran.

Devenski (8-4) had allowed one earned run over his previous 15 appearances before getting touched up for two in the seventh.

The Astros' bullpen gave up nine runs overall and spoiled a mostly strong outing by starter Brad Peacock, who struck out nine. He allowed two runs and didn't walk a batter over 5 2/3 innings. Pinder homered again as part of Oakland's six-run eighth.

Chris Hatcher (1-1) retired six batters for the win.

In the opener, Oakland led 3-1 before Tyler Clippard issued the first bases-loaded walk to Jed Lowrie in the sixth inning. Reymin Guduan brought in three more while allowing five straight walks on 28 pitches in the eighth.

Larson steals win in NASCAR regular season finale

By Hank Kurz Jr.
Associated Press

RICHMOND, Va. — Kyle Larson and his Chip Ganassi Racing team needed a break, and it came with two laps to go.

Running second to a dominant Martin Truex Jr. and itching for fresh tires and a shot at victory in overtime, Larson got it when Derrike Cope's car hit the wall, bringing out the seventh yellow flag of the night. Larson grabbed the lead on pit road and sailed to the victory.

"I'm really pumped for the playoffs, we've got a really good shot at the championship," Larson said. "I've got the greatest team out here and definitely the best pit crew. They were money all night long to gain spots. This win is a huge congrats to them."

And to Cope.

Truex, who clinched the regular-season NASCAR Cup title last week, had the race easily in hand until the 58-year-old Cope crashed with under four laps remaining. Truex then wrecked in overtime while racing with Denny Hamlin for position. The sequence cost him his fifth win of the season.

"A caution for a guy who shouldn't even have been out there," Truex said about Cope. "It's kind of ridiculous."

Dale Earnhardt Jr was officially eliminated from the playoffs with a 13th-place finish. He's retiring at the end of the season, and has never won a Cup title. Earnhardt stayed out during late green-flag pit stops, briefly assuming the lead with 66 laps to go, but the caution that could have made the strategy pay off never came.

"That's what we needed at the moment, and we didn't get it," Earnhardt said. "It was the only shot we had."

Truex will still start the 10-race playoff stretch as the favorite to win the championship because he earned the most bonus points during the regular season. He and his Furniture Row Racing team were presented with the regular-season championship trophy.

The reward is a slew of bonus points, but Truex feigned a smile because he'd have preferred to have the race winning trophy, too.

"Tonight is a little tough, it's a little hard to be excited," he said.

He's also got to watch over his shoulder for Larson, who now has a nice bit of a momentum going into the opening round of the playoffs at Chicagoland.

The Richmond victory was Larson's first on a short track in the Cup Series.

"This has been a dream season for me, and we still have a long way to go," Larson said.

Chaos erupted with 140 laps remaining because one of NASCAR's rescue vehicles clogged the entrance to pit road as cars headed to their stalls. As the traffic bottlenecked, Matt Kenseth ran into the car in front of him, and his night was ended with a crumpled hood.

FCS Lamar hold UTPB to 141 yards wins 72-6

From staff reports

BEAUMONT — Lamar had 642 total yards to roll past U.T.-Permian Basin, 72-6, on Saturday night.

Lamar, an FCS opponent, held the NCAA Division II Falcons to just 141 total yards.

The only score for UTPB (0-2) came on a 3-yard touchdown run by quarterback and Lee grad Caden Coots at the 5:36 mark of the first quarter to take a 6-3 lead.

UTPB was held to 141 total yards.

Coots was 2-of-13 passing for 49 yards and one interception, while sophomore Kameron Mathis was just 1 of 5 for 25 yards.

Freshman back and Fort Stockton grad Alonso Corral led the Falcons in rushing with 53 yards on 11 carries.

UTPB heads to West Texas A&M at 3 p.m. Saturday to open Lone Star Conference play.

Alabama quarterback Jalen Hurts celebrates after running the ball in for a touchdown in the first half of an NCAA football game against Fresno State on Saturday, in Tuscaloosa, Ala.

TEXAS COLLEGE ROUNDUP

NO. 23 TCU 28 ARKANSAS 7

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. — Darius Anderson ran for a career-high 108 yards and a touchdown and No. 23 TCU's defense dominated once again.

Anderson had 15 carries to help the Horned Frogs (2-0) win in Fayetteville for the first time since 1984 when both schools were in the Southwest Conference. The sophomore's previous rushing best was 103 yards in a victory over Texas last season.

Kenny Hill was 21-of-31 passing for 166 yards for TCU, and the Horned Frogs held the Razorbacks (1-1) to 267 yards of total offense — a week after allowing only 65 yards in a 63-0 victory over Jackson State.

Arkansas' Austin Allen was 9 of 23 for 138 yards, a year after accounting for four touchdowns in the Razorbacks' double-overtime win at TCU. Arkansas has lost three of its last four games to fall to 26-27 under fifth-season year coach Bret Bielema.

TEXAS 56 SAN JOSE STATE 0

AUSTIN — Chris Warren III ran for 166 yards and two touchdowns and freshman Sam Ehlinger got his first career start at quarterback as Texas beat San Jose State 56-0 Saturday to give coach Tom Herman his first win with the Longhorns.

Ehlinger started in place of injured Shane Buechele and passed for 222 yards. Jerrod Heard, a wide receiver and former starting quarterback, rotated with Ehlinger several times and scored on runs of 9 and 3 yards in the first half.

Warren's first touchdown came on a 41-yard burst off a direct snap in the second quarter. Defensive back Holton Hill scored his third touchdown in two games with an interception return for a score in the third.

The victory was a crucial turnaround for the Longhorns (1-1), who lost Herman's debut at home to Maryland a week earlier. After giving up 51 points in that loss, the Texas defense got its first shutout since 2014 and first at home since 2012.

TEXAS A&M 24 NICHOLLS ST. 14

COLLEGE STATION — Kendall Bussey ran for 97 yards and the go-ahead 2-yard touchdown in the fourth quarter as Texas A&M outlasted Nicholls State 24-14 on Saturday night.

The game was tied at 14-all when Bussey bulled into the end zone for A&M's first score since the first quarter with about 7 1/2 minutes left to put the Aggies (1-1) on top.

Nicholls State (1-1), an FCS school which plays in the Southland Conference, challenged the Aggies a week after they squandered a 34-point third-quarter lead in a stunning 45-44 loss to UCLA.

The Aggies started Kellen Mond at quarterback after Nick Starkel suffered a broken ankle last week, but Jake Hubenak took over early in the third quarter and finished the game. Mond threw for 105 yards and a touchdown and Hubenak added 93 yards passing.

UTSA 17 BAYLOR 10

WACO — Dalton Sturm threw for 155 yards with two touchdowns and ran for 98 more yards as UTSA got its first-ever win over a Power Five team, 17-10 Saturday night over a Baylor team that has lost its first two games under new coach Matt Rhule.

The Bears are 0-2 for the first time since 2003, and have now lost eight consecutive regular-season games. They won the Cactus Bowl last December after a 6-6 record was enough to get one of the Big 12's bowl spots.

UTSA went ahead to stay on the opening drive after halftime when Sturm, the former walk-on who started his 21st consecutive game, had a keeper for 40 yards and then on the next play threw a 29-yard TD pass to Kerry Thomas Jr. for a 14-7 lead.

A week after their scheduled opener at home against Houston was cancelled because of Hurricane Harvey, the Roadrunners started their seventh season as a program with their biggest win yet. They had been 0-9 against Power Five teams.

TOP 25 ROUNDUP

NO. 1 ALABAMA 41 FRESNO STATE 10

Jalen Hurts ran for 154 yards and two touchdowns and passed for a third score in No. 1 Alabama's 41-10 victory over Fresno State on Saturday.

The Crimson Tide (2-0) polished off the 44-point underdog Bulldogs (1-1) with a workmanlike performance on the heels of an opening victory over No. 10 Florida State in Atlanta.

Hurts completed 14 of 18 passes for 128 yards, but his biggest play came in the opening minute. He faked a handoff and sprinted 55 yards for a touchdown on the second offensive play, stepping out of a last-gasp tackle attempt at the 15.

Hurts also hit a wide-open Hale Hentges for a 23-yarder in the first quarter. It was the tight end's first career touchdown.

The Tide led 28-3 at halftime against Fresno State, which had opened coach Jeff Tedford's first season with a 66-0 win over FCS Incarnate Word.

Fresno State scored on Chason Virgil's 26-yard pass to Derrion Grim with just over six minutes left. That was set up by Da'Mari Scott's 63-yard kick return

Alabama outgained the Bulldogs 305-58 on the ground.

NO. 3 CLEMSON 14, NO. 13 AUBURN 6

CLEMSON, S.C. — Kelly Bryant had two touchdown runs after getting knocked hard to the ground and defensive end Austin Bryant had four of Clemson's 11 sacks.

This was billed as an early showcase between elite teams with dreams of the College Football Playoffs. Instead, Clemson's Bryants never gave Auburn (1-1) much of a chance.

Bryant, making his second career start at quarterback for defending national champion Clemson, appeared to be seriously hurt after he remained on the ground on a hit by Dontavius Russell. But after a few moments in the medical tent, Bryant returned to direct a pair of touchdown drives that gave Clemson (2-0) the lead for good. Bryant's 3-yard run right before halftime put Clemson ahead 7-6. He finished the next possession with a spinning, 27-yard burst.

Clemson's defense squashed any chance of an Auburn comeback. Bryant was nearly unblockable and created havoc quarterback Jarrett Stidham and Auburn, which was held to 117 yards.

Austin Byrant sacked Stidham on Auburn's final two plays as the Baylor transfer desperately tried to get the ball downfield. Byrant threw for 181 yards on 19-of-29 passing. He also rushed for 68 yards.

NO. 4 PENN STATE 33. PITTSBURGH 14

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. — Trace McSorley threw for three touchdowns, including Saquon Barkley's 46-yard catch-and-run, and Penn State pulled away.

McSorley completed 15 of 28 passes for 164 yards, helping the Nittany Lions (2-0) avenge a loss to their in-state rivals a year ago. Tight end Mike Gesicki had two touchdown receptions and Barkley ran for 88 yards to help Penn State ended a two-game skid against the Panthers.

Qadree Ollison ran for 96 yards for the Panthers (1-1), but Pitt's offense struggled to finish drives early on and the Nittany Lions pulled away late. Max Browne completed 19 of 32 passes for only 138 yards and was intercepted twice.

NO. 7 WASHINGTON 63, MONTANA 7

SEATTLE — Dante Pettis weaved his way 67 yards for the seventh punt return touchdown of his career, and Jake Browning threw for 259 yards and two touchdowns for Washington.

Pettis set a Pac-12 record, taking a punt back for a score for the second straight game. Pettis' 61-yard return in the season opener against Rutgers last week tied him with DeSean Jackson for the Pac-12 mark and ignited Washington (2-0) after a sluggish start.

The conference record is Pettis' alone now. Montana (1-1) made the unwise decision to punt to Pettis on the final play of the first quarter. The senior veered to the sideline nearest where he caught the kick, cut all the way across the field, juked Montana punter Eric Williams and sprinted the final few yards to give the Huskies a 21-7 lead. Pettis is one shy of the NCAA record for punt return touchdowns in a career, held by Wes Welker (Texas Tech) and Antonio Perkins (Oklahoma).

NO. 8 MICHIGAN 36, CINCINNATI 14

ANN ARBOR, Mich.— Ty Isaac ran for a career-high 133 yards and Wilton Speight threw two touchdown passes to help Michigan pull away.

The Wolverines (2-0) led by just three points early in the second half before scoring 19 straight points to turn a closely contested game into a lopsided one.

The Bearcats (1-1) failed to take advantage of Michigan's many mistakes and made some miscues of their own to spoil an upset bid.

Cincinnati's Hayden Moore was 15 of 40 for 132 yards with a TD pass to Kahlil Lewis that cut Michigan's lead to 17-14 in the third quarter. Moore had some passes dropped and had some errant throws, two of which were intercepted and returned for scores by Tyree Kinnel in the first quarter and Lavert Hill late in the fourth.

Speight completed 17 of 29 passes for 221 yards. He had TD passes to Kekoa Crawford early in the game and to Grant Perry in the third that gave Michigan a 10-point cushion.

NO. 9 WISCONSIN 31, FLORIDA ATLANTIC 14

MADISON, Wis. — Freshman Jonathan Taylor ran for 223 yards and three touchdowns and Alex Hornibrook threw for 201 yards and a score for Wisconsin.

The bigger Badgers (2-0) wore down the Owls (0-2) despite some middling play in the middle of the game. Wisconsin opened up 14-0 lead in the first quarter o Taylor's 64- and 29-yard touchdown runs, but didn't have the game in hand until his third score with 1:12 left in the third quarter.

