200 Miles Around Falklands...

Total War Zone Declared

By The Associated Press

Britain declared today that a "total" war zone 200 miles around the Falkland Islands will go into effect at 7 a.m EDT Friday, and Argentina put its forces on "maximum alert."

The two sides also said they were studying a U.S. peace plan relayed by Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. But Argentina said it expects "military operations" in the Falklands area in 24 to 48 hours.

Details of the plan were not known, but a government source in London said: "Clearly Mr. Haig wants to bring some sort of finality to the issue, with some sensible way of resolving it."

As prospects for peace grew dim, the British Defense Ministry announced that any ship or aircraft, including Soviet vessels, that are found within the "total exclusion zone" will be regarded as hostile and liable to attack.

The British move came amid mounting speculation that the task force now off the Falkland Islands was poised to launch an assault on the South Atlantic archipelago seized by Argentina April 2.

It also followed an emergency Cabinet meeting presided over by Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher. Government sources in London said the session produced "no fresh optimism" of a negotiated settlement.

The British Defense Ministry stressed that the war zone extends to the airstrip at Stanley, the Falklands' capital.

The zone extends a 200-mile maritime blockade around the islands declared by Britain April 12 to include aircraft. Defense Ministry spokesmen said the new move includes civilian aircraft and ships as well as military and naval craft.

In Moscow, the Soviet Communist Party newspaper Pravda accused Britain of aiming to resolve the Falklands crisis by "military force" and said the dispute's "negative influence already makes itself felt, disrupting normal shipping in the southern Atlantic and world trade in general."

Western diplomats in Moscow speculated that the reference to shipping and trade reflected Soviet anxiety that the crisis could interfere with the Kremlin's grain purchases from Argentina. The Soviets buy $2.7 billion of grain from Argentina annually and is the Argentine junta's leading trade partner. Argentina also is a major supplier of meat for the Soviet Union.

ABC News reported the vanguard of the British war fleet was within shelling distance of the disputed archipelago 250 miles east of Argentina's southern coast. The report said the main British force, including the aircraft carriers Hermes and Invincible, 20 fighter-bombers and some 1,500 marines, was only one day away.

Reports from Buenos Aires to the British media said Argentine naval sources were predicting a British attack at dusk tonight. These reports said 16 Argentine warships were at sea to challenge the British armada.

The Argentine news agency DYN said a fierce winter storm was lashing the Falklands but otherwise Argentine naval sources reported "everything is calm." The sources said coastal patrols had been increased to detect British commando landings, the agency said.

The British Broadcasting Corp. and DYN reported Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. sent a new peace proposals to the Argentine military juntaand discussed it with Foreign Minister Nicanor Costa Mendez in Washington, but there was no word of the content of the proposals.

The BBC said the generals were "holding Mr. Haig at arm's length," and DYN said they rejected his offer to make another trip to Buenos Aires to discuss the proposals.

Costa Mendez told a meeting of the Organization of American States in Washington Tuesday that Britain would attack the Falklands in 24 to 48 hours. The OAS early today approved a resolution calling on Argentina to withdraw from the Falklands and for Britain to "cease immediately" hostilities.

On Budget...

Reagan, O'Neill Slate Meeting

WASHINGTON (AP) — With negotiations to find a compromise on his 1983 spending plan apparently at an impasse, President Reagan has stepped into the controversy by inviting House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill to a budget summit.

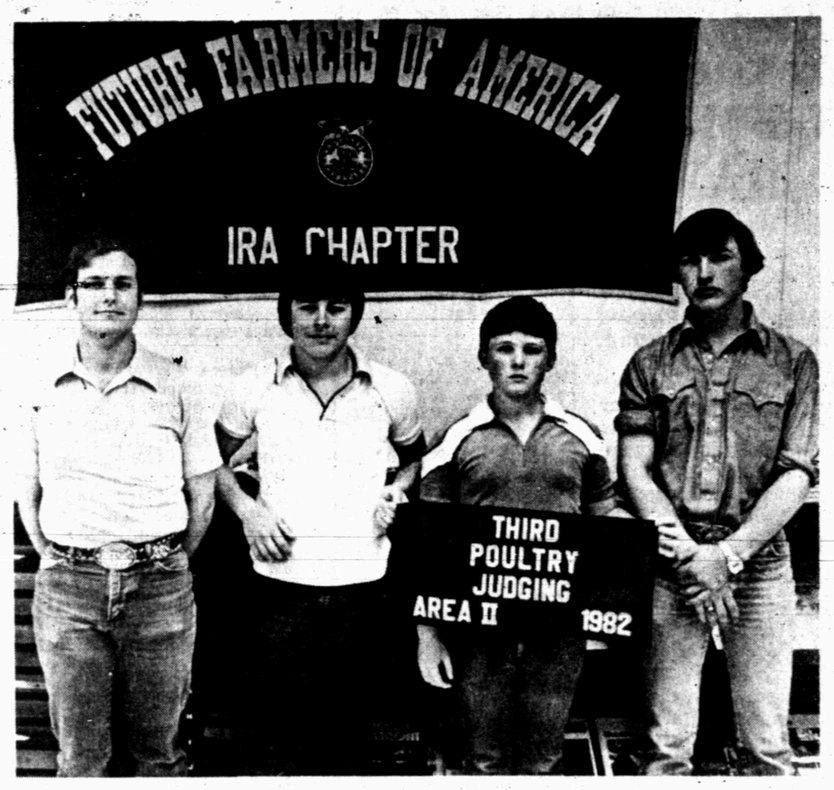

Reagan telephoned the Massachusetts Democrat on Tuesday to propose the rare session. The call was placed about an hour after the latest of 13 meetings between White House and congressional negotiators broke up without agreement.

O'Neill — en route to his suburban Maryland home when call was placed — returned it from his house and accepted Reagan's invitation. They agreed to meet at the Capitol in the early afternoon.

Even before the meeting between Reagan and O'Neill was arranged, White House Republicans and congressional Democrats offered different interpretations of how far apart they were.

And O'Neill urged the president to "face up to the fact that the Reagan economic program is not working and needs to be overhauled." The speaker said Reagan should stop searching for "new alibis" and "stop passing the buck."

At the White House, deputy press secretary Larry Speakes disputed the contention that the budget negotiators had all but failed. He said they had made "substantial progress in the weeks and days we have been talking."

STATE COMPETITORS—The Ira High School FFA poultry juding team competed in the State FFA judging contests last Saturday at Texas A & M. The trip to state capped a successful season for the team. They placed tenth overall, second in district and third in area competition at the Texas Tech area meet to qualify for the state finals. Two Members Request Longer Special Session

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements' proposed mini-session to repeal the state property tax will run longer if some legislators get their way.

Two House members asked Clements on Tuesday to allow the May 24 special session of the Legislature to consider topics other than tax repeal. Clements predicted Monday the session might last only two days.

Rockdale Rep. Dan Kubiak, candidate for land commissioner, said Tuesday he was asking the governor to let lawmakers vote on a $5 million appropriation to fight fire ants.

"The reason for this request is two-fold," Kubiak said. "The fire ant is causing much more destruction than was originally thought, not only in rural areas but urban as well. Secondly, President Reagan has cut the amount of federal funds for fighting fire ants in Texas from $6 million to $900,000."

Houston Rep. Bill Blythe, a state Senate candidate, asked Clements to open the special session to a proposal that would authorize Clear Lake City separate from Houston.

"The citizens are steadfast in their resolve to be free from the city of Houston, and they have gained substantial support within Houston," Blythe said.

Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby said Tuesday that Midland Sen. W.E. "Pete" Snelson, who has been criticized for sponsoring a state property tax proposal in 1981, had accepted his invitation to sponsor a measure to abolish the tax in the special session.

Snelson is a candidate for land commissioner.

McQueen Resigns...

School Board Studies Bids On Food Service

Snyder School Trustees last night accepted the resignation of a board member and opened bids for school food service at a special meeting.

Michael Reed, president of the board, read a letter of resignation from Roy McQueen, who was beginning his second year on the board.

In his letter, McQueen said that professional demands now require more of his attention, and that as publisher of The Snyder Daily News, he wants to avoid any appearance of a conflict of interest. He said that the newspaper, "in fairness to the citizens of Snyder and Scurry County, will continue fair and aggressive community reporting of newsworthy events. A newspaper must remain free to both praise and criticize with credibility. I wish the board of trustees, the administration, the staff and the students of Snyder Independent School District the very best."

The resignation was accepted "with regret."

McQueen was elected to a three-year term on the board in April of 1981.

Three proposals were received for the school food service contract, and after brief discussion, E. D. Flynn, assistant-superintendent-business, was instructed to study the bids and submit a recommendation at a future meeting. It was noted that Snyder was the fifth public school district in Texas to contract for food service, but that other districts are contracting for the service now.

The board continued its budget study and discussed progress on several improvement projects. Some changes in specifications for kindergarten rooms at Northeast Elementary School were approved, which are expected to decreased the cost by some $15,000.

The board approved a vocational education contract required by the state. The school district receives some $3,000 each year through this contract.

Jack Gorman, assistant superintendent-administration and personnel, gave a report on figures for study in connection with staffing for the coming year. No action was taken.

In addition to Reed, who presided, board members attending the called session were Jerry McWilliams, G. A. Parks, Jr., Lillie Sullivan and J. D. Hinton. Dr. Leslie Butler was absent.

