Chicago Hotel Raid Yeilds Gangdom's Records Of Gigantic Graft Machine

'PAY-OFF' LIST REACHES INTO U. S. CONGRESS

Unprecedented Evidence Goes Before Grand Jury Today

LEDGERS TELL TALE

Hoodlums Take to Cover As Revelations Spread Panic

CHICAGO, Jan. 18. (AP)—Shock troops of the law tore the lid off a veritable pandora's box of crime secrets today and sent new shudders quivering through the underworld and its purported public allies.

Squads of tired and trusted detective aces swooped down onto the Rex hotel, whence the gang of Al Capone has for years sent its henchmen to deal in liquor, gambling and vice, and emerged with two safes—full of records which authorities described as "astounding."

These records, according to Assistant State's Attorney Charles J. Mueller and Charles E. Lounsbury, cast the shadow of suspicion into every branch of government in Cook county and even into the halls of congress. They show, these prosecutors declared, illicit dealings between Capone gangsters and policemen, politicians and public officials, including what they described as "names we don't even dare to talk about yet."

'Big Business'

Tonight, Mueller and Lounsbury had the records in an unrevealed place, where they were poring over cancelled checks, purported "pay-off" lists, ledgers and other documents which the gang found necessary to keep in detail as it emerged into the class of "big business." Tomorrow they are to take the evidence before the special grand jury, summoned on order of Chief Justice John P. McGoorty to investigate the ugly rumors which have long attached to the police department.

Already the spectacular attack of the law has had its repercussions. Reporters assigned to inves-

Parents Of Slain Youth Claim Body While Father Of Girl Remains Silent

PORT ARTHUR, Texas, Jan. 18. (AP)—At sundown today, Mr. and Mrs. Grady Adams, parents of Ottis Lee Adams, 22, started overland for their home in De Quincy, La., with the body of the youth, who was shot to death last night by A. B. Johnson, teamster foreman for the Gulf Refining company here.

"All of these rumors about my son can't be true," the mother sobbed, before leaving. "I wish he could have died a natural death at home. He can't tell his side of it. He's gone."

The father would say nothing, excepting that he knew nothing about the extent of his son's friendship with Elizabeth Johnson, 26, attractive daughter of the teamster foreman, who died Dec. 28 from a mysterious bullet wound inflicted as she sat in a motor car in front of the First Methodist church here.

Williams Exonerated

The boy had been Miss Johnson's companion on several occasions, both attending the First Methodist church here, and Adams had been accused by Robert Williams, 18, University of Texas student, and fiance of the girl, of having estranged them. Williams found the girl dead. He had left her in the machine while he went inside the church to seek the pastor's aid in effecting a reconciliation with her.

Williams was exonerated of a murder charge by a grand jury no-bill.

Johnson was charged with murder last night and was released under $10,000 bond. He refused all requests of officials and newspaper men that he cite a motive for his act.

Explanation Far Off

B. T. McWhorter Jr., assistant county attorney, and B. H. Wiley, justice of the peace, the only officers having connection with the case, both said Johnson refused to discuss the matter with them.

The generally accepted theory among officers that Johnson would waive preliminary hearing tomorrow made it seem likely that his explanation still was far off.

Police Chief M. B. Word, pressed for a statement, would say only that he would "not speculate as to the motive Mr. Johnson had, where his daughter is involved.

"Adams had been going with Miss Johnson," he added, "as had Wil-

MOB SURROUNDS NEGRO SLAYER

Shreveport Whites Threaten Violent Action

SHREVEPORT, La., Jan. 18. (AP)—Death defeated a mob tonight when Leman McDaniel, negro wounded last night in a police raid which cost the lives of two policemen, died at 11:45 p. m. in Charity hospital as a mob of 1,500 persons milled about the hospital and swarmed into the corridors.

SHREVEPORT, La., Jan. 18. (AP)—A mob estimated at more than 1,500 milled about Charity hospital tonight as police guarded Lemon McDaniel, negro critically wounded last night in a police raid in which two policemen were fatally shot. Several hundred persons crowded the corridors of the hospital.

Police reserves were dispatched to the hospital tonight as a crowd gathered. They formed a guard about the room and corridor where the negro is confined as the crowd increased and part of it swarmed into the hospital.

McDaniel today had named Andrew Till, another negro, as the slayer of the two officers. Till was removed to an unnamed jail to avert possible mob action. Police, however, said McDaniel fired the fatal shots.

Officer Lee Allen Williams was buried today and the funeral of Officer Teddy Williams will be held tomorrow. They were not related. With Officer S. A. Jones they led the raid on a suspected negro gambling den with their faces blackened to allay suspicion.

Police Chief D. D. Bazer awaited with a police squad outside, his plan to follow the blackfaced trio miscarrying when McDaniel, was said by police to have fired on the advancing trio.

Jones said Teddy Williams was shot down before the trio entered the negro grocery. He said he and Lee Allen Williams then rushed the store and that his companion was shot in a running pistol duel with McDaniel. He said he dropped on the floor when the shooting started.

One of Five Escaped Prisoners Recaptured

SOUTH BEND, Ind., Jan. 18. (US)—Cletus Corey, one of five prisoners who escaped from the St. Joseph county jail this morning, was captured late today. He had 19 shot gun sheels in his pocket and claimed his companions have a shot gun with 80 shells ready to give battle if apprehended. The other escapes are believed to be hiding in a home on the south side of the city.

Danger of Flood in Mississippi River Removed by Recent Drouth

WASHINGTON, Jan. 18. (AP)—The long dry spell with which the country was afflicted last summer left at least one note of cheer in the Mississippi valley—there is little danger of a flood this spring.

In addition to sapping the flow of streams, it left the earth a porus sponge, capable of absorbing millions of tons of water.

The low levels of the river gave engineers an opportunity to push forward their work of building and strengthening the levees that go toward the new flood control system for the father of waters.

Army engineers today reported the Missippi at an extremely low stage and possibilities of a flood during the spring months practically nil.

Colonel Ernest Graves, a member of the Mississippi river commission, said that already about 60 per cent of the area affected by the flood control project is reasonably safe from flood danger.

The principal work extends from Cape Girardeau, Missouri, to the gulf. The plans provide for raising and strengthening levees along the Mississippi, except at the heads of the Boeuf and Atchafalaya basins; protecting levees planned in the side lowlands; reducing the height of river side levees near Bird's Point and construction of a set back levee from Bird's Point to New Madrid, Mo.; a masonry controlled spillway at Bonnet Carre about 20 miles above New Orleans for its protection.

CROWDS BEGIN ARRIVING FOR INAUGURATION

10,000 Texans Expected To Witness Induction Of Ross Sterling

PLANS IN READINESS

Three Bands to Play For Ceremonies at Grounds Of Capitol

AUSTIN, Jan. 18. (AP)—Texans, 10,000 or more of them, will pay traditional respects to their new governor at high noon Tuesday.

On a specially erected platform—an unadorned setting of his own choice—projecting from the south portico of the capitol that every citizen desiring to do so may witness the ceremony, Ross S. Sterling will take from the outstretched hand of Dan Moody, his warm friend and Texas' young governor, the reins of government.

Going into office with Governor-Elect Sterling will be Edgar E. Witt, lieutenant governor-elect, succeeding Barry Miller. Chief Justice C. M. Cureton will administer the oath of office.

First Arrivals

Austin today saw the first contingent of citizens headed for the inaugural arrive. Hundreds were expected to arrive during the afternoon and night.

Governor-Elect Sterling and Mrs. Sterling were not expected in Austin until about noon tomorrow. Miss Norma Sterling, in company with Mrs. Zillah Short, Mrs. Sterling's sister, came today. All organization for the inaugural was reported completed yesterday.

Claude D. Teer, chairman of the state board of control, announced that the state highway patrol, members of the Texas rangers, Austin police, the Travis county sheriff's department and a contingent of national guardsmen had been assigned to police duties of the day.

Traffic Re-routed

Strict orders were given to route traffic away from the capitol grounds with only trucks engaged in hauling material for the inaugural and the governor's party being privileged.

A systematic arrangement for those attending the ceremony was announced by Dr. J. W. E. H. Beck, senator from De Kalb and Senator Walter Woodul of Houston. Three roped-off sections will be held in reserve for members of the two houses, the governor's party and the three musical organizations. Two thousand seats will be available to the general public.

Three Bands to Play

Three bands, to make music for the inaugural, the 100-piece Texas A. & M. band, the University of Texas Longhorn band and the Arabie Shrine temple band of Houston, will play in downtown Austin during the day. Other musical organizations are expected, including visiting organizations from Houston.

A traditional governor's inaugural ball to be held this year in the new Gregory gymnasium at the University of Texas will begin at 9 o'clock. Advance reports indicate that this ball is to be the largest of all such social functions tendered to Texas' officialdom. The Ligon Smith dance orchestra, along with the other musical organizations, including the University of Texas Longhorn orchestra, will play.

German Celebration Disturbed by Fascists

BERLIN, Jan. 18. (US)—Fascist disturbances marked today's celebration of the 60th anniversary of the proclamation of the German empire. The celebration was led by the republic's President Paul von Hindenburg, who, as a young lieutenant, witnessed the historic incident at Versailles in 1871, following the defeat of France in the Franco-Prussian war.

In striking contrast to the solidarity of Germany then were the Fasist cries of "Germany awake!" which greeted the aged president when he mounted a rostrum in front of the Reichstag building to review his honor guard. A number of Fascists were arrested.

Searching Party Seeks Missing River Explorers

YUMA, Ariz., Jan. 18. (US)—Searching parties have been sent out today from Lee's Ferry, Ariz., in an attempt to locate Patrick Flattum, Los Angeles, and John Wetherill, Kayenta, Ariz., who set out Jan. 4 in a boat to travel up the treacherous Colorado river and have not been heard from since.

Flattum, 33, undertook the arduous trip for photographic purpose. Wetherill, an authority on Indian lore, acted as guide.

DEEP OIL TEST GIVES PROMISE

Swabbing Shows Both Oil And Gas

The Deep Oil Development company No. 1 Munger estate, located in block 30, Wichita Valley Farm Land sub-division, about one mile north of Kemp City in south Wichita county, and one of the most important deep tests in North Texas, Sunday was placed on the swab and is showing both oil and gas with considerable mud in the hole.

The test, which is the second deep well to be started by the Deep Oil company, about 10 days ago, encountered a lime at 3675 feet. This was penetrated 20 feet and showed a saturation of oil. Casing was set and cemented preparatory to giving the formation a shot in an effort to make a producer, but this operation has been delayed for a few days.

Bond Theft Suspects To Be Brought to Texas

OKLAHOMA CITY, Jan. 18. (AP)—Custody of two men arrested here yesterday as suspects in the theft of $12,000 in negotiable bonds of the city of Chillicothe, Texas, will be given Hardeman county, Texas, officers, Charles A. Becker, Oklahoma City chief of police, said today. Eleven of the 12 bonds were recovered.

Search for the bonds was instigated when one of the men was arrested while trying to dispose of one of them. He denied knowledge of the theft.

The bonds were for Chillicothe waterworks, and had been held in the Chillicothe city hall, Texas officers said. They had been retired, and one, placed on top of the packet, had been marked paid.

The bonds were not missed until they were found here.

Strang Demands Fair Trial For Peace in Lecture at Open Forum

Speaker Describes War as 'Hell Multiplied 1,000 Times;' 200 Visitors Here for Talk

Development among the masses in every civilized nation of a psychology definitely denying the inevitability of war and demanding at least a fair trial for peace is the chiefest requisite to international peace, according to Dr. Max Strang, pastor of the Central Congregational church of Dallas, who addressed approximately 800 persons Sunday afternoon at the Memorial auditorium on the question, "Are We Makers of Peace."

Featuring the fifth program presented by the Wichita Falls Open Forum in its first season, Dr. Strang's address differed somewhat from the four preceding lectures in that opinionative exhortation replaced a less oratorical discussion of facts. Following his speech, in which he convincingly espoused a determined educative campaign toward the abolition of war, the discussional period brought before the forum a series of pertinent and apt questions relative to the speaker's theme.

Attitude of People

"Our most effective contribution to the elimination of war as a social institution," Dr. Strang said in closing, "will be the creation of a psychology conducive to the formulation of peace proposals and the permanency of peace actions. Peace will come when we really possess and assert as our own the civil and ecclesiastical pronouncements voiced in recent years in favor of international harmony."

Rock Crumbles in Curve Of Huge Cataract

NIAGARA FALLS, N. Y., Jan. 18. (AP)—Thousands of tons of rock broke away from the parapet of the American part of Niagara Falls sometime between darkness Saturday night and daylight today and caused the greatest change in the contour of the cataract within the memory of living man.

The breakage, caused by erosion, created a gigantic u-shaped identation in the brink, estimated by observers to be 150 to 200 feet deep by about 150 feet wide and beginning approximately 300 feet from the bank of Luna Island. Accurate estimate of the extent of the ero-

CHIEF DEAF TO G. O. P. PLEA TO AID SUFFERERS

Leaders of Both Parties Apprehensive Because Of Tense Feeling

NEW SESSION LOOMS

People's Lobby Commends Lawmakers for Stand In Bitter Row

By FRASER EDWARDS

WASHINGTON, Jan. 18. (US)—All the powers of persuasion mustered by Republican leaders in congress today failed to budge President Hoover in his opposition to the $25,000,000 food fund.

The president is apparently determined to stand firm against federal aid for the Red Cross, the Republican leaders believe and the national emergency which has brought forth the "dole" proposal has been selected by Mr. Hoover as the test of strength.

As the deadlock between the White House and senate remained unbroken, the people's lobby in a statement took issue with Mr. Hoover's stand. It said:

"The threat to congress by the president and his multi-millionaire and billionaire friends, that if congress appropriates funds for relief of the victims of drouth and unemployment, they will boycot the Red Cross, is a challenge which a self-respecting congress was bound to accept.

"It finds the American people in the ugliest mood in history, not in a gullible mood.

"It is but one step from this to an admitted dictatorship and the refusal of the senate to be coerced or intimidated is the most encouraging event in recent years."

Because of the likelihood of an extra session resulting from the present situation leaders of both parties are apprehensive.

Republican leaders of the senate and house have pleaded with the president to accept the $25,000,000 food fund as a loan proposition to be administered through the Red Cross but the president remained adamant in his stand on any such federal aid proposal.