The threat of Hurricane Irma bearing down on South Florida put the stakes in perspective for the Owls and first-year coach Lane Kiffin. The Owls will stay in Madison at least through Sunday.

NO. 12 LSU 45, CHATTANOOGA 10

BATON ROUGE, La. — Derrius Guice ran for 102 yards and two touchdowns, D.J. Chark returned a punt 65 yards for a score, and LSU overcame bouts of sloppiness.

Danny Etling passed for 227 yards and a TD, connecting on eight of 14 attempts in less than three quarters of work for the Tigers (2-0). Etling's scoring pass was a 36-yarder to Drake Davis.

Chark had three receptions for 103 yards, including a 48-yard catch from Etling in the third quarter. Chark also had a 79-yard punt return for a would-be TD negated by a holding penalty.

While LSU coach Ed Orgeron is bound to be pleased overall by a two-game start in which the Tigers have outscored opponents 72-10 combined, he also could be concerned about a rash of penalties and place-kicking problems as his team prepares for its first Southeastern Conference game next week. LSU was penalized 11 times for 74 yards, one week after committing 10 penalties for 86 yards against BYU.

Chattanooga is 0-2.

NO. 17 LOUISVILLE 47, NORTH CAROLINA 35

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. — Heisman Trophy winner Lamar Jackson accounted for 525 total yards and six touchdowns and Louisville pulled away late.

Jackson threw for 393 yards and three scores and ran for 132 yards and three TDs. The last came on a spinning-through-tacklers 11-yard run with 3:06 left to punctuate a dominant fourth-quarter effort by the Cardinals (2-0, 1-0 Atlantic Coast Conference).

Junior Jaylen Smith had nine catches for a career-high 183 yards and a score, and Dez Fitzpatrick hauled in two TDs as the Cardinals rolled to 705 yards.

Chazz Surratt and Brandon Harris combined to throw for North Carolina (0-2, 0-1).

NO. 18 VIRGINIA TECH 27, DELAWARE 0

BLACKSBURG, Va. — Greg Stroman returned a punt 61 yards for a touchdown and Josh Jackson threw two scoring passes for Virginia Tech.

Stroman is the first player in Virginia Tech history to return a punt for a touchdown in three consecutive seasons.

The Hokies (2-0), coming off a last-second win over West Virginia, struggled offensively for much of the game, but got scoring strikes of 4 and 28 yards from Jackson. The latter one went to Cam Phillips, who broke free on a post pattern to give the Hokies breathing room in the fourth quarter.

Jackson completed 16 of 27 passes for 222 yards.

Delaware is 1-1.

NO. 19 KANSAS STATE 55, CHARLOTTE 7

MANHATTAN, Kan. — Kendall Adams scored on interception and fumble returns in the first half for Kansas State.

Adams returned an interception 30 yards to give the Wildcats (2-0) a 21-0 lead in the first quarter, and had a 46-yard fumble return late in the second to make it 31-7.

Alex Barnes, Jesse Ertz and Winston Dimel had touchdown runs.

Charlotte dropped to 0-2.

NO. 25 TENNESSEE 42, INDIANA STATE 7

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. — Ty Chandler returned the opening kickoff 91 yards for a touchdown, Carlin Fils-aime had two scoring runs and Tennessee breezed past Indiana State.

Five days after John Kelly ran for four touchdowns in Tennessee's 42-41 double-overtime triumph over Georgia Tech, he shared the spotlight with his backups in a game that had much less suspense. Kelly ran for 80 yards and caught five passes for 60 yards to lead the Volunteers (2-0) in rushing and receiving, but two guys below him on the depth chart scored Tennessee's first three touchdowns.

Chandler took the opening kickoff just to the right of the right hash, easily shed an attempted arm tackle as he approached his own 35 and ran untouched the rest of the way. Chandler is the first Tennessee true freshman to score on a kickoff return since Leonard Scott did it against Georgia in 1999.

Indiana State is 0-2.

SOONERS

From 1C

Ten) was plagued by the same problems with the passing game that has tripped it up since last season. Receivers had trouble getting open and when they did, Barrett couldn't get the ball into their hands. He was intercepted by Parnell Motley in the fourth quarter, allowing the Sooners to score a minute and 40 seconds later on a 3-yard run by Jordan Smallwood to make it 31-13. Oklahoma avenged the Buckeyes' 45-24 loss in Norman last year. Barrett didn't look anything like the quarterback who tossed four touchdown passes in that game as Ohio State lost at home for the first time since Nov. 21, 2015.

THE TAKEAWAY

Oklahoma: The Sooners staked a legitimate claim as a national championship contender. Oklahoma's experienced offensive line won the battle of the trenches, and Mayfield picked apart the young Ohio State secondary.

Ohio State: History shows that an early season loss to a top five team doesn't always spoil playoff hopes, but the Buckeyes face a much tougher road to get back there. They showed they are still susceptible to killer mistakes that need to be corrected if they expect to win out.

POLL IMPLICATIONS:

Oklahoma: The Sooners will move up at least one spot.

Ohio State: The Buckeyes will drop, but should stay in the top 10.

UP NEXT:

Oklahoma: Hosts Tulane next Saturday.

Ohio State: After two tough games to start the season, the Buckeyes face Army at home next weekend.

Houston Texans defensive end J.J. Watt (99) gestures during the first half of an NFL game against the Jacksonville Jaguars in 2016, in Houston.

Texans face Jags in opener as Houston recovers from Hurricane Harvey

By Kristie Rieken
Associated Press

HOUSTON — Hurricane Harvey made football an afterthought in Houston.

On Sunday when they open the season against the Jacksonville Jaguars, the Texans know a city just beginning to rebuild after the storm will be looking for them to provide a boost.

"We know it's a hard time here in Houston right now," running back Lamar Miller said. "We're just trying to do anything to make this city proud this upcoming Sunday. And for us to do that, everybody has to do their assignment, play fast and just put on a show."

The Texans last took the field for a preseason game against the Saints on Aug. 26. They spent several days in Dallas before their last preseason game was cancelled after the storm.

Houston looks to extend its winning streak against the Jaguars to seven games in a matchup that will feature the return of superstar defensive end J.J. Watt. He missed the final 13 games of last season following his second back surgery.

Watt has become the celebrity face of the storm after a fundraiser he started has raised more than $29 million (and counting) for hurricane relief. He's been overwhelmed by the outpouring of support he's received from around the country and can't wait to play Sunday to help provide the fans an escape.

Watt was also quick to note his teammates have also pitched in to help out in the days since the storm.

"Our guys understand how big this city is for us," Watt said. "We wouldn't have a job if it wasn't for these incredible fans and these incredible people supporting us, and our guys have been unbelievable about trying to give back and do whatever they can. It's been really cool to have their support behind all of this."

While the Texans move into their season after the storm, the Jaguars will have to leave their family and friends behind to head to Houston as Hurricane Irma approaches Florida. Coach Doug Marrone said they've had long discussions about how the team will deal with it, but declined to provide any details on their plans.

"We're going to handle that all internally of what we're doing with all of our plans and trying to make sure we keep everyone in mind as this is going on, because this is a difficult thing for the people that work here," he said. "It's a difficult thing for the people in Jacksonville. ... We just got to do the best job at this time for the families and the people that are involved."

Some things to know about the Jaguars-Texans game:

READY TO GO?: Jacksonville quarterback Blake Bortles was listed on the injury report (right wrist), but said Wednesday that it wasn't a concern and he'd be ready to go on Sunday.

Sunday will be his 46th straight start, and after facing the Texans often he knows Sunday will be another challenge. He tries not to dwell on the things that went wrong in his first three seasons.

"I try to leave it in the past," he said. "None of it was any good, I don't think. I think there's obviously stuff you can learn from and from different situations ... but I'd rather not think about it. ... As of now it's focus on how can we beat the Texans and how can I help us be as efficient as possible."

KICKING OFF: Ka'imi Fairbairn will make his NFL debut after the Texans cut veteran Nick Novak and made him the team's kicker. Fairbairn signed with Houston last season after going undrafted and spent all year on injured reserve.

He doesn't expect to be nervous Sunday because of the preparation he's put in since joining the Texans.

"Just keep stuff simple. Make kicks," he said. "That's the name of the game, making my kicks."

BOUYE'S RETURN: Cornerback A.J. Bouye signed with the Texans as an undrafted free agent in 2013 and spent his first four years with the team before signing a $67.5 million contract to join the Jaguars this offseason. As he prepared for the first meeting against his former team, Bouye reflected how much going against Houston receiver DeAndre Hopkins in practice every day aided his development.

"It helped out a lot, definitely, going against one of the best receivers in the league," Bouye said. "He had plays on me, I made plays on him, and one thing I tried to do was see what I could do better ... just trying to make myself better as a player to help the team win at the time."

FOURNETTE'S DEBUT: Jaguars running back Leonard Fournette is expected to make his debut after missing the last three preseason games with a foot injury. Jacksonville is hoping the fourth overall pick in the draft, who ran for 3,830 yards in his career at LSU will beef up a running game that ranked 22nd last season.

Mike McCoy faces Chargers to begin 2nd stint in Denver

By Arnie Stapleton
Associated Press

ENGLEWOOD, Colo. — Mike McCoy is calling the plays again instead of the shots. His second stint as Denver's offensive coordinator begins Monday night against the Chargers, the team that fired him as their head coach nine months ago.

McCoy won't say it, but wide receiver Demaryius Thomas thinks McCoy would like to stick it to his former team. "Absolutely. If you were the head coach for the Chargers and you got fired, you play them on Monday night, what would you want to do? I'd try to put up 100 if I could," Thomas said. "I know it's impossible, but I'd try."

There are other reasons this is a big game for the Broncos : It's a divisional game in the ultra-competitive AFC West, where teams can ill afford a home loss. Plus, the Chiefs are already riding high thanks to their 42-27 rout at New England in the NFL kickoff.

So, facing familiar faces doesn't necessarily add to his fire.

"I give all the respect in the world for everyone in the organization. I can't thank the Spanos family enough for everything and the opportunity they gave me back in 2013 to lead their organization," said McCoy, who went 27-37 in San Diego with one playoff appearance — a loss to Denver after his first season.

"I have a lot of respect for all of those players," McCoy said. "A lot of great people, not just players but the way every coach and every player through some tough times fought their tails off every day. There was no excuse as we just showed up to work every day, but unfortunately we didn't win enough games. We're excited here and that's the thing now. I've got a new home and we're ready to go."

Vance Joseph's first move as the Broncos coach was hiring McCoy, whose return to Denver has been celebrated by the offensive players.

"It's been great," said Thomas, who thrived under McCoy's tutelage early in his career, whether he was catching passes from Tim Tebow or Peyton Manning. "It's been great for the new guys that came around and learned the offense. You can see the excitement on their faces to get the season started."

The Broncos are expecting better production offensively after petering out under Rick Dennison and Gary Kubiak last year. They beefed up their backfield, adding veteran Jamaal Charles and rookie De'Angelo Henderson, and they added venom to their O-line with first-round draft pick Garett Bolles and free agents Allen Barbre, Ronald Leary and Menelik Watson.

The biggest addition, however, might very well be McCoy.

"I think Mike McCoy is a chess master," said tight end Virgil Green, one of just two players who were on the roster the last time McCoy was calling the plays for the Broncos. "He knows how to calls plays, set plays up and how to set plays up that he was setting up two weeks ago. He's a wizard so I think him calling the plays and our coaches wanting us to understand why we're doing certain things is ultimately going lead to our success."

careless risks and even tacked on some spectacular throws, especially on third down.

His touchdown strike to Grant Brown to get Lee on the board in the first quarter came on a third down situation in the red zone. Later, facing a third-and-14 in the third quarter, he connected on a 30-yard pass over the middle to Tyler Madrid to keep the chains moving.

Behind him, running back Josh Traylor set a new varsity career high with 228 yards on only 14 carries. In two games this season, Traylor, a junior, has already amassed 421 yards and seven touchdowns in three halves of play.

"He's special," said Lee head coach Clint Hartman of his emerging runner.

When both Standard and the Lee running game on are on point — picking up chunks of yardage and also minimizing turnovers as they did Friday — this offense is proving that it can be a challenge to contain.

Through two games now, the Rebels offense has cranked out an average of 554 yards per game to go along with 15 touchdowns. That's about as good as it gets this early in the season.

And defensively, Lee was just as impressive in the final product of the victory.

Similarly to Coronado last week, Abilene picked up all of its points early on with explosive plays downfield — the Eagles' second touchdown came on a 56-yard heave to talented wideout Raekwon Millsap late in the second quarter.

