City to implement police recommendations

By MARK LEWIS
Staff Writer

The City Council on Thursday announced that it would follow a consultant's recommendations about reorganizing the Police Department and reducing its staff from 211 to 179.

"It's our intention that (the reductions) be accomplished as much as possible through attrition," said Mayor Carroll Thomas.

Thomas praised the report by Cresap, McCormick and Paget of Washington, D.C., which described the Police Department as poorly organized, mismanaged and overstaffed. But Thomas also had praise for the department and for Police Chief Wayne Gideon, who resigned Thursday.

"The chief has been with us a long time, and I think he's done a good job," Thomas said.

Thomas said no pressure was put on Gideon to retire, but the chief's letter of resignation implied he had been asked to step down by City Manager Jim Brown Wednesday.

Brown refused to comment this morning when asked if he had requested Gideon's resignation.

Thomas said the city would begin "a national search" for a new police chief. Applications would also be accepted from within the department, he said.

"In many ways, (the report) is very positive," he said. "There's nothing in the report that inferred any wrongdoing in the department."

The department's most recent budget was for $8.1 million.

Big Spring police chief urged by council to resign

BIG SPRING (AP) — City council members pressured Police Chief Rick Turner into resigning because he was politically "volatile," three board members said.

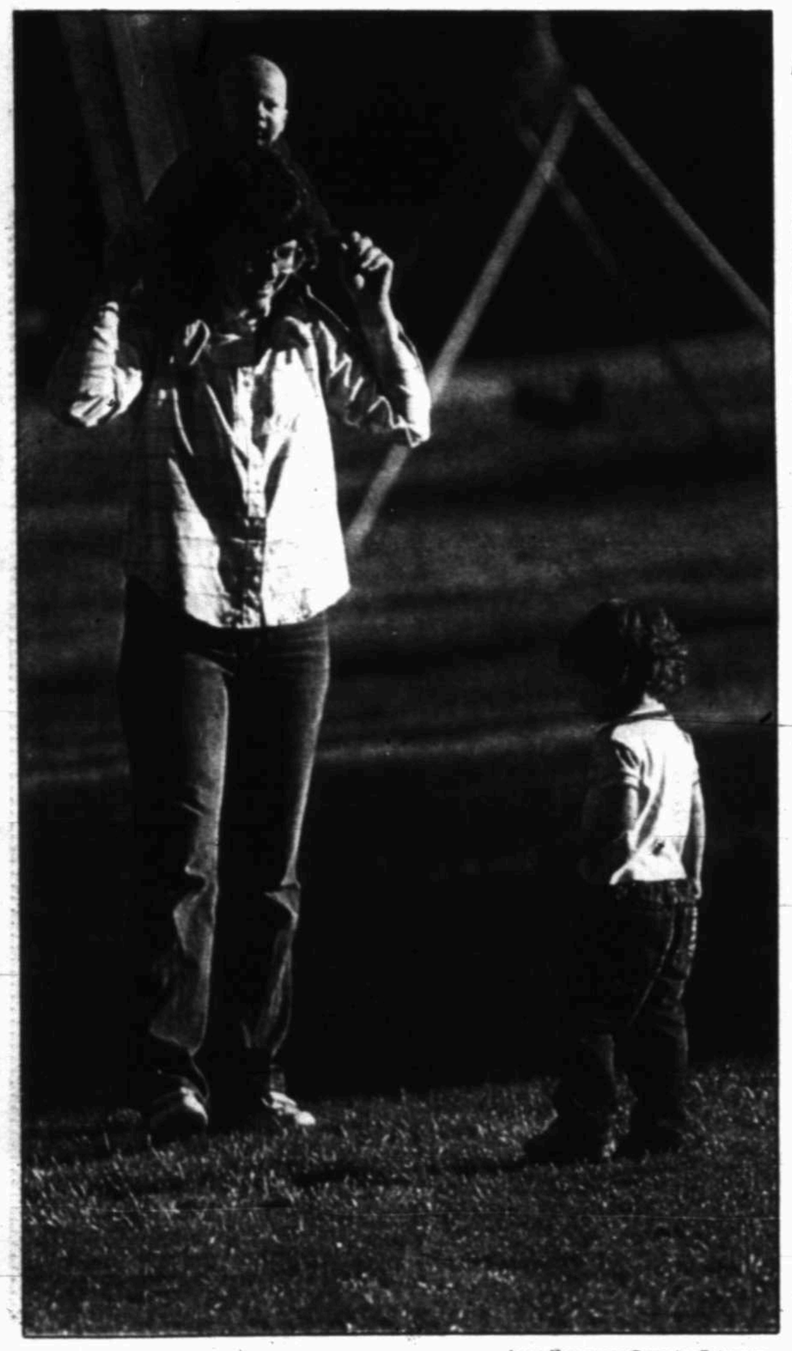

And the council asked City Attorney Doyle Curtis to quit because the city needed to save money, acting City Manager Hal Boyd said Thursday.

Turner said he was leaving with regret, but added, "I feel that my resignation would benefit a political atmosphere in our city."

Boyd has appointed Capt. Lonnie Smitha as acting police chief until a successor is named.

The turnover comes three months after the resignation of City Manager Don Davis, who was then hired on a 60-day consulting contract that expired April 30. Shortly after Davis resigned, administrative assistant Pat Hardy resigned his post for a job in Minnesota.

Mount Hood survivors improving

By BRIAN S. AKRE

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Two teen-age climbers who survived more than three days buried in a snow cave on Mount Hood with six companions were reported slowly improving today, and doctors said they were optimistic that both would recover.

They were rushed to hospitals after a frantic search on the treacherous slopes for two adults and six teen-agers ended Thursday when a rescuer poked through the surface of hard snow and struck a backpack.

Six of the eight climbers found stacked like cordwood in the cave beneath the surface were declared dead, bringing to nine the number of fatalities among a group of 13 climbers struck Monday by a sudden savage snowstorm. One adult and one teen-ager had walked to safety Tuesday.

Rescuers found the climbers just five feet from where one of three other bodies was recovered Wednesday. The climbers dug the cave for shelter, and it became buried under 4 to 5 feet of snow about 8,300 feet up the 11,235-foot mountain, said Clackamas County Sheriff's Lt. Gene Hanners.

The eight were flown by helicopter to five Portland hospitals, where the two adults and four of the teen-agers were pronounced dead.

Giles Thompson, 16, of Longview, Wash., was taken off a heart-lung machine Thursday night at Providence Medical Center, and Dr. Duane S. Bietz said he had an 80 percent chance of surviving.

"His heart took over. He has good blood pressure," Bietz said.

The surviving girl was identified as Brinton Clark, 15, of Portland.

"She looks reasonably well at this point in time," said Dr. William Long, head of the trauma program at Emanuel Hospital, where the girl was said to be in the better shape of the two survivors.

"She's combative and we are very, very optimistic that she'll recover," said Dr. Clark Chipman, chief of the emergency department. He said the girl's temperature was almost back to normal, and Long said she could be out of the hospital in a week if there are no complications.

He said doctors had taken a urine sample from her, an excellent sign since kidney damage had been feared.

Neither appeared to have suffered brain damage, but Long said the girl probably won't recall anything of her ordeal.

Tornadoes sweep through five states

Associated Press

Paramedics, police and firefighters scoured through wrecked communities in Missouri today, one of five states hit by tornadoes and high winds that killed one man, destroyed an apartment building and hammered barns and homes, leaving dozens homeless, authorities said.

The twisters Thursday night downed power and phone lines in towns in Indiana, Illinois, Missouri, Michigan and Ohio.

In Missouri, the twisters brought widespread damage to six counties.

Scott County Sheriff Bill Ferrell said the most extensive damage appeared to be in a mobile home park and business area in the southern and eastern sections of Sikeston, and in Vanduser, a town of 320 people about 10 miles to the northwest.

The east side of Vanduser was "just about wiped out," Ferrell said, and an elderly man there was killed. The victim's name was being withheld pending notification of relatives.

Ferrell said more than 100 homes and many businesses appeared to have been damaged and about 30 people in Vanduser suffered cuts and bruises. At least two required hospitalization, he said.

The tornado caused extensive damage and numerous injuries in Sikeston, a city of 17,000, authorities said.

Hospital officials in Sikeston were asking hospitals in Cape Girardeau to send blood, said Martha Vandivort, an emergency preparedness official. Authorities in Cape Girardeau reported that many roads in the town were under water because of flooding caused by the storms.

Twisters also caused damage in Miner, a small town just east of Sikeston, and in Coldwater, about 35 miles to the northwest in Wayne County.

In Evansville, Ind., 26 residents of the Shamrock Apartments were taken to an emergency shelter after a twister smashed into their building.

"I was trying to look for the funnel cloud coming, and then it just hit the building and that was the end," said resident Dora Simpson.

Michael Roe, 22, who saw the tornado as it struck, said, "It started moving in a circle, with all the dust and debris in the center, just like in 'The Wizard of Oz.'"

As violent thunderstorms hammered southwest Indiana, amateur radio operators and state police reported several tornadoes in and around Evansville, and a couple of twisters in Washington in Daviess County nearly 40 miles to the north, said Craig Carpenter of the National Weather Service.

Three adults and a 22-month child suffered minor injuries when a tornado ripped through Point Township in Posey County, destroying several mobile homes, said county jailor Gene Pate. The injured were taken to an Evansville hospital.

Boys 'happy' after kidnappers abandon them in Juarez

By DORALISA PILARTE

EL PASO (AP) — Two young boys, "dirty but happy," were recovered unharmed in Mexico after being kidnapped from their home by gun-wielding men who gave up trying to collect an estimated $500,000 ransom, the FBI said.

Ben Bohannon, 4, and his 2-year-old brother, Matt, were found shortly before 8 p.m. MDT Thursday inside a blue Ford parked on a street corner in Ciudad Juarez, just across the Rio Grande from this border city, said FBI spokesman Gary Webb.

No ransom was paid and no arrests had been made, but the FBI was continuing the investigation, he said.

The boys are the only children of Tom and Susan Bohannon, owners of Bohannon Development Corp. Mrs. Bohannon is the daughter of Charles H. Foster, a wealthy El Paso builder and contractor.

Webb said the children apparently had been taken to Juarez after the Tuesday morning abduction from their home in an exclusive El Paso neighborhood. The kidnappers, brandishing .38-caliber handguns, burst into the house, handcuffed the maid and left a note warning the family not to contact authorities.

They were unsure whether the kidnappers, described as Hispanic males, had used a blue pickup truck with Chihuahua, Mexico, license plates as a getaway vehicle.

The family received several calls in the following days with instructions.

Although the FBI declined to reveal the amount of ransom demanded, Webb said $500,000 was "in the ballpark."

"At about 7:25 p.m. (MDT Thursday), they received another call from the kidnappers and, basically, what the kidnappers said is, 'We give up, there's more of you than there's of us. You can have your kids. They'll be at this intersection. Don't leave your kids there,'" Webb said. "The kids were dirty but happy."

Webb speculated that the kidnappers may have been discouraged by the presence of agents from the Direccion General de Investigaciones, a Mexican federal agency whose duties include kidnapping investigations. The Mexican agents "aren't that hard to spot and don't play around," Webb said.

The FBI usually does not become involved in kidnappings for 24 hours after they occur, but since there was a strong suspicion that the children had been taken into Mexico, the FBI joined the investigation immediately, he added.

A call to the family Tuesday night instructed them to "Get the police and the press out of there," Webb said.

"The kidnappers said that if authorities were contacted, the two kids would die on the spot, no questions asked," Webb said.

Wednesday night, Bohannon checked into a motel with three FBI agents, one of whom posed as his brother-in-law, Webb said. The kidnappers called Bohannon at the motel and let his son, Ben, speak to him briefly.

Man arrested in marijuana probe

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — Seven law enforcement agencies brought a three-month undercover drug investigation to an end early Thursday night with the arrest of an Odessa man and the seizure of about 80 pounds of marijuana.

The arrest of the suspect took place near the intersection of West Murphy Street and Bankhead Avenue, south of the Missouri Pacific Railroad tracks about 6:28 p.m.

Agents from the FBI, Drug Enforcement Agency, U.S. Customs Service, the Internal Revenue Service, Odessa Police Department, Ector County Sheriff's Office and the Texas Department of Public Safety arrested the suspect and seized 22 pounds of a substance believed to be marijuana.

Federal agents took custody of the suspect and he was transported to the Midland City Jail to await arraignment today on a charge of possession of marijuana with intent to distribute.

According to an Odessa police spokesman, agents armed with a federal search warrant raided a residence in the 6500 McCoy in far West Odessa and seized 58 pounds of a substance believed to be marijuana. Agents also confiscated three rifles, a vehicle that had the vehicle identification number plate removed and other items of evidence. The vehicle seized had false diesel tank, he said.

According to Odessa police, information supplied by a Crime Stoppers informant was instrumental in bringing the investigation to a conclusion.

Sri Lanka crisis is escalating

COLOMBO, Sri Lanka (AP) — With peace efforts at a standstill, a military struggle between the government and Tamil separatist guerrillas is reaching a more dangerous and critical stage on this island republic famous for its tea and spices.

Officials say an all-out army assault on the rebels is an imminent possibility following two terrorist bombings here in the capital and bloody clashes between rival Tamil guerrillas in the north, where a Marxist faction seeks to gain full control.

A bomb planted by Tamil guerrillas exploded May 3 on an airliner at Colombo airport, killing 16 people, mostly foreign tourists, and wounding 40 others.

Four days later, another bomb exploded in the main telecommunications complex in the heart of Colombo, killing 13 people and wounding 140 others. A Tamil group claimed responsibility and vowed to bomb more civilian targets unless security forces stop what it called the killing of innocent Tamils in the east.

About the same time, the Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam, the Marxist faction, virtually wiped out its more moderate rival, the Tamil Eelam Liberation Organization, in a systematic bloodletting that claimed 200 to 300 lives.

The Tigers now are reported planning an offensive to eliminate lesser rivals in an effort to take control of the northern movement.

The separatists are fighting to establish a Tamil homeland called Eelam in the north and east. Some Tamils demand substantial autonomy for the north and east with their merger into a new federal structure, but most seek greater Tamil political authority in over Tamil-speaking areas.

Tamils, who are Hindu, represent 18 percent of the island's 16 million people. The majority are Sinhalese-speaking Buddhists, and a tiny minority are Moslems.

The government has ruled out a merger of the north and east, but has said it would be willing to grant substantial autonomy to Tamils under the Sri Lankan constitution.

Senior government officials in Colombo say the army would launch a major offensive against the Tigers if a new peace effort is not forthcoming and the situation continues to deteriorate.

"After the next attack on Colombo, you will see the army go on a fullscale offensive operation," said a senior official who is close to foreign policy and national security circles.

"We expect more attacks any time now. If they strike in the south around Colombo, we will deal them a devastating blow in the north."

Mexico denies corruption charges

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Government officials responded strongly Wednesday to charges from Washington that corruption here fuels narcotics trafficking, but said U.S.-Mexican cooperation against the drug trade would not be affected.

"We emphatically reject this type of expressions which, of course, lack basis," federal Attorney General Sergio Garcia Ramirez told reporters in his first direct response to the allegations made at a U.S. Senate subcommittee's hearing in Washington.

He said, however, that "a vigorous friendship is not going to deteriorate among the many, many I emphasize, men of good will of both countries and between the governments of both countries who work united against common adversaries."

Garcia Ramirez said the statements in Washington were products of "ignorance or of malice."

WORLD

Terrorism spurs airline dismissals

LONDON (AP) — British Caledonian Airways said Thursday it was laying off 1,000 workers because Americans afraid of terrorist attacks are staying away from Europe. But Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher said Americans' fears are exaggerated.

"We are doing everything possible to make them (Americans) realize Britain is a safer country than almost any you will find in Europe," Mrs. Thatcher told the House of Commons.

British Caledonian, the country's largest privately owned airline, said advance bookings by Americans had slumped 40 percent, forcing it to lay off 1,000 of its 7,750 employees.

The airline, which has 35 flights a week between London and five U.S. cities, said it lost nearly $6.2 million in the two weeks after the April 15 U.S. bombing raid on Libya.

It said it expected to lose $23 million more through American cancellations this summer. Trans-Atlantic flights accounted for one-third of British Caledonian's 2.3 million passengers last year.

On Wednesday, the U.S. Travel Data Center, a Washington-based private organization, said about 1.8 million Americans have dropped or changed foreign travel plans because of terrorism fears.

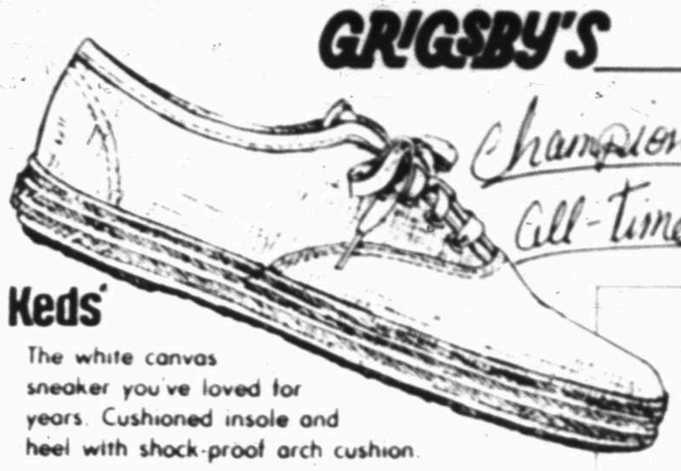

The state-funded British Tourist Authority, trying to stem cancellations by American visitors, announced a new $1.5 million promotion in the United States with the slogan, "Britain Speaks Your Language."

At a news conference announcing the promotion, authority executives hinted the slogan was in part a subtle reminder that Britain alone gave direct support for the U.S. raid on Libya, which the Reagan administration said was retaliation for Libyan involvement in terrorist attacks on Americans.

The raids were followed by a rash of cancellations by American travelers fearing retaliatory strikes by Libya.

Don Ford, head of the Tourist Authority's American operations, said the new promotion campaign — unlike Mrs. Thatcher's exhortations — will make no mention of security because of the fear-provoking implications.

Doctor indicates Chernobyl mishap has claimed 13

MOSCOW (AP) — An American doctor treating victims of the Chernobyl nuclear accident indicated today that the death toll has reached 13. One Soviet newspaper said five were firefighters who braved fierce radiation to battle flames engulfing the nuclear reactor.

Dr. Robert Gale, who left Moscow shortly after giving interviews to U.S. television correspondents, told ABC-TV's "Good Morning America" and the Cable News Network that only 24 of the 35 people previously listed in grave condition still were alive.

He declined to say when the latest deaths occurred. Gale told a news conference Thursday that 28 of the 35 most seriously injured were alive, adding more deaths were inevitable.

Reports in three different Soviet newspapers today identified eight people who died after the nuclear accident. Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev on Wednesday identified by name two other men who were killed in the initial explosion and fire April 26 at the nuclear power plant 80 miles north of Kiev.

"We are unfortunately having deaths on a continuing basis, although nothing happened in the last day," Gale said in the interview with CNN.

He told ABC the current death toll "may be reasonably stable, but there may be some additional deaths. We have good results in about two-thirds of the patients."

Gale has said 299 radiation victims had been hospitalized.

The doctor, a specialist in bone marrow transplants from the University of California at Los Angeles, heads a team of foreign experts who have been helping the Soviets treat the victims. Bone marrow is destroyed by intense radioactivity, and death can result.

The Communist Party daily Pravda today described the grief felt by plant workers on hearing that one of their comrades had died of his injuries.

"For a long time, we cannot begin the conversation," Pravda's correspondents wrote. "Just a few minutes ago, word arrived that Lelechenko had died. Burns and radiation did their work. Lelechenko was their friend."

Pravda said the dead worker's friends hailed him as "a real hero" who was at the nuclear plant in the first hours after an explosion ripped apart the No. 4 reactor, spewing radioactivity and sparking a fire.

The Communist youth newspaper Komsomolskaya Pravda praised the firemen who battled the flames, which took more than 50 firefighting teams about four hours to control.

It focused on Viktor Kibenok, 23, saying he fought the flames for up to three hours heedless of the danger from radiation, which it called the "invisible enemy."

Komsomolskaya Pravda said Kibenok died of burns and radiation 15 days after the accident, and identified four other firemen who also had died.

The Moscow daily Moskovskaya Pravda published a dispatch from the official Tass news agency that said Alexander Akimov, a shift leader at the No. 4 reactor, and Anatoly Kurguze, an operator, also died of burns and radiation after the accident.

In addition to the eight named in today's reports, Gorbachev identified by name two other men who apparently died in the explosion.

Also today, a Soviet environment specialist said radiation in Kiev was measured at 0.15 to 0.2 milliroentgens per hour, within the normal range. Nikolai Kozlov, deputy chief of the State Committee on Weather and Environment, said he had no information on the accident's effects on agriculture, and asserted there has been no contamination of water supplies.

A milliroentgen is a thousandth of a roentgen, the unit used to measure ionizing radiation. Scientists say exposure to 50 or more roentgens in a year can be dangerous.

Gorbachev met Thursday at the Kremlin with Gale and U.S. industrialist Armand Hammer, who arranged for Gale and the other foreign doctors to come to Moscow. He thanked them for their services but also used the occasion to criticize the attitude taken by the Reagan administration.

Gorbachev told the Americans the Soviet people viewed their deeds "as an example of how relations between the two great peoples should be built if there are political wisdow and will in the leadership of both countries."

But he added, "The conduct of the Washington officialdom in these difficult days, however, is deeply disappointing: It is shameful speculation on the accident and gross attempts to exploit it to discredit the entire policy of the Soviet Union and to sow mistrust towards its peace initiatives."

His remarks were carried by the official Soviet news agency Tass. He did not give examples of the behavior he was criticizing.

Western governments, including the United States, have complained Moscow was slow in releasing information about the nuclear accident, which officials of the Vienna-based International Atomic Energy Agency have called the worst in history.

The Soviets have accused the West of using the disaster for propaganda purposes, including trying to damage the Soviets' reputation as reliable partners in arms control. In addition, they say Western media reported wild speculation about the accident and its consequences.

Gorbachev said superpower relations "worsened still more as a result of a vicious anti-Soviet campaign launched by Washington in connection with the accident in Chernobyl."

Tass said that at the initiative of Hammer, the chairman of Occidental Petroleum Corp. whose ties to the Soviets extend to the days of Lenin, the subject of a summit meeting this year between Gorbachev and President Reagan was discussed.

The report said Gorbachev confirmed "his consent in principle to a new meeting and repeated that two simple things are needed for its holding: the readiness for it bringing a tangible practical result if only in one or two matters agitating the whole world, and an appropriate political atmosphere."

The Tass report did not spell out what results the Soviets seek, but they have said many times before that they want progress in arms control.

Snow cave can be life-saver in storm

By MALCOLM RITTER
AP Science Writer

NEW YORK — For a mountain climber trapped in a blizzard, snow may seem to be the enemy.

But digging a cave into a mass of snow can be a life-saver.

"The main thing, if you're stuck on the mountain, is to get out of the elements," said Mark Forbes, emergency services coordinator with the Seattle regional office of the National Park Service.

With a properly constructed cave, "if you've got the proper gear, the warm clothing for yourself, you can survive all winter," Forbes said Thursday.

"The environment in the snow cave is rarely below freezing, at least not very much below freezing, and it gets you out of wind," said David McClure, board member of the Portland Mountain Rescue in Oregon and base operations chief for part of the effort to rescue eight climbers on Mount Hood.

If several people stay in a small snow cave, their body heat can raise the temperature inside into the 60s, he said.

The entrance of a snow cave should face away from the wind, and it should be blocked with a pack or chunk of snow to keep out the draft, the two men said in telephone interviews. Ventilation should be provided in the ceiling.

If a climber plans to use a cave for two or three days, it can be built with such features as an entrance tunnel that rises into the living area, to trap warm air in that area, Forbes said.

In an emergency, a climber should keep the cave small — not much bigger than what he needs to sit or lie in it — so that he avoids exhaustion in making it, McClure said. A small interior also minimizes the loss of body heat drawn off to warm the inside air.

Another emergency shelter is a trench in snow, covered with a tarpaulin and plugged at both ends, he said. 'Something as rudimentary as that has saved a lot of lives. You've got to get out of the wind, that's the issue."

Climbers often carry a shovel, but in areas where snow is hard and icy, they may need a saw, he said. To signal rescuers, climbers can leave colored material outside the cave where it can be easily seen.

Inside, "you're not going to hear people shouting at you very easily," he said. "You can have a raging storm and you won't hear it."

McClure and Forbes said wool and some synthetics are good clothing choices for cold-weather mountain survival.

But cotton is dangerous when wet. "Your body is trying to keep that moisture warm, and the air outside is trying to make it cold," said Forbes. "So you're losing valuable body heat."

Climbers should carry foods that deliver energy to the body over a period of hours, such as bananas, oranges and apples, McClure said. Before setting out, they can eat foods like spaghetti, rice, baked potatoes or pancakes.

And if they get lost or caught in a snowstorm and think rescuers might look for them, "the best thing to do is stay put," Forbes said.

Rescuers recall finding victims

By BOB BAUM

TIMBERLINE LODGE, Ore. (AP) — "I looked down there and I could see people. I could hear moaning and groaning."

"We shouted that they were alive."

Master Sgt. Charlie Ek, 37, Thursday night recalled the moment that he broke through to the ice cave in which six teen-agers and two adults had taken refuge high on Mount Hood since Monday night.

"We felt pretty dang excited," said another rescuer, Sgt. Richard Harder, who like Ek is a member of the Air Force Reserve 304th Air Rescue and Recovery Squadron. "It was great; it felt really great."

Ek said he was using a long pole to probe the snow when "I hit a pack. That was the first sign that we had found something. I called for a shovel and started digging."

The crew found several packs and as Ek was digging for one of them, he broke through into the cave. The eight people "were just piled up really close together," he said.

Two were conscious and "they'd react when you'd touch them. We talked to them constantly," Ek said.

Harder said in an interview on the NBC "Today" show that rescuers worked methodically and carefully after they found the eight.

"Once we found them, ...we got all the extra medical equipment and just took things slow and easy, got them hooked up to the cardiac monitor, conversed with the physician by radio on these medical conditions and slowly took the individuals out of the cave," he said.

"The people were so cold if we placed the thermometer in their mouths, they might have broken it with their jaws," he said. "So, we just took their external temperatures by their signs and symptoms."

Hospital officials later pronounced six of the eight dead.

Russ Williams, spokesman for the Clackamas County Sheriff's Department, said at a news conference that the cave was found about 5:20 p.m. at about the 8,300-foot level of the 11,235-foot peak.

The eight in the cave had been among 13 people from Portland's Oregon Episcopal School who were lost in a blizzard Monday while climbing Mount Hood. All took refuge in the cave Monday night and two walked to safety Tuesday.

Two girls and a boy were found dead on the mountain Wednesday. Williams said the cave was only about five feet from where one of those three was found.

Ralph Summers, professional guide hired by the school to lead the ill-fated climbing party, said all might have made it down safely except that they were slowed by one boy who was suffering from hypothermia.

He said he determined Tuesday morning that "we couldn't stay in that cave forever. We were damp from being inside. I knew I just had to walk out."

He said Molly Schula, 17, volunteered to walk out with him to seek help. He said he told the others to stay put until they were rescued.

RESIGN

The call for the police chief and city attorney to resign follows a three-hour closed door meeting of the City Council Monday in which all city directors were evaluated. Boyd was excluded from the meeting.

Boyd said he asked for the resignations on unanimous advice from councilmen, but he said he was not told why the resignations were sought.

Councilman Gary Don Carey said Councilmen Russ McEwen and Johnny Rutherford and Mayor Cotton Mize argued most strongly for Turner's dismissal.

The three felt Turner was becoming "volatile" politically and "public opinion was against him," Carey said. He said if changes were to be made "now was the time to do it."

Removing Curtis was strictly economic, Carey said of his decision. The council, he said, is looking to eliminate that position because with fewer citizens in Big Spring, it may be more cost effective to retain an attorney on an as-needed basis.

RESCUE

"Perhaps nature is kind that way," he said. "I would be amazed if she remembered anything."

This morning, Dr. Ben Bachulis, chief of surgery at Emanuel, said in an interview on ABC's "Good Morning America" that Miss Clark "is fairly stable at this time.... She is coming along in a satisfactory manner."

He said "it was really quite surprising" that her body temperature when she entered the hospital, about 73 degrees, was so much higher than that of the three students brought to the hospital the day before, who all died. Their temperatures were about 42 degrees, he said.

Deputy Sheriff Mike Hattan said the rescue team "was very elated and so were the ground personnel."

"We've never given up hope," he said in an interview on "Good Morning America."

The teen-age climbers were all students at the Oregon Episcopal School who began climbing Mount Hood, 50 miles east of Portland, with three adults in the annual sophomore class wilderness outing.

The dead found Thursday were identified as the Rev. Thomas Goman, 42, a math and religion teacher described as an expert climber; Marion Horwell, 39, dean of students; Richard Haeder, 16; Pat McGinness, 15; Susan McClave, 17; and Tasha Amy, 15, all of Portland.

The three found Wednesday were identified as Eric Sandvik, Erin O'Leary and Alison Litzenberger. All were 15 and from Portland.

STORMS

Another tornado touched down in the Posey County community of St. Phillips, causing an estimated $3.5 million in property damage, Pate said.

The storm also tore the roof off one home and blew down several trees in Blairsville, Pate said.

In Illinois, tornadoes hit in several counties, causing damage but no serious injuries, authorities said.

Maurice Johnson, chief of police in Charleston, said perhaps a dozen homes were damaged by a tornado that touched down Thursday night.

In northern Illinois, a tornado touched down twice near Dixon, slightly injuring a farmer and destroying two barns and roof, officials said.

"It came right down out of nowhere," said Lee County Civil Defense Director Chuck Randall. "We didn't even have any severe thunderstorm warnings at the time, let alone a tornado watch. It was raining, but that was all."

Farmer James Carrington, 57, suffered facial cuts from flying debris, said a nursing supervisor at Katherine Shaw Bethea Hospital. He was treated and released.

POLICE

According to the consultants, reducing the staff by 28 officers and four civilians could save $1.2 million per year, while re-organizing department operations could provide better service with fewer employees.

Gideon criticized the report as an indictment of "a model agency."

"There's a couple of pretty good ideas in there, but I have many disagreements with it," said Gideon, whose resignation from his $54,000 job becomes effective June 30.

Gideon said the report's allegations about the department deliberately inflating its crime-clearance statistics "are not true — and we can prove that."

The report also said the department is not making full use of its computers, but according to Gideon, "We're still building the system. The modules (referred to by the consultants) aren't in it."

Gideon, 51, joined the department 30 years ago, and became chief in February 1976.

"I've thoroughly enjoyed my association with the Police Department and the citizens of this community, and thank them for their support," he said.

"I certainly hope (the consultant's) plan works — I really do," he said.

Police Department sources indicate other senior officers may be considering retirement, but many are reportedly waiting for a favorable decision from the city on what kind of insurance benefits would apply to them.

"There's been no decision," Brown said this morning.

Waldheim rejects massacre claims

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — Kurt Waldheim said he verified field reports as a German army officer during World War II, but rejected claims that he was involved in massacres of Yugoslav partisans and civilians.

"I haven't seen this new document which the World Jewish Congress has presented, but those allegations are certainly not correct," he said Wednesday night.

"I wasn't involved in any partisan activities. I haven't even seen a partisan, as I said repeatedly," the former U.N. secretary general who is running for president told reporters during a campaign stop.

Waldheim, who served in German Army Group E in the Balkans, has acknowledged that he knew of reprisals against partisans, but has consistently denied involvement in them. Gen. Alexander Loehr, the unit's commander, was executed for war crimes.

World Jewish Congress officials said Wednesday that 114 people were killed in the Macedonian villages of Krupiste, Gorni Balvan and Dolnyi Balvan on Oct. 14, 1944, two days after Waldheim signed reports on activities by "bandits," the German army term for partisans, in the region.

"These (were) reports which were made under the name of the commander, and all I did was to sign for the correctness of the reports, which came in from the subordinated units — divisions, regiments, for instance," Waldheim said.

"It's just another effort of the Jewish Congress to vilify me," he said.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Woman guilty of treason

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — A Belgian woman was convicted of high treason by a South African court Thursday for assisting African National Congress guerrillas in their fight against minority white rule here.

Helene Passtoors, 44, the first foreigner convicted of treason in a South African court since the Anglo-Boer War more than 80 years ago, now faces a possible death sentence for what she described as "a general human duty to fight against racism and fascism."

Although denying that she was a "card-carrying" member of the African National Congress, Passtoors admitted that she sympathized with the aims of the outlawed group for "a democratic, just and nonracial South Africa" and had cooperated with members of the organization both before and after coming here 15 months ago. She had nevertheless pleaded innocent to the charges of treason and terrorism.

Justice Tjibbe Spoelstra, in convicting Passtoors of treason, ruled that even the six-month student visa she held to study linguistics here meant that "she owed allegiance to the republic (of South Africa) and could commit treason against it," although she had been here only four months before her arrest last June and is a Belgian citizen.

Earthquake hits Athens

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — A moderate earthquake early Wednesday caused hundreds of people in the capital's eastern suburbs to flee their homes in panic, but police said they had no reports of damage or casualties.

The Athens Seismological Institute said the quake measured 4.2 on the Richter scale. The institute said it occurred at 4:30 a.m. and was centered in the Aegean seabed 18 miles northeast of Athens between the towns of Rafina and Nea Makri.

"We were frightened and went outside for the rest of the night," said Soula Mathioudaki of the Athens suburb of Pendeli.

The Richter scale is a gauge of the energy released during an earthquake as measured by the ground motion recorded on a seismograph. A quake measuring 4 on the scale can cause moderate damage.

