Queen Adds Son To Royal House

LONDON (AP) — Queen Elizabeth II gave birth to a son today.

An announcement from Buckingham Palace said the 33-year-old mother and her baby were both "doing well."

The baby, first born to a reigning British monarch in 103 years, arrived at 3:30 p.m. (10:30 a.m. EST).

The Queen's third child and second prince, the baby takes second place in the line of royal succession to Prince Charles.

The official bulletin said:

"The Queen was safely delivered of a son at 3:30 p.m. today.

"Her majesty and the infant prince are both doing well."

It was signed by the Queen's gynecologist and obstretrician, John Peel, and her physicians, Sir John Weir and Lord Evans.

The last queen to have a baby while actually head of the monarchy was Queen Victoria. Her youngest child, Princess Beatrice, was born in 1857.

There were indications that Elizabeth II had undergone a somewhat difficult labor.

She felt the first birth pangs Thursday morning.

Peel, the 55-year-old gynecologist, had been with her almost constantly since then. He spent all Thursday night at the palace.

Assisting him at the delivery were Evans, Weir, and Dr. Vernon Hall, an anesthetist.

In the earlier stages of labor the queen was attended by two maternity nurses, Helen Rowe and Annette Wilson.

Nurse Rowe also acted as midwife at the births of Prince Charles, the heir-apparent, now 11, and Princess Anne, 9. Both were born before the Queen succeeded her late father, George VI, on the throne in 1952.

The new baby's name will be secret until his christening, perhaps a month from now.

The time-honored palace announcement that the doctors "are in attendance" upon the Queen came at 2:15 p. m. By tradition, this phrase signals the imminent birth of royal babies.

Sometimes — as in the case of Princess Anne Aug. 15, 1950—this announcement has followed the actual birth. On that occasion, the "in attendance" announcement was issued at 11:22 a.m. Anne had in fact been born 32 minutes before, at 10:50 a.m.

The explanation: The palace observed the protocol of notifying official London representatives of all 10 British Commonwealth nations before making the birth public.

But this time the birth came 1 hour 15 minutes after word that the delivery was under way.

Peel was joined shortly after 8 a.m. by her physicians, Lord Evans and Sir John Weir. Then, an hour and a half later, came the anesthetist, Dr. Vernon Hall.

The Queen's husband, Prince Philip, canceled an out-of-town engagement and spent the morning at the palace dealing with routine correspondence.

Chessman Case Felt In Finch Lockup

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Finch murder trial jury has been suddenly locked up for four days because, the judge says, "the air is tense."

A defense source suggested that one reason may have been the scheduled execution of Caryl Chessman. The convict-author was given a 60-day reprieve shortly after midnight.

After prosecution and defense ended their cases Thursday in the long trial of Dr. R. Bernard Finch and his pretty paramour, charged with murdering his wife, superior Judge Walter R. Evans made the announcement.

"You are all aware," he told the jury, "of the widespread publicity this case has received, and if I may use them term 'some pressure' in and around us, you can just tell the air is tense.

The judge said "for your own benefit, your own protection, the court is going to order at this time that the sheriff take you into custody and take care of you from here on."

"I'm sorry I didn't give you advance notice."

IN HOTEL

Sheriff's cars and family members brought jurors' overnight bags. The 12 jurors and 3 alternates were lodged in eight rooms on the 10th floor of a hotel—without radios, newspapers or television. Guards patrolled the halls.

Court attaches said it was the first time in 18 years a murder trial jury in Los Angeles County has been locked up before final arguments. The practice was fairly common in the 1930s but with World War II blackouts it became customary to send jurors home about 4 p.m.

"I think a good part of this is the Chessman thing," a member of the Finch defense suggested anonymously, without elaboration, after the judge ordered the jury locked up.

WIFE'S DEATH

The handsome, wealthy Dr. Finch, 42, and shapely Carole Tregoff, 23, are charged with murdering his wife last July 18 outside the Finch estate in suburban West Covina. The surgeon testified socialite Barbara Jean Finch, 36, was shot accidentally as they struggled over a pistol.

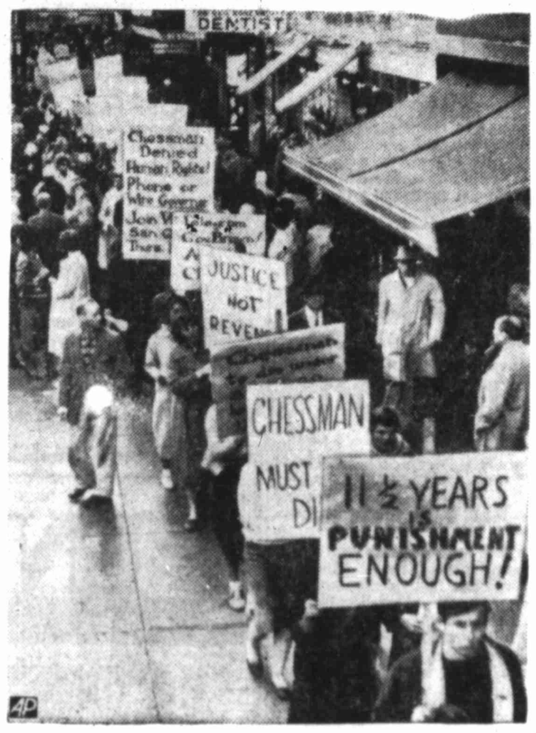

There was no trial session today because of a legal huddle in the judge's chambers. There will be no court Monday because of Washington's birthday. Final arguments are expected to start Tuesday. They may last most of the week.

The state charges that the doctor and his mistress plotted to kill his estranged wife so they could marry without losing a big chunk of the wealthy doctor's fortune in a divorce.

The last witness to testify Thursday was 19-year-old Marie Anne Lidholm, the Swedish maid in the Finch home, who was also the state's first major witness.

The prosecution called her to offer rebuttal to the doctor's story of the fatal night. She told of a half dozen ways in which she said the doctor's story was erroneous. Most of the points were minor.

Chessman Wins 60-Day Reprieve

Chessman Protest

Students carrying signs asking the life of convict-author Caryl Chessman be spared march on San Francisco's Market Street. Earlier the U.S. Supreme Court turned down Chessman's 15th appeal. The California State Supreme Court then turned down a clemency appeal by a 4 to 3 vote. Gov. Brown granted a reprieve but Chessman may yet die.

Threat Of Riots In Ike Tour Cited

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—Caryl Chessman, condemned to death 12 years ago as a perverted sex kidnaper, won his eighth reprieve from the San Quentin gas chamber early today after an appeal from the U.S. Department of State.

Gov. Edmund G. Brown, acting against all odds and in the face of a California Supreme Court recommendation opposing clemency, ordered a 60-day stay less than 10 hours before Chessman was scheduled to die.

The governor said he ordered the stay because of a State Department telegram warning that execution of Chessman might lead to hostile demonstrations in Uruguay and Brazil against President Eisenhower during the President's forthcoming visit to South America.

The governor, an avowed foe of capital punishment, also said he would make a special call to the state Legislature, which reconvenes Feb. 29, to consider abolition of the death penalty.

"If the people, acting through their elected representatives, determine that the present law should be continued in effect, Caryl Chessman will be executed under the law," Brown said.

ABIDE BY LAW

"I hope the Legislature will abolish capital punishment, but I, of course, will abide by its decision, whatever that decision may be."

Chessman, the most notorious American prisoner of modern times, had excited worldwide attention by his long struggle to escape death through legal technicalities.

With little knowledge of the basic evidence, hundreds of thousands of persons in scores of countries had demonstrated and petitioned that Chessman be spared.

Ironically, the State Department telegram which saved him was almost lost in the thousands of telegrams pouring into the governor's office, urging clemency.

Cecil Poole, the governor's clemency secretary, happened to open it, and the stay was ordered shortly after midnight.

BACK TO CELL

Chessman, scheduled to enter the gas chamber at 10 a.m., Pacific Standard Time was whisked out of the "waiting room" cell next to the green-painted gas chamber and returned to the death row cell on San Quentin's sixth floor—the cell which has been his home since July 3, 1948.

He had no comment, and Warden Fred R. Dickson announced that no one would be allowed to see the 38-year-old convict "for at least a week."

Only two hours before, Chessman had bade goodby to George T. Davis, his chief counsel, with the words, "George, you're shaking hands with a dead man."

Gov. Brown declined any oral comment but issued through his secretaries an announcement of the stay, in which he quoted the following telegram from Roy R. Rubottom Jr., assistant secretary of state for inter - American affairs:

"Through our embassy in Montevideo, the national council of the government of Uruguay has tonight (Thursday) brought to urgent attention of State Department grave concern of council over anticipated hostile demonstrations of student elements and others to Chessman execution when our President visits Uruguay March 2."

OTHER OPINIONS

In Washington, Rubottom said he sent the telegram after conferring "with my superiors" and, "there were other expressions of concern about the case, I think from Brazil."

Gov. Brown's announcement also said, "I want to give the people of California an opportunity, through the legislature, to express themselves once more on capital punishment.

"During this 60 days I will put the issue on a special call concurrent with the legislature's budget session."

The governor noted that the state supreme court had divided 4-3 against clemency and said that Californians were "clearly divided" on the issue of capital punishment.

Chessman, convicted of unpublishable crimes against women as the notorious "Red Light Bandit" of Los Angeles' lovers' lanes in 1948, is the author of "Cell 2455 Death Row."

Written in prison, that book, plus two others which did not sell so well, provided funds for his long legal fight.

15 APPEALS

His fight included 15 appeals to the U.S. Supreme Court and innumerable appeals to the whole gamut of state and federal courts.

Admittedly a habitual criminal, the hawk-nosed Chessman, now 38, was first arrested as a car thief at the age of 16. He served terms in reformatories and California prisons for robbery and other crimes. He had been on parole only a month when he was arrested in January 1948 as the "Red Light Bandit," so called because he used a red cloth over his car's spotlight to simulate a police car.

He was convicted in Los Angeles Superior Court of abducting two young women, and forcing them into acts of bestial depravity.

He was convicted on 17 counts, two of kidnaping with bodily harm, which carries the death sentence under California's Little Lindbergh Law. The 15 others ranged down to robbery, attempted rape and car theft.

No one died, but one of his victims is today in a mental institution.

MERCY REFUSED

Gov. Brown, who was state's attorney general during much of the time the Chessman case was in the courts, said at a special clemency hearing last October that the evidence of Chessman's guilt was "overwhelming." Brown refused clemency then.

Chessman himself insisted over and over again that he was not the red light bandit—a criminal, yes, admittedly, but not the sex terrorist.

Chessman acted as his own attorney in his trial, and through most of his early appeals. He taught himself enough law in prison to bring his case repeatedly before appellate courts.

With the money from his books, he managed to employ professional counsel in later years, although Davis said only Thursday that he personally had spent $5,000 on Chessman and never collected a dime.

The past four days were days of successive defeats for Chessman.

On Monday a three-judge panel of the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals refused to intervene. On Tuesday, an appeal to Justice Felix Frankfurter of the U.S. Supreme Court was rejected.

VOTED DOWN

On Wednesday the California Supreme Court voted 4-3 not to recommend that the governor extend clemency.

Only Thursday, the California Supreme Court by the same vote rejected a new plea for mercy.

The governor said that this put it entirely out of his hands. For under California law clemency to a previously convicted felon cannot be given without the high court's consent.

However, Brown still retained the disputed power to stay the execution, and this he did.

Chessman, seemingly assured and self-confident, had sent a telegram to the governor, urging him to do as his conscience dictated, and he sent a secret letter to the governor Thursday night. But to reporters at a press conference Wednesday he conceded that he believed there was nothing left for him but the green walled gas chamber.

He was in his bunk next to that chamber this morning when the word came—a 60-day reprieve.

Clyde McMahon Offers For School Board Re-Election

Clyde McMahon said today he is submitting his name for election to the board of trustees of the Big Spring Independent School District.

Under the rotation system of electing members, two terms expire this year, those of McMahon and Harold Talbot. Talbot already has filed for a place on the ticket for the election of April 2.

Actually, both men are seeking a first elective term. McMahon was appointed to the board after Joe B. Neely, elected in 1957, moved away from the city. Talbot was appointed to serve out the unexpired term of Omar Jones.

CLYDE McMAHON

Many business friends had asked McMahon to serve as a trustee for another term.

He has been active in public service work in Big Spring, just stepped down from the presidency of the Chamber of Commerce, and before that had served two years as president of the YMCA.

He operates the concrete business bearing his name.

McMahon told The Herald he simply had agreed to try to be of continued service in handling school policies if the people are willing for him to serve.

Top Steer Sells At San Antonio

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The grand champion steer of the San Antonio Livestock Show sold for $8,100 at auction today.

The 1,110-pound Hereford, shown by Lile Lewter, 15, of Lubbock, went to Piggly Wiggly groceries, who donated it to San Antonio's Boystown.

The reserve champion, an Angus steer shown by the Miller Angus Farms of Osceolo, Iowa, was bought by the Edger Tobin Aerial Survey firm of San Antonio for $2,500.

Lile Lewter is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Derward Lewter, Lubbock. His father was for many years county agent of Howard County during a period when an unprecedented string of grand-champion steers were shown by local exhibitors. Young Lewter, then a mere lad, started his feeding career here.

Stormy Weather Punishes Nation

By The Associated Press

Heavy snow, strong winds and rain lashed wide sections of the South and East today, a virtual repeat performance of winter's second violent climatic attack in less than a week.

The stormy weather, erupting in the Southland, swept northward into the East, following the pattern of the blockbuster which ripped across the eastern quarter of the nation last weekend.

Snow piled up more than a foot high in Kentucky and Tennessee and Virginia.

Tornadoes skipped across sections of Louisiana, Florida and North Carolina. Winds up to 80 m.p.h. pounded western Virginia, piling huge drifts of heavy, wet snow.

Gale-force winds battered the Gulf States and veered northeastward. Gale warnings were displayed along the Atlantic Coast from Daytona Beach, Fla., to Eastport, Maine.

Sections of Kentucky, Tennessee, North Carolina and Virginia were virtually paralyzed by the heavy snow.

The snow belt stretched from northern Alabama across much of the South. Moderate to heavy snow fell from eastern Tennessee and Kentucky northeastward over inland areas of the Northeast.

Property damage throughout the storm belt was extensive. Hundreds of autos and trucks were marooned.

Schools were closed in many states, including North Carolina, Virginia, Kentucky, Tennessee, Ohio and West Virginia.

Power and communication service was disrupted. At least three communities in eastern North Carolina were without power service. Tornadic winds hit Charlotte, snapped utility poles and caused thousands of dollars damage to parked autos.

The Weather Bureau posted warnings for moderate to heavy snow and hazardous driving conditions from southwest Virginia and eastern Kentucky northward through West Virginia, western Maryland, eastern Ohio, most of Pennsylvania and New York state into Connecticut. Snow was in prospect for New England.

Heavy rain pelted coastal areas from Boston to Philadelphia.

Strong winds, with a mixture of snow and rain, lashed the New York metropolitan area. Gusts of 50 m.p.h. ripped down power lines, signs and awnings and broke windows.

Wind gusts were clocked at 67 m.p.h. in a heavy rainstorm in Washington, D.C. Trees and power lines were toppled.

The cold air which covered the midcontinent behind the storm in the east fanned into Dixie, dropping temperatures below freezing. It was 15 below zero in northern Midwest areas but no heavy snow was reported.

