Schwarzkopf: Analyses 'useless'

AP Laserphoto

Gen. H. Norman Schwarzkopf

N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — Gen. H. Norman Schwarzkopf complained to Congress on Wednesday about the quality and timeliness of intelligence given his forces during the Persian Gulf war.

The general was especially critical of the analyses of intelligence provided to his staff by specialists in Washington on the Iraqi military, saying they had been "caveated, footnoted and watered down" to the point of being useless.

"There were so many disclaimers that by the time you got done reading many of the intelligence estimates you received, no matter what happened, they would have been right," he said. "And that's not helpful to the guy in the field."

Other analyses were so cautious that had the Pentagon relied on them to choose the right moment to attack, he said, "we would still be sitting over there waiting."

The general urged the intelligence agencies and the Pentagon to devise a single method of preparing analyses of data and photographs to prevent future wartime disputes over the meaning of intelligence information.

He also complained that field commanders were unable to get reconnaissance photographs of potential Iraqi military targets that were less than a day old. Having the most current photographs was important, he said, because pilots needed an exact rendering of the areas they planned to attack if their bombs were to be precisely aimed. And such scenes can rapidly change in battle, he said.

It was not clear whether the general's remarks were directed at the CIA, which coordinated the wartime intelligence effort, or the Defense Intelligence Agency

Early results: AIDS vaccine helps some

■ Approach vindicates pioneer Jonas Salk.

Associated Press

BOSTON — The encouraging early results reported for an experimental AIDS treatment are vindication for vaccine pioneer Jonas Salk, whose idea for this strategy was met with polite skepticism four years ago.

The approach uses a vaccine to boost the body's immune defenses after the AIDS virus already has become established, so it will be better armed to stop the insidious destruction of white blood cells. Traditionally, vaccines have been used solely to prevent an initial infection from occurring.

HOUSTON — Oil-well firefighter Red Adair predicts that persistent equipment and water shortages in Kuwait could keep the emirate's oil-well fires burning for five years.

Speaking to a U.S. Senate environmental task force, the Houston specialist in oil-well fires said statements by top Kuwaiti officials that the oil-well fires will be out within a year are "a bunch of malarkey."

"If we get through in the next four or five years, we'll be lucky, at the rate we're going," Adair said. "It's about time somebody over here started straighten-

Forget UFOs: It's Venus, Jupiter, Mars

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The bright planets Venus, Jupiter and Mars will appear to rendezvous in the evening sky for the next week, a rare spectacle that may trigger reports of UFO sightings.

Anyone on Earth who looks to the west during the few hours after sunset through June 21 will see the planets within 3 degrees of each other — roughly one-third the width of a fist held at arm's length against the sky.

The planets will be closest Monday evening, when they form a triangle only 1.8 degrees wide.

The last time they were so close, American colonists were arguing with King George about taxes.

Celestial event is called a massing of planets.

The best view will be Saturday evening, when the thin crescent moon will appear just to the left of the planets. From left to right in order of increasing brightness will be Mars, Jupiter and Venus.

"We don't get a chance to notice the sky very often any more. We've drowned it in artificial light. But these planets manage to shine through anyway and remind us there's a whole universe out there," said astronomer Edwin C. Krupp, director of Griffith Observatory in Los Angeles.

"It's fascinating to be able to look up into the sky and see other worlds," said Alan MacRobert, an associate editor at Sky & Telescope magazine. "We need to look up and see beyond our own little lives on our own little world now and then."

City surveys area's minority-hiring plans

By Brian Pearson

City officials said they hope results from an upcoming survey of large Midland businesses will provide an enlightening perspective on minority hiring.

City councilmen Tuesday approved paying a Midland College professor $5,000 to gather equal employment opportunity data from the city's 50 largest employers.

"It's to give us information to incorporate into our affirmative action plan," said David Hunter, city personnel director. "All we're looking for is statistical data from other companies."

A January 1990 survey conducted by the city shows that of the 79 administrative and managerial positions, only six, or 7.6 percent, were filled by non-whites. Five of the employees were Hispanic and one was black.

Six city management positions, or 7.6 percent, were

Staff Report

Today's forecast calls for partly cloudy skies with a high in the mid-90s and south to southwest winds at 10 to 20 mph and gusty, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Tonight will be partly cloudy with a low in the upper 60s.

Friday is expected to partly cloudy with a high in the mid-90s.

After an overnight low of 65, Wednesday's high was 96 compared with the record high for that date of 104 in 1947. The record low for today's date was 57 set in 1979.

STATE

Occasional showers and thunderstorms were spotted Wednesday across the state with sunshine reported in North Texas and cloudiness covering most other regions.

Partly cloudy skies were seen over West Texas as temperatures there ranged from 79 at the Guadalupe Pass to 95 in Wink.

Isolated thunderstorms developed in Northeast Texas. Skies were mostly sunny to partly cloudy over North Texas. Highs stayed in the upper 80s and mid 90s.

In South Texas, scattered showers and storms continued along the upper coastline as partly to mostly cloudy skies hovered over the rest of the region with 80-degree readings.

The forecast for South Texas includes more clouds and rain through today with lows in the 70s and 80s and highs in 80s, 90s and possibly the 100-degree mark.

In West Texas, partial cloudiness will continue through Friday, forecasters say, with isolated thunderstorms mainly in the Panhandle through Thursday. Lows predicted to be in the 50s-70s with highs pushing the 90-degree mark.

North Texas weather should remain the same through Friday, with evening thunderstorms and highs in the low to mid-90s, lows in the mid 70s.

NATION

Rain dampened much of the eastern half of the nation Wednesday and thunderstorms rumbled over the Northeast.

Golfball-size hail fell at Nedrow in northwestern New York state, and winds gusted to near 60 mph in Massena and Oswego County.

Nearly an inch and a half of rain fell at Nedrow in 15 minutes. Schools were closed in Oswego because of flooding caused by the heavy rain.

Rain showers and thunderstorms continued across New England, New York state, northern Pennsylvania, North Carolina, and parts of South Carolina, Georgia, Alabama. Tennessee, Kentucky, Missouri, Arkansas, Louisiana, Mississipi and the Texas Gulf Coast.

Showers and occasional thunderstorms were scattered over south-central Ohio, central Colorado, central Arizona across west-central New Mexico and western Washington state.

Rainfall during the 6 hours ending at 1 p.m. CDT included about 0.70 inches at Knoxville, Tenn., and 0.62 inches in Rochester, N.Y.

AIDS: Vaccine boosts immune system after infection

presented evidence that one such vaccine seemed to at least temporarily halt the loss of crucial white cells in people with AIDS infections.

Dr. Anthony S. Fauci, director of the National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases, credited Salk with the inspiration for the strategy.

"I am very pleased about this," Salk said in an interview. "It's always nice to see someone else pick up an idea and provide some verification that there is some merit to this. At beginning, it was believed, well, not worthy of any attention."

Salk's notion was to base his vaccine on a deactivated version of the AIDS virus, much like the polio vaccine he developed in the 1950s.

"Since I could not sell the idea to others at that time, I went on and pursued the idea on my own," Salk said.

Working with other researchers and Immune Products Ltd. of San Diego, Salk gave the vaccine first to chimps, then to people with advanced AIDS infections and finally to people in early stages of viral infection.

Dr. Clarence Gibbs of the National Institute of Neurological Communicative Disorders and Stroke, who conducted the chimp experiments, said the latest results are "absolutely" vindication for Salk's theory.

"I feel very good about it," Gibbs said Wednesday. "This confirms what we said four years ago."

The skepticism stemmed in part from puzzlement over why a vaccine should work when exposure to the virus itself fails to trigger the immune system to fight off the infection.

However, much of the doubt focused on concern about whether a treatment based on real virus could ever be totally safe. The Walter Reed researchers got around this by giving patients a vaccine containing just one viral protein — the one that makes up its outer coat — rather than the whole virus.

This vaccine, made through gene splicing by MicroGeneSys Inc. of Meriden, Conn., was tested on 30 volunteers. Over 10 months, levels of so-called T cells that are the virus' main target remained stable in the 19 people who initially responded to the vaccine. They fell 7 percent in those who failed to respond.

"I think it's very promising, particularly in terms of teaching us how the human body's immune system controls HIV," said Dr. Robert R. Redfield, who directed the study. "It obviously gains in intrigue because not only is it safe, but it appears to be associated with short-term stabilization " ing up what's going on."

WELLS: Firefighter echoes earlier complaints

Echoing earlier complaints, Adair said bureaucratic bungling in the emirate has slowed the flow of heavy equipment to his crews and delayed the construction of critical water lines.

In addition, much of the equipment that has arrived is second-rate, a result of cost-cutting and nit-picking by the officials purchasing the gear, he said.

"We're doing it Mickey Mouse now, and I have been upset quite a few times," Adair said. "I don't care what it costs. My men's lives are worth a hell of a lot more than that."

Adair said his company, working with two other Houston oil-well firefighting firms, has snuffed 157 of the 600 wells sabotaged by Saddam Hussein's troops as they fled Kuwait.

Though Kuwait said Tuesday it has begun producing oil for the first time since the end of the war, the emirate continues to lose $120 million a day in oil revenues as a result of the damaged wells.

Kuwait said Tuesday it has begun pumping 25,000 barrels per day from its least damaged fields and plans to more than quadruple that output by early August.

Kuwait National Petroleum Co. officials also said the emirate's biggest oil refinery, Mina al-Ahmadi, is expected to begin operating within two months. Before Iraq invaded Kuwait Aug. 2, the emirate exported 1.5 million barrels of oil per day. Its three major refineries had a capacity of about 700,000 barrels per day. Kuwaiti oil minister Hamoud Abdulla al-Raqba, in an interview with the Middle East daily New Dawn, said he expects most of the oil-well fires to be out by March.

But Adair and other Houston firefighters say that schedule is unrealistic.

They say all of the small fires are out. The wells still blazing either are too badly damaged or too big to cap with conventional technology, the experts say.

"Those old wells we're coming up against now are not one- or two-day jobs," said Joe Carpenter, a firefighter at Boots & Coots in Houston. "They are big rascals."

Carpenter said it may take two to three weeks just to prepare these wells for capping.

Even worse, Houston firefighters said most of the wells still on fire are surrounded by massive pools of crude.

The oil not only makes it difficult to drive equipment to the well site but also hides mines and booby traps that may have been left by the Iraqis.

Despite the problems, James H. Leabo of Wild Well Control, based in Spring, Texas, said Adair may be overestimating the time needed to cap the blazing wells.

Leabo said equipment is making its way into Kuwait, however slowly, and predicted all the fires in the wells will be out in 18 months.

Speaking to the same panel Tuesday, U.S. Environmental Protection Agency Administrator William Reilly said the health effects from the Kuwaiti fires so far have been less acute than most experts had predicted.

PLANETS: Spectacle may trigger reports of UFOs

skywatchers reporting a bright UFO with lights all around it hovering in the west," Astronomy magazine said in a news release from its office in Waukesha, Wis.

"It might generate UFO reports," said Philip J. Klass, who investigates and debunks UFO sightings for the Committee for the Scientific Investigation of Claims of the Paranormal.

"More than one out of every four UFO reports turns out to be a bright planet or star. Venus is the queen of the UFOs. Mars and Jupiter are sort of crown princesses," said Klass, a retired senior editor at Aviation Week & Space Technology magazine.

Krupp said he expects "to get a lot of calls asking, 'What are those bright objects?' especially on Saturday, when the moon joins the party."

The three planets only appear close because they lie along the same line of sight from Earth. Venus is now 63 million miles from Earth, Mars is 203 million miles away and Jupiter a distant 558 million miles, said Alan Dyer of Astronomy magazine.

An apparent grouping as tight as this month's is exceptionally rare, happening once every 120 years on average, said Griffith astronomer John Mosley. The last time these three planets were closer than they are now was Dec. 23, 1769, he said.

The three planets were almost as close on Feb. 10, 1951 (2.1 degrees) and Aug. 7, 1966 (2 degrees). They also will be 2 degrees apart on Nov. 17, 1995.

Mosley said the three planets will be similarly grouped in the years 2152 and 2196, but too close to the sun for easy viewing.

"You'll have to wait until Aug. 1, 2277, to actually see these three planets grouped more tightly than this June," he said.

filled by women, none of whom were black or Hispanic.

In comparison, the overall 908-member city work force was 27.6 percent Hispanic, 5.4 percent black and 66.6 percent female.

More recent statistics on the ethnic breakdown within the municipal ranks were unavailable, but Hunter said little has changed. There has been little turnover in the managerial areas, he said.

At-large Councilman J.D. Faircloth said the employment survey will not be used as a guideline to set minority-hiring quotas.

"I think we need to create a level playing field for everyone," Faircloth said. "I don't want to see us turn around and discriminate against white employees."

Hunter said the city has a nondiscrimination policy but no concerted strategy for hiring minorities.

Part of the new recruiting effort will include an annual department-by-department review of minority hiring, he said.

Jerry Jones, Midland College business studies chairman, will conduct the survey, with the results expected by August.

Last September, councilmen budgeted $23,000 for a minority-recruiting plan. The effort was to include statewide recruiting tours, computer software to keep up with minority applicants and the formation of a board to oversee the efforts.

City officials were supposed make recruiting visits to colleges and university around Texas.

Meanwhile, information on minority graduates interested in a career in municipal government was to be filed in computer banks. The potential applicants were to be tracked so they could be contacted when a job opens.

The city also was to advertise for minority applicants in the media and municipal trade magazines.

The city so far has spent about $11,000 of that money, including $5,000 for the employment survey, Hunter said.

The computer software has been purchased, he said, but no board has been created or recruiting tours taken.

About $6,000 has gone to computer equipment and advertisements for police and firefighter recruiting, Hunter said.

PRESIDENT: Daniel prepares to step into role

(From 1A)

"I will probably come on board the second week of August," Daniel said, noting that he will meet the MC staff and faculty during a three-week transition period that will culminate in retiring-President Jess Parrish's departure.

Daniel said his decision to accept the presidency was influenced by Midland College's "good leadership, strong community support and excellent reputation."

"I also had no idea of the beauty of the campus and the space. This is a 150-acre campus," Daniel said.

The incoming president characterized his management style is collaborative. "We work on top of the table," he said.

Daniel said MC's staff "should not fear nor be insecure about" the University of Texas of the Permian Basin's recent change to four-year status.

"Every occurrence is surrounded by opportunity," he said. "Midland College's quality will not be diminished. . . . We should see how (UTPB's status) should benefit the entire area.

"I have no real concern about what another institution may be doing," he added.

Midland College's financial crunch is echoed nationwide, Daniel said. "I believe there are 40 states facing shortfalls."

Daniel said he hoped to support Midland college by influencing the state Legislature. "The presidents' association also has a presence in Austin," he said.

Daniel said the college may have found its niche in the technical arena.

He said instructional programs should provide a healthy mix of literate and technical skills.

"For example, an auto mechanic may be faced with computers and manuals written at the 14th grade level," Daniel said. "Jobs are less labor-intensive and we don't have jobs where a student can drop out at 16 anymore."

Daniel said the role of the community college is to remain flexible and to adapt to the demands of providing programs for a "world-class work force."

Parrish said he has mixed feelings about resigning his post. "I've had a place to get up and go to for so many years," he said. "It gives me a queasy feeling to think about that first day of retirement. But I plan to keep busy with some professional things at the national level . . . and then there is golf."

Parrish said his years of service have made him possessive about the college. "It's my college and my faculty," he said. "But it is the greatest feeling in the world to know someone is going to take it and move forward with it."

Before his executive and administrative roles, Daniel said he spent about 12 years as a college president.

"Once I was in a role separate from students, faculty and the life of a campus — once I was in that other arena — I could see where my best interests were," he said.

Talks begin in Syria on fate of hostages; 2 may be released soon

BEIRUT, Lebanon (NYT) — Douglas Hogg, a minister in the British Foreign Office, began talks in Damascus with Syrian government leaders Wednesday about the fate of Western hostages, and a Tehran newspaper said one or two American captives would be released "very soon."

Hogg went to Syria after four days of discussions in Lebanon. Twelve Westerners missing in Lebanon are believed held by pro-Iranian Muslim Shiite fundamentalist factions.

He said he had been encouraged by the attitude of the Lebanese government, and that in Damascus, he would explore what more could be done by the Syrian authorities.

Hogg met with top Lebanese officials, including President Elias Hrawi and Prime Minister Omar Karami, but failed to see Shiite clerics known to influence the kidnappers.

Sheik Mohammed Hussein Fadlallah, a spokesman for the groups holding the captives, is in Iran.

Hogg said Sheik Abbas Musawi, secretary general of the Party of God, refused to meet with him.

The English-language Tehran Times, a newspaper with close ties to Iranian Foreign Minister Ali Akbar Velayati, said Wednesday that "intensive contacts now taking place in Beirut" will lead to the release of one or two American hostages "very soon."

Rafsanjani renews accusations; Iraq seeks pipeline reopening

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Iranian President Hashemi Rafsanjani on Wednesday renewed his country's accusations that Iraq plans to attack Shiite Muslims in its south. Iraq called the charges a "miserable plot."

Iraq's deputy prime minister, meanwhile, was quoted as asking Turkey to reopen a pipeline that carried Iraqi oil to a Turkish export terminal before it was shut down under a United Nations embargo against Baghdad.

Turkish Foreign Minister Ahmet Kurtcebe Alptemocin told reporters that Tariq Aziz made the plea, and was told that Turkey would reopen the pipeline when the U.N. lifts its embargo.

Turkey was a member of the allied coalition in the Persian Gulf War that ousted Iraqi forces from Kuwait. Aziz arrived earlier Wednesday for a two-day visit, the first to an allied country since the war.

Turkish President Turgut Ozal also told Aziz that the solution to Iraq's problems will come if it establishes democracy, according to presidential spokesman who spoke on condition of anonymity.

U.N. diplomats have said the trade embargo imposed after Iraq's invasion of Kuwait in August would not be lifted if Baghdad resumes repression of its Shiite and Kurdish minorities, who rebelled in the wake of the war.

The official Islamic Republic News Agency quoted Rafsanjani as saying the Iraqi troops were preparing "to massacre" the Shiite refugees and his country "cannot remain indifferent" to their fate.

Iran claims to be the guardian of the Shiite branch of Islam. Shiites make up 55 percent of Iraq's population of 17 million.

U.S. officials and Western reporters, however, have reported no unusual military activity in southern Iraq, where Iran says Saddam Hussein's army has pinned down 1 million refugees trying to flee to Iran.

U.S. officials have expressed skepticism that any major Iraqi assault in the south is imminent, although they have reported scattered Iraqi military activity. With the exception of a few clashes, no major conflicts have been reported in the south since March.

Iraqi Foreign Minister Ahmed Hussein, in turn, said the Iranian allegations were "a miserable plot," the official Iraqi news agency said Wednesday.

However, United Nations Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar, in Geneva, said the United Nations was "quite worried" about the alleged Iraqi preparations for an assault.

The secretary-general also said the United Nations would be prepared to establish humanitarian centers for the Shiites.

and the rest of the Pentagon's espionage apparatus, which provided most of the direct support to American forces in the Persian Gulf.

Some administration officials have said that discontent over the quality of intelligence on Iraq may have played a role in President Bush's decision last month to accept the retirement of William H. Webster as director of central intelligence.

Bush has proposed replacing Webster with Robert M. Gates, a career intelligence official who held senior posts at the CIA before moving to the White House as deputy national security adviser in 1989.

During the 1980s, Gates made major changes in both the operations and personnel of the CIA's analytical division, and analysts working there today are largely a product of that overhaul.

A CIA spokesman declined to comment on Schwarzkopf's remarks, but noted that President Bush last month rejected assertions that American intelligence had not performed well during the war. Bush called the agencies' work outstanding and said he had "no complaints whatsoever."

A spokesman for the Defense Intelligence Agency, Rick Oborn, did not return a telephone call Wednesday seeking comment on the Schwarzkopf remarks.

The comments on intelligence were virtually the only cutting words in a day of flowery tributes and patriotic celebrity for the general, who was making final visits to the House and Senate military affairs committees before his scheduled retirement from the Army in August.

Throngs of tourists and federal workers spilled out of congressional hearing rooms and lined up down the hallways, waiting to get a glimpse of the general, chief of the Pentagon's Central Command, seated alone at a wooden table in a starched Army-green dress uniform spangled with ribbons.

In his testimony, Schwarzkopf took pains to praise the overall efforts of intelligence agencies during the gulf conflict and the quality of the satellites, aircraft and eavesdropping equipment they used against Iraq. His complaint, he said, was not with the facts those systems produced, but with the way the information was later handled.

For example, the general appeared to confirm a report in February, discounted at the time by military and intelligence officials, that he sharply disagreed with Pentagon and CIA analysts about the amount of damage that allied air attacks had wrought on Iraq's army.

The report said the estimates of damage to Iraqi military targets made by Schwarzkopf's aides were three to four times greater than the estimates of CIA and DIA experts in photographic analysis.

The difference stemmed from the fact that the general's staff relied in part on reports from pilots, who tend to overstate damage, while Washington analysts discarded the pilots' reports.

It remains unclear which experts, if either, were correct. Schwarzkopf, who on Wednesday called the dispute a "major area of confusion," suggested that he felt his judgment should have prevailed.

In other remarks, Schwarzkopf said he favors at least a limited combat role for women in future wars, provided the individual military services can define those roles based on their own requirements, rather than on a concept of women's rights.

He said he personally does not believe that women should be allowed to conduct trench warfare, where great strength is required, but he left open the question of whether women could be pilots of jet fighters or attack helicopters.

He also rejected reports that he disagreed with the decision of Bush and the chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, Gen. Colin L. Powell, to end the ground war in Iraq after a few days.

He said he told Powell in a telephone conversation the day before the war was halted that he believed that the military objectives of the allied coalition had been achieved, but that "my plans are to continue the attack for probably one more day."

When Powell later instructed him to end the conflict in 12 hours, he said, he agreed, saying, "That's as good a time as any other."

U.S., Canada, Mexico launch free-trade pact negotiations

TORONTO (AP) — The United States, Canada and Mexico on Wednesday began negotiating a North American free trade agreement aimed at eliminating barriers to the flow of goods and services between their countries.

"We had a very useful, very worthwhile, productive session this morning," Canadian Trade Minister Michael Wilson told reporters after meeting with U.S. Trade Representative Carla Hills and Mexican Commerce Minister Jaime Serra Puche.

He said the three would next meet August 20 in Seattle. The negotiating sessions will rotate among the three countries. None of the officials would would speculate on how long the negotiations would last.

Between those meetings, he said, talks will continue on a lower level to sort out the myriad problems of forming a new market free of tariffs and other trade barriers.

Wilson said six working groups were formed to discuss market access, trade rules, services, investment, intellectual property and the settlement of disputes.

The total population of the three countries is 360 million, and their combined annual economic output is $6 trillion.

"We want to be open to the world. If we want to improve the competitiveness of the region, it is necessary to keep the region open to the rest of the world," said Serra, who joined Hills and Wilson.

Critics, however, contend that a North American free trade zone will make American and Canadian jobs flow southward to Mexico, where workers earn an average of $1.60 an hour.

"We recognize that there are lower wages in Mexico," said Wilson. "But we also recognize there are many things that enter into the competitiveness of a country."

Serra interjected that studies show a North American free trade agreement would create jobs in all three countries.

Hills added that, "Any (American) business that wants to move to Mexico today may do so. We have no mandate by law to keep investment at home."

Canada and the United States have had their own bilateral free trade agreement since January 1989. Opponents blame that agreement for the loss of 229,000 Canadian manufacturing jobs.

But the Canadian government and other proponents say that loss is due to the recession, high interest rates and the strength of the Canadian dollar.

The Canadian government says privileged access to the Mexican market would help the country.

Mexico's two-way trade with the United States is $53 billion a year. Canada's annual trade with the United States is $160 billion. But Canada's trade with Mexico is only $2.3 billion a year.

From the officials' comments, it did not appear that the first day of negotiations got into the stickiest issues.

Canada has been adamant, for example, that it will not reopen the U.S.-Canada agreement, although Ottawa says it is willing to improve it.

Washington is interested in an agreement to share Mexico's oil in the event of worldwide shortages. Serra said Mexico is constitutionally prevented from doing so.

Volcano erupts anew in series of colorful, dangerous explosions

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Tremendous explosions rocked Mount Pinatubo anew on Wednesday, shooting streams of ash and steam 15 miles high and sending molten rock down the steep mountain slopes.

Thousands of primitive Aeta tribesmen fled the lush, green slopes on buffaloes and ox-drawn carts after stones as big as a man's head rained down on them.

Only one death was reported from the eruptions, the largest at Pinatubo in more than 600 years. A Filipino serving in the U.S. Navy was killed Wednesday when his car skidded on an ash-slickened road north of the Subic Bay Naval Base and crashed into a bus. His name was withheld pending notification of kin.

Delfin Garcia of the Philippine Institute of Vulcanology and Seismology said the volcano was entering "an episode of big eruptions" that would continue indefinitely.

Assessing the damage was problematic — the institute said the volcano remained so dangerously active that nobody could get closer than 12 miles for a closer inspection.

