All that glitters ...

All that glitters is not gold; neither is it glass. But some glass, be it cheap Carnival glass or expensive lead crystal, may cost like gold. And antiques of glass, gold, gems and base and precious, and semi-precious metals shaped into objects by master artisans and artists from bygone times are on exhibit this weekend in the downtown Midland Center.

Antique prices are for real

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Juke boxes blare.

"Oh yes...I'm the Great Pretender...."

This one didn't.

The musical sound might rattle the expensive — rare and costly — merchandise off the shelves and disturb the patrons.

There was a lot of glass and procelain: "cheap" and expensive, good and expensive, and fine and expensive glass and other fragile collectibles and investments commanding high prices on the glittering shelves.

"You know," said Larry Hatfield, who specializes in and capitalizes on nostalgia, "juke boxes don't sound good turned down."

Like the other antique dealers who are set up in the downtown Midland Center over the weekend, Hatfield was waiting for the spenders and browsers to come along and swap their cash for his merchandise.

They'll even consider checks and plastic credit cards in lieu of hard cash to close a transition.

His nickelodeon, a Rock-Ola from the early 1950s, was tagged with a sound $1,450 tag.

It played, on low volume, The Platters' "hits," including "The Great Pretender" and "The Magic Touch."

Remember?

And many a person who coveted a magic touch might be interested in his 1932 Watling Rol-A-Top slot machine. He's asking $4,750 for this one-armed bandit with the shiny brass ornament.

Hatfield put a nickel in the machine. The nickel dropped. He pulled down the silvery lever. Wheels spun, and the "bandit" kept the nickel and yielded nothing in return.

"It's tighter than bark on a tree."

THE SHOWROOM was filled with antiques, including Hatfield's gumball machines, barber-shop chairs and the coin and music machines, and hundreds of fragile items that are worth more as investments than to satisfy longings for "things" from the past — pleasant things and fond memories.

"People are buying all they can of the early (items), but the later is going to, you betcha," Ethel Bawcom, who, like her husband, Elvin, was collecting $2.50 admission fees to the showing. Their forte and livelihood is putting together antiques shows and selling antiques.

"Everybody wants to buy what their grandparents had," said Mrs. Bawcom, who hails from Muldrow, Okla.

Were items in the show to reflect what everybody's grandparents collected over the years, then there were some well-fixed, clothed-in-riches grandparents abounding.

The merchandise ranged from a few dollars for pewter knick-knacks to thousands of dollars for cloisonne, lamps, gems, carved ivory, and appointments.

Antiques, even those which originated in Europe or the Orient, seemed more plentiful in the United States than in their country of origin.

"The biggest percentage of it is found in this country," said Bob Mitchell. He and his partner, Jerry England, operate "Hidden Acres Antiques" in town-to-town sales.

Decades and a century or more ago, fine items were shipped to the U.S. of A. from abroad to sing the glory of America's new-found wealth and affluence. So much exquisite appointments, figurines, settings, and fixtures and other pieces to enhance homes, mansions, museums and offices were brought over that, according to Mitchell and England, the Europeans and the Orientals are now seaching the bowels of the United States to find the "stuff" for their museums and patrons of the arts.

"They're coming over here and buying the old stuff to complete their museums," Mitchell said.

The more the antiques change hands, the more valuable they become.

"Each trip they make, the stuff just gets higher."

BOBBE MIRTS was looking over some American-made "stuff," which, by other standards at the show, were inexpensive: salt and pepper shakers from $17.50 to $50.

When the shakers were new back one, two or three generations ago, their retail prices were probably measured in cents.

"Well," she said, "at that time, certainly (they were cheap), but that was many years ago."

Remembrance of things past is money in the till for antique dealers.

Bea Rogers, who comes from Oklahoma City, knows that the cash flow is necessary for her to stay in business.

"You have to have money; you can't buy it (antiques) without money."

She travels to antique shows to do more than just sell her merchandise. She is also somewhat of a "hawker." She scans other merchandise for her customers back home and elsewhere.

"That's part of it," she said. "In some shows, you may not hardly make your expenses."

A goodly lot of Ms. Rogers' merchandise is Depression glass, which was cheap back in the 1920s and 1930s, and Carnival glass, which was even cheaper — or free — and predates the former.

"A lot of it (glasses) you got in oatmeal (boxes), flour (sacks) and at gas stations," she said. But the Carnival glass is "cheap glass, cheap, cheap glass."

That "cheap" in-quality glass bore no cheap prices at the antique show.

A "grape-and-cable" foot plate from 1903 commanded a $135 price tag.

A Madrid pitcher was selling for $69.50. New, it might have brought 50 cents or a dollar.

FAR FROM CHEAP were some classic "stuff" displayed by Irene Traylor of Cleveland, Okla.

"Don't you think I've got some pretty stuff?" she asked.

To say nothing is to say "Yes, indeed."

A pair of Mainland China cloisonne dragons that could adorn a bookcase or a china cabinet or an oil baron's desk was listed for $3,500.

Other "stuff" was priced to fit Midland's affluence.

And there was no pretending about the prices.

One-armed bandit

A nickel will get you a chance to win a handful of coins or nothing at all from the shiny slot machine on exhibit in Midland Center. The one-armed bandit is among the glitter — from glass to gems — for sale this weekend in an antique show and sale arranged by Elvin and Ethel Bawcom of Muldrow, Okla.

Pope shows better signs for recovery

ROME (AP) — Pope John Paul II began moving his arms and legs in physical therapy Friday as the outlook for his recovery brightened. Meanwhile, a state prosecutor said he suspected the Turkish terrorist who shot the pope had accomplices but he was "not convinced" there was an international conspiracy.

Deputy State Prosecutor Luciano Infelisi said warrants had been issued for "unknown persons" who may have helped the Turkish terrorist to attack the pope.

"If the act were the work of a single terrorist, there would be a quick trial," Infelisi said in an interview Friday broadcast by the Italian television network RAI. "I don't think there will be a quick trial. I think the investigation will be long."

For the first time since he was hit in St. Peter's Square Wednesday, John Paul gave a papal blessing — to a team of his doctors, nurses and technicians. "It was a moving scene. Just about everybody was in tears," said a nurse at Rome's Gemelli Policlinico Hospital.

The pontiff, who turns 61 on Monday, underwent abdominal surgery for multiple lesions caused by a bullet that pierced the abdominal cavity. He was running a slight fever and suffering pain but the hospital director, Dr. Luigi Candia, stressed this was normal.

A morning medical bulletin said "the outlook is distinctly better," and an evening bulletin said "better progress is being made. In particular, the blood pressure values are being maintained within 140-80. The heart rate is between 90 and 110 beats per minute with normal sinus rhythm. The respiratory frequence per minute is maintained at 18 breaths per minute with excellent oxygenation..."

Dr. Emilio Tresalti, chief medical officer of the hospital, said doctors did not expect to be able to make a long-term forecast for the pope's health "for seven or eight days."

"There is still the danger of infection. The prognosis is still uncertain," Tresalti said.

He said the pope was still being fed intravenously but was feeling better and "has had better contact with his surroundings."

Police with rifles guarded all the entrances and screened all visitors to the intensive care ward on the ninth floor where the pope was expected to remain for the next few days.

Giulio Stella, the hospital spokesman, said four to six rooms were being set aside on the 10th floor for the pope, close aides and a security detail. For security reasons, a key must be inserted in the elevator to make it go above the ninth floor.

Jobs —

Money isn't everything for many of today's workers

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

Money isn't enough for many of today's workers, says a research group which found that a changing standards and a changing labor force are bringing new demands to the job market.

The Public Agenda Foundation, a non-profit research organization in New York City, said more and more employees are looking for intangible rewards and challenges from their jobs.

The report is the first step in a seven-nation study designed to find how how to resolve what the foundation calls "the growing 'mismatch' between what people want and need from their jobs and what the workplace is structured to provide."

The initial phase of the project included a look at what has happened to the workplace since World War II, along with interviews with a cross-section of workers in the area around Seattle.

Carol Greenwald, the project director, said that money is still important. "We assume money," she said. "But it's not enough for most people ... They want much more personal rewards, more sense of involvement. They want to be appreciated."

Ms. Greenwald said studies have shown that about 60 percent of today's workers are motivated primarily by money; the rest of the people, however, say non-monetary rewards are more important.

She also said that job satisfaction and motivation or commitment do not necessarily go hand in hand. "You can be very satisfied and be doing nothing," she said.

The foundation report said that commitment often is linked to intangible factors. It said people want to be treated fairly. They want to be able to take pride in what they do. They want independence and responsibility. They want management support — in the form of the tools they need to do their jobs and in the form of a "thank you" when the jobs are well done.

According to the foundation researchers, there are several reasons for the new demands.

The generation that grew up in the 1960s and 1970s, the study said, was "shaped by new forces: social movements, the Vietnam War, an ever-higher national standard of living and rising personal expectations ... A job developed meaning in itself..."

There were changes in the work force, including an influx of women and an increase in the level of education, and changes in the economy itself. "When most families were supported entirely by their male breadwinner, the weekly paycheck was essential to the family economy," the study said. "Today the economic safety net of government transfer programs for non-workers lessens considerably the risk of personal economic catastrophe."

The foundation also said the nature of the workplace has shifted. There is less direct control by management. "Quality and productivity levels are in the hands of individual workers ... " the report said."Often individuals are protected from firing by union contracts or unproductive work goes unnoticed within the complex chaos of the work process."

Syrian-Israeli tension mounting

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Prime Minister Menachem Begin said Friday after another round of talks that he will give U.S. envoy Philip C. Habib more time to seek a diplomatic solution to the crisis with Syria over its missiles in Lebanon. Syria said it was ready for battle if war breaks out.

In Washington, Pentagon sources confirmed Israeli newspaper reports that the 18,000-ton Soviet helicopter carrier Moskva moved closer to Lebanon's coast, saying it was apparently there to show support for Syria, a Soviet ally.

The Pentagon sources said the U.S. aircraft carrier Independence and two other warships bound for Norfolk, Va., sailed through the Suez Canal into the eastern Mediterranean Friday and may be kept there because of the Israeli-Syrian tension. The sources refused comment on an Israeli newspaper report that the aircraft carrier Forrestal was also moved in.

Habib, whose presence in the area is regarded as a deterrent to armed conflict, was to overnight here.

Israel Radio said he would go to Saudi Arabia on Saturday and then Damascus, the Syrian capital, for a new round of talks.

It would be Habib's first stop in Saudi Arabia since he arrived in the Middle East as President Reagan's personal envoy in quest of a solution to the missile crisis.

The Saudis have helped to bankroll Syrian military forces stationed in Lebanon under an Arab League mandate to enforce a truce reached after Moslem-Christian hostilities erupted in civil war in 1975.

But Syrian Foreign Minister Abdul-Halim Khaddam was quoted in his country's newspapers Friday as saying the Arab nations are now withholding the $15 million a month support. The reason was unclear.

Neither U.S. or Israeli officials would disclose Habib's plans or discuss details of his hour-long meeting with Begin, the second in 12 hours.

Begin told reporters after the meeting that Syria continued to refuse his demand the missiles be removed, and said: "The efforts to find a peaceful solution to the crisis continue."

Begin has threatened to unleash the Israeli air force to knock out the Soviet-made SAM-6s, which have been in Lebanon since April 29. On Thursday the missiles shot down a pilotless Israeli spy plane.

Syria's Khaddam had been quoted in Damascus newspapers as saying Syria was "ready to do battle if Begin translates his threats to deeds."

The Israeli newspaper Yediot Aharonot, a Hebrew-language independent, announced that the Forrestal, sister ship of the Independence, had sailed into the eastern Mediterranean. U.S. Navy officials in Washington refused comment.

The paper had also reported the presence of the Soviet's helicopter carrier and in Washington, Pentagon officials said it had been in the Mediterranean for some time, but had recently been moved "close enough to Lebanon for obvious reasons," explaining that as a show of Soviet support for Syria.

The ship carries 18 Hormone helicopters primarily for anti-submarine warfare and a variety of missiles, anti-aircraft guns, and other weaponry.

The Pentagon said the Independence, the guided missile cruiser Harry E. Yarnell and the guided-missile destroyer Charles F. Adams had arrived in the eastern Mediterranean.

The Independence battle group raised U.S. naval strength in the Mediterranean to about 32 ships.

Measles cases cause for concern

ATLANTA (AP) — Measles is almost eliminated in the United States, but public health officials say an outbreak in south Texas has the potential to re-infect measles-free areas throughout the nation.

The second largest outbreak of measles in the United States this year occurred among the children of migrant farm workers in two counties along the U.S.-Mexico border. The workers are preparing for seasonal journeys that will take them to every state in the nation, the national Centers for Disease Control said Friday.

Texas health authorities are going door-to-door in the Rio Grande Valley to vaccinate children as young as six months of age, said Dr. Alan Bloch, a CDC measles expert who was sent to Texas to gauge the size of the outbreak.

As of May 2, 94 cases of measles were reported in Hidalgo and Cameron counties — or 8.9 percent of the nation's measles cases — and the outbreak continues to spread, Bloch said. The counties have about .2 percent of the U.S. population.

The outbreak takes on added importance because the country is very close to its goal of eliminating measles by October 1982, Bloch said.

"About 95 percent of the 3,144 counties in the United States were measles free for the first 16 weeks of the year. That makes these problems stick out more," Bloch said.

In its Morbidity and Mortality Weekly Report, the CDC said the migrants, who live in south Texas in the winter, have begun moving north into other areas. "Thus, measles could potentially be introduced into many areas that are currently measles free," the report said.

Bloch said the south Texas outbreak should be under control by summer, and health authorities are prepared to stop the disease should it follow the migrants to other areas.

"We have alerted all the 400 migrant clinic sites in the country to check for vaccination status as these people travel through the migrant stream," Bloch said. "We have also alerted the state epidemiologists, and immunization personnel in all states, to set up surveillance networks to see if there is any measles activity."

The CDC recommends that children be immunized against measles after they are 15 months old, but because of the south Texas outbreak, migrant children should now be vaccinated at 6 months of age, Bloch said.

More than half of the children involved in the Texas outbreak were less-than 15 months old, the CDC said. One of the children died, the only measles death reported in the United States this year.

The outbreak was especially vicious, accompanied by measles-caused complications including encephalitis, pneumonia and myocarditis, the CDC said.

"We have defined the children of migrant workers as a high risk population in terms of severity of illness," Bloch said. "To protect these children, we have made it a policy of vaccinating all migrant dependents 6 months of age or older. The main thing is to protect these children. The second reason is to prevent transmission to other parts of the country."

The outbreak was irritated by several factors, Bloch said, including the coincidence of the measles season peaking at tme start of the crop growing season.

"The measles season peaks in the middle of May," he explained, "and the growing season in the Valley means there are going to be a lot of people congregating together.

Parents fine following quads' birth

BOSTON (AP) — Both mother and father are doing fine following the birth of four healthy baby boys at Brigham and Women's Hospital on Friday, a hospital spokesman said.

Hospital spokesman Joe Gavaghan aid AliceEarle of Canton was resting comfortably after she gave birth by Caesarean section shortly after noon. Her husband, Charles, was also at the hospital.

"They're still recovering — both of them," said Gavaghan.

He said the multiple birth had been anticipated. A team of five doctors, headed by Dr. Isaac Schiff, was in the delivery room.

The quads, still unnamed, arrived over a two minute period, Gavaghan said.

Industrial production up in April

WASHINGTON (A) — The nation's industrial production grew by 0.4 percent in April despite the ill effects of a nationwide coal strike and near-record interest rates, the government reported Friday.

The gain was somewhat higher than many economists had expected. But it was not enough to change their predictions that the overall national economy will grow little — if at all — in the next few months.

Since the first of the year, industrial production at the nation's factories and mines has risen moderately in three months and declined slightly in one after gaining more than 1 percent each month during the last half of 1980.

Friday's new report by the Federal Reserve Board said the April gain would have been 0.7 percent except for effects of the United Mine Workers strike.

William Cox, acting chief ecnomist at the Commerce Department, said that gain showed "surprising strength, although of course the growth rate is moderate."

"It gives just a little brighter hue to the picture regarding the industrial sector," he said.

Small changes also probably can be expected in the near future, he said, with "some months of slow growth, some months of sinking spells." Long-term effects of the Fed's restrictive monetary policy — which tends to raise interest rates — also remain to be seen, he said.

David Cross, a senior economist at Chase Econometrics in Bala Cynwyd, Pa., said the production figures of the past few months seem "hauntingly familiar."

Industrial production also was rising a bit or falling a bit for several months before last year's recession, "but as soon as it became definite that retail sales and demand had dropped, output dropped along with them," Cross said.

He noted that Commerce Department figures released this week showed retail sales down 1 percent in April, and he said continued monthly gains in industrial production are unlikely.

However, he and Cox agreed — and so do other economists — that no return to last year's sharp recession is in the offing.

The Reagan administration has predicted a general slowdown in the national economy, and few private economists quarrel with that forecast.

The new Fed report said auto assemblies were up 5 percent in April to an annual rate of 6.8 million units, contributing about 0.1 percentage point to the overall gain.

But that auto increase went into rebuilding inventories, not into filling new orders, analysts agree, and a repetition soon is unlikely unless customer demand picks up quickly.

Bush says red tape too excessive

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Vice President George Bush told applauding Texas legislators Friday that Washington rules and regulations have reached "a point of ridiculous excess."

Bush came to his home state under heavy security to make the speech he was to have delivered the day he was forced to return to Washington because of the shooting of President Reagan.

