St. Lawrence woman killed as home hit

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

A frenzied thunderstorm armed with 90-mph winds and wrecking hail slashed through the Permian Basin Tuesday, killing one woman in her mobile home that afterward "looked like a bomb had gone off."

The tempest also contributed to the death of a worker at a natural gas plant in Crane County, who was killed in an explosion following a power outage.

The woman, believed to be about 30 and five months pregnant, was killed after she tried to seek shelter in her trailer home in the St. Lawrence community, 20 miles southwest of Garden City.

"The trailer house was completely flipped over, like you would a flapjack," Glasscock County Deputy Sheriff Mike Pinkard said. "When we got there, it looked like a bomb had gone off."

Magadela Contrerras and her five children were inside the trailer home at the time of the storm.

"The husband was almost crazy with grief," Pinkard said of Osvaldo Contrerras, an employee of Coke Barton, who farms cotton in the area. "I went down the road and tried to talk to him, but he indicated he didn't want to talk to me. I wasn't going to press him, going through what he was having to."

Winds up to 90 mph were reported in Glasscock County, and several unconfirmed reports of tornadoes were received, Pinkard said.

"When it came through, it did quite a bit of damage to several trailer houses and snapped some power lines," he said.

More persons would have been injured, but the storm hit in an "extremely sparsely populated" part of the sparsely populated county, the deputy said. In Garden City, the county seat, only high winds were reported from the fast-moving storm.

"At the scene, getting her body out, there was nothing but clear blue skies," he recalled. "The wind was calm, something like 2 miles an hour. It was nearly still after all that."

After the storm hit, residents in the farming community were "buzzing" with talk of twisters, Pinkard said.

"But I talked to the weather bureau, and they told me they never saw a hook on their scope," he said. "They said it was just wind shear."

Storm front dumps rain on Dallas, hail on Wichita Falls

Associated Press

Thunderstorms moved through North Texas early today, causing flash flooding that left motorists and apartment dwellers stranded in Wichita Falls. Large hail, about the size of golf balls, also pelted the Wichita Falls area.

The Dallas-Fort Worth area was under a flash flood warning at dawn today as forecasters warned that additional heavy rain would cause flash flooding because the ground is saturated and streams are near bankfull from earlier heavy rainfall.

Power lines were downed and wind and hail damage was reported in Wise County before the storm moved into the Dallas-Fort Worth area, authorities said.

The storms spawned at least one tornado hat caused extensive damage to a grain elevator complex in Plainview and tore the roof off a house as it moved through the city late Tuesday.

A police officer was injured as he fled the tornado, which struck Plainview's south side about 5:10 p.m. Tuesday. The officer, hurt when his vehicle was involved in a collision, was treated and released at Central Plains Regional Hospital.

More severe weather was expected through today after a low-pressure system moved through West Texas, dumping heavy rains and battering communities with hail up to four inches in diameter, breaking windows in some dwellings.

After the Cargill Grain Terminal in Plainview was hit by the twister, a mobile home, office building and several silos were destroyed, with debris scattered across the Interstate 27 business route. Roads were closed briefly while debris was cleared.

The twister also damaged dwellings, tearing the roof off one house, and downed numerous power poles and lines, including some near the Hale County jail.

The National Weather Service issued tornado watches for nine counties in Northwest Texas and two in north central sections until 3 a.m. today.

Foreigners fleeing Chinese capital

BEIJING (AP) — Troops raked a diplomatic compound with gunfire today as military convoys drove through the capital, sending more foreigners fleeing Beijing in fear of open urban warfare.

The U.S. embassy's chief of security said bullets flew through the window into a room where his two children were watching television.

Later, the U.S. Embassy said it ordered the mandatory evacuation of dependents of diplomatic personnel from Beijing, and many other countries took similar steps. About 125 U.S. Dependents were scheduled to leave on a special flight Thursday.

More than 2,000 foreigners jammed the international airport today trying to leave.

Official television late today blasted the United States for providing refuge to astrophysicist Fang Lizhi, the nation's most prominent dissident who recently said he feared he would be arrested in a conservative crackdown.

The 53-year-old Fang and his wife and child have been at the U.S. Embassy since at least Monday, the State Department in Washington said Tuesday.

Sheltering Fang was "interference in China's internal affairs," the television report said.

Chinese witnesses reported more skirmishing between rival armies on Beijing's outskirts.

At least a dozen other Chinese cities were wracked by demonstrations in protest of the weekend military massacre of unarmed Beijing citizens, which has turned some armies against each other.

Six people manning a barricade on rails near the Shanghai station died Tuesday when they were hit by a train unable to stop, a Chinese source said. Angry crowds set the train ablaze.

In Beijing, troops today shot and killed three people, a Chinese witness said. "I'm going home to Hunan. I'm afraid for my life in Beijing," said a 25-year-old construction worker at the train station.

Midlander makes plans to leave China

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

At least one Midland resident is taking heed of U.S. State Department warnings to leave China before violent crackdowns on pro-democracy students in Beijing spread to other parts of the country.

Karen Eggleston, the daughter of David and Helen Eggleston, 1605 W. Tennessee Ave., is enroute to the Chinese capital city from Nanjing where she is a student specializing in Korean and Chinese relations at Nanjing University.

Her mother told the Reporter-Telegram in a telephone interview this morning that the trip from Nanjing to Beijing takes about 12 hours by train.

Upon Ms. Eggleston's arrival in Beijing, she plans to reunite with her fiance — a Chinese national — who is seeking permission from the communist government to leave the country.

The family is "very optimistic" that he will be granted an exit visa and that the couple will soon be out of the troubled nation.

Airline confirms only 14 of 182 survived crash of Suriname jetliner

PARAMARIBO, Suriname (AP) — A Suriname Airways jetliner flying from the Netherlands with 182 people aboard crashed and tore apart today near the capital's international airport, killing 168 people, the airline said.

The Surihame News Agency said the DC-8 went down about 4:30 a.m. (3:30 a.m. EDT) about five miles from Zanderij International Airport.

Airline spokesman Robbi Lachmising told reporters in Amsterdam that the plane crashed in dense fog. The airport has no radar, Lachmising said.

The private Dutch television channel AVRO said Suriname's army chief of staff, Maj. Leu Yen Tai, was on the flight.

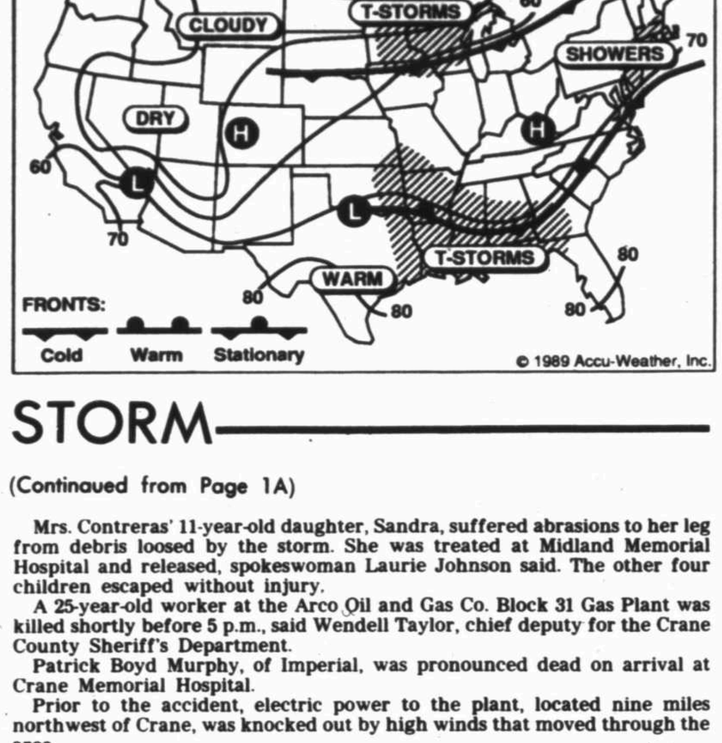

The plane had been carrying 173 passengers and nine crewmembers, Lachmising said. He said 168 people died.

He said the 14 survivors were rushed to Paramaribo's University hospital, but their identities and condition were not immediately known.

WEATHER SUMMARY

Chaos in China frustrating for U.S.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Embasssy in China has ordered its diplomatic dependents to leave Beijing in the wake of "indiscriminate firing" by Chinese troops on a diplomatic compound, a senior administration official said today.

The official, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said the order did not affect U.S. diplomatic personnel.

He said U.S. officials had arranged for a chartered flight on Thursday to carry about 125 dependents from the city.

The embassy in Beijing had recommended the evacuation of dependents and non-essential diplomatic personnel to Secretary of State James A. Baker III early Wednesday, said Evans Gerakas, a spokesman for the task force on China.

Gerakas said the embassy reported that Chinese soldiers had surrounded an apartment complex housing U.S. diplomats and prevented them from leaving the area for some time.

"The Chinese troops outside the residence of the staff had prevented them from getting out but that situation had been cleared up and the people were let out and had gone back," said Gerakas.

"As far as I know our people had gone back into the compound to pack and get their things."

"I can confirm that they (the soldiers) have left," he added.

Although most firing appeared to be warning shots into the air, dozens of bullets struck windows facing the street in a compound for diplomats and other foreign residents about 2½ miles east of Tiananmen Square.

The U.S. embassy's chief of security said bullets flew through the window into a room where his two children were watching television.

The senior official in Washington said the bullets appeared to come from "the indiscriminate firing of troops who were attempting to clear Chinese civilians from the streets."

The official said the U.S. government had arranged for the chartered flight on Thursday.

CHINA

The political situation grew more confusing today, with an official media report indicating the rising fortunes of Qiao Shi, a shadowy figure considered the Communist Party's law-and-order chief.

None of China's leaders have been seen since Premier Li Peng appeared on television on May 25, five days after declaring martial law in Beijing. Li and senior leader Deng Xiaoping are believed behind the crackdown.

The Bush administration says the situation is so chaotic in the world's most populous country that it can't tell who is in charge, and that it appeared likely China's top leaders have left Beijing.

Major convoys of troops roared up and down Beijing's main streets throughout the day, with a group of nine armored vehicles including tanks and nearly 50 trucks heading east just before 11 p.m.

Thousands of soldiers traveling the same route from central Tiananmen Square this morning chanted, "We love the people, we love the capital" before opening fire.

It was unclear whether the troops leaving the square were evacuating from the city or going to take up positions in the suburbs.

They appeared to belong to the 27th Army, responsible for the slaughter of perhaps thousands of people during an offensive that began on Saturday to clear the city center of students seeking a freer society.

Several other armies reportedly are in the Beijing area. Chinese witnesses said the 27th Army clashed early today with units of the 38th Army, the Beijing garrison, with automatic weapons about 12 miles east of downtown.

The witnesses believed two onlookers died and said they were not sure about military casualties.

U.S. intelligence reports indicate the number killed in Beijing has reached 3,000, while a Chinese government spokesman said Tuesday that 300 died.

Although most firing appeared to be warning shots into the air, dozens of bullets struck windows facing the street in a compound for diplomats and other foreign residents about 2½ miles east of Tiananmen.

"My two children were watching television when the bullets came flying through the window," Fred Krug, chief of security for the U.S. Embassy, told the Chicago Tribune. "The Chinese maid threw herself across the children and covered them."

"The bullets just whizzed around the living room. It was damned hairy. It's a miracle no one was hit," the paper quoted Krug as saying.

Radio Beijing said the troops were responding to sniper fire that killed one soldier and injured three others. "The unit was forced to fire back, and at one time, surrounded the diplomats' apartments and nearby buildings," the radio said.

U.S. Marines immediately began evacuating Americans from the compound to the U.S. Embassy, and Krug said his wife and children had gone to the embassy.

A diplomatic source said not all residents could be removed before Chinese troops sealed off the area to search for the alleged sniper.

A Soviet reporter locked outside urged soldiers to let him evacuate his children. "I've got five kids inside," he said. "I'm supposed to be taking care of them and they won't let me take them out."

Some diplomats reported that soldiers entered buildings in the compound. One U.S. diplomat said, "They're going room by room, our apartments are being trashed. Everything is being ruined."

But several dozen residents later told an Associated Press reporter that troops did not enter the buildings and left after about two hours. There were no reports of injuries.

One Chinese man was dragged off by plainclothes security officials who had searched the compound for the alleged sniper.

Compound apartments command views of a strategic bridge where troops took up defensive positions behind trees, curbs and trucks.

The national television newscast today showed Chinese reporters on a tour of garbage-strewn Tiananmen. Troops appeared sparsely deployed and tanks could be seen on the side near the imperial palace.

"Not one person died on the square," a martial law official claimed. The newscast also showed several soldiers recovering from wounds they said were inflicted by "scoundrels" during the weekend fighting.

An undetermined number of 27th Army troops and tanks remained in Tiananmen.

Diplomats estimated 200,000 soldiers from 13 army groups had moved into the capital area, raising fears of a major battle for control of the city of 10 million.

The 27th Army is closely linked to President Yang Shangkun and other Communist hardliners who ordered the suppression of the pro-democracy movement. Other armies — including the 38th — are said to be close to Zhao Ziyang, the moderate party chief reportedly stripped of his post.

Muddying the political situation was a Xinhua News Agency report of the Supreme People's Court sending a telegram to Qiao, one of five members of the party's policy-making Politburo Standing Committee, n support of measures to suppress the prodemocracy demonstrators.

The report was significant because the message was not sent to Zhao, who was last seen in public on May 19.

Diplomats often have named Qiao, 64, as a top contender to replace Zhao, but little is known of him. Qiao is the former head of the party Organization Department, which is in charge of security.

Qiao Shi, one of five members of the Chinese Communist Party's policy-making Politburo Standing Committee, is rumored successor to Zhao Ziyang, last seen in public May 19. China's state-run Xinjua News Agency reported the Supreme People's Court sent Qiao, 64, a telegram in support of measures to suppress demonstrations.

STORM

Mrs. Contreras' 11-year-old daughter, Sandra, suffered abrasions to her leg from debris loosed by the storm. She was treated at Midland Memorial Hospital and released, spokeswoman Laurie Johnson said. The other four children escaped without injury.

A 25-year-old worker at the Arco Oil and Gas Co. Block 31 Gas Plant was killed shortly before 5 p.m., said Wendell Taylor, chief deputy for the Crane County Sheriff's Department.

Patrick Boyd Murphy, of Imperial, was pronounced dead on arrival at Crane Memorial Hospital.

Prior to the accident, electric power to the plant, located nine miles northwest of Crane, was knocked out by high winds that moved through the area.

"When the electricity went off, they shut down the plant, and were trying to get it back on line," Taylor said. "He (Murphy) was trying to load or unload a compressor and the gas line blew out. He was right on top of it, was straddling it at the time."

The plant was judged "unstable" by company officials after the blast, and State Highway 1601 was blocked off in both directions for about 90 minutes. Two hours after the accident, the plant, which sustained only minor damage, was again operational, Taylor said.

Utility poles in a Texaco field just east of the Arco plant also were damaged, Taylor said.

Damage in Fort Stockton was also extensive. The National Weather Service in Midland received reports of roofs torn from a car wash and an abandoned motel, windows blown out of a K-Mart store, and downed power poles. Winds in the area were estimated above 80 mph when hail the size of a quarter blew in, according to the NWS.

Twelve miles west of Fort Stockton, a building at a test track owned by Firestone was also damaged, the weather service said.

"We had a lot of moisture and an unstable atmosphere," said Ron Brown, National Weather Service forecaster at Midland International Airport. When we got enough heating in the afternoon, that kicked it off."

Tuesday's storm, which began brewing west of Odessa about 3 p.m. and continued its fury for three hours, was unusual only in its severity, Brown said.

Several tornadoes were reported, but it is unclear if they actually touched down and caused the damage, the forecaster said.

"There was a report of a twister down southwest of Odessa along I-20," he noted. "Later, in the same location, a Department of Public Safety trooper reported a tornado actually on the interstate."

Golf-ball size hail and 60-mph winds were reported in west Odessa.

"It was pretty nasty," said Jim Richmond, manager of the Jonesville Grocery store on FM 1936 in west Odessa. "It flipped an RV over and took a roof off. It lifted a wrought iron canopy over the store, and knocked down some trees in the neighborhood. The house just east of the store was completely demolished. They thought it was a tornado."

"A lot" of fence damage and utility poles were reported down in the area of the store, Richmond said. "The power wasn't turned back on until early this morning," he said.

Celia Pina, 6121 Miles St., was on her way home when storm blasted her residence.

"We couldn't tell what it was," Mrs. Pina said. "It came all of a sudden. Most of the damage was done to an addition, we were adding a bedroom, a bath and a garage. It tore all of that off."

Some neighborhood residents saw a tornado in the area, Mrs. Pina said.

"I didn't see anything, but people around here have said they saw a funnel cloud going up and down, up and down at the Red X Truck Stop. But we couldn't see anything past our windshield, it was so bad."

No other weather-related injuries were treated at MMH, Ms. Johnson said, and no damage from the storms was reported in the city of Odessa, according to police Cpl. John McAhon.

Teacher recalls 36 hours in Beijing

TEXAS CITY (AP) — A local teacher returned to Houston after a grueling 36 hours in China, where she found herself fleeing from troops and listening to gunfire in Beijing instead of idling away afternoons at the Great Wall.

Teacher Jane Farley, her twin sister, Mary Jean Milford, and her mother, Mary Ross, arrived in the Chinese capital only hours after troops reportedly killed hundreds of demonstrators in Tiananmen Square over the weekend.

She said that what was to be a leisurely 16-day vacation to China — a gift from her mother — became 1½ days confined to a hotel or watching troops in the roadway. They returned to Houston late Tuesday.

Ms. Farley said her hotel in Beijing was about a mile from the square.

"After we ate breakfast Monday, the guide suggested we walk down to a store, located several blocks away from Tiananmen Square," the 45-year-old teacher said, describing her one and only day in the Chinese capital.

"But we discovered the store had been closed by the government, so we walked toward the square. On an overpass-type bridge, there was this barricade set up by the government.

"The army itself was blocking it, but you could see the evidence of what had occurred there the night before. There were bullet holes and shattered glass everywhere and a body covered by a tarp.

"Then suddenly, the people started running and screaming...Running away from the road block. I was told the troops were coming, so we ran down a side street...The troops didn't fire and just as quickly as they passed, the people were back in the street."

Ms. Farley said she and about 20 others on a package tour of China remained in the hotel that evening. As troops filed past the hotel firing guns into the air, the hotel administration instructed guests in the lobby to lie on the floor.

Meanwhile, representatives of the travel agency that organized the trip told the group to sleep in their clothes and be ready to leave on the first available flight out.

"As soon as our plane was airborne, there was a spontaneous round of applause — and crying — not out of hysteria, but out of relief and sadness," she said.

CRASH

The airline said the plane was flown by Americans and identified them as Capt. Will Rogers, pilot Glyn Tobias and engineer Rose Warren, all full-time employees of Suriname Airways. Their hometowns and fates were not immediately known.

The 20-year-old plane, which was registered in the United States, broke into several pieces but did not explode, and no fire broke out, Lachmising said.

But Suriname radio reports quoted nearby residents as saying they heard an explosion shortly before the plane hit the ground. A U.S. pilot in another airplane, who was not identified, was quoted as saying he saw a ball of fire.

Reporters who visited the scene saw burned bodies and wreckage scattered over a wide area.

Lachmising said "the accident was not caused by the plane's technical condition." There were no immediate reports on what caused the crash.

The airline spokesman said the jetliner, leased by Suriname Airways from an unidentified U.S. company, was extensively overhauled in Luxembourg about 10 days ago.

Flight PY764, which took off late Tuesday from Amsterdam's Schiphol Airport, tried three times to land at Suriname's airport, about 15 miles south of the capital, airline spokesman Leo Marapin said in Amsterdam. The weather was "extremely bad" and on the third attempt the jet hit a treetop, he said.

At least three passengers were top Dutch soccer players of Surinamese origin, according to Inter Football, a Dutch organization for professional soccer players. They were to participate in a national tournament in Suriname, a former Dutch colony on the northern coast of South America.

Inter Football spokesman Nico Snijders identified the three as Orwin Linger, Lloyd Doesburg and Fred Patrick — all of the Netherlands. He said initially there were four players on the airplane but later corrected the number.

A passenger list was not immediately available, but airline spokesman Glenn Jie in Amsterdam said most of those on board were Surinamese people living in the Netherlands.

At Suriname Airways' downtown office in Amsterdam, dozens of weeping relatives gathered to wait for news.

Suriname, a nation of about 300,000, gained independence from the Netherlands in 1975. About 200,000 Surinamese live in the Netherlands.

Mrs. Eggleston said she last spoke with her daughter by phone earlier this week. She said the "phone calls were very expensive, but we're in touch as much as possible."

Mrs. Eggleston said her daughter reported that Nanjing student demonstrators were gathering at various downtown locations of the city of 2.2 million people, but so far she said no military troops have been called in to disassemble the crowds.

Meanwhile, Clinton Elliott, 3106 Auburn Drive, said there's been no word from his son, John, since he received a letter from 42-year-old English teacher at Xian Geological College before violence erupted last weekend.

The elder Elliott said he's unsure whether his son will leave China anytime soon, saying, "He's the adventurous type, but I hope he's smart enough to come in from out of the rain."

The younger Elliott moved to Xian — a city of about 3 million people located 400-500 miles west of Beijing — a year ago.

The Associated Press, quoting State Department spokeswoman Margaret Tutwiler, reported that the 7,360 Americans who are permanent residents living outside Beijing were advised to consider leaving the country "depending on the local situation."

They were cautioned to avoid traveling through Beijing in leaving China, she told the news service.

Secretary of State James A. Baker III decided to issue the travel warning after speaking with U.S. Ambassador James Lilley, Ms. Tutwiler said.

Baker was told 50 to 75 percent of the employees of American companies already had decided to leave.

Ms. Tutwiler added that Baker gave the families of the 428 American diplomats and workers at the U.S. embassy and the four consulates permission to depart, but the facilities themselves would stay open.

Foley elected House speaker

Hearst News Service

WASHINGTON — Rep. Thomas Foley of Washington state was elected the 49th speaker of the U.S. House of Representatives on Tuesday and immediately called on colleagues to put aside the "bitterness and division and hostility" that accompanied the fall from grace of his predecessor, Jim Wright.

Foley's swearing-in followed on the heels of some sniping at Wright by the minority leader, Rep. Robert Michel of Illinois, who called the past 35 years of Democratic control of the House "a corrosive acid upon the restraints of civility and comity."

Foley, 60, sidestepped the invitation to battle, arguing instead in an address to the House that peace on Capitol Hill will make for good politics across the country.

In an interview later, Foley said: "The American people make decisions at elections for a purpose, which is to decide who is responsible and tell them to go about the business of governing. People (who) want to keep elections going, month after month and year after year in an unending campaign, won't get a great deal of public sympathy."

Foley will get a chance to test his reasoning on Wednesday. He has been invited to lunch with President Bush at the White House, with Michel making it a threesome.

Foley said he will need to balance two jobs as House speaker, serving simultaneously as a Democratic Party leader and as "leader of the whole House," assuring fairness to all members.

The newly elected speaker said he is not afraid to have controversy in the House, or to see his colleagues passionately debating major issues on the House floor.

But Foley said: "We must do so with an undercurrent of mutual respect...I just don't want to see this poison that has crept in here and there become widespread and mutually hostile (and) recriminatory...with vengeful attitudes tak(ing) over."

Foley has made a 24-year House career of conciliation. In 1964, when the young Spokane, Wash., lawyer upset veteran GOP Rep. Walt Horan, he later hosted a reception in Horan's honor.

Old and new friends gathered yesterday to watch the oath-taking by the first House speaker from the West.

"I've cried so much my tear ducts are dry," said best-selling author Kitty Kelly, a Spokane, Wash., native whose lawyer-father was a longtime friend of Foley's father, Ralph.

Kelly and Democratic Party fundraiser Pamela Harriman watched the swearing in with the speaker's wife Heather Foley and her parents in the House gallery. A reference to his wife led to Foley's single blooper of the day.

"My wife Heather has been my loving companion and friend for 23 years, oops I mean 21 years," said Foley. "No words can express my gratitude to you."

Heather Foley shook her head in amusement, and blushed as the House turned and gave her a standing ovation. "It was an interesting slip," she said later.

Mrs. Foley will continue to serve as her husband's unpaid administrative assistant. The couple yesterday publicly demonstrated their private affection with Foley kissing his wife full on the lips.

Political blood lust still evident in House

By JIM DRINKARD

An Analysis

WASHINGTON (AP) — When the House Republican leader warned his GOP colleagues against a French Revolution mentality in which "evil Democrats" are hauled to the guillotine, some began humming the French national anthem.

Foley

The incident at a party meeting Tuesday illustrates the political blood lust that persists in a chamber fractured by months of ethics charges and countercharges, and the uphill fight new House Speaker Thomas Foley will have in trying to restore order.

"The task I see for myself is to create the environment where...debate can take place without recriminations, without the kind of angry, hostile feelings between members" that have dominated the House of late, Foley told reporters.

"This tension which has built up over a period of many months is going to require a little time to turn around," he said. "It's not going to be done in a day...But I believe it will happen."

Some Democrats, stung by the sacrifice of former speaker Jim Wright in the ethics storm, have turned their sights on Rep. Newt Gingrich, R-Ga., who filed the original ethics charges against Wright. An ethics investigation of Gingrich's book-promotion deal could begin as early as Thursday.

Of the ethics committee and Gingrich, Rep. Louise Slaughter, D-N.Y., said: "I want them to treat him fairly, but I certainly want them to treat him."

The political knives remained out in the Republican camp, as well. GOP political operatives were searching financial disclosure reports for possible ethical shortcomings of Democrats, and Gingric spoke of new ethics cases yet to b filed against members of the majority party.

Minority Leader Robert Michel of Illinois, who warned his colleagues against a frenzy of political executions, blamed the atmosphere on "35 years of uninterrupted power" for Democrats and said ethics abuses won't be forgotten.

"I am all for putting an end to bitterness," Michel said. "I am all in favor of putting our House in order, but we won't do so by sweeping things under the rug."

In an acceptance speech to the House, Foley directed many of his comments at the Republican side, promising increased consultation and appealing to shared values of trust and public service.

The calming style was in sharp contrast to that of Wright. Where Wright confronted, Foley counsels; where Wright followed his own compass, Foley seeks advice.

Republicans will now be looking for that style to be translated into changes that will benefit them. Foley may be able to buy some peace by permitting more Republican amendments to be offered to bills on the House floor, or by bringing legislation before the House under less restrictive rules.

"If he does, I'll be totally and cheerfully bipartisan," said Gingrich, the GOP's chief gadfly.

But he doubted that Foley would be able to give the Republicans much latitude on issues they want most, such as a balanced budget amendment to the Constitution and the death penalty for drug and other offenses. "Those are anathema to the left wing of the Democratic Party," he said.

While he appealed for cooperation, Foley did not seek to hide his own ideology. He openly acknowledged at a news conference that he is a liberal, the label that Democratic presidential nominee Michael Dukakis sought vainly to avoid last year.

And he clearly reserved the sole right to set the House's agenda, the prerogative of the majority.

"Procedurally, Tom will try to work with the Republicans to be fair," said Budget Committee Chairman Leon Panetta, D-Calif. "I think the difference will be he will be a fighter on issues the Democrats stand for."

Democratic chairman says party must regroup

Hearst News Service

WASHINGTON — After a painful spring in which ethical scandals toppled two Democratic House leaders, Ronald Brown conceded Tuesday that the party he leads must regroup and find a new message with fresh appeal for voters.

Brown, chairman of the Democratic National Committee, also admitted it will take until the end of the year to develop the type of short and punchy theme that can play well on television and invoke positive passions for a party under siege in a battle for the ethical high ground.

Still, the party chairman was upbeat: "We're going to develop a message this year and we're going to pound away at it from the beginning of 1990 until the 1992 presidential race."

Republican party leaders have made it clear that they plan to use as campaign fodder the ethics scandals that are forcing former House Speaker Jim Wright, D-Texas, and House Majority Whip Tony Coelho, D-Calif., from Congress.

Special elections will be held to fill the House seats to be vacated by Wright and Coelho as well as that of Claude Pepper, the Florida Democrat who died last week.

Lee Atwater, chairman of the Republican National Committee, has said Republicans would be foolish not to use the ethical problems of individual House Democrats as part of a broad assault on a party that has controlled the House for 34 years.

While downplaying the importance of the ethics issue, Brown agreed that Democrats have left themselves open to negative attacks by failing to put together an effective message making clear what the party stands for.

"We haven't had a clear and concise message that connects with the American people," Brown said. "Whenever you don't have a message, your opponents have a tendency to throw a lot of things at you."

As for the staying power of the ethics issue, Brown shrugged it off, saying that all six Democrats on the House ethics committee voted to charge Wright with 69 violations of House ethics rules and that the committee's special counsel, Richard Phelan, also is a Democrat.

"I don't think Republicans can use (ethics) as an issue when it was Democrats who pursued this matter," Brown said.

Folks in 'The People's House' go ceremonial for installation

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House loves to call itself "The People's House" and its members like to act like folks.

On high state occasions, like Tuesday's, when the House installed a new speaker, it has to go ceremonial but it couldn't quite shed its old-shoe habits.

When Thomas S. Foley had been duly elected, the doorkeeper bellowed out, just as he does on State of the Union night, "Mister Speaker!," introducing new Speaker Thomas S. Foley to departing Speaker Jim Wright.

And Foley marched the route of presidents: down the central aisle, accompanied by an escorting committee, shaking hands all round.

But still, the House is the House. So some members brought their children to work, to be there for the history of it all, and plunked them on the plush brown leather seats. Six of the kids sat in one row.

One tried to figure out how his white sailor hat could be made to fit his knee. Another tried out his sunglasses against the bright lights. When the adults stood and applauded, so did the kids.

To old timers in the galleries, the moment brought to mind another occasion when a popular product of the House stood before the chamber at the climax of a tense national drama.

That was 1974, when Gerald R. Ford, the former House Republican leader, arrived as president, having succeeded Richard Nixon, a chief executive who resigned in disgrace, largely due to the House's own impeachment process.

"Mister Speaker!" the doorkeeper bellowed then, too, but Ford showed the members that he was still a man of the House with a corny line; he was, he said, the same old guy: "I am a Ford, not a Lincoln."

Administration OKs sale of fighter jets to Pakistan

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Bush administration has agreed to sell Pakistan 60 more F-16 fighter jets, meeting a longstanding request by the Moslem nation, a senior administration official said.

Brent Scowcroft, the president's national security adviser, said Tuesday night that the deal, which was not officially announced, was complete except for congressional notification.

Scowcroft spoke with reporters after a state dinner in honor of Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto, who was wrapping up her first official visit to Washington today.

The F-16 deal reportedly is worth about $1.4 billion.

The U.S.-educated prime minister was ending her Washington visit with an address to a joint meeting of Congress and talks with members of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

She also was lunching with Defense Secretary Dick Cheney today and hosting a dinner in honor of Vice President Dan Quayle.

At the White House, Bush and Mrs. Bhutto's talks Tuesday focused on the bloody conflict in Afghanistan, Pakistan's defense needs, its nuclear program, and the international battle against illicit drugs, officials said afterwards.

The United States and Pakistan, which has given refuge to 3.6 million Afghan refugees, have cooperated for years in the effort to support the Afghan rebels seeking to topple Kabul's Marxist government.

Bush acknowledged he was struck by the prime minister, who cut an elegant figure during her White House visit in a traditional white veil and bright royal blue tunic and pants.

"She's very impressive," Bush was overheard telling West German President Richard von Weizsaecker during a separate meeting later in the day.

With a glittering dinner and a full-dress military review, Bush orchestrated a warm White House welcome for the 35-year-old Mrs. Bhutto, who is the first woman to lead a Moslem nation and is the world's youngest prime minister.

In his formal farewell remarks, Bush said he and Mrs. Bhutto had "discussed ways to encourage a political solution in Afghanistan" that would replace the "illegitimate regime in Kabul" with a peaceful and nonaligned representative government.

"The United States and Pakistan will continue to explore any serious avenue towards this end," Bush said.

Mrs. Bhutto replied: "We are in complete accord" on the course of policy in regards to Afghanistan. She added that Pakistan "remains committed to a political solution of the Afghan problem."

The late President Mohammed Zia Ul-Haq, Mrs. Bhutoo's predecessor, had rejected the idea of a political settlement in neighboring Afghanistan.

Advocates say decriminalization of drug use would drop crime rates

WASHINGTON (AP) — With President Bush vowing that the "scourge" of drugs will stop and drug czar William J. Bennett organizing the troops for a full-scale war, calls for decriminalization of drug use are like cries in the dark.

But the cries are getting louder and have drawn together people from disparate sides of the political spectrum — from conservative William F. Buckley to Baltimore Mayor Kurt Schmoke, a former prosecutor.

