Gubernatorial debate slated

By STEVE LEVINE
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Obviously itching for a showdown, Mark White and Bill Clements Tuesday agreed to an Oct. 6 statewide televised debate in Houston.

In announcing their decisions to take part in the League of Women Voters' debate, each gubernatorial candidate tried to appear the more agreeable. "Gov. Mark White today said he is pleased that his opponent has agreed to a debate," said the opening line of a White campaign press release.

"I am glad Mark White finally accepted my challenge to debate," replied Clements, the former governor and White's GOP opponent in the Nov. 4 general election.

The debate will take place from 7 p.m. to 8 p.m. on a Monday night at the studios of KPRC-TV, channel 2 in Houston. Although KPRC is an NBC affiliate, the league will offer the broadcast to one station in every television market regardless of any station's network affiliation.

League debate director Modelle Brudner said she will meet with the candidates' staffs within the next few weeks to set a format for the debate. "I'd certainly like to try for a wide-open debate," Ms. Brudner said, rather than a question-and-answer format with reporters.

Ms. Brudner had originally preferred a late-October debate but she said Tuesday the candidates could not agree on a date that close to the election. "Probably we won't reach as many voters because people tend to not get real interested in an election until right before," she said.

If Tuesday's announcements are any example, the debating will focus on the No. 1 issue in the Capitol these days: the state budget and the summer-long shouting match over the need for a special session to fix it.

Mark White's tax and spend policies have brought the Texas economy to its knees," Clements said. "I'm sure the hundreds of thousands of people watching this debate will want to know why he refused to get and help the Texas economy months ago."

Burning cruise ship evacuated

MIAMI (AP) — Fire broke out today aboard the cruise ship Emerald Seas, injuring at least two people, and passengers were being evacuated over the side in lifeboats as a precaution, the Coast Guard reported.

The ship was in the Berry Islands about 50 miles north of Nassau in the Bahamas, said U.S. Coast Guard spokesman Jim Simpson.

Three Coast Guard helicopters and a jet were on the scene and two more choppers were dispatched to evacuate people needing medical attention, said Simpson.

He said one person had been burned and another suffered smoke inhalation, but he did not have additional information. They were to be taken to hospitals in Nassau or Florida depending on their injuries.

Aliens ousted in local sting had well-paying jobs

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

Several dozen illegal aliens — kicked out of the country Saturday after being lured into the arms of federal agents at Midland Regional Air Terminal — held well-paying jobs and some even collected government benefits, U.S. Immigration and Naturalization officials said Tuesday.

The aliens — mostly natives of Mexico — were arrested and deported after responding to a letter that offered them cash and a myriad of other prizes if they showed up at the airport.

Forty-four illegal aliens were arrested after they presented their letters to plainclothes officers, INS spokesman Mario Ortiz said.

Twenty-four relatives or friends also were arrested when they were unable to produce proof of U.S. citizenship, officials said.

Ortiz said not only had the aliens been violating U.S. laws, "but most of them have been displacing American workers.

He added, "Some were even receiving government benefits. It's disgraceful that local citizens cannot even get a job, especially when these West Texas communities are so hard-pressed (by the oil situation)."

Ortiz said the "overwhelming majority" of those arrested Saturday worked in construction or for oilfield-related companies — primarily oil well service companies.

Only five of those arrested worked in farming or ranching and one was a domestic employee, Ortiz said.

Ortiz said 75 percent of the aliens used Social Security numbers they had obtained by fraud.

Two women had been receiving $100 a month in food stamps, while one man — an Odessa resident — received $1,300 in unemployment compensation in June and was expected to receive $1,587 this month, Ortiz said.

Ortiz said illegal aliens collect between $7 and $8 million in unemployment benefits in Texas each year.

"We're running out of unemployment benefits with the total number of unemployed on the increase," Ortiz said.

"We've got to figure a way to find out if the people who get these benefits are entitled to them."

INS officials said the sting operation was devised because of widespread complaints of officials and citizens throughout West Texas that illegal aliens were getting jobs that should be going to residents that needed work.

INS officials said the sting was three months in the making. All of the aliens contacted at their last known address already had been ordered out of the United States after their deportation appeals were rejected "months or years ago."

Ortiz said the INS was trying to work itself out of a serious backlog of deportation cases in West Texas.

The aliens came from towns including Levelland, Friona, Snyder and Kermit, he said.

Oil ministers resume talks on pledges

GENEVA (AP) — OPEC oil ministers resumed discussions today on a proposal calling for voluntary cuts in each member nation's oil production to halt the slide in world petroleum prices.

James Audu, spokesman for the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, said Tuesday the cartel hoped the voluntary cuts in output would "if not boost oil prices, then at least stop them from falling further."

In two days of meetings, oil ministers from the 13 OPEC member countries have been unable to agree on national production quotas under a lower aggregate output ceiling for the entire cartel.

With a breakthrough on a unanimous accord on quotas appearing virtually impossible, the ministers instead decided to try and win pledges from each OPEC member for voluntary cuts in their national oil production.

They would then continue to work on a definite accord on quotas under an official production ceiling, Audu said.

A high-ranking OPEC source said that by Tuesday evening seven cartel members had pledged voluntary production cuts.

Oil-futures prices surged in reaction to the prospect of an OPEC production cut. On the New York Mercantile Exchange, the price of West Texas Intermediate, an important market barometer, jumped 70 cents a barrel Tuesday to $11.77.

But later in the day, prices pulled back slightly, and West Texas Intermediate closed at $11.41 a barrel.

Jenco pays call on pope

VATICAN CITY (AP) — The Rev. Lawrence Martin Jenco today delivered a private message from his former Lebanese Moslem kidnappers to Pope John Paul II, and appealed for prayers on behalf of the remaining American hostages.

"To keep my promise, I have given a confidential message from my captors to the Holy Father," Jenco told reporters after a 15-minute audience with the pope.

He said he would give the same message Thursday to the head of the Anglican Church, the archbishop of Canterbury, who sent an envoy to Beirut several times last year in an effort to negotiate freedom for the hostages.

"The religious factor is of great importance in this matter," Jenco told journalists, referring to the release of the remaining hostages. He did not elaborate and refused to discuss the contents of the message.

The priest, looking tired, said he had "a lovely visit" with the pope. "He hugged me," Jenco said.

A Vatican spokesman, Monsignor Giulio Nicolini, refused to describe Jenco's audience with the pope, but said it also was attended by Terry Waite, the Anglican Church envoy.

Jenco, 51, of Joliet, Ill., said he also had a message for President Reagan, but would not say if it was the same message given to the pope.

"Sometimes I can't answer your question," he told reporters. "I have fear that what I may say might be detrimental to my brothers who are still held hostage in Lebanon. So I hope you will have the kindness to understand my silence."

He said he last saw the pope in May 1984 when John Paul was touring an Indochinese refugee camp in Thailand.

Nelson's co-pilot told not to mention heater

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — The pilot of a private plane that crashed near DeKalb, Texas, last December, killing singer Rick Nelson and six others, bluntly instructed his co-pilot not to "tell anyone" about a malfunctioning cabin heater that now is a chief suspect in the fire that forced the plane down, according to new testimony from the co-pilot.

The testimony from Kenneth Ferguson, released Tuesday by safety investigators, indicates that the gasoline cabin heater overheated repeatedly during a flight to Dallas Dec. 31, and that pilot Bradley Rank ordered him to turn it back on several times because the passengers were complaining about the cold.

Ferguson's testimony to National Transportation Safety Board investigators, taken nearly three months after the crash because injuries made it difficult for him to talk, focuses suspicion again on the Douglas DC-3's cabin heater, and presents a version of the events that differs significantly from that of Rank, the only other survivor.

The twin-engine aircraft, which was heading to Love Field, crashed New Year's Eve while making a forced landing in a field near DeKalb. The ensuing fire claimed the lives of Nelson, his fiancee, Helen Blair, and five other passengers. Rank and Ferguson escaped through the cockpit window.

Ferguson's testimony was part of several documents released by the safety board Tuesday, signaling the end of its fact-finding process and the beginning of several weeks of analysis that eventually will yield a determination of the probable cause of the crash.

The documents disclose that Ferguson, in sworn testimony taken March 19, told investigators that after he and Rank escaped from the airplane, Rank sat his co-pilot on the ground and urged Ferguson to say nothing about the cabin heater.

"Don't tell anyone about the heater, don't tell anyone about the heater, don't tell anyone about the heater," Ferguson quoted Rank as saying.

Rank, in his sworn testimony to the NTSB Jan. 22, said that during the latter stages of the flight, he left the cockpit for a routine check of the passengers. At that time, Rank said, he noticed smoke in the area where Nelson and Blair were sitting.

Rank told the investigators he immediately checked the cabin heater, found it cool to his touch and saw neither smoke nor fire. Rank said he nonetheless activated a small fire extinguisher attached to the heater and moved back to the cockpit, opening fresh air inlets along the way. Once he arrived at the cockpit, Rank said, "things rapidly got worse."

Firm moving district staff to Midland

From Staff and Wire Reports

Diamond Shamrock Corp. has announced plans to form a district exploration and production office in Midland, with an office in the Independence Plaza building.

The move will bring 10 professionals to Midland, according to Diamond Shamrock spokesman Roger Schrum, who added that he expects the move to be completed by Sept. 1. He said the 10, mostly from Amarillo and Pampa, will include geologists, engineers, and production personnel, who will handle the company's Permian Basin drilling and producing operations.

The Bright Side

"A number of Permian Basin drilling and producing operations had been handled out of Amarillo, and as the number kept growing, it became obvious moving to Midland would be more efficient," Schrum said.

The move is a continuation of Diamond Shamrock's recent restructuring of its exploration and production division, combining its domestic and international oil and gas exploration and production subsidiaries into a new Dallas-based subsidiary called Diamond Shamrock Exploration Co.

State leaders given new angle to decrease budget shortfalls

By DONNA GEHRKE

HOUSTON (AP) — State leaders need to attract small and medium-sized businesses from the food processing, electric energy generation, movie-making and tourism fields to decrease Texas' budget deficit, Texas Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower says.

"Added up, these growth industries have a multibillion-dollar potential, representing an economic gusher greater than Spindletop offered 85 years ago," Hightower told an audience of 25 at the Public Affairs Roundtable meeting Tuesday in Houston.

Hightower said his agency already has been active in attracting new jobs to the state by forming cooperatives, seeking worldwide markets, encouraging farmers to grow new products and helping Texans process crops produced locally.

For example, wheat farmers around Dawn in the Panhandle soon will be processing their own grain into 300,000 pounds of flour a day, creating 14 new jobs, he said.

STATE

"It's the old concept if you got lemons, make lemonade," he said. "And we haven't been doing that."

Hightower said Texas is the second largest food grower in the country, yet processes only six percent of the nation's food products.

"For every additional one percent of the national food processing market that Texas captures, the state's economy gains an additional $3 billion in retail sales with a total economic impact of $9 billion," he said.

Officials attempting to cut the budget should not slash programs that encourage economic development, Hightower said.

Hightower said his department already has cut about 13 percent of its staff in the last year. He said his staff may be reduced by an additional 8 to 10 percent after the special legislative session meets to tackle the state's projected $3.5 billion budget shortfall.

"Our state government's financial future cannot be made simply by slashing budgets or even by finding enough new tax revenues to cover the deficit," he said.

Poll finds 53 percent of Texans favor cuts

By MICHAEL HOLMES

AUSTIN (AP) — A newly released opinion poll finds 53 percent of Texans surveyed favoring spending cuts, while just 10.4 percent support tax increases to balance the state government budget.

The survey was conducted by Arthur J. Finkelstein and Associates of Irvington, N.Y., for the Foundation for Education on Free Enterprise, which made a copy available to The Associated Press on Tuesday.

The poll conducted June 14-19 found another 27.9 percent favored a combination of cuts and taxes, while 2.1 percent said the budget shouldn't be balanced and 6.6 percent either didn't know or declined to answer.

Foundation spokesman Joe Wyatt, a former Texas congressman, said the telephone survey interviewed 606 Texas voters. Its accuracy was pegged at plus or minus 4 percent.

The foundation is a recently established, tax-exempt organization that says its activities include research and publication of information on how the free enterprise system relates to Texas.

"Most Texans would cut state spending to balance the budget," said an analysis that accompanied the poll results.

"Spending cuts were favored over tax hikes by Texans who vote for Democrats as well as by those who vote for Republicans," the analysis added.

The poll was conducted when the state's budget deficit was about $2.3 billion. Last week, Comptroller Bob Bullock said the deficit had ballooned to $3.5 billion, and a special session of the Legislature begins Aug. 6 to try to balance the books.

Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby launched a statewide tour Tuesday to call for a combination of about $650 million in budget cuts and a sales tax increase to eliminate the problem. House Speaker Gib Lewis, D-Fort Worth, repeatedly has voiced opposition to a tax increase.

The poll also found respondents saying state government's workforce is too large.

"When it comes to the size of state government, a majority of Texans say the Texas state government has too many people working in it," Finkelstein reported.

Two questions were asked about the size of the state workforce.

Asked whether they agreed with a statement that "state government has too many employees," 58.3 percent agreed and 24.9 percent disagreed, while 16.8 percent didn't know or didn't answer.

Asked which statement came closest to their opinion, 56.1 percent preferred the statement, "There are too many state employees," while 29.4 percent preferred, "There are not too many state employees."

'Star Wars' favored in recent state poll

AUSTIN (AP) — A privately funded organization says its poll shows that many Texans feel differently about the "Star Wars" defense against nuclear missiles than the way their congressmen are voting.

"Clearly, the public is in tune with the president and supports the research for development of and deployment of a strategic shield against nuclear attack," Carl Russell Channell, president of National Endowment for the Preservation of Liberty, told a news conference Tuesday.

Channell said NEPL is a privately supported organization in Washington.

He said approximately 3,000 "regular voters" in four Texas congressional districts were asked 44 questions each concerning support of President Reagan's Strategic Defense Initiative, often called "Star Wars."

A total of 19 congressional districts were polled over the nation.

Channell said congressmen in each of the Texas districts had voted against Reagan's request for increased funds for SDI development.

"In this issue, none of the congressmen represent the will of the constituency," Channell said.

Channell said the poll, which he said had a 3 percent accuracy rate, showed 62 percent of the voters questioned in the 10th District of U.S. Rep. J.J. "Jake" Pickle, D-Austin, had a favorable opinion of Reagan.

He said 78 percent of the same voters said they approved development of a defense system to protect the nation against a nuclear missile attack.

In the 15th District of Rep. Eligio "Kika" de la Garza, D-McAllen, 81 percent favored Reagan and 90 percent were for SDI, Channell said.

In the 16th District of Rep. Ron Coleman, D-El Paso, 74 percent favored Reagan and 92 percent favor SDI development, he said.

In the 23rd District of Rep. Albert Bustamante, D-San Antonio, Reagan had a 77 percent approval rating and 88 percent approved the SDI plan, Channell said.

Channell said results of the poll were presented to the White House last Friday.

Oilman planning perusal of Titanic

AUSTIN (AP) — Jack Grimm, a West Texas oilman who made unsuccessful searches for Noah's Ark and the Loch Ness monster, says he now plans to retrieve artifacts from the Titanic.

Grimm said he will join the French navy next summer in a submarine visit to the sunken wreck in the North Atlantic.

"There seems to be plenty in the debris field to keep you busy one whole summer picking through there," said the 61-year-old Abilene man.

Officials at the Woods Hole Oceanographic Institution in Massachusetts, which conducted a recent expedition to the Titanic, said they have not heard of any French plans to visit the sunken luxury liner.

Grimm, founder of Grimm Oil Co., claims the U.S.-French team that discovered the Titanic wreckage last September were aided by four-year-old videotapes his crew had made of a propellor during their search for the fabled liner.

Woods Hole spokeswoman Anne Rabushka denied the claim. She said institution scientists did not use Grimm's information and that Grimm's "propellor" turned out to be a rock far north of the area where the ship was found.

In the 1970s, Grimm spent millions of dollars searching for Noah's Ark and the Loch Ness monster. He spent $2 million more trying to obtain proof of the location of the Titanic in 1980, 1981 and 1983.

Scientists from Woods Hole used a miniature submarine and a camera-equipped robot to explore the wreckage of the ship, which went down after colliding with an iceberg in 1912.

"We never have intended to raise it. It would probably be impossible, not to mention the problem of towing it 1,000 miles to port. But the sale of any artifacts from the debris field would be well worth whatever it costs to go and find them," Grimm said.

The oilman said he has asked the U.S. Navy to give him copies of the videotapes made during the two-week expedition earlier this month. But the Navy, which funded the mission to test the tethered robot, does not have possession of the 50-plus hours of videotape or the 57,000 still photographs. They are in the possession of Dr. Robert Ballard, the expedition's chief scientist, and after one year will be turned over to Woods Hole.

The tapes could help plan the recovery of items such as chamber pots, wine bottles and a safe now in debris around the ship, according to Grimm, who said he would not try to cut into the ship's hull.

Roy Barrera confident his campaign in good shape

By JIM WARREN
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — He put in a few millionaires here, a few veteran political operatives there, and now Roy Barrera thinks his campaign to unseat Attorney General Jim Mattox is in good shape.

Barrera, a Republican district judge in San Antonio, announced that Dallas-based superdeveloper Trammel Crow, previously his campaign treasurer, will serve as state campaign co-chairman, along with Pete Diaz Jr., a successful businessman in the Rio Grande Valley.

National publications have said Crow owns more land in North America than any other person, and Diaz reported more than $80 million in sales last year from his various business ventures.

After Barrera beat Ed Walsh June 7 in a runoff to win the GOP attorney general nomination, rumors had it that Crow and Barrera had a falling out and Crow would leave the campaign. Barrera denied those rumors Tuesday, saying the campaign merely reorganized and no hard feelings ever existed between the two men.

Barrera said he assembled the new team for "a bipartisan, multi-faceted election thrust." He expects to raise and spend at least $2 million in the race against Mattox, who already has raised that amount.

The judge said a recent in-house poll showed he had 40-percent name identification with voters, admitedly much lower than Mattox's. "There's no doubt my opponent has great name identification," he said. "The question is whether it's positive or negative."

Barrera contends that half the people who recognize Mattox's name have a negative response. Mattox campaign workers, however, say the incumbent enjoys high positive ratings.

Sources in statewide Democratic campaigns said a recent poll showed Mattox ahead of Barrera 48-37 with 15 percent of the people either not answering or not having a preference. Barrera's aides, however, said they can easily overcome an early 11-point deficit.

Barrera thinks his campaign can bring in independents and conservative Democrats, and he said he will target first-time voters with ties to neither party.

Mattox and some other incumbent statewide office holders — Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, Land Commissioner Garry Mauro and Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower — are organizing a get-out-the-vote drive to help themselves and Gov. Mark White.

Aides to down-ballot office holders have said a weak showing by White — the governor currently lags far behind challenger Bill Clements — could bring down the whole Democratic ticket.

A Clements win would help his effort, Barrera said. Still he thinks he can win without riding Clements' coattails.

SOME PEOPLE BUY AIR CONDITIONERS LIKE THERE'S NO TOMORROW.

When it's time to replace your old air conditioner, it'll probably only take you a little while to find a new one that looks pretty good and doesn't cost much. But it'll take a lot longer to realize a quick bargain is likely to cause a slow burn on your wallet every month.

A high-efficiency air conditioner could make a difference in your cooling costs this summer and every summer. A high-efficiency choice means steady savings because you're getting the same amount of cooling using less electricity than with a low-efficiency unit. On top of this, you'll get a valuable rebate from your electric company if your central air conditioner or window unit meets our Energy Action standards.

See your recognized Energy Action air conditioning contractor or dealer for help in choosing a high-efficiency air conditioner or heat pump. Tomorrow, you'll be way ahead of the game.

It pays to choose an Energy Action Unit.

Poole

RICHMOND, Calif. (AP) — The question of whether to keep a pregnant brain-dead woman alive by artificial means until her child could be delivered was simple for the father.

Derrick Poole had lost his fiancee, Marie Odette Henderson, to a malignant brain tumor. He decided he would not lose their daughter.

Poole, 31, fought his fiancee's parents in court, finally reaching a settlement to keep Ms. Henderson hooked to life-sustaining machinery until the fetus growing inside her could be delivered.

Doctors at Kaiser Permanente Hospital in Santa Clara planned to deliver the 32-week-old fetus by Caeserian section today — 7½ weeks after Ms. Henderson, 34, was declared brain-dead.

"She grabbed me by the hand and put it on her stomach," Poole said recently, describing a visit to Ms. Henderson after she had suffered a stroke that paralyzed her right arm and slurred her speech.

"She looked at me like, 'Take care of baby.' Then she took me by the hand again and pointed toward me and she took my index finder and pointed to the baby."

The last time he visited her, Poole said he told Ms. Henderson the fetus would be OK.

"Then, she did like a final release. She inhaled, then exhaled and then she started crying. Later on that night, she passed away."

Edna and Otis Henderson of Detroit wanted the hospital to disconnect the life-support systems attached to their daughter. Poole obtained a court order preventing that, then reached the agreement to keep Ms. Henderson breathing until the fetus could be delivered.

He also was granted custody of the child, to be named Michelle.

Hospital spokeswoman Sue Wilson said tests showed the fetus weighed 3 pounds, 10 ounces — the normal weight for a fetus of 32 weeks.

"A baby who is this number of weeks gestation would have a 90 percent chance of surviving if she were born to a healthy mother," she said, adding there were no survival figures for babies born to brain-dead mothers.

A fetus is generally not viable until at least 24 weeks, said Mort Lebow, a spokesman for the American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists in Washington.

If it is delivered before the end of the second trimester — 29 weeks — it has a 50 percent chance of survival, Lebow said.

"It is unusual to be able to keep a woman alive who has died from any cause," he said. "But if the fetus is well and the fetus stands a reasonable chance of survival in the womb, they'll do that until it can be removed."

Say more afraid for brother after she talked to Jenco

BOSTON (AP) — The sister of an American reporter kidnapped in Lebanon says she is more afraid for her brother's life after talking to a freed hostage.

"I knew things were not good. I didn't realize how bad they were," Peggy Say told reporters Tuesday after returning from a two-week trip to Syria, where she tried to persuade Mideast leaders to help free her brother and other American captives.

Mrs. Say's brother, Terry Anderson, the chief Middle East correspondent for The Associated Press, was kidnapped March 16, 1985. Three other Americans also are believed held by the Shiite Moslem Islamic Jihad, or Islamic Holy War.

Mrs. Say, 45, of Batavia, N.Y., tearfully embraced her husband who met her at Logan International Airport.

While Mrs. Say was in the Mideast, the Rev. Lawrence Martin Jenco, 51, of Joliet, Ill., was freed after 19 months in captivity.

The first person Jenco asked about upon reaching Damascus, Syria, was Mrs. Say, and the two joined in a tearful embrace.

"When I talked to Father Jenco, I literally went into shock," she said. The hostages, he told her, "are given the basic necessities of life and those are very basic."

Jenco told her Anderson wore leg chains and had received no news since March, not even word of the deaths of his father and brother.

For five months last year, she said, Anderson was chained to a wall and blindfolded.

Jenco said he was moved seven times during his captivity, and that the other hostages are frequently moved to keep their whereabouts secret.

The pro-Iranian Islamic Jihad has demanded the release of 17 comrades convicted in Kuwait for bombing the U.S. and French embassies in 1983. Kuwait has refused.

Mrs. Say's trip to Syria, the main power-broker in war-torn Lebanon, was the latest in her efforts to free her brother.

It was part of a promise she made to her father, Glenn Anderson Sr., and her brother, Glenn Anderson Jr. Both men died of cancer within months of each other earlier this year.

At the Damascus Sheraton hotel, Mrs. Say buttonholed visiting Lebanese political and military representatives, Syrian government officials and journalists.

She told each she was working to free her 38-year-old brother.

Mrs. Say also went to the top levels of the Syrian goverment, meeting Defense Minister Mustafa Tlass, Information Minister Yassin Rajouh and Foreign Ministry officials. She told each she appreciated anything Syria could do.

Syrian leaders promised to increase the pressure on Islamic Jihad to release the Americans, she said.

"I believe the Syrian government is making strong movements within Lebanon that could perhaps bring the hostages out. My great worry is that a military move of any kind endangers their lives," she said.

Mrs. Say also met with spokesmen of Palestinian groups, including a cordial session with Khaled al-Fahoum, former president of the Palestine parliament-in-exile who is at odds with Palestine Liberation Organization chairman Yasser Arafat.

She will not return to the Mideast, Mrs. Say said, but may carry her campaign to Congress. She criticized the Reagan administration's refusal to negotiate.

"I was panic-stricken when I began reading statements coming out from my own government...saying, 'Well, there's not much we can do. We may have to leave them to their fate,'" she said.

The other missing Americans are Thomas Sutherland, 55, acting dean of agriculture at the American University of Beirut; William Buckley, 57, a political officer at the U.S. Embassy in Beirut; and David Jacobsen, 54, director of Catholic Relief Services in Lebanon.

Jacobsen was videotaped by his captors recently as saying he and the other hostages believed U.S. officials had abandoned them.

"I can relate to what David Jacobsen said about their feelings of abandonment," Mrs. Say said. "I feel very much the same way."

Joliet plans Jenco homecoming

JOLIET, Ill. (AP) — The homecoming of the Rev. Lawrence Martin Jenco will be fit for a king, his nephew says.

The northern Illinois community is festooned with yellow ribbons. Messages of welcome adorn local marquees, and the telephone recording of the time and weather include congratulations from a local bank.

The 51-year-old Roman Catholic priest was released last week after being held captive by Moslem extremists for 19 months. He is in Rome today with about a dozen family members to meet with Pope John Paul II.

U.S. State Department spokesman Mike Austrian said Tuesday that Jenco would return to the United States on Friday, landing at Andrews Air Force Base outside Washington. It was not known when he would return to Joliet.

Preliminary plans for the homecoming celebration include a motorcade and a reception in a 1,900-seat theater. The extent of the festivities will depend on Jenco's health, said his nephew, John Jenco.

The priest suffers from a heart ailment and developed an eye infection from blindfolds used by his captors, his nephew said.

"We want to make sure he's up for this," he said.

Family members said there also would be a quiet family celebration. Ten members of Jenco's family flew to West Germany to meet him after his release.

Jenco's freedom is being celebrated throughout this city of 78,000, about 30 miles southwest of Chicago.

The owner of the Rialto Square Theater offered the family free use of the 1,900-seat movie house.

The beacon on Joliet Catholic High School, usually lighted only for football victories, will shine until Jenco's return.

Local churches plan religious celebrations.

The priest's ordeal affected many who had never met him, including Veronica Miroslavic, 58, of Joliet.

"Right after he was abducted, I ran into his brother, John, at the Post Office. I recognized him from TV. I said, 'What can I do to help?'" Mrs. Miroslavic said Tuesday.

She wrote letters to senators and members of Congress, collected signatures on petitions, organized prayer sessions and traveled throughout the Midwest in the effort to publicize Jenco's plight.

"My prayers have been answered, haven't they?" she said.

Journalist will be allowed to travel with Bush

WASHINGTON (AP) — A correspondent for an Israeli newspaper, scratched from George Bush's Mideast trip, is joining the other journalists in Jordan and still may get a promised exclusive interview with the vice president.

Wolf Blitzer, the Washington correspondent for the Jerusalem Post, headed for the Middle East Tuesday after getting a call from a Bush aide who apologized for bumping the journalist from the press contingent.

Blitzer said Marlin Fitzwater, Bush's press secretary, called from Israel to say Jordanian officials had agreed to allow the reporter to enter their country.

"We have worked this whole thing out. I'm sorry we had this complication," Blitzer quoted Fitzwater as saying.

Although he writes for an Israeli newspaper, Blitzer is a native of Buffalo, N.Y., who travels on his U.S. passport. "I am not an Israeli citizen," he said.

The correspondent said that before he was bumped from the Bush trip, the Jordanian ambassador to the United States had assured him that he would be welcome in Amman as part of the press contingent with the vice president.

Hours before Bush left last Friday, aides told Blitzer that a Jordanian official had said he would not be welcome in the Arab country.

Blitzer said he had asked Jordanian Ambassador Mohammed Kamal, "Are you sure I won't have any problems?"

He quoted Kamal as saying, "Just the opposite, we are planning special treatment for you." Blitzer said the ambassador — who signed his visa for the trip — gave him the names of senior officials and other Jordanians who would be willing to talk to him.

But Bush aides insisted there would be a problem and Blitzer remained in Washington.

"We wanted him to go all along but everybody kept saying no," said Gayle Fisher, a Bush aide.

Drought may stall school opening

Associated Press

Georgia schools may open late if the South's record drought and heat continue, and one meteorologist says it may take a hurricane to bring relief.

More hay donated from across the country, meanwhile, was heading to the Southeast today to help farmers feed starving livestock a day after two trains carrying 3,300 tons of fodder arrived in South Carolina and Georgia.

Federal officials declared 65 of 67 counties disaster areas in Alabama, where farm losses from the drought have been estimated at $750 million, almost a third of the nearly $2 billion in damage from Pennsylvania to Florida.

Triple-digit temperatures returned Tuesday to the Southeast following a week's respite. The heat has been blamed for 59 deaths this month in the South and Midwest.

Recent thunderstorms have eased the drought slightly in parts of the Southeast, but rainfall is as much as 23 inches below normal, and forecasters doubt that scattered thunderstorms normal in late summer will make up the lack.

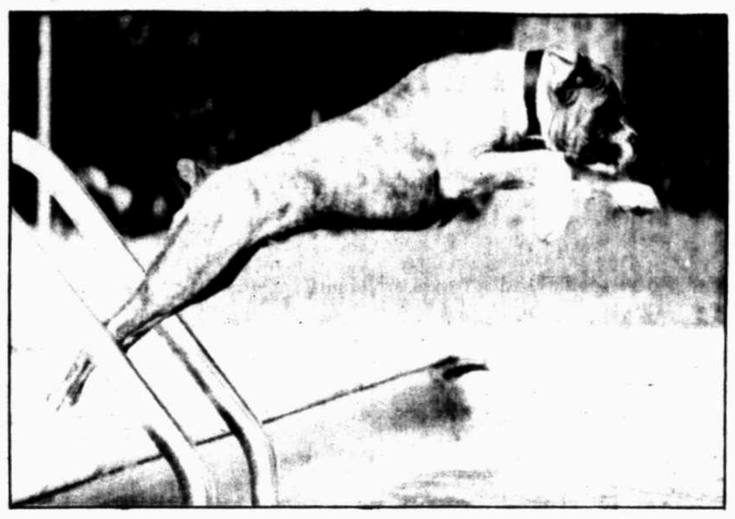

"It would be an extremely unusual pattern for us to get several days of consistently heavy rainfall," said Chuck Terrell, a National Weather Service meteorologist in Birmingham, Ala. "It would take a hurricane to do that."

A mass of hot air extended from the Southeast coast to Kansas, with records reached in 16 cities, including Tulsa, Okla., where the mercury climbed to 110 degrees, and Dodge City, Kan., where the 109-degree reading broke a 110-year-old record for the date by one degree.

The heat continued today, with early morning temperatures near 90 degrees in northeast Oklahoma and highs of 115 expected.

The 104 degrees in Macon, Ga., on Tuesday tied the record for the date and made Tuesday the 12th day this month of triple-digit temperatures, the most ever. Atlanta broke a 6-year-old record Tuesday with its 26th consecutive day of 90-plus-degrees temperatures.

Water use restrictions were imposed in the Arkansas cities of Cabot, Benton and Pine Bluff, and in Oklahoma City.

As hot temperatures pose problems for farmers in the Florida Panhandle, a 12-week-old boxer pup named "Bear" finds his own way to cool off. He dives into the family swimming pool — just right for those dog day afternoons.

Two deaths related to thunderstorms

Associated Press

A Massachusetts man drowned in a flash-flooded creek and a Rhode Island man was electrocuted by a downed power line as thunderstorms knocked out electricity to thousands and flooded streets in those states, authorities said.

Also Tuesday, four soccer players were hospitalized after lightning struck among them on a field in Newport, R.I., officials said.

Robert Stiles, 34, of Huntington was trying to save lumber for a house he was renovating when he was swept away about 6:45 p.m. Tuesday while his 6-year-old daughter watched, said state police in the western Massachusetts town.

Stiles's body was found today on the Westfield River, which is fed by the creek, troopers said.

"Normally that's a two-foot stream, but in the flash flood it became a 15 to 20-foot swollen river, with whirlpools as it joined the larger stream," state police Sgt. Thomas Burnickas said.

In Rhode Island, an unidentified 20-year-old Wakefield man was electrocuted by the downed power line when he stepped out of his car to put out a roadside brush fire, police said.

Soccer players Joseph Avila, 34, of East Providence, and Paul Verissimo, 18, of Warren, were admitted to Newport Hospital after lightning struck near them during a sudden downpour, Rhode Island officials said.

"A witness said about 10 people hit the ground," said Frank P. Geremia, operations director for the state Department of Environmental Management. "Whether they all were really affected or not we don't know."

Two others, whose names were not released, were treated and discharged at the hospital, a spokesman said.

Scores of roads in western Massachusetts' Hampshire, Franklin and Berkshire counties were closed by flooding as a late afternoon thunderstorm dumped up to five inches of rain on the Berkshire Hills.

The heavy rains Tuesday triggered power failures in Massachusetts that left some 19,000 Boston Edison Co. customers without service and delayed flights at Boston's Logan International Airport.

An hour-long storm at about 8 p.m. set off more than two dozen false fire alarms in Boston and flooded streets before moving offshore, fire officials said.

So much water lingered on metropolitan highways, that today's morning commuters going to Boston were delayed.

More than 6,000 Boston Edison customers in the western Massachusetts community of Pittsfield were without power following the storm. In Boston, the Weather Service said 0.64 inches of rain fell in evening storms.

Nearly an inch of rain had fallen earlier Tuesday, when a thunderstorm blacked out more than 13,000 Boston-area customers up to three hours, and 3,000 more Boston customers lost power at the peak of the storm, Boston Edison officials said.

In western Massachusetts, Berkshire County officials reported up to 1,000 lightning strikes at the height on the storm. Firemen in the three counties were kept busy as dozens of homes and several barns were struck.

In Conway, where nearly 5 inches of rain fell between 3 and 7:30 p.m., officials evacuated people from 18 homes, fearing that an earthen dam at the town swimming hole might let go.

The thunderstorms also knocked out electrical service and flooded streets in many southern Rhode Island communities.

"I never thought that I myself would be a refugee," Jenco said. "I give praise and thanks to the Lord that I have been delivered safely into the graces of the Holy Father here in Rome."

The priest was released Saturday in eastern Lebanon after nearly 19 months as a hostage. His captors, the underground Islamic Jihad group, said in a statement that he was being freed because of deteriorating health.

Before arriving in Rome Tuesday, Jenco underwent two days of medical tests at a U.S. Air Force hospital in West Germany. Doctors said he has an "ongoing heart disease."

Jenco urged reporters to pray for the release of three Americans with whom he was held in Lebanon, and thanked the media for "keeping our cause very visual to the world."

Islamic Jihad said last October that it killed a fourth American who is missing in Lebanon. No body has been found.

Jenco was flying later today to London for a meeting Thursday with the archbishop of Canterbury, the Rev. Robert Runcie.

Upon arriving in Rome Tuesday, he said, "I was ordained in Rome in 1959 and celebrated my 26th anniversary as a priest in captivity. It's just kind of nice to be present in the holy city."

Before leaving for Rome, Jenco made a 10-minute statement at the U.S. Air Force's Rhein-Main Air Base near Frankfurt. He referred to his Shiite Moslem captors by name as Haj, Said and Ahab.

"I am now on my way to Rome to see the Holy Father, and I will have a chance to speak to the Holy Father what we discussed shortly before I said goodbye to you, Haj," the priest said.

Jenco also spoke of the remaining American hostages.

"I did not have a chance to hug and to kiss them and to bid them farewell," he said. "Please let them know I will be a personal letter to their loved ones."

The Americans still missing in Lebanon are Terry A. Anderson, 38, of Lorain, Ohio, chief Middle East correspondent of The Associated Press; David Jacobsen, 55, director of the American University Hospital in Beirut; Thomas Sutherland, 55, of Fort Collins, Colo., the university's acting dean of agriculture; and William Buckley, 58, of Medford, Mass. a U.S. Embassy political officer.

Islamic Jihad said Oct. 4 that it killed Buckley in retaliation for an Israeli air raid on the Palestine Liberation Organization's headquarters in Tunisia.

Islamic Jihad has demanded that 17 comrades imprisoned in Kuwait for 1983 bombings be released. Kuwait refuses.

In Athens, Greek Foreign Ministry sources on Tuesday quoted Syrian Foreign Minister Farouk al-Sharaa as saying his country has increased its efforts to gain the freedom of the American hostages.

The sources, who spoke on condition of anonymity, also quoted al-Sharaa as pledging in a letter to his Greek counterpart, Carolos Papoulias, that Syria will do "whatever it can to gain the release of the rest of the hostages."

Syria is the main power-broker in Lebanon's 11-year-old civil war and has about 25,000 peace-keeping forces there under a U.N. mandate.

In addition to the Americans, seven Frenchmen, an Irishman, two Britons, a South Korean and an Italian are missing in Lebanon.

NASA experts think survival 'improbable'

By PAUL RECER
AP Aerospace Writer

SPACE CENTER, Houston — The Challenger astronauts probably would not have survived even if the space shuttle had been equipped with an escape system, NASA experts say.

"I doubt very seriously that a bail-out system would have had any chance of working," Tommy W. Holloway, chief of the Johnson Space Center flight directors office, said Tuesday.

Flight director John Cox said the survival chances with parachutes would have been "improbable."

National Aeronautics and Space Administrations investigators believe at least some of the astronauts were alive and perhaps even conscious after the Jan. 28 explosion that ripped the shuttle apart.

Holloway, Cox and others said the crew compartment probably was tumbling or twisting as it fell 12 miles to the ocean surface after the explosion.

The seven astronauts would have been thrown violently about the craft if they had unstrapped from their seats, they said.

Also, it's likely, they said, that the cabin lost pressure, causing the astronauts to pass out within seconds, although they could still have been alive throughout the long fall.

In a report released Monday, astronaut-physician Joseph Kerwin said an examination of recovered wreckage and bodily remains indicated the astronauts were alive after the explosion. The blast smashed the craft with a force of 12 to 20 times that of gravity for about two seconds.

"Analysis indicates that these accelerations are survivable, and that the probability of major injury to the crew members is low," Kerwin said in his report.