Monks, nuns take vows

PEKING (AP) — Buddhist monks and nuns took vows in record numbers this month at a 1,500-year-old temple in Nanking, the official news agency said today. It was the largest such ceremony in 37 years of communist rule.

In an elaborate ritual, 518 monks and nuns from throughout China, Hong Kong and Singapore had their heads shaven in a tonsure ceremony intended to show their devotion to Buddhism.

The Xinhua news agency said the ceremony took place May 3-15 at Qixia Temple, which also runs a Buddhist college.

The government is permitting a limited revival of Buddhism, Islam and Christianity, following the 1966-76 Cultural Revolution when all worship was banned.

An estimated 2 percent to 3 percent of China's 1.05 billion people practice religion.

We couldn't have said it better

The New York Times, April 28, 1986

An Everybody-Wins Natural Gas Bill

The world is awash in cheap energy. Who cares if the natural gas industry remains under Federal price regulation?

The Reagan Administration does, and so should everyone who worries about the long-term consequences of dependence on imported fuel. The collapse in oil prices offers a painless opportunity to jettison regulations that both inhibit gas production and encourage waste. The Administration's new deregulation bill deserves support.

Under the policy set by Congress in the late 1970's, both the supply and demand for natural gas are controlled by Government. To limit windfall profits, ceiling prices are set according to the year gas was discovered and the difficulty of extracting it. Electric utilities are barred from purchasing gas if substitute fuels are available. Industrial users must pay more than residential consumers.

This policy was intended to fine-tune the market, offering incentives for new production and reserving cheaper existing supplies for residential consumers. But the result is a crazy quilt of winners and losers. Pipelines with large amounts of cheap "old" gas bid up the price of "new" gas to uncompetitive levels, and then average the two in setting prices for consumers. Industrial users, permitted to buy only costly "new" gas, get a powerful incentive to switch to imported oil.

Until recently, opponents of deregulation could claim that this hybrid system at least lowered the average cost of gas to residential consumers. Today, even that argument fails. Unable to hang on to their industrial customers, pipelines have had to shuffle much of their high-priced gas into their captive market for home heating. And since the loss of industrial customers cut total sales of gas, pipelines have been forced to raise the transport charges they tack onto the residential price.

The Administration now proposes to untangle the regulations. Courts would still enforce existing contracts unless both buyers and sellers agree to changes. But the Government would no longer have a direct say in the price at which gas changes hands, or the uses to which it is put.

To facilitate competition, gas pipelines would be required to transport gas for a reasonable price to anyone who asked. Thus a power plant or local gas distributor in Ohio could search for the cheapest gas in Oklahoma, secure in the knowledge that a pipeline would make room to ship it north.

The Administration offers good evidence that open competition would lower average prices at the burner tip by 5 to 10 percent over the next decade. Competitive pricing for "old" gas, moreover, would create incentives to extract more than $50 billion of fuel from fields that would go to waste unless they became more profitable.

A big price reduction in the cost of gas would rapidly wean industrial users back from imported oil, reducing imports by about 5 percent and reducing the trade deficit by billions a year. In all, it's a sound proposal in everyone's best interest.

Then why has the bill foundered? Partly because Congress remembers the prolonged battle over gas deregulation in the Carter Administration, and is loath to risk another. But mostly the reason is that there's little public pressure for change and little glory to be won for reformers. The circumstances that would generate such pressure — a sudden energy shortage, for example — would also make reform very difficult. If deregulation is going to happen, it needs to happen now.

House approves budget; defense cuts

NATION

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite dire warnings from the White House, Congress appears ready to pass a budget that would cut more than $20 billion from President Reagan's military spending request.

The House on Thursday approved on a nearly party-line vote, 245-179, a $994 billion fiscal 1987 budget that slashes $35 billion from Reagan's proposed $320 billion Pentagon spending plan. It would also raise taxes $7.3 billion above the president's request.

"It's a recipe for economic disaster and a military setback that could have serious consequences," said Larry Speakes, Reagan's spokesman.

Democrats pushed through the spending plan despite a last-minute appeal from the president, who sent a warning letter read during debate by Minority Leader Robert H. Michel, R-Ill.

"The accomplishments of the past five years are now in jeopardy because of the defense reductions being considered in Congress," said Reagan, calling it "a radical anti-defense budget."

The consequences would range from eliminating an entire division from the Army to cutting an entire aircraft carrier battle group, constituting "nothing less than a breach of faith with our common duty to protect this nation," the letter said.

Rep. Delbert L. Latta of Ohio, ranking Republican on the House Budget Committee, said the appeal "was a little bit late in coming. Bob Michel was our last speaker."

But Rep. Mike Lowry, D-Wash., said Congress just couldn't take those warnings to heart.

"Really, there can't be very many people in this country that look at the fact we had a $145 billion defense budget in 1981, and look at the number we have in this one, and not think we have adequate money," he said.

Michel and Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., said they would push to increase the military spending figure when the budget blueprint goes to a House-Senate conference committee.

"Let's hope the ... conferees discard these bogus defense numbers quickly, so they can agree upon a realistic and responsible national security budget," Dole said.

But it appears Republicans aren't ready to support a figure close to the president's mark, since a tax hike or more domestic spending cuts would be needed to meet the $144 billion legal ceiling on the deficit.

It's possible the conferees could begin work next week, but work almost certainly would not be completed until after the Memorial Day recess.

A GOP alternative defeated Thursday on the House floor, described by Michel as a party consensus, would have cut the military budget to $293 billion. Two weeks ago the Republican-controlled Senate passed a budget with $301 billion in military spending.

Several members said they expected the final compromise to be near the House Republicans' figure.

Rep. William H. Gray, D-Pa., chairman of the budget committee, said he was eager to start negotiations with the Senate on a final budget.

Gray said he believed there was a bipartisan consensus in Congress to get a budget as quickly as possible. He and other Democratic leaders have said they expect a compromise on the military spending figure, and they called on Reagan to negotiate seriously with Congress.

"The president must realize that he will not get his way on defense and foreign aid without participating in a balanced approach (to deficit reduction) which includes revenues," said Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., chairman of the tax-writing Ways and Means Committee.

Democratic leaders, however, are themselves hesitating on the tax increase first passed by the Senate. They say it won't be enacted into law without Reagan's support.

House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., emphasized to reporters that the House won't pass the tax boost envisioned in the budget if Reagan could sign it and then claim he was forced into it by Democrats.

"He has to embrace it, that's right," O'Neill said. "Bipartisan support (in the Congress) is not enough."

The budget is a joint resolution of Congress that does not need presidential approval. However, it guides Congress in passing tax and spending bills that require the president's signature.

The House budget, because of the lower military spending figure, would meet the $144 billion deficit target of the Gramm-Rudman law without the additional taxes.

Gray said that would "put pressure on the Senate to make some changes," but that overall the two budgets were not far apart.

Both houses freeze or slightly cut most domestic programs, except for a few initiatives such as boosting the fight against drug imports, child nutrition programs and hiring more air traffic controllers.

The federal revenue sharing program would be eliminated by both budgets, and Social Security recipients and other federal retirees would get 2 percent cost-of-living increases.

Both budgets also cut back on Reagan's requested foreign aid budget, the House slightly more deeply than the Senate, despite protests from Secretary of State George Shultz.

Space shuttle to undergo expensive changes

WASHINGTON (AP) — NASA intends to make costly changes in the space shuttle's main engines, steering system and brakes as well as redesign the faulty booster rocket before permitting the orbiter to fly again next summer, agency officials say.

But the changes are not likely to include installation of a system that would permit crew members to escape emergencies such as the one that blew up the Challenger last Jan. 28.

Arnold Aldrich, a senior space shuttle official with the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, told reporters at a congressional hearing Thursday that while NASA engineers are studying designs for such a system, "I wouldn't conclude it would be successful."

Asked to estimate chances for including such an escape system on the three remaining shuttles, Aldrich replied, "slim."

The issue could become a contentious one in Congress, where some influential lawmakers have said they hope the agency can produce such a plan before the shuttle flies again. NASA Administrator James Fletcher was noncommittal when asked about it at a Senate subcommittee session.

"There's a lot of pros and cons," he said.

Aldrich made his comments during a break in testimony before a House space subcommittee, while in the Senate, the Appropriations Committee was taking the first congressional action toward providing funds to restore the shuttle to flight status.

The GOP-controlled Senate committee approved $526 million for shuttle redesign as part of a $3.9 billion omnibus spending bill covering a variety of government programs for the balance of the fiscal year. None of the money would be for construction of a replacement for the lost Challenger, a subject expected to be debated in Congress later in the year.

The measure now goes to the Senate floor.

Also on Thursday, a second-level advisory group met at the White House and, according to a source, recommended that the Reagan administration commit itself to adding a fourth orbiter to the fleet and that it develop a policy of transferring commercial payloads to the private sector for launching.

Fletcher and other NASA officials met with President Reagan and advisers from the National Security Council. White House spokesman Larry Speakes told reporters the president asked for more information on the budgetary impact of building a new orbiter and a fleet of one-use launch vehicles, but gave the officials no deadline to provide the information.

The $526 million inserted into the Senate bill was more than $100 million shy of the amount contained in a NASA outline of estimated repair costs. But Sen. Jake Garn, R-Utah, chairman of the appropriations subcommittee that oversees NASA, said it was sufficient for costs that will be incurred through the Sept. 30 end of the fiscal year.

The full NASA outline proposes $537 million for "corrective actions" in the shuttle. That amount includes $250 million for redesign, fabrication and testing of the solid fuel booster rocket whose malfunction caused the Challenger to explode 73 seconds after liftoff.

Lawmakers plead for ban on sale of plastic firearms

WASHINGTON (AP) — Proposed laws to ban plastic handguns, weapons that some lawmakers fear can be brought into the country undetected, are not needed and could hinder law enforcement officials, officials from the National Rifle Association and Treasury Department said.

Four New York congressmen on Thursday urged the House Judiciary crime subcommittee to approve legislation that would ban any non-metal handguns — also called "hijacker specials" — that the treasury secretary finds cannot be readily identified as firearms and detected by standard metal detectors, X-ray machines or other airport security equipment.

But their argument, which found support from the subcommittee chairman, Rep. William Hughes, D-N.J., was challenged.

The National Rifle Association and Phillip C. McGuire, associate director of the Treasury Department's Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms, disputed the assertion by Rep. Mario Biaggi, D-N.Y., that an Austrian-made plastic pistol can evade airport-type screening devices.

McGuire said existing laws are sufficient to bar the manufacture of all-plastic firearms.

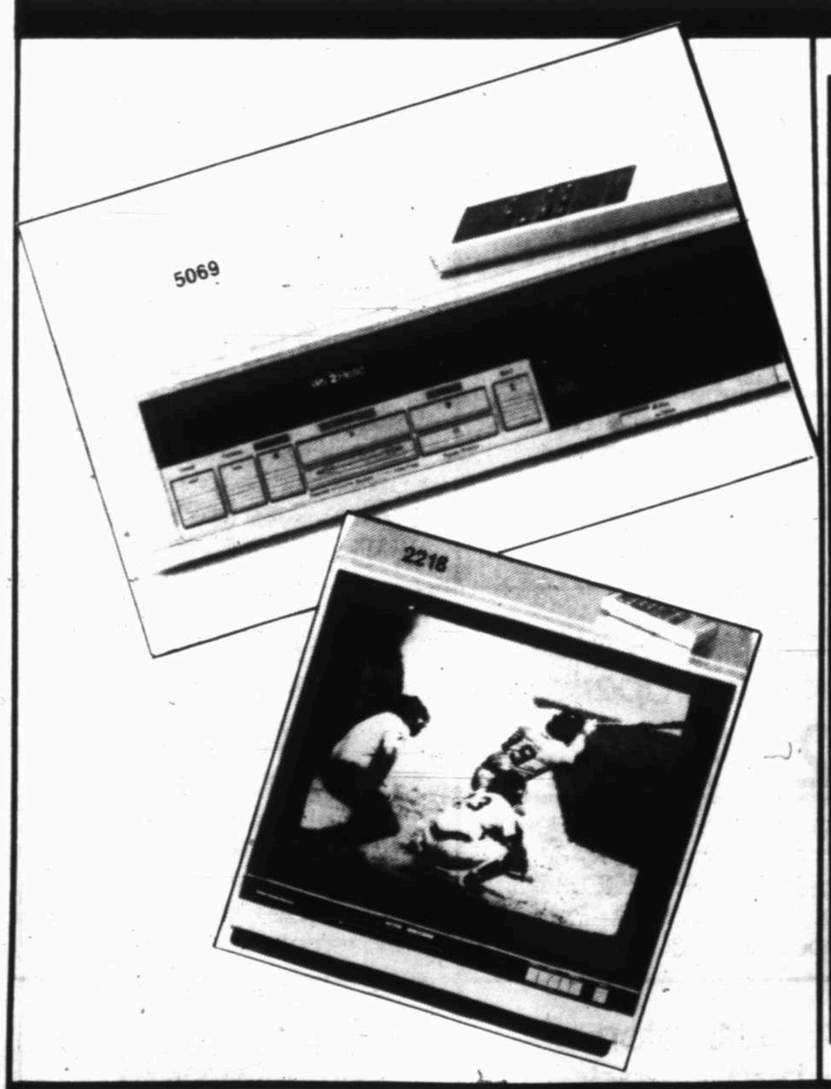

He said measures by Biaggi and Rep. Robert J. Mrazek, D-N.Y., were so broadly worded that they "could create serious problems, not for the terrorist, but for the legitimate firearms industry and for enforcers of the law."

McGuire and James Jay Baker, an NRA lobbyist, said it would be more effective to concentrate instead on improving airport security personnel and equipment.

DALLAS (AP) — Gilbert Huth Jr. envisioned success, both personal and financial, selling his 1986 Sesquicentennial commemorative product — a solid wood Texas flag holder.

But after his employer in Houston recently moved, putting him out of a full-time job, Huth said, "I'm not ahead of the game."

"I had been relying on my income from that job and counting on sales from the project to finance future manufacturing and advertising costs," said Huth, 43, who had worked as an assistant land agent for the Santa Fe Pacific Realty Co. before it moved to Dallas.

"Because I lost my job and sales have been slow, I can not afford to advertise," he said. "Eventually, I hope to make money out of it. Right now I'm in the red."

Huth is an investor in the hit-or-miss proposition of selling more than 800 promotional products for the state's sesquicentennial. For 189 official vendors licensed by the Sesquicentennial Commission, it has been either prosperity or a bust.

Sales and promotional experience in their favor, Ron and Susan Horowitz said they still had no "fancy" projections selling their official commemorative product — two decks of historical playing cards.

But the cards — each including a drawing and information about Texas people, places and events — are selling so well they're having difficulty keeping the items in stock.

"We're really doing well," said Mrs. Horowitz, who has worked "everything" from sales representative to retailer for Alief Products Company. "We honestly had no idea. We just came up with an idea we thought was neat."

"There are two ends of the spectrum," said Rebecca Richards of the commission's Products Marketing Department. "You'll have the belt buckle and boots because they're Texan. Then, the unsual or unique items — artsy things — will sell to Texans and tourists.

"Some of the big corporations are doing well and some of the smaller vendors are doing well, too," she said.

Based on the 1983 economy, officials estimated $10 million in royalties would be generated from the sale of the 800 products that carry the official Sesquicentennial emblem. The royalties support Sesquicentennial activities, tourism and the Commission on the Arts.

But officials recently said the profits have fallen short of the projections.

For the first quarter, an average 10 percent royalty on the sale each of product generated almost $246,000, commission executive director Patrick Terry said. An additional $71,000 came from corporate sponsorships.

For the Horowitzes, it was "just mainly having a product that sells."

"I had one teacher put it best," said Mrs. Horowitz. "She said the whole Sesquicentennial should be for the kids, because they're the ones benefiting, the ones who'll be around in 50 years. For them, it's something interesting. They're having fun with it."

Blessing in disguise

Maybe, just maybe, the Chernobyl nuclear disaster in the Soviet Union will turn out to be a blessing in disguise.

Up to this point, reaction to the accident has been following the typical route of laying blame: American government officials and others, including the media, have blamed the Soviets for failure to notify other nations quickly that a disaster had occurred. The Soviet leadership now is blaming local officials for failure to notify them of the accident. No doubt there's plenty of blame to go around or that much of it is directly tied to the secrective nature of Soviet society.

But enough of blame. Now is the time for constructive action to ensure — as far as possible, within the bounds of reason — that similar nuclear reactor meltdowns do not occur without the crucial information being broadcast immediately.

A couple of encouraging signs so far are the fact that the Soviets did accept a private offer for medical assistance in treating victims of the disaster and appear to be more willing now to release information concerning the disaster.

That isn't to say that the Chernobyl affair is going to result in the Soviet hierarchy doing a flip-flop in how it handles information about internal affairs. That isn't realistic when one considers that nation's historical suspicion of public knowledge and the resulting reactions of the masses. In that regard, the Russian people still constitute a state-controlled closed society.

But the fact that the disaster has offered a perfect opportunity for the Soviet leadership to see that public knowledge can be beneficial in certain instances might actually lead to a loosening in, at least, official communications in the future.

The other hope, of course, is for both Soviet and American officials to recognize to a greater degree that no nation on this planet is an island unto itself, particularly when technologies such as nuclear energy and weaponry are the topic. In a very real sense, technological advancement is rendering obsolete certain peculiarities of the world society, such as control of information.

Even the Berlin Wall with all its barbed wire and land mines can't hold back the progression of society.

Another View:

Digging into Deaver

A wondrous consistency of this variable world is Ronald Reagan's mind when it becomes fixed on an opinion. For example, the president refused for years to accept the notion that industrial pollution had anything to do with acid rain.

But a magical transformation occurred in March when the president embraced a U.S.-Canadian report calling for a $5 billion investment to reduce acid rain through the cleanup of electric power plant emissions.

Now, it seems, the shift may not have been magic, but the possible result of skillful maneuvering by Michael K. Deaver, the president's former deputy chief of staff.

The day Deaver left the White House last May he became one of Washington's most prominent lobbyists. At the rate of $105,000 a year, one of his clients was the government of Canada, frustrated by Reagan's refusal to join the fight against acid rain.

Deaver claims to know nothing about acid rain. That is difficult to accept when a General Accounting Office official says Deaver participated in at least 15 meetings on acid rain leading up to Reagan's March summit with Canadian Prime Minister Brian Mulroney. His interest in the subject followed him to the Canadian payroll, including attendance at a breakfast involving U.S. and Canadian discussions of the proposed report. The GAO says Deaver's activities on both sides of the fence appear to have violated at least three federal conflict-of-interest laws. Hinchman joined others, including Deaver, in calling for a complete, formal investigation.

Why Deaver's keenness on acid rain? A Deaver supporter says he was merely working to protect Reagan and to guarantee an amicable summit with Canada. That's possible. The GAO found no support for rumors that Deaver might have discussed a lobbying contract with Canada while still in the White House. But rumors will persist.

Deaver's work for Canada so soon after leaving the White House raises precisely the sorts of questions the ethics law was designed to prevent. Deaver insists he does not trade, as a lobbyist, on inside information gained while in the White House. Rather, his expertise is in how to "strategize" for people who want things done in Washington. That's another word for greasing the skids. And the law was designed to prevent that, too, in cases like Deaver's.

The Department of Justice should refer the matter to the courts with dispatch so that a special counsel may be appointed to determine if, as the president suggests with a wave of the hand, that the whole affair is "ridiculous."

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Friday, May 16, the 136th day of 1986. There are 229 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On May 16, 1929, the first Academy Awards were given out. The movie "Wings" won Best Picture. Emil Jannings was named Best Actor and Janet Gaynor Best Actress.

On this date:

In 1763, the English lexicographer, author and wit Samuel Johnson first met his future biographer, James Boswell.

In 1770, Marie Antoinette married King Louis XVI of France.

In 1866, Congress authorized minting of the nickel.

In 1868, the Senate failed by one vote to convict President Andrew Johnson as it took its first ballot on one of 11 articles of impeachment against him.

In 1920, Joan of Arc was canonized in Rome.

In 1960, a Big Four summit conference in Paris collapsed on its opening day as the Soviets leveled spy charges against the United States in the wake of the U-2 incident.

In 1976, Japanese climber Junko Tabei became the first woman to reach the summit of Mount Everest.

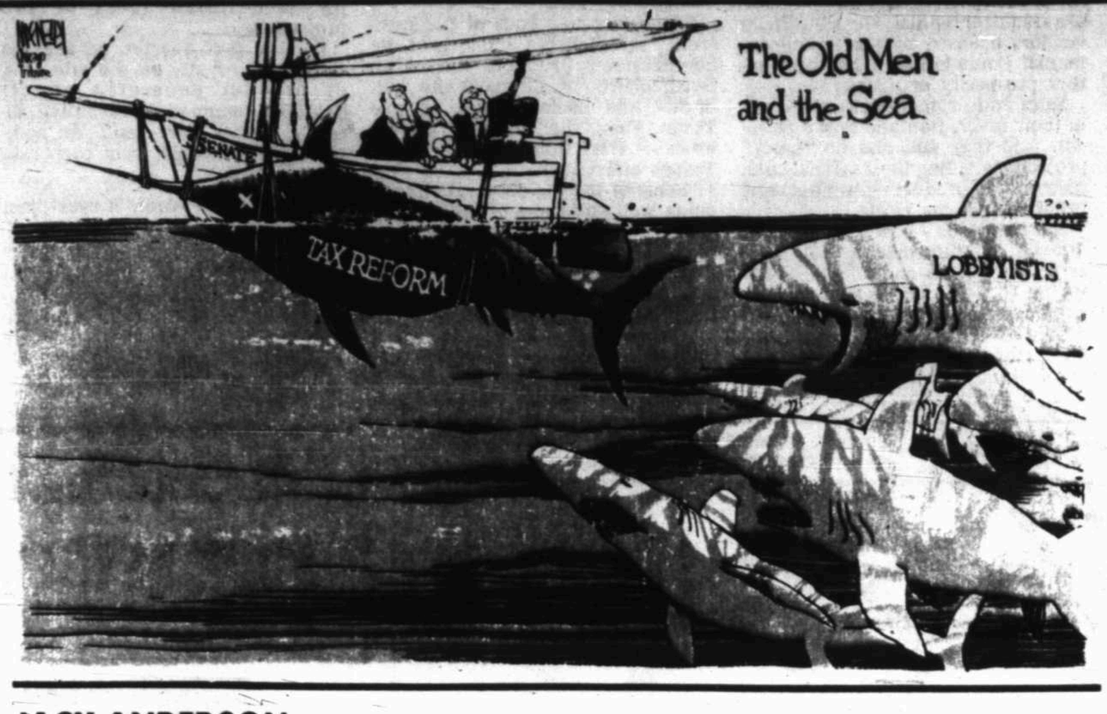

Ten years ago: Secretary of State Henry Kissinger told NBC interviewer Barbara Walters he preferred to leave his post, even if President Gerald Ford won the November election.

Five years ago: Pleasant Colony added the Preakness to his Kentucky Derby win and needed only a third jewel to become horse racing's 12th Triple Crown winner. The next month, though, the colt managed only a third-place finish in the Belmont Stakes.

One year ago: The Soviet Union announced new measures in a battle to curb alcoholism, including a cut in vodka production, tougher penalties for making home brew and raising the drinking age from 18 to 21.

Today's birthdays: Author Studs Terkel is 74. Bandleader Woody Herman is 73. Pianist Liberace is 67. Baseball manager Billy Martin is 58. Sen. Lowell Weicker, R-Conn. is 55. Singer-actress Lainie Kazan is 46. Actress Debra Winger is 31. Soviet gymnast Olga Korbut is 31.

Thought for today: "All that is not eternal is eternally out of date." — C.S. Lewis, English author (1898-1963).

JACK ANDERSON

Pentagon studying secret Soviets

WASHINGTON — They are the true mystery men of the Soviet Union — that riddle wrapped in a mystery inside an enigma. Only the few Kremlin officials who even know about their existence refer to them by their proper name: "Spetsnaz," or Special Purpose Forces.

Jack Anderson

Needless to say, the Soviet man on the street knows exactly "nitchevo" about the Spetsnaz. He has read no tales of their derring-do in far-off lands; he knows none of their names, though some could be classified as Soviet heroes.

A secret Pentagon report explains why the Spetsnaz have been kept a deep dark secret:

"Considering these units as clandestine assets and being an integral part of their intelligence and security organization, the Soviets have kept these units out of public scrutiny to a far greater degree than their conventional forces.

"Glorious descriptions of their achievements in training exercises are never published (and) there is no distinctive uniform or insignia identifying them. Instead, the usual uniform is that of the airborne forces, or in the case of naval (Spetsnaz) simply the standard navy uniform."

Because of this, it has taken Western intelligence services years to form even the murkiest picture of Spetsalnaya Naznacheniya. What Western analysts have determined is that the Spetsnaz are used for special missions at the behest of Soviet intelligence and security services.

Whether these special agents report to the GRU (military intelligence), the Red Army or some other Soviet agency, U.S. intelligence experts have decided that the KGB retains ultimate control and responsibility, under direct supervision of the Soviet Central Committee.

In addition, though, the KGB has its own Spetsnaz people, the most notorious of whom are the professional killers of Department Eight of the KGB's First Chief Directorate. Department Eight "has been connected with assassinations, kidnappings, sabotage and other direct action operations for decades," according to one Defense Intelligence Agency expert.

There are also the KGB troops on the Soviet Union's borders, numbering at least 250,000, who could be classified as special forces. And while the Pentagon and CIA experts may haggle over the fine points, they agree that certain units under the Ministry of Internal Affairs, which maintains Communist Party control, should count as Spetsnaz — like the Moscow-based pretorian guard known as the Dzerzhinsky First Motorized Rifle Division.

But the most dangerous Spetsnaz operatives are those who report to the Soviet military intelligence organization, which is the second largest spy outfit in the world (second only to the KGB).

In each Spetsnaz brigade, the career officers "are the most highly trained individuals and are fluent in one or more foreign languages," the Pentagon report states, adding: "Their primary mission is reported to be the assassination of enemy leadership."

Each brigade includes three reconnaissance and destruction battalions of some 30 teams of 10 men each, plus signal, engineer and medical units. Naval Spetsnaz units, though smaller, include paratroops, frogmen and mini-submarine forces.

"Evidence of the (Spetsnaz) being a growth industry is both recent and convincing," the secret Pentagon report warns. "This trend appears to extend to the non-Soviet Warsaw Pact Special Purpose Forces also. ... Collectively, these factors show the Spetsnaz threat to NATO's rear area is growing."

FREEDOM FIGHTER: Our associate Donald Goldberg hauled the State Department into court claiming its handling of his Freedom of Information Act request had been illegal. He wanted the results of questionnaires sent to American embassies, but the Foggy Bottom pettifoggers refused to waive the search and duplication fees, even though we clearly requested the information for publication purposes. Now a federal court in Washington has ruled that we were right, which means that reporters won't be charged an exorbitant fee for information the public has a right to know.

HOW'S THAT AGAIN?: Federal lawmen, and particularly FBI agents, are notorious among local police departments for their reluctance to share information in criminal investigations, insiders tell us. That would explain why a top intelligence official of the FBI was greeted with laughter at a recent closed-door meeting of state and local police brass, when he claimed the FBI is always very cooperative in sharing its information. Strangely, though, the police aren't willing to put their derision in writing: A recent Justice Department poll showed that most local police officials rated the FBI's cooperation as at least "satisfactory."

MINI-EDITORIAL: The more we learn about the tragedy at Chernobyl, the less we understand the Soviet government's refusal to admit the extent of the disaster and ask for our help. History — which the Soviets profess to revere — shows that the West, and especially the United States, has always been willing to respond when misfortune strikes the Soviet Union, whether it be famine in the 1920s or Nazi invasion in the 1940s. A few twisted, professional anti-communists might gloat obscenely over the catastrophe, but most Americans would be happy to give help — if the Soviets would accept it. This is no time for paranoia and perverse pride.

Reagan placed his imprint on Fed

WASHINGTON — The White House decision to name the supply-side movement's candidates as vice chairman of the Federal Reserve Board and to fill a vacancy confirms that Ronald Reagan, not Paul Volcker, now controls the nation's central bank.

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

Volcker was not consulted and volunteered no recommendations. Only on Monday, several days after the decision, was he informed how the president would fill vacancies left by Preston Martin's resignation: rookie Board member Manuel Johnson to assume Martin's vice chairmanship, San Francisco bank economist Robert Heller to take Martin's seat on the Board. That puts Volcker on the short end of a 4-to-3 Reaganite majority, just as he has been all year.

Thus, if the Federal Reserve does not supply sufficient capital to fuel the expected economic upsurge, it cannot be blamed on the saturnine chairman. The Volcker era ended Feb. 24, when the Board secretly voted 4-to-3 to cut the discount rate against the chairman's admonitions.

Since that revolt, life in the marble palace on Constitution Avenue has not been the same — contrary to a web of myths spread by Volcker acolytes. The new appointments, confirm that growth has replaced austerity as the prevailing mode at that Fed.

In its latest search, the White House privately laid down guidelines: no ideologues, no hard monetarists adhering to doctrinal belief in regulating the money supply, no Volcker clones. Dallas bank economist William Gibson, viewed at the White House as a "low church" monetarist, was crossed off the finalist list when he insisted on the vice chairmanship as well as the Board vacancy.

Eclectic Bank of America economist Heller is more of a supply-sider than a monetarist and was pushed for the job by supply-siders (including the movement's popularizer, economic consultant Jude Wanniski). Newly-promoted Vice Chairman Johnson is a pure supply-sider who helped craft the Reagan Revolution as an assistant secretary at the Treasury. The cordiality and collegiality of Johnson and Heller mask profound differences between them and the chairman.

Just how much life at the Fed has changed is seen in Volcker's diminished efforts to fill Board vacancies. Although financial circles considered it scandalous that supply-sider Martha Seger was named as a governor in early 1984 without the chairman's approval, Volcker had promoted a rival candidate. He has not even been involved that much in recent appointments.

Nevertheless, friends in Wall Street, on Capitol Hill and among the business news media have claimed Volcker still rules supreme at the Fed and likely will be reappointed next year to a third term as chairman. Those claims have spawned a series of myths that gloss over the seminal nature of the Feb. 24 revolt.

Myth No. 1: The governors almost immediately thought better of their Feb. 24 vote and reconsidered it. Actually, Volcker called in Martin and a newly-named governor, Wayne Angel, and asked them if they would reconsider the vote until he got the West Germans and Japanese to cut interest rates. Exactly that proposition had been offered to Volcker before the vote, but he had insisted on trying to vote down the increase.

Myth No. 2: When his attempted coup "failed," Martin quit as vice chairman. In truth, no coup was tried. Martin had planned for months to leave the Board unless White House chief of staff Donald T. Regan assured him he would be selected to replace Volcker as chairman next year. Martin resigned when, as he expected all along, Regan could not give hard assurance (though supporters feel Martin erred in leaving).

Myth No. 3: Thinking better of the aftermath of the supposedly unsuccessful coup, Don Regan contemplates another term for Volcker. On the contrary, it is safe to say that Volcker's chances for another term are zero so long as Regan is chief of staff.

Myth No. 4: The Fed has reverted to Volcker normality since Martin's departure May 1. True, the Board has been deadlocked 3-to-3 while awaiting a successor to Martin. But nothing will ever be the same. Federal Reserve governors find the bureaucrats more attentive and less apt to act as the chairman's satraps. Volcker himself treads more softly.

Martin's departure does leave the Board without a possible successor to Volcker, reducing the sense of confrontation. But speculation about the chairman is now more insider gossip than vital concern for the economy. As the remarkable events this year have shown, the central bank for the first time is in tune with the Reagan theme of economic growth.

CHARLEY REESE

Let's stop rewriting history

Grab your wallet and your pen and stand up for your country! A note to your representatives in Washington would be in order now. The U.S. Congress is on the verge of doing something exceptionally stupid and unjust — voting a second reparation for Japanese-Americans temporarily interned during World War II.

Charley Reese

It's not so much the money — about $1.5 billion, though that is foolish — as the principle involved. The instigators of this second set of reparations are apparently intent on libeling some of our most distinguished Americans by branding them as racists. When you consider they are referring to such men as Franklin Roosevelt, Hugo Black, and Earl Warren, the charge is absurd.

To hear the propaganda, the story is that the U.S. government cruelly rounded up 120,000 perfectly innocent, loyal Japanese-Americans, and put them in concentration camps just because they were of Japanese descent.

That is far from the truth. It's very much fashionable on the left these days to rewrite American history to make it appear that Americans are unmitigated villains. A common tactic and one used in this instance is to take the matter out of context.

People of the past must always be judged in the context of their times because whatever they did, they did based on what they knew at the time — not on what we may know 40 years later.

In 1941, the United States was plunged into war. The Japanese quickly followed up the attack on Pearl Harbor with other victories in the Pacific area. The Nazis stood triumphantly astride Europe. Only a beleaguered and battered England stood against an army that had two years of solid victories over every foe. We had a primitive intelligence apparatus and there were no satellite cameras or sophisticated electronic eavesdropping equipment.

All of a sudden the United States government, which was tiny compared to today's, had several enormous tasks to accomplish simultaneously in the shortest possible time. This was global war and we were unprepared.

On the West Coast in an area critical to defense were about 120,000 people — most loyal Japanese-Americans but some Japanese nationals. This worried the commanders in that area. They were worried about possible sabotage. They were worried about sorting things out if there were a Japanese invasion. They were worried about civil riots — feeling against Japanese was intense. There was neither the time nor the resources to conduct 120,000 individual loyalty investigations.