The vice president said at a news conference he expected the president to offer new proposals to combat crime and international terrorism.

He assured legislators the Reagan administration wanted to eliminate red tape and give states and local governments greater flexibility.

"At times, these Washington-directed rules and regulations have reached a point of ridiculous excess, covering even the precise kind of clothing equipment to be used by female, as distinguished from male, atheletes in schools operating with federal government funds.

"I won't go into any greater detail here, except to say that is the kind of rule only a Washington bureaucrat with an overdeveloped regulatory gland could come up with," Bush said.

Legislators grinned, clapped and cheered.

Bush departed from his prepared text to tell legislators that efficiences and elimination of red tape should offset the president's proposed $305 million-a-year cut in Texas' special-category grants.

British officer to aid Atlanta probe

ATLANTA (AP) — The English police official who headed a five-year search for the "Yorkshire Ripper" will visit Atlanta next week to help local police investigate the murders of 27 young blacks over the past 22 months, British authorities say.

Chief Constable Ronald Gregory of the West Yorkshire Police Authority arrives Wednesday for a three-day stay and will return to his own country the following weekend, his office said Thursday.

The visit was requested by Atlanta Public Safety Commissioner Lee Brown, who has acknowledged contacting the 59-year-old British policeman but has not confirmed any details of the visit.

The decision to seek assistance from the British constable is not the first time Atlanta investigators have asked for outside help.

Last November, five of the top homicide investigators in the country spent a week in Atlanta brainstorming with members of a special police task force investigating the slayings.

They left without producing any major break in the search for the killer or killers.

The director of the state crime lab said Friday that investigators have concluded that "about half" of the victims' bodies had picked up similar textile fibers of several colors after they left home.

"We know that it's not from their natural environments," Dr. Larry Howard said. "We've checked to see if the fibers are in their homes and they're not."

Howard said the fibers could come from many different sources, such as carpets, curtains or clothing. And he said the significance of the fibers and of similar dog hairs found on some of the victims cannot be determined until a suspect is located.

"The evidence is worthless until we have something to compare it to," he said. "We have to see what th fibers lok like at a place that has some significance."

Meanwhile, a 17-year-old black youth became the object of a short search Friday by authorities, but he was found safe.

Police spokeswoman Beverly Harvard said a general alarm was broadcast Friday for Stanley Moon after his mother reported him missing at midmorning, one day after the youth called police and reported someone tried to abduct him.

She said she had no other details of the reported abduction attempt and did not know where he was found by police.

Police in suburban DeKalb County — where the bodies of five murder victims, including the latest, 17-year-old William Barrett, have been found — issued a missing persons statement on a black teen-ager not seen since May 2.

Police spokesman Chuck Johnson said the youth, 17-year-old Nkomo Sharp, does not fit the profile of persons believed to be at risk because, at 6 feet 2 inches tall and 170 pounds, he is taller and heavier than any of the victims. But Johnson said police nevertheless are concerned "because he's been gone for a long period of time."

He said there have been several reported sightings of the youth since his disappearance, and police have attempted to send messages to the boy through some friends.

Gregory and other senior officers of his police force are under investigation for undisclosed reasons by British authorities.

The investigation was jointly announced on April 3 by the West Yorkshire County Council and the West Yorkshire Police Authority.

Area weather expected to turn warmer, windier

Although most of Friday night was spent under one weather watch or another for the Permian Basin, today should have only a slight chance of thunderstorms as the weather turns warmer and a little windier, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport.

The high today is expected to be in the mid-80s, although the chance of rain is set at 20 percent for the day. In other words, it might be warmer, but still not a good day to wash the car. Winds will be strong, coming from the southwest at 20-30 mph and gusty today and Sunday.

The weather will be fair tonight as temperatures return to the upper 50s. Winds will decrease to 15-20 mph tonight.

Sunday will again be windy with 20-30 mph gusts and a high expected in the mid-80s.

Friday's weather was about as unpredictable as West Texas weather can get. Area towns reported rain, hail and generally bad weather in the evening. Andrews, Stanton, Big Lake and Crane had rain, while Rankin reported a little hail. A helicopter was forced down due to bad weather after 8 p.m. Friday outside of Big Spring.

Midland and Odessa watched dark storm clouds roll in and out of the city most of the day and night Friday. A burst of cloudfire about 7 a.m. brought the .14-inch of rain recorded for the day at the airport. That precipitation boosts the month's total to 1.13 inches and the year-to-date total to 5.07 inches of rain.

Friday's high was 74 degrees, accompanied by a chilling wind. The record high temperature for the date was set in 1937 at 101 degrees.

Friday's low was 58 degrees. The all-time low was recorded in 1945 at 42 degrees for the date.

Garwood jury begins deliberations

JACKSONVILLE, N.C. (AP) — A Superior Court jury began deliberating charges Friday against Marine Pfc. Robert Garwood after being told that an 8-year-old girl he is accused of sexually molesting has overbearing parents and may have made up the incident.

"Maybe somebody did these things to her. Maybe she fantasized it. Maybe she got it out of a book. But it was not done by Bobby Garwood," defense attorney Vaughan Taylor said during closing arguments.

Garwood, 35, convicted by a military jury in February of collaborating with his captors in Vietnam, is accused of molesting the daughter of a couple who befriended him following his return in 1979 from almost 14 years in prisoner-of-war camps.

He pleaded innocent to charges of first-degree sex offense, attempted first-degree sex offense, attempted rape and taking indecent liberties with a minor.

The jury of eight men and four women began deliberating the case at 4:13 p.m. following 45 minutes of instructions from Superior Court Judge Robert D. Rouse Jr.

After telling Rouse they would not be able to reach a verdict for "some time," the jurors deliberated until 7 p.m., then were taken to the hotel where they were sequestered. Deliberations were to resume Saturday at 9 a.m.

Taylor said during an hour-long presentation that he feels sorry for the youngster, who was 7 years old at the time of the alleged molestation, because of the way she is treated at home.

He said the girl's parents are "obviously overbearing, and the mother is probably the biggest problem in this case."

"Look at the mother's testimony in this trial. Look at the names she said she calls her children. Look at the arena in which this poor child has to live," Taylor added.

Postal Service seeks higher productivity

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Postal Service wants to get higher productivity from its workers to make up for President Reagan's budget cuts.

"If we're going to absorb this $344 million cut (for fiscal 1982) without reducing service, we're going to have to do better," Postmaster General William F. Bolger said Thursday.

Bolger told the House Post Office Committee that he hopes there will be no reduction in mail service because of the Reagan proposal to cut the postal subsidy.

The Postal Service goal for the fiscal year was a 3 percent improvement in productivity, measured by how much mail is moved per worker. Bolger said the goal was changed to 5 percent after Reagan proposed his budget cuts.

Bolger reported a 5.5 productivity gain this year. Asked by Committee Chairman William D. Ford, D-Mich., whether any private companies had done as well, he replied, "I haven't seen it yet."

Bolger is campaigning to win congressional acceptance of his plan for extending the five-digit ZIP codes to nine numbers beginning this summer. The longer codes will allow more automated processing of mail, thereby further improving productivity, he said. However, there are bills in Congress to forbid the ZIP code extension.

The Reagan budget called for phasing out the Postal Service's "public service" subsidy by fiscal 1984, a year ahead of the earlier target. "We've known for over a year that we'd probably have to take a cut in the subsidy. So we've been making some preliminary plans," Bolger said.

Group says time coming for 'universal language'

NEW YORK (AP) — A Polish oculist invented a new language in the 19th century because he believed that linguistic differences contributed to the hostilities among the peoples of Eastern Europe.

Now a small but devoted worldwide fraternity — that claims about one million followers — says the time is coming for Esperanto, the "universal language."

Or, as they would say, "La tempo venas por Esperanto."

Esperanto is the answer, they say, to the incredible costs of translating speeches and documents at such international organizations as the United Nations and the European Common Market.

At the 10-nation Common Market, where seven languages are spoken, interpretation costs alone are more than $23 million a year, and interpreters must perform such linguistic acrobatics as translating from Danish into Greek, sometimes going through two intermediate languages and shedding meaning along the way.

"Esperanto is the answer to this 'babelization' of international organizations," says Julius Manson, head of the Universal Esperanto Association office in New York.

The Esperantists do not suggest replacing English, French and the other "natural" tongues with their artificial language.

Rather, they propose using Esperanto, which is rooted largely in the Romance languages and marks its 100th anniversary this decade, as a universal second language.

Instead of having more than 100 interpreters at U.N. headquarters to cover all possible combinations — Russian to Spanish, Arabic to Chinese — the delegations would have Esperanto speakers expert at translating from and into their native tongue, whether it be English or a minor African dialect.

Esperanto, in speech and documents, would provide a uniform medium of expression. At the same time, by putting obscure Third World languages on essentially the same footing as the six major U.N. languages, it would end "language discrimination," the Esperantists maintain.

"It is more efficient, more accurate, faster and cheaper," Manson, a retired labor mediator, said in an interview. A universal language also would be a boon to multinational companies and for international travelers generally, the Esperantists say.

But critics, including professional interpreters, scoff at the idea.

"It just isn't practical," said George Klebnikov, head of the U.N. interpretation service in New York. "To begin with, nobody speaks that language."

Nonetheless, Manson and his co-linguists push on, sporting green-star pins that signal fellow Esperantists they are in the presence of a speaker of the "universala lingvo."

They say a conservative estimate of fluent Esperantists in the world is one million, although only 30,000 are dues-paying members of the UEA, whose headquarters are in Rotterdam, the Netherlands.

Worldwide, more than 100 periodicals are published in Esperanto, and radio stations in China, the Vatican, Poland and elsewhere carry regular broadcasts in the language. Classes are conducted for new students at hundreds of locations.

Some 40,000 books and other publications, including volumes of original poetry and translations of classics, have been published.

They range from the Bible ("En la komenco Dio kreis la cielon kaj la teron," begins Genesis), to "Winnie La Pu," a translation of the English children's classic.

The language was devised through years of meticulous work by Polish oculist Ludwik Zamenhof, who published the seminal book in 1887. Zamenhof was convinced that linguistic differences contributed significantly to the hostility he saw among the peoples of Eastern Europe.

The language is popular in that region, particularly in its birthplace.

"Poland is really 'Esperantized'," said Manson's wife, Betty. "You can go into any store and find someone who speaks Esperanto."

The appeal of Esperanto is its logic and simplicity. All nouns end in 'o,' all adjectives in 'a,' adverbs in 'e.' Verb forms are infinitely simpler than in most languages; there are only 16 grammatical rules, which have no exceptions, and pronunciation is invariable.

There are 15,000 word roots, three-quarters Romance-based and the rest mostly Germanic, and they can be built up to a total of 150,000 words by adding prefixes and suffixes, Manson explained.

From the root "bel," for example, comes the word "belo," for beauty, and "bela," meaning beautiful. By inserting the affix "ul," meaning person, one obtains "belulo," a beautiful person.

FCC chairman to be sworn in WASHINGTON (AP) — Mark S. Fowler, Ronald Reagan's communications counsel during the 1976 and 1980 presidential campaigns, is expected to be sworn in Monday as the 19th chairman of the Federal Communications Commission.

President Reagan's nomination of the 39-year-old Republican lawyer, a senior partner and founder of a Washington law firm that specializes in representing broadcasters, was confirmed Thursday by the Senate on a voice vote.

Fowler had received the endorsement of the Senate Commerce Committee May 6, five days after he was questioned briefly during a committee hearing.

The University of Florida Law School graduate pledged to pursue and expand the deregulatory activities of his predecessors, while rebuilding "an atmosphere of constructive cooperation" with the public and industries regulated by the FCC.

Fowler will take over the reins of the FCC from Republican Robert E. Lee, who will retire June 30. Lee has been heading the agency on an interim basis since late January when Democrat Charles D. Ferris stepped down.

Ferris, who was appointed by President Carter and took over the FCC in 1977, is generally credited with leading the commission through the most active phase of its 47-year history. His deregulatory policies, however, were never accepted by the broadcast establishment, which thought Ferris was encouraging new technologies and competitors like cable television to their detriment.

Fowler, as a broadcast attorney who has also held a variety of jobs at radio stations, is generally thought more likely to consider the economic effects of FCC decisions on the established industry.

"The touchstone, the final and most important question that must be answered, is what is in the public interest," Fowler said in an interview in March. "But we have the best commercial broadcast system and the best telephone system in the world and I don't think we should lose sight of that."

The only hint of controversy surrounding Fowler's nomination occurred last week when it was disclosed that Fowler's law firm was being sued by a former client who accused the firm of malpractice. Fowler said the suit was filed after his firm sued the client for non-payment of legal fees.

"Filing a suit like this is a typical strategy employed by clients sued by law firms for non-payment," Fowler added.

The disclosure nonetheless prompted Democrats on the Senate Commerce Committee to hold up Fowler's nomination temporarily while they reviewed the documents in the suit. That review was completed without producing any strong objections by Democrats.

Fowler already has announced he is selling his interest in the firm of Fowler & Meyers and disposing of minor stock holdings in two communications companies. He has also said he will not participate in any FCC deliberations involving cases he handled while in private practice.

According to a financial disclosure statement submitted to the Senate Commerce Committee, Fowler earned about $68,000 from his legal work in 1980. As chairman of the FCC, he will be paid $55,387.

Fowler will fill the first of four FCC vacancies that already have or soon will develop this year. He will complete the unexpired term — through June 30, 1986 — of Democrat Tyrone Brown, who resigned in January.

Reagan has nominated Republican Mimi Weyforth Dawson, an aide to Sen. Robert Packwood, R-Ore., to fill Lee's seat when it becomes vacant June 30. She is still awaiting a confirmation hearing.

The president also is expected to re-nominate Democrat James H. Quello for another term, and to nominate Democrat Henry Rivera, an Albuquerque, N.M., lawyer, for the fourth vacancy. The president is required to maintain a 4-to-3, Republican-to-Democrat ratio among the commissioners.

Space shuttle ready for September test

WASHINGTON (AP) — The space shuttle Columbia is in "beautiful condition" after its maiden flight and should be ready for a second orbital test on Sept. 30, the space agency said Friday.

The launch date was set after a thorough inspection of damage sustained by the reflyable rocketship during a 2¼-day flight which ended April 14.

"The orbiter really came back in beautiful condition," John Presnell, a shuttle project manager said at Cape Canaveral, Fla., at a news conference relayed to reporters here.

Columbia was returned to its cape launch site buckled to the back of a Boeing 747 jetliner after astronauts John Young and Robert Crippen piloted it to a perfect landing on a desert runway at Edwards Air Force Base, Calif.

Presnell said technicians have identified "about 50 anomalous conditions — most of them minor, such as instrumentation problems and heat sensors not working."

He said the only problems of any consequence were the failure of two heaters on one of three auxiliary power units, the loss of some re-entry heat data because a washer got jammed in a tape recorder and a zero-gravity toilet that quit working in the final four hours of the flight.

Robert Dotts, a shuttle manager, praised as "outstanding" the performance of thousands of silica tiles designed to protect Columbia from re-entry heat.

Perfecting the tile system was a major headache that contributed to a two-year delay in getting the shuttle into space, but Dotts said the system "exceeded our most optimistic estimates."

Dotts said a total of 303 "dinks and gouges spread over the entire surface" had been counted in the more than 30,000 tiles. Only 10 or 12 of them will have to be replaced before the next mission, he said, and the others are being repaired.

He said the tiles had protected Columbia so well that "based on what we see at this time, we ought to be able to certify the system for operational flights."

Columbia has three more test flights planned before it becomes operational next summer for a variety of commercial, military and scientific missions. Three other shuttles are being built, each designed for 100 or more round trips into space.

Astronauts Joe Engle and Richard Truly are to fly the September mission, which is planned as a four-day test. Columbia's cargo bay will carry a 16,000-pound payload to survey Earth's resources, and the pilots are to test a 60-foot-long remote manipulator arm intended to deploy and retrieve satellites on later flights.

Nothing sweet about gypsy moth

Homeowners declare war on voracious pest

AP Laserphoto

Worried homeowners from Maine to Maryland are declaring war this month on the gypsy moth, shown here, a voracious pest that munched 5 million acres of foliage in the Northeastern United States last year.

By MIKE STANTON
Associated Press Writer

BOURNE, Mass. (AP) — Worried homeowners from Maine to Maryland are declaring war this month on the gypsy moth, a voracious pest that munched more than 5 million acres of foliage in the Northeast last year.

"Many states recorded all-time highs last year and most are predicting the infestation will be as bad or worse this year," says Dr. Charles Schwalbe, director of a U.S. Department of Agriculture center here that studies gypsy moths.

Gypsy moth eggs begin hatching into caterpillars in late April. The caterpillars do their destruction through late June, stripping forests of leaves, weakening and sometimes killing trees.

Then they turn into moths, laying eggs in July and August to set the stage for the next year's onslaught.

"I'm afraid we're some ways away from being able to manage them in the Northeast," said Schwalbe. "One of the major problems in dealing with gypsy moths is their unpredictability."

Last year, caterpillars feasted on 5.1 million acres, almost double the area defoliated in any year since government record-keeping began in 1924.

Scientists are at a loss to fully explain the sudden increase — or do much about it.

"There are more than 100 natural controls that all interact to determine the gypsy moth population," said Dr. Michael Birmingham, a state forester in New York, where 2.4 million acres were defoliated last year.

The most important control, says Birmingham, is a virus that strikes when the caterpillars run out of food and begin to starve.

"There are a number of effective controls, but unfortunately man is not one of them," he added.