Adoption Certain

These leaders realize that the senate will this week re-adopt the food fund amendment to the interior department appropriation bill by an overwhelming vote. A motion to reconsider the vote will be a matter of the first consideration by the senate tomorrow. The motion will be made by Senator Reed of Pennsylvania, the new White House spokesman.

This amendment to the supply bill must be accepted by the house

Labor Government Faces Tests in New Session

LONDON, Jan. 18. (AP)—With reassembling of parliament Tuesday, Great Britain's labor government will face a series of tests any one of which it is believed in some quarters may result in overthrow of the government.

The battle is expected to start Wednesday over the government's education bill, now in committee stage. A religious controversy has entered into discussions on this measure with the Catholic and Free church elements in commons at loggerheads over the questions of grants to "nonprovided" schools—that is, schools run independently by religious organizations.

Lubbock Rabbit Drive Yields Two Tons of Meat

LUBBOCK, Texas, Jan. 18. (UP)—Charity workers today distributed two tons of rabbit meat, the result of a two-day drive in Cochran county west of here, to the poor of the city. Other consignments of rabbit meat are being shipped to other Texas cities.

STRANG GIVES PEACE TALK

People Have Power to End War, He Declares

opinion of Dr. Strang, represents the best gesture thus far made by world powers toward a permanent peace, and the plan which enjoys the greatest possibilities of ultimate success. Throughout his address, and during the discussional forum period, Dr. Strang emphasized the paramount importance of the attitude maintained by the peoples of the world.

Plans and pacts and proposals he repeatedly asserted, are futile if they lack the devoted support of the electorates of the nations.

Training of the younger generation to honor and revere leaders in civic, scientific, and industrial progress rather than to glorify war was described by the speaker as one of the best guaranty's of a peace-minded citizenship. Answering a question with which the forum period closed, he declared that emphasis upon such elements in human progress in history textbooks for primary and secondary schools, with a corresponding reduction in the place given to past wars, would prove one of the most valuable preparations for war's abolition.

Forget War's Horrors

"There is a young generation coming up which does not know the unutterable horrors of war, and there is an older generation which is in danger of forgetting how unspeakably atrocious war is," Dr. Strang said. Our memory of the world war is becoming less keen. These young men who will graduate from colleges this spring were lads of only seven or eight years when the war closed. They are inclined to regard war as a glorious adventure, almost a colorful, hilarious holiday. We shall never make war if we remember what war is. No passage of time can reduce its horror. It can not be divested of its real nature. It is hell multiplied 1,000 times. It is hate lifted by science to its maximum power. War violates every tenet of the Christian religion, and nullifies every ideal of the Prince of Peace.

"It disregards the will of God, and transforms the most sublime act of which man is capable, worship, into the most grotesque burlesque imaginable. There is nothing glorious about war. It has no virtue. It is atrocious beyond words to express."

We are not makers of peace, the speaker said, if we regard war as inevitable. That is inevitable, he continued, which lies outside of control by man's will. War has existed so long that its inevitability has been concluded, he said, under the theory that "whatever always has been always will be."

"We once regarded slavery as inevitable, because it had so long existed," Dr. Strang continued. "But the day will come when history will record the outlawing of war quite as certainly as it now has recorded the outlawing of slavery. Those who sustain the theory of war's inevitability assume that alteration of human nature is impossible. There is no reason why human intelligence which has progressed so miraculously in other lines of endeavor for the good of mankind should be daunted by the risks of peace."

Continuance of preparation for war while professing desires for peace was branded by the speaker as being quite as futile "as the dog's circuit in pursuit of his own tail."

"We are in danger of being like the Irish race as it was described by one of its own members. He said the Irish are so peace-loving they will have peace even if they have to fight for it. We are thrown in that light with our 'preparations.' The policy of 'maintaining peace' by a show of strength so imposing as to keep other nations in awe of us has been called the 'Rooseveltian theory.' The person who thinks that peace can be achieved by such a practice indulges in a degree of fancy far surpassing that of one who would test fraternal and pacific attitudes of man."

Makers of Peace

A point of adequacy in "preparedness" can never be reached, the speaker said, for competition of other nations along the same line make preparedness a thing which defeats its own ends. A nation must commit itself definitely to a position of either peace or war, he continued, because the two ideas are incompatible. An effort to prepare for war while professing a desire for peace, he said, creates an intellectual ambiguity which can not be maintained.

"We are makers of peace," Doctor Strang said, "if we apply the same intelligence and policies to the abolition of war which we have applied to other social needs. Regardless of what plans may be suggested, it remains fundamentally true that the attitude of our peoples will determine the ultimate results. Rarely does one people make war against another. The friendly association of soldiers in the past war amply demonstrated the absence of personal hatred. One of the chiefest factors in breaking down the central powers in the world war was Woodrow Wilson's message to the pope in 1917 declaring that America had no animosity whatever toward the people of Germany and her allies. Instead of amending our preparedness programs, we must commit ourselves to a positive position which assumes that war must be outlawed, and therefore will be outlawed. All of our efforts must be predicted upon the assumption that aroused mankind will not again permit a small group of men to plunge any nation into wholesale slaughter. We shall say, 'Heretofore you have made war; henceforth we shall make peace.'"

Doctor Strang was introduced by J. H. Allison, who had been presented by Walter D. Cline, president of the Open Forum. Dr. O. T. Kimbrough presided during the opening part of the meeting. At his invitation for residents of communities outside of this city to rise, more than 200 persons responded.

Musical Program

The 30-minute musical program which preceded Doctor Strang's address was given by the Scottish Rite mixed choir, under the direction of Dr. L. D. Parnell, and presented the organization in an unusually pleasing and finished performance. The benefit of almost two years of constant work as an ensemble was noticeable in the concerted movement and expression of the 30 voices. The choir's singing also evidenced the best quality and smooth blending of tone which it has thus far produced.

Sunday afternoon's program was delightfully varied both as to composition and style of presentation. It opened with two choral numbers, "Dusk Now on the Earth Has Fallen," and Tchaikowsky's "When Jesus Was a Little Child." Delicate shading for marked contrasts in the first number, and a genuine religioso atmosphere in the second, were commendably present.

Louis Bond, bass, realistically costumed and darkened for an effective likeness of "Old Black Joe," appeared in solo numbers following the choir's first group. Mr. Bond's dramatic capacities served him in excellent stead in his singing of "De Little Old Log Cabin in De Lane." He sang "Old Black Joe," with choral humming accompaniment, as his second number.

The choir's program concluded with a group of three songs, including "Swing Low, Sweet Chariot," with L. R. Thurman singing the tenor solo, and concluding with "The Bells of St. Marys." Miss Elizabeth Cole played accompaniments.

Doctor Kimbrough announced that the next Open Forum program will be held on Feb. 8, when Dr. Lorine Pruette, the only woman speaker booked for this season's program, will speak on "The Decline of the Male." The Electra High school orchestra will provide the musical program on that date, it was announced.

DRIVE FOR OIL TARIFF STARTS

New Arguments Presented For Protection

WASHINGTON, Jan. 18. (US)—Campaign for a tariff on oil, which gained momentum at the governors' oil relief conference here last week, will be pressed without delay, representatives of the oil industry declared today.

The first actual step toward such a measure may be taken by the New Mexico legislature which is expected to memorialize congress for such a tariff at the present session.

H. M. Bridges, who represented the governor of New Mexico at the oil relief conference, left for home today to ask the legislature to adopt the memorial to congress as speedily as possible.

He explained that New Mexico's interest in the oil tariff rests on the agricultural situation as well as the need of oil operators. Since many oil producers have been put out of business by large quantities of foreign oil admitted duty free, the burden of the state taxes is falling on farmers and cattlemen of New Mexico, causing acute distress.

Another argument for a tariff on oil was sounded by Russell B. Brown, secretary of the oil relief conference, who sees the present oil policy of the country leading to war. He said:

"Since the world race for control of and exploitation of oil is one of the major causes of war, the United States might make a substantial contribution to the peace of the world if it ceased to import so much of the oil of South America and promoted the development of its own natural resources to the accompanying employment and prosperity of its own citizens.

"With immeasurable quantities of oil in this country, we are entering a needless competition with other nations for control of oil fields in other lands, thus sowing the seeds from which another great war may spring."

Russell said the American oil industry under normal conditions gives employment to more than 2,000,000 workers and a living to 20,000,000 including farmers who would prefer an oil royalty to any form of charity. He pointed to the effect the oil industry has on banking and on the revenues of states which rely on production taxes and added:

"If these things do not appeal to congress as justifying tariff protection to the essential American industry now jeopardized by the flood of duty-free foreign oil being dumped here by monopolistic companies, then the peace of the continent if not of the world may concern them. That peace is interwoven with the solution of the oil industry."

Sheriff's Men Raid Speakeasy at Electra

Members of the sheriff's department, assisted by the Electra police, interrupted the Sunday afternoon trade in an improvised residential speakeasy at Electra, scattered the glasses, all set out for service, and brought back half a gallon of the refreshments as evidence. One man was arrested and will be charged Monday with selling whisky, Sheriff Perry Browning said.

The raid was made after the Wichita Falls officers had returned a stolen car to its Iowa Park owner and proceeded to Electra to conduct the raid. Deputies Pat Allen, E. L. Kincaid, and Ben Smith represented the sheriff's department.

Fire Wrecks Home As Family Attends Church

Fire of undetermined origin wrecked the home of E. E. Smith, 1413 Seventeenth street, early Sunday night while members of the family were attending church.

Water and smoke damage contributed largely to the estimated loss of $1,500, according to fire officials.

San Antonio Seeks Special Air Mail Stamp

SAN ANTONIO, Jan. 18. (UP)—Congressman Harry M. Wurzbach has advised local authorities that he will ask the postoffice department to issue a special air mail stamp to commemorate the 200th anniversary of the city's founding to be celebrated here with festivities from March 4 to 9.

liams, although Williams had been away at school. When Williams learned she had been going with Adams—a married man—he objected."

Adams' estranged wife, with whom he had planned to attempt reconciliation today at Vinton, La., was too ill to come here, officials learned. It was thought she might be able to assist in clearing up the case.

Adams was shot down as he leaned over a counter in the M-C Cleaning shop, in the act of delivering a suit of clothes to be pressed. Johnson immediately surrendered to officers and quickly was released on $10,000 bail, on a charge of murder.

Johnson Silent

Maintaining steadfastly he had "done nothing to regret," Johnson kept close silence today. He resolutely refused to say why he slew the youth, an occasional companion of his daughter.

Every official who questioned the team boss was turned away without a spoken or written word to explain what motivated the shooting. Newspaper men fared no better, Johnson twice repeating, "I have nothing at all to say."

Johnson, an erect, well-groomed and calm man of about 40, remained at home during the day.

Adams Named

Williams stated a married man had estranged the girl from him by attentions and it was understood he had named Adams as the man.

Friends Offer Bond

Police Chief M. B. Word filed a complaint charging Johnson with murder shortly after Johnson surrendered. A delegation of friends hurried to the city jail where Johnson was held and urged an immediate hearing, saying they would make any amount of bond.

Assistant County Attorney McWhorter refused their request and set the hearing for 10 a. m. Monday before Justice of the Peace B. H. Wiley. Justice Wiley then telephoned County Attorney Marvin Scurlock at Beaumont and it was announced Johnson would be allowed a $10,000 appearance bond. This bond was furnished immediately by Johnson's associates at the refinery and business men here.

The shooting occurred in the presence of M. C. Collier and C. J. Troscair, proprietors of the cleaning shop. Troscair said two shots were fired, one of them grazing his hip and the other striking Adams.

H. G. Dunham, with whom Davis roomed, said Adams had told him he had received threats but said Adams only laughed about them. Dr. James Long, Gulf refinery physician with whom Adams worked, said Adams intended leaving today for Vinton to attempt a reconciliation with his wife. Adams had been employed in the medical department of the refinery here for two years. Relatives reside in De Quincy, La.

18 Cases on Docket For Court Call Today

Trial of criminal cases before Judge Allan D. Montgomery in the 30th district court will begin at 9 o'clock Monday morning, it was announced Sunday by George Anderson, assistant district attorney.

A total of 18 cases are on the docket to be called Monday, Mr. Anderson said. Definite setting for their trials will be made Monday. Defendants were indicted by the January grand jury which recessed following four days of work to reconvene on Jan. 29.

Proposed Wheat Price Jump Brings Paris Riot

PARIS, Jan. 18. (AP)—The government's proposed increase in the price of wheat caused a riot of protest in a motion picture house today when the picture of Premier Steeg was flashed on the screen.

Several persons in the audience rushed to the stage and tore down the canvas. An uproar followed and continued so long the manager had to refund to all patrons the price of their seats.

Post Prison Guarded After Attempted Break

SAN ANTONIO, Jan. 18. (UP)—Sentries guarded closely the Fort Sam Houston post prison today following an unsuccessful attempt of two prisoners to make their way out with keys fashioned from mess-kit handles. Seven of the eight prisoners who escaped from the prison on Christmas eve have surrendered or been recaptured.

Texas Girl Studies For Altitude Attempt

SAN ANTONIO, Jan. 18. (UP)—Hazel Tinnin, former Midland girl, is studying aviation here in preparation to seeking the woman's altitude record. In 1928 with Ralph Montee as a passenger, she attained an altitude of 19,600 feet at Midland. The mark has been surpassed since in California.

DEATHS

MRS. PAUL CLOSUIT

Funeral services for Mrs. Paul Closuit, 56, were held Sunday afternoon from the chapel of the Merkle Undertaking company, with R. J. Rodocker, past reader for the First Church of Christ Scientist, in charge. Burial was in Riverside.

Pallbearers were G. D. Fox, John Davenport, W. W. Shuler, E. E. Scannell, Fred Malacord and W. T. Martin.

Mrs. Closuit, who had been a resident of Wichita Falls for 18 years, died at her home, 2011 Lucile street, Saturday morning after a prolonged illness.

Surviving are the husband, the parents, a son, a daughter and a sister.

Break Changes Niagara Falls

sion will not be possible until aerial photos have been compared with the previous contour.

The crest of the American falls is 1,030 feet wide, with an average depth of 1.5 feet of water. The broken-up rock formation is piled in immense blocks halfway up the 167-foot cliff at the base of the U incision.

Nature's changing of one of its greatest scenic wonders was unwitnessed by man, the work being carried out under the veil of darkness.

Reservation officials reported several rumbling noises were heard between 10 o'clock Saturday night and 6 o'clock this morning.

