Avery facing Fraser for state seat

By SARAH LUMAN
Staff Writer

KERMIT — A council of the Democratic county chairmen of the 69th District of Texas Saturday named Johnnie Lou Avery to replace the ineligible Larry Don Shaw on the ballot in November's election.

A Big Spring businesswoman, Avery, 50, was one of four persons given consideration, district party chairman John R. Lee said. She has never run for political office before.

The executive committee met in Lee's law offices here; 10 of the 13 convened, Howard County's M.H. Boatler said.

Lee did not identify the other possible candidates, but did say Cecil Gilstrap, whom Shaw defeated in the primary, was not among them.

"All he had to do was contact any member of the executive committee and say he was interested, that he wanted to be considered. He did not do that."

Lee said Gilstrap, a defeated primary candidate, had no legal standing in choosing a replacement for Shaw.

Crane County chairman Ronald Phinney said he had spoken in behalf of his father, Clovis Phinney Jr. of Coahoma. Avery said the other names mentioned were Jeff Davis County Judge Mrs. Ann Scudday, and Reagan County Attorney-elect Mark Edwards.

If Secretary of State Jack Rains rules against the party replacing Shaw on the ballot, Lee said today, the party will take the case to court.

"That would certainly be subject to a judicial review, and I would think the Democratic Party would appeal to the district courts," Lee said. He said he did not expect the secretary of state to rule against the move.

"I'm pleased with the confidence the party chairmen have shown in me today," Avery said. "I'm excited about bringing home a Democratic district in November."

She said she and Republican candidate Troy Fraser are "friends. We have worked together too long, on too many projects, to take this thing personally. We're just on opposite sides of the political fence this time."

On Thursday Fraser said he would have no problem running against Avery.

"I have no doubt that Johnnie Lou Avery is a capable lady, and I consider her a good friend. She has been one of my strongest supporters in everything I have done."

Avery said she expects the Republicans to attack the handling of Shaw's resignation and

Council Public is no-show; budget vote awaits

By MICHAEL DUFFY
Staff Writer

It was a public hearing that wasn't.

A scheduled Friday night discussion on the proposed tax increase was already a mere formality after a consensus of Big Spring council members decided earlier in the week to reject it, along with a $1 per month jump in sanitation rates.

Only Maxwell Green attended the 90-second public hearing. He and Jack Watkins have raised objections to a tax hike at numerous budget work sessions throughout the summer.

When Mayor A.C. "Cotton" Mize asked if anyone present wanted to address the issue of a tax increase, only Green responded, saying that he has previously expressed his views on the subject.

A decision to pay off approximately $670,000 in bond indebtedness that will result in access to about $201,000 was made as an alternative to the tax increase at Tuesday's final budget work session.

Gail Earls is the only member of the council who stated publicly she favors a tax increase, although Big Spring Mayor A.C. "Cotton" Mize said he has serious concerns about the city's financial situation if a monetary crisis should develop during the next year.

The council will now focus its attention on approving the first reading of the 1988-89 fiscal year budget at Tuesday's regular meeting. It will begin at 5 p.m. at the McMahon-Wrinkle Airpark conference room.

The reading will also mark the end of a series of sometimes lengthy budget work sessions in which the council has vacillated on the issue of imposing a tax increase.

The council initially discussed implementing a 5-cent ad valorem tax hike, reduced it to 3 cents and finally scrapped it altogether.

The work sessions have held little apparent interest for Big Spring citizens. Generally, only a handful of residents attended. A public hearing on the budget in July attracted 20 to 25 people.

Funds in the budget have also been allotted for a $50 per month raise for 240 city employees — a raise that has caused grumblings in the community because of the current downturn in the economy.

What still looms as a threat to the city's financial well being is a pending class action lawsuit filed about two years ago by the Firemen's Relief and Retirement Fund board.

Craig Deats, the Austin-based attorney representing the firefighters in the suit, said last week negotiations are still continuing with attorney Drew Mouton, who is representing the city.

Deats asked the council several weeks ago to consider a settlement proposal. It was rejected as being too high.

When the case will go to trial is anyone's guess, but city officials have estimated they will have to produce between $70,000 and $75,000 if the firefighters win the case — money that has not been set aside in the budget.

The council is also expected to name Hal Boyd as permanent city manager. He has held the position on an interim basis since March, when personal financial problems forced the resignation of Mack Wofford.

When and if the city will hire a fulltime fire marshal and fire chief are apparently issues that remain unresolved.

Although the council has met several times this summer in executive session to discuss these issues, they are not on the Tuesday agenda.

One issue that should finally be settled is whether the council will

Saragosa Sheriff accused of mishandling funds

By PEGGY FIKAC
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN — Saragosa residents alleged Friday that the Reeves County Sheriff's Department apparently misspent more than $30,000 in private donations meant for survivors of the 1987 tornado.

In a report to the 143rd District Court in Pecos, the residents praised Sheriff Raul Florez's "tireless efforts" in the tornado's immediate aftermath, saying "many lives were saved and those in need received prompt and badly needed assistance."

However, the report said, problems began when the sheriff's department opened a temporary office in Saragosa and "expanded its activities to include the collection, administration and distribution of funds donated by private citizens."

The report is based on records of the department's administration of disaster relief funds, documents that were obtained under an Open Records Act lawsuit by the Saragosa residents, said attorney David Horton.

"I think Sheriff Florez is a very kind and generous and well-intentioned man," Horton, who is with Texas Rural Legal Aid, told a news conference. "I think the lack of accounting control here speaks for itself, and doesn't speak very well of the process, regardless of the personalities."

"No one's been sued for any damages or any misconduct," Horton said.

According to the report, the sheriff's department did not keep complete records of its receipt of cash and checks.

The report said of $51,213 spent by the department, only $20,700 was paid to disaster victims.

Of the rest, $19,952 was spent on a building designed to serve as a field house for a local baseball diamond, the residents said. In addition, $7,843 was used for sheriff's department overhead expenses, the report said, and $2,718 apparently was paid to individuals who were not tornado victims.

Florez did not immediately return a telephone call from The Associated Press.

Reeves County Attorney Scott W. Johnson said he had not had a chance to review the report and could not respond to whether the $30,513 was improperly spent.

However, he added, "I can say from the discovery done to date (in the case), there is no evidence whatsoever of any conversion or theft of these funds. Everything done by the sheriff's department was done in good faith."

Plaintiffs are asking the sheriff's department to refund what they say was improperly spent money.

The report also said plaintiffs might take legal action involving the Red Cross concerning money donated for the benefit of Saragosa residents.

David Townsend, American National Red Cross director of disaster services for a 17-state area including Texas, said in a telephone interview from St. Louis, Mo., that contributions the organization has attributed to the Saragosa operation total $991,169 to date.

Of that money, he said, $980,165 has been spent on or earmarked for Saragosa. The remainder is applied to the Red Cross's general disaster fund, he said.

The $11,000 balance occurred because the Red Cross has a standardized system of helping those in need, Townsend said. For example, he said, every person in the country who needs clothing because of a disaster would get the same allotment.

Animal cruelty charged

By STEVE GEISSEN
Staff Writer

An allegation of cruelty to animals is being investigated by the Big Spring Police Department.

Jimmie Sundry, 3603 Hamilton St., has been accused of throwing a stray cat into his fenced backyard where his two dogs, both chows, allegedly attacked and killed the cat.

Contacted by a reporter Friday morning, Sundry denied that such an incident occurred.

However, the son of a neighbor and his friend say they witnessed such an incident.

Anita Gonzalez, 3605 Hamilton St., who resides next door to Sundry, reported the alleged mauling of the cat to the police Aug. 4, the day it allegedly occurred. She said her son Zynael, 8, and his friend, C.J. Horn, 10, witnessed the incident.

Lt. Juan Palacios said Friday

"The cat jumped up onto a window ledge to try and escape, but the dog jumped up and that's when he (the dog) got ahold of it." — Anita Gonzalez.

the investigation into the case is not yet complete. Although a statement has been taken from a witness in the case, no statement has yet been taken from Sundry, Palacios said.

Palacios said the county attorney will determine whether sufficient evidence exists to prosecute the case, once the investigation is complete.

Describing the alleged incident, Gonzalez said her son and Horn told her that Sundry asked the boys to whom the cat belonged. The boys told Sundry they didn't know, and then Sundry picked up the cat by the neck and threw the cat into his back yard occupied by the two chows, she said.

"The cat jumped up onto a window ledge to try and escape, but the dog jumped up and that's when he (the dog) got ahold of it," she said.

Gonzalez said she heard several loud noises that prompted her to go outside to investigate. She said she then saw the mauled cat lying motionless in Sundry's backyard.

"I saw (Sundry) pick it up and put it in a paper sack," she said. "Then he went and dumped it in the (Park Hill Terrace) apartment's dumpster."

Gonzalez said she did not know who owned the cat, but said she had fed it occasionally. She said she "didn't like what happened one bit" and called the police to report the incident.

Margaret Lloyd, Big Spring Humane Society representative, said the society has been following the progress of the alleged incident.

"As the Humane Society, we're going to take a stand," she said. "We just can't stand by and do nothing."

Lloyd said the maximum fine for cruelty to animals, a class A misdemeanor, is a $1,000 fine and one year in jail.

"I would be for pressing it as far as it can go," she said.

County records show that Sundy's daughter, Teresa Sundy, 3603 Hamilton St., is awaiting trial on charges related to an incident allegedly involving the dogs accused of mauling the stray cat.

Gonzalez said several residents who live on Hamilton Street complained to the police in January that the Sundys' dogs were running loose in the neighborhood.

U.N. observer chief: Cease-fire is holding

BAGHDAD, Iraq — Iraqis crowded into stores, honked horns and waved flags Saturday on the first day of a cease-fire in the eight-year war with Iran. U.N. observers reported no violations on the front.

In the Strait of Hormuz, however, Iraq said an Iranian helicopter gunship and a "war vessel" shadowed an Iraqi merchant ship, one of three sent into the gulf waters to test the truce.

"The situation is good, progressing. The cease-fire is operational, both sides," said Maj. Gen. Slavko Jovic, commander of the U.N. Iran-Iraq Military Observers Group. He said he had "no information about violations and everything is going very fine."

Most of the 350-man observer group began patrolling the 730-mile warfront at 7 a.m. Saturday, capping a year-long effort by the United Nations to halt a war that has cost an estimated 1.5 million dead and wounded since it broke out in September 1980.

Iraq accepted the cease-fire shortly after the Security Council approved it in July 1987, but Iran delayed acceptance until July 18 — after a series of defeats.

Jovic's chief assistant, Canadian Col. John Annand, told reporters that a few technical hitches in transport and communications were "the growing pains of a new mission with two countries who have absolutely no experience with this type of thing."

Iraqi Oil Minister Issam Abdel-Rahim said an Iraqi merchant vessel, the Khawla, sailed from Fujairah in the Gulf of Oman and was later shadowed by an Iranian helicopter gunship and a "war vessel" as it passed through the Strait of Hormuz, gateway to the Persian Gulf.

The minister, quoted by the official Iraqi News Agency, said Iran made "an open attempt to provoke the ship."

Iranian naval chief Rear Adm. Mohammad Malekzadeh said earlier that Iran would continue to intercept ships in the Persian Gulf.

approve recommendations made by the Ambulance Advisory Committee in July for Rural/Metro Ambulance.

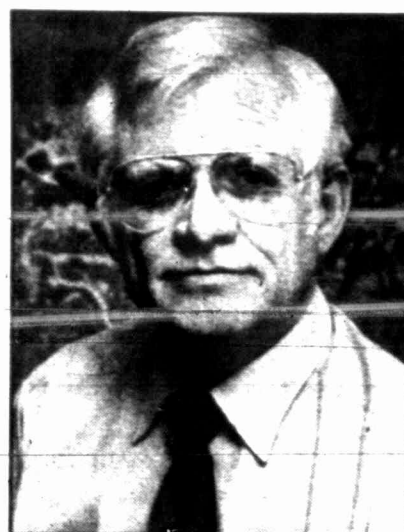

The committee advised the city and county to approve Rural/Metro's request to provide a $9,429 per month subsidy; a 25 percent increase in funding per mile; and split a $1,000 per month subsidy for a fourth ambulance.

A $550 monthly payment the city is being asked to provide for a fourth ambulance — that is rarely used and kept at Rural/Metro headquarters — has been a sticking point for three council members.

The vote on approving the recommendations at an Aug. 9 meeting, ended in a 3-3 tie. Mize — who could have cast the deciding vote — was absent. His decision could be pivotal Tuesday.

Councilmen Chuck Condray, D.D. Johnston and D.W. Overmire opposed the recommendations.

The ambulance service is also asking for approval of price increases on 51 medical supply items.

Rural/Metro officials said they lost approximately $48,000 during its first year of operations in Howard County, although city council members have not been given access to financial records from the service. The price increases, ambulances service officials said, are designed to make the ambulance service a profit-making entity.

Howard County commissioners will vote on the committee's recommendations Monday.

The city council also is expected to appoint Johnston and Tom Decell, public works director, to a multi-county water committee to study problems in Howard, Dawson and Martin counties.

Previous commitments apparently prevented city officials from meeting with county leaders in July to get a first-hand look at potentially serious water problems.

Other scheduled agenda items are:

• Consideration of authorizing the advertisement for bids on the sale of a portion of Tract 33, William B. Currie subdivision.

• Consideration of awarding a bid for air conditioning at the municipal auditorium.

• First reading of an ordinance amending the city code revising the charges for city collection and bailment.

Avery runs replacement on the ticket.

Fraser's primary advantage in the campaign, she said, is that he has been campaigning actively for more than a year and has "a very good organization in place. ... I have a tremendous amount of ground to make up. I'm getting such a late start."

Representatives of the district's three most populous counties unanimously acclaimed Avery.

Party Chairman Robert C. Dean of Reeves County said, "If (Avery) can carry Howard County, she's got it whipped, 'cause she'll carry Reeves County and there aren't enough voters in the rest of the district to make a difference."

Democrat Tom Murray of Ward County said, "I think she's probably the best candidate for the job. Hopefully the people in Ward County will — they've finally got somebody to vote for. Larry Don-didn't carry the county last time. I think a lot of people had to kind of bite their tongues and vote Republican."

"Mrs. Avery will cure that for us, and the Ward County voters will turn out and be good Democrats again like they were always supposed to," Murray said.

Sam Carter, representing Ward County in the executive session, said he felt "She'll run real good in Ward County. She won't have any problem there."

M.H. "Slick" Boatler, Howard County party chairman, said, "I think she'll be good. I think she'll do a good job for us. She is well known in this county, and in other counties through the district. I think she'll be real good for us."

All three said they believe Avery could defeat Fraser. Lee also said he felt Avery would win, although he alone predicted a close race in the November election.

Avery: No Shaw money

Johnnie Lou Avery, newly-named Democratic candidate for the 69th District in the Texas House of Representatives, said Saturday she will finance her campaign by donations.

"I have to get on the phone and start calling people," she said. "A lot of the calls I'll make will be out of the district, to old friends."

She said none of the monies — or materials purchased with those monies — raised by the Shaw campaign will be available to her.

"He had a $30,000 campaign debt," she said, "and he's spent most of his money for materials and brochures, and of course I won't be able to use any of that. But whatever money is left over from (Shaw's) campaign fund will go to pay his debt."

She said one of the difficulties

she foresees in the campaign is "the tremendous sacrifice I'll have to make. My business will suffer; my time with (husband) Jerry will be less, not to mention the financial sacrifice."

The candidate's husband, said he had mixed emotions about her selection. "If this is what she wants, then I'll support her in whatever she wants. But I'm not looking forward to batching it while she's in Austin."

Citing an example of a legislator who spent $80,000 to run for a job that pays $7,200 per year, she said the cost of political campaigns is one example that "something's wrong with the system."

"It's like you're saying only rich people can afford to do it," she said. "People like me couldn't afford it, unless they have some friends with money."

Mourners flock to Zia's funeral

By DAN BIERSE
Associated Press Writer

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan — Hundreds of thousands of mourners jammed the grounds of the world's largest mosque Saturday and chanted praise as President Mohammed Zia ul-Haq was buried.

Acting President Ghulam Ishaq Khan said he asked the United States to help investigate the "dastardly crime" of the crash Wednesday that killed Zia, the U.S. ambassador and 28 other people aboard a military C-130 plane.

"We do suspect that a C-130 is such a stable plane that it doesn't disintegrate into thin air," Ishaq Khan told reporters at his first news conference since taking office as president.

