1993 Graduating Class of Winters High School

Graduation 1993 filled with honors, memories

As the Blizzard Band played the familiar processional, fifty-five seniors entered Blizzard Field for their final activity as students of Winters High School.

Doug Peters, Minister of the Main Street Church of Christ, brought the baccalaureate devotional. The salutatory address was given by Josh Awalt and the valedictory address presented by Sara Jackson.

Superintendent Tommy Lancaster presented the Pearl Jackson scholarship to Josh Awalt while the Floy Hodge scholarship was awarded to Jamey West. Both students plan to enter Texas A&M University this fall.

Secondary School Principal Charles Kidwell announced the winners of the Jake Joyce Memorial Award as Jamie Smith and Josh Awalt. Smith also plans to attend Texas A&M.

Following the presentation of diplomas, the benediction was given and the graduated class of 1993 became part of WHS history.

Thursday night fun in downtown Winters

This Thursday, June 3, residents and visitors to Winters will be able to enjoy a variety of activities.

The Chamber of Commerce is sponsoring a Senior Citizens Day beginning with a coffee at the Chamber office at 10 a.m. Senior citizens are encouraged to visit all the businesses, some of which are offering discounts and giveaways.

Later in the evening, E&B Fun Rides will be offering Family Night at the carnival. One admission ticket entitles the purchaser to unlimited rides. The carnival continues through Friday.

Adding to the excitement in downtown Winters, most businesses will be open from 7:00 p.m. to 9:00 p.m.

STENHOLM AT BREAKFAST—Winters residents Edna England and Charlie Poe were among 150 early risers who joined Congressman Charles Stenholm at a prayer breakfast at 6:30 Tuesday morning at the Community Center. The event was sponsored by the Winters Ministerial Alliance.

Large crowd attends prayer breakfast with Stenholm

"Where two or more are gathered in My name, there will I be also" (Matthew 18:20), was the theme of the Town and Country Prayer Meeting held Tuesday morning at 6:30.

The community-wide event, sponsored by the Winters Ministerial Alliance, was highlighted by a speech given by Congressman Charles Stenholm.

As he spoke to a crowd of approximately 150 participants, Stenholm recalled our country's first prayer in 1775.

"Our country had to start with a prayer and has had to continue to pray to still be here today," he stated.

The Congressman recalled Ben Franklin's call to prayer during the Constitutional Congress. "After months of debate and argument, the wise Franklin called the members to prayer and the Constitution was finished shortly afterward."

Stenholm also related how a prayer breakfast is held for congressional members every Thursday morning from 8 a.m. to 9 a.m.

"Prayer is like the wind, only the effects can be seen," said Stenholm.