He said the cabin fell for 2 minutes, 45 seconds from 65,000 feet and shattered when it hit the ocean at 207 mph.

Waite, not Casey, getting most credit

By MICHAEL PUTZEL
AP White House Correspondent

WASHINGTON — Knowledgeable U.S. officials are downplaying the role that CIA Director William Casey played in the release of the Rev. Lawrence Martin Jenco, saying instead that Anglican Church envoy Terry Waite may have been the major actor.

"Terry Waite was instrumental, and I don't think he has really gotten the proper credit for it yet," said one official, who spoke on condition he not be identified. Waite, who has been serving as a special envoy of the archbishop of Canterbury, was in Amman, Jordan, when Jenco was released by his kidnappers.

Waite hurried to Damascus and accompanied Jenco to Frankfurt, West Germany, aboard a U.S. Air Force plane that flew the former hostage out of the Middle East. One American official described putting Waite on the plane as an effort to give the Anglican priest credit for the help he had provided.

The source said that Casey's mission three weeks ago was a failure to the extent that it was aimed at winning the release of all Americans being held hostage by a radical Shiite Moslem faction calling itself the Islamic Jihad.

"Casey did go, but it didn't do any good, because the Syrians didn't help us," said one senior official, who spoke about the case on condition he not be identified. The official said the Syrians "didn't do anything but pick him up" after Jenco had been set free by his captors near a Syrian military post in Lebanon's Bekaa Valley.

Jenco has said his captors told him and three other American hostages in Beirut three weeks ago that they were about to be released.

Asked about that account, which coincided with Casey's secret mission, one official said, "We had some hopes through the Syrians that we were getting somewhere, but it fell apart. I think the Syrians found those folks (the kidnappers) as elusive as we did when they tried to pin them down on anything."

JOBS

The new subsidiary will have 1,500 employees worldwide and operates in four functional units including North America exploration and production, international exploration and production, exploration and technical services.

The North America unit is responsible for all of Diamond Shamrock's exploration and production activities both onshore and offshore the United States and Canada. The unit has four operating divisions including an onshore U.S. division, based in Dallas; a mid-continent division, based in Amarillo, Texas; a Canadian division, based in Calgary, Alberta; and an offshore U.S. division, based in Houston. The offshore division is primarily responsible for drilling and producing activities in the Gulf of Mexico for Diamond Shamrock Offshore Partners Limited Partnership, a master limited partnership in which Diamond Shamrock is managing general partner.

The international unit will be responsible for the company's foreign exploration and producing operations as well as geothermal and international oil trading operations. Within this unit are an Indonesian exploration and production division, based in Jakarta; and exploration activities conducted from offices in The Hague, Netherlands; London, England; Tunis, Tunisia; Accra, Ghana; and Singapore. Also included in the unit are Diamond Shamrock's Thermal Power Co. and Natomas Trading Co. subsidiaries, based in San Francisco.

The exploration and technical services units, based in Dallas, will provide functional support to the operating divisions and will be responsible for worldwide frontier exploration, drilling, production, engineering and evaluation.

Diamond Shamrock Exploration Co. averaged 66,500 barrels of oil and 310 million cubic feet of gas production daily during 1985 and has total oil equivalent reserves of 282.6 million barrels.

DEBATE

White, the Democratic incumbent, countered that Clements "has yet to offer any substantive plans" on the state's $3.5 billion deficit.

"I look forward to hearing my opponent explain to the people of Texas why it was that he campaigned across Texas telling people that he had a secret plan to address the state's budget problem brought about by low oil prices, but then when called upon to reveal the details he admitted that there never was a plan," White said.

As in their 1982 first meeting, White likely will enter the debate trailing in the pre-election polls. Analysts partially credit White's strong showing during two October 1982 debates — particularly his call for utility regulation reform — for his upset victory over Clements that year.

Reagan may delay seeking shuttle funds

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan is weighing advice to delay seeking money for a new space shuttle while moving ahead with construction of unmanned rockets as the first step toward rebuilding the nation's battered space program.

Reagan met with top advisers Tuesday to hear final arguments on whether to build a replacement for the Challenger space shuttle and how to pay for it. Presidential spokesman Larry Speakes said Reagan would make a decision within several days.

Most of Reagan's advisers urged that he move ahead with building some unmanned rockets to "clear out the backlog" of satellite launches caused by the grounding of the shuttle program after the Jan. 28 Challenger disaster, according to one official, who spoke on condition he not be identified.

"Everybody there, with the exception of OMB (the Office of Management and Budget) came down in favor of going ahead and building the orbiter, as well as the ELVs (expendable launch vehicles)," the official said.

However, most of the officials suggested that Reagan put off seeking funds for a new shuttle vehicle until he submits his fiscal 1988 budget next February.

The administration estimates the budget deficit will jump to a record $220 billion this fiscal year, and money for a new orbiter this year could send that figure higher. The ship would cost up to $2.5 billion, including engines, space-walking suits and spare parts.

"I think he basically favors the idea of continued manned exploration and a fourth orbiter," Speakes said of Reagan before the meeting.

Vet renounces medal to protest Contra aid

WASHINGTON (AP) — A former Roman Catholic chaplain, awarded the nation's highest military honor in Vietnam, says he hopes renouncing his medal can save lives in a Nicaragua that is "Vietnam all over again."

Charles Liteky, who won the Medal of Honor for carrying more than 20 wounded soldiers to safety under enemy fire two decades ago, left his medal and an explanation of his protest in an envelope at the Vietnam Veterans Memorial on Tuesday.

He said he meant no disrespect for the medal but felt renouncing it was a protest he needed to make against U.S. support of rebels in Nicaragua.

His action, which supporters called unprecedented, was part of a new campaign by religious leaders and members of Congress who oppose the Reagan administration on aid to the rebels.

"I find it ironic that conscience calls me to renounce the congressional Medal of Honor for the same basic reason I received it — trying to save lives," he said.

"This time the lives are not young Americans, at least not yet. The lives are those of Central Americans of all ages: men, women, vulnerable innocents of the conflict."

AP Laserphoto

Vietnam veteran Charles Liteky renounces his Congressional Medal of Honor to protest U.S. aid to the Contras in Nicaragua.

Declaring himself "not a devotee of the Nicaraguan government," he said he agreed with critics that the Sandinista government has been guilty of abuses.

"But they pale in comparison with the atrocities committed by the Contras or the U.S.-backed military in El Salvador," he said at a news conference at the Capitol.

He said he was "an advocate of the U.S. government (and) responsible for what it does in the name of America."

"U.S. involvement in Central America is Vietnam all over again," he said. "Waiting in the wings for a cue from President Reagan are U.S. combat troops."

Liteky was not a combatant in Vietnam but reacted with heroism when exposed to "savage fighting" in which dozens of American soldiers were killed in December 1967 near Phuoc Lac in Bien Hoa Province, according to his Medal of Honor citation.

Risking his own life — and receiving neck and foot wounds — he made numerous trips under fire to carry wounded soldiers to safety, it says.

In those days, he said Tuesday, he was "a hawk in clerical clothing" as far as his military-political views were concerned. He later changed his views after much reading, he said.

After the news conference, he went to the Vietnam Veterans Memorial, which bears the names of more than 58,000 Americans killed in Southeast Asia, and left his medal near the center. It was quickly retrieved by U.S. Park Police, who said they would save it among the pictures and other mementos people leave there.

John Wheeler, chairman of the Vietnam Veterans Memorial Fund, which built the memorial, objected to Liteky's action, saying, "The memorial is not a place for political demonstrations. We understand there are lots of passions about Nicaragua and other issues but the place for demonstrations is elsewhere."

Liteky, an ordained Catholic priest, said he left the active priesthood to marry. For the past several months he has been working as coordinator of the Washington-based National Federation of Veterans for Peace after leaving a job with the Veterans Administration in San Francisco.

Officials not sure what chemicals were on train

BOONE, Iowa (AP) — Officials are trying to learn what chemicals spilled Tuesday after 16 cars of a freight train blew off a bridge during a fierce storm and plunged 185 feet into a river valley.

"It's very evident there are chemicals leaking out. You can see the green tinge in the water," Gov. Terry Branstad said after flying over the site.

Six people — a state trooper, three fishermen and two railroad workers — were treated at a hospital for nausea and other symptoms that state officials said may have resulted from exposure to materials leaking from truck trailers riding piggyback on the railroad cars.

No one on the train was injured in the derailment late Monday. Two crew members were in a caboose that was left standing on the bridge.

Officials evacuated a one-mile area around the crash scene, including a Bible camp attended by 200 high school and college students. Iowa Department of Natural Resources spokesmen recommended that people stay out of the Des Moines River below the accident site as well as a large recreational reservoir downstream.

Branstad declared Boone County and nearby Polk County disaster areas, the first step in trying to get federal assistance in recovering from damage caused by the storms which cut a wide swath across the state.

The 18 cars of a 31-car Chicago and North Western Transportation Co. train apparently were blown off the tracks while crossing the 2,685-foot-long Kate Shelley Bridge 3½ miles northwest of Boone.

Sixteen cars carrying 29 truck trailers fell into the Des Moines River valley.

"There are crews from the University of Iowa hygenics lab who are on the scene testing," said Branstad spokesman Dick Vohs. "One of the difficulties we have right now is determining what was on the train."

About 100 drums and 200 bags of a highly toxic agricultural insecticide, Endosulfan, were among the cargo that fell, said James Foote, a C&NW spokesman. Some containers of the powdered insecticide broke open, but there was no evidence any of it entered the river, he said.

Foote said the railroad had not yet determined if any other chemicals had spilled and which, if any, had entered the river.

"The only thing in the water is diesel fuel — that's the only results I have," he said. He said the diesel fuel likely spilled from refrigerated truck trailers which plunged into the river.

The rest of the train screeched to a halt when emergency air brake hoses ripped apart as the cars tumbled into the river, locking the wheels.

Woman posing as man didn't fool co-workers

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — A woman who posed as a man and eluded authorities for more than a year after allegedly escaping from prison did not convince her co-workers she was male, fellow employees say.

But they say she did her job well.

"She was a nice guy," co-worker Bill Brewster said with a laugh. "People knew he was a girl. I tried to talk to her about it. Quiz her on her background."

Susan G. Florick, 29, was charged Tuesday in Circuit Court with prison escape. She was arrested Monday on charges of leaving the Taycheedah Correctional Institution, a state woman's prison near Fond du Lac, on a three-day pass in February 1985 while serving a sentence for forgery. She is being held in the Fond du Lac County Jail.

Ms. Florick was accused of assuming the name William C. Langer and getting a job as a mailroom worker at Madison Newspapers Inc., publisher of the Wisconsin State Journal and The Capital Times.

Brewster said Ms. Florick, who worked the late shift, talked about working in Chicago and seemed to know quite a bit about that area.

"You could ask her almost anything, like about the Cubs (baseball team) and she knew. She said she was a mailroom worker once in Chicago," Brewster said. "She picked this job up immediately. She knew the job."

Another co-worker, who refused to be identified, said Ms. Florick "was a good worker. She did her job with no problem, and she worked third shift and that's not an easy time.

"There were a few (guys) who did not want to step in the men's room when she was in there, but there aren't any problems here if you do your job, and she did," the co-worker said.

Madison police spokeswoman Mary Ann Thurber said police received a tip Monday about where Ms. Florick was living.

Authorities went to the apartment and spotted a person they initially thought was a man standing in the parking lot.

When Ms. Florick turned toward them, however, police recognized her by a photograph and tattoos on her arm.

Police said the "boyish-looking" 5-foot-2, 126-pound woman admitted who she was without incident.

Police confiscated a credit card, check cashing card, emergency medical information card, Wisconsin Physician Service card, Madison Newspapers Inc. photo ID and three MNI check stubs bearing the name Langer.

NATION IN BRIEF

Kiwanis Club to admit women, may lose charter

OLYMPIA, Wash. (AP) — The Olympia Kiwanis Club has voted to admit women and the international organization said Tuesday it may yank the chapter's charter.

The 131-member club voted Monday to buck the organization's men-only rule.

The four women would be the first admitted to Kiwanis clubs in Washington, said David Williams, spokesman for the 305,000-member organization. He said 18 local chapters in nine states had accepted women members and other clubs had voted in principle to do so.

Olympia's admission of the women will trigger a letter from headquarters warning that the charter will be revoked or legal action taken at a later date, Willliams said.

The organization lost a federal lawsuit filed after a New Jersey club admitted women and had its charter revoked. Kiwanis International is awaiting a ruling on its appeal of that decision before deciding on how to proceed against the other clubs, Williams said.

Aftershocks reported

SAN DIEGO (LAT) — Two strong aftershocks were recorded early Tuesday from the July 13 earthquake off the coast of San Diego that rattled Southern California.

There were no reports of damage, but numerous Southern California residents, particularly along the coastal areas of San Diego and Orange counties, felt the quakes and called local authorities.

Seismic officials at the California Institue of Technology in Pasadena said the first quake occurred at 1:18 a.m. PDT and measured 4.4 on the Richter scale. A second temblor at 4:23 a.m. measured 3.9.

Both quakes took place along the same fault line 28 miles southwest of Oceanside, Calif., the location of the July 13 5.3 magnitude shaker. That temblor was the largest ever recorded in San Diego County or offshore and caused an estimated half-million dollars in damage.

Prosecutors told to cut costs

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — The U.S. Justice Department has asked its prosecutors to cut costs by trying to avoid new investigations until Sept. 30, a newspaper reported.

In an internal memorandum, the department also ordered U.S. attorneys to take other cost-cutting measures until Sept. 30, the end of the fiscal year, The Indianapoli Star reported in Wednesday's editions.

The July 25 memorandum told the prosecutors to suspend the use of a legal research computer system, seek continuances in as many existing cases as possible, limit travel to all but imminent litigation, and reduce the number of grand jury and trial transcripts ordered.

As a result of the Gramm-Rudman-Hollings balanced-budget act, U.S. attorneys' budgets nationwide were to be cut by $13 million during the last half of the current fiscal year. All but $1.3 million of the reductions have been achieved, said John D. Tinder, U.S. attorney for Indiana's Southern District.

Lawmaker to seek repeal

WASHINGTON (AP) — Democrats say a proposed constitutional amendment that would allow President Reagan to seek a third term is "nothing but a gimmick" to spur Republican fund-raising.

The amendment, introduced by Rep. Guy Vander Jagt, R-Mich., would repeal the 22nd Amendment to the Constitution, which was passed in 1951 and limits the presidency to two elected terms. Vander Jagt, chairman of the National Republican Congressional Committee, said he wants to "allow Americans to decide how long their president should serve."

Murder defendant weeps at tape of dead relatives

FORT MYERS, Fla. (AP) — A murder defendant burst into tears as recorded voices of relatives he is accused of killing filled a hushed courtroom.

Steven Benson, 35, wept for several minutes after hearing his mother and adopted brother in a heated exchange over a mess made by the dog.

Benson is accused of planting two pipe bombs that killed his mother, 63-year-old Lancaster Leaf Co. tobacco heiress Margaret Benson, and his adopted brother Scott Benson, 21, on July 9, 1985.

The tape-recording, and testimony by Mrs. Benson's secretary Joyce Quinn were an attempt by defense attorneys to portray Scott as the target of the bombing by an unknown person because of his alleged drug use.

Ms. Quinn testified that Scott threatened five times to kill his mother on the day in June 1983 when the tape-recording was made.

"Suddenly, Scott comes out of the room and tells Margaret he can have the dog kill her if he wants to," Ms. Quinn testified. "At one point he ran to her, grabbed her by the arms and says if she ever does it again he's going to have the dog kill her."

Ms. Quinn also testified that she heard Scott in his room earlier inhaling deeply, and police found two apparently empty nitrous oxide canisters in his room.

The officers were at the Benson's posh Naples home to take Scott into custody under the Baker Act as a threat to himself or others.

Steven Benson, who is also charged with attempted murder because his sister, Carol Benson Kendall, 42, was badly burned in the blasts, could be sentenced to death in the electric chair or life in prison if convicted.

Meanwhile, authorities said late Tuesday that Guido Luis Dal Molin Jr., 22, an electronics wizard charged with a January shooting death, was back in custody after escaping from the Collier County jail early Saturday by outsmarting guards with their own electronic equipment.

Dal Molin, who also had been subpoenaed as a defense witness in Benson's murder trial, apparently had been living in the woods since he jammed his cell lock, ran past guards to a control room and pushed buttons to strand the guards and open doors for himself, said Collier County Sheriff's Lt. Eric Daniels.

British foreign secretary doggedly withstands attacks

By MAUREEN JOHNSON

WORLD

LONDON (AP) — Bouncing from tongue-lashing to snub on his mission to southern Africa, Foreign Secretary Sir Geoffrey Howe displayed his most notable trait — an ability to absorb political punishment without losing his cool.

The astute Welsh lawyer has a reputation for affability, honesty, decency, steadiness — and dullness.

Howe's opposite number in Parliament, Labor foreign affairs spokesman Denis Healey, once said that being verbally attacked by Howe was "like being savaged by a dead sheep."

Such jibes leave Howe as outwardly unruffled as did a public dressing-down in Lusaka last week from Zambian President Kenneth Kaunda, who accused Britain's Conservative government and President Reagan's administration of "kissing apartheid."

Howe was sent to southern Africa on behalf of the 12-nation European Common Market on what he said beforehand would be a difficult mission: to find a peaceful way of bringing about an end to South Africa's apartheid system of racial separation.

Under apartheid, South Africa's 5 million whites dominate the nation's 24 million voteless blacks.

The weeklong mission, which ended Tuesday, was a compromise worked out among those Common Market nations demanding tough economic sanctions and Britain, France and West Germany, which wanted more time to get negotiations started.

Most key black leaders refused to see Howe, and South African President P.W. Botha accused the foreign secretary of meddling in his country's affairs.

"Drama and high profile without achievement in actuality have no point," Howe, 59, said recently. "A public profile has to be achieved by performance."

It is through a performance marked by political astuteness and doggedness rather than glitter that Howe has moved in the past several years from being an outsider to becoming one of the politicians mentioned as possible successors to Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher.

Howe made a bid for the leadership of the Conservative Party when Mrs. Thatcher was elected leader in 1975, and polled 19 votes compared with her 146.

He was chancellor of the exchequer, or finance minister, during Mrs. Thatcher's first term from May 1979 to June 1983. She named him foreign secretary when she won a second five-year term.

His achievements as foreign minister have included negotiating agreement for the 1997 handover of Hong Kong to China. British political commentators quipped that even the Chinese found him inscrutable.

As chancellor of the exchequer, Howe was a staunch Thatcherite monetarist, refusing urgings from within the Conservative Party to spend as inflation and unemployment soared during Mrs. Thatcher's first two years in office.

In a low-key way, he shares her obsession with turning around the British economy. But while she talks ringingly of "making Britain great again," Howe remarks:

"I grieve for the decline in national self-respect and national confidence, and therefore the national capacity to provide better living standards."

He is soft spoken, often to the point of being inaudible in normal conversation, an indefatigable worker who usually sleeps only about four hours a night, an opera lover and a former chain smoker.

Born and raised in a socialist Welsh mining town, Port Talbot, near where the late actor Richard Burton was born in the same year, Howe has spent much of his life in politics.

The son of a prosperous attorney, Howe was educated at Winchester, one of Britain's top private schools, and Cambridge, where he earned a law degree and was head of the University Conservative Association.

He developed a highly successful London legal practice, becoming a senior barrister in 1965.

In 1955 and again in 1959, he ran for Parliament for Welsh districts and was defeated, before winning election from a north England district, Bebington, in 1964.

He lost again in a 1966 election, but was back in Parliament in 1970 and got his first senior government job, solicitor general, that same year, along with knighthood.

Surprising release

Contradictions abound in the world of terrorism. That fact most recently was illustrated Saturday when the Rev. Lawrence Jenco was released by Shiite Moslems who had held him for 19 months. The reason: Jenco's health apparently was deteriorating.

It isn't the first time those radical groups responsible for much of the violence and killing of innocent people in the Middle East have acted in a surprising fashion. But just as strange is the manner in which they ruthlessly kill or maim women, children or other innocents with apparently no conscience whatsoever.

One has to wonder just what it is that motivates the actions of individuals who can, in one instance, take hostage perfectly innocent people and murder them; then, in another situation, take hostages, hold them captive for months or years only to release them, in an apparent act of human compassion, because their health is deteriorating.

Is it that once dead the hostage is of no value in negotiating concessions from the United States? Or is it that the captors are merely playing their "human cards" to best advantage?

Yet those questions only seem to raise others. If months pass — nearly 19 did in the Rev. Jenco's case — and the terrorists see that their pressure tactics obviously are not going to break the resolve of the U.S. government not to negotiate with terrorists, why do they not exact their vengeance on the hostages? Or, if they can find it in themselves to release one, why not more?

In the past they've killed hostages outright, held them and killed them later, held them and then released them at various times, held them and then released them at the same time, and a small number of hostages have escaped their captivity.

The contradictions are wild. One thing is for certain. Now that the terrorists have released the Rev. Jenco, there's definitely hope for the hostages still held in Lebanon: Terry Anderson, Thomas Sutherland and David Jacobsen. The United States should be actively applying pressure on the captors for their release.

Applause for stance

I applaud President Reagan's stand opposing sanctions against South Africa, in spite of the outcries of some emotionally disturbed members of Congress. This is an internal matter for South Africa to solve, but as usual the Ugly American is sticking his nose into matters that don't concern him.

If we are so interested in "human rights," why don't we impose sanctions against those countries, such as South Korea, who are keeping their auto workers (for example) on below subsistence wages and can flood the American economy with cheap autos.

Let's boycott them until such time as their workers are paid a just return on their labor, restoring their "human rights" and doing ourselves a favor as well.

Rule doesn't make sense

Until recently the Senior Citizen Center's game room was divided into a large nonsmoking section and a small smoking section. This is no longer true. No one participating in activities in the game room is allowed to smoke.

This is a very large room with proper ventilation which at one time housed fire trucks. This rule is presumably imposed for health reasons. However, the senior citizens are still allowed to drink coffee, eat animal fat and sugar. We are all aware that these substances may cause high blood pressure and/or heart disease. Should we allow the senior citizens to eat what they want in spite of the fact that it might be harmful to them?

Perhaps we should insist that they be put on a strict diet. God bless America — home of the free.

New rules restrictive

I would like to pay tribute to Mrs. Marge Holland, who very successfully managed the Senior Citizen Center for a number of years. Marge is a very kind and caring person who made ALL of the senior citizens feel welcome. On behalf of the senior citizens and their families, I would like to thank her.

It's really sad that since her departure, new rules and regulations have made many, many members unwelcome.

Letters Policy

■ The Reporter-Telegram welcomes letters on various topics. We prefer typed or printed letters. Typewritten letters should be double-spaced and should not exceed two pages. Shorter letters are preferred. Handwritten letters must be legible. They should be signed and contain writer's address and telephone numbers, home and work, for possible verification. However, only the writer's name will be published.

Libelous letters or letters deemed in bad taste will not be published. We do not publish anonymous letters, letters addressed to particular groups or the general public ("open" letters) or copies of letters sent to others. We reserve the right to condense and correct spelling, grammar and punctuation. Letter writers ordinarily are limited to one publication per month. No particular day of publication can be promised, but to appear in a Sunday or Monday newspaper, letters must be received by 8 a.m. Friday. Otherwise, letters must be received two full days prior to publication. Letters may appear any day of publication.

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this date:

In 1619, the first representative assembly in America convened in Jamestown, Va.

In 1729, Baltimore was founded.

In 1864, during the Civil War, Union forces tried to take Petersburg, Va., by first exploding a mine under Confederate defense lines that left a huge crater. The attack failed.

In 1916, German saboteurs blew up a munitions plant on Black Tom Island near Jersey City, N.J.

In 1942, President Franklin D. Roosevelt signed a bill creating a women's auxiliary agency in the Navy. The legislation was called Women Accepted for Volunteer Emergency Service, or WAVES.

In 1965, President Lyndon B. Johnson signed Medicare into law.

In 1975, former Teamsters President Jimmy Hoffa disappeared as he was trying to recapture control of the union he once headed. His exact fate remains a mystery.

Ten years ago: Bruce Jenner won the gold medal in the decathlon at the Montreal Summer Olympics, beating out Guido Kratschmer of West Germany and Nikolai Avilov of the Soviet Union.

Five years ago: In Poland, thousands of women and children marched through Lodz, the nation's second-largest city, protesting food shortages.

One year ago: Herbert Beukes, South Africa's ambassador-designate to the United States, was recalled to Pretoria for consultations.

Today's birthdays: Actor Edd Byrnes is 53. Movie director Peter Bogdanovich is 47. Eleanor Smeal, president of the National Organization for Women, is 47. Rep. Patricia Schroeder, D.-Col., is 46. Singer Paul Anka is 45. Actor Arnold Schwarzenegger is 39.

Mexico's 'president to be' vows reform

WASHINGTON — The man who could become the next president of Mexico is the kind of quiet revolutionary who bears close scrutiny north of the border. Carlos Salinas de Gortari seems to aim at nothing less than weaning his country away from a pervasive, socialist economy to a dynamic partnership between government and free enterprise.

Jack Anderson

If he succeeds — in winning the presidency two years from now and transforming the Mexican economy — it could have enormous consequences for the United States. An expanding economy could provide jobs for the nearly 1 million Mexicans who enter the job market each year, relieving the unemployment pressures that now drive thousands of desperate peasants to enter the United States illegally seeking jobs.

Politically, Salinas is well-positioned. As President Miguel de la Madrid's programming and budget secretary, he "has become one of the president's most trusted advisers on domestic economic issues," according to a secret CIA profile. It adds that "he has good family connections, became active in the PRI (the ruling party) early on and has excellent academic credentials."

Described by the CIA analysts as "an ambitious technocrat and an expert economist," the slightly built, 38-year-old Salinas invites comparison to one of the early stalwarts of the "Reagan revolution." But when we asked him flat out whether he considered himself the David Stockman of Mexico, he replied with a firm "No."

He went on to explain: "I would never write a book like that. I have a very deep respect for politics." The reference was to Stockman's memoir, "The Triumph of Politics," which is popular among English-reading members of Mexico's elite, including the president.

There's an obvious reason, of course, why Salinas would never undercut his president, Stockman style: He needs de la Madrid's backing if he wants to become president. So he takes great pains to explain that his policy of dismantling the state economy monopoly originated with de la Madrid. This makes Salinas a loyalist instead of an apostate.

"We have been cutting many, many dogmas in the last three years," Salinas told us. The de la Madrid administration inherited 1,150 state enterprises, he noted. "And we have been selling, liquidating. ... Never in this country had a public sector enterprise been sold in the past."

As a result of this wholesale divestiture, the government now has only 690 state enterprises left. And Salinas said he wants to unload even more, including Mexicana Airlines.

The daunting enormity of Mexico's financial problems was tacitly acknowledged by Salinas as he illustrated the impact of the fall in oil prices from $25 a barrel to about $12. This, he said, cost Mexico $7 billion in foreign exchange revenues, which today are equal to only half the interest payments Mexico makes on its nearly $100 billion foreign debt.

Salinas' evident pride in one achievement was almost poignant. He pointed out that Mexico "actually reduced its foreign debt by $300 million" last year. At that rate, the debt could be paid off in roughly 350 years.

Though he favors moderating Mexico's protectionist trade policies, Salinas has no overwhelming desire to encourage foreign investment. The CIA profile noted that Salinas was considered favorable to free enterprise, but added that "more recent reporting from reliable sources indicates that he belongs to the left wing of the PRI, and he may favor greater state domination of corporations that are now owned mostly by U.S. and multinational firms."

BUREAUCRATIC BOOKIE: From 1981 until earlier this year, a computer programmer at the Environmental Protection Agency ran a sophisticated sports gambling ring through an EPA main terminal computer. Vast amounts of information on baseball, golf, horse racing and other sports were stored in government disks. One program, for example, kept statistics on every college basketball player in the Atlantic Coast Conference. Eight employees were assigned particular ACC teams. The computer bookie told the EPA inspector general the basketball betting pool was conducted "for the morale" of employees, the baseball program was to develop his programming skills and the golf program was testing a randomization theory. He was charged with embezzlement and pleaded guilty.

No "Mission Impossible" reruns, though.

MINI-EDITORIAL: Congressional auditors recently uncovered evidence of apparent complacency in the government's multibillion-dollar crackdown on drug traffickers. Combing through Justice Department files, the investigators found that in 1985, judges imposed fines totaling $8 million on drug dealers — when they could have fined them a total of $57 million. Even worse, only $509,000 of the fines levied were actually collected. If the courts are going to shrug off their responsibilities, why should we expect the public to take the drug war seriously?

No glimmer of peace showing in Mideast

PARIS — It is hard to see how the Israeli-Moroccan summit can have advanced anything constructive in the Middle East. The timing was obviously in connection with internal Israeli politics.

Flora Lewis

There is a sense of intense urgency because in 10 weeks, Israeli Prime Minister Shimon Peres has committed to turn his office over to Likud's Yitzhak Shamir, who is determined not to withdraw from any occupied territories and seems unwilling to make any concessions for peace.

King Hussein of Jordan is known to feel that the last chance for agreement is rapidly slipping away. King Hassan of Morocco would have liked to be the Arab leader who broke the impass and opened the way for negotiations. Peres would have liked a reason to say a crucial new opportunity has arisen, justifying elections instead of the scheduled transfer of power.

Jews of Moroccan origin, who habitually tend to vote Likud, now comprise 25-30 percent of the Israeli electorate. Many retain a warm affection for Hassan, and if the meeting had produced a proposal with his endorsement, Peres might have been able to win a new mandate of his own.

But the result was nil. Hassan posed the two central issues, return of territory and talks with the PLO. Peres did not budge on either one, and their talks nearly broke up after the first session. The U.S. reportedly intervened, persuading the king to agree to a joint communique so as to avoid the appearance of total failure.

Word available here was that Peres told the king he didn't see what point there would be in agreeing to deal with the PLO since it is so divided, he didn't even know which PLO the Arabs have in mind. The king said the Israelis could leave it up to the PLO to sort themselves out, putting responsibility for an answer on them.

That was good advice. It would have been agile diplomacy, but Peres couldn't bring himself to accept it. If he had, Shamir would doubtless have accused him of overstepping his cabinet mandate, though it is questionable whether he would have gone so far as to break the coalition and take the owners for forcing election when he is so near to the prize of the premiership.

So the much debated peace process remains paralyzed. The Palestinians and the Arabs are hopelessly splintered and can agree only on negatives. The Israelis are torn. Meanwhile, history moves on and a basis for accord that might have been acceptable recedes out of reach with the passage of events.

Israeli settlements in the West Bank expand and take root. The arms race continues. Fanatic fundamentalism spreads on both sides, narrowing the possibilities for maneuver. There is no sense of war coming in the near future, but neither is there any sense of another road ahead.

There have been far-reaching changes in the Middle East in the two generations since the establishment of the Jewish state, but sadly the two sides almost never move in step. It is true that a publicized summit between Israel and another Arab state, after Egypt, is a step in burying the Arab myth of Israel's nonexistence, but that is no longer the issue. Now it is whether terms exist for peace, or whether another war will become inevitable.

Jordan's king is in Syria again, trying to patch up Syrian-Iraqi relations and strengthen his own flank. It now seems that Syria's recent tentative moves toward some reconciliation with Iraq was a ploy to frighten Iran into renewing cut-rate oil deliveries, not a real change of course. But Hussein is desperately seeking diplomate reinforcement after his break with the PLO's Yasir Arafat.

There is a flat contradiction between the Israeli scenario for talks with Jordan that would include Palestinians not beholden to the PLO, and Hussein's approach to Damascus. If anything, it implies that Jordan will be influenced by Syria's rejectionist stand.

Vice President Bush has started a tour that will take him to Israel, Jordan, Egypt and Morocco, advertised to "assess the prospects for peace." It is an occasion for amiability, but nothing more can be expected beyond the usual requests for more U.S. aid. Despite the scurrying around, the outlook is glum.

ART BUCHWALD

'Super-American' doesn't care about rights!

What fascinates me about films depicting so much violence is not the shooting, knifing and garroting of the good guys as well as the bad guys, but the damage done to innocent people in the picture who just happen to be on the scene.

Art Buchwald

When I watch Sly Stallone, Clint Eastwood, Arnold Schwarzenegger and Charles Bronson blowing up buildings, smashing cars and spraying lead with submachine guns, the first thing that comes to mind is how much hurt they inflict on everyone else in the film.

The other night I said out loud in the theater, "Is this type of picture worth it?"

"Of course, it's worth it," the man in the next seat said. "It teaches the audience that violence must be met with violence."

"But look up on the screen. The Super-American has wrecked six cars and an orphanage to get the bad guy. He's driving like a mad man. Who is going to pay for the wrecked automobiles and the buildings that the Super-American is senselessly destroying?"

"The Super-American's liability insurance company," the man said.

"But the Super-American didn't even stop to see if the bystanders were hurt."

"What would you want him to do, hold up the movie? You have to have continuous action in this kind of film. And when you do that, a lot of innocents are going to get hurt."

"How about the Super-American's car going right through a fruit market and mowing down a Chinese laundry. Doesn't anyone in the theater care about the fruit dealer and the laundry man?"

The man said, "That's nothing compared to the Super-American wiping out some of the country's worst villains. The only reason the Super-American is pursuing evil is because the police have failed in their job."

"Good enough, but why did he blow up the senior citizens' apartment building with dynamite? The bad guy still got away and now 20 families have no place to live."

"It's just a movie," the man said.

"Then why are all the kids in the theater cheering?"

The man said, "Because they identify with the Super-American — a lone warrior fighting the battle to rid the world of rot."

"If you believe in law and order, how do you feel about the Super-American hitting the bad guy over the head with a fire extinguisher?"

"The Super-American won't do it for long. As soon as he can grab the Uzi submachine gun, he'll fill the bad guy's stomach full of lead."

"Why doesn't the Super-American just turn him over for trial?"

"How can he, after what they did to his brother?"

"I didn't know they did anything to the Super-American's brother."

"It was in the coming attractions. They cut it out in the final version so that they could spend more time showing the Super-American setting the villain on fire."

I said, "I can't believe what I'm seeing. The Super-American just pushed a crowded bus off the pier so that he could improve his line of fire to the hospital ship."

"You really pick up on every little thing, don't you?" the man said.

"What must our children think? They probably believe that what they see on the screen is the real thing."

"When you have every top-grossing male star in Hollywood fighting to do one of these pictures, then you realize that vigilantism is here to say," he said.

"Even if the Super-American doesn't care a fig about constitutional rights?"

"If the audience doesn't care, why should he?"

Nine killed in attack on homeland's police station

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Unidentified attackers killed nine people at a black homeland's main police station, and the home affairs minister of another homeland was killed when explosives demolished his car, authorities said today.

Police in the Transkei homeland said five police officers were among those killed in the attack late Tuesday on the central police station in Umtata, the homeland's capital. No other details were released.

Umtata residents said they heard an explosion followed by machine gun fire near the station. A fire department employee said the fire brigade was called to the station, but refused to elaborate.

The government Bureau for Information said only that the police station was attacked.

The bureau said Peit Ntuli, home affairs minister of troubled KwaNdebele homeland northeast of Pretoria, was killed Tuesday night when the car he was driving exploded.

The bureau said authorities did not know who was responsible or what kind of explosives were used. It said Ntuli was the only person in the car.

Transkei is one of four homelands designated by South Africa as independent. No other countries recognize them.

KwaNdebele is scheduled to obtain independence in December, but the plan is bitterly opposed by anti-apartheid activists and other residents who contend the homeland system is used by South Africa's government to strengthen its power.

The dispute over independence has triggered almost daily violence in KwaNdebele for several months.

In other developments today:

— South Africa's currency dropped sharply following President P.W. Botha's rejection of a peace initiative by British Foreign Secretary Sir Geoffrey Howe. The rand opened at about 38 cents this morning, down one cent from Tuesday.

Currency analysts said Botha's response was seen as a signal that broad economic sanctions would be imposed against South Africa.

Foes of apartheid have called for sanctions to force an end to the system of forced segregation of South Africa's 5 million whites, who control the government and economy, and the 24 million voteless blacks.

— Another of South Africa's regional supreme courts invalidated curfews and bans on public meetings imposed by police officials, saying they exceeded their authority under the 6-week-old state of emergency.

— The Bureau for Information said a black man was killed Tuesday in Soweto, Johannesburg's main black township, by police trying to prevent a mob from burning down a home.

Altogether, 195 people have been reported killed in violence linked to opposition to apartheid since the state of emergency was declared June 12.

— South Africa's largest daily newspaper, The Star, published a list of 3,402 people it said were detained or missing — the first such list of names published since the state of emergency was imposed.

The list was compiled by the Detainees Parents Support Committee, an anti-apartheid group that monitors detentions.

Emergency regulations prohibit unauthorized identification of detainees, but The Star's publisher, Rex Gibson, maintained that the names were officially disclosed when authorities notified relatives. "We believe we are acting completely within the law," he said.

The emergency rules also bar journalists from reporting on security force actions without permission or from publishing statements the government deems subversive.

Howe ended his one-week peace mission to southern Africa on Tuesday by reporting he had failed to persuade Botha to release Nelson Mandela or to lift the ban on the African National Congress that Mandela helped found.

Howe said the two steps were necessary preconditions for negotiations to end South Africa's racial conflict.

Botha offered to meet at a conference with southern African and European leaders to iron out regional problems, but flatly refused to free Mandela or legalize the ANC unless both renounced violence and the black guerrilla organization was purged of communist leaders.

The state-run South African Broadcasting Corp., in a commentary today, disputed Howe's contention that the government could clear the way for a democratic solution to South Africa's problems by accepting his proposals.

Chernobyl's chief engineer expelled from Communist Party, paper says

MOSCOW (AP) — The former chief engineer of the Chernobyl nuclear plant has been expelled from the Communist Party and a nuclear safety official disciplined for carelessness, a Ukrainian newspaper said.

The July 27 edition of Pravda Ukrainy reported that the Central Committee of the Ukrainian republic's Communist Party had expelled the former chief engineer at Chernobyl, identified only as Fomin, for mistakes that included conducting the experiment said to have caused the April 26 reactor accident there.

The newspaper said Fomin was expelled for "grave mistakes and miscalculations at work, committing negligence in guaranteeing safe operation of the electric station, for conducting an experiment on the No. 4 reactor which led to an accident with grave consequences without the required preparation and agreement with responsible organs."

A Soviet Foreign Ministry spokesman said last week that the experiment being conducted on the reactor when it blew up was designed to see how long electricity-generating turbines could keep going in the event of a reactor shutdown.