Deadline On Exemptions Approaching

Property owners are facing a deadline at the end of the week on tax exemptions.

May 1 is the deadline to file for homestead and agricultural exemptions at the county appraisal district office.

These exemptions significantly reduce the valuations on property of those who qualify.

The agricultural exemptions include the farm implement exemption as well as the land valuation for agricultural production.

"Although May 1 is the deadline, we will still accept applications for exemptions through Monday, since May 1 falls on Saturday," said Ray Peveler, chief appraiser.

He urged all who have not filed for their exemptions to come in as quickly as possible.

New Trial Denied

TYLER, Texas (AP) — A federal judge has denied convicted drug smuggler Rex Cauble's motion for a new trial, saying a telephone mix-up — and not a wiretap — was responsible for calls to Cauble's attorney being answered by the judge's office.

U.S. District Judge William Steger ruled Tuesday that he heard no convincing evidence that Cauble's attorney's phone had been bugged. Steger had listened to four hours of testimony.

Attorney G. Brockett Irwin filed the motion Feb. 21 after U.S. Attorney Jim Rolfe of Dallas tried to call Irwin's Longview office and the phone was answered by Steger's secretary in Tyler.

Irwin's motion sought an investigation to determine whether the problem was caused by wiretaps on his phone or Steger's phone during the Cauble trial. Steger ordered an investigation into the phone problem by the FBI, Southwestern Bell and U.S. marshals.

Name Change Ordered

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan has ordered the Navy to change the name of the attack submarine Corpus Christi, which had aroused controversy because of critics' protests that it derogated the name of Christ, a White House spokesman said today.

The president instructed the Navy to change the name of the submarine to City of Corpus Christi. In Latin, Corpus Christi means "body of Christ."

Graduation time is just around the corner, and it is the time of year when a lot of us recall the commencement programs of yesteryear.

Such things often are discussed at class reunions, homecomings, etc. We were attracted to a story recently about a high school class reunion.

The writer of the report about the reunion, who was a member of the class, said, "I was pleased to discover, after discreet inquiry, that not a single member of the class is presently in the penitentiary or even under serious indictment. Also, I can report that, from a material point of view, everyone seems to have done moderately well. We didn't have to take up a collection for anybody."

We also liked a story told by a claim-adjustor for an insurance company. He was investigating a collision between a car driven by a woman and another vehicle.

After the usual questions concerning facts about the collision, he asked the woman, "Is there anything you can think of that the other driver could have done to avoid the collision?"

There was a pause, and then the woman answered, "Well, he could have parked somewhere else."

Ask Us

Q.—How is the school system able to build new buildings and do big remodeling jobs without a bond voted by the taxpayers?

A.—Most government entities these days try to squeeze as much as possible from their local maintenance funds to avoid having to pay the high interest rates for bond money, and thus save the taxpayers money. Of course large projects, such as complete buildings, etc., cannot be financed without bond funds, but smaller capital improvements often can be made from the regular maintenance funds.

250 Voters Cast Absentee Ballots

A total of 250 Scurry County voters cast absentee ballots for Saturday's primary election prior to the deadline Tuesday.

The county clerk's office reported that a few more absentees could be received in the mail, which would increase the total slightly.

The deadline for absentee voting was 5 p. m. Tuesday.

The total reported this morning included 232 absentee votes for the Democratic Primary and 18 votes for the Republican Primary.

Voters will use the new salmon-colored registration cards for voting in the primary elections. Voters who had registered previously but have not received the new salmon-colored cards may still cast ballots in the primary election if they have not changed their address since registering. They may sign an affidavit at their polling place.

The punch-card type voting machine will be used in the primary, and a demonstration of the use of the machines has been scheduled for 3 p. m. Thursday in the county courtroom of the courthouse, said Beverly Ainsworth, county clerk.

Art Guild Club Meets At MAWC

The Art Guild Study Club met Apr. 20 at the Martha Ann Woman's Club with Mrs. Ben Thorpe and Mrs. Paris McPherson as hostesses and program leaders.

Invocation was given by Mrs. Stanley Noah. Dinner was served buffet style. The individual tables were decorated with a spring theme.

Mrs. Thorpe brought the program on "Federation." She reminded the members of the work and aspirations of the federated movement in women's clubs throughout the free world. Federation is an institution concerned about human welfare. It is also a cultural institution which needs new members and needs to rejuvinate old members.

Mrs. Thorpe interpreted the meaning of the song "America, the Beautiful" and the club "Collect."

Mrs. Myron Roe, club president, conducted the business meeting. Sixteen members attended.

Occasionally Hugh Kelsey slips and gives you a fairly straightforward hand, not that his play is one for beginners.

West opens the jack of spades against the spade game. South takes his ace and leads a spade to dummy's king in order to lead a club. West wins with the ace or king. That doesn't matter. His problem is to decide what to lead.

East will have played the deuce of clubs so a club lead is out. What's wrong with leading the ace of hearts apart from the fact that it gives South his contract? Didn't East bid three hearts?

Nothing wrong with that heart lead except that if East is alert he will have told you not to lead a heart if you hold the ace. East will have discarded his queen of hearts on the second spade. This play is conventional. When you want to signal with several equal cards, always signal with the highest.

Therefore, West knows to lead a diamond. If South holds the ace-queen it will be suicidal, but West knows a heart or club lead is sure death.

Couldn't East have asked for that diamond lead by discarding the nine?

Yes, he could have! However, East did not know that he wanted a diamond lead. Give West the king instead of the ace of hearts and the ace instead of the king of diamonds and East would want a heart lead. The queen of hearts discard gave East the best of all possible worlds.

Lickety split

If you accidentally break a brand new lipstick in half — don't fret — you can repair it. Using a match, gently heat the ends of the stick until soft. Then press the pieces together for a minute. Make sure the lipstick is thoroughly cooled before using it again. And don't give up on old tubes of color; you can dig out the last bits of lipstick with a lipbrush. Or try mixing up the little bits with a dab of petroleum jelly to make a lovely tinted gloss.

The long and short

Pants are more popular than ever, with lots of new styles cropping up. Here's some advice on finding the right length. First, always wear your average shoe heel when shopping for pants. Flared legs should be long enough to break right on top of the shoe in front, coming to the middle of the heel in back. Moderate straight legs (about 16 inches wide) look best hemmed straight across with the front touching the top of the shoe. As for very narrow straights, don't let the hem touch the shoe — a hint of slim ankle is most flattering.

Awards Presented At Founder's Day Banquet

Wanda Early, president of Lambda Kappa chapter of Beta Sigma Phi in Snyder, won top honors at the annual Founder's Day banquet Apr. 24 at the Martha Ann Woman's Club. Mrs. Early was named girl-of-the-year in recognition of her efforts in sorority projects in 1981-82. The banquet is held to commemorate the founding of the group in Abilene, Kansas on Apr. 30, 1931.

Theme for the banquet was "Days of Wine and Roses." The awards table was covered with a pink cloth and featured brass candlesticks with burgundy and pink tapers. Banquet tables were deocrated with silk flowers in shades of burgundy and pink and English ivy. A buffet dinner was served.

Donna Fowler recognized the year's new members and transfer members and Mrs. Early introduced the outgoing officers and the new officers for 1982-83 and welcomed husbands to the banquet. Mickey Baird gave the Founder's Day Pledge and Judy Smith read the traditional founder's day message from Bill Ross, the current international president. Other awards in addition to Mrs. Early's included perfect attendance, Judy Smith, Dena Ellis, and Laura Greene; Mrs. Congeniality, Judy Smith; president's award, Dena Ellis; pledge-of-the-year, Maragaret Corkran and Betsy Griffin; program-of-the-year, Laura Greene; and Valentine Queen, Carolyn House. Judy Smith formally presented the new chapter scrapbook to the chapter. It will be entered in state competition at the state convention June 25-27 in Fort Worth.

The evening's entertainment was presented by Mary Lou Scott and Dena Ellis. A pictoral and musical review depicting highlights of the current sorority year was shown. The program was entitled "A Year of Jollity and Frivolity."

Prior to the banquet, a reception was held in the home of Cyndee and John Gayle. Serving as chairman of the banquet was Mona Bryan, assisted by members of the social committee.

Detroit's Cooking

DETROIT (AP) — Downtown Detroit will be cooking again soon and an anticipated 7.5 million people are expected to line up to sample a menu that ranges from chili to chop suey, sauerbraten to sushi and stuffed cabbage to calamari.

The city's annual Ethnic Festival starts April 30 and will be held every weekend through Sept. 12 with the exception of June 4-6 when the city will host its first Grand Prix auto race.

Each Friday through Sunday, a different nationality will display its cultural heritage through native foods, exhibits, activities, craft demonstrations, singing, dancing and music in Hart Plaza along the Detroit Riverfront.

Twenty-six serving kitchens and beverage booths will be open to handle crowds that last year topped the 7 million mark.

Staving your craving

For some of us, the only way not to eat fattening foods is to avoid them entirely, but one psychologist suggests a different method. Take the food you find hardest to resist and raise a spoonful or handful to your mouth. Look at those potato chips or ice cream and say aloud, "I can't stop myself from eating this." Then put the food down. Repeat the action 10 times. By doing the opposite of what you tell yourself, you may be able to break the habit of eating fattening foods.