As Zia's funeral cortege moved slowly through the streets toward this city's white, futuristic Faisal mosque, the nearly all-male crowd bade him farewell with chants from the Koran, the holy book of Islam.

Police would not give an estimate, but reporters estimated more than 200,000 mourners.

Other officials seemed certain the crash was no accident. "It's generally felt that it was sabotage," Gen. Imranullah Khan, one of many senior army officers at the funeral, told a reporter. He refused to elaborate.

"The crash of President Zia ul-Haq's aircraft was definitely sabotage, but the investigation is still under way," Interior Minister Nasim Ahmed was quoted by the Urdu-language newspaper Jang as saying.

Mohammad Khan Junejo, fired by Zia as prime minister in May, picked up a shovel and joined dignitaries in filling the grave. U.S. Secretary of State George P. Shultz joined other foreign envoys in laying wreaths at the grave.

Crowds standing as many as 50 deep on grassy knolls on each side of the road strained to catch a glimpse of the flag-draped coffin covered with tinsel and flowers. Soldiers with bayonets and riot police with bamboo sticks lined the streets.

Among the mourners were at least 600 men sent by Afghan guerrilla leaders who long have received support from Zia in their fight against the Soviet-backed Marxist government in neighboring Afghanistan.

Investigators were still searching for the cause of the crash that killed Zia, U.S. Ambassador Arnold Raphael, and 28 others. Shultz landed Friday night with Robert Oakley, designated to replace Raphael.

The 64-year-old Zia ruled Pakistan since seizing power in a bloodless, military coup in 1977.

HCIJCD approves tax rate

By STEVE GEISSEN
Staff Writer

The Howard County Junior College District board of trustees approved a tax rate of 20.85 cents per $100 market value, the same rate as last year, at its regular meeting Friday.

The approved tax rate means an owner of a $50,000 home in Howard County will pay $104.25 in taxes to the district next year.

The board approved the 1988-89 Howard College budget of $7,730,130, which represents an increase of $1,709,705 over last year's budget.

The board also approved the 1988-89 Southwest Collegiate Institute of the Deaf budget of $1,734,173, which represents an increase of $85,609 over last year's SWCID budget.

Howard College President Bob Riley said the substantial increase in the Howard College budget was primarily because of the addition of grant monies, federal program and endowment funds not included in last year's budget.

The 1988-89 budget includes a 4 to 6 percent pay increase for Howard College faculty members, Riley said.

"The moral of the faculty is very high right now," Riley said. "We have had all-time record enrollments recently, and we feel college operations could not be any better at the present time."

Riley said the college is "shooting for" a fall enrollment of more than 2,000 students. If the college reaches the goal, "it would be a tremendous accomplishment," he said.

If the college should have an enrollment of more than 2,000 students next fall, it would receive an increase in state funding for the biennium starting in 1989, he said.

Charlie Lewis, chairman of the Vietnam Memorial Committee, signed a lease agreement with Curtis Mullins, board chairman, which will enable the committee to erect a memorial to the Vietnam veterans of Howard County on SWCID property.

The college will lease 2 acres of land to the committee for three years at a cost of $1, Riley said. The lease will be renewed every three years, he said.

In other action, the board:

- Approved Sophia Crawford as librarian para-professional at SWCID.

- Approved Gary Sims as chemistry/physics professor.
- Accepted the bid of $9,915 from Callaway Inc. for carpeting in the student union building and coliseum.

- Accepted the bid of $6,424.44 from CTWP for computer equipment.

- Accepted the bid of $12,414 from SoftPro Inc. for computer equipment.

- Accepted the bid of $3,375 from Permaglaze for porcelain restoration of the sinks in the dorms.

- Accepted the bid of $9,960.30 from Bailey Boiler Works for boiler repair.

- Approved Equicor as the provider of medical insurance for college employees.

- Approved Blue Cross/Blue Shield as the provider of dental insurance for college employees.

Commissioners to meet Monday

HERALD STAFF REPORT

A public hearing on the county's new budget is among items Howard County Commissioners will address Monday.

Also on the regular commissioners' court agenda are a new rate request from Rural/Metro Ambulance Service, water problems in the county's western portions, and severance pay for a resigned deputy sheriff.

The 9 a.m. meeting will include a public hearing on the county's 1988-89 budget. Approval of the budget is included in the agenda for the meeting.

Commissioners will also discuss granting County Auditor Jackie Olson authority to advertise for bids on property/liability insurance for the county, and on office supplies.

Tax Collector Dorothy Moore is scheduled to discuss erroneous overpayment of taxes with the commissioners at the meeting.

County Sheriff A.N. Standard said Friday he would recommend no severance pay be granted for Thurman, who resigned from the sheriff's department effective Tuesday.

The deputy had been suspended for 30 days and reduced in rank as a disciplinary measure after a capital murder suspect ran a way from a work detail under his supervision July 21.

Antonio Aguilar, 21, remained at large for nine days following the escape.

Thurman's suspension was still in effect, pending a review to determine whether he would be returned to duty with a probationary status, when he elected to resign, Sheriff Standard said Friday.

Bids for mineral appraisal tabled

HERALD STAFF REPORT

Awarding bids for a two-year mineral appraisal contract has been tabled pending further information about the apparent low bidder, according to records of the Howard County Tax Appraisal District Board's meeting Aug. 10.

Present were board members John Webb, Corky Harris and president Lee George. The board approved the minutes of previous meetings, on July 13 and July 20, paid the bills, heard and approved the appraisal district report and financial report before opening the bids.

The board also voted to set Sept. 14, the next regular board meeting, as the date for a public hearing on the board's budget.

Insurance coverage for district employees was awarded to E.P. Driver Insurance Company during the meeting, based on bidding.

Three firms submitted bids for the mineral appraisal contract. Capitol Appraisal Inc., the present appraisers, bid $71,800 for the 1989-90 contract.

Two other firms, Thomas Y. Pickett & Co., and Zigler Operating Co. Inc., also bid on the contract. Pickett bid $75,000 and Zigler bid $62,000.

The board instructed Chief Appraiser F.E. "Gene" Pereira to get recommendations and references from present customers of Zigler and to obtain samples of the firm's work before the Sept. 14 meeting, at which the bids will be discussed again.

Lake discussion will head agenda

Problems created by the unprecedented level of water in Natural Dam Lake west of Big Spring will head the agenda for Colorado River Municipal Water District directors when they meet at headquarters in Big Spring 2 p.m. Aug. 24.

The Long Range Planning Committee will review the situation at an 11:30 a.m. meeting and make recommendations to the board.

These will deal with impact of the water on Lake E.V. Spence quality, as well as the inundation of district pipelines to Midland-Odessa.

Up for consideration will be naming of a depository for district funds for the next biennium beginning Jan. 1, 1989; appropriation of funds for the U.S.G.S. stream gauging on the district watersheds, and funds for repairs to the terminal storage reservoir at Big Spring.

Candidates visit LBJ Ranch

By PEGGY FIKAC
Associated Press Writer

JOHNSON CITY — The Democratic presidential ticket of Michael Dukakis and Lloyd Bentsen emphasized their status as the second Boston-Austin connection Saturday, when they addressed a Johnson City rally and visited Lady Bird Johnson at the LBJ Ranch.

"I am so proud to be here in this historic community ... to remember back to 1960 when the Democrats in this country nominated another son of Massachusetts to the presidency of the United States who reached out to Texas, to a United States senator from Texas, and together they campaigned across this country," Dukakis told the rally crowd, estimated at 3,000 by Blanco County Sheriff Holton Burleson. The rally coincided with Blanco County's Rodeo Days celebration.

Before the rally, the Dukakis and Bentsens breakfasted with Mrs. Johnson at the LBJ Ranch, which was known as the Texas White House when Johnson was president.

The menu included grits, hot biscuits with preserves, fresh figs picked from a tree near the ranch house, peaches from nearby Stonewall, smoked bacon, and scrambled eggs.

"I was watching Mike Dukakis in there eating grits, and put some picante on it, and he seemed to like it. He's acclimating very well," Bentsen told a news conference at the ranch after breakfast.

Dukakis "talks our language, and that language is one that's understood across this country, because it's about integrity and hard work and competence in government," Bentsen said.

"I have great confidence and great pride and high hopes for these four good folks that are undertaking this hard, hard job," Mrs. Johnson said. "I will be watching eagerly and hopefully both for my country and for my party."

The Johnsons and Bentsens became friends decades ago, Mrs. Johnson said. She said Mrs. Dukakis also has visited the ranch before to discuss highway beautification, a pet project of the former first lady.

Johnson had a "passion and commitment" to people, Dukakis said, "especially to people who needed a helping hand and a leg up on the road to opportunity."

The candidates and their wives joined Mrs. Johnson in a visit to the ranch's family cemetery where Johnson is buried.

shortly after 10 p.m. when he pulled along the side of the road, but the truck in neutral and got out, according to the DPS.

The truck began to roll, the front door apparently knocked Foreman to the ground and he was crushed when the left front tire ran over him, the DPS said.

He was pronounced dead at the scene by Howard County Justice of the Peace Bill Shankles, according to the DPS.

Is City Council's search complete?

Major City Council decisions are going to be made in coming days and run the risk of being difficult to live with if wrong. Times that try men's souls? Perhaps. At the same time, the situation offers a unique opportunity to have long-lasting impact on this city's future.

Decisions on the budget will be lived with for a year. Within six months the council can again begin the process of shaping the city services from a particular tax level.

A far more long-term decision involves selection of who will manage the city's affairs for these City Council members — and, we'd hope, for successive councils. Such a person must guarantee to serve the needs of the residents, while professionally and completely informing the City Council.

That the job is earned by one who is, without question, the best candidate is crucial in order to command respect from employees and taxpayers alike.

With a multi-million dollar budget, it is not asking too much that the city of Big Spring be run like an efficient business operation.

And how would an efficient business select its chief operating officer?

Would its board of directors search to determine who is most qualified? Would it advertise and see what efficient officers are available and interested? Would it interview a minimum number of candidates to ensure that philosophies and goals mesh? Would its stockholders accept anything less?

Should the residents of Big Spring accept anything less?

The word on the street these days is that council approval for Hal Boyd as city manager is a foregone conclusion. It simply remains that a public vote must be taken to hand him the $50,000 job.

Is he the best man available for the job? We may never know, because apparently no one else is being given active consideration.

City officials came under fire to some degree five months ago when Mack Wofford resigned. The reason? An allegedly poor job of organizing the search committee and poorly conducting its duties for the position when he was hired in 1986.

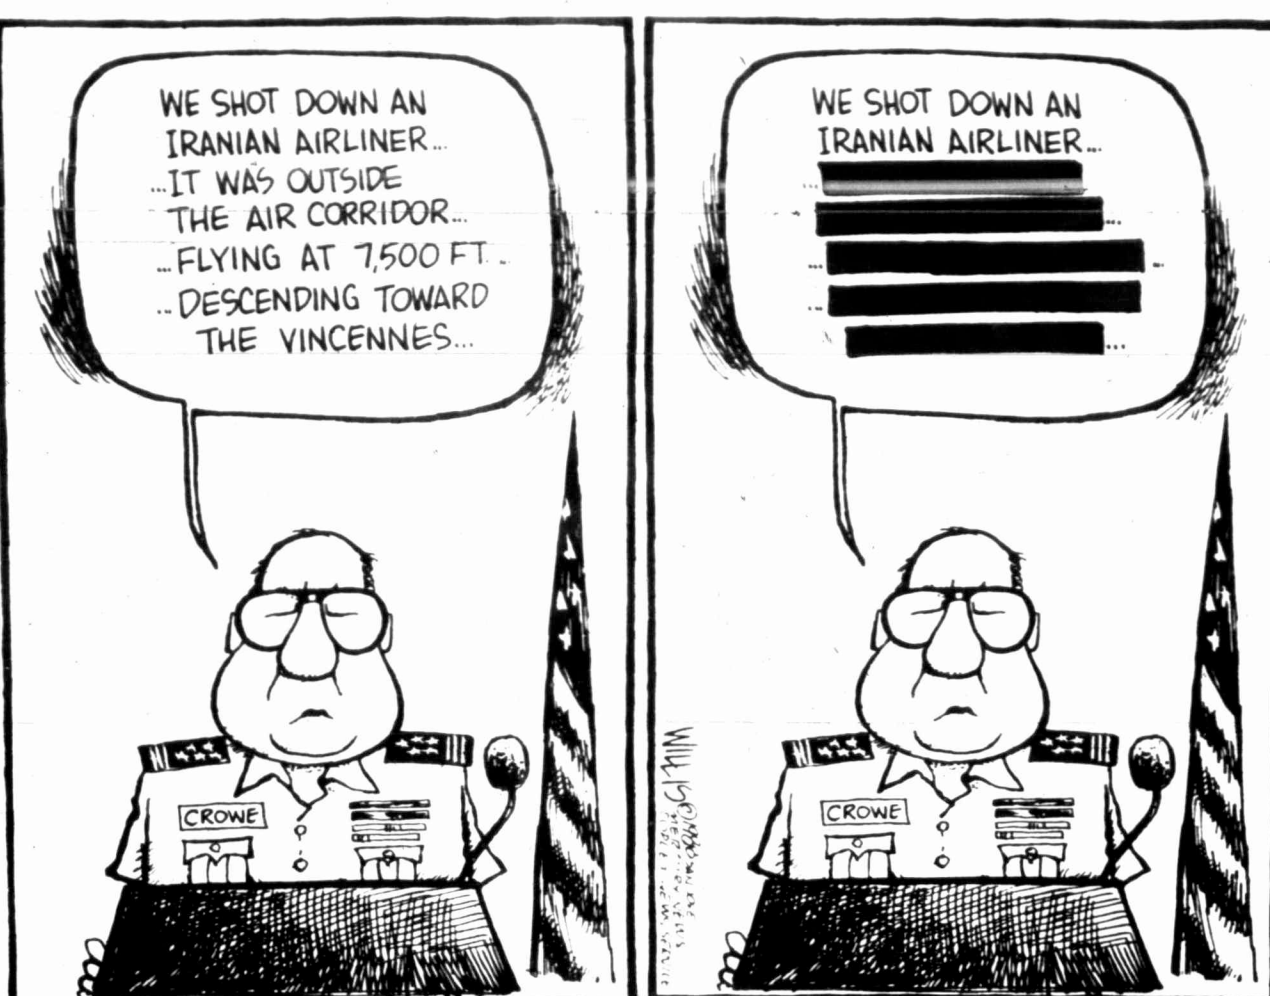

This would be a particularly poor time to do the same.

Significant challenges stand on our horizon. Big Spring is in a situation that calls for it to assert itself and be led with vigor and vision. That can only occur from someone who has both, and the confidence to allow people being supervised to meet their potential.

That would be true leadership.

Of course, a city council without such qualities among its members would be hesitant to seek and hire such a person. Only those who are comfortable working with someone with such qualities would do so.

Hal Boyd may well be the best man for the job, and we would welcome him to the position if he is. But without giving any effort to examining the employee marketplace, there is no assurance that city business is being conducted in a businesslike manner.

Texas, Mexico interests inextricably intertwined

By JESSE TREVINO

Two independent Midland oilmen — Cyril Wagner and Jack Brown — are bucking the trend.

They have plans to expand their business — into Mexico.

Three hundred miles away in Dallas, Robert Amundsen, head of the Amundsen Institute of U.S.-Mexico Studies, is plowing ahead with his efforts to plant the seeds for improved U.S.-Mexico relations.

Chances are neither Wagner nor Brown know Amundsen. But the interests of all three men, like those of Texas and Mexico, are inextricably intertwined.

Like many other Texans, they have begun to understand the market potential of Mexico and the resulting economic opportunities that can benefit both countries.

Wagner and Brown want to build a natural gas pipeline along 1,655 miles of the U.S.-Mexico border. Laid mostly in Mexico, the pipeline would transport natural gas from South Texas to southern California, supplying energy to the ever-growing border industrial region along the way.

Like Wagner and Brown, Amundsen is also involved in Mexican business interests. But much more than that, he has invested tremendous amounts of money and personal energy into another arena: Fostering improved U.S.-Mexico relations.

He believes that the two countries will develop cordially only if the future leaders of each understand the other and if Mexico develops economically.

To that end, he has sought untiringly to bring future leaders of both countries together in intensive seminars to examine the entire panopoly of U.S.-Mexico issues.

Amundsen's seminars, held both in the United States and Mexico, are attended by representatives of government, business and industry.

During its first four years, the Institute has brought together 300 such individuals. By the year 2000, Amundsen's seminar graduates will number 2,000.

