Draw farmer knows effluent's effects

By LINDA SCHAFFRINA

Vernon Chandler has farmed along Monahans Draw 25 years — and he's watched the character of the draw change as the City of Odessa has used it for drawing off sewer effluent.

Chandler and other landowners in the Warfield community in southwest Midland County are concerned that their problems will increase if Odessa is allowed to build a sewer treatment plant in Midland County and put still more effluent down the draw.

The City of Odessa's position is that no detrimental effects would come from its planned discharge and they should be allowed to use the draw.

Chandler said he ranched on the draw 10 years before he ever saw water run through it.

Then the City of Odessa began dumping effluent down the draw. Those first years recalled Chandler chemical pollutants were in the water and ruined the underground water supply.

Even now, people in the Warfield community cannot use their wells for drinking water, Chandler said.

The chemical pollutants also burned the soil around the draw, and the soil only now is beginning to recover.

"There's a 35-acre patch (along the draw) I haven't planted in about 15 years," Chandler said.

Well water can be used to irrigate, he said, but only if it's used at night. The salts in the water burn the plants if the sprinklers are run in the daytime, Chandler said.

Now, there is water in the draw about 50 per cent of the time, Chandler said. Although the City of Odessa maintains that only treated effluent is put into the draw, Chandler and some other landowners are convinced untreated waste occasionally is discharged.

Because the draw does not have a channel, the water spreads out and does not flow, providing an ideal breeding ground for mosquitoes, he said.

Midland County spent $9,910 in 1976 for mosquito control in that area, said Midland County Commissioner Winfree Brown.

Brown said the proposed plant in Midland County would discharge an additional five million gallons of effluent daily.

Odessa City Attorney Larry Sinclair said the amount discharged would vary, depending on the amount of effluent used for irrigation and by Odessa industrial users.

The proposed plant would be located approximately four miles south of Interstate 20 on the Faudree Ranch.

Sinclair said the City of Odessa has initiated contacts to purchase the land needed, but, if that is not possible, the city can acquire the land by condemnation.

Brown vigorously disagrees and said the city cannot condemn land in Midland County.

The Midland County Commissioners Court has passed a resolution opposing construction of the plant in Midland County and diacharge into Monahans Draw.

In the resolution, the commissioners said the soil, plant and animal life in the vicinity of the draw are "already adversely affected by the discharge presently received in Midland County and doubling the amount of water will constitute a greater health hazard."

The commissioners also said extensive extermination programs to control flies and mosquitoes consitute "an unfair imposition on the taxpayers of Midland County."

An environmental assessment plan compiled by Espey, Huston and Associates Inc. for the City of Odessa said no detrimental impact on the ecology of the area would result from increased discharge. The assessment also said the impact would be "positive," because a wider variety of plants are found as a result of the discharge and a water supply is provided for birds and animals.

Brown and Judge Culver said the kinds of increased plants are not beneficial to the landowners.

The issue may be resolved at a hearing before the Water Quality Board Aug. 31. If the hearing is not held then, it is unclear when it will be held, because the Water Quality Board is being consolidated with other water agencies and procedures of the new agency have not been defined yet.

In a letter to the Water Quality Board, County Judge Barbara Culver outlined her concerns about the proposed treatment plant.

Among her concerns, shared by Brown, is property rights of landowners. "If any governmental entity wanted this land in the draw for a road, highway, easement or building purposes, it would have to go through an elaborate procedure to acquire it and properly compensate the landowners," Judge Culver said.

Judge Culver believes the City of Odessa should be required to compensate land owners for the loss of the use of their land, if the present plan is to be followed, and control the health hazards.

Sinclair said the city will have the authority to send water across the privately owned lands without compensation to land-

Relief in future for passengers at air terminal

By RICHIE REECER

If you plan on taking one of those reduced fare flights to Dallas out of Midland Regional Air Terminal, you ought to do two things—call for reservations about two weeks in advance and wear a pair of good walking shoes to the terminal.

With the advent of the reduced fares has come a dramatic increase in the number of passenger boardings at the terminal. Thus, the economy flights get sold out very early and the parking situation is bad, to say the least.

Relief, however, is on the way, according to Col. Wilson Banks, terminal director.

Remodeling and improvement work at the terminal is expected to begin within two weeks, Banks said.

The $6 million improvement project will bring a new look to the terminal, which was described as "far from adequate" in its present state by one airline executive.

The planned improvements include the expansion of the present long-term parking area to a two-story parking structure and the remodeling of and addition to the terminal building itself.

The boarding and waiting area of the terminal will be moved to a second-story addition. Passengers will board planes through enclosed ramps from this area.

The restaurant at the terminal will be expanded, and the lounge will be moved to the first floor. An addition will also be constructed at the ticket-purchasing area, which should help relieve overcrowding conditions there.

And though the construction is to begin soon, the target for completion is about a year and a half, Banks said. Because of the construction, conditions at the terminal will become worse before they get better.

Portions of the building will be closed off because of the improvements, and boarding passengers will be forced to walk longer distances to the planes while construction is under way.

"There will be inconvenience," he said. Describing the situation at the terminal as "terribly crowded," Banks said nonpassengers should not come to Midland Regional Air Terminal unless absolutely necessary.

During the construction phase, Banks said walking distances from cars would be greater because all cars would be parked in temporary parking areas west of the present long-term parking area.

The chance of persons receiving injuries because of the construction is another reason Banks gave for asking the public not to visit the terminal unnecessarily.

The big crunch at the terminal began in May when Southwest Airlines began service to and from Midland. The two other airlines serving Midland, Continental and Texas International, at that time lowered their fares for certain flights.

Records for passenger boardings at Midland Regional Air Terminal were set in May, June and July. Banks said he expects the August boardings to level off some, but he feels another monthly record might be set.

"People are flying now who have never flown before," said Alvin L. Malcom, Midland manager of Texas International Airlines (TI).

Malcom said TI boardings at Terminal have doubled since May. The boardings now average 6,500-7,000 per month, he said.

TI has experienced no major problems with the increased volume, Malcom said. Only two additional

Close vote puts official on the spot

In the race for a three-year city council post, farmer Darrel Jackson polled 93 votes, and fellow farmer Les Emfinger and grocer Jim Bintz each pulled in 91 votes.

Just who will go up against Jackson in any runoff is not at all clear. There may be another election.

"Don't ask me who won," said Mrs. Cure, who wasn't sure who would match who in the runoff. "We keep things exciting" over here, she said.

She said election judges checked and rechecked the returns, but the results were the same: a dilemma.

Following Monday's canvassing of votes, Mrs. Cure said she would call Secretary of State Mark White in hopes of finding a solution to the quandry.

"Everything seems to be very much in order," she said of the 93-91-91 vote count.

In a three-way race, any runoff would be between the two high vote getters.

The election was called after Councilman Raymond Sharbutt resigned his post. He moved to Odessa after he was promoted in management at Forrest Lumber Co.

The Berlin Wall: a fact of life

By STEPHEN H. MILLER

BERLIN (AP) — Scattered marches and subdued rallies under gray skies Saturday marked the anniversary of the construction of the Berlin Wall, evidence that after 16 years it has been accepted as a fact of life by most West Berliners.

"I don't think about it," said a man washing his car within sight of the concrete-and-steel barrier constructed by Communist East Germany to block the mass exodus of its citizens to the West. "It will still be here tomorrow."

West Berlin officials marked the anniversary with laying of wreaths and speeches warning that the wall was likely to remain in place for years to come. West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt said last month he did not expect the wall to come down during his lifetime.

Shops and businesses throughout the city remained open. Residents near the wall, who have heard the gunfire of East Berlin border guards many times in the past 16 years, went about their business as usual.

West Berlin Mayor Dietrich Stobbe, during a wreath-laying ceremony to "victims of Stalinism," warned citizens that the balance of power between East and West — symbolized by the wall — "is a fact which forces us to live within the division of our city and our country."

A group of 300 Maoist Communists marched through Wedding, a working class district of West Berlin, protesting that the wall "is a betrayal of the unity of the German people and a betrayal of socialism."

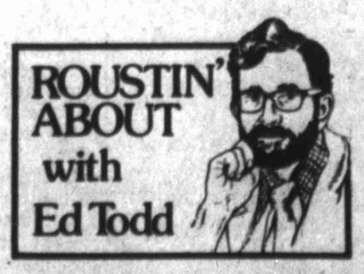
Some 20 protestors also plastered a section of the wall with flowered wallpaper in the West Berlin district of Kreuzberg during the night, police said. Much of the wall in West Berlin is covered with paintings and graffiti.

The official newspaper of the East German Communist party, Neues Deutschland, said the wall made legitimate East Germany's claim as a soveriegn nation. Before the wall, the newspaper said, Western politicians treated East Germany as a "temporary state."

"Since then, hardly any serious person believes that anymore, although there are still some people who speak as if they lived in the 1950s."

Chaney kin can put on a show



CRANE — Don Chaney may not be as dramatic as that old-time actor Lon Chaney. But as mayor of this fair city, he puts on a pretty good show come jubilee time.

"That was my uncle . . . the man of a thousand faces," he said of that other Chaney just before he stepped onto the gazebo in the downtown park. "Sometimes I wish I had a different one," he said.

He jested. Of course.

All about, townspeople were gathered in clusters at Robinson-Keltner Memorial Park. Their common purpose was to observe the celebration of Crane's 50th year — the town's Golden Jubilee.

Chaney, decked out in a red-and-white Scotch plaid sports coat, climbed aboard the gazebo and spoke into the microphone. It was getting mighty hot, and it was only mid-morning on Saturday.

Chaney welcomed the Crane folks and out-of-towners to the jubilee.

"We think everything's going great," he said. The jubilee's parade had already winded down and broken up. And skydivers Jim Fowlers and Lattie Cavness only an hour earlier had gently floated onto Crane's Golden Cranes El Ave football field.

Other than just commenting, Chaney was trying to get e people's attention. They were milling and chatting.

"We think everything's going great," he said. Few heard. They were paying attention to other things.

"We've got a lot of people out here, and that's what we wanted.

He also wanted their attention.

Presently, the clusters of folks became transformed into a crowd about the shaded pavilion.

Chaney's wife, Virginia, offered the invocation. She asked for propserity for Crane and for peace around the world.

The program was under way. And Chaney knew how to handle it. He hasn't been mayor for 10 years for nothing. He's a retired grocer and an active banker.

He recognized the American Legion's $5,000 peace officers' memorial fund.

"In case of a tragedy," he said, "the money would will immediately be turned over to the officer's folks."

'Son of Sam' suspect's father 'deeply grieved'

By BETSY KENEDY

MINEOLA, N.Y. (AP) — The tearful father of accused .44 caliber killer David Berkowitz said Saturday he grieves for the victims of the Son of Sam and asked for understanding from their families.

"I keep thinking it's only a bad dream and that I will wake up," 68-year-old Nathan Berkowitz said as he met with reporters for the first time since his adopted son's capture Wednesday night.

"I deeply grieve with all my heart," he said. "We, too, are victims of this tragedy. I will live with this heartache for the rest of my life."

He said he had not seen his son in almost a year, and did not know what he would say when he did see him, except that "it will be spontaneous."

David Berkowitz is charged in the murder and wounding of Son of Sam's last two victims. The gunman, who used the same .44 caliber gun in all his attacks, killed six young persons and wounded seven in little more than a year.

A grand jury was presented evidence in Berkowitz' case Friday and was to be given more evidence Monday. Berkowitz, meanwhile, was being given a psychiatric examination to determine if he is competent to stand trial.

Addressing the victims' families, the elder Berkowitz declared: "If David did these things, I don't expect you to forgive him, as this would be too much to ask of you.

"The only thing I do ask of you is to understand the pain and the agony that is within ...knowing the pain and agony of you parents," he said. He read a statement handwritten on a piece of green paper at an emotional news conference near the offices of the lawyer he retained to defend his son.

"My loss is not because of one son that I adopted, but my loss is multiplied by what each and every one of the parents of these crimes feel in his or her heart."

In a husky and increasingly broken voice, Berkowitz continued: "I ask of you not to burden us with your feelings towards David."

The "us" he referred to included himself, he said, and friends who had known and loved David in the past.

Berkowitz, who flew here from Boynton Beach, Fla., when his son, David, 24, was arrested, spoke at a courthouse here against the advice of friends, according to one of his lawyers, Ira Jultak. He said Berkowitz was "under extreme stress" and taking medication.

"Until a few days ago, I was leading a normal life in retirement," the former Bronx hardware store owner said. "Then my life completely turned around."

Dressed in light blue pants and a yellow windbreaker, and wearing sunglasses to shield his swollen eyes, Berkowitz answered only a few questions after his statement.

"I cried," he said. At that point he broke down crying, and was led away by Jultak.

Leon Stern, an attorney hired by Nathan Berkowitz, refused to elaborate on the question of who will represent David Berkowitz. Stern said he did not know who hired Phillip Peltz, a Brooklyn attorney. Peltz said he was retained by a Berkowitz family member, whom he refuses to name.

The New York Post said Saturday that Peltz and an associate had offered to sell the newspaper serialization and book rights to interviews with the suspect for $100,000 plus a percentage of the proceeds from book sales. The Daily News reported a similar offer but Peltz denied it. He would not comment when asked if an associate had made such an offer.

Stern called the defense of David Berkowitz "the most unpopular cause, I believe, in the annals of criminal jurisprudence in our generation and possibly in the history of criminal jurisprudence."

Revenues, expenses both up

BIG SPRING — Colorado River Municipal Water District revenues were up 10 per cent through the first seven months of the year, but expenses were up by 13.3 per cent, the monthly revenue statement said.

Total income for 1977 through July was $4,179,183, an increase of $479,210 over the same period a year ago.

Expenditures for operations were $1,494,992, up $175,000 over the first seven months of 1976. The biggest increase in operational expense was $77,970 more for energy.

Income was based on water billings of 10,970,060,000 gallons, compared with 10,844,739,000 for the same period in 1976.

53-foot fall kills Hobbs man

CRANE — A Hobbs, N.M., man was killed Saturday morning when he fell 53 feet from an oil derrick.

Gary Elms, 22, was pronounced dead on arrival at Medical Center Hospital in Odessa, a Crane County sheriff's department spokesman said.

The derrick was being torn down when the accident occurred about 9:45 a.m., the spokesman said. Elms was employed by Goldsmith Well Servicing of Odessa.

The State Department of Highways and Public Transportation is developing a system which will stagger vehicle vehicle registration deadlines throughout the year, rather than the present system in which all expire April 1.

Renewal notices for 1978 will have staggered due dates for passenger car and light truck renewal, with registration fees being prorated.

Cape Town officials plan to raze more shanties

By Larry Heinzerling

CAPE TOWN, South Africa (AP) — The blight spreads as far as the eye can see, a dismal sprawl of 30,000 ramshackle squatter shanties encircling the northern fringes of picturesque Cape Town.

The shacks, clustered on the barren Cape Flats, house 150,000 to 200,000 impoverished blacks and "coloreds," or persons of mixed race. They reflect a problem facing many countries in Africa where millions of rural fortune seekers swarm to the cities in search of jobs and a better life.

But the white-minority government's decision to raze the camps as a solution is seen by political opposition leader Colin Eglin as "the ideology of apartheid gone mad."

Demolition was completed last week on one camp, Modderdam, where 1,200 shanties — of corrugated iron on timber frames lined with plastic, cardboard and paper — were bulldozed into rubble. About 26,000 squatters will have to find homes elsewhere when the government finishes razing three camps erected without its approval.

About 1,000 homeless squatters remained in Modderdam's ruins Saturday, lying on cardboard under threadbare blankets or clustering around fires in metal cans. A few of the squatters began to rebuild their shacks.

"Here is an occasion where clearly the tyranny of human-made laws has been allowed to dominate over regard for civilized feelings of compassion, of concern and respect of human beings," Eglin, head of the liberal Progressive-Reform party, said in a statement.

Even the government's secretary of information, Eschel Rhoodie, took note of the cold weather and offered a mild rebuke.

"I personally think the government could have chosen a better time to carry out the demolitions. I often despair at the timing of some of the activities of the government," he said in a statement Friday.

Because of an acute housing shortage, most of the mixed-race squatters are in government-established camps, where some are provided water, sanitation and other facilities. Nonetheless, under South African law limiting the use of land by various racial groups, 8,000 persons of mixed-race are due to be evicted.

The three camps being destroyed are illegal and are inhabited mostly by blacks.

The issue there revolves around South Africa's "pass" laws which govern movement of blacks from rural "tribal homelands," where jobs are scarce, to white-designated areas covering more than three-quarters of the country.

Rural blacks who get jobs are given permits allowing them to be in white areas, but government policy is to keep the black population there as low as is possible and still fill industrial labor needs.

All blacks are required by law to live in segregated townships. But there is an acute shortage of homes for families in Cape Town's black townships, and most black workers are expected to live in barrack-like hostels for single men. In October 1976 there were single quarters for 37,330 people in the townships but only 10,092 family dwellings.

As a result many black men coming to Cape Town and wanting to live with their families are forced to squat in shanties where their wives and children can be accommodated. But the wives and children often have no legal permission to be in the Cape Town area.

In addition, in attempts to control squatting, the government decided to freeze the squatter population at its Nov. 15, 1974, size.

Government officials maintain the squatter camps now being destroyed were established after the freeze and that most of the occupants — particularly women and children — are in the area illegally. They say the camps, lacking water and sanitation, pose a healt' hazard.

Authorities insist that black men in the camps with permits to be in Cape Town be rehoused in the bachelor hostels in the black townships and that "illegals" be sent back to the tribal homelands.

In effect, it means many black families would be forced to separate.

In a recent report, the independent South African Institute of Race Relations said the squatter family "often chooses to live together as a family, even if this does mean harassment by the authorities, rather than live as a more poverty stricken, but legal, broken family."

Eglin complained in his statement: "There is today no more than a numbing knowledge that theimpersonal pass laws are to the authorities in South Africa more important than the sanctity of marriage or the companionship of family life."

The squatter problem, he said, is "evidence of a vast socioeconomic problem which could be more destructive to the stability of South African society than all the threats from outside."

Vance labels 13-day peace effort 'useful'

By A. O. Sulzberger Jr.

LONDON (AP) — Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance flew home to Washington on Saturday at the end of a 13-day effort to bring peace to the Middle East and Rhodesia.

The secretary spent 11 days on a whirlwind, six-nation tour of key Middle East nations seeking an elusive peace that has been the target of many of his predecessors.

During his flight home, Vance disclosed that he and British Foreign Secretary David Owen had completed a detailed plan for bringing majority black rule to Rhodesia next year through a "one-man, one-vote" formula.

But the plan's future was considered in doubt because South African support for it, considered essential, was not forthcoming.

On his arrival in Washington, Vance declined to characterize his peace mission as a success or a failure. "I think it was a very useful trip," he said.

A White House official said "there certainly were some elements of progress" on the Middle East situation in Vance's trip but added: "Some very strong elements of continued separation remain."

The official said Vance will report personally to President Carter on Sunday afternoon and spell out some of the elements of progress publicly. "Others we'll have to talk about in general terms," the official said.

Vance arrived in London Thursday night and spent Friday and Saturday conferring with British and African leaders on Anglo-American efforts to end a guerrilla war and transfer power from Rhodesia's 273,000 whites to its 6.2 million blacks.

"I am hopeful that a solution will be found to the problem in Rhodesia," Vance said in brief airport remarks after conferring with Rhodesian nationalist leader Abel Muzorewa and Tanzanian President Julius Nyerere, a key supporter of the black nationalists.

Nyerere stopped in London on his way home to Dar es Salaam after a visit to the United States and Jamaica. Although he denied it was a snub, the Tanzanian leader declined a luncheon invitation from British Prime Minister James Callaghan at Chequers, the prime minister's country retreat just west of London. So Vance went to Nyerere's hotel.

Nyerere was reportedly annoyed that Vance and British Foreign Secretary David Owen spent 6½ hours Friday reviewing the still-secret Anglo-American plan with South African Foreign Minister R. F. Botha.

Vance and Owen were trying to persuade Botha to use his government's economic and political influence to persuade Rhodesian Prime Minister Ian Smith to go along with the plan.

Details are not known, but the plan is believed to call for a one-man, one-vote constitution and postindependence economic aid for white civil servants and others who might be unwilling to stay in Rhodesia under black rule.

Botha withheld endorsement of the proposals and flew home shortly before Vance to outline the plan to South African Prime Minister John Vorster. In a radio interview before he left, Botha said he thought there was still "real hope" for a Rhodesian peace, but he added:

"I think in general it's no good if the British and Americans and Dutch and the little man in the moon agree on Rhodesia. It is eventualnly the people of Rhodesia themselves that have to accept."

Lightning produces 30 more forest fires in California, Oregon

By The Associated Press

Some 30 forest fires were ignited by lightning overnight in northern California and southern Oregon as crews continued to battle the 100,000-acre Marble-Cone fire in California's Los Padres National Forest.

The National Fire Information Center in Boise, Idaho, expressed concern over forecasts for thunderstorms with lightning over parts of Oregon and Washington State.

The worst of the new fires were located in southern Oregon at the Des Chutes, Umpgua and Fremont national forests. The Des Chutes fire was burning across 70 acres. The Umpgua fire was about 10 acres and the Fremont fire whipped across about 300 acres, according to the Fire Information Center.

A spokeswoman for the center said about 1,000 new crewmen were on the line in the Northern California-southern Oregon area. She said that some 10,000 personnel processsed through the center were involved in fires in California, Oregon, Nevada, Colorado and Alaska.

In its 13th day, the Marble-Cone fire in the Los Padres National Forest continued to eat away at valuable Carmel Valley watershed today as it spread out over 100,000-plus acres of wilderness just east of Big Sur.

The 86,000-acre Scarface Fire, which was contained on Thursday night, continued to burn today.

Big fires in Modoc and Lassen counties, including the 83,000-acre Scarface blaze, were being brought under control after charring more than 120,000 acres of timber and range.

U.S. Forest Service officials still could see no end in sight for the Marble-Cone fire. Over 5,400 firefighters were struggling to halt the fire as it continued its sprint north through jagged landscape.

Rainy and cool weather helped cut down the number and strength of fires in Alaska. But the 200,000-acre Bear Creek Fire in south central Alaska continued to burn. High winds at one point threatened a village near the fire. But officials said early today that the winds had shifted and the threat was reduced.

Other major fires still being fought included the Deep Creek fire in the White River National Forest in Colorado. So far, the fire has consumed 3,700 acres. Officials hoped to control the fire by today.

Alaskan fires winning thus far

Fire 8780. It sounds like something you might buy in sundries at the corner five-and-dime.

But instead it is a monstrous blemish on 115,000 acres of pristine subarctic forest and tundra, one of more than 30 forest fires covering an area larger than Delaware — with enough left over to tuck in a good share of Rhode Island.

Since July, fires have blackened the growth over more than 1.9 million acres, making this the third worst fire year on record for Alaska. The worst was 1957, when vegetation over 5 million acres was scorched. In 1969, flames ranged over 4.2 million acres.

The 1977 fire season is not over yet, although on Saturday officials said rainy and cool weather was helping to cut the number and strength of the fires.

But some fires still are burning out of control, unmanned.

"We try to bite off only what we can chew," explains Lowell King of the Bureau of Land Management, the man responsible for fighting Fire 8780. "We can't spread our people too thin."

King, who has been fighting fires in Alaska for 17 years, jerked a sooty thumb to the east, and in a voice tinged with fatigue said: "That is what I mean. There's not a man on that one, and she's really boiling."

It was Fire 8827, burning through more than 50,000 acres of heavy stands of spruce and open tundra 35 miles east of this once-bustling gold camp.

"If lives and property are not at stake, then we have to consider the values of the land itself — recreation, wildlife, usable timber, watershed, grazing," said Roy Percival, fire management officer for the BLM in Washington. "Some we have to stop, others we have to let go, because in a year like this we just simply get overrun."

Until priority fires are contained, Fire 8827 will just have to burn, and burn and burn. The 1,200 fire fighters on duty in Alaska are busy elsewhere.

The fire season started slowly. But June was extremely dry. Kotzebue, at the hub of a circle of fires both north and south of the Arctic Circle, had only .05 of an inch of rain during the month, almost a half-inch below normal.

On July 8, the first in a series of heavy thunder and lightning storms pounced on the state. Within the space of 11 days, 175 lightning-set fires were reported throughout Alaska.

The largest is still burning, a 330,000-acre blaze, Fire 8623. It has wiped out much of the grazing area for a large segment of 20,000 to 25,000 reindeer herded on the Seward Peninsula.

The area is one of open tundra, rolling hills and some mountains, interlaced with streams large and small. Thousands of small shallow lakes dot the region.

To walk over tundra is to try to make your way across a field packed with firm balloons. The vegetation tufts into little hummocks that bend and yield.

There are also patches of willow and stands of spindly arctic spruce, primarily along creek and river bottoms. In late summer, blueberries grow fat and sweet, and low-bush cranberries play hide and seek in their ground-hugging foliage. It is a time of life, of greenery, of beauty.

Fire 8780 has changed all that.

The tundra is now flat and black. From the air it takes on the appearance of a burned pancake. Only charred spears of wood remain of willow thickets and spruce stands.

The greatest loss in this area of small villages few and far between are the lichens of the tundra. Lichens are the graze of reindeer, which provide meat for many in the Nome and Kotzebue areas. Once they are destroyed, it takes up to 70 years for the tiny plants to establish themselves and mature.

Smoke from the Seward Peninsula fires and those to the north of Kotzebue blankets the area to a height of 4,500 feet or more. It keeps firemen from getting aircraft off the ground, moving men or supplies, or even determining the size and direction of fires.

King's headquarters at Haycock — a community of three permanent residents — is a cluster of plastic shelters nestled in a willow thicket.

From there, the seven 16member crews assigned to fight Fire 8780 — men and women recruited from Alaska's native villages — are sent to the fire lines to work that is hot, dirty and exhausting.

The normal tour — 12 hours on and 12 hours off — is 21 days. Crews then have the option of returning home or continuing work, at an average pay per person of $6 an hour, plus grub.

The food is Army C rations, with fresh groceries, if a supply run can be made, once every three days.

King's line boss is Charles Castro, a wiry fire-fighting expert with the National Park Service at Sequoia-King's Canyon National Park near Fresno, Calif.

Lying in his plastic leanto one night last week, after a day that began at 5 a.m. and ended at 11:30 p.m., Castro perked up when big drops of rain smacked against the shelter.

No change in school taxes due

LAMESA — As a result of the new public school finance legislation, school taxes Will remain the same in the Lamesa School District this coming year.

Although the district will have some additional funds this year, trustees favored making up for last year's deficit of about $70,000 and attempting to use surplus funds for capital improvements in the schools.

Air conditioning, a new surface for the track and some paving at the high school are among the capital improvements which may be possible in the district as a result of the school finance legislation.

Zaire treason accused

KINSHASA, Zaire (AP) — Zaire President Mobutu Sese Seko today arrested his foreign minister after accusing him and a leading tribal chief of high treason in an ongoing purge that began last week.

Nguza Karl I Bond, who as foreign minister was considered the nation's second-ranking official, was the first cabinet minister to fall since Mobutu announced a purge of the civil service Thursday.

Mobutu announced the arrest of Karl I Bond who was led away by national security officers as he returned to Kinshasa from a trip to the United States and Europe.

An official announcement from the presidential palace said Mobutu had taken away Karl I Bond's membership in the National Order of the Leopard, which confers immunity from prosecution to high officials.

Mobutu, who came to power after a military coup in 1965, began the campaign by dismissing Central Bank governor Samwa Pida Mbagui. He had earlier purged several top military leaders.

The announcement said Karl I Bond's "betrayal" was related to the invasion of Shaba Province by Katangan exiles who crossed the border from Marxist-ruled Angola in March.

The invaders, described as Lunda tribesmen led by veterans of a 1960s uprising, occupied about one-third of the copper-rich province before being driven out in May.

First-time elementary school signup set

Pupils in kindergarten through sixth grade entering Midland public schools for the first time will preregister from 8:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. Wednesday and Thursday. Preregistration will be in the office of the neighborhood school principal, according to Peyton Cook, director of pupil and community services.

Elementary offices will be open through the noon hour for working parents. Kindergarten and first grade pupils must have a birth certificate or proof of age.

Kindergarten students must be 5 years old on or before Sept. 1 and not yet 6 years old. First grade students must be 6 years old on or before Sept. 1.

Elementary pupils who are entering Midland public schools for the first time are required to have proof of immunization before preregistering.

Required immunizations include polio, at least three doses of the vaccine provided one or more doses have been received since the fourth birthday; diphtheria-tetanus, minimum of three doses with at least one having been received since the fourth birthday; measles, one dose of vaccine or history of measles illness, and rubella, one dose of vaccine.

Those unable to preregister Wednesday or Thursday may preregister in the principal's office at the neighborhood school from 8 a.m. to noon and from 1 p.m. until 4 p.m. Aug. 22 through 26.

Classes begin Aug. 29.

Firefighters' chief says union prefers arbitration

WASHINGTON (AP) — The president of the firefighters union says firemen would prefer binding arbitration rather than have the right to strike.

"Our people don't like to strike — we realize what it does to us in public opinion," said William H. McClennan, president of the AFL-CIO International Association of Firefighters.

"It's difficult to see people's houses burn; we sweat it out," he said in an interview.

McClennan, speaking against the background of the recent firemen's strike in Dayton, Ohio, where houses burned to the ground while firemen picketed, said firemen have no other recouse but to strike when a state has no bargaining law for public employes or when city officials refuse to submit the issues to arbitration.

In binding arbitration, both sides to a dispute agree to submit the issues to an outside referee and then to accept the referee's decision on how the issues should be resolved.

The union says it has about 175,000 members in 1,750 local unions in the United States and Canada, ranging from 8,500 in New York City to some towns with only a handful.

The union lists 18 firefighters' strikes this year, ranging in duration from three hours in Michigan City, Ind., to 7 days and 10 hours in Joliet, Ill.

Fourteen strikes were in three states: Indiana, Illinois and Ohio which, McClennan notes, do not have bargaining. Several states do, he said, and in those the union has given up the right to strike.

Often, he said, city officials balk at arbitration and even at bringing in the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service, which he credits with helping resolve the Dayton strike.

When firemen develop a bad image from situations like that in Dayton, he said, the public tends to forget how hazardous their jobs are.

The union cites figures from the National Safety Council saying that firefighting is the most hazardous occupation — about 50 per cent more hazardous than mining and quarrying.

McClellan says that an average of 100 firemen are killed in the line of duty each year, and that last year 56,000 were injured seriously enough to lose time from work. Further, he says, disability pay (or death benefits are usually inadequate or nonexistent.

McClennan, once a Boston firefighter, says the financial plight of the cities has resulted in a lack of manpower and equipment.

Slim rain prospects remain in forecast

The tantalizing but slim prospect of enough rain to break the near-drought conditions afflicting the Permian Basin persists through tonight, the weatherman said.

"About four drops" of rain, officially listed as a trace, fell at Midland Regional Air Terminal Saturday, the weather man said.

Friday, showers fell in varying amounts in Midland, from a trace in most areas to .5 inch in one part of south Midland.

The National Weather Service at Air Terminal said there is a 20 per cent chance of more thundershowers tonight.

The high today and Monday should be in the upper 90s, a warm weather stays with the area. Tonight's low is expected to be about 70. Winds today are expected to be from the south at 10 to 20 mph.

Saturday's high was 100 degrees and the low was 70 degrees.

Cloudy skies were reported Saturday night in Crane, Stanton, Big Lake and Big Spring, but the ground remained dry throughout the area. Clear skies were reported in Andrews and Lamesa.

The National Weather Service posted a brief tornado and special marine warning for Galveston County early Saturday afternoon after several reports of funnel clouds and one report of a tornado touching ground were received in the Dickinson and Texas City area.

TOURING MIDLAND by bus Saturday were 25 senior citizens who attended the day-long event sponsored by the Eastside Lions Club. Included in the activities was a picnic in a Midland park.

Draw farmer knows effluent's effects owners if the permit is granted.

Brown and Judge Culver have suggested use of evaporation ponds, but Sinclair said construction of the ponds would be too expensive.

Brown said use of evaporation ponds actually would be better for the City of Odessa and for farmers who use the effluent for irrigation because they would provide a more reliable source of water.

Chandler said his objections to the City of Odessa's plans would be largely overcome if all of the water discharged was treated and if a ditch were dug to channel the water. That would mean that less land would be taken and that the water would flow, diminishing the mosquito problem.

"I'd irrigate with the water, too, if it was all treated," Chandler said.

But, he said, if permission to dig such a ditch and use the water is not included in the city's plan, he will not legally be able to use the water unless he gets a permit.

That process, he said, would be far too expensive and time consuming.

Brown said simply channeling the water would not be acceptable to the other landowners.

If the permit is granted to the City of Odessa without steps being taken to overcome the problems caused by the discharge and providing compensation for loss of land use, "the burden will fall on the Midland County property owners to take this problem to court," Judge Culver said in her letter to the Water Quality Board.

commander, Harvey Holcomb, presented Crane County Sheriff Raymond Weatherby and Crane Police Chief Bill Lee with plaques listing names of the 101 Crane donors to the fund.

"We certainly appreciate it . . .," the sheriff said, "and I certainly hope my wife never collects on it."

The police chief gave thanks: "In this day and age, you can just read it in the papers, we (lawmen) need all the support we can get."

Said Commander Holcomb: "We just hope that the money lies there and gets musty." Holcomb, who originally hailed from Crane, now lives in Odessa.

Again, Chaney stepped forward. He introduced State Sen. Pete Snelson of Midland.

The senator noted Crane's 50 years of producing oil and gas. The said "the economy of this county" means much "not only to the United States but to the world."

He was brief.

Before the program was over, Chaney opined that the morning's parade was "one of the best we've ever had."

And Chamber of Commerce President Larry Sheppard proudly cited Crane's Beautify Texas Council award for "enhancing the quality of life in the community." The citation was presented earlier by the governor in Austin.

The program was over. And Chaney stepped from the gazebo and into the waning crowd.

Though he may not have a thousand faces, Chaney said he was going to play the devil Saturday night.

He was to play a couple of roles in a Paul Patterson-authored play, "The Ups and Downs of Crane Town," that night.

"I'm playing the devil, complete with pitchfork and horns," said Chaney, who also would be playing himself in the farce. He also would be wearing longjohns dyed red and a cape.

Minutes later, Chaney left the park and headed for "the mayor's luncheon" at the Sixth Street Community Hall. After lunch, Chaney, Sheppard, Snelson and a few, very few, others would return to the park for the burial of the community's time capsule. It's to be opened in 2007.

Following the "eats," Chaney introduced Snelson, who, in turn, introduced the event's main speaker, U.S. Rep. Bob Krueger, who's in the running for the U.S. Senate.

Snelson said fellow Democrat Krueger is the "most knowledgeable spokesman for the lifeblood of this area: oil and gas."

Krueger, in turn, talked about the virtues of small-town living.

Small towns, he said, offer a "stability, hope, promise,' not always found in the burgeoning metropolitan areas.

Small communities and cities may afford opportunities for people to grew and prosper "in a place where people care about one another."

(Crane is the only community in the 796-square-mile Crane County, which has a population of 4,172. Most live in town.)

Switching to the area's economy, Krueger noted that Crane County in 50 years already has produced one billion barrels of oil.

"That's an awful lot of energy," he said.

Folks in Crane, Krueger said, can be "very proud of what they have been able to give to America."

Following that, Chaney presented Krueger with a key to the City of Crane. It's a rare gift, he said.

In rounding out the luncheon, Chaney recognized fellow mayors at the jubilee's luncheon.

He introduced mayors Helen Humphries of Balmorhea, Maurice Simmons of Andrews, Ernest Angelo Jr. of Midland, Cleatus Brooks of McCamey, Dan Hemphill of Odessa and former Mayor Cecil Bridges of Stanton.

All but unnoticed in the by-invitation-only luncheon was San Antonio lawyer Nelson Wolff, 36, who is campaigning for the U.S. Congress. Wolff, a Democrat, is seeking the seat now held by former schoolteacher Krueger. He was playing a low-key campaign . . . for now.

Later in the afternoon, at the burial of the time capsule, Mayor Chaney and City Manager L. O. Burr commented that Krueger gave "a speech you could understand."

Actually, Chaney said, he had planned to have Gov. Dolph Briscoe speak at the luncheon. But the governor couldn't make it. Then, he tried to get some some other "state dignitaries,' to come to the jubilee.

There was no "payoff" there either.

"So, we settled for Krueger," Mayor Chaney said. ". . . Couldn't get the peanut peddler (President Jimmy Carter)," either, he said.

Arthritis group names officers

Other officers elected are Kenn George, vice president for finance; Ralph Hickman, vice president for public education; Dr. Charles Younger, vice president for medical, and Mrs. R. B. Hamm, secretary.

McCamey sets school opening

McCAMEY — School days will resume for students in McCamey Aug. 22 with buses running a regular schedule and the cafeteria serving lunches.

Inservice training for teachers begins Aug. 15. School employes and their families will attend a barbecue hosted by the school board Monday night.

The first school holiday will be Labor Day, Sept. 5.

Trustees plan public hearing

The Board of Trustees of the Midland Independent School District will hold a public hearing on the school district budget at 1:30 p.m. Tuesday in the board room of the Administration Building at 702 N. N Street.

The hearing is preliminary to the adoption of the budget and the setting of the tax rate.

Relief not far away for air passengers

employees have been hired because of the increase, he said.

Dan Wilkinaon, station manager for Southwest Airlines, said the only major problem he has noticed is the longer time required for passengers to go through security check.

Southwest Airlines passenger boardings in July were 8,662, Wilkinson aaid. This figure represents an increase of 1,682 from June, he said.

Continental Airlines will be forced to cope with substantial problem when the terminal improvement project begins, according to Chuck Logue, regional director of Continental.

The problem is that Continental's loading ramps will be torn to allow construction of new ramps. The big problem lies in the fact that Continental's fuel tanks are housed under the ramps.

Logue said Continental would make interim changes to deal with the fuel situation. "We plan to do business as usual," he said.

He said Continental has experienced only a slight increase in passenger boardings for July, which annually is Continental's "biggest month" for boardings. The figure for July 1977 was only 4.6 per cent higher than for July 1976, Logue said. Continental had 20,701 passenger boardings in July.

Early sell-outs of economy weekend flights may cause problems for travelers. Southwest Airlines reported its weekend "pleasure class" flights are usually sold out two to three weeks in advance.

TI reduced fare weekend flights are usually sold out five to six days in advance, Malcom said. Persons placed on waiting lists for these flights often number 40, he said.

Continental weekend flights with economy class seating are usually sold four to five days in advance, Logue said.

But this information may be misleading, since each flight has a certain percentage of "no shows." A "no show" is a person who has made a reservation for a particular flight, but for some reason is not able to make his or her scheduled trip.

The "no show" percentage usually ranges from 10 to 20 per cent.

The rise in the number of passenger boardings is expected to level off in August and September, Banks said. He attributed the leveling off to the start of school and the fact that fewer people will be taking vacations.

Banks said, however, he expects the terminal to continue its steady growth.

Phone strike negotiations not complete

By The Associated Press

State and regional negotiators for the Bell System, which averted a nationwide strike by the Communication Workers of America a week ago, faced midnight strike deadlines Saturday in efforts to reach local agreements with more than 100,000 telephone workers.

The local and regional contracts still to be reached with CWA locals and 23 of the Bell System's operating companies supplement a national agreement on wages and benefits reached Aug. 6. That contract provides wage hikes totaling 31 per cent over three years for the 500,000 CWA workers.

Negotiators for operators, installers and repairmen were still bargaining over working conditions, job classifications, grievance procedures, job transfers, seniority and other issues in San Francisco, Boston, New York, Helena, M$$, Indianapolis, Washington, D.C., and Detroit.

Tentative agreements were reached several hours before the strike deadline in Denver, St. Louis, Columbus, Milwaukee and Birmingham, Ala.

Geneva Harvey

Promotions announced

Two First National Bank of Midland employes have received promotions, President Wilbur A. Yeager Jr. announced Saturday.

Geneva Harvey, who serves in the accounting department, has been named assistant vice president. She joined the bank in 1956 and was named assistant cashier in 1974.

J. Allen Kemper, an assistant auditor since May 1976, has been promoted to auditor. He is a Certified Public Accountant and a graduate of West Texas State University in Canyon.

Woman tells rape attempt

A Midland woman Saturday reported to police that a man entered her eastside home at about 5:10 a.m. and attempted to rape her.

The woman told police the man entered her house through a bedroom window and she was awakened when the man crawled across the bed. She said she pushed him away, ran in the next room and had her daughter telephone police. She said the man left by the same window through which he entered. No arrest has been made.

POLICE TIRES PUNCTURED

Two Midland police officers Saturday roported that the front and rear tires of their police car were punctured with an instrument one inch in width while they were away from their car.

MOTEL REPORTED BURGLARIZED

The incident reportedly happened at 6:30 p.m. Friday.

Three held

ODESSA — Ector County Sheriff's Department narcotics officers Saturday arrested three men after a search of a residence yielded 13 one-half pound bags of a substance believed to be marijuana, a department spokesman said.

The three were being held Saturday night in the Ector County jail. Charges had not been filed by 10 p.m.

The search warrant was issued for the residence in the 900 block of East 14th Street by Peace Justice Virgil Lumpee after the sheriff's department received information from an informant, an Ector County narcotics officer said.

Midlander near top in contest

CALIFORNIA, Pa. — Midland Boy Scout Arthur Pare placed among the top 12 competitors in the Merit Badge Midway scholarship contest sponsored by California State College at the National Boy Scout Jamboree in Moraine State Park.

Gala party slated at commissioning of USS Texas

By BILL KIDD
Austin Bureau

AUSTIN—On Sept. 10, a group of Texas dignitaries and wellwishers gather in Norfolk, Va., for the commissioning of the USS Texas — fourth U.S. Navy ship of that name.

And Secretary of State Mark White, chairman of the USS Texas Liaison Committee, says Texans intend to make it a memorable occassion for all involved.

As committee chairman, White has been heading a fund-raising effort to provide the traditional gift of a silver service for the ship, as well as for other items for the crew—and for a commissioning party.

White hopes to raise $100,000 for the new nuclear-powered guided missile cruiser, and reports gifts have been coming in from around Texas—ranging from $10 to $2,500.

For the record, anyone wanting to make a contribution can do so by sending a check to the USS Texas Liaison Committee, P.O. Box 12428, Austin 78711.

All gifts will be acknowledged—and are tax-deductible, White says. And each contributer will receive a photograph of the ship after the commissioning ceremonies.

White was present for the keellaying of the 11,000-ton vessel—and for its launching by Mrs. Janey Briscoe at Newport News, Va., on Aug. 9, 1975

That was, White says, one of the great experiences of his life—and so he hopes to make the commissioning ceremonies memorable experience for all those taking part in them.

Texas, White feels, has a tradition to live up to as regards the commissioning of the new ship—and so some elaborate planning has been made to insure that tradition is upheld.

The silver service, costing some $25,000, will be provided by a very Texas establishment: Niemann-Marcus.

Meat packers in Amarillo have donated 1,200 pounds of beef for a barbecue (two barbecues, actually—since half of the crew will be on duty while half is at the party).

Panhandle restauranteur Chuck Gallimore and Sutphen's Pit Barbecue will oversee preparation of the meal—and Marshall's reigning chili champion Albert Agnor will be on hand to serve the Offical State Dish.

The Astro-Country-Gold group from Astroworld, Ray Price, Willie Nelson, Johnny Rodriquez and Dotsie Brotd, will provide entertainment.

Tony Lama and El Paso are kicking in some boots with the ship's seal (White says the boots are designed so they will "apparently" meet Navy regulations for wearing on the bridge).

Lone Star Nursery, Tyler, is providing 200 dozen yellow roses for decorations—with Six Flags Over Texas providing (naturally) a specially-made Texas flag for the quarter deck.

The University of Texas Naval ROTC Unit is providing the ship with a set of longhorns—while Fort Worth tops it all off with hats for the skipper and executive officer.

And in addition to all the other items, the ship's library is to be furnished with various magazines published in Texas—including those published by state agencies.

There also will be artwork with Texas motifs, including photographs various parts of Texas.

White and the committee aren't sure just how many folks will show up for the commissioning—but there will be quite a few from Texas.

'Mormon will' judge changed

LAS VEGAS (AP) — The judge who has been hearing the "Mormon Will" case since June 1976 said Friday he will appeal his disqualification from presiding over the trial to determine if Howard Hughes wrote the 1968-dated paper.

But if the Nevada Supreme Court doesn't rule by Aug. 26, said Clark County District Court Judge Keith Hayes, the case will be assigned to Judge Thomas O'Donnell.

The jury trial to determine the document's authenticity had been scheduled to start Monday. But a visiting judge ruled last week that Hayes should step down from the case because he is a Mormon and the document would leave one-sixeenth of the recluse millionaire's estate to the Mormon Church.

"I have spent a great deal of time in some thought," Hayes said in court Friday. "There are some very important issues and very important interests involved.

"I am concerned with the effect of this order on the administration of justice in this state."

Hayes said he wanted a quick appeals decision because the case has already taken so much time and cost so much.

Legal proceedings relating to various wills attributed to Hughes in Nevada, California and Texas "to date have cost upwards of a million and a half dollars in attorneys fees and costs," he said.

He said he could not afford an appeal, but Las Vegas attorney Lee Rose has volunteered his firm's services.

O'Donnell's name was selected Friday by draw from among county district court judges.

Judge William Forman of Washoe County District Court ruled last week that Hayes is not biased. But he said the judge should be disqualified because the question of prejudice has been raised and could cloud the trial.

The Mormon Will is a threepage mis-spelled document filed with the Clark County clerk in April 1976, shortly after Hughes' death. Mormon Church officials delivered the paper, saying they had found it in church headquarters in Salt Lake City. Former Utah service station owner Melvin Dummar has said he brought the paper to the church.

The will would leave onefourth of the Hughes estate to the Hughes Medical Institute in Miami and divide the rest among various universities, charities and individuals. Dummar would get one-sixteenth. Some of Hughes' relatives have challenged the paper as a forgery.

Trial is scheduled to begin Sept. 12 in Houston, Texas, probate court to determine the legal residence of Hughes, who died while being flown from Mexico to Houston. A second Houston trial would consider the validity of several alleged Hughes wills, including the Mormon Will.

Some timely tips on fall gardens

By CHARLES GREEN
Midland County Extension Agent

Dryland cotton, stressed for moisture, is opening in some parts of Midland County. Generally the area to the west of Highway 349 has been extremely short on rainfall this season, and cotton in that section is stunted, carrying only three or four small bells, and cracking open. A rain at this date will be of little benefit to crops in that stage.

The area to the east of 349 is generally in better condition with the exception of an area in northeast Midland County north of old Highway 80. Some scattered and locally heavy showers in July have kept crops and ranges in better condition in the Greenwood and Valley View communities, although the whole county and area has some dry spots.

The Hickory shuckworm, Lasteyersida caryana, is an annual pest of pecans in Midland county. This insect becomes active on pecan trees in the early spring. Light numbers of the shuckworm are present on trees during the spring and summer feedings on developing nuts. In late summer when the shells on developing nuts start to harden, shuckworm numbers increase on infested trees.

Shuckworm larvae tunnel in the shucks, preventing proper development of kernels and interfering with the natural opening of the shucks in the fall. Feeding of the shuckworm larvae in the shucks results in slower maturity of the nuts. Late maturity and failure of proper filling of the pecan kernel are due to cutting off of the food supply which enters the nut through its base. One of the favorite places for the larvae of the shuckworm to feed is in the area in the shuck at the base of the nut.

The adult shuckworm is a dark brown to greyish-black moth about ⅜ inch long, with a wingspan of a little over ½ inch. The larvae is white with a light brown head. It attains a length of ⅜ inch before pupating. Chemical treatments for control of the shuckworm on pecans should begin in mid-August or as soon as shells on developing nuts start to harden.

