Senate delays override vote on arms veto

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan has finally vetoed a congressional resolution blocking a $354 million missile sale to Saudi Arabia, and Senate opponents delayed an override vote when they realized they couldn't defeat the White House.

The veto was received late Wednesday afternoon, only minutes before the Senate adjourned for a Memorial Day recess. Had Reagan not delivered the veto by midnight Wednesday, the sale would have been halted because the disapproval resolution passed by Congress would have automatically become law.

In his veto message, Reagan said blocking the sale would "damage our vital strategic, political and economic interests in the Middle East" and also would "undermine our balanced policy in that region."

The attempt by opponents of the sale to override the veto will be made after the Senate convenes again June 2.

Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., leader of the opposition, told his colleagues shortly before adjournment, "We would lose today. I have no idea how the vote will come out in June, but we will work to win."

Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., a supporter of the sale, agreed with Cranston's view, saying, "I believe we have the votes to sustain the veto and uphold the president's position."

But Dole said the override attempt was put off because opponents would have filibustered. Senate rules permit unlimited debate and make it difficult to muster the votes to cut off a filibuster.

Cranston and Dole agreed Reagan had picked up votes in his fight to win approval of the arms deal, but Cranston said his side faced defeat only because six opponents had already left Washington for the recess.

"We would lose because six people are absent, five of whom voted against the sale last time. The sixth would have voted with us," said Cranston, "None of the supporters are absent."

Jury deliberations could begin today in Minor suit

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — The seven women and five men hearing evidence in the civil lawsuit filed by former Mayor John Minor against the city of Odessa and six former and current elected officials are expected to begin deliberations sometime this afternoon.

Based on testimony heard Tuesday and Wednesday, jurors will have at least three primary questions to decide, including: On about Aug. 26, 1983, was control of the City Marshal's office officially transferred from then-Municipal Court Administrator Minor to Chief Alan Stewart and the police department?

The answer to that question will, in large measure, determine if Minor should be reinstated to the nearly $30,000-a-year job he was fired from Sept. 13, 1983, given back pay and fringe benefits and awarded unspecified damages.

On Aug. 31, 1983, Minor filed a complaint against City Manager John Harrison, alleging official misconduct, and Fiscal Services Director Frank Muser, charging official oppression, that led to their arrests, arraignment and formal booking at the Ector County Sheriff's office. Both were released on personal recognizance bonds after being booked.

In testimony Tuesday and Wednesday, Minor, former associate Municipal Judge Larry McMillian, former City Marshals Troy Davis and Roy Gladden stated they believed that in violation of a city ordinance Harrison and Muser had transferred the City Marshal's office to control of Stewart and the police department.

Harrison, Muser and Stewart stated under oath that, while the transfer was considered and an interim supervisor appointed to oversee the eventual transition, the official transfer was not made until the city council, meeting in emergency session Aug. 31, voted to abolish the City Marshal's office and transfer its duties and responsibilities to a warrant division under the police detective division. That same day, council members also voted to terminate McMillian as associate municipal judge. McMillian had aided Minor and acting Chief City Marshal Troy Davis in drawing the complaints and probable cause affidavits against Harrison and Muser, and then issued warrants for their arrests.

Attorney Jim O'Leary, representing the City of Odessa, began presenting the city's defense about mid-afternoon Wednesday after Midland attorney Robert Evans Jr. rested Minor's case.

O'Leary first called Harrison to the witness stand and questioned him extensively about the powers of the city manager under Odessa's city charter, particularly as it related to hiring and firing the Municipal Court administrator.

Responding to questions by O'Leary, Harrison said after becoming city manager in August 1982 he became aware of friction between the warrant division and the police department. He was concerned, he said, about reports warrant officers were setting up roadblocks without coordinating such efforts with the police department.

Referring to what he termed "setting up an arsenal," Harrison said it appeared the warrant division was being established as sort of a second police department.

Celebrities will hold Hands Across America

By JEFF WILSON

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Celebrities ranging from Kenny Rogers to Yoko Ono to Mickey Mouse and Goofy will be among millions of Americans holding Hands Across America on Sunday in an effort to raise money for the nation's hungry.

Mickey Mouse and Goofy will join 1,320 Disneyland employees, 20,000 people will snake through the Magic Kingdom and TV preacher Robert Schuller's flock will watch the line meander through the nearby Crystal Cathedral.

The Monkees, the revived 1960s music group, will be in Pennsylvania, Oprah Winfrey of "The Color Purple" and magician David Copperfield will be in Ohio, and Dionne Warwick will be in New Jersey. Liza Minnelli, Michael Douglas, Susan Anton, Gregory Hines and Edward Olmos will be holding hands in New York.

Ken Kragen, organizer of USA for Africa and Hands Across America, will anchor the 4,152-mile line from its starting point in New York City's Battery Park, while 8,000 non-celebrities will anchor the other end by forming a Hands Across America logo with balloons alongside the Queen Mary in Long Beach.

Organizers have come up short on plans for a continuous human chain of 6 million to 10 million Americans from sea to sea. Kragen said $100 million would be raised for the nation's hungry.

Although momentum is building in the final days and organizers expect a surge of participants, realities have dashed the dreams of a continuous human linkup. Gaps now appear in California and Arizona, and sections of New Mexico and Texas will surely be empty.

"Our goal is not to have a stunt, not a hand-in-hand demonstration," California organizer Roger Carrick said Wednesday, explaining the 100-mile gap in his state.

Hands Across America will instead stretch a symbolic red-and-white ribbon, actually a thin rope, that will be held by volunteers stationed one-tenth of a mile apart. The same procedure will be used along 94 miles of Arizona desert.

Nonetheless, members of the rock group REO Speedwagon will be standing in the center of the abandoned section of California desert, in Desert Center some 170 miles east of Los Angeles, to support the effort.

Actress Kathleen Turner is joining her mother under the St. Louis Gateway Arch, "Miami Vice" star Don Johnson will be in New Mexico, Ed Begley Jr. in Arizona, Lee Greenwood in Texas, Judy Collins in Tennessee and Richard Dreyfuss and Donna Miles will be among those in Los Angeles.

Rogers will stand at the New Mexico-Texas border, rock singer Bob Seger and Charlene Tilton will stand in Riverside, Tony Danza in New Jersey, Dudley Moore in Los Angeles, and Miss Ono and Harry Belafonte will be in New York.

Politicians also will join, including Chicago Mayor Harold Washington and Democratic California Sen. Alan Cranston. Participating sports personalities will include pro football stars Tony Dorsett in Texas and Jack Youngblood and Walter Payton in Illinois.

State budget cuts could hurt health care

By STEVE LEVINE
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Proposed budget cuts could reduce or eliminate health and human services programs for more than 600,000 young, old, poor and disabled Texans, a draft report prepared for Gov. Mark White says.

After examining the possible impact of the state and federal budget cuts, members of the Health and Human Services Coordinating Council concluded Wednesday that the reductions would hit "the poorest of the poor and those least able to care for themselves."

The panel, an official state agency, decided it would recommend to White and other state leaders that they cut other areas of the state budget to overcome a projected $1.3 billion shortfall.

"Every service that these agencies have offered up are essential services," said Sharon Flippen of Austin. "I don't see how any of us in good conscience can recommend that any of those services be cut."

On March 7, White, Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby and House Speaker Gib Lewis asked the council to examine the budget reduction plans the state's 17 health and human service agencies had filed in response to the governor's austerity plan. In February, White asked all state agencies to reduce expenditures by 13 percent — without laying off workers or cutting essential services — to make up the shortfall caused by falling oil prices.

The council also included in the draft — the final report will be released today — the effects from the Gramm-Rudman-Hollings federal deficit reduction plan.

The report points out that existing state assistance programs "are not generous. In all health and human services, Texas ranks in the bottom quarter of all states' spending."

Many of the programs provide preventive health care intended to avoid more costly care later. For example, every $1 spent on pre-natal care saves $3 to $6 by avoiding complications during birth and the early days of an infant's life.

"To cut them creates false economies for the state over the longer term," the draft states.

The proposed reductions — some of which agencies have offered as ways to meet White's 13-percent plan but neven intended to put in place — include:

— $5.6 million in cuts in crippled children's services that would eliminate services for more than 4,000 handicapped children.

— Department of Health reductions that would offer immunizations to almost 18,000 fewer preschool children.

Shelling in Beirut today kills 35, injures 160

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Moslem and Christian gunners rained shells and rockets on Beirut's residential neighborhoods today in the worst random bombardment in four months. Police said 35 people were killed and 160 wounded.

The battles erupted at dusk Wednesday and raged all night.

A cease-fire was called at daybreak today, but collapsed six hours later, and the duels with heavy artillery, multibarreled rocket launchers and tank cannons resumed at midday.

The hostilities shattered a two-week-old truce between Lebanese militias that was called for Ramadan, Islam's holy month of fasting.

Siren-wailing ambulances raced through the streets as fighting raged well into the afternoon. Hospitals issued urgent appeals for blood donations, and schools and universities on both sides of the dividing Green Line sent their students home.

Police said 28 people were killed and 100 wounded in the exchanges from dusk Wednesday to dawn today. Seven others were killed and 60 wounded since midday, police said.

One Lebanese soldier was killed in the fighting, but the rest of those killed and most of the wounded were civilians, police said. The fighting centered on the Green Line that separates Beirut into Moslem and Christian sectors.

Hundreds of families spent the night huddled in basements and bomb shelters as blasts shook the city of 1 million inhabitants.

"We haven't had such a horrific night in many months," said Jamila Billan, a Christian housewife reached by telephone in the Christian sector of the Lebanese capital. "We slept, all of us, my husband and three kids, in the shelter all night."

Police said the militias used 155mm howitzers, U.S.-made M-48 tank cannon and Soviet-made multibarreled rocket launchers. At least 20 residential districts in and around Beirut were hit, at times with as many as 30 rounds a minute, police said.

Each side accused the other of starting the fighting that came on the eve of scheduled visit by newly elected Maronite Catholic Patriarch Mar Nassrallah Butros Sfeir to the Moslem sector.

Three NATO allies protest chemical weapon efforts

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — At least three European NATO nations told a meeting of alliance defense chiefs today that they oppose U.S. plans to produce a new generation of chemical weapons.

Manfred Woerner, the defense minister of West Germany, told reporters during a break in the conference that the Dutch, Danish and Norwegian ministers had criticized the U.S. plans. He said Greece and Luxembourg had registered unspecified "reservations."

Although the chemical issue was discussed at length, the defense ministers were not in a position to directly veto the American plan. The subject arose because the ministers' agenda included a routine review of a NATO procedure, completed last week, in which the plan was given formal clearance. The ministers were not required to explicitly approve of the American proposal.

Norway, Denmark, the Netherlands and Greece last week had expressed their opposition to a resumption of chemical weapons production by the United States. They said it would risk widening the superpowers arms race and lessen chances of achieving a global ban on chemical arms, according to several European NATO officials who spoke on condition of anonymity.

The United States unilaterally halted production of chemical weapons in 1969.

Although NATO ambassadors last week officially endorsed the U.S. plans to produce new chemical weapons, the criticisms expressed today could jeopardize final congressional approval.

The one-day meeting of the defense ministers of all 16 NATO nations except France and Iceland was also expected to focus on prospects for improving Western cooperation in the fight against terrorism, and on the implications of scaled-down defense spending by many NATO nations.

Typhoon Namu death toll hits 71

HONIARA, Solomon Islands (AP) — Rescue workers today found the bodies of 65 people buried in mud and debris on the Guadalcanal plains, boosting the death toll from Typhoon Namu to at least 71, officials said.

Many more people are missing and feared dead, particularly on outlying islands where officials say casualties and damage have been impossible to ascertain because of downed communications.

"The death toll stands at 71," said John Selwyn, a disaster commitee spokesman. "We think hundreds died but we still don't know how many. Many areas are remote. Reports are still coming in. We'll know in a few days."

Namu, which Selwyn said was the worst typhoon in the archipelago's history, roared into the Solomon Islands on Monday packing 115 mph winds and cutting a swath of destruction through the archipelago located 1,000 miles northeast of Australia.

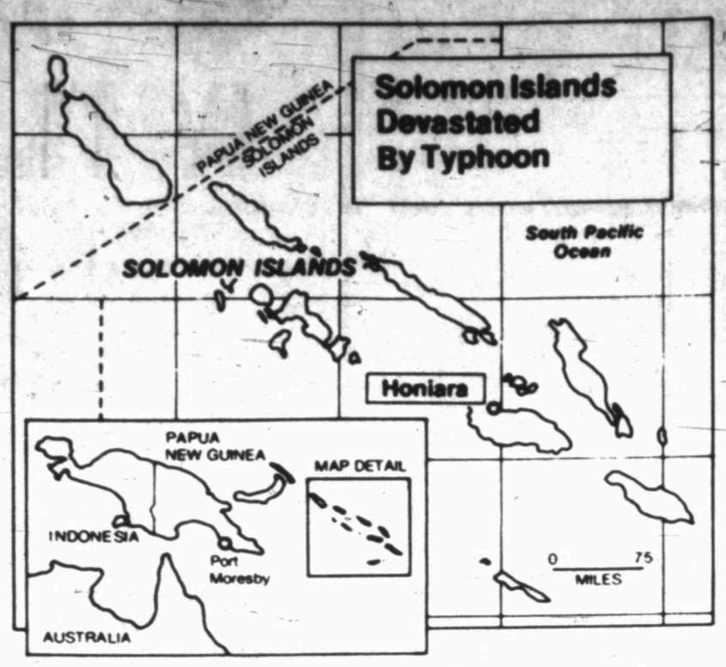
"It is certain that many people are buried in mud," Selwyn said.

The storm was reported to have headed southeast toward New Caledonia, but was weakening and was not expected to cause any major damage there.

The Australian Associated Press said many of the bodies were those of old people, women and children. They were found today hours after Prime Minister Sir Peter Kenilorea declared the 900-mile-long Pacific Island chain a disaster area.

Preliminary reports had put the death toll at six, with dozens missing and up to 90,000 left homeless.

Most of the missing were swept away by fast-flowing rivers that burst their banks on Guadalcanal, the main island on which the archipelego's capital of Honiara is located. Entire villages were destroyed by high seas, and other inland villages were washed down hillsides by mudslides.



AP Laserphoto Map

The Australian Associated Press said all available ships and aircraft were being used to transport food, medicine and tents to the island chain, which covers an area about the size of Maryland.

Rescue teams dug out 43 bodies on Guadalcanal, one of the worst-affected areas, and later reports said they had found another 22 bodies. Most of the victims appeared to have been from the same village, Valebaiki, which eyewitnesses said vanished in a wall of water.

The Guadalcanal plains, scene of fierce fighting between the United States and Japan during World War II, is the country's rice bowl and officials reported that most rice, copra and coconut crops were destroyed.

"It has been pretty much wiped out," said John Given, senior administrative officer at the Australian High Commission. "There won't be a harvest for at least six months. Food is going to be a major problem."

The outlying islands of Sikiana, Malaita, Makira, Rennell and Bellona were also badly battered by the storm, and relief workers were trying to reach those areas by canoe.

"The supplies are getting through," Given said. "They haven't got to the isolated villages yet, but they will."

Australia and New Zealand were airlifting supplies of food, medicine, tents, taupaulins and plastic sheeting for the homeless. Angiki said the United States, the European Community, Japan and Britain also had offered aid.

"They all want to know in what areas they can help," he said.

The Royal Australian Air Force dispatched three C-130 transports to Honiara and provided helicopters for reconnaissance.

An Australian pilot, who flew over the area earlier but was unable to land because of 3-foot-deep water at the Honiara airport on Guadalcanal, described the scene as "a sea of mud with roofs sticking out."

About 800 miles north of the Solomons Islands, government offices and schools in Pohnpei reopened Wednesday after a weekend typhoon there caused an estimated $11.6 million damage, officials said.

A disaster emergency was declared on Pohnpei, one of the four states in the Federated States of Micronesia, following Typhoon Lola, which came within 100 miles of the island on Saturday.

Winds of more than 50 miles per hour, with gusts of more than 100 mph buffeted the island, tearing roofs from homes and knocking over trees. The storm caused no fatalities.

MINOR

After Chief City Marshal Pat Trout was fired Aug. 25, 1983, Harrison said, Muser suggested transfer of the City Marshal's office to control of the police department. He said he agreed to the change, but observed it should be down slowly because it would be necessary for the council to change ordinances governing the City Marshal's office.

Referring to the period between Aug. 25 and Aug. 31, O'Leary asked Harrison if he ever told Stewart he was in charge of the City Marshal's office. The city manager replied that he had not.

Fiscal Services Director Muser, responding to O'Leary's questions about the reprimand of Trout in January 1983 for conducting private business on city time, said he and Minor disagreed about whether Trout should receive a verbal or written reprimand. Minor wanted only a verbal reprimand and was displeased that the reprimand would be written.

In August 1983, Muser said, Trout became the subject of a second investigation by the DPS concerning what Muser termed "several questionable areas involving guns and cars."

After Trout was fired Aug. 25, Muser said, he informed Minor that he was recommending transfer of the City Marshal's office from his (Minor's) control to the police department.

Under cross-examination by Minor's attorney, Muser denied that, prior to Aug. 31, he ever told Municipal Judges Otis Moore or McMillian that the warrant division had been transferred to the police department. He told them only, he said, that he had recommended such a change.

Stewart said on Aug. 25 Harrison discussed the proposed transfer with him. He was not enthusiastic because the city had serious crime problems requiring attention, that he didn't need seven more officers added from another department.

Stewart said he did meet Saturday, Aug. 27, 1983, with deputy city marshals in an effort to allay concerns about such things as uniforms and equipment, but he did not tell them that the office was then under the police department

In response to a question by O'Leary, Stewart said it was possible that an Odessa Police Department duty roster, including the names of City Marshal office personnel, was prepared by a secretary in his office in late August 1983. She might have included the names in anticipation that a transfer would become effective in the following month, he said.

Judge Tryon Lewis interrupted Stewart's testimony and recessed the trial until 9 a.m. today.

CUTS

— $4.5 million in cuts for vocational rehabilitation for disabled persons would eliminate services to about 6,900 persons.

— Nearly $8 million in reductions cutting health care to 76,000 pregnant women, their babies and grown children.

— A change in welfare rules that would remove about 30,000 low-income Texans from the Medicaid roles.

— Community and public health cuts that would leave 37,000 clients without public health clinics.

— A $1.82 million cut in federal funds that would eliminate retraining for 481 out-of-work Texans.

Sen. Gonzalo Barrientos, D-Austin, said he will push for the Legislature to legalize a state lottery and parimutuel wagering on horse racing if they will permit the state to avoid the "devastating" reductions.

"We need more money for human services instead of less," Barrientos said. "I fully understand our budget crunch, but a child's hungry tummy doesn't, and an elderly person's Alzheimer's disease doesn't."

In a letter he sent Monday, White called on all agency heads to continue the drive for budget cuts without layoffs or "diluting essential state services." The governor asked them to submit to him by June 9 reports that will "more fully assess and document the implications of a full 13-percent reduction even if some elements of the plan cannot or should not be implemented at this time."

White reminded agencies that the time has arrived for them to prepare their appropriations requests for the 1986-1987 biennium. "I intend to support agencies with budget requests that are fully justified toward meeting priority goals and missions, and to support agencies which have demonstrated a full-faith effort in reducing budget expenditures during this interim," he wrote.

ARMS

Both the House and Senate voted against the sale by overwhelming margins two weeks ago, but Reagan promised to veto the disapproval resolution and the sale goes ahead unless each chamber overrides his veto by a two-thirds margin of those legislators present and voting.

In the Republican-controlled Senate, it would take 67 votes to override a veto, while in the Democratic-run House, 289 votes would be needed, assuming all members vote. The previous Senate vote was 73-22 against the deal, and the House turned it down, 356-62.

Congress has never before blocked an arms sale and Reagan lobbied hard Wednesday to avoid an embarrassing foreign policy defeat.

Reagan has concentrated his efforts in the Senate where he needs to turn around fewer votes than in the House.

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., said Democratic opponents remained firm, but added: "I understand they've been able to turn around a number of Republicans." On the previous vote, 29 Republicans opposed the sale.

Reagan's effort received support from an unexpected quarter — former President Jimmy Carter, the man Reagan defeated for the White House in 1980. Carter called Reagan and offered to help and later called several senators and urged them to support the sale, said a White House official speaking on condition of anonymity.

Opponents admitted the White House picked up support when the Saudis agreed to drop their request for 800 Stinger shoulder-fired anti-aircraft missiles. The inclusion of those weapons was cited repeatedly by sale opponents, who feared they could fall into the hands of terrorists for use against airliners.

The package still contains 100 Harpoon ship-to-ship missiles and 1,666 Sidewinder air-to-air missiles for use by the Saudi air force.

The Reagan administration says the sale is needed to show support for moderate Arab nations, but opponents contend the Saudis support terrorists and have stymied U.S. interests in the Mideast, including blocking American efforts to broker an Arab-Israeli peace treaty for the strife-torn region.

One senator to switch is Lloyd Bentsen, the Texas Democrat who voted against the sale earlier this month. He told reporters he now plans to support the deal because "if we just continue to kick them (the Saudis) in the teeth, finally we won't have influence" among Arab nations.

NATO

The session began with a meeting limited to the chief delegates and one aide each. A plenary session was scheduled for the afternoon.

When Congress agreed last year to the Pentagon's request for authority to resume chemical weapons production, it said final approval would be contingent on NATO acceptance. The weapons would be brought to Europe in the event of a military crisis.

NATO ambassadors formally endorsed the plan last week, and today's defense ministers' meeting is not required to do more than acknowledge the ambassadors' action.

Although only Norway, Denmark and the Netherlands have publicly expressed opposition to the U.S. plan, Western Europe as a whole is deeply divided on the issue of modernizing NATO's chemical arsenal.

The chairman of the NATO Military Committee said Wednesday that alliance military leaders disagree on the wisdom of beginning production of new chemical weapons. The United States is the only NATO member with chemical arms.

Thousands protest U.S. intervention in Mexico

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Thousands of protesters marched through downtown Mexico City on Wednesday in a noisy but peaceful demonstration against what they called U.S. intervention in their national affairs.

The march followed a U.S. Senate subcommittee hearing on May 13 in which several Reagan administration officials said that widespread corruption in the Mexican government is fueling the illegal drug trade in Mexico.

The hearings prompted the Mexican government to issue a strongly worded protest, calling the subcommittee hearings slanderous and "a clear and unacceptable violaton of Mexico's sovereignty."

That theme carried over into the march, which had the support of the ruling Institutional Revolutionary Party, or PRI, along with various other political groups from the left and right.

Mexico City Police Col. Jorge Osorio estimated 10,000 people marched the one-mile route from the Monument of the Revolution to the Zocalo plaza in front of the National Palace. However, PRI officials in the march put the number at 15,000 to 20,000.

"We have had no problems with the marchers. Everything has been peaceful," the police official said as the placard-bearing marchers poured into Zocalo, the capital's main plaza, where the two-hour march ended with a rally.

The marchers represented a cross-section of Mexican society — government officials in suits, women in aprons with children in tow, chanting students and members of various unions.

One large banner at the front of the march read, "Stop the Defamation Campaign Against Mexico," while others read "In Defense of the National Government," "Death to Reagan — Long Live Mexico," and "Reagan, We Don't Fear You Because We Are United."

Various groups within the line of march chanted anti-American slogans

Among the marchers was a man dressed in an Aztec Indian costume carrying a white dove in a cage and periodically pausing along the way to chant, "We want peace."

At the Zocalo, several speakers denounced the United States before the rally ended with a recording of the Mexican national anthem. One speaker said, "We don't want intervention in Central America, nor South America nor the Caribbean."

The call for the demonstration appeared earlier this week in Mexico City newspapers in paid advertisements headlined "March In Defense Of the National Sovereignty."

"The evident and prolonged interventionist campaign originated in the United States against Mexico now has reached intolerable limits ... We call on all citizens to protest against the North American intervention and to defend the national sovereignty," one of the ads said.

Fire kills one in Louisiana hospital

BOSSIER CITY, La. (AP) — One person died and 50 were evacuated, some through second floor windows, after a fire broke out at the Bossier Medical Center this morning, heavily damaging one wing of the building, the city fire chief says.

Fire Chief J.T. Wallace says the unidentified victim was apparently the patient in the room in which the fire started. Wilson said it appeared the victim died of burns and smoke inhalation.

The fire, which was reported at 6:10 a.m., caused extensive damage to the south wing of the hospital, Wallace said.

Fire department dispatchers earlier had said that patients were being evacuated through windows on the second floor of the building.

One police officer was also injured when he cut his hand trying to get into the building.

Sin: 'People power' brought down Marcos

DALLAS (AP) — Jaime Cardinal Sin, archbishop of Manila, credited "people power" with bringing Corazon Aquino to power in the Philippines, but warned that such methods might not work elsewhere.

"It might be only one small step between people's power and mob rule. We succeeded because our young men could not bring themselves to harm defenseless civilians," Sin said at a Wednesday luncheon hosted by the Dallas Council on World Affairs.

"Would that be true in all other places?" he asked.

Sin described events leading up to the Feb. 25 fall of Ferdinand Marcos' government and said "people power" was responsible for the installation of Mrs. Aquino as president.

At a news conference held before the luncheon, Sin said he decided to intervene in the political situation because he feared civil war would break out.

On Feb. 22 he made a radio braodcast, urging Filipinos to step into the streets to stop opposition forces from meeting.

He told luncheon guests the people responded, pressing against tanks and sticking flowers in gun muzzles.

"It was amazing how they came out," he said.

He said there was "colossal cheating" in the election in which Marcos claimed victory over opposition leader Corazon Aquino. He said some computer operators walked off the job because the results they were feeding into the terminals were not showing up on the tally boards.

Filipino bishops met and issued a statement declaring the election invalid.

Sin described the Feb. 22 incident as "gentle, joyous, friendly. It was very Filipino."

At the news conference, Sin joked about Marcos' present residence in Hawaii and said it is good that the former president is in "this country where there is comfort."

He said he would not interfere in efforts to bring Marcos back to the Philippines to give an accounting of money he is accused of owing to the country.

But, he said, "Mr. Marcos was the one who wrote the law of extradition in order to persecute his political foes in those days when he was in power. Now this law is applied to him."

Judge will let jurors take notes in drug trial

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Faced with a record number of defendants in a marijuana trafficking trial, U.S. District Judge Ed Prado has decided to bend his court rules and allow the jury to take notes.

Prado advised jurors on Wednesday to take notes, but suggested that the written accounts be kept simple, dealing only with important names, dates and places.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Todd Foster told jurors Wednesday that the defendants made "millions and millions and millions and millions" of dollars trafficking marijuana and methaqualone pills from Mexico.

