ONE, TWO, THREE, FOUR--- No, not the count of the old way of exercising, but the number of people on the new exercising machine that has been installed at OHS gymnasium. Four are Coach Ben Cates, wife and children. But there is plenty room for more...all more in fact as the machine is capable of handling 15 exercisers at one time.

New Exercising Program Now Under Way At OHS

A number of Oltonites have discovered muscles they did not know existed -- until they worked out on the new Universal gym machine in the high school gym.

Olton Booster Club helped with the purchase of the new athletic machine for the school. It has been installed under the south bleachers in the gym and is free to be used by the public each Monday, Tuesday and Thursday.

Designed for the use of youth, men and women, it will be used this fall in physical education classes from the sixth grade through high school.

Fifteen people may workout with the machine at the same time with all engaging in separate exercises.

The program provides physical fitness, strength building exercises and figure contouring.

Women and girls are taking advantage of the new program for figure toning and fitness. Women's workouts can provide obvious results for those who continue several weeks in the program. It has been found that women have a great capacity for work thus making the physical fitness program a success.

Persons are invited to participate in the classes and take advantage of the opportunities provided by the new machine. Classes for youths are held from 5 to 5:50 p.m. with adults attending from 6 to 7 p.m.

Congressman Bob Price Speaks Out On Welfare

Panhandle Congressman Bob Price has joined with a group of Republican House members in introducing a substitute bill for the welfare reform plan recently approved by the House Ways and Means Committee.

The Ways and Means Committee proposal, which was authored by Committee Chairman Wilbur Mills (D-Ark), expands the current system in numbers and in tax costs, institutes guaranteed annual income maintenance, and federalizes the welfare program.

Price and his colleagues are strongly opposed to the Mills bill and are working to prevent Mills from tying his welfare proposals to the social security amendments and forcing the House to vote for both issues at the same time.

The substitute bill introduced by Price, Barry Goldwater, Jr. (R-Calif.), Bill Scherle (R-Iowa), Philip Crane (R-Ill.), Texas Republicans Jim Collins and Bill Archer, among others, embodies the President's special revenue sharing concept and turns the welfare program over to the states.

In addition to instituting state welfare control, the Republican substitute provides strong work incentives rather than a guaranteed annual income, a feature of the Mills proposal which Price contends will "in many cases guarantee idleness and shiftlessness."

The bill also provides mechanisms for reducing welfare case loads and lowering welfare program costs to the taxpayer.

In commenting on the proposal Price stated, "This bill, which is also gathering momentum on the Senate side will allow states for the first time to totally operate their own welfare program without federal strings attached."

Price declared, "Welfare is not a right; it should be given only to the truly needy. A sound welfare system should be hard to get on, easy to get off, and should provide strict penalties for welfare cheaters. If a person were caught stealing from a store he would be tried as a common thief. Why should it be any different in the case of a person caught stealing tax dollars through welfare fraud?"

Price has also sponsored a work incentive bill entitled the Employment Opportunity Act of 1971, which would provide counseling, child care, training and job placement service needed to move employable persons off welfare rolls and on to pay-rolls.

Under this bill state and local governments would be reimbursed 40 percent of the costs of providing jobs in such vital areas as health, education, social service, beautification, pollution control, and urban and rural development. Private employers would be reimbursed 50 percent of an enrolled worker's pay while he undergoes on-the-job training; 25 percent during the following two years, and 10 percent for the final year.

Price said the Employment Opportunity Act of 1971 uses a mixture of public and private resources to make productive workers out of welfare recipients. "This is one approach that really has not been explored in depth yet; the surface attention given to it by current work incentive programs is clearly insufficient,"

THIS WEEK'S PROVOCATIVE THOUGHT... By Bob Mendes

"FAILURE"

Did you know that the structure of success is moulded from the framework of past "failures"...

That no effort actually dies unless by choice...

That failing is not a disgrace but a worthy adventure...

That the results of failure should not be judged merely by immediate setbacks -- but should be measured against lessons learned...

And! That the townfolk who fails to capitalize on past errors -- by present participation, is doing an injustice to all?

