Settlement approved in tobacco trial

■ $15.32 billion marks largest settlement in the history of U.S. litigation.

By Katie Fairbank
Associated Press

AUSTIN, Texas — Texas will get $15.32 billion from the tobacco industry to settle its lawsuit over smoking-related health care costs, with most of this year's money going toward children, it was announced Friday.

The largest settlement in the history of U.S. litigation more than doubles the amount Big Tobacco has paid to settle two other state cases. Florida and Mississippi received a combined $14.4 billion last year.

"Our lawsuit asserts that the history of this industry has been rooted in a concerted, decades-long conspiracy to conceal the truth about tobacco," Texas Attorney General Dan Morales said.

"As a direct result, millions of Americans — fathers, sons, daughters, mothers — have died horrible, preventable, premature deaths. This must stop," he said. "Nothing less than the promise and the potential of America hangs in the balance."

Texas will receive $725 million upfront and more than $1.2 billion this year. The 1998 money will go toward a variety of health care services for all Texans, children's health care, anti-smoking education and enforcement.

Over the next 24 years, the state will receive the remaining $14 billion million, which the Legislature will decide how to spend.

Another key provision of the settlement requires the tobacco industry to remove all billboards in Texas, including those in sports stadiums, within four months. They also must remove all advertising from buses, taxis, airports and trains.

One issue apparently still to be resolved is how much money will go to the five private lawyers who worked with the state. On Friday, the state filed four motions asking Folsom to arbitrate the attorney fees. They would've received 15 percent of a jury award; if they get the same chunk of this deal, that would be

A sports utility vehicle knocked down a telephone pole, rammed through a brick wall and into an apartment at Sutton Place Townhomes about 5:15 p.m. Friday. The driver, David Leeper, 47, was taken to Memorial Hospital and Medical Center. The owner of the townhome was not injured, even though she was home at the time.

Vehicle crashes into townhouse living room

A homeowner was not injured Friday evening when a vehicle crashed through the living room of her west Midland townhouse.

David Leeper, 47, was the driver of a sports utility vehicle involved in the accident, which took place at the 700 block of Liddon Avenue. His injuries were minor, but he was taken to Memorial Hospital and Medical Center, officers said.

A citation will not be issued until police receive blood analysis results, MPD Public Information Officer Tina Sanders-Jauz said. She added that police suspect the man had some alcohol in his system at the time. It could be a few days before the results arrive.

Officer Patrick Mayers quoted witnesses as saying that Leeper seemed to lose control of his vehicle while driving on the southbound lane of Liddon Avenue. Leeper's vehicle crashed into a 50-foot utility pole, which missed plots at the Fairview Cemetery by just a few feet.

With the force of impact, the vehicle ricocheted into a three-foot brick fence before crashing through the sliding door of a living room at the Sutton Place Townhomes, Mayers explained.

Mayers said that the surrounding area had a temporary power outage because the pole was smashed. The power outage even affected traffic lights at the intersection at Wadley Avenue and A Street, he said.

"We had to send officers out there for traffic control," Mayers said. TU Electric was on their way soon after the crash, he said.

Meanwhile, the owner of the damaged townhome, Imogene Davis, explained that she was on the phone in her bedroom when she saw the utility pole tipping over.

"I felt confused ... until I heard the crash. It sounded like a tornado came through my home, or what I imagine it would feel like," she said, watching officers comb through rubble and inspect Leeper's vehicle.

One witness broke out into tears after learning that Ms. Davis, a senior citizen, did not even have a scratch from the accident.

Man charged with reckless injury to child

■ Arrest warrant was executed Friday on Eric Lee Miller, accused of injuries to his twin children.

By Rick Lopez
Staff Writer

Midland County sheriff's deputies executed an arrest warrant on a Midland resident accused of inflicting serious injury on his twin infant children.

Eric Lee Miller, 26, was charged Friday with reckless injury to a child, a third-degree felony. His bond for that charge was set at $50,000 by Justice of the Peace David Cobos.