Chief U.S. District Judge William Sessions in the past has admonished his juries not to take notes during testimony, saying their doing so might distract them from what is being said from the witness stand and might lead to contention when notes are compared during deliberation.

Prado said he was deviating from the normal practice because there are 21 defendants and the trial has been projected to last four to six months.

In an interview Wednesday with the San Antonio Light, Sessions said it is up to the individual judge to allow or forbid note-taking. However, he has delivered talks in judicial seminars against the practice.

"I don't let them take notes, but then I've never been in a four-month trial," Sessions noted.

In Wednesday's first day of testimony in the trial, the six men and six women jurors heard Foster characterize the defendants as part of "an empire of drug dealers" that laundered millions of dollars from sales of marijuana.

The government is trying 21 defendants for racketeering. Twelve other defendants, including a McAllen banker, are scheduled to be tried later on charges they laundered millions of dollars in drug profits for the gang.

Longhorn remains spirited despite acupuncture therapy

BRISTOW, Okla. (AP) — Despite a severe back injury, Texas' official Sesquicentennial Longhorn remains spirited and strong as he continues treatment with acupuncture therapy, a rancher says.

Larry Smith of Fort Worth says there have been some positive responses, but it will be at least two weeks before a veterinarian knows whether the acupuncture therapy will be successful in treating the back injury sustained by "Texas USA."

Smith provided pasture for the bull and managed its appearances in conjunction with the 150th celebration of Texas' independence from Mexico.

The bull has forehead markings similar in shape to a map of Texas.

A breeding accident may have been responsible for the compression fracture of the bull's 12th vertebrae, which caused paralysis in his hind legs, officials said.

"Of course, this is a very slow process. The injury is very severe," Smith said Wednesday. But he said he remains optimistic.

"The bull has shown so much spirit and he's so strong," Smith said.

Smith said Dr. Howard Mitchell, a veterinarian in Bristow, is administering the therapy in which needles are inserted into body tissue to relieve pain. Smith said there is evidence that swelling in the area of the bull's injury has gone down.

Smith said the bull does not lie down like most sickly animals.

"He maintains himself very well" in spite of paralysis in his hind legs, Smith said. He said during the acupuncture therapy, the bull is supported by a sling.

Smith said he does not know how long the bull will require treatment at Bristow, and he said he does not know how much the therapy will cost.

Dr. Howard Mitchell, a Bristow, Okla., veterinarian, points out acupuncture needles along the spine of Texas USA, an injured longhorn bull. The official Texas Sesquicentennial mascot was injured on a Texas ranch earlier this month.

"There's not even any concern for how much it costs," he said.

The bull came to Oklahoma for treatment because there apparently are no veterinary acupuncturists south of the Red River, Mitchell said.

The registered Texas Longhorn made headlines when he disappeared from a pasture 40 miles northwest of Fort Worth.

After two days of searching, the bull was found, unable to get up, said Smith, who manages the animal for owner Kathie O'Brien.

Veterinarians at Texas A&M University took X-rays of the animal and confirmed a broken back.

Clements thinks special session needed

AUSTIN (AP) — Future Texas Supreme Court scandals might be averted if Gov. Mark White would call a special legislative session now, former Gov. Bill Clements says.

Clements, White's Republican challenger this year, said Wednesday that a special session is needed to impose limits on liability lawsuit settlements and establish rules for plaintiff lawyers as moves to help prevent future problems on the high court.

White "should step forward and declare himself with respect to the Supreme Court scandal that's brewing," Clements said in an interview.

"Certainly, a piece of that is tort reform. Open it (a special session) up and do the reforms that are necessary in tort law. That in turn cures the problem of the liability insurance and also goes a long way toward restoring integrity to the Supreme Court," he said.

A Texas House committee is investigating allegations that a pending appeals court case was shifted from one judge to another at the request of a Supreme Court justice, who received a campaign contribution from a lawyer involved in the case.

The committee, headed by Rep. Frank Tejeda, D-San Antonio, also is looking into allegations that confidential case information has been leaked from the high court to lawyers.

The insurance industry has been urging legislative action on the civil court system, which it says has granted overly large awards to plaintiffs that are driving up costs for commercial liability insurance.

Clements said he favors several legislative actions in connection with tort reform.

"It has to with limiting the size of settlements, some very explicit rules with regard to plaintiff lawyers and their conduct. There are a lot of things he (the governor) could do," Clements said.

Clements also said he favors limits on campaign contributions to Supeme Court candidates.

Clements, ousted by Democrat White in 1982, said White should include tort reform in a special session that is needed to deal with two other issues — the $1.3 billion state budget shortfall and prison construction.

White repeatedly has rejected Clements' call for a special budget-cutting session, saying it isn't needed at this time.

The shortfall, which was caused by falling worldwide oil prices, can be made up by agency spending cuts, White said. The governor has issued an executive order urging the directors of some 200 agencies to trim spending by 13 percent.

New campaign manager named

AUSTIN (AP) — Former Gov. Bill Clements' campaign announced Wednesday the hiring of a Dallas businessman as his new campaign manager.

George Bayoud Jr., 31, named campaign manager and campaign vice chairman, will take a five-month leave of absence from the development company in Dallas where he has been a vice president, said Clements' press secretary Reggie Bashur.

Bayoud worked as an advance man in Clement's successful 1978 gubernatorial campaign. During the first two years of the Republican administration, he was an aide on Clement's staff.

In 1982, he headed fund-raising efforts for Clement's unsuccessful relection campaign, and he has been vice president of finance in this year's effort.

"He knows Texas. He understands politics. He knows how to run a campaign of this magnitude," Clements said.

Bayoud replaces Ed Cassidy, who managed the primary campaign in which Clements received 58.4 percent of the Republican vote against two opponents. Clements has said Cassidy resigned to pursue other opportunities in Washington, D.C.

Church home faces showdown with state

AUSTIN (AP) — Supporters of an unlicensed Tarrant County church home are preparing for a showdown with state officials who have a court order requiring the home to be closed.

"We are going to go back and occupy our buildings. We are going to bring in forces there, people to come in to help us. Preachers will be coming in. We are just going to go up there and dig in," said W.N. Otwell, director of the Community Baptist Church's Boys Home in Forest Hill, near Fort Worth.

"If we have to, we'll fence it. We'll put up some big fences so that they'll have to come through the gates," Otwell said Wednesday after meeting with Gov. Mark White.

State District Judge Paul Davis of Austin on March 31 ordered the home closed because school officials, citing religious grounds, refused to get a required state license. Davis also ordered $100-a-day fines for the officials who are keeping the home opened.

Elna Christopher, a spokeswoman for Attorney General Jim Mattox, said Wednesday there was no way to know when the court order would be enforced.

Otwell and his supporters have refused to pay the fines, and have decided not to appeal Davis' order. They came to Austin last week to take their case to state officials and have been here ever since. They headed back to Fort Worth Wednesday after the hour-long, closed-door meeting with White at the Capitol.

"We were hoping that Gov. White would make a commitment to back the troops off until the 1987 Legislature meets so they could amend the 1975 Child Care Act, but he made no commitment," Otwell said.

White said he told Otwell the governor could not interfere with court orders.

"I am a Baptist and a strong believer in the separation of church and state, and I would not permit for a moment any agency of this state to interfere with anyone's practice of religion," he said.

"I happen to think this law does not interfere with their practice of religion. They happen to think it does, and I'm not in a position to change their mind," White said.

W.N. Otwell

"Texas can't be our boss. God is our boss," Otwell said, adding that Texas will be punished for interfering with the church home.

"I think Texas is going to enter into some hard times. When you start oppressing church ministries and God's people, then you're in trouble. The Bible teaches that.

"Texas will pay if they oppress God's people. They'll pay dearly. God knows how to do that through different types of tragedies that God works out himself. Man has nothing to do with it. The oil situation, drought, unemployment, bad economy. You know what I'm saying. God has a way to chasten the state and bring judgment on the state," Otwell said.

Otwell blames his church's problems on Mattox, who represented the Texas Department of Human Services in the court action against the church home.

"I still think he needs a little harassment, if that's what you call it. I think we need to irritate him a little bit," Otwell said.

He also warned state officials not to try to take punitive action against children or women involved in the battle.

"The day you start fooling with our wives and our children there's going to be blood running in Texas," he said.

STATE IN BRIEF

Fifteen-year-old girl becomes valedictorian

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — Grace Charlina Pai has become accustomed to attending school with older students since she skipped kindergarten.

At the age of 15, Miss Pai, of Aransas Pass, who also bypassed third and 11th grades, is valedictorian of Incarnate Word Academy High School. Her grade average of 98.5 is higher than that of any of her peers, most of whom are two or three years older.

She plans to go into pediatric medicine, she said, because, she said, "I relate well with them." Miss Pai plans to attend Rice University in the fall to pursue a pre-med biochemistry major.

Her father came to this country from his native Taiwan in 1964 to study chemical engineering at Brigham Young University. In 1966 his wife, Madge, joined him in the United States.

Miss Pai attended first and second grades in Los Angeles, and after the family moved to Texas she attended public elementary and junior high schools.

Seat belt use increases

AUSTIN (AP) — The use of auto seat belts continues to increase in Texas cities since the mandatory safety belt law took effect last September, according to state highway officials.

A State Department of Highways and Public Transportation survey of seven cities, conducted from December through March, showed Corpus Christi with the highest usage rate with 77 percent.

That same survey showed Waco with the lowest compliance rate, 57 percent.

Other cities and their rates were: Austin, 75 percent; Brownsville, 63 percent; Bryan-College Station, 70 percent; Houston, 69 percent, and San Antonio, 60 percent.

Seven other cities, including Dallas and Fort Worth, will be surveyed in the fall, the department said.

"Before the safety belt law went into effect, the statewide usage was between 10 and 15 percent," the department said in a statement Wednesday.

Lawyers appeal for stay

CORSICANA (AP) — Attorneys for a Salvadoran on death row have appealed to the Court of Criminal Appeals in Austin to block the man's execution date.

A state district judge refused Wednesday to block the execution — scheduled for shortly after midnight tonight — of convicted killer Jose Moises Guzmon, a Salvadoran who speaks little English.

Guzmon's lawyers contended the inmate had incompetent trial attorneys and an incompetent interpreter, but State District Judge Kenneth Douglas denied their request for a stay.

An appeal now has been filed with the Court of Criminal Appeals in Austin, clerk Thomas Lowe said, but no ruling has been made.

Guzmon, 23, was convicted of capital murder for the Feb. 4, 1984, shooting death of 62-year-old Henry Finch of Fort Worth. Finch was killed at a service station on Interstate 45 south of Corsicana.

TRC orders rate cuts

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Railroad Commission, citing decreased fuel costs, on Wednensday ordered rate cuts which could save consumers $23 million a year on intrastate trucking costs.

"Transportation rates are established based upon actual expenses of the carriers plus a small profit margin. When theese expenses — fuel being one of the largest — are reduced, shippers and consumers are entitled to have that reduction passed through to them," said Commission Chairman Jim Nugent.

The reduction will be achieved through a series of commission orders reducing major statewide truck rate tariffs, according to Nugent.

New child-support rules set

AUSTIN (AP) — Child support guidelines distributed this week by the Texas Supreme Court will help local district judges enforce the child support program, Attorney General Jim Mattox said.

"Thanks to the Supreme Court, Texas may have the toughest and best child support guidelines in the country," Mattox said.

The guidelines generally advise local judges in setting the amount of child support to consider the needs of the child, the ability of the parents to contribute and any other financial resources available for support of the child.

Mattox said child support collections have risen from $18 million in 1983, when the attorney general's department took over, to an expected $50 million by the end of fiscal 1986.

Slumber party beginning of 50-year-old friendship

By SARALYN FENNELL

DENTON (AP) — They can tell you about the time they dyed their hair red, made a pot of coffee without the coffee and thought the day of the test tube babies would never happen.

And in between passing photos around of earlier days and the 'Do you remember when?', Luetta Giles Foster, Marjorie Paschall Drennan, Mary Joyce Taliaferro, Alma Jo Mathews Barnett, Eloise Taliaferro Mordecai and Helen January Christensen can tell you also a good deal about friendship.

It is one subject that they have managed to do well in from junior high and Denton High School days to their college graduation from Texas Women's University.

For the first time in 50 years, all six of the Denton area women were able to get together recently for a short reunion of long ago memories.

"It started with a slumber party at my house," Mrs. Mordecai said, explaining the beginning of the relationship. "We were always together after that and we've been friends ever since.

"We were just a group of girls having a good time," Mrs. Drennan said. "We would go to the movies on Tuesdays and get in for a dime. On Saturdays, we would sometimes pack a lunch and have a picnic. We'd go to Turner Falls and Galveston. Of course our parents would go with us. We all had a lot of fun.

"ELOISE WAS our pianist. She'd play and we'd sing popular songs. She was our poet. She made up poems for our birthdays. My mother told me that we were selfish because the six of us were always together but we enjoyed each other," she said looking around the room at her friends who were nodding in agreement.

Each week there were meetings held to talk about "fun things" and "school girl" interests.

"We met every week and kept minutes. We had a secret name, GYM, but I can't tell you what that meant," Mrs. Barnett said.

It became obvious that loyalty was a element in this friendship. No one else would divulge the secret behind the secret name either.

"We were a support group for each other," Mrs. Mordecai said. "We were always frank with each other," Miss Taliaferro added. "That's why we all got along so well."

Jealousy, sometimes a common emotion between girls, was never a problem, according to this group.

"We didn't have anything to be jealous of," Mrs. Barnett said. "This was during the end of the Depression. We were all doing good to have what we had."

"We weren't jealous of each other. If anything, we learned tolerance of other people," Mrs. Foster said.

"We grew up in a time of innocence, a time when a little girl could walk down the street to a movie. You couldn't do that now," Mrs. Christensen said. "The only people I was scared of were Bonnie and Clyde."

"We used to walk to each other's home," Mrs. Mordecai added. "No one would bother you."

BUT TIMES HAVE changed a lot since then and the women believe their relationships might have been affected if indeed thay had grown up in the 1980s.

"There are more pressures on kids now. Our lifestyles were different. We didn't feel as pressured because we had each other," Mrs. Barnett said.

Mrs. Christensen, a Ponder native who is now a resident of Vista, Calif., felt that small town living made a difference.

"Our parents were strong. They were like a support system and they weren't afraid to say no to us. We had good morals," Mrs. Christensen said. "We couldn't drink or smoke and you had to be in bed by 8. We didn't date as early as kids do now. I think our parents were so happy that we were together because we didn't give them any touble. Our parents kept us on the right side of the tracks.

"I have thought, until the point of walking across that high school stage, I never knew what a problem was. I lived a protective life," she continued. "I never faced a problem."

Another change they noted in these modern times was college life at TWU.

"They're men going there now and the students have a four-day week," Mrs. Christensen said.

"We went to class six days a week," Mrs. Drennan pointed out. "And we had to wear uniforms. I've noticed that there are no students around on the weekend. Everyone goes out of town.

"When we were going to school, we lived at home since we were local students," she said.

"I think our subjects were harder too. I guess they did that to keep our minds off of boys. They were fun to look at," Mrs. Christensen said.

BUT LOOKING AT the boys didn't distract these students from their educational goals.

Retired from careers in business, home economics and English, the women probably would have found it difficult to maintain an old maid's home, their one-time childhood quest.

"I'm the oldest of the group," Mrs. Barnett said. "I finished (college) in 1936. It wasn't called TWU then. It was CIA (College Of Industrial Arts). I think they changed the name to TSCW (Texas State College for Women) that following September.

Marriage and children followed for five of the six women. Among them there are 13 children and 21 grandchildren.

"There haven't been too many groups like this," Mrs. Christensen said. "There's not one bitterness I can remember."

"We never got mad at each other and even if we had, we would have had the other one to turn to," Mrs. Barnett added.

"We never had a major disagreement," Mrs Christensen said. "I'm real sentimental about our group."

"I think the main thing here is that there are six of us, all on our feet and still intact and our husbands are even tolerant of us," Mrs. Drennan said.

"We have fairly good minds," Mrs. Foster added.

"And we've been in reasonably good health," Mrs. Christensen said, who has written a book about how the times were when she and her friends were growing up.

"I CALLED IT (the book) 'A Glimpse of Innocence.' I tried to keep the flavor of the times," she explained. "It was a wonderful era."

And while the time was drawing near for the ending of this reunion there was still some reminiscing to be done.

A photo book lying open on the table was evidence of the good times they had spoken about.

With their childhood memories expressed and their secrets undistrubed, the women made a promise to see each other again soon as they had probably done that night of the first slumber party.

"Let's get together again," Mrs. Christensen said. "I'm going to come back more often."

The feeling was unanimous.

Hotel wants school to pay for damages

AUSTIN (AP) — The Waller Creek Plaza Hotel is asking $14,500 for damages caused by students of Westlake High School after their May 10 spring prom at the luxury hotel.

Hotel officials said the itemized bill was sent earlier this week to the school with copies to parents of students involved.

"I think it was a combination of immaturity, alcohol and lack of adult supervision that led to a snowballing effect," said assistant principal Harvey Mayton.

Mayton said as many as 20 of the 100 students who stayed at the hotel after the prom participated in the destruction in the rooms, hallways and stairwells.

The hotel discovered the damage after the students checked out the next day.

There was about $7,000 in damage when a fire hose was turned on and water ran down a stairwell, soaking carpets on four floors, the hotel said.

Teamsters elect Presser despite indictments

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Teamsters union leaders, again defying government prosecutors, have closed ranks behind indicted president Jackie Presser, voting by a nearly 99-to-1 margin to keep him in the driver's seat of the nation's largest union.

But how long he will continue to hold the reins of a union that retains its name from the days of horse-drawn wagons could be in the hands of a federal jury.

Presser, the nation's highest paid labor leader with an income of more than $550,000 a year, was indicted six days ago on charges of racketeering and embezzlement involving an alleged payroll-padding scheme to siphon off $700,000 between 1972 and 1981 from a Cleveland local that he heads.

There was no accusation in the indictment that Presser personally received any of the money.

The nearly 1,900 delegates at the Teamsters convention in this casino capital its pension funds helped build voted 1,729 to 24 on Wednesday to give Presser, 59, his first five-year term as president. He has been president of the union since April 1983 when he was chosen by the executive board to replace Roy Williams.

Presser used his indictment to rally support, saying its timing was designed "to embarrass the working men and women of our great union."

All but two dozen of the delegates, recalling that Williams was indicted just 10 days before the last convention in 1981, apparently agreed.

"I've seen it happen at almost every convention we've had," said Ray Schoessling, who retired last year as the union's No. 2 official. "What's new? You keep on going. If you weren't doing the job...they wouldn't be bothering you."

Presser's only election opponent, Sam Theodus, head of a 5,000-member truckdrivers local in Cleveland, conceded after drawing only 13 votes in the first hour of balloting.

But on Presser's orders, the union's first vice president, Joseph Treotola of New York, ordered a name-by-name roll call to continue another three hours until all 1,891 delegates had been polled.

House deals blow to administration with trade bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House dealt a sharp blow to the Reagan administration in skirmishing on the trade issue as dozens of Republicans backed Democratic legislation calling for get-tough measures.

"There is a bipartisan majority in the House that does not adhere to the administration line that we must lie prostrate before international competitors," Rep. Donald J. Pease, D-Ohio, declared Wednesday after the House repeatedly refused to delete key provisions of the bill.

At one point, 98 Republicans defected to back provisions easing the way for countervailing duties on subsidized imports and penalties for dumping products into the U.S. market at unfairly slashed prices.

A move to delete those features was buried 338-79 as GOP lawmakers from textile states of the South and the Northeast-Midwest industrial region parted company with both their administration and export-minded Farm Belt colleagues.

"This is the opening cannon shot in a new trade war," declared Rep. Bill Frenzel, R-Minn. He echoed the administration's warning that the get-tough measures were guaranteed to bring on retaliation against American exports.

Still to come is a vote on final passage of the measure as well as a handful of amendments, including a rival Republican version. There is little doubt that Democrats, who control the House by a 130-vote margin, will win approval before the House goes on a 10-day Memorial Day recess.

The main question has been how many Republicans would support the measure, which is likely to be substantially altered in the GOP-controlled Senate.

Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., told reporters Wednesday the measure is "viewed with alarm" and described is as "a totally political package."

"They don't know what bipartisanship is over on the House side," Dole said.

House Republicans have been deploring partisanship in the debate and attempting to paint the bill, the first broad trade measure to appear on the floor of either house since 1984, as one designed chiefly for use as a club on the campaign trail, where imports have cost jobs.

GOP leaders had earlier forecast "a few" defections among Republicans from districts where industries have been squeezed hard by imports. At a morning party caucus, U.S. Trade Representative Clayton K. Yeutter told the lawmakers about "the tremendous shortcomings of the plan."

"They can make their own decision as to how they want to vote," Yeutter said after emerging from the session.

Two hours later, the House rejected 276-137 an administration-backed move by Rep. Philip M. Crane, R-Ill., to delete provisions calling for 10 percent annual rollbacks in Japanese, West German and Taiwanese trade surpluses with the United States and making denial of "labor rights" in producer countries an unfair trade practice.

Forty-four Republicans joined 232 Democrats in opposing the move, while seven Democrats combined with 130 Republicans in backing it.

The House then rejected 306-109 a Frenzel motion to strip out provisions making mandatory tariffs or quotas for industries found by the International Trade Commission to be threatened by a wave of imports. Sixty-five Republicans split with the leadership on the vote.

Syria emerges as point man in showdown with Israel

By CHARLES J. HANLEY
Associated Press Writer

After two generations of Middle East wars, a disciplined, single-minded Syria has emerged as point man for the tattered Arab battalions in their non-stop showdown with Israel.

But the point man is vulnerable, analysts say.

World attention focused on Syria last week because of heightening tensions with Israel, Western allegations of Syrian ties to terrorism, and U.S. statements acknowledging that President Hafez Assad's government has worked to free American hostages in Lebanon.

Assad views his country, in the fourth year of a Soviet-aided military buildup, as the last bastion "to prevent the total collapse of the Arab nation." But Syria is still short of the "strategic parity" Assad says is needed to make war or peace with Israel on equal terms.

At the same time, economic setbacks, international isolation, domestic terrorism and turmoil next door in Lebanon all weaken the Syrian hand.

Syria stands out in the Arab ranks, the analysts say, because Assad, methodical and cautious, has built a relatively stable system in a region of uncertainty.

"Assad's strength lies in the weakness of the other Arab states," says historian Robert Olson, a Syria specialist at the University of Kentucky.

For 16 years, since seizing power in a bloodless coup, the former fighter pilot has gradually consolidated the authoritarian hold of his Arab Socialist Baath Party on Syria's 10 million people.

In a land of bustling bazaars and Islamic tradition, he has fostered socialism and secularism, doubling school enrollment, developing agriculture, introducing new state industry, and building roads, dams and railroads in a long-neglected countryside.

But Assad also accommodates Syria's old capitalist spirit. Small commercial enterprises and most farming remain in private hands, and Syria's trade with Western Europe, Japan and the United States — an estimated $1.6 billion last year — is four times greater than its trade with the Soviet bloc.

A member of the Alawite minority, an offshoot Moslem sect that comprises 10 percent of the population, Assad has won favor among Syria's many religious and ethnic minorities by bolstering their role in a predominantly Sunni Moslem country.

He is believed to have the support as well of many Syrians of all faiths who simply want a steady hand at the helm — after 24 years, in 1946-70, during which their shaky nation went through 23 governments.

But the 55-year-old Assad's key weapon remains the "Moukhabarat" — the ever-present security men who prowl Damascus hotel lobbies, city streets and mountain villages to guard against anti-Assad subversion. The human rights group Amnesty International says the Syrian secret services routinely carry out torture, "disappearances" and summary executions of political prisoners.

Internationally, Syria has moved into the Arab forefront — mostly by default.

Egypt's separate peace with Israel in 1979 and Iraq's war with Iran, which began in 1980, removed two major states from the Arab center stage. In 1982, Israel's invasion of Lebanon wrecked the power base of another key Arab player, Yasser Arafat's Palestine Liberation Organization.

When Jordan's King Hussein made his own peace moves toward Israel in early 1985, Assad looked increasingly alone, and since then he has sought to patch up old differences with the Jordanian monarch.

Assad wants to sabotage Israel's country-by-country method of peacemaking, since it offers Syria nothing. In 1981, Israel showed it was uninterested in a land-for-peace deal with Assad by formally annexing the 444-square-mile Golan Heights, seized from the Syrians in the 1967 Mideast War.

But being largely alone as a "confrontationist" also makes Syria the lone Soviet window on the Middle East.

Since 1982, when the Israeli air force blew more than 80 Syrian warplanes from the skies over Lebanon, Assad has drawn at least $2 billion in Soviet military aid to rebuild Syrian might.

His military has expanded from 300,000 men to just over 400,000, one-sixth of the Syrian work force. Israeli military analysts believe Assad wants the capability to fight a two-front war against Israel — in Lebanon and on the Golan Heights.

Film takes hard look at Israel's Lebanese invasion

By NICOLAS B. TATRO
Associated Press Writer

TEL AVIV, Israel — The first Israeli movie on the Lebanon War takes an unvarnished look at an unhappy period, presenting confused soldier-heroes who dispute their orders, shed tears and rough up local residents.

Entitled "Ricochets" in English, the film is a warts-and-all closeup of the Israeli army's desperate attempt to get out of Lebanon without losing more casualties after three years of war and occupation.

It focuses one-sidedly on the Israelis but manages to attain the rough-edged veracity of a documentary in portraying the anguish of the soldiers.

The candor is all the more surprising because the movie is a low-budget production of the Israeli army, whose spokesmen have long complained about the bad press Israel got as a result of its 1982 invasion of Lebanon.

Originally intended as an educational and historical film for internal army use, the final product was recognized for its potential commercial value and is now scheduled for movie houses here. Meanwhile, it has been chosen as Israel's entry in the 1986 Cannes Film Festival.

Shot in Lebanon during the gradual pullback in 1985, the filmmakers, as well as the actors, are regular or reserve soldiers, and the Lebanese are played by the Shiite Moslem residents of Khiam village.

Missing from the film is any discussion of how Israel became involved in Lebanon, where more than 650 Israelis and thousands of Lebanese and Palestinians lost their lives after the invasion.

Nor does it deal with what happened at the Beirut-area Palestinian camps of Sabra and Chatila, where Lebanese Christian militiamen massacred hundreds of men, women and children in September 1982 with Israeli units nearby doing nothing to intervene.

"It was clear to me from the start that I could not do any scenes linked to politics and that I would have to walk a fine line," film director Capt. Eli Cohen conceded in an interview with the Army magazine Bamahaneh (Camp).