Remember:

"The only time one really fails is when one gives-up. The only time one loses is when one accepts defeat. The only time one does not learn from one's failures is when one is over conceited. For! The wise man knows that success shows us what we "should be" -- failure... shows us what we "are"."

Immunization Law Requirements Told

Olton parents are reminded that the new immunization law which was recently approved by the State Health Dept. applies to all schools in the state and all students will be required to meet these requirements before entering school this year.

Senate Bill 27, amending section 2.09 of the Texas Education Code, was signed into law by Governor Preston Smith April 26. This law is now in effect and requires that all children entering Texas elementary or secondary schools or institutions of higher education must have been immunized against six diseases: diphtheria, tetanus, poliomyelitis, measles, rubella, and smallpox. The law states that "the State Department of Health shall provide the required immunizations to children in areas where no local provision exists to provide these services."

Senate Bill 971, an amendment to Senate Bill 27, has become law. It enables the State Board of Health to modify or delete any of the six required immunizations, and allows the provisional admittance of students if the required immunizations have been begun and are continued to be received "as rapidly as is medically feasible," and requires the State Department of Health to promulgate rules and regulations relating to the provisional admission of persons to an elementary or secondary school or institution of higher education.

This statement is issued to set forth policies and plans for implementation of the law and the amendment thereof.

All students will be allowed to enter their respective school systems during the Summer and Fall 1971 terms, with the provision that their immunizations against at least one of the aforementioned diseases will have been started by January 1, 1972, and all completed as soon as medically feasible.

The immunization requirements are specified elsewhere in this policy statement and apply to all students attending public, private, or parochial schools, for example: kindergartens associated with elementary schools, elementary or secondary schools, academies, colleges, universities, and schools for the blind, deaf, mentally ill and mentally retarded.

Exclusions from compliance are allowable on an individualized basis for medical contradictions and religious conflicts. Students falling into these categories must submit signed affidavits as specified in the law.

Medical Contradictions - The student must present an affidavit signed by a physician, duly registered and licensed under the Medical Practice Act, in which it is stated that, in the physician's opinion, the immunization required would be injurious to the health and well-being of the applicant or any member of his family or household.

Religious Conflicts - The student must present an affidavit signed by the applicant, or if a minor, by his parent or guardian stating that the immunization conflicts with the tenets and practice of a recognized church or religious denomination of which the applicant is an adherent or member; provided, however, that this exemption does not apply in times of emergency or epidemic declared by the Commissioner of Health.

For complete immunizations the following are required in the respective class or age groupings:

Children in Kindergarten and Grades One Through Five, or Children Ages 5 through 11 in Ungraded Schools.

POLIO - at least 3 doses of oral vaccine, provided one or more doses have been received since the fourth birthday.

DIPHTHERIA / TETANUS - Minimum of 3 doses, with at least one dose having been received since the fourth birthday. (Usually given as DTP for children less than 6 years of age, and Td for children 6 years of age and older.)

MEASLES - 1 dose of vaccine, or history of measles illness.

RUBELLA - 1 dose of vaccine. Not required past age 12 years.

SMALLPOX - 1 vaccination within the past 10 years.

Children and Others in Grades Six Through Twelve, or Children and Others Ages 12 and Older in Ungraded Schools Other Than Institutions of Higher Education.

POLIO - At least 3 doses of oral vaccine, provided one or more doses have been received since the fourth birthday. (Polio vaccine is not required for persons nineteen years of age or older.)

DIPHTHERIA / TETANUS - Minimum of 3 doses with last dose within 10 years. Booster dose only after initial series. (Pertussis should not be given past age of 6 years.)

MEASLES - The majority of children in this group will have been previously immunized or obtained natural immunity through infection. Recommended but not required on an individualized basis if history of vaccine or illness is thought to be negative.

RUBELLA - Not required past age 12 years.

SMALLPOX - 1 vaccination within the past 10 years.

Students in Institutions of Higher Education

POLIO - At least 3 doses of oral vaccine, provided one or more doses have been received since the fourth birthday. (Polio vaccine is not required for persons nineteen years of age or older.)