The moths have infested the six New England states plus New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania and small parts of Delaware and Maryland.

Carried by the wind, Schwalbe says they are spreading gradually toward Virginia, West Virginia and Ohio.

And carried unwittingly by people moving to other parts of the country, gypsy moths have been detected in eight other states: California, Illinois, Michigan, Nebraska, North Carolina, Oregon, Washington and Wisconsin.

By using special traps to detect gypsy moths in the early stage of infestation, Schwalbe said the USDA has successfully eradicated every infestation outside the Northeast except one in central Michigan.

The government's strategy is to contain gypsy moths in the Northeast until the means to exterminate such large numbers are developed, probably within another decade or two, Schwalbe said.

The most effective weapons against large infestations are chemical and biological pesticides. But authorities concerned about the environmental impact of chemical spraying are directing long-range efforts toward natural control.

At his Cape Cod laboratory, Schwalbe and a staff of 60 produce more than 60,000 caterpillars a day for various experiments.

One popular method of natural control involves unleashing parasites such as wasps and flies to prey on eggs or caterpillars. Another focuses on disrupting the mating of moths to reduce the following year's population.

To detect and measure moth populations, USDA researchers set out thousands of triangular cardboard traps baited with the female moth's sex lure, pheromone. Pheromone can be used to confuse male moths so they cannot find the female, which cannot fly. But the technique is not effective in fighting a large-scale infestation, Schwalbe said.

Schwalbe also is experimenting with sterilizing male moths with gamma rays and then releasing them to compete with fertile males.

Developing natural ways to fight the pests requires time and patience, and waiting is difficult for a homeowner whose yard is overrun.

"People will use 100 times more pesticide on a tree than we would in our aerial spraying," says Frank Pagliaro, a New Jersey state entomologist in Trenton.

Worried about widespread spraying on reservoirs and other creatures, such as the honey bee, states are moving toward what the government calls "integrated pest management." IPM is a combination of spray and natural controls suited to an area's environment, magnitude of infestation and what local residents want.

Pagliaro said officials must run a gauntlet of public opinion when determining how to treat a specific area.

"A mother will complain that the caterpillars are all over her house and giving her children a rash and ask why we aren't spraying," he said. "But then a woman who is pregnant calls and says she doesn't want her neighborhood sprayed because she's worried about the effect on her baby."

The increase in the gypsy moth problem in recent years can be traced in part to man, says Birmingham.

Moths lay eggs on such things as camping vehicles and lawn furniture that are subsequently moved from the Northeast, Schwalbe says.

The gypsy moth also has man to thank for ts introduction to this country.

Lee High student earns MC academic award

Julie Dunn, the daughter of Melvin and Mary B. Dunn of 3406 Princeton Avenue, has been given an academic award to attend Midland College.

The Lee High senior has a grade point average of 4.025, two academic letters and two PTA achievement awards.

Miss Dunn is a member of the President's Cabinet of the Student Council, the National Honor Society, the Rebel band, debate and JETS. She is the president of her youth group at St. Ann's Catholic Church.

Trustees to review skills test

Results of the second Texas Assessment of Basic Skills tests taken by about 3,500 third, fifth and ninth grade students last February will be presented at the June 9 meeting of the Midland Independent School District board of trustees, reports Bryant Saxon, director of program development and research for MISD.

While district and campus aggregate scores will be reported to the public, individual results are available now and may be obtained by the student, his parents or guardian by contacting the school principal for a conference. The results will be sent home with report cards if parents don't pick up the scores.

Some 700,000 third, fifth and ninth grade students participated in this statewide assessment required under Senate Bill 350 passed by the Texas Legislature during its 1979 session.

Detailed analysis of the test results will include scores compiled according to ethnic background, sex and whether or not the student is enrolled in migrant or other programs for the disadvantaged. Particular emphasis will be given to plans already underway to work on improved programs for both individual schools and students next year. These programs and their related costs will be supported by state compensatory education funds made available under Senate Bill 350.

"Our purpose is to develop more effective ways of teaching children," Saxon says.

Quality Makes Sense!
Homestead Ceiling Fans are the most finely crafted American made fans on the market today, with engineering advances most other manufacturers are still trying to copy. All Whisperfans come standard with variable speed control, reversible motor and 5 year warranty.

Quietness Makes Sense!
Through years of research, Homestead has pioneered the quietest ceiling fans on the market using a General Electric motor with patented Torsion-Flex® mount and our patented flywheel design.

Energy Savings Make Sense!
Most homes and businesses were not constructed with energy conservation in mind and do not use heating and cooling energy in an efficient manner. Ceiling fans are one of the most cost efficient means to supplement an existing air distribution system. Operating at less than 100 watts of power at full speed, the 52" Whisperfan I and Whisperfan II will provide year-round comfort and real energy savings for only pennies a day.

Whisperfan® III Makes Sense!
Homestead Products introduces Whisperfan® III, our most exciting model ever! This matchless six-bladed beauty looks dramatic even when standing still. Whisperfan® III had the lowest energy consumption of any American-manufactured ceiling fan, operating at full speed on less than 50 watts of power. The six blades provide more air with less air noise than similar size four-bladed fans at the same speed. Its handsome 38" span fits perfectly into bedrooms, kitchens, over dining tables and in other average size rooms.

1. First Ceiling Fan Manufacturer in the United States to design and build a quiet ceiling fan.
2. First Ceiling Fan Manufacturer to build a ceiling fan that uses less than 50 watts of power at full speed.
3. First Ceiling Fan Manufacturer to build a highly efficient six bladed ceiling fan.
4. First in quality and craftsmanship, because of extensive quality control inspections, we see very few fans ever come back for service.

Budapest turns to casino in foreign currency quest

BUDAPEST, Hungary (AP) — The Soviet bloc's newest and most elegant casino, Western-equipped and financed, is developing a regular clientele among the non-Hungarian customers allowed at the gaming tables and slot machines.

"We are quite a new team, people who never worked in places like this," says manager Jozsef Somogyi, himself fairly elegant, in an all-orange room packed with slot machines. "In spite of that, we have had no complaints," he says.

Hungary's new casino is the latest product of what is widely considered the most inventive Communist economic system in the Soviet bloc.

Built, with the help of Austrian partners, into the top of Budapest's luxury Hilton Hotel high on the spectacular Buda Castle Hill, it offers a sweeping view of the Danube River to anyone looking up from its French roulette tables.

Its sole reason for existence is bringing in hard, Western cash.

Since its April 25 opening, it has drawn about 200 gamblers a day, officials say, and has pulled in as many as 450 in one day.

"Most are from Austria, Yugoslavia, Italy and different Arab countries," says Somogyi.

In its first three weeks, the casino developed a hardcore clientele of about 80 seemingly well-heeled regulars who Somogyi says "probably" live in Budapest, and who prefer the gaming tables to the slot machines.

Hungary's Danubius Hotel enterprise owns 51 percent of the casino. Its partner is an Austrian company which runs casinos in Vienna, Salzburg and seven other locations.

The two companies spent the equivalent of almost $1.5 million to set up the Budapest casino. No one will say whether the cost has been recovered or speak about profits.

"You have people who have won large sums of money and there have been others who lost," says Somogyi, taking refuge in what he says is the international ethical code of casino operators.

Business is transacted in West German marks at a pace which could instantly wipe out the average Hungarian worker's monthly pay of about 3,400 forints, or $112.

Ownership of Western currency is tightly controlled in Hungary and few Hungarians could afford much gambling in the new casino, were they allowed in.

Residents of other Soviet bloc countries are also barred from the casino.

"For 25 years, we have been fighting against alcoholism in Hungary but we have not been successful," Somogyi says. "We don't want to get ourselves into a two-front war."

So Hungarian gamblers must content themselves, for the time being, on horse-racing, the national lottery and a national soccer pool.

Although small by Las Vegas or Monaco standards, the Budapest casino has its room of slot machines, three French and two American roulette tables, three blackjack tables and a baccarat table whose chairs still haven't arrived.

"It's only since we opened that we understand how many technical problems can arise," Somogyi says. He adds it may be a while before anyone goes ahead with plans for a second casino, at Hungary's Lake Balaton resort area.

Some sources say it took as long as six years to decide to go ahead with the casino project. Officials now contend, however, that allowing capitalist-style gambling presents no conflict with the Marxist ideology.

"It is not ideological," says Somogyi. "It has to do with money ... it is a game system, as in all the world...."

Lesser casinos, some merely hotel rooms with slot and pinball machines, exist at least in the Soviet Union and Bulgaria, as well as communist Yugoslavia, which is independent of the Soviet bloc.

The Budapest casino, with its foreign-made roulette tables and slot machines, and courtly black-tied croupiers, is a far more elegant undertaking.

Hungary has had nothing like it, Somogyi says, since a relatively small casino at Lake Balaton closed during World War II.

Somogyi, a personable 34-year-old, was a Hungarian travel official in Cologne, West Germany, before his transformation into a casino manager.

Watt, environmentalists continue to disagree

WASHINGTON (AP) — The men Interior Secretary James Watt has called "hired guns" came away from a meeting with the secretary Friday saying the "cordial" session had not eased their fears over Watt's handling of environmental matters.

The meeting with representatives of national environmental groups was held at Watt's request. Later the representatives told reporters that though they appreciated the invitation, they and the secretary disagreed each time the discussion went to specific issues.

"Generalities are easy to gloss over," said M. Rupert Cutler of the National Audubon Society. "We found disagreement with specifics."

Brock Evans of the Sierra Club added: "The differences are quite deep in the philosophical area."

Douglas Baldwin, Watt's chief spokesman, said later the meeting had been "harmonious" and that Watt believed there had been "many areas of philosophical agreement."

However, the environmental group representatives brought to the meeting a list of their chief concerns, and Cutler said there was no substantial agreement with the secretary on any of the major points.

"We need some positive signs for the environment," said Evans. "We're not getting any."

Major items on the list included acquiring all parklands authorized by Congress, protecting the national wilderness system, doing more for national parks than just upgrading deteriorated facilities, and avoiding offshore oil drilling in environmentally sensitive areas.

While Watt did not speak with reporters after the meeting, he has made his position clear on those points in the past.

He has called for a moratorium on all park purchases and urged that money for buying land be used instead to upgrade present parks, which he says fell into disgraceful condition under past administrations.

Watt has said the nation must develop energy resources on public lands but that this can be done in a manner consistent with protecting the environment. Earlier this week, he proposed opening up a billion acres of offshore lands for oil and gas drilling.

The representatives of the environmental groups said the only agreements reached were that the "dialogue" should continue and that in some cases such alternatives as easements or zoning changes could be used in acquiring parklands instead of outright purchase.

Baldwin, in his assessment of the meeting, said the session was one of a series Watt had initiated to open lines of communication with various groups in his "continuing education as a new secretary."

He pointed to agreement among the participants that there should be "stewardship" of the national park system, but said, "There can be come differences of opinion over what contitutes stewardship."

On the subject of alternatives to purchase of parkland, Baldwin said Watt agreed with the idea but said the alternatives are "extremely difficult to implement."

Baldwin said the secretary wanted to develop relationships with the environmental groups "that would be more direct than just talking to people through the newspapers." He said Watt looks forward to future sessions with the environmental representatives.

Watt and major environmental groups have been feuding ever since his nomination was announced.

The environmentalists have criticized Watt as being too much in favor of development and not concerned enough with protecting the environment.

Watt, for his part, has said he has found environmentalists across the country "very helpful" but has not gotten cooperation from the "hired guns" in Washington.

Princess Anne gives birth to girl

LONDON (AP) — Princess Anne, only daughter of Britain's Queen Elizabeth II, gave birth to an 8-pound 1-ounce girl on Friday at a London Hospital, Buckingham Palace announced.

The princess, 30, and her daughter were doing well, said an announcement signed by four doctors. "The queen, of course, is delighted," at the birth of her first granddaughter, a Palace spokeswoman added.

It was the second child and first daughter for Anne and her husband, Army Captain Mark Phillips.

While awaiting the birth, the princess stayed with her mother at Windsor Castle outside London. The baby was born one day overdue and within six hours of Anne's departure by car from the castle to the London hospital of St. Mary's, Paddington.

"A normal room was reserved for her," a hospital spokesman said. The private room overlooks the back of Paddington railroad terminus.

The baby is sixth in succession to the throne after her brother, Peter Mark Andrew, born in 1977, four years after the princess married Phillips.

The children do not have titles because their father has not taken one and Peter was the first royal grandchild in 500 years to be a commoner. His sister is the second.

Anne will be 31 in August. She and her husband, a farmer, live at Gatcombe Park, a mansion in Gloucestershire in western England.

Capt. Phillips arrived at the hospital in time for the birth but it was not known if he was present at the delivery.

He telephoned news of the birth to the queen at Windsor Castle. Phillips told reporters a name has not yet been chosen for the baby.

The couple's first child also was born at St. Mary's, selected by the royal family because George Pinker, the queen's gynecologist who attended the princess, is a consultant there.

Florida sinkholes growing in size and number

WINTER PARK, Fla. (AP) — The number of sinkholes gulping central Florida real estate grew to at least eight Friday as homeowners from Orlando to Tampa looked from their windows to find yawning pits where yards, driveways and roads had been.

A friendly neighbor knocked on the door of Avis Burnside's Tampa home to warn her that a 10-foot-deep crater was waiting a few feet behind her Cadillac.

Not far away, Hillsborough County workmen were busy filling a smaller cavity that opened on a rural road. And near Lake Wales, some 55 miles east of Tampa, a heavily traveled road was temporarily closed while a shallow, 20-foot wide sinkhole was filled with concrete.

It all began last week in this Orlando suburb, where a giant sinkhole gulped down a house, cars and property valued at $2 million. In the past two days, smaller craters have opened up in nearby Altamonte Springs, Windermere, Lakeland and Auburndale, while one was reported near Lake Wales and two near Tampa.

Geologists say there is no way to prevent sinkholes, which are caused by collapses in the rain-parched limestone layers that lie beneath much of Florida.

Much of Florida is gripped by a severe drought which has forced a mandatory 25 percent cutback in water usage for most of South Florida. The conditions have fed brushfires and threatened wildlife in the Everglades, and forecasters say no real relief is on the way.

Two of the latest sinkholes were near houses, one in the Orlando suburb of Windermere and one just north of Tampa.

Police Chief Jeff Villella said the Windermere hole was located between a private swimming pool and a lake and posed no threat to structures. It developed late Thursday and was about 40 feet wide.

The Tampa sinkhole opened Friday morning and took part of a suburban Lake Magdalene lawn and driveway. It was reported to be 10 to 12 feet across and about 10 feet deep.

Mrs. Burnside said the sinkhole stopped growing just short of their carport. "It's stabilized. We're not alarmed," she said.

Busy Mammoth Grove Road, which leads to a Lake Wales residential area in the heart of Florida's citrus belt, was closed temporarily for repair of a sinkhole.

Another was reported near the citrus-belt city of Lakeland. That depression was in a barren field and was reported as 20 feet wide, 15 feet deep and growing.

In Altamonte Springs, a suburban Orlando community north of Winter Park, officials reported no expansion of a 50-by-40-foot abyss which ate up trees and parts of vegetable plots of two properties and caused a thin crack in the foundation of one house.

Dominick Cipollone and his neighbor John McLelland moved out of their homes temporarily while soil engineers studied the hole and pondered what to do about filling it up.

A sinkhole also developed in an Auburndale orange grove, but police spokesman John Lyons said it did not appear to be growing. It was estimated at 60 feet wide by 5 feet deep.

Geology engineer Bryant P. Marshall, a private consultant, said the cavities which opened up Thursday were more "typical" in size than the 400-by-100-foot maw in Winter Park.

A $40,000 Porsche 928 was lifted out of that pit late Thursday. City officials had denied permission for the operation, but the insurer of the car, Reliance Insurance Co., pledged a $5 million liability policy to cover any further damage.

Eruption of volcano leaves residents' fate in doubt

HONLULU (AP) — Beneath a blanket of smoke that hid the sun, rescue boats sped toward a remote Northern Marianas island early Saturday in hopes of finding 54 villagers who had not been heard from since a volcanic eruption spewed lava toward their tin homes.

One of two volcanoes on the tiny island of Pagan, 350 miles north of Guam, erupted at 7:15 p.m. EDT Thursday, belching ash 40,000 feet into the air.

Some authorities believed the residents — mostly farmers and fishermen — may have fled to caves, as they do during typhoons, for refuge from the heat and fiery molten rock. But others feared the volcano's first blast in 26 years blast may have killed the islanders.

Lt. Sandy Stairs, a Navy public affairs officer who flew over the island, said there was no sign of human activity.

"We couldn't see much of anything," she said. "It was like being fogbound."

A Coast Guard C-130 rescue plane was being dispatched from Guam, and the rescue vessel Fentress was en route from Saipan, the capital of the Northern Marianas. A Japanese cargo ship also was diverted to the island.

The Fentress, carrying lifeboats, medical supplies and a doctor, was expected to reach the island sometime Saturday morning. It hoped to evacuate the residents, probably to Alamagan, the nearest inhabited island in the Marianas chain.

"It could be no one is alive there anymore," said the physician, identified only as Dr. Benusto, who has relatives on the island.

The eruption of Mount Pagan was reported by the island's only shortwave radio operator. It was the last broadcast U.S. authorities received.

The crew of an Air Force B-52 diverted to the island reported seeing a lava flow headed toward the village of about a dozen tin homes.

A Navy P-3 plane and two Navy helicopters from Guam and two commercial aircraft from Saipan flew to the island but were turned back because of poor visibility and volcanic ash fallout.