Advocates of such a stance point to a drop in crime rates following the 1933 end of Prohibition that had outlawed liquor sales since 1920. Today, huge drug profits and artificially high drug prices are fueling the violent crime plaguing cities throughout the country, they say.

Removing the profits would remove the criminals, the argument goes, and the billions of dollars now spent on unsuccessful enforcement efforts could be funneled into treatment and education programs.

But the Bush administration maintains the need for "zero tolerance" of illicit drug use, and fighting the war on drugs — even if it requires scarce federal financial resources — is a priority on Capitol Hill. In March, Bush told one group of high school students that legalizing drugs would be "180 degrees wrong."

A recent forum featuring advocates of decriminalization — organized by the libertarian-leaning Cato Institute and featuring presentations by Schmoke, Princeton University Professor Ethan Nadelmann and attorney James Ostrowksi — drew attendees from Bennett's Office of National Drug Control Policy, the Justice Department and the Health and Human Services Department.

The three who spoke to the forum emphasized that they weren't advocating use of now-illicit drugs.

"The available evidence indicates that legalization would not lead to an explosion in drug use. The repeal of alcohol prohibition did not," said Ostrowski. "The decriminalization of marijuana in Alaska and the Netherlands did not. The cheap and ready access to cocaine and narcotics in the 19th century did not.

"The fact is, most people in our society are capable of acting responsibly when it comes to drugs," he said. "Users of nicotine are declining. Alcohol abusers are only a small percentage of the population."

The panel members differed, however, on how much decriminalization they want.

Schmoke stressed that although he believes marijuana use and sales should not have criminal penalties, he was not advocating that sales of cocaine, heroin and other dangerous drugs be allowed in the same manner that alcoholic beverages are now sold.

"The model that I think makes the most sense is the model in Holland, in which the government treats addicts as patients and says that you can obtain these substances from certified health professionals," Schmoke said. "But if you obtain these substances outside the public health system, you're subject to criminal sanctions."

Such a plan lowers the crime rate, because "you don't have to rob and steal and break into people's houses to obtain enough goods to buy drugs," and it restricts the spread of AIDS that otherwise would be transmitted through the sharing of needles, he said.

Nadelmann said that from a strict cost-benefit analysis — including money spent for enforcement of drug laws as well as the cost of violence, corruption and the need for ever-expanding prisons — the prohibition on drugs makes no sense.

He acknowledged that while the illegality of some drugs may make some people, particularly those in higher socioeconomic groups, stay away from the substances, the nation can't ignore the violence plaguing inner cities, much of it caused by the illegality of the drug-dealers' trade.

Ever-increasing spending on unsuccessful enforcement makes no sense, Nadelmann argued.

"Everything we've been doing in the past or that we're talking about doing now and that people are talking about doing in the future in terms of criminal justice approaches is doomed to failure," he said. "Twenty years of experience has shown that.

"And it has nothing to do with corruption in Latin America or turf squabbles between law enforcement agencies or with whether or not we have a drug czar or whether or not his name is William Bennett," Nadelmann said. "What it has to do with is the nature of the market, the nature of the commodity and how lucrative the whole thing is."

At least 12 percent of children have mental disorders, study says

WASHINGTON (AP) — Between 12 and 22 percent of America's children — as many as 14 million of those under age 18 — are suffering from some type of mental disorder, but only about a third are receiving any treatment, a study released today reported.

A committee of the Institute of Medicine said in the study that though millions of childhood mental disorders are not treated, the situation has improved in the last 20 years and there is "demonstrable progress" toward understanding, preventing and correcting many of the mental diseases of youngsters.

"There is increasing reason for optimism that many of the major childhood mental disorders are responsive to treatment," the committee said.

But in far too many cases, no treatment at all is being offered to troubled youngsters, the committee said.

Though conservative estimates place the number of American children with mental disorders at about 7.5 million, or 12 percent, the committee said the number could be much higher.

"Recent studies have suggested that the range may be as high as 17 to 22 percent, or 11 to 14 million children and adolescents," the report said.

Problems identified in the report included mood disorders such as depression, behavior disorders such as hyperactivity, developmental disorders such as autism, as well as chronic drug use, sexual problems and eating disorders including anorexia.

"Approximately 2.5 million children in this country received treatment in 1985 for a mental disorder," the committee reported. "This means that at least another 5 million other children needed some type of intervention, but did not receive any treatment."

Poverty and ghetto life contribute heavily to the nation's troubled youth, the study said.

Youngsters with mental and behavioral problems "may exceed 20 percent in some populations, such as inner-city children, who are exposed to severe psychological adversity," the study said.

The total cost to the nation has not been measured, but the committee said the figure would probably run into the billions of dollars a year.

In addition to the costs of treatment, the committee said there are substantial indirect costs from the need for social services, criminal justice and special education.

"Each year in this nation about 49,000 children and youth are held in various public youth facilities, and many thousands more are in adult prisons," the study said. "Millions of children are involved with child welfare, foster care and residential treatment. Many of these children have a diagnosable mental disorder, but receive neither diagnosis nor treatment."

The study also said that about 25 percent of all mentally retarded children also have behavioral and emotional difficulties. These compound problems often result in such children being confined for life to institutions.

A national plan of coordinated research and training that would attract more professionals to the mental health field, and lead to a better understanding of how to prevent, evaluate and treat mental illness in children was proposed by the committee. The report called for a national investment of up to $198 million annually by the fifth year.

Crewmen of the battleship USS Iowa man the rails and gun turrets as the ship leaves Norfolk Naval Base in Norfolk on Wednesday for the Mediterranean Sea.

USS Iowa leaves for Mediterranean Sea

NORFOLK (AP) — The battleship USS Iowa left today for a six-month tour of duty in the Mediterranean Sea with the cause of a gun turret explosion that killed 47 sailors still uncertain.

Several dozen relatives of the 1,500 crewmen gathered at the Norfolk Naval Station to watch the ship leave. Family members waved, cried and embraced each other as the ship pulled away, its crew in dress whites lining the rails.

Cherrie Todd said she and her husband, seaman Ernest Todd, were worried about the ship's safety.

"It's scary," she said. "You don't know what to expect." She said her husband has 18 months left in the Navy and is anxious to leave the battleship.

Other relatives said they were not worried. "It doesn't seem to be anything that would happen again," said Cindy Jegel, the wife of a crewman.

The No. 2 turret damaged in an April 19 explosion in one of the ship's 16-inch guns will be used during the deployment to train replacements for the dead sailors in the workings of the gun, ship spokesman Lt. Cmdr. Brad Goforth said Tuesday.

However, the Navy has barred the firing of 16-inch guns aboard any of its four battleships until the Iowa investigation is completed.

Shipboard work on the investigation has been completed, the Navy said. Although the turret is not in working condition, crew members said the guns can be moved and the area of the blast has been cleaned up.

The ship will undergo about $13 million in repairs when it returns.

Report says Third World falling behind on payments

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal auditing agency says Third World countries are falling behind on $70 billion in debt repayments to U.S. banks and that American regulators should make banks put up more reserves to protect depositors against loan losses.

The report by the General Accounting Office, the auditing arm of Congress, did not name the debtor countries.

Argentina, the third largest debtor behind Brazil and Mexico, has paid no interest on its foreign debt for more than one year and owes U.S. banks more than $8.5 billion.

The GAO said regulators should demand that banks put up about 12 times more reserves against loan losses than is currently required.

"Because banks generally respond to reserve requirements by writing down assets by the required amounts, a decline in the book value of their assets results," the GAO said in a note on figures it sent to Rep. John J. LaFalce, D-N.Y., a member of the House Banking Committee.

Though the auditors' report did not say so, writing down a bank's assets reduces the amount of business it can do and makes the management look bad to depositors and stockholders.

A bank is now only required to put up reserves when the regulators declare foreign loans it has made to be either a total loss or "value-impaired." That means the debtors have not paid interest for six months or have shown in other ways that they are in deep trouble. Bank regulators next week are expected to discuss behind closed doors whether to put loans to Argentina in the "value-impaired" pigeonhole.

The list already contains Poland, Bolivia, Peru, Zaire, Sudan, Nicaragua and Liberia. But their total debt is small compared with the major debtors.

In a letter Tuesday to Alan Greenspan, chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, LaFalce joined in urging that the banks put up more reserves. The Federal Reserve takes the lead in the U.S. regulation process.

"U.S. banks maintain lower reserve levels than almost all other industrialized countries," LaFalce wrote.

California voters reject tax supporting child care

FREMONT, Calif. (AP) — A landmark measure to create a direct tax on households and businesses to support child care was overwhelmingly rejecting Tuesday.

With 46 of 64 precincts reporting, the vote was 9,388 against to 2,727 in favor.

The measure, which needed to be approved by a two-thirds majority, would have raised $1.8 million a year from residents, businesses, developers and the city's own coffers to open care centers at 30 elementary schools. Cities and child-care advocates nationwide had been watching for the outcome.

The program in this city of 165,000 on the east side of San Francisco Bay also would have helped sick kids and subsidized poor parents for baby-sitting costs.

"Cities around the country are looking to the Fremont example to see whether taxpayers are willing to pay for child care," said John Kyle, director of the Children and Families and Cities Project of the National League of Cities in Washington.

"People in 80 percent of all cities are saying child care is the most pressing need for children from birth to 9 years old," he said. "Cities are looking for ways to handle that need, and resources are the biggest barrier to providing good services."

About 100 cities offer some kind of support for child care, Kyle said. Some simply coordinate programs or offer training; others spend money through general funds, federal community block grants or developer fees.

"Fremont's measure is the only example I know about of a dedicated tax for any services having to do with children," Kyle said. "This is on the forefront of things to come in the future."

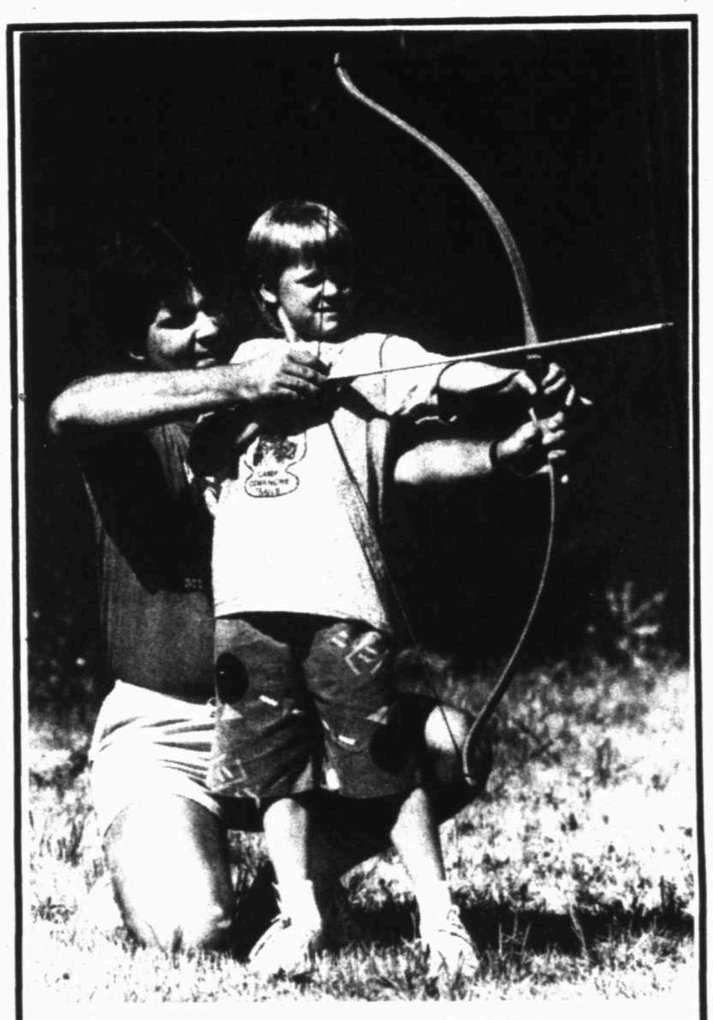

The measure would impose a $12 annual tax on every homeowner, with renters exempt, and a 20 percent business tax surcharge. It would expire in 15 years.

The vote in Fremont will indicate "how deep public support is for child care," said Abby Cohen, managing attorney for the Child Care Law Center in San Francisco.

Turbulence on jet tosses babies in air

CHICAGO (AP) — A passenger said it "felt like death" when turbulent weather buffeted a United Airlines jumbo jet, tossing babies in the air and bouncing luggage and a food cart off the ceiling of the plane.

At least 21 people were injured, none seriously, after a DC-10 bound for Chicago from Los Angeles dropped 100 to 200 feet Tuesday while traveling at 37,000 feet over Kansas, officials said.

Passengers said at least two babies were pulled from their mothers' arms by the force of the drop, with one plucked out of the air by a man who lunged to catch her. The other woman couldn't find her baby for several minutes, said passenger James Jorgenson, 29, a Racine, Wis., printing engineer.

"There was a woman in front of the plane holding a baby and I saw that baby bounce off the ceiling," he said. "I thought we were done, I thought it was all over, it was that violent. Seats were broken and luggage racks were broken."

"It felt like death," said passenger James Phillips, the president of a Wisconsin equipment company.

Others on United Flight 90, which was carrying 232 passengers and 11 crew members, said they felt like they were riding in a roller coaster or a dropping elevator.

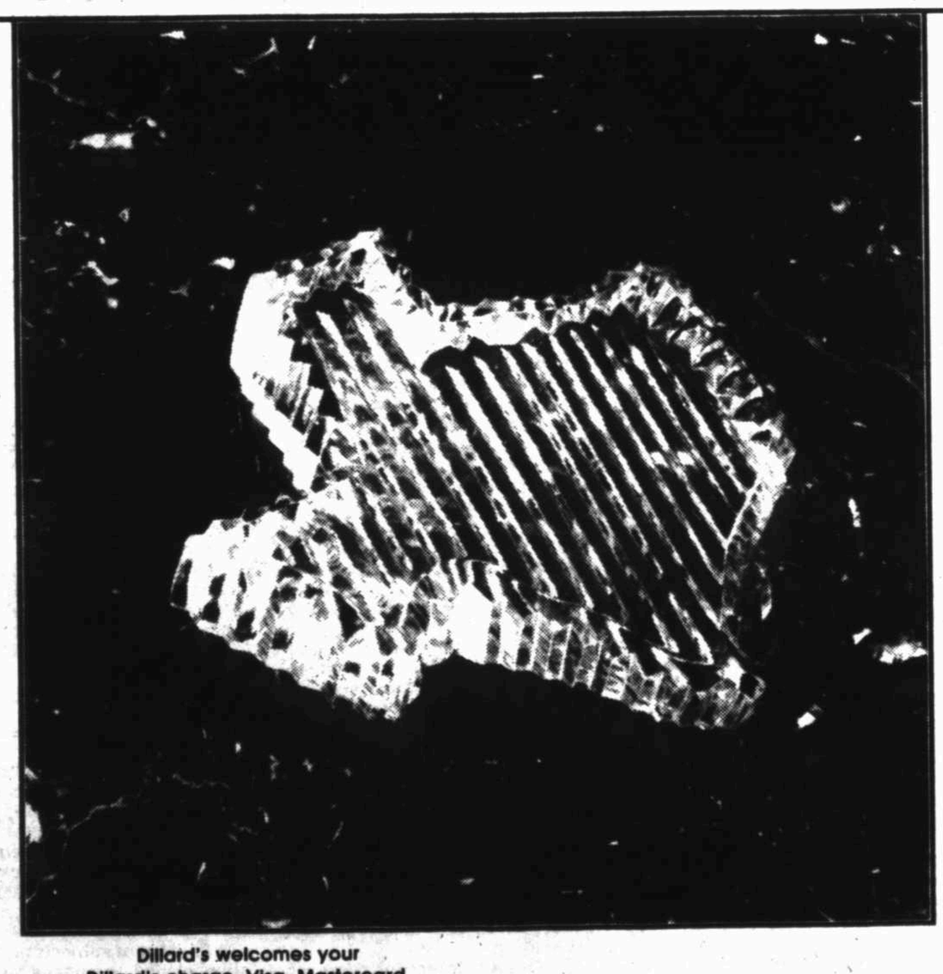

"Anything that wasn't tied down flew up to bounce off the ceiling," Jorgenson said.

Four people were admitted to hospitals after the plane landed at about 7 p.m. at O'Hare International Airport in Chicago, authorities said. Hospital spokesmen said they were in stable or good condition. Three suffered head, neck, shoulder or back injuries, while a fourth suffered chest pains, they said.

Other injured passengers were treated and released.

United spokesman Joe Hopkins said the plane was over Garden City, Kan., "when it encountered clear-air turbulence...which means the pilot couldn't see it."

Khomeini's death won't end upheaval

It's tempting to say that the death over the weekend of Islamic religious leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini will mean that Iran will once more become a member of the civilized world and the insane killings and torture that have taken place there in the past 10 years will end, but the evidence doesn't support that optimistic a viewpoint. In fact, if anything can be gleaned from the outpouring of grief by the ayatollah's followers, it is that they will carry his "revolution" into the future — if they can hold power.

Such a scenario likely would mean continuing grief for the United States and her people, who have been objects of Khomeini's hatred for a decade. He railed at "the Great Satan," as he called this nation, and despised not only the Western customs and ways of Americans, but also the influence the United States wields over those in the Third World.

His hatred took physical form in the storming of the U.S. Embassy in Tehran, and holding of 52 American hostages for 444 days beginning in 1979. Even today, nine Americans — not from that original hostage episode, but others taken later — are captive in Lebanon, held presumably on orders of the ayatollah.

In the name of his Islamic revolution, Iran fought a bloody and costly — in both lives and money — war against Iraq. More than 1 million Iranians lost their lives, thousands of them children sent across mine-laden fields as human minesweeps or into the front lines as "cannon fodder."

Khomeini's horrors abounded among his own people, as well. First-hand reports indicated that women who broke Islamic law by letting their faces be seen uncovered in public were routinely raped by their captors inside prison walls and torture was practiced unmercifully.

Yet for all the appalling reports, many in Iran apparently worshiped the ayatollah, evidenced by the vast outpouring of emotion at his funeral this week. His coffin was knocked to the ground in the frenzy and a crowd of mourners removed his body and tore the shroud to bits. Crowds of people wailed and cried out for Khomeini.

For the meantime, President Ali Khamenei has been appointed caretaker leader of Iran, but a presidential election has been scheduled for Aug. 18th. No doubt, there will be major wrangling by various factions in Iran to succeed Khomeini.

It's important to note that not all Iranians supported Khomeini and that there probably will be a major struggle for control of the government. The United States certainly should position itself to normalize relations with Iran — if the new regime is conducive to such a move.

Although a new leader might be inclined to at least lead Iran back toward more normal relations with the United States and the rest of the world, it's important to remember the nine Americans held hostage now. Their release should be the first step required if Iran wants to move toward normalization.

Terrorist predicts demise of Arafat

DAMASCUS, Syria — Plenty of people have wished Yasir Arafat dead over the years, but if he is ever assassinated, it may well be by a fellow Palestinian. That is the prediction of a Palestinian terrorist who could be the one to order the deed.

Jack Anderson

For 24 years, Ahmed Jibril and Arafat have been bitter enemies. They share a common cause — a Palestinian homeland — but a different approach. Jibril despises Arafat for renouncing terrorism, recognizing Israel and courting the United States.

Their face-off has been nearly fatal at times. Aides to Arafat say Jibril has tried to have Arafat killed several times since 1966. Arafat himself declined to elaborate in a recent interview with us in Tunisia. His only comment was that an independent Palestinian state would put an end to spoilers like Jibril.

Jibril was not so shy about condemning his old nemesis when we interviewed him in Damascus. He had plenty to say, including a prediction that Arafat would be assassinated sometime soon.

We asked if he would issue the execution order himself. He did not say yes or no. "We are watching and waiting to see what the Americans will give Arafat," he said. "We are sure in advance that you won't give him anything. The Americans have made Arafat do a striptease. So he has stripped off all his clothes, and the Americans and Israelis will give him nothing for it."

Jibril said that in spite of U.S. negotiations with Arafat and the Palestine Liberation Organization, the Bush administration will side with Israel and hang Arafat out to dry. "Therefore, we can figure that the end of Arafat is inevitable," Jibril said. "It will be a natural end. It is coming shortly. As similar as the end of Sadat. The only difference here is that Sadat had Egypt in his hands. Arafat has nothing."

Egyptian President Anwar Sadat was assassinated by Moslem fundalmentalists who were angry that he had signed a peace treaty with Israel.

"Are you suggesting that someone will assassinate Arafat?" we asked.

"Yes. That is what I mean," said Jibril.

In Jibril's mind, assassination by angry fundamentalists is a "natural end" for Arafat.

Jibril recalled the time when he and Arafat worked together in Syria on their common cause until 1965. "We were treating him as family," Jibril said. He said he broke with Arafat because the PLO leader was "shameless" and a liar.

Others familiar with the falling out say Arafat was worried that Jibril was too much of a lackey for Syria to ever be an independent leader for the Palestinians. Intelligence sources say Jibril is now a lackey for Iran and is suspected in the bombing of Pan Am flight 103 on orders from the Ayatollah Khomeini.

Jibril ended his assessment of Arafat by questioning his heritage — the lowest blow in the Middle East.

"I think that Arafat might not be an Arab," he said. "Till now, we have no document which proves that Arafat is Palestinian or an Arab. His mother is Palestinian, but little is known of his father.

Jibril suggested that a check into Arafat's family tree would turn up some Jews. In Jibril's mind, that is the only way to explain Arafat's willingness to deal with Israel.

U.S.S. BUSH — Last month we had a private visit with President Bush and here is our assessment of him. He is pragmatic, patrician and patriotic. He is a take-charge president who is at ease with power. Bush understands the paperwork of the White House, if not always the human undercurrents. He is effective at solving problems, but less effective at anticipating them. It is sometimes hard to discern from his solutions exactly what his policies are. They seem to have the consistency of Jell-O — slow to set with a tendency to wobble. Certainly, Bush is no Ronald Reagan. President Reagan steered the ship of state with a firm hand, but with little understanding of the workings in the engine room. Bush understands the functioning of the engine room, but he has a loose hand on the helm. At times he seems more intent on steering around obstacles than following a set course.

MINI-EDITORIAL — A judge in Chicago has ruled that a man is under no obligation to call his mother. Richard Rosenbaum filed a lawsuit to keep his mother Jean from contacting him. A judge sided with him, but then ordered him to call his mother every three months. Now another judge has ruled that no one can make him call his mother. That's too bad. Barring any constitutional separation of mother and son that we're not aware of, the world would be better off if we were all required to phone home occasionally.

Desperate Argentina

How much is a package of mat in Argentina? It depends on the time of day. The price of mat — an herb tea from the pampas — and all food is escalating about 1 percent an hour.

Salaries, not surprisingly, aren't keeping pace with inflation. Banks are running out of currency, and many businesses can't pay their workers. Hunger is rampant. Food riots, pillaging of supermarkets have left 14 dead and 80 wounded.

The value of the austral, Argentina's currency, is falling precipitously. The credibility of President Raul Alfonsin is collapsing with the currency. Alfonsin, who put former military generals on trial for political crimes involving the "desaparecidos," has arrested leftists, charging them with inciting food riots.

Nobel Peace Prize-winner Adolfo Perez Esquivel decried the arrests as scapegoatism. He blamed hyperinflation and poverty for the riots.

What triggered Argentina's worst economic crisis in the century? The election of Peronist leader Carlos Saul Menem, a charismatic provincial governor without much of a platform, caused a run on the austral by Argentina's speculators. Ruinous borrowing and Alfonsin's bumbling economic plans didn't help.

The tarnished democratic leader remains a lame duck until December, although Menem has asked him to step down earlier.

If this chaos sounds familiar, it is. The Peronists, whom many Argentines believe can mystically save the country, hastened its economic ruin a generation ago. The military, practicing Mussolini-style fascism, nearly destroyed Argentina's political conscience. Democracy, championed by Alfonsin, was a noble dream that could not banish Argentina's huge debt.

The real problem in Argentina goes beyond economics and politics. Argentina has no social fabric that weaves together people of different classes, regions and backgrounds. It is an immigrant nation that never melded newcomers into a pluralistic society. A sense of common destiny remains alien. Instead, Argentines, proud and well-educated, commit war against each other.

The mystical unity of Peronism didn't save Argentina before. Nor is Menem likely to save it again. But Peronism is the will of the people, expressed in a free election.

Desperate Argentina, obsessed with the myth of Juan and Evita Peron, needs a government of consent. But the political cost of cooperation and compromise may be too high for Menem to pay. The shelves are bare of miracles.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Wednesday, June 7, the 158th day of 1989. There are 207 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On June 7, 1776, Richard Henry Lee of Virginia proposed to the Continental Congress a resolution calling for a Declaration of Independence.

On this date:

In 1654, Louis the 14th was crowned king of France in Rheims.

In 1769, frontiersman Daniel Boone first began to explore the present-day Bluegrass State, according to Kentucky's Historical Society.

In 1848, French postimpressionist painter Paul Gauguin was born in Paris.

In 1864, Abraham Lincoln was nominated for another term as president at his party's convention in Baltimore.

In 1929, the sovereign state of Vatican City came into existence as copies of the Lateran Treaty were exchanged in Rome.

In 1948, the Communists completed their takeover of Czechoslovakia with the resignation of President Eduard Benes.

In 1967, author-critic Dorothy Parker, famed for her caustic wit, died in New York.

In 1980, a better than 50-to-1 long shot, "Temperence Hill," won the Belmont Stakes in New York.

In 1981, Israeli military planes destroyed a nuclear power plant in Iraq, a facility the Israelis charged could have been used to make nuclear weapons.

Bambi not terrorizing woods any longer!

Every so often the question arises — why do Americans need semiautomatic weapons to kill deer? Even the president is concerned that if he bans domestic assault weapons he would be hurting the rights of sportsmen.

Art Buchwald

In order to understand why you need a semiautomatic for sport, you have to go back in history before these guns played such an important role in splatting animals.

Once upon a time there lived a very ferocious deer named Bambi (also known as Bambi the Bully), who roamed hither and yon with a gang of terrifying animals, including squirrels, rabbits and chipmunks. They preyed on innocent hunters and sportsmen who just wanted to enjoy the outdoors with their dogs. Bambi had hoofs that could trample a mushroom to death. He also had sharp teeth that could scare a butterfly out of a duck blind. He was truly the most dangerous animal in the forest.

Such was the power of Bambi and his henchman, Thumper, a killer rabbit, that it didn't take long before many hunters were afraid to go into the woods.

One day Bambi was out looking for food with his mother when he heard shots. He became furious and turned to face the men who had fired them. As soon as they saw the look of maniacal hatred in Bambi's eyes, the hunters fell to their knees, and one of them cried, "Don't hurt us. The Constitution says we have a right to rat-a-tat-tat."

"Guns don't kill deer," the other hunter yelled, "deer kill people."

At this point, Bambi stuck his antlers into the hunters' backsides and they ran away. The owl hooted, the frogs croaked, and the foxes ran in circles.

The screaming hunters made straight for the headquarters of the National Gun Lovers Society where they breathlessly told their story to Charlton Heston. Gun lovers at the target range heard the tale and decided to hang Bambi in effigy — and boycott his movies.

A man shouted to the armed multitudes, "The reason we can't go into the forest is because we don't have enough fire power to protect ourselves."

Someone in the crowd yelled back, "Give us the guns so that we can do the job."

Another person said, "Unless we have heavier magazines, we'll never thin out the herds."

The rally went on all afternoon. Finally, because the gun lovers had done so much to get the president elected, they went to see him to make their pitch.

They related the story of Bambi and how he was destroying the pleasures of deer shooting. To emphasize their point, the two hunters took down their pants and showed the president what Bambi had done.

The president, who had seen a lot of terrible sights during World War II, was never more horrified. He decided that the only way to protect deer hunters was to allow them to purchase the assault weapon of their choice, without any questions.

Once permission was granted, thousands of gun lovers traded in their rifles for semiautomatics. Now the battle between deer and the American sportsman is even. People who have seen Bambi in the woods say that he is no longer the cocky, vicious stag he used to be. He has been hiding in the thicket, as has Thumper the rabbit. Thanks to semiautomatic weapons, the Bambis of this world will never frighten a hunter again.

FLORA LEWIS

NATO envisions new world, readies agenda

PARIS — Overlooked in the to-do at President Bush's last-minute feat of rescuing NATO from diplomatic donnybrook is a new plan to keep the alliance together well into the next century.

Flora Lewis

Two major documents were approved in Brussels.

One was a "comprehensive concept" of military planning and arms control. The second, called merely a "declaration," sought to broaden NATO concerns and give it a reason to exist after the cold war.

"Our security is to be seen in a context broader than the protection from war alone," was the commitment of the 16 government heads.

Without explicitly saying so, they addressed the question of whether there will be any point in a formally binding Atlantic relation if the fear that provoked it should melt away.

The answer is firmly yes.

If there ever is to be a "common European house," as Mikhail Gorbachev urges, the allies have undertaken to maintain themselves as one family among its residents.

They dedicate themselves to "overcoming the division of Europe," but with an "enhanced partnership" of special ties, the opposite of dissolving blocs and reverting to the past.

Bush defied geography when he said "the U.S. is and will remain a European power." But he was making the long-term political point enshrined in the declaration.

Some commentators stress likely public pressure to denuclearize Europe and end direct U.S. involvement as perceptions of threat from the East recede. The governments have affirmed their determination to work together for the contrary.

Officials at NATO have been preparing the declaration for nearly a year, and it has a lot of the general pieties haggling diplomats tend to produce.

But they are proud and pleased with the results because they do lay a foundation for envisaging "another 40 years," as one leader rhapsodized.

For the near term, a balance is struck between keeping up the West's guard and reducing East-West tensions.

There is no comfort for those who want to abolish nuclear weapons, though much smaller arsenals are considered desirable.

President Ronald Reagan's Reykjavik dream has sunk without a trace.

The document reaffirms nuclear deterrence, saying "for the foreseeable future there is no alternative to the alliance strategy ..."

The military statement even revamps old arguments for short-range missiles. They aren't just needed to counter far larger Soviet missile deployments, nor East bloc conventional superiority, it says.

If and when equality is reached in both categories, the new line holds that land-based nuclear arms (meaning on German territory) will still be required for coupling, that is, keeping the U.S. commitment credible.

This will be the main argument if conventional parity is achieved.

But the importance of the declaration is the attempt to shift the focus away from NATO's dominant military concerns and assure that political disengagement doesn't follow arms cuts.

There is agreement to "strengthen our process of political consultation and, where appropriate, coordination," to work for more "commercial, monetary and technological cooperation," even a backhand reference to mollifying U.S. fears of a "fortress Europe" in economic and trade policies.

A long list of subjects on which the allies pledge to engage the East together, or at any rate coherently, also seeks to head off the notion that they won't need existing links if peace really breaks out.

"Our joint agenda" includes East-West cooperation on environment, terrorism, drugs, offering "Western experience and know-how" to East-bloc states struggling with sickly economies, expanding contacts on all levels, setting up a "fellowship-scholarship program" for Europeans from East and West and North Americans "to promote study of our democratic institutions."

There is, in effect, an agreement on what the end of the cold war should mean.

It requires full human rights, and also "the right of all the people in each country to determine freely and periodically the nature of the government they wish to have."

This ambitious program in no way assures that NATO's chronic bouts of "disarray" won't continue.

Long before members get to specifics, they are bound to have some rough arguments on sharing conventional arms cuts.

The Soviets are right in pointing out that there are 110,000 foreign troops in West Germany (British, Belgian, Dutch, Canadian and French, who are not under NATO) not included in the 275,000 ceiling proposed for Soviet and U.S. forces on their allies' territory. And U.S. allies will want to do some budget-trimming of their own.

But NATO has begun to look ahead to a different kind of world, and to reject the status quo ante of past pre-war periods.

That's a worthwhile role.

NATION in brief

Anderson takes gun to Capitol

WASHINGTON (AP) — Jack Anderson, the syndicated columnist, is being investigated for carrying an unloaded gun into the U.S. Capitol to demonstrate security lapses, congressional authorities said.

Anderson displayed the handgun, and a bullet, on May 24 when he interviewed Senate Republican Leader Bob Dole in the Capitol for a television special on terrorism, said Dole spokesman Walt Riker.

Riker said Anderson claimed to have walked through a metal detector with the 9mm Austrian-made pistol on his way to Dole's office. He pulled out the gun and handed it to the Kansas Republican after Dole said in the interview that no place was immune from terrorists.

"We realized afterward that we'd been had, that it was an on-camera stunt...We were taken aback, but as we thought about it, we realized he may have committed a crime," said Riker.

Dole's aides turned the bullet, which Anderson left behind, over to Senate Sergeant at Arms Henry Giugni. Giugni said Tuesday that the bullet and statements about the incident had been turned over to U.S. Capitol Police and officers from that force were investigating the incident along with the U.S. attorney's office.