But Cohen argued that the movie, his brainchild, was better able to portray what was important than were the journalists who covered the war.

"There are things that are tough for journalists to document," said Cohen. "Only one in a thousand articles captures what is really happening...how the army is mediating between warring ethnic groups and fighting terrorists among a civilian population, generating problems of morality and motivation which confuse and corrupt the soldier."

"Ricochets" is the story of a single platoon and the conflict between a recently graduated officer named Gadi (played by Ronni Pinkowitz), who argues for more humane treatment of the local population, and Tuvia (Shaul Mizrachi), his battle-hardened commander whose only guiding principle is getting his men out without further losses.

The attitude of the Israeli soldier is summed up by Georgie (Alon Aboutboul), the Israeli equivalent of the American infantry "grunt" in Vietnam, who explains Lebanon this way to the newly arrived Gadi: The Druse hate the Christians, the Christians hate the Moslems, the Sunni Moslems hate the Shiite Moslems, the Shiites hate the Palestinians.

"The only thing on which they all agree is hating us," Gadi says in the film.

"The Israeli soldier is presented as superior to other people in the (Lebanese) swamp," said Nachman Ingbar, a film critic writing in the daily Yediot Ahronot.

The siege mentality reflected in the movie tended to encourage callousness toward the Lebanese civilians. Those who got involved with the Lebanese, who showed the least bit of caring, paid dearly.

British tighten security

LONDON (AP) — A big security clampdown has been ordered for British embassies and other diplomatic missions abroad because of the growing threat of terrorism, a government official said Wednesday night.

Sir Antony Acland, the head of the diplomatic service who takes over as British Ambassador in Washington in September, said some British missions will be relocated to safer sites and others will have their anti-terrorist defenses strengthened.

Acland told the House of Commons Foreign Affairs Select Committee there had been 41 terrorist incidents involving British missions or diplomatic staff overseas in the last 10 years, including four murders and 25 bombings.

Reagan says hungry don't know where to get help

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan says America's hungry go without food because they do not know where to get help, but anti-hunger activists fault his administration for eliminating the program that told the poor about food stamps.

"I don't believe that there is anyone going hungry in America simply by reason of denial or lack of ability to feed them," Reagan told a high school group Wednesday. "It is by people not knowing where or how to get this help."

The president, in a question and answer session with the students, said the hungry are not aware of the government and private aid available to them.

"Where there is hunger...you have to determine that that is probably because of a lack of knowledge on the part of the people as to what things are available," Reagan said.

"Not only is the government doing much in that line, but there has been about a three-time increase in private charity and aid in our country," Reagan said, adding that private donations to charity were $79.8 billion in 1985.

Reagan made the comments in a 30-minute session with 117 students from various parts of the country. The meeting was sponsored by the "Close Up" Foundation, a non-partisan organization that gives students a chance to study the federal government.

Robert Greenstein, director of the Center on the Budget and Policy Priorities, said he agreed with the president that "there is an information problem.

Greenstein, a former Carter administration official who now heads the non-profit study group, said the Reagan administration did away with the Food-stamp Outreach program in 1981, designed during the Nixon administration to inform people about food stamps.

Pride of Baltimore's surviving crew tells nation of their ordeal

BALTIMORE — Crowds of people welcomed home the eight crew members of the Pride of Baltimore who survived 4½ days in a small raft after the clipper ship sank in stormy seas, killing two and leaving two others missing.

The eight told of surviving on biscuits and water and trying to catch fish using safety pins as hooks while they floated on a 5½-by-5½-foot raft built to hold six people.

Barefooted second mate Joe McGeady, 26, of Severna Park, and deckhand Robert Foster, 23, of Alexandria, Va., followed deckhand Susie Huesman, 24, of Baltimore, off the first of two corporate planes that shuttled them Wednesday afternoon from Pueo Rico to a suburban Baltimore airport.

They shook hands with Gov. Harry Hughes, Mayor William Donald Schaefer and officials of Pride of Baltimore Inc., the corporation that sponsored their voyages to promote this port city, before meeting privately with family and friends gathered inside a hangar for the reunion.

Hundreds of others stood outside for a glimpse.

"We mourn our loss. We'll never forget," Schaefer said, referring to the four who did not return. "But, oh, how happy we are that you came home."

Few wore closed shoes, their feet swollen from constant immersion in six inches of water inside the life raft, but they smiled while wiping tears and spotting friends waiting with hugs and flowers.

The two-masted, 136-foot-long Pride, built in the city's harbor nearly 10 years ago in the style of the Chesapeake Bay clipper schooners of the mid-19th century, was blown over by gale force winds on May 14, then sank in the Caribbean during a squall about 240 miles north of San Juan, Puerto Rico.

Hearings by the Coast Guard and the National Transportation Safety Board were to begin this afternoon.

The clipper had been on an 18-month worldwide voyage that began March 31, 1985, but was cut short because of fears of terrorism. The vessel left Malaga, Spain, where it had been docked for repairs, on March 12 and was to arrive home June 14.

Paraquat study attacked

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal study says spraying with the herbicide paraquat is a safe and reasonable tool for killing illegal marijuana crops, a conclusion that opponents said obscured the weedkiller's serious health risks to marijuana smokers.

Jay Feldman, coordinator of the National Coalition Against the Misuse of Pesticides, said a Drug Enforcement Administration report on the safety of paraquat and two other herbicides was "absurd and outrageous."

"These are some of the most controversial and risky chemicals on the market today," Feldman said. "The report ignores the very steamy debate that rages in the scientific community, and the regulatory community as well."

"It's an ill-conceived program," said Kevin Zeese, director of the National Organization for the Reform of Marijuana Laws. "It's absurd to spread poisons in our forests to protect our health."

Panel OKs nuclear bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — A House panel has approved a nuclear accident insurance bill that has the nuclear industry, its opponents and even some panel members hoping for a better deal in another committee or on the floor.

The compromise bill worked out by members of the House Interior Committee, approved Wednesday on a voice vote, was condemned by lobbyists and committee members alike.

"If it goes to the president's desk like it is, we'd urge a veto," said George E. White Jr., vice president of Middle South Services Inc., a New Orleans-based utility holding company.

"I don't think anyone's happy with this compromise. Certainly I'm not," said Rep. John Seiberling, D-Ohio. "But in the interests of resolving the issue, this is the best course we can work out."

Plants plan to refine waste

WASHINGTON (AP) — Most utilities with nuclear power plants believe they can process nuclear fuel waste, a job now proposed for a government processing and shipping depot, a congressional study says.

A General Accounting Office report to Congress released this week said the majority of those utilities are not confident that the Energy Department will be operating a planned permanent waste repository by the 1998 deadline.

At least 26 die in Crossroads battles

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Vast areas of the Crossroads squatter camp near Cape Town lay in ruins today after four days of street battles among blacks left 26 people dead and as many as 50,000 homeless.

The fighting subsided late Wednesday, although residents said there was sporadic violence and more burning of shacks overnight. U.S. Ambassador Herman Nickel called the violence "a human disaster of major proportions."

Thousands of people milled around the sprawling camp today, trying to salvage belongings and searching for shelter.

Police in Cape Town reported this morning that 26 people were killed in the violence that swept the squatter camp of more than 100,000 residents. People living in Crossroads said they feared more victims would be found when burned shacks were searched.

In Soweto, near Johannesburg, police in about 40 armored vehicles fired tear gas to break up a crowd of about 8,000 black youths today as they marched to a funeral banned by court order, reporters at the scene said.

Police reportedly gave the youths 30 minutes to disperse from a high school where they gathered for the march to the funeral site, and they were dispersed after marching about a half-mile.

Police headquarters reported scattered rioting elsewhere in the country, and said a black man was killed and his body set afire in a clash involving blacks near Randfontein, west of Johannesburg.

At Crossroads, journalists were able to walk late Wednesday through a wasteland of largely devastated shacks.

J.H. Steyn, chairman of the Urban Foundation, a respected group that assists blacks with housing problems, said the fighting and burning of shacks in Crossroads left an estimated 50,000 people homeless.

Earlier, Sue Joynt of the Black Sash, an anti-apartheid group that aids blacks, said an estimated 2,000 shacks were burned down in the fighting, leaving at least 20,000 people homeless. She said thousands more "are too terrified to go back."

"It's been a total no-go war zone for four days," she said.

Press reports put the number of homeless at 30,000.

The Red Cross and other groups mounted a relief operation, providing food and clothing to the homeless. The United States donated $35,000. The Urban Foundation offered about $45,000.

The fighting, which began Sunday, was between conservative vigilante groups and young militants over control of the settlement. Personal power struggles appeared to play a central role.

Police repeatedly denied accusations that they were aiding or not effectively stopping the vigilantes in what was described as their systematic destruction of shacks.

The government set up tents at the new Khayelitsha township, farther from Cape Town, for refugees from the fighting. Authorities have long tried to persuade all Crossroads residents to leave and go to Khayelitsha.

Experts did not have necessary tools at Chernobyl, official says

MOSCOW (AP) — Experts dealing with the Chernobyl nuclear disaster did not have all the equipment they needed, and engineers have been brought to the scene to plan how to deal with any future reactor accidents, a Soviet official said.

Meanwhile, a Soviet official said today in Vienna, Austria, that the death toll from the April 26 nuclear accident at the Ukrainian power station has risen to 15. It was not known whether the new figure included two men the Soviets said died the day of the accident.

Boris Semyonov also told the International Atomic Energy Agency that 20 people were in critical condition from radiation sickness. It was reported earlier that 35 people were hospitalized after the accident with severe radiation sickness, and an American doctor said last week 11 of those patients had died.

In a Radio Moscow interview Wednesday night, Deputy Premier Ivan Silayev said Soviet technology did not perform badly after the Chernobyl accident, but the disaster suggested "better facilities" are needed.

"The incident has taught us a great deal," Silayev said in the Radio Moscow in the broadcast monitored in London by the British Broadcasting Corp.

His comments marked the first time a Soviet official has suggested that equipment had not been adequate to combat a radiation accident at the Chernobyl plant 80 miles north of Kiev.

Other officials, however, have complained about the initial response by on-site personnel to the reactor explosion and fire, and about the organization of radiation-warning services around the plant.

Also in Vienna today, International Atomic Energy Agency policy makers said today they have reached preliminary agreement on ways to make nuclear plants safer, including setting up panels of government experts to work out a system of mandatory reporting of nuclear accidents.

There has been widespread criticism of the Soviet Union for holding back information during the first days after the Chernobyl accident, while a cloud of radioactivity was spreading over much of Europe and gradually stretched around the world.

Hans Blix, the agency's director general, said the Soviets had given the agency no indication experiments were being carried out at the reactor when it exploded, as was reported in Moscow by a Soviet official.

In the Radio Moscow interview, Silayev appeared to be talking about equipment to handle accidents, not better safety devices for nuclear reactors.

"We have invited our designers and machine builders here," Silayev said. "We are showing them what is required in such circumstances, what facilities there ought to be, and they are of course to map out a program for us to use in similar or other circumstances."

He said no one can rule out another accident like the one at Chernobyl, termed the worst in history by the International Atomic Energy Agency.

"They (engineers) are to create new technical facilities now, the things that we lacked," he said. "This is being done directly on site here."

Silayev said he was being given a leave from his post as chief of operations at the Chernobyl site, and was being replaced by another deputy premier, Lev Voronin.

Mission complete

The sad series of services for the astronauts who lost their lives in the Challenger explosion have been filled with tragedy, drama, and lessons for the future. And in all of them, Americans have been able to see the role models for coming decades as man continues his reach for the stars.

The latest funeral was in a Baptist Church in Lake City, South Carolina, and it honored 35-year-old Dr. Ronald E. McNair, whose title on the Challenger's crewlist had been "mission specialist." Just as Dr. McNair's mission was special, so was his life, and his funeral service was tragic, dramatic, and frought with challenge for bright black children throughout the nation.

The burial took place in a plot surrounded by fields where young Ron picked cotton as a boy. His birthplace was a wooden house with no plumbing, his school a place where blacks and whites were not allowed to congregate. Undaunted by obstacles, the lad won an engineering degree and a doctorate in physics, participated in laser research at the Hughes Laboratory outside Los Angeles, and then the peak — he was accepted as an astronaut. He made the flight around the earth in Challenger in 1984, and then, as all the world knows, he and six other brave souls did not make it in January 1986.

At the South Carolina service, the Rev. Eliot Mason of Trinity Baptist Church in Los Angeles, put Dr. McNair's life in perspective as an example for young blacks. "They need a model," said the minister, and the name of the model was obvious. His brilliance may have been hereditary, but not all brilliant people are dedicated, selfless, courageous, and patriotic, as Ron McNair.

Said the Rev. Mason at the funeral service of Dr. Ronald E. McNair: "I can hear Jesus greeting him, saying, 'Servant of God, well done.'" He added: "Rest yourself. The voyage is over. The mission is complete."

A life such as that of Ron McNair has not been lived in vain.

Penalize water wasters

Raising water rates to help staunch the flow" of nuisance water in Midland streets is not the answer, Mr. Hanson. Why should all users of city water be penalized for the waste habits of a few? Are all drivers fined because one driver is stopped for breaking the speed limit law? Certainly not.

"The difficulty is tracing water in the streets back to individual culprits," says City Attorney David Reagan. Please, Mr. Reagan! It is not any more difficult to see sprinklers watering the streets than it would be to track an elephant in the snow.

Why not fine the culprits that are creating this "nuisance water"? After the first citation is issued if the watering does not stop, issue a second citation that would be more costly. If this does not deter the individual's waste habits, turn off the water until the sprinkler systems are repaired. Surely the city officials can write an ordinance for this — if one is really necessary.

Citizens of Midland — beware! Don't let the leaders of the community penalize each of you because there are those who are not concerned with the water problem as well as the pothole problem in Midland.

'Meet the Editor' success

I would like to recommend to other readers the series of Meet the Press evenings that started at Fannin School last Thursday.

Anyone who is interested in how the paper is run and what goes in it would find in interesting. Last week's attendance was modest, but the success of an evening such as this is not measured by a headcount. I found it a lively and enjoyable 90 minutes.

Incidentally, I though I spotted either a misprint or a misquote in Friday's paper. In the piece about a new TV movie of Ross Perot, Mr. Perot is comparing himself with Richard Crenna and says,"He has perfect diction. I have a strong Texas accent." In the 15 months that I have lived in Texas, this is the first intimation I have had that the two things are not synonymous. In fact, I have been lead to believe that I am one of a very few people for miles around who speaks English with an accent.

Absolutely no smoking!

I find it difficult to believe that Midland Memorial Hospital supports lung cancer and heart disease. For example: on May 9, while visiting a family member confined to the CCU area, I found the waiting room saturated with cigarette smoke. Corridors are all prominently marked "Absolutely No Smoking," yet the waiting room is well-equipped with ash containers.

At one time there were 20 people in there, and three were making it unpleasant for the other 17. At another time there were four people puffing on their cancer sticks, and five trying to endure it.

I was forced to sit on the floor in the corridor for many hours just to escape the cancer smog.

Why should I continue to pay taxes to a facility, dedicated to saving life, that openly supports cancer and heart disease? It is time to wake up to this obnoxious situation.

Apparently the signs posted in the corridors mean nothing, or "Absolutely No Smoking" applies only to sane people.

Letters Policy

■ The Reporter-Telegram welcomes letters on various topics. We prefer typed or printed letters. Typewritten letters should be double-spaced and should not exceed two pages. Shorter letters are preferred. Handwritten letters must be legible. They should be signed and contain writer's address and telephone numbers, home and work, for possible verification. However, only the writer's name will be published.

Libelous letters or letters deemed in bad taste will not be published. We do not publish anonymous letters, letters addressed to particular groups or the general public ("open" letters) or copies of letters sent to others. We reserve the right to condense and correct spelling, grammar and punctuation. Letter writers ordinarily are limited to one publication per month. No particular day of publication can be promised, but to appear in a Sunday or Monday newspaper, letters must be received by 8 a.m. Friday. Otherwise, letters must be received two full days prior to publication. Letters may appear any day of publication.

Crime group depicts average 'capo'

WASHINGTON — La Cosa Nostra, or the Mafia, has fascinated and alarmed law enforcement officials since its first acquisitive advance men arrived in this country more than a century ago.

Jack Anderson

The crime families have also, of course, fascinated Hollywood, which has repeatedly presented its versions of mob life, invariably romanticized and sometimes glorified. In most of these fictional depictions, the police are often corrupt, usually incompetent and essentially irrelevant.

As might be expected, the President's Commission on Organized Crime paints a different picture. In an unpublished background paper, titled "LCN Today," the commission works up a composite of the average "caporegima" or captain of a Mafia family. A better title might have been "Portrait of a Mobster," for it portrays the capo who directs the mob's day-to-day operations.

The typical capo "has generated a great deal of money and has gained status within the family," the report observes, adding: "They typically have their own legitimate and illegitimate businesses as well as receiving a percentage of the income of their soldiers."

The FBI, meanwhile, conducted a survey of 101 gangsters whose activities span the decades from the 1930s to the 1980s. Our associate Donald Goldberg has obtained an analysis of the survey. What is fascinating about the statistical portrait is the inordinate amount of time the average capo has spent in court answering criminal charges. He seems to have bounced in and out of police custody like a Ping-Pong ball. It's a mundane facet of his life that was ignored by "The Godfather."

Here's the rap sheet: "The 'average capo' was born in 1924 and is 62 years old. His first arrest was probably in 1950 at the age of 26, for robbery. During his career he has been arrested 8.9 times. He was charged with 12.35 crimes."

In the 1,248 total arrest charges brought against the 101 capos surveyed, 38 different types of crimes were represented, ranging from relatively minor offenses like disorderly conduct and destruction of property to such felonies as murder, rape and extortion.

Not surprisingly, as the capos grew older and wealthier, they were more likely to be involved in bribery and tax evasion than in the violent crimes of their youth.

"By examining this group," the analysis explains, "one can get an idea of the crime pattern for our 'average capo' as he matured and climbed the hierarchy of his organized crime family. Especially significant is the presence of robbery, extortion, felonious assault and weapons possessions, all indicating the ruthless violence potential of this group."

Until the 1950s, robbery was the most common charge against the capos. By 1960, and continuing into the 1970s, gambling moved into the No. 1 spot, and since then has been replaced by extortion.

During the six decades, the most frequent criminal charges against the capos were gambling, robbery and conspiracy. But times are changing: Only conspiracy remains among the Top Three, with racketeering and bribery.

As the analysis notes, racketeering didn't become a federal crime in the 1970s. Its frequency on the rap sheets has grown roughly tenfold since then.

On a hopeful note, the report concludes that, while mobsters have become more sophisticated since the 1930s, it "may well be that law enforcement's response is more sophisticated, and therefore able to pursue these sophisticated crimes."

UNDER THE DOME: Opponents of legislation reauthorizing the Clean Air Act have used some excruciating stalling tactics to prolong its stay in the House Energy subcommittee chaired by Rep. Henry Waxman, D-Calif. Rep. Edward Madigan, R-Ill., an opponent of the bill, has made repeated demands for time-consuming quorum calls. Staff aides have been instructed to tell subcommittee members to drift quietly away after each quorum call — thereby creating the opportunity for yet another head count. Another delaying tactic has been the scheduling of literally hundreds of industry opponents to testify, though they have added little to the debate.

MINI-EDITORIAL: Lo! the mysterious East: Risking the hopeless corruption of their yuppie generation, Communist China's rulers have allowed Peking's first cocktail lounge for locals to open on a trial basis. The New Times Bar is already proving popular with trendy Pekinese, though from the description it's hard to see why: The bar features a ceiling trellis with plastic grapes, wall mirrors, mercifully dim lighting and such alcoholic bombshells as Manhattans, Tom Collinses, Vodka Bronxes and a house specialty called the Golden Dream. The owner of this daring enterprise: Peking No. 2 Cake Factory. What next — singsong girls?

GEORGE F. WILL

Stay at home — and lose more than life!

WASHINGTON — The delicate verbal embroidery does not disguise the message of the Eastern Airlines television commercial that says, "This summer, like no other summer, there's no face like home." The commercial overflows with Florida faces — Disney faces, alligator faces — and implies, with labored semi-subtlety: This summer is "like no other" because of terrorism, so stay in America.

George F. Will

Perhaps Eastern cannot be blamed for trying to turn a profit from the public's panic. However, the public is blameworthy for panicking.

Last Sunday evening, Eastern's commercial helped pay for newscasts that included stories about Navy pilots returning home from carrier duty off Libya, and about the security alert at English Channel ports in response to reports of a plot to bomb a ferry. The aim of such a plot would be to kill tourists, especially Americans, in a British setting.

Such an attack targeting tourists would show that terrorists know they are sowing panic. Americans are handing terrorists a huge victory by allowing themselves to be frightened away from European travel.

The American public has emerged blinking into the sunlight from the lastest Rambo movie, and is ambling down the street to see "Top Gun," a movie celebrating Navy aviators. The public is rightly proud of the President who ordered and the aviators who executed the strike at Libya. Yet a portion of this puffed-up-with-pride public is making the American nation seem contemptible.

In the process, it is giving the British public, which has a strong appeasement reflex anyway, an economic incentive to deepen its resentment of Prime Minister Thatcher's cooperation with the U.S. raid. The sharp reduction of foreign travel by Americans is hurting many British businesses. And the reduction is irrational.

Irrational risk-perception is a fascinating facet of modern life. The Chernobyl nuclear accident brought out anti-nuclear forces that are nimble at the art of piggybacking their cause on a passing hysteria. Never mind that it is safer to live near a nuclear-power plant than a coal-burning plant. Newspapers pleased to fill pages with cigarette ads (smoking-related deaths per year: 350,000) editorialize about the "unacceptable risks" of nuclear power, a technology that has an astonishing U.S. safety record: zero deaths.

There are white-knuckle passengers who writhe in agony during the flight to Los Angeles, where they heave a sigh of relief as they sag into a poorly maintained cab that is driven by a stranger who speeds off into the roaring river of metal called the San Diego Freeway, on which, on a given evening, about 20 percent of the drivers have alcohol in their systems and upward of 10 percent are seriously impaired by it.

People who irrationally fear the friendly skies more than the freeways do no public harm. But the cowed American who allows terrorists to shape his or her travel plans hurts the nation — its reputation and its staunchest allies.

The New Republic, in an editorial titled "Please Go Away," notes that American avoidance of Europe might be defensible were it motivated by a desire to protest European appeasement of terrorist nations. But "Europhobia" expresses fear, not principle. And the two nations suffering most are those with the best anti-terrorist records, Britain and Israel. Worse, tourist bookings to the Soviet Union are up 50 percent because that police state is safe: Terrorism there is an export commodity.

The New Republic notes that in 1985, 23 Americans were killed by terrorists, the same number as in 1972 and less than in 1974 (42). In the first four months of 1986, five Americans were killed by terrorism in Europe, fewer than the number of vacationers who will die in America in the next three months from allergic reactions to bee stings. (Five terrorist victims in four months is a rate of 15 a year. Last year 15 Americans were killed in elevator accidents.)

In the first four months of 1986, 464 Americans were murdered in New York City. So, you are going to drive (43,500 dead on highways last year) away from urban mayhem, to the lake? In 1983, 6,600 Americans drowned. Last year more Americans died in bathtubs than at the hands of terrorists.

As a scholar has noted, we can predict statistical effects of a risk on the population at large, but not on individuals, which is why fortune tellers never become as rich as insurance companies. But we can gauge the risk to this nation that results from panic that tells terrorists that terrorism is working. Americans who stay home from Europe to hide from terrorism are not just asking for trouble for their nation, they are pleading for it. The world has a way of heeding such pleading.

ART BUCHWALD

Saving tax shelters helps save lobbyists!

There are many sad men and women in Washington this week. They are the lobbyists who took a terrible beating when the House and Senate passed slightly different versions of a tax reform bill.

Art Buchwald

One happens to be Arnie Nevermore, a man who has spent the greater part of his adult life protecting the interests of the Tax Shelter Contractors of America.

Arnie rarely loses a big one and was in shock when I talked to him in the halls of the Capitol.

"When I think of all the lousy meals I've eaten at $1,000 a plate I get sick to my stomach. I still can't believe they would vote down tax shelters."

"You have a right to be sore, Arnie. The lobbyists are always the first to get hurt when tax laws are repealed."

"The House and Senate can vote any way they want to, but if they ask for PAC money from me they should at least listen to my story."

"I'll listen to your story."

He gave me his list of voting instructions for Congress and it read, "Eliminate tax shelters and you eliminate jobs. Take away a man's incentive to beat the system and you're taking away the only thing that makes him strive to be a millionaire. WARNING: If you buildoze the shelters, we'll elect people who will build new ones twice as strong."

"Those are heavy arguments," I told Arnie. "No wonder Congress didn't want to hear them."

"I don't care for myself," he said, "because I'm going to get by whether my money is sheltered or not. But I'm worried about the little guy who ekes out a bare living on a real estate deal or two, or an oil tax shelter."

"It's good of you to speak up for the little guy, Arnie. Most people are just screaming to make the tax system fairer. But you're for protecting the taxpayers who need help the most. The ones who object to tax shelters are those who wouldn't know one if they fell into it. What are you going to do now?"

"I'm going to organize a letter-writing campaign which will blow their minds. I'm going to have each tax-shelter owner write 20 letters to his or her congressman."

"Twenty letters? How do you get them to write that many?"

"Any person who can afford to be in a tax shelter has to have a secretary. The thrust of the letter will be that the writer has no objection if the lower brackets get a better break as long as the upper brackets get what's coming to them. Tax reform is full of mine fields. Look at this. You can only deduct interest on your first and second homes — not your third or fourth. Everyone knows a third or fourth home costs more than the second or first one. So where is the equity?"

Arnie was really wound up. "You can't get investment credits under the new bill. This means all the equipment people buy for businesses comes out of their own pocket."

"Isn't there anything in the tax law for the well-to-do?"

"Nothing that I can see. This tax reform bill is a dagger aimed at the heart of the rich. And it punishes the upper classes who are trying to stay above the middle-class line."

"Maybe they won't pass the bill. Congress has walked away from less controversial ones," I said.

Arnie shook his head. "They won't walk away on this one because the public thinks they're getting something good. The truth is the bill is a lemon because the Administration is going to have to tax the people after they give them their tax break."

"What are you going to do?"

"I'm going to work the halls, and if they don't listen to me I'm going to tell them what they can do with their $1,000-a-plate squishy chickens."

Nicaraguan villagers live in fear of Contra murders, kidnappings

EDITOR'S NOTE: Village life in Nicaragua is explored in this, the fourth in a six-part series on that Central American nation.