Insecticides suggested for control of the shuckworm in commercial pecan orchards are: Guthion, EPN, Zelene or Torak. For trees in the home landscape, Guthion is suggested for control of shuckworm infestations. Make 2 or 3 chemical treatments at 10 to 18 day intervals for effective shuckworm control. Check the label on the insecticide container for information and restrictions on mixing and applying insecticide

Do vegetable seeds you plant in the hot summer months hide in the soil and refuse to become productive plants for your fall garden? Instead of becoming a headache to deal with, some simple preparatory steps will encourage seeds to sprout and become productive plants.

Providing a better environment for the seed in the harsh West Texas summer is the initial step. This can easily be done by making a one-inch furrow down the center of each row. Water the furrow several times to moisten the soil deeply and then you're ready to plant. It also helps to soak seed overnight to improve germination. After spreading seed evenly in the furrow, cover it with a light layer of compost potting soil or vermiculite.

Vermiculite, which is light in color, effectively reflects the scorching rays of the summer sun and provides a cooler environment for the seedlings. As seedlings appear, provide adequate protection form the intense heat. Boards, cardboard or draped cloth on the west side of the plants will reduce the intensity of the sun. And remember to deep watering.

After seedlings reach a height of one to two inches, thin excess plants to allow those remaining to reach full production. A Home Vegetable Garden Planting Calender for Southwestern Texas is available at the County Extension Office, Courthouse Annex Bldg., 218 W. Illinois, which gives the dates for fall gardens in this area. A number of vegetables can be planted in August and September for fall production.

For the record....

We realize that U.S. Rep. Bob Krueger has announced his candidacy for the Democrat nomination for the U.S. Senate in 1978, but the New Braunfels congressman should try to keep his facts straight.

In a Midland speech a week ago Krueger blamed the Republicans in Congress for the failure of his bill to deregulate the price of natural gas. Such an implication is pure nonsense by any stretch of the imagination and Krueger should know better.

In the first place, 199 members of the House voted for deregulation and 127 of these were Republicans. Of the 227 congressmen voting against deregulation, only 17 were Republicans and 210 were Democrats. In other words, 88 per cent of the Republican members of Congress voted with Krueger and the oil and gas business. This compares to only 25 per cent of the Democrat representatives voting with Krueger and 73 per cent voting against him. (Six Democrats and one Republican didn't vote.)

So Krueger should be thanking Republicans for their support, not criticizing them or misleading the public into thinking the congressional Democrats are not to blame.

Krueger also has claimed that Republicans caused defeat of the bill because they insisted in committee that a total deregulation bill be brought to a vote, rather than a bill taking several years to achieve deregulation. This theory is equally hard to accept since anyone who understands anything about congressional politics knows that each committee is controlled by a majority of Democrats, since they control Congress. So the type of bill that comes out of a committee for a vote is usually determined by that Democrat majority — not the minority membership. And even if Republicans on the committee voted for a bill calling for total deregulation, isn't that what West Texans and Congressman Krueger have been wanting for a long time?

So come on now Congressman Krueger — we were all with you on your deregulation efforts, but so were the Republicans.

Championship sports

The Tall City of Midland this weekend is back in the forefront with two championship sports events which have attracted hundreds of participants and fans.

In one of the big attractions, 15 slow pitch softball teams — the sports writers label them "power-packed," and we do not doubt it one bit — are battling it out in a tourney at Hogan Park for a spot in the National Men's Class A Slow Pitch Tournament scheduled next month at Richmond, Va. The competition is keen and the play is interesting to watch.

Tournament play was launched Saturday, with today's games scheduled to get under way at 10 a.m.

The teams are from Houston, Dallas, Corpus Christi, Austin, Fort Worth, San Antonio, Baytown, Irving, San Marcos and Midland.

The other big event, which is being held at Lancaster Park, is the two-division Regional Miss Softball America Tournament. It began Friday, and the finals are set for this afternoon.

Again, the play among the district championship teams, is fast and furious, with the young ladies performing to the very best of their abilities. The division winners here will gain places in the two national tournaments to be held later this month, also in Richmond.

Midland has two teams entered in the Major Division and one in the Senior Division. The other teams are from Snyder, Denison and Hobbs, N.M.

Midland is fortunate this year in that it has had an almost continuous string of stellar sports attractions of multiple kinds on weekends since early spring. They have attracted thousands of visitors to the Tall City, many of them for the first time. This is a feather in Midland's cap, and Midlanders have been delighted at the opportunity of being hosts to the athletes and sports fans.

The tournaments being held here this weekend certainly are no exception. It is hoped that the many visitors are enjoying their stay in the Tall City and that they will come back to see us at every opportunity.

ASIA MEMO:

Americans are in a 'quandary' over China

By EDWARD NEILAN
Copley News Service

Edward Neilan

The American public is in a "quandary" over the China normalization issue but leadership from the White House could and should guide the United States to a satisfactory solution of the problem.

That is the analysis of a Gallup-supervised poll made in April, by authors of a new study: "The United States and China: American Perceptions and Future Alternatives."

The authors, William Watts of Potomac Associates; Ralph N. Clough of Brookings Institution; and Robert B. Oxnam of the China Council of The Asia Society, try to go beyond the conclusions of other recent public opinion polls on the China question.

The quandary in which Americans are put on China is reinforced in the results of this poll just as it was shown in an earlier poll by Gallup, in a Taiwan-sponsored poll this spring and in a recent Foreign Policy Association poll.

All of these surveys have shown that the American public, as gauged by scientific samplings, believes that it is worthwhile to extend formal diplomatic recognition to the People's Republic of China (Peking).

But by about the same weight in the polls, the American public does not want the United States to take any action that would threaten the future security of Taiwan, a longtime U.S. ally.

Authors Watts, Clough and Oxnam — all respected scholars and professionals on public policy research — concede that the positions of both Chinas make "having it both ways" virtually impossible. Thus, they say, some leadership at the highest level in the United States is the element needed to unravel the situation and make certain that U.S. interests are served.

Peking has not done its public image in the United States much good lately by the repeated statements of its leaders that Taiwan will be taken by force if necessary.

The poll showed that Americans have a more positive image of Taiwan than of mainland China.

On the other hand, it is quite clear that Peking has no capability to launch an attack on Taiwan. The recent air force defector from mainland China confirmed that the PRC military posture across the strait from Taiwan is defensive and based on outdated aircraft with faulty electrical systems and pilots who get too little flight time.

The study goes over the reasons why improved ties with Peking are desirable and also restates the reasons why the United States should not accept Peking's demands as an unquestioned package.

The poll results and analyses provide a good background for Americans for the upcoming visit to China by Secretary of State Cyrus Vance (Aug. 22). (Copies of the study, at $4 per copy, may be ordered by writing Potomac Associates, c-o School for Advanced International Studies, 1740 Massachusetts Ave. NW, Washington D.C. 20006).

One thing this study and many analyses of the U.S.-China equation or the U.S.-Peking-Taipen Triangle have overlooked, is the People's Republic's domestic political situation.

There had been some uncertainty over the stability of the leadership of Chairman Hua Kuo-feng (Mao Tse-tung's successor) as long as the strong Teng Hsiao-ping remained out of official position but continued to be mentioned as a come back candidate.

Now that Teng has been restored to his party (vice chairman), government (vice premier) and, critically, military posts, the China leadership picture is complete. Vance and Teng have crossed verbal swords before; perhaps this time they can find some method of compromising on the normalization issue.

WASHINGTON MERRY—GO—ROUND

Right to a 'day in court' is lost

By JACK ANDERSON

WASHINGTON — It sometimes seems as if half the American people are suing the other half. Our daily mail is loaded with emotional letters, enclosing ponderous legal documents, from litigants who have given up all hope of getting justice from the courts.

We once numbered among our basic rights what was called our "day in court." That phrase meant access to justice on terms that were prompt, cheap and fair. Today, the phrase must be altered to our "years in court." Access to our courts is no longer prompt nor cheap and, therefore, cannot be fair.

In the past 10 years, the workload of most federal courts had doubled; some courts report it has tripled. There has been no comparable increase in the number of judges or other court resources, which means that our judicial system is forced everywhere, every day, to violate the chief judicial commandment formulated by the late, eminent Judge Learned Hand: "Thou shalt not ration justice."

Once the citizen does get into court, he may be stuck there waiting for a conclusion for perhaps a decade. The litigant whose bills are footed by stockholders or by the taxpayers can simply outlast the unsubsidized citizen by dragging things out from court to court. It is but a matter of time before the lone litigant is too broke, too weary, too old and too hopeless to continue. And so he drops out.

Not infrequently, he drops out by dying. The anguish and frustration that builds up on the emotional roller coaster of endless, unresolved litigation is a frequent cause of illness.

The burden of the clogging of the courts falls unequally. For the congenital criminal, it means that most of the time, under one guise or another, he will get off. The United States is too weak and too poor, at least in its priorities, to cope with its criminals.

For victims of crime, it means more victimization and less hope of redress. There can no longer be any doubt that the failure to dispose of criminal cases promptly is largely responsible for the crime wave sweeping the country.

For the citizen who is caught up in a civil case, or who needs to bring one, he is confronted with the delay that has always been recognized as the denial of justice. He may wait for years to get a hearing.

The lament is the loudest from concerned, conscientious judges. The federal district court for southern Florida once led the nation in processing civil cases. But Judge J. Lawrence King now reports, with dismay, that this court has tried almost no civil cases in the past year.

Judge Robert Ainsworth, chairman of the federal judiciary's Committee on Court Administration, who sits in New Orleans on the Fifth Circuit Court, declares: "There are just too many cases. We're at half strength."

What has caused the disintegration of our once proud judicial system into such mocking decreptitudes? Some of the reasons reach to the general condition of our society. In a permissive age, more and more people are without a personal moral code and will accept only those strictures forced upon them by the law. And in a free society, the law never has enough resources to deal with a large population of connivers.

But most of the causes of our courtroom breakdown CAN be zeroed in on. The judges themselves are culpable. Though they have labored heroically to keep up with huge caseloads, they have failed as a group to sound the alarm as mounting problems beset their courts. Much of their caseload is made up of repeaters who are convicted but not put away. Judges have also been slow to purge their deadheads, to change antiquated methods and to take advantage of modern technology.

The major beneficiaries of the stagnation of our legal system are the lawyers who, therefore, have happily contributed to the logjam. Paid by the hour for most cases, lawyers have developed into a money-making science the techniques of postponement, of appeal, of moves to different courts, of the everlasting new motion. And too many judges, having once been lawyers themselves, permit this sort of fee fattening.

The hand of the legislator is also heavy in this mess. Congress has increasingly saddled upon staggering courts bitter social controversies, which are the real responsibility of the legislative branch. Moreover, Congress in its benevolent muddleheadedness has in the last decade passed dozens of laws, 40 by our count, which were designed to improve the lot of aggrieved citizens — minorities, consumers, environmentalists, debtors, convicts — but which have in reality caused litigation to mushroom, without creating the facilities to handle it.

There is nothing benevolent behind the failure of Congress to add a single federal district judgeship since 1970 to cope with the flood of new cases its laws have generated. Lay that favor to patronage hounding at its coarsest. While Republicans held the White House, the Democrats in Congress weren't willing to create new judicial plums for the president to hand out.

A number of proposals have been made to deal with this breakdown. Here are just a few:

— The creation of enough judges and other court resources to meet the load.

— A recodification of legal procedures aimed at bringing litigation to a final conclusion within a reasonable time.

— The establishment of citizens' courts, run by mere magistrates, where citizens can come without lawyers for quick, cost-free adjudication of nodest disputes.

— Putting an end to the exclusive license of lawyers to horn in and profiteer on family-type concerns by establishing procedures for the probating of wills, for the sale of residential real estate, for uncomplicated divorces and the like, without the gouging by our $75-an-hour Clarence Darrows.

Take the 'E' out of 'HEW' and let it stand alone

By SEN. ABRAHAM RIBICOFF (D-CONN.)
Guest Columnist

WASHINGTON — Since this column is, about education, let's start with a quiz:

Q — What do Oveta Culp Hobby, Arthur S. Flemming, Anthony Celebrezze, John Gardner, Wilbur Cohen, Robert Finch, Elliot Richardson, Caspar Weinberger, David Mathews and me, Abe Ribicoff, all have in common?

A — All of us were secretaries of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

Q — With whom do all of us sympathize? A — Joe Califano. Q — Why?

A — Because Joe Califano is now secretary of HEW and because, without question, he has one of the most difficult and frustrating jobs anyone can undertake.

Imagine what it's like being secretary of HEW.

First of all, you oversee the biggest budget in Washington — a whopping $146 billion, an annual expenditure larger than the Pentagon's and bigger than many Cabinet-level departments combined.

As Secretary, you have to contend with welfare, a subject of heated controversy. Our welfare system is so confused and wasteful and so in need of reform that nobody — liberals, conservatives or middle-of-the-roaders — is pleased with it.

Next, there are Social Security and Medicare and Medicaid and hospital assistance and a host of other health programs that need your attention.

You must also be mindful of the fact that HEW has thousands of computers doling out some $84 billion in checks and other negotiable instruments each year. And yet not one single criminal investigator in the entire department trained in how to investigate computer fraud.

Outside, on Independence Ave., below your office, there may be protesters carrying signs that say you're doing too much for the other guy and not enough for them. Some blame you for disallowing the sale of a certain medicine; others accuse you of being insensitive to needs of the poor. Still others carry signs proclaiming that you're too preoccupied with problems of poverty and not concerned enough with working families.

In short, you have headaches aplenty — with health and welfare.

Now it's 4:30 in the afternoon, or 6:30 or maybe it's midnight. You've been struggling all day with Social Security revenue difficulties, rising Medicare and Medicaid costs, welfare reform and welfare fraud, and you've testified that morning before two congressional committees. You're tired. But into your office come senior aides who specialize in education programs of the department.

The men and women from the E in HEW also have headaches. They brief you on some of the problems. Nobody is satisfied, they report, with the nation's schools, nor with the way HEW is trying to enhance the quality of education.

Charges and accusations abound. High schools are handing out diplomas to students who can't read. Scholastic Aptitude Tests nationwide are showing their biggest drop in 20 years. College admissions are too strict or they aren't strict enough. Some school districts receive too much federal aid while others do not receive enough.

So you, the HEW secretary, must grapple with education issues. You do the best you can. But there is a limit. Something invariably is neglected in a department with so many responsibilities. All too often that something is education.

One final question: Why have I introduced legislation to create a separate Department of Education — that is, take the "E" out of HEW and let it stand alone?

My reason is that education is too important to be combined with health and welfare. In turn, health and welfare are too important to be combined with education. The old "Three is a crowd" cliche was never more true.

Serious educational problems are being overlooked in the massive HEW. It is essential that we have a secretary who can concentrate solely on education and not get bogged down with the equally serious problems of health and welfare.

I have favored setting up a Department of Education ever since I served as secretary of HEW in 1961 and 1962 under President John F. Kennedy. I have been working in the Senate to achieve this goal for the last 12 years.

This year or next we may finally succeed. During his campaign, President Carter said he favored a separate Department of Education. With his support and with the growing support for the measure in Congress, there is a good chance the bill will pass.

AUSTIN NOTEBOOK

Jesse James doesn't appear ready to leave state treasurer's office

By BILL KIDD
Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Despite problems of health and increasing criticism, State Treasurer Jesse James apparently is nowhere near ready to vacate the office he's held since 1941.

James says he's not ready to announce his political intentions yet — because he doesn't want to have to begin filing all the forms required of announced candidates.

But he makes it clear that when next year rolls around, he plans to be making his reelection announcement.

James' medical problems, resulting in removal of the lower portion of his left leg, seem to have been one factor in increased speculation that the 72-year-old incumbent wouldn't seek another term.

However, friends of James report he's indicated to them he's running — and his public statements indicate the same thing.

And James' actions point to his intentions to stay — such as his appearance at the dedication of the new Texas Bankers Association headquarters (where he had a chance to visit with many of the folks who've contributed to his past campaigns) and the release of copies of a letter to Gov. Dolph Briscoe announcing some changes in his department to improve its money management.

Those changes may have been intended to head off the persistent criticism of Houston Republican Rep. Frank Hartung, who has attempted in past sessions of the Legislature to pass bills changing the way James handles state funds.

Hartung claims the state is losing millions of dollars in interest because of "idle" funds in non-interest bearing demand accounts.

James counters that the state is making millions of dollars in interest, and that the demand accounts are necessary to insure the processing of state warrants — and that Hartung basically doesn't know what he's talking about.

The dispute likely will be renewed in 1979 — if James returns, and if Hartung isn't a candidate for James' job (which he says he's not).

There are some candidates already in that race, however.

Former Austin councilman Lowell Lebermann has been contacting bankers and other potential supporters throughout Texas, getting his name and intentions before them.

On the GOP side, Houston businessman Don Johnson is campaigning.

And several folks have been mentioned from time to time — including Garland Sen. Ron Clower, Wichita Falls Rep. Dave Allred and former Austin Rep. Maurice Angly.

Angly, a Republican who challenged James in 1972 in a campaign which focused on James' money policies and deposit of state funds in the Sharpstown State Bank, feels his loss (by some 125,000 votes) was due to James' name identification and ability to raise campaign funds from long-time, well-heeled supporters.

Although James' support from bankers has been a campaign issue with many of his challengers, that support — and the readily-identifiable name — have helped James continue in office for over three decades.

Despite periodic flaps — such as the Sharpstown bank deposits — James has kept a low profile throughout most of his service.

His office rarely issues any announcements; James' service on the State Banking Board and State Depository Board (by law he is one of the members of each of those three-man bodies) seldom attracts notice from anyone outside the banking industry.

The job, James has said, isn't glamorous — just important.

And, he adds, the importance of the job has been realized by the banking industry — and that is why the bankers have supported him.

James appears to retain that support — and if he does run again, he'll most likely win.

Still, hope springs as eternal in the breasts of politicians as in those of other mortals — and the challengers are lining up once again.

ART BUCHWALD

A mental health problem

MARTHA'S VINEYARD — My good friend Prof. Heinrich Applebaum has just done a sociological study on how private beaches affect the average American's vacation. He did it under a grant from the "Life Is Unfair Foundation."

Applebaum's study came to some startling conclusions.

"You would think," he told me, "that people who own their own beaches would be twice as happy as those who don't."

"That certainly figures," I said.

"Well, it's not true. My interviews indicate that those who have no rights to a private beach are three and a half times happier than those who do."

I was certainly surprised.

He said, "It appears that those who don't own beach front property believe the ocean is public and they have the right to use any beach they want to, even if it's marked 'Private.'" In fact, they prefer to use a private beach more than they do a public beach because not only are private beaches nicer but it drives the owners up the wall."

"I should think so. A person with a private beach has paid through the nose for it and he doesn't want just anybody using it. There are still such things as property rights in this country."

"Public bathers don't believe this," Applebaum said. "They feel that a beach is a beach is a beach, and if they can get away with using a private beach rather than a public one, their day is made. This is particularly true of nude bathers who will walk miles across dunes, sand and rocks to camp on a piece of property that is off limits to them."

"That's terrible."

"It's worse than that. I discovered in my studies that as the summer goes by the owners of private beaches start suffering severe mental problems, including depression, paranoia and hysteria. Very few of them can cope with strangers using their beaches. At the end of the summer they are psychological wrecks."

"How so?" I asked.

"Well, they get up in the morning, and the first thing they do is go down to their beach to see if anyone is on it. The thing about private beaches is people use them not only for sunbathing in the daytime, but also at night for other things. If they find their beach has been used at night, it drives the owners crazy. 'Get off my beach!' they scream at the people wrapped in their blankets.

"Then the beachowners go back to their houses to have breakfast. After breakfast they go back to the beach to see who is on it. If no one has arrived yet, they go into town to buy the papers and shop for groceries. But they are very ill at ease because all the time they're away they keep wondering if anyone is on their sand.

"When they return from town, they immediately go back to the beach to check it out. They sit on a sand dune waiting for the invaders. Some people send their children down to stand guard, and at the first sign of an unauthorized bather the children sound the alarm and everyone goes down to the beach to drive the trespassers off. If the sunbathers refuse to move, they have to go back to the house to call the police. This can kill two or three hours."

"It doesn't sound like much fun for the beachowners," I said.

"It isn't. They can't accept lunch dates or go fishing or sailing because they believe as soon as they go someone will walk on their property."

"A person could develop a complex after a while."

"Most of them do," Applebaum said. "They have nightmares, hallucinations and crying jags. They start taking to themselves. And in some cases they even plot murder. If these people don't get treatment, they can become a danger to society."

"Then on the basis of your study you're recommending that people who own waterfront property seek pyschiatric help as soon as the summer is over."

"It's essential," Applebaum said. "A person who owns a private beach at a summer resort is a walking time bomb that could go off at any moment."

Black discord with Carter grows

By VERNON E. JORDAN JR.
Special to The Washington Post-Outlook

Black disappointment with the Carter administration, a low murmur several months ago, has swelled to a cresendo. A key element in the coalition that elected President Carter is becoming estranged from his administration and resentful of its failure to launch a massive attack on the problems confronting black people and the cities in which they live.

What happened to cause this disappointment? Were black expectations so unrealistically enlarged that no administration could meet them? Or have the administration's policies been so inadequate?

In the main, black expectations were realistic. It was generally understood that political and budgetary restraints would prevent total, short-term transformation of our society. But it was also expected that national priorities would be reordered and that major domestic initiatives would be made, inaugurating real and much needed changes.

A REFRAIN OF administration spokesmen has been "We've only been in office six months. Give us time." But the first six months of an administration set the tone for the remainder of the presidential term. There is suspicion that the basic principles that may come to inform all of its domestic policies will be too cautious — a priority on keeping costs down, even where that may mean defeating the goals of a program, premature compromises to make programs palatable to conservative interests, and an assumption that the problems of povrty and joblessness have their origins in supposed deficiencies within the poor rather than within an economy that doesn't create enough jobs.

For an administration concerned with morality in public, it is unconscionable to place the burdens for balancing budgets and controlling inflation on the backs of the poorest and most deprived in our society. A civilized society can no longer expect poor people to accept unemployment in order to preserve affluent people's price stability.

Sound national policy requires greater flexibility and innovation on the federal level and the adoption of urgent national priorities to change the social environment in which our people live; an environment characterized by poverty in the midst of affluence; by racial tensions worsened by competition in a scarcity economy, and by urban deterioration hastened by the erosion of the urban economy.

THE FIRST PRIORITY of this — or any — administration should be full employment. It is simply not enough to measure progress in this area by lowering the unemployment rate by fractions of a percentage point or by creating several hundreds of thousands of jobs. A decade ago a presidential commissionendorsed creation of about five million jobs to put people to work and to improve public services.

A federal program of incentives to the private sector should be tied to definite numerical goals and a rigid timetable. It cannot be conditioned on vague principles such as achieving a balanced budget first. This also implies massive reforms in an educational system that graduates functional illiterates and pushes young people out of school before they've acquired the capabilities of becoming independent earners.

The process of creating jobs is also the process of creating productive, meaningful and creative work — building houses for a nation that cannot meet the housing needs of all of its people, caring for a ravaged environment and creating an infrastructure of services and public facilities that will make our society more humane by helping each person to fulfill his or her potential.

A second major goal should be an income assistance program. The deficiencies of both the present welfare system and the administration's reform plan could be overcome by reliance on a refundable credit income tax consisting of a grant to each person; higher income individuals would have the grant taxed back while low and moderate income persons would keep all or part of it. Tied to a revamped tax system that eliminates the billions of dollars in loopholes and tax preferences, such a system would no longer stigmatize the poor; it would provide assistance for lower income families not now eligible for welfare payments; the result would be a more equitable tax system.

The administration's current welfare reform plan is an improvement over the present system and may well be the most feasible measure, politically, at this time. But it should not be seen as an end in itself. Rather, it should be a beginning toward a comprehensive income assistance program that fundamentally alters our conception of "welfare."

A third policy goal should be revitalization of the cities through a national urban policy supportive of urban growth and economic development. A coordinated systemic approach to urban problems is necessary, and should include urban land banks, a national urban economic development bank, sharply expanded housing opportunities for low-income families, transportation programs, and education aid.

OTHER MAJOR reforms high on the agenda include a national health policy that not only cushions families against rising medical costs but also assures equal access to quality medical care and removes income as a determinant of health.

The very length and extent of the "shopping list" of new policy initiatives is a measure of the nation's needs. And, while I have outlined the most pressing items on black people's agenda, it should be clear to all that more whites than blacks would benefit from them. The great majority of people without jobs are white, the majority of those on welfare are white, and the majority of America's poor people are white.

But it should be equally clear that, while measures intended to benefit all Americans are implemented, special steps must be taken to ensure that black people come to enjoy parity with whites. It is not enough simply to pursue aggregate policies that increase the number of jobs or homes, for example, without targeting those policies to ensure that blacks and other disadvantaged minorities get their fair share of those jobs and homes.

Alongside such basic policy steps, the President and his administration could make those symbolic gestures that are vital ingredients of national leadership. In his actions and rhetoric, the President can demonstrate his concern for America's poor and her minorities. The symbolic acts of his first days in office signaled to the nation the new administration's openness and its more populist style. So, too, can the President send signals to the urban poor.

ONE SUCH SIGNAL, costing no more than the fuel for Air Force One, would be to visit deprived urban neighborhoods. A President who went to Clinton, Mass., and Yazoo City, Miss., should also walk the mean streets of the South Bronx or Brooklyn's Bushwick section to assure people of his concern and of his determination to help them change their lives.

Another signal should be to order his Justice Department to file a brief in the (Bakke) case, coming before the Supeme Court this fall, supporting the University of California position that it legitimately reserved 16 of the 100 seats at its Davis medical school for its minority students and that this did not violate Alan Bakke's constitutional rights.

By making his concern for the poor apparent, by taking every opportunity to demonstrate that he cares and that his administration will fight to change conditions that keep people chained to poverty and despair, the President can not only rekindle the embers of hope in our cities, but he can help lead the majority of Americans out of their indifference and toward greater social concern. The anti-social selfishness that characterized the nation in the past decade is as harmful to the future of American democracy as is the bleak anti-social despair fostered by urban poverty.

As long as this administration clings to caution and to priorities that are at odds with its campaign promises and the expectations of activism they engendered, it will suffer a credibility gap of increasing dimensions and will be further estranged from its natural constituency. More important, a magnificent opportunity will have been missed to change millions of lives for the better, and that failure may mean deepened despair and cynicism among America's poor.

POSITIVE THINKING

How to get your mind to begin working better

By NORMAN VINCENT PEALE

The head of a large cosmetic company on the West Coast sent a letter to all his employes. It contained such a dynamic and positive point of view that it is well worth reading by everyone. It said:

"Dear Partners:

"Most of us would quickly criticize our factory chemist if he used any but the purest and finest ingredients in compounding the products which go into our gleaming jars and sparkling bottles. We know that low grade, off color or rancid raw materials mixed together produce products of poor quality . . . cosmetics that fail and are rejected. Our success as a company and as individuals would be endangered!

"You are daily . . . you are hourly mixing together, in the whirling mixing vat of your mind, the ingredients that will determine what kind of finished product you will become. As Emerson says, 'You will become what you think.' The question to honestly answer to yourself is this: As the personal chemist of your own future life, are you putting enough of the fine raw materials of faith, confidence, effort, study and golden rule into the 'mix' of your life?

"Are you guarding against adding rancid thoughts of yesterday's unpleasant experiences, mistakes or failures? . . . against the discoloring thoughts of 'expecting the worst' . . . of unhappy attitudes . . . of deeply embedded resentments? Are you pouring into the mixing vat of your mind the weakening thoughts of 'My territory is different,' or 'I'll do it tomorrow,' or 'I can't improve,' or a feeling of inferiority or inadequacy?

"If you would like to see a miracle take place in your life, do this for the next 10 days . . .

"First thing each morning empty yesterday's residue. Clean and shine the vat of your mind! Do it just like our chemist makes spotles[s] and sparkling the great stainless [steel] hoppers in our manufa[cturing] department. Spend 30 minutes before work each day pouring buckets full of 'more faith in yourself and your fellowman' into your mind . . . more study. Then go out and mix for six solid hours with 'better effort.' Sprinkle in enough fine perfume labeled 'Golden Rule.'

"If you are short in your supply of it . . . and want to know where to find unlimited quantities of that fine ingredient 'more faith,' get out your Bible, the one you may not have read very much. Read the little verse, Philippians 4:13. If you still need more . . . Romans 8:31. Repeat these two verses daily, and your supply of faith in yourself and others will become boundless! I'm not going to spell them out for you for it will do you good to look them up.

"You will see a miracle happen in your life!

YOUR PARTNER IN PROGRESS

That is the dynamic message of a man who has learned how to keep a positive spirit going and he transmits it to other people. We are making some real progress in this world when the head of a large business wants not only to make a better product, but to make better people as well. And that makes sense really for in the long run only better people make better products.

Only better people make a better country. Only people whose thoughts are healthy and creative and positive can make a better world. So empty out all those old negative and depressive thoughts and put a positive mix into your mind. Then watch how things go so much better for you.

We'd better be ready for bigger tax bites

Copley News Service

The latest projections, worked out in a Library of Congress study, show the median U.S. family income jumping from $13,719 in 1975 and $16,406 in 1977 to $77,686 by the year 2000.

In the same period a median-income family's federal income taxes will rise from approximately $2,831 to $11,351.

Oh, well, don't feel too badly. It's only a small jump in percentages. The current federal income tax bite into a median income is 11.2 per cent and by the turn of the century will be 14.6 per cent.

State and local income, sales and property taxes are expected to go up from 7.2 per cent of income to 9.8 per cent.

Earthquake specialists in the U.S. Geological Survey are now inclined to believe reports from Communist China that more than 655,000 were killed and 700,000 injured by the giant earthquake that struck eastern Hopeh province on July 28, 1976.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Is it true?

To The Editor:

Is it true the Midland school board is increasing its tax rate even after the tax assessor approximately doubled the property values and the state of Texas has passed legislation to increase allocations to school districts which is supposed to alleviate the burden of the taxpayer?

I believe it was the superintendent of the Midland Independent School District, according to a recent article in your newspaper, who said, "We should not ask for more than (blank) per cent salary increase because that's all we can get away with at this time." That type of remark could antagonize a lot of taxpayers. Does it indicate plans to insert the knife gently then twist it later?

If the above first paragraph is true and the local school board has set salary increases at 10.7 per cent for all, with provisions for merit increases during the year for certain outstanding teachers instead of 23 per cent or whatever for all teachers now, they should not be concerned. Because of the automatic tax increase due to the property valuation and the board-voted increase, there should be enough tax monies for the board to quietly slip all teachers the merit increase to equal percentage increase they think they are entitled to.

T. G. Covert

EDITOR'S NOTE: The statement made by Schools Superintendent Dr. James H. Maley to which the writer refers was, "It's the minimum we could possibly get away with at this time." That is the way the statement was reported. The intent of Dr. Maley's statement to the board clearly was to convey his impression that the teachers would not accept an increase of less than 10.7 per cent.

Writers needed

To The Editor:

Our country is in need of help from our letter writers to encourage our congressmen to support the revival of the House Internal Security Committee (H. Res. 48). House leadership has bottled up this resolution in the House Rules Committee, where it will die unless our people act (by letters etc.) to get it out of committee, so that it can be voted on. Write your congressmen, asking them to co-sponsor H. Res. 48. There is too much crime in our country for us to neglect this.

Loans, correspondent accounts center of probe

By MICHAEL DOAN

WASHINGTON (AP) — Budget Director Bert Lance, one of President Carter's top aides, has been under investigation by the comptroller of the currency for his banking transactions. Here, in question and answer form, is a summary of the Lance controversy:

Q. What is the investigation all about?

A. It concerns loans and other financial arrangements Lance made as a Georgia banker. The comptroller of the currency wants to find out if any laws were broken.

Q. How did Lance get involved in big bank loans?

A. Starting his banking career as a teller at the Calhoun First National Bank of Georgia, Lance worked his way up to bank president by age 32. In 1975 he became president of the larger National Bank of Georgia, after an unsuccessful gubernatorial campaign in 1974.

He wanted 21 per cent interest in the bank, so he bought 148,000 shares for $2.6 million.

Q. Where did he get the money?

A. He borrowed it all from the Manufacturers Hanover Trust of New York, where he had established ties. Within a month of the personal loan, Lance's bank deposited $250,000 in Manufacturers Hanover but made an agreement to collect no interest.

Q. Aren't these terms unusual?

A. No. Such accounts are common among banks. A small bank deposits money at a big bank and gets services it can't handle itself, such as clearing checks. The noninterest-bearing account is as good as a cash payment to the big bank. This is called a correspondent account.

Q. If a bank or company opens a correspondent account, do executives sometimes get loans too?

A. Yes. They usually get the same terms that other borrowers get.

Q. Did Lance get the same terms as other borrowers?

A. He got interest rates of about one-half of 1 per cent above the prime rate charged the bank's best customers. Some bankers have called this normal. To back up the loan, Lance put up as collateral his stock in both Georgia banks and an insurance policy. Some bankers said they would not loan money under these terms.

Q. Is there any evidence of impropriety in this relationship?

A. Lance says there is not. But at a news conference earlier this month, he disclosed a memo the comptroller uncovered that appeared to link the loan with the bank account.

Q. How much did the Georgia bank deposit?

A. It put in $250,000 at first and later increased its deposits to $1.5 million. Although Lance no longer has a loan at the New York bank, the Georgia bank maintains its correspondent account.

Q. What is the comptroller's office trying to find out?

A. The comptroller wants to know if some of these dealings mean that the Georgia bank was indirectly giving money to Lance. Any bank officer who embezzles money or wilfully misapplies bank funds can be fined $5,000 or get five years in jail. This has been interpreted to mean that banks cannot generally loan their own officers money.

The government has won convictions against bank officers who left an unusually large amount of bank money on deposit at a corresponding bank so a bank officer could get a special loan.

Q. After the New York loan, didn't Lance take out a loan at another bank?

A. One of the conditions of the New York loan was that Lance had to remain president of the Georgia bank during the three-year loan term.

So before he resigned to join the Carter administration he paid off the New York bank by borrowing $3.4 million from the First National Bank of Chicago. The Georgia bank opened a correspondent account with the First National Bank of Chicago, too, only this time one month before the loan.

Q. Is that part of the comptroller's investigation?

A. Comptroller of the Currency John Heimann says he is looking into all matters involving Lance's banking affairs. The Senate Governmental Affairs Committee questioned Lance about the Chicago bank loan last month and cleared him. Chairman Abraham A. Ribicoff, D-Conn., said Lance had been smeared by the press.

The comptroller is also reviewing the office's decision in 1974 not to recommend prosecution of Lance for a possible campaign violation. Lance's campaign fund was frequently overdrawn in the Calhoun bank.

Some examiners thought this might be a back-handed campaign contribution. But they concluded any violation was probably technical and figured the Justice Department would not prosecute. The U.S. attorney's office in Atlanta dropped its investigation the day before Lance was nominated.

Q. What do Lance and Carter have to say?

A. Carter has had no comment, saying the issue is in the comptroller's hands. Lance said last week he will not resign and the issue has not interfered with his work as head of the Office of Management and Budget. He said the balance of money his bank left in Manufacturers Hanover Trust was not excessive and was not an indirect payment to him by the Georiga bank.

Q. Is Lance in financial trouble?

A. The value of Lance's Georgia bank stock dropped by nearly one-half since he took office and he might lose about $1.6 million if he sold it now. Last week the bank decided not to pay a dividend to its stockholders. Lance listed assets of about $7.9 million and liabilities of about $5.3 million in January.

Q. What are Lance's plans for his bank stock?

A. Lance promised Congress and President Carter he would sell his stock by Dec. 31. Since the price dropped, he indicated he might ask for an extension, and senators have indicated they would accept it.

Q. Could he sell the stock now?

A. David N. Smith, an Atlanta attorney, has said he will buy the stock, and there were reports he would buy it at close to the $17 per share price that Lance paid for it.

Bert Lance

Lance's quitting unlikely

WASHINGTON (AP) — Budget Director Bert Lance, whose private financial dealings are the target of an investigation by the comptroller of the currency, is not expected to resign, a Carter administration official said Saturday.

The official also said President Carter has no choice but to pay the political price for silence during the investigation, no matter how long it takes.

"Certainly it's politically difficult for us," said the White House official, who asked not to be identified. He said the situation is equally difficult for Lance, and added that the budget director could hardly be blamed for quitting if he did.

"But I would expect he would not, and everyone would hope that he would not take any sort of action like that."

Comptroller John Heimann, who has jurisdiction over the nation's banks, is examining details of Lance's private finances,including circumstances under which he received two loans totalling $6 million from banks in Chicago and New York.

The New York Times said, meanwhile, that the comptroller's investigation has been broadened to include other loans that may have indirectly benefited Lance.

The paper, in its Saturday editions, quoted sources familiar with the probe as saying that investigators are searching bank records for about 20 loans that may have been extended to Mrs. Lance, other members of his family and business entities.

Carter and his press secretary, Jody Powell, have refused to give Lance any public support. Powell said Saturday they will continue to withhold comment until Heimann finishes the probe and his report is made public.

Powell said any comment might be seen as an attempt to influence Heimann's investigation.

Deputy Comptroller C. Westbrook Murphy has said the investigation might be finished by the end of next week.

Central to the probe are loans of $2.6 million made to Lance by Manufacturers Hanover Trust Co. of New York and $3.4 million made to Lance by the First National Bank of Chicago.

The National Bank of Georgia, which Lance headed before joining Carter's administration, had established interest-free accounts at the two banks.

At issue is whether the loans were contingent on the opening of these accounts.

Carter, Bell checking more FBI candidates

By Richard E. Meyer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter and Atty. Gen. Griffin Bell are evaluating Carter's listed candidates for FBI director against other possible choices not on the list, an administration aide said Saturday.

The possible candidates are persons "who have come up in conversation," said the official, who asked not to be identified. "If they stack up favorably, they might be added to the list, but that hasn't happened yet."

The administration aide declined to name those who came up in conversation. But he indicated they were few.

He said Bell has mentioned publicly that "a couple" of names had come up in conversations about the President's search for someone to replace FBI Director Clarence Kelley who is retiring Jan. 1.

Bell met with Carter on Friday. White House Press Secretary Jody Powell said at the time that the purpose of the meeting was to discuss "a number of Justice Department matters." He called it "safe to assume" that the search for an FBI director was among them.

Asked when Carter would name his choice, Powell said: "I wouldn't anticipate it soon."

Five men remain on Carter's list of possible nominees to head the FBI. They were selected by a committee Carter appointed to make a preliminary search for candidates. Since the original list was given to the President, one person has dropped off and another was added.

Comparing the five to others is "simply a technique for evaluating those on the list," the administration aide said.

The Detroit Free Press said in its Saturday editions that the administration is starting its search from scratch and that Bell gave the President a new list of candidates.

But the administration official said there is no new list.

Powell said Saturday he, too, did not believe Bell had brought the President a new list.

Lucas has since acknowledged that he twice accepted free air transportation and hotel rooms as part of Las Vegas gambling junkets.

Violence erupts at London march

By A.O. SULZBERGER Jr.

LONDON (AP) — A march by Britain's right-wing National Front through a multiracial south London neighborhood erupted in a bloody battle with left-wing counterdemonstrators Saturday. Scores of protesters were arrested and at least 68 persons were injured, including 35 policemen.

Police, unarmed but equipped for the first time with bodylength riot shields used by soldiers and police in war-torn Northern Ireland, struggled to keep the two political factions apart as shoppers scurried for cover.

By late afternoon 148 persons had been arrested, Scotland Yard said. Two officers had been stabbed in the free-swinging melee, in the Lewisham area of the city.

The violence began when about 2,700 demonstrators, protesting National Front plans to march through the streets of Lewisham, gathered at a major road junction a short way from the front's assembly point.

A bomb was thrown into the crowd — police were unable to say who hurled it — and 15 mounted patrolmen moved in as sticks, stones, bottles and soft-drink cans suddenly rained in on the area.

The initial incident lasted about five minutes and resulted in injuries to five policemen. Two were hospitalized after ammonia was thrown in their faces.

But the violence continued in sporadic clashes and the casualty toll continued to rise.

Vance trip results unclear—yet

By BARRY SCHWEID

LONDON (AP) — Cyrus Vance's trip to the Middle East and his grappling with the Rhodesian problem in London may yet result in progress on both fronts. But any success the secretary of state may have scored is not immediately apparent.

Of the three so-called "core" issues in the Arab-Israeli conflict, he evidently made headway on only one — the kind of peace a settlement would entail. Without offering any specifics, Vance claimed the Arabs had moved a little closer to Israel's demand for normal economic and diplomatic relations.

There was no reported progress on the two other key issues: Palestinian rights and how much territory Israel will give up.

Israeli Prime Minister Menahem Begin rejected any negotiations with the Palestinian Liberation Organization or ceding the West Bank of the Jordan River to a "foreign power."

He compared the PLO to the Nazis, likened the PLO charter to Hitler's autobiography, "Mein Kampf," and said only sovereign states could enter into peace treaties.

At the close of Vance's 11-day Middle East mission, Egyptian President Anwar Sadat directed an implicit threat at what he called the "very hard-line" Israelis. He reminded the Israelis that Egypt's commitment to a United Nations peacekeeping force in Sinai runs out in 14 months.

Beneath the surface, however, there were hints of accomplishment.

Begin said Vance managed "a great achievement" in his talks with the Arabs. Speculation is that Vance persuaded Sadat and Jordan's King Hussein to enter into a dialogue with Israel on a full peace treaty.

Moreover, Vance is a low-key mediator who steers clear of reporters. While Henry Kissinger, his predecessor, sometimes signaled victory or defeat in private conversations, Vance keeps his own counsel. For this reason, writing off his efforts entirely could be a mistake.

The planned Mideast negotiations are to be carried out indirectly, through Vance, at sessions he will hold with Arab and Israeli foreign ministers next month at the U.N. General Assembly in New York.

Syrian President Hafez Assad has authorized his foreign minister, Abdel Halim Khaddam, to confer with Vance there as well. But Assad has ruled out any indirect negotiations with Israel and Khaddam said Friday that "judging from the current situation there are no indications that the Geneva conference will be reconvened this year."

Privately, U.S. officials have given up any hope for an October conference, but they think there is still a chance of meeting President Carter's goal of a peace conference by the end of fall.

On Rhodesia, the joint effort with Britain to promote early transition to black majority rule in the British breakaway colony of 273,000 whites and 6.2 million blacks was not immediately successful.

South African Foreign Minister R.F. Botha, who joined Vance and British Foreign Secretary David Owen in 6½ hours of deliberations Friday, did not commit his government to persuading Rhodesia to accept the still-secret "one-man, one-vote" plan.

Without the support of South Africa, which keeps Rhodesia afloat economically, a negotiated settlement is considered impossible.

U.S. Export-Import bank to aid pipeline

TIJUANA, Mex. (AP) — The U.S. Export-Import Bank is prepared to loan Mexico up to one-third of the $1.2 billion it needs to build a pipeline to carry natural gas from Mexico's southern fields to the United States, according to Patrick Lucey, U.S. Ambassador to Mexico.

The bank, created by Congress and designed to stimulate the sale of manufactured goods abroad, may agree to finance the project in conjunction with similar banks in Japan and West German, Lucey told the San Diego Evening Tribune in an interview published Saturday.

Officials of the banks have been in Mexico City this past week meeting with the government-owned oil monopoly Pemex to discuss terms of the arrangement, Lucey said.

The U.S. bank has been talking about providing $300 million to $400 million.

Loans from the U.S. bank and foreign banks likely would be made on condition that some of the materials for construction of the pipeline would be purchased from the countries making the loans, Lucey said.

The ambassador called the proposed Mexican pipeline "a bargain at $1.2 billion — it's almost as long as the Alaska pipeline, and that cost $9 billion."

The pipeline would bring billions of cubic feet of natural gas each day to many parts of the United States to supplement dwindling gas supplies here.

The pipeline would bring the gas from new fields discovered in southeastern Mexico to Texas, where it would connect with U.S. pipelines.

Financing has been the principal stumbling block in building the proposed pipeline.

Lucey said he expects the financing proposal to be sent to Congress in September.

Greek Cypriot parties boost acting president

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — The four main Greek Cypriot political parties, ranging from conservative to Communist, today chose Acting President Spyros Kyprianou as their common candidate to succeed the late President Makarios.

Their action ensures that he will remain the Cypriot head of state at least until February, when Makarios' five-year term expires.

Kyprianou will be proclaimed president automatically as an unopposed candidate on Aug. 31, if, as is expected, no independent candidate comes forward by that date. Otherwise a by-election will be held Sept. 10.

After his term ends, there will be another election for a 5-year term, and this one is expected to be contested.

Kyprianou, who served as Makarios' foreign minister from 1960-72, is the leader of the right-of-center Democratic party and president of the Greek Cypriot House of Representatives. He became acting president of the war-divided island when Makarios died of a heart attack Aug. 3.

Kyprianou's party is the largest in the House, with 21 out of 35 seats under a formula worked out with its coalition partners, the Cyprus Communist party and the Edek Socialist party.

The conservative Democratic Rally of Glafcos Clerides failed to win a single seat against this front, though it won 25 per cent of the vote in last September's parliamentary elections.

Kyprianou is expected to face a difficult period particularly in view of strong Turkish objections to recognition of Makarios' successor as president of the whole island.

Rumors whirl about Chip, Caron

By ANN BLACKMAN

WASHINGTON (AP) — Amid reports of a marital separation, the President's 27-year-old son, Chip Carter, is moving to Plains while his wife, Caron, and their baby remain in the White House.

But White House press spokesmen denied reports Saturday that the President had angrily asked Chip to leave the White House after Chip informed him that he was separating from Caron.

Caron's father, Ben Griffin, confirmed that Caron and Chip were having marital problems but was quoted in Atlanta as saying: "I don't think it's reached a point that it's a hopeless situation."

Griffin said: "I don't know all the particulars, but young people — all young couples — have their moments when things aren't going right with them."

As for reports the the President threw Chip out of the White House, Griffin said he doubted Carter would take such "punitive" action.

"That's not what a daddy does," he said.

Meanwhile, Mary Finch Hoyt, the First Lady's press secretary, declined Saturday to confirm or deny that Chip and Caron were considering a separation.

"This is a private matter," Mrs. Hoyt said. "I'm trying to respect the couple's wish that this is a private matter."

Mrs. Hoyt read this statement:

"Chip is going to Plains. Caron and the baby will remain in the White House for awhile. It is expected that Caron and (baby) James will join Chip later."

Asked who expected them to get back together, Mrs. Hoyt said, "The family, I guess."

Mrs. Hoyt said Chip, who recently resigned an $8,000-a-year part-time job with the Democratic National Committee, will leave for Plains within the next few days, after winding up business in Washington. He will work in the family's peanut business, the spokeswoman said.

Caron and the baby will go to Camp David for a vacation with the Carters, Mrs. Hoyt said.

The couple was married in 1973. Their only child, James Earl Carter IV, was born last Feb. 25.

Caron Carter said through a White House switchboard operator that she was not taking calls from the press. Chip Carter could not be reached for comment.

Mrs. Hoyt said she does not know if the couple is seeing a marriage counselor, and when asked if legal papers had been filed, she replied, "I don't think so."

Meanwhile, in Atlanta, Charles Kirbo, a close friend and adviser to the Carter family, said the President's brother, Billy, is resigning as managing partner of the peanut business to spend more time with his family and to make more public appearances.

Kirbo confirmed Chip would be working in the family peanut warehouse but declined to say whether he would assume a managerial role.

Chip and Caron, 26, moved into the White House in January when Carter became president. So did Jeff Carter, the President's third son, who is 24, and his wife.

Tech counsel named justice by Briscoe

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Carlton B. Dodson, general counsel for Texas Tech University, was named associate justice of the 7th Court of Civil Appeals Friday by Gov. Dolph Briscoe, effective Sept. 1.

District judge appointments made Friday by Briscoe included:

—Clarence Neal Stevenson, Victoria attorney, to be judge of the 24th Judicial District replacing Judge Joe E. Kelly who resigned.

