Surrogacy supported by decision

By FAITH KEENAN
Hearst News Service

HACKENSACK, N.J. — Baby M legally became Melissa Stern Tuesday when a judge awarded custody of the child borne under a surrogate arrangement to her father, William Stern, and terminated the parental rights of surrogate mother Mary Beth Whitehead.

"Melissa's best interests will be served by being placed in her father's sole custody," Judge Harvey Sorkow said. "This court specifically enforces the surrogate parenting agreement to deliver the child to he father and to terminate the rights of the mother."

Stern's wife Elizabeth signed adoption papers in the judge's chambers immediately following the long-awaited ruling.

The ecstatic father, brushing away tears, seemed to grope for words as he told reporters "I feel tingles in my elbows and in my legs. I'm tingling all over." Swallowing a sob, he added "We're so happy."

Surrogate mother Mary Beth Whitehead was not present for the decision. Her lawyers said she wanted to hear the judge's decision in the privacy of her home. However, they affirmed that the ruling will be appealed. They plan to continue the battle in New Jersey Superior Court.

"We're confident Mary Beth will get her baby back," said Randolph Wolf, Whitehead's lawyer.

Sorkow's historic pronouncement on the first trial testing the legality of surrogate agreements came 2 hours and 40 minutes into the reading of his 121 page decision.

Gary Skoloff, lawyer for the Sterns, called the ruling "the best alternative." Baby M's court-appointed guardian, who had advised against terminating Whitehead's parental rights, said, "The judge is a courageous man."

Highway bill veto could stand

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate today tentatively sustained President Reagan's veto of an $88 billion highway bill on a vote of 65-35, but majority Democrats moved immediately for another vote in a high-stakes political showdown.

With the vote 64-34 — enough to sustain the veto — Senate Democratic leader Robert C. Byrd of West Virginia switched his vote in a parliamentary maneuver that enabled him to seek reconsideration of the vote.

There was no word on how soon the roll would be called.

Byrd's action prolonged the suspense in a battle between the president and the Democratic-controlled Congress over legislation that includes more than 100 one-of-a-kind highway demonstration projects and permits the states to raise the speed limit to 65 miles per hour on most stretches of interstate highway.

Reagan had termed the measure a budget buster that was larded with wasteful spending in issuing his veto. But beyond the provisions of the bill itself, the veto fight became a test of Reagan's standing and prestige after months of political damage caused by the Iran-Contra affair.

"It is a very critical vote for Ronald Reagan," said Senate Republican leader Bob Dole of Kansas in a final appeal for support. "This may determine the strength of this presidency for the next 21 months."

The initial, tense roll call was conducted in an unusually quiet Senate chamber, with Vice President George Bush presiding.

With the tally at 66-32, Democrat Terry Sanford of North Carolina and Republican whip Alan Simpson of Wyoming were the only senators not voting.

Sanford had said in advance he would vote to sustain the veto.

Sanford, standing near the front of the chamber, conferred first with Simpson, and then with Byrd, before announcing that he would vote "present." With that, he walked away, only to return a few moments later to change his vote, sustaining the veto.

With that, Simpson also voted no, but Byrd quickly stepped in to change his previous vote and to call for a second roll call.

The president and top administration officials spent several days seeking support for the veto, and Byrd made a closed-door appeal to his caucus on Tuesday for a display of party unity against Reagan.

In an hour of debate Tuesday, Democrats lambasted the president's decision to veto the measure.

"It is a chip on the shoulder veto," said Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass. "And it deserves to be overriden by the Senate. A major highway bill of vast importance to the nation should not be lost because the president's foreign policy collapsed around him."

Salvadoran troops pursue guerrillas who led raid

EL PARAISO, El Salvador (AP) — Government troops searched the mountainous northern region for leftist guerrillas who attacked a key military base and killed at least 43 soldiers and a U.S. military adviser.

Staff Sgt. Gregory A. Fronius, 27, a Green Beret intelligence specialist, was the first American to die in battle in this Central American nation's 7-year-old civil war.

Fronius, of Greensburg, Pa., was killed by mortar fire during the predawn Tuesday raid on the 4th Infantry Brigade garrison at El Paraiso in Chalatenango province, about 40 miles north of the capital of San Salvador.

Fronius had arrived Jan. 6 in El Salvador for a six-month tour and was training Salvadoran troops at the garrison. His body was shipped later Tuesday to Panama, where his wife and child live, according to U.S. Embassy spokesman Pen Agnew.

In Washington, President Reagan said after a state dinner that Fronius' death was "a tragedy" that "should bring home to everyone what we face against communism."

"Those guerrillas were communists," he said. "I hope we realize we have a responsibility to keep communism out of the Western Hemisphere."

The guerrillas' clandestine Radio Farabundo Marti broadcast a statement from Leonel Gonzalez, one of the five rebel leaders, calling the attack a "total success because we completed the main objective of destroying the forces inside the brigade."

The military said at least 43 soldiers were killed and 35 wounded when the leftists attacked the base at 2 a.m. (3 a.m. EST) behind a barrage of 90mm cannon, mortar and grenade fire.

Soldiers on the scene estimated about 65 troops were killed and more than 100 wounded.

Gen. Adolfo Blandon, chief of the armed forces, said the death toll could rise "because of the seriousness of the injuries."

At least eight guerrillas were killed, he said.

Some guerrillas entered the compound carrying explosives during the 2½-hour assault, in which the command post, barracks and officers mess were destroyed, Blandon said. He said 250 soldiers were at the post, and that most of the casualties were in the barracks.

The rebel radio claimed the guerrillas overran the base 10 minutes after beginning their attack and remained inside until about 6 a.m.

Blandon said he did not know the number of attackers. One military official, speaking on condition of anonymity, gave estimated about 100 rebels took part.

Military officials said an investigation was begun to determine how the attack occurred on the garrison, which is considered one of the army's best and is surrounded by dozens of security posts. Half of the base was destroyed in a 1983 attack.

Corrales calls criticism a 'personal vendetta'

By RICK BROWN
Assistant City Editor

A former Black Advisory Council president "deliberately" distorted the truth and is pursuing a "personal vendetta" in written attacks against incumbent City Council candidate Oralia Corrales, she said in a prepared statement today.

Ms. Corrales' comments were made in reference to a "letter to the editor" signed by Charlie Jackson and published in last Sunday's Reporter-Telegram. The incumbent candidate's statement was scheduled for release during a 11 a.m. news conference today.

"Of funding, Mr. Jackson evidently does not understand the process of decision making," said Ms. Corrales, who is running for re-election to the District 2 council seat. "No organization receiving funds from the City Council can do so without council approval.

"The record will show that I cast my one vote each time for programs benefiting south and east Midland, which included street paving, the Martin Luther King Jr. Park and other projects," she said.

District 2 has city's only contested race

Elections 87

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the fourth in a five-part series on next Saturday's city, hospital district and school district elections. Today's article is an overview of the Midland City Council District 2 race.

By RICK BROWN
Assistant City Editor

City Council District 2 — located on Midland's east and south sides — may contain more have-nots than any other district, but voters there Saturday have one thing that others don't — a choice.

Three candidates filed for election in the District 3 race. They are insurance business owner and incumbent Oralia Corrales, Methodist Church pastor and businessman Woodrow Bailey and former businesswoman and former teacher Barbara Harris.

Ms. Corrales, the first minority councilmember elected in the city's history, said she helped focus city government's attention on the problems of her district, which has more minority residents than any other.

Ms. Corrales talked of "progress" in her district since her election, mentioning a Police Department task force that made more than 120 arrests and recovered thousands of dollars in stolen property since its creation three months ago.

City Council acceptance of East Side Community Development Task Force recommendations for Lamesa Road realignment and other District 2 redevelopment proposals also show increased council concern for east and south side residents, she said.

In addition, "I'm putting people in positions where decisions are made," she said of District 2 residents appointed in the last two years to the various city boards and commissions.

She insists that she remains in firm contact with her district. "I have meetings going on all the time with all these people on all these issues," she said.

"Probably even more than the mayor, I get more calls and have more community involvement with my district than any other (councilmember)," she said.

The newness of having a councilmember specifically concerned with east and south side issues is probably why Ms. Corrales receives the most calls, she conjectured.

The city's four single-member districts were created in 1985 to satisfy a lawsuit filed by the League of United Latin American Citizens and the Black Advisory Council that demanded greater city minority representation.

Despite the progress claimed by Ms. Corrales since that time, Bailey said the council has not gone far enough to "bring District 2 standards up to the standards that the rest of the city has."

In particular, he called for a more focused street paving program that would begin on streets surrounding schools and fan out to streets children use to walk to school.

He proposed the use of federal Community Development Block Grant funds for the project so as not to burden the city budget.

Tort reform: Ceiling on damage awards one possibility

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the fourth of a seven-part series on tort reform currently being considered in the Texas Legislature. This segment deals with proposed caps on awards for non-economic and punitive damages.

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

From time to time we all tend to say things like "I'll sue," or "I'll see you in court, Charlie."

Most of the time, of course, we're just kidding, but some times we're serious and we do sue.

Most towns, businesses and professionals have liability insurance to protect themselves against law suits. But lately, more and more of those policy-holders have found themselves socked with huge rate increases.

It's a cost that's ultimately passed on to consumers and taxpayers.

The idea that there is a litigation explosion has been the focus of major debate across the state, with the insurance industry calling for reforms in the tort system to make insurance underwriting more predictable.

One way to to this, say tort reformers, is to cap punitive damages and noneconomic pain and suffering recoveries.

Proposed limits for noneconomic damages range from $100,000 to $500,000.

Tort reform proponents say the noneconomic awards are often 10 times the actual damages, lost wages, medical and legal bills, disability, etc.

"The system does a good job at fender-benders and medical claims because the industry knows the costs of automotive repair and health cost and lost wages. But injuries have no frame of reference on punitive damages or noneconomic recoveries," said Bill Messer of the Texas Civil Justice League.

"How much money will offset the anguish of a widow?" he asked, saying there is no set amount and society cannot afford to try to monetarily compensate for these kinds of losses.

"I'm not saying there shouldn't be any recovery for noneconomic losses, but there should be a cap, perhaps $150,000 or $250,000," he said.

"If I were on a jury asked to put a dollar figure on the loss of a life, I'd pick the highest number I could come up with, because I value human life, but we have to balance that with societal costs.

"If we capped it, we'd add predictability to the system, lowering costs. The same needs to be done with punitive damages," he said.

Messer said this is particularly important in Texas because "our Supreme Court has liberalized the issue, and there is no longer a reasonable ceiling on punitive claims."

Billy Rogers, president of Texans for Civil Justice, an anti-reform lobbying group, said there is no way to predetermine how much an injured person should receive. He's calling for caps on insurance companies' profits.

The insurance industry says "runaway jury awards" have led them to raise premiums.

Portion of Congress intends to give back $12,100 pay raise

WASHINGTON (AP) — More than 12 percent of the members of Congress say they will either give back or give away a $12,100 pay raise that begins appearing in their paychecks today, according to a survey by consumer advocate Ralph Nader.

The survey released Tuesday by a Nader group called Stop the Salary Grab listed 56 House members and 12 senators who said as of last Friday they planned to reject the raise. Some said they would give it to charity.

Two congressmen on the list said Tuesday they would take the increase and at least one senator said his name should be added.

"It's fitting that the first installment of this backhanded salary grab appears in congressional paychecks on April Fool's Day," Nader said. "Congress intentionally tried to fool the American taxpayer when it sidestepped the voting process to pocket this pay hike through the back door."

The House allowed congressional and other top government salaries to rise automatically in February, although a majority of members voted against the pay raise after it apparently was too late to have any effect. A lawsuit has been filed against the increase.

NATION

The raise from $77,400 to $89,500 actually began accumulating the first of March, and the first of it — an extra $1,000 approximately — appears in paychecks that come out today.

The Nader group said it surveyed all members of Congress, initially by mail and with a telephone follow-up to see who would refuse the pay raise.

Besides the 68 who rejected the raise, 100 said they either would not disclose their decision or said they hadn't decided yet. The remaining members said they would accept it, according to the Nader survey. There are 100 senators and 434 members of the House; one House seat is vacant.

"We suspect the survey may spur some others" to give the pay raise to charity or back to the Treasury, given the political pressures from constituents, Nader spokesman Craig McDonald said.

But two Republican congressmen — Rep. Bill Emerson of Missouri, and Rep. Jim Leach of Iowa — said that although their names were on the list, they would accept the raise.

Emerson spokesmen Jim Hunter and Leach spokesman Andy McLeod both said their congressmen were listed because of a miscommunication between their staffs and Nader's group.

Sen. Lawton Chiles, D-Fla., whose name was not on the list, said through a spokesman he would write a check to the Treasury each month for the amount of the raise.

Spokesman Jack Pridgen said it would be part of Chiles' overall effort to reduce the federal deficit.

Of the 68 on the list, 30 are Republicans and 38 are Democrats.

Third Marine arrested in sex, spy case

WASHINGTON — A third Marine who worked as an embassy guard in Moscow is under arrest in a sex-and-spy case for which the Soviet Union now is poking fun at the United States.

Staff Sgt. Robert Stanley Stufflebeam, who had commanded the other two Marines arrested in the case, was being held in the brig at Camp Pendleton, Calif., Pentagon spokesman Robert Sims said Tuesday.

The arrests and the Marine Corps' announcement earlier this week that the entire 28-man guard detachment in Moscow would be replaced in a "precautionary" move drew sarcasm from a Soviet Foreign Ministry spokesman Tuesday.

"We can only smile at what is said about the story that 28 staunch Marines are being withdrawn because they were allegedly unable to withstand the charms of blonde spies," Soviet spokesman Gennady Gerasimov told reporters in Moscow.

The stories indicate the Marines' "inability to resist the enemy," he said.

The Soviet spokesman added the allegations that Soviet women lured Marine guards into espionage sounded like the plot of a lurid spy novel. He did not, however, directly deny it had happened.

The 28 Marine guards being recalled from the Moscow embassy have been told they will be asked to take polygraph tests when they return to the United States, the New York Times reported today.

The newspaper, quoting an unidentified American close to the contingent, said the Marines were told they would be transferred to regular Marine duty if they declined to submit to the tests.

In addition, the Marines were told they would be asked what they knew of any illegal activities, including black market dealings and bringing women into the Marine compound, the Times said.

Stufflebeam, 24, of Bloomington, Ill., had not been accused of espionage, as have two other former Moscow embassy guards: Sgt. Clayton J. Lonetree and Cpl. Arnold Bracy.

Unclassified summaries of the interrogation of Lonetree say he told investigators he received $3,500 from the Soviets, and the corps alleges that Bracy received $1,000 from Lonetree.

Sims said Stufflebeam had commanded Lonetree and Bracy in Moscow and acknowledged he had been arrested last Sunday at Camp Pendleton on the basis of information uncovered in the Lonetree investigation.

Stufflebeam is being held for investigation of violating two military regulations: failure to report all contacts with foreign nationals and making false official statements "during his exit debriefing indicating that no such contacts had occurred."

"Specifically, he is suspected of having associations with Soviet women on several occasions," Sims said.

President Reagan said Tuesday night that replacing the Marine contingent in Moscow, was "simply a precaution."

The president, speaking with reporters following a state dinner for French Prime Minister Jacques Chirac called the case "regrettable."

The 25-year-old Lonetree was the first of the three to be arrested — last December — and has since been charged with two counts of espionage and 22 related counts. Bracy was arrested two weeks ago for investigation of working as an accomplice with Lonetree.

The two were assigned together in Moscow for a period of roughly eight months in 1985 and 1986.

According to the Marine Corps, Stufflebeam served in Moscow for a year — from May 10, 1985, to May 24, 1986 — after working as a guard at two other U.S. embassies. When he departed Moscow and rotated to the Marine base at Camp Pendleton, he was the No. 2 man in charge of the Moscow security detachment, the Corps said, adding he had received a "meritorious" promotion to the rank of staff sergeant on Jan. 2, 1986.

Gerasimov's comments at a news briefing were the first by a Soviet official on the case, which has led to charges that Lonetree and Bracy repeatedly allowed Soviet agents inside the embassy late at night.

Pentagon sources have said both Marines became involved with Soviet women who worked on the embassy's staff, who in turn introduced them to a man believed to work for the Soviet KGB.

In a July, 1985 issue, Forbes Magazine reported the average product liability award in the U.S. was $1.07 million — up from $345,000 ten years earlier — and the average medical malpractice award was $950,000.

In 1983 alone 360 personal injury cases were settled with million-dollar awards or more, 13 times the number in 1975, the magazine reported.

But David Burrow, president of the Texas Trial Lawyers Association, said such statistics are misleading to the public.

Burrow noted that in Dallas County, only 147 malpractice suits have been tried to a verdict since 1969, and of those only 25 were decided in favor of the plaintiff.

The total of all verdicts, for a 15-year period, was about $93,500 each — a far cry from $962,258, he said.

In 1984, a total of 39,192 civil cases were filed in Dallas County — 414 of which were tried to a verdict, according to the Texas Judicial Council's annual report.

In Lubbock County, 4,034 civil cases were filed, with 15 tried to a verdict, the report said.

Burrow, in a letter to Texas newspaper editors, wrote "the insurance industry's own investment practices, and its recent history of 'cash flow underwriting' (cutting premiums to get cash for investments) has caused their so-called crisis."

He said "the insurance industry needs to come clean. They provide the State Board of Insurance with the figure they want them to have regarding premiums collected, losses paid out, dollars added to reserves to cover future losses, and dollars added to reserves for 'losses not yet reported.'

"The industry tells the State Board of Insurance what their 'loss expenses' are, but doesn't tell them in detail what all is included in this category.

"In effect, liability insurance premium are set based on information solely in the hands of the insurance industry," he added.

Jerry "Nub" Donaldson, a notable tort reformer, has said lawsuits have become "a crapshoot," with defendants never knowing how much they might lose. "We're entitled to the same privilege that we give to any common criminal," he said. "Tell us up front what the fine is."

According to a recent poll of certified public accountants in various industries across Texas, hospitals, medical and other professionals, corporate directors are all suffering trouble obtaining or affording liability insurance coverage.

More than 60 percent of the West Texas respondents to the Texas Society of CPA's survey reported their own company or their largest outside client had difficulty obtaining liability coverage last year.

Of those who had insurance problems more than half reduced their coverage, two-thirds paid increased premiums and more than one in five responded — by eliminating their coverage completly.

An additional 14 percent turned to self-insurance plans, more than 10 percent utilized industry association insurance pools, while more than 7 percent eliminated business segments which couldn't be adequately insured.

Dr. Terry Tubb, a Midland plastic surgeon and chairman of the Medical-Legal Committee of the Midland County Medical Society, said "unless we attain tort reform with teeth, I will be forced to curtain a substantial amount of my practice consisting of humanitarian and charity work, especially with children, which I so much enjoy."

Tubb said the Midland County Medical Society, as well as a few individual surgeons, donated several thousand dollars to buy knee braces for local high school football players last year "only to find we were jointly and severally liable should football player sustain a knee injury while wearing one of the complimentary braces."

Several physicians also have performed free Boy Scout physicals each year in preparation for summer camp.

"Whether or not I and the other physicians will continue to do these complimentary physicals in the future, due to the liability risks, is now questionable," he said.

Midland County Attorney Mark Dettman said there is no set amount to offset the anguish of a widow, but society cannot afford to try to monetarily compensate for these kinds of losses.

The American Tort Reform Association has been told that proposed changes in tort laws are expected to come under constitutional attack.

A Dallas federal judge ruled several months ago that the Texas medical malpractice law capping damages violated portions of both the U.S. and the Texas constitutions. A similar Virginia statute was struck down by a federal judge in that state.

Jessica Shahin, spokeswoman for the consumer organization Public Citizen, said caps "limit the amount victims could recover through litigation. Thus, if a defective product turned a healthy, young person into a quadriplegic, that pain might only be worth a limited amount."

In medical malpractice cases, she noted that voluntary settlements disposed of 90 percent of the claims filed. The settlements were shown to be surprisingly close to what jury awards were estimated to be. Claims with a 39 to 53 percent probability of winning were dropped without any payment.

In cases with 57 to 77 percent probability of success, settlements amounted to 74 percent of the projected verdict. The 26 percent not recovered by the plaintiff accounted for the unrealized litigation costs and the reasonable estimate of winning.

Although there has been an increase in the cases in which punitive damages are awarded, only half of those awards are paid, she said. The average size of over half of all punitives awarded in Cook County was $102,000. The other half of the punitive awards, those averaging nearly $1 million in the trial stage, were reduced to just over $416,000, 45 percent of the original award.

There's also been an increase in workers compensation claims, but the increase is due chiefly to a rise in work-related diseases, she said.

According to Rand Corp., recent advances in medical technology has demonstrated the links between jobs and diseases. The increase in compensation cases and the size of awards is a direct result of the fact that these job-caused diseases are now recognized and compensated.

Capping awards removes incentives for companies to consider safety measures in product design, since they can calculate their liability ceiling and budget accordingly, she said.

Also, the standard of proof for punitive damages already is much tougher than for simple tort action.

"Eliminating punitive damages would remove one of the strongest incentives for corporations to promote safety measures in work places and product design," she said. "The present system already contains protections to stem excessive awards through review of awards and appellate courts."

BABY

The Sterns sued Whitehead for custody of the 1-year-old girl when the surrogate refused to give the child up to Stern after the baby's birth on March 27, 1986. She subsequently fled with the baby to Florida in violation of a court order. Authorities retrieved the child in July, returning her to the temporary custody of the Sterns.

