

White Twister Spared Hospital, Local Lives

Good Fortune Recalled Six Years After Tornado

Path Of Destruction Revisited

center of the photo. The funnel then crossed Highway 60 and damaged the bus depot, a beauty shop and garage. A stopped clock on the wall of the bus station gave mute testimony to the time of the twister; 12:50 a.m.

The thunderstorms which have hovered over the Hereford area for several days now have been pleasant for county farmers and local residents.

GENTLE RAINS have given new life to a parched wheat crop, and have made better planting moisture available for corn and other grain crops that will be going in soon.

But six years ago today, the results of a typical spring thunderstorm weren't so pleasant for the town of Hereford or its residents.

A solid line of thunderstorms had formed, covering the Panhandle-South Plains area and extending into Colorado.

With turbulent conditions existing in the towering clouds, ill winds were brewing aloft.

AT 12:40 a.m. Monday, April 19, 1971, a white tornado descended from the boiling cloud masses.

Sheriff Travis McPherson who was observing the storm, confirmed that the twister was headed toward the city, and watched as it moved ominously closer.

"It was white and never did turn black," said McPherson. "It bounced several hundred yards, jumped completely over some highline wires, then descended and smashed some tin buildings," he added.

While moving in a northeasterly direction, the tornado made a fateful hop which probably spared many lives.

IT WAS HEADED directly for Deaf

Smith General Hospital, but skipped past it.

The whirling cloud crossed U.S. Highway 60 and struck the Crowe-Guide cement firm, twisting metal, before moving on to strike the bus depot, a beauty shop and an auto repair shop, all within a 500 foot span.

A clock on the wall at the bus station marked the time of the sledgehammer blow to Hereford; 12:50 a.m.

The twister hedgedhopped for nearly seven miles, leaving broken windows, snapped power lines and shattered poles, tossed cars and roofless houses in its wake.

TEN MOBILE HOMES and nine other homes were destroyed, while some 30 to 40 homes were unroofed.

And while the twister was wreaking havoc here, at least five other tornadoes were spawned by the storm system. Those twisters struck along a 22 mile stretch of farmland in the Muleshoe area.

As suddenly as the Hereford tornado had come, it was gone.

Incredibly, there were no deaths, and only about 20 injuries here, none of which were termed serious.

IT WAS EVIDENT to everyone eyeing the storm's wake that Hereford had been extremely lucky.

The La Plata junior high gymnasium became the site of an emergency relief center.

County Judge H.C. Williams and Mayor Jim Sears prevailed on Governor Preston Smith to dispatch a state disaster team here. A disaster area designation was later leveled by the Small Business Administration.

The damage here was estimated at $2.5 million, but local residents set about the cleanup with a will, making it their priority task.

AND IN RELATIVELY short order, the scars of a confrontation with nature were removed from the local landscape.

Six years later, an individual would hardly know that a twister had mangled a section of the city, and miraculously spared the local hospital.

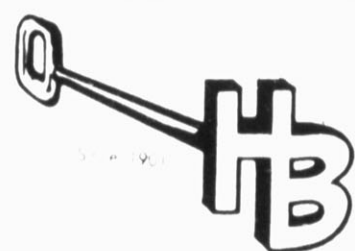

But for those who witnessed what happened here early on that April morning not so many years ago, it's hard to forget.

And when storm clouds form on the city's horizons each spring, recollections of how fortunate Hereford really was come to mind, along with hopes for continued good fortune.

Concert Tonight

The Hereford High School choir will present a free "mini-concert" for the public tonight in the high school auditorium. The performance will begin at 7:30 o'clock and all interested persons are welcome.

The three choirs will be presenting contest selections which they will be required to perform Wednesday in Amarillo during the University Interscholastic League Festival. This competition will involve two local girls choirs and the mixed choir, all under the direction of Don Moore.

That feller on Tierra Blanca Creek says it's not the burden that gets us down, it's the way we carry it.

My grandfather always said that talking is just like doing carpentry work—measure twice and saw once.

"WE WERE LUCKY!" that's the statement which was repeated over and over after a tornado struck Hereford six years ago today.

Perhaps it's not pleasant to recall such disasters but, despite the awesome damage inflicted, Hereford residents felt fortunate to place their emphasis on a cleanup rather than funeral services.

A HIGHLIGHT of the Panhandle Press Association convention in Amarillo the past weekend was the recognition of three veteran newsmen. It was particularly pleasing for us to see Jimmy Gillentine presented with an honorary lifetime membership in the association, and we know his many friends in Hereford join with us in congratulating "Mr. G" on this occasion.

THE RAINFALL this past week wasn't enough to cause many people to get stuck in the mud, but it was great for the farmland in the county and area. The moisture received was enough to put a smile on farmers' faces!

And, despite economic woes, the recent report of financial institutions for the first quarter of the year reflected a healthy situation. Deposits at the four local financial institutions totalled more than $100 million at the end of the quarter—an increase of more than $4 million over the same time a year ago.

Mahon Meets With Carter On Defense Funds, Energy

WASHINGTON, D.C. — George Mahon, 19th District congressman, was called to a morning White House meeting to discuss defense funding today and the president's recommendations for national energy policy.

Mahon joined other senior congressional leaders at a breakfast meeting with the president and secretary of defense Harold Brown to discuss national defense policy and priorities, including the defense budget recently submitted to congress.

Mahon, chairman of the house appropriations committee also serves as chairman of the defense appropriations subcommittee which is responsible for reviewing and passing on the yearly defense budget.

After the defense discussion Mahon met with president Carter and Dr. James Schlesinger, special assistant to the president for energy, to review the president's energy policy, which is to be revealed at a joint session of congress on Wednesday.

Mahon said that one of his principal concerns was that the federal government would undertake to assume control of intrastate gas.

Congressman Mahon has urged president Carter and Dr. Schlesinger to include as a part of the energy message improved tax treatment of independent producers of oil and gas, pointing out that the present law regarding intrastate drilling costs is having the direct effect of reducing investments in exploration drilling.

Banquet Tickets On Sale Locally

Tickets for the annual Hereford High School All Sports Banquet are now on sale locally at several locations, including the First National Bank, the Hereford State Bank, McDowell Drug, Western Auto, Edwards Pharmacy, and the Hereford Brand.

The banquet is set for Tuesday, April 26 at 7:30 p.m. in the Bull Barn. Tickets for the event are priced at $4.50 for adults and $3.00 for students.

There will be no featured speaker this year, with local broadcaster Tom Simons acting as master of ceremonies for the evening. During the banquet awards will be given to all participants in each sport by the respective coach, and special awards will be given to outstanding athletes.

The purpose of the banquet is not only to award the athletes, but to help supplement the booster club program which sponsors various activities throughout the year. Booster Club president Dick Montgomery said.

ACS Campaign Goal Surpassed

The house to house campaign of the American Cancer Society's Hereford unit was termed a "tremendous success" by co-chairman Naomi Schroeter after some 240 volunteers canvassed Hereford Monday evening.

"The workers were tremendous and had the best outlook, everything went really super," Mrs. Schroeter said. The campaign Monday night part of a $13,500 Crusade goal for this year, amounted to $3,819.88, the most ever for the house to house campaign in Hereford according to Mrs. Schroeter.

The amount will grow a little today with additional pledges which will be picked up by Mrs. Schroeter, but even without the additional funds the drive surpassed the house to house goal by over $800.

The house to house goal for this year was set at $3,000, the same as the amount set for the business drive which is currently underway.

The Deaf Smith General Hospital Board of Directors met for the first time Wednesday morning with newly elected directors Dr. Gerald Payne and Ed Reinaur, Jr. in attendance. The board conducted a routine meeting after

The Deaf Smith General Hospital Board of Directors welcomed two new members at its April meeting this morning at the hospital, the first since the election for new board members was held earlier this month.

Welcomed to the board were Dr. Gerald Payne and Ed Reinaur, Jr. In addition, Dr. Hap Cavness was welcomed back after being reelected to his post in the same election.

After canvassing the election results and approving the report submitted by the election judge, the then current board members watched as the newly elected officials signed oaths of office.

The official results of the election showed Dr. Payne receiving the most votes of the four candidates, including Isaías Gamez who was also seeking reelection.

Dr. Payne received 978 votes, Reinaur got 916, Dr. Cavness received 913, and Gamez got 550. In addition Tommy Carnahan and Charles Holt each received 11 write-in votes. "We would like to welcome the new members to the board first of all," Board president L.J. Straffuss said just prior to ordering elections for the new board officers.

A result of the elections had Dr. Cavness voted in as the new board president, with Frank Zinser elected vice president and Reinaur chosen as the new secretary.

Dr. Cavness, as the new president then appointed committees and chairmen for

Warning Draws Praise

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter's warning of an impending energy doomsday is drawing praise from congressional leaders, but many doubt he can win approval of stringent conservation measures. Congress is now awaiting the details on Carter's energy conservation program. He will deliver his legislative proposals to a joint House-Senate session on Wednesday.