The new contour of the cataract, despite its wide divergence from the old crest line, would not be noticed by the casual observer. To the experienced eye, however, the change is apparent at once.

Meanwhile, tourists from all parts of the world were photographing the cataract, unaware that its luring beauty had undergone a natural metamorphosis—a change that always is taking place although not to such a great extent. The average erosion of the American Falls is estimated at one inch a year.

Raid Uncovers Graft Records

tigate found that almost every speakeasy in the loop had been closed, that gambling places were shut tight, and that hoodlums accustomed to frequent the Risito had scurried for cover.

The raiders called their seizures "probably the most important and astonishing in the history of corruption in Chicago." They are more far-reaching, the investigators insisted, than the sensational records of Jack Zuta, which sent public officials scampering to the forefront with explanations.

Detectives Call

The Rex hotel is conducted by Dennis (the Duke) Cooney, high in the Capone councils, and has for years been one of the most notorious places in a district long looked upon as synonymous with lawlessness. After the raiders had taken control of the building, they kept it under guard for more than four hours, during which time they reported that about 300 men sought admittance. Two uniformed policemen and two detectives also visited the hotel while the investigators were in charge and, Mueller related, were severely rebuked when they said they were under orders to call there every hour for violations, but had never found any.

"How long have you been blind?" the Herald and Examiner quoted Mueller as asking them.

Cooney is reported to be in Florida and George "Tubby" Miller was in charge when officers entered. Mueller said that, though the Rex has been "running wide open" for years, he did not recall of its ever having been raided before. It was found equipped with an elaborate buzzer system to warn of police, and had trick sliding doors and other contrivances to hinder officers. Detectives had the place surrounded, however, and arrested 15 men and six young women. Miller is among the prisoners.

In addition to revolvers, police night sticks, blackjacks and a shotgun, the two large safes also yielded jewelry estimated as worth about $5,000. There was about $15,000 in small currency in the safes.

About 100,000 tung oil tree seedlings were available at the Louisiana state nursery for planting this fall.

HOOVER DEAF TO FOOD PLEA

President Immovable In Loan Dispute

or the senate in its present temper will kill the measure and force an extra session of congress. There were reports that the president would veto the interior bill if it carried the food fund provision.

Compromise Offered

On the house side a compromise proposition was gaining support. It would cut the $25,000,000 fund to $12,500,000 with this amount to be matched by an equal sum to be raised by the present Red Cross drive. The goal of the Red Cross relief fund is now $10,000,000, with subscriptions reported slow due to the confused situation. The White House, however, was represented as opposed to any compromise.

While Senator Robinson, of Arkansas, Democratic leader of the senate, desires an extra session less than any other man in the body he finds himself in a position where he must drive for his food amendment because of the distressing conditions in his home state. A majority of the Democrats and a substantial section of the Republicans will vote with Robinson.

Vote of Motion Today

The Reed motion to reconsider the Robinson amendment is set down for special order for a vote at 4 o'clock Monday. Senator Reed is expected to offer some sort of a compromise, but the Republican leaders have little hope that it will carry.

The long heralded inquiry into the financial structure of the nation fostered by Senator Carter Glass, of Virginia, will begin tomorrow with Chairman Meyer of the federal reserve board on the stand before the senate banking and currency committee. John W. Pole, comptroller of the currency, is the only other witness thus far notified.

On Wednesday the senate foreign relations committee will have before it Elihu Root to explain the so-called Root formula providing for America's adherence to the League of Nations court.

Borah in Statement

Senator Borah, Republican, Idaho, said in a statement tonight he was not in favor of any appropriation if it was not necessary. "but if necessary I certainly am, even if it sweeps the treasury dry."

"I had hoped from the beginning that the Red Cross and other voluntary organizations would be able to take care of the situation, feed the hungry, clothe the naked and administer to the sick. That is the way we all wanted to see it done.

"But the unmistakeable proof came to us that the situation was not being taken care of. According to the Red Cross statement in the beginning, they did not have the funds to take care of the situation and at that time the Red Cross was not asking for additional funds.

"Under those circumstances congress had no alternative.

"The trouble with this situation is precisely the same as it was with reference to unemployment, and that was an effort to minimize its seriousness and to criticize those who urged its seriousness."

Arlington Negro Faces Murder Trial Today

FORT WORTH, Jan. 18. (UP)—Trial of Sam Louder, negro charged with the murder of Evans Johnson, Arlington officer, last Nov. 23 when Johnson was attempting to arrest a second negro, will begin here tomorrow. An address by Johnson's father, a retired minister, was credited with preventing a lynching following the shooting.

Texas and Oklahoma Growers Exhibit in Tillman Rabbit Show

Special to The Record News.

FREDERICK, Okla., Jan. 18.—Large crowds were attracted to the first American Cavy and Rabbit Breeders association show held in Tillman which was conducted in Frederick Thursday to Saturday and in which 175 rabbits from this place, Altus and Vernon were exhibited. T. D. McKinney of Byers, Texas, a licensed judge of the American C. & R. B. association, made the awards which met with the approval of all exhibitors.

Fred W. Reed of Vernon, Texas, exhibited 20 New Zealand white and red pedigreed animals. He spoke highly of this show, saying it was the best ever held in this region and he attributed its success to the cooperation of County Agent L. H. Beaty, the Frederick business men in donating prizes, and the untiring efforts of the members of the local rabbit breeders association.

Among the features were two attractive displays from outside fur concerns, Shubert of Chicago and the Englewood Fur Farms of Independence, Kan.

Archie Reid had on exhibition a blue-eyed Bevern Rex which he purchased several months ago from a concern at Appleton, Wis. The father of this rabbit was given 97 points at an exhibition held at Liepsic, Germany. This was the only short haired rabbit exhibited here.

Reid was also awarded grand champion on his blue eyed white Bevern. This is the animal that was given first place of all rabbits on display at the show held at Vernon, Texas, recently.

Jerry Wilson, Frederick, was given first place on his fur display.

Fred Reed of Vernon was awarded first for best meat pen and best rabbit display.

Juniors Vote Gift To Forum At Pretty Monthly Luncheon

With a beautiful luncheon setting, a delightful program and delicious luncheon, the Saturday meeting of members of the Junior Forum was outstandingly marked by their usual annual gift to the Senior Forum when they voted to present the body with a check for $100. This was voted after the reading of the financial report by Mrs. Woodward Bass.

Tables spread in black with silver doilies, silver centerpieces with trailing sprays of dark berried vines and silver leaves and gleaming black tapers in crystal holders made a setting that was charming in its sophisticated beauty. In the center of the speaker's table, silver lilies encircled the beautiful centerpiece.

Miss Mary Tancred, president, was in the chair and gracefully introduced the program numbers. Miss Jeannette Moore made a report on the state conference of T. F. W. C. in Houston and the book which won for the local Juniors the first place among junior clubs in Texas and so far as is known, in the United States. Their work has been outstanding.

Misses Christine and Mary Clara Burton sang two pretty vocal numbers, "The Stars Are Brightly Shining" and "The Highway to Heaven" with Mrs. Wm. E. Young accompanying and Misses Mary Clara Burton and Helba Miller gave delightful readings.

Many Present

Among those for whom covers were laid were Mesdames G. D. Fox and T. A. Hicks, Misses Marguerite Peery, Lee Ellen Boardman, Marguerite Sheldon, Frances Carter, Kathryn Hawley, Mary Sue Gilbert, Mrs. C. P. Burton, Misses Peggy Durkin, Mary Clara Burton, Christine Burton, Mrs. W. E. PEEPS AT PEOPLE

By MRS. L. N. CASON

We sat at a luncheon table at the Forum clubhouse Wednesday with two women who came from the same loved part of the United States where we were born. The conversation veered, as it always will, to trees meeting overhead, making green lacework through which one sees summer skies; to trees dressed in russet and scarlet and gold when autumn touched them with his wand.

On the table, the trailing spray of dark berried vine made us remember red berried trees that fill autumn woods; the red-berry, beautiful in the forest but prone to shed its berries when one plucks the branches; the haw, sweet to the taste and lovely to the eye and later the glowing green holly with its vivid scarlet fruit.

Autumn is glorious and winter not without its requisites—the heavy white frosts—the snow, sleet covered trees and then winter berries are acknowledged as such. But so far, this Texas winter of 1931 is one of a series of clear, sunshiny days with breezes that though icy at times, at others bring a subtle hint of spring.

In our window, there stands one of the most vivid harbingers of spring—jonquils, golden with a promise of resurrection. Since we found them on our office desk, we have had more thrills over them than any debutante over her first dance.

The thrills that beauty gives are soul thrills. And flowers always bring to a flower lover sweet odorous memories of the past and fair hopes for the future.

Heaven as a place of harp playing crowds is not a heaven to our taste. We hear from too many open doors now the strains of the music. The radio has usurped that orchestra idea of heaven.

But we could picture a heaven of wide meadows with buttercups sprinkled in the waving grasses; then a little nearer summer, the golden and feathery pink poppies. Once we saw a hillside white with daisies and heaven might have such a hillside. Then beyond, a deep green wood with little splashing brooks where boy-men might fish for willing trout.

If you ever swung in a grapevine swing, you might like to swing again in heaven where the great green leaves would make an arbor over you and clusters of little purple wild grapes would hang to be tasted without climbing. Their sharp, sweet tang would be a heavenly thing. No ants, no gnats, no mosquitoes in that wood.

And always to walk beside you if you needed company (solitude sometimes is necessary) there would be the one faithful and true; one who would pass with you through the dim woods and come out into the sunset to hear the sound of silvery chimes ringing in the distance where a great One talked of love.

Faster surer relief from COLDS

Little Miss Nobody

CHAPTER XLVII

The annullment was granted a few weeks later at a private hearing. Celeste did not appear. She had moved from the apartment to a furnished room and resumed her position as Mr. Clayton's secretary the day after Dale's father called.

Work was now all that mattered in a cheerless, monotonous life. Occasionally she had luncheon with Blondie, who asked her to call her "Imogene." Mr. Smith, she said, preferred it.

Blondie seemed to have profited by having "used her head instead of her heart." She professed herself more in love with the kind Mr Smith than she had even been with Billy or any one else.

"He's the sweetest husband in the world," she confided with tears in her bright blue eyes. "I'd no idea marriage could be so wonderful."

It was nice that somebody wasn't disappointed thought Celeste. The fact that she had married for love with no thought of the material advantages to be gained yet her own marriage had gone on the rocks hurt more than anything else.

R. R. C. remained impersonally kind, making no attempt to play the lover. He took her to the theater once or twice and occasionally to dinner, but always as a friend. He did not try to discuss her marriage and his own professed love appeared to be a closed book.

Except for the incurable ache in her heart Celeste realized she should have been happy. Her salary was ample for her simple living expenses and some charming, attractive clothes. For the first time in her life she was able to purchase a complete new outfit, dress, hat, pocketbook and shoes. The heavenly shade of blue which was so popular that season matched her eyes. She had never been so beautiful or had less reason to care whether she was beautiful or not.

The last thing she thought every night before closing her eyes was an earnest little prayer that some time Dale would come back to her. Every morning when she opened her eyes she thought "Perhaps he will come today."

Some night she would find him waiting in the rooming house "parlor" with outstretched arms. And she would forgive him everything. So long as his engagement was not reannounced to Cynthia Atwood, Celeste would not give up hope. He had been weak and disloyal but he had also been under the strain of a tragic blow and his mother's unnatural influence. The memory of those first three precious days after they were married was more potent than all the grief he had caused her. She would not hold him responsible for his sister's crime and she would never tell him about it. If only he would come back!

She had longed for him through the entire summer, yet when he stood before her one early September evening she could not believe the evidence of her own eyes.

Dale was pale and ill looking. The blitheness she had so admired was gone from both voice and eyes. He was a boy no longer, but her heart went out to him with the old, irresistible attraction as he cried, "Oh, my dear, it's good to see you again."

They sat together on the davenport and her hand was tightly clasped in his.

"Darling, can you ever forgive me? I've treated you shamefully, but when you realize the hell I've suffered, too . . . oh, Celeste, tell me it's not too late."

"I've always loved you." Celeste answered simply.

"I had no idea," Dale continued. "I know you'll believe me when I say I had no suspicion of the truth until I happened to find Pat's diary."

What was he saying? Celeste's heart sank.

"Pat's diary?" she repeated, stupidly.

"It had been pushed down behind some other books on a library shelf. She knew we'd find it eventually. She said she didn't care. It was just like Pat to tell you first and let us find it out for ourselves."

"Did Pat say that?" Celeste demanded.

Dale drew a small green leather volume from his pocket.

"She had kept a diary for years, but this one begins the night after your mother was murdered. It tells about Pat's return to the sanitarium, but does not explain where she had been until the last entry."

Celeste, strangely quiet, looked upon the facsimile of Pat's confession to her.

"This is a copy of the letter I have just written Celeste Grahm," wrote Pat with the dramatic instinct neither her mother's inhibitions nor the imminence of death could quell. "Whether she makes it public or not depends on how much she cares about Dale.

Rather interesting to know what she'll do and how long it will be before this diary will be found by some member of my horrified family. Unfortunately I will not be here to see. As soon as I've mailed the letter I have an important engagement. And this time I will not fail."

Dale shuddered.

"She must have been insane. She was insane before that, of course, when she committed the murder."

Celeste disconcertingly said nothing. She was staring at the little green book which like Pat's slender suede-covered hand had reached from the grave to snatch her happiness from her for the second time.

Dale seized her hand and murmured, passionately: "You're the most wonderful girl in the world, Celeste. To keep that confession to yourself and permit them to annul our marriage."

"I'll make it up to you, sweetheart. If it takes the rest of my life. We'll be happy yet."

"You're not intending to tell your mother and father, are you?"

"Not if they'll agree to our being remarried. This diary puts an entirely different light on it, you know," Dale insisted.

Celeste agreed. But her voice was lifeless. There was no warmth in the hand which she gently withdrew from his.

Splendid Program Features Archer County Conference

Mrs. W. H. Taylor of Archer City, president of the Archer County Federation, was in the chair Saturday when Archer City clubs were hostesses to the county conference in their home town. An address by Mrs. Taylor opened the session, after which the program was given in a morning and afternoon session with a delightful turkey luncheon served at noon.