They thought the best way to handle it was simply to order the evacuation of these people out of the critical area. Roosevelt's order was just that: The people of Japanese descent must evacuate the area. Theoretically, they could have just packed up and moved on their own to Nebraska or any other place they wanted to go. The Supreme Court ruled the order was constitutional. Necessary or not, the motive was military security, not prejudice.

Of course, U.S. officials discovered that as a practical matter 120,000 people couldn't just suddenly pack up and move. They had no where to go. Hence, the relocation camps were created. They were intended to temporarily hold the people until they could make arrangements to move out of them. Some did. Most, however, voluntarily chose to stay for the duration of the war.

Several thousand of the initial group demanded to be sent back to Japan. Some refused to sign loyalty oaths and used violence and intimidation against those who wanted to. Eventually, the trouble-makers were isolated in one of the camps. After the war, the Japanese-American Citizens League had high praise for the American officials who ran the camps in a humane fashion.

Congress in 1948 gave all Japanese-Americans an opportunity to present claims for property or other economic losses and paid out several millions of dollars. There is no logical and no moral reason to do more. Millions of Americans were dislocated and suffered financial hardship as a result of the war and have never been compensated. Don't let Congress commit an injustice by twice compensating one small group and by doing so, buying into a lie about decent American officials.

NATION IN BRIEF

IRA proposal introduced

WASHINGTON (AP) — Five senators, saying they have received countless complaints about a plan to eliminate most tax deductions for Individual Retirement Accounts, have come up with a plan to save the tax break for an estimated 20 million taxpayers.

The proposal would alter the way federal taxes are adjusted, or "indexed," to offset inflation. Sen. Alfonse M. D'Amato, R-N.Y., the plan's author, said Thursday the indexing would be suspended or modified for as long as it took to recover the revenue needed to continue allowing IRA deductions.

The tax-overhaul plan approved by the Senate Finance Committee would eliminate the tax deductions for IRA contributions, except for workers not covered by company pension plans.

The IRA deduction costs in the neighborhood of $30 billion a year, tax experts say.

Sen. Christopher J. Dodd, D-Conn., a co-sponsor, said some critics have wrongly labeled IRAs a tax break for the well-to-do. Sens. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., and Frank Murkowski, R-Alaska, also are co-sponsoring the amendment that D'Amato plans to offer when the tax bill is debated on the Senate floor, probably next month.

Union head faces charges

WASHINGTON (AP) — Teamsters Union President Jackie Presser is facing imminent indictment on charges he used funds from a Cleveland local to pay so-called ghost employees who did no work, federal law enforcement officials said.

Presser, 59, who in late 1980 served on Ronald Reagan's presidential transition team, should be indicted by a grand jury before Monday's opening of the Teamsters convention in Las Vegas, Nev., the officials, who spoke on condition they not be identified, said Thursday.

In Cleveland, meanwhile, the attorney for an FBI agent implicated in the Presser probe said today the Justice Department had told him his client would also be indicted.

Agent Robert Friedrick, supervisor of the Cleveland FBI organized crime squad, is alleged to have told Justice Department investigators that the bureau had authorized the payments and that Presser was an FBI informant.

The attorney, William D. Beyer, told The Associated Press he expected the indictment of his client in Washington today.

L.A. library receives books

LOS ANGELES – More than $3 million in small contributions has been donated so far to replace books lost in the Central Library fire here, it was announced Thursday.

The April 29 inferno, which officials called one of the hardest fires to extinguish in this city's history, destroyed thousands of books, manuscripts and historical records, and gutted much of the landmark building. There were no serious injuries.

Central Library director Betty Gay estimated the actual loss of books and periodicals at $14 million, based on the retail cost of replacing them. Library officials expect the extra $4 million to come from book donations, but Gay stressed the library is not now seeking book donations because there is no place to store them.

Before the blaze, the Central Library included the largest book collection in the West, and the third largest in the United States, according to city officials.

Two guilty in duck deaths

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Two hunters who led an expedition in which nearly 400 ducks were bagged could be sentenced to up to six months in jail and fined after being found guilty to game law violations.

Sentencing was set for June 24 for Howard Otis Haines, 44, and William Lanier McGee, 42, both of Fort Lauderdale. A U.S. magistrate found them guilty Wednesday of violating federal game laws.

The men led a January 1985 tournament with 70 other hunters and their families on the shores of Lake Okeechobee. The hunters killed nearly 400 ducks in one day, hundreds over the legal limit, according to court testimony.

The hunters contended they did not exceed federal limits, but Assistant U.S. Attorney Neil Karadbil said the adult hunters tried to conceal the number of ducks they shot by claiming children also participated in the hunt.

Smith's classmates plan trip

MANCHESTER, Maine (AP) — Twenty-two former classmates of Samantha Smith are hoping to travel to the Soviet Union in July, hoping to retrace the route the young peace ambassador followed during her visit two years ago.

If all goes as planned, 12 to 22 Soviet youngsters, accompanied by chaperones and translators, would then join the Maine children in August for a nine-day visit at Alford Lake Camp in Union.

The youth exchange is being arranged as a prototype project by the Samantha Smith Foundation, established in hopes of carrying on the Maine schoolgirl's efforts to foster international cooperation and understanding.

The eighth-graders at Maranacook Community School in Readfield have gotten their visas and passports, but still must receive final Soviet authorization for the trip, said Alice Johnson, the foundation's administrative director.

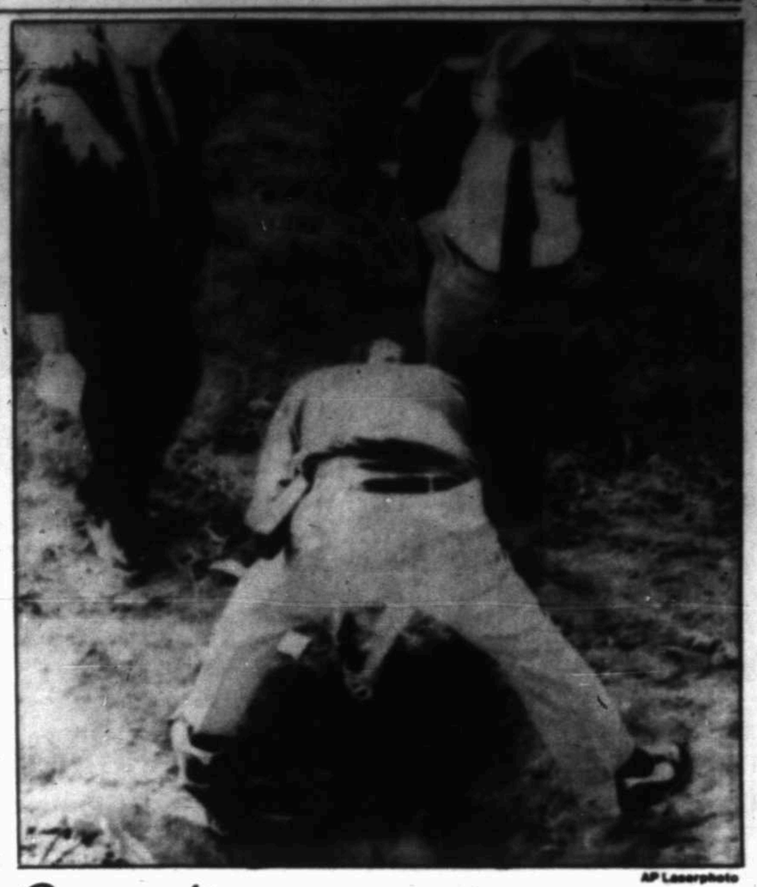

Samantha's goodwill trip to Russia followed her now-famous letter to Kremlin leader Yuri Andropov, expressing her concern about the possibility of nuclear war. She died at age 13 in a plane crash in Auburn.

Owner's dog inherits house

ROCKVILLE, Md. (AP) — A dog named Master Teddy that was subpoenaed for court may stay in the $100,000 house of its dead owner until it dies, a judge has ruled in rejecting a challenge by the owner's family.

When Celeste Crawford, 77, of Silver Spring, died last year, she stipulated in her will that her 10-year-old spitz keep her house, and asked that George Schnabele, who cared for her, stay on and care for the dog.

Mrs. Crawford's five brothers and sister said they didn't want to wait for Teddy's death to get the house.

Grave site

Boston police detectives check a shallow grave Wednesday in Boston's West Roxbury section where a young woman was discovered buried alive. The woman, Lisa Margils, 20, was removed from the grave and taken to an area hospital where she was pronounced dead an hour later. Police have arrested Richard Frieberg, 21, of West Roxbury in connection with the incident.

Moviemaker's life a scene from 'thriller'

Shin Sang-ok

WASHINGTON (AP) — A top South Korean film director still hopes to make movies in America after a forced detour through Communist North Korea that took eight years but brought him reconciliation with his actress wife and a potential financial nest egg.

The director, Shin Sang-ok, 59, told reporters Thursday he was trying to emigrate to the United States in 1978 when, in a series of misadventures worthy of a movie thriller, he was abducted from Hong Kong aboard a cargo ship on the orders of Kim Jong-il, son and heir apparent of North Korean President Kim Il-sung.

Choi Un-hui, a leading lady of South Korean pictures who had divorced Shin some years earlier, told reporters she was drugged and kidnapped in the same rough manner in January 1978, six months before Shin, and taken to North Korea on a typhoon-buffeted sea journey from Hong Kong.

The couple said they were held separately in North Korea for five years, not even knowing if the other was alive until an unexpected reunion in 1983 in the presence of Kim Jong-il.

Shin said the president's son wields much more power than his ailing father, and the regime, militarized "beyond imagination," was capable of rash decisions that could include invading South Korea.

He described Kim Jong-il as a movie enthusiast who admired the couple's work, claimed he had personally ordered their abductions and wanted them to improve the communist country's film industry.

They had been refusing to cooperate with North Korea but once together they decided to undertake the toughest roles of their careers — playing along in hopes of building confidence and finding some way to escape, Shin said. They consider themselves remarried.

Choi, now 55, said since 1983 they have made seven North Korean films and helped with production of 11 others. One picture, "Salt," won Choi the best actress award at the 1985 Moscow film festival, helping them gain more freedom of travel to Europe.

The pair surfaced in Vienna last March 13 during an assignment to work with a Hungarian film studio. On the pretext of making an appointment with a Japanese reporter, they eluded their North Korean guards and sped to the U.S. Embassy, Shin said.

Commenting on North Korean charges they absconded with $2.3 million in government funds deposited for him in a Vienna bank, Shin said he regards it as barely adequate compensation for "my suffering — eight years of incarceration without freedom during the best years of our lives."

Shin said he met Kim Jong-il more than 10 times, and after gaining Kim's trust he was provided living quarters where he could listen to Radio Japan and the Voice of America and was paid $3 million a year both for movie production and personal use. He said he will decide later how to use the leftover funds.

He said he and Choi have applied to live in the United States because the U.S. film industry, independent of state control, "offers the best opportunity for film-making. I am in the latter part of my life and want to be totally involved in artistic production.

"In his lifetime, an artist may produce only one or two masterpieces and that is still my hope for the future."

The State Department said the couple can stay indefinitely pending a decision on their application.

County forecasts

Midland, Ector, Glasscock, Upton, Reagan, Crane, Gaines, Andrews, Dawson, Borden, Martin and Howard counties: Tonight...partly cloudy. A low in the lower 60s. Southwest wind 10 to 20 mph.

Windy, dusty day expected

From Staff and Wire Reports

Windy, dusty and cooler will describe Saturday in the Midland-Odessa area, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport. Forecasters at the NWS are calling for a high in the middle 70 with winds out of the north at 20-30 mph. They are also predicting mostly cloudy skies and a 30 percent chance of rain.

Tonight's low should be in the lower 60s. Under partly cloudy skies, winds will be out of the southwest at 10-20 mph.

Thursday's high of 96 was five degrees below the record high set for the date in 1984. This morning's low was 27 degrees above the record low of 42 set in 1945.

STATE

Most tropical air moving northward across Texas triggered light drizzle around San Antonio today and forecasters said precipitation was expected to spread to other areas later.

Much drier air filtered into far West Texas behind a low-pressure trough that extended along the Texas-New Mexico border into the Trans Pecos.

Skies were mostly clear in the dry air west of the Pecos and over parts of East Texas, while partly cloudy to cloudy skies covered the rest of the state.

Winds were north to northwest in the western mountain region and south to southeast elsewhere in the state at speeds in the 5 to 15 mph range. However, gusty winds of 20 mph and greater hit parts of the high and low plains.

Early-morning temperatures were mostly in the 70s, except for readings in the 60s over the Panhandle. But readings dipped in the 50s over the mountainous southwest.

Extremes ranged from a cool 52 degrees at Marfa in the Davis Mountains to a warm 78 degrees at Brownsville, Laredo and the Naval Air Station in Corpus Christi.

NATION

Thunderstorms rumbled across the Plains and through the nation's midsection today while high winds hit the Pacific Coast.

Storms ranging across the west central Plains prompted a severe thunderstorm watch in central and western Kansas.

Showers and thunderstorms were scattered across the lower Ohio Valley, Great Lakes region, middle Mississippi Valley and central Plains.

Rain showers dotted the central Rockies.

Reluctant mound duo guides 'Dogs

By BOB BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

Midland High has a pair of pitchers who have contributed greatly to the Bulldogs' success this year: Kenny De La Garza and Ricky Castaneda. However, if the truth be known, the two would be happier if they never stepped on the mound again.

"I'd rather play shortstop than pitch," admitted De La Garza. "But, I want to help the team any way I can. If I need to go to the outfield I will. Wherever I can help the team."

"Same here," echoed Castaneda. "I'd rather play third base than pitch but I want to help the team so where ever they stick me I'll play."

Combined, De La Garza (10-6) and Castaneda (4-3) account for 24 of Midland High's 25 pitching decisions this year.

Also, De La Garza (97⅓, 2.88 ERA) and Castaneda (64⅔) have thrown 162.0 of Midland High's 166 total innings.

So much for not wanting to pitch.

There is a third Bulldog who also does a lot of bouncing around the infield. He doesn't want to pitch either but, then again, has never been asked. He's the player who keeps Midland High's left side of the field solid whenever De La Garza or Castaneda pitch: Robert Malacara.

"He's been a real good player and has helped us a lot by filling in our spots when we're pitching," said Castaneda. "He's been a great player at times and has made some great plays."

"I feel real comfortable when he's behind me," echoed De La Garza. "He's made a lot of good plays and has improved a lot."

"Kenny and Ricky have a lot of confidence in me because I've shown them I can do a half respectable job," responded Malacara. "I think it puts them more at ease to know we've got the holes covered."

Does the constant moving around affect the utility player?

"I think I like it more than being a one-position player, at third, at shortstop or maybe the outfield," said Malacara. "I'll play where I can best help the team."

IT'S THE team concept that has gotten the Bulldogs where they are this year, in a bi-district playoff game for the first time since 1973.

Without the unity, no one, from head coach Tim Whalen to the players, believes they would be playing Lubbock Monterey at 6 p.m. today at Angels Stadium. The season would have ended three weeks ago.

"That's when we do our best, when everyone on the team is pulling for each other and working hard," said Castaneda.

"I feel good about playing with the guys I'm playing with," said Malacara. "We've all drawn real close."

The three Bulldogs understand what is being asked of them tonight when they take on the Plainsmen and their tradition. It won't be easy.

"I know they'll be good," said De La Garza. "It's their past and their tradition. It's one game for both of us, win it and go on or lose it and go home, so we'll have to play our best."

"They're always good and that's the way it is," said Castaneda. "They haven't lost since the Tournament of Champions when Lee and we beat them. They're going to play us hard, prove they can beat us. We've got to play Friday, that's all there is to it."

LOOKING BACK at the district season, De La Garza and Castaneda, like most of the Bulldogs and their fans, look at victories over Abilene Cooper as the highlight of the season.

In the first meeting, De La Garza gave up a run in the first inning and finished the game in four-hit, shutout fashion. Two of the hits the Cougars managed off the right-hander never even left the infield.

The Bulldogs rallied in the bottom of the seventh to win. It was the moment that whispered "what can be," and the Bulldogs responded.

"The first game we won 2-1, that was it," said De La Garza. "When we came back in the seventh and won, it surprised me."

"Yeah, we stayed close, didn't let them get too far ahead of us and were able to come back," agreed Castaneda. "Everybody wanted that one so bad."

OFFENSIVELY, THE three Bulldogs didn't have the kind of year they were hoping for.

After a sluggish start that carried over into early district games, De La Garza finally came alive to hit .343 for the year and provided most of the extra base power with five homes runs and a triple for 20 RBI and 25 runs scored.

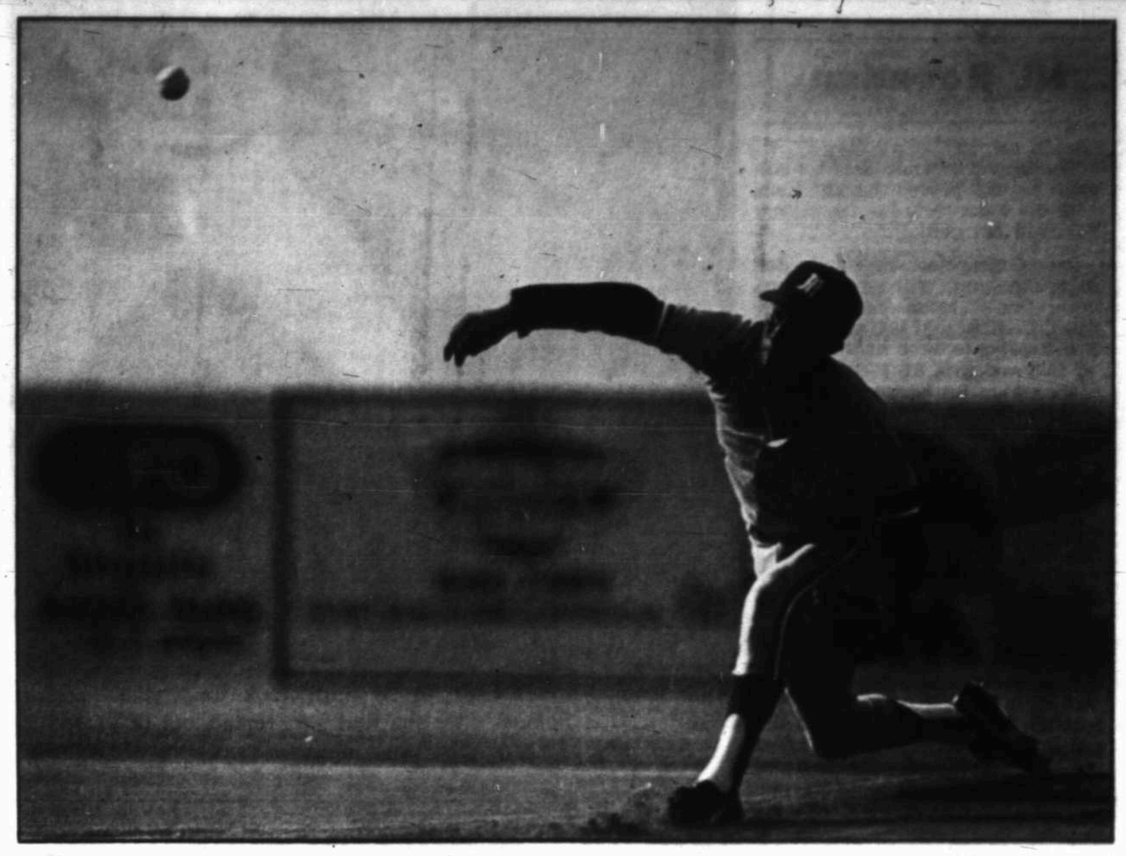

De La Garza was also the team's stolen base leader with 13 and had the only two sacrifice flies of the year.

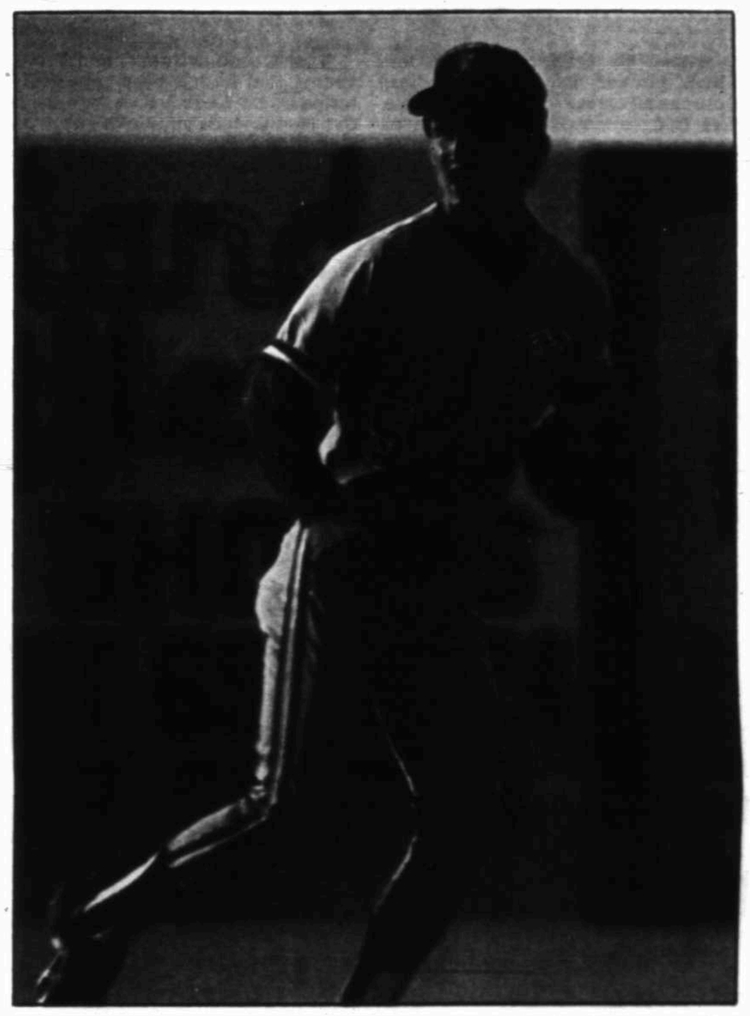

Castaneda's bat was on-again, off-again and he finished with a .256 average, scoring 14 and knocking in 16.

For Malacara, it was a year of frustration at the plate. The Bulldog utility infielder could only manage a .167 average and spent most of the district season replaced by a designated hitter at the plate.

"I wanted to hit the ball so bad it caused me to have a long, slow swing and I wasn't able to connect with the ball," said Malacara. "I know I'm a better hitter than that."

He might still have a chance to prove his claim, if he's given another chance to hit.

Midland High's success this season is largely due to pitchers Ricky Castaneda (top photo) and Kenny De La Garza (bottom photo). The two pitched in every District 4-5A game and recorded all the decisions. De La Garza claimed an 8-3 record while Castaneda was 2-1.

Lady Chaps host NJCAA tournament

From Staff Reports

Midland College seeks a women's national tennis title next week when the National Junior College Athletic Association tournament gets underway Monday at the MC Courts.

MC coach Joe Williams couldn't ask for better conditions, since his Chaparral women are ranked first in the nation and also get to play with the home court advantage. Action gets underway at 9 a.m. Monday on both the Midland College and Midlander Club courts and will continue through Thursday.

The Chaparrals are going for their fourth national title, having last won in 1981 as co-champion. They were NJCAA champions in 1975 and 1976, the firt two years MC had a women's program. Last season, Williams' second, the women finished third.

The Midlander is co-hosting the national tournament with Midland College. Barry Stephens, tennis pro at The Midlander is serving as tournament director. He's being assisted by Dr. Raymond Yell, a Midland College dean. Paul Hemmels of the Midland Tennis Club will be directing officials.

Coaches from about 36 teams will meet at 10 a.m. Sunday in the Holiday Inn Country Villa to begin the seeding process. The NJCAA tourney is conducted in six singles flights and three doubles flights.

"There are 24 regions in the NJCAA and each of them is eligible to send their championship and runner-up team to the tournament," Williams noted. "However, not all regions will be represented and some of the squads will not include a complete team."

Monday's and Tuesday's play will be split between the MC Courts and the Midlander while Wednesday's semifinals and Thursday's finals will be at Midland College.

WILLIAMS KNOWS his team faces a lot of competition in the championships, and most of it his players have seen previously. The final ranking had Midland first and Tyler, Texas, second. Florida schools are ranked third, fourth, and fifth, but there's a question about which of them will come.

Palm Beach is No. 3, Indian River is No. 4, and Florida Junior College is No. 5. No. 6 Cooke County from Gainesville, Texas, finished second in the Region V tourney behind Midland. Seventh place McLennan from Waco finished behind Midland and Cooke in the regionals, so they won't be here.

Peace, from North Carolina, is No. 8, Temple, Texas, is No. 9 and Odessa, also a non-qualifier from Region V, is ranked tenth.

Madrid mobilizes MHS offense

Purple manhandles White, 28-7

By BOB BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

The Midland High Bulldogs capped their 1986 spring football session with a 28-7 Purple victory over White Thursday night in the annual Bill Mims game at Memorial Stadium.

Quarterback Jaime Madrid guided Purple to all four touchdowns, throwing one to Michael Ball from 35 yards out and taking three over the goal line himself on runs of 6, 6 and 4 yards. Richard Triplett kicked four extra points.

In all, Madrid piled up 89 yards rushing and completed three passes for another 72. He was the game's leading rusher and looked to have a dimension the Bulldogs have lacked for several years at quarterback: Mobility.

"I really think we do have more speed and quickness than in the past," said Bulldog head coach Doug McCutchen, who was a spectator on the sidelines Thursday while his assistants plotted and executed the battle plans.

"Also, these kids have been running this offense going on their third year and I think they have more of an understanding of what it entails. And it does help when the quarterback is a good runner. Jaime did an excellent job tonight, turning the ball up against the defense."

Madrid wasn't the only Purple player to have a good night. Tyrone Oliver picked up 81 yards on 13 carries, Ricky Duran caught two passes for 44 yards and Scott McCullough completed one pass for 27 yards and rushed for 43 more.

In all, the Purple offense piled up 256 on the ground and 91 passing.

DEFENSIVELY, PURPLE was one play away from a flawless night. In the fourth quarter, trailing 21-0, White tallied its only points when receiver Darren Dobie hauled in a Jeff Somers pass and streaked 53 yards into the end zone. Art Nunez added the PAT.

In all, the 53-yard pass accounted for a third of White's attack, as they rushed for 64 yards and completed six passes for 118. Three of Somers' passes were intercepted while Paul Gary tossed away a fourth.

Clyde Govan, Chip Loper, Oliver and Ball stole the four White passes.

Going into the game — which is played for the benefit of Bill Mims, who was paralyzed in 1953 in a scrimmage game for Midland High — McCutchen felt the teams were divided evenly and didn't expect to see one side as dominant as Purple turned out to be.

"You never know going into a game like this what will happen," said McCutchen. "Purple had more enthusiasm at the start of the game and jumped out to a lead, making it hard for White to come back."

FROM THE scrimmage, a few questions pop up about the Bulldogs of 1986. Half of them looked like world beaters at times Thursday but, with potential starters divided into two squads, how will the whole team look when the real game is played next fall?

McCutchen doesn't know, but he has a lot of high hopes. He believes he has more all-around talent than in the past.

"The line is bigger and we have more speed than in the past with the exception of (Allen) Foret," said McCutchen. "I think the receivers are young and inexperienced, except for Robbie Harkrider who started last year, but will do a good job and, with experience, we'll be able to use them to our advantage."

Until then, the equipment goes into storage rooms and is locked away for the summer.

Travelers, Angels even series

From Staff and Wire Reports

LITTLE ROCK — Arkansas evened its five game with the Midland Angels at one apiece with a 3-1 victory Texas League victory Thursday night.

The Travelers got all the scoring they would need in the first inning off Sherman Corbett, 2-3, with a pair of runs. After one out, Mark Dougherty singled for the first of four straight Arkansas hits. Tom Amante and Harry McCulla drove home the runs with RBI singles.

In the third, Corbett walked Lance Johnson, then Dougherty cracked another single and Dave Clements put the Travelers on top 3-0 with a single. Arkansas leads the East Division with a 21-13 record, two games in front of Shreveport.

Midland came back with one in the fourth thanks to an error by Clements and and RBI double by John Hotchkiss bringing home Kevin King.

Midland hung on to a slim lead in the West Division at 20-17, one game ahead of El Paso and two in front of Beaumont.

'K' victim Heep gains revenge on Ryan, 6-2

NL Roundup

For Danny Heep and Ron Oester, it was a night to forget the past.

Heep, who became Nolan Ryan's 4,000th career strikeout victim July 11, 1985, tagged Ryan for a two-run homer Thursday night as the New York Mets beat Houston 6-2 at the Astrodome.

Oester's key error allowed the winning run to score in a loss Wednesday night, but his three-run homer in the ninth inning Thursday lifted the Cincinnati Reds to a 6-5 victory over the Philadelphia Phillies.

In the only other National League game played Thursday, Atlanta beat Montreal 7-6 in 10 innings.

"I wasn't the happiest man to be strikeout victim No. 4,000," Heep said after the Mets won for the 20th time in 26 games. "They show it on every highlight at every park. I was a victim of circumstance, being 4,000th."

Manager Dave Johnson knew Heep wanted to even the score against baseball's all-time strikeout leader.

Heep went 3-for-3 against Ryan, 3-5, and his one-out homer in the sixth made it 5-0. Ron Darling, 4-0, allowed eight hits before Jesse Orosco recorded the last three outs. Orosco has yet to be scored on in his 22 appearances this season covering 36 1-3 innings.

Reds 6, Phillies 5

Oester's homer off Steve Bedrosian, 3-2, wasn't a total cure for his costly error the night before.

"It (the homer) didn't make up for last night (Wednesday)," Oester said. "But it helped."

The second baseman said his late-game heroics proved that the Reds, with the worst record in the majors, 9-21, will not quit.

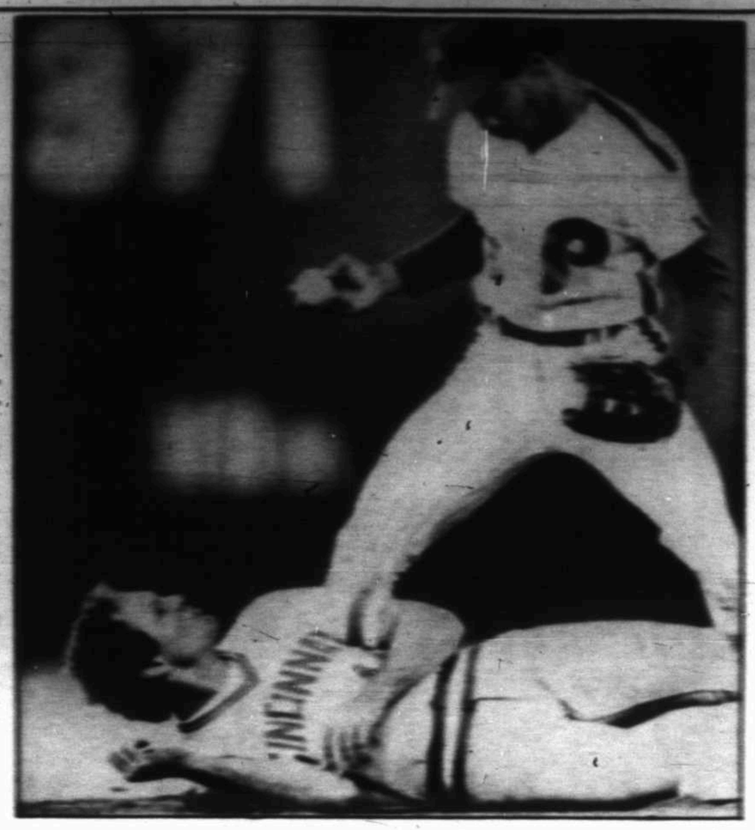

Dave Concepcion and Buddy Bell started the ninth with singles off reliever Don Carman. Bedrosian relieved Carman and got pinch-hitter Max Venable to fly to right. But Oester followed with his second homer of the season, hitting a 1-1 pitch over the right-field fence to score Concepcion and pinch-runner Tom Runnells ahead of him.

Braves 7, Expos 6 (10)

Ken Oberkfell's three-run 10-inning homer gave Atlanta its victory over host Montreal.

Oberkfell connected on a 3-2 pitch from Dan Schatzeder in one of his rare appearances against a left-hander this season. It came after Dale Murphy singled and Bob Horner walked.

Montreal trailed 4-2 entering the bottom of the ninth, but tied the game when Mitch Webster's short fly bounced high on the artificial turf. The ball fell in front of Murphy and bounced over his head, scoring Al Newman and Andre Dawson, who had singled off Bruce Sutter, 3-4. Jeff Dedmon got his second save with one inning of work.

Bucks stop McHale, but Celtics still roll

BOSTON (AP) — The Milwaukee Bucks were determined to keep Kevin McHale from beating them. He'd get the ball in the low post and they'd surround him.

"They double-teamed all over the place," the 6-9 foot-10 McHale said. "One time I looked up and I had three guys coming after me. I just wanted to get rid of the ball and hide. I felt like Custer and the Indians were coming after me."

A 125-111 loss to the Celtics Thursday, two nights after a 128-96 rout, leaves Milwaukee in jeopardy of being bounced out of the NBA playoffs by Sunday.

"We knew when we came here we'd have our hands full," Bucks' forward Terry Cummings said after Boston's 30th consecutive homecourt triumph.

They're going back to Milwaukee for the third and fourth games, Saturday and Sunday, of the best-of-seven Eastern Conference final. Despite losing all seven of its games this season with Boston, which has won 28 of its last 29 contests, Milwaukee hasn't lost hope.

