Dawson County Minister Keeps His Silence

Special to The Record News.

LAMESA, Texas, Feb. 7—The Rev. W. E. Duke, Baptist minister and storekeeper of Dawson county, maintained silence tonight in regard to the fatal shooting of J. A. Cox in front of the Duke store late last night. Rev. Duke will be given an examining trial Thursday morning, according to County Attorney A. W. Gibson.

The shooting occurred at Klondyke, 15 miles southwest of here, where Cox operated a filling station. Cox was killed in front of the store in which Rev. Duke and his family live.

The minister, who has been pastor of the Midway Baptist church for the last several years, surrendered to Sheriff Joe L. Ray and Deputy Sheriff A. M. Bennett a short time after the shooting.

He was in conference late today with Judge J. E. Garland but declined to make any statement. Efforts of the county attorney to question the minister also met with a flat refusal to discuss the affair until the examining trial.

Cox is survived by his widow and four children, a brother now in New Mexico and other relatives.

The body is being held in a local undertaking parlor awaiting the arrival of relatives.

Directors Consider Plans For New Organization For Wichita

Raising of practically 90 per cent of the $54,000 budget of the chamber of commerce up to the present time without a personal campaign of solicitation was announced at a lengthy session of the board of directors held following a dinner at the Wichita club Thursday night at 6:30 o'clock.

The report on the budget submitted by Hubert M. Harrison, general manager, showed that signed pledges amounting to $46,322.25 for the work of the organization in 1929 are now on hand. Pledges from several members who have not yet responded to the letters mailed out a few weeks ago, and some of whom are out of the city, are expected to equal the amounts devoted to the chamber of commerce work last year, and will bring the total to $50,223.25. Added assurance of realizing the entire amount named for activities of the organization this year is provided in the constant reception of new members with considerable contributions, it was said.

HAMMONDS TO CONTINUE FIGHT

'Little Corporal' Says Her Drive 'Just Started'

OKLAHOMA CITY, Feb. 7. (UP)—The fight has just begun for the woman Napoleon of Oklahoma politics, she announced tonight.

Banned to her fireside, Mrs. J. O. Hammonds, former confidential secretary and political strategist for Gov. Henry S. Johnston, has taken up a militant pen to write the "inside story" of Johnston's impeachment and threatened ouster.

Story Awaits Trial

The story, as written by Johnston's "little corporal" at her home, is expected to be released when the governor begins his trial before the senate court of impeachment next week.

Although officially resigned from an important post in Johnston's semi-official cabinet, Mrs. Hammonds will "take up the torch" to carry on his fight, she announced. From her fireside, between domestic duties, she planned a fiery comeback.

"Are you sick of politics?" she was asked.

Politics Nauseates

"Yes, I am sick! I am nauseated with the inner machinations and manipulations of politicians to control government for selfish interests," Mrs. Hammonds replied.

OFFICERS HERE SEEK BODY OF OKLA. FARMER

Employe of Missing Cotton County Man Held In Wichita Jail

THEFT CHARGES FILED

$500 Reward Offered In Hunt for Land Owner, Absent Since Jan. 27

Charged with the theft of 11 head of cattle from the Cotton county farm of Arthur Pendergraft, prominent Oklahoma farmer missing since Jan. 27, an employe on the Pendergraft farm is being held in the Wichita county jail.

Employe Faces Charge

Mike Anglin and George W. Anderson, assistant district attorney working with Cotton county officials spent all of Thursday in a fruitless search for the body of the missing man. Pendergraft was seen in the cafe of a Wichita Falls hotel 10 days ago. Fearing that his brother has been slain, L. Pendergraft, speaking for all the relatives of the lost man, Thursday afternoon offered a $500 reward for information leading to the discovery of his whereabouts.

Pendergraft came to Wichita Falls with a man who has been for 12 years his employe and a member of his household, relatives and officials told the district attorney's office. At the time they left the Cotton county farm, Pendergraft expected to go on to East Texas, Mrs. Pendergraft declared. The employe returned home on Jan. 28, explaining that his employer had met with another man and had stayed in Wichita Falls to complete business transactions. Alarmed at their failure to hear any word after a 10-day wait, members of the family, with the man, came to Wichita Falls for the search Wednesday.

Arrest of the employe on theft charges followed the discovery that 11 head of cattle were missing from the Cotton county farm.

Investigation uncovered the fact that he had received a $575 check from the Wichita Packing company, George Anderson, district attorney, said. The man said he sold the cattle upon the instructions of Mr. Pendergraft, given him upon the occasion of their last meeting.

Last Seen Here

Pendergraft told the cashier of the cafe in a local hotel late Sunday afternoon, Jan. 27, that he wanted a $20 check cashed to pay his expenses to East Texas, the cashier told investigators. Up until late Thursday night, that was the last trace of him here.

The search Thursday took Mike Anglin out to a farm in Archer county, west of Lake Wichita, recently leased by Mr. Pendergraft. The missing man is the owner of five farms in Cotton county. His family includes three children.

Sheriff D. O. Hooper of Cotton county and C. S. McCuistion, county attorney, are assisting in the investigation.

claimed "tool" of Richards, at Laredo shortly after Orville L. Mathews, election bet stakeholder, had been shot to death. He testified that Crabb told him Richards had nothing to do with the forgery that led to Mathews' death, but that he (Brite) did not believe it and thought Crabb was "doing this to cover up Ben."

Better Job Proposed

After returning from Laredo, Brite said, he was sitting in the office of one of Richards' attorneys when Richards asked him what his salary was.

"I told him $175 a month and Ben said: 'That is not good enough job for you—I can get you a better job with the city.'"

MURDER FARM OWNER GIVEN DEATH PENALTY

Murder of Three Boys On Chicken Ranch to Be Avenged

YOUTH THANKS JURY

Northcott Unmoved When Jury Announces Result Of Considerations

RIVERSIDE, Calif., Feb 7. (UB)—Twelve grim-faced, men jurors tonight sentenced youthful Gordon Stewart Northcott to hang by the neck until dead, for the murder of three little boys on his chicken ranch near here.

It took the jury, which for 23 drama-filled days has heard the horrible details of the crimes the youthful Canadian committed on his lonely ranch, but three and a half hours to find him guilty on all three murder counts.

He was charged with the atrocious killing of little Walter Collins and the Winslow brothers, Lewis and Nelson, and of dissolving their bodies in quicklime.

Four Ballots Taken

The jury balloted four times. The first two were merely to determine the thoughts of the jurors. The first of the official ballots was to determine the guilt or innocence of the accused youth. He was found guilty without a dissenting vote. The second was to determine whether the jurors, reminded by the judge that if they recommended mercy he must sentence Northcott to life imprisonment, should return an unqualified verdict. By bringing in a verdict with no recommendation the jury automatically gave Northcott a death sentence.

After Judge Freeman had thanked the jury for its services, the accused youth, smiling and with his confidence unshaken, said that he thanked the jurors' "conscientious attention to their duties."

Sentence Monday

The judge asked Prosecutor Bedwine if it would be all right to pass formal sentence on the convicted slayer Monday at 2 p. m., and received the prosecutor's consent.

Northcott then said: "Its immaterial to me."

As he was being returned to the county jail, the unshaken chicken rancher said "the play has just begun." It is viewed as certain that he will appeal the case.

Northcott and his mother, Mrs. Louise Northcott, were captured in Canada several months ago after an international search. Mrs. Northcott, brought here from San Quentin prison to testify at her son's defense, was sentenced to life for her confessed participation in the murder of Walter Collins.

Northcott, who acted as his own attorney, closed his defense late today in a dramatic plea for acquittal.

It was the most amazing address ever heard in Riverside county.

For practically four hours Northcott, acting as his own attorney, addressed the jury in his own behalf, and his last statements were:

"If you find I am guilty it is up to you gentlemen to decide the penalty—whether you shall take away my life or liberty or grant me precious freedom. I have done the best I could. I thank you."

Jury Discharged After Deadlock In Suit Against Wichita Sheriff

After deliberating a day without reaching a verdict, the jury in Holt Burgess' damage suit against Sheriff W. G. Bralley was discharged in district court at Fort Worth Thursday, according to Associated Press dispatches to The Record News.

It was the second trial of the case in which Burgess sought $10,000 damages on the allegation that he was unlawfully arrested and imprisoned by Sheriff Bralley two years ago. During the first trial a non-suit was taken by the plaintiff after the case went to the jury.

Burgess' arrest in Fort Worth was the result of a Wichita county grand jury indictments against one W. H. Burgess. With information that the man worked for a packing house in Fort Worth, Sheriff Bralley insisted that if there was error, it was not made by him.

County Agrees to "Friendly Suit" To Test Claims for $31,000 Tax Fees

Suit for the collection of $31,000 claimed from the county by Guy C. Raley, county tax collector, and M. L. Tittle, his predecessor, for commissions on delinquent tax collections since 1919, will be filed in the district court here next week, T. R. Boone, attorney for the plaintiffs told members of the commissioners' court at a special meeting Thursday.

The announcement followed the formal rejection of the collector's application for the money. The court voted to waive service in the suit. It was explained that the litigation will take the form of a friendly suit to determine the exact legal status of the two claims. The trial will probably come up for the first time during the March term of court, Wayne Somerville, county attorney, announced.

Mr. Raley is asking for $18,642.93 and Mr. Tittle is claiming $13,409.01.

The case arose with the question of the validity of a law which, in 1919, repealed another law allowing the collectors a 5 per cent commission on the collection of delinquent taxes. The supreme court has ruled in a case on trial in Bexar county

CHILDRESS C.-C. HOLDS BANQUET

'Selling Childress to Childress' Theme of Program

By C. W. ROGERS
Record News Staff Correspondent

CHILDRESS, Texas, Feb. 7—Commercial leaders of Childress dedicated their energies during the next year to "Selling Childress to Childress" in the annual banquet of the Childress Chamber of Commerce held tonight.

While every phase of the past and future development of the community was exhaustively discussed by various local speakers, the gathering heard a speech by a Childress county farm girl, Elizabeth Gibson of Loco, giving the rural club members' viewpoint on demonstration clubs and similar organizations.

300 Attend

Approximately 300 persons attended the banquet, the number being held down by the weather. Fifty-two persons in various parts of the Panhandle were unable to attend because of the heavy snowfall and low temperature.

The invocation was made by the Rev. J. S. Mullen, pastor of the Central Christian church. The Greenwich Village Revellers played during the dinner.

Numbers scheduled on the program by the chamber of commerce male quartet were not given because of the illness of David Fitzgerald, member of the quartet.

Reasons For Growth

The paramount object of the meeting, as distinguished from those of former years, was to more forcefully direct attention of the citizenship to the underlying reasons for continued growth of the city in past years and to the warranties and opportunities it presents for progressive expansion.

These were contemplated in the theme, "Selling Childress to Childress," elaborated by an exposition of "Ten Basic Reasons Why Childress Is Growing to the Proportions of a Metropolitan City."

The reasons were recited in numerical order in separate addresses by competent authorities:

1. "Childress—A Place Where Industry Receives a Munificent Reward," by Judge Ross Bell, late of Paducah, reciting that Childress is a good place for the professional man, the business man or the man of average ability; or in which the day laborer may earn a good living; both industry and agriculture offering employment which promise above average compensation.

Healthy City

2. "Childress—A Comfortable and Healthy Place in Which to Live," by Dr. J. H. Jernigan, city and county health officer. Reciting that climatic conditions are agreeable; general condition of health excellent; rate of mortality extremely low.

3. "Childress Provides All Municipal Facilities," by Fred A. Storey, editor Childress Index, a presentation of facts covering water, sewerage, lighting, power, telephone and paving systems, street lighting, police and fire protection, hospitalization, etc.

4. "Childress Provides Splendid Civic, Esthetic and Cultural Advantages," by Mrs. J. C. Thomas, president Woman's Department club, directing attention to unusual number of organizations; Board of city development, chamber of commerce, Lions club, Rotary club, Business and Professional Women's club, Woman's Department club, embracing book, garden, music and domestic science clubs; Forum, Little theater and Library; all fraternal organizations, complete complement of instructors in art, voice, expression, violin and piano; with especial reference to parks, playgrounds and swimming pool.

5. "Childress Provides Excellent Educational Advantages," by P. P. Brewster, superintendent of schools, a recital of facts concerning school system, intended to induce additions to citizenship.

Fine Churches

6. "Childress Is Provided With Magnificent Churches of Various Denominations," by the Rev. Garland Shell, pastor First Presbyterian church, a comparison of spiritual with material growth of city.

7. "Childress Has Adequate and Increasing Means of Transportation," by Don Warren, district manager D. J. Young and company, lumber and material distributors, emphasizing that arteries of transportation, rail connections, bus and truck lines and system of concrete highways under construction are adequate; other arteries are in prospect; definite plans for air transport are being formulated.

8. "Childress Has a Sincere and Friendly Citizenship," by C. C. Broughton, county attorney.

9. "Childress—A City of Undeveloped Opportunities," by Jerry W. Debenport, secretary board of city development and chamber of commerce.

10. "Childress—A City Possessing an Aggressive, Progressive, Basicly Sound and Righteous Citizenship," Jerry W. Debenport.

School Census Grows

Most substantial evidence of consistent growth of Childress is reflected in statistics covering the last five-year period. Most convincing is that the scholastic census shows a growth of 52.1 per cent.

Growth of the period is summarized, in part, in these statistics compiled in the offices of the board of city development:

Childress County Farm Girl, 16 Tells of Club Work at C.-C. Dinner

By C. W. ROGERS

CHILDRESS, Texas, Feb. 7—The influence of the 4-H club in elevating home life in rural communities was convincingly told by Elizabeth Gibson of the Loco community at the annual meeting of the Childress Chamber of Commerce and Board of City Development Thursday evening. The subject of her address was: "What 4-H Club Work Has Done for Me."

Miss Gibson, 16 years old, four years ago joined the Loco 4-H girls' club organized by Miss Mary Sitton, Childress county home demonstration agent. She was elected president of the club.

She now is chairman of the girls' county council. It was largely through her efforts that a woman's home demonstration club was organized in her home community. She also has been instrumental in developing at Loco two girls' demonstration teams.

Most notable among her accomplishments aside from the winning of many prizes and honors was the canning during the last three years of 800 quarts of fruits, vegetables and meats, having a retail value of $400.

Miss Gibson has won trips to A. and M. short courses at College Station and to the Dallas fair.

At Dallas last year she won second prize on her poultry pen and exhibit of sewing and home improvement articles.

ELIZABETH GIBSON

Miss Gibson is a forceful speaker, and it is said her club training has qualified her to address large audiences without experiencing embarrassment. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T. H. Gibson of Loco.

that the repeal is invalid, and that the former statute, allowing the commission, is the governing act.

In making a motion to reject the claim Thursday afternoon, M. A. Bundy, commissioner from precinct 1, explained: "We want these men to have the money if the law gives it to them, but we want a court of competent jurisdiction to decide the question."

The motion to reject was passed over the vigorous opposition of L. L. Kuntz of Iowa Park, who claimed that the bill had not been properly presented and not been offered by E. P. Walsh in the regular manner. Mr. Walsh presented the statement prepared by the plaintiffs and told the court that he, personally, rejected the statement. Mr. Kuntz argued that the court could not act upon any claim made in such a manner. In his motion, Mr. Bundy met the question by proposing that the court say it would not agree to the claim, so that the attorney for the plaintiff could proceed.

Earlier in the afternoon members of the court went over again the question of paying the board bill of the children under the care of the Children's Aid society. They heard a suggestion from Judge P. A. Martin of the 89th district court that the county build a home of its own for delinquent and dependent children. Judge Martin said the problem was constantly growing more serious.

While indications were that the court would pay the bills as proposed, the court proposed action until its regular meeting Monday in order to have the bills prepared according to the specifications of the auditor's office.

State's Evidence Piles Up In Forgery Case

ards, testified yesterday that Richards engineered a conspiracy to collect the money and that he, as "Clyde R. Vest," collected the money and received approximately $350 as his "split."

Mayfield Testifies

A week after the run-off primary Orville Mathews, the stakeholder, was shot to death by V. Ray Adams of Bartlett, one of a coterie of bettors who placed their money against that of Richards. Adams recent trial for murder resulted in a mistrial.

Morris Mayfield, brother of Senator Earle B. Mayfield, testified today that he gave Richards $1,000 to bet on the Mayfield-Connally race when he learned that Adams and his associates were seeking a wager.

Asked if Richards had returned any of the money, Mayfield laughed and said, "No sir, I never thought any more of it. I decided the night of the election that it was lost and kissed it goodbye."

Seeking to impeach the testimony of Crabb, the defense put Tom Kinsella, a collector, on the stand. Kinsella said he was in the bank with Richards at the time the election bet checks were cashed and was introduced to a man whose name he thought was "West," and that this man was not Crabb.