By LIZ BOWIE
Hearst News Service

SAN JUAN DE LIMAY, Nicaragua — Campesinos, Nicaragua's version of cowboys, come riding into town wearing straw hats and spurs. After tethering their horses, they talk with friends between swigs of fruit juice or beer.

Women saunter down rocky streets with an easy, slow grace, carrying containers of water, coffee or food on their heads. And the ox carts rumble through the dust bringing wood from the mountains.

There is only one phone in this town, and it can take 20 or 30 minutes to make a call. Newspapers get to Limay some days, and not others. Radios are plentiful.

There aren't many television sets, but in a corner store, on one of the few here, viewers recently watched U.S. Rep. Michael Barnes, D-Md., chairman of the Western Hemisphere subcommittee, talking about the debate in the U.S. Congress over whether to give $100 million in aid to the Contras, anti-government guerrillas.

Here, in this village of 4,500 people surrounded by mountains 20 miles from the Honduran border, the 20th-century politics of Nicaragua seem to have collided in peculiar ways with a town that is just emerging from the 19th century.

A short Jeep ride from Limay, campesino Adalberto Gonzalez Detanco points to a mountain range in the distance that he says is Honduras.

"The fear is that if they (the Contras) come past here and see anyone in their path, they will kidnap them and take them to Honduras," he said.

"We have a lot of fear. We have had so much suffering here, and we don't want more."

If more money comes from the United States to the Contras, he said, "we will die of hunger, because we have to spend time defending ourselves" instead of plowing fields.

A new dirt road built a couple of years ago from the nearest town of Esteli now means that Limay is only a bumpy, 90-minute ride on a bus or Jeep. It has changed the town's reputation as a hiding place for thieves, because of its remoteness, to a haven for refugees.

Nicoli Espinosa and his wife, Juana Elvira Martinez, are two of those refugees from the border mountains.

A former campesino, Espinosa retreated to Limay, he said, when the Contra activity near his home became too dangerous. Espinosa was a social leader in his community of San Antonio de Comayagua.

The Contras, counter-revolutionaries financed by the U.S. government, came to his house months ago, dressed as Sandinistas, or Nicaraguan soldiers. They told him they would "get him" if there was talk about the Contras being in his area.

His family, seven children and some relatives, hid for eight nights in the bushes near Comayagua.

"I believed there was danger to my family, so I left everything," he said.

Now he lives in a new barrio in Limay, built for refugees who have flooded into town.

"All governments have problems," Espinosa said. "The enemy doesn't let us work ours out. That is the biggest problem."

He said he believes Reagan will be successful in getting money to fight the Sandinista government. And that, he said, will bring only more destruction and more potent weapons. Airplanes, now rarely seen in the sky over Limay, will come, too, he said.

"The most delicate question is the dollars. There is a nervousness about the dollars," Espinosa said.

Like Espinosa, many people in the town have already experienced the war, though the town has been in relative peace for six to eight months.

An American nun living in the village said she has counted about 40 violent deaths and 35 or so kidnappings over the past few years.

The Contras seem to resent, and want to destroy, any evidence of advancement in the town, said Nancy Donovan, a Maryknoll nun from Massachusetts who has spent the past 30 years in Latin America, and who says she was captured briefly by the Contras last year.

The same week Limay was supposed to get dial telephones, Donovan said, seven government telephone workers were killed along the road to Limay.

When an adult-education program was started at night in the village, the Contras killed the teacher, she said. Now soldiers stand guard outside the school at night.

Donovan said she was captured last year as she walked along a path toward town. Some of the Contra guerrillas, former Limay residents, recognized her and sat her down next to a wall with some other people.

"As we were praying, I began to hear shooting. So I presumed people were being killed. They said, 'When the action is over, you can go.' After a long time, we began to hear shouting on the hill through the walkie-talkie. You could hear the shootings and the screams," Donovan said.

She said she found out later that 20 townspeople, who had happened to be on the road out of town, had been killed. Some of the bodies had been burned.

"That is why the people of Limay would never join them. They know what they do. They have the evidence in their graveyards. They know how many fingernails were pulled out," Donovan said.

However, there are people in Limay who will tell you that they have been largely unaffected by the war.

Mercedez Jarquin recently returned from secretarial school in Managua. She works in Limay's only bank during the day and at her family's restaurant in the evening.

"Most of the people are waiting for something worse to happen," she said.

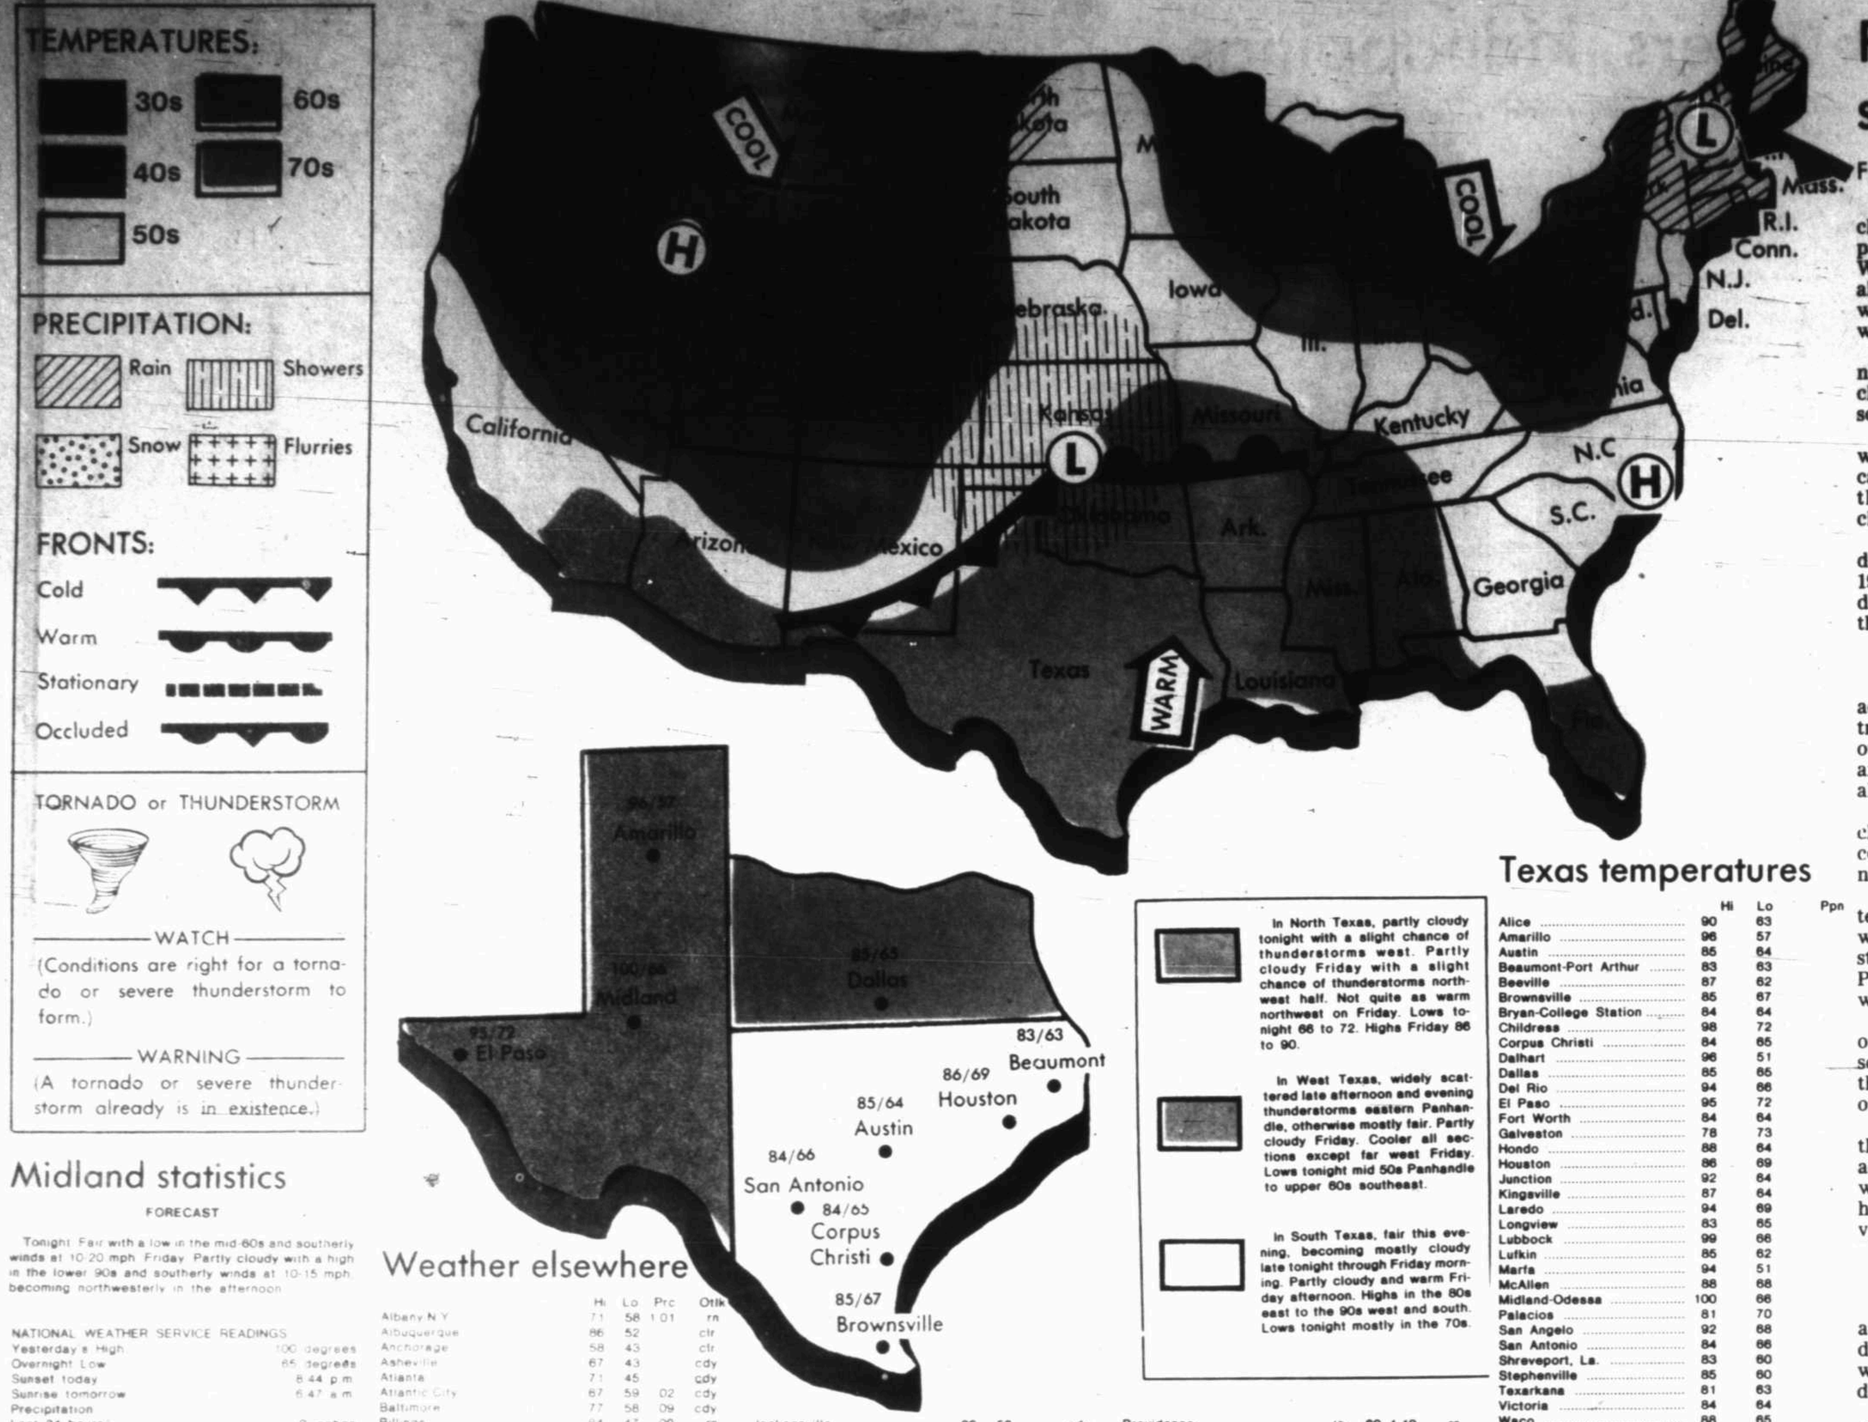
WEATHER SUMMARY

Conditions forecast for 8 AM Friday



Partly cloudy skies forecast

From Staff and Wire Reports

The weather outlook for Friday includes a high in the lower 90s and partly cloudy skies. The National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport is calling for southerly winds at 10-15 mph, becoming northwesterly in the late afternoon.

The NWS is predicting a low tonight in the middle 60s. Under partly cloudy skies, winds will be out of the south at 10-20 mph.

The forecast for Memorial Day weekend, according to the NWS, calls for highs near 90, with lows in the 60s. Skies should be partly cloudy.

Wednesday's high of 100 was five degrees below the record high set in 1953. This morning's low of 65 was 17 degrees above the record low set for this date in 1931.

STATE

Fair and mild weather prevailed across most of Texas today, as a trough of low pressure deepened over West Texas early this morning and a weak warm front developed along the Red River valley.

Moisture in the form of low level cloudiness spread across parts of the coastal plains and was noted as far north as San Antonio.

Meanwhile, patchy light fog dotted parts of the upper Texas coast while mid to high level clouds streaked the skies over the High Plains and the Trans Pecos. Otherwise, clear skies prevailed.

Winds were light and variable over the Big Bend while south to southeast winds at speeds of less than 10 miles an hour brushed most of east and Southeast Texas.

South winds at speeds generally in the 10 to 20 mph range breezed across the rest of the state. However, winds were gusting up to 30 miles an hour at waco in the central brazos valley.

NATION

A snow-laden cold front pushed across the Rockies today and rain dotted the East and South while high winds whistled across Western deserts.

A storm warning was posted for the northern mountains of Utah amid National Weather Service warnings of a foot-deep snowfall by this evening at elevations above 8,000 feet.

Snow and gusty winds prompted a travelers' advisory for the high country of western Wyoming and a storm watch for the mountains of southern Montana today and tonight, with heavy snow and gusty winds expected above 5,000 feet.

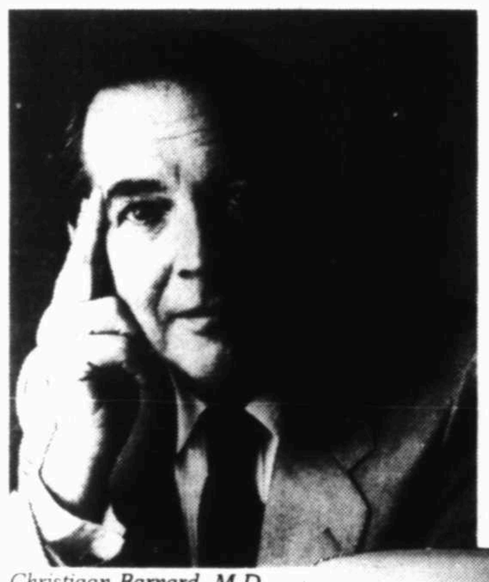
DR. CHRISTIAAN BARNARD ON AGING:

"We have found GSL can make older skin behave and look like younger skin."



Christiaan Barnard, M.D.

Announcing the arrival of Glycel, a remarkable new skin care regimen from Switzerland. Dr. Christiaan Barnard, a reknowned pioneer of heart surgery, together with a team of Swiss cellular biologists, has identified Glycel's key ingredient GSL (Glycosphingolipid) as the most effective treatment in the recovery and rejuvenation of healthy new skin. Now your skin can look younger and more beautiful. In addition, a special Carrier System was developed to allow GSL to work most effectively. This is the first system of its kind to be used in a cosmetic skin treatment. A personal consultation awaits you. Discover Purifiers to cleanse, tone and stimulate the skin... Nourishers to texturize and moisturize... specialists to care for and treat vulnerable areas. Now at Dillard's, the Glycel skin care collection, $25 to $195.

Chaps claim at least national tennis tie

By ERIC SCHURER
Sports Writer

The inevitable became reality for the top-ranked Midland College women's tennis team Wednesday as the Chaparrals clinched no worse than a tie for its fourth National Junior College Athletic Association championship.

MC advanced five singles players and all three doubles teams into today's finals and took a five-point lead over Cooke County (Tex.) and Tyler (Tex.) Junior College. Only if MC loses all eight final matches today and Tyler won all of its five finals could the Chaps finish in a tie.

"And that ain't gonna' happen," said a pleased Midland College coach Joe Williams, capturing his first NJCAA title in three seasons as men's and women's coach. MC last won a women's championship in 1981 when it shared the title. The other titles came in 1976 and 1976.

Ron Jaap/Reporter-Telegram

Natasha Koprivica helps send Midland College's No. 3 doubles team to the national finals Wednesday. Koprivica teams with Charissa Pruim. The MC women needed only one victory today to win the national title.

NEXT WEEK, the No. 1 ranked MC men's team will try to make it a clean sweep when they travel to Tyler for a week-long affair.

But first, the Lady Chaparrals have some business to take care of in the way of individual titles.

"We are not finished yet," as a determined Helene Le Beller said after clinching a berth in both the No. 2 singles final and the No. 1 doubles final.

Only Moniek Margaroli at No. 1 singles does not have a chance for an individual championship. Margaroli was ousted by P.P. Mirkovic of Tyler, 6-4, 6-4, in Wednesday's semifinal round.

The Holland native did team with Helen Schildknecht to move into the finals at No. 2 doubles, however, as did Natasha Koprivica and Charissa Pruim at No. 3, and Le Beller and Sarah Swan at No. 1.

Swan at No. 3, Koprivica at No. 4, Schildknecht at No. 5 and Pruim at No. 6 all play for singles championships today.

"And I've got a potential national champion in Paige Carpenter that can't even get on the court," Williams said of his alternate player.

Koprivica, Schildknecht and Swan, all seeded No. 1 in their bracket, have barely been touched in three matches on the way to the finals.

"They're locked in up here," said Williams, pointing to his temples. "They don't want to give anybody anything."

KOPRIVICA, a Yugoslav who went to school in Rome, feels she has a mental advantage every time she steps on to the court.

"Conditioning is one thing, but the mind is so much a part of tennis. I feel that I have won many matches because I am mentally strong," Koprivica said. "My mother is like that, too. I always talk to myself on the court. I think it helps. I tell myself 'I want to win.' If I lose a point, I work very hard to go out and get the next one."

In matches Wednesday, Koprivica easily eliminated Trudi Barua of Florida Junior College 6-0, 6-1, without a hitch, although she insisted the competition was much better.

Le Beller, playing at No. 2, endured one of MC's only scares of the day, defeating another Yugoslav, Amila Fetahagic of Tyler, 7-6, 6-4. Le Beller had to rally from a 7-5 deficit in the tiebreaker before posting a 9-7 win to take the first set over the top-seeded Fetahgic.

Now, Le Beller, seeded third at going in, will try to topple the second see, Jamie McCaffery of Cooke County in the finals. McCaffery defeated a hurting Le Beller, 6-4, 3-6, 7-6, in the Region V tournament last month.

In another rematch of the Region V pairings, Schildknecht will play Cooke's Ase Anderson, whom she beat 6-2, 6-3. Swan, at No. 3 will play Kim Oleson of Tyler; Koprivica will play Tyler's Sophie Castro and Pruim will play Aoife Wilson, also of Tyler.

At No. 1, Region V champ Henriette Knols of McLennan will face Mirkovic. All singles finals will begin at 9 a.m. at the MC Courts. The doubles finals will be held soon after the singles are concluded.

Tulsa scores another 17; Angels sliding

By BOB BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

Once again, the Midland Angels were slapped around by the Tulsa Drillers, dropping a 17-9 Texas League decision at Angels Stadium Wednesday night.

For the second consecutive night, Angel pitchers gave up 17 runs while, for the most part, their offense was silent.

Tulsa starting pitcher Billy Taylor, 2-5, pitched a five-hit shutout through the first six innings, giving Driller pitchers 11 consecutive scoreless innings against Midland.

The Angels finally got on the scoreboard when James Randall came home on Raul Tovar's sacrifice fly to center field.

On Tuesday, Randall's run on Kevin King's sacrifice fly was the only tally the Angels gained. His second score snapped a skid that saw the Drillers outscore the Angels, 34-0.

THE DRILLERS wasted little time picking up where they left off Tuesday, scoring three runs in the first inning and five in the third for an 8-0 lead , chasing Angel starter Rafael Pimental, 1-2.

A pair of home runs supplied all of Tulsa's third inning runs. Bob Gergen collected his third four-bagger of the year, a three-run shot to left field. Three batters later, Kevin Bootay belted his first homer of the year for two more runs.

Relief pitcher Mike Butler wasn't treated any better, giving up five runs in two innings of duty.

Vinicio Cedeno finally slowed the Driller attack with one-inning of shutout pitching but Terry Clark followed and was roughed up for four runs in the seventh, including Greg Bailey's first homer of the year to plate two.

Trailing 17-1, the Angels brought belated life to their bats, collecting four hits and four runs in each of the final two innings.

The late offensive spark may be what the Angels need to get things untracked for tonight's third game of the five-game stand with the Drillers.

Sampson's hair grows on time

NBA Playoffs

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — Ralph Sampson couldn't even see the basket, but the ball seemed to have eyes of its own.

On an awkward-looking shot that was a cross between a hook and a finger roll, Sampson scored from 10 feet away as time expired Wednesday night to give the Houston Rockets a dramatic 114-112 victory over the Los Angeles Lakers.

The Houston win clinched the series 4-1 to knock the defending champion Lakers out of the playoffs and send the Rockets to the championship round against the Celtics, beginning Monday in Boston.

"I knew where the basket was, but I couldn't see it," Sampson said of the game-winning shot. "I thought it (the shot) was short; I didn't see it until it hit the rim and bounced in."

"Since he made that shot, I guess it just wasn't meant to be for us this year," said Lakers guard Earvin "Magic" Johnson. "To be in control the whole way like we were, and to see that shot drop, it's hard to swallow."

Houston Coach Bill Fitch said of Sampson's basket, "There was a man guarding him from behind and a man guarding him in front and he only had one second to get the shot off, so it wasn't real pretty. But it went in."

After the Lakers' Byron Scott missed a jumper and the Rockets rebounded and called timeout with one second left, Houston's Rodney McCray inbounded the ball with a long pass to Sampson.

Sampson barely grasped the ball before putting up his shot.

"You can't beat the fates," said Lakers Coach Pat Riley. "I was shocked."

The Lakers became the 17th consecutive team to fail to repeat as champions. The last to successfully defend the NBA title was the Celtics in 1969.

Robert Reid tied the game at 112-112 with a three-point shot from the left corner with 15 seconds to play.

After Scott missed a long jumper, the Rockets grabbed the rebound and called timeout with one second to go. On the ensuing inbounds play, Sampson, with his back nearly to the basket, flipped the pass toward the basket and the ball dropped over the front rim and in as the buzzer sounded.

It was the only lead of the game for the Rockets.

The Rockets played the final 5:14 of the contest without the man who had been their leading scorer and rebounder in the series, Akeem Olajuwon. Olajuwon and the Lakers' Mitch Kupchak got into a fight that turned into a brief bench-clearing shoving match. Both were ejected.

Olajuwon had 30 points and seven rebounds before his ejection. Sampson finished with 29, 10 after Olajuwon's ejection.

The Lakers were led by Kareem Abdul-Jabbar with 26 points and Johnson with 24.

Lee's Miller has game eyes open

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

Midland Lee football coach Earl Miller has seen plenty of Maroon-White scrimmage games, but he may be looking through a set of different eyes tonight at Memorial Stadium when the Rebels complete their first spring training with Miller as head coach.

Lee fans, hoping to see the "New Tradition" gain steam in 1986, probably won't notice many changes. After all, the Rebs have been state playoff bound for three years in a row and Miller isn't going to change something drastically that works.

The wishbone offense is still in place as is the standard 4-3 Lee defense, but Miller has his eyes geared in on a couple of key areas.

"I'll basically be looking for two things tonight," said Miller. "I'll be watching the offensive line to see how they block in certian situations and I'll be looking hard at our defensive linebackers.

"Those are two areas in which we need improvement if we are to have a football team this fall," said Miller.

Lee's sophomores are scheduled to scrimmage at 6 p.m. while the varsity will take the field at 7:30 p.m.

Miller hasn't even changed up the spring format that has worked so well the past three years. The Maroon team will be comprised of Lee's No. 1 offense and defense while the White team will be made up of No. 2 offensive and defensive sqauds. To keep things interesting, the White team will be given seven points to start the game and seven points at the start of each quarter.

For Tulsa, Gergen drove in five Driller runs...This weekend, the Angels and Arkansas Travelers will play the first of two scheduled doubleheaders to makeup games rained out while in Little Rock. Sunday's pair will begin at 5 p.m. and Tuesday's at 6 p.m....Midland's losses to Tulsa opened the door for Texas League West rivals Beaumont and El Paso as they moved into first and second place. The Gators lead the West by a game over the Diablos while the Angels are two off the pace in third at 20-20...The victories allowed Tulsa to pull within 10½ games of East Division leader Arkansas' 23-14 pace, best record in the TL.

Watching Ron Darling pitch is not always a pleasant experience for New York Mets Manager Dave Johnson, but the result more often than not is satisfactory.

Wally Backman had three hits, two doubles and a single, in the first three innings as the Mets built a 7-1 lead for Darling and went on to a 7-4 victory over the San Francisco Giants on Wednesday.

"It's really tough on a manager watching your pitcher go to a 3-2 count on almost every batter when he has a big lead," Johnson said. "I didn't think he had his real good stuff, and I think he could have thrown more strikes with the bad stuff."

The Mets, 25-9 for the season, have won all eight games Darling has started this season, and the right-hander has won 11 of his 12 decisions since last Aug. 19. He's 5-0 this season.

Mookie Wilson's leadoff walk and Backman's double started the first-inning, four-run rally. A walk to Keith Hernandez loaded the bases, and Darryl Strawberry hit a two-run double to left field after Gary Carter popped out. With two out, Howard Johnson delivered another two-run double.

Backman, the second baseman who missed almost two weeks of play early this month because of a pulled hamstring, has 21 hits in his last 12 games and is batting .477 over that stretch and .382 for the season.