"I truly think we can win," Bucks' Coach Don Nelson insisted. "I'm not trying to be funny."

MCHALE WASN'T exactly laughing about the defensive attention he got. But he did what he had to do. He passed the ball to a teammate.

"The Bucks game plan was that they weren't going to get beat by Kevin," said Larry Bird, who paced Boston with 26 points. "It was imperative that we hit the outside shots."

"We wanted to bring the ball down low all night," said McHale, who had 20 points. "But they double-teamed us down low. If you double-team, there's usually someone open."

Often, it was the guards. Danny Ainge hit 10 of 12 field-goal attempts for 23 points and Dennis Johnson connected on 8-of-15 for 21. Center Robert Parish also had 21 as Boston tied a playoff record held by three other teams with five players scoring at least 20 points each.

The Celtics had 34 assists, giving them a total of 73 for the first two games.

McHale did manage to shake free from his defenders for two key baskets when Milwaukee threatened late in the game. With Boston leading 107-101 after squandering a 13-point advantage, McHale made a layup with 2:45 left. He was fouled and made the free throw.

ALTON LISTER, who had a career playoff high 22 points for Milwaukee, followed with a hook shot to close the gap to 110-108, but Ainge hit a layup and McHale again got loose for a layup that resulted in a three-point play. That boosted the lead to 115-108 with 1:47 to go. Cummings, who scored 22, got the next four points, but that eight-point deficit was the closest the Bucks would get.

"We played fairly well, but they made the big plays," said Brewer, whose 21 points for the Bucks also were a career playoff high. "They hit the open shots and got the loose balls. We shot the ball well tonight, but we need to get the offensive rebounds."

Milwaukee's shooting percentage went up from 37.5 in the first game to 56.2 in the second game but its number of offensive rebounds dropped from 15 to 9.

THE BUCKS trailed 63-55 at halftime and never led but gave the Celtics something they've rarely seen in winning nine of their 10 playoff contests — a genuine threat. Milwaukee got the lead down to 86-85 with a 9-1 run that ended with 6:06 left in the game. But Boston got eight of the next 10 points.

Returning to Milwaukee, where they were 33-8 in the regular season, should help the Bucks. However, three of those losses were to the Celtics.

Howe's odyssey continues

SAN JOSE, Calif. (AP) — San Jose Bees pitcher Steve Howe, whose promising career with the Los Angeles Dodger was shortened by drug abuse, has been barred from professional baseball because of a disputed drug test for cocaine use.

Howe, his attorney and Bees president Harry Steve said they were told there had been a positive result for cocaine use from a urinalysis, which they said was administered May 1 at the direction of Commissioner Peter Ueberroth's office.

"I have used nothing," said Howe, adding that he has been repeatedly tested by the Class-A Bees with negative results since joining the team on March 28.

"I have had no involvement with drugs since I've been here. None. Zero. I think it's a conspiracy to keep me out of baseball," Howe said.

"I would have a tendency to call Steve Howe's baseball career as being on hiatus rather than suspension," Howe's lawyer John Lence said Thursday.

McEnroe's name on Wimbledon list

LONDON (AP) — John McEnroe, on a self-imposed break from tennis since January, has confirmed his entry for next month's Wimbledon championships, the All England club announced today.

All England chief executive Chris Gorringe said McEnroe's name was on a list of 104 players submitted by the Association of Tennis Professionals from its office in Dallas.

McEnroe, 27, has appeared in five Wimbledon singles finals.

As recently as Tuesday his father, John McEnroe Sr., said in New York that it was unlikely the younger McEnroe would play at Wimbledon this year.

Stanton, Rankin off and running in golf tourney

From Staff Reports

AUSTIN — The Stanton Buffaloes and the Rankin Red Devils are among a handful of area golf teams making the most of their trip to the state meet this week.

Stanton, led by Kevin Glaspie's 79 and a hole-in-one by Stan Young, was in second place in the boys Class 2A meet with a team score of 322, nine behind first round leader Weimar. Meanwhile, Rankin, with both Shon Nicholson (78) and Steven Cole (79) under 80, was in third, only six strokes behind Throckmorton for the lead.

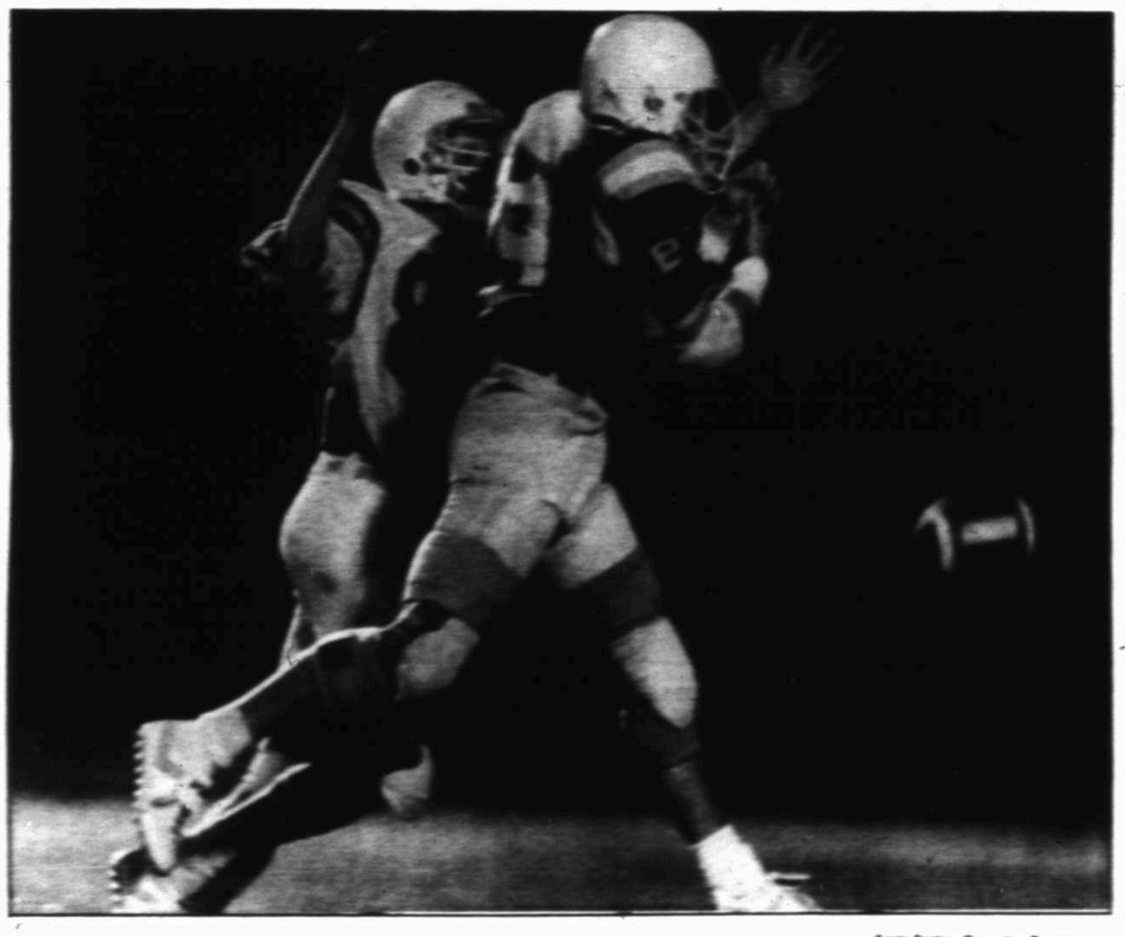

The Andrews boys were in fifth in Class 4A with a team score of 354, five behind second place, but out of the hunt for the team title. Brownwood led with a 307. Jeff Beal was the lone Mustang to shoot in the 70s with a 79.

In girls play, Andrews was four strokes behind district rival Snyder in Class 4A. Melissa Northcut led the Lady Mustangs with an 87.

Reagan County in girls Class 2A division, was unable to finish its round because of darkness.

Iraan, in Class A girls, were off to a fourth place finish after round one.

In Class 5A girls, Abilene Cooper's Michelle Hlapack was in 11th place individually after an 88 on the first day.

Midland High Purple receiver Lee Arlington can't come up with this pass as White's David Holmes covers on the play in Thursday's Bill Mumi game at Memorial Stadium.

Jean-Marie Balestre, president of the International Auto Sport Federation, said the Wednesday crash was caused by loss of the rear airfoil on de Angelis' Brabham-BMW car.

TRACK

LONDON — The governing body of track and field said it was giving the world decathlon record to Britain's Daley Thompson for his performance at the 1984 Los Angeles Olympic Games.

The International Amateur Athletic Federation said that close studies of the electric photometer at the Games revealed that Thompson had run 1,000ths of a second faster in the 110-meter high hurdles than had first been recorded.

BASKETBALL

NEW YORK — Bill Walton, who played in a career-high 86 games as a reserve center for the Boston Celtics, was named as winner of the Starter NBA Sixth Man award.

Walton averaged 7.6 points, 6.8 rebounds and 1.30 blocked shots per game for the Atlantic Division champions this season.

Texas' Slaught remembers, Tigers would like to forget

Associated Press

Lots of factors go into a baseball player's success. Don Slaught credits, among other things, his memory and the weather.

Slaught had a bases-loaded triple and a two-run homer Thursday night, leading the Texas Rangers to an 8-1 rout of the Detroit Tigers. His big hits came off Detroit starter Frank Tanana, a teammate of Slaught's last year in Texas. Slaught remembered what Tanana likes to do.

"Frank changes speeds a lot," said Slaught, a catcher by trade who is hitting .301 this season. "Tonight, we got to him real quick. That's what you have to do.

"I caught him last year, so I sort of knew what he was trying to do."

Tanana allowed six runs, seven hits and three walks in 2 2-3 innings.

"I haven't had the consistency I'd like, but what's done is done," Tanana said. "For a control pitcher, the first pitch is often the key. I've got to get my rhythm. Putting the team in the hole early is really tough on them. A control pitcher has to keep away from the big inning."

Slaught snapped a 4-for-26 slump in which his average dipped 67 points. Still, he is hitting almost 20 points over his career average.

"I'm off to a good start because in the offseason, we can hit in Texas," said Slaught, who was dealt to the Rangers from Kansas City in January 1985. "As a result, when I went to spring training, I was in pretty good shape. In KC, we could only hit indoors in cages, against machines."

Rookie Pete Incaviglia also had a two-run homer for visiting Texas, while Mike Mason, 3-0, checked the Tigers on six hits over eight innings before Mitch Williams took over for the ninth. The Rangers moved within a half-game of first-place California in the AL West.

AL Roundup

Royals 6, Indians 3

Frank White hit his fifth career grand slam to cap a Royals comeback. With one out in the eighth inning, the second baseman sent a 2-0 pitch from Rich Yett into the right-field bleachers.

"It was looking foul, then all of a sudden it started to slice. I couldn't believe it," said White. "It was amazing. I was disappointed when I first hit it because it looked like it was way foul."

Indians starter Ken Schrom took a 3-1 lead into the bottom of the eighth but Jim Sundberg and Jamie Quirk hit leadoff singles. Losing reliever Scott Bailes threw away Willie Wilson's sacrifice bunt to let in a run. White was the first batter Yett faced.

Andre Thornton homered for the Indians, who have dropped six of their last seven games. Kansas City has won four straight.

Orioles 5, Twins 3

Mike Young and Juan Beniquez both hit their first home run of the season as Mike Boddicker upped his record to 4-0, with 1 2-3 innings of relief from Don Aase, who earned his ninth save.

Young's long homer in the second off Twins ace Frank Viola gave Baltimore a 3-1 lead and snapped a 35-game, 103-at-bat home run drought for Young, who hit 28 homers last year. Beniquez's two-run shot in the third was his first homer in 46 at-bats.

"This is the longest I've ever gone in any league without hitting a home run," said Young. "I've just been trying to consistently go up and make contact and hit a line drive. It's nice to finally get one up. They say the first one is the toughest, now that I've got my first one I hope I keep going."

White Sox 8, Yankees 1

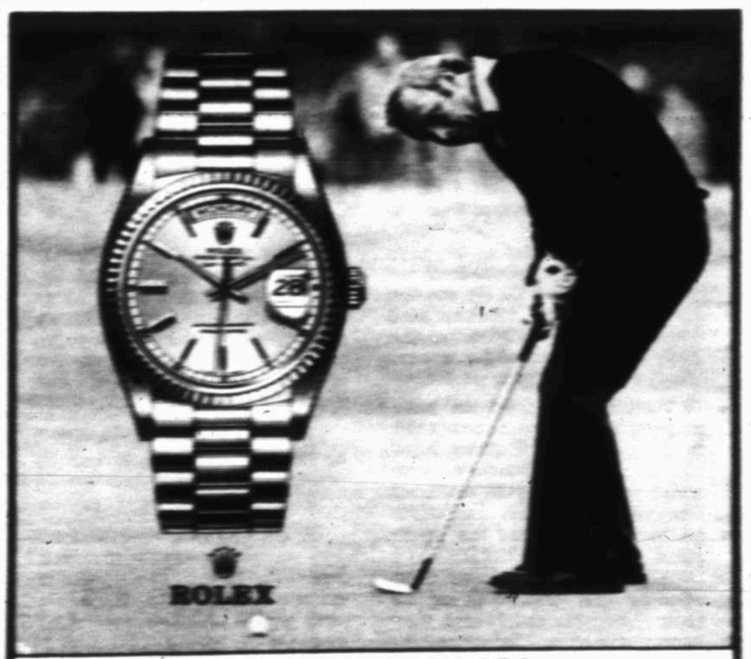

Greg Walker, playing his second game after a wrist injury sidelined him for a month, hit a three-run homer and the Yankees committed five errors.

The White Sox, who have won five of seven games since Manager Tony LaRussa was given a vote of confidence last week, got seven runs and eight hits in the first five innings off Ron Guidry. Carlton Fisk had two singles and a double to support Neil Allen, 1-0, who was traded by the Yankees to Chicago in February.

Allen allowed four hits, walked two and struck out three in seven innings, then was replaced by Bill Dawley.

Walker hit a 400-foot drive into the Yankee Stadium bleachers following leadoff singles by Fisk and Ron Kittle in the second inning.

COASTAL

SABINE LAKE: Fishing picked up last Sunday, redfish fair to good to 5 pounds in Hickory Cove, Old River Cove, south of the islands, east of the Coal Dock on shrimp; trout improving this week toward the middle of the lake to 6 pounds on shrimp, many small fish have to be returned to water; croaker good to 20 inches on dead shrimp; good numbers of black drum to 20 pounds, average about 4 pounds; flounder good to 2 pounds on live or dead shrimp in lake, and minnows good along shore; gafftops good midweek; no sheepshead all week; live bait shrimp scarce.

GALVESTON: Bay, jetty and beachfront fishing improving; a few specks to 7 pounds, mostly 14½ to 17 inches at Hannah's Reef in East Bay and western part of West Bay at San Luis Pass; trout good at night about same size from bay piers; flounder to 3 pounds in the bays, along edges of grass lines on live shrimp and live mullet; a few redfish to 24 inches in East and West Bay; most consistently big trout are at the jetties to about 25 inches on live shrimp; a few Spanish mackerel at the jetties; offshore producing small dolphin and a few ling to 20 pounds; good numbers of kingfish spotted offshore, but hitting because of shortage of icefish for bait; live bait shrimp plentiful at $8.50 per quart; great numbers of blue crab at the spillway pier at Seabrook; tides to go to 2 highs and 2 lows per day beginning Saturday.

PORT O'CONNOR: Redfish good to 28 inches at jetties shrimp; good numbers of trout in back bays to 7 pounds, one 9 pound trout landed in back bay; snapper, ling and some kingfish offshore for the past two days; gafftop plentiful; sheepshead plentiful at jetties and shark plentiful in surf; live bait plentiful.

PALACIOS: Some big redfish off Palacios Jetties on live bait and chartreuse tools; good sized trout before sunrise in South Bay on live bait and tools; wells area producing trout to 24 inches; Carancahua River producing a good number of good size trout averaging 18-24 inches on the shrimp; live bait shrimp plentiful.

ROCKPORT: Redfish good to maximum limit in Aransas Bay, Lydia Ann Channel, around Mud Island, inside Estes Flats, in California Hole on live and mud minnows on Redfins and gold spoons; trout good in St. Charles on the reefs with live bait in good numbers; trout also good under lights at night on live shrimp and small croaker; trout good in Redfish Bay, outside beach at Dagger Island in good sizes on live bait; live bait available.

PORT ARANSAS: Redfish slow but improving throughout the bay to 6 pounds but not in great numbers; tides high; trout slow around the wells in Corpus Christi Bay averaging about 15-20 fish per boat but require work, average about 17 inches; a few flounder to 3 pounds; offshore improving with kingfish ranging from 12-15 pounds; jackfish good; shark good to 15 pounds; indications are for an early offshore season; live bait plentiful.

CORPUS CHRISTI: Redfish slow; trout and flounder in medium size scattered from Landcut to Baffin Bay, fish generally scattered and slow; live bait shrimp scarce, should improve by the weekend; Gas pier some legal specks and some undersized fish; croaker in fairly good sizes, and gafftops; some nice flounder over the weekend; live and dead bait plentiful.

PORT MANSFIELD: Good numbers of redfish north and east to 27 inches mostly on red tools; some smaller male trout off Landcut; good numbers of big flounder in oil cuts on gigs to about 4 pounds; live bait plentiful; night fishing picking up on barges with limits of trout on shrimp; offshore slow.

PORT ISABEL: Live bait producing school trout around old and new bridges; Three Islands area producing good numbers of trout to 5 pounds and a few redfish to 10 pounds, redfish mostly small; some good shark in the same area ranging from 4-6 feet; spoil banks producing some flounder on live shrimp; offshore snapper good close in, kings, bonito and jack fish brought in by trolling; no billfish yet; live bait available but small.

Snow Chief's handlers not nearly as confident

By DICK JOYCE

BALTIMORE (AP) — Trainer Mel Stute did not sound overly confident Thursday that Snow Chief, who tarnished his image in the Kentucky Derby, will reedem himself in Saturday's Preakness Stakes.

"I'm just hoping," he said after returning to Pimlico Race Course from California. "But I'm going to bet on him — the price will be better this time."

As opposed to the herd of 16 3-year-olds in the Derby, seven were entered Thursday for the Preakness, the second leg of thoroughbred racing's Triple Crown.

And in the almost two weeks since the May 3 Derby, Snow Chief, who had been favored, is almost forgotten.

Ferdinand, the 17-1 winner of the Derby with a sentimental connections of 54-year-old jockey Bill Shoemaker and 73-year-old trainer Charlie Whittingham, was made the early 9-5 favorite.

ALTHOUGH SHOEMAKER has won each of the Triple Crown races, he has never won all three classics the same year. Whittingham has never had a Preakness winner in two tries.

The D. Wayne Lukas entry of Badger Land, fifth in the Derby, and Withers winner Clear Choice, is the second early choice at 2-1. Next is Broad Brush, third in the Derby, at 3-1.

Preakness Stakes

Then at 4-1 comes Snow Chief, who had strung together five straight wins, including the Florida Derby and Santa Anita Derby. Snow Chief folded on the last far turn and wound up 11th.

Miracle Wood, the only gelding in the field 20-1, and Groovy, 30-1, complete the field for the 1 3-16-mile test, one-sixteenths of a mile shorter than the Derby.

Stute good naturedly has stuck to his alibis that Snow Chief, winner of $1.7 million, didn't like the Churchill Downs track and the fast pace "just cooked him."

"We have to throw that race out and start all over again," Stute added. "There's nothing else wrong with him."

LUKAS, FOR one, has not discounted Snow Chief. The Derby was the only race in five that Badger Land finished ahead of the California-bred.

"He'll be tough," Lukas said, "unless he's not the same Snow Chief we saw before the Derby. He has to prove he's not the same Snow Chief."

Whittingham, another West Coast trainer, said Snow Chief could be a factor.

"He just didn't run his race in Kentucky," he said. "Some horses don't like the Churchill Downs track."

With two horses breaking down last year on Preakness Day, the track has not been as fast as in recent years. Stute is buoyed by the fact that the Pimlico course has a sandy composition similar to Gulfstream Park where Snow Chief won the Florida Derby. Churchill Downs has a hard surface.

ALEX SOLIS, who has never ridden at Pimlico, again will ride Snow Chief.

Lukas said he would not be surprised if his entry was made the favorite by the public.

"Both my horses are improving and Badger Land, as did others, had a lot of traffic problems in the Derby," Lukas said. "If you're a betting man, you get two for the price of one.

"If we get the trip in the Preakness, there'll be no Triple Crown this year.

"I feel lucky here."

Lukas saddled two Preakness winners — Codex in 1980 and Tank's Prospect last year."

In the post position draw, Miracle Wood drew the No. 1 post.

Temple sees end of an era

By DANNY BALLARD
Temple Daily Telegram

TEMPLE (AP) — The signing of Temple High running back Stacey Davis to a scholarship agreement with East Texas State University marks the end to an illustrious era in Central Texas high school football.

Stacey Davis is the youngest of six Davis brothers who were high school standouts in the region — the first two at Bartlett and the last four, including former Texas Christian star Kenneth Davis, at Temple.

"I've always known I have to uphold the 'runt end' of the family tradition," Stacey said during an interview at the family's home in east Temple.

"But I'm glad I'm the youngest. The others have taught me a whole lot, and it's better to take your lessons from your older brothers than learning them on you own."

THE DAVIS legacy began in Bartlett, where Melvin and Jesse Davis played for the Bulldogs. In 1972, W.M. Davis moved with his wife, six sons and six daughters to Temple.

Herbert, the third son, was the first Davis to play for the Temple Wildcats. Then came Earnest, then Kenneth, and finally Stacey Davis.

Melvin had a semi-pro career with the Dallas Rockets, Jesse played for Southwest Texas State and was among the final cuts in tryouts for both the Dallas Cowboys and the Houston Oilers. Herbert played for Cisco Junior College, and Earnest was a standout for the University of Texas at Arlington until an automobile accident ended his playing days.

KENNETH WAS the best known of the family. Dubbed the "Temple Tornado," he was a Heisman Trophy candidate at TCU before his admission that he accepted money from an alumnus brought about his suspension after one game last season. The Green Bay Packers picked him in the second round of the NFL draft last month.

Comparisons with the older members of the household have been inevitable, but Stacey has never seemed to acknowledge the existence of pressure because of it.

"Going into my junior year, I could tell there was pressure on me — from my teammates, the fans, even my family. Everybody knew I was the last of the Davises. But I don't think I let it bother me. I knew what I had to do," Stacey said.

Stacey also had to labor in the shadow cast by Kenneth's suspension at TCU, but the uproar is just background noise, he said.

"If people are going to judge me on that basis, I don't have much use for them," Stacey said. "I have learned some things from it, though. Always be careful in everything you do, know what's right and wrong, and learn everything there is to know about something before you agree to it."

Amateur Verplank will turn pro soon

DALLAS (AP) — Scott Verplank, who became the first amateur golfer to win a PGA Tour event in 31 years with a Western Open victory last year, says he will turn professional at the U.S. Open.

Verplank, a 21-year-old Oklahoma State senior, told The Dallas Morning News he will end his amateur career after the NCAA Championships on May 31. He said he has informed USGA executive director P.J. Boatwright and PGA official David Eger of his decision.

"I've always wanted to play the pro tour, and the U.S. Open seems like a good place to start," Verplank said Tuesday. "I've played a lot of amateur golf, which I have enjoyed. I feel I've had a pretty good amateur career."

'Playing blind,' unknown, Sauers fires 66 at Colonial

FORT WORTH (AP) — Well, so much for the old practice theory.

Playing cold and flying blind, Georgian Gene Sauers slashed four shots from par over the testy Colonial Country Club golf course and took a one-stroke lead into today's second round of the $600,000 Colonial National Invitation.

Without a practice round and having never before laid eyes on the course, Sauers rode three chip-ins to a 66 Thursday on his maiden tour of the windswept Trinity River layout nicknamed "Hogan's Alley" for five-time Colonial champion Ben Hogan.

That earned him a one-shot edge over former British Open titlist Bill Rogers and a two-stroke cushion over a flock of players headed by globe-trotting Nick Price.

"I've never had three chip-ins in one round," said the smiling 23-year-old Sauers, a non-winner who could triple his total 1985 earnings with the Colonial's first-prize check of $108,000.

Hardly a household word, Sauers, in his third year on the pro circuit, saw his name appear on the leader board as "Savers"

He laughed it off.

"My first time on this golf course was today," he said. "Not knowing where the trouble was, I could concentrate on hitting the fairways and greens."

Among those who discovered the infamous trouble spots was Tom Watson, who was coasting along at three under par until he self-destructed with a triple bogey at the par-4 ninth hole.

Gene Sauers leads the pack after one round at the Colonial Invitational in Fort Worth.

Watson drove into a trap, flew out into a pond, pitched over the green, chipped to within two feet and missed his putt. He limped home with a 75.

Defending champion Corey Pavin and a pair of former Colonial winners, Bruce Lietzke and Ben Crenshaw, matched par 70 while most of the other big names slipped back into the field.

Calvin Peete, a double winner this year, shot a 71 in his bid to seize the money-winning lead from Andy Bean, who isn't competing here.

Bean leads with $380,304 and Peete is third with $301,558.

Texan Tom Kite stripped a couple of shots from par on the front side but stumbled through the back nine in 38 to card a 72, a slot shared with Payne Stewart and a dozen others.

Lee Trevino opened with a 73, a stroke ahead of former Colonial kingpin Fuzzy Zoeller and such familiar names as Hubert Green and Hale Irwin.

But the day clearly belonged to Sauers, whose three chip-ins came from 20 feet or less and led to a round he admitted was little short of miraculous. Attributing much of the credit to his caddy, Sampson Marshall, Sauers said: "He did a good job of leading me around. He knew the golf course and I didn't."

Hoya's Thompson tops USOC list

WASHINGTON (AP) — Georgetown's John Thompson is expected to be selected as the head coach of the 1988 U.S. Olympic basketball team Friday in Colorado Springs, sources close to the Olympic basketball program said Wednesday.

The 16-man selection committee is scheduled to vote Friday morning, with the leading candidates being Thompson and Larry Brown, head coach at the University of Kansas. Denny Crum, coach of NCAA champion Louisville, Lute Olson of Arizona, and Eddie Sutton of Kentucky also are reported to be among at least five finalists.

The committee's choice for head coach will be announced Friday at 5 p.m. EDT by the Amateur Basketball Association of the U.S.A.

Sentiment in many amateur and pro basketball circles the past year has been that Thompson is the overwhelming choice to be the 1988 head coach.

Thompson has said all along he would love to be Olympic head coach. But he maintained Wednesday night that he is not lobbying for the job.

Thompson was a strong candidate in 1984, but he lost out to Indiana's Bob Knight, who coached the men's team to a gold medal in Los Angeles. Thompson worked with Knight at the 1984 Olympic trials, was the president of the National Association of Basketball Coaches in 1985, and currently is working with Knight on the Olympic player-selection committee.

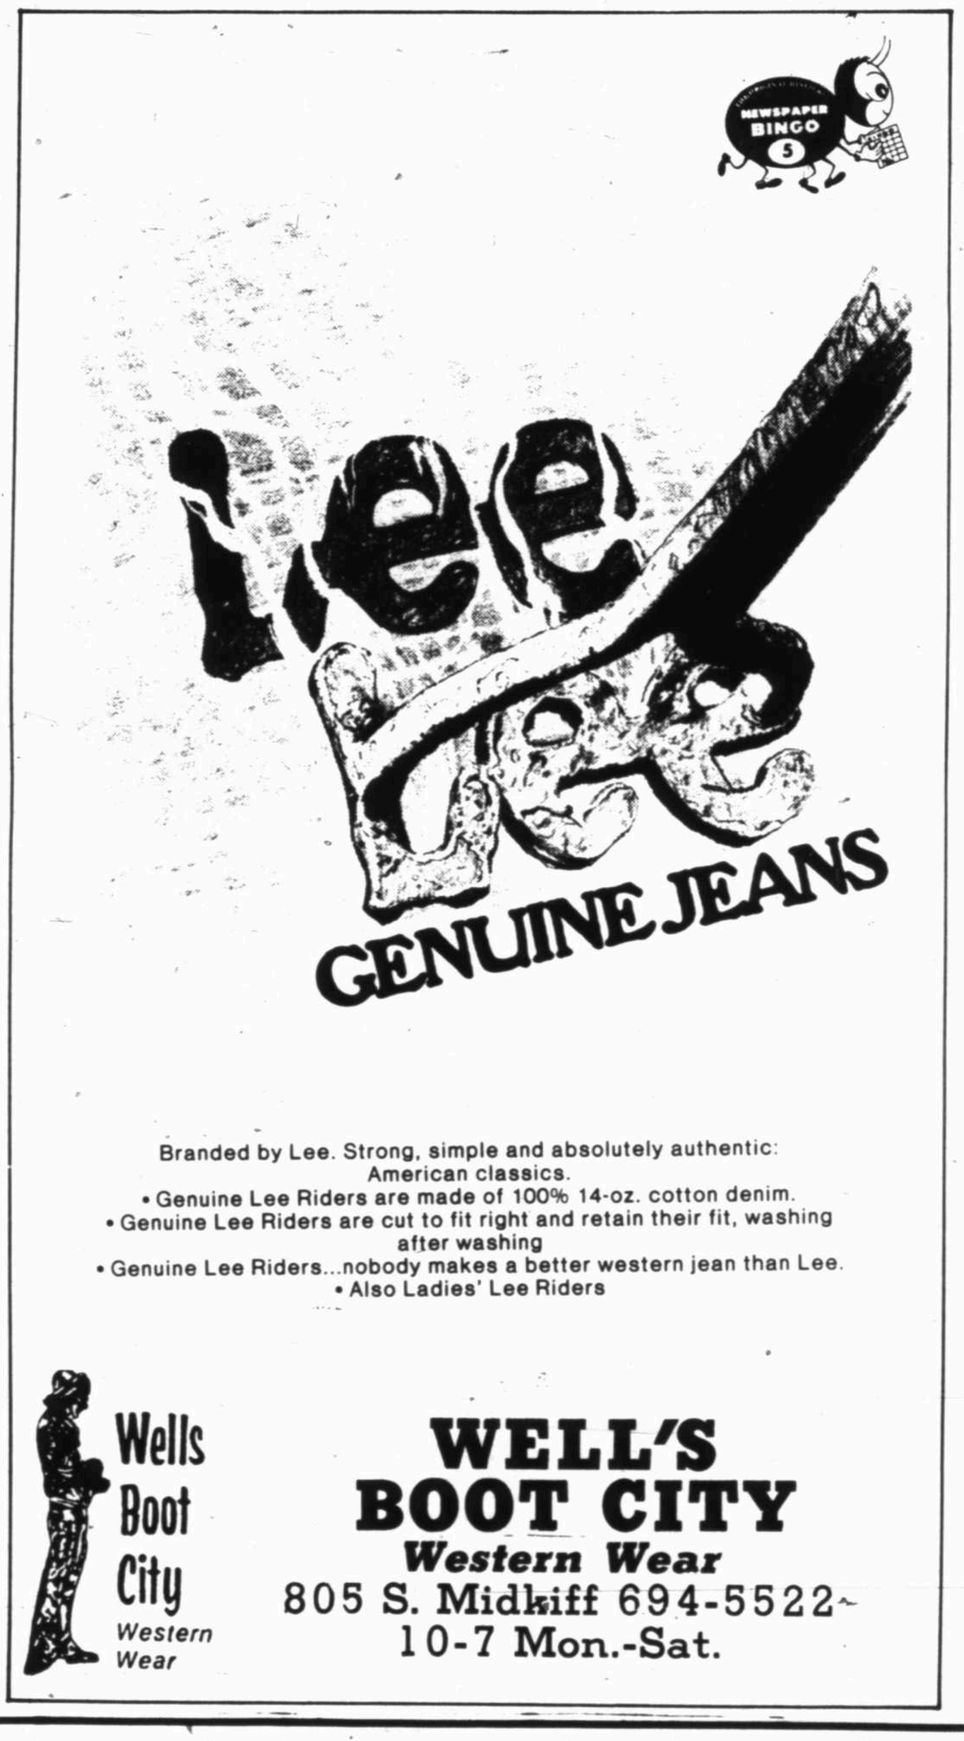

THOMPSON AND Crum, both committee members, will not be allowed to vote on a coach; neither will a third candidate. The third candidate is probably Olson, who will coach the U.S. team in the world championships this summer.

Thompson's Georgetown teams won the NCAA championship in 1984, went to the Final Four in 1982 and 1985 and made the final eight in 1980. In his 14 seasons at Georgetown, his teams have won an average of 23 games per year. Thompson was an assistant coach to Smith in the 1976 Olympics.

BROWN HAS been a college basketball coach for only five years, two at UCLA (1979-81) and the last three at Kansas. But he has taken teams to the Final Four twice, in 1980 at UCLA and this past season when his Jayhawks lost to Duke in a semifinal.

Crum's teams won NCAA titles in 1980 and '86 and have made the Final Four six times.

Sources said some members of the selection committee were concerned whether Brown still will be coaching college basketball when the Olympics are held in Seoul in September 1988. Brown, who coached nine years in professional basketball, is often mentioned as a candidate for NBA jobs.

Heading into the championships, Williams' team is 24-1, suffering its only only loss to Texas Tech before winning both the WJCAC and Region V titles.

No. 1 Moniek Margaroli has a singles record of 29-4 including the conference title. She has one loss to a junior college player, two losses to Division I university players, and a loss to an NAIA university player.

Despite her losses, Margaroli is the top-ranked singles player in the NJCAA. She will attend Oklahoma State next season.