Cars To Cost More

WASHINGTON (AP) — Owning and operating an automobile will cost you far more in the coming years if Congress enacts President Carter's proposals to conserve energy and protect the environment. The Carter administration acknowledges that its just-unveiled plan to tighten auto emission standards could increase car sticker prices by as much as $330 by 1985. That's in addition to the plan for a standby gasoline tax of up to 50 cents a gallon and the proposals to add hundreds of dollars to the price of fuel-inefficient "gas guzzlers."

Senate Trying A Bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate tax writers are trying to put together a tax bill that does not rely on the $50-per-person rebates President Carter once placed at the heart of his economic stimulus program. The Senate Finance Committee, called into session today, has at least two problems as it tries to salvage Carter's stimulus package: how to handle a Republican drive for permanent tax cuts to substitute for the one-time payments to most Americans, and how much stimulation to business should remain in the reduced bill.

Pageant Committee
Plans Style Show

Miss Hereford Dee Anne Cason will be featured in a solo style show June 28 at Hereford Country Club, according to the steering committee of the local pageant.

The style show will be a good luck party for the local titleholder, who will be embarking for the Miss Texas Pageant at Fort Worth July 3. Miss Cason will be modeling fashions donated by Hereford merchants. She also plans to appear in competition apparel and perform the talent which she will present at the state finals.

In relation to the Miss Texas contest, the steering committee appointed Joyce Shipp to make "ditty bags" to be filled with articles to be given by Miss Cason to her fellow competitors. Merchants wishing to donate items for the ditty bags are asked to contact Lavin Nieman at 364-2030.

Fiscal reports of this year's Miss Hereford and Little Miss Pageants were discussed with the committee voting to allot $350 for the Little Miss contest next year.

The group, which is a subdivision of the Chamber of Commerce Women's Division, agreed to stage the Little Miss Pageant in 1978 separately from the scholarship pageant. The younger pageant will be held during a different time of the year and will operate under a separate steering committee.

In attendance at the recent meeting were Lucy Rogers, chairman; Wynelle Robinson and Sharon Hodges, pageant co-directors; Nancy Hall, chairperson for Miss Hereford; and Donna Warrick, co-chairman of the Little Miss competition.

Also present were Mary Herring, Linda McDowell, Kathy Johnson, Donna Vander-Zee and Mrs. Nieman.

Bride-Elect Honored

Mrs. Benny Womble, at left, was hostess in her home Saturday morning for a pre-nuptial shower honoring Miss Cynthia Ruth, third from left. Also receiving guests at the recent courtesy were the honoree's mother, Mrs. Laurence Ruth, at right, and Mrs. Deane Donnell of Canyon, mother of Miss Ruth's fiancé, Alan Donnell.

Tickets Available Cindy Ruth

Tickets may be purchased from any Deaf Smith County 4-H'er and proceeds will benefit the 4-H Round-Up, Electric Camp, Texas 4-H Congress and all district and state 4-H activities.

Persons attending the upcoming bean supper are urged to eat their fill of beans, cornbread, fruit cobbler and relishes. Tickets will also be sold at the door during the supper.

Chairmen of the annual fund-raising activity are Tom and Gena Simons.

Miss Cindy Ruth, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Laurence Ruth, was feted Saturday morning at a bridal shower in the Benny Womble home, 246 Ranger Drive.

Miss Ruth and Alan Donnell of Canyon plan to be married May 21 in First Christian Church here.

Forming the receiving line were the honoree, her mother, her fiancé's mother, Mrs. Deane Donnell of Canyon, and Mrs. Womble. Miss Ruth was presented a corsage of white daisies tied with blue ribbon. Corsages of blue and yellow daisies were worn by other members of the receiving line.

Miss Debbie Hoover and Miss Beverly Hewitt served spiced tea, coffee, pastries and fruit from silver appointments. Laid with a cream cloth, the serving table was centered by a bouquet of blue and yellow daisies with babybreath.

Miss Martha Cooksey invited guests to sign the registry book.

Hostesses who assisted Mrs. Womble included Mmes. Ed Line, Riley Holmes, John Poindexter, Carroll Whiteside, Gid Brown, G.W. Payne, Pete Nash and Bennie Moore.

Digestion begins the instant food is placed in the mouth. The incisor teeth rip food into smaller pieces, canines get a firm grip on the smaller morsels, and bicusps and molars grind the mixture into a semisolid lump-the food bolus.

At the same time salivary glands provide moisture that mixes with the bolus and facilitates swallowing. There are a few weak digestive enzymes in the saliva, too, but they don't play a very significant role in starting the chemical breakdown of foodstuffs.

After swallowing, food passes down the esophagus into the stomach. Here the 35 million tiny gastric glands located in the stomach lining begin secretion of gastric juice. Gastric juice contains just the right proportions of hydrochloric acid and the enzyme pepsin to initiate the process of protein digestion—namely, conversion of the large protein molecules into smaller chains of amino acids, called peptides.

Alternate contraction and relaxation of the stomach wall soon converts the semisolid bolus to a semiliquid material called chyme; over the period of an hour or so chyme is gradually propelled by rhythmic muscle contractions—called peristalsis—through the lower-most portion of the stomach into the small intestine.

As far as digestion is concerned, the small intestine is pretty much where the action is. In fact, the small intestine is the one part of the digestive tract that you just can't live without.

Anatomically, it looks somewhat like a long garden hose (20 to 25 feet long and 1/2 inch in diameter) and is divided into three parts: first, the duodenum—about 12 finger breaths in length (in Latin, duodeni means 12 each) which is wrapped around the pancreas and receives both the pancreatic and bile secretions; next, the jejunum—which extends from the duodenum into the third segment, the ileum. The latter two comprise all but about one foot of the small intestine.

In the duodenum the pancreatic digestive enzymes begin to break proteins and peptides into simple amino acids...complex carbohydrates into simple sugar...and fats into glycerol and fatty acids. These are moved into the jejunum and ileum by intestinal peristalsis where together with minerals, water and vitamins they pass through the delicate mucous membrane lining cells into tiny digestive tract blood capillaries that carry the basic nutritional substances to every cell and organ in the body.

Soon the small intestinal contents pass from the ileum into the colon, or large bowel, in the lower right portion of the abdomen. Again, peristalsis moves the liquid material gradually on its way-up the ascending colon, across the transverse colon in the upper portion of the abdomen, then down the descending colon on the left side, and on into the rectum. During this transit, increasing amounts of water are absorbed back into the bloodstream—which accounts for how the liquid material of the small intestine eventually becomes transformed into the solid, formed stool.

Very few important digestive processes occur in the colon and rectum. They function mainly to store the bowel contents and to permit conservation of water from the liquid material.

Summed up it comes to this. The smooth interaction of digestive enzymes...intestinal bacteria...peristalsis...and complex intestinal wall absorptive mechanisms permit food to be broken down or degraded into the basic foodstuffs of water, minerals, vitamins, fatty acids, sugar, and amino acids. After that, it's up to another aspect of metabolism—namely, synthesis—to rebuild these basic blocks into tissue.

Ann Landers Avoids Mother

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My husband's mother lives a considerable distance from us. She comes to visit once a year and never stays more than a week. I enjoy her company. We get along just fine.

It's my husband I'm writing about. When his mother arrives he becomes a totally different person. This year it was worse than usual. He came home late every night—falling down drunk, picked fights with me, his son, or his mother. In plain language, he behaved just rotten.

His mother asked me how I stand it. I hated to tell her he only behaves that way when she's around. I'd rather die than hurt her feelings.

I've begged and pleaded with my husband not to drink like a fish when his mother visits. He always promises to stay sober "next time" but for some mysterious reason he has to get liquored up when she's around. What's the matter with him anyway? What can I do to help—Diane

DEAR D. You don't have to be a psychiatrist to figure this one out. Your husband is suffering from unresolved conflicts involving his mother. When she appears on the scene he just can't handle it. So he turns to booze to anesthetize himself and in this way he avoids a head-on collision.

If your husband wants to find out what's bugging him, he'll go for some counseling. Once the problem is identified he can work on resolving it. I hope he does because "mother problems" manifest themselves in many areas of a male's life.

DEAR ANN: May I add a few pointers for those who want to help the handicapped?

I have observed several kind folks attempting to help a blind person across the street. Invariably, they grab an arm or an elbow. This throws the unsighted individual off balance. The best approach is to let him take YOUR arm. Second suggestions: When a handicapped person who is accompanied by an attendant or friend asks for information, do not address your reply to the other person. This is galling to the handicapped individual who may be as alert or intelligent as you or I. He is made to feel stupid, unable to speak for himself or simply not there.