But once the Rebels began to get a read on things, the Abilene offense fell into a tailspin. In the second half the Eagles were shut out, managed only three first downs and crossed midfield once.

Hartman said his defense was a hard-nosed group willing to surrender yardage, but one that refused to allow any more points.

"What I liked is the defensive guys, they bent a little bit but they never broke," Hartman said. "They kept playing well in the red zone."

For the second straight week, senior linebacker Isaiah Nunez turned in a stellar night with 18 total tackles (nine solo) against the Eagles. He is currently on pace for a 150-plus tackle season.

Nunez spearheaded a defensive unit that once again stood tall when the Rebels needed it the most, even without starting safety Trey Jacobo. Last week, the Lee defense stonewalled eight of Coronado's final 10 drives of the game.

The Rebels' players, coaches and supporters believe they may be on to something this season. So far, the results on the field have backed up that confidence.

With a young defense that has been missing two key seniors with cornerback Jacoby Thornton and defensive end Collin McCullough, these type of growing pains were to be expected.

Craig Yenzer, Anuszkiewicz's predecessor and confidant, used to say that it was critical for a defense to tackle an opposing ball carrier on a play converted for a first down, because it forced the offense to snap the ball again and anything can happen in that case, maybe a turnover.

It doesn't take a rocket scientist to figure out that it's harder for an opposing offense to score when it has to convert five to six first downs on a drive compared to covering all the real estate on one play.

Anuszkiewicz and defensive coordinator Jeff Streun are both reputable defensive minds, so I have confidence in them to fix it before District 2-6A play.

Here are some positive developments that occurred for MHS against Montwood:

■ Lee's Josh Traylor is not the only star junior running back in the Tall City, as Midland High's Tim Gates rushed 22 times for 168 yards and scored four total TDs to bring his season total to six scores through two games.

MHS rushed for 336 yards on 46 carries, as an experienced offensive line that consists of Omar Villanueva, Juan Vasquez and Fidel Lopez paved the way. With MHS offensive line being arguably the strongest unit on the team, the running game is bound to be a strength going forward.

■ Midland High had success moving the ball with both sophomore Riggs McDonald and junior Suddin Sapien at quarterback.

Outside of one interception, McDonald had success through the air, completing 9 of 14 passes for 160 yards and a TD pass.

In his first game, Sapien showed a great feel for keeping the ball in the Dawgs' option run game, rushing for 49 yards and a TD. He also completed six of nine passes for 79 yards and a TD pass.

■ MHS scored a special teams TD for the second straight week when senior linebacker Ross Marker recovered a first-quarter fumble in the end zone on a Montwood muffed punt. Anuszkiewicz used to be the special teams coach under Yenzer, so he puts great emphasis in the play of these units.

OPENER

From 1C

Some key story lines for the fifth Giants-Cowboys opener in six seasons:

ELLIOTT SAGA: He was suspended by Commissioner Roger Goodell on Aug. 11 after the NFL concluded he had several physical confrontations with Tiffany Thompson, his girlfriend at the time, in 2016 in Ohio. Prosecutors didn't pursue the case. On Friday, Mazzant agreed with players' union lawyers that Elliott didn't receive a "fundamentally fair" hearing in his appeal and he granted the NFL Players' Association request for a temporary restraining order and preliminary injunction blocking the league's punishment.

BECKHAM FACTOR: The 24-year-old had a career-best 101 catches last season for 1,367 yards and 10 touchdowns and has made the Pro Bowl all three seasons. Beckham has five TDs against Dallas, including that famous one-handed catch as a rookie. Roger Lewis Jr. and Tavarres King are the backups, but a more likely scenario would be a bigger role for first-round draft pick Evan Engram and fellow tight end Rhett Ellison.

DEFENSIVE UNKNOWNS: Dallas linebacker Jaylon Smith should make his debut after missing his rookie season with a college knee injury. The Cowboys aren't sure what they have in someone who likely would have been a top 10 pick before the injury. They also have high hopes for rookie cornerbacks Chidobe Awuzie and Jourdan Lewis, but both have missed almost all of the preseason.

GIANTS UP FRONT: The major question for the Giants is the offensive line. The only change is right tackle Bobby Hart replacing Marshall Newhouse, who signed with Oakland as a free agent. This line didn't open holes for the running backs, but it did put Manning under constant pressure last season. Giants management felt another year together would help the group, especially left tackle Ereck Flowers.

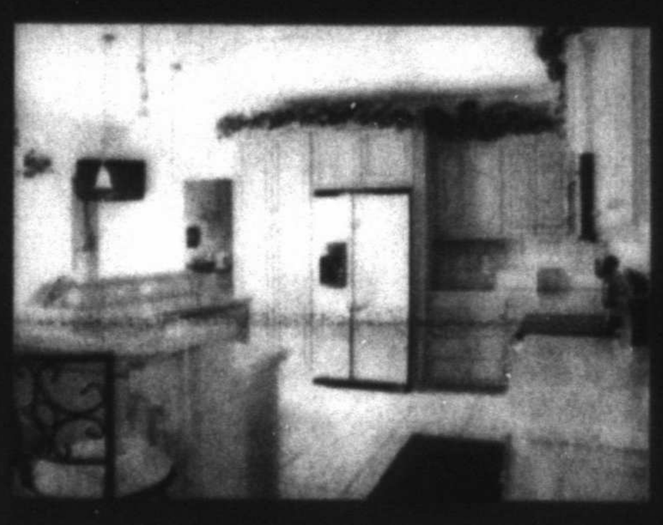
Stanton, TX

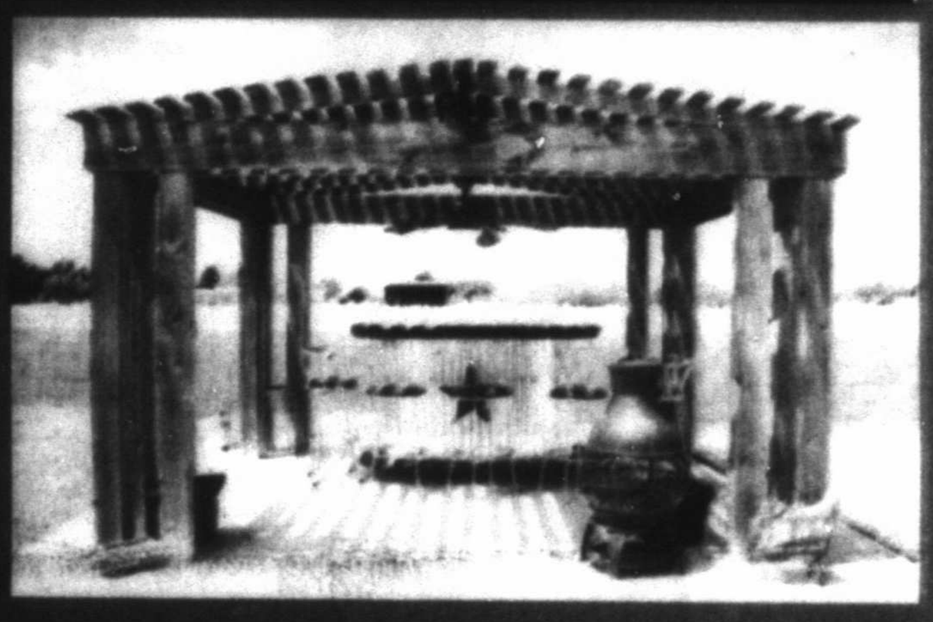
Open House Sunday 1:00 – 3:00

Life under the open Texas sky

Do you dream of a quiet home in the country—one with wide open skies, rosy sunrises and flaming sunsets—yet just four miles from school?

If so, your perfect home may be waiting for you on a serene, out-of-the-way country corner at 2201 South County Road 1044, on the eastern edge of Greenwood.





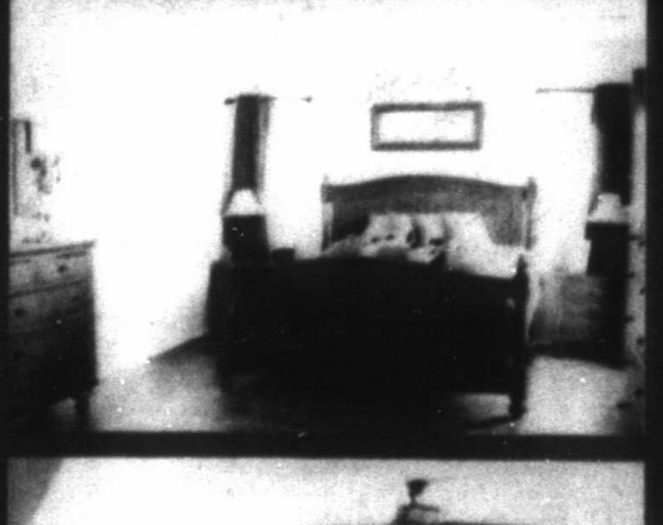
This spacious two-story three bedroom, 3.5 bath 3268 square foot home commands an open view of its surrounding 9.1 acres of fresh prairie grass. With a couple of improvements, this raw land could host horses or other animals under wide open skies.

You'll first notice the wrap-around porch protected by a classic white fence surrounding the entire home—perfect for entertaining or simply enjoying the view from any and all directions.

Stepping in through the front door, you're quickly amazed by the home's inner space and openness as well. The wide open living area sweeps around a left-side corner to the open concept kitchen and dining area, set off by the nicely-appointed island. Just off the living area a little further to the left is the short hallway between the first two bedrooms, which are joined by a jack-and-jill bath. Behind the kitchen to the right are the laundry room and a half bath, on the way to the spacious two-car garage.

Need space to park more vehicles? Just outside the garage is plenty of covered parking for at least three more vehicles.

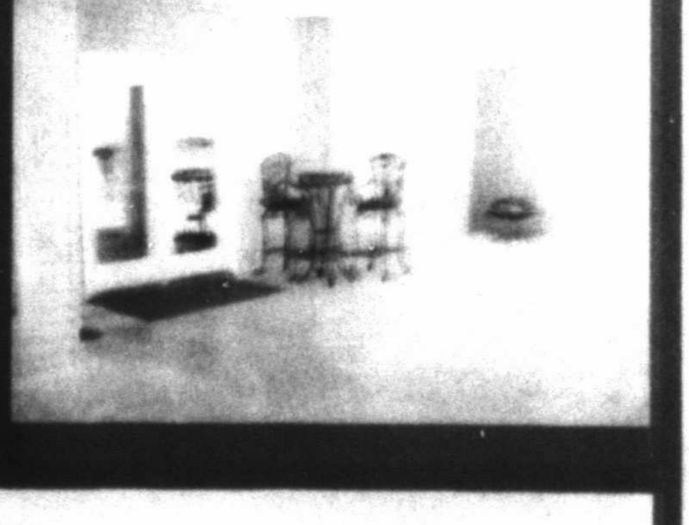
Then to the right of the front door is the airy, sequestered master suite. Its bath features dual sinks and a tub with separate shower. The bedroom itself features deep closets roomy enough to hold clothing for two, plus an under-the-stairwell closet for storage. The bedroom floor features lately-installed tile with the warm, classic tones of hand-finished wood.



When you pop upstairs you'll see the long, open room that's for—well, whatever you'd like. An office, an extra bedroom, a game room or anything you'd like. You'll find more closets plus a full bath in this lofty perch.

Wait, you haven't seen the amazing back yard yet. Right out the kitchen door is the broad sweep of the covered porch. Here you can entertain in all kinds of weather. Populate the porch with comfortable lawn furniture and get ready to relax with friends, family or just yourself on a quiet morning. This east-facing porch welcomes the sunrise 365 days a year.

There's a low fence around an intimate yard that features a concrete pad perfect for an above-ground pool, a hot tub, a second lounging area or for the addition of a full outdoor kitchen. Nearby is the welcoming shade of a quiet Pergola. The property includes three water wells (two with pumps installed).



This amazing home and property are listed at just $459,500. To take in all this beauty for yourself, call Patti Hollums, Real Estate One, at (432) 770-3073 or email at pattih@hollumsrealty.com for a tour. MLS# 50009979.

NOTICE OF APPLICATION FOR BRINE MINING INJECTION WELL PERMIT

Re: Application by Tall City Brine LLC For A Permit to Create, Operate, and Maintain a Brine Mining Facility Known as the Stanton Brine Station; Spraberry (Trend Area) Field; Martin County, Texas

Tall City Brine LLC submitted an application (Form H-2 with attachments) to the Railroad Commission of Texas dated July 25, 2017, for a Permit to Create, Operate, and Maintain a Brine Mining Facility known as the Stanton Brine Station, Spraberry (Trend Area) Field, Martin County, Texas. The applicant has requested authority to produce brine by injection of freshwater to dissolve salt from the Rustler Salt formation within the approximate subsurface interval from 1,525 feet to 2,250 feet. The applicant proposes to complete and case the well such that the injected fluid is confined to the injection interval. Surface injection pressure will be limited to a maximum of 750 pounds per square inch gauge. The maximum allowable injection pressure at the casing seat will be limited to 0.8 times the overburden pressure at that depth. Should a permit be issued, the Commission would include other conditions and requirements as necessary, such as monitoring and reporting of the extracted brine, mechanical integrity testing of the well, groundwater monitoring, and plugging and abandonment.