Over Falklands...

Bipartisan Support For Thatcher Cracking

LONDON (AP) — With a British assault on the Falkland Islands appearing imminent, bipartisan support for Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's handling of the crisis has cracked. But the "Iron Lady" is still riding high in the opinion polls.

Opposition leader Michael Foot threw his Labor Party's support behind Mrs. Thatcher when Argentina seized the British colony three weeks ago and she dispatched a British fleet to the South Atlantic.

The honeymoon ended Tuesday with an angry clash in the House of Commons.

Foot urged Mrs. Thatcher to desist from military action and turn again to the United Nations. Mrs. Thatcher said that would "achieve nothing."

"What do you want, a war?" shouted senior Laborite spokesman, Eric Heffer.

"Use all your powers of influence with the (Argentine) junta," retorted Mrs. Thatcher.

Underlying the split in the midst of national crisis is the fundamentally pacifist outlook of the socialist Labor Party.

It's one thing to back diplomacy with the threat of force, but another matter when it comes to using that force when a party is pledged to scrap Britain's nuclear weapons unilaterally, ban U.S. cruise missiles from Britain and has a powerful left wing opposed to war at almost any price.

"Michael Foot stands today accused of cowardice in the face of the enemy," declared the right-wing 4 million-circulation Sun newspaper Wednesday as the conservative press dubbed Foot everything from a "pussyfoot" to "fighting shy."

However, not only the Labor Party is getting worried. Dayid Steel, whose small Liberal Party is in a burgeoning electoral alliance with the new centrist Social Democratic Party, urged Mrs. Thatcher to take the leaders of all parties into her confidence.

Noting she has not spelled out publicly the precise terms of the latest unacceptable peace formula negotiated by U.S. Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr., Steel said:

"We don't know what the government is playing at. It's the escalation of the conflict that worries us. ... We can't draw her some kind of blank check for doing what she wants if she does not consult with the other parties."

Some commentators believe Labor, in refusing to commit itself to the use of force while not ruling it out, is hedging its bets rather than holding a principle.

"Unlike the government ... it has the luxury of being able to back all horses at once," wrote Hugo Young, political editor of the independent Sunday Times. "It is getting ready to take the credit for victory — but also for defeat."

Also behind Foot's split with Mrs. Thatcher is Labor's endemic problem of party unity. The party's left wing, headed by former Energy Secretary Tony Benn, opposed sending the fleet from the start.

"One knows why Mr. Foot is so keen on the New York (United Nations) route," said the liberal Guardian newspaper. "It enables him to keep his party, his initiatives and his undoubted passion for peace together."

Many of Mrs. Thatcher's Conservatives consider the United Nations an ineffectual talk show dominated by Third World and Communist nations. Mrs. Thatcher was delighted by the U.N. Security Council resolution April 3 calling on Argentina to withdraw from the Falklands but has since noted tartly the world body can't implement it.

Said Winston Churchill, grandson of the World War II leader and a Conservative member of the House of Commons: "The Soviet Union's veto power at the United Nations has long since ruled out to all intents and purposes the United Nations acting against aggression."

Mrs. Thatcher's rating in opinion polls has risen rapidly since the crisis began, with Conservative support up nearly 10 points to around 40 percent.

So has the number who believe regaining the islands justifies British servicemen getting killed — 58 percent, according to the latest sounding taken by Market Opinion and Research Institute shortly before South Georgia was recaptured.

Study Rebuts Opposition To Bilingual Balloting

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Bilingual elections are essential for continued political participation by one in every seven Mexican-American voters in the Southwest, an Hispanic civil rights organization contends.

The Mexican-American Legal Defense and Education Fund said it commissioned the first such study of Mexican-American voters to prove the value of extending the bilingual requirements of the Voting Rights Act.

Joaquin Avila, director of Political Access Programs for the organization, released the study at a news conference Tuesday and said it was aimed at rebutting stands by bilingual election opponents such as Sens. S.I. Hayakawa of California and Orrin Hatch of Utah.

One in every seven — or about 830,000 Hispanic citizens — speak only Spanish and benefit from federally required Spanish ballots and bilingual assistance at the polls, according to a poll of Mexican-American voters in East Los Angeles, San Antonio and Uvalde, Texas.

Avila said critics have termed bilingual elections too expensive and "un-American" and have demanded proof of their value.

"We now have scholarly evidence" of the benefits, he said.

Federally required bilingual elections approved as amendments to the Voting Rights Act in 1975 are scheduled to expire in 1985 unless the Senate approves a bill already passed by the House to extend the provisions until 1992, Avila said.

"Bilingual elections have received the endorsement of President Reagan and Governor (Bill) Clements of Texas. It is our hope that the full Senate will follow the lead taken by the administration and the House on this," he said.

Dr. Robert Brischetto, an assistant professor of sociology at Trinity University here, directed the study entitled "Bilingual Elections at Work in the Southwest." It consisted of interviews of 912 Mexican-Americans who voted in the most recent elections in East Los Angeles, San Antonio and Uvalde..

"Spanish language assistance in the election process is seen among voters surveyed as a sign that Mexican-Americans are welcome and encouraged to vote regardless of their lack of fluency in English," the study said.

One in every three elderly Mexican-Americans interviewed spoke no English, Brischetto said.

Slow But Steady Recovery Seen In Stock Market

NEW YORK (AP) — A slow but steady recovery in stock prices has been going on without fanfare for six weeks, suggesting that some people on Wall Street may think the worst of the economy's decline is over.

The rally comes despite a lingering recession — with millions out of work and businesses closing at the highest rate since the 1930s — that continues to be the source of gloomy economic news from Washington and corporate board rooms.

One year ago today, the stock market stood at an eight-year high, with the Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks at 1,024.05. But when interest rates turned higher, pushing the economy into its second recession in as many years, stock prices plunged.

By March 8, the Dow Jones industrials had slipped to a two-year low of 795.47, a loss of 22 percent in less than a year. At the time, talk of depression was spreading through the financial community.

But since that low point, the blue-chip average has recovered 70.11 points, with six consecutive weekly gains — this despite Treasury Secretary Donald Regan's assessment April 15 that the economy is "dead in the water."

On Monday, the Dow Jones industrials rose 3.42 points to 865.58. It was still below the 1981 close of 875.00.

"The market is telling us things are not going to be as bad as they seemed over the winter," Lee Idleman, director of research at the investment firm of Dean Witter Reynolds Inc., said Monday. "There is every reason to believe the economy will get better in the future."

The Reagan administration, which in the past has chided Wall Street for its gloomy outlook, has yet to hail the market's turnaround.

But the stock market's performance is being watched. It is one component in the government's index of leading indicators, a barometer of future economic trends.

Traders have found encouragement in the unwinding of inflation, with consumer prices falling in March for the first time since 1965. With inflation slowing — some economists say the rate for 1982 could be held to 5 percent — prospects have brightened that interest rates will begin to fall.

Historically, interest rates have been three percentage points above the inflation rate. Last year, the inflation rate fell to 8.9 percent from 12.4 percent the year before. In the first three months of this year, consumer prices are up only 1 percent on an annual basis.

Interest rates of 12 percent and higher prevail today, with the prime lending rate for the nation's most credit-worthy business borrowers at 16.5 percent.

One reason interest rates remain high is the prospect of heavy borrowing by the government, which faces record budget deficits, and businesses, which have been forced to borrow at almost any price to ride out the recession pending a hoped for rebound in sales.

Recovery hopes are also pinned on expectations of increased consumer spending following a 10 percent tax cut in personal income tax rates in July.

Regan said Monday he expects signs of a strong recovery by late spring. He said the economy is poised for an upsurge, with pent-up consumer demand and lean business inventories of unsold goods.

"The fact that it (the market) is up is in my mind at least an encouraging development," Robert Dederick, assistant secretary of commerce for economic affairs, said Monday.

Dederick said the rally provides further support for administration forecasts of an economic upturn at midyear, but he did not attach any special significance to the market's advances.

Ray DeVoe, market strategist at the investment firm of Legg Mason Wood Walker Inc., said the rally reflected some anticipation of an end to recession, but recovery "still has a long way to go."

Still, DeVoe said he was optimistic that the rally will be prolonged, citing what he called bargain prices of stocks, the impact of administration tax cuts, slowing inflation, the halt to the spiral of oil prices and rising hopes for reduced interest rates.

But not everyone is bullish.

Monte Gordon, director of research at Dreyfus Corp., said he believed the stock market is about to slow down.

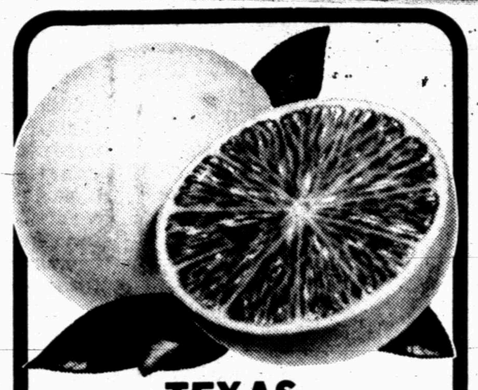

James Buchanan was the only American president who never married.

Snyderites Aid Storm Victims

Snyder area residents have helped provide disaster assistance to more than 1,050 victims of tornadoes in Northeast Texas and Southweast, Okla., according to the American Red Cross.