There are psychological points, but to the handicapped they are as vital as ramps or elevators. Please get the message across, Ann.—Illinois

DEAR ILLINOIS: Your letter has helped, educate millions today. As one who is vitally interested in the handicapped, I thank you.

DEAR ANN: I'm 42, depressed, menopausal and seeing a shrink.

I married my present husband in 1968 and have cheated on him several times. Suddenly I have come to my senses. I realize how lucky I am to have him and have decided never to cheat on him again. The guilt is getting to me. Should I confess? He's a good person and loves me a lot. I'm sure he'd be very upset if he knew. In fact, he's probably kick me out.

My shrink can't help me so I'm turning to you—Seattleite.

DEAR S: My advice is to keep your mouth shut unless you want to get kicked out. More advice. Get another shrink. If your present one was any good you wouldn't be writing to me.

Corn Causes X-Ray Problem

WASHINGTON (AP) — If you love corn — on the cob or off — and have no teeth, don't eat it before an X-ray examination of the colon, radiologists advise.

Why? Because undigested corn kernels pass into the colon and look like polyps on the X-ray study, say Drs. Harry C. Press and T. Wilkins Davis, radiologists at Howard University here.

In recent years they came across six patients in whom undigested corn kernels could be seen on the X-ray studies and confused with polyps. All had been referred because of rectal bleeding, all were at least 50 years-old, had no teeth and all had eaten corn five to seven days before.

The radiologists point out that intact corn kernels have a thin outer coat of cellulose that cannot be digested in the human gastrointestinal tract. Normally, these coverings are broken up sufficiently during chewing to allow mixture with a chemical in the saliva (ptyalin), which breaks down the kernel and starts digestion. Toothless patients can't masticate the kernels, which are swallowed whole.

"The body was unable to break down the outer covering

(in our patients), and the kernels appeared intact in the colon, simulating polyps," the radiologists say.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

There are three four-word expressions that give me stomach cramps.

One is, "One Size Fits All," one is "Have a good day," and the other is, "You can't miss it."

The latter usually accompanies a 15-minute set of directions, a fold-out map, and a series of a list of emergency numbers on how to get to someone's house.

It has been my experience that most people know exactly where they live. They just don't know how to get there. Most of them overtrain you for the trip.

Who among you has not received directions from Mister Rogers, who talks to you like you are the post child for Mental Health Week.

He begins by asking, "Do you know where you are now?"

When assured you are at home he says, "Fine, go to the end of your driveway and turn right. That is the hand you write with and then go to the traffic light at the end of your street. When it turns green, signal for a left turn. That is the hand nearest the window and get into the middle lane so other cars can pass you as you will be going slow," etc.

There's a Charles Kuralt breed who not only give you directions on how to get to their house but throw in just enough history to confuse you.

"You'll be turning left at the little church on the corner, which incidentally had half of its structure burnt to the ground in 1936. Don't confuse this with the structure on the previous corner that also burnt. That was rebuilt in '43, but the architecture on that one is strictly Doric, so watch it!"

The directions I love are the ones given by a Rowan and Martin team where a man is on one phone and his wife is on the extension and together they tell you how to get there.

"I'd take the freeway and exit at ramp 34," says the husband.

"Are you crazy? They'll be driving half the night," his wife interrupts. "Take Northern all the way to the Gooney Golf Course, then make a right."

"That road is torn up," says the husband, "and they'll have to backtrack. Come to think of it, they could use Miller Road and that way when they miss the turn-off, there's an all-night station open with a phone to call us for directions."

Our house is a doozie to find. The street changes names three times on you, comes to three forks and doesn't go all the way through, but if you turn where the road narrows, bear right, and go two doors past the barking dog, you can't miss it.

Haley, Mears Named As Pulitzer Prize Winners

NEW YORK (AP)—Walter Mears of The Associated Press, one of "the boys on the bus" in every presidential campaign since 1960, has won the 1977 Pulitzer Prize for national reporting.

Mears' rapid-fire writing under pressure of newspaper deadlines through 32 presidential primaries and the national campaign was praised by the Pulitzer jury, which said more people throughout the world probably read his words than those of any other political reporter.

"In the Associated Press, nobody works solo," said the 42-year-old AP Special Correspondent after he learned of the honor. "Our coverage of the 1976 presidential campaign was the work of many people, all of whom own a share of this award."

Mears was one of several political reporters highlighted in Timothy Crouse's book, "The Boys On The Bus." The book chronicled the press coverage of the 1972 presidential campaign between President Richard M. Nixon and Sen. George McGovern, D-S.D.

Alex Haley was in Gambia and Michael Cristofer was sitting under a tree in Ohio when they were named Pulitzer winners Monday. Haley, in a special category for his bestseller "Roots," and Cristofer in drama for his play, "Shadow Box," which just opened on Broadway.

Haley was visiting his ancestral home of Juffure this week, a village that has become a mecca for black Americans since publication of his partly fictionalized account of the descendants of the slave Kunte Kinte. A television movie of his book was rated the most watched show in history.

Cristofer's play, which scans the lives of eight persons who deal with the impending death of three of them, opened here March 31, the last day to qualify for this year's Pulitzers.

The Lufkin, Tex., News-won the Public Service Award for its series on the death of a recruit at a Marine Corps training camp. The series triggered a congressional probe and reform in training practices.

The annual Pulitzer Prizes in the Arts and Journalism are awarded by Columbia University from an endowment of the late Joseph Pulitzer, publisher of the defunct New York World.

A $1,000 cash prize accompanies each award except the Public Service Award, which is a gold medal.

For the first time in the 61-year history of the awards, no prize was given for international reporting, and no award was given for fiction for the 10th time.

A Pulitzer official said it was "a thin year, not a banner year" for fiction and international reporting.

Sources told the AP that the jury for international reporting had recommended three candidates to the advisory board but the board decided to give no award.

The candidates were James Markham and Henry Tanner of the New York Times for their reports on the Lebanese civil war; William Woo, editorial page editor of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch, for a series of articles after a trip to China, and Larry Heinzerling, Associated Press bureau chief of the Soweto rioting in South Africa.

The New York Times reported Tuesday that the jury had unanimously recommended Markham and Tanner for the prize.

Neal Ulevich of the Associated Press shared the prize for spot news photography with Stanley Forman of the Boston Herald-American.

Ulevich won for his photos of a student uprising in Bangkok, including one showing a rightist about to slam a chair into the lifeless body of a hanged student following demonstrations. Forman's prize-winner, taken during the antibusing furor in Boston, showed a white man attacking a black lawyer with an flagstaff bearing the American flag.

Other prizewinners in journalism included:

-Margo Huston of the Milwaukee Journal, general local reporting, for investigation of local nursing home conditions.

-Acel Moore and Wendell Rawls Jr. of the Philadelphia Inquirer, special local reporting, for exposing conditions at Pennsylvania's Farview State Hospital for the Criminally Insane.

-Warren Lerude, Foster Church and Norman Cardozo of the Reno, Nev., Evening Gazette and Nevada State Journal, editorial writing, in a campaign against a local brothel keeper.

-Paul Szep of the Boston Globe, editorial cartooning.

-Robin Hood of the Chattanooga News-Free Press, feature photography, for a photo of a legless Vietnam veteran in a wheelchair holding a child in his lap at a parade.

-George F. Will of the Washington Post Writers Group, commentary, for his nationally syndicated column.

-William McPherson of the Washington Post, criticism, for his book reviews.

Other winners in the arts categories:

-David M. Potter, a professor of American history at Stanford who died in 1971, won the history award for "Impending Years," which deals with events from 1848 to 1861 leading to the Civil War.

-William Warner, chief fundraiser for the Smithsonian Institution, won the general nonfiction award for "Beautiful Swimmers: Watermen, Crabs and Chesapeake Bay." The book depicts the bay as an irreplaceable natural resource, the life cycles and seasonal rhythms of its blue crabs and the men and women who harvest them.

-The poetry prize went to James Merrill for his book, "Divine Comedies."

"Visions of Terror and Wonder," a work for mezzo soprano and orchestra, won the music prize for Richard Wernick of the University of Pennsylvania.

-John E. Mack, Harvard professor of the psychiatry, won the biography prize for "A Price for Our Disorder: The Life of T.E. Lawrence," a historical biography, with psychological insights, on the Englishman known as Lawrence of Arabia.

HIS AND HERS memoirs will net former President and Mrs. Ford an estimated $1 million in the first such two-book publishing deal. Mrs. Ford's book, a general autobiography, is scheduled for 1978 publication while the former President's account of his vice-presidential and presidential experiences will come out the following year.

Possible World Record Taken

AUSTIN—They say March is the month to catch white bass, and you won't get an argument from David S. Cordill, an Austin area angler.

Cordill, of Spicewood, Tex., caught what will probably be certified as a new world record white bass on the Colorado River below Longhorn Dam, a five-pound, nine-ounce fish that was 20 1/4 inches long and a 17-inch girth.