Oil and Gas Division technical staff has reviewed the application and determined that, based on the information contained in the application, the proposal will not endanger underground sources of drinking water as it meets or exceeds the minimum requirements for casing and cement to isolate the brine mining injection interval and the operating facilities are designed to prevent the uncontrolled discharge of brine at the surface. A draft permit is available for review upon request.

Should you wish to file comments on the application, or request a hearing on the application, you should submit your comments or request for hearing, including the nature of the issues to be raised in the hearing, no later than fifteen days after publication to:

Railroad Commission of Texas

Vanishing Green Acre Courts played host to music legends

Andy Jacobsohn/The Dallas Morning News via AP

This photo shows remains of the Green Acre Courts Motor Lodge on Tuesday in Dallas. Heavy equipment is on the site across from the Olympus at Ross Luxury Apartments. It was the only nice motel where black visitors to Dallas — including the prominent and immortal Ray Charles and heavyweight champ Joe Louis among their estimable ranks — could stay when they passed through in the early 1950s. What remains is in ruins, from the green-and-white tiled bathrooms, air conditioning, free phones and attached cafe grilling up the "best steaks available" once its selling points in ads.

The Dallas Morning News

DALLAS — Commuters cruising down Ross Avenue toward downtown Dallas passed McCoy Street every day without noticing a decomposing motor hotel in the shadow of downtown — the Green Acre Courts.

A bulldozer appeared there recently among the remnants of a once-upon-a-time homeless encampment. Tattered sleeping bags, a small mound of discarded beer cans and graffiti decorated the rotten shells of the dozen rooms and cafe that made up Green Acre Courts. The only guest that morning was the giant rat that skittered from the ruins and into the rubble piled next to what had once been the only nice motel where black visitors to Dallas — including the prominent and immortal, Ray Charles and heavyweight champ Joe Louis among their estimable ranks — could stay when they passed through in the early 1950s.

What remains of this structure isn't worth saving, except perhaps for some of the green-and-white bathroom tile peeking from of the ruins, once a selling point in ads that also touted air-conditioning, free phones and the attached cafe grilling up the "best steaks available."

These are the legacy financed, built, owned and operated by a black man (Redmon Revis) and woman (Charles Etta Jones) who filled a desperate void in a city where, not so long ago, black travelers found few open doors offering soft beds, cool rooms and hot showers. Not long from now, the remains will be carted off to the McCommas Bluff Landfill. And that will be that.

That afternoon, the city's Landmark Commission briefly paused its regularly scheduled meeting to remark upon the Green Acre Courts' demise and the commission's inability to stop it. Katherine Seale, chair, wanted to start the process that would have made the motel an official Dallas landmark with a strong push from Commissioner Evelyn Montgomery. But it was merely a symbolic gesture: the demo permit was pulled long ago.

"We just felt like the real tragedy would be not recognizing the memory and the history of Green Acre Courts," Seale told The Dallas Morning News before the meeting. "It was not just a safe haven for people traveling through the city, but also it treated people with dignity and respect at a time that was not a given."

Montgomery withdrew her motion to initiate — because there is almost nothing left to initiate. Instead, she asked only that the owners erect a memorial of some kind to note what had once stood on the site. Seale said such a commemoration was an imperative, a nod to the "cultural fabric" being erased from a city that values the newest, shiniest thing.

It's an idea past its time. If we cannot save significant buildings — if they are beyond repair, shadows of shadows — the least that can be done is remark upon what happened inside them before they were erased.

"Dallas has a beautiful black musical history," said David Ritz, the raised-in-Dallas co-author of Ray Charles' autobiography "Brother Ray." "When so much of it — like the Thomas and Hall corridor — has been destroyed under the guise of slick urbanity, it breaks my heart. This is another example that requires a landmark, a plaque, a restoration — anything other than annihilation."

What little we know about Green Acre Courts comes from passing references in musicians' biographies and a hastily assembled history compiled by local historian Carol Roark. She came up with the owners' names, found a photo of the motel stashed at the University of Texas at Austin, and discovered that in the '40s and '50s there were but a handful of Dallas motels serving black travelers, most in small repurposed homes or apartment buildings or the YMCA.

Green Acre Courts was built in a black neighborhood then known as Short North Dallas. Ray Charles stayed there on and off during his ascendancy to icon in the mid-1950s. There, he assembled his band, which included Dallas tenor-sax man David "Fathead" Newman, and jammed at the round-the-corner Empire Ballroom on Hall Street and the American Woodman Hall in South Dallas. History books show, too, that Charles moved Della Beatrice Howard from Houston to the motel when she

Conaway addresses Alzheimer's event

More than 100 people attended the second annual pancake breakfast to benefit the National Alzheimer's Association.

Congressman Mike Conaway was the featured guest at the event at the Permian Basin Board of Realtors building. The pancakes were free, but donations totaling $2,200 were received.

The fundraiser was sponsored by DeLaura and Terry Gammage, Mary and Bobby McCourt, Madison Peeler and Charlotte Dalton as a way of honoring a parent or grandparent who is battling the disease.

Conaway told the group it has his full support in the effort to fund the National Institute of Health to help find a cure for Alzheimer's disease.

To have an event included in "Out and About," contact Julie Donnelly at mrtjulie@outlook.com.

Miss Cori Shea Crumrine and Mr. Joshua Ryan Sparks, both of Midland, Texas, were united in marriage at 5:00 p.m. on Saturday, March 11, 2017 at Texas Old Town Stone Hall in Kyle, Texas. The double ring ceremony was officiated by Reverend David Johnson of FBC Midland.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Rory and Judy Crumrine of Crane, Texas and the granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jerry and Sylvia Butler of Llano, Texas, and the late Mr. and Mrs. Victor and Kay Crumrine of Odessa.

The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. W. Jeffrey and Valerie Sparks of Midland, and the grandson of Mr. and Mrs. Don and Gwyn Sparks and Mr. and Mrs. Stan and Veretta Johannsen of Midland.

Escorted by her father and given in marriage by her parents, the bride wore a lace and satin A-line gown adorned with ornate beading, with scalloped eyelash-lace cap sleeves, a chapel train, and a button-down back. Cori carried a bouquet of wooden sunflowers, roses, daisies, and dahlias.

Cori wore a diamond and pearl drop necklace with matching earrings that were a gift from the groom. On her bouquet, she carried a gold pin etched with flowers that was brought over from Germany in 1845 when her family moved to Texas.

Ring bearer was Weston Sparks, nephew of the groom.

Guitar music was provided by Cori's cousin, Chad Miller of San Marcos. A family prayer for the couple was given by the groom's father. The couple poured white and blue sand to symbolize their lives becoming one.

The reception followed immediately at Stone Hall. The guests were treated to "Roughneck Pie" and BBQ served by the groom's friend, Wes Webb of Mac's BBQ in Midland, Texas. Joshua surprised his new bride by singing "When I Say I Do" by Matthew West prior to their first dance. He was accompanied by his Nana, Gwyn Sparks, on the keyboard. Guests danced the night away to music provided by DJ David Jones, family friend of the groom, before the couple departed through a flurry of yellow rose petals and drove away in a stretch limo. The couple enjoyed a delayed honeymoon this summer to Malaysia, Singapore, and Thailand.

Cori graduated from Crane High School and Texas Tech University with a degree in Education and is a teacher with MISD at Washington STEM Academy. Keyhole gardening is easy, affordable

DEBBIE ROLAND
Permian Basin Master Gardener

Keyhole gardening is a new trend, and with little effort, can garner easy success. It is less labor-intensive and more affordable for individuals who grow all or part of their own food.

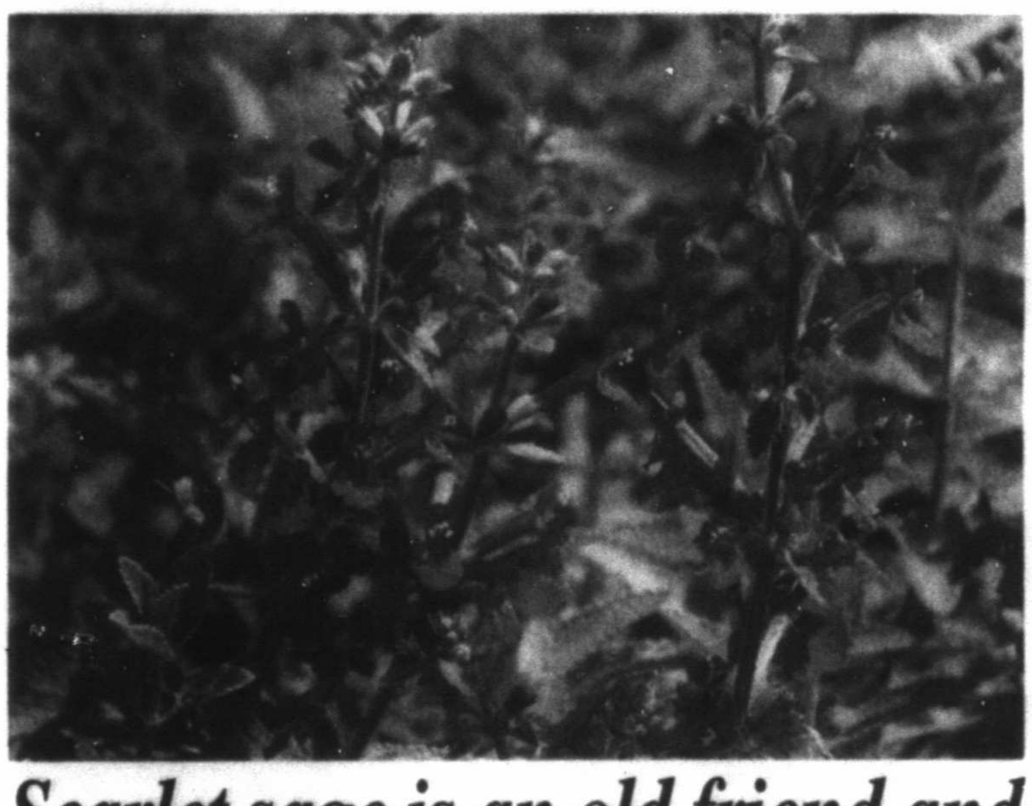
A keyhole garden is a tall raised bed with a deep porous basket in the middle where you add a continual feed of manure, vegetable scraps, paper and other brown and green matter along with garden waste and gray water. An overhead view would look like a large keyhole in a circular plot with easy access to the center basket. Most of the hard work is done by the micro-organisms in the garden that convert the materials to healthy soil.

Use recycled or natural materials to construct your keyhole garden. Various materials are added in layers. As the materials decompose and settle, soil, composting materials and amendments will need to be added to the bed.

Here are some benefits of keyhole gardening:

- Center compost basket provides a steady supply of plant nutrients and amendments.
- It uses less water with mulching and moisture from center basket and is drought-tolerant.
- Depending on outer-wall materials, soil can be warmer than traditional raised beds.
- Garden can be modified such as for a child or someone with a disability for accessibility.
- Gardens require a small area — a maximum of 6 1/2 feet in diameter.
- Using recycled material makes the gardens inexpensive to build.
- The raised design removes threat of trampling by pets and people.
- It saves steps by adding garden waste to the handy, center -compost basket.

If you are interested in more information on keyhole gardening and how to layer your materials and what to plant, the website debtolman.com is invaluable. You can also contact your local AgriLife office for information.



Scarlet sage is an old friend and is even more dazzling over time

By Norman Winter
Tribune News Service

It has been well over a decade since I last wrote about the scarlet sage, and this year it seems like I am discovering an old friend. It is like this plant I grew up loving had disappeared, but in truth, while I have been growing other flowers the scarlet sage has simply gotten better.

There is a good chance you have forgotten about this plant, or if you are under 30, there is a very good chance it is unknown to you. To get started, scarlet sage is an annual salvia known botanically as Salvia splendens. I say annual as that is how most of us treat it. In Florida, you'll find some growing as a perennial.

New colors and varieties will ensure a dazzling landscape or a sizzling mixed container for the whole gardening season. One group that you probably find new to you is the Saucy series. Saucy Wine and Saucy Red have both found fame in the Southern Living Plant Collection, while Saucy Coral looks as though designed with the artist gardener in mind with one of the rarest colors in the gardening world.