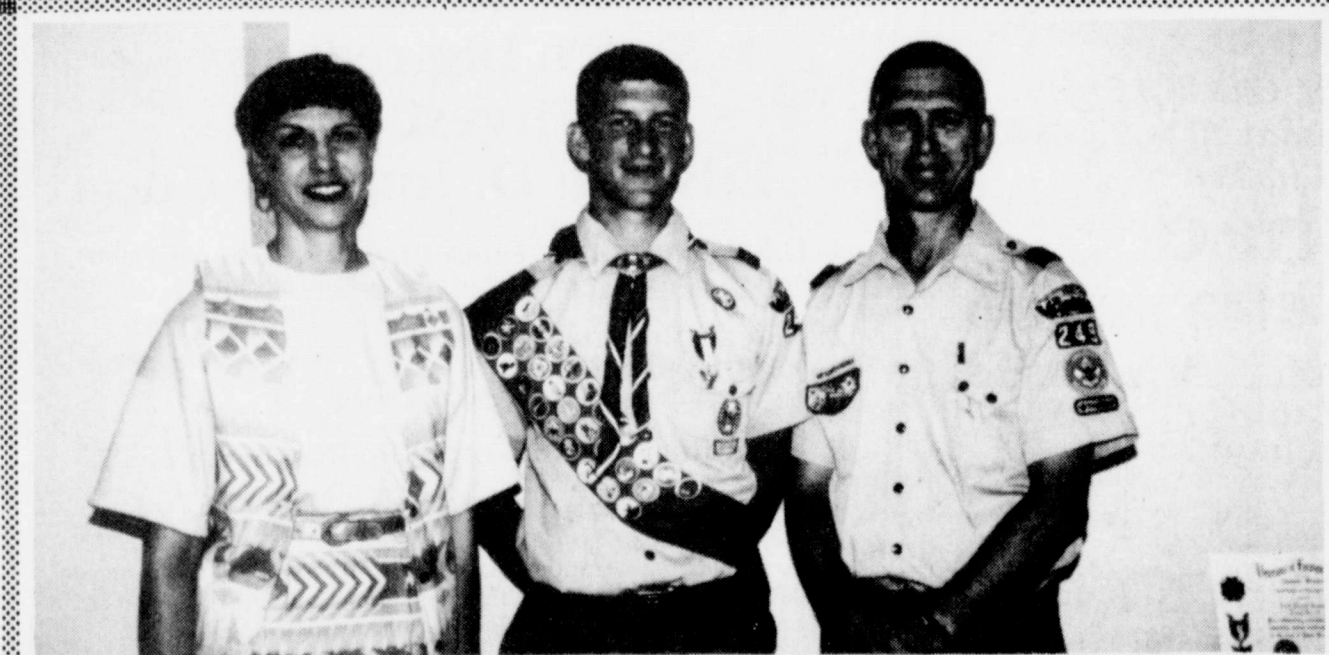

"Our country has seen worse times and better times but we still need to pray for our country and our government," Stenholm concluded.

Also during the breakfast, local businessman Nelan Bahlman lead several hymns, and all elected officials were recognized.

Prayers were led for local officials, towns and rural areas, agriculture and our country.

Wendell Lee recited two cowboy poems about cowboys and church.

Randall and Susan Conner presented an excellent slide show about our country. The show was accompanied by a recording of "America". Conner said the show took 22 years in the making as he and his family traveled around the U.S.A.

EAGLE SCOUT COURT OF HONOR—Scott Kozelsky, center, with his parents, Carol and Mike Kozelsky.

Scott Kozelsky earns Eagle Scout rank

An Eagle Scout Court of Honor for Scott Kozelsky was held Sunday, May 30 at Mt. Carmel Catholic Church. In attendance were friends, relatives, scout leaders and teachers.

Scott entered the Scouting program as a Tiger Cub in September, 1984, at the age of seven. He has remained active, moving up through the Cub Scout and Boy Scout Ranks. He became a member of Troop 249 in September of 1988.

While a Boy Scout Scott has held several positions of responsibility, including Senior Patrol Leader, Patrol Leader and Assistant Patrol Leader. He has participated in many Scout Service projects which benefitted the community. While working on his Eagle rank, Scott organized and supervised the construction of an outdoor volleyball court at the Winters School campus. During the summer of 1992, Scott served on the Camp Staff at Camp Tonkawa as Canoeing Instructor.

The Scouting Program has had a positive influence on Scott's life, teaching him the principals of good, moral living, and has opened up some important opportunities to him.

Outside of Scouting, Scott is active in school activities: playing Blizzard Basketball, running on the Cross-Country Team and Varsity Track Team. He will be a member of the WHS Band and PALS for the next school year. He is an active member of Our Lady of Mt. Carmel Catholic Church.

He is currently working as a lifeguard at the Winters Swimming Pool.

Scott is the son of Carol and Mike Kozelsky and has two sisters, Kathryn and Jeanna.

DIVE RIGHT IN—11 year-old Josh Lincycumb went head-over-heels to enjoy opening day at the Winters swimming pool. Manager Dottie Loudermilk reports over 300 swimmers during Memorial week end.

OIL BUSINESS . . .

By Reg Boles ©1993

An interesting phenomenon is occurring in the local oil patch these days.

No, it's not water turning to oil or $45 per barrel oil prices, but it is just as important. Despite its implications, I haven't heard too many people talk about it.

It seems that, without too many people noticing, the big boys in the service business are being replaced by the small outfits. It is happening in all those places with long and storied oil field pasts like Crane, Andrews, etc.

Why is this happening? Well, I don't think it is too big of a secret that the big boys of service are laying off, consolidating, and pulling out for greener pastures overseas (or pastures, as the case may be). In their wake, entrepreneurs have filled their vacant niche.

Some of these folks are former employees of the majors (service companies), and they know what they are doing. They provide a crucial service (one of several) at a good price with excellent personalized service—and people like that.