If the catch is certified by the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department, it will surpass the current world white bass, a five-pound, five-ounce landed in Fergusson Lake, Calif. in March 1972.

Curiously, the state record was also caught in March, in the vicinity of Cordill's catch. Current state record of five pounds, four and one-fourth ounces was landed below Longhorn Dam in March 1968. Cordill caught his white with a white jig on a spin cast reel and fished using 12-pound test line.

That area of the Colorado River, the stilling basin, has produced some excellent sized fish, according to David Pritchard, P&WD inland fisheries chief.

Beef Prices Stable At Groceries Now

COLLEGE STATION—Many Texas grocery markets are offering specials on beef—as prices remain stable-to-slightly higher in general, Gwendolyn Clyatt, consumer marketing information specialist, reports.

Most often featured cuts— which offer a savings— are chuck roasts and steaks, round, sirloin, rib and T-bone steaks, boneless roast and ground beef, she said.

Mrs. Clyatt is with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System.

Pork specials also are available— with emphasis on loin roasts, quarter-loins cut into chops, Boston butt roasts, smoked picnics, bacon, sausage and liver.

At poultry counters, turkey prices are stable and fryer chickens are in good supply— offering one of the best protein choices, pricewise, Mrs. Clyatt said.

She advised consumers to buy fryers now— if home freezer space is available— for the cookout season later.

At fresh vegetable counters, potato prices are relatively low— while carrots, broccoli, mustard, collards, head lettuce and turnips and greens have economical prices. Onions, however, show a price increase due to a reduced supply.

At fruit counters, grapefruit and oranges are the highlight— with medium- to small sizes the lower priced. Also, pineapples are "specialized" at some markets.

Along grocery market aisles, features are scattered, but they generally include budget buys on canned green beans, sauerkraut, corn and tomato products. Most commonly repeated items in advertisements are tuna fish, saltine crackers, pasta products, fruit cocktail and pears.

Frozen food features show pot pies in the spotlight.

CONSUMER WATCH- WORDS: In buying bacon, consumers may find a new "back window" on packages— or a full slice of bacon in a "front window"—to meet required packaging standards, which demand all bacon packages have a transparent area at least one and a half inches wide revealing at least 70 per cent of the length of a representative slice.

Employed Women Increase Ranks

COLLEGE STATION—Ranks of women employed outside the home have almost doubled in the past 25 years— and that trend is becoming an important and continuing part of women's lives, Ilene Miller, a family life education specialist, reports.

Today women compose about 40 per cent of the total labor force— whereas in the early 1900's, if the average woman worked at all, she was likely to work only a brief time before she married and started a family. During the last three decades, census figures show a sharp increase in the number of young mothers entering the labor force.

Several factors influence the decision of a wife and mother to enter the labor force, according to Mrs. Miller, with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System.

Family economic pressure and a woman's level of employability are two factors that most women consider in their decision. Level of employability depends on a woman's prior work experience and education level— and this affects prospects for a job and the type of job she gets.

Most women seek employment because they have to work. Their income is needed to supplement their husbands' earnings—to maintain or raise their families' standard of living. Other woman work because they are the sole support of their family, the specialist said.

A third factor that affects— and complicates— a mother's decision to work outside her home is the number and ages of her children. Securing adequate quality child care for the children is a major concern and a problem in many communities.

Some women solve this dilemma by leaving children with relatives while they work away from home—or they arrange their schedules around available child care. Others must postpone outside employment until their children are older, Mrs. Miller added.

Wilson Gives Testimony

LUFKIN, Tex. (AP)—U.S. Rep. Charles Wilson of Lufkin has said that some additional areas of the national forests in East Texas should be preserved, but not the 75,000 acres environmentalists have proposed.

Wilson's comment came after hearing three hours of testimony Thursday on a proposal to create a primitive wilderness area.

Texas Forestry Association President Kenneth Nelson said that wilderness areas would have a detrimental effect on the East Texas economy and would fail to provide recreational opportunities that do not already exist.

Dallas Attorney Ned Fritz, Chairman of the Texas Committee on Natural Resources, told the group that the proposed wilderness area would provide added tourist revenue for the region.

"We need enough acreage for the crowds that will come," he said. The comment was greeted with laughter from the audience.

About 250 persons attended the hearing, many of them local residents employed by the timber industry.

Referring to the environmentalists, Wilson said, "Personally, I'd like to see them pick on something else for awhile. We gave them 75,000 acres the Big Thicket Preserve recently, and it was at great political expense to me. There is such a thing as evolution."

CONTROLLING HIGH BLOOD PRESSURE

WASHINGTON (AP)—Most people who know they have high blood pressure fail to control it, according to the National High Blood Pressure Education Program.

One of the reasons, says program director Graham Ward, is that people confuse high blood pressure, also known as hypertension, with nervous tension and think a tranquilizer or vacation will cure it.

"They're wrong," says Ward. "High blood pressure usually requires daily medication to bring it down and keep it down."

Bob Nigh Girls Track, Banquet

Coach Roy Shipp's fem thincads at HHS really put forth a stalwart performance at the District 4-4A Girl's Track Meet in Plainview last Friday.

The girls broke no less than six HHS records enroute to a second-place finish behind a strong Monterey squad, giving this year's team a total of eight new records on the books.

Previous bests by Velma Arroyos in the 880 (2:28.0) and Lori Taylor in the high jump (4-10) were joined by new marks by Judy Birdwell in the 440 (62.3), Taylor in the hurdles (11.4), Tawana Moton in the long jump (16-6), Suzanne Duvall in the shot (39-4), Teresa Lambert in the discus (101-6), and Micki Merritt in the mile (6:28.0).

While winning the 880 in the district meet, Arroyos was just a bit off the school mark with a 2:28.8, but still established a district record in the event.

In addition to Arroyos in the 880 other Hereford qualifiers for the regional meet in Lubbock this weekend include Taylor in the high jump, Moton in the long jump, 100, and triple jump, Duvall in the shot, and Lambert in the discus, as well as the 880 Relay team of Birdwell, Lu Anna Berryman, Joyce Betzen, and Arroyos, and the mile relay team of Betzen, Arroyos, Kelly McClarty, and Birdwell.

Speaking of the girl's district track meet last week we inadvertently left out some of the results posted by Hereford girls and would like to remedy that situation by mentioning them now.

On top of those already listed,

Hereford got fourth place finishes by Lori Taylor in the hurdles and Micki Merritt in the mile. Sixth-place finishers included Moton in the hurdles, Rita Soliz in the mile, Martha Stotts in the shot, Cindy Acton in the discus, and Lu Anna Berryman in both the 220 and triple jump.

Those finishing in seventh place were Stotts in the discus and Olivia Gonzales in the mile. Congratulations girls!

The Hereford High School All Sports award banquet is coming up next week on Tuesday, April 26 at the Bull Barn. All athletes at HHS, from sophomores through the varsities in each sport, will be recognized.

Local broadcaster Tom Simons will act as emcee for the affair, which will begin at 7:30. The program will be curtailed somewhat this year with no schedule speaker, but it will still take some TIME to recognize over 200 Whiteface athletes.

Tickets for the banquet are now on sale at several locations around town, and Booster Club prexy Dick Montgomery hopes everyone will but their ducat early. A FEW will be available at the door.

-RAN-

The girls are getting their licks in it seems. Hereford's Barbara Scott gave HHS another top individual when she swept to the District 4-4A medaist title at the league's final round-last Friday in Plainview. Barbara topped the loop by 30 shots in taking the crown, and will be aiming at a state meet berth when she plays in the Region I Tournament this Friday and Saturday in Lubbock.

-RAN-

But, the boys get a chance to get some ink this weekend, at least as far as track is concerned. The Whitefaces should be a top challenger for the District 4-4A track title when the five teams meet in Lubbock this weekend.

Coach Robert Priest's thincads are reaching a peak just as the district meet arrives, and hopes are high in the Herd camp this week. Priest wouldn't go as far to pick a favorite at the meet, but there's a certain gleam in his eye. More on that later this week.

TWIN FALLS, Idaho (AP)—Mike Mitchell, head coach at Western Texas College in Synder, Tex., for the past four years, has been named basketball coach and athletic director at College of Southern Idaho, it was announced Monday.

He succeeds Boyd Grant, who quit to become head coach at Fresno State.

Mitchell, 29, directed his team to sixth place in the NJCAA tournament this year and had a season record of 34-4.

Boxing Championships Under Investigation

BY ED SCHUYLER JR.
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP)—The United States Boxing Championships are staggering under a variety of charges, with Don King fighting not only to save the tournament but his reputation as a top-flight promoter. With the nationally televised tournament under investigation by a federal grand jury and under suspension by ABC-TV, its bankroller, King, on Monday suspended his boxing consultants Paddy Flood, Al Braverman and Gordon Peterson.