Two Collisions Are Reported

Officers investigated two minor automobile mishaps Thursday. No injuries or excessive damage was reported.

Antonio H. Castillo, 508 N. Lancaster, and Humberto Hernandez, were drivers involved in a collision in the 100 block of Gregg.

A wreck at the Airport Rd. and U. S. 80 intersection involved J. T. Boney, 405 Sunset, and George Dewey Neill, 502 Scurry.

Ready

Maj. Gen. John B. Medaris, retired head of the Army's missile program, adjusts his glasses before testifying at a House Space Committee hearing in Washington. He urged Congress to set up a unified command within the Defense Department to run the nation's space effort.

Two Charged On Assault

Two men were charged in Justice of Peace Jess Slaughter's court late Thursday with assault with intent to murder. Each was released on $1,000 bond.

They are Bob and Charles Cameron of Muleshoe. The charges grew out of an altercation near the Top Hat Cafe in the 300 block of NW 4th.

C. K. Volkman was taken to Big Spring Hospital in a Nalley-Pickle ambulance following the scuffle. He was treated and released. Attendants said he received a cut on the forehead.

Witnesses told police they heard gun shots and empty cartridges were found on the scene. However, no gun shot wounds were reported.

Officers found a pistol in the Cameron apartment, but the men denied firing it. An officer said this morning that Volkman absolved the Camerons of responsibility for the disturbance.

Master Plan Unit To Meet Feb. 24

The next meeting of the Master Plan Steering Committee has been set for Feb. 24, according to A. K. Steinheimer, city manager.

Marvin Springer, city planner, will be in the city to discuss a proposed zoning map. The meeting will be held in the police department classroom at 7:30 p.m.

It is the second meeting of a long series for this appointive committee and is designed to familiarize Big Spring residents with the master plan program.

Steinheimer To Be Speaker

A. K. Steinheimer, city manager, will be one of the speakers at the 42nd annual Texas Water and Sewage Works Assn. short course, to be held at A&M College. The meeting is scheduled between Feb. 28 and March 4.

Steinheimer will discuss how industrial wastes affect the Big Spring sewage disposal plant. He plans to attend several other sessions of the meeting, but he will not be in College Station for the entire program.

House Probers Seek Writers Of AF Manual

WASHINGTON (AP) — House investigators are out to identify Air Force officers who approved training manuals detailing dog-washing and martini-mixing and describing the clergy as infiltrated by Communists.

"We're not out simply to make trouble for the people who wrote these ridiculous books," Rep. Melvin Price (D-Ill) said. "They were the mechanics. We want to find out where the fault lies for the final approval. Obviously those responsible took the material for granted and didn't scrutinize it."

Price is chairman of a House Mixed Armed Services subcommittee which opened a general inquiry Thursday into armed services training publications as the latest controversial Air Force manual came to light.

Designed for officers' club secretaries, the manual goes into such matters as getting dates for bachelors and correcting bartenders' tendency to show they are good fellows by overpouring drinks.

Price said the subcommittee staff will make a preliminary check of armed services publications, eliminating from consideration the great majority which are purely technical guides.

Price's subcommittee originally was set up to study allegations of misuse of manpower.

"Producing these things was certainly improper use of manpower," he remarked. "The services aren't getting any benefit from these manuals, just trouble."

UF Membership Meeting Tonight

Annual membership meeting of the United Fund of Big Spring and Howard County is set for tonight at 7:30. The session will be held in the Chamber of Commerce offices.

Any person who has given to the United Fund is a member, and is urged to attend the meeting, said Raymond River, president.

The membership will be asked to elect a group of new trustees. At a subsequent meeting of the trustees, officers for the new year will be elected.

Hospital People At Austin Meeting

Several members of the Big Spring State Hospital staff are attending a meeting of the Texas Association for Mental Health in Austin.

The meeting, which started yesterday, features two days of talks by top authorities in the field of mental health, workshops and panel discussions.

Going from the Big Spring Hospital were Dr. Frankie Williams, clinical director; Miss Dorothea Baldwin, of the rehabilitation section; Charles Rich of the psychology department and his staff aides, Gerald May and Harry Davis; and Tom Porter of the vocational rehabilitation department.

The Big Springers will return tonight and over the weekend.

U. S. Shapes New Peace Plan To Shift Power To World Force

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States was reported today shaping a new disarmament program designed to shift the job of keeping world peace to international military forces.

As envisioned by Secretary of State Christian A. Herter, national military forces and nuclear armament would be progressively brought under a system of international inspection and reduced. At the same time, some kind of international police force, probably set up through the United Nations, would be brought up to a strength sufficient to prevent aggressions by any nation.

Representatives of the United States, Britain, France, Canada and Italy have been meeting here for several weeks to develop proposals for presentation to the Soviet Union and four other Soviet bloc countries at a disarmament conference opening in Geneva March 15.

Whatever the final form of the U.S. program, it will be developed in consultation with those allies during the next three weeks.

The two - stage U.S. approach was outlined by Herter Thursday in a National Press Club speech. Neither was particularly new, but he outlined these as his two goals:

1. To try to create as a matter of urgency "a more stable military environment." This could be accomplished, he said, by such things as measures to prevent surprise attacks through international aerial and ground inspection. Armed forces and armaments would be cut back.

2. To build up international peace-keeping machinery "to the point where aggression will be deterred by international rather than national force."

With respect to his second goal Herter said that the United States plans to consult with other countries and the United Nations on specific measures which could be taken.

If Herter's goals are adopted by the other allies—and it is understood they have general approval—the Western position will differ in at least one radical respect from the Soviet position announced by Premier Nikita Khrushchev.

Khrushchev told the United Nations last September that what he wants is total world disarmament. He suggested an approach by stages to the point where eventually all nations would abandon their arms.

But officials here have taken the position that even in a largely disarmed world international tensions and conflicts would arise and some kind of peacekeeping force would be necessary.

Herter told questioners he did not know how much chance there is of agreeing with the Soviets on this or other world problems.

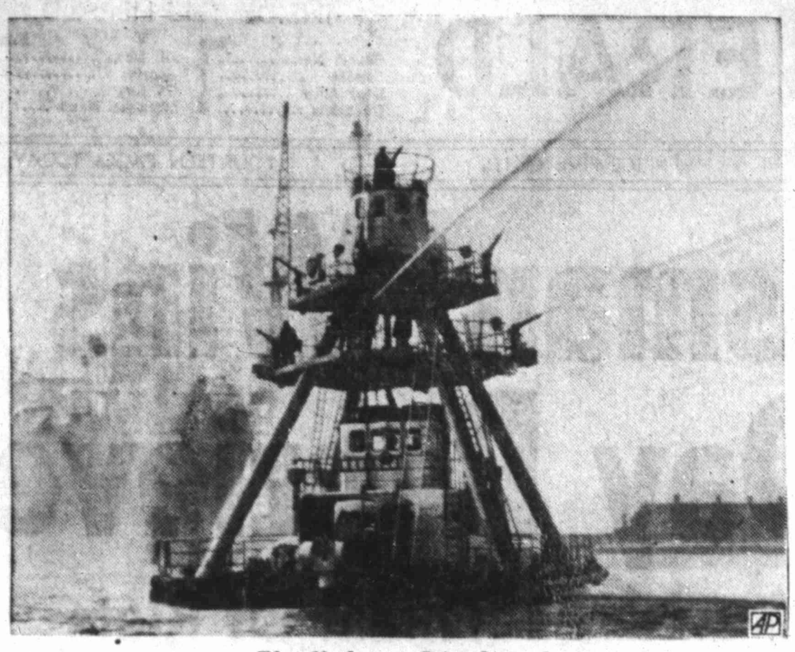

One other suggestion Herter made in his speech intrigued diplomats. He said that arrangements might be made for exchanging information to prevent "potentially dangerous misunderstandings about events in outer space."

This could mean that the United States may propose to the Soviet Union advance exchange of information on rocket shots into space so that neither side would be in doubt about the activities of the other—and possibly assume some hostile intentions.

Firefighter Displayed

Water spews from nine monitors of the new Firemaster in Swansea Harbor, Wales, England. The firefighter's 40-foot-high structure is mounted on a pair of pontoons, 66 feet long, with diesel engines fore and aft. The monitors are four-inch gear operated nozzles which can spray water or foam. They are mounted at every corner of the two platforms and on the control cabin atop the tower. Close to the water line are large wheels with pneumatic tires so the Firemaster can move alongside a ship and propel itself along the hull without damage.

Payola Probers Today End First Round Of Investigation

WASHINGTON (AP) — House payola probers, loaded with testimony that record distributors have poured big money into some disc jockeys' pockets, complete today the first round of their play-for-pay inquiry.

Before heading into a three-week recess, the Legislative Oversight subcommittee called Donald Dumont, president of a Boston distributing concern, for more information on payola practices there.

Dumont's firm has been cited in a Federal Trade Commission complaint and evidence before the subcommittee this week showed it had paid $8,300 to Boston disc jockeys since 1957.

Subcommittee Counsel Robert W. Lishman said the Commerce Committee, parent of the investigating group has a mass of legislation to consider during the planned hearing recess.

The subcommittee itself has recommended federal licensing of networks and laws to ban payola —payoffs for free plugs on radio and television—and to guarantee the integrity of network programs.

Harry Weiss, a $160-a-week Boston disc pusher, testified Thursday that he and competitors have taken part in what Lishman termed the stacking of hit record lists.

Weiss is promotion man for Music Suppliers, Inc., a Boston firm that wholesales several brands of records. He said he got stationery from two Boston stations, WBOS and WHIL, and from Norm Prescott, former WBZ disc jockey who testified he had quit in disgust after accepting nearly $10,000 in side payments.

Weiss said that over the names of disc jockeys he sent "Cash Box" a New York trade publication,, the titles of "hit records in the area, including my own records." These reports evidently go into the preparation of record popularity ratings.

Weiss said he had never dispensed payola and expressed amazement that Music Suppliers Inc., as disclosed earlier by subcommittee documents, had spread $27,121 among Boston disc jockeys and associates in the last three years.

He did say that "Growing Love" was one of the songs he classed as a hit for the Top 10 rating.

Investigators had charged that Music Suppliers trumpeted the record as a hit before it reached the market. "Growing Love" was sung by a group called The Downbeats, managed by Deputy Sheriff Ray Lewis of Manchester, N.H.

Lishman said Harry Carter, president of Music suppliers, had a 50-per cent interest in the waxing, and Weiss said he arranged for the recording.

Temperatures are expected to drop to 22 Friday night in Northwest Texas.

Some scattered patches of high clouds covered the eastern portion of Texas Friday morning. Below freezing temperatures were confined mostly to Northwest Texas but Lufkin and Mineral Wells had readings of 32 degrees.

No rain fell Thursday and maximum temperatures ranged from 65 at Presidio to 42 at Dalhart.

Statute Of Limitations Ends 2 Avary Indictments

Judge Ralph Cato, Thursday afternoon dismissed two indictments against J. C. Avary, former Ward County District Court Clerk.

The judge acted on a motion submitted to the 118th District Court by Tom L. Jones, district attorney of the 143rd District Court. Jones in his motion asked that the Big Spring judge dismiss the two indictments. Jones pointed out that they were defective in that they were returned against Avary after the statute of limitations for the offense had expired.

The two indictments were transferred from the 143rd District Court to the Howard County court on motion of the judge of the former district.

Avary was cited in the two indictments for embezzlement allegedly committed in 1947. He was not indicted until 1958.

DEAR ABBY

NO PART OF IT

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: A friend of mine is a divorcee with a fine little boy and a good job. She spends many weekends on trips with her boyfriend (married) while leaving her son with his father. She tells her family and her ex-husband that she is staying with me and my husband.

At first I saw no harm in this. But now I realize how wrong it is. My husband says if I don't tell her she can no longer use me as an alibi, he will tell her. I know that what she is doing could ruin her life and possibly lose her the right to keep her son. Yet I lack the courage to tell her because a few years back I was no better than she is. Please advise me.

GOOD FRIEND

DEAR FRIEND: Tell her (without sitting in judgment) that only trouble and heart-break can come of her constant deceit and, as her friend, you want no part in it.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: I have been going with a certain young man for about a year off and on but never steady. He knows that I have a birthday coming up pretty soon and he has asked me to tell him what I would like.

I really would like a sweetheart chest. Do you think he might get the idea that I am trying to rush him into marriage if I make this suggestion?

FLO

DEAR FLO: He certainly will. Are you?

DEAR ABBY: My uncle, who is visiting us from out of town, is supposed to be the high society member of our family. He has lots of money and says and does what he pleases.

I arranged a small dinner party in his honor and invited a charming widow to be his dinner partner.

My uncle is unmarried and in his sixties. She is in her fifties. My uncle paid no attention to her whatsoever. When she helped herself to dessert, he said, "You don't need that — you are already too fat." She replied, "You are very rude to say that."

Then he countered with, "Oh, I thought you were too OLD to mind."

She left without saying goodbye to me. Should I call her and apologize, or should she call me?

UPSET HOSTESS

DEAR UPSET: Call her. The incident occurred in your home with a gentleman (?) you invited to be her dinner partner. Explain that your uncle is "eccentric." (An "eccentric" is a boor with money.)

Parolee Gives Up, Seeks To Return Home

Ira Ray Barnes, 32, parolee out of Great Falls, Mont., voluntarily surrendered to the sheriff's office here on Thursday afternoon.

He asked that Howard County officers hold him and that they contact Montana authorities to return him to that state. He told officers he was a "four-time loser"—meaning he had been sentenced to prison that many times.

Miller Harris, sheriff, said that Barnes, travelling in a 1955 Lincoln, ran out of gas near Coahoma. He had no money and he tried, unsuccessfully, to find some work.

When jobs proved unavailable, he walked and hitchhiked into Big Spring and appeared at the sheriff's office.

He had left the car parked on the roadside. It is a mortgaged vehicle, he said. Officers here contacted a bank in Montana which holds papers on the car and were told that a search has been in progress for Barnes and the car.

The bank officials said they would contact the parole officer in Montana and advise him that Barnes was in custody here. What action may be taken in his case was not known by local authorities.

Barnes said he left Great Falls on Feb. 5.

TV Control Perils Newspapers, TV Leader Claims

NEW YORK (AP)—Frank Stanton, president of the Columbia Broadcasting System, said today government control of television programming would endanger the freedom of newspapers and other media.

Stanton spoke at a luncheon at which he was awarded the annual Advertising Gold Medal of Printers' Ink, a weekly magazine of advertising and marketing.

He opposed any move that would permit the government to regulate program content.

"Once the government tells three television stations in a city what they must broadcast," Stanton said, "how long does anyone suppose it would be before the government tells the only newspaper in town what it must print?

"Most metropolitan centers in the United States have more competing television stations than competing mass circulation daily papers.

"It would be as logical to seek constitutional reforms to impose government standards on newspapers, because their number is limited by economics, as to regulate programming on television stations because their number is limited by the spectrum."

Blows Snowdrifts

Snowstorms and snowdrifts aren't too much of a problem for farmer Myron Hanson of Vinton, Iowa. He simply climbs on the tractor-driven snow-blower outfit he rigged up and tears into the big drifts, to make short work of it. A manure-loader scoop funnels the snow into an auger and an ensilage blower does the rest.

Chessman Has 8 Lives

By LEONARD MILLIMAN

SAN QUENTIN, Calif. (AP) — Caryl Chessman's scheduled 10 a.m. execution hour today was his eighth date with death.