Helene Le Beller is the No. 2 Chap player, with a record of 27-3. She lost to a Cooke player in the regional finals. Her only other losses were to teammate Margaroli in two tournament finals. She is ranked fifth in the NJCAA.

Sarah Swan, No. 3, is 24-6, with losses only to university players. She won both conference and regional titles. Natasha Koprivica is the Chaparral No. 4 player and she has an 18-2 mark and won conference and regional titles. Her only losses were to university players.

Helen Schildknecht has a 22-2 record, her only losses coming in three-set matches to players from Texas Tech and San Jose State. She won conference and regional titles.

Charissa Pruim, at No. 6, has a 16-5 record and won conference and regional titles. Four of her five losses were to university players.

Williams teams Le Beller and Swan for No. 1 doubles. They are 24-6 with conference and regional titles to their credit. They have lost only to university teams and are the top-ranked pair in the nation. Both have signed letters of intent to play for Kentucky.

At No. 2 doubles, Margaroli and Schildknecht won conference and regional titles. Their record is 22-2, their only losses being to Texas Tech and San Jose State. The No. 3 doubles pairs Pruim and Koprivica. They have just four matches as a team, but are 4-0 with conference and regional titles to their credit.

Dollar rebounds

LONDON (AP) — The U.S. dollar rebounded on European exchange markets early today in moderately active trading. Gold bullion prices edged higher.

Traders attributed the dollar's rise mainly to adjustments of investment positions prior to a long weekend in Europe. Many markets on the continent will be closed Monday for a religious holiday.

They said the dollar also was helped by the announced intentions of the Japanese and West German central banks to intervene in support of the currency if it goes lower.

Midmorning dollar rates compared with levels in Europe late Thursday:

—2.2137 West German marks, up from 2.19

—1.8415 Swiss francs, up from 1.8215

—7.0475 French francs, up from 6.9875

—2.498 Dutch guilders, up from 2.469

—1,513.50 Italian lire, up from 1,502.25

—1.3755 Canadian dollars, unchanged

The British pound fell to $1.524 from $1.5365.

In Tokyo, the dollar closed at 164.80 Japanese yen, up from 162.70 yen. Later, in London, the dollar rose further, to 165.15 yen.

Bullion trading remained sluggish.

London's five biggest bullion houses fixed a recommended gold price of $342.75 a troy ounce, up from $341.75 late Thursday.

In Zurich, the metal was bid at $342.60, up from $342.

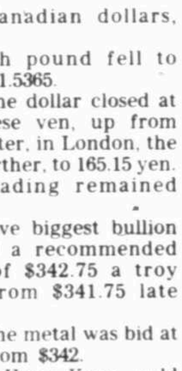

Earlier, in Hong Kong, gold closed at a bid of $342.21, up from $341.99.

Silver bullion was quoted in London at a bid of $5.07 an ounce, up 2 cents.

Dow plunges

NEW YORK (AP) — On Wall Street, the Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks fell 33.60 points Thursday to 1,774.68, its seventh-largest point loss ever and the biggest drop since the indicator declined by 41.91 on April 30.

Analysts said the stock market reacted partly to a plunge in bond prices, which move in the opposite direction of interest rates. The price of some long-term Treasury bonds fell nearly $25 Thursday for every $1,000 in face value.

Marcey Pittman, founder of Alpha & Omega Secretarial Services, started out with a rented typewriter working out of her home. She now supervises employees at two executive suite sites downtown, plus the firm's original location on West Missouri.

Local secretarial service helps businesses survive cutbacks

By ALLEN E. HOWLAND
Business/Oil Writer

Starting a secretarial service without so much as a typewriter takes the courage of your convictions — and then some. But that's just how Marcey Pittman, founder of Alpha & Omega Secretarial Services, got started. Taking her freshly printed business cards door to door, Pittman used connections developed during 13 years in Midland business circles to line up custom secretarial work on a speculative basis — then rushed out and rented a typewriter to finish the work as promised.

From those meager beginnings, Alpha & Omega has blossomed into a bustling enterprise. In just one year, the firm has expanded from its original single memory typewriter and space at Pittman's home into three locations with fully computerized word processing capabilities.

The Bright Side

While Pittman's personal sales approach and tireless door-to-door prospecting are keys to the company's impressive growth, the economic downturn is a factor in Alpha & Omega's success as well. An outside secretarial service is one alternative for the growing number of professionals and smaller businesses being forced to look for ways to cut overhead expenses.

Belt tightening and staff cutting do not necessarily result in a proportionately smaller secretarial and clerical workload. To fill in the gaps during current tough economic times a secretarial service can handle big one-time jobs or overflow work on an ongoing basis.

Paying for services on an as-used basis can save 50 to 75 percent of the total costs (salary and benefits) of an under-utilized full-time employee.

"We aren't anti-secretaries, we're pro-survival," Pittman says, explaining that her company's aim is not to put personal secretaries on the unemployment line, but to provide quality services for those bosses who have been forced to cut back. "The key to our prosperity is the ability to help our clients survive these 'purifying times', from which only the fittest businesses will emerge," she adds.

Alpha & Omega's newest sites are in executive suite settings at 401 East Illinois and on the fifth floor of the Henry Petroleum Building. The executive suite concept is catching on in an increasing segment of the small office market.

Through operating agreements with the building management groups at the two locations, Alpha & Omega provides basic receptionist and secretarial services for all suite tenants for a modest fee, which is included in the office rental. Tenants are then billed only for the time actually used for other secretarial services, such as typing, stenography and transcription.

Executive suite locations hold great promise for future expansion of Alpha & Omega, Pittman says. While no firm commitments for additional suites have been made, many building management groups are considering conversion as a means of attracting tenants.

"Our job is to make each of the 15 to 20 executive suite tenants feel as though they have a full-time secretary at their disposal, without the full-time payroll expenses, responsibilities and headaches," Pittman says. "We're responsible for hiring and firing; selecting, buying, operating and maintaining office equipment; and, keeping up with the details of office operations, like supplies and stationery."

In addition to performing needed secretarial functions for the tenants, the four full-time members of the firm's staff is available for non-tenant projects on a per-job basis, like a standard secretarial service. "In addition to our full-time staff, I maintain contract workers with a vast array of complimentary work experience to handle virtually any project," Pittman notes.

"The quality of our work is a direct reflection of our clients, so the key to our success is being able to make our clients successful and more efficient," she adds. "As long as we continue to do that, the possibilities are limitless."

Coastal shuts-in gas production

From staff and wire reports.

The Coastal Corp. said today current prices for crude oil and natural gas have prompted it to shut-in approximately 53 percent of its gas production in south and west Texas and to conduct detailed studies of the feasibility of shutting-in additional oil and gas production in other areas.

Oscar S. Wyatt Jr., chairman and chief executive officer of Coastal, emphasized the company's producing operations are profitable at today's prices. However, he said "the action of foreign producers to depress prices and our administration's apparent approval of this action means shortage and higher prices are inevitable and will occur sooner than many people think. That's why we believe it is imprudent to produce our reserves at today's distress prices."

Wyatt said the company's south and west Texas gas production was shut-in when wellhead spot market prices fell below $1.50 a thousand cubic feet, at least partly because of competition from depressed fuel oil prices resulting from existing OPEC marketing policies. The company's production elsewhere is being evaluated to determine if the shut-in should be extended to other areas, he said.

"It was a long hard decision," said R.W. Wells, Coastal director of corporate communications, "but when the price of gas fell below $1.50 we simply elected not to sell. It like selling your house and turning down a price offered for it."

Wells said it was a matter of balancing out current cash flow against future revenues. "We decided we had rather have more cash tomorrow than less today," he said. With an annual cash flow of $600 million, the shutting-in of production is not expected to impact upon Coastal operations.

According to Wells most of the gas which will be shut-in is spot market gas in the Vicksburg formation of Hidalgo, Starr and Webb counties in South Texas amd will not affect supplies to end-users in the state.

A large portion of Coastal's production in West Texas comes from the Gomez field in Pecos County. Some of the wells there are expected to be shut-in, but Wells could not offer an estimate as to how many wells or how much production would be involved in West Texas. Detailed studies will determine exactly which wells will be shut-in.

The company's studies will identify wells that can be shut-in without damaging the producing reservoir, subjecting the property to drainage by nearby wells or violating lease provisions. No estimate of the amount of additional production which might be shut-in is available.

Coastal recently reported its operating profit from production operations totaled $10.5 million for the first quarter of 1986, on total production from all areas which averaged 12,000 barrels of oil and 223 million cubic feet of natural gas per day.

The Coastal Corp., a diversified energy company headquartered in Houston, has total assets of approximately $7.7 billion and principal operations in natural gas pipelines, oil and gas exploration and production, refining and marketing, coal and trucking.

Pennzoil revises costs, reports $16 million loss

HOUSTON (AP) — A ruling by the U.S. Securities and Exchange forced Pennzoil officials to write down oil and gas property costs in the first quarter, resulting in a $16.1 million loss for that period, the company's chairman says.

Pennzoil Co. restated its first quarter earnings of 1986 to show the loss of $16.1 million, or 49 cents per share, instead of the previously announced profit of $42.3 million, or 93 cents per share.

Pennzoil Chairman J. Hugh Liedtke blamed the loss on the commission's May 6 ruling, which forced the company to write down the oil and gas property costs in the first quarter instead of writing them down later this year when the company expected prices to improve.

Pennzoil's 48.7 percent owned affiliate, Proven Properties Inc., wrote down its oil and gas properties by about $120 million, according to a Pennzoil statement issued Thursday. Pennzoil's portion of this charge is about $58 million or $1.42 per share, company officials said.

Pennzoil's net income for the first quarter of 1985 was $57.4 million or $1.20 per share.

Sales for the first quarter of 1986 was $511 million, a $67 million decline from the $578 million reported during the same period in 1985.

Mesa reports sale of Unocal stock

AMARILLO, Texas (AP) — Mesa Petroleum Thursday sold 12.35 million shares of common stock of Unocal Corp. for $278 million, the second largest transaction in New York Stock Exchange history, a company official said.

David Batchelder, president of Mesa, said the stock transaction — sold at $22.75 per share — makes the gas and oil company's net book value $249 million or $3.79 a share.

"Were are pleased to successfully sell the Unocal block," Batchelder said. "The proceeds of the sale will be invested until Mesa completes its liquidation in the first quarter of 1987."

Thursday's transaction was handled by Goldman Sachs & Co. and Shearson Lehman Brothers, Batchelder said.

All-American pipeline delayed for impact study

AUSTIN (AP) — A federal judge accepted an agreement to delay construction of a heated oil pipeline until an environmental impact statement is prepared for the section that would cross the Edwards Aquifer recharge zone.

Residents of Travis, Hays and Gillespie counties opposed the last leg of the All American pipeline. The pipeline, with a proposed route over the recharge zone in Central Texas, would carry crude oil from California.

"Hopefully this will resolve all the concerns about the pipeline," Jim George, an attorney for All American, told Judge James Nowlin.

Under the agreement, the U.S. Bureau of Land Management will study the route over the recharge zone as well as alternative routes. The agreement between Texas, All American Pipeline Co. and the Bureau of Land Management also calls for public hearings during the study process.

Officials said the data-gathering process will delay for almost a year construction on the 460-mile Texas segment, east of McCamey, of the 1,650-mile pipeline.

Work on a small portion of the pipeline in Texas, west of McCamey, will continue because that section was included in a previous environmental study, officials said.

The state of Texas sued the pipeline company and the bureau in federal court. The state said an environmental statement was needed for the pipeline from McCamey in West Texas to the Gulf Coast.

The state has agreed to raise further objections, if any, during the review process. The state also has agreed not to challenge the adequacy of the study once it is completed.

California lawsuit accuses Chevron of discrimination

By PAUL SHINOFF
Hearst News Service

SAN FRANCISCO - A group of Kern County, Calif., black and Hispanic oil workers has sued Chevron U.S.A. Inc., alleging that the subsidiary of Chevron Corp. passed them over in promoting whites to supervisory positions.

The class-action lawsuit, filed Monday in U.S. District Court in San Francisco, said qualified minority workers have been kept in entry-level jobs even after years of seniority at oil-production facilities in Kern County.

"These people can't get promoted," said attorney Bill Lann Lee of the Los Angeles-based Center for Law in the Public Interest, which filed the suit on behalf of the workers, together with the Mexican American Legal Defense and Education Fund.

Lee said that while 29 percent of the entry-level jobs have gone to minority workers, only 1 percent of supervisors at the Kern County facilities are black or Hispanic. "No blacks or Hispanics have been promoted from foreman to higher jobs," he said.

Chevron spokesman G. Michael Marcy declined to comment on the specifics of the lawsuit Wednesday, but said the company would defend its affirmative-action hiring and promotion record. "Chevron is proud of its accomplishmmnts in assuring equal opportunities for all workers," Marcy said.

OIL & GAS REPORT

EXPLORATION HIGHLIGHTS

Strawn producer flows 718 barrels

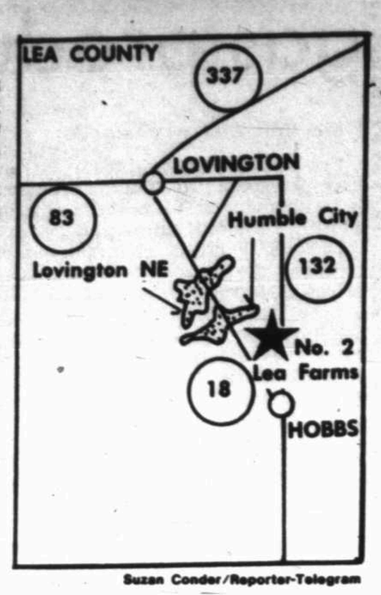

From Staff Reports

INEXCO OIL CO., Houston, has added a sixth Strawn producer and northeast extention to the Humble City South field of Lea County with completion of the No. 2 Lea Farms.

On potential test, the well flowed 718 barrels of crude, 846 Mcfd and no water on a 24/64 inch choke with a flowing tubing pressure of 353 psi from perforations 11,512 to 11,580 ft. No treatment was reported.

The Houston firm drilled the well to a total depth of 11,800 ft., setting 5 1/2 inch casing at that depth, and plugged it back to 11,726 ft. Pay was topped at 11,512 ft.

Location is 1,800 ft. from north and 500 ft. from east lines of Section 14, T17s, R37e.

Sun tests recompletion to flow 480 barrels

A recompletion effort in the North Anderson Ranch field of Lea County has yielded a very strong Wolfcamp producer for SUN EXPLORATION & PRODUCTION CO.

Sun reentered the No. 3 State Land "76", a Cisco producer in the North Anderson Ranch field, and recompleted it in the Anderson Ranch (Wolfcamp) field, flowing 480 barrels of 44.1 gravity crude, 589 Mcfd and no water on an unreported choke. Flowing tubing pressure was 720 psi, and gas-oil ratio is 1,227:1. The well is flowing from Wolfcamp perforations 9,814 to 9,872 ft., which had been acidized with 3,000 gallons of 15 percent acid.

The well was originally drilled to 10,625 ft., where 5 1/2 inch casing was set, in early 1985. Sun reentered and plugged the well back to 10,475 ft. with a cast iron bridge plug.

Formation tops, on ground elevation of 4,301.9 ft., include Anhydrite at 1,298 ft., Salt at 1,406, Base Salt at 2,354, Yates at 2,560, Santa Rosa at 2,767, San Andres at 4,125, Glorieta at 5,671, Tubb at 6,890, Abo at 7,607, Wolfcamp at 8,896, and the Pennsylvanian at 10,243 ft.

Location is 4,720 ft. from south and 660 ft. from east lines of Section 2, T16s, R32e.

Lea field producer flows 293 barrels oil

MEWBOURNE OIL CO. has added to Upper Bone Springs production in the Querecho Plains field of Lea County with completion of the No. 12 Federal "E".

On potential test, the well flowed 293 barrels of crude, 333 Mcfd and 282 barrels of water on a 26/64 inch choke with a flowing tubing pressure of 225 psi. Production is from perforatioins 8,470 to 8,532 ft., no treatment reported.

Drilled to a total depth of 9,050 ft., the well was plugged back to 8,970 ft. with 5 1/2 inch casing set at 9,052 ft. Pay was topped at 8,470 ft.

Location is 1,980 ft. from north and 330 ft. from east lines of Section 27, T18s, R32e.

Strawn pay opened in Tom Green field

HEXAGON OIL & GAS, INC., Fort Worth, opened Strawn production in the Fortson-Burke (Canyon gas) field of Tom Green County with completion of the No. 2 Runion-Turner.

Hexagon finaled the well to flow 97.52 barrels of 44.3 gravity crude and 2.86 barrels of water on a 32/64 inch choke from perforations 6,678 to 6,720 ft. The interval was acidized with 2,000 gallons of acid and fractured with 40,000 gallons of frac and 56,000 lbs. sand. Gas-oil ratio is 1,887:1.

Permitted as a 7,400 ft. wildcat, the well was drilled to a total depth of 7,141 ft. and was plugged back to 7,125 ft., where 4 1/2 inch casing was set.

On ground elevation of 2,071 ft., formation tops include the Clearfork at 920 ft., Cisco at 5,604, Canyon at 6,094, Strawn at 6,675, Strawn Lime at 6,953, and the Ellenburger at 7,096 ft.

Location is 100 ft. from southeast and 417 ft. from southwest lines of Section 232A, Block 106, Mason-Perry subdivision of the Collyns Ranch, five miles west of Carlsbad.

Recompletion yields Wolfcamp discovery

The Padgitt field of Crockett County gained a Wolfcamp discovery as ROSEWOOD RESOURCES, INC., Dallas, recompleted the No. 2 James T. Padgitt.

Formerly a dual producer in the Connell gas and Lower Strawn oil formations of the Padgitt field, the well was reentered and potentialed to produce 16 barrels of 38.1 gravity crude and no water on a gas lift. Production is from perforations 5,558 to 5,562 ft., which had been acidized with 1,000 gallons of acid and fractured with 10,000 gallons of frac and 15,000 lbs. sand. Gas-oil ratio is 6,689:1.

The well was plugged back to 6,580 ft., no original depth available.

Formation tops, on ground elevation of 2,273 ft., include the Middle Wolfcamp at 5,598, Upper Strawn at 5,840, Middle Strawn at 6,104, Lower Strawn at 6,273, Simpson at 6,409, and the Connell at 6,434 ft.

Location is 467 ft. from northeast and southeast lines of Section 17, Block AZ, S.C.White survey, eight miles northeast of Sheffield.

Crockett field gains two new producers

A Midland operator has completed two producers in Crockett County's Vaughn field, both in the J.M. Shannon Estate "B" lease, and both located in Section 4, Block UV, GC&SF survey.

WINTERSHALL OIL & GAS CORP. completed the No. 17 J.M. Shannon Estate "B" to pump 173.60 barrels of 25.9 gravity crude and 549.72 barrels of water from perforations 1,420 to 1,4502 ft.

The second, the No. 34 J.M. Shannon Estate "B" was potentialed to pump 18.10 barrels of 25.9 gravity crude and 692.36 barrels of water from perforations 1,376 to 1,513 ft.

Midland firm reports three barrel discovery

C.F. LAWRENCE & ASSOCIATES, INC., Midland, has completed a Yates discovery in Pecos County, east of the Heiner field and southeast of the Double "L" field.

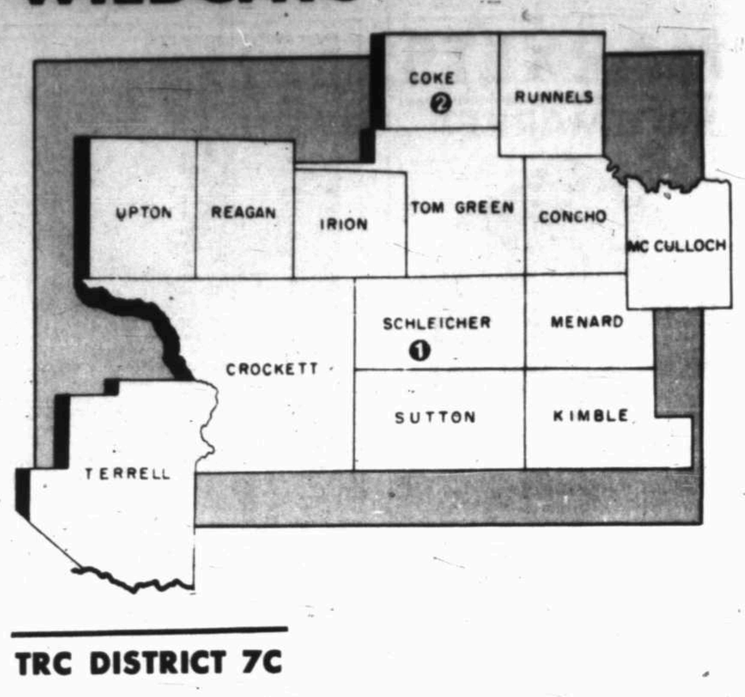

On potential test, the No. 1 Johnson "AN" flowed 3.4 barrels of 32 gravity crude, 55 Mcfd and 4.6 barrels of water on a 16/64 inch choke with a flowing tubing pressure of 55 psi. Production is from perforations 1,245 to 1,280 ft., which had been acidized with 250 gallons of 7.5 percent NeFe acid and fractured with 9,400 gallons of gel and 22,400 lbs. sand. Gas-oil ratio is 16,176:1.

Drilled to a total depth of 6,500 ft., where 4 1/2 inch casing was set, the well was plugged back to 1,619 ft.

The well topped the Yates at 1,240 ft. on ground elevation of 2,538 ft. Pay was topped at 1,245 ft.

Location is 467 ft. from west and south lines of Section 590, GC&SF survey, 13 miles southwest of Imperial.

The No. 7-2-A Wylie is staked 1,630 ft. from south and 650 ft. from west lines of the same block and section. Both wells are contracted to drill to 4,000 ft.

Dresser earnings fall 94 percent

DALLAS (AP) — Dresser Industries, Inc. reported that earnings plunged 94 percent in the second quarter because of the rapid decline in oil prices.

Earnings in the second quarter ending April 30 were $1.4 million, or 1 cent a share, on revenues of $950.7 million, compared with earnings of $23.3 million, or 31 cents a share, on revenues of $1.03 billion for the similar period in 1985.

"The decrease in drilling activity began in mid-January 1986 as a result of declining oil and gas prices and has been in a virtual 'free fall' ever since," Murphy said in a statement.

He said the oilfield sector was profitable in the first quarter, but it lost money in the second quarter. He said performance in other sectors, especially the refining business, improved.

OIL & GAS DIGEST

Lear suspends dividends to shareholders

DALLAS (SWN) Lear Petroleum Corp. announced that its board of directors has suspended the common and preferred stock cash dividends and the distribution of Partnership Units to Lear common shareholders. This action was prompted by Bond Indenture restrictions relating to dividend payments and not by an inability to fund the dividends from Lear's cash flow.

Including a first quarter 1986 ceiling test write-down of $24 million, Lear has taken a total charge to earnings of $87 million over the past 12 months to reflect reductions in the book value of its oil and gas properties. These charges have resulted from declining crude oil and natural gas prices. The impact of these charges, based on formula derived levels of earnings as defined in Lear's Bond Indentures, has resulted in the dividend suspensions. Dividends on Lear's preferred stock will accumulate on a quarterly basis until paid.

Samson announces first quarter financial results

TULSA (SWN) — Samson Energy Co. Limited Partnership announced its financial results for the quarter ended March 31, 1986 — the first quarter of operations since the partnership's formation on January 1, 1986. First quarter 1986 oil and gas revenues were $3,535,000, compared with $4,424,000 pro forma oil and gas revenues for the first quarter 1985. Cash flow from operations totaled $2,481,000. During the same period in 1985, this figure totaled $2,594,000. The higher percentage of cash flow to revenues for the first quarter 1986 vs. 1985 is primarily the result of successfully reducing operating and administrative expenses.

G-H reports operating improvement, still loses

HOUSTON (SWN) — Galveston-Houston Co. reported that its first quarter operating loss improved 37.4 percent from $(1,253,000) in the first quarter of 1985 to $(784,000) for the three months ended March 31, 1986.

The company reported that its net loss attributable to common stock for the first quarter of 1986 was $(4,251,000) or $(.74) per share compared to $(2,012,000) or $(.35) per share for the three months ended March 31, 1985. Included in the 1986 first quarter's net loss applicable to common stock is (2,177,000) which represents the Company's 37.5 percent interest in the net loss of TriumphLOR, Inc. and $511,000 of preferred dividends.

AOI Coal reports net loss for first quarter

MIDLAND (SWN) AOI Coal Co. announced revenues of $13,189,000 and a net loss of $144,000, or $.01 per share, for first quarter 1986. Per share data is based on 11,552,780 common shares outstanding. Revenues and net earnings for the comparable period in 1985 were $14,255,000 and $837,000, respectively, with earnings per share amounting to $.07. The company implemented cost reduction measures and operational efficiencies in first quarter 1986 which should reduce operating expenses for the remainder of the year.

Trade group against proposed change for IRAs

By CHET CURRIER

NEW YORK (AP) — The Senate Finance Committee had barely finished work on its plan for tax overhaul when the refrain began: "Please don't take my IRA away."

Five years after they began to develop as one of the nation's most popular savings vehicles, Individual Retirement Accounts are suddenly under a legislative cloud.

The Senate committee's proposal would not do away with IRAs by any means. They would still be available to all working Americans, and they would retain all their present tax advantages for people not covered by pension plans where they work.

But those who do have company pension plans could no longer take a tax deduction for annual IRA contributions of up to $2,000 per worker.

Everyone would still be able to enjoy the benefits of tax-free compounding of interest, dividends or capital gains within their IRAs. Over long periods of time, this can be a powerful wealth-building force.

But the value of the compounding effect is more subtle than the feeling of gratification that comes with the up-front tax deduction for contributions. If that deduction is lost, it is widely argued, many people's enthusiasm for IRAs will wane.

One of the loudest voices raised so far against the proposed change has been that of the Investment Company Institute, the trade group that represents mutual funds in Washington.

And no wonder — a curtailment of IRA investing would represent a roadblock for the industry at a time when it is enjoying explosive growth.

According to figures compiled by the Employee Benefit Research Institute, $37 billion of the assets in mutual funds as of the end of 1985 was in IRAs and Keogh plans, a similar type of tax-deferred savings program for the self-employed.

In 1985, the data show, the funds gained market share in the competition for IRA money, primarily at the expense of savings and loan institutions. Interest rates offered by savings institutions were falling, while the prices of stocks and bonds held by many mutual funds rose sharply.

Now, $37 billion might not seem to be much when you consider that assets of all mutual funds totaled nearly $500 billion at the end of 1985.

But fund sponsors have spent a lot of time and money going after the IRA market. The way it has been growing in the past couple of years, it promised to be a very big business in the future.

So the Investment Company Institute is anything but a disinterested party. Nevertheless, it has a case to make.

"Unlike the abusive tax shelters that benefit a few wealthy individuals, the IRA is a tax deferment program that is extremely important to the average working American," declared David Silver, president of the trade group.

"Under the IRA program, the cost to the U.S. Treasury is temporary, since taxes are paid at ordinary tax rates on the money withdrawn from an IRA at retirement."

There has been much debate over whether IRAs have acted as the spur to savings and investment they were intended to be. The rough measures used to gauge the savings rate in this country have shown no increase.

Some observers argue that most IRA money so far has come from middle- to upper-income workers who would have saved it anyway.

On the other hand, IRA advocates say the savings rate might well have been even lower than it is if it were not for the hard-to-resist appeal of the $2,000 annual IRA deduction. Because the contribution for each year has to be made by the tax deadline, they say, it keeps people from procrastinating on their intentions to save money.

Maybe a fair, simple tax system cannot be achieved without disposing of such special items as the IRA deduction. But for many people, it would still be sad to see it go.

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

When rates go up it's wise to get out of Ginnie Maes

By BILL DOYLE

Q. My wife and I have invested in a Ginnie Mae mutual fund, which belongs to a "family of funds." We can transfer our investment to other funds run by the same management organization, without commission charge, by making a phone call.

At what point in rising interest rates should we switch to another fund?

Doyle

A. Hold off a bit, while I sweep up the pieces of my crystal ball. It shatters every time a question such as yours reaches my rolltop desk. You're asking me to outguess the ups and downs of the bond and stock markets. No one can do that with absolute accuracy.

Switching mutual funds can pay off, if you time your moves right. It's wise to get out of bonds and other fixed-income securities, such as Ginnie Mae funds, when interest rates move up. But those rates have taken such wide swings in recent years that it's impossible to say at which particular point it's wise to make a switch.

• • •

Q. My individual retirement account is in a mutual fund. I reinvest my dividends and capital gains distributions to buy more shares. Do I have to report those dividends and capital gains on my income tax return? Or, can I wait until I am past age 70 1/2 and start taking money out of the IRA?

A. Wait until you make IRA withdrawals. At that point, all the money you take out will be taxable as ordinary income. Until then, everything in your IRA — including the dividends and capital gains distributions — remains sheltered from income tax.

JEANE DIXON'S your horoscope

© 1986, Los Angeles Times Syndicate

Saturday, May 17, 1986

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Develop and follow a specific financial plan after consulting with experts. A new friendship or business deal will lead to true love. Heed your intuition in October and in early 1987. Your subconscious warns you that someone is not all he or she claims. Fewer pressures at work mean less tension at home. Reach out to a loved one you may have unintentionally offended. A real estate deal could lead to a windfall!

CELEBRITY BIRTHDATES: former welterweight champion Sugar Ray Leonard, actress Brigitte Nilsson (Mrs. Sylvester Stallone), Yankee pitcher Porfi Altimirano, Ayatollah Khomeini, the San Diego Padres' Ozzie Virgil.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Romantic feelings surface when least expected. You could have second thoughts about making a permanent commitment. Be honest with yourself.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Exercise helps relieve tension. Realize that you are not solely responsible for mate's problems. A candid conversation or timely compromise averts an ugly confrontation. Speak from the heart.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Look for ways to improve communication with romantic partner. Travel boosts your spirits. Take along a companion who is a good sport.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Seek new outlets for your talents if you feel stale. Community projects hold particular appeal. The romantic outlook is bright, thanks to several new admirers. The evening hours are great for socializing.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Partnerships merit special consideration. Learn to forgive and forget. Use your authority wisely. Encourage a young person to become more self-reliant. Those who can work without supervision will go far.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A teen-ager draws closer when you do less talking and more listening. A family outing helps bridge the generation gap. Look for activities loved ones of all ages will enjoy. Limit spending.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Your social life is busy and boosts your spirits. Finances could be troublesome. Enlist family members' cooperation in reducing spending, building savings. A casual meeting with an authority figure could lead to better communication.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): An imaginative approach can do wonders for your finances. Loved ones are willing to reduce expenses by performing more household tasks. Pursue romance.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Your philosophical outlook impresses a young person. Expand your social circle by cultivating new acquaintances. An out-of-town visitor adds excitement to your day but could tax your wallet.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Stop underestimating yourself and others will follow suit. Keeping abreast of world affairs makes you a more interesting companion. Rid your closets of clutter. Give unwanted items to a favorite charity.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Reconsider a relationship that is no longer working. Perhaps you would both be better off if you parted company. Adopt a common-sense approach to any financial problems. Save for a rainy day.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Exciting, new ideas boost your morale. Negotiate a positive agreement with friends or neighbors. Offer encouragement to someone who is young and inexperienced. A new pal brightens your social life.

Everyone is familiary with the basic holdup play: refusing to win an early trick in the suit with the ace to exhaust one of the defenders (or, in some cases, declarer) of cards in that suit. But the holdup play also crops up in some disguised versions which are not so easy to spot. South's spade holding here is a case in point.

This deal occurred in the Men's Team event at the recent Spring North American Championships in Portland, Ore. West's two-club cuebid was a limited takeout in the major suits, so both of North's bids were cuebids. North-South settled in a normal three no trump contract.

West led his fourth-best spade. If declarer carelessly wins East's queen with the king, he will be defeated if the club finesse fails. When in with the king of clubs, East can lead a spade through declarer's jack, enabling West to cash five spade tricks.

When Michael Kamil of Ft. Lee, N.J., held the South cards, he correctly allowed the queen of spades to win the first trick. East continued with a spade to the ace and West cleared the suit, but the defenders were helpless. Declarer conceded a club and made nine tricks in comfort.

The play is more interesting if East shifts to a heart at trick two. To make his contract, declarer must win and lead the king of spades immediately to set up a trick in the suit. If West wins the ace and reverts to a heart, declarer must then hold up the ace of hearts for one round before going after the clubs.

If, at trick three, declarer were to lead a club instead of a spade, he can be defeated. When East wins the king of clubs he continues with the hearts to set up the suit while his partner still has the ace of spades as an entry, and declarer has only eight tricks.

Journalist Theodore White dies

White

NEW YORK (AP) — Theodore H. White, the Pulitzer Prize-winning journalist whose "Making of the President" books chronicled the presidential elections from Nixon vs. Kennedy to Nixon vs. McGovern, has died at age 71.

White, who also was responsible for the insider style of reporting on politics and the characterization of the Kennedy years as Camelot, died late Thursday at Lenox Hill Hospital.

He had been in critical condition at Lenox Hill since he was admitted May 9 after suffering a stroke, said hospital spokeswoman Anne Warner.

White, born May 6, 1915, was stricken three days after his birthday while writing a sequel to his autobiography at his East Side townhouse, according to his longtime friend, writer Richard Clurman.

The "Making of the President" series began with the 1960 race between John F. Kennedy and Richard M. Nixon and included four of his 11 books.

The first book sold more than 4 million copies, won him a Pulitzer Prize and spawned competitors who tried to match White's reporting style.

Because his aim was post-election history, White could ignore day-to-day reporting, getting fill-ins as needed from colleagues.