The Saucy series is relatively large getting 2 to 3 feet tall and 2 to 3 feet wide. You'll find that all of the Salvia splendens will do their part to bring in hummingbirds and butterflies. Because of their height, the Saucy series also make great cut flowers. Deadheading produces more flowers throughout the summer.

The Vista series is another group that I have always liked. These are more compact reaching only 1-foot in height and 8 to 10 inches in width. The Vista series comes in six colors and a mix. My color designer son seems to make sure white flowers are part of his mixes, and this year I have to say, the Vista White has been extraordinary. Here we are in September, and his mixed planters featuring Vista White are amazing.

Picante, Salsa, and Sizzler are also compact when compared to the Saucy series and have so many colors you'll question why they're called scarlet sage. They originate in Brazil, so the marketing or varietal names are certainly appropriate.

Color from spring through frost means this annual form of salvia is an exceptional buy and ranks as a strong performer. Its spiky texture is most welcome in a garden world dominated by round flowers.

The ideal site would get morning sun and mid-afternoon shade. The soil should be very well-drained. Plant on raised beds or amend heavy soils with the addition of compost or humus. Plant hardiness zones 8-10 may find these to be returning perennials with superior drainage.

While preparing the soil, incorporate two pounds of a slow-release, 12-6-6-fertilizer or something balanced per 100 square feet of planting area. Space the plants 10 to 12 inches apart, planting at the same depth they are growing in the container.

Water deeply, once a week, particularly during long dry periods.

Adding a good layer of mulch will reward the gardener with happier plants by keeping the root zone cooler and the moisture from quickly evaporating. Prune spent flowers to encourage branching and blossoms. This will be important for your late summer and fall display.

Feed a month after planting with a light application of fertilizer and every six to eight weeks through September.

The scarlet sage comes in almost any color, including two-toned, so it helps to know your color combinations. I have loved my son's mixed container of Saucy Coral with Black and Bloom salvia and lime green Sidekick ornamental sweet potatoes. And the others with the Vista White that seems to complement all other colors. Don't be afraid to use white; it is super as the sun sets and even reflects moonlight at night.

Hummingbirds, butterflies and dazzling beauty are pretty good companions for the scarlet sage giving you a sense of "green thumb satisfaction."

Rare Big Bend grass added to federal endangered species list

By Brendan Gibbons
San Antonio Express-News

A species of grass known to grow in only one place in West Texas is the first species to be added to the federal endangered list under President Donald Trump's administration.

Only 56 individual plants remain of Guadalupe fescue, which grows in the Chisos Mountains of Big Bend National Park, according to the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service. A post in Thursday's Federal Register also states the service has designated 7,815 acres of land in the park as critical habitat.

The grass once thrived in the conifer-oak woodlands of West Texas above 6,000 feet. These habitats are known as "sky islands" for their abrupt elevation shift and isolated ecosystems that differ from the desert floor below.

"The Guadalupe fescue was like green gold to cattle ranchers, whose cows ate it up to the brink of extinction," said Michael Robinson, a conservation advocate at the Center for Biological Diversity, which worked to have the grass protected.

The suppression of periodic wildfires could also be a factor in its decline, the service stated.

Though once found in Guadalupe Mountains National Park, Guadalupe fescue has since disappeared from that landscape, according to the service. It could possibly still grow in three sites in Coahuila, Mexico.

Neither vulnerable, West deals

	NORTH ♠Q J 9 8 4 ♡Q 10 7 2 ♢K J 9 3 ♣Void
WEST ♠7 5 ♡5 3 ♢10 8 6 5 ♣K 10 8 4 2		EAST ♠K 6 3 2 ♡J 9 8 ♢7 4 2 ♣6 5 3

WEST	NORTH	EAST	SOUTH
3♣	Pass	Pass	Dbl
Pass	4♠	Pass	5♣
Pass	6♠	Pass	7♡
All pass

Opening lead: Three of ♡

Aggressive, even wild, pre-emption is all the rage in today's tournament world. The perpetrators brag about their many successes but tend not to mention the failures. The failures aren't nearly as much fun. West's flighty pre-empt triggered an amazing show of force by North-South, ending in a poor grand slam. The pre-empt guided the play.

South won the opening trump lead and drew three rounds of trumps, ending in his hand. He cashed the ace of spades, the ace of diamonds, and the ace of clubs, discarding a low diamond from dummy.

Declarer overtook the queen of diamonds with dummy's king and discarded his remaining spade on the jack of diamonds. At this point West had followed suit to one spade, two hearts, and three diamonds. Perhaps expecting all of West's remaining cards to be clubs, South confidently led dummy's queen of spades for a ruffing finesse against the king. This was a winner, and South quickly claimed his contract.

This was not a success for the aggressive pre-empt. Without the pre-empt, North-South might have had room to discover the big hole in the spade suit and stop in a small slam. Even if they bid the grand slam, there would be losing options in the play. Declarer might try to ruff out the king of clubs, for example, or get tangled up in a cross ruff. We'll never know, but certainly the pre-empt did not gain for East-West.

Reusing gadgets gives them new life

Dear Readers: Many of you have written in about reusing gadgets, tools and utensils in the kitchen and giving them new life. Because I'm a fan of recycling, I thought I'd pass along these hints. — Heloise

Light my colander

Dear Heloise: I had an old strainer (colander) in perfectly good condition, so when we remodeled our kitchen, I decided to take my old metal strainer and use it as a light fixture over the built-in kitchen table. I spray-painted it bright yellow, drilled a hole in the bottom and ran the electrical cord through the hole. My husband did all the electrical work.

My old strainer now serves as a hanging light over my kitchen table, and it looks great! — Barbara K., Mankato, Minn.

TLC for an old ladle

Dear Heloise: My mother-in-law gave me a beautiful old-fashioned soup ladle with a very ornate handle.

It was so pretty that I decided to put it on display by nailing it to an old piece of barn board. It now has a short, fat candle resting in the cup part of the ladle, and it looks nice in my kitchen. — Karen F., Norcross, Ga.

A 'grater' idea

Dear Heloise: I had four old metal graters for cheese, so I spray-painted them orange, and when they dried, I nailed them, upside down in one long row, to my old oak tree to use as a planter for my air plants. They look cute, and I recycled four identical items rather than throwing them in the trash. — Abby J., Eugene, Ore.

Hints from Heloise
King Features Syndicate

Music to my ears

Dear Heloise: Years ago, my son took violin lessons. When he left for college, he left his music stand behind. I now use it to hold my recipe books open.

It is especially handy when I'm trying a new recipe and my hands are sticky. When I'm done, I just fold it up and put it in a closet. — Terrie H., Twin Falls, Idaho

Flan and photos

Dear Heloise: When my mother passed away, I inherited about 20 flan pans of various sizes. I took some of them and cut old photographs in circular shapes to fit the inside of the bottom of the flan pans.

Then I arranged them on a wall in my dining room (flat side to the wall). They make a unique and interesting collage, as well as a remembrance of my mom and her wonderful flans. — Meg B., Sheboygan, Wis.

Hint from him — makin' bacon

Dear Heloise: Congratulations on the added seventh day (now Sundays) in the Springfield, (Mo.) News-Leader!

I cook a whole pound of bacon on my stovetop grill, until almost crisp. I store it in the refrigerator. When needed, I microwave a few slices for 30 seconds or so until crisp and warm. — Robert K., Springfield, Mo.

Robert, thank you for your readership! One caveat for my readers, though: The U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA.gov) states to never halfway cook bacon and then refrigerate it; bacteria may not be destroyed. Cook it thoroughly and then refrigerate or freeze until use. — Heloise

Financial future uncertain because of failure to plan

Dear Abby
Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: My parents are in their 80s. Both are of sound mind and body. However, they never saved for their retirement and never talked to a financial adviser to help them make financial decisions. Dad receives a pension, but upon his death, Mom will receive nothing. This is the way they set it up years ago. They own their home, and that's about it for their assets.

Mom has told me several times they should be in our will instead of others we have chosen. My husband and I have saved for our retirement with our employers over the years. Because my parents haven't done it, we don't feel it is our responsibility to provide for their old age. Should we contact our financial adviser, who will get a chuckle out of this? — NOT OUR FINANCIAL PROBLEM

DEAR NOT YOUR PROBLEM: Your financial adviser may, indeed, get a chuckle out of it — but it's not funny. The idea that you should put your aged parents in your will is far-fetched. The odds of your predeceasing them are not promising. The next time your mother suggests it, point out that if Dad dies, the house will have to be sold so that she is provided for. If she dies first, he should be fine, financially.

DEAR ABBY: My husband had a heart attack last year, and since then he has become extremely volatile. He explodes for no reason and threatens me. He does not want me to talk about it to his doctor, and he's scaring me regularly. I don't know what to do. I think it may have to do with all the medications he's taking, but I'm not "allowed" to talk to the doctor. He is moody and making me fearful. Help — SCARED IN NEW JERSEY

DEAR SCARED: Obviously, something isn't right. Call the doctor anyway. If the doctor refuses to talk with you, write him a letter about the changes in your husband's behavior, his explosive temper and your concern that it might be medication-related. If, after that, nothing changes, talk with a licensed mental health professional about what has been going on.

If you feel you are in danger, call 911. You should not have to live in fear, and if this isn't resolved, you may have to leave the marriage for your own safety.

DEAR ABBY: I have been living in my current home for eight years and frequently receive letters addressed to previous occupants, including medical bills and notifications from the DMV. (I don't open them; the envelopes have return addresses.) How long am I obligated to stick the letter back in the mailbox with "Return to sender"? I'm getting the impression the former occupants use this false address to avoid paying their bills. It makes me feel dirty and complicit when their mail comes to me. — COMPLICIT IN MARYLAND

DEAR COMPLICIT: Why are you jumping to the conclusion that what's happening is nefarious? The former occupants may have forgotten to turn in or renew their change of address notice, or change the address on their driver's license. Stop feeling guilty for something that really has nothing to do with you. The next time one of those envelopes arrives, instead of writing, "Return to sender," write: "Not at this address."

Florida couple specializes in unusual plants you can eat

By ERIC PERA
The Ledger

Scott Wheeler/The Ledger via AP

Jared Craig and Brittany Bandi work in the nursery area of Sow Exotic Nursery on June 13 in Winter Haven, Fla. Sow Exotic is an online business that specializes in rare fruiting and medicinal plants.

LAKELAND, Fla. — Jared Craig has a nose for exotic flora. As a home gardener, he thumbed that nose at the litany of humdrum edibles.

He said no to the lettuces that monopolize grocery space — bibb, endive, butterhead, Romaine and the rest — choosing instead to concentrate on unusual greens like Rungia klossii, often called the mushroom plant, an herb rich in nutrients with leaves that taste like mild mushrooms.

Craig, 31, a native of Lakeland, Forida who tamed a 2-acre spread just outside Winter Haven, expanded his collection to include other exotic species of leafy plants like red leaf cranberry hibiscus. The plant's leaves, similar in shape to those of a maple, are deep purple in color and taste like a cross between citrus and cranberry. It produces flowers that also are edible.

Craig's leafy vegetation includes curry leaf, a best-seller that's widely used in Indian cooking, imparting an herbal, citrus-like flavor to stews, soups and other dishes.

His garden grew to include all manner of fruits, herbs and other edibles, so much so that a hobby has turned into a thriving enterprise with help from Craig's girlfriend, Brittany Bandi, 28.

The two met three years ago and have since become partners in life and business. Their mail-order nursery, Sow Exotic, offers dozens of varieties of plants, including those used for medicinal purposes, like aloe and Echinacea, or for decoration, with succulents and cactus.

The couple does offer private tours of their sprawling gardens, where plump, red and yellow mangoes share space with a tropical species of pomegranate named Vietnamese pink that's especially tolerant of moisture and produces fruit much of the year.

Bandi supplements household income by designing web sites. Craig is a self-employed refrigeration mechanic. They aim to grow Sow Exotic into a full-time enterprise.

"It's not our primary business, yet," says Bandi, traipsing through high grass, her orange tabby, Steve, not far behind.

She reaches to pluck a gorgeous, red-and-yellow Barbados or acerola cherry from its bough, offering it up for sampling. The firm flesh, much like that of a Bing cherry, is mildly tart and citrusy.

The fruit is valued throughout Central and South America as a powerful antioxidant, high in vitamin C. The cherries can be eaten fresh, but often are crushed and seeded for their juice, which can be used for jellies or blended into smoothies.

Was your summer garden a success? How to know and what it can teach you

By Nancy Brachey
The Charlotte Observer

As summer nears its end, it is a good time, especially for new gardeners, to take stock of how things went in flower beds and vegetable gardens.

