didn't have any length in his muscles. He was always in danger of being hurt."

"The best way I can describe his condition to people," Mrs. Cypert said, "is to tell them to try to walk on their toes for an entire day, and see how they manage."

"It wasn't a bad ache or pain," Richard said, "but it was a constant discomfort. I got used to it because I had dealt with it for so long."

"It was a mental as well as a physical thing, knowing you could embarrass yourself at any time," Morton said.

Although afflicted with the palsy, Richard managed to engage in different physical activities, which Morton said was a credit to his determination.

When he was about eight years old, he joined a Little League baseball team. Encouragement from his friends and teammates enabled him to overcome the physical difficulties he encountered, his mother said.

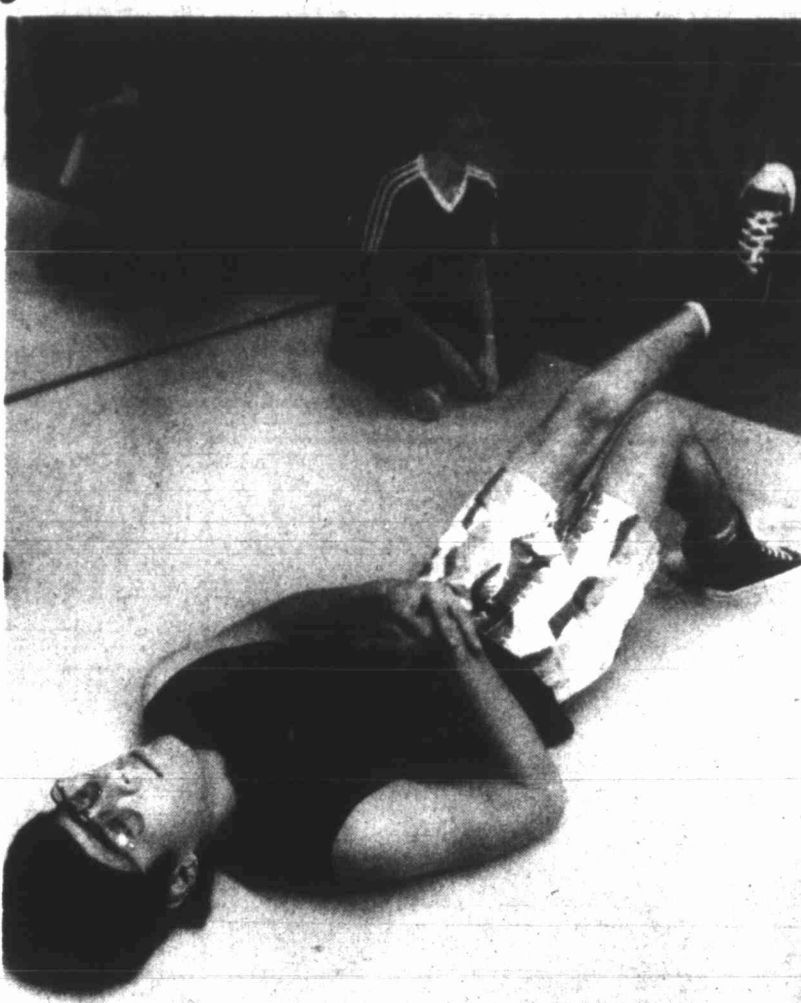

"He couldn't really play, but they let him," Linda said. "They stood back and let him swing, and if he accidentally hit it, someone would run for him."

Perhaps the most dramatic example of Richard's determination, however, came when he and a friend, Mark Hoelscher, bicycled from Garden City to Fort Davis — a distance of about 200 miles — to earn a scouting merit badge.

"Biking was one thing I could do without injuring myself," Richard said. "After I got in shape, it was pretty easy."

For 16 years, Richard worked under Morton's guidance. As he grew older, the therapy sessions decreased in frequency; from twice a week, to once a week, to periodic appointments.

"I felt like we had plateaued," Kaki Morton, top, a physical therapist at Dora Roberts Rehabilitation Center, watches as Richard Cypert does stretching and strengthening exercises recently.

Morton said. "I felt like we had done everything we could do for him. I was beginning to feel like I didn't have anything else to offer."

It was at this time that the family considered the rhizotomy, a procedure where the nerves are isolated by electrical impulses, observed for muscular reaction and severed.

The procedure — although promising — held drawbacks for Richard, Morton said.

At first, the doctors were hesitant to perform the procedure because of Richard's age. The physicians prefer to perform the surgery on young children, because they don't have years of therapy to un-learn, Morton said.

Another, more sinister, drawback to the surgery was the possibility that Richard would never walk again, his mother said. For his part, however, Richard was anxious to have the operation performed.

"I was ready to go and get it done," he said. "There was no hesitation on my part ... I just kept a positive attitude. I knew God would see me through."

The surgery — which lasted six hours — was performed June 23 by neurosurgeon Arthur Marlin at Santa Rosa Hospital in San Antonio. After the operation, Richard remained there for a month, undergoing physical and occupational therapy, Morton said.

His improvement is notable. "There is a dramatic difference in the way he moves compared to the way he moves now," Morton said. "The muscles aren't spastic anymore."

"It's been a hard year, and we still have a long way to go, but now he's able to stand up straight," Mrs. Cypert said. "Healthwise, there won't be problems that might have been there later, like arthritis. Plus, he has a better emotional outlook."

The emphasis now, Morton said, is teaching Richard how to walk in a normal manner, which is difficult considering the habits he learned during 16 years of therapy.

"You have to retrain the brain as well," she said. "Because, if you don't, they will go back to their old ways. You basically start all over, starting with proper sitting techniques. Walking is the advanced part."

Future therapy aside, Mrs. Cypert said she is thankful for the efforts of the rehabilitation center.

Police beat

Three thefts and two burglaries were reported to Big Spring police Monday.

• Ricky Dave Mansfield, 2600 E. 16th St., reported the theft of $600 and a pool stick valued at $50.

• Twenty air conditioning compressor cores, valued at $200, were reported stolen from Doyle's Tractor Service, 1102 E. Second St.

• A video player and a video movie were reported stolen from Big Spring Video, 208 S. Main. The items were valued at $200.

• Patricia Issacs, 1008 W. Sixth St., told police someone entered her home and stole five packs of cigarettes, meat and a silver ring. The items were valued at $86.

• A cassette player was reported stolen during a burglary at Kar Korner, 1505 E. Fourth St. The player was valued at $200.

Three people were also arrested by Big Spring police Monday.

• Jose Gonzales, 45, 518 Westover Road, was arrested on outstanding traffic warrants.

• Dennis Page, 24, Big Spring, was arrested on outstanding traffic warrants.

• Fred Olivas, 55, 603 N. Douglas, was arrested on a charge of criminal trespass.

understand and reason with them. We sit down; I sign the lines to them, and they sign a response, until I — and they — feel it makes sense."

Finally, through body language and gestures, Cook helped the students sense the rhythm of the music. Sometimes it was a hands-on operation — he often touched them to help them to move in a specific way.

Cook feels that part of his work here is that of a role model.

"Deaf students have few role models in the creative arts field. When they see that I can write, act, perform — that I am making a living as a performer — it opens their horizons."

Not only did Cook inspire his students to create a poem, but he coached them in a performance of the original work at an arts festival for deaf students last week.

"Deaf people have held a lot inside because there was no one to express themselves to. I hope I have opened the door for them," Cook says. "Some of the students were distrustful at first."

"Expressing themselves on paper is probably the most difficult task for a deaf student," he explains. "When doing creative writing, I ask students to go through the stories, signing them, but also using vigorous facial expressions."

Cook travels extensively, giving workshops and performing poetry. He has appeared throughout the country with the Sunshine II troupe, which included Big Spring the past two years.

He is one of only a handful of deaf artists performing poetry in what has been called a unique new art form. Deaf poetry is an arrestingly visual medium; Cook uses mime to create moods and images, while interspersing American Sign Language to add description. For the hearing person, it's exiting to watch, the artist says.

"I can become a bottle, a dog, a brick. I do not use props. I use my body as the medium," Cook says.

Cook's schedule of performances and workshops is full. A grant from the New York Council on the Arts is pending to fund some of his work. In addition, he has set up a foundation with the goal of providing exposure for deaf talent.

The movement is spreading, he says "by word of mouth — or rather — sign-to-sign."

HC, Glenwood combine for educator seminar

Tom Turnage, director of education and activities at Glenwood Hospital, in conjunction with Howard College will conduct Phase I-Depression & Suicide, a part of Project LINKS, for all interested individuals on Saturday, April 16 from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. at Howard College in the East Room of the Coliseum.

Project LINKS is separated into four phases: Phase I-Depression & Suicide; Phase II-Conduct Disorders; Phase III-Eating Disorders; and Phase IV-Drug & Alcohol Abuse.