Signature Asked

Kinsella said Mathews produced some pieces of paper and asked Richards to sign them. Richards signed and left with Kinsella, said the witness. State testimony was that Richards and Crabb went to Mathews' window at the bank and cashed the checks, after which they met in a nearby office building, where the money was turned over to Richards.

When they left the bank together, Kinsella testified, Richards was on his way to Greenville to participate in a cornerstone laying. To corroborate this testimony the defense introduced H. J. Emmins, who said he went to Greenville with Richards, and Sam Knight, Fort Worth police officer, who said he saw Richards in Greenville. Several other witnesses said they saw the defendant shortly before he left for Greenville.

NEW WORD

'Tendencious' Invented By Sir Austen In His Naval Tilt

LONDON, Feb. 7. (US)—Oh, lookit. See the new and pretty word Sir Austen Chamberlain, Britain's foreign secretary, has found for his naval dispute with the United States.

It is "tendencious."

Commander Josiah Wedgewood, Laborite, asked Sir Austen in the house of commons this afternoon:

"Do the advantages thought to be gained by insisting on our right of search and seizure outweigh the drawbacks of armament competition with America and the risk of bringing America into any war on the opposite side from us?"

Sir Austen answered:

"I deprecate these tendencious questions."

Better Than Whiskey For Colds and Flu

The sensation of the drug trade is Aspirona, the two-minute cold and cough reliever, authoritatively guaranteed by the laboratories; tested, approved and most enthusiastically endorsed by the highest authorities, and proclaimed by the people as 10 times as quick and effective as whiskey, rock and rye, or any other cold and cough remedy they have ever tried.

All drug stores are supplied with the wonderful elixir, so all you have to do is to step into the nearest drug store, hand the clerk 60c for a bottle of Aspirona and tell him to serve you two teaspoonfuls. With your watch in your hand, take the drink at one swallow and call for your money back in two minutes if you cannot feel the distressing symptoms of your cold fading away like a dream, within the time limit. Don't be bashful, for all druggists invite you and expect you to try it. Everybody's doing it.

Take the remainder of the bottle home to your wife and children, for Aspirona is by far the safest and most effective, the easiest to take and the most agreeable cold and cough remedy for children as well as adults. Quickest relief for catarrhal croup and children's choking up at night.—Adv.

SOL LASKY, Pres.

The unenlightened woman who still suffers every month, receives little sympathy when she could so easily end those pains with Midol. This merciful medicine is not a narcotic, you know. Nor does it interfere in the slightest with the normal and natural process of menstruation. It does banish the pain—in five to seven minutes. Because it acts directly on the organs affected. If taken ahead of time, you may avoid a single uncomfortable moment. Try to realize what a truly wonderful discovery this is; it has made at least one form of suffering quite needless. When every drugstore has these harmless tablets isn't it foolish to be a martyr? Midol costs fifty cents, in aluminum case.*

*Midol's comfort is not confined to any certain days or age. It relieves at any time of life. Its ease is felt immediately in cases of nervous headache, backache, cramping, hot flashes and all febrile pain peculiar to women.

CONGRESS CAN EXPAND CHEST

Present Session Well Up On Important Work

WASHINGTON, Feb. 7. (UP)—Important work on the present congress is virtually completed with almost a month of its short session remaining.

This condition is unique, especially in the senate, where the closing weeks of the short session ordinarily bring a legislative jam or a filibuster. It is particularly remarkable this year because of the ambitious program undertaken by senate leaders.

The Boulder dam bill, a highly controversial measure which had been the cause of long filibusters in previous sessions, was passed early in the present session.

Pact Ratified

Then the senate ratified the Kellogg peace treaty by an almost unanimous vote after several weeks of debate which in certain stages threatened a filibuster which would have made completion of its program impossible.

The navy cruiser construction bill passed the senate Tuesday and went to the house for concurrence. Prompt action there is expected and work on the three major measures of the session will be finished.

The Boulder dam and the cruiser bills passed the house at the last session so only the senate amendments require consideration there.

The peace pact was strictly senate business since the house has no voice in treaty-making.

Reapportionment Passed

Besides this three-fold program, the house passed a reapportionment bill calling for a new distribution of congressional representation based on the 1930 census.

Leaders may decide to bring this measure before the senate during the remaining month. The steering committee has not yet given it a place on the program of unfinished business, however.

Despite this unusual volume of highly important legislation, both houses have managed to make the usual progress on routine appropriation bills.

The house has passed all but three—navy, legislative and second deficiency—and the senate all but five—agriculture, war department and the three not yet acted upon by the house. Some of the bills already passed are still in conference and will not become law until the conference reports are approved in both houses.

Aged Lover Seeks His Tardy Bride

DALLAS, Feb. 7. (AP)—Woman's proverbial tardiness at appointments finally aggravated a Dallas man so badly that he has asked the district attorney's office to help him.

Six months ago after he had furnished his bride-to-be with a trousseau and loaned her his car she promised to meet him at the courthouse in 40 minutes.

The man, who is elderly, said the woman was well dressed and spoke knowingly of the Einstein theory. "Maybe under the Einstein theory of relativity she still has several months of the 40 minutes left," the man said sheepishly, "but I would like to have her and our car, if you can locate them."

Mother Who Killed Two Babies Confesses

CARROLL, Iowa, Feb. 7. (UP)—A broken and incoherent story of the killing of her two children, Walter, 5, and Leonard, 3, was given to authorities today by their 35-year-old mother, Mrs. John Herbers Jr., who is held on a charge of double murder.

Mrs. Herbers said she had contemplated suicide for some time because of illness, but that the thought of beating her children to death did not occur to her until she heard the rumble of the afternoon train bringing her husband home from his work.

After killing the children the mother attempted to slash her throat, but her husband arrived home in time to stop her.

Sooner Impeachment Already Costs $590

OKLAHOMA CITY, Feb. 7. (UP)—A bill for $590 to pay employes of the senate court of impeachment was presented to A. S. J. Shaw today, despite the fact that the court had been in actual session less than 30 minutes.

The bill was signed by L. N. Nichols, senate auditor; C. S. Storms, president protempore, and approved by Chief Justice Mason.

It provides for 10 days' employment of 10 persons, including five door-keepers, a marshal, assistant marshal, telephone attendant, bailiff and impeachment clerk.

Husbands, Wives and Children Traded After Granting of Divorces

MINOT, N. D., Feb. 7. (AP)—A story of an exchange of husbands, wives and children by two families living on farms near Lansford, was revealed here today by divorce records.

Both Mrs. Lawrence C. Rikensrud and Mrs. Willis Knight obtained divorces here on the same day, each charging her husband with infidelity. Each wife testified for the other and the husbands made no answer to the charges.

Then, with the divorce decrees issued, Mrs. Rikensud and Knight decided to get married. Mrs. Knight and Rikensrud also had the same idea. So the four went to Melita, Manitoba, where a double wedding ceremony was performed.

Afterward the four made the trip back to their farms, about a mile and a half apart, in the same automobile. There are five children in the Knight family, and two in the Rikensrud family. In each case the mother was granted custody of the children and removed them from one farm to the other, with the exception of the oldest Knight boy, who stayed with his father.

BROKER TELLS ABOUT PROFITS

Court Investigators Hear Of Oil Settlement

OKLAHOMA CITY, Feb. 7. (UP)—E. L. Kistler, oil investment broker, received $38,000 in the $225,000 settlement of the Briscoe-Gypsy Oil company case, he told supreme court investigators today.

He did not recall any active part his firm had played in the litigation. He said he remembered paying for one legal brief, alleged to have been drawn by J. D. Lydick, Oklahoma City attorney.

Kistler was questioned at length concerning the Briscoe case, which was settled for $225,000 after Fred P. Branson, former chief justice, had sustained an original judgment of $705,000.

$1,500 Spent

Kistler came into the case on a half-and-half basis with William Neff to finance an appeal to the supreme court, he testified. He said he spent $1,500.

Neff, former wealthy Muskogee attorney, had lost his money in a newspaper enterprise, Kistler testified.

Neff complained to him that J. B. Diggs, Gypsy Oil company counsel, had been allowed by the trial court to build such a voluminous record that he could not finance printing of the case, Kistler said.

After Ames, Lowe and Cochran had been repaid by the Gypsy to argue a motion for rehearing, he advised Neff to hire George Ramsey, Tulsa attorney, and Indian title specialist, Kistler said. Ramsey's contract called for a fee of $10,000. He was paid $3,500.

Efforts by O. O. Owens, committee interrogator, to show Lydick & McPherren were overpaid for their part in the case, were substantiated by the witness. Lydick & McPherren received $12,500.

Lydick & McPherren were to receive one-sixth of Neff's share, he said.

Rumors Retold

At the time the contract was made this fee would have amounted to $33,333.33, he said.

Kistler testified about rumors concerning the court. The extra attorneys were retained in order to protect themselves in case the rumors were true, he testified.

Jackson Thompson, Checotah merchant, told of his part as interpreter for Robert Kelley, Creek Indian, in the Kelly vs. The New State Land company suit, which cost the Wilcox Oil and Gas company $147,000.

Thompson testified Neff's principal business was clouding titles. When Thompson was told it would be necessary to pay the firm of Allen & Underwood an extra $10,000 in addition to their contract fee, it was not explained to him in what way this money would be used, Thompson testified.

R. C. Allen, member of the firm, was a former law partner of Branson, then chief justice.

The rest of Thompson's testimony was outlining the legal point in the Indian title.

Additional testimony was given the committee concerning purported influence of District Judge Wayne Bayless of Claremore, with Justice C. W. Mason of the supreme court.

ROTARY HEARS TALK BY HORD

Oxygen Manufacturer Tells Of Plant Here

A history of the recent developments and industrial uses of oxygen was given before the members of the Rotary club Thursday noon by Samuel R. Hord of the Wichita Falls Oxygen company, samples of liquid oxygen being exhibited on the various tables.

The industrial development of oxygen has been concerned chiefly with the high cost of production, Mr. Hord said. The first method used was the separation of water into its component oxygen and hydrogen gases by the process of electrolysis, but with no sale for the hydrogen, oxygen was very expensive. When the packing industry created a large demand for hydrogen, the cost of both gases was greatly reduced. During the war, however, according to Mr. Hord, all supplies of hydrogen were required by the government, and packing plants devised substitutes which are still in use. A recurrence of the problem of disposing of the hydrogen element occasioned the perfection of means of taking oxygen from the air by liquefaction, which has effected a considerable reduction in production cost.

Mr. Hord stated that the use of modern oxygen torches offers practically no danger to the user.

A singsong led by R. E. Shepherd, with Mrs. Shepherd at the piano, preceded Mr. Hord's address. Guests were introduced by C. C. McDonald.

Majestic Bill Wins Approval

Week's Offering Hailed As One of Best

By The Record News Critic

A diversified show with good entertainment that is clean is on the Majestic's vaudeville program this week.

The absence of smutty lines and jokes, and the presence of entertainment that keeps the audience applauding every minute of the time is the unusual thing.

The audience at the opening show Thursday afternoon gave Bert Rome and Henry Dunn the biggest hand of any act. Bert 'n Henry sang 5,000 songs, according to their own statement, and they combine comedy chatter with music.

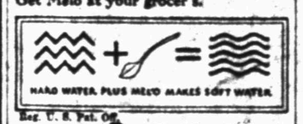

The frist three acts on the bill, however, appealed to this reviewer as being equally good and far, far above the average. Chinko, in a London juggling act, juggles radios, coal buckets, walkin' sticks and all manner of things at one time. He carries an able assistant and makes the first place on the bill a real bright spot.

Wilson, Kepple and Betty are three troupers who know how to troop. They do a tap dance sitting down, carry a real electric taxicab as part of their equipment, and keep the act running from one thing into another so rapidly that the audience finds itself laughing at one antic while starting to applaud the next. Harry Norwood and Alpha Hall have a skit called "And She Believed Him." It is filled with gags that are either new or are dressed up so even their oldest friends failed to recognize them, and it goes over with a bang. Then, as they would say at the race track, "The Four Diamonds" also ran. Rod La Rocque in "Captain Swagger," a movie, completes a bill well worth anyone's money.

Watch for this danger signal—a dirty ring around the washtubs

Have you seen it in your washtubs? Of course you have! Do you know what it means? Of course you know that it means the washing has been done in hard water. Soap combined with the hardness and made scum. The scum collected dirt, some went into the clothes, some formed the dirty ring.

Soften hard water with Melo and it becomes a wonderful cleaner, with or without soap. No dirty ring! White clothes! Soap saved, from ½ to ⅔ the amount ordinarily used. Use Melo wherever you need soft water. Notice how much more effective the soap is! Get Melo at your grocer's.

Mother Dies Happy in Belief Mock Marriage of Daughter Was Genuine

GLENDALE, Calif., Feb. 7. (INS)—Horman L. Wimmer, distinguished geologist, and Miss Ray V. Gwin, were man and wife today, having gone through two ceremonies, one a mock marriage to bring joy to the bride's dying mother.

Mrs. W. R. Gwin and her husband, a retired dentist were seriously injured in an automobile crash last week. Taken to a hospital here, physicians declared there was no hope for Mrs. Gwin's recovery.

She wanted, more than anything in the world, to witness the marriage of her daughter to Wimmer, but the three-day marriage license law blocked an immediate ceremony. The mock service was decided on as a desperate remedy, and Mrs. Gwin died happy in the belief that she had seen her daughter become the wife of the man she loved.

On Monday, at the bedside of Dr. Gwin, the couple went through another marriage service, this time a real one.

Mrs. Permillia Gwin, mother of Dr. Gwin, was killed in the same crash that fatally injured his wife.

'Love-Meter' Available to Wife In Nature of Hubby's Conduct

If a Woman Wants to Find Out Whether or Not Her Husband Loves Her, Let Her Get a Line On H's Conduct, for the Real Test of Love Is How a Man Treats a Woman.

A woman asks: "How can a wife tell whether her husband loves her or not?"

By the way he treats her. I take no stock in Oscar Wilde's decadent theory that "all men kill the thing they love." Nor do I believe that any man is cold and neglectful and stingy and tyrannical and abusive to his wife so long as he has a particle of affection for her.

It is against nature for us to hurt the thing we love. On the contrary, our spontaneous impulse is to cherish it, and to take care of it, and to see that no harm comes to it. We take this attitude even toward inanimate objects. We keep the car that we value polished until it shines. We hang our favorite picture in the best light. We keep our valuable jewelry safe from thieves. We pet and caress the dogs we love. We see that they have a soft bed to sleep on. We feed them on tidbits from our plates.

With the people we love this spirit is even more manifest. Our happiness consists in making them happy. We get out greatest thrill out of bringing smiles to their faces and knowing that we make the world soft and warm for them. You cannot imagine a father who loved his helpless little child brutally striking it. Nor a husband who loved his wife deliberately breaking her heart, nor doing to her the things that turned her life into cinders, ashes and dust.

Furthermore, we have only to observe the behavior of men during their courtship to see that as long as they love a woman they are good to her and considerate of her. Romeo doesn't bawl out Juliet and tell her what a fool she is whenever she expresses an opinion. Nor does he remind her of how much she costs him every time he has to feed her. Nor does he leave her sitting up by her lonesome while he chases off after other dames, or spends his evenings playing poker with the boys. Nor does he forget every anniversary and have to be reminded that Christmas comes this year on the 25th of December, and it is customary to receive gifts on the occasion.

On the contrary, while the lover is in love he delights in making his sweetie happy by showering attentions upon her, by lavishing flatteries upon her, and by surprising her with presents that show that he has observed and remembered all of her tastes and whims.

Of course, it is not to be expected that after marriage a man will keep up the high-pressure, romantic wooing of his ante-nuptial days but there is a big difference between gorging a woman on lollipops and treating her as if she had lost her sweet tooth entirely. Marriage is the crucible in which the promises of courtship are either entirely consumed or else come out fused in the pure gold out of which unbreakable wedding rings are made, and the man who really loves a woman is better to her after marriage than he was before, because he realizes how completely dependent she is on him for happiness.

All, then, that the wife has to do who wants to know how she stands with her husband is to get a line on his conduct. If he works early and late to try to keep her comfortable; if he wants her to have the best and to walk in silk attire, even if he has to wear his old suit another year, she may rest assured that he loves her still and sees in her the girl he married, even though he may be as dumb about the state of his affections as an oyster.

If, on the contrary, she is married to a man who is too temperamental to hold down a good job, and who lets her go shabby and fight off the bill collectors, or else take in boarders to support him, or if he is a man who belongs to expensive golf clubs and has to have money to spend on himself no matter what the family does without, she doesn't need to ask whether he loves her or not, for the answer is plain. He loves nobody but himself.

Nor does a wife need to worry about whether her husband loves her or not if he is a fireside companion. No wife has ever yet been clever enough to nail a man to his hearthstone if he desired to get away from it. If he stays with her, it is because he likes to, not because he has to.