Miller

Sgt. Terry Cowin, a juveniles crimes deputy with the Midland County Sheriff's Office, said that Miller was served with the warrant while he was in custody at the Midland County Detention Center in connection with another felony charge of injury to a child. His total bond is now $100,000.

Both child abuse charges stem from injuries that Miller's twin children sustained in an incident that allegedly occurred between the time of the children's birth on Dec. 3 and Jan. 1.

MCSO authorities were notified of the children's suspicious injuries when they were taken to Medical Center Hospital in Odessa. The report was made by an off-duty Odessa Police Department officer working security at the hospital.

Both children were said to have sustained leg fractures and massive head injuries. The boy sustained a fractured skull, but was in stable condition before he was released from the hospital.

Deputies went to Miller's home at 14016 W. County Road 124 on Jan. 6 and arrested him for the boy's assault.

Meanwhile, the suspect's daughter was in critical condition before her release. She suffered a severe brain

Undercover operation leads to three arrests, marijuana seizure

By Rick Lopez
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Three people were arrested Thursday afternoon for reportedly selling 100 pounds of marijuana to undercover agents with the Permian Basin Drug Task Force, officials said Friday.

Thirty-five-year-old Elida Ramirez of Odessa, Margie Rodriguez, 19, of Sterling City and Ramon Gonzalez, 23, of Garden City were each charged with one felony count of possession of marijuana and one felony count of delivery of marijuana.

They were taken to Ector County Detention Center, where a $20,000 bond was set for each suspect. Jail officials said the suspects remained there as of Friday afternoon.

Task force Commander Tom Finley explained that the charges stem from an undercover deal that agents made with the suspects at a parking lot located one block east of Permian High School on 42nd Street.

Finley said the narcotics stash has an estimated street value of $120,000. Agents working the case were involved in a three-week surveillance before the sting operation. The investigation, Finley noted, was prompted by information the task force received.

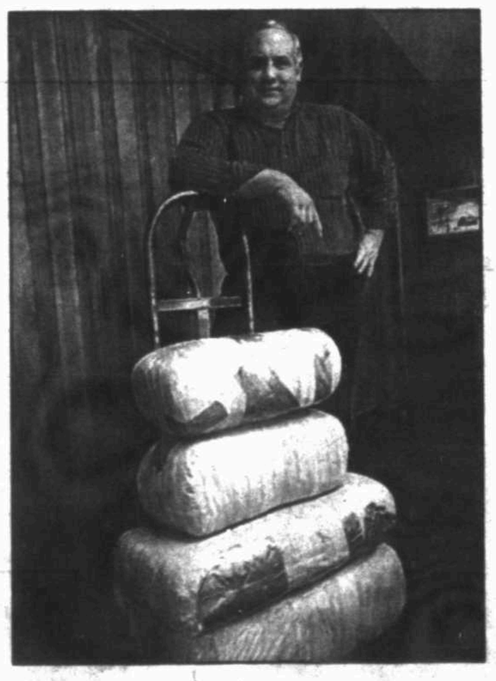

Morales and Ms. Rodriguez told authorities that they are boyfriend and girlfriend. Ms. Ramirez is not related to the suspects, Finley said.

"We've had several other drug busts this week," Finley said.

He noted that two other drug possession arrests were made Tuesday and Thursday in the basin. The three drug busts were unrelated.

On Thursday, police arrested 24-year-old Andrews Rogelio Salcido four miles north of Mar-

SETTLEMENT: 37 states have lawsuits pending

(From 1A)

nearly $2.3 billion, or $460 million each.

"That's a lot of money for a settled case," said Gov. George W. Bush.

The deal was reached Thursday, but required more than six hours of work before U.S. District Judge David Folsom in Texarkana until the documents became letter-perfect.

A spokeswoman in Folsom's office said the judge is not expected to sign the papers until Tuesday. The holdup is so he can consider the state's motions on attorney fees.

The millions of litigation documents in Texarkana will be delivered to a national depository if Congress approved a proposed "global" settlement by the end of this year. If not, they will be returned to the state.