Project LINKS — Learning Interventions and Networking for Kids in School — is an outreach program developed by Glenwood Hospital that can assist school professionals in identifying and helping troubled students, a college release stated.

Teenagers respond to the forces that impact them in a variety of ways. Interpreting when these are healthy adolescent behaviors and when they are desperate calls for help is a real challenge to parents, teachers and friends.

LINKS is designed so that the professional educator — such as teacher, counselor, administrator and school nurse — will acquire the skills and knowledge which are necessary to make appropriate interventions, the release stated.

Project LINKS provides actual case studies, specific verbal interventions, legal requirements and workshops to aid the educator in applying the information.

"Professional educators, youth counselors and parents have an important role in responding to the child's and adolescent's call for help," said Lois Berry, director of community relations at Glenwood Hospital. "Now there is a program that can assist school professionals and others in identifying and helping troubled students."

The cost for each phase is $10 and scholarships are available. For more information about Project LINKS, please call Lois Berry, Glenwood Hospital's director of community relations, at 563-1200 or 1-800-527-4901 or Howard College Continuing Education Department at 267-6311, extension 315.

Rape Crisis Services seeking volunteers

HERALD STAFF REPORT

Big Spring's Rape Crisis/Victim Services center needs volunteer counselors.

Applications are being taken through April 15 for volunteer counselors, center staff member Aurora Rodriguez said early today. "The deadline for applications is April 15, and interviews will be conducted April 18 through 22nd," she said. "Forty hours of training is required and will begin April 25. Sessions will be conducted every Monday through Thursday from 7 to 10 p.m. and it is necessary to attend each evening."

"Rape crisis counselors are trained to assist victims of sexual assault through all aspects of the emotional, medical and legal process," she said, "and women and men aged 18 and up are encouraged to apply."

For more information or to obtain applications telephone the Rape Crisis/Victim Services center at 263-3312 or 267-3626.

Sweden's high-tech toll booths

Sweden's inventors have come up with a new wrinkle to collect road and bridge tolls. A driver mounts an electronic credit card in the car's rear window. A camera at the toll booth reads the ID number. A microwave transmitter sends it into a computer for automatic collection. Pretty nifty. The driver doesn't even have to slow down.

Air Force jet crashes

AUSTIN (AP) — The Air Force will convene a board of officers to investigate the crash of an RF-4C Phantom II jet that rammed into a mini-warehouse after its two-man crew parachuted to safety, officials said.

The plane went down Monday in Southeast Austin, about a mile from Bergstrom Air Force Base. Air Force spokesman Lt. David Fruck said the aircraft was returning from a "low-level training mission," but would release no further details.

No one on the ground was injured, according to Austin Fire Chief Bill Roberts. Eyewitnesses said the plane burst into flames while in the air and the plane touched off a fire in the warehouses.

Crew members Col. Roger Grimsley, 47, of Leesburg, Ohio, and Capt. Terence Ganiko, 30, of Honolulu, were taken to a Bergstrom hospital for treatment, Fruck said. Grimsley was pilot of the plane. Ganiko was its weapons system officer.

Air Force officials did not release any information about the crew members' condition Monday.

Fruck said the plane crashed at 12:17 p.m. A board of officers will be appointed to review the crash, he said, adding that is a routine procedure.

The RF-4C is a reconnaissance version of the F-4C fighter plane. Roberts said it had no weapons on board.

Lynn McDonald, manager of the mini-warehouse complex, said her husband and another person were at the location when the plane crashed but were not hurt.

Mrs. McDonald had gone to lunch and saw the crash from her car, several blocks away.

"I saw an airplane coming down, and I knew it was in this area. All I could think was, 'Thank God I'm not there,'" she said, adding, "I had an angel on my shoulder."

The mini-warehouse complex is just off Riverside Drive in Southeast Austin. There are several residential areas nearby, including homes on the other side of Riverside Drive.

Manuel Coy, an area resident, said he saw the plane burst into flames in the air as he walked to a store.

"It kind of like turned, and the back end exploded and we saw those two dudes jump out. The airplane kept on going. It kept on going lower and lower after they jumped out," he said.

Fire Department Lt. Larry Brown said pieces of the plane were scattered in the area.

"As far as I can see, the aircraft is in several small pieces, a lot of small pieces," he said.

AUSTIN — Capt. Terence Ganiko is tended by emergency personnel in an Austin field near where his Air Force RF-4C Phantom jet crashed Monday. Ganiko, of Honolulu, and pilot Roger Grimsley ejected before the plane crashed into a row of mini-warehouses near Bergstrom Air Force Base.

Dallas police chief may resign today, reports paper

DALLAS (AP) — Police Chief Billy Prince, criticized by top city officials for speaking out against Dallas City Council members and against police reforms, plans to resign today, some high-ranking city officials say.

The Dallas Times Herald reported today that Prince was expected to announce his resignation today. The Dallas Morning News reported that top city officials would not comment on speculation that Prince would resign.

Prince, 45, who has been chief for six years, will leave the $87,000 per-year job to concentrate on business interests, the Times Herald reported. Prince, a 24-year Dallas police veteran, has discussed his resignation with City Manager Richard Knight and other associates several times in the last few weeks, officials said.

Prince has tired of the battling between the community and his beleaguered department, sources said.

The resignation would come at a time of rising tension between police and the minority community.

Prince has been caught between the demands of a majority of the City Council, including Mayor Annette Strauss, who want more police accountability, and the Dallas Police Association, which opposes greater control.

Some minority community leaders, including City Councilwoman Diane Ragsdale and County Commissioner John Wiley Price, have called for Prince's dismissal.

Strauss and Knight declined to comment on the reports of Prince's resignation. Prince could not be reached for comment.

City Councilman Jerry Rucker said he was angered by the reports and called Prince a "scapegoat for the mayor and the city manager."

"What a horrible thing for Dallas," Rucker said. "I think it's a tragedy for a man to be hounded out of his office by demagogues."

Rucker, who has considered running for mayor, predicted that Prince's resignation would be an issue in the 1989 municipal elections.

"I think the people will finally say this is the last straw," Rucker said.

Prince plans to tell his top police administrators of his decision to resign during a special meeting of his bureau commanders early today, police sources said. They also said the chief plans to meet with reporters after that meeting.

Prince has been at odds with the City Council since late last year, when Knight rebuked Prince for lobbying against police reforms recommended by Strauss' Advisory Committee on Crime.

The aftermath of the Jan. 23 slaying of officer John Chase by a vagrant in downtown parking lot placed Prince on a collision course with the city's elected leadership.

Prince said some members of the City Council shared blame for Chase's death because they had created an atmosphere of hostility toward police.

Strauss asked Prince to retract his statements, which she said heightened racial tensions, but he refused to back down.

The shooting and Prince's comments triggered a backlash of support for police and against black elected officials leaders.

In an apparent effort to heal the wounds that divided the city, Strauss, Knight and Prince joined hands in a symbolic display of unity and expressed support for Dallas police.

Texans return to polls for runoff elections

AUSTIN (AP) — It was back to the polls for Texas voters today for runoff elections to finish selecting Republican and Democratic nominees for offices ranging from U.S. Senate to county sheriff.

Topping the list was a Republican Party runoff for the right to challenge incumbent Democratic Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, who won renomination against token opposition in his party's primary last month.

Either Amarillo Congressman Beau Boulter or Houston businessman Wes Gilbreath will get the GOP's nod. That race was expected to bolster turnout, party officials said.

"Our turnout in the primary (March 8) was 1 million, and we're expecting 200,000 in the runoff," Republican Party spokesman Mark Sanders said Monday.

Gilbreath, a millionaire who said he expected to spend $750,000 of his own money to get the nomination, could benefit from a heated Republican county commissioner's runoff in the district in which Gilbreath lives.

Sanders said that of the 200,000 expected voters, some 40,000 could come from that commissioner's race.

Boulter on Monday picked up the endorsement of former GOP presidential candidate Jack Kemp, who said Boulter "would be the best candidate for the Republican Party."

Besides the Senate race, the GOP was holding runoffs for two other statewide offices.

Former state Rep. Ed Emmett and P.S. "Sam" Ervin of Dallas were seeking the nomination to challenge incumbent Democratic Railroad Commissioner Jim Nugent.

Salinas has work cut out

Much more is at stake in the July 6 Mexican elections than the choice of a new president; also hanging in the balance are the very legitimacy of Mexico's post-revolutionary system and continued political stability amid the country's debilitating economic crisis.

For the first time since its founding in 1929, the ruling Institutional Revolutionary Party, or PRI for its Spanish acronym, is being challenged by broad sectors of Mexican society. The economic collapse during the past five years has shaken the PRI's longstanding monopoly on power, giving rise to serious discussion of other political alternatives — both on the left and the right.