Nor need any woman ask if her husband loves her if he is chasing around after other women. A man's heart is a hotel where one guest checks out before another one comes in, and as long as he has any real feeling for his wife the space is filled and vamps and sirens knock in vain at the door.

Nor need any wife ask if her husband loves her if he is penurious with her, and if he makes her come to him like a beggar for every cent she spends. If he cared for her, he would not subject her to that humiliation.

There are men who would be insulted if you told them that they did not love their wives, yet who never give their wives a dollar of their own, and who make the first of the month a day of terror to the unfortunate women who are married to them. Such men do not love their wives. Their only passion is for their pocketbooks.

Nor need a wife ask if her husband loves her if he is as cold as an icicle to her, if he never shows her any attention, or pays her a compliment, or gives her a kiss that isn't a flabby peck on the cheek. Such men may bestow a sort of near-affection on their wives, and it may be the best they have to give, but it is no more love than dishwater is champagne.

No man loves his wife who does not tell her of his affection every day of her life; who doesn't show her tenderness and consideration; who doesn't refrain from saying things to her that would hurt her feelings, and who doesn't do everything in his power to bring pleasure and happiness into her life and to make her happy.

—DOROTHY DIX.

JEAN ESCAPES 'POVERTY ROW'

Moviedom's 'Bush Leagues' Explained by Star

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Feb. 7. (UP)—"Poverty row" is the first and last resort of the ambitious screen star, a sort of bush-league comparison to the majors, Jean Arthur, co-star with Richard Dix in "Warming Up," explained to Harry T. Brundidge of the St. Louis Star in a copyrighted interview.

"'The row' is a strange place," Brundidge quoted Miss Arthur as saying. "'Go over there now and take a look and you will find Bert Lytell, Eileen Chadwick, Marjorie Daw, Mabel Ballin, Viola Dana and many others of yesterday's 'big shots.'

"Poverty row on Beachwood avenue, Hollywood, is the beginning and the end for scores of screen stars. It is to motion pictures what the minor leagues are to professional baseball. Many of the stars get their start there, graduate to the big picture studios, eventually lose their box office value and their big contracts, and return to 'poverty row' just like the old ball players go back to the minor leagues and trade on their names in their declining years.'"

Miss Arthur, originally Jean Gladys Greene of Washington Heights, New York, had the unique career of signing a year's contract with a big producer on the strength of a New York screen test and then proving a "bust" on arriving in Hollywood. For more than three years she existed on "Poverty Row," doing "quickies," until Dix came along with "Warming Up."

"'After the production of 'Warming Up' I was signed by Paramount,'" she said, explaining that of nine girls who arrived in Hollywood seeking fame when she did five years ago, she is the only survivor. In closing the interview, Miss Arthur predicted that Dix never will return to "Poverty Row" after his screen days, "'for he has the making of a great director, and I predict that it is as a director that Richard Dix will gain his greatest fame.'"

Skull Indicates Continents Joined

BERKELEY, Calif., Feb. 7. (US)—Prof. W. D. Matthew, chairman of the department of paleontology of the University of California, has found in the tiny fossilized skull of a hedgehog what he believes to be proof of the existence of a land between Siberia and Alaska several million years ago.

The skull was found in Fish Lake Valley, Nev. This is the second skull of a pre-historic hedgehog to be found in America. The other having been found in South Dakota 27 years ago, it was stated today.

Professor Matthew found that the new specimen is that of an animal closely related to the species found in Europe and deduces therefore that the animal or his ancestors must have migrated from that country. The only means would have been across the Alaskan land bridge. The little fellow lived in the Miocene era, several million years ago. The skull differs greatly from the one found in South Dakota.

'I'll Get Divorce Some Day,' Says Aileen

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 7. (UP)—"I expect to get a divorce some day, but I don't know when," Aileen Pringle, film star, stated today in answer to rumors that she contemplated filing suit against her husband, Maj. Charles Pringle, of the British army. Miss Pringle said she had been separated for years from her husband.

Mrs. Beatrice Morrison of Dallas Praises Golden Medical Discovery for Coughs

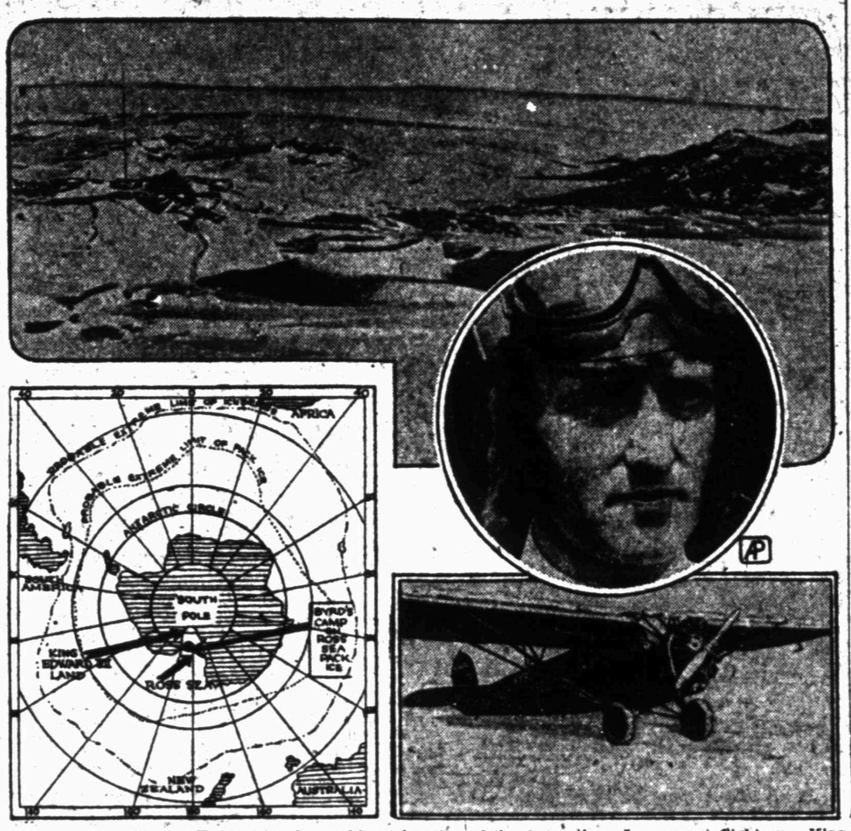

—National Studios

Imogene Morrison

"Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is a splendid family medicine and one that I generally keep in the house. I always give it to my children for coughs and colds. My little girl has been especially benefited by taking this medicine. She had diphtheria and it left her thin and puny, with weak bronchials. I gave her the 'Golden Medical Discovery' and it built her up in health. She is hearty and well."—Mrs. Beatrice Morrison, 4318 Terry St., Dallas, Texas. Fluid or tablets, at drug stores.

Electric Workers Win Five-Day Week Fight

NEW YORK, Feb. 7. (US)—Electrical workers were granted the authority today by Supreme Court Justice Bijur to put into effect a five-day week at $12.20 in place of the five-and-a-half day week at $12 a day.

The decision was rendered upon the application of the Building Trades Employers association for a restraining order.

The organization of employers contended that the new schedule violated four agreements made by the Electrical Contractors association, one of which was that the five-and-a-half day week at $12 a day should continue until Jan. 1, 1930.

A Young Appetite Digests Anything

Indigestion is the result of too much acid in the stomach. It sours your food, turns it into a fermenting mass, gives you sick headaches, bad breath, biliousness, shortness of breath, and that drowsy, don't-care-what-happens feeling.

Pape's Diapepsin has helped thousands of such unfortunate stomach sufferers to get their appetite back. Chew one or two tablets of Pape's Diapepsin after meals to dissolve the excess acid, and sweeten your stomach. Then your food will digest and nourish you. You will gain weight and feel fine. Pape's Diapepsin does what it promises to do. That's the reason 5 million packages are used a year.

Pape's Diapepsin will bring you relief in 5 minutes. It is sold by all drug stores.—Adv.

BOBBIE TROUT HAS AMBITIONS

Girl to Seek Three Records Beginning Sunday

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 7. (US)—Little Miss Bobbie Trout, Los Angeles' darling 23-year-old aviatrix, is going a-record hunting next Sunday.

The intrepid girl who won and lost the world's endurance flight record for women will take off during the late afternoon at Mines field in an effort to set three new marks in her tiny monoplane. They are:

1. A new endurance record for women. The present mark of 13 hours, 16 minutes and 45 seconds was recently made by 17-year-old Elinor Smith of New York.

2. A new night solo flying record for women.

3. A new solo distance flying record for women.

Other airplanes, according to plans announced tonight, will pace Miss Trout.

And as for the reason she will set out to accumulate a string of new records, said the pretty girl who "would rather fly than do housework":

"It is not merely an effort to break the records that prompts the flight. It is more an attempt to show the women of America that flying is a woman's business as much as a man's. I want to show American women that they, too, must do their part in aviation if we want to progress."

Miss Trout set her record of 12 hours and 11 minutes that fell to Miss Smith early in January at Metropolitan airport here while the army's giant Question Mark was making its epochal endurance flight.

Spurned Affection Causes Girl's Act

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 7. (UP)—Unrequitted love for a teller in a Los Angeles bank caused Percilla Taylor, pretty 20-year-old girl, to attempt to end her life by drinking poison, police reported. As she lay in general hospital in a serious condition she wrote a note to the man she loves, asking his forgiveness. She is expected to recover.

General Butler Back From Chinese 'War'

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 7. (US)—Brig. Gen. Smedley Butler, who commanded the American marine forces in China, and members of his staff, returned Wednesday on board the liner President McKinley.

With the Nationalist party in full control, General Butler foresees the ultimate complete unification of China in a "republic by popular approval."

LAWRENCE, Kan., Feb. 7. (INS)—Four University of Kansas students, all pledges of the Alpha Tau Omega fraternity, were under arrest here this morning on charges of disturbing the peace, as a result of "hell week" activities early this morning. This morning two of the four university freshmen, Donald Judd of Garden City, and John Simmons of Dodge City, were in the city jail and the two others, Otis Sturgeon of Kingman and Dean Cochran of Pratt, were out on bond.

Prohibition Quarrel Dropped for Present

WASHINGTON, Feb. 7. (UP)—The congressional quarrel over the proposed $24,000,000 prohibition increase became so involved today the leaders just decided to forget it for a while.

With the house and senate conferees deadlocked over the proposal, the house strongly against the amendment and the senate favoring it, all offers of compromise have been turned down and threats are being made that the whole program of the government supply bills may be jeopardized.

DUAL MURDER NEAR SOLUTION

Three Held for 1927 Crimes At Oklahoma City

OKLAHOMA CITY, Feb. 7. (UP)—With three men under arrest, county officers today neared solution to the two-year-old murder of Peter Amos and George Lampus here.

Wilbur Garton, Texas druggist, was arrested at Wink, Texas, today; Roy Womble, former taxi driver, is held at Los Angeles, and Don McBee is in jail here. The three are charged jointly in the slaying of the two men, Oct. 16, 1926.

An information charging Womble with the murder has been on file since Nov. 16, 1926. New information naming the three will be filed immediately, George Callihan, county attorney, said.

Womble was associated with the two murdered men in running whisky from Florida, investigators said. He disappeared after Amos' body was found in a creek near Oklahoma City. Three months later the body of Lampus was taken from the North Canadian river near Choctaw. Both men had been beaten to death.

SENATE MEMORIALS

AUSTIN, Feb. 7. (AP)—Memorial services will be conducted by the senate Tuesday for the late Senators I. D. Fairchild of Lufkin and H. F. Triplett of Beaumont. Close friends of the two former senators both in and outside the legislature are invited to attend the services.

Don't Let a Cough or Cold Hang On—It's Dangerous Company

Take it as directed and notice how easily it overcomes that persistent cough that has caused you many sleepless nights.

It's a medicine compounded for the purpose of conquering tough, hang-on coughs, and that's exactly what it does—quickly and thoroughly.

There's no dope in Bronchuline Emulsion, nor chloroform, nor sugar—such things are only makeshifts and should be taken with the greatest caution.

For ordinary simple coughs two or three doses of Bronchuline Emulsion is usually enough.—Adv.

THE COP ON THE CORNER

Daily Editorial

JOHN H. PATTERSON, in the course of an advertisement, once said, "The corner where the policeman stands is always orderly."

Mr. Patterson used to instruct his representatives to sell cash registers on the theory that unguarded tills invite theft. Men, he claimed, are tempted into dishonesty by other folks' carelessness. Therefore, a system which made embezzlement difficult manifestly tended to discourage it.

Proponents of an effective American navy are arguing their cause in much the same terms. they don't believe that it's safe to leave the biggest till on earth unprotected.

History reminds them how the nations which hitherto neglected to set watch-dogs over their wealth, invariably incited cupidity and finally lost independence and possessions.

McCutcheon, in a recent cartoon-editorial, showed that America has spent 10 per cent of its career at war. His statistics demonstrate that we were fighting somebody on an average of every 10th day since we began business.

But fanaticism, which neither heeds facts nor reads figures, wants Uncle Sam to draw his last naval tooth and become a fat, helpless rabbit in a world of vulpine greeds.

Pacifists declare we need only set the example and all other powers will follow suit, junk armaments, cease coveting neighbors' goods, abide by peace treaties, collect defaulted debts with kind words, and substitute the Golden Rule for the doctrine of "grab what you can get."

They do not claim that water is about to run uphill, or the law of gravitation will be suspended—merely that human nature has completely changed since 1914.

But human nature never changes. Expediency and necessity are controlling forces everywhere.

WHEN it's feasible and profitable to seize domains, confiscate markets, or satisfy blood grudges, self interest, not ethics, dominates the situation, and Old Adam strikes while the advantage is on his side.

We have no militaristic plans, no hostile intents toward any country. America only asks to be let alone and permitted to strive and prosper.

But our industries and producers must have outlet for yields, and that outlet demands universal customers. The more we extend export trade—and we must expand foreign business or shut shop—the more we conflict with European competition and aspiration.

If we are vulnerable and unarmed, commercial rivals can intimidate our merchants and their consumers, monopolize concessions, repudiate indebtedness as the spirit may move them, compel preferential tariffs, make America the dumping ground of surpluses and pauper labor, assert sovereignty over ex-nationals, require the revision of immigration acts and naturalization statutes, invent pretexts for invasion as Bismarck's false telegram bred the Franco-Prussian war, or, as Napoleon, frankly come a-conquering because we can't stop it.

The surest guarantees of peace and security are fleets comparable to those of the mightiest potential enemy.

"The corner where the policeman stands is always orderly"—and the bigger the cop, the more order.

Entire Gypsy Family Killed by Freezing

VIENNA, Feb. 7. (UP)—An entire family of 10 gypsies was frozen to death near Bruenn, Czechoslovakia, during the cold wave in the last few days, advices received from Bruenn said tonight. The members of the family were found huddled together around the ashes of an extinguished camp fire, where they had attempted to escape the storm.

Today in Texas History

FEBRUARY 8

1847—J. O. Meusebach, founder of Fredericksburg, with 20 men, three wagons and an interpreter, was on a peace mission to the San Saba and Llano county Indians.

1899—Scollard building at Dallas destroyed by fire.

A 10-year-old boy in Alton, Miss., wears size 25 shoes. We were going to say that he ought to make a wonderful cop, but have considerable doubt about whether he'd fit in the traffic department.

Prince Nikita, who has been receiving $50 a month as a bank clerk in Paris, has been designated heir to the fallen throne of the Romanoffs. The prince hasn't quit at the bank yet, though.

A Minneapolis man sued because his cigaret lighter wouldn't work. It is interesting to note that somebody really bought a cigaret lighter that he didn't give to a friend.

The Prince's Service

THE PRINCE OF WALES has never served his nation better than by his recent tour of inspection of the British mining areas.

It makes a wierd, fascinating picture, this tale of the prince investigating poverty. There is the boyish, slender heir to the throne, lonely and ill, stalking down muddy streets between tumble-down shacks while under-fed, hopeless people stand in doorways to see what message the next king of England has for the depths of woe. The trip is making all of England see the picture, focussing attention on an accumulation of misery that had gone too long unheeded.

There is not a great deal of hope for many of these British miners. There are whole villages where no one has worked for months; where every inhabitant lives on the government dole, dependent on charity for every bite of food and every rag of clothing; where mines have been shut down so long that weeds are growing on the slag-heaps by the pit heads; where houses have been abandoned, never to be re-occupied again.

All of this has been true for quite a while, and England has known about it in a hazy sort of way; but it took the prince's visit to impress the facts on the general public. Whatever is eventually done to relieve the distress, much of it will be due to the prince's visit.

This, of course, does not touch us very closely on this side of the Atlantic. But the underlying principle is worth looking at, whether you live in England or Colorado.

England is not the only country that has had festering sores, but refused to look at them. The ostrich habit of burying the head in the sand and ignoring all unpleasant sights is as common in the new world as in the old.