Whitehead, a 29-year-old housewife, had been allowed to visit the baby twice a week for two hours during the trial proceedings. Visitation has been canceled with the judge's decision. She will, however, receive the original $10,000 fee for bearing the child.

Sorkow based his decision on contract law, deeming adoption and custody law inapplicable to the unique surrogacy case. He upheld the contract, saying a couple's right to procreation was secured by the 14th Amendment's right to privacy.

"Legislation or court action that denies the surrogate contract impedes a couple's liberty that is otherwise constitutionally protected," he said. "If it is the reproduction that is protected, then the means of reproduction are also to be protected.... The court holds that the protected means extends to the use of surrogates.

Referring to the 1973 Supreme Court decision on abortion, he elaborated, "If the law of our land sanctions a means to end life, then that same law may be used to create and celebrate life."

Sorkow discredited Whitehead's defense that the surrogate contract was fraudulent because she was not fully informed of Elizabeth Stern's medical condition which rendered her infertile. Mrs. Stern, 41, suffers from a mild form of multiple sclerosis, which she feared would be exacerbated by pregnancy.

"Mrs. Whitehead wanted to enter a surrogate contract," said Sorkow. "She wanted to become pregnant. The arguments of fraud were raised after the fact."

Having declared the contract valid after a lengthy recounting of the case and legal justification for his judgment, the judge addressed the custody question.

Enforcing the contract's provisions, legally termed "specific performance," he said, must be in the best interests of the child.

He methodically compared the home-life of the Whiteheads and Sterns, concluding that while the Whitehead marriage had been "plagued with separations, domestic violence and severe financial difficulties," the Sterns "have a private, quiet and unremarkable life which augers well for a stable household environment."

He harshly criticized Whitehead as impulsive, manipulative, and exploitive. "She is also, for the most part, untruthful, choosing only to remember what may enhance her position, or altering the facts about which she is testifying or intentionally not remembering."

With a note of disdain in his voice, he continued: "She is a woman without empathy. She expresses none for her husband's problems with alcohol, and her infusion of her other children into this process exposing them rather than protecting them from the searing scrutiny of the media mitigate against her claim for custody.... She would not be a good custodian to Baby M."

Whitehead has brought her 11-year-old daughter to the courthouse and requested that she be allowed to testify on her mother's behalf. Sorkow denied the motion.

As the Sterns clutched each other's hands in a breathless but crowded courtroom, Sorkow said, "This court therefore will specifically enforce the surrogate parenting agreement to compel delivery of the child to the father and to terminate the mother's parental rights."

The Sterns sat motionless, though Mrs. Stern's lips trembled as she struggled to control tears.

CORRALES—

She added that her efforts were integral to an increase in funding from a proposed $4,000 to $40,000 for a Black Advisory Council-sponsored tutoring program for prospective college students.

Ms. Corrales said she convinced Midland Independent School District Superintendent Joseph Baressi, Midland College President Jesse Parish, and Casa de Amigos Director Leal Cortes-Pitts to write letters to the council supporting the increase.

She said Jackson's letter was inaccurate in claiming that a more than $161,000 revolving loan fund would be administered by the Midland Hispanic Chamber of Commerce.

City Council approved the Community Development Block Grant appropriation for administration through the East Side Community Development Task Force, an organization that Ms. Corrales said is separate from the Hispanic chamber.

She added that the Hispanic chamber received a $25,000 council appropriation, not the $100,000 that Jackson claimed in his letter.

"On the subject of partisanship, Mr. Jackson has conveniently omitted the facts," she said. "He did not say that a majority of the recommended and approved board and commission members (presented by Ms. Corrales) have been black."

The councilmember's statement also mentioned her efforts in helping establish a police task force for increased protection of residents on the east and south sides.

"In conclusion, I want it known that east and south side residents are not divided and will not be because of attacks ... on my integrity," she said.

"If Mr. Jackson ... wanted to tell the truth, he would admit that it is he more than anyone else who is attempting to advance the cause of his candidate by trying to belittle me," she said.

Jackson in his letter endorsed District 2 candidate Woodrow Bailey in Saturday's election.

Contacted this morning, Jackson said, "I really don't want to respond to the accusations (contained in Ms. Corrales' news release).

"I only presented the facts to the people."

Ms. Corrales' statement was scheduled for delivery at Midland Memorial Hospital, where she is recovering from injuries to her back and knees caused by an accidental fall, she said.

VOTE

According to city planning department figures, 27.5 percent of the city's FY 1987, $900,000 CD grant went toward paving. In FY 1986, 34.2 percent of a little more than $1 million in CD funds were devoted to paving.

Bailey also charged Ms. Corrales with "a lack of communication with constituents in District 2."

"We feel that the single-member district has not done everything that it could have done," he said, a concern echoed by Ms. Harris.

"One of the problems facing Midland is failure to recognize and admit to every day problems of minorities," she said in a prepared statement for the League of Women Voters.

"District 2 is unique in that it has three distinct cultures and communities — black, Anglo and Mexican-American," she said.

Ms. Harris proposed organization of a Progressive Minority Commission to consist of members from all three groups and serve as liaisons to the community at large.

"Hopefully this will bring about more cohesiveness within the district, which will indirectly improve Midland," she said.

Both Bailey and Ms. Corrales stated a concern for the city's financial shape.

Bailey saw economic diversification as the key to growth, and he articulated a need to "utilize resources that are already in the community."

As an example of those untapped resources, he estimated that Midland has about 2,000 trained textile workers, owing to the closing of a Levi Strauss plant.

He proposed identifying a textile manufacturer looking to expand and offering the company a vacant building for a plant. "I think it could be a very attractive program to put these people back to work," he said.

Ms. Corrales proposed adding a position to the city payroll whose occupant would work specifically in the area of business recruitment. "An idea that we need to seriously consider is to have one person totally dedicated to promoting Midland," she said.

HIGHWAY

There was no suspense in the House, where lapel buttons bearing the word "Override" sprouted on the jackets of lawmakers, and where normally loyal Republican leaders joined solid Democratic ranks in a 350-73 override vote.

Reagan said he was surprised the House voted to override. An administration-backed alternate version of the bill "gives a great many of them — a majority of the states — actually more highway funds than the bill I vetoed," Reagan said following a state dinner Tuesday night for French Prime Minister Jacques Chirac.

The vetoed bill calls for more than 100 individual highway "demonstration projects" tailor-made for individual members of Congress, and permits the states to raise the speed limit to 65 mph on most stretches of interstate highways.

The combination proved irresistible to the vast majority of House members.

"You can bet your spring petunias this Congress will override the veto," said freshman Rep. Arthur Ravenel Jr., R-S.C. "President Reagan, he ain't going to be running in 1988, but I am."

Democrats disputed Reagan's contention that the measure was a budget buster and said it would generate more revenue for the highway program from the gasoline tax than it would allocate in spending.

They also charged that Reagan was placing his own political interests above the need for a highway bill and said failure to enact a bill would cost 800,000 construction jobs.

"Due to the political posturing of this administration, an entire construction season is jeopardized," said Rep. Steny Hoyer, D-Md. "The president's veto is confrontation for confrontation's sake."

In all, 248 House Democrats and 102 Republicans — including GOP leader Robert Michel of Illinois and Minority Whip Trent Lott, R-Miss. — cast their votes to override the veto. Democratic Rep. Norman Sisisky of Virginia and 72 Republicans voted to sustain Reagan.

1787 Constitution Daybook

Associated Press

Sunday, April 1, 1787
PHILADELPHIA TODAY

John Nicholson was reimbursed 2 shillings and 6 pence for the liquor paid to the men who rolled the walks of the State House Yard.

"Poor Will's Almanac" reminded the gardener that it was time to prune vines, gooseberries, currants, and raspberries. Now was the time to dress your strawberry bed with a compost of well-rotted manure, decayed wood, and fresh earth.

CONFEDERATION TODAY

William Samuel Johnson, Connecticut congressman, reported it was a fine day in New York. He attended services at St. Paul's Church.

Congressman James Madison Jr. wrote his father, James Madison:

"Congress have remained very thin ever since my arrival, and have done but little business of importance. The general attention is now directed towards the approaching Convention. All the States have appointed deputies to it, except Connecticut, Maryland, and Rho. Island.

"The first it is not doubted will appoint, and the second has already resolved on the expediency of the measure. Rho. Island alone has refused her concurrence. A majority of more than twenty in the Legislature of that State has refused to follow the general example. Being Conscious of the wickedness of the measures they are pursuing they are afraid of everything that may become a controul on them."

Nathaniel Gorham of Charlestown, Mass., wrote Henry Knox, the secretary of war in New York: "I think the attendance of Genl. Washington at the Convention will add weight to their proceedings."

DELEGATES TODAY

George Washington wrote John Francis Mercer, future delegate from Maryland:

"For particular reasons and purposes, whatever Money you may incline to pay me consequent of your promises would come very opportunely before the 25th of this month. To this period, sufficient time is allowed to obtain the Certificates you have at Richmond, after which I shall hold myself discharged from any obligation to receive them.

"The detention has already deprived me of every advantage I could have made of them in the payment of Taxes whilst I am sustaining the loss by their depreciation in the hands of others."

Farmer Washington wrote to Richard Sprigg of Annapolis, Md.:

"It is, I believe, beyond a doubt that your Jenny is with foal by my Spaniard. As I have two imported female Asses (very fine) which will be put to my Jacks this season, and from which I may expect the pure breed, you are verywelcome to the produce of your own,and the sooner you send for her the better, and less risk will be run in removing her. At present she is in very fine order having been well fed and attended through the winter."

LOOKING BACK
George Washington — Mule Breeder

George Washington's interests included, among other things, mule breeding. In his writings, over 100 letters deal with mules. Washington desired to breed the finest mules possible, and sought to find the best animals in Spain.

After two broken promises by Spanish gentlemen for help in obtaining a Spanish jack, Washington wrote to Robert T. Hove to ask his help in purchasing a Spanish mule. Washington, though, didn't want just any animal. It had to stand 15 hands high, be well formed, and had to have an ability for getting colts.

In June 1785, to Washington's surprise, the king of Spain had promised him two jacks. He sent his agent, John Fairfax to Boston to pick up the animal. Washington instructed Fairfax to place the jacks separately if more than one were delivered, lest they get kicked or hurt themselves. If they needed to be clothed, he should provide blankets. When Fairfax arrived in Boston, he immediately had to write to Washington and relay the number of mules, their condition and when he would return to Mount Vernon.

On Nov. 9, he wrote to his friend Lafayette that one jack had arrived at Boston. The animal, however, proved to be somewhat of a disappointment. In an April letter the following year, Washington wrote that Royal Gift, as he was called, was lacking in his duty. He added, "At present he seems too full of Royalty to have anything to do with a plebian race."

Layfayette, meanwhile, had written and had offered new hopes for the animal. Washington acknowledged and commented that the jack "Cannot be less moved by female allurements than he is; or when prompted, can proceed with more deliberation and majestic solemnity to the work of procreation."

On June 5, there was better news. Washington reported that Royal Gift had favored a neighbor's mare with a cover.

Report reveals arms deal with South Africa

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State George P. Shultz is sending to Congress a potentially explosive report of how Israel and a number of NATO countries are arming South Africa in defiance of an international embargo.

Portions of the report will be made public later, although classified versions were going to the Senate and House Intelligence Committees today along with the less detailed report bound for the congressional foreign affairs panels.

Two weeks ago, the Israeli Cabinet ruled out new arms sales to South Africa, but the political impact of its continued relationship could be severe. The Jonathan Jay Pollard spy case already has damaged Israel's image.

Technically, the findings by the State Department's Intelligence and Research bureau could lead to the cancellation of the $1.8 billion in annual U.S. military aid to Israel.

Since the NATO countries are not recipients of American assistance, disclosure of their dealings with South Africa is apt to be only embarrassing, at most.

Last year's U.S. anti-apartheid law, which was enacted by Congress over President Reagan's veto, provides for the compilation of a report on countries defying the 1977 world embargo on exporting arms to South Africa "with a view to terminating military assistance to those countries."

But no one expects Israel, the largest U.S. aid recipient, to be cut off. The other countries, meanwhile, do not run any risk. They do not receive American help and unlike Israel, whose munitions industry is government-owned, provide weapons and technology to Pretoria through private companies.

It was understood four major U.S. allies — France, Britain, West Germany and Italy — would be named, along with Switzerland.

A U.S. official said the State Department received numerous allegations that other countries, including some in Eastern Europe and Asia, also helped South Africa get around the embargo, which was first imposed as a voluntary measure by the U.N. Security Council in 1963.

But the official, who spoke only on condition of anonymity, said they were not listed because analysts in the Intelligence and Research bureau did not have evidence to substantiate the allegations.

NATION IN BRIEF

Airlines worldwide to check DC-10s for cracks

LONG BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Douglas Aircraft Co. has advised airlines worldwide to check their DC-10 jumbo jets for cracks similar to those found in the tails of three of the planes.

The warning applies to DC-10s that have spent more than 40,000 hours in the air or made more than 10,000 landings, Elayne Bendel of Douglas, a division of St. Louis-based McDonnell Douglas Corp., said Tuesday.

A total of 199 DC-10s in use by 47 carriers — less than half of the company's DC-10s in service — fall into that category, Ms. Bendel said.

"It is a concern to us that these cracks be found and repaired while they are small," Ms. Bendel said.

The airlines were told to complete their inspections within five days.

Lebanese to miss U.S. trial

WASHINGTON (NYT) — The United States has learned that West Germany may release a Lebanese accused of terrorism rather than extradite him to the United States for trial, according to a Justice Department official with knowledge of the case.

The official said the United States had heard about a proposal to try the suspect, Mohammed Ali Hamadei, in West Germany and then expel him, apparently allowing him to return to Lebanon. The proposal was first reported by NBC News.

Hamadei is under indictment in the United States in the 1985 hijacking of a Trans World Airlines jet to Beirut in which a Navy diver was killed.

The United States has sought the extradition of Hamadei, but the West German Government has been reluctant to turn him over for fear that extradition might cost the lives of two West German businessmen held in Beirut.

No sabotage proof found

BOSTON (AP) — Investigators found no evidence of sabotage or mechanical malfunction in the fatal crash of a helicopter that was to have carried the entourage of Jordan's King Hussein.

Both possibilities were mentioned after the twin-engine craft crashed June 6 in Sutton, killing four Sikorsky Aircraft employees en route from Bedford to Stratford, Conn.

"We have not detected any mechanical malfunction" or sabotage, Dennis Jones, who completed the investigation for the National Transportation Safety Board, said Tuesday.

He declined to say what he thought caused the accident, saying that would be up to the board to determine after studying his report, which will be submitted next month.

The helicopter was one of four scheduled to carry Hussein and his entourage. The king, however, decided to drive to his daughter's graduation at a Connecticut prep school because heavy rain was forecast.

Soviet report on AIDS 'ridiculous'

FREDERICK, Md. (AP) — A Soviet report claiming the deadly AIDS virus is man-made and leaked from an Army lab at Fort Detrick, Md., is "absolutely ridiculous," according to a base spokesman.

But he said the AIDS virus is a subject of research at the base.

"No virus has ever escaped into the atmosphere," said spokesman Norman Covert. "We've never had an incident at Fort Detrick where a dangerous organism has gotten into the air from any laboratory."

The Soviet news agency Tass said Monday the article in Novosti Military Bulletin did not directly charge the United states with creating AIDS but said the virus was of "artificial origin." It said it leaked from the Army lab despite a system developed in 1977 to deal with dangerous pathogens.

Covert said the Army only began experiments on the AIDS virus this year at Fort Detrick, assisting the Walter Reed Army Institute of Research.

"Less than a thimbleful" of the AIDS virus is at the Army's Medical Research Institute of Infectious Diseases at the Frederick base, Covert said Monday.

Fort Detrick is a natural target for such stories because it once conducted secret biological warfare experiments, he noted.

Japan's 'dumping' risks trade war

What the world doesn't need is a trade war. It doesn't need protectionism, trade barriers and all the other devices that countries use to keep out foreign products and protect their domestic industries.

But having said that, we reluctantly agree with the Reagan administration's conclusion that this country may be forced to impose limited trade sanctions on Japan. In August, Japan promised the United States that its manufacturers would stop "dumping" huge quantities of cheap computer chips on the American market. Now, U.S. officials suspect the Japanese broke that accord, and they feel they must do something to retaliate.

If Japan is, in fact, dumping computer chips — selling them in the United States at prices below production costs — that policy has serious implications for our own semiconductor industry. Computer chips are the vital circuits of all types of electronic equipment, from pocket calculators to rocket ships.

For national security reasons, it's important to maintain a domestic supply of computer chips. Yet, our own companies could be crippled or destroyed if the unfair trade practices of foreign producers go unchecked.

One caveat on imposing trade sanctions: The Reagan administration should have solid evidence that Japan indeed cheated on its agreement with the United States.

Some analysts argue the American semiconductor industry just can't compete with the foreigners — and must lower its production costs to keep these rivals at bay. If that's the case, then it won't do much good to try to punish Japan by slapping higher import tariffs on their electronic products. What's to keep South Korea, or some other country, from then flooding the market with computer chips? Should the U.S. impose sanctions on them?

That would be a bad idea. Wholesale sanctions invite retaliation from other countries — and risk the collapse of the global economy. Free trade is the best course.

But free trade also should be fair trade. If U.S. officials impose sanctions against Japan, they should make it clear they resulted because Japan welched on its agreement. It should not be seen as a panicky remedy to a worsening U.S. trade deficit.

The sanctions ought to be imposed before Japanese Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone visits Washington, D.C., in May. Perhaps then he will get the message that the United States expects his government to deal in good faith.

Some Japanese officials say they're considering an appeal of any U.S. sanctions to the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade, which regulates world commerce and settles trade disputes. The United States must not be intimidated by that possibility.

We hope U.S. pressure convinces Japan that voluntary restraint is better than a destructive trade war.

LETTERS

Look at motivation

Charles Jackson's letter in last Sunday's paper castigates Mrs. Oralia Corrales, current city councilman. I will assume his inveighing about her is politically motivated since his bottom line is an endorsement of one of her opponents.

Jackson says it is a great injustice for Mrs. Corrales to make false accusations stating that her opponents accuse her of favoritism to Hispanics. Ludicrously, he proceeds to accuse her of that very thing. On the other hand, her influence in appointments to various boards and commissions speaks for itself. It appears to me more blacks than Hispanics or Anglos were appointed at her recommendation.

Jackson states CDBG funds were placed in a revolving loan plan for the Hispanic Chamber of Commerce. In fact, a nonprofit and independent corporation, the Midland Economic Development Co., Inc., has been created for that program. Jackson also states that the Hispanic Chamber received a grant of $100,000. Actually, it was only $25,000.

In working with Mrs. Corrales on the City Council, she very conscientiously and ably represented ALL the residents in District 2. At her invitation I attended a meeting of southside residents which I had understood was instigated by her and James Bradford. It turned out to be what was credited as the initiation of the Martin Luther King Park, which formally opened recently. I know Mrs. Corrales continued to work on this project until it became a reality. It is a rare occasion when successful works are accomplished because of one person of even one group working alone. Things get done because people work together in teamwork and a harmonious desire to do what is right. Mrs. Corrales is a team player and District 2 reaps the benefits.

Jackson is correct in saying the tutoring program is an accomplishment of the Black Advisory Council. What he did not tell was that the funding for this program came to the City Council with $4,000 the amount recommended by the Planning & Zoning Commission. Through the efforts of Mrs. Corrales, the council was persuaded to raise the amount to $40,000!

I am sure Mrs. Corrales would be the first to admit she did not accomplish all she had hoped in her first term. She is only one vote out of seven and we all are left with unfinished agendas. Mrs. Corrales has had success because of her willingness to work, listen and learn. Her experience will bode well for even more effective representation in her next term.

Corrales draws support

I would like to speak out on behalf of Mrs. Corrales. Mrs. Oralia Corrales has listened to me and I live in District 2. Some of the things that Mrs. Corrales has done to benefit the residents of District 2 include:

1. A workshop on how to bid on Midland city contracts. She got the city purchasing agent to come out to Casa de Amigos and explain how to bid for Midland city contracts.

2. Last July there was a major cleanup effort conducted in District 2. One Saturday we had over 100 volunteers and removed over 101 tons of garbage from our area. Volunteers mowed over 15 weedy lots located on the south and east sides. Mrs. Corrales promoted and took part in this effort. She personally racked and cleaned lots right alongside of us.

3. A large number of dilapidated buildings have recently been removed by the city. In fact, the person who got the contract lives in District 2, and had attended the bidding contract workshops. That's pretty direct results in you ask me.

4. I believe Mrs. Corrales listens to the community. I know she was instrumental in setting up the Neighborhood Watch meeting with Sgt. Camarillo of the Crime Prevention Unit. She truly cares about the welfare of her district.

More importantly, many of her meetings are not just to talk but to plan for future projects such as the upgrading of Lamesa Road.

I am voting for Mrs. Corrales, and I urge others to do the same for the good of our community.

Syrian complicity proven in murder

WASHINGTON — Syrian complicity in the kidnapping, detention and eventual murder of American hostage Peter Kilburn was established beyond doubt by intercepted telephone conversations, we have learned.