For more than 11½ years he escaped the gas chamber through "unparalleled legal black magic." The words are his own.

During those 11½ years as the longest resident of San Quentin prison's death row, Chessman was his own legal genius. He became a best selling author, developed an ulcer, appealed to the Supreme Court of the United States 14 times, outlasted a series of attorneys, got into income tax trouble, and stirred up worldwide controversy over whether he should be executed.

Through the legal and emotional turmoil, Chessman insisted he was innocent of the 17 crimes of which he was convicted May 22, 1948. He prepared a "time capsule" which he said would prove it to some future generation.

The 17 crimes as "The Red Light Bandit" of Los Angeles' lovers lanes, did not include murder. He was condemned to death for kidnaping for robbery with bodily harm, punishable by death under California's Little Lindbergh law.

RED LIGHT BANDIT

Both victims were women. Both were subjected to perverted sexual attacks. One was a woman convalescing from long hospitalization with infantile paralysis. The other was a girl who has since been committed to a mental institution where she is still confined. Her mother blames it on the night of terror with "The Red-light Bandit," who approached victims in an auto flashing a red light like a police car.

The 15 other crimes of which Chessman was convicted included four other kidnapings, seven robberies, two perverted sexual assaults, one attempted rape, one burglary and one auto theft.

Chessman, who became 38 years old last May, never denied a long prior criminal record.

"I became a criminal and outlaw by choice," he wrote in one of his three published books.

A fourth book is impounded in the warden's safe at San Quentin.

His official criminal record began when he was 16. It includes repeated car thefts, burglary, more than a dozen robberies, two escapes from imprisonment, assault with a deadly weapon, and assault with intent to commit murder for shooting a policeman in the leg.

BASIC QUESTION

It wasn't a simple question of Chessman's guilt or innocence that led to his unprecedented legal fight to escape the gas chamber. That court battle on which more than a quarter of a million dollars has been spent, hinged on the death of another man.

Ernest Perry, the trial court reporter, died before he had finished transcribing the notes of Chessman's trial. His notes were in an old style, three position, shaded shorthand script.

Stanley Freaser, another court reporter who was related by marriage to the prosecutor, worked until June, 1949, transcribing Perry's record of the defense, closing arguments and instructions to the jury.

Chessman argued that the trial record was faulty and put together fraudulently. Therefore, he said, the conviction should be set aside and a new trial ordered.

In June, 1957, the U.S. Supreme Court ruled that Chessman "never had had his day in court" because he was not present when the transcript was received and approved. The case went back to Los Angeles for a 75 day hearing, at which Chessman was present. Superior Judge Walter R. Evans finally ruled Feb. 28, 1958, that the corrected 5,000 word transcript adequately reflected the trial.

TECHNICALITIES LOST

Technicalities of legal arguments were lost in a flood of petitions, meetings and editorials urging that Chessman's life be spared. And sometimes in comments of the many judges involved.

Protests against American justice came from Sweden, Britain, Italy, France, Germany, Portugal, Brazil, Argentine, Uruguay and elsewhere. In Rome the Italian Communist newspaper L'Unita agreed with the Vatican's L'Osservatore Romano, saying, "eleven years in the death cell are worse than death itself."

Chessman himself thrived on the battle.

He was described by federal appellate judge Richard Chambers as an arrogant, truculent man "spewing vitriol on one person after another."

A former chief medical officer at San Quentin, William F. Graves evaluated Chessman as "mentally ill, although perhaps a literary genius."

Gov. Edmund G. Brown, the third California governor to consider clemency for Chessman, commented after a hearing last October.

"His attitude has been one of steadfast arrogance and contempt for society and its laws," he said. "The evidence of his guilt is overwhelming."

Clemency petitions had been rejected by earlier governors—Goodwin J. Knight and Earl Warren, now Supreme Justice of the United States.

The death cell author, born May 27, 1921, in St. Joseph, Mich., looked 50 years into the future when he prepared his "time capsule." He prepared it in 1959 and called it a "Pandora's Box of Facts" which he said contained evidence to show "indisputably" that the wrong man was sent to death row. He turned the papers over to one of his attorneys, to be released in 2009. Whether he was serious or merely making a wry, publicity seeking jest no one could say.

Barrons File Suit In Traffic Mishap

Jerry Barron and Mrs. Barron have filed a suit asking $5,277 damages of Carrol Jones. The suit was filed Thursday in 118th District Court.

In their petition, the Barrons allege that on Feb. 3, Mrs. Barron was driving their car on 18th Street. At the intersection with Main Street, she alleges that her car was struck from the rear by one driven by the defendant. She claims injuries to her person and damage to her car in the amount of $5,277.

Van Rie Row With Victim Will Be Told

BOSTON (AP)—A statement attributed to Willem Van Rie concerning a row with Lynn Kauffman is due to be submitted today to the jury hearing the murder trial of the handsome ship's radio operator.

The statement admits Van Rie, 31, was in Miss Kauffman's cabin and hit her at approximately the same time he is accused of throwing the young woman overboard and to her death.

This purported confession is contained in a statement Boston Police Capt. Joseph B. Fallon says he obtained from Van Rie in New York while the Dutch freighter Utrecht was tied up there last November.

An effort was made by prosecution Thursday to introduce it, but the move was balked temporarily by the defense, which contends the statement was made under duress.

Judge Francis Murray heard Fallon read it, in the absence of the jury, and listened attentively while defense argued against admission.

ADMISSION MADE

Judge Murray then ruled the statement had not been made involuntarily and said he would admit it today.

The statement quotes Van Rie as saying "Capt. Fallon, I finally realize that with the evidence they have, they could convict me in this case. Those kids from St. Louis (passengers in nearby cabins) knew I was in the cabin."

It continues: "I am going to make a statement but it won't be a true one. I will say I was in the cabin, but I wasn't there."

At this point the statement indicated Fallon declined such a statement and continued quoting Van Rie:

"I had been in the cabin to visit her, to see how she was. I thought she might be sick because of possible pregnancy. And she said, 'What if I were?' She got angry. I raised my hands and hit her, not on purpose, on the head and face. I didn't mean to."

Fallon, the statement indicated, asked if the girl fell, and Van Rie told him she did not. Fallon read on:

"I asked him how many times he hit her. He said he hit her in the face once. I asked him if he was angry and he said he was not angry."

IS IT TRUE?

Fallon said he asked Van Rie if what he said was a true statement and he answered: "It has to be."

Fallon said Van Rie asked for a copy of the statement. Later under defense interrogation, Fallon said no copy had been given the radio man.

The defense contends the statement was obtained after Van Rie was questioned almost constantly from around 4:50 p.m. Nov. 29 to 6 a.m. Nov. 30 in the office of the homicide squad in Brooklyn.

In preceding testimony before the jury, police officers who questioned him testified Van Rie told them his relations with the petite 23-year-old divorcee began when the Utrecht was nine days out of Singapore, on a 44-day passage to Boston, and that it was she who made the first advances.

Miss Kauffman disappeared from the Utrecht as the ship left Boston the evening of Sept. 18.

Her body was found next day on a harbor island. A medical examiner's autopsy report listed numerous injuries of a blunt nature and that her death by drowning was consistent with homicide.

The medical examiner, Dr. Michael A. Luongo, may testify today.

Castro Again Charges U. S. Craft Bomb Cuba

HAVANA (AP) — Fidel Castro demanded again Thursday night that the United States halt the bombing of Cuban soil by Florida-based planes. He reported two Americans were killed Thursday in an air attack on a Cuban sugar mill.

The bearded Prime Minister told a nationwide television audience the chief cause of strained American - Cuban relations is the "war" being conducted by raiding planes from the United States.

Speaking with unusual calm, he said documents taken from the wreckage proved the plane which tried to bomb the Espana Sugar Mill, 100 miles east of Havana, came from Florida.

"The United States authorities have asked us for proof," he declared. "We have the proof here. Now it's up to them to act."

He said the documents included a U.S. passport that identified the pilot as Robert Ellis Frost.

Cuban officials identified the other flier as Robert Kelly and said he was member of the U.S. Civil Air Patrol.

(In Miami, Robert Frost of Portland, Ore., was reported overdue on a "presumably local flight" in a light plane bearing the same registry number as the one which crashed in Cuba.

(CAP headquarters in Houston, Tex., said its records listed two Roberts Kellys as members, but the families of both men said they were in the United States and were not connected in any way with the Cuban incident.)

Following the crash, the U.S. Embassy quickly offered a team of technicians to assist in an investigation. Castro accepted the offer.

Castro said an investigation indicated the premature explosion of a fragmentation bomb intended for the mill blew up the plane. He said eyewitnesses reported the plane was diving on the mill when it blew apart, sending one of the fliers hurtling through the roof of a nearby house and shattering the body of the other beyond recognition.

He said the eyewitnesses reported seeing one of the men holding out a heavy object in his hand as the plane began its dive.

The Prime Minister said a flight map recovered from the wreckage showed the plane had two Florida bases, one 30 miles southwest of a Strategic Air Command (SAC) base at Homestead, the other 79 miles northwest of the Key West Navy base.

Castro also said that some 30 raids this year had resulted in the loss of about 225,000 tons of sugarcane.

"This is the only country in the world being victimized by such attacks," he declared.

Castro hailed as the "most beneficial agreement ever in the nation's history" the big trade and credit pact signed by himself and Soviet Deputy Premier Anastas Mikoyan last Saturday.

Under the agreement, the Soviet Union will buy five million tons of Cuban sugar in the next five years at world market prices. It also will provide Castro's regime credit equivalent to 100 million dollars, repayable over 12 years at 2½ per cent interest.

Castro boasted that Cuba would gain a "seventy million dollar favorable trade balance" during the pact's five-year duration.

"I wish we had 100 agreements like it," he declared. "If we had the same kind of pact with the United States, all our problems would be solved."

Castro surprisingly did not comment on U.S. Secretary of State Christian A. Herter's statement in Washington Wednesday that consideration is being given to cancellation of the system under which the United States pays premum prices for Cuban sugar. The Soviet-Cuban treaty has arousel concern in Washington, and some congressmen have suggested that the sugar bounty be dropped.

Castro said part of the Soviet credit would pay for heavy industrial equipment from the Soviet Union. He listed among tentative projects the construction of a steel plant to produce 500,000 tons a year.

First Bullfight Of Year Slated

The first bullfight of the year is scheduled for Villa Acuna Sunday at 4 p.m. It is the traditional George Washington celebration. Acuna is across from Del Rio.

The matadors are Gabriel Espana and Paco Rodriguez and the four bulls come from the Sierra Morena ranch.

Jay Staley, co-owner of the La Macarena, points out the bull ring and adjacent night club have been completely remodeled. The eight-month renovation program was finished last August. Stereo music in four dining rooms and complete air conditioning have been added.

Another special fight is scheduled for March 20, Staley said, however the matadors have not been picked. Beginning April 3, there will be a bullfight on the first Sunday of every month.

PAY MORE? FOR WHAT?

For more room maybe? You'll never need it. Valiant's got room for a family of six and their luggage. Could be it's spunk you're after? Valiant's got that too, from a 101 horsepower inclined engine that's got an extraordinarily light touch with a gallon of regular. Looks, we won't even mention. You could pay twice the price and not even come close to the "Valiant Look." And all the money in a miser's sock can't buy a fully-unitized body that's rust-proofed and rattle-proofed the way Valiant's is. Something else about Valiant you're really going to like, the alternator electrical system. You'd pay a pretty penny to get it anywhere else. On Valiant it's standard equipment. What does it do? It makes your battery last longer, much longer. Because it charges even at idle. Beginning to get the answer to our question? Sure! So why even think about paying more, when Valiant has it all? At your Plymouth-Valiant dealer's.

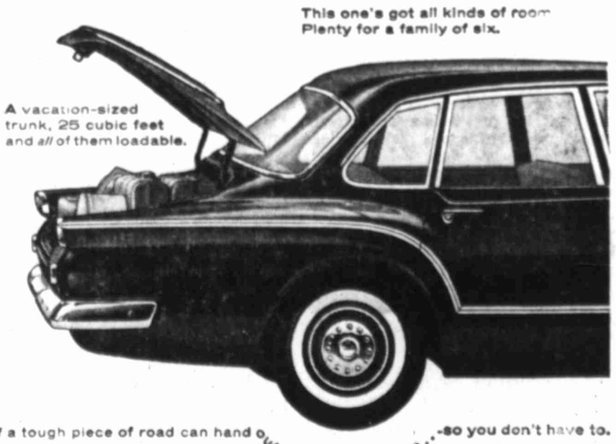

Good looks that will last. The entire body, inside and out, is armored against rust.

The engine sips gasoline, slowly, gets a map-full-of-miles from a gallon of regular.

This one's got all kinds of room. Plenty for a family of six.

A vacation-sized trunk, 25 cubic feet and all of them loadable.

A Devotional For Today

"Truly I say to you, as you did it to one of these my brethren, you did it to me." (Matthew 25:40, RSV.)

PRAYER: Our Father, help me to hold open the door of my heart to aid those in need. Let me never pass by an opportunity to be of service to Thee. Teach me to be aware of my brothers and stretch out to them a brotherly hand. Thus may we be brought closer to Thee and to the fulfilling of Thy purposes. In Christ's name. Amen.

(From The 'Upper Room')

Test Case Needed To Clarify

A test case of an Internal Revenue Service ruling that expenditures for lobbying, political campaigns and other "propaganda" advertising as non-deductible as business expense for income tax purposes has been suggested by Editor & Publisher, a journal of the newspaper business. The Advertising Federation of America had predicted last fall that such a ruling was upcoming, and sure enough it came.

E&P says this was done arbitrarily by IRS without waiting for the requests of congressional hearings on the subject, or the outcome of several pending bills.

It declares the ruling gives the government the power to censor political views by taxation, as none but the rich and powerful could afford to express views on pending legislation by means of mass media, even though such legislation might mean disaster to them. The magazine thinks the ruling violates the Bill of Rights, even if indirectly, and is therefore unconstitutional.

At best it does throw up a roadblock to legitimate business interests, to say nothing of group associations of ordinary citizens, who might wish to carry on a campaign against some pending piece of legislation, by making an organized campaign in protest intolerably expensive. But the IRS ruling says, in effect, that these protests are not a legitimate cost of doing business, therefore not deductible for income tax purposes, even though adoption of a bit of legislation in question might spell ruination to their enterprises, and thereby end any prospect of getting further taxes out of them.

A test case covering this ruling would seem to be in order. In Statehouse and Capitol it has come to pass that any group or business that doesn't lobby or propagandize to protect its interests is left out in the cold.

Kids Like To Snatch A Snack

If you have a hollow-legged "tweenager" in your home, boy or girl, think nothing of it. A kid that age needs to eat more than three times a day, so those in-between snacks are quite in order.

So the Texas State Nutrition Council, meeting in Fort Worth, the other day, recommended planned snacks in a symposium on "Nutrition for Youth."

Dr. Mina W. Lamb, chairman of the council and head of the Food and Nutrition Department of Texas Tech at Lubbock, thinks planned snacks should contribute to the over-all nutritional needs of the individual.

The council's recommended list of foods for snacking is headed by peanuts, either just plain salted peanuts or peanut butter. They are rich in proteins, a food substance the experts say should be well distributed among all the meals of the day, not simply concentrated when the main meat dish is served at night.