Joaquin Flores, a pilot for Freedom Airlines, a commkter service, said he could see little of the island because of the dense black smoke.

"It's just like looking into the night — it's black," said Flores. "The only thing we saw was the southern tip of the island and we were down to 600 feet."

Officials at Anderson Air Force Base on Guam declared an alert for volcanic ash fallout. Base weathermen said drifting ash could come within 70 miles of Guam.

Flores said he believed the village and the island's grass runway were covered by lava. He said the only possible escape for the islanders would have been by boat, and no boats were seen in the vicinity of the island.

Mount Pagan, which rises 1,879 feet above the island, last erupted in 1955 but was considered a live volcano. The island's other volcano is dormant.

Pagan is the northernmost island in the Commonwealth of the Northern Marianas, a U. S. territory. It is located about 3,500 miles west of Hawaii and is on the other side of the International Date Line, making its time about 14 hours ahead of Eastern time.

The eruption came just days before the first anniversary of the May 18 blast of Mount St. Helens. The Washington volcano's first big eruption left 61 people died or missing, spread a cloud of gritty ash over 1,000 miles and leveled thousands of acres of timber.

Coal strike negotiations drag

WASHINGTON (AP) — Negotiations to end the 50-day-old Eastern coal strike dragged on Friday as union and industry continued hard bargaining on contract language involving the use of subcontractors on United Mine Workers job sites.

Union President Sam Church indicated the two sides were still having difficulty finding agreement on the issue, which is crucial to support of any tentative three-year settlement by 160,000 UMW members.

Asked if union and industry bargainers were no longer "hung up" on that matter, Church replied, "I wouldn't say that."

Bobby R. Brown, president of Consolidation Coal Co. of Pittsburgh and chief bargainer for the Bituminous Coal Operators Association, declined comment on the talks.

"We don't know," he answered when asked whether the two sides would continue bargaining here over the weekend. Church also said it wasn't known whether there would be negotiations Saturday or Sunday.

The intense bargaining was accompanied by renewed violence in the coalfields.

Four shots were fired at a coal truck early Friday in eastern Kentucky, according to state police.

State trooper Steve Miller said two coal trucks were northbound on U.S. 23 when a car pulled up beside the rear vehicle. He said shots were fired at the truck, but that there were no injuries. One shot hit the door, and two hit the cab, Miller said.

Thursday night, some 300 striking miners, yelling, "Scabs! Scabs!" stormed a coal company at Orgas, W. Va., set fire to a guardhouse and pickup truck and smashed windows.

The incident came during a United Mine Workers' rally, which had begun peacefully in southern West Virginia with a prayer for unity and strength in the strike's seventh week.

Following Thursday's bargaining session here, Church said: "We've got to get a contract sooner or later. We're not making much headway. We're just hung up."

He also conceded that the two sides are still arguing over one of the two issues that go to the heart of complaints registered by rank-and-file miners who rejected an earlier accord March 31: the question of the extent to which unionized coal companies can have certain work subcontracted to non-union firms.

The UMW has talked about a provision that would require employers to pay non-union help wages and benefits comparable to those of union miners. The courts have ruled against the UMW in a case that tested the union's right to require the hiring of only union workers.

Another union security issue involves the payment by coal companies of royalties to UMW health and pension funds for each ton of non-union coal processed in union tipples.

In the contract settlement of March 23, the royalty payments provision was dropped by the union in exchange for management's agreement to give a $100-a-month payment to widows covered by the 1974 pension plan.

Revision of voting suit ordered after complaint

WASHINGTON (AP) — Acceding to the complaint of Alabama Sen. Jeremiah Denton, Attorney General William French Smith has expunged from a major voting rights suit the assertion that authorities in Denton's hometown had long attempted to perpetuate "white supremacy."

Justice Department spokesman Tom DeCair confirmed Friday that a new complaint, deleting the white supremacy reference, has been filed in the government's case — which still charges that the form of government in Mobile, Ala., unconstitutionally discriminates against blacks.

DeCair said Smith ordered the change after Denton, who is from Mobile, had protested to the attorney general Wednesday. Several long-term department officials said they could recall no instance where a major suit had been redrafted based upon such a complaint from Congress.

But Kenneth W. Starr, counselor to the attorney general, said the revised suit does not in any way alter the legal arguments of the Justice Department. "It is not unusual in civil cases for parties to modify the language of a complaint," Starr said.

Denton, a conservative Republican serving his first term, is a member of the Senate Judiciary Committee, which oversees the Justice Department.

In a statement issued by his office, Denton said he had two lengthy telephone conversations with Smith in which he objected to "the presumptive and severe language used in the wording of the complaint."

Late last Friday night, the Justice Department moved to enter the six-year-old case as a plaintiff. The department's papers, filed in U.S. District Court in Mobile, said, "Black citizens of Mobile have been the victims of a long history of purposeful, official racial discrimination designed to segregate black persons from white persons, to deny the vote to black persons, to assure that black persons would not serve on the Mobile governing body and to maintain white supremacy."

Denton specifically objected to that sentence.

The new complaint replaced it with one that said: "From 1870 through 1964, state and local officials purposefully undertook a series of discriminatory actions against black citizens."

A second reference in the original suit to "maintaining white supremacy in the electoral processes" was also deleted in the revised document. There were no other changes.

"The attorney general agreed to file an amended complaint with more precise language" DeCairsaid. "The reference to 'white supremacy' was intended to be historical. The laws at one time were intended to exclude blacks and some are still in place, but there was an unfortunate error in phraseology in not making clear that we don't believe there is a present policy of white supremacy in obile."

Drew S. Days III, who spent many years as an NAACP civil rights attorney and headed the Justice Department's civil rights division during the Carter administration, said he could not recall a similar episode.

"It's interesting that the document was changed," Days, now a Yale law professor, said in an interview. "The government could have made its position clear in the courtroom. There are lots of ambiguities in legal documents, and lawyers could spend all their time clearing them up."

Days said he did not think the change would affect the Mobile case, but he added, "I'd hate for this to be viewed in Congress or the Justice Department as the beginning of open season for congressional intervention in the work of the attorney general."

It was learned that the line attorneys who drafted the original complaint were not involved in the revisions, which were handled by their superiors.

Denton said the attorney general "promised to look into the over-all policy and manner in which the department intervenes in cases of this type."

The senator said he did not believe "my home town is guilty of the allegations made in the complaint, certainly not since I've been back home."

Denton returned to Mobile in 1977 after being held a prisoner of war in Vietnam. He said he was committed to equal opportunity for all but thought the department was "overreaching" in this case.

Mobile is the second largest city in Alabama with a 1970 population of 190,000. The city is more than 35 percent black, but no black person has served on its three-member city commission since 1868.

Black residents sued in 1975 charging that the at-large election system for the city commission violated their constitutional rights.

In 1976, U.S. District Judge Virgil Pittman agreed. He ordered the dismantling of the commission form of government and its replacement by a mayor-council elected from single-member wards.

The 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals upheld Pittman's ruling, but the Supreme Court disagreed last year. The high court overturned Pittman's ruling, but the justices were unable to agree on a reason. A plurality of four justices said it would be necessary to prove not only that the electoral arrangements excluded blacks from office but also that the requirements were deliberately designed with that purpose in mind.

Civil rights lawyers said at the time that because at-large commission governments had been set up throughout the South more than 100 years ago, it might be very hard to prove intent to discriminate. White Southern elected officials hailed the ruling as potentially marking the end to 20 years of such suits.

The Supreme Court sent the case back to Judge Pittman for a new trial that is set to begin Monday. Last week, Pittman approved the Justice Department's effort to join the case as a plaintiff.

Thousands attend Hughes' funeral

BELLAGHY, Northern Ireland (AP) — Ten thousand Roman Catholics poured into this rural village Friday under intense security restrictions for the IRA hero's funeral of hunger striker Francis Hughes, who was buried in the parish churchyard near his birthplace while three British army helicopters clattered overhead.

Forty miles south in Belfast, Roberta Guiney, who buried her 14-year-old son two days before, followed her husband's coffin through the cold and rainy streets of Protestant Rathcoole district. And two other victims of the province's sectarian warfare — an Irish nationalist and a teen-age girl — were buried in other parts of the capital.

Overnight, IRA gunmen fired a Soviet-made rocket through the roof of a passing police car in Roman Catholic West Belfast, killing one officer and wounding three others in a sharp escalation of violence surrounding the IRA's prison death fast.

Hughes, 25, convicted of killing a British soldier, died in the Maze Prison after a 59-day fast demanding that Britain grant privileges that would confer political status on Irish nationalist prisoners. His death followed that of 27-year-old Bobby Sands a week before, after 66 days without food. Four other prisoners are fasting and the IRA has vowed to replace each man who dies with another until the British government relents in its determination not to concede.

Since Sands began his fast March 1, 20 people have died in sectarian violence as the IRA pressed its campaign to end British rule in the mainly Protestant province and unite it with the predominantly Catholic Irish republic.

The estimated 10,000 Roman Catholics who converged on this village of 800 people, followed the coffin nearly two miles along the rural road from the Hughes family's low-slung farmstead to the St. Mary's parish church.

Hundreds of troops and police sealed off this County Londonderry village, and riot police, standing alongside protected Land Rovers, diverted the funeral procession from the village center. Dozens of mourners hurled stones and bottles at the police.

Thousands of Roman Catholics scrambled through muddy fields and climbed dividing fences in surrounding countryside.

At the front gate of the farm three masked IRA men in camouflage uniforms fired the traditional IRA three-volley salute over Hughes' coffin, draped with the Irish tricolor.

In the small church, parish priest the Rev. Michael Flanagan declared: "It seems as if the Lord has been very far away from us over the past 12 years (since sectarian fueding erupted.)"

"We employ the wrong methods," said Flanagan. "We won't give way. We refuse to admit our faults and we hold unforgiving memories filled with hate."

At the graveside, Martin McGuiniss, a senior IRA man from Londonderry, said: "The enemy feared him so much, there were roads no British soldier could travel safely."

In Belfast, a chill rain fell on the several thousand mourners who followed the coffin of Protestant Eric Guiney, 45, a milkman fatally injured with his teen-age son in Catholic West Belfast's rioting a few hours after Sands died.

Guiney's grief-stricken widow, Roberta, 39, walked only a few yards behind the coffin before her step faltered and she was helped into a limousine.

Mrs. Guiney, supported at the cemetery by her three surviving children, broke down and sobbed as she watch her husband's coffin lowered beside the fresh grave of their son.

In a service broadcast by loudspeaker for mourners on the streets outside St. Comgall's parish church, Bishop Arthur Butler of the Protestant Church of Ireland deplored what he called the "grotesque" situation in which, he said "the murderer receives more support and sympathy than those he murdered."

"It is a grim commentary on the fearful situation in our province, and throughout the world at this time, where evil appears to have taken over command of the world situation," the bishop said.

Of Mrs. Guiney, he said "the burden of her sorrow is well-nigh intolerable."

Sobbing schoolgirls formed a guard of honor outside a Belfast Catholic parish church at the funeral of 14-year-old Julie Livingstone, who was fatally shot Wednesday by a plastic bullet fired by British troops during rioting.

Also buried Friday was Emanuel McLarnon, 20, a guerrilla in the revolutionary Irish National Liberation Army who was fatally shot in the chest in an exchange of fire with British troops in West Belfast Tuesday night.

As mourners buried their dead, Cardinal Tomas O Fiaich, Catholic Primate of All Ireland, pleaded for an end to violence.

"The cruelty and violence in our midst spares neither Protestants nor Catholics, neither security forces nor paramilitaries, neither adults nor children," O Fiaich said in Armagh.

The four Maze prisoners on hunger strike are Raymond McCreesh and Patrick O'Hara, both 24 and reported in serious condition in the 55th day of their fast; Joseph McDonnell, 30, who joined the fast last week to replace Bobby Sands, and Brendan McLaughlin, 29, who began fasting Thursday to replace Hughes.

Judge suspended following suspected 'irregularities'

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) — A municipal court judge was suspended indefinitely after a police investigation found "questionable procedures" in his handling of traffic tickets.

Judge Robert E. Baber was notified of his suspension late Thursday after a unanimous city council vote during a closed-door session, said Mayor Phil McAlister.

Police Chief J.T. Alley was asked to investigate the matter after city officials learned of possible irregularities, McAlister said.

McAlister declined to elaborate on the irregularities, but The Lubbock Avalanche-Journal reported that one woman paid fines on only five of 13 tickets issued to her since 1978.

The woman, who told the newspaper as many as 40 of her tickets have been dismissed in the past four years, said she paid a bail bondsman to take care of the citations. She said the bondsman told her he was splitting the money with a municipal court judge.

Three of the woman's tickets — all for speeding — were dismissed by Baber, and a fourth by a municipal court prosecutor, the newspaper said.

Although Baber gave no reason for the dismissals, another municipal court judge, Cecil Puryear, noted that judges do not have to explain their reasons.

Baber has served as municipal court judge since 1967 and formerly served as the court's chief prosecutor.

Bess Truman remains in serious condition

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Former first lady Bess Truman remained in serious condition Friday, with doctors reporting continued kidney problems and an elevated temperature.

The 96-year-old Mrs. Truman, who has experienced heart, kidney and lung problems since undergoing surgery for a broken hip May 7, remained in the intensive care unit at Research Medical Center.

"Her kidneys are not good," reported Dr. Wallace Graham, her long-time family physician. "We're still having to push them along with strong diuretics." A hospital spokeswoman said the kidneys had not failed, but that their output was less than normal.

Some pneumonia was still present in the lower left lobe of her left lung, Graham said.

Hospital officials declined to say what Mrs. Truman's temperature was, but Graham attributed the problem to "the trauma of surgery to the tissue."

Graham said Mrs. Truman's orthopedic surgeon, Dr. Howard Eilfeldt, repositioned her hip Friday morning to assure that healing of the damaged area was proceeding properly.

Press regulation fight planned

TALLOIRES, France (AP) — Leaders of print and broadcast media from 20 countries began a meeting Friday aimed at planning strategy to combat international regulation of the press.

Participants in the Voices of Freedom Conference are expected to produce a declaration and an action program to counter efforts to regulate the press by some Communist and Third World countries. The countries are pressing for arrangements that would legitimize government control over the flow of information under auspices of the U.N. Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization.

Conference organizers also said there would be an attempt to lessen tension between Western media and Third World countries that feel the Western media dominate the flow of news and emphasize disasters, corruption and unpheaval when reporting about these countries.

Among the speakers at the three-day conference will be UNESCO's director-general, Amadou Mahtar M'Bow of Senegal. The Paris-based organization has become the leading forum on communication and information issues and the UNESCO secretariat has attacked the Western press for allegedly not reporting fairly about its work.

M'Bow has refrained from making critical statements on Western news media following failure of a meeting in February at UNESCO headquarters on the protection of journalists. Some Western organizations saw the plan to create a protection commission under UNESCO sponsorship as the first step toward licensing correspondents.

The conference here in the French Alps is sponsored by the Edward R. Murrow Center of Public Diplomacy of Tufts University, which has a European studies center in Talloires.

It is being held in cooperation with the World Press Freedom Committee, a U.S.-based group for world media organizations on press freedom issues.

Participants include representatives of major Western and Japanese media and professional associations, but others attending come from Egypt, India, Sudan, Malaysia, Nigeria, Jamaica, Costa Rica and Senegal.

Western organizations attending include the International Press Institute, the Inter-American Press Association, the International Federation of Newspaper Publishers, the Asian Broadcasters Union, the American Society of Newspaper Editors and the major international news services - The Associated Press, United Press International, Agence France Presse and Reuters.

In an introduction to the conference's working papers, the chairman of the World Press Freedom Committee, Harold W. Andersen of the Omaha, Neb., World Herald, said he hoped the meeting would be able to set out clearly what a free press stands for and develop positions that can be used to counter proposals threatening it.

Andersen said he also hoped the meeting would identify needs of the press in developing countries and determine what steps to take to meet those needs, and examine the new $1.75 million International Program for the Development of Communication, which UNESCO will organize in June, to see how it might function in a constructive way.

Hostage plan led to murder-for-hire

RACINE, Ohio (AP) — Bill Foster says he never dreamed his plan to exchange himself for the 52 American hostages in Iran would lead to a murder-for-hire plot in Nebraska.

"I knew if somebody wanted to donate $10,000 for my trip if I'd do them a favor, it wasn't for shining somebody's shoes." the 48-year-old Foster said in a recent interview.

Foster's cooperation with Nebraska police led them to arrest LaMoin Meyer, a wealthy Ogallala, Neb., farmer. Meyer was accused of trying to hire Foster to kill his nephew because of a land dispute, according to police.

Meyer wrote Foster last September after seeing an ad Foster placed in Soldier of Fortune magazine, offering to exchange himself for the hostages.

"I believe I can be very generous to the cause," Meyer wrote in one of his letters to Foster. "I can contribute $10,000, but I have a problem in my area, and you must do something for me."

In another letter, Foster said Meyer described the man he wanted out of the way — his nephew, Ray Burklund. Foster said Meyer sent him a description of the man, a map with directions to Burklund's business and home and the license number of Burklund's pickup truck.

By the time a fifth letter arrived, Foster had been paid $600 in cash as a downpayment for the job.

Foster called Burklund about Meyer's plans, and Burklund informed Mel Messersmith, an investigator for the Nebraska State Patrol.

In a telephone conversation, Foster told Meyer that two "units" (hired gunmen) were en route to Nebraska. Meyer was told to meet them in a motel parking lot in North Platte, Neb.