Flood and Braverman, fight managers who are connected with several fighters in the tournament, have been charged with favoritism and accepting kickbacks. A grand jury in Baltimore is investigating the charges.

King said he talked with Flood, Braverman and Peterson

Monday morning, and it was agreed the consultants should suspend their activities.

"There will be no attempts at any coverup," said King, adding he considers himself a good promoter but not "a supreme boxing authority."

"For input and knowledge I have been dependent on my consultants and my staff," King said. "If I and the boxing public have been victimized let the punishment be unyieldingly severe."

"Let the chips fall where they may," said King, denying any wrongdoing and adding: "The huck does indeed stop with Don King, the employer, and I am the first to urge for vigorous and truthful fact finding."

In announcing the suspension about three hours before the scheduled telecast of some tournament semifinals from Miami Beach Saturday, ABC Sports said it agreed with its attorneys that counsel should "appoint a totally independent special investigator with impeccable law enforcement credentials to head up the investigation."

There was no announcement Monday of the investigator who, King said, will replace the tournament committee, headed by James A. Farley Jr., chairman of the New York State Athletic Commission, in conducting an inquiry.

Meanwhile, in Albany, N.Y., Gov. Hugh Carey said he had launched an "in house" investigation of Farley's relationship with the venture, but stressed that his action did not mean the beginning of a "formal police investigation."

Farley, as chairman of the Athletic Commission, is responsible for regulation of all boxing matches in New York State; however, most of the tournament matches have been held outside New York.

ABC also said it felt the competition had been compromised by the fact that "records of numerous fighters in the tournament as listed in the 1977 Ring Record Book are, in fact, inaccurate and contain many fights which apparently never took place."

Nat Loubet, publisher of The Ring Magazine, whose U.S. rankings were a basis for the tournament, said there had been inaccuracies in the records of 11 tournament fighters.

Canadian Beats Record Turnout In Marathon

By DAVE O'HARA
AP Sports Writer

BOSTON (AP)—Canadian marathon ace Jerome Drayton felt he was caught in "a free-for-all" at the start of the 81st Boston Marathon. He admitted he was scared. So he did what any intelligent good runner would do. He ran away from the pack.

Drayton, run into the pavement by Bill Rodgers' record-shattering run for glory just two years ago, gained sweet revenge Monday as he buried the Boston school teacher and went on to win the 26-mile, 385-yard Patriots' Day classic in 2 hours, 14 minutes, 46 seconds.

"It was a real hassle, like free-for-all at the start," Drayton said after the race which attracted a record field of 2,933 official starters. "I got jostled, booted, kicked around. There was no notice when the gun was going off."

"It went off suddenly. One guy grabbed my shirt and nearly pulled me down. I got kicked in the ankle at the start and I thought I was a goner. However, I was able to recover and the ankle didn't bother me the rest of the way, although it's a little stiff right now."

Rodgers, whose 2:09.55 clocking was the fastest marathon run ever by an American when he was a surprise winner in 1975, and Drayton, who had to give up the fight and quit two miles from the finish in that race, hooked up in a duel as expected. However, it didn't last as long as most experts had figured.

Rodgers, who beat 1972 Olympic champion Frank Shorter in New York last fall and won the Kyoto Marathon in Japan a few weeks ago, held a stride lead over Drayton at the third checkpoint, 13.4 miles from the start.

Then Drayton, a 32-year-old German-born government employee in Toronto, began to apply the pressure. Rodgers accepted a cup of water from his wife, then appeared to stagger. By the time he reached the fourth checkpoint, 17.5 miles along the route, Drayton had nearly a one-minute lead.

The expected duel on three hills, including "Heartbreak" about six miles from the finish, never materialized. Rodgers failed to make them, finally being forced to quit the race.

As others who had to keep up with Drayton and Rodgers faded, Veli Bally, Turkey's Balkan and Pakistan champion, moved up to take second in 2:15.44. Brian Maxwell, a Canadian teaching at Berkeley, Calif., was third in 2:17.21, followed by Ron Wayne of Alameda, Calif., in 2:18.37.

"It took me five tries and I'm glad it's over," Drayton said. "I was amazed that I didn't have to fight for it. I knew I had it when I left Rodgers. He just seemed to give up and I was very surprised."

"I'm disappointed that it was not a faster time. However, I feel great. It was almost like a Sunday run back home."

Miki Gorman, a 42-year-old Japanese-American housewife from the San Fernando Valley in California, topped a field of 126 women for her second Boston Marathon championship.

Mrs. Gorman, the 1974 winner and runnerup last year, was clocked in 2:48.44, well off the record of 2:42.24 set by West Germany's Liane Winter in 1975. The 1976 champion, Kim Merritt of Racine Wis., failed to finish.

No Advantage On Home Ice

The first four games of the Philadelphia Flyers-Toronto Maple Leafs National Hockey League series have set a predictably unpredictable tone in a season of predictable playoffs.

Home ice has proved no advantage whatsoever in this series, since Toronto opened the set with two triumphs in Philadelphia and the Flyers replied with a pair of overtime decisions at Maple Leaf Gardens.

"At home, players try too hard and don't get loose," said Philadelphia Coach Fred Shero. "I know that one the road when someone hollers at me, 'What are you doing, you dummy?' I don't pay any attention. That's a compliment."

"If they holler at me at home—that bothers me."

They were hollering at the Leafs in Toronto Sunday night after the home team squandered a three-goal lead in the last seven minutes and ultimately lose 6-5 in overtime when Reggie Leach rifled a shot past Maple Leafs goalie Mike Palmateer.

Toronto has won just two of its last 15 games at home, losing eight and tying the other five. "With any kind of luck, the series would be over and we'd have won it four straight," said Toronto Coach Red Kelly. "We've had them beat but allowed them to get off the hook both times."

The Boston Bruins let the Los Angeles Kings off the hook a bit in the fourth game of their quarter-final series, the only other one that hasn't yet been decided.

Meanwhile, the New York Islanders completed a four-game sweep of the Buffalo Sabres and the National Canadiens dispatched the St. Louis Blues in a similar fashion. Now the winners will sit back and wait while their semifinal opponents are determined.

The Kings stayed alive with a 7-4 triumph in Game Four Sunday night, recording their first victory of the series over the Bruins. They pulled ahead just six seconds after the opening faceoff when Don Kozak set a playoff record for the fastest goal at the start of a game.

"We look to your future with interest."

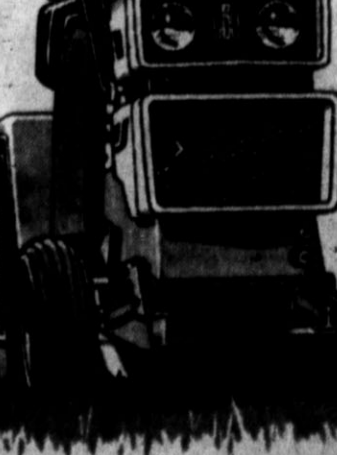

Here's why Cub Cadet is your No. 1 tractor buy quality

You can tell it by the way a Cub Cadet is built. Automotive type frame and direct drive transmission with no chains to break or belts to slip.

You can tell by the quiet. With iso-mount rubber mountings to cushion the engine. Plus extra layers of steel insulation and a super-sized muffler.

You can also tell by features like the "Maintenance Minder"...a special clock that tells you when it's time for periodic maintenance. It's one more way we help keep your Cub Cadet like new long after others quit.

And it's quality that makes Cub Cadet high in resale value. It's your no. 1 buy. And what better time than right now. Choose from five models, 10 to 16 hp., hydrostatic or gear drive.

MRS. OWEN ANDREWS

CORRESPONDENT

Frio Homemakers Club met Tuesday afternoon in Pioneer Natural Gas Flame Room, Hereford. The program was given by 4-H girls, Annette Dawson, who gave a demonstration on "Charm and Beauty", Karen Jones and Debbie Carley, whose subject was "Safety for All Seasons." All are from Merry Maidens 4-H Club. They illustrated their talks with placards, to present the important points.

Those attending the meeting included Mesdames D.F. Yandell, Frank Robbins, T.L. Sparkman, Sr., Owen Andrews, Fred Walton, Billy Warrick, Eugene Baldwin, J.E. Warrick, Annie Springer, Henry Andrews, Annie Lee Dobbins, T.L. Sparkman, Jr., and Miss Alma Andrews.

Mrs. Frank Robbins spent several days staying with her daughter and family, Mr. Allen Burkhalter, at Dalhart. The Burkhalters are parents of a daughter, born at Hi Plains hospital, Amarillo, on March 30. The baby has been named Abigail Rugenic. Mrs. Burkhalter is the former Genie Robbins.

Spending the Easter weekend with the Miles Caudle family here was the daughter, Linda, who is a freshman student in Oklahoma Baptist University at Shawnee, Okla.