The nutritionists recommended that food be cooked with as little water as possible to save the nutrients, but insisted that after all the main problem is to get the food into the child.

As any parent knows, it is not easy to get a child to eat his full share at mealtime if he stuffs at odd intervals throughout the day with trivial knickknacks possessing little or no nutritive value.

We suppose that's what the experts had in mind when they invented the term "planned snacks."

The trouble is that if a snack is planned and made a part of routine whether a kid wants it at that particular time or not, there may be a rebellion. Some parents tend to forget that kids are people.

New Tools Of Commie Propaganda

WASHINGTON — Something new has been started by Communist sympathizers in New York City. They have put a large advertisement in one of the big newspapers, labeling it, "An Appeal to the President of the United States." Actually, it is an effort to put over a piece of Soviet propaganda in the hope of sabotaging America's nuclear-defense program.

The paid advertisement which appeared on Tuesday was signed by seven foreign-language newspapers claiming to be published by American citizens. Now letters have been sent out by representatives of each of the nationalities denouncing the advertisement as a piece of Communist propaganda and as not representative at all of the viewpoint of persons of Eastern European descent.

THE ORIGINAL advertisement says that disarmament is recognized by American public opinion as urgent, and then asks:

"Why, being a world leader in many fields, is the U. S. not a leader in disarmament? Why is it the Soviet Union that cuts its armed forces and not the United States? Progress towards disarmament depends in large part upon reaching an agreement on a nuclear weapons test ban. But the negotiations now going on in Geneva are in grave jeopardy due to the U. S.'s abandonment of the moratorium on tests . . . .

"You know what the continuation of nuclear tests would mean for mankind if the test carried out so far, as leading scientists have testified, will cause 140,000 people now living to die of leukemia or bone cancer, and about a million people altogether to die of cancer of all kinds."

These extreme statements have never been corroborated by any impartial scientists or medical men. They have been used again and again, however, by opponents of nuclear testing, and some of these opponents in the scientific world have long followed the Communist line.

THE ADVERTISEMENT closes with an appeal to the President "to restore the moratorium on the testing of nuclear weapons" and "to oppose the sharing of nuclear warheads with NATO allies." It then asks "all Americans interested in peace to write to senators from their states" to help attain the objectives mentioned.

Six of the newspapers whose names are signed to the advertisement are published in New York City, and one in Detroit. They are printed in the Armenian, Estonian, Hungarian, Polish, Ukrainian, Lithuanian and Russian languages.

The organizations which have denounced the advertisement are the Assembly of Captive European Nations, the Conference of American Citizens of Central and Eastern European Descent, the Polish American Congress, the Ukrainian Congress, and the Federation of Hungarian Former Political Prisoners.

WHAT IS IMPORTANT to know is where some of the publications with Communist sympathies get their money. Spokesmen for refugee organizations say that much of it is collected from residents of this country who are subjected to a kind of blackmail. Unless, for instance, they deposit money with packages of food and clothing that they wish to send to relatives behind the Iron Curtain, these packages may not be delivered abroad. Obviously, those who deposit money with such packages have no way of knowing what ultimately becomes of the money or the packages after they deliver them to agencies that represent governments behind the Iron Curtain.

The money, it is now charged, is being used to pay for propaganda of all kinds, no small part of which is designed to scare Americans out of their wits about the dangers of radioactive fall out. But the United States government has already announced that it is willing to ban all nuclear tests above the ground and merely insists on continuing certain classes of tests that are conducted underground. Surely, there is no danger of fall out from underground tests, and the Communists know it. They are holding out, however, for an agreement that will enable them to carry on their own testing underground, because they know that not all of these tests can be detected. America presumably would honor the agreement, with respect to both above-ground and below-ground tests, but there would be no way on knowing whether the Soviets were keeping their side of the bargain.

ONE WONDERS WHY congressional committees haven't as yet gotten to the bottom of these propaganda techniques used by the Communists. While almost every other field has been investigated, some of the American followers of the Communist line in the scientific world seem to have been protected against investigations by Congress.

Anyway, it certainly is a natural and legitimate field of inquiry for congressional committees to find out just what payola or propaganda payments are made to foreign-language newspapers by foreign governments or their agents. The continued existence in the United States of weekly or monthly newspapers that are financed directly or indirectly by foreign governments is one of the strange things about the propaganda war.

Squeezing The Inflation Out

By STERLING F. GREEN

WASHINGTON (AP) — It's just possible, government officials believe, that Wall Street's nervous tremors are caused by the fear of noninflation.

The economists say they can see nothing else in the business outlook for 1960 to explain the sinking spells of the stock market.

Production income and profits are at record highs and expected to keep going up at moderate speed. Gradually improving employment is foreseen.

THESE ARE SUBSTANTIALLY the same forecasts as were made on New Year's Day. Only one significant change has been made: There may be less inflation than we've gotten used to.

Practically nobody expected the economy to race. Remember the headlines over the New Year forecasts? They said: "Record '60 prosperity seen but no boom."

That's exactly what we're getting. And even if a recession should come along later, government economists say the first reliable signs won't be visible for at least a month or so.

They contend that President Eisenhower's forecast that the economy will keep expanding "through 1960 and beyond" is still as good as anybody's guess.

So why did sentiment in the money markets shift in January? Why the recent recurrent stock-selling waves followed by good rallies that don't quite make up the losses?

For the answer, a good many people here point to the White House. The psychological change, they say, dates from Eisenhower's State of the Union Message.

EARLIER THAT WEEK the steel dispute ended—with a hardly inflationary settlement. The stock market zipped to a record high. Then Eisenhower announced the government would run a surplus of more than four billion dollars next year. The market has looked less robust ever since.

The big surplus—to the extent it comes true — means the great weight of federal fiscal operations will be deflationary. The government will be taking in more money—and soaking up more buying power—than it spends.

The Treasury will be engaged in paying off debt instead of deficit financing. It will not be competing heavily with private business for investment funds. Already credit has eased a trifle and interest rates have fallen a little.

Some of the economists who had foreseen a 1960 price rise of 1½ to 2 per cent now expect only about 1 per cent. Wholesale prices have been edging down.

Farm prices are expected to continue to decline.

This is not an outlook that spurs people to buy stocks as a hedge against depreciation of their dollars. Nor is it a business climate in which you can count on making a fast speculative buck.

And many of the shares that were bought in expectation of ever-advancing inflation are likely to be overpriced. Today's market seems to be squeezing the inflation out.

What Jack Really Built

NEW YORK (AP)—Curbstone comments of a pavement Plato:

Every human being has his own particular daydream of glory, but few of us ever manage to make it come true.

This is why Jack Paar is in a fair way to becoming the man of the year—the hero of 1960—to millions of Milquetoast Americans.

He made one of their favorite daydreams come true.

We all do have a favorite daydream, a bit of inner fantasy we often hide from a prying world because it seems so impossible of achievement.

But there is one particular daydream which probably all of America's 64 million jobholders have shared at one time or another. This is the daydream in which you march into the boss's office and tell him with a splendid, offhand nonchalance: "The board has voted a small change in management, and I thought you ought to be the first to know you're working for me now."

Since we are so dependent on a payroll, we come to have a half-hatred, half-fear of both our job and our boss because it is human nature to dislike being too dependent on anything.

This feeling is expressed in sayings common in every office or factory.

"Don't ever forget, you can be replaced."

"The boss may not always be right, but he is always the boss."

"There is no such thing as an indispensable man."

Yes, at one time or another we all wish we had the gumption to fire the boss, then stalk grandly out of the office amid the applause of our more cowardly fellow workers. But few of us ever do. We remain a grandiose hero only in our daydreams.

But not Jack Paar. He may be right or wrong in his quarrel with the National Broadcasting Co. over whether a comedian has an inalienable privilege to tell an old joke about water closets. He may be a new Will Rogers to some, or a self-pitying hero to others.

One thing he did do. He not only staged the greatest one-man strike since Achilles sulked in his tent. He fired a whole television network.

Who ever had a wilder daydream of glory and made it come true, right there in the awed gaze of the whole world?

He came as close as anyone we know of to proving he is what we'd all like to be, the indispensable man we've been told doesn't exist.

Checking For The Future

MIDDLETOWN, N. J. (AP) —Patrick Mann is starting out early in his search for a grownup career.

The 12-year-old boy wrote the local police department and asked for "something about becoming a cop." He said he also would like information "on how to catch crooks."

Patrick is not positive about his ambitions. He also has been thinking about being a carpenter.

Another Bites The Dust

LOCKPORT, N. Y. (AP) — The last of the Mohicans—at least west of Syracuse, N. Y.—has disappeared. The last Mohican Market in western New York has been closed here after 30 years.

Ah, Sweet Memories

NEWARK, N. J. (AP) — A bill was found here recently which listed the cost of making home repairs.

The carpenter got 25 cents an hour. Four pounds of nail, eight feet of pine board and 21 hours of work totaled $45.80.

The bill was sent in 1886.

Ignorance Great Handicap In Fighting TB

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M. D.

"Dear Dr. Molner: Every year the public is asked to contribute (and rightly so) to the fund to stamp out tuberculosis, and we give as we can afford to.

"But what is the use of trying to control the spread of the disease when persons still have the disgusting habit of spitting on the sidewalks? One need only walk a block in any direction to see this. We have a law forbidding it, but it is not enforced. I hope you will not classify me as a 'crank' but please use your influence to try to make this offense punishable. Do I sound emphatic? I AM on this subject.—Mrs. K. C."

I'm emphatic, too, in insisting that tuberculosis be stamped out to the extent that is humanly possible. I do not count it as impossible that TB could be reduced to a very small risk—IF people only knew and understood the information we already possess about it.

Ignorance, today, is the greatest handicap we have to overcome in controlling this disease.

With X-rays and sputum tests, we can discover the disease, but we can't discover it until an individual is tested!

With drugs we can arrest a great many cases, but only if the patient follows orders. Believe it or not, some TB patients in public hospitals are so foolish that they hide or throw away the medicines they are supposed to take!

In some instances, surgery (removal of part of a badly-damaged lung) is the final step in returning a TB patient to normal life again.

Now I cannot, in all honesty, agree that spitting in the street is the biggest factor in spreading this disease, although I suspect that it must be a factor to some extent. After all, the sputum test is used to test for the disease; the germs are present in what the victim spits out, and the germs are what spread the disease. So I do not and cannot quarrel with you.

But the big way in which TB spreads is through a family. Somebody gets it. In a crowded, small household, you presently find several others with the disease. In crowded, poverty-stricken areas, the TB rate will be many times as great as in suburban parts of a city. The peril isn't basically wealth or poverty; the peril lies in the elements of ignorance, carelessness and crowding.

A few years ago in cities people threw garbage and waste into the street. Why? Ignorance! Today we spit germs into the streets. Why? Ignorance.

Ignorance is our foe, but with TB, much as we need to curb careless spraying of germs into the streets, we need even more to realize the danger of spreading it inside the home, by people who don't, perhaps, even suspect that they have it.

Around The Rim

Of Time And Nutrition

Texans who grow and sell eggs are on the warpath.

They're looking to lift some gray flannel scalps along Madison Avenue, and to put the egg back on the tip of every Texan's tongue.

Seems the hucksters have been selling the American people on snap crackle and pop for breakfast and overlooking simple homey things like nutrition. The Texas Egg Council is vitally concerned, both with their pocketbooks and with public health.

Every passing year there are fewer people who can recall the old ham and eggs breakfast. Nowadays, a quick gulp of a sweetroll, a swig of black coffee, and we're off to work; while the children glamorized by the gay packages and premiums, slurp down a breakfast allegedly of champions and off to school.

The hucksters have glamor on their side. And they stress the quickness and ease of preparation of packaged breakfasts. But eggs are commonplace and taken for granted, and the housewife falls for the TV pitch—or for Junior's demands that he just must have those premiums for the Little Giant Hydrogen Bomb kit.

Egg Council members are planning a big promotional campaign to put eggs back on the menu, to remind the public that eggs and milk are nature's two most perfect foods, and to point out the "quickness and ease of preparation" of eggs.

It's not just Mad Avenue that gets the blame for the little orphan egg—it's also our fast pace that allows too little time for breakfast.

All this is very well, but we would like to suggest to the Egg people that all the promotioning and reminding and glamorizing won't help a bit if people just don't get up a few minutes earlier in the mornings.

That extra five minutes that an egg breakfast would take seems like five hours of Paradise to a reluctant dragon who's stayed up too late the evening before, probably being mesmerized into buying Sugar Puffies by the late, late show.

Inez Robb

Man The Ramparts Against The Sack

It is no secret that I have been moanin' mighty low the past three weeks and—when I had the strength—feeling outraged that a civilization that can lift satellites into the blue can't do anything about the common cold or viruses. Or zippers.

I have been suffering from all three—the common cold, that latest West-Coast virus and a balky zipper on a bed jacket. I have been simply miserable, thank God, and even a darling husband bringing home fresh nectarines (from Chile) and asparagus (from Mexico) to tempt my sullen appetite scarcely penetrated the gloom.

THEN THE TIDE turned, and suddenly it's almost spring, although the snow and ice on the terrace beyond the apartment windows don't know it yet. The thaw came when the mailman brought a letter on the stationery of the Andrew Johnson Post 1990 of the Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States, of Greeneville, Tenn.

James N. Hardin, commander of the post, has written to tell me that the men—and what men! — of the post stand four-square behind me in my valiant fight against the sneaky Petes of the international couture who are trying to slip the discredited sack back on the American woman.

"In more than one spring and summer fashion line," I wrote in a Paul Revere alert to the American people on January 13, "the waistline has already collapsed to the hipbone, where it is loosely indicated, if at all. It is the old, 1958 bag reworked."

NEVER LET IT BE said that the Cassandra of the 'Sixties went unheeded! Commander Hardin writes:

"Dear Mrs. Robb:

"Following a discussion of your editorial at a Post meeting, first we wish to commend you for taking the viewpoint that every red-blooded American boy should support.

"We (the Post) have gone on record as being of the opinion that the Lord created us in his image and the attempts of the couture to change the silhouette or shape of the American woman to a point where it is unrecognizable by the opposite sex is truly a catastrophe and a loss of the Battle of 1958—as bad as our peace treaties following World Wars I and II.

"WE CONTINUE in our beliefs and do not wish the female figure to perish from the earth.

"Again, we wish to congratulate you in joining the fight that we think all men should be dedicated to.

"Very truly yours, James N. Hardin, Commander Post 1990."

As I keep reiterating, day in and day out, if you give Americans leadership and guidance in matters of great national import, you will always find them arrayed on the right barricades. Here is a powerful affirmation of this thesis. "Give light and the people will find their own way."

WELL, THEY AREN'T going to find the way if woman's light is hidden under a bushel or a bag! By the way, the second most-crushing indictment of beatniks (the first is that they're dirty by choice and doctrine) is that in dress it would be impossible to tell the women from the men if the latter didn't wear beards. Maybe, come to think of it, that's why the men wear beards. Makes for less confusion in the pads.

Anyway, I am eternally grateful to Commander Hardin and the brave boys of Post 1990. They have not only made me feel that life is worth living again but have given me heartening assurance that I am not holding the bag alone.

The Gallup Poll

Public Backs Federal School Aid

PRINCETON, N. J. — Congressional action on Federal aid to education takes place against a backdrop of substantial public support for government aid in the construction of new schools.