While the red and gray, yellow and red, and the blue and white figure out how to speak French, Arabic, and Russian, the purple and green (or whatever paint a poor boy can get) pick up their customers.

A funny thing has happened during the eulogy of the American oil patch. Oil and gas prices have remained stable (oil) or gone up considerably (gas). This has kept the market locally viable (although not robust). This has caused a demand for services in the market, thus providing willing business people in the oil patch a chance to build their enterprises in the absence of major competitors. Those absent companies were busy getting their passports in order, so they didn't have time for the smaller domestic markets that had served them quite well in the past.

This is a window of opportunity for technically competent small service companies to jump through.

And, once again, the American spirit of enterprise has proven to be quite nimble indeed.

Will it last? Who am I to say, but I feel (you had to know I'd say something anyway) that the majors are burning their bridges domestically, especially in the smaller markets and the small service company has the capability to fill the shoes of majors technically with the advances in computers and public domain knowledge disbursed through layoffs of very competent employees.

I look for these smaller service companies to last with some minor consolidation as time goes on. The inefficiencies of the market will be taken care of in that way. The major service companies will remain established in the largest U.S. markets and re-emerge somewhat in new markets, but smaller, and never-the-less viable, markets will become the realm of the smalls.

Poe's Corner by Charlsie Poe

Foreword by Charlsie Poe

I have asked Betty Thomason to be guest columnist in "Poe's Corner" for both the June 3 and June 10 issues of The Winters Enterprise.

Betty and I are members of the Abilene Writer's Guild and both received recognition at a dinner held at Briarstone Manor last Friday. The awards were a result of the annual contest sponsored by the Abilene Writer's Guild. Betty received Honorable Mention for her story about Joseph Juneau, for whom the capital of Alaska is named.

We were asked to be on the program at the May 27 meeting of the Guild. Betty researched this article 12 years ago when she was employed as a nurse by the U.S. Public Health Service Hospital at Mt. Edgecumbe, Alaska. She worked with the Tlinglet Indians and became familiar with the terrain and the weather in the southeastern Alaska regions, which helped in putting the story together for the contest.

Juneau's Trail to Gold Creek by BETTY THOMASON

It was part necessity and part recreation that prompted Joe Juneau to join forces with another prospecting cohort, Richard Harris, in search of gold in southeastern Alaska. In September, 1880, the two prospectors paddled their canoe into the headwaters of a stream near the present site of Juneau. With shovels and sluice boxes, the gold seekers sifted so much gold-veined gravel, they called the place Gold Creek.

Although the discovery didn't cause a stampede to Alaska like the later Klondike gold strike where thousands of "cheechakos" (newcomers) blazed a trail over the Chilkoot Pass into Canada, Juneau and Harris's find marked the beginning of a mining era that lasted over sixty years. The town founded as a result of that gold discovery on the cold, rugged, mountainous shores of Gastineau Channel was first called Harrisburg. One year later, Joseph Juneau hatched a scheme to rename the town Juneau.

Approximately forty-five years before his Juneau adventure, Joseph Juneau was born in Canada. According to R.N. DeArmonds's book, The Founding of Juneau, Joe later moved to Wisconsin "where he liked fishing and hunting rather than attending school." Unlike Harris, who was educated, Juneau could not read or write English.

In his earlier years, Joe drifted around the gold fields of California for awhile. He soon grew tired of the mines and started building houses. Joe's tendency to wander led him once again to mining, this time, in British Columbia and the panhandle of Alaska.

It was during this period when Juneau was prospecting in Alaska, that he and Harris staggered off a ship at Sitka. The experienced miners had shared some hard liquor aboard ship. Not only were they drunk, but as mentioned in Keith Wheeler's, The Alaskans, "the pair still owed fare...and both needed work."

At the same time in the Alaskan capitol of Sitka, George Pilz (a mining engineer from California) oversaw several mining operations in the area. One source, The Story of Alaska, by C.L. Andrews, reports that George

Immunization Clinic

The Texas Department of Health will hold an Immunization Clinic on Thursday, June 3, 1993, from 9:30 a.m. - 12:00 noon and 1:30 p.m. - 3:00 p.m.

Location is in the Professional Building, Suite 108 on Grant Street entry.

Pilz's mine at Silver Bay was failing. Pilz wanted other prospects. "He promised rewards to Indians if they found gold-bearing quartz in place."

