J. S. Driskill, Farm and Church Leader, Dies

J. S. Driskill, 85, retired farmer and for many years a leader in his church and in advancement of agricultural life, and the first president of the Greenbelt Rural Electric Cooperative, died Sunday evening, January 3, at 7:10 o'clock, after having been critically ill following a stroke several weeks ago.

Mr. Driskill had lived in the county 46 years, and had retired from active farming only nine years ago, when he and Mrs. Driskill moved from their place east of town to their home at 1112 Amarillo St.

Born in Brown County October 23, 1868, James Sadler Driskill grew up on the Texas frontier and by the time he was 14, was already following the life of a cowboy. During the years afterward, he saw much of West Texas as he drove cattle along the trails famous in that day for the many herds that went over them.

He was married December 10, 1893, to Miss Ola Gardner at Marble Falls, in Burnet County, and then he left cow punching to engage in farming.

The love of livestock of all kinds remained with him throughout his life, and he combined stock raising with his farming operations until late years.

A man who valued quality, Mr. Driskill always insisted on owning only the best, wheather it was cattle, horses, hogs or the many fine dogs he bred, and the fine breeding of the stock he raised was known throughout the areas where he lived.

Mr. Driskill knew the lower Panhandle and Greer County area well from his cattle drives, and in 1902, wishing to pioneer as a farmer, he moved his family to near Eldorado, then in the Indian Territory. Four years later, in 1906, they came to Collingsworth County.

Mr. Driskill bought an unfenced, uncultivated farm in the southeast part of the county and set about to improve it. Here the family lived for a number of years, then in 1929 bought their farm east of town. He began raising fruit and his orchards were recognized among commercial buyers for their quality.

Mr. Driskill was one of the small group of men responsible for the organization of the Greenbelt Rural Electric Co-operative, which now serves most of the farm homes in an area that goes into five counties. When the first election was held, he was chosen president, and led the co-operative through its difficult early years.

He was also for many years a director of the Wellington National Farm Loan Association.

A Church leader, Mr. Driskill had been a member of the Church of the Nazarene since 1912, and for a long period was one of its trustees. He retired from this only

Three young Wellington soldiers from Fort Bliss, part of a seven from three families who enlisted a short time ago, were here during the holidays for short New Years leaves. The three are Pvts. Grady E. and William T. Brown, sons of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Brown; and Pvt. John L. Hudson, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Hudson.

Their enlistment was something new to recruiting officers of the Panhandle, and Sgt. 1/c Aubrey O. Bailey, recruiting officer from Childress, was more than mildly astonished when seven young men, three sets of brothers, appeared and told him they wanted to enlist. He was still astonished when six of the seven were accepted for Army service following their examinations.

The group included James Adrain Brown, 22, who had been in service before, William Thomas Brown, 18 and Grady Everett Brown, 19; John Leslie Hudson, 18 and Eugene Hudson, 19; and Carroll Wayne Morris, 17, and James William Morris, 18. All members of the group did not leave together, but the three who were here over New Years did.

The Brown Brothers were born at Whitesboro and moved to Childress when they were quite young. For a number of years the family has lived at Loco and they attended the Wellington schools.

The Morris brothers are the sons of Mrs. Francis May Morris, 1105 Bowie Street and have lived at Wellington most of their lives. They, too, went to school here.

A plan to provide county farmers with grass seed at a cost below the usual retail price was announced this week following a meeting of the Salt Fork Soil Conservation District Saturday night, January 2.

The district has bought a quality of seed adapted to this area, including sand love, weeping love, blue panic, blue stem, side oats and blue gramma and others. These seed have been distributed to custodians of the district-owned drills, and they will be in charge of the sale, Fred Squyres, work unit conservationist, has announced.

Mr. Squyres pointed out that the district is not trying to compete with local seed dealers, but that the grass seeds handled by the district have not been available locally in past years.

The drill custodians include Melvin Burks, vocational ag teacher at Wellington; Lee Christy, vocational ag teacher at Samnorwood; Frank Kennedy, vocational ag teacher at Quail; and Ruel Alexander of Dodson.

The seed will be sold at cost plus a small profit to cover handling, Mr. Squyres said. This will be below the current retail price of these seed, and the price usually advances with the season, he added.

"This arrangement will enable a farmer to go lease the district grass seed drill and buy his seed at the same time," Mr. Squyres explained.

At the Saturday night meeting, the directors also voted to by a Handcock-Higley land plans, 30 feet long and nine wide, and mounted on wheels, for use by farmers preparing for irrigation and others who need it. A second piece of esuipment approved os a one and theree-fourths yard carry all soil mover on wheels.

Bith pieces of equipment are expected in about 30 days.

ALL TANKED UP—Latest thing to move a tank across water to a combat area is the T-15 flotation device, developed by Army Ordnance. Equipped with a portable power plant, it can float a 47-ton tank indefinitely. Designed for emergency use only, the T-15 is portable and can be assembled in a short time. While on the ground it travels at about 30 miles per hour. It's speed in water has not been disclosed. Developed at the Detroit Arsenal, the device will soon be contracted out to private industry.