Baseball Roundup

NATIONAL LEAGUE

Pirates 2, Astros 1

Rick Rhoden pitched a five-hitter and Sid Bream homered and doubled to power visiting Pittsburgh over Houston at the Astrodome.

"If I hit a home run every six games that will by 28 to 30 for the year. I'm ahead of that now. As long as I can stay at that level I'll be happy," Bream said.

Bream doubled and scored on Jim Morrison's single in the second and hit his seventh homer off starter Mike Scott in the fourth.

Rhoden, 3-3, struck out six and walked three in snapping a personal three-game losing streak.

Scott, 4-3, pitched seven innings allowing six hits and striking out nine to equal his career high for the fifth time this season. Scott leads the National League with 77 strikeouts.

Cardinals 8, Reds 3

Andy Van Slyke hit his first home run of the season to key a four-run sixth inning rally, helping St. Louis snap a six-game losing streak. The victory was only the seventh in 27 games for the host Cardinals.

Van Slyke's two-run homer and ensuing doubles by Terry Pendleton and Mike Heath came off starter John Denny who carried a three-hitter and a 3-1 lead into the Cardinals' sixth.

Braves 9, Cubs 8

Reliever George Frazier walked Andres Thomas on four pitches to force in the winning run with one out in the 13th inning as Atlanta edged visiting Chicago. It was the sixth straight victory for the Braves, who had a 21-hit attack.

The winning run was unearned after Bob Horner reached safely on third baseman Manny Trillo's fielding error to open the 13th. Pitcher Jeff Dedmon then forced Horner at second and raced to third on Rafael Ramirez's fourth double of the game, tying a major-league record.

Padres 7, Phillies 2

Tony Gwynn went 4-for-4 to lead a 13-hit attack and support the four-hit pitching of Dave Dravecky as San Diego defeated visting Philadelphia.

Dravecky, 4-3, struck out a career-high 11 as he went the distance for the second time this year in handing the Phillies their fourth straight defeat.

Dodgers 6, Expos 1

Mike Marshall hit two homers and drove in three runs to support Orel Hershiser's four-hit pitching over seven innings as Los Angeles defeated visiting Montreal. Hershiser, 4-3, struck out six and walked three. The only run he allowed was Tim Wallach's sixth homer with one out in the sixth.

AMERICAN LEAGUE

Orioles 2, Angels 1

Cal Ripken hit a two-run homer with two outs in the seventh inning, lifting Baltimore over visiting California.

Yankees 10, A's 4

Dan Pasqua, just back from the minors, homered and doubled to drive in four runs and lead New York past visiting Oakland. Pasqua, starting in right field in place of resting Dave Winfield, hit a two-run homer off Eric Plunk in the third inning and doubled in two more off Plunk in the fifth. Joe Niekro, 5-2, scattered five hits over seven innings.

Tigers 6, Mariners 4

Larry Herndon's homer and RBI double helped Detroit rally to beat visiting Seattle and get back to the .500 mark. Herndon tied the score 4-4 with a leadoff homer off Mark Langston in the sixth inning, doubled home the go-ahead run in the seventh and scored an insurance run on Darrell Evans' single.

White Sox 5, Blue Jays 4

Pinch-hitter Jerry Hairston singled home Tim Hulett in the eighth to lift host Chicago over Toronto for the White Sox's seventh straight victory.

Rangers 2, Royals 1

George Wright's run-scoring triple into the right-field corner with two outs in the bottom of the 10th inning gave Texas the victory over visiting Kansas City. Pete O'Brien set up the game-winning hit with a two-out single off reliever Steve Farr and his run made a winner of Rangers reliever Greg Harris.

Indians 4, Brewers 2

Former Milwaukee pitcher Tom Candiotti held the host Brewers to four singles and Dan Rohn, a last-minute lineup addition, hit a two-run single in Cleveland's four-run second inning. Candiotti, signed by Cleveland as a free agent in December after five years in the Milwaukee organization, improved his record to 3-4.

Red Sox 3, Twins 2

Steve Lyons doubled and scored Boston's first run in the sixth inning and then drove in the go-ahead run with a single in the seventh, rallying the Red Sox over Minnesota Twins after two long rain delays. The Red Sox struck back for their fifth consecutive victory after the game was delayed by rain for 1 hour and 59 minutes at the start of the sixth inning and for 40 minutes in the top of the seventh.

Flames cooling from air travel

NHL Playoffs

MONTREAL (AP) — The Calgary Flames were flying high before the Stanley Cup finals with Montreal and that may just be their problem these days, according to Mats Naslund of the Canadiens.

"I think more than the games they played, the flights they were having back and forth to St. Louis were pretty tough," Naslund said Wednesday as the Canadiens prepared for tonight's fourth game, holding a 2-1 lead in the best-of-seven championship series.

"We've been flying back and forth to Calgary and we had a lot of guys complaining," Naslund said. "And they've had three times as much traveling. So it could be tough for them."

Before meeting the Edmonton Oilers in the Smythe Division finals, the Flames were a strong choice to dethrone the two-time defending Stanley Cup champions.

But after playing seven emotional games with the Oilers, their arch-rivals in the province of Alberta, the Flames struggled through another intense seven-game series with the St. Louis Blues for the Campbell Conference championship.

Coupled with a three-game series against Winnipeg in the first round, that made a record 17 games for the Flames entering the final series against the Canadiens.

Meanwhile, the Canadiens finished up their Wales Conference final with the New York Rangers in five games and had a week off before starting the championship round at Calgary.

An advantage?

"No question about it," said Montreal Coach Jean Perron, whose team lost 5-2 in the opener, but then won the second game 3-2 in overtime and Tuesday night's Game 3 5-3.

"All the players have been talking about it all week," Perron said of the Canadiens' rest. "We've been playing better, especially using four lines. All the players are well rested and are skating better than even in the regular season."

Naslund feels the Flames' non-stop grind in the regular season and playoffs may be one of the reasons that the momentum is with Montreal.

"We don't count on the fact that they're going to be tired," Naslund, who scored two goals Tuesday night at the Montreal Forum, said, "but we like to take advantage of them if we have the chance."

The Flames, who haven't lost two straight games in the playoffs before the last two to the Canadiens, refuse to use fatigue as an excuse for their recent letdowns.

"We've played 105 games and they've played 103," Calgary's Neil Sheehy said. "This is the Stanley Cup finals and we can't make any excuses.

"Whether it (fatigue) is a factor or not, I have no idea. But I don't believe in excuses and nobody in our dressing room is thinking that way. We're disappointed, but not discouraged."

Calgary's Jim Peplinski admitted, however, that there was a general sense of fatigue on the team.

"Weariness just has to be overcome by mental toughness," he said.

The Flames have had physical problems other than fatigue.

Robertson honored

NEW YORK (AP) — San Antonio Spurs guard Alvin Robertson, who set a National Basketball Association record for steals, has been named winner of the league's inaugural Most Improved Player Award, the NBA announced Wednesday.

Robertson, who averaged 3.67 steals per game and previously was chosen the NBA Defensive Player of the Year, received 30 votes for Most Improved Player for a national media panel of 78 voters.

Forward Charles Barkley of the Philadelphia 76ers was second with 18½ votes. He was followed by Atlanta teammates Kevin Willis and Dominique Wilkins with 8 and 6½ votes, respectively. Nine other players received votes.

ROBERTSON, in his second year in the league, moved into the Spurs' starting backcourt, replacing four-time NBA scoring champion George Gervin. He raised his scoring average from 9.2 points per game to 17.0 this season, his rebounding average from 3.4 per game to 6.3, his assists from 3.5 to 5.5 per game, his field goal percentage from .498 to .514 and his free throw accuracy from .734 to .795.

In addition, Robertson, who earned a berth in the NBA All-Star Game, improved from 127 steals as a rookie to 301 this season, breaking the league record of 281 set by Don Buse in the 1976-77 season with Indiana. His average of 3.67 steals per game broke Buse's mark of 3.47.

Boggs warms to weather

BOSTON (AP) — The weather is warming. Wade Boggs is cranking up. And talk is heating up whether he will become the first major league player in 45 years to hit .400.

Boggs' battering of opposing pitchers at a .383 clip, tops in the majors, has been a major factor for the surprising Boston Red Sox as they roll along with the best record in the American League.

A two-time batting champion since taking over as Boston's third baseman in 1982, Boggs says he doesn't think he has "got hot at bat" yet.

"I'll get hot when the weather gets hot," he said Tuesday night after his first five-hit game since he was a senior at Plant High School in Tampa, Fla. in 1976. "I think my record shows that I hit much better in hot weather."

Boggs was unhappy when he reported to spring training in February. A few days earlier, he had to settle for $1.35 million for 1986. An arbitrator rejected his bid for $1.85 million.

Boggs, who won $1 million in arbitration in 1985, called the proceedings "a very unpleasant experience."

"It's not pleasant to hear the club say you didn't contribute," he said. "All those negative things destroy your confidence."

Asked what he thought the Red Sox would consider an ideal season for him, he quipped: "If I bat .350, hit 50 homers and steal 50 bases."

In a serious tone, he said after a talk with Boston batting instructor Walt Hriniak that he hoped to strike a happier medium with more homers and RBI.

Boggs amazed the baseball world last year when he broke open a close duel with Kansas City's George Brett in August and went on to lead the major leagues with a .368 average. His 240 hits were the most in the majors since 1930.

The left-handed hitter accomplished that after struggling the first few weeks of the season. He had only 57 hits in April and May, and didn't get over .310 until June.

In his first 37 games this year, he had 54 hits, including 15 doubles and four home runs. He had a double and four singles against the Minnesota Twins Tuesday night.

"Just another heckuva night for Wade Boggs," Boston Manager John McNamara said. "Nothing he does surprises me, nor anyone else who watches him regularly."

"He's in a league by himself — the man can hit," Red Sox veteran Dave Stapleton said. "He's a tough act to follow, but if you hit behind him, you have a chance for a lot of RBI, because he's always on base."

"As far as I'm concerned, he's the greatest hitter in 20 years, maybe 50 years," said Hriniak.

That would include Hall of Famer Ted Williams, the last of baseball's .400 hitters. Williams hit .406 for Boston in 1941.

Gustafson undecided on Swindell

AUSTIN (AP) — Coach Cliff Gustafson of No. 5-ranked Texas said Wednesday he had not yet decided whether All-American pitcher Greg Swindell would start in Texas' opener at the NCAA Central Regional baseball tournament.

Four top 20 college baseball teams are among six competing for the regional championship, which Texas is hosting for the eighth straight year.

The Longhorns, 49-12, open tonight against Missouri Valley champion Southern Illinois, 39-20-2, following games matching Pan American and Pepperdine and Arizona and San Diego State.

Pan American, an independent school from Edinburg, Texas, is 41-17. No. 20 Pepperdine, 35-19-2, is the runner-up in the West Coast Athletic Conference.

Arizona, which tied Stanford for second in the Pac-10 South, is 41-18 and is ranked No. 15, two places behind San Diego, champion of the Western Athletic Conference, which has a 42-21 record.

"This is probably the toughest tournament in the country," said Arizona Coach Jerry Kindall.

Gustafson said he was uncertain whether to start lefthander Swindell, 10-3 with a 1.79 earned run average, or righthander Mark Petkovsek, 11-1. "There are some uncertainties in my mind, and I want to sleep on it," Gustafson said.

Gustafson said Texas "is at a low ebb, coming off three straight losses."

CAN YOU IDENTIFY CLASSIC T.V. THEME SONGS?

GAME RULES:

The Midland Reporter-Telegram, A.M. 1510 KMND. Memory Music T.V. Game is based on skill in identifying (6) T.V. show theme songs each week. There will be 12 weekly games beginning Monday, April 7th and ending Friday, June 27th. There will be weekly 1st, 2nd, and 3rd place winners.

Two excerpts from each of the (6) T.V. show theme songs will be broadcast over A.M. 1510 KMND each week. Excerpts will be broadcast at least six, times daily between 6:00 AM and 6:00 PM Monday through Friday. Each show's two excerpts will be broadcast at least twice during the week, with both excerpts from each theme (12 total) being broadcast at least once by 6:00 PM Thursday of each week.

Excerpts will be numbered one through six. The answer (the title of the show) must be printed or typed on the correspondingly numbered line on the official Midland Reporter-Telegram A.M. 1510 KMND. Memory Music TV Game Entry Form. Each week's official entry form will be published Monday, Tuesday, and Thursday in the Midland Reporter-Telegram. Hand drawn facsimilies of the entire entry form will be acceptable, BUT MACHINE DUPLICATED COPIES ARE PROHIBITED.

CONTESTANTS MAY ENTER ONLY ONCE PER WEEK. The weekly game number must be marked on the lower left of the envelope on the address side. Envelopes must be postmarked by midnight Friday of each week. NO POSTAGE MACHINE CANCELLED ENVELOPES WILL BE ACCEPTED. ONLY ENVELOPES BEARING THE CORRECT POSTAGE AND CANCELLED BY THE U.S. POSTAL SERVICE OR ENTRIES HAND DELIVERED TO THE CONTEST ADDRESS BY 6:00 AM SATURDAY WILL BE ACCEPTED.

The weekly first prize will be awarded to the entrant with the most or all (6) TV shows correctly identified. In the case that more than one entrant has all the shows correctly identified a drawing will be held. 2nd and 3rd will be awarded to the two entrants with the most correct answers respectively. Again in the case more than one entrant having identified all (6) TV shows, a drawing will be held to determine 2nd and 3rd place winners.

The correct answer and the theme song itself along with the two excerpts will be played back twice on A.M. 1510 KMND Saturday morning between 6:00 A.M. and noon. Answers will also be published in Sunday's Midland Reporter Telegram. Weekly winners will be announced each Wednesday afternoon by A.M. 1510 KMND and in the Midland Reporter-Telegram.

It is not necessary to purchase the Midland Reporter-Telegram to play the game. Copies of the MRT are available for free examination at the Midland Reporter-Telegram, 201 East Illinois and the Midland County Public Library.

All winners must sign a release form acknowledging that both the Midland Reporter-Telegram and A.M. 1510 KMND shall have the right to publish, publicize and broadcast his/her name, picture, voice and the fact that he/she won a prize. If the winner is a minor, a parent or guardian must sign a minor's release form prior to the prize being awarded. Winners are responsible for all taxes incurred on prizes.

Judge's decisions will be final in any interpretation of the rules of this game. Employees of the Midland Reporter-Telegram, Bakcor Broadcasting, Inc. and members of their immediate families are ineligible. The Grand Prize, a cruise on The Mississippi or Delta Queen Steamboat is worth up to $4,000. Does not include bar tab, shore tours or gift shop purchases. It may be used at your convenience based on a 30 day space available basis. It includes round trip airfare to New Orleans. Cruise must be taken by April 1, 1987. Grand prize may not be exchanged.

The winner of the cruise will be determined by a drawing at the end of all 12 weekly games. All weekly 1st, 2nd, and 3rd prize winners will be entered in the drawing.

Dollar rallies

LONDON (AP) — The U.S. dollar rallied against European currencies and the Japanese yen today, riding a wave of profit-taking and expectations that it will climb further in the near term.

It opened nearly two points up against the West German mark and Dutch guilder, and more than a penny up against the British pound.

Dealers said the surge was due mainly to technical buying as banks scoop up dollars in expectation of the currency strengthening further. The improvement began Tuesday with better than expected figures for U.S. Gross National Product.

Traders said the dollar has been helped by brisk intervention by the Bank of Japan in recent Tokyo trading sessions, reflecting Japanese concern that the yen's rapid rise is hurting small and medium-size companies that depend heavily on exports.

In Tokyo, where trading ends before Europe's business day begins, the dollar continued to rise to a closing 169.65, up 0.60 from Wednesday. Later, in London, it was quoted at 169.45 yen.

But Tokyo traders expected a significant rise in the dollar's value to prompt a reaction from the United States and some other nations which hope a lower dollar will help reduce the U.S. trade deficit.

In London, the British pound was quoted at $1.5045, compared with $1.5165 Wednesday.

Gold trading was reported thin in London, with dealers reluctant to sell because they are not certain where the dollar is going.

The metal opened in London at a bid price of $339 a troy ounce, compared with late Wednesday's $339.30. At mid-morning the city's five major bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $339.40.

In Zurich, the bid price was $339, unchanged from late Wednesday.

Earlier, in Hong Kong, gold fell 9 cents to close at a bid $339.34.

Silver was quoted in London today at a bid price of $4.91 a troy ounce, down from Wednesday's $4.94.

Oil prices sink to $14 a barrel on world markets

Falling gasoline demand responsible for falling prices

By ROZ LISTON
United Press International

Oil prices sank to the $14-a-barrel level on world markets Wednesday amid signs the recent surge in U.S. gasoline demand may be abating.

Strong gasoline demand and tight supplies in the United States, the largest oil-consuming nation, had propelled oil prices from an eight-year low of $9.75 on April 1 to $17.17 a barrel on the New York Mercantile Exchange Monday.

But prices retreated sharply Tuesday as traders braced for the American Petroleum Institute's latest weekly report, which showed U.S. gasoline inventories had risen for the second week in a row after steadily shrinking for more than two months.

"Gasoline pulled up crude oil prices, and gasoline will bring them back down again," one trader said.

On the Merc, West Texas intermediate, the benchmark domestic crude for July delivery, skidded by 69 cents to $14.82 a barrel. Unleaded gasoline for immediate delivery tumbled by 1.90 cents to 51.60 cents a gallon, and leaded gasoline plummeted by 2.08 cents to 51.43 cents.

Analysts noted that as the key domestic crude reached the $15-a-barrel mark and then the $16 mark earlier this month, each milestone was followed by bouts of selling as traders cashed in on profits before the market again forged ahead.

"We should not lose sight of the fact that we've had a significant improvement from slightly below $10 a barrel to the $17 level," said Sanford Margoshes, an analyst at Shearson Lehman Brothers Inc. in New York. "There could be a little further weakness on profit taking, but we're coming to an area of support around $14 a barrel."

On the European spot market, Britain's North Sea Brent crude dropped by 95 cents to $14.30 a barrel. Dubai light, a key Arab crude from OPEC's United Arab Emirates, slipped 55 cents to $12 a barrel.

Some analysts contended that Tuesday's rebound to the $17 range on the Merc could not be sustained in face of OPEC's ongoing pricing war against outside producers that has slashed world oil prices from an average of $28 a barrel in December.

But other energy specialists and some oil industry traders believe oil prices could head higher after a temporary retreat if the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries can reach a global accord on production restraints with non-OPEC producers.

"I detect a number of elements that suggest chances are better than the consensus thinks for price recovery," Margoshes said.

He cited a change in policy by Norway's new government, which has expressed some willingness to cooperate with OPEC and the active role influential Saudi Arabian Oil Minister Sheikh Ahmed Zaki Yamani has taken in trying to persuade outside producers to curb their output.

Saudi Arabia, OPEC's largest producer, has led the cartel's campaign to regain what it calls its "fair share" of the oil market from outside producers.

Five OPEC oil ministers who have visited independent producers in recent weeks are scheduled to meet Friday in Taif, Saudi Arabia, to report on their quest to win voluntary production cuts from non-members.

AT&T wants to reduce rates further

WASHINGTON (AP) — American Telephone & Telegraph Co., in response to government prodding, wants to pass on to consumers an additional $450 million in savings.

In papers AT&T said it would file at the Federal Communications Commission today, the company will ask to increase its previously announced rate cut to $2 billion.

AT&T said this would mean a $1.02 drop in an average residential customer's $10 monthly bill for out-of-state calls.

The new rates will be effective June 1, unless the FCC rejects the plan.

When it examined AT&T's April 24 proposal, the commission's staff said the company did not properly compute the amount of extra calling that would occur in reaction to the lower prices.

AT&T was asked by the commission to recalculate the reductions.

The company said on Wednesday the combined rate reduction would amount to 11.8 percent.

The biggest cuts — 13.8 percent — would come during day and evening hours. AT&T said about two-thirds of all long-distance calls from home phones are made during those hours.

A consumer activist who watches telephone issues said the revised rate structure is better for residential customers than the April 24 plan.

Gene Kimmelman, legislative director of the Consumer Federation of America, said he calculates that businesses will benefit more than individuals from the reduction because the biggest cuts are in day and evening hours, when businesses make a higher proportion of their calls.

Occidental plans to sell facilities

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — Occidental Petroleum Corp. said Wednesday it will sell the oil and gas exploration facilities of its recently acquired MidCon Corp. subsidiary to financier Marvin Davis and Apache Petroleum Co. for $500 million.

In addition, Occidental said it will purchase the chemical division of Dallas-based Diamond Shamrock Corp. for $800 million.

Speaking at the company's annual meeting, chairman and chief executive Armand Hammer also said the outlook "isn't good" for recovering Occidental's $120 million investment in Libya.

Hammer said it is unlikely that the company will be able to find a buyer for those holdings and that they may be written off as losses later this year.

Hammer said an agreement in principle was reached Wednesday with Davis Oil Co. and Apache Petroleum, both of which are based in Denver, to sell MidCon's oil and gas exploration properties for $500 million in cash.

The MidCon properties have the equivalent of about 100 million barrels of oil, said Occidental president and chief operating officer Ray Irani.

Before announcing that agreement, Hammer made clear in his speech to shareholders that Occidental's primary interest in MidCon was the company's natural gas pipeline system — the biggest and lowest-cost pipeline network in the United States.

The $3 billion MidCon acquisition gave Occidental access to a pipeline system to move the large natural gas supplies of another subsidiary, Tulsa, Okla.-based Cities Service Co.

Consumer price index falls for third consecutive month

New York Times News Service

WASHINGTON — The Consumer Price Index, continuing to reflect the collapse in oil prices, fell 0.3 percent in April, the Labor Department reported Wednesday.

This was the third consecutive monthly decline, the first time this has happened since 1954. The last three months, moreover, have shown the biggest drop in prices at the retail level for such a period since late 1948 and early 1949.

Although the benefits of lower oil prices are expected to continue to work through the economy and be reflected in the overall price level, most analysts agreed that because oil prices have firmed for now, April's report was almost certain to be the last to show absolute declines.

The general expectation is for a return to inflation of 4 percent or more for the rest of this year as the economy expands at a moderate rate and the effects of the declining dollar and a surging money supply are no longer masked by falling prices for energy.

"We're dealing with inflation in the 4-5 percent range," said Marc W. Wanshel, a senior economist at the Crocker National Bank.

Excluding energy, the Consumer Price Index for All Urban Consumers rose in April by 0.3 percent. The service sector of the index climbed 0.6 percent.

The Labor Department also reported Wednesday that personal income rose 1.2 percent in April, while personal spending rose 0.3 percent.

Real average weekly earnings rose 0.4 percent in April as average earnings were unchanged while the Consumer Price Index fell. In March, the rise in real earnings was twice as great, the result of a 0.2 percent gain in earnings and a 0.6 percent drop in the Consumer Price Index.

Wednesday's report on consumer prices followed a 0.6 percent decline in the Producer Price Index for April and Tuesday's Commerce Department report that the nation's gross national product expanded at a 3.7 percent rate in the first quarter.

Although the GNP was revised upward from the 3.2 percent estimated earlier, analysts said the economy was not as strong as it appeared because of an unwanted inventory buildup.

James L. Cochrane of Texas Commerce Bank said Wednesday that the latest batch of data "continues to suggest enough underlying sluggishness that the Federal Reserve still has room" for additional monetary ease without adding significantly to the risk of a worrisome inflation rate.

Over the last three months, the Consumer Price Index has fallen at an annual rate of 4.3 percent; the increase for the calendar year 1985 was 3.8 percent.

Last month the decline in energy prices showed up most dramatically once again in the transportation sector, but it was also evident in housing.

The transportation component tumbled 2.5 percent, somewhat less than March's 2.8 percent fall but substantially more than the 1.4 percent drop recorded in February. Gasoline prices led the way, falling 11.3 percent and bringing the three-month decline to 26.5 percent. Gasoline prices last month were the lowest since mid-1979 and were 34.9 percent below their March 1981 peak.

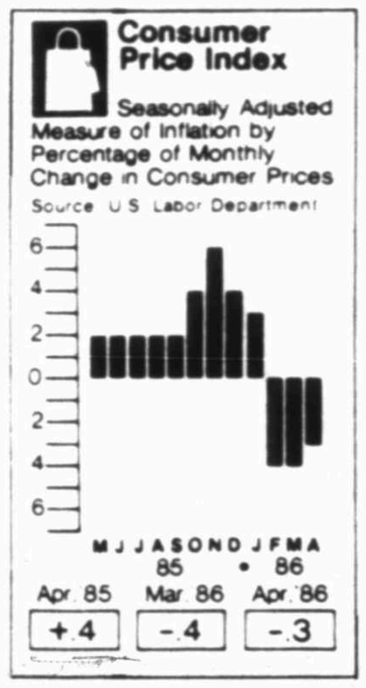
Used-car prices fell for the third consecutive month, to a level 5.6 percent below that of April 1985. Automobile finance charges also fell sharply.

However, prices of new cars rose 0.6 percent, partly reflecting the higher prices of imports, the department said. The declining dollar has prompted Japanese and other foreign producers to raise prices and this, in turn, has allowed American auto makers to follow suit.

The cost of car insurance rose another 0.8 percent, to a level 13.5 percent above the level a year earlier. Public transportation also climbed, reversing a 0.2 percent decline in March.

The housing index rose 0.3 percent last month, slightly faster than in March, as a rise of nearly 1 percent in the cost of shelter more than offset declines in the two other major housing groups — fuel and utilities and household furnishings and operations.

Heating oil prices fell another 4.6 percent while charges for electricity and natural gas fell. The cost of local telephone service, however, jumped 1.8 percent.



AT&T names new chief executive

Los Angeles Times —
Washington Post News Service

NEW YORK — AT&T on Wednesday formalized what has been predicted for months: James E. Olson, the 60-year-old AT&T president who worked his way up from cleaning manholes 43 years ago, will succeed Charles L. Brown as chief executive.

Olson assumes the title — and the responsibility for steering AT&T through the rest of its painful transition from regulated telephone company to sophisticated high-technology business — on June 1, three months before Brown, 64, takes mandatory retirement. On Sept. 1, he will also assume the chairman's job from Brown.

At a press conference announcing the top management change, Olson quickly set what AT&T watchers expect to be the tone of the Olson years: AT&T, he said repeatedly, promises to be "a company that's easy to do business with." Customers, he said, "want a single point of interface" with a company regardless of whether they're buying a computer or signing up for long-distance service.

Central to that strategy is a consolidation, also announced Wednesday, of AT&T's long-distance telephone operations with its information systems business. Both now will be overseen by Randall L. Tobias, 44, who for 15 months has served as chief executive of AT&T Communications, the company's long-distance unit and the most successful of the communications giant's businesses.