More than anything else, Amundsen wants to raise the quality of interaction between the two countries. He aspires to change the views of younger Mexicans and Americans so that the future is not dominated by the current state of mangled U.S.-Mexico relations.

In many ways, Amundsen symbolizes Dallas' efforts to achieve the status of an international city, something Big D takes very seriously. It should, especially these days.

The collapse of the Texas economy hit close to home when the state's largest financial institution, First Republic Bank, was lost to North Carolina. Many Texans, evidently Railroad Commissioner Kent Hance for one, think the Texas economy can be miraculously revived based on the state's greatest natural resource — oil.

But 50 years from now, Dallas' leaders may be credited with recognizing the great natural resource that will drive our economy into the 21st century — geography.

In the 50's and 60's, the great American middle class was born of employment and consumption. Suddenly, more people had cars, TV's and refrigerators. Now, the vast Mexican underclass awaits a similar elevation to middle class status.

Texas, moreso than any other state, is poised to reap the benefits of the greatest North American economic expansion in 40 years.

The opportunities are mind-boggling, yet challenging. But minds like Amundsen's can handle things that boggle most of us.

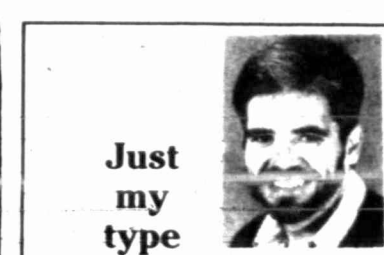

Quietly recovering from an internal organizational setback which he settled with characteristic aplomb, he is now staging his organization's next phase of development: Its assertion as a key player in U.S.-Mexico relations.

In September, Amundsen will host a White House conference for individuals such as Wagner and Brown, entrepreneurs who see the potential of doing business with Mexico.

The 68-year-old Texan has received funding from the Hewlett-Packard Foundation to develop entrepreneurial programs in colleges, universities, and businesses — both public and private — in Mexico.

These programs, in such places as the Banco de Mexico and the Monterrey Technological Institute, will help set the stage for private business development that may one day help remedy Mexico's economic problems — and those of Texas as well.

Just my type

What cola takes heat for y'all?

By ROBERT WERNSMAN

Space was spent in this column a few weeks ago discussing pet gripes — you know, kids not strapped into auto seat belts, physically healthy folks parking in handicapped parking slots and an advertisement for a cigarette that made absolutely no sense to me.

No one has given a decent explanation for the first two — nor would they attempt to do so, I believe. However, a friend has come to the rescue on the latter.

Apparently the advertisement, which pictured a pajama bottom-clad young man being greeted by a roomful of women (who were smoking, naturally) and an older man was never actually planned.

A local attorney had originally pointed out this banality and asked for my input. I could give him nothing more than puzzlement. Then, each time I saw it again, it made even less sense.

As it turns out, others have expressed the same puzzlement and now the story's out. The ad is an example of "spontaneity in advertising."

Actually, what happened was the fella in half his pajamas had been the model in a mattress commercial being shot nearby at the same time as the cigarette shooting. When he finished his work, he simply went walking through the set and was spontaneously engulfed in the action.

There now, I feel better for bringing you the "rest of the story," although I'd still never buy their cigarettes — it doesn't matter how puzzling the advertisement might be.

It isn't only print advertising that puzzles at times.

I like to believe that I watch so little network television I won't be affected by the frequently inane commercials that fund the frequently inane programming.

Every once in a while, however, one slips into the psyche and takes root, slowly germinating until it becomes a full-blown thorn of the mind.

It's happened this summer and I've got to vent my spleen on this one — we've talked it over at home and my daughters suggest that I become an editor of television, also. Since that's rather unlikely, I'll just cut loose here with my two cents worth and feel better for it.

It has to do with summer, so perhaps I will be annoyed by this nonsensical effort by the Pepsi-Cola company on a seasonal basis only.

Perhaps you've seen it — the one that has countless beach-goers soaking the rays and getting inappropriately overheated.

You can tell that these folks are getting uncomfortable, but they react with complete disinterest when the Coca-Cola drink stand opens its door for business.

Time passes, the folks are getting more uncomfortable by the minute and finally, the one they've been waiting for comes through: Pepsi-Cola is available. Immediately, they all — including an appropriately cute pooch — literally hop over the hot summer sands to buy their cola and quench their thirsts. Makes sense if you're promoting Pepsi over Coke, right?

Wait a minute, here. I know that despite the truth in advertising law, commercials are not required to make sense. It just seems as though I'd want them to be sensible if I was spending my thousands on their production.

What lacks sense? Well, just how does this product work?

The premise of the commercial is that all these people are stuck on this hot beach, virtually unable to walk across the sand — until they've got their choice of cola.

They're hotfootin' it all over the place until the second they drink their soda. Then, all is calm and peaceful.

What does all this mean?

Drink a Pepsi and you get cold feet?

Visit a beach that serves only Coke and you're in for a hot-foot, miserable afternoon?

A particular variety cools the sand?

The head bone's connected to the foot bone?

Sorry Pepsi-Cola shareholders, I just don't get it. But that's OK, since my puzzlement won't cost you a dime — I've never cared for your product anyway.

Reaction to Northside petition was no surprise, writer says

To the editor:

Was anyone surprised that a petition presented by Northside citizens to the Big Spring Independent School District trustees received short shrift? Or that issues important to the Mexican-American community attached to the petition were ignored? Or that Amelia Ornelas was treated in a patronizing (some would say meanly) manner? I wasn't surprised and so far I haven't found a minority person who was.

We've come to expect such as happened at the last board meeting. The administration and board always come off as glib bullies in their treatment of modestly educated, modestly articulate, gauche patrons who seek their help in honest, deeply-felt concerns. They are sent slinking off by a board and administration indifferent to minority needs, but high on panopoly.

The Aug. 14 Big Spring Herald story conjures a mental cartoon picture of the school board sitting there looking like the Soviet Politburo, complete with cartoon bubbles above everyone's head, save Billy Pineda's, each asking, "What more do these people want?"

A short list of what we want would include competence, fairness, and honest effort. We are not getting these and the rejected petition is a symptom of the endemic concerns by minority people in this district that are not being addressed.

Had there been good will, honesty, and good sense, the administration/board could easily have kept Mrs. Deanda as a classroom teacher at Bauer Elementary. Any forward school district would have been thrilled to make optimum use of a known local Hispanic leader helping the administration move the school program toward excellence.

It isn't as though the district hasn't honored such requests by anglo teachers. Had there been good will there would have been a good way. All that happened instead was continued bad feelings by the minority community, sick and tired of being sick and tired with the school district.

The whole Deanda question underscores much deeper concerns by local Mexican-Americans. By moving local bilingual education to College Heights Elementary the board/administration condemned the school to be College Heights Mexican School with all the negatives this implies and contradictory logic.

Nobody believes that the Texas Education Association said, "You will put all elementary students on one centrally located campus." This is discrimination, plain and simple. The administration sold this ill-fated plan to the board without any in-depth digging into the implications; with no Mexican-American citizenry consulted. District bilingual teachers (read "help") were simply told that they were being transferred.

This past winter a "temporary" principal was assigned to the school who (to no one's surprise) became permanent in due course. We feel that had bilingual education been a truly honest priority — an excellence priority to the administration/board — an intensive search would have been made for a Mexican-American principal, trained and experienced in bilingual education, to head the school.

(Superintendent Bill) McQueary, (board President Ford) Farris and (Assistant Superintendent Murray) Murphy allowed as how the district needs to hire more bilingual teachers; that it is difficult. Hey, we've been hearing that for years (blacks too).

And yes, it is difficult. Look, it's difficult even for districts that pay more and have other perks attractive to the upwardly mobile minority teacher. It takes strong, aggressive efforts on the part of attractive districts to recruit minority teachers with superior ideas and capacities.

It will take extraordinary efforts for this district to draw minority teachers. Hoping they will get excited over a note tacked to the bulletin board of a college isn't going to do it; neither will hoping a qualified minority will have a tire good flat in front of the administration building. The personnel office must send recruiters to college campuses to persuade them to come.

But once here, they are not likely to stay. And it won't be because they miss Robstown too much. They will leave because it won't take them long to figure out: Teachers who express strong opinions are perceived as threats and are even shunned, promotion and recognition will come not from what you know but who you know; promotion will come to those who play the game, are playmates, insiders, wives, sycophants, panderers, wealthy, or have been here a long, long time; belonged to the right church, and never made waves.

If the district truly wanted to do something about learning excellence and dropouts, it would long ago have made use of the minority churches and organizations that have been in place; it would long ago have made use of the minority teachers who are here, now in place. Instead, there is no getting away from the feeling that these minority teachers are perceived as donkeys — beasts of burden, scorned and undervalued, ever condemned to compete with the insider prancers and jumpers. No matter how they might excel in their professional preparation, next to the inside horses, they always appear to be jackasses; and so they're treated.

An honest effort would have resulted in at-risk students and their parents being brought into dialogue.

I know that we in the minority are considered impudent, abrasive, and vitriolic. That's too bad. The board and administration will simply have to move over in the pews and make room for us. There are large numbers of us in this district born to prick pomposity's big balloon when the occasion demands it — and it now does.

As a long-time boxing coach I can't help but recall what a prize fighter's manager once said about the fighter he was working with. He said, "He has a lotta good points, but it's his bad points that ain't so good." We in the minority simply cannot be satisfied with the good points of BSISD when it is plagued with so many bad ones.

Have conventions become passe?

By JILL LAWRENCE
Associated Press Writer

NEW ORLEANS — The moment Ed Fiore was waiting for at the Republican National Convention never came.

"I was hoping George Bush would say, 'Here are three vice presidential candidates — give me one,'" said Fiore, a delegate from Andover, Minn.

He wasn't the only delegate yearning for a role meatier than cheerleader.

"I'm enjoying this, but frankly, I'd love it more if I were deciding something," said John Miller of Wethersfield, Conn. "A big rubber stamp," concluded J.A. Dalpiaz of Gastonia, N.C.

Americans were still yawning from the Democratic National Convention in July when the Republicans took over prime time. Their nominating contest was over in March, their few platform disputes were resolved the week before the convention started, and their vice presidential suspense ended Tuesday afternoon.

Are conventions obsolete?

Capitol report

"Every one I've been at before, it's been a contest," said Wallace Barnes of Bristol, Conn., at his fifth GOP convention since 1956.

"If you think in terms of a decade or two decades, you have to wonder whether this process will continue at all."

Veterans fondly recall the days of spirited platform fights, walkouts over procedural votes, multiple delegations from the same state competing to be seated and even some suspense over the nomination. Neither the Democrats nor the Republicans permit such rowdiness any longer.

Self-conscious under the eye of the camera, they've tailored their conventions to TV viewers to the point where delegates are almost irrelevant. Democratic chairman Paul Kirk likened his delegates to a studio audience for a miniseries. Republican officials even wrote the speeches delivered by delegate leaders during the roll call to nominate George Bush.

The orchestration brings complaints from delegates and television executives alike.

"This is a TV show. They'll demonstrate for damn near anything," Fred Meyer, an alternate from St. Paul, sniffed about his over-eager GOP colleagues on the Superdome floor.

"The parties have got to somehow get on with their business in such a manner that they don't pay as much attention to us as they have," said ABC anchor Peter Jennings. "They have made it more difficult for us by trying to please us."

Most network bigwigs maintain they never have and never would try to influence what the parties do. But their presence is felt nevertheless.

"There's no question that there is pressure on us, especially from the networks, to take a hard look at what we can do to spice up the convention and perhaps arrange it so it doesn't take so long, like maybe three days instead of four," said GOP Chairman Frank Fahrenkopf. "Maybe some of the balloons and some of the speeches may have to go."

Short of dictating to the parties, the networks exert tremendous indirect influence by employing what Gordon Manning, an NBC producer for many years, calls their ultimate weapon: News judgment.

NBC anchor Tom Brokaw indicated he's already thinking along those lines for 1992.

"If the conventions stay the same and the situation's the same (the nomination sewn up), I don't think we'll do two hours for four nights," he said. "Could all of this be done in one night? In two nights? Sure, but that's the party's call to make, not ours."

So how long should a convention be?

"We're lucky it doesn't take five days," said one delegate.

"Thursday night, 10:05 Eastern Time... two minutes, fifteen seconds allotted for spontaneous applause."

"#1 WAS MEAN AND #2 WAS A LITTLE DULL. I PICKED #3 BECAUSE HE SOUNDED CUTE AND COMPATIBLE."

Farewell to free samples, clippings and a sarcastic staff

By DONNA BRENCE
For the Herald

Here I am staring at this blank screen trying to think of something to write about three hours before I am to leave and go back to Weatherford, Oklahoma for my last semester at college.

I have no idea why I'm even doing this, considering I don't like to write anything longer than my name. Believe me, this wasn't my idea. Robert Wernsman, editor of the Herald, invited me — the night before I'm to leave — to write a column on my two or so months at the Herald.

At first I thought "No way," then I decided "Why not?" I'm not going to be around when some hapless soul runs across it in the newspaper and says: "Who is this person?" Besides, it will look good on my resume that I've written a column for a newspaper, even though my major is computer science.

As you can see, I'm writing this column for all the right reasons.

But seriously, I guess I'm writing this because it has often been said by the people I work with that I don't talk enough — which, I admit, is sometimes true. But most of the time I don't have anything to say; so what's the point of talking when you're really not saying anything? It seems to be a waste of breath to me.

It's amazing how people always ask me why I don't talk very much but if I talked a lot, I doubt they would ask me why I talk so much.

But enough of that. Let me tell you what I do — or did — at the Herald for the past two months or so. I was the one who took obituaries over the phone, filed and clipped newspapers, did the How's That question and the Springboard column, public records, and all the other little jobs that were created to keep me busy. So if you ever saw a mistake in one of those areas, you now know who to blame.

It has been very interesting and kind of fun to work here. I guess the job I liked the most was opening the mail. You wouldn't believe all the junk the Herald gets in the mail. But once in a while we'd get something really good like a Tide detergent box, a can of coffee, coffee cups, records, bike reflectors, and fish hooks. Neat stuff, huh?

If I miss anything or anyone at the Herald, it definitely will be the joy of opening the mail. I might miss some of the staff — I haven't quite decided yet. I'll let you know at the end of this column; I have to think about it some more.

But I know this for sure: the Big Spring Herald is an excellent newspaper and I thought that before I came to work here. I'm no expert, but I've read quite a few newspapers of comparable size to the Herald and well, frankly there's no comparison. Of course, I think anything is better than my hometown newspaper the Minco (Okla.) Minstrel — commonly referred to as the Minco Mistake; so what do I know, right?

For those of you who don't think members of the editorial staff are hard workers and think they are just interested in partying and things of that nature (granted there are a few who have wandered astray) let me share something with you. Since I have been working at the Herald I've gone to two of their parties. I had been told that they had had some wild parties in the past so I was kind of surprised when at the first one we ended up watching Hanoi Jane on 20/20 and at the other one we watched the Republican National Convention. Are these people dedicated or what?

It's getting about time for me to leave so I've got to start wrapping this up. For all those staff meetings that I didn't say anything it was because I was saving it for now; I don't like to repeat myself. "I liked everything and everybody has been and is doing a good job."

If you haven't noticed, this is kind of my farewell speech. So in closing, I have decided that I'm going to miss the staff at the Herald a little bit; I stress the word little. You don't know how much these people (Tim Appel, Steve Belvin, Michael Duffy, Steve Geissen, Lynn Hayes, Sarah Luman, Karen McCarthy, Steve Reagan especially, and Robert Wernsman) pick on me.

Every time I open my mouth they count how many words I say; it's comforting to know, however, that they can count — just kidding. To my successor, Stella Vidlak, I say: Just ignore them and they'll kind of grow on you. That's what I did and see how well it worked out.

Thanks for everything, it's been fun. Bye.

Editor's note: Donna Brence worked efficiently — if somewhat quietly — as the Herald's editorial clerk during her summer break from college.

NORTHSIDE COMMUNITY CENTER

Big Spring residents — secure in their comfortable homes — would be surprised at how many desperate people turn to the Northside Community Center.

There's Janette, 35-year-old mother of four, whose husband drank, smoked marijuana, abused the children and threatened to kill her. There was no water in the house, and frequently no food.

There's Billy, an alcoholic, living under bridges. Billy was the victim of a hit-and-run accident last winter that left him with a broken hip, complicated by infection and pneumonia. Before he could be released from the hospital, doctors insisted that he have a dry place to live and warm clothes for his recuperation.

There's Donna, whose three-month-old child had already undergone major surgery three times and was sent back to the hospital for an emergency operation. Donna's husband lost his job and they had no money for rent, food or bills.