Need and Practicability Necessary

TENTATIVE APPROVALS ON FARM PROGRAM MAILED TO FARMERS

Tenative approvals for all 1954 ACP Practices have been mailed to all farmers who signed a request for assistance before December 20, 1953, the deadline date for the initial sign-up period. according to Millard Brown, ASC Secretary.

However, all practices requested to date require a determination of need and practicability which will be made by the local SCS technician before the practice can be started.

After the SCS determination has been made and reported to the ASC (PMA) office then the official approval form, ACP-245, will be issued and the farmer can start his work on the practice. If the a purchase order, ACP-128, then it will also be necessary for this form to be issued before starting the work.

This same procedure was in effect for the 1953 program on terraces and dams, and has been extended to eight other practices for the 1954 program. Farmers should strictly adhere to this procedure if they expect to receive payment for their practices carried out.

Deep Plowing's the Thing

Mystery Farm Identified as Lonnie Neeley Place at Quail

Last week's Mystery Farm is owned and operated by Lonnie Neeley, and is located two miles west and one and a half north of Quail.

First person to guess the identification was Adah Allred, who formerly lived at Quail. One other person guessed the farm corectly, and that was Don Johnson, who also lives at Quail.

The Neeley family has lived on the farm for the past three years, moving there when he bought it from Osa Black. Mr. Black had bought it several years previously from Charley Amerson, who lived there for around 25 years. Mr. Neeley doesn't remember who owned the place prior to that.

There were no improvements when the Neeleys bought the farm. There had formerly been a house there, but it was moved away and only the trees remained.

The farm now includes 200 acres, and of this, Mr. Neeley plants about 60 acres in cotton and 120 in feed, along with 20 in peanuts. He isn't sure what he'll put on his surplus cotton acres but thinks it will probably be some kind of feed.

He has had part of the land deep plowed, and is enthusiastic about the results. "That's the only thing for that kind of land. I cent higher yield on the land that judge that I made around 25 per was deep plowed than I would have without it. I intend to do some more, too," he said.

Mr. Neeley has also used 16-20-0 fertilizer on the land and sprays for insect control when this is needed.

He keeps some mixed cattle and a few hogs.

Besides deep braking as a soil conservation measure, he is trying to get a native grass pasture back on the place, using love grasses, which are especially adapted to that type land.

Mrs. Neeley is the former Oleta Welch of Wellington. The couple was married in 1945 and have two children. Lonetta, 7, and Cary Don, three.

A World War II veteran, Neeley was in service three years and four months, part of the time in the European theatre. He is a member of the American Legion and also of the Farm Bureau.

Letters From The PEOPLE

Athens, Tennessee

Dear Mr. Wells,

Enclosed you will find a check for The Leader. I sure don't want to miss a copy. Looks like they are making a pretty good cotton crop. I was out there the first of September. It did not look so good then.

They say this country is in the drouth area. I don't know what the annaul rainfall is, but I kept a record of it for 8 months, April through November and it was 34.3 inches.

We haven't had any snow, but has been pretty cold. Down to 11.

I went to the tobacco market. Sold my first tobacco. It is quite different from taking cotton.

Wishing you all a prosperous New Year.

Your Friend,
H. Lee Roy

Faith Baptists Plan Expansion

At the time the Fresno building was bought, the membership of that church was transferred to the First Baptist Church in Wellington.

The building is 36 x 60 feet.

YFC Meeting at Methodist Church

The regular meeting of the Youth For Christ will be held at the First Methodist Church Saturday evening, at 7:00 p. m., with the Rev. Russell Allen as speaker.

The last meeting of the group, Saturday, January 2, saw one of the largest attendances since the movement began here. Meeting at Faith Baptist Church, the auditorium was filled almost to capacity.

High Noon Wedding For Miss Shipley, Mr. White

A wedding at high noon Friday, January 1, united in marriage Miss Almeta Shipley and Edward J. White, both of Wellington. The double ring ceremony took place at the home Dr. and Mrs. E. K. Jones, with the Rev. J. F. Michael, pastor of the First Methodist Church, officiating.

Parents of the bride are Mrs. Mary Shipley and A. C. Shipley, while Mr. and Mrs. Elzie F. White are the parents of the groom.

Wedding music was furnished by Miss Janet Jones at the Hammond organ, and included "Because," "O Promise Me," "I Love Thee," and "I Love You Truly." "Ave Marie" was played softly during the ceremony, and the traditional wedding marches were used.

The couple recited their vows before an arrangement of lighted cathedral tapers in tall candelabra, flanked by baskets of lemon leaves and plumosa fern, tied with large white satin bows.

The bride, given in marriage by Dr. Jones, wore a dress of silver alome, styled with a fitted bodice, standing collar and three-quarter length push-up sleeves. Tiny buttons extended down the front to the waist. The full circular skirt was ballerina length. Her half-hat was of silver metalic cloth accented with sequins and her white satin pumps were brocaded with silver.

She carried a colonial bouquet of white feathered carnations centered with a white orchid.

A reception followed the wedding.