This is not to suggest that Carlos Salinas de Gortari, the PRI presidential candidate, is in danger of losing the election. On the contrary, Mr. Salinas's victory is virtually preordained by the PRI's monolithic political organization.

But Mr. Salinas, the handpicked successor of President Miguel de la Madrid, has been forced to contend with two major rivals and pervasive charges of anticipated electoral fraud perpetrated by the PRI.

Although the outcome of the presidential contest is not in doubt, the credibility of the election results remains an open question that could cloud Mr. Salinas's ability to govern after taking office on Dec. 1.

A lopsided triumph by Mr. Salinas would expose the PRI to damaging accusations of voter fraud, both at home and abroad, as occurred after the 1986 state elections in Chihuahua. On the other hand, a small victory margin might accelerate popular demands for greater democracy and strengthen the hand of opposition parties, further eroding the ruling party's grip on power.

The PRI's two principal challenges come from the conservative National Action Party (PAN), whose support is centered in the northern border states, and the populist National Democratic Front, a liberal coalition led by Cuauhtemoc Cardenas, the son of Mexico's most revered modern leader, Lazaro Cardenas.

Before breaking ranks with the PRI leadership in advance of the 1988 election, the younger Mr. Cardenas organized a dissident movement known as the Democratic Current. In addition to demanding political liberalization, Mr. Cardenas seeks to perpetuate the leftist economic traditions of his father, who as president from 1934 to 1940 nationalized foreign oil companies and implemented sweeping land reform — two measures that enshrined him in Mexican history.

Because of his populist appeal, Mr. Cardenas is regarded by many as a potentially greater threat to the PRI's power base than the conservative PAN. Indeed, some analysts view the Cardenistas as the ultimate beneficiaries of steps pledged by Mr. Salinas to open the political process.

As the governing party for nearly six decades, the PRI embodies the very foundations of Mexican society. Mr. Salinas's daunting task when he takes office will be to overhaul an increasingly inadequate political system without undercutting the pillars that traditionally have been provided solely by the PRI.

Hillcrest school thankful for help

To the editor:

I want to extend my deepest appreciation to some very special people who played a part in our recent evacuation due to the fire on Scenic Mountain last Thursday. It was because of these people that we could evacuate our daycare center without problems and panic.

First, a special thanks to the staff on duty Diana Phifer, Janet Cook, Brenda Hyatt and Susan Skelton who had to awaken small children up from a nap and get them out of the building calmly and quickly. They did this without incident and their calmness helped reassure the children. Also, thanks to Jessica Samuels, Shawn Finch and Patsy Simer for assisting in the rooms.

Second, thanks to Baptist Temple Church and their pastor for extending the use of their facility as a refuge.

Thanks to the radio stations for announcing our evacuation and where we were taking the children to. This helped us to inform concerned parents more rapidly.

Thanks to our parents who were so understanding and cooperative in picking their children up as soon as they could.

Also, thanks to the firefighters, police officers and city officials for a job well done.

Most of all, thanks to God for the grace he showed us in His watchcare over us and our church buildings.

Sincerely,
PAULA BAKER, Director

Taming Noriega

Unthinkable option stirs Latin havoc

By WILLIAM F. BUCKLEY JR.

As usual, somebody in Washington ought to be shot. In this case, the person who told the press that the U.S. government was plotting to kidnap Gen. Manuel Noriega from Panama and to try him in the United States.

The second edition of this story melodramatized it to the effect that to kidnap Noriega had been the recommendation of the secretary of state, and was opposed by the defense people. Meanwhile, the story was rocketing around the world and, in particular in Latin America, inflaming the most combustible fuel in the Southern Hemisphere, namely anti-Americanism.

Just as most people do not understand the principle of double accounting (I unhappily include myself), most do not understand the theory of "options" as used by the National Security Council and, to a certain extent, the Department of Defense and the CIA.

That theory is important for two reasons. The first is that the comprehensive nature of the options given would attenuate the concern internationally that the United States automatically thinks in terms of kidnapping obnoxious foreign leaders. The second is the sleight-of-hand games sometimes performed by those who accumulate those options.

Let us take the case of the American hostages seized in 1979 by the Iranians. In such a situation, the president asks his national security advisers to list optional ways of handling the emergency.

It is not up to the NSC to limit those options by the application of their own moral or strategic criteria. Thus, a list of hypothetical options on how to deal with the Ayatollah Khomeini might have included — let's say at the severe end of the roster of possibilities — dropping a hydrogen bomb on Tehran and — at the other end — offering him a $10 billion bribe in return for releasing the prisoners.

The idea is for the president to run his eyes down the options, thus giving him a sense of balance, some idea of where the fulcrum lies. If you see a seesaw, one end of it tilted down, and at the end of the page see the other end tilted up, you get an idea of where the fulcrum is. And it is generally the fulcrum to which world leaders are attracted.

Henry Kissinger has complained in one of his volumes that a trick of those who wish to lead presidents by the nose in a particular direction is to bury a sound alternative within intolerable alternatives, so that — reading down the list — the president will be inclined to slide over a plausible alternative.

Suppose that the question is: How to force Saudi Arabia to extradite Idi Amin for criminal activities? An Arabist in the NSC who wished to soften possible action against King Fahd might list Option 13 as "Kidnap the king," Option 14 as "Deny the king further military hardware," and Option 15 as "Murder the King."

Inertia would tend to cause the presidential eye to slide past 13 and 15 so quickly as to give insufficient attention to No. 14 — the objective of the Arab supporter.

It isn't known whether kidnapping Noriega ever got a moment's hard attention at the White House. If it had been a serious proposal, there is no way in which it could have been more rapidly buried than by giving it the kind of publicity it got.

Instantly it became the subject of shocked reaction. And as these words are written, one can absolutely guarantee that presidential candidates will be shouting themselves hoarse over the "ill-conceived," "Grade B movie-like" approach to a problem of foreign policy.

And Latin America, as mentioned, will harden its opinion against the Colossus of the North that dares contemplate reaching down to foreign capitals to arrest and deport a foreign leader, as if he were a drunken driver in Westchester County.

But the episode throws light on the apparent futility of our policy in Panama. True, deposed President Eric Arturo Delvalle predicts that existing pressures will prove, finally, insurmountable to Noriega. But that is so only for so long as the profiteers from Panamanian distress fail to act.

What Noriega needs is economic credits. Everyone from the drug runners of Colombia and Peru to the international troublemakers in Moscow and Havana have a stake, not so much in helping Noriega as in embarrassing the United States.

Although there is the nearest thing we have got to an international consensus against Noriega since Hitler, there is probably lurking in the great mad world some Swedish-type who will come forward with $100 million, giving Noriega another month of life while embarrassing U.S. policy.

One likes to think that on that Option List of Possible Things to do would appear: "Action to be taken against those countries that attempt to dilute the effect of our boycott."

Justice for all in justice department

By ART BUCHWALD

"May I speak to the attorney general of the United States?"

"I'm sorry, he is in conference with several lawyers now."

"Justice Department lawyers?"

"No, his own lawyers. They're meeting in regards to the Wedtech case. They want to get that straightened out so the attorney general can devote all his time to defending himself in the Iraqi oil pipeline scandal."

"He's much more active than most attorney generals," I said.

"That's not the hall of it. The A.G. may have to face a special prosecutor for his role in the Iran-Contra affair."

"I guess an attorney general's work is never done."

"You'd be busy, too, if every special prosecutor in the country was cheek to jowl with you."

"Look, I don't want much of his time. I just wish to ask him how he is doing in his fight against organized crime."

"The attorney general has not been able to get around to fighting organized crime because he is too involved in giving depositions regarding his blind trusts."

"That shouldn't take him all day."

"You'd be surprised how blind the A.G. has been concerning his blind trusts."

"Well, you tell him for me it doesn't look nice for the highest law enforcement officer in the land to be seen sneaking around so many grand jury rooms."

"That's an attorney general's job."

"But he keeps going in for himself and not on behalf of the government."

"The A.G. is a very fine lawyer, and he's a whiz at testifying under oath. He'd be willing to handle government business if they would just leave him alone on his personal affairs."

"They can't as long as there is a smoking gun."

"Are you finished?"

"No, I'm not. I would also like to speak to the A.G. about the recent resignations in the Justice Department."

"The attorney general has instructed me to tell anyone who calls that nothing should be read into the fact that a few disloyal turncoats jumped ship before the skipper lowered the flag."

"The rumor on the street is they resigned because the A.G. kept tip-toeing in the sleaze."

"That's ridiculous. The A.G. has never been convicted of any crime. He will go down in history as having had more friends invest for him than any other Reagan Cabinet officer. That's why the President considers him a great attorney general."