However, they fear that many people in the storm-ravaged areas have not sought assistance.

"We have committed more than $300,000 to disaster assistance to victims in Lamar County (Paris)," John Crafton, director, Red Cross Disaster Operations, said. "However, with the number of families affected by this disaster, we expect that figure to go much higher."

Two shipments of contributions were sent from Snyder to Paris. A substantial quantity of items was transported on a truck furnished by Britt Trucking and Construction Co. of Odessa, which stopped here en route to Paris: Later, a 24-foot trailer load of contributed items was delivered by Snyder Jaycees. The collection of items here was coordinated by the Snyder Chamber of Commerce and Scurry County Board of Development.

Contributions here ranged from clothing to various household items, including furniture and appliances, reported Dee Wenetschlaeger, BCD secretary. There were couches, chairs, televisions, large and small electrical appliances, plus some canned foods. In addition, some local individuals and organizations sent cash contributions directly to Paris.

Red Cross officials are urging more cash contributions, since they expect at least 1,682 families will ultimately need assistance.

Several organizations here contributed and assisted in collecting contributions and getting them to Paris. In addition to the Jaycees, these included the American Petroleum Institute, Rotary Club, Kiwanis, American Association of University Women, Shriners, Altrurian Daughters and Lions.

Women have four times as many foot problems as men, according to Dr. Steven Baff, a New York podiatrist. Baff says one of the main reasons is that wearing high heels and restrictive shoes causes hereditary problems to worsen.

Man Proposes On Bended Knee

NEW YORK (AP) — They are England's "Most Romantic Couple," but it wasn't until their honeymoon that Raymond Kemp proposed on bended knee to his bride.

"You never did that for me before," Sheila Lane Kemp, 27, said on Tuesday as her husband knelt and proposed for the benefit of photographers at the World Trade Center observation deck.

Kemp's real proposal helped win the pair the title "Most Romantic Couple," June 18. Then, as part of a contest, the Kemps sent each other messages via the British post office's new satellite transmission system in Plymouth, England.

"I woke up this morning and had something very important I wanted to ask you," Kemp, 30, wrote in his proposal. "I want to tie up your heartstrings and seal them with a knot of love forever. Please will you marry me."

Answered his bride-to-be: "Even if you'd sent it second-class post, my reply would have been just the same ... How could I say no."

Raymond, a TV news editor, and Sheila, a secretary, were married April 24. They received a week-long honeymoon here for winning the post office contest.

Nobody is in favor of nuclear war.

The debate beginning to dominate Congress and Main Street is between those who want nuclear weapons abolished...

And those who consider nuclear weapons the only deterrent potential adversaries would respect.

There were similar arguments over each escalation of military technology, but admittedly fusion and fission have added a new factor.

Honest disagreement divides even families.

Recently the Wall Street Journal cartooned a man and wife sitting conspicuously apart in their car while the back bumper was plastered with two stickers: NUKES and NO NUKES.

Let's assume that all Americans who are debating nuclear disarmament are loyal Americans and sincere in their diverse points of view.

Billy Graham has now diverted a significant segment of his ministry to urging "destruction of all nuclear arms."

He says, "We are living on the edge of annihilation of the human race."

He says, "This is the first generation that faces the prospect of being the last generation."

There are a hundred or more organizations mobilizing resistance to nuclear proliferation, many of them urging that the United States destroy its nuclear arsenal — whatever the Soviets do.

Before we join the pickets demanding nuclear disarmament, these considerations must give us pause:

—If we disarm and the Soviets don't, we are at the mercy of men who are without mercy.

—If we and the Soviets disarm, the world could be held hostage by any madman — a Kadafi, a Castro or an Arafat.

All nuclear weapons cannot be defused.

As Daniel Boorstin says, "Technology can't go home again; you cannot uninvent the automobile."

Indeed, already in the arsenals of the superpowers are weapons — ray weapons and bug bombs — even more hideous than nuclear weapons.

Yet, even if it were possible for the nations of the world to reach accord on the destruction of all super-weapons, so that future wars would be fought with only conventional weapons — we couldn't win.

Our 6 percent fraction of this planet's mothers could not possibly bear enough boy babies to match the limitless hordes of Asia.

We could only bleed to death trying.

And some of us are unconvinced that dying on the end of a bayonet is any more "humane" than any other way.

Ironic as it now seems, the best hope of peace may be the prospect of an unwinnable war.

Then this awesome technology in the hands of our enlightened fraction of the planet's population may effect not our destruction but our deliverance.

Dear Abby

Book Gives Happy Ending To Divided Family's Story

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1982 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I am writing to thank you for the most wonderful Christmas I've ever had. I don't expect you to remember me, but my name is Phil and I'm 43. I stood in line at Macy's in San Francisco last December to buy a copy of your book, "The Best of Dear Abby." I asked you to autograph it to Tim — my lover of many years.

I gave it to Tim for Christmas and we read it together. After reading Chapter 5, "The Homosexual Hassle," I immediately bought another copy of your book and sent it to my parents, asking them to read Chapter 5 very carefully. You see, Abby, my parents disowned me 18 years ago because I told them I was gay and they just couldn't handle it.

To make a long story short, my parents agreed to meet me at my sister's house in San Leandro — the first time in 18 years! And yes, I brought Tim along. My mother loved him, and my dad actually talked to Tim and me as though we were real human beings. I couldn't believe it!

It took 18 years, a $10 book, and you, Dear Abby, to make my parents understand and accept my gay lifestyle.

A simple "thank you" is not sufficient. You will never know what you did for me, Tim and my family. As melodramatic as it may seem, you brought a family together. God bless you. Your rewards will be eternal. The names are real and you may use any part or all of this letter.

PHIL IN SAN FRANCISCO

DEAR PHIL: Thank you. Your letter made my day.

DEAR ABBY: Our daughter is engaged to marry a nice young man she met in college about a year ago. I'll call him Doug. He lives in a nearby town (70 miles away), but we've never met his parents. The kids are planning to be married in September but haven't set the date yet.

I don't want to seem snobbish, but according to etiquette, Doug's parents are supposed to make the first move and invite us over to get acquainted. So far we have not heard from them. We "met" over the phone just to say hello when the kids were here and told us they were getting married.

I imagine Doug's parents aren't aware that it's their place to call us. Should we tell our daughter to tell Doug to tell his parents to call us?

We don't want to start off on the wrong foot.

STICKY PROBLEM

DEAR STICKY: Common sense, consideration and kindness are more important than etiquette. Don't wait for Doug's parents to make the first move. Call and invite them to come and meet you.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: A co-worker was ordered to quit smoking in the office after several of us complained to the boss. (She was a chain smoker.) Now she chews bubble gum instead, and the constant cracking and popping of her gum is driving us crazy. Can you believe a woman in her 40s chewing bubble gum all day in an office? I think she does it just to bug us.

When we ask her to please keep the noise of her gum-chewing down, she says, "What do you want from me? I can't smoke because you complained, and I have to do something!"

Any suggestions?

GOING CRAZY

DEAR GOING: Complain to the boss about bubble gum. A person has no more right to subject co-workers to irritating noises than to air pollution.

Therapy Helps Kids Come To Terms With Grief

SALEM, Ore. (AP) — It is a warm, rambling frame house on Salem's State Street that draws these children — infants and teen-agers, the financially comfortable and the struggling.

These are children united by premature and harsh encounters with death. They are children who have terminal illnesses, children who have seen their fathers murder their mothers, children who have watched their brothers and sisters drown.

Their experiences are grim, but Child in Crisis at the State Street house is a haven designed to help these youngsters move forward. It has served more than 250 families in its three years of operation.

When Mary Kay Smith (not her real name), 6, came to Child in Crisis, she had seen more death in six months than many adults experience in a lifetime.

Her parents had recently separated and she lived with her mother, her grandparents, an aunt and several pets. Within six months, Mary Kay's grandparents, aunt and all her pets died in separate incidents.

The confused child rebelled, lashing out at any authority, and was referred to Child in Crisis by school officials.

"She wanted to beat up her universe. She thought 'it's not fair,' and she was right, it was not fair," her therapist, Kathleen Smith, recalled.

Through months of play therapy, Miss Smith worked with Mary Kay to unleash her anger, primarily through roleplaying. Finally a breakthrough came as Mary Kay invented a complicated imaginary game with wild ponies.

When the mother pony died, she was able to finally express grief and tell the pony she would always love it and care for its baby.

Play therapy is the core of the Child in Crisis program, and it is used with children as old as 15. The comfortable, paneled, orange-carpeted playroom is filled with toys, tumbling mats, dress-up clothes and the ever-reassuring baby bottles.

"Kids have always fantasized and really developed play as their own therapy," said therapist Cheri Lovre.

It especially works with younger children who can't communicate their sorrow. One 3-year-old child was referred after his father killed himself with a gun.

The boy found a doll that had a hole in its head when its hair was removed. He played exclusively with that doll, but when he finally fantasized that the doll had been shot and killed, he was able to let go of his own grief and put it aside, Ms. Lovre said.

Child in Crisis is not a program that provides answers about death. Rather, the therapists try to help children accept their grief and their gamut of emotions, which run from guilt to anger, so they can move on with life.

It especially does not try to present any religious interpretations.