The bride's table was laid with a cut-work linen cloth and centered with five-branched silver candelabras holding lighted tapers. Miss Mary Duncan served the tiered wedding cake after the bride and groom had cut the first slice, and Mrs. Clifford Niles presided at the silver coffee service. Mrs. Alton Wilkins assisted in the serving.

Ceremony Saturday Unites Miss. Roark and Bill Karnes

In a wedding of quiet charm and beauty at the Wesley Foundation Chapel in Canyon, Miss Pat Roark became the bride of Bill Karnes. The double ring ceremony was read Saturday, December 26, at five-thirty o'clock in the evening.

Parents of the popular young couple are Mr. and Mrs. Lee Roark of the Lutie comunity and Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Karnes of Wellington.

The Rev. Strauss Atkinson, pastor of the First Baptist Church in Canyon, officiated.

Wedding music was provided by Miss Sue Vaughn of Briscoe at the chapel organ, and she also accompanied Miss Pam McDonald of Canyon as she sang "I Love You Truly," and "Because of You."

The couple repeated their vows before an alter draped in blue velvet, centered with an arrangement of white chrysanthemums and blue nyleen. Cathedral tapers lighted the scene. The aisle was marked with white chrysanthemums and satin bows.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a blue silk faille suit, featuring in a tiny white satin collar and cuffs, embroidered with seed pearls and pale blue rhinestones. Her accessories were white satin.

She carried a white Bible topped with white gardenias, surrounded by blush pink rosebuds. From this fell white satin streamers, with drops of pearls tide in lovers knots. She carried out the traditional something old, which was her Bible; something new, her earrings; and something borrowed, a handkerchief carried by the groom's mother at her wedding.

Mrs. Lynn Wright of Wellington, former roommate of the bride, was matron honor. Her dress of blue faille was fashioned with short sleeves, a fitted bodice and circular skirt. She carried a colonial bouquet of white baby mums.

Attending the wedding, in addition to members of the wedding and reception party, were Mr. and Mrs. Rudy Horak and Terry Diane of Amarillo, Mr. and Mrs. Karnes, Linda Karnes, Elaine Karnes, and Mrs. Doshia Dix of Wellington; Amy Wright of Plainview, Velton Sorgee of Canyon, Mr. and Mrs. Dalton Vaughn of Brisco, Mr. and Mrs. Cortez Barnett of Lone Mound, and Mr. and Mrs. Ike Rogers and Mr. and Mrs. Roark of Lutie.

EDITORIAL COMMENT — THE WELLINGTON LEADER

Industries Are Human Too

In summ rizing the genuinely important factors that industry desires in a community Francis R. Cella of Oklahoma University placed friendliness high on the list recently when he spoke at the Rotary luncheon.

Fortunately, a genuine and unaffected friendliness is part of Mangum's tradition. Officals of the Armco company were frank to say the cooperative spirit they found here figured in their decision to locate a fabricating plant in Mangum.

As director of the bureau of business research at the university, Mr. Cella has compiled all the foctors industry considers in choosing a location. Some of them include such imposing considerations as an equitoble tax structure and a high level of governmental stability.

But standing out on the list is the simple, human quality of friendless.

The people who seek to advance a community by presenting its advantages in charts and statistical tables too often over look this asset. But industry does not.

Cella related the example of Poteau, Okla., which attracted a firm making airplane instrument panal devices. Other competing cities overwhelmed the company scouts with facts and figuers given politely and with sophisticated restraint.

The Poteau people made the visitors feel they were welcome and would be accepted at once in the community life.

Mangum and Greer county are peculiary fortunate in this respect. In addition to its traditional hospitality the shortgrass country has the advantage of a high quality labor supply established by personnel tests.

Cella was careful to emphasize every community must be willing to initiate and work toward industrial goulds and that these must be realized by the individual communites themselves rather than outside agencies.

Certainly, a new era of industrial expansion is opening in Mangum.

The fine Armco plant representing an international organization will open here late this month.

Mangum and Greer county have advantages for other industries and we're going to tell the people about them.

We've already achieved an auspicious beginning in this direction and through our united efforts the future should hold more of them.

The Mangum Star

THE NEW YEAR

The year 1954 enters the world's stage with the United States and Soviet Russia two giants competing for influence in every section of the world. The new year brings with it as much hope as anxiety, for a change, and the outliik today is certainly an improvement over that of a year ago, two years ago, or even three years ago.

In the first place, the United States is better prepared today to meet a challenge or aggression than at any time since World War 11. The armament program begun hurridly in 1950 is nearing completion, and therefore comparative armament advantages enjoyed by the Communists in recent years has been considerably whittled. The U. S. Army today is supplied with modern tanks, modern guns and is large enough, and well enough trained, to be expanded rapidly.

The United States Navy has, to a large extent, been de-mothballed and work is underway on several modern carriers and atomic submarines. In addition, the air arm of the Navy has been greatly modernized and is being expanded. The United States Air Force packs more power as 1954 enters the world stage than it has ever packed before. The year 1954 promises the first suantity deliveries of the newest heavy jet bomber, the B-52.