"But what about the government? What did he do for the government?"

"How could he do anything for the government when he was being badgered all the time by political enemies looking into his finances?"

"They were out to get him because he had bad judgment, weren't they?"

"You said it, I didn't."

"If I could only talk to the A.G. for one moment I would wish him a nice day."

"After he finishes meeting with his lawyers he is going to have to huddle with his accountants, so everyone can get the papers together for the Senate Judiciary Committee."

"Do you think with all the pressure the A.G. might resign?"

"What for? He loves the job. When he came over from the White House he took an oath of office that he would clear himself and his friends of any wrongdoing, even if it tied him up for the entire four years."

Woman disrupts traffic

PEORIA, Ill. (AP) — A woman in a see-through, fish-net body suit disrupted traffic, caused several near-wrecks and ended up being arrested, authorities said.

Police said Dolly May Jane McCloud, 21, of East Peoria, was arrested Saturday on charges of public indecency and disorderly conduct, as well as obstructing police, authorities said.

According to police, an unidentified driver reported several motorists nearly collided when they suddenly slowed to look at Ms. McCloud.

Police Sgt. Phillip Benne said Ms. McCloud was wearing a see-through, fish-net body suit that exposed her chest. She was covered by other clothes from the waist down, Benne said.

Benne said he saw three motorists slam on their brakes, honk their horns and wave at Ms. McCloud, who was taken to the Peoria County Jail and released after posting $100 cash bond. She is scheduled to appear in court on May 2.

Board upholds award

NEW YORK (AP) — A reporter for The Philadelphia Inquirer whose Pulitzer Prize was challenged by a magazine that ran a similar story says he had no doubt his award would be upheld.

The Pulitzer board's executive committee said Monday it saw no reason to question the award to Tim Weiner, who won the national reporting prize for a 1987 series on the Defense Department's "black budget" for secret projects.

The National Journal last week asked the board to reconsider the Inquirer's prize.

The Washington-based weekly magazine said Weiner's series was "a blatant and egregious case of building a news story according to someone else's blueprint," namely, the magazine's March 1, 1986, cover story about the black budget. It contended that Weiner's story broke no new ground.

Ban clears assembly

ANNAPOLIS, Md. (AP) — The first state law in the nation to ban the sale of cheap handguns known as Saturday Night Specials cleared the General Assembly and was sent to the governor, who has promised to sign it.

Despite a fierce lobbying effort by the National Rifle Association, the bill was passed Monday night with support from top state officials and Sarah Brady, wife of James Brady, President Reagan's press secretary.

Mrs. Brady told legislators at an earlier hearing that a $29 handgun that would be banned under the Maryland law was used by John Hinckley in his 1981 assassination attempt that wounded the president and left husband partially disabled.

Democratic House Speaker R. Clayton Mitchell said the 95-41 vote in the House of Delegates a few hours before the 1988 legislative session ended "seems to be a first, a giant step forward."

Dukakis

Hopes cousin's win is 'omen'

NEW YORK (AP) — Democrat Michael Dukakis celebrated his cousin's Academy Award and, with his eye on New York's important presidential primary, said "I hope it's an omen for next week."

Dukakis talked to cousin Olympia Dukakis by telephone Monday night shortly after she won an Oscar for her supporting role in the movie "Moonstruck."

The Massachusetts governor made his call from a Greenwich Village restaurant that figured in the movie and was decorated with photos and posters from it. Dining on pasta and lamb chops, Dukakis watched a videotaped replay of his cousin's award and clapped when she waved her statuette and said, "OK, Michael, let's go!"

He had just seen the movie the night before.

"You're fantastic, you're unbelievable," he gushed on the telephone. "You're radiant... I'm so happy for you."

"What are we doing here, you and I, just a couple of street kids?" he asked.

Dukakis, the front-runner for the Democratic nomination, had been saying all afternoon as he campaigned around New York City that an Oscar victory could be a harbinger for his presidential candidacy in next Tuesday's primary.

"I hope it's an omen for next week," he said. "I hope it's a good sign for the 'Dukakis' — all of them."

Earlier in the day, Dukakis bid for Jewish support and sided with Israel in blaming Arab leaders for violence in the West Bank. He found no fault with Israel's policies or use of force in dealing with Palestinian uprisings, but he also absolved the young Arab protesters, saying they have been misled by their leaders.

"It is critically important that the world understand who is responsible for the turmoil and the violence," he told the Conference of Presidents of Major American Jewish Organizations.

"It is not the generation of young Palestinians who have grown up in uncertainty," he said. "It is not a government in Jerusalem that struggles to maintain order... It is, regrettably, Arab leaders themselves, who have time and again rejected the chance to sit down with Israel and negotiate a permanent peace in the Middle East."

NEW YORK — Presidential hopeful, Michael Dukakis raises his glass in a New York restaurant Monday as he speaks by phone to his cousin, actress Olympia Dukakis, shortly after she won an Oscar for her supporting role in the movie "Moonstruck." Dukakis was celebrating his cousin's victory at the Greenwich Village restaurant that was featured in the movie.

Dukakis' appearance before the group of leaders from 44 major national Jewish organizations was an effort to attract support from Jews, who make up some one-quarter of the Democratic primary electorate in New York, where the state's huge delegate prize is at stake next Tuesday.

Rival Albert Gore Jr. appeared before the group earlier, drawing a distinction with Dukakis in opposing a letter signed by 30 senators urging Secretary of State George Shultz to press Israel to come to a peaceful resolution of the West Bank and Gaza violence. Leaders of the group said Democrat Jesse Jackson, who has drawn opposition from some Jews for his 1984 reference to New York as "Hymietown," declined an invitation.

Dukakis faced questions that appeared to challenge him to go further in drawing distinctions between himself and Jackson.

Panama to be flexible

PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP) — A Cabinet minister said Panama will be flexible with American companies caught between local law and U.S. economic sanctions aimed at ousting the nation's strongman, Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega.

In another development, hundreds of teachers peacefully demonstrated on Monday, chanting "We don't want communism!" and "Pineapple-face, you must go!" a reference to Noriega's jowly, pockmarked face.

The teachers demonstrated more than two hours at the Ministry of Education Monday, demanding to be paid. Opposition leaders plan daily demonstrations throughout the week, even though recent protests in the 10-month campaign by the opposition to oust Noriega have been poorly attended or blocked by police.

The problem faced by U.S. companies was discussed Monday by Commerce and Industries Minister Mario Rognoni at a meeting with 30 representatives of American companies.

Political groups merge

HARARE, Zimbabwe (AP) — The merger of two black political groups that led the war to end white-minority rule in Zimbabwe, then Rhodesia, virtually abolishes one of Africa's few multiparty states.

"We have one Zimbabwe, one nation and one national army. We will be stronger if we have one party," President Robert Mugabe said at a weekend rally.

Mugabe, an avowed Marxist, led his party to victory in elections held after a British-sponsored peace conference ended years of guerrilla warfare and Zimbabwe became independent in April 1980.

His chief rival in the balloting was Joseph Nkomo, one of the country's wealthiest men. They had organized guerrilla armies in the 1960s to gain black-majority rule and toward the end of the campaign joined forces. But the alliance collapsed in 1980, after Mugabe's resounding victory and scattered clashes followed between the supporters of both sides.

Mugabe, head of the Zimbabwe African National Union, advocated one-party rule and was opposed by Nkomo and his Zimbabwe African Peoples Union.

Food poisoning kills 14

BEIJING (AP) — Twenty-seven people who attended a dinner following a funeral in northeastern China came down with food poisoning and 14 of them died, the official China Daily reported today.

The 13 others became seriously ill after the dinner last week in Yixian County, according to the report.

The dinner was held by Yu Huiqing, head of the gardening department of Jinzhou City in Yixian County following the death of his mother, the newspaper said. The report did not say if Yu was among those who died.

Discovery may change universe theory

NEW YORK (AP) — Astronomers may have to change their ideas about the early universe because of the discovery of the oldest and most distant galaxy ever observed, researchers said.

The galaxy, about 10 times the size of the Milky Way, was formed before the universe was a mere 2 billion years old, said its discoverer, Simon Lilly of the University of Hawaii at Manoa.

Researchers have previously found indirect evidence of galaxies forming at extreme distances, but this is the first clear observation of a mature galaxy at those distances, Lilly said Monday in a telephone interview.

"This pushes back the time at which galaxies formed in the early universe," he said.

The discovery could force a revision in astronomers' conception of the universe, Lilly said. "If we find more objects like this, the cold-dark-matter scenario will be in trouble," he said.

That scenario says that most of the universe exists in the form of cold, dark material that we cannot observe. It also predicts that massive galaxies like the one discovered should not exist so early in the history of the universe, Lilly said.