"If a child says what is heaven like, we say, 'What do you think heaven is like?'" said Ms. Lovre. One child drew a picture about heaven as Taco Time, a fast-food business, she said.

When the therapists deal with terminally ill children, only a small percentage of their case load, they often emphasize health.

"We say a whole lot of you is sick, but a whole lot of you is healthy, too," said Ms. Lovre.

"We want to help them have quality out of what life there is," she said.

Child in Crisis also includes individual and family counseling. In the case of a dying child, the healthy children in the family also often need help.

Director Louisa Silva, a Salem physician, said a key thing that parents should remember when dealing with the death of a child or spouse was not to overlook their surviving children.

"Parents should be real aware that if a partner is lost, they should not cut off their child so he loses both parents," she said.

Miss Smith said families should realize that each member may have a different way of integrating his loss from guilt to anger to relief.

And, she said, there are many ways to maintain involvement with a loved person who has died, whether it is visiting the grave site or sending a message up on a helium balloon every fourth Sunday.

Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

In support of hose

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — After major surgery six months ago my heart doctor prescribed surgical white support hose for me and I got two pairs. I read on the package that anyone with high cholesterol deposits and hardening of the arteries should not wear them so I have not worn them since I got out of the hospital.

My varicose veins are very bad on my right leg, way up to my groin, but they do not hurt or bother me at all. I can walk or stand for hours and I do not have any aches or pains.

About 20 years ago another doctor told me unless the veins bother you, by all means do not wear support hose and get dependent on them.

I hate to approach my doctor on this since I am on Medi-Cal. He may get huffy and tell me to see someone else. So I really need your opinion.

DEAR READER — Do what your doctor says, not what you read on a package. He knows your case and is quite familiar with the effects of support hose.

You don't become dependent upon support hose or other pressure garments used to manage or prevent varicose veins. The basic problem is that the veins become overdistended and the excessive stretching causes them to stay dilated, like an overstretched balloon. One of the most important of all measures to prevent varicose veins or to prevent progression is to prevent overdistention. It is the same thing as preventing overstretching a balloon by not blowing it up.

Support hose are fine for mild cases. They are often not adequate if there is swelling or more severe problems. In those cases you need more pressure as may be provided by graded pressure with the greatest pressure at the ankle which decreases as you progress up the leg and thigh. The Jobst stocking is an example.

You will understand the problem and what can be done about it better when you read The Health Letter number 5-8, Varicose Veins, which I am sending you. Others who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I read an article that taking three safflower oil capsules of 750 milligrams before each meal will help burn up fat in one's body. Right now about eight people in my apartment building are starting on the safflower oil. Would you please let us know if there is any truth to the claim? We are all retired people and very concerned if it would cause any side effects or even put on weight.

DEAR READER — There was once a gentleman who wrote a famous diet book and sold safflower capsules with a similar claim. He had legal problems because the claim is false.

Safflower oil is fat. It is excellent for cooking and for salads if you are going to use fat. Why? Because it is low in saturated fats and high in polyunsaturated fat. Each gram contains about nine calories. The nine capsules a day (6.75 grams) represents about 60 calories so you won't gain much weight from them, but you can be sure they will not help you lose fat, much less "burn up fat," unless they nauseate you and cut your appetite. They won't harm anything but your pocketbook.

Britain Has Discussed Island Title For Years

LONDON (AP) — Britain has been trying to give the Falkland Islands to Argentina for years, but the pro-British islanders have always blocked the transfer.

Professor J.C.J. Metford of the University of Bristol, a Falklands expert, wrote before the current crisis reached a warlike state that Argentina's best ally "might well be, paradoxically, British officialdom."

"The Falklands were acquired (in 1833) at a time when a base near the Straits of Magellan was essential for naval control of the Pacific coast of South America and the South Atlantic. ...

"Strategically, they are no longer important...To the realistic official mind, therefore, the islands are scarcely worth retaining, especially in view of the damaging effect of the dispute on Anglo-Argentine commercial relations."

London began discussing the Argentine claim in 1947. Five weeks before Argentina invaded the islands April 2, British and Argentine diplomats met in New York on the islands' future.

In 1947 and 1955 Britain offered to hand the dispute over to the International Court of Justice, but Argentina refused to go along. Ten years later the U.N. General Assembly passed a resolution urging the two nations to work for a peaceful solution of the dispute.

All efforts devised by the Foreign Office to alter the islands' status were opposed by the 1,800 Falklanders, who are mostly of British descent. In 1968 the Falklanders became so alarmed at rumours of a sell-out that their strong lobby in London addressed an open letter to Parliament declaring they "did not want to become Argentines."

The British Foreign Secretary at the time, Michael Stewart, retpeated. "The wishes of the Falkland Islanders are more important than those of either the government of the United Kingdom or that of Argentina," he said.

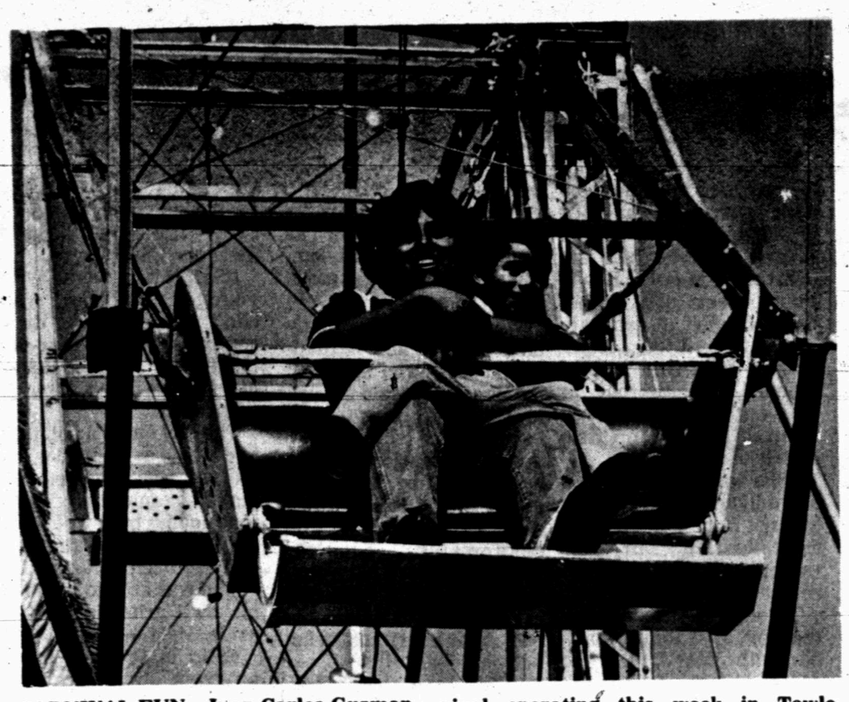

Even so, sovereignty talks resumed and by 1971 efforts to link the islanders with Argentina had intensified. Air and sea communications with the mainland were established, and educational and medical facilities in Buenos Aires were provided for the Falklanders.

In 1974, Britain and Argentina signed two further agreements on trade, and the Argentine state oil company was allowed to supply the islands. The underlying British plan was to link the Falklands to Argentina so closely that the sovereignty issue would dissipate.

In 1980, Foreign Office Minister of State Nicholas Ridley was told to make another try for a settlement. He suggested a joint British-Argentine administration, with sovereignty transferred to Argentina but Britain leasing the islands for 20 to 25 years.

A commentator in the Sunday Times wrote last weekend:

"The worst thing that could happen in the Falklands would be the sinking of the British fleet. But just about the next worst thing would be for Britain to get the islands back. ...This must be the first war in history for territory which one combatant wanted — and still wants — to donate to the other."

Court Upholds Alimony Sum

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — The Wisconsin Supreme Court has upheld a $25,000 alimony award for a divorcee who supported her ex-husband while he studied medicine at the Mayo Medical School.

The award granted to Judy Mae Lundberg of Holmen had been rejected by the state Apellate Court.

The high court, ruling Tuesday, said the principal asset of the marriage was David Lundberg's medical degree and she was entitled to compensation for putting him through medical school.

Brazil Has Okayed Texas Flights This Fall

DALLAS (AP) — Brazil gave American Airlines approval Tuesday to begin flights between Texas and the South American country.

The new service from DallasFort Regional Airport to Rio de Janeiro and Sao Paulo will begin this fall, American spokesman Wesley G. Kaldahl said.

American, Braniff International and Pan American World Airways were all asking the Brazilian government's approval for the flights, but only American suceeded.

"American has been desirous of opening DFW Airport as a major gateway to Latin America for some time," Kaldahl said. "It hopes to expand into other points of South America from DFW in the future as opportunites arise."

A young Havana lawyer, Fidel Castro, in 1953 led a group of revolutionaries in an attack on a fortress held by the army and police supporters of Cuban dictator Fulgencio Batista. Many of the attackers, including Castro, were captured and imprisoned. Subsequently released, Castro dropped from sight until 1956, when he returned at the head of another group of revolutionaries that overthrew the Batista regime in 1959.

Are Possible For Consumers...

Lower Health Care Costs

NEW YORK (AP) — With the Bureau of Labor Statistics reporting that the overall costs of medical care increased 12.5 percent between 1980 and 1981, a physician who is an authority in the health-care field suggests that consumers can help lower health-care costs.