Rev. Mr. Moon of Archer City gave the devotional and "America" was sung by the assembly. After a reading by Beth Abercrombie of Archer City, Mrs. Douglas Strange of the City Amity club, Archer City, talked on "Texas in General." Mrs. H. A. Hollister, Archer City, sang a lovely vocal number and the report of the state conference T. F. W. C. at Houston was given by Mrs. St. Andrew Myers, secretary, Henrietta.

Miss Juanita Prideaux, Archer City, gave a piano number and Mrs. J. Truman Stevens, Wichita Falls, read a beautiful selection of her original poems. Mrs. I. J. Branch, Megargel Study club of Megargel, discussed the question "Is Club Work Worth While?" and a quartet composed of Mesdames H. A. Hollister, Maud Ikard, Leon Hays and Miss Jean Powell, sang lovely numbers. "Our Colonial Background" was the subject of discussion by Mrs. J. M. Willison of the Geraldine, Texas, Travel club and Mrs. Claude Gowan of Archer City gave "Cowboy Ballards." Mrs. M. F. Childs, a representative of the Dundee, Mankins and Holliday club, talked on "The Developing World Community," and a health talk was given by Mrs. T. C. McCurdy, Archer City. Miss Lois Mangum, representing the Archer City Delphian club, gave a reading which was followed by a discussion of shrubs and flowers adapted to Archer county by Mrs. Sam Gowan of the Archer City Garden club.

A splendid display of handiwork was on exhibit for inspection by members and guests of the county federation.

Among those present were Mesdames I. J. Branch, H. F. Harmel and F. White, Megargel; Miss Bertha Taylor and Mrs. M. E. Childs, Holliday; Mesdames W. L. Richeson and J. E. Parkey, Mankins; Mesdames D. M. Hardy, J. Truman Stevens and H. F. Weldon, Wichita Falls; Mrs. St. Andrew Myers, Henrietta; Mesdames W. L. Andrews, Guy Short, E. D. Stricklin, Bert Herron, H. A. Hollister, Maud Ikard, W. C. Young, E. R. Prideaux, Miss Juanita Prideaux, Mary E. Hale, Mesdames J. N. Shelton, Joe E. Shelton, Leon Hays, W. E. Forgy, F. M. McAmy, E. H. Trigg, Douglas Strange, Sam Cowan, J. S. Melugin, H. K. Dycus, J. H. Turbeville, W. H. Taylor, Charlie Abercrombie, Jack Burkett, Clabe Long and Miss Jean Powell, Archer City, and Mrs. E. N. Cullers, Megargel.

Texas Boy is Healthiest

"MY little son, Lee Boyce, had whooping cough," says Mrs. Sam Heyman, 3700 Haynie Ave., Dallas. "He was having a hard time until I heard of California Fig Syrup and got him some. The first few doses regulated his bowels; brightened him up marvelously; even seemed to ease the coughing spasms a great deal.

"I have since used Fig Syrup with my boy during colds or upsets. It has been a wonderful help to him; has assisted in making him the strong boy you see—perhaps the healthiest one in our neighborhood."

For more than fifty years, mothers have praised California Fig Syrup. Leading physicians advise its use with bilious, headachy, constipated children, or to keep the bowels open during colds or children's diseases. Children love its rich, fruity flavor. It tones and strengthens weakened bowels; helps make children robust.

Look for the name California when buying. That marks the genuine.

'Death Takes a Holiday' To Be Given at Forum

In "Death Takes a Holiday," the beautiful fantasy arranged by Walter Ferris from the Italian of Alberta Cassels, Mrs. Eloise Stirling Hirt of Fort Worth will find a vehicle worthy of her ability in the presention at the Woman's Forum clubhouse Thursday at 2:30 o'clock. Death in the play cannot understand why those on earth fear Him so much, and comes to earth on a holiday to find the reason. Sheer poetry and mystery make the play one that holds the audience spellbound, it is stated by various people who have heard it.

Mrs. G. L. Shapard will introduce Mrs. Hirt Thursday afternoon and a splendid group of hostesses has been named for the occasion. Mrs. R. H. Peterson will act as chairman and serving with her are Mesdames Ralph L. DeShong, John Hampton, Carter McGregor, S. S. McKenney, H. T. Wood, John B. Rhea, S. H. Rider, A. R. Prothro, J. S. Riggs, Carl Worsham and Miss Mary McIlheran.

Good Nathan Straus
He gave to All Creeds
A Love Contract
Silks and Ham and Eggs

By EMILE GAUVREAU

The giver of gifts, the savior of children, Nathan Straus, has joined the innumerable caravan. Few men die more universally honored and loved, by old and young, by Jews and Christians alike. For Nathan Straus gave to all creeds, his philanthropies embraced all causes for the common good.

The good that Straus did will not be "interred with his bones," but will live after him as an example and inspiration for those of us who would make of life a perfect tribute, a command to achieve worthily and lastingly.

There have been trial marriages, one-night marriages. But none of these, evidently, has "gone over" as satisfactorily as predicted by the advocates. Now comes "love contract marriage," sponsored by Rita Burgess Gould, a "lonely hearts" counsellor, which stipulates annual trial and optional renewals.

Here are two of the principal tenets, as outlined by this Solon on the grand passion:

1. After the marriage vow is taken, the couple write an agreement giving each an option on the other for one year.
2. At the end of each year, either mate has the right to take up the option on the other for an additional year. Both must, however, take up the option to make the marriage binding.

In the opinion of Miss Gould, the advantage of such a business contract is that it would make marriage a courtship instead of a penitentiary. She points out that "it is more important for a wife to be attired in silk pajamas and perfume than to have the ham and eggs on the table. She must be as efficient as the secretary her husband has just left at the office.

Silk pajamas will not give much serious competition to ham and cabbage, when a husband is hungry. But the home wife should make herself as attractive and elusive as the office wife. The problem might be solved, as Shaw suggested, by marrying one's secretary. And the perfume may be dispensed with by a devotional use of the bathtub.

Just as certain microbes, beneficial to the human system, are introduced into the body to fight pathogenic bacteria, so, in the Douglas fir forests of the Northwest a bug with the name of calosoma sycophanta, or the "immigrant insect," has been let loose to kill enemy moths that have been destroying trees by the thousands.

Civilization may be ruined in like manner by permitting unchecked the growth of a horde of grafters, racketeers and political blackguards who feed parasitically on the vitals of society and progress. It might be a good idea if, instead of committing offenders to prison, they were turned over to bacteriologists and pumped full of a phage which will eradicate the pathogenic microbes in them.

It would not at all be surprising if science finds that criminal instincts are due to a germ disease in the human body which can be isolated and fought with serums, like the smallpox or diphtheria.

IT IS CHEAPER

OKMULGEE, Okla. — People laugh at the old saying that two can live as cheap as one, but not Joe McNac, wealthy Indian. It cost Joe $8,000 recently when his wife Lucy, secured a divorce from him. But Lucy relented the divorce and wanted Joe to remarry her. Joe thought it would be a good idea, too, so he did. When he counted up his bills after the second marriage he found it had cost him only $7, or $7,993 less than the divorce cost.

Hambone's Meditations

The president should console himself with the thought that if the senate doesn't pay much attention to his words he can get plenty for them as a writer later on.

In this respect a depression is like a war: Experts thought it would be over in a few months.

Built in the Old Days

WORKINGMEN who were leveling ground for a new municipal airport at Pittsburgh the other day found it necessary to remove an old log cabin that stood in the middle of what was to be the landing field. Since the cabin had some historic value, it was to be put up again on a new site and preserved as a memorial of the early days; consequently it had to be taken apart with some care.

Now this cabin was built in 1758, when Western Pennsylvania was a wilderness as deep and as perilous as the Brazilian jungle. The man who put it up had had only a broadaxe for a tool; yet the men who had to dismantle it found that it was put together so firmly that they could hardly take it apart. Mortises fitted perfecly. Wooden pegs, used in place of the nails that were non-existent in the Pittsburgh of 1758, were still doing their work as sturdily as when they were first put in place.

It is interesting to compare that bit of construction work with the sort of work we are content with nowadays. Would any group of carpenters, 173 years from now, have the slightest trouble in dismantling an ordinary frame dwelling of 1931? More probably, they would have trouble in finding one. Most of the houses now being built, one fears, would have fallen in long before 173 years have passed.

The fact seems to be that we have sacrificed something in the way of sturdiness and solidity in the last century and a half. We build houses quicker than the men of 1758 did, and we do it more cheaply and the houses are more comfortable; but they are not built as well, and the individual skill of the old-time builders has gone.

Probably this is not very important. Certainly we wouldn't go back to the old ways, even if we could. But isn't this loss a real one, nevertheless? Hasn't there been a loss in integrity, in creative pride, somewhere along the line? Aren't we just a bit the poorer for the change?

There is no use in lamenting it, to be sure. This decline in the excellence of the individual's handiwork is part of the price we have paid for our mechanical civilization. We have found it worth while to sacrifice something in the way of skill and craftsmanship in order to make things more speedily and more easily. On the whole, we are better off for the bargain.

But it is hard to read of this old cabin, and of the work that went into it, without feeling that that price has been heavier than we ordinarily suppose. In all America is there, today, one man who could go into a howling wilderness, with nothing but a broadaxe, and build a house that would still be staunch and firm 173 years later?

And So We Don't Waltz

WHEN the Prince of Wales remarked the other day that the waltz is the best dance of all he said something that we have been waiting for someone to say for a long time. The modern world dances a great deal, but it does not waltz very much, and it is a pity. There is a grace to the waltz, a stateliness, a dreamy romance that one gets in no other dance.

However, the changing times have deprived us of a good many of the pleasantest features of a former day, and the waltz is only one of many things that are not quite attuned to the modern era. And the defect lies in the waltz itself; for the very qualities that make it a delightful dance are qualities that have made it lose popularity with this generation.

You can learn a good deal about any society by watching how it dances. Dancing expresses a person or a group more clearly than words could. It gives utterance, in some way, to whatever the dancers may have in the back of their minds. And during the last decade the world generally has had things on its mind that cannot be expressed in a waltz.

For the waltz carries with it the aura of a bygone order; an order in which there was a great deal of tranquillity and a great deal of leisure, an order in which people were sure of their destination and quite confident that they were going to get there, and hence had the time and the inclination to stop by the wayside and glide lasily off in a slow and languorous waltz.

Unfortunately, that period came to a close. The world war knocked it endwise, and since the war there have been alarums and excursions enough to keep us sadly uneasy. Our goal is no longer clear—except, sometimes, when we get a dreadful suspicion that we are all headed for a bottomless pit—and while we are moving somewhere at a prodigious clip we can't chart our course, and we remain uncomfortably conscious that we may eventually collide with something hard.

So we are nervous, impulsive and hectic. When we go in for amusement we do it, not because we have some time to spare and want to fill it pleasantly, but because we have the itch to keep moving, to make a loud noise and forget some of the things that are worrying us.

The waltz, consequently, is out. We prefer the nervous quack-quack of muted cornets and the quick, restless burbling of saxophones to the smooth singing of the violins. We are fond of jarring discords and petulant minors. The waltz calls for a restraint and an urbanity that we do not possess.

The Death Toll Rises

STILL America's automobile fatality toll goes up.

In 1930, according to figures just issued by the National Safety council, 32,500 Americans were killed in traffic accidents. And even this figure is not quite complete, for it represents statistics gathered in only 32 states, covering about 75 per cent of the country's population. The total death roll, consequently, was somewhat higher.

The one gleam of hope lies in the fact that the rate of increase was lower than usual—the smallest, numerically, for any year since 1920, with the exception of 1924. But this is cold comfort. The figures are damning evidence of our incapacity to handle the automobile as it should be handled.

Quotations Worth Noting

The American state department is fully justified and is acting in complete accordance with traditional American policy in refusing to recognize a government (Russia) which violates the first postulates of international law.—Dr. Edmund A. Walsh, vice president of Georgetown university.

The Wisecrack and the Gag

When big time vaudeville was downtown or where Mr. Keith's Union square used to be in New York, no bill was complete without that pair who swapped this one: "If you had 11 apples and 12 horses, how would you evenly divide the 11 apples among the 12 horses?" To which the "straight man," or the comedian's partner, would respond: "I don't know, Ignatz. How would you evenly divide 11 apples among 12 horses?"

"Why, you simply make applesauce!" was the answer, and if the auditors didn't fall right out of their chairs at that joke, then the next generation employed the tag line of the old reliable to squelch a braggart or an opinion with which they didn't concur.

So great an army of entertainers employed the applesauce gag that it became the butt of derisive comment. It was in a class with "Who was the lady I seen you with last night?" or "Why does a chicken, etc?" In 1925, A. D., a ham who had been laying off for six months was offering an alibi to a group of flip talkers. "So I says to my agent, the hell with them. Joe Zilch ain't in this business for glory. No, sir, he's in it for the dough, see? It ain't billing or what dressing room or what spot I get. It's how much money is there in it for li'l Joe, and so when they make up their mind that I don't work for no coffee and cake dough li'l Joe will go to work for them."

"Applesauce!" said some one in the gathering and another wisecrack was born. The flapper incorporated it into her routine of sassy answers, the collegiate passed it along to his townsfellows via letters and even the small-time and the big-time players "laughed off" a joke that failed to receive warm response from audiences by twitting themselves with "So we made applesauce!"

If anything makes the rounds of a community swifter than a rumor it is the wisecrack. After it has been swapped by a few wags and the local telegrapher hears it and likes it he gives it momentum by passing it along to the keyman at San Francisco, Canarsie, North Adams or Keokuk. Often a wisecrack becomes famous enough to make an entire "popular" song. "Yes, We Have No Bananas," for instance.

It is an ageless theory that there are only seven original patterns for all the jokes in the world. This may be true, but it is difficult to believe, for too many quips, puns, wisecracks and stories have been conceived out of situations. A concrete example is herewith set forth: The scene was a New York night club. Percy Hammond, the dramatic critic, was disparaging a newly built Broadway cinema theater, when Harry Thaw passed the table. "Speaking of that garish looking dump," growled Hammond, "reminds me that that guy Thaw killed the wrong architect!"

The nifty, as wisecracks or spontaneous remarks are sometimes called, drew a laugh and was recorded by a columnist the following day. Within the week other columns appropriated it, but it was never credited to the same wag. A fortnight later it was sold to a magazine and the next month the same gag was chronicled by a Hollywood correspondent for the Evening World, who wrote that it was pulled in front of the new Grauman theater out there by Al Jolson.