Harry James Vogler and Sue Keeton of Amarillo were married on April 4 in Clovis. They are staying with his parents, the E.F. Voglers, while redecorating a house on the Vogler place, where they intend to live. Harry expects to continue farming with his father.

Guests of the E.F. Voglers Sunday were the Walter Voglers, the Miles Caudles and the Len Fishers. Also, a house guest of the Voglers for the past several days is her sister, Mrs. Earnestina Vogler of Lamesa. Arriving on Tuesday for a visit was Mrs. Harold Parish of Austin, who is the daughter of the Lamesa lady.

Mr. and Mrs. Bill Laubach of Chicago came Thursday before Easter and visited for a week with her parents, the Don Adams, brother Kenneth, and other relatives in the area. Mrs. Laubach, the former Dianne Adams, is transferring to a new job with Continental Can Co. as an accountant when they return. He is with his father's business, a Water Softening Service.

Mrs. Richard Price, daughters, Robin and Pam, and Mrs. Price's mother, Mrs. Paul Corbett, spent the Pre-Easter holidays visiting and touring the Texas "Bluebonnet Country." They also visited relatives, Mrs. Corbett's brother, Mackie Greer, Lubbock, a sister, Mrs. Hazel Clements, Littlefield, Richards relatives, the LL Kennedys at Medina and his father, O.E. Price at San Angelo. Highlights of the trip included a tour of San Antonio with Paul, Robin and Pam going up in the Hemisphere Observation tower and a visit to the L.B.J. ranch, which was abloom with bluebonnets. The flowers seemed to be more abundant than ever this year.

T.L. Sparkman, Jr. is up and recovering from hip surgery, which was done March 31 in St. Anthony's hospital, Amarillo.

The Herbert Bruns family, Corsicana, were here with her parents, the Owen Andrews, and others of the family during the Easter holidays. They also visited his relatives in Vernon enroute.

Mr. and Mrs. D.F. Yandell attended the funeral of his cousin, Catlie Green, at Llano cemetery, Amarillo, on Monday. Rev. Green was pastor of the Pentacostal Church at Kermit, and funeral services had been held there previously.

The parents of Rev. Johnny Tims of Sheffield visiting them

'Oliver's Story' Tracked for Tears

OLIVER'S STORY. By Erich Segal. Harper & Row. 284 Pages. $7.95.

The tear-jerking sentimental novel with its mawkishness of plot and characterization flourished in the 18th century, but its sway was mercifully not all that long and it soon guttered out into near obscurity. Which does not mean that the form is dead, however. It still lives on in various guises.

Jenny has been dead about two years when "Oliver's Story" opens. Oliver, still young and doing very well as an activist lawyer, has found no one to replace her and doesn't really want to, even though his hardly believable character — urge him to date, to remarry, last weekend and attended church at Frio.

Revival services are scheduled for this week April 17 to 24, with Rev. Woody Northcutt of Brooking S.D. preaching and Leon Hokett leading the song service.

to do something to get out of his rut.

Oliver, however, cannot. Until one fine morning, as he jogs broodingly through New York City's Central Park, he meets a friend as well as his dead wife's father — a likeable but fellow jogger, who just happens to be a gorgeous, highly intelligent, chic, extremely well-poised blonde named Marcie — her last name doesn't get revealed until a good bit later in order to make her into something of a mystery woman. Well, sir, not only does Oliver stop sleepwalking through life but he and Marcie get involved in a torrid love affair quicker than you can jog through Central Park.

Do Oliver and Marcie marry? Do they not? Does it matter?

Whooping Cranes Begin Migration

AUSTIN— Whooping cranes, among the rarest of North American birds, are preparing to leave their wintering grounds at Aransas National Wildlife Refuge along the Gulf Coast, on their way back to Canadian nesting grounds.

"Whooping cranes arrive in Texas in mid-October and remain in the state until mid-April. The flock is awaiting favorable wind conditions for the flight to their nesting grounds in Wood Buffalo National Park in northwestern Canada," said Dr. Hal Irby, Texas Parks and Wildlife Department migratory game program director.

The 69 birds that wintered at Aransas included 12 hatched this past summer. The endangered whoopers, known for their bugling call that can carry more than two miles, are among the tallest native birds found north of Mexico, standing almost five feet and weighing 16 pounds. Although the female is slightly smaller, both have almost identical plumage.

"We are asking birders, sportsmen and others interested in wildlife to aid us by reporting exact information on where whoopers stop to rest on their way out of state," Irby said.

Usually, birds leaving Aransas fly in a northwesterly direction through north central Texas, into the Panhandle and then out of state.

"We are not certain whoopers stop anywhere in Texas after leaving the Refuge area, but if they do, it is important that conservation agencies know about it so as to be able to protect critical migration habitat locations. Spotters in Texas as well as in midwestern states provide much information between late-March through early June, when the birds head north," said Irby.

Observers who sight cranes are asked to record exact time, date, location, what the birds were doing (feeding, resting, flying) and report it immediately to the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department's wildlife division in Austin.

"The problem remains that the birds are very wary while on the ground. They will not allow you to get close to them, so they are usually spotted from a great distance, which makes positive identification difficult," he added.

Before recovery efforts began, the whooper population reached a low of 15 birds on the Texas wintering grounds and six in Louisiana. The refuge was acquired by the federal government's Fish and Wildlife Service in 1937 in an initial effort to prevent the extinction of this stately bird.

No Banning Of Off-Road Vehicles Planned In Forrests

WASHINGTON (AP) - Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland said Thursday "there are no plans" to ban the use of off-road vehicles on national forest lands.

Bergland was in California visiting that state's agricultural areas, and his statement was issued here by the department. Bergland said he has received about 12,000 letters from people in recent weeks who are concerned about news reports that motorcycles, trail bikes, snowmobiles and other off-road recreation vehicles will no longer be allowed on national forest lands.

Bergland said such fears are unwarranted but that federal agencies must be sure that vehicles do no damage fragile environments.

"We will continue to use the professional expertise of the Department of Agriculture and information from concerned users to provide recreation opportunities with adequate safeguards for national forest lands," Bergland said.

It's Bluebonnet Season As Texas Greets Spring

AUSTIN— All five species of Texas bluebonnets now are considered to be the state flower. An article in the current issue of TEXAS PARKS & WILDLIFE magazine gives information about each of them.

Appropriately, one of the species, Lupinus havardii, is a giant. This is the Chisos bluebonnet of the Trans-Pecos and Mexico, which can grow to a height of three feet.

Lupinus subcarneus until 1971 was the only bluebonnet honored as the state flower. Less showy, it is found in loose, deep, fine and sandy loam soils from Leon County southwest to LaSalle County.

The annual lupine, Lupinus concinus, occurs above 4,500 feet in grama grasslands of the Trans-Pecos and into other southwestern states and northwestern Mexico.

Lupinus platensis, also known as the Nebraska lupine, is the only perennial. Common from the plains of Wyoming south to Oklahoma and Texas, in this state it is only seen in sand dunes in Hartley County in the Panhandle.

The one best known of all here is Lupinus texensis. Mostly indigenous to limestone soils of Central Texas, it also occurs on the granitic, sandy soils of the Central Texas Mineral Region in Llano and Burnet Counties.

As is obvious to anyone driving or walking in the country at this time of year, spring and early summer is when they burst into bloom. Mostly dark blue to rich reddish-purple, their coloring can include albino and pink-flowered forms, especially in L. texensis.

The latter species is the most cultivated bluebonnet. It has been widely planted along roadsides by the State Department of Highways and Public Transportation. Seeds of this cool-season, hardy annual germinate during late fall. Seedlings overwinter in a rosette stage, begin rapid growth in late February and flowering in March, with April the month of most prolific flowering.

Seed gathering can begin when they mature some six weeks after the last flower withers, and must be completed before the pods dry out and disperse them naturally. The seed can be stored for several years in a closed container, in a cool, dry place.

Plant them in early fall, about one-fourth inch deep, preferably in limestone soil in full sun, away from other dense ground cover. Next spring you'll have given a helping hand to another deep-blue lake of the state flower of Texas.

New York Gun Club Opens War On Crime

NEW YORK (AP) - A new York gun club has declared its own war on crime, offering $200 cash bounties to robbery victims who shoot and kill their attackers.

"The award is specifically for meritorious cases...It's just for certain instances," Gerald Preiser, head of the 5,000-member Federation of Greater New York Pistol and Rifle Clubs, said. "We call it a courageous citizen's award."

Others have suggested a more apt team would be bounty, the scourge of the Old West. Without exception, city officials denounce the idea.

"This kind of approach is why we have been pushing so diligently for strong gun control," said Mayor Abraham Beame.

But Preiser said that sort of attitude is just political talk and does not deter crime. "We're at a point where the city has gone so far downhill that there are too many illegal guns and too few legal guns. We feel people should be encouraged to defend themselves."