Jack Anderson

The phone interceptions by the National Security Agency were part of a bizarre — and almost successful — plan by the U.S. government to ransom Kilburn with millions of dollars in greenbacks that would self-destruct within three to five days after delivery to the kidnappers. The ransom deal fell apart with the U.S. air strike on Libya on April 14, 1986. Kilburn's body was found three days later on the outskirts of Beirut.

Kilburn, 60, was a pro-Arab librarian at the American University in Beirut when he was abducted on Dec. 3, 1984. We reported part of the Kilburn tragedy last November, writing: "The frustration and ultimate futility of trying to ransom American hostages with arms or money was tragically demonstrated last spring (when Kilburn's captors grew) tired of waiting for the $3 million the Reagan administration was (raising)."

Now we have learned the whole incredible story:

In 1985, a Canadian of Armenian background contacted the FBI and offered to act as intermediary with Kilburn's kidnappers, a Lebanese criminal gang. The Canadian established his good faith by producing a Kilburn identity card.

The FBI took charge of the negotiations, assisted by the CIA, the Pentagon and Lt. Col. Oliver North of the National Security Council staff. The first step was to monitor all of the Canadian's international telephone calls, when he was in Europe as well as in Canada. Thus at every stage the Americans knew the other side's negotiating tactics.

The Syrian government's involvement quickly became clear. Most of the Canadian's phone calls were to people in Damascus, at least one of whom was a Syrian government official.

By late 1985 the initial American ransom offer had been tendered: $500,000. According to one source, the Canadian intermediary was almost laughing scornfully as he relayed the offer to Damascus, and assured his cohorts that the Americans could be "held up" for a lot more. At this point, the FBI decided it would go after the Canadian for criminal prosecution — once Kilburn was safely home.

The price finally agreed on in March 1986 was more than $3 million. To get around the U.S. policy of not paying ransom for kidnapped Americans, the decision was made to use money that would disintegrate in a matter of days.

It was vital, of course, that the money not deteriorate too rapidly, in case there was a slight delay between payment and Kilburn's release. A slow-acting solution was developed that would give three days' grace. The bills, in small denominations, would be taken from stockpiles of old money scheduled for burning.

The final technical problem was how to treat such a huge quantity of small bills all at once. One proposal was to fill a swimming pool with the self-destruct solution and dump the money in.

By late March the negotiations were so close to fruition that Kilburn's relatives were advised of his imminent release. At least one U.S. warship was dispatched to stand by off the Lebanese coast to pick the hostage up.

But the deal began to unravel and was shattered irrevocably by the U.S. raid on Libya. Kilburn and two British hostages were shot in reprisal. The Canadian escaped.

North, distraught at the tragic outcome, wrote a note to former National Security Adviser Robert McFarlane on April 21: "The Kilburn tragedy has us very concerned because there appears to be some possibility of Syrian complicity in Kilburn's death and the same could happen to our other hostages if the Syrians are able to put their hands on them."

MINI-EDITORIAL: There's no way the television evangelists can give God a black eye, of course, but it certainly won't be for lack of trying. If everything they've been saying about each other is true, a paperback account couldn't be sold at the local convenience store without drawing a picket line of concerned parents. Will things reach the point where TV gospel hours will have to be preceded with a warning to put the kiddies to bed? And in light of the recent Alabama court decision, we can't help wondering how long it will be before People for the American Way begins accusing its fundamentalist adversaries of practicing "sexular humanism."

WILLIAM SAFIRE

Senator's slip added salt to spying 'wound'

WASHINGTON — Sen. David Durenberger of Minnesota, until recently the Republican chairman of the Senate Intelligence Committee, called to set up a breakfast date last week.

William Safire

Fine with me; I had heard he was a nice guy, maybe a little flaky, and assumed he wanted to explain his recent gaffe: he had told a group of Jewish leaders in Palm Beach that "we changed the rules in the early 80s," according to someone present who took notes, "We recruited an Israeli to spy on Israel and he got caught ... I can't justify Pollard, but I can understand it."

Despite the disclaimer, that was intended to reassure Jews that "everybody did it," and that Israel was justified in retaliating by hiring an American to betray his country. By offering comfort to the higher-ups in Israel who are trying to conceal their wrongdoing, Durenberger strains the ties between Israelis and Americans.

My mind was fixed on this issue just as my mouth was fixed for an elegant breakfast at Washington's Grand Hotel. But at the last minute, Durenberger's office called to cancel; no flaky croissants and no flaky senator. Nor was he available to talk on the telephone. An aide made clear that I was the last person in Washington he wanted to talk to about the Pollard affair.

Why the sudden clam-up? A few calls by reporter Martin Tolchin of The New York Times unearthed the story: acting on complaints from other senators and Administration officials, the Senate Ethics Committee had begun an investigation of Durenberger's apparent breach of security.

"This is censure stuff," one angry senator told me. Only six senators in our history have been censured by the Senate, the last being Joseph McCarthy in 1954, although the verb chosen in that case was "condemned."

This case is unlikely to go that far, but what infuriates some senators and disturbs many others is that the Durenberger leak justifies the presidential "findings" that secretly deny oversight to the Senate. This is catnip to the tell-'em-nothin' crowd in the White House. Until now, Senate Intelligence has been relatively leakproof; here is a former chairman tossing off a state secret at a fundraiser.

Wait: what if the Durenberger story is a figment of his imagination, a way of getting even with his old tormentor, William Casey? Both defense ministers of the U.S. and Israel have flatly denied that the CIA was caught trying to penetrate the Israeli government, and there is always the chance those denials are true; if so, how can the senator's spreading of a false story for reassurance and-or vengeance purposes be a breach of security? If it ain't true, no secret leaked.

Therein lies the Senate's bind. If Durenberger's charge of a CIA rule change about spying on allies is true, a vote to discipline him would confirm it and spill the secret; if it is not true, an ethics committee decision not to bring charges would allow intelligence committee members unfairly to clobber the executive branch with impunity.

Unbind yourselves, senators; the only way out is full disclosure, letting the chips fall on the CIA or on Durenberger's re-election chances in 1988.

This investigation requires an intelligence committee study, with administration cooperation, of our policy on spying on allies: Is there no line between the vacuum-cleaner collection of information from our Big Ear and the payment of covert agents in friendly capitals? The Golden Rule of Spookery — do it to your allies before your allies do it to you — is not necessarily the best national policy.

Thus has the Pollard case struck again, this time endangering the career of a U.S. senator who was only trying to "understand" the Israeli motivation. The point should not be lost on Jerusalem: this wound is festering, not healing.

Col. Aviem Sella, the Pollard Israeli handler, Sunday gave up the prestigious assignment he was awarded just before the spies were sentenced. In a couple of weeks, the non-judicial Israeli commission that has promised total secrecy to witnesses will probably recommend the retirement from state-owned industry of the spymaster Rafi Eitan, with some stern finger-wagging at the collective leadership. That would be too little and too late, an attempt to appease Americans rather than cure the illness that infects the cover-up coalition.

Message to Israel from a friend who eats breakfast alone: forget about coming clean as a favor to American Jews or to ensure continued U.S. aid. Your central purpose in making wrongdoers accountable is to preserve the soul of your democracy.

Where are the leaders with the courage and patriotism to say, "I knew about the operation, I tacitly authorized it, I meant well, I was mistaken, I resign"? Failing that, where is the new Isaiah now that Israel needs him?

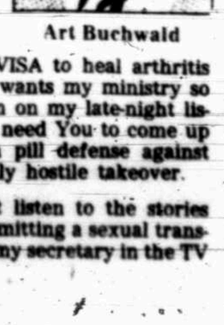
ART BUCHWALD

A little static in Church of the Tender Wallet

Lord, listen to me. This is the Rev. Shorty Beans, broadcasting on Channel 83, from the 'Electronic Church of the Tender Wallet' in Boosterville, Va. This is not a test. I'm up to my cowboy boots in trouble."



Art Buchwald

"Somebody's trying to take my flock. I suspect it's that garden snake Rev. Jimmy Haggard, the one who takes MasterCard and VISA to heal arthritis sufferers. He wants my ministry so he can cash in on my late-night listeners. God, I need You to come up with a poison pill defense against this diabolically hostile takeover.

"Lord, don't listen to the stories about me committing a sexual transgression with my secretary in the TV control room. This is just the Devil's blackmail put out by Haggard to hurt my Nielsen ratings. You know and I know there is less hanky-panky in the 'Church of the Tender Wallet' than any TV pulpit in the land.

"Haggard is putting out the word that I've sinned in church business administration. He can go to hell. Last year we grossed $100 million, of which You got two. Sales of my wife Barbie's gospel album have soared through the roof. The condos on the Red Sea Golf Course are finished, the Cain and Abel amusement park is SRO, and we're adding another wing to the 25-story Sodom and Gomorrah Motel.

"Haggard can't come close to our numbers. Ask him how many Sea of Galilee hot tubs he sold last month. He almost put his church into bankruptcy.

"Lord, we're willing to make any changes You want to cut expenses. You tell us how many on-camera faith healers to fire and we'll do it. Barbie is starting to save money already. She's dumped the entire symphony orchestra that always accompanies her spiritual version of 'If I Were a Rich Man.' And we've cut back on the fireworks display we set off every time a pledge of $5,000 lights up the telethon board.

"And get this — I decided to take a salary cut. I intend to say today on the air that I will accept no more pay from the 'Church of the Tender Wallet' than Lee Iacocca takes out of Chrysler.

"Haggard has no right to badmouth me, Lord. He's Satan's hatchet man. If you allow him to take over our TV show the ratings will plummet to zero. He'll drive every viewer from our channel to 'Miami Vice.'

"Lord, I've got a great ploy to stop the takeover. I'm going to announce that if the listeners don't give me $8 million to prevent Haggard from grabbing my church, You are going to take me home. It's going to be 'bye-bye' Rev. Shorty because I'm going to that big cathode tube cathedral in the sky.

"If that fails I will go for broke. I shall say that if my congregation doesn't raise the money I'm going to do something desperate. I'm going to run for President of the United States.

"I know what You're saying, Lord. Where do I come off running for President? It's very simple. I have all the qualifications any candidate has this year, not to mention my own TV network. I'm going to tell my flock a vote for me is a vote for You and — if you don't mind, Lord — I'm going to reveal that I have your endorsement. And if this doesn't do the trick I will bring up my war record.

"You don't have to make any personal appearances for me, Lord. By the same token You don't have to make a big deal of it if You are not going to be there.

"I think I've covered everything. We're only three minutes to air time. What I'm asking from You, Lord, is to help me stop the Devil's takeover of my ministry. If this means a Holy War, thy will be done. Trust me, Lord. I will always keep one eye on You and the other on the bottom line."

Pope reminds Uruguayans of Catholic roots

MONTEVIDEO, Uruguay (AP) — Pope John Paul II today reminded Uruguayans of their secular country's Roman Catholic roots and said divorce offers "only apparent solutions."

The pontiff, winding up a 19-hour visit to this small South American country, spoke at a Mass attended by 60,000 people in the Plaza Tres Cruces. Uruguay, considered the most secular Latin American nation after Cuba, is the first stop of his three-nation tour of southern South America.

On his way to Uruguay from Rome Tuesday, the pontiff told reporters on his plane he hopes to bring a new spirit of human rights to military-ruled Chile during his six-day visit there beginning this afternoon. Even so, he cautioned that he is "not the evangelizer of democracy."

John Paul met privately this morning with Uruguayan President Julio Sanguinetti, an agnostic, and the two were serenaded in the Government Palace by several hundred hymn-singing schoolgirls.

During the Mass, the pope acknowledged Uruguay's secularism — only 4 percent of the 3 million Uruguayans are regular churchgoers — but said: "Dear Uruguayans, your country was born Catholic."

Most Uruguayans are of southern European descent and nominally Roman Catholic. But the country's founders were liberals who officially separated church and state. Progressive legislation, including the legalization of divorce in the early 1900s, contributed to Uruguay's reputation as "the Switzerland of South America."

John Paul called on those experiencing marital difficulties to not let themselves "be disoriented by the easy expedience of divorce, which offers only apparent solutions."

After visiting Chile, the pope goes to Argentina, which is embroiled in a dispute over legislation to legalize divorce. Congress two weeks ago postponed debate on the measure until after the pontiff leaves April 13 to return to Rome.

U.S.S.R. to send delegation to Israel

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — The Soviet Union has agreed to send a consular delegation to Israel in the first diplomatic exchange of its kind in almost 20 years, a Foreign Ministry official said today.

Israel radio said the delegation was expected to arrive within two weeks, and that an Israeli delegation later would visit the Soviet Union.

Avraham Tamir, director general of the Foreign Ministry, told Israel army radio that "the delegation is expected" and an Israeli delegation will "certainly" make a trip to the Soviet Union. He would not say when either visit would take place.

The Soviet visit was agreed upon in a meeting in Washington last week between Israel's ambassador to the United States, Meir Rosenne, and Soviet charge d'affaires Igor Sokolov, Israel radio said.

The radio's Washington correspondent quoted unidentified officials in Washington as saying the Soviets told them they did not intend to renew diplomatic ties with Israel in the near future.

"These contacts have been a continuous process, and I hope that they will result in the renewal of relations," Rosenne told Israel radio. "That is the interest of the Soviet Union and without a doubt the interest of Israel."

The Soviet Union broke diplomatic ties with Israel after the 1967 Mideast war to protest the Israeli occupation of Arab lands.

Foreign Minister Shimon Peres said in a television interview Tuesday he expected "a slight thaw" in Soviet-Israeli relations soon.

"We will be seeing it in the next few days. Not yet anything decisive or what we would like, but a small change," Peres said without elaborating.

Israeli and Soviet representatives have had many private meetings over the years, but the first official talks between the two countries took place last August when low-level delegations met in Helsinki.

The meeting, hailed at first as signaling a dramatic change in Soviet-Israeli relations, collapsed when Israel insisted on discussing the issue of Soviet Jewry.

A month after the Helsinki meeting, Peres, then prime minister, met with Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze at U.N. headquarters in New York in the highest-level meeting between the two countries in 19 years. Peres said the two agreed to work to improve ties.

WORLD in brief

Syria arrests six people in connection with attacks

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Three bombs exploded Tuesday in Moslem west Beirut and Syria's military intelligenee chief in Lebanon said his troops have arrested six people in connection with the recent series of bombing attacks.

"We want to assure citizens that we have arrested two groups of six men in all that were behind the bombing spree. We shall arrest others involved," said Brig. Gen. Ghazi Kenaan.

Police said there were no casualties in Tuesday's bombings that shattered windows in nearby buildings.

Two bombs went off within a minute in two garbage dumps beside the Mazraa commercial thoroughfare and in the Barbir residential district.

A third bomb went off about 20 minutes later at 12:35 p.m. below a bridge in the Barbir district, police said.

The explosions brought to 25 the number of bombings since 7,500 Syrian soldiers entered the west Beirut on Feb. 22 in an effort to end a week of fighting between rival Moslem militiamen. The Syrians did not enter predominantly Christian east Beirut.

Firms urged to hike imports

TOKYO (AP) — Japan plans to meet with major companies to urge them to boost their imports but will not make concessions in the area of semiconductors despite imminent U.S. sanctions, a high government official said.

Noburo Hatakeyama, director general of the International Trade Administration Bureau, also warned Tuesday that anti-American sentiment will rise in Japan if the United States goes ahead with the planned penalty duties on up to $300 million worth of Japanese electronic goods.

Japanese citizens would regard the United States as "emotional and illogical," he said, and repeated warnings from other Japanese officials that Japan would consider retaliation.

Hatakeyema said Japan is striving to cut its huge trade surplus, but said it is already abiding by an accord with the United States to compete fairly in the worldwide semiconductor market.

Cooking oil case continues

MADRID, Spain (AP) — The court hearing the poison cooking oil case was asked today to order a face-to-face confrontation between the two principal defendants to clear up discrepancies in testimony.

Thirty-eight people are on trial on a variety of charges connected with the 1981 deaths of 584 people from toxic cooking oil.

Presiding Judge Jose Antonio Jimenez-Alfaro said the court will rule on the request, by a lawyer representing private plaintiffs, after testimony is completed by one of the principal defendants, Ramon Ferrero.

The lawyer, Jose Maria Mohedano, told the court such a confrontation was necessary to clear up discrepancies in the testimony by Ferrero, who bought 110 tons of the oil from importer Juan Miguel Bengoechea and bottled it and distributed it to vendors for door-to-door sale.

Bengoechea, the other principal defendant in the case, imported 1,158 tons of rapeseed oil from France in 1980 and 1981. The oil was marked specifically for industrial purposes, and was adulterated with toxic red aniline dye to indicate this.

The wholesalers are charged with sending it to refineries where it was heated to remove the dye. It is alleged the process resulted in a chemical reaction that produced a similarly toxic product.

480 enter white elections

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — A record 480 candidates, including more than 200 from far-right parties, were nominated Tuesday for the whites-only parliamentary elections on May 6.

South Africa's largest daily newspaper, The Star of Johannesburg, said the number of nominations sets the stage for "one of the toughest and dirtiest white elections in South African history."

Most of the candidates had been selected by their parties weeks ago, but Tuesday was the deadline for nominations and the day for officially registering candidacies at courtrooms around the country.

Cooler day anticipated

From Staff and Wire Reports

Tonight, under fair skies, the low will be in the lower 40s. Winds will be out of the southeast at 10-15 mph. Skies will become increasingly cloudy on Thursday.

Tuesday's high of 69 was 28 degrees cooler than the record high set for that date in 1946. Today's low of 36, recorded at 6 a.m., was seven degrees above the record low set in 1936.

STATE

Scattered showers and thunderstorms are expected in Southeast Texas, but most of Texas should have mostly cloudy skies and slightly cooler temperatures Thursday.

Pleasant weather was forecast for all of the state today, but clouds are to be on the increase tonight over North Texas, South Texas and the Panhandle.

Lows tonight will be in the 30s and 40s with some readings in the 50s expected tonight in South Texas.

Highs Thursday will be mostly in the 60s.

Early morning temperatures were mostly in the 30s and 40s, ranging from the 20s in the Davis Mountains of Southwest Texas to the 50s in South Texas. Extremes ranged from 23 at Marfa to 52 at Galveston.

Other early morning temperatures around the state included 35 at Amarillo, 44 at Fort Worth, 43 at Waco and Austin, 41 at San Antonio, 43 at Corpus Christi, 41 at Houston, 48 at San Angelo, 45 at Lubbock, 42 at Midland and 31 at El Paso.

NATION

Cold air combined with clear skies and light winds to push temperatures in the South to record lows today after three Western states had record highs.

A reading of 37 degrees early today at Jacksonville, Fla., broke a record low of 38 set in 1971, while Miami's 51 was 2 degrees lower than a record set in 1950. Nashville had 27 degrees and Atlanta 29 amid widespread freeze warnings.

Snow was scattered across New York, western Pennsylvania and the Great Lakes region into North Dakota.

Rain spread across eastern New England. Much of Connecticut was under flood warnings and a flood watch was in effect in Maine. Gale-force wind warnings were posted for the northern coast of New England

Trimble believes in doing good works

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Bobby Trimble is convinced that "Faith without works is dead."

And much of his faith in God is evidenced by his works in the ongoing Christmas-In-April program which is entering its 15th year in repairing or rebuilding homes of the poor and elderly.

The "big push" this year will be on Saturday, April 25, when hundreds of workers from churches, businesses and civic organizations pick up their carpentry tools and will work on 148 houses in ill repair on Midland's south, east and west sides.

And representatives of those churches, businesses and organizations will be gathering in the Fellowship Hall of Alamo Heights Baptist Church at 1305 N. Midland Drive at 7 p.m. Thursday to select houses which they will repair or, in some cases, rebuild.

Since 1973, more than 1,400 Midland houses have been roofed, reroofed, painted, bolstered, otherwise repaired, cleaned up and cleaned out under the guidance of Trimble. Plumbing as been installed or repaired, hot-water heaters have been replaced, siding has been installed, water, sewer and gas lines have been installed or repaired, and thousands of other tasks have been done without cost to the home-owners who are unable and can ill afford to do the work.

This year, Christmas In April is repairing 225 houses. Of those, 77 already are being "worked on" and have been since last year's projects were completed. New roofs will be put on about 40 of the houses on April 25.

"We're basically finished with those (77)," said Trimble, who is president of Christmas In April. "Most of them had energy needs; we try to take care of energy needs during the year."

Through its fund-raising arm, Christmas In April furnishes the materials and tools needed for the housing projects. And whenever possible, Trimble encourages able members of families whose houses are being repaired to join in the work.

"We'll furnish the materials, and (in cases) you'll do the labor, and I'll show you how," Trimble said.

"If it's a roof, I'll teach them how to put on a roof. Teach them how to put in a window and door, put on lap siding."

"We're trying to help people to help themselves."

Many housing projects are on-going from year to year.

Christmas In April depends on free-will offerings of money and manpower.

"If you don't have volunteers, you don't have a program," Trimble said. "If you don't have money, you don't have a program."

This year, Christmas In April has a $135,000 budget and currently is about $50,000 short.

"We're still getting money in," Trimble said, "but we're spending it."

Trimble, an independent Midland oil scout, said that 90 percent of the funding goes for materials. "Very few organizations can say that." In cases, plumbers and electricians must be hired to do work not within the purview of a gang of volunteers.

"It seems God gave me a talent" for organizing the Christmas In April projects and carrying them out with aid of volunteers, Trimble said. "And I don't think I should waste it. I see the need, and I like it."

Trimble cited scriptural admonishments for carrying out works — specifically in helping the poor.