—Monte Dan Lawlis, Jasper attorney, to be judge of the 1-A Judicial District of Jasper, Newton and Tyler Counties, which was created by the recent legislature.

—Woodrow W. Bean II, El Paso attorney, to be judge of the 243rd Judicial District of El Paso County, created by the recent legislature.

—Leonard J. Giblin Jr., Port Neches, now Jefferson County judge, to be judge of the 252nd Judicial District of Jefferson County, created by the recent legislature.

Briscoe also reappointed Jesse B. Gilmer, El Paso engineer, to be the Texas Rio Grande Compact Commissioner for a six-year term.

Everett Champ Clark, Hankamer, was named to the board of directors of the Trinity River Authority, replacing Judge Guy C. Jackson III, Anahuac, who resigned.

Hospital admits Pidgeon

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — Walter Pidgeon, the urbane dean of Hollywood actors, has been admitted to St. John's Hospital for what a source close to the family said were tests for a possible blood clot on the brain.

The 78-year-old Pidgeon was conscious when he admitted himself to the hospital Friday. Hospital spokesmen would say only that he had been admitted, noting that Pidgeon had requested no information be released.

Pidgeon's tweedy, pipe-smoking charm carried him from romantic to fatherly roles in a 50-year stage and screen career. He rose to fame during the late 1930s and early 40s in eight movies with co-star Greer Garson.

Among them was "Mrs. Miniver" in 1941, the story of an English family's courage during the German blitz of World War II.

Austin lawyers waiting

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Austin attorneys have been urged by the State Bar to adopt a "wait-and-see" attitude on legal advertising, but two local law firms say advertising is paying off for them.

Davis Grant, State Bar general counsel, told the Travis County Junior Bar Association, Friday that it would be best to wait for State Bar guidelines upcoming on advertising by lawyers, which was approved by the U.S. Supreme Court recently.

"If anybody's worried about losing some business because they're not advertising, don't worry about it," Grant said. "A goodly number of your peers will look down their noses at you. You will get some criticism. I'm against most advertising anyway."

"The kind of practice where you hang out your shingle and take whatever comes along just won't do anymore," said Steve Russell, a member of one of the two firms which have run newspaper ads.

Larry Dowling, member of the second firm, told the Austin American-Statesman that the decision to advertise was considered "ultimately good business . . . I do a greater volume."

Nob Hill building burned

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Fire broke out in an apartment building in downtown San Francisco on Saturday, and officials said there were reports of residents trapped inside.

The blaze in the city's Nob Hill district was reported at 8:30 a.m. and had gone to five alarms by 9 a.m.

Fire officials said people were trapped in the building when the fire began, but had no immediate reports of injuries.

Philippines test spuds

MANILA, Philippines — An exploratory well has been spudded by the Amoco group near the Calamian Islands in the Northwest Palawan Sea, about 28 miles offshore from Palawan Island, Republic of the Philippines.

Cost of the well will be shared equally by Amoco Philippines Petroleum Co. and Husky Oil, which is paying the share of a third partner, Mosbacher Philippines Corp., to earn half of Mosbacher's existing interest in service contract Block 310 where the well is being drilled.

The project, Amoco-Husky No. 1 Cadlao, is being drilled on a 153,706-acre block. It is to go to 10,000 feet and is being drilled in 310 feet of water.

Gulf announces six service anniversaries

Service anniversaries have been observed by six Southwest Division employes of Gulf Energy and Minerals Co.-U.S.

W. L. Davis of Gardendale, a well tester in the Goldsmith Area of the Production Department, completed 40 years with Gulf July 30. He joined the company in 1937 as a well tester.

J. M. Crockett of Midland and J. W. Burt of Graham have each completed 30 years with the company.

Crockett, a unit supervisor in the Midland office of the Comptroller Department, marked his 30th year Aug. 4. He joined the company in 1947 as a general clerk in Fort Worth. He also has had assignments as senior accounting clerk and analyst.

He joined Gulf as a roustabout foreman in the Abilene Area. Other jobs held include maintenance foreman and production foreman.

E. A. Wagner of Midland, geologist in the Production Department, observed his 25th anniversary with the company Aug. 6.

Wagner began his Gulf career in 1952 as a geologist in the Roswell Area. Subsiquent assignments include senior production geologist and senior staff geologist.

R. J. Hubble of Odessa, drilling supervisor in the Goldsmith Area of the Production Department, marked 20 years with Gulf Aug. 5.

His first job with the company was as a trainee engineer in the Judkins Area. He also has served as a petroleum engineer and production supervisor.

D. L. Little of Sundown, a lease operator in the Goldsmith Area, completed 15 years with the company Aug. 2.

He joined Gulf as a pumper in 1962 in Farmington, N. M. Before being promoted to lease operator, Little was a lease pumper.

Graduate Center to sign UTPB students

The Permian Basin Graduate Center will register students for four University of Texas of the Permian Basin courses of interest to oil industry personnel for the fall semester.

The courses are:

ERSC 389, Geologic History of the Permian Basin, Dr. James H. Butler, Wednesdays 7:20 to 9:50 p. m. starting Aug. 31 and continuing through Dec. 21 at the Marian Blakemore Planetarium, Midland.

ERSC 400G, Carbonate Petrology, Dr. S. J. Mazzulo, Wednesdays 7:20 to 9:50 p. m. starting Aug. 31 through Dec. 21 at UTPB.

ERSC 489G, Geological Interpretation of Remote Sensed Data (Landsat), William C. Ramsey-Palmer, Thursdays 7:10 to 9:50 p. m. starting Sept. 1 and continuing through Dec. 22 at UTPB.

ENGR 489, Reservoir Engineering, Ralph Viney, Thursdays 7:10 to 9:50 p. m. starting Sept. 1 and continuing through Dec. 22 at Midland or Terminal.

Students enrolled in the master's degree program at The University of Texas at Arlington can apply ERSC 400 and ERSC 489 to this degree. Students interested in entering this program should make application immediately, a graduate center spokesman said.

Registration for the above courses can be made at the PBGC office, 014 Gulf Building, Midland, from Aug. 15 through Aug. 30, between the hours of 8:30 a. m. and 4:30 p. m.

Students desiring to enroll in other courses in addition to those listed here must register on the UTPB campus.

Site for new plant told

CONROE — Skytop-Brewster has selected a location near Conroe for the location of a new energy equipment manufacturing plant.

The company is the major energy equipment manufacturing subsidiary of Texas International Co. Products to be manufactured in Conroe include derricks, drawworks and rotary tables, as well as most other products the company now manufactures in its other facilities.

WASHINGTON OIL

Decontrol compromise big industry question

By CLYDE LA MOTTE
Reporter-Telegram
Washington Oil Correspondent

WASHINGTON—To compromise or not to compromise, that is the question facing domestic producers and others who advocate decontrol of the wellhead price of new natural gas discoveries.

The controversial issue of natural gas price regulation is now being studied by Senate committees and will reach the Senate floor this fall.

The House has already passed its version of the energy bill, including President Carter's plan for continuing price controls.

Sen. J. Bennett Johnston, (D.-La.,) has suggested a possible compromishe between outright deregulation of new gas and the Carter plan. Johnston would accept the proposed ceiling of $1.75 per thousand cubic feet, but with the provision that the controls would be phased out over a three-or four-year period.

Supporters of this approach feel that a half a loaf is better than none and that unless some compromise such as this is reached it is likely that controls will be contined indefinitely.

Some of the more aggressive advocates of deregulation oppose such strategy. They point out that two years ago the Senate voted for deregulation by a substantial margin, so they think there is a good possibility that a deregulation provision will again be approved. If so, then the issue would go to Senate-House conferees to work out the differences between the Senate and the House bills. Only at that point, if then, should further compromise be considered, supporters of deregulation say.

Proponents of deregulation are also skeptical about depending on any phaseout plan. They recall that producers finaly went along two years ago with a proposal for phasing out price regulation of domestic crude oil only have the phaseout approach dropped by the Carter Administration.

Under the Administration's plan for natural gas, the price for new gas would be tied to the composite price level of $7.66 a barrel permitted for domestic crude oil. It would not be permitted to rise to the 1977 world price of crude oil that will be allowed for crude oil found in wells drilled after April 20 of this year.

That is, even new natural gas discoveries will be kept at price levels below that of new crude oil. Critics say that "under pricing" of gas over the past 20 years has contributed in the sharp increase in gas usage and a decrease in efforts to develop new gas upplies.

The Administration maintains that the price mechanism it is proposing for natural gas will provide sufficnent incentive to find what gas remains to be found.

The real difference, then, is over the potential domestic supply. The Administration contends that even though the drilling rate has already increased, it has not produced appreciable results. So there's little point in letting gas prices rise higher and higher.

At a Senate Finance Committee hearing last week a member of the committee asked Energy Secretary James Schlesinger about a Wall Street Journal editorial a few weeks ago stating that the nation has enough potential gas supplies to last a thousand years. The senator wanted to know what the Journal statement was based on.

"I would say it was based on smoking pot," Schlesinger retorted.

It has become increasingly apparent that Schlesinger is in no mood to compromise on the gas deregulation issue. If there is to be any compromising it will be the result of congressional action taken in the face of Administration opposition.

Therefore, some advocates of decontrol would prefer an outright showdown on the issue, and let compromise be downed.

Refinery provisions missing from program

By MAX B. SKELTON

HOUSTON (AP)—A top spokesman for the petroleum refiners says President Carter's energy program would make the nation more dependent on foreign countries for manufactured products.

Donald O'Hara, president of the National Petroleum Refiners Association, said the program makes no provisions for petroleum refineries or petrochemical plants.

In recent testimony before the Federal Energy Administration, O'Hara said refinery expansion is not keeping pace with demand for petroleum products.

He said several things are not obvious from reading statistics that show that domestic refining capacity increased from 13,712,271 to 16,125,190 barrels a day between 1972, and 1977.

O'Hara said almost all of the increases in refining capacity during the five-year period was a result of plant additions or debottlenecking, an industry term for improving the efficiency of existing facilities.

"Furthermore, we are really talking about an eight-year period because if someone got permission today to build a new refinery it would be at least three years before the refinery could go on stream," he said.

"At present there is not a single large refinery under construction in the United States or any reasonable prospect for one."

O'Hara said a second important factor not obvious in the statistics is there has been nearly 20 years since a large new refinery has been built on the East Coast.

"This is unfortunate because the East Coast is the largest consuming area of the United States and as the pattern of crude oil supply has shifted from the Gulf Coast to imported oil, the East Coast is the logical place to build a refinery, both from the standpoint of efficient use of transporation and for security," he said.

O'Hara said domestic investment in petrochemical capacity also is lagging.

"Only 10 to 15 per cent of the new capacity under construction in the world is now being built in the United States with a steadily increasing share being located in the developing countries," he said.

He added that products imports last year cost $1.9 billion.

"Since U. S. petrochemicals must be increasingly made from refinery products rather than natural gas products, any federal policy which creates uncertainty in investment in added domestic refining capacity also creates uncertainty in U.S. petrochemical investment," O'Hara said.

O'Hara said another item being overlooked in energy discussions is the fact the United States, although a net importer of oil and becoming more so, also is an exporter.

"Our exports are in the fields in which our technology gives us an advantage," he said.

"These include a number of specialties, the most important of which are petrochemicals and lubricating oils."

O'Hara said the total value of petrochemical exports approximates $5 billion annually while lubricant exports last year added more than $200 million to the credit side of the nation's balance of foreign trade payments.

He said the crude oil equalization tax in the Carter energy program would raise raw material costs to manufacturers of petrochemicals and lubricating oils by eight cents a gallon by 1980.

"An increase of this magnitude in the cost of raw material without making some provision for relief for exporters such as a tax rebate could put an end to U. S. petrochemical and lubricating oil exports which are reducing our unfavorable balance of trade cause by oil imports," O'Hara said.

Art Park

Art Park now with DOWDCO

Art Park has joined Diamond Oil Well Drilling Co. of Midland as a research and development engineer.

Park is a graduate of the University of Oklahoma and formerly was associated with Dowell Research in Tulsa and with Amoco Production Research of Tulsa 19 years before moving to Odessa.

Park is assigned to the Product Development and Quality Control Division.

Clyde Marquis

Great Western adds Marquis

Clyde Marquis has joined Great Western Drilling Co. in Midland as a district geologist responsible for West Texas, New Mexico and Oklahoma.

Headquartered in Midland, Great Western is a producer of crude oil, associated casinghead gas and natural gas.

Prior to joining Great Western, Marquis worked in exploration for Humble Oil & Refining Co. and as an independent consulting geologist.

He holds a M.S. degree in Geology from Emory University.

Marquis is a member of the American Association of Petroleum Geologists and the West Texas Geological Society.

Basin rotary activity shows increase of 24

Increasing by 24 rigs, the Friday rotary rig count stood at 295 according to Reed Drilling Equipment's area tally. The survey, two weeks ago, announced 271 units making hole.

The count is also up by 51 rotaries from the 244 reported one year ago.

Eddy County, N. M., counted 32 rigs working. Pecos County had 29 units and Lea County, N. M., showed 18.

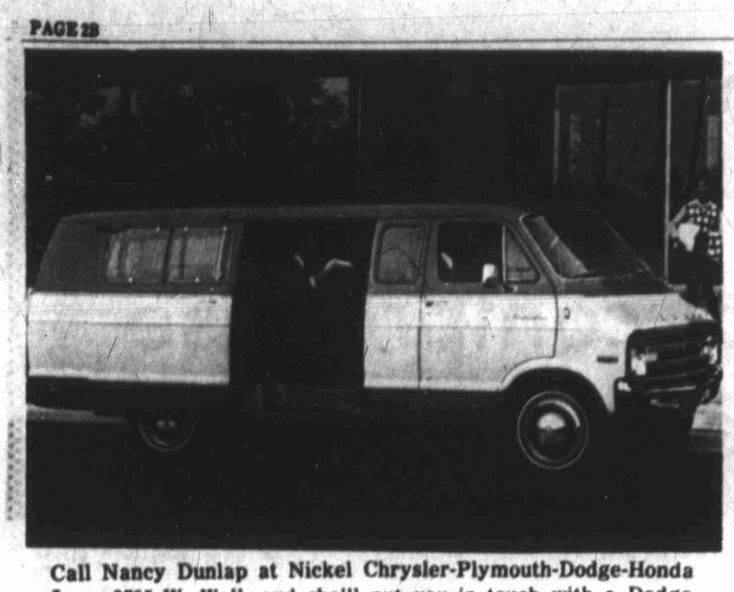
Oil AND INDUSTRIAL NEWS

Advertising And Publicity Sponsored And Paid For By Firms In These Columns



Call Nancy Dunlap at Nickel Chrysler-Plymouth-Dodge-Honda Jeep, 3705 W. Wall, and she'll put you in touch with a Dodge Sportsman Van or a Chrysler Cordoba. Then you're on your own for a trip on the daily rental plan...no worries, no responsibilities, just enjoyment.

This old wooden oil derrick was obsolete long before The Innovators arrived at 800 W. Front St., but since their development of the new rotating blow-out preventor, all others have become obsolete. New features, new simplification and less parts make this new advancement superior in every way.

She can tell you all about the savings, the shortages, the benefits and the pleasures of daily rentals whether you are single or have a big family (or lots of relatives).

For instance you can rent a Chrysler Cordoba, 1977 model, with all the comforts of home and a little more for a piddling $20 a day plus 14 cents a mile or you can take your relatives (or big family) to the mountains in a Dodge Sportsman Van, 1977 vintage, that handles 15 people comfortably. The only trouble you'll have is possibly at a rest stop.

Of course you'll travel in style in air conditioned comfort with music to sooth the savage that comes out when there's mechanical trouble...none of that here because these automobile are checked over periodically by Nickel's A-1 mechanics who keep 'em in top shape.

There is a shortage so give a call before you set your plans. There are certain restrictions before you can join the jolly ranks of the daily rental families...you must be 21 years old and have an up-to-date drivers license and you also must have a resaonable amount of money for a deposit that is returned to you upon return of the automobile which you'll be tempted to keep. If you are swayed by the comfort of the Cordoba or Sportsman you can be certain that any salesman at Nickel will be glad to help you yield to your desires.

Like a wood rig, it's now obsolete

Your present rotating blow-out preventor that you've been using is obsolete. It has been replaced as has the outdoor privy, the steam engine, the flying jenny, the wooden rig and others. What has replaced it is a new rotating blow-out preventor developed by The Innovators located at 800 W. Front St. in Midland.

Can your present equipment be repaired at the rig site? Does your present equipment have only 12 parts? Are the bearings of your present equipment isolated and protected? Can your present equipment be overhauled in one to two hours?

If your answer is yes to these questions, then you own the rotating blow-out preventor that's been developed by The Innovators.

This new development is the ultimate in simplification in that it eliminates almost all machine shop type maintainance. The number of parts in this device has been reduced to 25% of the parts in most other units...this new one has only 12 parts! All of these parts are totally replaceable at the rig site and only one to two hours are required to completely overhaul it.

Morris Biffle and John Biffle, owners, are doing things for the oil industry. Call 563-3131 and find out what.

Chilean leaders dissolves dreaded security police

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — President Augusto Pinochet, in an apparent bid to win U.S. support for his right-wing military regime, has dissolved DINA, the security police force blamed for the detention, disappearance or torture of thousands of Chileans.

Pinochet's office announced the move Friday, a few hours before the president met with Asst. Secretary of State Terence A. Todman. The U.S. diplomat is believed to be making an assessment of the human rights situation in Chile for the Carter administration.

Dissolution of DINA has reportedly been one of the points pushed by the United States as a condition for improving relations with the Pinochet government.

The agency was established a few months after the military overthrew the late President Salvador Allende, a socialist, on Sept. 11, 1973.

Todman, on the first leg of a four-nation Latin American tour, declined immediate comment on the government announcement, saying he would hold a news conference before his departure today.

Through a U.S. Embassy spokesman, Todman said his 1½-hour meeting with Pinochet was "very cordial."

The president's office said Pinochet signed the dissolution order Aug. 6, although it had not been made public.

West Texans reveal retirements

Kelly Sims of Midland, R. R. Shelton of Crane, and K. E. Berry of Midland have announced their retirements from Gulf Energy and Minerals Co.-U.S.

Sims, senior clerk in the Midland office of the Comptroller Department, Southwest Division, retired Aug. 1 after 42 years and 1 month with the company.

He joined Gulf in 1949 as a welder helper in Crane. During his tenure he has served as a connection man and warehouse clerk stockman.

Shelton also retired Aug. 1. He was a lease operator in the Crane Area of the Production Department. He had been with the company 35 years.

He started his career with Gulf in 1942 as a roustabout.

Berry retired July 1 after working for Gulf 22 years and two months.

He joined British American Oil Producing Co. in 1955 as a record supervisor in Dallas. In 1966, British American Oil Co. merged with Gulf Oil Co. and Berry was transferred to Midland as a landman. He later served as senior unit supervisor until his promotion to senior land agent, the position he held at the time of his retirement.

Import price okayed for Alaska oil

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government says its decision that crude oil from the transAlaska pipeline can be sold at the highest possible price doesn't mean consumers will pay more at the pump.

The Federal Energy Administration said Friday it is allowing oil companies using the pipeline to charge import prices for the crude.

That means it will be figured at a cost of $14.60 per barrel. The most expensive domestically produced oil now costs $10.97 a barrel.

The FEA said it is allowing oil companies the higher price to help them recover part of the huge costs of shipping the North Slope oil to the lower 48 states.

Pegging the Alaskan oil to the price refiners pay for imported crude should not be enough in itself to raise prices at the nation's gas pumps because the oil will replace petroleum that is now being imported.

The government's action ends any hope that the vast supply of North Slope oil might someday act as a brake on gasoline prices.

The FEA also announced it is allowing small increases in the price of domestically produced crude oil, from $10.97 to $11.71 for oil from wells brought in after 1972 and from $5.17 to $5.24 for wells that were producing before that time.

In a third decision, the agency said it is permitting producers the top world market price for domestic oil from high-cost, high-risk procedures that would otherwise be too expensive.

The agency said all three moves are part of the administration's "commitment to reward new discoveries and increased production of domestic oil while at the same time checking inflation by maintaining price controls on currently producing oil fields."

Also on Friday, a petrochemical industry spokesman told a Senate committee that President Carter's energy plan could drive up prices for tires, agricultural chemicals, plastics and medicines.

O. Pendleton Thomas, spokesman for a group of 21 petrochemical companies, sai the price increases could result from the President's proposed taxes on oil and natural gas.

"Any taxes imposed on the petrochemical industry must be passed on to the consumer," he told the Senate Finance Committee, now studying tax aspects of the presidential program.

Thomas, chairman of the board of the B.F. Goodrich Co., also warned that the Carter plan could force American chemical plants to move overseas.

He said the administration's tax proposals ignore the fact that no substitutes exist for several essential products that require oil or gas. For example, he said, petrochemicals are needed to make manmade fibers, plastics, agricultural chemicals, medicines and synthetic rubber.

In his energy program, Carter seeks to tax oil and natural gas as an incentive for utilities to convert their generating facilities to coal and nuclear fuels.

The program calls for rebating the fuel tax funds to utilities to offset the costs of new coal-burning equipment.

Line funds approved

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — Directors of Texoma Pipe Line Co. have approved expenditure of $8.2 million to increase capacity of a 472-mile system of pipeline from Nederland, Tex., to Cushing, Okla, the operating company announced today.

Most of the expenditure will be for increased horsepower for pumping stations at Nederland and Longview, Tex., and at Allen, Okla., and for new pumping stations near Zavalla and Paris, Tex.

Cortlandt S. Dietler, chairman of the board of Texoma Pipe Line Co., said work should begin within two months and be completed by the end of next year. With the additions, the line will have a nominal capacity of 375,000 barrels per day with up to 400,000 possible under some circumstances. Presently Texoma has a nominal capacity of 300,000 barrels daily.

Subsidiary organized

CORPUS CHRISTI — South Texas Coal Supply, Inc., with headquarters in Corpus Christi, has been formed as a wholly-owned subsidiary of Ada Resources, Inc.

The company is developing a capability to supply coal to industrial concerns in South Texas primarily in the Baytown to Brownsville area. Ada president Spencer Murchison said this endeavor is a natural extension of Ada's barging, trucking and coal mining operations.

The concept calls for a complete system of coal production, transportation, processing and delivery to the customer's plant, involving a total of 2 to 4 million tons of coal per year.

T. V. Shockley III has been named president of South Texas Coal. He formerly was a supervising engineer with Central Power & Light Co. in Corpus Christi.

Forest notes increase

DENVER, Colo. — Forest Oil Corp. has reported that net earnings for the second quarter of 1977 rose 11 per cent to $4,003,000 or 59 cents per share primary and 55 cents fully diluted from $3,596,000 or 52 and 49 a year earlier.

Oil and gas sales in the latest quarter climbed 21 per cent to $16,239,000 from $13,447,000.

For the first six months of 1977, net earnings rose 35 per cent to $8,542,000 or $1.25 per share primary and $1.16 fully diluted, from $6,340,000 or 92 cents per share primary and 87 cents fully diluted, in the like 1976 period.

During the first six months of 1977, production of oil and condensate was up 32 per cent and gas production was up 6 per cent from the previous year.

In the second quarter of 1977, gas production was down slightly from the first quarter.

C. T. Sawyer in new post

WASHINGTON, D. C. — The appointment of C. T. Sawyer to succeed P. N. Gammelgard as the American Petroleum Institute's vice president in charge of industry affairs was announced by API President Frank N. Ikard.

Sawyer has been director of the API's Transportation Department since 1974. Prior to that, he was director of the Refining Department and assistant director of Transportation. He has been with API since 1958.

Gammelgard retired after being with the organization since 1965. Prior to going with the API, he was associated many years with The Pure Oil Co.

Wildcats, new producers, projects, tests reported in WT

Two wildcat locations, four new field wells, two field tests and testing of two projects have been reported in West Texas counties.

CROCKETT TEST

Henderson and Erickson of Midland will drill No. 1 Thompson and others as a 3,950-foot wildcat in Crockett County, two miles west of Ozona.

Drillsite is 660 feet from south and west lines of section 47, block OP, GC&SF survey. It is ⅜ mile north of the Ozona, Northwest (Spraberry) field and one location west of a 4,250-foot failure. It also is ⅜ mile southwest of the Ozona (Canyon gas) field.

SCHLEICHER TRY

MGF Oil Corp. announced location for a 6,500-foot wildcat in Schleicher County, four miles south of Eldorado.

It is Mertz, 1,320 feet from south and west lines of section 53, block A, HE&WT survey and 2¾ miles southeast of a recent Canyon gas discovery, Gas Development Corp. No. 1-81 Williams-Shell. The new test is ⅝ mile southeast of a 6,500-foot failure.

CRANE WELL

George T. Abell of Midland No. 4-A R. C. Crabb has been completed to extend production in the Abell (Tubb) field of Crane County one location west.

Operator reported a daily pumping potential of 45 barrels of 37-gravity oil, plus five barrels of water, from pay behind casing perforations from 3,900 to 3,907 feet. The zone was acidized with 1,000 gallons.

Hole is bottomed at 5,265 feet and 4½-inch casing is set at total depth. Plugged back total depth is 4,010 feet.

Wellsite is six miles east of Imperial and 486 feet from the northwest and 10,652 feet from the northeast lines of section 18, block 1, H&TC survey.

KING OILER

Marathon Oil Co. No. 1-C W. R. Ross has been recompleted as the second well in the Ross Ranch (Strawn) field of King County, 15 miles east of Guthrie.

The well, a former producer, was finaled for a 24-hour pumping potential of 1 barrel of 37-gravity oil, plus 211 barrels of water, through perforations from 5,170 to 5,180 feet.

TERRY WELL

NRM Petroleum Corp. No. 4 Cotten has been completed as the fifth well in the Wellman, Southwest (San Andres) field of Terry County.

One location north and west of other production, No. 4 Cotten finaled for a daily pumping potential of 50 barrels of 36-gravity oil, plus 55 barrels of water, through perforations from 5,480 to 5,505 feet. The zone was treated with 2,000 gallons of acid.

Gas-oil ratio was 41-1.

The well was drilled to 5,530 feet and 4½-inch casing was set at that point. Plugged back total depth is 5,529 feet.

SCURRY WELL

Coronado Minerals of Houston No. 1 Wilson Bright has been finaled as a ½-mile southwest extension to the Ernest (6,500 sand) field in Scurry County, four miles southwest of Hermleigh.

The well finaled for a daily pumping potential of 20 barrels of 41-gravity oil, plus 40 barrels of water, through perforations from 6,948 to 6,996 feet after 1,000 gallons of acid and 60,000 gallons of fracture solution. Gas-oil ratio was 1,977-1.

Total depth is 7,100 feet and 5½-inch casing is set on bottom. Plugged back depth is 7,060 feet.

SUTTON TEST

Texland Petroleum Inc. of Fort Worth staked location for No. 1-92 George Wallace in Sutton County, 14 miles southeast of Sonora.

CROCKETT TRY

American Quasar Petroleum Co., operating from Midland, will drill No. 1-4 J. L. Henderson Jr. as a 9,000-foot project in Crockett County, 3,725 feet southwest of the three-well Angus (Strawn gas) field.

Location is seven miles southeast of Ozona and 1,904 feet from north and 2,132 feet from east lines of S. Rosco survey No. 4, abstract 4799.

PROJECT TESTS

James K. Anderson, Inc., of Dallas No. 1-B Eager, indicated discovery in Runnels County, is testing the lower Gardner.

The project, 5½ miles northeast of Winters, flowed 25.59 barrels of oil in 11 hours through a 16/64-inch choke and perforations from 4,431 to 4,443 feet.

NOLAN STRIKE

James K. Anderson, Inc., No. 1 Rotan, project in Nolan County which has shown for discovery production in the King sand, pumped 32 barrels of oil and 31 barrels of water in less than 24 hours and 15.17 barrels of oil and 3.5 barrels of water in six hours, continues to test.

The oil is from King sand perforations from 4,127 to 4,140 feet.

The project also has indicated production in the Flippen. A drillstem test in that zone recovered 502 feet of gas and 90 feet of oil and 30 feet of oil-cut mud. The zone tested is at 3,760-3,790 feet.

Location is 1,588 feet from north and 717 feet from east lines of section 311, block 64, H&TC survey and ½ mile northwest of Nolan.

W. E. Martch

Manager announced

ODESSA — Perry Engineering Corp., a wholly-owned subsidiary of Odessa-based Perry Gas Co., Inc., has announced the appointment of W. E. "Ed" Martch as vice president-manager of Engineering.

Martch previously was employed as a senior project manager by C. E. Lummus in Houston. He received his B.S. degree in Chemical Engineering from the University of Texas at El Paso.

Earnings double

DALLAS — Lear Petroleum Corp has reported that earnings and revenues both almost doubled in its fiscal third quarter ended June 30.

Total revenues climbed to $12,962,682 from the $6,841,200 registered in the third quarter of fiscal 1976.

Per share earnings rose to 52 cents from 28 cents as average shares outstanding increased by 59,577, reflecting shares issued for stock options.

Total revenues more than doubled to $32,904,402 from the $15,355,868 recorded at the nine-month mark a year ago.

Deep test set in Gulf

NEW ORLEANS, La. — Amoco Production Co., as operator for itself and 11 other major and independent oil companies, said it has begun drilling a 19,000-foot wildcat project in the Destin Dome Area of the Gulf of Mexico off Florida.

The well will be drilled out of sight of land on Destin Dome Block 31, 38 miles southwest of Panama City, Fla.

Amoco said the joint interest agreement covers 640 acres distributed equally on the common, interior corners of contiguous Destin Dome Blocks 30, 31, 74 and 75. The operation area is in about 175 feet of water.

The Destin Dome Area is part of the acreage leased during the 1973 federal sale of Outer Continental Shelf tracts in the Gulf of Mexico off Mississippi, Alabama and Florida.

The industry has drilled 16 wildcat wells on the acreage — referred to as MAFLA — with no producers, Amoco said. The MAFLA leases cost the industry $1.4 billion.

New unit established

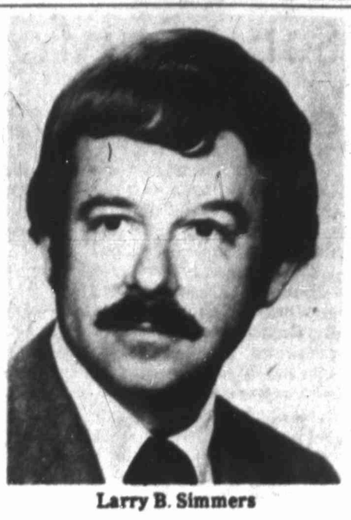
HOUSTON — McCullough wireline logging and perforating services, formerly a product line of NL Baroid, has been established as a separate division of NL Industries, Inc., and will be part of the NL Petroleum Services group.

NL McCullough will be headed by G. G. Allen, former president of NL Baroid, who will serve as acting president of the new division. Allen is vice president and group executive of NL Petroleum Services.

Named to executive positions in the new division are S. D. Warren, director of Marketing; H. G. Block, controller; J. P. DeSale, manager of Manufacturing, and G. D. Brown, manager of Employee Relations.

Reporting to Warren are W. T. Trice, new operations manager, and R. K. Fitzgerald, new sales manager.

Reporting to Trice will be the division's three domestic regions. They are the Central Region, headed by R. P. Smith; Easter Region, headed by B. F. Davis, and Western Region, headed by K. G. DeGough. D. P. Prehoda, manager of International Operations, also will report to Trice.



Larry B. Simmers

Simmers takes post

ODESSA — Larry B. Simmers has been appointed manager of operations for Sargent Industries Oil Well Equipment Division. He will be headquartered in Odessa and will be responsible for manufacturing, inventory control and purchasing.

Prior to joining Sargent, Simmers served as vice president of operations for Page Oil Tools in Long Beach, Calif. He also has held positions with Standun, Inc., and Johnston Pump Co.

Simmers is a certified manufacturing engineer and a professional manufacturing engineer. He holds an MBA degree from Pepperdine University.

El Paso gets line backing

DALLAS (AP) — The Southwest Regional Energy Council said Friday it has endorsed a trans-Alaska pipeline for transportation of Alaskan natural gas to U.S. markets.

Two other proposals call for construction of a trans-Canadian pipeline.

The council, which is made up of legislative leadership for energy matters from Arkansas, Louisiana, New Mexico, Oklahoma and Texas, endorsed the plan presented by El Paso Co. to build an 800-mile pipeline from Prudhoe Bay to a point on the south coast of Alaska. The gas would be liquefied and shipped by tankers to Point Concepcion in southern California. From there, after being regasified, existing pipelines would be used to transport the natural gas to other parts of the country.

"The El Paso proposal would be the easiest to finance, would require the least capital, would be the least vulnerable to cost overruns and could be completed earlier than the other proposed routes," the council statement said. "The El Paso proposal would have the most beneficial impact on the domestic economy by utilizing American equipment and labor and through increased tax revenue."

Fiberglass plant set

Elcor Corp. of Midland Saturday announced that its Building Products Group will build a fiberglass mat manufacturing facility at a site to be announced.

The plant will have an annual capacity of approximately 24 million pounds of finished product.

Contracts have been awarded to The Ortloff Corp., an Elcor subsidiary, for construction of the plant.

Roy E. Campbell, Elcor president, said the company has entered into long-term supply contracts to purchase glass fibers which are a basic raw material.

The plant will supply fiberglass mat to Elcor subsidiaries, Elk Corp. and Logan-Long Roofing Products, Inc., for production of asphalt roofing products and to other manufacturers for use in fiberglass-based products.

Elk Corp. will operate the facility, the first of its type to be located in the South. Final site selection should be completed within 90 days, Campbell said.

He said total investment in the plant will be approximately $5 million.

Work starts at station

ANCHORAGE, Alaska — Construction work has begun to replace the main pump building of Pump Station 8 of the trans-Alaska pipeline, reports Alyeska Pipeline Service Co.

The building, destroyed in an explosion and fire July 8, is expected to be replaced and the pump station is to be back in operation by next March, a spokesman for the company said.

The pipeline continues to operate without the pumping power of the station. Replacement of Pump Station 8 in the system will increase the maximum capacity of the pipeline to 1.2 million barrels a day.

Until the station is back on stream, the maximum capacity of the line will be between 700,000 and 800,000 barrels a day, the spokesman said.

Recovery declines

AUSTIN — Reported and estimated unreported production of Texas crude oil was 94,554,737 barrels in May, The Railroad Commission of Texas' Oil and Gas Division reported.

The prelimimary figure compares with final compilations of April 1977 production totaling 91,844,627 barrels and May 1976 production of 98,036,926 barrels.

Bill E. Watson

Geologist to retire

AUSTIN — Senior Staff Geologist Bill E. Watson, who joined the Railroad Commission of Texas staff in 1949, will retire Aug. 31.

All of his service has been in the Oil and Gas Division.

Watson joined the commission after being graduated from The University of Texas with a degree in Geology. His assignments include field engineer at Refugio, district enginner at Wichita Falls and district director at Kilgore and Midland.

He was transferred to the Austin headquarters in 1976 after serving as director of the District 8 office in Midland 10 years.

Watson is a member of the American Association of Petroleum Geologists and the Society of Petroleum Engineers of AIME.

Firm purchase consummated

DALLAS — Sabine Corp. announced last week it had consummated the previously announced acquisition of substantially all the outstanding capital stock of Sarkeys, Inc., of Oklahoma City.

A spokesman said that, of the $26 million total consideration, approximately $3.6 million was paid at the closing, with the balance to be paid when certain pending litigation has been resolved.

It was reported that for fiscal 1977, ended May 31, unaudited financial statements of Sarkeys reflected revenues of $18.4 million and income of approximately $3.2 million.

Meeting scheduled

EL PASO — The Texas Independent Producers and Royalty Owners Association will hold its August board of directors and committee member meeting Friday and Saturday in El Paso.

Also invited to attend are TIPRO members in Region 6 which covers the West Texas area. The meeting will serve as a vehicle to spread a new membership drive in cooperation with statewide membership chairman, Shelby D. Pitts.

John J. Redfern Jr. is the Region 6 membership chairman.

The two-day meeting will be held in the Downtown El Paso Holiday Inn.

One of the meeting speakers will be Jim Langdon, member of the Railroad Commission of Texas. He and others will analyze the latest developments in federal and state regulation of petroleum.

The two-day program will include registration from noon to 2 p. m. Friday, an open meeting session from 2 to 4:30 p. m. Langdon will speak at this session.

An open tennis tournament is slated at the El Paso, Tennis Club from 5 to 6:30 p.m. Friday. A buffet and social hour is slated at 7 p. m. Friday. This event will conclude with a trip to Juarez, Mexico.

Saturday, a second open meeting session is planned from 9:15 a. m. to 11:30 a. m. A gulf tournament will get under way at 1:30 p. m. at Lee Trevino's Country Club.

Publicity orgy raises question of fair trial for David Berkowitz

By ARIC PRESS
Newsday

NEW YORK — Can David Berkowitz get a fair trial?

His story is on the front page of every major newspaper in New York State. Columnists are reveling in quotations of purported admissions made to police detectives. Television news directors have produced instant specials, pushing their klieg lights into every cranny of Berkowitz's life since the Yonkers, N.Y., postal worker was charged with being the "Son of Sam" killer.

So now, after this media orgy, comes the problem finding 12 adults who haven't been irreparably tainted by the publicity for a jury. Leon Stern of Mineola, N.Y., one of Berkowitz's lawyers, put the question simply: "How can a man get a fair trial under these circumstances? The public is up in arms. They want to lynch him."

Berkowitz's other lawyer, Philip Peltz, sought a court order Friday gagging all of the participants in the case and preventing them from discussing it with reporters. The petition was denied. To add to the confusion, allegations were leveled that Peltz was involved in a story-selling scheme with the New York Daily News to provide information on his client.

The answer to the fair trial question is deceptively simple. Berkowitz is not going to get a dispassionate trial today or tomorrow, while crowds line the courthouse sidewalks chanting "Kill him" and families of his alleged victims demand bloody revenge. But a trial — if there ever is a trial — is months, perhaps years away. By then, experienced trial lawyers say, the atmosphere will be different, so different that Son of Sam may only be a dim memory.

After all, these lawyers say, impartial panels have been found to judge the cases of many defendants caught in the middle of a media maelstrom. Lawyers pointed to these recent cases as examples:

—Patricia Hearst, billed as America's princess turned gun-toting revolutionary;

—The two kidnapers of Sam Bronfman, heir to a whiskey fortune, tried amid reports of homosexual liasions.

"Pretrial publicity is a dead issue," said Charles Ruff, the last Watergate special prosecutor. "If you can have a fair trial and convictions affirmed in the Mitchell case, it is pretty tough to dream up a case the court will throw out because of publicity, if the court takes the necessary precautions."

These precautions include asking that the venue (location) of the trial be changed, delaying the trial until passions cool and questioning the jurors individually.

Few Texans in House continue all-out backing of energy bill

HOUSE

ENERGY. Passed, 244 for and 177 against, the bill (HR 8444) to establish a national energy policy. It was sent to the Senate. The 580-page, 113-provision bill seeks in part to cut everyday enegy usage at home and work, conserve the nation's finite supplies of oil and natural gas and require more burning of coal and other under-used fuels. To achieve those ends it employs a mix of laws and regulations, government financial aid and tax incentives and rebates.

Among its major programs, the bill raises the price of domestic crude oil by means of an oil-equalization tax, expands price controls of natural gas to intrastate as well as interstate gas, taxes "gas-guzzler" automobiles, encourages home insulation, set fuel-efficiency standards for home appliances, reforms utility rate structures to encourage conservation and requires new industrial and utility power plants to burn coal.

Rep. Thomas Ashley, D-Ohio, a supporter, said the bill "will help the U.S. to reduce oil imports by somewhere between 2.5 milion and 2.8 million barrels per day from what would have been our usage in 1985 without this measure. Clearly, the bill provides a solid start toward meeting our energy goals."

Rep. Barber Conable, R-N.Y., an opponent, said: "Instead of the laws of economics and the self-regulation of the market place, this bill foists massive bureaucratic decisions on an American people already restless and saddened by too much government."

Rep. Olin Teague (D-6) did not vote.

ENERGY. Rejected, 203 for and 219 against, a motion to send back to committee—and thus kill—the oil-equalization tax contained in the national energy bill (see above vote). The tax would raise the price of domestic crude oil to the world price of oil by 1980. It would be reflected in higher consumer prices of gasoline and other fuels. The resulting revenue would be returned to the public by means such as lower income tax withholding rates for wage earners and special cash payments for the poor and elderly. The oil-equalization tax would expire in 1981.

ROLL CALL REPORT

Rep. William Steiger, R-Wis., the sponsor of the motion to recommit, expressed concern as to how the billions raised by the tax would be used by the government. He said the tax "is not the heart of the program but rather an unnecesary appendage which, if not removed, could kill the patient..." He said it would raise by seven cents per gallon the price of gasoline, diesel fuel, home heating oil, residual fuel oil and jet fuel.

Rep. Al Ullman, D-Ore., an opponent of the motion, said: "The equalization tax is the centerpiece of our energy policy. If we do not have the pricing mechanism, we destroy all of the incentives to move toward energy conservation and conversion, and without energy conservation and conversion we have totally failed in creating an energy policy."

Teague did not vote.

GASOLINE TAX. Rejected, 82 for and 339 against, an amendment to hike by five cents per gallon the federal tax on gasoline. It was proposed HR 8444, the bill setting a national energy policy (see above votes). Earlier, the Ways and Means Committee had rejected President Carter's call for a 50-cent increase and the full House had rejected a proposed four-cent hike. Revenues raised by the five-cent hike were to be divided evenly between mass-transit and the highway trust fund.

Rep. Jim Wright, D-Tex., a supporter, said the purpose of the tax is not to save gasoline by discouraging consumption. "The purpose...is to raise revenue so as to finance beneficial activities. Some of these activities are energy related, and some of them are not."

Rep. Robert Drinan, D-Mass., an opponent, said: "Until the U.S. has a satisfactory arrangement to recoup some part of that $17.6 billion which American oil companies pay in royalties to Arab nations and credit against their own taxes to the U.S. Treasury, I do not think it is fair or just to bill the American consumer five cents for every gallon of gasoline..."

Teague did not vote.

SENATE

FOREIGN AID. Adopted, 47 for and 29 against, an amendment permitting U.S. contributions to international lending institutions such as the World Bank to be used in loans to Laos, Cambodia, Vietnam and Uganda. It was attached to HR 7797, the foreign aid appropriations bill later passed and sent to conference with the House.

Sen. Daniel Inouye, D-Hawaii, a supporter, asked: "Is the U.S. to stand aside mute, immobile if there is a huge disaster in Uganda just because Idiin happens to be the boss man? Are we going to close our eyes and say, 'Let those people suffer?' Once we do that, the U.N. is out of business."

Sen. Harry Byrd, D-I, Va., an opponent, said: "I think it is a mistake to take funds out of the pockets of the working people of this country, turn those funds over to international banking institutions, and permit those institutions...(to) send that tax money to Uganda, Cambodia, Laos or the Socialist Republic of Vietnam."

Senators voting "yea" opposed any indirect ban on international bank loans to the four countries.

Sen. Lloyd Bentsen (D) voted "yea" and Sen. John Tower (R) voted "nay."

FOREIGN AID. Rejected, 11 for and 56 against, an amendment prohibiting foreign aid to a country if the money ends up subsidizing manufacurring or farming that competes with companies and farms in the U.S. It was proposed to the $6.9 billion foreign aid appropriations bill for fiscal 1978, later passed and sent to conference with the House (see above vote).

Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., the sponsor, said: "I do not think it is fair competition when the farmers of the U.S. must bear high borrowing costs, and then pay taxes to the federal government to finance an international aid institution so that foreign farmers can have low-cost or even no-cost capital to compete against them."

Sen. Hubert Humphrey, D-Minn., an opponent, said the amendment amounts to "cutting off our noses to spite our faces" because "these little countries...are some of the best commercial customers we have....When they generate capital from their little industries, whatever they may be, a mill, a fishing operation, they spend it, and they spend a great deal of it in the U.S.A."

Daughter of late Texas oil millionaire ignores great wealth, talks about Jesus

By CHERI SHIPPER

DECATUR, Ala. (AP) — "Just because you walk in a stable, it doesn't make you a horse."

June Hunt feels the same way about money. Everywhere she goes, people ask her about it. Sometimes, the money questions get in the way of what she really wants to talk about.

Miss Hunt, daughter of the late Texas oil millionaire H. L. Hunt, would rather talk about God.

She was in north Alabama recently to present her message of music and testimony.

"There's a tendency for some individuals to feel that once they've accumulated a certain amount of wealth, their problems are solved," Miss Hunt said.

"If money were the solution, why would your Howard Hughes and J. Paul Gettys have had the kind of lives they had?"

Miss Hunt, who says she would like to be "just plain June," says she is much more comfortable in blue jeans. "I can't stand people who put on airs," she said. "I want to shake their shoulders and say, 'Get real!'"

Although she grew up in a house most people would call a mansion, Miss Hunt said she now lives in her own apartment in Dallas. She says she clips penny-saving coupons from grocery ads every week. She and her accompanist-manager, David Moorhead, fly tourist class all over the country.

"My father was not pretentious," she said. "He had a large house and he loved it, but he carried a sack lunch to the office every day. He used to impress on us that whatever we did, we should be informed about this country so that we could realize how blessed we are with freedom."

Miss Hunt said that as a child she did her share of chores around the house. One of her jobs was trimming hedges.

Today, Miss Hunt finds it difficult to describe exactly what she does. After she graduated from Southern Methodist University with a major in music, she worked for a time as a junior high director, and later as a college and career director at a large Dallas church.

Now, she feels she is somehow letting God lead her where ghe wants her to go.

"I don't like administration," she said of her job with 650 junior high school youths in Dallas, "and I don't like traveling. I'd rather stay home."

But she said she is learning about people in her travels. "I never would have had empathy for traveling salesmen like I do now if i hadn't done this."

Although she admits she had not had to worry about some of the things the average person worries about, Miss Hunt says every human has to cope with problems and his own particular kinds of adversity.

"God says commit your life to Me," she pointed out. "He promised He will supply our every need, not our every want."

"The man sitting next to me had on a beautiful blue suit," she said. "I don't normally give compliments about exterior things, but this was a really beautiful suit. We started talking.

"He said he'd accomplished everything, every single goal he'd set for himself. He was goal-oriented. He had a large home, a boat, a beautiful camper. Vocationally, he said he was a success. Then he said, 'And I am absolutely miserable.'"

Miss Hunt said her heart dropped, "like we'd hit an air pocket. He'd spent all his direction on things he thought would bring him inner peace, and yet he had no inner peace."

Finding her own relationship with Jesus Christ, being "born again," is what Miss Hunt finds of greatest importance in her life today.

"We are all creatures of God," she said, "but we are not His family until we ask Christ to be a part of our lives."

Killinger speaks up

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Dr. George Killinger, new chairman of the State Board of Pardons and Paroles, says he is not an advocate of the death penalty but there are some people who should be "eliminated."

"I do see some crimes that for the good of society that person shouldn't be here. I think he is a beast," Killinger said on a weekend radio panel program (State Capitol Dateline).

"I am agaist the death penalty except for the very, very heinous, just barbaric crimes," he said. "It is better to eliminate certain people rather than keep them on death row or keep them in prison where they are still dangerous to human beings in prison, not only to guards and administrative staff but to other inmates.

"Some people can just never be helped."

"And there are some compulsive sex offenders that I would never vote for parole, particularly men who prey on young children and this type of offender," Killinger said.

J. RALPH BERRY M.D.

Texas scientist finds prehistoric diet healthful

By ROB WOOD

HOUSTON (AP) — Dr. Vaughn Bryant Jr. is convinced modern society has done everything wrong as far as eating is concerned and "we'd be a lot better off if we followed the diet of prehistoric man."

And how does Dr. Bryant know what our ancestors ate thousands of years ago?

The Texas A&M University scientist has spent the past several years collecting coprolites (human waste) at archeological sites; taking them to his lab and determining the food eaten by those short, stoop-shouldered, bandy-legged people who once roamed our planet.

