School year poll

WASHINGTON — For the first time, most Americans want the school year lengthened to 10 months, a Gallup Poll showed Thursday. The 23d annual survey of national opinion on public education also indicated growing support for other controversial reforms. They include "report cards" that grade individual schools, a national curriculum and national test to insure that all students meet certain standards, and a voucher system to help parents choose the school their kids attend.

Underage gambler

SAN FRANCISCO — A federal appeals court refused to force a Nevada casino to pay an underage gambler $1 million he won from a slot machine, and the young man's lawyer says he'll appeal to the U.S. Supreme Court. Kirk Erickson of Royal, Ark., was 19 when he and his family visited Caesar's Palace Casino in Las Vegas in August 1987. He won a jackpot of $1,061,812 on a $1 slot machine, but the casino checked his identification and refused to pay, since the legal age for gambling in Nevada is 21.

"My husband and I are cancer survivors, leading healthy and happy lives," Nancy Reagan said Thursday in a statement announcing a $25,000 grant to the Strang Cancer Prevention Center in Manhattan. Last May, Mrs. Reagan was at a ribbon-cutting ceremony for the center's new building on East 72nd Street that also marked the center's new affiliation with New York Hospital-Cornell Medical Center. The grant was made by the Nancy Reagan Foundation to the National High Risk Breast Registry at the center, which identifies women with a high genetic risk of breast cancer.

Spain awaits bond decision

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

Deep hatred for his ex-wife allegedly led an Odessa defense attorney to put out a murder contract on her, testimony revealed during a detention hearing before a U.S. Magistrate on Thursday.

Michael Jeffery Spain, 28, will remain in jail without bond pending a final decision whether to grant a conditional release, U.S. Magistrate Robert Sykes ordered.

During closing arguments of the detention hearing, U.S. Assistant Attorney Tom Beery described Spain as having "the heart, the soul and the mind of a murderer."

Spain was arrested Sunday and accused of plotting to have his former spouse, Jami Leverette Spain, 26, killed for $15,000.

"I never thought he would do something like that," testified Ms. Spain.

Testimony revealed that the Spains married on Sept. 24, 1988, and later went through a prolonged divorce that ended on Dec. 1, 1990.

On Aug. 13, an angry Spain reportedly visited his wife and made threats against her before leaving, testimony showed.

Spain went to his ex-wife's home for her signature on an income tax extension to allow him an exemption for their 1-year-old daughter, who resides with Ms. Spain, testimony indicated.

Ms. Spain refused because her former husband had not made timely child support payments in 1990, she testified.

"You're going to be so sorry. You're going to be so sorry," Spain told his ex-wife, Ms. Spain testified.

"Well, in a couple of weeks you won't be able to do something about it," Spain allegedly added, according to Ms. Spain's testimony.

■ Soviet president vows new reforms; tens of thousands of Muscovites celebrate coup's collapse.

N.Y. Times News Service

MOSCOW — Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev on Thursday took back the helm of the Soviet Union, and then in an emotional recounting of his three-day ordeal praised those who saved him and spoke bitterly of the colleagues who betrayed him, but exhibited unshaken devotion to perestroika and to the Communist Party whose leaders were among those seeking his overthrow.

The weary 60-year-old leader admitted to his people in a nationwide television broadcast that his own poor judgment in choosing top leaders had helped make the coup possible.

During a lengthy news conference, Gorbachev lavished praise on foreign leaders who spoke out, and gave credit for the coup's end to Soviet population, the army, reformist mayors and the republics, "in particular" the Russian republic and its president, Boris Yeltsin.

He also brushed aside traditional Soviet circumspection about palace coups.

In an astonishingly detailed account of how he had been temporarily deposed, he spoke of how he feared he and perhaps his family would be killed. He told of contemplating whether suicide would be necessary to insure that he didn't help Communist hardliners who had seized power.

At times he spoke very slowly or paused to keep his emotions in check. At other times, his words tumbled out as his voice became strident with anger.

Even as he spoke, tens of thousands of Muscovites celebrated democracy's triumph and feted Yeltsin for organizing the people's uprising which saved the EDINBURG (AP) — A state judge ruled Thursday that Texas' redistricting plan is based on faulty census data and discriminates against minorities. He ordered the state to redraw boundaries for state and congressional districts.

Phillips to pay record $4 million for '89 blast

WASHINGTON (AP) — Phillips 66 Co. has agreed to pay a record $4 million to settle allegations of worker-safety violations stemming from a 1989 blast that killed 23 people at a Texas chemical plant, the government said Thursday.

The company also has agreed to implement corporate-wide safety management procedures and launch new employee training programs about hazardous chemicals, the Occupational Safety and Health Administration said.

OSHA originally proposed a $5.7 million fine against the petroleum company, charging it with 575 "willful" and "serious" safety violations at its Houston Chemical Complex.

Son forges bond between homeless man, restaurateur

By Thomas Korosec
N.Y. Times News Service

FORT WORTH — Over bottomless cups of coffee, one man talks about his restaurant, his family, his employees.

The other is more conversant in soup kitchens, in how to avoid being rolled by drugged-out "rockheads," and other details of life on the street.

Plopped down in the backmost booth of a downtown breakfast spot on a recent morning, Jerry Ray and Maurice Inglehart are surely an odd set of friends.

Inglehart, a 46-year-old alcoholic drifter, took handouts and scraps.

Still, in this freshly minted friendship, Ray is the one with the debt.

He owes, he says, for a short and rueful lesson Inglehart taught his son last month, a lesson Ray believes could change his son's troubled life.

Having located Inglehart with a letter in the newspaper and the help of a Fort Worth police officer, Ray is here in this dimly lighted booth with offerings of clothes, money and friendship, easily connecting with a man who has spent more than half his life sleeping outdoors, noted but mostly unseen by the world passing by.

Says Ray, "It's strange the way things work out."

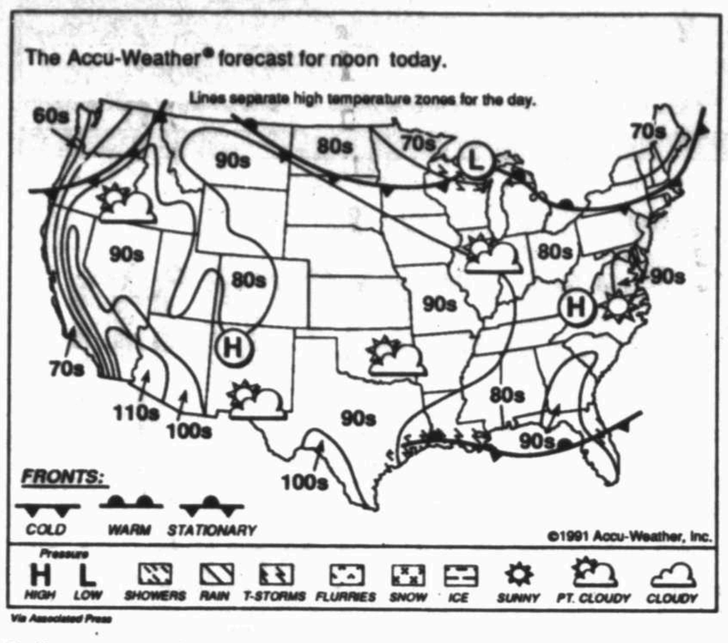

This simple story of gratitude and friendship began last month when Ray's 23-year-old son, a self-described "alcoholic, drug addict and workaholic," landed in the Tarrant County Jail charged with beating his wife.

As Ray told the story in his letter, his son was making a phone call in the jail lobby after his release when a man who said his name was Maurice approached

WEATHER SUMMARY

Via Associated Press

More clear skies, 90s ahead

Today's forecast calls for clear skies with a high between 90 snd 95 and southeast winds at 10 mph, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Tonight will be fair with a low in the mid-60s.

Saturday is expected to be clear with a high between 90 and 95.

After an overnight low of 65, Thursday's high was 91 compared with the record high for that date of 103 set in 1985. The record low for today's date was 61 set in 1961.

STATE

Most of Texas had sunny skies Thursday, but torrential rains soaked North Central and Central Texas.

Showers and thunderstorms persisted because of a stationary front and a weak trough from North Texas into the Del Rio area and severe thunderstorm warnings were issued for McLennan, Limestone, Waller and western Hays Counties.

Waco received wind gusts to 49 mph and there was some street flooding. Authorities reported two people struck lightning as Waco received half-inch hail and 2.20 inches of rainfaill in one hour.

NATION

Wet, stormy weather was scattered from the Southwest to Florida on Thursday, and hot air blew across the Plains and Florida while low temperatures invaded the northern Rockies and Great Lakes.

Thunderstorms were over Arizona, Utah, Colorado and New Mexico.

Showers and thunderstorms developed during the afternoon along and north of a stationary front over eastern Texas. A few showers and thunderstorms also developed over south-central Texas.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

PURGE: Protesters demand Gorbachev resign

country from dictatorship.

Some of the crowds vented their anger on two Soviet institutions involved in the coup by defacing the Communist Party headquarters and toppling an enormous statue of the KGB founder Felix Dzerzhinsky.

As Gorbachev's news conference drew to an end, fireworks saluting the Soviet Union's liberation lit the soft, dark blue evening sky.

Gorbachev, admitting he couldn't sleep even after being safely back in the capital, immediately ordered the arrest of the coup ringleaders who he called "primitive and crude and crafty." He said he never wanted to see or talk to them again.

The president promised the guilty would be brought rapidly to justice, but added he would not allow a witchhunt.

Demands for revenge from crowds in Moscow and leaders in the Baltics, as well as a pattern of early arrests that extended far down the ladder topped by the coup's eight-man "junta" showed he may find it hard to meet his pledge to adhere to the rule of law.

Many of the tens of thousands who filled the capital's streets demanding his freedom during the coup were insisting Thursday that his government be swept clean of even those whose collaboration merely amounted to keeping silent.

Governments in the Baltic republics, where Soviet troops took over key installations, asked Gorbachev to arrest many of the military leaders in their states.

None of the main plotters was still free by the time Gorbachev spoke. Some who cooperated with them were in jail as well.

Prime Minister Valentin Pavlov who fell sick Monday was under guard in a hospital.

The post of Gennady Yanayev, who had been Gorbachev's handpicked vice president, was left vacant, but Gorbachev named acting chiefs for the KGB and the interior and defense ministries, whose former heads were also key leaders of the coup.

Before authorities could arrest Interior Minister Boris Pugo, he killed himself by shooting himself in the mouth. Gorbachev had KGB Chief Vladimir Kryuchkov jailed by Russian authorities, clearly because he still didn't fully trust the Soviet KGB or the interior ministry which controls Soviet police.

Gorbachev sounded his bitterest talking about Kryuchkov and Defense Minister Dmitri Yazov. He confessed he had believed in both men.

"I must say that what we have been through in these recent days has been a difficult lesson, first and foremost for me, particularly as regards the choice of the country's leading figures," confessed Gorbachev, a man who obviously finds it very hard to admit error.

He said he should have paid attention when the Soviet Parliament voted down Yaneyev, chosen last December by Gorbachev for the vice presidency. Instead, Gorbachev stubbornly and successfully convinced the parliament to approve the appointment in a second vote.

VOICE: Americans express relief at end of coup

cans, the Cold War finally ended this week.

Attitudes toward the Soviet Union have been slowly changing since President Mikhail S. Gorbachev came to power in 1985, but scores of interviews around the country during and after the coup revealed a wave of admiration, even affection, for a nation that had been an object of suspicion, even hatred, not long ago.

More than at any time since World War II, Americans are describing the people of the Soviet Union as kindred spirits who share a love of freedom.

During Moscow's dark nights when it seemed that the hard-line Communists might triumph, many people in this country said they experienced a revival of the anxieties that had marked the decades of confrontation with the Soviet Union.

But, like the Russians they saw on their television screens, these Americans were sure they did not want to go back to the old ways.

On Monday evening Roxann McMurry Allen, an artist in Dumas, Texas, said, "The way Gorbachev disappeared and the lies they're telling about him being sick just bring back that feeling that you can never trust these people, and that's downright scary."

That was when the tanks were still in the streets of Moscow. Thursday, Mrs. Allen said:

"You can see that these people really have learned the value of democracy and that something has really changed over there. I was amazed at how deeply I felt for them. It even stirred patriotic feelings in me to see them fight for their freedom, and if they are willing to risk their lives, then I think they deserve our encouragement and support."

In San Francisco, Fred Toney, a 25-year-old research associate for an investment banking firm, found the news from Moscow "pretty unsettling" early in the week.

"It makes me stop and think how very tenuous things are," he said then. "Maybe we're not as safe as we think we are. Maybe we're not as isolated as we think."

him and offered him a cigarette.

After the two struck up a conversation, the man lifted his shirt and showed Ray's son his distorted stomach and a large protruding bulge.

"I just want to show you what happens when you let alcohol take control of your life," the man said. "This bulge is my liver."

Before he was even home, Ray's son eagerly told his father about Maurice and his warning, and promised he would change, seek treatment, start fresh.

In Decatur, about 35 miles northwest of Fort Worth, the father turned the story over and over in his mind, then decided for reasons he couldn't explain that he needed to find Maurice, to help him.

Last week, after his letter was published in the Fort Worth Star-Telegram, Ray got that chance.

A Fort Worth police officer recognized Ray's description of the man and immediately knew he was the slight, gentle, hunched man who sleeps regularly in the men's room of the downtown police station.

So Ray the burly ex-career Army sergeant met Inglehart the street person, and before long they were swapping stories at Bek's Charbroiler restaurant, making plans, feeling their way across a gap that Ray says isn't as wide as one might think.

"I guess Maurice had as big an effect on me as on my son," said Ray over breakfast with Inglehart a few days later. "Some people have told me they can't understand what I'm doing, but it's something I don't have to explain. This comes from the heart."

Beyond the clothes and cigarettes and food that Ingelhart has taken away from their meetings, Ray has offered him a place to stay in Decatur. It is a prospect Inglehart said he needs to check out before making up his mind.

"A lot of people have helped me," he said. "But nobody has been concerned like Jerry."

As breakfast gave way to lunchtime and Bek's booths filled with federal workers from the offices across the street, Inglehart sketched the outline of his life.

Born in San Francisco and raised in Odessa, he sold moonshine for his father and got hooked on the goods.

For a while there were jobs as a waiter or a busboy in Austin. Then, roughly two decades ago, he gave in to his craving and cast himself adrift.

Most of his life he has gotten by, collecting cans or mooching money, spending it on quart bottles of beer and malt liquor. He sleeps "with one eye open," ever wary of the crack-addled "rockheads" who prey on their homeless bretheren.

"It ain't easy," he said. "And it ain't nothing I like."

Afflicted with a damaged liver that leaks fluids into his abdomen and legs, he's been told by health service doctors that he doesn't have long to live.

Ray had hoped his son would find salvation in such grave details.

But this isn't a story about miracles — at least not the kind one runs across in the tabloids or on Sunday morning TV.

For the first time ever, in the time since he met Inglehart, Ray's son has admitted to his father that he is addicted — in his teens, to speed, and now to cocaine and beer.

"Maurice may have opened my eyes, but I haven't quit," said the son, who asked that his name not be used. "It's harder than that."

Ray said he can hardly take comfort in those words. But for once, after a decade of watching his son bounce in and out of jail on a trail of lies, he has heard him admit the truth.

"We're talking openly now and that gives me hope," Ray said. "I have Maurice to thank for that."

SPAIN: Suspect to remain in jail pending decision scheme was described during testimony by detective Sgt. Snow Robertson of the Crimes Against Persons division of the Odessa Police Department.

He testified how Spain allegedly contacted Mark Marinelli, a former Odessa police officer, on Aug. 8 and made plans for Marinelli to murder Ms. Spain, or have her murdered.

Marinelli subsequently told Timothy Sellers, a Drug Enforcement Administration agent from Lubbock, about the offer on Aug. 12, Robertson said. The same day, Marinelli and Spain agreed on a $15,000 price tag for the murder, he added.

Sellers in turn contacted the Odessa police, who on Aug. 13 supplied a "wire" for Marinelli to wear that would record all transactions with Spain, testimony indicated.

Conversations of the murder plan between Spain and Marinelli were taped on Aug. 13, 14 and 15, Robertson testified.

Those recordings contain expletives used by Spain to show the hate he had for his ex-wife, he said.

Spain warned Marinelli that Ms. Spain was strong and would put up a fight, Robertson testified.

At various times during the Spain-Marinelli meetings, Spain appeared nervous and expressed caution about the plan, Robertson said.

Spain was suspicious about Marinelli's pager — which was really the hidden microphone, Robertson testified. Marinelli told Spain the pager was an electronic device used to detect "wires" — in case Spain was wearing one, Robertson added.

At one point, the two men were in a car and Spain would speed up and slow down, which was indicative of "dragging for heat," a technique used to avoid surveillance, Robertson testified.

During the talks, Spain said he would be in Las Vegas during the murder as an alibi, testimony indicated.

"He (Spain) was really concerned about his alibi ... (and) how he should respond to questions from the police" following the murder, Robertson said.

On Aug. 15, Spain took a Southwest Airlines flight to Las Vegas. The murder was scheduled for the next day, Robertson said.

Authorities then staged an execution of Ms. Spain to convince Spain the crime took place, testimony indicated.

On Aug. 17, Marinelli went to Las Vegas for the planned payoff, Robertson testified.

Spain showed no remorse when he was told of his ex-wife's death by Marinelli, said Robertson, who watched the transaction as it took place via a hidden camera in Marinelli's hotel room.

A photograph depicting Ms. Spain shot in the head and lying in a shallow grave was given to Spain, who examined and then burned it, Robertson testified.

Marinelli was paid $2,500 in $100 bills on the spot, testimony indicated. Spain left and returned with an additional $7,500, also in $100 bills, according to testimony. The final payment of $5,000 was promised to be paid in six months, testimony indicated.

At that time, Marinelli asked Spain if he wanted to take care of any more "custody things," a code word used by the two to mean murder, Robertson testified.

"Maybe ... there's a client," Spain said according to Robertson's testimony.

The identity of the client was unknown, Robertson said.

The next day, Spain returned to Midland where he was arrested by law enforcement officials at the airport.

Spain passed out twice while being taken to the U.S. Marshal's office, Robertson said.

At the detention hearing, Spain's sister, Kim Spain, 29, and brother, Tommy Spain, testified on the defendant's behalf. Julie Everett, Spain's secretary, also testified for the defense.

Those witnesses testified about Spain's good reputation as a lawyer and their willingness to act as custodians of Spain if a release is granted.

Elma Nunley, an Odessa counselor, submitted expert testimony that Spain was not a threat to the community if released, based on statistical studies.

Spain is being represented by Thomas Hirsch and Royal Caswell.

Hirsch said he is optimistic that terms for his client's release will made.

RULING: New political map to be scrapped, judge says state's efforts to get federal approval for the plan.

All 50 states are working on state and congressional redistricting plans to reflect the results of the 1990 census. Texas and eight other states with histories of discrimination must obtain Justice Department approval before changing their election procedures.

Ramirez issued a preliminary injunction in a lawsuit filed by several south Texas residents. His ruling says the plan "impermissibly and unreasonably" discriminates against minorities.

Ramirez ordered the state to draw up new districts based on adjusted census figures that would compensate for the undercount.

Texas Attorney General Dan Morales said the state would appeal.

"Texas lacks the capacity to establish valid census numbers for a self-adjustment that would withstand a federal court challenge," Morales said in a written statement.

Morales agreed the U.S. Census Bureau undercounted the state's population, and said the state lobbied unsuccessfully to have the figure adjusted, he said.

PHILLIPS: 1989 blast killed 23 at Texas chemical plant

(From 1A)

Phillips, in settling the case, agreed to pay $4 million, which will be the largest amount collected in OSHA's 20-year history.

OSHA director Gerard Scannell said the settlement would allow safety measures to go into place immediately "rather than causing delays through prolonged litigation."

Phillips officials at the company's headquarters in Bartlesville, Okla., said they would comment on the settlement later Thursday.

The previous OSHA record settlement was also related to a deadly petrochemical blast in the Houston area. Last year, Arco Chemical Co. paid $3.5 million to settle alleged safety violations connected to a July 1990 explosion that killed 17 workers in Channelview, Texas, when a wastewater tank exploded in a fireball.

Thursday's settlement ends a case launched after an Oct. 23, 1989, explosion killed 23 workers and injured 130 others at the Phillips complex in Pasadena, a Houston suburb.

When OSHA originally cited Phillips more than a year ago, the Labor Department said it had uncovered internal company documents that called for corrective action, but that the proposed improvements were largely ignored.

OSHA's investigation found that four highly flammable gases escaped from an open valve, forming a huge vapor cloud that traveled through the plant within seconds because of high pressure. A series of explosions occurred after the cloud came in contact with an ignition source.

When OSHA cited Phillips, it said that contrary to the company's own procedures, as well as standard industry practice, there was no backup protection such as a double valve to protect against valve failure or an untimely valve opening.

Jets bomb Croatian targets

The World

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — Air Force jets attacked targets Thursday in Croatia, and the Croatian president gave federal leaders until the end of the month to cease with the hostilities against his secessionist republic.

Up to eight people were reported dead in the latest fighting, which is undermining efforts by Yugoslavia's feuding leaders to impose a truce in Croatia.

Ethnic fighting between Serbians and Croats has killed at least 250 people since the republic declared independence June 25 together with its northern neighbor Slovenia.

Croatian leaders have renewed charges that the federal army, whose officers corps is dominated by Serbs, is helping Serb militants.

About 20 percent of Croatian territory is estimated to be held by Serb rebel forces.

Croatia's President Franjo Tudjman warned Thursday his government would hold the Yugoslav presidency accountable if the federal army does not return to the barracks by Aug. 31.

In a letter sent to the collective presidency, republican leaders and the federal government, Tudjman demanded the presidency order an end to hostilities against Croatia within nine days.

Failing this, Croatia "will consider the presidency directly responsible for the invasion and the army an occupation army," said the letter read by Tudjman on Croatian government-controlled television.

"The Republic of Croatia cannot endure this aggression and will even have to carry out a complete mobilization of its forces for the defense of the republic's integrity, and Croatian emigrants will have to be summoned for help," Tudjman said.

He did not say when exactly he would decree such a mobilization.

The Croatian Defense Ministry said two people were killed in a suburb of Vinkovci, 18 miles southeast of Osijek, when federal jets strafed and bombed the area.

Federal fighter jets were also reported in action at Sarvas, a village 10 miles east of Osijek, a Croatian stronghold in the ethnically mixed Slavonia region.

There were no reports of casualties from those raids.

Slavonia has seen the heaviest fighting since a cease-fire was declared Aug. 7 in the republic by the federal presidency. The cease-fire repeatedly has been shattered.

A spokesman for a hospital in Osijek said it received one dead and 26 injured people from fighting in the area involving mortar and automatic weapons fire.

The Croatian Interior Ministry said four civilians were killed in fighting overnight and one Croatian policeman was wounded. It did not specify where the casualties occurred.

Radio Belgrade said eight people were killed and dozens injured in a fierce clash between Serb militants and Croatian security officers at the village of Kinjaca, near Sisak.

Heavy mortar shell fire rained on Pakrac, about 70 miles southeast of Zagreb.

China expels activists

BEIJING (NYT) — Four members of a human rights delegation who came from the United States to investigate conditions of political prisoners in China were detained overnight before apparently being expelled from the country Thursday.

The four, all ethnic Chinese, included two American citizens, a Canadian citizen and a Taiwanese.

They had come on tourist visas, and the Chinese Public Security Ministry told the Canadian Embassy that their visas had been shortened because they were engaging in activity incompatible with their status.

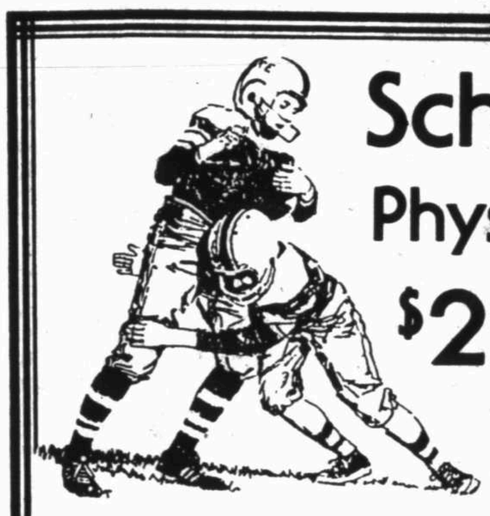

The delegation had met with the families of Wang Juntao and Chen Zimin, two political prisoners serving 13-year sentences in solitary confinement for their involvement in the 1989 democracy movement in Tiananmen Square.

The delegates had given the families letters of support and had also planned to investigate prison conditions and to appeal to the National People's Congress for the release of political offenders.

Wang and Chen started a hunger strike last week to protest harsh prison conditions and the denial of monthly visits by their wives. No one, including their families, has been allowed access to them since shortly after the fast began, and it is unclear what condition they are in.