A state source who requested anonymity told The Associated Press the papers will become public documents unless the tobacco industry can prove the papers contain trade secrets.

Such a move could have dramatic impact on the 37 other state lawsuits pending against Big Tobacco. A trial is to start Tuesday in Minnesota, where the state and Blue Cross Blue Shield of Minnesota are seeking unspecified punitive damages on top of actual damages estimated at $1.75 billion.

White House spokesman Mike McCurry called the Texas settlement "another indicator that tobacco companies will be held accountable and another reason why there should be federal legislation to pursue these issues on behalf of all Americans." He said tobacco companies are "clearly on the run and they're on the run for good reason."

Folsom did all he could to keep both sides at the bargaining table and out of court. He delayed jury selection six times before finally scrapping after a deal was struck Thursday.

In March 1996, Texas filed a lawsuit against eight tobacco companies and three trade groups for reimbursement of about $8.6 billion in Medicaid funds spent on Texans' smoking-related illnesses dating to 1968. With damages, the lawsuit grew to more than $14 billion.

The lawsuit included federal racketeering charges alleging the industry lied to federal officials, committed fraud, illegally marketed its products to children and conspired to deceive the public about the dangers and addictive nature of cigarettes.

The industry countered that it did nothing wrong by selling a product that not only was legal in Texas, but also provided plenty of taxes for the state.

Texas would've received about $13 billion under the proposed national settlement negotiated with a coalition of states last June. That settlement foundered in Washington last year and is awaiting congressional debate.

The national pact would eliminate most pending class-action lawsuits against Big Tobacco and give the industry some protection from future lawsuits in exchange for the cash and new restrictions on nicotine and cigarette marketing.

Defendants in the Texas lawsuit were the American Tobacco Co. Inc.; R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co.; Brown & Williamson Tobacco Corp.; B.A.T. Industries; Philip Morris Inc.; Liggett Group Inc.; Lorillard Tobacco Co. Inc.; United States Tobacco Co.; Hill & Knowlton Inc.; the Council for Tobacco Research-USA; and the Tobacco Institute Inc.

fa after finding 180 pounds of marijuana inside his vehicle. The cache found there has a street value of $250,000, Finley said. Salcido was taken to the Presidio County Jail. Officials said he had been released by Friday.

The bust on Tuesday occurred after agents approached a motorist parked on a roadside in Presidio. The man told authorities that his vehicle had a broken fuel pump. K-9 handlers with the task force were called to the scene and found 64 pounds of marijuana inside the vehicle. The seizure in this case has an estimated value of $42,000, Finley said.

Task force agents arrested Juan Carlos Vega, 31, of Mexico. He was taken to the Presidio County Jail.

CRASH: Impact strong enough to deploy air bags

(From 1A)

Donna Nash, who owns a townhouse right upstairs from Ms. Davis, said she had not seen an incident of this kind in the 30 years she has lived there.

"This is the most excitement we've had here in a while," she said. She noted that her television went off before she heard the vehicle slam into the building.

"I was shocked. I looked out and saw half of the truck inside of the room," Ms. Nash said. "From up here, all I could see was the end of it."

The impact was strong enough to deploy both of the vehicle's air bags.

One of the eyewitnesses, Tina Ortiz, was driving on the opposite lane and saw the whole accident from less than a block away. After crashing into the pole, Leeper's vehicle seemed to be going toward her car, in which her two sons were riding. The sports utility vehicle missed Ms. Ortiz's car.

"It is his birthday today," she said of her infant son. "We feel lucky that we stopped far enough from (Leeper's vehicle)."

The driver did not slow down after plowing into the pole, Ms. Ortiz said. "He just kept going."