In January, Richard Elston and George and Marcia Rieke of the University of Arizona reported the possible existence of even older, more distant galaxies, but those results are not yet confirmed, George Rieke said Monday.

"I would say he has claim to the most distant galaxy," Rieke said. "We have claim to having found candidates that may be even more distant, but that's different from having it nailed down."

Nevertheless, Rieke said, the two lines of research mesh nicely, because "the existence of his galaxy implies that something like the galaxies that we have candidates for must exist."

Harding Smith, a physicist at the University of California, San Diego, who has studied distant galaxies, said Lilly "has made a substantial jump, and I do think it's an important result."

It will help astronomers understand the processes that form galaxies, Smith said. "We don't understand when they form and how they form, and both of these are very interesting questions because they may tell us more about what happened even earlier in the universe," Smith said.

A report of Lilly's work has been accepted for publication in the Astrophysical Journal, he said.

Academy Awards

'The Last Emperor' takes nine Oscars

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "The Last Emperor," the lavish epic of China directed by an Italian, conquered Hollywood by capturing nine Oscars, the most for any film in 26 years. Cher won best actress for portrayal of a widow who discovers love in "Moonstruck."

Michael Douglas, the greedy, unethical inside trader of "Wall Street," was named best actor at Monday night's 60th-annual Academy Awards ceremony.

Best supporting performers were Olympia Dukakis, as Cher's outspoken Italian mother coping with a wayward husband in "Moonstruck," and Sean Connery, the hard-fisted, incorruptible Chicago beat cop in "The Untouchables."

Douglas paid tribute to his father, actor Kirk Douglas, "for helping a son move out of the shadow," and Cher credited her mother for urging her as a little girl "to be something."

"I don't think this means that I am somebody," Cher told the audience while clutching her statue. "But I guess I'm on my way. Thank you."

Backstage, the actress, in a stunning, form-revealing costume of strategically placed spangles, told reporters: "If I can win this statue I think anybody can do anything!"

In addition to best picture, "The Last Emperor" won in every category in which it was nominated, including screenplay adaptation, costumes, original score, art direction, cinematography, sound, editing and the directing award to acclaimed filmmaker Bernardo Bertolucci.

"As an Italian, as a European, the Academy Awards has always seemed to me like a distant ceremony," said Bertolucci, "something fascinating, remote. Something I really didn't belong to. Then, one day, 'The Last Emperor' got nine nominations and everything changed immediately." The director, who surprised the industry by winning permission from the Chinese government to film a story with political overtones within Beijing's fabled Forbidden City, offered "a Chinese kowtow to the Academy," saying, "This is one of the strongest emotions of my life and I can't hide it."

The movie's nine Oscars marked the biggest haul since "West Side Story" took 10 in 1962. The all-time champ, Ben Hur, won 11 in 1960. "Moonstruck" took three Oscars, but the critically acclaimed "Hope and Glory" and crowd-pleasers "Good Morning, Vietnam" and "Broadcast News" struck out despite having five, one and seven nominations.

The Oscar audience of 6,300 cheered loudly for the supporting actor and actress awards. "OK, Michael, let's go!" exclaimed Miss Dukakis as she held her Oscar aloft. She was referring to her cousin Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis, who is seeking the Democratic presidential nomination. She said she would hit the campaign trail if her cousin is nominated, and will seek to be a Democratic delegate from her home state New Jersey.

Backstage, she delivered an acceptance speech in Greek for reporters from the land of her heritage.

Connery, the original James Bond, drew two standing ovations during the evening and addressed his thanks to "Ladies and gentlemen, friends, and a few enemies."

Connery said he assumed his award was for "an accumulation of my different performances."

He also made a plea for an end to the 5½-week-old Writers Guild of America strike that caused some clumsiness in the script for the ceremony, which is normally written by some of Hollywood's best wordsmiths.

Editorial staff finds woman's rating hilarious

DEAR ABBY: The results of your recently published fidelity survey have left many of us with the proverbial egg on our face. However, your response from "Unfulfilled Wife," who reported liaisons with a real estate agent, an accountant, a jeweler, a commercial airline pilot, a construction worker and a magazine editor — and had the gall to declare "the editor was the worst" — put our entire editorial office in an uproar.

Collectively, the Cahner editorial force represents the largest editorial complement in the specialized business press, and we all consider ourselves more than adequate in the bedroom. In fact, we feel we are "outdone" only by a few publishers (and only because they have more time on their hands.) Could it be that "Unfulfilled Wife" hitched up with an editor who was on deadline?

PHIL SCHREINER, EDITORIAL DIRECTOR, DES PLAINES, ILL.

DEAR PHIL: Possibly.

DEAR ABBY: Sometime ago

you printed an address in your column to send for banners that motorists could put on their cars to call police if they needed help on the road. I am so glad I sent for one because it proved to be a lifesaver.

My car broke down on an interstate road at night. It was raining hard and the road was between two hills. We were locked in our car for several hours when a state trooper spotted the "Please Call Police" banner I had placed on the inside of the rear window. He stopped, summoned a tow truck and stayed with us until help arrived. Needless to say, we were very grateful.

Abby, please urge your readers to send for this banner. Every motorist should have one in the glove compartment. At $4 it was the best bargain I ever got.

HELEN GALLETTA, ALBUQUERQUE, N.M.

DEAR HELEN: Write to: WCIL-BANNERS, P.O. Box 66942, Los Angeles, Calif. 90066. The cost is $4 per banner, postage and handling included. Make your tax-deductible check or money order payable to WCIL-BANNERS. The Westside Center for Independent Living exists to help disabled people live independently.

Auxiliary presents program

The Disabled American Veterans Auxiliary will present its annual Americanism program Thursday at 7:30 p.m. in the youth hall at First United Methodist Church, 400 Scurry St.

By special request, Marvin Watson will repeat the patriotic story titled, "Old Glory Speaks." The music is expected to "stir your patriotic emotions and bless your heart," said Viola Motly, chairperson.

A three-year-old child is scheduled to sing the chorus of "God Bless America," and the Senior Ladies of the Bell Choir will offer patriotic songs.

Refreshments will be served, including a cake decorated to resemble the United States flag.

"This program is always a tribute to our brave veterans — and to our wonderful country," said Motly.

The public is invited to attend.

QB finds new life with new coach

AUSTIN (AP) — Shannon Kelley was written off as a quarterback prospect at Texas two years ago, but under a new coach, he has emerged in spring football training as the probable starter for 1988.

"Shannon has the attitude that the job is his until somebody beats him out, and that's what you want out of your quarterback," Coach David McWilliams said.

Last year was McWilliams' first as a replacement for fired coach Fred Akers, who had moved Kelley to wide receiver.

"I didn't really think I would play quarterback again," said Kelley, who will be a redshirt senior. "I thought Coach Akers had written me off. As a matter of fact, he had written me off."