DIPHTHERIA / TETANUS - Minimum of 3 doses with last dose within 10 years. Booster dose only after initial series. (Td adult type.)

SMALLPOX - 1 vaccination within the past 10 years.

At the present time, reinforcing or "booster" doses of DIPHTHERIA/TETANUS and SMALLPOX vaccines are required every ten years after the last dose completing the series; however, boosters are not required for POLIO, MEASLES and RUBELLA.

All schools are required to maintain records of the immunization status of individual students. The State Health Department is designing a standard form for this purpose.

Since many types of personal immunization records are in current use, any document listing each immunization received by year will be acceptable during the 1971-72 school year for either initiating or updating school immunization records.

Signature or rubber-stamp validation of personal records by physicians or public health clinics is recommended but not required until the Summer 1972 Semester, after which validation of new records is required.

A new, standard Certificate of Immunization form is being developed; however, compatible documents will always be acceptable. Effective at the start of the Spring 1972 Semester, and continuing thereafter, new enrollees (those not previously enrolled in the Summer or Fall 1971 Semesters) who have not completed the required immunizations at time of enrollment, must complete them as soon as is medically feasible.

Dear Editor

Dear Friend:

Now that the Legislative session is over and we have had time to re-cap the happenings of the regular and first Called Special Session, I wanted to report to you about some of the activities that occurred.

As you may recall, the session began in January with several emergencies that had to be dealt with rather hurriedly. This caused the session to begin at a fast pace and to continually increase momentum until our work was concluded. Besides the accelerated pace, there was a cloud of doubt and dismay hovering over the actions of many public officials because of the S.E.C. investigations of the Sharpstown Bank and National Bankers Life Insurance stock trading. However, the Sixty-Second Legislature probably passed more meaningful legislation than any other in history.

There were nearly 3000 House and Senate bills considered, plus over 500 joint and concurrent resolutions and hundreds of simple resolutions during the session. Though the work load and hours were more than normal, I feel I was better able to represent you because we heard most of the bills and resolutions in public hearings in the committees to which I was assigned. These committees, the State Affairs, the Conservation and Reclamation, the Counties, and the Banks and Banking, dealt with 75% of all the legislation. Besides these committees, I served on the Rules Committee, which considered all bills that were heard in the House.

We passed laws this year that will help curb highway and street accidents; provided more protection and tools to work with for our law enforcement officers; increased penalties for use of certain narcotics such as LSD, and made it harder on dope pushers. We provided a manner to keep disruption and vandalism from occurring at our colleges and universities. We also created three new upper-level universities; at Corpus Christi, Tyler and Clearlake.

Consumer protection laws and laws to tighten the regulation and operation of Texas Insurance Companies were passed. A package of seven banking bills were passed as a result of a Senate investigating committee report. These laws should prevent banks from going broke in Texas, Texas, in the last few years, has had more State Bank failures than any other state.

In the field of Health and Welfare, many bills were passed. Two very important bills that became law provided mandatory inoculations against communicable diseases. This should prevent any epidemics from occurring in our State, like the diphtheria epidemic that happened last year in San Antonio.