Anderson the following week broadast tape of the interview and footage of him walking through a Capitol metal detector.

Anti-gay attacks on rise

WASHINGTON (AP) — Neo-Nazi skinhead gangs constitute a new and frightening addition to the groups and individuals committing violent or harassing acts against gay people, an advocacy group said in a report released today.

"In a disturbing trend, organized hate group activity — most of it involving neo-Nazi skinheads — appeared to be on the rise, with groups in 17 communities reporting threats and/or attacks by hate groups," according to the report compiled by the National Gay & Lesbian Task Force.

The report also provides evidence that homosexuals are being increasingly victimized on college campuses.

Last year, 7,248 incidents — ranging from harassment to homicide — were reported to the task force by 120 organizations in 38 states and the District of Columbia.

About two-thirds of the incidents were verbal harassment. The remainder were: physical assaults, 12 percent; threats of violence or menacing, 10 percent; vandalism, 6 percent; police abuse, 3 percent; bomb threats, 1 percent; and homicide, arson and "other," 1 percent. The "other" category includes police negligence, attempted violence and one kidnapping.

Chairman apologizes

WASHINGTON (AP) — House Speaker Tom Foley said today that Republican Party chief Lee Atwater personally apologized for a GOP document that labeled Foley a closet liberal and equated his voting record with that of Rep. Barney Frank, an acknowledged homosexual.

Atwater telephoned Foley late Tuesday and was "deeply apologetic for any inferences of personal character," Foley said at his first daily news conference as speaker.

"He repudiated the statement and apologized...I accepted that," said Foley, D-Wash. "It's regrettable, and entirely untrue of course. I think the matter is now at an end."

Foley said Atwater promised such attacks would not be repeated and added, "I know of no reason why he won't keep that promise."

Foley, sworn in as speaker on Tuesday in place of a scandal-scarred Jim Wright, also quoted Atwater as saying he regretted any inference that the political attack was "personal."

Contras to remain in U.S.

MIAMI (AP) — Contra leaders said they will remain in the United States and organize exiles until they are convinced the Sandinista leadership plans to hold fair elections.

A declaration Tuesday by all but one of the seven Contra directors said they would resist U.S. pressure to return to Nicaragua at least until anti-Sandinista groups pick a single presidential candidate for elections scheduled for February.

"With a unified opposition, the candidate should take the initiative to call all Nicaraguans back to support them," director Aristides Sanchez said at the Contras' Miami headquarters. "Returning before that would be premature."

U.S. State Department officials have pressured the Contra leadership to leave Miami and return to Nicaragua, Sanchez said.

"But that doesn't take into account the idiosyncracies of Nicaragua," Sanchez said.

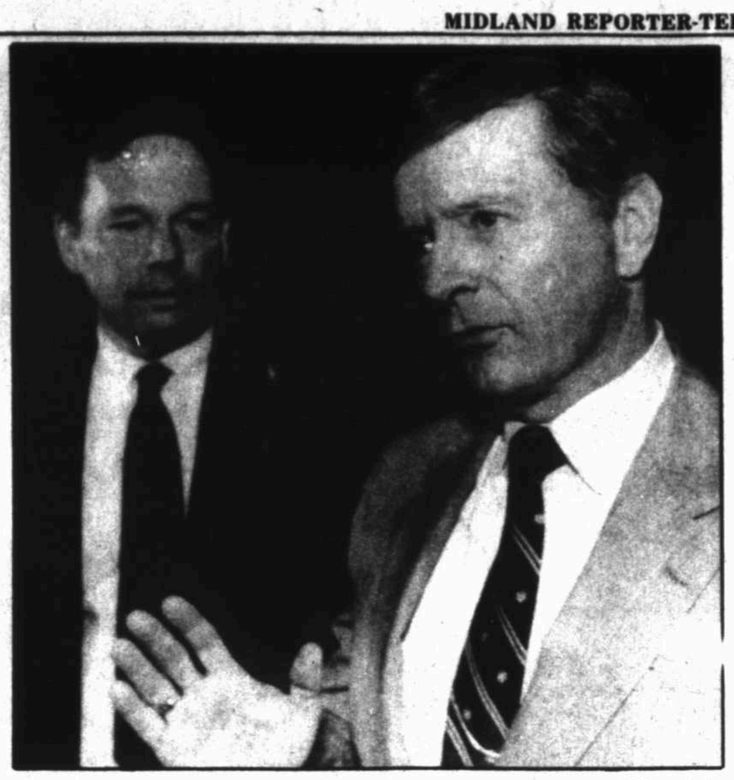

Florida city bans ducks

ST. AUGUSTINE BEACH, Fla. (AP) — The ducks have been dumped and their supporters are crying foul.

The few Muscovy ducks that have survived a 17-month-old feud over their presence in this north Florida coastal community were exiled by commissioners at a late-night session Monday unattended by most pro-duck forces.

On a 3-2 vote, the city commission banished the half dozen remaining Muscovies and disbanded a committee that had been formed to resolve the dispute.

No destination or departure date has been decided for the ducks.

U.S. Deputy Sec. of Energy Henson Moore, right, and U.S. Attorney Mike Norton, of Denver, talk to reporters Tuesday about a criminal investigation into the Rocky Flats nuclear weapons plant.

Rocky Flats nuclear weapons plant undergoes criminal investigation

DENVER (AP) — Scores of federal agents seized records at the Rocky Flats nuclear weapons plant as the government announced a criminal investigation of possible environmental violations at the facility.

Investigators were checking allegations that employees treated, stored and disposed of hazardous wastes without permits, falsely certified federal environmental reports and concealed environmental contamination, said U.S. Attorney Mike Norton in Denver.

Norton said 75 agents from the FBI and the Environmental Protection Agency's office of criminal investigations began searching the plant Tuesday morning. The probe is expected to last six months to a year.

Federal officials declined to say what prompted the search at the plant, identified last year by the Department of Energy as the most environmentally hazardous site in the nuclear weapons industry because of contamination of an underground reservoir.

Officials stressed that no new dangers existed at the plant, which processes plutonium for nuclear weapons.

"It is absolutely essential that the public understand that this investigation does not signal any major new environmental safety or health concern," Attorney General Dick Thornburgh said in a statement issued in Washington.

Rep. David Skaggs, D-Colo., whose district encompasses Rocky Flats, said the implications of the swarm of investigators at the plant "is the Department of Justice had some reason to believe they would be risking destruction of evidence if they didn't act in that fashion."

He told The Associated Press he has heard "there were several informants that became the basis for the FBI-Department of Justice investigation and that's been going on for the better part of a year."

The plant 16 miles northwest of Denver is operated for the DOE by Rockwell International Corp.

Investigators are examining actions by both government and Rockwell employees, The New York Times reported.

A spokesman for Rockwell said the company had advised employees to cooperate with investigators but declined to comment further.

Rocky Flats has been dogged by environmental problems. DOE inspectors closed the plant's main plutonium reprocessing building last October for four months because of safety violations. The DOE also issued a report last December that revealed 32 new safety problems.

Thornburgh said he authorized disclosure of the investigation because the search was a matter of public record.

Skaggs, a staunch critic of Rocky Flats' operations, said there was apparent "reason to believe a number of individuals at the plant were involved in concert in the effort to falsify and mislead with regard to environmental compliance issues."

Energy Secretary Admiral James D. Watkins, in a statement, said his department will perform an independent analysis of Rocky Flats operations "and ensure that continued operations, regardless of past practices, are conducted in a safe and environmentally sound manner."

He also said part of the plant would be shut down as a result of the investigation, but he offered no specifics in the statement.

Voters decide to close plant

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — Voters decided to close the Rancho Seco nuclear power plant on Tuesday, marking the first time an electorate has chosen to shut down an operating reactor.

With absentee ballots in and all precincts reporting, 112,138 or 53.4 percent voted to close the troubled plant, while 97,698 or 46.6 percent voted to keep it open.

Election officials had projected a heavy special election turnout of up to 50 percent of the 529,658 registered voters in the Sacramento Municipal Utility District, which operates the plant 25 miles southeast of California's capital.

Voters in the district that includes most of Sacramento County and parts of Placer County gav the plant a reprieve in June 1988, but put it on probation until the election this year.

Though the vote was not binding on the utility district, a majority of its elected board members said they would follow the will of the people.

Storm aftermath

A mobile home on the Coke Barton cotton farm in southwest Glasscock County, left, was vacant when storm winds blew it down. At least a dozen heavily anchored power lines, below left, were toppled and poles snapped when the storm moved through near Midkiff Tuesday evening. The West Texas storms left two persons dead. Tow trucks from Neal Pool Wreckers in Odessa, below right, work to right a tractor-trailer that was blown over by winds near the intersection of Interstate 20 and FM 1936. The driver suffered minor injuries and was treated at a local hospital and released, the Department of Public Safety reported.

Organizer says Juneteenth 'lot more than gaiety and fun'

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

There is struggle in freedom just as there is struggle in breaking the bonds of slavery.

The battles within self and society after the shackles of overt slavery are broken call on the arms of discipline, motivation, study and hard work rather than threats of punishment under the shackles of pre-Civil War slavery.

And black Texans, whose ancestors were bound in human slavery, and others who value freedom for mankind will be called on to celebrate Emancipation Day — Juneteenth — in Texas on the weekend preceding June 19, according to Roosevelt Campbell, who is helping organize Juneteenth celebrations in Midland on June 15-18.

"It means a lot more than the celebration of gaiety and the fun things," said Campbell. "There is a soberness to it — a spirit of being included. It's a spirit that means responsibility."

"There is an accountability in being free," said Campbell. "You have got to pay your dues."

American blacks in 1865 were "freed" from slavery by ownership following the Union's defeat of the Confederacy in the Civil War.

And in Texas, slaves officially were set free on June 19, 1865, when U.S. Army General Gordon Granger at Galveston issued an order in accordance with President Abraham Lincoln's 1963 Emancipation Proclamation. Lincoln, who was struck by an assassin's bullet on the night of April 14, 1865, died the next morning — six days following the end of the Civil War.

The Midland celebration, which is sponsored by the Tall City Lions Club, will be keyed to the theme "A New Beginning."

The celebration will be centered at Washington Park in southeast Midland, according to Ralph Hanson, another Juneteenth organizer.

Events will include a pre-celebration on the night of Thursday, June 15; black-history related through story-telling, the "black experience" told through movies, a drug-awareness program and a talent show at 7 p.m. on Friday, June 16; a parade at 10 a.m. on Saturday, June 17, from Northland Shopping Center to Washington Park, food-drink-and-dunking booths at the park, afternoon family games, and at 7 p.m. on June 17 a salute to city officials, a "Know-Your-Heritage" talk by Midland educator James Bradford, and an explanation of the impact of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP), talent shows, singing and dancing; and an afternoon city-wide gathering of church congregations on Sunday, June 18.

The "New-Beginning" attitude in the Juneteenth celebration includes "breaking the shackles of economic dependency, ignorance, and self-defeating attitudes," organizers said.

"There has to be a freedom that says, 'We are responsible,'" said Campbell, "and we are responsible for those things that we do. There has to be some homework," which translates to the gaining of skills, education and values.

And Campbell, a 56-year-old Midland businessman, noted that he, like many people, merely wants "a slice" of that American pie called "success."

"I want my part of the country," said Campbell. "I don't want to change the country. I want to be included."

And being included translates into taking care of that "homework" and "not seeking handouts as a way of life."

"I am interested in trying to help my fellow men and myself," said Earl Booker, a 63-year-old retired tax accountant who is involved in the Juneteenth planning.

15-year-old driver dies when van rolled over

From Staff Reports

A 15-year-old Illinois boy was killed Tuesday evening when the van he was driving blew a tire and overturned on Interstate Highway 10, 11 miles west of Sheffield in Pecos County, the Department of Public Safety reported.

Michael R. Spence of Maywood, Ill., was westbound in a 1984 Ford van when the right rear tire blew out, causing the vehicle to veer to the right and strike a guardrail, the DPS report said.

Spence overcorrected to the left, causing a broadside skid during which the van overturned 1½ times, ejecting the driver, whose safety belt was not in use, the DPS report said.

Injured in the one-vehicle accident were five passengers, all from Illinois: Ada Hagler, 68; Gary F. Hagler, 41; Tabitha Hagler, 10, Gary F. Hagler Jr., 9; and Rachal Hagler, 4. All were transported to Iraan General Hospital with scrapes and bruises.

This morning, only Ada Hagler remained hospitalized. She was in good condition, according to Candy Powell of the Iraan General Hospital nursing staff.

The DPS report did not indicate if Spence was a licensed driver. According to a Department of Transportation manual on Drivers License administration and fees, the minimum age for an Illinois driver to legally obtain a permit to drive is 16.

Larger, blue-colored street signs to be installed

By JANE MARLER DEES
Staff Writer

From 70 to 100 new street signs twice the size of current ones are being replaced in Midland to help drivers know where they are.

All the new royal blue-colored signs should be installed above intersections throughout Midland in two to three weeks, explained Gary Saunders, city of Midland senior traffic technician.

Originally, the new signs were installed only over select intersections on Wadley Avenue during its reconstruction late last year.

But the positive feedback the city received made authorities investigate the possible installation of more new signs.

"They're big. You can see it a lot quicker especially at night when it's hard to see," Saunders said.

The signs will be affixed to street signal arms over some 20-25 intersections in Midland.

Street officials are focusing are "major arterials," Saunders said.

In line for new signs are intersections on Wadley Avenue, Midland Drive, Midkiff Drive, Big Spring Road, Andrews Highway, Carver Street, Front Street, Florida Street, Garfield Avenue and Loop 250.

Four signs are affixed at each intersection, Saunders added.

Currently, the largest green street signs measure 9 inches by 42 inches. The new blue signs will be 18 inches by 60 or 72-inches.

Survey shows two Texas federal judges millionaires

Associated Press

At least two federal district judges in Texas are millionaires and nearly two dozen others list net investments in the six figures, according to annual financial disclosure reports.

In reports for 1987, the last year for which reports for all judges are available, eight listed outside income that could reach six figures.

Harold Barefoot Sanders, Jr., a judge in the Dallas-based Northern District of Texas, appears to be the wealthiest of 37 district judges in Texas, listing a net investment value between $1,424,061 and $3,430,001.

Joe Fisher of Beaumont said his investments were worth a net value of between $1,378,497 and $2,759,444.

At the other end of the wealth scale is Judge George Kazen of Laredo, who put his net portfolio value at between $25,000 and $26,497. Walter Smith Jr. of Waco put his net investments at zero.

Other judges who say their worth could exceed $1 million include Paul Brown of Sherman, and Hayden Head of Corpus Christi. Brown put his net worth at between $928,031 and $2,077,501; Head's was between $596,525 and $1,546,000.

Like members of Congress and high-ranking federal executive officials, federal judges have been required since 1979 to file annual statements of what they bought, sold, earned, owned or owed — with some exceptions — each year.

The forms from Congress and the executive branch have been examined in detail for years, but little if any scrutiny has been given to judges below the Supreme Court.

Over the last several months, The Associated Press has examined the forms of the 935 federal district and appellate judges who work more than 60 days a year. Those working less are not required to file the disclosure forms.

In addition, between 17 and 20 percent of the nation's senior judges do not work enough each year to have to fill out the forms. Judges who are at least 65 years old and have been on the bench 15 years may elect to take that semi-retired status.

District judges are paid $89,500; appellate judges, $95,000.

In Texas, eight district judges posted six-figure outside incomes, topped by Fisher, who listed outside income ranging from $151,359 to $414,500 for 1987.

Judge James DeAnda of Houston recorded an outside income loss of between $245,201 and $248,798 — the only federal judge in the state to report a deficit for the year.

The government's required financial disclosure forms in most cases value assets and income within wide numerical ranges rather than exact dollar amounts, accounting for the ranges in income and investment values.

The reporting system can overstate debt and understate portfolio value in several ways.

For example, homes used only as personal residences or vacation retreats are not required to be reported. For most Americans, their home is their largest asset. In addition, other assets of whatever value are exempt from being reported if they are not held for the purposes of producing income — such as jewelry or land.

Judges are also allowed to value their land holdings at cost — a figure sometimes decades out of date. Finally, large assets are valued only at "over $250,000," no matter what their value.

Brown showed outside income for 1987 between $120,801 and $348,161; Fisher's was from $151,359 to $414,500 — the most reported by any judge for the year; Head had between $154,612 and $216,001. Sanders reported $90,657 to $261,400.

Other judges whose outside income for the year could have exceeded $100,000 included David Hittner of Houston, $35,411 to $104,200; Lynn Hughes of Houston, $36,203 to $113,980; Robert Parker of Marshall, $110,505 to $132,601; and Woodrow Seals of Houston, $65,086 to $127,482.

For Sanders, 64, appointed by President Carter in 1979, stocks and bonds that took four pages to list accounted for much of his net worth. Sanders listed stock holdings in 31 firms, including stocks valued between $50,000 and $100,000 in Pepsico Inc. He listed stocks of up to $50,000 in 11 companies, including Amarillo entrepreneur T. Boone Pickens' Mesa Limited Partnership.

Among his 26 bond holdings, half were in amounts of between $15,000 and $50,000. Other income came from money market funds, investment retirement accounts and land in Denton and Collin counties. Continuing interest as a beneficiary of his father's trust gave Sanders between $100,001 and $250,000.

Sanders did not return calls from the AP.

DeAnda's losses of at least a quarter-million dollars for the year came from liquidation of deed of trust notes from a firm called Jamar Properties. DeAnda's disclosure report also showed he owns a South Padre Island condominum and 10 acres of farm land in McAllen; each asset is worth between $50,001 and $100,000.

Among other judges, William Wayne Justice of Tyler, whose decisions on Texas prisons have forced the state to spend hundreds of millions of dollars, listed his net portfolio value at between $278,010 and $645,000.

His outside income was $30,096 to $95,292, with royalties from two Rusk County oil and gas leases each accounting for up to $50,000. Justice also listed reimbursements for seven speaking or awards appearances, including an address in Philadelphia for the Pennsylvania Prison Project.

Although no federal appeals court is based in Texas, 13 appeals court judges keep offices and residences in Texas. All of them indicated their net worth could exceed $100,000. Three listed a net investment value that could top $1 million, including William Garwood, Thomas Reavley and Byron Skelton.

Five of the appeals judges listed outside income for 1987 that could top $100,000, headed by Garwood's $158,830 to $249,401.

Garwood's mother, Ellen, drew national attention in 1985 for donating $65,000 for a helicopter to the Nicaraguan contras. Her late husband, W. St. John Garwood, was a Texas Supreme Court justice.

Leaders say town not speed trap

SELMA (AP) — Selma, a small community sliced by Interstate 35 near San Antonio, has received an undeserved reputation as a speed trap, say town leaders who don't think a new state law curbing such activity will hurt the town.

Many motorists on I-35 ease off on the gas pedal as they approach the tiny northeast Bexar County town renowned for its strict enforcement of traffic laws.

But Selma officials say the new Texas law preventing small towns from funding more than 30 percent of their budgets from traffic fines will not have an impact on their town's finances.

Legislators actually aimed the law at Patton Village, a small town on U.S. Highway 59 north of Houston that generates about two-thirds of its budget through traffic fines. Gov. Bill Clements signed the measure last week.

Selma City Administrator Margie Lubianski said her town took steps years ago "to eliminate the reputation that the press has given us."

About $200,000 of the town's current $600,000 budget is generated by "public safety," but not all those dollars come from traffic fines, she said.

"We can stay within the 30 percent without any problem," said Ms. Lubianski.

The community of 650 maintains a full-time police force of six, who patrol Selma's three-mile stretch of I-35 with such dedication that Selma recently was immortalized in San Antonio native Steve Earle's country hit "Guitar Town."

"We're just out of Austin bound for San Antone, with the radio blastin' and the bird dog on," Earle sang. "There's a speed trap up ahead in Selma town, but no local yokel's gonna shut me down."

Citizens' band operators once dubbed Selma the "Valley of the Bears" but the mayor maintains her officers are not inordinately strict on freeway drivers.

"I guess it is an unfair image," she told the San Antonio Light. "I don't think that we're doing anything other than promoting protection."

Former state Rep. Bennie Bock of New Braunfels in the 1970s tried to pass laws preventing Selma's police from acting as roving municipal tax collectors.

But he said he still takes no chances when traveling along I-35.

"All I know is, I slow down to 55 when driving through Selma."

Following approval of the speed trap bill, Patton Village Police Chief David Broussard said he mounted a 12-day hunger strike. He consumed only water, coffee "and occasional beer" to prompt Gov. Bill Clements not to sign the bill into law.

LHS team beaten in academic contest

From Staff Reports

A team of Lee High School students will return home Thursday after being bumped from a national academic contest in New Orleans.

The team was eliminated Monday after losing its second match in the Texaco Star Academic Challenge, a game similar to Trivial Pursuit that requires knowledge, speed and the willingness to take risks.

Sullivan High School of Sullivan, Ill., narrowly defeated LHS by five points in a Sunday match, winning on the last question of the three-round match, LHS officials said.

The LHS team — comprised of James McNew, Jim Murphy, Erin Kelly, Cyndi Froning, Ana Bustilloz and Meredith Rentz — exited the double-elimination tournament Monday after being beaten by Niceville High School of Niceville, Fla.

The team won the right to attend the nationals by beating 10 other area high school teams in the April 15-16 regional event. There were 63 teams at the national level, and the field had been narrowed to 16 by today.

Writing seminar planned

Freelance writer Mary Frances Beverley will conduct a one-day seminar, "How to Sell What You Write," Saturday from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. at the Lexington Hotel Suites, 1003 S. Midkiff Road.

Registration deadline is noon Friday.

The seminar includes information on finding the right markets; writing query letters to editors; avoiding beginning writers' most common mistakes; looking like a pro; manuscript basics; selling the same story more than once; copyrights and self-publishing. It will answer such questions as: Do you need an agent? And, do you need a word processor?

Ms. Beverley taught "How to Sell What You Write" as an adult continuing education course at Midland College in 1988. For 23 years, she was a high school English and speech teacher.

She has been a published writer for 40 years. Her non-fiction features have appeared in Texas Highways, New Mexico magazine, Heritage, Emergency, Restaurant Hospitality, several Texas daily newspapers, The Toronto Star and Mail, Fodor's travel guide to Texas and the inflight magazines of Southwest, American West and Midway airlines.

She also has written for local and regional publications such as The West Texas Sun and the Midland Chamber of Commerce magazine.

Ms. Beverley has won awards for her stories and books in the annual Texas Press Women communications contest, including "Great Hometown Restaurants of Texas," Gulf Publishing Co., and "Cowbells and Coffins: The Old General Store," Eakin Press.

Lunch, catered by Foods Fantastic, is included in the $50 cost for the seminar. For more information or to register call 684-6122.

Bible Quiz scheduled

The Regional Bible Quiz, hosted by First Assembly of God Church in Midland, is slated for Friday and Saturday.

A total of 12 teams will be competing with the top two teams qualifying for the National Bible Quiz competition in August at Indianapolis, Ind.

The local event will have teams from Texas, Kansas, Oklahoma and New Mexico. Two teams will be from Midland, one each from First Assembly of God Church and Calvary Assembly of God Church.

Bible Quiz is the Assembly of God youth program for Bible memorization.

Each year a particular book or combination of books from the Bible is used in the program. This year the book is the Gospel of Matthew.

The Bible Quiz format is similar to the College Bowl. The teams consist of a minimum of three quizzers and a maximum of six. The questions will range from exact quotations to general information from the Book of Matthew.

The match will begin at 7 p.m. on Friday and at 8 a.m. on Saturday.

GED students to graduate

Midland College's Adult Basic Education department will present certificates to approximately 150 graduates who have completed the GED program within the past year. The ceremony is scheduled for 7 p.m. today in the Allison Fine Arts Building. Dr. Wayne Holcomb, Chairman of Technical Studies, will be the guest speaker.

Graduates will receive certificates recognizing their completion of the high school equivalency program. The 15 graduates who attained the highest scores on their GED exams will be offered scholarships to attend Midland College. Cynthia Turland, director of the Adult Learning Center, said that she knows of no other GED program or community college that offers the ABE student this type of opportunity to pursue an education.

Students who have completed a minimum of 60 hours of instruction in English as a Second Language also will be recognized at the ceremony.

A reception honoring the students will be held immediately after the ceremony.

Teen becomes Eagle Scout

Peter Reed, 14, son of Jack and Jan Reed, was awarded the rank of Eagle Scout in a Court of Honor on June 3.

Reed

Reed, who recently completed the eighth grade at Goddard Junior High where he was enrolled in honors classes, was selected for the junior high all-city band, and won first division ratings in band solo and ensemble contests. He is active in the youth program of First United Methodist church and is a member of Wesley Ringers and Celebration Singers.

Teen named Eagle Scout

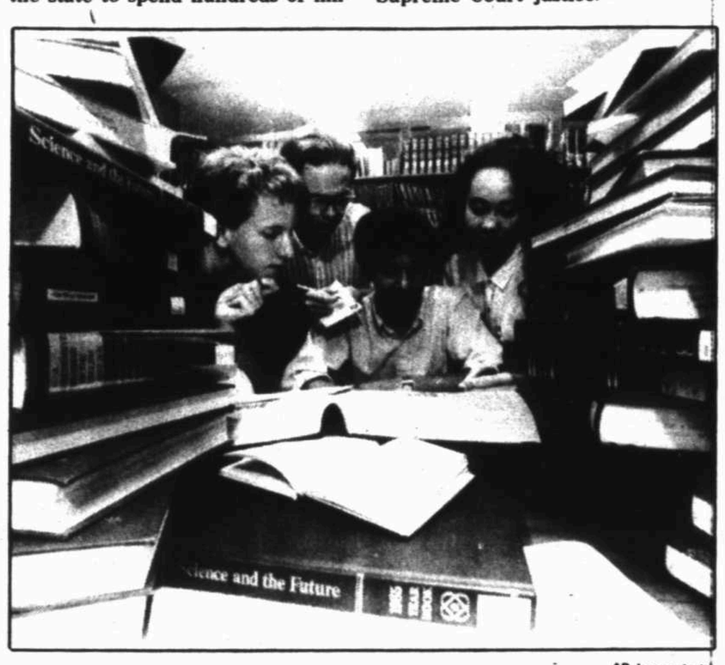

Christopher R. Anderson, 14, son of Carole and Ronnie Anderson of Midland, has reached the rank of Eagle Scout from Troop 152.

Anderson

Two officers kill robbery suspect

HOUSTON (AP) — Police say a man being pursued after a bank robbery was killed by two Houston police officers when he shot at them after stopping to change a tire.

The dead man was identified as Jesse Ray Jackson, 45, who was followed out the door of an MBank that had been robbed in south Houston Tuesday afternoon by wrecker driver Mike Gaskill, a former police officer.

Gaskill said he pulled a shotgun from his wrecker and ordered the man, who was getting into a car, to stop.

"He saw me chasing him," said Gaskill. "He backed up. I shot out his right front tire. I fired two more shots at him."

One of those shots hit above the right rear tire. Gaskill said he got into his truck to pursue the robber, but Jackson, driving on a flat tire, somehow got behind Gaskill and followed him north on the service road along Interstate 45. Jackson then turned into a restaurant parking lot.

Witnesses said the man casually changed the tire while a crowd began to gather. After he had the car jacked up and the spare tire out of the trunk, two police officers arrived.

"The officers approached the suspect — one from the front and the other from the rear," said police spokesman Dan Turner. "They told him to stop and raise his hands. He put his hands in his pockets and said, 'Kill me. Kill me.'

"He then turned and started to walk away again. When the officers told him to stop, he again said, 'Kill me.' He then pulled his hands from his pockets and he had a gun."

Investigators said Jackson fired a .25-caliber semiautomatic pistol at the officers. Both fired back, hitting Jackson several times.

Jackson was dead on arrival at Ben Taub Hospital.

Police recovered an undisclosed sum of money from Jackson's Lincoln.

Officer C.E. McRae, a 35-year police veteran, said it was the first time he had fired his gun at a suspect.

Booker alluded to the country's social responsibilities — looking after those in need.

"There are those that are actually in need," Booker said, and welfare handled wisely "can be the best thing in the world."

But the welfare cycle and economic ruts that know no racial bounds can be broken through the instilling of values, the carrying out of educational programs, and the caring of role models.

And problems daily must be accepted as challenges.

"You have to work at it yourself," Booker said. "Faith without works is dead."

Smith, Bustamante get new posts

By PEGGY ROBERSON
Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON — Two members of Congress from San Antonio announced on Tuesday that they have been appointed to new congressional and party responsibilies.

Rep. Lamar Smith, a sophomore, has been appointed cochairman of the Republican GOP Research Committee's Task Force on Mexico, which will recommend political and economic policies on issues of concern to both Mexico and the United States, Smith said.

"Mexico has become the third largest trading partner with the United States," he noted. "Over the past year, our trade with Mexico climbed 25 percent.

"The Mexican government is working diligently to improve its economy. I want this task force to help point the way to a clear workable strategy that will lead us into the next century as trading partners with our neighbors to the south."

Smith also is vice chairman of the Judiciary Committee's subcommittee on immigration.

Rep. Albert G. Bustamante, a third-term Democrat, has been named to the most prestigious subcommittee of the Government Operations Committee, a panel with jurisdiction over a wide range of government actions, particularly procurement for federal agencies.

The subcommittee on legislation and national security oversees the Defense Department, the State Department, the Agency for International Development, the Office of Management and Budget and Congress' investigative arm, the General Accounting Office.

Stockyard building destroyed by fire

AMARILLO (AP) — Fire destroyed the main building of the Amarillo Livestock Auction and Western Feedyards early today, officials said.

Livestock exchange manager Terry Jones estimated damage at about $1 million and said the interior of the brick building was gutted.

No injuries were reported and cattle were moved safely from the scene, authorities said.

The cause of the fire was not immediately determined.

The 60-year-old building was registered with the Texas Historical Society.

The fire was reported about 4 a.m. after a trucker driving through central Amarillo noticed smoke.

Supporters predict Wright will remain in public eye

WASHINGTON (AP) — While Texans mourn the loss of a Texas speaker and the clout Jim Wright gave their delegation, many predict the scrappy former boxer from Weatherford would not disappear from the national scene.

Wright

"He'll not whimper away and crawl into some hole somewhere," Rep. Jim Chapman, D-Texas, said after Wright handed over the speaker's gavel Tuesday to Tom Foley of Washington.

Chapman said Wright, a "strong-willed man with strong ideas," would probably want to continue to play a part in national affairs — writing, speaking or teaching.

"He is healthy and well and feeling good and he's going to be able to contribute to political debate and thought for many years," Chapman said. "He's got too much talent to go off and spend time in a boat and fish."

Although Wright will struggle with his feelings about the ethics storm that drove him from office "until his final day," Rep. Albert Bustamante, D-Texas, said Wright "will have peace of mind that he served, and served well."

The impact, however, of Wright's fall from power Tuesday was stark and swift.

STATE

As Foley and other congressional leaders from the House and Senate gathered around the table with President Bush at the White House, Wright remained behind in his office.

For the last 12 of his 34 years in office, Wright has been a member of the leadership and attended White House summits with his colleagues. On Monday, he sat next to Bush and discussed foreign policy.

Asked his plans as Foley departed for the White House for a meeting on clean air legislation, Wright replied: "I have to get on the phone and call my wife."

Even as Wright nominated Foley as speaker in a somber speech on the House floor, workers with canvas-covered carts moved his possessions out of the speaker's ceremonial office.

A Fort Worth Democrat, Wright spent his final moments as speaker holding his regular pre-session news conference but revealed little about his plans or his state of mind. He declared simply, "I feel fine."

In a week, Wright said, he would be "enjoying life, I hope and trust, rejoicing in the good portion that has followed me and the opportunities that have been given me in life."

As giant orange trash cans waited to be filled with cardboad boxes stuffed full of folders, frames and plaques in his staff's adjacent office, Wright was asked if he had any parting words.

"I might express my appreciation to all of you for keeping a robust discussion going," he told a room packed full of reporters. "I might want to write a column or two. Someone suggested I should become a columnist. It might be a good thing. In fact, I might discover who these unnamed sources are."

Wright resigned after a year-long investigation by the House ethics committee that cost more than $1.5 million and led to allegations that Wright had violated House ethics rules 69 times.

The allegations surrounded sales of Wright's book, "Reflections of a Public Man," his wife's employment by a family friend, Fort Worth developer George Mallick, and his relationship with Mallick.

Asked if he would write a book, Wright told reporters: "I'm not sure. I tried that once."

Study: State failed to care for retarded

DALLAS (AP) — Texas mental health officials have not lived up to their promise to improve conditions at 13 state schools for the retarded, according to a court-ordered study.

After the Texas Department of Mental Health and Mental Retardation was found in contempt of court two years ago, the state agreed to make sweeping changes.