"Contrary to popular belief, consumers can help keep medical costs from spiraling even higher in 1982," says Dr. William Cunnick, vice president and deputy chief medical director of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. "They can begin by understanding the special nature of the doctor-patient relationship.

"Medical treatment is not a true consumer situation," Cunnick explains. "To begin with, you are entrusting your lives to your doctor. But at the same time, you don't usually visit the doctor because you want to, but because you must.

"What do you really go to the doctor for, and pay for? It isn't for tests or pills; it is for advice and guidance based on the doctor's training, experience and judgment. By listening carefully to the patient and making at least a limited physical examination, the doctor should be able to establish the correct diagnosis in a high percentage of cases. This means that as patients you must communicate clearly and completely with the doctor, no matter how worrisome the subject, or the encounter will be an ineffective but expensive 'guessing game.'"

Cunnick points out that people may be concerned about alienating their doctor. However, he says, "you have to be assertive enough to obtain the information you need to cooperate in intelligent decisions about your own health, and to know the cost implications."

While a person can't do much to keep medical costs down in an emergency, Cunnick suggests that, in other medical situations, there are some steps consumers can take before treatment starts:

—Become familiar with your health-care benefits as a member of a group health-insurance plan where you work. Or, know the provisions of your private health-insurance coverage. By knowing in advance what percentage of the costs will be picked up by the plan, you will be prepared for the amount you have to pay.

—Always ask what the charges will be, especially for elective surgery, specialists' consultations, or complicated X-ray procedures. If the charges seem excessive, ask whether there are alternatives, or whether it is possible to sequence the examinations so that the results of one test might determine whether others are necessary.

—More isn't necessarily better. Don't press your doctor for tests or X-rays just for the sake of "doing something." Sometimes the doctor will think it's more valuable to observe such symptoms as appetite, weight gain, and energy level rather than order tests.

—Don't feel cheated if you come away from your physician's office without a prescription. While there have been some "miracle drugs" developed, doctors have been too quick to prescribe, and the public too insistent in demanding that some sort of pill be given. Sometimes the side effects of drugs turn out to be more serious than the condition they were supposed to relieve.

—If there is any uncertainty about the need for elective surgery, seek a second opinion from another qualified physician. Ask each what course of action he or she recommends and what the charge will be.

—Try not to be admitted to a hospital on a Saturday or a Sunday. Unless there's an emergency, chances are you won't be treated in the hospital until Monday.

Leave Programs Offers Chance To Help Others

STAMFORD, Conn. (AP) — A deaf systems programmer in Los Angeles will place other deaf people in data-processing jobs.

An employee who repairs copiers in a New York City area where there are many homeless will help create shelters for them.

A credit administrator, whose family has been afflicted by blindness, will teach office skills at a center for the blind in Chicago.

A telephone operator, the mother of a developmentally disabled boy, will teach similar students functional living skills in Pasadena.

These people and 11 other employees of Xerox Corp. are being sent on Social Service Leave, beginning the 11th year of a program that started as an experiment.

The leave program, similar to ones later adopted by other companies, gives employees a year off with full pay to work on community-action projects.

C. Peter McColough, Xerox chairman and chief executive officer, says the leave program was conceived as an experiment to meet the changing social climate of the 1970s.

"Employees were telling us they wanted more out of life than just work, and social-service organizations were telling us they needed more business support.

"We set up the leave program to fill both needs, and that's the reason it has worked so well. Those needs still exist."

Since the program began, Xerox has granted leave to 279 employees. They have helped minorities, youth, the elderly, the retarded and the handicapped, fought drug and alcohol abuse, rehabilitated prisoners, worked on health programs, offered legal aid to the poor and built services for children and the family.

A recruitment manager, whose son died of Sudden Infant Death Syndrome, set up two detection and treatment centers in the New York metropolitan area.

A senior sales executive got hundreds of jobs for newly released prisoners in the Philadelphia area.

A national accounts manager, who is the father of a retarded boy, built a model classroom for the retarded in Phoenix, and today, years after his leave, continues to add to the school's buildings and enrich its curriculum.

Employees design their own projects and then apply for leave — the company does not approach the employees. A committee made up of a crosssection of employees, not management, determines who receives time off.

Employees on leave continue to receive full pay and benefits. When they return, they get their old jobs back or new positions of equal responsibility.

The 1982 leave class includes eight women and seven men. Five will work with health and rehabilitation organizations in California, Illinois, New York and Puerto Rico. Three will help battered women and their families in California, Louisiana, and Tennessee.

Three employees will work toward the education of blacks, Indians and women in California, New Mexico and Washington, D.C. Two will aid the homeless in Massachusetts and New York, one will work with prisoners in New York and one will work on a disaster-preparedness program in Ohio.

Sunken Ship Remains After Being Eyesore

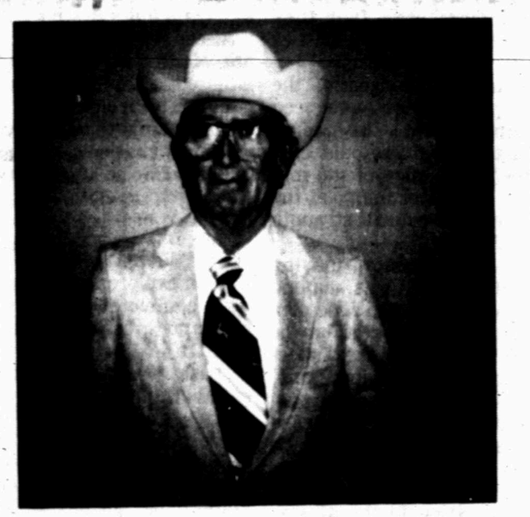

LISBON, Portugal (AP) — A 2,800-ton ship lies in the River Tagus with half its bulk showing, two years after it sank in front of Lisbon's main square and became an eyesore for the city government, a threat to navigation and a pleasure for seagulls.

"In bad weather or fog the ship Tollan is a serious danger to ferryboats," says Capt. Joao Durao of the firm Transtejo. Transtejo, which handles an average of 300 river crossings daily, has repeatedly asked port authorities to remove the wreck.

"In desperation, we have asked them to at least put radar reflectors and lights," says Durao. Port authorities have now agreed to do this.

What would have been, according to insurance surveyors, a good business deal is slowly and surely becoming a loss to its owner, Italian Alberto Felici. He says that after six unsuccessful attempts to salvage the ship, he has been told by Lisbon port authorities to stop any further efforts.

The government has not as yet acted according to a port authority report made in December 1980.

YOUNG LOVE—Richard Miller, played by John Wilson, and Muriel McComber, played by Jennifer Cole, endure the trials and tribulations of young love during the course of "Ah Wilderness."

Snyder High Thespians All Set For State UIL

Snyder High School Drama Director Jerry Worsham and a cast of 27 are set to depart this afternoon for the state finals of the University Interscholastic League One-Act play contests.

This year's Austin trip will mark the eighth straight appearence for local high school thespians in the prestigous state meet. All told, Snyder plays have appeared in the state contests 12 times since 1964.

Also appearing in this year's Class AAAA finals will be plays from Brownfield, Gregory-Portland, Fort Worth Boswell, Paris, Edcouch-Elsa, Huntsville and Bay City.

All eight of the finalists have advanced through zone, district and regional competitions in order to qualify for the final eight.

According to Worsham, this year's production of Eugene O'Neill's "Ah Wilderness", represents something of a departure from the traditional fare for one-act plays.

Conventional wisdom, he says, dictates that it takes "heavy" drama to advance to and win at the state level. Past productions lean heavily in that direction with such titles as "The Tempest", "MacBeth" and "Romeo and Juliet" from the works of Shakespeare figuring promently.

In contrast, this year's selection, a realistic comedy from the works of a man regarded as America's greatst playwrite is a significant departure.

Although comedic in tone, "Ah Wilderness" does deal with very basic, important and universal human emotions. The play depicts the goings on of the fourth of July, 1906 in a small Connecticutt community.

The work explores in detail the relationships within the Nat Miller family and their relationships to others.

Worsham rates this play as one of the best of its genre and some of the best theatrical literature available of any type.

The whole point of the one-act productions, he says, is to introduce the students to the highest quality of theatre although the competition and state titles do have their charms.

He says the most important factors in chosing the plays are the individual abilities of the students. This year, the Snyder High School Drama program is so blessed with talent that Worsham says that they could have easily cast two full productions.

Actors in seven of the play's 15 roles have been honored in the zone, district and regional contests, evidence of the major nature of many of the roles and overall strength of the cast.

Jack O'Banion, playing Nat Miller, was named best actor in the zone contest and was listed on the all-star casts of the district and regional competitions.

John Wilson, playing Nat's son Richard, earned best actor honors at the district level, honorable mention at zone and nomination to the all-star cast at regionals.

Rayne Marlo, in the role of Nat's daughter Mildred was named to the all-star casts at the zone and regional contests.

Robert Loveless, in the role of the Miller's older son Arthur garnered all-star cast honors at the regionals.

Kim Lunsford as Nat's wife Essie earned all-star status in the district contest as did Joey Forbes in the role of her brother Sid.

Mark Shaw gained all-star status in the zone competition for his portrayal of Arthur's college classmate Wint Selby.

Other featured actors in the show are Mike Everett as the Miller's youngest son Tommy, Ramona Murphy as Nat's sister Lily, Jennifer Cole playing Muriel McComber and Calvin Wimmer as her father.