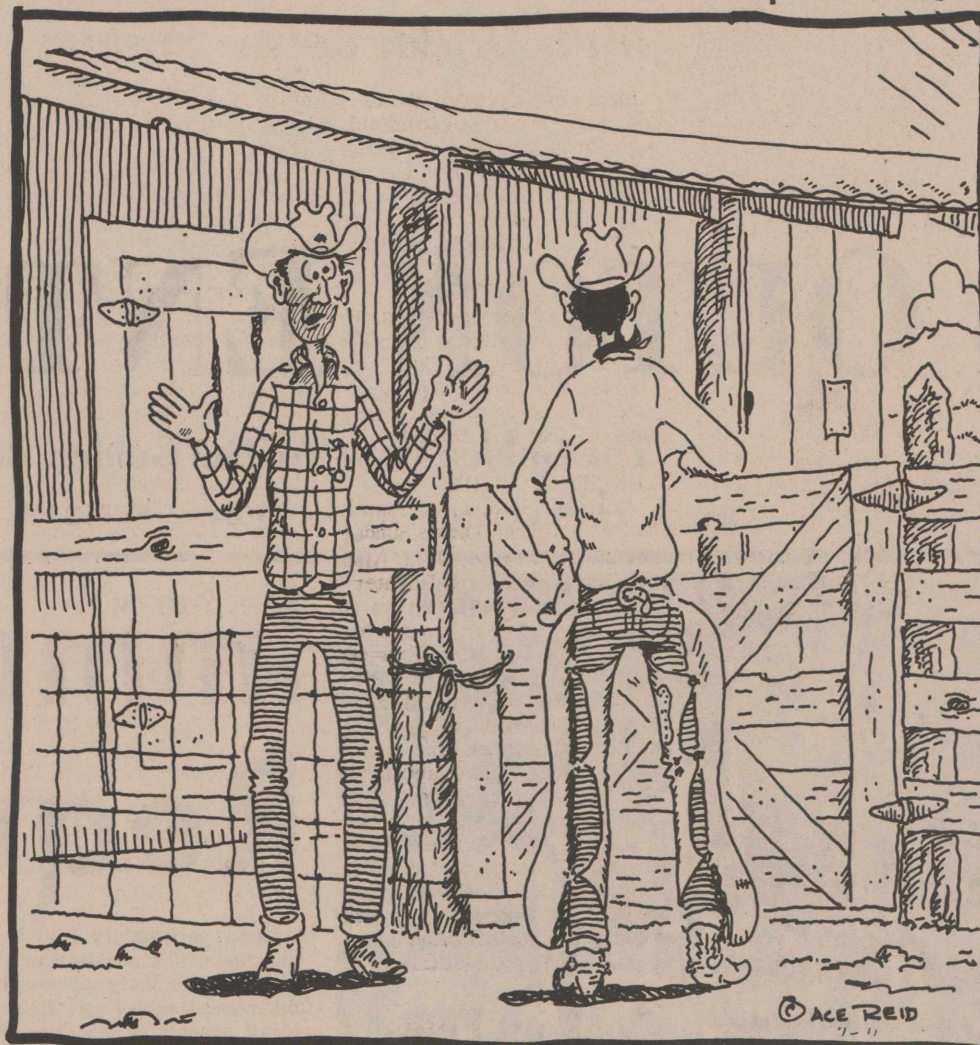

Several bills that assisted the rural areas and agriculture were passed. One thing of special interest was the enactment of several water laws. We passed more constructive water legislation this session that probably has ever been passed in one session. Water resource development in our State can progress at a faster pace now to keep up with the ever increasing demands. You can see we were busy this session and really quite productive. I carried a large number of bills and finally passed more than fifty pieces of legislation that is now law or will be by the first of September. I wish space would permit me to go into detail about some of the legislation; however, if you are interested in some areas that have or have not been covered in this letter, if you will let me know I'll be glad to give you more information.

Always feel free to call on me if I can assist you in any way.

Yours for Better Government,
Bill Clayton

SENSING THE NEWS

By Anthony Harrigan

EXECUTIVE VICE PRESIDENT

Southern States Industrial Council

Now that the federal government has usurped the authority of state and local school authorities, the next step in the federalization of America undoubtedly will be control over all forms of housing. To that end, the liberals are busily at work promoting federal control of zoning in the nation's suburbs.

In fact, for several years efforts have been underway to shatter normal housing patterns and to impose on the suburbs a sociological design ordained in Washington. The liberals want Big Government to act as the ultimate blockbuster and to transform the character of suburban communities. Specifically, the liberals want to implant federal low-cost housing developments in the heart of suburban communities where middle-class values prevail.

Initial efforts in this direction already have produced indignation on the part of suburban dwellers who live in communities that are largely free of the problems of the inner city areas. The suburbanites rightly say that the construction of low-cost, federally-aided housing projects in their communities infects the suburbs with the crime and social stress that characterize slum areas.