About 10 miles to the east, hundreds of Americans fled Clark Air Base, which was evacuated by nearly 15,000 American military personnel and their families on Monday.

Some opponents of the U.S. military presence have speculated that the speedy evacuation was prompted by the possible existence of nuclear weapons on the base. The U.S. military, however, never confirms or denies the presence of such weapons.

More than 19,000 Filipinos have been evacuated from three provinces near the volcano's slopes.

At a refugee center in Olongapo, 35 miles southwest of the volcano, survivors told of the sky growing dark, then of hearing a tremendous explosion followed by a rain of ash.

"There was panic everywhere," said Manuel Romualdo. "Children were crying. We had to grab whatever we could."

Ash fell over about seven towns in Zambales province west of the crater and the San Miguel naval installation, which the United States turned over to the Philippines this year but where many Americans assigned to the Subic naval base still live.

Early returns suggest Yeltsin will win Russian presidency

MOSCOW (NYT) — Russians by the millions Wednesday turned out to elect the president of the most important Soviet republic and apparently jumped at the chance to make sure it wasn't a Communist.

Early unofficial returns indicated that ex-Communist Boris Yeltsin was ahead.

Pre-election opinion polls suggested that Yeltsin, who owes his broad popularity to his condemnation of Communists as over-privileged abusers of power who have led the country to ruin, was likely to be the first democratically elected president of Russia.

The focus was also on Leningrad Wednesday as citizens there voted on whether the city should return to its pre-Communist Revolution name of St. Petersburg.

By 1 a.m., Leningrad Election Commission official Yuri Lyovin said that 40 percent of the vote had been tallied and showed 54 percent in favor of renaming the city St. Petersburg. Even so, pollsters there expected the vote to be close.

Russia is the largest, richest, and most populous of the Soviet Union's 15 republics, or states.

Yeltsin currently is leader of the Russian republic by virtue of his selection by its parliament. But Wednesday's voting marked the republic's first direct presidential election.

If Yeltsin wins the presidency, Russians and even many of the other republics believe that the Kremlin's and the Communist Party's stranglehold on power will be significantly weakened. The states think that Yeltsin can force Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev to give them much greater control over their daily lives.

"This is a celebration of Russian sovereignty," Yeltsin said just after he voted in Moscow, his hands raised over his head like a winning prize fighter.

Yeltsin, a 60-year-old bearish Siberian, needs only a simple majority to win. Random election day polling by journalists indicated he was getting an average of 55 percent.

Yeltsin clearly felt confident enough Wednesday night that he talked of a planned post-victory trip to the United States.

Official preliminary results are expected to be revealed this morning, but a final count is not scheduled to be publicized until June 22.

Bush attacks Congress, details 'magic of America' plan

WASHINGTON (NYT) — In response to accusations that he lacks a domestic policy, President Bush on Wednesday night blamed Congress for failing to meet his legislative schedule and sketched his approach to unleashing the "magic of America" to cure serious social problems.

The philosophical underpinning of Bush's speech, delivered on the White House South Lawn but not broadcast live on television, was a significant departure from the views of his predecessor, Ronald Reagan, as Bush called for a synthesis of Reagan-era economics with government and community-based social action.

He said both the unfettered market policies of Reagan and the "bigger government was better government" philosophy of President Jimmy Carter had been inadequate. But he suggested elements of each could be combined with his brand of Reagan's voluntarism to produce "an America whole and good."

'There is a better way, one that combines our efforts. . . . This is the only way to an America whole and good.'

— President Bush

Bush criticized Congress as blocking what he said were his efforts to "tackle the urgent problems on the home front."

The speech offered no new programs to back Bush's vision beyond a restatement of the modest domestic proposals he has already given to Congress.

Instead, Bush said he was setting forth his philosophy of "the shared strengths and promise of America," which he said did not have to settle for a society in which "there must always be those who are left behind."

In an important passage, Bush paid tribute to the economic boom of the 1980s. But he said it had left the nation with intractable social problems.

"We began a decade of exceptional economic growth and created 20 million new jobs," he said. "Yet many of our streets are still not safe, our schools have lost their edge and millions still trudge the path of poverty. There is more to be done and the marketplace alone can't solve all our problems."

Bush stated his idea like this:

"There is a better way, one that combines our efforts — those of a government properly defined, the marketplace properly understood and service to others properly engaged. This is the only way to an America whole and good."

With that last phrase, Bush clearly seemed to be reaching for a slogan that he can carry into the 1992 Presidential election, in which Democrats are sure to strike at his most vulnerable point: domestic issues.

Baker warns China against arms sales

WASHINGTON (NYT) — Secretary of State James A. Baker III warned China on Wednesday that there would be "profound consequences" for Chinese-American relations if Beijing sold newly developed ballistic missiles to Syria and Pakistan.

China's arms exports have become a matter of controversy as Congress considers President Bush's proposal to renew Beijing's preferential trade status.

Baker said the United States had no "evidence or any indication" that China had actually shipped surface-to-surface missiles to Syria, despite a recent press report suggesting that a deal was near completion.

He said the Bush administration had also cautioned Beijing against sending sophisticated new missiles to Pakistan, asserting that this "would constitute grave threats to the region and could have bilateral consequences." Baker did not elaborate further.

A group of Republican and Democratic senators is seeking concessions from the administration in exchange for legislative support for President Bush's decision to renew trade privileges for China for another year.

The White House and Congress are bitterly divided over how to handle relations with China. Many Republican and Democratic lawmakers are concerned that Bush has reacted too mildly to Beijing's crackdown on the democracy movement two years ago.

Bush prevailed last year in extending trade privileges to China, but he faces stronger opposition this year in both the House and the Senate. The renewal of China's trade status has become one of the most contentious foreign policy and trade issues facing Congress this summer.

At a meeting on Wednesday morning with Baker and Brent Scowcroft, the national security adviser, Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan., presented a proposed letter to Bush that was drafted by Sen. Max S. Baucus and co-signed by three other Democratic senators.

The letter calls for five concessions from the administration, a participant in the negotiations between the White House and Congress said. The biggest concession would be for the United States to end its opposition to Taiwan's immediate entry into the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade.

Such a move would infuriate China, Deputy Secretary of State Lawrence S. Eagleburger told a House panel on Wednesday.

The letter also suggests that the administration take legal steps to fight China's import barriers, insure that Chinese products produced with prison labor are kept out of the U.S. market, block loans to China by multilateral agencies until the country's human rights record improves, and enter negotiations to curb the spread of ballistic missiles in the Third World.

"My understanding is they are willing to make virtually all the concessions I've asked for in my letter," Baucus, the chairman of the Senate's International Trade Subcommittee, said in an interview on Wednesday.

Baucus said he had not decided whether he would support the renewal of China's so-called "most-favored-nation" status if the administration refused to grant the concessions.

A congressional resolution canceling the renewal of China's trade privileges is considered likely. To sustain a presidential veto of such a resolution, Bush would need the votes of nearly a dozen Democratic senators led by Baucus who strongly support free trade but are troubled by China's human rights record.

Companies halt Osprey testing

ESSINGTON, Pa. (AP) — Flight testing of an experimental airplane that can hover like a helicopter was temporarily halted because one of five prototypes crashed on its maiden flight, an official said Wednesday.

"The aircraft haven't been grounded (permanently), but we won't resume flying until we know more," Boeing Helicopters president Timothy Fehr said at a news conference.

A tilt-rotor V22 Osprey aircraft crashed Tuesday at the New Castle County Airport in Delaware about three minutes into its first flight, while it hovered about 15 feet off the ground.

The Osprey is a joint $1.8 billion program of Boeing Helicopters and Bell Helicopter Textron of Fort Worth, Texas. The first was tested in December, 1989; none has crashed before. The tilt-rotor aircraft blends a helicopter's hovering ability with a fixed-wing airplane's high-flying and cruising attributes.

Congress last week authorized an additional $900 million for the program over the objections of the Defense Department, which wanted to scrap the project.

Pro-choice forces score wins on House foreign aid bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — Pro-choice forces won by substantial margins in the House Wednesday in abortion battles fought on a foreign aid bill.

Lawmakers voted 234 to 188 to preserve $20 million in the bill for the United Nations Population Fund, an agency which supports family planning programs in more than 140 countries worldwide.

The agency has been a perennial target of those opposed to abortion because it operates in China, which seeks to enforce a strict one-child-per-family policy.

"I can't think of a worse human rights abuse" than Beijing's use of forced abortions, said Rep. Henry Hyde, R-Ill. But Hyde and Rep. Chris Smith, R-N.J., failed in an attempt to eliminate the money from the bill.

President Bush has vowed to veto the measure if the money for the U.N. agency remains.

A short time later the House voted by a narrower margin — 222-200 — to overturn a seven-year administration ban on support for overseas agencies that counsel or promote abortion as a family planning method.

The two votes represented a gain for abortion rights forces since a victory three weeks ago. Then, lawmakers voted 220-208 to permit military personnel to have abortions at their own expense at military bases overseas.

"This is a step in the right direction toward ensuring that women throughout the world have access to the full range of reproductive health care options," said Kate Michelman of the National Abortion Rights Action League.

And Dan Weintraub, vice president for international programs of Planned Parenthood, attributed the win in part to a scare following the Supreme Court's ruling three weeks ago that federally funded family planning clinics in the United States may be barred from giving out abortion information.

"The momentum clearly is with reproductive rights organizations," he said, adding that Wednesday's votes are good indicators of sentiment on upcoming legislation to overturn the high court ruling.

The action came as the House worked for a second day on a $25.3 billion foreign aid bill for the two fiscal years beginning Oct. 1. Final enactment of the bill was far from assured.

The overall bill includes a moratorium on U.S. sales of conventional weaponry, including missiles, helicopters, tanks and jets, to countries in the Middle East. The moratorium could be lifted if other major suppliers begin selling armaments in the region.

It specifically bars military sales to Kuwait unless the president certifies that the Kuwaiti government has halted arbitrary arrests and torture, has instituted judicial reforms and has moved toward giving women the right to vote.

And to underscore their seriousness about arms control, Foreign Affairs Committee Chairman Dante Fascell, D-Fla., and others introduced a resolution Wednesday disapproving the administration's proposed sale of 64 Apache attack helicopters to the United Arab Emirates.

The measure also includes authority for spending on economic, development and military aid to dozens of friendly countries around the world.

As they worked through a long list of amendments, lawmakers also voted 252-151 to preserve in the law a ban on aid to Pakistan unless the president certifies that country has not developed a nuclear weapon.

The amendment would also authorize county education districts to hold elections to exempt from ad valorem taxation not less than $3,000 of the market value of the residence homestead of a disabled person or a person sixty-five years of age or older. Finally, the amendment would authorize elections in county education districts for the taxation of certain tangible personal property exempted from ad valorem taxation by the legislature.

The proposed amendment will appear on the ballot as follows:

"The constitutional amendment to allow the voters of a county education district to adopt certain exemptions from the district's ad valorem taxation for residence homesteads and to provide for the taxation of certain tangible personal property."

PROPOSITION NO. 2 ON THE BALLOT

Senate Joint Resolution 5 proposes a constitutional amendment that would allow the legislature to pass general laws authorizing Texas Higher Education Coordinating Board or its successor to issue and sell up to $300 million of general obligation bonds to finance educational loans to students. The maximum net effective interest rate to be borne by the bonds would be set by law. The amendment would also authorize the legislature to provide for the investment of bond proceeds and to establish an interest and sinking fund to pay the bonds and provide for the investment of such fund. Bonds authorized under this amendment would be paid from the first money coming into the treasury in each fiscal year that is not otherwise appropriated by the constitution, less any amount in an interest and sinking fund established at the end of the preceding year that is pledged to the payment of the bonds or interest.

The proposed amendment will appear on the ballot as follows:

"The constitutional amendment providing for the issuance of general obligation bonds to provide educational loans to students."

Lamesa project clears a hurdle

The ribbon-cutting ceremony held Tuesday along a bridge on Lamesa Road marked the culmination of an important project for the community of Midland. In one respect, it marked an end; in another, a beginning.

The Lamesa Road project has been on the mind of community leaders for years and in the construction phase since mid-1988, the eventual object to revitalize business activity on the city's east and south sides along the thoroughfare.

Numerous individuals could be cited who were instrumental to the successful completion of the project, but let it be enough to cite specifically those responsible for "carrying the ball" on this project including the Eastside Development Task Force, the Midland Chamber of Commerce, Midland Hispanic Chamber of Commerce, Midland Chamber of Black Entrepreneurs, the City of Midland, the State Department of Highways & Public Transportation, Midland Economic Development Corp. and others.

Keep Midland Beautiful also should be mentioned for the beautification work that will soon be carried out along the route.

Of course, the overall project is far from over and will be ongoing for several more years. Revitalization projects for any part of a city the size of Midland are necessarily involved and time-consuming, but the payoff is expected to be worth the effort.

The project won't actually be "completed" until all the construction work is finished and businesses begin to see the results through increased activity. The point, of course, is that businessmen along Lamesa Road can revitalize that part of town and the whole city will reap the benefits in the form of increase business activity. That will take time, of course.

For now, the refurbished road has been reopened to traffic and that is a big step in the right direction. Through the diligent efforts of all the concerned and involved individuals the economic payoff will be developed over the coming months and years.

The first — and most extensive — hurdle has been cleared. Midland has reason to be proud!

ANOTHER VIEW

Helping the Soviets could be cheaper

The big question President Bush has to decide is, should the United States help bail out the Soviet Union?

Bush won't decide that question all by himself, of course. Congress will be in on the decision. So, too, the American people. Do we want to help out this longtime military and ideological enemy which has clearly fallen on hard times?

Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev talked . . . about Western nations providing aid on the order of $100 billion. But other observers think that figure is too low.

To help or not depends on a number of issues. How the U.S. economy is doing, for example. At the moment, our federal debt and the annual deficit that won't go away inhibit our ability to provide financial aid to the Soviet Union. We're still borrowing from abroad hundreds of billions of dollars to fund our annual deficit.

Also, whether we should help depends a great deal on what the Soviet Union does. Gorbachev deserves high marks for opening up the Soviet society politically. It is a much freer society than ever before. But he has accomplished relatively little in reforming the old state-run communist economy.

Whatever help the United States provides should depend on the continuation of political and economic changes that move the Soviets toward a free, market-oriented economy and away from the failed policies of the past.

In the final analysis, however, Bush should think of the huge amounts of money spent during the Cold War by both sides for weapons of war and intelligence gathering and propaganda. . . . The winding down of the Cold War has made such vast spending unnecessary in the future.

For a relatively small sum compared to the cost of the Cold War, Western nations can guide and help move the old Russian Empire toward free enterprise and away from the slavery of communism and Russian czardom.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Thursday, June 13, the 164th day of 1991. There are 201 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

Twenty-five years ago, on June 13, 1966, the U.S. Supreme Court issued its landmark "Miranda vs. Arizona" decision, ruling criminal suspects had to be informed of their constitutional rights prior to questioning by police.

On this date:

In 1886, King Ludwig II of Bavaria drowned in Lake Starnberg.

In 1888, Congress created the Department of Labor.

In 1896, the Yukon Territory of Canada was organized.

In 1900, China's Boxer Rebellion against foreigners and Chinese Christians turned violent.

In 1927, a ticker-tape parade welcomed aviation hero Charles Lindbergh to New York City.

In 1944, Germany began launching flying-bomb attacks against Britain during World War II.

In 1967, President Lyndon B. Johnson nominated Solicitor-General Thurgood Marshall to become the first black justice on the U.S. Supreme Court.

One year ago: Secretary of State James A. Baker III, testifying before the House Foreign Affairs Committee, urged Israel to accept a U.S. plan for peace talks (Baker gave out the telephone number for the White House switchboard, telling the Israelis publicly, "When you're serious about this, call us.").

Today's Birthdays: Actor Richard Thomas is 40. Actress Ally Sheedy is 29. Tennis player Bettina Bunge is 28.

Thought for Today: "Life is a very sad piece of buffoonery, because we have . . . the need to fool ourselves continuously by the spontaneous creation of a reality . . . which, from time to time, reveals itself to be vain and illusory." — Luigi Pirandello, Italian dramatist (1867-1936).

Belgium must examine arms trade stand

WASHINGTON — Weapons have become to Brussels what cars are to Detroit.

The capital of Belgium has long been considered the small-arms capital of Europe. Arms dealers make transactions in the back rooms of bars. Shotguns with five-digit price tags hang in prestigious gun shops. Every class of people from drug smugglers to African tribesmen have held Belgian-made weapons in their hands.

Anderson

But all of that is changing. Brussels is already the home of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization. Now it will add to its responsibilities as the headquarters of the unified European Community. That makes Brussels the de facto economic and political capital of Europe, and it's time for the Belgian government to set a better example.

As the European nations move toward a unified economy, they are trying to uniformly restrict the routes through which weapons and lethal chemicals get to Third World nations such as Iraq and Libya.

The new conscience comes partly as a result of the Persian Gulf War. Some European nations, particularly Germany, are still blushing from the revelation that it was their technology and supplies that helped Saddam Hussein build his chemical weapons arsenal. The airing of that dirty laundry has caused a backlash in Washington, where Rep. Pete Stark, D-Calif., introduced a bill aimed at imposing trade sanctions against any corporation selling the makings of weapons to Iraq, Syria or other terrorist nations.

In Brussels, our associate Scott Sleek found evidence that the war has sparked some soul searching among Belgians. What Belgians find when they search their souls, and when they search the record, is not pretty. Deals for the export of Belgian weapons always had to meet government approval, but the permits were issued without much scrutiny. Weapons from Brussels often found their way into the black market where terrorists could get their hands on them. And Belgian brokers made a name for themselves as excellent middlemen on three-party arms deals, too.

With that record, Belgium oddly hesitated when the U.S. allies in the war asked Belgium to supply weaponry to them. In December, the British government went shopping for Belgian arms, but ran up against hesitation from the Belgian government. While the Belgians debated whether or not they should get involved in the war, the offended Britons went elsewhere for their supplies.

The Belgian peace movement that emerged during the war is part of the impetus behind the change of heart Belgians are now experiencing on weaponry in general.

Convincing other European countries to do the same soul searching may be difficult. Despite a big glut in the weapons market, some countries still count on the arms business to keep their economies afloat. Czechoslovakia, for example, is being encouraged by some Western nations to get out of the tank business, but that would be like telling France to get out of the wine business. Western nations have offered to help the Czechs convert from a defense-based economy to a consumer economy, but it is easier said than done.

President Vaclav Havel told us in an earlier interview that he wanted to get out of that business, but his country can't afford to right now. Instead of closing down the weapons trade, Havel has slowed it down. The slowdown was probably inevitable anyway, with or without Havel's direction. The Czech weaponry uses Soviet designs, which were declining in popularity even before Iraq exposed the flaws of those weapons in the Gulf War.

MINI-EDITORIAL — Commerce Secretary Robert Mosbacher has further advanced the image of the United States being bought and paid for by the Kuwaiti government. There is a lingering unease in this country that Kuwait hired the U.S. military to do its dirty work. Mosbacher didn't help to put that thought to rest when he allowed the Kuwaiti government to pay his expenses, and those of his entourage on a trip to Kuwait to survey the damages done by the war. On the same trip, the expenses of 12 members of Congress were paid by an American company that is negotiating to do business with Kuwait. The federal treasury is strapped, but not so strapped that it can't cover a necessary trip.

Willie's not enthusiastic presidential hopeful

A distinguished delegation of Republicans took a trip to the Maryland Penitentiary last week to see convicted murderer Willie Horton.

"Willie," the leader said, "we want you to run again in 1992."

Buchwald

Horton scowled, "I'm not running again. I had it with presidential politics in 1988. Politicians are a bunch of lying crooks."

One of the delegates said, "Willie, we're not asking you to do it for yourself — we're asking you to do it for your country. The President needs you."

"That's what you told me the last time around. You promised that if I became the campaign issue you'd make me Chief of Protocol or at least Ambassador to Moscow. Instead, I wound up in a federal cooler doing hard time."

Another delegate said, "Somebody in the campaign office goofed, but we'll make it up to you this year. How would you like to be the President's Chief of Staff?"

"What does it pay?"

"A substantial amount of money plus free air transportation to the ski resort of your choice."

"What do I have to do?" Willie asked.

"Two or three TV commercials telling the American voter how much you support the policies of the Democratic Party. When the time comes, we will play them on every TV station in the country and you'll become a household name."

"I AM a household name now," Willie yelled.

"But after this election you'll be bigger than Gen. Schwarzkopf. Willie, you owe it to the Republicans to speak up for the Democrats."

"How do I leave the penitentiary?"

"We'll give you a weekend furlough. If all goes well, we'll have you back safe and sound by Monday."

"I don't know if I want to run again," Willie said. "Presidential politics is such a dirty business."

"Why do you say that?" the leader of the delegation asked.

"The press is always invading people's privacy. In 1988 they told the whole world everything about my personal life. Another presidential campaign could hurt my reputation."

"Willie, the party owes you a lot. George Bush might have failed to beat Michael Dukakis if it hadn't been for you. Then there would never have been a Desert Storm. Don't you feel proud that you were part of all of it?"

"I never was for Dukakis," Willie admitted.

"But you people refused to say it."

"Willie, you're facing one 85-year sentence and two life sentences. It isn't going to hurt you to be part of the '92 election. We can't promise, but we wouldn't be surprised if another seat opens up on the Supreme Court."

Willie shook his head, "I don't like sitting in one place for too long."

"So what do you say, Willie? Are you going to march with a GOP banner in '92 or not?"

"Okay, as long as you don't make it a quota issue."

GEORGE WILL

Gorbachev is misunderstood and overrated

WASHINGTON — It was appropriate that when the Nobel Peace Prize was awarded to the only significant authoritarian ruler remaining in Europe, his acceptance speech resembled a blackmail note: Give me money or you'll be sorry. Sorry, Gorbachev says, because he can't be responsible for the ugly consequences of continuing collapse.

Will

What is he responsible for? He says he deplores his government's violence in the Baltics and other nationalities' disputes. He says he deplores his government's unrelenting investment of 25 percent of GNP in militarism.

Some Americans regard Gorbachev's aid request as an invitation to a whopping buy-out. We will buy the Soviet Union out of statism. But how? By giving the Soviet state money?

Gorbachev, who has vowed to preserve "the socialist choice made in 1917," who still sends huge subsidies to the only totalitarian regime in the Western Hemisphere, and whose power, such as it is, is based on the Communist Party's privileged elite and the security forces — this man makes an unsympathetic Oliver Twist, proffering his bowl for more porridge.

For six years now the two great questions of world politics have been: What sort of man is Gorbachev? And will the nomenklatura — the privileged three million who run and benefit from the Soviet system — be the first ruling class in history to liquidate itself for altruistic reasons? The answers are clear.

Gorbachev is the most misunderstood man of this half-century, and the most overrated. James Billington, historian and Librarian of Congress, believes that Gorbachev "never had a clear program, and events have long since moved far beyond anything he intended, expected or can control." Gorbachev, says Billington, "is a pure child of this nomenklatura" that is successful only at perpetuating itself.

The Soviet Union's democratic forces, struggling against suffocating statism — against Gorbachev's Leninist base in the nomenklatura — look toward America's example as a continent-wide, multicultural nation. There is little we can do to influence events, but the least we can do is not encourage Gorbachev to think that the old game will go on, our government giving him spurious legitimacy by brokering the future with him and his nomenklatura, over the heads of the people.

It is quaint to wish the Moscow Embassy occupied by Billington, or historian Richard Pipes — someone fluent in the language and familiar with the tapestry of history against which the future is fast unfolding. But sending Robert Strauss to Moscow is a bad idea because it betokens a bad idea that will confirm the Soviet elite in its bad idea.

The appointment betokens the Bush administration's idea that foreign relations is a purely "practical" business to be conducted by "practical" people whose practicality is proven by their preference for reducing relations between nations to deals between governments. Strauss, widely experienced and public-spirited, is a man for all seasons and many roles, but not his new one.

The New York Times headline on the story of his nomination — "The Ultimate Capitalist" — came from a friend's description of him: "Strauss is the ultimate capitalist if there ever was one. Just look at his client list, a page and a half of the Fortune 500 companies. He'll teach 'em (the Soviets) about making money."

Oh? In a healthy society, you make money by making things, not by having "client lists." The idea that Strauss is the "ultimate capitalist" is ludicrous, given the lives of Rockefeller, Astor, Carnegie, Harriman, Ford, Luce (he founded Fortune and other magazines) and, among today's capitalists, Gates of Microsoft, Packard of Hewlett-Packard, Wexner of The Limited, Jobs of Apple. Such people made or make things — railroads, steel, cars, computers — not just deals. Such people do not have "client lists," they have factories and payrolls and inventories, and they hire lawyers like Strauss.

What Strauss and legions of lawyers like him do is not dishonorable. Today state power permeates society, supplementing and supplanting market forces in the allocation of wealth and opportunity. Naturally, private interests hire political lawyers because influencing government decisions has become an important arena of competition. But it is passing strange to think that this aspect of America, rather than its entrepreneurial, producing aspect, is what we should present to the Soviet Union.