Nearly two out of three Americans interviewed by Gallup Poll reporters said they favored the Federal government giving financial help to build new public schools, especially in the poorer states.

Only one person in four opposes the measure which some observers claim would only mean higher Federal taxes for everyone.

THE CURRENT SUPPORT for school construction aid is not as overwhelming as it was at the beginning of Eisenhower's second term when, in February, 1957, three out of four persons questioned by Gallup Poll reporters said they were in favor of Federal aid to help build new schools.

Gallup Poll reporters in 170 locations across the country asked the public about school construction aid by means of the following question:

"Some people say that the Federal government in Washington should give financial help to build new public schools, especially in the poorer states. Others say that this will mean higher taxes for everyone and that states and local communities should build their own schools. How do you, yourself, feel — do you favor or oppose Federal aid to help build new public schools?"

The results today:

FEDERAL AID TO SCHOOL CONSTRUCTION?
Feb., 1960

	Per Cent
Favor	65
Oppose	25
No opinion	10

Three years ago, the identical question produced these results:

Feb., 1957

	Per Cent
Favor	76
Oppose	19
No opinion	5

Although every major group in the population today is in favor of the Federal aid proposal, some differences do emerge from an analysis of the results. Here, for example, are the results by party affiliation, region of the country and religious preferences:

FEDERAL AID TO SCHOOL CONSTRUCTION?

	Fav. or	Op-pose	No Opin. Per Cent
Republicans	57	35	8
Democrats	68	24	8
Independents	69	18	13
East	67	24	9
Midwest	61	27	12
South	65	26	9
Far West	68	25	7
Protestants	63	28	9
Catholics	68	22	10

WHAT OTHERS SAY

"Austerity" is becoming quite a catchword in some quarters these days. It is used to criticize President Eisenhower's new budget; it is also applied to some of the state budgets now being unveiled.

For example, California's Gov. Brown himself describes his new budget that way. And New York Controller Levitt complains that Gov. Rockefeller's blueprint is "an austere budget that does not respond to the needs of the people."

Yet the odd thing is that both these budgets call for record spending — over $2 billion in the case of New York and nearly $2.5 billion for California. (It was 1917 before expenditures for the whole Federal Government approximated $2 billion.)

So apparently we have a new definition of austerity. In the view of a number of politicians it seems to mean putting any kind of limit on public spending.

And speaking of austerity, New York City, which has a hefty budget of its own and gets state aid, must surely rate high on the national list of wastefully mismanaged municipalities. Hardly a day passes without a new scandal in the headlines, and the city has long been noted for its weird financial practices.

The political appetite has grown enormous, devouring common sense as well as tax dollars. What the national economic health requires is some real government austerity, not the phony political kind that results in ever high government spending.

Watch Dog

DEFIANCE, Ohio (AP) — Nobody gets in Rudy Camp's car when his 2-year-old terrier Ike is inside. Nobody.

Camp learned this painfully while the car—dog inside—was on a service station hoist. The keys were inside and Camp couldn't get in the locked car. When he tried to pry open the ventilator window, his dog snarled.

Camp finally had to call for his wife, who brought a spare set of keys.

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP)—The California Highway Patrol cited 955,159 erring drivers in the first 11 months of 1959. Of those, 283,260 were for speeding and 12,521 for drunken driving.

AIRMAN ROBERT WHITE

Robert White Named As 331st Airman Of Month

A.2.C. Robert M. White has been selected as the outstanding airman of the 331st Fighter Interceptor Squadron for January.

Capt. Javier Blanco, president of the 12-member board making the selection, said that Airman White was named because of his efficiency in taking care of the aircraft assigned to him, for his military bearing, and for his positive attitude toward his AF responsibilities.

By being named airman of the month, he received a $10 cash award, a three-day pass, and the opportunity to be considered for Airman of the Quarter.

White, 20, is from Pawtucket, R. I., is the crew chief for one of the F-86's at Webb Air Force Base. It is his duty to make sure that his aircraft is in safe and operating condition.

He began his active duty tour with the Air Force in March 1957 when he went to Lackland AFB, for basic training. He was sent to the F-86 maintenance school in Amarillo, and in September of 1957 he went overseas to serve with the 25th Fighter Interceptor Squadron in Okinawa. Airman 2.C. White was sent to Big Spring and the 331st in April of 1959. He is the son of Mrs. Minnie White, Pawtucket, R. I.

Uncertainty Clouds Negro Pupils' Fate

FARMVILLE, Va. (AP) — What does the future hold for the education of 1,700 Negro children in a county where public schools have been closed?

Will they turn to a system of private schooling—the course the white pupils have taken? Or will more and more follow the lead of a relative few and seek their schooling elsewhere?

Uncertainty clouds the picture in Prince Edward County, which abandoned public education rather than see the races mixed in the classrooms and has become a major testing ground in the South's resistance to integration.

White leaders who set up and have in operation a private school system for their 1,500 children are offering to help Negroes do the same. The whites want school facilities for both races—but want them segregated.

Up to now, the Negro parents have shunned the proposed private schools.

K. A. Jackson, president of the Parent-Teacher Assn. at a closed Negro elementary school, sees in the proposed Negro schools "more disadvantage than anything since reconstruction" after the Civil War.

The closure of public schools has meant drastic family adjustments for those Negroes determined to provide their children with an education.

Some have moved. Some have sent children to live with relatives in other areas. In some cases, one parent has accompanied them. The largest single group, 57, attends the high school division of Kittrell, N.C., College, about 100 miles away.

The Rev. L. F. Griffin, the local National Assn. for the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP) coordinator, says he knows at least 105 Negro children are being educated elsewhere. That would mean nearly 1,600 children are not going to school.

Most of those attending school elsewhere are high school students. Many of the elementary children are at home. Four supervised play groups have been set up.

Despite the public school closing, there seems to be no outward bitterness or tensions between the races.

Meanwhile, the private white schools apparently are operating efficiently in their temporary quarters in churches and vacant offices and buildings. Much of the equipment and books have been donated. Where funds weren't available for manufactured equipment, the foundation devised its own.

Lt. Mike Hagen Has New Patch

Lt. Mike Hagan is wearing the expert's patch on his shoulders these days.

He was given his expert certificate here last week when Col. L. W. Stocking, commander of the Albuquerque Air Defense sector, flew from Kirtland AFB to make the award. Fewer than one of five interceptor pilots are qualified for this rating. In order to qualify for this elite corp Lt. Hagan had to fulfill the following requisites: Two years in a fighter interceptor squadron (Lt. Hagan has about four years); 700 flying hours in fighter-type jets; 50 weather hours; 20 landing approaches with low weather ceilings; four out of five consecutively successful attack missions. Finally Lt. Hagan had to pass an in-flight examination in an expert manner with a tactical evaluation pilot flying on his wing.

Lt. Hagan, 25, entered the Air Force in June 1954 and received his wings and commission in December of 1955. Upon completion of all-weather training at Perrin AFB, Lt. Hagan was assigned to the 85th FIS at Scott AFB, Mo. He stayed there from the spring of 1956 until his assignment to the 331st FIS at Webb AFB in July 1959. At present he resides at 1606 Robin St., Big Spring, with his Texas-born wife, Wanda, and their two children, Michael, aged 2½ and Julie, aged 18 months.

He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Marion F. Hagan, 1518 Barcelona Ave. in Fort Myers, Fla., owners of a string of shrimp boats operating in the Gulf of Mexico.

River Estimates Called Impractical

AUSTIN (AP)—Trying to compare conflicting estimates of future Trinity River water yields is "like comparing apples and kangaroos," Houston lawyer Alex Pope told the State Water Board Thursday.

"You can't compare figures based on different assumptions," Pope said in the 28th day of hearings on plans for dams on the Lower Trinity near Livingston and Wallisville.

The hearing resumes Tuesday.

Negroes Face Bomb Charge In Little Rock

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — Two men of her own race were charged today with bombing the home of a Negro student of Central High School in the latest outbreak of violence over integration here.

They were named as Maceo Antonio Binns Jr., 31-year-old handyman, and Herbert Odell Monts, 17-year-old student at Horace Mann High School for Negroes.

Binns and Monts were charged with damaging property with explosives, the same charge brought against five white men in three bombings here last September.

The home of Carlotta Walls, 16, was bombed the night of Feb. 9. She is one of eight Negroes who now attend once-white high schools here.

The bombing was believed to be the first directed at the home of an integrated Negro student in the South since the U.S. Supreme Court ordered desegregation of schools in 1954.

The arrest of Binns and Monts was announced jointly by police and the FBI who offered no motive.

Earlier in the week, Gov. Orval Faubus had pointed out the possibility the blast could have been set by integrationists to rekindle trouble.

The Little Rock School Board office, the business office of Mayor Werner Knopp and a city owned station wagon were dynamited Labor Day.

NO INJURIES

No one was injured in any of the bombings.

Carlotta, her mother and two young sisters, were in the six-room brick house when the bombings occurred. The father, Carteloyou Walls, 37, a brickmason, was visiting his father up the street when the blast occurred.

Carlotta was the youngest of nine Negroes who integrated Central High under guard of federal troops in the fall of 1957. She is one of five Negroes now attending Central. Three Negroes attend Hall High.

Police Chief Eugene G. Smith and J. J. Casper, special FBI agent, said Binns and Monts were charged on the authority of the prosecuting attorney, J. Frank Holt with a felony. Conviction could mean one to five years imprisonment and a fine of $100 to $500, or both.

The two Negroes were arrested Thursday afternoon. They were questioned throughout most of the night before the arrests were announced early today.

Smith said the investigation was continuing and refused to elaborate.

Sergeants Laud Capsule Adventure

SAN ANTONIO (AP)—Two Air Force sergeants think they have proved that space travel can be a healthy and happy adventure.

Technical Sergeants William W. Henderson, 30, Alice, Tex., and Hobart M. Craft, 36, Wedowee, Ala., emerged Thursday after a 14-day stay in an 8 by 12 foot simulated space ship cabin at the School of Aviation Medicine here.

The sergeants' knees were wobbly and they complained of nagging headaches but a physical checkup showed them to be in tip top shape.

"I could have gone on another week if my wife would let me," said Henderson, an energetic, fast talkiing blond who sprouted a scrubby full beard during the experiment.

"I'd like to do it all over again," said Craft, a droll brunette who reappeared with a new neatly trimmed mustache.

Each said he was not sure his wife and family—four children each—would accept the new facial decorations. Craft is with his family today at their home in Seguin while the Hendersons are at their home in Schertz, a community just northeast of here.

"The experiment was a definite success," said Dr. Billy E. Welch, civilian space medicine expert who was in charge of the test. "I see no reason why they could not have gone another two weeks if necessary."

The thick steel tank, egg shaped at both ends, is capable of maintaining two people up to 30 days in the conditions that scientists think will exist in space ships.

"We are eager to fulfill the capabilities of the simulator," Welch said. "We hope to succeed in this as soon as possible."

Dr. Hans-Georg Clamann, chief of space medicine at the school, said other tests will be made in the make believe space ship cabin soon, probably this year.

Dr. Clamann compared Thursday's test to a round trip exploration of the moon. "Two weeks probably would give enough time for an exploration trip, not a landing on the moon," he said.

He said he did not think the first space ship crews will suffer dangerously from lonesomeness when all the sights and sounds of the earth are removed.

Henderson and Craft were rationed to two quarts of regular tap water each day. They ate nothing but dehydrated foods. Henderson lost three pounds and Craft gained a pound.

Maj. Richard Day, medical officer overseeing the test, said the headaches "may or may not" have been caused by tension and the unaccustomed two-weeks of physical inactivity. He said tests showed no significant personality or physiological changes.

Henderson said his most pressing desire upon completion of the test was "a great big salad of crisp lettuce and fresh tomatoes."

As the two sergeants walked into the sunlight for the first time Henderson looked at the sky and said:

"Man, O man, doesn't that look pretty."

Red Cross Aids Family

American Red Cross has made its disaster contribution to the James McMullen family.

The McMullens lost all three of their children, and practically all of their possessions in a fire which destroyed their home Feb. 12.

In all such cases, the family makes a list of items destroyed in the accident. The Red Cross gives financial aid sufficient to cover all basic necessities lost.

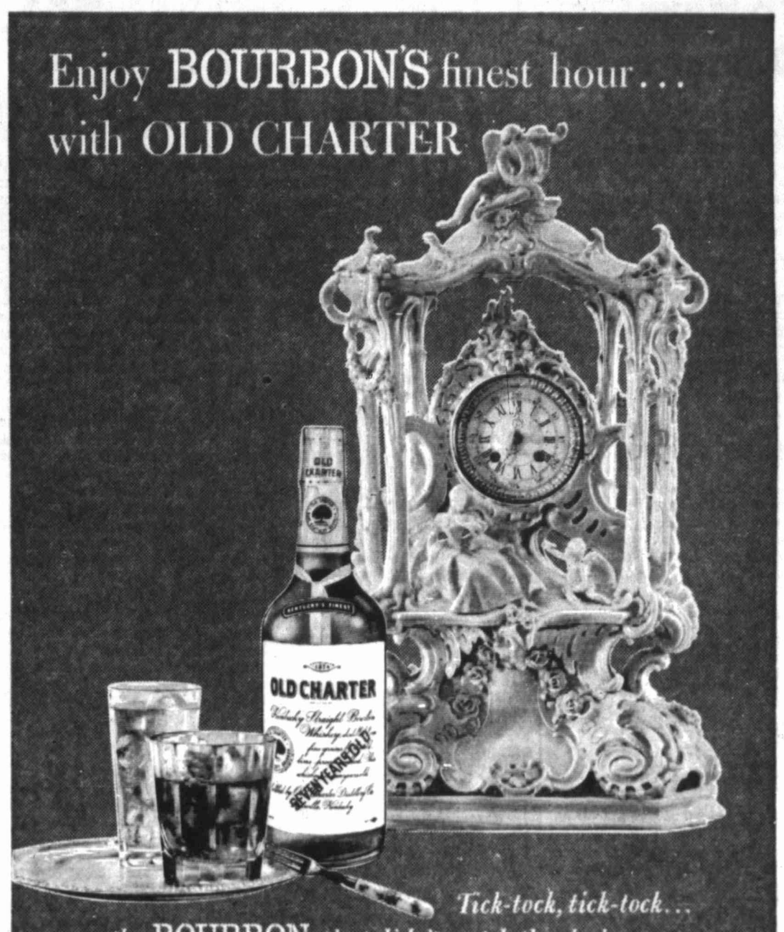

"As far as necessary possessions are concerned," said Frank Hardesty, disaster chairman, "the McMullens have been substantially provided for through the Red Cross." Of course there is no way to erase the tragedy of the lost lives.

McMullen in employed by Eddie Paul, a contractor for the city who is in charge of disposals at the city dump.

Defends Toreadors

NEW YORK (AP) — A leading Catholic scholar has come to the defense of bullfighting, the national sport of Spain.

Says Msgr. J. D. Conway, president of the United States Canon Law Society, writing in the Catholic Digest:

"To those who really know and appreciate bullfighting, it is not barbaric, but artistic.

"And art warrants abuse of the material with which it works; the cutting of marble; the charring of wood . . . or the destruction of the bull."

To Africa

ATLANTA (AP) — A 70-year-old bell, once a children's plaything, soon will be summoning the faithful to a new Baptist church in Ghana, Africa.