Dr. Bryant, in a recent interview, said, "I guess you could say we started at the bottom and worked up. What goes in, must come out.

"In the past it was sufficient for an archeologist to evacuate a site and later report his findings solely in terms of the ceramic, lithic and fibrous artifacts.

"Great quantities of potentially valuable artifacts were inadvertently destroyed or discarded through a lack of understanding of their usefulness. One such item, which has only recently been saved with any degree of regularity, is human coprolites.

"The undigested seeds and bones found in the feces of prehistoric man gives us the clues to the types of food he ate."

Dr. Bryant, a paleobotanist, decided to try the prehistoric diet in an effort to remove some of "the flab gathing around my middle from sitting behind a desk and eating too much junk food."

He admits he bypassed the lizards and rats, "but I did eat a lot of bulk, turnips, a plant called jimaca, some cactus pads, berries, honey and fruits, with the protein coming mostly from fish."

The 190 pounds on his 5-foot-9- inch frame dropped in 170 pounds in less than four months, "and I have never felt better."

One of his graduate students existed one week on the pure prehistoric diet and "although she admitted the food was bland, it didn't hurt her and she came out as healthy, if not healthier, than before."

Dr. Bryant, his office cluttered with the prehistoric coprolites, one 400,000 years old, said his research work may seem somewhat unusual to some people and concedes the laboratory is a far cry from a perfume factory.

Once the coprolites are taken to the lab, they are treated with a chemical which softens the substance for better analysis and releases an intense offensive odor.

With his work now centered in a dig along the Trans-Pecos area of southwest Texas, Dr. Bryant said skelton remains indicate those who lived in the arid area were healthy, despite the hardships of existence and the absense of medical attention.

"These people led an active life. They had to to survive. My research shows they ate a wellbalanced diet. There was something in man to seek out the types of food his body needed, that is, before he was lured by the fancy displays in the grocery stores and the easily available junk foods."

Dr. Bryant said prehistoric man knew nothing of minerals or vitamins, "but they were not deformed. And, looking at their teeth, they could have said, 'Look Mom, no cavities.'"

The study project, Dr. Bryant said, revealed prehistoric man had sufficient vitamins and minerals without popping pills.

"First they ate a certain plant that grows in the desert, a plant that one leaf contains the same amount of Vitamin C as one lime.

"When we talk of calcium, we think of dairy products, milk and cheese. The prehistoric man ate hackberries, inside of which is a little seed the size of a BB that is 99 per cent calcium.

"Our ancestors ate flowers, all of the flower. The sunflower, for example, is high in Vitamin B-6 and B-12. The cactus pad had a tremendous amount of bulk, and it tastes a lot like green beans," he said.

Most of the meat diet, Dr. Bryant said, included lizards, mice, crickets grasshoppers and some small fish apparently trapped in the ponds that dot the area." Our studies show that sometimes the meat was cooked, sometimes eaten raw.

The scientist said his study of coprolites "has proven to me that if any disaster hits our society, I could take my family to the wild and live in good health."

Gold mining starts upsurge in Alaska

By WARD SIMS

FAIRBANKS, Alaska (AP) — After a long slide that took production to a low of 7,107 troy ounces in 1973, gold mining in Alaska is on the upswing.

Production went up to 9,146 ounces in 1974, to 14,980 ounces in 1975 and to 17,660 ounces last year.

A fixed price of $35 an ounce all but nailed the lid on gold mining in the state, but interest picked up soon after Congress freed the price of gold in 1968.

"At $35 an ounce, the Alaska gold miner could barely operate unless he had a pretty good placer mine," Stein says.

"When the price went up, a lot more operations came into being, because you could mine lower grade claims."

Many of those new operations represented so-called "weekend prospectors" who turned to full-time mining with an improved price picture.

"It made it worthwhile for them to work their properties on a full-time basis," Stein said.

Stein said recent sales of gold by the International Monetary Fund have acted as a buffer on the price of gold, but that it still remains extremely strong.

Another factor affecting gold mining in Alaska is inflation, but Stein sees that as a twoedged sword.

On the one hand, inflation cuts into the ability of miners to work lower grade deposits, he said.

"However, with increasing inflation conditions, you're going to find that pressure is on the price of gold to go up," says Stein.

For instance, because it is an excellent conductor of electricity, gold is now a key ingredient in the manufacture of equipment such as computers, Stein said.

Most of the gold operations in Alaska are family-type undertakings, or partnerships of two or three men, Stein said. But two dredges were working near Nome last summer, and they will be back in operation this year.

Alaska Gold Co. used the two dredges to recover 14,320 of the 17,660 troy ounces of gold produced in the state last year, moving 1,194,620 cubic yards of gravel in the process.

Another dredge is working on a platinum property at Goodnews Bay, and it is producing some gold as a side product, Stein said.

He said Little Squaw is producing this summer with a 100- ton-a-day mill the Spokane, Wash., firm has constructed at the mine site on the south slope of the Brooks Range.

Stein predicted, "We've got large low-grade gold deposits in Alaska that have yet to be discovered."

He was also optimistic about the future discovery of placer deposits in the state — "There are a lot of creeks that have never been prospected."

But Stein has a word of caution for those who might believe that gold in Alaska is an easy quarry.

"It takes experience, work and patience," he said. "By the law of averages, if you take 40 miners, prospecting all of their lives, only one will find a really valuable property."

Islander berates Kennedy

GOSNOLD, Mass. (AP) — An angry Cuttyhunk Island resident bent on berating Sen. Edward M. Kennedy broke up a volleyball game, forcing the senator to pack up his family and leave.

Islanders said Thursday night that the Kennedys sailed to this tiny island of about 90 yearround residents, located about 15 miles southeast of New Bedford, and played a volleyball game at the town's court.

Lynn Hathaway, 16, a summer resident, said Kennedy invited her and her friends to play with them in the Saturday game.

During the game, Asa Pain Cobb Lombard, 63, an island resident for the past 10 years, walked up to Kennedy and berated him for his Island Trust Bill.

"Nobody said anything until Ted told his family they had better leave and to pack their stuff. Kennedy didn't argue with Asa at all," said Miss Hathaway.

Island Selectman Alpheus P. Tilton said the selectmen were sending Kennedy a letter of apology.

"We just want to apologize on behalf of the town for one man's view," Tilton said. "Asa's a bitter man. He feels he wasn't paid enough for some of his land that was turned into the Cape Cod National Seashore. So he's bitter about Kennedy's trust bill."

Kennedy's Island Trust Bill would provide federal funds to purchase land on Nantucket, Martha's Vineyard and the Elizabeth Islands, of which Cuttyhunk is the outermost. The federally owned land, some of which could never be built on, would then be turned over to the towns.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Bee stings can be dangerous

Dear Dr. Solomon: Our neighbor's daughter had a very bad reaction to a bee sting the other day. Is this something that can happen to anyone? Are there any sort of precautions we should take? After all, we both have gardens, and I'm sure the bees that are in their yard are just as apt to be buzzing around in ours.—Pat W.

Dear Pat: The people who have bad reactions to bee stings are those who are allergic. Sometimes a person only develops the allergy after he or she has been stung several times and very often, a person gets a progressively more noticeable reaction with each new sting. This is a warning that a severe reaction could occur at some point in the future.

The allergic reaction may involve generalized swelling, sneezing, nausea, vomiting, dizziness, breathing difficulty, or even going into complete shock. Sometimes the reaction comes on right away; sometimes, several hours later. In any case, when somebody has had an unusual reaction to a sting—by a bee, a yellow jacket, a wasp or a hornet—he or she should be taken to a doctor as quickly as possible. Otherwise, it may lead to collapse and even death.

If you have had a bad reaction to a sting, get desensitization shots. They help build up resistance to the stings. They take time, but they are worth it.

Always keep an insect sting kit handy. It includes a syringe that can give two shots of adrenaline, special tablets, a tourniquet and complete instructions. You can get one of these kits from the drugstore on a prescription from your doctor.

Wear a medical warning tag around your neck or wrist, as a sting may produce unconsciousness if you are really allergic, making you unable to tell the doctor of your special problem.

Avoid soft drinks, ice cream cones and other sweet food when you are outdoors, as they attract Hymenoptera in droves. The same goes for rotting fruit under a tree, clover patches, most summer flowers, perfumes, scented shampoos. Long hair seems to enrage bees and wasps and their ilk if they get entangled in it. And colored clothing is another hazard—wear white, pale gray or tan.

If there is a wasp nest that should be destroyed, get a non-sensitive person to do it. If there is a bees' nest nearby, call the nearest beekeeper. he will be delighted to come and cart it away.

For three New York boroughs, it's terror no more

By JOHN BARBOUR

NEW YORK (AP) — Hand in hand, they strolled by the quiet waters of Gravesend Bay. The moon shone splendidly on this lover's lane in Brooklyn, an unlikely romantic patch in a city of tense towers.

They were an uncomplicated couple stalked by the incomprehensibly complicated man who had idled on a child's swing, alone, watching the nearness of a lover's embrace with his mind racing fantasy.

It was July 31, their first date — and their last.

It was also the last attack by the man they call "Son of Sam," who ended the life of Stacy Moskowitz with a 44.-caliber slug that smashed through her brain. He fired again and again, finally claiming the eyes of Robert Violante, hospitalized now and wondering where his promise has gone.

Cacilia Davis took a cuddly white dog named Snowball for a walk that night. The night was heavy with humidity and silent as a cemetery as she walked with him all the way to the fire hydrant.

Except for the police officers ticketing illegally parked cars, there was little to heed, until a man approached her from behind a tree and gave her a long, sharp look.

"He was so obvious," she would recount a week and a half later in a story copywrited by the New York News.

"It was hot, and he had a shirt and a jacket on, and he walked with his right arm straight down. I could see he was holding something, but from the front I couldn't tell what it was. As he walked away, I could see it was something he had partly up his sleeve.

"He walked strange, like a cat, I thought."

The fatigue ground dark circles beneath his eyes and pulled the folds of his face downward. Here in the constant flourescent light, where days and nights blend imperceptibly, here, where police Inspector Timothy J. Dowd had passed too much time, the sting of too much coffee burned his gut and the stench of too many cigarettes filled his nose.

He had kept a vigil here for a week and another week and a month and another month and a year and for the last three days, sleepless and angry and frustrated and wondering where the elusive, taunting killer would strike once again.

So many false leads, so many leads the director of the 300- man task force dared not ignore. In the last two days, 30 calls came in every minute, 1,800 every hour. Three thousand people — three thousand — had been investigated.

And Dowd had yet to finger the killer they called "Son of Sam."

A young couple bent on romance. A woman walking her dog. A detective thinking of nothing but the man he had hunted so hard and so long. "Son of Sam," a canny, vicious, mad and mocking murderer of young women.

He must have been rejected by a woman, they theorized. He must have been impotent, fearful of them, lonely, living out the cliche of a quiet man concealing the fantasies of a demon.

This was the last night that "Son of Sam" would stalk the city, restless, ruthless and filled with hate.

The .44-caliber killer had struck eight times, the first seven in the Bronx and the Queens, in residential neighborhoods where the sounds of gunfire and sudden death are alien. Five young women with long, dark hair were dead. A man considered an accidental target was dead as well.

Always, the .44-caliber killer attacked in the night. Always, he seemed to come from nowhere. Always, he fired from a crouch, wordlessly, his eyes burning hatred.

Sober with the fear of the mad woman-hater, the throngs at the pulsating discotheques of Queens thinned out. Lover's lanes were virtually deserted. Young women shunned the streets at night, pulled their hair into buns, wore hoods to disguise their sex, turned down dates on the weekend.

When police proclaimed that their arrest of a pudgy, 24-year-old named David Berkowitz had ended the terror of the man they had called "Son of Sam," the shroud of fear lifted.

"I'm free to be myself," a young woman bubbled afterward in the chaotic, churning whirl of a singles' bar full once again.

Cacilia Davis was the key to the case, police said. For four days she fought the fear of reprisal, finally overcoming it to tell of her weird encounter that fatal night of July 31.

Perhaps his was a ticketed car, they reasoned. Painstakingly, they went through the tickets, 20,000 of them issued every day here. And there emerged at long last the name of David Berkowitz, 24 years old, 35 Pine St., Yonkers.

The name had come up before in Yonkers, a city of 150,000 on the northern border of New York. It was a mere matter of days since a Westchester County sheriff's deputy had begun to wonder about his neighbor in the apartment building there. There had been a strange fire, and raving, rambling notes.

Down the block, the 64-year-old owner of a telephone answering service, Sam Carr, had complained about the man who shot at his black Labrador retriever. Carr had gotten strange notes, too. And a New Rochelle landlady had a keen memory for an unforgettable former tenant who had traced a grotesque postcard signed by "Sam and Friend" to the same man, David Berkowitz.

David Berkowitz, Sam Carr told the police, was "Son of Sam." Little did he realize, police said later, that he was apparently the "Sam" of the .44-caliber killer's demonic dreams.

Detectives said Berkowitz had confided to them that Sam "is a man who lived 6,000 years ago." He continued:

"I got the messages through his dog. He told me to kill. Sam is the devil."

In his apartment, where his unmade bed was littered with pornographic books and his walls contained wild scrawlings, someone had scribbled around a hole in the plaster:

"Hi. My name is Mr. Williams and I live in this hole. I have several children who I'm turning into killers. WAIT til they grow up."

Growing up was tortured for David Berkowitz. Born to Tony and Betty Falco on June 1, 1953, he was taken from the hospital into the home of foster parents, Nathan and Pearl Berkowitz.

"One time I went into the house and he was throwing a tantrum, tearing curtains off the wall, throwing pictures, screaming and kicking," says his former saxophone teacher, David Margolies.

"His father was a nice, easy guy. But even she, who I think knew what was going on, pampered him. She tried to make it the best for him, more so because he wasn't hers.

"And he'd curse her because he knew he was adopted."

They say Berkowitz, whose adoptive mother died when he was 14, wanted to know who his natural mother was; that he learned her name and, somehow, never tried to reach her.

It was but one of numerous contradictions in his life.

Overweight and open to childhood taunts, he was a good baseball player. Reared a Jew, he became a Baptist. A middling high school student, he visited a desperate poetry upon the public. Seemingly fascinated by uniforms and guns — police said he had a shotgun, rifle and semi-automatic weapon plus the .44-caliber Bulldog revolver — he had been successively a soldier, an auxiliary police officer a security guard and, finally, a postal clerk.

"I haven't been out in months because I was so afraid of Son of Sam," Theresa Graziano told reporters. She had worked beside him for months in a post office in the Bronx. She had eaten with him. She had listened to his warning that she should put up her hair.

He rarely spoke, those who knew him said. He was jumpy and unpredictable, erupting into a rage at the bark of a dog. Affable one instant, enraged the next.

"When I first met him in 1973, he was a Jesus freak," Paul Billow, 24, a former Army buddy recalled in Saginaw, Mich. "But by the time he left the Army he'd had a complete personality change."

He never dated, Billow said of Berkowitz. He never talked of family or friends. He had boasted of taking stimulant and depressant drugs, and, Billow said, they may have changed his life. Reduced one grade from specialist 4th class to private 1st class for having missed a convoy, Berkowitz, who served in Korea, had a clean record otherwise.

He had earned a sharpshooter rating.

The man they now call the "Son of Sam" walked into the hands of the law on the quiet street outside his apartment building late Wednesday night. Drawn there by the car parked outside, the detectives who had stalked the night stalker so patiently and so persistently had waited and watched a few minutes more.

"Well, okay," Berkowitz sighed, smiling the odd little smile that appeared so often in the hours that followed. "You've got me."

With a cataclysmic burst of attention, the man named David Berkowitz moved from the drab shadows of his private life to the limelight that the man they called the "Son of Sam" so clearly enjoyed.

His name had been on every lip. His deeds had dominated the news. The city was his to terrorize.

But the terror is no more.

MC offers machine tool training course

The program is particularly for those persons who quality for training with pay under the Comprehensive Employment Training Act (CETA). It will provide basic machine shop skills to prepare the economically disadvantaged, underemployed or unemployed person for apprenticeship in the machine trades, according to Dr. Marshall Box, occupational vice president of Midland College.

Twenty students will be accepted into the class.

While the class is primarily designed for students 18 years old or over who have not completed high school, higher education students and high school graduates will be accepted if they qualify," Box said.

One of the unique advantages of the CETA program is that qualified students will be paid the minimum wage during a 40-hour week training period. Classes will be from 11 a.m. to 7:30 p.m., on a five-day basis over a four month period. Instruction will start in a rented building which Midland College has been occupying for some time. The class will be moved into the new addition of the Occupational-Technical Building early this fall.

Persons interested in the program should call W. C. Wilson at 682-7944. Further information can be obtained from Leon Taylor, instructor at Midland College, at 684-7851, ext. 190.

Surveyor first made zinc metal

NEW YORK (AP) — Door bells, flashlight batteries and the Verrazano-Narrows Bridge, the world's largest suspension bridge, all have something in common. They owe their existence to Andrew Wittman.

Wittman, a surveyor, is believed to be the first American to have made zinc metal. In 1845, he produced two ounces from ore discovered on a farm four miles south of Bethlehem, Pa. Now a mine, owned by Gulf & Western's New Jersey Zinc Company, the "farm" produces 2,000 tons of zinc ore each day.

Topless Fannie is tops

That's because she's six feet tall and tips the scales at 400 pounds, making her the biggest topless dancer in the country, she says.

"There's a 300-pounder in Tennesee. But I'm 400 pounds," she says. "Now that gives me top billing wherever I go."

Wearing one of her numerous hand-made outfits with the top pulled down, she saunters about the stage, bends this way and that, purses her lips and winks at the crowd.

The crowd, silent for the other dancers, breaks into cheers, jeers, hoots and howls.

The stout 24-year-old Seattle topless dancer says she likes to hop on tables and chairs for impromptu jigs, but most establishments she works at won't let her anymore.

And at the tavern she's working at now — "making $100 to $150 cash a day" — she was ticketed for getting too close to customers.

"I was table dancing and I bent over this guy and his head disappeared, so they got me for touching. But when you're this size, how can you help it? They thought I buried him, I guess."

Fannie says she has a line that stops forward fellows cold.

"I say 'You must be hallucinating, thinking of tackling this mountain.'"

She gave her first performance at 20 in Miami, to help a friend out of a jam.

"I had this friend who owned a club. He was in a jam so I helped him out," she says. "He got me drunk."

From there it was New Orleans, Texas, Phoenix and on and on.

"I never thought about not weighing what I weigh now," she says. "I never think about being thin. When you know you are money by being big, how could you want to be thin?"

Racing to the refrigerator is her only sport, she cracks.

"Not many big people get up and do this kind of thing. They stay at home and in their refrigerator, you know? It doesn't bother me, what I do. I don't do it for pleasure. How could I get pleasure out of that?"

However, the money is too good to leave the profession.

"I don't think I could take a straight job any more," she says. "When you're making $100 to $150 cash a day, it kinds of spoils you."

She says she has an ample leg in Hollywood's door and knows screen personalities Linda Blair, John Travolta and Mae West.

The Los Angeles Times

Suppose all of the U.S. auto companies joined together and built one giant plant from which all American cars flowed, or that all of the nation's liquor firms did the same. The reverberations would be something to contemplate.

But fanciful as it seems, Ireland's distillers have done exactly that, and the whole thing appears to be working. At least it is making this country again aware that there is such a thing as Irish Whisky.

Few could conceive today of Irish whisky being America's runaway favorite way of imbibing, but at one time it was.

Around the turn of the century if a gentleman called for a whisky anywhere in the world, chances are Irish is what he got. With some 400 brands selling briskly in every corner of the globe, it was the largest selling whisky imported into the United States and was even popular in England.

The Irish, all together, had a lock on the world whisky market, which they accepted as their natural due. After all, the very word whisky, they say, came from the Gaelic "usige" and it was priests from the Emerald Isle who transported the wonderful recipe to the wilds of Scotland. The Irish even modestly take credit for teaching the French distilling, giving rise to brandy.

But with the new century, a series of events combined to lead to 50 years of decline.

In the United States, Prohibition not only cut off the legal flow, but there was much rotgut cooked in the back rooms in this country that was labeled Irish, giving the entire category a bad image.

From 1918 to 1922, the Irish were fighting for and winning their independence, and production declined. Then came a world economic slump, followed by World War II. The Irish Republic's neutral stance didn't help its overseas trade.

But probably the hardest blow came from across the Irish Sea. The canny Scots had hit upon the process of blending their essentially heavy spirit into a light-bodied, flavorful potion that won quick acceptance around the world.

GIs returning from England brought back a taste for Scotch and the Scots eagerly kept pace with the American thirst. Some 500 brands of Scotch are now on the American market.

The 400 brands of Irish, meanwhile, had sunk to a mere four. True, the Irish were still drinking Irish, but Ireland had only 3 million people. The 36 million in America of Irish descent weren't doing the same thing.

The American market had sunk to the depths, with only a trickle of the heavy malt brew being used in Irish Coffee. "A waste of both good whisky and good coffee," scoffs Jack McGowan, export development manager for Irish Distillers, Ltd.

Then, after the long sleep, the Irish liquor firms awoke and realized they were on the brink of extinction.

First, all of the firms joined into one company, called Irish Distillers, Ltd. Then, considering turnabout fair play, they borrowed from the Scotch the idea of blending.

Each contributed to build the largest distillery in the world, at Middleton, County Cork. All the whisky produced in the Irish Republic flows from here. (Bushmill's, which boasts of being the oldest Irish whisky, is produced in Northern Ireland, but it is controlled by Irish Distillers, Ltd.)

"Realizing that America is the world's prime market, we launched a three-year research project into the American taste and the overall U.S. liquor scene," says McGowan.

"So we can really boast that the Irish Whisky in the market now is specifically tailored to the American taste for lightness. It is blended and it is extremely mixable. We make no secret of the fact that our target in this country is the U.S. Scotch drinker."

Midland 4-H riders win precision event

HOUSTON — The Midland County 4-H Club Mounted Drill Team placed first in precision riding and second in team drill at the 15th annual State 4-H Club Horse Show during July.

The neighboring Ector County team won in regular drill but placed third in precision riding.

The Midland bunch, directed by Drillmaster Kenneth Lynch, drilled to the theme "Black Gold: The Energy of Texas."

Steve Thompson, 17, was the club's captain. Drill leaders on the 16-member team were sisters Raychel Lynch, 15, and Renae Lynch, 18.

Since 1969, the Midlanders have won five championships in regular drill and twice in precision riding.

The grand champion gelding in Western horsemanship was shown by Jackie Geers, 16, of Odessa. Jim Jenkins, 16, of Odessa was third in the Western horsemanship field. His mount was Lonesome Dancer, an 8-year-old gelding.

Patty Williams, 16, of Midland was third in registered mares 5 years old and older. Her mare was Ken Ada Bar.

Chris Jeter, 13, of Odessa was third in registered mares under 5 years old.

Geers's winning mount was 5-year-old Lucky Soronta. The 1977 show marked the fourth time Geers had shown the champion or reserve champion at the equine event that attracted approximately 600 4-H horsemen from across the state.

Ships could save money

NEW YORK (AP) — Marisat, the first satellite communications system for ships at sea could save shippers millions of dollars a year, reports The Compass, a publication of MOAC, a commercial marine insurer.

Currently, 90 per cent of all ship-to-shore communications are in Morse Code, while most of the rest are by voice transmission of varying quality, notes the publication. In either case, atmospheric conditions can cause the shipper to be out of touch with his vessel for as long as 48 hours.

But with Marisat, an individual vessel could save thousands of dollars per year by more opportune course changes at sea. For example, avoiding bad weather can mean tremendous savings in time and fuel, says Compass, noting that the cost of maintaining a super-tanker is roughly $30,000 a day.

Federal Reserve takes inflation control steps

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Federal Reserve Chairman Arthur Burns said today the board is making a long-term effort to reduce the growth rate of money to keep inflation under control.

Burns' remarks confirmed signs seen by stock analysts that the Federal Reserve Board, which controls the money supply, was tightening credit.

The policy is intended to keep prices from rising but will make less money available for housing construction and other job-creating projects.

Burns, in remarks prepared for a commencement speech at Jacksonville University, said Americans want economic growth, full employment and improved health, yet don't want their incomes eroded. The result is often higher prices, he said.

"While we must be cautious about moving abruptly, my colleagues and I in the Federal Reserve System are firmly committed to a longer-term effort of gradual reduction in the rate of growth of money," Burns said.

"That is reflected in the progression of steps we have been taking to lower permissible growth-ranges for the money supply."

The amount of money in circulation has grown rapidly as spending has increased in recent weeks. Cash and checks in circulation have gone up an annual rate of 16.5 per cent in the last four weeks and bank deposits 12.9 per cent.

The Federal Reserve began tightening its credit policy late last month and this week confirmed it had raised the federal funds interest rate, the uncommitted reserves banks lend one another.

Forgotten accounts value totals billions

By MARK POTTS

NEW YORK (AP) — According to his biographers, comedian W.C. Fields opened as many as 700 bank accounts under such assumed names as Figley E. Whitesides or Sneed Hearn as he traveled from town to town in the days of vaudeville.

In many cases, Fields apparently never returned to claim the funds he deposited. His example has been repeated by many others who have abandoned accounts in banks and other institutions around the country.

The forgotten accounts, which now total an estimated $15 billion, have become a source of much-needed revenue for hardpressed state governments. Last year, the take totaled more than $100 million.

The forgotten assets aren't limited to accounts at banks. They also include insurance proceeds, gift certificates, dividend checks, airline tickets and stock certificates.

Rules vary from state to state, but generally, after several years of account inactivity, states become custodians of the abandoned funds.

However, "the citizen never loses his money," says Albert L. Beerman, whose Chicago-based accounting firm, Alexander Grant & Co., advises states on how to recover the assets people leave behind. "The states can use this money, but in theory, it's in trust for the citizens."

Because of the large backlog of forgotten accounts, locating them can be a very profitable venture for states. A well-managed search program, according to Beerman, can produce 50 times what the program costs to run, which is from $50,000 to $2 million annually.

The largest concentration of abandoned accounts is in states with large populations, he said. New York, for example, reclaimed $130 million last year, while California recovered $50 million.

All together, states took custody of about $240 million in 1976.

In other business developments this past week:

—There were indications on several fronts that the economy's strength in the first half of the year would continue in the second half.

July figures on prices for wholesale goods and retail food prices both fell, and there were indications that inflation could go below 6 per cent.

Unemployment also was down, to a seasonably adjusted 6.9 per cent in July from 7.1 per cent in June, although one government economist called it "a lukewarm report" which signifies little.

—The positive economic news boosted the U.S. dollar's value on international currency markets, and it made up much of its recent losses against European currencies. The Canadian dollar, however, fell to an eight-year low against the American currency.

—Most of the 16,000 coal miners involved in a six-week-old wildcat strike in West Virginia returned to work briefly and then resumed the walkout, despite back-to-work orders issued by United Mine Workers President Arnold Miller. Officials could not predict when the miners, upset about a cut in union benefits, would go back to work.

Purchase announced

The transaction, which was approved by Zoecon shareholders at a special meeting Aug. 9, involved the acquisition by Hooker of all the outstanding common stock of Zoecon for $18 per share.

Zoecon, headquartered in Palo Alto, Calif., is engaged in the research, development, manufacture and marketing of products to improve the health of animals and plants, primarily by controlling insect pests. Zoecon's 1976 sales were $27.2 million.

Zoecon will continue its present operations as a wholly-owned subsidiary of Hooker Chemical. Hooker is engaged internationally in the production and marketing of industrial chemicals and plastics; metal-finishing chemicals, equipment and processes, and agricultural chemicals, fertilizers and related products.

TAOC shows big increase

Record revenues and earnings derived from exploration and development drilling in combination with significant contributions from refinery and gasoline brokerage operations have been reported by William F. Judd, president of Texas American Oil Corp.

Net earnings for the three months ended June 30 increased 305 per cent in spite of substantial increase in the provision for federal income taxes when compared to the same period of 1976, Judd said.

For the six months ended June 30, earnings jumped 256 per cent while working capital provided by operations increased 193 per cent over the same 1976 period, he added.

FTC credit rules to be topic at hearing

By BILL KIDD
Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Some Federal Trade Commission rules affecting consumer credit sales will be up for comment at a Dallas hearing Sept. 12 — and the comment from Texas lending and credit industry representatives apparently will be negative.

That Dallas session is one of four planned in different parts of the country (the last in Washington Dec. 5) on the rules, which first were proposed in 1975.

Commissioner Sam Kelley, Office of the Consumer Credit Commissioner, says the rules, if adopted, could affect the entire consumer credit sales industry — including banks, consumer finance companies, appliance retailers and auto dealerships.

Some of the proposals, Kelley notes, already are the law in Texas — such as prohibiting garnishment of wages.

But some other proposals go against current Texas law, Kelley says, and those provisions could cause problems.

In particular, he says, the proposed rules would prohibit the taking of household goods as collateral on loans, unless a "purchase money" security interest is involved (such as a department store selling a refrigerator and retaining an interest in it).

Also included is a provision that would bar attorney's fees, and would require lenders who repossess property to credit the debtor's account with the fair market value of that property.

That, Kelley says, would be a departure from Texas law, which provides that the property can be sold in a "reasonable commercial manner."

In other words, he reports, lenders would be required to reduce an account before any resale value might be established.

David Sapp, Texas Automobile Dealers Association, agrees it will put "an impossible burden" on auto dealers.

Automobiles, he says, don't have a "readily ascertainable market value" — something (Sapp adds) that courts have held.

"There are so many variables," Sapp reports, because a car may have physical or mechanical damage.

Sapp notes that "many years ago" it used to be the practice for dealers to credit only a nominal amount on a customer's account in cases of a repossession to establish a "huge deficiency" against a customer.

But that has been prohibited by the courts, Sapp says.

TADA will be at the hearing, Sapp says, to add oral testimony to the written objections the dealers filed two years ago on the proposals.

Leonard Passmore, counsel for the Texas Bankers Association, agrees with Kelley that the proposals may end up with banks having to put used car lots next door.

Passmore calls the proposed rule on repossessions "wholly impractical and unworkable," and says TBA also will be in Dallas to go on record against the rules.

Passmore also charges the provisions on attorneys' fees, saying that in cases of foreclosure, "it's not the lenders fault that foreclosure occurs . . . it's brought about by the borrower."

"Then," he says, "the lender is called on to hear the cost of something beyond his control."

Passmore feels some other provisions, such as requiring notices to co-signers on consumer obligations, along with requiring a three-day waiting period, will make it more difficult for consumers to get loan approvals when they want them.

While the FTC rules will apply to most lenders, others will fall under the same rules — but in the form of Federal Reserve Board regulations, since the Fed is proposing the same rules, Kelley says.

Although it's not known when the rules would go into effect, it's expected that it would be sometime early in 1978 — since the last of the four hearings will be in December.

UMW boss seeks to resolve strike

BY LARRY MARGASAK

WASHINGTON (AP) — United Mine Workers President Arnold Miller is heading for the coal fields to try to persuade some 66,500 wildcat strikers to heed his back-to-work orders.

If the miners continue to snub Miller, the union's executive board appears ready to deal harshly with the strikers, who are protesting cutbacks in union health benefits.

The national UMW contract and the union constitution permit suspension of officers, fines and expulsions for refusing the return-to-work directives. The board warned dissidents in a resolution Friday that they face such penalties.

Miller did not release details of his trip, but he's expected to visit West Virginia, where 50,000 angry miners have closed most of the state's mines. It was not clear whether Miller would visit other states.

Miller said in an interview that he planned to "clarify" the fund situation, and promised his members "factual statements about the position we're in now." He said he would purchase television time to make his point.

There were indications Friday that at least some West Virginia pickets are not ready to listen. Striking miners have said carloads of their fellow workers have gone to other states to try to spread the walkout. Some 10,000 miners were reported out in Kentucky, 1,500 in Ohio and 5,000 in Pennsylvania.

"Where there's coal running is where they're going," Larry Nibert, a member of the District 17 executive board in Charleston, W.Va., said of the carloads.

The resolution threatening penalties called the stoppages "a grave threat to the union, to the trust funds and to the ability of the union to bargain effectively with the coal operators ..."

This is the third time since September 1975 that the executive board has threatened to discipline wildcat strikers. No action has been taken, but one reliable source said the board was running out of patience.

The benefit reduction was caused by depletion of the health and pension trust funds, which have been hurt even more by the walkouts. The funds are financed by royalties on union-mined coal, so when a strike reduces coal tonnage, it also reduces contributions to the funds.

The UMW contract with coal operators provides that each company with a union contract contribute about $2 to the health and pension funds for each ton of coal mined.

The health cutbacks force each miner to pay the first $250 of hospital bills he incurs each year plus 40 per cent of his doctor bills. The cost to the miner, however, cannot exceed $500.

RUMORS, RUMORS, RUMORS

There's probably more rumor-mongering in real estate and building than in any other area of business. You hear them all the time...rumors about home prices; rumors about financing (easy or hard to get); rumors about interest rates (going up or down)...you name it, and there's sure to be a rumor going around to fit.

The rumors are usually highly ambiguous. You'll almost never hear actual figures used. If word is out that interest rates are "high", one's first reaction should be: "What is meant by high?" Sure, they're higher than they were years ago, but that still DOESN'T mean that they're out of everybody's reach. Translated into practical figures, people still can afford mortgages and monthly payments.

The point we're trying to make is NOT to make any decisions based on rumors; ignore the rumors and come and talk to us, even if you're just "toying" with the idea of buying or selling a home. We know the REAL present situation, and can advise you regarding your particular needs.

If you have any questions on this subject or any other aspect of real estate, feel free to phone or drop in at DON HARVEY realtors. 702 Andrews Hwy. Phone 683-5333. We're here to help! come in for your free copy of "Homes for Living" magazine.

Midlander explains beliefs of income tax 'rebels'

By GEORGE H. JOHNSTON

Frank Gilmer Jr. views himself as a patriot and rebel.

And like the patriots of two hundred years ago, Gilmer is fighting what he believes to be an unfair, unpopular and unconstitutional tax — the federal income tax.

Gilmer is a member of a local group called the United Tax Action Patriots (UTAP), and like hundreds of similar groups all over the country, they are fighting the income tax.

Basically, Gilmer said, the tax protest groups advocate the abolishment of the current graduated income tax because they believe the tax is unconstitutional.

"The U.S. Constitution does not provide for a graduated income tax and the current tax is not administered fairly, as the constitution says it should be," Gilmer said.

Furthermore, he said, the tax is a violation of First Amendment rights because the tax money is spent on purposes the protestors do not agree with, such as financing abortions, busing, welfare, foreign aid and Watergates.

Gilmer noted, however, that the protestors view the recent vote in Congress to abolish federal financing of abortions as a victory.

"It shows someone is making progress somewhere," he said.

"I don't believe we need an income tax," Gilmer said. "Maybe a sales tax where everyone pays the same tax would be good. If I refuse to pay the (income) tax, I am only guilty of keeping my own property."

Gilmer said the federal government was financially stable before the income tax was adopted and there is no reason why an income tax is needed now. "When the income tax began, government started to become bigger and bigger because they had more money," he said.

Gilmer also claims the economy would be aided if the income tax were abolished by giving consumers more spending power.

"If a $50 rebate was at one time believed to be able to help the economy, think of what no taxation at all would do," Gilmer said.

The tax protestors are also fighting what they believe to be unconstitutional acts of harassment by the Internal Revenue Service.

Gilmer said the constitution prohibits unreasonable search and seizure of a person's property, but he maintains that is exactly what the IRS has done on at least one occasion.

"The IRS can seize anything of yours they want without prior notice and warning," Gilmer maintained.

However, Marlene A. Gaysek, IRS public affairs officer for the Dallas District, said Gilmer's statement is not true.

"If he's referring to enforced collection, it's all done through established procedures mandated by Congress," Gaysek said.

Delinquent taxpayers, she said, receive four notices before any property is seized for nonpayment of taxes.

After it is determined that tax is due, Gaysek said, a notice is sent out and the tax must be paid in 10 days.

However, the IRS will work with a taxpayer if there is some problem in paying the tax.

"As long as they adhere to the agreement made with the IRS, we will work with them to get the tax paid," she said.

United Tax Action Patriots was first organized in 1975, Gilmer said, when several people, who "were opposed to big government and corrupt government," decided there was strength by banding together.

"We're not trying to defeat the income tax, the IRS or the government. We are trying to restore it (the Constitution) as the founding fathers set it up."

Fear of retaliation by the IRS forces the Midland tax group to be secretive about its operations, Gilmer said. He refused to give an exact number of persons in the group, saying only that the Midland group has less than 10,000, but more than 200 members.

"The IRS would love to know how many are in the group," he said.

To join UTAP, Gilmer said, a person must agree to support the organization and its purposes, and then be approved by UTAP's board of directors.

According to the group's manual, a person must pay $50 to join and $200 a year in dues.

Gilmer said 20 per cent of the dues goes to promotion of the group and the rest is fed into a trust fund for members who get into trouble with the IRS.

"UTAP's funds were used to pay lawyers and post bond in two recent tax cases tried in Midland's federal district court," Gilmer said.

After a person becomes a member, the tax patriots expect him to study the constitution and his rights, Gilmer said. "We also expect him to promote the group to his friends and associates."

Based on extensive studies of the constitution, the protestors profess to have developed methods, which they say are constitutional and legal, of avoiding the payment of income taxes.

Gilmer said he takes every available allowance on his W4 form, and as a result, no tax is withheld from his paycheck. Then, when filing time comes around, Gilmer said, he simply refuses to answer some of the return's questions on the grounds of self-incrimination.

"It's not so much that the questions are self-incriminating," Gilmer said, "but that it is no one's business how much I make, or how much I give to my church."

Other protestors simply refuse to file an income tax form saying that federal reserve notes are illegal because they are not backed by gold or silver.

Gordon Kahl, who not long ago was convicted of tax evasion, has reasoned that paying an income tax is "supporting the devil" and he "would go to hell" if he paid the tax, according to his lawyer, Lewis Terrell.

Terrell said Kahl said he believed the money goes to support Satan's projects in the government.

Meanwhile, some observers feel there is a split forming in UTAP.

"There is no split as such," Gilmer said. "At times there is a difference of opinion, but as far as a split, no."

"The board is made up of nine persons... and there is not always agreement, but it works far better."

"I think it is the strongest organization in the world. We're all close friends and trust each other," he said.

Because of recent convictions in Midland and other parts of the country, the organized protestors are beginning to believe lawyers are afraid to take tax cases, Gilmer said.

"We offered one lawyer $50,000 to win a case, yet he refused. That will show you they are afraid to take the tax cases," Gilmer held.

As a result of the lawyers' reluctance to take such cases, many tax protestors are representing themselves in court, he added.

"We know there are going to be casualties in this. There were casualties in the American Revolution. We're fighting them with the courts, not with guns."

Strike cripples blood deliveries

DETROIT (AP) — A walkout by Red Cross bloodmobile drivers that has crippled blood deliveries to Detroit area hospitals and forced postponement of all but essential surgery today entered its fourth day.

The strike, which one doctor called "a terrible situation," involves only 16 drivers who deliver blood from Red Cross collection centers to hospitals but has affected blood deliveries for 84 hospitals.

The Red Cross was flying in blood from other cities but the amount available was well below the usual 900 pints a day distributed in the five counties. Hospitals were trying to keep their blood banks full by setting up donation centers or asking employes to donate.

Dr. John Piligian, representing pathologists at several area hospitals, told a news conference Friday that hospital stays prolonged by the lack of blood were costing patients an estimated $1 million a day in the five metropolitan area counties served by the Red Cross here.

Integration May Come to Suburbs: An agreement to test methods of moving urban black families to the suburbs has recently been announced in a case which the U.S. Supreme Court told federal officials to find a way to remedy housing segregation in Chicago.

If successful, the program could be a model for breaking color barriers between cities and suburbs across the nation.

The experimental agreement, between federal officials and plaintiffs in the case, sets up a mechanism that officials hope will move about 1,000 families to suburban apartments over the next 18 months, said a spokesman for the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development. Under the agreement HUD will require that suburban developers seeking federal subsidies set aside apartments into which urban blacks can move. The federal Housing Administration also will give developers who set aside such space preferred treatment in handling mortgage insurance.

Chicanos Flay Carter's Plan on Illegal Aliens: five Chicano rights organizations recently charged that President Carter's program for dealing with illegal aliens "will not allay the fears of this nation's large Hispanic community that such legislation would have ominous and far-reaching consequences."

This is in essence the thinking of the Mexican-American Legal Defense Educational Fund (MALDEF), supported by the Hispanic Lawyers Association, the Mexican American Women's National Association and the National Council of La Raza.

The five year temporary legal status which would be given to aliens who came here between 1970 and 1977 would "perpetuate and expand" the social problems generated by the presence of "a silent subclass of undocumented workers," the Hispanics said.

In the meantime, on Capitol Hill in Washington, U.S. Rep. Herman Badillo, D-N.Y., has introduced legislation to provide "amnesty" for ever illegal alien here as of July 4, 1976.

Sonja Dunson, publisher-editor of "Black Hollywood" is a graduate of the University of Michigan. She won the title "Miss Michigan Universe" in 1967. In Black Hollywood, unknown entertainers will be promoted in addition to informing all blacks of employment opportunities and happenings in the industry.

On Black Press: "Black newspapers were very much in the eye of the storm of the 60's, pushing, probing, attacking, reporting much of the news that no one else would touch, fighting many of the battles that no one else would touch..On this, the 150th anniversary year of the Black Press, it is well to remember that what has given its strength and character over all these years, has been the people who worked in its vineyards." (James D. Williams in Dawn Magazine.)

Many of our bellringers are making preparations to attend the National Baptist Convention, Inc. in Miami, Fla., Sept. 6-11. Headed by the Dr. A. Jackson of Chicago, it is the largest black religious body in the world, representing some 12 million members.

Until later, be a good neighbor and Peace.

Littler keeps lead in PGA

By BOB GREEN
AP Golf Writer

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Gene Littler finally turned human and made a bogey but the quiet, self-contained veteran stretched his lead to a commanding four strokes Saturday as frustration and anger struck down his challengers in the third round of the PGA National Championship.

Littler, whose machine precision had taken him through two rounds without a bogey, made three of them this bright, sunny day and had to work hard for a two-under-par 70 and a 206 total.

(Results on 3-C)

THAT'S 10 ots under par for three rounds over the droughtdamanged but still beautiful 6,806-yard Pebble Beach Golf Links and four in front of the game's most famed and feared performer—Jack Nicklaus.

The usually-unemotional Nicklaus, who shot a two-under-par 70, cast an angered glance aloft—it was unclear whether toward the blue skies or a television tower—after making bogey on the 16th and angrily tossed his ball to caddy Angelo Argea following another bogey on the 17th.

HE FINISHED with a 210 total, six under par going to today's final round of the title he wants so desperately, a record-matching fifth PGA crown and one that would end his string of frustrations at the hands of Tom Watson.

Watson, who beat Nicklaus in dramatic, head-to-head confrontations in the British Open and Masters, finally got his own clubs back but could do no better than a 71 that left him six strokes back at 212.

Watson, who finally got his own clubs to play with, was tied with former U.S. and Canadian Open champion Jerry Pate, George Cadle, Lanny Wadkins and Dr. Gil Morgan. Pate shot a 69, Cadle and Morgan, a non-practicing optometrist, had 70s, and Wadkins matched par 72.

Jerry McGee, only two strokes out of the lead after 36 holes, hit one out of bounds and made triple bogey eight on the 14th hole. He finished with a 77 and 215.

Littler, who had been out of action with an aching back for six weeks coming into this, the last of the year's Big Four events, appeared poised to make a rout of it when he went four under par on his first seven holes and took a whopping five-stroke lead.

BUT HE scored his first bogey of the tournament on the eighth, and, Littler said, "It was something of a relief."

At one time or another, McGee and Cadle each got into second place, or a tie for second. Each fell victim to Pebble's subtle troubles, just as McGee had warned.

"The lady is asleep," he said Friday. "When she wakes up, and she will wake up, she'll be a different girl."

Seattle trips Dallas, 23-17

SEATTLE (AP) — Running back Don Testerman bulled into the end zone from two yards out with 13:45 remaining in sudden-death overtime to give the Seattle Seahawks to a 23-17 National Football League exhibition victory over the Dallas Cowboys Saturday night.

The Seahawks, now 2-0 in preseason play, marched 71 yards in three plays behind quarterback Jim Zorn for the go-ahead touchdown.

Zorn passed 37 yards to Sherman Smith on first down to the Dallas 34 and hit tight end Ron Howard with a 32-yard toss to the Cowboy two on the next play before Testerman's plunge.

Seattle had a chance to win in regulation play, but John Leypoldt's 27-yard field goal attempt was blocked by defensive end Ed Jones — his third blocked field goal of the game.

Dallas, now 1-1, had taken a 17-10 lead late in the third period when veteran safety Cliff Harris intercepted a Zorn pass and returned it 18 yards for a touchdown.

The Seahawks tied the score at 17-17 with 8:52 left in the game on reserve quarterback Steve Myer's 38-yard touchdown pass to Steve Largent. The scoring drive was set up by an interception by linebacker Charles McShane.

Cowboy reserve quarterback Danny White, who spelled starter Roger Staubach in the second half, hit running back Preston Pearson with a 23-yard scoring pass on the Cowboys' first possession of the second half for a 10-3 advantage. The Seahawks tied it three minutes later on Zorn's 37-yard scoring pass to former Dallas wide receiver Duke Fergerson on a fourth-down play.

Dallas took a 3-0 first-period led on

Houston teams flex muscles in tournament

Houston powers remained unscathed after three rounds of the Class A Regional Slow Pitch Softball Tournament at Hogan Park Saturday.

Houston's Roznovsky and Houston's Wheels both remain undefeated through Saturday's play, and both did so by beating teams from Austin in the third round.

Roznovsky escaped Austin's Abbey Inn by a 12-11 margin in a third round contest Saturday while the Wheels won a 27-24 conquest over Austin River City.

In late loser's bracket contests, Midland's Schlumberger defeated the Dallas Beggers, 17-8, but had another late contest against San Antonio Bun Saturday.

SAN ANTONIO won a 23-21 decision over San Antonio Abel and Corpus Christi Schlitz defeated Baytown Dot, 15-14, to stay alive. San Marcos was also alive early Saturday night after a 23-22 win over Corpus Christi Country Store.

The two Houston powers will tangle at 10 a.m. today in the battle of the only undefeated teams left in the tournament.

The championship final is set for 1 p.m. today, but if a team from the loser's bracket can win at 1 p.m., a second game will follow.

OPENING ROUND games saw plenty of home run punch by all of the 15 teams with the two Houston powers paving the way.

Schlumberger of Midland got off to a great start in whipping Country Store of Corpus Christi, 41-27 as the Tall City team blasted 14 homers. David Clingman clouted four round-trippers while teammates Harvey Kinchlow and Mike Pruitt added thee each. Other homers by Schlumberger were turned in by Rick Maroney, Don

Midland Seniors entering finals of MSA tourney

By PAUL DOMOWITCH

Midland rocked Hobbs, N.M., pitching for 15 hits Saturday, enroute to a 6-1 victory in the winner's bracket final of the Senior Division in the 1977 Miss Softball America Regional Tournament being held at Lancaster Park.

The Tall City team, which won the regional event last year, will now face the same Hobbs team today at 1:30 p.m. in the championship round of this double elimination tournament. Hobbs rebounded from its morning loss to Midland by downing Snyder, 5-3.

In the Major Division, Snyder and Hobbs will clash, also at 1:30 p.m. today to determine who will advance to the national event later this month in Richmond, Va.

MIDLAND CAME out swinging against Hobbs, and just never stopped, as C.A. Haskins and Kathy Moore led the 15-hit attack with two hits apiece. Both of Haskins' safeties were doubles.

Moore also picked up the pitching verdict, as she limited the New Mexico outfit to just four hits over the seven innings. Sharon Morgan was the loser.

The defeat dropped Hobbs into the loser's bracket, but they staved off elimination by rallying to defeat Snyder. Kandy Tindle was a one-girl show in the comeback victory, as she blasted two home runs and knocked in all of her team's runs with the out of the park blasts.