The spokesman did not explain exactly how the experiment led to a power surge in the reactor and a chemical explosion which ripped the reactor open, releasing a cloud of radiation that eventually spread around the world.

The Soviet Politburo said July 19 that 28 people have died as a result of the disaster and estimated direct costs at the equivalent of $2.8 billion. More than 100,000 people have been evacuated from homes in an 18-mile radius of the Chernobyl plant.

Pravda Ukrainy also reported that The acting head of the local branch of the National Atomic Safety Agency, identified only as Zavalnyuk, had received a strict reprimand from the Communist Party for failing in his duty.

Zavalnyuk failed to organize sufficient control of security at nuclear power plants and had an "unprincipled, liberal" attitude to violations of instructions by nuclear power plant workers, the newspaper said.

The Politburo said July 19 that those deemed responsible for the Chernobyl accident will be prosecuted, but Pravda Ukrainy made no mention of whether Fomin or Zavalnyuk will stand trial.

It also did not say if Zavalnyuk had been fired.

An article in the national Communist Party daily Pravda on June 15 indicated Fomin had already been fired as the Chernobyl plant engineer, criticizing him and the former plant director for irresponsibility, lack of control and failing to provide correct leadership.

Pravda Ukrainy also reported that two Communist Party officials, the head of the party at the Chernobyl plant and the party chief in the plant workers' town of Pripyat, had been given lesser party reprimands.

The head of the party at the plant, identified as Parashchin, has been ousted from that post, it added.

WEATHER SUMMARY

From Staff and Wire Reports

The National Weather Service forecast for the last day of July calls for a high of near 100 degrees. Under sunny skies, winds will be out of the south at five to 15 mph.

The NWS, located at Midland Regional Airport, is predicting a low in the upper 60s for tonight with clear skies and southerly winds at five to 10 mph.

Tuesday's 100-degree high was five degrees below the record high set in 1960. The 59-degree record low set for this date was six degrees below this morning's low.

STATE

The National Weather Service today warned resident of North Central Texas and Northeast Texas that a combination of hot afternoon temperatures and relatively high humidities pose a health threat over the area through Thursday.

The heat index, a measure of the effect of temperature and humidity on the human body, will again range between 105 and 112 over much of North Central Texas and Northeast Texas through Thursday, forecasters say.

The risk of heat exhaustion, cramps and heatstroke increase as the heat index moves above 105 degrees, forecasters warned.

The heat index values are computed for shady conditions and forecasters say that exposure to full sunshine can increase heat index values by up to 15 degrees.

There is possibly some good news on the horizon. Forecasters say the heat may let up a little around the weekend. The upper air high pressure system that has been partly responsible for the 100-degree-plus temperatures across the area is expected to weaken and some slightly dcooler air in the Central Plains will be moving south towards Texas.

Another hot day was in store for all of Texas today.

Forecasts called for mostly sunny and hot statewide with a slight chance of isolated showers or thunderstorms along the Texas coast and over far West Texas.

NATION

A blanket of hot air fueled a record-breaking heat wave from the Southeast to the southern Plains, while rain was scattered today from the East to the nation's midsection.

Severe thunderstorms rumbled ahead of a cold front moving across the northern Plains while showers and thunderstorms were scattered along the northern and mid-Atlantic Coast and across New York, Pennsylvania and the Mississippi Valley.

Usher confused

NEW YORK — USFL Commissioner Harry Usher was confused by a verdict which found the NFL liable, yet awarded his league only $3 of the $1.69 billion it sought. "It's difficult to reconcile its finding that the NFL acted in a monopolistic, predatory fashion but that we weren't damaged except to the extent of $1," Usher said. (In antitrust cases damages are trebled.) The USFL will appeal the decision.

"We're certainly not through right here in the trial court because there's a lot of conflicting information that occurred afterward with the basis for the jury decision."...

Tribble loose

UPPER MARLBORO, Md. — Brian Lee Tribble, accused of supplying the cocaine that killed University of Maryland's Len Bias, posted bond Tuesday after spending about 24 hours in county jail following his indictment on drug charges. Tribble's family negotiated an arrangement with six bail bondsmen to put up the $75,000 bond set earlier in the day by state Circuit Judge Judge Robert J. Woods...

USFL Suit

NEW YORK — The NFL was found liable for an antitrust violation but ordered to pay only $1 in damages to the rival USFL. The USFL had sought $1.69 billion in its struggle to stay in business.

Festival

HOUSTON — Val Rosas scored the biggest victory of his career by upsetting Darrell Pace, of Hamilton, Ohio, and Rich McKinney, Gilbert, Ariz, America's best archers...Page 3B.

Commonwealth

EDINBURGH, Scotland - England's Sarah Hardcastle came within a fraction of a second of breaking Tracey Wickham's world 800-meter freestyle record on the sixth day of the Commonwealth Games. Hardcastle won her second gold medal of the Games as she set a European record of 8 minutes, 24.77 seconds, the second-best time ever recorded and just 15-hundredths of a second outside the Australian's 8-year-old mark.

Tennis

WASHINGTON — Eighth-seeded Diego Perez, leading when he was overcome by the 100-degree heat, pulled out of the D.C. Classic while No. 5 seed Jimmy Arias weathered early troubles to move into the second round of the Washington tournament.

SAN DIEGO — Debbie Spence beat sixth-seeded Alycia Moulton, 6-4, 7-5, in the opening round play in the Virginia Slims.

Bowling

WINDSOR, Ontario — Five-time champion Don Genalo finished 52 pins ahead of Tom Milton after the sixth round of the Molson Golden Challenge.

Coe withdraws

EDINBURGH, Scotland - Two-time Olympic champion Sebastian Coe of England withdrew from the Commonwealth Games' 1,500-meter race today while his participation in the 800 remained doubtful.

Coe, suffering from a throat infection, will make a final decision on whether to run in Thursday's 800 final, shortly before the race. He had to decide about the 1,500 today, because it was the final day for declarations for Friday's heats.

Dickson, Owens win opening duels

By ERIC SCHURER
Sports Writer

Though collegiate golfers Penny Sutcliffe and Darla Smith were hogging the pre-tournament headlines, it was a veteran and another new face that grabbed the spotlight in the Women's City Tournament Tuesday.

Jo Dickson, 40, and Stacy Owens, 19, each won their first round duels in the match-play format to advance into the semifinal round today at Hogan Park Golf Course.

Owens and Smith, a pair of Midland High products, battled it out for 21 holes before Owens came away with the first round victory. The sophomore-to-be at Southwestern earned the right to face Sutcliffe, the low-round qualifier with a 76 Monday. Sutcliffe advanced into the second round with a bye.

And Dickson, the veteran of many a city tournament, powered her way into contention for a finals berth with a 2-1 victory over DeDe Plank. Dickson is trying to be "an oldie going against a youngie" in Thursday's final, but first she must get past Helen Brant.

Brant advanced when Florence Larsh withdrew because of the untimely death of her brother late Monday.

DICKSON IS aiming for her first city title after several runner-up finishes to 13-time champion Susan Britton, while this is the first city tournament for Sutcliffe, Owens and Smith.

But Dickson is no stranger to the game of her younger competitors.

"I've played with these younger golfers a lot of times, it always seems like we're in the same flights in these tournaments," Dickson said. "I played against Penny in the Women's West Texas in 1985. She was the medalist and I was the 16th qualifier. That's a pretty good way to get knocked out early."

But the mother of two, 10 and 18, could be the type of big hitter that could bump off a younger competitor.

"I'm erratic, I can hit the ball, but a lot of times, it's all over the course. Penny is not the type to get herself in trouble out there. That's why she is such a low-handicapper.

"I would have to putt well, that's the key to any tournament. But I'd have to be very aggressive and not leave any short because she's so consistent."

MEANWHILE, OWENS is just trying to whip her game back into shape after a self-imposed exile from golf. A standout for the Bulldogs until her graduation in 1985, Owens laid down her clubs when she chose Southwestern in Georgetown.

But Tuesday, Owens' best was good enough to nip Smith, a pre-tournament favorite, on the third extra hole.

"I was on the green and she wasn't, that's what it came down to.

USFL: 100 pennies, 20 nickels for a thought

By DAVE ANDERSON
N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK — During a recess in Judge Peter K. Leisure's instructions to the jury last Thursday in the United States Football League's antitrust suit against the National Football League, the USFL commissioner, Harry L. Usher, stood in the back of the Foley Square courtroom.

"It all depends on the damages," Usher said. "The damages could be $1.25 or a billion dollars."

Usher missed by 25 cents. After 31 hours of deliberation, Tuesday's verdict of the federal jury of five women and one man found the NFL nominally guilty of damaging the USFL and gaining control of the pro football market. But the jury cleared the NFL of trying to monopolize the television networks and Commissioner Pete Rozelle of any liability. Most importantly, the jury awarded the USFL only $1 in damages. One dollar bill,two half-dollars, four quarters, 10 dimes, 20 nickels, or 100 pennies.

"The damages are very important," the USFL attorney, Harvey Myerson, had often acknowledged during the trial. "Without substantial damages, the USFL dies."

And so the USFL is on its death bed. It had hoped for as much as $1.69 billion in damages. Instead, it will collect $1, or $3 actually, since damages are trebled in antitrust cases. The NFL can pay that out of petty cash.

Although the USFL owners will meet in New York next Wednesday to determine whether to take the case to a federal appellate court while playing their fall schedule, they would do better to search for a friendly undertaker.

Throughout the trial, Myerson attempted to influence the jury with theatrics. Or, as NFL attorney Frank Rothman argued, with emotion instead of evidence. For all of Myerson's insistence that the NFL had conspired with the three major television networks to prevent the USFL from acquiring a network contract this fall, the evidence was that the USFL indeed had a television contract this fall with the ESPN cable network.

Throughout the USFL's three springtime seasons, ESPN had televised some of its games, as had the ABC network. But ABC had declined to televise USFL games this fall against NFL games on both CBS and NBC.

As for the USFL charge that Rozelle had flimflammed Donald Trump, the owner of the New Jersey Generals who wanted an NFL franchise, the jurors obviously believed that Trump had tried to flimflam them.

Of all the testimony of 43 witnesses over 42 days, one phrase rang louder and clearer than the others. In his denial of ever offering Trump an NFL franchise, Rozelle talked about how Trump had requested an NFL franchise and how the New York real-estate entrepreneur had added that he would "get some stiff" to buy the Generals.

To anyone who has listened to Trump for even a few minutes, "get some stiff" were words that Rozelle could not have made up. And the jury had heard Trump for several hours.

In the end, the jury decided that the USFL had "damaged itself," as one juror, Margaret Lilienfeld, commented. As a result, it deserved virtually no financial damages.

Over its three springtime seasons, the USFL lost about $150 million. Its average attendance in 1985 skidded to 24,494, down nearly 3,000 from the year before; its television ratings were down about 30 percent. Through mismanagement, the USFL had provided a poor product that the public didn't buy. And as it turned out, that the jury didn't buy.

In retrospect, the USFL's most flagrant example of mismanagement was this antitrust case. Over the 42 days of testimony, the USFL helped to prove the NFL case rather than its own.

From its beginning in the spring of 1983, the USFL owners had hoped to force a merger with the NFL, as the American Football League had in 1966, or an absorption of a few franchises, as the All America Football Conference had in 1950. But the core of that plan was the USFL owners' willingness to be part of the same NFL monopoly that it would accuse of being a monopoly.

When the NFL didn't budge, the USFL decided to file antitrust charges against the 66-year-old league.

In recent years, Rozelle has used the word "litigious" to describe the American sports scene. The commissioner mentioned recently having been introduced by the columnist Art Buchwald at a dinner.

Quickie quiz, an easy one: Best record compiled in the majors by a manager who was active at least 10 years?....

The delicate nature of pitching: The Chicago Cubs gave up on Rick Reuschel in 1984 after arm surgery which, they felt, finished him as a major leaguer. Last year Reuschel was 14-8 with a 2.27 for the bottom-of-the-barrel, drug-ridden Pirates. This year Rick is struggling at 5-12, loser of eight in his last nine decisions. And you'd give a pitcher a long term contract?...

Bobby Hillin gives a good share of the credit for his maiden victory in the Talladega 500 Sunday to veteran Buddy Baker. The kid from Texas stayed glued to Baker's bumper, drafting an excess of 200 mph. "When he saw I was getting too anxious, he'd point to his head," described Bobby. "He was saying 'follow me. Use your head.'".

Monday morning AP had come through, but it was Bobby holding a beer in one hand and letting out a yell. I wasn't even sure if Bobby was old enough to drink a beer and was tempted to doctor the cutlines. "If Bobby's lips could be read, he'd be saying, 'When I said a cool one, I met a lemonade.'" Of course, when it was realized the can belonged to one of his sponsors...

The way the Astros are battling for the National League West title, possibly on the way to an all-Texas World Series, for us dreamers, it's hard to accept the rumor that it will be the Washington D.C. Astros next year. After all these years, now a contender and no support....

"I'm sick and tired of hearing 'You caused Johnny to flunk.' I tell them 'Chump, the education is here, I'm going to support you for education, but it is your responsibility to get the education yourself.'" And if Georgetown Coach John Thompson says it, you better not argue....

Best winning record by a major league manager active 10 years or more? Who else, Joe McCarthy, .614 with 2125-1335. That's the easy part. The tough part would be demanding who was second?....

Hillin shares NASCAR record

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Dale Earnhardt maintained his commanding lead in the chase for the NASCAR Winston Cup championship, holding a 161-point advantage over Darrell Waltrip.

Sunday, two records fell in the Talladega 500 stock car race at Alabama International Motor Speedway. Bobby Hillin, 22, of Midland, Texas, became the youngest driver to win a Winston Cup race and was among a record 26 drivers to lead in the race.

But Earnhardt, the 1980 NASCAR Winston Cup champion, still leads comfortably in the points race with 2,585 to 2,424 for Waltrip, a three-time Winston Cup champion.

Tim Richmond, who was finished first or second in five of the last six races, remained third with 2,400.

Bobby Allison remained in fourth with 2,327 points, followed by Ricky Rudd, 2,293; Bill Elliott, 2,182; and Rusty Wallace, 2,143.

Hillin, who vaulted from 12th to eighth in the standings.

Jackson beats Angels for 3-1 edge

From Staff Reports

JACKSON, Miss— Wray Bergendahl and relief ace Jeff Ennis combined to scatter 10 hits and Randy Milligan unloaded a three-run homer as the Jackson Mets took a 6-3 win over the Midland Angels in Texas League play before 2,820 fans here Tuesday night.

The win gives Jackson a 3-1 edge in the series which concludes tonight.

Midland returns home to open a five-game series with San Antonio Friday night.

Mike Romanovsky suffered the loss for Midland, his third in four decisions. Kevin King, John Hotchkiss and Jeff Schaefer had two hits each to account for six of Midland's 10 hits.

Ennis' save was his 18th of the season, setting a Jackson franchise record.

Elsewhere, Mark Poston limited Tulsa to six hits as Beaumont won 4-0; El Paso beat Shreveport, 5-2, and Arkansas beat San Antonio, 3-2.

It was Beaumont's sixth shutout of the season and the second in two nights against the Drillers. Poston is now 8-7. Rick Knapp, 5-12, gave up only three hits for Tulsa.

Mark Gillaspie's sacrifice fly in the first inning drove home Steve Garcia, who had singled for the first Beaumont run.

Charlie O'Brien had a two-run homer to lead El Paso. It was O'Brien's 10th homer of the season.

Shreveport scored first in the first inning when Steve Stanicek singled in Billy Bates. Shreveport's Mike Rubel had a solo homer in the sixth inning, his 13th of the season.

Dan Scarpetta, 12-5, was the winning pitcher.

Associated Press

The Chicago White Sox broke an eight-game losing streak Tuesday night on the strength of a two-run homer by Ron Kittle, who then was traded to the New York Yankees in a six-player deal.

Kittle's homer, his 17th, capped a three-run third inning and backed the strong pitching of Joe Cowley as Chicago ended its longest skid since 1978 with a 4-1 victory over struggling Boston. The Red Sox have lost 10 of their last 12 games.

"I knew I was gonzo," said Kittle after the game. "I have no control over the matter. I'll go to the Yankees and do the best I can. At least the Yankees have a better-looking uniform."

Cowley, 6-6, and Bob James combined on a two-hitter. Jim Rice had both Boston hits, a single in the second and an RBI single after an error in the fourth.

Cowley retired 13 straight batters after Rice's run-scoring single before walking pinch-hitter Mike Greenwell leading off the ninth. Bill Buckner walked with two outs, and James retired Rice on a grounder for his 14th save.

Kittle, infielder Wayne Tolleson and catcher Joel Skinner went to New York for catcher Ron Hassey, minor league infielder Carlos Martinez and a player to be named later. Kittle was AL Rookie of the Year in 1983, bating .254 with 35 home runs and 100 RBI.

AMERICAN LEAGUE

Tigers 6, Indians 3

Dave Bergman's bases-loaded pinch single lifted Detroit over Cleveland. Bergman sent a slow bouncer to third baseman Brook Jacoby, whose throw skipped past first baseman Joe Carter, allowing two runs to score. Cory Snyder drove in three runs for Cleveland with his ninth homer, a two-run shot, and a double. Detroit's Kirk Gibson bumped home plate umpire Ted Hendry after being called out in the third, and was ejected, as was Manager Sparky Anderson.

Blue Jays 5, Royals 2

Toronto's Dave Stieb, 3-10, showed the form that won him the league earned run average title last season, pitching a four-hitter through 6 2-3 innings. Ernie Whitt paced an 11-hit Toronto attack with a two-run double. Hal McRae had a two-run RBI single for Kansas City.

Brewers 6, Yankees 4

A two-run homer by Rob Deer capped a five-run first inning and Gorman Thomas also homered to back Danny Darwin, 6-6. Mark Clear got his seventh save for Milwaukee, which jumped on Scott Nielson, 2-3. Dave Winfield hit a two-run homer for New York.

Twins 4, Mariners 2

Minnesota's Kent Hrbek hit a two-run homer and Kirby Puckett tripled, doubled and singled to back Frank Viola, 11-8, who gave up two runs on six hits in 6 2-3 innings. Roy Lee Jackson finished with two-hit relief for his first save. Hrbek hit a 424-foot homer in the first inning, his 23rd of the season, off Seattle's Jim Beattie, 0-5.

Rangers 6, Orioles 5

Scott Fletcher's double off the left-field wall with two outs scored Oddibe McDowell from first base. McDowell had singled off Odell Jones, 1-1, with two outs and Fletcher followed with his game-winning hit. Greg Harris, 5-9, the fourth Texas pitcher, earned the victory with four innings of scoreless, three-hit relief.

A's 4, Angels 2

Jose Canseco's tiebreaking single sparked a three-run Oakland rally in the seventh inning. California starter Ray Chadwick, making his major-league debut, took a two-hitter and 2-1 lead into the seventh, but took the loss. Dave Stewart, 4-0, pitched four-hit ball over seven innings.

NATIONAL LEAGUE

Mets 3, Cubs 0

Cubs 2, Mets 1

Ron Darling, 11-3 scattered six hits in pitching his second shutout of the season, and Len Dykstra hit a two-run fourth-inning single for New York in the opener. Howard Johnson made two errors in the seventh inning of the nightcap to allow Chicago to go ahead with an unearned run and gain the split. The Mets maintained a 16½-game lead in the NL East.

Phillies 12, Cardinals 7

Von Hayes hit his second career grand slam and drove in five runs, Juan Samuel hit three-run homer and Glenn Wilson a two-run shot to lead a 14-hit Philadelphia attack. Each player hit his ninth homer as the Phillies halted St. Louis' seven-game winning streak. Major league leader Vince Coleman of St. Louis stole three bases to increase his total to 68.

Braves 1, Astros 0

David Palmer spaced four-hits over 7 2-3 innings, and Dale Murphy hit his 15th home run to power Atlanta over Mike Scott and Houston. Palmer, 7-8, dominated the Astro hitters, allowing only two baserunners as far as second. Scott, 10-7, retired 16 straight before Glenn Hubbard singled with one out in the sixth for the Braves' first hit.

Padres 2, Reds 1

Garry Templeton lined a two-out single in the ninth to drive in pinch-runner Jerry Royster from second base. The rally came off Ron Robinson, 8-2, who struck out Steve Garvey to open the inning, but then walked Graig Nettles. After Bruce Bochy struck out, Royster went to second on Marvell Wynne's single, setting the stage for Templeton.

Dodgers 2, Giants 1

Fernando Valenzuela, 14-6, pitched a six-hitter, striking out 11 batters for the third time this season en route to his league-leading 12th complete game. Greg Brock and Reggie Williams hit sacrifice flies to lead the Los Angeles offense.

JEANE DIXON'S your horoscope

© 1986, Los Angeles Times Syndicate

By Jeane Dixon
Thursday, July 31, 1986

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: It is vital to your success that you become more methodical and adopt practical measures in order to get things done. You will be able to gather more power to yourself soon. More reality in your life will bring you greater happiness and less wear and tear over money. The month of May should be an especially enjoyable period.

CELEBRITY BIRTHDATES: Yankee outfielder Hank Bauer, economist Milton Friedman, tennis' Evonne Goolagong, actor Don Murray, actress Geraldine Chaplin and Chicago Cub Leon Durham.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): New ideas will help put you on the road to a promotion or raise. Family demands upon your time are heavy. Strike a happy balance between work and play. Romance is starred for singles.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): A family-owned business could result in an unexpected windfall. Put aside extra funds to finance a teen-ager's education. A slowly developing romantic relationship brings new joy.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A solution to what seemed like an impossible dream comes easily through the aid of an old friend. This person plays a major role in your life professionally and perhaps even romantically.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Your judgment regarding career and financial matters is especially sound. Others look to you for leadership -- do not let them down. Watch your tendency to do too much work and no play.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Eliminate unnecessary spending but refuse to skimp on essentials. A romantic relationship is on an even course. Resist the urge to commit yourself, if you are not ready. You have plenty of time.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Get to the primary source if you need vital information. Check and recheck the facts. You achieve greater rapport with an authority figure if you are totally honest.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Tend to routine chores. Self-discipline will keep you from being distracted. Complete work assignments on time -- otherwise, you can jeopardize your career progress. Romance is exciting.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Your contacts with business associates are more congenial than usual. Share ideas and you could come up with a real moneymaker. The outlook on investments and romance is greatly improved.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). Learning high-tech skills will greatly improve your earning power. Romance will keep you on the run and could lead to serious thoughts about marriage.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Do not take everyone's opinion verbatim. Check and recheck all the facts and figures. Finance, career and domestic affairs will require careful handling.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You feel a greater rapport with an older person who will play a major role in your future success. A letter or message will give you new insights. Surprise invitations delight you.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Helping a sibling will help you to find an answer to one of your problems. Expand your horizons. Make certain vacation plans provide options for every member of the family.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 NT	Pass	6 NT	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Ten of ♠

The finesse is one of the simplest plays in bridge to master. But it takes years of experience to learn when not to finesse, or which of several finesses to take.

There was little to the bidding. After his partner opened one no trump, North added his 18 high-card points to his partner's announced minimum of 16 or maximum of 18, and saw that he had the values for a small slam but was a touch short of a grand slam. He wasted no time in getting to where he wanted to play.

West led the top of his spade sequence, and when dummy came down declarer could count eight fast tricks. To make his slam, he would have to develop tricks in both clubs and diamonds. Which suit should he tackle first, or doesn't it matter?

To give himself the maximum chance, declarer should first take the diamond finesse. If he can get four tricks from that suit, he needs only three in clubs to get home; and he can guarantee that many by taking the safety play of cashing the king and then leading toward the ace-9. Unfortunately, the jack of diamond loses to East's king and a spade is returned. Declarer now needs four club tricks. What's his best chance?

It doesn't help first to cash the ace, in the hope of dropping a singleton queen offside, for in that case West would still have a club trick. The correct play is to lead low from the South hand with the intention of finessing if West plays low. That gains when the cards are as shown above. Declarer captures the queen with the king, cashes the jack and then takes the marked finesse for the 10 to land 12 tricks.

Boy George ordered to pay drug fine

LONDON (AP) — Boy George, the flamboyant British singer famous for wearing makeup and women's clothes, pleaded guilty Tuesday to possessing heroin and was fined the equivalent of $370 by a London magistrate.

The millionaire rock star reportedly had been undergoing treatment for heroin addiction when police raided his home in north London's arty Hampstead district July 7.

Boy George, his hair dyed blond and worn in a spiked style, was charged under his real name, George O'Dowd.

Magistrate Geoffrey Noel, who gave the 25-year-old lead singer of Culture Club seven days to pay the fine, said he took into account that Boy George was undergoing treatment to try to kick heroin when he was arrested.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actress Zsa Zsa Gabor, famed for her jewels and glamour, will marry her eighth husband in a barn surrounded by horses.

"I know it sounds like a fairy tale, but it's true," Miss Gabor said Tuesday in a telephone interview from her Bel Air home.

Miss Gabor said she would marrry Prince Frederick von Anhalt, Germany's Duke of Saxony, Aug. 14 at the Saratoga, N.Y., estate of Liz Whitney.

Miss Gabor is an actress, cosmetics maker and author of "Zsa Zsa's Complete Guide to Men" and "How to Get a Man, How to Keep a Man, How to Get Rid of a Man."

Her movies have included "Lovely to Look At," "The Girl in the Kremlin," "Boys' Night Out" and "Picture Mommy Dead."

Miss Gabor's previous husbands include the late Conrad Hilton, the hotel magnate, and the late George Sanders, the actor.

NEW YORK (AP) — Watergate reporter Carl Bernstein may be giving heartburn to his landlord, who says the former husband of "Heartburn" author Nora Ephron is refusing to pay part of his $4,000-a-month rent.

Guida De Carvalhosa, who owns the Manhattan brownstone where Bernstein has lived since February, has sued him for allegedly withholding $3,000 of June's rent. Bernstein paid the full $4,000 in July, but the check bounced, said her attorney, Richard Golub.

Golub said Bernstein has complained about faulty electricity, plumbing and noisy workmen and was angered when a portion of the bedroom ceiling collapsed minutes after his 7-year-old son was on the bed.

"It was just a crack," Ms. De Carvalhosa said Tuesday.

Bernstein was out of town and unavailable for comment.

LONDON (AP) — Prince Charles and Princess Diana celebrated part of their fifth wedding anniversary on the royal train to Scotland to join Queen Elizabeth II there, Buckingham Palace said.

Before making the overnight trip, the 37-year-old prince and 25-year-old princess, who were married July 29, 1981, opened an exhibition on the Saudi Arabian capital of Riyadh, and were serenaded by a Royal Marine Band which played "The Anniversary Waltz."

The couple, who will visit Saudi Arabia in November, walked through an authentic desert setting made from almost 25 tons of sand flown in especially from the desert kingdom. The setting included a Bedouin tent and date palms.

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Pro basketball coach Don Nelson's 250-mile tractor drive to dramatize the plight of financially strapped farmers will begin Aug. 8.

Nelson, coach of the Milwaukee Bucks, will ride eight days from Milwaukee to Wausau, sponsors said Tuesday.

Nelson began a campaign to help farmers in March. Now, "Nellie's Farm Fund" has more than $100,000 on itsway to a $500,000 goal.

A benefit basketball game Monday night brought in $50,000. In addition to sponsoring the tractor tour, Miller Lite, the Milwaukee brewery, donated $40,000 to the fund.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Country music singer Christy Forester of The Forester Sisters and pianist Gary Smith, who met last Valentine's Day, have announced their engagement.

They plan to wed in December in Lookout Mountain, Ga., where Miss Forester and her three sisters live.

The Forester Sisters have had three straight No. 1 country hits, "I Fell in Love Again Last Night," "Just-in Case" and "Mama's Never Seen Those Eyes."

Smith is pianist for the Ricky Skaggs Band. He previously played in Barbara Mandrell's band and in the Hemphills, a gospel group.

NEW YORK (AP) — W. Averell Harriman, whose career took him from the towers of Wall Street to the halls of the Kremlin, was eulogized as a man who saw history being made.

Harriman was buried Tuesday on the grounds of his family's estate in Westchester County. He died Saturday at 94.

"My brother used to say, 'The 20th century couldn't have happened if we didn't have Averell Harriman,'" Sen. Edward Kennedy told reporters. "President Kennedy once announced the torch had been passed to a new generation. Then he turned around and realized Averell Harriman still had it."

80,000 welcome Tom back to London

By MATTHEW NUGENT

LONDON (AP) — The last time Dallas Cowboys' head coach Tom Landry visited London was in 1944. Then he was a World War II bomber pilot, aged 20, serving with the Army Air Corps.

Based at Ipswich, 69 miles east of the British capital, Landry made frequent trips into London. They were fun trips, a chance to forget for a while the dangerous missions across the English Channel to France, Holland and Belgium.

"I used to go into London a lot during those times," Landry recalled Tuesday. "I came here in October 1944 and flew B-17's until the end of the war. I remember Buckingham Palace and all around Piccadilly Circus even though London was all blacked out then.

He added: "It's going to be nice to look around again and see how much I remember about it. I flew about 30 missions here before the war ended."

Landry is in London with his Cowboys for a pre-season game against Superbowl champions Chicago Bears at Wembley stadium Sunday.

The match, given the full backing of the NFL and dubbed "American Bowl '86", was sold out early May. 80,000 football fans from all over England, Scotland and Wales will travel to London at the weekend for the game.

Both teams arrived Monday with Landry and his Bears' counterpart Mike Ditka promising that British fans would have a chance to see at first hand the likes of running backs Tony Dorsett and Walter Payton, and quarterback Jim McMahon and Danny White during Sunday's game.

But the one player all of Britain wants to meet, greet and buy a fish and chips this week is William "The Refrigerator" Perry. On Tuesday he was mobbed by reporters and photographers at training and then by scores of autograph hunters.

Landry also had a bunch of admirers from the media listening to his every word — and they wanted to know where his trilby had gone.

"You'll see it on me at game time," he said. The blue Cowboys baseball cap of Tuesday would be replaced by the most famous fedora in American football Sunday.

"It all started when I first began coaching," said Landry of his trilby. "I started wearing a hat and I've worn one ever since. I'm not superstitious, it's just that I felt good wearing a hat and I stayed with it."

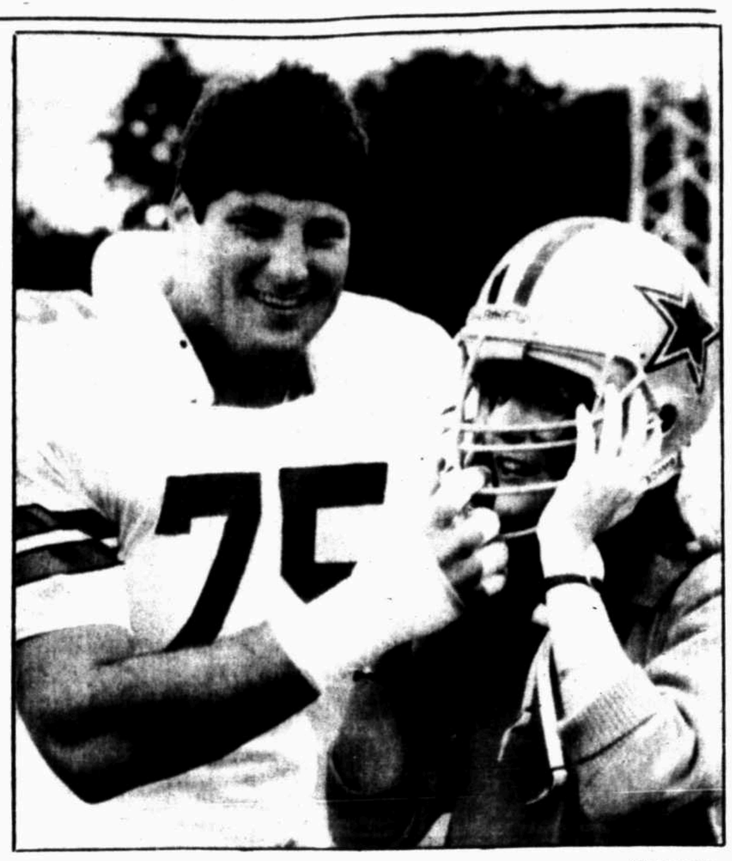

The usually poker-faced Landry was asked by one British reporter what made him laugh. "Winning most of the time," was his quickfire reply before he explained why he always seemed so impassive when the fans this side of the Atlantic see him on television.

"When I'm working on the sideline I'm concentrating most of the time. Concentrating is very important, so I'm not watching the game the way the fans do.

"I call the plays, I watch the defense to see how its reacting so I don't see Tony Dorsett run the big run, or make the big catch. So the fans look at me and they think there's something wrong with me.

"But it's just that I'm concentrating on the play — and the plays that are coming up — rather than plays that have just been run."

All of Wembley will be trying to pick out that stoneface this weekend when the Cowboys tangle with the Bears.

Lions' draft pick Long may sit this one out

Associated Press

Lions

Efforts to sign quarterback Chuck Long, Detroit's No. 1 draft choice, were stopped after club management and Long's agent failed to agree on where to hold a meeting.

A wide difference between Detroit's offer and the amount sought by Long's agent, Jack Mills of Boulder, Colo., prompted Mills to threaten Monday that the University of Iowa quarterback might sit out the 1986 season.

Mills said his latest base salary offer for Long is $2.6 million over four years. The Lions have countered with a five-year, $1.75 million proposal.

Saints

New Orleans withdrew its contract offer to third-round draft choice Barry Word a few hours after the University of Virginia running back pleaded guilty to dealing in cocaine.

Officially, Word pleaded guilty to conspiring to distribute less than a kiologram (2.2 pounds) of cocaine, but he was never accused of having more than an ounce of the drug.

Chiefs

Veteran offensive tackle Bill Bain has left camp and has decided to retire. "He feels he gave it a great try and said he had decided he was going to retire," Coach John Mackovic said. "We encouraged him to stay, but he feels this is the right thing to do. We hated to seem him go."

NFL Camps

Bears

With the American Bowl '86 meeting between the Super Bowl champion Chicago Bears and the Dallas Cowboys set for Sunday in London, Britons are discovering William "The Refrigerator" Perry. He was mobbed by reporters and photographers at a training sesion and then by scores of autograph hunters.

Browns

Wide receiver Greg Anderson, who played with Birmingham of the USFL in 1983, Pittsburgh in 1984 and Arizona in 1985, fractured a vertebra Sunday at practice and is now physically unable to perform.

Vikings

Defensive tackle Keith Millard has been charged with disorderly conduct and making terroristic threats after an alleged verbal tirade with police in a hotel, authorities said.

The incident occurred before dawn Sunday when police Sgt. Scott Reinhardt responded to a domestic call at the Radisson South Hotel. Millard, who is 6-foot-6 and 260 pounds, began yelling obscenities when Reinhardt knocked on the door, the report said.

Steelers

Their critics contended that the Pittsburgh Steelers stunk last season when they finished 7-9. This season, they may be right — literally. A group of skunks invaded the area around the Steelers' St. Vincent College dormitory and three of the animals were shot dead by state policemen or game wardens. Another was found dead Monday on one of the team's practice fields.

Chargers

In San Diego's razzle-dazzle offense, it's easy to overlook fullback Tim Spencer, the workhorse in a stable of stars.

Spencer's primary duties are to help provide pass protection for quarterback Dan Fouts, block for running backs Gary Anderson and Lionel James and gain two yards when everyone in the stadium knows the Charger offense needs 2 yards to keep a drive alive or score.

"Maybe a lot of people don't know how really important he is to us, but he's the type of guy we have to have," Chargers Coach Don Coryell said of Spencer.

Redskins

Washington kicker Steve Cox is going through an identity crisis this summer.

Is he a placekicker? Is he a punter? By the time the Redskins open their season Sept. 7, the fffive-year veteran is hoping the answer will be all of the above. Cox, incumbent Mark Moseley and three other hopefuls began a competition to determine who will be handling the placekicking chores this season. The early returns were inconclusive, as Moseley made 6 of 8 field goals from distances ranging from 40 to 47 yards, Steve Willis hit on 5 of 8 and Cox converted half his 8 attempts.

"Until Pete Rozelle came along," Buchwald said that night, "sports antitrust law was a cottage industry."

The cottage turned into a courthouse. No longer were the players or even the owners the highest paid people in the NFL; its attorneys were. And until Tuesday, the NFL was on a losing streak. Al Davis, the Raiders' managing general genius, had succeeded in defying the other NFL owners in transfering his franchise to Los Angeles from Oakland without their approval, although a federal appeals court has ruled that $34.6 million in damages to the Raiders might be lessened because of their lucrative Los Angeles location.

And when Davis testified in New York on behalf of the USFL, the other NFL owners were furious, especially Arthur Modell, the Cleveland Browns' owner.

"At least in Los Angeles," Modell said that day, "he was fighting for his own franchise. I could respect that, but I can't respect this."

Although the USFL owners had been hoping that the NFL would settle by agreeing to a merger or an absorption of a few franchises, the NFL owners resented the idea of a USFL owner obtaining an NFL franchise that suddenly would be worth several times its original value. They especially resented Trump's scheme to get a third NFL franchise in New York that suddenly might be worth $100 million.

"Trump," snapped Modell during the trial, "is trying to get into the NFL on the cheap."

Even if the NFL had lost the antitrust case, its owners were prepared to appeal rather than agree to a merger with the eight remaining USFL teams. Asked last week about the possibility of a merger if the NFL were to lose, Rozelle shook his head.

"I would not anticipate a merger," he said, "but I don't vote on that, our owners do."

The commissioner nodded across the hall toward Wellington Mara, the co-owner of the New York Giants, who leaned forward.

"Nor do I," Mara said firmly.

But now no merger is necessary. Now the NFL can go into some of the USFL's more attractive locations, notably Phoenix, along with Oakland and Baltimore, two cities abandoned by its own club owners. And the NFL might even consider putting a new franchise into Shea Stadium, but if a third New York franchise is granted, Trump won't get it. Not after his testimony.

Justice indeed triumphed. Back when Trump was talking about "some stiff," he didn't realize it would be the USFL itself.

Dollar mixed

LONDON (AP) — The U.S. dollar turned in a mixed performance against most key currencies in light European trading early today as dealers adjusted positions before the publication of U.S. merchandise-trade figures for June.

Foreign exchange dealers said some short-covering in Asian markets in which traders bought dollars to cash in on an earlier decline in the dollar lifted the American currency from its late New York level.

In European trading the dollar was unchanged against the West German mark and fell against all other key currencies except the French franc.

Other dollar rates at midmorning, compared with late Tuesday:

—2.1210 West German marks, unchanged.