In addition, the Air Force has new fighters on the way, an impressive supply of F-86 jet fighters, and a number of medium jet bombers. This country's atomic stock pile is said to be tremendous, and quantity production of hyduring 1954.

We dwell on U. S. military strength drogen bombs is sure to get underway to point out this strength improves chanecs for world peace. Had the U. S. undertaken such a rearmament program in a peaceful world, such strenght constitute a threat to peace. However, in a world with aggressors active, the only sure way of keeping the peace is for the democracies to pack power enough to retaliate againce aggression.

This year, for the first time in three years, the Unted States enters a new year without having its sons dying on the battlefields. The year, then brings with it more hope than any since World War 11.

J. C. Howell in The Wheeler Times

1954 OUTLOOK

Here it is the last day of the year and except for minor scars, just about everyone came through with a minimun of trouble. True, people had their ups and downs, but we can't remember a single year when folks had everything comeing their way. Like as not we would soon find life not worth living if everything came easy and there was no challenge awating us with each sunrise.

You may recall that a year ago on this date, the future didn't appear too bright. There wasn't a green sprig showing in any fields, the irrigation program was stalled, cattle prices had already started tumbling and business had enhed even before Christmas day. There was a war going on, too, and the threat of even more fighting elsewhere was all too plain.

Now we face the new year and things are already looking up. There's moistsure in the soil, the winter crops are green, more irrigation wells are being developed and while acreages for wheat and cotton have been reduced farmers can still depend on good prices for their products. As for business, it's unusually good for this time of the year and few are those who won't admit that the future looks bright indeed.

During the past few days we've made it our business to talk to as many people as possible, bankers farmers business men, all representing different types of endeavor. The two-letter word, "IF" creeps in every so often, but on the whole, all forecast as good or better conditions next year.

Men who should know advise caution, at the same warn that "he who waits for business to come to him may be waiting in vain." In other words, there's no letdown in sight and the ambitious man, whether he's farmer, business man or just plain laborer is going to have to hustle if he wants to stay head. Fair advice we'd say in any year, let alone the new year.

Mostpeople, especially business men, have learned that the quickest way to bring on hard times is to talk it among their employees an dcustomers. Fo rthat reason, in the days ahead, we hope we'll hear less and less about poor business.

There's weeks for instance when we, here at the newspaper, have to dig mighty deep to come up with something hard-time stories that we hear on our bright and cheery to take the place of rounds.

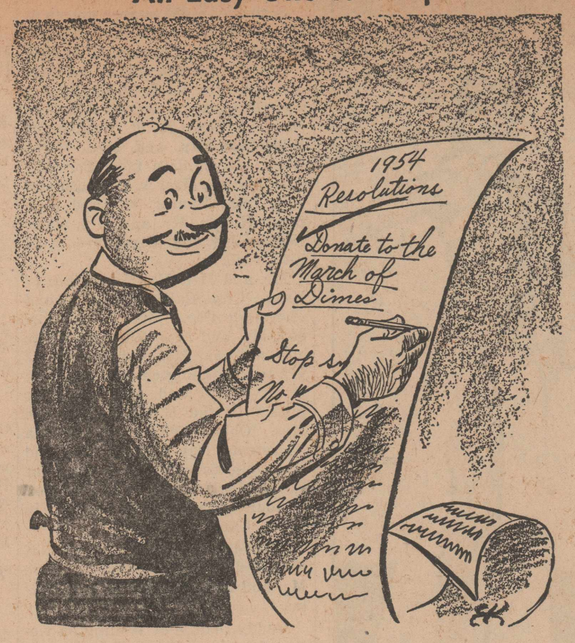
An Easy One to Keep



The Buck Creek Philosopher

Editor's note. The Buck Creek Philisopher on his Johnson grass farm on Buck Creek seems to be discussing politics this week, but you never can tell.

Dear editar:

With a political year shapin up, I have naturally devoted considerable thought to politics lately, although politics to me is an enterprise similar to plowin, something more to be observed form a distance then to be participated in actively, and I've noticed an odd thing.

From time to time I have noticed where some prominent man, being talked up by rumors as a possible candidate for some national job, has declined to get interested on the grounds he doesn't want to bring up his children in Washington. And some Washington officeholders have declined to run for re-election, just to get their children out of the place.

I have thought about this a long time, and while it's my opinion more men have been ruined in Washington than children, still the Washington-shy men may have a point and I've been wonderin, you reckon we ought to start a campain to make Washington a fit to bring children up in?

Of course, the thing isn't as simple as it sounds. In the first place, most grown-ups in Washington were put there by the voters, and if it has resulted in the place turnin into a town unfit to bring children up in, you can see whose chickens have come home to roost.

Moreover, While I never have considered the problems of the nation could be attributed to juvenile delinquency in Washington, I always figured you'd have to go up the age scale just a little to really put the blame in the right place, still somebody has to serve in the national capital and if nobody's left there except the parents who don't care how their children are brought up, you can see what the future of the nation is.