However, the state had not complied with the agreement in the area of staff training, according to the first court-ordered evaluation of compliance with the class-action suit settlement.

"The state is out of compliance in the comprehensive competency of its staff," Dr. Linda O'Neall, a court-appointed expert consultant, said Monday.

"They have not met the implementation agreement" by repeatedly refusing to improve training, said Ms. O'Neall.

She also found the state had only partially complied with mandates on "addressing medical services, behavior treatment programs and resident abuse, neglect and injury."

U.S. District Judge Barefoot Sanders will rule on whether to accept the findings. The report was filed Monday in Sanders' court. O'Neall's report recommends the state train employees in the prevention and reporting of abuse and neglect.

The report could land the state back in court, said the plaintiff's attorney, David Ferleger.

Group tampers with Austin paper

Fake front page criticizes U.S. policy

New York Times News Service

AUSTIN — A fake front page critical of U.S. policy and media coverage on Central America was wrapped around an estimated 3,000 newsrack copies of the Austin American-Statesman early Tuesday.

It was the latest incident of a nationwide trend of tampering with newspaper vending machines.

Several people called Austin television stations Tuesday claiming responsibility for the tampering and said about 40 people had been involved. Some of the callers gave their group the "ad hoc name" of Austin Media Critics Circle.

The criticism, labeled the "Austin American-Sycophant," was printed on both sides of a sheet of newsprint. The front was designed to look like the front page of a newspaper.

American-Statesman publisher Roger Kintzel said he doubted many readers would have been fooled for long by the fake sheets.

"There is no color on them, for one thing, and we always have color on the front page," Kintzel said. "At first glance, you might say that's the American-Statesman."

Workers in the newspaper's circulation department probably caught about 90 percent of the papers before they were bought by the public, Kintzel said.

"I think a number of people were involved, and I think it was well-organized and well-planned," he said. "But we were ready for this, and our people were able to react very well. We had heard about this in other cities, and we knew what to do as soon as we found the first one."

About seven readers called the newspaper to inquire about the bogus sheets, he said.

The tampering was discovered at 4:30 a.m., about two hours after distributors began placing copies of Tuesday morning's newspaper in the racks, Kintzel said. The fake sheets were removed, and all the racks were checked again at mid-morning, he said.

"If this became an everyday thing, I would be very concerned," Kintzel said. "I'm treating this as an isolated incident, but I don't like it. It's demeaning to the newspaper. There are plenty of outlets in Austin for people to express their opinions. They don't need to use us in this way."

Similar sheets have been wrapped around newspapers in racks throughout the country in recent months, according to Editor & Publisher, a weekly magazine for the newspaper industry.

An article in the Washington Times on June 1 said at least 10 newspapers had been tampered with in a similar way since October by groups affiliated with an organization identified as Pledge of Resistance. A spokesman told the Times that the group opposes U.S. policy in El Salvador and uses non-violent civil disobedience to get publicity for its views.

Other cities where the tampering has been reported include Chicago, Washington, Baltimore, Minneapolis, San Francisco, Detroit, Milwaukee, Tucson, Carbondale, Ill., and Springfield, Ill.

The Washington Times article quoted a leader of Pledge of Resistance as saying the group had started the tampering incidents and had been encouraging similar activities by its 350 loosely organized affiliates around the country. The group has distributed "how-to" kits to the affiliates, according to the article.

Kintzel estimated that 400 to 500 newsracks were hit Tuesday, mostly in highly visible locations scattered through about two-thirds of the city. The newspaper has 1,350 newsracks in the city limits, and about 24,000 papers from the daily press run of 183,000 are distributed through racks.

The American-Statesman reported the tampering to Austin police. Each rack was opened legally by inserting 35 cents, and there was no apparent damage to the racks or their contents.

The sheet included four articles criticizing the Reagan and Bush administrations' support for the government of El Salvador in its war against left-wing insurgents.

The American-Statesman's coverage of the war and other events in Central America was criticized for relying on "a small handful of easily manipulated press services" which "echo the administration's world view."

The newspaper was described as "a propaganda vehicle for mobilizing support behind the State Department's policies." One article pretends to be an "Editor's Apology" for "the shoddy coverage (or coverup) of El Salvador over the past ten years."

Kintzel said the criticism was unfounded.

"We rely on wire services, but we have also sent our own people down there," he said. "We do more than a lot of papers in that we have some of our local people covering these issues, and as far as I can tell it's pretty well-balanced with the national coverage."

American-Statesman reporters also have written extensively about Central American refugees in the Rio Grande Valley, Kintzel said.

The fake sheets appear to be "generic" criticism of U.S. foreign policy and coverage by the media, with a few "local" touches added here and there to make the sheets look like they were produced just for Austin, he said.

Church to continue paying Railey's bills

DALLAS (AP) — A Methodist bishop says that the church will pay for continuing care of Peggy Railey, a former minister's wife who remains in a coma-like condition following a choking attack.

Bishop Bruce Blake, spiritual leader for the North Texas Conference of the United Methodist Church, said it is "our objective, our will, our intent" that the level of care Mrs. Railey is receiving will continue.

The prelate told a gathering of North Texas Methodists that a fund of $20,000 has been raised in the past three weeks "from a few individuals and groups."

The North Texas conference's annual meeting continues through today at Highland Park United Methodist Church.

The bishop estimated Mrs. Railey's nursing home care costs about $30,000 per year. However, he said he is confident that the church will continue to provide "a safety net" for any care that is not provided by Medicare or Medicaid programs.

Until now, a church insurance program has been covering most of Mrs. Railey's medical costs. But the church found, after negotiations with its insurance company, that it was able to extend medical coverage to Mrs. Railey only through September.

The conference's pledge to fill any gaps in coverage came in response to a resolution introduced by the Rev. Spurgeon Dunnam of Dallas.

Mrs. Railey was attacked in April 1987. Her husband, Walker Railey, has steadfastly refused to provide any funds for her medical expenses, saying he has no money to spare.

The former pastor of First United Methodist Church, Railey surrendered his ministerial credentials and moved to California after the attack on his wife at the couple's Lake Highlands home.

Authorities have not charged anyone in the attack. However, police said Railey is their only suspect.

TPW ex-director pleads no contest, wants job back

By HOLDEN LEWIS

ALAMOGORDO, N.M. (AP) — Now that he has pleaded no contest to a charge of illegally taking an antelope from New Mexico to Texas, the Lone Star State's former wildlife director wants his job back.

Charles Allen, who was fired from the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department April 5, said Tuesday he was fired illegally and plans to discuss with his attorneys what to do about it.

Parks and Wildlife executive director Charles Travis fired Allen after New Mexico authorities charged Allen with three counts each of unlawfully transporting game animals, illegal taking animals and capturing pronghorn antelope while airborne.

On behalf of the department, Allen netted 40 antelope from a helicopter Jan. 30 for transfer elsewhere in Texas. Most of the antelope were trapped on state-owned land just south of the New Mexico border near Dell City, but the helicopter apparently strayed over the state line, where Allen was accused of capturing three animals by shooting a net at them. The state boundary is marked only by a barbed-wire fence.

Allen's attorney in Alamogordo entered the no contest plea Tuesday before state Magistrate Henry Prelo. In exchange for the plea, the Otero County district attorney dropped the eight other charges.

As part of the plea bargain, Allen had to apologize to the state of New Mexico, and Texas Parks and Wildlife must pay $900 to the New Mexico Game and Fish Commission for the value of the three animals.

Allen said Tuesday "I do apologize for any inconvenience my actions caused." He maintained his innocence.

"I did not intentionally or knowingly cross into the state of New Mexico and capture or take any antelope," he said in a statement. "I was never informed at any time during the netting operation that I was in New Mexico and, had I been so informed, I would not have proceeded with the operation."

Allen issued a second statement Tuesday in which he said he was "set up" by the trapping program's supervisors. He said he plans to consult with his attorneys "regarding further action that I may pursue regarding my illegal firing and the false charges against me."

Travis, who never gave reason for the firing, was out of the office Tuesday and did not return a message from The Associated Press.

All charges against Allen will be dismissed in six months if the conditions of the plea bargain are followed: that Allen make the apology and that Texas pay the $900 restitution.

Three Soviets among six finalists in Van Cliburn piano competition

FORT WORTH (AP) — Three Soviet pianists are among the six finalists chosen early today at the Eighth Van Cliburn International Piano Competition.

One of the Soviets is the son of a man who finished third to Cliburn in the 1958 International Tchaikovsky Competition, where the Fort Worth pianist gained international fame. Another is a 19-year-old who has become the sentimental favorite of the audience.

Chosen to continue for medalist were Elisso Bolkvadze, Alexander Shtarkman and Aleksei Sultanov, all of the Soviet Union; Jose Carlos Cocarelli of Brazil; Benedetto Lupo of Italy; and Ying Tian of China.

From a field of 38 that began competition May 27, the finalists will now each perform two piano concertos with the Fort Worth Symphony Orchestra. The medalist will be chosen Sunday.

The selection of finalists was announced at 1:15 a.m., about 2½ hours after Lupo finished Rachmaninoff's Sonata No. 2 in B-flat minor, concluding the semifinalist portion of the competition.

Lupo said performing last of the 12 semifinalists didn't bother him.

"Practice and still going with this love for making music, that is what is most important, I think," said Lupo, 30, who attended and now teaches at the Piccinni Conservatory in Bari, Italy.

"I didn't expect anything. We were just waiting," said Schtarkman. "I was nervous before performance, not before results."

His father, Naum, finished third to Cliburn in the Tchaikovsky in Moscow. After Cliburn's triumph there, a similar competition formed in his hometown in 1962 was given his name. The stature of the Van Cliburn has since risen to become, like the Tchaikovsky, one of the world's most prestigious piano competitions.

The audience early today applauded strongest when Sultanov, a 19-year-old student of Moscow State University, was named a finalist. The youngest competitor, Sultanov became the sentimental favorite Saturday, when he brought more than half the audience to its feet in a rousing finale of Chopin's Sonata No. 3 in B minor.

The six finalists in the Van Cliburn piano competition, named in Fort Worth early this morning, are from left: Benedetto Lupo, Italy; Jose Carlos Cocarelli, Brazil; Alexander Shtarkman, Soviet Union; Ying Tian, China; Aleksei Sultanov, Soviet Union; and, seated, Elisso Bolkvdze, Soviet Union.

The only woman among the finalists, Ms. Bolkvadze, is a 22-year-old student at the Tbilisi Conservatory in Soviet Georgia. She has won top prizes at the Seventh International Bach Competition in Leipzig, West Germany, and the Vinna Da Motta Competition in Lisbon, Portugal.

Ying Tian, 20, was the first to perform during Tuesday's session, when three of the other finalists played their last works of the semifinals.

"I prepared myself. I've been having a great time and the performance that I did was personally satisfying," Ying said after his selection. He was born in Shanghai and now lives in Boston, where he studies at the New England Conservatory.

Cocarelli, 30, has performed in Europe and won first prize at both the 1986 Marguerite Long International Competition and the 1985 Busoni International Piano Competition.

The Van Cliburn medalist is awarded a gold medal, $15,000, a Carnegie Hall debut recital concert, concert tours and free air travel.

Bush offers medical aid for victims of pipeline explosion

Hearst News Service

WASHINGTON — President Bush offered the Soviet Union the services of San Antonio's Brooke Army Medical Center burn unit Tuesday to help treat victims of Sunday's gas pipeline explosion that killed at least 190 people on the Trans-Siberian Railroad.

Bush told Soviet Ambassador Yuri Dubinin that a 14-member team from Brooke's burn center at Fort Sam Houston was ready to leave immediately for the Soviet Union to treat victims.

He said victims could also be brought to San Antonio for further treatment.

Dubinin did not indicate whether the Soviets would accept Bush's offer. But he said he would convey the president's "generous offer" to Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev.

Bush made the offer during a visit to the Soviet Embassy to sign a condolence book for victims of Sunday's disaster in which two trains collided following the explosion of a nearby gas pipeline.

Soviet news reports said at least 190 people were killed in the disaster near the city of Chelyabinsk, 750 miles southeast of Moscow.

More than 750 people were hospitalized, with another 200 missing. Half of those hospitalized suffered burns over more than 70 percent of their bodies, according to the Soviet media.

After signing the condolence book, Bush handed Dubinin an envelope containing his offer of help.

"Could I just give you this?" the president asked. "This is an offer and it may or may not be something you would want to accept in the final analysis.

"What I'm suggesting to you is if it would be useful to your doctors and your families to have a 14-man team from our burn center go to the Soviet Union and then discuss on-the-spot additional treatment to what your doctors are doing and possibly bring some worst cases — if it fits your requirements — to San Antonio," he added.

Bush called the burn center "outstanding" and the experts there "highly trained and experienced."

The Soviet Union has accepted similar American assistance following previous disasters.

Bone marrow specialists helped treat victims of the 1986 Chernobyl nuclear reactor disaster and U.S. relief organizations went to Soviet Armenia after last year's earthquake disaster.

A spokesman for American industrialist Armand Hammer was quoted by The Associated Press as saying 10 kidney dialysis machines were being sent from the United States to treat vicims of Sunday's gas explosion.

In signing the condolence book, Bush wrote: "With sympathy, please convey to the families of the deceased and injured our most sincere condolences, George Bush, 6 June '89."

Dallas jurors would be asked to donate $6

DALLAS (AP) — It's not much, but Dallas County commissioners think troubled youths could use the $6 daily paychecks more than jurors.

Commissioners approved a plan Monday that would ask residents to donate their jury service reimbursements fees to the county juvenile department.

The move could raise $70,000 a year, a study indicated.

Beginning in October, each jury notification form sent to residents will contain a statement informing them they can donate their jury pay to the juvenile department.

But County Treasurer Bill Melton said the "noble idea" may actually mean more harm to the coffers. In a memo to county officials, Melton predicted additional accounting errors would arise from the solicitation plan.

He also predicted a negative reaction from jurors.

"Each week, people are adamant with regard to 'their' $6 for jury pay, because in most cases it is a break-even proposition...a losing cause in addition to the time that most are required to take off from their normal job," Melton said.

"We believe that the general public feels that they are 'entitled' to their jury pay," he said.

Last year, individuals donated $180 to the county on their own initiative, Melton said.

The donation idea was first broached last year when state district judges met to discuss ways to raise money during a time when the tax base was falling and services were being cut, Family Court Judge Theo Bedard said.

"Six dollars a day might not seem like much, but it would certainly go a long way to help (area youths)," Bedard said.

STATE IN BRIEF

Law would make it harder to evade paying fuels taxes

AUSTIN (AP) — Loopholes used by unscrupulous fuel suppliers to avoid paying state fuel taxes will be tightened under a measure signed into law by the governor, said Comptroller Bob Bullock.

"We are going to see fuels taxes going where they belong — to the state treasury and not into some crook's pocket," Bullock said in a Tuesday statement.

The legislation steps up enforcement powers of the comptroller's office, increases criminal penalties for fuel tax evasion, puts additional restrictions on buying tax-free fuels and requires all suppliers and distributors of fuel to hold state permits, he said.

Bullock also applauded a measure that provides additional money to the Travis County district attorney's office to investigate and prosecute fuels tax evasion.

A joint investigation last month by the comptroller's office, the Travis County district attorney's office, Department of Public Safety and the FBI led to the indictment and arrest of three Houston-area men accused of owing the state more than $3 million in delinquent fuels taxes.

Bullock has estimated the state will receive $120 million more in fuels taxes by 1991 as a direct result of the two measures.

Prison construction to begin

THREE RIVERS (AP) — The Federal Bureau of Prisons has awarded a $40.1 million construction contract to H.B. Zachry Co. of San Antonio for the final phase of an 800-cell prison near Choke Canyon State Park.

Prison bureau officials in Washington, D.C., plan to meet with the contractor next week to discuss plans for the medium- and minimum-security prison, said John Irwin, project manager for the bureau.

Construction will generate 300-400 jobs for area residents, said Mike Daly, Zachry project manager.

The previous construction phase cost $1.4 million for site preparation, Irwin said.

If construction stays on schedule, the prison will be completed and ready for occupancy by fall 1990, Irwin said.

The original completion date was delayed several months by a lawsuit filed by three environmentalist groups, but U.S. District Judge Hayden Head Jr. allowed construction to proceed at the South Texas site.

Choke Canyon Preservation Association, Coastal Bend Audubon Society and Bexar Audubon Society, who are continuing with their lawsuit, contended the prison would destroy brush land critical for supporting wildlife forced from its habitat by the flooding of 26,000 acres to form Choke Canyon Reservoir.

Padre top destination

AUSTIN (AP) — Padre Island is the nation's top travel destination for owners of recreational vehicles, according to a national magazine.

The Texas Department of Commerce said Tuesday that Trailblazer magazine had singled out Padre Island for the scenic variety found along its more than 100 miles of beaches and dunes.

The island off the South Texas coast is the world's longest barrier island.

"We are very pleased that a nationally known travel publication has chosen to honor one of Texas' most treasured natural attractions," said Bill Taylor, director of the commerce department's tourism division.

The department said that after Padre Island, the other top 10 destinations were Monterey, Calif.; Creel, Mexico; Kelowna, British Columbia; Brandywine Valley, Del.; St. Louis, Mo.; Bigfork, Mont.; Virginia City, Nev.; Durango, Colo., and Sanibel Island, Fla.

Magazines reviewed

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — Individual store managers will be left with decisions on whether to sell rock 'n' roll magazines, said an official for San Antonio-based H-E-B Foods-/Drugs stores.

The company reached the decision after executives reviewed six magazines pulled from the H-E-B store in Beeville. Customers in the Beeville had complained that the publications contained profane language, objectionable photos and advertisements for satanic cult jewelry, said Mike De La Garza, spokesman for the chain.

"We feel this is the best response to competing markets...because in some areas the magazines don't cause a stir," he said.

The magazines pulled in Beeville were Rolling Stone, Circus, Heavy Edge, Metal Edge, Blast and Crash.

De La Garza said the Beeville H-E-B is the only store that has indicated it will ban sale of the publications.

Lawyer requests two lawmen be freed on bond

SHERMAN (AP) — A federal judge will take under advisement a defense attorney's request to have two Oklahoma lawmen released on bond pending their trial on charges of conpiring to kidnap and torture a suspected drug dealer.

Bill Sullivant, the attorney for Love County Sheriff Wesley Liddell Jr. and Marietta policeman Roger Ray Hilton, said a ruling is expected next week after the judge reviews a transcript from an earlier proceeding.

The lawmen have been in the Grayson County Jail in Sherman since their arrest by FBI agents May 18.

A federal magistrate earlier had denied bond for the two. Tuesday's hearing was on an appeal of that decision.

Sullivant said witnesses he presented Tuesday said Liddell and Hilton would not be dangerous to the state's witness nor to anyone else in the community if freed on bond.

He said the two would be "ordinary citizens" and would relinquish their authority as law enforcement officers while free on bond.

"In view of their spotless record...there's basically no reason they should be held without bond," Sullivant said.

An Iranian mourner goes into a frenzy Tuesday, shortly after the body of the Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini was removed from Beheshte Zahra cemetery in Tehran. The crush of mourners delayed the funeral until later that day.

Khomeini revered for ending foreign influences

By LOUIS J. SALOME
New York Times News Service

TEHRAN — Armed only with the Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini "in my heart," a 67-year-old Iranian made a pilgrimage home from West Germany to attend Khomeini's funeral Tuesday.

A soft-spoken man whose manner lacks the fanaticism of Khomeini and of many of those who have come to be associated with the old iman's fundamentalist revolution, he still backs the ayatollah's means and his mission.

While his views will seem strange to Westerners, they reflect an Iranian Islamic perspective that must be understood, if not agreed with.

In addition to strengthening Islam at home, he says Khomeini deserves credit for driving out the foreigners who had been controlling the country through Iranian surrogates.

That means Americans, of course, and the shah of Iran, who for years was closely tied to U.S. policy until his overthrow by Khomeini in 1979.

A former oil company employee, the man refused to reveal his name although he talked expansively during a Monday night flight from Frankfurt to Tehran.

"Call me Abdullah," he said, "which means 'servant of God.' "

The man said he did not want to invite trouble by giving his name, and he had difficulty believing that Americans generally are openly critical of their government and politicians.

A small slender man with wispy white hair, Abdullah was no Islamic mullah. He wore black loafers, a dark blue-black checkered sports coat, dark pants and a black trench coat.

"I don't think Iran is going to change. It's steady now," he said. "Most of the people liked Khomeini and will want to keep up as he did.

"The people of Iran are religious. They like Islam. They have suffered for this religion. Although there are people who are strongly against Khomeini in Iran, most of the people are for him."

One of those people who does not like Khomeini's revolution is Abdullah's son-in-law in Germany, where Abdullah lives a larger part of each year now.

Abdullah said, "I don't hate the American people, and as long as its rulers aren't going to look to Iran to control it, we don't hate such a country."

Calmly Abdullah justified the 444-day hostage crisis that effectively destroyed Jimmy Carter's presidency, he rationalized the extensive political killings that marked the ayatollah's early years in power and he said the Iran-Iraq war was not Iran's fault.

The taking of 52 American hostages by the ayatollah was Iran's way of getting even for U.S. backing of the shah, he said.

"The United States strongly ruled in Iran, not the shah," he said. The ayatollah wanted to show that the Moslems don't allow any foreigners to run their contry, he said.

"At the beginning," he said, "the shah approved many good services like new buildings and roads and railroads, but he was against Islam, he was too secular."

Abdullah said, "Reagam and Bush want to do what they think is best for America, and Khomeini wanted to do what he thought was best for Iran."

Whatever others may think, Abdullah said, Islam is not opposed to knowledge and progress.

He compared the ayatollah's fanatical political killings with the political assassinations of President John F. Kennedy and his brother, New York Sen. Robert Kennedy.

"This is politics. When people want to rule a country they have many, many enemies. Other Iranians showed they were against Khomeini so they were killed," he said.

Khomeini's son makes risky bid for power

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Ahmad Khomeini has emerged from the long shadow of his father and appears to be making a bid for power himself, a move some analysts believe is doomed to fail.

He was making his moves even before Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini died Saturday. But the death of Iran's revolutionary and spiritual patriarch, before the leadership issue could be settled, has added urgency to the son's campaign.

"A lot of emotions are rampant in Iran now," Shahram Chubin, an Iran specialist with the Graduate Institute of International Studies in Geneva, said in a telephone interview. "Some people will be trying to take advantage of that and Ahmad is one of them."

The Assembly of Experts, the body formed in 1979 to ensure a smooth transition after Khomeini's death, on Sunday named President Ali Khamenei as a caretaker leader until the succession is resolved. In the meantime, rivals in Tehran are jockeying for power.

Although Ahmad Khomeini is only a middle-ranking cleric, or hojatoleslam, and holds no official title, he was one of his father's closest advisers.

As Khomeini's private secretary, he controlled access to the reclusive patriarch and wielded considerable influence behind the scenes.

The younger Khomeini, 43, took an increasingly high public profile as his father's health declined.

He has allied himself with radical figures in the hierarchy in the power struggle that has intensified since the Aug. 20 cease-fire in the war with Iraq.

Speculation rose that he sought to establish himself as his father's political heir by engineering the March 28 dismissal of his father's designated successor, Ayatollah Hussein-Ali Montazeri.

Ahmad was his father's eyes and ears since their days in exile and through the Islamic revolution that toppled the late Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi.

Last month, Tehran newspapers published lengthy excerpts of a 110-page memorandum Ahmad wrote to Montazeri, lashing him for seeking to undermine Khomeini's regime and consorting with opposition groups.

Masoud Rajavi, leader of the Mujahedeen Khalq, or People's Holy Warriors, the main Iranian opposition movement, says Khomein was grooming Ahmad as his successor.

Rajavi said in a statement that Khomeini's dismissal of Montazeri for criticizing the regime "prepared the ground for this appointment."

He argued that Khomeini's appointment of a special committee to amend the constitution, including downgrading the religious qualifications of his successor from "divinely inspired authority" was aimed at making room for Ahmad.

Troops unable to control ethnic riots, officials say

MOSCOW (AP) — Troops in the Soviet republic of Uzbekistan have not been able to halt bloody ethnic riots that have left 67 people dead and prompted thousands to flee, officials and a newspaper reported today.

President Mikhail S. Gorbachev told the Congress of People's Deputies the situation was under control but not stable, and said there were still incidents of arson and killing.

"It has not changed for the better," Gorbachev said. "It concerns us very much."

The Congress joined him in appealing to ethnic Uzbeks and Meshki Turks to halt the bloodshed.

Interior Minister Vadim Bakatin, in an interview published today in the communist youth newspaper Komsomolskaya Pravda, said, "It is now difficult to maintain stability in areas where Uzbeks and Meshki Turks live together."

He told the newspaper 11,000 of the 15,000 ethnic Turks living among the 2 million Uzbeks in the Fergana region of Central Asia have been evacuated to temporary refugee camps.

The unrest, which broke out on May 23, has mainly involved Uzbeks and the Turkish minority.

The newspaper said 67 people have died and 417 homes were burned in the rioting. Most who lost their homes were ethnic Turks, it said.

It also said 87 soldiers have been injured.

The Communist Party daily, Pravda, said 9,000 Interior Ministry soldiers were trying to maintain order in the Fergana Valley, a cotton- and grape-growing region of eastern Uzbekistan near Afghanistan.

Soviet dictator Josef Stalin exiled about 300,000 ethnic Turks to Uzebekistan in the 1940s. The Turkish minority, who are Moslems, have pressed recently to return to their homeland in Soviet Georgia, near the Turkish border.

The violence is the latest ethnic dispute in the southern Soviet Union, where unrest in the Caucasus area and Central Asia has killed scores of people and left thousands homeless.

Nishanov said the violence in Uzbekistan began with a dispute over the price of strawberries in a market.

Uzbeki sources said it started between an ethnic Turk and a Tadzhik and Kirghizian, two other local ethnic groups. But Uzbekis resentful of the Turks joined the fray.

The youth newspaper said soldiers trying to end the violence had "honestly fulfilled their duty."

There was national outcry after soldiers in Soviet Georgia used chemicals, shovels and clubs to break up a pro-independence protest on April 9. Nineteen civilians were killed, and one was shot by soldiers for violating a curfew.

Bakatin said arson, robbery, and looting attempts persisted in Uzbekistan despite the heavy military and police presence.

Reporting of AIDS cases stirs controversy

MONTREAL (AP) — A top U.S. health official says the time is coming when doctors will report the names of people testing positive for the AIDS virus and try to trace victims' sexual contacts. But activists criticized the proposal.

Dr. James Mason, U.S. Assistant Secretary for Health, said he didn't know when such a system would be in place, but when it happens "we will have normalized HIV and will handle it like syphilis."

HIV, or human immunodeficiency virus, causes AIDS.

Mason's remarks Tuesday at the Fifth International Conference on AIDS drew immediate criticism.

Richard Dunne, executive director of the Gay Men's Health Crisis in New York, opposed the proposal because he feared names would not be kept confidential and that people known to be infected would suffer from the stigma associated with acquired immune deficiency syndrome.

"People lose their jobs, their housing and their schooling opportunities," he said. "That's not like other diseases."

Furthermore, he said, tracing patients' sexual contacts will not work for AIDS as it does with syphilis because HIV patients may have been infected for years when they are diagnosed. Tracing partners so far back is unlikely, he said.

The consequences of reporting would discourage many people from submitting to testing, Dunne said. "The only way people are going to come forward is if there's something effective" to help them, he said.

The Gay Men's Health Crisis received numerous calls Tuesday from people who already were concerned that their names might be recorded if they seek testing. Dr. Stephen Joseph, the New York City health commissioner, floated a similar proposal at the AIDS meeting Monday.

Congress has directed the U.S. Public Health Service to prepare a report on discrimination against people with AIDS and HIV infection, Mason said, in anticipation of moves toward reporting the names of those tested.

He said early identification of infected people through contact tracing could allow them to be treated promptly with new drugs now being tested. The cost of such treatment would run into the billions of dollars, Mason said. He did not know where that money might come from.

> "People lose their jobs, their housing and their schooling opportunities. That's not like other diseases. The only way people are going to come forward is if there's something effective" to help them.

In other conference reports:

■ Researchers said initial studies on a new AIDS drug called CD4 showed that the medicine is safe and may reduce levels of HIV in the body.

The drug is a decoy intended to confuse the virus and draw it away from the blood cells it ordinarily infects.

In experimental use on 18 people, Dr. Robert Yarchoan of the National Cancer Institute found that the drug appeared to lower virus levels in the body by about 50 percent. However, he cautioned that this could have been a natural fluctuation instead of a result of the drug.

Another team found no clear evidence of virus reduction, but researchers said they were still encouraged by the drug's potential and said higher doses could have a greater effect.

■ In a report scheduled for presentation today, National Cancer Institute researchers said a recently discovered herpes virus may accelerate the development of AIDS in people infected with HIV.

Dr. Paulo Lusso said the virus, called HHV-6, enhanced the growth of HIV in test tube, causing more cells to die more quickly.

More than half of Americans, Canadians and Europeans have been exposed to HHV-6 without any ill effects and may be capable of passing it on, studies have shown.

■ Researchers at Johns Hopkins University in Baltimore said it was now possible to predict two years in advance which patients infected with HIV will develop AIDS. Studies suggest that a majority of people infected with the virus get AIDS or related illnesses.

American response praised

By BERNARD D. KAPLAN
Foreign Affairs Writer
The Hearst Newspapers

PARIS — President Bush has reinforced his recently enhanced status as a world leader by what foreign observers hailed as a skilled and measured response to the upheaval in China.

Western Europe's media were virtually unanimous in praising his action in breaking off arms sales and military exchanges with China.

By warning the Chinese regime of the adverse consequences of its ferocious crackdown on its own people, the president was applauded for providing the west with the moral leadership needed in the crisis.

Switzerland's Neue Zurcher Zeitung, considered among Europe's best newspapers, said Bush acted with "finesse" while "upholding the very best traditions of the United States."

The American government's dilemma, according to the newspaper, was to "condemn the Chinese rulers unequivocally without completely cutting its ties to the regime and thereby reducing its long-term ability to influence the outcome."

It was a nearly impossible political maneuver to perform, but Bush "after some initial hesitation has done better than anyone had reason to hope," the Swiss paper concluded.

Several European dailies implicitly criticized their own governments for not displaying Bush's deft touch in reacting to the blood-letting by units of the People's Liberation Army in Beijing.

London's non-partisan newspaper, The Independent, said the U.S. leader had produced the "right mix of moral judgment and prompt, concrete action ... the comparison with (European) leaders, who have shown considerable confusion, is entirely in his favor."

France's Le Figaro said with "more to lose in terms of America's vital interests in the Far East," Bush "has done better (in reacting to the crisis) than European leaders with much less at stake."

Another French paper, Tribune, said Bush's vigorous reaction to events in China showed he "has been transformed by his success at last week's NATO summit" and is now "determined to grasp world leadership swiftly and firmly."

The London Times judged Bush was right not to order full-scale economic sanctions against China because the "political dinosaurs" who now appear to be in charge in Beijing would "welcome sanctions in order to force China back onto the Maoist road of self-reliance and ideological purity."

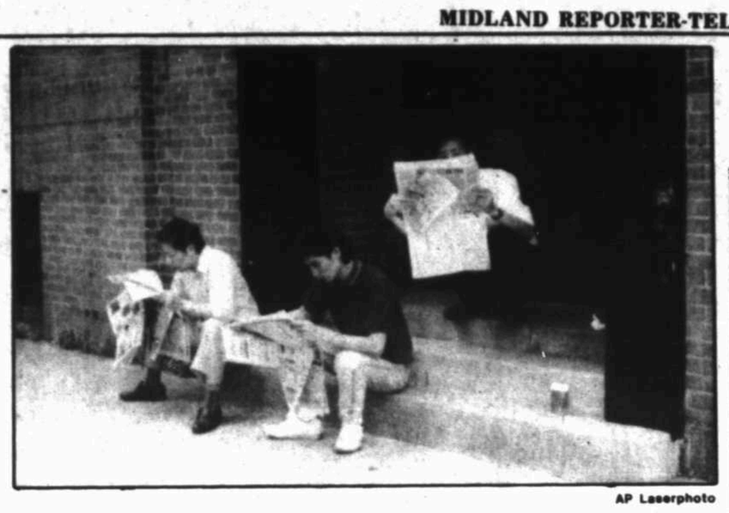

A number of Western European observers noted that Bush was knowingly running a risk of "throwing China's desperate rulers into the arms of the Russians" — as London's Daily Telegraph put it — but said he acted correctly in condemning the brutal repression.

Jean Francois-Poncet, a former French foreign minister, said there were several reasons for Moscow's continued silence about events in Beijing, including a calculation that "China's growing isolation from the west will help to increase renewed Soviet influence there."

Like several other European observers, Francois-Poncet predicted the drama unfolding in China will have repercussions throughout the communist world.