Dr. George Faile, a medical missionary in Ghana, wrote to his former church, the Druid Hills Baptist Church in Atlanta, for help in building the new house of worship in Africa.

The four children of Mr. and Mrs. Dan L. Carmichael Jr. immediately offered the bell, which once graced a Georgia church no longer in existence. They had played with it for years.

PRAYER POWER

Poet Laureate Of Texas, God's Gift

After her oldest son was born, a nerve and spine injury tied Grace Noel Crowell to the bed. Her heart ached and she yearned to do something that would help her young husband with the burdens her illness imposed upon him. As she lay there, she prayed.

If she could not be up, working about her tasks, if only she might paint. All her life she had ached to hold a brush and work at the canvas. But that, too, was impossible for brushes and paints cost money, and their expenses were too high now. But her heart kept crying to the Father:

"Just something, Lord, something to do while I lie here," she begged.

The answer came in the small, still voice within her. "Take a pencil and a clean sheet of paper, see what you can do with that."

She took the paper and out began to pour the words:

"God, make me brave for life,
Oh, braver than this,
Let me straighten after pain,
Like a tree straightens after rain. . ."

Slowly she found herself growing into a poet who would sends poems of strength and cheer around the world.

"God always knows," she told me in speaking of her work. "Trust in the Lord with all thine heart; and lean not unto thine own understanding. In all thy ways, acknowledge Him, and He shall direct thy paths." Prov. 3:5,6.

A Program of Christian Service

A REVELATION OF THE CHARACTER OF A GREAT APOSTLE IN HIS FAREWELL WORDS TO A DEVOTED BAND OF CHRISTIAN OFFICERS

Scripture—Acts 20:18—21:16.

By NEWMAN CAMPBELL

IN HIS introduction to this lesson, the Rev. Dr. Wilbur M. Smith writes: "In this lesson we come to the end of what is known as the third great missionary journey that Paul carried on his extensive ministry in the city of Ephesus. Paul would be apprehended by Roman officers, and for the next five years would not be altogether a free man. He would undergo a trial in Jerusalem, three trials in Caesarea, and then be taken to Rome as a prisoner. We are quite confident that Paul was aware at this time of the approaching end of his public ministry, though he may not have known exactly how it was to terminate. One thing he was determined to do, and that was to get to Jerusalem that spring in time for the great feast of Pentecost."

In our last lesson Paul was on the north coast of Asia Minor, in the city of Troas. From there he took a ship with companions to Miletus.—Acts 20:13.

"And from Miletus he sent to Ephesus, and called the elders of the church. And when they were come to him he said unto them, Ye know, from the first day that I came into Asia, after what manner I have been with you at all seasons, Serving the Lord with all humility of mind, and with many tears and temptations, which befell me by the lying in wait of the Jews: And how I kept back nothing that was profitable unto you, but have shewed you, and have taught you publickly, and from house to house, testifying both to the Jews, and also to the Greeks, repentance toward God, and faith toward our Lord Jesus Christ."—Acts 20:17-20.

"And now, behold, I go bound in the spirit unto Jerusalem, not knowing the things that shall befall me there: Save that the Holy Ghost witnesseth in every city, saying that bonds and afflictions abide me. But none of these things move me, neither count my life dear unto myself, so that I might finish my course with joy, and the ministry, which I have received of the Lord Jesus, to testify the Gospel of the grace of God."—Acts 20:22-24.

"And now, behold, I know that ye all, among whom I have gone preaching the kingdom of God, shall see my face no more.

"Take heed therefore unto yourselves, and to all the flock, over which the Holy Ghost hath made you overseers, to feed the Church of God which He hath purchased with His own blood."—Acts 20:25, 28.

Then Paul warned them that after he left them enemies (he called them "grievous wolves") would try to turn them from their faith. "Therefore watch, and remember, that by the space of three years I ceased not to warn every one night and day with tears."—Acts 20:29-31.

"And now, Brethren, I commend you to God, and to the word of his grace, which is able to build you up, and to give you an inheritance among all them that are sanctified.

"I have coveted no man's silver, or gold, or apparel. Yea, ye yourselves know, that these hands have ministered unto my necessities, and to them that were with me. I have shewed you all things, how that so laboring ye ought to support the weak, and to remember the words of the Lord Jesus, how He said, It is more blessed to give than to receive.

"And when he had thus spoken, he kneeled down, and prayed with them all. And they all wept sore, and fell on Paul's neck, and kissed him, Sorrowing most . . . . that they should see his face no more. And they accompanied him unto the ship."—Acts 20:32-38.

As we have filled our space, I would suggest that the teachers tell briefly the remainder of the gospel assigned to the lesson—Chapter 21:1-16.

Members of a class in agriculture at Howard County Junior College watch as members of the Oasis Garden Club supervise the planting of an olive tree on the college campus. The committee, composed of Mrs. W. F. Taylor, at left, Mrs. C. O. Hitt, Mrs. J. D. Leonard and Mrs. Friend Talbot, was instrumental in securing the tree as a donation from the Mar-Vel Garden Center. At right is Bruce Frazier of the college staff. Plans of the club also include the planting of a flowering peach tree on the grounds of Park Hill School. An additional member of the committee, Mrs. Jimmy Beale, was unavailable for the picture.

Pythians Give Dinner For Texas Grand Chief

A George Washington buffet supper was given Thursday night at 6:30 in honor of the grand chief of Texas Pythian Sisters, Mrs. Tom Oliver of Tahoka.

The table was covered with a white linen cloth arranged with red and peacock blue streamers. A miniature cherry tree and hatchet with white and red carnations and gladioli formed the centerpiece. Small American flags and Uncle Sam's hats were candle holders.

The meal was served buffet style to 75 guests from Tahoka, Midland, and Lamesa, and members.

Mrs. J. A. Roberts gave the invocation while Mrs. Bill Kuykendall gave the welcome. The response was given by Mrs. R. L. Buck of Midland.

Highlight of the evening was the formal initiation of officers Mrs. Bill White and Mrs. Charles Fannin were reinstated.

Those initiated were Mrs. J. A. Eppler; Mrs. Jerry Foresyth; Mrs. Morris Robertson; Mrs. Bud Green; Mrs. James Vines; Mrs. H. D. McCright; Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Orr; Leon Cole and J. A. Roberts.

A short speech was given by the visiting grand chief after she had introduced other officers who were visiting with her. She told of her project for the year, which is the laundry room at the Pythian orphanage in Weatherford.

The silver drill prize, $25, was given to Mrs. Oliver to help with this project. She was also given a set of pottery. Visiting officers were presented with organdy lace aprons as remembrances.

Hostesses for the evening were Mrs. Choc Smith and Mrs. Hugo Campbell, assisted by Mrs. J. O. Tynes.

Skit Is Highlight Of Study

"Homes of Then and Now" was the skit that highlighted Thursday's meeting of the Forsan Study Club. Performers were Mrs. L. B. McElrath and Mrs. Sammie Porter.

"The American Home" was the theme of the afternoon's program, and in connection with this a film entitled "Total Electric Home" was shown. Produced by a leading electronics company, homes and conveniences of the future were depicted.

Mrs. Walter Gressett and Mrs. Bill Conger, hostesses, followed a Washington's birthday decor in their table decorations when they served the 22 present.

Texas Day will be observed March 3rd at 7:30 p.m. when the club meets.

Philatheans Help In Piano Purchase

At a Thursday evening dinner meeting, members of First Methodist Philathea Class viewed the piano which they are helping pay for. Plans are also under way to install a screen for the women's lounge, the class was told.

Mrs. M. R. Turner gave the invocation before the dinner, and Mrs. Audrey Johnson brought the devotion. About 30 were present for the affair, which included a short business meeting.

The hostess group was made of members captained by Mrs. C. R. Moad.

Moderation Helps

Karen Sharpe believes that moderation is the key to success in all things and the way to avoid problems. She is seen often on CBS-TV's "Johnny Ringo" series.

Valuable Decor Used At Coffee

COAHOMA — A rosebush of one dollar bills formed the centerpiece for a coffee given in the home of Mrs. P. F. Sheedy Thursday morning.

The unusual arrangement, used with a cutwork cloth on the refreshment table, was later presented to the honored guest at the coffee, Mrs. A. J. Wirth. She and her husband will move soon to Siloam Springs, Ark., to make their home.

Resident of Coahoma for 20 years, Wirth has been an employe of Sinclair Oil Co. for about 41 years. He will retire on March 1.

Forty-eight guests called during the morning to visit and to bid farewell to Mrs. Wirth.

Hostesses joining Mrs. Sheedy included Mrs. Bert Shive, Mrs. Elmo Daniel, Mrs. A. K. Turner, Mrs. C. C. Williams and Mrs. Donald McKinney.

Miss Phillips Is Speaker For Class

Arah Phillips was guest speaker for the Berta Beckett Class of the First Baptist Church when members met at the church Thursday for a covered dish luncheon.

Miss Phillips, who made a tour of Europe last year, showed slides of various spots in Europe and in the Holy Land. Included were scenes in the Garden of Gethsemane.

Mrs. G. J. Couch offered the invocation, and Mrs. F. W. Bettle dismissed the group with prayer. Mrs. J. P. Dodge presided for the gathering.

The table at which 14 members and a guest were seated, was decorated with an arrangement of daffodils in a black and gold container to form an oriental effect.

HOLLYWOOD BEAUTY

Avoid Trouble By Use Of Moderation

By LYDIA LANE

HOLLYWOOD — Karen Sharpe sums up the guiding principle by which she lives into one word, moderation. "If you stop to think about it," Karen confided, "you'll keep out of a lot of trouble.

"It's when we drive ourselves too hard that we get overly tired. And in this state of mind we make bad decisions that may prove costly. Or we get irritable and may lose friendships.

"If you try to be moderate, you don't overindulge in food, and that keeps you from having a dieting problem," she went on.

"If you avoid excesses in drinking and late hours, you'll find that you have better health and better looks. There really is nothing in life," Karen insisted, "where you can't apply moderation.

"When I first started my career, things were not going as fast as I wanted them to and I worried too much. Now I have a more relaxed attitude about my career and I try to enjoy what each day offers."

Karen has a beautiful complexion, and this is unusual since she is in front of TV cameras so much with the hot lights on her heavy make-up.

"I use the simplest routine for cleansing my face," Karen explained. "I carefully remove my make-up with baby oil first and then with a good soaping. I think you have to try different soaps until you find one that agrees with your skin. My skin is quite dry, so I use a mild one.

"I know some girls who want to have a nice skin but they overdo the cleansing routine. Too much cream isn't good for your face. You have to be moderate with cosmetics like everything else.

"When you use too much make-up, you defeat your purpose—that of improving your appearance. People see the 'gook' on you face instead of you," Karen said, in parting.

Spaders Garden Club Hears Jimmie Eason

A lily bulb, which is seemingly just what West Texans ordered, was shown to members of the Spaders Garden Club Thursday afternoon in the home of Mrs. C. A. Tonn.

Jimmie Eason of Eason's Garden Center was the speaker, giving points on correct gardening practices and recommending helps in improving the soil conditions of local gardens.

The speaker showed the group a bulb of the crinum lily, which is especially well-adapted for planting on the west side of a house or wall; it requires very little care and needs a small amount of water, Eason stated. It likes heat, which makes it good for this section. The bulb is available in three sizes.

Eason reminded his listeners that there are 13 basic minerals necessary for a good balanced soil, and stated that a gardener should know the relationship of the soil to his plants and shrubs. Compost and fertilizer will go a long way toward making good growing beds in this locality, he said.

Members were warned against buying so-called bargains in gardening materials, since the better shrubs and flowers are cheaper in the long run.

Sixteen were present for the session, at which plans were discussed for the tasting tea to be given in March, and the Spring Flower Show, slated for April 22. Date for the tea is yet to be decided.

The next meeting of the club will be held on March 3 in the home of Mrs. John Hill, 1808 Donley; Mrs. Don Grantham will present the program on Garden Pools and the Plants in Them.

Mrs. Tompkins Is 1948 Hyperion Prexy

Allies Reject Soviet Passes For East Germany

BONN, Germany (AP) — The Western Allies today rejected new Soviet passes for Western military missions in East Germany. Allied officials contended a change in the wording of the old passes was a new Soviet move to win a measure of recognition for the Red East German regime.

The Americans, British and French sent identical letters to Marshal S. Zakharov, commander of the Red Army in East Germany, telling him the new passes are unacceptable "in their present form."

The text of the letter was not made public.

Uruguay, Stable Welfare State, Has Big Headaches

By BEN BASSETT
AP Foreign News Editor

MONTEVIDEO, Uruguay (AP) —This is the country where a worker can retire on full pay when he is 50 years old. Uruguay's people are well fed and literate. They enjoy the most stable history of government in Latin America.

But the key to Utopia has not been discovered in Uruguay. President Eisenhower, on his visit here is not apt to get many workable ideas for improving the U.S. Social Security System.

The retirement system revolves around the figure 80. If your age and total years' work total 80, you're in. Thus a man age 50 who starts work at 20 has 30 years of work and 50 years of life, totaling the magic 80.

Not all Uruguayans retire at 50, by any means. But say you were one who did so, back in 1948. You had held two jobs, as many persons do, and the government guaranteed you a lifetime pension equal to the average of your total pay for the five years preceding your retirement. It looked as if you had it made.

The Uruguayan peso, when you retired 12 years ago, could command 55 cents in U.S. money. Today it is worth 9 cents. Your pension buys much less today than it used to. Prices have risen as your pension lost value.

That is an example of the problems Uruguay's government faces. At this stage at least, it knows that the people won't stand for a change in the system. The government has to seek new ways to stabilize the peso and get fresh sources of revenue.

The retirement system, probably the most costly in the world, has been in effect 30 years. A worker puts 7 to 12 per cent of his pay into the fund, his employer a like amount. The government must meet deficits.

The social security system doesn't stop there. Among other things it provides widows' benefits, free medical and dental care.

The chances that Uruguay can work itself out of this and other problems offer odds that would hardly appeal to the thousands of people who crowd this nation's gambling casinos.

IN EVERY PIE

The government has a finger in almost any activity you can name. It has a monopoly on alcohol, and on the refining and distribution of oil (all imported). It operates some of the banks, the railroads, a tire factory and even night clubs. It has a monopoly on gambling. Figures are scarce, but no one questions that millions of dollars come every month from eight casinos, from horse racing, from lotteries. Everywhere you turn in Uruguay, there is a chance to gamble and give the government its cut.

You pay 90 cents just to get into a Montevideo casino, part of an elaborate hotel setup with a restaurant and a bar seating 240 persons. The nation's great middle class crowds these places, especially on the Saturday after pay day. Gambling is a major national pastime among Uruguay's three million people who, over-all, can enjoy life in this smallest of South American republics (about the size of North Dakota).

SUMMER NOW

Just now it is summer in the Southern Hemisphere, and the near-million who populate Montevideo are happy. They pour onto the broad sands of nine beaches which spread out along 10 miles of Rambla Drive, a fine shore road any nation could be proud of. Each beach is a kaleidoscope of umbrellas and bathing suits that would be equally in fashion at Malibu or Cape Cod. The women and children drink colas; the men sit sipping hot mate (matay) tea, poured from vacuum bottles, as the tide rolls in on a fresh breeze.