I was talkin this problem over with my neighbor and he suggested it could be solved by movin the national capital some place else besides Washington, but I doubt if this would work. In the first place, where would you put it? We got no room for it out here. And in the second place, what would keep the new place from turnin into another Washington, if the same people was runnin it?

Personnally, I perfer to work on the angle of keepin Washington where it is and tryin to work out some system whereby it will become a safe place to bring children up in. I know a lot of men you couldn't trust to send to Washington, but didn't know you couldn't trust children there either. Something ought to be done about this right away, as there are a lot of good men we could use up there.

Yours faithfully,
J. A.

Crossroads Report

Dear Mr. Secy, Benson:

I see where it is that you are getting a lot of letters from nonrural citizens who are in full cry against price-supporting the farmers any longer.

I am obligated to report that some farmers and some people who do business with farmers are commenting on this matter to the effect that these letters likely come from city-dwelling individuals who want lower food prices so they can meet the payments on a bigger TV set. One old farmer who has managed to conjure a little crop out of three dry years suggests the writers may be people who think the rurals ought to be discouraged from trying to rise above their historically humble place in the social order.

But, of course, a broad gauge man like you will understand that the sentiment to uncoddle the farmer must come from patriotic people who want to see the whole country purged of the evils of high living, and who realize that pulling the rug out from under the farmer has never yet failed to generate a first-class depression.

Bible Comment

FOR JAN. 10

The Bible Is a Textbook on Sociology

The Bible is a profound and inexhaustable textbook of sociology.

There is no problem in society today, or in the life of a modern nation, that is not exemplified with some very clear teaching, if men would seek it, in the concentrated history of the Jewish people as set forth in the Old Testament histories and prophecies.

The causes of social disintegration, of natural disruption, decay and disaster, are there set forth as plain as day, and there is no reason whatever to assume that those causes do not operate as tragically for modern peoples as they did then.

And Christ's gospel for society took into it all the wholesome teaching and experience that had gone before.

With even greater sternness than this before Him, He denounced the continuing sins and social evils of His day. If one doubts it, or minimizes the social impact of the teaching of Christ, let him turn to that catalogue of "Woes" in Matthew 23.

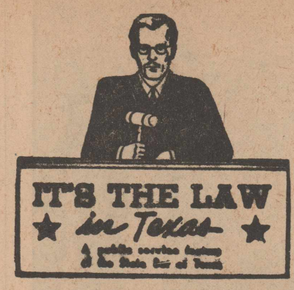
But Christ had no gospel for society that did not have its rise and place in the individual hearts and lives.

If there was one thing upon which Jesus insisted it was the value and worth of the individual life. That was the outstanding message of the parable of the Ninety-and-Nine, or of the Lost Sheep.

In a democracy, particularly, that insistence upon the value of the individual, and upon his responsibility, should never be weakened.

We are want to define democracy in terms of the rule of the majority, but majority decisions do not by themselves make anything wise or right.

The true basis of democracy is self-rule, which means that every man is his own king. God help society when the king abdicates.



Christmas Gift Exchanges not Legally Required of Merchants

The season for returning Christmas gifts to stores for exchange is now upon us. Most business establishments are as cooperative as possible about this annual Ameri can pasttime, but before getting into any arguments with a reluctant clerk or manager, better take a look at the legal situation involved. You may find that persuasion is more in order than demands for adjustment.

Department stores are under no legal obligation to take back a purchase and refund your money or deliver other goods in exchange just because you changed your mind. Most stores do make refunds and exchanges, but that is because it is their policy to do so—not because they are required to.

However, a promise to refund or exchange merchandise made by the store or the salesman should be honored. Similarly, if a store misrepresents the quality of certain goods or if the goods are defective, you are justified in expecting a satisfactory adjustment. But you have no more legal right to expect a store to refund or exchange because you change your mind about a purchase than the store has to ask you to give back the goods that were sold to you because it didn't want to sell them after all.

Suppose you buy a coat in one store and find that another company has it on sale for five dollars less. Must the store where you bought it take back the coat and give you a refund, or refund the difference in price? The seller is under no obligation to refund the difference, any more than he could make you pay the difference if he discovered a competitor offered the same coat at a higher price than he had charged for it.

Much the same apply to the refund of deposits. Unless it is the policy of a store to refund deposits on articles, or at least apply the amount on the purchase of some other item, the buyer is obligated to go though with the terms of the contract, even though he has changed his mind about the purchase.

When one selects, orders, and deposits money on the purchase of an article, the store is under obligation to deliver the article in accordance with the terms of the sale. If the buyer refuses to accept the article or pay the remainder of the purchase price, the seller can take legal action against him, according to the terms of the contract.

The same principles apply to a trade-in allowance on used merchandise towards the purchase of a new article. Such a trade-in allowance is considered the same as a deposit.

Looking Ahead With George S. Benson

THE STORY OF NITROGEN

Fifty-six years ago Sir William Crookes, noted chemical scientist, foresaw the possibility of the end of life on earth. He wasn't forecasting a plague, another great Deluge, the development of the H-bomb or basteriological warfare. He was merely calling attention to the dwindlng supply of usable nitrogen in the earth's farmlands. Unless a way could be found to replenish the nitrogen being drawn from the soil by crops, the soil gradually would become unproductive — and wholesale starvation would face the human race.