The story teller who appreciates good stories is the first to revolt at the person who "ruins" a good gag, which is show business for joke. True, not all of us are good at passing along stories, particularly when they demand dialect. Two of the highest paid dialecticians on paper in the world are amazingly disappointing in a parlor. On the other hand, there are comics whose dialects are delightfully contagious, but who miss the mark by a wide margin when they attempt to put dialect down on paper.

Perhaps one of the best joke-smiths in the East is a wit who is neither an actor, a Broadway habitue, nor a newspaper man. He is a lingerie salesman, by name, Pitzie Katz. He is a household word in the mercantile business and was formerly a vaudevillian. Numerous stage wits seldom purchase their stage material from authors, but rely on telegrams and letters from Katz, who keeps them supplied with his new fables just for the fun of it.

James Madison, perhaps, is better known in show business than Joe Miller, who, it is alleged, first compiled the best jokes in a book a century ago. Until Mr. Madison clicked out in Hollywood he was the parent of an annual book, sold for $1, which contained repartee, quips, jokes, monologues, dialogues and sketches.

Will Rogers is a puzzle to a lot of people who can't believe that he writes all his stuff. The fact is that Rogers does write his own material. No one has ever been able to supply the name of his "ghost writer" at any rate. Rogers cashed in heavily some time ago on a department syndicated in many papers. It was headed: "The Worst Story I Heard Today." It was a grand title, and the possibilities for material were limitless, for he could use anything.

Irvin S. Cobb's ability is too popular for blackmailing, but it is true, too, that he is often credited with stories that he merely passes along. At a cartoonists' dinner once at the Hotel Astor, Mayor James J. Walker said, in announcing Cobb: "You lads who make your living by the pen, now listen to a man who makes his by his brains."

Cobb followed with an ancient gag about the Hebrew who refused to pay a fare for his little son "because he is only 4 years of age."

"Well," said the conductor, "he looks eight!"

"Can I help it if he worries!" was the retort.

That joke had been employed by almost every cartoonist in the room at least twice in his career. The mayor's introductory announcement was certainly out of order.

The allegedly new Scot gags are re-writes on old Jewish gags. The vogue for Scotch stuff began when a New York fire commissioner, newly appointed to the office, made a speech over the radio and told a few jokes on the Jews. It drew the fire of the aggrieved Hebrews and the local diplomats had a time of squaring matters.

The Scotch vote in New York being unimportant the quips are now told at their expense.

To set forth further that most gags grow out of situations, there was the tale about the Scotchman who wearied of witnessing other nations' flyers bring glory to their homelands. So he got a plane and planned to fly in it from New York to Glasgow. On the morning of the hop-off his wife asked him how many sandwiches to prepare.

"Make it only one," he replied, "I may never get there."

As a matter of fact that was exactly what Lindbergh told a friend just before his flight.

THE LOVELY LIAR : BY ROB EDEN

CHAPTER V

Poppy Prior, jilted by Ted, goes alone to New York rather than face her mother and sister. She arrives without money and decides to pawn her watch and ring. She is wearing what she considers a cheap rhinestone bracelet she found on the train.

The pawnbroker was oblivious to Poppy's presence. She might have been wood standing there for all the attention he paid her. His eyes were centered on the bracelet which his fingers were turning. Poppy thought his hands were shaking slightly, although she wasn't sure.

"What will you give me. . . " she began when he interrupted. "For this?"

"No; I don't want to sell that. It's valueless. The watch, and the ring, I mean."

He didn't answer at once, and when he did his voice was a mumble she couldn't understand. He was moving away, the bracelet in his hands.

"Please, I'm in a hurry!" And she was. She'd feel better after she had some money in her hands. She could look for a job.

Reluctantly the man came back, but he didn't put the bracelet on the counter. He held it with one hand, while he picked up the simple wrist watch with the other. Uncomfortable under his slow scrutiny of her face, her clothes, her purse that lay on the glass scratched counter, she turned her eyes away from him wishing she had gone to another place. This man was—queer. She was alone in the shop, too, she realized for the first time, alone except for him.

"My best price for the watch will be $5. For the ring say a dollar. Six for the two pieces." A rasping edge to his voice.

"For this" he held up the bracelet, when Poppy broke in.

"Nothing of course for that. It's worth only a few dollars."

"Well $6 for the other two. Is that all right?"

"No more?" Six dollars was so little, but then it was something, and for a moment she was too frightened to think of anything else. She knew that originally the watch hadn't cost Mrs. Prior very much.

"That's a good price, Miss. You wouldn't get as much any place else."

"I'll take it. My bracelet—" and she reached out for it. Almost as if he didnt want to return it, he gave it back, and in doing so her hand touched his for a moment. She shivered.

From his pocket he took two tickets, and a stub of a pencil . . .

"Your name and address?" Poppy gave them. He repeated what she had said and counted off six $1 bills from a roll of money. After she had snapped on the bracelet, the girl put the money in her purse. At least she had something to eat on until she found a job. Six dollars—that would last her until she had work. She'd use it sparingly. A dollar a day ought to do her—maybe less.

"Sure that's the right address, Miss?" the pawnbroker asked, consulting his slips.

"Of course."

He gave her an oily smile as she went out, and when the door closed after her with the tinkle of a bell he hurried to the telephone, her pawn slips still in his grimy hands.

A relief to be on the street again. Poppy thought as she hurried along. That shop had been so musty, and the man so peculiar. Funny how he had acted about the cheap bracelet. A display in a window caught her eyes, and she stopped. Barcelets, with the prices marked on them. Rhinestone—much like the one she had. Marked special, the small sign stuck near the front of the glass told her. Only a dollar. Cheaper than they were in Ashland. There were some necklaces to match the bracelets. Poppy thought she ought to get one as soon as she could afford it—to go with the bracelet. Not now, but later when she had a job. It would look well with her red evening dress.

"No. I don't want to pawn that. It's valueless. The watch and the ring, I mean.

She visited three employment agencies that morning, and sat down to lunch feeling discouraged. The tale was the same at all of them. Inexperienced help wasn't wanted. Now if she had had a business course, knew typing and shorthand, she could be placed right away.

How about a switchboard? No, she wasn't familiar with them. Filing? Not that, either.

She ordered only a ham sandwich for lunch, and came away from the restaurant hungry, a gnawing feeling in her stomach. The sandwich was so small, and had cost 25 cents. She couldn't afford any more.

Perhaps it wasn't going to be so easy to find a job after all . . .

More Trouble

After lunch she tried the department stores, one after another, until her feet ached, and her hopes grew lower every minute. Just now they were taking on no new girls. In a month when the sales began, they could promise her a job.

A month would do no good, but Poppy registered with them anyway. A month, when she needed work this minute. How could she pay her hotel bill? Buy her food, if she had no job? She had nothing left to pawn but her clothes, and she didn't want to part with them.

At four she started back to the hotel, discouraged, disheartened. She tried to keep in mind that this was only the first day she had looked for work, her very first day in New York. Tomorrow, she might have better luck. Find something right away. Tomorrow.

If only she knew someone in New York she could go to—someone besides Ted. Someone who would tell here what to do, how much she could hope for. It was lonely here in the city with so many people.

Was she just imagining that the clerk looked at her queerly when she asked for her key? That he seemed to want to speak, and didn't. At any rate he was some time finding the box which was right in front of his eyes, and finally Poppy had to point it out to him. He must be new to be so dense about the boxes. She was feeling sorry for him, as she stepped into the elevator, and gave her floor number to the white haired man who ran it.

Was he looking at her strangely? The car was going slowly—an old, out of date elevator. The man made her nervous with his staring. He hadn't taken his eyes off her since she had stepped in. He seemed a kindly soul, but she didn't like being stared at. Her face grew hot, and she wished madly that six would come. It came at last, and she waited while he fumbled at the door. Ages until he opened it.

"Miss—" then he checked himself.

Poppy paused in the hall. The door was still open.

"Yes," she was calmer now that she was out of the car.

"Some—oh nothing, Miss," and the door slammed in her face. She stood puzzled for a moment, then turned down the long narrow corridor. Her room was at the very end, around the corner, a small dark hole that looked out on a court. She couldn't be choosey, though, with so little money. Why, she didn't even know she could pay her hotel bill at the end of the week.

A murmur of voices came from somewhere. Her room? She stopped to listen. Foolish. The sound couldn't be coming from her room. It was empty, she knew.

Again she was imagining things. The key clicked in the lock, and she pushed open the door. No, she had been mistaken. The room was empty, but why hadn't the bed been made, the place straightened up?

Robbed!

And her clothes! Who had the right to take her things from her suitcase and strew them over the floor!

She was indignant as she started gathering up her belongings. Even her manicure case spread all over the dresser, scissors on the floor, her nail paste dug carelessly out of its tiny box, and plastered against the mirror. It was then that she noticed in the wastebasket, the box she kept her powder beneath it, dumped out as if it had been flour.

She'd been robbed! That was what! Robbed. A thief had been in her room, ransacked everything!

Answers to Questions

By FREDERIC J. HASKIN

This newspaper puts at your disposal a corps of trained researchers in Washington who will answer questions for you. They have access to the government departments, the libraries, museums, galleries and public buildings, and to the numerous associations which maintain headquarters in the nation's capital. If they can be of assistance to you, write your question plainly, and send with two cents in coin or stamps to The Record News Information Bureau, Frederic J. Haskin, director, Washington, D. C.

Q.—Where was Knute Rockne born?—E. B. C.

A.—He was vorn at Voss, Norway, March 4, 1888.

Q.—What ship was the first to enter the Panama canal after it was completed?—E. N.

A.—It was the S. S. Ancon.

Q.—When was the name "rayon" firse used?—T. R. E.

A.—The word rayon was first used as a textile term in the United States in 1924.

Q.—Do any birds fly so high that they cannot be seen?—J. C.

A.—Many birds do. Among them are, in particular, many varieties of warblers.

Q.—When was the first law promulgated relating to the adulteration of food?—C. D.

A.—The first protective food law on record was English and bears the date of 1203.

Q.—Who is the new governor-general of Australia?—M. L. M.

A.—Sir Isaac Alfred Isaacs, a native-born Australian and former chief justice of his country, was recently appointed by King George to that office.

Q.—Is air mail given preference over ordinary mail?—H. M.

A.—It is. United States post office department order issued Nov. 9, 1928, reads: Air mail must be given special attention and must not, under any circumstances, be handled as ordinary mail.

Q.—About how many people are in hospitals in this country?—K. O. B.

A.—In 1928 it was estimated that the average number of patients not including new-born babies in the hospitals of the United States was slightly over 700,000.

Q.—What is the name of the college that is to have a special course in waiting on table for students?—F. K.

A.—Ohio State university. The course is designed for training students who are working their way through school by this method.

Q.—Can a person detect the presence of radium?—N. V. M.

A.—The Geological Survey says that there is no simple test for radium ore that can be made by the inexperienced. The ore can be readily and easily determined by one having experience with the use of a delicate electroscope.

Q.—What church in New York City is known as the Actors' chapel?—E. B.

A.—St. Malachy's church on Forty-ninth street, just west of Broadway, is so designated. It has recently been remodeled and enlarged. The church is attended largely by theatrical people, members of the sporting world, and other residents of the surrounding hotel district.

Q.—Is there a standard music score for the blind?—D. S.

A.—Negotiations to develop an international system of music notation have been going on for some time and beginning Jan. 1 the Braille Press has put into effect a standardized system so that musicians of any nation may be able to read the music of any other country.

Q.—Please describe the G-38.—W. W. A.

A.—The G-38, Junkers landplane, is 75½ feet long and has a wing spread of 147¼ feet and four motors. It has a cruising speed of approximately 125 miles per hour and is made of duralumin. The two 400-horsepower engines, Junkers L-8 and two 800-horsepower engines, Junkers L-88, are inside the wing where they can be adjusted while the plane is in flight. The weight of the ship empty is 28,600 pounds; laden, 53,800 pounds.

Q.—If a tree were to fall, and there were no ear to hear, would there be any sound? I know that is an old question, but I'd appreciate having the answer repeated.—J. G. F.

A.—The word sound is used in two senses. From the viewpoint of the psychologist, sound is a sensation; from that of the physicist, sound is that form of vibratory motion which may be perceived by the ear. In the case of the falling tree, there would be no sound in the sense in which the word is used in psychology, but as it is used in physics there would be sound, because the tree in falling would set up vibrations of the air which would be capable of affecting the ear, if one were present. This explanation is from Henderson's "Physics in Everyday Life."

Carrots and Carrotin

The carrot has long enjoyed a reputation for being a wholesome and healthful vegetable, but nowadays clever cooks are learning many new and attractive ways of preparing it.

A long time ago the carrot leaves or green fronds were used to ornament the heads of court ladies. We do not now use the carrot leaves in this way, but we often use shredded carrots and leaves to dress up and ornament other foods. For example, a few shredded carrots in a vegetable salad make it much more attractive to the eye and more tasteful. While carrots play an important role in salads, they are still at home in stews, soups, meat loaves, puddings and a variety of other dishes. Fortunately, the carrot is one vegetable which is obtainable practically the entire world over, even during seasons when other vegetables are scarce.

Carrots may be classed with the non-starchy vegetables when they are small, a time when they also have the sweetest flavor and are the most tender. They contain the alkaline elements of iron, lime, sodium, magnesium and potash, and also from 5 per cent to 10 per cent of sugar. The yellow coloring matter which they contain is called carotin, which is sometimes extracted from them and used to color butter or margarine. This yellow coloring matter is also contained in sweet potatoes and yellow squash and is so closely allied to vitamin A that it is almost inseparable.

If a large quantity of carrots or other foods containing this yellow pigment are used, there is a tendency of tinting the skin to a slight yellowish color, especially the palms of the hands. This is so slight as not to detract from one's appearance but seems to be useful, especially with people who do not tan readily.

In buying carrots, choose the smallest you can find, for they have the least starch and the best flavor. It is better not to scrape the carrots, but to wash and scrub them well, as this method saves the valuable mineral elements which lie just inside the skin. Unless you are preparing them for a soup, cook in the minimum amount of water. Butter serves very well for a seasoning. Carrots combine well with any other food. Carrots are now canned, and if you prefer, you may buy them in this form. They are equally wholesome either cooked or raw. They are so mild and sweet that they are one of the first vegetables which may be mashed and fed to babies.