■ GOP senators seek rights compromise

WASHINGTON — Senate Republicans who proposed a compromise civil rights bill last week said that they hoped that quiet discussions with administration officials and Senate Democrats would succeed in breaking the legislative impasse over the measure.

For the second day in a row, Justice Department official met Wednesday with aides to Sen. John C. Danforth of Missouri and eight other moderate Republicans who have sought to broker a civil rights agreement. The group has been reviewing the Danforth package line by line.

In interviews on Wednesday, participants made it clear that no commitments of support for the Danforth package had been made. In the meantime, senators of many political perspectives have been talking with one another, looking for common ground.

The Danforth package was put forth in an effort to enact legislation that would undo Supreme Court rulings in 1989 that have made it harder to win job discrimination lawsuits. The package's sponsors are seeking support from senators who favor the approach taken in the bill that was passed by the House last week. They are also seeking to enlist the support of senators who contend the House measure will increase the likelihood that employers will lose control over legitimate business decisions and end up in court defending their hiring practices. Opponents include the White House.

■ DOE to reopen Rocky Flats plant

WASHINGTON — The Energy Department plans to resume limited operations at Colorado's Rocky Flats atomic weapons plant, even though it may not be in strict compliance with safety directives, officials said Wednesday.

The officials said a laboratory building at the plant near Denver will be opened in September as part of a phased-in resumption of weapons production. The plant, which produces plutonium triggers, has been shut down since 1989.

Safety problems led to the shutdown, and authorities said the plant still many not be in strict compliance with as many as 80 safety directives.

Energy Secretary James Watkins has promised to resume production only under strict safety guidelines. Lawmakers, however, have been complaining that the department is rushing needlessly to reopen Rocky Flats and resume plutonium production at South Carolina's Savannah River weapons complex.

■ Illness delays Earth First! trial

PRESCOTT, Ariz. — Jury selection in the trial of five radical environmentalists was interrupted Wednesday because one of the defendants was too ill to appear in court.

Mark Davis of Prescott, accused of conspiring to sabotage nuclear installations, had a high fever and was suffering from nausea and dehydration, according to his attorney, Wellborn Jack Jr.

U.S. District Judge Robert Broomfield said Davis was seeing a doctor. Broomfield later postponed further proceedings until Friday.

Broomfield had expected opening statements to begin Wednesday. No jurors have been selected since questioning began Monday.

The trial is expected to last three months.

Davis and four other current or former members of the militant Earth First! group are accused of plotting to sabotage nuclear installations in Arizona, California and Colorado.

All except David Foreman of Tucson, a co-founder of Earth First! who left the group last summer, also are accused of sawing through power poles, damaging ski lifts and attempting to topple power lines.

The other defendants are Margaret "Peg" Millett, Marc Baker and Ilse Asplund, all of Prescott.

Liddy: Plumbers plotted columnist's death

NEW YORK (AP) — In their first face-to-face meeting, G. Gordon Liddy, mastermind of the bungled Watergate burglary, told columnist Jack Anderson that the president's men vetoed plans to silence the newsman.

"The rationale was to come up with a method of silencing you through killing you," Liddy tells Anderson on "The Real Story," a news show to be shown tonight on cable TV's CNBC.

Liddy, these days a novelist, lecturer and sometime TV actor on the syndicated action drama "Super Force," was counsel to the Committee to Re-elect the President in 1972 when GOP-hired burglars broke into Democratic National Headquarters offices in Washington's Watergate complex.

Liddy, who'd planned the break-in by the "plumbers" unit, said he and other political operatives had a "full discussion" on how to silence Anderson.

"Given their record, I was in no danger," said Anderson, a syndicated columnist who'd been a thorn in the administration's side long before Watergate.

One suggestion, Liddy said, was to dose Anderson with LSD, but another operative, a former CIA officer, "shot that down saying the agency didn't find it reliable."

"Finally they came up with striking your car on a turn and making it crash and burn," Liddy continued. "Something like that at any rate. It was written up in a memo and sent to the White House."

The White House was unambiguous about the idea, Liddy said.

"They said no. It was too severe a sanction," Liddy told Anderson in the interview, their first face-to-face meeting. "Let him alone and no one does things without orders. No one proceeded against you. Thus you and I are sitting here corresponding and chit-chatting, the war being over."

"I found him to be quite mellowed," Anderson said. " He was actually cordial.

"Actually, I'd known about it at the time, said Anderson, who has written about Washington politics for more than four decades.

Anderson said he believes plumber E. Howard Hunt, who reported to President Nixon's then-special counsel Chuck Colson, carried the "liquidation order" to Liddy.

"Who gave it to Hunt is still a mystery," Anderson said, adding that Colson has denied originating it.

"According to Liddy's version, the reason for my liquidation was that my stories of classified documents had embarrassed the government, endangered national security and the life of an informant in the Soviet Union," Anderson said.

Albania's first multiparty government since '44 takes power

TIRANA, Albania (AP) — The long-dominant Communists began sharing power in this impoverished Balkan nation on Wednesday with the installation of the country's first multiparty government in 47 years.

Presenting the new government to parliament, Premier Ylli Bufi said the general strike that propelled the new government into office had escalated the country's economic crisis to "catastrophic proportions."

The new 24-member Cabinet, which is half made up of Communists, is to run this nation of 3.2 million people until parliamentary elections in May.

Meanwhile, two Albanian refugees were killed and four others were wounded after Albanian coastal patrols shot at a fishing boat carrying the refugees to Italy, witnesses and officials said Wednesday.

Port officials in Otranto, Italy said some of the 30 Albanians aboard the Delvina told them of the incident. An Albanian Interior Ministry spokesman, also speaking on condition of anonymity, confirmed the incident but did not know of casualties.

The Delvina was among a fleet of 50 fishing boats trying to make the 35-mile trip across the Adriatic Sea. Two Italian ferry boats later picked up 317 Albanians from the flimsy boats and brought them to the Italian port of Ancona.

Tens of thousands of Albanians disillusioned with the country's poverty and isolation have fled abroad in recent months, despite recent reforms initiated by the Communists who have ruled the country since 1944.

In December, the Communists permitted the existence of opposition parties, then in March held the first multiparty elections in Albania since the 1920s.

But despite winning two-thirds of the 250 parliamentary seats, the party failed to gain control of Albania's cities, and found themselves unable to cope with the general strike called May 16. As a result, Communist premier Fatos Nano resigned.

Under the agreement reached by Communist and opposition negotiators, the new Cabinet ministers must drop their party affiliations and cease all party activity while serving in the government.

In parliament, Bufi said the country's economic crisis had "assumed catastrophic proportions" after the strike.

Already burdened with a $350 million foreign debt and a $320 million budget deficit, Bufi said the state lost at least $20 million during the strike, which paralyzed exports and imports, transport and agricultural production.

"Food reserves in things such as sugar or oil can now be counted in days," Bufi said.

The main opposition party, the Democratic Party, nominated seven Cabinet members. One of its leaders, economist Gramoz Pashko, became first deputy premier and minister of the economy.

His economist brother-in-law, Democrat Genc Ruli, will be minister of finance, while Nano runs foreign trade.

A top priority will be foreign aid, said Bufi.

He stressed improving ties with neighboring Italy, whose Foreign Minister Gianni de Michelis visits Tirana Thursday. German Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher visits on Saturday.

The other five Cabinet portfolios are shared among the Republican, Social Democrat and Agrarian parties — opposition groups that failed to win seats in this spring's historic multiparty elections.

Also on Wednesday, Bufi announced a general amnesty for all Albanians living abroad. Thousands of Albanian exiles were condemned to death by the Stalinist regime for alleged treason, while anybody who fled across the once tightly guarded border was liable to be shot if returning home.

The new government has a better chance of survival than Nano's because the Democratic Party is influential with independent trade unions.

But the new government will have to act swiftly to calm the countryside, where peasants who voted Communist in the elections are increasingly discontent with hasty land reforms approved in April.

The confusion and crisis of conviction in Communist ranks have been evident at a three-day congress this week.

Despite its intent to reform, the party has proved unable to confront the full terror of the legacy of Enver Hoxha, the founder of Stalinist Albania in 1944 and its despotic ruler until his death in April 1985.

Report: Albania fires on boat fleeing to Italy

ROME (AP) — Italy's immigration minister called on local authorities Wednesday to prevent Albanians refugees from landing on Italian shores, after nearly 600 were rescued from flimsy ships in the Adriatic Sea.

Also Wednesday, officials in the port of Otranto said two Albanians were killed by gunfire and four others were wounded aboard a fishing boat filled with refugees.

Immigration Minister Margherita Boniver said regional Interior Ministry representatives should block landings by foreigners, "even when they are found on cargo boats or small craft flying the Italian flag."

Except in emergencies, she said, "law prohibits the entrance into Italy of foreigners without a visa and without means."

Navy vessels and private ferries picked up a total of 590 people on frail ships in the Adriatic and brought them to Italian ports on Tuesday and Wednesday.

Public Notice

Southwestern Bell Telephone Company (Company), in accordance with the rules of the Public Utility Commission of Texas (Commission), hereby gives notice of its intent to implement a new schedule of telephone rates in Texas for Directory Assistance Services, effective August 1, 1991, unless otherwise determined by the Commission. The Company has filed an application with the Commission to restructure and change the rates for Directory Assistance Service.

To help recover its costs, the Company is proposing to increase the rates for Directory Assistance calls from $.30 to $.40 per call (after the three-call allowance). Southwestern Bell is proposing that there be no change in the number of free Directory Assistance calls allowed each month (currently three) and that customers who qualify for exemption of Directory Assistance charges because of visual or physical handicaps continue to be exempt from these charges. The company also proposes to begin charging $.25 per call for Directory Assistance from pay telephones.

If approved by the Commission, this proposed rate change for Directory Assistance will increase the Company's annual revenues by $15.4 million, which is an increase of approximately one half of 1 percent in the Company's adjusted revenue for the twelve-month period ending December 1990. This proposed rate change would affect approximately 900,000 residence customers, approximately 155,000 business customers, approximately 500 private pay telephone owners and all customers who make Directory Assistance calls from public pay telephones.

Persons who wish to intervene or otherwise participate in these proceedings should notify the Commission as soon as possible. A request to intervene, participate, or for further information should be mailed to the Public Utility Commission of Texas, 7800 Shoal Creek Boulevard, Suite 400N, Austin, Texas 78757. Further information may also be obtained by calling the Public Utility Commission Public Information Office at (512) 458-0256 or (512) 458-0221 teletypewriter for the deaf.

Woman has 100th birthday with her family

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

Zora Randolph has always led a simple life because that's the way she likes it.

"I don't like the limelight on anything. I'd rather just be," Mrs. Randolph said.

On Tuesday, Mrs. Randolph celebrated a birthday — her 100th — over lunch at home with her daughter and a few nieces and nephews.

"I don't see any difference in being 100," she said from her home on Wednesday. "I don't know what's all the hullabaloo in being 100."

Mrs. Randolph was born in Wood County on June 11, 1891 — the day Thomas Edison was granted a patent for the first meaningful radio device.

Since then, a lot has changed, some for the better, some for the worse, Mrs. Randolph said.

"We didn't used to lock our doors and never thought about locking them. And that when a person gave his word, he did what he said," she said.

Mrs. Randolph also reminisced about her days growing up — of horse-drawn buggies, going to a country school where all the youngsters were taught in one room and burning coal at home.

"All we had to do was go to church. We didn't have any theaters," she said.

At 24, she married a pharmacist and lived the life of a housewife.

"There wasn't many things a woman could do then like there is now," she said.

Mrs. Randolph has one daughter, Lurene Hunsacker, whom she has resided with in Midland since 1968.

These days, Mrs. Randolph said she spends most of her time at home reading the newspaper and watching television.

"I got in the habit of watching television when the (gulf) war was on," she said.

With the exception of arthritis and diminished eyesight and hearing, Mrs. Randolph said she feels as healthy as ever.

"I'm just a healthy person, I guess," she said about her longevity.

"I guess the Lord didn't have time to get my house ready for me to leave and I was doing pretty good down here. I guess He was too busy getting other people's houses

PBRPC says it's paid its share for waste plan

■ According to commission, state hasn't paid its portion of $250,000 solid-waste management plan.

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

The directors of the Permian Basin Regional Planning Commission are adamant about not paying double their share on a $250,000 regional solid-waste management plan for which the state government is to pay half the costs.

But the Texas Department of Health, which, like the Environmental Protection Agency monitors the sanitation of solid-waste landfills, apparently wants the 17 counties and 29 cities in the PBRPC to do just that: pay the whole costs.

"Why should the cities and counties have to turn around and match their own money that they are paying into the state?" asked Ernie Crawford, PBRPC executive director, following Wednesday's PBRPC meeting at Midland International Airport.

An agreement between the PBRPC and the state provided that the state would pay half the $250,000 required to fund the PBRPC Solid-Waste Management Planning for the 17-county and 29-town governments in the PBRPC.

In the first year, the cities and counties already paid more than their share, $66,000, to the Department of Health by way of landfill fees. For each ton of solid waste which they buried, 50 cents was paid in fees to the Department of Health. The cities and counties figured that that was their first year's matching share and that the state ought to divvy up its share.

Subsequently, the PBRPC directors on Wednesday agreed to ask Gov. Ann Richards to sign House Bill 69 which would "remove the local match requirement" for the solid-waste planning.

Water tests may have been in error

■ Midland Health Department official says samples showed traces of bacteria because of improper testing.

By Brian Pearson
Staff Writer

Midland Health Department tests of city water last month showed traces of coliform bacteria, but city officials said the samples may have been improperly tested.

In addition, high fluoride levels prompted the city to include notices in May water bills.

Ken Jones, deputy utility director, said neither the coliform bacteria nor fluoride presence in water posed a health hazard.

Routine samples taken from seven separate locations in May — five sites in the city and two at Midland International Airport — showed coliform bacteria, Jones said.

The bacteria usually is found on skin and is not of the fecal variety, he said.

Although the bacteria is common, the presence of it in water can indicate that the water may be contaminated by disease-causing organisms. Disease symptoms in-

County, city tax rebates up

By David Morris
Staff Writer

June tax rebates for Midland County are up by more than 10 percent compared with the same time last year, state comptroller's office figures show. City sales tax rebates also are up.

Statewide, sales tax rebates are up nearly 13 percent compared with last June, the comptroller's office reported.

Midland County received a $380,553 rebate check from Austin last week, a 10.6 percent increase over last year's $343,963.

"We'll take it," County Auditor Floyd Jarnagin said. "Ten percent is not as much as the year-to-date increase, but it's welcome nevertheless."

"I don't know what constituted the increase," he added.

The city of Midland, meanwhile, also posted an increase in sales tax receipts. City officials received a $617,061 rebate, a 6.7 percent increase from the $578,377 received in June 1990.

"It continues a trend that started seven to eight months ago," said Deputy City Manager Mike McGregor. "Nearly all those months have been increases.

"If you look at the total picture, the improvement is modest. . . . (I)t does seem that things are stable and consistent."

The rebates reflect taxes collected by businesses in April and reported in late May. Businesses collect both the state's 6¼ percent sales tax and all local sales taxes and send them to the comptroller's office with their tax returns. The state keeps its share and returns the remainder to local taxing entities.

The city assesses a 1 cent sales tax, while the county collects half a cent. Texas allows a maximum of 8¼ cents per dollar in sales tax to be levied in a community.

The city of Odessa, which also assesses a 1 percent sales tax, received a $543,637 rebate check last week — an 8.1 percent increase from last year's $502,890.

The Ector County Hospital District, which was not assessing a sales tax at this time last year, received $671,859.

The cities of Midland and Odessa both have collected more in sales tax since the beginning of 1991 than they did for the same period last year.

Midland has collected about $4.5 million in sales tax this year, compared with $4.2 million last year, a difference of about 8.4 percent.

Odessa has collected about $4 million, compared with $3.8 million last year, for an increase of about 7.3 percent.

Midland County, meanwhile, has collected about $2.8 million, compared with $2.3 million last year, a difference of about 18.6 percent.

The state sent $240.8 million in local sales tax rebates to Texas taxing entities this month, the comptroller's office reported. That's nearly 13 percent more than last year's June rebates.

City governments received $88.6 million in rebates, up 18.2 percent from last year's payments. That brings the 1991 city government rebate total to $617.2 million, 11.7 percent more than last year's total payments at this time.

Checks to county governments totaled $9.8 million, up 16.2 percent from last June's payments. This month's checks to counties bring their 1991 total to $67.6 million, or 20.5 percent higher than last year at this time.

ED TODD

Midland's small-town atmosphere seems threatened

Things are not exactly the way I think they ought to be right here in the middle of West Texas.

Todd

After all, Midland is not a big city. To my notion, it's really a country town, a settlement on the plains, which sometimes thinks it is not what it really is.

Midland is a good ol' town blessed with good ol' people.

And despite the abundance of fancy houses, the plethora of prestigious cars and the mix of tall downtown buildings and cross-town shanties; despite the various cliques from all levels of society, and the dark taints of computerized and hedonistic American society, Midland remains "home town" to many folks.

It doesn't matter what threads or labels you wear or how little or how much money you have in the bank or how much you have invested in stocks and bonds, Midland is, simply, home town.

And from this ol' country-boy's perspective, there are a few things to ponder toward bringing a little more comfort and peace to this town and its people:

■ Check-writing. No more will I trade at a place which "demands" my vital statistics.

■ Music and yakking. Why must we be subjected to "canned" music at restaurants, grocery stores and other places of commerce? I had much rather enjoy the swoosh of ceiling fans, the conversations of friends, and the pleasure of my own company than to be bombarded by music, advertising spiels and concocted dialogue I don't care to hear.

What was wrong with the old jukebox, the old nickelodeon? At least, if you wanted to hear some music and had an uncommitted nickel in your purse or pocket, you could spin a three-minute tune.

■ Too Much. And if you want to hear music outside the pop stuff, you're out of luck. It seems that most of the pop music playing around the airwaves is romantic junk, full of unrealistic expectations and mournful intonations. It's teen-age music and post-teen-age folks ought to have enough sense not to listen to that tripe. But they don't. And, certainly, that's not holding nothing against teen-agers. Some of the finest people I have ever known are — or were or will be — teen-agers.

■ On hold. Why, once "on hold" on a telephone call, must there be music or somebody's sales pitch. I don't "have" to be entertained or informed all of the time. Silence ain't a bad deal.

■ Parking meters. The city ought to yank those things out of their concrete moorings. They're a nuisance. The old rationale that downtown parking meters promote commerce seems invalid. The complexion of downtown has changed since most retail stores have bowed out of downtown.

■ The New Machine Age. Those confounded scanners at grocery stores and even dry-goods stores are just about at the nuisance level. They seem to be somebody's scheme to make a buck in a new way. Now, the obvious benefit of the scanner is inventory control. Seems to me, the merchant could look on the shelf and take an accounting.

What seems to be missing is not just the ability to use, quite deftly, the ol' adding machine, but there seems to be an erosion of courtesy in a town threatened by impersonal big-city ways.

WASTE: PBRPC says it paid its share for plan

(From 1B)

That request came by way of a letter signed by PBRPC Chairman O.L. "Louie" Brown of Big Spring.

The city-county landfill-fee fund administered by the Texas Department of Health "has generated more money than was previously anticipated," Brown penned, "and has more than enough money to fund the planning process" 100 percent.

The city and county governments have "already matched the first year's grant" by way of the $66,000 in 50-cent-per-ton fees, Brown wrote, and "to do so again will be very difficult due to the already very tight budgets and overall economic conditions" of the region.

The Department of Health is urging the governor to veto the bill, which was overwhelmingly approved by the House and Senate and which has been endorsed by the Texas Association of Counties, the Texas Municipal League, and the Texas Association of Regional Councils, Crawford said.

Seemingly, said Crawford, the Department of Health wanted to "save" the fee money "for themselves" in enforcing landfill laws, rules and regulations.

However, the funds are "the cities' and the counties' money to start with," he said.

The money is needed to fund the regional study, which, ultimately, is to result in regional landfills for the 17 counties and 29 cities and towns in the PBRPC.

"Right now," said Crawford, "you don't need a whole lot of enforcement before you get a regional plan going, anyway." The Department of Health people "are just getting ahead of themselves."

Alleged indecency

Staff Reports

A 43-year-old man was jailed Wednesday after being arrested for indecency with a child that involved an 8-year-old girl, police said.

James Dean Swarts, who was arrested about 7:30 a.m. Wednesday, remained in jail in lieu of a $2,500 bond set by Justice of the Peace Keith Jobe, jail officials said.

According to police, the girl was spending the night at a friend's home in west Midland when she was awakened about 2:30 a.m. by a man who tried to molest her. The man left and returned a short period later — this time without any clothes on — and again attempted to molest the girl.

The child relayed the incidents to her parents, who notified police Wednesday morning.

clude diarrhea, cramps, nausea, jaundice, headaches and fatigue.

The contamination can be the result of a problem with water treatment or pipes, Jones said.

But tests at the same seven sites in late May and earlier this month showed no signs of the bacteria, Jones said.

Because chlorine levels in the positive tests were so high that coliform bacteria could not survive, Jones said laboratory error may have resulted in a positive reading.

"There's all kinds of chances to get a contaminated sample," Jones said.

Nevertheless, the city was required to publish in the newspaper a public notice about the possible contamination. The notice was published Friday.

Fluoride notices in water bills have been a summer tradition for years, Jones said.

Fluoride levels are elevated in the summer when the city begins tapping wells to supplement the water supply, which mostly comes from lakes.

The city must notify the public if fluoride levels exceed 2 parts per million. May fluoride levels reached 2.6 parts per million, but fluoride is not a health hazard until it hits 25 parts per million, Jones said.

Monette Burke, health department administrator, said she was unaware of the contamination.

"This is the first I've heard of it," Ms. Burke said.

Jones said the city is required to send four water samples a month to the health department for testing.

Spelunker wants to go back to Carlsbad cave

EL PASO (AP) — Emily Mobley, who spent four days trapped in the nation's deepest cave until her dramatic rescue, said she'll return to the New Mexico cave next year.

"If I am physically able to be, I hope to be back there next March," she told the El Paso Times in a telephone interview Tuesday from her home in Schoharie, N.Y.

Ms. Mobley's left leg was broken March 31, when it was struck by a 90-pound boulder that dislodged when she grabbed it. She was 900 feet below the surface of Lechuguilla Cave when the accident happened.

"The doctor told me it would be about a year before I could be really sure of my leg," Ms. Mobley said.

A grueling, four-day rescue brought her through narrow passages and up treacherous, steep drops.

Ms. Mobley, 40, was a member of a mapping expedition into the cave, which is in a wilderness area of Carlsbad Caverns National Park in southern New Mexico.

Ms. Mobley and her husband, Bill, are helping plan a National Speleological Society convention scheduled July 1-5 in Cobleskill, N.Y.

Ms. Mobley, who still uses crutches, said she will conduct a rescue seminar from the victim's point of view.

"It's a whole different viewpoint from the stretcher up," she said.

Three Dallas officers wounded

DALLAS (AP) — Gunmen wounded three police officers Wednesday in two unrelated attacks at apartment complexes, and authorities later arrested three suspects in connection with the shootings.

Two men were held in the latest attack, which occurred as two officers chasing robbery suspects at a northwest Dallas apartment complex were fired upon.

Det. Eddie Douglas said a 33-year-old man will probably be charged with attempted capital murder and robbery, while a 26-year-old is expected to be charged with robbery.

The officers were taken to Parkland Memorial Hospital. Ronald Hubner, a 38-year-old officer from the park police division, was in fair condition Wednesday with an abdominal wound. Patrolman Ira McKee, 48, was in serious condition after he was shot in the hip.

In the earlier attack shortly after midnight, officer Richard Perez, 34, was wounded in the lower abdomen after police were met with a volley of gunfire at a southwest Dallas apartment complex. He was hospitalized in excellent condition at Methodist Medical Center, said Deputy Police Chief Ray Hawkins.

Charges had not been filed Wednesday afternoon against a 21-year-old man, who was being held in Lew Sterrett Justice Center.

In the northwest Dallas incident, just after 11 a.m., police had chased suspects from a robbery at a store, where the men took a customer's car to the apartment complex.

"The officers chased them into this apartment complex and they were checking door-to-door," said Police Chief William Rathburn. "And it appears that the suspects were in an apartment holding two of the residents hostage.

"There were gunshots fired from inside at the officers. At least one officer did return fire."

Both were being evaluated by doctors in the hospital's emergency room, said Parkland spokeswoman Michelle Raglon.

In the southwest Dallas shooting, at least eight shots were fired by the suspect from a semiautomatic handgun, Hawkins said.

"We plan to charge him with one count of attempted capital murder," he said.

Hawkins said Perez, 30, was one of several officers answering a disturbance call at the apartment complex.

The suspect's girlfriend told a police dispatcher that the man had cornered her in her apartment, Hawkins said.

The woman did not want to meet the suspect and went to a parking lot to move her car out of sight, Hawkins said. But the man caught up with her and the couple struggled.

The suspect fired a volley of shots at officers through the opened door with a 9mm handgun. The weapon was recovered at the scene, police said.

Dallas police officer Ira McKee, 47, was wounded in the hip Wednesday while investigating an apparent robbery.