Emergency assistance for utilities, rent, clothing, food and medicine — Northside helps families through bad times so they can put their lives together. In return the Center asks recipients to volunteer to help out at the Center.

UNITED WAY

Bentsen's grandfather was stowaway immigrant

By GUNILLA FARINGER
Associated Press Writer

BIRKELSE, Denmark — Sen. Lloyd Bentsen's grandfather didn't have enough money for a ticket when he emigrated to America 100 years ago, so he stowed away on a cargo ship, his Danish relatives say.

Today, Bentsen is a wealthy U.S. senator from Texas and the Democratic candidate for vice president of the United States.

Bentsen still has relatives, Dagmar and Theodor Jensen, in the village of Birkelse, where the Bentsen family originated, 32 miles west of Aalborg in northern Jutland. Both are 87.

Bentsen's grandfather, Niels Peter Bentsen, left Denmark in 1888 to start a new life in the United States. He was one of more than 300,000 Danes who emigrated during the 75 years before 1914.

Surrounded by a throng of grandchildren, Mrs. Jensen, niece of the elder Bentsen, tells the story of her mother's younger brother.

"When he was 19 years old, he was the coachman at the big estate of Birkelse nearby. One day he got into an argument with his boss over some infraction he had done. He then felt he had had enough, and decided to emigrate," she said.

"My mother lent him 75 kroner (about $10.50 at today's rate), and he got another 25 kroner ($3.50) from his mother," Mrs. Jensen said.

The 100 kroner Niels Peter borrowed from his family was a lot of money at the time, about a year's salary for an industrial worker. But he was still short of the transatlantic fare.

"Apparently he stowed away on the ship," Mrs. Jensen said, reciting the old family story that has appeared in a book about the Bentsens by Joan Sloan Johnson.

After three days, the stowaway emerged from hiding, judging that he no longer risked being sent back, and offered to work his way over the Atlantic.

"On Christmas Eve when I was about 5 years old our whole farm, with houses and stables, burned down to the ground. We had no insurance and no money, and we lost everything," Mrs. Jensen said.

"But Niels Peter sent us enough money to rebuild the farm. So we got the money back, and with plenty of interest, too," she said. The Jensens lived on the farm until about 25 years ago.

Later, during World War II, the American relatives also helped by sending money, food and clothing to the family in Nazi-occupied Denmark.

Niels Peter Bentsen first worked as a farmhand with a German family on the East Coast. Later, he found work near Seattle, where he met and married a Danish woman, Tena, also from northern Jutland. They moved to South Dakota and ended up in Texas.

In 1898, 10 years after arriving in the United States, Niels Peter had saved enough to return to Birkelse to visit. But the trip was a disappointment.

On the way from the train station to his aunt's house, he was arrested for walking on the grass. The incident reminded him of his frustration over the authoritarian Danish society he had left, and he cut short his visit.

In Texas, Niels Peter Bentsen started a business with two of his sons buying citrus-growing land that one son, Lloyd Bentsen Sr., built into a financial dynasty.

"My father is a symbol of what people of courage and vision and daring can achieve in America. He has lived the American dream," the Texas senator said in his acceptance speech July 22.

Tena, left, and Niels Peter Bentsen, grandparents of Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, pose for this 1930s photo taken in Mission. Bentsen stowed away on a cargo ship to come to the United States when he was 19 years old, according to his Danish relatives.

Jury says Hunts did engage in conspiracy

By MITCHELL LANDSBERG
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK — A federal jury assessed the flamboyant Hunt brothers more than $130 million in damages Saturday after finding that they had conspired to corner the world silver market in the late 1970s.

The jury said the three Hunt brothers and two other defendants had ruined the investments of the Peruvian government's mineral marketing company, Minpeco S.A., by sending the price of silver to artificial heights.

All of the Hunts but one — Lamar, 56, owner of the National Football League's Kansas City Chiefs — were found to have engaged in a pattern of racketeering activity to monopolize the silver market. Since the case is a civil one, there would be no criminal penalties attached to the finding.

The verdict was a victory for Minpeco, which lost millions in the volatile silver market, and a setback for the three sons of the late Texas oilman H.L. Hunt.

The jury found that International Metals Investment Co. and Mahmoud Fustok had participated in the conspiracy.

Fustok is a prominent race horse owner and brother-in-law of the Saudi Arabian crown prince.

Another lawyer for Minpeco, Shaun Corlette, said he doubted the verdict had opened the door for criminal charges against the Hunts, since the statute of limitations would have run out.

The findings came on the jury's sixth day of deliberations, and only after it appeared that there might be no verdict at all. The jury of three men and three women sent a note to Judge Morris E. Lasker earlier Saturday, saying: "Very sorry to say we have been unable to reach a unanimous decision."

The judge ordered the jury to continue deliberations after it failed to determine damages in the case. About two hours later, the jury decided price increases the Hunts had engineered cost Minpeco $63 million in short silver futures contracts.

The jury also determined that the Hunts cost Minpeco $24.5 million in interest on loans to pay for its losses and $12.2 million in future trades. However, the jury also said the damages should be offset by $33.4 million that Minpeco earned in profits on silver it held during the same period.

Because of the racketeering charge, some of the figures are trebled. Cymrot estimated the damages at $134 million, but Curran said he calculated them to be $132.6 million.

Six financial institutions originally named in the suit, including some of Wall Street's biggest names, settled out of court for a total of nearly $65 million before the trial began. Those defendants included Merrill Lynch & Co., Prudential-Bache Securities, E.F. Hutton & Co. Inc., Banque Paribas, Citicorp, and AML Futures.

Lawyers for Minpeco charged the Hunts and their co-defendants were responsible for the sharp rise in silver prices from about $9 an ounce to more than $50 an ounce between September 1979 and January 1980.

Minpeco claimed it lost more than $100 million due to skyrocketing silver prices that fell back to about $10 an ounce in March 1980 when the Hunts failed to meet a margin call for $100 million in silver future contracts.

Minpeco had a large short position in the silver futures market.

Abandoned baby found in pickup

DENISON (AP) — Authorities continued to search for the mother of a newborn baby, found wrapped in a flannel shirt in a pickup truck parked at a department store.

The abandoned baby, dubbed "Baby Boy Doe," was reported to be doing "just fine" at Texoma Medical Center. The baby was found at 10:37 a.m. Thursday, apparently minutes after his birth, by a Wal-Mart customer.

"We are working with the police, but I would welcome a letter from the mother if she wants to remain unknown," said Carolyn Driscoll of Child Protective Services.

"I feel the mother is out there somewhere and is in need of help herself," Ms. Driscoll said. "But if she isn't found, or doesn't want to be found, we need some information on the child relating to its inherited traits, diseases or illnesses of relatives — anything about him. It isn't fair to the baby not to know something about its inheritance."

John Paul Jones of Pottsboro told the Denison Herald he left his pickup unlocked when he went in to the store for about 10 minutes. He returned to find the infant on the truck's seat.

Store employees summoned paramedics, who tied off the baby's umbilical cord and transported him to the hospital.

Police searched the scene and a wooded area near the shopping center for the mother, but were unable to find the woman.

River dolphin found dead

HOUSTON (AP) — The carcass of a dolphin found on a sand bar in the San Jacinto may be that of a turned-around dolphin that made a home in the river last month.

Texas Marine Mammal Stranding Network volunteers hauled the 6-foot-7 mammal, weighing about 350 pounds, to Texas A&M University's marine biology department in Galveston Friday afternoon for an examination to determine the cause of death.

Officials have not determined if the dolphin is Rio, the playful dolphin who first frightened then later delighted swimmers and skiers after cruising into the river eight weeks ago.

"It looked like Rio. There haven't been any other dolphins sighted but him," said Mary Lou Simmons, manager of Banana Bend Beach, near where the dead mammal was found.

"I think that dolphin may have been killed by a boat. It looks like there's a gash on his head, near his dorsal fin. It was bleeding. There's a lot of boat traffic in the river and he wasn't afraid like he used to be. He seemed to be getting kind of tame. He would come right up to my boat and make a hissing sound, then blow his spout."

Rob Weeks, state coordinator of the stranding network, speculated the dolphin was drawn from its saltwater home in Galveston Bay up the Houston Ship Channel and into the river when the water there became very salty because of abnormally low rainfall this summer.

Nelson angry about concert cancellation

HOUSTON (AP) — Singer Willie Nelson says he is very angry that the president of Baylor University won't let him play a benefit concert at the school's new events center in Waco.

"They do really make me mad when they tell me I can't play in Waco. Waco's my hometown. It gets my red Irish hair up," Nelson told the Houston Chronicle Friday from his hotel in Beverly Hills, Calif. "Some pressure was applied or maybe the guy felt sanctimonious, like his hallowed hall was too good for me to play in."

Nelson, a country singer and movie star who is no red-headed stranger to trouble, said his concert promoter, Tom Gresham, was told by Baylor president Herbert Reynolds that the benefit concert was canceled this week because of protests that Nelson's concerts have drawn from police groups.

His concerts in Rhode Island were picketed last month by police who objected to Nelson's benefit last year for an American Indian convicted of killing a federal officer.

Reynolds said little about why he canceled the show, which was to raise money for the legal fund of some of the citizens of Leroy. More than 300 people in the small central Texas town are fighting to recover part of the savings they lost last year when state authorities closed the uninsured Leroy Bank.

To keep the Leroy benefit alive, Nelson has made arrangements to move the concert to the Heart O' Texas Coliseum, a county-owned arena.

Nelson said he became involved when his barber in Abbott, where Nelson grew up, introduced him to a preacher in nearby Leroy, who explained the town's problem.

Reynolds said only that Nelson had not done what he could to "strengthen the moral fiber of our nation."

But Nelson said that if Reynolds didn't like something he had done, he shouldn't take it out on the people of Leroy.

Nelson said plans for the concert called for 80 percent of the proceeds to go to the Leroy Bank Depositors' Association and 20 percent for Baylor's new Ferrell Special Events Center. Nelson attended Baylor for two semesters in 1954.

Residents mistaken for prostitutes

DALLAS (AP) — Police plan to step up enforcement to rid east Dallas neighborhoods of prostitutes and their potential customers, officials say.

Residents this week complained to police, a judge and city officials about customers who mistake residents for prostitutes and proposition them.

"One woman will holler at the men to go away and they'll have their windows rolled up and go and knock on her door because they thought she was saying, 'Hey, come over here,'" said

Dallas Vice Control Capt. Don Whitten.

Police said they intend to increase efforts by the task force that utilizes patrol officers to supplement vice officers in undercover attempts to arrest prostitutes and their customers.

City Councilman Craig Holcomb, whose district includes the targeted neighborhood, said he would ask the City Council on Wednesday to endorse a resolution requesting newspapers to publish the names of prostitutes and customers who are convicted.

Tax & financial planning

A HELPFUL FINANCIAL STATEMENT

The American Institute of CPAs is requiring a new form of financial statement effective July 15, 1988.

The new statement is titled "Statement of Cash Flows" and is intended to replace the "Statement of Changes in Financial Position."

The primary purpose of this new statement is to provide relevant information about the cash receipts and disbursements of a company. This new statement, along with the other financial statements, should help investors and creditors to:

- Assess the company's ability to generate positive future net cash flows.
- Assess the company's ability to meet its obligations, its ability to pay dividends, and its needs for external financing.
- Assess the reasons for differences between net income and associated cash receipts and payments.
- Assess the effects on a company's financial position of both its cash and noncash investing and financing transactions during a given accounting period.

The "Statement of Cash Flows," along with the "Reconciliation of Net Income to Net Cash," should be of great assistance to business managers.

The "Statement of Cash Flows" is required to present three distinct areas of cash flows — cash from operations, cash from investing, and cash from financing. The net cash flow from these three areas is then added to or subtracted from the beginning cash and cash equivalents to present a current figure.

The reconciliation of net income to net cash will answer a very common question. If I made a profit, where's the money now? This reconciliation starts with the net income from your profit and loss statement and makes the appropriate noncash income and expense adjustments to arrive at net cash provided by operating activities.

Mistakes made, but no action warranted

WASHINGTON (AP) — Crew members of the U.S. Navy cruiser Vincennes made several understandable mistakes under "the fog of war" before the ship blew an Iranian airliner from the sky last month, but none was negligent and no disciplinary action is warranted, Pentagon leaders said Friday.

The stress of combat probably contributed to the crew's inability to positively identify the aircraft as a commercial flight, which approached the ship in the midst of a surface battle with Iranian gunboats, said Defense Secretary Frank C. Carlucci and Adm. William Crowe, the chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, as they released findings of a board of inquiry.

Carlucci said the investigation would lead to a number of changes in operations, including modifying the devices that display critical information on approaching targets in the cruisers and subjecting operators of their Aegis air defense systems to psychological testing to ensure they are ready for combat.

Both men said the mistakes, by crew members who weren't about to take any chances with their own ship's safety, did not flow from negligence and Iran bears a heavy responsibility for the shootdown of Flight 655 and the deaths of the 290 aboard. As a result, no Navy officers or sailors will face any disciplinary action in the affair.

Carlucci said a non-punitive letter of censure previously issued to one officer already has been withdrawn at his direction.

Crowe declared that "By any measure, it was unconscionable (for Iran) to ignore the repeated warnings of the United States and to permit an airliner to take off from a joint military-civilian airfield and fly directly into the midst of an on-going surface action (battle)."

The Vincennes was literally in the midst of fighting with several small Iranian gunboats when its radar system detected the Iranian airliner taking off from Bandar Abbas, where a large military airfield is located, Crowe and Carlucci said.

"It was only prudent for Capt. (Will) Rogers to assume that the (radar) contact was related to his engagement with the Iranian boats until proven otherwise," Crowe said.

"I believe that given the operating environment, Capt. Rogers acted reasonably and did what his nation expected of him."

MONTANA CITY, Mont. — Firefighters walk from a helicopter after being transported from a remote area of the Warm Springs Creek forest fire Friday. They had just finished a 12-hour shift.

Demands grow for crackdown on IRA

OMAGH, Northern Ireland (AP)

— Protestant lawmakers Saturday demanded that the government begin locking up guerrilla suspects without trial after the IRA blew up a busload of British troops, killing seven and wounding 28.

The car bomb blew a crater six feet deep in the road and hurled mutilated bodies into nearby fields. Witnesses saw one mangled soldier die on top of a bale of hay and another wrapped around a telephone pole.

The soldiers were returning from a holiday when the blast occurred.

Friday night's massacre dealt the British army in Northern Ireland its costliest single blow since 1982. It brought to 25 the military death toll in a summer IRA blitz in Ulster, mainland Britain and continental Europe.

The Irish Republican Army claimed responsibility Saturday in a statement to Irish media and vowed, "We will not lay down our arms until the peace of a British disengagement from Ireland is granted to our nation."

Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher broke off a holiday in Cornwall and flew to London to meet with Ken Maginnis, one of several Northern Ireland Protestant members of Parliament.

Coronado Hills Apartments— a home you can be proud of

When you take an apartment at Coronado Hills, you'll feel proud to move into a new home that has been totally renovated.

Paint is fresh and professionally done. And kitchens and baths are spotlessly clean, with any needed repairs attended to.

In addition, say managers Don and Sharon Minyard, you can depend on your apartment home being watched over by two full-time maintenance men. Their services are available day or night or weekend. What a comfort to busy residents.

The Minyards, who have been at their posts at Coronado Hills for almost a year, place a good deal of emphasis on providing an atmosphere of quiet and security. "Security is a high priority," says Sharon, and they are currently adding special locks and peep holes in the doors of each unit.

"We were impressed with the quality of the construction, the size of the rooms and the excellent maintenance. Coronado Hills has been synonymous with quality living in Big Spring for many years," says Sharon.

Residents at Coronado Hills, 801 Marcy, have access to a beautifully landscaped courtyard, swimming pool and party room. Apartment kitchens are furnished with frost-free refrigerator/freezers, disposal, dishwasher and range with eye-level oven. Gas and water are paid.

Two-bedroom studio apartments have one and one-half baths with a total of 1300 square feet of living space. They feature attached two-car covered parking and a large patio and outside storage. Connections for washer and dryer are available.

One-bedroom apartments, with 700 square

Don and Sharon Minyard, managers of living space, have large walk-in closets, outside storage and large patios. Tenants have front-door parking.

A small number of three-bedroom apartments are available, and there is usually a waiting list.

Dunbar gets best of Steers

By STEVE BELVIN
Sports Editor

LUBBOCK — The Big Spring Steers got their first taste of scrimmage action Friday night at Chapman Field, and the Dunbar Panthers outscored the Steers three touchdowns to zero.