—1.7025 Swiss francs, down from 1.7045.

—6.8700 French francs, up from 6.8625.

—2.3900 Dutch guilders, down from 2.3947.

—1,455.50 Italian lire, down from 1,457.00.

—1.3857 Canadian dollars, down from 1.3877.

In London, the British pound rose to $1.4937 from $1.4825 late Tuesday.

Gold opened in London at a bid price of $351.50 a troy ounce, down from $352.40 bid late Tuesday. At midmorning, the city's five major bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $351.35.

In Zurich, the bid price was $351.45, down from $352 bid late Tuesday.

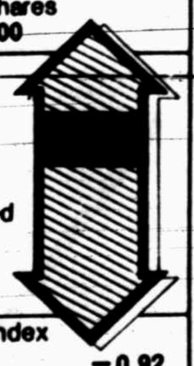

Earlier, in Hong Kong, gold fell $2.27 to close at a bid $350.65.

In New York Tuesday, gold fell to a late bid price of $351.75.

Silver was quoted in London at a bid price of $4.98 a troy ounce, down from $5.03 bid late Tuesday.

Less rigs to cost U.S. 800,000 barrels daily

By HARIHAR KRISHNAN
UPI Business Writer

Low crude oil prices have forced thousands of high-cost wells to shut in, significantly reducing domestic production but a far higher production loss is forecast from reduced levels of drilling.

Oil analyst John Spears of Tulsa, Okla., has calculated the United States will lose about 250,000 barrels of oil per day by end of 1986 by shutting in high cost wells. But worse, he says, the country will lose an additional 800,000 barrels per day from reduced drilling.

And if the situation doesn't improve, Spears said the country's crude production, which averaged 8.9 million barrels per day in 1985, will be down 1.5 million barrels daily to 7.4 million by the end of 1987.

Spears' calculations are based on the price movement of West Texas intermediate, the benchmark U.S. crude, and its effect on the number of active drilling rigs.

Spears said at an average price West Texas intermediate of $14 per barrel, the rig count for the whole of 1986 will average 925. The rig count would fall to 885 if the benchmark price were $12.60, he said.

"For 1987, an average price for (West Texas intermediate) of $15 will result in an average (Hughes Tool Co. rig) count of 800," Spears said. "But if the average price in 1987 is lower, at $12.85, the average (rig) count for next year will be 695."

In either case, production will fall, he said. The natural consequence of the production decline will be a corresponding increase in imports.

"Within a certain price range, the decline in the rig count is proportionate to the price decline. A year ago we saw the price of (West Texas intermediate) at around $28 a barrel. Today it is about $13 (or less), a decline of over 50 percent. During the same time, the decline in the rig count was about 60 percent. Thus it is almost a one-to-one decline."

Spears said high cost wells typically are stripper wells that produce less than 10 barrels a day at a unit cost of $15.

"Obviously that price is higher than the current wellhead price and they will be shut down," he said.

He said last year 646,700 wells produced an average of 13.8 barrels per day at a cost of $5.48 per barrel.

"Our analysis suggests that about 443,500 of those wells (68 percent) produced their oil at a cost of more than $15 per barrel, making them leading candidates for abandonment since the oil price collapse."

The analyst said even those wells that have lesser production costs will be under pressure because producers of many of these wells have debts and other financial obligations to pay off.

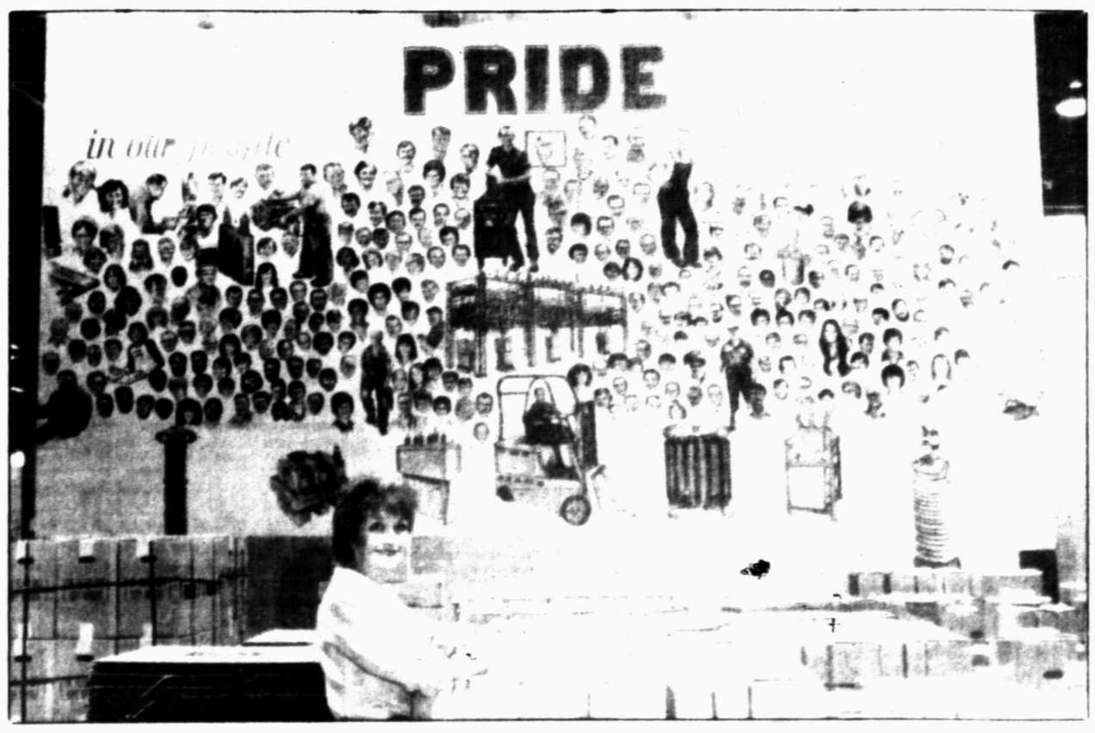

Spears said imports already have started to climb in response to the production loss and the situation will get worse.

"We will easily reach the 50 percent import level. Last year it was only 30 percent. Anything over 30 percent is always a cause for concern based on what happened in the past. Also, when the country reaches the 50 percent import level, which it could very quickly if this situation continues, it will give a clear signal that crude supply has become tight. Prices will then rise sharply. Regardless of where the oil comes from, the price rise will be high."

Spears said another major concern is that the wells that are being abandoned will end up placing "tremendous surplus equipment" on a market which is already oversupplied.

He said firms specializing in plugging and abandoning work are striking deals with producers to perform the work free of charge in return for the salvaged equipment from the well. To recover his costs, the contractor then puts the casing, pumps, tank battery and other gear on the market at depressed prices.

"The solution is only in the political realm. If the market is left to itself, it looks like the price of oil will stay low for several years and we will see the big swing in imports. Unless the argument for national security is made, it appears unlikely we will have an import fee or import quotas."

FDIC auctions may draw 4,000

By MELLA McEWEN
Business/Oil Writer

Between 3,000 and 4,000 people, including network news crews, are expected to attend the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp., FDIC, auction today and Thursday at the FDIC auction facility on Highway 80 between Midland and Odessa.

This is the sixth FDIC auction handled by Mark C. Thomas & Associates; other auctions include Saturday's real estate auction, several others handled by other auctioneers.

The auction will begin at 9 a.m. with bidding on the FDIC's collection of cars, including a 1931 Ford Model A, 1928 Ford Model A, 1948 Mercury Convertible, and a 1984 128 Camaro Convertible. The cars will be sold until 1 p.m., when bidding will begin on the six planes up for sale. Five planes are located at Rich Air at Midland Regional Airport, and a 1956 Pipe Apache PA is at Killeen's Municipal Airport.

After the planes are auctioned off, heavy equipment such as well service rigs, hoist and bridge cranes, and backhoes will be sold. Wednesday's session should end around 6 or 7 p.m. with the selling of the trailers and mud logging trailers.

Thursday morning's session will begin with bids on shop equipment, which includes reproduction equipment and electric pumps and motors. The FDIC is also selling 15 large green plants, machine tools and a complete inventory of auto parts, and office furniture.

"We have some extremely nice office furniture," said Bud Story, an associate with Mark Thomas. "This is the nicest furniture we've had." Included in the furniture inventory are approximately 100 secretarial chairs, 75 or more conference and or side chairs, and 20 or more executive desks and credenzas. The auction will conclude around 9 or 10 p.m. Thursday.

The FDIC's last auction in February drew 3,000 people, and at least that many are expected at the latest offering, Story said. People can expect some bargains at the auction. "The merchandise is bringing all it's worth, based on the current economy," Story said. "It's nowhere near what it's worth, but it'll bring what it's worth due to the current economy."

North Sea oil output drops sharply

LONDON (UPI) — Oil output from the North Sea dropped sharply in June to its lowest level in three years, the Royal Bank of Scotland said Tuesday.

The Royal Bank-Radio Scotland Oil Index fell by almost 22 points to 133.6 (1980 equals 100), which represents an average daily output of only 2.2 million barrels, a bank spokesman said.

This represents the lowest oil output total since June 1983, when there were 23 fields in production, compared with the present 31, he said.

Output in June fell in 20 of the 31 fields. The two major fields, Forties and the Brent complex, are undergoing substantial maintenance programs.

The steep production decline, combined with a further drop in prices during the month, has led to a severe slump of oil revenue for Britain.

In June, the daily value of North Sea production fell by $9 million to just over $25.5 million — less than one third of its value of last November.

The oil price at which projects become viable varies from field to field and the willingness to proceed with a development depends also on a variety of other factors, including the developers' current financial positions and expectations of future price movements.

BUSINESS BRIEFS

Trade deficit sets record in first six months

WASHINGTON (AP) — Americans imported $14.2 billion more than they exported in June, nearly an identical figure to that of the month before as this nation's huge trade deficit again showed no signs of easing, the government reported today.

For the first six months of 1986, the U.S. trade deficit climbed to a record half-year level of $83.9 billion, the Commerce Department said in its report on merchandise trade.

In all, imports increased by 5 percent in June to $33.2 billion. Exports also increased, by 9.8 percent, to $19.1 billion.

Oil imports contributed $3.1 billion to last month's deficit, up from the $2.5 billion of the month before.

Chevron, Sun show lower quarterly profits

NEW YORK — The Chevron Corp., the nation's fourth-largest oil company, Tuesday reported quarterly profits 37.8 percent below those of a year ago. The Sun Co., the 11th largest oil concern, said its second-quarter profits shrunk by 31.5 percent from the comparable 1985 period.

Chevron said it earned $216 million, or 63 cents a share, compared with $347 million, or $1.02 a share, in the 1985 quarter. Revenues fell 41.8 percent, to $6.8 billion, from $11.7 billion for the 1985 quarter.

The Sun Co. said it earned $100 million, or 92 cents a share, compared with $146 million, or $1.30 a share, a year ago. The earnings included an extraordinary charge of $24 million, or 22 cents a share, related to employee layoffs. Revenues for the quarter fell 32 percent, to $2.5 billion, from $3.7 billion.

USX quarterly earnings plunge 92 percent

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — USX Corp. Tuesday reported second-quarter earnings plunged to $14 million on sales of $4.2 billion from $180 million on sales of $5.4 billion for the second quarter of 1985, which has been restated to include the results of Texas Oil & Gas.

On a per-share basis, the company reported a second-quarter loss of 3 cents after payment of preferred dividends, compared with 61 cents last year.

Operating income for the second quarter of 1986 was $201 million, compared with $527 million in 1985.

"Second quarter results reflect the precipitous decline in crude oil and natural gas prices and continued lackluster demand and depressed prices for steel," said Chairman David M. Roderick.

The Oil and Gas segment, which includes both Marathon and Texas Oil, had operating income before foreign income taxes of $179 million, compared with 1985 second quarter operating income of $415 million.

Gasoline inventory drop shows more driving

NEW YORK (UPI) — Inventories of gasoline declined in the latest week — falling to levels below those of a year ago for the first time since the summer driving season began — the American Petroleum Institute said Tuesday.

Gasoline inventories fell to 222.4 million barrels in the week ending July 25 from 226.3 million barrels a week earlier and were substantially below year-ago inventories of 226.9 million barrels, in the first indication that Americans are taking to the road in great numbers for vacations.

Failures rise 12.4 percent in first quarter

NEW YORK (UPI) — Business failures, paced by a sharp increase in the service sector, rose 12.4 percent in the first quarter of this year to 15,394 from 13,690 in the first quarter of 1985, Dun & Bradstreet reported Tuesday.

The number of service-sector failures in the first quarter jumped 34.3 percent to 4,867 from 3,623 in the same period of last year. The number of service failures comprised 31.6 percent of all failures, the largest share of any industry sector.

"The gains in service failures reflect both the strong entrepreneurial activity in that sector in recent years, coupled with severe economic stress in the nation's agricultural and petroleum-producing regions," said Joseph W. Duncan, Dun & Bradstreet's chief statistician.

Failures in the agriculture, forestry and fishing sector declined by 7.1 percent to 657 from 707. The first-quarter decrease suggests that agriculture failures may be topping out, after increasing by 35.6 percent to 2,695 in 1985, the Dun & Bradstreet report said.

Hunt brothers file second suit against banks

DALLAS (AP) — Two companies controlled by three sons of the late H.L. Hunt have filed another suit against 23 major banks that they claim were trying to destroy the companies.

The latest suit, filed Tuesday in U.S. District Court, alleged the banks conspired to create a price-fixing monopoly in the offshore oil drilling business.

Morris-Holmquest accounting firm formed

By MELLA McEWEN

James I. "Jim" Morris, CPA, and Nan Holmquest, CPA, have formed MORRIS-HOLMQUEST, CERTIFIED PUBLIC ACCOUNTANTS.

Morris-Holmquest will offer complete accounting and business consultation services, including tax and financial planning. The new firm will office at Discovery Plaza, 800 N. Marienfeld, in Midland.

Morris, a native of Midland, earned his degree at Southwest Texas State University. In 1976, he joined the public accounting firm of Fox & Co., now Grant Thornton, and became tax manager in 1982. He is a member of the American Institute of Certified Public Accountants, and the Texas Society of Certified Public Accountants.

Holmquest is a graduate of the University of Texas, Permian Basin. Her experience includes over seven years of tax and accounting experience with Grant Thornton. She became a tax manager in 1984, and served as secretary-treasurer for an independent oil company and drilling company for two years. She is a member of the American Insitute of Certified Public Accountants and the Texas Society of Certified Public Accountants.

NATURE'S PANTRY has moved from its location in Oakridge Square to a new store in North Park Shopping Center next to Vista Savings and Video One.

According to Sandy Allen, assistant manager, the store offers health food items, frozen yogurt sweetened with honey, and diet and body building aids. She said response has been "real good," and that people seem to really like the new store. "We wanted a new location, better parking. It was kind of hard to find us in the corner at Oakridge Square," she said.

The owners, Pat Burns and Sandra Turner, also have two stores in Odessa, according to Allen.

SOHIO PETROLEUM CO., now known as Standard Oil Co., should be completing a reorganization that began the middle of July, according to company spokesman Richard Wheatley. The reorganization included laying off 550 employees, mostly in Houston, Anchorage and Dallas, with district offices feeling a minimal impact, Wheatley said.

"Like other energy companies, we have to lose people we don't want to lose. We're doing everything in our power to seek outplacement for these people," Wheatley said, including an ad in the Wall Street Journal that began "Our loss is your gain."

STE. GENEVIEVE VINEYARD, the Texas winery located on University Land outside of Fort Stockton, expects to ship about 80,000 cases of wine in 1986, and hopes to do even better in 1987, according to Monet Stalle, the vineyard's public relations director.

Other plans include distributing wine into 20 states, the Caribbean and the Far East, and a dedication of the winery during the fall, "with the emphasis on Fort Stockton and the community," Stalle said. "We think the winery has a positive effect on the community, especially with all the talk of declining oil and gas prices," she said.

Ste. Genevieve has also announced the selection of Tracy-Locke as its advertising agency of record.

SOUTHWESTERN BELL'S labor contract will expire Aug. 10, which means there is a possibility for a local strike as unions seek job security and management seeks pay restraints.

According to Stephen Seewoester, staff manager of public relations, the two sides are still negotiating. "A lot of times these things go down to the wire," he said. "We probably won't know anything until Aug. 9. They're working on one issue at a time."

In the event of a strike, Bell management would take over operations such as directory service, business operations and installation. What will be initially curtailed will be new installations, according to Seewoester. "We'll take orders, but we'll put off installations unless it's an emergency."

•••

The senior management of O.G. WILSON, headed by Michael L. Kryder, has announced the purchase of the O.G. Wilson retail division from Zale Corp.

Zale acquired the store, which began as a catalog showroom in 1926, in 1968 and expanded the operation, changing it into a specialty jewelry-oriented general merchandise chain in the early 1980s, with emphasis on regional mall locations.

The firm plans to continue its strong emphasis on low discount prices, quality name brands and customer service. The new company formed by the acquisition, "By Land and Sea Distributors, Inc." will be headquartered in Dallas.

The Blackhawk Division of Applied Power, Inc. has appointed MURPHY PAINT, 2308 W. Front, of Midland as an authorized distributor of the division's full line of collision damage repair and refinishing equipment for the body shop.

EXPLORATION HIGHLIGHTS

Mobil completes 781 barrel well

From Staff Reports

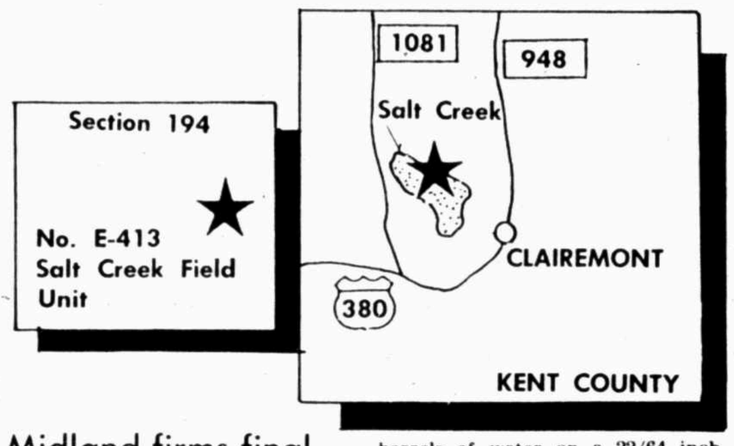

MOBIL PRODUCING TX & NM, INC., Houston, reports a prolific Canyon producer in the Saltcreek field of Kent County.

On potential test, the No. E-413 Saltcreek Field Unit pumped 781 barrels of 39.1 gravity crude, 468 Mcfd and 338 barrels of water from perforations 6,390 to 6,528 ft. The interval was acidized with 576 gallons of acid and fractured with 8,100 gallons of fluid and 800 lbs. sand.

The well was drilled to a total depth of 6,688 ft., where a seven inch liner was hung. The well was plugged back to 6,604 ft.

The well topped the Canyon at 6,295 ft. on ground elevation of 2,143 ft.

Location is 2,559 ft. from south and 147 ft. from east lines of Section 194, Block G, W&NW survey, eight miles west of Claremont.

Midland firms final wells in Conger field

Two Midland firms have completed producers in the Conger (Penn) field of Sterling County.

HNG OIL CO. potentialed the No. 5 McEntire "34" to flow 95 barrels of 45 gravity crude, 1,125 Mmcfd and 50 barrels of water on a 22/64 inch choke with a flowing tubing pressure of 540 psi. Production is from perforations at 7,362 to 8,136 ft.

The well is located in Section 34 of Block 23, H&TC survey.

WAGNER & BROWN tested the No. 1114 Grigsby to flow 91 barrels of 49.3 gravity crude, 325 Mcfd and six barrels of water on a 16/64 inch choke with a flowing tubing pressure of 620 psi. Production is from perforations at 7,796 to 8,204 ft.

Location is in Section 14 of Block 32, T-5-S, T&P survey.

Midland Farms gains two new producers

The Midland Farms field of Andrews County has gained two new producers as AMOCO PRODUCTION CO. and THE ANSCHUTZ CORP. continue activity in the area.

Amoco completed the No. 173 Midland Farms Deep Unit in the Midland Farms (Wolfcamp) field, pumping 61 barrels of 41.6 gravity crude, 1 Mcfd and 576 barrels of water from perforations 8,426 to 8,668 ft.

The site is in Section 8 of Block 42, T-1-N, G&MMB&A survey.

Anschutz finaled the No. 207 Fasken in the Midland Farms East (Upper Grayburg) field, pumping 17 barrels of 34 gravity crude and 2 Mcfd from perforations 4,889 to 4,911 ft.

Location is in Section 7, Block 41, T-1-N, G&MMB&A survey.

WILDCATS

TRC DISTRICT 8A

■ 1. TERRA STAKES WILDCAT IN KING COUNTY. A 6,100 ft. wildcat has been staked in King County on the S.B. Burnett Estate lease.

Terra Resources, Inc., Wichita Falls, will drill the No. 23-Y S.B. Burnett Estate, located 3,400 ft. from north and 2,590 ft. from west lines of Section 44, J.L. Parsons survey, 18 miles southeast of Guthrie.

■ 2. SUN PLANS KING PROSPECTOR. Sun Exploration & Production Co., Midland, has proposed drilling the 4,100-ft. No. 1-H Double Long Canyon Prospect in southeastern King County.

Tenneco earnings fall by half

HOUSTON (UPI) — Tenneco Inc. reported net earnings of $80 million for the second quarter of 1986, compared with earnings of $152 million for the same period last year.

Earnings per share were $.43, compared with $.95 per share for the same period of 1985. Sales and operating revenues for the quarter were $3.7 billion, the same as the second quarter of 1985.

Net income for the first six months of 1986 was $204 million on sales and operating revenues of $7.7 billion. That compared with net income of $98 million on sales and operating revenues of $7.4 billion for the first half of 1985. Earnings per share for the six months were $1.16, compared with $.49 for the comparable period of 1985.

The results reflect the effects of a previously reported change in oil and gas accounting methods, and the adoption of a new accounting standard for pension costs.

Tenneco Chairman James Ketelsen blamed dropping oil and gas prices for the lower earnings in the second quarter of 1986. The decline in prices started during the fourth quarter of 1985, he said.

"Although most of the company's other major divisions have increased operating income compared with the second quarter of 1985, these improvements were not sizeable enough to offset the adverse effects of significantly lower oil and gas prices on exploration and production operations," Ketelsen said.

Additionally, the company's board of directors declared a third quarter dividend of $.76 per share on the company's common stock.

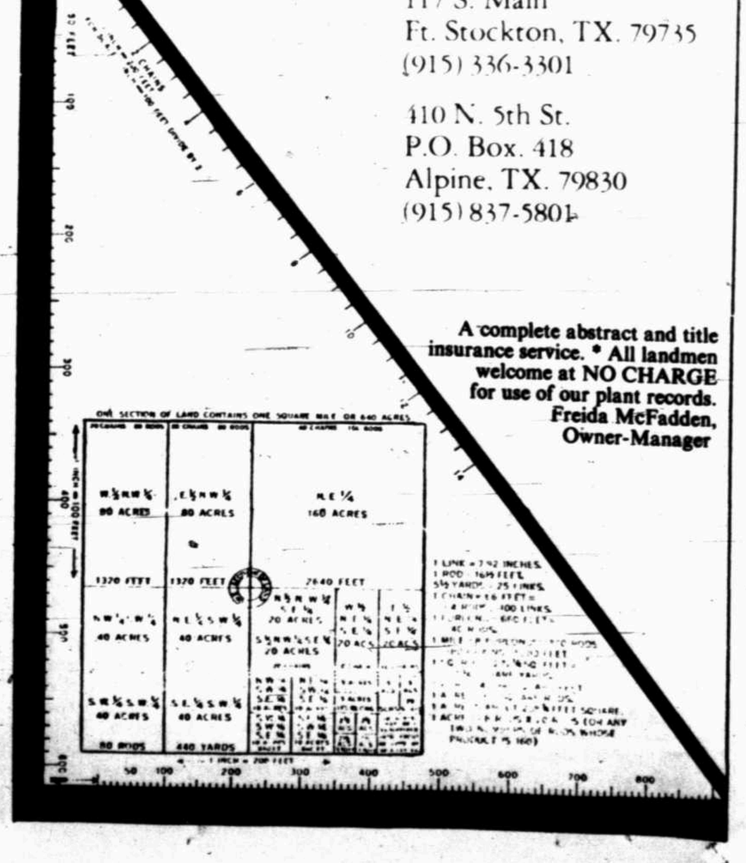

The dividend is payable on Sept. 9 to stockholders of record at the close of business on Aug. 8. This will be Tenneco's 156th consecutive quarterly common stock dividend payment.

Dividends also were declared on Tenneco's issues of preferred, second preferred, and preference stock, and will be payable to those who are holders of record at the close of business on Aug. 22. The preferred stock dividends will be paid on Oct. 1. The second preferred and preference stock dividends will be paid on Sept. 30.

ATTENTION GEOLOGISTS
Cambe Geological Services is pleased to announce the beginning of a new membership in its Midland Data Library. On August 1 you will be able to join Cambe's library in Midland for only $75.00 per month. For this small monthly fee you get complete access to Cambe's complete data base. You pull your own scout tickets, production figures (Dwight's), paleo records, etc., copy them and give a list of the logs you need (30 day limit) to our log department. We pull the logs, run the copy if necessary and check them out to you for 30 days. You must pick up all the data at our office. If you need to buy logs you get the special membership price of $6.00 per log.
In these difficult times Cambe is making it cheaper to operate. Our $6.00 logs and $75.00 membership dues are the lowest prices available anywhere. Since 1933 Cambe has provided the industry quality data at a reasonable cost. Call Marianne Lamkin or Rita Cone at 687-1053.

The Company Plane.

Some business people think traveling aboard a company plane is a luxury reserved for a fortunate few. Thousands of others know all it takes is a ticket on Southwest Airlines.

They think of Southwest as "The Company Plane" because we offer so many daily flights between so many cities at such convenient times they can come and go as they please. On their schedule.

And in many cities, like Chicago, Dallas and Houston, Southwest takes off and lands at convenient, close-in downtown airports. Thereby saving travelers valuable commuting time and congested airport hassles.

From the microwave...

Fresh Veggies You Can Sauce Up In a Minute!

Summer vegetables—fresh from the garden, roadside farm stand or supermarket—are a feast for the eyes as well as the taste buds. In a glorious array of colors, shapes and succulent flavors, the abundance of nature's best fresh vegetables are just waiting to be enjoyed. The perfect "recipe" for preparing tempting vegetables that stand out in any crowd calls for a microwave and easy as one-two-three pourable pasteurized process cheese spread, hot from the microwave.

Fresh vegetables especially are a natural for the microwave:

- Preparation is fast and easy.
- Vegetables retain more color, flavor and nutrients because they require little or no water for cooking. Water beads left on after washing can be enough for some vegetables.
- You can serve several different vegetables at the same meal because each can be cooked quickly in separate containers.
- The microwave is especially appropriate for cooking vegetables in the summer since it doesn't add extra heat to the kitchen and shortens clean-up time.

HOT CHEESY SAUCE IN A MINUTE

A super special instant cheese sauce calls for only a glass jar of pasteurized process cheese spread. To prepare, for best results start with cheese spread at room temperature. Remove lid and microwave jar on high 1 to 1½ minutes for an 8 oz. jar, rotating jar ½ turn every 30 seconds; 2 to 2½ minutes for a 16 oz. jar, stirring every 30 seconds. Remove jar from microwave, stir and pour hot sauce over vegetables.

Vegetables can star in their own right as the main attraction of meals or as an interesting side dish. Part of the fun is mixing and matching veggies to create new dishes like these:

Crunchy Vegetable Medley

- 1½ cups diagonally-cut celery slices
- 1 cup Chinese pea pods
- 1 cup cauliflowerets
- 1 tablespoon margarine
- 1 cup red or green pepper strips
- 1 cup mushroom slices
- 1 8-oz. jar pasteurized process cheese spread
- ½ cup cashews

Combine celery, pea pods, cauliflowerets and margarine in 1½ quart casserole. Cover. Microwave on High 3 to 4 minutes or until pea pods are crisp-tender. Add pepper and mushroom slices; gently. Microwave uncovered 2 minutes; drain. Place on serving plate. Microwave cheese spread according to label directions. Pour over vegetables; sprinkle with cashews.

4 to 6 servings.

Summer Green Beans

- 1 lb. fresh green beans
- ½ cup water
- 1 cup red or green pepper strips
- 1 8-oz. jar pasteurized process cheese spread
- ½ cup French fried onions

Combine beans and water in 1½ quart casserole. Cover. Microwave on High 10 minutes, stirring peppers, mix lightly. Microwave uncovered 4 minutes; drain. Place on serving plate. Microwave cheese spread according to label directions. Pour over vegetables; sprinkle with onions.

4 to 6 servings.

Vegetables can be cooked to fit your personal taste: al dente, tender or soft. Keep these hints in mind when microwaving fresh vegetables:

- Cooking time: Time depends on quantity, piece size and type of vegetable being prepared. Check your user's manual for specific instructions.
- Piece size: Cut vegetables in uniform pieces for more even cooking in the microwave. Large or thick pieces take longer to cook than small ones.
- Quantity: As the quantity or volume of food increases, so does cooking time.
- Arrange: Vegetables not uniform in shape should be arranged with the firm, meaty parts, such as stalks, to the outer edge and tender parts (asparagus buds and broccoli flowerets) to the center of the dish.
- Whole Unpeeled Vegetables: Pierce vegetables like potatoes or squash to let steam escape.
- Dishes: Do not use metal or dishes decorated with metal in the microwave. Most glass, plastic and some ceramic dishes are microwave safe. Some products, like cheese spread, come in their own glass jar that can be used in the microwave. Keep in mind, though, that heat may transfer from the heated food to the container, so remember to use a hot pad. Some foods will not need dishes if they're microwaved in their own skins or natural "container" (except corn on the cob and acorn squash).
- Liquid: Tomatoes, onions and baking potatoes have a high moisture content and require no additional water for cooking. Broccoli, cauliflower and carrots require up to ¼ cup water per 2 to 2½ cups vegetables; green beans require more—about ½ cup water per 2 cups of beans.
- Cover: To prevent drying, spattering and promote even heating, cover vegetables with a glass or ceramic lid or use vented plastic wrap.
- Stir: By stirring from the outer edge of the dish toward the center, the heat will be more uniform. Stir vegetables once or twice during cooking time.
- Salt: Sprinkling salt directly on vegetables causes brown "freckles." For best results, salt vegetables after cooking or dissolve salt in a small amount of cooking liquid before adding vegetables.
- Standing Time: After removing vegetables from the microwave, let dish stand covered for several minutes to equalize the temperature.
- Serve: Check to make sure dish isn't hot to the touch. Drain any excess liquid from vegetables before topping them with hot pasteurized process cheese spread.

Cauliflower called cook's 'secret weapon'

By JIM WOOD
Hearst News Service

Every cook needs a secret weapon. Mine is cauliflower. To me, cauliflower is like a good dance partner who can follow every step and add a few special flourishes of her own.

One of my favorite recipes is a watercress puree in Julia Child's "Mastering the Art of French Cooking." It has a beautiful green hue, a lovely texture and a sharp taste that is perfect with broiled meats or roasts. Despite its name and color, its main ingredient is cauliflower.

To make it, core and cut the leaves from one head of cauliflower, separate the flowerets, steam them and put them in a food processor bowl. Steam 2 bunches of watercress, from which the stems have been removed, for 3 minutes. Add to the cauliflower in the bowl. Process the vegetables until smooth and place them in a baking dish.

Bring 2 cups of whole milk to a boil. Meanwhile, melt 3 tablespoons of butter in a saucepan over low heat, stir in 5 tablespoons of flour and cook briefly. When the milk boils, pour it into the saucepan with the butter and flour and stir until the mixture is thick and smooth. Pour it into the baking dish with the cauliflower-watercress mixture and blend thoroughly.

Spread ½ cup of grated Swiss cheese over the surface and put the baking dish in a 375 F oven until the entire mixture is reheated and the cheese has melted, about 15 minutes.

CAULIFLOWER ALSO is delicious sauteed with other vegetables. Steam the cauliflower as above, cutting the flowerets into bite-size pieces. Cover the bottom of a large frying pan with olive oil and, over medium heat, cook 2 peeled cloves of garlic until they begin to brown. Remove the garlic and add the cauliflower along with other vegetables such as red peppers, chopped onions, broccoli flowerets, blanched green beans or peas. The number and variety is up to you. Stir fry for about 5 minutes, remove and serve the dish with crusty Italian bread.

Choosing good cauliflower in the market is not as easy as it should be. To keep the heads from drying out, they ordinarily are sold wrapped in cellophane, which means that you can't examine the cauliflower as carefully as you might like. Try to buy heads that are firm and compact. They should be a bright white, without brown spots, and the green leaves should be crisp.

Here are recipes from "Eat Your Vegetables," published by Times Books:

CAULIFLOWER

CAULIFLOWER VICHYSSOISE

This variation on a classic recipe uses cauliflower instead of potatoes for a flavorful soup that is very low in calories.

1 bunch leeks (about 4 medium)
3 tablespoons butter or margarine
1 medium-sized onion, finely chopped
3 cups chicken broth or bouillon (reconstituted from cubes or granules)
1 medium-sized head cauliflower, trimmed and cut into flowerets
¼ teaspoon salt (or to taste)
⅛ teaspoon white or black pepper, preferably freshly ground
1 cup whole, low fat or skim milk
1 can (13 ounces) evaporated regular or skim milk
Chopped fresh chives or parsley

Clean the leeks carefully to remove any sand inside them. (To do this, cut off and discard the root and all the green except for about 1 inch. Then cut the leeks in half lengthwise and separate the "layers." Rinse the layers well under cold running water; then drain the leeks on paper towels.) Chop the cleaned leeks finely. This yields about 2 cups; the exact amount is not critical.

Melt the butter in a large saucepan over medium-high heat and add the leeks and onion. Cook until they are tender but not browned, about 8 to 10 minutes, stirring often. If the leeks are browning too quickly, add a little water to the saucepan.

When the leeks and onion are tender, add the chicken broth, cauliflower, salt and pepper to the saucepan. Bring the mixture to a boil, lower the heat and simmer, covered, for about 15 to 20 minutes, or until the cauliflower is very tender. Remove the saucepan from the heat and puree the vegetables and broth in a blender, food processor or food mill (in batches, if necessary).

Return the puree to the saucepan and stir in the milk and evaporated milk. Stir the soup over a medium heat just until it simmers. Cool, cover and refrigerate the soup until it is chilled. If desired, season it with additional pepper. Stir the soup before serving. Serve it cold, with chopped chives sprinkled on top. This soup is also quite tasty when served hot. Makes about 6 servings.

STEAMED CAULIFLOWER WITH PIMIENTO SAUCE

1 large head cauliflower, trimmed and separated into large flowerets (about 6 to 7 cups)
2 tablespoons butter or margarine
2 tablespoons chopped red onion
2 tablespoons all-purpose enriched or unbleached white flour
⅓ cup chopped canned pimiento, well-drained
1 large tomato, peeled, seeded and coarsely chopped
¾ cup whole or low-fat milk
¼ cup light cream
½ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon white pepper, preferably freshly ground
Scant ⅛ teaspoon cayenne pepper
1 tablespoon finely chopped fresh chives for garnish (optional)

Put about 1 inch of water into a large saucepan fitted with a steamer basket and bring to a boil over medium-high heat. Add the cauliflower flowerets to the basket. Cover the pan, lower the heat slightly and steam the cauliflower for 7 to 10 minutes or until it is almost tender.

Meanwhile, melt the butter in a medium-sized saucepan over medium-high heat. Add the onion and cook, stirring occasionally, for 5 or 6 minutes or until the onion is tender but not browned. Add the flour and continue cooking, stirring constantly for 2 minutes longer.

Transfer the cooked onion mixture to a blender. Add the pimiento, tomato and milk to the blender. Blend on medium speed for 1 to 1½ minutes, or until the mixture is completely smooth. Transfer the mixture to a clean saucepan. Add all of the remaining ingredients, except the chives, and bring to a boil, stirring, over medium-high heat. Boil the sauce for 1 to 1½ minutes, or until it is thickened and smooth. Then remove the sauce from the heat.

Arrange the cauliflower in a serving bowl and top with the pimiento sauce. Then top the sauce with a sprinkling of chopped chives, if desired. Makes 5 to 7 servings.

More restaurants offering low-calorie spa cuisine

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

LOS ANGELES — David Baker is reforming his wicked eating habits. The 33-year-old mayor of Irvine, Calif., is 6 feet, 9 inches tall and weighs 306 pounds. "If you are what you eat," he said, "I would be a Hostess Twinkie."

As Baker attempts to lose weight he will find the road to health paved with good intentions now that more restaurants — and even at least one luxury liner — are recognizing the trend toward a leaner lifestyle.

Bowing to consumer demands and nudging from the American Heart Association, they are offering menus and instruction in low-fat, low-cholesterol dishes, a food style that has been labeled spa cuisine after the health spas that have long featured such fare. (The Four Seasons restaurant in New York has copyrighted the term "spa cuisine" and is trying to claim it exclusively, but others continue to use it.)

It is a healthy haute cuisine that leaves bean sprouts and tofu behind in favor of gourmet versions of poultry, fish, beef and fresh vegetables and fruits.

Light sauces and herbs are used to add flavor. Yogurt and non-fat milk are often substituted for cream, and reduced vegetable or chicken stocks take the place of highly saturated oils. Chefs are even experimenting with low-fat and low-cholesterol desserts that satisfy a craving for rich sweets. Unlike the diminutive portions of nouvelle cuisine that can leave one longing for a Big Mac, spa meals are ample as well as attractive.

BUT THERE IS an element of nouvelle cuisine in spa food, which is a hybrid derived from French chef Michel Guerard's inventive cuisine minceur (slimming cuisine), the fresh ingredients of California cuisine and the kinds of low-calorie foods served at the West's exclusive health spas.

It used to be that eating out meant the Big Splurge: creamed soups, big steaks, vegetables drowned in sauce, baked potatoes smothered in butter and sour cream and a nice big piece of cheesecake to finish the meal.

A growing interest in health and fitness and an increase in eating out is partly responsible for the shift to lighter meals. (The average person will eat out 3.7 times a week this year, as compared to 3.2 times last year, according to a survey done by Consumer Reports on Eating Share Trends.) Chefs and restaurateurs are finding that many spa meals are consumed by business people and those on restricted diets.

Some restaurants are going one step further and offering nothing but spa food, from dinner rolls to dessert.