Summer heat and humidity in the Piedmont are a real stress test for many kinds of plants.

And it is fun to make your own judgments about how they performed through the summer.

By performance, I mean how well vegetables produced and the plants held up and how nicely bedding plants bloomed.

This is not hard work, and it will be helpful in the future, especially if you write down your observations and judgments.

For example, I have been watching the performance of a summer annual called angelonia for the past couple of hot summers and remain amazed at how well it holds up, looking as fresh in August as it did as a young plant in May.

And you probably grew more than one kind of tomato.

Next spring you will want to remember which one was so good and did so well.

Here are some things to think about as you evaluate:

■ The vegetables: Think about the quality and quantity of the produce. Did the vegetables taste good and were they popular at your table?

How about the space they took in your garden? Were they worth it, or do you need to make a note to try smaller, more compact types of squash, melons or cucumbers next year?

What failed and why? Perhaps your tomato plants were ravaged by one disease or another.

Some types are more susceptible than others.

How about the insects? Did they get ahead of you when your back was turned (or you went on vacation). Anticipating this problem next year can help you stay ahead of it.

■ The flower beds: It is wonderful to see how many beds of annuals performed well this summer, despite the long stretches of heat.

Look over your plants and those of others and decide what did well and what did not.

Were some things too time-consuming because of the need to dead-head old blooms?

Did some things require more watering than you would like?

Or did some, such as bedding begonias, seem to thrive just on the rain we got?

■ The seasons: Did you start your vegetable garden in early spring? Consider cool-season vegetables that can be star performers. The fall garden can also be wonderful, and spent summer crops can be removed now to make way for them.

Once you make your evaluations, write it down. It is a long time until next spring.

You don't need to make it fancy, just notes and thoughts about what you like and didn't like about the flowers and vegetables you took care of this summer.

Ask Nancy

Q. This is the first year of our garden, which is mostly perennials. We would like to move some taller plants to the back and smaller ones to the front.

A. You will have plenty of time to do this this fall. I would wait until about mid-September to start. Then you can move them. Roots will have a long time to readjust to their new spot before new growth appears next year.

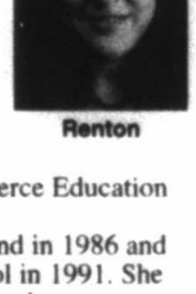
FROM STAFF REPORTS



Renton

Tracy Renton is development director for Senior Link Midland. She joined the organization in June with an almost 20-year background in nonprofits. She is a graduate of the Nonprofit Management Center Executive Leadership Program and a 2016 graduate of Leadership Midland. She also serves on the Chamber of Commerce Education Committee.

Renton moved to Midland in 1986 and graduated Lee High School in 1991. She and her husband of 24 years have two children, 12 and 17, who attend Midland ISD schools.

Renton said that since joining the SLM team, it's is the first time in her professional career that she works for an organization that impacts the community in which she lives.

"The mission of Senior Link Midland is close to my heart, because I have the privilege of still having all four of my grandparents with me today," she said. "They range in age from 90 to 94, but are all are still living independently and thriving."

MRT: What's been your proudest achievement in nonprofits?

Renton: I would have to say the reputation I've built. When I began working at Senior Link Midland, I had no idea how many people in this community supported me and my work. It really became clear the impact I've had in nonprofits, and I'm proud to be able to share that with SLM. I never imagined that I had so many people who respected me and supported me.

MRT: What would you say is your best quality and why?

Renton: Navigating different personalities and being able to acclimate to my environment in many different settings.

MRT: What is the best thing you cook?

Renton: I think it's my fettuccine alfredo, but my family says anything I cook is the best.

MRT: Your not-so-secret indulgence.

Renton: That's easy — all the "Real Housewives." I love them all.

MRT: What book do you always recommend?

Renton: I'm a teen fiction junky. My favorite series I've ever read is the "Divergent" series, but I could not put down the "Selection" series, either. I cried because I had to wait for the next edition to be released.

Inn

became pregnant with their first child, Ray Jr., in 1955, before they moved into their Eugene Street bungalow.

Photos stored at the Dallas Public Library show that around the same time, Joe Louis, the Brown Bomber, stayed at the Green Acre Court. "At Last" singer Etta James mentions the motel in her autobiography, also co-written with David Ritz, titled "Rage To Survive" — as the place where her Cadillac was repossessed because she wasn't toting the note. Roark also discovered that Jimmy Reed and Fats Domino were among the musicians who stayed there.

Green Acre Courts hasn't been a motel for close to 40 years, since shortly after the death of its co-owner and manager Revis in January 1976. It was abandoned for years after that, then slowly beaten to death by the wrecking yards and auto mechanics who trashed their temporary home until just months ago.

It started falling apart long before Ross transitioned from a strip of used-car dealers and auto mechanics to a stretch of eat-and-drink-eries and lookalike shoe-box apartments with hollow names like the Icon and the Olympus.

Redmon Revis and Charles Etta Jones share a gravesite at Lincoln Funeral Home, south of downtown. In a few days, their motel will be buried at the landfill that is but a five-minute drive from its owners' final resting place.

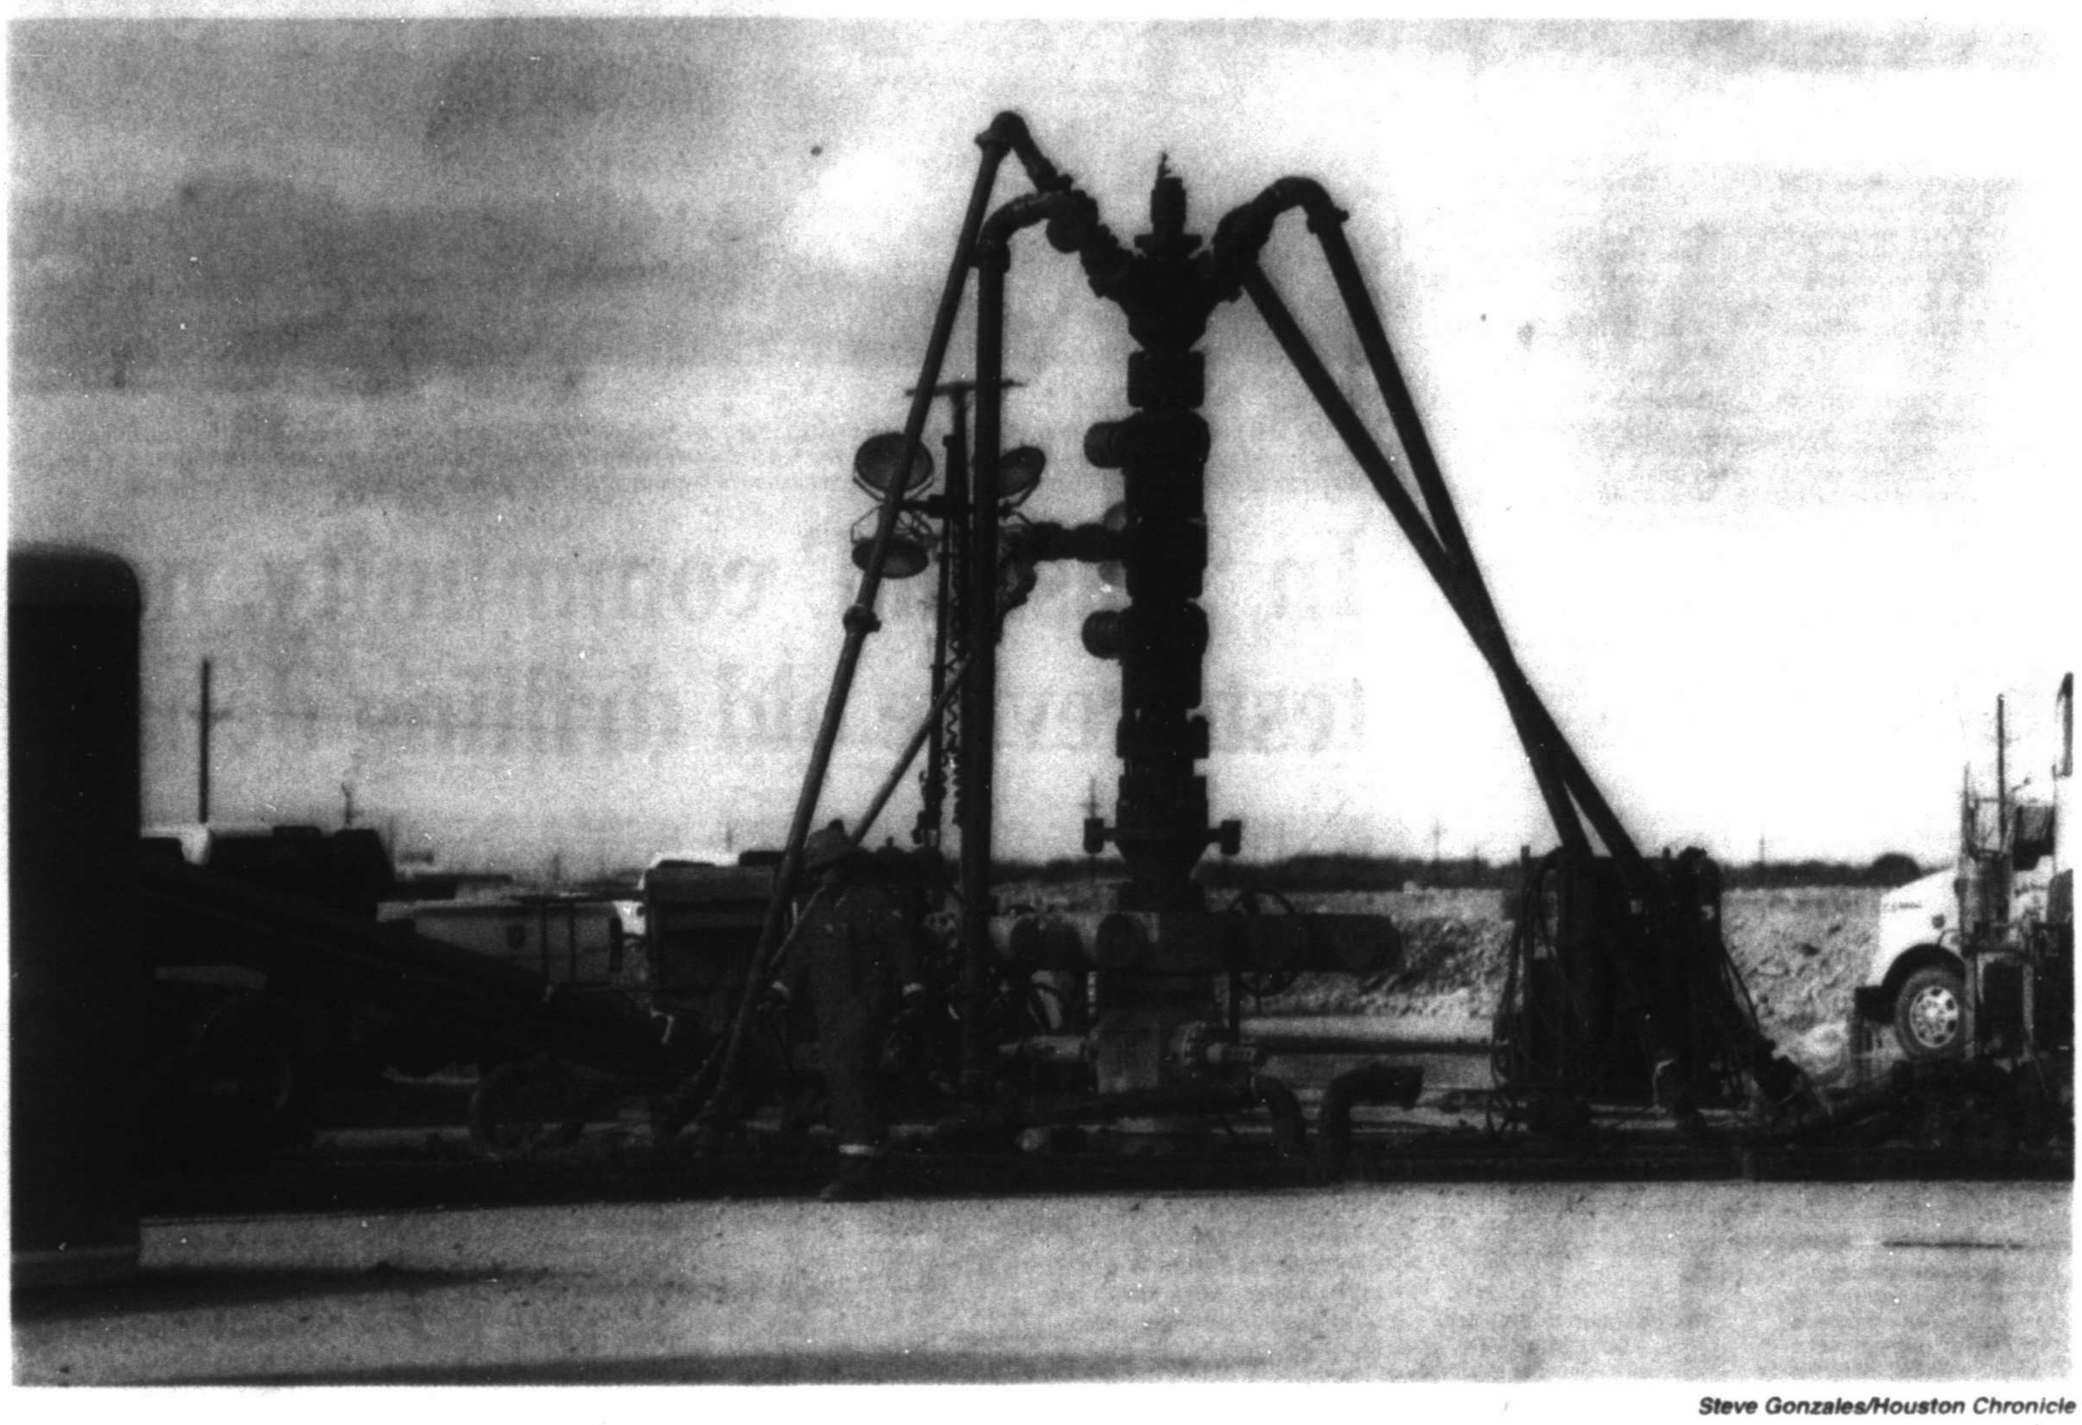
OIL PATCH RESEARCH



Steve Gonzales/Houston Chronicle

A Halliburton wellhead is visible at a fracturing site on June 26 in Midland.