Opposite the beaches, across the Rambla, rise fine homes and dozens of apartment houses of 10 to 12 stories. Even in this welfare state one can attain capitalistic stature. It takes $12,000 to buy a Chevrolet, $5,000 for a Volkswagen —and there are lots of cars, all imported. These are out of the reach of a clerk making $125 a month for a total of 10 or 12 hours' work a day in two jobs. He can eat pretty well, from the nation's vast cattle lands and from farms which supply about every food you could buy in a U.S. supermarket in midsummer. The vegetable stands offer a range running from tomatoes to eggplant to chard. The fruit stands have fine plums, apples and melons.

PLENTY TO DO

On time off, the white collar worker or even the laborer can share the beaches and go to stadiums for soccer games. If he doesn't go to the casino at night, he can take in the theater or make a wager at a neighborhood oasis.

He can have a pretty good life.

But lately things have tightened up, and there is a feeling things may get worse. The housewife hunts vainly for a roll of film to take snapshots. The pipe smoker who used to savor British tobacco winces today over a Uruguayan brand. Imports have been slashed in efforts to steady the economy and keep the peso from shrinking further.

The Colorado party, which ran Uruguay 93 years, tried to set varying values for the peso in domestic and international dealings. It ran up a record of confusion. The man who knew somebody in the right places could enrich himself. Last year the country had enough of these shenanigans. It voted a new conservative government into power.

ATTEMPT MADE

This regime is trying to get things straightened out in the face of discontent over rising living costs. As an example of its methods, it has just doubled the price of gasoline (to about 40 cents a gallon).

A Communist minority is trying to seize its opportunities. It portrays the United States as a villain in Cuba.

But Eisenhower will get a hearty welcome when he parades through Montevideo. There is no question of popular friendship for the United States. The government was unhappy for a time with U.S. tariff policy toward Uruguay's important wool exports, but this problem has worked itself out for the time being.

Uruguay's government runs under an arrangement unique in the Western Hemisphere. The Swiss-like system is topped by a nine-man executive council. Its chairmanship rotates. When Eisenhower comes here March 2 the chairman will be Benito Nardone, 53, son of an Italian immigrant.

The Uruguayans' attitude toward their government has kept the country free of revolution for more than 50 years, but the system has shortcomings. The main one, from some points of view, is that the country has no strong executive. Top decisions are committee decisions.

Today the biggest gamble here in Uruguay is whether Nardone and his associates can keep from foundering as they seek to safeguard an island of welfare-statism in a sea of domestic grumbling and international economic pressures.

Lads Sent To School

Two boys were ordered taken to the Gatesville State Training School by Judge Ed Carpenter, juvenile judge, Friday morning.

Both boys had been at liberty on probation for earlier appearances before the court. One had been before the judge a month ago and the other was granted probation only 10 days ago.

The two boys, according to A. E. Long, juvenile officer, broke into an auction establishment on S. Gregg. They stole a large quantity of assorted merchandise.

The stolen articles were recovered.

Both boys admitted the burglaries when questioned by Judge Carpenter. The court instructed the juvenile officer to take the youths to the Gatesville school for indefinite terms and Long said he would take them there sometime next week.

Hawks Seek Clinch On Zone Title Tie

Howard County Junior College can clinch a tie for first place in West Zone basketball standings by defeating South Plains JC of Levelland here Saturday night. Tip-off time is 8 o'clock.

The Jayhawks anticipate no trouble with the Texans, who have yet to win a conference game.

HCJC is now two games ahead of both Frank Phillips College and Amarillo and, after Saturday night's engagement, have only two games to play — both at home.

The Hawks play Lubbock Christian College Tuesday and close out regular play two nights later against Odessa.

Starting Monday, Feb. 29, the locals will be hosts for the annual Texas Junior College Conference tournament, which features the champions and runnersup in each of four zones within the conference.

In the previous meeting between the two clubs, Howard County won by a score of 106-61. The Hawks gave up only 29 points in the first half and played their reserves almost exclusively in the final 20 minutes.

The Hawks won one of their season's biggest victories here Tuesday night, at which time they flogged Frank Phillips by a score of 89-83.

South Plains has yet to win against a junior college team this season. The Texans' three wins have come at the expense of senior college freshman teams.

Probable starters for HCJC to night are Bob Shirey, Jimmy Evans, Larry Cruise, Tom Garrison and Harold Henson.

Boys who will probably open for South Plains include Brownlow, Norris, McDonald, Lemmons and Jackson or Rowland.

The Texans will warm up for their game with HCJC by playing Odessa in Odessa tonight. The Wranglers, now on a torrid streak, are favored to win that one handily.

LOOKING 'EM OVER

With Tommy Hart

Senior college basketball coaches are apt to flock in here Feb. 29-March 1 for the annual Texas Junior College Conference tournament in which eight of the state's finest juco basketball contingents will be in action.

FRANKIE

One who will be here for sure is Johnnie Frankie, head man at Rice Institute, whose Owls have won only four of 19 starts this season.

Frankie's freshman corps has won only one start to date and he reasons a few junior college transfers would give his varsity troops the needed transfusion next year.

Rice, of course, is very choosey when it comes to students. For instance, Frankie would like to have Mike Marsh of the Midland Bulldogs but his scholastic rating is suspect, so Frankie feels it would be useless to make any overtures to him.

One young man who would fit into Rice's plans and who would be welcomed by Frankie is HCJC's Tom Garrison, the 6-feet-9 stringbean from Tulia who is in his second year at the local school.

Tall Tom has what amounts to a B plus rating in his studies and he's taking 18 hours of work. He's considered one of HCJC's finest students.

Two other Jayhawk cagers who are doing very well in their studies are Bob Shirey, a second-year student; and Ronald Weaks, who is in his first year here.

The boys aren't taking snap courses, either. They're concentrating on subjects like chemistry, physics and history.

All members of the Jayhawk basketball team proved to be able classroom students, by the way. No failures were reported at midterm.

United States athletes participating in the Winter Olympic games at Squaw Valley, Calif., as well as those who will take part in the summer show at Rome, are covered by a blanket insurance policy.

They're allowed up to $5,000 for medical expenses resulting from an accident and $25,000 is awarded for accidental death.

Nearly $28,000,000 was bet by patrons at New Mexico race tracks during 1959. It's safe to say that more than three-fourths of that amount came out of the pockets of Texans.

The state benefited to the extent of $175,850 in racing tax money.

Arkansas had only 31 racing days, compared to New Mexico's 148, and its pari-mutuel handle came to only $18,120,458 but the tax bite is much stiffer there. Arkansas' tax coffers were enriched to the extent of $1,043,388.

Louisiana, where Texas money also flows, handled $45,066,584 in bets at horse tracks (132 days), with a tax return of $3,039,600.

There are reports New Mexico legislators are thinking seriously of asking for a bigger levy against the pari-mutuel handle. Fact is, some track officials at Sunland Park and Ruidoso are resigned to the eventuality.

Pari-mutuel wagering throughout the nation increased 7.49 per cent last year over 1958.

Dr. A. D. (Ab) Kirwan retired recently as chairman of the important NCAA Infractions Committee and is now in Lexington, Ky., where he serves as dean of the University of Kentucky Graduate School.

Kirwan is the fellow who took the lead in placing Texas A&M on probation a few years ago. His critics said he was influenced by the fact that he had an axe to grind with the then Aggie coach, Paul (Bear) Bryant, who formerly was the University of Kentucky coach.

One of Kirwan's last official acts was to place the University of Oklahoma on indefinite probation for alleged infractions.

Kirwan continues as a member of the committee but is no longer chairman. That job has been passed on to Dr. George Young of the University of Wisconsin School of Law, who has served six years on the board with Kirwan.

Stanton Wins Over H'land

STANTON (SC) — Stanton's District 6-A title holders came from behind in the second half here Thursday night to topple Highland, 63-47, in a non-district game.

The Hornets gave Stanton fans some anxious moments as the game was still in doubt until the fading minutes of the third period.

Buzy Brewer, filling in for starter Alton Robertson, who recently underwent an appendectomy, played his best game of the season as he bagged 20 points for the Buffaloes.

Norman Donelson, the district's top point-getter, threw in 27 markers for high point honors.

Stanton next journeys to Tahoka to do battle with the Plains Cowboys for the bi-district title, and a shot at the State Meet in Austin come May. The Stanton-Plains winner must go to Lubbock, however, for the Regional playoffs before a crack at the tourney.

Syracuse Coach Denies It All

DALLAS, Tex. (AP)—Syracuse University football Coach Ben Schwartzwalder said yesterday no "administrator or official at Syracuse has ever made any charges of dirty play against Texas."

Syracuse played Texas University in the New Year's Day Cotton Bowl classic here and charges of "dirty play" followed the contest which Syracuse won, 23-14.

"We are just very sorry the thing has been magnified like it has and wish it would all die down," the coach said.

Local Girls Are In DC Tourney

Boasting a 3-1 won-lost record, the Big Spring Steerettes go to Denver City to engage in a girls' invitational volleyball tournament.

The local girls, who are coached by Bernice Waggoner, are one of 16 teams entered.

They face Fort Stockton in a first round game at 1 p.m. today. Should they win, they return to action at 10 a.m. Saturday. A defeat would send them into the losers' bracket and mark them up for an 8 a.m. date tomorrow.

Big Spring is the defending champion in the circuit, having defeated Imperial in the finals last year.

Only team to defeat the Steerettes this season has been Snyder. That loss came in the best of a three-game series in the Odessa tournament.

City Tourney Begins Sat.

The annual Big Spring Men's City Bowling Association tournament gets under way at 4 p.m. Saturday at the Clover Bowl on South Highway 87 and continues for two weekends.

Vince Best, secretary of the City Association, revealed 27 teams had entered into competition. Team play will be confined to Feb. 20 and Feb. 27.

Doubles and singles play begins at 12:30 p.m. Sunday and will be resumed the following Sunday.

A total of 64 doubles teams, 124 singles and 100 all-events entries made themselves eligible through payment of entry fees.

To enter everything, a bowler anted up $12.

Competition will probably continue until 10 p.m. each Sunday.

Runnels Enters Local Tourney

Runnels' Ninth Graders won the right to play in next week's Big Spring Girls' Invitational Volleyball tournament by defeating their cross-town rival, Goliad, 42-22, in the Runnels Gym Thursday night.

Rosario Munoz and Berina Barrera each scored 13 points for Runnels while Jan Cobb had seven for Goliad.

Runnels also won the eighth grade contest, 54-43, as Jan Womack counted 30 points for the winners and M. Scott had 19 for the losers.

Golial salvaged the seventh grade contest but had to go overtime to win it, 74-61.

National Juco All-Star Game Is Set For March

COFFEYVILLE, Kans. (SC) — The 1960 National Junior College All-American Basketball Series, featuring the North versus the South will be held here the latter part of March, it was announced today, by J. C. "Mose" Simms, classic director.

Site of the second annual games will be the newly redecorated Municipal Auditorium, home of the Coffeyville College Red Ravens. The dates are tentatively set for the third and fourth weeks of March.

Co-sponsors for this year's classic are the Coffeyville Boosters Club and the Wigwam Wisemen of America. Chairman of the game is Mr. Maurice Weinberg, president of the Boosters Club, and prominent Coffeyville retailer.

Last year's North-South contests were played at Hutchinson, Kans. The North, under Coach Jack Hartman of Coffeyville, won the best two-out-of-three series. The South was coached by Boyd Converse of Paris, Tex., Junior College. Both men have again accepted invitations to coach this year's All-American teams.

Nominations have been received from all parts of the United States, recommending talented junior college performers, anxious to participate. The selection committee is now in the process of selecting the best juco stars for the classic.

"This is by far the best group of boys we've ever had nominated," stated Simms. "Every junior college in the nation has been screened for top-flight talent. We are also very happy that the town of Coffeyville is 100 per cent behind the series."

Olympic Stars Launch Serious End Of Games

By MURRAY ROSE
Associated Press Sports Writer

SQUAW VALLEY, Calif. (AP)—The Eighth Winter Olympics gets down to business today. The athletes take over and start gunning for the precious gold, silver and bronze medals.

And judging by the moving and dignified opening day ceremonies —which drew raves from almost everyone here from home and abroad—this still could be a magnificent show if the weatherman cooperates.

The prediction for competition was for partly cloudy weather with a high temperature of 40 in midday.

The Scandinavians were expected to dominate the first event, the men's 30-kilometer (18.64 miles) cross country ski race.

Forty-eight long distance skiers were entered in the cross country at McKinney Creek, 17 miles from here.

This, however, figured to be a battle among Finland's Veikko Hakulinen, the defending champion; Sixten Jernberg, Sweden's "king of the skis"; Norway's Hallainen, another veteran Finnish ace.

The U.S., as usual, wasn't given a chance for a medal in this grind. Uncle Sam's entries include Leo Massa, Lake Placid, N.Y.; Mack Miller, Crested Butte, Colo., Sven Johanson, Spenard, Alaska, and Joe Pete Wilson, Lake Placid, N.Y.

The spectacular Canadian team of Bob Paul and Barbara Wagner was the experts' pick in the pairs figure skating in the $3,500,000 Blyth Ice Palace.

These were the only championships on tap following the postponement of the men's downhill race to Feb. 22 because of Thursday's heavy snowfall.

The hockey program gets going tonight with the United States facing Czechoslovakia. Then Canada's favored sextet opposes Sweden and the Soviet Union's defending champions meet Germany.

In the figure skating pairs, Canada's reigning and three-time world championship team was expected to receive its stiffest competition from the American championship husband-wife duo of Ronald and Nancy Ludington of Roxbury, Mass., and the German teen-age tandem of Marika Kilius and Hans Baeumler. The other U.S. entrants include Maribel Owen and Dudley Richards of Roxbury, Mass., and Ila and Ray Hadley of Seattle, Wash.

The organizers of these troubled games, marred by squabbles, injuries, floods, and too much snow, were heartened by the fine reaction to Thursday's opening ceremonies.

The ceremony, however, was run off in just one hour.

Despite traffic snarls caused by a heavy snowfall, some 15,000 spectators somehow managed to reach this tiny valley nestled in the high Sierras. About 6,500 of them, clad in gay, multi-hued ski suits, gathered in the Blyth arena to watch the parade of 740 brightly attired athletes from 30 nations.

Vice President Richard M. Nixon braved the hazardous mountain roads, the last 46 miles of a 3,000-mile journey from Washington, to say just 15 words:

"I now declare open the Olympic games of Squaw Valley celebrating the Eighth Winter Olympics."

Two former Olympic champions, Andrea Mead Lawrence of Amado, Ariz., and Ken Henry of Chicago, and lovely Carol Heiss, the world figure skating queen from New York, starred in the most dramatic moments of the stirring spectacle.

Mrs. Lawrence, bare-headed and carrying the Olympic torch in her raised right hand, carefully skied down Little Papoose Mountain to hand the flame to Henry. The former speed skating champion slowly circled the snow-covered outdoor skating rink, mounted the platform of the Tower of Nations, and formally ignited the Olympic Flame. The flame will burn night and day until the games end Sunday, Feb. 28.

Miss Heiss, 20-year-old blonde from Ozone Park, N.Y., and the choice to win an Olympic gold medal, recited the Olympic oath on behalf of all of the athletes. Carol, winner of a silver medal in 1956, was the first woman ever to have the honor of taking the oath.

The pageantry was directed by Hollywood's Walt Disney. Highlights included a choir of 2,645 voices, 1,285 instrumentalists from 52 California and Nevada high schools, the uncaging of 2,000 pigeons, "Doves of Peace," and the firing of cannon. Spectators gathered as souvenirs some of the 30,000 balloons sent aloft in the breeze.