The reorganization, Olson said, is designed not as a cost-cutting measure but as a way to better serve customers instead of just sell products. Although he could not be pinned down on whether the combination of these two businesses will result in further layoffs, he did say AT&T expects "no major downsizing" through this move because the company will "need the unique skills" of both sales forces to make this work.

Responding to repeated questions — both from reporters and securities analysts later in the day — about the company's computer business, which has been slower to grow than most AT&T watchers expected and has been dragging down AT&T's traditional businesses, Olson conceded that the company has "not worked miracles." But he said that computers remain a "crucial part of AT&T's strategy" and that in fact "we have come far in a very short period of time."

BUSINESS BRIEFS

Amoco Corp. to lay off 400 this year

CHICAGO — Amoco Corp. plans to cut about 400 people from the work force in its staff departments by the end of the year, the company has announced.

Each department will develop its own timetable for staff reductions, but the cuts, which will not be across the board, will be made between now and Dec. 31, the nation's fifth-largest oil company said Tuesday in a news release.

R. Wayne Anderson, Amoco's vice president of employee relations said that voluntary early retirements would be offered to some eligible employees, but noted not all cuts would be voluntary.

Amoco Corp. staff departments employed 5,700 people as of March 31, the majority in Chicago.

Earlier, Amoco's exploration and production subsidiary announced a work-force reduction program affecting about 1,500 employees.

Many of the nation's energy companies have announced staff and spending cutbacks for this year because of the continuing weakness in oil prices.

Lorimar agrees to $1.85 billion deal for stations

HOLLYWOOD — Lorimar-Telepictures confirmed that, with a group of investors, it has agreed to pay $1.85 billion for six TV stations owned by Storer Communications plus a station owned by Wometco Broadcasting.

The deal will catapult the Los Angeles-based entertainment company to the ranks of the nation's largest owners of TV stations, bringing its total to 12 — the maximum permitted under Federal Communications Commission rules. Its stations will reach about 10.9 percent of the national TV audience. The purchase requires FCC approval.

Five of the stations being acquired are CBS affiliates: WJBK-TV in Detroit, WJW-TV in Cleveland, WAGA-TV in Atlanta, WITI-TV in Milwaukee and WTVJ-TV in Miami. Some entertainment industry officials speculated that ownership of so many CBS affiliates may give Lorimar-Telepictures leverage with that network in selling its programs.

Lorimar-Telepictures owns KMID, channel 2 in Midland.

EXPLORATION HIGHLIGHTS

Pecos field well flows 631 barrels

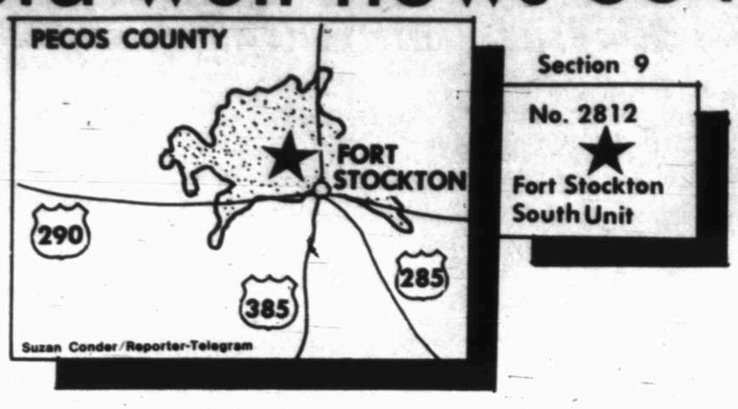
From Staff Reports

TEXACO, INC., Midland, has completed another prolific Yates producer in the Fort Stockton field of Pecos County.

The operator potentialed the No. 2812 Fort Stockton South Unit to flow 631 barrels of 29.5 gravity crude, 290 Mcfd and 139 barrels of water on a 48/64 inch choke with a flowing tubing pressure of 130 psi. Production is from perforations 2,985 to 3,122 ft., which had been acidized with 3,500 gallons of 15 percent NeFe acid and fractured with 30,000 gallons of gel, 42,000 lbs. 20/40 sand and 9,000 lbs. 12/20 sand. Gas-oil ratio is 460:1.

Drilled to a total depth of 3,135 ft., where 5 1/2 inch casing was set, the well was plugged back to 3,125 ft.

The well topped the Yates at 2,985 ft. on ground elevation of 2,914 ft. Pay was topped at 2,985 ft.



Location is 10,604 ft. from north and 2,704 ft. from west lines of Section 9, Block 146, T&STL survey, four miles northwest of Fort Stockton.

Lea discovery tests to flow 14 barrels oil

A reentry in Lea County, New Mexico has netted a modest Mississippian discovery west of the Emerald field.

MANZANO OIL CORP. reentered the former Superior Oil Co. No. 1 State "12-17" and potentialed it to flow 14 barrels of 44.5 gravity crude, 337 Mcfd and no water on a two inch choke with a flowing tubing pressure of 2,375 psi. The well is flowing from perforations 13,024 to 13,044 ft., which had been acidized with 2,000 gallons of 15 percent NeFe acid.

The well was cleaned out to 13,103 ft., where 5 1/2 inch casing was set, and plugged back to 13,060 ft. The original depth was 13,090 ft.

On ground elevation of 3,936 ft., formation tops include the Dockum Granite at 458 ft., Dewey Hole at 1,630, Rustler at 1,971, Yates at 3,234, Queen at 4,212, San Andres at 4,916, Glorieta at 6,412, Tubb at 7,898, Abo at 8,698, Wolfcamp at 10,116, Pennsylvanian at 11,578, Strawn at 12,004, Atoka at 12,164, Morrow at 12,568, and the Mississippian at 13,023 ft. Pay was topped at 13,024 ft.

Location is 660 ft. from north and 1,980 ft. from west lines of Section 12, T17s, R35e.

Big Spring firm tests 288 barrel producer

The Howard-Glasscock field of Howard County gained a strong Wolfcamp producer as A.K. GUTHRIE OPERATING CO., Big Spring, completed the No. 2 Red Draw.

On potential test, the well flowed 288 barrels of 38 gravity crude and 317 Mcfd on a 12/64 inch choke with a flowing tubing pressure of 600 psi. The well is flowing from perforations 7,361 to 7,389 ft., which had been acidized with 3,000 gallons of acid. Gas-oil ratio is 1,102:1.

Guthrie drilled the well to a total depth of 8,000 ft., where 5 1/2 inch casing was set, and plugged it back to 7,490 ft.

The well topped the San Andres at 1,960 ft., and the Wolfcamp at 7,300 ft. on ground elevation of 2,403 ft. Pay was topped at 7,361 ft.

Location is 467 ft. from east and 1,667 ft. from south lines of Section 96, Block 29, W&NW survey, six miles west of Forsan.

Andrews field gains 183 barrel producer

AMOCO PRODUCTION CO., Andrews, continues development drilling in Andrews County, recently completed a Wolfcamp producer in the county's Parker field.

The No. 35 J.E. Parker "D" was tested to flow 183 barrels of 40 gravity crude, 348 Mcfd and one barrel of water on a 17/64 inch choke with a flowing tubing pressure of 125 psi. Production is from perforations 8,866 to 8,872 ft., which had been acidized with 2,000 gallons of 15 percent NeFe acid. Gas-oil ratio is 1,902:1.

Drilled to a total depth of 9,300 ft., the well was plugged back to 8,955 ft. with 5 1/2 inch casing set at 9,299 ft.

Formation tops, on ground elevation of 3,179.8 ft., include the San Andres at 4,570 ft., Wolfcamp at 8,600, Pennsylvanian at 8,940, and the Canyon at 9,190 ft. Pay was topped at 8,866 ft.

Location is 1,984 ft. from north and 460 ft. from east lines of Section 30, Block A-44, PSL survey, four miles southwest of Andrews.

Shanley makes acquisition

DALLAS (SWN) — Shanley Oil Co. announced that it had acquired substantial interests in two companies engaged in the operation of convenience stores and wholesale and retail sales of gasoline. The company acquired a two-thirds interest in Calhoun Distributing Co. of Gainesville, Texas and a half interest in Quick Fill of North Texas, Inc. which operates in the Sherman-Dennison area.

The company's chairman, Neal G. McCabe, said, "These acquisitions point toward continual positive growth in our convenience store operations and the expansion outside of the Dallas metropolitan area. In view of the changing nature of our business, we will ask our shareholders, at our upcoming annual meeting, to change the name of our company from Shanley Oil Co. to Shanley Corp."

Shanley said that, according to unaudited financial statements provided by the acquired companies, Calhoun had annualized revenues of $11.8 million during 1985 and Quick Fill of North Texas had $10.6 million in revenues during the same period. The company also stated that, during 1985, Calhoun earned $450,000 and Quick Fill of North Texas earned $150,000.

In addition, Shanley announced that it had incurred a loss of $141,486 ($.01 per share) for the year ended Dec. 31, 1985. This was a net improvement of $1,655,017 from a loss of $1,796,503 ($.17 per share) as of Dec. 31, 1984.

OIL & GAS DIGEST

API reports increase in demand for motor oil

WASHINGTON — Demand for motor gasoline in the U.S. continued its upward climb during April, says the American Petroleum Institute.

The API's Monthyly Statistical Report showed that deliveries of motor gasoline from primary storage totalled 7,127,000 barrels per day, an increase of 2.8 percent over last April. The report noted this was "a rate of increase well below March's 6 percent but still showing a gain compared to the 1.8 percent growth rate for the last half of 1985."

Additions to gas reserves total 78 percent

WASHINGTON — The American Gas Association (AGA) reports that additions to domestic natural gas reserves in 1985 (exclusive of the Alaskan North Slope) totaled 78 percent of production for the top 30 natural gas reserve holding companies. This compares to an 87 percent replacement rate in 1984 and 80 percent in 1983 for these companies.

Based on the reserve additions reported in 1985 by the top 30 companies, the AGA estimate for U.S. natural gas reserve additions for the entire industry in 1985 is between 12.3 and 13.5 trillion cubic feet, with production in '85 totaling 16.4 Tcf. This represents a replacement rate of between 75 and 82 percent.

Anglo Energy files reorganization plan

NEW YORK — Anglo Energy Limited has filed in the Southern District Bankruptcy Court a consensual plan of reorganization that would enable it to emerge from its Chapter 11 bankruptcy proceedings later this year. The new plan has been approved by the official committees representing the compnay's senior creditors, subordinated debenture holders, and equity security holders.

Energas reports income, declares dividend

DALLAS — The Energas Co. has declared a quarterly dividend of 25 cents per share payable June 18, to shareholders of record on May 28, 1986.

For the second quarter ended March 31, Energas reported net income of $4.1 million, or $1.10 per share, on operating revenues of $80.1 million. This compares with net income of $3.8 million, or $1.02 per share, on operating revenues of $94.2 million, during the same period of 1985.

IPAA critical of DOE policy for selling crude

WASHINGTON — The president of the Independent Petroleum Association of America criticized the Department of Energy's policy of selling crude oil from the Elk Hills Naval Petroleum Reserve in California at prices well below market levels, and for inefficient production practices.

"To sell Elk Hills production at below the market rate, while paying $12.60 for Mexican crude oil to fill the Strategic Petroleum Reserve is a classic case of government policies working at cross purposes," Lloyd N. Unsell, president of IPAA, stated in a letter to Energy Secretary John Herrington.

Conoco well indicates offshore pay discovery

HOUSTON — Tests by Conoco of an exploratory well in the Gulf of Mexico indicate a new pay discovery as well as an extension to reservoirs discovered last year on Green Canyon Block 228.

The Block 228 well No. 2 flowed at a combined maximum rate of 1,160 barrels of 35 to 38 degree gravity crude oil and 3.1 million cubic feet of natural gas per day. The tests were made through an 8/64 to 16/64 inch choke.

MidCon plans new gas market in Wisconsin

LOMBARD, ILL. — MidCon Corp., a subsidiary of Occidental Petroleum Corp., says it has filed plans to market and transport natural gas to new markets in Wisconsin.

Three MidCon units, including a new interstate pipeline, would be involved in a ten year agreement with Wisconsin Natural Gas Co., Racine, for the sale on an interruptible basis of up to 90 million cubic feet of natural gas daily.

Main Pass yields discovery for Shamrock

DALLAS — Diamond Shamrock Exploration Co. has completed a natural gas discovery on an offshore Louisiana state lease.

The Main Pass Block 31 No. 1 well flowed 5.8 million cubic feet of gas and 281 barrels of 42 degree gravity condensate per day during production testing on a 15/64 inch choke with 5,658 pounds per square inch of flowing tubing pressure. Drilled to a total depth of 14,915 feet, the well was perforated for testing of a Miocene sand between 11,603 feet and 11,611 and 11,626 and 11,630 ft.

Endevco lists Texas completions

DALLAS (SWN) — Endevco, Inc. announced that the following Texas wells have been completed during 1986 as successful wells through its wholly-owned subsidiary, Endevco Producing Co.:

■ The Chambers Exploration, Inc. No. 1 J.W. Key, located 4.6 miles southwest of Garrison, Nacogdoches County, as a Rodessa gas well. The well tested 3710 Mcfd and 14.4 barrels of condensate on a 12/64-inch choke. Endevco owns a 12.5 percent working interest in this well. The gas is being sold to Endevco's subsidiary, Endevco Natural Gas Co., through Endevco's Nacogdoches pipeline system.

■ The TXO Producing Corp. No. 1 Hammett, located 10 miles northeast of Nacogdoches, Nacogdoches County, was completed as a Travis Peak gas well. The well flowed 232 Mcfd on a 6/64-inch choke. Endevco owns a 12.5 percent working interest in the well. The well is currently shut-in awaiting a pipeline connection.

■ The Fair Oil Co. No. 1 Bagby Heirs, located 3.2 miles northeast of Quintman, Wood County, was completed as a new field Paluxy discovery. The well flowed 171 bopd, and 5 Mcfd on a 6/64-inch choke. Oil gravity was 32.9. Endevco owns a 12.5 percent working interest in this well.

■ The Roseland Oil & Gas, Inc. No. 1 Rust, located eight miles north of Palestine, Anderson County, was completed as a gas well from the Pettet Formation. The well was tested on a 10/64-inch choke, flowing 441 Mcfd. The well is currently shut-in awaiting stimulation by fracturing after a pipeline connection is arranged. Endevco owns a 12.5 percent working interest in this well.

■ The Long Trusts No. 1 Mack Laird, located seven miles northwest of Liberty City, Smith County, was completed from the Pettet Formation as a pumping oil well. The well produced 76 bopd, 95 Mcfd and no water during test periods. Endevco owns a 12.5 percent working interest in this well.

TO ALL INTERESTED PERSONS AND PARTIES:

You are hereby notified of the opportunity for written public comment concerning the Special Permit Application No. S-9679 by Permian Tank & Mfg., Inc. to construct a fiberglass tank & vessel manufacturing plant in Midland County, Texas. The proposed location is from Midland, west on Highway 80, 2 miles past Loop 250 overpass, on north service road. This facility proposes to emit the following air contaminants: particulate matter including but not limited to antimony oxide and silica and volatile organic compounds including but not limited to styrene and acetone. Before a permit can be issued for this facility, all emission sources must demonstrate compliance with all Rules and Regulations of the Texas Air Control Board and all applicable Federal Regulations. This includes the application of "best available control technology" to each emission source and compliance with all ambient air quality standards.

A copy of all materials submitted by the applicant is available for public inspection at the Texas Air Control Board at 1901 East 37th Street, Suite 101, Odessa, Texas 79762 telephone (915) 367-3871 or 367-3872, and at the Texas Air Control Board, 6330 Highway 290 East, Austin, Texas 78723, telephone (512) 451-5711. All interested persons may inspect these materials and submit written comments to the Executive Director of the Texas Air Control Board. All comments received in writing and postmarked by June 7, 1986 shall be considered by the Board in making its decision on the application. All comments will be made available for public inspection at the Texas Air Control Board office in Austin.

Friday, May 23, 1986

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Making a dramatic break with the past will change your luck for the better. Free yourself from someone who has hampered your efforts to shine. A new job offer could be your ticket to lasting financial security. As your confidence grows, so do your chances for success. Show more understanding when dealing with those closest to your heart. An impatient attitude will only widen a breach between you and a young relative.

CELEBRITY BIRTHDATES: "Dynasty" star Joan Collins, Serge Dupire of "Another World," singer Rosemary Clooney, U.S. Secretary of the Interior Donald Hodel, entertainer Scatman Crothers, bandleader Artie Shaw.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Don't let worry take the fun out of the approaching weekend. Discuss a financial matter with mate and together you will find a solution. Romance turns a corner. Spend time near the water.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You are very popular now and in great demand at social events. A sense of humor takes you far with members of the opposite sex. Recent difficulties fade away. Travel proves energizing.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Tension disappears when you make that overdue phone call. Resolve any disagreements early in the day. Make the necessary financial arrangements to prevent getting caught short while traveling.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A long-distance phone call stirs up new, romantic feelings. A recent college graduate gets a happy surprise. You are a real pleasure to be with when you relax. Take pride in your choices.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Stay calm if faced with an unexpected disturbance. Others look to you for guidance. Lead them to the right decision. A trip to the sea or mountains will boost your spirits.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Making minor changes in your weekend plans could bring you fresh financial gains. Avail yourself of a professional's services. Give serious thought to buying a new home or car. Do nothing on impulse.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A thrilling romance affects almost everything you do this weekend. Use your head when it comes to making a family decision. You profit enormously from observing or listening to a child.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Self-employment opportunities could grow out of an investigation you make today. A hobby could produce financial profits as well as fun. Travel sets the stage for a new romance or job.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Being too straightforward with family members could cause complications. Keep thoughts to yourself for now. Spending sprees could lead to a real financial crunch.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Good eating habits are linked to good health. Stop indulging in junk food. Friends may be more supportive than family members now. Turn to an old pal for help in an emergency.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Handle someone who has an explosive temperament with kid gloves. A sports event could divide the family. Plan recreational activities everyone will enjoy.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Help a close friend by encouraging him to open up to someone. An authority figure is willing to bend on a financial matter if you lay all your cards on the table.

At rubber bridge, if you are vulnerable and the opponents are not, you should be happy to accept an opposing sacrifice bid that will cost at least 300 points if you can't be certain of your contract at the next level. At duplicate, even 500 is not enough if you can make a game, so it is often right to bid one more rather than accept the sacrifice, even if you can't be sure of fulfilling your contract.

This hand is from the final session of the Open Pairs event at the recent Spring North American Championships, held in Portland, Ore. Sitting North-South were Edith Rosenkranz of Mexico City and Jeff Meckstroth of Columbus, Ohio. Meckstroth's two-spade jump overcall was of the intermediate variety, showing a good suit and the equivalent of a sound opening bid. East's decision to bid five clubs did nothing other than steer his partner to an inferior opening lead after Meckstroth elected to compete rather than double.

Declarer won the jack of clubs opening lead with the ace and led the queen, prepared to discard if East did not cover. When the king came up, Meckstroth trumped, noting West's eight. He drew trumps in three rounds, West discarding a diamond on the third trump.

Since East was likely to have 10 cards in the two suits he bid and he had already shown up with three spades, declarer elected to play him for no diamonds at all. At trick six, therefore, he led the four of diamonds and, when West followed with the three, he called for dummy's five, which won! The seven of clubs was covered by the ten and ruffed, and a heart went away on the six of clubs. Meckstroth lost only one heart for almost all the matchpoints.

Letterman pays $40 fine

Letterman

NEW CANAAN, Conn. (AP) — Television talk show host David Letterman has paid a $40 fine for violating a state law that forbids the use of radar detectors, an NBC spokesman said.

Letterman was not speeding when he was stopped May 12, police said.

Letterman, who lives in New Canaan, is host of "Late Night with David Letterman." NBC spokesman Peter Spivey in New York said Wednesday that Letterman paid the fine sometime last week.

Letterman had the option to pay by mail or appear in state Superior Court in Norwalk to answer the charge.

Onassis

NEW YORK (AP) — Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis, living a busy but private life as a book editor, is independent for the first time in her life and loves it, a published report says.

Mrs. Onassis, who works for Doubleday & Co. in Manhattan three days a week, spends her weekends in the New Jersey hunt country or on Martha's Vineyard in Massachusetts.

Cosmopolitan magazine, in its June issue, quotes Jane Lee, a member of the Essex Fox Hounds Hunt Club, as saying that Mrs. Onassis told her last year "that for the first time her in life she felt like a free woman."

Ms. Lee recalled Mrs. Onassis saying, "There's no one, but absolutely no one, to tell me what to do or not to do."

NEEDHAM, Mass. (AP) — Television talk show host Phil Donahue and Soviet commentator Vladimir Pozner announced plans for a televised "citizens' summit," linking 200 Boston-area women next month with 200 women in Leningrad.

Pozner said Wednesday the impact of "Citizens' Summit II: Women To Women" will go far beyond the 400 women participants on June 22.

"It's the power of that discussion being watched by, in the Soviet Union, virtually the entire nation...relating to the other side like human beings," he told a news conference.

Pozner and Donahue held a similar question-and-answer show last December that linked an audience in Seattle with one in Leningrad.

Tiegs

BRIDGEPORT, Conn. (AP) — A man says say he is being "bullied and pushed" to sell his Westport house to model Cheryl Tiegs for $2.8 million.

Tiegs filed a lawsuit May 15 in U.S. District Court in Bridgeport, contending that Wayne and Lynne Rogers reneged on an agreement to sell her the house.

But Wayne Rogers denied there was any agreement, and said he thinks the house is worth $3 million.

"She is offering us absolutely less than it's worth. That's why she is pressing it," Rogers said. "My wife and I feel that we are being bullied and pushed to sell our house."

Tiegs' attorney, Fredric H. Weisberg, declined to comment on the case Wednesday.

Evinrude

STUART, Fla. (AP) — Ralph Evinrude, who once headed the firm that developed the famed outboard motor used by millions of pleasure-boaters and fishermen, died Wednesday. He was 78.

He was the son of Ole Evinrude, credited with building the first outboard motor in 1907, and who launched a company in Milwaukee as Evinrude Motors in 1909. Ralph Evinrude joined the company as testing manager in 1927, became export sales manager in 1930, production manager in 1932, and company president in 1934. He later served as president, director and chairman of the board, stepping down as chairman of Outboard Marine Corp. in 1982. The Outboard Marine Corp. was formed from Outboard Motors Corp.'s consolidation with Johnson Motor Co.

Wood

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — Robert D. Wood, former president of the CBS television network, died Tuesday of a heart attack. He was 61.

Wood in 1949 joined KNX, the CBS radio station in Los Angeles. From 1951-55, he held sales positions with KNXT-TV, now KCBS-TV, the CBS-owned television station in Los Angeles, and with CBS Television Sales in New York.

In 1955, Wood was named general sales manager of KNXT and became vice president and general manager in 1960. In 1966, he was named executive vice president of the CBS Television Stations Division. Wood was promoted to president of the division in 1967 and served as president of the network from 1969 to 1976. He was the executive who fired the Smothers Brothers from their one-hour show in 1969, replacing them with "Hee Haw." Wood resigned in 1976 to enter independent production with his own company, Nephi Productions.

TORPOINT, England (AP) — Navy chefs using an oar-sized spoon stirred the royal wedding cake for Prince Andrew and Sarah Ferguson, but kept the recipe secret except to say it would be liberally laced with rum, brandy and port.

"We will be putting plenty of tender loving care into the preparation of the cake," Chief Petty Officer Trevor Spicer, head of the three-member team preparing the confection for the July 23 wedding, said Wednesday.

The cake, whose ingredients cost $225, will be completed about a week before the wedding and taken by road to Buckingham Palace. Strict security will surround its production.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Stephen H. Dart, an actor and Democratic candidate for Congress, plans to arrest Republican stalwart and actor Charlton Heston in front of the nation tonight.

The arrest will be on the season finale of ABC-TV's "The Colbys," in which Dart, appearing as a cop, arrests Jason Colby, played by Heston in the spinoff of "Dynasty."

"I had to do what any good Democrat would do," said Dart, who appears regularly as an attorney in television's "Divorce Court."

Tapioca comes from tropical plant

By SONJA HEINZE

Q. At a dinner party we had some tapioca pudding for dessert, and someone asked what tapioca is and nobody knew. I would like to know where it comes from and how it's made. Frank Tokaraz, Burbank, Ill.

A. Tapioca, also known as manioc, comes from the root of the bitter casava plant, which is grown in the tropics. The word tapioca comes from the language of the Tupi people of Brazil, and roughly translated means "to squeeze the heart out of the juice."

The root is ground and then cooked to dissipate the bitter prussic acid it contains, then put through a sieve, resulting in white tapioca pellets. Another method is to shake the cooked tapioca onto a very hot plate, where the tapioca gels and dries out into blobs. This is called flake tapioca. It may also be pulverized and sold as flour.

When cooked, the little grains swell up into a gelatinous mass, and according to the "World Encyclopedia of Food" by L. Patrick Coyle, is nutritious and easily digestible. Carbohydrate content is 85 percent, water 10 to 12 percent, and there are small amounts of protein, minerals, salts and fat. Tapioca reputedly aids in the digestion of milk.

For readers who would like to try it, here is a recipe for tapioca pudding suggested by John Mariani in the "Dictionary of American Food and Drink": Combine in a double boiler ½ cup quick tapioca and 1 pint milk and stir over heat until tapioca is clear. Beat in 1 egg yolk, ⅛ teaspoon salt, 1 teaspoon vanilla extract, and cup sugar. Stir until thickened, remove from heat, fold in stiffly beaten egg white, and chill. Brown the top under a broiler just before serving.

Q. I recently returned from a trip to Germany. I was allowed to bring back liqueur and chocolate, but not my favorite chocolate-covered liqueur candy. The man at customs could not give me an explanation of why this should be. Margot Singer, Colorado Springs, Colo.

A. Donald Gilman, director of the Office of Inspection and Control of the U.S. Customs Service, explains that chocolate-covered liqueur candy, if it contains five percent or more alcohol by volume, is prohibited from entering the U.S. by the Food, Drug and Cosmetic Act of 1938. The citation for that prohibition is Title 21, U.S. Code, Section 381.

Under the Food, Drug and Cosmetic Act, candy having more than five percent alcohol by volume is considered as "adulterated food."

Q. My mother used to soak a dry yellow round bean, about as large as a dime, and kept changing the water. They were called "lupine." When the processing was complete, we would squeeze the beans out of their rather thick skins and eat them. I would like to learn more about the lupine. Are they nutritious? Are there other ways to prepare them? Vince DiRenzo, Vineland, N.J.