Ongoing research aims to help oil patch work smarter

By Mella McEwen
mmcewen@mrt.com

Working smarter, not harder, has been paying off for Permian Basin producers, especially in the current low oil price environment.

Technology has been credited with opening the floodgates of unconventional shales and with helping producers widen those floodgates even as oil prices fell from their triple-digit heights. Technology is expected to help continue that trend.

A down cycle in the industry "demands that technology provide solutions high prices cannot solve," Stephen Ingram, vice president of technology solutions and innovation for Halliburton's North America operations said in a phone interview from his Houston office.

"There's a tremendous amount left to research and optimize," he said.

Unconventional resource development has been ongoing for a number of years now, moving from the Barnett Shale near Fort Worth to the Eagle Ford in South Texas to the Permian Basin, Ingram said.

"All that research, all those thought processes from the Eagle Ford and the Barnett are being brought to bear in the Permian Basin. There is tremendous innovation happening in the Permian. In the next few years, the Permian will become an exporter of technology and innovation," he said.

Drilling is one area he cited.

"Not so much research as taking existing technology used in other industries and applying it," he said, listing automation, machine learning and artificial intelligence as such technology that can help cut drilling costs.

The company's first smart rig in Cameron is aiding in research to test advanced software and algorithms in partnership with other companies, Ingram said. The goal is to cut the number of days it takes to drill a well and make the rig more efficient, resulting in a more efficient use of capital, he said.

Applying lessons learned from that research "will make the Permian Basin more competitive than it is," he said.

Ingram said research that is unique to the Permian Basin involves the huge volume of locally sourced frac sand that is being tested for and is in the process of being utilized in hydraulic fracturing jobs. He said that sand is of higher quality than what is being imported and could result in sand costs being lower and the quality being better, thus making the wells more productive.

"Hundreds of millions of dollars are being spent to build out the infrastructure. There is work being done to see if the sand is usable and if it is usable if it can be used in all the stacked plays," Ingram said.

There is also a lot of research being done around chemistry, including surfactants and clays.

"The Permian Basin has been drilled and produced for many decades. It has the most complex reservoir system, unique and challenging rock type," Ingram said. "All the rock types, especially those that are drilled today horizontally and those in further development, have unique responses to fracturing. The water comes out with different characterizations (than when it went in).

"It has different chemicals and minerals from interaction with the formation. Some are positive, some are negative with response to production," he said.

One example is clays, Ingram said. When water is added, either the clays swell and reduce the well's ability to produce, or they will become brittle and fracture into what he called fines that will hamper production.

"This is a big area of research," he said.

Halliburton and the University of Wyoming are partnering to study the impact of rock type and the impact of chemicals that currently are being used and will be used in the future. The research

PERMIANEXPANSION

FROM WIRE REPORTS

Clariant holds ground-breaking at Midland site

CHARLOTTE — Clariant, a world leader in specialty chemicals, has held a groundbreaking ceremony for its Permian Basin regional sales, operations and laboratory site in Midland.

This major investment follows Clariant's 2016 acquisitions of Kel-Tech and X-Chem. The 29-acre site, located at 3408 E. State Highway 158, is set to receive a new laboratory with state-of-the-art development and testing facilities, and will be able to increase sample activity for customers by 45 percent.

The new office space will accommodate 75 employees who have all consolidated from three locations in the Midland area. Further site improvements include a new maintenance building to service more than 150 vehicles that support its customers in the region and a new access road to accommodate the large number of heavy vehicles.

Frankie Keller Jr., regional manager, commented: "This investment is a reminder that Clariant's quality of service is a priority to our employees and customers, and also confirms to the Midland community that we are not going anywhere. We are here to stay."

Clariant is a specialty chemical company providing solutions to various industries, including energy.

Magellan Midstream plans Delaware Basin pipeline

TULSA — Magellan Midstream Partners LP is commencing construction of a new Delaware subbasin pipeline originating in Wink to handle crude oil and condensate.

Magellan will build an approximately 60-mile, 24-inch pipeline from Wink to Crane, which serves as an origin to its Longhorn pipeline. The new Wink pipeline will have an initial capacity of 250,000 barrels per day with the ability to expand to more than 600,000 bpd if warranted by industry demand.

The project also includes construction of a new terminal at Wink that will offer broad inbound and outbound pipeline access to parties that connect to the facility.

Magellan currently expects the project to cost approximately $150 million and to be operational in mid-2019, subject to receipt of any necessary permits and regulatory approvals.

The new pipeline segment will offer direct service from the Delaware subbasin to the Crane origin of Magellan's Longhorn pipeline, which provides crude oil and condensate transportation service to the Houston and Texas City refining complex and marine export facilities.

In addition, this pipeline segment will be able to provide service from the Delaware subbasin to the new crude oil and condensate line to Corpus Christi that has been proposed by Magellan as well as others in the industry.

Magellan plans to conduct an open season for commitments on the new pipeline system at a later time; however, construction of the new pipeline does not depend on the results of the open season.

In addition, the partnership is assessing additional pipeline and terminal investments in West Texas to strengthen and enhance its overall crude oil service offerings.

Patterson-UTI expands unconventional drilling with MS Energy acquisition

By Mella McEwen

Marie D. De Jesus/Houston Chronicle

Patterson-UTI APEX-XK 1500 oil rig drill on May 9 near College Station.

Developing unconventional resources sometimes calls for unconventional drilling technology. As a result, horizontal drilling has proliferated throughout the Permian Basin as operators work to produce those reserves. Patterson-UTI Energy recently took a step in expanding its unconventional drilling capability by agreeing to acquire Multi-Shot LLC, also known as MS Energy Services, for 8.8 million shares of Patterson-UTI stock and $75 million cash. Andy Hendricks, Patterson-UTI Energy chief executive officer, told the Reporter-Telegram by email that directional drilling and horizontal drilling are used interchangeably.

"Directional drilling includes people, services and equipment that allow drilling in any direction. The vast majority of directional drilling today is horizontal."

Hendricks called directional drilling the key to unlocking shale and tight reservoirs.

"Today, given technology advancements, we can now drill more than two miles horizontally with extreme precision — this is a step change in terms of productivity."

MS Energy is the largest independent directional drilling company in the country working onshore, he said. "This acquisition expands Patterson-UTI's service offerings and positions us as even more of a true oilfield services company," he said.

MS Energy brings a strong focus on technology, he said, citing the company's proprietary mud motor, measurement-while-drilling and survey equipment.

"With the increasing proportion of pad drilling and the growing number of horizontal wells per pad, directional drilling is seeing an increase in demand, even in the vertical section of the wells, as the well placement is increasingly important to avoid interfering with other nearby wells," Mark S. Siegel, Patterson-UTI chairman, said in a statement announcing the deal.

The acquisition is expected to close early in the fourth quarter. Upon completion, Allen R. Neel, MS Energy chairman and chief executive officer, will join Patterson-UTI as president of MS Energy. Paul Culbreth, chief operating officer of MS Energy, will also join Patterson-UTI after the deal closes.

Ken Morcom refers to a letter from the Pennsylvania Department of Environmental Protection as he speaks about the contamination of his water well on Aug. 24 at his home in Dimock, Pa. The federal government is back for the first time in more than five years to investigate ongoing claims of contamination in Dimock, which became a battleground in the debate over gas drilling and fracturing.

In 'Gasland' community, new tests revive old drilling debate

Associated Press

DIMOCK, Pa. — The well water at Ken Morcom and Kim Grosso's house is laced with so much explosive methane that a Pennsylvania environmental regulator who went there to collect samples this summer decided it would be safer to coast her SUV down the driveway.

Morcom and Grosso want to leave but doubt they could sell a house with tainted water. So, a few weeks ago, they asked the gas driller they blame for polluting their well to buy them out.

"I was hoping they'd fix it. But I've given up hope," said Morcom, 49, who supports drilling but has become disillusioned with Houston-based Cabot Oil & Gas Corp. "Just let us out of the box."

"The box" is the couple's 8-acre spread in rural Dimock Township. But Morcom could have been talking about Dimock itself.

A patchwork of homes and farms about 150 miles north of Philadelphia, the community became a battleground for pro- and anti-drilling forces after state regulators found that Cabot — one of the biggest drillers in the vast Marcellus Shale gas field — had contaminated 18 residential wells with methane. Homeowners sued, accusing the company of polluting their water with toxic chemicals and methane. Activists and celebrities descended.

It's a much quieter place these days. But the questions surrounding Dimock's groundwater have yet to be resolved — and the federal government is back for the first time in more than five years to investigate ongoing claims of contamination. Public health experts visited 25 homes last month to test for bacteria, gases and chemicals.

The testing has resurrected an old debate about the groundwater in Dimock, whose plight was the focus of the Emmy Award-winning documentary "Gasland."

State regulators say Cabot still hasn't fixed the water. Cabot says the methane was there long before it began drilling. It's an argument that's been going on for eight years.

Bill Ely, whose house was tested, said his methane-laced well water looks like milk. He now pipes spring water to his house.

"My place that I've worked for all my life is worth nothing," said Ely, 66.

Dimock was the highest-profile case of contamination linked to Pennsylvania's huge gas drilling industry, but it's far from the only one. State regulators have identified 289 cases since December 2007 in which a private water supply was affected by gas drilling, including seven so far this year.

In Dimock, the dispute centers on the extent to which methane was present in the water before Cabot showed up to drill in 2008.

The odorless, colorless gas is common in Pennsylvania groundwater. It can emanate from swamps, landfills, coal mines and gas wells. Methane is not toxic to humans, but at high concentrations it can lead to asphyxiation or cause an explosion. It was an exploding water well on New Year's Day 2009 that first aroused public attention in Dimock.

Cabot has long insisted the gas in Dimock's aquifer is naturally occurring, saying its pre-drill testing of thousands of private water wells in the area show a high percentage with methane. Company spokesman George Stark said he views the new testing by the U.S. Agency for Toxic Substances and Disease Registry as a waste of time and taxpayer money, pointing out that another federal agency, the Environmental Protection Agency, tested 64 homes in 2012 and concluded the well water didn't pose a health hazard.

Critics have said the EPA buckled to industry pressure. The Agency for Toxic Substances analyzed the same data and concluded that 27 of the wells had unsafe levels of contamination. Its 2016 report drew no conclusion about whether gas drilling caused the water to become tainted.

Some residents agree with Cabot.

Lloyd Conrad, 80, said "swamp gas" has always been an issue in Dimock, including at his own house. "Bunch of yahoos," Conrad said of residents who sued the company in 2009. "They were after this," he added, rubbing his fingers together.

Still, Conrad wonders whether Cabot's drilling might have made things worse. The driller pays to refill a large plastic tank on his property, called a water buffalo, that supplies Conrad's home with water for bathing and washing clothes. Government scientists tested his well in early August.