Suburbanites are understandably bitter inasmuch as they moved to the suburbs to escape the very conditions that they believe federal housing is projecting into the suburban communities. Moreover, the suburbanites believe -- with good reason -- that the low-cost housing projects will overload existing public services and result in low real estate values. For vast numbers of suburbanites, a house is not only a home but the only financial asset. When a suburbanite's home is threatened, therefore, he sees his very security undermined.

Liberals argue that no community has the right to exclude any person by imposing a zoning requirement for a certain type or size dwelling. They insist that every community must be open to all economic groups and contain a mix of social types. This attitude is characteristic of the intellectual orientation of contemporary liberals. They not only demand complete leveling in community life but strive to have the federal government impose a stereotyped plan on all citizens.

There's nothing in America's political tradition to justify either the leveling doctrine or the compulsory association notion inherent in a plan of federal zoning. More than that, no one has an automatic right to live in any particular neighborhood or real estate development. Community authorities traditionally have enjoyed the right to set standards through zoning laws -- standards that embody community concepts. This pattern has developed because that's what people want. People want a true neighborhood feeling -- a genuine sense of community and identity.

Proponents of federal zoning would wipe out all that and make every community conform to a single federal model. If they are successful, the liberals will have pushed this country far toward the monolithic existence envisioned in George Orwell's book 1984. They would introduce in American life a rigidity that would be intolerable to free spirits.

The federal zoning concept should be fought by every citizen who values his human and property rights, his rights to individuality and freedom of choice in developing a community living pattern. The political process at the town and city level affords ample opportunity for developing equitable zoning policies. Suburbanites don't need a bureaucratic Big Brother in Washington to set the rules for their residential areas. Land use is a matter for the individual land-owner and local government, not a proper concern of the central government.

DAVE LLEWELLYN

FREE!

Free. What a cheap word. Toys in cereal boxes, merry-go-round rides at supermarket openings, estimates for repair work.

Free is what something is when it is not worth anything. Or it's a gimmick to get you to buy something you don't need. "Free" too much rhymes with "glee" and "see me."

True, we have the maxim "The best things in life are free," but we also have the counter advice that "Things that you get free are worth what you pay for them." Most of us agree with the skeptics.

Freedom Is Costly

Freedom. That's expensive. The Revolutionary War of 1776, sacrifice for a good education, enduring religious, racial, and social prejudice.

Freedom is what you get at the risk of your life. Or sometimes it's what a courageous man will give up to get for someone else. No price can be too high for freedom, for without freedom nothing else has value.

Freedom is not free. But all this is ideal. In practice most of us care little for freedom -- and a lot for anything free. We say free things are worth nothing, but we spend our freedom for them. We believe freedom is worth all, but we sell it freely for anything.

Probably you are thinking about politics -- you should. The two examples that follow, however, are from a very different area, one that perhaps you have not thought of.

First, there is a freedom that is free. Though this seems to contradict the theory, it doesn't, really. Most of our freedoms, after all, were paid for by someone else, and so was this one. The freedom is freedom from sin.

If you are thinking this is a good example of something free that's worthless, it's probably because you don't believe in sin. But what about those things you do or say that you wish you didn't -- or those that you don't, but wish you would? They are simple examples of sin. And you can be free from these sins. That freedom comes from the Holy Spirit. Who is yours for the asking.

Second, there is a freedom that people give away. This doesn't really contradict the theory, either, because this freedom they didn't have to pay for. This freedom also is freedom from sin. Even though people have the Holy Spirit's freedom from sin, so that they don't have to do or say the things that they wish they didn't, and are free for those they wish they would, some choose to give up their freedom.

Choose Freedom

If you had love, joy, peace, patience, kindness, goodness, faithfulness, meekness, and self-control, the traits of the Holy Spirit, what would you exchange them for? Many people will exchange them for almost anything.

Because they want to? Not really. It's probably because they are unfamiliar. Honest happiness can be very strange, and there is a curious sort of comfort in the most disliked habits that happen to be familiar.