Wife shoots husband's girlfriend at hospital

HOUSTON (AP) — A woman who allegedly shot her estranged husband was charged Wednesday with killing his girlfriend in a crowded hospital emergency room while the two women awaited word on his condition.

Floretha Parish Fisher, 32, was jailed on murder charges Wednesday in connection with the Tuesday evening shooting of Brenda Lee Lewis, 31, at Ben Taub Hospital. Mrs. Fisher remained at the Harris County Jail in lieu of $10,000 bond.

Police spokesman Kevin Johnson said Mrs. Fisher shot her estranged husband, Gaylan Fisher, in the arm early Tuesday evening.

"It was a flesh wound. I don't think it went into the arm," Johnson said.

Fisher's girlfriend, Ms. Lewis, and his grandmother drove him to the hospital. But Mrs. Fisher appeared in the waiting room where the two women sat while Fisher was being treated.

Witness Tommy Williams, 43, said Mrs. Fisher spit in Ms. Lewis' face and knocked her husband's grandmother to the ground.

Witnesses told police Ms. Lewis and Mrs. Fisher exchanged heated words and Ms. Lewis appeared to be walking away. Mrs. Fisher stopped at a bank of telephones, turned her back and pulled a .22-caliber pistol from her brassiere, they said.

"It seemed like she was going to get whupped," Williams said of the suspect. "That's when she pulled a pistol. Nobody thought she had a pistol."

Mrs. Fisher turned around and opened fire on Ms. Lewis, police said.

"The lady just dropped the gun and just politely walked on out," said Ronald Green, 23, another witness.

Police were at the hospital attending to victims of a previous shooting when the violence erupted about 9:20 p.m.

Ms. Lewis was shot in the chest and arm and died at 10:40 p.m., said hospital spokesman Roger Widmeyer.

"The staff, of course, is quite shaken up. But they are back to their work habits now," Widmeyer said. "Perhaps we were lucky that no one else was injured."

Johnson said Fisher had not yet notified police of his wound.

Officials agree to allow 'Ruby' filming in depository

DALLAS (AP) — County commissioners reversed their previous decision and tentatively agreed Tuesday to allow a producer to use the historic Texas School Book Depository and other buildings for a film about Jack Ruby.

Commissioners rejected the Lava Films Inc. request two weeks ago to use the buildings in "Ruby," a film about the man who killed Lee Harvey Oswald.

But commissioners allowed producer Oliver Stone to use the structures this spring to film "JFK," which details President John F. Kennedy's assassination.

County Judge Lee Jackson and Commissioner Nancy Judy originally opposed the request, fearing the filming would interfere with the sixth floor exhibit in the depository building, where Kennedy reportedly was shot from in November 1963.

But Ms. Judy said she would support the request if minimal changes were made to the outside of the depository building, now a historical landmark.

She also said it would be unfair to let Stone use the facilities and not Lava Films.

Richard Wright, associate producer of Lava Films, said he was relieved by the decision and would work to make the smallest possible changes to the depository building.

The official vote is scheduled for next Tuesday.

"Ruby" has started taping in Hollywood and the film crew will be in Dallas the first weekend in August.

Inmate who is to be executed has stroke

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — Attorneys for convicted killer Jerry Joe Bird continued to plead for his life Wednesday after he suffered a stroke just days before his scheduled execution.

Bird, 54, is to die by lethal injection before dawn Monday for the 1974 shooting death of Victor Harrell Trammell. Bird was convicted of burglarizing Trammell's Harlingen-area home, killing Trammell and stealing the man's gun collection.

But Bird suffered a stroke Sunday night and was transferred from the Ellis I Unit in Huntsville to the prison hospital in Galveston.

Prison spokesman Charles Brown said Bird was scheduled to return to death row Thursday or Friday. He had no word on Bird's condition.

On Wednesday, the Court of Criminal Appeals refused to grant a 30-day stay of execution sought by Bird's lawyers who said they were unable to communicate with their client because of his stroke.

Documents filed by the Texas Resource Center, which is representing Bird, indicate he is suffering a "major cerebral vascular insult" that left him partially paralyzed, unable to speak clearly or write, and intermittently confused and incapable of concentration.

Federal law prohibits the execution of incompetent individuals, but the incompetency standard relates to a person's mental, not physical state.

If doctors determine Bird has suffered a stroke that has impaired his ability to understand what is happening, his execution would have to be postponed.

Assistant Attorney General Bill Zapalac said Bird's attorneys filed a writ of habeas corpus late Wednesday. That action remained pending before a state district judge in Brownsville.

Bird has been on Texas' death row longer than all but one of its 345 inmates.

STATE IN BRIEF

■ Detective takes mug shots of spectators

EL PASO — People wanting to sit in on a gang-related murder trial are posing for mug shots first.

Spectators to the trial of Edward Harrison are being met by a burly county detective as they enter the courtroom and those who don't pose for the snapshot are being told by county officials they can't attend.

Spectators also are being searched for weapons.

"This is just a precaution," said 41st District Court Judge Mary Anne Bramblett, who requested the searches and photographs.

She said she was taking the measures because last week a courthouse visitor pulled a weapon during another gang-related trial.

Harrison, 17, his brother Carlos, 18, and two 16-year-old boys are accused of beating Lionel Arvizu, 17, with sticks, clubs and a baseball bat on Jan. 28. Arvizu died Feb. 6 of injuries suffered in the beating.

■ Men face drug charges

CHARLESTON, Mo. — Two Texas men faced drug charges Wednesday in southeast Missouri after authorities discovered four bales of marijuana in their trailer-truck at a weigh station.

The men, Modesto Gomez, 41, and Antonio Reyes, 47, both of McAllen, were in Mississippi County Jail after their arrests Tuesday.

Authorities were suspicious when the men pulled into the weigh station off Interstate 57 near Charleston and did not have a log book or other documents, said Mark French, county prosecutor.

Investigators from the Highway Patrol brought a drug-sniffing dog to the weigh station and he found the drugs, a patrol spokesman said. There was nothing else in the trailer.

The men each were charged with one count of marijuana possession and one count of attempted delivery of a controlled substance. They were each being held on bond of $100,000.

■ Panel OKs SSC funding

WASHINGTON — The Senate Appropriations Committee voted Wednesday to spend $509 million on the supercollider atom smasher next year, $75 million more than the House agreed to spend.

Under the Senate legislation, the collider would receive $348 million for construction from the $509 million total, said Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas. The collider's $243 million appropriation for this fiscal year included $94 million for construction.

The $8.25 billion supercollider, the world's largest and most expensive scientific instrument, is scheduled to be built south of Dallas by the end of 1999.

■ King holiday bill signed

AUSTIN — Martin Luther King Jr.'s birthday will be a full state holiday, celebrated the third Monday in January, under a bill signed into law Wednesday by Gov. Ann Richards.

The slain civil rights leader's birthday has been an optional holiday for state workers. That meant employees could take the day off in lieu of another holiday from a group of five, including Confederate Heroes Day.

The new law also deletes Columbus Day, the second Monday in October, from the list of state holidays. Rep. Ron Wilson, D-Houston, who sponsored the King holiday bill, said Columbus Day had not been funded as an official holiday for several years by state budget writers.

The bill provides that Columbus Day still should be observed, but state workers may not take the day off with pay, and state offices will remain open.

■ Nugent criticizes tax

AUSTIN — Texas Railroad Commissioner James Nugent called New York state's proposed natural gas tax of 51 cents per thousand cubic feet an "energy foolish" act.

Nugent said the proposed tax would boost energy costs and drive customers to dirtier, less efficient fuels.

Nugent also said Wednesday the tax is bound to hurt efforts by Texas gas producers to expand markets in Middle Atlantic and New England states, which are heavily dependent on imported petroleum products.

He said the New York tax would have a chilling effect on the nation's gas production and distribution system.

The Railroad Commission's duties include regulation of Texas' oil and gas industry.

■ Court denies appeals

AUSTIN — The 3rd Court of Appeals denied an appeal by two women who were convicted of trespassing during a protest at an abortion clinic.

Hilda Hinojosa and Jeanette Williams both pleaded no contest to the charges and were each sentenced to six months in jail and fined $1,000.

The two women are associated with Austin Rescue, which used to try to disrupt abortion clinics by having mass sit-in protests in front of the facilities.

■ Council OKs curfew

DALLAS — City Council members on Wednesday approved a curfew calling for most teen-agers to be off the streets by 11 p.m. on weeknights.

The plan, approved by a 10-1 vote, was suggested by a South Dallas neighborhood group. Some businesses and civil rights organizations oppose the idea.

Council member Al Lipscomb and others backed the proposed curfew as an anti-crime measure.

The Dallas curfew extends to midnight Fridays and Saturdays, and lifts at 6 a.m. each day. The plan provides exceptions for youths who have jobs, or are on their way home or with their parents at the curfew times.

The plan takes effect this weekend, but police won't start enforcing the new rule for another 30 days.

Parents of children younger than 17 could be fined $500 if their kids violate the curfew.

Richards, Mexican governor sign pact

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Ann Richards and her counterpart from the Mexican state of Jalisco signed an agreement Wednesday to promote joint efforts in trade, tourism and economic development.

Richards said the pact is another step toward closer relations between Texas and Mexico, noting that both states include growing high-tech industries.

"Jalisco is known as the Silicon Valley — or perhaps I should say the Austin, Texas — of Mexico. And their commerce in highly technological industries can be very beneficial to us in Texas," she said.

Jalisco Gov. Guillermo Cosio Vidaurri said numerous opportunities exist where the two states can cooperate.

He said the agreement he and Richards signed could set an example for U.S., Mexican and Canadian negotiators who opened talks Wednesday on a North American free trade deal.

"There are several ways and multiple places where we can increase our mutual relationship," Cosio said through a translator.

"I am certain that all of this is viable because three of our countries are talking about a free trade agreement right now. I believe that Jalisco and Texas are really setting an example ... We have a lot of possibilities to come," he said.

The agreement the governors signed calls for:

- Promoting investment and joint investment.
- Promoting cooperation between business organizations to take advantage of commercial opportunities.
- Encouraging communication and cooperation among universities and research centers in the two states.

In that regard, Richards said, a business group and a university group from Texas would be visiting Jalisco either in the fall or the spring of 1992.

- Developing a joint plan to promote industrial, commercial, tourism and business opportunities between the states.

Proposed income tax called 'harmful'

■ President of Dallas-based National Center for Policy Analysis says proposed income tax would have same impact as an ther recession.

Associated Press

AUSTIN — Creation of personal and corporate state income taxes could have a negative impact on Texas equivalent to another recession, a Dallas-based think tank reported Wednesday.

The National Center for Policy Analysis said an income tax such as that proposed by former Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby would lower the state's output by 2.7 percent, or about $10.6 billion a year.

John Goodman, the center's president, said Hobby's proposal of a 6.5 percent corporate income tax would "raise a tiny bit of revenue but cause enormous harm."

On the other hand, Goodman said, a tax proposal advanced by former Gov. John Connally, to replace the current corporate franchise tax with a new "business activity tax," would be a boost for the state's economy.

Goodman said his group's analysis of that proposal indicates it could boost production of goods and services in Texas by 4.3 percent, or about $16.9 billion.

Connally heads the Governor's Task Force on Revenue, which will be making recommendations to Gov. Ann Richards and legislators who convene in special session July 8 to write and fund a 1992-93 state budget.

The state faces a projected $4.7 billion deficit if all current services are maintained at their present levels, according to legislative budget analysts.

Last week, the committee heard a tax proposal from Connally and one from Hobby and Dallas financier Jess Hay.

Connally proposed boosting the motor fuels tax from 15 cents to 35 cents per gallon, doubling state college tuition, increasing the motor vehicle sales and hotel-motel taxes from 6 cent to 6¼ cents, charging a 5-cent per gallon aviation fuels tax and replacing the corporate franchise tax with a business levy suggested by Comptroller John Sharp. That tax would be 2.35 percent on gross receipts, minus raw material costs.

Hobby-Hay proposed establishing a 6 percent personal income tax on earnings over $16,000 per year for a family of four, and a 6.5 percent business income tax to replace the franchise tax.

Their proposal also calls for a 25 percent reduction in property taxes, broadening the sales tax base to include most services but lowering the sales tax rate from 6.25 percent to 5.25 percent.

Goodman said his organization's study of the two plans indicates that the Connally plan would encourage new investment in Texas but the income tax proposal would discourage such investment.

"The difference in the two plans is staggering," Goodman said. "Enacting the Connally plan rather than the Hobby-Hay plan is worth about $27 billion to the Texas economy over a period of one to three years."

'Instead of continuing to penalize investment in plants and equipment, the Connally plan would make new investment in Texas much more profitable — leading to more jobs and higher incomes for workers.'

— National Center for Policy Analysis

He said the Connally plan would "give a boost to the Texas economy because it would substitute a better tax for a worse tax."

"Instead of continuing to penalize investment in plants and equipment, the Connally plan would make new investment in Texas much more profitable — leading to more jobs and higher incomes for workers," he said.

But the income tax plan, Goodman argued, "would reduce a bad tax, the property tax, and substitute even worse taxes. High income rates for people and corporations will do much more harm to the Texas economy than the tax rates we have now."

Current Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock also is calling for passage of a state income tax, with a 5 percent personal rate and an 8 percent corporate rate. Goodman argued that Bullock's proposal "makes the same error ... and it's just as bad."

PUC judges recommend TU receive rate increase

AUSTIN (AP) — Public Utility Commission administrative law judges recommended Wednesday that Texas Utilities Electric Co. be granted an annual revenue increase of $353.8 million.

TU Electric, the state's largest electric utility with 2.1 million customers, is seeking a rate increase of $442 million.

Under the judges' recommendations, residential customers using an average of 1,000 kilowatt-hours of electricity would pay $78 a month in the summer.

That is $8.33 more than before August 1990, when TU Electric's proposed rate increase was put into effect under bond. The recommendation would be $2.01 less than the bonded rates.

The three-member PUC, which will make a final decision in the case, is scheduled to deliberate the matter July 15. The bonded rates are subject to refund if the PUC finally approves a lower amount.

TU Electric's rate increase proposal is meant largely to recover costs associated with operating Unit 1 of the Comanche Peak nuclear power plant at Glen Rose, west of Dallas.

In its original rate request, filed in January 1990, TU Electric sought an overall increase of 10.2 percent, or $442 million in revenues.

PUC examiners' recommendation is an 8.2 percent revenue increase. It includes a 20.6 percent increase in base rates and an 11.1 percent decrease in fuel rates, the PUC said.

Public Notice

Southwestern Bell Telephone Company (Company), in accordance with the rules of the Public Utility Commission of Texas (Commission), hereby gives notice of the Company's intent to implement a new schedule of telephone rates in Texas for residence Custom Calling Services, effective August 1, 1991, unless otherwise determined by the Commission. The Company has filed an application with the Commission to restructure and change the rates for certain residence Custom Calling Services.

The Custom Calling Services affected by the Company's application are optional telephone service arrangements that provide the following features: Call Waiting, Call Forwarding, Three Way Calling, Speed Calling 8 and Speed Calling 30.

The Company's proposal would increase the monthly rate for the individual Call Waiting feature from $2.10 to $3.10 for residence customers. Also, the rates for certain combinations of Custom Calling Features (Call Waiting, Call Forwarding, Three-Way Calling and Speed Calling-8) would increase or decrease depending upon the combination of features. In addition, the company proposes to obsolete the optional Custom Calling Service feature Speed Calling 30 for residence customers except for existing customers at their existing locations. Following are the feature combinations and their current and proposed rates.

One Feature Per Line	Current	Proposed
Call Waiting	$2.10	$3.10
Call Forwarding	2.10	2.10
Three-Way Calling	2.10	2.10
Speed Calling-8	2.10	2.10
Two Features Per Line	Current	Proposed
Call Waiting, Call Forwarding	3.75	4.50
Call Waiting, 3-Way Calling	3.70	4.50
Call Waiting, Speed Calling-8	3.70	4.50
Call Forwarding, 3-Way Calling	3.70	3.50
Call Forwarding, Speed Calling-8	3.70	3.50
3-Way Calling, Speed Calling-8	3.70	3.50
Three Features Per Line	Current	Proposed
Call Waiting, Call Forwarding and 3-Way Calling	5.30	5.90
Call Waiting, Call Forwarding and Speed Calling-8	5.30	5.90
Call Waiting, 3-Way Calling and Speed Calling-8	5.30	5.90
Call Forwarding, 3-Way Calling and Speed Calling-8	5.30	4.90
Four Features Per Line	Current	Proposed
Call Waiting, Call Forwarding 3-Way Calling, Speed Calling-8	6.90	7.30
Speed Calling 30	3.20	3.20

*denotes rate decrease

Southwestern Bell's application proposes to obsolete residence Speed Calling 30 except for existing customers at their existing locations.

Most of the Company's residence customers in Texas who subscribe to one or more of the Custom Calling Service features will be affected by the proposed rate restructuring. It is expected that the proposed rate restructuring of Custom Calling Services will increase the Company's annual revenues by $15.9 million, which is an increase of approximately one half of 1 percent in the Company's adjusted revenue for the twelve-month period ending December 1990. The restructuring will result in an increase in the Custom Calling Services rates for approximately 2.5 million residence customers and rate decreases for approximately 15,000 residence customers. Also, the obsolesence of the optional feature Speed Calling 30 will affect approximately 156,000 residence customers.

Persons who wish to intervene or otherwise participate in these proceedings should notify the commission as soon as possible. A request to intervene, participate, or for further information should be mailed to the Public Utility Commission of Texas, 7800 Shoal Creek Boulevard, Suite 400N, Austin, Texas 78757. Further information may also be obtained by calling the Public Utility Commission Public Information Office at (512) 458-0256 or (512) 458-0221 teletypewriter for the deaf.

HEALTH

YOUR FOOD PHARMACY

Chromium's not for thinness, but it may help cholesterol, triglycerides, glucose, insulin

Carper

Will taking the trace mineral chromium make you leaner, thinner and help you lose weight? Some supplement companies claim that. But Dr. Richard Anderson, a U.S. Department of Agriculture expert on chromium, is not so sure.

For starters, he says there is no proof that you drop pounds by taking chromium supplements.

However, he says there is unconfirmed evidence that chromium can affect metabolism, increasing protein synthesis that may turn some body fat into lean. A recent study at Louisiana State University, he says, found that 200 micrograms of chromium daily increased metabolic efficiency in women, but not men. The women increased lean body mass, but gained a fraction of a pound. A study a few years ago also found that chromium increased lean body mass by 22 percent in male athletes. But the results have not been duplicated, says Dr. Anderson. "It's possible it's true; we just don't know yet."

Nevertheless, Dr. Anderson favors taking 200 micrograms of chromium daily for other reasons. Most Americans lack chromium, and it decidedly improves cholesterol, triglycerides, glucose and insulin, he says. Foods rich in chromium: oysters, whole grains, liver, prunes, mushrooms, broccoli, bran cereals.

Heart disease alert

Scientists have discovered a completely new agent in blood that appears to help clog arteries, leading to heart disease and stroke. It has nothing to do with cholesterol or fat. It's an amino acid called homocysteine. People with high levels are more apt to have clogged arteries, according to a new study from the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Human Nutrition Research Center on Aging at Tufts.

Researchers compared the homocysteine levels of 170 men with premature (under age 60) coronary artery disease and 255 men free of artery disease. Those with clogged arteries were almost three times as likely to have elevated levels of homocysteine. Excessive homocysteine was found in 28 percent of the men with clogged arteries versus 10 percent without.

Although high homocysteine is often linked to a genetic abnormality, a deficiency of B vitamins and folic acid may be at fault. A recent Swedish study found that 240 milligrams of B6 and 10 milligrams of folic acid daily for four weeks cut homocysteine levels 53 percent in patients with premature vascular disease. Consult with your doctor, however, before medicating with vitamin megadoses. Excessive doses of B6 could be harmful.

Celery vs. blood pressure

Celery, it has been said, is so full of nothing that you lose weight just chewing it.

But celery may indeed be full of unexpected good stuff that helps lower blood pressure and cholesterol. So says William J. Elliott, M.D., a high blood pressure specialist at the University of Chicago.

At least that's what he found in rats. Their systolic blood pressure (top number) dropped an average 12 percent to 14 percent when fed a chemical extracted from celery. "This compound is found in rather high concentrations in celery, and not in many other vegetables," says Dr. Elliott. The dose would be comparable to eating two large celery stalks a day for humans, he adds.

Also, that amount of celery pushed down the rats' cholesterol about 7 points.

Dr. Elliott got the idea to test celery from Vietnamese folk medicine. Asian cultures have prescribed celery in doses of 1/4 to 1/2 pound daily for a week to lower blood pressure since 200 B.C, he noted. He extracted the celery chemical he thought might be the active agent, and "it worked," he says. Next he plans to test the celery compound in humans.

Jean Carper's column is distributed by King Features Syndicate.

U.S. doesn't know peanuts about fat

BOSTON (AP) — Do you know a fat lunch when you see one?

Most people don't, says Lawrence T. P. Stifler, a weight management specialist. He says the average American doesn't know peanuts about fat, calories and general nutrition.

Peanuts, those symbols of trifles, are high-fat nuggets of calories: 840 per cup.

"You can put a stop to the weight roller coaster if you make two basic changes in your lifestyle this year. Reduce the amount of fat in your diet. Increase your level of physical activity," says Stifler, head of Health Management Resources, a Boston-based national company specializing in obesity and weight management.

But first you have to learn to recognize where fat shows up in foods, and that may surprise you, he says. That cup of peanuts, for example, has more calories and fat than a 6-ounce baked potato, a 1-ounce dinner roll, a cup of pasta, and a cup of rice combined, at 620 calories.

The reason is that fats have 9 calories per gram, but protein and carbohydrates only have 4 calories per gram.

You can eat more and lose weight, he says, if you rearrange the percentages — less fat and more complex carbohydrates like fruits, vegetables, cereals and grains.

Some of the things you may have thought of as prudent choices — diet plates and salads — can be foolers.

Stifler warns about the typical "luncheon diet plate" you might run across in a restaurant. It contains a 4-ounce hamburger (300 calories), half-cup of cottage cheese (120), tomato slices (12), and half of a canned cling peach (80), for a total of 512 calories. You would be better off ordering a turkey sandwich with 3 ounces of sliced white meat (120 calories), whole wheat bread (140), with lettuce, tomato and Dijon mustard (40), for a 300-calorie total. Mustard and ketchup are only 15 calories per tablespoon, compared to mayonnaise and butter at 100 calories.

Lots of fats hide out in otherwise innocent-looking salads. Stifler says many people don't even think about the mayonnaise or salad dressing, which can turn a 60-calorie, 3-cup salad into a 300-calorie surprise.

He cites some other surprises:

— Hot fudge, at 65 calories a tablespoon, is less fattening than salad dressing, at 65-85 calories.

— Plain doughnuts have more calories than jelly doughnuts. All doughnuts are high in fat because they're deep-fried, but a jelly doughnut has more sugar and runs about 115 calories per ounce, while a plain doughnut has more fat and runs 125 calories per ounce. As a rule, fat pushes up the calories more than sugar in baked goods.

— Jam or jelly, at 50 calories per tablespoon, has half the calories of butter or margarine, at 100.

— Orange juice has more calories per cup than beer.

Making the changes to control weight may be easier than you think, Stifler says. "Start with the easy changes first. Reduce the amount of fat in your diet by eliminating the high-fat foods you miss the least. Increase your level of physical activity by making whatever activity you choose part of your daily routine."

Diet guidelines

The U.S. Department of Agriculture has abandoned a new pyramid-shaped diagram of dietary guidelines in favor of the older wheel-shaped one. The diagrams differ more in form than content, with virtually identical recommended servings per day:

Man taps old skills to overcome stroke

By Lindi Beaudreault

TYLER (AP) — Horace Gandy suffered a massive stroke last October that left him unable to talk.

But Gandy still is able to communicate by making use of a long-dormant skill the former telegraph operator hadn't used in years — Morse code.

Gandy's son-in-law has built a battery-operated device that allows him to tap out his thoughts a letter at a time.

Gandy was a telegraph operator in various cities across Texas from the 1930s to the early 1950s. Although the stroke left most of his body paralyzed, he has limited movement in his left hand that allows him to use the tapping device.

"He can communicate quickly, but he has to be patient with me...I can do it one letter at a time," says Gandy's son Gene, an instructor at Tyler Junior College. Gene Gandy repeats aloud the letters his father taps out. If he has the correct letter, Gandy continues spelling out his thought. If his son is wrong, Gandy shakes his head and repeats the letter.

Gandy's son related several stories he said Gandy had told him about his 81 years in Texas, stopping often for Gandy's additions and corrections to each tale.

Gandy was born on October 3, 1906, in Wood County, and started working as a telegraph operator when he was 25. He said his job took him to many towns, including Kermit, that at that time had Saturday nights marked by numerous killings.

His job was to relay notifications of the deaths.

When he was younger, Gandy and his brother, also a telegraph operator, used to talk to each other in Morse code as if it were their own secret language, Gandy's son said.