After hearing this news, Chief Kowee of Auk Bay brought samples of gold ore to Pilz as proof of gold in that vicinity. On the strength of Kowee's findings and other reports, Pilz grubstaked Joe Juneau and Richard Harris. The two adventurers set out with Tlinglet Indian guides on a July day in 1880 for the Gastineau Channel and Auk Bay region.

Considering his nature to be a maverick and the fact that he'd reached his mid-forties--perhaps, Juneau thought that his journey was a last chance to prove himself, to be worth something in life and to find a quick fortune. Maybe, with this in mind, the prospector undertook the canoe ride from Sitka on Baranof Island, past the many flower-pot islands off Sitka Sound. A shipwreck on any of those tiny isles could have resulted in Joe and his party never being found.

Despite the danger, the boaters rowed on, winding through Alaska's archipelagos, past Chichagof and Admiralty Islands. Finally, they arrived on the choppy waters of Gastineau Channel.

Probably, the weather in the Alaskan panhandle proved only a small barrier to Juneau and Harris as they started their excursion. The Japanese current flowing through the southeastern waters warmed the temperature, but the old-timers had a famous saying. "There are two kinds of weather in southeast Alaska, raining and raining hard." The rain was so cold, it became sleet even in the summer. Snow and gale winds start early in the mountainous terrain. In spite of the uncomfortable climate, Juneau braved the weather. It was the other obstacles that stood in the way of his success--drinking, women and the desire for a quick buck.

Avoiding Food Poisoning At Home

by Janet Bailey, author of Keeping Food Fresh (NAPS)—You are more vulnerable to food poisoning in your home—and by your hand—than you think. According to the Food and Drug Administration, two million cases of food poisoning occur in the home every year. Most of these cases are easily preventable if food is handled properly before and after it is cooked.

BEFORE YOU COOK:

- Never thaw frozen food on the kitchen counter. Thaw it in the refrigerator or seal it inside a plastic bag and submerge it in cold water, no warmer than 50 F.

- Slip packages of raw meat and poultry into plastic bags to prevent raw juices from leaking and contaminating other foods in the refrigerator.

- Immediately wash everything that comes in contact with raw meat.

AFTER YOU COOK:

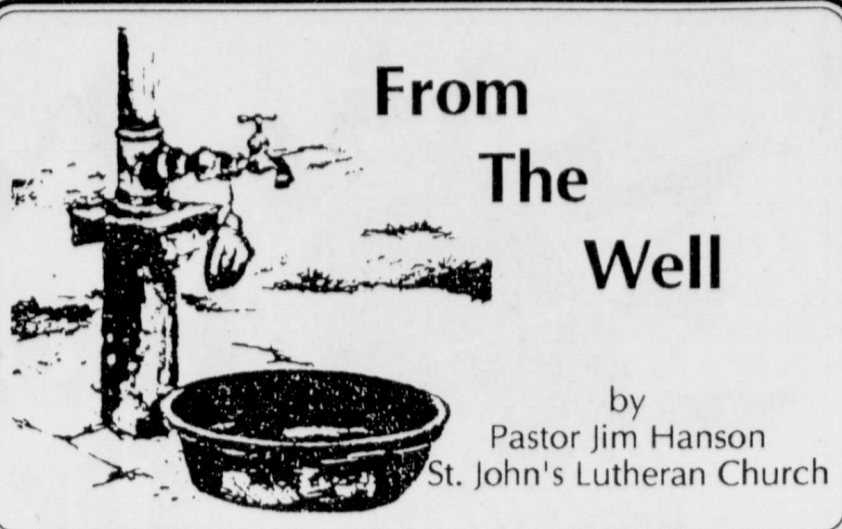

- Refrigerate hot food as soon as possible after cooking—leaving it on the counter to cool gives bacteria a chance to grow.

- Divide hot food into several smaller containers to chill it more quickly.

- Refrigerate cooked food in containers covered with tightly fitting plastic lids or plastic wrap.

- If traveling with food, thoroughly chill it first and pack it in a cooler filled with ice.

The basics of food safety are: keep hot foods hot, keep cold foods cold, and keep raw foods away from cooked. With the wise use of plastic bags, wraps and sturdy containers, and with extra attention to cleanliness, you can prevent most cases of food poisoning in your home.