In the United States, for instance, there are plenty of things that would shock us unutterably if we would look at them steadily.

Our own coal miners, as it happens, have troubles of their own. In Pennsylvania there are mining towns where conditions are nearly as bad as they are in England.

We have city slums, too, where vice and crime and misery exist in a degree to make the angels weep. We have certain textile manufacturing towns where hunger and unemployment are familiar, every-day acquaintances to most of the inhabitants. We have agricultural regions where honest, industrious men have seen poverty come upon them through no fault of their own.

But we don't get excited about any of these things. In a vague way we know that they exist, but we don't do anything about it. We haven't been jarred into activity.

Perhaps it would be a good thing for us if we had a young prince who could open our eyes to a few things. We always have good intentions; but too often it takes a catastrophe to get us into action.

Clark's Theory

IT IS a startling new theory of man's origin that Dr. Austin H. Clark, of the Smithsonian Institution, recently presented.

Dr. Clark denies the Darwinian theory of the descent of man. He does not believe we have any kinship with the ape, and doubts very much that the "missing links," beloved by evolutionists, are really missing links at all. Man first appeared, he says, in something very like his present form, and has changed very little.

During the next few years we may be assured that Dr. Clark's new theory will undergo the closest sort of scrutiny by other scientists. It may be years before the final verdict is returned. Meanwhile, the very fact that he presented it is one more proof of the fact that science, at its best, is not wedded to any one rigid theory and does not close its eyes to evidence which may contradict its previous findings.

It will be interesting to see what Dr. Clark's fellows say about his theory.

Owning a Home

SOME INTERESTING STATISTICS on home ownership are presented in a recent bulletin from Walter F. McDowell, president of the U. S. League of Local Building and Loan associations.

To begin with, Mr. McDowell reveals that fully half of the homes in the United States are owned by men earning less than $2,000 a year. At least 90 per cent of the people who buy homes do not pay for them outright, but borrow the money from building and loan or similar institutions. And he adds:

"Any person who is willing to live within his income and who really wants a home can manage the small, regular and systematic deposit of a few dollars each week or month to build up the required savings."

The growth of individual home ownership in recent years is a good sign. For all the prevalence of installment buying, we still have the thrift habit.

Preventive Accidents

WHEN an industrial corporation wishes to commend itself to the public it usually stresses its earnings, the size of its plant, its public services or something of that kind.

The Bethlehem Steel corporation, however, is claiming recognition on new grounds. It points to its record in the past year in the prevention of industrial accidents.

In the Bethlehem plants last year the number of accidents was reduced 28 per cent, the number of fatalities was reduced 34 per cent and the amount of time lost due to accidents was reduced 24 per cent—and all of this in spite of the fact that the rate of operations was higher than in any year since 1917.

That's the sort of record a company is entitled to be proud of. Would that more corporations would take to boasting in like vein.

Teaching Temperance

STATE PROHIBITION COMMISSIONER RUPERT R. REETHAM of Ohio told an audience of church people recently that enemies of the liquor traffic should get back to the old-time methods of teaching personal temperance by showing the effects of alcohol upon the drinker.

There is good sense to that suggestion. The prohibition law, of course, is on the statute books and must be enforced; but if the old "temperance movement" could be revived and made to go hand in hand with it, the task would be a lot easier. Obviously, it won't be nearly so hard to enforce this law when a larger percentage of the population is convinced that liquor is a bad thing.

SIDE GLANCES — By George Clark

"Now ,Willie,' if I let you have 50 cents will you try to get home early?"

The Day Book of a New Yorker

Broadway Chatter by Grant Dixon

NEW YORK, Feb. 7—Willie and Bill as yet obscure but hopeful units of the heterogeneous population of Greenwich Village lately came into possession of an automobile. That is to say, it had been an automobile. Just how they acquired it is something of a secret, about halfway, one gathers, between bunco steering and burglary.

It had been a veritable automobile once, with a decent motor and handsome trimmings and a nifty paint job in two colors, but time and the brutality of man had worked their worst upon it. Nor was it youthful. It had made its first appearance in the world while Mr. Wilson was still president of these United States, and it had slid down the social scale pretty much as human beings sometimes do. Through various devolutions it fell into the hands of a minor bootlegger—there are minor bootleggers as well as minor poets in the village—and that, of course, was pretty low. And all the while the honest old motor was wearing out and the trimmings going to rags and tatters and the paint practically all peeling away.

The minor bootlegger used it in the course of his diversified undertakings until one evening a federal prohibition agent who had been trailing him for a week almost caught up with him, came so close that the gin runner thought it best to slide out of the old car at the curb and skip for other regions. Willie and Bill, having been acquaintances of the bootlegger, salvaged the car and kept it by right of discovery.

Later, when the hootch peddler judged it wise to return to the village, he told them in so many words to keep the damned old ruin if they cared to, so they held on to it for quite a while. It gave them a kind of prestige and it was easy to mooch gas from generous acquaintances.

However, there comes an end to everything. Like the famous one-horse shay, the old car was ready to go to pieces all at once and Willie and Bill quite intelligently foresaw the approaching dissolution. They had suffered extreme embarrassment on more than one occasion when the old car balked on them, especially at times when their girl friends were along. So they figured they might as well get rid of the thing. But how? That was the question. If you think it is easy to get rid of a no good car in New York you have, dear reader, another think coming. You can't just go away and leave them in the street because there are such things as license plates and numbers and other marks of identification. The police might get very disagreeable about such proceedings and insist on going to the judge about it. You can't leave a car on a rubbish heap. There aren't any rubbish heaps this side of Barren Island. What to do?

Willie and Bill knitted their reasonably high brows over this puzzler for several days and then one night while they were nibbling their anti-pasto in the restaurant of their choice Willie said to Bill:

"Why not give it to Zyra?"

"Swell notion," said Bill. "We'll give it to her in place of the regular quarter tip."

At the end of the meal when they paid their check they told Zyra, the waitress, what good fortune had befallen her. She regarded them closely. Never before in her experience had these youths ever given anybody anything. There was a catch in this somewhere, said little Zyra (Annie O'Halloran in the bosom of her family) to herself.

"Zyra," said Willie, "we want to make you a present. You are a nice girl, a swell girl and red-hot mama of a table Hebe. If old boy Zeus had had you to wait on table on Mount Olympus in the good old days Juno would have had some right to be jealous."

"Yeah?" said Zyra, in one of those flat, rising tones that give little comfort to applesauce dispensers.

"Oh, yeah," said Willie, "we are giving you our automobile Zyra."

"Let's have a look at it," said Zyra.

So they drifted out to the sidewalk while the waitress gave the old car the once over. It was nothing to get excited about, she saw well enough, but after all there might be something in it. It wasn't costing her anything. So she accepted and Willie and Bill went out into the night, leaving the old car parked at the curb.

That was where Zyra's troubles began. They were numerous and painful, and included a visit to the traffic court for overlong parking, as well as bursts of profanity one would hardly expect in a lady even in this day and age, because the old car stopped dead on her in the middle of Fifth avenue.

Two nights after she received the gift she marched up to Willie and Bill and told them flatly that they had to take the car back and that she wanted the quarter which had been due her as a tip the evening they passed the car off on her. The boys groaned, but there was nothing else to do.

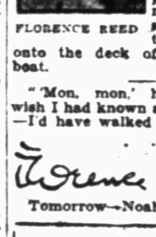

That night they went to a delicatessen dealer of their acquaintance and offered to trade the car for a few simple foodstuffs—sausages, a bottle of milk, pickles, such like odds and ends. The delicatessen man also inspected the car and shook his head. He said it couldn't be done. Then the boys went to a butcher and offered to trade the car for a few pork chops and a portion of liver. Nothing doing. The upshot of it was that they finally persuaded a pair of young Italian cellar merchants to take the car off their hands by paying them $10. They had got desperate by that time and they figured that it was worth the 10 to see the last of the venerable machine.

The VICARION

The Astounding Story of an Invention Greater Than the Movies

Copyright by Gardner Hunting

Serialized by Ledger Syndicate

In the year 1935 Radley Brainard has invented the Vicarion, a device with which it is possible to re-create scenes out of the past. The invention is a sensational success, with all the theaters installing it in place of motion pictures. Complete films, Inc., which at that time controls all the improvements on the movie, faces ruin, but when Ferdinand Mortimer and Jerry Ballard, heads of the company, call on him, Brainard refuses to make terms.

Brainard's records of the past are contained in "bombs," which hold liquid air and while he is projecting one of the "bombs," which was unmarked, he sees a beautiful gossamer-clad girl, with whom he falls in love, although he is engaged to Phyllis Norman. During the first demonstration of the Vicarion, with Phyllis and her family looking on, a strange man staggers in the studio. He is unable to tell who he is and Brainard names him Van Winkle, and makes him his aide.

Brainard calls in the operator who made the unmarked record, but gains no information from him. He orders Van Winkle to investigate the making of the bomb. Brainard projects one of the three remaining bombs containing the woodland scene in which the girl with whom he is infatuated appears and decides the records were made by Jeffry Honer, a criminal whom he has employed. Honer dies of fright while listening to the voice of his dead brother which Brainard projects by means of the Vicarion and Honer's secret of the "bomb," which contains the "sunrise nymph" passes into the hands of Mortimer and Ballard.

Morals

"Tomorrow," Brainard went on, "the whole world will be drawing morals about me again. Aunt Relief has been piling them upon me tonight. You are full of them, no doubt—ready to unload upon my devoted head! But before you begin, just let me say that nobody gives a damn about anybody else's inferences and convictions concerning life. Everybody just wants to live. At least the Vicarion has shown you that!"

"I haven't any convictions, Radley."

"Everybody draws his own moral —every Tom, Dick and Harry of us all. There are as many morals as there are people! But nobody wants you to pick one for him—including me!"

Strangely the old boyishness seemed upon him. How like a boy, this attempt to forestall criticism of his doings. Every man draws his own moral! She could have laughed but for the pity of it.

"Maybe that's what makes all the trouble—trying to draw morals for one another," she said. "Maybe we are trying to upset the very law that's back of evolution—every man his own moralist!"

"Then what fault have you to find with me? The world is nothing but a growing child. I've just given it a picture book from which it is going to learn a lot of things. Not fairy tales!" He laughed.

She did not attempt to answer. They reached the car. He opened the door to the front seat and she stepped in. He went around and climbed in under the wheel.

"Aunt Relief has a lookout rock over here," he explained, putting his foot on the starter. "The night is clearing up—I think we can see—some interesting things."

The car slid forward over the piney carpet. Brainard turned on its lights, which instantly built up a Gothic arch of the towering trees. They slid away through it as if driving up an enormous cathedral aisle—as grotesque in its phantom dignity as the towering rage of a mob defeated by a ruse!

They came out suddenly upon a high spot, beyond which the land fell away in a long, dark abyss toward the west. Nothing that could obstruct the view stood between them and the sea, provided eyes had the power to reach so far. Brainard abruptly shut off the lights of the car.

And Pasadena lay spread out below them, a city of broadcast lights, itself a bay with every ripple catching a glint of stars. Beyond, Los Angeles in the dwindling distance, like a dark, twinkling ocean! And far, far there in the blue distance a ragged yellow stretch of flame lay like the crater of some island volcano, a mere fiery crack in a calm, untroubled deep!

"It doesn't look so big from here," Brainard said grimly.

But suddenly, to the girl, the scene seemed to change, like something deceptively first seen, then coming clear. And that far molten spot was like a red-lipped break in the planet's crust through which inner fire had leaped out to char the whole wide earth—and sink back leaving a million smoldering sparks behind!

But Brainard had got out of the car and was opening the door for her. Presently she stood beside him while he unlocked a carrying case on the rack behind. She recognized inside it, as the lid swung up, the half-familiar, glittering lines of one of his smaller multiple machines. He touched the dials and swung a small lever over; then went to the throttle of his engine. The great machine's almost noiseless movement increased till the condenser's song reached a pitch that satisfied him. Then from the tonneau he took a small metal cylinder, like an elongated fire extinguisher, and carried it to the edge of the lookout.

"I recorded this while I was waiting for you," he said. "It's what happened in Santa Monica an hour ago."

He held the small cylinder in his hand. He opened a tiny door in its side, shot a bolt within, and tossed it out into the valleyful of darkness below them.

Dynamite

And suddenly, there over the dark chasm hung a brightening scene—the street of the little home city!—but lighted by fire and filled with the swaying, roaring mob! And once more Phyllis was standing, as she had stood at midnight, looking up at the ivoried tower of the Bonmar! Again the crowd howled and surged; men ran in and out of the lighted entrance like ants over the spot where she had thought she saw Brainard fall. But they were avoiding a hole broken in the marble stairs.

A warning cry went up. The crowd began to back—then turned and began to run. The space before the door of the white building cleared. The doorway was empty. The throng swept clear from the pavement like masses of leaves before a sudden gale. What was it? Fire again? But surely a building of steel and tile would not burn! And then, all at once, a puff of smoke burst out from 20 shattering windows together, out from under the scaffolding still supporting the lower floors, rising in queer jets from cracks between the pavement stones, shooting like water from giant nozzles out of ventilators, window transoms, crevices, clefts, fissures, that opened as if to let it forth. And the tall, thin building, poised there like a bather stripped for a plunge in the surf almost at its feet, began to crumple and sink in upon itself, its walls gaping—while from the depths of the rocks upon which it stood, a fountain of smoke rushed up to stand like a white statue in its place! And a crash of explosion like a fortress' bursting magazine stunned the ears!

But no thunderous echos ran off across the hills! And strangely the concussion of the first crash was instantly gone—like the roar of guns at sea! And nothing could have so completely defeated expectancy, even as the scene of destruction dissolved as it were in its own spreading dust!

"Dynamite, eh?" said Brainard, softly. "They must have had that prepared.

"Then," said Phyllis, "with the studio fire, they've wiped out your machines!"

He laughed. In his hand he had a single bomb. He did not reply to her, but opened the cap on the little sphere and tossed it off into space.

In the boulevard street of Santa Monica again! But now, with a background in which conspicuous was the great hole where the Bonmar had been. On a granite block, the base of a fountain, a man had leaped up and was shouting to the crowd. They rolled in about him and stopped to listen. Phyllis knew him; he was a well-known preacher, who had once attacked Brainard from his pulpit.

"Friends!" he began to shout. "We are free! We've been slaves! Slaves of our senses! But as Brainard himself once said, 'liquid life, like all liquids, will find its level!' He knew—"

A loud guffaw interrupted the speaker. "Then why not shut up and enjoy it?" shouted a ribald voice. "We should worry!"

A roar of laughter went up, and they surged away from him, like boys out of school! And the scene went out.

"I told you they'd moralize," Brainard said. "But apparently the moralist thinks they're through with me."

He took from his pocket a little dark disk, of unknown substance, and held it up. "Maybe, if they ever get the secret of this, they'll be through with me!" he added. What is any one set of buildings, or of machines, to me!"

He turned to the car. Presently he brought more bombs.

"Look!" he said, and flung another out to empty its record into the night.

She saw a girl in white, galloping on a chestnut mare! Herself, in her wild beach ride far back at the other end of that strange night. She saw again—and felt—the bruising branches and the tearing thorns. Then she saw a rigid equestrain statue at the edge of a surging crowd—the horse, with long, shivering yellow highlights on its quivering hide, the girl with white agony of fear and love in her face.

"You took a long chance to come there," Brainard said. "What did you do it for?"

His voice was harsh. Slowly it came over her that the girl who had sat that horse—the girl of three hours ago—the girl of yesterday—was dead. Dead, because life had passed her by. "That is only what I was," she thought; "all that I am I have brought with me!" Here was life now—and presently it would have rushed on. What was it—of what was it made? Could not one saddle and ride it—ride it in the one moment that was forever present, and so forever without an end?

She became conscious of his gaze again. He was staring at her, his eyes on fire, his head thrust forward, his hands poised. But as she turned toward him his mouth hardened again and he turned to look off into the night. "The fire is dying," he remarked. She liked; the yellow smear of flame had sunk to a pale mist. "The flare-up is over," Brainard sneered. Then he looked at her again and smiled. "It occurred to me just now," he said, "to try to get a glimpse of tomorrow. Funny I never thought of it before. But if I can set my dials ahead, like a clock, I must get something! I've got something!—let's see what!"

He laughed briefly, and shrugged. He was covering emotion again, holding some impulse under iron curb. He tossed a bomb over the ledge of rock. For a moment all was blank and still, and then—

Dawn Maiden

The tinkle of a tiny waterfall lifted its bubbling voice. A sparkling trickle dropped over the face of a rock out there like a spray of iridescent gems. Ferns, touched with peacock tints, half clothed recumbent limbs of giant trees, seated there in forest nook, cooling weary feet in a crystal pool.