Why would a restaurant offer nothing but spa cuisine? Mark Warwick and wife Kim Hoffman, the "creative designers" of 400 North Canon, in Beverly Hills, Calif., grew tired of the rich foods they faced when hectic work schedules forced them to eat out often — and late. (In addition to developing the restaurant, Warwick and Hoffman own a custom-furniture business and are pursuing acting careers.) When a client asked them to come up with a concept for his new restaurant, the two settled on gourmet spa cuisine.

"We wanted to have sauces, and make the food visually and sensually appealing," Hoffman said. "The key to the whole thing is you don't come away from here feeling you've sacrificed anything."

SAID ONE FREQUENT patron, Beverly Hills entertainment lawyer Melanie Cook, 33: "I like to feel alert all the time, and I don't like to go to lunch and have a big meal and drinks on a weekday. The days of heavy lunches and a lot of alcohol just don't happen with people in my business."

Warwick, Hoffman and head chef Nicholas Klontz decided on menu items together, using little oil, no butter, no salt and just "a touch" of half and half in one recipe. Cheese is added to a few dishes. The result: dishes such as a Cajun chicken sandwich with sweet and sour cucumbers, quesadilla with chicken and pineapple salsa and dinner entrees such as rack of lamb with tomato and orange sauce and Mexican peppers with black beans. Desserts include homemade ice cream with no added sugar and light fruit mousse cakes. Soon the restaurant will offer calorie, carbohydrate, fat and cholesterol counts on all dishes for those who request them.

Whether spa cuisine is simply a flash in the saute pan or a trend with staying power is an issue for debate.

"Spa cuisine is going to be more than a trend," said much-celebrated Los Angeles chef Joachim Splichal, who recently left the tony Beverly Hills restaurant Max au Triangle due to "creative differences." The Beverly Hills Spa Cuisine he served there was a 600-calorie, three-course prix-fixe menu that debuted when the restaurant did last year. Dishes included wild rice salad with asparagus and a red bell pepper dressing, steamed sausage of chicken with asparagus and crayfish with scallions, chives and shallots.

AND ALTHOUGH HE is no longer with the restaurant, his faith in the future of spa cuisine remains unshaken. "In the year 2000 spa cuisine is going to be so big. Even McDonald's is going to come up with something."

Added Mark Warwick of 400 North Canon restaurant, "People are moving toward a preventive lifestyle. (Spa cuisine) is not a fad."

At least one chef has his doubts about the future of spa cuisine. Ken Frank, owner and chef of La Toque, a Los Angeles restaurant that serves pricey French cuisine, tried some spa dishes on the menu last August but abandoned them four months later.

Spa cuisine connoisseurs are finding that not all of the food is created equal; some restaurants that claim to do low-fat cooking sneak in fatty ingredients.

Despite some restaurants' shortcomings, there is no ignoring the fact that more are offering lighter meals. Even fast-food establishments such as Wendy's and Jack-in-the-Box are selling salads.

THE AMERICAN HEART Association's program, "Dine to Your Heart's Content," was designed to help restaurants create dishes lower in fat and cholesterol. Restaurant owners sign a contract with the association stating they will offer at least four approved entrees on lunch and dinner menus and at least two on breakfast menus. Among the guidelines: meat, seafood and poultry cannot contain more than 15 percent fat; low-fat cheeses must be used and no animal fats are allowed in sauces or gravies. A heart next to a dish on the menu signifies it's lower in fat and cholesterol.

According to Denise Rector, a nutritionist and community program specialist with the American Heart Association, the seven-year-old program "coincided with a growing consumer interest in healthy eating."

Vegetablewiches tempt appetites

Associated Press

When it's too hot to cook — and almost too hot to eat — prepare a cool main-dish salad to tempt wilted appetites. Little French bread loaves double as serving bowls as well as bread.

If you would like to tote the salad sandwiches to the park, prepare the salad mixture, place in a tightly closed container and chill. Carry the spread, bread, lettuce and the dressing in separate containers. Then pack all the ingredients in an insulated cooler. Do the final assembling at the picnic site.

SALAMI-CHEESE VEGETABLEWICHES

1¼ cups sliced cauliflower flowerets
½ cup frozen cut green beans
1 cup shredded cheddar or Monterey Jack cheese (4 ounces)
4 ounces salami, cut up
1 medium green pepper, cut into julienne strips
⅔ cup shredded carrot
⅓ cup chopped dill pickle
¼ cup sliced green onion
4 to 6 individual French bread loaves
2 tablespoons butter or margarine, softened
2 tablespoons mayonnaise or salad dressing
1 teaspoon prepared mustard
Leaf lettuce
1 medium tomato, sliced
⅓ cup bottled creamy Italian salad dressing

Cook cauliflower and green beans, covered, in small amount of boiling salted water 3 to 5 minutes or until crisp-tender. Drain; chill. Combine cheese, salami, cauliflower, beans, green pepper, carrot, pickle and onion; toss to mix well. Cut a ¼-inch slice off the top of each roll.

Remove soft bread in center of bottom half of each roll, leaving a ¼-inch shell (refrigerate bread crumbs for another use). Combine butter, mayonnaise and mustard; spread in bread shells. Line shells with lettuce; spoon vegetable mixture into shells. Halve tomato slices; place atop filling. Drizzle dressing over; replace bread tops.

Makes 4 to 6 sandwiches.

Beans teamed with cinnamon

Associated Press

HARVEST CINNAMON BEANS

¼ cup chopped onion
¼ teaspoon ground cinnamon
1 tablespoon butter or margarine
1½ pounds fresh green beans, cut into 1-inch pieces, or two 10-ounce packages frozen cut green beans, thawed
½ cup chicken broth
⅛ teaspoon salt
Dash pepper
2 tablespoons tomato paste

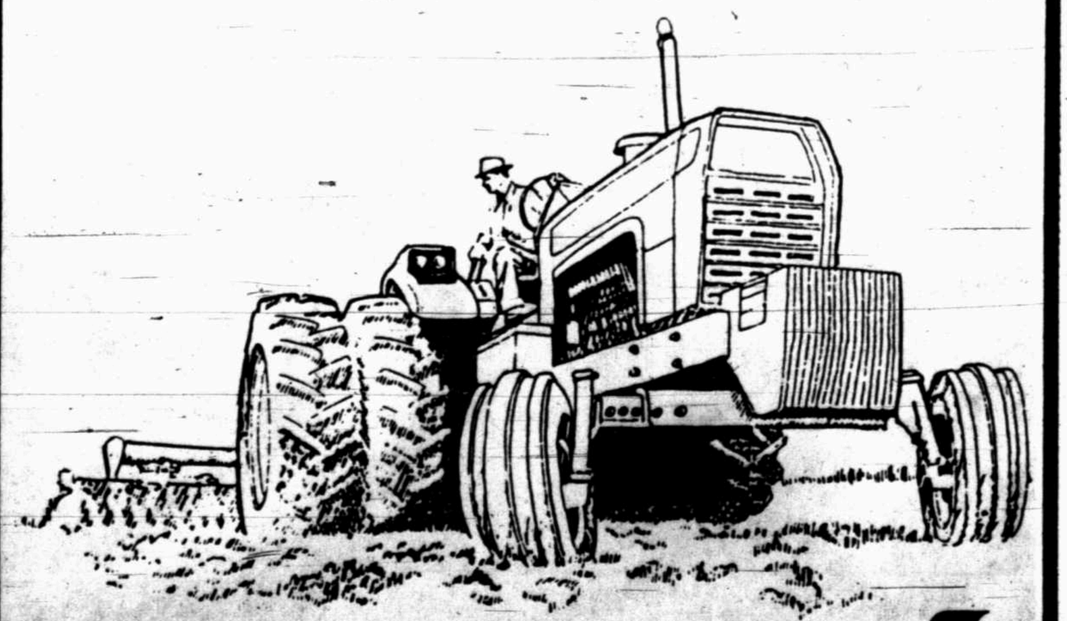

In a medium saucepan or 10-inch skillet cook onion and cinnamon in butter until onion is tender but not brown. Add green beans, broth, salt and pepper. Bring to boiling; reduce heat. Cook, covered, about 20 minutes or until beans are tender. Gently stir in tomato paste. Serve at once. Makes 6 servings.

Experts' suggestions can help beat dieters' blues

By ANTONIA ALLEGRA
Copley News Service

Tired of bland diets? Mental juggling of tasteless diet foods on one hand and the image of your svelte self in swim wear on the other hand can be frustrating. Low-calorie foods lacking flavor can be enough to make you bid goodbye to good intentions, and hello to dieter's discouragement.

To help overcome such problems, two nutrition specialists share their ideas on ways to keep the taste buds tingling as you shed weight. A high-taste, low-calorie recipe collection follows their suggestions.

Guy Qvistgaard, coordinator of the Positive Choice weight control program at Kaiser Permanente Hospital, knows the pitfalls of dieting. He was overweight earlier in his life and had become accustomed to a high-fat, high-sodium diet.

Through an education process similar to the one he now shares with patients, he retrained his sense of taste. "It took one to one and a half months," he says — using these methods.

■ To substitute for the flavor of salt in foods, use white pepper, garlic powder (not garlic salt), onion powder or onion flakes to season dishes.

■ Lemon and lime juice do wonders to meats, fish and vegetables for bringing up flavor.

■ Stay away from combination "shake-ons" such as lemon pepper. They usually include a hefty amount of salt.

■ ALWAYS THINK, "How can I make this food taste great?" and remember that there are no good or bad foods. Anything is acceptable as long as it is planned.

■ Don't forget simple additions such as Tabasco sauce, chili powder and tomato juice as flavor enhancers for foods.

■ Flavor bottled water by adding the rind of citrus fruit.

■ Definitely incorporate fresh and dried herbs and spices, using three to four times the volume of fresh herbs compared with dry. Qvistgaard says he particularly enjoys adding dill (to fish, chicken, mild-flavored meats); cilantro (also known as fresh coriander and Chinese parsley, good with barbecued meats, chicken, eggs); rosemary (with lamb or beef); mint (with salads), as well as basil, sorrel and marjoram (all strong herbs, so use sparingly with fish, chicken, salads).

■ Plan to eat three to five times a day to maintain proper sugar level.

MARY DONKERSLOOT, a registered dietitian, directs Personal Nutrition Management, a company that assists in designing the right food for a healthy everyday diet. She says she believes that "when someone has decided to make changes in his or her diet, the nutrition plan should include food that looks great, tastes great, is good and healthy and is easily implemented in daily life." Some of her ideas for zapping food with flavor are:

■ Consider sprinkling brown sugar and raisins on oatmeal for breakfast. Even though the sugar and raisins add a few calories, the oatmeal is much preferred to a possible bacon and eggs meal.

■ In place of high-calorie hollandaise, beat low-fat mayonnaise with a bit of lemon juice and black pepper.

■ Substitute salsa or yogurt for sour cream on baked potatoes.

■ For tuna salad, add some diced vegetables, plus herbs and spices to canned tuna in place of mayonnaise and pickle relish.

■ Use large amounts of onions. And it is not necessary to add oil to the saute pan when cooking onions. Start them over medium-high heat, then turn heat to medium, "giving onions time to cook and release some of their liquid."

The following are low-calorie recipes that give your body — and your taste buds — a break.

WATERFRONT TUNA SALAD

7 medium fresh plums
2 cans (7 ozs. each) tuna, drained, flaked
1 cup sour cream
2 tbsps. lemon juice
1 lb. fresh green beans
1 head Salad Bowl (frilly) lettuce
2 hard-boiled eggs, sliced
2 medium potatoes, cooked, peeled, sliced
1 basket cherry tomatoes
Mustard Dressing (recipe follows)

Cut plums into wedges. Combine about half the wedges with tuna, sour cream and lemon juice. Steam green beans in small amount of water, about eight to 10 minutes or until tender-crisp. Drain.

Line individual salad bowls with outer lettuce leaves. Shred remaining lettuce to measure 2 quarts. Pile into lettuce-lined bowls. Scoop tuna mixture into center and surround with beans, eggs, potatoes, cherry tomatoes and remaining plum wedges. Garnish with lemon slices and parsley as desired. Serve with dressing.

Makes 4 servings.

Mustard Dressing: Combine one-third cup white vinegar, ¼ cup sugar, 1 tablespoon Dijon-style mustard, 1 large clove garlic, ¼ teaspoon salt and ½ cup vegetable oil in blender. Whirl until smooth and thick. Makes 1 cup dressing.

CNS Graphic

FISH CREOLE

2 skinless, boneless fish fillets (about 3 lbs. striped bass or red snapper)
2 tbsps., plus 1 tsp. olive or corn oil
1½ cups finely chopped onion
2 tsps. finely chopped garlic
1 cup chopped celery, optional
2 cups chopped or sliced green pepper
2 cups cored, peeled tomato cut into 1-inch cubes
1 bay leaf
2 sprigs fresh thyme, or ½ tsp. dried
Freshly ground black pepper to taste
1 tbsp. chopped fresh tarragon, optional

Preheat oven to 425 F. Cut each fillet into three pieces of more or less equal size. Heat 2 tablespoons oil in skillet and add onion. Cook until wilted and add garlic. Cook briefly and add celery, if desired. Cook about 2 minutes, shaking and stirring skillet.

Add green pepper. Cook, shaking and stirring skillet, about 5 minutes. Add tomato, bay leaf and thyme. Cook about 10 minutes.

Rub 1 teaspoon oil over inside of a baking dish large enough to hold fish in one layer. Arrange fish pieces in dish. Sprinkle fish with pepper. Spoon creole sauce over all. Cover closely with a round of aluminum foil, pressing it down over fish. Place in oven and bake 20 minutes. Uncover and bake 10 minutes longer. Serve sprinkled with finely chopped tarragon, if desired.

Makes 6 servings.

STUFFED MUSHROOMS

5 large mushrooms
⅓ cup spinach, cooked and drained
2 Wasa Crisp rye crackers, crushed
1 tbsp. onion, minced
2 tbsps. water
¼ tsp. sage
Dash of butter-flavored salt (optional)

Remove mushroom stems. Place mushroom caps in shallow baking dish. Chop stems. Combine stems with all other ingredients to make stuffing. Fill mushroom caps. Bake in 350 F oven 15 to 20 minutes.

Makes 1 serving, 95 calories.

EAST INDIAN CARROT CASSEROLE

¼ cup vegetable stock
¼ tsp. salt
½ tsp. pure crystalline fructose
1 tsp. freshly grated ginger root or ½ tsp. ground ginger
6 medium carrots, grated (3 cups grated carrots)
¼ cup finely chopped chives or green onion tops
½ cup raisins
3 cups low-fat cottage cheese

Heat vegetable stock in a skillet. Add salt, fructose, curry powder and grated ginger and mix thoroughly. Add grated carrots, chopped chives and raisins and cook, stirring constantly, until crisp-tender, about 10 minutes. Add cottage cheese, mix thoroughly and heat just to serving temperature. Do not bring to a boil.

Makes 6 servings.

— Recipe from "Jeanne Jones' Food Lover's Diet," by Jeanne Jones.

HEAVENLY FRESH FRUIT PIE

4 extra-large egg whites (¾ cups), room temperature
¼ tsp. cream of tartar
1½ tsps. pure vanilla extract
¾ cup pureed ripe banana (skin practically black — it will be easier to mash and taste sweeter)
2 pints ripe strawberries, washed, then sliced
2 tbsps. kirsch or framboise liqueur
1 cup non-fat milk, whipped

Using electric mixer (or whisk), beat egg whites until foamy, then add cream of tartar. Beat at high speed. When soft peaks form, add vanilla and pureed banana gradually. Continue beating until whites are shiny and form stiff peaks that do not slide in bowl.

Spray 10-inch glass pie plate with non-stick spray. Place spoonfuls of stiffly beaten egg white mixture in pie plate and form shell with back of spoon. Bake in preheated 225 F oven one and one-half hours. Turn off heat, leave oven door partially ajar, and let shell dry in oven several hours. (This meringue will not be as crisp as one made with sugar, so don't compare taste or texture.)

While shell is baking, make fruit filling. Sprinkle sliced berries with liqueur of your choice and let marinate several hours to develop flavor. To assemble pie, fill shell with fruit just before serving, and top with whipped non-fat milk.

Variations: Peaches may be substituted for strawberries, in which case, use 4 cups sliced peaches, 1 teaspoon almond extract and 2 tablespoons apricot liqueur.

Makes 8 to 10 servings, 57 calories per servings.

— Recipe from "Deliciously Low," by Harriet Roth.

SAUERKRAUT SALAD

2¼ cups drained sauerkraut
2 small Golden Delicious apples, cored, pared and shredded
¾ cup diced red onion
1 tbsp., plus 1 tsp. vegetable oil
Dash pepper, or to taste

Rinse sauerkraut several times in cold water and drain. In bowl combine all ingredients; cover and refrigerate for at least two hours. Toss before serving.

Makes 4 servings, 104 calories per serving.

FRUITED CHICKEN SALAD

½ cup uncooked small pasta shells
6 ozs. cooked chicken, diced (1½ cups)
¼ medium avocado (3 per lb.), diced
1 green onion, sliced
2 tbsps. fresh parsley, chopped
Mustard-Poppy Seed Dressing:
3 tbsps. rice vinegar
1 tbsp. honey
2 tsps. vegetable oil
⅛ tsp. dry mustard
2 medium peaches (3 per lb.), peeled, sliced, or two-thirds cup peach slices canned in extra-light syrup, drained
5 red seedless grapes, cut in half
½ head iceberg lettuce, shredded
⅛ tsp. salt
1 tsp. grated onion
1 tsp. poppy seeds

Prepare Mustard Poppy Seed Dressing; refrigerate until served. Cook pasta shells in lightly salted boiling water according to package directions until al dente or just tender to the bite, five to seven minutes. Drain pasta; rinse with cold water to cool and stop cooking. Pour cooked pasta shells into large bowl. Add chicken, avocado, green onion, parsley, peaches and grapes. Pour dressing over salad; stir gently. Refrigerate until ready to serve, up to one hour. Arrange one-fourth of lettuce on each with about 1 cup salad mixture. Serve immediately.

Makes 4 servings.

To make Mustard-Poppy-Seed Dressing: In small container with tight-fitting lid, combine all ingredients except poppy seeds. Cover tightly; shake vigorously 15 seconds. Add poppy seeds; cover and shake again. Refrigerate until served, up to three days. Shake before using.

Makes about one-fourth cup. One serving equals 190 calories and 1 tablespoon dressing equals 35 calories.

Summer produce makes nutritious, cool drinks

By DIANE SAVAGE
Copley News Service

During the hot summer months, we need more liquid — especially when we are active. Our bodies are constantly losing water, and to replace that loss, the absolute minimum adult requirement is one quart of water per day. (Two quarts is a safer standard.)

You may object that you don't drink anywhere near two quarts of water in a day, and that you're perfectly healthy. While you don't drink two quarts of plain water, you do drink tea, juices, milk and other liquids. And don't forget that many vegetarian foods are high in liquids (most fruits and vegetables are about 85 percent water).

To help ensure that you enjoy taking your liquids, why not invest in a juicer? There's nothing like really fresh orange or carrot juice for great flavor, and it's far more nutritious than the store-bought kind.

For afternoon refreshment, try an icy glass of herbal tea. Also called tisanes, these are generally prepared by adding ¼ to ½ teaspoon dried leaves or flowers to six ounces of boiling water. Steep for five minutes, strain and chill.

While an occasional soft drink here and there won't do any harm, try not to make it a regular habit. Colas contain a good deal of caffeine and sugar — they're high in calories and low in nutrition. If your children tend to overdo it with soft drinks, try weaning them away toward more healthful homemade beverages like fresh juices or blended fruit smoothies.

Fancy ice cubes are an easy way to make summer beverages look special, and kids love them. Fill the ice cube tray with water and place a strawberry, cherry or chunk of pineapple in each section. Or simply fill the tray with orange juice or lemonade and freeze. But watch that these don't get eaten before you're ready to use them.

HONEY-MINT TEA

½ cup water
5 tablespoons honey
4 tablespoons chopped fresh mint
¼ teaspoon ground or 5 whole allspice
½ cup lemon juice
1 cup orange juice
4 cups boiling water

In a saucepan, boil ½ cup water and honey for five minutes. Stir in int and allspice.

Remove from heat and let steep 10 minutes. Strain, then add remaining ingredients. Serve hot or iced.

Serves 6.

CANTALOUPE NECTAR

3 medium-size, ripe cantaloupes (about 5 and ½ pounds)
1½ cups cold water
¼ cup honey
2 tablespoons lemon juice
12 large ice cubes
Fresh mint leaves (for garnish)

Peel cantaloupes and remove seeds. Cut fruit into chunks.

Place 2 to cups of fruit chunks in blender and puree. Add water as necessary to thin, and repeat until all fruit is pureed.

Mix in honey and lemon juice, stirring well until all of the honey is dissolved. Place juice and ice cubes in large container, stir, and refrigerate about ½ hour before serving. Garnish individual glasses with fresh mint leaves.

Note: For a thinner nectar, add more water until desired consistency is reached.

Serves 6 to 8.

Vegetable combination sauces give sandwiches variety

Associated Press

When cooking time is short, stack supper in your favor. Layer toasted English muffin halves, mustard and sliced ham; then top off the stacks with the easiest sauce — frozen broccoli in cheese sauce.

Another time, replace the ham with thinly sliced roast beef, chicken or turkey.

Try other vegetable and sauce combinations, too. Cut asparagus spears in butter sauce, green beans in cream sauce, or one of the vegetable combinations in sauce.

HAM AND BROCCOLI STACKS

One 10-ounce package frozen broccoli in cheese sauce
2 English muffins, split and toasted
Dijon-style mustard
8 thin slices fully cooked ham

Prepare broccoli according to package directions.

Meanwhile, spread toasted muffins with mustard. Place muffin halves on 2 individual plates. Place 2 slices of ham on each muffin half. Spoon broccoli-cheese mixture over ham.

Makes 2 main-dish servings.

WHAT'S COOKING

Fitness-related career fits in with fast food

By LINDA ANDERSON
Lifestyle Writer

Genie McCartney is a working mother with a husband, two sons and no time to cook.

Her job as marketing director of Midland Metro YMCAs means she is responsible for "all the communications that go out in the community from the YMCA — TV commercials, newspaper ads, report the news, stories, features, brochures — anything in print; really, any communication from all the Ys in Midland."

Currently Midland has four YMCAs — Central, Alamo, Community Services and Washington — with the new Northeast scheduled to open this year.

"I've been with the Y for nearly 10 years, and I've been in this job for nearly six years," Mrs. McCartney said.

Like most working mothers, Mrs. McCartney prefers quick meals. She started working before her son Brent was born in 1972, "then I started full-time with the Y when he went into kindergarten." He will begin his freshman year in high school this year.

That's why the following recipe is so popular with her family. "I'd recommend this recipe-to working mothers, or really dads too, because it's so easy — there's no cooking involved," and to "people who want to have more leisure time — it takes about 10 minutes" to prepare.

"If you're on the go and don't have a lot of time but you do have a lot of responsibilities, it's real good," Mrs. McCartney said. "It's also good if you have to take something for pot luck."

Ron Jaap/Reporter-Telegram

Genie McCartney

The recipe evolved from a women's swimming class that Mrs. McCartney used to teach. "After class we'd be starving." Class members began by bringing iced tea to share after class, and then began bringing small sandwiches or salads. "That's the way that recipe originated ... I think a lot of recipes originate that way."

SUMMER TIME FUN TIME EAT ON THE RUN TIME OR STAY COOL AROUND THE POOL AVOCADO AND COTTAGE CHEESE SALAD

1 large carton cottage cheese
½ small onion, chopped
6 small avocados, cut in chunks
2 tablespoons celery salt
½ cup mayonnaise
1 small carton sour cream
1 tomato per serving
1 teaspoon paprika

Combine ingredients (except tomato and paparika) in bowl and mix lightly. Put on tomato slices or stuff in tomato. Serve on lettuce leaf and sprinkle with paprika.

Dieters' version:

Substitute low-calorie cottage cheese and light mayonnaise. Use 2 avocados and ½ carton sour cream to more low-calorie cottage cheese.

Americans have corny summers

By MAUREEN CLANCY
Copley News Service

Americans munch, chomp, champ and gnaw their way through about 3 billion ears of corn a year.

But there's a lot more to corn than a slippery cob dripping with butter and dusted with salt at a summer cookout.

Corn-off-the-cob can also add sweet, summery appeal to the menu.

In fact, Kyd Brenner of the Corn Refiners Association in Washington, D.C., estimates that about 9 billion ears (or 2¼ million tons) are stripped of their kernels each year for canned and frozen food sales.

Soups and chowders benefit from corn's pleasant crunch and its sweet milky essence. Corn adds both color and contrasting textures to simple casseroles, stews and salads.

Fresh corn can be worked into a savory batter to make muffins, cornsticks, scones or imaginative, basil-flecked corn flapjacks (recipe follows).

Low-calorie, versatile corn is an especially important ingredient for folks watching their weight or salt intake. There are only about 75 calories in a medium-size ear of corn. The vegetable is also a good source of carbohydrates, is low in sodium, and contains potassium, vitamins A and C, as well as some of the B vitamins.

The corn kernel consists of an outer hull (mostly roughage) over a layer of starch. At the center is the nutritious, protein-rich germ. Nutritionists stress the importance of chomping close to the cob to get this nutritious germ, and suggest that it may be lacking in some processed frozen products.

The protein in corn is shy of the two essential amino acids lysine and tryptophan. However, when corn is combined with a legume or with small amounts of animal protein, the result is a protein-rich, nutritious meal. This fact probably accounts for the creation and subsequent popularity of succotash.

The first step toward preparing appealing corn dishes is selecting the ears of corn at the market.

Never buy corn that is preshucked. Though you may save time and avoid mess, you will lose a significant amount of flavor.

Use corn the same day it is purchased. As each hour goes by, the sugar content converts to starch and the natural sweetness is diminished. If you must store ears of corn, keep them in their unwashed husks until ready to cook. Seal in a plastic bag and refrigerate.

Select ears that have bright green, soft, fresh husks that tightly and completely surround the kernels. Reject corn that has dry, wet, yellowed, wilted or otherwise damaged husks.

Check kernels. Reject any ears with dented kernels, the sign that they have lost moisture and will taste tough. Corn that is too young will have small kernels, set far apart from each other.

Versatile summer squash softer than its wintery counterpart

By DESIREE VIVEA
Copley News Service

Pattypan, yellow crookneck, and the ubiquitous zucchini are three varieties of abundant summer squash that keep cooks busy devising new recipes all during peak season (April through August).

The difference between summer and winter squash is that the winter varieties are harvested when fully mature. They have tough, hard shells and require extended cooking time. The shells and seeds are not eaten.

Summer squash, on the other hand, is harvested when still young and tender, so avoid larger squash when shopping. Zucchini should be no more than 6 to 8 inches long (8 to 10 inches for crookneck), and pattypan should be no more than 3 to 4 inches in diameter. Seeds are immature, tender and perfectly edible. So is the skin.

FAMILY ZUCCHINI

1½ pounds zucchini
¼ cup butter or margarine
1 and ½ cups shredded mild cheddar cheese
2 eggs, lightly beaten
1 (4-ounce) can mushroom stems and pieces, drained
1 tablespoon minced pimiento
¼ teaspoon each onion salt and pepper
1 (3-ounce) can french-fried onion rings

Oven Setting: HIGH (10 percent power); MEDIUM-HIGH (70 percent power)

Wash zucchini, trim off ends, and cut into ¼-inch cubes. Combine with butter in one-and-½-quart glass casserole. Cover and microwave 5 minutes on HIGH, stirring after 2 and ½ minutes.

Stir in cheese, eggs, mushrooms, pimiento, onion salt and pepper. Reduce oven setting to MEDIUM-HIGH, cover and microwave 5 minutes, stirring after 2 and ½ minutes.

Sprinkle top of casserole with french-fried onion rings. Microwave, uncovered, on MEDIUM-HIGH 5 minutes longer or until heated through and knife inserted near center comes out clean.

Serves 4 to 6.

SUMMER SQUASH PARMESAN

1½ pounds summer squash, sliced ¼-inch thick
1 cup crushed dried bread crumbs
¼ cup grated Parmesan cheese
1 tablespoon minced fresh parsley
1 teaspoon dried leaf basil
Dash pepper
2 tablespoons butter or margarine

Oven Setting: HIGH (100 percent power)

Arrange sliced squash in bottom of a 1-quart glass casserole. Sprinkle with crushed, dried bread crumbs. Set aside.

In small bowl, combine Parmesan cheese, parsley, basil and pepper. Toss with fork to mix and sprinkle evenly over bread crumbs.

Place butter or margarine in glass custard cup; microwave 30 to 45 seconds to melt. Drizzle over Parmesan mixture.

Cover and microwave 4 to 6 minutes, rotating dish ¼-turn every 2 minutes until zucchini is crisp-tender. Let stand 1 to 2 minutes before serving.

Serves 4.

'GRATE' SUMMER SQUASH

¼ cup butter or margarine
1 to 2 cloves garlic, minced
2 tablespoons minced onion
1 tablespoon lemon juice
2 pounds summer squash
¼ teaspoon each salt and pepper

Oven Setting: HIGH (100 percent power)

In 12-by-8-inch glass baking dish combine butter, garlic, onion and lemon juice. Microwave, uncovered, about 1 minute to melt butter.

Wash squash, trim off ends, grate on a coarse grater. Turn grated squash into large kitchen towel. Twist towel tightly to squeeze excess moisture from squash.

Add prepared squash to baking dish and sprinkle with salt and pepper. Cover top with plastic wrap and microwave 7 to 9 minutes, stirring every 3 minutes, until squash is tender.

Serves 6.

SUMMER VEGETABLE MEDLEY

2 small zucchini
2 small yellow crookneck or pattypan squash
1 cup chopped fresh broccoli
½ pound sliced fresh mushrooms
3 tablespoons minced onion
2 tablespoons water
¼ teaspoon each salt and pepper
3 tablespoons butter or margarine
2 small tomatoes, quartered

Oven Setting: HIGH (100 percent power)

Wash squash, trim ends, and slice ¼-inch thick. Arrange in 10-inch glass skillet. Sprinkle with onions, water, salt and pepper.

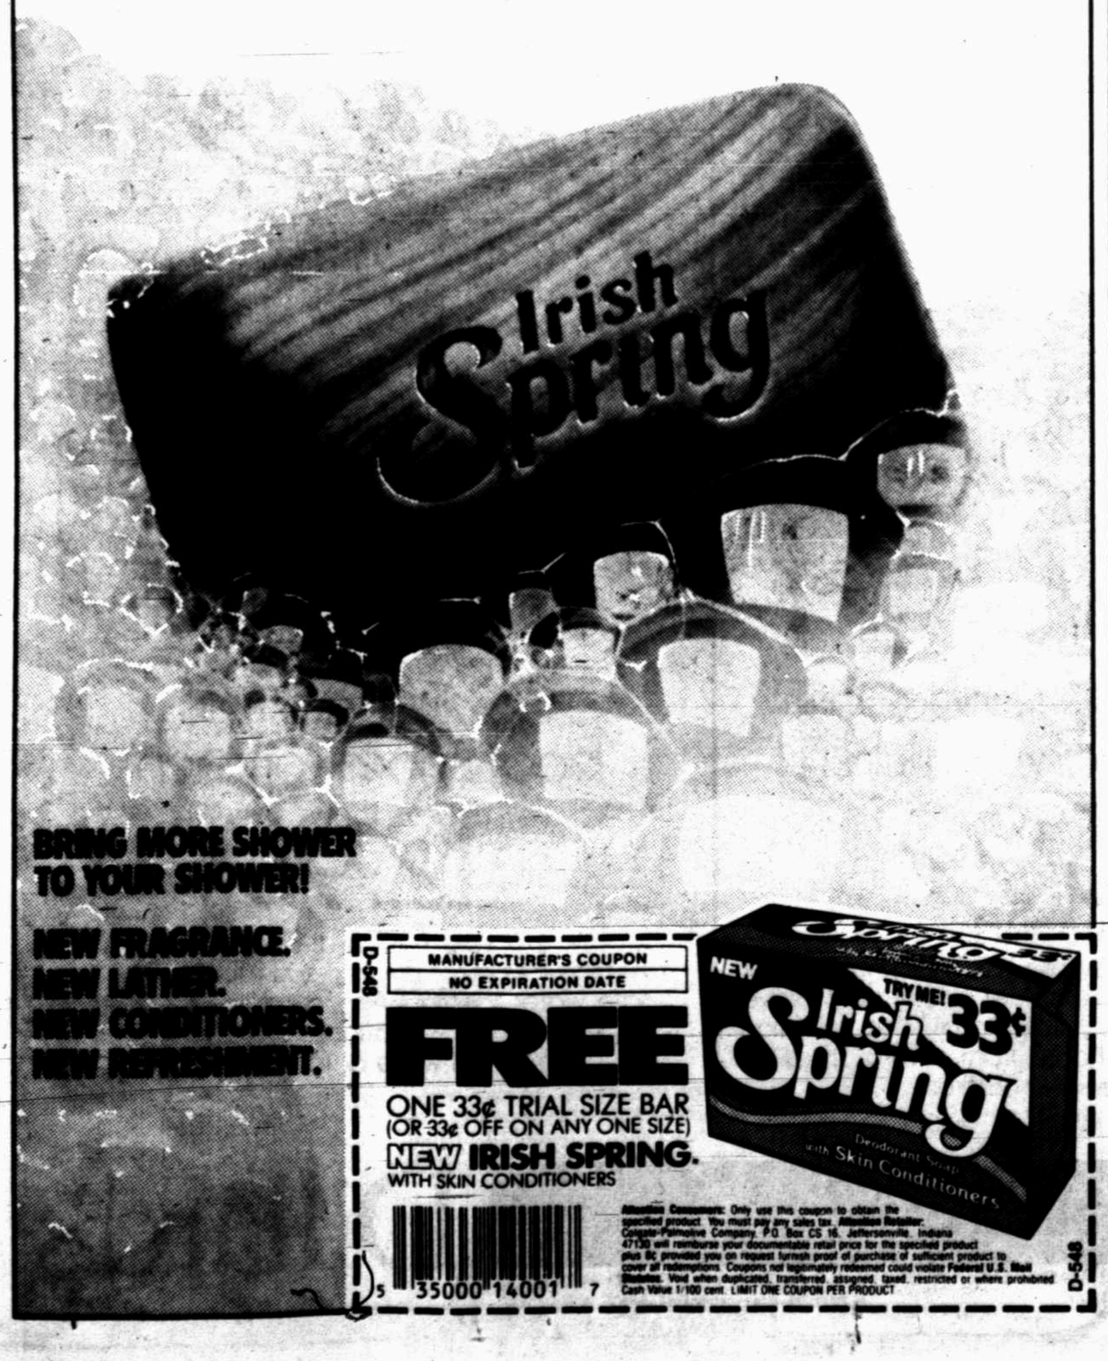

Dot with butter, cover, and microwave 6 minutes, stirring after 3 minutes. Add quartered tomatoes, cover and microwave 4 to 6 minutes longer, stirring once, until vegetables are crisp-tender.

Let stand, covered, 3 minutes before serving.

Serves 4 to 6.

Apricots live on

By DESIREE VIVEA
Copley News Service

Apricots are strictly a summertime phenomenon. Almost 95 percent of all fresh apricots appear on the market during the months of June and July. The season is very short: only about two weeks in any one area. That's why you're likely to find the season over and gone before you even knew it had begun.

Fresh summer apricots are to be prized. If you get your hands on some of these golden-orange beauties, I recommend that you eat them au naturel. You can get the fruit canned or dried anytime you please, but a sweet, sun-ripened apricot is not to be had every day.

The apricot is a member of the rose family, as are the other stone fruits (peaches, nectarines, cherries, plums). It is native to Asia, and was cultivated in China more than 2,000 years ago. Spanish missionaries introduced the diminutive fruit to California during the 16th century, and Pacific Coast orchards now boast a healthy crop of apricots during summer months.

The skin of the apricot is tender and flavorful, so there's no need to peel the fruit before eating. Depending on size, there are between 10 to 16 apricots to the pound.

While I adore eating the elusive fresh apricot plain and ungarnished, I cannot say the same of canned apricots. These do not retain the wonderful, perfumed magic of the fresh fruit, but they are very nice for cooking purposes.

I DO like to nibble on dried, pitted apricot halves. These have had much of the moisture removed and are usually found in plastic pouches. Because their natural sugars are concentrated, they are very sweet. These also are good for cooking purposes, and can easily be reconstituted in hot water.

Apricot nectar and preserves are popular ways to enjoy the fruit. Spread preserves on hot, buttered toast, or use to glaze poultry or ham.

If you missed the fleeting fresh apricot season in your area, don't despair. The following recipes feature post-season apricots (canned, dehydrated, preserves) in a variety of dishes. Glazed Cornish Hens make an elegant meal for two, and Chilled Apricot Bisque would be equally at home at a summer brunch or as the first course for a light supper. Spiced Whole Apricot Compote is a delightful way to enjoy the apricot after peak season has come and gone.

GLAZED CORNISH HENS

1 pound fresh apricots, or 1 (1-pound can) apricot halves
2 tablespoons lemon juice
2 Cornish game hens (10 to 14 ounces each), thawed
2 tablespoons butter or margarine, melted
½ cup apricot preserves
1 tablespoon dry sherry
2 teaspoons lemon juice
⅛ teaspoon dry mustard
Dash each pepper and paprika
Fresh parsley sprigs

Oven Setting: HIGH (100 percent power)

Wash fresh apricots well and pat dry. Cut in half, remove pits, and discard. Sprinkle with the 2 tablespoons lemon juice to prevent darkening. (If using canned apricot halves, drain well, reserving liquid for another use.) Set aside.

Remove giblets from hens and discard, or reserve for another use. Brush outsides of birds with melted butter; place breast-side down on non-metallic rack. Set rack in 7x11-inch glass baking dish. Cover loosely with wax paper.

Microwave six minutes. Turn hens over and baste. Microwave, covered, six minutes longer.

Meanwhile, combine apricot preserves, sherry, lemon juice, mustard, pepper and paprika in a small bowl. Brush hens with some of glaze. Microwave, covered, three minutes.

Turn hens over, brush with a little more glaze, and microwave three minutes longer, until juices run clear and meat near bone is no longer pink.

Cover loosely with aluminum foil and let stand three minutes. Combine prepared apricot halves with remaining apricot glaze. Microwave, uncovered, one to three minutes, or until heated through.