There are many good reasons why carrots should be served often. They add color to the meal, they do not cost much, they provide alkaline ash in the body which counteracts acidity, provide the iron needed for our blood, mineral for teeth and bone. They afford bulk, counterbalance the heavier foods, and last, but not least, they have a bland, sweet taste which almost everyone enjoys.

Tomorrow I will give you some carrot recipes.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Removing Thyroid Gland

Question—R. G. asks: "When all of the thyroid gland is removed does the patient become prematurely senile? I am deeply concerned about my daughter who was operated on for goiter. Her health has been failing ever since. She has suffered a complete nervous breakdown, followed by fits of insanity and despondency. She has become gray, shuns amusements, is often fretful, and has developed the slow movements of a very old person. I do so want your advice."

Answer—If all of the thyroid gland is removed the patient generally dies within a short time, but if only a portion of it is removed it is possible that enough remains to supply the need. However, a lack of thyroid secretion does produce premature ageing and may cause some mental disturbances. Your daughter may have some other condition as well as the thyroid trouble, but, of course, it is impossible for me to diagnose her case without first having the opportunity of examining her.

Nursing Mother

Question—Mother asks: "Are there any rules for a nursing mother to follow in regard to her diet?"

Answer—There are many rules which are important for a nursing mother to follow. She has a double duty; first, the obligation to her child, and then the duty to herself to keep well at this time and avoid injury to her system caused through feeding her baby from her own blood without supplying it with the necessary elements to replace and repair tissues. I have written many special articles on this subject and will be glad to send them to you if you will write again, giving your full name and address on a large stamped envelope.

RESERVE AIR BASES

WASHINGTON.—Two naval reserve air bases are to be established during the present year at St. Louis and Miami for the purpose of training pilots for the navy. Authorities of both cities have arranged to provide landing fields, hangars and barracks without cost to the navy. These bases are being provided to increase the number of pilots being trained for the navy.

The next Wisconsin legislature will be called on to vote on compulsory automobile insurance, according to Fred M. Wilcox, state chairman of the industrial commission.

GOLDEN DEFEATS VON ELM FOR AGUA CALIENTE GOLF TITLE

The Rambler's Corner

By FRED THOMPSON

So Galveston replaces Waco in the Texas league. Despite the many statements approving the transfer of the franchise, when the deal was consummated something back in our consciousness told us there was something fishy about it. An eager searcher for the truth, we pored through the record books, a church hymnal and the encyclopedia, but found nothing awry; and then, in a flash, it came to us. The name! Yes, I guess they'll retain it. The Galveston Sandcrabs.

Congratulations to Floydada

The seniors of the Floydada High school are great boosters of football, and last year produced a corking good team, yet there doesn't appear evidences of deterioration either in the realm of scholarship or that of ethics.

The seniors, in fact, seem to revere their school to the extent that they are sponsoring an athletic field, including a football gridiron and baseball diamond, and a track, according to news stories. In order to do this, the class voted to dispense with a high school annual. They decided to leave a real monument behind them, not a bunch of photographs of themselves.

No doubt Floydada will back the thing to the limit in a financial way, and probably a nice sum of the money to be used in the project will be from receipts at last year's football games and other events.

A good football field is a tremendous asset to a school, not only because it saves the players many a rude jolt, but because it invites patronage. More patronage means more money that the school can use in fostering programs of all kinds. It can equip its gymnasium, it can add to its library (say, for instance, the Collected Works of H. L. Mencken), it can, if it so desires, distribute free chewing gum.

The gridirons in this section are only fairly good. Electra has a peach, dedicated last season. Chillicothe's is an excellent field, but there are no seats for the customers. So far as a playing field is concerned, Nocona's is excellent—it sheds water in rainy weather like a balloon in a cloudburst. But in Nocona, as in Chillicothe, there are no seats except for the team and the sports writers, and the latter have to write a week in advance to make arrangements for a rocking chair, or something.

Even Olney has a sad gridiron. I understand the city plans a better. It needs it. The field is hard and rugged and terrible on the hard-tackling players. Vernon, I understand, has a good field.

The best that I've seen in these parts is the Graham field. It is a grassy layout, and is equipped with bleachers. When and if the Olney Cubs are dethroned, I hope the crown goes to Graham for the reason that I like to er—er, you know, take the girl friend along to some of these games. If it's to Graham we go, she'll have a seat. If not we will have the gruesome duty of telling the young lady to perch upon the earth, as we did at Nocona.

Wichita Falls is fortunate in having Spudder park at its beck and call for the home games. Though the baseball diamond interferes greatly in bad weather, it is noticed not so much in good weather; and the grandstand facilities are to be equaled nowhere in this region.

What Wichita Falls does need, however, is a practice field. The lot in the rear of the high school is as rough and crude as some unexpurgated novels written by police reporters. After every hard practice scrimmage last season, most of the squadmen came in aching and torn.

Also, it is too exposed. The rabble infest it horribly when the team is practicing. So much so that one or two times last season Coach Holton had to drive them off. Not that the mentor objected to their witnessing the drills. So long as they stayed out of the way of operations, the onlookers were perfectly welcome, as Holton reiterated time and again. Again, secret drills are impossible. The team has to use Spudder park whenever Holton wishes to whisper in the players' ears.

About a month's work of hauling soft dirt and re-sodding, and erecting a board fence around the field, and the stretching of a wire around the actual gridiron would make it an ideal scrimmage ground. The fence would insure secrecy when secrecy is desired. With the gates open, the encircling wire would keep such pests as sports writers off the grid when the practice was at its height. And the imported sod would make it easier for the player to hit the earth. Who knows? Eventually we might erect bleachers and stage our high school games there, on a real gridiron where in wet weather we wouldn't have to watch our players bogging up in mud on a baseball diamond.

Basket Ball Rules Discussed at Lubbock

Special to The Record News.

LUBBOCK, Texas, Jan. 18.—P. W. Cawthon, coach at Texas Technological college, directed a conference on new basket ball rules at a meeting here Saturday of West Texas coaches of both boys and girls basket ball.

Sixty-two West Texas coaches braved threatening weather to come in for the conference. The meeting was used for making of basket basket ball schedules and arranging for officials as well as for a general conference on new rules. Spencer A. Wells, director of the Lubbock Chamber of Commerce made the welcoming address to the assembly and Mack Saxon, coach of Texas School of Mines at El Paso, responded. Chas. A. Guy, editor of the Lubbock Avalanche, Miss Johnnye Gilkerson and others spoke at the luncheon.

A survey showed 73 per cent of the students at Luther college, Decorah, Iowa, were of Norwegian descent.

Approach and Green Shots Carry Winner Over

By BRIAN BELL

AGUA CALIENTE, Mexico, Jan. 18. (AP)—Steady John Golden, playing typical Golden golf, today won the Agua Caliente open championship, defeating George von Elm, former amateur champion, by four strokes in an 18-hole playoff. Golden scored a consistent, but not sensational 75, three strokes over par, while the more spectacular Von Elm fell back to 79, with an erratic 41 on the second nine holes.

After finishing the 72-hole championship proper in a deadlock at 293 yesterday, the stock, dark-browned Golden and fast striding, Blonde Von Elm set out today to decide who should have the honor of wearing the title of Agua Caliente champion for a year and own outright a diamond studded medal, emblematic of the crown.

Heavy Wind Blows

The long hard golf course in the Tijuana valley, where the Spanish conquistadors, Cornado and Cabrillo may have tramped on their caravels in the olden days when no golf was played in Mexico, is a severe test of the game when the wind is reasonable. When it blows, the long holes are longer and the shorter ones are trickier.

As the professional and the "business man golfer" teed up today at the first hole the wind was whipping the yellow and red flags on the greens into straight lines and it required no expert at the game to say no one would be home on the long holes in two strokes. Referee Walter Hagen had some trouble holding the flapping flags as the players putted.

Golden's approaching and putting won the title for him and one of the reasons his 2-year-old daughter, Rose Marie, who watched him hole out at the home hole, will have the beautiful medal pinned on her blouse, is that her father had no three-putt greens. Four times George had to have three putts.

Putting won the tie for John over the championship route, for he had only nine three-putt greens in 90 holes.

Leads at Start

The Connecticut pro was out in front with a birdie four at the first hole, his most sensational performance of the day. This gave him a two-stroke lead, for Von Elm started with a six. The 485-yard first hole today was a terror with the wind sweeping up the fairway dead in the faces of the players. Neither could get close to home in two but Golden sent his third shot five feet from the cup, while Von Elm left himself a long putt from the back of the green and down the wind. John sent his putt spinning home while George ran well past and missed coming back, to be two strokes down after one hole.

The former amateur recovered a stroke at the third, a one-shotter where Golden was trapped from the tee and every hole was halved in fours until the eighth, another nightmare when the wind blew toward the tee. Each player hit three full woods on this 550-yard test and still Golden was not on, while George's spoon, his best shot of the day, reached the green, and in two putts he has his par while John for the first time in the round, had to slip a stroke over par.

Regains Stroke

The pro regained the stroke, however, at the ninth, a one-shot hole, where both were trapped but Golden came from the sand close enough to hole his putt and start the second nine a stroke in the lead.

George started the second nine as he had the first by taking a six at the 10th, where his second was trapped and he sent his ball spinning over the green from the hazard. Golden was down with a regulation four. Von Elm lost another stroke at the 225-yard seventh hole where he missed the green, fully 100 yards with his tee shot while Golden was on the putting surface. George getting down in four to three for Golden.

Golden's advantage was increased to five strokes when Von Elm took three putts at the 12th, but George recovered one with a six-foot putt for a birdie three at the 14th.

John reached the 17th tee without a serious error charged against his game and with a four stroke lead and two holes to go, seemed to ease up. Von Elm could have cut two strokes from the lead with a couple of pars, but George, too, was tired and the last two holes were played in six-five each, two over.

Given $10,000 Prize

At the Agua Caliente race track this afternoon Wirt G. Bowman, president of the Agua Caliente company, presented Golden with a check for $10,000 and another check for $3,500 to Von Elm, later John and George will cash the checks and divide the accruing $13,500 into equal parts of $6,750.

Father of Former Spudder Player Dies

CORSICANA, Texas, Jan. 18. (AP)—Charles Ruth, 68, native of Germany and resident of Navarro county 45 years, died at his home here today. Survivors are his widow and four sons, among them Adolph Ruth, formerly pitcher for the Wichita Falls baseball club of the Texas league.

Ruth was spotted by the Spudders in Corsicana and brought here in 1920. He alternated at second base and on the mound that year and was retained part of the 1921 season. He is not at present in professional baseball, according to League President J. Alvin Gardner.

Financing of Church Teams to Be Discussed

Representatives of the Church and Sunday school leagues will meet tonight at the First Methodist church annex to discuss ways and means of financing the two organizations the remainder of the season. One representative from each team in the league is expected to be present and the meeting will be open to interested citizens. Lack of support of the cage sport has made disbandment of the leagues probable. Ross Edgemon, First Methodist athletic director and organizer of the leagues, said.

Frogs and Mustangs Co-Favorites To Porkers' Well-Won Cage Throne

By GAYLE TALBOT JR.
Associated Press Sports Writer

DALLAS, Jan. 18. (AP)—Impressive victories scored by Texas Christian and Southern Methodist over the Texas Longhorns and the Texas Aggies' second night win over the champion Arkansas Razorbacks featured the second week of the Southwest conference cage campaign.

As a result of their lopsided triumphs over the Longhorns, the two North Texas quintets stood out as the only undefeated units in the race and co-favorites for the championship. Arkansas' loss to the Aggies just about obviated the Porkers' chance to make it six straight conference titles.

Steers Flop in North

Few times in the school's history has a University of Texas team taken two such beatings as marked the Steer's upstate invasion. Texas Christian, again led by its brilliant sophomore center, Adolph Deitzel, knocked the visitors off 40 to 19 Friday night at Fort Worth, Southern Methodist's high powered five completed the rout of the Longhorns, 51 to 32 here last night.

Credited with having a fair sort of team, Texas was completely outclassed in both games. With Dietzel banging in 18 points, the Christians simply played rings around Coach Walker's pupils, and it was much the same here last night. Employing a long passing game that bordered on the sensational, Southern Methodist overcame an early Texas lead to win with ease. Williams, Methodist forward, scored 21 points before he went out on fouls. Reynolds, center, contributed sixteen.

Fans and officials who watched Texas Christian smother the Longhorns came away convinced that the Frogs would romp through to the title with ease. One well known official ventured the opinion they would not lose a game. But after the same critic saw the Mustangs anihilate the same team last night they were not so sure.

Aggies Stop Champs

After dropping their first at Fayetteville, 20 to 19, the Aggies came back last night to stop the five-time champs, 37 to 34. Using a revamped lineup, the Farmers jumped into an early lead and held it all the way. Arkansas put on a furious rally in the last five minutes that scored 10 points, but was nipped by the gun. It probably was the Razorback's last bid to retain the crown. Captain Hoke scored 13 points to lead the Aggies to victory.

Rice, meantime, finally broke into the win column by downing the Baylor Bears, 37 to 33, in an overtime fray at Houston. The score stood 33-33 at the close of the regular period, and in the extra five minutes the Owls sank a field goal and two free throws while holding Baylor scoreless. Sellers, with 13 points, was the scoring star for the winners.

This week's schedule:

Tuesday: Baylor vs. Southern Methodist, at Dallas.

Friday: Arkansas vs. Texas Christian, at Fort Worth.

Saturday: Arkansas vs. Texas Christian at Fort Worth; Baylor vs. Texas at Austin; Rice vs. Texas A. & M. at College Station.

The standing:

Team—	W.	L.	Pct.
Texas Christian	2	0	1.000
Southern Methodist	2	0	1.000
Arkansas	4	2	.667
Texas A. & M.	1	1	.500
Texas	1	3	.250
Rice	1	4	.200
Baylor	0	1	.000

RICE FORWARD PACES INDIVIDUAL SCORERS

DALLAS, Jan. 17. (AP)—Having run up 43 points in five games, Dixon, Rice Institute forward, was pacing the individual scorers in the Southwest conference basket ball race at the close of the second week's play. Kenny Holt, Arkansas center, was just a step behind with 42 points in six games.

The real leaders, however, were Rhea Williams, Southern Methodist forward, and Adolph Dietzel, Texas Christian center, who had scored 41 and 39 points, respectively, in two games played. At that pace they promised to far outdistance the field.