The four delegates were representing the Party for Democracy and Freedom in China, a U.S.-based organization. Such organizations are generally considered counterrevolutionary and illegal in China.

The delegates were detained Wednesday evening and early Thursday morning, but they were able to alert family members and journalists. The Public Security Ministry denied any knowledge of the case to reporters.

SOVIET CRISIS

Gorbachev feared poisoning while under arrest

MOSCOW (AP) — Mikhail Gorbachev said Thursday that during three days spent under house arrest, he and his family ate only the food at hand, fearing poisoning, rigged up a shortwave radio and tried to smuggle out a secret message. He said his wife Raisa suffered greatly from the tension.

At a news conference, Gorbachev gave a vivid account of his family's ordeal in the failed coup by hard-liners opposed to his reforms.

He appeared changed by the experience: franker, less irritable and more personable than in recent months. He seemed to have regained inner strength from what he described as "72 hours of total isolation and struggle."

Gorbachev was held at his seaside villa in the Crimea along with Raisa, daughter Irina, son-in-law Anatoly, and two grandchildren, Oksana, 11, and Anastasia, 4.

He said Anastasia endured captivity best, because she didn't understand what was going on.

"She was running around, asking everyone to take her to the beach ... and we had to take her," he said. "But ... the guards asked us to stop, because anything could happen, anything at all. So we locked ourselves up, so to speak."

The coup leaders had claimed Gorbachev was unable to fulfill his duties "for health reasons."

Fearing they might try to poison him, the family decided not to ask for any food to be brought in, but to eat only what was already in the house, he said.

Gorbachev's 32 personal bodyguards stayed loyal to him and remained at the government-owned retreat on the Black Sea. The family was completely isolated from the outside world until a guard rigged up a shortwave radio with a makeshift antenna and they began listening to the British Broadcasting Corp., Radio Liberty and the Voice of America.

Showing good humor, Gorbachev noted that "BBC came in best of all."

The plotters suspended Gorbachev's policy of glasnost, or openness, during the coup and shut down reformist newspapers and broadcasts.

The 60-year-old Soviet president said he videotaped a statement denouncing the coup and denying anything was wrong with his health. He, Irina and Anatoly cut up four recordings of the message, hid them in ordinary 35mm film canisters and prepared to give them to people to smuggle out of the house.

He held up his original copy of the statement and waved one of the film canisters.

Western nations set to recognize Baltics

WASHINGTON (NYT) — The Bush administration and a number of other Western governments said Thursday that the time was ripe for diplomatic recognition of the independence of Lithuania, Latvia, and Estonia. But they indicated that it was still up to the Soviet Union to take the steps required to give sovereignty to the three Baltic republics.

President Bush said he hoped that the defeat of the hardline faction in Moscow would "accelerate" movement toward full independence of the Baltics.

The German government said that it was prepared to recognize the three as soon as they attained agreement on secession from Moscow, and that they would be permitted to post official representatives in Bonn pending diplomatic recognition.

Denmark's foreign minister, Uffe Ellemann-Jensen, said his government would pursue a course similar to the Germans', while the Swedish Foreign Ministry said the Stockholm government would wait until Soviet military forces had been entirely withdrawn from the three countries.

Officials of the Russian republic were quoted by the Estonian government as saying that they were prepared to accord recognition to the Baltics, a policy endorsed earlier by the Russian republic's president, Boris N. Yeltsin.

But the problem has been between the Baltic independence activists and the central Soviet authorities, including President Mikhail S. Gorbachev, who have viewed the independence movements in some of the 15 Soviet republics as a threat to the integrity of the Soviet Union.

The Bush administration, committed to supporting the policies of Gorbachev, has accordingly muted its support of the Baltic movements and other independence drives in the Soviet Union, saying it approved of the principle of self-determination, but not of actions that would shatter the center.

That stance caused problems for the Bush administration last winter when Soviet special forces cracked down on Baltic independence movements, leading to lethal clashes in Lithuania and Latvia. Bush declared his disapproval of the repressive actions and postponed a spring meeting with Gorbachev; but he did not break off dialogue with the Soviet leader.

Speaking to reporters Thursday in Kennebunkport, Maine, Bush took essentially this same approach.

70 Hours that shook the world

Boris Yeltsin, surrounded by tanks and threatened with arrest, led the resistance to the coup that banished President Mikhail S. Gorbachev. Key events in the drama that threatened to turn back the clock to the Cold War era:

Yeltsin

MON 19 — Soviet military and KGB forces surround President Mikhail S. Gorbachev's Crimean dacha and prevent his plane from leaving. Vice President Gennady Yanayev, backed by other Soviet hard-liners, takes power.

Russian President Boris Yeltsin calls on Russians to resist the takeover.

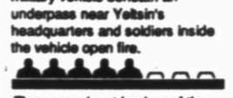

Hundreds of tanks and military vehicles move into Moscow.

World markets tumble while dollar and gold prices surge.

TUES 20 — Hard-liners deploy about 100 tanks near the stronghold of Boris Yeltsin, who has spearheaded anti-coup demonstrations.

Coup leaders impose a curfew in the Soviet capital Tuesday night.

At least two are killed when opponents of the coup trap a military vehicle beneath an underpass near Yeltsin's headquarters and soldiers inside the vehicle open fire.

Three prominent leaders of the new eight-man ruling committee step down.

Soviet troops disarm Latvian prime minister's guards and seize control of the republic's broadcast studios.

In Tallinn, capital of Estonia, more than 100 light armored vehicles and trucks roll into city.

Hundreds of thousands rally in Moldavian capital of Kishinev to denounce the coup; in the Ukraine, about 8,000 people protest.

Bush swears in Robert S. Strauss as U.S. ambassador to Moscow, and sends him on fact-finding mission there.

The U.S., Japan and the European Community suspend economic aid to the Soviet Union

WED 21 — Coup leaders are reported to have fled Moscow, with four of the eight flying to meet Gorbachev.

Tanks and armored personnel carriers pull out of Moscow.

The Soviet legislature nullifies coup leaders' emergency decrees. Press restrictions are lifted.

The Communist Party denounces the takeover, and the Soviet prosecutor general opens a criminal investigation of coup leaders' actions.

In the Baltic republics, some Soviet troops begin returning to their permanent bases. Latvia and Estonia declare immediate independence from the Soviet Union.

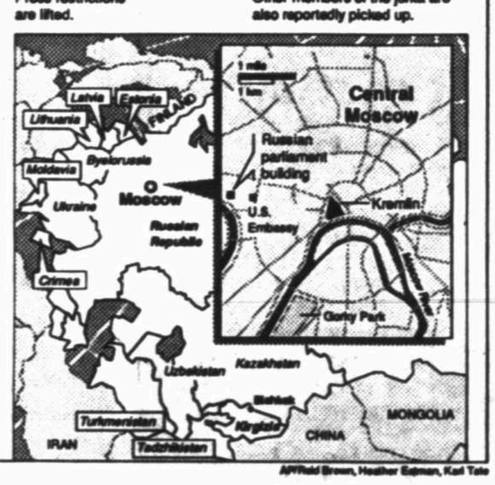

Gorbachev tells Bush by phone that the coup is over, then heads back to Moscow to resume power.

Gorbachev

THURS 22 — KGB chief Vladimir Kruchkov arrives in Moscow with Gorbachev and is arrested at the airport.

Other members of the junta are also reportedly picked up.

Military's passive role insures coup's failure

WASHINGTON (HNS) — The decision by the Soviet armed forces to sit out the coup insured the survival of Boris Yeltsin and the return to power by President Mikhail Gorbachev, experts in the United States said Thursday.

Yet the refusal of the regular Soviet forces to end the upheaval, coupled with bitter internal military divisions unmasked by the coup, leave the vaunted Soviet military machine weaker, they said.

The Soviet army, navy and air force did not formally participate in the three-day takeover despite Soviet Defense Minister Dimitri Yazov's centerpiece role in the eight-man conspiracy, experts said.

The military operations that threatened bloodshed were carried out for the most part by units from the 230,000-strong Committee of State Security (KGB) and the 340,000-strong Ministry of Internal Affairs (MVD), with assistance from elite army airborne forces put under KGB control in January, analysts said.

"In effect, Soviet armed forces used passive resistance" to discourage the coup, explained Stephen Meyer, a political science professor at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and a specialist in the Soviet armed forces.

"When asked to participate, many officers opted out directly; others avoided taking action by saying, 'No problem,' and simply doing nothing," he said.

Had the Soviet armed forces taken part, however, "we would still have the ruling junta in power today," Meyer said. "I'm a great believer in 'people power,' but a few helicopter gunships and a couple of dozen tanks and that would have been the end of them."

However, the ethnic and political divisions crisscrossing the 4.3-million strong armed forces and a tradition of remaining subordinate to civilian control by the Communist Party led the Soviet armed forces to stand aside.

Furthermore, American intelligence agencies had detected splits between reformers and hard-liners in the Soviet military.

Three regret Gorbachev's return

MOSCOW (NYT) — At his news conference Thursday, President Mikhail S. Gorbachev drew laughter and applause when he talked of the world reaction to the failed coup.

He said he had talked with President Bush and the leaders of France, Germany, Great Britain, Canada, Australia, Japan, Italy, and Egypt. He added: "Other than Gadhafi, and Hussein, and Rubiks, they all agreed with me."

He was referring to Col. Moammar Gadhafi, the head of Libya, President Saddam Hussein of Iraq, and Alfred Rubiks, the hardline Communist Party boss of Latvia, who was facing arrest in Riga for his role in supporting the coup.

Bush hopes coup will accelerate reforms

WASHINGTON (NYT) — President Bush said Thursday he hopes the collapse of a coup by Moscow hard-liners will accelerate the process of political and economic reform in the Soviet Union.

With key opponents of reform now out of the way, he said, "it perhaps frees up" Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev to work with Russian President Boris Yeltsin on a more rapid conversion to democracy and a market economy.

However, the administration does not plan to seek increased economic aid for the Soviet Union, beyond reinstating programs frozen when Gorbachev was taken captive early Sunday morning.

"Economically, the situation is not significantly different than it was before the coup started," a senior administration official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said Thursday. "We confront, still, the same problems and opportunities economically that we did before. So I wouldn't anticipate any dramatic departure."

Which means the White House wants basic changes in the Soviet system. "The best way to get economic support from the West is to adopt a genuine and a far-reaching economic reform program," Bush told reporters at his vacation home in Kennebunkport, Me., echoing his longstanding policy.

But Gorbachev faces severe economic problems that, if anything, have been exacerbated by the abortive coup and confusion in the country. The conspirators had used the economic situation as one excuse for their actions.

Coup leader shoots himself

MOSCOW (AP) — As police rounded up leaders of the Soviet coup Thursday, one mastermind of the plot committed suicide: Boris Pugo, the hard-line national police chief and veteran KGB officer.

Pugo, 54, shot himself with his service revolver as police prepared to arrest him, Russian and Soviet officials said. His wife also was "gravely injured" and hospitalized, although the circumstances were unclear, the state news agency Tass reported.

Pugo was little mourned in his homeland, the secessionist Baltic republic of Latvia, where he headed the KGB from 1977-84 and the Communist Party from 1984-88. He held the rank of KGB major general.

"People have disliked him increasingly ... especially since January of this year," said Latvian newspaper editor Pauls Raudseps. In January, "black beret" commandos under his control waged a bloody crackdown in the Baltics.

In Moscow, public anger over the coup focused on ousted KGB chairman Vladimir Kryuchkov. Crowds surged around the agency's headquarters and toppled a statue of the founder of the Soviet secret police.

■ Connecticut lawmakers OK tax overhaul plan

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — Connecticut's 53-day budget impasse was broken in dramatic fashion Thursday when the House reversed itself and narrowly approved a spending plan that imposes a long-resisted state income tax.

Lawmakers applauded when the measure passed the House. It was signed into law by Gov. Lowell P. Weicker Jr., who had lobbied strongly for the tax before the final House vote.

It was a decisive victory for Weicker, a former Republican senator who won the governorship last year running as an independent. He proposed the income tax in February to solve the state's crushing fiscal crisis and vetoed three budgets that didn't contain the tax.

Republican Rep. Eugene Migliaro said the Weicker administration set a new low for arm-twisting and deal-making.

"I've never seen such a disgraceful act in my life," Migliaro said. "It was a real zoo."

The $7 billion budget, supported by a majority of Democrats and a small bloc of Republicans, would impose a 4.5 percent income tax and raise taxes and fees by $1.1 billion, but would cut the state sales tax from 8 percent to 6 percent.

The income tax provides exemptions and tax credits to reduce its impact on low-income families.

■ Agents nab 'cream of the crud' in sweep

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal agents arrested hundreds of people on firearms charges Thursday in a nationwide roundup of what one official called "the cream of the crud" behind violent crime.

Many could face mandatory prison terms of at least 15 years for violating federal gun laws, said Stephen E. Higgins, director of the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms.

The bureau said "Operation Achilles Heel" began before dawn and 425 people had been arrested by 4 p.m. Higgins said more than 600 are likely to be detained by the time the sweep winds down this weekend.

Higgins said the bureau, a wing of the Treasury Department, targeted those "6 percent of criminals who commit up to 70 percent of violent crimes."

He said the operation had been planned for several months, with more than 1,000 federal agents joining local police in the crackdown.

■ Teachers group opposes Thomas' nomination

WASHINGTON — The American Federation of Teachers said Thursday it opposes Clarence Thomas' nomination to the Supreme Court.

"There is nothing in Thomas' short judicial career that leads us to believe that he will rise above his ideological biases or be able to offer the insights required of those who sit on the nation's high court," said Albert Shanker, president of the 780,000-member union.

The union, in a statement, said its executive council had voted to oppose Thomas' nomination.

Shanker noted the AFL-CIO's finding that Thomas' record "shows that he would not support the aspirations of working people, minorities and trade unionists."

The Senate Judiciary Committee will begin confirmation hearings on the nomination Sept. 10.

N.Y. police vow to crack down on protesters

NEW YORK (AP) — Racial tensions between blacks and Jews in a Brooklyn neighborhood seethed unabated Thursday after three nights of violence sparked by rumors that Jewish ambulance workers ignored badly injured black children. Police in riot gear patrolled the streets Thursday evening and Police Commissioner Lee Brown threatened mass arrests if necessary to restore control.

"We cannot, we will not tolerate lawlessness," Brown said at news conference. He promised a force of 2,000 officers in Crown Heights, home to about 300,000 people.

Mayor David Dinkins, the city's first black mayor, made his third visit in four days to the mostly black neighborhood where an ultra-Orthodox Hasidic Jewish sect has its world headquarters.

Groups of blacks and Hasidic Jews have battled each other in bottle- and rock-throwing melees every night since Monday, when a car driven by a Hasidic man struck two black children, fatally injuring one. Rampaging blacks killed a rabbinical student hours later.

"There has been death, there has been pain," Dinkins said. "Lawlessness and violence is not the answer to our problems."

On Wednesday's, Dinkins' pleas for peace were greeted by jeers and thrown bottles. Guards hustled the mayor away.

Blacks on Thursday again denounced city officials' failure to arrest the driver of the car that killed the black child.

Jewish groups called for city protection from violence that has assumed anti-Semitic overtones. Blacks have burned a home-made Israeli flag and carried signs bearing such slogans as: "Hitler didn't finish the job!"

On Monday night, 7-year-old Gavin Cato died after a car in an entourage of Lubavitcher sect leader Rebbe Menachem Mendel Schneerson went out of control and jumped onto a sidewalk. The car's driver, Yoseph Lisef, may have run a red light but hasn't been charged, police said.

Rioting erupted soon afterward. A visiting Australian rabbinical student was fatally stabbed in what police said was retaliation for the accident.

Broken glass and bricks littered the streets Thursday. A burned-out police van, gutted and smashed, sat near the crash site.

About 30 black people gathered at the corner, where people created a shrine to Gavin Cato.

Defense witness says Gorman kisses not 'pecks on cheek'

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Evangelist Marvin Gorman's counseling sessions always opened the same way — with a hug and a kiss, a New Orleans woman testified Thursday.

"When I walked in, he always got up from his desk and gave me a kiss. ... On the lips," Cheryl McConnell, speaking in a tiny, embarrassed voice, told jurors in Gorman's $90 million defamation suit against fellow televangelist Jimmy Swaggart.

"It was different than it was in the church. ... It wasn't on the cheek, a peck," she said.

Gorman claims that Swaggart and other defendants spread lies about his sex life to tear down his ministry and force him out of the Assemblies of God in 1986.

Mrs. McConnell, 47, is one of several women whose names were linked with Gorman's. She said she talked to some friends about her counseling sessions and was shocked by what they told her.

She wasn't allowed to say what that was, because it is hearsay. However, one of them, Jane Talbot, was scheduled to testify later.

Mrs. McConnell said she never had an affair with Gorman and did not realize at the time that the kisses were probably inappropriate.

She said he French-kissed her once. Did he ever show a physical reaction to the kisses, she was asked.

"One time I thought I felt some ..." her voice trailed off in an embarrassed laugh. She gestured downward. In a tiny voice she continued, "One time I thought I felt an erection."

The slender, attractive blonde said she saw Gorman for three years, starting shortly after her son died in 1978. She had made an appointment with another counselor at Gorman's church to try to work through her devastating depression.

Gorman, to whom she had blurted out her problem in a Kenner restaurant a few weeks earlier, came out of his office, recognized her and told the receptionist that he would counsel her, Mrs. McConnell said.

After they began discussing her marital and sex problems, she said, Gorman suggested that she consider a separation.

Later, she said, he got her a job counting collections in the church vault. She worked there with Lynda Savage, whose videotaped testimony about a 2½-year affair with Gorman was played to jurors earlier this week.

Gorman often called one or the other of them, Mrs. McConnell said. She said that when he called her, he would suggest some counseling, she would go over for a few minutes and he would hug and kiss her.

Those calls seemed to make Mrs. Savage jealous, Mrs. McConnell said. She said that when Gorman called her co-worker, Mrs. Savage would then leave for his office.

In another development, Judge Julian Bailes rejected motions by Capital City Press and Louisiana Broadcasting Corp. to end closed-door sessions.

DWI measure is threat to liberty

For years we have supported efforts to get intoxicated drivers off the city streets and highways of Texas, and to increase penalties for those convicted of driving while intoxicated. The sobering statistics of those killed and crippled in DWI-related accidents demanded that support.

But a bill passed Tuesday by the Texas Senate in the interest of saving lives now lost in DWI accidents goes too far in that it would compromise individual liberties. If it becomes law it would set a dangerous precedent on the road to chipping away our constitutionally-guaranteed freedoms.

Responding to the public concern about the number of DWI offenses and the number of DWI-related traffic deaths, the Texas Legislature in recent years approved stiffer penalties for drunk drivers. That was entirely appropriate action, as was the anti-drunk driving campaign successfully waged by Mothers Against Drunk Driving. Yet even a bill with good intent, such as the one ushered through the Senate by Sen. Judith Zaffirini, D-Laredo, can be detrimental if it conflicts with a basic right.

Sen. Zaffirini's bill does exactly that. Under its provisions, law enforcement officers would be granted the ability to confiscate the driver's license of a DWI suspect they had stopped if that person failed or refused to submit to a blood/alcohol test.

A similar bill introduced into the last session of the legislature died in the House after opponents said that taking a suspect's license prior to that person being found guilty was unconstitutional, but Ms. Zaffirini contends the law would be valid because there are similar laws in 29 other states.

"Nowhere in the constitution is it written that anyone has a right to drive," she says.

Perhaps not, but as we recall there is a protection — the Fourth Amendment of the U.S. Constitution — which asserts that no person "shall be compelled in any criminal case to be a witness against himself, nor be deprived of life, liberty, or property, without due process of law. . . ."

That phrase due process of law implies that a person will be charged with a crime or released. If that process is not followed, the state is effectively breaking the law of the United States. Due process is a protection as basic as the U.S. Constitution, of which it is an integral part.

If, on the other hand, the bill passed by the Senate had provided that the officer would arrest the suspect and take him before a magistrate, it would not conflict with the due process requirement.

It's incorrect to punish the many for the actions of the few, and that is what this bill is designed to do. It would be better for the public to demand accountability on the part of the law enforcement officers who stop obviously drunk drivers to arrest them and get them off the streets, then get a court restraining order to prevent them from driving until they get medical help for their alcohol problem. The public also should hold accountable those judges who allow drunk drivers back out on the streets to threaten — and sometimes kill — others in accidents.

The way not to address the drunk driving problem is by the approach of the Senate bill. Small or obscure rights are as important a part of the fabric of our society as anything. No matter how important the cause — even to the point of annually saving 150 lives and $400 million in medical and legal costs — it's not worth the erosion of our basic constitutional rights.

Oil firm pays for Congressional trip

WASHINGTON — Ten members of Congress and their entourage just got back from Alaska where they were supposed to take an impartial look at a wildlife refuge to decide whether it should be opened up for oil drilling. But the hosts for that impartial look were oil companies. Eight of the lawmakers who made the full tour stayed at an oil company lodge, flew in oil company helicopters and were led around by oil company tour guides.

Anderson

In the one instance when the travelers used taxpayers' money to get around, they managed to squander the money. The delegation flew to Alaska in a military C-9 at a cost of $67,774. Commercial air fare for the members of Congress would have been a fraction of that, but then they wouldn't have been able to take along six spouses and a bevy of staffers.

The hospitality of the oil companies was thinly disguised lobbying, and it may stack the deck against the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge where the Bush administration wants to put out a welcome mat to oil drilling. The congressional delegation spent two nights at plush corporate lodgings owned by British Petroleum in Prudhoe Bay. And they toured the wildlife refuge in helicopters owned by the Alaska Oil and Gas Association with tour guides from British Petroleum who tried to convince the lawmakers that oil drilling would leave only a small footprint on the wilderness wonderland.

A spokesman for the House Merchant Marine and Fisheries subcommittee, the group that made the tour, disagreed with environmentalists who said the trip was manipulated by oil companies. He noted that Rep. Gerry Studds, D-Mass., the chairman of the subcommittee and the leader of the delegation, is opposed to the drilling. And the spokesman said, "We were very careful to make sure the members were getting a balanced presentation."

But not careful enough to stay away from oil company favors. Our associate Jim Lynch asked why the delegation didn't pick a hotel without any strings attached, and the subcommittee spokesman said there was nowhere else to stay in Prudhoe Bay.

How about the Prudhoe Bay Hotel or the North Star Inn, only a short drive from the British Petroleum digs? They have about 800 rooms between them and both had vacancies. The spokesman said the corporate lodge was more convenient and claimed that all congressional delegations stay there. A clerk at the Prudhoe Bay Hotel had a better explanation: "We're not as fancy as what they have at British Petroleum."

The subcommittee has indicated that it will reimburse British Petroleum if it gets a bill, but it's not clear whether that bill will ever come. A British Petroleum spokesman told us that catering to the needs of Congress was simply "an opportunity to show with pride how we do our business up here."

No one is talking about paying back the Alaska Oil and Gas Association for the helicopters. They were a freebie arranged by Interior Secretary Manuel Lujan.

In an effort to get a balanced presentation, Rep. Studds insisted that British Petroleum allow two environmentalists from the Wilderness Society and the North Alaskan Environmental Center to come to Prudhoe Bay and give a slide show.

WILLIAM MURCHISON

Environmentalists often scream too shrilly

Environmentalists, who've been scaring the pants off us for years, got a good fright themselves the other day. The New York Times reported that federal scientists are backing away from their belief — expressed hitherto with steeliness of manner — in Killer Dioxin.

Murchison

"Exposure to the chemical, once thought to be much more hazardous than chain smoking," the Times says, "is now considered by some experts to be no more risky than spending a week sunbathing." The Environmental Protection Agency is looking into the matter.

What has happened? Scientists today know more about dioxin — a byproduct of the work performed at municipal incinerators, paper pulp mills and hazardous waste dumps — than they formerly did. They have rethought their formerly unshakable assumptions.

The federal scientist largely responsible for the forced evacuation, in 1982-83, of Times Beach, Mo. — after high levels of dioxin were detected there — now thinks the evacuation may have been needless. If dioxin is a carcinogen, he says, "it's a very weak carcinogen."

The new revelations do not restore the homes of 2,239 people obliged to leave Times Beach on the official presumption that their lives were at risk. (The buyout cost state and federal taxpayers $37 million.)

Nor do the revelations restore the $100 million spent over the past decade cleaning up dioxin sites in the Times Beach area. Syntex Corp. is scheduled to spend another $150 million, as part of a court settlement, tearing down Times Beach, shoving it into special landfills and building a park. The new thinking on dioxin doesn't affect the settlement. Sorry.

Anybody can make a mistake, certainly. The trouble is that U.S. environmentalists (in collaboration with health nuts) make mistake after mistake as they foretell catastrophe after catastrophe. If it were just dioxin, that would be one thing. It is not just dioxin.

A couple of years back, it was Alar, the dreaded growth spray used on apples, which Ed Bradley of 60 Minutes called "the most potent cancer-causing agent in our food supply." The evidence on which Bradley based this claim turned out to be vastly inflated, but apple crops were destroyed in order to stem the Alar panic.