But by the 1972 race between Nixon and George McGovern, White said he had invented a method of reporting "which I now sincerely regret."

"I'd get into a room and disappear into the woodwork," he told an interviewer. "Now the rooms are so crowded with reporters getting behind-the-scenes stories that nobody can get behind-the-scenes stories."

He also said the process had made McGovern a fish in a bowl.

"All of us are observing him, taking notes like mad, getting all the little details...Who cares if the guy had milk and Total for breakfast?"

In a 1978 review of White's autobiographical "In Search of History," William Greider, then of The Washington Post, said White's influence "still frames the way in which most reporters look at politics and history."

"He writes like a fair wind, refreshing the landscape," Greider wrote. "He tells a story so well that familiar events become compelling, pulling readers forward to a climax they already know."

But as the campaign books accumulated every four years, even admirers complained that White was too much a hero worshipper and perhaps out of touch with trends in the country.

"He was exasperated and even a little meanspirited about those unruly citizens who were out in the streets, attacking the process which he found so worthy," Greider said.

White's coining the term Camelot stemmed from a short Life magazine article he wrote shortly after Kennedy's 1963 assassination.

White quoted Jacqueline Kennedy as remembering that her husband loved the title song of the Broadway musical that ended: "Don't let it be forgot, that once there was a spot, for one brief shining moment that was known as Camelot."

White concluded his article: "For one brief shining moment there was Camelot."

White, a chain-smoking, lifelong Democrat, admitted that after reporters, he most enjoyed the company of politicians.

PRINCETON, Ill. (AP) — The company making the Chicago Bears' Super Bowl championship rings says the one for William "Refrigerator" Perry will be its biggest ever — a size 23, slightly larger than a half-dollar.

"It's really huge. When you get up to a size 18 or 19, that's considered incredible. But this — this is really huge," Al Dahms, manager of the Josten's Inc. plant, said Thursday.

The old record-holder at Josten's was a size 22 — but that was for Perry, too, while he was in college at Clemson, Dahms said. "I don't know if he's still growing or what."

The average adult male wears a ring ranging from a size 10 to 13, he said.

NEW YORK (AP) — A good memory is the most important quality for a father, said Treasury Secretary James A. Baker III as he, comedian Soupy Sales and 11 other notable dads were honored as "Fathers of the Year."

"If you can remember what it was like when you were a kid, you'll be a better father," Baker said Thursday as the 13 were honored by the National Father's Day Committee for the example they set as fathers.

Baker and Sales were joined by Gov. Thomas H. Kean of New Jersey; Arthur Levitt Jr., Chairman of the American Stock Exchange; William Webster, director of the FBI; Maxwell M. Rabb, Ambassador to Italy; Lou Piniella, New York Yankees manager; Ozzie Smith of the St. Louis Cardinals; Denis Potvin of the New York Islanders; Tim and Tom Gullikson, twin tennis pros; Herbert Green, golf pro; and Roland Smith, a CBS newscaster.

Kean, wearing a blue and green tie patterned with the words "Papa, daddy, father," said his best advice to his three children was "in their lingo, 'Keep it cool.'"

MOSCOW (AP) — American industrialist Armand Hammer says he hopes the opening of his private art collection in Moscow "will be another positive step toward the long-sought goal of improving" super-power relations.

Hammer's collection of 125 masterpieces dating to the 16th century had been on display in Leningrad since March 25 as part of a special tour arranged under the renewed U.S.-Soviet cultural exchange accord. It opened Thursday in Moscow and is scheduled to move later this year to Novosibirsk, Odessa and Kiev.

Accompanying Hammer to the State Picture Gallery were former Ambassador to Washington Anatoly F. Dobrynin, a Communist Party Central Committee Secretary responsible for international relations, and two American doctors treating victims of the Chernobyl nuclear accident.

A collection from the Hermitage Museum in Leningrad is touring the United States, currently on display at Washington's National Gallery.

HILLSBORO, Ohio (AP) — Country singer Johnny Paycheck admitted on the stand Thursday at his shooting trial that he shot a man in a bar but said it was an accident.

Paycheck said he intended to fire into the barroom ceiling to scare away the approaching Larry Wise, but his finger accidentally hit the trigger, the gun discharged, and a bullet grazed Wise in the head.

Paycheck, born as Donald Lytle in Greenfield, testified the shooting occurred after Wise's friend, Lloyd Bowers, harassed him on the night of Dec. 19.

"Why do you call yourself Paycheck, when your name's Lytle?" Paycheck said Bowers asked him.

"It irritated me a little bit. I told him to leave me alone," Paycheck said.

Paycheck testified that Bowers later came back over to him and said, "For a little SOB, you're a good singer."

Paycheck said he replied, "'Mister, you don't insult me and compliment me in the same breath.' "

Minutes later, Paycheck said, Wise approached him with a beer bottle upraised to his lips. Paycheck testified he feared that Wise was going to crash the bottle down on Paycheck's head and so pulled out a .22-caliber handgun.

STATE in brief

China's vice premier due

DALLAS (AP) — Next week's visit of China's vice premier for economic affairs will be "mutually beneficial and unlimited," a city official said.

Yao Yilin, the highest-ranking Chinese official scheduled to visit the United States this year, will be in Dallas Monday through Wednesday as part of a five-city tour, said Richard Rubottom, the city's director of international affairs.

Yilin also will stop in San Francisco, Washington D.C., New York and Seattle.

The itinerary for Yilin and a delegation of 20 Chinese government and trade leaders will focus on housing and food distribution in the Dallas area, Rubottom said.

Yilin oversees China's economic and commercial development.

Dawson hires watchman

DAWSON (AP) — City Council has hired a new night watchman to replace an elderly man who was slain, but some residents of this Central Texas community would rather have a police force.

Those who packed three council meetings in 10 days reacted angrily to last week's 3-2 vote not to hire a policeman for the city of 750, about 60 miles south of Dallas. Some said a police presence is needed to combat a drug problem.

The three council members who voted against the measure cited the expense of an officer's salary, police car and liability insurance.

The two councilmen who voted in favor and Mayor Robert Holder, who votes only in case of a tie, argued that the money could be raised.

"We've got a couple of hardliners around here that don't want law enforcement brought into this town," Holder said. "I'm an American, and I believe the majority ought to rule. When you have a large majority of the town saying they are concerned about something like they are, someone ought to take a little deeper interest in it."

Councilman J.C. Slater, who voted against hiring an officer, said the reasons are strictly financial.

White likes guard plan

AUSTIN (AP) — If the federal government supplies the necessary money and equipment, Gov. Mark White says he would approve using Texas National Guard troops to patrol for drug smugglers along the Mexican border.

"Our borders are almost totally defenseless," White said. "We have to do something about it. I think that's becoming more dramatically apparent."

Earlier this week, the commander of the Texas National Guard told a congressional committee in Washington that the state is prepared to commit troops to the border if asked to do so.

"It's a good way to use the National Guard," said Maj. Gen. James T. Dennis, adding that both Army and Air Force guardsmen could be assigned to the job.

Hispanic role debated

HOUSTON (AP) — Republican runoff candidates Roy Barrera Jr. and Ed Walsh, in a debate sponsored by the Young Republicans of Houston, clashed on the role of Hispanic voters in the fall election.

Barrera, a Hispanic, contended he could win in the heavily Hispanic region of South Texas where he said no Republican has. But Walsh disagreed, saying only 2 percent of the registered Hispanic voters participated in the Republican primary in Barrera's home county, Bexar.

Barrera and Walsh, who will compete in a June 7 runoff, made their comments Wednesday.

The two candidates both agreed Democratic incumbent Jim Mattox is soft on crime and — for the sake of Texas — must be defeated in the November general election.

But they argued fiercely over who is the greater proponent of the death penalty and who would make the best nominee for attorney general.

Impersonator sought

COLDSPRING (AP) — A Houston female impersonator is being sought after a grand jury indicted him in the April murder of his roommate, a 20-year-old Lafayette, La., woman.

Authorities said Clifford Youens, 32, was indicted Wednesday by a San Jacinto County grand jury in the death of Patrice LeBlanc, who had lived in his condominium after moving to Houston last summer.

Ms. LeBlanc's body — wrapped in a comforter sewn at the ends and anchored to a pair of cinder blocks — was flound floating in Lake Livingston on March 23. She had been stabbed and slashed at least 39 times.

Perot film 'accurate'

NEW BRUNSWICK, N.J. (AP) — Texas millionaire-industrialist H. Ross Perot says the television movie depicting the rescue of two of his employees is a fairly accurate portrayal of the mission. But the short, balding Perot says the choice of actor Richard Crenna to play him might have been too flattering.

"People have been giving me a hard time," said Perot, after speaking at a $60-a-plate business conference luncheon at Rutgers University Thursday. "Richard Crenna is tall. I'm short. He's good looking. I'll never win a beauty contest. He has perfect diction. I have a strong Texas accent."

The two-part movie "On Wings of Eagles" begins Sunday on NBC-TV. The film is an adaption of Ken Follett's book on the 1979 rescue of two of Perot's employees imprisoned in Iran.

Bad land practices cited in desert formation

STATE

RIO GRANDE CITY (AP) — In the newly formed South Texas desert, cows fall dead from starvation and sand dunes bury fences.

Drought, indiscriminant brush clearing and poor range management have turned 15,000 acres of Starr County pasture into a vast wasteland, said Dario Salinas, a range conservationist with the U.S. Soil Conservation Service.

During the late 1960s and early 1970s — when the price of grain approached $7.50 a bushel — would-be farmers cleared native brush from pastures and sowed their oats.

Grain prices dropped, and the land — which couldn't be irrigated anyway — was abandoned.

Over the next few years, wind and rain carried away top soil, and exposed rocks, pebbles and sand to the hot South Texas sun.

On a drive through the new desert, Salinas pointed out the tops of fence posts which poked through drifts of sand.

"Sometimes during midday, when I drive down this road, I have to turn my pickup headlights on because the blowing dust is so bad the visibility is down to nothing," Salinas said.

"We have had over six months of drought, and poor range conditions have increased the problem."

When it does rain and the grass does grow, ranchers overstock their pastures, Salinas said.

"Soon the excess cattle overgraze, and the range condition rapidly deteriorates," Salinas said.

One South Texas rancher said his cattle had eaten all the vegetation on his ranch.

"We don't dare drive into the areas where these cows are because they're too weak to move away from our truck," the rancher said.

"The other day when I blew my truck's horn so a cow would get out of the way, it simply collapsed. We could not get it up, so we just had to shoot it and drag it off to burn...."

In some areas, the soil is in such poor condition that a heavy rain would only further damage it, Salinas said.

"If we get a very hard rain, these desert areas will be wrecked even further by water erosion. It's a vicious cycle now," he said.

Salinas and other conservationists with the SCS are trying to help area landowners restore native vegetation to the once expansive brushland.

In northwestern Starr County, conservationists and landowners have dammed tributaries that empty into Los Olmos Creek. They hope the lakes — which are up to four acres wide and 30 feet deep — will prevent water loss through the creek and provide water for irrigation.

"I know of several smart ranchers who have developed fantastic wildlife habitat programs, and they lease their land at from six to ten dollars per acre." Salinas said.

Organizations to stage health fair at local mall

By RON GILMORE
Staff Writer

If Midlanders want to see where their tax dollars go at Midland Memorial Hospital, they will have the chance this weekend, said a MMH spokesman — but they will have to go to a local shopping mall.

Local health organizations including Midland Memorial Hospital, Casa De Amigos, American Cancer Society, Cystic Fibrosis, Midland Fire Department's Emergency Services and Clearview, will host a day-long health fair Saturday at Midland Park Mall.

The fair, sponsored by MMH, will include displays and booths from the above agencies and several presentations by different departments from the hospital itself.

"The fair is in observance of National Hospital Week and will emphasize the theme, 'Sow the Seeds of Caring,' " said MMH spokeswoman Lisa Ball.

Texas Hospital Week, recently proclaimed by Gov. Mark White, also is being celebrated this week in conjunction with the national recongizance.

According to Ms. Ball, MMH will offer a wide variety of displays featuring new equipment and services.

"The emergency department will demonstrate bandaging techniques and cardiopulmonary will perform pulmonary function tests," she said. "Dietary will provide nutritional information and the MMH Auxiliary will give information on car seats."

Also featured is a demonstration by the accounting department on "Where Your Tax Dollars Go," to be aided with a large wooden pie charts and graphs.

Also included in the health fair is a presentation by the Labor/Delivery/Recovery department. Visitors may be able to try out an actual LDR bed and see how an electronic fetal monitor operates.

Other departments to be represented include surgery, laboratory, physical medicine and rehabilitation services, hyperbaric oxygen services, human resources, nursing education, radiology and critical care.

Casa de Amigos, too, will have a booth set up at the fair and will be giving free blood glucose tests from 11 a.m. to 6 p.m. The tests, used for diabetic screening, will be administered by nurses.

> — Lisa Ball of MMH

"People who want to have their blood tested should not eat anything a couple of hours before they get tested," warned a Casa de Amigos spokeswoman.

Also represented will be the American Cancer Society, which plans to have a display on "Taking Control."

The ACS will have a 15-minute video, brochures, a flip chart and trained volunteers on hand to answer questions on how to reduce the risk of cancer.

The health fair, to be held from 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. Saturday, is just one of several similar events being held across the state in honor of Texas Hospital Week, proclaimed by Gov. Mark White in March.

"It is fitting and proper to salute the health care system in Texas for its contributions to the public welfare, high standards of care and outstanding education and research programs," White said at the time.

According to a report from the Texas Hospital Association, which sponsors Texas Hospital Week, the national celebration originated in 1921.

"Matthew A. Foley, a hospital magazine editor, selected May 12, the birthday of Florence Nightingale, as a special day for hospitals 'so that the community may know its hospital' " said the THA. "In 1924, the American Hospital Association assumed sponsorship of National Hospital Day and expanded the celebration to National Hospital Week in 1953."

The THA represents more than 800 hospitals and has 4,500 members.

This year's theme for the overall state celebration is "Hospitals Make Healthy Neighbors."

New students meet 'Rebels in Review'

From Staff Reports

Several hundred incoming sophomores were introduced to Lee High School on Thursday night at the 1986 version of "Rebels in Review."

"It's kind of an orientation for the kids coming in from the freshman school," said Bobby Dunn, who will be the LHS senior principal next year.

As he spoke, the Rebels-to-be were being instructed in Rebelese by a group of cheerleaders.

"Who-are-who-are-who-are-we? We-are-we-are-we-are Lee!" shouted the youngsters.

After an introductory pep rally in the gym during which they were introduced to various Big Men (and Women) on Campus, the future sophomores trooped out to the courtyard for a few more cheers. Then they began inspecting the exhibits set up by various school departments.

Among the exhibits attracting attention from the former frosh was a painting entitled "Early Morning Impressions of a Dead Man," which you probably had to be a senior to understand.

Nearby were the products of the industrial arts classes, including a handsome gun cabinet by senior Denny Park.

"You can look at the projects and see how much hard work has gone into them," said Dunn.

Work on the gun cabinet took "the whole year. I worked nights, I worked days...I'm satisfied," said Park, who plans to attend either Sul Ross State University or West Texas State, and eventually to teach industrial-arts classes himself.

Such decisions were almost three years away for the graduating Lee Freshman students. Thursday night, they seemed content to memorize Rebel yells and try to avoid their parents.

It was an orientation of sorts for the parents, as well, and one booth had been set up just for them by the Booster's Club.

"I think it's a great idea," said Paul Jones, the club president, of the Rebels in Review program.

A bumper crop of prospects is in the offing for the Booster Club and other LHS organizations, as Dunn said next year's sophomore class of about 800 students will be the largest "in the last few years."

Bunton dismisses one of 13 fraud counts against ex-banker

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

U.S. District Court Judge Lucius D. Bunton has dismissed one of 13 bank-fraud counts against former Odessa banker Melvin Max Malone.

A federal jury last May 7 found Malone, the 53-year-old former president of Permian Bank & Trust of Odessa, guilty of 13 counts of embezzlement, misapplication of funds and making false bank entries.

The action by Bunton reduced Malone's possible maximum sentence by five years — from 58 years in prison to 53 years. Malone, who now is a Lubbock car salesman, is to be sentenced by Bunton at noon on May 28 in Federal Court in Midland.

The count which Bunton granted the acquittal had accused Malone of embezzling a Datsun 280ZX sports car which allegedly had been pledged to the bank as collateral on a loan by DMD Company. The indictment said the car came into Malone's custody "by virtue of his position as an officer of the bank."

In his order, Bunton noted that Odessa Datsun had sold the sports car to DMD Company, which then transferred the automobile to Malone. Until then, the sports car "never had a certificate of title." Further, noted Bunton, the certificate of title to Malone "never had a notation on it evidencing a lien by the bank."

"It is equally clear that the vehicle was used for personal business and was not 'inventory' of DMD," Bunton said in his order.

Bunton noted that a manufacturer's certificate is the "proper document to transfer a new motor vehicle" until the vehicle is transferred to the owner.

"The transfer from Odessa Datsun to DMD makes DMD an 'owner' (by law)...and makes the transaction a 'first sale.' "

As a "matter of law," said Bunton, the sports car which was the basis of the indictment "was never and could not have been the subject of a UCC (Uniform Commercial Code) financing statement."

"It is uncontroverted that notation was never made on a certificate of title," Bunton said in granting Malone's motion for acquittal on that one count.

In the motion, Malone's Odessa defense attorneys, Gary Riley and Kevin Bartley, said that the sports car at "no time was...held as 'inventory' " by the bank.

Were the car held as inventory, then it could be "the subject of a security interest," the attorneys said. "Accordingly, as a matter of law, the automobile...was never and could never have been the subject of a UCC financing statement, and it is uncontroverted that notation was never made on a certificate of title."

Another ex-banker, Bill Neal Tapp, 43, of Plano, is to be tried by a federal jury in Midland on 13 counts of embezzlement and misapplication of funds. Tapp was president of Bank of the West in Odessa.

Another former banker, Eddie Thomas, 43, is serving a 20-year sentence for embezzlement when he was president of the now-defunct MetroBank at Midland Regional Airport. In sentencing Thomas, Bunton ordered Thomas to make $550,000 in restitution.

Sheriff's department Law Enforcement Agency of the Year

From Staff Reports

The Midland County Sheriff's Department received the Law Enforcement Agency of the Year Award during the Optimist Club of Midland's annual awards banquet Thursday.

Individual awards were presented to the Midland Police Department's Rookie of the Year Gregory Thompson; Officer of the Year Detective Sgt. B.G. Johnson; and Robbie Mobley, Canine Officer of the Year.

Richard Gillete was named sheriff's department Rookie of the Year.

Texas Department of Public Safety troopers honored with individual awards included Mike Glenn and Matt Andrews.

Cheryl Kellogg of the Midland Fire Department received the Fire Inspector of the Year Award.

Each law enforcement agency also received plaques in appreciation for their contributions to law enforcement this past year.

Battling the fire

A vacant house at the corner of Weatherford and Washington was destroyed around 1:40 a.m. today after a fire. Four fire department units responded to the early morning accident.

County Commissioners name Massingill JP

From Staff Reports

Massingill

Midland County Commissioners Court today appointed 45-year-old Judy Massingill to serve as justice of the peace until the end of this year when an elected JP takes office.

Ms. Massingill, who had been appointed by County Judge Bill Ahders to fill the JP slot held by Charlie Sprayberry on Feb. 28, was officially appointed temporary Justice of the Peace today. She does not plan to run for election in the Nov. 4 general election.

Sprayberry, 45, had taken a temporary leave of absence from his post in November after he was indicted on criminal charges. Following his felony conviction in late April, he was removed from the office he had held since 1981.

Commissioner Durward Wright said Ms. Massingill "is the most knowledgeable person" in that area, which is JP for Precinct 1, Place 1. Wright made the motion that Ms. Massingill be appointed on a temporary basis.

As it stands now, the executive committees of the Midland County Republican and Democratic parties will be nominating candidates to run for the post in the November general election.

Before her appointment, Ms. Massingill had been a clerk for Midland's other Justice of the Peace, Robert H. "Bob" Pine, who is seeking re-election under the Democratic Party banner in November.

VIEWPOINT

Most respondents oppose plan to take away IRA deductions

By RAMONA NYE
Staff Writer

Part of the tax reform plan in Congress would take away tax deductions for Individual Retirement Accounts from persons whose employers had a private pension plan.

Advocates say the move will fill the nation's coffers with $23 billion per year, while opponents say the plan will take away incentives to save. On Thursday a random sample of 14 people was asked if they approved of the plan to take away IRA deductions. All except two said they were against the changes.

"I don't think it's fair. They set them up for people to help give them tax deductions and now they're taking them away. They ought to be consistent," said geophysicist Mike Taylor of rural Midland.

Charles Howard of Odessa said, "It's going to take away the incentive for people to try to do something on their own. What's the incentive to save if there is no tax break? It's about the only tax break I get. For the individual wage earner, this is just about the only thing you have." Howard is a tool salesman.

Crude oil purchaser Tom Harwell, 2609 Camarie, said, "They need to encourage savings. If we had enough people saving, we wouldn't be in this social security mess we're in."

Roy Smotherman, 1432 Westbrook, said, "I like the IRAs. I'd like to see them stay in. It puts money in the economy and into the private sector where they can invest it." Smotherman is a salesman.

Dan Wilde, Rt. 2, Box 115, said, "The IRA program was brought in with the intention of setting up a retirement program for people. Obviously if they do away with that plan, fewer tax deferred plans will be available.

"I think it would just be a disadvantage for everybody. It would probably end up hurting a lot of people," said Wilde, who sells insurance."

Dale Bordner, of rural Midland, said he is against tax reform on IRAs because, "I would like to get one in the future. Everybody needs all the help they can get." Bordner is unemployed.

Robert Powell, 4807 Shady Lane, a student at Texas Tech, said, "It's a good thing to get into. A lot of people need it for retirement. If I was looking forward to retirement, I'd like to have an IRA."

Nelson Miguez, who didn't want his address published, said, "I don't think those retirement plans should be taxed because the money has already been taxed before and probably more than once." Miguez is unemployed.

Peggy Morton, 1607 W. Washington, said she was against the IRA changes because, "I work at a coin shop and people buy coins and bullion for investments in IRA accounts. The way things are going right now you need every tax break you can get."

Jana Cox, who didn't want her address published said, "I've got one and I'd like to see it stay as it is. They should keep them for the incentive to save." Cox is a saleperson.

Mark Higgins, 4511 Crenshaw, said he would approve of the IRA changes if Congress could replace them with another deduction. Higgins works for a postal meter company.

Rose Tenbrink, who didn't want her address published, said she would support the IRA changes if it would reduce the deficit.

"I feel like we need to get it under control, before our kids take it over," said Ms. Tenbrink, who is a homemaker.

White's wife to seek teachers' suggestions

By STEVE LEVINE
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Gov. Mark White Thursday appointed his wife to tour the state seeking teacher suggestions for an education refinement bill he plans to submit to the 70th Legislature in January.

The governor said he hoped the teachers' advice will help him draft a bill that would take care of some of the problems created by or left unresolved by House Bill 72, the massive education reform package of 1984. "Texas needs the suggestions of our state's teachers if we are to provide the best educational system possible for our young people," White said at his weekly news conference.

Last week White acknowledged that he needs to mend political fences with disgruntled teachers, particularly in West Texas — before the November general election. Thursday he denied that his new plan is politically motivated but said it should help him regain teacher support.

"You mend fences by going in and taking appropriate action to solve problems," he said.

Texas First Lady Linda Gale White, a former teacher, will chair a series of meetings around the state in June. She will talk with teachers about education finances in light of falling state revenues, the career ladder bonus-pay plan for exceptional teachers, the new system of evaluating teachers' classroom performance, student discipline problems and complaints of excessive paperwork.

Four of those five issues dominated the concerns Texas teachers expressed when interviewed for a special Midland Reporter-Telegram project on teacher morale last month. In an April 6 interview as part of that project, White rejected teachers' contentions that some of the HB 72 reforms have hindered their ability to teach.

"I'm tired of this baloney that we're hearing out there," the governor said, pounding his desk. "What you're hearing is a bunch of people that are whiners that want to go back to doing (things) the old way, which produced mediocrity."

Representatives of the state's two largest teacher groups said Thursday the governor is asking his wife to talk to educators about issues they have wanted to raise with him since the enactment of HB 72. "These are the same things we've been discussing since the special session," said Mike Morrow, executive director of the Association of Texas Professional Educators.

Annette Cootes, spokeswoman for the Texas State Teachers Association, said those same complaints led TSTA to abandon its support for the bill during the 1984 special session. "We said as a teacher representative we could not in good conscience support that bill because we knew exactly what it was going to do," Ms. Cootes said.

The governor pointed out that he signed three minor revisions to HB 72 last year and would have signed bills dealing with paperwork and discipline if the Legislature had passed them.

White said he will not budge on the no-pass, no-play rule that requires students who flunk a course to sit out of extracurricular activities for six weeks. The governor said he will not accept changing the penalty period to three weeks, which many teachers have said would improve students' classroom performance.

"Let's just don't waste our time talking about that one," White said. "No-pass, no-play is a proven success. All we need now is to take coaches and teachers and administrators and parents and work with those young people to let them know, you don't go to school to eat lunch. You go to school to learn."

Mrs. White, who taught business education courses for five years in Austin and Houston, said she has "sensed the frustration of teachers" in prior meetings. "They felt like they were not being listened to," she said.

When a reporter asked Mrs. White if her husband is using her as "a political lightning rod" to discharge teacher anxiety, the governor broke in.

"We operate on the Hallmark rule," he said. "We care enough to send the very best."

Jury sets awards for two men who fell from scaffold

From Staff Reports

Two men who fell 54 feet from a scaffold on the Texas American Bank building in January 1983 were awarded several hundred thousand dollars apiece Thursday by a Midland jury in a trial which began May 6.

But the only defendant with significant financial resources was cleared of any liability for the accident, according to court reports.

Sheldon Drake, 26, and 31-year-old James Tone were severely injured on Jan. 7, 1983, when a scaffold collapsed while they were putting up a sign on the building at 2301 W. Wall Ave., according to newspaper accounts from the time.

Tone, who lived in Odessa at the time, remains in a wheelchair, and Drake, of Midland, also continues to suffer the affects of the accident.

The two men sued Will-Burt Co., which made the pulley which they claimed had collapsed; Hi-Lo Power Scaffolding Inc. of Cincinnati, which made the scaffold; Mike and Paul Puschnig of Lubbock, who leased the scaffold to ABC Sign Services Inc. of Midland; and ABC Sign itself.

Will-Burt settled for several hundred thousand dollars before the trial began a week ago Tuesday in Judge Pat Baskin's 142nd District Court. The 10-woman, two-man jury decided Thursday that Will-Burt and Hi-Lo were not liable, reports said.

After hearing seven days of testimony and deliberating about six hours, the jurors awarded Drake $397,800 — $221,000 from the Puschnig brothers and $176,800 from ABC Sign, who were found to have been negligent.

Tone was awarded $328,160 — $184,590 from the Puschnigs and $143,570 from ABC. But it was unclear if sums of this size could ever be collected from these defendants.

Dance will raise funds for Midland firefighters

From Staff Reports

A dance will be held Saturday to raise money to help send Midland firefighters to the Firefighters' Olympics in Fort Worth, according to Sindy Magee of the Midland Fire Department Ladies Auxiliary.

The new Ladies Auxiliary got organized in February, she said. The organization consists of wives of Midland firefighters. At present there are 42 members.

"This is just the beginning," said Ms. Magee who is on the board of directors.

"We're here to help the firefighters. Not the department, the men themselves," she said. "The Fire Department never even has a Christmas party. We will be helping with that."

The auxiliary will also help raise money for things such as buying more exercise equipment and updating the department's medical library.

"It's a fund-raising and support group," Ms. Magee said.

Auxiliary members helped out at the fire chief's convention hosted last week by Midland Fire Chief James Roberts, and sold homemade ice cream when the Sesquicentennial Wagon Train came to town the week before, she said.

Their next project is Saturday's dance, which is being held in conjunction with a volunteer fire department seminar being held at Midland College.

The dance, which will feature music by the Betty Barnes Band, will be from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m. in the Midland County Exhibit Building on Highway 80. Tickets are $3 per person and $5 per couple, and can be bought at the door or from any member of the Ladies Auxiliary.

Also available at the door or in advance are $1 raffle tickets for a 13½-foot Hercules round trampoline which will be raffled off during the dance.

Beer and set-ups will be sold, and guests may bring their own bottles.

Officers of the Ladies Auxiliary are Virginia Klatt, president; Becky Carter, vice president; and Peggy Jessup, secretary.

Parties to elect convention delegates

From Staff Reports

Midland County Republicans and Democrats on Saturday will be spouting their party lines and electing delegates and alternate delegates to their 1986 Texas conventions.

Republicans will convene at 9 a.m. Saturday following the 8 a.m. registration in the San Jacinto Junior High School Auditorium at 1400 N. N St.

Democrats will convene at 10 a.m. Saturday in their party headquarters at 2305 N. Big Spring St.

Midland Republicans will elect 52 delegates and 52 alternates to the 1986 Republican State Convention in Dallas on June 27 and 28, said Dean Rucker, chairman of the Midland County Republican Party.

Democrats here will elect 36 delegates and 36 alternates to their state convention in Austin on June 27 and 28, said Janet Massey, chairman of the Midland County Democratic Party.

Keynote speaker at the Republican convention will be Texas Legislator Tom Craddick of Midland. He will speak on issues which the Texas Legislature will confront when it convenes.

The Democrats will propose resolutions, Ms. Massey said.

Air samples being taken daily

From Staff and Wire Reports

Charlie Sewell, a health environment quality specialist for the Texas Department of Health, faithfully takes air samples every day in downtown Midland, but thus far no radioactive particles have shown up in the Permian Basin.

There have been some traces of radiation in El Paso and Houston.

Sewell said Thursday that before the Chernobyl nuclear accident, he took samples every three months for a week-long period in Midland, but now he will take them daily through at least May 21.

Ed Bailey, division director of the Bureau of Radiation Control in Austin, said air samples from Midland are sent to an Environmental Protection Agency laboratory in Las Vegas and results would be returned to Austin only if increased levels are found.

Participants may choose to walk, run, jog, skateboard, or bicycle for donations. All proceeds will go to benefit MARC. For information or to pledge, call Jean at the MARC office at 682-9771.

Midlander reports tools taken

From Staff Reports

A Midland man reported about $1,000 worth of tools taken from a building on County Road 123 this week, the sheriff's office reported.

William Cathey, 1601 College, told sheriff's officers tools worth $1,150 were taken from a building on County Road 123, about one-fourth mile west of Cotton Flat Road. The items were taken sometime between Monday and Wednesday.

In other law enforcement reports, four fire department units responded to a fire at the Permian Basin Home for Battered Women and Their Children. The storage building fire, around 3:30 p.m. Thursday, was probably set, but caused no damage, the fire department reported.

A 17-year-old Midland man shot Sunday in Hogan Park remains in critical condition at Midland Memorial Hospital. No arrests have been made in the shooting of Manuel Carrasco of 1923 English.

Girl dies from burns

WALNUT SPRINGS (AP) — A 6-year-old Walnut Springs girl who was badly burned while playing with matches died as the result of her injuries, officials said.

Kelly Jean Chappell died at a Dallas hospital Wednesday from injuries she received earlier this month in the back seat of a car in front of her parents' home, Walnut Springs City Marshal Arnold Hall said Thursday.

MC spring interim session slated

From Staff Reports

Spring Interim Session at Midland College, an intensive two-week program, begins Monday with registration and the start of classes.

Persons who want to take one of the courses should be at the Allison Fine Arts Building auditorium at 8 a.m. Following registration, classes begin.

Students will attend classes from 8:30-11:45 a.m. and 1:30-3:45 p.m. through May 30. The May 29 Memorial Day holiday will be observed.

For the first time, the Interim Session also includes two one-week computer classes, each of which offers one hour of credit. All the other Interim Session courses are three-credit hours.

Courses being offered include: English 1302, Composition and Literature; English 2301, Masterpieces of the Western World I; English 2302, Technical Writing; Economics 2301, Principles of Economics I; Economics 2302, Principles of Economics II; Government 2302, State and Federal Government; History 2301, U.S. History to 1877; and History 2302, U.S. History from 1877.

The computer courses are: Computer Information Systems 2102, Spreadsheets, which will be taught May 16-22; and CIS 2103, Database, which is offered May 27-30.

Each of the computer courses will meet from 8 a.m. to 12 noon, with about four additional hours of computer labs necessary daily.