Williams missed a fine opportunity to set a new conference scoring record against Texas here Saturday night. With 22 points he was within four of the record set by Wear Schoonover in 1929, but went out on fouls in the middle of the second half.

Scoring leaders:

	G.	Fg	Ft	Pts
Dixon, Rice	5	17	9	43
Holt, Arkansas	6	18	6	42
Williams, S. M. U.	2	15	11	41

Frederick Bearcats Whip Carnegie, 34-16

Special to The Record News.

FREDERICK, Okla., Jan. 18.—Frederick Bearcats won their second conference game of the season here Friday night by taking the long end of a 34 to 16 count from Carnegie. The Bearcats, taking the lead in the opening quarter, paced the scoring throughout the game. Coach Bill Weaver's Carnegie basketeers found the Bearcat defense hard to penetrate and relied on shooting from the center court. Most of the shots were wild with Bearcat guards recovering.

Steinbock, forward and captain, led the scoring with 13 points, all scored in the second period. Burt, rangy forward, hit six goals from the field of play to score 12. Moore and Fondren played part of the game at forwards, with Moore looping two field goals. C. Billingsles held down the pivotal position the greater part of the game, getting the tip consistently and playing a tight defense. He was replaced in the latter part of the game by E. O. Billingsles, who has been on the injured list the last two weeks.

Pope, taking an effective part in the Bearcat's drive to score through Carnegie's five man set defense, held his man to one basket from his position of guard. He also contributed a field basket. Pritchard and Caldwell rounded out the squad with Pritchard playing the greater part of the game.

Riffe, Carnegie forward, led his team's scoring with seven points. Fowler and Captain Dudgen, forwards, were held scoreless by Bearcat guards. Queton and Rogers both saw service at forwards. Eaton, midget center, led his team's passing attack the entire game. He contributed three free tosses. Breckenridge, Owens and Hall completed the team as guards with Breckenridge scoring four points.

Referee—Bill Blankenship, Central.

CLUB ON BLOCK AT NASHVILLE

Owners Forced to Sell To Satisfy Claims

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Jan. 18. (AP)—The Nashville Baseball club of the Southern association goes on the auction block tomorrow.

The Fourth and First National bank, Nashville, and the receivers for Caldwell and company, advertised the sale of the club to satisfy certain claims, the nature of which were not announced. Major Rutledge Smith, one of the receivers for Caldwell and company, said it was the club and not the Nashville Baseball association that is to be sold.

The controlling stock of the Nashville Baseball association was pledged by Caldwell and company as collateral to secure deposits of Hardeman county, Tennessee, and these shares presumably are in the hands of Hardeman county.

10-SEMESTER RULE OPPOSED

High School Coaches Voice Protests

CORSICANA, Texas, Jan. 18. (AP)—Opposition to the proposed 10 semester rule was voiced by the executive committee of the Texas High School Football Coaches association at its annual meeting here today.

The rule, intended to make ineligible for athletic competition any student who has been in high school over 10 semesters, was invoked by the interscholastic league a year ago and was in effect part of the last football campaign. It was suspended temporarily, however, when many coaches complained it worked a hardship, with the understanding it would be placed in effect against next year.

The committee also recommended that superintendents hereafter refuse to sign transfer slips from their school to another when there is any evidence of proselyting. The proposal to re-district the state, making 16 divisions instead of eight, was approved by the committee.

These attending the meeting were Johnny Pierce, Corsicana, president; Jimmie Kitts, Athens, vice president; Winton Noah, Oak Cliff, Dallas; Jess Kellam, Lufkin, Jim Reese, Greenville, and Ted Jeffries, Corsicana.

Play-Off Inevitable in County Loop as Four Teams Tie for Lead

By PAT WILEY
Record News Correspondent

IOWA PARK, Texas, Jan. 18.—The Wichita County Interscholastic league basket ball race is in a tight place with Iowa Park, Valley View, Clara and Cashion tied for first place, Burkburnett in second place and Fairview in the cellar.

Last week's results show that the Hawks are much improved over their original start by defeating the Burkburnett Bulldogs, 16 to 8, in a game in which the birds led in scoring all the way.

The Valley View Harvesters defeated the Fairview quintet in a 28 to 9 battle on the Harvesters' court in a very one-sided affair in which the Fairview delegation never made a showing or threatened the Harvesters at any time.

In this week's schedule Valley View tackles Burkburnett and is conceded the game but their chances are not as bright as they should be due to the fact that two of her most dependable players are out with injuries. While the Fairview delegation has not shown any remarkable playing during the season the Clara Greyhounds are not due to receive any stiff opposition in their coming fray with Fairview. The only game in any doubt is the Iowa Park quintet and the Cashion delegation. Both teams are in good condition and have made equally good showings in defeating the teams they have met.

Coach Bob Stowe, county athletic director, said he was expecting a three-way tie for top honors in the contests and that a play-off would be inevitable to decide the winner before the county tournament which is to be held in the near future. With only two more weeks of play in the cage loop no one team can be picked to be the winner of the play-off unless one of the top members goes stale.

Last Week's Results
Iowa Park 16, Burkburnett 8.
Valley View 28, Fairview 9.

The standings:

Team—	G.	W.	L.	Pct.
Iowa Park	3	2	1	.667
Valley View	3	2	1	.667
Clara	3	2	1	.667
Cashion	3	2	1	.667
Burkburnett	3	1	2	.333
Fairview	3	0	3	.000

This Week's Schedule
Cashion at Iowa Park.
Fairview at Clara.
Burkburnett at Valley View.

18 Members of Hollis Team Given Sweaters

Special to The Record News.

HOLLIS, Okla., Jan. 18—Eighteen of the Hollis Tigers received sweaters at the special assembly Tuesday morning at the high school. Fifteen of the 18 boys will be fighting on the gridiron again next fall for Hollis. The three which will be missing next fall are A. K. Whiteside, Jimmie Sims and Frank Rhodes. These will graduate in the spring.

TWO BIG SIX TEAMS IN TIE

Kansas and Nebraska Are Joint Leaders

KANSAS CITY, Jan. 18. (AP)—Kansas and Nebraska rank at the top of the Big Six basket ball standing after a week of play featuring the Jayhawkers' conquest of the Kansas Aggies and the defending champion Missouri Tigers' surprising victory over Iowa State.

One of the leaders will drop to second place Monday night when the Huskers and the Jayhawkers match forces in a game at Lawrence.

The Jayhawkers defeated the Aggies, 37 to 29, in a spirited contest at Manhattan last night.

Earlier in the week Kansas opened its conference campaign with an easy triumph over the Oklahoma Sooners, 44 to 22.

The Sooners, with an all-victorious record in six non-conference games, took their third straight beating from a conference foe last night, losing to Nebraska, 36 to 20.

Missouri furnished the upset by leading the Cyclones all the way in their game at Columbia last night. The score was 20 to 18.

"You Will Benefit Public Health"
Says
DR. J. F. X. STACK
Health Commissioner, City of Hoboken, N. J.

DR. J. F. X. STACK
212 GARDEN STREET
HOBOKEN, N. J.

June 17, 1930.

American Cigar Company,
111 Fifth Avenue,
New York, N. Y.

Gentlemen:

I have seen your advertising displays in the newspapers and on billboards, telling people about the harm spitting may cause and the dangers lurking in cigars when the tips are sealed with spit. Your efforts to teach the public and thus prevent suffering will do more than sell cigars. You will benefit public health, and for that reason I want to give my enthusiastic approval to your campaign.

As a health commissioner, I am interested in seeing information of this sort brought home to everybody. Human ills would be greatly lessened if every person knew what danger there is in spitting in public places and in using the tongue to seal or moisten anything in manufacturing. Your campaign is indeed a "Crusade of Decency" and my department wishes you success in your efforts.

You are welcome to use this letter in your plan of public education, if you wish, with the understanding that I am not publicly endorsing your product in preference to any other, but that I am heartily in favor of your campaign to better your industry by making it cleaner.

Very truly yours,
J. F. X. Stack M.D.
Health Commissioner,
City of Hoboken, N.J.

... one of 56 health officials from 56 different points approving Cremo's crusade against spit or spit-tipping.

Every smoker, every wife whose husband smokes cigars, should read Dr. Stack's letter.

"Who are the friends of 'Spit'?"

YOU MAY WELL ASK THIS QUESTION WHEN 56 IMPORTANT HEALTH OFFICIALS HAVE WRITTEN SO STRONGLY AGAINST THE EVILS OF SPIT OR SPIT-TIPPING.

Dr. Stack writes: "I am heartily in favor of your campaign to better your industry by making it cleaner."

The war against spit is a crusade of decency. Join it... Smoke Certified Cremo—a really wonderful smoke—mild—mellow—nut-sweet! Every leaf entering the clean, sunny Cremo factories is scientifically treated by methods recommended by the United States Department of Agriculture.

In this period of cold weather and cracked lips, above all insist on a cigar—free of the spit germ.

The Lovely Liar

She flew to the phone, then thought better of it. Perhaps she'd better look first before she reported the robbery, and see if anything had been stolen.

Hastily she went into the closet where her few dresses were still hanging on the hooks.

Although the contents of the suitcase—she hadn't had time this morning to put them in the dresser drawers—were on the floor, she thought everything was there.

A queer thief, though, emptying her powder into the wastebasket, smearing her red nail paste on the mirror.

She was about to pick up the phone to report the condition of the room, when a loud knocking sounded at the door. She hung back the receiver, and went to open it. Two men who had been standing the hall brushed past her into the room.

"Miss Prior?"

"Yes—are you from the hotel? My room's been ransacked, but I don't miss anything—"

"No, we're not from the hotel. We're detectives. Sorry if we messed up your room, but we had our orders." One of them spoke up.

"You? I don't understand—"

"We're looking for that bracelet you're wearing," the other said, pointing to the bauble which was clasped around her wrist.

"I still don't understand—"

"Well, you're under arrest, Miss Prior. Better come along quietly. We knew you were wearing the bracelet, but we thought the rest of the boodle was here in your room."

"Under arrest!" Poppy sank back on the untidy bed.

"Yeh. We've been lookin' for that bracelet for a month now—"

"But—"

"Come along. We haven't all night."

And before the girl knew where she was going one of them had her by the arm and was piloting her out of the room.

CHURCH TEXTS LACK FERVOR

Martin Urges Return to Old Time Preaching

The return of old-fashioned evangelistic sermons to the program of modern church services wes advocated by Judge P. A. Martin in his talk before the Men's class of the Floral Heights Methodist church Sunday morning.

In speaking on "John the Baptist" Judge Martin said: "I think we need some of this sort of preaching, from the lips of men to whom the Word has come with the certainty that it came to John in the wilderness of Judea and I think that some of the old time texts should be preached from again."

His lecture, in part, follows:

"We come today to study the ministry of John the Baptist, that strange, uncanny creature of the wilderness clothed in the skins of animals and living on locusts and wild honey, the son of the Priest Zacharias and Elizabeth and cousin of Jesus, a Nazarite from his birth, a child of the desert, as we learned two weeks ago. We have already learned of his birth and his early life and now we come to the time when he came forth into the country about Jordan, preaching 'the baptism of repentance for the remission of sins.'

Plain Spoken

"Out in the wilderness a strange thing happened to him. Somewhere there, Luke says, 'the word of God came to John.' Just how it came we are not told, but however the divine call was made, he promptly obeyed and began at once the delivery of his message. That message was short and simple and strictly to the point. He did not seek popularity. He did not mince words, sidestep or falter in the face of his hearers. He called them a "generation of vipers' and pronounced the spiritual doom of all who did not repent and 'bring forth fruits meet for repentance.' He denounced the king on his throne for his sins and closed his short ministry in jail for his plain speaking and was beheaded to please the fancy of a dancing girl, instigated by her adulterous mother. From a purely worldly standpoint his life was a failure, but from the standpoint of a follower of the Christ he was Israel's last great prophet and his message comes ringing down through the centuries as the true Word of God. The scriptural account of his ministry is all too short; we would like to know more of it. But enough is said for us to know that great multitudes from the Holy city as well as from all the country round about went out to hear him and multitudes were baptized with his baptism, repenting of their sins. We know that there in the hill country of Judea and in the groves that line the course of the river Jordan a mighty revival of religon was held under his preaching. Some of them even thought that he was the hope of Israel, the promised Redeemer but he at once put a stop to this inquiry by telling them that he was but a forerunner of one whose baptism would be with the Holy Ghost and with fire. And as he preached and baptized in Jordan, one day there came one to be baptized; a young man from Nazareth upon whom there descended from heaven the shape of a dove and a great voice from the skies said: 'thou art my beloved son; in thee I am well pleased' and it was given to John to be the first man to announce 'Behold, the lamb of god which taketh away the sins of the world.' This was the crowning act, the culmination of his great ministry.

Old Time Revival

"We often wonder if the day of great religious revivals like the day of miracles has passed. There are those who tell us that it is no longer possible to move a mighty concourse of people to repentance and that in this more enlightened age men are to be brought to Christ by the slow method of accretion rather than by the more radical methods of the long ago. We are told that people no longer mourn over their lost estate and no longer rejoice in the realization of a new birth and it has been a long, long time since any of us have seen such things. It has become a sort of sacred memory. Perhaps we are old-fashioned, but I am sure that there are some of you who would love to see and hear and feel the effect of an old-time revival. And if the prophet came fresh from the presence with the Word of God in his heart and on his lips, we would hardly resent being called a 'generation of vipers,' or anything else. These people John the Bap preached to were touched and asked what shall we do" And he had a word of advice for each class, as to the fruits they should bring for repentance. He seems to have told all the people one thing in particular that is peculiarly applicable to present day conditions: 'He that hath two coats, let him impart to him that hath none; and he that hath meat, let him do likewise.'

What a sermon that would have been in Washington last week to the man who spent $50,000 on a debutante party for his daughter lasting all night, while in the same block hundreds of hungry men, women and children stood for long hours of the night in a bread-line seeking the loaf of charity. There was nothing soft and soothing about John's preaching. I imagine he would have been a very unwelcome guest at this coming out party in our capital city; perhaps he would have enjoyed as little popularity in the home of this multi-millionaire as he did in the palace of King Herod.

"I think as a people we need some of this sort of preaching, from the lips of men to whom the Word has come with the certainty that it came to John in the wilderness of Judea: and I think that some of the old-time texts should be preached from again.