Many Americans, until recently, trembled at the sight of a scrambled egg, with its nightmare potential for cholesterol buildup. Latest medical evidence suggests that eggs are nowhere near as dangerous as formerly thought.

Anti-smoking zealots have pretty well cleansed public interiors of The Evil Weed despite continuing controversy over the effects of "secondary" smoke (that smoke inhaled by the non-smoker). McDonald's last year dropped polystyrene food packaging in response to environmentalist complaints, although a study at the University of Vancouver concludes that polystyrene coffee cups are kinder to the environment than paper cups.

The biggest environmental fraud is global warming. Scientific measurements demonstrate that the temperature on earth has hardly changed during the past century. In a British documentary, "The Greenhouse Conspiracy," scientists smash, one by one, the theory's "four pillars" (e.g., computer models can't even predict today's temperatures accurately, far less a distant tomorrow's).

The point is — what? That many environmentalists are frauds? "Careless and shrill" says it better.

Those who scoff automatically when an alarm sounds are like the mayor in "Jaws," telling the citizenry there's no shark out there, go have a good time. But this isn't the only beastly tale that comes to mind. What of "The Boy Who Cried Wolf"? Environmentalists frequently proceed on such slender evidence, and always with such an air of righteousness, that they end up many times with egg (that horrid thing!) on their faces.

Seniors have already paid for Medicare's benefits

Regarding the article in the Midland Reporter-Telegram recently about the hospital tax hearing, the obvious reaction to the statements made concerning Medicare recipients is one shared by many seniors who feel that this is a slander, or at the least a misstatement about Medicare patients being the reason for the hospital's large deficit.

Please by informed: we seniors are not on Medicare by choice; rather, at age 65, the magic number at which our business, corporation or whatever tells us "It's all over" we then receive our notice that Medicare becomes our basic insurance carrier.

Our Medicare insurance policy premium is deducted from our Social Security; therefore, believe that Medicare is not a welfare program but a paid insurance plan.

Medicaid, on the other hand, is a state assistance program for those without insurance and who are unable to pay, or a supplemental policy. The program is completely separate from Medicare. They are two totally separate entities.

Perhaps our younger generation needs to be educated to the fact that they, too, will fall into the "senior" category sooner than they think and, yes, Medicare will follow.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Friday, Aug. 23, the 235th day of 1991. There are 130 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Aug. 23, 1927, Italian-born anarchists Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti were executed in Boston for the murders of two men during a 1920 payroll robbery in a case that had drawn widespread controversy.

CHARLEY REESE

Different cultures perceive time differently

Time, as you may know, is a human invention. Being a human invention, people perceive it differently from culture to culture.

In our culture, which can be broadly called European, our view of time has been shaped by the industrial revolution. Forced to shape our lives around the schedule set by the factory, we have become super-conscious of time, of scheduling, of deadlines, and of planning.

Reese

Back in the days when I was regular reader of the Harvard Business Review, a big fad was what somebody called critical path analysis. This consisted of breaking down the component parts of a larger task and scheduling them minutely so that all the parts would be completed in a sequence that would result in the project being finished in the shortest possible time. That and all the rest of the time management techniques seem perfectly natural and logical to us, but we forget the operative words are "to us." Other people think we are weird or perhaps crazy.

So what? Well, so not all that much. Differences are the spice of life, but for the sake of our own Western planning, we should avoid the mistake of projecting our time values onto other people.

For example, to us, the Gulf War is over. It started on a particular date and ended on a certain date. Everything proceeded on a definite schedule.

In our minds, we have finished that project and moved onto other subjects.

In the Arab world, however, time is perceived quite differently. As Gene Lindsey put it so well in his book, "Saudi Arabia," the Arabic language " . . . uses an imperfect verb form which conveys the continuous presence, indefinite future, and timeless past experience."

In the minds of the Arab world, things tend neither to begin nor end with Western precision. Many of those people are not finished with the Gulf War nor do they see it as being over. They do not even see the recent battle in the same terms as we do.

A man, for example, who feels a need to exact vengeance will not think he has failed and as a result forget it, if he has not acted by now or by next year or by the year after. It is only important to act and whenever he does, it will perfectly satisfy his need for vengeance without regard for the passage of time.

Too often, because we project our values onto other people, we think that we can throw rocks into ponds without causing ripples. Our minds are disjointed, flitting from one subject to the next, while the world is a seamless sea in which the current of action-reaction never ceases to move.

We planted a crop of violence and destruction and you need not think we will not reap that harvest just because the crop isn't growing on our time schedule.

That can't be undone. We can only change the present. One day hopefully we will see the utter hypocrisy of prattling about peace while waging war and peddling the wares of war; of preaching to others about peaceful resolution of disputes while settling our own by brute force; of talking about a new world order while acting by the ancient law of the jungle; of claiming to respect the law and justice while applying a double-standard to first this group and then that one.

Once we tried as a nation to live with the evil of slavery but it festered and in time nearly destroyed the nation, killing half a million Americans and plunging the South into decades of poverty and bitterness.

I do not believe we can live with an unjust foreign policy that is a thinly disguised pursuit of other people's resources backed up by military force. The snake of slavery bit us. So will the snakes of greed and hypocrisy.

When? Throw away your watch. The universe and most of the world outside of European culture does not wake up to the shrill demand of the factory whistle or adjust its life to suit the factory time clock. The people who feel they owe us a death don't carry daily reminder charts.

Thousands on East Coast await resumption of power

BOSTON (AP) — Hurricane Bob is gone but far from forgotten in parts of the Northeast, where thousands got by without electricity for the fourth day Thursday and some had no water.

Asked what she missed most, Warwick, R.I., 8-year-old Kathy Smith said: "Nintendo — and the toilet."

Nearly 200,000 utility customers from New York's Long Island to Maine remained without power. In chic Newport, R.I., tourists took a mansion tour by candlelight.

Bob bashed the Northeast on Monday with winds to 115 mph. Hundreds of boats were pushed ashore, trees blew down and heavy rain brought flooding. Sixteen deaths were reported from the Carolinas to Maine, where the storm finally dipped below hurricane strength — sustained winds of at least 74 mph.

In Warwick, residents with electric sewage pumps found they could not use toilets without the waste backing up into basements and yards.

Kathy's mother, Joan Smith, had to buy a portable toilet, and her toilet-trained 2-year-old son was back in diapers.

"With three kids you need a flushable toilet," Smith lamented.

Neighbor Ida Wryerostic took a more rustic approach: "I've got an old bucket from my mother from years back and we've been using that."

Astors' Beechwood, one of Newport's famed mansions that had been closed, reopened the old-fashioned way, with candles.

"Because we're set in the year 1891, this works perfectly," spokeswoman Carole Brownell said. "Electricity was rather new then and they were having blackouts like this all the time."

In Carver, Mass., which has no municipal water service, 7,000 residents rely on electric pumps to get water from wells. Thursday, 2,465 homes remained without power.

Selectman Frank Kane said he was becoming a bit too fragrant for his wife, until he snuck a shower in the town's police station.

"My wife was quite pleased," Kane said. "The odor decreased somewhat."

On Long Island, the sign on the door of an East Hampton hardware store summed up local sentiment: "Frustrated and without power."

The hand-scribbled sign at the 62-year-old East End Hardware store continued: "Tomorrow we will have the following: flashlights, batteries, matches, candles, kerosene, and coolers."

About 100,000 Massachusetts customers remained in the dark Thursday, about 71,000 of those on Cape Cod. Another 70,800 were powerless on Long Island and 41,000 suffered in Rhode Island. About 16,000 in Connecticut had no power, while 13,000 remained affected in Maine.

Damage estimates and other work leading to requests for federal disaster declarations were in the works regionwide.

The storm hit the poor especially hard. Salvation Army workers in southeastern Massachusetts and the Cape were feeding low-income families whose food had spoiled in their refrigerators.

"It's hectic. There's no question this is from the hurricane," said Capt. Douglas Jones of the New Bedford Salvation Army. "We have two full-time staff. One of my caseworkers was going on vacation this week, but came back to help."

Robert Sheets, director of the National Hurricane Center in Florida, flew to New England to inspect damage in here and evaluate forecast accuracy.

Ex-Air Force official pleads guilty in probe

WASHINGTON (AP) — A former high-ranking Air Force official pleaded guilty Thursday to conspiracy and bribe-taking in the five-year investigation into Pentagon procurement dubbed "Operation Ill Wind."

Victor D. Cohen, once the deputy assistant secretary of the Air Force in charge of buying tactical command, control, communications and computer systems, pleaded guilty before U.S. District Judge Claude Hilton in Alexandria, Va.

"Operation Ill Wind," headed by the U.S. attorney's office in Alexandria, has led to the conviction of 45 defense company executives, Pentagon officials and independent defense consultants, as well as five corporations, said Assistant U.S. Attorney Joseph Aronica.

Cohen, 55, agreed to plead guilty to one count of accepting a bribe as a government official and one count of conspiracy to defraud the United States, commit bribery and conversion of government property.

He faces a maximum of 20 years in prison, and a fine of $500,000 when he is sentenced Dec. 6. The plea agreement requires him to cooperate with authorities.

Aronica said the government expected Cohen to "cooperate fully with us and to assist us in the continuing investigation into fraud in defense procurement."

Melvyn Paisley, an assistant secretary of the Navy, was the highest ranking Pentagon official to plead guilty in the investigation.

He faces up to 30 years in prison and fines up to $750,000 when he's sentenced Sept. 27 on charges of conspiracy to defraud the government, bribery and theft of government property.

"Vic Cohen was a deputy assistant secretary of the Air Force," Aronica said. "He's just one step below Mel Paisley's level on the Air Force side. He's a muckety-muck."

The Ill Wind probe began in the summer of 1986 but wasn't revealed until June 14, 1988, when federal agents searched the offices and homes of defense firms, consultants and Pentagon officials in 12 states and the nation's capital. Cohen's Pentagon office and home in Potomac, Md., were searched that day.

A week later, then-Defense Secretary Frank Carlucci ordered that the half-dozen Pentagon officials targeted by the probe, including Cohen, be reassigned to jobs not involved with military procurement.

Cohen resigned from the Pentagon on Tuesday, said Air Force Maj. Robert J. Perry. His final job was special assistant to the deputy assistant secretary of the Air Force for acquisitions.

According to court papers, Cohen improperly helped clients of defense consultant William Galvin by wrongly influencing procurement decisions and improperly providing sensitive information.

In return, the papers said, Galvin paid $123,100 to Kyle H. Woodbury, a friend of Cohen's. The money was intended for Cohen's benefit, the papers said, adding that he was to receive additional money from Galvin that had been provided by Loral Electronics Corp. executive Louis Oberndorf.

Cohen also received bribes from Charles F. Gardner, an employee of Sperry and its successor, Unisys, the papers said.

Galvin was sentenced to 32 months in prison after pleading guilty to conspiracy, bribery and tax evasion. Gardner was sentenced to 32 months in prison and fined $40,000 after he pleaded guilty to charges of bribing Pentagon officials.

Loral Electronics paid $5.77 million in fines and civil penalties after pleading guilty to charges that a subsidiary tried to influence Cohen improperly.

Report: Mandatory sentences don't end disparities

WASHINGTON (AP) — Mandatory sentences for some federal crimes — such as drug and weapons offenses — lead to the very kinds of sentencing disparities they are intended to reduce, the U.S. Sentencing Commission said Thursday.

Blacks are sentenced more harshly than whites or Hispanics under the mandatory system, while street-level drug couriers get long terms more often than high-level drug distributors or importers, the commission said in a congressionally mandated report.

The report backed up commission Chairman William W. Wilkins Jr.'s contention that Congress should rely less on enacting new minimum terms and instead help the commission fine-tune its own sentencing guidelines.

"The commission's research shows that increased reliance on mandatory minimum sentencing statutes may reintroduce much of the disparity that the Congress created the Sentencing Commission to reduce," Wilkins said in a statement accompanying the report.

"To administer sentences that are fair and proportionate to the seriousness of the offense, we need the precision of a scalpel, not the rough cut of a pruning saw," Wilkins said.

Congress has enacted 60 mandatory sentencing laws since 1986. But the report said that more than nine-tenths of almost 60,000 mandatory sentences imposed from 1984 to 1990 were under four laws: drug possession; manufacture or distribution of drugs; import or export of drugs, and carrying a firearm during a drug-related or violent crime.

Those laws set specific minimum terms for certain crimes — in drug cases, terms are based on the amount of drug involved.

Federal judges have been bound by the commission's sentencing guidelines since November 1987. The guidelines are more complicated and apply to more crimes, ranging from drug-selling to embezzlement. Terms are made shorter or longer depending on the circumstances of the case, and the system also aims to eliminate racial bias.

The mandatory sentences are not applied uniformly for several reasons, the report said. It's up to prosecutors to decide if a defendant will be charged under a law requiring a mandatory sentence, and the defendant could wind up being convicted or pleading guilty to a lesser offense.

Also, the defendant can win a shorter term by turning in accomplices to the prosecutor.

During fiscal 1990, the study said, 67.7 percent of the black defendants were sentenced at the mandatory level or above, compared with 54 percent of the whites and 57.1 percent of the Hispanics. The others received terms below the mandatory level.

On the other hand, a person's role in a drug offense often did not match the sentence handed out, the report said. A street-level distributor was sentenced at the mandatory level 69.8 percent of the time, while higher-level distributors received mandatory minimum terms 62 percent of the time and top-level drug importers received those terms 59.9 percent of the time.

People sentenced under the mandatory laws are spending much more time in prison, as Congress intended, the report said.

But the mandatory sentences have a "cliff effect," it said. Someone convicted of possessing 5 grams of crack cocaine would face up to one year in prison, while a person convicted of possessing 5.1 grams would face a minimum of five years.

In addition, the report found differences among the 12 judicial circuits. The 2nd Circuit, including New York, Connecticut and Vermont, and the 10th Circuit, including Colorado, Kansas, New Mexico, Oklahoma, Utah and Wyoming, showed that most sentences imposed were below the mandatory minimum.

Other circuits showed as many as 80 percent of their defendants subject to mandatory minimum terms actually receiving such sentences, the report said.

However, Paul Kamenar, executive legal director of the conservative Washington Legal Foundation, said Thursday he believed the sentencing commission's own standards were unfair.

Rep. Charles Schumer, D-N.Y., who chairs the House Crime and Criminal Justice subcommittee, said he backs mandatory sentences but added that the report shows "effectiveness is diminished when U.S. attorneys misuse them with inconsistent, unfair and racially discriminatory applications."

Federal audit finds 25 million census errors

WASHINGTON (AP) — Census-takers made up to 25.7 million errors in 1990, congressional auditors estimated Thursday.

The General Accounting Office issued a report saying millions of Americans were counted twice, listed as living in the wrong place, counted when they shouldn't have been or not counted at all.

The errors caused the count to fall 5.3 million short of the true population, according to the Census Bureau's own estimate.

The GAO report said the shortfall "obscures the true magnitude of the error in the census because, while millions of persons were missed by the census, millions of other persons were improperly counted."

The GAO's estimate amounts to more than 10 percent of the 248.7 million Americans counted last year.

The Census Bureau's own error-checking shows blacks and Hispanics were most likely to be missed by census-takers.

Commerce Secretary Robert Mosbacher in July decided against correcting the census. He said efforts to do so might backfire and make the count less accurate.

That decision drew protest from big cities and states that stood to have higher population counts if the census were corrected. More than 30 governments and organizations have joined in lawsuits seeking to force the government to replace the census count with an estimate.

The GAO in June had issued preliminary findings that the census contained 14.1 million errors. The number doesn't include mistakes such as counting people at the wrong address.

The agency's final report broadened the definition of an error to include mistakes such as counting a family as living in their Florida vacation condo rather than their home in suburban Detroit.

Where a person is counted as living is important because the census influences political power and billions of dollars in federal spending. The higher an area's population, the more representatives it sends to Congress and the state legislature, and the more federal aid it receives.

Scouts to shelve Confederate flag

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — Boy Scouts of America is dropping the Confederate flag from its insignias in the South after an 18-year-old white member protested its use was offensive to blacks.

In response to a letter from Paul Hudson, Chief Scout Executive Ben H. Love announced the organization no longer would use the Confederate flag during official activities.

"The recommended flag for display is the flag of the United States of America," Love said Aug. 6.

The flag had been used in ceremonies and on badges and other memorabilia across the South and was prominently displaye1 at annual meetings of the Dixie Fellowship attended by honor scouts from South Carolina, Georgia and North Carolina.

"The amount in which the Confederate flag is shown during these events is very prominent," said Hudson, a Scout since age 7. "No one's wearing white hoods on their heads, but it almost looks like a resegregation rally or something. It's really a pervading element."

Hudson said he wrote a letter of protest to the national offices in Irving, Texas, because he believed the flag discouraged blacks from participating in the Boy Scouts.

The national office had received several complaints about the Confederate flag's use, but it was Hudson's letter that spurred the official change, Blake Lewis, national Boy Scouts spokesman, said Wednesday.

'Strange stuff' up for sale

■ City to auction off items it no longer needs and items found or confiscated by police.

By Debbie Lincecum
Staff Writer

An ambulance body, videotaped movies, a dump truck, baseball bats, a high school ring and 10 lawn mowers: the city of Midland auction will offer nothing if not variety.

"There's a lot of strange stuff," said Mark Phillips, director of equipment and materials management who also coordinates city sales. This auction, set for Saturday beginning at 10 a.m. at the city garage, will feature 64 vehicles of various sizes among the loot available for purchase.

"We'll sell the vehicles first," Phillips said, indicating row after row of Ford LTDs, a few vans and pickup trucks already lined up at the garage. "Then the other stuff will go, and the whole thing should be over by 1:30 (p.m.)"

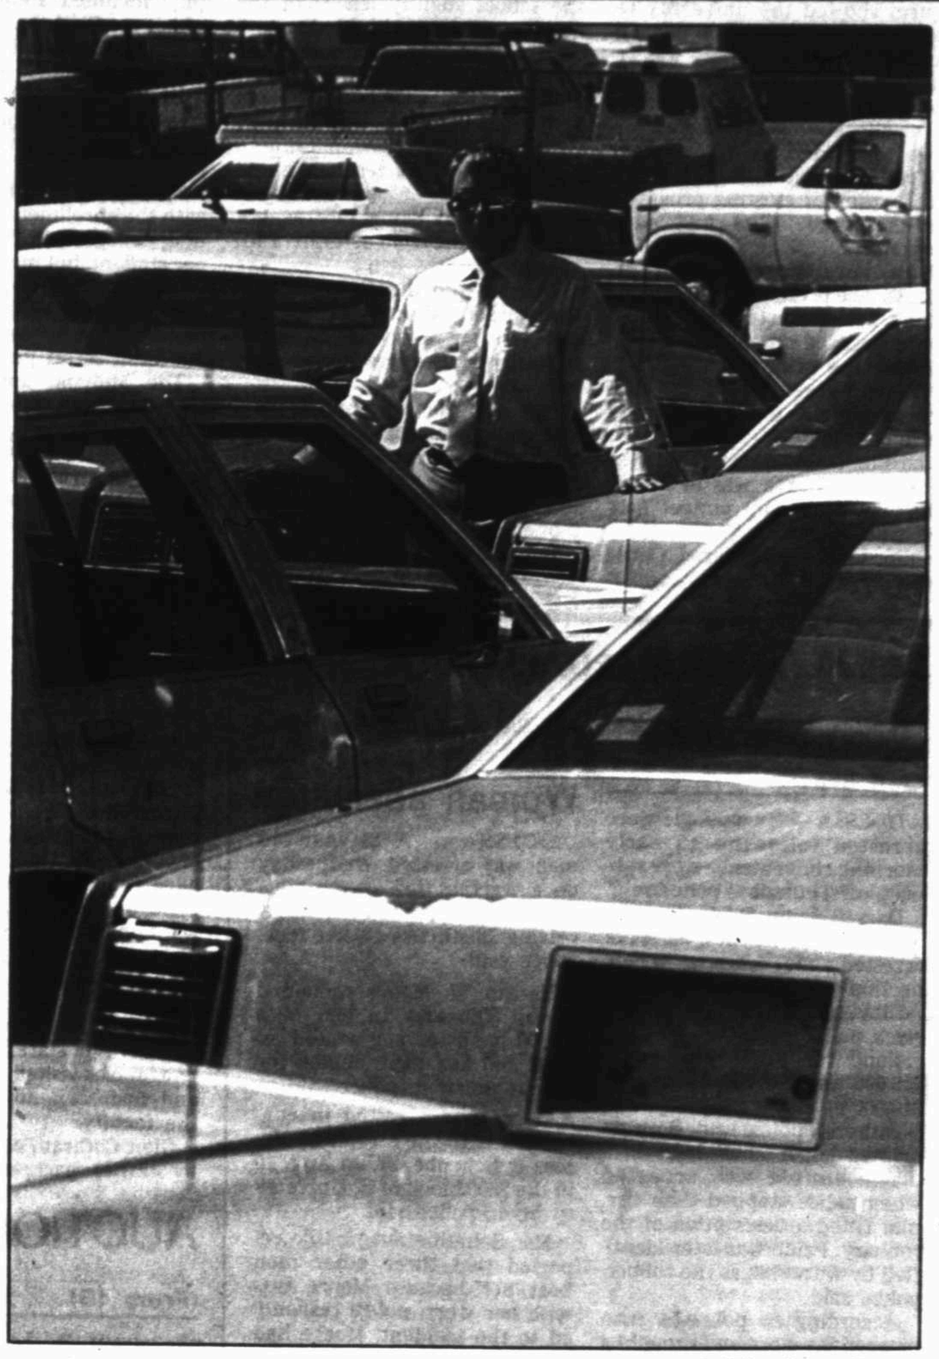

Buyers should be as varied as the wares. Phillips said local and area citizens are joined by "big buyers" representing large companies or other cities. The auctioneer, Rene Bates of McKinney, attracts a crowd of auction devotees each year as well.

Most of the miscellaneous items were confiscated or found by Midland police officers. That list is as diverse as an egg beater, a car ashtray, three T-shirts and one brick. Jewelry, tools, television sets and clothing were found and never claimed, as was a wheelchair and a maid's costume.

Others are leftovers from several city departments. They include desks, paper, typewriters, pagers, radios, water fountains, chairs, traffic signals and mini-blinds.

Auction-goers are encouraged to arrive early to inspect the offerings. Gates at the garage, located at 1500 Orchard Lane, will open at 7 a.m. Phillips suggested parking in

Legislators cut UTPB's state funding

■ The new four-year school will receive $562,524 less than in the 1991-92 budget.

By John Powers
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — State legislators approved an increase for The University of Texas of the Permian Basin from a two-year to a four-year school in the regular session, but cut back on the money available for the school for the next two years during the special budget session.

Midland-area junior colleges fared fairly well, however, in the financial cuts of the 1992-93 state budget.

While some universities came out of the budget process with minor damage, and some South Texas schools fared very well after legislators previously had ignored their needs, Odessa's UTPB may have to do its growing without much financial help from the state.

Legislators approved a record $58.98 billion state budget on Aug. 13, the last day of a 30-day special session. Although the budget represents a 20 percent increase in spending, it still is short of money needed to maintain the current level of state services because of inflation.

The budget included $250 million more for higher education than in 1990-91, but $100 million less than needed for current services.

UTPB will get $12,238,509 in state aid for the 1992-93 biennium, plus an estimated $882,683 from the state Employee Retirement System to help pay for group health insurance for staff members.

The Legislative Budget Board also estimated UTPB will take in $1,727,118 in tuition and fees. This would bring the total budget to $14,848,310. By comparison, the current two-year school budget

UTPB seeks donations for scholarships

Staff Report

The University of Texas of the Permian Basin exceeded its goal of amassing $10,000 in donations to fund freshman scholarships.

However, the university is seeking more donations to fund additional scholarships.

About 123 freshman applications had been accepted for admittance by Thursday afternoon, according to Travis Woodard, UTPB spokesperson. Freshman registration at the university is Sept. 3.

A freshman scholarship fund campaign is being coordinated by the UT Alumni Association, the Odessa Chamber of Commerce and Friends of UTPB.

Residents voice concerns about metallizing plant

By Debbie Lincecum
Staff Writer

A meeting of concerned citizens in a south Midland County neighborhood Thursday turned into a confrontation with the owner of a nearby metallizing plant.

About 40 residents of the area around the intersection of West County Road 130 and South County Road 1205 met to protest Ted Baughn's metallizing plant, Lee-Co Coating, located at 2406 W. County Road 130. Baughn has applied to the Texas Air Control Board for a permit to emit air contaminants including nickel, iron and chromium.

"Our only choice is to send letters to Austin telling them we don't want it here," area resident Harold Semple told the group. Residents questioned the effect the plant's emissions may already be having on their health.

"I was the first one out here," said Carl McDaniel. "Then they came out here and put that thing up and tried to run me out."

McDaniel, like several others present, said the plant's emissions have aggravated existing respiratory problems. He said they called the meeting after seeing a notice of Baughn's application in the Reporter-Telegram.