Tindle put her team out in front early with a two run homer in the first, but Snyder tied it in their half of the inning, and went ahead, 3-2, with a run in the fourth.

Snyder was still hanging on to that slim lead going into the last inning, before Tindle went into her act. Michelle Risinger walked, and one out later, Kym Varner singled. Then, with one swing of the bat, Tindle turned the one-run deficit into a 5-3 lead, which Barnwell made stand up.

SNYDER MANAGED just three hits off of Barnwell, and Karen Gonzales had two of them, both doubles.

Hobbs made it to today's meeting with Snyder for the Major Division title the hard way. They were beaten by Snyder in Friday's opening round, and fought their way up through the loser's bracket. They dumped Midland Blue late Friday, eliminated Midland Gold in a Saturday morning game, 7-3, and vaulted into the championship game with a 14-13 win over Denison late Saturday.

Kim Torrez was the winning pitcher against Denison, while Kerri Carter was tagged with the loss. Hobbs outhit Denison, 9-4 but the East Texas team took advantage of several Hobbs fielding miscues to almost pull it out. Hobbs was up 13-5 going into the sixth inning, but Denison struck for four in that frame and another four in the seventh to make it close.

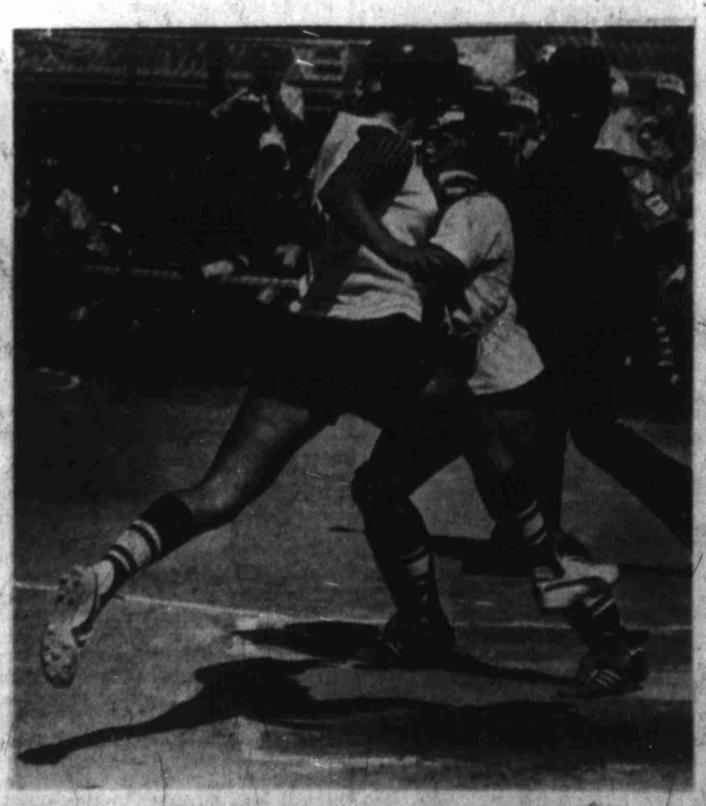
Karen Widman was the leading hitter for the winners with two hits, one of them a double. Kelly Roberts also had a double for Hobbs. Sharon Heironimus had a triple for Denison.

Sharon Westby was the starting pitcher for Hobbs, but she left early with an injury and was replaced by Mitzi Terrell, who lasted until the fourth, when Torrez took over.

DENISON WAS beaten earlier in the day by Snyder 2-1, in the final of the winner's bracket. They outhit the West Texas team, 5-4, but a costly error in the fifth gave Snyder the winning run. Latricia Pevahouse was the winning pitcher, while Kelly Hunt absorbed the loss.

Pevahouse, Connie Weber, Suzi Fisher and Billie Owens all had singles for Snyder, while Chris Turner led Denison in a losing cause with a triple.

HOBBS GOT a scare in an earlier loser's bracket game with Midland Gold, pulling it out in the last few innings. After jumping out to a 4-0 lead, Hobbs saw that cushion diminish as Midland battled back to make it 4-3. Singles by Teresa Stump, Karen Widman, Kelly Roberts and Kelly Presley sparked a three-run offensive in sixth to put the game out of reach.



Kathy Moore, Midland Senior Division All-Star pitcher, is off and running during Regional Miss Softball America Tournament at Lancaster Park. Miss Moore rests at third base before breaking towards home plate in game with Hobbs, N.M. All-Stars in game of unbeaten teams Saturday. She takes off from third and cautiously heads for home and scores run as catcher waits for throw from outfield. Midland won, 6-1, to go into today's finals unbeaten in the tournament. Dodgers rap Braves, 11-0

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Tommy John fired a four-hitter for his eighth straight victory and Ron Cey and Steve Yeager clouted three-run homers as Los Angeles riddled Atlanta 11-0 Saturday night.

John, 14-4, hurled his third shutout and second in a row in extending his string of scoreless innings to 22.

Cey slugged his 23rd homer in the first inning off loser Eddie Solomon, 3-2. Cey now has 93 runs batted in for the season, tops on the Dodgers.

Los Angeles used a throwing error by Atlanta catcher Vic Correll to score two runs in the second inning. The Dodgers increased their lead to 7-0 when Steve Garvey snapped a sevengame hitless streak with a single and scored on a triple by Rick Monday. Dusty Baker then drove in pinch-runner Glenn Burke with a sacrifice fly.

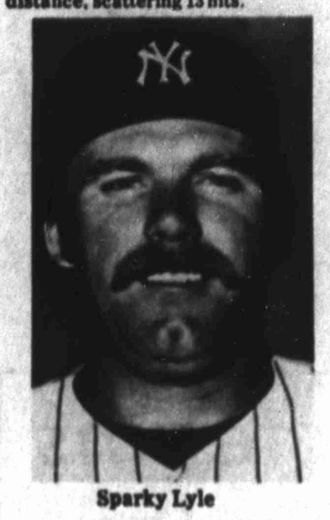
Midland Cubs whip Amarillo

AMARILLO — The Midland Cubs took their fourth straight game from Amarillo here Saturday night, as the Tall City team pounded out 13 hits enroute to a 9-4 verdict over the Gold Sox. It was the eighth win in the last nine games for the streaking Cubs, who maintained their slight hold on first place in the Texas League Western Division. Randy Martz, the rookie pitcher out of the University of South Carolina, who has pitched well in almost every one of his starts since joining the Tall City team, but hasn't gotten the hitting support from his teammates, got it Saturday, and notched his second win in four decisions. Martz went the distance, scattering 13 hits.



Sparky Lyle

The Cubs jumped out early, putting a pair of runs on the scoreboard in the second. Tony Pepper, who had three of the 13 Midland safeties, opened the inning off with a single, and scored shortly after on a double by shortstop Steve Davis. Scott Boras followed with a triple moments later to put the Cubs up 2-0.

Midland added three more in the fourth. A sacrifice fly by Duane Gustavson scored Davis, and with two on, Jim Buckner tripled up the left centerfield alley to score two more runs.

Amarillo touched Martz for a pair of runs in their half of the fourth, but the Cubs ripped Gold Sox pitching for yet another three in the fifth, and added an insurance run in the sixth to coast to victory.

The two teams will close out the five-game series today, with a single game on tap at 2 p.m. The Cubs will leave the Panhandle City immediately after the contest for El Paso, where they open another five-game set Monday night.

Millan out for season

NEW YORK (AP) — Felix Millan, the New York Mets' second baseman who suffered a fractured right collarbone in a Friday night fight with Pittsburgh's Ed Ott, also sustained a complete total separation of his right shoulder and will miss the rest of the season.

The Mets said surgery to repair the shoulder injury will be performed Sunday at Roosevelt Hopsital by Dr. James Parkes, their team physician.

The club said that, under the reacquisition rule, it will attempt to obtain utility infielder Leo Foster from its Tidewater farm team in the International League to replace the 34-yearold Millan, a 12-year major league veteran who has been with the Mets since 1973.

Foster, 26, released outright to Tidewater earlier this season, will have to clear waivers before be can rejoin the Mets. The team said he would be in New York next Friday at the earliest.

White Sox top Texas

ARLINGTON, Tex. (AP) — Richie Zisk hit a pair of solo homers, Eric Soderholm had a three-run double, and Chicago got strong relief pitching from Lerrin LaGrow in nipping the Texas Rangers 6-5 and moving back into first place in the American League West Saturday night.

LaGrow came on in the bottom of the eighth after the Rangers had scored two runs and had the bases loaded with only one out. He got Toby Harrah on a line drive to third for the second out and Jim Sundberg bounced into a force play, ending the inning.

Zisk hit his first home run in the second inning off Bert Blyleven, 11-11, and pumped his 25th homer into the left field seats in the eighth inning off Paul Lindblad for what proved to be the winning run.

Soderholm's blast came in the top of the fifth when the White Sox scored four runs for a 5-1 lead. The Rangers scored two runs in the bottom of the fifth on a two-run homer by Jim Sundberg, cutting the lead to 5-3.

The Rangers two more runs in the bottom of the eighth before LaGrow cut short the rally.

The winning pitcher was Steve Stone.

McBride's clout downs Chicubs

CHICAGO (AP) — Bake McBride's three-run homer in the 11th inning gave Philadelphia to a 10-7 triumph over the Chicago Cubs Saturday, extending the Phillies' victory string to 10 straight.

Ted Sizemore and pinch-hiter Ollie Brown drew walks off loser Dave Giusti before McBride slammed his 10th homer of the season. The Phillies had tied the game in ninth on a two-run pinch-hit homer by Dave Johnson after a double by Sizemore.

Jay Johnstone also added a two-run homer for the Phils in the eighth.

Manny Trillo and Bobby Murcer slugged home runs and Gene Clines doubled in two runs for Chicago.

Trillo's sixth homer of the year broke a 2-2 tie and triggered a three-run fifth inning in which Clines doubled after George Mittwerwald had reached on an error and Greg Gross on an infield single.

The Cubs tied it in the bottom of the fourth on successive triples by Gross and pitcher Ray Burris and a sacrifice fly by Ivan DeJesus.

Reliever Ron Reed, 7-4, got the victory while Giusti, 0-1, Chicago's fourth hurler, took the loss.

Philadelphia Manager Danny Ozark played the game under protest. Schmidt doubled to open the eighth and someone in the Cub bullpen may have touched the ball. Ozark insisted Schmidt should be awarded third but the umpires disagreed. Schmidt scored anyway on Johnstone's homer.

Hubbards take MCC lead

W. C. and Clayton Hubbard scored 102 points in the first round Saturday in the Midland Country Club Father-Son golf tournament to tie Buddy and Mark Branum for the first day lead.

Ed and Jeff Moses own 100 points in the championship flight along with Buddy and Kirk Branum and W. B. and John Newberry. Ken and Kelly Sewell own 98.

In the first flight, W. B. and Bill Newberry hold the edge with 91 points while Dr. Jake and Mike Shapira own 89 with Buddy Branum and John Kennedy.

W. L. and Ricky Goode own the third flight lead with 67 points while Charles and Bobby Cerf are tied with Walter and Stewart Laufer with 66. Roy and Carl Campbell are still in the race with 65.

Guerrero's base hit beats Yanks in 12th

NEW YORK (AP) — Mario Guerrero singled home the winning run off New York relief ace Sparky Lyle with two out in the 12th inning Saturday, giving the California Angels a 6-5 victory over the Yankees and making Nolan Ryan the first 17-game winner in the American League.

Dave Chalk drew a leadoff walk from Lyle in the 12th, was sacrificed to second and took third on Rance Mulliniks' long fly ball. Guerrero, who entered the game as a pinch-hitter in the eighth inning and ended both that inning and the 10th by stranding runners in scoring position, then ripped a single to center for the decisive run.

Ryan, 17-10, allowed nine hits, walked seven and struck out 11 before giving way to Mike Barlow in the 12th. It was the 100th time in his career that Ryan fanned 10 or more batters, extending his own major league record.

All the New York runs came in the first three innings. Four of the Yankees' runs were scored by players who had walked. Ryan fell behind in the first inning when he walked two batters and Chris Chambliss belted his 12th home run of the season.

The triumph tied Ryan with Philadelphia's Steve Carlton for the most victories in the major leagues this season. However, Barlow had to pitch out of a jam in the bottom of the 12th when Carlos May singled

Debbie Austin records hot 66 in Long Island

HAUPPAUGE, N.Y. (AP) — Debbie Austin, winner of three titles on the Ladies Professional Golf Association tour this year, took a major step towards a fourth on Saturday, shooting a 66, the best round of her career, in the $100,000 Long Island Charity Classic.

The 29-year-old Miss Austin, who turned pro in 1968, had a 54-total of 208 heading into today's final round at the par 72, 6,250-yard Colonie Hill Golf Club.

Miss Austin, playing out of West Palm Beach, Fla., held a two-stroke lead over Jane Blalock of Highland Beach, Fla., who carded a 70.

Nancy Lopez, a rookie from Roswell, N.M., was three under par at 69 for a three-round 211.

The field of 63, battling for a top prize of $15,000, was forced to suspend play for 55 minutes in the early afternoon because of a heavy rainstorm.

Betsy King of Limokiln, Pa., playing in her first tournament, dropped from the halfway lead into a three-way tie for sixth place with a three-over-par 75 for 213.

She was tied with Karolyn Kertzman of Sacramento, Calif., and Mary Lou Crocker of Louisville, Ky.

Hall of Famer Kathy Whitworth of Richardson, Tex., and Sandra Palmer of Palm Springs, Calif., shared fourth place at 212.

Miss Austin, who never won on the tour until this year, shot a 32 on the front nine and finished with a 34 in matching the 66 that her roommate, Sue Roberts, also of West Palm Beach, posted Friday.

"I have to give Sally Little (she had a 219) some credit for my play here," said Miss Austin, a graduate of Rollins College.

"She asked me if I saw myself on television in last week's European Open (at Berkshire, England). I hadn't and Sally told me that my backswing was great, but my down swing was terrible.

"My caddie (Ray Rash) told me the same thing. I shot a 79 that last day in England, so when we got here, I was intent on getting speed through the bottom of the ball."

Miss Austin, who had earlier rounds of 73 and 69, also mentioned former LPGA member Sherry Wilder of Palm Desert, Calif. for her new-found success this year.

Oilers facing Baltimore today

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Coach Bum Phillips figures it's easy to fool people some of the time—but he'll resist the urge toward trick plays today when his Oilers host Baltimore in a National Football League exhibition game.

"It's easy to fool somebody one week with a trick play," said Phillips, whose Oilers were dunked 40-0 Monday by Oakland. "But the next week they'll be waiting for it and you have to come up with another play. After a while you run out of 'fool 'ems' and you still haven't worked out your basic offense."

The Colts, who won the American Conference's Eastern Division title last year, also got off to a losing start last week with a 14-8 loss to Denver. The Colts were hampered by injuries with five starters missing the game.

Baltimore also has worked out so far without starting wide receiver Roger Carr and defensive end John Dutton, contract holdouts.

Injured players ready for action this week are tight end Raymond Chester, defensive end Fred Cook, offensive tackle George Kunz and backup linebacker Sanders Shiver. Middle linebacker Jim Cheyunski is expected to nurse his ailing knees another week.

Starting quarterbacks for both teams, Bert Jones for the Colts and Dan Pastorini for the Oilers, are expected to play the first half of the nationally televised game in the Astrodome.

Daniel captures Amateur crown

CINCINNATI (AP) — Beth Daniel used clutch putting Saturday to win her second National Women's Amateur Golf championship in three years with a 3 and 1 victory over Canadian rookie Cathy Sherk.

The 20-year-old Miss Daniel, a Furman University senior from Charleston, S.C., ended the scheduled 36-hole match with a 14-foot par putt on the 35th hole at Cincinnati Country Club.

Miss Daniel, the 1975 champion, admitted she overcame a bad case of nerves in foiling Mrs. Sherk's bid to become the eighth rookie in history to win the championship.

"I was a nervous wreck on the second 18. I wanted it so badly," said Miss Daniel, who succeeded Donna Horton White as champion.

"My putter just got hot. That was the key," said the tall collegian. Miss Daniel one-putted four times in a nine-hole stretch in the afternoon round and won each of those four holes. She also one-putted the 33rd hole for a par three that gave her a three-up lead with three holes remaining.

Mrs. Sherk then scored a spectacular eagle two on the 352-yard 34th hole. Her 130-yard approach shot took two bounces and dropped into the hole, cutting the margin to two-up with two holes left.

Both finalists missed the 35th green in two, but Miss Daniel sank her key putt to end the match. Mrs. Sherk had missed a par attempt from 18 feet.

Mrs. Sherk was trying to become the first foreign winner since Catherine Lacoste of France won in 1969. Marlene Stewart Streit, the 1956 winner, is the lone Canadian to win this championship.

Tigers win

DETROIT (AP) — Milt Wilcox fired a three-hitter over eight innings to raise his record to 4-0 and Detroit scored an unearned run in the fifth inning Saturday night as the Tigers defeated the Minnesota Twins 2-1.

Wilcox, purchased by the Tigers from their Evansville farm club June 25th, retired the first 10 Twins he faced before Roy Smalley singled in the fourth. Rod Carew singled Smalley to third and Lyman Bostock drove in the lone Minnesota run with a sacrifice fly.

Baseball meetings opening this week

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Proposed amendments that could alter the number of minor league clubs each major league is affiliated with are among the issues on the agenda of baseball's two-day summer meeting this week.

Also on the agenda for the meeting Wednesday and Thursday here are player tampering, performance bonuses, rules governing suspended players and dates for a new interleague trading period.

Until this year, inter-league trading had been confined to a period starting five days after the World Series ends and closing at the end of the annual winter meetings early in December.

A second inter-league period, running from Feb. 15 through March 15, was adopted last winner. But it has been proposed to change the period from March 1 to April 1 to give more time to make trades after teams have had time to evaluate players during spring training.

Two changes are proposed that deal with the support of minor league clubs by major league teams.

One would permit major league teams to reduce their obligations to Class AA clubs and substitute more instruction in complex training camps that would precede short regular seasons. All established clubs would be required to have one AAA team, one full season Class A team and at least one half of a Class AA team.

There would be an additional stipulation that any major league team not supporting a full-season Class AA team (as they now are required to do) also would support a short season Class A or rookie league team. This action would give major leage teams the flexibility of placing some players in a two-month training camp prior to the start of the short (June August) season.

The second amendment dealing with minor league affiliation would prevent major league organizations from withdrawing their connection with any minor league if that withdrawal would reduce the number of clubs in that league below six.

The tampering discussion on the agenda is expected to center on whether the baseball commissioner may take away draft choices from a team found guilty of tampering with another team's player.

That right was placed in question this year when U.S. District Court Judge Newell Edenfield upheld Commissioner Bowie Kuhn's suspension of Atlanta Braves' owner Ted Turner. But the judge said Kuhn could not take away Atlanta draft choices because there was no provision for such a penalty in the major league bylaws.

Kuhn ruled that Turner "did not act in the best interests of baseball" when he suggested before the free agent draft that he would sign San Francisco outfielder Gary Matthews with the Braves.

Former Cub paces A's

BALTIMORE (AP) — Rookie Jerry Tabb former Midland Cub, drilled two singles and a double, driving in four runs and pacing Oakland to a 9- 6 victory over Baltimore than ended the A's club record losing streak at 14 consecutive games.

Manny Sanguillen and Tim Hosley also had two RBIs each as the A's built a 7-0 lead and then held off a late Baltimore comeback. The loss ended a five-game Baltimore winning streak and dropped the Orioles 2½ games behind Boston in the American League East.

Tabb's last two RBIs came in the ninth inning supplying some insurance after the Orioles had cut Oakland's lead to 7-5.

Langford pitched effectively for six innings but left with three runs in and two men on base in the seventh. He was relieved by Bob Lacey, who pitched into the ninth inning when Lee May belted his 18th home run and Dave Skaggs had a double.

Lauda on pole

ZELTWEG, Austria (AP) — Austrian Ferrari driver Niki Lauda of Austria clinched pole position and reigning world champion James Hunt of Britain, in a McLaren, got the outside front row position Saturday in trials for sunday's Grand Prix of Austria Formula One race.

Lauda"s best lap time of 1 minute 39.32 seconds, set on Friday, survived a strong challenge from Hunt and Mario Andretti of Nazareth, Pa., in Saturday"s practice.

Houston teams showing power

Smith, Dale Mansfield and David Hemenway.

Paul Hartzel ripped three for Country Store while James Busby also had three homers and Bobby Jacobi two. Norris Bennett and Dennis Polk also homered.

Roznovskys opened tourney play with an impressive 46-13 victory over the San Marcos Squirrels with Jeff Sendt and Rusty Bartel smacking four homers each and Larry Caldwell hitting three more. If that wasn't enough muscle, Mark Yabnke also had three homers.

NOT ONLY did Roznovskys score 46 runs, but also had a total of 46 hits.

San Marcos had beaten the Dallas Begger's Club, 26-20 earlier in the day with the Squirrels pounding out 31 hits.

Clay Roland, Bud Meeks, Cliff Adair, Tommy William and Celester Collier all bomered for San Marcos.

River City of Austin beat Baytown Dot Construction, 19-14 in its opener and then posted an easy 17-3 win over Abel's of San Antonio.

ROY TURNER blasted three homers for River City and Ted Bond added another in the 17-3 rout of Abel's Body Shop.

Austin Abbey Inn also won a pair of early games, beating Fort Worth Pallett, 21-15 and Corpus Christi Schlitz Gusto, 18-13 third to move into the round against Roznovskys.

Houston Wheels and Austin River City were the other two und undefeated teams going into the quarterfinal round.

Abel's had beaten Irving, 22-6, in the first round with 27 hits while Country Store came back to down Fort Worth's Coyotes, 25-21, to stay alive.

Wheels of Houston got home run mileage out of Sam Pitcock, Paul Flemming, Kim Bradshaw, Bob Harrison, Marvin Doherty and Don Ruggles against Schlumberger.

Harrison went six-for-six at the plate which included five homers. Doherty slammed three along with Flemming.

Wheels had already posted a 24-4 victory over Fort Worth Coyotes in the first round with Flemming hitting two homers and Doherty two. Harrison also chipped in with a homer.

The Schlitz Gusto team from Corpus edged past San Antonio Bun, 13-11 in the first round while Abbey Inn of Austin got homer power from Wertz, Buster White, Yocum and Read in its 21-15 win over Fort Worth Pallett.

SWC teams face tough foes in 1977 season

By The Associated Press

Southwest Conference football teams, facing one of their toughest intersectional schedules in 63 years and what is expected to be another rugged championship race, begin fall practice this week.

Defending co-champion Houston and Baylor open practice Tuesday with the other seven teams reporting Thursday.

Included on the nine schedules are five of last season's top ten teams and 12 bowl selections, headed by secondranked Southern Cal and thirdranked Michigan.

Other top ten finishers from the 1976 campaign ready to battle the SWC are Oklahoma (5), Ohio State (6), and Nebraska (7). Other bowl participants include Oklahoma State, Tulsa, Kentucky, UCLA, Penn State and Florida.

There will be three new head coaches on the scene, Lou Holtz at Ar.. ansas, F.A. Dry at Texas Christian and Fred Akers at Texas.

In opening games Sept. 10, Texas Tech is at Baylor in a SWC clash at 4 p.m.; Texas hosts Boston College at 4 p.m.; Kansas is at Texas A&M at 4 p.m.; New Mexico State is at Arkansas at 7:30 p.m., Idaho is at Rice at 7:30 p.m. and SMU is at TCU in another SWC game at 4 p.m.

Gophers win over Chonkok

SEOUL (AP) — David Whiteford and Steve Nelson teamed for a six-inning no-hitter and shortstop Ron Barnes hit a home run to lead the Minnesota Little Gophers a 6-1 victory over Seoul's Chonkok Elementary School Saturday.

Barnes' leadoff homer in the fifth inning was followed by consecutive doubles by center fielder Jeff Kaupa, third baseman Shean Soderberg and left fielder Chuck Howerton for two more runs in the opener of their series.

Chiefs upend Steelers by 23-21

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Veteran Jan Stenerud booted a 29-yard field goal with 18 seconds left, giving the Kansas City Chiefs a 23-21 victory over the Pittsburgh Steelers Saturday night in an error-filled National Football League exhibition game.

Stenerud's kick, his third of the game, came shortly after rookie Laverne Smith had given the Steelers the lead with a 10-yard touchdown run.

Pittsburgh got the ball again after Stenerud's third field goal, but Kansas City's Gary Barbaro ended the Steelers' final hope for victory by intercepting a Mike Krusczek pass as the clock ran out.

The Steelers gained an early 14-0 lead on a one-yard run by quarterback Terry Bradshaw, and a seven-yard scoring pass from Bradshaw to Frank Lewis in the opening period.

Jets win, 17-2

ATLANTA (AP) — Tommy Marvaso's 20-yard interception return set up a second period touchdown and Richard Todd engineered a third-quarter field goal drive as the New York Jets snapped a two-game losing streak with a 17-2 National Football League exhibition victory over the Atlanta Falcons Saturday night.

It was a rather sloppily played game, with both teams hurting themselves with costly penalties throughout the contest.

Simpson rolling

BUFFALO (AP) — O.J. Simpson, apparently not bothered by blurred vision, scored two touchdowns Saturday night, leading the Buffalo Bills to a 17-10 triumph over the Detroit Lions in a National Football League preseason game.

The victory was the first for Coach Jim Ringo, who watched the Bills lose nine in a row after he took over the team last October and last week's preseason game at Pittsburgh.

Saints surprise

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Quarterback Archie Manning scored on a one-yard run and backup signal caller Bobby Douglass tossed a 72-yard touchdown pass to Paul Seal Saturday night leading the New Orleans Saints to a 23-7 victory over the New York Giants in a National Football League preseason game.

Playing the first half of the game, Manning hit on 8 of 15 passes and ran four times for 19 yards. His touchdown run capped a 71-yard drive in the waning minutes of the first half.

Bengals in romp

CINCINNATI (AP) — Quarterback Ken Anderson shredded Tampa Bay's youthful secondary, hitting 14 of 17 passes for 177 yards in the first half, to power the Cincinnati Bengals to a 45-0 preseason National Football League victory Saturday night.

The defeat was the 19th in a row for the expansion Bucs.

Anderson opened the game with seven straight completions, keying a 120-yard first-quarter passing performance to spark Cincinnati to a 31-0 halftime lead.

Miami winner

MIAMI (AP) — Tim Foley intercepted a pass and recovered a fumble to set up two second-half touchdown passes by quaterback Don Strock Saturday night, leading the Miami Dolphins to a 27-15 preseason game over the Washington Redskins.

With the score tied 6-6 in the third quarter, Foley intercepted a Joe Theismann pass and returned it to the Washington 35. Miami then moved the ball 10 yards before Strock looped 25-yard touchdown pass to Nat Moore.

Strock came back in the fourth quarter to break up a 1313 tie with a 57-yard drive. The Dolphins score came when Gary Davis tallied from the five-yard line.

Denver rugged

DENVER (AP) — Veteran Jim Turner converted all five of his field goal attempts and the Denver defense held St. Louis scoreless until the final quarter, leading the Broncos to a 15-7 victory over the Cardinals Saturday night in a National Football League preseason game.

The victory boosted Denver's exhibition record to 2-0 and made the Cardinals 0-2.

Two of Turner's kicks followed Cardinals' turnovers as the Broncos dominated.

St. Louis' points came when Wayne Morris broke free on a 67-yard scoring run with 6:14 remaining.

Bears top Raiders

OAKLAND (AP) — Randy Burks caught a 60-yard touchdown pass from quarterback Mike Phipps with 1:38 remaining in the game to give the Chicago Bears an upset 20-13 victory over the Oakland Raiders Saturday night.

With a first down at his own 40 following an Oakland punt, Burks streaked down the right sideline past rookie cornerback Mike Davis, caught Phipps' pass going full stride on the Raider 20 and scored untouched.

The Bears had tied the game on Walter Payton's two-yard run early in the fourth quarter. The extra point failed because of a low snap from center.

Chargers win

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Joe Washington scored two touchdowns, leading the San Diego Chargers to a 32-13 National Football League preseason victory over San Francisco's winless 49ers Saturday night.

Washington, a second-year running back from Oklahoma who was sidelined last season with a knee injury, scored in the second period on an 89-yard punt return and on a three-yard run in the fourth quarter.

The 49ers took a 10-0 lead 44 seconds into the second quarter on a five-yard pass from Jim Plunkett to Jim O'Bradovich after Steve Mike-Mayer booted a 36-yard field goal late in the opening period.

Vikings escape

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (AP) — Rick Danmeier's 30-yard field goal as time expired lifted the Minnesota Vikings to a 34-33 National Football League exhibition victory over the Cleveland Browns Saturday night.

Danmeier, who has been trying to make the Vikings for the last three years, was given a second chance on the field goal following a Cleveland penalty for illegal use of hands. Danmeier, who played at Sioux Falls, S.D., College, narrowly missed a 35-yard try with just three seconds left.

Bob Lee, who played the entire game at quarterback for Minnesota, moved the Vikings 62 yards in one minute, 28 seconds to set up the game-winning score.

The Vikings, now 2-0 in the preseason, wiped out a 33-24 deficit in the final 4:10.

TEE TIME

Buffalo Trail Tourney

By REX WORRELL

The second annual Buffalo Trail Council Boy Scouts' Pro-Am golf tournament, which is scheduled for Monday Aug. 29, has only two more morning tee time spots open for professionals and only three more afternoon spots left.

There is still plenty of room for Permian Basin amateurs in the tournament, and we encourage all area golfers to phone the golf shop, or come by and sign up fom the t.

The format for the tournament is one low ball of foursome with one-half handicap. The entry fee is $25 per person with deadline for entry set Aug. 22.

THE FOLLOWING payoffs are based on 34 four-man teams. The first place team will receive $700, second place $600, third place $400, fourth place $300, fifth place $200, sixth, seventh and eighth places $100. The professional pot is $1,000, paying eight places.

The Hogan Park Men's Golf Association will hold a two-man best ball partnership for members on Sept. 3 through Sept. 5. The entry fee will be $30 per team plus green fees. The field will be limited to the first 60 teams entered. The final 18 holes will be flighted from scores turned in on the first 36 holes played.

All entry fees will be returned in prizes and four places will be paid in each flight. There will be a free feed for all association members and a guest on Sept. 3, but children will be charged. Refreshments during the tournament will be provided.

ENTRY DEADLINE is Aug. 31 at 6 p.m. Entry forms are available at Hogan Park golf shop.

The Hogan Park Women's Golf Association held a Point System Thursday, and Frances Stahl won the nine-hole flight with 19 points. There was a tie for second place between Betty Williams and Annelle Mack with 16 points each.

The 18-hole division winner was Cheryl SLarcevich with 45 points. Second place ended in a three-way tie with Joyce Parker, Merla Ketner and Dottie Turk all posting 35 points. Chata Mee took third place while Sandy Wilkerson was fourth.

Cincy defeats San Francisco

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Johnny Bench's bases-loaded fluke triple on a ball lost in the sun by right fielder Jack Clark in the ninth inning lifted the Cincinnati Reds to a 3-1 victory over the San Francisco Giants Saturday.

Jim Barr, 11-9, entered the ninth with a three-hit shutout but was lifted after two-out singles by Ken Griffey and Joe Morgan. Griffey's hit was a bunt down the third base line and Morgan's was a blooper to center.

Dale Murray, 6-2, was the winner.

Barr retired the first 10 Reds and did not allow a hit until Cesar Geronimo grounded a single to right with one out in the fifth.

New York Mets blank Pirates

Duffy Dyer drove home the winning run and Jerry Reuss fired a seven-hit shutout as the Pittsburgh Pirates defeated the New York Mets 2-0 Saturday night.

Gonzalez started in left field for Pittsburgh, subbing for Al Oliver, whose four-day suspension began Saturday night. Oliver was suspended for bumping umpire Bruce Froemming in a game against Chicago Tuesday night.

Both Reuss and Mets' starter Jon Matlack, 6-13, pitched six scoreless innings before the Pirates scored the winning run in the seventh. With one out, Fernando Gonzalez singled to right field and came home on Dyer's double down the left field line. Dyer also singled home the Pirates winning run in the second game of

Reuss raised his record to 8-11, as the Pirates won their fourth straight over the Mets and their 19th in their last 20 games at home.

Reuss, who walked one and struck out four, scattered six hits en route to his first shutout of the year.

IRUMA, Japan (AP) — Japanese marksmen beat Canadian sharpshooters in the 1977 Japan International Trap Shooting Championship Saturday.

John Primrose, 1975 world men's trap shooting champion and winner of the 1977 Benito Juarez International Trap Shooting Championship in Mexico, was tied for second place with Japan's Masao Ohara with 93 points out of a possible 100 after the first day shooting.

Susan Nattrass, 1974-75-world ladies clay pigeon shooting champion, was in sixth place with 90 points and young Gary Nattrass was 19th spot with 83 points. The three Canadians are from Edmonton, Alta.

Strebel takes Buffalo lead

CHEEKTOWAGA, N.Y. (AP) — Second-year pro Todd Strebel of Monroe, N.Y., averaged 231 Saturday and took the lead after one round of the $60,000 Buffalo Open Professional Bowlers' Association Tournament.

The second six-game qualifying session at Thruway Lanes was to be held Saturday night.

Strebel, 18, had a six-game pinfall of 1,386 in opening a 25-pin lead over Tom Wright of Milbrae, Calif., while Joe Berardi of New York was another pin back, in third place.

Strebel, 153rd on this year's money list, with $2,011, rolled games of 258, 257, 226, 245, 184 and 216 in grabbing the lead for the first time in his career.

Wright averaged 227 for his six games in finishing with a pinfall of 1,361. Berardi was third with a 1,360 pinfall.

Connors captures tennis win

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Defending champion Jimmy Connors overpowered Australian Phil Dent 6-3, 6-1 Saturday to move into position for his third U.S. Clay Court men's singles title.

Connors meets Spain's Manuel Orantes, who won here in 1973 and 1975, in the battle for the championship Sunday.

Orantes, seeded second behind Connors, avenged a recent Davis Cup loss to Hungary's Balazs Taroczy in the other semifinal, 6-3, 5-7, 6-3.

South Africans Linky Boshoff and Ilana Kloss battled Mary Carillo of New York and Wendy Overton, of Boca Raton, Fla., for the women's doubles crown Saturday night.

Connors jumped to a 4-0 advantage in the opening set and the Australian broke his service only once.

Connors repeated his performance in the second set, winning the first four games before Dent held service. Connors then held his service and broke Dent's to win the match.

Fallins lead RHCC tourney

Kirt and Wendall Fallin recorded 102 points Saturday to take a one-point lead after the first day of the Ranchland Hill Country Club's Father-Son golf tournament.

Joel Mayes and Mike Mahan hold second with 101 points while John and Shane Berry and Bill and Jeff Hull are tied with 99 points in the 13-up point division.

In the handicap division, John and Robert Scroggin own a 135 for the lead while Elmer and David Brimberry are knotted with Bill and Jeff Hull at 137.

In the nine-hole division, Al and Reece Boudreaux own the lead in the point and handicap divisions with 42 points and a handicap of 72.

Bill and Rusty Owens own 30 points while the teams of Jack and Brian Hunnicutt and John and Pepper Berry have 29. The Owens team also owns a 72 in the handicap along with Paul Haskins and Ken Carpenter for a three-way tie with the Boudreauxs.

Royals topple Toronto by 5-3

TORONTO (AP) — Home runs accounted for all but one of Kansas City's runs with Tom Poquette's two-run shot in the eighth providing the winning margin as the Royals defeated the Toronto Blue Jays 5-3 Saturday night.

After a leadoff double by John Mayberry in the eighth, Poquette jumped on Jim Clancy's 1-0 serving and powered it over the right center field fence for his second homer of the year.

George Brett hit an inside the park homer in the third with none on and Darrell Porter added a solo shot in the sixth in support of Paul Splittorff, 10-6, who gave up three runs on 10 hits over seven innings.

Doug Bird blanked the Blue Jays over the final two innings to earn his fourth save of the season and second in as many nights.

Clancy, 1-3, was touched for all five Royal runs on nine hits before giving way to Pete Vuchovich with one out in the eighth.

Milwaukee topples Cleveland by 6-1

CLEVELAND (AP) — Don Money cracked a pair of solo home runs and Cecil Cooper slammed a two-run homer as the Milwaukee Brewers defeated Cleveland 6-1 Saturday, snapping the Indians' four-game winning streak.

Money homered in the second inning off Cleveland starter and loser Jim Bibby, 9-9. The Brewers made it 4-0 in the fourth as Jim Wohlford led off with a double, Cooper smashed his 16th homer of the season with one out and Money followed with a long drive to left, his 18th homer of the year.

Caldwell, who gave up singles in in the sixth to Duane Kuiper and another in the seventh to Andre Thornton, was knocked out of the game in the ninth when he walked Frank Duffy, hit Kuiper with a pitch and gave up a single to Buddy Bell, scoring Kuiper.

Bosox nab easy 13-6 triumph

BOSTON (AP) — Carl Yastrzemski launched a scoring parade with his 20th homer of the season and George Scott, Butch Hobson and Dwight Evans added consecutive shots in a seven-run sixth inning Saturday to lead the Boston Red Sox to a 13-6 victory over the Seattle Mariners.

The Red Sox unloaded against starter Bob Galasso, 0-2, after the young right-hander had retired eight consecutive batters and had one out in the sixth.

Carlton Fisk fouled out, but Scott lined a tremendous shot over the screen in left-center to tie the score 4-4. It was his 28th homer of the season.

Hobson followed with another blast to the same area for his 22nd homer, shelling Galasso. Evans greeted reliever Enrique Romo with his 12th homer. The Red Sox went on to score three more runs in the sixth and four more in the seventh.

Boston starter Ferguson Jenkins, 9-7, allowed nine hits, including a three-run homer by Skip Jutze and a solo blast by Dan Meyer in eight innings. Bill Campbell finished, coming on in the ninth, surrendering a homer to Steve Braun.

Patkin not laughing on inside

Max Patkin's job is to make people laugh. But the goosenecked, rubber-faced comedian doesn't enjoy that job as a baseball clown.

"It's a lonely, lousy life, always traveling by yourself," he lamented. "It's the travel that kills me."

Patkin, 57, has been entertaining baseball audiences for 31 years. Now the thrill is gone. For one thing, his act seldom changes. He fills in the blanks of a script before the game and gives it to the public address announcer.

The act is pure slapstick. He wears a too-tiny baseball glove. He dances. He shows the home team how to hit until the umpire throws him out of the game.

He covers himself with dirt in the third base coaching box. On cue, one of the players dumps a bucket of water on him.

He trips the first base runner who gets a walk. In his catching routine, he calls a conference with the pitcher and lays a wet kiss on the pitcher's ear.

It's all in the script—but the crowd doesn't seem to know the difference and probably wouldn't mind if it did.

"I've been trying to quit for the last seven or eight years," the recently divorced Patkin said. Why doesn't he? The money, of course, ranging from $200 to $500 per appearance. This season he has booked 75 of them.

While he may not enjoy his job, he's proud of his record. "In 31 years of one-nighters, I've never missed a performance. That's over 4,000 performances covering four million miles," he said.

BOWLING BEAT

Jamieson tops play

By RANDY ISENBERG

Jeff Jamieson's 234 game and 614 series, while bowling in the Adobe Oil League, was the leader among scores turned in this past week.

Carla McCarroll rocked out a 236 game, however, to add excitement for the week. The game was her personal high.

League sanction kits will be handed out to all league officers Monday at 7:30 p.m. at Air Park Lanes in the city association meeting by Howard Shelton, secretary of the Midland Bowling Association. The association is the local governing organization of sanction league play in Midland for Mixed and Men's leagues.

NORETTA LIVERGOOD, secretary of the Midland Women's Bowling Association, invites all officers of women's leagues to pick up sanction kits at 802 Powell between 6 p.m. and 10 p.m. Monday through Friday, or call 694-1319.

ON THE LEAGUE FRONT:

Monday Youth: Greg Collins, 159.

Thursday Youth: Diego Maldonando, 145-115, bowling in his first league.

Tuesday Night Ladies: Carla McCarroll, 236.

Texas Southern coach honored

FORT WORTH, Tex. (AP) — Robert Moreland, who coached Texas Southern to the NAIA bsketball tournament championship, has been named Senior College Coach of the Year by the Texas Sports Writers Association.

Moreland drew 42 first place votes and 501 points in the preferential balloting to beat out basketall coach Guy Lewis of the University of Houston.

Lewis, whose team advanced to the NIT finals before losng, had 25 first place votes and 469 points.

Other nominees were track coach Ted Banks of Texas at El Paso, whose indoor team finished second in the NCAA Championships.

Gretel II will undergo some new changes

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP) — Gretel II of Australia will undergo "fine tuning" changes that included "new sails, running rigging, tools and several other things we can fiddle with," Alan Payne, designer of the 12-meter America's Cup challenger, said Saturday.

Payne, however, denied rumors that 1,000 pounds of ballast would have to be taken off the boat to offset the weight of new racing sails.

"No," he said. "Where did you hear that? We are rearranging our gear for measurement purposes, but that won't amount to more than 300 pounds at the most, and maybe no ballast adjustment at all.

"In any case, the total weight of the boat will remain exactly the same," he said. "We are trying to improve the performance of the boat. We may surrender some ballast."

The crew of Gretel II took advantage of a day off Saturday to make the changes. Four foreign boats—Gretel II, Sweden's Sverige, France I and the new Australia—currently are in the foreign elimination semifinals. Australia leads France I 2-0 in their best-of-seven series, and Gretel II and Sverige are tied 1-1. Racing resumes Sunday, weather permitting.

There also was a development at the French dock, where official spokesman Bruno Bich said that George Twist, a North American star class sailing champion from California, would aid the French syndicate in sailing tactics.

However, Bich, son of Baron Marcel Bich who owns the 12meter yacht France I, said a decision would not be made until Sunday whether Twist would actually be added to the crew.

Payne said all changes to Gretel would be made in the presence of Bob Blumenstock, official measurer for the New York Yacht Club, which oversees America's Cup racing. "We throw things on and off the boat while the measurer rides around in a dinghy and checks the flotation lines," Payne said.

The weight and measurement of the 12-meter yachts became a touchy subject in Newport when a story broke several months ago that Courageous, the 1974 defender, may have been too light when she defended the Cup. Courageous, and two other American boats, are back to try again. The matter became one for speculation only when Ted Hood, skipper of Courageous' sister yacht Independence, redesigned Courageous and changed her flotation lines.

"I hope you've got this very clear in your mind, now," Payne said, "that once the boat is weighed and flotation lines are established, it never has to be weighed again unless the hull is changed. As long as she floats along the same lines, the weight cannot have changed."

All four foreign challengers were in the water Saturday, along with two of the American boats, Independence and Courageous. Enterprise was hauled out for some bottom work and painting and will be put in the water again Sunday.

American trials resume Aug. 16. The defender and challenger each will be chosen by Sept. 8, and the best-of-seven Cup final begins Sept. 13.

The Enterprise glides in for a perfect landing at Edwards Air Force Base in California after its first free-flight test. Two planes carrying observers land in background.

New space era dawning

By PETER J. BOYER

EDWARDS AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. (AP) — In a five-and-a-half minute soaring glide over the California desert, a craft called Enterprise ushered America into a new space era — one in which man's space ventures not only will fascinate him but will work for him.

With astronauts Fred Haise and Gordon Fullerton at the controls, the space shuttle popped off the back of its Boeing 747 mother ship on Friday, burst through high-hanging clouds and roared safely to rest in a storm of dust. It was the first time the space bus for the 1980s had ever flown on its own.

For many of the thousands of persons who came to this desert base northeast of Los Angeles to watch the chunky craft test its wings, the Enterprise seemed to represent science fiction come true. The craft, named after the ship in the popular television show "Star Trek," can perform its space chores and return to Earth for reuse.

The shuttle, which will eventually carry scientists on flights into Earth orbit, was lugged to a four-mile altitude by the 747 before it was released for its test flight and landing.

When the shuttles begin making flights to outer space in 1979, they will blast off from Earth like rockets, using their own engines and supplementary engines that will be shed after launch and salvaged for later use.

When Haise, 43, and Fullerton, 40, eased the shuttle down on a dry lake bed runway, cheers erupted and everywhere there was talk of the space shuttle's promise.

California Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. spoke of the shuttle as a means to use outer space to aid an Earth running out of resources.

Brown, who has the reputation of a fiscal conservative and whose state is benefiting from having Rockwell International Corporation of California as the main contractor for the shuttle, said the $2 billion spent to put the Enterprise aloft was well worth it.

Perhaps Carl Sagan, Cornell University astronomer and NASA's most persuasive salesman, put the shuttle in clearest perspective: "The shuttle is putting the human presence in orbit around the Earth," Sagan said. "And utilizing space for human needs."

The shuttle is the first spaceship that can land like a plane and make regular trips in and out of space. It will be able to repair satellites, hasten the development of a system that will shoot energy from space to Earth and will aid in exploring other planets in the solar system.

For Fred Haise, there was a more personal meaning in the success of the Enterprise. Haise was aboard Apollo 13 in 1970 when the spacecraft had to turn back from the moon after an explosion in mid-voyage. Three years later he escaped death when a plane he was flying crashed and burned short of a runway in Texas.

"It is for me, a long time waiting," Haise said. "My last flight was Apollo 13, which was, of course, a great mission. It was great to get back, but it left me with a taste that something didn't go right.

Worm cookery wins cash prize for schoolteacher

By JULES LOH
AP Special Correspondent

BAYONNE, N.J. (AP) — If nobody loves you and everybody hates you and you guess you'll go eat worms, give Lynn Remisovsky a call. As worm chefs go, she's as good as you'll find.

Lynn's favorite worm recipe has brought her fame and fortune. Friends who have tried it rave.

"We eat snails, why not worms? I'll bet you wouldn't even know you were eating worms if you weren't told. Don't worry, I always tell."

Not long ago Lynn's worm cookery won first prize in a contest held by a California worm farm. More than 2,000 recipes were entered, if you can swallow the company's count. Lynn won with her tasty Quiche Lorainne avec Ver de Terre. If you live in Paris, a worm is a ver de terre.

(If you live in Worms, a worm is a Wurm and is pronounced vurm. Worms is where, in 1521, Martin Luther defended his doctrines before the diet, the Diet of Worms.)

"I don't know if I'd recommend worms as a steady diet," Lynn Remisovsky said, slicing a wedge of quiche, "but did you know worms are 73 per cent protein and low in cholesterol? These little black spots are the worms. They're crumbled up. The things on top are the onions, they just look like worms.

"I have some cooked worms here in the icebox. See, they look like bacon, don't they? Would you like to try the quiche?

Thank you, Lynn, but no, and no, they don't look like bacon. If they look like anything they look like old shoelaces but mainly they look like burnt worms. Do you have any other intriguing worm lore?

"The worm farm that ran the contest put 20 million worms on a 42-ton pile of garbage. In two days the odor was gone because the worms had eaten all the organic matter, and in eight weeks the garbage was gone. Worms eat twice their body weight each day."

Lynn's consuming interest, beg your pardon, in worms came after she won the contest. The prize was $500. Before then she had no particular appetite for the subject; now she collects all the information she can, um, dig up.

Otherwise Lynn Remisovsky is perfectly normal. She is an attractive woman of 31 with deep brown eyes and ash blond hair, a schoolteacher.

When her first-grade pupils heard about her prize-winning worm recipe they all wanted to taste it. Lynn declined, but graciously invited their parents for a tasting. None came.

"I brought some in for the other teachers, though. They liked it. The truth is, the worms don't change the taste at all.

"The way all this began, I saw a little item in the paper about the contest. I already had this good recipe for quiche Lorainne, really delicious, and decided to enter just for fun, maybe get my name in a recipe book. I didn't even know about the prize.

"All I did was add worms to the recipe. I figured 16 per pie was a good number, I dug them out of the garden, big red ones, boiled them three or four times until the water stayed clear, put them on a cookie sheet and stuck them in the oven.