From The Well

by Pastor Jim Hanson
St. John's Lutheran Church

They just left. Three of our five grandchildren. They came with their dad and mom, our son Nathan and his wife Ruth about 3:00 a.m. Wednesday morning. We were too excited to go to bed that night so we waited up! All the way from America Falls, Idaho. It really is too far, 1,300 miles, from grandparents. Too hard to be so separated. It was their first trip to Winters.

Ezekiel, Samuel, and Anna are more precious than gold. As I was breakfasting with Anna on Wednesday morning, (her folks were still sleeping, and grandma was at a meeting, so I fixed a nutritious breakfast! Milk, frosted flakes, bananas and cookies.) I told her, "Anna, you are so precious. You are special to us." She looked up with her wide open eyes and pretty smile and said, "Zeke and Sam are special too." Out of the mouths of babes. She could teach a lot of us the real meaning of inclusiveness, which has little to do with quotes and a whole lot to do with the size of our hearts.

In a few hours they had pretty well explored the house. They don't miss anything that is out in the open, and very little that can be opened. "Grandpa, can I play with your semi?" Sam asked. I almost said "no", because that toy truck was worth $25.00. But I said, "OK, but be careful." And he was. But, really truly in those few hours there really was little in our house that had not been touched by little human hands. They are really "hands on" little people and I believe that everything we have was so blessed by them.