"We wanted to see how everybody feels about this," McDaniel said. "Something needs to be done. He's been out there all this time without a permit."

Baughn and his plant manager, Randy Mertz, attended the meeting briefly, prompting a heated confrontation with several area residents.

Baughn explained his company's purpose is to coat and paint pumps that are used in oil field and water pumping operations. He said the three-step process involves first cleaning the pump by sandblasting it, then spraying it with nickel and finally painting it.

In his application for a permit, Baughn wrote that his plant was not currently permitted, although he told area residents it has been operating for six years in their neighborhood. The application says a permit must be approved before any actual work is begun on the proposed plant. In a space for planned construction start and end dates, Baughn wrote "now."

At the meeting, Baughn said he had not previously needed a permit, but that the air control board had "changed the rules." Mertz said the plant had been "exempt" until recently.

Baughn also said they planned to add a new process to their work that would require a permit.

Residents said they feared emissions and contaminated sand from the plant would seep into the ground water, causing problems similar to those in a West Odessa neighborhood, where wastewater from a chrome-plating shop is

McCamey taxpayers won't be paying as much for hospital

■ McCamey Hospital District board members lower tax rate now that hospital is self-sustaining.

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

McCAMEY — While taxes most everywhere else seem to be going up, they are coming down here.

At least, that's the case with the McCamey Hospital District, where the tax rate is dropping 2 percent below the effective tax rate and 8 percent below the 1990 tax rate largely due to a 5 percent increase in the hospital's tax base, which is almost $382 million.

"It is an effort to give back to the taxpayers following their support over the past two years," said Doug Hopkins, chairman of the hospital board. The board had been raising taxes in the last couple of years to bring in enough revenue to get the hospital "out of the red" and to become as self-supporting as practical.

The drop in the tax rate is an unprecedented move by the board, noted Frank Beaman, the hospital's administrator whose management helped the hospital go from a negative cash flow to a positive cash flow.

"With the community support on the increase," Beaman said, "we will be able to continue working at becoming more self-sustaining. The more self-sustaining we become, the less tax money we will need."

The hospital district's board governs the McCamey Hospital and Convalescent Center.

The hospital district, which follows the same boundaries as the McCamey Independent School District, is to adopt a tax rate of 49.54 cents per $100 valuation. The new rate includes 44.55 cents for hospital maintenance and operations and 4.99 cents to pay off indebtedness. The effective tax rate is 50.55

Reptiles Unlimited: Store where customer can buy snake, soda

By Larry Zelisko

ABILENE (AP) — It seems kinda strange that a place named Reptiles Unlimited would have a sign at the door saying "Snakes and Pets Not Allowed in Store."

But then, Reptiles Unlimited is no ordinary store. It's a combination gas station, convenience store — and snake shop.

"This is just a hole-in-the-wall business," proprietor Lee Roy Higginbottom says. "When people catch a snake they bring him in. I buy them and ship them all over the United States."

The purple-and-white buildings off State Highway 36 a few miles outside the Abilene city limits catch motorists' attention. And the snake displays attract customers to the store.

"The kids go out and look at the snakes," Higginbottom says. "The adults, especially the women, usually stay inside the store."

People like the rattlesnakes the best, he says. He has several varieties, including black tail and rock rattlers from the Davis Mountains.

His main business, however, is not showing off snakes — it's selling them. He sells them to "jobbers" across the country, shipping them by air by the hundreds, he says.

"Never had one get loose yet," he adds.

This is the slow time of year for the snake-selling business, he says. The number of snakes on display also depends on the time of year.

"There's a place like this on the interstate (near Weatherford), but he charges admission and doesn't

Thomas gets roasted

Mayor Carroll Thomas laughs at one of the many barbs hurled his way during Thursday's "roasting" at the Downtown Rotary Club meeting.

Rotarians joke with Thomas

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

The perpetual construction on Wadley Street and "synchronization" of city stop lights were popular fodder to poke jabs at Mayor Carroll Thomas at a Thursday Rotarian luncheon.

Rotarians gathered at Midland Center during the noon hour to "roast" the surprised mayor.

Parker Humes began the humorous fete by giving the audience a broad hint about the subject selected for the roast.

"He is a geologist who has a paper route," he said.

Fellow Rotarian David Grimes poked fun at the failed attempt at drilling for oil made by the former geologist. "When you see his highly sophisticated exploration equipment, you will understand why he is now a stockbroker and a mayor," Grimes said, as he pulled a divining rod (shaped from a tree branch) out of his sack.

Grimes also displayed another alleged exploration tool of Thomas' — a jar of oil which was labeled "You are looking for this."

"You are not looking for this," the Rotarian said, holding aloft a jar of salt water.

Others joined in the fun.

DEATHS

Patsy Yeager

Services for Patsy Goss Yeager, longtime Midlander and wife of a petroleum pioneer, are set for 10:30 a.m. Saturday at Episcopal Church of the Holy Trinity with the Rev. Allen Whitman officiating. Burial will follow at Resthaven Memorial Park with Ellis Funeral Home in charge of arrangements.

Yeager

Mrs. Yeager died Wednesday evening at her home.

She was born on Aug. 17, 1901, in Sedan, Kan., and was christened Martha Harrison Goss by her parents, George Washington and Clara Wait Goss.

She was reared in Pawhuska, Okla., where her father was a physician. She graduated from Pawhuska High School in 1919 and attended the New England Conservatory of Music in Boston, the University of Kansas and the University of Arizona. She taught school in Pawhuska and Nelagoney, Okla., prior to her marriage.

She married Wilbur Arthur Yeager Sr., on Thanksgiving Day of 1926 in Pawhuska. At that time, Yeager was an oil scout for Prairie Oil & Gas Co. The couple moved to Midland in December 1926 when he was sent here to open a Prairie office.

"It was a shock coming from the green hills of Oklahoma to a dusty town in West Texas," Mrs. Yeager was once quoted in a magazine interview, "but I haven't regretted it for one moment."

In 1936, Yeager joined with J.M. "Army" Armstrong to form the independent oil company of Yeager & Armstrong, a partnership which continued until Armstrong's death in 1980.

Mr. and Mrs. Yeager were a driving force behind Midland's early-day social, civic and church life.

Mrs. Yeager was a charter member of the Episcopal Church of the Holy Trinity, Permian Civic Ballet (later known as Ballet Midland), Midland Symphony Guild, Minuet Club, Midland Petroleum Club, First Thursday Club and the Midland Woman's Club.

She also was a member of Midland Country Club, Las Manos of Museum of the Southwest and Sigma Kappa sorority alumnae. She served in various capacities for the Women of the Church and the Altar Guild at Holy Trinity Church.

She was preceded in death by her husband in 1985.

Survivors include two sons, Wilbur Arthur Yeager Jr., and George Goss Yeager, both of Midland; one daughter, Patsy Yeager Hinchey of Denver, Colo.; one sister, Laura Goss Thompson of Casper, Wyo.; 10 grandchildren; two great-grandchildren; four nieces and three nephews.

Pallbearers will be John Douglas Hinchey, David Scott Yeager, Wilbur Arthur Yeager III, Donald W. Thompson (Lt. Col.-ret.), N.C. Dragisic and Henry Baumgartner.

The family requests memorials be directed to the Episcopal Church of the Holy Trinity, Hospice or a favorite charity.

Julia Winchell

ODESSA — Services for Julia "June" Winchell, 87, are set for 2 p.m. today at Immanuel Baptist Church with the Rev. Bill Cook officiating. Burial will follow in Sunset Memorial Gardens under the direction of Hubbard-Kelly Funeral Home.

She died Tuesday at a local hospital.

She was born Aug. 19, 1904, in Olden, where she married Ed Winchell in 1924. He preceded her in death in 1976.

Mrs. Winchell worked as a clerk at McDonalds Deparment Store for 35 years.

She was the last surviving charter member of Immanuel Baptist Church, where she taught Sunday School for 30 years.

Survivors include one daughter, Mary Jo Martin of New Braunfels; two brothers, Lomar Hunt of Fort Worth and Doyle T. Hunt of Olden; one sister, Bea Seals of Amarillo; nine grandchildren and 14 great-grandchildren.

Memorials should be directed to Immanuel Baptist Church.

Durward Swails

Services for Durward Swails of Midland have been set for 3 p.m. today at the Ellis Chapel with the Rev. Curtis Hollis officiating. Burial will follow at Resthaven Memorial Park with Ellis Funeral Home in charge of arrangements.

He died Wednesday at a local hospital.

Survivors include his wife, Dorothy Swails of Midland; two sons, James Louis Cook of Houston and John Henry Cook of Midland; one daughter, Jean Swindell of Midland; two brothers, Dayton Swails of Midland and Derrell Swails of Odessa; three sisters, Ona Thomas, Aldis Wade and Dorotha Ruple, all of Midland; seven grandchildren; six great-grandchildren and several nieces and nephews.

The family requests memorials be directed to the Allison Cancer Center.

Mildred O'Brien

Memorial services for Mildred O'Brien of Midland will be set at a later time.

O'Brien

She died Tuesday at her residence.

Survivors include a daughter, Margaret Luce of Midland; one sister, Pauline Taylor of Sacramento, Calif.; and two nephews.

Mary Wesberry

Services for Mary Wesberry of Midland have been set for 11 a.m. Saturday at the Ellis Chapel with Dr. Larry Ashlock, pastor of Crestview Baptist Church, officiating. Burial will follow at Resthaven Memorial Park with Ellis Funeral Home in charge of arrangements.

She died Wednesday at her home.

Her nephews will serve as pallbearers.

UTPB: MC's budget up from last year for 1990-91, which ends Aug. 31, is $15,310,834.

Although the allocated funds will amount to $562,524 less than the last biennium, UTPB officials' figures showed the university requires $20,702,145 for the next biennium. So the university was actually allocated almost $6 million less in funds than was submitted.

The allocation was based on formulas provided by the Higher Education Coordinating Board for full funding of existing programs and salaries, plus any new programs.

However, Warren Gardner, UTPB's vice president of academic affairs, noted that tuition and fees are formulated on enrollment figures for the prior year.

"These figures would not take into account our four-year status," Gardner said.

Gardner added that UTPB President Duane Leach was in Austin Thursday discussing budget matters with legislators.

Other local schools fared a little better.

Midland College will have a total budget of $11,995,910. This compares with $11,191,237 for 1990-91. College officials had asked the state for $16,354,161.

Legislators slightly increased aid for Odessa College, but gave the school slightly less than the figures officials submitted.

OC's operating budget for the next two years will total $17,952,418, compared with $16,558,178 in 1990-91. The college's total budget is $24.9 million.

"We would have received about $526,000 more if we had been funded at the same rate as last year," said OC President Phil Speegle.

Officials at both MC and OC said that the state allocations were better than the worse-case scenarios of initial budgets proposed by the state.

"It's not what we wanted," said MC spokesperson H.A. Tuck. "It's less than what we had for the last budget. So, essentially, we are teaching more students with less money."

Bob Phillips, MC vice president of fiscal affairs, said the state's final version of the budget "is a vast improvement over the initial budget — the available revenue budget — put together in the regular session."

Phillips said the final budget, dubbed the "current services budget," included additional monies which credited the college for increased enrollment.

"We are much more pleased with the final version. We will be able to put an adequate budget together which will maintain current services."

Speegle, OC president, said that with the enrollment credit calculation, colleges will "get less money per student, but more net dollars."

"We had figured that we weren't going to get that enrollment increase," he said. "It was our best, safest guess."

The Midland and Odessa colleges also both raised their tuition rates this summer. Despite a loss of $40,000 in taxes from mineral values, OC trustees voted to keep the college's current tax rate.

Big Spring's Howard College actually will get more than expected.

Howard's total budget will be $14,460,361. In 1990-91, the campus got $10,143,424. Howard officials had asked for $13,314,130.

These are approximate figures, a financial planning official at the Higher Education Coordinating Board said, because schools must confirm the number of employees they have on their health insurance plan and apply for money from the retirement system.

Also, tuition figures are estimates based on enrollment trends, and the final amount from local tuition and fees can vary by a large amount.

Legislators approved a tuition increase as part of the tax bill, which will raise the cost to students from $20 to $24 a semester hour beginning in the fall of 1992, and gradually raise it to $32 in 1996.

MC will adopt its budget during its regular Tuesday board meeting.

Store robbery

Staff Reports

ODESSA — Two people were arrested following an early morning convenience store robbery on Thursday, police said.

Darrell Lynn Pride, 29, and Sarah Louise Haynes, 30, were arrested about 4:25 a.m. in connection with the robbery of the 7-Eleven, 800 N. Grandview Ave., police said.

Bond for Pride was set at $15,000 and for Ms. Haynes at $10,000 by Municipal Judge J.E. Weatherly, police said. Both remained jailed Thursday.

The couple was arrested when police stopped their car, that fitted a description of the robbery. Pride was later identified by witnesses as the robber, police said.

According to police, a man entered the store and brought a soda to the counter. He then grabbed the clerk's wrist and threatened him with a large butcher knife.

The robber demanded money and the clerk complied, police said.

Woman assaulted

ODESSA — A 21-year-old man was arrested Wednesday on a warrant for assaulting a woman that resulted her in receiving 76 stitches on her face, police said.

Earran W. Moore remained in jail Thursday in lieu of a $7,500 bond for aggravated assault and had bond denied for parole violation, police said.

Moore was arrested in connection with the assault of Melissa B. Scheilbe, 21, on Aug. 10 in the 2800 block of E. University Blvd., police said.

Ms. Scheilbe originally reported that three other men beat her because Moore was with her when police responded to the incident. Moore had threatened to hurt her further if she accused him, police said.

Ms. Scheilbe reported at a later time that Moore was the assailant.

McCAMEY: Hospital board votes to reduce tax rate cents per $100 valuation.

Walter Campbell, chief appraiser for the Upton County Tax Appraisal District, said that as the tax base increases one year, the tax rate can be lowered to bring in the same revenue as the previous year.

Adjusting the tax rate based on new property and mineral values — the tax base — to bring in the same revenue as in the previous year is called the "effective tax rate."

In the McCamey case, the effective tax rate this year is lower than last year's actual tax rate of 54.57 cents.

"As the value (tax base) goes up, the (tax) rates can come down," said Campbell. "Historically, that's not true, because some of them (governing boards) like to put that extra in their budget."

However, the McCamey Hospital is "playing the game like it's supposed to be (played)," said Campbell.

The hospital's board members are "trying their best to make it easy on the taxpayers," said Campbell, who collects taxes for eight taxing entities: the towns of Rankin and McCamey, the Rankin and McCamey school districts, the Rankin and McCamey hospital districts, the Upton County Water District, and Upton County.

"Most all the others are going to have to go up in their (tax) rates," the appraiser said.

Upton County's tax rate is dropping slightly.

The McCamey Hospital board members "are a determined bunch," Campbell said, "and they are trying to make it a little easier for the taxpayers."

In recent years, hospital taxes had been going up said Campbell, due the vast drop in property and mineral values in 1985 and 1986 following the oil bust.

"And rates went up," Campbell noted, because otherwise "you don't have the value to meet your budget."

"This is the first year we've gotten an increase in our values" since the oil bust of the early 1980s," Campbell said. Still, the value (tax base) is "not up to what it was."

blamed for polluting the water wells of area residents.

"But it's not just that," said Cheryl Rice. "We moved out to the country for the clean air and water. We didn't come out here to have industry and stuff. We depend on our well water and we want to make sure nothing happens to it, but we just don't want industry out here causing all these problems."

Baughn and Mertz said representatives of state health and safety agencies visited the plant often, and had seen no problems with the facility.

Glen Cothran, owner of a nearby trailer park, said he feared many of his 78 residents would move because of problems caused by the plant. Although he has owned the park several years, he said he never tried to take action against Lee-Co before because he didn't think there was anything he could do.

"Sometimes at night, that stuff (emissions) will be rolling across the field out there," Cothran said. "You know there's something wrong with that." Cothran said he has contacted an attorney to represent the neighbors.

Semple urged those present to write letters asking for a contested hearing about Baughn's permit. McDaniel said there would be more residents' meetings about the situation.

the vacant lots west of the garage or along Carver Street. Registration will take place at the Carver Street gate to the facility.

The city will take checks, but new customers should bring a letter of guarantee from the bank, Phillips said. If vehicles are bought with checks, the title will not be transferred until the check clears, he said.

City estimates for profits from the coming sale top $80,000. From that, the largest part — revenue from vehicle sales — will go toward the purchase of other vehicles. Money made from the sale of equipment and miscellaneous items will become part of the general fund.

"We get pretty good prices," Phillips said. "It depends on a lot of things, but we usually do pretty well on these vehicles. Those other things, the smaller items, it's sometimes not even worth having them for what they bring us."

Conducting the auction fulfills the city's legal responsibility to sell items they no longer need.

"It's a lot of work, but sales like this bring in as much revenue as we could expect to get anyway for most of this," Phillips said.

have as big a variety as I do," he says.

In addition to snakes, Higginbottom has an assortment of lizards on display.

"Ugly little creatures," he says of the round-tailed horned lizards, a non-endangered species of what most folks call "horny toads." "These round-tailed ones are not as colorful."

Higginbottom, 53, got started in the reptile-dealing business in 1972. He was a road construction worker, but falling off an overpass near Bowie convinced him to find another line of work.

"This is a way to make a living," Higginbottom says. "I don't like a snake at all. It just looks to me like a buck."

He says he always wanted to own a little station so he bought this one, and he moved his reptile business here from Cross Plains and opened the first of June.

Now where else can you get a soda pop and a snake?

THOMAS: Rotarians roast mayor

(From 1B)

"We would have liked to be in attendance, but unfortunately, we couldn't get out of our businesses," were the bogus regrets allegedly tendered by the "Wadley Merchants Association."

Camil Dakil thanked the mayor for the ongoing Wadley Street project which he said provided employment for generations of Midlanders.

Former Mayor Ernest Angelo chided Thomas for his campaign promise to synchronize city lights. "When I was mayor and Carroll was on the City Council he complained that the lights were not synchronized ... Now, he's come pretty close, but I'm afraid he's got it backward. On the way here I had to stop at five out of six lights."

Angelo noted that even though the event was a roast, "Midland has benefitted from Mayor Carroll Thomas' expertise."

Longtime Rotarian and former roastee, Jim Zimmerman, said the mayor now considers himself a financial consultant.

"A financial advisor is the guy who would marry Madonna for her money," Zimmerman said.

Zimmerman also suggested a solution to the Wadley Street construction dilemma. "We could build a second Wadley Street parallel to the one under construction," he said. "The public would be able to drive on one street while the city could continue working on the other."

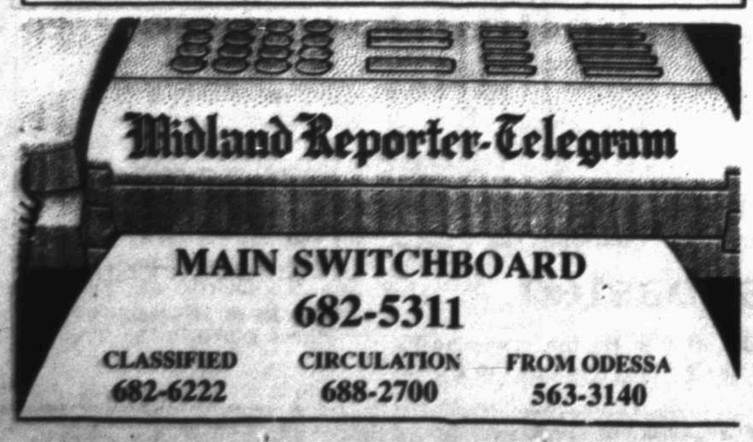

The mayor also received the Paul Harris Fellowship, a prestigious Rotarian Award, made possible by a donation from an anonymous family.

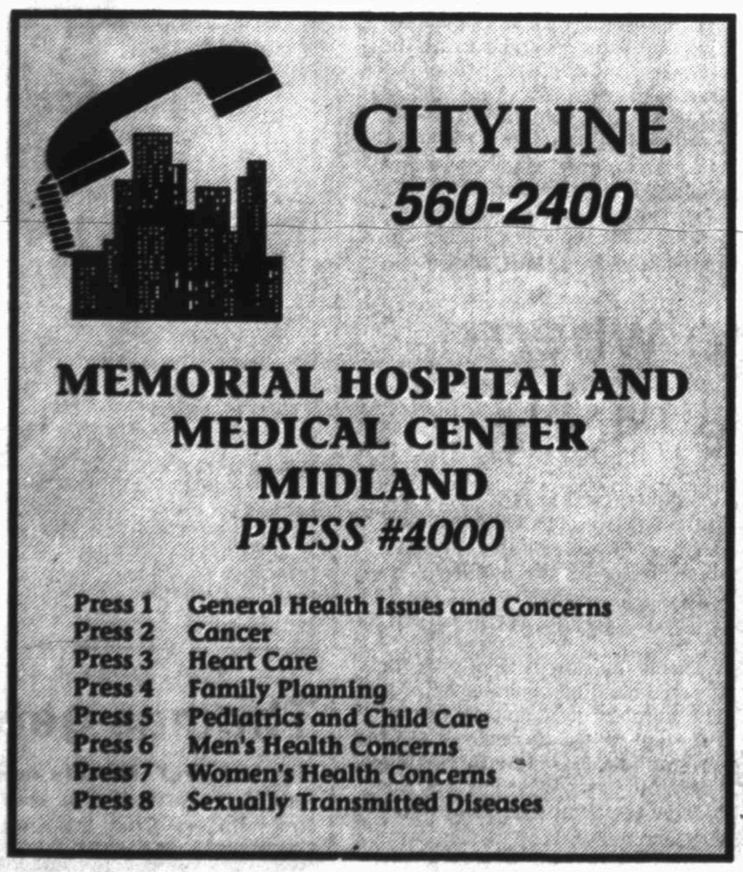

$469 million available for vets' home loans

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Veterans Land Board has $469 million in cash and bonding authority for home loans that could help more than 10,000 veterans and their families, Land Commissioner Garry Mauro said.

The board has $219 million in cash and $250 million in bond authorization, he said.

The Legislature recently raised the home loan ceiling from $20,000 to $45,000 for Texas veterans, giving them a boost in buying power, Mauro said. The new limit takes effect on Sept. 1.

Grand jury indicts commissioner

■ Dallas County Commissioner John Price indicted on charges of aggravated assault and sexual assault.

The State

Associated Press

DALLAS — A grand jury indicted outspoken Dallas County Commissioner John Wiley Price on two felony charges Thursday, sending him to trial and placing his political future in jeopardy.

"The grand jury today returned two felony indictments against John Price," assistant district attorney Mike Gillett announced Thursday afternoon. "One for the offense of aggravated assault, the other for sexual assault or rape. We intend to try him on both those offenses," he said.

If convicted of either charge, Price would have to forfeit his seat on the commission and could be sentenced to prison terms ranging up to 20 years.

Before the indictments were returned, Price told KDFW-TV that the allegations were "nonsense."

"You say, 'Well, you're a public person, John, and therefore people can say things about you that are not slanderous that they can't say about other people and therefore there's a more difficult test because you are a public person,'" he said.

"Therefore, you've either got to have some thick skin and be able to absorb it, you know, or save up your pennies and right before the two-year statute of limitation, file your lawsuit," Price said.

Defense attorney Billy Ravkind said Price "emphatically" denied the charges, which the lawyer said could stem from racism.

"There's absolutely no other explanation for using the grand jury the way that I saw it used today," Ravkind told WFAA-TV.

"I don't know whether it's a personal vendetta ... because John is black ... because he's black and perhaps powerful, I don't know what the reason is," Ravkind said. "But it's not based on anything I've ever seen in the law."

The sexual assault charge was brought against Price by a woman who was not identified. The investigation that led to that charge was prompted by a magazine article last March in which three women accused Price of sexual assault.

In the aggravated assault charge, Price is accused of breaking carpenter Tim Short's ankle during a fight downtown Aug. 2 in front of the Dallas County Administration Building.

About 90 minutes before the Short incident, Price was involved in a fight with a jogger. Larry Buck said Price bumped into him as he was jogging through a picket line Price was leading outside a television station.

Buck, who was not injured, filed a misdemeanor complaint against Price.

Price was charged by police with felony aggravated assault for the Short incident.

Last February, Price was convicted of criminal mischief after bending the windshield wiper of a van that tried to cross a picket line he set up outside another Dallas television station.

He is appealing the 6-month jail sentence he received in that incident. Price is also appealing a concurrent sentence for violating probation for whitewashing liquor and cigarette billboards in minority neighborhoods.

For several months, Price has been leading demonstrations outside Dallas media offices, protesting what he claims is discrimination in coverage of minorities and minority hiring practice.

San Antonio Lee chooses new flag

SAN ANTONIO — Robert E. Lee High School students have chosen a new design to replace the controversial Confederate battle flag, the previous school spirit symbol.

Principal Bill Fish removed the Confederate flag as the school's insignia in May after receiving complaints from some students that it had racist connotations. The use of Southern symbols has sparked controversy in several Texas schools, including Southwest High in Fort Worth and Robert E. Lee High in Midland.