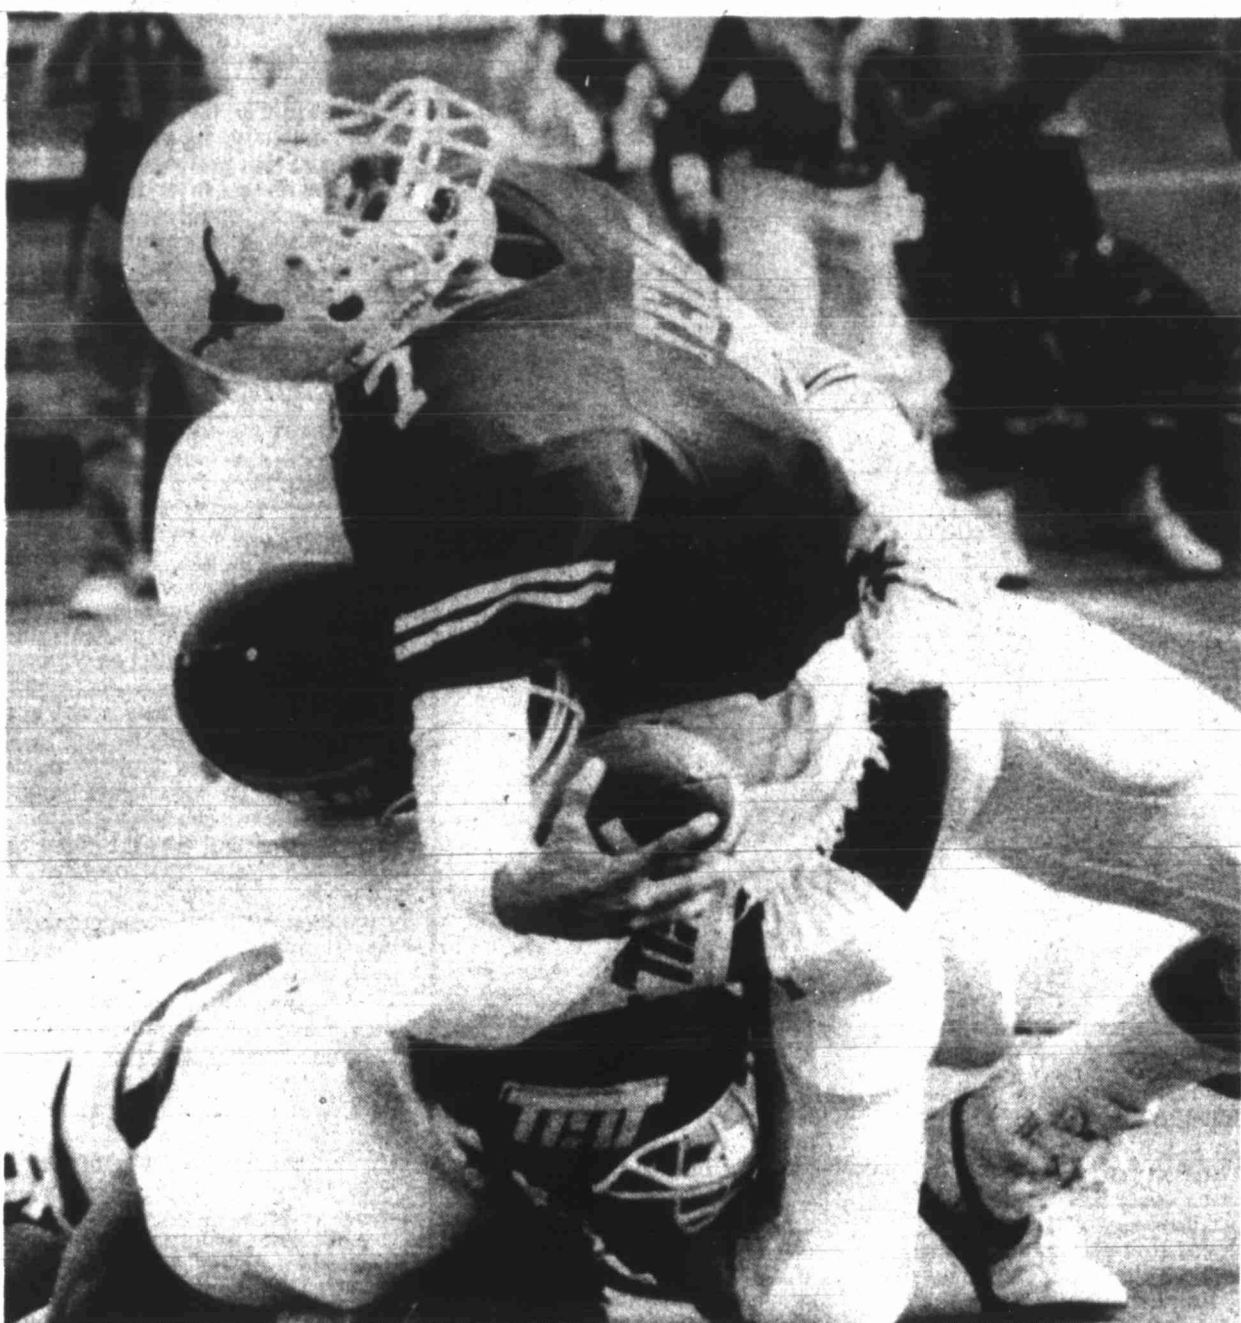

"I thought I would be playing wide receiver for the rest of my time here. Fortunately, Coach Mac became the coach and moved me back immediately."

With record-breaking Bret Stafford completing his eligibility last season, Kelley moved up to No. 1 this spring as Donovan Forbes was in academic exile and Rob McManus needed time to recover from dog bite wounds.

The absence of Forbes and McManus has resulted in more practice time for freshman redshirt Mark Murdock.

"I feel very confident with my position," Kelley said. "The coaches have given me the confidence, and because I'm a senior and have played before, I feel like it's my duty to step up and take charge. I feel that I can do the job, and I don't think Coach Mac would want me to feel any different."

"We have a different problem at quarterback than we did a year ago," McWilliams said. "We knew

AUSTIN — Texas quarterback Shannon Kelly is brought to a halt by two members of the TCU defense during football action last year at Memorial Stadium. Kelly will start for the Longhorns this year, if he holds the number one spot from spring practice.

Stafford could handle the pressure. We were trying to install a new offense, but we had a pretty good idea how he would react in game conditions. This year, Shannon needs to be facing game situations, and the only way to get that really is to scrimmage."

Kelley, 6-2 and 185 pounds, is not a complete stranger to game situations. After Stafford was injured in the Houston game last season, Kelley completed 23-of-36 passes for 233 yards in a 60-40 loss. But he also threw three interceptions that were all returned for touchdowns.

"He didn't read some things very well there, but he's settled down some," McWilliams said.

The next week, with Stafford still nursing a sore elbow, Kelley completed 6-of-7 passes and led Texas to a 24-21 victory over Texas Christian. Stafford returned the next Saturday to finish up the final three games.

In seven games, Kelley completed 47-of-74 passes — 63.5 percent — for 541 yards and one touchdown. He had six passes intercepted.

"Every time I go out I want to do my best, whether I'm competing against someone or not. I wouldn't say there is any pressure on me. Consistency is what I'm looking for in myself," said the former Houston Memorial star.

Texas, 7-5 last year, returns among others tailback Eric Metcalf — "the greatest athlete that I have ever been around," Kelley says — with hopes of improving on that record.

"For us to have a good year, I know my position will be a key," Kelley said. "I'm going to have to play well, and I know that."

Queens sign Mississippi post player

Howard College Hawk-Queens basketball coach Don Stevens went out of the state to get his fourth new recruit for the upcoming basketball season.

After signing three Texans from Tahoka High School, Stevens has inked Allana L. Cummings from Troy, Mich. In Cummings Stevens gets a veteran player since the 6-2 post player played in 1985 for the University of Mississippi.

Since then Cummings hasn't played any basketball, but has attended Northwest Mississippi Junior College and the University of Michigan in Dearborn.

In high school Cummings was rated as one of the 15 players in the nation, recording a 19.1 scoring and 14.7 rebounding average her senior year.

She was named Honorable Mention High School All-America by USA Today and Converse. She also made the Street and Smith All-America team. In addition she was named Academic All-State two years, as well as being All-State in basketball and track.

"Allana is an excellent recruit for us," said coach Stevens. "She will nail down one post position for us. She is extremely aggressive on both offense and defense, and possesses the strength and size to dominate the lane area."

"Cummings, paired with Shanna Lawson, the six-footer from Tahoka who we signed earlier, will give us two dominating and impressive post players."

"I predict that Allana will be a impact player in the league right out of the gate."

Howard pokes finish third

HOBBS, N.M. — The Howard College men's rodeo team recorded its second straight third place finish by finishing third in the New Mexico Junior College National Intercollegiate Rodeo Association rodeo this past weekend.

Last week the Howard men finished third at their own rodeo. Howard is now in fifth place in the region standings with 905 points.

MEN'S REGION STANDINGS
1. Odessa College	1605
2. Western Texas	1302.5
3. Sul Ross University	1222.5
4. Tarleton State University	1130
5. Howard College	905

Western Texas, second in the region, won the men's division of the rodeo with 360 points. Tarleton State University was second with 250 and Howard followed with 230 points.

Sophomore bareback rider Casey Strange led Howard with a first place finish. The Buma native finished third in the long go and split first in the short go.

Vance Eggemeyer, a freshman from Victoria, finished third in the saddle bronc competition. Eggemeyer finished second on the long go and fifth in the short go.

Kim Rankin was the lone HC cowgirl to place. She was second in the long go in breakaway roping.

Howard will be in the Western Texas Rodeo in Snyder this weekend.

Steelers deal signal-caller to Chargers

SAN DIEGO (AP) — The San Diego Chargers have acquired quarterback Mark Malone from the Pittsburgh Steelers in exchange for an eighth-round pick in this month's draft, team officials said.

The deal reportedly includes a reworked one-year contract for Malone. The details of the contract weren't immediately available.

The deal will be officially announced today, according to The San Diego Union.

Chargers owner Alex Spanos said Malone is first in line to replace retired veteran Dan Fouts, but team officials will continue to shop for a "starting quarterback."

The Chargers had been seeking to trade for an experienced quarterback because backup Mark Herrmann has been effective only in relief and third-stringer Mark Vlasic, a rookie last year, lacks seasoning.

"We still have that No. 1 (first-round) pick, but we're also still looking for a quarterback," Spanos said. "Malone's not our answer but he's a big, strong, and tough athlete who can help us."