"What doth it profit, my brethren, though a man say he hath faith, and have not works? Can faith save him? ...Faith, if it hath not works, is dead, being alone."

"If you don't give him (the destitute) some food and some clothing," said Trimble, "how is he going to be warm and peaceful."

Merely wishing a fellow traveler warmth and peace will not provide him with that warmth and peace.

"God demands that you help your brother," Trimble said. "You've got to walk your talk."

Trimble noted that Christmas In April is not one church's project, not one civil organization's project, not one businessman's project.

"It's not one individual's project; it's everybody's project. It's all churches' projects. It's all civic organizations' projects.

Ideally, said Trimble, the Christmas In April work is being done "because you love the Lord" and not because of the gratitude or lack of gratitude of anybody.

"Do it because you love the Lord."

Dealing with stress topic of lecture

By GEORGIA TEMPLE
Staff Writer

Seybert

"We're not born with fears and anxieties; we're taught them," said Nancy Seybert, national program director of the Inner Peace Movement. Ms. Seybert is giving a free public lecture at Odessa's La Quinta Motel at 7:30 p.m. today and at Midland's Rodeway Inn, 3601 W. Wall Ave., at 7:30 p.m. Thursday. Her topics will be "Understanding Your Psychic Experiences" and "Life After Death." Ms. Seybert said both deal with "How to prevent stress and when a person's under it, how to relieve it."

She said there are three basic causes of stress.

"One is that we're really psychic, and we pick up vibrations from people. So a lot of the stress that we feel is really the people around us. We're picking up their tension, even their aches and pains and depression."

She cited as an example being around someone who is yawning.

Another reason, she said, is programming and that people are taught limitations which don't really exist.

"For instance, when we think we can't get our own direction in life, we're receiving inspirations all the time — over a 100 hunches a day that give us that direction on the small things we encounter as well as the big things. The hunches always tell us how we can live our life the easy way, and our intellect will usually lead us into the hard way."

She also cited as an example of programming the feeling of not being good enough to do a job, especially one which may not be directly related to a person's speciality.

"Really, we are good enough," she said. "Anyone can learn to do anything if he tries, but we're taught so strongly in our society that we're educated for one thing, and that's all that we can do, and the majority of people think like that."

This leads to insecurity when a person loses his job because he doesn't realize, "The world's full of opportunity for anybody who really wants to work and be of service. We can all learn to do about anything if we want to," Ms. Seybert said.

The third cause of stress, Ms. Seybert identified, is poor communication.

"There are four types of communication, not one," she said. "Each person communicates primarily in one and not the others."

Mother of alleged child abuse victim indicted

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — The mother of a 2½-year-old alleged child abuse victim has been named in two felony indictments handed down Tuesday by the 244th District Court grand jury.

The county grand jury charged that Guadalupe Dominguez, 22, "on or about Dec. 24, 1986," did "intentionally and knowingly engage in conduct that caused bodily injury to Adrianna Dominguez, a child younger than 15 years old, by slapping her with her hand."

District Judge Joe Connally set bond on the injury to a child charge at $1,500. The judge had set bond March 16 for Mrs. Dominguez and her 28-year-old husband, Genovevo, at $10,000 on misdemeanor charges of failure to report child abuse.

Mrs. Dominguez was also named Tuesday in a second indictment that was sealed because she had not been arraigned. Bond on the charge in this indictment is also $1,500, but is a personal recognizance bond.

Robert Garcia, court-appointed to represent Mrs. Dominguez, said late Tuesday he would arrange for her to surrender today for formal arraignment on the sealed indictment.

The grand jury did not indict Dominguez.

The Dominguezes were arrested Dec. 31, 1986 by Ector County sheriff's deputies in connection with an alleged child abuse case.

Dominguez was initially arraigned and jailed in lieu of bonds totaling $65,000 on charges of aggravated sexual abuse of a child, injury to a child and failure to report child abuse. Mrs. Dominguez was held in jail in lieu of bonds totaling $15,000 on charges of injury to a child and failure to report child abuse.

Assault trial closing arguments postponed

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

Closing arguments in the trial of a 24-year-old Midland man accused of aggravated assault were scheduled to begin this afternoon, after attorneys in the case were granted a postponement, according to court bailiff Ken Ivy.

Before the postponement, the jury was expected to begin deliberations by late this morning in Judge Pat Baskin's 142nd state district court.

Justin Slatton is accused of firing a rifle last Aug. 25 at the Hillcrest Manor retirement center, 700 W. Scharbauer Dr., and injuring a resident, 79-year-old Rosa Nichols. Ms. Nichols was wounded in the arm, and recovered.

Another man charged in the case, 23-year-old Chuck Standley of Midland, pleaded guilty March 9. He received a two-year sentence, with 60 days shock probation a condition of the sentence.

Standley took the stand twice during the trial against Slatton, and Ms. Nichols testified for the state Monday.

Tuesday, defense attorney David Lashford called several witnesses in an attempt to damage the credibility of Standley's testimony in front of the eight-woman, four-man jury.

Several witnesses testified that Standley changed his story about the shooting. At one point, testimony indicated Standley said the shots were fired at a bottle on top of the building; at another time, he said the rifle was aimed at a light in a window of Hillcrest Manor.

Standley's sister, Celinda Beene, who owned the rifle used in the attack, testified that when she left for work at a local restaurant, the defendant and Standley were at her house drinking beer.

She told Midland County District Attorney Al Schorre that the two men were "pretty loaded" when she left.

Later, she said the pair "acted" like they were passed out when police came to the door to question them about the shooting.

Slatton did not testify in the case.

If convicted, he could be sentenced to 10 years in prison and fined $5,000.

Odessa man dies in house fire

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — Fire apparently started by a cigarette dropped between the cushions of a couch claimed the life of a 52-year-old man early today.

Fire Marshal Rick Cates said Lawyer Lee Woods, 312 Wabash, was found in a bedroom of the house. According to Cates, the apparent cause of death was smoke inhalation since only the living room of the small frame house sustained moderate to heavy fire damage. Damage to the remainder of the house was mostly from heat and smoke, he said.

Smoke was discovered coming from the house by Odessa Police Cpl. Bernis Lincoln, who notified the fire department about 3:22 a.m.

Cates said the pattern of smoke and heat indicated a cigarette had apparently been dropped between the cushions on a couch and it smouldered until it erupted in flames.

An autopsy has been ordered.

Rookie backpacker tells true feelings about great outdoors

Ott

Fear and loathing on a backpacking excursion into the lower desert of Big Bend National Park, with special apologies to Hunter S. Thompson:

— 3 a.m. Saturday: Phone rings at my apartment. Someone from the office wants to inform me that the color photo for front page of that day's paper will have to be converted to black and white. I remain silent. "Just wanted you to know," the voice says. "Fine," I say, while glancing at the clock and making a mental note that my alarm will go off in four hours, marking the beginning of my long-awaited journey.

— 8:30 a.m. Saturday: Phone rings again. My guide who will be doing the driving — not to mention the leading once we arrive at the park — can't find my house. Good start, I think to myself. Give him new directions and within 20 minutes we are on the road.

— 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. Saturday: Stare out the window at the lovely West Texas scenery and chain-smoke Marlboros, figuring it will be my last chance to enjoy the filthy habit before entering the great outdoors.

— 2:30 p.m. Saturday: Arrive at park. Get out of car and breathe the fresh air. Stare up at the sun. Tell myself, "I can't believe I'm doing this." Help unload gear from truck. Watch as my guide does all the packing. Wonder briefly if he is going to get tired of doing all the work.

— 3:15 p.m. Saturday: Start the actual hike. The pack on my back weighs approximately 35 pounds. Feels more like a 100. We're to do about three miles today.

— 3:20 p.m. Saturday: Stumble over a rock, stare up at the sun and think, "Damn, it's hot."

— 3:22 p.m. Saturday: Ask my guide, "Are we almost there?" He laughs. I think he thinks I'm kidding.

— 3:30 to 5 p.m. Saturday: Keep on walking. Up and down the hills we go, walking on rocks while trying to avoid the cacti. I would attempt to look around at the wildlife but sweat keeps getting my eyes. "I'd rather be dead," I say to myself. My feet concur.

— 6:30 p.m. Saturday: Arrive at campsite.

— 7:15 p.m. Saturday: Sit on a cliff and stare into space. It really is beautiful. A crispness is in the air. I sip Scotch from a tin cup and let my mind wander. For the first time, I'm truly enjoying myself. A bird soars overhead. "It must be exhilirating to fly," I say to myself. Being alone in the great outdoors does not necessarily make a person deep and insightful.

— 7:35 p.m. Saturday: Guide joins me on the cliff. We sit there silently, each lost in our thoughts. I pass the Scotch to him. He acknowledges it with a nod and says, "See those mountains over there? That's Mexico." For some reason, that impresses me.

— 7:55 p.m. Saturday: Still sitting on the cliff, which will become my favorite lookout point. The guide, who has been fussing with dinner, returns. He tells me we are in a very remote spot. No humans anywhere near us. I say to him, "Tell me, big guy, how many people you figure have sat right here on this rock like we are now, sipping Scotch and looking out on Mexico?" He thought about it for a moment and said, "We're just a tiny speck in the scope of the universe." I think he meant "not very many."

— 8 p.m. Saturday: Eat dinner of noodles and diced ham. Stare at stars for awhile and hit the sack. Snore loudly.

— 7 a.m. Sunday: Wake up. Stage at the sky and think briefly about having breakfast served to me in bed by a scantily clad woman. French toast and bacon comes to mind. Snap back to reality and get my own apple out of the backpack and serve myself breakfast.

— 7:35 a.m. Sunday: Crawl out of sleeping bag. Stretch. Feel like every bone in my body is about to snap in two. Glance at the sun as it begins to creep over the mountain range in the distance. Say to myself, "This sure beats waking up in Midland with all those mindless robots stuck in life's grinding rut." Respond to that observation by saying, "Don't be an idiot."

Bill which Hightower says may save family farm not likely to pass

By PEGGY ROBERSON
Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON — A controversial farm bill touted by Texas Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower as a means of saving the family farm, appears to be going nowhere in this session of Congress.

Hightower was a chief architect of the bill, sponsored by Democratic presidential hopeful Rep. Richard A. Gephardt of Missouri in the House and by Sen. Tom Harkin, D-Iowa, in the Senate. At a day-long Tuesday hearing, the bill was greeted by attitudes ranging from hostile to skeptical.

Hightower, a witness before the House Agriculture subcommittee on wheat, soybeans and feed grains, said the Family Farm Act is the only farm policy option before Congress that would give Texas family farmers a good chance for earning a profit.

But Texas Rep. E. "Kika" de la Garza, D-McAllen, chairman of the House Agriculture Committee, a key sponsor of the current farm law, said he fears the proposed legislation would create more problems than it would solve.

As de la Garza was leaving the hearing room, he got into a confrontation with Minnesota Agriculture Commissioner Jim Nichols, a supporter of the bill, who was sitting at the witness table with Hightower.

"Come back, Mr. Chairman, I want to talk to you about this bill," Nichols said. De la Garza paused at the door. Nichols said the current farm law is a failure in managing farm surpluses and is implemented by "idiots" at the Agriculture Department.

De la Garza shot back that his name is on the current law and said, "I guess that makes me an idiot, too."

Nichols backed off, apologizing to de la Garza.

De la Garza said "people like you" virtually guaranteed the new, 1985 farm law wouldn't work by opposing it from the start. "As long as people like you say it is not working...it won't work. Don't come in here and say it won't work."

One Texas staff member who was present said, "Hightower looked like he wanted to crawl under the table. That's sure not what he came for."

Several witnesses agreed that the controversial legislation could quickly raise farm prices by requiring farmers to make deep cuts in production of crops now being stored at great cost by the federal government.

But William Motes of Economic Perspectives and John Urbanchuk of Wharton Econometric Forecasting Associates predicted the bill could harm U.S. exports and cut into consumers' buying power.

Hightower disputed their analysis, saying the bill would increase the cost of a box of Wheaties by only 2 cents.

The Texas agriculture commissioner said by limiting production of major commodities produced to the known demand, "We can eliminate price-bursting, tax-eating surpluses and allow family farmers to gain new income from sales in the marketplace."

In a statement released from Austin, Hightower described the improved financial situation on three farms under the Family Farm Act.

One of the farmers he described, in Deaf Smith County, on the High Plains of Texas, has 2,000 irrigated acres of corn, sorghum and wheat and 500 head of cattle.

His net worth may be around $350,000, but his debts total at least half that amount. The value of his land has depreciated 30 percent since 1981.

But according to Hightower, who did not give details on his accounting or reasoning, under the Family Farm Act the High Plains farmer with a $140,000 debt would see that debt drop to $19,500. His annual net cash income would increase from $9,400 to $53,000.

And because agicultural businesses account for 92 percent of the business revenues in Deaf Smith County, the income increase on the farm is doubled and quintupled throughout the community, he said.

The legislation has strong and vocal supporters around the country, but despite farmers' general approval for "supply management," most farmers consulted by Rep. Charles Stenholm, D-Stamford, would prefer to stick with the current law rather than "venture off into the unknown."

Budget writers ordered to start over looking for cuts to be made

By STEVE LEVINE
and JIM WARREN
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The House budget-writing process fell to pieces Tuesday as Appropriations Committee Chairman Jim Rudd scrapped two weeks of work and told committee members to sharpen their budget-cutting knives.

"We stopped. There wasn't any need to proceed," Rudd said after the budget staff told him the committee had surpassed — even without higher education, prisons and other major agencies — the bottom-line limit imposed by Gov. Bill Clements. The committee will start all over Monday.

Rudd and House Speaker Gib Lewis said cutting the budget enough to meet Clements' demands looks unlikely. But the committee, Rudd said, has no choice but to write a bare-bones budget and see if the governor "can stand it."

"The governor better put on his pursuasive hat if he's going to pursuade any of those members to vote for (his reduced budget)," said Rudd, D-Brownfield. "I think it's going to be devastating, personally. I think it's going to set government back 10 or 12 years."

Lewis said he's not giving the budget writers any orders and emphasized that it's too early for a showdown with Clements.

"The only guideline they have to follow is their conscience and the evidence that is presented to them by those people who ask for appropriations," the speaker said. "I don't like to challenge anybody. We might have to do that in the final analysis."

But Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby seemed ready for a challenge. "If the question is, 'Is the Legislature going to pass an appropriations bill that requires more taxes than the governor says he wants,' the answer is yes," Hobby said.

Pointing to an earlier procedural vote, Clements maintained that the majority of the Appropriations Committee shares his desire to hold the line on state spending.

The committee began it's tedious, line-by-line analysis of executive agencies March 18. By the time it had finished health and human services agencies Monday, one member said, "The train was about to wreck."

Rudd's action came on a day when seven Hispanic members of his committee complained that Clements' hard-line approach had forced them to make "some severe cuts in health and human services."

Rep. Eddie Cavazos, D-Corpus Christi, said committee actions so far would cut 11,200 children from preventive medical care services, eliminate kidney dialysis for 1,000 patients, cut 10,000 women and small children from nutrition programs and savage public health protection programs.

"We are urging the people of Texas to get on the telephone, to write letters, to take their concerns to the governor," Cavazos said. "Hopefully the governor will realize that this is not a liberal call for new taxes but a compassionate call for human services that are needed."

Rep. Frank Collazo, D-Port Arthur, said the group wants to let the voters know what options they have. "Do they want us to tax them here or do they want us to pass it on to the school districts and to the cities and to the drainage districts and let them tax it there?" Collazo said.

Clements continued to say his budget proposals increase spending by $766 million over current levels. "Those programs are not cut in our proposal," he said.

"I can't control what some irresponsible members in either the House or Senate like to say in order to have you print it in the paper."

STRESS

Dr. Francisco Coll, the founder of IPM, gave the four categories their names based upon spiritual gifts and psychic abilities which represent a person's inner communication system. In addition, the categories are founded on, Ms. Seybert said, "how we receive inspiration, how we pick up vibrations, and then how we communicate with other people." Those categories are intuitive, feeling, visionary and prophetic.

Ms. Seybert described the categories thus:

— "The intuitive communicates through words, concepts. He thinks things through until he gets a deeper understanding and carries on a mental conversation with himself. He works with the big picture — not details. He's a born leader; it comes natural to him, and accomplishment is the most important thing to him.

— "The feeling type pick up a vibration and translate it into a feeling. Peace of mind is more important to them than anything else. They're very affectionate; they're good at anything that involves the use of the hands because they have a tremendous sensitivity in their hands. They make good surgeons, carpenters, anything tactile.

— "The visionary or clairvoyant pick up a vibration and translate it into a picture in their mind's-eye. They think in pictures. They're more observant than everyone else and see details that everyone else misses. They have to dress neat and have a neat, attractive working environment to function well.

— "The fourth is the gift of prophecy. These people pick up a vibration and translate it into an inner knowing. They know things, and they don't know how they know them. They have what Shirley MacLaine describes in "Out on a Limb." They can predict the future based upon the vibrations they pick up from other people, and they dream dreams that come true. They have to be creative, can't be held to routine or regimented."

IPM will be establishing groups in the Midland-Odessa area, Ms. Seybert said. The groups meet once a week for two hours and people receive, she said, "very practical instruction in techniques to experience all these things.

"If you understand it, you still don't have it until you experience it. Wisdom is having an understanding of every experience and being willing to get experiences to test out your theories and ideas. But, 'til it works for you in life, it's not reality; it's only a theory. What works is reality. That's what made IPM grow into all the States and 40 other countries because the techniques work for people around the world."

More than 750,000 people in the United States have been through IPM's program since its inception in Washington D.C., in 1984.

Cost of the sessions is $3 a week. The lecture is free. For more information call 1-800-424-3670.

Man sought for aggravated assault

From Staff Reports

An arrest warrant for aggravated assault was issued this morning for a 21-year-old Midland man suspected in the knife-slashing of another man last week, police said today.

According to Lt. Hank Norton, the warrant was issued by Justice of the Peace Robert Pine after police developed information about the case.

The victim, 26-year-old Luis Flores, underwent surgery twice at Midland Memorial Hospital March 26 after he was stabbed in the chest, scalp, abdomen, face and back. He was listed in critical condition at MMH for two days. This morning, a hospital spokeswoman said his condtion had been upgraded to stable.

Police were called to the LaFonda Apartments, 500 N. Colorado St. after the apartment manager found the victim in his apartment.

BACKPACKING

— 8 to 9:30 a.m. Sunday: Tinker around camp, acting like I know what I'm doing. My actions apparently don't fool my guide who keeps looking at me and shaking his head in a combination of disgust and amusement.

— 10 a.m. Sunday: Load smaller backpack and prepare for a day hike. Leave the bigger, heavier gear at the campsite. This is much better. Instead of lugging 35 pounds on my back, I now have less than 10. More like it. I can handle this.

— 10:15 a.m. Sunday: We're off, heading for some little dot on the map my guide has found. It is to involve a walk of six miles.

— 10:30 a.m. Sunday: Struck by a peculiar urge to look like Willie Nelson, remove my cap and wrap a red bandana around my head. Guide says, "You shouldn't do that. You're gonna get sunburned." I respond, "I can handle it."

— 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. Sunday: Sun blisters the hell out of my face. Make a mental note to listen to my guide in the future.

— 5:30 p.m. Sunday: Return to camp, exhausted but feeling strangely stimulated.

— 6 p.m. Sunday: I'm back at the cliff, staring at the birds overhead and sipping from my trusty flask of Scotch. Feeling good. Lost in thought. My guide approaches and says, "Looks like you're doing some serious thinking." His words jolt me. "Huh, uh, yeah, right," I reply, regaining my composure. I wonder briefly what I had been thinking about. I can't remember. Then it dawns on me that I had been worrying about the Houston Astros pitching staff. Weird. Take another sip of Scotch.

— 6:45 p.m. Sunday: Winds starts whipping up. Temperature drops dramatically. We're talking cold here.

— 7 p.m. Sunday: Temperature drops some more.

— 7:30 p.m. Sunday: And more.

— 8 p.m. Sunday: I say to no one in particular, "This is the coldest I've ever been in my life." I'm wearing T-shirt, long-sleave shirt, sweater, flannel jacket, windbreaker and an old pair socks for gloves. Still freezing.

— 8:15 p.m. Sunday: Consider suicide.

— 8:30 p.m. Sunday: Trade that thought for a tin cup of Scotch and coffee. Helps a great deal. Warms my insides.

— 9 p.m. Sunday: Fall asleep, dreaming delightful thoughts of rattlesnakes and blizzards.

ABUSE

The initial charges were based on a medical examination at Women's and Children's Hospital Dec. 31, 1986 by Dr. R. John Kelley, which indicated the child had been subjected to repeated sexual assaults and other physical abuse, including being burned on the head with a cigarette. Deputies investigating the case also said there was evidence the child had "second degree syphillis."

However, a subsequent court-ordered examination of the child by two doctors — a pathologist and pediatrician — refuted earlier allegations. At least six other doctors concurred with the later examination results.

The order for the new examination grew out of a custody hearing during which County Court-at-Law Judge George Svanas ordered the girl placed in the temporary custody of the Texas Department of Human Services. Three brothers were placed in the temporary custody of their grandmother.

In light of results of the later examination, Ector County District Eric Augesen dismissed the charge of aggravated sexual assault of a child against the father and said he would not submit the charges of injury to a child to the grand jury because, while there was little doubt the child had been victim of abuse, "it was impossible to determine who was responsible for the abuse."