"These texts have somehow become unpopular in these modern days, and yet, in days gone by I have seen great congregations of people moved profoundly by such preaching and the altars filled with repentant people, seeking the 'Peace which passeth all understanding,' as the multitudes did in the days of John the Baptist and as they did when Peter preached at Pentecost. I know I am old-fashioned about this, but somehow I cannot help believing that the plain, frank presentation of the gospel is the most attractive preaching after all. We need to be told of our sins and warned to repent."

Wheat Acreage Gains On Hall County Farms

Special to The Record News.

MEMPHIS, Texas, Jan. 18.—According to County Agent E. W. Thomas, there has been more acreage planted to wheat in Hall county than in its history. It is estimated that 15,000 acres have been planted, the larger percentage being planted for pasturage purposes. Thomas estimated there will only be about 1,000 acres left for harvesting.

The planting of this amount of wheat has proved a great benefit to the farmers of this section, owing to the shortage of the feed crop this past year.

An international dormitory for students of all nationalities is to be built at the University of Chicago by John D. Rockefeller.

Today — At the Theaters

By ELEANOR FLEMING

MAJESTIC: "Raffles" with Ronald Coleman and Kay Francis. Charlie Murray comedy, "Movie Memories" advertisement and sound news.

STRAND: Richard Barthelmess, Mary Astor and Robert Edeson in "The Lash." Cartoon, Charlie Chase comedy and sound news.

STATE: "Way for a Sailor" with Wallace Beery, Jim Tully and John Gilbert. Short subjects and sound news.

GEM: Robert Montgomery and Dorothy Jordan in "Love in the Rough." Andy Clyde comedy.

From the outside, it looks as if Kay Francis might steal the show. In other words, the pairing of Miss Francis and Ronald Colman looked like a bad break for Colman. But inside—ah, that's a different story.

"Raffles" is the greater triumph for Ronald Colman than Kay Francis has ever achieved herself. His other mystery-comedies have been delightful, but none of them had a story so well-suited to his personality. "Raffles" is highly recommended for an evening's entertainment as being mysterious enough to hold interest and amusing enough to keep fingernails and peaceful slumber intact.

After the paean of joy over the improved type of advertising now used at the Strand, another is appropriate for the Majestic, for No. 2 of the Liggett and Myers "Movie Memories" series is run on the "Raffles" program. No. 1 of that series was used at the State several weeks ago. "Movie Memories" is worth paying for, and should sell as many Chesterfields as the Strand cartoon does bottles of Lysol.

And now that Wichita Falls theaters have improved their advertising, it is time to look to some other annoyances—for example that pieced screen at the Strand. There are two distinct up-and-down stripes across it which sometimes mars an otherwise perfect scene. This isn't the complaint of a fastidious person; the defect has been noticed by several patrons of the theater for some time and it is now worse than ever. When the lovely heroine gets in the wrong place, her nose looks Yiddish.

Directors Named For Memphis C.-C.

Special to The Record News.

MEMPHIS, Texas, Jan. 18.—At the breakfast of the chamber of commerce directors, the list of directors elected to serve during 1931 was read. The directors are F. N. Foxhall, W. C. Dickey, C. T. Matkin, Lyman E. Robbins, R. S. Greene, S. T. Harrison, Chas. Meecham, J. Claude Wells, Frank Phelan, B. E. Davenport, Lee Pope, and C. W. Flanery.

The board of directors voted to draft resolutions protesting the way in which trucks are hauling goods over the public highways in competition with the railroads, without proper taxation. A committee to draft the resolution and rush them to Austin for consideration by the legislature. This is in line with the policies of other chambers of commerce in this regard.

BRATTON TALKS ON SERVICE

Worship Only a Means To An End, He Says

"Unless we can say with the disciple Peter that 'it is good to be here' when we gather for worship, then we had better tear down our churches and raze our cathedrals to the ground," declared Rev. W. D. Bratton in his sermon Sunday morning at the Church of the Good Shepherd.

Unless the inspiration of communion with Christ be translated into service for mankind, the speaker continued, then Christianity is only half-fulfilled.

Speaking from the text, "And after six days Jesus taketh with Him Peter and James and John and leadeth them up into a high mountain apart by themselves, He was transfigured before them," Reverend Bratton said:

Significant Moment

"This was evidently a moment of intense spiritual significance as though Heaven and earth, time and eternity, had met in one supreme moment of spiritual exaltation. It was filled with meaning for Christ. It prepared Him for His sacrifice, and enriched His power for the ministry which lay before Him. But it was a significant moment too for His disciples. They saw it, they felt it and they wanted to continue to feel it. But the Master took them at once into the valley below.

"The incident and its sequel, in which a child was healed of disease, bid us think of the intimate relation between prayer and service, vision and action, faith and works. Peter was right in saying that it was good to be there. But we know for ourselves that it is also good for us to be here, to lose ourselves for the moment in worship, in union 'with God, the Three in One.'

"If one wants to know the 'why' of worship, he need not appeal to any Decalogue which tells him to 'keep holy' one day in seven, nor to any summary of the law which tells him that the first commandment is to 'love the Lord Thy God.' He will draw upon his own experience and to the experience of myriad others who have found their bread and meat as communion with Him. But the second is inseparably linked with it. 'Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself.' Not on either one or the other of these separately, but 'on these two commandments,' taken together, 'hang all the law and the prophets.'

"Our Lord's prayer always was a preface to service. He went from prayer to service, and from service to prayer. Herein I think has the church sometimes failed. It may regard itself, its worship, as an end in itself, rather than a means to an end. We may value the church too much for what it can do and is doing for ourselves rather than for what it can enable and inspire and empower us to do for others.

Short of Ideal

"We are living at a time when the word service is a commonplace, so that many are saying that it is the most overworked word in the English language. But the transfiguration scene and its sequel challenge us as to the nature and extent of service we are called upon to render. Certainly Christian service can be nothing less than the kind of service the Master Himself rendered, and certainly His service was to the whole nature of man.

"Every act and every ideal of service is good. But how often that which passes for service is far, far short of Christian because it ministers to only a part of man's nature, and because it fails to convey the spirit of Christ when the world is crying aloud in need for the whole of that which He came to bring. The purpose of the church is to 'put the hands of man into the hands of God.

"The vision of Christ on the mount is given not only for our own help and strength and inspiration, but that we shall go down from the mount, as He went down, to share the vision and to use it as we walk in the road with men."

C.-C. MANAGER AT BURK QUITS

Committee Named to Secure Lilly's Successor

Special to The Record News.

BURKBURNETT, Texas, Jan. 18.—The first meeting for the year 1931 of the board of directors of the Burkburnett Chamber of Commerce was held in the chamber of commerce office.

It was decided that the board will meet once a month instead of twice a month as heretofore. The meeting will be held the second Monday night in each month.

A motion was made and seconded that the resignation of B. H. Preston be accepted. Walter Duvall was unanimously elected to fill the vacancy for the year 1931.

The advisability of separating the chamber of commerce and the retail merchants association was discussed and it was finally agreed to leave it as it is now handled for the time being.

A motion was made by J. R. Chatham and seconded by H. D. Smith that the president appoint a committee to talk to the local grocery men in regard to buying their bread from the local bakeries. A committee of N. G. Goodlett, Jack Brumley and H. D. Smith was appointed to interview the local grocerymen.

The most important matter to come before the directors was that of considering the resignation of Manager E. H. Lilly. After quite a bit of discussion his resignation was accepted, effective Feb. 1.

A committee was appointed for the purpose of securing a new manager but no one has been named to take Mr. Lilly's place.

W. A. Roberts made a report on the status of the Burkburnett band. The matter of the chamber of commerce subscribing to the band was referred to the budget committee with Walter Roberts added to the committee.

Virginia Street Home Destroyed in Blaze

The home of S. L. Bradshaw, 1007 Virginia street, was destroyed by fire of unknown origin early Thursday morning. The blaze had made great headway when discovered. Members of the family were away at the time.

Officials of the fire department had not determined the extent of the loss Sunday but it was expected to amount to several thousand dollars.

Collegian Recalls "Herbrides Epidemic" During Quiz

Strange Answers Given to History Questions by Students

What a Junior college freshman doesn't know about current events had a splendid demonstration in some of the answers submitted in the final examination of the fall semester given by A. F. Edwards to his history classes. And what they do not know about local politics might hurt the feelings of some local politicians. For instance, more than one promising young woman when asked the name of our representatives in the state legislature, answered "Bob Long and Jimmy Allred."

Not so long since, a straw election, naming members of the group, was held in Miss Raborn's civics class. "Pappas" was one candidate for senator and when votes were counted "Pappas" was written on the board as winning state senator. When Mr. Edwards asked the name of a state senator one pupil answered in all seriousness, "Pappas."

With "Shepard and Parnell" our United States senators, as a young gentleman of some 17 summers announced, the senate might be in better condition. One pupil stated that "The senate is in a revolution over the three powers commission," and another wrote vaguely "The senate tried to build up a dominion equal to present power," to Mr. Edward's confusion.

Lucas came in for his share of condemnation on various counts. "Lucas accused Norris of voting a Democratic bill in congress," bravely ventured one client for promotion. Another hit nearer the bullseye when he said "Lucas is in bad because of blaspheming remarks he made against Norris," and a third with "Lucas is trying to run the government behind screens by means of men in representation," was suggestive of lese majeste of deepest dye. Possibly the most amusing, if the furthest from correct answer to the question given was "Lucas was accused of trying to drop prohibition."

The 18th amendment came in for mention in a knockout blow when a pupil stated positively, "The 18th amendment was held unconstitutional because it should be left to the states."

"The president and congress can't agree on who should be on the committee of big business powers;" stated a representative freshman, "Hoover wants to help the farmers, but can't get to it." A statement that however far fetched, may be true.

There's a curious confusion in the freshman mind, Mr. Edwards says, "between the Mikado, Machado, (president of Cuba), and even McAdoo. That "Machado is ruler of Japan" was an answer shown to prove his statement. And referring to other countries, one pupil in his examination paper, wished to know if Canada should put a tax on America,—leaving it to the imagination as to the reason for the suggestion.

Current topics are studied regularly in the history course given by Mr. Edwards, the Literary Digest serving as one of the reference books and open discussions following assigned topics. As a general thing, the pupils prefer the history book, being more conversant with its stated details than with current events.

Another interesting thing about the lack of knowledge of history according to Mr. Edwards, was noted when he taught classes in ancient and medieval history while working for his degree. Few students knew the stories of great men of ancient days. When asked leading questions concerning them, a favorite answer was "He was a representative man of his time."

Misinformation, however, is not confined to history. About the most amusing answers given in the recent examinations in the Junior college was in reference to the Hebrides. When asked to tell something concerning them, the pupil wrote "Hebrides, as a disease, was very prevalent in the Middle Ages."

First Presbyterians Welcome New Pastor at Two Services Sunday

The First Presbyterian church and Wichita Falls gave a warm welcome Sunday to Rev. George P. Horst, the new pastor of that church.

The auditorium was filled at both the morning and evening services and many in the audiences came forward at the close of the services to meet the new pastor.

His subject at the morning service was "Church Relations" and he discussed particularly the relations of a pastor with his congregation.

At the evening service his theme was "Redeeming Love." In this service the congregation of the Southern Presbyterian church joined with its sister church in hearing the new pastor.

For 10 years Rev. Mr. Horst has been secretary of the Southern division of the board of Christian education of the Presbyterian church U. S. A. with offices in St. Louis.

After the resignation of Rev. Mr. Horst to accept the call to the pastorate of the First Presbyterian church the general board decided to remove the St. Louis office to Chicago and during the week for the next several weeks Rev. Mr. Horst will return to St. Louis after the Sunday services here to supervise the removal.

On this account the reception planned by the congregation next Friday night has been postponed. However, Dr. Horst will remain over Monday of next week for the reception to be given him by the young people of the church.

'Life' Subject Of Science Sermon

The subject of the lesson-sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, Sunday was "life."

The golden text was from Matthew 19:17. "If thou wilt enter into life, keep the commandments."

Included in the services were the following passages from the Bible: "It is the spirit that quickeneth; the flesh profiteth nothing: the words that I speak unto you, they are spirit, and they are life" (John 6:63). "And this is life eternal, that they might know thee the only true god, and Jesus Christ, whom thou hast sent" (John 17:3).

The following citations from the Christian Science textbook,"Science and Health With Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy, were also read: "'This is life eternal,' says Jesus, is, not shall be; and then he defines everlasting life as a present knowledge of his Father and of Himself—the knowledge of love, truth and life" (page 410.) "Truth demonstrated is eternal life (page 289).

White Men Arrested After Negro's Death

Special to The Record News.

LAWTON, Okla., Jan. 18.—Corporal C. A. Derrick, negro military policeman, age 51 years died at the Fort Sill hospital at 1 o'clock Sunday from injuries received when he was struck by an automobile on the highway near Post field on the military reservation Saturday night. The accident occurred shortly after 7 o'clock. Derrick's skull was fractured in two places from the impact and Sergeant Johnson, negro, sustained a broken leg from being struck by the same car. Sergeant Crouch, white, also received a broken leg but was not otherwise seriously injured. All three injured men were taken to the station hospital.

Following investigation by the military police Lee Tiller, colored, and Sergeant Danfourth and Jack Frazier, whites, were placed in the guard house for investigation. Frazier is a civilian and is employed at the post exchange.

Derrick, Johnson and Crouch, together with a number of other men had alighted from the Fort Sill bus to inspect a car which had crashed into the bus, and which had been driving without lights. The car driven by Danfourth and Frazier, struck the rear of the crippled car and swerved off the highway into the crowd of men.

Derrick had been stationed in the negro section of Lawton as M. P. for a year. He has been in the army 27 years without a single mark against his record. He leaves a wife.

Should the Children Eat It?

PARENTS, particularly mothers, are paying a lot of attention to children's diet these days. For it is far more economical and pleasant to keep a child well by feeding him correctly than by nursing and doctoring him back to health.

Of course the doctor should be consulted regarding what a child should eat and what he should not eat. But do you realize that the leading manufacturers of food now seek the advice and approval of the leading nutritional authorities in the country, relative to the claims they make for their products in their advertising?

In other words, food advertisements are reliable sources of information regarding diet. They are based upon the results of the latest approved scientific discoveries about vitamins, minerals and roughage, in relation to vigorous bodies, clear complexions, sound teeth and properly regulated systems.

So read these advertisements carefully. Consult your doctor about them. Very often the advertiser invites you to do this because he has asked authorities, whom your doctor respects, about those advertisements first.