Place hens on serving platter. Arrange hot glazed apricot halves around hens, and garnish with sprigs of fresh parsley.

Serves 2.

CHILLED APRICOT BISQUE

1 (11-ounce) package dried apricots
4 cups water
⅓ cup sugar
2 tablespoons quick-cooking tapioca
2 tablespoons lemon juice
¼ teaspoon ground nutmeg
Dash salt
½ cup sour cream or plain yogurt
Fresh watercress sprigs

Oven Setting: HIGH (100 percent power)

Place apricots in large (2-quart) glass mixing bowl. Pour water over top, cover loosely with plastic wrap, and let stand one hour. Stir in sugar.

Add tapioca, stirring to blend. Cover and microwave 10 minutes, stirring after five minutes.

Stir in remaining ingredients except sour cream or yogurt. Turn mixture into container of blender; process briefly to puree.

Scrape mixture into covered bowl and chill at least two hours before serving. Serve individual bowls garnished with a small dollop of sour cream or unflavored yogurt and a sprig of fresh watercress.

Serves 4 to 6.

SPICED WHOLE APRICOT COMPOTE

1 pound dried apricots
2 cups water
½ cup sugar
6 whole cloves
½ teaspoon cinnamon
Dash nutmeg
Mint leaves

Oven Setting: HIGH (100 percent power)

Wash apricots, removing any stems, and combine in 2-quart glass casserole with water, sugar, cloves, cinnamon and nutmeg.

Cover and microwave 15 to 20 minutes, or until apricots are tender.

Serve warm or chilled, garnished with mint leaves.

Serves 4 to 6.

Viennese pastry fruit-filled

VIENNA (UPI) — Few pleasures on earth are as complete as finding a newspaper and a soft chair in an old-style Viennese cafe and to sip coffee with pastry while lazing an afternoon away.

The newspaper and soft chair are nothing to write home about, but the coffee is among the best and smoothest you will ever taste. And the pastry demands a letter home all by itself.

There is a resurgence in Europe these days on interest in Vienna, especially in its heyday of waltzing and sheer excess. "Creamy" is a word most often used to describe any aspect of life under the monarchy, just before and immediately after the birth of the 20th century.

Here, from the Imperial Hotel, is the recipe for a pastry that will either spark fond memories of such cafe afternoons or inspire a commitment to seek same in the future. The name translates rather colorfully as Vienna Laundry Girls.

WEINER WAESCHERMAEDEL

Filling:
12 fresh or dried apricots
2 tablespoon apricot brandy
1 tablespoon confectioners sugar
2 ounces (about ¼ cup) marzipan, cut into 12 pieces

Batter:
2 eggs, separated
½ cup flour
¼ cup dry white wine
2 tablespoon vegetable oil
Pinch of salt
1 tablespoon sugar
Oil for deep frying
Vanilla sugar or confectioners sugar for sprinkling

If using fresh apricots, drop fruit into boiling water. After 15 seconds, remove apricots with a slotted spoon. When cool enough to handle, slip off skin. With a small knife, slit apricots and remove pits.

If using dried apricots, place fruit in a small heatproof bowl. Add boiling water to cover. Let stand 20 minutes. Drain and pat dry with towels.

Place apricots in a bowl with apricot brandy and confectioners sugar. Let marinate, stirring occasionally, for 30 minutes. Roll marzipan into small balls and flatten slightly. Place each between 2 apricot halves.

In a medium bowl, combine egg yolks, flour, white wine, vegetable oil and salt, stirring until smooth. In another bowl, beat egg whites until frothy. Add sugar and beat until soft peaks form. Gently fold egg whites into egg yolk mixture.

In a deep saucepan or electric deepfat fryer, heat oil to 375 degrees. With a fork dip apricots in egg batter coating them completely. Gently place in hot oil. Fry a few at a time until golden brown on all sides.

Remove apricots with a slotted spoon. Drain on paper towels. Sprinkle with vanilla sugar or confectioners sugar. Serve immediately. Makes 6 servings.

Pizza pie changes into pineapple-pecan cheesecake

Associated Press

Pizza has become a favorite of millions of Americans and has spawned adaptations galore. Given our national fondness for sweets, dessert pizza was bound to happen. This cheesecake-like pizza has three easy-to-make layers; crust, cheesecake and fruit topping.

If you feel guilty about the calorie count of cheesecake, remember that you can trim about 20 calories per serving by substituting Neufchatel cheese.

PINEAPPLE-PECAN PIZZA

3½ cups (about 4 ounces) crisp rice cereal, crushed
6 tablespoons butter or margarine, melted
1 tablespoon sugar
Two 3-ounce packages cream cheese, softened
One 14-ounce can sweetened condensed milk
⅓ cup lemon juice
1 teaspoon vanilla
One 20-ounce can crushed pineapple
1 tablespoon cornstarch
¼ cup toasted chopped pecans
Toasted pecan halves

Combine cereal, butter and sugar; press into the bottom of a 12-inch pizza pan. Bake in a 350-degree oven 10 minutes. Cool. In a small mixer bowl beat cream cheese, sweetened condensed milk, lemon juice and vanilla on low speed until smooth. Spread over crust. Cover; chill. Combine undrained pineapple and cornstarch. Cook and stir until bubbly; cook and stir 2 minutes more. Cool. Spread pineapple mixture over cheese layer. Sprinkle chopped pecans in center; trim edges with pecan halves. Cover; chill.

Cookbook celebrates festive foods

By JAMES R. GRAY
Hearst News Service

If you love good food — and who doesn't? — it can be one of the best reasons to attend a special festival where the local residents dish out their best home-cooked fare for tourists.

If visions of fried catfish and onion pie are already dancing in your head, "Food Festival," a new cookbook-guidebook, should be right up your alley. The authors, Alice M. Geffen and Carole Berglie, traveled coast to coast to sample a wide range of food celebrations, from the State of Maine Blueberry Festival to the Indian-Style Salmon Bake in Sequim, Wash.

The 57 festivals are nicely broken down by season, and the authors have included plenty of information about each, including ways to find out specific dates and the like.

Consider some of these offerings: the Shaker Kitchen Festival, Hancock, Mass.; the Vermont Maple Festival, St. Albans; the annual Indian Foods Dinner, Salamanca, N.Y.; the Windsor, Conn., Shad Derby; The Boudin Festival, Broussard, La. (boudin is a sausage of rice, pork and seasonings); the National Date Festival, Indio, Calif.; the Swamp Cabbage Festival, La Belle, Fla.; the Minnesota Wild Rice Festival, Kelliher/Waskish; the Black-Eyed Pea Jamboree, Athens, Texas; the Gilroy, Calif., Garlic Festival; the Strange Seafood Exhibition in Beaufort, N.C., and the International Zucchini Festival in Harrisville, N.H.

"EYES OF TEXAS" SALAD
Black-Eyed Pea Jamboree, Athens, Texas:
1½ cups canned black-eyed peas, drained
1 cup chopped cooked chicken
¼ cup chopped celery
½ teaspoon salt
1 cup cooked white rice
¼ cup chopped onions
¼ cup mayonnaise
1 teaspoon black pepper
Dash hot sauce
Dressing:
1 avocado, seeded, peeled and mashed
½ cup sour cream
1 teaspoon garlic salt
½ cup mayonnaise
½ teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
¼ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon lemon juice

In a bowl, mix the ingredients for the salad and pack them into a greased one-quart ring mold. Chill in the refrigerator for 30 minutes.

While the salad sets, mix the ingredients for the dressing. "Ice" the salad with the dressing or mound the dressing in the center, with the salad forming a ring around it. Serves 6.

CHICKEN JAMBALAYA
Jambalaya Festival, Gonzales, La.:
1 large chicken (about 3½ pounds), cut up
4 large onions, chopped
3 cloves garlic, chopped fine
3 cups water
2 cups long-grain rice, rinsed
½ cup chopped scallion greens
Salt and pepper to taste
½ teaspoon cayenne pepper, or to taste

In a large cast-iron pot, brown the chicken over high heat in its own fat until it turns dark, dark brown — about 1 hour. Add the onions and garlic and fry until they turn brown, too — about 30 minutes. Add the rice along with the scallion greens, salt, pepper and cayenne. Stir lightly. Bring the liquid to a boil and cook over medium heat until most of the water is gone and the rice starts to puff. Stir the mixture carefully, lower the heat, and cover to cook slowly until done, about 30 minutes more. When done, season with more cayenne pepper if desired. Serves 6.

ASPARAGUS SURPRISE
National Asparagus Festival, Shelby/Hart, Mich.:
4 chicken breast halves
4 thin slices boiled ham
4 slices Swiss cheese
16 spears asparagus, cooked until tender-crisp and trimmed to about 4 inches long
4 tablespoons (½ stick) butter, melted
⅓ cup dry bread crumbs
2 tablespoons grated Parmesan cheese

Preheat the oven to 350 F. Skin and bone the chicken breast halves. Lightly pound with a meat mallet. Place one slice ham and one slice cheese on each breast, then add the asparagus spears, four spears to each roll. Carefully roll up and press in the sides. Tie with a string or secure with toothpicks.

Dip the rolls in the melted butter, then in the bread crumbs and Parmesan cheese. Bake in a greased baking dish for 40 minutes. Remove from the pan and stir the remaining drippings until smooth, then spoon over the chicken rolls. Serves 4.

CHERRY CHIP BUNDT CAKE
National Cherry Festival, Traverse City, Mich.:
2 cups all-purpose flour
¾ cup sugar
¾ cup vegetable oil
2 large eggs
2 teaspoons vanilla extract
1 teaspoon baking soda
1 teaspoon ground cinnamon
⅛ teaspoon salt
1 can (21 ounces) cherry pie filling
1 cup (6 ounces) chocolate chips
½ cup chopped almonds
Confectioners' sugar

Preheat the oven to 350 F. Grease and flour a bundt pan or 10-inch tube pan. In a large mixing bowl, combine the flour, sugar, oil, eggs, vanilla, baking soda, cinnamon and salt. Mix well, then stir in the cherry pie filling. Add the chocolate chips and the nuts. Pour the batter into the prepared pan and bake for one hour or until a toothpick inserted in the thickest part comes out clean. Take the cake from the oven and let it cool on a rack for 10 minutes. Remove the cake from the pan and let it cool completely. Dust with confectioners' sugar.

WILD RICE PANCAKES
Minnesota Wild Rice Festival, Kelliher/Waskish, Minn.:
1 cup cooked wild rice
½ cup (1 stick) butter, melted
3 large eggs, lightly beaten
1½ cups milk
2 tablespoons sugar
1 cup all-purpose flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt

Place the wild rice in a bowl; add the butter, eggs, milk, and sugar and mix until smooth. Add the flour gradually to form a smooth batter. Stir in the baking powder and salt and set aside.

Heat a griddle until very hot, then spoon the batter by small ladlefuls onto the griddle. Let the pancakes brown on one side, then turn and cook on the other side briefly until browned. Serve with maple syrup and butter. Serves 4.

Arkansas grape growers seek special wine designation

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

Grape growers whose farms border the Arkansas River have petitioned the U.S. Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms to be designated a specific viticultural area called "Arkansas Mountain."

The agency defines such regions as having distinct geographic characteristics that set them apart from others. The designation is an important marketing tool that can help create a premium status for some wines.

There are currently eight wineries operating in the 4,500-square-mile area. However, a relatively insignificant 1,200 acres are currently planted with grapes. But growers are hoping the figure will significantly increase once the country gets a taste of Arkansas Mountain Riesling.

Disney cookbook anything but 'mickey mouse' effort

ORLANDO, Fla. (UPI) — In the production of nine previous cookbooks, home economist Maggie Murphy shared her kitchen with more than a few people, places and things, each time testing that caveat about "too many cooks."

Even this experience, however, failed to prepare her completely for working out recipes with a chef whose high white "toque blanche" sat precariously on a pair of oversized black ears.

Murphy did the testing for "Cooking With Mickey Around Our World," a treasury of more than 350 recipes requested by people after visits to the Magic Kingdom and Epcot Center.

Working at her home in West Dennis, Mass., Murphy handled the mind-boggling task of assuring each professional recipe worked out just right for the home cook, as well as appeared in print with the appropriate vocabulary.

"I had to turn pounds and ounces into cups and tablespoons," she said. "Then I tested the recipes and verified the results with the Disney chefs."

In spite of her impressive resume, the home economist found Disney food to be anything but kid's stuff. Some dishes were quite complicated to prepare, while others were almost effortless.

Exposure to the Disney cooks, Murphy said, unlocked "techniques that were new to me, despite my years of experience."

Revelations she found most intriguing included using cold water to make yeast breads, dipping fish in seasoned flour and then in egg wash rather than the reverse, using sourdough bread for such items as French toast.

All in all, it made for as surprising and eye-opening an experience as cooking with the world's most famous mouse might be expected to be.

The new spiral-bound cookbook was inspired by 15 years and more than 70,000 annual recipe requests for dishes enjoyed at Walt Disney World in central Florida.

The single most requested recipe is for Stuffed French Toast, a breakfast delight offered at the Polynesian Village Resort, in which thick slices of sourdough bread are filled with banana slices, battered and deep-fried.

Second to this wonder by Disney executive chef Johnny Rivers is the Walnut Bread created by baker Dominic Robertiello for Liberty Tree Tavern and Kind Stefan's Banquet Hall in the Magic Kingdom.

"Cooking With Mickey Around Our World" is available at selected locations throughout Walt Disney World or from Disney World Mail Order, Department PB, Box 40, Lake Buena Vista, FL 32830.

STUFFED FRENCH TOAST
2 or 4 slices sourdough bread, cut 1-inch thick
1 banana
13 cup sugar
1 teaspoon cinnamon
1 egg
¼ cup milk
½ teaspoon vanilla extract
Oil or shortening for frying
Whipped butter, if desired
Maple syrup, if desired

Depending on the size of the slices of bread, cut a 2-inch pocket in one side of each. Cut bananas in half crosswise, then split each piece lengthwise. Remove peel and stuff 2 pieces in each pocket of bread.

This stuffing depends on bread size. If slices are small, use 4 and stuff 1 piece of banana in each pocket. Set aside.

Mix sugar and cinnamon, then set aside. Mix egg, milk and vanilla until well-blended. Heat about 4 inches of oil in a pan to 350 degrees. Dip stuffed bread into egg-milk mixture, soaking a few minutes to let the liquid penetrate the bread.

Fry in hot oil until lightly browned, turning to cook both sides evenly, about 3 minutes. Drain on paper towels on a cake rack. Serve at once, sprinkled with sugar and cinnamon.

Farming improved

Copley News Service

Japan turned to the United States to help modernize its agriculture in 1872 when it persuaded Horace Capron, head of the newly established U.S. Department of Agriculture, to leave his post and lead a developmental mission to Japan.

Despite difficulties, the mission had much to do with paving the way for better farming in Japan.

August height of lobster season

By NANCY HARMON JENKINS
New York Times News Service

At 9 o'clock on a July morning, the fog hangs thickly over the Fox Island Thoroughfare, a narrow body of water separating the islands of North Haven and Vinalhaven in Penobscot Bay in Maine. Peter MacDonald, a North Haven lobster fisherman, is pulling his first traps of the day. He is off to a late start because of heavy rain.

"My God, son, we just made another dollar and a half," he says with mock sarcasm, as 11-year-old Jason MacDonald, his son and sternman on the 36-foot lobster boat "Lucky Lady II" oversees the emptying of the large wire-mesh trap. Its contents: half a dozen starfish and sea urchins, a length of kelp, a few fat crabs, a small skate and one lobster, its body, or carapace, slightly longer than the 3 3-16-inch minimum legal length. The lobster weighs just about a pound. It has probably taken seven years to reach this size, during which time it has molted, changing its shell, at least 15 times.

The lobster in MacDonald's trap may be served to a happy tourist at a Maine lobster shack. Or it may go into the steaming kettles of fancy restaurants anywhere from Paris to New York to Tokyo. Maine lobster — as it is often called whether it comes from Maine, Massachusetts or the Canadian Maritime Provinces — currently sells for around $8 or $9 a pound retail in New York City and is one of those rare and expensive gastronomic treats that seem to symbolize the very word "gourmet."

We are speaking here of the true lobster, Homarus americanus, denizen of the coastal shelves of the western edge of the North Atlantic Ocean.

TRUE LOBSTERS have two claws, a heavy crusher claw and a skinnier ripper claw, unlike rock lobster or crayfish or spiny lobster or any of the other names by which its less desirable clawless cousin, Palinurus vulgaris, is known. Their dense, rich, tender, sweet flesh makes them th prized crustacean.

Most lobsters are caught by fishermen like MacDonald, who returned to his native North Haven after serving with the Marines in Vietnam. Young Jason is the fourth generation of his family to ply this trade. "He has his grandfather's license," MacDonald says with pride, "and my brother has our grandfather's license."

On most July mornings MacDonald hauls 150 traps. By late August, at the height of the season, when warmer waters make lobsters more active, he will have 500 traps set and work will begin at 4 a.m.

Working swiftly, he empties the lobster pot, binding the creature's vicious-looking claws with thick yellow bands. Jason empties the bait bag, gingerly, to the waiting horde of screaming seagulls, and replaces it with another, packed with salted, rotten herring — a lobster's delight.

The "Lucky Lady II" — a typical version of the classic Beals Island boat — costs about $60,000, complete with the two-way radio, radar, depth sounder and other gear that allows fishermen to operate with some security in fogs, hurricanes and winter storms.

Few lobstermen have grown rich hauling traps. They do it for tradition, mostly, and for the independent life they say it affords. The islands and harbors of Maine are still places where men honor their fathers and grandfathers by continuing a way of life that is venerable and dignified. "Independent as a hog on ice" is a Maine expression for the typical lobster fisherman, cantankerous, taciturn and adept at self-mockery.

ONE MAN, one boat and the sea: The romantic vision is often belied by unrelenting work, aching backs, arthritis and little in the bank to see the family through the winter. But the romance returns in the hush of a summer morning when the sea rolls over barnacle-encrusted rocks and a majestic bald eagle waits on a dead tree limb for its prey.

Maine is the only place with both a minimum and maximum size limit. Lobsters smaller than 3 3/16 inches, longer than 5 inches or "berried" females — with egg clusters attached — must be thrown back. Penalties for infractions are severe, including loss of the fisherman's license, and MacDonald discards about two of every three lobsters caught. While the efficacy of such conservation measures is frequently debated, the Maine lobster catch has remained fairly constant during the last five or six years, according to Robert D. Lewis, a research scientist of the state's Department of Marine Resources.

In 1982, one of the best years in recent memory, 10,384 metric tons of lobster were caught, Lewis said. That catch was taken from 2 million traps set by 8,900 licensed lobster fishermen, many of whom worked only part time. But if more recent years have shown small declines from that record high — 9,127 metric tons in 1985, for instance — their consistency is considered significant by department specialists.

FOR WHAT is often thought of as an elitist food with a small market, lobsters are the most important segment of fishing in Maine and Massachusetts. In the last five years, the landed value of the Maine lobster catch has been around $50 million. The income derived from the fishery — from banks to boat builders to knitters of bait bags — brings in another $100 million. In Massachusetts, where the annual catch has hovered around 12 million pounds worth $30 million to the fishermen, 1985 saw an unexpected increase of 2 million pounds, according to officials of the state's Division of Marine Fisheries.

"The group in trouble is not the lobsters but the fishermen," said Lewis. He blamed the weather, pesticide contamination, increasing water temperatures, overfishing and bad management practices. But the key factor, Lewis said, is Canada.

Three-quarters of all Canadian lobster exports go to the United States, where nearly 25 percent of all lobsters consumed — fresh, frozen and canned — come from Canadian waters. In 1985, according to the Fisheries Council of Canada, 12,230 metric tons of live lobsters, valued at $116 million Canadian, were shipped to this country from Canada. That was an increase of 16 percent in volume and 7 percent in value compared with the previous year.

"Less than 0.1 percent of all lobster eggs hatched in the wild survive to maturity," said Michael Syslo, the director of the Massachusetts State Lobster Hatchery and Research Station on Martha's Vineyard. "But at the hatchery we can get as much as an 80 percent survival rate." The hatchery uses special rearing tanks, warm water to promote year-round growth and regular feeding to reduce the lobster's natural cannibalism — a major threat to its survival. The hatchery releases 500,000 one-month-old lobsters into local waters each season.

Aquaculture, long thought impossible with lobsters, is becoming a brighter prospect for the future. "You can do it biologically," Syslo said, "but can you do it and make money?" It takes five pounds of fresh fish and shellfish, the finicky lobster's favorite diet, to produce one pound of lobster meat, he said.

For the immediate future, the lobster on diners' plates will come from icy North Atlantic waters, caught by fishermen like MacDonald.

Lobster fairly healthy food

By NANCY HARMON JENKINS
New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — Although lobster has high levels of sodium and cholesterol, for people who don't have to watch either, lobster has its good nutritional points, aside from its unquestionably delightful flavor. Great benefits derive from the large quantities of valuable minerals — like potassium and phosphorus — in lobster. The succulent flesh also contains traces of selenium and zinc.

Recent research indicates that both may play valuable roles in stimulating the body's immune system and in capturing free radicals, the precancerous chemicals that may be formed in the body after exposure to carcinogenic substances.

Here is the nutritional breakdown for a pound of lobster meat:

413 calories
76.7 grams of protein
8.6 grams of fat
2.3 grams of carbohydrate
1,178 milligrams of potassium
830 milligrams of phosphorus
8.2 milligrams of zinc
471 milligrams of selenium
900 milligrams of cholesterol
1,359 milligrams of sodium.

While it is true that improved testing techniques have recently shown that most shellfish — clams and mussels, for example — are much lower in cholesterol than had been thought, the same cannot be said, alas, for lobster. Like shrimp, squid and crab, lobsters feed primarily on small animal life and therefore have high cholesterol levels.

People who are concerned, for medical reasons, with keeping their cholesterol levels down will probably want to avoid lobster altogether, at least until they have their cholesterol counts under control. The same is true for those who are trying to keep their sodium consumption low.

For others, the occasional meal of lobster will do no harm. Perhaps the biggest nutritional problem with lobster, as with so many other delicious foods, is the well-founded tradition of eating it with lashings of melted butter. Instead, try steamed chunks of lobster with a well-seasoned vinaigrette, made with balsamic vinegar or freshly squeezed lemon juice.

Weight watchers may find that a drop or two of plain fresh lemon juice will complement the lobster's rich, sweet flavor without adding calories or fat.

For a different presentation, make an Italian-style tomato sauce, using fresh, ripe tomatoes, peeled, seeded and coarsely chopped. Saute the tomatoes in a little olive oil with chopped garlic and onions.

When the tomatoes are soft, stir in a handful of finely shredded fresh basil. Steam the lobster for five to seven minutes less than usual — just enough so you can remove the shells. Cut the lobster into bite-size pieces, and mix with the tomato sauce. Place in a 350-degree oven for 10 minutes, until the sauce is bubbling.

This is very good served with rice or another grain, such as barley or wheat berries. The seasoning for the sauce can be varied endlessly — add hot chilies for zest, for instance, or grated orange peel and crumbled thyme for a Provencal flavor.

Shrimp pickled with spices

Associated Press

PICKLED SHRIMP

1 pound shrimp (28 to the count), cooked and shelled and deveined
1 small onion, peeled, thinly sliced, and separated into rings
2 tablespoons vegetable oil
2 tablespoons white wine vinegar
½ teaspoon prepared mustard
¼ teaspoon oregano
1 small clove garlic, crushed
Salt and pepper to taste

Cut each shrimp in half lengthwise, mix with onion rings. Beat together oil, vinegar, mustard, oregano, garlic, salt and pepper; mix with shrimp and onion.

Cover and chill an hour or longer before serving to allow flavors to blend.

Fish cooked 'perfectly'

Associated Press

To cook fish perfectly, follow this simple rule: Broil, grill, bake or poach fresh or thawed fillets or steaks 4 to 6 minutes for each half-inch of thickness.

Check for doneness at the low end of the time range by placing the tines of a table fork into the fish flesh at a 45-degree angle; gently twist the fork and pull up some of the flesh. Fish that flakes easily and is opaque is properly cooked.

If the flesh resists flaking or looks translucent, the fish is not done; continue cooking to the upper limit of the time range.

ITALIAN-STYLE FISH

4 fresh or frozen halibut, salmon, shark or swordfish steaks, cut 1 inch thick (about 2 pounds)
½ cup butter or margarine
2 tablespoons snipped parsley
1 tablespoon snipped fresh basil or 1 teaspoon dried basil, crushed
2 teaspoons lemon juice
Cooking oil

Thaw fish, if frozen. Beat together butter, parsley, basil and lemon juice. Brush grill with oil to prevent fish from sticking. Place fish steaks on grill over medium-hot coals. Brush lightly with some of the butter mixture. Cover grill. Grill fish 4 to 6 minutes or until light brown. Brush with more of the butter mixture. With a wide spatula, carefully turn the fish.

Cover and grill another 4 to 6 minutes or until fish flakes easily with a fork, basting often with butter mixture. Before serving, top each fish steak with a dollop of remaining butter.

Serve immediately. Makes 4 servings.

Ice cream makes a cool, creamy dessert for summertime

By ANTONIA ALLEGRA
Copley News Service

Summertime translates as "ice cream time" to many, and the ranks of both homemade and manufactured ice cream aficionados grow each summer season.

The glory of this warm-weather treat has been traditionally highlighted by the addition of fresh fruit in delectable and taste-tempting combinations. Why not create some Homestyle Ice Cream, a rich, custardy blend of egg whites and milk? (Recipe follows.)

It's easy to add a puree of fresh fruit to the base, making your own tempting flavored dessert. Or, for those whose schedule dictates purchasing ice cream, blend it with fruits or toppings to personalize the treat with a taste of the season.

Surprisingly enough, despite the virtually limitless selection of flavors available on today's market, consumers' top 10 choices run conservative: vanilla, chocolate, Neapolitan, chocolate chip, strawberry, vanilla fudge, butter pecan, cherry, butter almond and French vanilla.

Even though those ice creams are preferred by the majority, the International Association of Ice Cream Manufacturers reports that there are now some 400 different flavors available in stores.

WHAT ABOUT toppings? Favorites, in order of preference, are chocolate fudge, hot fudge, butterscotch, caramel and strawberry.

Other winners are toasted almonds, coconut, chopped pistachios and walnuts. Try rolling balls of ice cream in those textured toppers for a different ice cream presentation.

The cold facts

The actual origins of ice cream are unknown, but evidence of its popularity can be traced back to the time of Alexander the Great (356-323 B.C.), who apparently enjoyed a dish or two en route to conquering the Persian empire.

When it came to the New World, a letter written in 1700 by a guest of Maryland Gov. William Bladen was the first official account of ice cream here.

Since that time, the United States has become the world's leading producer and consumer of ice cream. According to Bob Sheldon, spokesman for the California Milk Advisory Board, in 1985 ice cream eaters ate 18.2 pounds per capita.

Other ice cream statistics point out that George Washington was not only one of this country's leaders but also was identifiable as an ice cream "nut."

RECORDS KEPT by a Chatham Street, New York, merchant indicate that Washington spent about $200 for ice cream during the summer of 1790, and an inventory taken at Mount Vernon shortly after his death revealed two pewter ice cream pots.

Thomas Jefferson declared a dependence on a special 18-step recipe for an ice cream delicacy resembling modern-day Baked Alaska. Dolly Madison served a magnificent strawberry ice cream creation at her husband's second inaugural banquet in 1812 at the White House. This shindig placed the party planner in the ice cream hall of fame.

The first ice cream cone was served at the St. Louis, Mo., World's Fair in 1904 when an ice cream vendor ran out of dishes for his five- and 10-cent servings of ice cream. Instead, Ernest Hamwi offered a waffle-like Middle Eastern pastry called zalabia rolled into a cornucopia.

Make some ice cream history of your own this summer using some of the following recipes. An asterisk (*) indicates ice cream creations that do not require churning in an ice cream maker or cooking.

HOMESTYLE ICE CREAM

3 cups milk
1 tablespoon vanilla
6 egg yolks
1 cup sugar
1 cup heavy cream
4 egg whites

Scald milk and vanilla in heavy saucepan. Beat yolks and sugar together until light; stir in small amount (approximately ½ cup) of scalded milk. Combine with remaining milk and return to heat. Cook over medium heat just to boiling, remove from heat and let cool. Whip cream to soft peaks and set aside. Beat egg whites to stiff peaks and fold into whipped cream.

Blend cream mixture and custard together gently. Freeze in ice cream maker according to directions. Makes 1¾ quarts.

Variation: Peach Ginger Ice Cream — Add 2 cups peeled and pureed peaches and 3 tablespoons chopped candied ginger to custard before adding egg whites and cream.

FROZEN STRAWBERRY CREAM PARFAITS

1 package (10 ounces) frozen sliced strawberries in syrup, unthawed
¼ cup heavy cream
5 pecan shortbread cookies, ground coarse (about ½ cup)
2 tablespoons finely chopped pecans, toasted lightly, if desired

CNS Graphic

Working quickly, cut block of frozen strawberries into one and one-half-inch pieces. In food processor or blender puree strawberry pieces, with motor running, add cream and blend mixture just until it is smooth.

Spoon ¼ of strawberry cream into each of two 1-cup goblets (or bowls), sprinkle each layer with ¼ cup of the shortbread crumbs and top crumbs with another layer of the strawberry cream. Sprinkle the parfaits with pecans if desired and serve immediately.

Yields 2 servings. Recipe from "The Best of Gourmet," Random House, $24.95, hard cover.

ANYTIME TROPICAL FREEZE

Here's a homemade sherbetlike dessert that is lower in calories than ice cream and easier to make than using an ice cream machine.

3 medium bananas
1 (6-ounce) can orange juice concentrate, partially thawed
1 (8-ounce) can crushed pineapple with juice
2 tablespoons lemon juice
¼ cup sugar
½ teaspoon vanilla extract
½ cup half-and-half

In large bowl, mash bananas. Stir in orange juice concentrate, pineapple wih juice, lemon juice, sugar and vanilla. Stir in half-and-half. Pour into a 9-by-5-inch loaf pan or several undivided ice trays. Cover with foil or plastic wrap. Place in freezer, freeze until almost firm, 1 to 3 hours. Spoon into a chilled large bowl. Beat with electric mixer until light and fluffy, but not thawed. Immediately return beaten mixture to pan and freeze until firm, 1 to 3 hours. Makes about 1 quart.

Recipe from "Ice Cream" by Mable and Gar Hoffman, HPBooks, $5.95 paper cover.

ICE CREAM IN CHOCOLATE CUPS

8 ounces semisweet chocolate, broken into bits
2 cups sugar
A pinch of cream of tartar
1 pint vanilla ice cream
Strawberries for garnish, if desired

Chocolate cups: Melt chocolate in a double boiler set over barely smmering water and with a small spoon spread it evenly on the inside bottom and sides of four double layers of fluted cupcake papers, spreading the papers open so that the sides are slanting outward.

Put chocolate cups in small bowls and chill them 30 minutes. Peel papers carefully from chocolate and chill chocolate cups until they are needed.

Assembly: Fill each chocolate cup with a scoop of the ice cream. Arrange the desserts on a serving tray and garnish them with the strawberries if desired.

Yields 4 servings.

Note: The cups may be made 1 day in advance and kept chilled.

RUM RAISIN NUT ICE CREAM

⅔ cup raisins
2 tablespoons dark rum
½ cup toasted pecans
1 quart vanilla ice cream

Marinate raisins in rum for half an hour or longer. Fold with nuts into slightly softened ice cream. Refreeze. Spoon additional dark rum over ice cream before serving.

Yields 1 quart ice cream.

CAJUN COFFEE ICE CREAM

2 tablespoons instant espresso powder
1 tablespoon coffee liqueur
1 teaspoon grated lemon peel
1 quart vanilla or coffee ice cream

Stir espresso powder, coffee liqueur and lemon peel into slightly softened ce cream. Refreeze. Spoon additional coffee liqueur over ice cream before serving.

Yields 1 quart ice cream.

TROPICAL POLYNESIAN CRUNCH

6 eggs, well-beaten
1 cup sugar
1 pint whipping cream
Dash salt
1 medium papaya, mashed
1 medium pineapple, crushed
1 banana, mashed
½ cup toasted flaked coconut
1 teaspoon banana flavoring (optional)
1 teaspoon coconut flavoring (optional)
1 teaspoon pineapple flavoring (optional)

In medium bowl, beat eggs until thick and lemon-colored. Add sugar, beat agin. Add cream and dash of salt. In another bowl, mash together papaya, crushed pineapple and banana. Combine fruits with eggs and sugar and add flavorings if desired. Pour into ice cream maker canister. Add ice and rock salt around canister according to directions and turn until ice cream is firm.

To serve, garnish with flakes of toasted coconut, serve in half a coconut shell.

DIETER'S VANILLA ICE MILK

2 cups sugar
¼ cup cornstarch
¼ teaspoon salt
8 cups (2 quarts) skim milk
3 eggs, beaten
1 tablespoon unflavored gelatin (1 envelope)
2 tablespoons vanilla

Mix the sugar, cornstarch and salt in a heavy sauceepan. Gradually blend in four cups of the skim milk. Cook over medium heat, stirring occasionally, until thickened, 5 to 8 minutes. Stir a half-cup cup of the hot mixture into the eggs. Return the hot mixture to the stove and cook, stirring constantly, until the mixture is the consistency of soft custard.

Meanwhile, soften the gelatin in 1 cup of skim milk. Stir it into the hot mixture until dissolved. Chill thoroughly — this step is essential for a smooth ice milk. Add the vanilla and the remaining 3 cups of milk.

Pour the mixture into a 1-gallon freezer canister, filling not more than two-thirds full. Freeze in a hand-cranked or electric ice cream freezer packed with a mixture of 1 part ice cream salt and 6 parts crushed ice.

Remove the dasher when the product is frozen. Repack the ice cream freezer with a mixture of 1 part salt and 8 parts ice. Allow to ripe about 2 hours before serving. Or pack the ice milk in freezer containers and harden in a home freezer. Yields 13 cups, about 100 calories per half-cup serving.

Ice cream proves hard for Americans to turn down

By BETTY WILSON
Hearst News Service

The average American consumed 182 pounds of dairy products in 1985, and while not everyone took advantage of the good nutritional qualities of fluid milk — our best and most economical source of calcium — few turn down ice cream. Our per capita consumption was about 25 pounds annually.

Depending on the butterfat content of the product selected, the calorie count per cup of ice cream ranges from 377 for French vanilla ice cream to 184 for ice milk. Frozen dairy desserts can be a wise choice when a small serving of some other favorite is under consideration. Count 350 calories for chocolate layer cake or cherry pie. A small brownie adds 100.

The best dipping temperature for ice cream is about 5 degrees. To avoid crystallization, cover the surface with plastic wrap and return the closed container to the freezer promptly.

Homemade ice cream is a common source of salmonella food poisoning. Avoid recipes with uncooked egg yolks. The cooked custard type is always safe to eat and of superior quality. Favorite old recipes may be made safe by cooking the milk, eggs and sugar until the mixture bubbles. Plan ahead, since it must be chilled.

CREAMY PINA COLADAS

½ fresh pineapple
1 cup vanilla ice cream
4 ounces cream of coconut
¼ cup light rum (optional)
1 banana
2 cups crushed ice

Peel and trim the eyes from the pineapple. Remove the core and cut into ½-inch slices. Process or blend to puree. Add the next four ingredients and process until smooth. Add the ice and process until the mixture reaches the desired consistency.

STRAWBERRY SHERBET

1 pint fresh strawberries, sliced
¼ cup sugar
1 envelope unflavored gelatin
1½ cups buttermilk
½ cup sugar
2 tablespoons lemon juice

Combine the strawberries and ¼ cup sugar. Mash well and let it stand for 10 minutes. Strain off ¼ cup of the juice. Set aside.

Soften the gelatin in the strawberry juice. Dissolve over hot water or in microwave oven. Add the mixture to the buttermilk with the crushed berries, sugar and lemon juice. Stir well to dissolve the sugar.

Pour the mixture into two ice cube trays and freeze until mushy. Beat in a bowl with a rotary beater until smooth. Return it to the freezer trays and freeze until firm.

Limes add cool note to summer dining

Copley News Service

CNS Graphic

Whether squeezed into a frosty gin and tonic, frozen in a refreshing sorbet or blended in a light salad dressing, lime juice adds a tart note of coolness that makes both the mind and the palate forget the heat of summer.

Limes, like all citrus fruits, are a major source of vitamin C. The British navy, under the Merchant Shipping Act of 1894, ordered that each seaman be given regular doses of lime juice while on board ship to avoid the endemic outbreaks of scurvy that had long plagued English sailors. Wags in Australia and the United States began calling the British seamen "limeys," and the nickname was soon applied to all Britons, mariners and landlubbers alike.

THE ENGLISH sailors probably accepted the nickname with good humor, since their weekly 1-ounce lime juice rations were served with generous portions of rum to preserve the lime juice and make the tart liquid more palatable. By the 1920s scientists had learned that lemons contain several times the level of vitamin C found in limes, and the British navy substituted lemon juice as the active ingredient in their sailors' anti-scurvy potion. The name limey stuck, however - perhaps "lemony" just didn't have the same ring.

Florida raises the majority of limes sold in this country. The most common type is the Tahiti lime (also called the Persian lime). The smaller Key lime, which becomes harder to find in stores the farther you travel from Florida, is smaller, and more yellow than green in color. Today's recipe for Key Lime Pie is best with Key limes, of course, but Tahiti limes may be substituted. As a rule of thumb, expect to get about two tablespoons of juice from a good-size Tahiti lime and about one tablespoon from a Key lime.

All of today's recipes highlight the cooling and refreshing quality of freshly squeezed lime juice.

KEY LIME PIE
1 crumb crust (recipe follows)
½ cup juice from Key limes (ordinary limes may be substituted)
1½ tablespoons grated lime zest (use the outer, greenest part)
1 can sweetened condensed milk
4 egg yolks
1 pint heavy cream whipped with a few drops vanilla extract

Add lime juice and zest to condensed milk and blend well. Beat in egg yolks and continue to beat until mixture thickens slightly. Pour into baked crust and bake 10 minutes at 350 F, or until filling has set. Refrigerate until cool and top with whipped cream.

CRUMB CRUST
1¼ cups graham cracker crumbs
¼ cup ground almonds
6 tablespoons butter
¼ cup sugar

Blend ingredients together until mixture is uniform — crumbly, but malleable. Press into pie pan in a ¼-inch layer, spreading evenly over bottom of pan and up sides.

Bake crust five to six minutes at 375 F before filling.