"When George Bush weighs China's destiny, he certainly has a sense that the events in Beijing could have extremely negative consequences on perestroika in the Soviet Union and, consequently, on the hoped-for end to the Cold War," he said.

His views were echoed by Serge July, editor of Paris's left-wing daily, Liberation, who said that Bush, "unlike some former American presidents," exhibited a "conceptual understanding" of the "link between the Chinese bloodshed and the worldwide disintegration of Communism."

Three Chinese-Americans read Chinese language newspapers on the steps of a church in Chicago's Chinatown neighborhood. The World Journal was publicizing a drive to raise funds for facsimile machines, medical supplies and airline tickets.

Chicago's Chinatown shaken by news reports from Beijing

CHICAGO (AP) — The butcher raised his cleaver and slammed it into the neck of a duck at a Chinatown grocery store.

"Killers," he spat out as he chopped the duck and listened with two other men to a Chinese-language radio broadcast on the weekend massacre in Beijing.

Like in Chinatowns around the United States, anguish pervades this Chinese enclave south of downtown Chicago.

Groups of people — mostly men — squat on street corners or sit in restaurants. Newspapers in hand, they talk about the military suppression of the China's student-led, pro-democracy movement.

"The tanks," said James Yuan, pointing at a newspaper picture of the scene in Beijing's Tiananmen Square. "Students were in a tent. The tanks, they crush them, over and over! Until all bodies be a mess! A mess!"

Yuan's face twisted in pain and he took off his glasses to wipe the corners of his eyes. A pastor at the Chinese Christian Union Church, Yuan was handing out fliers advertising a prayer service.

"The only thing we can do is pray," he said.

About 16,000 people live in the 15-square-block Chinatown. The district's commercial strip is a popular tourist attraction with its welcoming green and red gate and blocks of restaurants and gift stores.

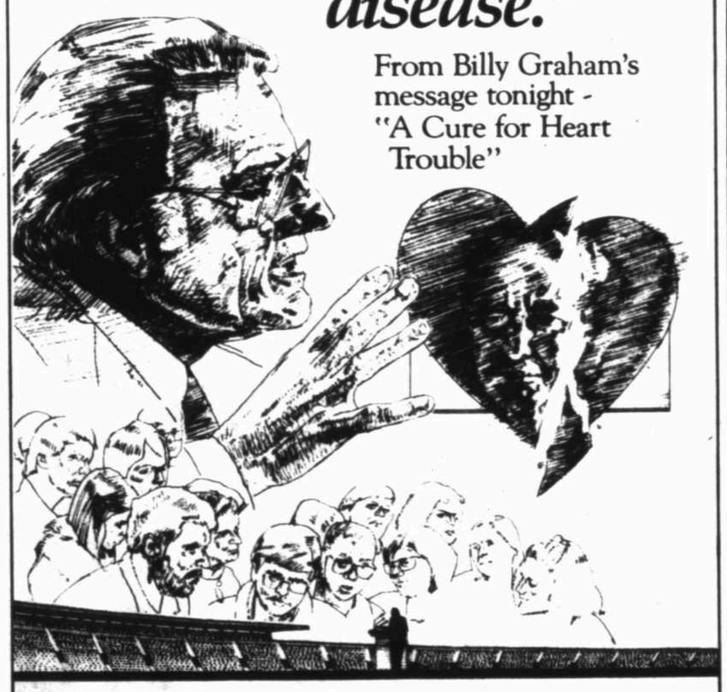

After the massacre, residents of Chinatowns in San Francisco, New York, Los Angeles and elsewhere held demonstrations against China's hardline leader Deng Xiaoping.

In Chicago, Chinatown residents grab for the World Journal and other Chinese-language newspapers every morning, said Esther Ti-yu Hsiao, a reporter for the World Journal's Chicago bureau. Some wait for an hour by news stands for delivery trucks that arrive at 10 a.m.

Advertisements in the World Journal announced a meeting planned for Sunday to raise money to buy facsimile machines to get news out of China, and medical supplies and airline tickets for students who want to go to China to demonstrate.

Chinese casualty figures widely varied, disputed

BEIJING (AP) — The Chinese government says that 300 soldiers, "thugs," bystanders and students have been killed during the martial law occupation of Beijing.

But most other estimates of casualties are far higher.

State Council spokesman Yuan Mu said on Tuesday that 7,000 people, including 5,000 soldiers, have been injured and 400 other soldiers are missing and may be dead or wounded.

Non-official sources say Yuan's figures on civilian casualties are far too low, but most have different estimates on the number of victims. They range from 500 to 12,000 people slain.

In Washington, U.S. intelligence reports indicate 3,000 people probably were killed, according to a U.S. official who spoke on condition of anonymity. He said estimates of the number of dead could go higher.

Nearly all of the deaths and injuries occurred Saturday night and early Sunday when troops, firing randomly into large crowds, smashed through barricades to reach Tiananmen square and attack demonstrators demanding democratic reforms.

One doctor said Sunday that a quick check of 10 hospitals placed the death toll at 500.

Other sources, compiling various reports and surveys, estimated more than 1,000 people had been killed.

That number has increased with additional details and rumors of killings.

Some officials of China's Red Cross said 2,600 people were killed but Beijing's Red Cross office has refused to provide any figures.

One Hong Kong newspaper reported 5,000 deaths and 30,000 injured.

An Eastern European diplomat, whose country has good relations with China, insisted that 12,000 people were slain by soldiers as they attacked protesters in Tiananmen Square.

That figure is certainly high. Probably fewer than 10,000 people were in the square when the troops moved in and most were able to escape unharmed.

But students who had joined the Tiananmen occupation said hundreds of colleagues from the Academy of Fine Arts who were huddled around their "Goddess of Democracy" statue in the square were shot or crushed by tanks. Beijing University students said 150 of their fellow students who were in the square are missing.

There were rumors that after the square was cleared troops burned many corpses in large bonfires and other bodies were removed by helicopters and garbage trucks to minimize the death count.

Yuan's statement said only 23 of the 300 people fatally injured were students.

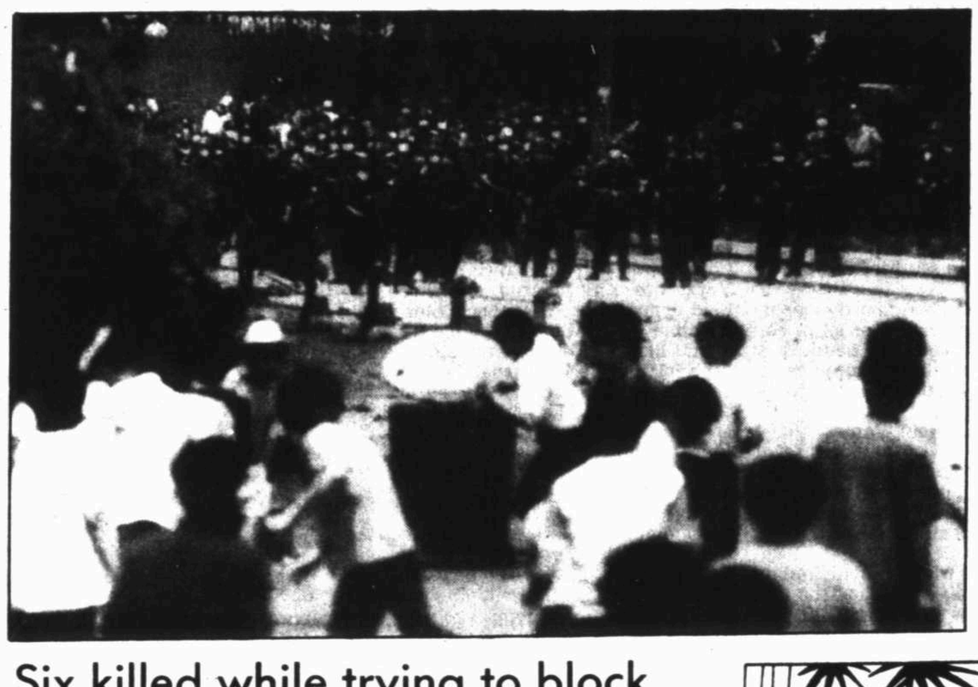

The exact number of people killed may never be known.

Victims were taken to dozens of hospitals, clinics and homes, and there is no indication the government will reveal many details of the tragedy.

And the death toll mounts. Troops manning checkpoints in central Beijing continue to fire on unfriendly crowds and victims fall.

China scenes

Beijing residents, above left, on Tuesday walk their bicycles through the debris as other peer curiously at tanks and armored personnel carriers left in the streets after weekend violence. Others, above, stand in long lines at the few open markets, stocking up on groceries in expectation of shortages in the wake of rumored fighting between rival military units for control of the city. Turmoil in China provokes protests, economic fallout

TOKYO (AP) — Turmoil in China provoked protests worldwide against the violent suppression of pro-democracy demonstrators in Beijing, while economic fallout from the crisis was building throughout Asia.

The unrest that left hundreds and perhaps thousands of people dead has seriously damaged the goodwill and trust once extended the Communist nation.

France, Holland and Sweden have barred diplomatic contacts with officials in China, while the United States, Britain and Switzerland banned military sales to Beijing.

China's Foreign Ministry today rebuked the United States for trying to exert pressure on China over what it said was a "purely internal affair."

Washington sells China more than $600 million of military equipment a year, and private U.S. dealers sell another $85 million. Officials would not provide Britain's military sales to China but Independent Television set the amount at $4.7 million a year.

Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher expressed "utter revulsion" at the Chinese crackdown and said, "We will be thinking how best to demonstrate that in practical ways."

The Dutch government summoned Chinese Charge d'Affaires Li Qin Ping and told him the Netherlands "is exceptionally shocked by the violent and brutal actions of the Chinese People's Liberation Army."

The 12-nation European Economic Community strongly condemned the Chinese action and appealed to authorities to stop using force.

In Moscow, members of the Congress of People's Deputies called on China's leaders to use "wisdom, reason and a weighted approach" but did not denounce the violence. The Soviet Foreign Ministry made no comment. The two communist giants are trying to mend fences after decades of estrangement.

Achille Occhetto, head of Italy's Communist Party, urged the Kremlin to take a strong stance against the massacre and distanced his party from the leaders responsible for the crackdown. Italy has the largest communist party in the West.

Meanwhile, Chinese students and others staged protests outside Chinese embassies in Seoul, Stockholm, Madrid, Abu Dhabi, Belgrade, the Hague, Athens and other cities.

In Hong Kong, authorities used tear gas to disperse 4,000 people in the twin city of Kowloon who tried to break into Chinese banks in the area and hurled stones and bottles at police this morning.

Singaporeans joined a movement started earlier in the week in Hong Kong to withdraw $32 million in deposits from Chinese banks out of fear and to protest the bloodshed in Beijing, bank officials said.

Wewe Cho Yao, president of a Singapore Chinese group, the Chinese Clan Associations, said the killings in China had shaken the confidence of foreign investors.

About 76 percent of the 2.6 million people in Singapore are ethnic Chinese.

In Hong Kong, wreaths were placed outside China's Xinhua News Agency office in memory of those who died in Beijing, and some people wore black armbands.

Authorities in Taiwan lifted a ban on telephone links to the Chinese mainland to encourage private contacts between people on both sides of the Taiwan Straits and to help break a news blackout inside China, Communications Minister Chang Chien-pang said.

The links will be through Hong Kong and will be operable within three days, he said.

The Nationalist government, which lost a civil war in China to the Communists in 1949, has lifted restrictions on visits to the mainland the past two years, although it continues to ban official contacts.

The Broadcasting Corporation of China, Taiwan's state radio station, kicked off a 24-hour news broadcast to China on shortwave channels with a hotline accepting telephone calls from Chinese listeners.

Six killed while trying to block train in Shanghai; Others injured

BEIJING (AP) — People in more than a dozen provincial cities have taken to the streets to protest the military massacre in Beijing, blocking major roads and railways with barricades in anticipation of military assaults.

Six people were killed when they run over by a train while manning a barricade in Shanghai and tens of thousands set up roadblocks in Xian.

A Chinese source in Shanghai said besides the six dead, six other people were injured Tuesday night when a train, unable to stop, struck them as they were gathered by a barricade on tracks near Shanghai station.

Shanghai Radio said angry crowds set fire to the train engine and 21 railway security officials were beaten and injured by crowds who tried to prevent them from putting out the blaze.

A Scottish student in the ancient capital of Xian said huge crowds were holding anti-government demonstrations today in front of city offices.

He said barricades had been set up on roads leading to city as rumors spread the military would be called in.

Official Xian Radio claimed crowds had "wrecked communications facilities, blocked buses, trolleybuses and cars, and forced passing vehicles to halt."

It said the demonstrations had "seriously wrecked the city's life." The Scottish student, speaking on condition of anonymity, said he had seen no evidence of violence or looting.

He said foreigners in the city were planning to leave for Canton, which also has had demonstrations, although smaller in scale.

Pistons start finals on upbeat note

Lakers' streak comes to an end

By CLIFTON BROWN
New York Times News Service

AUBURN HILLS, Mich. — The Detroit Pistons were a little healthier, a little deeper and a lot better than the Los Angeles Lakers Tuesday night.

Getting significant contributions from everyone who played, the Pistons defeated the Lakers, 109-97, in the first game of the National Basketball Association championship series.

It ended the Lakers' 11-game playoff winning streak, and gave the Pistons a 1-0 lead in the four-of-seven-game series.

The second game will be played Thursday night at the Palace.

Detroit, which has held its playoff opponents under 100 points in all 14 games, never trailed in the second half and built a 20-point lead, 79-59, in the third quarter.

Isiah Thomas was the catalyst, penetrating to the basket, passing to teammates, hitting shots whether he was wide open, or had a hand in his face, and finishing with 24 points.

And while Detroit got offense from all nine of its top players, the Lakers' offense was basically a two-man show — Magic Johnson and James Worthy, who had 17 points apiece.

Their Laker teammates were either stymied by Detroit's aggressive defense, or hampered by foul trouble. The Lakers also looked rusty, not having played a game since May 28.

An 8-0 run by the Lakers pulled them to within 79-67, early in the fourth quarter. But from that point, Vinnie Johnson took over.

He scored 10 of Detroit's next 12 points, capping the spurt with an acrobatic left-handed layup that put Detroit ahead, 91-73.

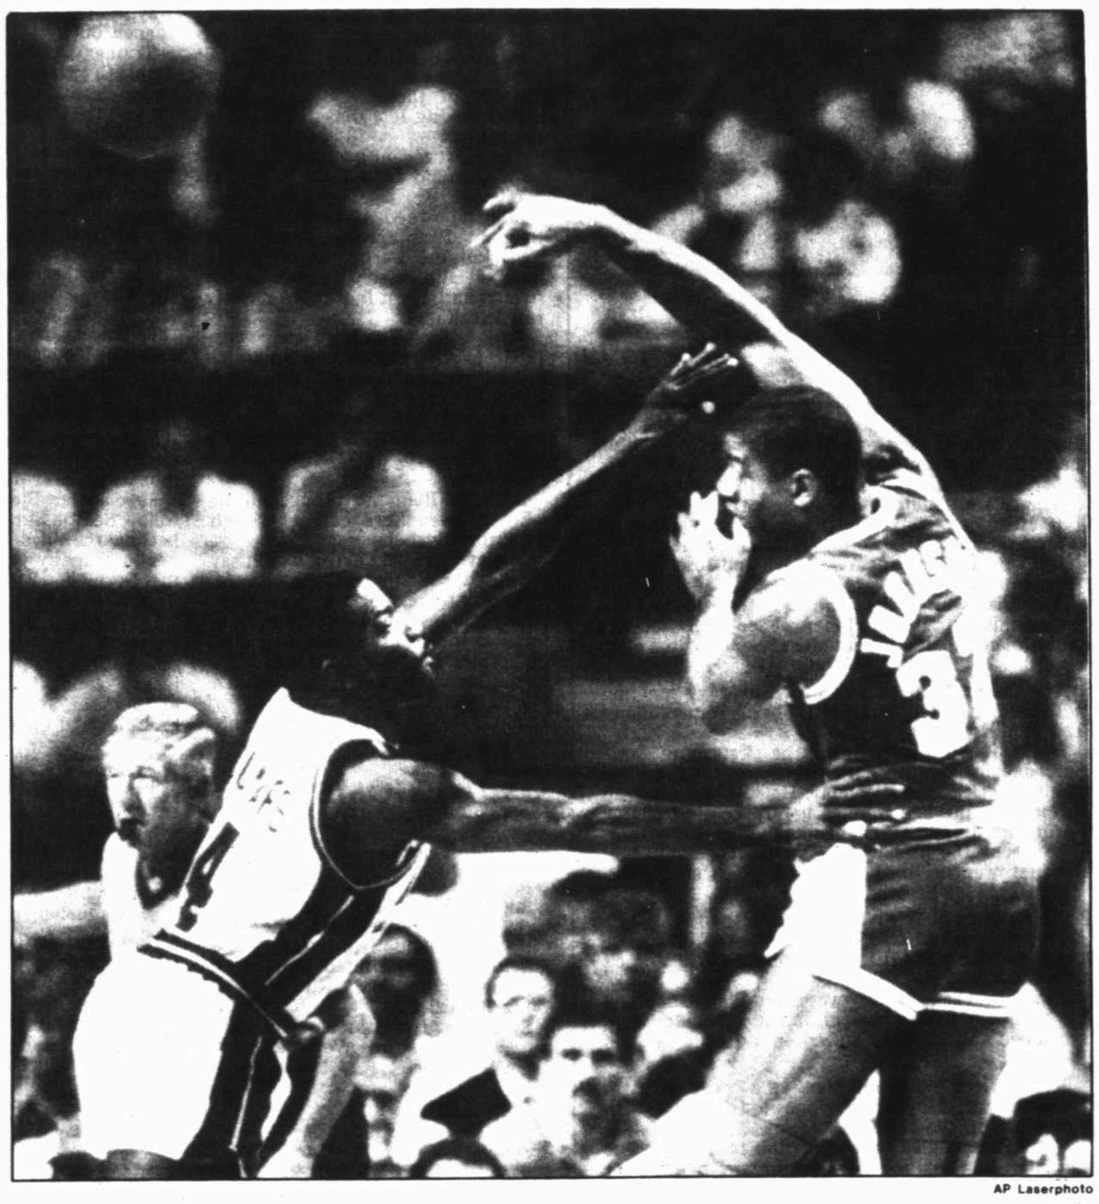

The sellout crowd rose to its feet chanting "Beat L.A., Beat L.A.," the Lakers called timeout, and Los Angeles experienced defeat for the first time since April 15.

The strong performance of Detroit's bench was a major key to victory. James Edwards, Dennis Rodman, John Salley and Johnson were active on the boards, scored timely baskets and never let the Lakers rest.

The Pistons' defense has carried them throughout the playoffs, but their offense was inconsistent in the Eastern Conference finals against the Chicago Bulls.

But Tuesday night, the Pistons were sharp. Their ball movement was excellent, they shot well from outside and they rebounded with fury.

Playoff success falters in Detroit

By HARRY ATKINS

AUBURN HILLS, Mich. (AP) — The Los Angeles Lakers' unbeaten streak couldn't withstand the weight of the Detroit Pistons' defense.

The Pistons, who relied on defense to fashion the NBA's best regular-season record, snapped the Lakers' playoff streak at 11 games with a 109-97 victory in the opening game of the finals Tuesday night.

The best-of-7 series continues Thursday night at the Palace, then shifts to the Forum for possibly three more.

Detroit, a team that landed nobody on the NBA's all-league team last week, blew the game open when Joe Dumars scored eight points in a 72-54 run to start the third quarter. The Pistons outscored the Lakers 24-18 for the period, marking the 12th time in 14 playoff games they have held an opponent to fewer than 20 points in a quarter.

"They've got excellent defenders," Lakers coach Pat Riley said. "They bump and bounce and put a lot of pressure on you.

"We weren't very sharp, but I credit the Pistons' defense for that. They're the best and they played like the best."

No team has scored 100 points against Detroit in 14 playoff games this season.

"We had to work hard for all our shots," the Lakers' Mychal Thompson said. "That's the way the Pistons make you play. Nothing came easy. Then, after you do all that work, we'd miss the shot and they'd get the rebound."

Detroit outrebounded the Lakers 45-32. The Pistons shot 55.4 percent, Los Angeles 46.7.

Part of that, of course, was due to the absence of Lakers guard Byron Scott, who pulled a hamstring in practice on Monday and did not dress. Scott had been averaging 19.9 points in the playoffs.

"Obviously, it hurt us," Riley said. "It caught us at the 11th hour. There really wasn't time to adjust.

"But, if we're going to feel sorry because we lost a key player, then we might as well forget it."

The Pistons, who beat the Lakers both times they met in the regular season, grabbed the lead with 2:48 remaining in the first quarter and led the rest of the way.

"We executed well and got the shots we wanted," Detroit guard Joe Dumars said. "We know LA is a great third quarter team and we didn't want to let down in the third quarter."

The defense saw to that.

Pirates sign Rychel

By JIMMY PATTERSON
Sports Writer

Former Midland High school pitcher Kevin Rychel has signed a pro baseball contract with the Pittsburgh Pirates after being selected in the sixth round of baseball's amateur draft Tuesday. He will report to the team's rookie instructional league team in Bradenton, Fla., Saturday.

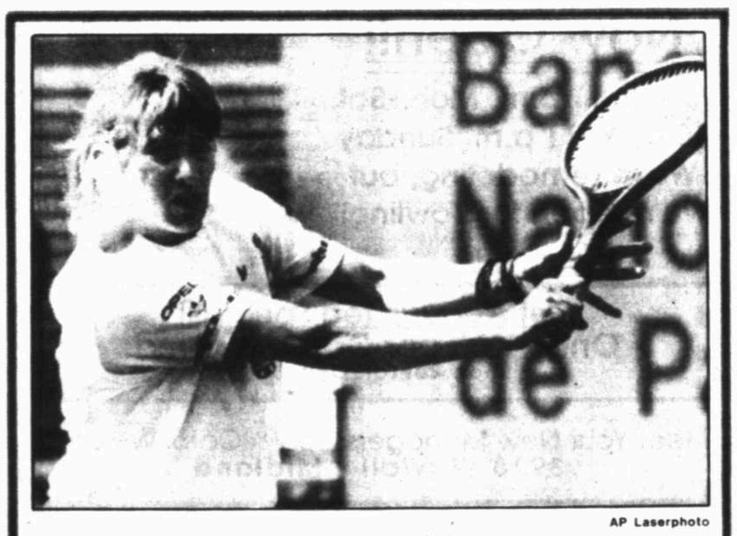

Rychel received $42,000 for signing, comparable to the money paid to sixth-round picks. The Pirates will also fund Rychel's college education and offer a benefit package.

Rychel, 8-3 during his senior season at Midland High, had signed a letter of intent to play with the University of Texas, but opted for the Pirates' offer due to his desire to go professional.

Rychel said "wanting to play pro ball all my life" was the reason for signing. "I guess I get my chance now.

"I've always wanted to play for the (New York) Mets, but now I guess I get to play against them."

Steffi Graf double-fists a shot to Conchita Martinez, of Spain, during the French Open quarterfinals Tuesday.

Graf moves to semifinals

By ANDREW WARSHAW

PARIS (AP) — Time was when Steffi Graf and Boris Becker were considered the likely dominant players of the next decade.

But already, the two West Germans — Graf is 19 and Becker 21 — are talking about their successors.

"It gets boring if you only talk about (Martina) Navratilova, (Chris) Evert, Graf and (Gabriela) Sabatini," Graf said Tuesday after advancing to the semifinals of the French Open with a 6-0, 6-4 victory over 17-year-old Spaniard Conchita Martinez.

"It's good to have some new faces ... who are good to watch. You need some changes."

Graf, the top seed and defending champion, will meet the youngest face of all in the semifinals.

Hogs eliminated from CWS

By TOM VINT

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — It wasn't stylish. It was effective. That's all you need in the College World Series.

Eric Wedge hit a three-run homer and Greg Brummett got his second pitching victory of the Series as fourth-seeded Wichita State eliminated fifth-seeded Arkansas 8-4.

"It was not pretty," Wichita State coach Gene Stephenson said. "We got a lot of ugly hits, some strange plays, but the bottom line is that we won."

The Shockers, 65-16, move to Wednesday's 7:10 p.m. CDT contest against unbeaten and top-seeded Florida State, 54-16. The Seminoles downed Wichita State 4-2 Sunday.

Arkansas goes home with a 51-16 record, suffering both losses to Wichita State and Brummett, 17-2. The Shockers downed the Razorbacks 3-1 in the opening round last Friday. Brummett allowed four hits in 7⅓ innings in that game, while Jim Newlin got the save.

Brummett went exactly the same distance Tuesday, this time giving up 12 hits and four runs.

"Greg Brummett pitched a good game," Stephenson said. "But I probably went one batter too long with him."

After 7⅓ innings, Newlin came on to allow just one hit for his 17th save.

"We couldn't get back in it," Arkansas coach Norm DeBriyn said. "We could not get a hit when we needed it."

Angels lose, fall from first

From Staff Reports

For the first time this season, the Midland Angels have fallen from first place in the Texas League's West Division.

Midland lost at Wichita, 9-4, to fall one-half game behind the Wranglers with just under two weeks remaining in the first half of play.

The Wranglers scored three runs in the bottom of the first on back-to-back singles by Tom LeVasser and Warren Newson. Both scored later, as did Dave Holland, when Angel outfielders Mark Doran and Reed Peters collided on a sac fly attempt.

The Angels tied it in the second on four straight singles by Danny Grunhard, John Orton, Gary DiSarcina and Peters.

Following Craig Cooper's solo homer in the third for Wichita, the Wranglers took the lead for good in the fourth, scoring two runs on a double by Newson.

Newson had four RBIs in the game, and now has seven in two games.

After Gary DiSarcina's home run in the third for Midland, Wichita pitcher Rick Holsman retired 13 in a row.

ANGEL NOTES: The two teams play a 12:15 p.m. game today with Wichita's Andy Benes and Midland's David Martinez getting the nods ... In Angel moves, Rick Moorehouse was sent to Class A Palm Springs Tuesday. Taking his place is Chris Beasley who will start on Thursday ... Doran Familiarity breeding contempt ...

Patterson

Sometimes the sports world breeds undesirables. Those who over-stick around. Wear out their welcome. Seems to me there should be some rule which would usher out old, washed up sorts, and bring us new, even more boring types.

Familiarity breeds contempt, as they say ...

■ Rick Pitino. Why can't this guy stay put? Is he kin to Larry Brown? This guy's had more jobs than Jim Wright's had excuses. And I'm sure that New York accent is gonna go over really well in Kentucky.

■ Sugar Ray Leonard. We have to put up with this clown again as he makes yet another of his marvelous comebacks in the ring against Thomas "Hit Man" Hearns next Monday. Somebody take this guy's gloves away. No better yet, leave his gloves alone and take his ego. Sugar Ray's getting as boring as old "Brady Bunch" reruns. Even Marcia, Alice and Bobby made a comeback, but they knew one show was enough before fading into the sunset again.

■ Pete Rose. Pete was in the news last year at this time for incidents detrimental to baseball. Last year it was his bumping incident with now-deposed NL umpire Dave Pallone, and Rose's subsequent one month suspension. This year, it's his gambling activities. Ooops, alleged gambling activities. What's next? Are we going to learn he failed his SAT?

■ Andre Agassi. I know he's popular and cute and everything, but why can't he win a tennis tournament? Sorry, but he's not the second-coming of Jimmy Connors.

■ Jackie Sherrill. This guy hasn't been heard from in six months, but still he brings on bad memories of how he trashed a perfectly good Texas A&M football program and left without so much a scratch. Still upsets me.

■ Isiah Thomas, Bill Laimbeer, Dennis Rodman, Mark Aguirre, etc ... Who could possibly root for the Pistons, a team that barely — just barely — beat The One Man Team, Michael Jordan. Even those growing tired of the Lakers in the finals have to be pulling for Kareem and Magic.

■ Chuck Daly. Can it be possible that another human being resembles Morton Downey, Jr. so much?

■ Hubie Brown. Enough already. The CBS sports commentator said this of Isiah Thomas' performance during Tuesday's night's NBA Game 1 Final: "Yessir, if this is any indication ... when he's played this way in every other playoff game ... they'll be unstoppable." Hubie-baby said that when Detroit took a 2-0 lead. Being 'unstoppable' is not determined as early as 2-0.

■ Orel Hershiser. So the guy's a millionaire. I really don't care what kind of underwear he wears or what kind of pizza he eats. Just throw some heat.

■ Ben Johnson. Put the guy's steroid abuse problems in the crime beat section where they belong.

■ Tony Mandarich. Why does it feel like this guy is this year's model of Brian Bosworth? The No. 2 pick in the draft, he hasn't played a down in the NFL and already he thinks he's good enough to step into the ring with Tyson. He also thinks he's worth $1.28 mil a year (which he's not). The Packers, meanwhile, think he's more in the neighborhood of $820,000 (which is still too much).

CWS

This time, Wedge gave Brummett a 3-0 lead in the first inning after Arkansas starter Doug Bennett, 7-3, experienced control problems. Jim Audley walked to lead off the game and, one out later, Mike McDonald walked.

Wedge then hit a 3-1 pitch over the 370-foot sign in left-center field for his 23rd homer.

Arkansas reached Brummett for a run in fifth when Haden Etheridge doubled with one out and Tony Gilmore singled to move Etheridge to third. Pinch-hitter Jay Carpenter grounded into a forceout as Etheridge scored.

The Shockers replied in the sixth when Wedge walked and Bryant Winslow bunted to pitcher Mike Swope, who threw to second. Wedge beat the throw and scored on Pat Meares' single.

A wild pitch moved up Winslow and Meares, then Swope struck out Todd Dreifort and intentionally walked Mike Jones to load the bases. Arkansas relief ace Phil Stidham came on to get a pair of groundouts to end the threat.

Brummett worked out of trouble in the sixth when he gave up one-out singles to Troy Eklund and Greg D'Alexander, then got groundouts from Bubba Carpenter and Etheridge.

McDonald added his 20th home run with one out in the seventh for a 5-1 lead.

In the Shockers eighth, Meares led off with a double and moved to third on Dreifort's single. Jones grounded into a fielder's choice, forcing Dreifort at second, then Joey Wilson singled Meares home. Audley also singled, loading the bases, then P.J. Forbes flied to right, scoring Jones for a 7-1 lead.

In the bottom of the inning, Arkansas' Eklund homered with one out, then D'Alexander reached on a throwing error by third baseman Jones. Carpenter singled and D'Alexander scored on a double by Etheridge. That knocked out Brummett.

Newlin came in and got Gilmore to ground out, scoring Carpenter. Calhoun grounded out to end the rally.

"I never felt we were out of it," DeBriyn said. "I felt we were getting to him (Brummett), but he's a competitor, a battler. But at the end he was running out of gas."

LSU 6, Miami 3

Russell Springer held Miami to six hits for 8⅓ innings, then got relief help from No. 1 draft pick Ben McDonald as sixth-seeded Louisiana State eliminated No. 3 Miami in the College World Series.

With McDonald warming up in the bullpen, Springer kept Miami off-balance, striking out nine. But after he walked pinch hitter Jorge Fabregas with one out in the ninth, McDonald relieved.

McDonald struck out John Viera and Jose Trujillo to end the game.

The LSU win marked the first time in 10 CWS games this year that a higher-seeded team had not won a matchup. It also sent Miami home with a 49-18 record.

The Tigers, 55-16, move on to Thursday's meeting with second-seeded Texas, 53-17. Texas routed Miami 12-2 Monday night.

McDonald, 14-3 after losing the first-round game Saturday to Miami 5-2, was drafted No. 1 by the Baltimore Orioles on Monday. He was warming up throughout the late innings before coming on for Springer, 9-3, and getting his fourth save this season.

LSU took the lead when Matt Gruver walked in the first, went to third on Mike Bianco's single and scored on Phil Espinosa's flyout.

Miami came back with two runs in the fifth. Chris Hirsch walked and Jose Trujillo singled. F.P. Santangello doubled home Hirsch and pitcher Will Vespe's infield hit scored Trujillo.

Espinosa reached safely when Trujillo mishandled his grounder in the bottom of the fifth. Ron Lim sacrificed and Espinosa scored on a double by Pete Bush.

Rey Noriega put Miami back up 3-2 with his fifth home run of the year, an opposite-field shot with two down in the sixth.

Craig Cala singled to lead off the LSU sixth. One out later, Bianco lined his eighth homer of the year just to the right of the 370-foot sign in right field.

Espinosa then walked, prompting Vespe's removal for Greg Knowles.

Knowles walked Bush and Tookie Johnson extended his hitting streak to 25 games with an RBI single to right-center, scoring Espinosa's sub, Scott Schneidewind, for a 5-3 lead.