The Chargers traded the 211th pick in the April 24-25 NFL draft, which leaves them with 11 selections. The club also will have to surrender at most a sixth-round pick in 1989 if Malone meets stipulated playing requirements, the paper said.

Malone, who led the Steelers to the AFC Championship game in 1984, was the National Football League's lowest-rated passer (46.7) among starters last season.

He completed 156 of 336 passes for 1,896 yards and six touchdowns with 19 interceptions.

His inconsistent play garnered boos in Pittsburgh, but the Chargers hope Southern California will rejuvenate the 6-foot-4, 222-pound athlete.

Malone, 29, was an athlete at El Cajon Valley High School in San Diego County.

"Just think, for an eighth-round draft choice we're getting a great athlete," Spanos said. "With a change of scenery who knows how much he can help us?"

Malone dismissed his poor performance last year, saying "I'm not going to sit here and try to defend myself. The team didn't have a great year."

He said he planned to be in San Diego early in May for training. "I'm excited, I really am."

"The exciting thing about San Diego is the changes being made," Malone added. "I don't want to take anything away from Dan Fouts, who was the most prolific passer in the game, but I don't think you'll really be seeing that in this type of offense."

Last season the Chargers started stressing control on the ground and big plays via long passes. Their new offense also relied on an aggressive defense and special teams' play to keep opponents off the scoreboard.

Fouts announced his retirement last month after 15 years with the Chargers, citing persistent injuries. The six-time Pro Bowler earned seven NFL passing marks and 42 club records.

Arizona forward will stay in school

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — The speculation is over, and Sean Elliott says "my time will come next year."

The All-American forward said on Monday he's staying at Arizona for his senior year and will pass up making himself a candidate for the NBA draft.

But the 20-year-old Tucson native said his decision wasn't easy.

"I was still teetering a little bit" last week, Elliott said. "Maybe I was looking to move up and to move on. I thought it could be beneficial in some ways."

"There are times where I was certain I wasn't going to stay," and that at one point "I came this close," he said holding two fingers about one-quarter of an inch apart. Elliott said he held the news conference "to end some speculation."

Elliott's future has been on the minds of a number of people in Tucson.

"People ask me on the street all the time if I'm going or staying," he said. "I just tell them whatever. I tell some people I'm leaving and some I'm staying. Hopefully I won't get any more questions."

First on his list of objectives will be making the U.S. Olympic team, with tryouts set for May 19-24 in Colorado Springs.

Elliott said he will play whatever role Georgetown Coach John Thompson, who will be in charge of the American squad, wants him in.

Elliott's uncertainty had continued last week even after he and Coach Lute Olson talked at length during a trip to Los Angeles for the John R. Wooden Award ceremonies, he said.

But further discussions Thursday night with assistant coach Kevin O'Neill, who is described as a close friend of Elliott's, helped him make up his mind then, the forward said.

He added, "I just feel great about the decision."

Elliott, who can shoot from 3-point range, score inside and also penetrate and dish off, was named Pac-10 player of the year, averaging 19.6 points, 5.8 rebounds and 3.6 assists as Arizona went 35-3 this season.

Elliott closed out the year with a 31-point performance as Arizona lost 86-78 in the NCAA semifinals to Oklahoma.

He was a finalist for the Wooden Award, given annually to the top collegiate player, and finished third in the balloting behind seniors Danny Manning and Hersey Hawkins.

Olson said he and his staff offered Elliott whatever assistance possible to help him make his choice, but the coach emphasized that he had told Elliott the choice would have to be his, because Elliott would have to live with it.

"What it came down to was he likes school too much and enjoys being with Coach (Olson) too much and he wants to get an education," O'Neill said.

Elliott said he probably would have opted for the NBA if Arizona won the national championship, thinking "what more is there to accomplish."

He also said, "The money was there. There's a lot of money, so it's always hard to pass up an opportunity like that. I think I had more reservations about leaving than I did about staying in school."

He said, "I believe there's a time to move on at some time in your life, and I was just wondering if this was the time, and I just figured that my time will come, and it'll be next year."

He added, "Not only is staying in school wise, it's wise financially and for the future." Elliott also said "sources" who had served as intermediaries indicated the prospect of at least a $7 million multiyear package when he turns pro.

Another reason he cited for deciding to stay was that he had played a role in recruiting Arizona's incoming freshmen.

Indians win sixth straight

CLEVELAND (AP) — Someone should pinch the Cleveland Indians before this thing really gets out of hand.

"You hope it doesn't end, but you know anything can happen," Indians left-hander Greg Swindell said Monday night after he pitched his second complete game of the season, putting Cleveland in first place in the American League East with a 7-2 victory over the winless Baltimore Orioles.

The victory was Cleveland's sixth straight after losing to Texas on opening day. Coupled with New York's 17-9 loss at Toronto earlier Monday, it put the Indians a half-game ahead of the 5-1 Yankees. That game was the only other contest in the AL, with Milwaukee at Boston postponed by rain.

The Indians, off to their best start since 1966, haven't been alone in first at any point in any season since April 16, 1983. They shared first briefly in May 1986. "We're up there all alone," said Swindell, who struck out eight and didn't walk a batter. "It might not last very long, but we might as well enjoy it while we're there. I just want to have fun while I can."

That's realistic talk from someone who saw a portion of Cleveland's 101 losses a year ago.

The Indians also are sober enough to know that their first four-game sweep since 1984 came at the expense of the Orioles, one of baseball's weakest teams. Baltimore's 0-6 start matches its 1955 club record for losses at the beginning of a season, and the Orioles have been outscored 43-7.

"Everybody's bearing down, trying hard, trying to get base hits and make the plays," Baltimore manager Cal Ripken Sr. said. "They're going at it good, but just not putting runs on the board. First, we've got to get some runs for our pitchers, and second, we've got to be able to get that third out."

Mike Morgan, 0-2, took the loss.

The only encouragement for Ripken came in the fifth inning, when Larry Sheets singled and Rick Schu followed with the Orioles' first homer of the season. That tied the game at 2-2.

But in the Cleveland sixth, Mel Hall doubled with two outs for the third of his four hits and took third on a wild pitch as Cory Snyder walked. Dave Clark, filling in because Joe Carter was nursing a sore back, grounded a single up the middle for a 3-2 lead.

"I'm just trying to be prepared in case the opportunity comes to play," said Clark, who hadn't been off the bench through Cleveland's first six games. "Thanks to Joe Carter, I got the opportunity tonight. He wasn't feeling up to par, so he tipped his hat at me and said, 'Go get 'em.'"

Snyder went to third on Clark's single and scored when Clark was caught in a rundown as he attempted to steal second.

The Indians added three runs in the seventh on Pat Tabler's two-run triple and an RBI single by Hall.

Cleveland scored its first two runs in the fourth on a double by Snyder, who has hit safely in all seven games.

Swindell's performance gave Cleveland four complete games this year but actually hurt the team's ERA, pushing it from 1.36 to 1.45.

Blue Jays 17, Yankees 9
The Yankees suffered their first loss in what nearly was the longest nine-inning game in American League history.

Kelly Gruber hit two home runs, and Rick Leach and Ernie Whitt had two RBI apiece in a six-run first inning for Toronto, which had 20 hits.

The Yankees had won their first five games for the club's best start since 1933. The loss spoiled a five-hit, four-stolen base performance by Rickey Henderson.

The game came within a minute of being the longest in AL history at four hours, 15 minutes.

Soto pitches gem at San Francisco

By The Associated Press
Mario Soto has learned his lessons well.

Some of the educating has come painfully — Soto underwent shoulder surgery and missed all but the first few weeks of last season while on the disabled list.

Soto took a major step in coming back from that hiatus with a strong spring training. After faltering on opening day, the former ace of the Cincinnati pitching staff threw a four-hitter Wednesday night in leading the Reds past the San Francisco Giants 4-0.

rally in the fourth inning with an RBI single, pitched his first complete game since April 24, 1986, when he shut out Houston on a three-hitter. He started six games last year in an aborted comeback attempt and his last victory was May 11. He went on the disabled list to stay May 22.

"I've got to give Soto a lot of credit for coming back from arm surgery," Giants manager Roger Craig said. "He was like a surgeon out on the mound. He pitched with his head tonight."

In the fourth, Cincinnati got all of its runs. Eric Davis walked, Paul O'Neill singled, sending Davis to third base, and Tracy Jones singled to drive in the first run of the game and move O'Neill to third.

Buddy Bell made the score 2-0 with a sacrifice fly, Bo Diaz followed with an RBI double and Soto singled home Diaz.

National League

"I used to have fun throwing 145 pitches in a game and trying to blow people away," Soto said after he walked three and struck out five. "Now I try to get out of an inning with five or six pitches."