TROPICAL LIME SORBET
¾ cup sugar
1 tablespoon gelatin
1½ cups dry white wine
1 cup freshly squeezed lime juice
2 tablespoons creme de menthe, plus 2 teaspoons to glaze sherbet glasses
1 egg white, beaten until stiff with ¼ teaspoon salt

Mix sugar wth 1 cup water and boil for 10 to 12 minutes to make a syrup. Soften gelatin in a bit of cold water and pour boiling syrup over it, stirring until gelatin has completely dissolved.

Add wine, lime juice and 2 tablespoons creme de menthe. Mix together well and freeze in a glass bowl until mixture is mushy but not solid (if you have an ice cream maker, follow the manufacturer's instructions).

Fold in egg white beaten with salt until mixture is smooth and uniform and return to freezer until frozen to desired consistency.

Coat inside rims of chilled sherbet or dessert glasses with remaining creme de menthe, add sorbet and serve.

Serves 6.

LIME AND MELON SOUP
1½ cups cantaloupe melon
1½ cups honeydew melon
½ cup freshly squeezed lime juice
1 tablespoon fresh ginger root, finely chopped
1½ tablespoons wine vinegar
1½ cup chicken broth
1 tablespoon vodka
¼ cup sour cream
Thin lime slices, for garnish
Fresh parsley sprigs, for garnish

In large glass bow, combine melon, lime juice, ginger, vodka, vinegar and sugar and chill for an hour or longer.

In blender or food processor, puree melon mixture. Add chicken broth and sour cream and blend again until smooth. Refrigerate, covered, for 30 minutes or longer.

Serve in chilled bowls. Garnish each with a floating lime slice topped by a sprig of parsley.

Serves 4 to 6.

Lemons add zest to variety of recipes

By PAUL BENSEN
Copley News Service

SHARON AKERS COPLEY NEWS SERVICE

CNS GRAPHIC

During the hot summer months, no ingredient in foods and drinks is more refreshing and cooling than lemons. Their tart, fresh flavor livens the palate and adds a zesty note to an endless variety of recipes. It is no coincidence that grated lemon peels are called "zest."

In almost all countries where hot weather lasts for most of the year, lemons play an important part in the national cuisine. They are very high in vitamin C, calcium and potassium and low in calories. For those on a low-sodium diet, lemons are a delicious way to liven up salt-free dishes.

Fish Fillets with Lemon-Caper Sauce is one of my favorite seafood recipes. I generally use grouper or scamp (a member of the grouper family), but any flaky, firm-fleshed white meat fish fillets will do.

Here are a few hints that will help any chef take advantage of a lemon's versatility:

Add a bit of lemon juice to rice or potatoes to enhance flavor.

Add a tablespoon or so of fresh lemon juice to hot and cold soups — everything from chicken soup to Vichyssoise.

In recipes that call for grated lemon rind, or zest, use only the colored part of the rind, since the white portion underneath is bitter.

For a great steak marinade, combine lemon juice, dry white wine, prepared mustard and soy sauce. Baste the steak while it cooks over charcoal.

Lemon juice, butter and a dash of Tabasco makes a great sauce for vegetables and fish.

A tablespoon of lemon juice added to water in which vegetables are cooked will preserve the vegetables' color and enhance their flavor.

Soaking lemons in hot water for a couple of minutes before squeezing them will make them release more of their juice.

FISH FILLETS WITH LEMON-CAPER SAUCE
1 pound firm, white fish fillets
2 tablespoons fresh lemon juice
¼ cup dry white wine or dry sherry
2 tablespoons capers, drained
½ teaspoon anchovy paste
1 teaspoon Dijon mustard
1 teaspoon dill weed
5 tablespoons butter
2 scallions, finely chopped
1 heaping tablespoon sour cream
Flour for dredging
Salt and pepper to taste
Chopped fresh parsley (about 1 tablespoon) for garnish
Parsley sprigs (for garnish)

In a non-stick skillet, heat 4 ablespoons butter over medium-high heat. Dredge fillets in flour, saute 3 to 4 minutes per side until crisp and lightly browned. Add salt and pepper while sauteing. When done, set aside and keep warm. Add remaining 1 tablespoon butter, lemon juice and wine to skillet. Add scallions and continue to saute briefly. Add remaining ingredients except sour cream and parsley, simmer, stirring, for a minute or two. At the last minute, stir in sour cream and pour over fillets. Garnish with parsley and serve.

Serves 2.

AGUA LIMON
(Tart Moroccan lemonade)
2 tablespoons grated lemon rind
Water
½ teaspoon sugar
¼ cup fresh lemon juice

In stainless steel saucepan, place 2 cups water and grated lemon rind. Brin to boil, reduce heat and simmer 10 minutes. Remove from heat and allow to cool.

In large glass container with tightly fitting lid, combine 2 cups water with one-half teaspoon sugar. Stir until sugar is completely dissolved, add water-/lemon rind mixture and lemon juice.

Chill, covered, for at least an hour. Taste, adding a bit more sugar if desired (the lemonade should be quite tart). Strain the mixture and serve over ice.

Makes 1 quart.

LEMON SANGRIA
4 cups dry white wine
3 lemons, thinly sliced, peel left on
1 orange, thinly sliced, peel left on
1 tart apple, cored, peeled and sliced
4 ounces green seedless grapes
¼ cup sugar
6 ounces Cognac
12 ounces sparkling water
Fresh strawberries for garnish (optional)

In pitcher, combine all ingredients except sparkling water and refrigerate vernight (or at least 4 hours). Immediately before serving, add sparkling water and 12 to 16 ice cubes. Stir, pour without ice into chilled glasses. Garnish each glass with fresh strawberry, if desired.

Makes 1½ quarts.

Lemon souffle lightened for summer

By United Press International

CHICAGO — It's summertime when you want the living to be easy and the food to be light. Heavy desserts devoured at Christmastime sink like lead in July.

Chef Jennifer Newbury of Amerique restaurant applied her motto of "uncomplicated but distinctive" in lightening a traditional French lemon souffle by using egg whites instead of cream and flour for strength.

"We try to keep the food simple but give it one or two characteristics that are really striking both in appearance and in taste," Newbury explained. "Nothing too weird — no fish in blueberry sauce."

Use up the leftover egg yolks by making a Creme Anglaise, a light custard sauce. At the table, poke a hole in the center of the souffle and pour the sauce into it.

LEMON SOUFFLE
3 large lemons
½ cup granulated sugar
2 egg yolks
8 egg whites at room temperature

Peel the yellow rind off the lemons, taking no white with it. Cut the rind into fine julienne strips. Juice the lemons.

In a small saucepan, combine the lemon juice, julienned lemon rind and sugar. Simmer over medium-low heat about 10-15 minutes until the liquid is reduced and thick. Let cool. In a separate bowl whisk the egg yolks and combine them with the cooled mixture.

In another bowl, beat two egg whites until stiff but not dry. Fold in one large tablespoon of souffle base into the whites.

With a spatula, mound the mixture in a single-serving buttered souffle dish so it stands about three inches above the lip of the dish. Repeat for each souffle.

Bake for 5-7 minutes in a 450 degree oven. Makes 4-6 souffles. Newbury says you can substitute other citrus fruits for lemons. Tangerines work especially well.

CREME ANGLAISE
4 egg yolks
½ cup sugar
2 cups half and half

Beat the yolks and sugar in an electric mixer until thick and lemon-colored. Scald the half and half. Pour a small amount of this into the egg and sugar mixture to raise its temperature so you won't scramble the eggs.

Transfer the rest of the half-and-half to the top of a simmering double boiler. Pour the warmed egg-sugar mixture into the half-and-half and whisk it until it thickens. Strain out any lumps.

Author links diet, job success

By JOHN DeMERS
United Press International

NEW YORK — After 33 moderately successful books, June Roth is hoping the bestseller lists have room for at least one more diet book or one more book on how to get rich.

To that end, the New Jersey nutritionist has teamed up with a California psychiatrist and turned out a volume that is both.

Roth and Dr. Harvey Ross of Los Angeles call their book "The Executive Success Diet" (McGraw-Hill, $16.95) and link what is in essence basic nutrition to performance on the job.

They hope that in the book business, being both fish and fowl proves to be their ticket.

A kind of crash course in good eating, the highly readable volume draws its inspiration from the fact that poor nutrition can result in subpar job performance, wasted work hours and extended periods of inadequate concentration.

In accordance with their low-fat, high-energy approach to things, the two promote "double density nutrients" (food combinations that meet several needs at once) to combat stress and potential degenerative diseases.

They even offer a five-day workweek diet plan for weight loss and permanent maintenance of desired weight.

Despite the book's actual applications to just about anybody, many of its more interesting sections take on specific elements of today's tension-filled executive existence.

For starters, the authors suggest an "apple break" instead of the standard coffee break, insisting their method provides sustained energy rather than the speedy roller coaster brought on by sugar and caffeine. Coffee, they say, should be reserved for after dinner.

Roth and Ross suggest a healthful "pre-breakfast" before important breakfast meetings, wiping out the overnight hunger that inspires gorging on low-productivity foods like eggs and sausage.

In a separate section of the book, Roth and Ross stress the importance of exercise in conjunction with proper diet — even when executives are traveling on business. They serve up a companion list of physical fitness centers across the United States.

"The Executive Success Diet" is packed with solid information on nutrition and its relationship to human activity, at whatever level it takes place. Yet it does find space for some of Roth's recipes that clearly demonstrate her food thinking.

Here are her simple instructions for making Poached Sole Rolls and Chicken Thighs and Pepper. Each recipe serves 4.

POACHED SOLE ROLLS
8 mushrooms, finely chopped
4 teaspoon fresh chopped parsley
20 ounces filet of sole
1½ cup water
2 teaspoon lemon juice
½ teaspoon dill weed
Paprika

Arrange mushrooms and parsley over surface of fish. Roll up filets and place seam-side down in small skillet. Pour water around fish rolls. Add lemon juice and dill to water.

Sprinkle paprika over fish. Cover and bring to a boil. Reduce heat and simmer for 7 minutes, or until fish flakes easily.

CHICKEN THIGHS AND PEPPER
8 chicken thighs
1 large onion, sliced
2 green bell peppers, seeded and cubed
1 red bell pepper, seeded and cubed
½ cup sliced mushrooms
1 28-ounce can chopped tomatoes
½ teaspoon dried basil
½ teaspoon oregano
¼ teaspoon black pepper

Place chicken thighs in a large skillet. Add onion, peppers, mushrooms and tomatoes. Add basil, oregano and pepper. Cover and simmer over low heat for 30 minutes, or until tender.

DEAR ABBY

Co-ed's friendship causes concern

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: My granddaughter, "Annette," 18, just graduated from high school. She was a straight-A student. She's been accepted by the college of her choice for pre-med and plans to pursue a medical career. In filling out the form for a roommate, she wrote the following: "I would like very much to share my room with 'Cecille,' as we are close friends and have been cohabitating."

I'm sure she didn't mean for me to see it, but I am paying for her housing and the form was with the housing contract. I told her I thought she had made a poor choice of words as someone might think that she and Cecille were lesbians. I received no answer. I don't know whether she changed the wording on the form, but when her father reached for it, she grabbed it and informed him that it was "personal."

Abby, these two girls have been close friends through grammar and high school. Annette has never been involved with any boy, but I assumed it was because her father was so strict he scared them away.

I wouldn't be surprised if there is something between these girls. Neither looks the part, but who can tell? I want to warn my granddaughter about the dangers of this sort of relationship. Please give me some idea of how to approach it. — ANONYMOUS, PLEASE

DEAR ANONYMOUS: I don't know what kind of "dangers" you foresee, but I think it would be inappropriate for you to approach the subject of your granddaughter's sexuality. She's 18, and is entitled to privacy. Furthermore, she's asked for no discussion, so "if it ain't broke, don't fix it."

DEAR ABBY: I am writing about my pet peeve, which I have never seen aired in your column. It's people (usually senior citizens) who talk to bank cashiers, grocery clerks, salespeople, etc. about their aches and pains, the weather, etc., while others are lined up waiting to be helped.

I am often in a hurry because I am on my lunch hour or have an appointment, and when I am held up by one of these characters, I could scream. Yesterday I stood in line behind a woman at a busy supermarket checkout counter while she showed the cashier pictures of her grandchild!

Please print this for people who don't know how frustrating this can be. — UP TO HERE IN DOWNER'S GROVE

DEAR UP: Most people who serve the public know a variety of ways to get such folks to move along. It takes only a moment to acknowledge a proud grandmother with a kind word and a smile. Slow down.

DEAR ABBY: I've wanted to do this for years. I should have written long ago to compliment you, rather than waiting until criticism was the order of the day.

However, "Confused" wrote to say that when her 3-year-old child was killed by a hit-and-run driver, she donated the child's organs without the consent of the baby's father. She asked if she was wrong, and you said "No."

Abby, you missed the point entirely. No matter how commendable her desire to save lives by such a generous gesture, she had no right to do this without the consent of the baby's father. This was his child, too. Giving such consent without his permission was inexcusable. Doing so surreptitiously and against his forcefully expressed wishes was probably actionable by law.

Once again, I agree with her idea, but the way she accomplished it was fraudulent and borders on the criminal. Sign me — A FATHER IN BAYTOWN, TEXAS

DEAR FATHER: You might be interested in knowing that my mail is running 3-to-1 in your favor.

(Problems? Write to Abby. For a personal, unpublished reply, send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to Abby, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038. All correspondence is confidential.)

Retired waitress teaches art of waiting tables

New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — "It's like skiing or roller-skating," said Brianna Sutton, as she first balanced a tray of dishes on one hand, then confidently set them down on a nearby table. "You've got to bend your knees."

Sutton, 40 years old, was talking about waiting on tables, a calling to which she has devoted more than half her life. Last February, she decided to hang up her uniform and market those skills she had acquired. The result: a course on the art of waiting on tables.

"I really love the restaurant business," said Sutton, who estimated she had worked at more than two dozen restaurants in New York and Florida during the past 21 years. "I want to pass on what I know to other people."

Sutton started out with a handful of students who answered an advertisement in a local newspaper. By the end of the month, boosted by referrals from former bosses, she moved the class from her one-bedroom New York apartment to the fully equipped kitchen and dining room on the second floor of the Manhattan restaurant, QD McGraws. So far, about 250 students have paid $50 each to gain some insight, according to Sutton. She said the twice-weekly classes, which she limits to six students, are filled through July.

Most of her students are between the ages of 20 and 40; half are men, half are women. Although a few have had some experience as cashiers, bartenders and hostesses, most have never worked in a restaurant.

Bob Balconis, a 33-year-old real-estate broker, said he was interested in learning to wait on tables so that he would have a skill to fall back on. "It can be a seasonal thing," said Balconis, referring to his real-estate job. "You want something to tide you over."

Sutton, who is divorced and has a 19-year-old daughter, began waiting on tables at an New York coffee shop to pay for college. She graduated from New York University in 1967 with a degree in psychology, but found jobs waiting on tables — at which she sometimes earned $800 a week in tips alone — too lucrative to give up.

Sutton tells her students that homework is essential to becoming a successful waiter or waitress. Before applying for a job, for example, she suggested they become familiar with the clientele the restaurant attracts, with its menu and price range.

Even after being hired, she said, homework remains crucial. Waiters and waitresses should make sure they know the daily specials being offered. "It's going to make you look foolish if you go to a table and they ask you what the soup of the day is and you say, 'I don't know,' " she explained.

Sutton also provides tips on more delicate matters, such as which diner should be handed the check. On this topic, she told four students at a recent class, diplomacy counts. Usually one of the diners will motion for the check. But when this does not happen, she said, the safest bet is to place the check, face down, in the center of the table.

Being a waiter or waitress, Sutton said, takes more than just strong feet — it is a matter of attitude. "If you don't have the right temperament, you're not going to make it."

Quiche Lorraine served as hors d'oeuvres

By TOM HOGE
Associated Press

One of the nicest memories I have of my days covering the United Nations General Assembly was the delicious food offered at the receptions.

One dish served by most nations was the classic French hors d'oeuvre known as quiche Lorraine. This crusty concoction became a favorite among Americans, many of whom refer to it as cheese custard pie.

Quiche had its origins in the French province of Lorraine. Early recipes called for bacon and cream, but cheese was later added. Sometimes sauteed onions are included.

The French usually make the dish into pie-sized portions and serve the slices as a luncheon or supper entree, accompanied by a green salad and dry white wine.

Today, quiche is usually made from eggs, cream, bacon and Gruyere or Swiss cheese, a mixture which fills a pastry shell and is baked until golden brown.

QUICHE

1 9-inch pie shell
1 egg white, beaten
¼ pound sliced bacon
2 cups milk or cream
3 whole eggs
¼ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon white pepper
A grating of nutmeg
1 teaspoon chopped chives
½ cup diced Swiss cheese

Brush pie shell with egg white, and prick well. Cook bacon until it is almost crisp. Drain and crumble. Scald milk, cool slightly, then beat together with eggs, salt, pepper, nutmeg and chives. Sprinkle broken up bacon in bottom of pie shell and add diced Swiss cheese. Pour egg-milk mixture over it. Bake 35 to 40 minutes in preheated 375-degree oven, until top is a golden brown. Serves 6.

Vehicle sales tax to join electronic banking

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

More and more, county-level tax money is speeding rapidly to the state coffers.

Motor-vehicle sales taxes are being deposited faster now through hometown banks, which electronically transfer state tax funds to Texas Treasurer Ann Richards for quick deposits, speedier interest gathering, and ready spending.

The electronic transfer of motor-vehicle sales taxes will increase by $250,000 the added interest which the state will receive due to cutting back on lag time in transferring funds from counties to the state capital.

Motor-vehicle sales taxes from Midland County will join the rush to electronic banking this September, said Midland County Tax Assessor-Collector Frances Shuffield.

"The minute the check is written," said Ms. Shuffield, "we'll take it over and put it in the bank for the state."

Last year, Midland County collected $7.3-million in automotive sales taxes, kept its lawful 5 percent or $366,000 and sent 95 percent or $6.95-million to the treasurer.

Currently, a courier each Monday picks up a check which reflects 95 percent of motor-vehicle sales taxes collected by Ms. Shuffield and routes it to the state treasurer. But beginning in September, Ms. Shuffield each week will deposit the check in the treasurer's account at Republic-Bank First National Midland. From there, the funds will be routed to Austin.

"We're using the best technology available to earn as much money as we can for the state," said Texas Comptroller Bob Bullock, "and Texas sure needs every penny we can get now."

Fifteen of the state's largest counties are on the rapid-deposit pilot program. By September, 48 of Texas' largest counties will have implemented the program. In fiscal year 1985, motor-vehicle sales taxes generated almost $900-million in revenue for the state.

Instead of making weekly deposits, the tax assessor-collectors in the state's largest counties, such as Dallas, Harris, Tarrant and Bexar, make daily deposits "because there's so much money there, especially in Harris (Houston) County," noted Ms. Shuffield. "It's in the multi-millions."

Prior to 1981, recalled Ms. Shuffield, motor-vehicle sales taxes and reports were dispatched to Austin on a monthly basis.

"Then the state started experimenting by getting the bigger accounts in faster by paying on a weekly basis," Ms. Shuffield said.

In the mid-1980s, the larger counties started forwarding the state's 95 percent on a daily basis.

"Harris County had a fortune in money they were sitting on," she said.

Midland County will continue to forward the sales revenue to the state on a weekly basis but by electronic banking rather than by courier.

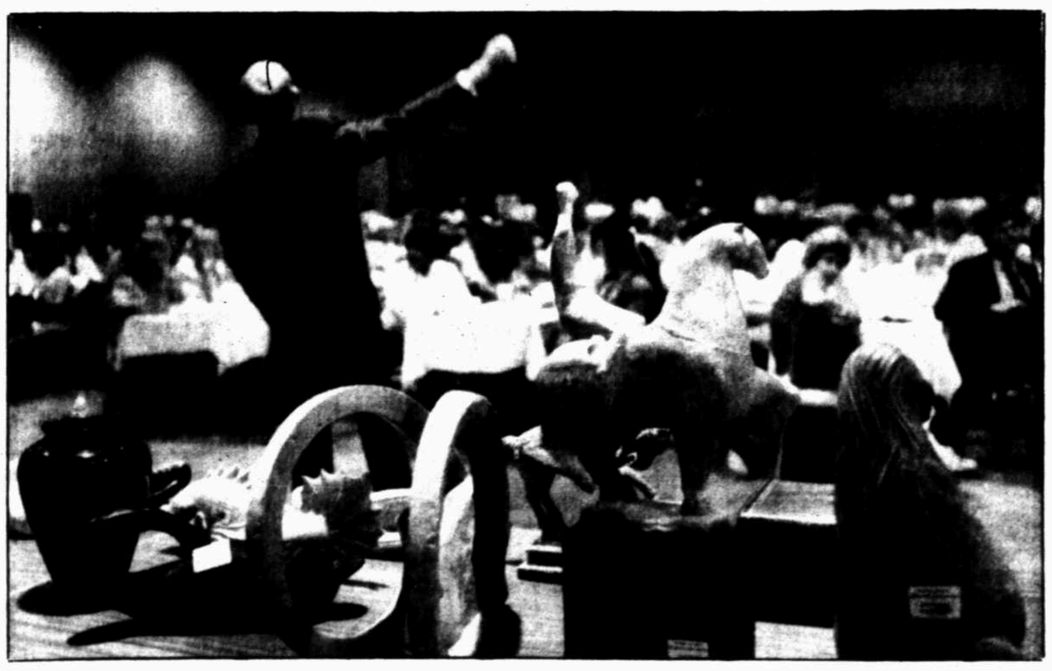

Rapid deposits won't benefit Midland County, Ms. Shuffield said. "The state of Texas is setting it up for its own benefit."

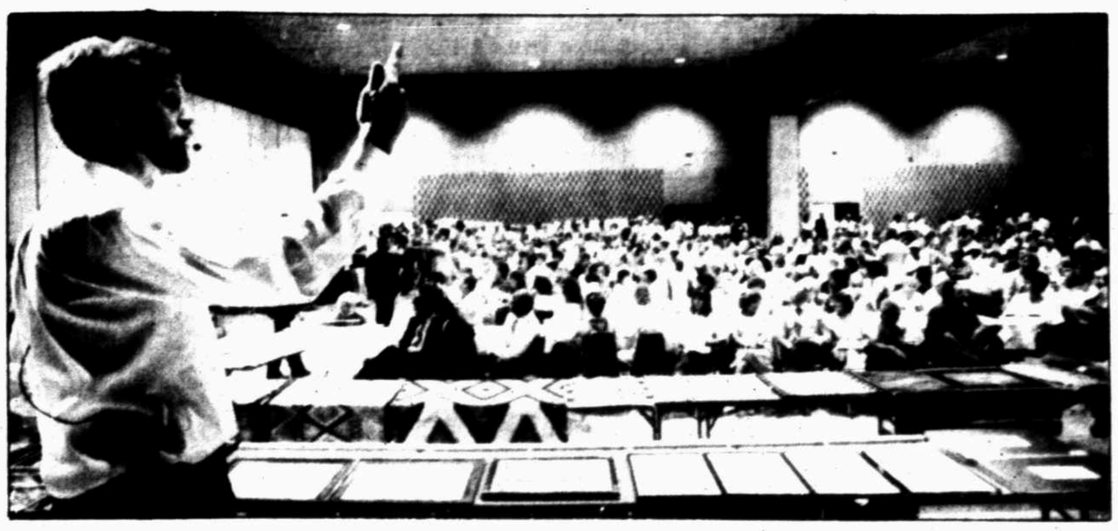

With the rapid-deposit system, tax assessor-collectors are getting tax funds in faster to the state, are cutting the lag time, and the state can earn interest on the funds or otherwise invest it, said Ms. Shuffield.

But faster doesn't always mean more.

In 1981, 35,142 new and used vehicles were transferred in Midland County. "That's when the boom hit," Ms. Shuffield noted. In 1985, new-and-used car title transfers decreased to 31,238 — which reflected the economic slump. The recent low year was 1983, when 28,499 titles were transferred.

Midlanders pack center to buy repossessed art

By RAMONA NYE
Staff Writer

Seeking images of better days when oil derricks fought for room in crowded fields and cowboys ruled the plains, as many as 400 Midlanders turned out to vie for western art pieces auctioned off Tuesday night.

Photos and lithographs of oil gushers and booming oil towns were among the 295 art pieces sold at the Midland Center packed with a standing-room-only crowd of some 600 people.

The pieces were repossessed by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. from Permian Basin and eastern New Mexico banks.

"Seems like the people here in Midland-Odessa like western art. For some reason Midland is very art conscious and the people with the money will be here tonight," said Cleatious Thomas, before the show.

"A lot of local people buy pieces so they can remember the boom days of Midland," said Thomas, a 23-year veteran of FDIC art auctions.

Nothing escaped the auctioneer's block including a framed sign from a defunct bank reading, "Thank You For Your Patience While We Expand To Better Serve Your Needs."

Auctioneer Mark Thomas of the Texarkana-based firm Mark C. Thomas & Associates, said he wasn't surprised by the large turnout of about 400 registered bidders.

Curiosity about how banks decorated probably brought the large number of registered bidders, Thomas said.

"I know the banks I do business with are not decorating with this kind of stuff. It's interesting to see they had the nerve to spend money on this kind of stuff," Thomas said.

However some Midlanders said they were disappointed with the quality of the art pieces.

"We expected originals and all they had were prints and lithographs. A serious investor wouldn't buy it," said Pam Schaefer of Midland.

But, Ms. Schaefer and her husband Bill, said they got a good bargain by paying $155 for a Doug West lithograph that they had seen listed for $500 in some art galleries.

Like the Schaefers, most of the crowd didn't seem to be serious art investors, but just curious buyers seeking a bargain to decorate their living room with.

"We're not collectors. We were just kinda curious. I haven't attended many auctions," said Anita Douglass.

Another registered buyer, Bill Oliver, said, "We are not art collectors. We just came to check out what they had and to make a good deal."

Auction prices ranged from $1 to $3,500 taken for a bronze piece entitled "The Last Coup" by Dave McGary.

The total take from Tuesday night was more than $55,000, Thomas said.

United Way's goal: To raise every last penny that's possible

By HOLLY LONGABERGER
Staff Writer

At this year's United Way Pilot Campaign Kick-off, Tom Wageman, campaign chairman, said he would not announce a set goal, rather "our goal is to raise every last penny we possibly can."

The campaign began Tuesday with a luncheon at Midland's Hilton Hotel. Attending were the 19 pilot companys' United Way representatives and coordinators.

Wageman suggested that setting a goal would be disappointing espécially if it was not met.

"I do not want to presume any amount. We need as much as we can get."

The pilot campaign will run until September 12. The general campaign will begin September 24.

The pilot campaign, explained Cindy Ford, United Way's communication director, is a pre-campaign in which local companies help raise money before the general campaign starts.

"It enables the United Way to get a head start," she said.

The companies give donations as well as ask their employees to give.

Last year the pilot companies raised nearly $395,000 while the overall campaign raised more than $2 million dollars, Wageman said.

"The agencies we support need more help this year. There is more pain, more hurt because of the economy."

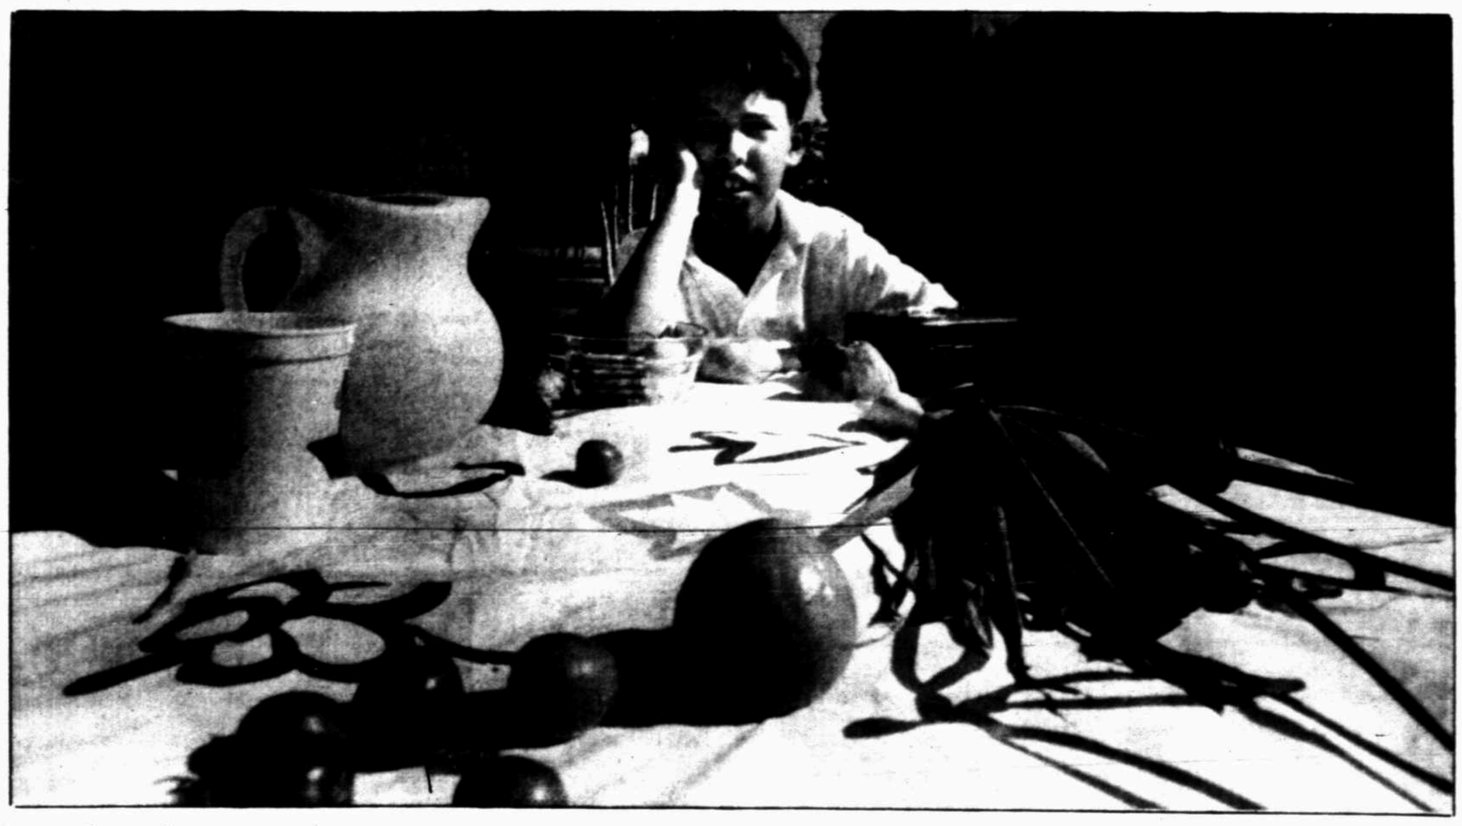

Wageman said he feels that Midlanders will give more because that is the way they are.

"Midland has been hurting since the first oil bust in 1982-1983. However, we have been able to raise more money each year. People respond to our needs."

Wageman said he wanted companies to focus on their employees and ask them to carry his or her fair share.

"There are approximately 44,000 working people in Midland County and if we can get each of those people to give $45 we will match last year's $2 million dollars without corporate contributions."

Trial scheduled for accused murderer

From Staff Reports

The trial for a Midland man accused in the brutal bludgeoning death of a furniture salesman four years ago is set to begin Aug. 12 in 142nd State District Court.

James Robert Chambers, 25, is scheduled to be tried before Judge Pat Baskin for the June 9, 1982, murder of 45-year-old Wylie Randolph Wilson, a salesman for Aladdin House Furniture.

Wilson's body was found by a group of oil field workers the next day in a pasture along County Road 160, about one-half mile east of FM 1379.

Two brothers, Leroy McKee and Elroy McKee of Midland, were arrested for the robbery and murder in August 1985 after the case was reopened by the Midland County Sheriff's office.

Elroy McKee, 25, was tried in March and received a life sentence for the murder and 20 years for robbery. Leroy McKee, also 25, pleaded guilty to the robbery in May and was sentenced to 20 years in prison.

Chambers was arrested April 25 and another co-defendant, Jackie Dorn, 32, was arrested April 24 following their indictment for the murder April 23.

After his body was found, police found Wilson's blood-spattered car parked at the Kingsway Inn Apartments, 3801 W. Wall.

According to testimony in Elroy McKee's murder trial, on the night of June 9 the brothers and two other men returned to the apartment of Patricia McKee, Leroy's ex-wife, who lived at Kingsway Inn. She testified the men had blood on the clothes, and she said Elroy told her they had killed a man for his jewelry.

The State's other witnesses in the case were four inmates at the Midland County Jail who testified they had heard Elroy McKee talk about the case.

Odessa man remains jailed in lieu of bond

By FRANK TROMBLEY

ODESSA — A 27-year-old West Odessa man remained in the Ector County jail today in lieu of $250,000 bond on charges of aggravated robbery and kidnapping.

Sheriff's Capt. Gene Kloss said deputies returned Delbert Ray Dale, 8100 W. University, to Odessa from Toyah in Reeves County where he was arrested by Reeves County sheriff's deputies Tuesday morning.

Kloss said Dale was arraigned before a Reeves County peace justice on an arrest warrant issued by Ector County Peace Justice Manuel Valles. He was returned to Ector County Tuesday night by sherrif's deputies.

Dale is accused in Ector County of the early Tuesday robbery of Jean's Lounge, 2200 FM 1936, and the kidnapping of a 30-year-old barmaid. Kloss said the woman also was allegedly rape, but that offense occurred in Reeves County and Dale is charged there with aggravated sexual assault.

According to Kloss, the woman called her employer about 7:40 a.m. Tuesday and told her what had happened. Kloss said the woman told investigating officers she had been getting ready to close the bar about 2 a.m. Tuesday when a customer who had been in the bar for some time came up behind her, struck her with a pool cue and pulled a knife.

She stated he took about $200 from the cash register, then forced her to leave the bar and get into her car. According to the woman, the man drove west on Interstate 20 until they reached Reeves County where she was sexually assaulted.

Kloss said the woman managed to escape after her car broke down near Toyah. Reeves County deputies took the woman back to where the car had broken down and found Dale sitting near the car, he said.

Water shortage to be 8.1 billion gallons yearly by 2000

Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The director of the Texas Water Development Board Tuesday sided with thirsty West Texans and against the Concho River Snake in a letter to the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers.

Charles Nemir told the corps that only the proposed Stacy Dam can practically meet the future water demand of the Colorado River Basin. A draft environmental impact statement from the corps said the dam would threaten the 18-inch river snake's only homeland.

"While the TWDB supports the efforts of the Fish and Wildlife Service to conserve and protect wildlife species from possible extinction, it cannot support continued delay of Stacy Reservoir because of the proposed listing of the Concho Water Snake as threatened with critical habitat," Nemir wrote.

Nemir noted that the state's water plan projects the Colorado River Municipal Water District will have an annual shortage of 8.1 billion gallons by the year 2000 without the reservoir. Alternatives to Stacy are more expensive, he said, adding that the CRMWD has no water rights for any alternative water supplies.

"The administrative and judicial process necessary to obtain such water rights is lengthy," he wrote. "At best, the alternatives identified would likely not provide water to the CRMWD customers until after water shortages begin to occur."

Austin officials to probe cyanide burial grounds

AUSTIN (AP) — Austin city officials, surprised at a report that the Austin State Hospital buried a pound of deadly cyanide 20 years ago in a cemetery, say they want an investigation to determine if it is dangerous.

"It sounds important enough to pursue, without a doubt," said Ramon Miguez, the city's assistant director of public works.

Laura De La Garza, an employee of the city's environmental office, said the reported burial of the cyanide and other toxic chemicals at a state cemetery near Waller Creek in North Austin would be investigated.

The Austin American-Statesman said it learned of the burial from Fred Lara, a retired doctor of pharmacy and the former director of the state hospital's biochemical and toxicology. A pound contains more than 400,000 milligrams. Lara said he was reminded of the burial by publicity of the hospital's recent donation of a rare collection of brains and other organs of former mental patients to the University of Texas at Austin.

Kenny Dudley, superintendent of the state hospital, said he vaguely remembered Lara telling him something about the burial earlier this year after a series of articles in the American-Statesman about the hospital.

"If the city wants to look into it, we'll help them try and figure out what's there," Dudley said. "If someone thinks there's something out there that shouldn't be and they want to check, we'll cooperate."

In the late 1950s or early 1960s, Lara said he supervised the burial of about 100 brains from the hospital's collection in half-gallon glass jars — some of them cracked and leaking toxic formaldehyde preservative — along with the pound of potassium cyanide and other toxic chemicals in smaller bottles.

He said the burial took place under a large shade tree in the northwest corner of the cemetery that is just southeast of the Highland Plaza shopping center, a few yards from Waller Creek in Northeast Austin.

An employee of the hospital, who asked not to be identified, told the American-Statesman Lara's recollection of the burial although the employee thought it had been done in the mid-1960s.

Practitioner's slight of hand used off duty

By BILL LAMB

HONEY GROVE (AP) — There's a twinkle in Dr. Ralph Marcom's dark eyes that says he's not your average general practitioner.

But don't worry, it's all slight of hand. Maybe.

Marcom, you see, is a magician, a professional with an amateur standing who divides his time between treating patients in his downtown office and amazing audiences around the world with prestidigitation.

"I had the usual interest in magic that most kids do," Marcom said, "and was becoming rather proficient at it when I was a kid."

While his interest in magic has been lifelong, his career, as such, didn't begin until much later. After he played Lucifer to introduce horror movies for a West Texas television station. After he appeared in stage productions. And after he attended medical school and became a doctor.

"Sometime in 1967...I was walking down the street in Dallas. And I happened to glance down...Ervay Street and saw the sign: Douglas Magic Land," he said.

Marcom remembered that as a child he ordered his magic equipment from the store. So he dropped in, browsed, bought and kept returning.

"You must have a desire to perform magic for people. ...Many of the best magicians I've ever seen started off all by themselves, just as I did."

— Dr. Ralph Marcom

"That was the beginning of my resurgence of interest in magic, but primarily in the blonde behind the counter."

The blonde was Gloria, also known by her stage name: Vampira. She's now Mrs. Marcom.

"I bought one of everything in the joint, then I got the best trick of all. I married her," said Marcom.

"She has her own act which she has been doing for years. She works with fire and coffins and skulls, that sort of thing. She's won two trophies with the act, once in California with the Pacific Coast Association of Magicians and at the Texas association."

Marcom has also won three trophies for himself.