"They would start tapping to each other 100 miles an hour...they would be carrying on for hours and just start laughing...it was like they were talking in a foreign language, and no one else could understand them," Gandy's son said.

After working in telegraphy for 20 years Gandy went to work for the United States Postal Service as a rural letter carrier.

And now Gandy, a resident of Colonial Manor, uses Morse code every day again. His son said he is thankful they have a way to talk because Gandy is mentally alert and has a lot to say.

Many stroke victims, the younger Gandy said, are unable to communicate, so people assume they don't understand what is happening around them. This is often untrue, he said.

"Several days ago the staff here called me because they knew he was experiencing some sort of discomfort but they didn't know what was going on," he said. "It turned out that he was just hungry — he wanted a steak and potatoes. Unfortunately, we can't give him that," he said, and Gandy smiled.

Gandy knows the staff at Colonial Manor well.

Although he cannot talk using his vocal cords, Budd said, if you lean close to Gandy and listen closely, he will whisper "I love you."

Privileged reserve public domain

By David Crosson
Hearst News Service

WASHINGTON — If you happen to be a high government official, and know who to call, you might consider taking a few days off in a national park system hideaway that is off limits to the public.

But expect a few darts and arrows.

While some defend the practice as a harmless perk for overworked public servants, others — such as Ellen Miller of a congressional watchdog group — call it "outrageous" that the lands aren't made available to everyone.

While more than 250 million visitors took in the scenic grandeur of the park system's 357 properties last year, just over 100 VIPs and their guests last year took advantage of five VIP facilities. Arrangements are made through Interior Department Secretary Manuel Lujan.

For modest fees, members of Congress, the Supreme Court and the Cabinet along with their top aides and White House staffers of high rank can use the park system sites. The likes of former Vice President Fritz Mondale, Secretary of Defense Dick Cheney and White House Political Director Ron Kaufman have taken advantage of the perk.

Generally, the VIPs can make their reservations on shorter notice than is required for many park campsites, particularly those in the crown jewels of the system like Yosemite and Yellowstone.

At the same time, while the special quarters cannot be characterized as luxurious — rustic seems to be the most-used description — some of the rates for the hideaways would make a working stiff weep.

Here's a rundown of the facilities:

■ Camp Hoover, Shenandoah National Park, Virginia: Less than 100 miles from the nation's capital, the isolated compound of cabins near the headwaters of the Rapidan River was established in 1929 as a fishing camp and "summer White House" for President Herbert Hoover. Overnight accommodations are available for 20 people. Rates range from $13 to $109 per person per day, depending on the cabin.

■ Brinkerhoff House, Grand Teton National Park, Wyoming: With a panoramic view of Lake Jackson and the Teton range, the four-bedroom log lodge, formerly a private home, can accommodate eight people. The rate per day for the first two occupants is $85 with a charge of $12 for each additional person.

■ Bodie Island Cottage, Cape Hatteras National Seashore, North Carolina: The cottage, nine miles from where the Wright brothers first flew on the renowned Outer Banks, can be occupied by up to 11 people. There is a $40 charge per night for the first two occupants and a $10 or $15 fee for each additional person, depending on whether they are family members.

■ Little Cinnamon House, Virgin Islands National Park, U.S. Virgin Islands: The three bedroom house on St. John Island can accommodate six people. The rate is $90 per day for up to four people with a charge of $10 for each additional person.

■ Quarters No. 5, Fort Jefferson National Monument, Florida: Located 60 miles west of Key West on the Dry Tortugas, Fort Jefferson was built in the first half of the 19th century and is now maintained as a ruin by the National Parks Service. When not being used by researchers, Quarters No. 5, a six-person apartment in the fort, is available for VIP use at $10 per night per person.

Acknowledging that the facilities are "expensive" to maintain, and "a pain" to supervise, Interior Department spokesman Tom Wilson said the sites are the last of many that, over time, have been turned into park staff quarters or torn down.

With the exception of the Shenandoah Park compound, which Hoover wanted maintained as a place "to rest tired federal officials," Wilson said the VIP facilities serve as such because there is little other use for them.

There are no formal guidelines for determining who can use the facilities, but Wilson said those reserving the quarters may be bumped by others with a higher "protocol ranking."

Bats catch fancy of British as protected species

WESTMILL, England (AP) — St. Mary the Virgin has bats. It's a bother, but everyone does try not to mind.

No, they are not in the belfry.

"It's quite unusual for bats to use belfries," said Brian Briggs, one of the many certified bat fanciers in Hertfordshire. "They're usually cold and drafty places."

Retired Rear Adm. Kyrle Pope, the church warden, strolled down the aisle pointing out droppings in the nave, on window sills.

"We usually have a clean white cloth over the altar, and occasionally we will find a bat dropping on it," he said, peering over the tops of his square-cut glasses. "Only a pipistrelle. Nothing to worry one."

Pipistrelles, Britain's most common bat, weigh less than a quarter and would fit easily into a matchbox. Like all the 15 types in Britain, they eat insects — up to 3,000 a night.

Pro-bat groups began organizing after Parliament declared the winged mammals a protected species in 1981. They now have 2,000 members and work with the government to enforce the law.

Briggs and his wife, Patty, took the tour with Pope. Their Hertfordshire group, one of 74 covering every county in England, Scotland and Wales, keeps in touch with the others through a yearly conference and the newsletter Bat News.

Another convenience is the Batalogue, a national publication that offers recorded bat calls and bat-shaped objects like earrings, door knockers and refrigerator magnets.

Mr. and Mrs. Briggs were called to the church in Westmill, a village 20 miles north of London, because some unusually large droppings indicated the possible presence of a rare bat.

Their search led them up a narrow spiral staircase to the room behind the steeple clock, where bat signs were unmistakable: scratch marks, droppings and piles of moth wings.

The Briggses concluded it was the dining room of long-eared bats, which are only slightly less common than pipistrelles.

No bats were in the room, dining or otherwise. Briggs blamed an unseasonably cold May, which has kept all "smart, self-respecting" bats in hibernation.

St. Mary's bat problem pales beside that of St. John the Baptist in nearby Great Gaddesden.

At St. John's, Briggs declared, 300 pipistrelles were roosting inside the hollow roof beams. When they became agitated by the singing of hymns below, he said, guano would shake loose and fall through cracks in the beams.

"All the droppings would fall down on the front two pews, which was where all the rich hoi polloi happened to sit," he said, with a certain relish.

Since bats are protected, church leaders had to call the government for help. Briggs and other volunteers plugged the cracks.

Their champions say Britain's bats are becoming popular. The Briggses said they got 10 telephone calls a day from the curious during last year's National Bat Week.

"We used to have people call and say, 'We've got bats, how can we get rid of them?'" said bat expert Robert Stebbings. "Now, we hear, 'We've got a house in the country. How do we attract bats?' "

Stebbings, who has studied bats since childhood, runs a 24-hour "Bat Helpline."

For injured bats, there are the Isle of Wight Bat Hospital and St. Tiggywinkles animal hospital.

Despite the new coddling, bats are growing fewer in Britain, killed by pesticides and deprived of of traditional forest roosts by development.

Some Britons continue to withhold their affections from bat, however difficult that may seem. Among them are Westmill's 89-year-old Buchanan twins, Isabelle and Flora.

They told the Briggses anecdotes from more than 30 years of living with bats in their white-and-blue cottage: a bat in a bedroom slipper, bats hanging in the curtains, bats under the red roof shingles.

"What I object to is having them fly up and down in my bedroom when I've got the light on and am trying to read," Isabelle said.

She accepted the Briggses' telephone number and some bat literature.

National no more

NEW YORK (AP) — The owners of The National Sports Daily said Wednesday they will quit publishing the nation's first all-sports daily newspaper after Thursday's issue.

The newspaper, started with great fanfare and promise 17 months ago, said it was closing down because of the "eroding prospects for the publishing industry as a whole."

The newspaper's owners, led by the Mexican media baron Emilio Azcarraga, lost an estimated $100 million and saw no quick prospect for profitabilty.

"We were just losing too much money," Frank Deford, the editor in chief and publisher of the newspaper, said in a telephone interview.

Knockout stands

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Mark Gastineau's quick knockout of a professional wrestler-turned-boxer appeared legitimate and will not be investigated by the Virginia Athletic Board, the state's boxing commissioner said Wednesday.

Doug Beavers disputed a report in The National sports daily that the board planned to look into a 12-second knockout by the former New York Jets defensive end over Derrick Dukes last Saturday night.

"I plan to try to call Dukes today and get his side of the story, and that will probably be the end of it," Beavers said in a telephone interview.

Bulls finally have it all

■ Chicago needs just five games to claim its first NBA title against the veteran Lakers.

Associated Press

INGLEWOOD, Calif. — The Chicago Bulls closed the Michael & Magic Show after just five episodes Wednesday night, winning the first NBA championship in the team's 25-year history.

Most Valuable Player Michael Jordan had 29 points, and his supporting cast, led by Scottie Pippen and John Paxson, held its own as the Bulls won 108-101 to win the series 4-1.

"Winning gets rid of the stigma of a one-man team," said Jordan, who also had 10 assists. "We did it as a team all season long.

"I never thought I'd be this emotional. I've never been this emotional publicly."

Magic Johnson and an unsung group of Lakers who had to fill in for injured starters James Worthy and Byron Scott put up a tough battle, however.

"Their hearts kept them in the game," Jordan said of the Lakers. "I knew Magic was not going to go down without a fight."

Although Los Angeles played its best game of the series offensively, they still set a record for fewest points in a five-game Finals series with an average of 91.6.

"We played as hard as we could and gave 125 percent effort," Johnson said. "But we came up a little short. The Bulls made every big shot."

Jordan, who averaged 29.8 in the Finals, is the first regular-season scoring leader since Kareem Abdul-Jabbar of Milwaukee in 1971 to play on the championship team. He joined the Bulls in 1984.

"This has been a seven-year struggle," Jordan said. "We started from scratch. I vowed we'd make the playoffs every year and each year we got closer. I always had faith I'd get this ring one day."

"When I congratulated him in the locker room, you could see the tears in his eyes," Johnson said of Jordan. "It's a great memory for him. He proved everyone wrong. Now everyone knows he can win, too. It'll be great until, hopefully, the Lakers dethrone them next year."

Pippen, who had 13 rebounds, scored 32 points to become the first Bulls player other than Jordan to lead the team in scoring in 17 playoff games. Paxson scored 20 points, including five baskets in the final four minutes as Chicago overcame a slim deficit.

Johnson had 16 points, 11 rebounds and 20 assists for the Lakers, one assist short of his own Finals record. Sam Perkins had 22 points and rookie reserve center Elden Campbell 21 for Los Angeles, nine more than his previous best as a pro.

The Lakers trailed by as many as eight points in the second half before rallying to lead 88-86 after four consecutive points by Perkins. He was then called for

Is the enrollment of a high school a key factor in the overall success of its athletic programs?

That is a question that is debated by athletic directors and school officials across the state. It was one of the reasons that the University Interscholastic League's football playoffs were divided into two playoff brackets.

Well, if you look at the Reporter-Telegram's District 4-5A All-Sports Decade Points Championship race, the answer is yes and no after 1½ years of competition within the district.

For instance, San Angelo, owning the district's largest school enrollment, is the dominant school in the league when it comes to overall athletic achievement. The Bobcats have scored 236 formula points through the spring of 1991, owning a 60-point lead over the rest of the field.

San Angelo has already captured eight district championships since the race began in the spring of 1990. Odessa Permian is next with five titles.

However, standing in second place is Abilene High with 176 points and AHS is the district's smallest school. The Eagles scored 72 spring points to move ahead of Permian, the second largest school, in the race for second place by a three-point margin. Abilene Cooper, the district's second smallest school, is in fourth place with 159 points.

Enrollments are based on ninth grade through 12th, but only the two Abilene schools have freshmen on the campus and that is a factor in the success of the Key City schools as both had freshman impact competitors this year, especially in the girls sports.

Angels lose 10th straight to Diablos

By Jimmy Patterson
Assistant Sports Editor

The National League expansion committee wasted its time. It chose the wrong cities when it picked Miami and Denver. All the committeemen needed to do was look to El Paso to find themselves a big league club.

Exaggeration? Maybe a bit, but sometimes it certainly doesn't seem like much of one.

The El Paso Diablos (41-18) took advantage of another big inning Wednesday night, downing the Midland Angels 6-4. It was the Angels' 10th consecutive loss to the Diablos.

Down 2-1, the Diablos scored four runs in the top half of the fifth to go ahead 6-2. Midland nibbled at the Diablos' lead, but never took a big enough bite to get back into the contest.

Angel starter Rafael Montalvo (0-1), making his first start since being sent down from Edmonton, was the loser; El Paso reliever Steve Lienhard (7-3) earned his second win in three days at Angels Stadium. Stopper Jim Czajkowsk recorded his fourth save of the season.

"You've got to stay away from the big inning," Midland manager Don Long said of the Diablo fifth.

After El Paso leadoff batter Dave Jacas doubled with one out in the fifth, Jim Tatum cracked his 11th home run of the year as the Diablos slid ahead 4-2. John Jaha and Dave Nilsson put together back-to-back singles and both later scored. Jaha came in thanks to Nilsson's single while Nilsson scored on a Shon Ashley double.

"I think when the pitchers get two outs against us, they'll relax," Nilsson said. "And when they do that they get in trouble."

All four Diablo runs in the fifth, incidentally, were with two outs. A fifth run in the eighth inning also came with two gone.

Nilsson, the Texas League's No. 1 hitter, entered the game hitting .404 for the season. Five at bats and two hits later, Nilsson still sported a .404 mark.

It's not that the Diablo fifth was the sole reason for the loss. The Angels

Midlander stymies Tribe; Brewers pelt Valenzuela

Associated Press

AL

CLEVELAND (AP) — Former Midland High pitcher and Toronto rookie Mike Timlin, making his first major-league start, allowed only one hit and one ball beyond the infield in six innings as the Blue Jays beat the Cleveland Indians 1-0 Wednesday night.

"I approached it like I was coming into the game in the fifth or sixth inning," Timlin said. "I wanted to go as long and as hard as I could."

The 25-year-old Timlin (5-3), who jumped from Class AA to the majors this year, walked two and struck out six, combining with three other pitchers on a two-hitter. Neither hit by Cleveland — which has scored two runs or less in nine of its last 10 games and been shut out eight times this season — left the infield.

Timlin did not give up a hit until the sixth, when Felix Fermin hit a high bouncer off the plate that sailed high over the pitcher's head for a one-out infield single. Cleveland didn't get a ball out of the infield until Jerry Browne, the last batter Timlin faced, flied to right for the final out of the inning.

Brewers 8, Angels 0

ANAHEIM, Calif. — Teddy Higuera continued his comeback by striking out 10 over six scoreless innings, and Milwaukee roughed up Fernando Valenzuela for five runs in two innings as the Brewers dominated the Angels.

Paul Molitor had three hits and three RBIs, including a two-run homer in the second inning, and Robin Yount had four hits, including a two-run double as the Brewers scored four times against Valenzuela (0-2) in the second.

Higuera allowed four hits and walked two to earn his first victory in three decisions this year.

Higuera began the season with a slight tear in his left rotator cuff and came off the disabled list on May 28. He struggled in his three appearances since then, giving up a total of 19 hits and 10 runs in 12⅓ innings.

Rangers 4, White Sox 2

ARLINGTON — Ruben Sierra hit a bases-loaded triple and the Texas Rangers, despite getting only two hits off former teammate Charlie Hough, beat Chicago.

Hough (3-3), facing the Rangers for the first time since he was let go after 11 seasons in Texas, pitched his second complete game. He struck out nine but walked eight, both season highs.

Texas won its second straight after ending an eight-game losing streak. The White Sox lost for the third time in nine games.

Twins 6, Yankees 3

MINNEAPOLIS — Rookie Pedro Munoz hit a first-inning grand slam as the Minnesota Twins moved within a game of their longest winning streak ever.

Allan Anderson (4-4) won his third straight start for the first time since September 1989 and remained perfect in his career against New York. He pitched 6 1-3 innings, allowing eight hits while striking out four and walking none in raising his career mark against the Yankees to 5-0.

Royals 9, Orioles 8

BALTIMORE — Danny Tartabull had two homers, including the decisive shot in the 10th inning, and a career-high six RBIs to lead Kansas City over slumping Baltimore.

The Orioles, 0-4 in extra-inning games, had rallied from an 8-1 deficit before Tartabull hit the first pitch of the 10th by Mark Williamson (0-2) over the left-field wall. Baltimore has lost four straight and seven of nine.

Mark Davis (2-1) got the last two outs of the ninth and Jeff Montgomery pitched the 10th to earn his 12th save.

Athletics 3, Tigers 1

OAKLAND, Calif. — Terry Steinbach and Jose Canseco each hit home runs, and three Oakland pitchers combined on a three-hitter.

A's starter Mike Moore (8-4) gave up one hit in six innings — a sixth-inning single to Lou Whitaker — but came out after loading the bases in the fifth and sixth innings, walking five batters, all on 3-2 pitches.

Steve Chitren gave up two hits in 1⅓ innings, including a two-out, solo home run to Milt Cuyler in the seventh.

Mariners 5, Red Sox 3

SEATTLE — Ken Griffey Jr. homered and drove in three runs and Jeff Schaefer drove in two runs with his first major-league triple as Seattle beat Boston.

Bill Krueger (3-2) lost his bid for his first complete since Oct. 2, 1985 in the ninth inning. The Red Sox got an RBI double by Wade Boggs off Krueger and a run-scoring single by Phil Plantier off reliever Bill Swift before Rob Murphy and Mike Jackson came in to get the last three outs.

stranded 12 baserunners, including three in the second.

"We had some opportunities," Long reminded. "We had the bases loaded and only one out (in the second) and only scored one run.

"We have to try and play well regardless (of who the opponent is). We have to try and do what we're capable of doing based on the personnel we have."

El Paso manager Dave Huppert agreed, though, that the fifth was the turning point of the game.

"We seem to be putting that one big inning together," Huppert said, "and our pitchers hold on.

"We've capitalized on some mistakes the last couple of nights, and the good teams do that."

Dravecky's arm will be removed

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Former San Francisco pitcher Dave Dravecky will have his left arm amputated next Tuesday to alleviate chronic infection and nerve damage in the arm, the Giants announced on Wednesday.

The surgery will be performed next Tuesday at Memorial Sloan Kettering Cancer Center in New York.

Dravecky, 35, the author of one of baseball's great comeback stories, has underdone three previous operations to remove cancerous tumors from the arm, most recently in May 1990.

"It is likely that the cancer has recurred in Dave's arm," said Dr. Murray Brennan, who will perform the surgery which is to remove the arm at the shoulder. Brennan said the treatment will relieve the pain Dravecky has been experiencing in recent weeks and is required by a recurring staph infection.

Brennan said the cancer has not spread beyond the arm.

"My wife, Jan, and I are at peace right now," Dravecky said in the statement.

"We know that there is a reason for everything. This is for the best. Life goes on. My goal is to be back on the lecture circuit."

Ranger first baseman Jack Daugherty hangs his head as Texas drops its sixth-straight game on Monday.

Ryan rejuvenates reeling Rangers

By Charles Richards
AP Writer

ARLINGTON — Nolan Ryan and the Texas Rangers are back on the same wavelength — Ryan pitches a complete game, the Rangers win.

The Rangers, backed by Ryan's six-hitter, broke an eight-game losing streak Tuesday night with a 2-0 victory over the Chicago White Sox. It was the first complete game by a Texas pitcher since Ryan's seventh career no-hitter on May 1. It also was Ryan's first victory since then.

"You've got to block that out," said Ryan, who was on the disabled list when the Rangers won a club-record 14 games in a row before their losing streak. "Even though I hadn't won, I felt like I had been pretty consistent. I just hadn't had a lot of runs to work with, and I was on the disabled list for 15 days with arm trouble."

It was the winning streak that carried the Rangers from sixth to first in the American League West last month, but they lost 11 of the next 12 before Ryan came to the rescue. Entering Wednesday's games, the Rangers (27-25) were fifth, five games behind Oakland.

Ryan struck out 10 and walked one in pitching his 61st career shutout and recording his 306th victory.

Texas manager Bobby Valentine said he couldn't fault his starters for the losing streak.

"I think of the last 10 games or so, I'd take seven or eight of those starts every day of the week," Valentine said before Ryan's outing. In fact, the Rangers starters did not pitch that well during the winning streak and were bailed out by the hitters and relievers.

It was defense and hitting that failed the Rangers during the losing streak. While Rafael Palmeiro, Julio Franco, Ruben Sierra and Juan Gonzalez led an attack that averaged eight runs per game during the winning streak, the foursome went into a collective June swoon.

In addition, Franco committed four errors in a four-day span to tie for the league lead for most errors by a second baseman, and after going all season without a single error, Sierra dropped a fly in right field that allowed both of Chicago's runs to score in extra innings Monday night.

Gonzalez and Kevin Reimer also committed costly errors in the outfield that contributed to losses.

"How do you explain winning 14 in a row and then losing eight? You don't," Rangers outfielder Gary Pettis said. "When things aren't going well, you have a tendency later on in the game to look for a break to get you back in the game. When things are going well, you tend to create your own situations, especially when guys are hitting the ball as well as our guys have been."

Finley provides offense as Astros roll past Phils

Associated Press

NL

HOUSTON — Steve Finley's bases-loaded single with two out in the ninth inning gave Houston a 3-2 victory over the Philadelphia Phillies on Wednesday night for the Astros' fourth straight victory.

Jeff Bagwell started the inning with a single off Joe Boever (3-5) and went to second on Ken Caminiti's sacrifice.

After pinch-hitter Ken Oberkfell was intentionally walked and Casey Candaele struck out, Rafael Ramirez walked to load the bases. After the count reached 3-2, Finley lined a single past Phillies right fielder Dale Murphy for the winning run.

Al Osuna (3-2) pitched 1 2-3 innings for the victory.

It was Philadelphia's fourth straight loss.

Jim Deshaies shut out the Phillies until the eighth. Then Von Hayes and Jim Lindeman led off with singles, moved up on a groundout and scored on a single by pinch-hitter Ron Jones, making his first at-bat of the season.

Tommy Greene, who threw his first career no-hitter and the only no-hitter in the NL this season May 23 against Montreal, retired the final 18 Astros he faced after yielding four hits and two runs in the second inning.

Cubs 6, Giants 1

CHICAGO — Shawn Boskie allowed seven hits over 7⅔ innings, and Ryne Sandberg capped a five-run, fourth inning with a two-run single, leading Chicago over San Francisco.

It was the first victory since April 27 for Boskie (3-5) who lost his bid for a shutout and a complete game in the eighth inning. Tony Perezchica led off the eighth with a pinch double and scored on a pair of infield outs.

Willie McGee then singled to extend his hitting streak to 16 games, equalling the major league season-high by Brett Butler of Los Angeles and Wally Joyner of California.

Matt Williams also singled to knock out Boskie. Paul Assenmacher walked Dave Anderson to fill the bases before Dave Smith came on to retire Greg Litton on the way to his 15th save.

Pirates 2, Dodgers 1

PITTSBURGH — Doug Drabek again flashed his Cy Young Award form, allowing one run in seven innings as Pittsburgh beat Los Angeles in the first game this season between the two National League division leaders.

Helped by a Dodger baserunning blunder and a rare Pittsburgh double play, Drabek (5-7) continued his comeback from a 1-6 start by winning his third in a row and his fourth in five decisions.

Orlando Merced's two-out single and Jay Bell's triple scored Pittsburgh runs in the third against Mike Morgan (6-5), who is 0-5 lifetime against the Pirates and has a 6.46 ERA in Three Rivers Stadium.

Braves 6, Mets 1

NEW YORK (AP) — Steve Avery did it all by pitching a five-hitter and going 4-for-4 as Atlanta beat New York.

Avery, Atlanta's No. 1 pick in the 1988 amateur draft, entered the game with two hits in 21 at-bats this season and 6-for-51 lifetime.

The record for most hits in a game by a pitcher is five, last accomplished by Mel Stottlemyre of the New York Yankees on Sept. 26, 1964, against Washington. Stottlemyre is now the Mets' pitching coach.

Expos 10, Reds 9

MONTREAL — Tim Wallach had four hits, including his third homer in four days, and Dave Martinez went 3-for-3 with two RBI as Montreal outslugged Cincinnati.

Scott Ruskin (2-1) pitched one inning to get the victory while Randy Myers (2-4) took the Reds' first loss in four games.

Wallach's fourth hit of the game, a single in the eighth inning, scored Marquis Grissom with the go-ahead run.

Padres 7, Cardinals 2

SAN DIEGO — Tony Fernandez hit a tie-breaking single to ignite a five-run rally in the eighth inning, preserving a fine effort by Bruce Hurst as the San Diego Padres beat the St. Louis Cardinals.