"We have to use symbols that are inclusive, rather than exclusive," Fish said.

His decision led to demonstrations by students, former students and parents at the end of the school year. Both supporters and opponents of his decision turned out.

The new San Antonio Lee flag is red and gray striped with a white block letter "L" in the center surrounded by a circle of white stars. It was among three designs selected by school and community representatives.

The new design was submitted by 1991 graduate Scott Bankler, who has enrolled at Southern Methodist University.

"I think they just need to vote, get it over with and let it slide," said sophomore Robert King, who voted for the winning design.

Junior Sarah Hudgins said because the Confederate flag is a part of school history and tradition, students should have been allowed to vote on whether to remove it. But, she added, "If it offends one person, I think we should take it down."

Lack of insurance could cost motorists

AUSTIN (AP) — State officials Thursday warned uninsured motorists that they will need auto liability insurance to obtain or renew their driver's license, receive a safety inspection sticker, or register a vehicle.

"If you're driving without insurance, you're going to be facing some costly and perhaps inconvenient consequences," said Claire Korioth, chairwoman of the State Board of Insurance.

The requirements are part of a new insurance law that takes effect Sept. 1.

The law mandates that persons have proof of financial responsibility in the event of an auto accident. The most common way to fulfill this requirement is through the purchase of liability insurance.

Also under the new law, the fine for not carrying the insurance will increase from $75 to penalties ranging from $150 to $300. Repeat offenders will have to pay $350 to $1,000 and face the possibility of having their vehicle impounded for six months.

About 25 percent, or 2 million Texas drivers do not currently have liability insurance, officials said.

"Therefore the other 75 percent pick up the tab in the form of higher rates. So it's simply not equitable," Ms. Korioth said.

Ms. Korioth said the new law could drive down auto insurance rates statewide since it will result in more people buying policies.

Under state law, the minimum amount of liability insurance required is enough to cover deaths and injuries up to $20,000 per person, or $40,000 for all persons killed or injured in any one accident. It also must cover property damage up to $15,000.

The cost of such coverage varies depending on where the driver lives. Average premiums range from about $380 per year in Houston to about $200 annually in West Texas.

Small stations oppose EPA's planned tests

HOUSTON (AP) — Small service-station owners say they won't be able to compete with huge gasoline giants once automobile emissions testing laws become effective.

The EPA is expected to hand down its final guidelines for smog-ridden cities including Houston in November, and clean air programs are slated to be implemented by 1993.

Service station owners and politicians joined more than 100 Houstonians at an Environmental Protection Agency hearing Wednesday on the smog-reduction efforts to be mandated under the Clean Air Act of 1990.

Small service station owners say they can't compete with bigger companies for the exhaust work generated by the tougher automobile emissions standards. They say they cannot afford equipment estimated to cost $150,000 to $250,000.

"Most garages don't have the high-tech equipment to do the repairs," said Kenneth Williams, owner of Williams' Shell Service Station in northeast Houston.

"And if I didn't have it (the safety inspection income), one man would lose his job immediately and I'd lose a third of my business."

Farm safety

Iowa seeks to improve second-most dangerous industry

By LINDA A. JOHNSON
Associated Press writer

DES MOINES, Iowa — Farming long has glossed over problems that make it America's second-most dangerous industry, but a combined effort by hospitals, educators and safety experts in Iowa hopes to make the state's economic backbone safer.

"There's a combination of effort in Iowa that's just remarkable," said Gene Graham, a consultant to the Kellogg Foundation, which is considering a grant to the effort. "They've attempted to take national leadership and bring to this country outstanding safety programs, including some that have worked well in northern Europe."

Since 1950, the accidental death rates in construction, the nation's highest, and in mining have been cut by two-thirds or more. But the rate has changed little for farming.

"One of the reasons injury rates haven't declined is lack of access to education and other services," said Jane Gay, a nurse who coordinates Iowa's network of hospital farm safety clinics.

Kelley J. Donham, professor of preventive medicine at the University of Iowa and at its Institute of Agricultural Medicine, agreed.

"We came to the realization here some years ago that there hadn't been any evidence of decrease in the health and safety problems that occur on farms," he said.

Donham is associate director of the Iowa Center for Agricultural Safety and Health, which the Legislature established to coordinate farm safety and health projects by the universities, the state health and agriculture departments, and county extension services.

Since 1950, the accidental death rates in construction, the nation's highest, and in mining have been cut by two-thirds or more. But the rate has changed little for farming.

"This is really the first organization of its kind in the United States . . . maybe in the world," said Donham, who has studied farm safety programs in Sweden.

The Legislature in 1987 provided money for the institute and the University of Iowa medical school to set up a network of farm safety programs supported by hospitals.

The Iowa Agricultural Health and Safety Service Program opened its first clinic in March 1988 at Sartori Memorial Hospital in Cedar Falls in northeast Iowa. Sartori's program was followed that summer by five more, and and three are to open early next year.

"We are the first to be delivering comprehensive occupational health services to farm families," said Ms. Gay, the project coordinator.

Farmers pay $150 for a two-year clinic membership, which covers evaluations of health and safety hazards on their farms, an occupational health history that weighs risks for specific types of farming, and routine physical exams that include tests of hearing, breathing and exposure to farm chemicals.

The clinics also train rural medical personnel and veterinarians.

Farm accidents killed 83 Iowans last year and claim about 1,000 lives nationally each year, including 300 children. An additional 23,000 children and many more adults suffer serious accidents each year, according to the American Farm Bureau.

When the safety center started monitoring farm accidents last year, it found twice as many accidental deaths in Iowa as officials had been estimating. That's not surprising for a loosely regulated family industry, with untrained women and children doing much of the work.

Ms. Gay is developing a plan for communities to set up day care centers aimed at preventing injuries to poorly supervised children. "Instead of the parent doing farm work and child care at the same time, we would have community-based day care."

While the safety program has become the showpiece of the center, it also has programs to prevent tractor accident injuries and injuries to children, and a program to reduce diseases affecting farmers who work in livestock confinement buildings.

Besides the state programs, the Kellogg Foundation's Graham said Iowa leads the country in other safety efforts. Among them are an Iowa Easter Seals project for farmers with disabilities and the "Just Kids" farm safety program created by a woman whose 11-year-old son was killed in a farming accident.

Because of all those factors, the foundation, sponsored by the Battle Creek, Mich., cereal maker, is considering giving the agricultural center at least $300,000 to develop seminars showing other states how to create similar programs.

'I'm convinced that all the financial resources could go away and those people would still continue to deal with the problems in Iowa," Donham said. "I think that the work that they're doing is outstanding and it continues to be a good investment."

Hearing loss is major farm hazard

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — The stoop-shouldered, hard-of-hearing old farmer in cap and overalls is real — especially the hearing part.

"There's a tremendous hearing loss associated with farming because of the noise exposure," said Bruce Plakke, an associate professor of audiology at the University of Northern Iowa.

"The biggest thing is the farm tractor, but then there are other sources of noise like corn dryers," said Plakke, who researches hearing loss among farmers and in industry.

New tractors, especially those with enclosed cabs, are quiet, he said, but older ones pose problems.

Hog confinement buildings also can be too loud, but generally it is the repeated, prolonged exposure to a variety of noises that damages the hearing.

Yet farmers rarely do anything to prevent hearing loss, he said.

A study Plakke conducted last year compared a group of farmers in their 30s, 40s and 50s with people the same age who work in jobs without significant exposure to noise.

"There's a very significant difference beginning with the 40-and 50-year-olds," he said. More than half the 50-year-old farmers could use a hearing aid.

Permanent damage occurs when excessive noise stops the function of the sensory endings of hearing nerves in the inner ear. The only solution then is a hearing aid.

Plakke, who also practices at Sartori Memorial Hospital in Cedar Falls, recommends farmers use ear plugs.

His hospital sponsors Farm Partners, a health and safety program for farmers that offers, among other services, analysis of noise problems on the farm and advice on how to prevent hearing damage.

Scientists duplicate tomato's insecticide

WASHINGTON (AP) — When a bug bites a tomato leaf, the plant fights back by secreting a protein that gives indigestion to the attacking insect. Scientists now have synthesized a key part of this process and hope to insert it into other plants.

Clarence A. Ryan, a Washington State University biologist, said Thursday that as an insect crunches up portions of a leaf or a stem on a tomato plant, the cells release a sort of chemical scream of warning that circulates throughout the plant.

This signal chemical, called a polypeptide, causes genes in all the plant's cells to form a second compound that gives a terrible tummy ache to insects trying to dine on the plant.

Ryan said the protective chemical blocks the insect's digestion of protein.

"The insects get sick, stop growing and eventually die," said Ryan. "It is a natural way of controlling insects."

Although earlier studies showed that the tomato produced such a natural insecticide, Ryan said it has never been clear how all the plant's cells were warned about an insect attack and told to start producing the bug killer.

For instance, if a caterpillar starts gnawing on a leaf at the foot of a tomato bush, how do the cells in leaves at the top of the plant learn about it?

The answer, said Ryan, is a polypeptide that his laboratory has isolated, synthesized and named "systemin." A report on the study is published this week in the journal Science.

"Nobody in the history of plant science has ever found a polypeptide that actually could send signals within a plant," said Ryan. "This is the first one."

In animals, polypeptides are commonly used to signal cells to start or stop certain functions.

"Polypeptides in animals are used to signal metabolic processes, immune processes and even pain. The brain uses them for neurological processes," said Ryan.

Seminar has answers for ranching success

Are you a successful rancher? Are you getting all out of the ranch you would like? Does the ranch support you or do you support the ranch?

Due to unique ranch resources, personal goals, experience and environmental conditions, ranching is many things to many people. What works on one ranch may not work for the ranch across the road.

Kiker

Many successful ranchers have developed goals, plans for meeting those goals, evaluation procedures for each alternative, and ways to monitor progress. The Total Ranch Management program, sponsored by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, incorporates that process to teach an approach for managing ranch resources.

The next Total Ranch Management workshop is September 10-13 and 17-20 at Towle Memorial Park in Snyder. This is the first workshop offered in the Texas South Plains.

"The workshop has been extremely successful," said Dr. Tom Troxel, extension livestock specialist and TRM instructor.

"Ranchers who have participated have made management changes that were positive steps in achieving ranch goals. They now feel that they are now in control of their ranch rather than the ranch being in control of them," Troxel said.

TRM emphasizes goal achievment through selection of enterprises and day-to-day activities. A case ranch example used to illustrate this process and its application.

The TRM approach teaches ranchers how to manage and use resources for best total ranch benefits; determine the best alternatives, enterprises and technological tolls for achieving ranch goals; organize the ranch for effective management; and evaluate management decisions to reduce risk and increase their chance of success.

"This course forces its participants to set some real goals," said Preston Faris, Sutton County Extension Agent, who has seen more than 20 ranchers in his county go through the course.

"It opens their eyes to the necessity of making ranching a business."

The workshop consists of eight days of instruction and includes two field trips.

The Texas Agricultural Extension Service honored the TRM team with the 1990 Unit Award for Superior Service. This is the highest award given by the extension service.

Registration is limited to 30 participants to allow one-on-one assistance. The deadline for registration is September 3, 1991.

For further information call Mike Morrow, Scurry County extension agent at (915) 573-5423 or Midland County extension agent at 687-1351.

Drought-stricken farmers get aid

WASHINGTON (AP) — Farmers in drought-parched areas of the country will be allowed to harvest hay or graze livestock on land removed from production for conservation under a decision Thursday by Agriculture Secretary Edward Madigan.

The haying and grazing on conservation reserve program (CRP) acreage in eligible counties will be allowed only under carefully prescribed conditions, he said.

"Our objective is to help livestock producers through this difficult period while also preserving the cover and wildlife that nest there," Madigan said.

Some Democrats, however, were quick to criticize Madigan's efforts to help drought-stricken farmers who face shortages of livestock feed as too little, too late.

"What has been coming out of Secretary Madigan's office this year appears to be a piecemeal approach. He has taken the road where the least costly amount of help is available," said Dale Cochran, Iowa's secretary of agriculture. "Much more important things need action."

Richards expands agenda

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Ann Richards again expanded the agenda of the special legislative session to allow lawmakers to consider several new issues, including a state bond sale to provide more money for college loans.

A $300 million bond issue was rejected by voters on Aug. 10.

The Higher Education Coordinating Board has said that failure to provide more funds could keep thousands of Texans from attending college.

In a proclamation issued Wednesday, the governor, who controls special session agendas, added the bond sale legislation and two other topics for debate.

Richards allowed lawmakers to consider a bill that would revamp the state workers' compensation system for Texans injured on the job. Legislation has been proposed that would create a state fund that could sell workers' comp policies.

She also permitted consideration of a bill to merge the State Property Tax Board into the comptroller's office.

Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock said he met with Richards and that the governor said she also would allow lawmakers to consider a plan for judicial redistricting, but only if House and Senate members could present her with a plan on which there is advance agreement.

Richards also allowed lawmakers to consider legislation regulating drilling of some artesian wells.

5-year-old rescues playmate

HOUSTON (AP) — A Houston-area toddler who was rescued by a 5-year-old playmate from the bottom of a community pool was released from a hospital Thursday, and firefighters planned an awards ceremony for her rescuer.

A spokesman from Hermann Hospital said Doreal Johnson, 2, of Humble, went home Thursday morning.

The toddler was not breathing Wednesday when she was pulled from a subdivision pool by Matthew Gordon.

"When I went underwater, I saw her and pulled her out," Matthew said.

Authorities said the boy found Doreal in about 3 feet of water and pulled her up and dragged her to the pool's steps.

The boy's mother, Rhonda Gordon, said her son told her, "Mom, look Doreal fell in the pool."

Adults pulled the little girl out of the water and lifeguard Larry Shannon administered cardiopulmonary resuscitation.

"She wasn't breathing and she didn't have a pulse when she was pulled out," Shannon said.

The little girl was breathing again by the time paramedics arrived and was transported to Hermann Hospital for observation.

The Atascocita Volunteer Fire Department scheduled an awards ceremony to honor Matthew and Shannon Thursday night.

"It's great what he did," said David Griffin, the department's fire prevention officer. "The little kid had enough snap to realize something wasn't right."

STATE IN BRIEF

■ Captain to be buried

WEATHERFORD — Funeral services for a 46-year-old Weatherford barge captain, killed in an Aug. 15 accident off the coast of China, will be held in his hometown Friday.

Rites for Billy Gene Young are scheduled for 11 a.m. at White's Funeral Home here, with burial at Memory Gardens Memorial Park.

Young, who was born in Osceola, Ark., lived in Australia and Singapore before moving to Weatherford in 1980.

Young, the captain aboard an oil exploration barge, died when it sank during a typhoon. He was one of 13 people confirmed dead in the accident.

The barge was carrying 195 people in the South China Sea, 65 miles east of Hong Kong. Rescuers saved 172 people, including 11 Americans and two other Texans, Willard R. Miller Jr., 31, of Houston and Richard Sexton, 43, of Glen Rose.

■ Escapee recaptured

SUGAR LAND — A prison inmate who walked away from an early morning horticulture class at the Central prison unit was recaptured Thursday a few hours after his escape.

Two sheriff's deputies from Fort Bend County recaptured him just before 9 a.m. in a nearby subdivision, said Charles Brown, spokesman for the Texas Criminal Justice Department.

"He's in jail there, but he will be transferred back to prison," he said.

Mark Steven Copeland, 40, apparently scaled a fence at the medium-security prison between 5:30 and 6 a.m., after asking to use a prison restroom.

"The inmate was attending a horticulture class and was excused to go to the restroom and did not return," Brown said.

Copeland had just completed his first year of a 25-year sentence for criminal attempt to commit sexual assault in Galveston County.

■ Youth held hostage

FORT WORTH — A 42-year-old disabled man, armed with a semi-automatic weapon, surrendered to police after holding his 11-year-old son hostage for 2½ hours.

The man, a Vietnam veteran, had been drinking heavily prior to the Wednesday incident, his wife told police. His name was not released by Fort Worth police because he was not arrested, said Lt. Alvin Allcon, police spokesman.

The wheelchair-bound man fired one or two shots about 8:30 p.m. inside the couple's home in far northwest Fort Worth.

His wife ran from the home and called police who sent SWAT teams to the residence after learning the son was still in the house.

The son was later returned to his mother unharmed.

The man was taken to John Peter Smith Hospital for a psychiatric evaluation, police said.

■ 2 file for Evans' seat

HOUSTON — A lobbyist and a real estate agent are candidates to fill the unexpired term of state Rep. Larry Evans, who died earlier this month.

George Dillard, 49, a lobbyist, and Aline B. McCloud, 62, a real estate agent, are the first to file for the Sept. 24 special election to fill the vacant District 147 seat. Both are Democrats.

The filing deadline is Monday.

Evans, 42, was found dead in his Austin apartment Aug. 7. Travis County Medical Examiner Roberto Bayardo ruled the death was a result of cocaine intoxication.

He was in his fourth term as a representative for some of Houston's most impoverished neighborhoods near downtown.

FAMILY MATTERS

Marital happiness develops in cycles

By Jim May, Ph.D.

DEAR FAMILY: My husband and I have been married almost eight years and have a (child). We have been pretty happy I think, but now my husband says that he isn't happy with me. He says that I spend to much of my time with my friends and don't do enough for him. When I press him for specifics he can't name any and won't talk anymore.

May

I have talked to several of my friends about this and they all think that I do plenty for him. He is an (professional position) in town and he wants me to be involved in the community, so I am active in the Junior League (and several other organizations). I think that I have done everything that he has asked me to do and I don't know why he's still not happy with me.

What do you do when your husband says something like this to you? We are one of the few couples that I know who weren't having any problems and I thought everything was fine. What should we do? SURPRISED

DEAR SURPRISED: You and your husband seem to have a number of things to talk about in your relationship. I assume that you both are in your 30s, which is a time when people often begin to question their purpose in life, like in the old Peggy Lee refrain: "Is that all there is?" People in their 30s begin to realize they are vulnerable and do not have time for everything.

Marriages have a developmental cycle. During this phase you and your husband must be able to discuss goals and expectations for yourselves and for your marriage. Try the following exercise: Each of you write "What I expect from my spouse," and "What I want out of life." Writing your answers, not just saying them, is extremely important.

Then arrange a time that is good for both of you when you will not be interrupted. Exchange your writings. Discuss what the other has written as well as what you have written. Do not debate. Share your feelings about what you have written and what your spouse has written. Discuss possible actions that can be taken to achieve your goals and/or expectations.

I encourage you to work on your marriage. So many marriages fail because no one will work through the pain to save them. Facing issues about yourself and your spouse is often difficult. We can grow through pain. Often when someone stays unhappy in a marriage, he or she finds some unacceptable "solution." Take a chance and work on it. If you need professional help in this process, see your clergyman or a marriage counselor.

DEAR FAMILY: I have a question that I can't ask anyone so I'm asking you. I am in my 60s and haven't had sex for almost three years (my husband can't). My problem is that I keep getting some kind of a yeast infection that won't go away.

I talked to a friend of mine and she looked real surprised and said that you could only get a yeast infection if you were having sex. She knows about my husband's condition, so that ended that talk. Neither of us said anything else about it but now I'm confused. You can see why I can't discuss this with anyone and I can't afford to keep running to the doctor. How can I get a yeast infection if I'm not having sex with anyone? CONFUSED

DEAR CONFUSED: As you have discovered, you do not have to have sex to get a yeast infection. I am not a medical doctor, but my sources inform me that this vaginal infection occurs when a specific organism that is normally present in the vagina multiplies more rapidly than normal. The lower levels of estrogen following menopause can encourage this condition. As genital tissues gradually thin they can become more easily infected.

I am told that specific medical steps can be taken to help make you less vulnerable to these infections. Discuss this with your physician, and please don't be embarrassed to do so. It is a normal life process.

DEAR READERS: It's almost back-to-school time for our children, and as my children prepare to make this transition again, I am reminded of Professor David Elkind's observation: "Most of us think of stress as an adult phenomenon. But today's pressures to cope, to succeed, and to win are every bit as taxing — indeed as dangerous — for children as for adults. Unlike the children of the previous generation, who were raised under the dictum of less discipline, the children of the 80s are the hurried children: forced to achieve more, earlier, than any other generation; outfitted in designer jeans and a whole array of adult costumes. These pressures and others are overwhelming to our children." Let's all be sensitive to the stress our children are under and have a "fun" school year.

NAAFA: 'Fat' not four-letter word

By Ron Hayes
N.Y. Times News Service

"All right — 'lazy, stupid, no ambition' — what else?"

Susan Zimon paused at the blackboard, chalk poised under the long list of stereotypes, and waited for someone in the conference room full of fat people to call out another adjective.

"Dangerous!" a woman from Illinois shouted, and Zimon's chalk scraped over the board.

"I teach school," the woman explained, "and parents seem to think I might get out of control and knock a kid's block off. I've never touched a kid in my life!"

There were nods, knowing smiles and murmurs of assent. The 50 or so fat people participating in the Support & Sharing Workshop represented less than a quarter of the nearly 300 members — mostly fat, mostly women — gathered at the Marina Marriott Hotel in Fort Lauderdale, Fla., for the annual NAAFA convention.

NAAFA — that's the National Association to Advance Fat Acceptance. These people are not "zaftig," "heavy-set," "large-sized, "full-figured" or "big-boned."

They are, as their name unflinchingly announces, "fat." They are some of the 32 million Americans over the insurance company actuarial height/weight charts, and they're fed up with advertisements that insult them, doctors who shame them, diets and surgery that kill them and airplane seats that don't fit them.

"I HAVEN'T dieted in four years," says Sally E. Smith, 32, 320 pounds and executive director of the 3,000-member organization, which is based in Sacramento, Calif. "I gave up an impossible American Dream for me that I'd tried to live up to for 20 years. I didn't give up my potential or my intelligence. I gave up a social concept of beauty."

Founded in 1969 by William Fabrey, an average-sized man who had seen his wife insulted because of her weight, NAAFA argues that fat people are the last minority it's socially acceptable to ridicule. And Fort Lauderdale Mayor Jim Naugle proved the point even before they'd arrived.

After Smith had written asking the mayor to declare the week of Aug. 4 "Size Acceptance Week" in the city, a reporter called Naugle for a comment.

"I'm still checking them out," the mayor quipped. "I'm going to call and see how many people they're bringing. This could be a big boon to our restaurants."

When Smith heard that, she fired off a letter. "To say that a NAAFA conference could be a boon to Fort Lauderdale's restaurants," Smith wrote, "would be analogous to saying that a NAACP convention would be a boon to Fort Lauderdale's watermelon sales."

The Size Acceptance Week proclamation was promptly issued, and last week the group arrived for five days of business and pleasure.

There were pool parties and a moonlight cruise, a bus tour of ritzy Worth Avenue in Palm Beach, workshops on how to get insurance, how to deal with romance, a trunk sale, a fashion show and special interest groups for singles, couples, gays and diabetics.

BUT MOSTLY they were there to talk about what being fat had put them through, and how they'd learned to accept themselves, or were learning, and just how rude some people could be. In workshops and hallways, down by the pool, up in the dining room, fat people told fat stories.

Linda Diskin, 33, 300-plus pounds and co-founder of the 80-member South Florida chapter, was once in an Arby's restaurant. She hadn't eaten all day. She got herself a roast beef sandwich, fries and a soft drink and had just sat down to eat when a little old man approached to tell her how much weight he'd lost since his heart attack and why she really shouldn't eat that sandwich.

"If you're fat, people assume they can critique what you eat," Diskin fumed, "what you wear, what you look like. Complete strangers will take groceries out of your cart!"

David Warren, 30, of Austin, drives his 450 pounds around in a Honda CRX, but when he answered an ad about flying lessons the company was eager to help, until he showed up at the airport.

"They told me it would overstress the plane," he recalled. "That may have been true, but it was embarrassing as hell. They were irritated they weren't going to make any money off me."

Doris Edgar, 28, 430 pounds, had to scale the turnstile at a Canadian amusement park when the attendant refused to let her use the stroller gate. Once inside, she found only two roller coasters with seats big enough to hold her.

AFTER A PARTY, Elaine Schuessler's hostess was told by another guest how funny and intelligent and entertaining Elaine had been.

"They were amazed I had anything to offer," Schuessler marveled. "I guess they thought I would just drool and stick my head in the salad bar."

And on and on. One woman's husband used to tell her she didn't need new clothes because she'd just look fat anyway. He is now her ex-husband. A special education teacher always got enthusiastic responses to job applications, only to lose the job after a face-to-face interview. And yet Michigan remains the only state in the nation that specifically includes "weight" in its civil rights act.

"There are no fat Barbie dolls," says national vice president Lynn Meletiche. "There are no realistic, average-sized Barbie dolls. They're all extremely tall, with long legs, long necks and extremely skinny. The number of women who actually look like that is minimal, and yet girls are killing themselves trying to achieve that image."