On Nov. 9, Meyer was met at the motel parking lot by two undercover policemen, posing as hired killers, who were wore tiny tape recorders. They told Meyer the job had been completed and that they had the body and wanted the balance of the $10,000.

Meyer initially was charged with conspiracy to commit murder and after during a trial in late April, entered a guilty plea to the lesser charge of conspiracy to commit assault. He faces up to five years in prison when he is sentenced in June.

Foster, now through with the ordeal, wants to save the commendation he received from Nebraska authorities to "show the grandchildren."

He never did make his trip to Iran. He borrowed $3,500 and headed for the Middle East, but because of tightened security on the Iranian borders, got only as far as Islamabad, Pakistan.

Gun theft leads to 99-year prision sentence

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Prosecutors say they are surprised, but pleased, with a 99-year sentence handed down for the theft of 17 weapons from a gun shop.

Jurors deliberated only 20 minutes Thursday before returning the maximum sentence against Billy Ray Jackson, 31, of Dallas. He was accused of stealing $4,300 worth of guns last November from the Ewell Cross shop in Fort Worth.

"We did not expect to get 99 years, but I think it's an appropriate sentence," said Assistant District Attorney Ken Gordon. Before the trial, prosecutors had offered Jackson a seven-year prison term in a plea bargain.

"It was an entirely circumstantial case. We couldn't place them in the building," Gordon said. "But the circumstances just pulled like a compass right to them."

Testimony in the three-day trial indicated three burglars scooped up 16 pistols and a rifle during the 90-second theft.

Prosecutors indicated they expect Jackson's sister, Jo Ann, to plead guilty to a burglary charge. Ms. Jackson, 28, has served a six-year prison term for burglary and sale ofheroin.

third suspect so far has eluded police.

Jackson was sentenced to 20 years in prison in 1972 for selling heroin in Dallas. The prior conviction enabled prosecutors to boost the second-degree felony burglary charge to a first-degree felony.

Last Nov. 21, burglars tripped a silent alarm at the gun shop and a police officer responding to the call followed a Cadillac that was speeding away.

The officer testified he saw an automatic pistol and a rifle being thrown out the window, then the car slowed down and let a man out of the back seat. He stopped the car and arrested the Jacksons.

Police found the rest of the handguns on the shoulder of a freeway next to a pillow case.

Church to stay in El Salvador

CLEVELAND (AP) — Five months after the murders of four American missionaries in El Salvador, the Catholic church in Cleveland is continuing its work there, says Bishop Anthony Pilla.

"We're just as committed as ever — more so now because of the need," the bishop said Thursday. His comments followed a news conference about the shooting of Pope John Paul II in Vatican City.

Pilla said the Cleveland Diocese, which represents nearly one million Catholics in northern Ohio, is committed to its work with the poor of the Central American nation engulfed in civil violence.

But he said the work of the church's 11 priests, sisters and lay people in El Salvador was restricted to daytime because of the fighting between the government and left-wing insurgents, Pilla said.

UTPB summer registration scheduled

Registration for summer courses at The University of Texas of the Permian Basin will be held from 9 a.m.-noon and 2 p.m.-7 p.m. May 29 in the student lounge, with classes to begin June 1.

The first session will close July 10 and the second session will be from July 13-Aug. 21. A nine-week term will run from May 21-July 31.

Enrollment is open to students who have completed 60 semester credit hours. An official transcript and application for admission should be on file at UTPB to avoid a long wait at registration.

Nazi gold used as bait

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Finance Committee, threatening to keep 18.4 tons of gold stolen by the Nazis, is pressuring Czechoslovakia to repay Americans whose property was seized by the Communists after World War II.

Unless the United States and Czech governments can reach a settlement in negotiations that resume next week, the committee says, the $127 million worth of gold should be seized by the United States and used to pay $105 million worth of claims.

The committee, without dissent, agreed Thursday to legislation requiring just that. But for the moment, the measure is nothing more than a threat for the American negotiators to use, since it likely would take weeks for the legislation to make its way through Congress.

There's another problem if the United States ever tries to actually take the gold: Most of it is stored in the Bank of England and can't be touched without the consent of the British and French governments.

Under terms of the Finance Committee legislation, sponsored by Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y., the United States would sell the gold, invest the money and use the earnings to pay claims of 2,600 Americans whose land, pensions and bank accounts in Czechoslovakia were confiscated when the Communists seized power in the Eastern European nation.

Those claims were valued by the Foreign Claims Settlement Commission at $105 million, including $41 million in interest. The Treasury Department estimates that at today's rates of interest and gold prices, it would take 12 years to pay the claims.

A similar bill is to be considered Monday by the House Foreign Affairs subcommittee on trade — one day before the United States and Czechoslovakia are scheduled to start negotiations on the claims.

The gold is the Czech share of coins and bullion that the Nazis took from several European nations and that allied forces recovered at the end of World War II. As part of the postwar Paris Agreements, a U.S.-British-French commission will decide the disposition of the gold. Congress has blocked any turnover of the gold until Americans' property claims are settled.

ABC names new president

NEW YORK (AP) — John C. Severino, vice president and general manager of KABC-TV in Los Angeles, has been named president of ABC Television.

The appointment, announced Thursday, will be effective July 12, said network spokesman Tom Mackin. Severino will assume one of two titles currently held by Frederick S. Pierce, ABC executive vice president.

He will be responsible for the ABC-TV network, ABC Entertainment and its broadcast operations and engineering.

Pierce will continue to oversee ABC Television as well as ABC News, ABC Sports, ABC-TV's Stations Division and ABC Video Enterprises.

Severino, a native of New Haven, Conn., and a graduate of the University of Connecticut, has been with ABC for 15 years, starting out as an account executive with its New York station, WABC-TV. He has been vice president and general manager of its Chicago facility, WLS-TV.

KABC-TV, where he currently works, is owned and operated by ABC.

Estrada, ex ordered to stop their sniping

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A judge on Friday ordered TV star Erik Estrada and his ex-wife Joyce to stop publicly sniping at each other and dismissed contempt proceedings involving the couple.

"This has been an explosive case," said Superior Court Judge Harry Shafer. "I want this to be the end of it."

Museum Day scheduled

The 4th annual International Museum Day is Monday. The Museum of the Southwest, 1705 W. Missouri Ave., will offer behind the scenes docent tours at 11 a.m. and 2 p.m. along with serving free coffee and cookies all day.

The free tours will take observers into all the areas of the museum usually closed to the public and will include a history of the home.

This annual observance of International Museum Day was established by the International Council of Museums. The theory is that by observing the occasion museums of all disciplines and sizes will increase local and regional awareness of the roles and resources of these facilities.

Most West Texas museums are honoring the day with open houses.

Elvis semi-documentary a must for fans of late super-hero

THIS IS ELVIS, a semi-documentary biography, will be "must" viewing for those who spent their youth as Elvis Presley fans. This look at the extraordinary rise of a super-hero, his inability to cope and his untimely death is a moving chronicle of an American tragedy. The movie contains a goldmine of previously unseen film footage, including home movies of Presley's private moments, outtakes from his films and shots of early stage shows which capture the youthful magnetism of the King of Rock 'n' Roll. Unlike previous documentaries, this one focuses on the star's life more than his music and gives the best hints yet of why Presley's skyrocket ride to stardom led him to self-destruct. The film's final grim moments, with a bloated and almost unrecognizable Elvis sweating through his last painful performance, are agonizing to watch. At early screenings, some have wept. Rated PG for blue language.

Motion Picture Association of America rating definitions:

G — General audiences. All ages admitted.

PG — Parental guidance suggested. Some material may not be suitable for children.

R — Restricted. Under 17 requires accompanying parent or adult guardian.

X — No one under 17 admitted. Some states may have higher age limits.

KNOW WHY VESPA'S OUR MOPED?
IT'S SIMPLE.
Riding a Vespa moped is almost as easy as saying "giddy-up." Even the first time you get on one. The controls are very simple. And so is the whole design. For instance, Vespa has a belt drive, which is one part. Other mopeds use chains, which have hundreds of pieces.
A Vespa is cheap to feed – gets up to 160 mpg. Or push a button and pedal for free. Test ride a Ciao,* Bravo or Grande. We think you'll agree Vespa's the logical choice – pure and simple.
*Say "chow," Italian for "hi."

Brown, Cronkite elected to board

NEW YORK (AP) — Former CBS News anchorman Walter Cronkite and former Defense Secretary Harold Brown have been elected to the board of directors of CBS Inc.

William S. Paley, chairman of the entertainment and communications company, made the announcement Thursday.

Cronkite, 65, a 31-year veteran of CBS News and currently a CBS News special correspondent, will be an inside director. In that position, CBS said, he will receive no fee in addition to his CBS salary.

Brown, 53, will be an outside director, for which he will get $10,000 a year plus $500 for each directors' meeting he attends.

The first scientist ever to fill the top job at the Pentagon, Brown served as secretary of defense in the Carter administration. He now is a visiting professor of national security studies at Johns Hopkins University's School of Advanced International Studies in Washington.

Before becoming defense secretary, Brown had been director of defense research and engineering during the Kennedy administration.

Soap viewers threaten violence

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Hundreds of Kansas City viewers called to complain and, in some cases, threaten violence when television stations pre-empted afternoon soap operas for coverage of the shooting of Pope John Paul II.

Steve Shannon, executive vice president and general manager of KCMO radio, said he helped answer the calls Wednesday that swamped the switchboard his station shares with KCMO-TV.

"After 25 years in the business, I am amazed and shocked," he said. "They harassed the station. Some called repeatedly. One threatened to come down and do bodily harm to the people at the station 'unless the Pope story went off the air by 1:30.'"

Shannon said another caller said, "I'm a religious person, but the Pope is not an American."

KCMO-TV, received nearly 500 angry calls, station officials said, and KMBC-TV logged 278 complaints in addition to about 70 calls so abusive the switchboard operator cut them off.

"Some of them were so bad that I just hung up on them," said Di Davern of KMBC-TV.

She said complaints came from men and women of all ages and that she locked the station's front door after one couple threatened to come and burn the station down.

WDAF-TV received only 50 to 100 complaints. But earlier this year the station replaced soap operas with syndicated game shows, whose viewers apparently were not as upset when the programs were interrupted.

RCA to start cable TV channel

NEW YORK (AP) — RCA Corp. is going into the cable television business with a Rockefeller family concern.

RCA announced Thursday it had agreed to join with Rockefeller Center Inc. in developing a pay-cable television program service featuring popular entertainment shows. The service, which will be available to subscribers for a monthly subscription fee, is expected to start in 1982, RCA said.

Rockefeller Center Inc., which is owned by Rockefeller family members, set up the RCTV cable service last December with the intention of offering cable operators programs to supplement existing pay-cable movie services such as Time Inc.'s Home Box Office.

RCTV officials say their "Entertainment Channel" will feature a broad range of entertainment, including drama, comedy, feature films, theatrical productions, performing arts and children's programming.

RCTV has signed an agreement with British Broadcasting Corp. giving RCTV exclusive television rights to programming produced by the British network. However, RCTV says the majority of its programming will come from non-BBC sources, including many American-made programs especially produced for RCTV.

"We are delighted with this new relationship and the opportunities it offers in the growing field of pay-cable television programming," RCA said in a statement.

A definitive agreement on formation of the joint venture still must be worked out, RCA and Rockefeller Center Inc. said.

RCA-owned NBC-TV is the last of the major television networks to get into TV programming. ABC already has begun a satellite-distributed arts' programming channel, and CBS is developing a similar service.

PRECISION

With the right instruments you can calculate to a degree so infinitesimal that it defies human imagination. You can plot, you can plan and come out perfectly every time — if you are dealing with things, not people.

When people enter the picture, intangibles follow. Love, hate, fear, happiness, sorrow, jealousy, trust, envy . . . you can't measure any of those things. Nor can you measure faith, which is perhaps the biggest "commodity" of all.

Yes, men have figured out almost everything except themselves. Even the world's psychiatrists state freely that most elements of the human equation are quite obscure . . .

. . . except before God, that is! Which is another good reason for going to church.

Frank Johnson to be honored at Kelview Baptist

The Rev. Frank Johnson will be honored on his 20th anniversary as pastor of Kelview Heights Baptist church, 407 W. Alta Ave., by the church's congregation Sunday.

At the same time, the congregation will be looking back over 20 years of growth from the time the church was organized in 1961 and occupied a one room cinder block building to its present status as one of the largest in the city. The church has undertaken and completed several major expansion projects during the years and the congregation has grown to more than 4,000 members.

Johnson

Rev. Johnson is assisted by five full-time staff ministers and a part-time minister. The church was the first to organize a bus ministry in the city and now operates 12 buses each Sunday. The other ministries of the church include a radio ministry, an outreach to Midland nursing homes and a class for special children.

Sunday's anniversary observance, slated for 10:30 a.m., is designated "Friend Day" at Kelview and the public is invited to attend. A music festival is planned to highlight the service featuring soloist Mack Evans. Evans is seen regularly on Jerry Falwell's international telecast, "The Old Time Gospel Hour."

The church's choir and special singers will also be featured, directed by David Newton, the church's music director.

●

"Who Love His Appearing" will be showing at 7 p.m. Sunday at the Latin Free Methodist Church, 411 S. Terrill St.

The film is being jointly sponsored by the Latin Church and the First Free Methodist Church.

"Who Love His Appearing" deals with the prophecy of the second coming of Jesus Christ and how the prophecy affected one man and his congregation.

A praise and prayer service will begin at 6:30 p.m. The public is invited. An offering for the film will be taken.

●

Crestview Baptist Church, 3300 Thomas St., will be presenting two special programs Sunday. The first, "A Service of Psalms," will be at 8:30 amd 10:50 a.m. The second is at 7 p.m. when the church's Youth Choir presents the musical "The Witness."

"A Service of Psalms" encompasses every part of the worship service — hymns, scripture, special music and the pastor's message — being taken from the Book of Psalms. Organ, piano, percussion and guitars will accompany the singing.

"The Witness," by Carol and Jimmy Owens, employs songs and dramatic narrative to portray the life of Christ through the experiences of the apostle Peter, the witness.

The public is invited to attend.

●

The morning service Sunday at the Midland Unitarian Universalist church, 3400 N. A St., will be conducted by three inmates of the Federal Correctional Institution at Big Spring.

Inmates Tommy Bigbee, Larry McBride and Mike Powell have been "adopted" by the church in an exchange program of religious mutual concerns. The men have chosen as their theme for the day, "The Church Community as a Source of Energy, Inspiration and Fellowship: A Sharing of Spiritual Insights." Powell will play the piano and lead the music.

For several months the church has been sending a group to Big Spring for an afternoon discussion and fellowship at the prison. One Sunday a month the three men come to the regular morning worship, have dinner with parishioners and, after visiting or touring the community, are returned to Big Spring by late afternoon.

The service begins at 10 a.m. and is open to the public.

●

The Midland Chapter of the Full Gospel Business Men's Fellowship International will have its monthly guest speaker at 7:30 p.m. today in the Holiday Inn, 3904 W. Wall St.

This month's guest is The Glenn Patton Family, also known as The Crimson Bridge.

The Midland chapter meets every third Saturday at the Holiday Inn. Coffee and cake are served before the meeting.

The public is invited.

●

The New Jerusalem Baptist Church Youth Department will be hosting its 4th annual command performance at 8 p.m. Sunday in the church, 1801 N. Carver St.

The public is invited to attend.

ODESSA — The Odessa stake of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints was divided into two stakes May 3. Elder Boyd K. Packer of the Quorum of Twelve Apostles presided over the ceremonies held in Odessa and Abilene.

Abilene is the center of the new 1,600-member stake, which includes San Angelo, Brownwood and Sweetwater. The Odessa stake, which includes Midland, Big Springs, Monahans, Pecos, Alpine, Andrews and Seminole, now has about 2,000 members.

A stake is an area ecclesiastical unit consisting of smaller units in the communities. The division is a result of growth.

The new president of the Odessa stake is a Midland resident, Royce Griffin. Griffin, a partner with Erde Exploration, has lived in Midland nine years. His two councilors are Brent Rigtrup of Midland and Glenn Jones of Big Spring.

The former president of the Odessa stake, Larry D. James of Midland, is moving to Denver, Colo. A West Texas resident for 15 years, James was vice president of Ortloff Corporation.

Activities they will do on this trip include farm work in the fields owned by the school, painting, building maintenance and laying sprinkler systems. Crops raised are used for food and as a source of income for the Indians. The work is coupled with studies of the Navajo heritage.

Estimated cost of the trip is $2,500.

Young minister jailed, released

By ALLEN SHORT
Associated Press Writer

McKINNEY, Texas (AP) — Attorneys for a young Collin County minister say they hope to break new legal ground in Texas later this month when they appeal a contempt citation issued Thursday by a state District Court judge.

The Rev. Ronald Paul Salfen, a 33-year-old Presbyterian minister from The Colony, a Dallas suburb, spent five hours in the Collin County jail Thursday after he refused to answer questions about a counseling session he had with an employee of his church.

He was freed Thursday evening after the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals ordered him released and set a May 27 appeal hearing on the Salfen's six contempt citations.

His incarceration stemmed from his refusal to answer six questions put to him last month by a county prosecutor. Salfen again refused to answer the questions Thursday when they were repeated by State District Judge John R. Roach.

"To answer the questions," Salfen told the judge, "would be contrary to the oaths and vows we take as ministers."

Salfen, minister of the Trinity Presbyterian Church in TheColony climed the conversation about which he was asked was privileged since it took place during a pastoral counseling session.