Water abloom with the blue of unseen sky, fringed with the lacy green of new grass and tender leaf, scarcely rippling to the touch of the tiny fall. Turf like a magic carpet spread to invite. Low sunrise rays gilding rough bark to gold and staining shadows to the hues of royal silks. A bird, scarlet as royal blood, glided to the edge of the pool and dipped and drank, its eyes aglow with the light of sheer joy in being!

Here was enchantment! A butter-fly, painted by Aurora's own fingers, hovered and sank enraptured. Soft flutter of wings on overhead branch and the bird by the pool sprang alert and warbled its lovenote, like a joyous cry of ecstasy in the revelations of spring; A leafy background parted, and eyes of mystery looked out into the watcher's own!

Phyllis forgot to breathe. The opening in the leaf-screen closed. A slender white foot thrust out, a hand brushed branches aside, a figure of loveliness, with dew-splashed limbs shining like silver bronze, emerged! A thing of pearl and sunshine! Eternal youth in eternal dawn! In garments of gossamer like shredded morning mists, the vagrant leaves caught in it like eager caressing hands; hair like the clinging tendrils of passing night; eyes wistful as the memories of dreams!

With firm, sure step she bounded down over root and stone, down to the dell's carpet of green, and poised as had the listening bird. She waited for some sound. Her eyes darted expectant from covert to covert, like an eager child's begging for anticipated surprise. Then in the unchanging stillness, her lovely figure subtly drooped. Had some expected companion disappointed her? Was this a trysting place? Was some lover recreant?

She cupped her hands about her lips and called—in a trilling note no fluted tone of wood-pipe ever matched. She listened—and dropped down to hide at some fancied sound of approach. She waited—then rose suddenly disconsolate. Her gaze roved slowly, then came straight out of her far realm into the here, and fixed, in pleading!

A choking sound came from the man at Phyllis' side. She turned. He was kneeling on the rock with his clenched hands covering his eyes. In an instant she understood, as if the whole long mystery were written against the pines. She knew what it had been he had found and lost. She guessed at what it had been his enemies had held over him. She understood that it had been his last scrap of treasure of which she herself had robbed him. She knew what it had been that had taken his love away from her.

She rose slowly to her feet and walked out to the edge of the rock. The scene was gone—she almost forgot that it had been here she had seen it! She had been looking into a man's heart! She stood for a long minute staring out across the cities far sparkling sea. Was it the woman who had vanished down there in that dim gulf with whom he had been in love? Who was she, that Darling of Dawn, whom he had found and lost, and found—and lost again? For she could be no real woman who was found at last only among the beings of tomorrow! Only on the path ahead! Like the will-o'-the-wisp!

Then what was she? Was she his dream—his dream of beauty, visible to another?

Fantastic? Was not the fantastic always the mere working of unfamiliar laws? When men looked out upon things, what was the stuff of which their visions were made? Form, feature, flesh and blood? Were not the things he saw only the things projected by himself upon a screen he called the Real? Did he not endow action with meaning, possessions with worth, woman herself with the attributes of his ideal? Could his ideal then become visible to the woman who merely loved him?

Fantastic indeed! But what was this endowing, projecting, creating thing in man and woman? Was it not the thing that lived—that lived the only life—that ever present life of every fleeting moment? Was it not the vital thing of which form, feature, movement, were but the unreal reflections? As unreal as that heroic figure of a man descending glittering stairs to face a mob?

"It Can't Be Done"

She turned back toward the man behind her. He was still on his knees on the rock, but his hands rested poised on their fingertips and he was staring at her, as if it were in her white figure against the night that he saw his ghost!

She stepped slowly toward him. "She is very beautiful, Radley," she said, "your Dawn Maiden!"

He started to his feet. "Phyllis!" he cried. Then suddenly he put out his hands, half fearfully, to touch her. As if he were not sure she was there! His fingers came upon her arms. He held her and looked into her eyes. And she could not conceal what was in them. Whatever he did or was, she would always love him. "Then," he said at last, "it is you that comes real!"

She could not speak—only stand and look at him betraying all her heart. But she did not care.

"My God," he whispered, "how right Carol was! You're not—picturesque; you're—real!"

He drew her closer and put his arms about her shoulders.

"Can you forgive me, Phyllis?" he begged. "I've been caught in my own trap."

They stood at the edge of the lookout together. As far as their eyes could reach, there was soft darkness, sprinkled with myriads of twinkling lights, like a reflection of the starlit sky. The distant yellow fire was dead.

"And the Vicarion Phyl?" he asked at last. He turned and smiled at her. "You know I've been dreaming of empire."

"What is empire?"

"Sitting apart and running the rest."

"It can't be done."

"I know it can't—now. Not because people can't be managed, but because no man can—sit long apart."

He took a dark little disk from his pocket and held it up. "Here's my crown and scepter, Phyl. You're right—it belongs to the world. Do you realize that it's you who will be giving it to 'em?"

She could not answer.

"You think the Vicarion's raw facts can't hurt 'em?"

"Not if they get enough facts to see truth."

He snapped the little bit of mysterious substance into the air like a coin and caught it.

"Going back to the house?" he asked, almost casually.

"Not now."

"Well," he said, looking off over the dark land, "there's a lull down there in the world. Now is a good time for me to go and become—one of my kind! Wish me luck."

"I do."

"Then I shall have it," he said, and kissed her fingers softly. Then he turned, closed the traveling case on the rear of the car, and next moment was behind the wheel. She watched him turn the car. He waved his hand as he passed her again—and smiled. Then he was gone, off down the great hill in the dark.

It was not spectacular. And, in the dark, it was probably something the Vicarion would never record. Merely a man going to acknowledge his oneness with his kind!

The girl walked out to the end of the lookout. How far away seemed the violent little events of that night! It was true—they did not look so big from here. How still it was! Nothing was so still as stars! Above and below, a universe of stars!

Then there was a law, a universal law—a law that was not to be upset or defied—under which none might sit apart to rule or ruin. And there was a unity, bigger even than the dramatic whole—typified here where sky and earth were spangled alike with stars! Rather too big to be picturesque—just a universe!

I Saw It Myself

By C. W. ROGERS
Record News Staff Correspondent

It is characteristic of human nature, it has been said, that the prospect in the distance is always more enchanting than whatever lies in the immediate vicinity.

That may in a measure account for a large proportion of the long procession of cars going each day into Wichita Falls from southern Oklahoma, that part comprising the two southernmost tiers of counties, from the Texas Panhandle line on the west to the western boundaries of Love and Carter on the east.

On the slightest pretext, or none at all, it has been discovered, many people in these counties yield to the urge to "go somewhere and see something different"—and to Wichita Falls they go.

They regard Wichita Falls as their own particular metropolis, do these southern Oklahoma people.

Not all of them who go to Wichita Falls are in quest of diversion. Many go a-shopping. Others go to Wichita Falls to negotiate the sale of farm products, real estate or leases on prospective oil lands.

And there are others who go to Wichita Falls for money. When they want a new industry for their town, or money to finance a new industry or other business enterprise, Wichita Falls is likely to sit in with them. Wichita Falls has representation in the business life of almost any town in southern Oklahoma.

Wichita Falls is easy of access by automobile from any of these counties, so easy that merchandise is trucked as far north as Oklahoma City from Wichita Falls. The main traveled highways, almost without exception, are unpaved; but they are graded, have substantial drainage structures and bridges and are maintained in excellent condition. In some places where the character of the soil is not adaptable for roadbeds the roads are graveled. The condition of the highways is such at all times that the big buses that operate all over this section into Wichita Falls maintain a schedule averaging 25 miles an hour exclusive of stops. Privately owned cars, driven carefully, average 35 miles an hour, the limit in Oklahoma. Commercial travelers frequently tell of driving 45 miles an hour and better.

In every town in southern Oklahome visited by this writer inquirers were encountered who were eager to hear an opinion as to the pennant-winning possibilities this year of Wichita Falls' baseball team. Observation in the passing years has compelled the conviction that one can never tell what a baseball player or a woman is likely to do next; therefore, these inquirers were referred to Al Parker and Larry Dailey, sports writers on The Times and Record News, respectively, who may or may not have some inside information straight from Gardner's stable.

They are keen for sports in southern Oklahoma. At Frederick, the high school basket ball team, the Whizbangs, or something like that, are leading in the southern half of the Southwest conference with 1.000 per cent. These youngsters won nine out of ten first games played this season, but when they went to Hollister they were taken for a country cleaning. To this writer basket ball is about as exciting as mumble peg, but up through southern Oklahoma whole families stay awake nights awaiting basket ball returns over the radio.

At Grandfield, according to Judge T. J. Patterson, the sports fans, of which the judge is one of the enthusiastic, are on their toes to get the Record News the morning after Alec Ross entertains with a boxing and wrestling card in Wichita Falls. Many of them journey down to witness these events—just a brief drive, with no hazards except the possibility of driving off the toll bridge into Red river on the return; and none then if they absorb nothing more potent than Lake Wichita.

Davidson, down in the southwest corner of Tillman county, has a sports impresario that could have given Tex Rickard an idea or two. This individual conveived the idea of staging croquet tourneys at night under electric lights. Out on the village green there is a tidily kept croquet ground, bounded by painted rails and illuminated by a string of incandescents. There may be others on estates of nabobs in New York or California, but they are not of general knowledge. At least no reference to nocturnal croquet tourneys can be recalled at the moment.

Davidson probably can afford anything it desires. It exhibits all the evidences of a town where money is plentiful; small but no shabby buildings; surrounded by some of the prettiest farms in Oklahoma.

Davidson may be larger within a few years. The citizens over at Grandfield have announced a determination to secure the construction of an east-and-west rail line from Ardmore to Davidson, the interstate commerce commission permitting. The Grandfield business men say they are coming down to Wichita Falls for help.

NAVY PROBLEM NEAR SOLUTION

Voting of New Warships Aids Arms Settlement

WASHINGTON, Feb. 7. (UP)—Passage of the bill providing for construction of 15 cruisers and one aircraft carrier within three years was interpreted today in informed quarters as likely to facilitate solution of the naval armaments problem.

Washington observers are convinced, however, that the initiative for any limitations discussion before 1931 would have to come from Great Britain. In 1921 the Washington arms conference conversations will be automatically resumed for the consideration of technical questions. But the United Press was informed that it would not be feasible to enlarge the discussion to include the question of limitations on auxiliary warships—cruisers, destroyers and submarines.

Auxiliary craft were not included in the original Washington limitations and it was to deal with them that President Coolidge summoned the abortive Geneva conference in 1927. Both France and Italy, having large stakes in submarines as war craft, refused to attend the 1927 conference and this seriously hampered the proceedings although the conference's failure admittedly resulted from Anglo-American disagreement.

Adoption of a definite building program by the United States is believed to have altered the situation somewhat in that it would appear to demonstrate this country's intention to strengthen appreciably its navy. Financially, it is presumed that the United States would be able to outbuild any other country. If no auxiliary ship agreement were reached and the Washington limitations agreement expired in 1936 without further limitation arrangements, some officials believe a naval building race would be inaugurated, and with undesirable results.

In the opinion of President Coolidge, construction of the 15 cruisers would leave the United States well within any tonnage limitation likely to be adopted so that any limitation agreement would, in effect, mean that this country would require another building program to reach the permitted tonnage.

Radio Stocks Sell Above Value, Claim

WASHINGTON, Feb. 7. (UP)—Radio stocks are selling "far and away above their value," Col. Manton Davis, vice president of the Radio Corporation of America, told the senate interstate commerce committee today.

American investors are buying radio stocks with the expectation that they will go the way of Ford automobile stocks, Davis said, and make them all rich.

Donovan Appointed For Boulder Dam Parley

Graf Zeppelin to Go On Egyptian Cruise

FRIEDRICHSHAFEN, Germany, Feb. 7. (AP)—The dirigible Graf Zeppelin at the end of this month will start on a round trip to Egypt and Palestine, Dr. Hugo Eckener would again be in command of the big airship. The flight will be devoted mainly to testing various improvements, particularly in wireless transmission and receiving, it was announced today.

Shumaker Quits Fight To Stay Out of Jail

INDIANAPOLIS, Feb. 7. (UP)—The Rev. E. S. Shumaker, secretary of the Indiana Anti-Saloon league, indicated he would drop his long fight against serving a 60-day sentence for contempt of the supreme court. Shumaker, who charged the supreme court was influenced by "wets" in its decisions, said today that "further fighting would bring on more legal delay."

Huge Icicle Crashes Into Hotel Lobby

CEDAR RAPIDS, Iowa, Feb. 7. (UB)—A 300-pound icicle smashed itself into thousands of pieces on the marble floor of the Hotel Allison lobby here. The icicle crashed through a double sky-light and ceiling of the lobby destroying mural paintings and leaving a six-foot by four-foot hole in the ceiling. Few persons were in the lobby and no one was injured.

"Married Life" Not Worth While

Blames Wives' "Nerves"

"Weak nerves," said a New York doctor recently, "in my estimation wreck more happily married lives than any other cause."

Besides making the sweetest disposition sour and irritable, nervousness is a terrible drain on your vital forces—it saps your youth and your strength and dulls your beauty. What a difference from the bright-eyed, vibrant girl he married. No wonder married life seems unbearable!

But you can get rid of your nervousness—speedily too—and become the steady-nerved, radiant woman you once were. Take a teaspoonful of Tanlac after meals and before going to bed and if it doesn't soon make a new woman of you—doesn't rid you of that tired, strained feeling—go back and get your money.

Go to your druggist now and get a bottle of Tanlac. Millions of folks have started back on the road to youth, health and happiness with this world famous tonic and there is no reason why you, too, can't begin today to rebuild your worn-out tissues and revitalize your entire system.

Gen. LeJeune, Son of Anti-Bellum Louisiana, Ends Long Marine Career

By ALFRED P. RECK
United Press Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, Feb. 7.—A few years after the close of the civil war a young boy of French-Canadian ancestry played soldier in Pointe Coupe parish, Louisiana. His father and his uncles had been confederate officers and the youth was imbued with the spirit of the military.

Today a grey and grizzled veteran of 45 years' service announced his retirement on March 5 as Maj. Gen. John Archer LeJeune, commandant of the U. S. marine corps.

"I had always wanted to be a soldier," the general confided as he rested in his office in the navy building. "My father was an officer in the Confederate army and my greatest pleasure when I was a boy was to handle the sword he carried into battle.

Entered College

"Often my father would say, 'John, I would like for you to go to West Point when you are old enough.'

"There were no vacancies in West Point and so I started in college. My father then learned of a vacancy in Annapolis and secured the appointment for me. I entered in 1884 and was graduated in 1888.

"After my first cruise I was certain I would never care for the life of the sailor. My interest was in handling men and not machinery, so at the first opportunity I transferred to the marines."

It was this interest in men which caused General LeJeune to become one of the most popular commandants in the history of marine corps.

Story-Book Soldier

From the time he was 17 until today at the age of 62, the general has been in the service of his country. In physical appearance he is still the popular conception of a fighting man.

Of medium stature but powerful build, with a strong face full of kindly humor, black thatch of hair, grey tinted, black and deep set eyes and with jutting eyebrows, he won the nickname among the men of the World war second division of the "Ild Indian."

To marine officers and men of the old fourth brigade he is "Old Man Gebe."

Whenever his marines were out of action in the World war, which was seldom, General LeJeune could be found visiting the hospitals and comforting the wounded. It was this part of his personal make-up that caused the "devil dogs" to respect him as a leader.

General LeJeune's service carried him to Cuba in the Spanish American war, to Panama, to Mexico, where as a colonel, he commanded the landing party at Vera Cruz, and to France, where his service as commander of the second division is well known.

Many Decorations

His decorations are many, including the French Legion of Honor, the Croix de Guerre with Palms, the United States Distinguished Service Medal and the Navy Distinguished Service Medal.

After March 5, when his retirement from the post he has held for eight years becomes effective, General LeJeune expects to go to the marine barracks at San Francisco, where he will be stationed until his retirement from the service, 22 months hence.

"My first assignment to post after graduating from Annapolis was at San Francisco," the general said, "and I want to go back and finish up there."

GOT HER MAN

Dapper Heart Smasher in Jail for Banditry, Winked at Victim

CHICAGO, Feb. 7. (AP)—Jack Walton winked at a pretty girl. The girl winked right back. And came right over.

"Like my looks?" smiled Jack Walton.

"You bet," quoth the fair one and threw her arms around his neck. Jack Walton well knew his power over women, but the ardor of this one was amazing. This clinging vine clung tighter, and let loose a scream.

Police came.

"My name," she said as she handed over her quarry, "is Betty Suerth. Last Saturday this man held me up and took $300 and checks for $1,900 from me."

Jack Walton observed sadly that his faith in women was shattered.

GEN. HINES' FATHER DIES

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah, Feb. 7. (INS)—Frank L. Hines, father of Brig. Gen. Frank T. Hines, head of the war veterans bureau, died at his home here today. The general was at his father's bedside.