LSU added another run in the seventh when Wes Grisham was hit by a pitch and Cala doubled to chase Knowles. Gruver greeted reliever Jim West with a flyout to deep center to score Grisham and move Cala to third. Cala tried to score on a wild pitch but was thrown out by catcher Hirsch to West at the plate.

Silence grows close to Crown

By HANK WESCH
Copley News Service

ELMONT, N.Y. — So near and yet so far.

Since the Triple Crown became recognized as the mark of thoroughbred greatness in the 1930s, 37 horses have won two of the three races. Thirteen of that group won the Kentucky Derby and Preakness and, discounting two that did not run in the Belmont, 11 have come up short trying to grasp the third jewel in the Triple Crown.

Now Sunday Silence comes here with two legs up on a Triple Crown and a date Saturday in which he will join the list of Triple Crown winners, making it "destiny's dozen," or the list of those who only came close, making it a dozen who were denied.

The most recent example of a Triple Crown bid denied was two years ago.

Midland-owned Alysheba came to Belmont Park having beaten Bet Twice in the Derby despite being bumped and nearly falling in the stretch and again in a more cleanly run Preakness.

Trainer Jack Van Berg was so confident in Alysheba that he laughingly told bystanders in the days leading to the race how he had already spent his 10 percent share of the $5 million in purse and bonus money that goes to a Triple Crown champion.

But the Belmont proved to be what racetrackers call a "rough trip" for Alysheba.

Jockey Chris McCarron would say he "used poor judgement," in reserving Alysheba off a slow early pace when he had an opportunity to forge to the front. Subsequent traffic problems on the backstretch and turning into the stretch resulted in a fourth-place finish. The hoped-for Triple Crown and the $5 million bonus were both lost in the 2:28 1/5 it took Bet Twice to run the 1½ Belmont distance and leave his closest pursuers 14 lengths behind.

"I think the mile and a half distance makes it (the Belmont) so tough," Van Berg said recently at Hollywood Park. "None of the horses have run that far before, and the jockeys don't ride a mile and a half very often.

"We (Alysheba) should have been in front because there wasn't any speed in the race.

"I said to Chris before the race that he might be in front the whole way, but that wasn't the way it turned out."

Trainer Laz Barrera, who won a Triple Crown with Affirmed in 1978, came close two years earlier when he won the Derby and Belmont with Bold Forbes.

"When you've got a horse that you think is good enough to do it, sure you're disappointed when it doesn't happen," Barrera said. "But there are so many things that can go wrong."

The backstretch bromide that there are a thousand ways to lose and only one way to win a horse race hold as true for the champions and blue-bloods competing in the finale of the Triple Crown series as it does for low level claimers at any track in the country.

Some stories of memorable near-misses by those who came to the Belmont with a Triple Crown in sight:

Spectacular Bid looked likely to follow Seattle Slew and Affirmed to become the third Triple Crown winner in as many years when he took the Derby by 2¾ lengths and the Preakness by 5½ a decade ago.

By Belmont week, most supporters of "The Bid" had even overcome reservations about the colt's regular jockey, young Ron Franklin. Early in the year at the Florida Derby, Franklin had given Spectacular Bid what Daily Racing Form columnist Joe Hirsch described as an "incredibly inept" ride even though it ended in victory.

But Spectacular Bid's performances — he was 8-0 before the Belmont — bred confidence. And trainer Bud Delp, whose oft-stated opinion was that The Bid was the best horse to ever look through a bridle, confidently put the colt thought a mile workout in 1:39 over a sloppy track a few days before the Belmont.

It left the horse visibly tired and Delp open to later speculation that he had overworked his star.

When Delp arrived at the backstretch on Belmont Day he was informed by groom Mo Hall that Spectacular Bid had stepped on a loose safety pin in his stall during the night and driven it deep into the meat of his left front hoof. The colt had a reputation for gnawing at leg wraps and could have dislodged the pin himself.

Delp extracted the pin, checked the hoof, watched the colt walk around the stable area and decided to send Spectacular Bid out in quest of glory.

Spectacular Bid led by three lengths with a quarter-mile to go, but was overhauled by Coastal and Golden Act to lose by 3½ lengths. The colt came back from the race limping and the pin incident was made public only in the aftermath.

In the case of Majestic Prince (1969), Canonero II (1971) and Kauai King (1966) it was a matter of the Triple Crown series taking its toll.

Majestic Prince's owner, Frank McMahon, was keen to run in the Belmont.

"One of the first things John said to me when I saw him the week before the race was, 'After this, what I say is going to go,'" recalls Nelson Fisher, longtime turf writer for The San Diego Union.

Hoop coaches propose new system

By JACK KEEVER

AUSTIN (AP) — Game officials who have good seasons should be rewarded just as good teams are, with opportunities to perform in regional and state tournaments, according to the Texas Association of Basketball Coaches.

The association on Tuesday proposed to the University Interscholastic League athletics committee a statewide evaluation system for grading basketball officials.

After a game, coaches would hold evaluation cards for at least a 24-hour "cooling-off" period — but not longer than a week — before mailing them to the local chapters of the Southwest Basketball Officials Association, where they would be tabulated.

Local chapters of the association would provide the UIL with a list of the top 10 percent of officials.

"The better officials who have better seasons would get choice assignments at regional and state," said Tommy Newman of Trinity High School, representing basketball coaches. "The objective is to promote better officiating."

Newman said such a system is needed because some better young officials are dropping out for lack of incentive. "It takes so long to work their way up to get choice assignments that they get discouraged and drop out. We'd like to find ways to encourage them to stay," he said.

UIL director Bailey Marshall said he was concerned that such a system would result in losing basketball coaches giving zeros to officials at their games, which would knock them off the list of top officials.

"The bad grades will come from the losing coaches, not the winning coaches," Marshall said.

"This is not a foolproof system by any means," Newman said. "The bugs still need to be worked out."

Dotson Lewis, executive director of the Southwest Officials Association, suggested higher fees for officials working at lower levels of competition.

"I've had officials tell me that they can make more money working at the 7-Eleven and be a lot safer," Lewis said.

Basketball coaches also sought better state tournament seats by proposing that the UIL mail ticket forms directly to boys coaches, thus bypassing school administrators.

Another proposal by basketball coaches would give Texas coaches a chance to coach in approved all-star games other than the Texas High School Coaches Association games.

Newman said this would highlight such longtime successful coaches as Bill Krueger of Clear Lake, Don Coleman of Houston Memorial and Robert Hughes of Fort Worth Dunbar.

Other athletic proposals would implement a fast pitch softball program for girls in Class 4A and 5A; stop the "raiding" of public school athletes by private schools offering "monetary incentives"; require a "visible clock" and official timer at soccer matches; allow summer camps to take place any time during the summer; and make it a violation to remove a team from the field, court or playing area during a game.

Behind Brown, Texas downs Chicago

Associated Press

Rookie Kevin Brown allowed no hits for 6⅔ innings and Cecil Espy scored twice as the Texas Rangers beat the Chicago White Sox 3-1.

Brown, 5-2, allowed three hits in 8 2-3 innings, struck out six and walked three in sending the White Sox to their 14th loss in 17 games.

He retired the first 11 batters in order before walking Harold Baines in the fourth. Ron Kittle broke up the no-hit bid with a ground single to left field with one out in the seventh.

Kittle also ruined Brown's shutout bid when he singled home Dave Gallagher with two outs in the ninth. Jeff Russell relieved and got the last out for his 12th save.

It was the Rangers' fourth victory in their last five games.

Espy reached on a bunt single off Melido Perez, 3-7, with one out in the third, stole second and moved to third on a grounder. Espy then walked home when Perez was called for a balk. After Espy scored, Rafael Palmeiro walked and Ruben Sierra tripled him home.

Espy singled with one out in the eighth and moved to second on reliever Donn Pall's errant pickoff attempt. Palmeiro followed with a run-scoring single to right to make it 3-0.

Yankees 4, Orioles 0

Dave LaPoint and Dave Righetti combined on a six-hitter and New York Yankees stopped Baltimore's eight-game winning streak.

Don Mattingly and Ken Phelps each homered in the first inning and Mel Hall went 3-for-4 with a home run in the fifth.

A day after making six errors in a 16-3 loss to Baltimore, the Yankees played flawlessly in the field. New York got a hit in every inning against Dave Schmidt and Kevin Hickey and finished with 11.

The Orioles, who began the night with a five-game lead in the American League East, had won 13 of their last 14 games. They had won five straight on the road and 12 of the past 13.

LaPoint, 6-4, gave up four hits in seven innings and ended his three-game losing streak. LaPoint had some stiffness in his arm in his last start, a 5-0 loss to Milwaukee on June 1. Righetti finished with two-hit relief.

The Yankees, whose 4.60 earned run average is second-worst in the majors, pitched their third shutout of the season. Baltimore advanced only two runners to second base and was blanked for the fifth time this year.

Schmidt, 5-5, allowed four runs on nine hits in 7 1-3 innings and had his four-game winning streak snapped. He retired the first two batters in the first inning before Mattingly hit his fourth home run.

Hall followed with a single and Phelps, inserted into the lineup when Jesse Barfield was a late scratch, homered off the foul pole in right field. Phelps ended a 1-for-19 slump with his second home run of the season and first since April 21, a span of 78 at-bats.

Hall hit his second home run with two outs in the fifth. Hall's other homer came Sunday, the last game he played.

AL Roundup

Brewers 6, Blue Jays 4

Paul Molitor's run-scoring single snapped a ninth-inning tie and the Milwaukee Brewers beat Toronto, sending the Blue Jays to their second straight loss in the SkyDome.

With the score tied 3-3, Mike Felder led off the ninth with an infield single off reliever Duane Ward, 2-7, stole second and scored on Molitor's single.

Robin Yount followed with a single and Gary Sheffield singled to score Molitor, sending Yount to third. Glenn Braggs followed with a sacrifice fly to deep right field.

Jay Aldrich, 1-0, pitched three innings in relief for the victory.

Chuck Crim loaded the bases with one out in the bottom of the ninth and rookie Tony Fossas came on to pitch with Crim moving to first. After Nelson Liriano singled in a run against Fossas, Crim moved back to the mound and got Tom Lawless to fly to center and struck out Tony Fernandez to secure his third save.

Tigers 5, Red Sox 1

Manager Sparky Anderson got his first victory since returning to the Detroit dugout and Mike Schwabe allowed one run in 5⅓ innings in his first major-league start as the Tigers beat Boston to snap a five-game losing streak.

After a loss on May 11 to the Class AAA Toledo Mud Hens, Anderson began to feel poorly. By that weekend in Cleveland, he was so keyed up he could barely sleep. Finally, on May 19, Anderson was sent home with orders to rest.

For two weeks, he slept, played golf and underwent a battery of tests. Tigers team physician Dr. Clarence Livingood said the manager is now in excellent health. Anderson returned Monday, but the Tigers lost 5-2 to Boston.

Relievers Paul Gibson, Mike Henneman and Guillermo Hernandez held the Red Sox scoreless for 3 2-3 innings to finish a combined six-hitter and Gary Ward went 3-for-4 and scored twice.

The Red Sox have lost seven of their last 10 games.

Mariners 5, Royals 2

Alvin Davis hit a three-run homer in his first game back from the disabled list, leading the Seattle Mariners past the Kansas City Royals.

Davis, who was hitting .336 before going on the 15-day DL with a leg injury, hit his sixth homer in the first inning, scoring Harold Reynolds and Henry Cotto.

Scott Bankhead, 3-4, allowed three hits in seven innings and Mike Jackson finished.

Jay Buhner added a solo homer for Seattle in the sixth inning, his second in as many games.

Athletics 1, Twins 0

Mike Moore pitched a four-hitter and Glenn Hubbard hit a run-scoring double in the second inning, leading the Oakland Athletics past the Minnesota Twins.

Moore, 7-4, pitched his second complete game of the season and his first shutout since last Sept. 17, while he was with Seattle. He struck out six and walked two.

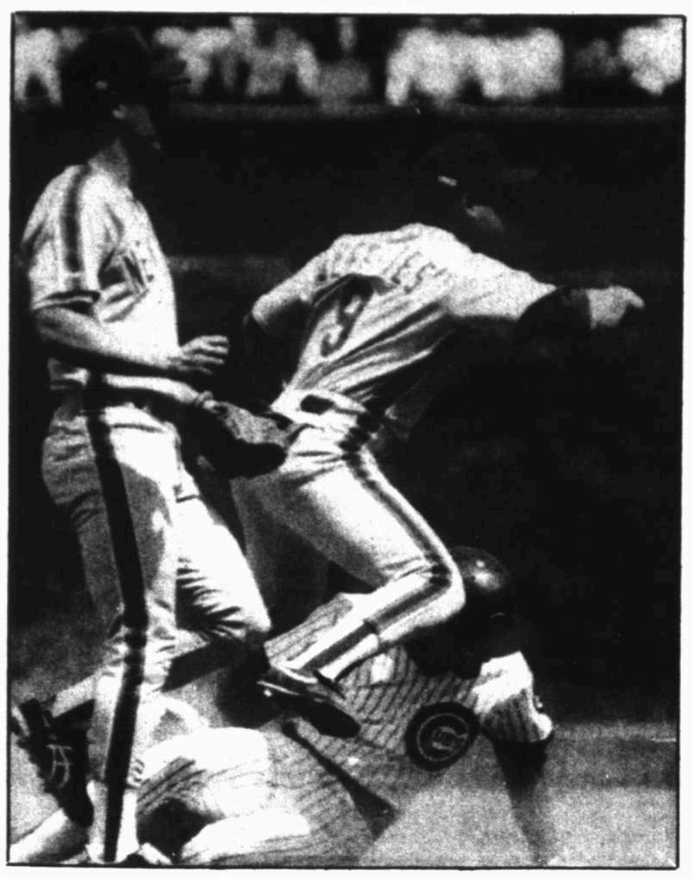

The A's scored their only run off Allan Anderson, 6-4, in the second on Dave Parker's single, a wild pitch and Glenn Hubbard's double down the right-field line.

Angels 2, Indians 1

Dan Petry, making his first start of the season, allowed one run in five innings as the California Angels beat the Cleveland Indians.

Petry, 2-0, was a substitute for Jim Abbott, who was scratched because of a sore shoulder. It was Petry's first victory in a starting role since last June 10. He allowed nine hits and fanned one.

With the Angels leading 2-0, Petry allowed a leadoff double in the sixth to Pete O'Brien and was relieved by Greg Minton. O'Brien advanced to third on a an infield grounder and scored on Mark Salas' single.

Astros go 10 to beat Padres

Associated Press

Glenn Davis' 10th-inning single skipped off the glove of right fielder Bip Roberts, allowing Bill Doran to score from first base and give the Houston Astros a victory over the San Diego Padres.

The Astros, who rallied from a 7-4 deficit with two out in the ninth, won it with two out in the 10th. With Doran at first after a fielder's choice grounder to third, Davis lined a single towards the gap in right-center off San Diego relief ace Mark Davis, 2-1, who failed for the first time in 18 save opportunities. Roberts, trying to limit Davis to a single, had the ball glance off his glove, allowing Doran to score the deciding run.

Greg Harris retired 11 consecutive batters in relief of Padres starter Dennis Rasmussen, only to fail to get the last out of the game. Doran began the Houston rally with a single to left and Davis and Ken Caminiti walked to load the bases and chase Harris.

Davis walked Rafael Ramirez on five pitches and pinch-hitter Craig Biggio on four to make it 7-6. Davis struck out Alex Trevino, but Padres catcher Benito Santiago dropped the ball for an error to allow Caminiti to score the tying run.

Dave Smith, 1-2, pitched the 10th for the victory.

Cubs 8, Mets 4

Dwight Smith is a rookie, but he's not playing like one.

Smith hit a two-run homer and Lloyd McClendon drove in two runs with a home run and a single as the Chicago Cubs overcame a New York triple play and beat the Mets.

"When they pitch you out, you have to go with the ball," said Smith, who also had a single to raise his average to .357. "You have to keep making adjustments."

Damon Berryhill also drove in two runs with a pair of singles as the Cubs won their third straight and 15th in the last 20 games.

Chicago scored three runs in the fifth to take a 6-2 lead on consecutive singles by Doug Dascenzo, Mitch Webster, Ryne Sandberg, Berryhill and McClendon. However, the rally ended abruptly when Vance Law hit into a triple play.

With runners on first and second, Law lined to first baseman Dave Magadan on a hit-and-run play. Magadan stepped on first to double McClendon and threw to shortstop Kevin Elster, catching Berryhill off second base.

Darryl Strawberry hit his 13th homer after Magadan singled in the sixth to make it 6-4, but that's as close as the Mets got.

"There's not much to say, we got whipped again," said Mets manager Davey Johnson, whose team has lost six of its last 10 games.

Braves 3, Dodgers 0

Tom Glavine pitched a six-hit shutout, his third of the season, to lead the Atlanta Braves over the Los Angeles Dodgers.

Tommy Gregg led the Atlanta offense with three hits, including an RBI double in the first inning.

The decision ended a two-game winning streak for the Dodgers and a two-game losing streak for the Braves.

Glavine, 6-2, gave up two walks and had no strikeouts in gaining his second triumph over the Dodgers this year after going 0-5 against Los Angeles last season as a rookie. He threw only 86 pitches.

The Braves jumped on Mike Morgan, 4-4, for three consecutive hits to open the first inning — singles by Jeff Treadway and Dion James and the RBI double by Gregg to right field.

The Braves added a run in the third on Dale Murphy's RBI single to center following singles by James and Gregg. In the eighth, Andres Thomas hit a solo homer off Dodgers reliever Tim Crews.

Morgan, who entered the game with the National League's best earned run average, 1.36, gave up nine hits, fanned two and walked one, intentionally.

NL Roundup

Expos 3, Cardinals 2

Pascual Perez, making his first start since May 17, pitched six innings of five-hit ball and helped his own cause with a sacrifice fly as the Montreal Expos beat the St. Louis Cardinals.

Rex Hudler chipped in with a two-run homer for Montreal as the Expos won for 10th time in 13 games.

Perez, 2-7, who was dropped from the starting rotation last month after losing his first six decisions, struck out five and did not walk a batter. Andy McGaffigan pitched one inning in relief and Tim Burke went the last two for his 13th save.

Joe Magrane, 3-5, gave up five hits in six innings in dropping his third consecutive decision. Magrane hasn't won since May 10.

Hudler followed Otis Nixon's leadoff single in the first with his third homer of the year, all in his last six at-bats. It was the first homer Magrane had allowed in 58 innings.

Phillies 9, Pirates 4

Randy Ready and John Kruk, acquired in a trade last week, each drove in two runs in a five-run second inning rally as the Philadelphia Phillies snapped an 11-game losing streak with a 9-4 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates.

The Phillies put the game away in the second by sending 11 batters to the plate and scoring five runs for a 6-1 lead. Dwayne Murphy opened the inning with his third home run of the season. With two outs, Darren Daulton and Tom Herr walked and Ready then doubled home two runs to chase Pittsburgh starter Brian Fisher, 0-2.

Reliever Roger Samuels walked Von Hayes and Kruk followed with a two-run single. Kruk, who with Ready came to the Phillies last Friday in a trade that sent outfielder Chris James to San Diego, also singled in the eighth to drive in Ready, who had doubled. Juan Samuel followed with his seventh homer of the season.

Reds 4, Giants 3
Giants 3, Reds 2

San Francisco's Kevin Mitchell led off the ninth inning with his second solo home run of the game to give the San Francisco Giants and pitcher Rick Reuschel a 3-2 victory over the Cincinnati Reds and a split of a doubleheader.

Mitchell also hit a three-run homer in the first game, which the Reds won 4-3 when Mike LaCoss walked Eric Davis with the bases loaded in the bottom of the ninth.

Mitchell leads the major leagues with 22 homers and 61 RBIs, and has hit seven home runs in his last six games.

The 40-year-old Reuschel, the major-league victory leader with an 11-2 record, scattered six hits in 8 2-3 innings. Paul O'Neill singled and Joel Youngblood walked with two out in the ninth, and Craig Lefferts got his 10th save by getting Todd Benzinger to ground out.

Monica Seles, an unseeded 15-year-old Yugoslav and the youngest player in the women's draw, reached the last four by beating sixth-seeded Manuela Maleeva 6-3, 7-5.

"It's a new face on the tour," Graf said of Seles, who plays two-fisted on both sides and is based at Nick Bollettieri's tennis academy in Florida. "It's good for the game."

Becker, the No. 2 men's seed, also welcomed the new breed but said he hoped they had the personality to match their game.

"There is a complete change, a whole new generation coming up in both the men and the women," Becker said after reaching the men's semifinals with a 6-3, 6-4, 6-1 victory over unseeded American Jay Berger.

"I only hope that this new generation brings as many players who have as much personality and charisma as those who are leaving. Otherwise it will be the death of the sport.

"There are players like Jimmy Connors, John McEnroe and Yannick Noah who are going slowly. We need those type of players."

RYCHEL

Rychel will stay in the Pirates' instructional league for up to two weeks before being promoted to the Bucs' rookie league team in Princeton, West Virginia. He has set a personal goal to be on the Triple A level by the fall of 1992.

Pittsburgh also has farm clubs at Whelland, Canada (Class A), Salem Ga. (A), Augusta, Ga. (A), Harrisburg, Penn. (AA) and Buffalo, NY (AAA).

Rychel said he didn't really receive any advice from anyone other than to "do what I want to do and try to get as much money as I could."

As for regrets, the only one Rychel has is missing friends on the way out of town.

"It's kind of quick," Rychel said of the turn his career has taken. "I'll miss all of my friends. All of them are out of town now. They get back on the 11th and I leave on the 10th. And in the fall, I'll come back and they'll already have left for college. That's the only bad thing about it."

Rychel's mother, Cheryl Irish, also feels it is sudden, but was supportive of her son's decision.

"I'm happy," Ms. Irish said. "I think he did what he wanted to do. I don't think he could have made a bad decision. (The Pirates) promised they'd take good care of him.

"It's happened kind of quickly. He graduates one week and then leaves the next. I knew the draft was at the beginning of June but I didn't expect it to be this soon."

In the best of all worlds, you will always be able to make your contract if you choose the best line. Real life is not like that, unfortunately. On many occasions all you can do is make the best possible use of your assets, and hope the lie of the cards is favorable.

This deal featured a fascinating duel between declarer and his right-hand opponent. The four-heart contract was certainly reasonable and, but for good defense, it would have been a pianola.

West led the jack of clubs. East rose with the ace and, realizing the threat posed by dummy's diamond suit, he attacked dummy's entries by making the fine return of the jack of spades, won by the queen. Declarer countered with an elegant thrust of his own.

He drew trumps, cashed the king of clubs and led a diamond to the jack. When West played his lowest card to show an odd number of cards in the suit, East, of course, held up. Declarer put his entry to dummy to good use—he ruffed a club. He had no way of knowing whether he would succeed in stripping East of the suit, but it was correct technique.

When declarer continued with a diamond, East was caught in an endplay. Forced to win the ace, he was down to nothing but spades and diamonds. The only thing he could do was cash the ace of spades to complete the defensive book, but that established dummy's king as the fulfilling trick. By taking advantage of a lucky distribution, declarer was able to hold his losers to the three side-suit aces.

Former Philippine President Marcos in critical condition after surgery

HONOLULU (AP) — Former Philippine President Ferdinand Marcos was resting comfortably after emergency surgery for an abdominal infection, but his prognosis for recovery remained poor, spokesmen said.

During Tuesday's three-hour operation at St. Francis Medical Center, surgeons drained a pancreatic abscess, the suspected source of the persistent infection, said Eugene Tiwanak, the hospital's assistant administrator.

Marcos

Following surgery, Marcos, 71, remained in very critical condition as he has been since May 18 when he was readmitted to the intensive care unit with a variety of serious ailments, Tiwanak said.

An infection had plagued Marcos for the past few weeks. Doctors believed it was centered in his abdomen but were not sure of its exact location, Tiwanak said.

"They felt his condition was worsening and they needed to do the exploratory surgery," he said, adding they were not certain if there are other sources of infection.

Doctors hoped to see some improvement in his condition today, he said.

Marcos agreed to the surgery after doctors explained that tests indicated an infection, said Marcos aide Arturo Aruiza.

"They did it cautiously. They went through several X-rays and several scans first," Aruiza said. "The surgery was a good call."

Joe Lazo, an ardent supporter, said he saw Marcos after the surgery, and saw him "resting comfortably. He is sleeping, but he looks good."

Marcos' wife, Imelda, was at his bedside Tuesday night, Lazo said.

Marcos, who was hospitalized Jan. 15, has been suffering from kidney and heart failure, pneumonia and bacterial infections and has been undergoing kidney dialysis. He breathes with the aid of a respirator.

On May 23, his doctors said it was a miracle he was still alive.

Marcos has lived in Honolulu since his ouster from the Philippines in a popular revolt in February 1986.

His illness has prevented him from traveling to New York to face racketeering charges alleging he plundered his homeland of more than $100 million and used the money to buy real estate and art in the United States.

Mrs. Marcos, who also is charged, last month appealed to Philippine President Corazon Aquino to allow her husband to die in his homeland. The request was denied.

BRASILIA, Brazil (AP) — British pop star Sting, a campaigner to protect the Amazon rain forest and native Indians, was stung by criticism and bureaucratic hassles during a visit to the capital.

Sting came here after a two-month international tour to raise funds for creation of a huge Indian reservation in the Amazon jungle.

At a meeting Monday to discuss the campaign, Mario Juruna, a Xavante Indian and ex-congressman, accused the singer of taking advantage of the "purity and innocence of the Indians" for self-promotion: "Why doesn't he dedicate himself to resolving the problem of AIDS or defend the Indians of the United States?"

Sting also was told that to visit Xingu National Park, a major Indian reservation in central Brazil, he would have to meet the usual bureaucratic requirements to enter the restricted area. The red tape was waived for the singer on previous visits.

According to news reports, Sting said nothing but later canceled a scheduled news conference.

JERUSALEM (AP) — Actress Alessandra Mussolini, granddaughter of the late fascist dictator of Italy, visited Judaism's holiest site and appealed for an end to religious prejudice.

Mussolini

Miss Mussolini, 23, who is here for a film in which she portrays an Israeli soldier, visited the sacred Western Wall and the Yad Vashem Holocaust museum and said she "felt just sick" after seeing displays of Nazi atrocities.

"There are no words to describe those things," she said Tuesday.

Miss Mussolini said she saw no irony in her visit even though her grandfather, Benito Mussolini, was an ally of Germany's Adolf Hitler, who perpetrated the Holocaust in which 6 million Jews died.

"I'm a new generation, and I want to give a message ... to overcome all the prejudice, to say 'Let's shake hands and be friends,'" she said.

"I don't feel anything bad against me here," said Miss Mussolini, who is also a niece of actress Sophia Loren.

DETROIT (AP) — Neighbors are complaining that Aretha Franklin is giving them a case of the blues by neglecting her house on the city's west side.

The two-story brick home, deeded to the singer in 1972 by her then-husband Theodore White, was condemned last year by the city. Now, the yard is overgrown and littered.

"We live in a nice neighborhood, but Aretha Franklin doesn't care about us," said Theodora Stewart, who lives behind the house.

Franklin couldn't be reached for comment. There was no answer Tuesday morning at the office of her attorney, Harvey Tennen.

City records show the house was bought by White and Franklin for $18,500 in 1967, when they were married. The market value of the house and land is about $42,500.

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — It's been a long time coming, but Oscar-winning actor Dustin Hoffman is finally going to be a graduate.

Hoffman

The Santa Monica College board voted unanimously Monday to give an honorary associate in arts degree to Hoffman, who enrolled in 1955 to study music but changed to theater arts and never graduated.

Superintendent Richard Moore said Hoffman sent word through his agent that he would be honored to accept the degree. Hoffman is currently appearing in "The Merchant of Venice" in London.

Hoffman has been nominated six times for Academy Awards, including "The Graduate," "Midnight Cowboy," "Lenny" and "Tootsie." He won Oscars for his performances in "Rain Man" and "Kramer vs. Kramer."

BUSINESS/OIL

OPEC still deadlocked on quotas

By YOUSSEF M. IBRAHIM
New York Times News Service

VIENNA, Austria — A meeting here of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries remains deadlocked in its fifth day, with sentiment among delegates going against Kuwait, which has insisted on a special increase in its oil production quota.

Delegates said Tuesday that OPEC was moving toward a solution that would raise the formal production ceiling, now 18.5 million barrels a day, by 1.5 million barrels a day and distribute the increase proportionally among the group's 13 members.

The feeling among many delegates is that Kuwait may yield to overall pressure from others to conform to this formula and then proceed to produce "a little more oil" than the quota, said one senior Arab delegate who asked not to be identified.

Kuwait continued to suggest, at least publicly, that it will sign an agreement that grants it a larger percentage of production within OPEC than its current 5.6 percent.

Kuwait has been joined by the United Arab Emirates, which is asking a similar increase in its nearly identical quota, and Gabon and Ecuador, which are much smaller OPEC producers.

The Arab delegate said OPEC would be willing to tolerate excess production of no more than 300,000 barrels a day by Kuwait and by the Emirates.

The reason such cheating would be accepted, he said, is that demand for OPEC oil in coming months is expected to be about 21 million barrels a day, according to a report scheduled to be released by the International Energy Agency in Paris.

At the moment, Kuwait is producing about 1.6 million to 1.8 million barrels a day, well beyond its quota of one million barrels. Kuwait has asked for an increase of 300,000 to 500,000 barrels.

The Emirates are producing about 1.8 million barrels a day, 800,000 above the quota.

"If Kuwait and the Emirates go overboard and continue to pump more than a million barrels above their new quotas, then the whole thing will collapse," the Arab delegate said.

Should such overproduction occur, he said, Saudi Arabia and others in OPEC will also increase production and bring on a collapse of oil prices.

Saudi Arabia and a number of other OPEC countries feel that granting special increases for higher production would upset a carefully balanced distribution of quotas and the percentage of each member under the output ceiling. The Saudi percentage of the ceiling is 24.5 percent.

Reinforcing its position as OPEC's top producer, Saudi Arabia is on the verge of announcing the discovery of a big new oilfield in Hotat Bani Tamim, southwest of Riyadh, which may hold about 5 billion barrels of the highly desirable sweet, light crude used mostly to make gasoline.

Wright charged in clash

New York Times News Service

A confidential government report indicates that a politically influential owner of a controversial California thrift asked federal regulators to fire a government official who had clashed on several occasions with House Speaker Jim Wright.

According to a Feb. 22, 1988 memorandum from the Federal Home Loan Bank of San Francisco to the Federal Home Loan Bank Board's Enforcement Review Committee in Washington, Charles H Keating Jr. (CQ, no period after the middle initial "H") told bank board Chairman M. Danny Wall that the Speaker would be pleased if Wall fired an official at the San Francisco Bank.

"Charles Keating told Chairman Wall that firing the general counsel of the FHLB San Francisco would please Jim Wright," the memo about the September 1987 meeting states.

Keating is a former Cincinnati businessman who built Phoenix-based American Continental Corp. into a $7 billion financial services company before it filed for protection under Chapter 11 of the federal bankruptcy code on April 13. American Continental is incorporated in Ohio, and its principal subsidiary, Lincoln Savings and Loan Association, is in California.

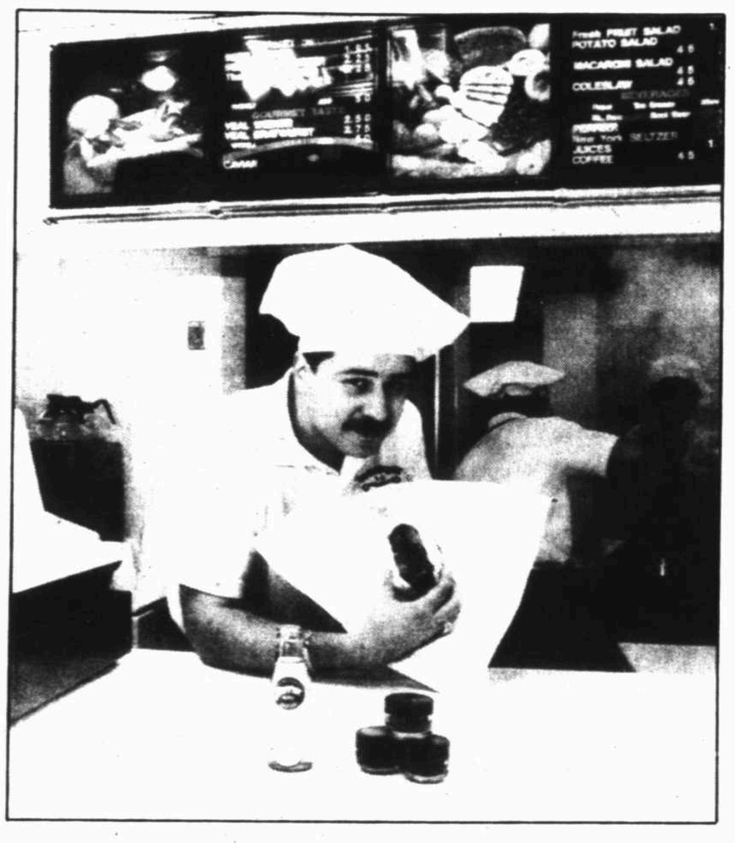

Fedral regulators took over control of Lincoln one day after American Continental's Chapter 11 filing. Estimates to repair the thrift range as high as $2.5 billion.