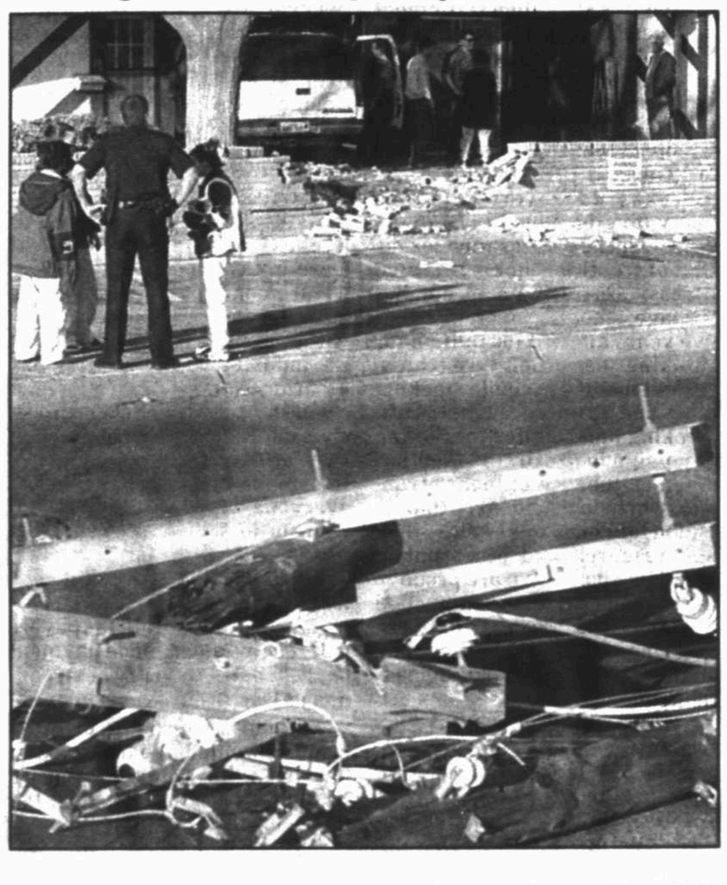

Her older son, Nicholas, went to check on the driver.

"He seemed sleepy. He just kept saying, 'I'm all right. I'm all right,'" the teen said.

Three San Jacinto Junior High School students walking home said they saw Leeper allegedly hit a curb with his vehicle less than a minute before the accident.

"We were less than a block away from the townhomes. The guy hit the curb and we all jumped back," said 14 ear-old Shavonda Posey. "We saw him turn around the block and then heard him crash into the pole. Then we just saw the pole fall."

Ms. Davis, who was waiting for family members to help her, said that her son bought the home for her and her late husband several years ago.

A sports utility vehicle knocked down a telephone pole, rammed through a brick wall and into an apartment at Sutton Place Townhomes about 5:15 p.m. Friday. The driver, David Leeper, 47, was taken to Memorial Hospital and Medical Center.

Man arrested in lab bust to remain in jail

By Rick Lopez
Staff Writer

'That is like running a bakery, but not having any flour. You found everything needed to make methamphetamine except for ephedrine.'
— Bob Leahey, defense attorney

A man arrested in a methamphetamine lab bust Monday will stay in the Midland County jail for at least five more days before officials decide if he will be released or kept there until his trial date.

Doggett

After hearing more than three hours of testimony from state and defense witnesses, U.S. Federal Magistrate L. Stuart Platt announced at a detention hearing Friday that he will have to take several issues into consideration before making his decision.

"Quite frankly, I don't know what I am going to do," he told the defendant's friends and family. "I'll have to go through my notes." He then announced that his decision will be announced 10 a.m. Wednesday.

During the proceeding, Platt said there was enough probable cause for Drug Enforcement Administration agents to arrest defendant Rodney Sloan Doggett, 31, on charges of manufacturing methamphetamine. The charges stem from a clandestine lab authorities found at his residence Monday night.

Prosecutor Mark Roomberg called DEA Special Agent Dennis Lindsey to testify whether the defendant would pose a risk to the community if he is released.

Lindsey said that Doggett and his family were in the process of moving to North Carolina when authorities discovered the lab, which Lindsey said was capable of "cooking" up to a pound of the substance in a week.