The gun group already has singled out three merchants for awards, all victims of recent attempted robberies. Four persons were shot and killed and another was wounded during the robberies.

Preiser, 42, said the offer is now limited to merchants, but may be expanded "if we get enough money and other avenues to meet demand."

Preiser, who is a manufacturer of children's outerwear, said it's time for the average New York City resident to think about arming and protecting himself. He said he favors a .45 caliber automatic as his side-arm.

He maintained there is no need to fear that the awards will spur an increase in gun battles in New York's concrete canyons. Preiser said he had never shot anyone. "I've assisted in several citizen's arrests, but I've never drawn my gun or shot anyone."

Bounty Program On Coyotes To Begin

LAMPASAS, Tex. (AP) - West Texas bounty hunters are getting ready to strap on their shooting irons and go after the orneriest outlaw of them all - the coyote.

The Lampasas County Chamber of Commerce has tentatively begun a bounty program, paying $100 for the scalp and ears of the wily coyotes that are depleting the area's sheep and goat herds.

"Ranching is our leading industry and we've been so badly hurt it's getting very, very difficult to keep sheep and goats here," said chamber president Harry Jamison of Lometa.

The Chamber also plans to pay $50 bounties for red foxes, $25 for bobcats and $10 for coyote and fox pups and bobcat kittens.

Jamison said he has no statistics on losses brought on by the cunning, dog-like predators, but explained that a number of ranchers have abandoned raising sheep and goats because of coyote raids.

The program will not begin until the chamber raises $100,000 to finance the bounties, Jamison said. The money would come from ranchers, who are being asked to contribute five cents per acre.

Hunters would have to have a statement signed by a landowner to prove the animal was killed on his property. "We won't pay for any animals killed outside the county, of course," Jamison stressed.

The speedy coyotes, who can run 40 m.p.h. in top form, usually feed on rodents and jackrabbits, but will eat just about any animal, carrion or plant they can find.

John Tyler, the 10th president, was the first to have been born a citizen of the United States. Born March 29, 1790, in Charles City County, Va., Tyler was successively a member of the Virginia House of Delegates (1811), Congress (1816-21), the Virginia Legislature (1823-36). In 1840 he was elected U.S. vice president and succeeded to the presidency on the death of William Henry Harrison in 1841.

Rush, Acton Panelists On Lung Disease Symposium

The American Lung Association of Texas, Top of Texas Area sponsored a lung disease symposium Tuesday night at the Hereford Community Center. Panelists were Clyde E. Rush, M.D.; Kathryn Acton, R.N., Director of Nursing Service, Deaf Smith General Hospital; and William Young, Chairman, Respiratory Therapy Department at Amarillo College.

After describing the breathing system and its normal functions, Dr. Rush spoke on lung diseases with emphasis on emphysema and its rapid rise as a cause of disability and death. He described how breathing efficiency is lost as inflammation causes tiny air sacs to collapse and the total surface for oxygen absorption and carbon dioxide elimination decreases. The patient breathes with difficulty and tires easily, which often severely impairs normal functions and prohibits a full range of activities.

Dr. Rush stated that an emphysematous condition is not reversible. Once the air sacs are damaged, they do not return to their normal state, but much can still be done to help the patient.

Mrs. Acton explained the nurse's role in caring for the patient who suffers from chronic obstructive pulmonary diseases such as emphysema, chronic bronchitis and asthma. She stressed the importance of recognizing and responding to the patient's feelings about the illness, which often include financial concerns, especially when the patient is the family's main economic support and loss of income coincides with medical expenses.

Mr. Young spoke of the relatively recent addition of the respiratory therapist (also known as the oxygen for inhalation therapist) to the patient care team.

The respiratory therapist administers oxygen and intermittent positive pressure breathing treatments and performs pulmonary function and blood gas tests as ordered by the physician. Sometimes the therapist assists the lung disease patient in postural drainage and percussion of the chest, which help to clear the lungs and upper airways. The therapist also monitors the ventilators which are used to support breathing in the critically ill patient who cannot breathe unassisted.

The panelists answered numerous questions, many of which came from emphysema patients seeking better understanding of their disease and suggestions on how to live with it more comfortably. The panelists all emphasized how hazardous it is for anyone to smoke, how careful those with chronic obstructive pulmonary disease must be to avoid even being with others who smoke. Members of the Hereford

V.F.W. Auxiliary who were hostesses, served refreshments at the close of the symposium. Active in planning and conducting the program were Hereford members of the Top of Texas Area Advisory Council of the American Lung Association of Texas: Jewel Smith, June Rudd, R.N., and Nolan Grady.

Panhandle Press Honors Gillentine

Jimmy Gillentine, former editor and publisher of The Hereford Brand, was awarded a honorary life membership by the Panhandle Press Association during the organization's annual meeting Saturday in Amarillo.

The veteran newspaper man, who now operates Southwest Offset Printing Co. plants in Amarillo and Dallas, was unable to be present for the ceremony. Also honored with the life memberships were J.C. Phillips, veteran editor of The Borger News-Herald, and Mary Kate Tripp of The Amarillo Globe News.

Although much of his time is spent in Dallas, Gillentine and his wife, Clara, still make their home in Hereford. Their son, Buzz, is manager of the Dallas printing plant, but "Mr. G." is currently active in the company production of a fashion magazine in Dallas.

Gillentine came to Hereford as editor of The Brand in February 1937. He purchased a half-interest in the paper the next year, and in 1949 purchased the other half from Mrs. Seth Holman. Gillentine carried the paper to a semi-weekly in July, 1949, adding a Sunday issue.

Gillentine and several other area publishers established Southwest Offset Printing Co. here in 1961. The new plant served as a central printing plant for a number of weekly and semi-weekly papers. The venture was a success and Gillentine had a decision to make—whether to stay with The Brand or devote his time to the new offset printing field. He chose the latter and installed Melvin Young as general manager of The Brand.

The business continued to grow and Gillentine installed another Southwest Offset plant in Amarillo in 1965, and later put in a plant in Dallas. Gillentine announced the sale of The Brand, as well as the Southwest Offset plant in Hereford, in December, 1971.

JIMMY GILLENTE

Gillentine is a past president of the Panhandle Press Association and also served as president of the Texas Press Association. The Brand was recognized as one of the top semi-weekly papers in the country during Gillentine's tenure, winning many top press awards for outstanding publications and community service.

FAA Says Airlines Can't Deny Handicapped Seats

WASHINGTON (AP)—Airlines no longer will be allowed to deny seats to handicapped persons by arguing they might get in the way during an evacuation, the Federal Aviation Administration says.

The agency also says all crew members must be trained in the evacuation of handicapped persons and must instruct the handicapped on emergency procedures before each flight.

The FAA ruling, which goes into effect May 16, is based on an extensive study that showed "the potential for handicapped passengers delaying evacuation would appear minimal."

The FAA decided not to require the disabled to have their canes or crutches nearby. It said tests showed that these devices got in the way and

"handicapped persons reached the exit with remarkable speed using only seatbacks for support."

The FAA is instructing each airline to establish its own procedures for carrying handicapped passengers. But it issued a lengthy set of its own suggestions and said it would review each airline's procedures.

The new regulations are more flexible than a tentative 1974 proposal that would have regulated all transportation of handicapped persons by air.

There are no such regulations now, but the Federal Aviation Act of 1958 permits airlines to deny passage to anyone whose presence might be considered "inimical" to flight safety.

Airlines have used this provision rarely in recent years but have occasionally refused to sell tickets to people who can't walk.

The new rules, issued last week, prohibit a carrier from denying a seat to any handicapped person who meets reasonable requirements.

Here is a sampling of the guidelines FAA sent to the airlines:

—When a passenger is pushed in a wheelchair to the ticket counter, the agent should address the passenger, not the person pushing the chair.

—Airlines should print copies of the menu and flight briefing cards in Braille for the blind.

—For the deaf, it may be advisable for airlines at major airports to have persons trained to sign language.

—A blind person with a guide dog should be seated in the first row window seat of a section next to the bulkhead where there is more room.

—Handicapped persons who cannot walk should be seated in aisle seats where they would be near the end of lines of passengers being evacuated through floor-level, non-over-wing exits.

Black home ownership in the United States is at an all-time high. Latest available figures show that 41.5 per cent of black families occupied their own homes, while 58.5 per cent rented.

Board

the respective committees.

The rest of the meeting covered routine business with hospital Administrator Ron Welty giving the operating report for the month of March, hospital Chief of Staff Dr. A.T. Mims reporting from the medical staff, and Welty tending miscellaneous reports.

"We had a very busy month of March in the hospital," Welty told the board. "I expect we've seen a turnaround in our utilization."