Salfen was called as a character witness in an April 29 bond reduction hearing for Maud Williams, the church office secretary. Miss Williams faces retrial of a two-year-old drug possession charge.

She was arrested last month for allegedly jumping bail by traveling to the East Texas home of a friend.

At the April hearing, Salfen said he counseled Miss Williams on a drug problem the woman discussed with him before he hired her. But he declined to answer questions from Assistant District Attorney Bill Schultz about whether Miss Williams had mentioned any plans to leave Texas before her trial.

As his wife, Peggy, and nearly three dozen congregation members looked on, Salfen told Roach Thursday that the conversation with Miss Williams was "confidential in nature and representative of a sacred trust."

To violate the confidentiality of a pastoral counseling session, Salfen added, would subject him to possible censure or revocation of his ordination by the Presbyterian Church's governing body in Dallas, the Grace Union Presbytery.

But Roach remained unconvinced by the argument and at one point chided the pastor for not following church teachings "to obey the law."

To each of the questions put to him by the judge, Salfen replied, "I'm sorry, your honor, with all due respect I cannot answer."

Roach found Salfen in contempt for each of the unanswered questions and handed him a separate citation, a $100 fine and a 12-hour jail sentence six times during the hour-long proceeding.

The judge said Salfen would not be released from jail until he answered each of the questions to the best of his ability.

Roach ordered the courtroom cleared when Salfen's supporters rose from their seats and jeered the judge after he issued the first citation. After the outburst, he urged Salfen to preach to his congregation members on "the meaning of Christianity."

"I want you to know that I have never questioned your motives or sincerity," Roach told Salfen as the young minister was led from the courtroom by a deputy sheriff. "The court is not mad at you."

Salfen's lawyer, James "Max" Stewart of Dallas, filed a motion for a writ of habeas corpus with the criminal appeals court less than an hour after Roach issued the contempt citations.

Miss Williams' bond reduction hearing, Stewart said, was not a trial per se.

The Newspaper BIBLE

WHAT IF YOU DROPPED DEAD WHEN YOU LIED?

There was a certain man named Ananias (with his wife Sapphira) who sold some property, and brought only part of the money, claiming it was the full price. (His wife had agreed to this deception).

But Peter said, "Ananias, Satan has filled your heart. When you claimed this was the full price, you were lying to the Holy Spirit. The property was yours to sell or not, as you wished. And after selling it, it was yours to decide how much to give. How could you do a thing like this? You weren't lying to us, but to God."

As soon as Ananias heard these words he fell to the floor, dead! Everyone was terrified, and the younger men covered him with a sheet and took him out and buried him.

About three hours later his wife came in, not knowing what had happened. Peter asked her, "Did you sell your land for such and such a price?" "Yes," she replied, "we did." And Peter said, "How could you and your husband even think of doing a thing like this--conspiring together to test the Spirit of God's ability to know what is going on? Just outside that door are the young men who buried your husband, and they will carry you out too."

Instantly she fell to the floor, dead, and the young men came in and, seeing that she was dead, carried her out and buried her beside her husband. Terror gripped the entire church and all others who heard what had happened.

Religious groups scold Atlantic Richfield

By MARTIN BARON
The Los Angeles Times

LOS ANGELES — In a series of generally restrained but sometimes emotional statements, a coalition of religious groups spent nearly an hour Tuesday scolding Atlantic Richfield Co. for the sudden shutdown of its Anaconda Copper unit's smelter in Anaconda, Mont.

The closing of the smelter, which employed 1,000 and furnished half the local county's tax base, has attracted nationwide publicity in recent months as the small community faces the threat of becoming a ghost town without its major industry.

Arco closed the smelter last September, saying that it could not run the plant profitably while paying a $400-million bill to meet pollution and health regulations. The federal Environmental Protection Agency later disputed Arco's claim.

Speaking at Arco's annual meeting here, church representatives said they could not question the giant oil company's economic arguments for closing the plant, but they insisted that employees should have been given notice farther in advance before they lost their jobs. In particular, the church groups, all of which hold shares in the company, proposed that Arco adopt a written policy for plant closures that would focus on advance notification to employees, retraining workers, and compensation to local communities for damage to their economic base.

Arguing that its procedures for plant closings already are "ethically sound," Arco management opposed the proposal, which was roundly defeated, getting only 2 percent of the stock voted, or about 4.8 million shares.

The critics' arguments were climaxed with comments by John Worcester, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church in Anaconda. "We had been a company town for so long, and we knew this had to end, but the company was still the major presence in our communitys' life.

"Arco had great control over the future of Anaconda and over the destiny of its families, and in our view, its sense of responsibility should have matched the size of its role..." Worcester said.

"I am afraid to say that when Arco decided to close down its smelter and thereby also close down the economy of our community, they did it just like many other companies, with little recognizable moral sense."

Arco takes pride in being a "socially accountable" corporration that is sensitive to community and employee needs. The company said it had warned that the plant might be closed and added that it is now helping former employees find new jobs.

"I can assure the stockholders that there is nothing that we, as a corporation, have to be ashamed of," Robert O. Anderson, Arco's chief executive, said.

Arco's annual meeting was the longest in the company's history, running 2 1-2 hours. There was considerable discussion of another resolution by religious groups that would have barred Arco from additional investment in Chile because of that nation's "human rights violations."

About 10 representatives of various religious groups were present at the annual meeting, which was attended by several hundred shareholders.

Other developments at the annual meeting and a press conference afterward included the following:

—Anderson said Arco's 1981 earnings should be "reasonably flat" despite the 19 percent decline in first-quarter profits.

—President William F. Kieschnick said that producers and pipeline builders for a proposed natural gas pipeline that would stretch from Alaska to the lower 48 states are completing a joint study of the line's economic potential. Results will be released later this year. He declined to give odds on chances for the line's ultimate construction, but said that the project's heavy costs are "not an easy problem to sovle."

—Anderson said he expects gasoline prices to be "pretty stable" for the rest of the year, without "significant upward movement."

Leaders regret Sands' suicide

NEW YORK (AP) — High-ranking Protestant and Roman Catholic leaders have voiced regret at the fasting suicide of Irish guerrilla leader Bobby Sands, but termed it useless and in Christian teaching, wrong.

It's being used to whip up destructive passions, commented Archbishop Robert Runcie of Canterbury at the end of a U.S. tour. He said "passions from a distance" don't help the majority in Ireland, facing terrorist violence.

He said the reason "extremists are making such noise" about Sands is that they are afraid progress is being made to a peaceful solution and want to block it.

WHAT ABOUT INSTRUMENT MUSIC?
God says it is good to praise God on an instrument. (Psalm 92:1-3). Or do you take the position that what was good in the Old Testament age is bad in the New Testament age? We praise God every way we have the opportunity, including through instrumental music. (See Psalm 150)

Abscam conviction leads to life of enforced leisure

By CYNTHIA ROBERTS
Associated Press Writer

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Michael J. "Ozzie" Myers has time on his hands. Time for weekend turkey hunts, time for fly fishing, time for trips to the ballpark with his sons — time he seldom found as a member of the U.S. House of Representatives.

But that was before his conviction in New York on Abscam bribery-conspiracy charges and his ouster from Congress. Now a convicted felon, he's a man of enforced leisure.

Myers' days are spent remodeling the Candy Cane Lounge, a bar near his south Philadelphia rowhouse. The dimly-lit saloon, owned by his uncle, is getting a slow, steady facelift from the ex-congressman.

But neither the outings nor the carpentry can quite fill the hours.

Myers said he used to be "always on the go, seven days a week. I'd have five or six appointments a day — so many I couldn't go to 'em all."

"I could sit around like this for the rest of my life if I was one of the Rockefellers, but I've got to put food on the table. I've probably been laying around too long as it is," said Myers, 38.

There's been no job hunt to speak of. With his future clouded by appeals, Myers has held back, hoping "that business in Brooklyn" will be over soon.

It won't. He had expected a ruling on his appeals this month, but the recent Abscam conviction of New Jersey Sen. Harrison Williams Jr. undoubtedly will be followed by more appeals, and that means more delays, he said.

"Now it looks to my lawyer, and the other defendants' lawyers, like we're talking another six months" before a ruling, Myers said.

Myers was the first of seven members of Congress — six representatives and one senator — to be convicted on charges stemming from the bribery and political corruption investigation in which the FBI had undercover agents pose as Arab sheiks seeking favors.

Myers was convicted last Aug. 30, along with Angelo Errichetti, then mayor of Camden, N.J.; Philadelphia city Councilman Louis Johanson, and Philadelphia attorney Howard Criden.

Expelled from the House and defeated in his bid to regain his seat, Myers is appealing with an argument that the undercover agents entrapped him.

In the meantime, "because of Abscam, people who've shown interest (in hiring) are leaving me hanging," he said. A recent deal for media consulting fell through, and political lobbying also is out of the question "when you're a convicted felon — as I am," Myers said.

Myers says he manages financially with help from his fatger, a retired longshoreman, some rental income and an annual pension of $1,000 for service as a state representative in Harrisburg.

Still a Democratic national committeeman, he's clinging to the political ladder "but not on the top rung." Myers, a former longshoreman with a high school education, was weaned on big-city, pork-barrel politics and, at the age of 33, was tapped by the party to run for Congress in 1976.

More than a year after the scandal broke, Myers still has a strong sense of betrayal by the government.

"I'm a realist, throughout my life I've been prepared for the worst, (but) I can't understand it, I don't know why this was done to me," said Myers.

Wet fun for the whole family.

Kawasaki Jet Ski. Reg. $2399 Now $1999

Until you've ridden a Kawasaki Jet Ski., you don't know how much fun the water can be. Just climb on, grab the handlebars, hit the electric starter button and get ready for good times. The Jet Ski's engine, a reliable 440 twin, provides plenty of thrust through safe water jet drive. Simple controls, low weight and a stable Coast Guard-certified hull make it easy for the beginner as well as fun for the expert.

You can tote the Jet Ski in the back of a station wagon or van, so it's far less trouble than a boat. And far more fun!

Rains won't hurt Pleasant Colony's bid says Campo

BALTIMORE (AP) — Buckland Farm's Pleasant Colony, the Kentucky Derby winner, was favored today to capture the richest Preakness in 106 runnings of the 13-16 mile event at Pimlico.

Johnny Campo, trainer of Pleasant Colony, was confident his come-from-behind colt would take this second leg of the Triple Crown over 12 rivals. Jorge Velasquez had the mount.

THE GROSS purse was $270,800 with $200,000 awarded the winner.

It rained here Friday and there was a chance of rain today, but Campo said an off track would not hamper his colt, who had a sparkling half-mile workout in the mud at Pimlico earlier this week.

An off track would benefit Bold Ego, the Arkansas Derby winner and 10th in Kentucky Derby.

"He's a superior mudder," said the colt's trainer, Jack Van Berg. Bold Ego, owned by the Double B Ranch and Dr. James Kidd, faded after a mile in the Derby after a blazing early start.

Other leading contenders were Woodchooper and Partez, the 2-3 finishers in the Derby, and Highland Blade, who hasn't run since a fast-closing second to Pleasant Colony in the April 18 Wood Memorial.

COMPLETING THE field were Derby alsorans Top Avenger, Double Sonic, Flying Nashua and newcomers Thirty Eight Paces, Brass Knuckles, Ecambia Bay, A Run and Paristo.

A Run and Flying Nashua, both trained by 21-year-old Larry Barrera, ran as an entry. Top Avenger Escambia Bay were in the mutuel field.

Pass the Tab was scratched Friday.

Illinois Derby winner Paristo was a $10,000 supplemental nomination.

Trainer Wayne Lukas figures he won last year's Preakness with Codex three times — on the track, in the stewards' stand and at a hearing conducted by the Maryland Racing Commission.

"It was a tough 19 days," said Lukas on the eve of today's race at Pimlico in which the Californian will send Partez, third-place finisher in the May 2 Kentucky Derby.

"I HAD to wait 19 days before I found out that he won the Preakness," said Lukas. "When the hearing started, I was in New York with the horse waiting for the Belmont Stakes, and I'd ride down in a helicopter for hearings. I was there every day."

Angel Cordero's ride aboard Codex, who beat Genuine Risk, the first filly to win the Derby in 65 years, prompted indignation from many in the record crowd of 83,455 and the nation's television viewers.

Cordero was back in this year's Preakness, riding Flying Nashua, as was Jacinto Vasquez, Genuine Risk's jockey who claimed foul against Cordero. Vasquez is aboard Highland Blade today.

THE STEWARDS held Cordero blameless and declared Codex, who finished 4¾ lengths in front of runner-up Genuine Risk, the winner.

But the ABC telecast and reruns, spurred by comments from Howard Cosell and Eddie Arcaro, fanned the controversy.

Did Codex bump the filly at the head of the stretch? Did Cordero hit the filly in the face with his whip? Did Cordero force the filly so far out on the turn that he put her out of contention.

Mr. and Mrs. Bert Firestone, owners of Genuine Risk, accepted the loss at first. The filly's trainer, LeRoy Jolley, said Genuine Risk may have been hindered, but he praised Codex's performance.

HOWEVER, AFTER the outpouring of sympathy from telephone calls and letters to newspapers throughout the country, the Firestones changed their minds two days later. They appealed the stewards' decision to the Maryland Racing Commission and got a hearing.

The purse money was upheld — $180,600 to the winner and $40,000 for second. After 14 witneses were heard, still photographs presented and video tapes were played and replayed, the commision voted 3-1 to uphold Codex's victory.

"I was branded a thug and a crook," said Lukas, "but it was a learning experience. I think racing in general benefitted from it.

"I got letters from little old ladies in Nebraska, telling me Codex had won and they were in my corner. I heard from officials across the country backing up my horse."

CODEX FAILED to finish in the money in his next start, the Belmont Stakes, and never raced again.

But Lukas, who says he has a top group of 2-year-olds back in California, is back in Triple Crown racing with Partez this year and expects to compete in more in the future.

Anthony Raye Ketchum, Needville, waves to the crowd after getting his first place medal for establishing a new national record in the boys' 400-meter dash event at the high school track meet at Austin Friday night. His winning time was 45.5 seconds.

National mark set at state

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Needville's Anthony Ketchum ran away from the field and set a national schoolboy record of 45.5 seconds to win his fourth straight Class 3A title at the state schoolboy track meet.

The Southeast Texas track star was a triple winner, taking the long jump with a 23-0½ leap and the 200-meter dash in 21.5.

Refugio won the Class 3A team title with 40 points, eight better than Bellville and Pittsburg, which tied for second.

Brenham and Andrews tied for the 4A team crown with 30 points. West Columbia looked like the team winner after its 1,600-meter relay team crossed the finish line first. But the West Columbia foursome was disqualified for running out of lane, and the team wound up with 20 points instead of the 40 it would have had if the win had counted.

Ketchum, headed to the University of Houston on a track scholarship, won the 400 by about 30 yards. Running in the outside lane with a stiff wind at his back in the homestretch, he broke the 45.8 second national mark set in 1972 by Ronald Ray of Newport News, Va.

A half hour later, Ketchum came back to hold on for a win in the 200. He replaced his brother Dennis, who graduated last year, as the state's 200 meter Class 3A champion.

Laredo United's Ramiro Molina broke the state high jump record by clearing 7-1¼ to win the 4A championship. Molina broke the 1977 record of Richardson Pearce's Spencer Sunstrom by an inch.

Jefferson's Eric Robinson was a double winner. In the 3A 110-meter hurdles, Robinson edged Waller's John Bell. Robinson, a blue-chip football recruit who has not picked a college, ran a conference record-tying 13.7 into a strong wind. Bell was second in 13.8.

Robinson also won the 300-meter hurdles, running a 37.3.

West Columbia's Bobby Crump, also a double winner, got off to a bad start and looked like an also-ran in the 4A 100-meter dash, but burned the field in the last 40 meters. Crump defended his 100 meter title by running a 10.5, easing by Ruedi Hill of Everman by one-tenth of a second.

Crump came back later to win the 200 in 21.1.

The conference 3A 100-meter mark fell when Freddie Nails of Bellville ran a 10.4. Nails broke the 10.5 record set by Dennis Ketchum last year.

Mitch Long of Kenedy set a 3A pole vault record at 15-3, breaking the 15-0 mark set last year by Bellville's Jeff Charnquist.

Andrews' Van Pearcy, a Notre Dame football recruit, defended his Class 4A long jump title with a leap of 24-4½, but later suffered what was tentatively diagnosed as a hyperextended right knee.

Pearcy limped off after the long jump, but came back to run second in the 400 meters.

Pearcy also ran a strong anchor leg on Andrews' 1,600-meter relay team that helped his team tie for first in meet standings.

Sneva has wait before he can qualify new car

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Former high school principal Tom Sneva knows he will have a chance to qualify for the 1981 Indianapolis 500 in his new March machine, but the two-time national driving champion was anticipating a lot of waiting before he gets that opportunity.

Sneva, who holds the one-lap and four-lap qualifying records at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway, gave his new car its final test Friday and recorded a lap of 199.690. The car is not eligible to qualify for the pole today, although it is guaranteed a chance at making the 33-car field.

"We always knew we wanted to qualify this car," said the 32-year-old who has finished second here three of the past four years. "But, we just didn't have the time to get it ready and go for the pole. We didn't participate in last Friday's draw, and that meant we had to go to the back of the line last Saturday.

"But, we know we have a shot to be in the show, and that's the important thing now," Sneva said.