A head nurse at Terence Cardinal Cooke Health Care Center in Manhattan, Meletiche challenges the assumption that fat people are necessarily unhealthy people. While fat may complicate a genetic tendency to heart disease, diabetes or high cholesterol, she argues, it doesn't cause those conditions, and shouldn't affect insurance rates.

"That little boy who made fun of you as a child?" she says. "Well, his parents sent him to medical school."

IF THERE is anything average-sized people find harder to imagine than a fat person who is happy, it's a person who thinks fat is sexy. Meet Russell F. Williams, 48, grade-school teacher, NAAFA member since 1976 and unabashed Fat Admirer.

"In seventh grade, I had a very large teacher," Williams recalls, "and I always used to sit in the front row so I could listen to her nylons swish against her thighs when she walked."

In ninth grade, he deliberately sat behind the fattest girl in his English class. "I used to love watching her breathe," he explains, "the swell of her body."

In high school, he perused the Ladies Home Journal in search of the "before" photos in diet articles, and boasts that he has met men at NAAFA conventions who remember specific issues.

Williams was one of perhaps 40 men who attended the convention to socialize with others who understand their attraction.

Brian Fitzgerald, 22, 140 pounds, came from Joplin, Mo. "I just like full hips," he said, "the same curves, only larger."

In high school, he recalled, he used to buy "big mama" magazines at adult bookstores while pretending to friends that he lusted after average-sized women. And now, at his first NAAFA convention, he hopes to meet someone.

"I have taste," he said, "I'm not just looking for any fat woman. I'm not just looking for a wild time. I'm looking for a relationship."

AND WHY, YOU wonder, would someone want a fat woman in a world that glorifies thin?

"I do not know," Williams says, thoughtfully. "If a man prefers to date women who look like 12-year-old boys, that's his preference, but please don't harass me."

Cathy Meredig shows off her creation, a doll called "Happy To Be Me." The doll, which has bigger feet and shorter legs than the typical fashion doll, was designed to give little girls a more realistic body image.

Anatomically average doll is 'Happy To Be Me'

N.Y. Times News Service

It's turning out to be a rough year for Barbie.

Last year Mattel celebrated her 30th anniversary, a gala affair with a black-tie dinner and great new clothes. But in February, the world's most popular plastic teenager faced some stiff competition: a line of Miss America dolls, made by the Miss America Pageant and Kenner Products, with up-to-date names like Devon, Tanya, Justine and Raquel.

Now Barbie's got troubles of a different nature. A new doll about the same size is poised to make her debut. She is the "Happy to Be Me" doll, who prides herself on being very different.

The Happy to Be Me doll is a sort of politically correct Barbie, a doll with a social agenda. Her mission is to help young girls develop realistic body images and accept themselves as they are.

While Barbie is known for her extraordinary proportions, the Happy to Be Me doll is shaped more like an average woman, with a a wider waist, larger feet, shorter neck and shorter legs. Assuming a bust measurement of 36 inches, Barbie's proportions would be 36-18-33, while the Happy to Be Me doll would be 36-27-38.

The new doll, who has a nine-piece wardrobe, compared with Barbie's more than 100 new outfits a year, also has bendable arms and legs. This makes her easier to dress and to pose in action, "like active women who enjoy and get involved in life," said the doll's creator, Cathy Meredig, the president of High Self-Esteem Toys Corp. in Woodbury, Minn., a suburb of Minneapolis.

"The whole thing came about after a conversation I had with my friends," said Ms. Meredig, who has a background in industrial engineering and computer software design. "No matter how much they had accomplished in life, if they had successful careers or were good mothers, none of them felt good about themselves. The conversation stuck in my head, I just kept wondering why."

She then began reading everything she could find about children and body image. Among other things, she learned that 2 percent of girls in the United States became anorexic at some point in their lives, 15 percent became bulimic and 70 percent viewed themselves as fat. That was when she thought of the impact of the Barbie doll. She decided to market a doll with a more realistic body.

Christopher Athas, the vice president of the National Association of Anorexia Nervosa and Associated Disorders in Highland Park, Ill., said he believed that the creation of an anatomically realistic doll was a much-needed development. "In America there is a false conception of the female form that is repeated over and over in thousands of ways," said Athas, whose fellow members include more than 2,000 therapists who specialize in eating disorders.

Athas says girls in the United States start dieting as early as 8 or 9 years old.

When Ms. Meredig went to toy manufacturers with her idea, they were not as enthusiastic. So she put up $90,000 — "everything I've ever owned in the world" — to manufacture the Happy to Be Me doll. She is still negotiating with distributors and hopes to have the doll on store shelves by December.

DEAR ABBY: I need help and don't know where to turn anymore.

Van Buren

My husband and I have been separated for more than two years. I still love him, but there is no chance of our getting back together again.

Abby, how do you stop loving somebody? I've been going to group therapy meetings, but it has not helped to stop the ache in my heart. Misery may love company, but it doesn't make me feel any better.

Maybe a reader who has gone through the same thing can give me some suggestions. — ACHING HEART

DEAR ACHING: You can't "kill" love. It has to die by itself. Don't dwell on thoughts of him, and throw out all the reminders and souvenirs.

Force yourself to think of something else. Keep busy, and don't feel sorry for yourself. Tell yourself you deserve to be happy, and eventually you will be. Good luck.

DEAR ABBY: I am the mother of a baby who is learning to feed himself. I am almost positive that Terry is left-handed because when I put the spoon in his right hand, he transfers it to his left and proceeds eating that way.

My husband says I should train Terry to be right-handed because everything is geared for right-handed people and the boy will be handicapped if he's left-handed. Now my husband is forcing Terry to eat with his right hand.

What do your experts say? — YOUNG MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: My experts say to let the child eat with whichever hand he wants to. To force Terry to use his right hand when he is naturally left-handed could create many more problems than it solves.

Besides, what's the difference which hand he eats with? His mouth is in the middle.

DEAR ABBY: I and several friends have hit upon an idea for losing weight, as far out as it may seem. We pull our shades down, lock the door, and then clean house in the NUDE.

We noticed overweight women do NOT tend to look at themselves in mirrors as much as more slender women. Well, in cleaning house (which is itself exercise) we force ourselves to look at our bodies. Our only rule is, try to keep the stomach muscles pulled in while cleaning. It's hard at first. But actually seeing the muscles tightened helps one to keep them taut after the body is clothed.

Most of us have mirrors in every room. As we go from room to room cleaning, we can't help but come face-to-face with ourselves. This may sound crazy, but I promise it works if done in earnest. — "AUSTIN"

DEAR "AUSTIN": Now, in addition, if you could arrange to watch yourselves EAT, you might have it made. (P.S. And should you decide to cook in the nude, do wear an apron while frying bacon.)

Blind children enjoy these toys too

N.Y. Times News Service

TOKYO — Japanese toymakers are introducing toys designed to be enjoyed by blind children as well as those without seeing disabilities, a movement welcomed by parents and specialists in educating the blind.

"Toys for the blind must not be special ones developed just for blind children, but ones that ordinary children will also be able to enjoy," said Hiroshi Hanajima, director of the Japan Braille Library.

The Japan Toy Association last year initiated the move to encourage makers to develop such toys as ones that make sounds and those that offer different textures that can be recognized by blind and sighted children alike.

Four toymakers — Bandai Co., Epoch Co., Takara Co. and Tomy Co. — produce 12 kinds of such toys that are marked with a guide dog to show they have been approved by the association.

The association published a catalog this spring that includes other toys that have been on the market before the movement got started such as stuffed animals that give out various melodies when pressed and toy telephones with the push buttons marked so they can be recognized by touch.

It also issued guidelines to toymakers recommending them to attach sound devices to such playthings as balls that can get out of children's reach and to affix braille seals or change the textures on pieces to be used on such games as checkers that are usually distinguished by colors.

Both the catalog and guidelines were developed with advice from the Japan Braille Library as well as from young blind people.

"It's difficult to turn the attention of blind children to the outside world and in that sense, it's good that makers are producing such toys that can be shared with sighted children," said Mari Inohira, a lecturer of child education at the University of Tsukuba. She used to teach preschoolers at the university's School for the Blind for 16 years.

Notice of Effective Tax Rate (for use by most taxing units)

1991 Property Tax Rates in Greenwood Ind. School District

This notice concerns 1991 property tax rates for Greenwood Ind School District. It presents information about three tax rates. Last year's tax rate is the actual rate the taxing unit used to determine property taxes last year. This year's effective tax rate would impose the same total taxes as late year if you compare properties taxed in both years. This year's rollback tax rate is the highest tax rate the taxing unit can set before taxpayers can start tax rollback procedures. In each case these rates are found by dividing the total amount of taxes by the tax base (the total value of taxable property) with adjustments as required by state law. The rates are given per $100 of property value.

	Last year's tax rate:
	Last year's operating taxes	$1,710,978.16
	Last year's debt taxes	$1,195,950.69
	Last year's total taxes	$2,906,928.85
	Last year's tax base	$167,741,700
	Last year's total tax rate	$1.733/$100
	This year's effective tax rate:
	Last year's adjusted taxes (after subtracting taxes on lost property)	$2,874,185.53
+	This year's adjusted tax base (after subtracting value of new property)	$168,853,450
=	This year's effective tax rate	$1.7022/$100
X	1.03 = maximum rate unless unit publishes notices and holds hearing	$1.7533/$100
	This year's rollback tax rate:
	Last year's adjusted operating taxes (after subtracting taxes on lost property)	$1,691,672.95
+	This year's adjusted tax base	$168,853,450
=	This year's effective operating rate	$1.0019/$100
-	.72 for school district (or zero)	$.2819
X	1.08 (or add $.08 for schools) = this year's maximum operating rate	$.3619/$100
+	This year's debt rate	$.7298/$100
	(A school district must insert the following lines)
=	This year's rollback rate before adjustment	$1.0917/$100
+	Rate to recoup lost revenue	$-0-/$100
=	This year's rollback rate	$1.0917/$100
=	This year's rollback rate	$1.0917/$100

SCHEDULE A: Unencumbered Fund Balances

The following balances will probably be left in the unit's property tax accounts at the end of the fiscal year. These balances are not encumbered by a corresponding debt obligation.

Type of Property Tax Fund	Balance
Maintenance and Operation	$61,743.00
Interest and Sinking Fund	$12,667.00

SCHEDULE B: 1991 Debt Service

The unit plans to pay the following amounts for long-term debts that are secured by property taxes. These amounts will be paid from property tax revenues (or additional sales tax revenues, if applicable)

Description of Debt	Principal or Contract Payment to be Paid	Interest to be Paid	Other Amounts to be Paid	Total Payment
1984 School Building Bond Funding	$610,000.00	$634,830.00	-----	$1,244,830.00

	Total required for 1991 debt service	$1,244,830.00
-	Amount (if any) paid from funds listed in Schedule A	-0-
-	Excess collections last year	-0-
=	Total to be paid from taxes in 1991	$1,244,830.00
+	Amount added in anticipation that the unit will collect only 100% of its taxes in 1991	-0-
=	Total Debt Service Levy	$1,244,830.00

Older Americans catch power weight lifting fever

■ Lifting weights is a popular sport among seniors because it offers quick results; improved strength, mobility, speed and flexibility; and competition possibilities in the age bracket.

By Sharon L. Lynch

VALLEY FORGE, Pa. (AP) — Arnold Arden looks pretty much like any other pumped up health enthusiast lifting iron in a navy blue singlet, gold jewelry, white athletic shoes and a leather lifting belt.

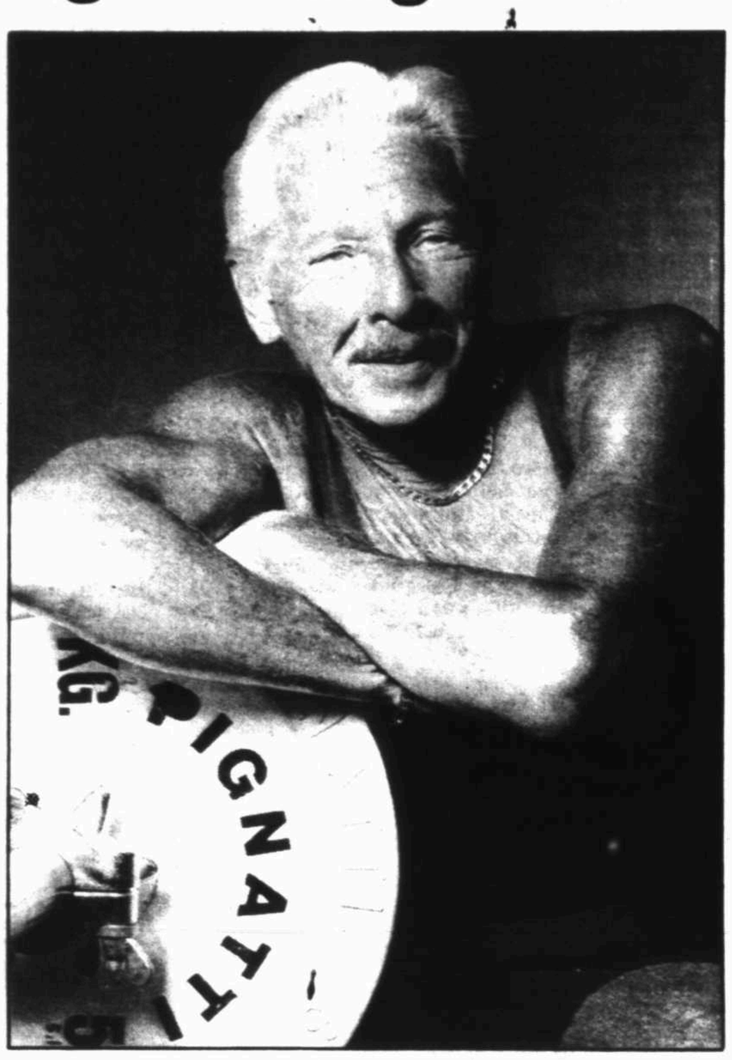

His shock of white hair and the lines in his deeply tanned face are the only hints of age. Even those don't give away his 81 years.

"I decided I was not going to join the parade of condo shufflers," Arden said at the recent Pan American Weight Lifting Championship in Valley Forge.

While research shows weight lifting can improve strength, mobility, speed and flexibility for older people, Arden is one of a select group of determined older Americans who power lift competitively.

U.S. Power Lifting Federation President Jan Shendow of Salt Lake City said older people start pumping iron because they quickly see an improvement in their bodies and because it is one of the few sports that offers competitions for their age group.

"What we're finding is that the strength sports are easy for people to get into at a later age," Shendow said.

AP LaserPhoto

Arnold Arden, 81, poses with his free weights at the Pan American Weight Lifting Championship in Valley Forge, Pa., in July. Power lifting is proving to be a good form of exercise for senior adults.

RESEARCHERS HAVE also shown that weight training can improve muscle strength and mobility of people well into their 90s, according to the National Institute on Aging.

Dr. Maria Fiatarone of the Hebrew Rehabilitation Center for Aged in Boston recently reported reduced frailty in older people who worked out with a weight machine three days per week.

Participants in Fiatarone's experiment increased their strength by about 175 percent in three weeks.

"People like me have been saying that for years. They're just now discovering we weren't so dumb," said Terry Robinson, 75, general manager of the Century West Club in Century City, Calif.

Robinson was a personal trainer at MGM Studios for years — he wrote a book about his years as friends and trainer to the late singer-actor Mario Lanza — and during World War II set up physical training programs for the wounded in the South Pacific.

"We discovered back then that the best thing was to get people into some sort of program rather than let them sit around in their wheelchairs," Robinson said. "As we grew older, we found the same principle applied. Now, there's room for all ages."

ROBINSON DOESN'T compete, but he conducts classes at his health club.

"I get up at 4:30 every morning to train for an hour. Then I open the club at 6, and I finish off every afternoon with a swim," he said.

Shendow said 550 to 750 people over 40 participate in U.S. Power Lifting Federation competitions annually. The federation sponsors more than 125 masters contests around the country each year.

At the Valley Forge competition, a red-faced Arden stabilized each of his lifts without much trouble and a judge ruled each of them good. Even an injured elbow couldn't make him falter.

In Arden's cheering section, Helen Buff, 78, of Cherry Hill, N.J., said she thinks his weight lifting is "wonderful."

Arden calls Buff his "lady friend," and brags about her weight-lifting ability. She goes to the gym almost daily.

Arden, a retired Broadway musician, started lifting less than a year ago.

"I never did more than 15 pounds until I joined the Gold Coast Gym," in Wilton Manors, Fla., he said. Weight lifting is helping him avoid what he calls "immature decrepitude."

"Actually, I'm addicted to it," he said. "I am so pumped up after I leave the gym."

RAPHAEL GUERRERO, who owns the gym where Arden works out, said he's seen an influx of older people in the last year. "They all claim that they feel so much better after just a few weeks of training," he said.

James Messer, 85, of Norristown holds the national records in his age group for weight lifting. A sore shoulder is keeping him out of competition, but he said that doesn't mean retirement.

"You don't give up something like this, you make so many friends over the years," he said.

Messer started lifting at 18, but it wasn't until 64 years later that he won the world championship in his class.

He remembers when most people he knew chugged a couple of beers every night before going home and smoked cigarettes constantly. He did it too for a while, he said.

"All I got out of it was a headache the next day. Then I got into the health thing," he said. "It's better than going soaking in a bar."

Elderly advocates hammer out legislative wish list

ATLANTA (AP) — More home-delivered meals and better transportation services were tops on the legislative wish of more than 75 advocates for older people.

The Coalition of Advocates for Georgia's Elderly ranked five issues for their lobbying focus in the General Assembly's next session.

The advocates said they would like to see the promotion of gerontology and geriatric education at state colleges by forgiving loans of students entering those fields.

Also, they want a show of support for the Long-Term Ombudsman Program, a federally mandated watchdog agency that advocates for the elderly. And they sought strengthening enforcement and regulation of personal-care homes.

Because of the state budget crisis, state Rep. Emory Morsberger told the group not to expect additional funding from the General Assembly. "This is the time to hang on to what you've got," he said.

Woodson signs

PITTSBURGH (AP) — All-Pro cornerback Rod Woodson, who earlier had threatened to sit out the season in a test of the NFL's free agency rules, signed with the Pittsburgh Steelers Thursday.

Terms of the deal weren't disclosed.

Woodson had been unsigned since his previous contract expired Feb. 1. He signed just before the Steelers left for an exhibition game in Detroit and is scheduled to report along with the rest of the team Tuesday when the Steelers begin preparing for their Sept. 1 season opener against the San Diego Chargers.

He did not travel with the team for the game in Detroit.

Hadnot healthy

AUSTIN (AP) — University of Texas running back Butch Hadnot has been cleared by doctors to begin full-contact practice drills.

Hadnot hurt his knee while running in the summer, and coaches had feared that he suffered ligament damage. But a magnetic resonance imaging test taken this week revealed no tissue damage.

Hadnot was held out of the first two days of heavy contact work because the knee remained a little swollen, but coaches said he is expected to resume drills soon.

Diablos draw closer

■ Midland's lead in the Texas League West is shrinking as the Angels lose to El Paso and Wichita wins.

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

The El Paso Diablos, who were five games out of first place just a week ago, appear to be serious about making a frantic run to the finish line in the Texas League West.

The Diablos clipped the wings of Midland, 6-2, Thursday night at Angels Stadium to move to within three games of the division leading Angels, winning for the third time in four nights on the road.

"We came in here thinking sweep," El Paso centerfielder Dave Jacas said of the current five-game series. "However, we lost to a quality outing by (Don) Vidmar Wednesday and knew we had to come back strong if we want to make a run at this thing."

Midland got even more bad news after the game when the Angels learned that Wichita won a 6-5 decision over San Antonio Thursday to move to within two games of Midland. San Antonio, who moves into Midland Saturday for five games, is only five games back. There are now 11 games left in regular season play.

Jacas put the lid on El Paso's victory with a two-run triple in the Diablos' three-run eighth inning as the Texas League West became tighter than pages in a new book.

The Angels got nine hits in the game, but could never really put together anything against El Paso starter Steve Lienhard (9-8), who owns a 5-1 record against Midland this year. And Jim Czajkowski allowed only one run in three relief innings to pick up his 10th save of the year and the second in this series.

"Lienhard just pitched a great game and Zach came in and shut them down," Jacus said. "Midland got the pitching last night and we got it tonight. Now we have a chance at winning four of five here."

El Paso never trailed after a three-run fourth off Midland starter Todd James (10-10). No. 8 hitter Tim Wallace had a key two-run soft-liner single to highlight the uprising.

James was 8-2 in the first half of the season and is now 2-8 in the second half. Run support has evaded him down the stretch and that was the case again Thursday.

Midland left the bases loaded in the fourth and fifth and two on in the sixth.

Pokes de-emphasize exhibition wins

■ Jimmy Johnson learns to slow the pace and evaluate players during the preseason.

By Denne H. Freeman
AP Sports Writer

IRVING — Jimmy Johnson learned his lesson in his rookie year in the NFL.

He got himself and his team all worked into a froth for exhibition games. Winning was all Johnson knew at the University of Miami. He didn't understand you had to pace yourself in the preseason.

"We went all out that first year and it hurt," Johnson recalled. "I won't fall into that trap again. We're not emphasizing preseason games. We want to evaluate talent. If we win, fine. If we don't, then that's OK."

In his first NFL season, Johnson went 3-1 in the preseason then 1-15 in the regular season.

Last year, Johnson keyed down in the preseason and Dallas went 1-3. The Cowboys had a 7-9 regular season in which Johnson was named The AP's Coach of the Year.

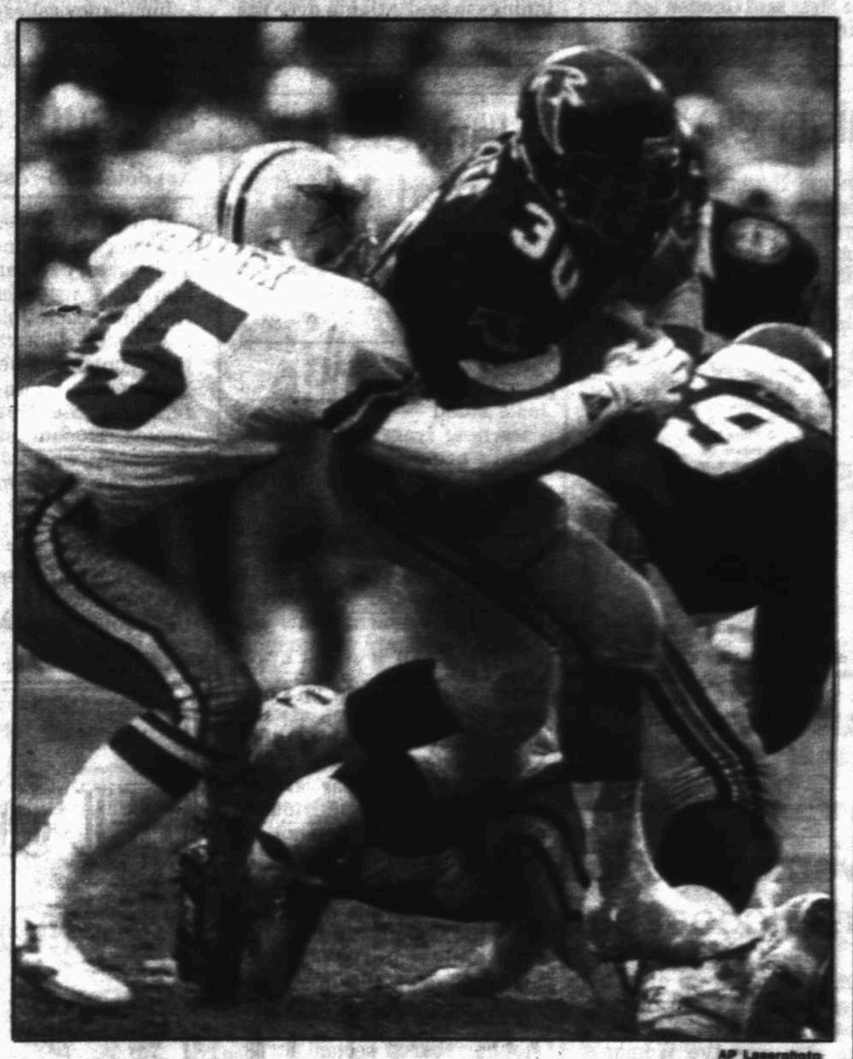

The Cowboys are 1-2 going into Friday night's game with the Atlanta Falcons and all Johnson wants to do is polish his offense and avoid injuries. Dallas defeated Kansas City and has lost to the Los Angeles Raiders and Houston.

"The main thing is to come out of the game healthy," Johnson said. "I'm ready for the real thing. Sometimes the exhibition season can get too long."

Johnson got a fright last week when quarterback Troy Aikman had a hard landing while scoring a touchdown against the Houston Oilers. Aikman leaped into the air to avoid the tackle.

"It was stupid," Johnson said. "Troy has got to learn not to do that."

While Johnson has taken a more relaxed attitude toward preseason, Jerry Glanville, the Atlanta coach, never has.