Augesen's action prompted a group of parents to form an organization called Parents Against Child Abuse (PACA). The group staged a demonstration in mid-February to protest the district attorney's handling of the case. However, Augesen met with PACA members behind closed doors and disclosed information to them concerning his office's investigation of the case.

Following a more than two-hour session, a spokeswoman for the group stated that, while the group was still upset, they understood the reasons for Augesen's actions.

Augesen subsequently referred the case and the misdemeanor charges involved to Ector County Attorney Gary Garrison. Following an investigation of the case, Garrison presented the misdemeanor charges to the grand jury.

Fines threatening prison system have been delayed

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas didn't pay an $800,500 federal court fine today over its prison system.

The fines threatened to begin today 1 by U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice are being delayed pending decisions in two federal courts, according to the Texas attorney general's office.

The state has filed several motions on which Justice must rule before fines could be levied, said Ron Dusek, a spokesman for Attorney General Jim Mattox.

In addition, Texas has appealed Justice's ruling to the 5th U.S. Circuit Courr of Appeals in New Orleans, and no decision has yet been made there.

Dusek said Tuesday that the state's lawyers are confident the fines won't be imposed.

Mattox "said he is 90 percent sure the state will not have to pay any fines — either as a result of Judge Justice reversing his order or the 5th Circuit reversing the judge," Dusek said.

Justice on Dec. 31, 1986, found Texas in contempt of court for failing to carry out prison improvements as it had promised. He said that unless improvements were made by April 1, the fines that could total $24 million a month would begin.

Texas challenged that ruling on several fronts. First, it appealed to the New Orleans appeals court, asking that Justice be overruled.

"The judges haven't said anything yet. If the 5th Circuit rules against Justice, then that would cancel what he did on the 31st of December," Dusek said.

Also Dusek said, "We've filed motions for him to reverse his contempt order, stating that he went beyond the original court order and where he should have gone in issuing his contempt order.

Senate OKs bill that would limit public smoking

By DAVID PLESA
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The Texas state Senate Tuesday approved a bill to prohibit smoking in most public places except in designated smoking areas.

The bill prohibits smoking in elevators, school buses, public transportation facilities, restrooms, service lines, cashier areas, over-the-counter sales areas or other "common traffic areas."

To date, 40 states and 800 cities across the country have adopted public smoking laws or local smoking ordinances. In Texas, 17 cities, including Austin, have established some kind of smoking regulations, with 14 others considering it.

If approved by the House, Texans who smoke in an unauthorized area will be charged with a Class C misdemeanor, which carries a possible fine of up to $200. Proprietors who do not establish designated smoking areas and enforce the regulations would face the same charge.

The bill requires smoking areas be clearly marked following a grace period of several months, said sponsor Sen. Chet Brooks, D-Pasadena.

"We tried very much to recognize the rights of both the smoker and the non-smoker," Brooks said. "At the same time, we are trying to help the non-smokers protect themselves from the health risks that are obviously involved."

"We are trying to save as many people as we can from cancer and heart disease," he said.

The measure would exempt small businesses of less than 4,000 square feet, such as convenience stores, from having to designate a smoking section.

Tobacco-buying age to increase

Reporter-Telegram
Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Senators agreed Tuesday to raise the legal age to buy cigarettes from 16 to 18, and the sponsor said increasing the minimum age will lead to fewer people smoking.

The bill also removes a previsision in the current law that allows under-age people to smoke with the permision of their parents. Sponsor Cynthia Krier, R-San Antonio, said most adults who smoke start at an early age.

But a few senators said the bill goes too far and instead suggested a ban on promotional campaigns that give minors free cigarettes. "If someone comes up to you on the street to bum a cigarette, under your bill you'd have to ask for their ID," Fort Worth Sen. Hugh Parmer Ms. Krier.

Selling or giving a minor tobacco would be a Class C misdemeanor and carries a fine of up to $200.

The bill, which includes all types of tobacco, cleared the Senate and now goes to the House.

MONEY

Dollar mostly higher

LONDON (AP) — Higher U.S. interest rates and central-bank intervention helped push the dollar up against most major currencies in early trading today. In Tokyo, the dollar edged up to 146.90 Japanese yen, from Tuesday's close of 145.65 yen. Later today, the dollar was quoted at 146.70 yen in London.

Traders in Tokyo said the Bank of Japan bought dollars on the open market for a seventh consecutive day to prevent the U.S. currency from falling further against the yen.

Later today, traders said the dollar was helped in Europe by unconfirmed rumors that the U.S. Federal Reserve had intervened Tuesday with dollar purchases against the yen and the West German mark.

The dollar also was lifted by announcements that two New York banks, Citibank and Chase Manhattan, were raising their prime lending rates to 7¾ percent from 7½ percent. Traders said the moves could foreshadow a general rise in U.S. interest rates, which would make the dollar a more attractive investment.

Midmorning dollar rates in Europe, compared with late Tuesday:

—1.8190 West German marks, up from 1.8095

—1.3059 Canadian dollars, down from 1.3099

The British pound was quoted at $1.6025, unchanged from its rate in London late Tuesday.

Gold bullion prices fell as London's five biggest bullion houses fixed a recommended gold price at midmorning of $418.50 a troy ounce, down from $420.50 late Tuesday.

In Zurich, the metal was bid at $418.10, down from $419.50.

Earlier, in Hong Kong, gold closed at a bid of $419.25, down from $419.31.

Silver bullion was quoted in London at a bid of $6.25 an ounce, up from $6.23.

Chase, Citibank boost prime rate; Dow rebounds

By JOHN CRUDELE
New York Times News Service

NEW YORK (NYT) — The stock market's session was over Tuesday when Citibank surprised the financial community by raising its prime interest rate to 7¾ percent, and equity prices were thus able to recover from Monday's sharp selloff.

But economists and market analysts predicted that the Citibank action, which Chase Manhattan soon matched, could deal Wall Street a severe blow when business resumed today. The moves, which other banks are likely to match, come at a time when investors are deeply worried about rising interest rates.

"I think it will shock the stock market," John Paulus, chief economist at Morgan Stanley & Co., said of the Citibank move.

The Dow Jones industrial average, which had fallen more than 36 points on Friday and 57 points Monday, recovered 26.28 points Tuesday to close at 2,304.69.

But traders and market analysts said the optimism that lifted stock prices Tuesday might be missing Wednesday because of the rate increases by the two money-center banks. "I think it's going to cause nervous selling," Alan Ackerman of Gruntal & Co. said. "I would not be surprised to see the market be highly sensitive to this."

The prime rate is not nearly so important these days as it was in the past. Today, with banks doing less of the overall corporate lending at the prime rate, investment professionals are more likely to monitor commercial paper and other interest rates.

Yet the stock market, which tends to hold onto tradition a bit longer than other markets, is likely to see the rate increases as both a real and psychological setback.

It is a real setback, insofar as corporations might be paying more for the money they borrow, which could reduce profits or cause a business retrenchment that could spoil the economy's recovery.

Psychologically, the rate increases could ruin the buoyant mood that has existed on Wall Street for the last three months. Specifically, investors could decide that stock prices have risen enough and that their assets would be better placed in interest-rate-sensitive instruments, like money market funds.

One factor that could help ease the market's reaction is that the prime rate increase simply follows the rise in other rates that has occurred recently in reaction to the decline in the dollar's value and the trade friction between the United States and Japan.

Tuesday, the two nations seemed to be trying to smooth over their differences. The United States trade representative, Clayton K. Yeutter, said the stock market on Monday overreacted to a decision by the United States to proceed with tariffs on some Japanese electronics and computer products.

Such talk helped alleviate some of Wall Street's concerns, sending the New York Stock Exchange composite index up 1.33 points Tuesday, to 165.89, and the Standard & Poor's 500-stock index up 2.50, to 291.70.

The average share gained 34 cents on the Big Board, where advancing issues outnumbered losers by an impressive 993 to 591.

Volume slipped, however, to 171.8 million shares Tuesday from 208.4 million Monday, an indication, market analysts say, that investors were not fully comfortable with getting back into the action.

That discomfort, as it turned out, may have been fortunate. At the close of business Tuesday, and right before the Citibank action, stock index options contracts were trading at lower than normal.

For example, the premium on the S&P 500 index option contract, which expires in June, gained 0.80 point on the day, while the cash index was up 2.50 points. That alone, market experts say, indicates that program traders will be selling stocks and buying these options at Wednesday's opening, a development that could exacerbate any reaction to the rise in the prime rate.

On top of all that, Tuesday's improvement in stock prices may have been deceiving. Since it was the final session of the quarter, institutional investors may have been anxious to convert cash they had on hand into equities.

"They want to show less cash," said Jack Baker, head trader of Shearson Lehman Brothers. "Cash is out of style right now."

But if cash does come back into vogue because of higher interest rates, Tuesday's improvement in the stock market could quickly be undone.

Midland M-Squad to host ambassadors

By DEANNA J. NEAL
Business/Oil Writer

The Midland Chamber of Commerce M-Squad is taking the lead in hosting a group of chamber volunteers in a first-ever convention that they hope will become an annual event. More than 500 ambassadors from several cities will convene in Midland on May 15 to participate in Ambassador I — an attempt to "bridge the gap" between the cities.

Sponsored by the Midland Chamber of Commerce M-Squad, city representatives will meet to share how they support their local chambers and exchange creative ideas, says Kathy Blackman, M-Squad chairman.

The festivities will begin with a record setting ribbon cutting. "The one-mile long ribbon cutting will be recorded as the world's longest in the Guiness Book of World Records and will help us gain national attention," says Blackman.

Convention headquarters will be the Holiday Inn Country Villa in Midland, where chamber volunteers from Oklahoma, Louisiana, Arkansas, Texas and New Mexico will convene. Other events planned include a golf tournament, 45-minute programs on special interest topics and an effort to charter an Ambassador's Association. The effort will be the first association for volunteers of the various chambers of commerce.

Blackman says response to the first-ever ambassador gathering has been overwhelming. "When we first came up with the idea, and started planning it, we were thinking along the lines of 150 to 200 people. It has snowballed into 500, and may get even bigger before the convention rolls around."

She notes that a successful convention in Midland will ensure that the convention becomes an annual event. "Three cities — Arlington, El Paso and Odessa — have already expressed an interest in hosting next year's Ambassador convention.

Blackman says the convention will mean more to Midland than just dollars from the ambassadors who attend. "The creative ideas and encouragement exchanged can be a great benefit to every volunteer, giving them fresh ideas to take back and implement in their respective chamber programs."

GenCorp plans buy-back in defense of company

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — GenCorp Chairman A. William Reynolds expects to reveal within a week the specifics of the company's plan to fight a hostile $2.2 billion tender offer for its stock.

Reynolds told more than 300 shareholders Tuesday at Akron's Quaker Square Hilton that GenCorp is ready to take several steps, including buying back shares, to thwart a takeover attempt.

Reynolds did not elaborate further on the plan, but the company hinted Monday in a filing with the Securities and Exchange Commission the plan might entail the sale of subsidiaries, a stock buy-back by the company, a merger involving part or all of the company, or a leveraged buyout of the company.

Reynolds virtually ruled out the payment of greenmail, saying he had a "repugnance for that device." Greenmail is the purchase of shares held by an unsolicited investor at a premium above their market value.

Reynolds said the company's response to the takeover attempt will be better for shareholders than the $100-per-share tender offer from the partnership of AFG Industries Inc., an Irvine, Calif., glass manufacturer, and Wagner & Brown, a Midland oil and gas partnership.

GenCorp Vice President Steve Ellis said when shareholders might vote on the tender offer remains unclear.

"We don't know how that's going to unfold. We've asked the shareholders to just hold their shares until we can get back to them," Ellis said.

Reynolds said the tender offer submitted March 17 "jeopardizes our attempt to provide long-term value."

Randall Dee Hubbard, chief executive officer of AFG, and Joel Reed, chief financial officer of Wagner & Brown, attended the meeting and introduced themselves to Reynolds for the first time. They already have power to vote 2.18 million shares, or 9.8 percent of all GenCorp shares.

Reynolds announced that court challenges to the sale of television station WOR of Secaucus, N.J., have been resolved, and the sale will be completed Friday, generating $250 million after taxes and allowing the company to buy back stock. RKO General owns WOR and has has agreed to sell it to MCA Inc. for $387 million.

InterFirst: SEC investigating inside loans

DALLAS (AP) — The Securities and Exchange Commission and a federal grand jury are investigating insider loans to former InterFirst Bank Dallas director Edwin L. Cox Jr., InterFirst Corp. says.

The bank holding company said Tuesday the loans to Cox Jr., along with loans to other former directors including his father, former InterFirst Corp. director Edwin L. Cox Sr., caused $56 million of InterFirst's total 1986 losses of $326.5 million.

InterFirst said in a filing with the SEC that the SEC is in the midst of an informal inquiry into "matters ... relating to certain credit facilities at InterFirst Dallas which were extended to, or guaranteed by, Mr. Edwin L. Cox Jr., including InterFirst's policies and procedures concerning certification and valuation of collateral associated with such credit facilities."

SEC personnel have declared their intention "to obtain a formal order of private investigation in this matter," InterFirst said.

"Various documents relating to these credit facilities have been subpoenaed from InterFirst Dallas by a grand jury," the bank holding company said. "The grand jury investigation is continuing."

But InterFirst said InterFirst Dallas has been advised that it is not a target of the grand jury investigation.

The Dallas Times Herald reported last October that InterFirst had turned over certain materials pertaining to Cox Jr.'s troubled loans to the U.S. Attorney's office in Dallas and to the Dallas office of the FBI.

At that time, InterFirst said it "recently has learned that ... financial statements and the existence of ... collateral may not be accurate" as required by law.

A spokesman for Cox Jr. Tuesday characterized InterFirst's disclosures regarding the SEC and federal grand jury investigations as "old news" and said neither he nor Cox Jr. would have any comment.

Dollar-yen slide continues

TOKYO (AP) — The dollar slid to a record low against the Japanese yen today for the second straight day, closing at 145.65 yen on the Tokyo Foreign Exchange Market.

The minister of international trade and industry, Hajime Tamura, said meanwhile that Japan will send senior officials to Washington this week to prepare for a high-level emergency meeting over semiconductor trade.

House votes on thrift insurance fund bailout

WASHINGTON (AP) — The insurance fund covering some $900 billion in savings and loan association deposits is broke by some accounting standards, and the House Banking Committee is considering whether to spend $25 billion to get it out of the red.

The committee today was beginning to take up a rescue plan that would funnel the money, none of it from taxpayers, into the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corp., which insures S&L deposits up to $100,000.

The General Accounting Office has said FSLIC would be broke if it followed ordinary accounting principles and set aside money to pay off depositors in S&Ls that are already insolvent and should be closed.

BUSINESS BRIEFS

First City expects continued operating losses

HOUSTON (AP) — First City Bancorporation of Texas Inc. announced Tuesday it expects operating losses to continue because of the current depressed economy.

"The losses for 1987 are expected to be substantially less than in 1986," said J.A. Elkins Jr., senior chairman of the Houston-based bank holding firm.

"However, the ultimate return to satisfactory operating conditions is dependent on the successful resolution of the related problems of credit quality, funding and the eventual need for substantial additional capital."

"We have been reviewing our capital situation for some time, and a special committee of our outside directors has been assisting management in evaluating the best sources of additional capital and related matters," Elkins said. "Management believes that sufficient resources will be available to cover interim capital needs while additional capital is being sought."

Crosstown sale requires interstate bank rules

TEXARKANA, Ark. (AP) — A Texarkana, Texas, bank is being taken over by a Texarkana, Ark., company, officials say.

Stockholders of American National Bank in Texarkana, Texas, voted to allow the bank's purchase by State First National Financial Corp. of Texarkana, Ark.

"Texarkana U.S.A. is a unique city since it is located in two states," said Ben Sandefur, president of State First. "The economy of our community certainly is interstate."

The Texas Legislature last year voted to allow out-of-state companies to own Texas banks for the first time.

Under the agreement, the 160 holders of the 89,500 shares of American National will receive two shares of stock in State First for each American share they own.

Fort Worth insurer released from state control

AUSTIN (AP) — State Insurance Commissioner Doyce R. Lee said Tuesday that United Fidelity Life Insurance Co. of Fort Worth had been released from state conservatorship.

The company was declared solvent in an order issued Monday by Lee.

United Fidelity was ordered into a conservatorship on Nov. 15, 1985, because of improver allocation of funds and resources, the commissioner said.

Tired of the "gloom and doom" publicity about the Permian Basin since oil prices fell, Midland-Odessa broadcast executives are planning a party to let media and advertising representatives know that this area is still a viable area.

The Midland-Odessa Broadcast Coalition is sponsoring a barbecue, beer and cocktail party in Dallas on April 9 from 5 to 9 p.m. The party will be at the Cynthia Michaels Soundstage at the Dallas Communications Complex in Las Colinas, according to Bob Bunch, spokesman for the coalition. About 400 people are expected to attend the event.

"This event is designed to inform everyone that the Permian Basin is making an economic comeback," stated Bunch.

Food for the event is being donated and served by the Odessa Chuck Wagon Gang, who will serve food from an 18-wheel tractor trailer they will take to Dallas. Entertainment is being provided by Fiddlin' Frenchie Burke.

The MIDLAND ARMY STORE's new location at 3101 N. Big Spring is about three times the size of the old location, according to manager Phillip Day. The new store has about 9,300 square ft., he said.

"It's got better parking," Day noted. "We can display our merchandise better, increase inventory and add new products." He said customers can expect an increased clothing selection, noting that safari-style clothes are very fashionable right now.

He pointed out that, despite the store's name, 80 to 85 percent of the inventory is new, fashionable clothing, boots, camping and archery gear. The store is geared toward the outdoor person who likes hiking, hunting or camping.

O'Connor clears Delta-Western merger

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Supreme Court justice cleared the way Wednesday for the $860 million merger of Delta Air Lines and Western Airlines, vacating a lower court injunction that would have blocked the merger due to a dispute over union representation.

Supreme Court Justice Sandra Day O'Connor approved the application by Western and Delta attorneys to vacate Tuesday's ruling by a three-judge panel of the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in San Francisco, said Kathy Arberg, Supreme Court spokeswoman.

"That means the merger can take place," Ms. Arberg said.

The justice, who has responsibility for the 9th Circuit, had received the application at 11:40 p.m. Tuesday and made the decision at 2:15 a.m., she said.

The appellate court in San Francisco, just hours before the merger was to go into effect, had ordered the companies to submit a dispute over union representation to an arbitrator, saying the merger would be prohibited until the end of the arbitration.

At issue is a 1982 union contract with Los Angeles-based Western that stated Western employees would be governed by the pact in the event of a merger.

Union lawyers argue the contract must be honored, but attorneys for the airlines say that clause is unenforceable.

Only about 10 percent of Delta employees — its flight dispatchers and pilots — belong to unions, according to the company. In contrast, 92 percent of Western employees are represented by a union.

Union lawyers have estimated that the arbitration would last a week, and Delta officials said each day of delay would mean of losses of $3 million to $4 million.

The 9th Circuit court said the only way the merger would be allowed to proceed was if Delta agreed to be bound by the arbitrator's ruling, subject to judicial review, about which unions could continue to represent former Western employees.

The order, signed by Judges Alfred Goodwin, Mary Schroeder and Cecil Poole, was issued a little more than four hours before the merger was to take effect. Stockholders approved the merger in December.

Delta spokesman Bill Berry said the company had received only verbal notice of the 9th Circuit's ruling, and had many questions.

DOLLAR

The U.S. government last week announced penalty duties against Japan in retaliation for Washington calls unfairly low prices of Japanese semiconductor exports.

On Monday, when the dollar closed at a then-record low of 146.20 yen, traders said fear of a trade war was at least partly responsible.

Tamura told a news conference today that if the U.S. government agrees to the proposed emergency meeting, his deputy, Makoto Kuroda, will go to Washington to represent the Japanese government.

The dollar today opened at 145.75 yen and ranged from 145.60 to 146.35 yen before closing at 145.65 yen.

Traders predicted the dollar would continue to fall, and top Japanese business leaders called emergency meetings to plot strategy to keep their export earnings from being squeezed. A higher yen makes Japan's exports more expensive abroad.

Since September 1985, the dollar has lost more than 40 percent of its value against the yen in a coordinated effort by the United States, Japan and other Western countries to reduce Japanese exports and increase Japan's imports of American and other foreign goods. The United States had a record $169.8 billion trade deficit last year, while Japan enjoyed a surplus.

However, the major industrial powers agreed last month it was time to stabilize exchange rates. The dollar then was trading for about 153 yen.

THRIFTS

The question does not affect depositors right now because those institutions are being kept open and operating — "warehoused," some people call it — at a cost of $6 million a day in accumulating losses. That spares the insurance fund of the immediate cost of paying off depositors.

But it's only an expensive and temporary solution. A Banking subcommittee voted 42-1 on Tuesday for a more lasting answer — an infusion of $25 billion. The full committee was deciding whether to accept that plan or come up with its own.

The plan approved by the subcommittee would raise $10 billion from assessments on the industry and $15 billion from bonds sold in the capital markets.

Rep. Thomas Carper, D-Del., who pushed the rescue plan through the subcommittee, said Congress needed to solve problem and restore confidence in the industry from both depositors and investors.

"We're sending a strong message to depositors that we're not going to simply paste on a Band-Aid," he said. "We're going to make sure this patient gets well."