Hurst (7-3) allowed four hits over eight innings. After allowing a two-run single to opposing pitcher Omar Olivares in the second inning, Hurst retired 14 straight batters before Rex Hudler hit a bunt single in the seventh.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

THURSDAY, JUNE 13, 1991

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Expect to be treated like royalty! Look for major career and business improvements, beginning in late summer. Although sudden, dramatic changes will mark your personal affairs, romance should continue on a smooth course. Travel for business in December. A change of lifestyle in spring of 1992 will benefit you physically, emotionally and spiritually.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actor Richard Thomas, poet W.B. Yeats, actress Ellen Corby, tennis great Don Budge.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Things are turning out much better than expected. Be more open in expressing your feelings for that special person. The next few days will teach you a lot about yourself and life.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Romance becomes much more satisfying once you gain a clear picture of where things stand. Your loyalty to a longtime friend may be put to the test; you pass with flying colors!

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Travel could play a key role today. Legal papers are a source of concern. Be careful not to show irritation if your associates surprise you with an alternative business plan.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Sports can be exciting. You feel like showing your splashy, aggressive and humorous sides all at the same time. Be careful not to walk down a blind alley where finances are concerned.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Questions regarding shared possessions or joint funds could make someone touchy. Do not cheat yourself; refuse to give in to unfair demands. Seek more information. Talk energetically and admit past mistakes.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Doing your work efficiently is a source of pride. You are "up" for big challenges and meet them with a smile. Remain close to loyal friends despite your differences. Romance progresses nicely.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A period of meditation leads to a startling revelation. Do some things you have been postponing. Mate enjoys your company more when you are relaxed. Prepare a simple but tasty dinner.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov.21): Sharing your feelings with a friend may be painful yet necessary. You are tuned in to your job in a marvelous way and can accomplish a lot. Show your versatility to higher-ups.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Stop pressuring someone about money or a valuable possession. What's done is done. Get together with people you respect and love. Two heads are better than one when planning for the future.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): A dynamic partnership leads to adventure. If you really want to travel with a friend, do it. Maintain your sense of humor at a difficult business meeting or family gathering.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A stimulating work partner makes all the difference! You need to take account of people's worries before announcing major changes. Listen to the grapevine to find out public sentiment.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): A burst of energy will help you complete a task ahead of schedule. A pet project gets the green light. Be patient with a possessive family member. Reassure someone who acts insecure.

TODAY'S CHILDREN are never content to be second best. Count on them to work tirelessly to beat their competitors. Wise parents and teachers will fuel these youngsters' interest in new experiences by introducing them to books at an early age. Voracious readers, these Geminis will develop verbal and written skills far above the norm. Although they may appear fickle in romance, they can show excellent judgment in waiting for the right permanent partner.

Opening lead: Jack of ♡

Those who live by the finesse often die by the finesse. So obsessed are they with this play that they overlook alternative possibilities that might assure their contracts against all distributional quirks.

North-South arrived at a normal three-no-trump contract after North first checked on the possibility of a 4-4 fit in a major via the Stayman Convention. West led the jack of hearts and declarer, an inveterate finesser, looked no further than the diamond suit.

Declarer won the opening lead in dummy and immediately finessed the jack of diamonds. Had the king been with East, or had the suit split 3-2, the contract would have been a cakewalk. As the cards lay, West took the king of diamonds and persevered with hearts. When East showed out on the second diamond, South had only eight tricks. Since spades did not behave kindly, declarer could not set up a ninth trick before the defenders had five—down one.

With seven fast tricks, declarer needed only two more to fulfill the contract. Since declarer could still afford to lose the lead twice more before the defenders' heart tricks were established, the club suit would have proven to be a more fertile field.

The combined North-South holding held all the club spots except for the ace and king. By going after the club suit immediately, declarer would have been sure to establish two tricks in the suit by force. Unless they've changed basic math since the days we were in school, seven plus two equals nine, and that's all North-South contracted for. On some distributions, the diamond finesse would still be available for overtricks.

Couple cancels wedding

LOS ANGELES — Julia Roberts and Kiefer Sutherland have canceled the wedding just three days before Hollywood's most eagerly awaited walk-down-the-aisle.

Roberts

More than 200 people had been invited to the ceremony, which had been scheduled for Friday on the back lot of 20th Century Fox, maker of Miss Roberts' upcoming movie, "Dying Young."

"It has been mutually agreed upon that the wedding between Julia Roberts and Kiefer Sutherland has been postponed," the actors' publicists, Annette Wolf and Pat Kingsley, said in a statement. Neither would elaborate.

Sutherland answered the door of Miss Roberts' Hollywood Hills home on Tuesday and threw up his hands when asked about the wedding.

"No, I don't want to talk about it," he said, and walked back inside.

Miss Roberts, 23, starred in "Pretty Woman" and "Sleeping With the Enemy."

Sutherland, 24, is the son of actor Donald Sutherland and appeared in "Young Guns," "Stand By Me" and "The Lost Boys."

Many guests were unaware of the cancellation Tuesday. And at least one publicist issued a news release about the shoes purchased by Miss Roberts' four bridesmaids minutes before the postponement was announced.

"I hope they can return them," publicist Lee Solters said.

LOS ANGELES — The producers of "Designing Women" have finally dropped Delta Burke from the show after fighting with her for nearly a year.

Burke

"Quite frankly, we just got tired of dealing with it," co-executive producer Linda Bloodworth-Thomason said.

The battle had included a lawsuit and teary accusations from Burke that the producers threatened to fire her because she was overweight.

"Never a cross or negative word has crossed between her and me about her weight or anything else," Bloodworth-Thomason said. "And everyone at 'Designing Women' knows it."

Bloodworth-Thomason produces the hit CBS comedy with her husband, Harry Thomason. She said they refused to renew Burke's contract for a sixth season.

Julia Duffy, who last week quit ABC's "Baby Talk" series, is in final negotiations to join "Designing Women," said her agent, Sam Gores.

NEW YORK — ABC is reviving its long-running "Dynasty" series as a two-part miniseries, complete with much of the original cast.

Collins

"Dynasty: The Miniseries" began filming Wednesday in Los Angeles and northern California, with John Forsythe as rich, powerful Blake Carrington, Linda Evans as his loving wife Krystle, and Joan Collins as his just plain nasty former wife, Alexis.

The new episodes will have the Carringtons facing "another mysterious rival whose primary weapons are sex and murder," explained Esther Shapiro, one of four executive producers working on the revival.

"Dynasty," premiered on ABC in 1981 as a mid-season replacement. It promptly enchanted millions with its tales of love, wealth and low behavior in high places.

The miniseries will air Oct. 20 and 22.

EDINBURGH, Scotland — Actor Sean Connery, Edinburgh's most famous son, has been made a Freeman of the Scottish capital, an honor he shares with Winston Churchill and Charles Dickens.

Connery

The 60-year-old actor was honored Tuesday by Lord Provost Eleanor McLaughlin.

"He has probably been the greatest promotion man for the city of Edinburgh that we have ever had," Ms. McLaughlin said. "I can't tell you how much excitement there has been among the women of Edinburgh."

She said the actor had "walked with kings and millionaires but at all times he is still that boy from Edinburgh."

Connery starred in several James Bond films and won an Oscar for his role as a tough but virtuous Chicago cop in "The Untouchables."

PRINCETON, N.J. — Film director and screenwriter Martin Scorsese was one of nine people who received honoroary degrees from Princeton University.

A Doctor of Fine Arts also was given to Scorsese for having films "distinguished by their originality of style and the intensity of their insight into the struggle between passion and virtue."

"Taxi Driver," "Raging Bull," and the Oscar-nominated "Goodfellas" are among Scorsese's better known films.

POINTS: MHS, Lee 5th & 6th

(From 1C)

Both Midland High and Midland Lee had successful spring outings with both schools nearly doubling point totals garnered in all of 1990. Still, the local schools are fifth and sixth, respectively, in the points race.

Lee and MHS swept baseball and swimming this year. Lee made the soccer playoffs for the first time in school history and the Midland High boys were back in the basketball playoffs. The Lee girls placed second in the district track meet and the MHS soccer team tied Lee for second place.

Lee has won four district championships in the decade to date with two of them coming in girls swimming, but MHS has only one title to its credit with boys swimming. MHS' 76 spring points trailed only San Angelo's whopping 95.

Other decade district titles won by league schools are Abilene High, four; Cooper, three; and Odessa High, one.

Odessa High scored only 19 spring points this year with 13 of them coming in track. The Bronchos earned no points in six catagories.

Midland High's boys swimmers scored 18 of a possible 20 points and that is the best mark posted by any team in one sport. Abilene High's girls scored 16 points in track this spring. The MHS boys also scored 17 points in swimming last year to own the two best point production totals in the district for one sport.

a flagrant foul on Pippen, who made two free throws before Jordan wriggled through the Lakers for a layup that put Chicago in front 90-88.

Five straight points put Los Angeles in front 93-90 before Pippen's 3-pointer tied the score for the 10th time in the half, and Paxson followed with consecutive jumpers, the 11th lead change of the half.

He later had a layup and two more jumpers as the Bulls pulled away and improved their playoff record to 15-2, matching Detroit for the best postseason performance since the current format started in 1984. The Bulls allowed just 92.2 points per game in the playoffs, breaking Detroit's record of 92.9 in 1989. Chicago held its opponents under 100 points in 14 of 17 postseason games.

The Lakers are the first team in Finals history to lose five consecutive home games.

Los Angeles withstood a 10-for-11 shooting onslaught, including 5-for-5 by Pippen, in the first six minutes of the second half.

"I'm very proud of the effort the guys put out, especially the two young guys, Campbell and Smith," Lakers coach Mike Dunleavy said.

Judge mum on recusal from case

FORT WORTH (AP) — A state district judge who excused herself from hearing a lawsuit against tennis star Martina Navratilova has declined to explain her decision.

Civil Judge Catherine Gant on Monday announced her recusal from the case. The move came the same day Ms. Navratilova's lawyer, Mike McCurley of Dallas, filed four motions, one to remove his legal adversary in the trial.

Ms. Gant, asked to explain her recusal, told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram in Wednesday's editions: "I can't tell you right now. I can tell you when it is over."

The judge, before excusing herself, set a June 20 hearing on a temporary injunction in the case that was requested by Ms. Navratilova's former companion, Judy Nelson. Ms. Nelson sought the injunction to have the court name a receiver for the couple's joint property.

Rules

Rules for Obtaining Decade Points

1. School team must be competing in a University Interscholastic League sport played during the 1990s.
2. Girls and Boys teams will be treated equally. For example: Girls basketball will be treated as one sport and boys basketball as one sport.
3. Teams may only earn a maximum of 20 points in any one sport.
4. If UIL sports are added to the district during the decade, that sport will immediately be added to the point totals.
5. If a team is added to the district, they will start earning points at point of entry.
6. Any team disqualified from competition by UIL will receive no points in that sport.
7. Formula for determining points:

Football, basketball, volleyball, soccer and baseball will all be treated the same. Points will be awarded on a 12-10-8-6-4-2-0 basis on order of finish in district standings. One point will also be awarded for each playoff victory posted and an additional two point bonus will be given to a state championship team. To score 20 points a team must be a district champion, win six playoff games and be awarded two more points for the state championship. (Note: Since the UIL is sending three teams to the football playoffs, the school which goes into the 32-team bracket will be given 20 points if that school is a district champion and wins all five playoff games. The same will hold for any of these sports if it takes less than six playoff victories to win a state championship.)

Swimming: District standings will be awarded on 12-10-8-6-4-2-0 basis on order of finish in district swim meet. One bonus point can be earned for winning a regional team championship and one point for winning a state team championship. A one point bonus can be earned by individuals winning regional and state titles. A two point bonus will be given for a state team championship, but only a maximum of 20 points can be earned.

Golf: District standings will be awarded on 12-10-8-6-4-2-0 basis on order of finish in district golf tour. One point for each region and state team title. A bonus point for a top two medalist finish in region and state competition. Two bonus points for a team state championship.

Tennis: Tennis is unique since teams have competition in both spring and fall. District standings will be awarded on 12-10-8-6-4-2-0 basis on order of finish in district team tennis play in the fall. Team tennis can earn a bonus point for regional and state championship, plus a two point bonus for team state championship. In the spring, additional bonus points can be earned by individuals who win regional and state titles. However, only a maximum of 20 points can be won.

Track: District standings will be awarded on 12-10-8-6-4-2-0 basis on order of finish in district track meet. One bonus point for each regional and state team title won. Two additional bonus points for state team championship. Individuals and relays may earn one bonus point for regional and state championships. Only a maximum of 20 points can be earned.

Cross Country: District standings will be awarded on 12-10-8-6-4-2-0 basis on order of finish in district cross country meet. A bonus point for a top two individual finish in region and state competition. Also a team may earn a point for a region and state title. Two additional bonus points for a state championship.

Fresno State joins WAC

Associated Press

LITTLETON, Colo. — Fresno State on Wednesday accepted an invitation to become the 10th member of the Western Athletic Conference.

The WAC's Council of Presidents voted unanimously to extend a membership invitation to Fresno State, and the invitation was accepted, officials announced.

The decision to offer the membership came at the annual meeting of the council in Durango earlier this week, according to Dr. Diana Natalicio, Texas-El Paso president and chairwoman of the Council of Presidents.

Fresno State's membership is effective July 1, 1992, and will include full integration of men's and women's athletic programs into the 21 championships (11 men's and 10 women's) sponsored by the WAC.

Fresno State president Dr. Harold Haak said he was "delighted" with the move. "Such membership ensures a stable Division IA home for all Fresno State sports and offers a future competitive challenge to the Bulldogs," he said.

UIL refuses to limit high school hoops to one game per week

Associated Press

AUSTIN — The University Interscholastic League Committee on Athletics refused Wednesday to recommend that the number of high school basketball games be restricted to one a week.

The limitation was sought by officials of small schools in West Texas and the South Plains, who claimed that travel time during the week was interfering with school work.

The officials proposed that no team or student participate in more than one basketball game a week, except for tournaments or district make-ups. There also would be a limit of one invitational tournament per season.

Games would be played only on Thursday, Friday or Saturday, under the proposal submitted Tuesday to the committee.

The Texas Association of Basketball Coaches opposed the idea, saying it would be a "disastrous step" toward de-emphasizing athletics in Texas.

The athletics committee did not take a direct vote on the proposal Wednesday, but recommended that school officials who feel that team sports are cutting too severely into study time should consider playing only on Friday or Saturday.

The six-member committee recommended that a proposed rule to lower the enrollment cutoff for six-man football from 95 students in high school to 75 be delayed until the 1994-95 school year.

A referendum of superintendents at schools that play six-man football approved the change, 55-25, this spring but schools such as Chillicothe and Bosqueville opposed the change.

Bosqueville Superintendent Roy Trussell said if the ruling should stand, he has recommended that Bosqueville drop football "as there is no way we can compete in 11-man."

"As a former coach, you know how it feels to be everyone's homecoming," Trussell wrote UIL director Bailey Marshall.

The committee, whose actions are presented as recommendations to the UIL Legislative Council, agreed to forward to the council language that would clarify the so-called amateur rule.

A list of violations that could result in the ejection of a basketball coach after only one technical foul was suggested for consideration by the 24-member council at its Oct. 21-22 meeting. Violations would include physical contact with a game official, vocal threats, vulgar gestures, profanity or flagrant fouls.

Procedures were spelled out for certain school administrators at athletic contests to report unsportsmanlike behavior of fans, players or coaches and any unprofessional conduct by officials.

The athletics committee rejected coaches' proposals to expand the number of qualifiers at state meets in swimming and team tennis and at regional meets in track and field.

Other coaches' proposals rejected by the athletics committee included:

— Creating North and South area track meets, after regional meets, with four individuals and four relays advancing to the state meet in each event from each area.

— Considering moving the state track meet back to the third week in May.

— Allowing coaching of golfers during tournaments, between holes.

Plea entered

COVINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Lawyers for Reggie Rembert entered an innocent plea Wednesday on behalf of the Cincinnati Bengals receiver, charged with driving under the influence of alcohol and other violations.

Kenton District Court Judge William Schmaedecke scheduled a July 31 trial for Rembert, who also is charged with reckless driving and having no operator's license.

Rembert, 24, was charged May 22 in Covington. Police said his vehicle made a wide turn at an intersection at 1:30 a.m.

NCAA to record investigations

Associated Press

OVERLAND PARK, Kan. — The NCAA, over the objections of its top enforcement officers, has changed a long-criticized policy and begun tape recording investigators' interviews.

For years, the enforcement division resisted pressure from critics who said interviews ought to be taped to insure accuracy. Enforcement chiefs argued the recordings would compromise confidentiality.

But the infractions committee, which oversees the NCAA's full-time enforcement staff in Overland Park and decides cases, decreed at its April meeting that taping should be tried on an experimental basis.

"We didn't suggest that they start taping their interviews with witnesses," said Alan Williams, chairman of the committee. "We directed it."

David Berst, director of the enforcement staff, said investigators began taping conversations with witnesses in mid-May. There has been no announcement of the policy change.

Witnesses will be given access to the tapes but are not allowed to make their own recordings. They can decline to be taped.

"The tape recordings will be used in the event of some kind of conflict concerning what was said," Berst told The Associated Press. "But it's only for that purpose. We still take notes. We still write memorandums."

OPEN: Watson praises course

gems.

"I really, really like this golf course," Tom Watson said. "It might be the best Open course I've ever played.

"I have sentimental value for Pebble Beach. Winged Foot might be the toughest ... but I'd like to see the modern-day architects come to this course and see how it should be designed."

During the infamous 1970 Open, runnerup Dave Hill said, "They ruined a good farm; all it needs is 40 acres of corn and a herd of cows."

Since then, severe doglegs have been straightened, tee-to-green sightlines have been improved, entire holes have been redesigned, trees have matured. And almost everyone scheduled to tee it up Thursday has praised the course.

Curtis Strange: "It's an excellent course. What we've seen so far has pleasantly surprised everybody. In 1970, I saw and read everything that was said and I didn't know what to expect. But it could not be farther from what we heard."

Nick Faldo: "The course is very straightforward, an honest test of golf. No tricks, no surprises. Every hole is good and in fantastic condition."

Seve Ballesteros: "It's a challenging course. It's fair. This is a great course."

Of all the testimonials, none were more glowing than Watson's.

Asked about great U.S. Open courses, he said: "This one, to me, really stands out."

Watson, who won the tournament in 1982 at Pebble Beach and has had three other top-three finishes, is getting his first look at Hazeltine this week.

"I heard the reputation, from 1970. But the course has completely changed," he added. "Overall, the course is just a pleasure to play. It should determine a great champion."

Watson most likes the fact that a golfer can recover after getting into trouble, partly because the front of every green is open rather than protected by bunkers and water hazards.

"Many of the modern-day golf courses we play, you're forced to land the ball on the green," Watson said. "When you have a 30-mile-an-hour wind, it takes it beyond the capabilities of even the best golfers in the world. There's no out. There's no recovery. That's what they've taken away.

"Walter Hagen said, 'I expect to hit seven lousy shots in a round of golf.' The modern-day architect says, 'From those seven lousy shots, you will not be able to recover.' The old school said, 'Recovery is part of it. Let's give a small entrance to the green, so if you want to try to hit under a tree limb and roll the ball onto the green, you have that option.'

"People like to see that. Go for it. They don't want to see somebody pitch out with a wedge and hit another wedge onto the green."

Watson said a great golf course can "be played by the rank amateur and the best pro, just by changing the conditions."

"Every golfer could go out and play this course," he said. "It might be long from the tees, but at least you could get around it without losing two dozen golf balls.

"If we slope the greens and soften them up, and take away the U.S. Open roughs, everybody could go out and have a delightful time on this golf course."

Odds against Irwin, not history

■ Every previous golfer to win three U.S. Opens has gone on to win a fourth, and Hale Irwin got his third a year ago.

By Bob Green
AP Golf Writer

CHASKA, Minn. — The image is etched in memory: the usually staid Hale Irwin romping around the green, joyfully slapping high-fives with a startled gallery.

Irwin was propelled into the impromptu victory lap — so completely out of character for the tightly controlled Irwin — by an across-the-green, last-hole birdie putt in last year's U.S. Open at Medinah, Ill.

One of the more dramatic moments of that championship, or any other of the 90 U.S. Opens, was as Irwin said, a celebration for the over-40 set.

"It showed that just because you're over 40, it's no reason to roll out the carpet and send the band home," he said. "The party goes on."

Irwin, now 46 and already the oldest man ever to win the U.S. Open, attempts to extend that middle-aged party this week.

"It's a longshot," he said. "But at least, it's a shot."

And, although the odds are long and the opposition formidable, he has just a little bit of history on his side going into the Thursday start at the Hazeltine National Golf Club.

No one who ever won three U.S. Opens, as Irwin has done, stopped at that figure. The others who won three — Willie Anderson, Bobby Jones, Ben Hogan and Jack Nicklaus — all went on to a fourth.

In an Open in which there is no clearcut favorite, Irwin would appear to have a something better than an outside chance.

"Actually, I'm probably a little ahead of where I was at this time last year," he said.

The record — and some of golf's more prominent touring pros — agree.

In his last five starts on the PGA Tour Irwin finished 10th, fourth, third, second and third.

"Hale's playing awfully well. He's at the top of my list," said Curtis Strange, who scored consecutive Open victories in 1988-89.

"You have to look at the horses who are running well now," said Tom Watson, a five-time British Open winner. "Hale certainly fits in that category."

There's also the course and the demands it makes on the players, demands that play to the strength of Irwin's game.

Hazeltine has been revamped, revised, redesigned and rebuilt since it hosted the 1970 U.S. Open and was condemned by Dave Hill as a cow pasture.

"The best Open course I've ever played," Watson said of the current layout.

The setup is traditional for Open courses. The greens are extremely hard and very, very fast. The rough is up even higher than usual, five inches instead of the usual four. The fairways are narrow.

The premium is on accuracy, off the tee and to the green.

A shot into the rough, confidently predicted Stuart Bloch, chairman of the Championship Committee of the sponsoring U.S. Golf Association, "will extract the half-stroke penalty it is designed to."

All of which fits nicely with Irwin's steady, grind-it-out game and patient, perservering attitude.

That patience and perserverance paid off last year in perhaps the most dramatic victory of his career.

He had not won in five years going into the tournament at Medinah. The drought, he said, was not so much that he couldn't play, as it was that he didn't play.

Not that much, anyway. He became involved in his golf course design and management business in St. Louis. For three years he simply didn't play enough to be competitive.

When he got the business operating to his satisfaction, he spent more and more time on his playing career and, slowly, the game came back.

He had been in contention several times in 1990, but hadn't won. The conventional wisdom was that he was another old fellow hanging on, just waiting for the Senior Tour.

Then he went to the back nine in the U.S. Open. Playing about an hour in front of other contenders.

Dent confident he can claim third MONY title

Associated Press

SYRACUSE, N.Y. — In the past, Jim Dent has been able to transform forgettable seasons into memorable ones at the $400,000 MONY Syracuse Senior Golf Classic.

Dent, the tournament's two-time defending champion, is confident he can pull off another reversal of fortune at the par-72 Lafayette Country Club again this year.

After consecutive wins here, Dent is convinced his long-hitting game is best fit for the 6,540-yard course, which features five par-5s and three long par-4 holes.

"I have great memories out there. I could tell you every shot I hit there," said the 52-year-old golfer, who will go for his third straight MONY victory beginning Friday.

"I always look to Syracuse. It's my favorite home. I won two in a row here. I wish I could play here every day. If I win again, I might move up here," he said.

Dent's season has been lackluster so far, after winning four events in 1990 and finishing sixth on the money list ($693,214).

His best showing in 1991 was a second three months ago at The Tradition in Arizona. Dent hasn't finished in the top finish since the Doug Sanders Kingwood Celebrity Classic in May, a span of five tournaments.

"I've hit a lot of good shots; I just want some consistency. I expect to do better here," said Dent, who's still finished in the money in the 14 tournaments he's entered, including 12 top 25 finishes.

Inconsistency is about the only thing preventing Dent from getting the big paycheck. He's the seniors' leader with 164 birdies and eight eagles, which you might expect from a golfer averaging 284 yards on his drives.

But Dent is noticeably missing from among the driving accuracy leaders and from among the golfers with the best greens-in-regulation percentages.

It's almost like last year, when Dent was struggling with his driving accuracy when he arrived at Lafayette. Fortunately, Dent found his putting stroke and edged out George Archer by a stroke, with a final-round 66 and a 54-hole total of 199.

Two years ago, Dent came from behind in the final round to win his first professional title with a 201.

Winning the same tourmament three straight years can be difficult, said Bruce Crampton, who won the MONY title in 1986 and 1987.

"Expectations can get in your way," Crampton said. "I do best without expectations, because without them you are prepared to accept what comes along."

Crampton said winning an event once, or even twice, gives a player a mental edge, but winning again still comes down to the physical part of the game.

Judge upholds decision in Ricky Sanders' paternity suit

Associated Press

AUSTIN — A paternity suit against Washington Redskins wide receiver Ricky Sanders that orders him to pay $10,000 per month to support a child was upheld Wednesday by a state appeals court.

Sanders' attorney, James Farris, said the football player was seeking a settlement in the case, but that the court's decision may be appealed to the Texas Supreme Court.

In January 1990, a Travis County trial court ruled that Sanders was the father of a girl born to Catherine Michelle Bumgardner of Austin. Sanders did not answer the lawsuit, and did not participate in the trial, according to the opinion by the Austin-based 3rd Court of Appeals.