Big Spring coach David Thompson called it a valuable learning experience.

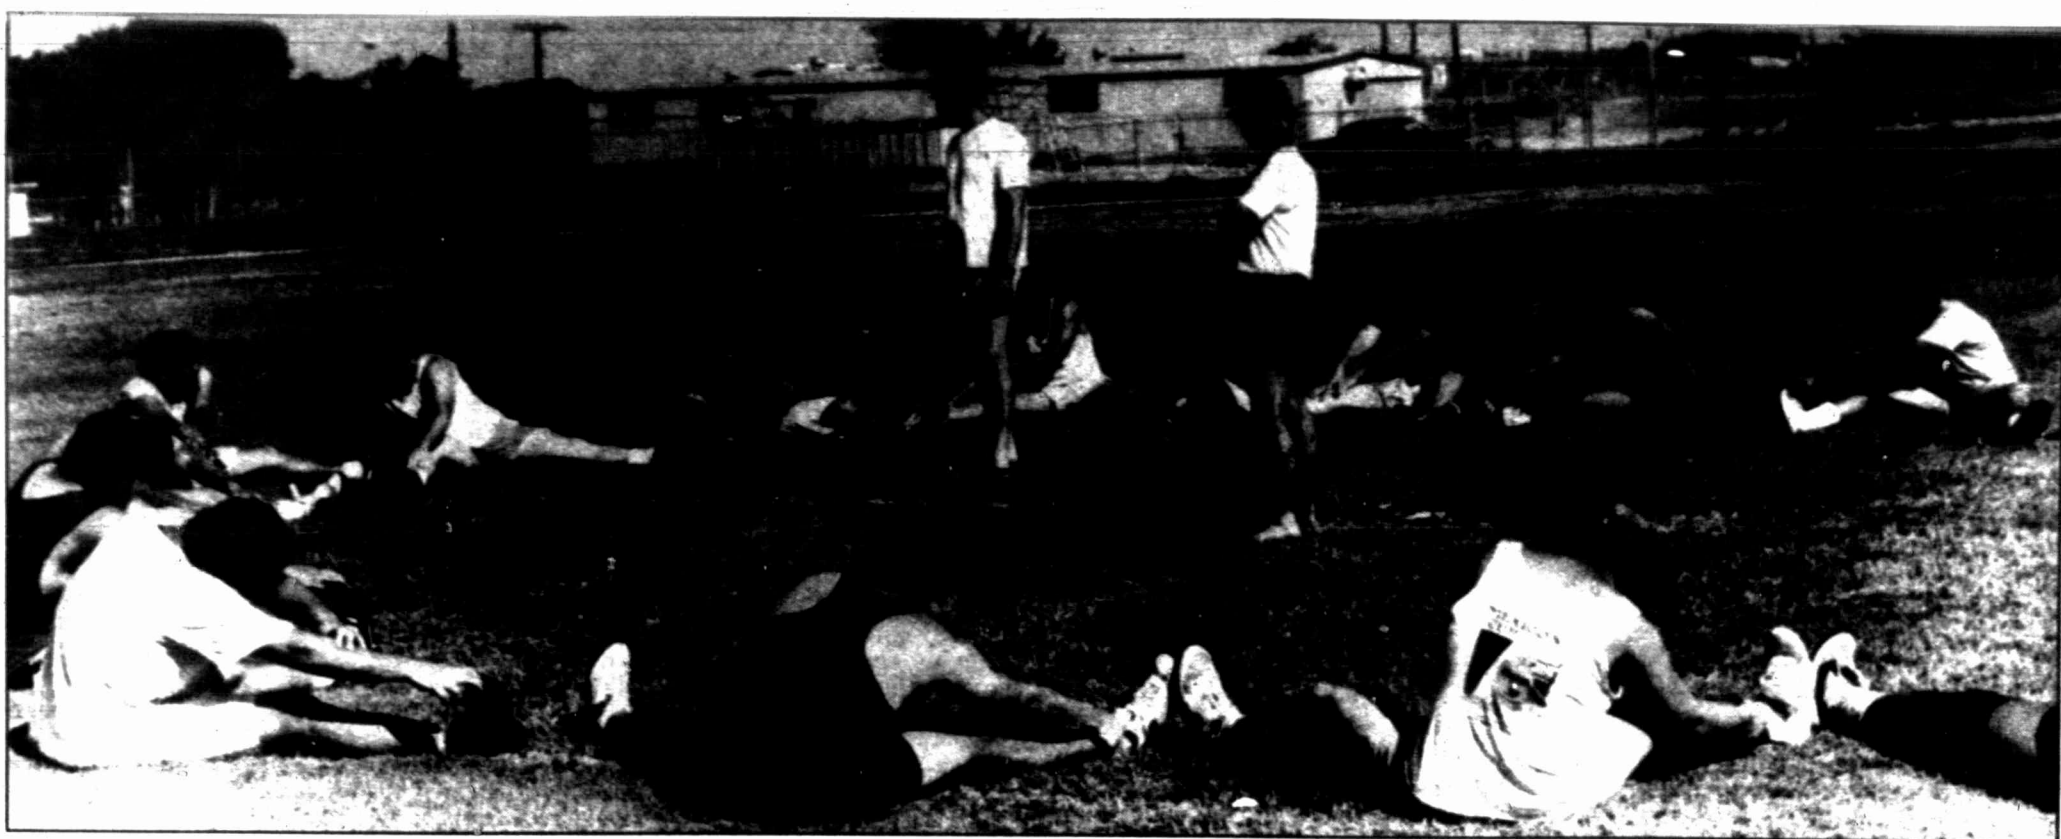

"I thought defensively, we played exceptionally well. Offensively we didn't play well at all," said Thompson. "I think they (Dunbar) took the scrimmage a little more seriously than we did. We saw the things we need to correct. The kids' effort was great. As long as we get that effort, we'll be all right."

In the battle between the first units, Dunbar outscored Big Spring 1-0. The Panthers, of District 1-4A, scored on a 20-yard run against the Big Spring first unit.

"It was one of those plays where we were there, we just missed the tackle. The kid did a good job of getting into the end zone too."

In the battle of the second units, Dunbar drove for a score, and tallied again on a long pass.

"The second unit defense played well, the offense sputtered," Thompson said. "Dunbar did a lot of stunting, we didn't pick it up. We played straight defense. It's one of those deals where we're trying to learn what we need to do. We as coaches have to be patient with the kids."

"I had no idea Dunbar would be as good as they were. I've been told in the past that they were an undisciplined team. They were not last night. They were a very good football team."

"But that's the purpose of the scrimmage, to find out what you need to work on. We need to work on blocking, backs hitting the hole, throwing and catching. That's what we need to do."

In the junior varsity scrimmage, Dunbar and Big Spring battled to a 1-1 standoff. Big Spring's score came on a 65-yard run by Neal Mayfield.

The Steers will continue two-a-day workouts through Tuesday. There will be single practices at 4 p.m. Wednesday and Thursday.

The Steers host Frenship in a scrimmage Friday at 7 p.m. Junior varsity action begins at 5 p.m. The freshmen travel to Frenship Thursday for a scrimmage at 5 p.m.

Seminole tabbed numero uno

By HERSCHEL NISSENSEN
AP Football Writer

The Florida State Seminoles, who thought they were the nation's best college football team a year ago but finished second because of a one-point loss to champion Miami, have been picked No. 1 to start the 1988 season.

With 10 teams receiving at least one first-place vote, Florida State was an overwhelming choice over Nebraska in the Associated Press preseason poll, with Miami finishing eighth, Florida State and Miami open the season against each other on Sept. 3.

The Seminoles received 44 of 60 first-place votes and 1,161 of a possible 1,200 points from a nationwide panel of sports writers and sportscasters. It is the first time Florida State has ever been ranked No. 1. Its previous high was last year's runnerup finish.

Nebraska, No. 6 last year, received two first-place votes and 952 points. The Cornhuskers open the season against 10th-ranked Texas A&M in the Kickoff Classic Aug. 27.

Oklahoma, the preseason No. 1 in each of the last three years, finished third this time, the same spot the Sooners wound up last season after a 20-14 Orange Bowl loss to Miami. Oklahoma received two first-place votes and 946 points.

Clemson was fourth, followed by UCLA, Southern California, Auburn, Miami, Iowa and Texas A&M.

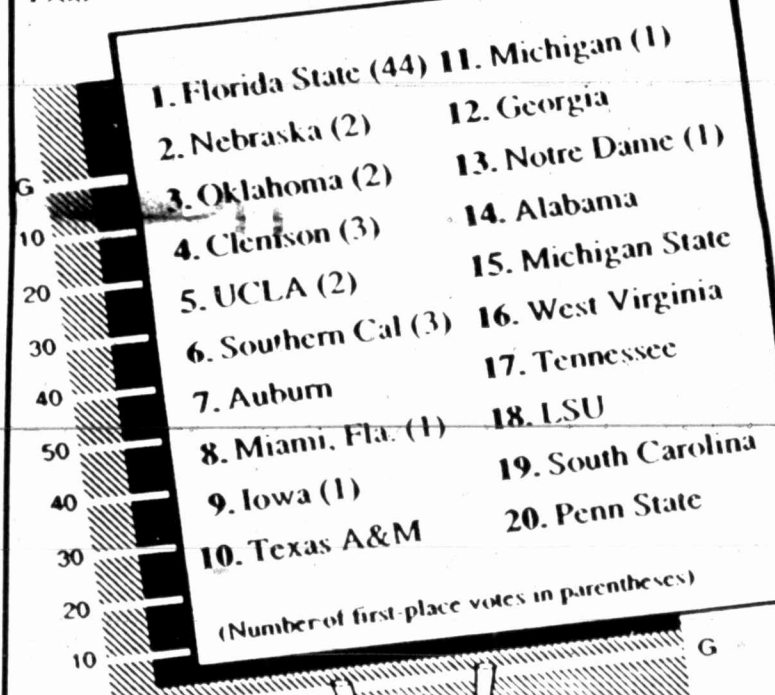

The Second Ten consists of Michigan, Georgia, Notre Dame, Alabama, Michigan State, West Virginia, Tennessee, LSU, South Carolina and Penn State.

"It's a first for us," Florida State Coach Bobby Bowden said. "We're used to reading about the Oklahoma, Alabamas, Southern Cal — folks like that. It's a privilege to be thought of in that light and we accept the challenge."

No team has ever held the No. 1 ranking from the preseason poll through the postbowl poll.

"Football is like war in that the element of surprise is the greatest thing you can have," Bowden said. "Once you're there (No. 1), you've lost the element of surprise."

Johnson changes plans

COLOGNE, West Germany (AP) — Ben Johnson's first loss to Carl Lewis in almost three years hasn't dimmed his confidence, but it has altered his plans.

In what was his biggest test since a serious hamstring injury, the Canadian sprinter showed he still has some work to do before the Seoul Olympics.

As longtime coach Charlie Francis described it, the world record holder ran a very "ragged" race in finishing third behind Lewis and Calvin Smith in their Zurich showdown on Wednesday night. So, instead of returning home after a Grand Prix meet here on Sunday, as he had planned, Johnson will stay for an event in West Berlin on Aug. 26 to sharpen his technique.

"I need the races," Johnson told a Toronto Star correspondent on Thursday. "Win or lose, I have to run to get myself into shape."

"There's no way I can avoid it. I wish I could do more meets, but there's not enough time."

While Johnson stays in Europe, Lewis will return to the United States after competing at a meet tonight in Brussels. The next time the rivals square off will be in Seoul.

After that, according to Johnson's manager Larry Heidebrecht, negotiations are underway for a post-Olympic match race between the two in Tokyo.

In the talks, the sprinters are each seeking "considerably more" than the $250,000 they reportedly received for Wednesday night's race. Heidebrecht said, revealing that a package agreed to prior to Johnson's injury would have netted them $500,000 apiece for three European match races this summer and $250,000 each for the post-Olympic duel.

"Financially, we will be looking for considerably more, because now it's a one-shot deal," he told the Associated Press.

"There are feelers out, but nothing has been confirmed yet. We're interested in doing it, and the Lewis side is interested in doing it. We would like to see it happen."

Pokes to host Bears

IRVING (AP) — The Dallas Cowboys believe they became a more potent offense in their 28th NFL training camp, but the defense suffered injuries it might not be able to overcome.

The Cowboys broke training camp on Saturday and will meet the Chicago Bears at 7 p.m. Monday in a nationally televised clash at Texas Stadium, the Cowboys' first home appearance of the year.

The Cowboys were 1-1 on the West Coast, losing a game they should have won against the San Diego Chargers and manhandling the Los Angeles Raiders 27-17 last week.

The Cowboys' offensive line made some big improvement during the six weeks in Thousand Oaks, Calif., although tackle Kevin Gogan was lost for a month on a non-football related problem.

Dave Widell, a fourth-round draft pick from Boston College, has moved into Gogan's spot with sensational results, handling veteran Raiders' defensive end Howard Long like he was a toy.

Guard Nate Newton's weight has plunged from the 350s to 312 and he was one of the highlights of camp.

Depth at center has become a worry with the loss of Bob White and George Lilja to injuries.

Tom Rafferty, an 11-year veteran, will have to carry a heavy load.

Also worrying offensive line coach Jim Erkenbeck are the shoulder problems of guard Jeff Zimmerman, who hasn't been able to work since the second week of training camp.

Dallas' running game has looked sharp behind Herschel Walker and Timmy Newsome. Rookie Mark Higgs, an eighth-round draft pick from Kentucky, has been impressive as both a kickoff return man and a backup tailback.

Rookie wide receiver Michael Irvin and second-year man Kelvin Martin may have won starting jobs.

Steve Pelluer has progressed at quarterback while Danny White and Kevin Sweeney have been impressive.

Defensively, injuries have Coach Tom Landry worried.

Linebackers Mike Hegman, Eugene Lockhart and Jeff Rohrer suffered injuries. Rohrer will miss the season with back surgery. Also, forced into retirement was Jesse Penn after Dallas doctors found a degenerative disc problem.

Rookie Ken Norton Jr., a second-round draft pick from UCLA, suffered a broken thumb.

As if that wasn't enough bad medical news, cornerback Ron Francis separated his shoulder and could miss the first two regular season games.

While Dallas is hurting at linebacker, the line has played well behind the leadership of Jim Jeffcoat and Ed Jones.

The Cowboys also were heartened by the return of Randy White, who will vacate his tackle spot to play end and perhaps some outside linebacker.

Kimball continues to dive well

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Dick Kimball is a father and a diving coach who saw his son recover from a near-fatal accident to win a silver medal in the Olympics.

Shari Wilson is a 18-year-old from Brandon, Fla. who saw a car preliminaries of the men's platform competition at the U.S. Olympic Diving Trials.

Bruce Kimball, the 1984 Olympic silver medalist in platform diving, is charged with five felony counts of driving under the influence in connection with the accident. He is free on $10,000 bond and scheduled to be arraigned Aug. 29.

Kimball said his son dove "extremely good" in placing third behind Olympic gold medalist Greg Louganis and Matt Scoggin during the prelims.

"He missed one dive and he hit nine outstanding dives," Dick Kimball said after the competition. His son is not speaking with the media on the advice of his attorney.

Kimball is hoping his son can at least move up to second in Sunday's finals to earn a trip to next month's Olympics in Seoul, South Korea.

"I'm not sure he's put it out of his mind," said Kimball of his son's accident. "As long as Bruce has dived, he's built a conditioned reflex. When he stands up there, he doesn't have to think about how to do the dive. I talk about that all the time with my divers, let your body do it, don't try to overthink and that's what Bruce is doing."

Wilson, one of six Brandon residents who are here protesting the younger Kimball's participation, sat silently and looked around

Fat farm does trick for 49er

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — When Bubba Paris returned to the San Francisco 49ers training camp after a mysterious absence early this month, he proclaimed he just spent "the most beneficial two weeks of my life."

The experience left him feeling fit and trim, and, he said, with new attitude about living.

The 49ers offensive tackle had been at the Pritikin Longevity Center in Santa Monica, where he shed at least 20 pounds from the 315 he checked in with.

Paris is not the only NFL player to use the services of what used to be called a "fat farm."

The Chicago Bears' William "Refrigerator" Perry is another, and there apparently are others.

Most football teams, citing a respect for privacy, are reluctant to discuss the circumstances of players who opt for a weight reduction program or are forced into one by the coaching staff.

Bears spokesman Ken Valdeserri acknowledged that Perry voluntarily checked into an undisclosed weight reduction and fitness program nearly two weeks ago.