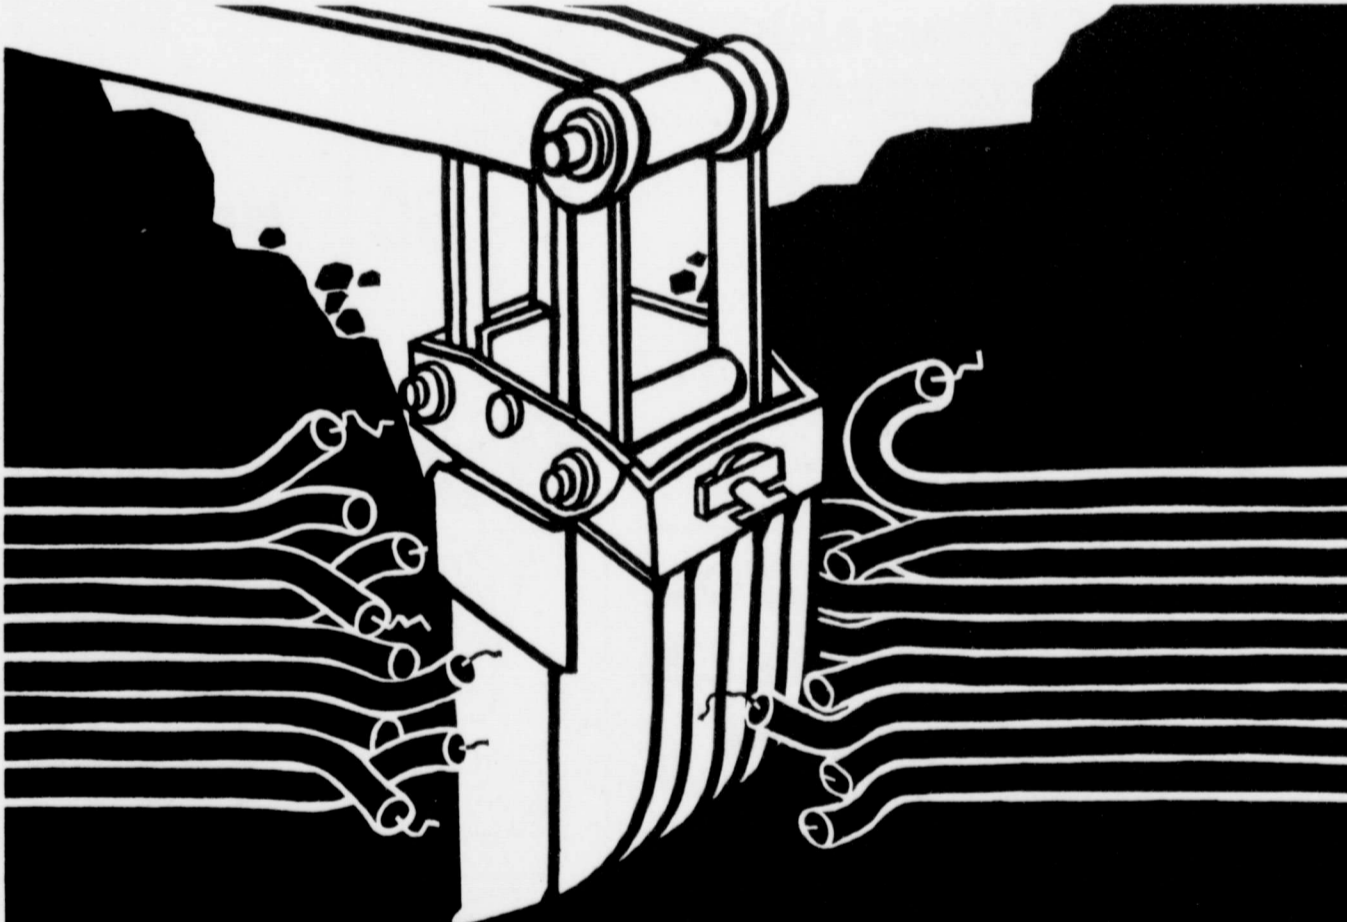

They really live in the present, in the "now." They are great teachers of life for that very reason. Life is to be lived, to be experienced, to be learned, RIGHT NOW! When Anna says, "Play with me, grandpa," she doesn't mean four hours from now. She means, "right now." And when Zeke says, "Can we go fishing, grandpa?" He's not talking about the day after tomorrow. He means as soon as you can get the gear into the suburban and get down the road.

We did go fishing. Two places. And were treated royally at both places. But at the second place, everybody caught fish. And our kind and generous host was so good as to clean the fish and then fix them and feed them to us for supper. So good! So fun! Anna yelled to us, "I caught two cat fish and one normal one." I'm still wondering what a normal fish looks like.

Earlier that day Zeke and Sam had seen a fish head that I had mounted on the wall of our front porch. So as my friend was cleaning fish, those two like schemers had a plan. "Can we have the two biggest heads?" And the last thing to be packed in as they left on Friday, 53 hours of grandma and grandpa and grandkids, fun packed time, was a box with two fish heads, mouths spread open and wrapped in paper. Something to take home. And to remember. No wonder they are called grand children. They teach us so much about the wonder and the glory and the grandness of just being kids again, with them. No wonder our greatest name in the Bible is to be called "Children of God." Our grandchildren show us how!

HEAT WAVE

Tips Can Help You Save Water in Summer

(NU) - When the weather outside is steamy, increased water needs can severely strain local supplies. A worst-case scenario is drought.

To help conserve and ensure that you and your neighbors have sufficient water, the International Bottled Water Association offers these tips:

— Americans use about 110 billion gallons of water a day for irrigation — enough to fill a lake five miles long. In hot weather, when plants, grass and crops need more moisture, water them in early morning and evening hours when the sun won't evaporate the water so quickly.

— On average, each person in the United States uses about 70 gallons of water a day in the home. Use washing machines and dishwashers less often; run bigger loads. Install water-saving devices on them and your toilet.

— Up to 40 gallons of water are needed for a bath, 25 for a five-minute shower. Take fewer, shorter showers; try water-saving shower heads; fill the bathtub only halfway. — Don't let water run while brushing teeth, cooking or cleaning. To avoid overtaxing local supplies, put off using water for household cleaning until off-peak hours (night).

— People need to drink more water in hot weather because perspiration — water loss — increases as the body tries to keep cool. During the summer, drink eight to 10 glasses of water a day to help regulate your body temperature. Try bottled water to stay hydrated.

For the "Heat Wave" brochure including more facts and tips, write to IBWA, 113 N. Henry St., Dept. NU, Alexandria, VA 22314.

Gradual weight loss is better

Two researchers at The DeBakey Heart Center at Baylor College of Medicine in Houston have developed a weight-management program that emphasizes gradual changes in lifestyle.

Dr. John Foreyt and Dr. Ken Goodrick's The Living Without Dieting Program is a seven-step plan to set up a support system, establish an exercise habit and adopt a low-fat eating habit.

A key element of the program is accepting the reality that thinness may not be possible for some people.

"Genetic inheritance, childhood family practices and a history of dieting may have led to bodily changes and an excessive number of fat cells in the body so that thinness is not a realistic goal," Foreyt said.