The plan is not supported as unanimously as the subcommittee vote would indicate. A more telling margin was the 23-20 vote by which the committee chose the Carper proposal over a much smaller $5 billion plan supported by the Chairman Fernand St Germain, D-R.I.

St Germain said his smaller, two-year proposal would give Congress more time to study the problem. Further action could be taken after two years, he said.

The larger fund also is opposed by the savings and loan industry, which contends there is no solid evidence the full amount is needed.

The industry argues there is no question that the cost of raising the money would hurt the financial standing of the 80 percent of the industry that is healthy, driving investors away from S&Ls and pushing many healthy S&Ls to quit the fund in favor of the more solid Federal Deposit Insurance Corp.

The proposal is particularly controversial in the energy and farm belts, where failed and failing institutions are concentrated.

REAL VANILLA Dessert Fantasies!

"Ah, you flavour everything; you are the vanilla of society!" So said the 18th century writer, Sidney Smith. Well put for the "flavour" that appears in more desserts than any other. Here, in these recipes for your wildest dessert fantasies, vanilla is both a star and an essential supporting actor. Pure vanilla extract — the real thing — has the wonderful property of adding its own characteristic flavor while it also mellows and blends the tart flavors of fruit.

In these and any desserts you take the time to make yourself it's important to make sure you use the pure extract of vanilla. This is derived from vanilla beans, the delicate fruit of an orchid. Imitation vanillas begin with flavor synthesized from wood pulp or coal tar and typically leave a bitter aftertaste.

In our photo, top right, is an incredible Strawberry Cream Torte, rich with orange-vanilla cream filling between two layers of homemade sponge cake. Vanilla whipped cream frosts the top and sides, with a fillip of fresh strawberries. The parts — filling and cake — can be made ahead, separately, when it fits into your time schedule.

At center stage: A fresh fruit-filled cream puff in a pond of vanilla custard sauce. These cream puffs are not difficult to make; they can even be baked ahead and frozen up to three weeks before filling.

In the Frozen Apricot Yogurt Parfait (at left) both dried apricots and apricot nectar are used with vanilla in the custard. The layers are crunchy vanilla cookie crumbs. The cookies are also served alongside.

Mixing and matching the separate parts of these recipes is another good idea. You could spoon the Vanilla Custard Cream Sauce over the sponge cake layers and top them with sliced fresh fruits. You could fill the Cream Puffs with Orange-Vanilla Cream Filling and serve with Vanilla Whipped Cream. Or, you could use the Vanilla Butter Cookies as dippers for small bowlfuls of warmed Vanilla Custard Cream Sauce.

NEW VANILLA RECIPE LEAFLET

"The Magic of Real Vanilla" is a new recipe leaflet offered free of charge by the Vanilla Information Bureau, Inc., 928 Broadway, New York, NY 10010. Send a stamped, self-addressed, business-size envelope. Included are six exciting dessert recipes using pure vanilla extract, plus tips on flavoring with vanilla beans.

STRAWBERRY CREAM TORTE

*Orange-Vanilla Sponge Cake
2 pints fresh strawberries, hulled and thickly sliced
1/4 cup sugar
1/2 teaspoon pure vanilla extract,
*Orange-Vanilla Cream Filling
Vanilla Whipped Cream

Cut sponge cake in half horizontally. Center 1 cake layer, cut side up, in 8-inch springform pan. Wedge 1 row of strawberries between cake and side of pan. Mix remaining strawberries with sugar and pure vanilla extract; set aside. Pour half the cream filling over cake; spoon on half the strawberries. Top with remaining cake, cut side up. Spoon on remaining strawberries, reserving 6 slices for garnish. Spread on remaining cream filling. Cover and chill 8 hours or overnight. Remove side of pan. Garnish with whipped cream and reserved strawberries. YIELD: 12 portions.

*Orange-Vanilla Sponge Cake

1/4 cup all-purpose flour, unsifted
1/2 teaspoon baking powder
Pinch salt
1 egg yolk
1/4 cup sugar
1/4 teaspoon grated orange peel
1 tablespoon boiling water
1/2 teaspoon pure vanilla extract

Preheat oven to 350 F. Grease and lightly flour one 8-inch round cake pan; set aside. Combine flour, baking powder and salt; set aside. In large bowl, with electric mixer, beat egg yolk, sugar and orange peel until light and fluffy. Add water and pure vanilla extract; beat until blended. At low speed, slowly stir in reserved flour mixture; beat until just blended. Pour into prepared pan. Bake until cake springs back, 15 to 20 minutes. Cool on wire rack 1 minute. Invert cake onto wire rack. When cake comes loose, remove pan; cool. YIELD: 1 cake layer.

Orange-Vanilla Cream Filling

1 envelope unflavored gelatin
1/2 cup sugar, divided
2 eggs, separated
1 cup milk
1/4 cup orange liqueur
2 teaspoons pure vanilla extract
1 cup heavy (whipping) cream, whipped

In medium saucepan, mix gelatin with 1/4 cup sugar. Combine egg yolks, milk and orange liqueur; blend into gelatin mixture. Let stand 1 minute. Stir over low heat until gelatin is completely dissolved, about 5 minutes; cool. Stir in pure vanilla extract. Pour into large bowl; chill, stirring occasionally, until mixture mounds slightly on spoon. In medium bowl, beat egg whites until soft peaks form; gradually beat in remaining 1/4 cup sugar until stiff but not dry. Fold into gelatin mixture; then fold in whipped cream. YIELD: about 4 cups.

Vanilla Whipped Cream

1/2 cup heavy (whipping) cream
1-1/2 teaspoons sugar
1 teaspoon pure vanilla extract

In chilled bowl with chilled beater blades, whip cream until slightly thickened. Gradually add sugar and pure vanilla extract; beat until soft peaks form. YIELD: 1 cup.

CREAM PUFF FANTASY

1/2 cup water
1/4 cup butter
1/8 teaspoon salt
1/2 cup all-purpose flour, unsifted
1/2 teaspoon pure vanilla extract
2 eggs
1-1/2 cups fresh fruit cut in bite-sized pieces (strawberries, papaya, kiwi, etc.)
*Vanilla Custard Cream Sauce

Preheat oven to 400 F. In medium saucepan, bring water, butter and salt to full rolling boil; heat until butter is melted. Add flour, all at once; stir vigorously over low heat with wooden spoon until mixture forms a ball, about 1 minute. Remove from heat; cool slightly, about 2 minutes. Stir in pure vanilla extract. Add eggs 1 at a time, beating well after each addition with a wooden spoon or electric beater until mixture is smooth and glossy. On ungreased baking sheet, spoon dough in 6 equal rounds, 2 inches apart. Bake until puffed and golden, about 25 minutes. Cool on pan for 5 minutes. Remove to wire racks to cool completely. If desired, wrap tightly in freezer paper; freeze for up to 3 weeks before filling. Just before serving, cut thin slice from top of each puff; remove soft dough. Spoon about 1/4 cup fruit into each shell. To serve, place each filled puff on an individual serving plate. Spoon vanilla custard around puffs. If desired, spoon thin circle of pureed raspberries or strawberries in the custard. YIELD: 6 puffs.

*Vanilla Custard Cream Sauce

1/3 cup sugar
2 tablespoons cornstarch
1-1/2 cups milk
1 egg yolk
1/2 cup heavy (whipping) cream
2 teaspoons pure vanilla extract

In medium saucepan, combine sugar and cornstarch. Add milk and egg yolk; stir to dissolve cornstarch. Stir over medium heat until thickened, 5 to 7 minutes. Transfer to bowl. Chill. Stir in cream and pure vanilla extract. YIELD: 2-1/4 cups.

FROZEN APRICOT YOGURT PARFAIT

1 cup dried apricots
Water
2 cans (5-1/2 ounces each) apricot nectar
1 tablespoon cornstarch
3 eggs, separated
1/4 cup sugar
1 carton (8 ounces) plain yogurt
1 tablespoon pure vanilla extract
*3/4 cup Vanilla Butter Cookie (recipe follows) crumbs

In small saucepan, place apricots and water to cover; bring to boil. Reduce heat and simmer, covered, until tender, about 5 minutes; drain. Puree in food processor or electric blender; set aside. In small saucepan, combine apricot nectar and cornstarch; bring to boil, stirring constantly, until clear and thickened, about 3 minutes. Place egg yolks in mixing bowl. Slowly add hot nectar mixture, whisking constantly; return to saucepan. Stir over medium-low heat until mixture returns to boil; remove from heat. In large bowl of electric mixer, beat egg whites until foamy. Gradually add sugar; beat until stiff but not dry. Beat in hot nectar mixture; cool to room temperature. Stir in yogurt, pure vanilla extract and reserved apricot puree. Place in freezer until mixture starts to freeze around edges, about 2 hours. Process in container of food processor or electric blender until smooth. Spoon into 6-ounce parfait or dessert glasses alternately with crumbs. Freeze until firm. Remove from freezer 10 minutes before serving. Serve garnished with Vanilla Whipped Cream and diced dried apricots, if desired. YIELD: 6 portions.

*To make crumbs, process 10 cookies in a food processor or electric blender.

VANILLA BUTTER COOKIES

1 cup butter, softened
3/4 cup sugar
*2-1/2 teaspoons pure vanilla extract
1 egg
2-1/2 cups all-purpose flour (unsifted)
1/4 teaspoon salt

Preheat oven to 350 F. In medium bowl with electric mixer, cream butter, sugar and pure vanilla extract until light and fluffy. Beat in egg. Gradually beat in flour and salt until well blended. Spoon dough into pastry bag fitted with large star tip. On greased baking sheets, pipe dough into star shapes about 1 inch in diameter, 2 inches apart. (Or, drop rounded tablespoonfuls of dough onto cookie sheets.) Bake until cookies are golden around the edges, 8 to 10 minutes. Cool on baking sheets for 1 minute. Remove to wire racks to cool completely. YIELD: about 4-1/2 dozen cookies.

Vanilla beans and pure vanilla extract are truly treasures among food ingredients. They constitute "real vanilla" — a flavor as "different" from its imitators as day from night.

- Real vanilla comes from the fruit of an orchid. Of the thousands of varieties of orchids, the vanilla plant is the only one that has an edible fruit.
- It is the most labor-intensive agricultural product in the world. From planting the vine to bottling the aged extract, it is a long process and each step, up to extraction, must be done by hand.
- Even in its native habitat, vanilla was a rare and valuable commodity. The Aztec emperor Montezuma demanded vanilla as a tribute from the Indians who discovered and processed it.
- Madagascar, The Comoros Islands, and Reunion produce the world's top quality "Bourbon" vanilla beans. These islands off the east coast of Africa grow about 80% of the world's crop of vanilla beans.
- "Imitation vanillas and "vanilla flavors" are based on synthetic vanillin, which comes from a by-product of paper manufacturing — the sulphite effluent. The Ontario Paper Company claims to be the world's largest producer of synthetic vanilla.

Quail becoming 'new' menu standard

By PIERRE FRANEY
New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — The most popular "new" food found in America's homes and restaurants was once available mostly in regional and country settings. I am speaking, of course, of quail, now a menu standard from one coast to the other.

Until recently, quail was simply cooked — broiled, pan fried or "smothered" (browned, covered closely and cooked slowly with a little liquid) — and served with a starch such as rice, mashed potatoes or, mostly in the South, with buttered hominy. It was prized fare to be offered to the family or guests when the hunter had returned.

Today, quails are rarely wild: they are grown mainly on game farms. They are almost invariably cleaned, partly boned and ready to cook before they are shipped to market. This easy accessibility is only one of the reasons for the immense popularity of quail. It tastes delectable, retaining some of the original gamy flavor. It is also one of the quickest of all birds to cook. One of the fastest techniques — my favorite — is broiling.

I recently broiled quails and made a stuffing of bulk sausage, chopped shallots and parsley, plus a dash of Cognac. As part of the basting flavor, I threw in a little finely chopped rosemary.

The birds cook in less than a quarter of an hour. The exact cooking time for the dish I have in mind is about 15 minutes, including the time to cook the sausage made with raw pork.

SAUSAGE-STUFFED QUAIL

8 quails, boned except for the thigh and leg portions, about 1½ pounds total weight
½ pound bulk sausage meat
1 tablespoon finely chopped shallots
1 tablespoon finely chopped parsley
1 tablespoon Cognac
Salt to taste, if desired
Freshly ground pepper to taste
¼ cup olive oil
1 tablespoon finely chopped fresh rosemary, or half that amount dried

Preheat broiler to high.

Place quails on a flat surface.

Combine sausage meat, shallots, parsley and Cognac. Blend well. Divide mixture into eight portions.

Fill cavity of each quail with the stuffing. Flatten each bird slightly. Sprinkle with salt and pepper.

Pour oil into a baking dish large enough to hold the quails in one layer. Add quails and sprinkle with half the rosemary. Turn quails in the oil and sprinkle with remaining rosemary. Arrange them breast side down. Place under broiler about 8 inches from source of heat. Leave broiler door partly open. Let cook 5 minutes and turn quails breast side up. Return to broiler and let cook, basting occasionally, 5 minutes longer.

Transfer quails to bottom rack of oven. Set oven heat at 400 degrees. Continue cooking 5 minutes.

Nurse training creates special volunteer

By LINDA ANDERSON
Lifestyle Writer

Kathleen Molpus' training has made her a Volunteer in Public Schools with a difference — she has been a registered nurse for almost 16 years. "I attended Methodist Hospital School of Nursing in Lubbock, and finished my degree at West Texas State," she said.

As a member of VIPS, part of her duties at Emerson Elementary School include nursing. "I shelve books in the library on Mondays, and relieve the nurse in the clinic on Fridays. When there are no sick kids, I work in the office," she said.

While most of the medical problems she sees as a nurse at Emerson are "mostly just little stuff," occasionally the problem is more unusual. "We had a week when we saw a lot of stomach virus; ... we saw a drug reaction. We had a fifth-grader swallow a tack."

On the days she isn't a volunteer, Mrs. Molpus is a relief nurse working through We Care Home Health Agency Inc. and Upjohn Healthcare Services.

With her background in health care, Mrs. Molpus is aware of the need for healthy food. She is also a member of First Place diet program, although "we call it Live-It instead of diet."

Mrs. Molpus' husband, Morris, does a lot of the family cooking, she said. In fact, everyone in the family does housework. "That's the only way anyone with four kids has the way to do any of this stuff — everyone has to pitch in."

Scott Rathburn/Reporter-Telegram

Kathleen Molpus

The following recipes are some of the family's favorites:

FISH CREOLE

16 ounces fresh or frozen fish fillets
½ cup chopped onion
½ cup chopped green pepper
1 clove garlic, minced
1 can (16 ounces) tomatoes, cut up
2 tablespoons snipped parsley
1 tablespoon instant chicken bouillon granules
Dash bottled hot pepper sauce
1 tablespoon cornstarch
3 cups hot cooked rice

Thaw fish if frozen. Cut into 1-inch cubes. Combine onion, green pepper, garlic and 2 tablespoons water. Cook, covered, until tender. Add undrained tomatoes, parsley, bouillon, hot pepper sauce and ½-cup water. Simmer, covered, 10 minutes.

Blend cornstarch and 3 tablespoons cold water; stir into tomato mixture. Cook and stir until thickened. Stir in fish. Simmer, covered 5 to 7 minutes. Serve over rice.

Makes six servings — one serving (⅔ cup fish mixture and ½ cup rice) equals 2½ meat exchanges, 1 bread and 1 vegetable.

May be stored tightly covered in refrigerator for one week. Excellent reheated in microwave.

PUMPKIN PIE

9-inch prepared deep dish pie crust
1 envelope unflavored gelatin
½ cup sugar
½ teaspoon cinnamon
½ teaspoon nutmeg
¾ teaspoon salt
½ cup skim milk
3 slightly beaten egg yolks
1 tablespoon sugar
1 can (16 ounces) pumpkin
3 egg whites

Cook pie shell. In saucepan combine first five ingredients. Stir in milk, egg yolks and pumpkin. Cook over medium heat until thick and boiling, stirring constantly. Chill until partly thick (30 to 45 minutes).

Beat egg whites until soft peaks form. Gradually add 1 tablespoon sugar until stiff peak forms. Fold beaten egg mixture into chilled pumpkin mixture. Turn into pie shell and chill until firm.

One-eighth pie equals ½ bread exchange, ½ meat and ¾ vegetable.

Prunes once considered aphrodisiac

By DIANE SAVAGE
Copley News Service

You may not associate prunes with romance, but at one time they were thought to possess the qualities of a love-inspiring aphrodisiac. Just as raisins are dried grapes, prunes are sun-ripened, dried plums. In the days before refrigeration and efficient transportation, these dried fruits played an important role in country kitchens, especially during the winter when other fruits were unavailable.

Today, with our knowledge of the importance of dietary fiber, the humble prune is growing in popularity. It is one of our best sources of fiber, containing four of the five types of fiber that may help prevent diabetes, heart disease and colon cancer. Each of these types of fiber — hemicellulose, pectin, cellulose, and lignin — has different functions in the body, and prunes are one of the few foods that combine this variety of fiber components. They're also a good source of vitamin A, iron and potassium and contain no cholesterol and very little sodium.

Prunes make a great snack on their own (only about 25 calories each), and they're easy to pack into lunches, or munch on for a healthful mid-morning snack at the office. Chop pitted prunes and add to oatmeal, pancake or muffin batter, cookie dough, fruit salads, trail mix — whatever you fancy. You'll be adding fiber as well as important nutrients.

Most of the world's prunes are grown in Northern and Central California and harvested in late summer, then dried and packaged for shipping. Buy pitted prunes for easy preparation, or pit them by hand with a paring knife. To plump prunes, combine equal amounts of prunes and liquid (water, fruit juice, etc.), then cover and refrigerate overnight. Or simmer gently in a small amount of water until they reach desired "plumpness."

Following are a few recipe ideas from the California Prune Board. For more information on this flavorful fruit treat, write to them at the World Trade Center, San Francisco, Calif., 94111.

HONEY PRUNE BARS

3 eggs
1 cup honey
1 teaspoon vanilla
1½ cups unbleached white flour
½ cup rolled oats
1 teaspoon baking powder
½ teaspoon cinnamon
¼ teaspoon each cloves and salt
12 ounces (about 2 cups) pitted prunes, coarsely chopped
1 cup chopped nuts
Powdered sugar

Preheat oven to 350 degrees.

In large bowl, beat eggs until light and lemon-coloed. Gradually add honey and vanilla, beating constantly.

Combine flour, oats, baking powder, cinnamon, cloves and salt. Gradually stir into egg mixture. Fold in prunes and nuts to blend thoroughly.

Turn into buttered 9x13x2-inch baking pan; smooth top. Bake in preheated oven about 40 minutes until springy to the touch and lightly browned (do not overbake).

Cool and cut into bars. Roll each in powdered sugar before serving. (For best flavor and texture, cover bars in pan with plastic wrap or aluminum foil and set aside 24 hours before serving.)

SWISS BREAKFAST MUESLI

1½ cups water
2 cups shredded apple (unpeeled)
1½ cups (about 9 ounces) pitted prunes, whole or halved
2 tablespoons honey
2 tablespoons lemon juice
½ teaspoon cinnamon
Fresh fruits (sliced banana, apple, pineapple, orange segments)
Chopped walnuts

Combine oats, water, shredded apple, prunes, honey, lemon juice and cinnamo. Cover and refrigerate overnight.

In the morning, spoon some of muesli into cereal bowl. Top with your choice of fresh fruit and walnuts. Serve with dollop of unflavored yogurt, or milk, if desired.

Muesli can be stored in covered container in refrigerator for several days.

From sap to syprup

GILMAN, Vt. — About 40 gallons of sap are required to produce one gallon of pure maple syrup. A single sugar maple tree can yield as much as 12 gallons of maple sap each year, according to Georgia-Pacific Corp., a forest products firm.

Gator Tail and Fries: Risky roadside lunch

Associated Press

BRUNSWICK, Ga. — A misty fog, an atmosphere out of Conan Doyle, enshrouded the marshes here and only made them bleaker and more forbidding.

The conditions were ominous, but a reporter, forsaking the easy way, sought out the riskiest of roadside lunches: the tail of the alligator.

Suddenly, from what seemed like smoke, a scene out of Bronte, up ahead emerged a hooded figure — and the reporter pulled over.

Now came the test. It was a roadside eatery where most diners ordered barbecue. At the counter, he pointed to a menu taped to the wall, swallowed hard, and ordered: "'Gator tail and fries, please."

The counter woman didn't blink.

The first time she'd had alligator, she said, was a long time ago, on a camping trip. A toothy intruder became supper.

"If a girl can eat it, you can," Juanita Clark soothed, noticing a narrowing of the reporter's eyes. She said alligator tastes like a cross between chicken and pork chops, but a little chewier.

At that moment, the hooded figure re-appeared, tall, green-capped, wearing a rain slicker against the weather. He was the owner. "Johnny Jones," he said, offering his hand and joking about the commonness of his name: "The woods are full of them."

What about alligators? Were the woods and surrounding swamps full of them?

"Go down in the early morning, they get out in that warm sunshine and sun themselves. Up most every creek."

The reporter changed the subject, to the other fare at Jones' restaurant, goat meat sandwiches and smoked turkeys. It had been the smoke rising as Jones tended the outdoor cooker that had marked the place.

"It's getting about hog-killing time," Jones said. "We'll probably have hog chitlins." Jones reminisced about Newfoundland where he had eaten moose meat.