A THREE DAYS' COUGH IS YOUR DANGER SIGNAL

Coughs from colds may lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for coughs from colds and bronchial irritations. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of coughs from colds, bronchitis and minor forms of bronchial irritations, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. (adv.)

DEMPSEY AND HANNAGAN TO MAKE MIAMI FIGHT A SUCCESS

BILL AND MIKE CAREY ASSIST

But Jack and Steve Will "Put It Over"

By FRANK GETTY

MIAMI BEACH, Fla., 7 (UP)—Amidst what remains of Tex Rickards dreams of a southern sporting paradise—a temporarily idle dog track, the skeleton of an amusement pier raising its gaunt girders against the blue of the ocean, the sandy site of an island race track and the nebulous structure that might have been a casino rivalling Monte Carlo's—a group of men who believed in Tex are working night and day to make the promoter's last actual venture a success.

There is every visible, tangible evidence that Jack Dempsey, Bill Carey and Brother Mike, a vivid youngster named Steven Hannagan, who seems to have the town in his pocket, and all the rest who are pinch-hitting for Tex are meeting with success, and that the Sharkey-Stribling fight on the 27th of the month will prove a surprising success.

This picturesque playground on the Florida east coast has a new plaything, and the fight's the thing.

From the millionaires to the minute-men—the boys who are expecting a call from the sheriff at any minute—Miami Beach is looking forward to the fight as its largest single dose of prearranged excitement.

Advance Sale $150,000

Joe Boyton, the box-office expert of Madison Square garden, said this afternoon that after a week's work here has filled and filed cash orders exceeding $150,000, and the south, solid for Stribling, hasn't begun to demonstrate its interest in a financial way.

Evidence of the interest of townsfolks and tourists in the affair was furnished this afternoon when it was announced that Sharkey would take his first real workout at the dog racing track, as pretty a show place as you would want to see, with the green grass of its infield almost touching the ocean's edge.

More than 1,500 people sat for an hour in the sun, waiting for the Lithuanian to show up. Sharkey didn't. He had played golf during the morning, he explained, and he just didn't intend to train any more today and that was that. And so they sent the people away, but no one seemed to be grumbling much.

A simple expediency for doing the Pied Piper act with people at Miami Beach is to have Jack Dempsey don his Panama and start somewhere on foot. Small boys, stout matrons, and robust Rotarians from Reading, Pa., run panting at the ex-champion's heels. Sweet young things with autograph books plead, "please Mr. Dempsey," and Dempsey, the promoter, hasn't the heart to refuse.

Just Like Tunney

There has been some question raised as to the probable success of this last of Tex Rickards fistic ventures. The question is still open. The debate won't be closed until the night of the 27th. But as to the reason for its success, if it succeeds, there is no dispute. It won't be because the fighters care for nothing except their purses, for they don't. Witness Sharkey's indifference this afternoon, and Stribling's refusal to train at all.

It will be because two personable young men like Dempsey and Hannagan can hypnotize a community—backed up as they are by Bill and Mike Carey and all the efforts of a working force which has more than the financial side of the thing at heart.

These people who are "selling" the fight to the cash customers are doing so with one common motive. They want to finish what Rickard started, and they want to prove to the world and themselves that they can do so. The psychology of the thing is overcoming innumerable obstacles. It may be that when this fight is over—and if it is successful—some of those behind it will carry on with some of the other sporting ventures Tex had in mind. But that is another story.

Baer Facts

By ARTHUR "BUGS" BEAR

NEW YORK, Feb. 7.—The fight for the $24,000,000 prohibition fund is one of the fiercest combats in the history of civilized antagonism.

It seems that secretary Andy Mellon is opposed to spending that much money in a five-and-ten cent political store.

We interviewed Secretary Andy yesterday over a national hook-up of 48 weejee boards.

He is a very sociable old gentleman in an unguarded moment.

His remarks on prohibition are worth recording for the benefit of future students of the bale industry.

"I have been in public life many years, man and boy. And even the boy was a Republican.

"I have studied the prohibition from every angle except looking through a funnel.

"And I want to state that even $24,000,000 will not make a sun parlor out of a damp cellar."

Here the secretary paused to allow the non-partisan cliques of lobbyists to become agreeably subnormal.

"I am running the United States treasury. And there is no night bell on the front door.

"I intend to keep the books. And red ink is not my idea of freshments."

Andy stopped while the telautograph and the dictaphones purred away like contented cats on a rug made of mouse-skins.

"Yes, Sir, my lad, the watch-dog of the treasury is a water spaniel now."

Truer words were never spoken by man or beast.

We have reached a crucial spark in our nation's system of fireless cooking.

If the prohibitionists do not get that $24,000,000 the country is liable to go dry.

The struggle is about even. But expensive. For every saloon closed, the prohibs open up a new office.

Forty-five Democrats and 194 Republicans have voted against the $24,000,000 fund.

Which makes a total of 194 Republicans.

The next bill before the house will be a request for $56,000,000 worth of blotting paper to stuff up Niagara Falls.

TAYLOR-SINGER READY FOR GO

Feather Titular Contenders To Battle Tonight

NEW YORK, Feb. 7 (UP)—Bud Taylor and Al Singer, featherweight championship contenders, ended training today for their 10-round bout at Madison Square garden Friday night.

Both were well under the 130-pound limit stipulated in their contracts. Singer slightly outweighing the Terre Haute scrapper. Both appeared in good shape and both are confident.

Both Take Light Drills

Singer, whose rise from the ranks has been one of the outstanding features of the fight game among the lighter scrappers, ran through a brisk workout at his gymnasium here today.

Taylor also had light drill today.

Interest in the bout centers in the fact that the winner may be in line for a shot at Andre Routis when the French featherweight brings the world title back from Europe.

Victor May Fight Tony

It is considered highly probable that the winner will be matched with Tony Canzoneri, who knocked out Joey Sangor at Chicago Wednesday night, with the title scrap with Routis as bait.

Singer fought a draw with Canzoneri in his last appearance at the garden. His handlers say he has improved constantly since.

Taylor, who once was regarded as the uncrowned king of the bantams, is considered by many to have passed his prime since outgrowing the lighter division. Taylor emphatically denies this and the object of his visit here is to disprove this idea.

DAILY DOPE

By LARRY DAILEY

MR. A. C. (SLICK) ANSLEY takes some exception to the all-star, all-time baseball team picked by the conductor of this column yesterday. Mr. Ansley, who knows his baseball, submits a team which he believes would beat my nine. Ansley's club indeed is a great combination. Here it is:

Pitchers—Walter Johnson and Herb Pennock.

Catcher—Ray Schalk.

First base—Hal Chase.

Second base—Napoleon LaJoie.

Third base—Heinie Zimmerman.

Shortstop—Hans Wagner.

Center field—Tris Speaker.

Right field—Babe Ruth.

ANSLEY named Johnson as his right-hand pitcher and Pennock as his left-hand hurler in place of Christy Mathewson and Rube Waddell, the writer's choice. He also disagreed with my selection of the catcher, second baseman and third baseman. I named Roger Bresnahan, Eddie Collins and Jimmie Collins for those places.

What do you say about such a team, fans? Write your selections to me and they will be published in this column.

BASKET BALL is an interesting game. A devotee of the sport argued with me recently regarding the merits of the cage sport and other major athletic pastimes. It was my contention that basket ball never will attain the popularity of football, baseball and boxing, because it lacks the color and swift-moving, dramatic action of those sports. I see an argument in my favor in a game recently played by Simmons university and Austin college, won by the Cowboys, 14 to 10.

In this game, to quote the Associated Press story, "the Cowboys' so-called offense was almost postponed. They held the ball out of play eight minutes in the first half and 14 minutes in the last half, while the Austin college defense refused to advance out of zone-guard position.

And this, further from the A. P. story: "Gerald Smith, Simmons guard, may have set a record when he held the ball for six minutes in the last half without moving out of his tracks."

Any game that permits such tactics won't seriously threaten the popularity of the sports which call for constant speed and action.

Horemans Beats Cochran In Cue Title Tourney

NEW YORK, Feb. 7. (UP)—Edouard Horemans, defending champion, won his first match of the world 18.2 Balkline billiard championship tournament at Level hall tonight by defeating Welker Cochran, New York contender, 400 points to 290.

The victory put the Belgian titleholder in a more advantageous position to retain his crown, since he had been defeated badly in the opening match of the tourney by Kinrey Matsuyama, diminutive Japanese, who now leads the field with two wins and no defeats.

Both Horemans and Cochran now have one defeat and one victory to their credit.

Bass Loses to Lenard On Foul in 3rd Round

ST. LOUIS, Feb. 7. (UP)—After clearly outclassing Henry Lenard of Chicago for two and one-half rounds, Benny Bass, hard-hitting Philadelphia featherweight, lost the decision on a foul in the third round of their scheduled 10-round bout here tonight.

Bass scored a two-count knockdown in the opening round, and knocked Lenard down for a count of nine in the second. An uppercut to the groin lost him the decision in the third.

COYOTES LOSE TO IOWA PARK

Hawks Score 20 to 13 Win In Close Contest

Iowa Park High school basket ball team scored a victory over the Wichita Falls Coyotes here last night in a close game. The score was 20 to 13. The game was a nip-and-tuck affair all the way but the Hawks managed to find the baskets with a trifle more consistency than the Pack.

The junior college Indians defeated the Iowa Park town team, 15 to 13.

Iowa Park girls were victors over Wichita Falls girl in a volleyball game.

Mehlhorn Asks For Explanation

Bill Wants Reason Why He Was Left Off Team

By GEORGE KIRKSEY

NEW YORK, Feb. 7. (UP)—"Wild Bill" Mehlhorn, the golf professional who was omitted from the Ryder cup team, is coming to New York this month to find out why.

Mehlhorn will be one of the attractions at the fourth international golf show Feb. 18-23, and while here will ask the Professional Golfers' association for an explanation of his failure to be named on the 1929 team.

That the Mehlhorn matter is far from settled was indicated by the attitude of Jack Mackie, veteran Inwood professional and secretary of the P. G. A.

"I have nothing to say about the matter just now," Mackie said.

Bill on Rampage

Since the Ryder cup team was announced without Mehlhorn's name, "Wild Bill" has won three major tournaments in succession. He won the El Paso open with 271, a new world record for 72 holes. Eight days later he captured the Texas open with 277, and he followed this up with a victory in the South Central tournament.

Mehlhorn, Horton Smith, the youngest member of the Ryder cup team, and Bobby Cruickshank tied for first place in the South Central and Mehlhorn won the play-off with a brilliant 70, two under par.

The only member of the 1927 Ryder cup team not renamed for this year's team, Mehlhorn, in view of his consistently great golf, is at least entitled to explanation of his dismissal.

Hagen Exonerated

In a recent written statement to the P. G. A., Mehlhorn exonerated Walter Hagen, captain of the Ryder cup team, for the responsibility of selecting the team without him.

"To the best of my knowledge," Mehlhorn said, "Walter Hagen is one of my best friends in the profession and had nothing to do with the selection of the team."

The situation in England is quite the opposite and the British golfers are quietly going about the task of preparing to end the supremacy of the American professionals.

The Ryder cup matches will be played at Moortown, England, April 26-27.

WICHITA POLO TEAM BEATEN

Fort Clark Fifth Cavalry Four Wins, 9 to 7

BROWNSVILLE, Texas, Feb. 7 (AP)—The Fifth calvary riders from Fort Clark advanced to finals of the handicap event of the mid-winter polo tournament here by defeating the Wichita Falls quartet, 9 to 7, today.

The victors will meet the Twelfth cavalry team of Fort Brown Sunday in the finals.

Today's tilt was the hardest fought of the tournament so far. Captain Rogers' play was outstanding for the calvarymen, accounting for four goals. His teammate, Major Robenson, drove the ball between the posts three times.

Art Meckel, No. 2 on the Wichita Falls team, played a brilliant game to score three points.

Wichita Falls Rallies

Wichita Falls got off to a bad start in the first half, scoring only three goals to Fort Clark's eight. They came back strong in the fifth chukker and rang up three goals in a few minutes of play.

Featherston scored a free goal after a foul and Dickey and Corder each sent the ball between the posts with well-placed shots that got a hand from the gathering. The North Texans were able to ring up only one marker during the remainder of the game, however, that being made by Meckel in the final chukker.

Escapes Hurt in Fall

Wichita Falls played a good defensive game in the last half and held the Fort Clark aggregation to two goals. Corder did a Prince of Wales in midfield during the third chukker but neither he nor his mount were injured.

The scoring and lineups:

Wichita Falls (7)	Position	Fort Clark (9)
1. Corder	1	Robeson, 3
3. Meckel	2	Gregg, 1
1. Dickey	3	Horger, 4
2. Featherstone	4	Thorp, 1

Porkers Challenged By Simmons Cagers

ABILENE, Texas, Feb. 7. (AP)—The Simmons university Cowboys, undefeated in the Texas conference basket ball race, tonight issued a challenge to the Arkansas university Razorbacks, thrice champions of the Southwest conference, to a three-game series.

The Porkers, who apparently have sewed up their fourth consecutive title, were made a give-or-take offer of $750 for the series, to be played either here or at Fayetteville.

Sports Editor Who May Referee Strib-Sharkey Go, Is Reminiscent

Emerson W. Dickerson Remembers 'Way Back When And Runyon Tells Stories of the Fat Scribe

By DAMON RUNYON

(Copyright, 1929, by Universal Service)

NEW YORK, Feb. 7.—Mr. Emerson Waldorf Dickerson, the fat sports editor of the Grand Rapids Herald, and the best possible choice they could make if they are looking for a really capable referee for the Sharkey-Stribling matter, gives me that old don't-you-remember business in a long, closely woven epistle.

Mr. Dickerson seems to be in reminiscent mood as he pegs at the keys of his caligraph, but he has got me mixed up in his memory with Pierce Egan, the British sports writer who lived a couple of centuries back. Mr. Dickerson don't-you-remembers me back to a period when I must have been a little barefooted boy running around that dear Pueblo, Colo, chucking ground biscuits, or rocks, at Sam Foo, the Chink laundryman.

Chucking ground biscuits at Sam Foo was the popular childish pastime in those days, at which period Mr. Dickerson was a big sports writer on the Rocky Mountain News in Denver. I well recall my father taking me by the hand and leading me down to the union depot to point out a fat guy disembarking from a Rio Grande train.

"That is Mr. Dickerson, the great sporting editor from Denver," my father said. "He has come to our city to referee a boxing contest between Mr. Fireman James Flynn and some stew from Salida. If you are a good boy, my child, and mind your p's and w's, especially your q's, you may one day be sporting editor like Mr. Dickerson."

He's Growing Younger

Mr. Dickerson was getting gray, even then. I saw him in New York not long ago, and much to my surprise he seemed hale and hearty. He must be rising 50, come next grass.

Naturally, I don't remember the night Jack Dempsey saw his first prize fight back in 1910, in Silverton, Colo., when Dick Gilbert and Howard Baker, both Chicago boys, were the headliners, and Mr. Dickerson was the referee.

There may have been a Runyon among those present, but it could scarcely have been this author. Possibly it was Obadiah Runyon, a distant relative, and a bit of a scallawag, who went in for things like prize fights, and who once told me that the fact that Gilbert and Howard were paid $1,000 apiece for their efforts in Silverton that night, induced Mr. Dempsey to turn pugilist to snatch some of that soft dough.

I believe there is a tradition back in my home country that Mr. Dickerson and Gilbert, one of the fighters, got caught behind some washouts en route to Silverton and had but one meal in two days. They got this meal at a sheep herder's hut, and it consisted solely of mutton. I thought Mr. Dickerson turned pale when I ordered lamb chops at a dinner we had together on his last visit here. I am told that he has an intense hatred of sheep, sheep herders, sheep dogs, sheep's eyes, and sheep's clothing.

I have heard Obadiah Runyon say that Jack Dempsey hoofed it all the way to Silverton for the Gilbert-Howard battle, sleeping in barns en route, but I never believed the story. I have known Jack Dempsey several years, and never knew him to sleep in a barn in all that period.

Three K. O.'s in One Night

Mr. Dickerson tries to don't-you-remember me back to the night in Cripple Creek, a mile or more above the level of the sea when a featherweight known as Freddy Weeks stiffened three stiffies in a single night, with Mr. Dickerson himself tolling off the fatal tens.

But if there was a Runyon present that night, it must have been Cyril Runyon, a fourth cousin from the banks of the Huerfano river. I vaguely remember Cousin Cyril sitting beside my crib and telling me a bedtime story about how Mr. Weeks stiffened the first two stiffies in less than a minute each and that all hands then had to hunt the third stiffy, who was finally found in a state of coma due to fright. He had witnessed the fate of his comrades.

Cousin Cyril said they had to give Stiffy No. 3 a shot in the arm to get him into the ring so Mr. Weeks could stiffen him. Afterwards Mr. Weeks was himself stiffened in Los Angeles by Mr. Abe Attell. I read about it in my school books.