The pitifully small earth deposit of usable nitrogen in Chilt's nitrate mines wouldn't fill a hollow tooth in the earth's hunger for this chemical element which sustains all plant and animal life. Chemicals science was being challenge and God's own admonition to Adam and Eve: "Be fruitful and multiply, and replenish the earth, and subdue it." Mankind had multiplied all right; and had scattered, in the millions, over all the globe. But mankind had not replenished the earth, as they took from it.

MUST BE "FIXED"

When Crookes made his important observation, the world's population was swiftly rowin, as it is now; while the productivity of the land, on the whole, was diminishing. These two related facts were what concerned the chemical scientists. They forecast not a land of plenty, but a land of growing food scarcity.

Long before Crookes lived, pure scientists had discovered the place of nitrogen in the scheme of life. And, strangely enough, they had found that there was more nitrogen on earth then any other element. The air we breathe is 80 per cent nitrogen, and thus in the air column over each acre of land on earth there are approximately 70,000,000 pounds of nitrogen. But before the soil, or man, or animals can use this air-nitrogen, it must be extracted and made into a different kind of chemical called "fixed" nitrogen.

JOB FOR AMERICA

The chemists found that a bolt of lighting converted the air nitrogen into "fixed" nitrogen, and rain brought it down into the ground, and it renewed the soil's productivity. This occurrence was not widespread enough to be of any consequence, but it gave them a clue. The job was far too big, for test tube chemistry. In time small chemical plants of Europe developed a cumbersome process for "fixing" air nitrogen so that it could be put into the soil and used by the plants.

It is doubtful that the European production ever would have been of any substantial commercial value. It took the genius of American industry to get the big job done. In 1924 some bigger chemical industries began experimenting with "fixing" nitrogen. DuPont and others acquired European formulae and then plowed vast resources in men and money into developing mass production of "synthetic" nitrogen fertilizer. By 1940 the fertilizer business had been revolutionized, and Sir William Crookes' spectre of a starving civilization was erased.

REPLENISHING THE EARTH

One of the big new nitrogen plants was built at El Dorado, Arkansas, by Lion Oil Company. It reaches up into the atmosphere and pulls in the air we breathe; it reaches down into the South Arkansas earthen reservoirs and pulls in petroleum gas. Then, this monstrous and intricate plant, covering 600 acres, pressurizes, mixes, and heats the gases, and out of it comes vast quantities of "fixed" nitrogen for converting into fertilizer. Lion is building a second big plant. Other big plants are going up throughout the South throughout America.

American farmers meantime have learned how to use the life-giving, stimulating nitrogen in every agricultural production job. It is performing amazing feats in increased production of crops and livestock. Man gets his nitrogen from the meat, vegetables and grains he eats, and it keeps him alive. Thus, American industry, with its freedom to grow, with its powerful incentive inherent in our competitive, profit system, and with its great capacity for research, is helping mankind to be "fruitful and multiply, and replenish the earth, and subdue it."

THE instant you see these 1954 Buicks, you'll know that something sensational has happened in automobile styling.

Here is vastly more than the usual model changeover. Here is vastly more than could be done just by warming over what Buick had before. Here is something accomplished by going far beyond artful face-lifting.

Here is that rarity of rarities—a completely new line of automobiles.

But Buick didn't stop with the bolder, fresher, swifter-lined beauty you see in raised and lengthened fender sweep—in the huge and back-swept expanse of windshield—in the lowered roofline—in the host more glamor features of exterior modernity.

They upped all horsepowers to the highest in Buick history.

They engineered a new V8 for the SPECIAL—and in the process came up with new Power-Head Pistons that boost gasoline mileage in every engine.

BUICK

They brought to market a sparkling newcomer with a famous name, the Buick CENTURY—a car with phenomenal horsepower for its weight and price—a car with more pure thrill per dollar than any Buick ever built.

And they did all this without change of the price structure which, for years, has made Buick the most popular car at its price in the world.

We invite you to come in and inspect these great beauties, these great performers, these great buys. Then you'll see why the Detroit previewers are already saying, "Buick's the beautiful buy!"

Collingsworth Motor Co. Displays New 1954 Ford Lines in Show Rooms Now

The 1954 Ford's greatly improv ed, new "fine car" ride is the result of the new ball-joint front suspension—the greatest advance in chassis design in 20 years—combined with the new frame, shock absorbers, rear springs, engine mounts and a new front stablizer.

"Only Ford in the high volume field has this modern ball-joint suspension which provides a better ride, makes steering easier, reduces road noise and retains the "new car" feel longer than the old-fashioned king-pin type of front suspension," L. W. Smead, general sales manager of Ford Division, explained.