Moose, goat, hog, alligator. What's next for the restaurant?

And he disappeared.

Juanita Clark was observing that a lot of out-of-towners pass and see the sign — "Gator Tail and fries, $4.50" — and stop. "They don't want to try it, but most of them — "

The reporter faced The 'Gator.

There was no time to think of retreat, of rescue, of vegetarianism.

With the only utensil available, a plastic fork, he lunged, a scene out of Hemingway. He bit. He swallowed.

With that bite, he thought later, a timeless lesson was learned:

When demons rise from the foggy swamps of life, confront them faceon, with rationality and courage, and, in the case of alligator tail, with a little barbecue sauce.

Livestock analyst gives facts about meat packing, processing industry

Associated Press

Here are some facts about the meat packing and processing industry.

■ Total employment in the industry fell from 193,300 in 1965 to 148,500 workers in 1985.

■ About 1,160 plants closed from 1969-70, when conglomerates began taking over some major packers, to 1982, the last year for which figures were available. Most were small and did not reopen.

■ The number of companies that slaughter steers and heifers dropped from 656 in 1975 to 435 at the end of 1984.

■ The number of companies that slaughter hogs fell from 440 to 370 in the same period.

■ The 12 largest slaughterers of steers and heifers had almost 50 percent of the market in 1975. By the end of 1984, they had 72.1 percent.

■ The 12 largest firms that slaughter hogs had 58.1 percent of the market in 1975. By the end of 1984, it was 66 percent.

These facts were provided by Charles Levitt, senior livestock analyst with Shearson Lehman Brothers in Chicago and the United Food & Commercial Workers International Union.

Flour, gum made from Mesquite pods

Copley News Service

Mesquite trees — whose wood is used in trendy restaurants for charcoal-grilling steaks — produce bean pods that a new process can turn into nutrient-rich foods.

The simple, automated process converts dried pods into high-protein, sweet-tasting flour and the seeds into gum. The gum, which analysis shows is better than the guar gum that U.S. food processors now import, can be used as a thickener in ice cream, puddings, salad dressings and other foods.

What Southern Means

It means that being the best is more important than being the biggest. That's why Bryan wants to sell the best . . . not just the most. So we take time to find the finest cuts of lean beef and pork. And to very carefully season them just for the Southern taste.

We never take the shortcut of averaging out our taste so it fits the whole country. No wonder Bryan beats the big business bologna in taste tests.

DEAR ABBY

Boys and their toys cause countless little tragedies

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: It was a beautiful spring day in Ellisville, so I went for a walk in my neighborhood park. Through the trees I saw three boys with several pellet guns intently tracking something. There was a flutter of feathers, several barely aimed shots, then some peals of laughter.

I was so angry and upset that by the time I found the badly injured bird, I was speechless. When those boys saw the tears in my eyes as I picked up the dying creature to humanely put it out of its misery, I think they knew.

So, if you are looking for the first robin of spring in my neighborhood — it's dead. I buried it down by the creek. — KAREN KRUMREY, ELLISVILLE, MO.

DEAR KAREN: Your letter moved me to tears. Those three cruel, misguided boys in Ellisville may not see this, but it will be seen by the parents of an untold number of children whose toys include pellet guns that could conceivably injure a family pet, blind a child, or kill the first robin of spring.

It is the responsibility of parents to raise moral children to have reverence for life and to respect all living creatures. And why must children "play" with guns, anyway?

DEAR ABBY: Please print this:

An Open Letter to Wedding Guests:

After eight months of planning, and several thousand dollars, my daughter's wedding was beautiful. Thank you all for coming.

Unfortunately, some of you will not receive a thank-you note for your lovely presents. The reason should be obvious: the practice of bringing a gift to the reception is becoming the norm rather than the exception. Very late in the evening, after the newlyweds had departed, the caterer had been paid and the reception was over, the family was faced with loading hundreds of presents into the too few remaining cars. Naturally, when the gifts were unloaded, some had cards attached, some did not. And don't forget the loose cards found on the floor, on tables, etc.

So, if you receive a note thanking you for the "lovely present," don't blame my daughter for not specifically mentioning your gift. She has no idea who gave her that place setting of sterling silver. We have loose gift cards, and we have gifts with no cards. How can she possibly thank each of you?

Incidentally, the guests who (properly) sent their presents to our home before the wedding received a thank-you note by return mail! — MOTHER OF THE BRIDE

DEAR MOTHER: Your open letter appears to have been written by a woman with a closed mind.

There is no excuse for the cards to be "loose," lost or dropped on the floor; the thoughtful bride asks a member of the family or a close personal friend to see that the cards and gifts are kept together in an orderly fashion. And by the way, it is not considered "improper" to bring a wedding gift to the reception.

DEAR ABBY: After two years of dating Rick, a very loving and good man, he opened his eyes one night in the middle of making love and asked, "Say, what does your gas bill run a month?"

I was hurt and dumbfounded and haven't spoken to him since. (We are both in our late 40s.) What should I do? — HURT

DEAR HURT: Tell him you were hurt and why. Rick may be a loving and good man, but his timing is poor.

Sausage made with lamb

By MERLE ELLIS

Sausage, as any of you who have read this column with any regularity over the years are aware, is something of a passion with me. I have been collecting sausage recipes for years. There are a number of us "sausage freaks" scattered around, stuffing all kinds of stuff. I have found another to count among us: Narsai David.

Narsai is one of the most knowledgeable people in the food field. For years he ran Narsai's, one of the finest restaurants in the San Francisco Bay Area. He now owns a specialty food products company, producing an exquisite line of sauces and such that bear his name. He also hosts a nightly radio program on KCBS in San Francisco where he talks about food and wine and answers questions for listeners who call in. While listening to Narsai one night, I discovered his interest in sausage, and I knew right away he could help.

When you're in the food business, whether it's a white tablecloth restaurant like Narsai's or a meatmarket like mine, you try very, very hard not to waste anything. At the market, we sell a lot of lamb and as a result we always have a lot of excess lamb trimmings. Ah ha, it occurred to me as I listened to Narsai, Lamb Sausage! I called:

"Do you have any recipes for lamb sausage?" I asked. "Of course, Merle," Narsai replied. "We used to sell a lot of lamb and made sausage with the trimmings. I'll send you some recipes." He did and they are great.

If you don't have a lot of lamb trimmings in the freezer, you can use any cut of lamb.

MOROCCAN LAMB SAUSAGE

3 lbs. lean lamb trim
1 tablespoon salt
1½ teaspoon curry powder
1½ teaspoon coarse ground black pepper
½ teaspoon cinnamon
½ teaspoon thyme
¼ cup currants

Grind lamb trimmings once through the medium (⅛-inch) plate of a meat grinder.

Mix together all remaining ingredients, pour over meat and mix well with your hands.

Grind through the 1/8-inch plate again with a stuffing horn attached into hog casings. Twist or tie into 5-inch lengths.

Grind lamb trimmings once through meat grinder's ¼-inch plate.

Mix together all remaining ingredients, pour over meat and mix well with your hands.

Rinse hog casings well in cold running water. Stuff meat mixture into casing and twist or tie into 5-inch lengths.

Coffee-brewing techniques vary by taste

Associated Press

A good cup of coffee should be easy to make — but the variations of technique are infinite and the quality ranges from sublime to sludge.

Basically, making coffee is just a matter of combining ground beans with water until the brew is drinkable, according to an article in a recent issue of Town & Country, but there are thousands of types of coffeemakers with varying techniques.

No matter what kind you prefer, there are some basics to follow:

■ Measure coffee and water accurately, two level teaspoons of coffee to six ounces of water.

■ Be sure the coffee is fresh and the coffeemaker clean. Glass and porcelain are easiest to rid of lingering coffee oils. In hard water areas, remove lime deposits that build up in the pot with a strong solution of vinegar and water.

■ Be sure your grind is correct for your machine.

■ Use fresh water from the cold tap. Hot water can pick up impurities in the pipes and water that has been sitting loses its oxygenation.

■ Remove the brew basket containing grounds immediately after the coffee is made.

There are two species of coffee beans — arabica and robusta.

Arabicas are subdivided into milds and Brazilians, also called Santos. Arabicas produce a harder, finer quality bean. High-grown mild arabicas constitute the finest coffees in the world. Brazilian Santos beans grow at lower levels and tend to be less flavorful. They are frequently included in commercial blends.

Robustas are hardier, less expensive, and do not measure up to arabicas in fragrance or flavor, ranging in taste from neutral to harsh.

Among the best coffees in the world are Mocha from Yemen, Colombian, Sumatra, Brazil, Jamaica Blue Mountain and Hawaiian Kona.

Most experts seem to agree a filter-topped coffeemaker is best, whether you choose the European or American type. The American type is the pleated "cupcake" shape, while the European filter is conical and uses a very fine grind of coffee to produce a more intense brew.

The automatic filter drip machines rarely make a good cup of coffee and few experts favor the percolator because it boils the water for a flat taste and pours the coffee over the grounds repeatedly for a brew that is muddy and overcooked.

The infuser — the French plunger method popularized by Melior — is favored by many but some people feel a second serving suffers because the coffee grounds are in perpetual contact with the water and small bits of sediment float about.

In steam espresso machines, steam pressure forces super hot water through very finely ground coffee. It is a strong brew, but since the beans for espresso usually have been roasted longer than any other type, there is usually less caffeine in the cup.

Spiced coffee: Guilt-free 'dessert'

Associated Press

Presenting the next-to-no-calorie dessert — dessert coffee. It's as easy to make as plugging in your percolator.

SPICED DESSERT COFFEE

8 cups cold water
⅔ cup ground coffee
4 inches stick cinnamon
1 teaspoon whole cloves
1 cup coffee, amaretto or hazelnut liqueur or ½ cup each creme de cacao and brandy

Put water in a 10-cup electric percolator. Place coffee, cinnamon and cloves into coffee-maker basket. Prepare according to manufacturer's directions. Before serving, remove basket and stir in liqueur. Pour into heat-proof glasses or cups.

Breakfast menu provides good nutrition to start off Easter Sunday

Copley News Service

Even if you weren't aware of spring in the air, you'd know Easter was on the way just by glancing into any shop window. Weeks before the holiday is due, you see bountiful displays of shredded plastic "grass" in green and pink, colored plastic eggs, chocolate bunnies and many-hued jelly beans.

Easter is a great time for kids. While they may yet remain unaware of the religious significance of the day, they know only too well that it means a heaping basket of sugary goodies.

It doesn't hurt to let your children indulge in sweets now and then, and you can hardly deny them the pleasure of an Easter basket when all the other kids on the block are out hunting for theirs. But you can make sure they start out the day with a nutritious meal before they get their hands on all those marshmallow chicks and chocolate bunnies.

Set the table with a pretty bouquet of fresh-cut spring flowers, and treat your family to a healthful vegetarian breakfast this Easter Sunday. You can make the Whole Wheat Buttermilk Biscuits the night before, if you like, to cut down on preparation time on this busy morning. Then just warm in the oven along with the Springtime Frittata during the last five minutes of baking time. If you let the Festive Fruit Salad chill overnight, leave out the bananas, apples, and coconut, adding them to the other fruit a few minutes before serving time, to preserve color and freshness.

SPRINGTIME FRITTATA

3 tablespoons butter or margarine
1 large onion, chopped
1 pound fresh asparagus
6 large eggs, lightly beaten
2 tablespoons milk
2 tablespoons chopped fresh parsley
2 tablespoons grated Parmesan cheese
¼ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
Dash ground nutmeg
½ cup shredded Monterey Jack cheese

Preheat oven to 350 degrees.

Melt butter in heavy 10-inch ovenproof skillet add onion and saute over medium-low heat until translucent.

Wash asparagus and trim off lower ends. With vegetable peeler peel away any tough fibers (if necessary). Add prepared asparagus to skillet and stir-fry over medium heat 1 minute.

In mixing bowl combine eggs, milk, parsley, Parmesan cheese, salt, pepper and nutmeg until well blended. Pour over asparagus mixture.

Bake in preheated oven 15 minutes. Sprinkle shredded Jack cheese evenly over top and bake about 5 minutes longer, until eggs are set and cheese is bubbly.

Serves 6.

WHOLE WHEAT BUTTERMILK BISCUITS

2 cups whole wheat flour
¼ cup wheat germ
2 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon baking soda
¼ teaspoon salt
5 tablespoons cold butter or margarine, cut into small pieces
1¼ cups buttermilk

Preheat oven to 400 degrees.

Combine flour, wheat germ, baking powder, baking soda and salt in mixing bowl. Stir with fork to mix well. Add butter and work in with fork until mixture resembles small crumbs.

Add buttermilk, about ½ cup at a time, stirring gently (dough will be soft).

Turn dough out onto floured board and pat gently to 1-inch thickness. Cut with round biscuit cutter and arrange on ungreased baking sheet. Bake in preheated oven 10 to 15 minutes, or until tops are lightly browned.

Makes about 18 2-inch biscuits.

FESTIVE FRUIT BOWL

2 bananas, sliced
1 red apple, chopped
1 cup grapefruit sections
1 cup seedless green grapes
⅔ cup pineapple chunks
⅔ cup peaches, chopped
⅔ cup pitted dates, chopped
½ cup shredded, unsweetened coconut
1 cup orange juice

Combine all fruit in serving dish and pour juice over all. Cover with plastic wrap and chill several hours or overnight before serving.

Serves 6.

Baby food prepared in microwave

By DESIREE VIVEA
Copley News Service

If you have a little one in the house, you've got plenty to do changing diapers, waking up in the middle of the night, picking up toys and wiping up messes. But busy parents, take heart — your microwave can help.

Want to warm up baby's bottle? No problem. You used to have to heat up water on the stove, add the bottle, and wait for it to warm up. If not watched carefully, there was a chance of overheating, or even breaking the bottle.

Nowadays, the microwave makes bottle-heating a breeze (even at 3 a.m., when you're not thinking too clearly) — although you must be very careful formula doesn't get too hot and burn baby's mouth. Heat the bottle sans nipple) 15 to 20 seconds on HIGH (100 percent) power setting. Screw on top, shake, and test on wrist. If milk/formula has been refrigerated, heat 30 to 50 seconds, then attach top, shake, and test on wrist. (NOTE) microwaving bottles with plastic liners is not recommended.)

Commercial baby food, strained or junior, can be heated right in the jar. For a 3½- to 4½-ounce jar, remove metal cap and microwave on LOW/DEFROST (30 percent) power setting, stirring several times, until warmed through. To heat three jars together, remove lids, arrange in circle on oven floor, and microwave as above, until evenly warmed.

Food the whole family eats can be blended for your little one if you don't want to buy special baby food. You'll know it's fresh and wholesome, and you'll know exactly what went into it (see recipes below). Before Gerber began marketing strained baby food in 1928, mothers simply mashed up a small portion of the family meal and set it aside for baby.

Mothers who want to prepare their own baby food find it helpful to cook a quantity of, say, fruits or vegetables, puree in the blender, then freeze in ice cube trays. At mealtime, just pop out a portion or two, and microwave until heated through (always check the temperature of food before offering to baby).

State gets tough on college boosters

From Wire Reports

AUSTIN — A Texas Senate committee approved a bill that would allow schools and conferences to sue boosters who violate NCAA rules. The boosters could be sued for up to $10,000 per violation. Sen. John Montford, the bill sponsor, reminded his colleagues that four of the nine SWC schools are on probation for violating NCAA recruiting rules and three others are under investigation.

"It has become obvious that the NCAA rules cannot handle the problem associated with alleged irregularities in intercollegiate athletic recruitment. To compound that problem, the NCAA rules will not reach a booster or an alumnus situation where that person is outside any type of sanction or purview of the NCAA rules," said Montford.

Murchison dies

DALLAS — Clinton Murchison Jr., 63, legendary oil tycoon who created the Dallas Cowboys team only to lose it along with his fabled fortune and health, died after a lengthy illness. Murchison died Monday night with his wife, Anne, at his bedside in Gaston Episcopal Hospital. He had been hospitalized for two weeks and perished from pneumonia that exacerbated a nerve disease he had fought for years.

Murchison, wheelchair-bound and so debilitated he could barely speak in his last years, was involved in what was termed one of the largest personal bankruptcies in Texas history.

"It's a very sad day because I lived and worked with him for 25 years in a very emotional business," Cowboys president Tex Schramm.

One Murchison project was the construction of Texas Stadium, where the Cowboys moved from the Cotton Bowl during the 1970 season.

Record payouts

PHOENIX, Ariz. — The Fiesta Bowl between Penn State and Miami , for college football's 1986 national championship set records for net payouts to the two teams, plus economic impact and v viewership by households, bowl officials announced. The schools received $2.4 million each — a bowl record for net payments, and the game also set a record in terms of economic impact for Arizona with an estimated total of $75 million with 21,940,000 households per minute were tuned into the game. The game, however, ranked third in total viewership behind the 1978 and 1986 Rose Bowls.

Fire rages in hotel

NEW ORLEANS — About 1,200 people, many in town for the NCAA championship basketball game, poured out of the Palace Suites Hotel in downtown New Orleans Tuesday after a four-alarm fire broke out on the 10th floor of the 20-floor structure.

Smoke filled the 10th floor and filtered up to rooms above. But there were few signs of fire outside the building and the blaze was brought under control about 11:18 a.m., a little more than half an hour after the first call came in.

U.S. boxers win

BUFFALO, N.Y. — World champion Kelcie Banks led four defending U.S. champions into the quarterfinals by winning preliminary bouts at the U.S. Boxing Championships.

Rangers picked to finish behind KCRoyals

Associated Press

Some of the hottest new names in baseball, like Wally Joyner, Jose Canseco, Pete Incaviglia and Bo Jackson, are in the American League West. So is an abundance of mediocre players, part of the reason the division is still the weakest.

The Kansas City Royals have always had talent. They had it last year, only it was hard to tell as the 1985 World Series champions slumped to a 76-86 and a tie for third, their worst finish since 1974.

"A lot of guys, not just me, had off-years," Bret Saberhagen said. Saberhagen, the 1985 Cy Young winner with a 20-6 record and 2.87 earned run average, was 7-12 with a 4.15 ERA during an injury-plagued season.

The Royals, who led the league in ERA but ranked 12th in hitting, saw their problem and solved it. They virtually stole Danny Tartabull from Seattle and acquired Juan Beniquez as a role player.

The moves will pay off in 1987 for Manager Billy Gardner, who has taken over full time for Dick Howser, who underwent brain surgery. With an improved offense and still strong pitching, Kansas City should overtake defending champion California and runner-up Texas and win the West for the seventh time in 11 years.

Texas may finish second again. The rest of the field: California, Minnesota, Oakland, Seattle and Chicago.

Kansas City Royals

The Royals admit it — after winning the World Series, they got rich and flabby.

Saberhagen, Danny Jackson (11-12, 3.20 ERA), Mark Gubicza (12-6) and Charlie Leibrandt (14-11) form the best starting rotation in the league.

AL WEST

But they need vintage Dan Quisenberry, instead of the ineffective guy who managed only 12 saves.

George Brett (.290, 16 home runs, 73 RBI) will hit more and Steve Balboni (29 HR, 88 RBI) rejoined Kansas City after lengthy contract talks about his suspect back. DH Hal McRae is now a player-coach.

Willie Wilson (.269, 34 stolen bases) is still in center. Tartabull (.270, 25 HR, 96 RBI as a rookie) was acquired from Seattle without giving up a front-line player.

Texas Rangers

Manager Bobby Valentine and General Manager Tom Grieve, baseball's young dynamic duo, led Texas toward a fountain of youth last season and it worked.

The Rangers, who had not been above .500 at any point for two years, went from 62-99 and seventh place to 87-75 and second. Only 28 teams in history have improved that many places in one season, although 20 of them had worse records the next season.

Starters Bobby Witt (11-9), Edwin Correa (12-14, who will not pitch on Friday nights and Saturday afternoons because of religious beliefs), Jose Guzman (9-15) and Mike Lloyd (2-2) all begin the season at 23 years old or under. Old knuckleballer Charlie Hough, 39, was 17-10. Texas led the majors in walks and wild pitches, both signs of youth and inexperience.

Incaviglia (30 HR, 88 RBI) successfully jumped from college to the majors and fellow sophomore Ruben Sierra (16 HR, 55 RBI) can offset the loss of free agent Gary Ward. Pete O'Brien (.290, 23 HR, 90 RBI) and Larry Parrish (28 HR, 94 RBI) keep hitting.

California Angels

The Angels and Manager Gene Mauch, after going 92-70 and getting within one strike of their first World Series last October, look a lot different.

Reggie Jackson and Bobby Grich are gone. Free agent catcher Bob Boone is unsigned and probably not return because the Angels got Butch Wynegar from the Yankees for Ron Romanick.

Mike Witt (18-10, 2.84 ERA) got the recognition he deserved, while Kirk McCaskill (17-10) and 33-year-old John Candelaria (10-2) and 42-year-old Don Sutton (15-11) were good. A healthier Donnie Moore (21 saves) would help.

Joyner (.290, 22 HR, 100 RBI) was runner-up to Canseco for Rookie of the Year, and was bitter about it.

Scott Rathburn/Reporter-Telegram

Odessa Permian third baseman Danial Bean can't find the handle on the ball as Midland Lee's Billy Wagner grabs the bag in the bottom of the second inning Tuesday at Lee Field.

Permian's big 6th levels Rebels

By BOB BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

Midland Lee pitcher Durian 'Cal' Jenkins pitched out of jam after jam after jam Tuesday, stranding 11 Odessa Permian batters in the first five innings. Then came the top of the sixth and disaster.