The infant required constant medical monitoring because she had frequent breathing problems and was at risk for Sudden Infant Death Syndrome, the opinion stated.

In a typical evening, the alarm on her breathing monitor frequently sounded, and her mother would have to revive her, the opinion said.

The opinion said Sanders had sent the mother money for the breathing monitor. An attorney for Bumgardner, said Sanders has been paying child support, but he declined to say how much.

Both attorneys in the case said the child was doing better now, but did not divulge details.

No one answered a telephone call made Wednesday by The Associated Press to a residence listed under the name of Cathy Bumgardner.

Farris said Sanders does not know if he is the child's father.

On appeal, Sanders argued he was served legal papers in the case improperly and that the evidence was insufficient to prove he was the father. He also argued that the facts in the case did not support the child support award, which included payment of health insurance and costs not covered by health insurance.

Top stars upset at Queens Club

LONDON (AP) — Defending champion Ivan Lendl and U.S. Open champion Pete Sampras were upset Wednesday in the second round of the Queens Club grass courts tournament.

Lendl, who didn't lose a set last year, this time was ousted in his first match, losing 5-7, 6-3, 6-4 to Canadian Grant Connell.

Top seed Stefan Edberg cruised to a 6-4, 6-3 victory over Frenchman Arnaud Boetsch.

Lendl, given a first round bye, was ahead 7-5, 3-1 when Connell won five games in a row. He broke Lendl after a ten-minute rain delay at 3-3 in the third and served out for the match.

Keil, from Tampa, Fla., served ten aces in the one hour, 19 minute match.

"Right now I feel on top of the world," the 24-year-old Keil said. "This is one of the biggest days of my life."

Sampras, ranked eighth in the world to Keil's 224, breezed through his opening service game and then things started to go wrong.

Bank profits almost double

By Jim Fuquay
N.Y.T. News Service

Texas banks, which suffered four straight years of catastrophic losses before finally making money last year, now rank among the nation's most profitable, according to a Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. report.

Texas bank profits nearly doubled to $305 million in the year's first three months compared to a year earlier, while at the same time real estate woes pushed down bank profits nationally by 8.8 percent, said the report released this week.

Among states, Texas banks ranked sixth best in profitability.

"We're hearing from all corners of the state that economic conditions are improved substantially," said Robert Harris, president of the Texas Bankers Association in Austin.

Said James Sexton, an Austin banking consultant and former Texas Banking Commissioner: "The banking industry in this state is pretty well cured."

Sexton served as state banking commissioner from 1983 to 1986.

Leading the way in first-quarter profits among Texas banks were most of the state's biggest institutions: NCNB Texas; Bank One, Texas; Texas Commerce Bancshares; First Interstate-Texas; and Team Bank. They earned a combined $187.2 million.

NCNB Texas, Bank One and Team Bank were created in 1988 and 1989 after the collapses of First RepublicBank Corp., MCorp and Texas American Bancshares, respectively — the three most expensive bank failures in Texas history.

During the first quarter, California was No. 1 in bank profits, with $753 million, followed by Delaware, New York, Illinois and Ohio.

Connecticut, Maryland, Massachusetts and New Hampshire — as well as the District of Columbia — were the only states whose banks reported combined losses.

Profits at 12,246 U.S. banks totaled $5.7 billion in the first quarter, compared to $6.2 billion in the same quarter a year earlier, according to the report.

FDIC Chairman L. William Seidman attributed declining profits nationally to continued deterioration of real estate, particularly at larger banks in the Northeast. He also mentioned loans to corporate buyout deals and to Third World countries.

At the end of March, 11.9 percent of

Prices steady

NEW YORK (AP) — Prices of crude oil and heating fuel rose Wednesday but gasoline weakened in an energy market influenced by new supply statistics and rumors of increased Iran-Iraq border tension.

On the New York Mercantile Exchange, the price for July-delivery contracts of West Texas Intermediate ended 9 cents higher at $20.05 a barrel.

Traders said the main force in the market was the report released late Tuesday by the American Petroleum Institute, a Washington trade group, that showed increased stockpiles of crude oil and refined fuels.

That report initially pushed crude prices down, but they reached levels that were considered bargains and incited a round of buying.

As the prices continued to rise, other traders who had wrongly assumed crude would weaken also joined in the buying, raising the price even more in what is known in the trading vocabulary as a short-covering rally.

Natural gas prices continued a long trend of weakness. Gas for July delivery fell .9 cent per 1,000 cubic feet to $1.271.

Stocks plunge

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market finished lower Wednesday, after staging a partial recovery from a broad fall that came in tandem with sagging bond prices.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials fell 23.92 points to 2,961.99.

Dollar soars

NEW YORK (AP) — The dollar surged against most major currencies in active trading Wednesday, reaching a 19-month high against the embattled German mark.

On the New York Commodity Exchange, gold bullion for current delivery settled at $370.20 a troy ounce, down 70 cents from late Tuesday.

Market watchers attributed the dollar's advance to renewed expectations for a turnaround in the U.S. economy, along with the possibility of higher interest rates, which would help keep the dollar firm.

The dollar traded at 1.7905 marks in New York, off its highs for the day but up sharply above from Tuesday's closing quote of 1.7735.

The dollar was also stronger against the British pound compared with Tuesday's levels. Sterling fetched $1.6463 in London, down from $1.6625.

NYSE adds extra hours for trading

NEW YORK (AP) —The closing bell will still sound at 4 p.m. on the floor of the New York Stock Exchange today, but for the first time business will reopen by computer for an extra hour and 15 minutes.

Adding services like a bank or a gas station facing new competition, the nation's largest stock market is extending its business day with two after-hours sessions to trade stocks at the day's closing prices.

The experiment comes as alternative systems in this country and abroad are eroding the NYSE's dominance. It's also a step in the exchange's plan for 24-hour trading by the year 2000.

Trading stocks before or after the NYSE's 9:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. trading day is nothing new. Investors already are making trades at odd hours on other exchanges and through private electronic networks.

What's new is the NYSE's attempt to grab a piece of that action. Its move confirms the importance of longer trading hours.

"When the major market in the United States decides to trade outside its normal hours after a lag of some years ... that does put an imprimatur of respectability on this," said Hans Stoll, director of financial markets research at Vanderbilt University.

"It is a recognition that trading hours are expanding and they need to be part of it," Stoll said. "It's indicative of the sense of competition they feel."

The NYSE last changed its hours in 1985, opening 30 minutes earlier. In 1974, the trading day was extended by a half hour to 4 p.m. In 1952, trading was extended to 3:30 from 3, and a two-hour Saturday session was eliminated.

In the new system, orders to buy or sell individual stocks can be placed from 4:15 to 5 p.m. Baskets of 15 or more stocks worth at least $1 million can be traded in a concurrent session running from 4 to 5:15 p.m.

They are known officially as Crossing Session I and II, referring to the fact that the trades are being "crossed" electronically, rather than settled auction-style by traders on the floor of the exchange.

All trades in the crossing session for individual stocks will be made at the NYSE's 4 p.m. closing prices.

Individual investors can participate in the first session, while the second is designed for large institutional traders.

The sessions mark a significant change for the tradition-conscious Big Board, as the exchange is known, because they bypass the "specialists" who regulate trading flow on the bustling floor.

Energy firm announces hedging plan

By John Paul Pitts
Business/Oil Editor

Thanks to the most aggressive hedging program in the industry, Santa Fe Energy is looking to spend approximately $30 million in the Permian Basin this year.

"We were fortunate — or smart enough — to hedge 80 percent of our production for the year for $24.70 West Texas Intermediate equivalent," said James L. Payne, chairman and president of Santa Fe Energy Inc.

Payne, who was in Midland with a contingent of Santa Fe executives for a Wildcatters' Reception, said the aggressive hedging program was launched because Santa Fe wanted to be sure it had the revenues to pursue the capital projects it had on the board for this year.

"I am afraid, however, that spending will be less next year, when the hedging program is done. Also, the outlook for gas prices don't look that good." he noted.

Since spinning off from the parent company Santa Fe Railroad in March 1990 the company has been on an aggressive expansion program, and the Permian Basin has a prime recipient.

Santa Fe employs 42 in its Midland office and 69 throughout the Permian Basin District, which is one of the top performers in the company. Not only does the Permian Basin have one of the lowest finding costs, it also has one of the best exploration records with over a 50 percent success rate.

"Currently the Permian Basin accounts for about 11,000 barrels daily

S&Ls post rare first quarter profit

WASHINGTON (AP) — Privately run savings and loans posted a rare profit in the January-March period, the government reported Wednesday, but analysts said that won't do much to hold down the growing cost of bailing out the industry.

The nation's 2,283 thrifts, excluding 204 institutions under government control, earned $627 million in the first quarter, the Office of Thrift Supervision said.

That compares with a loss of $373 million for the 2,505 privately run thrifts in the same period a year ago and a loss of $1.49 billion at 2,342 private S&Ls in the last three months of 1990.

Eighty-five percent of the institutions made money in the first quarter. It was the industry's first profit since January-March 1987, when 3,203 institutions earned $98 million.

Thrift office director Timothy Ryan attributed the improvement primarily to the seizure of the worst thrifts by the S&L bailout agency, the Resolution Trust Corp. It has taken over 612 since early 1989.

Also, since late last year, the interest rates thrifts pay on deposits have dropped sharply while the rate they earn on mortgages and other investments has fallen only modestly.

The report came a day after Charles Bowsher, head of the General Accounting Office, said the cost of the S&L bailout likely will exceed the Bush administration's $130 billion worst-case estimate.

He attributed the deterioration primarily to the continued slippage in commercial real estate values. The government has been trying to sell a mountain of properties inherited from failed thrifts and has found it increasingly necessary to discount its asking prices.

Ryan noted an increase in the percentage of past-due real estate loans to 2.44 at the end of March from 2.29 percent three months earlier.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Planning eases traveler's check exchanges

By Bill Doyle

Q. When going overseas, is it better to purchase traveler's checks in the currency of the country to which you are traveling or in U.S. dollars to be exchanged there?

Doyle

A. If you are going to just one country, it's usually wise to get your traveler's checks in that country's currency. That will avoid the hassle of exchanging U.S. dollar checks for the foreign currency. It also might, but not necessarily, save a bit on the exchange rate.

If you are going to two or more countries, it is generally recommended you take U.S. dollar traveler's checks, which are accepted all around the globe. In some countries it is impossible, or at least, difficult to exchange local currency back into U.S. dollars.

I recall an experience at Rome's Leonardo Da Vinci Airport. The currency exchange office there would not swap Italian lire for American dollars for people who had not saved the receipts they received when they exchanged dollars or cashed traveler's checks. Fortunately, my blue-eyed finance officer had our receipts in her purse.

Q. Do all banks supply foreign currency traveler's checks and charge similar fees?

A. Most banks and other suppliers of traveler's checks in the United States make those checks available in foreign currencies at the same fee — if any. Many banks, savings and loan associations, credit unions, the American Automobile Association and others levy no fee for U.S. dollar and foreign currency traveler's checks.

The standard advice on this is to shop around.

Q. I am leaving soon to spend three months in Ireland. I plan to buy a used car there, to beat the high cost of auto rental. Because we own a house there, the car will be garaged to use again in future years.

Are there any pitfalls I should watch out for?

One blessing is you use your feet as we do in the United States — your right for the accelerator and brake and your left for the clutch, on gearshift cars.

Nonetheless, it takes some practice to get used to driving on the left. Some members of the Minnesota Press Club with whom we were traveling came close to causing multitudinous accidents driving away from the Dublin Airport.

Q. In advance of a trip to Ireland, I went to my bank to exchange dollars for Irish "punt," a word I recall you used in your column. The cashier didn't know what I was talking about. Neither did the bank vice president she called for assistance. He insisted Irish currency is called "pounds."

Can you straighten me out on this?

A. Let's get those bankers squared away.

Pound is the English word for punt, the Irish currency in that nation's native Celtic tongue. Coming from a long line of unrepentant Feinians, I refuse to use what my father called "Sasanach" words when an Irish word will do.

Q. I travel aboard frequently and, when exchanging dollars for foreign currencies or back again, I never receive the prices shown in newspaper foreign exchange tables. How do you explain that?

A. Besides the fact that foreign exchange rates can change from day to day — sometimes, minute to minute — the amounts listed in those tables apply to bank currency trading in amounts of $1 million and more.

Most newspaper tables explain that, either at the top of the column or in a footnote, which I suspect you did not read.

NEW YORK STOCK EXCHANGE

ANALYSIS

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market finished lower Wednesday, after staging a partial recovery from a broad fall that came in tandem with sagging bond prices.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials fell 23.92 points to 2,961.99. Early in the afternoon, the Dow average had sunk to a low for the day of 2,936.49 points.

Declining issues outnumbered gainers by almost 4 to 1 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed stocks, with 1,238 down, 364 up and 471 unchanged.

Volume on the floor of the Big Board came to 166.50 million shares, up from 161.61 million in the previous session.

Nationwide, consolidated volume in NYSE-listed issues, including trades in those stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 202.44 million shares.

The market has been mostly moving down following the Dow average's recent moves above 3,000 points.

Investors are waiting for economic data scheduled for release later this week, with some predicting they will show a modest rise in economic activity.

On Thursday, the Commerce Department will release retail sales statistics for May and the Labor Department puts out the May producer price index. On Friday, the Labor Department releases the May consumer price index and the Fed releases industrial production and capacity utilization rates for May.

Among active NYSE issues, Pepsico was off ⅜ at 30¼, IBM was down ⅝ at 101¼, Johnson & Johnson fell 1⅝ at 85¼.

BANK: Texas financial institutions rank high

real estate construction and development loans, 9.6 percent of corporate buyout loans and 20.4 percent of foreign loans were no longer being paid by borrowers.

Still, 90 percent of banks earned profits in the first quarter and earnings were substantially higher than the $1.1 billion reported for the last three months of 1990. Banks traditionally recognize more bad loans — which reduce profits — at the end of the year.

Texas' contrary economic nature also shows up in bank failures.

Last year, 167 U.S. banks failed, and the FDIC expects a total of 340 to 440 failures this year and in 1992.

In contrast, Texas, which suffered roughly two-thirds of the nation's bank failures in the past three years, has just 19 failures so far this year. That pleasant surprise prompted lower revisions of expected Texas bank failures in 1991, said Sexton, the Austin banking consultant.

Of course, he noted, the cure largely was administered by the FDIC, which took over billions of dollars in bad loans from failed Texas banks. That means big losses were transferred from the banks to the FDIC.

"You don't have the drag of non-performing (bad) assets. Once you don't have that anchor around your neck," it's a lot easier to make money, said Jeffrey Wentworth, Tarrant County district director at NCNB Texas.

But he and other Texas bankers said the state's business environment has improved, too.

For example, Ron Steinhart, chairman of Team Bank, predicted Texas will emerge as one of the top three or four banking states in the coming two years.

"We're getting farther and farther removed from our problems," said Steinhart, a former vice chairman of First RepublicBank. "Banks mirror the condition of their customers. Our customers are doing better."

NCNB provides a striking example of how Texas banks turned around as many banks in other states deteriorated.

In the year's first quarter, Charlotte, N.C.-based NCNB Corp. earned profits of $128.4 million. NCNB Texas, which accounts for about half of NCNB's total assets, said it contributed $114 million of that.

Even states with strong banking profits showed considerably lower profits compared to a year earlier. California and New York both saw bank profits fall by approximately half, FDIC figures showed.

Real estate problems in California may never reach the depths hit recently in New England and several years ago in the Southwest, Seidman said, but he called the figures an early warning for that state.

"The concerning problem in California is that the trend is in the wrong direction," he said.

Because real estate markets are taking longer to recover than the economy generally, Seidman said he expected no substantial upturn in banking until late in the year.

Pickens' Mesa ends debt restructuring

DALLAS (AP) — Mesa Limited Partnership, led by investor T. Boone Pickens, finished a $1 billion debt restructuring Wednesday by obtaining $616 million in private financing from institutional investors.

Pickens

Mesa, the nation's third-largest independent energy producer, will use the funds to retire its short-term bank debt. The partnership also announced it had obtained $150 million in new credit from banks.

Coupled with the partnership's $200 million in cash, Mesa is now ready to start some exploration and development that has been on hold for about a year, Pickens said.

"It is a turning point for us because we can now give our full attention to new business and the expansion of Mesa's operation and get away from trying to restructure the debt," he said.

Mesa began the debt restructuring about last year after a fifth straight year of depressed natural gas prices had crimped its ability to repay bank loans.

"This will put is in a position where, regardless of the price of natural gas, we will be able to ride out whatever the market gives us," Pickens said.

The partnership received an average of $1.61 per thousand cubic feet of natural gas. In 1985, Mesa received $2.68 per thousand cubic feet.

"We got overleveraged ... we bet too heavily in the past the price of natural gas would stay above $2," said Pickens, who became well known as a takeover pioneer in the 1980s.

Mesa earlier this year wiped out about one-third of its bank debt by selling natural gas assets in Texas, Oklahoma, New Mexico and Colorado. The assets represented about 17 percent of Mesa's holdings prior to the restructuring.

As with the earlier bank notes, the private financing is secured by Mesa's prized reserves in the Hugoton fields of southwest Kansas. Mesa's reserves there are about 2.1 trillion cubic feet of natural gas equivalents.

The 15-year term for the notes, which have a weighted interest rate average of 10 percent, is a closer match of the expected life of the Hugoton reserves than the bank debt was, Pickens said.

Mesa formed a new subsidiary, Hugoton Capital Limited Partnership, to issue the notes, which were purchased by about 30 institutional investors and their affiliates.

Cigna Investments Inc. led the purchasers in negotiating and documenting the transaction.

Reports began circulating in November that Mesa was going to try the unique private placement. Pickens said it took some time to educate investors about natural gas.

"Somebody's going to have to get acquainted with the value of the property before they step up to that kind of loan," he said. "There was a lot of education in it."

Mesa's $150 million in new bank debt has a term of three years.

With the new working capital, Mesa plans to expand gas processing operations and begin helium extraction from its fields.

Two companies to revive crude oil imports from Iran

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Two American companies are reviving oil trade with Iran, signing preliminary agreements to import Iranian crude to the United States.

Chevron Corp. of San Francisco and Coastal Corp. of Houston would be the first U.S. oil companies in four years to import crude oil from Iran.

Under Chevron's tentative agreement, the company can import between 1 million and 3 million barrels of Iranian oil this summer, the San Francisco Chronicle reported today.

That could amount to $16.5 million to $49.5 million worth, based on current prices of $16.50 a barrel for Iranian oil.

Chevron has not yet determined where the oil would be delivered, said Herb Long, general manager for planning and development of Chevron International Oil Co.

Representatives of the National Iranian Oil Co. are meeting with Chevron executives in London to try to get the final paperwork completed, according to the Chronicle.

Long said Chevron has applied to the Treasury Department for a special import license and hopes for approval during the next week.

Coastal, which has a refinery across San Francisco Bay in Hercules, said the Treasury Department approved its request for an import license on Monday.

The company will import 2.5 million barrels of Iranian oil, Coastal officials said.

Earlier this year, Iran reached oil sale agreements with Mobil Corp. of Virginia and Coastal but the oil was for distribution outside the United States.

Coastal declined to say where the Iranian oil would be unloaded.

Report: Tandy plans to test retail computer store sales

DALLAS (AP) — Tandy Corp. is planning to test large discount stores to sell computers from at least three manufacturers as well as its own machines, a published report said today.

The plan represents a move by the electronics retailing giant away from traditional full-priced computer stores, unidentified industry insiders told The Wall Street Journal.

The report said Tandy plans to test six stores, called Computer City, that will carry products from Apple Computer Inc., Compaq Computer Corp. and International Business Machines Corp.

It said insiders expect the first test stores will be located in Detroit and southern California, where the Fort Worth, Texas-based company is expected to purchase two existing Computer City stores in California.

Computer City began as a joint venture between Japan's Mitsubishi and Inacomp Computer Centers Inc., officials said. However, Inacomp agreed to merge with computer retailer ValCom Inc. in April.

of Santa Fe's 54,000 barrels (of oil)and 20 million cubic feet of its 100 million," cubic feet of gas produceddaily, said Payne.

He said the Basin plays a major role in the company's rank as No. 2 among large independents in oil reserves and No. 6 in total reserves.

Said Payne: "Right now most of our drilling in the Permian Basin is in southeast New Mexico — in the shallow Delaware, Wolfcamp and Morrow."

He said the company has its eye on horizontal drilling in the Permian Basin, and had acreage that could fit into a horizontal play if it develops, but no concrete plans for the moment.

Payne said Santa Fe intends to stick with its strategy of going with niche plays, like southeastern New Mexico, but it would also branch more into the international market this year.

"We just opened an office in Canada, acquired production in Argentina and intend to drive five international wells this year," he explained. "We are slowly moving into the international market. Our entire international budget next year will be less than 20 percent of total."

Administration assigns officials to assist RTC

Hearst News Service

WASHINGTON — The Bush administration has assigned two top officials to try to help the Resolution Trust Corp. sort out its tangled effort to sell off billions of dollars in assets from failed savings and loans.

In a stinging letter to Treasury Secretary Nicholas Brady, Comptroller General Charles Bowsher said the RTC has been unable to keep track of its assets, handle its cash or manage contracts.

Bowsher said the greatest uncertainty facing the thrift industry cleanup is the depressed state of the real estate market, which will reduce the value of S&Ls' assets and increase the cost of the bailout to the taxpayers. He said the cleanup will cost more than $130 billion.

"Obviously, the RTC has little control over market conditions," said Bowsher, who headed the General Accounting Office, the watchdog agency of Congress. "However, it can gain better control over the accountability and management of its assets."

Bowsher said the thrift industry cleanup will cost the taxpayers more money because of the RTC's failure to manage the thrift assets it holds. The agency "loses opportunities to package and sell available loans and other financial assets."

Bowsher also said a GAO audit of the RTC would be delayed beyond its June 30 deadline because the agency did not provide the GAO with financial statements until mid-May.

Brady, who chairs the Cabinet-level RTC Oversight Board, said Deputy Treasury Secretary John Robson and Housing and Urban Development Deputy Secretary Alfred DelliBovi have been assigned to coordinate efforts to straighten out RTC's problems.

Bowsher sent his letter to Brady in response to the Treasury secretary's request for specific examples of RTC problems.

RTC Chairman L. William Seidman said he agrees with many of Bowsher's points. "In each of the areas he criticizes the RTC, he notes that action is being taken to correct the problems."

Ross Stores' wins court round

AUSTIN (AP) — Ross Stores' fight against revealing how it obtained Redken products was returned to a Dallas appeals court by the Texas Supreme Court.

Redken Laboratories Inc., sued Ross Stores Inc. to find out where and how Ross was getting the products. Ross does business as Ross Dress for Less.

Redken sells its hair and beauty products through distributorship agreements, by which the items may be sold for resale only to professional salons or licensed cosmetology schools.

Ross is not a licensed Redken distributor, and its stores do not qualify as resale outlets under Redken's distributorship agreements.

But Redken found out Ross was selling genuine Redken products at discount prices, according to Wednesday's Supreme Court opinion.

Redken got a summary judgment order in trial court requiring Ross to give its deposition and to produce documents related to how it obtained Redken's products.

Ross appealed.

But the 5th Court of Appeals in Dallas dismissed the appeal.

Fall fashion shows end with upbeat mood, style

By Bernadine Morris
N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK — With a distinguished collection of innovative clothes, Geoffrey Beene brought six weeks of fall fashion shows to a brilliant conclusion. The showings, which had begun in March in a lugubrious mood in Milan, Italy, as economic clouds darkened all over the world, had a happy ending in April.

The gloom that persisted through the London openings lifted finally in Paris with clothes that were upbeat and imaginative by Karl Lagerfeld, for himself and for Chanel, and by Claude Montana, Christian Lacroix, Emanuel Ungaro and Yves Saint Laurent.

The surprise of the Paris openings was the acceptance of Oscar de la Renta, the first American to show a collection on the same scale as the French. De la Renta acquired some European retail accounts and considerable exposure in the world press.

But perhaps his most important achievement was the recognition that American designers are no longer provincial or limited to sportswear. His emphasis on plaids was ranked with the ethnic themes ricocheting through the designs of the world's most prestigious designers. It is widely called the Highland fling.

IN NEW YORK, Christian Francis Roth's painstaking reproductions of Amish quilt patterns and Isaac Mizrahi's evocation of American Indian culture with his beaded leathers and fringe were among the most provocative of the cross-cultural fashion moves.

But it was not necessary to be ethnically oriented to create a stir. Calvin Klein did so quietly with simple clothes like jacket dresses and tunics that focused, like most designers' work, on legs. Not bare legs; they were almost always covered with thick tights or clinging stretch pants. Donna Karan was somewhat more blatant with her snugly wrapped skirts and stretch dresses. And Ralph Lauren's clothes were serene and sophisticated.

Those three, who are associated with sportswear, the all-American field of design, have moved beyond casual clothes. While the elements of sportswear are still part of their work, they have gone far afield with clothes suitable for work, party-going and travel. In the top echelons of fashion, sportswear has pretty much ceased to exist.