Rounding out the cast are Cherie Curfman as the Miller's maid, Nora, Robyn Harlin as Belle, a saloon girl, Mark Lyon, bartender, and Clint Potts as a traveling salesman.

Alternate cast members are Keith Martin, David Etheredge, Melinda Merritt and Diane Horsley.

Stage crew for the production includes Andy Sealy, Jack Garcia and Kathy Norris.

Dr. Vivien Fuchs, a British explorer and scientist, completed the first overland crossing of Antarctica in 1958, exploring a vast area which had received little attention until comparatively modern times. Today, a number of countries, primarily the United States, the Soviet Union, Britain, Australia, and Argentina, claim sovereignty over wide areas of the ice-locked land mass.

MAKEUP—Crew member Kathy Norris applies makeup to bartender Mark Lyon and director Jerry Worsham puts the finishing touches on Mrs. Nat Miller's (Kim Lunsford) wig. All part of the hours of preparation for each performance of "Ah Wilderness."

DOUBLE DUTY—Cast members of a winning one-act play are called for many duties. Clint Potts, protraying a salesman in the show, is shown doubling up as soundman in the absence of regular sound technician Jack Garcia.

"THINK ABOUT THOSE SWIFT BABES"—Wint Selby, (left) played by Mark Shaw, regales young Richard Miller, played by John Wilson, with tales of "swift babes from New Haven."

Monahans Falls; String Now At 11

MONAHANS--The Snyder Tigers, first-half winners of the District 4-AAAA baseball crown, continued their winning string Tuesday with a 7-1 victory over the Monahans Loboes.

Snyder won their first second-half outing and extended their win string to 11 consecutive games. Coach Albert Lewis' Tigers are now 1-0 in second half action and 19-5 for the season.

Following a scoreless first inning, three consecutive singles by Jesse Hernandez, Barry Davis and Britt Vincent resulted in three runs.

In the third frame, Snyder added three more runs for a 6-0 margin. Perry Echols started the inning with a single and Barry Davis advanced to first on a walk. A single by Vincent scored one run and a single by David Rios brought a runner home.

Snyder's final tally came in the top of the fourth after Brent Roemisch advanced on a single. He later scored on a single by Hernandez.

Senior John Wilson went the route on the mound for the Tigers, giving up six hits while facing 27 batters. Wilson fanned six batters and walked one. Wilson advanced his won-loss record to 8-1 for the season.

Monte McGuire, who labored four innings for the Loboes, was credited with the loss. He was relieved in the fifth by Jesse McGuire. The two hurlers were tagged for 10 hits, struck out four and walked three while facing 30 batters.

Hernandez was Snyder's leading hitter with two singles and a double. Vincent had two singles while single hits were collected by Roemisch, Echols, Davis, David Rios and Trey Harlin.

Snyder has an open date this weekend before resuming district play when the Tigers host the Ector Eagles next Tuesday.

22 Texans Taken In Tuesday Draft

By The Associated Press

Twenty-two Texas collegians, eight from the Cotton Bowl-champion Texas Longhorns, were picked in Tuesday's rounds of the National Football League draft.

New England had the draft's No. 1 pick and, as expected, chose Texas defensive lineman Kenneth Sims. Later in the first round, Pittsburgh selected yet another Baylor running back, drafting Walter Abercrombie.

Sims, a native of tiny Kosse in Central Texas, impressed pro scouts with his pass-rushing at Texas and joins a team that ranked last in the NFL in quarterback sacks last year. In New England, he will be playing under a coach he played against in college, former Southern Methodist Coach Ron Meyer.

Meyer has said Sims will start at left end.

"I think we can do better than 20 sacks in a 16-game season," said the 6-foot-5, 279-pound Sims. "So I hope to add to that aspect of the game and help out on the run."

Walter Abercrombie, who averaged five yards per carry for Baylor last year, joins former Bear running backs Greg Hawthorne and Frank Pollard in Pittsburgh.

"I was surprised that Pittsburgh drafted me in the first round," Abercrombie said. "I wasn't surprised I went in the first round, just surprised they took me. They already have two running backs from Baylor ... and I didn't expect them to go for a third."

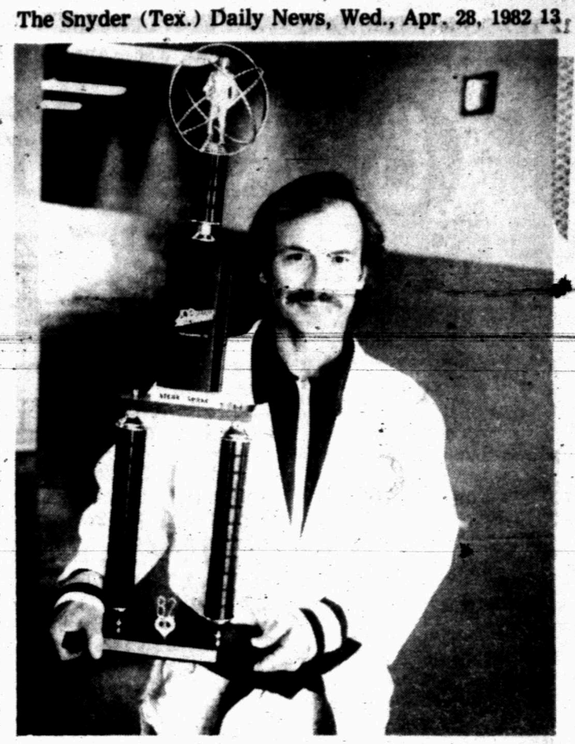

In the second round, Texas A&M defensive end Keith Baldwin went to the Cleveland Browns, Texas offensive tackle Terry Tausch was grabbed by the Minnesota Vikings and Texas linebacker Bruce Scholtz was picked by the Seattle Seahawks.

Later, Southwest Texas State defensive back Bobby Watkins was chosen by the Detroit Lions, Texas tight end Lawrence Sampleton went to the Philadelphia Eagles and West Texas State offensive tackle Reggie McElroy was drafted by the New York Jets.

New England took the second of its two third-round picks to draft another Texan, Angelo State linebacker Clayton Weishohn. Later in the round, Oakland picked Baylor defensive back Vann McElroy.

In the fourth round, Chicago selected Baylor running back Dennis Gentry and Cincinnati chose Texas running back Rodney Tate.

In round five, North Texas State defensive end Tony Elliott was picked by New Orleans, Texas center Mike Babb of Texas went to Cleveland.

SENIOR CHAMPION—Dr. Shell Hillis, WTC judo coach, displays the trophy awarded him as champion in the U. S. Senior Judo Tournament. Three WTC students also competed in the matches.

Dr. Hillis Retains National Crown

Dr. Shell Hillis, judo coach at Western Texas College, took top honors in the U. S. Senior Judo Championships in Indianapolis, Ind., for the second consecutive year.

Hillis won the national title competing in the 132-pound and under division of the Masters 40-49-year-old class.

WTC students entering the tournament were Tania Mackey, Darrell Green and Marjann Morrow. Miss Morrow qualified for the finals and wound up third in her pool, which was a tie for fourth place in her division.

The WTC judo team has completed competition for the current school year, climaxing a successful season by winning the national title for two-year colleges. WTC finished second in Texas collgiate competition, relinquishing the first place it had held for four years.

Jackson's Bat Haunts Ex-Boss Steinbrenner

By DAVID EINSTEIN
AP Sports Writer

It was a situation tailor made for Reggie Jackson — fraught with tension, adulation, and irony.

There he stood, the man who WAS the New York Yankees for five years until George Steinbrenner let him get away. He hadn't had an extra base hit in his first month as a California Angel. It was as if he had saved it up for one swing.

It came on Ron Guidry's first pitch of the seventh inning.

"I'm very happy and pleased. It's like a load off my shoulders. I'll never forget that one," Jackson said after his monumental home runoff the upper deck facade at Yankee Stadium highlighted a 3-1 Angel victory Tuesday night.

Steinbrenner, the New York owner who had dumped Manager Bob Lemon on Sunday in the latest episode of Yankee upheavel, kept a low profile as he watched Gene Michael's debut in his second turn as manager go down the drain.

But the New York fans were anything but quiet. They chanted Jackson's name as they had done many times in the past when he wore pinstripes. And they added a new, obscene chant directed at Steinbrenner.

Jackson admitted the fans moved him. "They gave me a lift, a great feeling of appreciation," he said. "There were signs saying, 'Thanks for the memories.' When you're down, you need to be lifted."

Jackson also had a single and scored in the fifth inning of the game, which was called after seven innings when a steady rain turned to a downpour. Rookie Angel Moreno, who held the Yankees to four singles, got the win for the Western Division-leading Angels.

In other American League action, Boston and Detroit remained tied for first place in the East as the Red Sox downed Kansas City 7-5 while the Tigers stopped Minnesota 5-2, Chicago blasted Milwaukee 11-2, Toronto topped Texas 8-4 and Seattle beat Cleveland 7-4 in 11 innings. Oakland was rained out at Baltimore.

Red Sox 7, Royals 5

Aging Carl Yastrzemski, saying he's "in a good groove and just trying to keep it going," drilled a two-run single in the second inning and set up a tie-breaking run with another hit in the fifth as the Red Sox won their eighth game in a row.