Things quickly fell apart as Permian leadoff hitter Scott Erwin stepped into the box to start the rally and smashed Jenkins' first pitch down the left field line. Permian followed with a double and three singles and took the lead on Darren Allman's RBI single up the middle.

One out later, Nolan Watson hit a grounder to left field and two more runs scored when Joe Eldridge misplayed the ball. Parker Hager followed with a walk, Danial Bean hit an RBI single and Scott Erwin walked to load the bases.

Joel Bearden followed with a fielder's choice ground out to Freddie Dawson, who flipped the ball to Dudley Jordan at second, who proceeded to throw wild to first base. Hager scored on the ground out and Bean on the error for a 9-3 Permian lead.

Down but not quite out, the Rebels managed a small rally in the bottom of the frame with Eldridge walking and moving to second on Billy Wagner's infield single. One out later, Dudley Jordan stroked a two-RBI single to right. The Panthers snuffed the comeback when Bearden started the game's only double play on Kemp Laidley's grounder.

"We started hitting the ball and it started falling in for us," said Permian coach Jimmy Davis. "We left 11 on base through five and that can't keep on forever. Sooner or later the hits will start falling."

"They sure hit everything Durian threw up there," said Lee coach Ernie Johnson. "The first three hits were off good pitches and then they hit everything after that."

And, as to why Johnson didn't call on reliever Nicky Sanchez earlier in the inning, he replied, "Jenkins is still the best I have and that's why I stayed with him so long. As long as it was close I was going to stay with him. It didn't work out that way. I guess it was poor judgment on my part. But, I'd do it again.

"We had enough chances in the game to turn double plays, enough to win the game," said Johnson. We had about four chances and, not only didn't we get the double play, but we threw the ball away twice that I remember for an error."

WHILE JENKINS was pitching in trouble most of the day, Permian's Larry Hill managed to throw well enough to go the distance to improve his record to 5-1 on the year, 1-0 in 4-5A play. Jenkins fell to 2-3, 1-2.

"I was debating in the sixth, when they scored their two runs, to pull him out," said Davis of Hill. "But, they were hitting ground balls and Larry was still throwing strikes."

At the plate for Lee, Eldridge collected his first homerun of the year, a solo shot in the fourth that gave Lee a 3-1 lead. Billy Wagner had a 2-for-3 effort and Jason Logi was 2-for-4. Permian was led by Nolan Watson with a 3-for-4 day.

The victory moves Permian into sole possession of third place behind No. 2 ranked Abilene Cooper, 4-0, and Midland High, 3-1. Midland Lee falls into fourth at 2-3.

ELSEWHERE AROUND the league, Cooper third baseman David Tollison ended the Cougars' errorless streak at nine games when he misfired a first inning throw to first base. No matter, the Cooper pitching staff dropped its four-game district earned run average to 0.25 with a 12-0 victory over San Angelo.

Also Tuesday, Odessa High notched its first district win of the season, downing Abilene High 13-8.

For the Cougars, Danny Whitford pitched the third shutout in four district starts, allowing only one hit and two walks while striking out six. And, there was no authority on the hit as Scott Marschall beat out an infield grounder in the fifth inning.

It was also the eighth shutout in the Cougars' current 11-game winning streak.

For Odessa High it boiled down to which team wasn't quite as bad as the other and, on this day, the Bronchos won.

At the plate, OHS outhit Abilene 13-7 and also won the defensive battle, committing only six errors to Abilene's seven.

On the docket today is the Midland High Bulldogs taking on Lubbock Monterey in a doubleheader at Lowry Field at 4 p.m.

On Friday, the Panthers hit the road for a 4 p.m. encounter with former 4-5A member Big Spring. Returning to district play Saturday, Lee is at San Angelo while Odessa High plays Midland High at Angels Stadium. Both games are at 2 p.m. Saturday night, Cooper hosts Abilene High at Hardin Simmons.

Hey, Jim, what happened?

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The question was phrased as gently as it could be to Coach Jim Boeheim under the difficult circumstances, moments after Syracuse had lost the NCAA basketball championship to Indiana 74-73 on a last-second shot.

"Looking back, coach, is there anything you would do differently?"

"I don't second-guess myself," Boeheim bristled. "I leave that to you guys."

Well, as long as you mentioned it.

After Keith Smart dropped in the winning basket, Boeheim tried to console his team. "You have a lot of character and heart," he said. "You gave great effort. It came down to the last shot and they happened to have it."

He neglected to say, however, how they happened to get that shot. It was a significant omission.

Boeheim had coached brilliantly all night, changing up defenses, keeping Indiana off balance, positioning Syracuse to win its first national championship. Then, at the moment of truth, he got a little too smart for his own good.

With 28 seconds to play and Syracuse leading by a point, freshman Derrick Coleman went to the foul line to shoot 1-and-1. The problem is, he went there all by himself. Boeheim abandoned the foul lane, conceding the rebound to Indiana should Coleman miss, choosing instead to send his other four players downcourt to set a defense.

One way to look at that strategy is that it was an expression of faith in the freshman, a statement that the coach knew Coleman wouldn't miss. This would be foolhardy at best, considering Syracuse's season-long frustrations at the foul line.

Another way to look at it is that Boeheim was willing to pay the price of possession of the ball in order to have his players aligned defensively. That is not exactly a bargain at that stage, though, not when the game is coming down to one shot.

Then there is the explanation that, positioned downcourt, Syracuse players couldn't foul going after a rebound if Coleman did miss. But would a foul have been so awful in those circumstances? Boeheim must have thought so.

Suppose you take the worst of circumstances from the Syracuse standpoint. Suppose Coleman missed the first shot and one of the Orangemen in the lane went over the back reaching for the rebound and was called for a deliberate two-shot foul that Indiana converted.

Remember first, that fouls sometimes get called the other way and that in that situation, Indiana's defenders might have been a trifle anxious reaching for that rebound and could have been whistled just as easily as Syracuse.

Remember, too, that foul shots can be missed. But even if Indiana had converted these two fantasy free throws, no time would have gone off the clock. Syracuse would have the ball back with 28 seconds to play, trailing by a point in position to win the game and the championship with one shot — which is just what the Hoosiers did.

All of this is speculation, of course, because Boeheim decided to give Indiana the ball without argument at the most crucial juncture of the game. The team with the ball controls the game and Syracuse meekly turned over that control.

Please see BOCK, Page 3E.

TED BATTLES

Column woes come from all sides

Battles

Indiana and Syracuse had already begun to play and I figured it was someone calling up to ask if I was going watch Scott Alford play. So I let it ring.

When the Mrs. announced it was for me, I just hoped I could be civil.

I growled "hello", I think, but it was probably more like "Well, what do you want?"

The "This is Dean Smith," completely defused my annoyance and had me trying to figure out who was pulling my leg.

The voice was asking "What are you doing to me this time with that headline 'Who does Bobby Knight think he is, Dean Smith?'" when I realized it was Dean Smith.

He went on, "The last time it was a headline that said, 'Dean Smith finally quits.' I sent that one to my mother in Tulsa and she got all shook up."

No doubt. This was THE Dean Smith.

I'VE known Dean for years. His son, Gregg, played basketball at Midland High about 12 years ago and, in fact, is coming back to Midland to speak at the First Baptist Church this weekend.

The other guy is from Kansas originally. Dean Smith is from Oklahoma and played for the Sooners just after World War II, back in the days when I was an avid OU supporter, after all the Navy sent me to Norman and it was the first time I'd ever been away from home.

The loyalty remained for a couple of decades, largely because I came to know so many of the Sooners who played basketball and football in the '40s and '50s later on.

The column Monday also brought a response from an Indiana fan, who wondered what I was trying to do with Bobby Knight, "a great teacher, even if his talent wasn't all that great this year. There were three teams in the Big 10, Iowa, Illinois and Purdue, who had better athletes. That's something even Indiana fans agreed on during the season."

COLUMNS usually arouse the ire of the side being besmirched, but it takes a rare talent to make everybody mad.

As it turned out, the faith in Knight to negotiate his team through troubled waters in a clutch game was justified, although there were moments when it seemed Syracuse's superiority inside must surely overpower the Hoosiers.

The NCAA finale turned out to be an attention grabber right up until the end. Even the Mrs. was caught up and didn't make me switch over the Academy Awards until it was over.

NOW THE question is, what about these post-season conference tournaments?

Going into this one, you'll remember, the Big 10 was being criticized for its reluctance to negate its regular season race and join crowd. "The conference tournament is imperative in preparing a team for post-season tournament action. The Big 10's lack of success is proof."

Well, the Big 10 won it all and it was the league champion that got the job done.

As for Dean Smith, in all these years, I don't think I ever asked him if he was at Michie Stadium, that day in '47, when Oklahoma (Royal, Rapacz, Golding, Claude Arnold) played that Blanchard-Davis-Tucker Army team.

Riding up the Hudson on the Day Line, it was was expected that the boat trip would be the day's highlight.

Instead, it was overshadowed by a stirring football game. Army won, but had to come from behind to do it.

Battle of tummies, and how to win it

Cochran

Have you ever looked into a mirror and noticed that your tummy or hips were about to take control of your life? Or that your tummy had reached "belly" size and your hips had picked up saddle bags or pongs?

If so then the next thought was probably that some serious stomach or hip exercises were in order. Unfortunately, this concept of spot reduction is unworkable. It is nigh unto impossible to lose inches from the waist or hips by doing situps.

Spot reduction is an old, but erroneous concept. The basic idea was that if the stomach was big, then stomach exercises would make it smaller by toning the underlying abdominal muscles.

Somehow the muscles or exercises would then burn up the fat. Sure, situps tone the abdominals, but do very little to reduce the overlying fat tissue. The big belly or hip pongs are nothing more than the body's storage depot for excessive dietary fat.

Men and women store excessive fat in different places. The abdominal wall is the primary fat depot for men; whereas, the hips and thighs are the target zone for the ladies.

When an individual's weight creeps (or leaps) above normal, the stored energy (fat) is selectively deposited in these areas. Working the underlying muscle tissue has no mechanical effect on the fat tissue, nor does it burn fat off.

What will work are those things that will reduce total body fat percentage.

Total body fat percentage refers to that proportion of a person's weight that is composed of fat tissue. This figure varies with a number of factors, including sex and age.

Generally speaking, when percent body fat creeps above 25-30 percent, bizarre things such as bellies and pongs appear. To reduce percent body fat, a combination of proper diet and appropriate exercise is required.

We are what we eat. If large amounts of fatty foods are eaten, then those fats will likely be stored. On the other hand, if fat containing foods are eliminated from the diet, then the body will use or metabolize the stored fat from the depots. This fat reduction is accelerated by aerobic exercise.

Aerobic exercise, by definition, is exercise conducted in the aerobic phase of metabolism. Aerobic metabolism uses only FAT to power the body. This metabolic situation occurs generally when an individual exercises in such a fashion that his or her breathing stays within the 65-75 percent of maximum.

Metabolism beyond 75 per cent is anaerobic and uses only carbohydrates as a fuel source.

Should a person lose weight solely by dieting, then he or she will experience a net reduction of fat and muscle tissue. If dieting is accompanied by aerobic exercise and weight training, then muscle tissue is spared.

Indeed, if is toned and shaped. In fact, any exercise that uses the large muscle groups of the body helps to consume the extra fat. We call these "metabolic exercises."

Walking, treadmilling, exercise bicycling, and weight lifting are all good examples.

Don't let your body become a life support system for a big belly or oversized bottom. Get on a low fat diet and exercise. Not only will you be happier, but everyone else who sees you will be, too!

TV coaches eying Final Four for preps

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Television and prep sports officials are looking into a national Final Four for high school basketball teams.

Officials of CBS Sports and the National High School Athletic Coaches Association met at New Orleans during the collegiate Final Four to discuss a national high school showdown.

"Everything is preliminary and we're really only talking concept right now," said Carey McDonald, executive director of the coaches association. "But the people at CBS appear to be very receptive. They like the concept and that weekend (between the NCAA Final Four and Masters golf tournament) is a dead time for them.

Marv wouldn't trade for any other

By ED SCHUYLER JR.

NEW YORK (AP) — Marvelous Marvin Hagler wouldn't trade his title for any other in boxing.

"The middleweight division has a lot of reputation to it," Hagler said recently at his training camp at Palm Springs, Calif. "It's a good division."

"Even the name middleweight has a nice sound to it."

Middleweight champion has been a distinction held through the years by colorful and skilled fighters such as Stanley Ketchel, Marcel Cerdan, Sugar Ray Robinson, Jake LaMotta and Rocky Graziano.

Last week, LaMotta, Graziano and five other former 160-pound class champions met for a lunch of sliced steak peppered with memories and opinions about Hagler and his fight against former undisputed welterweight champion Sugar Ray Leonard April 6 in Las Vegas.

"I think Hagler would have done pretty well in our eras," said Paul Pender, who was champion in 1960-62 and twice outpointed the great Sugar Ray Robinson over 15 rounds.

"HE'S A small middleweight, but I think he would have done well," said Joey Giardello, who ruled the middleweights in 1963-65 and had 133 fights. "But he wouldn't have dominated. ... no way."

Hagler has been a champion since 1980. He hasn't lost a fight since 1976.

Pender picked Hagler to beat Leonard, while Giardello felt Leonard would win.

Only one of the other five former champions picked Leonard. That was Carmen Basilio, a former welterweight champion who won and lost the middleweight championship on split decisions against Robinson in 1957-58.

The others picking Hagler were LaMotta, Emile Griffith, Graziano and Vito Antuofermo.

ANTUOFERMO fought Hagler twice. He kept the title on a 15-round draw Nov. 30, 1979, then in the role of challenger he was stopped on cuts in the fifth round June 13, 1981.

Asked how he felt Leonard should fight Hagler, Antuofermo said, "Don't show up."

"But if he does show up, he's got to stick and move. I think Hagler has slowed down," he said.

Giardello thought Leonard can win by moving and counterpunching: "He's got to move. He can't stay there."

Basilio likes Leonard "because he's younger and has speed. He's got to move on him and box him."

If he were Hagler, Pender said, "I would try to wear Leonard down and knock him out."

"I would stay on top of Leonard," said Griffith, who was a five-time welterweight and middleweight champion from 1961 to 1968.

"Hagler's got to keep pressure on him," said LaMotta, the old Raging Bull.

LaMotta, who won the middleweight title from Cerdan in 1949 and lost it to Robinson in 1951, fought light heavyweights and heavyweights in a 106-bout career. Six of those fights were against Robinson when Sugar Ray was at the height of his powers. His one victory made LaMotta the first man to beat the first Sugar Ray as a pro.

Graziano, champion in 1947-48 and famed for two wars with Tony Zale, would fight Leonard the same way. "I'd like to knock him through a wall. ... Sugar Ray Leonard. I'd try to kill him."

As for how Leonard should fight Hagler, the Rock said, "Kill him."

BOCK

Boeheim was not backing down after the game. "If I made a mistake," he said, "I think I made it on the earlier (last-minute) free throw. I think we should have kept the guys back then. Maybe they wouldn't have gotten the transition basket (that cut Syracuse's lead to one point). We had the lead and we weren't worrying about scoring more points. We had enough points to win."
Not really, as things turned out.

Opening lead: Three of [illegible]

If we were to tell you that the fulfilling trick in declarer's slam contract came from the queen of clubs, you would, considering the date, be justified in being sceptical. But this is no April Fool's tale. Watch how the play unfolded.

South's decision go for slam is reasonable. He had a fit for his partner's suit, his diamond honors were superbly placed behind the overcall and he had a singleton in the unbid suit. All that remained after a diamond lead was for him to bring home his contract.

Obviously, West's diamond lead was a singleton. East confirmed that by making the discovery play of the jack, won by declarer's queen. A trump to the king brought the news of the 4-0 break. Declarer could do nothing better than run the queen of spades, then repeat the finesse. East correctly refused to cover.

Declarer reeled off four rounds of trumps to draw all West's fangs, then cashed ace of spades. That brought about this position:

♠ Q 3
♠ ♠
K 9
♣ A 10 ♠ K J 9 6
♠
6
A 10
♣ 7

When declarer led his last trump, East could not discard a diamond. Also, he saw that if he clung to the ace of clubs, he would be thrown in with that card and forced to lead away from his king of diamonds into declarer's A10 tenace. So he jettisoned the ace, but to no avail. Declarer led a club, and there was now no way to prevent dummy's queen from being the entry to the good spade.

Doobie Brothers to reunite for concert benefitting Vietnam veterans May 23

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Members of the defunct Doobie Brothers band are asking people to "Listen to the Music" one more time as the band reunites for a concert to benefit Vietnam veterans.

Twelve musicians who were members of the band at one time or another, including original lead singer Tommy Johnston, will perform May 23 at the Hollywood Bowl, spokeswoman Mary Moen said Tuesday.

The concert will mark the first time in five years that the Doobie Brothers have played together. Moen said the reunion was the idea of the band's original drummer, Keith Knudsen, and to help the Los Angeles-based Vietnam Veterans Aid Foundation.

"Through a series of meetings and talking, Keith realized there are issues for the Vietnam veteran that need to be addressed," she said. "It really sort of impressed Keith to get the entire band together."

ESCONDIDO, Calif. (AP) — The grandmother of deaf actress Marlee Matlin says she got goosebumps "the size of grapefruits" after watching her granddaughter accept the Oscar for best actress in the 59th Academy Awards.

Matlin

"It was unbelievable," Ann Lewin said Tuesday, adding that she let out a holler when Matlin's name was read. "Everybody must have heard me in the town of Escondido."

Lewin was among those thanked by Matlin via sign language on live television when Matlin became became the first hearing-impaired actress to win an Oscar. In Children of a Lesser God, the 21-year-old actress portrays an embittered former student of a school for the deaf who becomes the object of an unorthodox teacher's love.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actor-director Michael Landon says he has been unfairly linked to an alleged tax fraud scheme.

Landon

"My children had to listen to other children call their father a crook," Landon told a news conference Tuesday as he denied news reports that alleged he owes hundreds of thousands of dollars in back taxes and penalties.

The actor was linked to the March 25 federal grand jury indictment of three men in New York City on tax fraud charges for allegedly generating more than $350 million in phony tax-shelter deductions.

Landon said he did not invest in the scheme. He said he sold his interest in a business venture to a company with which one of the men was involved and that the company later defaulted on the note.

"I'm not looking to blow off steam," he said. "I'm asking that the press and the government officials alike take responsibility for what they report to the public."

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Home Box Office said it had rescheduled Tuesday night's episode of "The Hitchhiker" starring Dean Paul Martin because of his death in a plane crash 11 days ago.

The adult suspense drama will be broadcast in May, a company spokeswoman said, because of "the sensitivity of the issue."

"HBO felt, along with the show's director and writer, that because of the tragic death of Martin and the nature of the episode, it should be moved to another month out of deference to his family," a statement said.

Martin, 35, of West Los Angeles and weapons officer Ramon Ortiz, 39, of Las Vegas, Nev. were killed when their F-4 Phantom jet plunged into a mountainside about 10 minutes after takeoff from March Air Force Base on March 21.

The HBO publicist said Martin, the son of singer Dean Martin, played a high-powered salesman in "Secret Ingredient," one of the biweekly episodes of "The Hitchhiker."

She said the actor's role was that of a ladies' man who took advantage of people to get what he wanted. In the show's final scene, the character is killed in a hot tub by a group of witches.

Another episode of the series would be shown in place of "Secret Ingredients."

On Tuesday, up to 50 crew members returned to the steep slopes of Mount San Gorgonio in the San Bernardino National Forest to search for the two pilots' remains.

Private funeral services will be held Wednesday at Los Angeles National Cemetery for Martin. An Air Guard memorial service for both pilots has been tentatively set for 3 p.m. April 4 at March Air Force Base near Riverside.

The names of Martin and Ortiz will be added to a plaque dedicated to air crew members killed since the guard unit was activated in 1946.

Their jet was part of a group of three on a practice bombing run. It disappeared from radar shortly after the pilots were ordered to make a turn to avoid 11,502-foot Mount San Gorgonio.

CHEYENNE, Wyo. (AP) — A judge is considering whether to call rock star Bruce Springsteen to Wyoming to testify in a song copyright case.

Springsteen

U.S. District Judge Clarence Brimmer on Tuesday took under advisement an appeal of a federal magistrate's order that Springsteen and other plaintiffs — singer Ric Ocasek, Ackee Music Inc., and Van Halen Music — provide pretrial depositions.

The musicians' lawsuit accuses Wanda Hegglund, owner of the Plains Trading Post Bar in Douglas, of copyright infringement. It alleges that a band she hired played five of the musicians' songs without permission and seeks penalties of $250 to $10,000 for each of the five alleged infringements.

Hegglund's attorney, Don Sullivan, wants the musicians called to Wyoming and asked the judge to "sign an order that says: 'You may be 'the Boss,' but I'm the judge.'"

HONOLULU (AP) — Actor Roger Mosley says that keeping his nightclub open two more hours a night would be the difference between a loss or profit.

Mosley

Mosley, who plays helicopter pilot Theodore "T.C." Calvin on the CBS-TV series "Magnum, P.I.," is asking the Honolulu Liquor Commission for a cabaret license, which would allow his club to remain open until 4 a.m. Reni's now must close at 2 a.m.

The commission in February denied a similar request without a hearing but now says it will set a hearing on the new request.