The hospital did experience an excess over the forecast payroll for the month in the amount of $14,517, but Welty explained that the increase was due to an addition of seven new LVNs out of the hospital's February class.

Dr. Mims reported that the medical staff held a "lengthy meeting" on April 11 which was "well attended". In his report Dr. Mims told the board that the staff reviewed cancer cases for the month, were well-pleased with the hospital utilization for the month of March, and completed two medical audits.

The medical audits, of which four to six are required by each hospital by the Joint Commission on Accreditation each year, are lists of criteria established for the diagnosis and treatment of certain illnesses.

"We set down certain criteria for establishing the diagnosis of certain illnesses," Dr. Mims said. He added that the state medical association has available guidelines for establishing the criteria, but that each hospital is free to include their own ideas.

In other reports the board was informed that the hospital has begun the job of converting over to the new computer system recently purchased, and that Kathryn Acton, Director of Nursing Services, had resigned and that several prospective replacements had been interviewed.

Recruitment of new physicians for the hospital and area is still underway Welty indicated. "I am very hopeful that we'll have one or two new doctors here this summer," he said.

Fire Destroys Hotel Building, 12 Feared Dead In Holocaust

By ROB WOOD
Associated Press Writer

GALVESTON, Tex. (AP) — Fire destroyed an old five-story brick hotel in the downtown section of this Gulf of Mexico island city today. Police said 28 persons were unaccounted for and feared 10 to 12 people died.

At least 14 other persons were taken to John Sealy Hospital.

The fire started shortly after 1:30 a.m. near a narrow entrance of the Central Hotel located about two blocks from the docks in a rundown section of downtown. Police said the flames blocked the only exit to the building.

Lt. John Jennings of the Galveston Police Department said one person was being held for questioning.

Jennings one of the first men on the scene, said the fire in the area was so intense that it melted and warped parking meters across the street.

He said when he arrived at the scene, "Men were hanging by their fingertips from the windows and many attempted to escape by leaping to the pavement below. Some made it, some didn't."

"It was a terrible damn thing to see, those men hanging from the windows. One man hung there for at least three hours. He is dead now."

Jennings said there was only one escape route for the persons inside and it was ablaze shortly after the fire started.

"There was no way they could escape," he said.

The first two bodies brought out of the fire were those of a 13-year-old boy and of a 40-year-old man, firemen said. The bodies were pulled out in sacks.

Three of those taken to the hospital were reported in critical condition.

Firemen brought the fire under control just before dawn. Only the front wall remained standing. The rest of the building was a pile of bricks and burning timber.

A heavy pall of smoke hung over a four-block area. The fire also damaged a drugstore and furniture store.

Jennings said the man held for questioning "once threatened to burn down the place."

A spokesman for the Sheriff's Office said, "the whole place went up."

DO YOU KNOW why doughnuts have holes in the middle? We ran across a story that reports it all came about because of a boy.

His name was Hanson Gregory, and he lived in New England in the early days. His mother made cookies for him and fried them in grease. He loved to eat them, but his hands got very greasy when he handled them, and he noticed that the center of the cookie was not cooked like the other part. The center was soft and doughy and uncooked.

He suggested to his mother that she just cut a hole in the center of the cookies before cooking them, and then all of the cookies would be nicely cooked. She did so, and soon the neighbors all cooked their cookies with a hole in the center.

And this is how the hole came to be in the doughnut.

Firemen received the first alarm at 1:57 a.m. All Galveston fire units battled the blaze and reinforcements came from six other cities across the bay on the Texas mainland.

Jerry Glover, 17, of Garland, who was staying in the second floor room of the hotel, said he "smelled this funny, reeking odor. Something I never smelled before. I was watching a late show on television and thought I better see what that smell was."

Glover, who works in Beaumont as a sandblaster, added:

"I opened the door and saw all of the smoke. I went down the hall the tried to get out the front door, but it was all in flames."

"I went back down the hall and I knocked on another door where I knew a man and his wife and two children were staying. I told them we better get out of here. I took one of the children and he took the other. We went down a backway and there was a window that was nailed up. We kicked that window out and managed to get out of the place."

Educators Considering 'Back To Basics' Plea

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

"Back to the basics." The phrase has become the rallying cry for a growing number of educators, but there is disagreement as to what the words really mean and how children should be taught.

The cries for a return to traditional subjects and teaching methods started in the late 1960s, partly as a reaction to the open-classrooms and freestyle learning patterns in many areas of the country.

Lower test scores, declining enrollments and rising costs led Americans to look at the quality of education and ask whether they were getting their money's worth.

A sea otter's fur grows so fine and thick that the animal can swim for days without getting its skin wet.

According to the council, strengthening the basics means making sure that all students receive adequate instruction in English including reading and writing, math, science, history, foreign languages and the arts; that clear standards of achievement are used for promotion; and that "school administrators are encouraged and supported in resisting pressures to make the school assume miscellaneous responsibilities for the social and 'life-adjustment' functions or their students."

Other educators are less certain about defining the basics. "I'd like to think that the purpose of school is substantially broader than teaching reading," said Arthur Wise of the Educational Policy Research Group in Washington.

"In elementary school you should teach reading and arithmetic, of course, but you also should stimulate children to think about the world around them, stimulate their interest in a wide variety of things, provide moral training," Wise added.

He said the schools already do a good job for the vast majority of students, but more research is needed to determine how to reach those who are not now able to learn.

The National Assessment of Education Progress, which surveys students' achievements, asked experts to review the finds of reading, writing and arithmetic tests and determine what was needed for improvement. W. Ross Winterrowd, a professor of English at the University of Southern California, said he agreed that there was a need "to get back to the basics, but it is absolutely essential that we first identify the basics we want to get back to."

He added: "We don't need to get back to the 'basics' of spelling, punctuation and verb agreement as such. What worries me...is the strong evidence that coherence and the ability to develop ideas is perhaps evaporating..."

A panel from the National Council of Teachers of Mathematics agreed. They warned against trying to build up students' abilities to deal with numbers by simply putting more stress on simple computations. Instead, they urged a sharper focus on practical items such as consumer problems.

Dr. Curtis Phipps, associate director of the department of research and information of the Education Commission of the States in Denver noted that a growing number of school systems are requiring students to pass basic tests before graduating from high school. "What we're really calling for," said Phipps, "is complete revisions...of the teaching programs themselves."

Larry Frase of the National Institute of Education, the research arm of the U.S. Office of Education, said that there are fundamental changes taking place in many schools, but he said there was no long-term evaluation available to determine which programs have been successful.

In general, he said, there has been "a reorientation of the academic community toward comprehension."

Richard Anderson of the Center for Studies in Reading at the University of Illinois noted that there has been some improvement in the reading abilities of young children and attributed to better materials and teaching methods.

"We've learned that programs that give the child more productive exposure to reading activities pay off," he said. The more time a child spends on reading, the better he is able to read, providing that the material can attract and maintain his attention, said Anderson.

"Most kids come to school wanting to learn to read," he added. The problem is to encourage and continue that desire. In the past, he noted, children had to read if they wanted to learn about new worlds, adventures and entertainments. "No you can get that...from television. One of the motivating forces is gone," Anderson said.

There are two basic methods of teaching reading: phonics and look-say. Phonics involved sounding out words, letter by letter. The look-say method relies on teaching a child to recognize the whole word.

Supporters of the phonics method say that once the youngsters learn the basic sounds, he-or she can read almost any word; supporter of the look-say method claim that children understand more if they learn the word as a whole unit.

The look-say method gained popularity prior to World War II. It came under attack in 1955, with the publication of "Why Johnny Can't Read," by Rudolf Flesch. Now, says Anderson, "The wars of look-say versus phonics have moderated...Virtually every reading program gives a considerable emphasis to phonics."

Despite the general agreement on the need of at least some phonics training, Weber, of the Council for Basic Education, said that only 20 or 25 per cent of the students now learn by the phonics approach.

One problem, he said, is the lack of teaching materials. It takes time to produce new textbooks and guidelines. "It will take 10 to 30 years to switch to the new system completely," he said.

The same problem is true with mathematics, he said. Schools recognized some time ago that there had been a decline in computational skills, but the first new textbook on basic math was not available until 1975.

There is growing pressure for improved education. In 1972, the parents of a San Francisco high school graduate sued the school district, contending that their son could not read and therefore could not get a job. The parents claimed the school district was negligent.

The plaintiffs ultimately lost their case, but a similar suit has now been filed in New York State. An 18-year-old Long Island youth and his family are suing a local school board for $5 million, contending that the school system from which he has graduated in 1976 failed to educate him properly and left him "unable to cope...with the affairs of the world."

The youth, Edward Donahue, said his attitude toward learning changed when he started working with a private tutor at the end of his senior year in high school. "I always thought that it was my fault. I just figured I couldn't learn. Then I realized that the real reason I can't read is not because of me, but because I was taught wrong..."