Benefits of the new-joint suspension, listed by Ford engineers, include:

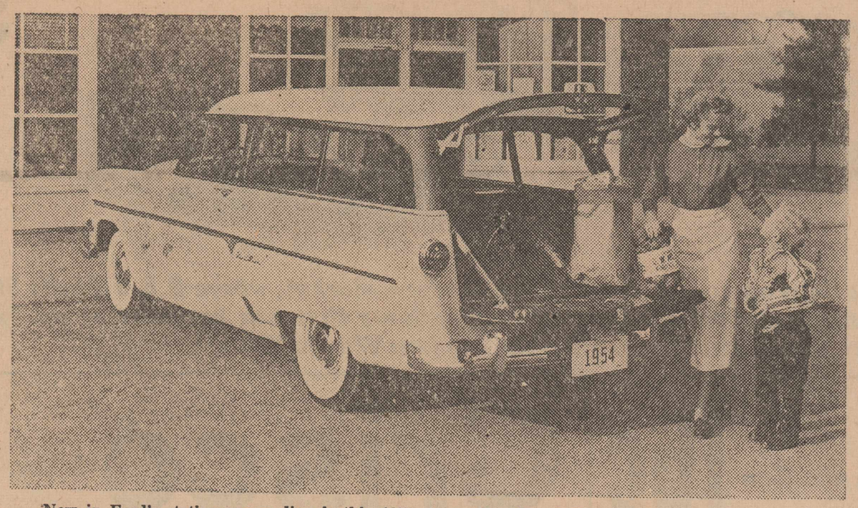
Smoother, quieter running on rough roads with less road shock because the front wheels travel up and down farther on free-action ball bearing joints. Greater directional stability with the spring-loaded ball joints reducing wear and maintaining uniform steering control.

Lower maintenance costs resulting from the wheels staying in alignment, with less tire wear and only 4 lubrication points instead of 16.

Working with the ball-joint suspension to make steering easier at all speeds and with greater stability and improved over-all handling is a new steering system employing a new symmetrical linkage. This combines with the all anti-friction-bearing type steering gear assembly and gives a lower over-all steerin ratio of 25.3 to 1.

Mr. Smead said the new glinn-type stabilizer is a three-piece desin which reduces car tilt on turns and helps keep the car on an even keel on all roads.



New in Ford's station wagon line is this 1954 Customline Ranch Wagon with all-steel body and two doors. It will carry six in passenger car comfort or, with stowaway seat easily folded into the floor, it has almost 30 square feet of usable load space. Customline Ranch Wagons offer choice of 10 single or 3 two-tone body colors and 3 smart woven plastic upholsteries which harmonize with body colors. Overhead insulation deadens sound and heavy ribbed linoleum covers load space. Available either with new 130-h.p. Y-block V-8 engine or new 115-h.p. I-block Six.

Ford engineers point out that there has been no basic change in the king-pin suspension design for the past 20 years and it still is used in most cars today. In the 1954 Ford, this old type of suspension has been replaced with a simple, ball-joint sustem. The ball-joints at each end of a one-piece spindle-support arm are attached to an upper and lower control arm. The distance between ball-joints is greater than the distance between king-pin bearings in the older-type suspensions and the result is reduced bearing loads and decreased friction making steering easier.

The ball-joints have specially shaped seats so they can't bind and are completely sealed so water and dirt cannot get in. Spring-loaded, they compensate automatically for any wear and give the right amount of friction to make handling easier.

Large rubber bushings in the upper and lower control arm bearings eliminate wear and help insulate the car frame from road shock. The front wheels can be accurately aligned by the use of shims at the mounting bolts of the upper control arms—a much simpler method than in older suspensions.

Another feature of the ball-joint suspension is that longer life is assured by the elimination of 12 wearing points—six on each side of the suspension—and the elimination of 12 lubrication fittings in the ball-joint suspension system, reducing the number of fittings from 16 to only 4 points.

Other factors contributing to the 1954 Ford's greatly improved ride includes:

New shock absorbers, both front and rear, which give more complete control, especially on rough roads.

New 5-leaf rear springs have inserts between the tips of all leaves to control friction fro smooth, uniform riding quality on smooth to control friction from smooth, uniform riding quality on smooth ings at the shackles and brackets eliminate the need for any lubrication at the rear suspension.

New engine mounts which include an unusual "steady rest" through which the engine is attached to the front cross-member in a rubber mounting. This contributes to a smoother ride with reduced engine vibration.

News Letter

From Congressman WALTER ROGERS

SHADES OF O'DANIEL

When W. Lee O'Daniel made his first successful bid in politics and was elected Governor of Texas, his name was associated in many quarters with old age pensions. In fact, O'Daniel and old age pensions became syninymous. It, no doubt, had much to do with his subsepuent election to the United States Senate. Much water has gone under the bridge on the old age pension issue since that time, and some rather queer reversals have occurred. It was generally reported that O'Daniel advocated and supported a program to pay all persons over age sixty-five a pension. There was much criticism of this proposal on a state and national basis. A substantial amount of the opposition came from sources that were self-advertised as being ultra-conservative. These sources, in many instances, condemned any payment to an aged person on the ground that it would destroy individual initiative and incentive. Many of these same sources fought the Social Security Act that was passed August 14, 1935. These same forces have now completely reversed themselves. They have divided into two factions, both supporting a program that will enable the aged to receive benefits. One faction wants to expand the social security program, that they fought, so that it will include every preson in the United States of America. The other faction wants to follow what could be termed the original O'Daniel plan and pay everyone over sixty-five a definite amount. The second faction also advocates the use of the social security funds for meeting the costs of their proposals. All of this will, no doubt, come out into the open in the early days of the coming session of Congress. It does not presently appear that the "pension for all" plan will meet with success. Management and labor will join hands through their associations and unions in opposing the "pension for all" plan. These same organizations will join hands in support of the program to expand the social security program to eventually include every person in the United States.