American Continental spokesman Mark Connally said Keating was unavailable Monday. However, Connally said it was well known at the time that Wright did not like William Black, the San Francisco Bank's general counsel.

"There was no secret about who was favorable to who back then," Connally said of Wright's dislike for Black.

Officials at Wright's office were unavailable for comment Monday. Wright, under fire for allegedly violating House ethics rules, said last week he would resign from Congress.

Paramount makes bid for Time

Warner merger may be threatened

New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — In a move expected to set off a nasty battle involving some of the nation's most visible media and entertainment companies, Paramount Communications Inc. — the newly renamed Gulf and Western Inc. — offered Tuesday night to pay $175 a share, or $10.7 billion in cash, for Time Inc.

The offer came only two weeks before the proposed merger of Time and Warner Communications Inc. was to be completed.

Time and Warner agreed in March to merge their operations, creating the world's largest communications company.

Asked how he would break up the merger, Martin S. Davis, chairman and chief executive of Paramount, said in an interview:

"It'll be up to the shareholders; they can take all cash from us or no cash at all and end up with a piece of paper. Whatever the shareholders decide is the decision we'll abide by."

When asked how he saw the fit between Time and Paramount, he replied: "It's the same fit as with Warner. It'd be a premier communications company about the same size. If it happens, it'll be the biggest."

J. Richard Munro, chairman of Time, received news of the hostile bid late Tuesday night in a telephone call from Davis.

Munro was said to have expressed surprise, because he believed he had received assurances from Davis that he would not make a bid.

Through a spokesman, Munro declined to comment on the bid. But in a terse statement, Time said, "Mr. Davis's proposal will be reviewed by Time's board, as required by law."

The statement added that for now the company was advising its shareholders not to do anything until a decision was reached by the board.

A spokeswoman for Warner said the company would have no immediate comment. She also said that Steven J. Ross, chairman of Warner, who was instrumental in the Time-Warner deal, would not be available for comment.

The blockbuster hostile bid, expected to be announced in an official tender offer to stockholders Wednesday, had been the subject of widespread conjecture among Wall Street traders, speculators and ordinary investors.

Traders on the New York Stock Exchange, going more by the feel of the market than on real information, pushed up the price of Time stock Tuesday by $2.75, to $126, with nearly a million shares changing hands.

RJR sells food units to BSN

New York Times News Service

PARIS — RJR Nabisco Inc. announced Tuesday the sale of five of its European food businesses to BSN, France's largest food company, for $2.5 billion.

RJR Nabisco, which was taken private in a huge $24.53 billion buyout in February, said the sale of these cookie and snack businesses was part of a plan it had agreed upon with its banks to cut its debt by $5.5 billion.

For BSN, whose products include Dannon yogurt, Evian mineral water and Kronenbourg beer, the purchase is part of its aggressive strategy to become a giant in Europe's food and beverage market to compete better when Europe's internal trade barriers fall in 1992.

Tuesday's move was the biggest acquisition to date by Paris-based BSN and would make it Europe's top cookie producer. In the last two years, it has acquired more than 20 companies with sales totaling more than $3 billion.

The operations sold by RJR Nabisco, which is moving its headquarters from Atlanta to New York, had operating income of $137 million on sales of $1.2 billion last year.

The five operations are the Belin Group, a French cookie and pastry producer; Saiwa, a cookie and snack business in Italy; the British business

Buyers raise posted price

From Staff and Wire Reports

Oil futures prices continue heading lower while posted prices head higher.

At midmorning on the New York Mercantile Exchange, the July contract for West Texas Intermediate fell 26 cents to $20.20. WTI fell 6 cents to close at $20.46 Tuesday.

However, a number of crude oil purchasers, including Sun Refining, Permian Corp. and Texaco, had raised their posted prices 50 cents to $19.50.

Prices weakened slightly Tuesday as OPEC ministers struggled to reach an agreement on raising crude oil production.

The crude contract held up well given the developments at the conference of ministers representing the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, said Chris McCormack, an energy broker at Drexel Burnham Lambert Inc.

"All the news to me seems to be bearish. The bickering among members about production, quotas and allocations was a negative influence on energy prices," said McCormack.

Energy market analysts said the violence in China and the problems stemming from the explosion of a natural gas pipeline in the Soviet Union had little impact on prices Tuesday. These events had been among the factors responsible for Monday's gains.

The July contract for No. 2 heating oil, which rose 1.87 cents Monday, fell 0.91 cent to 51.00 cents a gallon on the New York Mercantile Exchange. The contract for July delivery of unleaded gasoline settled at 64.94 cents a gallon, off 0.86 cent, almost erasing Monday's increase of 0.95 cent.

Dollar lower, gold prices surge

LONDON (AP) — The dollar was lower in calm trading in Europe today amid expectations that U.S. interest rates were headed downward.

Gold prices jumped, catching up with sharp gains Tuesday in New York.

The crisis in China has boosted the dollar since the beginning of the week and remains the key factor in the foreign exchange market, one dealer at a European bank in Frankfurt said.

"Everybody is looking at the hot spot China, and if anything happens there, it will have an effect on the dollar," he said.

But the China effect was offset by signs that the U.S. Federal Reserve may be easing monetary policy soon, other dealers said.

In Tokyo, the dollar rose 0.17 yen to a closing 142.80 yen. Later, in London, it was quoted at 142.65 yen.

Other dollar rates at midmorning compared with late Tuesday:

—1.9715 West German marks, down from 1.9850
—1.7075 Swiss francs, down from 1.7240
—6.6975 French francs, down from 6.7360
—2.2248 Dutch guilders, down from 2.2370
—1,443.00 Italian lire, unchanged
—1.1993 Canadian dollars, down from 1.2015

In London, the dollar fell against the British pound. It cost $1.5740 to buy one pound, compared with $1.5665 late Tuesday.

Gold's surge, which began Tuesday in New York, was triggered by a few funds that began buying large lots of gold on the New York Commodity Exchange, dealers said.

One dealer said the move primarily reflected short-covering, or the buying of gold to fulfill agreements to sell it, which accelerated as the precious metal moved up.

Gold opened in London at $375 a troy ounce, compared with late Tuesday's $365.25. At midmorning, the city's five major bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $375.50.

Silver was quoted in London at $5.40 a troy ounce, up from Tuesday's $5.28.

Stock market climbs 15 points

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market closed moderately higher after a choppy session Tuesday marked by continued program trading and nervousness about the situation in China.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials rose 15.62 to close at 2,496.32.

Advancing issues outnumbered declining ones by a margin of about 3 to 2 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed stocks, with 927 up, 584 down and 500 unchanged.

Volume on the floor of the Big Board came to 187.57 million shares, up from 163.42 million in the previous session.

Nationwide, consolidated volume in NYSE-listed issues, including trades in those stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 223.61 million shares.

Firms rush to recall employees from China

New York Times News Service

More U.S. companies rushed to pull personnel out of Beijing on Tuesday as the Bush administration urged all Americans to leave the embattled city.

The State Department said there are 8,800 Americans working in China, aside from those with the U.S. government, with 1,400 of them in Beijing.

There are also 360 American students in China, 270 in Beijing.

The administration made preliminary contacts with the two American carriers that have flights to China — Northwest Airlines and United Airlines.

But spokesmen for the carriers said no plans have been made to expand service or provide planes for charter.

Northwest, which has two flights a week to Shanghai, said its Tuesday flight left about half full, but its flight scheduled to leave Thursday was fully booked. The airline uses Boeing 747s with a seating capacity of 400.

United Airlines has three regularly scheduled flights a week from Tokyo to Beijing, with its flight on Mondays routed through Shanghai. It also uses 747s.

Sara L. Dornacker, media relations manager, said Tuesday's flight left Beijing with 85 empty seats, but the carrier expects all seats to be filled Wednesday.

Ms. Dornacker said that United had been in continuous contact with the State Department on Tuesday, and its management in Beijing had been in touch with the U.S. Embassy.

But she said United has not been asked to operate extra flights.

Some companies were trying to arrange for charter flights to move large numbers of employees.

McDonnell Douglas, which has a joint venture to produce MD-80 planes for commercial use in China, said Tuesday it was trying to evacuate 43 workers and their families from Shanghai, where it has a plant that employs several thousand workers.

Chrysler Corp. said it was watching the situation in Beijing, where it has a plant employing 4,500 Chinese workers who manufacture Jeep Cherokees and BJ-212s, which are Soviet-style jeeps.

Anne H. Lalas, manager of international public relations for Chrysler, said the plant operated Monday and Tuesday with two-thirds of its work force. She said supplies were arriving normally as of Tuesday. The company evacuated its eight non-Chinese workers Sunday.

At Coopers & Lybrand, Sue-Jean Lee, the accounting firm's China desk manager in Washington, said the manager of the Beijing office was scheduled to leave for Hong Kong, but there had been no confirmation that she made the trip.

The company has not been able to reach its personnel in Shanghai, Guangzhou and Shenzhen, she said.

"Once the situation settles down a bit, and we know who will be in charge, I'm sure we will continue our presence in China," Ms. Lee said.

Most of the firm's business is with American, Canadian and British companies in China.

Richard M. Hammer, national director of international tax services for Price Waterhouse, said the firm had sent eight to 10 employees to Hong Kong from Beijing in the last few days.

"China is in for a real convulsion," Hammer said.

"I don't think its leaders can put the lid on this."

He said he thought the situation was a disaster because companies that pull out now will not go back soon.

In Washington, the Overseas Private Investment Corp., which insures American companies against expropriation, war damage and other political risks overseas, said it had written policies covering 29 projects in 15 localities in China, but that it was too early to know if it would have to make any payouts.

Sears to expand appliance trade

New York Times News Service

CHICAGO — Sears, Roebuck & Co. said Tuesday that it would open 164 Brand Central home electronics and appliance departments within existing stores by July.

The "superstore" departments will offer more than 70 national brands besides Sears' own Kenmore line. They are part of Sears' strategy, begun in February, to revive sagging profits and market share.

Sears has pledged to meet or beat competitors' advertised prices for the same products, a common practice among highly competitive consumer electronics retailers.

By July, Sears will have opened 295 Brand Central departments, and by the end of the year, the retailer intends to have 400 departments.

All 827 of the company's existing American retail stores will have the departments by 1991, Sears said.

In most cases, the departments are placed where similar products are now, with additional selling space made available through more efficient use of warehouse and office space, the company said.

This month's openings will be in stores in Connecticut, Delaware, Illinois, Indiana, Maryland, Massachusetts, New Jersey, New York, Pennsylvania, Vermont, Virginia, Wisconsin, and in the District of Columbia.

Turmoil could bring influx of capital to L.A.

New York Times News Service

LOS ANGELES — The unrest in Beijing could send a wave of capital into Los Angeles from Chinese nationals in Hong Kong, anxious to secure their assets in a politically stable environment, financial executives said.

"I have family in Hong Kong and they want to sell their house and send the money out," said Willis Chu, controller of Eastern Savings Bank in Alhambra. "People with money will try to emigrate."

Meanwhile, the city's largest banks were scrambling to reach employees based in China. Small overseas bank offices in Beijing, Shanghai and Guangzhou were being shut down to ensure the safety of both Chinese and American nationals in the battle-ravaged country.

"Our main concern is the safety of our employees," said Simon Barker-Benfield, spokesman for First Interstate Bancorp, which operates a small trade-finance operation in Beijing.

First Interstate employees either have taken refuge in their homes or at local embassies, he said.

While local banks said it was too early to tell what effect the trouble in China would have on foreign loan agreements and international operations, some believed that it could spur capital flight out of Hong Kong and into the U.S.

It would not be the first time that China instigated capital flight from Hong Kong.

China caused financial turmoil five years ago when it announced that it would reclaim political dominance over Hong Kong when a 99-year lease with Great Britain expires in 1997.

Hong Kong-based Chinese immediately started pulling capital out of the island colony, fearing that China would nationalize assets and decimate the Hong Kong economy.

That capital flight is largely credited with creating a market for Chinese-oriented financial institutions in Los Angeles.

Executives at Chinese banking companies — which include Los Angeles-based General Bank, Eastern Savings Bank, Standard Savings Bank in Los Angeles and Monterey Park-based Trust Savings Bank — said they are not yet sure what the fighting in China means for the future.

But many speculated that it would cause well-heeled Chinese to pull even more money out of the colony and send it to banks in politically stable countries like the U.S., Canada and Australia.

"The political stability of this country is a great comfort to people who have capital around the world," said L. Fargo Wells, director of the California Export Finance Office in Los Angeles. "Unsettled conditions anywhere in the world tend to increase capital in this country."

China arms suspension creates fear of layoffs

New York Times News Service

BETHPAGE, N.Y. — President Bush's order to suspend American military sales to China has created fears of new layoffs at the largest employer on Long Island, the Grumman Corp.

Of the $600 million in equipment and technology China has purchased, Grumman is involved in the largest transaction: a program worth as much as $502 million to modernize the electronic systems on Chinese F-8 fighter jets.

If Bush's decision to suspend deliveries to China halts development of the equipment at the company's headquarters here, about 250 of the company's 19,300 employees on the Island could face layoffs, company officials said.

"We don't know what the impact is going to be, so until the Air Force tells us to cease and desist, it's business as usual," said Robert P. Harwood, a spokesman for Grumman, which is developing the equipment under the supervision of the U.S. Air Force. The first deliveries are not scheduled until 1991.

"I'm not aware of any stop-work order," said a Defense Department spokesman, Lt. Col. Keith Schneider. "The details and specifics of various contractual and legal aspects are being looked into."

Unrest gives toymakers jitters

New York Times News Service

The threat of a Chinese civil war has caused some jitters in the toy industry this week because many firms farm out production to Chinese factories.

Universal Matchbox Group was one of the few toy makers to report actual disruptions at its facilities in Shangai when Chinese employees left to demonstrate, said Tom Kalinske, president and chief operating officer.

The company also had difficulty shipping goods out of Shanghai.

Business was normal at most other toy-making facilities in the southeast near the Hong Kong border and far from the current turmoil.

On Wall Street, the stock price of Lewis Galoob Toys Inc., which produces 90 percent of its toys in Chinese factories, closed Tuesday at 9⅛, down 2½ in the last two days.

Other stocks fared better. Mattel Inc. stock dropped ½ Monday but was up ⅛ on Tuesday to 13½. Hasbro Inc. stock dropped ⅜ Monday but was up ⅛ to 21⅝ Tuesday.

"They don't have the same exposure Galoob has in China," said John Taylor, an analyst with L.H. Alton & Co. in San Francisco.

Still, it's a crucial season for all toy makers.

"This is the time of year toy factories are really humming because they've got to get toys on the water by August or September to make store shelves by Christmas," Taylor said.

Court tells Rexene Corp. not to pursue restructure

New York Times News Service

DALLAS — The Rexene Corp. said Tuesday that the plaintiffs of an employee class-action lawsuit against the company had obtained a court order preventing the Dallas-based chemicals company from pursuing a restructuring.

A Texas judge in Houston granted a temporary restraining order preventing the Rexene board from paying or obligating itself to pay dividends announced in the Rexene board's proposal until after a hearing on June 15. The order also bars Rexene from soliciting offers for the sale of certain assets.

Rexene said it had rejected an out-of-court settlement offer of $74 million with the plaintiffs, who consist of about 1,000 current and former employees who had participated in its stock bonus plan.

The company is now controlled by partners of Drexel Burnham Lambert Inc. and Gilliam Joseph Littlejohn & Levy.

Networks lose viewers

New York Times News Service

Here is one way to understand the declining viewership of network television: A decade ago, NBC finished last among the three major networks, according to the A.C. Nielsen Co., with a 27 percent share of the viewing audience. In 1988, with a 26 percent share, NBC was a resounding first.

And there is little more solace for network executives in Bozell's annual report on the coming prime-time television season, which was released Monday.

Bozell predicted that the networks would lose another share point next season in viewership, with NBC holding onto its lead for a fifth straight year, and ABC finishing second and CBS third.

San Francisco Federal Home Loan Bank officials also declined comment.

Black had frequent confrontations with Wright when Black was acting deputy director of the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corp. in early 1987 and before that, when Black was the bank board's general counsel.

The FSLIC is the deposit insurance agency for savings and loan associations and is under the control of the bank board. Black became general counsel at the San Francisco Federal Home Loan Bank in July 1987.

Black was identified as an "impressive" witness by special outside counsel Richard Phelan in his February 1989 report on Wright's alleged ethics violations stemming from Wright's intervention in bank board policy on behalf of several Texas thrifts.

At one point, Phelan's report chronicled a heated exchange between Wright and Black during a February 1987 meeting between bank board officials and Wright's staff that discussed stepped up supervision of Texas thrifts that were experiencing mounting losses.

When first told of Keating's statement in the memo, bank board spokesman Karl Hoyle, dismissed the account as inaccurate. Hoyle said if the memo was true, Wall would have told Phelan of Keating's statement during Phelan's investigation.

The discussion between Keating and Wall never appeared in Phelan's extensive report on Wright's alleged interference in bank board policy. Attempts to reach Phelan, who has left Washington and returned to his Chicago law practice, were unsuccessful.

In later interviews after reviewing copies of the memorandum, Hoyle said Wall still did not recall Keating making the statement.

"Wall has no recollection that Keating ever mentioned that Wright would like Black fired," Hoyle said.

The meeting between Keating and Wall also was attended by Dorothy Nichols, the bank board's general counsel. Nichols declined to comment on the meeting but Hoyle said "her recollection is that Keating said Black has made a lot of enemies on the Hill."

Hoyle said information from the meeting was relayed by Nichols to the San Francisco Bank through Black. Black told Jim Cirona, the San Francisco Bank president, who included the information in the memorandum he prepared on Lincoln Savings, Hoyle said.

Hoyle said he believes that Nichols' version of the meeting — that Black had made enemies on Capitol Hill — became confused with a separate story that was circulating about the same time in which an aide to Wright called the bank board on several occasions and asked that Black be fired.

"My belief is we have two different stories being married here," Hoyle said.

Hoyle added that Wall couldn't fire Black even if he wanted to because the San Francisco Bank's personnel are not under control of the bank board in Washington.

The Wright passage was part of a lengthy document prepared by the San Francisco Bank explaining its actions involving Keating's Lincoln Savings. The San Francisco Bank recommended to bank board officials in Washington in May 1987 that Lincoln be placed under federal control.

Keating protested the San Francisco Bank's actions in court and through elected officials including Senators John Glenn, D-Ohio; Dennis DeConcini, D-Ariz.; John McCain, R-Ariz.; Alan Cranston, D-Calif.; and Donald Reigle, D-Mich.

The senators, who had received nearly $300,000 in contributions from Keating, held meetings with former bank board chairman Edwin Gray and San Francisco Bank officials in April 1987 and asked the regulators to withdraw a regulation unfavorable to Lincoln, Gray said.

Gray refused to rescind the rule but his term expired in July 1987 before action was taken on the San Francisco Bank's recommendation to take control of Lincoln.

Gray was replaced by Wall, who had served as Republican staff director on the Senate Committee on Banking, Housing and Urban Affairs for six years before joining the bank board.

Hoyle said Keating had two meetings with Wall during the time when Lincoln Savings was engaged in its battle with the San Francisco Bank.

The first meeting between Keating and Wall was Sept. 24, 1987. Two months later, the bank board, after ordering the San Francisco Bank to cease examinations of Lincoln Savings in August, appointed a special committee in Washington to investigate the $5 billion thrift.

The Jan. 27, 1988 meeting came one month after the bank board's special committee had confirmed the findings of the San Francisco Bank that Lincoln Savings was unsound. Wall then appointed the bank board's Enforcement Review Committee in January 1988 to review Lincoln Savings' situation once again.

Paramount advanced $1, to $54, in heavy trading.

Many on Wall Street believed that someone could offer Time shareholders more than they would be getting in the Time-Warner merger, which involves an exchange of stock. But no one seemed willing to challenge the deal.

John Reidy, a media analyst at Drexel Burnham Lambert, said: "People saw this as a friendly deal that created a powerhouse media company that appeared to be blessed by Congress and most other regulatory authorities. In addition, there have been no hostile takeovers of well-run media companies."

Even Warner and Time had difficulty trying to figure out whether the 42-year-old Paramount chief, largely responsible for making the company into an entertainment and publishing success, would go on the attack.

Word raced through Wall Street early in the day that Paramount had called a board meeting, though it turned out it was a regularly scheduled meeting.

Paramount's move could encourage other bidders to step forward, but it was not clear if any would emerge.

Many professionals had speculated that after a hostile offer, a friendly bidder would enter the drama to rescue Time. In fact, that was the role many envisioned for Paramount — the white knight, not the aggressor.

Among the more widely rumored suitors, possibly working as a group, are Jerry Perenchio, the West Coast movie executive; Al Taubman, the Detroit real estate developer, and Charles Dolan, chairman of Cablevision, the big cable company.

They are believed to have been trying to raise money for a bid, particularly with the close help of the General Electric Capital Corp.

Time and Warner are said to have heard of the discussions and to have warned GE, which owns RCA, the huge broadcasting company, that they would officially complain to the Federal Communications Commission about any GE involvement in a bid that threatened the merger.

The Time-Warner argument before the government agency would be that GE is already so deeply involved in broadcasting that to lend money to anyone to bid for Time would be a serious violation of federal law governing the broadcasting industry.

operations of Nabisco Brands, and two other British companies, Walker's Crisps and Smith's Crisps, which make potato chips.

Louis V. Gerstner Jr., RJR Nabisco's chairman and chief executive, said, "The sale represents an important step toward achieving our goal of reducing the company's overall debt."

RJR officials said they put the five businesses on the auction block three weeks ago and were planning to receive offers on Wednesday.

Gerstner said other companies had expressed interest but no other formal bids had been made.

"BSN made a pre-emptive bid," said Gerstner, in a telephone interview. "What made us willing to go ahead was they were willing to bid for all the businesses, they were willing to close the transaction so quickly and they came within our price range."

Gerstner said this was the first phase of a plan to reduce his company's $25 billion in debt by $5.5 billion by July 1990. He said his company had not yet decided on the next businesses it would sell.

"This gets us off to a real fine start on this process," he said.

In 1988, BSN had net income of $326.7 million on revenues of $6.3 billion.

BSN is the world leader in dairy products because of its yogurt business, and is also one of Europe's largest beer and pasta makers.

With its Evian and Badoit brands, BSN is neck and neck with Perrier to be No. 1 worldwide in mineral water. It is France's No. 3 champagne company, with its Pommery and Lanson brands.

LIFESTYLE/Food

Celebrate Father's Day with outdoor dinner for Dad

By ROBIN KLEVEN
Copley News Service

The rest of the year, Dad mans the barbecue. On his day, give him a vacation from the grill. Put on his big apron with the outlandish logo and charcoal-broil some savory brochettes as a special treat for Dear Old Dad.

Brochette is a French word meaning any food that is cooked on a skewer. The versatile term includes everything from the classic shish kebab of lamb or beef to nouvelle combinations of seafood, baby vegetables and fruit. The only constant is that ingredients are generally marinated and then grilled or broiled.

For Dad's skewer soiree, provide marinated meats, fresh vegetables, shrimp, halibut or swordfish and a variety of dipping sauces. You can also ask the other kids and/or guests to bring their favorite barbecue sauces. Fire up the backyard grill or pack a couple of hibachis and head for the park. Use paper plates and disposable bamboo skewers for a no-mess, easygoing gathering.

Imagination is the only limit when it comes to creating custom brochettes. Practically any meat or vegetable may be threaded onto a stick and tossed on the barbecue with a minimum of fuss.

Meats can be marinated in a blend of oil, spices and wine or vinegar to tenderize and add flavor. Beef, lamb and pork marry especially well with red-wine marinades; fish and poultry with lighter white-wine versions. Shrimp and subtly flavored sea scallops are complemented by a simple dressing of olive oil, lemon and garlic. Adventurous cooks may wish to add their own touches with sesame or chili oil, liqueurs, hot sauces or gourmet mustards.

Flavored vinegars are another excellent addition to marinades. Use a heady balsamic vinegar, or one made from Cabernet Sauvignon or Zinfandel, to add zest to lamb or sirloin. A delicate raspberry or tarragon vinegar is a fine match for chicken or swordfish.

Vegetable brochettes need not be marinated; simply brush them with a good grade of olive oil. Zucchini, peppers, summer squash, eggplant and onions are especially good when cooked on the grill. Vegetables that require a long cooking time (such as potatoes or carrots) should be lightly poached before being skewered, especially if they are being paired with quick-cooking ingredients such as shrimp or fish.

Fruit brochettes, suitable as side dishes or desserts, may be brushed with melted butter. Or, they can be marinated briefly in a little oil, white-wine vinegar and honey. Bananas, strawberries, pears and cherries are all excellent choices for skewer cookery.

While brochettes can be created from virtually any combination of meats, vegetables and fruits, the following recipes offer some especially appealing options. Ingredients may be varied according to personal preference.

VEGETABLE KEBABS

4 (10-inch) wooden skewers
1 bell pepper (red, yellow or green), cut in ⅛-inch pieces
4 small red potatoes (poached to ¾ doneness)
1 medium zucchini, cut in 4 pieces about 1½ inches long
1 medium red onion, cut in 8 wedges
4 large button mushrooms
MARINADE:
¼ cup tarragon vinegar
2 teaspoons French or whole-grain mustard
2 teaspoons lemon juice
2 teaspoons sea salt
Freshly ground black pepper to taste
¼ cup smoke-flavored barbecue sauce
2 tablespoons soy sauce
¾ cup extra virgin olive oil

Assemble skewers using onion, potato, mushroom, zucchini and bell pepper.

Whisk all marinade ingredients together except olive oil, then slowly whisk in olive oil.

To marinate and cook: Place skewers in shallow baking dish and pour marinade over them 1 hour before charbroiling. To cook, place on charbroiler and turn frequently until desired doneness.

SAFARI BROCHETTE

3 (1½-ounce) pieces chicken
3 (1½-ounce) pieces shrimp (medium)
3 (1½-ounce) pieces sirloin

Place 1 piece of each meat on each skewer. Then place on hot barbecue for 3 minutes. Use brush to apply the Safari butter (recipe follows) for a baste and turn once, then check skewer to see if done. If so, apply Safari butter liberally and serve. May be served with a California Merlot.

SAFARI HERB BUTTER

2 pounds butter, room temperature
½ ounce Knorr Demi-Glace Concentrate (available in supermarkets)
2 tablespoons water
1 tablespoon minced garlic clove
⅓ cup plus 2 teaspoons fresh lemon juice
¼ cup A-1 Sauce
1½ teaspoons Tabasco
1 ounce chopped parsley

Whip butter until light in color, using flat beater.

Blend demi-glace concentrate with water to form paste.

Add this paste and garlic to whipped butter. Blend in thoroughly.

Slowly add lemon juice, A-1 and Tabasco sauce. Combine well. Mix in chopped parsley. Use as directed with Safari Brochette.

LAMB BROCHETTES

5 cubed lamb loins (1½ ounces each)
1 Vidalia onion, cut in one-sixth of an inch pieces
MARINADE:
2 cups red wine
2 cups orange juice
¼ cup balsamic vinegar
2 tablespoons cumin
3 tablespoons minced garlic
1 teaspoon rosemary, chopped fine
1 tablespoon oregano, chopped fine
1 teaspoon black pepper, fresh
1 tablespoon lemon juice

Combine all marinade ingredients and blend well.

Place lamb cube on bamboo skewer, followed by an onion piece, then another lamb cube, until bamboo skewer is full.

Marinate for 8 to 10 hours.

Serve with Cabernet Sauvignon.

MIXED SAUSAGE BROCHETTE WITH AIOLI

4 to 6 slices mixed sausage (see note)
Fresh vegetable pieces of your choice, such as mushrooms, bell pepper, broccoli and cherry tomatoes
Aioli (garlic mayonnaise, recipe follows)
MARINADE:
1½ cups vegetable or olive oil
1 tablespoon thyme (or more, to taste)
1 tablespoon tarragon (or more, to taste)
1 tablespoon chopped garlic (or more, to taste)
1 bay leaf
Salt and pepper to taste

NOTE: Use 3 kinds of good commercial sausage, made from different combinations of pork, beef, lamb or meats.

Place sausage slices in bowl; mix marinade ingredients and pour over slices. Sausage pieces should be covered with marinade. Marinate 4 to 5 hours, then remove sausage pieces and pat dry with paper towels.

Assemble skewers, alternating sausage pieces with mushrooms, bell pepper and onion squares, broccoli florets, tomatoes or other vegetables. Grill until sausages are heated through and browned. Serve with aioli on the side.

AIOLI: Peel cloves of ½ head of garlic and chop very finely — practically to a puree. Mix with 1½ cups prepared or freshly made mayonnaise, 1 tablespoon chopped parsley, the juice of ½ lemon and a grind of pepper. Mix well and let sit at least 1 to 1½ hours to blend flavors. Makes 1½ cups, enough for several servings. Serve on side with brochettes; also good with grilled fish or chicken, or as a dip with raw vegetables.

BROCHETTE DE PORC AU ROMARIN
(Brochette of Pork with Rosemary)

2¼ pounds lean, boneless pork
1 cup dry white wine
1 tablespoon finely minced garlic
1 tablespoon dried rosemary leaves
2 tablespoons finely chopped parsley
1 teaspoon grated lemon rind
Salt and freshly ground pepper
2 tablespoons olive oil
2 tablespoons white wine vinegar
Melted butter

Cut pork into 1½-inch cubes and put meat in mixing bowl.

Add wine, garlic, rosemary, parsley, lemon rind, salt and pepper to taste, olive oil and vinegar. Blend well and set aside to marinate for 2 to 4 hours.

Drain meat. Arrange equal portions of meat on each of 6 to 8 skewers.

Preheat charcoal grill.

Place brochettes on grill and cook, turning pieces often, 15 to 20 minutes or until pork is thoroughly cooked but not dry.

Serve with melted butter poured over.

MARINATED SEAFOOD BROCHETTES

12 sea scallops
12 jumbo shrimp, shelled and deveined
1½ pounds boneless monkfish fillets, cut into 24 (1½-inch) cubes
3 tablespoons olive oil
1 tablespoon dried rosemary
2 tablespoons fresh lemon juice
1 teaspoon dried coriander
4 tablespoons chopped fresh parsley leaves
Salt and black pepper to taste

Blend all ingredients together in large bowl. Cover with plastic wrap and marinate for 15 minutes at room temperature.

Heat grill or oven broiler to high.

On each of 6 skewers, arrange alternately 2 shrimp, 2 scallops, and 4 pieces of monkfish. Brush with marinade.

Place skewers on grill or under broiler and cook for about 4 minutes; turn skewers and cook for 4 minutes on other side. (An oven broiler should take less time.)

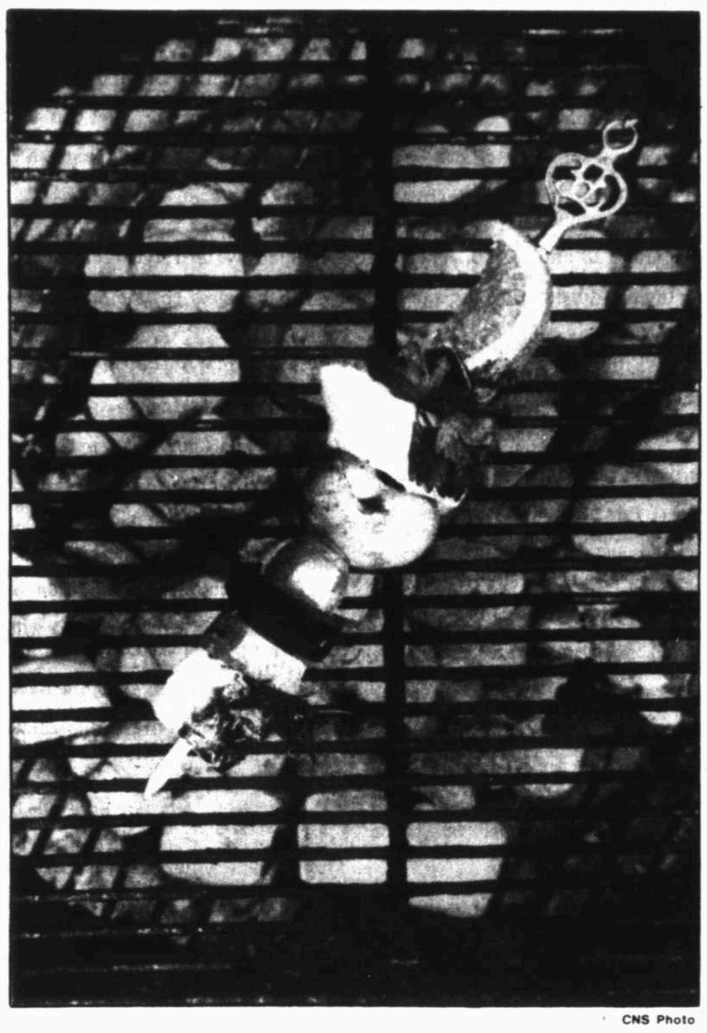

From "The Seafood Cookbook" by Pierre Franey and Bryan Miller; Times Books; $22.50.