The issue of longer skirts, which loomed large in March, had pretty much dissipated by the end of the showings. Again, it was the Americans who put the question to rest. If an American designer had found an impressive new way to make longer skirts palatable, or if enough people had pursued the issue, the results might have been different. But a vast majority of skirts cleared the knees, some considerably.

Long styles occasionally made an appearance. While some were attractive, notably Mizrahi's full skirts and Roth's Amish-inspired styles, they weren't enough to tilt the balance. Short remains the norm, although some designers, like Klein, said they had lengthened their hems — a whole inch.

THE ONE AREA where long clothes have made an impact is in coats. Whether they are big wrappy styles like Klein's or supple narrow columns like Beene's, the long coats make sense for cold weather over midthigh-length skirts and dresses.

In the end, it was Beene's rhapsodic approach to dressmaking that left the most lasting impression. With hardly a straight seam, the clothes curved around the body, sometimes opening unpredictably to show an arc of skin. Though they were mostly narrow, there was no sense of stress as the models passed swiftly across the stage, no inhibition of movement.

Each style was an exploration of the possibilities of fabric and cut, and a result was a collection that owed no homage to any other designer. Beene believes his voyage of discovery has just begun.

Such innovation is rare indeed. It may ultimately have as great an impact on fashion as Madeleine Vionnet's discovery of the bias cut in the 1930s or Gabrielle Chanel's investigation of the possibilities of black jersey as a fashion fabric in the 1920's.

Valentino presents three decades of glamour, style

By Bernadine Morris
N.Y. Times News Service

ROME — Valentino Clemente Ludovico Garavani hoped to celebrate his 30th anniversary as the head of his couture house earlier this year, but because of the Persian Gulf war it did not seem appropriate.

The festivities were rescheduled, taking the form of a giant homecoming, with lunches, dinners, two exhibitions and a ball this week.

In the end, there were two surprises: the parties, though lavish, were tasteful. And the exhibitions, especially the one at the Accademia Valentino, a museum near the couture house, establish him as a major player in shaping fashion in the last half of the 20th century.

Valentino, known as a purveyor of luxury and a designer for film stars like Elizabeth Taylor and Gina Lollobrigida, has always had a rather frivolous reputation. Sure, his tailored clothes are always superb.

But haven't his evening dresses been, well, on the show-off side? Certainly, there are acres of ruffles, yards of king's ransom jewelry and fabrics of fathomless opulence.

But as the work of 30 years was gathered together, grouped not chronologically but by themes, it was clear that Valentino had his basic ideas clearly in his head at the beginning of his career; he simply refined them as he went along, bringing more assurance and finesse to his work.

Ten designs at the academy, produced from sketches he did at Jean Desses in 1950, when he was 19 years old, bear this out.

They include the sober, tailored day dresses; the slender figure-revealing evening styles, delicately embroidered and with a great whoosh of skirt; the passion for red, and the emphasis on classic beige and brown.

All provided themes for the groupings of clothes that constituted the main body of the exhibition. As styles from three decades were shown together, there was no jarring effect: short skirts from the 60s blended with longer styles from the next decade, shapes were never bizarre and colors always soothing.

There were many memorable dresses, including the beige chiffon and lace two-piece short dress Jacqueline Kennedy wore when she married Aristotle Onassis in 1968, and black and white styles with geometric patterns from his brilliant Wiener Werkstatte collection of 1989.

AP Laserphoto

This Persian rug-inspired pink, green, yellow and blue sequined decollate dress with matching bracelets and black-lined, quilted jacket was shown as part of Valentino's fall/winter 1991/92 ready-to-wear collection Sunday in Paris.

There was also the "peace" dress, with the word for peace in 14 languages embroidered on it, that ended his couture show in January.

Among the recurring themes were animal markings — giraffe, leopard and reptile — that were often embellished with feathers and sequins, and a preference for the shade called Devonshire cream.

The exhibition worked well, said Giancarlo Giammetti, Valentino's partner and business manager, because the selection was not left to a curator. The clothes were selected from 2,000 styles in the Valentino archives and 700 contributed by clients.

Giammetti made the first selections and the designer chose the final styles. The effect was cohesive as well as dazzling.

"It's so beautiful it makes you want to cry," Miss Taylor said. "Everything can be worn. I would like to own every single dress."

Miss Taylor sat at the designer's right at the ball on Friday at the Villa Medici, wearing a dress embroidered with crystals and delicate flowers. Valentino had requested that women wear long dresses "so they will look beautiful" and few of the women among the 600 guests cared to challenge him. Many wore bouffant skirts with petticoats, though they complained about packing them.

"How often do you get to wear a ball dress?" said Susan Gutfreund, who carried her navy Valentino dress over her arm on the plane.

Lynn Wyatt, whose Valentino dress had a white bodice and pale striped skirt, said, "A big dress is such a bore to travel with, but it feels marvelous when you get it on."

The party proved a gathering place for some of the world's grandest clothes. From Paris, Denise Dubois wore a dress by Madame Gres, Claude Pompidou a Pierre Cardin and Sybil d'Origny a Christian Lacroix.

Pat Buckley chose a Bill Blass one-shoulder dress; Blaine Trump and Joan Secchia, the wife of the U.S. ambassador to Italy, chose Scaasi styles.

Many designers paid homage to Valentino during the celebration. Among them were Anoushka Hempel of London, Hubert de Givenchy and Emanuel Ungaro from France and Wanda Ferragamo, Carla Fendi, Princess Irene Galitzine and Gianfranco Ferre from Italy.

Models who have worked for him gave the occasion a special fashion spin. Among them were Marissa Berenson, Dianne de Witt, Linda Evangelista, Kirit and Alda Balestra.

The celebration began on Thursday with a garden lunch for 95 at Valentino's villa on the Appian Way, where the pale linen suit was the favorite fashion. Later that afternoon, Franco Carraro, the Mayor of Rome, invited 800 people to the Capitoline Museum to preview an exhibit of Valentino's couture designs as interpreted by such photographers as Bruce Weber, Deborah Turbeville, David Bailey and Helmut Newton, and illustrators including Michael Meyring, Maning, Harvey Boyd, Antonio Lopez and Gladys Palmer.

At the museum, an impressionistic film, produced by Frederic Mitterrand, a nephew of the French president, featured snippets of the designer's life and fantasies. It was followed by dinner on the terrace of the City Hall.

The photographic exhibit will continue through July 28.

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: My son got into serious trouble and is in jail right now. He is 19 and began getting into trouble with the law three years ago. He's close to his grandparents, who live out of state, and when he first got into trouble at age 16, I kept them in the dark about it as long as I could. They eventually found out, and I know they worried a lot.

Van Buren

My son stayed out of trouble for more than a year. He went to counseling for alcohol abuse and other problems. I realized he still had problems. But three days ago, he and a friend of his broke into someone's garage to steal and were caught. My heart broke once again. My son is now in county jail. I visited him there and managed to hold back my tears in front of him, but I cried all the way home.

Here's my problem: Should I tell my parents, who are 1,000 miles away, and cause them all this grief? My mother telephones every weekend to "check in." I didn't have the heart to tell her this Sunday. Do you think she has the right to know? She always asks about her grandsons and is especially close to this one. I just don't want her to worry. — BROKENHEARTED MOTHER

DEAR BROKENHEARTED: Since your mother always asks, and feels especially close to this grandchild, I think you should tell her the truth now. Eventually she will have to be told, unless you intend to deceive your parents about the boy's whereabouts until he's served his time. If so, your chances for pulling it off are slim.

DEAR ABBY: Please discuss fathers tickling their young children. They seem to get some sadistic pleasure out of expressing their love (?) by tickling the little girls and boys until they scream with laughter, then pain — then end up in tears!

This needs discussion, Abby. I think it's sadistic! Do you? — MRS. B. IN JOPLIN, MO.

DEAR MRS. B: Yes. Children who "end up in tears" are experiencing pain — not pleasure — and no father should be permitted to play such games. Excessive tickling is said to stimulate children inappropriately. To subject a child to this kind of "play" is child abuse. It's the business of adults to protect children from ANY kind of child abuse — and while it may appear innocent and "all in fun," it should not be tolerated.

DEAR ABBY: The woman who was upset because her husband's friend held his fork incorrectly just about sent me through the roof. I wish all I had to worry about was how my friends held their dinner forks.

I'd like to tell that woman that if more people would hold their forks in their fists like a 3-year-old child, but were smart, college-educated, well-mannered and had great personalities, our country would be much better off.

I suppose a man could be a rapist, murderer or drug dealer, but as long as he held his dinner fork properly, he'd be OK? That woman should come down from her pedestal and start dealing with issues like world peace, abused children, caring for the elderly, and feeding the homeless — who would be happy just to eat, let alone hold a fork properly! — S.B., ROSEBURG, ORE.

DEAR ABBY: About a year and a half ago, I moved to a retirement facility in Oregon. Ever since, I have been swamped with mail-order catalogs (unsolicited) to the point that when the mail is delivered each day, there are more catalogs delivered than my mailbox can hold!

In the past you have, from time to time, printed an address to which one could write in order to put a stop to this nuisance. Would you please print it again? I am ... KNEE-DEEP IN JUNK MAIL

DEAR KNEE-DEEP: Not only do some catalog companies make money by selling their merchandise; they also make a bundle by selling their customer lists to one another. Therefore, once you order anything by catalog you may find yourself on many other mailing lists, and the recipient of many unwanted solicitations.

If you shop at home but want to lessen the unsolicited advertising mail you receive, simply ask the companies with which you do business not to rent your name to other mailers.

Your other option, the Mail Preference Service, screens out the national advertising mail and should be used by consumers who do not want to receive such solicitations. To have your name deleted from these lists, write to: Mail Preference Service, Direct Marketing Association Inc., P.O. Box 3861, New York, N.Y. 10163-3861. There is no charge for this service.

AT WIT'S END

'Reality' of TV is too much

By Erma Bombeck

Every time I see a headline these days I find myself mentally casting it for the television series that will come as sure as God made Nielsen families.

Bombeck

Headlines have given new meaning to art imitating life. A minister poisons his wife, a father abducts his child, a homeroom mother runs a house of prostitution. The cry when these newsmakers are arrested isn't "Get me a lawyer," it's "Get me an agent."

There's no question that each of us is living out our own miniseries. Few of them are comedies. The big question is how much reality can we take in our lives before we are canceled.

Television used to be an escape hatch. Earlier times weren't much different than they are today. There was crime, divorce, scandal, illness, messed-up kids and unhappiness. But for a couple of hours each night there was Ralph Cramden in baggy golf pants sending Alice to the moon, Milton Berle in lipstick and earrings walking on the sides of his shoes, Goldie and Lily playing off the wall on "Laugh-In," and Lucy stuffing chocolates from a speeding conveyor belt down her blouse.

We seem to be in the decade of self-examination. Every day we take our emotional temperature and ask ourselves, "What am I feeling today? Am I more in touch than I was yesterday? Is my self-esteem intact? Why am I behaving this way? Am I relating? Can I bond with someone before lunch?"

Sometimes I think we're all Bette Midler's character in "Beaches," who said to her friend, "But enough about me. Let's talk about you. How did you like my last picture?"

Television hasn't given us many options. On a given day we are offered repentant racists on Donahue, a sister who fears her imprisoned twin on Sally Jessy Raphael or people driven from haunted houses on Oprah. How will I feel about myself after I've watched them? How will I feel if I don't watch them?

I can watch so many real-life dramas of mass murderers and kids on a killing spree edited for television. Then I find I need to see a Steven Spielberg movie or an old Walt Disney film. I need an innocence fix where nuns fly and violins come out of the trees when the prince sings. But prime-time misery never goes on hiatus. Every night a new headline unfolds. Every week a killer appears in the unlikely form of Mark Harmon.

I was always taught crime doesn't pay. I don't believe it.

Show lives on as fashion

By Valli Herman
N.Y. Times News Service

LOS ANGELES — Canceled television shows don't just fade into reruns anymore. Now one of the favorites of the nation's yuppies is coming back — as a line of clothing.

While the ABC prime-time series "thirtysomething" was given the official ax last month and the last show was broadcast May 28, the show's costume supervisor, Patrick Norris, 38, of Van Nuys, is going forward with plans to sell his licensed collection of men's and women's clothes, called simply, thirtysomething.

The moderately priced line includes reproductions of the vintage pieces worn by Melissa and Elliot, Nancy's long sweaters and skirts, Ellyn's career looks, Hope's young mother jeans and sweat shirts and Michael's sport coats. Even Gary, who was killed on the show, has his baseball jacket live on in the thirtysomething collection.

The clothes aren't exact re-creations of the ensembles he mixed for the show. Instead, they are new styles based on the feeling of each character's wardrobe. As a man who comes from a Hollywood costuming family — his mother is Patricia Norris, who designs the wardrobes for many David Lynch productions — Norris knows the fickle realities of doing business in the entertainment industry.

"I KNEW 'thirtysomething' would end some day and that's one of the reasons why I decided to get involved in this," Norris said over breakfast recently, a few hours before he received official word of the cancellation.

"thirtysomething is a look," he said. "It's a look I've kind of created and validated."

Norris has confidence that his clothing line doesn't need the support of a weekly broadcast to get the message of his fashions across to buyers.

"I'm selling clothing, not a TV show," he said. Yet a major client, Macy's, already has canceled its orders for the fall collection, which should be in other stores by September.

"We expected a few retailers to go away scared if the show didn't go. But Saks (Fifth Avenue) is still going forward," Norris said.

The 'thirtysomething' collection will be his second attempt at starting a clothing label. About 18 months ago, Norris and his partner, Charles Winston, started Charles Patrick, a line of shirts and ties created in the style of Elliot. The first manufacturing agreement fell through, but the partners eventually connected with Jay Blades, a Carmel tie company. That neckwear line should be in stores this month.

The thirtysomething line came about when merchandising executives at MGM/UA Television got word of his interest in marketing clothing about a year ago.

"MGM read about me in an article in People magazine," Norris said. "They decided it was a good idea to license a line of clothes based on 'thirtysomething' and would I be interested. I said, 'Sure.' "

THE SHOW'S executive producers, Edward Zwick and Marshall Herskovitz, were concerned that such a line would unfairly commercialize the program, Norris said.

"So, I had to go up and talk with Ed and Marshall about what the intention of the line would be," he said.

All parties were satisfied, and MGM/UA entered into a licensing agreement with Apparel Resources International in New York to create the clothing.

A T-shirt could cost about $40 and the most expensive item, a leather bomber jacket, about $1,200. Gary's baseball jacket should be about $120. The collection, which includes 125 pieces for men and 150 for women for spring 1992, isn't labeled as to which character it represents.

"They'll know when they look at it," Norris said. "But they represent a lot of people, because that's what they do in our real lives That's why the collection itself is so big."

Norris said he takes his inspiration for the clothing as much from the characters as he does from his own life. With his preppie glasses, herringbone tweed sport coat, jeans and East Coast looks, Norris is the personification of thirtysomething. It is that derivative realism that Norris and others are betting will make the clothing a winner.

"It's a personality kind of deal. I'm not selling 'Dallas' or 'Miami Vice.' It's a real, honest look," he said. "I do for the line what I do for the show."

AS A COSTUMER, Norris doesn't sketch the outfits that are created for the principal characters. He combines clothing from various sources — Aaardvark's Odd Ark resale boutiques, Ralph Lauren and Giorgio Armani designer sportswear, Sy Devore's menswear store in Sherman Oaks — and creates a clothing personality for each character.

"I believe you can go in a store and buy one or two (of our) items and it will fit with what you already have in your closet. It's the way real people dress," he said, and that's what he thinks makes the line viable — with or without a show.

Legions of other television shows and movies have inspired fashion trends, but few have commercialized the look into a full-scale line of men's and women's clothing. Last summer's cartoony blockbuster "Dick Tracy" inspired a line of special-occasion dresses modeled after the glamorous character Madonna played in the movie.

Clothes based on movies or television shows do have a chance of surviving after the show, said Elaine Johnson, president of L.A. Glo, the company that made the Breathless Mahoney clothes.

"If what you're making happens to correspond with what the market had going, then your line will go.

"I don't think the Breathless Mahoney label mattered because they (customers) just liked the dress," Johnson said. "Even if we had Madonna walking around stores in the dresses, they wouldn't have sold if they didn't like the dresses."

STILL, AFTER shipping a summer collection of the fancy gowns before the movie hit, two during the movie's run in theaters and one after (during the dressy holiday season), the Breathless Mahoney collection is no more. It existed more as a way to boost the company's main label, L.A. Glo, and to promote the movie, according to Johnson.

The hit series "Dynasty" was the basis for a fancy dress collection that ultimately wasn't the appropriate high quality, according to Nolan Miller, who was the show's clothing designer during its nine-year run. He also agreed that it is dangerous to create a clothing line if the intention is to capitalize on the show's popularity. Miller created a line of evening gowns and suits in 1984 under a licensed Dynasty label, but the collection lasted only one season.

"I felt people were there to cash in on the popularity of the show," Miller said. "But, no matter what, if a collection is based on the popularity of a TV show, it has a limited life span."

The thirtysomething line is hanging on hope now. But Norris sees only positive signs ahead.

"I think next spring it's going to be everywhere. It's a great line — even without a TV show behind it."

Book exposes 'beauty myth'

By Alice Kahn
N.Y. Times News Service

Naomi Wolf seems determined to light a firecracker under the incredibly shrinking behind of modern American woman with her new book, "The Beauty Myth."

She has stirred up the wrath of everyone from fundamentalists, who say she is attacking good Christian beauty queens, to Betty Friedan, who thinks Wolf's emphasis on the cult of beauty is not politically correct.

But when an Oakland policewoman loses her job for not looking feminine enough and an airline clerk is fired for not wearing makeup, Wolf says, we are talking about something more substantial than just looks.

She says something she calls "the beauty myth" was created to put those uppity bra burners of the '60s in their place by creating a third shift for the woman already working overtime to keep up the career and the family.

That third job is staying thin and beautiful, even if it means starving yourself and surrendering your body to the surgeon's knife.

"I'm here from the twenty-something generation to tell you images hurt," she said.

Asked to explain the source of the rage that comes through this book, Wolf explains, "I almost lost my life to anorexia. I feel like a witness."

AT HER YALE University graduation, alumnus Dick Cavett made jokes about how female scholars couldn't sell their nude photos. She went on the road as a Rhodes scholar to Oxford and it was while writing her Ph.D. thesis in literature there that she became convinced of the pervasive effect of the beauty myth.

Wolf, 29, insists that rather than luxuriating in the victories of some "postfeminist" era, women of her generation are dying as a result of growing up in what she characterizes as the anorexic/pornographic era, a time when pornography and beauty got hitched in Obsession perfume ads and David Lynch movies.

And, yes, she is beautiful. But, no, she isn't cute when she's mad. She's methodical.

In "The Beauty Myth" she relentlessly parades the data to support her argument like an attractive female lawyer who must distract the jury from her bright blue eyes and thick curly hair. Deaths from anorexia, deaths from liposuction, a lifetime of pain from a botched "tummy tuck" are detailed to support what we all know: Ever since Twiggy, female flesh has become equated with ugliness.

"A city of women the size of San Francisco gets cut open each year in the United States," says Wolf. Cosmetic surgery rates, she says, have doubled every five years since the feminist outcry of the early '70s.

Perhaps Wolf's most devastating argument against surgery that is done to make women supposedly sexier — since fear of pain and death don't seem to be stopping women — is the seldom-explained risks such as nerve damage during nipple relocations, a frequent part of the surgery women elect in pursuit of what Wolf calls the Official Breast.

WHO IS conspiring to remake women (and eventually men) into surreal, virtually enhanced, cancer-causing implanted-gel, Auschwitzlike bodies? Who is killing our daughters, setting children off on diets in the third grade, creating an epidemic of eating disorders? Who is making it increasingly impossible for women to hold their jobs after age 50 without getting the flesh on their throat slit?

The unindicted co-conspirators in this case, Wolf says, are "a $33 billion diet industry, a $20 billion cosmetics industry and a $300 million cosmetic surgery industry."

"Nips and tucks" are so profitable even general practitioners are taking seminars sponsored by equipment manufacturers to learn to do office liposuctions. About 200,000 pounds of body tissue, Wolf says, were sucked out in the last year alone.

Wolf has no objection to women who choose to use surgery to try to obtain the loveliness nature generously tossed her way. What she objects to is the way medicine and manufacturers have claimed aesthetics, making a disease of ugliness, and one that requires a denial of pain to surgically correct.

She points to the way cosmetic surgeons trivialize pain with understated warnings such as "a little discomfort ... a little swelling ... a little discoloration."

She says that these denials of pain have resulted in "scalpel slaves" such as the wife of a prominent plastic surgeon who was completely remade by her husband, the she-devil of Fay Weldon's novel come to life.

"Women are dying of understatement," Wolf says.

THIS IS A world in which death ultimately can be considered "a permanent side effect."

But Wolf is not out to indict plastic surgeons any more than she is out to blame the victims of anorexia or the mothers or fathers of girls who think they are too ugly to be seen in a bathing suit.

"This book is not about blame," she says. "It's about understanding."

She is also trying to warn us about an increasingly cyberbodied Stepford woman."The machine is at the door," writes Wolf, jumping from stats to poetry. "Is she the future?"

One reason women have been reluctant to challenge the beauty myth — the relentless parading of models thinner than 95 percent of the female population, models whose skinny, muscular bodies and large breasts seldom occur in nature, Miss Americas whose weights have plummeted since the women's movement of 20 years ago — is for fear of having their own bodies scrutinized.

In England, Wolf was accused of using facts and figures because she's so pretty, and in America a talk-show caller screamed, "Are you a dog and have a prettier sister?"

In neckwear, the ties they are a'changing

By Woody Hochswender
N.Y. Times News Service

Ties used to say a lot about the man, but not in this era of wild ones. Head-spinning colors, Pucci-fied patterns, giant paisleys and all manner of animals, fish, baseballs, surfers and casino prints now adorn the quasi-phallic accouterments that hang down the front of a man's shirt.

Like the computerized graphics on MTV, tie patterns are constantly shifting and changing. After a while it all begins to lack passion. Ties have become so radical as to be meaningless.

At the same time, have you noticed that some ties now cost more than a good dress shirt? Used to be you bought a couple of shirts, then threw in a few ties that you matched up against them for color.

But as ties got fancier, louder and more expressive, they also got more expensive. For Father's Day, shoppers will find ties topping $100 at some New York retailers, with an average price of $50.

This despite the fact that the $27.50 tie is cut on the same machine as a $65 tie.

The tie business has really been booming. For the price of a good lunch or an inexpensive dinner, a guy can refurbish his wardrobe with a tie instead of a new suit.

About 95 million men's ties were sold last year, according to Gerald Andersen, the executive director of the Neckwear Association of America, an industry group.

Andersen said part of the price increase is due to the cost of silk. Another factor is exclusivity of design: less expensive tie fabrics are sold on the open market, while tonier patterns are sold exclusively, guaranteeing that you won't come face to face with the same look, except within your own income bracket.

NOW May Just Be The Best Time To Buy A New Car, Truck or Van!

HERE'S WHY:

You AUTO Buy Now

DEALER INVENTORIES ARE HIGH

Dealers anticipated better sales earlier this year, and inventories are much higher than expected. When dealers say they are overstocked and have to move cars out, it isn't hype.

FINANCE RATES ARE FAVORABLE

The Permian Basin is getting stronger every day. The Midland Auto Dealers are wanting to make it even better by offering better selections and better prices. And since interest rates have been coming down, you'll find financing rates in your favor.

DEALER COSTS

Dealers pay interest charges for every day a car sits on their lot. Current larger inventories mean the dealers are now eager to sell.

TRADE-IN ALLOWANCES ARE GOOD

Dealers want clean, quality trade-ins to keep for their used car inventory. Consequently your current car is worth more as a trade-in than in recent times.

PART-TIME INCOME AVAILABLE

The Midland Reporter-Telegram has several distributorships which need to be filled with qualified, responsible individuals.

OFTEN ASKED QUESTIONS:

Is it worthwhile for adults also?

Yes! Our current carrier force is already 90% adult and 10% youth. Morning newspaper routes are attractive for:

- ADULTS who have full-time jobs, yet want to supplement their income with a steady part-time job.
- MOTHERS who can't justify a small job and daycare, because as a carrier, you do not need daycare!
- COLLEGE STUDENTS needing a part-time job which will work with classes!
- SENIOR CITIZENS wanting regular exercise, added income, or just want to work with people, neighbors, and friends.

How much money can I make as a carrier?

Depending on the size of the distributorship from $300 to $700 monthly! Some make even more!

How long does it take?

The actually delivery takes 1 - 2 hours Monday - Saturday, and 2 - 3 hours on Sunday, again depending on the size of the distributorship. Also, a few hours a month are needed to collect from subscribers. Many carrier's choose to handle some of this by putting envelopes in subscribers' papers. Collecting in person will be necessary though!

When do papers have to be delivered by?

6 a.m. Monday - Friday and 7 a.m. on Saturday, Sunday and holidays.

Do I ever get a day off?

The job requires a 7-day a week commitment. However, carriers do take days off by finding a friend or family member to substitute for them!