It's a free country, and it's your choice.

But you should know that you can choose freedom. Copyright Dave Llewellyn 1971

"Our new car - wrecked?"

The increase in auto traffic causes more frequent accidents. Higher hospital and medical charges - costlier auto repairs - higher injury awards - all are forcing up the auto insurance rates. Sober, safer, more courteous driving can reverse this expensive and destructive trend.

U.S.-Mexico Program Initiated To Control Horse Disease

At the urging of Senator Lloyd Bentsen and the American Horse Council, the U. S. Department of Agriculture has initiated a joint U. S.-Mexico program to control Venezuelan Equine Encephalomyelitis (VEE), a dangerous horse disease. The disease may also affect humans.

The program includes vaccinating all horses, donkeys and mules in parts of two north-eastern Mexican states to protect Mexican and U. S. horses from the disease. The disease is believed to have originated in Venezuela, and moved up the Gulf Coast close to the Mexico-Texas border. It poses a major threat to U. S. horses.

Representatives of the American Horse Council, headquartered in Washington, and the American Quarter Horse Association, with headquarters in Amarillo, met with representatives of the Senator last week. The Agriculture Department was asked to move quickly to prevent the disease from spreading into the U. S.

The area to be covered under the program runs from Matamoros, across the border from Brownsville, Texas, to a point near Tampico. It covers municipalities in the Mexican states of Tamaulipas and Nuevo Leon. There are an estimated 200,000 horses in the area to be covered under the program.

Under the agreement, the U. S. will supply the vaccine and some staff expenses, while Mexico will furnish the veterinarian and the vehicles. The vaccine will come from the U. S. Army, which developed it for use in humans.

VEE is an infectious disease of the central nervous system of equines causing death in as many as 90 percent of the cases. Over 6,000 horses died from the disease in Mexico last year and numerous cases have been reported as far north as Tampico, 250 miles south of the Texas border.

TEST YOURSELF

How Do You Rate As A Mate?

Are you great as a mate—or a "louse as a spouse?" Test yourself for the answers.

Though sometimes your best friends won't tell you, these 20 questions should help you to arrive at the answer—how do you rate as a mate?

1. Do you sometimes give-in to avoid an argument, even if you know that your one and only is dead wrong? (Unless, of course, it's a matter of principle.)

No statistician has ever calculated the number of marriages that have cracked on the rock of unwillingness to give in on unimportant questions, but the number must be large. You won't deepen your spouse's stubborn streak just by conceding a point, quite the opposite. People are at their most conciliatory after winning a round.

2. Do you show loyalty by building him or her up in public and keep your spouse's secrets?

Fidelity is more than a matter of staying monogamous. You're being disloyal every time you recite "cute" anecdotes that make your better half look small, or publicly correct his (her) grammar, or tell your friends and relatives things they have no right to know.

3. Do you maintain friendly relations with your in-laws?

It's one of the soundest married life insurance policies, experts say. By showing your mate that you like his or her family, you're showing approval of a very important part of himself or herself.

4. Do you try persistently to change him (her)?

Hard on the vocal chords and the marriage ties, and futile besides. The only person who can change your mate is friend spouse himself. You married for what he or she is—or did you?

5. Do you attempt to correct your own flaws if they distress your mate?

All right, so your mate shouldn't try to change you. But maybe that one cherished weakness isn't worth the contention it causes, and correcting the habit might make your spouse vow to be more punctual, less over-weight, or whatever you've been striving to make him.

6. Do you watch your appearance as carefully now as you did before?

You should—but if you do, you're rather uncommon. Surveys among people generally show that a surprising percentage of the wives and husbands polled, thought their mates were not as particular about grooming as before marriage.

7. Do you try the same flattery you used in courtship days?

Even if you didn't specialize in blarney, you undoubtedly showed a flattering interest in everthing your prospective partner said or did. Try it again. One good home remedy for domestic headaches and other complications: really listen when your mate speaks.

8. Do you have a hobby or other strong interest which is not shared by your mate?

According to many psychologists, you should! Too much togetherness can be stifling and ultimately become stale. A separate interest gives you breadth as well as a breather.