Yaz, closing in on his 43rd birthday, leads Boston with 15 runs-batted-in and five homers while hitting at a .349 clip in the first 18 games.

Reliever Bob Stanley bailed out Boston starter Dennis Eckersley with two men on and none out in the fifth inning, worked out of the jam and stopped K.C. on two hits the rest of the way.

Lakers Take Easy Victory

AP Sports Writer

The Los Angeles Lakers hadn't played in nine days, days, so it seemed logical that they would come out cold in the first quarter.

Logic, it turned out, had nothing to do with Tuesday night's National Basketball Association playoffs, as the Lakers hit 15 of their first 20 shots for a 32-20 first-quarter lead against the Phoenix Suns.

The Lakers, who had a bye in the first round of the playoffs, went on to an easy 115-96 victory and a 1-0 lead in their best-of-7 series.

"Los Angeles came out strong in the first quarter and set the tone," said Phoenix Coach John MacLeod. "We couldn't recover. We were never in position to establish momentum."

But Lakers Coach Pat Riley still is worried about tonight's second game, also in xlos Angeles, because it will be necessary for his team to be ready to play again so quickly after Tuesday's success.

"It was a good first-night win," Riley said. "In a back-to-back situation like this on our court, we have to make sure Phoenix doesn't steal one. We'll need the same effort in the next game."

In the other Western Conference playoff opener, the San Antonio Spurs beat Seattle 95-93, negating the SuperSonics' home-court advantage.

The second game of that series is tonight in Seattle, and the Eastern Conference playoffs also resume with Washington at Boston and Milwaukee at Philadelphia. The Celtics and 76ers won Game 1 of those series last Sunday.

Cowboy Research Put Hill On List

DALLAS (AP) - They watched every move he made in the All-Star games. They sent him through every agility drill possible. It was like the Dallas Cowboys were trying to find a reason not to draft Rod Hill.

What they saw finally made Coach Tom Landry decide to draw to an inside straight if the speedy defensive back from Kentucky State was still available in Tuesday's National Football League draft.

He was there as the 25th pick of the first round and Landry gambled.

"We are very impressed with him as an athlete," said Landry.

What dazzled the Cowboys the most was Hill's blazing speed and lateral agility, prime requisites for an NFL defensive.

Plus a big bonus: Hill was the top punt returner in the nation two years ago. He returned one punt 87 yards for a touchdown.

The 5-11, 183-pound Hill was sidelined three games with an ankle injury last season, but has fully recovered.

"If we wanted to be sure we were right we would have chosen somebody else. There were other more solid picks," said Landry. "We were impressed with his movement during a tryout camp we had down here."

Landry said Hill had 4.6 speed in the 40 "which means he can fly. We have a very fast player. You see a lot of 4.4s or 4.5s which are really 4.6s because the players aren't timed right"

Landry said the only question mark was Hill's tackling ability.

"He's not as aggressive as we would like but he was playing safety and backpedaling with the snap," said Landry. "Also, when you get a film from a small school you are lucky if they locate the player."

Hill, who missed a flight to Dallas Tuesday night, was expected today for a press conference.

The Cowboys, who will be missing the retired linebacker D.D. Lewis and strong safety Charlie Waters, went heavily for defensive help.

They picked Yale linebacker Jeff Rohrer in the second round; followed with Wyoming linebacker Jim Eliopulos in the third round; and took defensive backs Brian Carpenter of Michigan and Monty Hunter of Salem College in the fourth round.

Richardson To Be Banquet Speaker

Nolan Richardson, who guided the Western Texas College Westeners to the National Junior College Athletic Association basketball championship in 1979-80, will be guest speaker for the WTC Booster Club athletic banquet set for May 8 at the Snyder Country Club.

Richardson left WTC to become head men's basketball coach at the University of Tulsa and won the National Invitation Tournament his first year there.

Tickets for the athletic banquet will be $7.50 each and are to be reserved by calling the student activities office at WTC at 573-8511, extension 276. Reservations must be made by noon on May 7 and tickets must be paid for and picked up in advance of the banquet.

In a departure from the past, athletic awards will be presented at 11:10 a. m. Tuesday in a special awards program in the science lecture hall on the campus.

Uwe Von Schamann of the Miami Dolphins, who was born in West Germany, made 24 of 31 field goals in 1981 for a percentage of .774.

Sam Crawford, a slugging outfielder, made 312 triples during his major league career, a record number.

In Arms Sales...

Soviets Outpace United States

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Soviet Union outpaced the United States in the sale of arms to Third World countries during the four years of the Carter administration, according to a study prepared by the U.S. Arms Control and Disarmament Agency.

The disarmament agency's annual report also said that spending by all countries on military forces totaled nearly $570 billion in 1979, including $24 billion in arms exports.

The report, which focused on arms sale developments over the decade beginning in 1970, said the Soviet Union concluded arms agreements with the Third World in 1980 that more than doubled those of the United States.

But the report did not include arms sales after 1980 when President Reagan took office.

The United States reportedly is prepared to sell a total of more than $24 billion in arms in fiscal 1982, eclipsing a record $15.8 billion in 1975 during the Ford administration.

The Reagan administration's use of arms sales as a major vehicle of foreign policy reverses the Carter's administration's policy of attempting to limit and reduce arms transfers.

Eugene Rostow, director of the arms control agency, said in a foreword to the study that the average growth rate in military spending by all countries in the study was nearly 9 percent a year since 1970.

"The report is in fact a fever chart, recording the disintegration of world public order and the consequent spread of anarchy, fear and panic in many parts of the world," Rostow said.

"As a result, the arms industry has become the leading growth industry in the world," he said.

"Large and small countries on every continent have been scouring the world for arms, buying from governments or from private merchants in a desperate and often futile effort to guarantee their security," he added.

But he said that "used judiciously" the Reagan administration's arms transfer policy can help deter aggression, improve the ability of the United States to respond to threats, demonstrate U.S. determination not to allow allies to be militarily disadvantaged and foster regional and internal stability.

The new study said that "despite difficulties of measurement and analysis, it is clear that the Soviet Union has become the principal supplier to the Third World of weapons and weapons related items."

"Soviet arms sales (in the period 1977 through 1980) were focused primarily on strategically located countries in North Africa, the Middle East and South Asia — principally Libya, Algeria, Iraq, Syria and India," the study said.

BIRTHS

David and Debbie Yearwood are parents of a baby boy weighing eight pounds, 3 ounces. He arrived at 4:20 p.m. Apr. 22 at Clear Lake Hospital in Houston and has been named Joshua Cade.

Senate Committee To Approve Provisions

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Judiciary Committee, poised to vote on an extension of the 1965 Voting Rights Act, will almost certainly approve key provisions sought by civil rights groups and opposed by the Reagan administration, sources say.

The sources said Tuesday that Sens. Bob Dole, R-Kan., and Howell Heflin, D-Ala., are prepared to vote for a version of the voting rights measure that is backed by the NAACP, the Leadership Conference on Civil Rights and the American Civil Liberties Union. The sources asked for anonymity.

The committee vote, originally scheduled for Tuesday, was postponed until today.

There are 18 members on the judiciary committee headed by Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., and the support of Dole and Heflin, a former member of the Alabama Supreme Court, will give liberals and civil rights groups a safe majority, the sources said.

Without congressional action, certain critical provisions of the 23-year-old voting rights law will expire at the end of August, including one that requires all or parts of 22 states to get advance Justice Department approval of changes in voting laws.

The major issue in the voting rights battle in Congress centers on the kind of evidence needed to demonstrate discrimination against black or other minority voters.

A voting rights bill approved by the House and pushed by Sens. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., and Charles McC Mathias Jr., D-Md., would allow a judge to find discrimination if the results — or effects — of actions by local officials are discriminatory.

But Thurmond, the Reagan administration and Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, are proposing a 10-year extension of the law that would require civil rights lawyers to prove that local officials intended to discriminate against minority voters.

Civil rights organizations say the so-called intents test would require them to gather evidence about what was in the minds of state legislators or city council members all the way back to the 19th century and to analyze the motives of many politicians who are now dead.

In a series of Senate judiciary subcommittee hearings earlier this year, Hatch claimed the so-called effects test would lead to a quota system for blacks, Hispanics or Indians on local school boards, city councils or state legislatures.

Burglary, Theft Keep Police Busy

A burglary at North Elementary School and two hubcap thefts occupied local police Tuesday.

An officer on routine patrol discovered two broken windows at North Elementary around 1:45 a.m. this morning. Further investigation disclosed that the school had been burglarized during the night.

According to reports, the burglar got away with an undetermined amount of cash and ransacked the principal's office after gaining entry to the building through the broken windows.

Police cleared one incident of hubcap theft with the arrest of two men around 3:20 p.m. Tuesday.

G. A. Lockabee called police at 9:30 a.m. and told officers that someone had stolen a hubcap, valued at $30, from his vehicle while it was parked at the Ezell Key Feed Store on 26th St.

Marva Allen reported the other hubcap theft of the day around 6:45 a.m. She told police that someone had taken one hubcap valued at $50 from her 1980 Buick while it was parked at Cogdell Memorial Hospital.

In other action, officers made five arrests for public intoxication at the National Guard Armory around midnight and arrested one man on charges of driving while intoxicated in the 3000 block of College Avenue around 2 a.m. Wednesday.