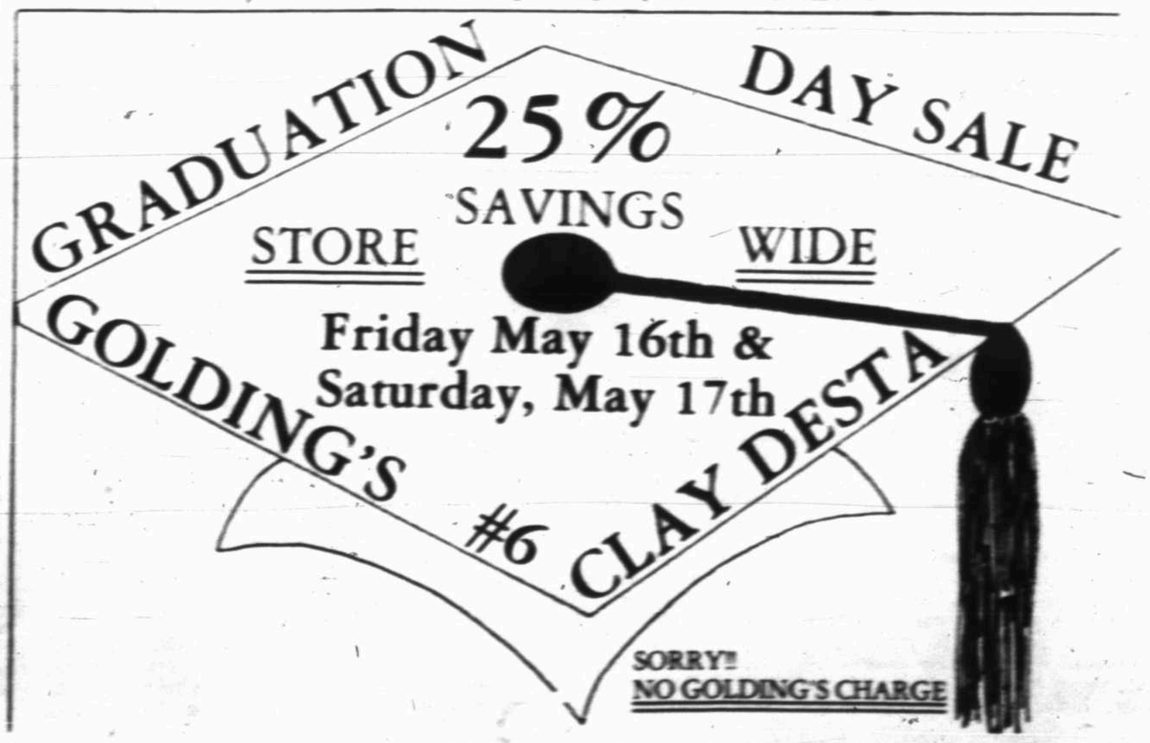

They're into everything!

Bubbling with joy, children are naturally curious and interested. They need to know which way to go, what to choose. And so they need guidance.

At the Christian Science Sunday School they learn about God. Here young people consider the choices the Bible characters made. Sunday School is a resource to use in helping them choose the best.

Your children are invited to come and explore how God guides their lives.

Chile's highway opens frontier

PUERTO CISNES, Chile (AP) — Eugenia Pirzio-Biroli remembers what it was like here before the highway came to Chilean Patagonia, an extremity of the Americas so inhospitable the Indians never bothered to settle it.

People got around only by boat on rivers and icy canals, or by horseback through dense rain forests.

"This was no man's land, and the law of the strongest prevailed," the 80-year-old Mrs. Pirzio-Biroli recalls. That was 25 years before the highway.

An Italian immigrant, she came here with her late Chilean husband and two grown sons. They were one of four families in Puerto Cisnes in 1957.

"Just after we arrived," she remembers, "some rustlers killed a judge because he tried to stop an embarkation of stolen animals."

Today, Patagonia is still Chile's last frontier. But the Southern Highway, a two-lane gravel road that is the military government's most ambitious project, is changing life in the little settlements of cattle ranchers and fishermen.

As mayor of Puerto Cisnes, Mrs. Pirzio-Biroli presides over a peaceful village of 1,089 people. They have running water, a hospital with a permanent doctor, a busy shipyard and a school for 400 children from the town and surrounding countryside.

They have electricity from 8 a.m. to noon. But next year, the mayor proudly told a visitor, a new plant will light Puerto Cisnes around the clock.

Most of this progress, she says, has come since a spur of the highway reached town four years ago, connecting it with every major settlement in the vast frontier provinces of Palena and Aysen.

Elsewhere, along the highway's completed stretches, settlers who once measured their journeys to the next town by the number of days it took to row there in a boat now marvel at the 25-mph speed of jeeps and trucks over the rough, winding road.

The last 446 miles of the 700-mile road network are expected to be completed by 1989 and link up with the Pan American Highway that runs, except for an never-completed section in a Panama jungle area, all the way to the United States.

"The highway is a blessing of God," said Aurelia Schilling, a cattleman's widow and long-time resident in La Junta, one of eight towns on the completed stretch of the highway's main trunk.

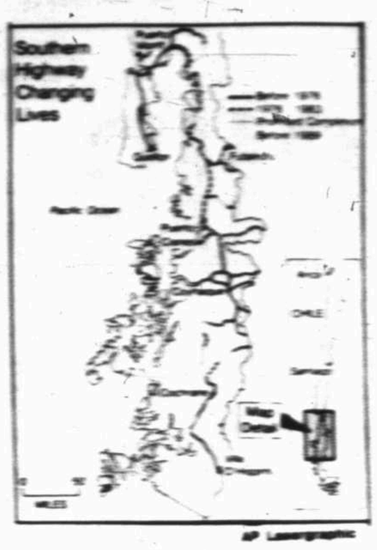

Since 1982, two new towns have sprung up on the highway.

Just off the road, 80 families are being settled on land they are buying from the government under 15-year credit plans. To qualify, they must get state approval for their plans to develop farming, fishing or forestry enterprises.

Jeremias Araya, 37, came from Santiago a year ago with his brother and a brother-in-law to settle 9,143 acres they are buying for the equivalent of $45,000. Among other things, the family will cultivate bees to export their honey.

"These are virgin lands that you have to open up with a machete," Araya told a reporter traveling the road. "Here you don't have to worry about your paycheck or the smog.

"At first, the cold and rainy climate bothered me," he said. "But these inconveniences are offset by the tranquility."

The Southern Highway, a two-lane, gravel road that is the Chilean military government's most ambitious project, is changing life in the Chilean Patagonia.

Dentist gives cat braces

LUTZ, Fla. (AP) — When Todd Falkner went to the dentist to be checked for braces, his brother Kevin was there, getting his braces off. So was Boo, a cat.

The cat "turned out to be more cooperative than some patients," said dentist Ralph DeDomenico.

Boo was DeDomenico's first feline patient in 12 years of practice and 1,500 sets of braces.

"I thought it was pretty neat. I was getting worked on, and so was this little black cat," said Kevin, 14, who was sitting two chairs down.

"I thought it was incredible that they could move teeth in a tiny thing like that. I told some of my friends at school, but they didn't believe me," the eighth-grader said.

Kevin's teeth were being straightened for looks.

With Boo, a 7-month-old Persian, the reason was different. The cat couldn't chew. A long, pointed canine tooth was slanted, growing inward hitting the tongue and rubbing a hole in the floor of the mouth.

"Something had to be done. It was either extract or get it directed the right way," said veterinarian Mary Lessner. "It was causing damage to the mouth."

Because Boo is only a kitten and a major tooth was involved, Ms. Lessner decided to try to save it. "So I called the dentist," she said.

Brenda Lassiter owns Boo and a couple other cats.

"I couldn't believe it when my veterinarian said to me: 'What would you think if I told you your cat needed braces?'" Ms. Lassiter said. "After I got over the shock, I said OK."

In February, DeDomenico and Ms. Lessner teamed up for the first time. They anesthetized the animal and took X-rays to make sure there were no complications. Then the dentist went to work, adapting the wires and spreading the glue he normally uses on children.

"The problem was these little bitty teeth," DeDomenico said.

He took his regular materials, made an arch bar and bonded it to the teeth with adhesive. The cat came back for adjustments.

Total cost for vet and dentist visits and braces was $150, according to Ms. Lassiter.

"It never hissed or clawed at me," said DeDomenico, who grew up on Long Island, N.Y., went to school at the University of Louisville and moved to Florida nine years ago.

When the Falkner brothers walked into the dentist's office last week and saw Boo in one of the chairs, "it took us a while to figure out what was going on," said Todd, 12. "I just kept watching. I couldn't believe it," said the sixth-grader who gets his braces in two months.

"The tooth is functional now and the cat should feel much better," Ms. Lessner said.

"I'm sure he does," added Ms. Lassiter. "He doesn't stop eating."

Many who feed nation need help feeding selves

By SHARON COHEN

For about a year, shame rode with Denise O'Brien every time she went to the market. They traveled together under cover of night hiding a secret — her farm family was on food stamps.

"It was just humiliating," Ms. O'Brien recalled. "I'd look around in the store and if I saw anyone I knew, I'd write a check."

Today, she has dismissed her fears of discovery; she shops by day and greets neighbors without shame. Ms. O'Brien realizes that $300 a month in food stamps is helping her family of five dig out from debt on their rented Atlantic, Iowa, farm.

Their plight has become common these days in the Midwest, where thousands who feed the world now feel the bitter irony of needing help to feed themselves.

"We raise the crops, but we can't feed our family," Ms. O'Brien said. "It's a sad commentary."

In Iowa, which accounts for about a fourth of America's hog production and more than 12 percent of its red meat, state officials say the number of farm families on food stamps jumped from about 400 in the summer of 1984 to 2,000 this spring.

The U.S. Agriculture Department doesn't keep records of food stamp recipients by occupation, but Iowa and several other struggling Farm Belt states have compiled their own numbers, showing sharp increases:

— South Dakota never had more than 350 farm families on food stamps before 1984, when times started getting tough. Last fall, 630 families were receiving stamps; that number jumped 58 percent to 1,000 families this spring.

— In North Dakota, 656 farmers got food stamps in March, up 46 percent from 447 in October 1985.

— In Minnesota's 10 most heavily agricultural counties, the number of households on food stamps rose about 25 percent from April 1980 to April 1985 — to a total of 1,817.

— And in Nebraska, the number of food stamp recipients hit record levels three straight months — in December, January and February — with a greater increase in rural communities.

Although the number of farmers on food stamps is small, farm groups say many more in need don't apply because they want to avoid the stigma of welfare.

"I know of several farm families right now that should be getting them (but) they just think it's wrong to apply for government programs," said Bob Simon, a Winterset, Iowa, farmer.

"We look out for our own," added Simon, who was on food stamps for a few months. "We take care of our own. Our parents taught us that."

Pride and fear of small town gossip keep some farmers away; others feel an application for food stamps is an admission of failure, "a public declaration they're not a good manager...or a hard worker," said Delores Swoboda, a leader of Groundswell, a Minnesota farm-help group.

Some farmers who get food stamps hide the fact by traveling to towns 30 miles away to do their grocery shopping, said Peter Brent of the Iowa-based rural advocacy group, Prairiefire.

What many urban people don't understand, he added, is while a farmer may have cows and hogs, he can't use them for his own food if creditors have a lien on them.

"The vast majority of people assume a farmer eats well," he said. "That's just not the case."

AGRICULTURE

A recent report by Harvard's School of Public Health and the Physicians Task Force On Hunger in America, while criticized for its methodology, listed 150 "hunger" counties, half of them in the Midwest and Great Plains.

The study concluded the problem was largely due to the failure of federal assistance programs. Food stamps, it said, serve "just over half the poorest citizens for whom benefits are intended." It said 668,000 people were eligible for stamps but weren't receiving them.

Some also say eligibility requirements disqualify some farmers from getting aid.

To be eligible for food stamps, a family of three must have a gross income of $959 a month or less; for a family of four it's $1,154 or less.

Aware of increasing numbers of farmers turning to food stamps, lawmakers who put together the farm bill passed last year provided some changes to ease eligibility rules, said Robert Fersh, former staff director of the House subcommittee on nutrition.

For example, the limit on liquid assets, excluding home and household goods, was raised from $1,500 to $2,000, said Fersh, now director of the Food Research and Action Center in Washington.

Fersh also said a farmer's losses now can be deducted from the family's outside income — a wife's waitressing job, for example — when determining food stamp eligibility.

Those changes may help, but some state officials say more efforts should be made to convince farmers that food stamps aren't bad and to make those in isolated areas aware of the program.

South Dakota is promoting food stamps as a Department of Agriculture program. "This is much more palatable to them so they don't automatically think of it as welfare," said Julie Osnes, administrator of South Dakota's food stamp program.

She said the state was also using the services of a dairy farmer who voluntarily appears on public television to talk about the program and encourage other farmers to call him with questions about food stamps.

Rural help groups are doing their part, too. The Iowa Farm Unity Coalition held two statewide food stamp drives in the last two years.

Ms. O'Brien, a coalition vice-chairwoman, said when she counsels farmers about food stamps, "I try to make them feel they're a victim of the circumstances."

As for her family, she said that while they wouldn't have gone hungry without food stamps, they would have gotten "farther and farther behind in our bills." The aid, she said, was "a matter of survival."

Although she is still a bit uncomfortable using food stamps, Ms. O'Brien said she now sees them as a "political statement. It's a statement of the situation as it is, that there are problems in rural America."

Sharon Cohen in the AP Midwest regional writer, based in Chicago.

Two meetings offered

There are two upcoming educational meetings which should be of interest to area agricultural producers.

On May 22, ICI Americas, Inc., will present a program on management of pyrethroid resistance in Heliothis. The meeting will be held at the Midland County Extension Office, 2445 E. Hwy. 80. It will start at 4:30 p.m. and end at 8 p.m.

Dr. Dan Clower, an expert recognized across the cotton belt for his work in cotton entomology, will speak on how to manage populations of these hard-to-control cotton pests. We will hold a clinic on how to distinguish tobacco budworms from cotton bollworms. District Six Entomologist Charles Allen also will be on the program to talk about what happened in 1985 and what Texas A&M is doing to be aware of and delay the development of resistance this year.

A meal will be served free of charge.

The second meeting will be presented by Jim Davis, Extension Fisheries Specialist with Texas Agricultural Extension Service. He will be in Stanton at Cap Rock Electric auditorium on Hwy. 80 west of Stanton, at 8 p.m., May 27. He will be conducting a seminar on red fish production in West Texas.

This seminar is in connection with the project being conducted in Martin County on the commercial production of red fish in high saline water not suitable for any other purpose.

I urge you to attend these programs. They will both be beneficial and interesting.

There has been a lot of talk about not irrigating grain sorghum, and it really doesn't pay, but there are two very important times for grain sorghum. First, about 35 to 40 days after emergence — drought before then doesn't hurt much, but about that time, the seeds begin to form, and the number of seeds per head is determined. If the plant is stressed severely, the yield potential will be greatly reduced. Second, is at head exertion and about the time of blooming. An irrigation at heading will yield more pounds of grain than at any other time. Without water at grain filling (just as in wheat), carbohydrate production and translocation is shut down.

As the number of irrigations increase, the amount of grain produced per inch of water decreases.

One study on irrigations of grain sorghum produced the following results:

No. of Irrigations	Inches of Water	Crop Yield	Yield Increase	Yield/ Inch of Water
Preplant		2113
PP + 1	4	4134	2021	503
PP + 2	8	5409	1275	319
PP + 3	12	6193	784	196

Prepare to fight casebearer

The pecan nut casebearer, Acrobasis nuxorella, is the number one insect threat to pecan production in Texas. This nut feeder often accounts for total crop loss on unsprayed trees. With proper timing of a labeled insecticide, however, economic losses can be minimized.

The predicted first significant nut entry for the Midland area is on May 22 (give or take a day). This prediction is based on a heat unit model developed by researchers at Texas A&M. This is considerably earlier than normal and reports indicate populations are also much higher than normal.

We are predicting that spray dates in the Midland area should be from May 18 to May 24 with the optimum dates of May 21-23.

In areas surrounding Midland, spray-dates will probably vary slightly from this. Producers should be conducting surveys for casebearer eggs. At least 200 nut clusters per orchard should be inspected for eggs. The economic threshold for casebearers based on eggs is one percent of the clusters infested with eggs. Eggs hatch in about 3-5 days. When eggs are found, they should be tagged and inspected daily until they hatch. When 1-2 percent of the nut clusters are entered by casebearer larvae, it is time to spray on that day. For prediction purposes, spray dates should begin 5-6 days after eggs are found.

Pecan nut casebearer larvae should be killed before they enter the nutlets. Once inside, the larvae are protected. After destroying the nutlet, the larvae progressively destroy most of the remaining nutlets in the cluster.

A second insecticide application will be required where eggs are found and nutlet damage continues 7-10 day after the first application.

Pecan nut casebearer eggs are greenish-white and somewhat flattened in appearance when first laid. These eggs are usually found on the outer one-third of the nutlet. Once an egg is laid it will gradually turn from white to red in a 3-5 day period before it hatches. After hatching, larvae feed on developing buds and shoots for 2-3 days before entering the nuts.

The timing of the insecticide application, so crucial to effective casebearer control, is signaled by the appearance of hatched eggs. Insecticides currently labeled for the casebearer kill larvae, not eggs. An insecticide will not work satisfactorily unless the residual lasts until the larvae finally hatch. Since the larvae hatch over a 1-2 week period, a second application is necessary. Some suggested insecticides for the commercial pecan producer include: Guthion®, Diazinon®, Pydrin®, Malathion® and Zolone®. Some insecticides recommended for homeowner use includes Zolone®, Malathion®, Thiodan® and Sevin®. Caution: Sevin® can cause aphid populations to rapidly increase in numbers.

Zinc sulfate or NZN added to the spray solution will decrease rosette problems in pecan trees and allow them to produce higher quality nuts.

The recommended rates are:

— NZN: One tablespoon per gallon of water; two quarts per 100 gallons of water.

— Zinc Sulfate: Two teaspoons per gallon of water; 2 pounds per 100 gallons of water.

Cecil Hunley has transformed her passion for masks into a business. At right, she plasters a subject's face as she starts the process. AT left she paints on one of her creations. The masks range from $125 to $300.

Former Houston art student unmasks successful business

HOUSTON (AP)— Making that first mask was a fright. Cecil Hunley was about to cover her friend's face with the same stuff doctors use for broken legs. It would harden in minutes.

"Oh, gosh. Linda, maybe we'd better make sure the hospitals aren't real busy!" Ms. Hunley said to the brave subject.

Nervousness aside, Ms. Hunley had wanted to try this art form for years, ever since she traveled to Mexico with her parents and came face to face with fascinating primitive masks. To her, they seemed mysterious, as if they'd been possessed with some kind of power through the ages.

Ms. Hunley's masks vary from $125 to $300, depending on materials and time involved.

Cape Cod in middle of of 'boom'

FALMOUTH, Mass. — "For Sale" signs and skeletal frames of new houses are as much a part of the scenery here as pounding surf and salt marshes. This long, curled peninsula is in the clutches of an unruly building boom that is carving up sleepy towns that have part-time governments, loose zoning laws and no long-range plans for roads, water, or preserving a way of life.

"We've lost a lot of what people come here for: a rural-character town, a different way of life. What we're developing into is a suburb of Boston," said Jean Thomas, a selectman in the town of Mashpee. The town's year-round population has increased 40 percent since 1980 and its available housing by 52 percent.

The peninsula's permanent population of 167,000 is growing faster than any other region in New England — more than 50 percent between 1970 and 1980 — according to the Cape Cod Planning and Economic Development Commission. The commission says that more detached, single-family homes were built here in 1985 than anywhere in Massachusetts. More than 16,800 new housing units were approved from 1980 to 1984, another 5,000 in 1985 and 1,095 in the first three months of this year.

Investors, retirees, successful baby-boomers and Boston commuters have been lured here not just by the sea, but by falling interest rates and some of the state's lowest property tax bills.

" 'If it's for sale, let me buy some.' That's the reaction we seem to be getting," said Armando Carbonell, the commission's director.

"It's a scary situation," said F. Thomas Fudula, Mashpee's first and only planner. Fudala said he recently was offered $60,000 for an acre of land in Mashpee that he bought last August for $23,000.

"Builders in town are desperate to build," said Fudala, 35, who was hired by the board of selectmen in 1984 in lieu of declaring a construction moratorium. Fudala, a graduate of the Harvard School of Design, works 60 hours a week for $27,000 a year. He has reviewed 3,000 lots and condominiums during the last 18 months, with help only from his secretary. He said his ulcers are getting worse.

Building booms hit the Cape in the late 1960s and the early 1970s but were interrupted by economic downturns, said state Sen. Paul Doane, whose ancestors arrived on the Cape in 1634. Five years of sustained growth "at a pace that is unrivaled" finally made the peninsula's 15 towns examine "what we're doing to our land and particularly to our groundwater," Doane said.

More than 15,000 public and private wells have been sunk into a single aquifer, the Cape's sole source of water. Groundwater is particularly vulnerable to contamination because pollutants flow freely through the sandy soil.

Barnstable County health officer Stetson Hall said that well-water samples in Mashpee and nearby Falmouth show contaminants, possibly from a nearby Air Force base, the town landfill or septic tanks. Hall said that 200 residents in two Mashpee neighborhoods have been advised not to drink the water.

He said 30 Cape shellfishing sites are closed because of high bacteria counts. Even golf-course greens are sampled to determine if their fertilizing chemicals are polluting the water supply. Consultants in Hyannis are studying public wells downhill from a sewage plant. In Falmouth, the town dump and the sewage treatment plant were built upstream from a main water source. But, Hall said, the Cape's overall water quality remains good.

"I haven't given much thought to it other than buying some bottled water," said Henry Hooten, 47, a high school teacher from suburban Boston who paid $95,000 for a town house in Mashpee in January. Asked why he bought the house, Hooten said that it was an investment and pointed to a sign saying the properties were selling for $129,900.

Upcoming events include doodlebugs, Aggies around town

By DAVID LEE FORREST
Lifestyle Editor

How many Aggies does it take cook a fajita? What do doodlebugs have to do with chili? Can people stomach cow stomachs?

The answers to these and many other culinary questions can be found at three upcoming events.

The Midland Doodlebug Chili Cook-Off is scheduled for May 24 at the Midland County Exhibit Bldg. on East Highway 80. Proceeds from the cook-off, sponsored by Geophysical Service Inc., will benefit the Permian Basin Center for Battered Women and Their Children.

The event is being sponsored by Geophysical Service Inc., which is the source of the name. "Doodlebug" is a nickname for seismography crews.

"Seismic crews are considered a bunch of 'doodlebuggers' out there hunting for oil and gas," explained Doug L. McAlister of GSI.

Entries in the Doodlebug Chili Cook-Off will be judged in two categories, chili and showmanship, with trophies being awarded for first, second and third place in each category. All winning entries will be auctioned after judging.

Contestants must enter by May 23 and pay a $15 entry fee. The chili cookers must furnish their own ingredients, including pits, fire and a minimum of five pounds of raw meat. All chili will be cooked outside.

Cooking can start after 8 a.m. May 24 with showmanship judging beginning at 12:30 p.m. and chili judging at 3 p.m.

For more information on the Doodlebug Chili Cook-Off call Doug McAlister at 561-6736.

IT MUST take no more than six Aggies to cook a fajita, because that's the maximum size of teams allowed to enter Midland's Third Annual Boots & Saddle Dance and Fajita Cook-Off event, which is being sponsored by the Midland A&M Club and the Midland Convention and Visitors Bureau.

The cookoff and dance should make the Midland County Fairgrounds sizzle on June 21. All proceeds will go to the President's Endowed Scholarship Fund at Texas A&M University.

Fajita-cooking teams — with no more than those six members — can enter in either the general or commercial division with first- and second-place winners being chosen in each division.

Entry fees are $150 for general teams and $200 for commercial teams.

The entry fee is pretty steep, but competitors are provided with free fajita meat and condiments, so that they only have to provide their own grills, special seasonings and any secret ingredients.

The gates will open to the public at noon on June 21. Activities will include dominoes, horseshoe pitching and, of course, fajita tasting. The final fajita judging is scheduled for 3 p.m. and will be followed by an auction presided over by one of Midland's most prominent Aggies, Clayton Williams. The Boots & Saddle Dance featuring Frankie McWhorten and the Texas Swing Band will swing into action at 7:30 p.m.

Team entries for the fajita cookoff can be sent to the Midland A&M Club, P.O. Box 11125, Midland, Texas 79702. For more information call 683-3381.

IF YOU'RE not fanatical about fajitas and chili is not your first choice, then there is one other West Texas cook-off that you might want to consider.

The Fifth Annual Fort Stockton Menudo Cook-Off will be sponsored by the Ft Stockton Menudo Association in conjunction with Big Bend Coors on Memorial Day weekend.

Menudo is a Mexican stew dish consisting of beef tripe (better known as cow stomach), hominy, chili and spices. A Pan de Esquilla — i.e., skillet bread — Cook-Off will also accompany the menudo cook-off.

The gates will open 4 p.m. May 24 at the cook-off site on Pecos Highway 285 across from the Pecos County Golf Course. Contestants will begin setting up their campfires (entrants must provide their own food) that evening. At 8 p.m. a country-western dance featuring the Joe Stout Band will begin. The actual cook-off events will begin 4 p.m. May 25 and will include a washer-throw contest and a horseshoe tourney.

Winners will be announced before the 8 p.m. dance featuring Midland's own Macho Band. Registration fee is $10. For more information and an application kit call 336-8536 or 336-3245.

'Menudo Headquarters' stews

From Staff Reports

This recipe for menudo — the stew, that is, not the adolescent singing group — was provided by "Menudo Headquarters" in Fort Stockton.

The Fort Stockton Menudo Association is sponsoring its Fifth Annual Menudo Cook-Off May 24-25.

MENUDO
15 pounds beef tripe
4-5 cloves of garlic, diced
½ pound concentrated red chile puree
3 pounds cooked corn or 2 large cans of whole hominy
Salt, to taste
Leaf oregano, to taste

Clean and dice tripe bite-size pieces (Note: When cleaning tripe remove excess fat). Cook tripe and garlic in enough water to cover at low temperature for about 4 hours or until meat can be cut with a fork.

If cooked corn is used, put corn in pot with tripe after the meat has cooked for about 2 hours, then add chile towards the end of the 4-hour cooking time.

If hominy is used, it may be added with the chile towards the end of the tripe's cooking time. After chile and hominy are added, simmer for about 30-40 minutes.

Add salt to taste. Just minutes before serving, add oregano and let stand. Serve with chopped onion and lemon juice, if desired.

Picnic possibly poisonous

Hearst News Service

With warm spring weather settling in, it's time to cart out and scrub your picnic cooler — that marvelous device that makes it possible to dine al fresco on homemade goodies and still get away from the homestead.

Keep in mind, however, that even with this trusty portable cooler you need to take special care in handling foods, or your outing may have an unpleasant aftermath: food poisoning.

Food poisoning bacteria — microscopic critters you can't normally see, smell or taste — affect more than 2 million people each year, according to Mary Ann Parmley of the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Food Safety and Inspection Service. Since you're not apt to even know food is contaminated, prevention is the watchword, Parmley says, adding that by observing the rules of cold storage, sanitation and thorough cooking you can keep food safe any time you "pack it to go."

When you think picnic and head off to shop, make sure you buy perishable products last and get them right home to the refrigerator or into a portable ice chest or the insulated bag you're taking on the picnic. Never, she warns, leave perishables in a hot car while running other errands.

You can safely keep perishable products in the refrigerator for a few days. If the store-wrapping on meat and poultry is clean and undamaged, leave it on. Otherwise, rewrap it in clean plastic or aluminum foil. Also, be sure your refrigerator is cooling food to 40 degrees F or colder. For longer storage, wrap items tightly in heavy freezer foil or bags and freeze food in a freezer that registers 0 degrees F or colder. Mayonnaise-based meat, poultry, fish, salads, tomatoes and lettuce don't freeze well.

If you do freeze meat and poultry, don't defrost it on the kitchen counter. Bacteria can multiply to dangerous levels in the outer layers before inner areas thaw. Thaw large cuts of meat and poultry on a refrigerator shelf for a day or two before you need it. Small cuts usually thaw overnight. Partially frozen meat can be cooked a bit longer at the picnic.

Keep perishable food — ham, potato or macaroni salad, hamburgers, hot dogs, luncheon meat, cooked beef or chicken, deviled eggs, custard or cream pies — in a cooler. All mayonnaise salads should be stored on ice. Store-bought mayonnaise is not a problem, but homemade mayo, if made with lemon juice or vinegar, is risky. Your cooler should be well-insulated and packed with ice or a freeze-pack insert. Cold drinks in cans help keep other foods cold, as well.

Bacteria can be beat

Hearst News Service

Here are the most common types of food poisoning and Department of Agriculture tips on avoiding them:

■ Staphylococcus aureus (staph) spreads from someone handling food. It's found on the skin and in boils, pimples and throat infections. Vomiting and diarrhea, which last a day or two, appear two hours to eight hours after eating. Meat, poultry, cheese, egg products, starchy salads, custards and cream-filled desserts are susceptible. Cooking doesn't destroy staph, so wash hands and utensils before preparing food and don't leave food out for more than two hours.

■ Salmonella can strike when infected food — such as meat, poultry, eggs and fish — is eaten raw or undercooked or when cooked food comes in contact with infected raw food or when an infected person contaminates it. Symptoms are diarrhea, fever and vomiting within 12 hours to 36 hours and can last from two days to a week. To prevent salmonella, keep raw food away from cooked food, thoroughly cook meat, poultry and fish and be careful with poultry, pork, roast beef and hamburger. Avoid unpasteurized milk.

■ Clostridium botulinum (botulism) often occurs in home-canned or any canned goods showing warning signs — clear liquids turned milky, cracked jars, loose lids, swollen or dented cans or lids. Beware of any jar or can that spurts liquid or has an off-odor when opened. Within 12 hours to 48 hours, botulism can affect your nervous system, causing double-vision, droopy eyelids, trouble speaking and swallowing and difficult breathing. Medical help is necessary; untreated, botulism can be fatal. To protect against botulism, carefully examine home-canned goods before use and don't use any canned goods showing danger signs.

■ Clostridium perfringens is a "buffet germ" that grows rapidly in large quantities of food that are cooling slowly. It also can grow in chafing dishes which may not keep food sufficiently hot and in the refrigerator if food is stored in large portions which don't cool quickly enough. Diarrhea and gas pains show up within eight hours and usually last less than a day, but it can be more serious for older people and ulcer patients. Keep food hot (over 140 degrees) or cold (under 40 degrees) and divide bulk cooked foods into smaller portions for serving and cooling and be careful with poultry, gravy, stews and casseroles.

The 13 Midland chapters of Beta Sigma Phi recently honored a number of members during the organization's Founders Day celebration. "Girl of the Year" awards were presented to outstanding chapter members for their sorority and community work.

Mitre Peak Girl Scout Camp is now registering girls for seven one- and two-week summer camps.

Any girl who has completed first grade is eligible to attend camp. A girl does not need to be a registered Girl Scout to attend the camp.

Camp Mitre Peak is owned and operated by the Permian Basin Girl Scout Council. It is located in the Davis Mountains, halfway between Alpine and Fort Davis.

The permanent facilities include a dining hall, a program/administrative building, a swimming pool, corrals, bath houses, an infirmary and six living units.

A special session will celebrate the Texas Sesquicentennial year. Girls will relive life as it was 150 years ago.

The cost of the sessions for a registered Girl Scout are $100 for a one-week session, $170 for a two-week session, $190 for primitive living session and $250 for a horseback riding session. Fees for non-Girl Scouts are $3 more. Fees include food, lodging, a qualified trained staff and insurance.

For information about Camp Mitre Peak call the Permian Basin Girl Scout Council at 563-0634 or 337-1831 or write P.O. Box 1046, Odessa, Texas, 79760.

Tech expert: Fallout won't hurt U.S. food

LUBBOCK, Texas (UPI) — No food should be avoided by Americans due to the Chernobyl nuclear reactor accident, because radioactive residue is unlikely, an animal nutrition expert said Thursday.

While there has been concern since the accident occurred last month, Texas Tech University professor Rodney L. Preston said he agreed with the U.S. government that radiation poses no threat outside the affected area in the USSR.

"The immediate concern would be for crops or livestock directly downwind of the accident," Preston said, "but outside that area, there is no one product that should be avoided. There is nothing that should create a unique problem."

AT WIT'S END

'Seams' like old times

By ERMA BOMBECK

Surely hosiery manufacturers aren't serious about putting seams in the front of hose this spring. It's bad enough to have your grandmother's legs hanging out from under your dress like a bas-relief map of Brazil without dividing them into fours.

I am old enough to remember when seams snaked up the back of your legs. It was terrible. If they slipped off center, you looked like you had been in the saddle too long. If they veered off in different directions, your legs looked like a side of beef being sectioned off for the freezer.

And have you any idea what the odds are of having a run in each leg follow the path of the seam down to your heel? There's a whole generation of women out there who blouse at the knees. We don't need hosiery that sparkle, shimmer, have butterflies on the calf or arrows made out of rhinestones. We're looking for some nice firm sausage casings that sack up the legs and cut our losses around the waist area.

Instead, we have as many decisions regarding hosiery as we will make in a lifetime. Knee-hi or thigh-hi? Opaque or tummy control? Barefoot or cotton crotch? Bikini or wide load? Designer or embryo in an egg? A, B or XX?

I was returning socks to my husband's drawer the other day and noted, "How come men never stress out making choices of what socks to wear?"

"I have choices," he said. "Do I want to wear the brown sock with the black sock or the navy one with the beige?"

"Don't start with me about the odd socks again," I said. "If I've told you once I've told you a million times — there is a Bermuda Triangle somewhere with thousands of single socks floating around."

"Or I could mix a lint-covered sock with one that was laundered wrong-side out."

"The point," I said, "is your socks never change ... century after century."

"That is because men are not vain and do not feel the need to call attention to parts of our body that are better off left a secret. We are perfectly happy to have a nice, warm, comfortable sock that will keep our varicose veins warm."

He hit a nerve.

"I think it has deeper psychological roots than that!" I said, breathing heavily. "I think men have a low threshold of pain. They can't stand the burden fashion imposes upon them. Do not judge us until you have walked in our pantyhose that have no front or back. Hold your tongue until you wear our knee-hi's in a fitting room trying on a bathing suit. Hold back your sobs while you slip on a pair of $6 hose for the first time and watch a hole spring over the knee. Socks will never be unisexual. You know why? Men can't handle them. They're weak!"

"I can handle pain," he said, holding up a pair of socks. "They're the only pair I have that match ... and there's a hole in the toe."