TWENTY-SEVEN cars were eligible to go for the pole today, which is currently held by A.J. Foyt with a four-lap average of 196.078 mph. Three more cars, which also were guaranteed a chance to make the field while being ineligible for the pole, were scheduled to go out before Sneva.

The car was built in England and didn't arrive here until after the track opened for practice.

Sneva said he didn't anticipate pushing the car in the quest for speed today, but that if the conditions were right he might see if it could top his one-lap record of 203.620.

"We'll go as fast as the car feels comfortable, and if the car feels comfortable at 200 or 205, that's how fast we'll go," he said.

Sneva's time was the second fastest recorded by the electric eye during a busy Friday when a record 63 cars took to the track in the last full day of practice before Sunday's scheduled end of qualifications.

Top honors went to two-time Indy winner Bobby Unser, who took his Penske PC-9B around the 2½-mile oval track at a speed of 201.387. That was the top time of the month. The previous high was 200.312 by 1979 winner Rick Mears, a teammate of Unser.

MEARS AND UNSER were among the drivers still eligible for a shot at the pole. Danny Ongais, the only other driver clocked at 200, was not even assured of a chance at qualifying his car since he missed his turn on the opening day of qualifications and has 38 cars ahead of him in the qualification lineup.

There are three other drivers that have recorded quicker laps in practice than Foyt's qualifying time. They include Mike Mosley, who was timed at 197.8 in his Chevy-powered Dan Gurney Eagle on Friday, and 1973 winner Gordon Johncock, who had a 197.484 earlier this week. Both are eligible to compete for the pole.

The other driver topping the pole time is Bill Whittington, who has had a 197.411 clocking. However, he reported to the starting line late last week and is far back in the line with no guarantee of qualifying as a result.

Nine cars qualified for the field in last week's rain-plagued action. Once the 33-car field is filled, the slowest cars can be knocked out by faster qualifiers.

A brief final practice session was scheduled this morning before the scheduled 11 a.m., EST, start of qualifications.

Cubs drill Tulsa

The setting was Browns vs. Lions, early December at Cleveland's lake front stadium. Or that's the way it looked with the crowd huddled in coats, blankets and scarves, but it didn't seem to bother the Midland Cubs who kept warm with a crackling 18-hit attack that produced a 15-4 Texas League victory over the Tulsa Drillers at Cubs Stadium Friday night.

Second baseman Craig Kornfeld capped the night with a grand slam homer during a seven-run eighth inning while centerfielder Mel Hall and first baseman Jack Upton each collected four hits as that load of bats Midland Manager Roy Hartsfield had been waiting for all season finally arrived.

LEFT FIELDER Randy LaVigne, experiencing the worst slump of all the slumping Cubs, broke out of it with his second homer, a single and double.

The win was Midland's third in a row and gave the Cubs the series against the Drillers, 4-1.

And as the Drillers took what was left of the league's leading staff Earned Run Average and left the Tall City, Midland welcomed the Shreveport Giants for a five-game series starting at 7 p.m. tonight. It will be Commercial Bank's Dash for Cash Night, as select fans attempt to scoop up loose money on the playing field in a specified time period.

Lefthander Norm Churchill, coming off the disabled list, stretched Tulsa's string of scoreless frustration to 16 before tiring and surrendering a three-run homer to George Wright after retiring the first two batters in the sixth.

Rob Blyth came in at the start of the seventh and picked up his fourth save of the season.

YIELDING 48 runs in five games, Tulsa's battered pitching staff departed with a 9.06 ERA for the series. Midland, on the other hand, fattened some lean batting averages with a team mark of .372 during the series.

Upton and Hall were the ringleaders of the resurgence. Both were 4-for-5 Friday. Hall was 13 of 25 for the series and Upton was 13 of 21 with nine rbi.

Hall doubled and scored Midland's first run in the opening inning on Tom Grant's sacrifice fly. He singled home the second inning run after Randy LaVigne singled with two out and stole second and in the fourth. After LaVigne powered his homer to left, Hall singled and scored on Upton's third single of the night.

A four-run fourth made it 8-0 as Mike Shepston ignited the rally with a double, Kornfeld singled and Hall supplied an rbi double and Mike Diaz a run-scoring single.

The seven run eighth came at the expense of lefthander Ron Carney, who gave up a single and walked three to force in one run and then saw Kornfeld drop an arching fly into the mesquite beyond left for a grand slam, his first homer of the year. Before the long, 11-batter inning ended, Grant was to deliver a two-run single.

Rankin third in state golf meet

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Stafford Dulles defended its Class 5A team golf championship, and Arthur Lopez of Dulles had the low individual score in 5A with 143 for 36 holes.

Dulles' team total was 585, 18 strokes ahead of runnerup Waco Richfield and 25 strokes ahead of Houston Cypress Creek, which also was third last year.

Arlington Lamar tied Cypress Creek with a 610 team score but got fourth, followed by Abilene Cooper 614, Humble 622, Fort Worth Arlington Heights 625 and Corpus Christi King 635.

Paris captured the 4A team championship with a score of 632, 12 strokes better than Lamesa and 15 strokes ahead of Austin Westlake, the defending champion.

Darin Patrizi of Crosby and Mark Dees of Paris tied at 154, with Patrizi winning medalist honors.

In 3A, Sour Lake Hardin-Jefferson repeated as team champion with a score of 640. Kenedy trailed by four strokes, and Caldwell was third at 657.

Denny Harrison of Waller and Daryl Burttschell of Comanche both shot 149, with Harrison the medalist.

Mart took the 2A title over Marfa, 661 to 683, with San Saba third with a score of 687.

Dublin's Bill Boy Bryant, a University of Texas quarterback recruit, had the low individual score in 2A for the second consecutive year with 147, one stroke better than Kelly Warner of Bullard.

Salado improved on its second-place finish last year by winning the Class A team championship, 677 to 688, over Iraan. Rankin was third with 708. David Harvell of Salado was the low individual with 160.

Rains delay SWC track

DALLAS (AP) — The first day of the 66th annual Southwest Conference track and field championship was postponed Friday by heavy afternoon rain which swept the Morrison Bell track on the Southern Methodist University campus.

SWC officials said the normal two-day event would be cut to just one day. The meet will begin Saturday at 11 a.m. with no preliminaries.

The Texas Aggies are the defending champions.

Rebels waiting on foe

Midland Lee baseball coach Ernie Johnson is still trying to find out who his Rebels will play in the bi-district baseball best-of-three series.

The Rebels will meet the winner of the Lewisville-Dennison District 6-5A playoff series. Lewisville won the first of the best-of-three games Wednesday 4-2.

The two teams were scheduled to play Friday, but Mother Nature threw a monkey wrench in the plans. After 2½ innings, the rains came and the game was called.

Plans are being made for the two clubs to play today if a dry field can be located. According to IUL rules, a district champion must be determined by midnight tonight. If Lewisville and Dennison are unable to play the final games, Lewisville would be the district champion based on Wednesday's victory.

Lewisville carries a 19-8 season mark while Dennison stands 16-11.

Perfect game for Barker

First since 1968

CLEVELAND (AP) — Power-pitching Len Barker of the Cleveland Indians hurled the first perfect game in the major leagues since 1968, shackling the Toronto Blue Jays 3-0 Friday night with the help of strong infield support.

Barker's control was flawless from start to finish on a cool, sometimes misty evening at Municipal Stadium. The big right-hander from Fort Knox, Ky., struck out 11 batters and never threw more than two balls to any one Toronto hitter.

The last time a perfect game was pitched in major league baseball was back on May 8, 1968, when Oakland's Catfish Hunter hurled a 4-0 classic against the Minnesota Twins.

Barker's no-hitter was the second in a week in the majors, following Charlie Lea's no-hitter for Montreal against San Francisco last Sunday, but only the third in two years. Last season, Los Angeles's Jerry Reuss pitched the only no-hitter in the big leagues, against the Giants.

Barker's splendid support included some standout plays by shortstop Tom Veryzer, second baseman Duane Kuiper and third baseman Toby Harrah.

In the first inning, Veryzer went behind the mound to field a slow chopper and throw out leadoff man Alfredo Griffin at first.

In the fifth, Harrah crashed into the third base seats to haul in a foul pop by Cecil Upshaw.

Kuiper made two splendid plays at second base to preserve the perfect game. In the sixth, he roamed far to his right to pick up a hard-hit smash by Rick Bosetti and threw the runner out in a close play at first. In the seventh, Kuiper went far to his left to field a hard smash by Griffin and get the runner.

Cleveland Indians pitcher Len Barker, center, is mobbed on the mound after he pitched a perfect game against the Toronto Blue Jays in Cleveland Stadium Friday night. The feat — in which Barker struck out 11 batters — was the first since Catfish Hunter accomplished it 13 years ago.

Brewers top A's, 3-0

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Ben Oglivie drove in two runs with a pair of singles and a triple, while Pete Vuckovich and two relief pitchers combined on a six-hitter, leading the Milwaukee Brewers to a 3-0 victory over the Oakland A's Friday night.

A single by Roy Howell, a walk and a two-out single by Oglivie gave the Brewers a 1-0 first-inning lead.

A double by Gorman Thomas, another single by Oglivie and a sacrifice fly by Ted Simmons made it 2-0 in the third.

The Brewers stretched their lead to 3-0 in the fifth on a double by Cecil Cooper and a two-out triple by Oglivie to the left-center field wall, chasing A's starter Steve McCatty, 4-3.

Vuckovich, 3-2, left after a leadoff single by Rickey Henderson in the eighth. Henderson reached second on a passed ball, but then was thrown out trying to steal third.

Jamie Easterly and Rollie Fingers finished up, with Fingers posting his fifth save.

Texas nip Chicago, 2-1

CHICAGO (AP) — Ferguson Jenkins and Steve Comer combined on a three-hitter and Al Oliver's sacrifice fly scored the winning run in the seventh inning as the Texas Rangers gained a 2-1 triumph Friday night over the Chicago White Sox.

Bump Wills led off the Texas seventh with a double and advanced to third on a balk by White Sox starter and loser Richard Dotson, 4-2. Oliver's fly ball to left brought Wills home.

Jenkins, 2-2, gave up a home run to Carlton Fisk in the first inning, but then settled down to strike out six and walk four before needing Comer's relief help in the eighth. Dotson struck out three and walked three.

Fisk's homer, his fifth of the season, put Chicago ahead 1-0. With two outs in the second, Chicago put runners on second and third with a pair of walks and a wild pitch, but Bill Almon grounded to short to end the inning.

John Grubb tied the game for the Rangers in the fourth, lofting his third home run of the season over the center field wall. Texas stranded a pair of runners later in the inning, and also left men at second and third in the fifth.

Leach's RBIs lift Tigers

DETROIT (AP) — First baseman Rick Leach, making his first major league start, drove in a pair of runs and the Detroit Tigers defeated the California Angels 5-1 behind the six-hit pitching of Jack Morris Friday night.

It was the first start for Leach since the quarterback, who played for Michigan in three Rose Bowls and one Orange Bowl, was called up from the Tigers' top farm club at Evansville in the American Association two weeks ago.

Champ Summers led off the second with a double, moved to third on Al Cowens' fly ball and came home on Leach's long fly ball to center.

In the Detroit fifth, Cowens singled off Angels starter Mike Witt, took second when Leach drew a walk, stole third and scored on Bill Fahey's single. Fahey later scored on Rick Peters' grounder.

Larry Harlow and Rick Burleson opened the California sixth with singles. Harlow took third on Rod Carew's double-play ball and came home on a double by Don Baylor.

Morris, 4-3, walked four and struck out eight while recording his fifth complete game in eight starts. Witt, 2-3, gave up just four hits in four innings before tiring in the game, which was delayed 58 minutes at the start because of rain.

Detroit got two more runs in the eighth on RBI singles by Summers and Leach.

Rains stops Yankee tilt

NEW YORK (AP) — Rain postponed Friday night's game between the New York Yankees and Seattle Mariners with the Yankees batting in the third inning and leading 5-0.

The Yankees got all their runs in the first inning, three on Graig Nettles' homer.

The game was not immediately rescheduled.

Red Sox stagger Royals

BOSTON (AP) — With the bases loaded, the score tied and two outs in the ninth inning, Carney Lansford of the Boston Red Sox was looking only for a strike from pitcher Renie Martin of the Kansas City Royals.

Lansford got the strike he was looking for and lined a single for his fourth game-winning RBI of the season Friday night as the surging Red Sox came from behind for a 4-3 victory over Kansas City's staggering American League champions.

"I wanted him to throw me a strike" Lansford said. "I just didn't want to swing at a ball. I didn't want to hit his pitch. Then I was mad at myself when he put the first pitch by me for a strike. I wasn't going to let that happen again."

Lansford was swarmed by teammates, who leaped from the dugout after his deciding hit.

"The hit naturally makes me feel good, but probably more important is it gives the team a big psychological lift," the slugging third baseman acquired from the California Angels during the winter said. "We got behind 3-0 and we came back. It shows that we're not giving up.

Renie Martin, 0-1, retired the first two batters in the ninth before walking Carl Yaztrzemski on four pitches. Yastrzemski moved to second on Jim Rice's single and then gave way to pinch-runner Ried Nichols. Tony Perez walked on a 3-2 count to load the bases for Lansford.

Baltimore rolls by Twins

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (AP) — Ken Singleton and Sammy Stewart were a two-man wrecking crew Friday night as they hit and pitched the Baltimore Orioles to a 9-4 win over the Minnesota Twins.

Singleton continued his torrid hitting streak, collecting two singles, a two-run homer and four runs batted in while Stewart blanked the Twins on one hit in a four-inning relief pitching stint.

Singleton feels the Orioles, winners of 12 of their last 15 games, are off and running toward a possible East Division title.

The Oriole right fielder said, "I believe our pitchers and hitters are getting it back together after a somewhat slow start. It was difficult maintaining any consistency when we had games postponed every other day.

"I've been hitting pretty well lately, and was surprised when they didn't walk me in the eighth inning with runners on second and third and first base open," said Singleton, who proceeded to drive in two runs with a line-drive single to right which gave the Orioles a 7-4 lead.

Tanner tops Stan Smith

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — Roscoe Tanner slammed 20 aces to beat Stan Smith 6-3, 6-7, 6-1 Friday night and will face Dick Stockton, who earlier beat Ilie Nastase of Romania 7-6, 6-4 in the semifinal round of the Bank of Oklahoma Tennis Classic here on Saturday.

Houston wins; rain delays UT-Race game

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Houston batters pounded a tournament-record four home runs to whip Arkansas 7-2 Friday in the opener of the Southwest Conference baseball tournment that saw the second game between Texas and Rice postponed because of rain in the 15th inning with the score deadlocked at 3-3.

Play was called with one out in the tope of the 15th inning and conference officials said they would try to finish the game Saturday at 1:30 p.m. The loser of the Rice-Texas game will then face Arkansas at 7 p.m. Houston will play the winner Sunday at 1:30 p.m.

The Owls, paced by their ace pitcher Matt Williams, were one pitch away from a 3-2 upset of the Longhorns when Texas pinch hitter Kirk Killingsworth slapped a hit to right field to score Burk Goldthorn with the tying run.

Williams and Texas starter Tony Arnold then battled five more innings before the storm delayed the final outcome.

In the first game, Charley Rizzo started the Cougar barrage with a solo homer in the second inning. The Razorbacks tied the score in the fourth, but then in the fifth inning Steve Jacobson hit a two-run shot and Mark Lavespere followed with a solo homer to put the Cougars ahead to stay.

Mike Minturn ending the Houston scoring blitz with a three-run homer in the eighth.

Brent Bentley, 7-0, got credit for the victory after relieving in the fifth inning. Stuart Huchingson, 4-3, took the loss for the Razorbacks after giving up Rizzo's homer. Reliever Jeff Schrantz gave up the other three homers.

Arkansas missed a number of scoring opportunities, stranding 10 runners on base.

Second was Kevin Sivage of Ruidoso, Thursday's individual leader. Sivage shot a 76 in the final round and finished at 146.

Rounding out the top five were Sean Murphy of Lovington with a 151 total after shooting a 75 Friday, Andy Stenovech of St. Pius, who shot 78 and also finished at 151, and Mike Herrera of Deming, who finished at 152 with a final-round 75.

The margins of victory for Socorro and St. Pius also set tournament records.

Jury selected to hear NFL case

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A jury of seven women and three men has been sworn in to hear the complicated antitrust case of the Los Angeles Coliseum and the Oakland Raiders vs. the National Football League.

The panel was made up mostly of people who know little or nothing about football and said they had no personal interest in the outcome of the case.

Three are from Los Angeles County, two each from Orange, Ventura and Riverside counties and one from San Bernardino County.

The jury must decide whether the NFL was acting legally when it forbade the Raiders from moving from Oakland to Los Angeles. The Raiders contend the league ban on their move was restraint of trade, a violation of antitrust laws.

The Los Angeles Rams moved from the Coliseum to Anaheim in adjacent Orange Country starting with the 1980 season.

U.S. District Judge Harry Pregerson, who administered the oath to the jurors in a brief procedure, recessed court until Tuesday morning, when the opening arguments are scheduled to begin.

The delay in starting indicated that Pregerson still has hopes that lawyers for the bitter opponents might be able to reach a settlement out of court before testimony begins.

An arbitrator has been called in to talk with both sides in an effort to reach such a settlement.

Attorneys have been publicly pessimistic about the possibility of an agreement without a trial.

Attorney Robert M. Loeffler, who who helped settle the reorganization of the Equity Funding Corporation in the 1970s, was named by the court to seek an out-of-court settlement. He has talked with attorneys for all interests involved in the case.