"When the quiche was done I talked myself into eating it, and did, and sent the recipe off to the contest. I had completely forgotten about it when they called to tell me I was a finalist and later to tell me I had won.

"Now I can see all sorts of possibilities — cookies with worms instead of chocolate chips, oatmeal cookies with worms instead of raisins, worms crumbled on salad instead of bacon ..."

Enough. But could someone worm out of you that good recipe for quiche Lorainne?

Midlander delighted by Finland summer

Editor's Note: Teena Kirby is a Youth for Understanding Exchange student. She is spending her summer in Finland. At the request of The Midland Reporter-Telegram she has sent an account of her activities.

Greetings once again from beautiful Finland,

This past month has been a really busy one for me and full of many new experiences. Everywhere I turn there is a new challenge or experience.

Since my last letter we have visited many places, all of which I enjoyed. Earlier in the month we planned a six-day boat trip down lake Iaimaa, the largest lake in Finland. Unfortunately, our six-day boat trip lasted only three days because the motor on our boat broke down. Even though the motor broke, the weather those three days was the prettiest since I arrived, and we all enjoyed ourselves.

The restored castle at Iavonlinna, 104 kilometers northeast of Mikkeli, was a great trip, also. The castle was built in 1475 on the border to be used as a defense against Russia. It didn't withstand the Russians. That same day my family took me to Kerimake, 22 kilometers from Iavonlinna, to visit a restored wooden church. It's the largest wooden church in the world, and it is really beautiful.

There are many Finnish customs I have grown to love, and I suppose sauna at the summer cottage is at the top of my list. The Finnish sauna is an experience I will never forget. Of course, in Finland it's a tradition to skinny-dip after sauna. That is the purpose for all saunas to be built near the edge of the lake. The sauna is something even I have learned to demand at least once a week.

The weather here remains cold and is usually wet and rainy. I have grown accustomed to the cold and rain, and I hear the weather there is still hot and dry. They tell me here that this is the worst summer weather in 25 years! It's such a change from what I'm used to that I don't really mind.

The exchange program, Youth for Understanding, arranged a trip to Russia for all its exchange students in Finland last week. Even though we weren't in the heart of Russia, we got a good taste of what life is like there. It wasn't pleasant at all. Most of the buildings were old and rundown. The streets, for the most part, were free of rubbish, but a cold, grey feeling still prevailed. It could be that I went there with such an attitude, but nevertheless, be proud to be free Americans!

One weekend we spent in Helsinki. The population is over half a million, and, of course, it's a large city. I had a field day touring museums and shopping in the shops around the city. There, too, is a unique church. It's built in a huge rock and you would have to see it to believe it.

Finnish food will never cease to amaze me. The summer foods of Finland are mushrooms, fish and berries, all of which are taken from nature. During my stay here in Finland, I have eaten such delights as fish soup, mushroom pie and raw herring. All are very different from my usual eating habits in the U.S.A., but I prefer the pie and soup over the raw herring! The blueberries we pick from the forest make a great blueberry pie.

This summer in Finland has been fantastic. I have grown to love my Finnish family and friends and these experiences I will hold very close to my heart. The Finns are as beautiful as their land, and I have really enjoyed the summer.

Parhaimat Terveiset, Teena Kirby.

Indictments accuse pair of rustling

VERNON, Tex. (AP) — A grand jury has indicted a Vernon doctor and pharmacist on six counts of theft in connection with a Northwest Texas cattle rustling scheme which stretched into New Mexico.

Dr. Paul Parkey, 36, and Darrell Thedford, 35, had been charged Tuesday with five counts of theft over $200 and one count of theft over $10,000. They were released after posting bonds of $35,000 each.

The grand jury also indicted two truck drivers, Frank Simmons of Keller and William D. Lewis of Greeley, Colo., on seven counts of theft.

Jerry Malone of Fort Worth was indicted for theft over $10,000 in connection with the stealing of 200 head of cattle from Clovis, N.M.

The indictments stem from the theft of more than 200 head of cattle and equipment since last December in West Texas and eastern New Mexico.

Don C. King, secretary and general manager of the Texas and Southwest Cattle Raisers Association, said the thefts date back to December 1976 when 64 head of cattle and a truck were taken at Booker, Tex.

Festival to close

ODESSA — The ninth annual Summer Shakespeare Festival is in its final week at the Globe of the Great Southwest.

The festival is due to close next Sunday.

All three festival offerings, Shakespeare's "Measure for Measure" and "Two Gentlemen of Verona," and Goldsmith's "She Stoops to Conquer," will have presentations during this concluding week. "She Stoops" will be performed at 2:30 p.m. today and at 8 p.m. Wednesday and Friday. "Two Gentlemen" will have a presentation at 8 p.m. Thursday, and "Measure for Measure" will be performed at 8 p.m. Saturday. The closing performance at 2:30 next Sunday will be "Two Gentlemen."

Tickets for the final series of performances, pried $4 for adults, $2 for students, will be available at the Globe box office before show time daily. Tickets may be reserved in advance by dialing 332-1586.

"Measure" will have a final performance at the Odessa theater at 8 p.m. Saturday. (Staff Photo by Bruce Partain)

FCC proposes use of simpler CB rules

WASHINGTON (AP) — Government regulations in plain, simple English? In language that almost anyone can understand? Well, the Federal Communications Commission is willing to try it for CB radio users.

The FCC has published in the Federal Register a proposed, completely rewritten set of rules designed, it says, to be much more readable and comprehensive.

Gone, in most instances, are the "therefores," "thereofs," "theretos," and "notwithstandings," the semicolons and wordy, difficult-to-understand paragraphs normally associated with government writings.

Instead, a question-and-answer format is proposed. Short, familiar words replace legal terminology. The personal "I-you-we" form is used to improve understanding. And charts are used to explain some of the longer rules.

It's enough to make Jimmy Carter smile. In his fireside chat to the nation earlier this year, the President proposed to "cut down on government regulations and make sure that those that are written are in plain English."

The director of the Federal Register, Fred J. Emery, wrote FCC Chairman Richard E. Wiley that, as he read the proposed regulations, "it struck me how closely it meets the President's goals.

"The subject of CB radios is certainly of interest to a broad spectrum of the public. It is an area where counsel should not normally have to be consulted by the interested citizen," he said.

"The question-and-answer format in the table of contents, the clear, simple language and user-oriented format could well make it usable as a model regulation."

The Federal Register publishes all government regulations

Why, besides the urging of the President, would the FCC want to simplify its CB regulations?

"We are taking this action in response to many complaints that the CB Radio Service rules are difficult to read and understand," it says. "If adopted, we expect that the new, rewritten rules will be much more readable and comprehensive and that, as a result, user rule compliance will increase."

That, it hopes, will increase the value of CBs to their users, now estimated to number more than 20 million.

"If all CB licensees comply with the FCC's rules," it said, "a greater number of users can make effective use of those frequencies available. Nonobservance of the rules by even a small percentage of CB operators results in unnecessary frequency congestion, interference and spectrum waste.

Two new movies centered in culture of Los Angeles

By WAYNE WARGA
The Los Angeles Times

HOLLYWOOD — Los Angeles has been in the movies since the movies began, a continuous terrain threading its way across the world's screens since the century was young.

It began as background, and its flexibility was such that it could be made to look like New York or the South Pacific. Only rarely did it emerge as a character on its own, but it nevertheless influenced millions who saw it, influenced them so effectively that by the mid-'20s the movies, still unable to speak, became the lure for the greatest internal migration this country has yet known. Millions moved west, and a great many of them became a part of what was then the largest industry in Los Angeles.

This great migration helped to form the eccentric character of the city and the place and its populace began to exert its influence on the rest of the country.

Anyone sampling the ongoing commentary about Los Angeles will quickly find that the city confuses many: It contains the laughable but also much to envy. Tourists and writers puzzle this place in home movies and magazines and the attraction is stronger than ever.

Stronger, perhaps, because more and more of the Los Angeles character emerges in contemporary films. It was fascinating, for instance, to see "Shampoo" a continent away in New York, noting the audience's reaction to both the characters themselves and the city in which they lived. Los Angeles figured forcefully in "Shampoo," and it was present as well as a sort of misplaced ennui in "Welcome to L.A."

So much happens here and with such incredible diversity, that one's hunch is that a trend may be in the making, one which uses Los Angeles not only as background but as a character as well.

Two films currently shooting here have their roots in phenomena associated with the geography. "Big Wednesday" explores relationships and growth as it took place during the '60s surfing craze. "Stingray" looks at a society on wheels, a boy and a girl finding one another a part of a triangle, the apex of which is a customized Chevy Corvette.

The writers, producers and directors of the two films are four men intimately familiar with their material. All are graduates of the University of Southern California. "Big Wednesday" writer-director John Milius and producer Buzz Feitshans grew up as Angelenos. "Stingray's" coauthors are Hal Barwood and Matthew Robbins, the former producing and the latter directing for the first time.

Milius, Barwood and Robbins used the one means to enter the film industry without a long union-restricted apprenticeship: they wrote screenplays. Feitshans is the son of Fed Feitshans, a widely respected film editor, and was thereby able to thread his way through the long apprenticeship and move on to producing because of his own editing talent and experience.

The premise of "Stingray" — perhaps more simply stated that it may turn out to be in the completed film — is the evolution of a relationship between a boy (played by "Star Wars" Mark Hamill) and a girl (Annie Potts) as he searches for the customized Stingray stolen after he and his auto-workshop chums built it. The script is a moral tale richly mixed with adventure and comedy. The adventure begins when the triumphant customizers take their Stingray and parade it on a Wednesday night along Van Nuys Boulevard.

"Van Nuys Boulevard is the heart of the car culture on the planet earth," Barwood says. "Matthew and I were not car nuts when we were high school kids. It's come to us rather late in life. We grew up in rather strict conservative families, me in Hanover, N.H., and Matthew in Great Neck, Long Island.

"We are interested in observing culture, even though in this film the observations are peripheral. Because a big portion of the story is the car, Van Nuys Boulevard was essential.

"What I'd like is for someone 200 years from now to see this film and look at it as a chronicle of our time. The way Pepys chronicled the London of his time. In 200 years there won't be anything like this on earth."

It is among the most improbable of social customs, yet it has gone on for years now and there is no end in sight. Robbins and Barwood both point out that a lot of the drivers of the customized cars are no longer young, yet they continue to participate in what is generally considered a ritual of youth. The film company shot the boulevard on a Wednesday night, then returned the next night for several more late-night locations. The cars for these nights were specially chosen.

"Jim Blume, our assistant director, reconnoitered Van Nuys Boulevard for several weeks and prepared a scrapbook of Polaroid pictures of cars, with the addresses and phone numbers of their owners. We chose what we thought was a colorful though representative group of cars, hired the drivers as extras and paid them a mileage allowance for their cars. It's interesting to see they came here from all over Southern California."

Barwood and Robbins-produced screenplays are "The Sugarland Express," "The Bingo Long Traveling All-Stars and Motor Kings" and most recently — and none too satisfactorily to its writers — "MacArthur."

For his debut as a producer Barwood bought himself an inexpensive wristwatch which he describes as "accurate but cheap. Every so often I push the button, look at the time and see how many hours behind we are. So far we're on schedule and on budget, but it's going to be a tight race."

More sprint than race, in face, for the budget is a small $1.7 million and the executives at MGM have figured them into a 34-day shooting schedule.

Some $20,000 of the budget went for the Stingray which was designed by James Schoppe and built by Richard Korkes. It is about as elaborate as customized cars can get — so extensive that it has right-hand drive.

The speed with which "Stingray" is being filmed is such that its neophyte director has virtually cut himself off from everythint but the work immediately at hand.

"I feel the pressure more than anyone else right now," Robbins, a low-key 33-year-old, says. "I used to think screenwriting was a tough business but it's positively luxurious compared to directing. I keep telling myself the more I do the easier it'll get."

Robbins and his partner, who is 37, are singularly unaffected film-makers, completely unencumbered by the pomp and Gucci so closely associated with the business.

Producer's first novel is detective 'Valentine'

LOS ANGELES (AP) — TV producer Andrew J. Fenady recently published his first book, "The Man With Bogart's Face." It's a hard-boiled private eye novel set in the 1970s, but is not your usual gumshoe saga.

Its hero has a plastic surgeon redo his face, make him look like Humphrey Bogart. He then changes his name to Sam Marlow, buys a 1939 Plymouth and goes into the hard-boiled private eye business.

He hires a busty blonde secretary he calls Duchess and commences operating as Bogart might have in the old days, "when there were causes and flags and dames worth fighting for."

His card reads: "Sam Marlow, Private Investigator, I Don't Sleep."

In short, Fenady, now making a CBS movie called "The Hostage Heart," has written an affectionate spoof of detective works by such greats as Dashiell Hammett and Raymond Chandler, and such top gumshoe flicks as "The Maltese Falcon."

It all began about three years ago, he said, when he wrote the following paragraph:

"After the bandages were removed, the man with the Humphrey Bogart face slipped into a trench coat and a grey felt hat. The temperature in LA that July day was 92. There was no sign of rain."

"I put it in a drawer and almost forgot about it," said Fenady, 49, a native of Toledo, Ohio, who grew up immersed in detective classics in book and film form. "But it kept gnawing at me.

"I didn't know what to do with it. But one day it struck me — I want to do a Valentine, an affectionate Valentine, not a parody, on all the great private eye novels and movies ever made.

"So that day I sat down and started writing," said the grinning author, a short, intense man who, clad in white shirt, blue pants in need of pressing and bowling shoes, didn't resemble your average cashmere-encased TV producer.

"It went on night and day."

Santa Fe Opera season nears end

SANTA FE, N.M.— Twelve performances remain in the Santa Fe Opera's 21st season schedule.

The season, which opened here July 6 with a contemporary opera, "The Italian Straw Hat," will close on Saturday, Aug. 27, with a performance of the same opera. Also in the season's repertory are Verdi's "Falstaff," Giordano's "Fedora," Mozart's "Cosi Fan Tutte" and Debussy's "Pelleas and Melisande."

Leading off the next-to-final week of performances will be "Fedora" at 9 p.m. (M.D.T.) Monday. Tuesday's offering will be "Cosi Fan Tutte," and Wednesday's presentation is to be "Straw Hat." Thursday night's offering will be "Falstaff," followed by "Pelleas and Melisande" on Friday night. Saturday's performance is to be "Fedora."

The final week's schedule is: Aug. 22, "Falstaff," Aug. 23, "Fedora," Aug. 24, "Pelleas," Aug. 25, "Cosi," Aug. 26, "Falstaff," and Aug. 27, "Straw Hat." Information on ticket availability for the final 12 performances is obtainable from the Santa Fe Opera box office, 505-982-3851.

Concert planned in park

"Pops in the Park," an annual late summer concert heralding the oncoming season of the Midland-Odessa Symphony and Chorale, will be presented Aug. 27 in Wadley Barron Park here.

The program will be repeated Aug. 28 in Odessa's Sherwood Park.

Joining Dr. Tom Hohstadt and symphony instrumentalists in the pair of concerts will be guitarist and folk singer Linda Jean of Fort Davis.

Admission to the concerts will be free.

Weekend showings end 12th season

CANYON — "Texas," the musical romance of Panhandle history and lore, will close its 12th and most successful season this coming weekend.

The production will have presentations at 8:30 p.m. Monday through Friday, and a final performance at 8:30 p.m. Saturday. All presentations are in Pioneer Amphitheater in colorful Palo Duro Canyon State Park.

Information on the availability of tickets for the final week's performances is obtainable from the "Texas" box office, 806-655-2182.

"Texas" launched its 12th season June 15 and has been playing to capacity audiences since.

TV viewing part of homework

By MIKE GOODKIND

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Come fall, school kids in some cities will be watching television as part of their homework.

The idea: To use their passion for television to improve both their interest and skills in reading.

The method: Give them TV scripts to read along with the shows.

Philadelphia schools have used a television reading program for seven years. Variations of that program were tried last March in Los Angeles, St. Louis and Boston.

This year, school systems from coast to coast are looking into the idea.

Results sometimes have been bittersweet. Lynne Williams, CBS' newly appointed director of television reading programs, said one student looked at a television show unfolding and then pointed to the script — "I can't read this, but I want to."

But most are exciting. Dr. Robert Mauller, a Los Angeles school district official, said he asked a high school student if he had read drama before reading the TV script. "Yes, but this feels like it's so real." The visual effect made it come alive for him," says Mauller.

Mauller and other school officials report that school library checkouts soared as much as 50 per cent right after kids watched shows with scripts.

"For those who aren't reading well it provides motivation. For those who are, it has tremendous creative writing applications. It goes into script writing, students originate dialogue," says Dr. Michael McAndrew, director of television-related programs for the Philiadelphia schools.

McAndrews thinks the idea has nationwide potential and "3,900 school systems from New York to the Navajo reservation are looking into it."

The three television networks, ABC, CBS and NBC, all have provided scripts or excerpts at one time or another for students, but now CBS is promoting the idea on a large scale. During the test run, hundreds of thousands of kids took part in Boston, Los Angeles, Philadelphia and St. Louis — including homework assignments related to the material.

In Philiadelphia and St. Louis, scripts were published as newspaper supplements, giving everyone a chance to read along.

CBS invited 23 of its largest network-owned stations and affiliates to New York on July 12 in the hope of expanding the concept to more cities this year.

Philadelphia's McAndrew pioneered the concept seven years ago with what he admits were scripts "pirated" or transcribed from TV without the producers' knowledge.

Later, the networks agreed to provide advance scripts for such TV specials as "Eleanor and Franklin," an ABC historical drama about the family of President Franklin D. Roosevelt.

During the four-city trial last March, Lynne Grasz of CBS-owned KMOX-TV in St. Louis, said a telephone survey during the telecast of the "Circle of Children" special disclosed that 23 per cent of the total viewing audience in an estimated 43,240 homes was reading the script while watching the program about autistic children.

The show, she said, was the most watched in its time slot.

Similar script distributions were made in Los Angeles, Boston and Philadelphia.

In all four test cities, educators, station officials and newspaper publishers were happy. Educators noted improved reading interest, newspapers like the promotional value of running the scripts and TV stations liked the ratings bulge.

This year, Ms. Williams says her office will help clear the way for scripts to be released in advance. CBS also will provide study guides for teachers, but each station will have to find a sponsor to print the script.

'Appealing' faces of Muppets appear on promotional items

The Washington Post

The crew members of the British aircraft carrier HMS Hermes have taken a television star to heart. They're wearing little badges on their flight deck uniforms, with their idol Smack-dab in the middle of the Queen's laurel leaf and crown emblem. Farrah Fawcett-Majors? Not quite. Kermit the Frog.

Obviously none of the Royal Navy's able seamen have anything against Fawcett-Major's divine legs or famous tresses; it's just that Kermit has a certain elan. He's witty and urbane one moment and just plain silly and unpredictable the next.

Kermit the Frog is not the only charmer, by any means, on "The Muppet Show," a phenomenally popular series created by puppeteer Jim Henson. Numerous other foam rubber and fabric creatures have emerged from Henson's drawing board, that are contributing to worldwide Muppetmania.

There's Fozzie the Bear, for instance, an inveterate comedian, who has gags and tricks down to a science. There are Statler and Waldorf, two old codgers who sit in theater box seats night after night, supplying short running critiques of the show itself. And there is Gonzo the Great, a very hokey performer. His idea of great entertainment is turning up onstage and eating a rubber tire to "The Flight of the Bumble Bee." Among the most beloved Muppets is Hilda, the wardrobe lady. She has been in the theater so long that her gossip is gospel. The show also utilizes live guests who appear in skits with the Muppets. They have included such stars as Phyllis Diller, Milton Berle, Peter Sellers, Zero Mostel and Don Knotts.

The series is taped in England, simply because it is distributed by ITC Entertainment, a British-owned firm. Henson commutes between his New York home and London, remaining abroad about six weeks at a time. The various live guest stars who appear on "The Muppet Show" are flown over, and as Henson recently explained, "It's no more of a hassle than trafficking between New York and L.A."

Henson's award-winning Muppets have long been the backbone of "Sesame Street," but his characters for the syndicated series are generally different. They are presented in a unique format, with a staff of puppeteers that works concealed under a platform. The live guest stars and the Muppets appear together on the raised platform, and are able to interact with one another easily.

Just what is it that makes "The Muppet Show" so appealing, not just to youthful audiences but to adults as well? According to Francis Essex, one of the show's executives, "It is the illusion that they are more than human that gives the Muppets their special magic." The program earlier this year won the Golden Rose of Montreux Award at a television festival in Switzerland, for the world's best light TV entertainment. And the London Daily Mirror — the Muppets are particularly popular in England — has described Henson as "the finest puppeteer in the Western world."

In candid moments, the puppeteer admits that the Muppets have proved to be financially rewarding. In fact, Henson is rapidly on his way to becoming a millionaire. According to a British merchandising firm that handles the Muppets, cash registers in Britain alone will ring up sales of more than $25 million during the next four years as hundreds of Muppet-themed items are sold. Everything from baby clothes to bubble baths are in demand, under licensing arrangements with Henson and the TV distribution firm. A large London textile mill recently said that the rush on children's Muppet shirts has created a 24-hour production schedule. "If I could lay my hands on 50,000 dozen T-shirts, I could sell the lot tomorrow," the London Evening News quoted a frenzied shirt manufacturer as saying.

The Muppets, as it turns out, appear in many different renderings. There are more than a dozen versions, for example, of Kermit the Frog, one of which contains an intricate mechanism allowing Kermit to cross and uncross his legs. And one version of the Fozzie the Bear Muppet is fitted with two tiny motors that can make his ears twirl. "Each of the Muppets we use has a specific purpose," Henson said. "It depends on what task the Muppet will be called to perform. We use interchangeable characters of necessity, because if we didn't, logistically we would not be able to handle the working scripts, which call for our friends to act and function in a completely human way."

However, one technical aspects of Henson's Muppets always remains the same — there's always a perspiring puppeteer toiling away underneath the cramped platform. In some cases, Henson said, the puppeteers use tiny portable TV sets strapped to their chests, which enable them to see what's taking place above. "We may have as many as six, seven or eight people working under there at the same time," Henson said. "It's a hectic place with scripts, papers, wires, cables and other paraphernalia. It's highly demanding work. It's also a highly skilled aspect of an ancient art form — something which our people do as a creative craft."

Henson, a bearded, soft-spoken man, coined the term Muppet 20 years ago to represent his own designs, which are a combination of traditional marionettes and puppets. Henson began his career in TV. After a brief stint on a Washington, D.C., station, he appeared regularly on "The Ed Sullivan Show" for five seasons. Soon afterward, his Rolf the Dog became one of the most popular features on "The Jimmy Dean Show," and as his stable of characters grew, Henson's stature increased. In 1965 Henson wrote, directed and starred in a short, nonpuppet experimental film, "Timepiece," which got an Academy Award nomination as well as a handful of international awards.

From time to time, Henson retires a character or two and introduces a new Muppet into the show. He said that he has a certain inexplicable affection for his creations that, to some, might be construed as bordering on the weird. "They are vividly real to me," Henson explained. "When we are working together, I treat them as persons. So do the puppeteers. You must realize, that each puppeteer puts a significant amount of himself or herself into the characterization. It has to be this way in order to succeed."

Few casino cheaters punished, officials say

By BRENDAN RILEY

CARSON CITY, Nev. (AP) — Laws in Nevada provide long prison terms for cheaters in casinos. But only a few have been jailed in recent years for using marked cards, crooked dice or other illegal devices at the gaming tables.

Yet authorities say the cheaters steal unknown millions of dollars each year from the gambling clubs — with a resulting tax loss to state and local governments.

Cheaters operate alone or in gangs, sometimes in concert with casino employes. They use rigged dice in crap games, marked cards in blackjack and phony payoffs on bets with the help of crooked dealers.

Slot machine cheaters use drills, magnets and other devices to trip payoff signals. The take might be no more than $20 or $30 or as much as several thousand dollars at a crack. One slot machine ring operating in a group of major Las Vegas clubs reportedly netted nearly $7 million over a period of several months.

It's argued only a fraction of those accused of cheating the clubs find themselves in court. Many casinos still follow the old system of tossing out suspected cheaters without calling police.

State Gaming Control Board records show 112 arrests by board agents or casino security officers for cheating between April 1976 and last month, with 18 cases ajudicated, 29 dismissed and 65 awaiting further court action.

Only two of the 112 arrested served jail terms, one for six months, the other nine months, the records show.

Casinos do pass the word on suspected cheats, often in a private ledger with names, descriptions and photographs of suspects. And when the cheater is a casino employe, local and state authorities can pull mandatory work cards or licenses so the employe is effectively blackballed from Nevada's gaming industry.

But Deputy Dist. Atty. Ray Jeffers, in charge of prosecuting casino cheaters in the Las Vegas area where Nevada's biggest clubs are located, says the overall result is inadequate enforcement. He says arrests amount to "a tenth of what's really going on."

The laws provide prison terms up to 10 years and fines up to $5,000.

Soul hits musical target

The Washington Post

Back when his name was still David Solberg, a young blond singer appeared 25 times on the "Merv Griffin Show" in New York and was certain that his future was in music. But the singer was spotted by talent scout Renee Valente, had his name changed to David Soul and was cast in a leading role in "Here Comes the Brides." His future, plainly, was in words without music.

But 10 years after Renee Valente took him out of music and into drama, David Soul has hit recording — "Don't Give Up on Us" — and this week appears in his first television musical special on ABC. It is called "The David Soul and Friends Special" (Thursday at 8 p.m. EST). That's known as hitting one's target by shooting in the opposite direction. The world, after all, is round.

Part of the Soul special results from his travels to England. Segments were filmed when he appeared in London, Bristol, Birmingham, Glasgow and Manchester. He was even presented to Queen Elizabeth and "I was completely taken by that magnificent lady."

Appearing with Soul in the special are Donna Summer, Ron Moody, England Dan & John Ford Coley, Dick Clark (who is also the producer) and Lynne Marta.

Aside from the special, Soul is still being seen weekly as detective Ken (Hutch) Hutchinson in "Starsky and Hutch" on Saturday nights.

Museum exhibits collector pieces

FORT WORTH — The Fort Worth Art Museum, a museum of 20th Century art, today is opening an extensive exhibition of art works from important Fort Worth and Dallas collections.

Titled "Fort Worth-Dallas Collectors," the exhibition includes prints, drawings, paintings and sculpture surveying American and European art from the second decade of the 20th Century to the present. All works in the show have been loaned to the museum through the generosity of private collectors in the Fort Worth-Dallas metroplex.

The exhibition presents a number of important trends in abstract and representational art. Early abstract works by the cubist painters Fernand Leger and Jacques Lipchitz share honors with recent abstract masters such as Mark Tobey, Frank Stella and Brice Marden. Representational art in the show is from such noted American painters as Thomas Hart Benton, Robert Rauschenberg and Andy Warhol.

The show, open to the public daily, will remain through Sept. 25. The Fort Worth Art Museum is in the Fort Worth Art Center at 3505 W. Lancaster Blvd., adjacent to the Wm. Edrington Scott Theater.

Roping event set in October

POST — Planning is well under way for the annual O. S. Ranch Steer Roping and Art Exhibit, a popular early fall event in West Texas.

This year's event is scheduled Oct. 1 and 2 at the historic O. S. Ranch headquarters southeast of Post. Proceeds will benefit the West Texas Boys Ranch near San Angelo.

Among the noted painters and sculptors to be represented in the upcoming show are Wayne Baize of Fort Davis, Jodie Boren of Abilene, Clark Bronson of Houston, Juan Dell of Santa Fe, John Free of Pawhuska, Okla., Peter Hurd of San Patricio, N.M., Una Hanbury of Santa Fe, Bob Lee of Belen, N. M., Bill Owen of Flagstaff, Ariz., Don Polland of Prescott, Ariz., Tom Ryan of Stamford, Ronald Thomason of Weatherford, Clark Hulings of Santa Fe, Morris Rippel of Albuquerque, H. C. Zachry of Abilene, Nicholas Firfires of Santa Barbara, Calif., Edward Fraughton of South Jordan, Utah, John Kittelson of Fort Collins, Colo., and numerous others.

Davis trial to begin soon

By MIKE COCHRAN

AMARILLO, Tex. (AP) — After one year, one mistrial, and weeks of exhaustive jury selection, state prosecutors are poised to launch the capital murder case against Fort Worth millionaire Cullen Davis.

"We'll have a jury by Tuesday or so," predicts Dist. Atty Tim Curry, "It won't take long now."

Jury selection began June 27.

Opposing lawyers moved to the threshold of completing the panel last week but failed to find a 12th and final member before depleting the first batch of prospects. No alternate jurors will be chosen.

State Dist. Court Judge George Dowlen has summoned a new group to appear at 9 a.m. Monday.

Davis, 43, is on trial in the Aug. 2 1976 death of Andrea Wilborn, his stepdaughter and one of two slain in the midnight shoooting spree at the $6 million Davis mansion on Fort Worth's southwest side.

Two survived the savage attack, including Davis' estranged wife, Priscilla, 36, who looms as a key witness for the prosecution.

Eight men and three women, each meticulously questioned about their views toward the death penalty, have been chosen to hear the case in Dowlen's tiny, chilly fifth floor courtroom.

"You could hang meat in here," grumbled Curry's top Fort Worth assistant, Joe Shannon, as he and others shivered through one court session last week.

An affable, popular and respected judge, Dowlen, a nonsmoker, permits smoking in his courtroom, but mischieviously insists on the frosty temperatures.

It is a running joke with all concerned, including Davis, who Dowlen calls by his first name, outside the presence of prospective jurors.

"The judge is not an officious person," said Richard "Racehorse" Haynes of Houston, who, with Phil Burleson of Dallas, heads the battery of defense lawyers.

Without sacrificing certain decorum, Dowlen treats both sides like good friends, companions in a necessary if not pleasant endeavor.

His approach, both sides say, has contributed much to an easing of the tension that triggered frequent temper tantrums in the first trial.

That ill-fated attempt to try Davis in Fort Worth ended last spring in a mistrial after eight weeks, eight jurors and a judicial ruling of jury misconduct.

Curry said once the jury is seated here it will take little time to fly in the state's witnesses from Fort Worth, and that he would not be surprised to see testimony begin as early as Wednesday.

The prosecution alleges Davis was the black-clad, bewigged gunman who ambushed Priscilla, and her lover, Stan Farr, 30, moments after they returned to the showplace mansion the night of Aug. 2.

Farr died at the scene. Mrs. Davis escaped, despite a bullet wound in the chest. A chance visitor to the estate, Gus Gavrel, 22, also was wounded.

The defense, on the basis of documents filed with the court, is expected to argue that the shootings were drug related and that Davis was not the killer but perhaps a patsy.

New nuclear shells just as potent

By WALER PINCUS
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — One version of the new 8-inch neutron artillery shell the Army wants to produce could kill as many civilians in areas adjacent to the battlefield as the already-deployed nuclear shells it would replace, according to various government experts.

President Carter and proponents of the new neutron weapons have portrayed them as relatively "clean" because their blast and heat effects would not be as great as the nuclear shells already in Europe.

The present nuclear shells would cause civilian deaths and injuries through blast and heat in settlements near the battlefield. Judging by radiation yield estimates by the Defense Nuclear Agency, the powerful 2-to-3 kiloton version of the neutron shell would do the same thing, over about the same radius, through slow-killing and cell-damaging doses of radiation.

The 2-to-3 kiloton shell does, however, have an advantage that its supporters have played down in the public debate over the new weapons. It would be almost twice as effective in killing enemy soldiers inside tanks and armored troop carriers within the battlefield target area as the presently deployed nuclear shells.

Therein lies one dilemma for President Carter as he decides — probably this week — whether to approve production of the neutron 8-inch artillery shell and Lance missile warhead.

Carter must decice whether the added military deterrent value of the new shell is worth the political and practical problems created by its publicized radiation effects on European civilian populations possibly exposed to them.

The largest 8-inch nuclear shell now in the U.S. arsenal has a 5-to-10 kiloton radiation yield. But the planned 2-to-3 kiloton neutron shell has the radiation yield of a 20-to-30 kiloton nuclear weapon.

According to top officials at DNA, that a two-to-three kiloton neutron shell would deliver radiation of 300 to 450 rads a mile from ground zero. Such levels are enough to cause radiation sickness within hours in almost all soldiers or civilians exposed. Almost half of them, according to government doctors, would die within two to three months.

Those who survived, along with others who took gradually lessening radiation doses in the next half mile out from the blast, would be subject to increasing likelihood of developing leukemia and other cancers, government doctors say.

The exact relationship between low-level radiation and long-term cancer effects has long been debated by scientists and doctors.

Questioned about the off-the-battlefield radiation caused by explosion of the proposed neutron shell, a DNA official, who helped develop the weapon, said recently, "That is not our business. We are concerned with battlefield casualties, immediate casualties ... There is no way of claiming there will be less casualties (with the neutron shell)."

There are radiation casualties with the present weapons he added.

The DNA official went on to say that civilians in towns a mile from a battle should not be on the streets but "in their houses and in the basement."

He said the projected 300 to 450 rad dose would be cut "one-half to one-third inside the house. And in the basement it would be one-tenth."

Even at the one-tenth or 30-45 rad level, some government doctors who have studied radiation effects on humans see some dangers. "A dose of 14 rads is not exactly trivial," Dr. Walter Weyzen said recently. Weyzen manages human health studies for the Energy Research and Development Administration.

Natural dress buffs strip away stigma

By DALE FETHERLING
The Los Angeles Times

If God had intended us to go naked, he would have made us that way.

Such is the wry reasoning of America's nudists, who along with their clothes are shedding much of the stigma that's hobbled the movement for almost 50 years.

Sperheaded by thousands flocking to "free" beaches, nudism is growing in numbers and in ways that could mean a change of life-style for many.

Nudist travel tours are going great guns. Nudist apartment houses are being set up. San Diego's (Calif.) Black's Beach — the only city-run and authorized "swimsuit optional" beach — has drawn as many as 43,000 people in a day. And the American Sunbathing Assn., representing most of the traditional nudist camps, points to a 25 per cent jump in membership in the past year.

"I think basically we're going to have a clothing-optional country in the future," says one leading Southern California nudist.

That may be wishful thinking. There are lots of hurdles before Americans are as casual about social nudity as, for instance, many Europeans.

But there are clear signs that nudism here is coming out of the closet.

Terry Parker found that out last summer.

The young Austin, Tex., man took over a half-filled, money-losing apartment house, locked its gate, dropped its inhibitions — and soon filled its 14 units with nudists.

Four months ago he turned another troubled Austin apartment complex, this one with 78 units, into a similar "liberated environment."

Parker sees such places multiplying and likens them to Chevrolets: "The more of them there are around, the more people will buy them."

In fact, he said, there's already being planned near Austin a "liberated village" — several hundred acres of private homes, shops and apartments populated by a few thousand people who want to take off their clothes and do their own thing right here in the middle of the Bible Belt.

Southern California may not be far behind.

A Fullerton-based group, Living In The Buff Residential Enterprises (LIBRE), is proposing to start its own clothing-optional 20- to 60-unit apartment house, the first of a planned series.

Already, with no advertising except word of mouth, LIBRE has received about 70 applications from prospective tenants.

The clotheless complex will be screened from public view and its tenants sifted to keep out mere voyeurs. "It will be, in effect, a miniature nudist resort," said Jim Williams, a leader of the group.

The image of aging eccentrics gathered around the shuffleboard court in a primitive backcountry camp is no longer, if it ever was, very accurate.

Increasingly, the camps have swimming pools, jacuzzis, tennis courts, teen centers, and a younger — but still family-oriented — clientele.

Bill Flesher, for example, says he's going to do away with the little-used shuffleboard courts at his nudist camp.

Jaworski faces more digging

WASHINGTON (AP) — Leon Jaworski is returning to Washington to try to nail down the true extent of the South Korean influence-buying scandal the way he nailed former President Richard M. Nixon's role in Watergate.

Jaworski associates say he hopes to lay out the facts on South Korean cash, gifts and favors to congressmen early next year, if possible.

He arrives in Washington Monday to begin his new job as special counsel to the House Ethics Committee.

"There is still more investigating to be done, loose ends to tie up," Jaworski's deputy, Peter A. White, said in an interview.

But there are scattered reports from both the House and Justice Department investigations indicating about 20 present or former congressmen received Korean payments — innocently or otherwise.

A Carter administration official has told Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill that the Justice Department may seek five indictments in the next two months, reportedly of five former congressmen.

The Justice Department has indicated, however, that none of those indictments would be for straight bribery — selling votes in Congress for cash.

Instead, indications are that the indictments may be for lesser charges such as income tax violations.

Criminal violations in the Korean affair have been hard to pin down, and the job for Jaworski and the House ethics committee may be even tougher.

Their task is to determine whether South Koreans and U.S. congressmen engaged in an unethical, if not illegal, influence-buying operation in Congress.

Jaworski says Justice Department documents, reportedly including a list of Park's payments to about 20 congressmen and other U.S. officials, may be as crucial to this investigation as tapes were against Nixon.

Jaworski was the special Watergate prosecutor who won access from the Supreme Court to Nixon tapes including the socalled "smoking gun" tape that forced him to resign Aug. 9, 1974.

South Koreans including a former ambassador and South Korean legislators gave U.S. congressmen gifts and at least one cash contribution but the most generous cash giver appears to have been South Korean rice dealer Tongsun Park.

Park distributed at least $12,000 to at least seven congressmen, plus a $10,000 cash gift to the wife of former congressman and now Gov. Edwin Edwards of Louisiana.

Park had business dealings with at least two congressmen and hosted dozens of others at his lavish George Town Club.

A former director of the Korean Central Intelligence Agency testified under oath that the Korean CIA helped Park set up the club because Park said he could use it to win influence with congressmen.

The former KCIA director, Kim Hyung Wook, said Park told him he could set up a Korea Lobby along the lines of the old China Lobby.

The Constitution prohibits congressmen from accepting substantial gifts from foreign agents. But the congressmen who took money from Park say they knew him only as a foreign businessman from whom it was legal to accept contributions.

Former Rep. Jerome Waldie, D-Calif., got a $2,000 contribution from a foreign agent, former Korean Ambassador Kim Dong Jo.

But Waldie said in an interview that the contribution was legal because it was to his California gubernatorial campaign in 1974, not to him as a congressman.

Girl Scout slayings: suspect still loose

LOCUST GROVE, Okla. (AP) — It was a shattering sight early that morning of June 13 at Camp Scott, a Girl Scout camping area just south of this northeastern Oklahoma town.

Three girls had been killed and sexually abused during their first night at their summer camp. The bodies were found by a camp staff member not far from their ripped tent.

Since that day, agents from several law enforcement jurisdictions and hundreds of volunteers have hunted the area for the slayer. Escaped convict Gene Leroy Hart has been charged with the killings, but officers admit they have no real clues as to where he may be.

Hart is a former Locust Grove resident who fled the Mayes County Jail in 1973. He is alleged to have killed Lori Lee Farmer, 8, and Doris Denise Milner, 10, both of Tulsa, and Michelle Guse, 9, of the Tulsa suburb of Broken Arrow.

The three were sharing a tent on the perimeter of the camp. A fourth bed in the tent was empty because the girl who was to occupy it was mistakenly assigned to another tent. Camp officials decided to leave her where she was that first night because of a heavy rain.

Hart, who many believe is still in the area, faces 140 years in prison on rape, kidnaping and burglary charges not related to the Girl Scout murders. He pleaded guilty to raping a Tulsa woman in 1968 and had been sent to the Mayes County Jail from the state prison at McAlester for an appeal hearing when he escaped.

But many local residents do not believe that Hart was the killer; they say his name was used only because of his background.

Dist. Atty. Sid Wise says "thousands and thousands of man hours" have been spent in the search. Included have been about 30 FBI agents.

One of the latest clues is a message, "The killer was here," scrawled on the wall of a tiny cave deep in the woods near the scene. Wise believes there is credibility to the scrawl because there are many caves more easily found and reached if it were only a hoax.

Nation's youngest mayor leaving for Air Force

LIBERTY CENTER, Ohio (AP) — At 20, Craig Myers feels ready to venture past the cornfields surrounding this northwest Ohio farming village of 1,200. So he's resigning as mayor on Sept. 1 to begin a four-year stint with the U.S. Air Force.

"You know how it is in a small town, at my age," said Myers, who was the youngest mayor in the United States when elected at age 18 in 1975. He'll report to boot camp at Lackland AFB in Texas in mid-September.

"I have no regrets about my term of office. The council was behind me all the way and the people gave us support," he said.

"I just want to do something with my life," said Myers, whose departure will come at the end of 20 months in office. His contract with the Air Force says he'll study weapons maintenance in Colorado.

"I regret having to leave Liberty Center, and a lot of people have said they are sad to see me taking off," said Myers, who's also giving up a job inspecting cans at the Campbell Soup Co. in nearby Napoleon.

With support from 18-year-olds voting for the first time and from farmers, senior citizens and a few factory workers, Myers edged out a high school science teacher for the $1,200-per-year job. He ran partly on a dare from friends after he was arrested for a curfew violation.

"The curfew is still on the books, but it hasn't been enforced since I've been in office," he said.

And what will Myers do after his Air Force stint, run for office again?

"Probably when I get older, when I get out of the service, I may do it again, but not in a big city or for a state office or like that," said the mayor of Liberty Corners.

Area hospitals' pleas get action

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN—The Texas Health Facilities Commission has acted on requests to upgrade facilities filed by two area hospitals.

The Commission approved a request by Odessa's Medical Center Hospital seeking to acquire new X-ray equipment but denied the facility permission to add obstetrical wards to ongoing expansion. Both requests were filed by Ector County for the hospital.

The Upton County Convalescent Center in McCamey received authority to add 18 beds to their facility.

Permian Basin Planned Parenthood, Inc. of Odessa has filed an application with the Commission seeking to move its executive offices and main clinic to another location and retain the present location as a satellite clinic.

Dead man supposedly Nazi war criminal

ASUNCION, Paraguay (AP) — The man who died in an Asuncion hospital last week was in fact alleged Nazi war criminal Eduard Roschmann, sources at Interpol, the international police agency, said here Saturday.

The sources said fingerprints of the dead man matched those of Roschmann on file in Buenos Aires, Argentina, where the German had lived after World War II.

In another development, the newspaper ABC-Color reported shots were fired Friday night at a delicatessen owned by a German Jew, Emilio Wolff, who on Thursday saw the body and said it was Roschmann.

Wolff was quoted as saying he was a prisoner in a concentration camp where Roschmann's men ordered the execution of his parents and sister.

In Vienna, Austria, Nazi hunter Simon Wiesenthal — who at first doubted reports in ABC-Color that Roschmann was dead — said he was now "75 per cent sure" the body in Asuncion was the man known as the "Butcher of Riga."

Wiesenthal, whose Jewish Documentation Center tracks down missing Nazi war criminals, said he found records showing Roschmann had toes missing on both feet. The Paraguayan newspaper ABC-Color had reported a similar condition for the Asuncion body.

He also said that fingerprints taken in Buenos Aires of Federico Wegener, an alias used by Roschmann, were identical with those of the Asuncion man. ABC-Color reported the dead man in Asuncion carried identification in Wegener's name.

Wiesenthal said the conclusive test would be a comparison of the Asuncion fingerprints with those taken by Austrian police in 1947.

Roschmann is wanted by West German authorities on charges that as commander of a concentration camp in Riga, Soviet Latvia, from 1941-1943 he supervised the slaughter of 40,000 Jews. He allegedly killed 50 himself.

After the war, Roschmann escaped to Argentina, where he lived under a series of aliases. Last month, Argentine authorities announced they had agreed to act on a West German request for Roschmann's extradition, but he fled the country to escape arrest.

ABC-Color first reported Thursday that a man believed to be Roschmann had died in Asuncion. Doctors said the man died of a heart attack on Wednesday.

IRA defies peace plea

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — Irish Republican Army (IRA) guerrillas have answered Queen Elizabeth II's Silver Jubilee plea for peace in strifetorn Northern Ireland with a new round of violence aimed at British soldiers here.

One British marine was killed and three other soldiers were injured Friday in an ambush in Belfast's turbulent Turf Lodge district, a stronghold of the outlawed IRA's radical Provisional Wing.

The attack appeared to be an IRA attempt to restore its credibility among Catholic supporters after failing to carry out a threatened "blitz to remember" during the Queen's Silver Jubilee visit to the rebellious province Wednesday and Thursday.

It also undermined British claims that troops and police are beating IRA guerrillas in their fight to end British rule in Northern Ireland and unite the Protestant-dominated province with the overwhelmingly Catholic Irish Republic, to the south. Ulster's Protestant majority opposes such a union.

During a tense visit to the University of Ulster at Co[illegible]ne Thursday, the Queen defied an IRA bomb t[illegible] and appealed to warring Catholic and Protes-t[illegible] militants to "forgive and forget."

There is no place here for old fears and attitudes born of history, no place for blame for what has passed," she said in a speech.

The IRA considered the Queen's visit to Northern Ireland — her first in 11 years — a reinforcement of British sovereignty in the province. But it failed to unleash its much-heralded "blitz." About 32,000 British troops were on alert during the royal tour.

Street rioting and gun battles wracked Belfast throughout the Queen's visit but Elizabeth stayed out of the city for security reasons.

Friday's violence erupted when a British patrol triggered a guerrilla bomb, injuring two soldiers.

Bicycler almost at journey's end

The Mose Von Hale family in Richardson is trying to make it as a one-car family, said Mose Von Hale Saturday afternoon. And to prove his point, he bicycled from Richardson to Midland.

Hale's final destiny was to be Odessa, where his son is working as a roughneck. Hale planned to finish the last leg of the trip, from Midland to Odessa, today.

It took Hale seven days to reach Midland. He rode approximately 55 miles a day.

"I would leave at 6 a.m. and try to finish the 55 miles by noon. One of my big problems was water. I got caught a couple of times without water, and it's funny how you learn to look for county mowers. They always have a large tank of wonderfully cold water," Hale said.

"I don't really know why I did it. Just the challenge of it I guess. My wife and son tell me I'm insane. Around Anson, where almost everybody rode around in pickups, they would drive by and just shake their heads."

"The only trouble I had was about 19 miles out of Anson. My plan was to take old U.S. highways, and U.S. highways in Texas have paved shoulders. That worked out well except in the middle of nowhere the pavement ran out, and I had to get into the traffic lane. That was pretty scary," he said.

Hale is a teacher in Richardson and plans to ride his bicycle the five miles to school every day.

Pageant winner is Hicks

CRANE — Donna Hicks has been named Miss Crane. The winner of the beauty pageant was selected Friday night as part of Crane's 50 year celebration.

Miss Hicks is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Hicks.

Kathy Hester, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Narl Hester, was first runnerup. Second runnerup was Denice Jamar, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Jamar.

Jana Lynn Wright was chosen as Little Miss Crane. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wade Wright. Channon Bullman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roger Bullman, was first runnerup, and Monica Allen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Stan Allen, was second runnerup.

Junior Miss Crane is Terry White, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arlon White. First runnerup was Rhonda Benton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Blue. Terina Fox, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Royce Fox, was second runnerup.

Amateur photographers may find out why their snapshots don't turn out like they thought they would from Midland photographer Randy Rubin at a meeting of the Midland Camera Club at 7:30 p.m. Monday in the planetarium at 1705 W. Missouri Ave.

Admission to the program, which is open to the public, is free.

Church concert today

A concert by a visiting vocal ensemble, The Meeker Family, is scheduled for 6:40 p.m. today in Midland's Bellview Baptist Church, 1710 N. Big Spring St.

The ensemble is made up of preacher-evangelist Harold Meeker, his wife Elwanda and their children Danny, Lynnette and J. D. The family resides at Gordon, in Palo Pinto County, and regularly presents concerts throughout Texas and elsewhere in the Southwest. The public is being invited by the Rev. Elbert Smithen and the Bellview Baptist congregation to attend today's program.