Surely, surely Mr. Dickerson cannot confuse the Runyon who was president of the Outlaw Colorado State league with the incumbent Runyon! Surely not! That Runyon must have been Egbert Runyon, called Egg, for short, who led a man raid by his outlawed band against the Western league, and nailed one player from organized baseball, a southpaw pitcher, who was slightly potted at the time, but who remained in Trinidad ever afterwards and became a justice of the peace, or something.

I have heard our pioneers out home relate how Mr. Dickerson once journeyed to Trinidad to umpire a benefit baseball game, free of charge, and how the citizens sent him back to Denver loaded with good old Trinidad 44-calibre skee, and also with a pound of fresh laid limburger cheese in his Pullman berth to keep him company.

Runyon's Night Club

I am wondering if, by any chance, Mr. Dickerson has been saving up some of that Trinidad titter toddy that he tangles me up in his memory with such remote events as the fight between Young Corbett and Muggsy Scholes, in old Cheyenne, which he refereed.

My earliest recollection of Mr. Dickerson is when I was a stripling correspondent on the Rhine with the army of occupation, and managing, as a side line, the first night club and sportsmen's casino ever seen in those parts. This was the justly celebrated Raspberry club, where he served a species of whitish home-made German fluid, two drinks of which made a guest see beautiful ladies in the offing, and to hear lovely music, so we didn't have to go to the expense of hiring entertainers.

In the casino, such diversion might be had as stud poker, dr draw, or maybe craps. Mr. Dickerson would don't-you-remember me back to the night he won $1,000 on a pair of queens, but I cannot go with him that far. I was too young to know what a pair of queens meant at the period of which he speaks.

Possibly Mr. Dickerson is thinking of Col. Bozeman Bulger, who was an old settler on the Rhine by the time I got there, and who often told strangers that he was Mr. Runyon, by way of deluding them into the belief that he was a young and sprightly fellow. Mr. Dickerson should really do his don't-you-remembering with the colonel.

MORRISON MAY LEAVE PONIES

Ray Admits He Considers Virginia Offer

DALLAS, Feb. 7. (AP)—Coach Ray Morrison of Southern Methodist university admitted tonight he was "considering seriously" an offer to become head coach of the University of Virginia.

After a long distance conversation with officials of the school, Morrison said it all depended on the outcome of a conference there tomorrow. Pressed for an explanation, the Mustang mentor said there were certain requirements which must be met before he would be interested.

"If they agree to these conditions, then you will be interested?" he was asked.

"Yes," he replied. "I guess you might put it that way."

Morrison said a definite answer was not possible by telephone because the matter had to be taken up with the Virginia Athletic committee. If the committee reports favorably, Morrison indicated he would go before the S. M. U. Athletic council and ask to be released from his contract, which has one more year to run.

Saturday

Breakfast—Poached egg on melba toast, stewed peaches.

Lunch—Generous dish of junket.

Dinner—Vegetable soup, salisbury steak, buttered beets, tomato-spinach-asparagus salad, cup custard.

Rice en casserole: Soak a cupful of rice for an hour or more (preferably overnight). Wash thoroughly and boil in four or five cupfuls of water for about 20 minutes. Throw into a colander and spray with cold water. This washes away the sticky, starchy substance, leaving each grain separated. Have ready one cupful of grated raw oysterplant and one cupful of finely diced celery. Mix these vegetables with the rice, seasoning with a little salt. Into another bowl measure a half cup of peanut butter and thin with sufficient hot water to form a custard-like consistency. Empty rich mixture into a casserole and pour over all the thinned peanut butter, moving the rice about with a fork to thoroughly mix. Bake in a hot oven for 15 or 20 minutes, crisping the top under the broiler flame just before removing from oven.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Signs of Tuberculosis

Question: M. W. asks: "Aren't the first signs of tuberculosis a cough and general tiredness? A person not subject to many colds or coughs is not in great danger of getting, is he?"

Answer: The one who is not subject to coughs and colds is, of course, in less danger of contracting tuberculosis, but the best way to prevent it is to see that you do not get over-tired, and also make a strong effort to develop good diaphragmatic breathing.

Fattening Foods

Question: E. L. O. asks: "Would like to ask what kind of bread to eat while on more or less of a diet. I was eating wholewheat bread and had cut out potatoes and all starch food, but read in your column the other night that wholewheat bread was fattening."

Answer: The fattening effect of wholewheat bread would depend upon how much you use and, of course, your degree of tendency toward overweight.

When to Use Iodine

Question: Mrs. J. writes: "I have been told that iodine is good for the blood and rheumatism—to take eight drops three times a day in half a glass of water. Is this all right? If so, should I take it before or after meals?"

Answer: A very small amount of iodine is required by the blood, but there is some evidence to indicate that iodine should not be used without a doctor's prescription, since in some cases it has proved injurious and has actually increased the size of some goiters. I believe that the best form of iodine is that which is obtained in sea foods, fruits and vegetables.

Wife Called 'Dumb' Sues for Divorce

CHICAGO, Feb. 7. (US)—Dr. Myron I. Boylson left his wife at home because she was "dumb" and "uneducated" according to her bill for divorce filed today. The wife, Eina Geraldine Boylson, a nurse, alleges that her husband, who is associated with the University of Illinois and the Public Health institute, left her alone nights "while he went out to enjoy himself." She charges this and his statements on her being "dumb" and "uneducated" were cruel.

NEWLY FORMED VENMEX CO. BUYS SECOND WICHITA OIL TRACT

$123,550 PAID FOR PROPERTY

Interest in Burnett Lease Goes to Expanding Firm

The Venmex Oil corporation of Wichita Falls has purchased from Harry Hines, local operator, his interest in a tract of 80 acres out of the southwest quarter of section 6, S. A. and M. G. survey, Tom L. Burnett ranch, three miles south of Fowlkes station in Wichita county, on which are three wells producing 145 barrels per day, the consideration being $123,550.

The Panhandle Refining company, which controls the other part of the lease, will continue to operate the same, having retained its interests.

The purchase of this tract by the Venmex company is its second big buy of oil and oil properties in the Wichita county fields, the other being closed about a month ago for the J. and J. Waggoner production from Mr. Hines and others to the south of the latest buy. The Venmex company, which was recently granted a charter at Austin, is rapidly forging to the front as one of the most active of the newer concerns in the district.

Matador Holds Directors' Meet

The Matador Development company Wednesday held a special meeting of directors at the offices of J. L. McMahon, president of the company, in the First National Bank building.

Directors present were E. R. Perry, Tulsa, Okla.; Levi Smith, San Angelo; Charles Sherman, Fort Collins, Colo., and J. L. McMahon of Wichita Falls.

The company controls and has under lease many thousands of acres of valuable land in Motley and Cottle county in the North Texas field. It has four wells drilling with locations made for two more. One of the tests is showing gas at a depth of 4670 feet.

The drilling of these wells with formations encountered have demonstrated the outline of a large sub-surface structure, and the company views the prospect as a very favorable one for the uncovering of a paying production on its holdings.

Misener Sand Gives Up Gusher Production

Special to The Record News

TULSA, Okla., Feb. 7.—Gusher production is to be found in the Misener sand horizon of the Maud pool of the Greater Seminole field.

This was indicated Wednesday when Gypsy Oil company's No. 3 Miller, in the southeast of the northeast of the southeast of 18-8-5, which had the pay from 4627 to 4680 feet, with some water showing from an upper horizon, shut off the water and it made 650 barrels the first hour.

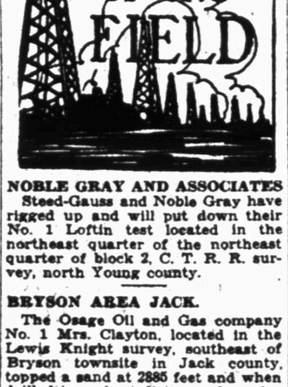

As the Gypsy is a party to plans to conserve production in the Seminole area, the well will not be permitted to produce anything like its potentiality of 15,000 barrels a day.

The Gypsy's new gusher is in the very center of the Maud area, and was regarded as significant of what might be found in other wells.

Marland May Revive Fort Worth Branch

FORT WORTH, Feb. 7 (AP)—Arrangements for re-establishing Texas and New Mexico headquarters for the Marland Production company in Fort Worth were being made today by E. J. Nickles of Ponca City, vice president of the company, and by George H. McIntyre, in charge of the Texas-New Mexico division. Headquarters of the company has been dormant since the resignation of former executives.

The well, which is a wildcat, is located between the Petroleum Producers-Texas well to the northwest, and the Lindsay Drilling company's No. 1 Thomason to the southeast, and in the event of a producer will be the means of opening up a good stretch of new and undeveloped land in the vicinity.

Late Oklahoma Field Reports

TULSA, Feb. 7. (AP)—Gypsy Oil company's No. 3 Miller in SE NE SE 18-8-5, in the Maud pool, late today was running wild with production estimated at between 15,000 and 20,000 barrels daily. The well which also was making 30,000,000 cubic feet of gas, came in yesterday with a small production which gradually gained until efforts to gauge the flow were stopped. Early today it burst loose, blowing the master gate off and still was flowing over the derrick top.

TULSA—Going well over the 300,000 barrel mark for the first time in months, greater Seminole field today made a new high peak for the year, gauging 302,342 barrels, a gain of 7,447 barrels over yesterday's gauge. Maud sector contributed to the increase with 43,640 barrels, a new high for all time for that pool. The Gypsy company's gusher and two other wells boosted the Maud pool output.

OKLAHOMA CITY—J. S. Cosden and company has made location for its No. 1 Gardner in NE NW 31-9l-4w, the Marshall sector of Logan county, and work is to begin at once, it was reported. This is to be a deep test, and is on the lease adjoining the Shell Petroleum's McCully discovery lease of the district.

SLICK DENIES SALE RUMORS

Oklahoma Operator Has No Thought of Selling

Special to The Record News.

TULSA, Okla., Feb. 7—Thomas B. Slick is not selling out, and has no intention or thought of doing so.

This is the result one obtains after talking to Mr. Slick about rumors in circulation that he was selling out for $75,000,000 to the Magnolia Petroleum company and Carter Oil company.

Officials of the two companies mentioned also denied that they were negotiating for the acquision of the Slick oil properties in Oklahoma, Kansas, Texas and other states. Mr. Slick's daily production today, with many wells pinched back, is 40,000 barrels and he has nearly 4,000,000 barrels of stored oil in the Greater Seminole district and is planning the construction of additional tankage.

A man close to Mr. Slick said that it would be foolish for Slick to sell out, for he would have to start all over again. Mr. Slick's health is good and he is optimistic of the future, although admitting that present conditions are not the best.

Mid-Kansas 12-C In Among Field's Best

SAN ANGELO, Texas, Feb. 7 (UP)—Flowing 2,502 barrels of oil in 30 minutes from 1362 feet through a four and a six-inch line, the Mid-Kansas and Transcontinental Oil company's 12-C Yates today became one of Pecos county's largest potential producers.

This flow is at the rate of 5,005 barrels hourly, or 120,100 barrels daily.

Several wells in the field are larger, the prize producer being the Mid-Kansas and Transcontinental's No. 5-D Yates. Last September this well gauged 4,572.63 barrels hourly, or 146,318.4 daily.

Irion County Test Bails Eight Barrels

SAN ANGELO, Feb. 7. (AP)—The Western Oil company's No. 1 Harlan Horney, the latest Iron county test offering possibilities of production, bailed eight barrels of oil from sand topped at 1225 feet, R. M. Lasater of Mertzon, one of the owners, said today. The breaking of an engine clutch interrupted bailing. In a 12-hour shutdown, the well filled with 175 feet of oil, free from water and accompanied by little, if any gas. The oil tested 35 gravity at 54 degrees.

Skelly Shuts Down Lea County Strike

Special to The Record News.

TULSA, Okla., Feb. 7—Without any operators agreement, but in the interests of conservation, the Skelly Oil company is preparing to shut in its new discovery in the Jal pool of Lea county, New Mexico. The No. 1 Joyner, in the northeast of the southeast of 26-25s-36e, that had a pay from 3328 to 3331 feet, and good for 800 barrels a day, is making but a few barrels an hour because of insufficient tankage and no pipe line connections.

NEW YORK COTTON

NEW YORK, Feb. 7. (AP)—An early decline under liquidation promoted by relatively weak cables and nervousness over action of the stock market was followed by rallies in the cotton market today on covering and trade buying. May deliveries sold up from 19.65 to 19.88 and closed at 19.87 compared with 19.79, yesterday's close. The general market closed firm at net advances of 5 to 14 points.

The market was unsettled in early trading. First prices were 3 to 8 points net lower. The active positions soon showed net losses of 12 to 17 points under liquidation and some local, western and Wall street selling. Uncertainty as to the effect of the federal reserve statement on speculative credits and its possible reactions on cotton, was said to be one of the factors on the decline. There also was selling on the relatively easy showing of Liverpool and the advance in the bank of England rate.

Early offerings were readily absorbed by trade buying and covering, however. After selling off to 19.55 for March and 19.68 for the new October contracts, prices turned steadier. Failure of unsettling features in the early news to stimulate more general or aggressive selling, apparently made a favorable impression on sentiment as to the technical position of the market. This was reflected by covering or rebuying by some of the earlier sellers on the afternoon advance. Some buying also was reported on the theory that restriction of credits for speculative purposes might make it easier to finance commodities and so prove a bullish factor on cotton in the long run.

Much of the early buying was attributed to the trade and was believed to include some price fixing for southern and Canadian mills. March liquidation continued but was taken at a slight widening of the difference. March closed 10 points under May compared with 7 points yesterday.

Private cables reported London and Manchester liquidation influenced by the higher bank of England in Liverpool. Manchester advices reported an improved home demand for cotton cloths but said yarns were pressing for sale. Exports today 33,597 making 5,839,165 this season. Port receipts 35,186. U. S. port stocks 2,160,932.

NEW ORLEANS COTTON

NEW ORLEANS, Feb. 7. (AP)—After declining 13 to 14 points in early trading, the cotton market strengthened later today under a demand stimulated by the theory that commodities would be aided by the federal reserve board's statement against stock speculation and expectations of large January consumption figures. May advanced from 19.04 to 19.27 and closed at 19.26, unchanged from yesterday's closing figure. The general market closed very steady at net advances of 5 to 7 points.

The market opened easy in sympathy with a decline in Liverpool, private cables explaining the weakness there as due to the increase in the Bank of England's discount rate. First trades showed losses of 5 to 10 points and the market continued to sag in early trading due to the slump in stocks. March traded off to 18.99, May 19.05 and July 19.07, or 13 to 14 points net, down.

At the decline good trade buying and covering developed, and by noon all the loss was recovered. In early afternoon prices continued to advance under continued covering, offerings and good January consumption prognostications. Active positions traded to new highs for the day, with March at 19.20, May 19.27 and July 19.39, or 21 to 22p points up from the lows. The close was near the top, with March at 19.16 and July 19.27.

The prospects for unsettled weather in the belt which would further retard crop preparations added to the late firmness, as did liberal buying in New York.

Many Stocks Take 'Spanking' After Federal Reserve Warning

By BROADAN WALL

NEW YORK, Feb. 7. (US)—Stocks suffered a drastic shakeout following the federal reserve board's "warning" today. Advance in the Bank of England rate to 5½ from 4½ per cent, containing threat of another increase in our rediscount rate enhanced the effect of the reserve's admonition so that heavy liquidation and considerable short selling was experienced throughout the day.

Industrials broke over 12 points on the average while Rails dropped well over 3. Radio collapsed 35 points, General Electric 12½, Johns Manville 19½, Montgomery Ward 6¾, Warner Brothers 6⅜, Steel 6¼, while other recently active stocks all lost from 3 to 5 points for the session.

Canadian Pacific and Union Pacific were both 6 points lower at the close while other rails lost from a point to over 4 in the case of New York Central. Only spasmodic rallies were registered following a wide-open break at the opening with selling gaining volume toward the close as the time drew near for the reserve bank directors to meet.

Some traders took cheer from announcement after the close that the rediscount rate was left unchanged at 5 per cent. From a strictly stock market point of view, however, it would be better if the rate were advanced. Conditions warrant it and with the Bank of England rate at 5½ per cent there is a constant threat of an advance to dampen speculative ardour. Maintenance of our rate of 5 per cent strengthens belief of international banking cooperation. An advance in our rediscount rate would entirely nullify the higher rate announced by the Bank of England and encourage immediate resumption of purchases of gold in England for shipment to this country. The banking powers evidently do not desire such development. Further increase in loans makes no difference as it will be the statement issued next Thursday that will reveal the actual result of the federal reserve's latest effort to stem the tide of stock speculation.