"I've pitched seven or eight years in the league now and I am not a stupid man. I learn."

Soto has learned how to pitch without heat. He once threw 95 mph and loved to challenge hitters. Now, his fastball travels about 85 mph and Soto has become a trickster.

"His fastball and changeup kept them off stride," Reds manager Pete Rose said.

"I threw a lot of fastballs. Well, they were straightballs. (Roger) Clemens and (Dwight) Gooden throw fastballs," Soto said. "I asked Clemens in spring training if he'd give me some of that fastball. He said no, so I'm just going with what I've got. I hit the corners with it. I'd better hit the corners."

While Soto was making the biggest step in his comeback, the Chicago Cubs and Pittsburgh Pirates continued their surprising early ascensions. Pittsburgh beat Philadelphia 5-1 and Chicago took St. Louis 6-1.

Soto's shutout was the third in the National League this season. The Giants have lost two of them, the other to Orel Hershisier last week. Kelly Downs has started both of the shutout losses for San Francisco.

Soto, who also capped a four-run

Pirates 5, Phillies 1
The Pirates stayed a game ahead of the Cubs in the NL East. Certainly, it's early to be talking about standings, but, in Pittsburgh, they rarely get to see the top of the division.

Barry Bonds, off to a fast start, tripled and scored in the first inning and hit a solo home run in the third. Mike LaValliere clinched it with a three-run double in the eighth before the largest home crowd in Pirates' history.

"We're off to a good start and that's great," Pittsburgh manager Jim Leyland said of the 4-2 record. "But I don't emphasize it because if you don't get off to a good start, you can't cancel the season. That's why I don't put a lot of emphasis on a good start or a bad start. It's a 162-game season."

Cubs 6, Cardinals 0
Greg Maddux, who pitched a shutout last week, almost had another one. He blanked St. Louis for eight innings, then Bob Horner doubled for the 1,000th hit of his career and Terry Pendleton singled him home.

But the Cubs already were in control. Maddux also singled, doubled and scored twice in a 13-hit attack.

Chicago, off to its best start since winning seven of its first eight games in 1985, improved to 5-1, the NL East's best record.

Last second jumpers carry Bullets, Pacers

By The Associated Press
Playoff pressure and a clock ticking toward zero brought out the best in Darrell Walker and John Long.

Walker's 20-footer with one second remaining Monday night gave the Washington Bullets an 86-85 victory over Atlanta, and the Indiana Pacers edged New Jersey 95-93 when Long hit an 18-footer at the buzzer.

Indiana's victory left the Pacers in seventh place in the five-team race for three NBA Eastern Conference playoff spots. Washington and New York, which beat Detroit 114-111 in overtime, are tied for eighth, another half-game back, and Philadelphia is in 10th, 1½ games behind the Bullets and Knicks.

Walker, averaging less than six points per game, came off the bench to lead the Bullets with 19 points. He has been the subject of criticism after Washington traded Michael Adams and Jay Vincent to Denver for Walker and Mark Alarie.

Atlanta made up a 19-6 deficit and pulled ahead 85-83 on John Battle's eight-footer with 50 seconds left. The Bullets then made it 85-84 when John Williams hit one of two free throws with 32 seconds left.

Atlanta's Spud Webb missed a short jumper with six seconds left and the Bullets called a timeout to set up Walker's game-winner.

Moses Malone scored 17 points for the Bullets and Jeff Malone had 15. Dominique Wilkins led Atlanta with 17 points, and Kevin Willis had 14 points and 18 rebounds.

Pacers 95, Nets 93
Long capped Indiana's comeback from an 11-point deficit in the fourth quarter and handed New Jersey its 11th consecutive loss.

Wayman Tisdale, who had a season-high 32 points for the Pacers, hit a free throw to tie the game at 93 with 40 seconds to go. He then grabbed a rebound of a missed jumper by the Nets' Roy Hinson, and Long made his winning shot over Otis Birdsong after Indiana got the ball inbounds with three seconds remaining.

Tim McCormick had 20 points and 14 rebounds, and Buck Williams had 20 rebounds for New Jersey, which scored just 12 points in the fourth period.

76ers 115, Bucks 102
Philadelphia stayed close in the playoff race and broke a four-game losing streak as Charles Barkley scored 31 points at Milwaukee.

The 76ers scored 10 straight points after the Bucks rallied to take a 100-99 lead with 3:59 left when Barkley was assessed a technical foul and Jack Sikma made the free throw.

David Wingate of the 76ers then hit a fallaway jumper and Maurice Cheeks came up with a steal and layup to start the 10-0 Philadelphia spurt.

scored 36 points, including a go-ahead turnaround jumper with 23 seconds left in overtime against Detroit.

Ewing's basket made it 112-111, and when he missed the ensuing free throw, Detroit knocked the ball out of bounds.

streak as Thurl Bailey scored 11 of his 26 points during a decisive 19-8 run at Golden State.

Cards wins two in LL action

In Little League baseball action, the Cardinals won two games last week. Thursday the Cards downed the Lions 12-11 as Ross Roberts picked up the win and Chris Lewis got the save. Quinton Dixon was losing hurler for the Lions. Jason Roberts hit a two-run homer for the winners.

On Saturday the Cardinals defeated the Rangers 17-2. The Rangers took the lead in the first inning when Kurt Ogle scored on a double by Jason Bridges.

In the second inning, Jason Roberts tied the score with a solo homer. The Cards went on to score eight more runs in the inning, including a grand slam by Ross Roberts.

Chris Lewis was winning pitcher for the Cards while Jacoby Hopper took the loss for the Lions.

IMPORTANT INFORMATION

Purchasers must obtain their own financing for all sales.
Please contact a real estate agent of your choice to see or bid on any of the properties listed.
These properties may contain code violations.
HUD reserves the right to reject any or all bids and to waive any informality or irregularity in any bids.
HUD will not pay for a title policy.
An earnest money deposit of $500.00 is required with each offer to purchase.

A property's listing price is HUD's estimate of fair market value. HUD reserves the right, in its sole discretion, to accept or reject offers which provide a net bid amount that is less than the listing price. HUD will only accept the offer which provides the greatest net return to HUD after considering both the bid price and costs to HUD.

* BID OPENING IS OPEN TO THE PUBLIC *
Bids received until 4:19:88 4:45 P.M.
Bid opening 4:20:88

04/12/88

JEANE DIXON'S Your Horoscope

WEDNESDAY,
APRIL 13, 1988

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Innovative thinking will help you surmount any roadblocks. A financial turnaround is possible if you mind your p's and q's. Follow the lead of an older family member when it comes to building a better home life. Your loyalty will be rewarded by higher-ups. Your partner starts to give more. Timing will be everything when it comes to adopting new technology. You find romance when you least expect it. Be receptive.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: singer Howard Keel, actor Ricky Schroder, announcer Lyle Waggoner, 3rd President Thomas Jefferson, author Eudora Welty, playwright Samuel Beckett.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Try to be more objective about what is happening at work. Do not over-reach your authority. You should welcome change, not resist it. New technology could be your ticket to the top.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Your sense of humor and quick thinking make you valuable to your employer. A business project benefits from your imaginative approach. Share the applause with allies. You need their support.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): An intimate talk with a parent or good friend will give you fresh insights. A close relationship inspires you to greatness. Follow doctor's advice and you should enjoy good health. Exercise self-discipline.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Refuse to let others take advantage of you. A common sense approach to an important issue will help you find the right answer. Money conditions are unpredictable. Save as much as possible.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You feel as if you are on an emotional roller coaster. Sit down and think things through. Travel is best postponed. Do not sign anything that can wait for another day. Invest in art.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A small-group seminar helps you resolve internal company problems. The time is right to sell and buy stocks. Consult experts. Review insurance and retirement benefits. Complete tax returns without delay.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Patience and diplomacy will help you through difficult moments today. Privacy takes on greater importance, especially for singles. Keep romance in perspective. Do not take risks. Guard your health.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Keep a level head when others resort to panic measures. Minor issues are likely to be blown out of proportion. A good day for sports and creative work. Close relationships need more nurturing.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Use power wisely. Finances will require careful handling during an emergency. Your optimism helps you triumph over any difficulties. If someone tries to restrict you, stand up for your rights.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): A brief encounter reminds you about something you forgot to do. Get to it! Friends are helpful, supplying inside information. Loved one will try your patience tonight. Avoid speaking in anger.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Your luck changes for the better. People you come in contact with today prove helpful. Higher-ups are impressed by your show of initiative. You feel completely in tune with romantic partner.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Those who are self-employed should be able to boost profits. Do everything possible to increase your knowledge. You are in line for a promotion. Romance flourishes in an atmosphere of consideration.