Hunter's Camp

with Don Haley

"It's Cowphobia!"

"What's the matter with Ace?" asked Buck, peering with the rest of us out across the shinoak flat. "I could hear him yellin' two draws over."

"Beat the me," I told him. "Thought maybe he shot himself, but he looks healthy enough. Maybe he ate loco weed or somethin'."

Ace was still scratching at the air, throwing rocks, and screaming as loud as his lungs would allow. We eased a little closer and ran into Slim, who was squinting at Ace through his binoculars from behind a cedar bush.

"Cowaphobia," Slim said matter of factly, still studying Ace through the optics. "Yep, I seen it before. The phobic fear of a cow spottin' your location and ruinin' your hunt. Had it myself once. Wouldn't wish it on nobody."

"You really think it's cowaphobia?" Buck said in concern. "We haven't had a case of it around here in years."

"Yep," Slim said. "That's what it is. Saw the whole thing sittin' right here. You boys know how Ace is. Look there, he's camouflaged from head to foot. Even his camouflage is camouflaged."

"He's been sittin' over behind that log yonder, not moving a muscle, for near two hours. Hadn't so much as twitched an eyebrow."

"Along about then, the rocks started rollin' and the limbs was poppin'. I could read Ace's mind from here. He just knew it was the granddaddy of all bucks coming his way."

"But what showed itself was an ole' cow lookin' for her calf. She spotted Ace before she ever cleared the brush. She broke and ran right up to him, looking for a handout of feed. We better get on over there and see what we can do."

Ace was in pretty bad shape when we got to him. He looked at us like he didn't even know us, his eyes glazed and bloodshot.

"Ya derned ole' cow! How can ya see me?" He screeched and beat at the ground with a stick. "I'm hid good! I'm camouflaged! You're not a deer, you're a dumb cow! There's no way ya can know I'm within a million miles! I spent hours in that freezin' blind! How do ya know? How do....."

"Ace, it's us," I hollered gently. "It's me and Slim and Buck. Easy now, we're comin' in."

By that time, Ace was on his knees, cradling his 30-06 rifle in his arms.

"How da they know?" Ace weeped as we laid him down, prying the rifle from his frozen fingers. We covered him with a coat and elevated his feet like we had seen in the movies.

"Just the other day, I washuntin' turkeys," Ace sobbed on. "I was in a tree. Camouflaged perfect. Looked more like a tree than a tree. Why, birds was nestin' in my ear. That old gobbler was huge and he was comin' right to me."

"All of a sudden, this old cow walks right up and stares up at me in the tree. Scares off the gobbler and then stands there lookin' at me and moos. How'd that cow see me, tell me how?" Ace was clutching at my jacket like a man in total desperation, searching for answers that I could not give.

"What's all the racket about?" Doc asked as he roared up in his jeep. "Somebody shoot their foot off?"

"Cowaphobia," Slim answered. Doc nodded knowingly, pawing at the ground with his foot. "Seen it up north. Hoped we wouldn't get it back in these parts, but I guess it's here sure 'nough."

We got Ace to his feet and he appeared to be a little better. About that time, though, he slipped on a cow pie, knocking himself out cold when the side of his head hit a limestone ledge.

"Wake up, Ace. Wake up. We're havin' steaks tonight!" That seemed to help - a little.

RENOVATION UNDERWAY—Workers take a break during work being done on the lot across from Winters Funeral Home. Purchased by the Winters Funeral Home Corporation (Ellen, Tim and Mike Meyer; Theresa Patterson; Linda Dry; Ray Alderman and Hattie Belle Bishop), the lot is being renovated for use as additional Funeral Home parking space. There will also be an area, equipped with picnic table, with a park-like atmosphere where families can relax. Levelling and landscaping has been done to enhance the trees and picnic table, which were acquired with the lot. A house which was on the lot was torn down approximately one year ago.

SCHOOL'S OUT FOR SUMMER

Drive Carefully.

The kids are looking forward to having fun at the pool or other activities. It's a time for enjoying their summer freedom. But they sometimes forget to watch where they're going and what's happening around them. So it's up to you, as a responsible driver, to keep a lookout for them while you're on the road. Let the kids have their fun. Help make it safe for them by slowing down and expecting the unexpected.