"We certainly expect he'll be back with the team and will be ready to play," Valdeserri said.

Perry, whose other popular nickname is "Biscuit" (from a teammate's comment that he's just a biscuit away from weighing 350 pounds.) won't talk about his weight or absence.

Paris, though, was enthusiastic about his stay at the facility.

"A valuable experience; a chance to reevaluate my life," is the way he described it.

He joined dozens of other men and women in a program aimed at dropping weight that also seeks to change attitudes and behavior about nutrition and exercise.

"We are involved in lifestyle changes that not only help people lose weight and keep it off, but also provide steps to reduction of the risks of coronary disease, certain kinds of cancer and diseases like diabetes and high blood pressure," said Pritikin marketing director Robbie Gluckson.

Day after day, Paris panted through aerobic exercises and logged hundreds of miles on mechanical treadmills.

"Walking and walking and walking is an essential part of the Pritikin program," said Gluckson.

So are numerous lectures extolling the virtues of a program that combines exercise with a diet extremely low in fat and cholesterol and rich in complex carbohydrates found in vegetables and pasta and fiber.

"I will benefit from the experience, forever," said Paris.

Paris, the 49ers' first-round draft pick in 1982, emphasized his weight wasn't his only concern.

"I'm not trying to make a certain weight for the 49ers, what I'm trying to do is improve the quality of my life," he said.

Coach Bill Walsh indicated the usual fine for missing training camp would be waived.

"We're just pleased to have him back in a good frame of mind," said Walsh. "We're proud of his accomplishments; he looks trim."

Assistant 49ers coach Jerry Attaway, who directs conditioning and physical development for the team, would not reveal how many pounds the offensive lineman shed.

"I'd say that lots of other players, like Bubba, are eating smarter than they used to," he said. In talking with colleagues on the coaching staffs of other NFL teams, he's discovered that many football players are cutting down on "unhealthy foods" such as excessive fats and salt.

The NFL's has no league-wide policy on nutrition or exercise. "It's up to each individual club," said league spokesman Jim Heffernan.

But Attaway said he believes several teams have adopted nutrition and exercise guidelines similar to those advocated by Pritikin.

"Lots of people mistake the Pritikin Center for a fat farm," said Paris. "It's, like the name says, a 'longevity center.'"

"One of the things they do is show you the effects of having a certain lifestyle. For me, if I hadn't changed some things the effect could have been that I wouldn't have been able to see my (twin) 10-month old girls graduate from high school," he said.

intently whenever Kimball went to the platform. They cheered every diver but Kimball.

Earlier, the group, wearing pink T-shirts that had various slogans like "We Can't Escape Reality" on the front and the message "Remember The Victims" on their backs, held a news conference to protest his competition.

Wilson didn't speak during the news conference. She went off to the side and sat down alone, but broke into tears as a gory letter describing the accident scene in detail was read.

"She saw everything that happened and it's hard for her to deal with it," said Jennifer Beck, 17. "We all have to deal with this terrible event for the rest of our lives. We went to school with the victims. They were our friends and schoolmates in a small community."

U.S. Diving, the national governing body for the sport, has said it cannot ban Kimball from competing at the trials or in the Olympics if he qualifies.

"I understand that there's been a lot of controversy of our coming here," said Cherie Beck, Jennifer's mother, of the group, which traveled 1,000 miles in 18 hours to attend Thursday's opening of the men's competition. "It was not our intention to disrupt in any way, shape or form to disrupt the tryouts."

She said Lebo wrote to her because "She strongly feels that Bruce Kimball most certainly did something wrong and she does not feel that he will be taking the place of someone more deserving (in the Olympics) of representing the American people."

Beck said the national Mothers Against Drunk Driving was not

Rangers edge Twins, 3-2

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Steve Buechele's two-run homer in the seventh inning rallied the Texas Rangers to a 3-2 victory over Minnesota Saturday night and prevented Twins left-hander Frank Viola from becoming the major league's first 20-game winner this season.

Viola, 19-5 and seeking his 100th career victory, allowed seven hits in his seventh complete game but was outdueled by Paul Kilgus, 10-11. Kilgus gave up six hits in 7 1-3 innings and Mitch Williams finished for his 16th save, allowing no hits.

Viola, who has lost only twice in 22 decisions at the Metrodome since May 22, 1987, walked Mike Stanley on a 3-2 pitch leading off the seventh. It was one of two walks issued by Viola, who had a season-high 10 strikeouts.

Buechele, who entered the game with a .207 career batting average against Viola, hit the next pitch over the left-field fence for his 14th home run. Buechele was in a 5-for-41 slump before the homer.

In beating the Twins for the third straight game, Texas stopped Minnesota from cutting into the Oakland Athletics' eight-game lead in the American League West. The fifth-place Rangers last won three straight June 19-21.

Brian Harper and Kent Hrbek singled with one out, putting runners on first and third.

Ryan gets no support — again

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The Pittsburgh Pirates' linescore after 5 2-3 innings was no runs, no hits, no errors and no fear.

Jose Lind's two-run single in the sixth chased Nolan Ryan, who had pitched 5 2-3 perfect innings, and John Smiley allowed five hits in seven innings for his first victory in six weeks as the Pirates beat the Houston Astros 2-1 Saturday.

The victory moved the second-place Pirates to within 3½ games of the idle New York Mets in the National League East.

"Nolan Ryan is a great pitcher, one of the all-time greats, but nobody was going out there saying, 'Uh oh, he can throw a no-hitter,'" said Barry Bonds, who broke up Ryan's no-hitter. "You've got to get yourself out of that mind game... and try to approach it like you were facing any other pitcher."

"I wasn't worried (about a no-hitter) because we always seem to score more after the sixth or seventh inning," Smiley said.

Ryan, 9-11, who has pitched a major-league record five no-hitters, retired the first 17 batters until walking Smiley on a 3-1 pitch in the sixth. Bonds singled to center to break up the no-hitter — the Pirates' first hit in 11 innings — and took second on the play when center fielder Gerald Young just missed throwing Smiley out at third.

Lind followed Bonds' hit with a single, scoring Smiley and Bonds and bringing on reliever Larry Andersen. Ryan, who has pitched only one complete game in 27 starts, departed with a twisted back suffered backing up the plate on Lind's hit.

Smiley, 10-8, had been winless in six starts since July 7 and had lost four decisions in a row after winning six straight. He didn't allow a hit until Billy Hatcher's one-out double in the fourth and pitched out of a two-on, one-out jam in the seventh.

"I really wanted to win because after a while you start second-guessing yourself about your pitches, even if you're throwing well," Smiley said.

After Hatcher's double, Smiley hit Glenn Davis on the left shoulder with a pitch and Hatcher stole third. Davis was forced at second on Buddy Bell's sharply hit ball that ricocheted off Smiley's glove to shortstop Al Pedrique, with Hatcher scoring on the play.

Gott pitched the final two innings for his 23rd save in 27 opportunities, allowing one hit.

Boxer dies after bout

SAN JOSE, Calif. (AP) — A 22-year-old Los Angeles boxer died in a hospital Saturday a day after suffering a cerebral hemorrhage while being knocked out as he defended his state lightweight title.

Rico Velazquez was declared dead at 5:10 p.m. PDT after a life support system was removed with his family's consent, said San Jose Hospital spokeswoman Christi Welter. He had been declared brain-dead at about 3:30 p.m.

Dr. Jeff Gutman, who helped care for Velazquez following a two-hour operation Saturday morning to drain his blood clots, said the injury was caused by a sharp, sudden motion that tore veins in Velazquez's brain. He said it may have resulted from a single blow.

"He had a cerebral hemorrhage that caused brain swelling that ended his life," Gutman said. "We did everything we could, but his brain was too badly injured."

Velazquez, of Baldwin Park, collapsed seconds after referee Henry Elespuru had stepped in to stop the fight in the eighth round Friday night at the San Jose Civic Auditorium against 19-year-old challenger David Gonzales. He had taken a battering throughout the bout.

"I asked him how he felt," said Elespuru. "He told me he was fine."

supporting her protest because the group didn't want to disrupt the event. The group of Florida residents has caused no disruptions at the competition.

"I knew they were there. I don't know if Bruce did," said the elder Kimball, who slept by his son's hospital bed for 30 days when the younger Kimball was recovering from serious injuries he received in a early 1982 traffic accident when Bruce's car was struck by a drunken driver.

Kimball has said he had four beers before the recent accident.

Cherie Beck said that her group had collected some 5,000 signatures on petitions asking that Kimball not be allowed to compete in the Olympics. She plans to send copies of the petitions to the U.S. Olympic Committee, U.S. Diving, sponsors of the Olympics and to President Reagan.

Golden Bear raises career winnings to five million

CASTLE ROCK, Colo. (AP) — Jack Nicklaus reached the $5 million mark in career earnings Saturday, but a 17th-hole fiasco cost him a place in the final round of the International Golf Tournament.

Nicklaus appeared to have a berth in the finals sewed up until he chopped up the par-5 17th, probably the easiest hole he designed on the Castle Pines Golf Club course.

Instead of having a qualifying spot in his hands, he had the ball in his hands after hitting two unplayable shots.

"I've had enough of this hole," he said, put an "X" on his card and went on.

Under the modified Stableford scoring system used for this tournament, a double bogey, and anything higher, costs a player three points. In Nicklaus' case, he dropped from seven points and a berth in the 18-man final round to four points.

He needed to birdie the final hole to have any chance and ran a 20-foot putt some five feet beyond the cup, then missed it coming back for a three-putt bogey that left him with three points.

Nicklaus finished in a four-way tie for 34th, worth $5,275 from the total purse of $1 million. That was enough to make him the first man to reach $5 million in career earnings. He's now at $5,002,825.

Nicklaus also was the first to reach $2 million, $3 million and $4 million in official PGA Tour earnings.

But he said Saturday's round was one that would stick in his memory.

"One of the oddest rounds of golf I've ever played," Nicklaus said.

He finished with six birdies, three bogeys, one double bogey and one "X." There were three unplayable lies, two left-handed shots, one hit spectator and one shot in the water.

He had to hit one shot left-handed and one putt for bogey-6 on the first hole. He had an unplayable lie and made double bogey on the third, dropping him to minus-4 after three holes under the scoring system that provides five points for an eagle, two for birdie, zero for par, minus-1 for bogey and minus-3 for double bogey and higher.

Nicklaus, however, battled back, was plus-1 at the turn then birdied three of four holes, beginning on the 13th.

That gave him seven points and apparently put him well on his way into Sunday's final round.

But his drive on the 17th hit a spectator on the top of the head on the right and bounced deep into bushes.

Nicklaus waded in after it, found he had no place to drop it and attempted to play a left-handed shot out. "It hit a limb and went further in the bushes. Now I was unplayable," he said.

He dropped into a poor lie between rocks. His next shot, his fourth, hit another tree limb and dropped again into an unplayable position.

He picked it up at that point and went on his way.

Bruce Lietzke led the 18 qualifiers with 14 points, marking the second time in as many years he's tied the tournament record and putting him in the finals for the third consecutive year.

Jodie Mudd and Ben Crenshaw each had 13 points.

Daniels holding slim lead

SOMERS POINT, N.J. (AP) — First-round leader Beth Daniel used some excellent bunker play to post a 2-under par on the front nine Saturday and held a two-stroke edge over Debbie Massey in the uncompleted second round of the LPGA Atlantic City Classic.

The round was suspended twice for almost 3½ hours when a steady rain made some greens unplayable and play was finally called by darkness with 64 of the 131 players still on the course.

Daniel, who had an opening-round 66, did not tee off until 5:20 p.m. EDT and was only able to play nine holes before play was called as she stood ready to tee off on No. 10. She was 7 under par after 27 holes.

Massey, who started the day at 2-under, drew to within one stroke after rolling in a 9-foot birdie on No. 9. But she bogeyed No. 10 and was at 5-under.

Those who did not complete their rounds were scheduled to resume play at 7:30 a.m. Sunday. The field will be cut to the low 70 and ties for the final round.

Daniel, who has not won a tournament in three years, played her front nine on the Sands Country Club in 2-under-par 34 with both birdies coming after she hit into bunkers. The first came at the par-4, 385-yard No. 5 hole when she chipped in from a greenside bunker from about 40 feet.

On the par-5 seventh hole, Daniel hit her second shot into the bunker, left her shot out of the bunker on the lip of the cup and tapped in for a birdie.

Massey had four birdies and a bogey, with three of the birdies coming on par-3 holes. Her bogey resulted when she pulled her 6-iron into the bunker on the par-3 10th hole.

Martha Nause, who started the round at 4-under, played the front nine in even par and was three shots behind Daniel, along with defending champion Betsy King, who started the day at 1-under and had four birdies and a bogey in 10 holes.

Sandra Palmer was at 3-under-par through No. 11.

Moody leading senior play

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. (AP) — Orville Moody sank seven birdie putts and missed only one green in regulation Saturday, shooting a 6-under-par 65 to go 9-under and grab the second-round lead at the $250,000 Greater Grand Rapids Open.

Moody has a two-day total of 133, good for a one-shot lead over first-day leader Chi Chi Rodriguez and Harold Henning.

Defending champion Billy Casper and Jim Ferree, who won this tournament in 1986, were two shots off the lead at 7-under 135. Bobby Nichols was next at 6-under 136.

Moody started his nearly flawless performance with birdies on the first two holes of the Elks Country Club course. He came back with birdies on the 4th and 5th holes as well.

After firing a 4-under 32 on the front nine, Moody, who came into this tourney third on the Senior Tour money list, dropped a 20-foot birdie putt on No. 10. Moody also birdied Nos. 12 and 16.

Moody finished at the 18th hole with his lone bogey of the day. He overshot the green and then missed an 18-foot putt for par.

Henning, who shot a 67 in Friday's opening round, duplicated that score to stay close.

Rodriguez played back into contention with two birdies in the final four holes. He hit a 12-foot birdie putt on 17, closing to within one shot of Moody.

The 54-hole event concludes Sunday.

Opinion

Fix the bumps and bruises; then get back into the car

By HAL BÖCK
AP Sports Writer

Consider the implications of starting 500 consecutive auto races.

Think about being there week after week, hands squeezing the steering wheel, eyes darting to the left and right, looking for danger and deciding how to avoid it. You barrel around the corners into the straightaways for a couple of hours, then do it again at the next stop, sometimes finishing, sometimes crashing, sometimes winning, sometimes losing, always there.

Richard Petty, the man they call "King" on the NASCAR circuit, weighed the number for a moment and then grinned broadly. "Five hundred," he said slowly, drawing the number out. "Most don't run that many in a lifetime."

Petty not only has run that many, but he's done it consecutively. When he lines up for Sunday's Winston Cup race at Brooklyn, Mich., it will be his 500th straight start. The last time he missed a race was 18 years ago.

"Dislocated left shoulder," Petty recalled. "Broke my right shoulder at Daytona in 1986, but I ran the next week. We taped it up and away we went."

That is Petty's philosophy. Bandage up the bumps and bruises and get back into the car. "It's nothin' macho or anything like that," he said. "It's just my job."

It is a rough and tumble job, perhaps best evidenced by the crash Petty came through in February at Daytona.

"It was the most spectacular wreck I've ever been in. I got tapped in the rear of a corner and the car got sideways. A.J. (Foyt) hit the left front and it turned over."

And over, and over again.

Then Brett Bodine blew a tire and careened into Petty's car, sending it up in the air. It hit on its nose and did some Baryshnikov pirouettes from that precarious position, spilling pieces of twisted metal all over the track.

Inside the machine, Petty's mind raced.

"I didn't know I had turned over until later," he said. "I remember getting sideways and thinking, 'Richard, hold on to the wheel!' You're going 180 mph. It didn't take as long to happen as it takes for me to tell you about it. I remember it hitting three times."

When the car finally stopped, Petty climbed out. "I put my hand up to the windshield. But the windshield wasn't there."

Miraculously, he came out of that adventure with nothing more than a bruised ankle. That was no threat to the streak. The broken neck at Pocono in 1980 was another matter, though.

"It wasn't the first time I broke it," Petty said, "just the first time I knew I broke it. The doctor looked at the X-rays and asked me when I broke it before. I just looked at him and said, 'Huh?'"

"That scared me the most. Broken ribs, shoulders, ankles, that stuff, you might just mangle 'em up some more, but a broken neck ... phew."

Petty is matter-of-fact about crashes, accepting the premise that if you are going to race, sooner or later you are going to wreck. He learned that lesson the first time he started a Winston Cup race 30 years ago.