CIVIL SERVICE AND VETERANS PREFERENCE

There has been quite a battle going on in recent months between the Civil Service Commission and several of the departments. The issue boils down to the right of the department heads to discharge employees having civil service status and veterans preference status. The most recent development has been in the Justice Department. A thirty-one year old attorney named John R. Whitsell was fired by the Justice Department. He appealed to the Civil Service Commission, and that Commission ruled such discharge was a violation of the Veterans Preference Act. The Justice Department refused to reinstate the young attorney. Whitsell immediately obtained counsel and commenced court action to force the Attorney General to rein state him. The papers here report that he was backed in the action by the Veterans of Foreign Wars. The veterans organizations, no doubt, desire a court test of the Veterans Preference Act in view of the recent decision by Judge Keech of the District of Columbia that shook the Civil Service Act to its very roots. Before the court had an opportunity to act on the Whitsell action, the Justice Department announced that Whitsell was being reinstated to his former position on a suspended status. This action will entitle him to back pay to June 1, the date of his original discharge from the department. It is reported that the Justice Department is now preparing new and amended charges as grounds for his dismissal. No doubt, one or several of the veterans organizations will pursue the matter until it is finally settled by the courts. This certainly should be done, because the rights of many veterans are affected by the actions of the Justice Department in recent months in discharging veterans. These veterans are entitled to know what their rights are under the Veterans Preference Act and to have these established by proper court findings. Whatever rights they have under this Act should be honored and recognized and should not be subject to change without notice at the whim of some bureaucrat.

THE UNEMPLOYMENT DEFENSE CONTRACT DIRECTIVE

The recent directive of the President to channel defense contracts into areas where unemployment is beginning to show its ugly head appears very good on the surface. However, this will meet with much oppostion in Congress, just as these proposals have in the past. This action simply means that a great defense contracts that would be let in the Southland and in the West will go into the factory and industrial areas of the Middle West and the New England States. This, of course, would curtail the industrial growth and development of many sections of the South and the West. The industrial areas of the Middle West and the East have long looked with alarm at the continuing and increasing trend of manufacturers to the South and West. These older industrial sections joined forces in past sessions of Congress to defeat attempts to require government supported industries in the defense field to be dispersed throughout the nation rather than concentrated in the East and Middle West.

Veterans Information

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Q—Is there any deadline for starting under the Korean GI Bill?

A—Yes. Veterans who left service before August 20, 1952, must strat before August 20, 1954.. Veterans separated after August 20, 1952 have wto years from their sepration date in which to begin.

Q—I am a disabled veteran, and I recently completed Public Law 16 training and was declared rehabilitated. But now I find I'm not able to work at the job I trained for, since my disability has become worse. Would it be possible for me to get additional training under the law?

A—Yes, it is possible for you to re-enter training, so long as your need for vocational rehabilitation is reestablished.

Q—May I get a GI loan to buy an apartment building, if I intend to live in one of the apartments?

A—Yes, so long as the total number of separate units is not more than four, if you're buying the partment yourself. If more than one veteran buys, one additional unit may be added to the basic four for each veteran participating.

Q—I applied for disability compensation from VA, and I feel that the VA's rating should be higher than it is. Can I appeal?

A—Yes, you may appeal within one year form the date an official determination was made in your case.

Q—I'm planning to borrow on my permanent GI insurance policy, and I'd like to know how I'm supposed to pay the money back.

A—Your loan may be repaid at any time, in full or partially, in amounts that are multiples of $5. Interest is payable annaully on the anniversary date of the loan.

Q—I am a World War II veteran and I'm planning to go back on active duty. I'm going to ask VA to waive the premiums on my GI term insurance policy while I'm in uniform. My policy has a disability income provision, for which I pay a little extra. Will payments on that provision be waived also, along with my regular premiums?

A—No. If you want to continue this disability protection while in service, you must continue to pay the required extra amount. Waiver of premiums, authorized by law, do not apply to these extra payments.

Q—I plan to get a GI farm loan. How can I wind out who would make such a loan in my community

A—Iniformation as to who makes farm loans under the GI Bill usually may be obtained from your County Agricultural Extension Agent. Or you might check with your bank or other lending in stitutions in the area.

Q—I'm figuring out my yearly income for purposes of the VA pension that I receive because of my total disability. I do light work on a farm and I receive my salary in kind, and not in cash. Is that considered as income?

A—Yes. The value of salary received in kind, including a fair value for maintenance, is considered as income for VA pension purpose.