RED WINE MARINADE

1½ cups dry red wine
¼ cup red wine vinegar
½ cup olive oil
1 small onion, sliced
1 carrot, sliced into coins
1 bay leaf, torn in half
1 teaspoon black peppercorns, crushed

Combine all ingredients in bowl. Whisk to emulsify. Marinade is excellent for any cut of meat that requires tenderizing.

Casserole made in microwave

By NANCY BYAL
Associated Press

Vegetables and sauces are two of the foods your microwave cooks best. This cheesy casserole takes advantage of both these microwave specialties. Wondering whether or not to cover? Cover vegetables for quicker cooking; cook sauces uncovered for more convenient stirring.

CHEESY CAULIFLOWER CASSEROLE

1 8-ounce package frozen cauliflower
½ cup frozen peas
1 tablespoon water
1 tablespoon margarine or butter
2 teaspoons all-purpose flour
¼ teaspoon dried thyme, crushed
⅛ teaspoon salt
½ cup milk
½ cup shredded colby cheese (2 ounces)

In a microwave-safe 1-quart casserole combine frozen cauliflower, peas and water. Cook, covered, on 100 percent power (high) for 4 to 7 minutes or until vegetables are tender, stirring after 3 minutes. Drain off water. Set vegetables aside.

For sauce, in a 2-cup microwave-safe measure cook margarine, uncovered, on high 35 to 40 seconds or until melted. Stir in flour, thyme and salt until mixture is smooth. Stir in milk all at once. Cook, uncovered, on high 1½ to 2 minutes more or until thickened and bubbly, stirring every 30 seconds. Stir in cheese until melted.

In the 1-quart casserole stir together vegetables and sauce. Cook, uncovered, on high for 1 to 2 minutes or until heated through. Makes 4 servings.

For national contest winner, prize not just 'chicken feed'

By NATALIE HAUGHTON
New York Times News Service

HERSHEY, Pa. — Chicken, America's fashion darling of the protein scene these days, strutted its stuff as ethnic, contemporary and low-fat-inspired creations captured top honors in the 38th National Chicken Cooking Contest.

Summer Italian Stuffed Chicken won the $10,000 first prize for Melissa Mathie of Morrice, Mich., at the Chicken Cooking Contest sponsored by the National Broiler Council May 25.

June Holley of Cincinnati, Ohio, won the $4,000 second prize for her Chicken Santa Fe, an easy contemporary Southwestern-style recipe using roasted red peppers and jalapeno jelly with boneless chicken breasts.

California finalist Priscilla Yee of Concord took the $3,000 third prize with Chicken With Pineapple Salsa.

All of this year's finalists' recipes, along with winning recipes from previous contests, can be found in "The Chicken Cookbook," published by the National Broiler Council. To order a copy of the 127-page paperback, send a check or money order for $1.75 to Chicken Cookbook, Department NBC, Box 307, Coventry, Conn. 06238.

The next chicken competition is scheduled for May 1991 in Little Rock, Ark., where the top prize will be increased to $25,000, with $5,000 offered for second place.

The deadline for entering the next competition is Oct. 15, 1990. Send entries to Chicken Contest, Box 28158 Central Station, Washington, D.C. 20005.

Winning recipes are:

SUMMER ITALIAN STUFFED CHICKEN

4 broiler-fryer chicken breast halves, boned, skinned
½ cup plus ⅓ cup oil-vinegar dressing
1 small head radicchio, torn into bite-size pieces
1 small bunch watercress, cut into bite-size pieces
¼ cup fresh basil
2 plum tomatoes, thinly sliced
1 tablespoon water
1 egg
⅔ cup Italian seasoned breadcrumbs
½ cup Parmesan cheese
4 tablespoons olive oil
Tomato rosettes

On hard surface with meat mallet or similar flattening utensil, pound chicken to ¼-inch thickness; place in large baking pan. Add ½ cup oil-vinegar dressing and turn chicken to coat. Cover and refrigerate 30 minutes.

In medium bowl, place radicchio and watercress; add remaining one-third cup oil-vinegar dressing and toss to mix. Arrange radicchio on platter; refrigerate.

Remove chicken from oil-vinegar dressing; drain. Cut each chicken breast half in half crosswise. Place an even portion of basil and tomatoes on each of 4 pieces of chicken; top each piece of chicken with remaining half breast. With textured side of meat mallet, pound edges together to seal.

In shallow dish, beat water and egg. On waxed paper, mix breadcrumbs and Parmesan cheese. Dip chicken, one piece at a time, in egg mixture and then in breadcrumb mixture.

In large skillet, heat oil over medium-high heat. Add chicken and cook about 10 minutes or until chicken is brown on both sides and fork can be inserted with ease. Arrange chicken on top of radicchio mixture. Garnish with tomato rosettes. Makes 4 servings.

CHICKEN SANTA FE

2 whole broiler-fryer chicken breasts, halved, boned and skinned
Marinade
4 tablespoons jalapeno jelly, melted
2 sweet red peppers, roasted and skinned

Place chicken between 2 pieces of waxed paper. On hard surface with meat mallet or similar flattening utensil, pound to ¼-inch thickness.

In large plastic zip-lock bag, place chicken in single layer. Add marinade, close bag, refrigerate and marinate 1 hour, turning once. Remove from refrigerator. Bring chicken and marinade to room temperature; place on broiler pan and brush liberally with marinade. Set oven temperature control at broil and arrange rack so chicken is about 6 inches from heat. Broil 8 minutes; turn, brush with marinade and broil about 8 minutes longer or until chicken is brown and fork can be inserted with ease. Remove from oven. Brush chicken with melted jelly.

Place 2 roasted pepper strips to form an X on each breast half; spoon on remaining jelly. Return to oven and broil until chicken is glazed.

MARINADE: In medium bowl, mix together ¼ cup olive oil, juice and zest of 1 small lime, 1 crushed garlic clove, 1 ounce tequilla, ¼ teaspoon bottled hot pepper sauce, ⅛ teaspoon liquid smoke and ¼ teaspoon salt.

To roast peppers, place under broiler, turning often until charred. Cool. With point of sharp knife, remove stem, seeds and skin. Cut into 8 strips.

CHICKEN WITH PINEAPPLE SALSA

2 tablespoons chopped cilantro
2 teaspoons minced ginger root
3/8 teaspoon salt
1 cup diced Roma tomato, seeded
¾ cup diced fresh pineapple
½ cup sliced green onion
1 can (4 ounces) diced green chilies, drained
1 tablespoon lemon juice
2 tablespoons butter
6 broiler-fryer chicken breast halves, skinned, boned
Cilantro sprigs (optional)

Make pineapple salsa by mixing together in small bowl chopped cilantro, ginger, ⅛ teaspoon salt, tomato, pineapple, onion, chilies and lemon juice; set aside.

In skillet, place butter and melt over medium heat. Add chicken and sprinkle with remaining ¼ teaspoon salt. Cook and turn chicken about 6 minutes or until light brown on all sides. Cover and reduce heat to medium-low. Cook about 5 minutes or until fork can be inserted in chicken with ease. Arrange chicken on serving platter and spoon pineapple salsa over top. Garnish with cilantro sprigs, if desired. Makes 6 servings.

Taste-tests didn't leave foul taste

By NATALIE HAUGHTON
New York Times News Service

HERSHEY, Pa. — Let's make no bones about it: Picking this year's National Chicken Cooking Contest recipe winners was no easy task.

As one of 15 judges who selected the five winners in the 38th annual competition, I tasted and sampled my way through more than 30 dishes.

Miraculously, I can still face chicken, which goes to show you what a little versatility can do in a recipe.

But that's getting ahead of the story about how the judging is done.

First, the 25,000 to 30,000 entries submitted in the contest were scrutinized and analyzed by an independent judging agency, said Dot Tringali, director of the National Chicken Cooking Contest.

Those that made it through the first screening round were then sorted by state.

Tringali and her staff spent a week evaluating the top state contenders, ranking the top five in order of preference. The top-ranking state recipe was prepared and taste-tested for the first time by the judging agency.

If the recipe passed the critical taste test with flying colors, it became the state-contest finalist, and no other recipes were sampled.

If not, the second-highest-ranking recipe was tested, and so on down the line, until a good recipe came to light.

A more accurate selection process would have been to cook and taste-test at least the top three recipes prior to the selection of the state finalists.

Simply reading recipes is not always accurate, because often a recipe that sounds great on paper tastes dreadful, and vice versa.

Even those with years of experience evaluating recipes often have a tough time accurately judging combinations and amounts of ingredients.

The real test came when judges began taste-testing and evaluating the dishes the contestants had prepared.

Three newspaper or magazine food editors formed each of five teams that tasted about 10 chicken dishes on the initial go-round.

It took several rounds of balloting and much discussion for judges to come to their conclusions.

The first dish arrived 50 minutes after the contestants entered their mini-kitchens, and the last dish came 23 minutes before the end of the three-hour cooking deadline.

This year's final recipes, many ethnically inspired, used more than 30 different vegetables, 15 fruits and 40 spices. The majority of the dishes, including several salads, used chicken breasts.

Recipes were judged on taste, appearance, appeal and simplicity.

DEAR ABBY

Father-in-law's hearing loss disturbs family

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: My father-in-law may be coming to stay with my family and me for a visit this summer, and before he comes, I need some advice from you or your readers who have had to deal with this problem.

Dad is very hard of hearing. He sometimes jokes about getting a hearing aid, but he doesn't realize that his hearing problem is a hardship on others. Last summer when he visited us, I was glad to see him, but I couldn't wait for him to leave.

Several times when my children were talking to either him or me, he would start talking — completely unaware that someone was talking. The children couldn't understand why Grandpa was so "rude." He enjoyed watching TV at night, but because he couldn't hear, he turned the volume up so loud it disturbed everybody in the house and gave me a constant headache.

My husband refused to say anything because he didn't want to hurt his father's feelings, and I would not feel comfortable saying anything to him about it.

Is there a way to let this dear man know that his hearing loss is hard on all of us? I can't understand why some older people are too proud to wear hearing aids, yet they wear glasses.

Maybe if you print it (no name or location, please) he will see it and take the hint. — ANNY-MOUSE

DEAR MOUSE: Squeak up! Tell your husband that HE must address this problem. To fear "hurting the feelings" of someone who is upsetting your entire household is foolish.

If he sometimes "jokes" about getting a hearing aid, he must be aware that he needs one. Insist that your husband handle this family problem. And if he refuses, then you handle it as gently and kindly as possible. But do handle it. You will be doing everyone — especially your father-in-law — a favor.

DEAR ABBY: I know I'm not alone. There's one in every family. I take my camera to all the family gatherings. I often hear, "Oh, Lord, there she is again with that camera!"

My relatives think I am a pain because I'm always taking pictures. Don't they understand that I'm not just taking pictures for the fun of it; I'm recording memories we can all look back on with fondness.

Please print this for some of those sourpusses who run away or cover their faces with their hands every time they see me with a camera. What's the harm in capturing some priceless moments on film? — DALLAS CAMERA NUT

DEAR CAMERA NUT: The "harm" in capturing some "priceless moments on film" lies in how the subjects feel about being "captured."

Do you ask permission before taking a picture? Or do you just click away, invading the privacy of your subjects?

Not everyone wants a "fond memory" of himself yawning, snoozing or eating corn on the cob while a few kernels cling to his nose and butter drips from his chin. Please ask first.

DEAR ABBY: Recently I became aware that a fellow employee was stealing small amounts from the company. She foolishly told a few people about it, and even bragged about it.

Abby, I did something I now regret. I typed an anonymous note tipping off the front office. They must have looked into the matter and discovered it was true, because that employee was suddenly terminated.

Many of the employees are upset — not because that employee stole, but because they suspected that a fellow employee turned her in. Did I do something wrong? I can't believe it's OK to steal just because this is a large and prosperous company that can afford the loss. Let me add, the employee who stole was by no means hard up.

My biggest concern now is being found out. I told no one, but I've been a nervous wreck ever since. I can't sleep; I can't eat. And I keep wondering if this is God's way of punishing me for snitching. Maybe I've been watching too much television, but I keep thinking that my typewriter can be traced as the one on which that anonymous note was written.

Believe me, I will never again turn anyone in, even if I witness a murder! Please help me. I am worried sick over this. I'll look for your answer in the paper. — GUILTY CONSCIENCE

DEAR GUILTY CONSCIENCE: Relax. The chances that anyone will trace the anonymous note back to your typewriter are extremely remote. (I doubt if the "front office" is even interested in knowing who tipped them off.)

Although I am not keen on "turning thieves in" anonymously, I think you are suffering needlessly. And by the way, anyone who witnesses a crime and remains silent is aiding the criminal.

Now, lighten up, and forgive yourself.

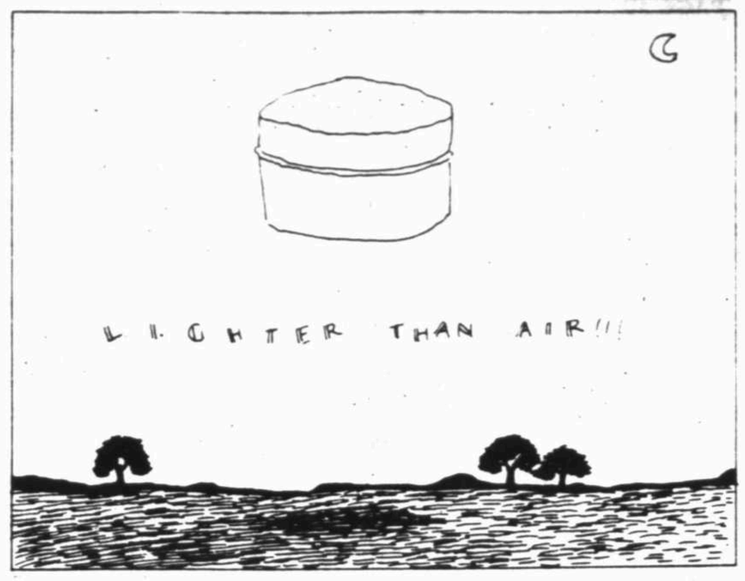

DEAR ABBY: My daughter took her 15-year-old son to the dentist for a routine checkup. The boy has beautiful teeth — no fillings. The dentist informed her that it was time to contact an oral surgeon to have all four wisdom teeth pulled. My daughter asked why. The dentist told her it was standard procedure to pull the wisdom teeth of children ages 15 or 16 to prevent possible future problems. A conversation with two other dentists confirmed that practice. My own dentist agreed, and said they always pull all four teeth at once.

Abby, if medical doctors routinely removed tonsils and appendixes of 4- and 5-year-olds to prevent future problems, there would be quite an uproar. But the practice of pulling healthy teeth appears to be quite acceptable. What do your experts say? — CHARLOTTE IN SALEM, ORE.

DEAR CHARLOTTE: My experts say: Unless the jaw is too small or the teeth are too large to accommodate the wisdom teeth, there is no reason to extract them. If your daughter is still skeptical, she should consult another dentist.

Everything you'll need to know about planning a wedding can be found in Abby's booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding." Send your name and address, plus check or money order for $2.89 ($3.39 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Wedding Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054 (postage included).

Making elegant souffles is now as 'easy as pie'

By CAROL CUTLER
Copley News Service

The French word souffle comes burdened with all sorts of misconceptions. The first thought, however, is correct. Souffles do represent the grandest kind of cooking.

But put away those daunting thoughts of the amount of work involved, not to mention the calorie load and artery-popping fats. Those are old-fashioned ideas; times have changed. That most classic of French culinary extravaganzas has been brought up to date.

Two very talented pastry chefs have collaborated on a sweetheart of a book all about souffles. Not any souffles, mind you, but a new breed that is lighter in texture and calories and reassuringly easy to produce.

"Souffles" is the straightforward title. Written by Ann Amernick and Richard Chirol, it presents 40 easy, savory and sweet recipes, from baked to frozen (Clarkson N. Potter; hardcover; $9.95).

The reader may very well wonder how a souffle can be lighter in calories and texture. The answer lies in the genius of a master chef in Switzerland, Fredy Girardet, who took a hard look at the time-honored procedure for making souffles. Then he decided to change it.

Out went the flour-and-milk-sauce base, into which generous quantities of eggs and flavorings were incorporated. Now there is no cooking involved, fewer eggs are used and the role of beaten egg whites has expanded. Amernick and Chirol show how to achieve great flavor with a minimal amount of addition.

Anyone planning a menu for dinner parties need no longer dance away from souffles. With these lighter, healthier versions, the cook does not have to feel guilty about being unkind to the arteries of guests. Would you believe a souffle based on low-fat cottage cheese and yogurt and egg whites? That tastes good? Believe and enjoy. Just a bit of maple syrup does the trick. No butter, no cream, no egg yolks.

Since modernized souffles take but a few minutes to put together, the cook also is relieved of the problem of when to prepare the souffle during the course of a dinner party. For a first-course savory souffle, have the mold and ingredients prepared. Then slip away during the cocktail hour, prepare the souffle and pop it into the oven, and you'll be back before anyone misses you.

Once you read Amernick and Chirol, those souffle dishes reposing in the back of the closet will be front center again.

GREEN APPLE SOUFFLE WITH CINNAMON

2 egg yolks
2 tablespoons sugar
3 egg whites
Few drops lemon juice
1 tablespoon apricot preserves
½ teaspoon ground cinnamon
2 large Granny Smith apples, peeled and chopped fine

Preheat oven to 400 degrees.

Butter and sugar 6 individual souffle molds and refrigerate until ready to fill.

In medium bowl, beat egg yolks with 1 tablespoon sugar until very thick and light in color.

In another medium bowl, beat egg whites with lemon juice until foamy. Gradually add remaining tablespoon sugar while continuing to beat until whites are firm but still glossy.

Stir apricot preserves, cinnamon and apples into yolks, then fold in whites. Spoon or pipe into molds.

Bake 8-10 minutes, or until puffy and browned on top.

The authors suggest serving the souffle with a creme anglaise, laced with Calvados (apple brandy).

Living BMW-style on a Hyundai budget taught

By BEN STEELMAN
New York Times News Service

WILMINGTON, N.C. — Once upon a time, Marion Joyce was a newlywed, just out of college, with a new job and big dreams.

"I liked nice things, but I didn't always have the money for them," she recalled. And like most young couples, the Joyces found it hard to save with all the bills.

Hard, but not hopeless. "I've always had a penchant for bargains," Ms. Joyce said. With that penchant, and with some hard-earned common-sense lessons, she developed tactics for living in BMW style on a Hyundai budget.

Today, Ms. Joyce is "The Frugal Shopper," a syndicated consumer columnist and the author of three books. Using simple but proven shopping tactics, "anybody can save $20 a week," she said.

Ms. Joyce strongly advocates shopping at "deep discount" stores and factory outlets.

Nevetheless, she said her system, which she calls "power buying," can save consumers money wherever they shop.

Power buying can be summed up with a few basic principles:

■ Don't buy on impulse. "Did you ever go to the store to buy a loaf of bread and come back with $50 worth of merchandise?" Ms. Joyce asked. "Everybody has. I have."

Studies show that impulse purchases make up as much as two-thirds of consumer spending, she said.

MERCHANTS KNOW this, too, so they arrange their stores to promote as much impulse-buying as possible.

Note, for example, how tempting, high-priced items tend to be placed in places where shoppers have to pass: near entrances, exits, escalators or cash registers.

Note how necessities tend to be scattered among luxury items, "how you have to go all the way to the back, past the ice cream, to get to the milk," Ms. Joyce said. "You have to wear blinders."

Note also how the expensive stuff is easiest to reach. Marketers have found that placing a product at eye level on a shelf will increase sales by 50 percent, Ms. Joyce said.

■ Make a list when you shop and stick to it. Decide what you need in advance, buy what you need and nothing more.

The list can be flexible, Ms. Joyce said. If something you use a lot is a good value, stock up. On the other hand, "mad money" buying can add up, too. If you pick up $3 worth of candy and magazines each week in the check-out line, that's $150 out of your pocketbook for the year.

"By the way, that old rule is true," she added. "Never buy groceries when you're hungry."

■ Go to stores with the best overall prices. "Don't chase around saving pennies" by going from store to store, Ms. Joyce said. "It doesn't save time and it doesn't save gas."

A related trap is the "loss leader" — a product priced below cost. Merchants often use such items as bait to lure customers into the store, where they can then be tempted by marked-up goods.

"Remember, nothing could be 'below cost,'" Ms. Joyce said. "If it were, the store would go out of business."

THE BEST way to shop, she argued, is to compare prices in ads, then choose the store with the most consistent bargains.

Once there, stock up. Avoid rushing for last-minute items to the local convenience store, where prices will likely be higher.

■ Be wary of bargains that really aren't. Stores will often feature items in conspicuous "pyramid" displays, Ms. Joyce said. The items aren't on sale; in fact, they might be overpriced. Yet the display psychology may convince careless shoppers that the item's a "special."

Other psychological tricks go into pricing, she added. An example: Which is cheaper — a 20-cent apple, or five apples for $1? Of course, they cost the same, but shoppers who aren't thinking carefully may buy more of the 5-for-$1 fruit, believing it's a bargain.

■ Save coupons — and use them. Only about 3-4 percent of 215 billion manufacturers' coupons issued each year get redeemed. Ms. Joyce thinks that's a big mistake on the shoppers' part.

Just an hour a week of coupon-clipping can save a typical family between $160 and $240 a month, she said.

"I have people tell me all the time they're 'too busy' to coupon," she said. "If that's the case, get your children to clip for you. Make it part of their chores or allowance-work — it helps teach them math skills, economy, responsibility."

"It your children are too little, get your baby sitter to clip for you." Ms. Joyce said she used to add $2 to her baby sitter's pay in return for such clip work.

CLIPPING ISN'T enough, however. "Those kitchen coupons don't do you any good in the kitchen drawer," Ms. Joyce said.

The trick, she added, is to file coupons according to basic categories — baked goods, baby products, household cleaners, pet products, and so forth — then to take your file with you when you shop.

■ Shop seasonally. Everyone realizes that some items cost less at different times of the year. Many shoppers stock up on wrapping and cards the day after Christmas, when prices have been slashed, then save them to use next year.

The same principle holds for a wide range of goods, Ms. Joyce said. For example, sportswear and summer clothes for men and boys is generally cheapest in September, as are air conditioners and fans.

On the other hand, dresses and hats cost the least in April, while the best bargains in blankets, lingerie and bridal gowns can be found in May. An observant shopper can compile a "sales calendar."

■ Save. Ms. Joyce urges shoppers to set up a "power buying account," then deposit their purchase savings in it. With interest, a few dollars saved each week grow quickly.

It's a lesson Ms. Joyce said she's taken to heart. In recent years, she used the savings from her own account to buy a mink coat for herself and a trip to Mexico for her family.

(Marion Joyce's "The Frugal Shopper" is available in paperback for $6.95 from Perigee Books. Her other titles include "The Frugal Traveler," Perigee, $7.95, and "The Coupon Cookbook," MacGraw-Hill Paperbacks, $6.95.)

Peanut butter popular product

Associated Press

Americans eat enough peanut butter every year to coat the entire floor of the Grand Canyon.

Eighty-three percent of all Americans buy peanut butter, according to an article in a recent issue of Country Living, and by the end of high school the average American teenager will have eaten 1,500 peanut butter-and-jelly sandwiches.

People have been enjoying peanuts for thousands of years, but it was only at the end of the last century that anyone thought of grinding them up.

On this continent, Spanish explorers found peanuts growing as far north as Mexico and brought them back to Spain.

As for the peanut business in the United States, records show peanuts were grown commercially in South Carolina around the year 1800 and used for oil, food and as a substitute for cocoa.

By the 1850s the cry of "Hot Roasted Peanuts" rang out on street corners, at ball parks and circuses. Around the turn of the century, the development of time-saving peanut harvesting and shelling machines, and the work of botanist George Washington Carver, made peanuts a big crop in the South.

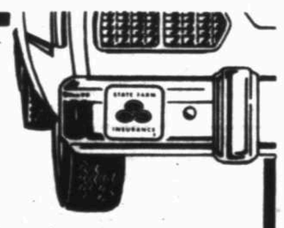

But it was not until 1890 that an unknown St. Louis physician prepared a peanut spread in his kitchen food grinder and what was to become America's favorite way to eat peanuts was born. The new treat was high in protein and easily digested by his elderly patients.

By 1900, commercially produced peanut butter, with a generous layer of oil on top, was on the market. By 1914, several dozen brands graced the grocer's shelves. Tins of this new treat were soon in pantries all over America.

In 1923, inventor J.L. Rosefield perfected a process that prevented separation by replacing part of the natural oil with hydrogenated peanut oil.

One of the first companies to use this process was Swift & Co., producer of Peter Pan peanut butter. In 1932, Rosefield decided to market his own brand, Skippy. Along with Jif, Skippy and Peter Pan are still the most popular peanut butters in the United States.

Peanut butter is available not only in the standard supermarket variety, but in several gourmet flavors, from chocolate to raspberry.

BACKGROUND

South West Africa was part of the German Empire until World War I, when it came under South African rule. South Africa refused repeated U.N. requests for withdrawal of its troops from the country and, in 1968, a U.N. resolution changed the territory's name to Namibia. South Africa has refused to relinquish control and uses Namibia as a staging area for fighting in Angola.

CURRENTLY

Namibia is a disputed territory that has been under the control of South Africa since 1918. After more than five years of sporadic negotiations to end the civil war in Angola and South African rule of Namibia, a tentative agreement has been reached. The settlement calls for the withdrawal of 50,000 Cuban troops from Angola, and the end of South African rule of Namibia. It is hoped that the civil war in Angola (between the Soviet-backed government and South African-backed UNITA rebels) would follow the withdrawal of foreign troops.

South Africa agrees to allow guerrillas back in Namibia

WINDHOEK, Namibia (AP) — South Africa has agreed to a general amnesty that is to allow 41,000 Namibian black nationalist guerrillas and refugees to return home to the territory from camps in neighboring Angola and Zambia.

The move is part of an independence plan for Namibia, which South Africa has ruled for 74 years in defiance of the United Nations and a 23-year fight for black majority rule.

President P.W. Botha of South Africa signed the amnesty Tuesday, paving the way for the repatriation to begin Monday. Some Namibians will be coming home for the first time in 20 years.

U.N. officials said they would be airlifting the Namibian refugees at a rate of 1,000 to 1,400 a day through July.

In conjunction with the amnesty, Namibia's South African-installed administrator repealed security laws, including those allowing detention without trial and empowering Botha to halt court proceedings against security force members.

The repeal is a prelude to pre-independence elections in November.

Louis Pienaar, Namibia's administrator, and U.N. envoy Martti Ahtisaari had been negotiating the moves for weeks.

"The discriminatory and restrictive laws that are to be repealed represent only a small fraction of those that have existed in this territory for many years," Ahtisaari said.

He said all 41,000 Namibians returning from Angola and Zambia will be covered by the amnesty.

Monday, the U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees plans to bring the first 1,374 refugees to the northern towns of Ondangwa and Grootfontein and the capital, Windhoek, officials said.

They will include members of the South-West Africa People's Organization, Namibia's only guerrilla-backed movement.

SWAPO is favored to win the November elections, though it is unclear if the organization will capture the two-thirds majority needed to control a new government.

Campaigning is to begin July 1, but senior guerrilla leaders have not said when they plan to come home.

U.N. and South African officials still must resolve issues including voter registration procedures and the release of political prisoners.

Namibian authorities say they are holding 29 political prisoners. The guerrilla movement says 201 dissidents were freed recently.

More than 4,000 U.N. military personnel are in Namibia to monitor the transition to independence, and Ahtisaari said he would deploy 500 more police monitors.

South Africa agreed to the U.N. independence plan in a three-nation regional accord involving the withdrawal of 50,000 Cuban troops helping Angola's government fight right-wing rebels armed by Pretoria and Washington.

At U.N. headquarters in New York, Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar announced Tuesday that two black African diplomats have been appointed as senior staff to strengthen the U.N. Namibian independence operation.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Jailed Kenyans reported freed

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — President Daniel arap Moi has ordered the country's jails cleared of all inmates detained without trial or charge.

Kenya's three English-language newspapers reported the story Tuesday, saying Moi issued the order at a rally Monday in a farming community outside the provincial capital of Nakuru, 98 miles north of Nairobi.

Moi did not name any of the affected detainees or indicate their numbers, but the papers identified three as lawyer Mirugi Kariuki, business executive Israel Otieno Agina and a former Air Force private, Richard Obuon Guya.

Kariuki was detained in 1986 during a crackdown of members of Mwakenya, a clandestine group the government says was plotting Moi's overthrow.

Agina and Okwany were arrested last year in a renewed crackdown on people suspected of links with Mwakenya and two other secret anti-government groups, the Kenya Revolutionary Movement and the Kenya Patriotic Front.

Man convicted of stealing orchids

LONDON (AP) — A judge Tuesday convicted and jailed an Armenian-born man who admitted plundering rare orchids in jungles around the world.

Henry Azadehdel, 37, who fled to Britain from Iran in 1979, pleaded guilty Monday to four counts of smuggling, harboring, offering for sale and selling restricted orchids. All are contrary to the Convention on International Trade in Endangered Species.

Old Bailey Criminal Court Judge Derek Clarkson handed down a one-year prison term, two-thirds of it suspended, and ordered Azadehdel to pay a $15,700 fine and $15,700 more toward the state prosecution's costs.

Lawyers said the offenses carried a maximum two-year sentence.

The judge said Azadehdel destroyed the orchids not as an over-enthusiastic collector or amateur with a genuine curiosity in plant species but for "substantial commercial exploitation."

Pinochet warns against trials

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — President Augusto Pinochet said the armed forces will not tolerate human rights trials by special courts or the Congress after a civilian government takes over next march.

The lame-duck military president also said he will remain as army commander after handing over power to a successor to be elected in national balloting Dec. 14. He said his continuing on an army chief was necessary "to ensure Chile's institutional organization."

Pinochet's remarks came Monday at a meeting with Chilean women journalists and were carried by local newspapers Tuesday.

U.N. says pact could save many Sudanese lives

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — U.N. officials in charge of Sudan's famine relief operation say an agreement between rebels and the government to allow safe transit of emergency supplies could help save up to 100,000 Sudanese lives.

The delivery of food and other supplies — before the rainy season cuts off access by dirt roads and airstrips — is behind schedule but recent accords between guerrillas and the government improve the survival prospects for thousands, James P. Grant, head of Operation Lifeline Sudan, said Tuesday.

"It's going to be a very difficult summer and fall, but I think at this stage, barring a collapse of the present sort of pattern of cooperation, I think we can say that the great majority of those 100,000 deaths that looked so likely in February and early March can be averted."

More than 60,000 tons of food has already been delivered, and the relief operation is attempting to deliver another 20,000 to 40,000 tons before the heaviest rains hit in July and August, Grant said.

"For the first time in history, there is, in the middle of a civil war, a plan of action agreed to by both parties with 'corridors of tranquility' for the passage of supplies," said Grant, who returned from observing the operation last week.

The rebel Sudan People's Liberation Army (SPLA) is fighting for more autonomy in the southern provinces, where the government generally controls only garrison towns.

A railway route from central to southern Sudan is now open, said Grant. One rail trip was completed in late May; another is set to begin Saturday, and two more runs are planned later this month.

The first train, with more than 100 cars, moved south through rebel and government-held areas, reaching war-weary Aweil on May 28.

"At one government garrison where the train stopped overnight, the train was so long that the SPLA was guarding the tail end of the train while the government was guarding the front of the train," Grant said.

The government and rebels have both agreed to respect the "corridors of tranquility" as long as necessary, said Grant.

In addition, both parties have agreed to meet in Addis Ababa, Ethiopia, Saturday to open talks aimed at reaching a comprehensive truce.

The SPLA has also announced it is extending its monthlong unilateral cease-fire for another two weeks, said Grant.

Although the rainy season has already begun, Operation Lifeline Sudan has not yet lost the use of all dirt roads and airstrips, he said.

Bulldozers have been able to keep open dirt roads linking Kenya with southern Sudan so truck convoys can pass, and the relief operation has been able to use lighter planes to land on rain-sodden dirt airstrips.