His father, Lee Petty, and Cotton Owens were dueling for the lead. As they were about to lap Richard, the new kid on the block found himself massaging the wall. "Daddy put me there," he said, his eyes dancing at the memory. "He told me later I had to learn to get out of the way quicker."

Petty did, of course, well enough to win a record 200 races. Now 51 and winless for four years, he seems to be a little old for this sort of stuff. There is, however, no thought of retirement. "I'm looking for No. 501," he said, "and No. 201."

"I don't think of myself as a daredevil. I calculate everything. I try to weigh the odds. It's not a death-wish situation. You tempt fate when you walk out the door. You tempt it all the time. You don't challenge it, though."

The agreement Petty has with his wife, Lynda, is that he will quit racing when he no longer enjoys it and doesn't find any fun at the track.

"At Daytona, she looked at me on the examining table and said, 'Tell me you're having fun.'"

I said, 'Not right now, but I was until I wrecked.'

Is speed better than power? boxers can's seem to agree

NEW YORK (AP) — Speed vs. power

That's the key to the Nov. 7 fight between Sugar Ray Leonard and Donny Lalonde, the World Boxing Council's light heavyweight champion.

"Speed will always defeat power," Leonard said Thursday. "Power overcomes anything," Lalonde countered.

If Leonard is right, he could become the first boxer to win titles in five weight classes. If he's wrong, Lalonde will add the new WBC super middleweight crown to his light heavyweight title.

Both belts will be up for grabs when they meet in a 15,300-seat outdoor arena next to Caesars Palace in Las Vegas, Nev.

Although they praised each other, smiled and posed for pictures together at a news conference, both boxers will be deadly serious on fight night.

"This fight means security for me and my family for the rest of my life," Lalonde said. "It's a chance to fulfill my potential, and I don't intend to blow it."

Leonard, who is making his third comeback since 1984, is also ready to rumble.

"I don't care who I fight," he said. "I can fight Mike Tyson and beat Mike Tyson."

Leonard isn't a heavyweight, but he thinks like one. No opponent is too big for him.

"People keep asking me why I continue to fight," said Leonard, whose only loss in 35 bouts was to Roberto Duran in 1980. "It's quite simple — I enjoy it. I enjoy the challenge."

His next challenge will be to beat a fighter who is taller, heavier and younger than he is.

Leonard is 32 years old, 5-foot-10 and 157 pounds "after a good breakfast." Lalonde is 28, 6-2 and weighed the light heavyweight limit of 175 pounds for his last fight, a fifth-round knockout of Leslie Stewart on May 29.

The weight limit for the Nov. 7 bout is 168 pounds.

There's nothing like football season in Oklahoma

By OWEN CANFIELD
AP Sports Writer

Oklahoma State coach Pat Jones joked after a media day golf tournament that "one thing that's gonna be investigated around here are some of these scores."

Barry Switzer, down the road at Oklahoma, was asked about reports that a Sooners assistant had paid Hart Lee Dykes, regarded as one of the nation's top recruits, $1,000 to attend Oklahoma.

"My first thought was 'Was that all?'" Switzer said with a laugh.

Ahh, there's nothing like football season in Oklahoma.

Particularly this year, because both schools are under investigation by the NCAA.

At Oklahoma, the NCAA said infractions ranged from alleged payments to recruits to coaches allowing athletes to borrow their cars. The allegations are said to be along the same lines at Oklahoma State, which unlike Oklahoma has not made public the NCAA's official letter of inquiry.

Much of the preseason talk at the schools dealt not with how to replace players who have graduated or the strength of each team's schedule, but how soon the NCAA will lower the boom.

"One of the problems of this process is that all the innuendos ... the offshoot of some of those are worse than the actual results," Jones said.

"I don't think anybody's proud of this. We're not. OU's not. But the stuff I have no control over I don't worry about."

At Oklahoma State, many of the allegations reportedly involve the dealings of the team's former recruiting coordinator, Willie Anderson. Anderson was dismissed from the staff early in 1986 after the Big Eight Conference passed what was nicknamed the "Willie Anderson Rule," which expressly forbids conference coaches from slinging mud at other member schools.

That rule was passed following a recruiting season in which Oklahoma coaches, particularly Switzer, accused Anderson of trashing the Sooners during visits with recruits.

"The worst kind of cheating is where it's organized or directed in some way," said Myron Roderick, athletic director at Oklahoma State. "Whenever the NCAA comes in ... there are probably going to be some violations no matter where it's at."

"It's something you don't want, but you can't cry over spilt milk. You've got to face up to it and face the penalties and go full blast ahead."

"There's some very positive things that will come out of the investigation. The NCAA came in here and thoroughly investigated us, and we wanted the truth out. We know there was nothing organized," Roderick said.

The University of Oklahoma, pressed by media groups who wanted access to the NCAA's official letter of inquiry, released a summarized list of the allegations. Many infractions centered on recruits — an alleged $1,000 payment to one (unnamed); free T-shirts and air fare to others.

Since the summary was released, things quieted down somewhat while the university and its team of attorneys prepare a response to the NCAA.

"I don't want to minimize the importance ... but contrasting ours with others, it could be worse," said athletic director Donnie Duncan.

Do the investigations mean the schools will open the seasons with black eyes?

"How about Texas?" Switzer asked. "Is everybody looking at it like a black cloud hanging over Texas? I don't think anything about it. ... I'm not embarrassed at all about our allegations."

While the coaches and players at Oklahoma and Oklahoma State wait for the NCAA's final judgment, they also try to keep their minds focused on what challenges they'll face on the field.

"We've got to be mature enough to handle strange things anyway," Jones said. "If it wasn't this, it would be something else. We've got to be good enough to handle it."

Said Switzer: "It doesn't affect the players at all, not at all. It's a distraction (for me) sometimes, but we have people that handle that. I'm not involved in that."

Still, as Roderick said: "I could have been a better summer if it didn't happen."

It looks like Dragonfly has upper hand

By The Associated Press

The launching of the two yachts representing New Zealand and the United States in the 27th contest for the America's Cup has rekindled the interest of a public bored into stupefaction by complicated court actions, bitter recriminations, uncertainty and backroom infighting.

At this stage, nothing is certain in this bizarre match. The date for the formal races between the disparate pair has not yet been set. In fact, the races may not take place at all, depending on the result of a court action to be decided in New York.

One of the few statements that can be made with certainty is that we now have with us two of the fastest and most technologically advanced sailboats in the world. New Zealand merchant banker

Michael Fay's unexpected piratical raid on the cup with the largest racing sloop built in the last 50 years brought a broadside from the San Diego Yacht Club, characterized in the words of champion skipper Dennis Conner: "Americans do not respond passively to sneak attacks."

The yacht club, through Sail America, the tax-exempt foundation which is managing the cup defense on its behalf, fired off its first salvo by announcing that it was commissioning the design of a high-tech catamaran only a fraction of the size of Fay's yacht. The cup would be protected from the marauding eagle by a mere dragonfly.

Fay's challenger is simply the largest sailing dinghy ever built. Her lightweight hull is ballasted largely by the crew, numbering between 35 and 55, depending on the wind strength, who scramble on to projecting wings to increase their leverage. Miles of electrical wiring connects sensors in the hull and the towering 16-story mast to computers and gauges indicating the stresses generated in the rig. Built at a cost of $4.4 million, she incorporates all that is state-of-the-art in design concept and fabrication technology.

Sail America, opting for efficiency over brute force, went to Burt Rutan, designer of the world-girdling Voyager aircraft, an asked him to design a radical solid wing to power a 60-foot, twin-hulled catamaran, instead of a mast and sail. Rutan and British-born Dave Hubbard used space-age materials to produce an ultra-light, 90-foot airfoil resembling a Boeing 757 wing, with six panels capable of being trimmed individually for maximum efficiency.

Stars & Stripes has a deck of netting between the two hulls, and carries a crew of five to seven.

The apparent simplicity of this oversized Hobiecat belies the technical advances made by her designers and builders. No catamaran of her size ever built has harnessed such power from the wind. By rights, her 30-knot potential ought to be more than enough to ensure victory but, like most catamarans, she is more prone than a monohull to capsize and to suffer gear failure. Assuming court permission, the contest between American's dragonfly and New Zealand's eagle will capture the rapt attention of uncounted millions around the globe.

AL Notes

Baltimore
Left hander Gordon Dillard, who made his first major league start on Wednesday night, was optioned to Rochester of the Class AAA International League. The Orioles recalled right hander Mark Williamson. Jeff Ballard pitched his second consecutive complete game, leading the Orioles past Oakland 10-1 Thursday night. He did not allow a runner past first base after the fourth inning.

Boston
Lee Smith has at least one strikeout in 27 consecutive appearances. He has 16 strikeouts in his last 8 1/3 innings. Boston lost two of three games to Seattle this week, its first series loss at Fenway Park since the Red Sox were swept by Toronto from June 2-5.

California
Right hander Kirk McCaskill was placed on the 15-day disabled list retroactive to Aug. 9 because of a nerve irritation in his arm and the Angels recalled Jack Lazorko from Class AAA Edmonton of the Pacific Coast League. McCaskill, 8-6 with a 4.31 earned run average, tried to throw prior to the Angels game against New York Thursday night but could not. McCaskill also had arm troubles last season when he was sidelined with bone chips.

Chicago White Sox
Melido Perez leads the White Sox in victories with 11 and strikeouts with 96. He is the first White Sox rookie to lead since Britt Burns and Rich Dotson did it in 1980.

Cleveland
Brook Jacoby has drawn at least one walk in eight straight games, totaling 11 walks in that period. But Jacoby is 7-for-59 in his last 19 games, a .119 average. ... Second baseman Julio Franco was out of the starting lineup Thursday for the third straight game because of a sore back.

Minnesota
Right hander Tom Candiotti was activated from the 15-day disabled list and the Indians optioned right hander Chris Codrilli to Class AAA Colorado Springs of the Pacific Coast League. Candiotti was placed on the disabled list Aug. 4 because of stiffness in his right shoulder. He is 8-4 with a 3.68 ERA and 10 complete games in 22 starts this year. Codrilli was 0-4 with a 9.31 ERA in 14 games for Cleveland, including two starts. He started the year with the Indians, was sent to Colorado Springs on May 17 and was recalled by Cleveland on Aug. 7.

Detroit
Tigers relievers have converted 27 of 32 save situations. Detroit has won 14 games in its final at bat.

Texas
Cecil Espy is in a 3-for-31 slump over his last 10 games. Outfielder Barbaro Garbey was activated from the 15-day disabled list and the Rangers optioned Larry See to Oklahoma City of the Class AAA American Association. Garbey had been sidelined with a pulled rib-cage muscle.

Milwaukee
Paul Molitor has reached base on a hit or a walk in 22 consecutive games, going 28-for-83, a .337 average, with five homers and 14 RBI. Greg Brock had a hit or a walk in 16 consecutive games but was only 11-for-55, a .200 average. He went 0-for-1 as a pinch hitter Thursday night.

Minnesota
Milwaukee pitchers have thrown up the fewest walks in the American League (.318) while Brewers batters have drawn the fewest (.320).

New York Yankees
Right hander Dave Eiland was optioned to Columbus of the Class AAA International League and the Yankees recalled first baseman-outfielder Hal Morris. In three starts, Eiland was 0-0 with a 6.39 ERA. Morris, 23, was with the Yankees earlier this year when his contract was purchased from Columbus. He made his major league debut as a pinch hitter and singled off Toronto's Duane Ward. After returning to Columbus, Morris hit .368, going 21-for-57. ... The Yankees are close to getting pitchers Charles Hudson and Ron Guidry back from the disabled list and are also talking to several teams about the possibility of acquiring some pitching help. Owner George Steinbrenner said, however, the club would not part with future talent for immediate help. "We've done it before, we've sacrificed our future," Steinbrenner said. "You have to remember one thing, we're only one game out in the losing column. Teams always hold up their teams in a pennant race but they hold up the Yankees even more."

Oakland
Fans making early reservations for 1989 Oakland Athletics season tickets will have an option to buy tickets for any post season games the team plays this year. Andy Dolich, the team's vice president for business operations, said that there already have been many inquiries from fans about the availability of playoff and World Series tickets. "The plan we've developed affords both new and existing season ticket holders a chance to be a part of the post season excitement should we win," Dolich said. Outfielder Stan Javier was placed on the 15-day disabled list by the Oakland Athletics and catcher Matt Snider was recalled from Class AAA Tacoma of the Pacific Coast League. Javier has a sprained left wrist. Since aggravating the injury on Aug. 10, he has batted only once, taking a called third strike in the ninth inning of Wednesday's game against the Baltimore Orioles. Snider will be joining the Athletics for the third time this season.

Seattle
Mark Langston has given up 16 home runs in most in the major leagues.

On the road 'I meet some interesting folks'

By TUMBLEWEED SMITH
Every once in awhile someone will say to me, "I'll just bet you stay on the road all the time. Are you ever home?"

Are you kidding? I started this interviewing business so I could stay home and have a leisurely schedule. The truth is I travel less than one day a week.

I've just returned from a trip to the Panhandle. I left Tuesday morning at 6 and got to Borger at 11 a.m. I made a few phone calls, went to lunch and started interviewing at 1:30. By 8 p.m. I had completed a dozen interviews.

The next day I went to Pampa, Miami, Canadian and Darrrouzett. Five more interviews.

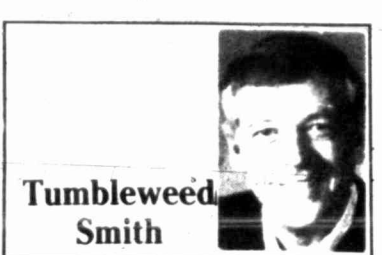

On Thursday I did four interviews in Perryton and two more in Spearman.

I spent Friday in Dumas. My first interview was at 8:30 a.m. By 3 p.m. I had completed seven interviews and headed home, where I arrived before dark.

Let's see... that's a total of 30 interviews. If I use one every week-day, I don't have to go back on the road for weeks.

So see, I don't travel all that much. But I do meet some interesting folks. Like Slim Harrel. He was a barber during the wild oil boom days in Borger. He still has his chair set up in a part of his den which looks like a small barber shop, where he reads magazines and occasionally cuts the hair of an old friend.

CRIMESTOPPERS

Tumbleweed Smith
I also interviewed Becky King in Borger. In 1980, she and her husband both taught school in Dalhart. During summers they would load up their kids in a camper trailer and go to Connecticut or Vermont and take Shakespeare courses. She became interested in getting kids from poor families to go to school and that led to an interest in county government. She soon was county judge.

When her husband took a job with a bank in Post, she became city manager there. She got interested in law enforcement and took a law enforcement course.

When her husband went to Borger to become President of a bank, she took on another challenge. She enrolled in Texas Tech's school of law and graduated last year. She is now assistant DA in Amarillo, where she commutes every day from her home in Borger. She is 49 years old.

During the last 8 years she went from school teacher to county judge to city manager to assistant DA. She doesn't know what's next, but she's looking forward to whatever it may be.

I think Canadian is the prettiest city in the Panhandle. It has hills like San Francisco and lots of trees. The Canadian river runs nearby. Although it is a small city, it has lots of class.

Every year, Dr. Malott Abraham, Jr. gives 200 trees to residents of Canadian. He has done this for ten years. The only stipulation is the trees must be planted within the city limits of Canadian. He is responsible for many of the huge trees in this city and enjoys driving around and looking at them.

He is very interested in towns and gardens and last summer went to France to study landscape architecture. He lives in a church he and his wife remodeled.

Becky King and Dr. Abraham seem to be sending the message, "You can always learn new things and you should. It makes for a richer life."

Among the interviews I got on this last trip was a young man who started raising llamas and ostriches because he didn't have enough land to raise cattle. Then there's a report on Gary George Perryton who has started growing pinto beans in a big way. A lady in Spearman has patented a process of copying photographs onto material. A couple outside Dumas takes care of wounded birds. A locksmith in Dumas is named "Five Thumbs" and helps people who flush their car keys down the commode at McDonald's. And a knife maker... and there's more and more.

BUSINESS & INDUSTRY REVIEW

Edited by Lea Whitehead

It's back-to-Hester's — then it's back-to-school

Lisa Hilger, left, and Janet Hull inspect the variety of notebooks available at Hester's Back-to-School Supplies corner. Lisa likes the popular see-thru ring binder, while Janet's choice is a feline-theme binder with snap closing.

It's back-to-school time — but first it's back-to-Hester's.

From kindergarten to college, students and teachers alike depend on Hester's for their supplies. The store has set up a back-to-school corner, where all supplies are gathered in one place for the shopper's convenience.