DEAR ABBY

'Hurry up and slow down' good advice

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: You missed the mark in your response to "The Mrs. in Orlando," whose husband wouldn't slow down. I've spent 34 years running after a husband who is in a hurry to get to the car, get up from the table, rush to the check-out counter, etc., and I'm tired of it.

Most of the time he has to wait until I get there anyway to leave or set out for wherever we're going. He simply doesn't see his actions as being inconsiderate.

That poem, "Slow Me Down, Lord," was beautiful, but it was too long. A man in a hurry would never get past the second line. — TAGALONG

DEAR TAGALONG: Sorry. I received a lot of positive feedback on that poem. A "rebuttal" from a retired woman in Anaheim:

DEAR ABBY: Not all retirees continue the frantic pace of "The Mrs. in Orlando." Some seniors have the opposite problem; we have trouble "getting energized." For us I paraphrased the Rev. Peterson's poem, "Slow Me Down, Lord," as follows:

Speed me up, Lord!
Start the pounding of my heart
And concentration of my mind.
Quicken my slow pace
With a vision of my limited earthly time.
Give me,
Amid the confusions of my day,
The calm of self-chosen priorities.
Break the spell of quietness;
Let not soothing music or television
Keep me from activities.
Help me know
When to wake up,
When I've had sufficient sleep.
Teach me the art
Of channeling my energy
So I get things done —
And still have time
For flowers and friends,
Pets and children, smiles and books.
Remind me each day
That there is more to life
Than "sitting around."
Let me look upward
Into the branches of the towering oak
And know that it is still producing.
Speed me up, Lord,
And inspire me to spend my strength wisely,
Remembering life's important values
That I may meet more challenges
And fulfill a greater destiny.
— THREE SCORE AND FOUR IN CALIFORNIA

DEAR ABBY: You credited "Slow Me Down, Lord" to the Rev. Wilferd A. Peterson. It seems to me that it was written by the late Cardinal Richard Cushing of Boston, who died in 1970. — COULD BE MISTAKEN

DEAR COULD BE: The poem was erroneously credited to the late Cardinal Cushing by others — not by the cardinal himself — but it was in fact written by the Rev. Wilferd A. Peterson, who is well and alive at 85 in Grand Rapids, Mich.

DEAR ABBY: I am assigned to a base in Japan and don't often get a chance to see my family. Last year, when I was back in the states, my father seemed a little more fragile than I had remembered him the previous year. Later I took the advice I read in your column just before Father's Day: "Write a letter to your father and tell him how you feel about him. And why." Although I love both my parents very much, I didn't often say it.

Dad died of cancer in January. His was a very brief illness, lasting only a few months from the time of diagnosis.

At his funeral I learned that the letter I wrote, which made me feel a little foolish for saying what was in my heart, had made the rounds of the family. He was proud of that letter and read it to anyone who would listen — he had even sent it to his sister three states away.

Although I never heard it from him, I came to realize that my letter gave him much more pleasure than I thought it would.

A wonderful person is now gone, and a big piece of my life is missing. But thanks to you, I feel that I completed the final segment of the circle. I thank you for being thoughtful enough to stress the importance of this final act of family love. It made his day, and it made mine. — DAVID GIBBS, YOKOSUKA, JAPAN

New book relates cultural perceptions of pregnancy

Hearst News Service

Some Australian aborigines and certain American Indians believed infants' spirits waited in rocks to be drawn into the father's or mother's body.

Some cultures set the child's birthday at the date of conception, while others start counting at the first birthday.

Many believe the mother's actions during pregnancy influence the child's personality or future, and so they direct her to eat only certain foods or behave in a specific way.

All these rather esoteric facts are to be found in "The Well Pregnancy Book," by child-care experts Mike and Nancy Samuels, as well as the most current medical facts and figures about pregnancy.

Samuels, a practicing obstetrician, said the chapter on the traditions surrounding pregnancy is more than an interesting way to get into the book. It's there alongside all the other detailed data, he said, "because in my practice, mothers actually bring it up all the time."

Whether they are "religious" or not, Samuels said, "mothers have an idea about their babies' spirits." They have feelings about the child's person-hood or personality. They want to know if it's crazy to talk to their babies or to worry about what the baby might be hearing or understanding in their conversations with others.

So the Samuelses scoured the literature on primitive peoples ("If we're technical experts, they're spiritual experts," Samuels said). They examined the varied beliefs and practices with regard to pregnancy and birth, particularly mythology about where the spirit-babies come from and when life actually begins.

Samuels encourages parents to address these issues because it broadens people's thinking about the child's life and fits in with a larger philosophy that he and his wife share.

"We want to make people parents while they're pregnant," he said. "Parents get obsessed with labor and delivery. It's difficult for anyone who hasn't been through it to realize how surprised many people are when, after labor and delivery, there's a baby, a person."

Part of the problem is the mystery that surrounds birth in this culture, Samuels said.

"Mothers in this culture are profoundly isolated," he said. "They've never seen anyone else give birth, never seen a newborn baby."

The result is stress and fear. Samuels and other childbirth researchers believe fear is at the root of many difficult childbirth experiences.

"The Well Pregnancy Book" quotes studies showing that mothers experience a physiological "fight or flight" response when they are scared. During labor, one of two results may occur: Contractions slow to a standstill because of the presence of the hormone epinephrine, or they become long, excessively tense and painful because of the hormone norepinephrine.

"Anxiety in labor is one of the major causes of the high C-section rate in this country," Samuels said, noting that about 30 percent of Caesarean deliveries are performed because the labor fails to progress.

The Samuelses suggest the following: Take childbirth preparation classes to learn just what to expect; learn breathing and relaxation techniques to use throughout pregnancy and during labor; practice visualization to anticipate a joyful, healthful experience; and seek support from other mothers.

ASK DR. RUTH

Inexperienced male ashamed of past

By DR. RUTH WESTHEIMER

Q. I'm a male virgin, 30. I've never even petted or necked with a girl. Should I be ashamed? Because I am. I feel inferior to my friends, though they never rib me. How can I feel better about myself until my time does come?

A. Look here, it's your constitutional right to be sexually inactive, and you are using it. A patriot! Around here, using your rights is good stuff.

Here are some ways to feel good about your lifestyle.

Read some biographies of successful people. See how various their sex lives were, ranging from bizarre to zero. All of life is not sex. Life is full of other things. Some people have little or no time for sex.

Among your friends, be sure to be a grownup, not a last surviving juvenile. Give parties at your place, invite people to be your guests at restaurants, keep one of those books with birth dates and send cards and presents. Too many bachelors act like old children without social responsibilities.

Dress like a grownup. Have an investment and savings plan, like a married man with a watchful wife. Acting grownup means feeling grownup and accepting yourself more fully.

Consider how free your life is of emotional storms and silly disputes, and how you can go where you want, do what you want. How many of your sexually active friends have that freedom?

See, you didn't ask me, "How can I become sexually active?" or "How do I start a relationship?" I answered the question you asked.

Q. My husband hits me a lot and makes me sit on the floor. He talks sex all the time in front of the children and makes me have sex every day. He thinks other men are the children's fathers. I'd leave with the children, but I'm strapped for money.

A. Get yourself out of that hellhole, with the children, right away. Look up Battered Women in the phone book and call that number and ask for help. If there is no such listing in your local phone book, look up Social Service Agencies in the Yellow Pages.

Choose one and make a call. If you choose the wrong one, you'll still get advice on which is the right one to call. Don't worry now about starting a new life with the children. You will be getting help with that, but right now you must get out of where you are. You must not let yourself or the children be treated that way.

Q. You gave the wrong answer when you told that girl not to insist on trying sex before marriage. I wanted to, but I didn't, and now I'm trapped in a church marriage with a man who is impotent.

A. We don't say "impotent" any more because while there are many sexual difficulties (nearly everyone has one at some time), there are very few men whose sexual functioning can't be improved or restored. "Impotent" is a harmful word and we should all learn to use more helpful and accurate sexual terms. In your case, get to a sex therapist with your husband as soon as you can. If he won't go, then you go by yourself. Then you, at least, will understand the problem.

Whether or not a couple has sex before they get married should be their decision. Many couples may not have premarital sex for religious reasons. If the woman insists on some try-outs before marriage, she should at least understand that she may be setting up a stressful situation that can harm the man's lovemaking.

Without patience and understanding, she may be spoiling a chance for marriage that could have been happy and successful. By the way, according to divorce statistics, marriages of couples who "tried it out" first are as likely to break up as the other kind.

Patrick Duffy reappears in 'Dallas' tonight

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Patrick Duffy returns to "Dallas" in tonight's cliffhanger episode of the CBS series, but nobody is saying whether he'll be Bobby Ewing returning from the grave or a new character.

Duffy quit the hit prime-time soap opera at the end of last season, and Bobby died in a hospital bed after he was struck by a car. His appearance is expected to be little more than a walk-on, probably at the end of the show. He will return as a "Dallas" regular in the fall — when some of the questions will be answered.

"It's a deep secret," said Duffy. "I think even the people on the show will be taken aback about how I return as a person."

Will he be Bobby again?

"I didn't mention returning as Bobby Ewing," he said. "I won't mention it. I'm not saying I won't be Bobby Ewing, but I'm not saying I will. Leonard Katzman had this brilliant idea of how I would return."

Katzman is the new executive producer of "Dallas," but he has been the show's producer or consultant since its debut in April 1978. He has written at least a third of the shows and directed many of them.

It was another cliffhanger, "Who shot J.R.?" in 1980, and the worldwide attention it created, that made "Dallas" the highest-rated show on television.

This past season it fell to seventh, and program executives at CBS and Lorimar-Telepictures began looking for a means to pull the show up again.

"I don't know if the drop in ratings had anything to do with (his departure) or not," Duffy said. "The show lost three million viewers last season. The only thing they're happy about is it finished ahead of 'Dynasty.' They've never been aware of what makes 'Dallas' successful. It's the combined chemistry of the characters and the actors playing those roles."

"I'm not quite sure if anything will ever be quite as big as 'Who shot J.R.?'," said Katzman, "but I do believe the return of Patrick will cause a tremendous amount of discussion and interest.

"As for the ratings, I don't think anybody's going to beat 'Cosby,' but I think this will get us a huge tune-in. After that, it's up to us to give people the 'Dallas' they had come to know and love and keep them there. We expect this to have an impact similar to 'Who shot J.R.?'"

Since Duffy left the show, Pamela (Victoria Principal) has become engaged to Mark Graison (John Beck) and their wedding is scheduled for the cliffhanger show. Most speculation suggests that Duffy will make his appearance there.

"I'm looking forward to returning," said Duffy. "I've never had another working situation like this in terms of camaraderie and support on the set. There's so little competition. I think in the beginning Victoria and I had a little competition but that ended the first time I directed. I could see that it depended on teamwork."

Duffy said he did not leave "Dallas" because he had complaints. "I wasn't angry or fed up," he said. "I wanted to set up my own production company. I wanted to do all the things I couldn't do because I didn't have time while doing a series. I had a home building in Arizona and some land holdings that needed attention. I have an invention company with some patents out of St. Louis. My production company has several things in development. Now that things are moving I can run them from the set."

He made four acting appearances in an effort to show producers that he could play roles other than Bobby. They were the Operation Prime Time miniseries "Strong Medicine," guest roles on ABC's "Hotel" and CBS' "George Burns Comedy Week," and a role as the goat on the CBS movie "Alice in Wonderland."

"I had a very productive year," he said. "I made more money in the last 12 months that I ever did in 'Dallas.' But they made me a very lucrative offer to return. Money was never the factor. I felt I had to get out to let the industry see what I could do. I couldn't display that on 'Dallas.' I think people look on us now as individuals rather than just a group."

Allen says talk show requires little talent

NEW YORK (AP) — When Steve Allen wrote the song "This Could Be the Start of Something Big," he wasn't referring to his most lasting testament, "The Tonight Show," the insomniac's delight he started 30 years ago.

Steve Allen

You can credit Allen for establishing the late-night viewing habit and for introducing the desk-and-chair format to the culture, but don't call this versatile entertainer TV's first talk-show host. At least not to his face.

"'The Tonight Show' in my years was only a talk show on certain nights, when I couldn't think of anything more creative to do," said Allen, who believes interviewing guests requires skill — he singled out Phil Donahue's provocativeness and Merv Griffin's curiosity — but not any discernible talent.

"Talent is restricted to the cultural arts," said Allen, the noted comedian, pianist, songwriter and author whose 27th book, "How to Make A Speech," was released recently.

He said the talk-show host "gets as much credit as the guest merely for saying, 'Oh, really, so what happened then?'" He likened the job to a disc jockey who wins fame by playing other people's music.

"If you interview Frank Sinatra or Donald Duck, on this planet you become as famous as Frank Sinatra or Donald Duck," Allen said. "Hosting a talk show is no big deal."

Whatever it is, Allen did his brand of it first. As pioneer of NBC's "The Tonight Show" from 1954-57, Allen strove for an uninhibited, comic nuttiness. His successor, Jack Paar, stressed the art of conversation. The current king of the midnight hour, Johnny Carson, has combined both aspects.

A "Tonight Show" retrospective will be included in "NBC's 60th Anniversary Celebration" tonight. The three-hour salute to six decades of NBC radio and TV history will include appearances by 100 stars and highlights from NBC's broadcasting annals.

Allen will be shown doing a monologue from NBC's opening "Tonight Show" in September 1954.

Fawcett 'forgets' angels, stars as woman Nazi hunter

PARIS (AP) — Farrah Fawcett, once the glossy star of TV's "Charley's Angels," will portray Beate Klarsfeld in a television movie dramatizing the noted Nazi hunter's personal crusade to track down war criminals.

Miss Fawcett, who said she wants to forget her "unfortunate past as an angel," will star in "The Beate Klarsfeld Story," a 90-minute movie to be broadcast on ABC and French television next fall. It is based on the true story of Klarsfeld, a German woman who risked her life ferreting out former Nazis and bringing them to justice. The movie highlights her search for Klaus Barbie, the "Butcher of Lyon," whom she discovers hiding in South America.

The movie opens when Beate is a young. She leaves bomb-shattered Berlin in 1960 for Paris. There she falls in love with, and marries, a French Jewish law student named Serge Klarsfeld. He is played by Scottish actor Tom Conti.

From Serge, who narrowly escaped deportation when he was 8 years old and whose father was murdered at Auschwitz, Beate learns the full extent of the Nazi horrors and vows to make sure the world knows.

The $5 million dollar Silver Chalice/Revcom presentation was done in association with Orion Television. Directed by Michael Lindsay-Hogg.

She goes to see Itta Halaunbrenner, played by Academy Award-winner Geraldine Page, to help identify Barbie, the man who allegedly killed her husband and three children.

Rivers a big 'success,' says former NBC head

Joan Rivers

NEW YORK (AP) — Five months before Joan Rivers even opens her big mouth on her own talk show, she's already a big success for her new employer, the embryonic Fox Broadcasting Network.

So says Fred Silverman, former president of NBC who knows something about late-night television. When he had NBC and Johnny Carson, his late-night schedule worked wonders. When he then became an independent producer and created "Thicke of the Night," his late-night program went nowhere.

Silverman says Miss Rivers has stirred public awareness and station attention, which is one reason Fox Inc. reportedly is paying her $10 million over three years. Rupert Murdoch's dream of turning his six TV stations and his Fox movie studio into a fourth network depends on the Fox Broadcasting Network signing enough quality independent stations to attract widespread national audiences and widescale advertiser support.

"When you're trying to launch a network, you really need to signal to potential affiliates and advertisers that you're committed," Silverman said. "This signing shows the world that this is a big-time operation. Joan certainly has familiarity and experience with the late-night audience. Whether the show succeeds or fails, it's already a resounding success."

Fox hopes to gain promotional value out of Miss Rivers' program, "The Late Show Starring Joan Rivers," which is scheduled to start in September. If you think NBC plugs its series and miniseries on "The Tonight Show," wait until FBN's stars start parading across Miss Rivers' couch.

The fledgling FBN, which hopes to introduce at least one night of regularly scheduled prime-time programming next year, has announced its first series, "Down and Out in Beverly Hills." FBN mentioned no cast members, except for Mike, the neurotic dog from the "Down and Out in Beverly Hills" movie, so you can imagine he'll quickly become the mascot of Miss Rivers' show.

So far, FBN only has Murdoch's six stations in New York, Chicago, Los Angeles, Washington, Dallas and Houston, reaching 21 percent of America's homes with television. No affiliates have been announced yet, and industry observers say attracting independent stations — the 250 not already affiliated with ABC, CBS or NBC — will be a difficult task.

Independent stations program their entire schedules. They pay for the shows, usually a hodgepodge of sports, movies, network reruns and first-run syndicated series, and keep almost all the advertising revenue. The gamble is finding and financing programming to fill the schedule and entice viewers.

On the other hand, the 200-plus stations each affiliated with ABC, CBS or NBC get programming from the big-daddy network. The networks, in turn, pay the stations for taking the shows and keep most of the commercial time. In a normal prime-time hour, NBC gets six minutes of advertising, the affiliate gets three.

"The affiliate is willing to take that position," said Tony Cervini, NBC's vice president for affiliate relations, "because of the totality of service a network provides: news, sports, entertainment, advertising and promotion. That's a nice, big package."

And don't underestimate the value of promoting "The Tonight Show" on an earlier NBC series, such as the top-rated "Cosby Show." With fewer stations and a much smaller reach, FBN's on-air plugs for guests on Miss Rivers' show will be whispers in the wind.

It must be noted that in her two seasons as sole substitute host on "The Tonight Show," Miss Rivers was successful on Carson's show, in Carson's time slot on Carson's network, with Carson's habit viewers.

Can we talk, she asked. But talk is cheap. This fall, Miss Rivers essentially will have to attract late-night audiences on her own.

"I wouldn't bet against it, but it depends on how deep Mr. Murdoch's pockets are," Cervini said. "Right now, there aren't enough advertising dollars to go around for the three existing networks."

John Sisk, senior vice president at the J. Walter Thompson advertising agency, said "if there's one place TV needs good programming, it's in late night. Advertisers are looking to reach more women in that time period.'

Sisk noted that Miss Rivers' competition isn't only "The Tonight Show," CBS' late-night movie and ABC's "Nightline," it's syndicated shows, including "Night Life," starring David Brenner, another "Tonight Show" alumnus. Brenner's program has a head start on Miss Rivers' show with 100 stations signed for the fall, according to the distributor, King World Productions.

Silverman said Miss Rivers would need to reach 2.5 million to 3 million homes to make money for Fox. On "Tonight," she averaged three times that many viewers. "She's got a real shot," Silverman said. "Success doesn't mean beating Johnny Carson."

It might mean that Miss Rivers merely establishes an audience toehold next season.

Town of 35,000 home to '10,000 Maniacs'

JAMESTOWN, N.Y. (AP) — There are 10,000 Maniacs in this city of 35,000.

And they're broke but hopeful.

10,000 Maniacs is a rock band. The sextet put out its first major album on Elektra-Asylum Records last May, finished its first video in February and is working on a second Elektra LP. But success has not meant wealth.

"We think Elektra sees us as a long-term project and they're allowing us to build a following," said keyboardist Dennis Drew of the Maniacs' seven-record deal. With their new album, "The Wishing Chair," selling between 500 and 1,200 copies a week, the band's members still feel a financial pinch.

"We've been traveling at every opportunity because no one has a job," said guitarist John Lombardo, at 32 the oldest member. "It's almost like the longer we've been in the band the more we've had to divorce ourselves from our worldly possessions. One by one we've all had to sell our cars, move out of our apartments."

They talked about their frustrations in remaining tied to Jamestown — their hometown — and as Lombardo put it, "sponging off our families," as they practiced one day on the vaudeville-era stage of Jamestown's Palace Civic Center.

"In so many ways it has been good for us because we've been isolated," said vocalist and lyricist Natalie Merchant, the group's youngest member at 22. "We haven't tried to stay up with the trends or stay ahead of the trends."

Show business promoter and USA for Africa founder Ken Kragen, left, joins hands with Fred Droz, center, national project director, and Marty Rogol, executive director, in the Hands Across America office at Century City, Calif. The event should raise $50 million or more to help America's hungry and homeless.

Hands Across America

By RICHARD DE ATLEY
Associated Press Writer

Just days before 5.4 million volunteers are needed to form a human chain across the United States, the promoters of Hands Across America remain optimistic the Memorial Day weekend event will raise $50-100 million for the nation's hungry and homeless.

Ken Kragen, a show business promoter and USA for Africa founder who organized Hands Across America, predicts success for the May 25 event, even if the chain is broken in places.

The event's organizers claim that 1.5 million people have already signed up and that momentum is building.

"This isn't a bunch of guys sitting around wishing this is going to happen," Kragen said in an interview. "This is an operation designed to make it happen."

Kenny Rogers, Lily Tomlin, Woody Allen, Bill Cosby and other celebrities have endorsed the event, but Hands Across America is equally interested in a high school student's efforts to organize his classmates to join the route, Kragen said.

Hands Across America's carefully nurtured nonpolitical image has earned it endorsements from the governors of the 16 states it will traverse as well as from law enforcement and local government officials.

The 4,152-mile route begins in Long Beach, Calif., and ends at Battery Park on the tip of Manhattan in New York City, passing through 16 states and the District of Columbia. It will cross about 1,400 miles of Southwestern desert.

Those who want to be in the line will pay $10 to $35 for places as far as 50 miles from home. Or they can go to hard-to-fill spots such as New Mexico, where organizers estimate the line will need 529,320 people — or almost half the state's population of 1.3 million — for an unbroken chain.

Organizers are counting on volunteer help from transportation companies and car pools to get people in place.

Participants are supposed to line up, join hands at 3 p.m. EDT on the Sunday before Memorial Day and sing three songs: "America the Beautiful," "We Are the World" and "Hands Across America." The whole event will be over in about 15 minutes.

Each mile of the route needs 1,300 participants, a figure that staggers many local organizers.

"It's really beyond anyone's comprehension," said JoAnn Shafer, town organizer in Cisco, Ill. "They have a feeling that it's not really going to happen. That's my dilemma. I know it's going to happen."

Kragen, too, admits the idea is overwhelming at first.

"When you think of it in that massive approach, you tend to have that kind of disbelief," he said. "What we've done is to break it down into smaller, manageable segments, in some cases a tenth of a mile segment, with 132 people. When you organize on that kind of level, it suddenly becomes much easier."

Fred Droz, a former political advance man for Jimmy Carter, structured Hands Across America along the lines of a grass-roots presidential campaign, with branch offices in each of the 16 states and the District of Columbia.

The route was laid out to help fill the line; it passes within 100 miles of 65 percent of the major population centers of the country, said Droz, national project director.

Kragen insisted that a coast-to-coast line is as important as raising the money, even though millions of dollars will likely be pledged by corporate sponsors regardless of whether the route is filled.

"There are clearly different levels of success," he said. "But our objective is to make the line link, because the symbolic nature of the linking is very important. But there's no question that the event's success is not purely dependent on the line itself."

Contributions from corporations, combined with pledges and sponsorships, have already underwritten the venture's $12 million cost, Kragen said.

And while some people may have private doubts, the promotion campaign appears to have succeeded in keeping public criticism of Hands Across America at bay.

"A lot of people don't want to say something against it, because it's like knocking Mom and apple pie," Arizona Republic reporter Holly Remy said recently. She should know.

"Possibly every thinking Arizonan is thinking it, but no one has said it yet. So here goes: Ken Kragen has got to be kidding," she wrote in an article.

Phoenix at the end of May, she wrote, "is like the inside of a pizza oven. It is so hot that snakes stick to the ground. It is certainly too hot to hold hands."

Irate readers called Ms. Remy at home when her story ran Easter Sunday. "To look at a project so full of hope and cooperation and reduce it to a story about sweaty palms and buzzards is pathetic," said one letter-writer.

After months of organizing, the final publicity push for Hands Across America is under way.

Singer Kenny Rogers, who plans to participate while straddling the Texas-New Mexico border, is shown in one promotional television spot, loading up his pickup truck and pleading, "Don't leave me alone out there."

Some 750 corporate sponsors are chipping in. Phoenix-based American Express has bought a mile-long segment in the Arizona desert. Cartier, the jewelry company, will buy a place in the line for each purchase above $100.

The line for Hands Across America covers 4,152 miles, and oranizers say 5.4 million people will be needed to fill it May 25.

The proposed human chain goes through 16 states and the District of Columbia. It crosses 1,400 miles of desert, three mountain ranges and 10 rivers. It links about 500 cities and towns.

Here is a list of the states involved, their populations, the number of miles in the Hands Across America line, the number of people needed to fill the line, and some major cities and towns on the route.

The list covers the route from west to east, and lists Illinois, Maryland and Pennsylvania twice because the line leaves and re-enters those states.

Democratic leaders say Ervin can no longer call self 'Sam'

By GARTH JONES

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas Democratic Party leaders have decided they won't allow Railroad Commission candidate Percy Strother Ervin to call himself "Sam" on the June 7 runoff ballot.

The 71-year-old Dallas oil and gas consultant said he would not contest the Thursday decision of the State Democratic Executive Committee.

"I think I will get more sympathy this way," Ervin told reporters.

Ervin appeared on the May 3 ballot as P.S. "Sam" Ervin and ran second to state Sen. John Sharp to qualify for the June 7 runoff. Shortly after the election, Sharp and others questioned whether "Sam" was a legitimate nickname used by Ervin.

Ervin claims to be a "first cousin removed" of the late North Carolina Sen. Sam Ervin of Watergate fame.

State Democratic Chairman Robert Slagle said Thursday that Ervin has not been "commonly known" as "Sam" for at least two years as required by the Texas Election Code.

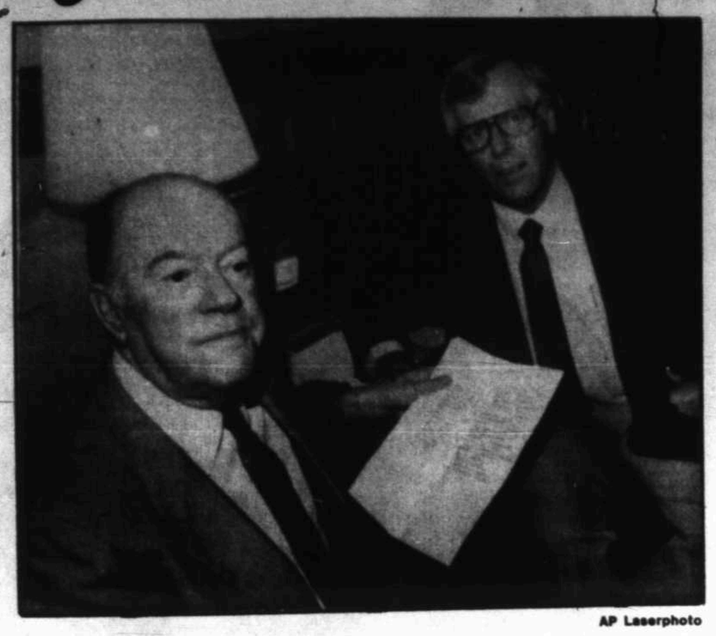

The Democratic winner June 7 will meet a Republican contender, also selected in a runoff, at the general election for the state agency that regulates the oil and gas industry in Texas.

The state committee also certified winners in the May 3 party primary, but added "with regret," their approval of three followers of Lyndon Larouche, who got on the Democrats' November ballot by being unopposed in the May primary.

"I congratulate our Democratic chairmen over the state for defeating these other LaRouche candidates except where they were unopposed locally," said Slagle.

The motion to add "with regret" to the official certification of two congressional candidates and one for the Texas House was made by committee member Diane Richards of Houston.

She identified the "self-identified" LaRouche candidates as Harry Kniffen and Susan Director, both seeking U.S House seats from Houston, and Lester Dahlberg, Eldorado, candidate for the Texas House.

Dead politician's election adds interest to El Paso Democratic race

By DORALISA PILARTE

EL PASO (AP) — Despite his death 10 months ago, a politician has been unanimously elected to represent a precinct at the El Paso County Democratic convention Saturday.

The choice seems in keeping with politics in this border city west of the Pecos, where candidates in the May 3 primaries included one who was dead, two who posted bail to get out of jail and promptly resumed campaigning and another two who set up campaign headquarters in a psychiatric ward and a local bar.

"His spirit will be there, by God," said lawyer Bob Neill, who helped choose Woodrow Bean during the primary to be among the 18 delegates for Precinct 14.

"I wouldn't be surprised if Mr. Bean made it all the way to the state convention," scheduled for June in Austin, Neill added.

Bean, the dean of El Paso Democratic politics for more than 50 years, died July 13, 1985, of lung cancer. He was 67.

Always controversial, Bean was "an old stand-by, dyed-in-the-wool, yellow-dog Democrat," said Harry Guilford, party secretary in El Paso County.

Bean was first elected to the Texas Legislature in 1940 and to county judge in the 1950s and 60s. He ran for office more than a dozen times.

"He was an extremely colorful person, not bashful or shy about his point of view," said Neill. "It was never boring when Mr. Bean was around.

"This Democratic campaign was boring."

Boring? Candidates running for office in the May 3 primary included:

— State District Judge Edwin Berliner, who died after the deadline for removing names from the ballot, leaving contender Peter S. Peca Jr. conducting a lonesome campaign. Peca was elected to the judgeship.

— County Attorney Danny Anchondo, arrested April 15 on cocaine charges. On the Tuesday before elections, Anchondo was indicted, booked into the county jail and released on $5,000 bond. He claimed the arrest was politically motivated and hit the campaign trail running. Anchondo lost to his opponent.

— Michael Webster, who ran for a seat on the county commission and claimed that his arrest on the same day as Anchondo's was also political. Webster's former campaign manager turned him in, claiming the candidate hit him over the head when he tried to retrieve a stove, refrigerator, washer, dryer and television set. Webster was charged with felony theft, booked into the county jail and released after posting $5,000 bond. Webster lost.

— Hoss Garvey, who had set up temporary campaign headquarters at the psychiatric wing of the county hospital. He was later transfered to a state facility after his mother had him committed for dangerous behavior, including throwing two bowling balls through a neighbor's window. Garvey received a mere 513 votes.

— Veteran Justice of the Peace Walter McGhee, whose choice of the Incredibles bar as campaign headquarters prompted opponents to call for his resignation. McGhee, who declined to resign, will be in a runoff set for June 7.

Mayor kicked out of City Hall quarters

WEST COLUMBIA (AP) — The mayor of this southeast Texas community is looking for office space after getting kicked out of his City Hall quarters.

City Council members, irritated by Richard Gutzman taking over office space at City Hall without consulting them, unanimously passed an ordinance prohibiting office space for any elected city officials, Councilman Star Griffith said.

"He doesn't need it," said Griffith, 40-year-old owner of an auto body repair shop. He added that the mayor is welcome to use any empty desk at City Hall or the spacious council chambers.

But Gutzman, a 47-year-old pharmacist who was elected in April after campaigning on a platform of open government, said he never asked for the office, only for a place to meet with people.

He met with four residents in a month before the ban and the mayor's office, in an already crowded City Hall, has remained empty for most of the day, City Manager Vickie Knight said.

Gutzman said he already has two offers for office space from constituents and plans to meet with residents at his pharmacy until the issue is resolved.

"I campaigned for a change," he said. "It's obvious that I'm not going to make much of a change with the present council."

Today, the Audi 5000S becomes even easier to handle. $298 a month*.

The Audi 5000S sedan's ability to negotiate roadways crisply and efficiently is certainly one reason to admire it. That you can negotiate a lease of just $298 a month on this fine European luxury sedan is all the more reason to acquire it.

Performance aside, this 1986 Audi 5000S sedan comes with many standard features that increase comfort without altering the lease price. Electronic climate control, cruise control, power windows and door locks, AM/FM stereo cassette, and automatic transmission make this limited time offer a tempting invitation to unlimited driving pleasure.

A closer look will prove what words cannot. Come in for a test drive and complete lease details. Program ends May 31, 1986. And drive away in an Audi 5000S sedan at a lease price that is, well, easy to handle.

*This offer is available only from a participating Audi Leasing dealer through May 31, 1986 as a 60-month, closed-end lease. No purchase option. No down payment is required. First month $298 payment and $300 security deposit are required in advance. Monthly payments are based on manufacturer's suggested retail price and special lease terms exteded by VCI Leasing. Total lease payments $17,880.00 plus 10¢ per mile over 75,000. Registration, local fees, tax, options additional.

Classified PET NEWS

The Midland S.P.C.A. (Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals) Auxiliary is sponsoring a garage sale on Saturday, 9:00 a.m. to 4:00 p.m. The garage sale will be held at 2714 West Wall Street. This will be a large sale featuring a great variety of articles including furniture, clothes, etc.

Information about the S.P.C.A. will also be available as well as free educational brochures. S.P.C.A. T-shirts will be for sale along with several other items.

All money collected will go to the S.P.C.A. The S.P.C.A. Adoption Center does not place a time limit on their animal tenants. The S.P.C.A. Shelter accepts no more animals if the Shelter is fully occupied and has a policy of euthanasia only if required because of illness, injury, or failure to adopt. The cost of running the Shelter is in excess of $5,000.00 per month. Donations to the garage sale are therefore greatly needed.

Anyone needing more information or wishing to donate items for the garage sale may call Sylvia after 6:00 p.m. at 694-6063. People donating items should put a price tag on the item and a tax receipt will then be provided. Arrangements can be made for the S.P.C.A. to pick up any large items to be donated. All items donated are TAX DEDUCTIBLE.

Is your club or organization having a meeting or special event concerning pets? If so the Midland Reporter-Telegram would like to help you spread the word. We'll published the information for you-FREE. Every Wednesday, Friday and Sunday in the classified section under Pets & Supplies (class 500) you have the latest information on pet club happenings in the Permian Basin. Send or bring in the information to us at least two weeks before the event.