Temporary Openings

Tired of staying home . . . or working at a job you don't like? Is inflation ruining your budget? Are you good with your hands (sewing, crocheting, building models, or do-it-yourself hobbies)? Texas Instruments has opportunities for you as an electronic assembler, making digital watches, calculators, CB radios, and other consumer products that are capturing the attention of your family and friends. Texas Instruments will train you. The important thing is for you to have good hand-eye coordination. Then you can get in on the ground floor of an exciting opportunity with Texas Instruments.

Right now, Texas Instruments is interviewing people for temporary work to meet its increased manufacturing needs. The money's good. And you get premium pay for the second shift. The sooner you start, the sooner you'll be seeing those paychecks.

To apply, come to the Employment Center, Texas Instruments, Midland-Odessa Air Terminal. Open 8 AM to 4 PM, Monday through Friday.

Big Brothers-Sisters based on friendship

"An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure."

And serving youngsters through Big Brothers/Big Sisters has shown to be "a strong prevention of juvenile delinquency," according to Mrs. Gloria Lambert, executive director of the Midland agency.

This program, "which can be a tremendous benefit to children who need an adult friend," said Mrs. Lambert, is a bargain when one stops to consider that Texas taxpayers spend an average of $14,000 a year to institutionalize just one child, while the average cost of serving a child through Big Brothers/Big Sisters is $300 per year.

Children between the ages of 10 and 17 make up 16 per cent of the population, but account for one-half of all the arrests made for violent crimes and theft. Nationally, the cost of juvenile crime is $16 billion annually.

There are approximately 1,054 boys and girls living in single-parent homes in the Tall City and one out of every four of these will become a school dropout. Delinquency in girls from single-parent families is rising.

And children from a single parent home have six times the chance of being entered into the criminal justice system. Women who grew up in fatherless homes exhibit a divorce rate 800 per cent higher than that of women from two parent families.

But there are positive statistics from Texas.

Big Brothers and Big Sisters served 3,803 children in 1976. Of these, only 13 did not attend school and only 27 appeared and were declared delinquent by a juvenile court. Referred only once to a juvenile court were 65, and only 17 were institutionalized due to delinquent behaviour.

Big Brothers and Big Sisters of Midland was established by Family Services, Inc., a United Way agency, in 1975 when Family Services found there were a lot of children who did not need counseling, but did need a friend, according to Linda George, director of Family Services.

"The idea behind Big Brothers/Big Sisters is to provide a special friend who will care for the child as an individual," said Mrs. Lambert. "The purpose of the program is to match on a one-to-one basis children from one-parent families with adults who will provide friendship, trust, understanding and acceptance."

The youths range in age from 6 to 17 and come from a cross-section, not just poorer families but the more affluent ones as well. "The children come to us through school and church counselors, teachers and friends. The volunteers must be at least 18 years of age," said Mrs. Lambert.

"All it takes," said Mrs. Lambert, is "a desire to help a child and 2 or 3 hours a week."

Big Brothers/Big Sisters are not substitutes for the missing parent and should not pose a threat for the remaining parent. He or she is merely filling a need that the single parent cannot fill—an empty place in the child's life.

In one-parent homes, pressures are frequently more than the parent and child can cope with. Mothers who work become so involved in earning a living and running a household their time for providing adult companionship is at a minimum. So this is where Big Brother/Big Sister come in.

The agency stresses the importance of doing things together weekly and regularly there are group activities for all the volunteers and their charges.

Ice cream and games are on tap from 2-5 p.m. today at Midland Lutheran Church, sponsored by the Senior Lutheran League. Other activities this summer included going to see the Pickwick Players perform and golf and picknicking at a local miniature golf course.

When a potential volunteer applies to become a Big Sister/Big Brother, an interview is set up and a formal application is completed. The applicant then returns later for a second interview.

Big Brothers and Big Sisters are selected after careful screening by the counselors at Family Services and are approved when the agency is assured of the character and integrity of the individual.

The applicants may be students, business persons, laborers, housewives or retired individuals, but all have committed themselves to sharing their busy lives with a boy or girl living with only one parent.

An orientation session is scheduled for 7:30 p.m. Monday in Western State Bank to explain the program. Persons attending are under no obligation to become Big Brothers or Big Sisters.

After acceptance as a Big Brother or Big Sister, the first two months is considered a trial match. A counselor contacts parent and "friend" once a month to see how the match is progressing and to see if there are any problems that need sorting out.

On the average, said Mrs. Lambert, the relationship continues for one year, but "we have one match that has lasted two years. We urge the adult and child to keep in contact even if one or the other has moved.

"We also urge married couples to get involved. It's great for a child to be exposed to a healthy loving home. It's also a good way for a couple to find out if they really want to have a family. Children of Big Brothers and Big Sisters are encouraged to enter into the match, too. But the friendship does not grow and succeed as well when the parent or other family members make the Big Brother or Big Sister their friend."

Committees and their chairmen are the following:

—Membership-Swallow, chairman, man, Scharbauer, Edwards, and Bell.

Shared moments help Big Brother Jeff Smith left, and Little Brother Aaron Hall develop closer communications and understanding. Looking on is Mrs. Cathy Murphy.

'We do something good'

The Big Brother/Big Sister program was designed to help youngsters in need of a friend.

But two transplanted Midlanders from other states, Jeanne Stilwell and Jeff Smith, feel like they get more from the program than their little Brothers and Big Sisters.

Mrs. Stilwell, a secretary during the weekdays, is Big Sister to Sue Powell, a resident of High Sky Girls Ranch, on Saturday afternoons. They have dinner together, play tennis or miniature golf or have arts and crafts activities at the Stilwell home.

"It's a responsibility and you have to spend time, but what you get in return for this small amount of time is so worthwhile," said Mrs. Stilwell, who has a 14-year-old daughter, of her own.

"You spend time with them, but you do the normal things you would do as a family and a child is so appreciative. Sue appreciates anything done for her because she just is not used to individual attention. She may have a hard time showing it because she is not used to being with a complete family."

"But she knows someone loves and cares for her. She knows if she has any problems there is someone to listen without criticism. She knows she has a friend."

Mrs. Stilwell and her family moved here recently from San Diego, Calif. and she has been a volunteer for five months.

Jeff Smith, president of the board of directors of the Big Brother/Big Sister program and a little league coach says, "We do something good in our program. We set an example but more important, we provide for the child a feeling that people care about him or her."

Smith is a Big Brother to Aaron Hall and the experiences they share is "the rewarding part."

"My Little Brother and I go fishing, hunting, play baseball, go bowling and enjoy each other's company. It's good for him. He's never done these things and it's rewarding to see him do them things he otherwise wouldn't be able to do.

Most people, said Smith, are hesitant about becoming a volunteer because they are afraid it will cut into their free time. "But this isn't so. We do the things we always did, but we have someone to do them with."

Smith has always been interested in it through the Big Brother program in New York.

Volunteers are needed to serve Big Brothers and Big Sisters. From left, Carolyn Mitchell, Robert Evans, Alan Schroeder and Tomi Dean, counselors, note the list of unassigned children.

Mrs. Douglas James Burger

Williams-Burger wed

Mr. and Mrs. Douglas James Burger, who were married at 6:30 p.m. Saturday in a double ring ceremony in Memorial Christian Church, will be at home in Lubbock after a trip to San Diego, Calif.

The bride is the former Sharon Louise Williams, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James B. Williams of 3415 Thomas St. the bridegroom, son of Mr. and Mrs. Tommie L. Burger of 3321 Camarie St.

Kathy Williams of San Marcos, sister-in-law of the bride, was the matron of honor. Sissy Winn of Eagle Pass was maid of honor, and bridesmaids were Donna Sue Stetz of Lubbock, sister of the bridegroom, and Eileen Johnson of Plano.

Greg Adkins was best man. The groomsmen were Mike Williams of San Marcos, brother of the bride; Don Burger of Houston, the bridegroom's brother, and Bill Mitchell of Lubbock. Bryan McKinsey of Lubbock and Danny Landenberger ushered the guests.

Officiating for the ceremony was the Rev. John Long.

Mr. Williams presented his daughter in marriage. She wore a formal gown fashioned of ivory Quiana accented with Venise lace. The softly molded bodice featured a deep cameo yoke of silk organza and matching lace with a high wedding band collar of lace forget-me-nots. Long candlestick sleeves were enhanced with cut-out medallions. The full circular skirt fell in deep, folds and ended in a chapel train. A Juliet caplet of Venise lace held her floor-length veil edged with Venise lace. She carried a cascade of candlelight Peruvian lilies, snowflake chrysanthemums and stephanotis.

Walt Williams of Topeka, Kan., grandfather of the bridegroom, was among the out-of-city guests attending.

Mrs. Scott Anthony Skidmore

Scott Anthony Skidmore marries Miss McArthur

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Floyd M. McArthur of 1110 Mogford St. Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Skidmore of 3407 Boyd St. are the parents of the bridegroom.

Officiating for the ceremony was the Rev. Ed Vrazel. Music was furnished by Jack Tweelings, organist, and Mrs. M. P. Ready, soloist.

Mrs. Sharon McGarvey of Troy, N.Y., was the matron of honor. The bridesmatrons were Mrs. Marty Fore of Midland, sister of the bride; Mrs. Linda McArthur of Silver City, N.M., sister-in-law of the bride; Mrs. Linda Yeager of Carlsbad, N.M., sister of the bride, and Mrs. Cheryl Brantley of Loving, N.M., sister of the bride.

The best man was Jerry Schwinkendorf. John Hill, Danny Skidmore, brother of the bridegroom, Johnny Fore, brother-in-law of the bride, of Midland and Bobby Dickinson of Denver, Colo., were the groomsmen. Severo Enriquez of Midland and Tommy Yeager of Carlsbad, nephew of the bride, ushered the guests. Gregory McArthur of Silver City and Will Brantley of Loving, nephews of the bride, lighted the candles. Karen Boaz of Paris, cousin of the bridegroom, was flower girl, and Chad Harrell, nephew of the bride, was ring bearer.

The bride was presented in marriage by her father. She wore a gown designed and made by her mother. It was of white silk organza styled with a scooped neckline outlined with Chantilly lace and seed pearls. The full sleeves of silk organza had wide cuffs of Chantilly lace and seed pearls. The skirt extended from the Empire waistline to a chapel train, also edged with lace and seed pearls.

The bride's three-tiered veil of illusion was held by a tiara of lace and seed pearls. She also wore a single strand of pearls belonging to her mother, and carried a cascade of yellow roses, gypsophila and English ivy centered with a white Phalaenopsis orchid.

A dance and reception were held in St. Ann's Parish Hall, with music furnished by Shade Country of Midland, before the couple left on a trip to St. Thomas, Virgin Islands. They will reside at 4000 W. Illinois St.

Traveler reveals experiences

"Around the World in Seven Years" was the theme of the monthly session of the Permian Basin Geophysical Auxiliary in Los Patios Restaurant for a breakfast.

Clarke Straughn spoke of his experiences traveling and working around the world.

New members welcomed were Mrs. Tommy Lee Wells and Mrs. Arthur Glover.

The auxiliary will have a couples' dance Sept. 10 in the Midland Hilton. Prospective memb members may contact Mrs. Fred Meyer, 683-1963, for additional information.

Espinoza marries city man

Ofelia Perez Espinoza was married to James Dwayne Haussecker in a double ring ceremony at 7:30 p.m. Friday in Greenwood Baptist Church.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Esau Lira Espinoza of 916 N. Loraine St. She has attended Greenwood High School.

Parents of the bridegroom are Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Haussecker of 2405 City View Road. He is a graduate of Midland High School and is employed by Scooter's Plumbing, Heating and Air Conditioning Co.

The couple will reside at 1411 W. Tennessee St.

Tamara Young was maid of honor, and Jettie Hipp and Lori Haussecker, sister of the bridegroom, were bridesmaids. Darla Graham was the flower girl. The brother of the bridegroom, Joseph Haussecker Jr., was best man. The groomsmen were Jimmy Steagall and Darren Garner. Leslie Haussecker, brother of the bridegroom, and Manuel Hernandez, cousin of the bride were ushers.

Music for the ceremony was provided by Connie Stroud, pianist; Mrs. Henry Zachry, organist, and Linda Morgan, soloist.

Presented in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown of sheer Dacron organza with an Empire bodice and high stand collar. The bodice was covered with Venise lace extending in scallops in the skirt, which ended in a semi-cathedral train. A Camelot headpiece held her full-length two-tiered veil. She carried an imported Mexican bouquet of spring flowers.

The reception was held in the cafeteria of Greenwood Elementary School.

Out-of-city guests for the wedding included Mr. and Mrs. Jesus Espinoza of Stephenville, grandparents of the bride; Mrs. Madeline Houston of San Angelo, grandmother of the bridegroom, and Mrs. Lucy Nunn of San Angelo, great-grandmother of the bridegroom.

Party fetes recent bride

Mrs. Norvel Vogel, the former Sherrie Miles, was honored with a bridal shower given by Mrs. David Lyles and Mrs. Jerry Mayo at 3910 Monty Drive.

Mrs. Vogel was presented a corsage of blue carnations and butterflies.

Mrs. Vogel is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gene F. Miles. Her husband is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Dan Vogel.

DEAR ABBY

Abby berated

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: You were wrong when you told that wife who said her husband's "mistress" was a set of golf clubs to consider herself lucky and to take up golf, too.

Why should SHE have to take up HIS hobby to be with him? Maybe she doesn't care for golf? Men are selfish. They spend every spare minute with their hobbies while their wives twiddle their thumbs.

I've been reading your column for years, and you still use the same line. A wife once complained because her husband went deer hunting every chance he got, and you said, "Be grateful that he's out hunting DEER and not DEARS!"

Another wife complained because her husband's hobby was cars. And you said, "Consider yourself lucky that your husband's hobby has four wheels instead of two legs!"

Times have changed, Abby. The day when the husband was king, and his wife and children walked three paces behind in respectful silence, is over. Get with it! — —MODERN WOMAN

DEAR WOMAN: GOLF WIDOW'S letter prompted a variety of responses. Read on for a poignant letter from a woman whose ideas on the subject are 180 degrees from yours:

DEAR ABBY: In answer to JEALOUS whose husband's "mistress" was a set of golf clubs: I know exactly how she feels because I was in her position for 38 years. (I finally took up the game myself.)

Last November my golfer died of cancer. During the year he battled the disease he continued to play golf even though he was often in pain. His last outing was sitting in the car from where he could watch a foursome drive on his favorite hole.

His ashes were spread by our children on a certain hole at the point where his drives usually came to rest. Now I miss his practice shots in our yard; and our dog longs to shag those shots again.

Abby, please tell those "golf widows" that there are worse hang-ups than a passion for golf.—"REAL" GOLF WIDOW

DEAR GOLF WIDOW: Well said.

DEAR ABBY: I am a perfectly normal, happily married, 48-year-old woman with a problem I've never seen in your column. On numerous occasions I have been made to feel like a dummy or some kind of oddball because I don't drive a car.

Twice I tried to learn, but gave up because I lack the confidence to drive alone. Two driving instructors told me that not everyone should drive a car.

My problem is how to respond when people say, "Any idiot can learn to drive. What's wrong with you? You should be ashamed of yourself!"

Abby, are there others with this problem, or am I an oddball who really should be ashamed of myself?—DOESN'T DRIVE

DEAR DOESN'T: Cheer up. You belong to a large club. Don't worry about responding to insensitive clods who deserve to be ignored. How much safer our streets and highways would be if everyone who shouldn't drive didn't!

•

Everyone has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply, write to ABBY in care of this newspaper. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

Janet Presnall bride of Philip J. Nichols

LUBBOCK — Janet Jean Presnall became the bride of Philip J. Nichols Friday in Broadway Church of Christ. Waymon Hinson officiated.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gene Presnall of Midland, and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. L. J. Nichols of Lubbock.

Attendants to the bride were Susan Mimms of Lazbuddie, Julie Cessna of Midland and Charla Cox of Lubbock. The bridegroom's attendants were Frank Stepp, best man; Penney Nichols, brother of the bridegroom, and Roger Hood of Lubbock. The ushers were the groomsmen and Sam Blake and Terry Cartwright, both of Lubbock.

The bride wore a white gown of polyester organza with a semi-sheer stripe bodice trimmed in Raschel lace. The skirt had a lace redingote effect, with hemline and sweep train trimmed in lace. She also had a lace-bordered chapel mantilla, and she carried a bouquet of gardenias, stephanotis, yellow rosebuds and baby's breath.

Plan packing to avoid nightmare

By BETTY OMMERMAN
Newsday

It has often been said that "getting there is half the fun." But it's rarely mentioned that the other half — the arrival — can turn into a nightmare without proper planning.

And the planning is not only the hotel reservation, but the amount of clothes you take, the way you pack them to avoid wrinkles (especially with cottons and other fabrics that might need ironing) and the exercises you can do on a long-distance flight to avoid swollen ankles and jet lag.

Packing is the greatest bugaboo. Most women tend to take along our grown-up version of the teddy bear. It's usually that "special" long skirt or cocktail dress that "has to have" that once-only pair of shoes and extra handbag. Space is too valuable for such indulgences.

The less you pack, the smaller the suitcase you'll need. This can be a blessing in places where bellhops or porters are hard to find. But traveling light doesn't have to mean getting caught without the right clothes. All it means is discipline in packing.

Looking, and light — Designer Vera Maxwell, who travels around the world in search of ideas for her clothes, manages to pack her wardrobe needs into a 26-inch suitcase. Her zipper-closed handbag, used on the plane, also doubles for daytime during the trips. "But you can also pack everything into a 24-inch case and an airline bag," she said. "That way, you can take everything on the plane with you and don't have to wait for your baggage."

For a wardrobe that might have to cross temperature zones, Miss Maxwell recommends mix-and-match clothes in two colors with accents of white to add further variety to the outfits.

Avoid the big load — The secret is not to overpack. Two pairs of pants, two long-sleeved T-shirts with either scarves or separate cowls, two short-sleeved T-shirts, two daytime shirts, a jacket, two blouses, two swimsuits, two tennis outfits (If you have time or the inclination, rackets can be rented), two long skirts or a long skirt and gown, a cocktail bag, a daytime dress, lingerie, two pair of shoes and a pair of rubber-soled or tennis shoes is more than enough to see you through countries with varying temperatures. Carry a coat along for extra insurance. Make it a rain-and-shine coat, and it does double-duty.

No wrinkles — To avoid them, travel expert Barbara Baughman of the Samsonite Corp. recommends a cushion-and-fold technique thats eliminates space-wasters such as tissue paper and plastic bags. "Just cushion the folds of one garment with another," she said. "Also, tuck small items into shoes to conserve space." As for placement in the suitcase, Miss Baughman suggests:

—Shoes should be placed heel-to-toe at the bottom ends of the case to prevent shifting. Stuff the purse with scarves or hosiery to keep its shape and also place at the bottom of the suitcase along with such heavy items as hair blowers or electric curlers.

—Lingerie (slips, panties, nightgowns and robes) should be folded lengthwise in thirds. Place in sets, roll up and pack along one side of case.

—For pants and tops: Fold pants lengthwise on natural creases. Place first pair with waistband touching one edge and the legs hanging over the other edge. Reverse procedure for second pair. Fold tops lengthwise in thirds and half of the tops hanging out at right angles to the pants. Fold one pair of the pants over the tops then fold the rest of the tops over the pants and end by folding the rest or other pair of pants over the tops.

—Dresses and skirts should be folded lengthwise, front down, in thirds. All zippers and buttons should be fastened and sleeve folds should be in back. In the case, place the collar of one dress touching the edge and the skirt overhanging. Reverse directions for others and fold into suitcase.

Though the soft, fabric cases are lighter to carry, the hard-cover ones are safer for your clothes, since they cannot rip and spill your garments or get soaked through in a storm. To make such suitcases easier to handle, some luggage companies offer a choice of two retractable wheels and a retractable handle and others off four non-retractable wheels.

After mastering packing, exercise in airplane seat

Newsday

Once you've mastered the art of packing and seen your suitcase safely loaded on the plane, you can relax. But don't fall into a lethargy — or you may find yourself tired and your ankles swollen before your plane even touches down. Dr. L. G. Lederer, American Airline's retired corporate medical director, suggests these exercises to avoid any problems and stimulate the circulation. Each can be done while in your seat, and each should be done at least five times.

2. Next move upward to the calf muscles. Try and make the calf muscle jump by tightening it up and then relaxing. Start, with the left leg and do it several times. Then repeat with the righ tleg and conclude by alternating legs.

3. Do the same muscle-tightening exercise with your thighs, buttocks and stomach.

4. End by exercising your arms. Clench your right fist rightly. Tighten up the whole arm and hold for a few seconds. Relax. Repeat with left arm, then alternate.

Weight control confusing

"Technically, a calorie is a unit of measurement equal to the amount of energy required to raise the temperature of a liter (about a quart) of water by one degree centigrade. Bodies use this energy for breathing or moving," Mrs. Mary Sweeten, a foods and nutrition specialist, says.

Calories are provided by the food eaten. Each gram of sugar and starches (carbohydrates) gives four calories, for protein, four calories per gram, and for fat, nine caloreis per gram. If a person eats more calories than he needs, whether it is in carbohydrates, proteins or fats, then he gains weight—if he consumes less, then he loses weight, the specialsit with The Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System, says.

"One pound of fat is equal to 3,500 calories. By eating 500 calories a day more than you need for one week, in one week you have gained one pound. If you eat 500 calories less than you need in a day for a week, then you lose one pound.

McKenzie-Hill plan fall rites

Mr. and Mrs. Chessley Eugene McKenzie Sr. of 723 W. Dormard St. announce the engagement of their daughter, Mary Ellen, to John Harrison Hill III of 4000 W. Illinois St. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John H. Hill Jr. of Lancaster, Pa.

The couple plans to be married at 10:30 a.m. Oct. 1 in the parlor of the First Baptist Church.

The bride-elect, who attended Texas Tech University, is employed by Kelly Services, Inc. Her fiance earned a B.S. degree in geology from Penn State, and is employed by Geo-Search, Inc.

Create charisma in nothing room

By BARBARA HARTUNG
Copley News Service

Q. We have recently bought a small home and are having a fireplace installed in the living room as one step in trying to add some character and personality to the home. The fireplace will be the only architectural feature in the room.

What can I do to create the warmth of a traditional setting in a plain little 1960 ranch-style house?

A. You can create the warmth of a traditional setting in three ways:

First, you can do it with fabric.

Second, you can do it with furniture.

And third, you can do it with architectural detailing, as one designer did, using an Albert Van Luit wall covering and fabric design of fruits and flowers adapted from an original 18th Century print. Adding to the architecture, shelving or gallery molding was placed across the upper part of the wall to display books and other treasures. The classic design of wing chairs and brass tray coffee table complemented the look.

And repeating the design of the chairs' fabric in draperies and on the walls provided a coordinating note for the well-planned room.

Club presidents reminded to make photo dates

As a service to Midland club women, The Reporter-Telegram is planning a special supplement noting the achievements of the Tall City's women's clubs.

Although there are more women's groups in the city than the ones which will be featured in the section, we will include the local clubs which fit the traditional scope of women's clubs — garden, auxiliary, social, study and service groups.

The section, to be called "Women With a Purpose," will not include teen clubs, bridge groups, women's clubs of individual churches or ad hoc fund-raising groups.

The Reporter-Telegram photo staff has set aside specific periods when the presidents of participating clubs may have their photographs made at the newspaper office at 201 E. Illinois.

Those times are: Wednesday, Aug. 17 between 3 and 5 p.m.; Thursday, Aug 18 between noon and 2 p.m.; Saturday, Aug. 20 between 10 a.m. and noon; Wednesday, Aug. 24 between 2 and 4 p.m.; and Thursday, Aug. 25 between 1 and 3 p.m.

Appointments will be necessary to avoid long waiting lines. Special arrangements have been made to make these particular photographs during the times listed above. It will not be possible for the photo staff to handle drop-ins at other times.

In addition, the president of each club will need to complete a form outlining her club's history, special projects and current officers.

The forms may be picked up at the time of the photographic appointment and returned later, or they may be picked up in advance in the Women's News Department anytime between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Forms must be completed and returned to the Women's News Department by 5 p.m. Sept. 5.

"Women With a Purpose" will be published as a tabloid supplement to the Reporter-Telegram's Sunday edition on Sept. 18.

Noemi Torres, Taylor repeat Catholic vows

Noemi Vazquez Torres and Alvaro Taylor were married at 11 a.m. Saturday in Calvary Baptist Church. The Rev. Alejandro Galarza officiated for the service.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Valentin Torres, 204 E. Gist St., and Mrs. Victoria Britton of El Centro, Calif.

Marzia Glasgow was the matron of honor. The maid of honor was Veronica Ortiz of Houston. The bridesmaids were Olga Gonzales, Vicky Sanchez of Laredo, cousin of the bride, Baca of Denver, Colo., Cruz Lopez of Odessa, Ruth Martinez of El Paso, Becky Baca of Odessa, Junie Valdez of Denver and Ruth Zaragoza of Houston.

Carol Lopez of Odessa was the flower girl.

Rick Romero of Denver attended as best man. The groomsmen were Fred Rodriquez and Valentin Torres Jr., brother of the bride, of Midland, Andrew Ochoa of Denver, Roberto Prado of Laredo, Mexico, cousin of the bride, Frank Gallegos of Denver, Joe Zarguza of Houston, Aaron Baca of Denver and Manuel Lopez of Odessa. The ushers were Peter Almendariz Jr. of Pecos and Roglaio Prado of Laredo, Mexico, cousin of the bride.

The junior bridesmaids were Elizabeth Galared of Big Lake, Barbie Salcido of Las Cruces, N.M., Lupe Prado of Laredo, Mexico, cousin of the bride, and Veronica Baca of Odessa. Miniature bride and bridegroom were Lisa Nino and Jose Torres.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown of imported pure silk organza over peau de soie and Venise lace. The modified Empire bodice had Victorian neckline enhanced with lace and satin ribbon. The A-line skirt ended in a chapel train. She carried a bouquet of wax and crystal roses.

The reception was held in the Alamo Hall.

WINE DRINKER

Cool-climate grapes thrive in Oregon

By TOM GABLE
Copley News Service

Wine from Oregon?

Otherwise knowledgeable wine writers and drinkers once asked the same question about the state of Washington, indulging themselves in a little geographic snobbery while energetic scientists, agricultural agents, entrepreneurs and hobbyists started setting the stage for what has now become a good business, with plenty of sound wines. One need only look to Chateau Ste. Michelle and others to marvel at what can be accomplished with the right touch of science, industry, art and luck.

The same thing is now happening in Oregon, even spreading over to neighboring Idaho.

Enthusiastic wine makers are carving out plots a few acres at a time in the prime "cool climate" grapes (Pinot Noir, Gewurztraminer, Chardonnay and Riesling) and a few of the lesser known (Semillon, Muscat). Pinot Noir and Chardonnay are the premium wine grapes of the Burgundy area of France, as in Romanee Conti and Montrachet. The Reisling is the great white wine grape of the Mosel and Rhine in Germany. Gewurztraminer comes from Alsace.

A couple of the pioneer wineries in Oregon are Erath, Eyrie, Hillside and Coury. A recent entry is Tualatin, of Forest Grove, in the Willamette Valley between the Pacific Coast Range and the Cascades, some 30 miles from Portland. Its wine maker, Bill Fuller, is a refugee from the Napa Valley (Louis Martini winery) who went into partnership with Bill Malkmus, a California investment banker, to start Tualtin in 1973.

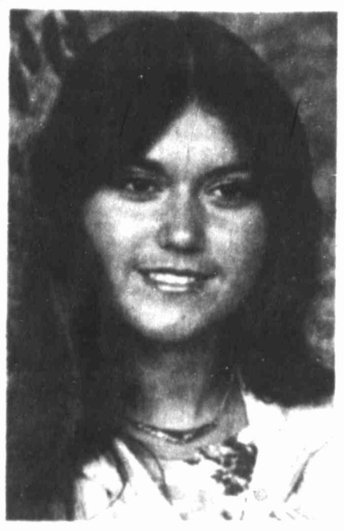
They had first met in 1967, when Malkmus was making wines in his garage and needed help. The two struck up a friendship and, eventually, a desire to make wine together.

"We wanted to do something different in white wines," says Malkmus, who handles the business side of the venture. "We started looking for a cool region, first around Napa, then Sonoma, Mendocino and finally up to Oregon. We found an ad in Wines & Vines (the industry trade journal) from an agricultural extension agent in Oregon. The property turned out to be perfect."

Malkmus and Fuller are striving to make the Tualatin wines in the traditional manner. The Gewurztraminer is dry, with good fruit on the aroma, low acids on the palate and a long finish. It retails for $4. The Reisling ($4) has good acids and good sugars on the palate and an austere aroma.

Shower held

A bridal shower was given by Mrs. J. B. Thomas for Stephania Lister at 202 E. Shandon St. The hostess was Mrs. Brenda Richerson of Midland. Mrs. Ralph Roberson, also of Midland, registered the guests. Special guests were Mrs. Bertie Boone and her granddaughter, Mrs. Giovanni Mejia.



Ruth Gamboa Bernal

Bernal, Rubio engaged

Mr. and Mrs. Simon Bernal of Route 4 announce the engagement of their daughter, Ruth Gamboa, to Agustin Jaime X. Rubio, son of Mr. and Mrs. Eulalio M. Rubio of Route 3.

The couple is to be married at 4 p.m. Sept. 10 in La Hermosa Baptist Mission.

Miss Bernal is a senior student at Midland High School. Her fiance attended Escuela Preparatoria and Escuela de Mineria y Metalurgia in Mexico. He is employed by Midland Country Club.

Women demonstrate 'Garage Power' at sales

By ERMA BOMBECK

What is faster than a speeding bullet? More powertul than a locomotive? Able to leap tall buildings in a single jump?

Women at garage sales, that's who.

I had to see Garage Power firsthand to believe it. Before moving out of state, I found myself with a few excess trinkets. (Who am I kidding? The attic is so full of junk the county couldn't get the door open to condemn it.)

My girl friend, Esther, said, "You are a natural for a garage sale."

"Why do you say that?" I asked.

"Because you are cheap."

"I don't think you understand," I sniffed, "that spreading one's personal wares out in a garage for public exhibition is not only crass, it smacks of being tacky."

"I made 32 bucks off of my junk," she said.

"Why didn't you say so?" I asked excitedly. "Get the card table and let's get started."

The garage sale began at 9 a.m. By 7:30 a.m., I had 15 cars parked on the driveway, 18 on the lawn, two in a ditch and a Volkswagen trying to parallel park between two andirons in my living room.

They grabbed and bought anything that wasn't pumping water, cemented in the ground, growing from seed or spit sparks at them when touched.

They bought cocktail toothpicks that were billed as "Like New" . . . radios guaranteed not to play ever . . . plastic flowers that had died . . . toothless rakes . . . buckets with leaks . . . books of German military commands . . . and a ukulele that only knew one song, "The World Is Waiting For The Sunrise."

At one point I tried to shove through the crowd with a package in my hand. A women grabbed it from me and said, "I'll give you 35 cents."

"No, really," I stammered. "This isn't..."

"Forty cents," she said, grabbing it, "and that is my last offer."

It is the first time anyone ever paid me 40 cents for my garbage.

By 4 p.m. I watched tiredly as a woman tried to coax my husband into her trunk.

"Esther," I said, "this is the most incredible sight I have ever seen."

"What's in that package under your arm?" she said.

"It's nothing," I hesitated.

"It's mildewed laundry," she shouted. "How much did you pay for it?"

"Thirty-five cents, but some of it still fits."

Experts call for drastic changes in child-caring

By DAVID BEHRENS
Newsday

When a 14-year-old gets away with murder," or a gang of 15-year-olds loots the neighborhood in a blackout, the cause of "children's rights" is also a victim.

When a frustrated public becomes incensed with teen hoodlums who torment elderly citizens, the talk turns to "getting tough with these kids." But thousands of other children — the genuine victims of abuse and neglect — are also the losers.

Those include the mentally retarded; the so-called status offenders, such as truants and runaways; and homeless children in foster and group homes, as well as the delinquents — the more than 1 million children currently dependent on the nation's juvenile institutions. In the future, attempts to reform those institutions will depend heavily on public attitudes toward young people in need of help.

Against that backdrop, a group of 80 experts in the juvenile field met at Cornell University recently to try to reshape the future of official child-caring. When the workship was over, the blue-ribbon panel, formed under federal sponsorship, called for a drastic change in the nation's child-care institutions.

That blueprint is about as far-reaching as any to emerge from a governmental brainstorming session on juvenile justice — more than a dozen major recommendations, aimed at ending physical and emotional abuse within juvenile institutions. The experts conceded that their specific goals could take years to achieve.

The proposals included:

—Construction of all juvenile prisons and detention centers should be halted immediately.

—No large hospitals for the mentally retarded should be built.

—Children removed from home for their protection should be placed in homelike settings, such as foster homes or group homes in their own communities.

—Juveniles should be locked up only for violent crime, never for misbehavior or "status offenses" — acts that would not be punishable if committed by adults.

—Child-care services should be offered by private, competing agencies, not by government, and the agencies should be answerable to the local community.

The workship report, to be published later this year, also urged a drastic reform in the size, staffing, disciplinary policies and supervision of juvenile facilities.

Institutions should have no more than 20 beds each, and should have at least one staff member for every three children, the report recommended. Many institutions currently are insufficiently staffed, the workshop report said.

The experts also said that institutionalized children "should not be punished for refusing treatment and should be required to do only what is required of all children, such as mandatory education." The use of corporal punishment, drugs and isolation should also be discontinued, the report said.

"Each institution should be monitored by an independent agency with powers to investigate complaints and hold public hearings," the report concluded, adding that all personnel in the child-care field, including judges, "should be required to visit institutions where children are sent."

The conference, dubbed a "National Workshop on Institutional Child Abuse," included representatives of social service agencies, labor unions, the White House, state and federal regulatory agencies, community groups, university and children's rights groups. Financed by the U.S. National Center on Child Abuse, the conference was designed to "get people to start thinking about this type of abuse," according to E. Ronald Bard, director of Cornell's Family Life Development Center, which conducted the conference.

Many of the workship goals were long-range, Bard conceded, but progress in the child abuse field has been made during the past decade. A trend toward smaller facilities, for example, has been under way for some years in New York State, involving mentally retarded children, delinquents and others with emotional or behavior problems.

Child abuse was not even perceived by most Americans as a national problem until 1962, Bard said, when mandatory reporting laws were first urged. Today, every state in the country has laws on the books requiring all doctors and other professionals to report cases of suspected child abuse. Last year, Bard said, 37,000 cases were reported in New York State, with 55 per cent substantiated. "Back in 1962, about 600 cases were reported," he said. Nationally, more than 290,000 cases are being reported annually, representing nearly 500,000 children.

The major reforms urged by the workshop were not "soft" on juvenile crime, Bard added. "People who violate the law ought to be punished, but once we put them in institutions, they should be treated in humane fashion. However, most of our institutions handle too many people and are run by people who are not qualified to do the handling. Damn it! If our institutions don't treat people humanely, then the punishment doesn't fit the crime."

The workshop report will be published this fall by the College of Human Ecology, a state college, and will be distributed by the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare next year, Bard said.

Arkansas rites unite Susan Harmon, Allen

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. — Susan Jane Harmon, daughter of Mrs. Reuben Bondy Harmon of Midland, Tex., and the late Mr. Harmon, and William Davis Allen, son of Mrs. Rorta Hildy and Jack Allen of Tulsa, Okla., were married at 10:30 a.m. Saturday in University Baptist Church.

E. A. Jordan of Midland presented the bride in marriage. She wore a white Quiana and imported Alencon gloss lace gown styled with an octagon neckline, lace covered bodice and Empire waistline. The full skirt ended in a chapel train. Her headdress was Sonia miniature roses and baby's breath. She carried a semi-cascade of white and Sonia bridal tea roses with stephanotis, gypsophila and ivy tips.

Mrs. Carl E. Barber of San Antonio, Tex., was matron of honor. Margaret Spencer of El Dorado was the bridesmaid. Richard Alderman of Tulsa was best man. The groomsman was Randy Allen of Tulsa, brother of the bridegroom. Don Leeman of St. Louis, Mo., and Hyman Turpin of Pine Bluff were the ushers.

Dr. John Cowell was the organist.

The reception was held in Fayetteville Country Club.

After a trip to Hot Springs and Hot Springs Village, the couple will reside at 529 N. Whitham St. in Fayetteville.

Mrs. William Davis Allen

Howard, Wise wed

John Featherstone of Canyon Church of Christ was the officiating minister for the marriage at 7:30 p.m. Saturday of Linda Gail Howard and Ervin Douglas Wise Jr. in the home of I. J. Howard, 2816 W. Dengar St.

Mr. and Mrs. Hobert Howard of Alamogordo, N.M., are the parents of the bride, who has a bachelor of arts degree in human relations from Lubbock Christian College.

The bridegroom, son of Ervin D. Wise of Route 3, is employed by Wardlaw Ranch at Sonora, where the couple will reside. The bride has been a land secretary with Atlantic Richfield Co.

Debby Alexander of Lane, Kan., was matron of honor, and Bill Kelly was best man. The ushers were Richard Howard of Lubbock and Gary Howard of Hays, Kan. Keven Alexander of Lane was ring bearer, and Tammy Alexander of Lane was the flower girl.

Music was under the direction of Dr. B. Wayne Hinds, director of the LCC A Cappella Chorus. Soloists were Clinton Davis and Jean Akins.

The parents of the bride presented their daughter in marriage at the double ring ceremony. She wore a Camelot-styled gown of white Quiana with Venise embroidered lace. The molded bodice featured a Princess Anne neckline framed in French knot lace. Scrolls and flowers of the the Venise lace enhanced bodice. The full circular skirt fell in folds with fullness at the back sweeping into a court train. Her veiling fell in three tiers from a Camelot capulet of matching lace. Her bouquet was a cascade of white pom daisies with baby's breath and greenery.

A reception was held in the Golf Course Road Church of Christ.

Mrs. Ervin Douglas Wise Jr.

Mrs. Brit Parker

The sister of the bride, Margie Wilson, was matron of honor. The bridesmaids were Becky Hartman and Becky Williamson of Dallas.

The reception was held in Ranchland Hill Country Club. After a trip to Lake Amistad, the couple will reside at 1203 Berkshire St., Waco.

The bride had a bachelor of science degree in elementary education from Baylor University, with a sociology minor in kindergarten endorsement. She is a member of the Texas Professional Educators and teaches fourth grade at Lakeview Elementary School in Waco. The bridegroom will receive a bachelor of business administration degree in economics in December from Baylor University.

Mrs. Gary Evans Cox

Mrs. Steven Glynn Cromwell

Cromwell says vows

BATON ROUGE, La.—Judy Diane Hannaman of Baton Rouge became the bride of Steven Glynn Cromwell of Midland, Tex. in a double ring ceremony performed at 10 a.m. Saturday in the Chapel on the Campus, Louisiana State University. Rev. Donald Tabb, pastor, officiated.

Parents of the couple are Mrs. Arthur H. Neal and Robert M. Hannaman of Baton Rouge and Mr. and Mrs. G. Stanley Cromwell of No. 9 Marchelle Court in Midland.

The bride was given in marriage by Dr. Arthur Neal. She wore a gown of white French silk organza trimmed with Venetian cutwork lace. It was designed with a Queen Anne neckline and cap sleeves. The skirt was accented with parallel lace panels and a lace-encircled hemline. The chapel train fell from a lace hand.

The bride wore a full-length veil trimmed with Venetian lace and attached to a Juliet cap. She carried., cascade of white roses, miniature carnations and gypsophilia.

Serving as the bride's attendants were Laura Broocks of Houston, Janet Mantooth of Metairie, and Suzy Bonifay, Glena Bonifay and Mrs. Steven Duplechain, all of Bayon Rouge.

Attendants to the bridegroom were G. Stanley Cromwell, the bridegroom's father of Midland; Keith Poe and John Bates Jr., both of Midland, and Patrick Lyons and Robert Hannaman, the bride's brother, both of Baton Rouge.

Wedding music was provided by Mrs. Kurt Kennedy, organist, and Randy Gurie, soloist, both of Baton Rouge.

The couple took a wedding trip to the Georgia coast, and will live on Essen Lane here when they return after Aug. 21.

Pre-nuptial courtesies included a rehearsal dinner hosted by Mr. and Mrs. Cromwell, the bridegroom's parents, in the Sheraton Baton Rouge. A bridesmaid's luncheon was held in the Schefuncta Country Club with Mrs. Henry Wicker and Laura Broocks as hostesses.

Mrs. Ricky Sain

Marcella Harrison, Sain repeat vows

Marcella Harrison, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joe Harrison, 3209 Ward St., and Ricky Sain, son of Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Sain, 720 Shell St., were married at 7 p.m. Saturday in First Assembly of God Church. The Rev. J. W. Farmer performed the double ring ceremony.

Mr. Harrison presented his daughter in marriage. She wore a gown of Dacron chiffon with an Empire bodice and stand collar of Venise lace. The sheer neckline was edged with a triple rolled ruffle and was edged in lace. Lace on ribbon trimmed the lower bodice and ended in streamers in back. The skirt had a deep ruffle and ended in a chapel train. A Camelot cap held her veil. She carried a cascade of white daisies, light blue Sweetheart roses and baby's breath.

Candy Daniels of Amarillo was flower girl, and Joe Don Rue of Wichita Falls was ring bearer.

The best man was Kenny Sain of Amarillo, cousin of the bridegroom. Tommy Harrison, brother of the bride, and Robert Briggs were groomsmen, and David Holder, Jimmy Blocker and Jerry Matthews of Midland and Joe Harrison of Wichita Falls, brother of the bride, were ushers.

Mrs. Paul Coxe was the organist. The soloist was Pam Hutson.

A reception was held in the Fellowship Hall.

The couple will reside at 1204 W. Kentucky St. She is a graduate of S. H. Rider High School in Wichita Falls and is employed by Sipes, Williamson & Aycock, Inc., as a receptionist. The bridegroom, graduate of Midland High School, is employed as a plumber's apprentice by Abbott Building Co.

Learn to accept child's limitations

By DR. WILLARD ABRAHAM
Copley News Service

Q. I read somewhere that a child can be taught any subject at any age, and hope so much that it is true.

You see, we have a mentally retarded child who seems to have rather severe learning limitations, but we continue to take him to people whom we feel can help him out. So far it has all been very frustrating. He is 6 years old.

What is the source of that statement — and do you agree with it?

A. Dr. Jerome Bruner, a well-known psychologist and educator, once wrote something like your any-subject-any-age comment, but he couldn't have meant to include children with uncorrectable learning problems.

Another writer stated that there are "three stages of parenthood" related to the mentally retarded child. First comes the shock, the "Why me — what did I do wrong?" feeling. Then many go into the search stage of seeking someone who will say that all will be well.

Third, an adjustment-acceptance level is reached.

All parents don't achieve that third stage, but for their youngster and their own welfare, it is a level to be worked toward.

I hope so much that you reach it soon.

Q. If a child has difficulty learning to read, can learning how to crawl help him?

I know that sounds kind of stupid, and that's why I worry about it. However, it has been suggested to us in all seriousness as a solution for our son's reading problem.

What do you think?

A. You're probably referring to the work of Doman and Delacato who stress a reversion to creeping-crawling and physical manipulation to help solve a child's learning problems.

As you can guess, it is a very controversial area, with many parents swearing by it and many educators swearing at it.

Indications are that at this time the research supporting such claims is still incomplete. Any child who receives the tremendous physical and emotional attention and the time involved in it will no doubt profit.

This question remains, however: is it the attention and time or the specific methods used that result in the payoff?

You may want to read more detailed materials before you decide, those of Doman and Delacato, and also rebuttals by Dr. Bruce Balow at the University of Minnesota and others.

Letters may be sent to Our Children, Copley News Service, in care of this newspaper. Questions of general interest will be answered in the column as space permits.

Cheri Rene Mitchell marries in Arkansas

SHERWOOD, Ark. — Cheri Rene Mitchell, daughter of Mrs. Lonie Mitchell of Midland, Tex., and the late Fredrick Mitchell, was married to Tony Barrett Porter, son of Mr. and Mrs. Audie Porter of Midland, at 7 p.m. Monday in the First Baptist Church of Sherwood.

Gloria Schintal, sister of the bride, was the matron of honor. The bridesmaids were Kim Schintal and Tammy West. Greg McClellan was best man, and Billy Driggers and Mark Wayne Mitchell were groomsmen. The ushers and candle lighters were Darrell Williams and Billy Driggers.

Guest wins award

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Judith Guest, whose first novel was published this year, has been given the Janet heidinger Kafka Prize in Fiction by an American Woman.

The award, presented by the University of Rochester Writers Workshop and the UR Department of English, was for "Ordinary People."

The marriage of Donna Lynn Farley to Richard Maxwell Booker was solemnized in a double ring ceremony at 7:30 p.m. Saturday in Fannin Terrace Baptist Church.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Ray Farley of 2817 Auburn Drive.

Jayne Farley, sister of the bride, was the maid of honor. Emily Armstrong was bridesmaid, and Mrs. Colin Meiser of Denton was bridesmatron. The flower girl was Kelly Overcash.

The father of the bridegroom was best man. The groomsmen were Jim Jones of Odessa, James Farley of Midland, brother of the bride, and Chad Spears of Arlington. Jeff Campbell of Lubbock and John Locke of Odessa were ushers.

Mrs. George Slaughter was organist, Vanessa Stipp was pianist and Janet Kollmeier of Fort Worth was soloist for the service.

The bridegroom's parents were host to the rehearsal dinner in the Fireplace Room of Midland Country Club.

The bride was honored with a rice bag party given by Elizabeth Russell and Lana Booth, and Mr. and Mrs. Byrne O'Neill and Mr. and Mrs. Bill Kleine hosted a shower for the couple at the Racquet Club.

Future bright for young women scientists

THE VISIBLE WOMAN

By JANET LOWE
Copley News Service

Several women had met for lunch after a volunteer's meeting, and during the conversation, the subject turned to their children, all of whom were in college.

"My Mary has her master's degree in chemistry and wanted to go for a doctorate, but her adviser told her she might as well not bother, since there aren't many jobs for women with doctorates," said one mother.

There was a brief silence. Another woman spoke. "My husband is an industrial chemist, and he says his company doesn't employ many women, because there aren't many women with qualifications."

Mary's story is a common one, and typifies the garbled messages young women in science often receive. Last year, in an attempt to discover why so few young women become scientists, the National Science Foundation funded 10 studies. The studies documented what most observers already suspected...that science-leaning women meet discriminatory attitudes early in their education. So early, in fact, that many turn away from science in junior high school. Those who progress into high school with technical aspirations are taught to set their aims lower.

One of the studies, which was conducted by John F. Christman of Loyola University, reviewed young women participants in the Student Science Training Program of the NSF from 1965 to 1974.

Christman learned that although 70 per cent of these girls had envisioned a career in the sciences while in high school, 85 per cent had changed their minds after entering college.

At Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute, a survey of math majors by Edith H. Luchins showed that nearly three times as many women as men were discouraged from a career in mathematics by teachers, advisers and family friends.

The most effective deterrent was the notion that life would be difficult for them in the sciences. While the problems of finding work served as a convincing discourager, the most effective persuasion arose from the lack of role models. Most of these youngsters hadn't known enough female scientists to visualize being comfortable in that role.

Historically, women of the sciences have been quite normal. Heloise, (1101-64), famous for her role in the passionate romance of Heloise and Abelard, was a graduate student in medicine at the time of the drama, and for 20 years after the couple's separation, she was a practicing physician. Heloise authored several books on medicine, which were advanced for her day. Marie Curie, the first woman to receive the Nobel Prize, and also the first person to receive the Nobel Prize twice, was the wife of a physicist, and the mother of another Nobel Prize-winning physicist, daughter Irene Joliot-Curie.

These are only a few of the women scientists who have been obscured by history. Just as our traditional perception of the female in science is somewhat askew, so are our modern stereotypes.

Before I lost 41 pounds, they called me "Fat Fay." Now they just whistle.