AP Laserphoto

Atlanta's Mike Rozier (30) moves the ball as Dallas' Manny Hendrix tries to stop him during the regular season clash between the two teams in 1990.

He has an 18-5 winning record in exhibition games and is 6-1 with the Falcons. Atlanta is 2-1 this year with victories over the Los Angeles Rams and the Houston Oilers and a 12-7 loss last week to Tampa Bay.

It's the first preseason meeting between the Falcons and Cowboys. Dallas leads the overall regular season series 9-5.

Glanville, who knocked Dallas out of the playoffs with a 26-7 victory in the regular season finale last year, held a 3-1 record against Dallas in Texas Stadium during his days with the Houston Oilers.

Rebels will scrimmage amid woes

■ Midland Lee head coach Earl Miller is glad Saturday's meeting with San Antonio Clark is not a real game.

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

As Saturday's first football scrimmage approaches against San Antonio Clark, Midland Lee head football coach Earl Miller has been more concerned with trying to chase black cats off his practice field.

Injuries and sickness have hit the Rebels hard during the first two weeks of the season, leaving Miller scratching his head — and avoiding black cats.

"There's a lot of black cats walking around out here," Miller says, who has seen his strongest team position — offensive guard — almost depleted.

Returning senior starter Keith Boyd was burned by a grease fire prior to workouts. Junior guard Doug Rook, a potential starter, had neck problems resurface after a car accident last spring. Another Rebel guard quit the team this week.

"We thought we were going to be strong at guard, but now it's a problem area," conceded Miller. "It's like a tornado ripped through one section of town, wiping out everything there."

In addition, starting linebacker Mark Seidenberger has been put on the shelf until next week with an intestinal infection.

"I'm just glad we're not playing a real game. At least, we've got two weeks to get things straightened out. You always run across one or two kids who won't give you what it takes to play and you lose them, but the kids who have stayed out, will give a good account of themselves this year. I guarantee that," Miller said.

Ready or not, Lee faces an early wake-up call Saturday. The Rebels will leave for Sonora at 6 a.m. to meet Clark in a 10 a.m. scrimmage. And Clark should be a stiff test for the Rebels.

"Mike Robbins has coached at Clark for nine years and had them in the playoffs all nine years," Miller notes. "They may be the largest team in the state of Texas. They have three players near 300 pounds. It will be a big test for us. They're on the same level with Converse Judson. They just lost by three points to Judson in the playoffs last year."

What would Miller like to gain from the scrimmage?

"We want to see just where we are right now. We feel like we are further along at this stage than we have been in the past — even with the problems we've had."

The Rebels do have some raging battles going on for starting positions. The defensive end positions are up for grabs with Tony Olivas and Thomas Boyce fighthing for one spot and Brett McNeill and Sherman Dedrick vying for the other. Returning safety

Carlson rallies Oilers past Rams, 16-13

Moon intercepted three times as run-and-shoot hits snags

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — The Houston Oilers now can say they have some momentum for the regular season — no matter how much they tried to give away their final exhibition game.

The Oilers had six turnovers and needed a safety and a touchdown in the third quarter to pull out a 16-13 victory over the Los Angeles Rams in their final exhibition game Thursday night.

"Our offense looked pretty good, the execution was there," said Oilers quarterback Warren Moon, who was intercepted three times and fumbled once. "I had good protection, the receivers were open, but I wasn't sharp."

Los Angeles (1-3) led 10-7 in the third quarter before the Rams' offense stalled, and Steve Jackson blocked a Dale Hatcher punt through the end zone with 3:46 remaining.

After the ensuing free kick, back-up quarterback Cody Carlson drove the Oilers 55 yards in six plays before connecting with Tony Jones for a 16-10 lead with 21 seconds left.

But the rough showing didn't bother Houston coach Jack Pardee as his Oilers (2-2) and return home to prepare for their regular season opener Sept. 1 against the Los Angeles Raiders.

The NFL exhibition, which was moved to Memphis when major league baseball forced Los Angeles and Houston to play out of town, drew a crowd of 63,273 to the Liberty Bowl.

"It was a lively crowd, and they were really into it the whole game. Playing on a neutral site makes it fun to play football," Pardee said.

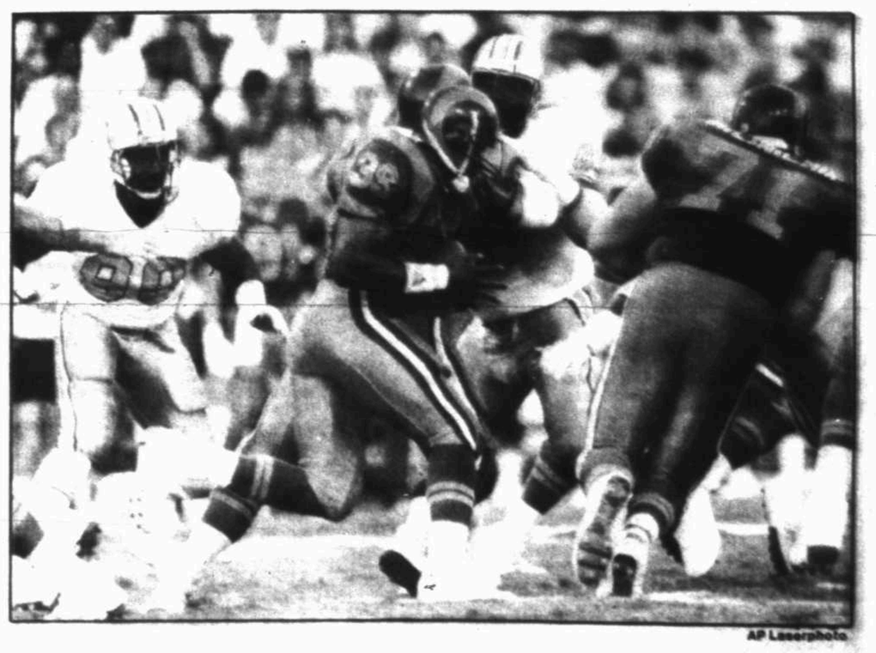

The Rams had a chance to regain the lead in the fourth quarter, but Chuck Long fumbled the snap on third down and forced former Oiler Tony Zendejas to hit a 40-yard field goal for LA with 6:49 left.

Most of the starters for both teams were gone by halftime, but not before combining for seven turnovers.

Jim Everett tied the game for the Rams at 7-all with 5:05 remaining in the first quarter when he hit Damone Johnson with a 2-yard pass to cap a 64-yard drive.

Zendejas took a little revenge when his 46-yard field goal put the Rams ahead 10-7.

Houston's run-and-shoot offense stumbled in the first half as Warren Moon was intercepted three times. Michael Stewart picked one off to end the Oilers' first drive, and Darryl Henley had two interceptions on consecutive passes in the last two minutes of the half.

Rams running back Robert Delpino (39) rushes for five yards in the early going of Thursday's game between Los Angeles and Houston.

David Lang, filling in for the Rams Cleveland Gary at running back, gained 57 yards in the first half, but fumbled twice.

The Oilers (2-2) converted the first fumble into a touchdown to go up 7-0 at 9:37 of the first quarter. Moon ran a quarterback sneak for the score.

Gary and Marcus Dupree did not suit up for Los Angeles.

Los Angeles opens the regular season at home Sept. 1 against the St. Louis Cardinals.

NL

PHILADELPHIA — Darren Daulton's bases-loaded single in the 11th inning gave the Phillies a 4-3 victory over the Pirates on Thursday, extending Philadelphia's winning streak at Veterans Stadium to 15.

Wes Chamberlain opened the 11th with a single before John Kruk walked. After Charlie Hayes sacrificed the runners to second and third, Bob Kipper relieved Bill Landrum (1-3) and walked pinch-hitter Jim Lindeman intentionally, setting up Dalton's game-winning single.

Mitch Williams (8-4) pitched two innings for the victory, the Phillies' third straight over Pittsburgh in their final at-bat.

The Phillies won the first two games of the series with two-out hits in the bottom of the ninth. Thursday's victory pulled Philadelphia within one of the club's longest home winning streak, 16 in 1977.

Giants 11, Astros 8

HOUSTON — Jose Uribe broke out of an 0-for-12 slump with a career-high five hits and four runs scored in the Giants' victory over Houston.

Kevin Mitchell had three doubles and drove in two runs for San Francisco, whose 2-1 series win marked the first time the Giants have won a series in Houston since Sept. 16-18, 1988.

Jeff Brantley (5-2) earned the victory with two innings of one-hit relief in which he struck out four. Dave Righetti got the last four outs for his 20th save.

Darryl Kile (5-8) was the loser, allowing six runs on seven hits. Houston's four errors increased its major-league lead in that category to 115 although only the final Giants run was unearned.

Mets 6, Cardinals 0

NEW YORK — Dwight Gooden struggled through five scoreless innings before leaving with tightness in his right shoulder, and the Mets went on to beat St. Louis.

The loss kept St. Louis six games behind first-place Pittsburgh in the National League East. The Mets, who won their second in a row following an 11-game losing streak, held the Cardinals to five hits and shut them out for the second straight game.

Charlie O'Brien, who mostly catches when Gooden pitches, had three hits, including a two-run homer off Bob Tewksbury (8-9) in the sixth inning. It was O'Brien's first home run since Sept. 24, 1989, while with Milwaukee.

Gooden (13-7) gave up three hits, five walks and struck out five before being relieved by Pete Schourek to start the sixth. The Mets said Gooden left the game for precautionary reasons and the problem was not thought to be serious.

Braves 4, Reds 1

CINCINNATI — Brian Hunter hit a two-run single and a solo homer and Charlie Leibrandt pitched eight effective innings to lead Atlanta over the Reds.

Leibrandt (12-11) won his third consecutive start by limiting the Reds to Joe Oliver's seventh homer. The left-hander has given up just three earned runs in his last four starts, covering 29 innings.

Error pushes Texas to late-inning win

AL

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Pitcher Tom Gordon's three-base throwing error enabled the Rangers to score the tiebreaking run in the eighth inning and they went on to beat the Royals 4-2 Thursday night.

Julio Franco opened the eighth with a single and Rafael Palmeiro followed with a bouncer in front of the mound. Gordon (9-11) threw wildly past first base, allowing Franco to score for a 3-2 lead, and Ruben Sierra hit an RBI double.

Kenny Rogers (9-8) pitched three hitless innings for the victory. Rangers starter Jose Guzman left after throwing 118 pitches in six innings.

Kansas City starter Luis Aquino left a 2-2 game after five innings with a strained right pectoral muscle, an injury that sidelined him in July 1990 for about two months.

Brewers 8, Blue Jays 7

TORONTO — B.J. Surhoff got four hits and singled home the tying run during a five-run rally in the seventh inning, sending the Brewers over Toronto.

Milwaukee won for the eighth time in 10 games. Toronto's loss cut its lead in the AL East to one game over idle Detroit.

The Blue Jays took a 6-3 lead into the seventh, but reliever Duane Ward (5-5) gave up a one-out single to Willie Randolph and walked Darryl Hamilton. Robin Yount and Greg Vaughn hit consecutive RBI singles and Surhoff's single off Bob MacDonald made it 6-all.

Athletics 2, Angels 1

OAKLAND — Bob Welch pitched a four-hitter and Mike Gallego homered as the Athletics beat California.

Oakland, winner of four straight overall, took 12 of 13 from California this year, including the last nine. The A's remained six games behind the front-running Twins in the AL West following Minnesota's 5-4 victory over Seattle in 10 innings.

Red Sox 7, Indians 6

BOSTON — Jody Reed knocked in Luis Rivera with a one-out single in the 10th inning, and the Red Sox capitalized on Indians errors for their first home sweep over Cleveland since 1988.

Carlos Baerga's three-run homer, his second of the game, gave the Indians a 6-5 lead in the eight, but the Red Sox tied the score with an unearned run in the ninth, then capitalized on another error in the 10th for their fourth consecutive victory.

Twins 5, Mariners 4

MINNEAPOLIS — Randy Bush tied the game with a three-run, ninth-inning homer and Scott Leius won it with a two-out shot in the 10th as the Twins beat the Mariners.

ANGELS: Wild finish on tap

(From 1C)

The only runs Midland could get were from two Walt McConnell sacrifice flies, but no one could come up with the timely hit. Tim Salmon came up with the bases loaded twice and couldn't get a run home, but he tripled with no one on in the eighth and scored on one of McConnell's flies to right.

ANGEL DUST: Mark Howie extended his hitting streak to 12 games with a single in the fourth...The Angels are now 11-20 against El Paso this year and 5-10 at home...Lienhard has had shoulder problems recently, but it didn't look like it Thursday. Still, he came out after six strong innings...Howie made two great defensive plays at third base, but couldn't find a base to throw to in the fourth on a John Byington infield single...Shortstop Damion Easley robbed Byington of a hit in the second, ranging into the hole and throwing Byington out from his knees...Midland and El Paso meet for the final time in regular season play at 7 p.m. today. Midland is still hoping they have a date with the Diablos in a Western Division playoff at the end of the month...

Raburn adds GTCC women's title to her list of summer successes

Staff Report

Marna Raburn added blossoming summer golf trophy room Thursday by winning Green Tree Country Club's match play Ladies Championship, but it wasn't easy.

Raburn fought off a stiff challenge from April King, winning 1-up after 21 holes of play.

She did it with a dramatic chip-in for birdie on the 21st hole.

The consolation title went to Janet Phillips with a 1-up after 19 holes over Billie Fowler in another good match.

Raburn also won the Women's City Championship this summer.

Championship Flight: Marna Raburn def. April King, 1-up after 21. Consolation: Janet Phillips def. Billie Fowler, 1-up after 19.

First Flight: Charisie Culbertson def. Pat Dougherty, 1up. Consolation: Pat Kirby def. Evelyn Davis, 2-1.

Third Flight: Sally Omerik def. Katy Hack, 4-2. Consolation: Linda Campbell def. Bobi Lloyd, 3-2.

Fourth Flight: Sharon Brose def. Wanda Shatzzell, 3-2. Consolation: Pam Moore def. Katrina Cain, 7-6.

Solomon storms out of camp

Associated Press

IRVING — Dallas Cowboys linebacker Jesse Solomon has walked away from the team for the last time, coach Jimmy Johnson said Thursday.

Solomon stormed out training camp Wednesday after hearing he'd been demoted to the second team. He stuffed the belongings in his locker into a plastic bag.

Sources said the Cowboys will apparently attempt to trade Solomon before Monday, when teams must pare down to a 47-man roster.

When asked Thursday if trading Solomon was an option, Johnson said, "It's possible." But Johnson said Solomon definitely would not return to the Cowboys.

Henke gets initial lead

PGA

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — The first round provided a good surprise for Nolan Henke — the lead in the World Series of Golf.

It was a bad surprise for Jodie Mudd — a warning from a marshal on Mudd's backswing.

Henke, making a major revision in his swing and not at all confident about how he would play, took four strokes off par with a 66 Thursday and established a two-shot lead in this winners-only tournament.

But he certainly was no more surprised than Mudd who, while on his backswing at the 16th tee at Firestone, was told by a marshal, "Don't hit it, there's someone out there."

Mudd, 3-under par at that point and leading the tournament, backed off the shot but obviously was shaken.

When he next stepped to the tee, he hooked his drive deep into the woods and a little creek and eventually made double bogey-7 on the hole.

Larry Mize and retread Bruce Fleisher shared second at 68.

Slocum says derogatory statement not his

Associated Press

HOUSTON — Texas A&M coach R.C. Slocum says he did not make a derogatory remark attributed to him in a magazine story about Houston coach John Jenkins.

A Sports Illustrated article on the flamboyant Jenkins and the high-scoring run-and-shoot offense of the Houston Cougars quoted Slocum as saying, "For somebody who is really a pretty good guy, John has managed to (anger) coaches all over the country."

"It's really very simple, I never made that statement," Slocum said Wednesday. "I'm puzzled where the quote came from. I talked to John and he said he understood. He said he knew it didn't sound like me.

"I never said anything like that about John or any coach in the league and I certainly wouldn't use that kind of language for any kind of interview."

Slocum said he had not been interviewed by the magazine.

"R.C. spoke to a long-time correspondent Orville Henry, who is out of the Arkansas Democrat. He's a longtime SI correspondent," Sports Illustrated publicity director Roger Jackson said Thursday in New York.

Henry, a sportswriter at the Democrat and a Sports Illustrated correspondent since 1956, said he spoke with Slocum at a College Football Association convention.

"He did talk to me and the quote is correct. I'm sure that he doesn't like it being in Sports Illustrated, but he said it," Henry said Thursday.

Henry said he and Slocum talked together for about five minutes when the coach spoke of Jenkins.

"I think it was a very accurate statement. John Jenkins is a fine man, but he has upset a number of other coaches," Henry said. "The problem is football coaches when they play each other don't like to be quoted saying things about each other."

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

FRIDAY, AUGUST 23, 1991

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Your "can do" spirit will help you accomplish great things. A windfall or legacy is featured in late fall. Be ready for big career opportunities in December and Janaury. An intense love affair begun in March will reach the now-or-never point in spring. Learn from mistakes made in the past. Halfway measures will never bring you what you want.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: dancer Gene Kelly, actress Shelley Long, slugger George Kell, actor River Phoenix.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Chance encounters prove financially helpful to a pet project. A timely phone call could heal a rift better than a face-to-face meeting. Social contacts are very valuable in generating new business.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): A financial windfall comes because of a kindness you extended in the past. An unexpected phone call or trip changes your plans. Slow down if you are becoming too involved with someone.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Reach out to someone who is swamped with work. Your help will mean a lot. You have always enjoyed a good mystery. Look for the reasons behind an unexpected development.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Review past achievements when planning for the future. There are valuable lessons to be learned. Set aside more time for rest and relaxation if you are pushing yourself too hard.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You find a wonderful source of inspiration today. Let others see the giving side of your personality. You have a lot of talent and love to offer. Move ahead with confidence!

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A wish is fulfilled. You finally free yourself from something that has been holding you back. Genuine bargains will be found by those who shop carefully. A lost object is recovered.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Secret negotiations are part of the picture. Enter an agreement with both eyes open. A child makes a suggestion that could increase the amount of cash you have on hand. Think about it!

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Your good humor and optimistic attitude draw people to you today. Romance becomes exciting. Postpone household chores and spend time with your loved ones. The financial outlook is brighter than you think.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Be thrifty. Extravagance could frighten away the romantic partner you want most. Cut back on your purchases. It is not necessary to spend a fortune to dress well or have a good time.

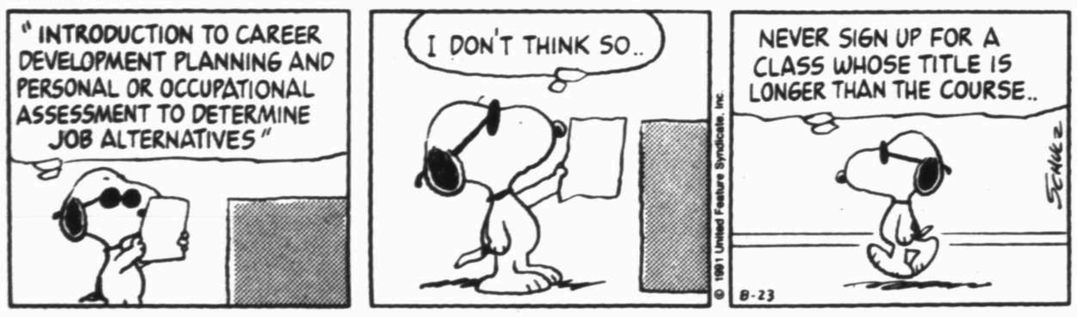

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): A flurry of domestic activity means good news. Sports and children's recreations capture your attention. Take the lead in making today's pastime plans. Your personal appearance can affect your social standing.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Someone's misgivings should not be dismissed out of hand. The cause may be lying below the surface. Romance is in a holding pattern.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Problems will not become any easier to solve if you put them off. Go to those in authority immediately. Efforts to help those in need will be richly rewarded. Avoid casual flirtations.

TODAY'S CHILDREN are so industrious and intelligent that they cannot help outshining their peers. They are likely to get their highest grades in math and science. Born perfectionists, these Virgos find it difficult to tolerate other people's shortcomings. They may be especially critical of their teachers. Wise parents will not take these complaints too seriously! Loyal and reliable, these children will always look out for their younger siblings. They have a strong sense of family and great respect for tradition.

Opening lead: Three of ♠ Club members were impressed by the play of the Russian emigre, Votmai Tinkinof. Although he made mistakes, at least he made them quickly. If you were waiting to cut into a rubber with Votmai at the table, odds are you wouldn't be sitting out long.

North's raise to two no trump was invitational and impeccable. South was in the middle of his range for an opening bid of one no trump, but the concentration of honors in diamonds made that suit a source of tricks, so Votmai, never shy, decided to accept.

West led a spade to East's ace and, spotting a chance for a second trick in the suit, declarer followed low and then ducked again when East continued the suit. West won the queen and removed South's spade stopper. There were only six fast tricks, and declarer could not afford to lose the lead to West. Still, the diamond finesse was necessary and, if the suit behaved kindly, it would produce all the tricks needed.

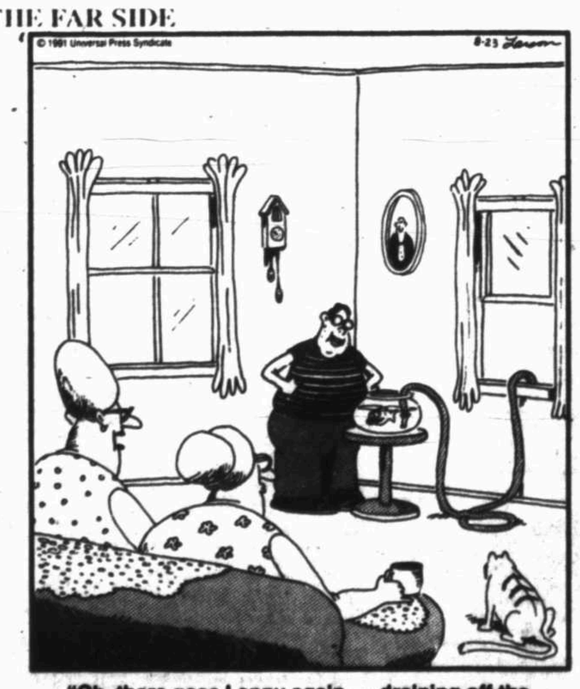

Declarer crossed to the king of hearts and finessed the ten of diamonds successfully. Back to the ace of clubs for another winning diamond hook, then the ace of diamonds. Unfortunately, the king did not come down, so declarer had to settle for eight tricks.

Votmai was the victim of overly speedy declarer play. West almost surely had the queen of spades, so declarer should have concentrated on maximizing entries to the table for diamond finesses. At trick one, declarer should have jettisoned the king of spades under the ace.

Now there would have been a third entry to dummy in spades—if the defenders did not oblige in setting it up, declarer could do so. That would have enabled South to take three diamond finesses, just enough to score four tricks in the suit and nine overall.

$65 million palimony lawsuit filed against Rauschenberg

NEW YORK — Robert Rauschenberg is named in a $65 million palimony suit filed by a man claiming he had an intimate relationship with the artist for 22 years and collaborated on his works.

Rauschenberg

Rauschenberg's attorney says it's a ploy by the plaintiff to evade taxes.

Claiming a breach of contract, William Edwin Van Brunt III said he received no compensation or credit for his contribution. The lawsuit filed Wednesdsay in U.S. District Court in Manhattan seeks $65 million, legal costs and 361 artworks.

Rauschenberg, 65, is considered a major artist of the late 20th century. His abstract expressionist painting "Rebus" recently fetched $7.26 million at auction.

Van Brunt, 42, said after the two met in 1968, he accompanied the painter, sculptor and performance artist around the world and helped him kick drug and drinking habits.

In exchange, the suit claims, Rauschenberg promised "he would always have a home on Captiva Island," the Florida island where the artist lives.

Van Brunt said he was ejected from the house in July 1990 in what he calls a breached employment contract.

Rauschenberg's telephone number on Captiva is unlisted.

"This lawsuit is a bald attempt by a well-paid former employee, William Edwin Van Brunt III, to shift to Robert Rauschenberg the blame for Van Brunt's failure to file returns and pay more than $300,000 in taxes on compensation he received for his services," Rauschenberg's attorney, Theodore W. Kheel, said Thursday in a statement from his New York office.

HASTINGS, Mich. — The owner of the Tick Tock Restaurant said he knew something was up when he noticed people filming the outside of the eatery.

Then Danny DeVito came to dine.

DeVito

DeVito was scouting Michigan locations for his upcoming film "Hoffa" about Jimmy Hoffa, the Teamsters union president who vanished from a Detroit restaurant in July 1975.

"I'm sure hoping they'd use this place," said Tick Tock owner Terry Hedges. "I know one thing. It'll be big time if it does happen."

DeVito and five assistants spent 45 minutes at the restaurant Tuesday. The 46-year-old actor-turned-director was in Detroit Wednesday.