To make your time together more valuable:

- (1) Always have some joint project in the works;
- (2) Occasionally turn off the TV and just talk—or walk;
- (3) Plan a night out for just the two of you at least once a month—more often if you can manage it.

MEN ONLY

1. Do you take her out dining and dancing (or even to a movie) now and then, just because you know she likes it?
2. Do you help her with her coat, open doors for her? Inexpensive and infallible methods of making a woman feel more like a woman.

3. Ask her advice—and take it if it's good! There's no higher compliment. A noted marriage counselor reports that one of the primary grievances voiced by wives is that preoccupied husbands make them feel "invisible."

4. Compliment her when she has gone to special trouble to prepare a dish you like?

Bread cast on the waters may yield French toast!

5. Learn a new joke occasionally?

6. Do you occasionally bring her something intimate, like a new perfume that you trial-shiffed and liked, or a negligee just to tell her that you still think she's alluring?

WOMEN ONLY

1. Is your home neat but not so neat that your husband feels like a bull in a china shop?

2. If you have the space, set aside a den or workshop where he can scatter ashes and wood shavings to his heart's content.

3. Do you read the newspaper every day? Many women who complain that their husbands don't talk to them haven't much to say.

4. Do you inspire a sentimental mood?

If not, try applying a scentsational fragrance that's new to the nose. You can be sure of allure when you use a fragrance to enhance romance.

5. If you have children, do you make him feel he's at least as important to you as the "kids?" The counterpart of the wife who feels "invisible" is the husband who thinks he's valued only as a provider and "the father of her children." Both types are frequently found in counselling sessions and divorce courts.

6. Do you avoid reciting the trials and tribulations of your day as soon as he steps into the door? Remember, he's probably been listening to such troubles all day long as business. So let him feel at home by first providing him with pleasure and leisure that he will treasure.

LONGEST NAME

Mexican jumping beans jump because of the larva of a moth which is inside.

Women who retain their maiden names after marriage are called Lucy Stoners.

MORE MEN

Men, more than women, are afflicted with color blindness.

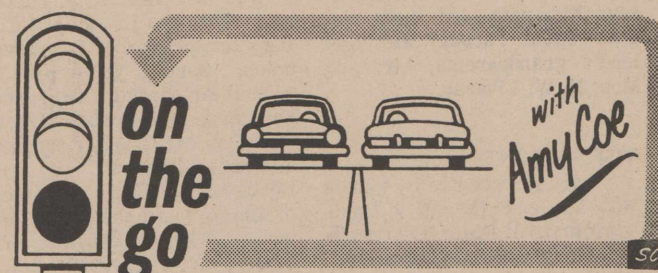

HOW DO YOU RATE AS A MATE?...Are you a first-rate mate? Checking out your compatibility quotient may provide some surprises. Here's a question-and answer guide to a marriage you can't disparage.

Later we'll meet at the Federal Building for the mass demonstration against the stinking, rotten establishment.

I'll run over and pick up my unemployment check and then go over to the U and see what's holding up my check on my Federal Education Grant, and then pick up our food stamps. Meanwhile, you go and check on your test, then pick up my eye glasses at the Health Center, then go to the Welfare Department and try to increase our eligibility limit again.

This summer most families will be exploring the country by car, largely because of the comfort and convenience auto travel offers. Discovering America can be even more fun and convenient with thorough advance planning, the kind that starts with a trip plan. You can order good plans—complete with marked maps; hotel, motel, and highway information, and expense-record forms—from major oil companies or through membership in organizations like the American Oil Motor Club.

Request that your maps show the scenic route if you really want to explore. Take a direct route back if you must, or an alternate scenic route if you have the time. Out-of-the-way places can add unprecedented pleasure and adventure to a trip. Your wandering needn't be haphazard, however. The second part of good planning is knowing where you can get accurate local information—for example, the special tourist-information booths set up in many cities during the travel season. (The emergency information local sources have—where to find a good doctor, lawyer, or veterinarian, for instance—can be mighty helpful, too, if you suddenly need it.)