Fay Burton's True Story

When people I'd worked with for 23 years started calling me Fat Fay, I just laughed it off. After all, they were right—I weighed 166 pounds, and my size 16 clothes were getting a little tight.

My doctor didn't think my weight was funny. He said the problems I was having—tension headaches and back pains—wouldn't get better till I got thinner. His recommendation: go to Pat Walker's.

I took his advice and, using money from my grocery budget, began treatments on Pat Walker's passive exercise unit. It was easier than I thought it could be. I didn't have to change clothes or ruin my makeup or hairdo. And I didn't have to share a treatment room with anyone.

The change that came over me was fantastic. Not only did my weight start going down, but my whole mental attitude improved. If I sometimes felt tense or anxious, I knew all I had to do was go to Pat Walker's to feel relaxed again.

The counselors at the salon were so encouraging. They made sure I stayed on schedule to reach the proper weight for my bone structure.

I'm happy to report that I've reached that goal—I now weigh 125 pounds! When I go shopping, it's for size 7's. I'm such a champion of the Pat Walker's program that six of my friends have started going there, too.

I can't imagine what shape I'd be in today if I hadn't taken my doctor's advice. I do know that, at 41, I have a new lease on life...and now, instead of that nickname, I get whistles and compliments.

The Midland Symphony Guild Aug. 25 will present Blass '77 at Midland Country Club.

The widely acclaimed New York City fashion designer, Bill Blass, will narrate the showing of his fall and winter collections. These fashions will demonstrate the crisp elegance for which Blass is noted—beautiful fabrics and the sheer simplicity that American women desire. The collection is being brought to Midland through the courtesy of Julian Gold, Inc.

Cocktails and dinner will precede the modeling at this black-tie affair, and seating will be both reserved which will be filled in order of receipt and on a first-come basis. Additional information or invitations can be obtained by dialing 683-7366.

General chairman of the event is Janice Thomas. Her assistant chairman is Linda Powell, and Buffy Hodges is secretary. Louina Smith is in charge of arrangements for the formal evening, and Diana Younger and Flo White are responsible for decorations. Other chairmen and assistants are Susan Wilson, mailing; Susan Houser, Jan Bash, Jana Tucker, seating, and Carol Crain, lighting.

Proceeds of this benefit go to the Midland-Odessa Symphony and Chorale.

By BETTY W. KINSER
Copley News Service

What to do with used drapes? My readers know!

Dear Betty: How about buying a polyester batting and "tying" a thick, downy comforter to sleep under next winter? This would recycle the drapes and conserve precious energy. Use a bright contrasting yarn to tie it. So what if it is faded? 'Twill be just as warm! — Evelyn Mayes

Dear Mrs. Kinser: Used drapes make excellent yardage for covering throw pillows. My mother tried this and they look lovely. — San Francisco reader

Dear Betty: If the drapes are fiberglass, better forget it, but if they are fairly sturdy cotton, brocade, prints or denim, etc., you are in luck.

Make curtains, cushions or pillow covers for a summer cottage, camper or porch furniture. Make shopping bags. If the fabric is solid, machine applique cut-outs from other prints. These make great bazaar items. Make appliance covers, shoe bags, bedspread ruffles, shower curtains (use plastic liner).

From cotton prints, select the best parts, underline, pad or quilt, and make eyeglass cases, folding sewing kits, jewelry kits, holders for silver or flatware, purse or bag liners. Cut into strips to make braided rugs; or — for the kids — make costumes for plays. — Maggie Dea, Minneapolis, Minn.

To each and every one who shared their "used drapes" ideas, thank you. I wish I had room to list them all!

Dear Betty: Here is an idea for knit scraps or any type of fabric. Make a hanging holder for paper sacks.

You will need two hangers and a piece of fabric as wide as the length of the hanger crossbar and at least 20 inches long. Finish the two long edges. Lap one end of fabric over the bar of one hanger, the opposite end over the other hanger, stitch in place. Hang over nail or hook and you have a handy paper-sack holder. — Ellowene Marrs, Omaha

Dear Betty: How do you decide between bound buttonholes and machine-worked buttonholes? I am making a suit of 100 per cent wool tweed. The fabric is rather soft and loosely woven. Which kind of buttonholes would be best? — Mrs. Everett Gross, Crete, Neb.

Bound buttonholes work up best in a firm, snugly woven fabric.

Bound buttonholes can be difficult to work, so you don't need the added frustration of a soft, loosely woven fabric.

However, many fabrics can be "coaxed" into bound buttonholes if you first back the buttonhole area and the strips with an iron-on interfacing. I have a two-page leaflet on using this method. If is free — just ask for it next time you order leaflets.

This recipe for successful dressing combines the short white nubby wool man-tailored jacket over a camel crepe de chine shirt and skirt in contrasting patterns of white and burgundy random dots.

Mrs. Germany district director

Mrs. Judy Germany, Midland County extension agent, will serve as District 6 director and state public relations chairman of the Texas Association of Extension Home Economists (TAEHE) for 1977-78.

TAEHE is a 326-member association of county extension agents for home economics serving in most of Texas' 254 counties, and it is an affiliate of the National Association of Extension Home Economists.

Mrs. Germany has served as Midland County agent for three years. Prior to her current position, she worked as extension agent in Smith County and county extension agent-at-large in District 3.

A native of Barry, the agent earned a bachelor's degree from Texas Woman's University.

New theory on motion sickness said big advance

By EARL LANE
Newsday

For those who suffer motion sickness, a vacation can be an anxious, unpredictable time. A long-awaited trip by car, boat or plane can become a miserable experience.

There are several theories on the causes of motion sickness. Some scientists suggest that it may be due to an overstimulation of the body's balance system, but that does not really explain why some rather mild stimuli (a slow roll on a camel's back, for example) can bring on nausea, pallor and vomiting. Others suggest that it is due to a "sensory rearrangement" in which motion varies from what the eyes, inner ears and limbs have become accustomed to expect.

The most recent theory is put forth by Michel Treisman, an Oxford University psychologist, in the July 29 issue of the journal Science. Treisman says that the trigger for motion sickness is not the motion itself, but rather the repeated challenge to coordinated information being received from the eyes, the inner ears and the rest of the body. But why should that lead to nausea, vomiting and intestinal disorders? Of what evolutionary value is motion sickness? Treisman says early humans often encountered nerve poisons in tainted food. Such poisons interfered with the finely tuned coordination of the balance system. The body learned to take a natural precaution by getting rid of the food through vomiting, Treisman says.

In modern times, according to his theory, coordination of the body's balance system suffers different forms of interference — a boat ride in heavy seas, a flight through choppy air, for instance — but the response is the same as it was to the nerve poisons. "It is unfortunate that unusual or sophisticated situations, such as vehicular travel, should so often provide a stimulus of the same sort (as the nerve poisons) in man," Treisman writes. The result has been an accidental by-product of evolution, he says, "an adaptive response evoked by an inappropriate stimulus."

Kenneth E. Money, a physiologist at the University of Toronto, called Treisman's theory a major advance, one that he says "could lead to an understanding of motion sickness that fits within the normal evolutionary view of biology." Money, an expert on motion sickness, has started animal experiments to test the theory.

But whatever the genesis of the discomfort, Money and others said that motion sickness can be dealt with effectively. There are steps that you can take to minimize the problem and drugs are available to help ward off symptoms, or ease them when they appear. "You should try to minimize the total amount of head motion," Money said. "If possible, put your head on a headrest." If traveling by car, he said, position yourself in the front seat so that you can see out and breaks are better than one long break." Also, discourage children from sitting on the floor of a car and playing with a toy or reading. The constant refocusing of the eyes that is required can bring on motion sickness. Instead, teach them games related to the passing scene (spotting out-of-state license plates, for example) as an alternative. If you or your child feel the onset of motion sickness, Bhardwaj said, "it is better to get out and deal with it than to postpone action and hope that the symptoms will disappear."

Dr. Kenneth Mattucci, an otolaryngologist at North Shore University Hospital, said that persons prone to motion sickness should consider taking pills that combat it. "They should take them before they travel rather than waiting for the sickness to occur," he said. Among the most commonly used drugs are antihistamines such as dimenhydrinate (Dramamine). If you take the drugs, however, you should not drive, since they can cause drowsiness. Other drugs, available by prescription, are even more potent than the antihistamines, Money said.

While virtually all of us can suffer motion sickness, Money said that babies do not have trouble with motion sickness until they learn to walk. (According to Treisman's theory, infants are conditioned by the random and unpredictable movements that they experience when being carried. In addition, they are fed milk and preselected foods that are unlikely to have toxins. From an evolutionary point of view, they had no need to develop a defense mechanism until later in life.)

Persons who have lost inner-ear function also appear to be immune to motion sickness. "The U.S. Navy did some experiments with some persons who were profoundly deaf," Money said. The volunteers were subjected to stomach-wrenching aerobatics aboard airplanes and taken on cruises through stormy seas. "They got scared, but they didn't get sick," Money said.

"If you are on a ship, it is better to be on deck and looking at the distant horizon. The visual impression will correspond to inertial space," Money said. "If you are below decks, it is better to lie down and have your eyes closed." While some suggest that resting below decks may allow more time to think about becoming seasick, Money said, "The psychological component of motion sickness is usually overrated." But, again, it is best to stay above deck whenever possible.

Money added that seasickness on ocean liners and carsickness among children appear to be the most common forms of motion sickness. Surveys have shown that on the average, about 25 per cent of the passengers on an ocean liner will become seasick within the first two or three days at sea, Money said. Most adapt to the situation and fare well for the rest of the trip.

Whatever the vehicle, motion sickness can be aggravated by a lack of ventilation, unpleasant odors and loud noise. "If the car windows are completely closed or the air conditioning is not working properly, then you can have a problem," said Dr. Bushan Bhardwaj, an associate professor of family medicine at the State University at Stony Brook. He said that traveling on a full stomach also aggravates the problem. "It is better to have several light meals as you travel than to have one large meal," Bhardwaj said.

Woman writer finds adventure in New Hebrides

By ANDREW ROSENTHAL

NEW YORK (AP) — When Charlene Gourguechon quit her public relations job to join a French film crew en route to the South Pacific, she sublet her New York apartment and left her possessions behind because she "figured five or six months would be about it."

But those six months in 1968 quickly became three years spent living with, studying and getting to know personally, the natives of the New Hebrides, a remote sprinkling of islands about 1,000 miles east of Australia. During that time, she helped discover a tribe that had never before seen outsiders and she gathered enough material for a series of articles and a book.

She also completely changed her life. Mrs. Gourguechon married the group leader, Jacques Gourguechon, in the New Hebrides and never returned to live in New York or resume her job at the Vivian Beaumont Theater.

Mrs. Gourguechon's book, "Journey to the End of the World," was published in France, where she lives, about two years ago and was recently translated into English by the bilingual author.

"I think I felt ready for it," said the 33-year-old adventurer about her overnight decision to drop everything and join Kal Muller and Gourguechon on their expedition into the jungle.

"If it hadn't been this adventure, it would have been something else," she recalled in an interview. "I wasn't really planning anything, it was just a feeling I had."

Mrs. Gourguechon initially was invited along because the island societies are o es in which men and women do not mix freely. Her job was to get to know the women, whose position, she said, is so inferior to men that they are not even given names.

So, armed with her college French and "an open mind," Mrs. Gourguechon joined the little band of freelance filmmakers.

"We didn't have much money," she recalled. "We got small contributions and all we really needed was our airplane tickets. When you get out there you don't have very many expenses."

The expedition was intended at first simply to be a scouting mission of sorts, Mrs. Gourguechon said. But the group found so much material they decided to stay on.

"And it was after a period of about five months that we stumbled on the Mbotogote," she said. "You can't pick up and leave right after you've discovered people who have never seen outsiders before."

At their home base on Espirite Santo Island, the group learned to speak Pidgin. "It's a real language," Mrs. Gourguechon insisted. "It's a mistake to say it's a distorted form of English. Pidgin is based on English, Spanish, French and Portuguese, but the form is Melanesian."

But even with their knowledge of Pidgin and the help of local interpreters, Mrs. Gourguechon said, the expedition found it hard to communicate with the islanders.

"It took us a while to learn you don't ask questions like you'd ask people in our country," she explained. "You don't ask 'Why?' because they don't know why. Things just are."

But, says the author of dozens of anthropological articles and one children's book, the natives were eager to cooperate once they learned the outsiders were serious in their interest.

Texas PTA offers teachers assistance

AUSTIN — Financial assistance for Texas teachers who wish to continue their education is available through the Texas PTA.

The Texas PTA announced plans to award eight in-service scholarships to career teachers in Texas who wish to enroll for summer study in 1978. Four scholarships of $800 each will be awarded for nine hours of summer coursework, and four scholarships of $600 each will be given for six hours of study.

To be eligible for consideration, the scholarship applicant must be teaching in a school with a local PTA unit in membership with the Texas Congress of Parents and Teachers, and must also be a member of a local PTA. Career teachers are considered to be those with at least three years of teaching experience, in Texas, immediately prior to their application. Prior recipients are not eligible. The scholarships may be used in any college or university in the continental United States. Study must be in a field to improve the applicant's teaching proficiency.

Applications for the Texas PTA 1978 Summer In-Service Scholarship for teachers will be available after Sept. 1, from the Texas PTA, 408 W. 11th St., Austin, Texas, 78701. They must be returned to the same address by Jan. 1, 1978.

California spa becomes vegetarian fitness resort

By MARIAN BURROS
The Washington Post

TECATE, Mexico — The day begins with a sunrise jog or walk in the Sierra Madre hills. Depending on how early you get up, you might also be able to fit in a class of wake-up exercises before breakfast.

There is time for three more exercise sessions before lunch, and three more between lunch and dinner. There is plenty of opportunity for walking, because the buildings have deliberately been set far apart.

Rancho La Puerta, on the Baja California peninsula just south of the border, is a vegetarian fitness resort that began 37 years ago as a vegetarian health spa. In between it was a fat farm when those were popular. Gradually it has evolved into what it is today, a place for men and women to lose weight and become fit.

It was planned as an experiment in living with organically grown foods free of chemical preservatives and of saturated fat. Tobacco and alcohol were also off limits.

In 1940 that was pretty far out. The rest of the world is beginning to catch up. Today vegetarianism continues to gather converts. Few people think they are strange. Some people think they even might have found the right ticket to a longer life.

The low-calorie, low-sodium, low-cholesterol diet at the 40-acre ranch is lacto-ovo vegetarian, made up of lots of whole grains, fresh fruits and vegetables with some eggs and milk products. It is satisfying, nutritious and best of all good tasting. Much of the food is organically grown; everything is prepared in the small kitchen at the ranch including the famouse Tecate or Ranch bread of whole wheat flour and honey.

Most of the guests are there not only to tone up, but to slim down. The standard menu is 1,000 calories a day, which ensures safe weight loss. For those who want to maintain their weight, additional dishes are offered.

All is attractively served buffet-style in a dining room that reserves one small area for those who cannot give up cigarettes. It's called Nicotine Nook.

When the weather is warm enough, as it is most of the time, people eat outside under the grape arbor.

The grape arbor and the many grape vines that grow around the ranch provide the sparkling grape cider that was once considered a curative. Today it is available to those who want to try it and fits somewhere between grape juice and fermented grapes or wine.

Back in the days the grape cider was considered a curative, Rancho La Puerta, which was set up by its present owner, Deborah Szekely Mazzanti, and her former husband, Dr. Edmond Szekely, was like a commune where people pitched their own tents and helped garden and cook to earn their keep. Over the years the ranch has become far more luxurious, with individual adobe casitas (little houses), each decorated in rustic Mexican style, to accommodate the 110 guests.

Unlike Mazzanti's other spa, the more expensive and more regimented Golden Door in Escondido, Calif., guests are left to their own devices when it comes to determining their program. Some choose a vigorous program, partaking of every single exercise class; some intersperse the exercises with sauna, massage, facials; some just sit around.

But those who are determined to lose weight can, and realtively easily, unless they sneak off to the little town of Tecate, where they can gorge themselves at El Passetto (Mexican, American and Italian food).

But there really is no reason to seek a change from the ranch meals; they are varied, well prepared and delicous.

At dinner soup is often served as a first course, followed by a salad with a yogurt-blue cheese dressing, a mixed vegetable quiche with eggs and cheese and a fruit dessert, sometimes in pudding form, sometimes fresh with a topping, sometimes even a pie or custard.

A condiment table always holds bowls of green onions, cilantro (Chinese parsley, which has a much more pungent flavor than parsley) and a marvelous Mexican salsa, or hot sauce made with tomatoes, hot chiles, green onions and cilantro. These add zesty flavor to the meals.

Curiously, just when more and more people are becoming vegetarian, Rancho La Puerta has decided to yield to numerous guests who are not yet prepared to "go all the way." For years there was no meat, fish or poultry. Today fresh fish is served twice a week, tuna fish once. Of course, you don't have to eat it.

TECATE BREAD

1-2 cup honey
3 1-2 cups warm water
2 tablespoons yeast
1 teaspoon fennel seeds
1 teasposeeds
8 cups whole wheat flour
1 teaspoon salt
3-4 cup vegetable oil

Mix honey and water. Dissolve yeast in mixture. Let rest 10 minutes. Add fennel and caraway. Mix flour with salt and then stir into yeast mixture. Knead dough for 30 minutes, adding oil gradually as dough requires to keep from sticking. Divide into two and work each for a few minutes. Oil dough, shape into loaves and place in oiled loaf pans. Let rise 10 minutes, then place in 450 degree oven for 15 minutes. Lower temperature to 350 degrees and bake 1 hour; lower temperature again to 250 degrees and bake 1 hour and 15 minutes longer. Let bread cool on racks before removing from pan.

SALSA MEXICANA

(Approximately 2 1-2 cups)
2 cups finely chopped, peeled and seeded tomatoes
1-3 cup chopped green onion
1-3 cup chopped cilantro
1 clove garlic, minced
2 canned or fresh hot chiles, finely chopped, about 2 tablespoon
1 teaspoon salt
1-4 teaspoon dried oregano

Combine all ingredients and chill for several hours. Serve with tostadas, over cottage cheese, with guacamole, or just as a side dish.

TOSTADAS

(4 servings, one tortilla each)
2 tablespoons oil
4 corn tortillas
1 cup cooked pinto beans, mashed
8 thing slices tomato
4 thin slices Spanish onion
1-4 cup grated Romano cheese
1 small ripe avocado, cut in 8 slices
1 cup finely chopped romaine lettuce
4 tablespoons or more Salsa Mexicana (see recipe)
4 black olives, sliced

Heat oil; fry tortillas on both sides until crisp and golden. Pat with paper towels to remove surplus oil. Spread 1-4 cup mashed beans on each tortilla add 2 slices tomato and one slice onion. Sprinkle each with one tablespoon cheese; add 2 avocado slices, 1-4 cup lettuce, one tablespoon or more salsa and one olive.

SPINACH PIE

(2 pies 8 servings)
1-2 cup chopped scallions, white and green parts
2 tablespoons oil
2 pounds fresh spinach, stems removed, washed, dried and chopped
1-3 cup finely minced parsley
1 teaspoon dill weed
1-2 pound feta cheese, crumbled or creamed cottage cheese
5 eggs, beaten
Whole wheat pastry crusts (see recipe)

Saute scallions in hot oil until tender. Combine remaining ingredients and add scallions. Spoon into pie crusts and bake at 350 degrees for 30 to 45 minutes or until eggs are set. Serve hot or warm.

WHOLE WHEAT PIE CRUSTS

(Makes 2 crusts)
1 1-2 cup whole wheat pastry flour
1-2 cup rye flour
1-4 teaspoon salt
3 tablespoons oil
3 tablespoons sesame tahini
1 tablespoon sesame seeds
1-3 cup or more water
1 egg white

Mix flours with salt. Add oil, tahini and sesame seeds and mix with hands to distribute throughout flour. Add water, a little at a time, kneading until dough is workable. Divide dough in two and roll each portion out into a circle to fit into a 9-inch pie plate. Brush bottoms with egg white and prick bottom and sides with fork. Bake at 400 degrees for 8 minutes. Cool and fill with spinach mixture.

VEGETABLE CRUSTLESS QUICHE

1 tablespoon oil
1 medium onion, thinly sliced
1 garlic clove, minced
1 green pepper, chopped
1 cup sliced cauliflower
1 cup sliced mushrooms
1 cup fresh, frozen or canned corn
1 1-2 tablespoons drained, chopped pimiento
6 eggs beaten
3-4 cup grated Monterey Jack cheese
Salt to taste
1-2 teaspoon each cumin and marjoram
1-8 teaspoon curry
Paprika for garnish

Heat oil in skillet over medium heat. In hot oil lightly saute onions, garlic, pepper, cauliflower and mushrooms. Then cover and cook over low heat for about 5 minutes longer. Stir in corn and pimiento. Then add eggs, cheeses, salt, cumin, marjoram and curry. Spoon into greased shallow 2 quart casserole; sprinkle with paprika and bake 45 to 50 minutes at 325 degrees or until eggs are set.

YOGURT FRUIT BAVARIAN

Mix gelatin in juice to soften. Dissolve over low heat or over hot water, stirring. Cool. Beat yolks; stir in fruit, honey, lemon peel, juice and the gelatin mixture. Add yogurt. Beat whites until stiff. Fold into yogurt mixture. Pour into sherbet glasses and chill. Garnish with fresh mint leaves.

(6 one-cup servings)
2 packages (tablespoons) unflavored gelatin
1-2 cup fruit juice (orange, pineapple or apple)
4 eggs, separated
2 cups chopped fruit (strawberries, apples, blueberries, bananas)
1 1-2 tablespoons honey
1-4 teaspoon grated lemon peel
1-4 cup lemon juice
2 cup plain yogurt.

(About 1 1-2 cups)
1 1-4 cup plain yogurt
3 tablespoons honey
1-2 teaspoon each grated lemon and orange peel

Any wine can be labelled Bordeaux as long as it is grown and bottled in the Bordeaux region as designated by law. But because something is labelled Bordeaux, it does not mean it is going to be a great wine. The Bordeaux region is divided, again by law, into smaller regions or districts, and these district names are also on the bottle. Of course, the wine varies from district to disdrict, but there are five Bordeaux districts that can guarantee excellent wines almost everything. They are Medoc, Graves, St. Emilion, and Pomerol. These areas are known for their reds and whites and a dinner served with one of these wines is bound to be a taste experience.

Wine appreciation can be a beautiful experience, and the friendly moustache of IMPERIAL LIQUORS, 3209 W. Wadley, 694-4256 can guide you in the selection of the best wine to suit your taste. We feature an extensive selection of imported and domestic wines, and if we do not have what you want in stock, we can get it for you. Drive-up window service available. Open: 10-9 Mon.-Sat.

WINE WISDOM:

Late grads lose pomp

AIR FORCE ACADEMY, Colo. (AP) — Instead of the Air Force Band and the Thunderbirds, they got a taped recording of the National Anthem and a sailplane flying overhead.

As three late grads from the U.S. Air Force Academy received their diplomas, 20 people looked on in Falcon Stadium, the academy's football stadium.

There were 15,000 persons there on June 1 when Defense Secretary Harold Brown delivered the commencement address and the 851 other cadets in the Class of 1977 received their commissions as second lieutenants.

Lt. Ken Wood, one of the June graduates, delivered the address Friday. The late graduates were Mark Kenney, Mazon, Ill.; Gary Fazio, New York City, and Lawrence Luckette, Colorado Springs. They did not graduate in June because they had not completed required academic courses, work they have since finished.

"We were all shooting for 'Tail End Charlie,' but I guess we overshot it," said Kenny.

Stampede begins Friday

The Buffalo Gal Stampede, which concludes Sunday, will be held at the Buffalo Trail Scout Ranch in the Davis Mountains.

The weekend includes a history of the ranch, and learning new games and songs for the Cub Scout troops for the coming year. The women also will put on skits, learn about campfires and have the option to hike to Needle Rock.

Participants are asked to bring a bedroll, cot, foam or air mattress, towel and soap.

MINI RECIPES

Cut-up, soft, pitted prunes that come in packages are a delicious addition to a stuffing for chicken, duck, turkey or goose.

Family Fair to offer prizes, food, midway

Prizes, Mexican and American food and carnival rides for children will be part of the offerings at this year's Our Lady of Guadalupe Catholic Church's Family Fair.

The annual fair will be held from noon to 10 p.m. Aug. 20-21 on the church grounds at the corner of Tyler St. and Cherry Lane.

Also to be featured at the event will be live music and about 15 booths, including cake walk, small Reno, washer pitching, penning pitching, hamburgers and burritos.

The proceeds from the 1977 fair will go towards improvements on the church building, parish hall and grounds. The money also will be used to help pay for the dwelling which was recently purchased to provide a home for the church's two Sisters who are doing spiritual and social work in the parish and the community.

C. R. Navarrete is general chairman for the fair and he is assisted by Jesse Carrasco.

Shadow box well preserves old Victorian needlepoint

By ERICA WILSON

DEAR MS. WILSON: I have a piece of old Victorian beadwork—approximately 16 inches by 16 inches—which is quite worn around the edges, and there is a hole in the middle. Many background beads are missing around the edges and some parts of the center. I think I can repair the picture by making it smaller and using the discarded beads for fill-ins. My question is, when I have repaired same, should I frame it in a shadow box? In this way, I thought there would be far less wear and tear on the canvas.—Deborah Rosenberg, Cape Coral, Fla.

DEAR DEBORAH: Sounds like you've solved your dilemma beautifully. Decreasing the size of the beadwork and using the extra beads should work fine. And the shadow box is a perfect way to preserve the Victorian stitchery.

DEAR MS. WILSON: I am making a needlepoint to donate to a temple. But I know that once I give it to them, little care will be taken of it. My problem is, how can I preserve it and what can I put on it to do so? I know you object to glass. It truly is too nice to put away from view.—Mrs. Selma Adams, Bronx, N.Y.

DEAR MRS. ADAMS: Because needlepoint is a tapestry, it's extremely hard-wearing, so don't worry too much about its life expectancy; it should do very well. I do object to glass, because your stitches won't be shown to their best advantage, but people at your temple can still keep the work dust-free by lightly vacuuming it from time to time. It's best to keep the nozzle from actually touching the stitches; just get close enough to take up any loose dust around the canvas.

DEAR ERICA: I hope you can help me; I'm looking for crochet patterns to make hand puppets. I have scanned many books, but they've turned up nothing.—Mrs. James Pickell, Chicago, Ill.

DEAR MRS. PICKELL: I'm sure there must be some available, although I don't personally know of any. Perhaps helpful readers who may have been making things for bazaars or fairs may help by sending their patterns to me. Meanwhile, why not make some of those delightful puppets out of "yo-yo" quilt circles? For each yo-yo, you just cut an "O" out of fabric, stitch a circle of straight stitches about an eighth of an inch from the outside edge, gather it up, iron the circles down flat, and then string several of them together (just like stringing a necklace of beads) to make arms and legs and a body. For the head, use the toe of a baby's sock, gather it at the base, stuff it and work eyes and nose in embroidery cotton. Sew on a hat made from one more yo-yo, or make "hair" from long strands of wool threaded through the top of the head.

Steve Streuns' mark 50 years

MINERAL WELLS — Mr. and Mrs. Steve Streun of this city, former residents of Midland from 1942-62, were honored on their 50th wedding anniversary with a formal reception in the Holiday Inn here.

Hosting the event, attended by 270 guests, were children of the couple and their families. They are Mr. and Mrs. James McKinney, Mr. and Mrs. Russell Streun and Mr. and Mrs. Joe Streun, all of Midland; Mr. and Mrs. Lynn Wallace of Dallas; Mr. and Mrs. James A. Streun of Paulsbo, Wash.; M/Sgt. and Mrs. Charles F. Streun of Shawnee, Okla.; the Rev. and Mrs. G. Mack Streun of Plainview; Mr. and Mrs. Don Moore of Pasadena, Tex.; Mr. and Mrs. Richard Kirk of Missouri City, Tex.; Mr. and Mrs. Sam Streun of Mineral Wells and Mr. and Mrs. Don Streun, also of Mineral Wells.

The serving table was centered with an arrangement of yellow roses, shasta daisies, a gold punch fountain and gold coffee service. The four-tiered cake was made by the honorees' daughters-in-law.

Mr. and Mrs. Streun were married Aug. 8, 1927 in Hobert, Okla. Mrs. Streun is the former Irene Walker.

EDITOR'S NOTE — There's Ranger Paul of the National Parks Service. The campfire and pup tents, chow from a stew pot, ghost stories and giggles. All the trappings of kids camping out in the 26,000-acre Gateway National Recreation Area. But a neon sign in the distance is a glowing reminder that they haven't even left Brooklyn and are only a few miles from home.

By G. G. LaBELLE

BROOKLYN, N.Y. (AP) — We're tenting tonight on the old camp ground — camp ground in the largest of the five boroughs of the nation's largest city. Were it a city alone, which it was until Jan. 1, 1898, it would be America's fourth largest.

Brooklyn is hardly the place for a rural retreat. It is, in fact, a city still, with its own special past and present. The Dodgers are gone, but Ebbets Field is not forgotten. There are the Ebbets Field apartments. The Brooklyn Eagle — a newspaper Walt Whitman edited — is gone too, but more than a dozen weekly papers serve the disparate neighborhoods. And the Brooklyn Bridge is ever present and ever lovely.

Some say the borough even has its own language — spoken most eloquently by the Kid from Brooklyn, the inevitable character in World War II movies who spoke "poils" of cynical city wisdom but sacrificed for his buddies in the end.

Today Brooklyn's nearly 2½ billion citizens live in stately brownstones, decaying tenements, appartments and homes old and new, large and small. The City is a tangle of streets, stores, parks, wharves and wharehouses, so confusingly vast that Thomas Wolfe once wrote a story about it called "Only the Dead Know Brooklyn."

It's just that, though, for two dozen of Paulette Eisenstadt's first graders from P.S. 8, kids from Brooklyn not used to telling stories around a campfire, picking wild berries or romping amid tall, seaside grass.

The youngsters set out with their teacher and a dozen parents from their school near the Brooklyn Bridge, which spans the East River to lower Manhattan and just a coin's toss from Wall Street. There many of the neighborhood daddies work.

The bus goes past the Williamsburg Savings Bank (Brooklyn's tallest building but at 512 feet a country cousin to Manhattan's 1,353-foot World Trade Center), past Prospect Park, past the parlor of a fortune-teller whose sign identifies her as "Sister Rice, Indian Reader," past the Unique Boutique — which is anything but unique on an avenue lined with clothing shops, bakeries, delicatessens and other small businesses.

There the bus turns into the the Gateway National Recreation Area which, had it not been set aside as old Floyd Bennett airfield 40 years ago, would have been only a mirror of all they had just passed.

Magically, it isn't. On the very first hike from National Park Service building to campsite, bird are nesting, toads are hopping, rabbits scampering.

Children run a few steps ahead, lie in the thigh-high grass and disappear; giggling, from parents' eyes.

Then there are the tents lent by the Park Service and set up with the instruction and sometimes the aid of Ranger Paul. There is Ranger Paul himself, young, patient, slow-talking, the perfect forest ranger in his brown uniform and Canadian Mountie hat.

Ranger Paul replies to a question that his last name is Gates, he is 21, from Franklin, Vt., a student on the work end of a work-study program in law enforcement at Boston's Northeastern University. He declines a glass of wine but accepts two helpings of Mrs. Eisenstadt's stew, brought from home in a pot big enough to feed all.

After supper, there is running, games, wandering, wrestling, falling down, lying in the grass looking up at stars much brighter than the ones seen from lamp-lit city streets.

Then Paul builds a campfire, children and parents sing and roast marshmallows, and Paul tells ghost stories. One is about Charlie, who haunts youngsters who wander away from camp.

Then, into the tents and into bed. Lying in a sleeping bag, cuddling a stuffed animal, giggling with a best friend. Then, out of the tents. Running to giggle in another tent with another best friend.

They do, becoming shadowy monsters, looming over pup tents with flashlights shining behind them. The girls dutifully shriek.

Around midnight, mercifully, it really is bedtime. Parents now talk about kids, apartments and houses, bills, jobs.

It is peaceful in the country. Country? Not really; it's Brooklyn, remember. One parent looks into the night and asks, "Did anyone bring his Alexander's charge card?" Everyone looks. In the distance is the neon sign of Alexander's department store at Kings Plaza.

Brooklyn is still all around. Gateway's 26,000 acres, which also include parts of New Jersey and the boroughs of Queens and Staten Island, were set aside by Congress as an open place for city folks only five years ago. Floyd Bennett field, 1,050 of those acres, was transferred from the Navy to the Interior Department two years ago.

The airfield tarmac is still there, though grass grows through the cracks. Portable toilets rest on it in front of hangars that served waves of planes in World War II but now are hollow and ghostly.

At 5 a.m., sleep is ended by other reminders of aviation and of Floyd Bennett, the aviator who was with Admiral Byrd on the first flight over the North Pole in 1926. Jetliners roar overhead from nearby Kennedy and LaGuardia airports. Children wander hand-in-hand to portable potties. There is breakfast of fruit and cereal, and Ranger Paul reappears.

Next, the ranger leads a hike to Jamaica Bay. There are birds and toads, wild flowers and wild berries. Coming back, berry-stained hands clutch carefully collected flowers. Berry-stained mouths yawn. Arms and legs are bumpy with mosquito bites.

The campout ends quickly now. Lunch is bologna and salami with Mrs. Eisenstadt's home-made bread. Tents come down. Gear is packed. The yellow school bus arrives for its cargo of weary children.

Embittered widow Slovik blasts Army

WASHINGTON (AP) — Crippled and destitute, the gray-haired widow of the only American soldier executed for desertion since the Civil War implored reporters to "splash it all over. Let the world know what kind of Army we've got."

Mrs. Antoinette Slovik had just learned that Army Secretary Clifford Alexander had upheld the World War II conviction and execution of her husband, Pvt. Eddie Slovik.

Sitting in a Washington hotel room, the embittered woman poured out her grief as the wife of a friend held her hand in at attempt to comfort her.

"They (the Army) refused to admit error when Eisenhower was in there because they didn't want to embarrass him.

"But Eisenhower now is gone ..." she said.

"Why was nobody notified — not even me — until nine years later?" she asked.

Friday's announcement said Alexander had affirmed the recommendations of civilian review board.

"Although the report of the board expressed sympathy and compassion for Mrs. Slovik, it found no basis for changing Private Slovik's military records," the statement said.

It also said "the record clearly reflects that Private Slovik deserted to avoid combat duty" and the law "precludes payment in the case of individuals who are convicted of desertion"

Alexander in effect rejected arguments by Mrs. Slovik's attorney, Bernard Edelson, that the Army committed "error and injustice" in executing the 24-year-old infantry man in France on Jan. 31, 1945.

Edelson contended that Slovik was singled out to deter other U.S. soldiers from deserting. The court-martial conviction and death sentence were reviewed by Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhowr, supreme commander in Europe in World War II and later president.

Slovik confessed to deserting twice, in August 1944 and then two months later. He returned to his unit both times.

Until recently a resident of a Detroit nursing home, Mrs. Slovik has been staying for the last few months at the home of a friend

By EARL ARONSON
AP Newsfeatures

Picture this: For about 50 miles from Athens toward Corinth the New National Motorway of Greece is bordered with oleander, pink and white, that bloom most of the year.

As our bus carried us to the historic canal, the Isthmus of Corinth and the Plains of Argolis, there were lush fields of tobacco, oranges, (including the small mandarins), lemons, olives, apricots and cereal grains bordered by the sea and rugged mountains of rock. We had never seen so many beehives.

Near Nauplion, the Argolis capital guarded by ancient fortresses, there were hibiscus, wild chestnut and trees laden with tiny oil olives that will ripen in January, flailed from the trees by sticks or plucked laboriously by hand. Weeping willows were hung with moss and figs grew in clusters from trees with hand-shaped leaves.

There were candle pine among the common evergreens, with new growth a foot or more long, and mimosa was in brushlike bloom.

Another day, along the shore, in hazy view of the island of Evios, there was bitter bay leaf, identified with some question by a native friend as picri dafni or coriander, used for seasoning. And we walked in the hotel garden and picked sprigs of fragrant white jasmin, growing near bamboo and pomegranate.

In the Attica area, we coursed through a choice winegrowing region, site of the Temple of Dionysus, god of wine, where the grapes grew with no supports. We stopped at a gas station at Tanqua, surprised to find a lovely outdoor dining area shaded by mulberry trees. We tasted the blackberry-shaped berries and subsequently at Delphi we also found red and black mulberries.

En route to Thebes and the plains of Thessaly, the roadside oleanders were interspersed with yellow flowers described to us as "Sparta."

Here also cotton is grown in abundance. Greece, we were told, is the only European country raising cotton for export. In this fertile valley there also were vast fields of wheat and other cereal grains, with stone and concrete irrigation canals, and huge fields of onion gone purposely to seed.

Looming overhead at Meteora were the famed 24 perpendicular rocks, some bearing ancient monasteries and convents, built 600 years ago. At Varlaam Monastery, the size of the church was limited by the size of the rock. We crossed a chacrude but sturdy bridge, noticing tiny plants growing in crevices in the centuries-old walls.

Old cancer treatment restudied

EDITOR'S NOTE — Doctors at several medical centers are debating use of an old treatment for early breast cancer as an alternative to mastectomy. The treatment, external and internal radiation, is getting renewed attention because of emotionally charged debates over the need for breast removal.

By BRIAN SULLIVAN

NEW YORK (AP) — A treatment for early breast cancer, dating back some 50 years, is attracting renewed interest as an alternative to breast removal in a few medical centers in this country.

The treatment involves applying a beam of radiation to the breast, followed by implanting radioactive substances directly to the breast tumor.

In the implantation, either radium needles or seeds of iridium-192 in flexible plastic tubes are inserted into the breast.

But the use of radiation treatment remains controversial, with most physicians recommending some form of mastectomy, or removal of the breast. The latest report on the radiation treatment is from the Joint Center for Radiation Therapy at the Harvard Medical School, published in the latest issue of Cancer, the journal of the American Cancer Society.

"Few topics in medicine engender as much emotional response as the treatment of primary breast cancer," the Harvard team writes. "This appears true of both patient and physician alike.

The Harvard group says the intensity of the argument has prompted a reevaluation of methods for local control of breast cancer, and it has been encouraged by recent reports of the effectiveness of chemotherapy after treatment.

Radium implants fell into disuse because the large radium devices were painful to patients and exposed physicians to excess radiation.

"Radiation therapy without mastectomy," the Harvard researchers say, "is a local treatment which offers the potential for local control with a minimal functional or cosmetic impairment."

The words "local control" are a key to the different approaches. Dr. Samuel Hellman, director of the Harvard center, says that in many cases the cancer already has spread at the time of detection, so the form of treatment will not determine whether the patient is cured or not.

By local control, Dr. Hellman means the prevention of local recurrence of the tumor in the breast, regardless whether the cancer may spread elsewhere.

"It would ... seem that most patients who are to develop distant metastases have done so before clinical presentation and that local recurrence is primarily a local problem," Dr. Hellman has said.

"This problem can be serious and disturbing for patients, and its prevention is, of course, a desired end. It would be of considerable functional and cosmetic advantage to achieve local control without requiring mastectomy."

But at an institution such as Memorial Sloan-Kettering Cancer Center in New York, experts disagree with the radiation approach. Dr. Roy Ashikari, acting chief of the breast service, says such treatments as lump removal and radiation are inferior to surgical treatment in the long run.

Dr. Ashikari says that 75 per cent of the women with early breast cancer, and with no spread of the cancer to the lymph nodes under the armpit, can be alive — "cured" — at the end of 10 years. Even with evidence of spread to the nodes, he says, the cure rate is 40 per cent at 10 years.

At Sloan-Kettering, some 500 to 600 cases of breast cancer a year are treated, the largest number in the country, Dr. Ashikari says. And he argues that radiation treatment has no such long-term results yet. Use of radiation and radioactive implants, he says, can control local breast disease; but "there is a doubt" about cure.

Dr. Hellman says his results so far are comparable to those resulting from general surgical techniques, but he adds that it is still too early to evaluate long-term survival.

The use of external radiation and radioactive implants as an alternative to mastectomy is not new, Dr. Hellman notes. The first good scientific paper on the subject was published in 1937 in the British Medical Journal, covering nearly 10 years of experience. Now, in addition to the Harvard work, the treatment is being employed at such places as the M.D. Anderson Hospital and Tumor Institute in Houston, Yale University, Jefferson Medical College and Hahnemann Medical College, both in Philadelphia, and the University of Southern California-Los Angeles County Medical Center. The procedure is popular in Europe, especially in France.

Dr. Bernard Pierquin, of the Henri Mondor Hospital in Creteil, France, told a cancer symposium in San Francisco recently of his experience with 410 patients. Of these, 80 per cent had early stage breast cancer, and the five-year survival rate was 90 per cent. He said surgical treatment is associated with a comparable fiveyear survival.

Dr. Hellman's team reported reviewing 150 consecutive patients treated primarily by radiation at the Harvard center between July 1, 1968 and Dec. 31, 1974, and updated in telephone interviews.

Of 84 cancers in 80 patients with early breast cancer, termed Stage I and Stage II, local control was achieved in all but one case, Dr. Hellman said, for periods ranging from two years to eight years. But for women with more advanced cancers, Stage III, the treatment was less successful. Of 86 Stage III patients, there have been 28 local recurrences.

The external beam radiation consists of a total dosage from a linear accelerator of 5,000 rads, followed by implantation of the radioactive substances for two or three days.

Old balloonist won't give up

By VAL CORLEY

INDIANOLA, Iowa (AP) — At 81, hot air balloonist and parachutist Eddie Allen considers himself middle-aged, with a long career ahead of him.

"I've made 3,253 ascensions and parachute jumps in every state in the union," he said at the National Hot Air Balloon Championships here. "I'm going to still continue until I get to be 160 and then I'll quit."

Allen hasn't flown his old fashioned smoke-filled balloon since he crashed and was seriously injured at last year's championship meet. But he has ridden in several of the modern balloons in this year's championship which ended Saturday.

Allen's balloon is made of four-ounce cotton sheeting instead of the modern lightweight nylon. Instead of a basket for three or four passengers, the pilot sits on a trapeze and jumps with a parachute when he is ready to land.

Allen says he has recovered from the internal injuries he suffered last year and will go up in his balloon and bail out at next year's contest.

"The crash was my own fault," said Allen of Batavia, N.Y. "I forgot to put a safety strap on."

Following the crash, Allen was in and out of the hospital for surgery and other treatment. "But now, I'm all in good shape. The doctor examined me and said 'Eddie, you're 100 per cent.'"

Allen took his first balloon flight in New York on Sept. 27, 1912.

"Do I ever remember it. I was 15 years old. I was really scared and thrilled at the same time. Anyone today who says they don't get butterflies are talking through their hat."

Sheik commutes between continents to watch races

By SALLY QUINN
The Washington Post

LONDON — Sheik Essa Khalifa is tickled as can be. He sits in his suite at the London Hilton hotel high above the verdant Hyde Park and grins. Empty bottles of champagne adorn the tables and chests in the suite, a testimony to the previous nights' celebration. He has reason to be jolly. His colt, Jellaby, won the first prize at Ascot the day before earning him 6,101 pounds or about $10,300.

Sheik (pronounced shake) Khalifa loves horses, so much so that he commutes by Concorde from Bahrain every two weeks to watch various of his 20 European horses run. But he is tired of buying English horses, especially since, as he claims, they are descendants from three Arabian stallions which were brought to England in the 1800s. And now, the English have banned Arabian horses from racing in England.

The Sheik, a first cousin of the ruler of Bahrain, finds this so annoying that he has decided to build his own 7-million-pound racetrack back in Bahrain, with Arabian race horses, of course. "It will be green and watered," he says proudly.

There is one drawback to the racetrack and that is the betting problem. "The majority of Arabs don't gamble," he explains. "So the young princes in Bahrain, Saudi Arabia and Kuwait decided it wouldn't be much fun not to bet so he will sell betting tickets and the proceeds will go to charity. That is a sign that things are changing."

Change is important to Sheik Khalifa. And he is moving forward on that score himself. He went to Ascot the day before in a top hat and morning coat rather than in his native robes and headdress. "It was the first time I ever wore a top hat," he says with a chuckle. "I couldn't keep it on. And I must admit you feel a little odds at first. Then you mix with the crowd and it's okay."

Khalifa is discovering more and more that when you mix it's okay. And he is concerned that many Arabs are not mixing, and because of that, creating a bad image of themselves in London.

He talks earnestly about it over croissants and coffee in his suite the morning after the race. He is wearing a body-hugging jersey shirt, open at the neck, and slightly belled trousers, and the biggest yellow diamond ring you ever saw in your life. Sheik Khalifa is in his early 40s, has a round, pleasant face and a rather pudgy build. He is a little shy, very gentlemanly, hospitable.

"If you talk to the English who've lived in Arabia and mixed with people there," he says, "we have a very close friendship with them. The worry is about those who don't know us. But we don't blame them."

And there is always the problem of the English lumping all the Arabs into one category. "I myself don't understand Egyptians or Lebanese," he says. "And I feel strange going to Tunis, Jordan or Syria."

"Our part," he says, "the Gulf, Bahrain, Kuwait, Qatar, the Emirates, maybe we all have the same habits. Maybe in Beirut and Syria they are more advanced."

Still, he understands that the English haven't really had much time to figure all that out. And he explains why there are so many Arabs descending on London so suddenly.

"Until the big oil money came in the Middle East, all people ever did was talk about politics. Until a few years ago everyone was involved with slogans.

"Some Arab leaders in the past put their mind on politics, politics, politics. Now they realize that all the things they believed before are not true, that mostly politics is a joke to them. Before all their heroes were politicians."

One of the changes, he says, has been the Arab political attitude toward the Russians since the advent of the oil. "Even before the oil," he says, "the Russian way was different from ours. I couldn't ever joke with a Russian. They have no sense of humor. The American and British sit on the floor and eat with us. The Russian don't."

"With the advent of oil we discovered a lot of things in life. There was a new trend. People wanted to build houses, wanted to travel, to know other people. They are really eager to see the advancements but they want to keep their tradition too. And they are still afraid that people don't want them."

Now, he says, they come to London to find that their worst fears are confirmed. And it is even worse for their more sophisticated neighbors from the desert. Especially the royal ones, who are, in fact, the only ones who are sheiks.

"I'm talking about the rulers of the gulf," says Khalifia, "Al Saud of Saudi Arabia, Al Saba of Kuwait, and Al Khalifa of Bahrain, they are the people who've ruled their countries for years before the oil came. We all originate from one family, one tribe. The royal family is a big family in each country, they may have six or seven brothers. There are perhaps 1,000 Al Khalifa and now the family is expanding. That name means prince of sheik, the one selected to rule. If your name is not Al Khalifa in Bahrain you are not a sheik. People think that if you wear the Arab robes and headdress you are a sheik. That is wrong. However, in some Arab countries like Egypt, the word sheik simply means old man. It's very confusing."

The Arabs also like to laugh, he says, at how naive the British are by calling everyone an "oil sheik."

"When the oil came in Bahrain, everybody thought that the sheiks had all the oil.

That was, as he explains it, not the case. "Our ruler is very kind, he has an open house, everybody can walk in. The ruler decided that it is better that the income from the oil be divided between the family and the people. It is through is generosity and his kindness. He hasn't been elected, he doesn't like to be a dictator. He says, 'I'll share half with my family and half with my people.' So he gives it to the government. Whatever the oil company gives him he gives half to the government to build hospitals and schools. Even from his half he gives to people for their personal needs."

Unlike rich Americans or rich Britishers, the Arabs are not embarrassed to talk about their money; in fact, they are rather proud of it. Kahlifa is no exception.

"It is true," he says, "that there is a lot of money, big money, bigger than in America. The Arabs laugh when they see a big show on TV and they refer to a big fuss over $1 million dollars." Video cassettes of American TV shows are popular in Arab states; their favorites, according to Kahlifa, are "Kojak," "Starsky and Hutch" and "Columbo."

With that he breaks up, and his mirth leaves him literally holding his sides. "By nature the Arabs are very generous, very shrewd businessmen," he says.