Phillips Tire Company finished YMCA Industrial Basketball league play without the loss of a game Thursday night, beating E. C. Smith Construction Company, 75-69, in the Goliad Gym. The champs are coached by Joe Cook.

The Smith quintet kept pace with the Tiremen until the final period, when Preston Hollis and Charley Knotts led a surge that paid off for the champions.

Knotts wound up as the top scorer of the game with 28 points while Hollis tossed in 25.

Don Stevens tallied 17, Ray Crooks 16 and E. C. Smith 10 for the losers.

The score was tied at the end of the first period, 22-22. Phillips had a one-point bulge at half time but the Smith quintet pulled into Smith's chances for victory diminished when Oakie Hagood fouled out in the fourth period. He had nine points at the time and had played a creditable defensive game.

The Outlaws and Cannon's Shoe Store were to have played the other game but Cannon's had to forfeit due to a shortage of players.

Waterfowl Down

WASHINGTON (AP) —A winter waterfowl survey for the Central Flyway showed a decrease of 42 per cent from the number estimated in that area last year, the Interior Department said today.

STARS VISIT ON SATURDAY

The public is invited to meet Mickey Mantle and Bobby Layne, nationally famous athletes, at Layne's Bowl-A-Rama Saturday morning.

Mantle, now a resident of Dallas, is the star center fielder of the New York Yankees.

Layne, owner of the bowling emporium bearing his name, is one of the all-time great quarterbacks of the National Football League. He currently is employed by the Pittsburgh Steelers.

No charge will be exacted by the management to the public and children especially are being urged to visit the Bowl-A-Rama and meet the two stars.

They will sign autographs, starting about 11 a.m., and probably will engage in a bowling exhibition.

IN PRACTICE TILT

Sands To Meet Powerful Bula

ACKERLY (SC) — The Sands High School girls' basketball district action, will play the powerpacked Bula team at 7 o'clock here this evening.

In Texas Coaches Association ratings released recently, Bula was second and Sands fourth in the state.

The Sands girls, coached by Cliff Prather, won 11 straight games within District 19-B.

The Mustangs now boast a 26-3 won-lost record, having lost only to Cooper, Hawley and Coahoma. T hey avenged the latter defeat.

Janice Bearden is the leading Sands scorer, with a 27-point average.

The Sands girls will compete in bi-district competition either Feb. 21 or March 1. A win there would send the Ponies to the Regional tournament at Brownwood March 4-5.

Sands' bi-district opponent will be Barnhart, which beat Miles, 46-22, Tuesday night for the 20-B championship.

Barnhart's chief threat is Linda Taylor, who scored 21 points against Miles.

Barnhart finished with a 7-1 won-lost record within the conference.

Harney Is Low In 1st Round Of Tournament

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP)—Putting was the key to the $20,000 Tucson Open as it moved into today's second round.

Paul Harney, Worcester, Mass., putted "wonderfully well" Thursday for a 6-under-par 34-30—64 for the 6,413-yard, par 70 El Rio course. It was a 20-foot putt that dropped for an eagle three on the 510-yard 18th that gave him a one-stroke lead.

The pack of seven just behind the ex-Holy Cross star all credited putting for their 65s.

Arnold Palmer, Ligonier, Pa., bogeyed three holes before his putter shoved him back into contention with a 6-under-par 29 for the last nine and a 65.

The putter also was king with Gene Littler, the defending champ from Singing Hills, Calif., with 34-31; Charles Sifford, Los Angeles, possibly the greatest Negro player in the world, 31-34; rookie Mason Rudolph, Clarville, Tenn., 34-31; Bob Goalby, Crystal River, Fla., 33-32; Dave Marr, Cedarhurst, Long Island, 34-31; and Tom Nieporte, Bronxville, N. Y.

Local Officers At Regional Session

Three local law enforcement officers were among the 150 attending the meeting Thursday of the West Central Texas Law Enforcement Association at Coleman.

Varnell Johnson and Bill Baker, police department, and A. G. Mitchell, sheriff's office, represented this area.

State Sen. Grady Hazelwood, Amarillo, told the membership that Texas should have an elected Insurance board. He was critical of the auto insurance rulings.

Other speakers included Justin Kever, San Angelo district attorney, Tom Todd, Abilene district attorney, Lt. Chester Burk, Department of Public Safety, and Lynwood G. Elliott, Liquor Control Board.

Disabled Farmer Claims Due In May

Most severely disabled self-employed farmers who qualify for disability benefits will not receive their first monthly check before May 1960, according to H. P. Thomas, district manager of the Odessa security office. The first payment in May is for the month of April.

Farmers who came under social security for the first time in January 1955 will have obtained the required 20 quarters of coverage (5 years) in October 1959. After the work requirement is met, the law requires that a person be disabled for six months before payment can be made. A six-month waiting period commencing with October 1959 will permit payment starting with April 1960.

Although many of these disabled farmers will not have paid for the required five years of coverage until they file their 1959 farm self-employment tax return, they should inquire now about disability benefits.

Minimum Wage Increase Seen

WASHINGTON (AP) — The administration apparently has agreed to go along with a modest increase in minimum wages. The move could mean fatter pay checks for well over a million workers.

Two Escape From Overturned Car

Two Colorado City men escaped serious injury, but the car in which they were travelling was demolished as climax to a wild ride on U. S. 80 at 1:15 a.m. today.

Jimmie Parks, state highway patrol officer, said that he had sighted a 1953 Studebaker on the road and was pursuing it at the time of the accident.

Driver of the car, according to the patrol officer, was James Vernon Cline, 24. Horace DeLong, 22, was a passenger in the car.

Parks said that he was clocking the Studebaker at 100 miles an hour when it ran off the main roadway onto the improved shoulder. Parks said the driver appeared to be dozing at the wheel at the time the car left the road. The car was whipped to the left and went into a broadside skid across the pavement and down into the median. It flipped completely over and turned half over a second time. It landed on its top and skidded down the west bound lane of traffic to end its journey with the front bumper pointing south.

DeLong was sprawled on the east side of the vehicle and Cline in the middle of the west bound traffic lane when the wrecked car came to a halt. Parks had a narrow escape from crashing his patrol car into the careening Studebaker.

Both men were taken to the Big Spring Hospital in a Talley-Pickle ambulance. They were treated for minor injuries and released.

Leach Due To Be Sentenced Today At Colorado City

COLORADO CITY — David Leach, 34, timed his escape from the 132nd District Court room here Monday just right, though not by design.

While officers momentarily had their eyes off him, he slipped out of the court room 15 minutes before a jury returned with a verdict of guilty. It recommended one year in prison because Leach, a former felon, had had a pistol in his possession.

Leach was due to have formal sentence passed on him today by Judge A. S. Mauzey. Had he made his escape after the verdict had been returned, he might have been subject to a charge of escape. However, there is no penalty for breaking jail or escaping before conviction.

Leach, who has a record for eluding the law, told Sheriff Dick Gregory after his capture at Pecos Thursday morning, that he ran south after getting out of the Mitchell County courthouse. Then he trotted west along the T&P tracks to the hill west of Colorado City, cut north to the highway and caught a truck to Sand Springs in eastern Howard County. He said he then went to Snyder, doubled back to Abilene, where he got a change of clothes, and then hitchhiked to Odessa visiting with a family Gregory declined to name.

Thursday morning Gregory received a telephone call that Leach was in Odessa. With Police Chief Leon Yeager, he was flown by Eolon Harrell and Frank Deregibus to Odessa.

Meanwhile, Leach headed west on Interstate 20 aboard a truck. Gregory and Yeager arrived not long after he left but learned that Sheriff Slim Gabriel of Odessa was in pursuit. Ahead of them, the truck was stopped at a roadblock.

Leach, unarmed and speaking matter-of-factly, said: "I'm the man you're looking for."

Kavanaugh Rites Set For Saturday

Funeral for A. R. Kavanaugh, former Big Spring resident, will be held at 3 p.m. Saturday at the Wiley Funeral Chapel in Baird.

Mr. Kavanaugh, a retired T&P locomotive engineer, died early Thursday in the T&P hospital in Marshall. He and Mrs. Kavanaugh had been making their home in Austin in recent years.

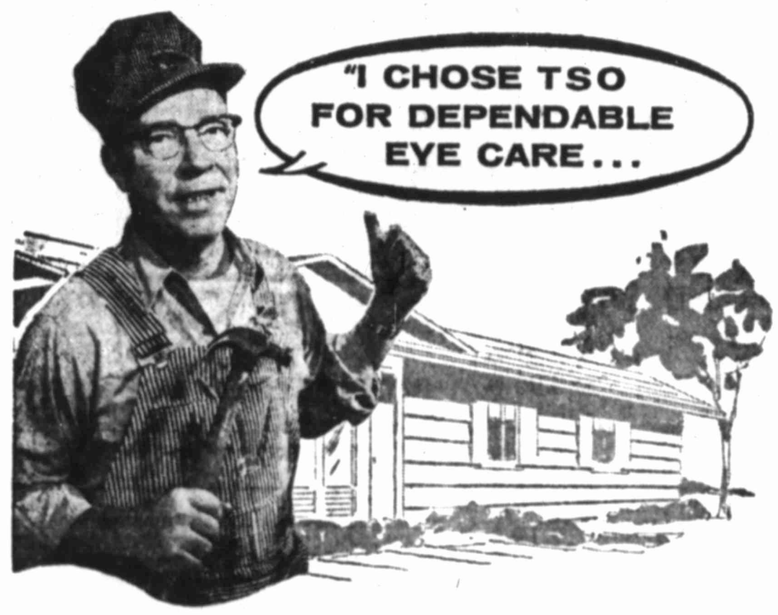

Burial will be in the Baird Cemetery with Masonic rites.

Among the survivors is Mrs. Andy Brown, a daughter.

Lakeview Singing Set For Tonight

He will be accompanied by O W. Brown, who has teamed with the singer for numerous appearances. Everyone is invited to attend the program.

Little Flower In Full Bloom

By HUGH MULLIGAN
AP Feature Writer

Like "Oklahoma!," which became an overnight hit 17 years ago, the Broadway musical "Fiorello!" has a one word title plus exclamation point.

The exclamation point, the authors insist, is an important part of the title, and their point is well taken. For "Fiorello!," like "Oklahoma!," is a real astonisher, one of those "they said it couldn't be done" shows that comes off amazingly well.

The musical biography of the late Fiorello H. LaGuardia, New York's pepperpot mayor, crept into town just before Christmas with only a moderate advance sale, no big stars and an ominous lack of theater party bookings. In a season top heavy with expensive musicals "Fiorello!" theoretically didn't stand a chance.

It violated all the rules. It had two love stories instead of one; it was plainly political in plot and its music necessarily period piece. But "Fiorello!," in the best manner of its title character, won out against all odds and settled down at the Broadhurst Theater for a New York run that may even rival that of Little Flower LaGuardia.

Hi-fi fans who may wonder what all the shouting is about need only consult Capitol's original cast album. Jerry Bock's music and Sheldon Harnick's lyrics rate an exclamation point for the season's most singable score, despite a cloying, painfully hero worshiping opening number called "On the Side of the Angels." But once they get that out of their system, the boys can do no wrong. "Till Tomorrow" is a lovely waltz beautifully sung by Ellen Hanley. "Politics and Poker" and "Little Tin Box" are the funniest show songs to come along since "Guys and Dolls." There is a sprightly march, "The Name's LaGuardia," as befitting the hero's background as the son of an army bandmaster, and a World War I type ditty called "Home Again" that is warmly nostalgic, and a tenderly witty spinster's lament called "I'm Gonna Marry the Very Next Guy" that gives newcomer Patricia Wilson a chance to break up the show.

Tom Bosley, in the title role, is so convincing in his speech mannerism—the high pitched whining voice with just a suggestion of a lisp—that the roly poly figure of LaGuardia manages to come across even on records.

The supreme test for any cast album is whether people who have never seen the show can fathom the plot without recourse to liner notes and still gain a full measure of enjoyment. "Fiorello!" passes the test by a landslide. It emerges, exclamation point and all, as the best period piece musical since "Music Man," the best New York musical since "Guys and Dolls" and the wittiest political satire since "Of Thee I Sing."

"J.B.," Archibald MacLeish's Pulitzer Prize winning verse play has been brought to records by RCA Victor with the original cast of Raymond Massey, Christopher Plummer, Nan Martin and James Daly, who replaced Pat Hingle after Hingle was injured in an elevator shaft accident shortly after the opening. Compressed into four sides of a two-record album, MacLeish's modern version of the Book of Job takes nearly an hour and a half to play but is well worth the effort. The poetry at times is pretty impossible and, like every other literary assault on the problem of evil, the denoument is weak and unsatisfying, but Massey-Plummer and company come up with a memorable addition to the still sparse field of spoken word records.

THIS DAY IN TEXAS

By CURTIS BISHOP

Among the blessings which came to Texans with annexation on this day in 1846 was the United States Postal service.

There was ample room for improvements. Before the Revolution the inefficiency of mail service was one of the minor grievances of the colonists against the Mexican administration. The government of the poverty-stricken Republic did little better.

Mail carriers had difficulties both financial and physical. Pay was poor, if and when it could be collected; mules escaped, Indians attacked. Bad roads and the Texas weather also contributed their harrassments. The Bastrop postmaster (and justice of the peace, blacksmith and militia officer) complained that all he received for his services was a few worthless "shinplasters."

Many citizens resorted to private carriers for mail service before Texas joined the Union. Groups of citizens in Houston, Nacogdoches and elsewhere even contributed to private subscriptions to pay their own mail carriers.

'Ethan Frome' Exciting Bit Of TV Drama

By CYNTHIA LOWRY
AP Television-Radio Writer

NEW YORK (AP)—Edith Wharton's New England tragedy "Ethan Frome" was given an exciting production Thursday night by CBS' Show of the Mouth.

That it was exciting was due to skillful performances by Julie Harris and Sterling Hayden, playing the unhappy lovers.

The David Susskind adaptation of the book started somberly. But although characters moved inexorably toward disaster, the pace began to quicken. When the climactic scene was reached—the lovers coasting to their attempted destruction—it seemed too drastic and somehow an artificial solution.

Julie Harris was perfect as the pathetic, lonely waif. And Hayden was convincing as the long-suffering failure of a husband. Clarice Blackburn perhaps overdid things a bit as the nagging, nasty and hypochondriac wife.

But it was still an interesting and rewarding 90 minutes.

It was a big night for snow-covered hills on CBS. Before Ethan Frome and his light-of love took their trip downhill, the network took us to Squaw Valley, Calif., for the opening of the Winter Olympics.

Civic Theatre Elects New Governors, Plans Pageant

Three new members of the board of governors were elected Thursday evening at a meeting of the Big Spring Civic Theatre.

They are Don Hush, civilian employe at Webb, who also is serving out the term of Hugh McCauley as secretary; Mrs. Marge Brown, wife of Howard Brown, Webb sergeant; and Sgt. Dewey Magee.

Members tried the suggestion box idea on revision of the constitution and by-laws, passing out slips of paper on which ideas for changes were written. A special committee will compile the suggestions.

Membership fees of $5 per family per year were paid, this marking the first time dues have been required by the Civic Theatre. Deadline for payment is April 1.

It was noted that work would soon switch from renovations on the Prairie Playhouse to rehearsals for the Easter Pageant.