A. This yellow bean is native to the Mediterranean area and has been around since ancient times, and although it has good food value, lupine beans are not considered as important human food today. Patrick Coyle, in the "World Encyclopedia of Food," tells us that in Italy lupines are occasionally roasted as a snack as one would eat roasted peanuts or pumpkin seeds. The beans must first be soaked in water for three hours before cooking to free them from a bitter taste.

"In Roman times," says Coyle, "the lupine was considered food fit for the poor and during public festivals was cooked in large batches and distributed free. Since then three species — the blue, yellow and white, named for the color of their blossoms — have been grown as rotation crops and green manure. The nitrogen nodules in the roots improve the soil." A sweet variety of this bean, developed in this century, is used as animal fodder.

In the "Herbal Encyclopedia," author Donald Law states that a paste made from the seeds can be applied to skin blemishes to clear them up, and powder from the crushed seeds was often taken in the old days to drive worms out of humans and cattle.

Readers who are familiar with lupine beans and have other suggestions for preparing them please share your knowledge with us.

Bagels frozen

By LINDA ANDERSON

According to Webster's New World Dictionary, a bagel is: "a hard bread-roll made of yeast dough twisted into a small doughnutlike shape, cooked in simmering water, then baked." To me, bagels seem to be a cross between a sugarless donut and a hamburger bun, but are a hot item at our house, especially with the second-oldest teen-ager.

She loves bagels with cream cheese and would undoubtedly love them with lox, too, given the chance, so taste-testing frozen bagels was right up her alley (although she prefers fresh, deli bagels — when in the wilds of West Texas you have to take what you can get).

Lender's Bagels have been available in the freezers of local supermarkets for years, but Sara Lee also has a line of frozen bagels, called Bagel Time. We compared both brands for taste, price and advertising accuracy, with most of the tasting being done by the bagel-loving teen. Both brands are available in flavors, but for our comparison we chose plain bagels.

Sara Lee's Bagel Time comes in 12-ounce packages of four bagels each. Label advertising claims the product is "four authentic bagels (pre-sliced)," and that "Our bakers have combined their years of experience and Sara Lee's heritage of premium quality to create a bagel good enough to be called 'Sara Lee.' " Further claims stress they are made "the authentic way with extra care so all your bagel moments can be special."

I don't know about you, but I think it's sweet for the company to care so much about my "bagel moments."

Lender's Bagels come in 12-ounce packages containing six bagels each. According to information from the company, Lender's bagels are a "tradition since 1927." It further states that bagels in general are "America's hottest selling baked good" and are "great with everyone's favorite spread from caviar for the jet set to peanut butter for the casual crowd."

Lender's claims to be the world's largest bagel bakery, the nation's first frozen bagel manufacturer and the first brand of bagels sold nationwide.

The company says its bagels are "the only product in the bakery category that is boiled in water before it is baked ... shaped, not stamped out ... hearth-baked directly in the oven without the use of a pan ... blast frozen within one hour of their production" and "all natural" (All natural? Maybe they grow on a bagel bush?). "They contain no preservatives, no artificial colors or flavors."

A four-bagel package of Sara Lee cost 99 cents, and a six-bagel package of Lender's cost 89 cents. (Prices listed are from a local supermarket. Prices at other locations may vary.)

In the crucial taste-test, the tasters agreed with the family's bagel expert in deciding that both brands tasted the same. Both were good frozen bagels, but were virtually identical in taste. The Sara Lee's were slightly bigger, but you get more bagels for less money with Lender's.

We plan to taste some of the other flavors to determine our favorites, but we definitely plan to buy bagels more often. After all, it's not usually that easy to please a teen-ager for less than $1.

Eating habits changing for better, worse

By MARIAN FARR

More Americans are eating "light and lean," but they're also consuming record amounts of premium high-calorie, high-fat foods. Various studies show that as many as 75 percent of Americans may have changed their eating habits in some way as a result of diet or health concerns.

Americans in general have increased their consumption of poultry, low-fat milk and fresh fruits and vegetables, but decreased consumption of eggs, coffee, red meat and whole milk.

The trend toward lower-calorie, lower-fat foods has been reflected in everything from restaurant menus to reduced-calorie frozen entrees and salad bars in fast-food stores. Yet industry figures show that Americans are also eating more croissants — at 65 percent fat — more chocolates, more premium high-fat ice creams and more chewy cookies than ever.

One explanation for this nutritional "split personality" is that after the "good behavior" of exercise, diet and hard work, people may reward themselves with rich, calorie-laden foods. While this system may work for some people, it can lead to a continual cycle of dieting and splurging for others who have trouble controlling their weight.

A healthy diet includes a variety of foods from the basic food groups, including meat, poultry and fish, dairy products, breads, cereals and pasta and fruits and vegetables.

To cut calories, you don't necessarily have to buy specially prepared low-calorie foods. Instead you just make sure you are eating low-fat dairy products, lean red meats and poultry with the skin removed. Avoid extra fats from gravies and sauces or fried foods.

If you're one of those people who rewards yourself for dieting with high-calorie foods, find some other way to give yourself a treat.

Fewer find do-it-yourselfing 'fun'

NEW YORK (UPI) — Fewer Americans are taking hammer or paint brush in hand these days as two-income households put more money in consumers' pockets but leave less time for do-it-yourself activities, a survey conducted by Hardware Age Magazine discloses.

In 1986, only 67.6 percent of respondents to the trade journal's survey said they engaged in projects such as painting a room, changing the oil in their car or installing a light fixture, compared to 80.9 percent in 1982.

The survey found that having fun is the primary motivation for today's do-it-yourselfers.

Credit card blues can be prevented

NEW YORK (UPI) — A New York bankruptcy attorney, citing consumer debt for claiming nearly 20 percent of Americans' disposable income, offers tips on how to avoid the most common mistakes people make with their credit cards.

Advice from Lance Roger Spodek includes:

- Do not pay one credit card bill with another credit card. You will only sink deeper into debt.
- Turn down an increased credit line when the bank offers it.
- Make twice the minimum monthly payments on your credit card statements.
- Leave credit cards at home after a romantic quarrel or emotional upset.

Consumer credit handbook offered

WASHINGTON (UPI) — "Charge it" can be an expensive phrase for consumers who are not careful about choosing and using credit cards.

The Consumer Federation of America recently noted that average charge card interest rates have climbed in the past five years — although other interest rates have fallen substantially — and you may now pay an annual fee as well.

The Federal Reserve Board has a free booklet that explains your rights when it comes to applying for and using credit. "The Consumer Credit Handbook" discusses some ways to determine what you should (and should not) pay for credit, what creditors must tell you when you get credit, your rights if you are denied credit, how to check your credit history and how to correct billing errors.

The handbook contains such tips as:

- Read the fine print to see if you have to pay an annual fee, which can be as much as your total finance charges for the year.
- Find out if your finance charge is based on the adjusted balance or the previous balance. If the adjusted balance is used, you only have to pay interest on the amount you still owe after your monthly payment. If the previous balance is used, you have to pay interest on everything you owed at the start of the payment period.

For a free copy of "The Consumer Credit Handbook," send your name and address to F. James, Dept 513P, Consumer Information Center, Pueblo, CO 81009.

Customers charging

NEW YORK (AP) — Customer sales charged on stores' own credit cards increased 25 percent from 1974 to 1984, the last year for which statistics are available.

In 1984, an average of 56 percent of sales were handled on department store credit cards, compared with 45 percent a decade earlier, according to a survey funded by Citicorp Retail Services, an issuer of private label credit cards.

DEAR ABBY

Closet open, minds closed

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: A year ago our son came out of the closet to his father and me. It has been a traumatic year for all of us, filled with anger, tears, guilt, confusion and therapy. While we still don't pretend to understand everything about the homosexual lifestyle, we love our son and accept that he believes this is right for him. He has a friend (I can't bring myself to say "lover") and has assured us that he wants a long-term, loving, monogamous relationship, just as his brothers and sisters have. We believe he is sincere.

The problem is that we both have aging parents whom we want to spare. We see no advantage in their knowing, and since my father-in-law, in particular, has very strong anti-gay feelings, we are concerned that a rift will occur that may never be healed. Our son, however, is an activist, especially in respect to AIDS education, and he is quoted often in newspapers and magazines. He lives in another city, but we are fearful that our parents will see him on television or read about him. How can we act lovingly to everyone concerned? — CONCERNED PARENTS

DEAR CONCERNED: I can understand your wanting to "spare" your parents from a truth they may not want to accept, but since your son has chosen to go public, it may not be possible.

The grandparents need enlightenment — not protection — so help them by providing them with some education literature from PARENTS FLAG (Federation of Parents & Friends of Lesbians and Gays Inc.), P.O. Box 24565, Los Angeles, Calif. 90024. It should ease their anxiety and make them less judgmental.

Please enclose a long, stamped (39 cents), self-addressed envelope. The information is free.

DEAR ABBY: I am a secretary in the office of a junior high school in a small California town. It never ceases to amaze me that parents think I am a repository of vast amounts of money that I have handy to lendout to students who have forgotten to bring either money or lunch to school.

Yesterday, a parent called to ask that I lend little "Rupert" $10 so that he could stop at the store on the way home! There are 600 students at this school, and if I could recoup all the money I have lent out in the last five years, I could take a trip to Hawaii!

What prompted me to write is that today, a parent became very irate with me on the phone when I explained that I could not lend "Florence" $2 for lunch.

Please print this letter; perhaps it would speak for the thousands of school secretaries who are "hit on" every day for cash! Thank you. — BROKE IN CALIFORNIA

DEAR BROKE: I imagine the statute of limitations has run out on most of those unpaid debts, but it might be worth your time to ring up the parents (during the breakfast hour) and remind her (or him) to give little "Rupert" the loot you lent him.

DEAR ABBY: When one entertains guests at a fine restaurant and the male guest insists on handling the tip but actually places an amount below the expected average, is it considered impolite for the hostess to add to the tip while the guest is still at the table?

How would you handle such a situation? — CONCERNED IN SACRAMENTO

DEAR CONCERNED: I would discreetly slip the additional money to the captain or waiter as inconspicuously as possible — but not at the table.

DEAR ABBY: I have a message for "Smart and Confused," who thinks he's smarter than virtually everyone he knows. He said, "After I have started a conversation with anyone from my dentist to my wife, I begin to realize that they are intellectually inferior, and I regard what they have to say as only amusing, if not utterly stupid."

Because I have an IQ of 183, I, too, am smarter than virtually everyone I know. However, I don't know anyone who hasn't taught me something. The only people who have ever bored me are a couple of self-styled geniuses much impressed with their own "superiority." I don't know anyone who hasn't said (or done) something utterly stupid once in a while (including me).

If "Smart and Confused" were a little smarter, he'd know that people with their noses in the air can't see where they're going. Ask him to let you know what he learns when he trips.

By the way, I'm female, married and have two children. — SMART BUT NOT CONFUSED

(Do you hate to write letters because you don't know what to say? Thank-you notes, sympathy letters, congratulations, how to decline and accept invitations and how to write an interesting letter are included in Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions." Send your name and address clearly printed with a check or money order for $2.50 and a long, stamped (39 cents) self-addressed envelope to: Dear Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

Student tests rate products

ROCK ISLAND, Ill. (AP) — What cereal stays crunchier in milk? And which dog food tastes best to dogs? Students at Ridgewood School investigated those and other consumer questions at a version of the elementary school science fair.

The consumer fair was developed by science teacher Don Nelson as an alternative to the traditional science fair. Ribbons are awarded deserving projects, he said, but the emphasis is on an enjoyable learning experience.

"We talk about what consumers would be interested in finding out, like what ice cream tastes best, cost and quality," Nelson said of the preliminary project work. Then students "select one aspect — for instance, what cereal stays crunchier in milk or what hair spray holds the longest time — and then design an experiment to test that question."

At the consumer fair, students' projects detail the procedure used in the experiment, the data collected and their conclusions, Nelson said.

He said the fair was a way to reinforce learning about the scientific method, while using everyday items.

The question of which dog food dogs prefer was researched with the help of family pets that served as testers, he said. Students placed several dog foods in front of the canines and recorded which one the dog went for first. Pictures of the pets were included in the project display.

Random sampling and "blind" taste tests were popular consumer fair projects, said Nelson.

"We had a taste test of lemon-lime sodas," he said, "and a very popular project was the 'which chewing gum holds flavor for the longest time?' "

One group of students tested which toothpaste cleaned the best, with the help of an unusual prop. Nelson said "Uncle Harry's choppers," a family heirloom, served as the experimental vehicle for testing the toothpastes.

Another group of students tested which facial tissue was the strongest by devising a "sneeze machine," Nelson said. A piece of piping was used, and students imitated sneezing through the tube.

'The pause that refreshes' more complicated

Pepsi-Cola USA is taking a page from the success of Cherry Coke, which is produced by its arch rival — Coca-Cola Co. The company is now distributing a diet cherry cola as part of its Slice soft drink line.

Pepsi's introduction of the reduced calorie cherry cola is substantially ahead of Coke's own introduction of Diet Cherry Coke, which is still in test marketing.

Friedman of New Product News reports limited availability of an item that may give pause to the soft drink giants. A Buffalo, N.Y., company is manufacturing Jolt Cola — it has all the sugar and twice the caffeine of regular cola drinks.

There is little left to innovate in the wine cooler category with more than 100 different varieties of the wine and fruit mixtures available. But the Seagram Wine Co. has, in fact, come up with something different with its Natural Peach Flavored Wine Cooler.

If it is difficult to come up with a new angle in the wine cooler segment, then it is doubly trying for the beer manufacturers. However, the Stroh Brewery Co. decided recently to forgo the new product route and make a significant change in packaging. The company is the first to offer an odd-numbered amount of beers in a carry case with its 15-can packs. Consumers with a somewhat more substantial thirst can also try to pick up the company's new 30-can pack.

Tax terms defined

By JOHN K. SCHMIDT

"Tax exempt" means that an organization is registered with the Internal Revenue Service and does not pay taxes. "Tax deductible" means the donor can deduct contributions to the organization on his or her federal income tax return. Being tax exempt does not necessarily mean that donations to that organization are tax deductible.

The Internal Revenue Code defines more than 20 different categories of tax exempt organizations, but only a few are also tax deductible. Principle among tax deductible groups are the "501 (c) (3) category," charitable organizations.

An organization must prove to the IRS that it is operated for charitable purposes. The IRS does not judge the worthiness of the cause or operating efficiency. A "letter of determination" is issued by the IRS and should be available as verification of an organization's tax status.

Category 501 (c) (3) includes charitable, educational, religious, scientific, literary, prevention of cruelty to children and animals, and national or international amateur sports competitions. Contributions are deductible as charitable donations for federal income tax purposes.

Organizations that are tax exempt under other sections may not be deductible as charitable donations, but may qualify as a business expense.

When you receive goods, such as cookies, tickets, light bulbs, etc., for your donation, it is not tax deductible; so you may want to make a direct donation rather than purchase goods.

The value of your volunteer time is not deductible, but out-of-pocket expenses directly related to your volunteer services are deductible. Keep records of such expenses.

Experts warn suntanning can be dangerous practice

WASHINGTON (AP) — As warm weather spreads across the land, many Americans are seeking a sporty summer appearance by tanning their hides — a practice that medical experts warn can lead to wrinkles, aged skin and even cancer.

"While a suntan — like a kiss — is a temporary thing, some of the undesirable side effects that come with it are longer lasting," the Food and Drug Administration warns.

"The sun damages the skin. Some of the damage may be immediate and obvious: burning and blistering, for example, and various skin rashes and eruptions, as well as eye injury.

"Other damage may come on the installment plan and may include skin that sags and wrinkles long before it should. Belated damage may also include skin cancer," the agency reports in its magazine FDA Consumer.

Reducing exposure to the sun and using sunscreens, according to medical experts, is a source of readily available protection.

While the sun's damage can affect anyone exposed, sensitivity varies from person to person, the FDA reports. Those most likely to suffer harm include people with very fair skin, the elderly and people taking certain medications that can increase their sensitivity.

Indeed, many people are unaware that some of the most commonly used drugs can make them extra sensitive to the sun — something they may learn only after acquiring a splotchy, burned or blistered appearance.

Included in this category are some tranquilizers, acne drugs, blood pressure reducing drugs, anti-depressants, products used to prevent vomiting, sulfa drugs, some antibiotics, and oral diabetes drugs, among others. People using drugs should check with their physician or pharmacist to see if the product makes them extra sun-sensitive.

Also extra sensitive are people of Celtic and other Northern European stock with red or blond hair and fair skin — those who freckle and burn easily rather than tanning.

Their skin has less of the protective substance called melanin than others, according to the FDA, thus allowing the sun to do more damage.

But that doesn't exempt folks with darker skins who tan easily — they can pay in the future too.

A major summer sun problem is prematurely aged skin — dry, rough and cracked because the sun bakes out moisture.

Over time this damage accumulates, the FDA says, leaving the skin rough, leathery, pebbly and dry. The result is crow's feet around the eyes and deep wrinkles on the neck and other areas, the agency says.

Skin cancer is also a greater hazard for the fair skinned, but can affect anyone, with ultraviolet radiation the main danger.

More than 300,000 Americans suffer skin cancer annually, the FDA says, although most cases can be treated and have a high cure rate. Nonetheless, the disease can be dangerous or even fatal, and any change in the skin deserves prompt attention from a doctor.

Sunscreens, now being widely promoted in supermarkets, drugstores and other retail outlets can be an important tool in avoiding sun-damaged skin.

While many promote pleasant scents or moisturizers, the most important thing to consider is the sun protection factor, a numerical rating that estimates how much screening the product provides.

These ratings can help people select protective skin creams, but common sense still should be used in exposure to the sun. And experts advised against relying on umbrellas and big hats — plenty of sunlight can still reach you.

Here is a rundown of the SPF rating scale, provided by the Food and Drug Administration:

■ SPF 2-4: minimal protection. Permits tanning, recommended for people who rarely burn and who tan easily and deeply.

■ SPF 4-6: moderate protection. Permits some tanning, recommended for people who tan well with a minimum burn.

■ SPF 6-8: extra protection. Permits limited tanning, recommended for people who tan gradually and sometimes get moderate sunburns.

■ SPF 8-15: maximal protection. Permits little tanning, recommended for people who burn easily and tan little.

■ SPF 15 and over: ultra protection. Permits virtually no tanning, recommended for people who burn easily and never tan.

'New, improved!' products introduced at record rate

Washington Post News Service

Food company executives apparently think Americans have a fascination for innovations, a short attention span, fading product loyalty or a bit of all three. This question of perceptions arises because new product introductions for the first few months of 1986 are continuing at a record-setting pace.

Manufacturers' large-scale effort to update, improve, reduce calories, add fiber and continually rediscover items considered gourmet has meant that for the first quarter of this year there were 16.7 percent more new products hitting store shelves than during the same period in 1985, says Martin Friedman, editor of New Product News.

In March, for instance, each day there were seven food or household items made available to supermarkets for the first time.

Behind every product reformulation or introduction is the marketing specialist's dream of bringing along that special something that will capture consumers' attention and dollars. One such product, Cherry Coke, was introduced last year by the Coca-Cola Co. and is now estimated to be generating sales of more than $800 million annually.

Friedman believes that in 1986 the major success stories could come in the form of the higher-priced packaged foods that appeal to an individual's sense of luxury.

"From our view, food manufacturers' primary strategy these days can be described in one word: upgrade," he said during a presentation at Food Marketing Institute convention in Chicago. "We seem to see more and more new items appearing which provide consumers with an advancement in both quality and price, almost to the point where ordinary supermarket products can now be called gourmet."

The products take many different forms but can usually be identified by either the use of the word classic in the label; a European-sounding name; an allusion to royalty; or simply a price tag somewhere over $2 per serving.

Hospital groundbreaking today

By RON GILMORE
Staff Writer

Groundbreaking ceremonies for a new psychiatric hospital were to be this afternoon, according to spokesman for Healthcare International of Austin.

"To introduce Glenwood to the Midland-Odessa community, Healthcare International is hosting a private reception for local civil leaders and health care professionals," said Diane McIver, director of psychiatric services for the firm.

The reception is set for 5-8 p.m. at the Mission Country Club in Odessa. Groundbreaking ceremonies preceded the reception. The event was being held at the future site of the $3.9 million facility, near the intersection of Farm-to-Market 1788 and Highway 80.

"Glenwood will actively address the mental health of the Midland-Odessa area," said Ms. McIver. "It will provide a total living environment for individuals who need help in managing their emotional problems. For each patient, the intensity of supervision and amount of activity will be modified to meet individual needs."

The reception and groundbreaking ceremonies come almost four years after Midland Memorial Hospital, Parkview Hospital (now Physicians and Surgeons) and Southwest Health of Midland/Odessa Inc., became embroiled in a bureaucratic battle for the right to be the sole builder of a private psychiatric hospital in the region. The conflict arose over obtaining certificates of needs to go ahead with construction, from the now-defunct Texas Health Facilities Commission.

MMH was granted a CON to build a psychiatric-/substance abuse facility but eventually settled on teaming up with two Arizona health firms to build Clearview, a drug and alcohol treatment center, exclusively.

Southwest, which had plans to develop West Plains Hospital, a $4.1 million psychiatric facility, was given approval by the THFC to build but later dropped their plans and sold the property to Healthcare International, which is currently developing Glenwood on the same site.

Parkview was denied a CON by the THFC and went on to develop plans for construction of a replacement hospital. The plan never materialized and was followed by a confusing vie for ownership, resulting in the current situation — a doctor-owned, corporation-owned hospital renewing plans for a replacement facility.

This is the artist's rendition of Glenwood, the proposed psychiatric hospital to be located at the intersection of Farm-to-Market 1788 and Highway 80.

The latest twist in efforts to bring a psychiatric hospital to the area is the Healthcare International facility which should be completed in early spring 1987, said Ms. McIver.

According to HCI, the new hospital "will provide a continuum of psychiatric services for children, adolescents and adults. Services will include short and intermediate inpatient psychiatric treatment, partial hospitalization, 24-hour emergency admission, diagnosis and evaluation, discharge planning, referral and aftercare.

Included in the plans are recreational facilities for such activities as baseball, softball, soccer and swimming and an open space for an innovative outdoor treatment program that uses rope work and wilderness skills to build patient self-confidence and teamwork.

"To help each patient successfully return home or to the community, Glenwood's treatment environment makes use of may of the same activities and experiences the patient encounters outside the hospital," said Ms. McIver.

In addition to Glenwood, HCI will begin construction of a new psychiatric hospital in San Antonio in June. The firm also operates hospitals in Austin, Corpus Christi, Dallas, Longview and Houston. It oversees 20 facilities in nine states from South Carolina to Hawaii and is the parent company of the nationally known Brown Schools of Texas.

VIEWPOINT

Most Midlanders against cutting police force staff

By RAMONA NYE
Staff Writer

The city council has indicated that it will follow many recommendations of a $75,000 consultant report, including possibly cutting 32 people from the police department.

On Tuesday a random selection of 12 Midlanders were asked if they thought the council was making a wise decision by following the report's recommendations. The report says the department is over-staffed and can save $1.2 million if 28 officers and four civilians were laid off.

Ten out the 12 interviewed said they did not think the council should cut staff from the police force.

"If they're going to reduce the police force, then it's going to take a longer time for them to get to an armed robbery, burglary or accident and that's not going to be good for the people," said Jimmy Open, 3120 Mariana. Open is an assistant manager at a drug store.

Buddy McNatt, 1216 South Pratt, said, "We should have all the police protection we can get. Look at all the trouble we're having in the city and if they cut police we're going to have more of it." McNatt is a retired mechanic.

David Carroll, 4906 Brownwood, said a compromise should be made between the department and the council.

"I'm all for saving money because there are rumors the population will be reduced and obviously we want to have the population to police.

"But then again, one of the nice things about this town is that I can hardly drive two blocks without seeing a police officer. That's great. That type of visibility has made the community safe to live in," said Carroll, who manages a jewelry store.

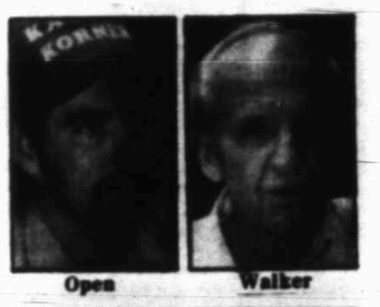
Greg Hall, 1401 South Terrell, said "I don't think they need to go on one person's or one study's opinion. There are too many variants.

"They've made a shotgun judgment and it shouldn't have been done so readily," said Hall, who is unemployed.

Hollis Shanks, 3315 Cimmaron, said "The whole thing was politically motivated. I think if they paid for the report they ought to study it, but not follow it by the letter.

"Midland really has had less trouble than any town in West Texas as far as the police are concerned. Somebody's doing something right," said Shanks, who is retired from Kraft foods.

Sharon O'Connor, 713 Boyd, said "I feel they are shorthanded as it is and to cut back would make it much more difficult.



Open

Walker

Carroll

Hollinger

"It will endanger the safety of the community to a certain extent. We're always needing cutbacks somewhere, but the police department and fire department, I think they should leave alone," said Ms. O'Connor, who is a marketing assistant.

Cindy Hollinger, 4400 Holiday Hill Road, said "I'd rather see streets not repaired than to cut police.

"It seems to me they need as many men as they can get. Just from what I've heard, cutting down is not going to help cut down on crime," said Ms. Hollinger, who manages a sunglass booth.

George Walker, 3710 Shell, said instead of laying off the officers they could be used in other departments.

"They could be utilized somewhere with this size of town. They should consider reassigning them or reorganizing the department," said Walker who is retired.

However two people said the police force should be cut if it is overstaffed and it will save money.

"I'm all for not over-staffing, but I don't want to sacrifice protection for the budget," said Shannon Rydell, 3203 Princeton. Ms. Rydell is a homemaker.

Leisa Collins, 3813 Monty, said, "If they are overstaffed, then I think they should cut back, but I hate to see people lose their jobs." Ms. Collins is a homemaker.

Local Merit Scholarship winners named

From Staff Reports

The National Merit Scholarship Corporation has announced the names of eight academic champions from Midland who will receive National Merit Scholarships for the 1986-87 academic year.

The scholarships were awarded to students on the basis of outstanding academic and extracurricular accomplishments. Each of the scholars will receive between $2,000 and $16,000 for undergraduate study at the U.S. college or university of their choice. Local winners include:

Lee High School senior Craig E. Gifford, 2600 Goddard Drive, the recipient of the National Merit Scholarship sponsored by General Dynamics Corporation. Arrests made after convenience store theft

From Staff Reports

An early-morning armed robbery at a Loop 250 convenience store resulted in the arrest of two Midland men, according to reports from the Midland Police Department.