Nadine Edison, head of the Detroit Film Office, said DeVito would visit several sites in the Detroit area, where shooting for the $47 million movie will begin this winter.

LONDON — Bob Hope returned to London Thursday to raise money for a new theater in this capital birthplace of the comedian that will bear his name.

Hope

The 88-year-old performer is scheduled appear Sunday at the London Palladium. Proceeds from the show will go to establish a theater in Eltham, a suburb southeast London where Hope was born.

Hope told a news conference at Heathrow Airport that his career will go on indefinitely.

"I will keep performing as long as I feel good, and as long as I am still playing golf. I can make a little money that way, too," Hope said.

NEW YORK — Pop star Sheena Easton has gone from "Morning Train" and "Modern Girl" to Aldonza in "Man of La Mancha."

Easton

The two-time Grammy Award winner will make her theatrical debut in a revival of the Broadway hit that arrives in New York next March after a four-month national tour.

Raul Julia will play Don Quixote in the musical based on the life and works of Miguel de Cervantes. The show, which has music by Mitch Leigh and lyrics by Joe Darion, first opened in New York in 1965 and ran for more than five years.

"Man of La Mancha" will open in Chicago in November and play Los Angeles, Costa Mesa, Calif., San Francisco and Washington before coming to Broadway.

NEW YORK — NBC's Arthur Kent may have sent female hearts a-flutter during the Gulf War while reporting on Scud attacks in Saudi Arabia. But the "Scud Stud," as some nicknamed him, didn't help "Today" much.

Kent filled in last week for host Bryant Gumbel. Nielsen estimates Thursday showed that "Today" logged the same ratings average last week as it did the preceding week: a 3.1.

Prices gain

NEW YORK — Oil prices advanced Thursday in a market that was relatively calm after three days of wild swings on headlines from the Soviet Union. West Texas Intermiedate for delivery in October settled at $21.72 per barrel, up 17 cents, at the New York Mercantile Exchange. Traders said the rise was based on internal market influences of supply and demand after oil fell 85 cents a barrel in the previous session.

Dollar mixed

NEW YORK — The dollar finished mixed against major currencies Thursday as traders continued moving away from the safe-haven currency after the failure of the Soviet coup. In New York the dollar fell to 1.7295 German marks from 1.7415 marks on Wednesday; in London, it was quoted at 1.7320 marks, down from 1.7535. In New York, the British pound finished at $1.6935, up from 1.6885 late Wednesday. In Tokyo, the dollar closed at 138.75 yen, down 0.43 yen from Wednesday's close.

Kodak recycles

ROCHESTER, N.Y. — An Eastman Kodak Co. subsidiary says it will recycle bottles and other scrap plastic in what will be the first widespread use of such materials for food packaging. Kodak's Eastman Chemical Co. of Kingsport, Tenn., will begin manufacturing polyester plastic from recycled bottles in October.

Recovery stalls, analysts say

■ Experts say surprising jump in unemployment claims indicates Fed must lower interest rates to prevent economy from relapsing into recession.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A surprising surge in unemployment claims this month has many analysts convinced the Federal Reserve must lower interest rates further to keep the economy from a relapse into recession.

The Labor Department said Thursday that 430,000 Americans filed initial applications for jobless benefits in the week ending Aug. 10. That was a spurt of 22,000 over the previous week — and more that five times the increase anticipated by most economists.

"There's no question — the economy has run out of steam, run out of gas," said Jack Albertine, who heads an economic forecasting firm in Washington.

The economy is "going nowhere fast," added Allen Sinai, chief economist at the Boston Co. "It's still an open question as to whether we're out of the recession."

"Time is running out for the Fed to meet its own expectations" for economic growth for the year, Sinai said. "The central bank will ultimately have to do more. That's been the story the whole year, and it's still the story."

The Bush administration, faced with a presidential election next year, contends the recovery is here but has kept up pressure for lower interest rates. Most economists don't expect the Fed to decide until after the next unemployment report comes out Sept. 6.

Thursday's report, which showed layoffs dragging on and a failure by businesses to hire, may mean that the unemployment rate in August didn't improve, either, analysts said.

The nation's jobless rate in July was 6.8 percent and the ranks of the unemployed totaled about 8.5 million. That's about 1.6 million more out-of-work Americans than when the recession started in July 1990.

Earlier this month, President Bush signed legislation enabling him to extend benefits for the long-term unemployed, but said he would not exercise that authority on grounds that it would cost too much and was unnecessary at a time of recovery.

But while cautioning that the jobless claims number can be volatile from week to week, private economists said Thursday's report — reflecting a second consecutive increase in jobless claims — demonstrates that the nation's labor market is at a standstill.

Moreover, analysts said, the economy apparently can't sustain the rally that emerged a few months ago without even lower credit rates.

"We know there was a snap-back in the spring, led by the production in autos and consumer spending," Sinai said. "But the consumer side of it is fading, incomes remain anemic, auto sales look soft, and now the jobs picture looks soft."

With more than 400,000 Americans fresh to unemployment lines in any given week, it will be difficult to mount any significant rebound in consumer spending, analysts said. Spending is expected to lead any recovery, because it accounts for about two-thirds of overall economic activity.

"When reports of unemployment get circulated, consumers get even more cautious because they're concerned about their jobs," Albertine said.

Since reaching peaks of more than 500,000 in March, the level of Americans filing first-time jobless claims had been falling, for the most part, through June.

Analysts had hoped that the level would go below 400,000 and stay there, but for the past several weeks, it has been fluctuating above 400,000 and hitting highs, like Thursday, of around 430,000.

U.S. firm to upgrade refinery for Saudis

DALLAS (AP) — Halliburton Co. said Thursday one of its subsidiaries was chosen by Saudi Arabia's national oil company to oversee the multibillion-dollar upgrading of the world's largest export refinery.

The project for Saudi Arabian Oil Co. is expected to create about 1,000 jobs for Halliburton's Brown & Root Braun unit. It handles petroleum and chemical business of Houston-based Brown & Root, Halliburton's construction subsidiary.

Terms of the Brown & Root Braun's share of the project were not disclosed. But the initial contract is for six years and has two consecutive extension options of three years each, Halliburton said.

"It is a major contract," said Guy Marcus, Halliburton's vice president for investor relations. "It fits within the scope of Brown & Root's business objectives ... expanding its presence in international projects."

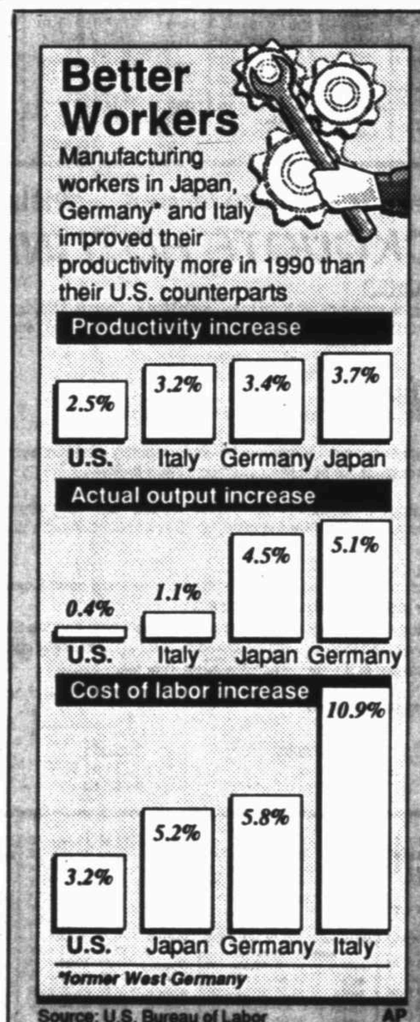

Brown & Root Braun will be responsible for planning, designing, contract and construction management of the expansion at Ras Tanura, a Persian Gulf port city. It is one of the largest projects ever for Brown & Root Braun, Marcus said.

Word of the deal helped Halliburton stock close up 75 cents at $39.50 in heavy trading Thursday.

The Ras Tanura refinery is the world's largest for oil products that are shipped to overseas markets, with a capacity of 530,000 barrels of production a day. In 1989, 2,134 tankers and other vessels shipped oil from the refinery.

By comparison, the largest refinery in the United States, which does not export oil in significant quantities, is an Amoco Corp. facility in Texas City. The refinery has a capacity of 433,000 barrels a day, according to Oil & Gas Journal. However, Amoco placed the capacity at 415,000 barrels a day.

Exxon Corp. owns a refinery in Baytown with a capacity of 426,000 barrels per day, according to the company.

Foreign productivity better than U.S.', statistics show

WASHINGTON (AP) — Manufacturing workers in Japan, western Germany and Italy improved their productivity more in 1990 than U.S. workers, the Bureau of Labor Statistics reports.

Productivity increased by 3.7 percent in Japan, by 3.4 percent in Germany and by 3.2 percent in Italy, compared with 2.5 percent in the United States, the Labor Department agency said Wednesday. The German figures refer only to the western part of the country, as it existed before unification.

Actual output also increased more in the three other countries: 5.1 percent in Germany, 4.5 percent in Japan and 1.1 percent in Italy. U.S. output rose by only .4 of 1 percent. The rise in U.S. productivity was due to the fact that the total number of manufacturing jobs decreased, so Americans worked fewer hours to produce more goods, the report said.

Italians also worked fewer hours, although the number of jobs in the country increased. In Japan and Germany, the number of jobs and of hours both rose.

Smaller increases of productivity were registered in other industrial countries, from Sweden's .5 of 1 percent to Norway's 2.3 percent.

"Productivity ... reflects the joint effects of many influences, including new technology, capital investment, capacity utilization, energy use, and managerial skills, as well as the skills and efforts of the work force," the report explained.

The cost of labor to business increased during the year in all 11 countries surveyed. The smallest increase — 3.2 percent — was in the United States and in the Netherlands. That included not only wages and salaries, but also the amounts that employers pay for social security and other plans that benefit workers.

Japanese employers found themselves paying an additional 5.2 percent an hour, and those in western Germany 5.8 percent more. Italian workers had the biggest increase: 10.9 percent.

When the bureau measured labor cost to employers in terms of goods produced — the rise in cost for each unit of production — the increase in the United States was the smallest: .7 of 1 percent. The largest increase was in Britain: 8.9 percent.

Tandy earnings drop, while competitor's profits up

DALLAS (NYT) — Tandy Corp., as expected, reported a sharp drop in earnings Thursday for the final quarter of its 1991 fiscal year, but another maker of personal computers, Dell Computer Corp., said its profits nearly doubled.

Tandy, hit by slow sales at its Radio Shack stores, weak demand for personal computers, and a one-time charge of $9.8 million against earnings, said net income fell 66.8 percent.

Dell reported a gain of 93.8 percent, and its share price jumped to the highest level since the company first sold shares to the public in 1987.

The shares added $2 in active trading in the over-the-counter market, to $35.25. Tandy shares rose 50 cents, to $27.50, in trading on the New York Stock Exchange.

Daniel C. Benton, microcomputer analyst at Goldman, Sachs & Co., said Dell was the only computer maker to post larger, year-to-year earnings gains in the second quarter than the first quarter.

Tandy

Net income for the Fort Worth-based company fell to $18.9 million, or 23 cents a share, from $56.9 million, or 72 cents a share, in the corresponding quarter last year. Sales fell 5.3 percent, to $985.2 million, from $1.04 billion.

Dell Computer

Net income jumped to $12.4 million, or 50 cents a share, in the period ended Aug. 4, compared with $6.4 million, or 32 cents a share, in the corresponding period a year ago. Sales for the company, based in Austin, Texas, rose 64.2 percent, to $200 million, from $121.8 million.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Mutual funds best investment for grandchildren

By Bill Doyle

Q. I have about $10,000 to invest for the future education of my three young grandchildren. Naturally, I would like safety and also some appreciation, without my grandchildren having to pay taxes each year. Would U.S. Treasury securities or a no-load mutual fund be the better choice?

Doyle

A. Safety and appreciation in value do not go together naturally. When you invest for appreciation — usually referred to as "growth" — you take on some risk. On the other side of the coin, safe investments produce income but seldom any growth.

Because they are backed by the U.S. government, Treasury securities have the highest safety rating and they pay interest. If you go that route for your grandchildren and keep reinvesting the interest payments, the size of each account will constantly increase.

However, that will not be true growth, which is a measurement of gain in investment value while not taking into account interest and/or dividends.

In choosing between the two types of investments you mention, I would come down on the side of the mutual fund. And I would pick a no-load fund with growth as its investment objective and therefore holds common stocks with past performance and future potential for growth in value.

There's no getting around the fact that Treasury securities would be safer. However, over extended periods of time the investment results of most mutual funds have been better than Treasuries.

With the amount of money you plan to invest for them, your grandkids won't have to pay income tax for years to come. A dependent child under age 14 does not pay tax on his or her first $500 of annual investment income. The next $500 is taxed at the child's rate — almost certainly 15 percent. Anything above that is taxed at the parents' rate.

Q. If a mutual fund has a 5.5 percent load and a five-year yield of 120 percent, would it still be a good investment?

A. It's a cinch you don't mean the fund's "yield," which is arrived at by dividing the dividends paid over a year's time by the fund's per share value. No fund has ever had a 120 percent yield.

More likely, that number is the fund's "total performance," also called "total return." That is a measurement of gain or loss in value of an investment in a mutual fund, assuming all dividends and capital gains distributions were reinvested to purchase additional shares.

If XYZ Mutual Fund had a five-year, 120 percent total, $1,000 invested in that fund would have become $2,220 over that time span.

That's outstanding performance. Lipper Analytical Services, which keeps tabs on such things, notes only 11 funds did better in the five years ended June 30.

But these performance figures do not take the load into account. With a 5.5 percent commission load taken out of the investment at the time of purchase, $1,000 would buy $945 worth of shares. With a 120 percent total return, that amount would become $2,079.

Keep in mind that past performance is no guarantee of future result.

Q. Fifteen years ago, I received a large inheritance. My son, an attorney in Washington, invested it for me. He put half in mutual funds and half in annuities. I am now ready to retire. The investments have done well. But, much to my surprise, I did only slightly better in the mutual funds than in the annuities.

I thought mutual funds were supposed to be such hot stuff. Why did the annuities do almost as well?

A. It could be that your son either picked clunker mutual funds or exceptionally fine annuities. No two of either are alike. In general, however, mutual funds have out-performed annuities.

Where did you get the notion a law degree qualifies your son to pick good investments?

Mexico's big lake gives up its water

CHAPALA, Mexico (AP) — One of Latin America's largest lakes is vanishing, sucked up by a thirsty nation that never imagined something so vast and rich could die.

Lake Chapala holds less than one-third the water it did in 1923, when D.H. Lawrence lived and wrote on its shores.

In "The Plumed Serpent," he described a great "expanse of water, like a sea, trembling, trembling, trembling to a far distance."

A few blocks from the house Lawrence rented, Claudio Cuevas, a third-generation Chapala hotelier, sat in the octagonal dining room of his Gran Hotel Nido, pondering sepia photos on the wall.

"We won't be able to hold up our heads if we let the biggest lake in Mexico die," he said.

The photos show sail canoes laden with freight, men in straw boaters on the decks of elegant steamers, water lapping at the top of a pier. They capture Lake Chapala's golden age, the early part of the century before the explosive growth of Mexico's cities.

Today, piers jut into space and cattle graze around the exposed piles. The yacht club is stranded, its mooring facilities at least half a mile from the water.

"It's probably the only pier in the world where you have to take a taxi to the boats," said Tony Burton, a British naturalist who lives at Chapala.

When the photos in Cuevas' hotel were taken, the lake was 30 feet deep, teeming with succulent whitefish. It held 8 billion cubic yards of water and covered 465 square miles.

Today, the average depth is about 9 feet. Chapala holds 2.3 billion cubic yards of water and the surface has shrunk to less than 330 square miles. The whitefish are gone.

Cuevas said Chapala, the third largest fresh-water lake in Latin America after Lake Titicaca and Lake Nicaragua, "should be a problem of international concern, but all we hear is talk, talk, talk. We're drowning in words."

The problem is simply described. More water is being taken from Lake Chapala than nature can pour into the rivers, streams and underground aquifers that nourish it. The water quenches the thirst of Mexico City and Guadalajara, Mexico's largest cities, and the farming and ranching country that feeds them.

Jorge Matute Remus has fought to save the lake since he was mayor of Guadalajara in the 1950s, then head of the city water department.

He said Chapala's decline began in the 1940s, but no one noticed.

The Lerma River, which feeds the lake, was diverted to provide drinking water for Mexico City, 300 miles away. Irrigation systems were built and ranchers began gouging out reservoirs. Thousands of wells were dug on farms and in booming communities of the river basin.

Growth eventually became a population explosion. The number of people in Guadalajara, 25 miles from the lake, doubled between 1976 and 1990 to more than 4 million.

Lakeside villages became resorts where thousands of retired Americans settled among the bougainvillea and mango trees of Chapala's eternal spring.

Mexico City became a metropolis of more than 15 million people — equal to the entire country's population when Matute was born 80 years ago.

Through it all, as always, the lake seemed to rise and fail to the rhythm of the rains.

Then came one of the driest years in memory. "The long decline began in 1976 after the rains failed," Matute said. "The lake never recovered."

It took another decade for Chapala to shrink so visibly that the problem could no longer be denied.

In 1989, the federal government and the four states of the Lerma-Chapala basin signed a vague agreement saying the lake should be saved.

ADVERTISEMENT FOR BIDS
NOTICE TO BIDDERS

Sealed proposals addressed to the Honorable Mayor and City Council of Midland, Texas, will be received at the office of the Secretary, City Hall, Midland, Texas until 10:00 A.M., Monday, September 9, 1991 for furnishing all necessary materials, machinery, equipment, appurtenances, and labor for the following projects as contained in the Midland Airport, Midland, Texas. These improvements are contained in the "City of Midland, Texas, Midland Airport Concrete Runway Repair (Phase I) and Air Field Security Fencing", dated July, 1991.

Immediately following the closing of time for receipt of bids, the above will be publicly opened and read aloud. Any bid received after closing time will be returned unopened.

The principal items of work for Midland Airport are set forth in specifications. The principal items of work for Security Fencing are set forth in specifications. However, the work items may generally be defined as: Remove existing 20,750 linear feet of existing 4' fence, install approximate 22,250 linear feet of 6 foot chain link fence with three strand barbed wire, install two 14' hydraulic gates with one 20' gate, one 6' gate, and lights, install one 24' double swing gate, level and grade approximately 2,000 cubic yards of material, excavate and remove approximately 50 existing utility poles, excavate and remove approximately 4,200 yards of existing asphaltic surface and base material, excavate approximately 4,500 square yards of 8" flexible base, install approximately 3,800 square yards of 1-½" asphaltic surface course with prime and tack coats, apply approximately 42,500 square yards of approved asphalt emulsion seal coat, apply approximately 1,400 gallons of emulsified asphalt for slurry seal back coat to designated areas, remove 4" depth of brush from approximately 115 acres of airfield property, remove old 4" underdrain and backfill with approved material, and related and incidental work. Additionally, the 1-Joint Sealing, Clean and repair approximately 27,200 linear feet of joints in concrete pavement, and seal approximately 350 linear feet of cracks in concrete pavement, clean and repair approximately 5,250 square feet of concrete apron, and related items of work.

A bid proposal guaranty is to accompany the bid, thereby guaranteeing the faithful performance of the work that the bidder will enter into the written contract. The guaranty is to amount to five percent (5%) of the total bid and must be in the form of cash or certified check, issued by a legal depository to the City of Midland, or a bid bond. If in the form of cash or certified check, it is hereby agreed, understood and agreed the City of Midland has a right to keep the cash or check as liquidated damages if such bidder withdraws its bid within sixty (60) days after the opening thereof, or if such bid is accepted and before official rejection of such bid, or, if successful in securing the award thereof, and such bidder fails to enter into the contract and furnish satisfactory performance bonds and payment bond, if a bid bond is submitted, it shall be executed on forms contained in these contract documents by a corporate surety authorized to do business in the State of Texas, acceptable to the City of Midland and accepted according to the latest list of companies holding certificates of authority from the Secretary of the Treasury of the United States of America. Proposals submitted without bid guaranty in the form of cash, certified check or bid bond of 5% of the maximum bid will not be considered.

The successful bidder will be required to furnish a Performance Bond and a Payment Bond each in the amount of the contract, written by a responsible Surety Company authorized to do business in the State of Texas and satisfactory to the Owner, as required by Article 5160, V.A.T.C.S., as amended by H.B. 344, passed by the 56th Legislature, Regular Session, 1959.

All lump sum and unit prices must be stated in both words and figures. The Owner reserves and right to reject any or all bids and to waive formalities. In case of ambiguity or lack of clearness in stating the prices in the bids, the Owner reserves the right to consider the most unfavorable to the construction thereof, or to reject the bid. Unreasonably low ("unbalanced") bid prices will authorize the Owner to reject the bid.

Bidders are requested to inspect the site of the work and to inform themselves regarding all local conditions.

This project is an AIP Project. The general contract is under order subject to Executive Order 11246 of September 24, 1965, as amended, and to the equal opportunity clause contained in these specifications. The Bidder must agree to the information required by the proposed form.

The successful bidder will be required to submit a Certification of Nonsegregated Facilities prior to the award of the contract, and to notify prospective subcontractors of the requirements for the certification, where the subcontract exceeds $10,000. Copies of the Certification and the Notice to Subcontractors appear in the specifications.

In all areas of employment, women and men will be afforded equal opportunity for employment. The employment of women shall not diminish the standards or requirements for the employment of minorities.

Minimum wages and labor rates for the various classes of work to be performed have been established by the Secretary of Labor. A schedule of labor classifications and wage rates to be paid and included in the specifications and will be made a part of the contract. Each bid form shall contain a statement that the prices bid are based on such wage rates.

This project is subject to Equal Opportunity, Affirmative Action, Minority Business Enterprise Contract Provisions, and other requirements stated in the Instruction to Bidders and other sections of the contract specifications and contract documents.

POLICY. It is the policy of the Department of Transportation (DOT) that disadvantaged business enterprises as defined in 49 CFR Part 23 shall have the maximum opportunity to participate in the performance of contracts financed in whole or in part with Federal funds.

All bidders are proposers shall make good faith efforts, as defined in Appendix A of 49 CFR Part 23, Regulations of the Office of the Secretary of Transportation, to subcontract 10.0 percent of the dollar value of the prime contract to small business concerns owned and controlled by socially and economically disadvantaged individuals (DBE). In the event that the bidder for this solicitation is certified as a DBE, the contract goal shall be deemed to have been met. Individuals who are rebuttably presumed to be socially and economically disadvantaged include Black Americans, Hispanic Americans, Native Americans, Asian-Pacific Americans and Asian-Indian Americans. The apparent successful bidder (proposer) will be required to submit information concerning the DBE's that will participate in this contract. The information includes the name and address of each DBE they will use to subcontract, a description of the work to be performed by each named firm, and the dollar value of each proposed DBE subcontract. If the bidder fails to achieve the minimum goal established herein, it will be required to provide documentation concerning efforts that it made good faith efforts in attempting to do so. A bid that fails to meet these requirements will be considered nonresponsive.

Information for bidders, proposal forms, specifications and plans are on file in the office of the Director of Airports, Midland International Airport, Midland, Texas, and at the office of Parkhill, Smith & Cooper, Inc., Consulting Engineers, 3214 Thunderbird Drive, Midland, Texas 79703, phone (915) 697-1447.

Copies of the plans and specifications may be secured at the office of Parkhill, Smith & Cooper, Inc., Consulting Engineers, 3214 Thunderbird Drive, Midland, Texas 79703, (915) 697-1447, at a cost of $50.00. The cost for the plans and specifications is NON-REFUNDABLE.

MOONLIGHTING!

The Midland Reporter-Telegram has several distributorships which need to be filled with responsible individuals.

OFTEN ASKED QUESTIONS:

Is it worthwhile for adults also?

Yes! Our current distributor force is already 90% adult and 10% youth. Morning newspaper routes are attractive for:

- ADULTS who have full-time jobs, yet want to supplement their income with a steady part-time job.
- MOTHERS who can't justify a small job and daycare, because as a distributor, you do not need daycare!
- COLLEGE STUDENTS needing a part-time job which will work with classes!
- SENIOR CITIZENS wanting regular exercise, added income, or just want to work with people, neighbors, and friends.

How much money can I make as a distributor?

Depending on the size of the distributorship from $300 to $700 monthly! Some make even more!

How long does it take?

The actually delivery takes 1 - 2 hours Monday - Saturday, and 2 - 3 hours on Sunday, again depending on the size of the distributorship. Also, a few hours a month are needed to collect from subscribers. Many distributors choose to handle some of this by putting envelopes in subscribers' papers. Collecting in person will be necessary though!

When do papers have to be delivered by?

6 a.m. Monday - Friday and 7 a.m. on Saturday, Sunday and holidays.

Do I ever get a day off?

The job requires a 7-day a week commitment. However, distributors do take days off by finding a friend or family member to substitute for them!