In another move, it was reported that Los Angeles County Supervisor Pete Schabarum, himself a former football star, was pressuring the Coliseum Commission to break with the Raiders and seek a new team for Los Angeles.

He is a member of the Coliseum Commission but was rebuffed by other members of the group.

"I think this is the worst possible time for a politician to give comfort to the enemy," said William Robertson, the Coliseum's principal negotiator in the effort to bring the Raiders to Los Angeles.

Supervisor Kenneth Hahn, also a commisssion member, added, "We do not want a house divided at this time."

Commissioner Chester Washington said, "This town wants a winner. The Raiders would be a logical team."

Joe Strain (17) of the Chicago Cubs stayed standing long enough as he came into second base to break up a double play attempt by Houston shortstop Craig Reynolds (12). Strain moved to second on a short infield hit by Bill Buckner in fourth inning action Friday night in the Astrodome.

Niekro blanks Chi Cubs

National

HOUSTON (AP) — Joe Niekro limited Chicago to four hits and Alan Ashby drilled a two-run double in a three-run fourth inning that triggered the Houston Astros to a 5-0 victory Friday night over the Cubs.

Niekro, 4-3, allowed seven runners — just two past first base — while striking out two batters and walking one. Joe Strain had three of the Cubs' hits.

In the fourth, Danny Heep singled off Bill Caudill, 0-3, and Howe doubled with one out. Both scored on Ashby's double to right. After Rafael Landestoy walked and Niekro struck out trying to bunt, Terry Puhl slapped an RBI single to left-center.

Howe, who stretched his hitting streak to 15 games, scored on Puhl's sacrifice fly in the sixth and, in the seventh, Denny Walling singled, went to third on a single by Heep and scored on Howe's grounder.

Braves roll over Cards, 11-3

ATLANTA (AP) — Bruce Benedict belted a three-run homer and Glenn Hubbard added a two-run single in a seven-run sixth inning that carried the Atlanta Braves to an 11-3 rout of the St. Louis Cardinals Friday night.

Hubbard also had a two-run double in the seventh. The Braves sent 11 batters to the plate in the sixth inning, collecting six hits and two walks as they battered Lary Sorensen, 4-2, and erased St. Louis' 3-2 lead.

Atlanta tied it at 3-3 when pinch-runner Jerry Royster scored from third on an infield forceout by Rufino Linares. Chris Chambliss then broke the tie with a ground-rule double that bounced over the center field fence.

After Dale Murphy was walked intentionally to load the bases, Hubbard lined a two-run single to center and Benedict followed with his third home run of the year to left field.

The victory went to reliever Preston Hanna, 2-0.

George Hendrick scored the Cards' first run in the second inning when Rafael Ramirez booted a grounder by Tom Herr with bases loaded in the second.

St. Louis got two more runs in the third when Keith Hernandez doubled and scored on ken Oberkfell's single to center. Hendrick, who walked after Hernandez doubled, later scored on a wild pitch by Hanna.

Reds sink Pirates

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Jason Thompson bobbled Ron Oester's bases-loaded grounder to first base in the ninth inning, allowing George Foster to score the tie-breaking run and the Cincinnati Reds went on to beat the Pittsburgh Pirates 4-1 Friday night.

Foster led off the ninth with an infield single off Enrique Romo, 0-2, and was bunted to second by Johnny Bench. Joe Nolan was intentionally walked, Dan Driessen ran for him, the runners moved up on a wild pitch and pinch-hitter Larry Biittner also walked to load the bases and Mike O'Berry ran for him.

After Thompson's error broke the 1-1 tie, Grant Jackson replaced Romo. Junior Kennedy's sacrifice fly scored Driessen and Sam Mejias singled O'Berry home with the inning's third run.

Cincinnati's Frank Pastore took a four-hit shutout and a 1-0 lead into the eighth inning. But Phil Garner led off with a single.

Carlton wins seventh

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Unbeaten Steve Carlton pitched a five-hitter for his seventh victory and Mike Schmidt singled in a pair of runs as the Philadelphia Phillies ended San Diego's four-game winning streak with a 2-1 victory over the Padres Friday night.

The Phils broke open a scoreless game with a pair of runs in the fifth after two were out. Manny Trillo reached first on an infield hit and Bake McBride lined a single to center which Luis Salazar failed to handle, allowing Trillo to reach third and McBride second. Schmidt then lined a single off the leg of starter Steve Mura, 1-5, to score both runners.

Carlton, who struck out nine batters en route to his sixth complete game of the year, limited the Padres to just two hits through 62-3 innings. Broderick Perkins, the major league batting leader, then singled to left to run his hitting streak to 14 games and Salazar tripled to the center field wall to end Carlton's bid for his 46th career shutout.

In the ninth, Gene Richards drew a one-out walk and Barry Evans doubled. But Richards was thrown out at home, Gary Matthews to Schmidt to catcher Bob Boone.

They were from all over the West Texas and Eastern New Mexico area. The weather started out cloudy and cool, but ended up quite nice toward the end. The Hogan Park Women's Golf Association deserves a really big pat on the back for such a well-run tournament.

There will be a business meeting on Thursday, May 21, and the 18-hole group ladies will make their own pairings for play following the meeting. The 9-hole group parings are as follows:

Nancy Cox and Peggy Mattina; Wilma Allenson and Jean Connor; Margaret Moore and Dorothy Koons; Barb Larsen and Margaret Rhea; Rita Boe and Rosa Lee Cook.

Boston Celtics 'other' forward does the job

HOUSTON (AP) — For two years he has been the Boston Celtics' "other" forward. While Larry Bird got the headlines, Cedric Maxwell quietly went about getting the job done, too.

And when Bird fell into a shooting slump in the first five games of the National Basketball Association championship series, the 6-foot-8 Maxwell was there to pick up the slack.

EVEN THOUGH Bird broke out for 27 points in Thursday night's 102-91 victory over the Houston Rockets that wrapped up Boston's 14th NBA crown, the award for Most Valuable Player of the championship series went to Maxwell. The vote by a panel of newsmen was 6-1, with Bird getting the only dissenting vote.

"I'm considered just the other forward on this team," said Maxwell. "I understand that it's because Larry Bird is an excellent basketball player, but I have pride, too. It's a tremendous boost to my ego to win MVP.

"My name's not a media or household word. I realize I'm supposed to be the third-level scorer on this team behind Larry and Robert Parish. I'll never have to worry about media hype. I'm no Reggie Jackson. But I just want it to come out that I can represent myself as a player, too."

Maxwell led the Celtics with 17.7 points per game in the title series and was their No.2 rebounder with a 9.5 average. In the pivotal fifth game, when Boston took a 3-2 lead in the series and established control, Maxwell led the way with 28 points and 15 rebounds.

And winning it was especially sweet for Maxwell, who joined the Celtics in 1977 and suffered through seasons in which the team compiled records of 32-50 and 29-53 before turning it around two years ago, upon the arrival of Bird.

Valenzuela is bargin rate pitcher for LA Dodgers

LOS ANGELES (AP) — With a lot of second-line major league players collecting six-figure salaries these days, the Los Angeles Dodgers are getting pitcher Fernando Valenzuela at a bargain rate.

Valenzuela, reportedly earning $42,000 this season, has won all eight of his big league starts, and the two runs he allowed Thursday night in a three-hit, 3-2 victory over the Montreal Expos were as many as he had allowed in 63 previous innings this year. His earned run average ballooned to 0.50.

THE 20-year-old native of Mexico is a media sensation wherever he goes, although reporters' questions must be translated into Spanish and the answers reinterpreted into English.

Jaime Jarrin, who has broadcast Dodgers' games locally in Spanish for 24 years, has an additional task this year, serving as the rookie's interpreter.

Thursday, the inevitable question came up concerning his salary.

"Fernando," he was asked, "don't you think you deserve a raise?"

The left-hander from the Mexican state of Sonora smiled, sort of, then hesitated before answering in Spanish, with a small chuckle: "Nobody knows."

Valenzuela got a big laugh with that answer because it's obvious to everyone that he's not being paid anywhere near his value to the Dodgers.

A sellout crowd of 53,906 — the largest regular-season gathering at Dodger Stadium in nearly seven years — were on hand Thursday night to watch Valenzuela earn his salary. He already has proved himself as a sensational drawing card on the road.

CHRIS SPEIER, who hadn't homered in more than a year, drilled a 1-2 pitch just inside the left field foul pole in the third inning, and Andre Dawson belted a mammoth shot into the left field bullpen with two out in the ninth on the first pitch from Valenzuela. They were the first two homers allowed by Valenzuela in the majors.

The big crowd was disappointed — perhaps heartbroken would be a better description — but the sadness didn't last long because Pedro Guerrero led off the bottom of the ninth with a homer off Montreal reliever Steve Ratzer, 1-1, giving the Dodgers and their young phenom another victory.

"It was a tough game," Valenzuela said. "The main thing is that the team won, that's the most important thing."

Said like a true team man. Valenzuela not only throws all the right pitches — almost all of them, anyway — he says all the right things.

"I wouldn't say that's solving him — two runs, three hits and just one walk," said Montreal Manager Dick Williams. "We hit some balls hard off him, but it's runs that count. He's still got an ERA that's microscopic."

AND A FEW other things, too. In addition to topping the majors in victories and earned run average, Valenzuela leads in innings pitched (72), complete games (7) shutouts (5) and strikeouts (68). He has walked only 17 batters and allowed just 43 hits.

Because he won twice in relief late last season, his career major league record is 10-0. Overall with the Dodgers, he has allowed four earned runs in 892-3 innings.

He also had two hits, giving him nine for the season and a .360 batting average.

After the game, Los Angeles Manager Tom Lasorda announced proudly that he had some interesting information. After Speier's homer, none of Valenzuela's next 19 pitches was called a ball.

"I wasn't upset (about the homer)," Lasorda said. "I knew we were behind so I had to bear down harder."

IF VALENZUELA wins Monday night against the Philadelphia Phillies, he would surpass an accomplishment of Dave "Boo" Ferris that he equalled against the Expos. In 1945, Ferriss won his first eight major league starts for the Boston Red Sox.

The feat of eight victories in as many starts to begin a big league career is believed to be a record. No such achievement is listed in the record books, and baseball historians are researching to find out if any other rookie had a start that was better.

Rains wash out Colonial

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — A thunderstorm forced a suspension of play Friday in the second round of the $300,000 Colonial National Invitation golf tournament.

Play was held up at 12:15 p.m. CDT when lightning began to hit the 7,190-yard Colonial Country Club course.

Only a handful of players had completed second-round action when sirens blew signalling the suspension.

First-round leaders Ray Floyd and Mike Sullivan, who had opening four-under-par 66s, were on the course when play was held up. Each had dropped back to par.

Tom Watson, needing improvement over a first-round 76, and defending champion Bruce Lietzke, who had an opening 70, had just started their second rounds when play was held up.

Former Colonial champion Jerry Heard, one of the early starters, shot a 5-under-par 65 and had a 36-hole total of 139, one under par.

Robinson, Christy win Spring Fling

Mary Robinson and Clara Christy posted a 62 and won a card playoff over Charlotte Marburger and Dede Plank Thursday to win the seventh annual Hogan Park Women's Golf Association Spring Fling Invitional golf tournament.

Crystal Fouche and Diana Bowser took third place with a 64.

In the first flight, Jean Elkins and Jean Deffenbaugh took top honors with a 60, but won it on a card playoff over Jimmy Elmore and Billie May Hartman. Third went to Bobbye Prichard and Dollie Edmonds with a 63.

Lois Guthrie and Jean Foster posted a 63 to win the second flight while Gloria Dellenbaugh and Renee Beique took second with a 64. Third went to Maybeth Searles and Maxine Mitchell with a 65.

Vickie Gillion and Margaret Thornton won a card playoff with Jeanne Allen and Polly mackey for the third flight title after both teams had a 62. Third went to Lois Craddock and Allene Foote.

Evelyn Milby and Nancy Milner posted a 57 to take the fourth flight. Second went to Oral Lee Sanders and Kathy Yakubanski with a 58 while Pat Cheyney and Bernie Lage were another stroke back.

Retha Peterson won the closest to the pin competition on No. 9 while Betty Lynch took the prize on No. 13.

Over 100 participants competed from San Angelo, Odessa, Houston, Alpine, Fort Davis, Kent, Marfa, Snyder, Denver City, Midland and the New Mexico towns of Jal, Lovington and Hobbs.

Shriver dumps King to move to semis in Tokyo

TOKYO (AP) — American Pam Shriver defeated veteran Billie Jean King 7-5, 7-5 in a first-round women's match Friday and moved into the semifinals of the $200,000 Gunze World Tennis Tournament.

Earlier, West Germany's Bettina Bunge beat Australian veteran Wendy Turnbull 6-4, 6-1 in another first-round match at Tokyo Metropolitan Gymnasium.

In the third and final singles match of the day, American Davis Cupper Gene Mayer whipped Jun Kamiwazumi of Japan 6-2, 7-5, in the men's first-round match.

THE 18-year-old Shriver, who will meet fellow American Tracy Austin in one of Saturday's semifinals, said, "I played well enough today to win. I have to play better tomorrow to advance into the finals."

"It was the first time I beat King in both singles and doubles matches since 1979," Shriver said.

Trailing 5-3 in the first set, Shriver picked up three consecutive points to go into a 6-5 lead and then won the set 7-5 after keeping her serve.

In the second set, they broke each other's services in the first four games. Then, both players kept their services until Shriver broke King's serve in the 11th game to go ahead 6-5. Shriver kept her serve and won the set 7-5 and the match when King was unable to handle Shriver's last shot — a drop return near the net.

BUNGE, 18, who will play American tennis prodigy Andrea Jaeger in the semifinals, said, "I played well today but not my best. I think Turnbull did not play her best."

With both players holding their services, Bunge went ahead 5-2, breaking the Australian's serve in the fifth and seventh games with three aces.

But, the 28-year-old Turnbull made a strong comeback by winning two points to make it 5-4. For a while it appeared the Australian veteran might overtake Bunge with her fine net play and passing shots. But the West German youngster held her service.

In the second set, Bunge kept the Australian, a strong net player, away from the net with long return shots and easily won the match.

Mayer meets fellow American Brian Teacher, who beat another American Peter Fleming Thursday in Kobe, n the semifinls Saturday.

Pep rally for team

HOUSTON (AP) — Former Mayor Louie Welch said the Houston Rockets had gone higher than anything except space shuttle Columbia Friday as the Cinderella National Basketball Association team finally landed in Tranquility Park to a thunderous pep rally.

The Houston Chamber of Commerce scheduled the rally at the downtown park to show its appreciation for the Rockets, who fought their way to the NBA championship finals before losing to Boston 4-2 in the best-of-seven series.

More than 3,500 fans turned out for the 40-minute rally that climaxed a surprising playoff odessy that saw the Rockets defeat defending champion Los Angeles, San Antonio and Kansas City to reach the championship series.

The Rockets were underdogs in each of the playoff series after finishing the regular season with a 40-42 record.

Baby given treatment before birth

ROBERT J. LOCKE
AP Science Writer

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Scientists' success in treating an unborn baby for a deadly inherited disease by giving medicine to the mother could be a breakthrough that will save the lives of other infants, University of California doctors report.

The method "could be applicable and very beneficial for a fair number of (inherited) metabolic diseases," said Dr. Seymour Packman of UC-San Francisco.

The treatment was applied to Nicole Whitmore of Santa Rosa, born last Dec. 21 with a disorder that prevents her body from utilizing a crucial vitamin called biotin.

Packman and Dr. Morton Cowan described the novel treatment that protected Nicole from the disorder, which is fatal if untreated, at a news conference Thursday.

The biotin dependency was first described 10 years ago and has since been reported in fewer than a dozen families around the world.

He and Cowan diagnosed Nicole's problem 16 weeks into Debra Whitmore's pregnancy — a diagnosis never before made on an unborn child, the university said. They looked for the disorder because Nicole's older brother also inherited it.

About eight weeks later, Mrs. Whitmore began receiving huge doses of biotin. Because of the physical bonds between a mother and her developing child, much of the vitamin traveled with other nutrients to the fetus.

The idea, Cowan said, was to get so much biotin into the fetus that some of it would have to reach the right places and be utilized.

It worked. The child was born with no symptoms and remains normal and healthy after five months, he said.

Packman said Nicole and other children with the disorder "will probably have to take biotin all their lives and they will probably live normal lives. That's based on what we know now, but the oldest living patient is only something like 10 years old."

Previous victims of the disorder have usually been identified only after devastating symptoms develop.

Nicole's 2-year-old brother, Justin, faced life-threatening problems within 36 hours of birth. He was sent in desperation to UCSF's Moffit Hospital with acid accumulating in his body, his blood suger falling dangerously and, because the disorder somehow disables the immune system, widespread infections. Given massive doses of biotin, he recovered, Packman said.

Cowan said the treatment was delayed until the last three months of the pregnancy because, "although we had no evidence that this (heavy dose of biotin) would in any way harm the mother or her baby, we wanted to be extra careful. So we waited until ... the organs had pretty much developed."

Packman said a similar mother-to-fetus vitamin treatment was used several years ago by a team of Harvard and Yale doctors to treat a disorder involving a different vitamin and also at the University of Pennsylvania for a possible biotin dependency that was not actually diagnosed until after birth. Both children did well.

Packman said similar tests and treatments might be used for other families with a high risk of this or similar metabolic diseases.

He said one child in 2,000 is born with "inborn error of metabolism or transport and when you think there are 3 million newborns across the country each year, that's a lot."