He and his wife are also heavily involved in the Texas Association of Magicians. Marcom is a former president of the organization.

Their magic has taken them all over the United States and to other countries. One of their favorite locations is Waxahachie, site of the annual Renaissance Festival. Marcom dresses the part of a magician in the 1600s and performs for the crowd. It's his favorite type of magic, close-up, where the audience can clearly see the trick. But they still don't know how it's done.

And Marcom — or any other magician — won't tell you. If he did, well, the "magic" would then be gone.

So how does one become a magician?

"First of all, you must evince an interest in it that is more than just idle curiosity," said Marcom.

"You must have a desire to perform magic for people.

"Once you can convince a magician that you are sincere, he'll more than likely sort of take you under his wing and teach you a few things. Then you can join the various magic societies."

To do that, you must pass tests, including a qualifying act.

"Many of the best magicians I've ever seen started off all by themselves, just as I did."

Marcom said he didn't know that magic organizations existed until he met his wife.

"Our first date was to a Dallas Magic Club meeting," he said.

Marcom performs a trick for a visitor to his office. There are four cards, all aces of each suit. They are all face down in his hands. He turns them and stacks them, never flipping them over.

As he sorts them repeatedly, one card, then others appear face up — like magic.

It's his favorite type of trick, close-up, the cards only 18 inches from the viewer's eyes. How is it done? Who knows.

His home — a large, two-story house — is filled with the world of magic and mysticism. Sketches of wizards, a suit of armor and surrealistic scenes of fantasy adorn it.

One room is filled with mementos of his career and photos of fellow magicians, friends and family.

He and Gloria were married on Halloween, he said. Each October, they invite friends, including many magicians, to a combination anniversary and Halloween party. Usually, he said, the affair includes impromptu magic performances.

And Vampira? She only performs about once every four or five years. When she performs, his wife, said, she wants people to be anxious to see it. Performing too often would burn out the audience.

Magic is an old standard as entertainment. But Marcom said by keeping the illusions unique or developing new ways to perform the old, magic can manage to keep pace.

Midland College counseling, pre-registration set to begin

From Staff Reports

Early counseling and pre-registration for Midland College's fall semester begins Monday.

Persons planning to enroll in credited courses should pre-register in the Office of Student Services, Administration Building.

Hours for the first two weeks are 7 a.m. to 8 p.m., Monday through Thursday. Hours for the final week are 7 a.m. to 5 p.m., Monday through Thursday.

When students have completed early counseling and pre-registration, they are given time permits.

The permits assign students specific 15-minute periods to report for official registration on either August 26 or 27.

Dee Windsor, associate dean of students and registrar, said time permits relieve congestion and allow those who pre-register early to obtain classes which fit their personal schedules and to obtain places in classes which might have limitations on class size.

"We will be using a computerized system this time that eliminates returning students from having to duplicate information each time they enroll again," Windsor said.

"We developed this system and began using it during the two summer registration periods and it worked quite well. A returning student has only to provide name and social security number, then a print-out lists the rest of the required information from previous years. The student checks this, makes necessary changes, signs it, and is finished."

First-time students should see counselors to discuss their college plans, later transfers to other colleges or universities, and career goals.

The 1986 graduates of Midland, Lee, Greenwood High Schools are eligible for scholarships from the Abell-Hanger Foundation. The scholarships provide payment for books, tuition, and fees up to a maximum of $325 per student per semester.

Students should bring their high school transcripts and scholarship forms with them to pre-registration.

Graduates may enroll full-time or part-time, but must take a minimum of six hours per semester.

New student orientation will be from 8 a.m. to 1 p.m., August 25 and 29. Classes begin September 2.

Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby to visit city on Thursday

From Staff Reports

Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby will visit Midland Thursday as part of a seven-city tour to meet with business leaders and taxpayers concerning the state budget and the upcoming special legislative session.

Hobby's visit here is scheduled for 2 p.m. at Mission Country Club.

Hobby is the top state official who has indicated that in addition to proposed budget cuts, it is likely a tax increase will be needed in order for the state to meet its responsibilities.

Many House and Senate members are opposing a tax increase.

According to Hobby aides, he will discuss the "state's revenue shortfall, the impact of proposed budget cuts and other options for solving the problem."

Sherriff's Department reports theft of homemade trailer

From Staff Reports

Police Roundup

The Midland County Sheriff's Department is investigating the theft Tuesday of a homemade trailer valued at $15,000.

Jimmy Mauldin, 219 S. Crestview, told deputies the trailer, which was used as a barbecue stand, was stolen about 11 p.m. from the southwest corner of County Road 1140 and Highway 307.

The theft of a fusion machine, used to join pipe and valued at $6,700, was stolen from a work site on FM 1788. Stephanie Wiesen reported the theft, and told deputies the machine belonged to Onda-Lay Pipe, 1901 W.Industrial Ave. According to reports, the burglary occurred after dark Tuesday.

The burglary of a vehicle was also reported Wednesday. A pit gauge valued at $300, tool box valued at $197, a stereo cassette player valued at $75, and two extension cords valued at $36 were stolen from a 1981 pickup truck belonging to AMF Tuboscope. Johnny Lemon told deputies the vehicle was parked in the Joe D. Hughes Yard, on Solo Rd. when the burglary occurred.

The burglary of a .22 caliber automatic rifle valued at $95, a lawnmower valued at $35, and a porcelain bowl valued at $25 from a residence was reported Tuesday. The victim, Irene Reyes, told deputies the burglary occurred between 8:15 and 9 p.m.

The Midland Police Department Wednesday reported the burglary of a couch, loveseat, coffee table, and end table valued at $1,500. Kim Young, 4700 Boulder Dr., told police the furniture and an AM-FM eight-track stereo valued at $300 was reported stolen from the residence.

Two auto burglaries were also reported to police.

Richard Pitts, 1306 S. Woode, reported a stereo cassette player valued at $290 and speakers valued at $125 were stolen from his vehicle early today while it was parked at his residence. The burglary apparently occurred between 10:30 p.m. Tuesday and 4:20 a.m. today.

In other reports, a revolver valued at $325, and a gun case and ammunition valued at $30 were reported stolen from a vehicle parked in the 3700 block of Gaston. Reports said the burglary occurred Tuesday between 1:40 p.m. and 2:20 p.m.

TAX

Ms. Shuffield noted that vehicle registration-tag sales in Midland County have dropped by 1,885 — about 3.1 percent — from June 1985 to June 1986. Tag sales dropped from 60,603 to 58,708.

"We're just not having the purchase of new vehicles which we had in prior years," said Ms. Shuffield. "When sales are down, taxes are down."

Through May, though, vehicle registrations were "running even-Steven," she said. "We had a big drop in June. Apparently, there's an economic downturn or the people have moved out."

GOAL

Max Holman, division manager of Southwestern Bell Telephone Co., a pilot company, said that it should be a good year for United Way.

"Although the number of employees are down at Southwestern Bell, enthusiasm is great. We expect to see better results from last year," Holman said.

Council promises reduction of state's electricity bills

AUSTIN (AP) — City council members have promised to reduce the state's electric bills enough to keep the state from buying power from the Lower Colorado River Authority.

Mayor Frank Cooksey and other officials said Tuesday they did not know what the eventual rate would be but the state can expect some relief.

City officials conferred with Central Texas legislators about the effect of the state budget crisis on Austin's economy.

The possibility of the state buying power from the LCRA instead of the city was first raised earlier this year. It is being examined again by state officials in view of the $3.5 billion deficit forecast by Comptroller Bob Bullock.

The State Purchasing and General Services Commission has said the state could save between $2 million and $3 million a year by buying from LCRA under present arrangements.

Assistant City Manager Gary Hunt told the council Tuesday that the city needs large customers such as the state to spread costs among a wider range of rate payers and to hold down rates.

Volunteer firefighters sift through what remains of a mobile home that burned Monday night through the morning, killing a mother and her two children in a subdivision just north of Jonestown. The father suffered third degree burns and was hospitalized in Austin.

At least two people die in mobile home fire

AUSTIN (AP) — At least two people died in a fire that destroyed a mobile home in a subdivision north of Jonestown and investigators searched for a third body, authorities said.

The body of Chance Thatcher had not been found late Tuesday amid the rubble of a mobile home in Southwestern Travis County, said detective Jerry Wiggins of the Travis County Sheriff's Department.

The bodies of the girl's mother, Theresa Ann Thatcher, 29, and her brother, Timothy Monroe Thatcher, 14 months, were found in a bedroom of the home in the Cherry Hollow subdivision, north of Jonestown, Wiggins said.

A 6-year-old girl is suspected to be the third victim of a fire that killed her mother and infant brother, Wiggins said.

The blaze was reported to the Sandy Creek Fire Department about 11:30 p.m. Monday, according to Lt. Max Blanton of the sheriff's office.

A resident of the mobile home, identified by authorities as David McKain, 35, was sleeping in the back bedroom of the mobile home when the fire broke out, Blanton said.

McKain ran to a neighbor's home for help, and the neighbor called the fire department, officials said.

McKain, who gave a Leander address, was taken to Brackenridge Hospital Tuesday with third-degree burns on his hands. His condition was listed as stable Tuesday, according to a hospital spokeswoman.

The survivor told investigators the missing girl had been in a bedroom with her mother and brother at one end of the mobile home when the fire broke out, authorities said.

Businessmen say Lt. Gov. Hobby's state deficit solutions preferable

By MICHELLE LOCKE

DALLAS (AP) — Business executives say Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby's plan to cope with a projected $3 billion shortfall by increasing and expanding the sales tax is preferable to going without state services.

Hobby spoke to a group of business executives in Dallas Tuesday as he started a statewide swing to popularize the proposal. A special session has been called for Aug. 6 to discuss the deficit.

Hobby admitted that selling a tax hike during an election year is a tough job. State Rep. Lee Jackson, R-Dallas, who was at the meeting, said he believes legislators are resigned to a tax increase, but there are differing opinions on when the tax bill should be passed.

After Hobby spoke, some of the executives asked whether Hobby's $650 million in budget cuts could be expanded and raised the possibility of using pari-mutuel betting and lotteries as revenue raisers. But most of the business people at the meeting expressed support for Hobby's plan.

Dr. Ron Anderson, chairman of Parkland Memorial Hospital in Dallas, said he supports the tax hike. "I think it's a statesman-like approach to the problem," he said.

Tom Timmons, a Dallas lawyer, also said he agrees with Hobby's plan. "People in Texas just do not want to sacrifice highways and education."

Hobby used a series of charts to detail the budget situation and the effect of budget cuts.

"The only rational way to solve this problem is to do it with some very significant budget cuts and some significant revenue raises," Hobby said.

Hobby admits that selling a tax increase in an election year is a tough job, but said the reaction so far has been unexpectedly positive.

His plan involves $650 million in budget cuts, including rolling back a promised 3 percent raise for state employees, and a $2.25 billion tax bill. His tour will continue in Lubbock, Amarillo and El Paso on Wednesday. On Thursday he will be in El Paso and Midland and on Friday in San Antonio.

Hobby said the state can no longer rely on the tax revenue mainstays of oil and gas and needs to make adjustments. "What we need to do is restructure the tax base to reflect the realities of the economy," he said.

He said about $2.25 billion could be gained by raising the state sales tax from 4.125 percent to 5 percent and expanding it to cover many services not now covered. However, food and medicine would still be exempt, he said.

Comptroller Bob Bullock, who estimates the shortfall could be as large as $3.5 billion, said in statement released in Austin Tuesday that state officials should not wait for new economic forecasts before offering solutions to the financial problems.

OLDER AMERICANS EXPLORE SECOND CAREER WITH H&R BLOCK TAX COURSE

Thousands of older Americans take the first step towards a second career with the H&R Block Income Tax Course and earn money as income tax preparers.

H&R Block, the largest income tax preparation firm for over 30 years, is offering a basic income tax course starting September 8th and 9th with morning, afternoon, and evening classes available.

The course is ideal training for mature individuals who want to continue working after retirement or who are retired and want to go back to work. Classes are held over a 13 week period. An expereiced Block instructor will guide students through various phases of income tax preparation. Classwork will include discussion, practice problems and actual experience preparing individual tax returns. New tax laws will be explained.

Graduates of the course will leave with a practical skill they can put immediately to use. It's a challenging way to earn extra money and continue to be a productive member of the work force. Plus, there is always a need for people with tax knowledge.

Qualified course graduates may be offered interviews for positions with Block. Many of Block's employees find the flexible hours a plus. However, Block is under no obligation to offer employment, nor are graduates under any obligation to accept employment with H&R Block.

One low course fee includes all textbooks, supplies and tax forms necessary for completion of the course. Certificates and 7.5 continuing education units will be awarded upon successful completion of the course. The course also meets the continuing education requirements of the Texas State Board of Public Accountancy.

Registration forms and a brochure for the income tax course may be obtained by contacting the H&R Block office 1101 N. Midkiff, 561-8689. Courses are being offered in 3 area locations. Don't forget to ask aout our early bird special tuition price.

STATE IN BRIEF

Councilman apologizes to Dallas policeman

DALLAS (AP) — Outspoken City Council member Al Lipscomb has apologized to a Dallas police officer he called a "coldblooded killer" to settle a defamation of character lawsuit, a Dallas Police Association attorney said.

In the letter — drafted about a week ago and made public Monday by attorney Jack Pate — Lipscomb said he thought officer Melvin D. Cozby was innocent of wrongdoing in the shooting death of 20-year-old Michael Frost on Nov. 7, 1983.

"You, as an individual, as well as an officer of the law, are entitled to the rights and privileges that are due to each of our citizens," Lipscomb said in the letter. "My actions and statements undoubtedly caused you and your family embarrassment and for this, I apologize."

Cozby, who said Frost was shot while the two fought over the officer's gun, was not disciplined by the Police Department and a Dallas County grand jury didn't indict him.

Frost's 19-year-old siter, Brenda Frost, was charged with perjury when she told the grand jury that she saw Cozby strike a handcuffed Frost across the face with his night stick. The charges were later dropped.

However, teen-agers Lonnie Leyuas and Victor Franklin were convicted of perjury.

Cozby filed suit May 23, 1984, charging that Lipscomb, who had not yet been elected to the council, made "false, malicious and defamatory statements" on Nov. 16, 1984. He had called Cozby a "mad dog" and a "coldblooded killer."

Island's leader hospitalized

HOUSTON (AP) — Joaquin Balaguer, president-elect of the Dominican Republic, is in a Houston hospital for undisclosed reasons, a hospital spokesman said.

Balaguer, 78, entered The Methodist Hospital about noon Monday, spokesman David Blackshear said Tuesday.

"I can't give out any information on that patient," he said. The hospital's patient information does not have Balaguer listed.

Balaguer, who is almost blind, was elected in May and is scheduled to assume the presidency Aug. 16. He previously served three four-year terms as president, from 1965 to 1976, and unsuccessfully sought the office two other times.

Man sentenced in scheme

NEW YORK (AP) — A Houston man pleaded guilty Tuesday to conspiracy and two counts of wire fraud for his part in a scheme to smuggle seven military helicopters to Iran.

Joe Peeples, who was secretly indicted in 1985 and arrested with two co-defendants in May, is to be sentenced Sept. 24 by U.S. District Judge Miriam Cedarbaum. Each count carries a maximum of five years in prison.

According to federal prosecutors, Peeples conspired with Herbert Alwyn Smith and Jerry Cunningham in a deal to send the radical Islamic governing in Teheran seven Augusta-Bell helicopters and 4,477 spare parts in violation of a ban on U.S. arms sales to that country.

Mother, daughter sue Coke

HOUSTON (AP) — A Baytown woman and her daughter are suing the Coca-Cola Bottling Co. claiming they received blisters all over their mouths after sharing a can of Coke.

Kimberly Jeanne Souders and her daughter, Keri Nicole, of Baytown, filed suit Monday against the bottling company and Safeway Stores Inc. The soft drink was purchased at a Houston-area Safeway store, the suit says.

The lawsuit also says the mother experienced a burning sensation in her mouth and throat that created blisters. Her daughter also suffered blisters on her lips.

The suit requests medical expenses in excess of $1,000 and damages in excess of $50,000 and punitive damages of $1 billion.

At the time of the incident, Mrs. Sounders was pregnant with her son, Christopher, now deceased. Her suit did not say whether she considered her son's death linked to her drinking the Coke.

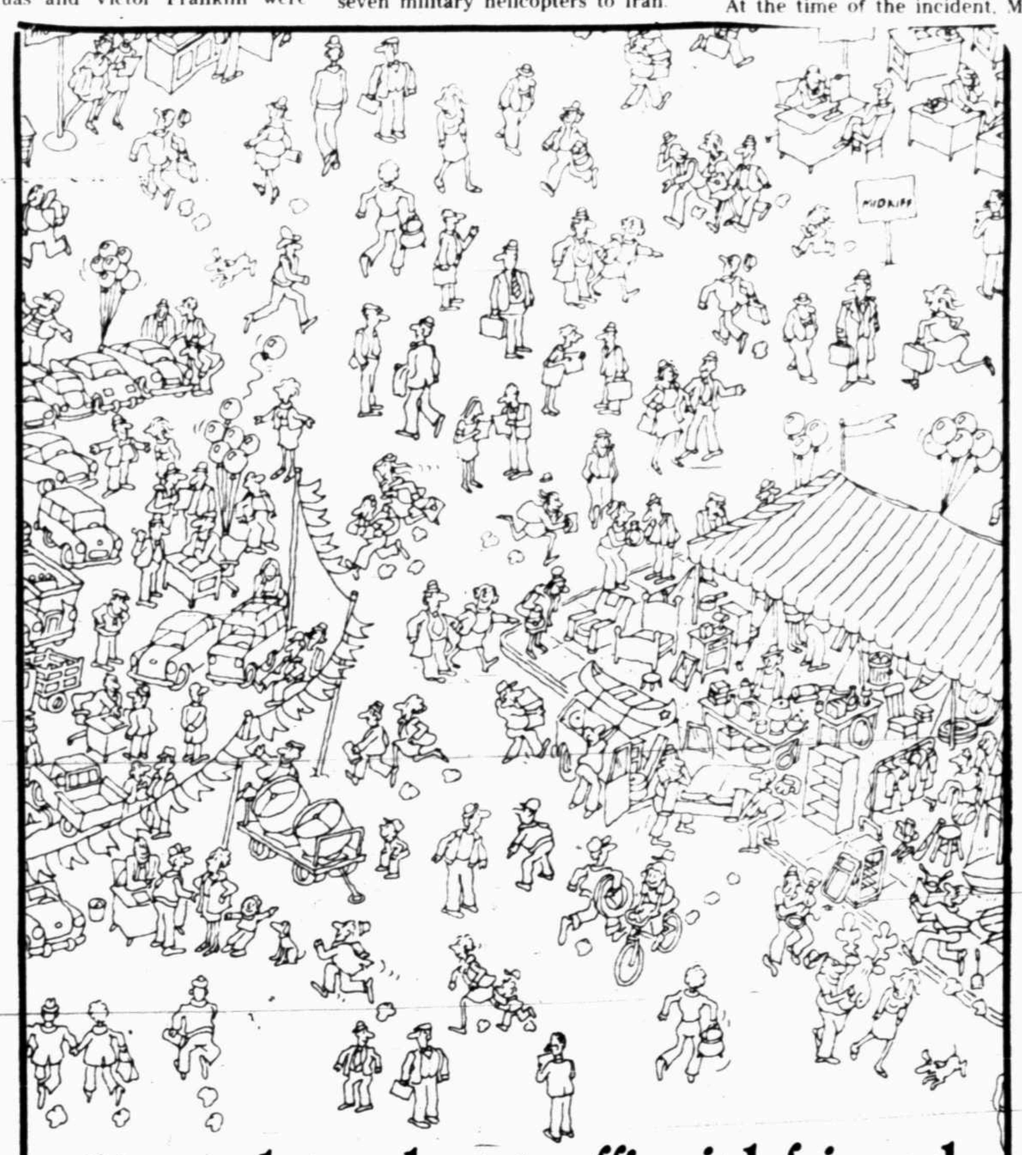

Jayar Daily, Coca-Cola's vice president of marketing, said he had "never heard of anything like that within the Coca-Cola system" and declined to discuss the suit.

A Safeway spokeswoman said the store had been notified in March of the pending lawsuit but had never received a complaint in person.

Smaller classes favored

AUSTIN (AP) — An overwhelming number of Texas elementary school principals — 95 percent — support the new requirement for a lower class size in the elementary grades, according to a survey by the Texas Elementary Principals and Supervisors Association.

The principals believe smaller classes have improved teacher morale, as well as student discipline and achievement, the association said in a statement.

Many people all over America are surprised when they hear what U.S. Savings Bonds have to offer.

For starters, Savings Bonds give you market-based interest rates—like the money markets—plus the security of a guaranteed return. This means you can earn a lot more than the guaranteed minimum rate of 7½%, but never less! To earn the higher rates, just hold your Bonds for five years or longer.

Here's more surprising news—the interest you earn from Savings Bonds is free from state and local income taxes. And you don't have to pay federal taxes on the interest earned until you cash in your Bonds.

Savings Bonds are easy to buy, too. They cost as little as $25 and can be purchased at most banks and savings and loans. Or through the Payroll Savings Plan where you work.

All of these advantages are making Savings Bonds an increasingly popular investment. Last year, sales of U.S. Savings Bonds were up nearly 30%!

With all that Savings Bonds have to offer, it's no surprise they're one of the best investments in America. For the current rate, just call toll-free 1-800-US-BONDS.

U.S. SAVINGS BONDS Paying Better Than Ever

Market-based rates apply to Bonds purchased on and after 11-1-82 and held at least five years. Bonds purchased before 11-1-82 earn market-based rates when held beyond 10-31-87. Bonds held less than five years earn lower rates.

U.S. Vice President George Bush and Israeli Prime Minister Shimon Peres, right, appear before the press after their meeting in Jerusalem Wednesday.

Peres sends messages to Jordan, Egypt

JERUSALEM (AP) — Prime Minister Shimon Peres today gave Vice President George Bush messages for Jordan's King Hussein and Egypt's President Hosni Mubarak, an Israeli official said.

Peres spokesman Uri Savir said the Israeli premier and Bush discussed the Middle East peace process and, means of combatting international terrorism and air piracy during a 90-minute meeting in Peres' office.

Bush was scheduled to fly later today to Jordan, ending a four-day visit to Israel, and is to travel to Egypt on Saturday. Savir declined to reveal the contents of Peres' verbal messages to Hussein and Mubarak.

On Tuesday, Bush called on Hussein to enter direct negotiations with Israel as the next step in the Middle East peace process following last week's summit meeting between Peres and Moroccan King Hassan II in Morocco.

But Jordanian newspapers today quoted Hussein as saying talks with Israel could only be held "within the context of an international peace conference which should be attended by the five permanent members of the U.N. Security Council and all parties involved in the conflict."

After meeting with Bush, Peres told reporters, "I am convinced that as a result of the visit by the vice president to our country, the peace process will gain weight and velocity."

Peres also said ties with the United States "both for the present and the future have been enriched with ideas and understanding."

Bush, at Peres' side, said: "I go away feeling that this relationship which we consider moral and strategic and based on friendship is in very very good shape."

Savir said the two leaders also agreed that "the affairs that have been in the headlines recently will not overshadow the good relations between the two countries."

U.S.-Israeli relations have been clouded recently by a series of security-related cases, including allegations that Israel stole cluster bomb technology, recruited a civilian U.S. Navy analyst as a spy and conspired to sell weapons to Iran.

Israel's government has said the recruitment of the U.S. intelligence analyst, Jonathan J. Pollard, was a mistake, denied involvement in the attempted weapons sale and sent a team to talk with U.S. officials about the cluster bombs.

Following the meeting with Peres, Bush signed a memorandum of understanding on encouraging tourism between the two countries.

At a private meeting inside the U.S. consulate in Jerusalem Tuesday night, Palestinian notables said they told Bush the Palestine Liberation Organization must be included in Middle East peace efforts.

However, Bush reiterated that the PLO is welcome in peace talks only if it recognizes Israel, the Palestinians and U.S. officials reported.

Nicaraguan accuses U.S. of trying to block foreign aid

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — Vice President Sergio Ramirez, attending services for three European volunteer workers allegedly killed by rebels, said the United States is trying to keep Nicaragua from receiving foreign help.

"Within the plans of the Reagan administration for destroying our revolution, there exists a conspiracy...to keep Nicaragua from receiving international cooperation," Ramirez said Tuesday at funeral services held in Matagalpa province, near Jinotega.

The Sandinista government says the three Europeans and two Nicaraguan officials died Monday when rebels fired on their two trucks in northern Jinotega province, about 15 miles from the Honduran border and 130 miles north of Managua.

Nicaragua's Foreign Ministry sent a note to Secretary of State George P. Shultz protesting the attack and holding the U.S. government "directly responsible for this criminal action."

Five other European volunteer workers have been killed in the past three years.

In May, eight German volunteers were kidnapped by rebels of the U.S.-backed Nicaraguan Democratic Force, largest of the Contra groups, and held for 15 days in southeastern Nicaragua.

West German officials in Bonn, reacting to Monday's ambush in which a West German was killed, urged German aid agencies to withdraw their personnel from Nicaragua's war zones.

Juergen Warnke, economic cooperation minister in the Foreign Ministry, said foreign volunteers working in Nicaragua are seen by the rebels as supporters of the Sandinistas.

Ramirez urged foreign governments "not to let yourself be blackmailed by that campaign of terror which is trying to isolate Nicaragua and prevent that international help from brothers in Europe, the United States, Canada and Latin America keeps coming to Nicaragua."

The government-run Voice of Nicaragua radio station identified those killed in the ambush as Ivan Claude Leyvraz of Switzerland; Bernhard Erick Koberstein of West Germany; Joel Fieux, a Frenchman who recently acquired Nicaraguan citizenship, and Nicaraguans Mario Acevedo and William Blandon.

The radio said Leyvraz was with the "Worker Assistance-Switzerland" project in Nicaragua, Koberstein was in charge of a sister-city project between Wiwili, a town in Jinotega, and the West German city of Freiburg, and Fieux served as a coordinator between the regional and local branches of the Sandinista government in the area.

Protests won't end, PAN candidate tells supporters on international bridge

CIUDAD JUAREZ, Mexico (AP) — There will be more protests against alleged election fraud, a leader of the opposition party told supporters after ordering them to clear an international bridge blockaded for almost five days.

A rally at a city park where two men have been on a hunger strike since July 1 is planned for Thursday by the National Action Party, which has asked the Mexican government for new elections.

"We have made our point," said Francisco Barrio, gubernatorial candidate for PAN, as the party is known by its Spanish initials.

"It is suitable for us to leave now," he told supporters at the Bridge of the Americas Tuesday afternoon.

Barrio, who resigned as Juarez mayor earlier this year, had ordered the bridge takeover last Thursday night after saying federal officials in Mexico City had told him there wasn't enough evidence of fraud to grant new elections.

The Institutional Revolutionary Party, or PRI, in power since 1929, won the race for governor of Chihuahua, all 14 state legislative seats and 65 of 67 mayoralties in July 6 elections.

The Mexican half of the bridge had become a crowded tent city less than a day after the takeover as people prepared for what most thought would be a long siege.

One hour after Barrio announced the decision to surprised supporters, tents had been taken down, blankets rolled and vehicles packed. Some supporters were sweeping the bridge when traffic resumed.

The Bridge of the Americas, which handles more than 1,000 trucks a day hauling produce and goods between assembly plants in Juarez and factories in the United States, is one of four over the Rio Grande connecting Juarez and El Paso, Texas. However, it is the only one available to commercial traffic as both U.S. and Mexican customs officials keep inspection lots on their respective sides.

Trucks had been rerouted through two other, less adequate bridges, causing traffic jams and losses to the Mexican government in commercial and tourism revenues.

"We have met our objectives. Our protest has become known nationally and internationally," Barrio said.

Elia Austin de Mendoza, 42, had stayed at the bridge with her two teen-age daughters since the blockade began.

"I am very angry because this is a very large and strong force of the people," said Mrs. Mendoza, wiping tears from her eyes as she prepared the leave the bridge. "I never really expected the Mexican government to admit there was fraud. But this was a question of honor, of dignity."

Rumors that the Mexican army was ready to move in were rampant, but no law enforcement authorities were ever seen on the Mexican side during the takeover.

"We've been hearing that every night, but nobody here has any guns. This was a very peaceful demonstration," said Mrs. Mendoza.

The U.S. Border Patrol had doubled the number of agents on the U.S. side to about 60.

In case of an attempt by Mexican officials to clear the bridge, protesters running into the U.S. side would not have been turned away, said Al Giugni, district director for the U.S. Immigration and Service who was at the bridge late Monday night.

Loan package won't cure Mexico's ills

An Analysis

By ISAAC A. LEVI

MEXICO CITY (AP) — A new, multi-billion-dollar loan package will bring some quick relief to Mexico's acute economic crisis but prospects for long term improvement still are remote.

Analysts predict that inflation and unemployment — Mexico's most pressing problems — will continue to rise, although not as fast as they would have had without the infusion of new money.

Wages also will continue losing their purchasing power and Mexico's peso currency its value in relation to the dollar.

The package agreed upon in principle by U.S. and Mexican officials in Washington last week comes within the framework of an innovative plan by U.S. Treasury Secretary James Baker to help indebted Third World nations grow so they can pay back their creditors.

But in practice, it appears to be another stopgap measure to keep Mexico from defaulting on its huge $97.6 billion foreign debt.

The package consists of a series of 18-month agreements, some of which still have to be completed, providing Mexico with $1.6 billion in loans from the International Monetary Fund, $1.9 billion from the World Bank, $2.7 billion from several other foreign institutions and governments, and up to $6 billion from Mexico's 600 private creditor banks abroad.

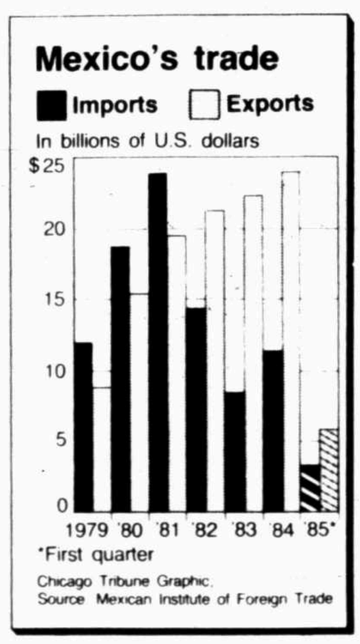

The keystone agreement with the IMF calls for a series of tough reforms to boost manufacturing export industries so that Mexico won't have to depend on oil exports for its livelihood as it does now.

Oil accounted for two-thirds of export income in 1985 and, Energy Secretary Alfredo del Mazo estimates, Mexico stands to lose $8 billion to $9 billion this year because of price drops.

Under the IMF plan, Mexico pledges to reduce its budget deficit by 3 points to about 10 percent of the gross domestic product, the total sum of goods and services produced by the country, over the next 18 months.

Mexico also pledges to improve tax collection, keep the money supply tight and interest rates high, sell off most of the 697 money-losing companies owned by the state, slash subsidies, help develop private enterprise, lift protectionist trade restrictions and attract new foreign investments.

In practice, it forces the Mexican government, which owns or controls three-fourths of the economy, to reduce its role, something which the Institutional Revolutionary Party has strongly resisted during its 57 years in power.

Under the World Bank agreement, Mexico will be protected if oil prices drop $5 to $9 a barrel for 90 days or more during the first 9 months. The more the price drops, the more money it will be able to borrow. Oil is currently averaging $9.70 a barrel, down from $29 four years ago.

Government economists hope the reforms and the new money will revive the economy — which is shrinking 4 percent this year — and aim for a modest annual growth of 3 percent to 4 percent so that Mexico can resume debt payments.

All payments, except interest, were suspended in September for lack of money.

Inflation is expected to hit up to 100 percent this year, depending on how fast the government cuts the subsidies it currently provides for basic foods, transportation and services, although officials expect to reduce it by about one-third in 1987.

Wages, which lost half their purchasing power since 1982, will not possibly keep up with that kind of inflation.

And combined unemployment and underemployment, steady at around 40 percent of the work force for a decade, will increase before it goes down again, as the government divests itself of the state owned companies, all of which are heavily overstaffed.

With the population of 80 million growing at an annual rate of 2.5 percent and half of it younger than 18 years of age, Mexico needs 1 million new jobs a year just to provide employment for youths seeking work for the first time. Past statistics show the economy must grow 6 percent a year to provide those new jobs.

All told, economists here estimate the package will boost Mexico's foreign debt to $110 billion or $115 billion by Dec. 1, 1988, depending on the price of oil and how much the country borrows.

Mexico's creaky economy may also not respond quickly enough to such sharp structural changes, especially since they come during the last 2½ years of President Miguel de la Madrid's six-year term, when the government's hold over the economy is traditionally weakest.

The bigger creditor banks on the so-called "steering committee" are willing to go along with the rescue plan.

But many of the smaller American and European banks said they are reluctant to lend Mexico more money without some kind of guarantees from their governments, and the U.S. Treasury may have a hard time convincing them otherwise.

Mexico will be able to start drawing on some of these loans by September, once the package is completed.

Until then, the U.S. Treasury is arranging a $1.5 billion "bridging loan" for 90 days to shore up Mexico money reserves, now estimated at $4.5 million. One-third of it will come from the U.S. government and the rest from Britain, West Germany and other industrialized Western nations.

In addition, the U.S. Export-Import Bank granted Mexico $1 billion in export-credits and loan guarantees, including $700,000 in renewal of insurance guarantees on short and medium-term bank trade credits for the coming year to the state oil monopoly Pemex.

The deal was authorized July 22 by the National Advisory Council, an administration international economic policy panel headed by Baker.

Ortega pleads for peace before U.N.

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

UNITED NATIONS — Nicaraguan President Daniel Ortega, adopting a softer tone toward the United States than in his last appearance at the United Nations, told the Security Council Tuesday that he came not to "launch insults" or condemn the Reagan administration but to plead for peace.

Ortega opened the debate by the 15-nation council on a Nicaraguan request for support of the June ruling by the International Court of Justice in the Hague that U.S. aid for the anti-Sandinista rebels, called Contras, is illegal. The court, often called the World Court, has no way of enforcing its rulings.

Ortega's low-key speech contrasted sharply with his address to the General Assembly's 40th anniversary session last October.

"Neither threats, nor blockades, nor invasions can destroy our determination to safeguard our legitimate right of self determination, and for it we are ready to lay down the lives of 3½ million men, women, youth, children and elderly of Nicaragua," Ortega said.

"But we must repeat that we do not want confrontation, that we have not come to the Security Council to launch insults against the North American government, but to seek peace and respect for international law," he said.

U.S. Ambassador Vernon A. Walters, speaking to an afternoon session after Ortega had departed, said the World Court, in its June 27 decision, "fundamentally misperceived the situation in Central America."

(The United States, one of 46 member states that originally accepted the court's jurisdiction, disavowed the jurisdiction after Nicaragua brought its suit and refused to participate after the opening phases of the trial.)

"Nicaragua has tried to present the crisis in Central America as essentially a conflict between the United States and Nicaragua," Walters said. "The real problem is not a conflict between the Sandinista comandantes and the United States, however. It is a conflict between the comandantes and the long-suffering people of Nicaragua, who have been the victims of ever-increasing Sandinista repression. And it is a conflict between the comandantes and Nicaragua's neighbors who have been the victims of unprovoked Sandinista aggression."

WORLD IN BRIEF

Soviets reject U.S. proposal, ending superpower SALT II talks

GENEVA (AP) — Special superpower talks on SALT II ended today after the Soviets rejected a U.S. proposal to observe temporary restraints pending a new accord to reduce strategic weapons, a U.S. statement said.

President Reagan announced May 27 that the United States would not be bound by the unratified Strategic Arms Limitation Treaty by the end of the year because of alleged Soviet violations.

The Soviets requested the special talks, which began July 22, after Reagan's announcement. The United States reluctantly agreed, on condition that they also cover the alleged Soviet violations, including the deployment of a new long-range missile and supposed measures to obstruct monitoring by U.S. satellites.

The Soviet Union has denied charges it has violated SALT II, which was signed in 1979. The treaty was never ratified by the Senate, but both sides said they were observing its terms voluntarily.

A U.S. communique issued today said the Soviet Union rejected Reagan's call to "join the United States in establishing an interim framework of truly mutual restraint pending conclusion of a verifiable agreement on deep and equitable reduction in offensive nuclear arms."

"The Soviet Union was informed that the call remains open," the two-paragraph communique said.

Guru complains of treatment

BOMBAY, India (AP) — Guru Bhagwan Shree Rajneesh returned to his homeland today complaining that Indian immigration officials treated him like a tourist after his failed worldwide seven-month search for a new place to live.

The self-described "rich man's guru" was taken out of his private aircraft in a wheelchair, complaining of a back problem. He was wearing a diamond-studded cap and a glittering green robe.

Customs officials grilled him for almost two hours before granting him an entry permit, airport sources said.

"I was treated like a tourist despite having an Indian passport," Rajneesh, 54, said. "This is not a country to be in for good."

The guru, when asked where he might settle in India, folded his hands and looked at the ceiling.

Charges of rebellion dropped

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — The government said Tuesday it has dropped charges of rebellion against four generals who took part in a short-lived revolt earlier this month in which Arturo Tolentino declared himself president.

Joker Arroyo, secretary to President Corazon Aquino, said the charges were dropped because they swore allegiance to her interim constitution.

The generals — Prospero Olivas, Jose Maria Zumel, Jaime Echeverria and Antonio Palafox — were among 41 people charged with rebellion this week for their part in the revolt July 6-8 at a downtown hotel.

Tolentino, who was Ferdinand E. Marcos' running mate in the Feb. 7 election, gave up after less than two days. He has refused to take the oath of allegiance and is among those still charged.

Judge indicts Chilean editor

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — A judge indicted Juan Pablo Cardenas, editor of an opposition weekly magazine, Monday on charges of offending President Augusto Pinochet.

Judge Leonel Beraud ordered publication of Analisis suspended for five weeks. Police seized this week's edition, which was already in the stands, representatives of the magazine said.

The military regime accused Analisis of offending Pinochet in several political stories over the past seven months. If convicted, Cardenas could be sentenced to five years in prison.

Schools post tolerance guidelines

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — A set of 19th-century guidelines encouraging religious tolerance among Protestant and Roman Catholic children will be posted again in Northern Ireland's schools, officials said.

Education Minister Brian MacWhinney said Tuesday that the guidelines, first sent to schools throughout Ireland in 1835 with the aim of combating sectarianism, will be reissued.