So you don't miss the unplanned fun, determine the main things you want to see and do and exactly how long it takes to get from one to another. Then add a few days of uncommitted time to your vacation to enjoy some memorable side-pleasures.

Long-distance driving today is fast and easy on the Interstate. Like the strategic location of the country's increasing number of Interstate highways, there is method in their markings, too. Whenever you're confronted by a tri-level tangle of ramps and roadways, exits and entrances, glancing at the chart below might help. (Tape it to your sun visor or glove-compartment door.)

Interstate Highway Symbols

One- and two-digit signs: through routes

Even numbers are East-West routes

Odd numbers are North-South routes

Three-digit signs:

First digit even: route through, or around a city.

First digit odd: spur into a city.

Economist Suggests How To Cut Food Costs

Are you finding it harder each time you grocery shop to make a given amount of money go the same distance?

Prices of practically all goods and services, including foods, have increased, but not as fast as incomes, reports Mrs. Gwendolyn Clyatt, Extension consumer marketing specialist. Still, a major concern of homemakers is how to save on food expenditures.

Remember several factors influence food prices, she says. Along with the general national economic climate, these include business costs, weather, and future market expectations.

Mrs. Clyatt makes several suggestions to help cut food costs.

First, figure how much you presently spend for food. Some record-keeping may be necessary for a few months, so you will know just how much you are spending.

Then determine why you are spending what you are. Several factors affect family food spending: inflation, age of family members, frequency of entertaining, nutritional requirements, family size, types of food purchased, planning and preparation skills, and family likes and dislikes.

To help cut the food budget, put some tools to work—a sharp pencil and some paper, the weekly newspaper food ads, a favorite cookbook, and generous amounts of desire, says Mrs. Clyatt.

Tax Man Sam Sez:

Discarded Items Provide Needy With 'New Eyes'

When you're six years old, the world can be a wonderful place -- if you can see it. Tommy couldn't. He lived in a world of blurred images. School is tough enough when you're six. But it's even worse when your friends are learning to read, and you can't keep up. To Tommy, letters were merely blurs: so were baseballs and faces. Because Tommy's father had long been out of work, glasses were simply out of the question -- until this year.

The boy's glasses were paid for by a volunteer organization hundreds of miles away, called New Eyes for the Needy, Inc., of Short Hills, New Jersey. New Eyes, as it is familiarly known, has earned the reputation of being one of the most effective sight-saving charities in the world. It has helped many thousands of needy people obtain glasses -- here and abroad -- and it has never asked for a cent in donations.

Since its inception, almost 40 years ago, New Eyes has asked only for used eyeglasses and precious metal articles such as old watches, jewelry (real, costume and antique), good or damaged silver and dentures.

The eyeglasses and glittering clutter are sent to New Eyes for the Needy, Inc., Short Hills, New Jersey 07078. Thousands of packages from all over the United States arrive in the neat stucco headquarters every year. There, volunteers, mostly housewives, sort out the glasses, separating those in plastic frames from those in metal frames.

Many of the 250 workers have learned to operate complex optical grading and testing equipment. They help fill specific orders from missions and hospitals in foreign countries where plastic framed glasses and sunglasses are sent.

The metal framed glasses have their uses, too. Through refining, they yield precious metals that are sold, along with the jewelry, to finance New Eyes funds in over 100 hospitals and health agencies throughout the United States. The money in these funds buys glasses for people who have nowhere else to turn.

In addition to these funds, arrangements have also been made in 48 states through health and welfare agencies whereby New Eyes purchases glasses for carefully screened persons, to whom no other private or public funds are available.

Last year 8,000 people were helped under this program. Tommy was one of them.

But, as public response has grown throughout the years, so has the volume of requests. Therefore, New Eyes needs more discarded jewelry and eyeglasses to do its job. As one New Eyes volunteer put it:

"The wonderful thing about New Eyes is that we can ask people to send us things they no longer need."

And these gifts can bring vision to a little boy, like Tommy.