There's all the basics such as glue, rulers, spiral notebooks, paper clips, mechanical pens, index notebook dividers and Big Chief tablets.

Then there are the newest items. According to Janet Hull, some of the new must-have items for the up-to-date student are floppy notebooks, and see-thru ring binders (you just slip-in memos, favorite photos or pencils) with the popular press-close zipper. The new erasable pen (erasable up to 72 hours!) and a liquid paper correction pen will surely come in handy.

Hester's has the hard-to-find supplies, too. This includes biology and art drawing paper, water color sets and metric rulers.

Teachers are sure to appreciate poster putty, a product that can be used to tape posters and other lightweight items to the wall. No tape or tacks are needed — and when it's removed, it won't damage painted surfaces. In addition, teachers' plan books have just arrived.

Folders with inside pockets, and zipper pockets that fit into notebooks are other items to help students and teachers organize their work.

Hester's has spectacular fluorescent poster boards in pulsating colors — yellow, orange, red glow, chartreuse and pink glow — in addition to regular colors.

Highlighter pens — so important for marking notes — are available in nine colors, including fluorescents.

Crep paper streamers in many colors to be used on homecoming floats have arrived early this year, says Janet.

And finally, what would a school year be without Crayolas? Hester's has jumbo size, plus regular size in sets of 8, 12, 24 and 64. The 64 Crayola set has its own sharpener!

Hester's is conveniently located at 209 Runnels.

More than a dozen first through sixth grade girls learned the basics of cheering, and even learned a few cheers and jumps when they participated in a recent mini cheer camp at the Dorothy Garrett Coliseum.

They were coached by Howard College's Hawk cheerleaders: Kerry Rawls, sophomore captain; Stella Vidlak, freshman captain; Kelli Preston, Sharla Rhodes, Nicole Curry, Tiffanie Evans and Lee

Ann Dudley, who competed July 31 through Aug. 4 at cheer camp of the Universal Cheerleading Association at Southwest Texas State University, San Marcos.

The Hawk cheerleaders learned cheers, chants, partner stunts and overall team building, said Amy Ragan, cheerleader sponsor, and were awarded a superior trophy for their efforts.

Amy noted that the mini cheer camp was a fundraiser for an end-of-the-year trip to an undecided destination. "After evaluation — we may make it a yearly event," Amy said.

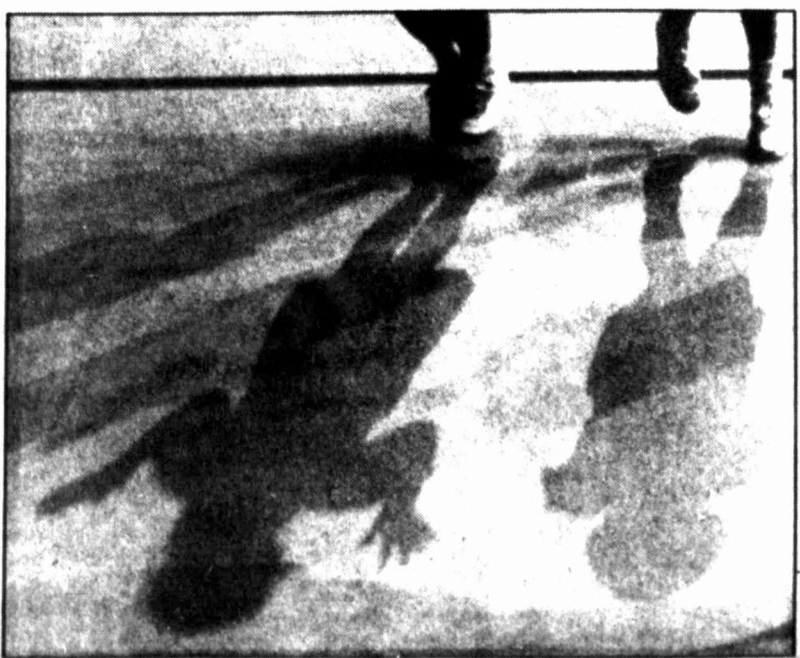

And, "We also want to be involved with the community and to build college-community relations."

As for the 16 young cheerleaders, Amy said, "They seemed to enjoy it, and they learned a lot."

Howard College cheerleading captain, Kerry Rawls watches Tonia Brooks make a jump in the above left photo. Lindsey Robertson, while performing a cheerleading move, keeps her eye on her trainer to make sure she does it correctly in the

Tidbits

By LEA WHITEHEAD
Staff Writer

Father Stephen White leaves tomorrow for a vacation in England and Ireland, a three-week trip that includes visits with brothers and sisters, and culminates with a return to his family home in Killarney.

His first stop is in Leicester, England, where he'll visit his sister, Eileen, who has been ill recently, and his brother Batt. Another brother, Dennis, will come over from Lincoln to join them.

Next Father White will visit friends in Belfast, Ireland, including retired sea captain, Harry Allan; the two met when Father White was a missionary in the South Seas. Other friends he'll renew acquaintance with are former fellow missionaries and co-workers in Guinea as well as Texas.

The last stop will be Killarney, where his brother, Pat, "still farms on the old homestead," says Father White. And he'll also see his only surviving aunt, Eileen Murphy, "a bright and hearty 96."

"Wherever you go to Ireland, there's a great wish for a little bit of sunshine," says Father White. "But you're always granted a little bit of rain."

"It was only 75-degrees and we played golf every day," says Sherry Rose. Sherry and Don spent two weeks of rest and relaxation at Taos, Red River and Eagles Nest, N.M.

A highlight of the trip was meeting renowned southwest artist R.C. Gorman in a restaurant in Taos.

"I had just bought a small print of his work, and we had stopped to eat," says Sherry. "And there he was!" Sherry asked the waitress if it would be possible to meet him. It was quickly arranged. "He was most gracious," Sherry remembers. "And he autographed my print!"

Before coming home the Roses stopped to see the spectacular musical "Texas" in the amphitheatre at Palo Duro Canyon in the Panhandle.

The upcoming Cancer Society gala starring Stephan Pyle, owner of the trendy Routh Street Cafe and the Baby Routh Cafe in Dallas, has hit the columns in the Dallas Morning News.

An item appearing in that publication referred to plans for the local event and pointed out that "Big Spring's Paula Talbot and Cinda Stanley were taking Stephan back home."

Stephan, whose innovations helped create the new "Southwest Cuisine," is a graduate of Big Spring High School and got his start in the kitchen of his family's restaurants here years ago.

Grace Roberts, Abilene, has been visiting here with her daughter, Eileen Zant and Tony Rodriguez.

Ethel Pringle returned home to Durango, Colo., for her 45th high school reunion, and a family reunion of the descendants of Alex and Clara LaLonde.

Ethel said 43 members of her graduating class were on hand, plus five coaches and teachers.

Her grandson, Zachary Hall, accompanied Ethel on the bus trip to Durango to see her former classmates. Then Ethel's husband, Cotton, and daughter, Barbara Hall, and her husband, Mike, joined them for the family gathering.

Their agenda included a ride on the steam-powered train to Silverton — no trip to Durango would be complete without it!

Helen Green's daughters and grandchildren were in town recently.

Paula Green drove in from Dallas. Lynn Goddard and children, Megan and Corrie, live in Plainview.

Speaking out for quietness puts smile on woman's face

DEAR ABBY: Thank you, thank you, thank you, for printing that letter from "One of the Quiet Ones." I have also been told numerous times to "smile," and also been asked why I am so "quiet."

I remember once at a party, a loud-mouthed jerk called attention to me by asking loudly, "Why are you so quiet?" I was so upset that I cried myself to sleep that night.

I even had several thoughtless classmates write in my yearbook: "To a nice, but very quiet, girl." I was so hurt by those comments that I threw my yearbook away — which I now regret.

I am older now, and not so easily upset by such remarks, but as a sensitive teenager, it caused me a lot of pain.

Dear Abby

I'm sure there will always be people who will continue to request that unsmiling people smile — and who ask (loudly), "How come you're so quiet?"

If just one quiet person can be spared even one of those painful moments, then you will have accomplished a great deal.

Thanks again for bringing this subject to public attention. At least now I know there are others like me.

ANOTHER QUIET ONE IN INDIANAPOLIS
DEAR QUIET ONE: My mail tells me that you are far from alone. Take comfort in the old saying: "Better to remain silent and be thought a fool, than to open your mouth and remove all doubt."

DEAR ABBY: This should be a first for you. John's parents are each one-half Indian.

Does this make John a whole Indian because two halves make a whole? Or is John half-Indian because he is one-fourth Indian on each side? Or is he just one-fourth Indian?

We cannot figure this one.
WONDERING
DEAR WONDERING: If each

parent is half-Indian, then John is half-Indian. My office staff argued for nearly half a day over this question. We did not know whether to consult a mathematician or a genealogist. In the end we opted for the mathematical — two one-fourths make one-half.

DEAR ABBY: That person who told you that there was no danger in using the telephone during a thunderstorm was very ill-informed. Abby, please keep telling people that lightning is a threat.

Some statistics from the Vero Beach (Fla.) Press Journal where I read your column:

Last year, lightning killed 86 people in the United States and injured 365. Florida led the nation with 11 lightning-related deaths. Tennessee came in second with six. New Mexico had five. Alabama, Arkansas, Minnesota, Mississippi, New York and North Carolina each had four deaths.

Most people are killed by lightning while standing under trees seeking shelter from a storm, working on machinery in an open field, or in a boat.

Good advice: If you see a storm coming, seek shelter in a car or large building. If you're in a house, stay off the phone.

More Taxpayers and Professional Preparers Acquire Their Tax Knowledge Through H&P. Block Course

Each year thousands of people across the United States enroll in the H&P Block Income Tax Course. Whether their reasons are personal or professional, students learn to prepare returns and bring their knowledge up-to-date on the latest tax laws. Some enroll in the course to pick up a valuable new skill; others enroll to polish up their tax preparation skills or to investigate the possibilities for a new career in the tax preparation industry.

Whatever their reasons, by enrolling in the Block course, they receive 13 weeks of training from some of the most experienced professional tax preparers in the U.S. Upon completion of the course, qualified graduates may be offered job interviews for positions with Block. Block is, however, under no obligation to offer employment, nor are graduates under any obligation to accept employment with Block.

This year's tax course starts on September 7. Students may choose from morning, and evening classes. One low fee includes all materials, supplies, and textbooks. Students who successfully complete the course receive Certificates of Achievement and 7.5 continuing education credit units.

Additional information and registration forms are available from the H&P Block office at 1512 Gregg. The telephone number is 263-1931.

Trip too good to be true

By NAOMI HUNT
Extension agent

A post-card arrives in the mail stating: "You have been specially selected to receive a free trip to Hawaii! Call this toll-free number for details."

You have visions of beach-combing on an exotic isle. But is this offer too good to be true? According to the Federal Trade Commission it probably is.

When you call this toll-free number, you're likely to be told you must join a travel club to be eligible for the free trip. Sometimes, a credit card number is requested so that your account can be billed for the membership fee.

With these offers, it's likely you'll be sent the vacation information package only after you have joined the club. Usually your reservation request must be accompanied by yet another fee. New charges are added at every step.

The final catch is that you may never get your "free trip" because your reservations cannot be confirmed or you can't comply with hard-to-meet hidden or expensive "conditions."

Thousands of consumers buy magazine subscriptions from legitimate salespeople over the telephone every year. Yet, according to the FTC, some people are tricked by unscrupulous salespeople into paying hundreds of dollars for multi-year subscriptions. By recognizing deceptive sales techniques you can avoid becoming entangled in a magazine subscription contract you don't want and which may be difficult to escape.

Focus on family

Be wary of the following:

- Salespeople who avoid identifying themselves as magazine subscription salespeople or may fail to give you their name or that of their company.

- Salespeople who imply that they represent a major credit card company or that their purpose is something other than selling magazines.

- Salespeople who encourage you to make purchases without giving you total costs. They may offer magazines for just a few dollars a week without telling you what it adds up to over the length of the subscription.

- Salespeople who say their companies are "approved" or "regulated" by the federal, state or local government. In fact, no governmental body actually approves magazine-selling operations.

EVERYONE IS WELCOME!

THE TWO PULSES IN YOUR FOOT

When your podiatrist checks your feet to see if there are any circulation problems, there are two pulses in each foot that he will palpate. One pulse is located on the top of your foot on a line between the great toe and the second toe. The second pulse is located behind the bone on the inner side of the ankle. In checking these pulses, your podiatrist will be studying the contraction and expansion of an artery, noting the time interval and the rhythm.

If the pulse is not as strong and regular as it should be, there may be a circulation problem in some part of your body. For example, an artery that has hardened or is blocked in some way may be interfering with the amount of blood reaching your legs and feet. If the problem is anemia, the blood supply is not rich enough to nourish the muscles and other tissues.

If you think poor blood circulation may be interfering with the functioning of your legs and feet, have them examined by your podiatrist.

Proper watering of landscapes

By DON RICHARDSON
Extension agent

One of the most frequent questions that come to our office each summer concerns watering — how much? when? etc. Most lawns receive twice as much water as they require for a healthy appearance. The key to watering lawns is to apply the water infrequently, yet thoroughly. This creates a deep, well-rooted lawn that efficiently uses water stored in the soil.

To know when to water the lawn, simply observe the grass. Wilting and discoloration are signs of water stress. At the first sign of wilting, you have 24 to 48 hours to water before serious injury occurs. Apply one inch of water to the lawn as rapidly as possible without runoff.

Watering only when needed and watering thoroughly produces a deep-rooted lawn which is more water efficient and drought enduring.

All trees and shrubs need more frequent watering from planting time until becoming well rooted, which may take two growing seasons. Once established, water-efficient plants can then be weaned to tolerate less frequent watering. Proper weaning develops deep roots and makes the plants more drought enduring.

As with lawns, water established trees, shrubs and groundcovers infrequently, yet thoroughly. In the absence of rain, most trees and shrubs benefit from a once a month thorough watering during the growing season. Remember, normal lawn watering is not a substitute for thorough tree and shrub watering.

The feeding root system of a tree or shrub is located within the top 12 inches of the soil and at the "dripline" of the plant. The dripline is the area directly below the outermost reaches of the branches. Apply water and fertilizer just inside and a little beyond the dripline, not at the trunk. Simply lay a slowly running hose on the ground at the dripline. Move the hose around the dripline as each area becomes saturated to a depth of 8 to 10 inches. For large trees, this watering technique may take several hours.

Ask the agent

The goal of any irrigation system is to give plants a sufficient amount of water without waste. By zoning an irrigation system, grass area can be watered separately and more frequently than groundcovers, shrubs and trees. Both sprinkler and drip irrigation can be incorporated to achieve water conservation in the landscape.

Adjust sprinkler heads to avoid watering sidewalks and driveways. Also, a properly adjusted sprinkler head sprays large droplets of water instead of a fog of fine mist which is more susceptible to evaporation and wind drift.

With either hose-end sprinklers or permanent systems, water between late evening and mid-morning to avoid excessive waste through evaporation.

Drip irrigation slowly applies water to soil. The water flows under low pressure through emitters, bubblers or spray heads placed at each plant. Water applied by drip irrigation advice and experimenting with available drip irrigation products in small sections of the landscape are the best ways to become familiar with the many benefits of this watering technique. Use a mulch wherever possible.

A good mulch conserves water by reducing moisture evaporation from the soil. Mulch also reduces weed populations, prevents soil compaction and keeps soil temperatures more moderate.

Organic materials such as pine bark, compost and woodchips, or inorganic materials such as lava rock, limestone, or permeable plastic, not sheet plastic — all serve as good materials for mulches.

Mowing grass at the proper height conserves water. Mow St. Augustine grass at one to three inches; for Bermudagrass, mow at one to two inches. Mowing at these relatively tall heights allows the grass to develop a deeper, more water-efficient root system. Taller grass blades also act as a living mulch, shading the ground and reducing soil moisture evaporation. Finally, as the grass grows taller, it grows slower and matures, thus requiring less water and mowing. Applying fertilizer to the lawn at the proper time and in the proper amount can save time, effort and money through reduced mowing and watering.

Fertilize the lawn once in the spring and again in the fall to produce a beautiful turf without excess growth which demands frequent watering. Apply only one or two pounds of actual nitrogen fertilizer per 1,000 square feet of lawn at one time. By using this fertilizer schedule, no other fertilizer is needed for most shrubs and trees in the lawn area.

For each person in Texas, water must always be a vital concern. Water conservation in landscape does not mean planting a harsh cactus and rock garden. It means common sense landscaping for efficient water use. It also means following the principles of water conservation to help insure continued prosperity for the residents and businesses of Texas.