Awathwar Hirahouch, a 30-year-old clerk at Buck's Store on Loop 250 west of Midkiff Road, had spotted a suspicious car parked outside the store about 3:40 this morning, reports said.

She called police, who dispatched a patrol car. As she got off the phone, one of the two men in the car entered the store wearing a Halloween mask and carrying a handgun. He demanded the money in the cash register, reports said.

"There they go!" Ms. Hirahouch told Officer Jackie Copeland, who pulled up as the two suspects drove off. He followed them to the parking lot of the nearby Sagewood Condominiums, 3316 Caldera, where he arrested them and recovered the money, mask and gun. There was no resistance, reports said.

A 25-year-old man and a 20-year-old man being held in city jail this morning were expected to be charged today with aggravated robbery, reports said.

In other reports, a 22-year-old Midland man told sheriff's officers he was raped Wednesday afternoon by two hitchhikers he picked up on North Big Spring Street, according to Midland Sheriff Gary Painter.

The man told officers the hitchhikers gave him directions which brought him to Farm-to-Market Road 307 east of Midland. They then took turns raping him, he told sheriff's officers. He had to hitchhike back to town to report the incident, reports said.

The suspects were described as white men, each about six feet tall, weighing about 150 pounds and about 180-200 pounds, respectively, reports said.

Despite hard times, Midland not 'plain vanilla' town

Who on Earth would have ever imagined that Midland would be "just another city" on the West Texas plains or, worse, just another town in the great U.S. of A.?

Not I.

And it's not.

Has the town lost its steam and its luster or is it just between rounds in the boom-to-bust cycle? Surely, the latter, we pray.

Midland, I do believe, is not a "plain vanilla" town.

In my first exposure to Midland, in 1970, I was driving west from the piney woods of East Texas to the lofty mountains of Alpine. I remember seeing a poignant contrast of two times meeting. It was startling but not disquieting. In the foreground were range land and mesquite, occasional patches of cultivated farm land, and oil-field pump jacks and tanks. The backdrop was that of a city highlighted by high-rise office buildings which weren't quite scraping the sky.

I was amazed but not mesmerized enough to take a detour and explore. That would come later.

Toward the end of my three-year tenure at Alpine, I happened to saunter, by car, into Midland by way of Odessa. Odessa I knew. We'd speedily drive, back when the speed limit was a hurry-up-and-get there 70 mph, from Alpine to Odessa to shop, catch a movie, or dine. It never occurred to me to drive the 20 or so extra miles to Midland, which I perceived as a high-class town of oil millionaires and the country-club set, until a friend of mine was over here in a tennis tournament.

That was my first first-hand exposure to Midland and its Racquet Club. Well, that's where I went to watch my friend, a history professor and a tennis mentor, swat a few balls. He wasn't there. But in looking for him, I got an inside view of high society at leisure. My friend was over at the less glamorous Midland High School tennis courts, where he was swinging his racquet at balls.

A year later, I returned on a job-seeking mission. I, a native Texan who had a background in and a flair for the uncomplicated country life, came to Midland by bus on an indirect route from Chicago, where I had been stranded for three months in a situation which I now have locked into the irretrievable past.

For that, I am thankful. It was as if I were a prisoner who had escaped from Devil's Island. But I was locked more in my mind than by chains, shackles and moats, jungles and swamps.

As you might surmise, I got the job, which, through a series of happenstances and showing up for work, I still hold.

And the town has changed since then.

It has grown even taller and denser thanks to the boom of the late 1970s and very early 1980s. Today, the town still is tall but is not so dense. And it's not standing as tall as it once was.

Perhaps the saddest phenomenon which has occurred was the failure of Midland's No. 1 corporate citizen, the First National Bank of Midland. Since the bank folded and the petroleum industry took an involuntary and unscheduled sabbatical from profit-making, the town has taken on a wounded look like a cowboy, once sitting tall in the saddle, who now is slumped over from exhaustion, too much booze or fighting at the saloon. The next tragedy was the fall — the razing — of the Lancaster House. Perhaps both falls were preventable, but the latter, unlike the first, was most deliberative premeditated in the name of a progress of some sort.

Well, today, despite noble efforts, such as the Midland Chamber of Commerce's "Love Ya Midland" campaign, Midland spirits are depressed because, I suppose, its sense of pride has been attacked and diminished. High-dollar affluence was Midland's pride.

That we can survive. Hard-core Midlanders, who still are tied to the boom-or-bust cycle, are banking on yet another boom in the cyclic world of Midland. And they promise to do better "next time." But, alas, did the promise of a "war to end all wars" come true? Does not the son of the rich man often become the prodigal son and, instead of being frugal and wise in investments, becomes a spendthrift and dreams of no end to his fortune? Declines in the wake of success are avoidable.

What Midland has to contend with now is just to survive. For a change, affluence is a luxury and not a requisite for being "in" in Midland. Perhaps the humbling circumstances of the oil slump and the taste of vanilla now on Midland's palate will make a brighter Midland in the tomorrows to come.

Racer encourages teens to er.ter crime essay contest

From Staff Reports

Midland race-car driver Bobby Hillin Jr., is encouraging local teenagers to participate in a national "Race Against Crime" essay contest which could win them a free trip to a July 4 NASCAR race in Daytona Beach, Fla.

The campaign is designed to focus attention on the contest theme — how teens can help "take a bite out of crime."

"I urge all the youngsters in the area to get involved and participate," Hillin said in a press release. "We finished fourth down at Daytona for the 500, and are looking forward to returning for the race on the Fourth. It would really be neat for someone from the Midland area to have the opportunity to make the trip and enjoy the race."

The contest calls for entrants aged 13 to 17 to write a 150-200 word essay on what teens can do to help fight crime in their communities. The winner will get an all-expense-paid trip to the Pepsi Firecracker 400 in Daytona Beach, Fla.

Entries must be received by June 6 at the National Crime Prevention Council, 733 15th St. NW, Washington, D.C., 20005. They must include the name, age, phone number and address of the entrant, the signature of a parent or guardian, the signature of a member of a sponsoring law-enforcement agency's crime-prevention officer, and the name and address of the sponsoring agency.

For more information, call the Midland County Sheriff's Department Crime Prevention Unit at 688-1014.

Grilling rig cook-off scheduled

From Staff Reports

Midland's Drillsite Supervisors Association is sponsoring a drillers reunion and grilling rig cook-off for the Permian Basin on Saturday. The event will start at 9 a.m. and will be held at Water Wonderland on Highway 80 between Midland and Odessa.

Ronny Price, chairman of the cook-off committee, said the all day event is expected to bring guests from throughout the Permian Basin. Many companies will substitute this for their company picnic, Price added.

Companies are invited to enter their grilling rigs and bring their employees and families. The cook-off will begin in the morning with judging in the afternoon. Cook-off categories are brisket, ribs, chili, fajitas, cabrito, highest tech grilling and largest grilling rig.

Other contests to be held during the afternoon include bit chucking, long drive, accurate irons and 18 hole putting. Discount tickets to Water Wonderland will be available to all family members of DSA. Tickets to the evening meal will cost the public five dollars.

This is the first reunion sponsored by the DSA, a nonprofit professional association. The DSA is asking sponsors to donate a minimum of $100. The money will help support the DSA's activities.

Dallas council cuts city salaries

DALLAS (AP) — Faced with a budget crunch, City Council has decided to pare 1 percent from most employees' salaries, avoiding the other options of dipping into reserve funds or resorting to layoffs.

The salary decreases approved Wednesday range from the 1 percent trim for most of the 15,700 employees to 5 percent for several of the city's top managers, including City Manager Charles Anderson.

The cuts are scheduled to take effect in June.

Mayor Starke Taylor said the council had few options because of a projected deficit of about $8 million this year.

The council cut $9 million from an operating budget of $454 million, including 3 percent cutbacks in each department's budget and the salary cuts.

Council members said cutting administrators' salaries by the largest percentage should show taxpayers the city intends to start at the top in balancing the budget.

Tuition for out-of-state students will remain at the current rate of $120 per semester credit hour.

Scholarships to be offered

ODESSA — The Mexican American Scholarship Committee will offer sholarships to assist Mexican American students attending Odessa College or the University of Texas of the Permian Basin.

On a semester basis, $250 will be awarded to recipients who may reapply each semester.

Eligibility criteria that students be from the Permian Basin area and plan on enrolling as full-time students. Priority is given to undergraduates with financial need.

Application dealine for the fall is July 15. Selections will be made in early August.

To apply or for information, contact the financial aid offices at OC or UTPB.

Financial aid available

ODESSA — The Office of Financial Aid at the University of Texas of the Permian Basin has available various forms of financial aid for area students.

The Committee on Scholarly Communication with the People's Republic of China is offering a National Program of Scholarly Exchanges to support visits to China by scholars and advanced graduate students in the sciences, social sciences and humanities. For information, write the CSCPRC, National Academy of Sciences, 2101 Constitution Ave. NW, Washington D.C., 20418, or call (202) 334-2718.

Norwegian Scholarships for Americans are available through the Norwegian Emigration Fund of 1975. The grants were established to award scholarships to Americans for advanced or specialized studies in Norway on topics dealing with emigration history and relations between the United States and Norway. Request for application forms should be addressed to Emigration Fund, Norwegian Information Service, 825 Third Ave., 17th floor, New York, N.Y., 10022, or call (212) 421-7333.

Individuals or institutions in the United States whose activities are primarily centered on these subjects may apply for grants. Individual awards will be approximately $12,000. Application deadline is July 1. Winners will be notified in September and the scholarship will be available Jan. 2, 1987.

New chancellor named

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — Ivory Nelson, executive assistant to the chancellor of the Texas A&M University System, has been named chancellor of the Alamo Community College District in San Antonio.

Nelson, 51, becomes the chief administrative officer responsible for the operations of the district's three institutions: San Antonio College, St. Phillip's College and Palo Alto College. His appointment Tuesday by the Alamo District Board of Trustees is effective June 16.

FarmAid funds used to fight federal agency

LUBBOCK (AP) — FarmAid funds are being used to fight the Farmers Home Administration, but an FmHA official says it's almost too late because the agency is almost out of loan money.

Four Texas farmers filed a class-action suit last week in Lubbock's U.S. District Court seeking to force the agency to process the applications immediately, according to court records.

The lawyers were hired with money from the FarmAid arm Farm Defense Fund, said honorary fund chairman John Conlee.

Conlee, a country-Western music singer, said Texas is just the first of many states in which lawyers will argue farm credit issues under the sponsorship of the $500,000 fund.

The Texas lawsuit, which Conlee said is the first to be filed, stems from farmers' complaints that the agency has been slow in processing loan applications. The farmers' attorneys say thousands of Texas farmers either have not been told whether they will be financed or have been approved but have not received their checks.

FmHA administrator Vance Clark said the agency is almost out of direct loan operating funds.

Lubbock lawyer Bruce Magness, one of the plaintiff's attorneys, said the FmHA is required under the 1985 farm bill to decide on a loan application within 60 days of receiving it and to provide funds for loans within 15 days of approval.

He said farmers who have not been notified of the status of their FmHA application or received funds haven't been able to plant their crops yet.

Texas peaches will be scarce

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas peaches will taste as good as ever this year but they will be harder to find, according to the Texas Department of Agriculture.

Prices will be up also.

"When you see Texas peaches, buy them," said TDA promotional marketing director Paulette Schwartz. "Flavor and juiciness will be excellent, but it looks like production statewide will be down by half or more."

She said production is down because of a warm winter that reduced the peach bloom and prevented a healthy crop of fruit from setting. The harvest in Gillespie County, the state's largest peach producer, is expected to drop by as much as 75 percent.

Will remains of Houston's founder find peace in Texas soil?

HOUSTON (AP) — One of Houston's founders may finally rest in peace in Texas after he died in the North in 1864 and the Civil War prevented his family from claiming his remains.

A great-great-great-nephew of Augustus Chapman "A.C." Allen is seeking public support for removing Allen's remains from his grave in Brooklyn, N.Y., and reburying him next to his wife, Charlotte, in a Houston cemetery where many of Houston's leading citizens rest.

Administrators of the New York cemetery say their hands are tied by laws requiring a court order to remove the body. Dr. Ralph Dittman, Chapman's nephew, said he and other descendants aren't willing to get involved in a possible legal fight unless there is a "public mandate."

Seven of Allen's descendants reached that consensus at a meeting Thursday, Dittman said.

Already, at least one official of a Houston area historical society is excited at the prospect of Allen's remains returning to Houston.

"Some people see this as a morbid thing but I see it as very exciting," said Dorothy Taylor, director of marketing for the Harris County Heritage Society.

It could become part of Houston's "effort of getting it all back together and moving forward again," she added.

Dittman said his family needs the support, in court if necessary, of a public agency like the Heritage Society or the Houston-Harris County Sesquicentennial Commission.

Dittman has asked the commission to sanction Allen's reburial as part of this year's commemoration of the 150th anniversaries of Texas' independence from Mexico and of Houston's founding.

Sabra Gill, executive director of the commission, said its sanction committee will study the request.

Allen and his brother, John Kirby Allen, moved to Texas from New York about 1832 and became successful land speculators. Four months about Texas won its independence in 1836, the Allen brothers founded Houston, naming it in honor for Sam Houston.

Allen died from pneumonia in Washington, D.C., on June 11, 1864, after going there to resign his position as consul to Mexico.

He was buried in New York only because the family could not arrange for his body to be returned to Houston because the North was blockading Southern ports during the Civil War, Dittman said.

His wife left a blank space on her monument but Allen has remained buried in the Brooklyn cemetery for almost 122 years.

Richard Moylan, executive vice president of New York's Greenwood Cemetery where Allen is now buried, declined comment except to say the cemetery is bound by New York State laws — which require court approval to move a body from a cemetery.

Moylan said the earth probably has reabsorbed Allen's remains, buried in a wooden casket in the days before laws required outer containments of graves.

But Dittman is undeterred.

The primary intent, he said, "is to bring back A.C. in spirit."

Everybody deserves a chance to make it on their own.

Everybody.

Dick Dunbar of the Orderly Departure Program helps the Ly family of Vietnam at the airport in Ho Chi Minh City, before they leave for the United States.

Orderly exodus

Text and Photos by the Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

HO CHI MINH CITY, Vietnam — The journey began here on a hot and humid afternoon. In a drab little airport jammed with soldiers, well-wishers and clerks, more than 180 refugees heading for new lives in the United States sat in a darkened lounge, watched the clock and waited.

As loudspeakers barked last-minute announcements, an Air Vietnam jet slowly rolled into view and revved its engines. The parents, children and elderly people rose to their feet, some weeping, others laughing and a few just staring at the plane.

Southern California and its maze of freeways was nearly 10,000 miles away. But for three Vietnamese families eager to join relatives there, it was getting closer.

Tran Tu Anh and her eight children, traveling to a new home, smiled as the departure time neared. After years of uncertainty, she finally would be reunited with a husband who fled Vietnam nine years ago. "My greatest dream has come true," she said.

For Nguyen Thi Lien and seven children, the journey began on an anxious note. Lien feared that her family's hard-won visas might be taken away and worried that her children would never see America or the father they had not seen since 1975.

Across the room, the Trinh family cold barely contain their excitement. The two beaming parents and their seven children said goodbye to friends, hugged each other and looked forward to a reunion with a son they had last seen 11 years ago.

WHEN THE call came to board Flight 831, the refugees eagerly took their seats. Within two hours, they would be undergoing tests and interviews in a Bangkok immigration center. Less than two weeks later, many would be resettled in cities across the United States.

"Words cannot express how happy we are," said Nguyen Thi Lien as she relaxed in the living room of her home in Fountain Valley, Calif., later. "For us, this has been the answer to our greatest hopes."

These journeys to a new life in the United States were made possible by the Orderly Departure Program, a United Nations venture that has operated since 1979 with the permission of the Vietnamese government.

The program was created to stem the exodus of Vietnamese boat people since Saigon (now called Ho Chi Minh City) fell to Communist troops in 1975. Thousands of these refugees drowned or were murdered at sea, while others poured into neighboring Asian countries.

Since the program began, more than 100,000 Vietnamese have emigrated peacefully to several nations, including 40,000 to the United States. In the United States, most Vietnamese who have become citizens or have immigrated legally can apply to bring their families in. All applications, however, are subject to Vietnamese approval.

The refugees on Flight 831 would experience unfamiliar rituals and requirements in the weeks after they left Vietnam. But when the Air Vietnam jet touched down in Bangkok, there was only elation.

AS THEY filed off a bus into an airport immigration center, some flashed "V" signs and a few raised fists. One teen-ager proudly carried an electric guitar case on which he had scrawled "America, Saint Louis City," with a crayon.

The mood changed, however, when the refugees learned that they would have to undergo a battery of medical tests and interviews before leaving the center. As the afternoon dragged on, several men stretched out on hard benches and tried to sleep. Teen-agers paced restlessly in the aisles, and infants began to cry.

When the tests were completed, two buses arrived to take the refugees to a three-story concrete building in Bangkok that would be their home for the next few days.

The next morning, immigration officials and nurses continued their checks and interviews. Parents and children waited in long lines for vaccinations and chest X-rays.

The morning schedule seemed routine, until the bombshell hit: Officials explained that some family members were going directly to the United States, while others would have to spend up to six months at a special education camps in the Philippines.

"U.S. officials have decided it is best for some refugees, especially those too old for public schools, to spend time learning English and job skills before they come to America," said Udomsak Glingosum, a refugee center official.

"IN THE long run, this makes good sense," he said, "But it upsets many of the families. They are confused; they don't understand."

Several days later, the Vu, Ly and Trinh families would board planes for their 15-hour flight to the United States. On the other side of the Pacific Ocean, their family members were beginning to get the news.

For Vu Van Huong, the word came in a telephone call from U.S. immigration officials. As he sat in his insurance office in Santa Ana, Calif., about 25 miles southeast of Los Angeles, the beaming executive said the arrival of his family was "the greatest news, the happiest day, the greatest thing."

Vu, formerly a paratrooper with the South Vietnamese army, fled Saigon in 1975 and eventually settled in Fountain Valley. The separation from his family was "very unhappy," he said, and he applied for their immigration in 1979.

For 10 years, Vu said, he has lived frugally, sent material goods to his family in Vietnam ad saved enough money to buy a new home. Although he was angry about the time it took Vietnamese officials to let his family leave, Vu said his wait had paid off.

"When I meet them at the airport, it will be the most wonderful day of our lives," he said. "How can I put this in words?"

Nguyen Ly also received word by telephone that after nine years, his family would be joining him. The quiet factory assembler, who had expressed doubts that his family would be allowed to leave, was overjoyed and quickly began readying his townhouse.

BUT FOR Hun Tuan Trinh, 27, the news that his parents and three siblings would be arriving came from a reporter.

"You have seen my family, they are well?" he asked excitedly, "When I greet them at the airport, it will be such a great moment."

Trinh said he would try to help his family overcome the language and customs barriers.

"We must work together, to make it easy for them in their new home," Trinh said. "But they are finally coming."

The dreams came true for Vu, Ly and Trinh on separate nights in March as they waited at Orange County's John Wayne Airport for the planes carrying their families.

Vu clutched a bouquet of roses, straightened his tie and kept checking his watch. Trinh talked calmly with friends, while Ly stood alone at the airport gate, watching planes land and passengers disembark.

When the jet carrying Vu's family rolled into view. A cheer went up from his friends, the insurance executive strained to look at the passengers filing off the plane, and seemed lost in the first crush of people hurrying by.

Then he saw them — first his children, followed by his wife. Vu rushed forward to embrace his family, as his friends clapped. A tearful Nguyen Lien held her husband tightly and buried her face in his shoulder.

Three night later, Trinh and Ly had their reunions. Trinh, his eyes brimming with tears, hugged his mother and father repeatedly. Ly embraced his wife and children, spoke quietly with them as they retrieved their luggage and then hurriedly left the airport.

IN THE following days, all three families began the difficult — but sometimes humorous — adjustment to a new life.

The Ly family, fresh from a trip to visit friends, sat in their living room and seemed awestruck. "So many cars in America, so very many cars," said Quoc Hon Tran, 26. "I wish to learn to drive one very soon."

Several miles away, the Trinh family was relaxing on a friend's patio. Hong Trinh's parents looked at photographs of the family taken at the Bangkok refugee center, while Trinh Tuan Dat, 9, busied himself with the mysteries of a cordless telephone.

Earlier, Trinh had difficulty explaining the concept of a microwave oven to his father. "He smiled and shook his head."

Divers bring up artifacts from 18th-century ships

BRISBANE, Australia (AP) — Divers are turning up hundreds of historical artifacts from the last voyage of Count Jean Francois de la Perouse, France's greatest ocean explorer who vanished with his ships in the South Pacific almost 200 years ago.

"We're finding some incredible things," said the Queensland Museum's curator of maritime archaeology, Ron Coleman, who recently led a two-week expedition to the site that is thought to date from 1788.

The French aristocrat's flagship Astrolabe and an accompanying frigate Boussole lie in deep water off the Solomon Islands in the Coral Sea.

La Perouse is regarded by historians as the French counterpart of Capt. James Cook, the British explorer who sailed the Pacific around the same time and is credited with discovering Australia.

Foreign volunteers invade Nicaragua to rebuild nation

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — Thousands of foreign volunteers have traveled to Nicaragua since the Sandinista government came to power nearly seven years ago.

Some of those came to do their part against what they believe to be U.S. imperialism, others to help poor people, still more simply to find out for themselves what this country is like.

They come, mostly at their own expense, from the United States and Canada, other Latin American countries, Western Europe and Australia.

The "internacionalistas" or "brigadistas," as the volunteer workers call themselves, often live in primitive, sometimes dangerous, conditions, working for little or no pay in visits that last from weeks to months.

Eight volunteers from West Germany were captured by the Nicaragun Democratic Force, the largest U.S.-supported rebel group fighting the Sandinistas, last week.

The Honduras-based force has confirmed they are holding the West Germans and would turn them over at a later, but unspecified, date to a humanitarian agency.

On Wednesday the Contra rebels claimed in a radio broadcast that the West Germans had been armed with Soviet-made AK-47 assault rifles when they were captured. There was no way to verify the claim.

The capture of the eight last week at a village where they were helping build houses for peasants sparked a 38-hour peaceful takeover of the West German Embassy here.

Some 70 West German volunteers, mostly youthful and many sporting hairstyles and dress reminiscent of the Woodstock generation, demanded that the West German ambassador call President Reagan and request that he order the Contras to release the captives.

Salomon Alarcon, an official with the Nicaraguan Committee for Solidarity with the People, said not all the volunteers are young radicals.

He said a group of elderly Americans, including an 85-year-old man, visited Nicaragua last year to help with the coffee harvest.

"Not all of the 'brigadistas' are sympathizers with the (Sandinista) revolution," Alarcon said. "Some can be against it. Some just want to know the world and see reality with their own eyes."

WORLD IN BRIEF

Evidence sufficient to try Waldheim, official says

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israel has enough evidence to put former U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim on trial for involvement in Nazi war crimes, Justice Minister Yitzhak Modai said today.

His statement to Israel radio was Israel's strongest yet about allegations that Waldheim had covered up his activities with the German army during World War II.

Modai told Israel radio that a Justice Ministry investigation ordered by Prime Minister Shimon Peres had found Waldheim indirectly responsible for war crimes in the Balkans.

"There is a basis for putting Kurt Waldheim on trial, if he were in Israel, for involvement in war crimes," Modai said.

He said that Israel has no proof Waldheim was directly involved in killing civilians. But the evidence "certainly connects him, if not directly and personally, at least with lending assistance" to these activities, he said.

In an interview published in the Yediot Ahronot newspaper today, Waldheim was quoted as saying Jewish leaders were lying about his alleged responsibility for war crimes.

Iraq: 520 Iranians killed

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) — Iraqi commandos killed 520 Iranian soldiers in the central sector of the war front Wednesday, and Iraqi forces entrenched in the northern mountains beat back an Iranian attack, a war communique said.

The communique, reported by state-run Baghdad Radio, said Iraqi special forces who last week occupied the Iranian town of Mehran in the central sector, killed the 520 Iranians in two "daring raids" against Iranian positions.

On the other hand, Iran's official Islamic Republic News Agency reported earlier that 800 Iraqi troops were killed or wounded in overnight fighting at Mehran. The Iranian agency, monitored in Nicosia, Cyprus, said two Iraqi helicopters were shot down in the northern front.

Iraqi ground defenses in the Mehran area shot down an Iranian U.S.-built F-4 warplane Tuesday evening while it was trying to enter Iraqi air space, the Baghdad communique said.

Soviets to aid with pipeline

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) — The Soviet Union will provide equipment and experts to help build a gas pipeline across Iraq, Soviet sources said.

The sources, who spoke Wednesday on condition they not be identified, said Soviet and Iraqi officials signed an agreement on the pipeline Tuesday.

The two parties also signed a five-year agreements on cooperation in oil, irrigation, exchange of experts, technicians and scientists, as well as deals involving health and sports and culture, said the sources.

Police watch for paintings

DUBLIN, Ireland (AP) — Police watched airports and docks today for some of the world's most valuable and best-known paintings stolen from a mansion south of Dublin, but news reports suggested they already may have been spirited out of the country.

Thieves took 17 paintings early Wednesday from Russborough House 15 miles southwest of Dublin, including works by Gainsborough, Goya, Rubens and Vermeer.

120 PUBLIC NOTICES

TO ALL INTERESTED PERSONS AND PARTIES:

You are hereby notified of the opportunity for written public comment concerning the Special Permit Application No. S-9679 by Permian Tank & Mfg., Inc. to construct a fiberglass tank & vessel manufacturing plant in Midland County, Texas. The proposed location is from Midland, west on Highway 80, 2 miles past Loop 250 overpass, on north service road. This facility porposes to emit the following air contaminants: particulate matter including but not limited to antimony oxide and silica and volatile organic compounds including but not limited to styrene and acetone. Before a permit can be issued for this facility, all emission sources must demonstrate compliance with all Rules and Regulations of the Texas Air Control Board and all applicable Federal Regulations. This includes the application of "best available control technology" to each emmission source and compliance with all ambient air quality standards.

A copy of all materials submitted by the applicant is available for public inspection at the Texas Air Control Board at 1901 East 37th Street, Suite 101, Odessa, Texas 79762 telephone (915) 367-3871 or 367-3872, and at the Texas Air Control Board, 6330 Highway 290 East, Austin, Texas 78723, tlephone (512) 451-5711. All interested persons may inspect these materials and submit written comments to the Executive Director of the Texas Air Control Board. All comments received in writing and postmarked by June 7, 1986 shall be considered by the Board in making its decision on the application. All comments will be made available for public inspection at the Texas Air Control Board office in Austin.