The Department of Environmental Protection said Cabot has not yet fixed all affected water supplies, nor has it shown that all its gas wells have stopped leaking natural gas into the aquifer. As a result, the agency has refused Cabot's requests to lift a moratorium on drilling in a 9-square-mile area of Dimock.

Though Cabot hasn't been able to drill new wells, state regulators did permit the company to begin producing gas from six existing wells in 2012. The state agency has since held Cabot responsible for three additional cases of contamination, though Stark said two of the cases involve homeowners who have long reported gas in their water.

The third case involves Grosso and Morcom, who reported their well water went bad three months after Cabot fractured a nearby gas well. Fracturing is a method that uses huge amounts of pressurized water, along with sand and chemicals, to extract oil and natural gas from shale.

State regulators held Cabot responsible, though they cited problems with the cementing of the gas wells and said there is no evidence that fracturing itself polluted the water.

Cabot installed a third water buffalo on the couple's property this summer, this one to water their cows.

"After five years of putting up with this," Morcom said, "we just want out."

Petro Waste Environmental opens Howard County landfill

From staff reports

San Antonio-based Petro Waste Environmental LP announced the opening of its newest state-of-the-art non-hazardous oil and gas waste landfill facility in Howard County.

"We are very excited about the opening of the Howard County landfill, which now gives us two facilities operating in the Permian Basin," said Petro Waste Founder and CEO George Wommack.

"With its opening, we are positioned to better serve oil and gas operators in the Northern Midland Basin efficiently, cost-effectively and in an environmentally responsible manner."

The 144-acre Howard County landfill will accept oil-based mud, water-based mud, oil-based drill cuttings, water-based drill cuttings, contaminated soil, and RCRA-exempt non-hazardous exploration and production (E&P) waste. The facility will provide washouts and other ancillary services, and is located between Stanton and Big Spring on the north side of the frontage road of Interstate 20 at exit 165.

The Howard County landfill will be PWE's second facility in the Permian Basin. The first facility, which opened April 3, is located in Reeves County at Orla, where Highway 285 and FM 62 intersect, and provides the same services as the Howard County facility.

Petro Waste also holds permits to construct and operate similar facilities in Pecos, Reagan and DeWitt County to service future activity in the Permian Basin and Eagle Ford Shale.

includes cores from the Permian Basin and from the Denver-Julesberg Basin.

"We have quite a bit of opportunity to enhance well productivity and total productivity from those wells," Ingram said. "Clay chemistry and surfactant chemistry will allow for much more competitive operators and much more competitive production as we expand the core areas of production."

That leads into artificial lift and how to effectively produce wells for the long-term.

Ingram said today's unconventional shale wells come on strong initially for a number of months before rates decline and settle into a long-term cycle.

The issue with artificial lift technology, particularly the electrical submersible pumps used in the Permian, is they can become clogged by the sand used in fracturing jobs, forcing operators to pull them and install new pumps. A new system, the SandWedge can be used as part of the frac fluid system to reduce sand flowback, keeping the pumps working longer and more effectively.

The biggest mystery that could help improve productivity and efficiency is what lies under the surface. Ingram said Halliburton has partnered with three other companies to research ways to image the subsurface, such as fractures.

In what Ingram called the largest field operation in Halliburton history, the company is outfitting 10 wellbores in the Delaware subbasin with fiber optic cable to record downhole pressures and temperatures. Three have already been outfitted, and when all 10 are outfitted, he said researchers can observe the frac treatments currently being done on the wells through microseismic sensors.

"It's all part of our drive to understand key components," he said. "How big is the fracture, how close should each stage be, should perforations be along the wellbore, and how close should wellbores be to each other."

Drilling these unconventional shale wells is very capital-intensive "big money projects," he said, and better understanding what's happening in the wellbores reduces the risks of undercapitalizing or overcapitalizing the projects.

France to ban oil, gas output on home soil in symbolic step

By Sylvie Corbet
Associated Press

PARIS — France's government has unveiled a law to ban all production and exploration of oil and natural gas by 2040 on the country's mainland and overseas territories.

The move is largely symbolic, however, as France's oil and gas production represents just 1 percent of national consumption — the rest is imported.

Current drilling permits will not be renewed, according to the bill formally presented in a Cabinet meeting Wednesday. France currently has 63 oil and gas drilling projects on its territory.

The ban, which the government claims is a world first, is part of a larger plan to wean the country's economy from fossil fuels, encourage clean energy and fulfill France's commitments under the Paris Climate Agreement to curb global warming.

French President Emmanuel Macron praised it as "an important step to fulfill our international commitments."

The bill, which was described by Environment Minister Nicolas Hulot, also includes a definitive ban on all shale gas exploration and extraction. Until now, only hydraulic fracturing, was banned. All other potential methods are now to be prohibited as well.

Hulot had announced in July that France will stop producing power from coal — now 5 percent of its total output — by 2022.

France also wants to reduce the proportion of the power it gets from nuclear energy to 50 percent by 2025 from the current 75 percent. Hulot said it's important for France to maintain its leadership on climate-related issues following the Paris Agreement signed in 2015.

"I have absolute faith in the capacity of renewable energies to become progressively a very important source to fulfill our energy needs," he said in a news conference.

Greenpeace France said the bill sets a "good goal" but doesn't go far enough. The environmental organization notes that the extension of an offshore exploration permit in French Guiana was maintained. In this case, Hulot said existing permits "will be maintained to avoid legal conflicts."

Francis Duseux, president of the French oil lobby UFIP, said it would have been better to keep producing oil and gas in France rather than rely exclusively on imports, because he says France's economy will still rely on fossil fuels in 2040.

"Energy transition will take time," he said on Europe 1 radio.

Duseux estimated that oil drilling on French territory supports 4,500 to 5,000 jobs. Vermilion Energy France is the main oil producer in France. Jean-Pascal Simard, director of public relations for the group, told The Associated Press he thinks the 2040 deadline is too soon.

"We would like to have a longer period of time to properly manage, properly get the return on investment that we have been investing here in France," he said.

Zedi's Midland Grand Opening to feature the Stateline band, some great brew and Up in Smoke barbecue Wednesday, September 20

Zedi Solutions' Midland office has completed the remodel that's designed to serve you even better, with a complete new state-of-the-art laboratory. They want you to help them celebrate at their Grand Opening festivities Wednesday, September 20 from 4-8 p.m.

For every guest who attends Zedi will donate $25 to the American Legion and another $25 to the American Red Cross for Hurricane Harvey relief.

There will be some amazing barbecue brisket and chicken by Up In Smoke, and some amazing brew will be available to wash it all down. Meanwhile, you can enjoy some of your favorite country music played by Stateline band from 4:30 to 8:00.

The ribbon cutting will be right at the start, 4:00.

Zedi has been providing gas measurement and other services from their Midland office since 2011. That year they acquired a trusted regional service company that had an office in Midland.

Since then Zedi's business had grown to the point that the facility they inherited in the purchase could no longer handle the business. Even with the recent downturn, Zedi is helping more producers with gas measurement, hydraulic pumping units, wellsite automation and much more.

With the recent completion of additions and modifications that will further improve the facility's workflow and its ability to service customers, Zedi wants to celebrate—with you!

If you're a current customer, someone who is considering becoming a customer, or if you're just hearing of Zedi for the first-time, you're very welcome. This is a great opportunity to tour the facilities, to ask questions and to meet the trained, experienced and dedicated staff, all while supporting two great causes we all strongly believe in!

As a company, 2017 marks 30 years in business. The company was formed in the oil fields of Edmonton, Alberta, Canada in 1977 by Don Clark and Dr. Ito Tokunosuke. Their original idea was an improvement on gas measurement methods.

The original company name was Z. I. Probes (Z is pronounced 'Zed' in Canada), which spells ZIP, as in ZIP code. The founders used that name because they felt it was memorable. Their 2011 purchase of the Lousiana-based service company expanded Zedi's service opportunities into all the major US basins including the Permian.

Today, producers in every major basin remember the name more because of the dedicated, innovative service Zedi provides than because of a zippy name. Now the name has come to mean service and integrity across the industry.

Lab Manager Matthew Lively, Ph. D., Office Manager Tausha Perry and the rest of the staff will be happy to see you. There will be some members of Zedi's corporate operations available also to answer questions.

Please RSVP by this Friday, September 15, at www.zedisolutions.com/midland.

Zedi's Permian Basin Office is located at 7907 W. Industrial Ave. Midland, TX. The phone number is 432-242-3041. See Zedi on the web at www.zedisolutions.com.

Join Zedi's Midland staff for their grand opening Wednesday, 9/20 from 4-8 p.m.—with a band, barbecue and brew. The office is between Midland and Odessa at 7907 W. Industrial. This photo is from a recent celebration at another Zedi US location.

Boothe Brings Tenacity, Teamwork to UTPB Women's Basketball

Ryan Haage
Communication and Special Projects

Hard work and teamwork are the two most important pillars of new UT Permian Basin women's basketball coach Rae Boothe's coaching beliefs, and are something the first-year Falcon is working hard to implement as she starts her new position.

"I've always loved the game of basketball, but I also love what it does for people in the sense of teams" Boothe noted. "It's very important to be a part of something bigger than yourself and that's been the basis of my coaching philosophy. The goal now is to establish a group of people that care about each other and are going to work very hard. To be a great teammate and to work very hard is something you can control, and I always tried to do as a player and coach and ask that of people in our program. Hard workers and great teammates are going to be really successful in what we're trying to do."

" I've always loved the game of basketball, but I also love what it does for people in the sense of teams."

—Rae Boothe
Coach, UTPB Women's Basketball

At the end of her playing career, Boothe was fortunate to have an opportunity to jump into coaching immediately, following her former college head coach at Warner University to starting an entirely new program at Brenau University in Gainesville, Ga.

"I always had a feeling I wanted to coach," Boothe said. "Like many coaches I felt that I was a better player at the time than I was. Fortunately enough I had opportunities earlier than most to get on the other side. We both went up Brenau to start the program and it was an incredible process, recruiting players to play at a place that didn't have basketball. It allowed me to grow immensely in terms of building from the ground up."

Four years later she earned her first head coaching position at Friends University in Wichita, Kan. Over her seven seasons at Friends, her teams have had an overall record of 159-67 with 103 conference wins, three Kansas Collegiate Athletic Conference championships, five NAIA National Tournament appearances, a pair of sweet-16 appearances, eight All-Americans, 10 Academic All-Americans, six KCAC defensive players of the year, two KCAK players of the year, and she was a three-time KCAC coach of the year.

"My philosophy as an assistant was to out-work our head coach and learn as much as I can. I was fortunate enough to work for someone that wanted me to do everything to where I could grow. Going into friends I inherited a great group of people. They set a great foundation for what was to follow, which was a pretty dominant NAIA program and one that has an unbelievable reputation right now. There's really never a good time to leave anywhere, but ultimately I knew I wanted to end up at the Division II level. I'm really glad for those girls and the opportunity they have this season at an amazing place.

In her three weeks so far at UTPB, Boothe has started individual and team training with her new team and will spend the next six weeks getting ready to start practice in the middle of October.

"This part of the year is going to determine who wants to be here. My way isn't everybody's way, and we might have people that maybe aren't in love with how hard we're going to work or haven't been asked to work that hard before. I'm sure a lot of them do because they're basketball players and that they're excited about the discipline and direction we're going to be going. So far they're trying to work hard and that's all you can ask for as a coach."

Spaghetti-like pipeline system falls short as Gulf supplies slow

By Meenal Vamburkar and Sheela Tobben
Bloomberg

Harvey is putting a new spotlight on a spaghetti-like network of petroleum pipelines that run across the plains and fields of Texas, disrupting the ability of at least two major Gulf Coast conduits to send fuels north.

The 5,500-mile Colonial Pipeline, a top transporter of gasoline for the Northeast, has closed part of its line after "the pace of supply" fell from refiners damaged by the storm. Meanwhile, Explorer Pipeline Inc. shut its lines to Tulsa and Chicago citing similar issues.

Why is the pace of supply so important? You need fuel to push fuel. Pumps at the start of a pipe get things moving, and those at its end suck product out. But it's simple momentum, so-called operating pressure, that keeps it moving in pipes that can run hundreds and even thousands of miles long. Without enough bulk at the back end, things come to a halt. "It's not as much running out of supply as the timing, the speed at which supply gets to market," said Buster Brown, Colonial Pipeline Co.'s director of scheduling. "The issue is the pace of supply we're getting from the origins."

The pipeline challenges come as the industry works to recover from a storm that hit the Gulf Coast with Category 4 force on Aug. 25 near Corpus Christi, inundating the surrounding area with flooding rains. That surge, and the storm's slow movement along the coast as a tropical storm, crippled refineries and hampered crude production throughout the region.