The very bad slump in Westinghouse revealed how the public has been following the move in the stock. Somewhat similar condition was revealed in Montgomery Ward and in neither was there revealed any great inclination on the part of the market sponsors to lend support. Those who first took a position months ago in these as well as in other "good stocks" such as Carbide, Can, and others are holding to their original investment holdings and continue to talk optimistically of the long-pull outlook but apparently have decided not to run counter to the reserve board's command. Chrysler was one of the favorites for professional bearish operations coincident with rumor that the earnings report, showing effect of substantial writeoffs may be held up another month.

Individual stock news and developments were of no importance, however. Brokers and traders who talked bullish were mostly "whistling in the dark." They did not expect as bad a crash as the market suffered and were none too sure of what was to come. Wall street, from past experience, has realized all along that when the money powers really decided to shut down on speculation they could and would do so. Whether the reason now mostly concerns the undermining of domestic business or the necessity of maintaining stabilization of currencies abroad was considered unimportant in so far as the immediate outlook was concerned as it was generally accepted that the "verbal spanking" administered by the reserve board had taken the bloom from the ball market.

Bankers continued to confidently forecast extension of substantial credit to the Bank of England by the reserve bank. In so doing they expressed belief that the advance in the Bank of England rate was but a temporary factor. As soon as the credit structure of the stock market here is corrected and normal call and time money rates return the English rate should be out. Merchants and manufacturers in England are having none too easy a time now and their position is not improved by a 5½ per cent rate. Such advance was declared necessary, however, to prevent gold shipments here influenced by the high call and time money rates. So long as the English rate is held at 5½ per cent there is a continued threat of a higher rate here which will be added influence toward the further correction of the stock market which the federal reserve has ordered.

TEXAS REVIEW

FORT WORTH, Feb. 7. (AP)—Except for bulls and calves that sold about steady on the Fort Worth livestock market today, other classes of cattle received lower bids during the early part of the session. Very few sales on these classes. Steers made up a good portion of the cattle supply. More cattle on hand than here on Thursday of last week, but hardly so many as a year ago.

In the slaughter division one load of plain light weight steers sold at $.925 and a load of steers fed by a nearby feed lot sold at $10.35, or steady to 15c lower. The others had trouble getting tickets with buyers bidding around a quarter lower.

One load of bulls in the southern division sold at $8.25, or about steady. The common light bulls in packages sold around $6.50.

Practically no early sales of cows, with buyers bids around a quarter lower. The supply light, particularly on canners and cutters.

A fair offering of slaughter yearlings and heifers on hand with lower bids placed during the morning. A few cars were sold at $9.25 to $11.35, or 15c to 25c lower. Some of the best ones unsold at noon. Light yearlings had preference.

The calf supply was very light. One load of good fed calves, around 450 pounds, sold at $11.65, or about steady, quality considered. A few cars of brahma calves that arrived late sold at $10.50. Cull calves around $6.50.

A four carlot of steers sold to a feeder buyer at $10.25, or about steady.

Wooled fat lambs sold at $16.00 and fresh shorn fat lambs at $14.50. While these prices appeared about a quarter higher, quality considered, there is very little quotable increase over prevailing prices.

Hogs $1.50 to a quarter higher with quality lacking in the rail section. Rail top $9.90 and the best truck butchers up to $9.15. Packing sows sold at $7.50@8.00.

CHICAGO, Feb. 7. (AP)—Hogs—Receipts 53,000; active, 10@20c higher; top $10.00 for 160 to 240 pounds; pigs, medium to choice, 90 to 130 pounds $8.00@9.50

He also praised the two repicients of the medals, saying that their services had demonstrated these qualities in their work for the local voiture.

Music and dancing were enjoyed after the ceremonies.

100 Attend City B. Y. P. U. Meeting

More than 100 young people from five Baptist churches in the city braved wintry weather Thursday night to attend the monthly meeting of the City B. Y. P. U. federation, which was held at the Lory Memorial Baptist church.

The principal address of the evening was delivered by Rev. D. E. Mathews, pastor of the St. Matthew Baptist church (colored), who chose for an inspirational sermon the following text: "Thy word is a lamp to my feet, and a light unto my pathway."

The young people's union of the First Baptist church was awarded the banner for highest efficiency, while that for attendance was won by the Lory Memorial Baptist church organization. Representatives of the Highland Heights, Southside and Lamar Avenue Baptist churches, besides those of the two banner-winning churches, were present. Harold Diggs, president of the federation, presided at the meeting.

The following program was given:

7:30—Song service, led by E. O. Henry; Miss Sylvia Smith at piano.
7:45—Business session.
7:55—Departmental conferences with election of departmental officers; adults, led by Rev. J. L. Walters; senior, led by Mrs. H. J. Bailey; intermediate, led by Mrs. H. C. Mayers; junior, led by Miss Lola Leath; primary, led by Miss A. Capps.
8:25—General Assembly.

$2,000 Damage in Fire Here Thursday Night

Snow, slick streets and a temperature of 17 degrees above zero hampered the city firemen in checking a fire in the Bob Lane house at 1009 Fifteenth street Thursday night.

The blaze was finally brought under control with an estimated loss of $2,000. The building is valued at $4,000 and is occupied by E. E. Gentry, a painter.

Wichita Oil Man Is Enthusiastic

A. F. Martin Wasn't Sick, Exactly, But Needed Something to Build Him Up— Says Orgatone Did It.

"People suffering from stomach trouble and a general run-down condition certainly ought to try Orgatone, for it's the best ever," said A. F. Martin of 1307 N. Fifth street, Wichita Falls, Texas, while in Allison's Drug Store the other day. Mr. Martin is well known in oil circles, having been associated with that industry practically all his life, and is only one of the many well known men in this industry who have come forward with their unqualified endorsements of the triumph medicine.

"For several years," he continued, "I had not been feeling like myself. Not sick, exactly, but just seemed to be completely run-down and very little life and energy about me. My appetite was very poor, and although my stomach could be empty I still was not hungry. I know that my liver was out of order, because I felt dull, and sluggish, and some days hardly cared whether I worked or not. I lost in strength and health and was evidently in a fair way to a more serious condition.

"What I needed was just an all-round building up, and Orgatone has done that very thing. Almost as soon as I began taking it my appetite improved and my tired, worn-out feelings began to leave me. I have only taken it a few weeks and besides getting back my general health I have picked up in weight and strength. I thoroughly relish my meals and all my old-time energy and strength have come back to me. So I say anyone in need of a first class stomach medicine, one that will straighten them out all round should try Orgatone."

A dull, dragging feeling of the body, a sluggish mind, a dull memory. Despondence, the depression of spirits, nervousness, stomach trouble, weak back, headaches and general debility, are among the various symptoms of the condition from which a surprisingly large number of people suffer. They simply need something to tone up their system and to assist the vital organs in performing their proper functions. Orgatone is a powerful reconstructive system cleanser and always produces most gratifying results.

Genuine Orgatone is not a so-called patent or secret remedy, but a new scientific treatment containing no alcohol or other base stimulation drugs, and therapeutic value of which is being explained daily at Allison's rug Store, 716 Indiana avenue, Wichita Falls, Texas.—Adv.

Thorough Study of Tax Problem Here Urged in C.-C. Conference

The board of directors of the chamber of commerce in their meeting at the Wichita club Thursday night offered to the committee on taxation, which was appointed by Orville Bullington, president, a recommendation designed to bring about a thorough study of the tax problem in this locality.

The suggestion calls for the appointment of a joint committee, composed of representatives of the chamber of commerce, the city, and the county governments, the personnel to represent all phases of industrial, professional, commercial and social activities. This committee, according to the plan recommended, would make a thorough study of taxation as it affects citizens of the Wichita Falls community. It was pointed out that if the committee should find that taxes are equitably assessed, and are efficiently spent, a vote of confidence should be given to the officials charged with the handling of this part of the community's business. If, on the other, it should be found that savings could be effected, such findings could be made of great value to the taxpayers.

The report of W. E. Fitzgerald, who was appointed last fall as chairman of a committee to study the tax problems here, was referred to the committee appointed by Mr. Bullington, of which J. C. Mytinger is the chairman.

Little Theatre Wins High Praise In 'Dulcy,' Premiere Presentation

by MARJORIE MATHIS
The Record News Staff

The Wichita Falls Little Theatre, graced by a charming and vivacious vehicle, and represented by the spirited and sincere work of an unusual cast, Thursday evening launched itself upon a career of high promise in the premiere presentation of "Dulcy," the initial offering of the reorganized group. The performance will be repeated at the same hour at the Forum on Friday night.

In spite of the weather, the auditorium at the Forum was filled with an enthusiastic audience, captured at once by the play and the players. The organization was particularly happy in the selection of its first play, for "Dulcy" is a delightful comedy, crowded with kindly satire and disarmingly human. Its first appeal is to the business man, and the masculine element in the audience Thursday night responded manfully.

Tulsan's Work Brilliant

The work of Miss Gretchen Comegys, visiting artist from Tulsa, who played the title role, was consistently brilliant. She handled a difficult role with a finished deftness and vivacity. Much of the burden of the performance lay lightly on her slender shoulders, and she gave her audience a "Dulcy" true in every touch.

Honors fell to Paul Barnett, as the irascible Mr. Forbes, to Mrs. Ruth M. Henry as the charming Angela; to Louis Bond as the candid and delightful younger brother, and to J. C. Straus Sr., as the "celluloid son-in-law." The enthusiastic applause of the audience went as well to Mrs. A. D. Duck, as Mrs. Forbes, Jerry Moffat, as the harassed young husband of Dulcy herself, Edward Smith as Van Dyke, the nut; Frank Bain as Sterrett; W. D. Bent as Blair Patterson and Frank Seltmann as the misunderstood butler, Henry.

Directed by Daly

The production wa swell staged, under the direction of James Daly, professional director. Charming scenes and sets were designed by Miss Alice Welty as chairman of the stage craft committee, working with Miss Dorothy Campbell and Henry Barton. The casting and costuming was under the direction of Mrs. J. T. Harrell and Mrs. J. E. Shipley. Mrs. Guy C. Raley assembled all the properties.

Between the acts Ethel Allen Nelson, violinist, entertained with selected numbers. During the second intermission the audience scattered to the lounge where coffee and wafers were served. Committee members acted as hostesses at the door.

The ticket sale for the second evening's performance was heavy Thursday, the weather influencing many who would be first nighters to choose the second show instead. The curtain will rise again at 8:15 Friday night.

After the first act Thursday evening, Baldwin Montgomery, president, introduced Mrs. Ben. G. Oneal, who explained that the presentation of "Dulcy" was a part of Wichita Falls' observation of National Drama week.

WEEKS CLUB MAY CUT FEE

Membership Drive Planned For Spring

Decision to recommend a lower annual membership fee, and the appointment of a committee to confer with George D. Fairtrace, city manager, relative to the employment of a professional for the Weeks Park Golf club featured the luncheon meeting of the directors of the club at the Kemp hotel Thursday noon, it was learned following the meeting.

All but one of the 10 directors were present at the luncheon, at which Thomas E. Hale Jr., president of the club, presided. The committee appointed to take up the proposed membership fee reduction, and the employment of an instructor consists of Fred Weeks, Dan Shine and Jack Hale.

Election of directors for the coming year, which begins on April 1, will be held at a called meeting of the entire membership at the clubhouse in March, it was announced. Plans for a membership campaign to be conducted this spring, and a program of activities for the coming season were discussed at the luncheon.

Mrs. Hammonds To Write Story

interest in governmental affairs."

She said she resigned "on the fact that my presence in the governor's office was being used as a smoke screen by selfish politicians as an excuse for their actions."

Power Was "Limited"

Mrs. Hammonds regards her experience in the Oklahoma political turmoil of the past two years as a sacrifice for clean government. In that time, as confidential secretary to Johnston, she generaled his office. "But only in a limited way," she explained.

Mrs. Hammonds will write "her story" of the Oklahoma situation as one whom "selfish interest attempted to make me the goat." She will appeal to women to "arouse from their lethargy" and follow the "Carrie Nations" of politics.

Martyr Needs Help

"A prominent man of the state once told me that when I came to the governor's office it was the first time in the history of the state any party, with a $10 bill to hand to the secretary, could not get his case presented favorably to the governor.

"I remember one man came in and asked for office records. I said I would get them when the governor gave me permission. He said, 'you are governor in fact, aren't you?'

"I said, 'you know as I do that Henry Johnston is governor.'"

"One martyr, such as Carrie Nation in the liquor fight, can not succeed without the people," she added.

"I was not an advocate for women's suffrage and refused to sign the pact for the same.

"But the ballot has been given. It is now not only the duty but a grave responsibility upon women that the child of today may be assured of a continuation of American principles of government as expressed in true Democracy.

"It appeared that American government is approaching a crisis.

"Personal liberties are at stake.

"God forbid when noble purposes and a desire to serve, exisiting in every true American breast, is crushed.

"That such a condition may never exist is the challenge not only to the women of this state and nation but to peoples of all nations, to air their inherent rights of participation in government."

Mrs. Hammonds gave her views while seated before the fireplace in the Hammonds home, a few blocks removed from the capitol where for two years she has held a prominent place. She talked in a tired manner. "I need rest, but I like a fight."

Between stirring tea and cutting a piece of cake for her interviewer and in interims between questions, she walked across to a small table and jotted down notes for her forthcoming thesis on Oklahoma government.

On the table were pictures of Governor Johnston.

Her story will reveal, she indicated, alleged intrigue in government surrounding her post as the only confidential secretary in Oklahoma history.

$4,200 Asked of Irrigation District for Alleged Water Delay

Claiming that the Wichita County Water Improvement District No. 2 failed to turn irrigation waters upon his farm in time to save his cotton crop, T. C. Reese, farmer, Thursday morning filed suit in the district court asking $4,200 damages.

Mr. Reese cultivated 50 acres of land two miles south of Iowa Park, belonging to H. G. Fritz, M. J. McDonald and Kate McDonald, the petition says. Last summer he made application for irrigation water, but failed to receive the aid in time to save the largest part of his crop, he claims. Later, when the water was turned into the irrigation ditch, then choked with weeds and undergrowth, the pressure caused a break which flooded the lands already injured by drouth, the petition further alleges.

Magazine Praises Dairy Work in Wichita Area

The January issue of Texas Opportunities, published by the Texas Power and Light company at Dallas, contains a three-page article written by Stanley Campbell relative to the dairy development in the Wichita Falls community during the last year.

Following the discussion of pronounced growth of milk production despite a serious drouth experienced here last year, the article says: "There is a soundness, a definiteness, about the manner in which Wichita Falls is now going about its daily development which bespeaks for the Wichita Valley a substantial agricultural industry built around the dairy cow."

Numerous other items of business were dispatched by the board, during the meeting. Approval was given to the plan for quarterly membership meetings during the year, replacing the former weekly sessions of a business council. The assemblies will be held in January, April, July and October of each year, probably in the Memorial auditorium.

Junior Chamber

The need of a junior chamber of commerce here, and the feasibility of its organization this year, were discussed, and it was voted to have a committee appointed to investigate the matter. It was said that different young men of the city have asked the chamber of commerce to assist in the formation of such an organization, designed to afford them better opportunity for participation in civic improvement efforts.

J. W. Chatham, manager of the traffic and industrial department, presented a report of the annual stockholders meeting of the Tuf-Nut Garment company, at Little Rock, Ark., which he attended last week, and also reported a conference which he had with officials of the Kraft Cheese company at Chicago. Added efforts designed to facilitate more rapid development of an increased supply of milk here will be made soon as a result of the conference, it was said. Stockholders in the Wichita Construction company, made up of local citizens who erected the Kraft Cheese company building here, received checks representing a 6 per cent dividend Thursday. Mr. Chatham also reported that the Kraft company agreed to assume the $250 monthly rental on the building for the coming year.

Endorsement was given to the Texas Retail Dealers' Protective association, which is a movement to organize retail dealers for the offering of cash rewards for the capture or death of burglars. Neal Powers, local attorney, has been active in the movement, it was stated.

DRINK WATER TO HELP WASH OUT KIDNEY POISON

When your kidneys hurt and your back feels sore don't get scared and proceed to load your stomach with a lot of drugs that excite the kidneys and irritate the entire urinary tract. Keep your kidneys clean like you keep your bowels clean, by flushing them with a mild, harmless salts which helps to remove the body's urinous waste and stimulates them to their normal activity. The function of the kidneys is to filter the blood. In 24 hours they strain from it 500 grains of acid and waste, so we can readily understand the vital importance of keeping the kidneys active.

Drink lots of good water—you can't drink too much; also get from any pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice combined with lithia, and has been used for years to help clean and stimulate clogged kidneys; also to neutralize the acids in the system so they are no longer a source of irritation, thus often relieving bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink, which everyone should take now and then to help keep their kidneys clean and active. Try this; also keep up the water drinking, and no doubt you will wonder what became of your kidney trouble and backache. —Adv.