He noted that one kilogram of lab waste found at the scene tested positive for methamphetamine content. About 10 to 15 grams of the drug in its finished form was seized from the house, located one block east of Loop 250 at 5202 Storey Ave.

Authorities said that 1/2 gram of methamphetamine, which is about the same size as a packet of sweetener, sells for about $20.

Lindsey also said that lab equipment and about 30 to 50 dirty syringes were scattered throughout the home. Doggett on Monday had confessed to the agent that he used meth everyday and showed him fresh needle tracks.

The defendant, "has been involved in drug use for a long time," Lindsey said. "I can see potential problems if he is released."

During the proceeding, Roomberg noted that Doggett was once employed by Core Labs in Midland and was once subject of a 1986 investigation involving the suicide of a 16-year-old girl, who stated in her death letter that she was a meth addict. Roomberg said police identified the defendant as a possible meth dealer.

During cross-examination, defense attorney Bob Leahey quoted the agent as saying that ephedrine is crucial to the meth production process.

The agent testified that all other chemicals except for ephedrine were found at the scene.

"That is like running a bakery, but not having any flour," Leahey said. "You found everything needed to make methamphetamine except for ephedrine."

Leahey said in his statement that the man who told police about the lab should be a suspect in the case.

Leahey alleged that the informant was upset with Doggett because of an argument between their two children. The informant allegedly planted the evidence at his home. He noted that the informant also had access to lab equipment when working for Intertech Chemistry and his own lab, TNT Testing.

"During the trial, I will prove that (the informant) is behind this," Leahey said.

Leahey also called the defendant's stepdaughter, 18-year-old Jennifer Smith Greer, to take the stand. She testified that some of the syringes once contained Vitamin B-12 fluid, which her grandmother and mother used.

Both the teen-ager and another defense witness, Sandra Tippett, said they had never seen any of the objects police seized from the Doggett house during the bust, including a 30-gallon drum. They claimed to have been in the garage often but never saw the lab equipment. The teen said she had seen some of the welding equipment her stepfather uses for ladder repairs.

Doggett will remain in the Midland County Detention Center without bond until Wednesday.

CHARGE: Injuries to girl may prove permanent injury and bruised and cracked ribs.

(From 1A)

Detectives took a wait-and-see approach to determine what criminal charges the father would face. At one point — when the girl's life was sustained by a respirator — deputies were considering charging the man with capital murder in the event she did not survive.

However, her recovery has ruled out that possibility. As a result, the reckless injury charge was filed after the girl was released from the hospital.

Cowin said Friday that it is unknown how the child actually sustained the injuries, though they do have several possibilities in mind.

"Right now, we're attributing the injuries to reckless conduct," he said. "That could have been the cause for both cases."

Cowin quoted the hospital's staff as saying that the girl's injuries seem to be permanent. Because of the damage, the girl might grow up with some level of retardation. She might also develop conditions leading to epilepsy or brain seizures. At this time, it is not known how much of an impact the injuries will have on her health.

Cowin mentioned that Child Protective Service has given the infants' maternal grandmother temporary custody. It was said that the twins' mother might challenge the decision and seek custody. She still does not face any criminal charges, Cowin said.

The case was turned over to the District Attorney's Office Friday. Though the investigation will change hands, the Sheriff's Office will still continue to probe the incident.

"They'll be taking it from there," Cowin said. "We're still working on the case. The investigation's on-going."

Washington pols praise Texas tobacco settlement; others more guarded

By Michelle Mittelstadt
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Some politicians applauded Texas' settlement of its lawsuit against Big Tobacco for $15.32 billion, but others predicted the record agreement Friday would further complicate congressional passage of a national pact.

"What's good for one state financially is by no means the model for Congress to follow in protecting the public health," said Sen. Frank Lautenberg, D-N.J., a leading critic of the tobacco industry. "With every settlement like this, the secret documents and information that Congress needs do not come to light."

Others viewed the Texas pact in more beneficial terms.

"We've come a long way since the heads of the tobacco companies told me in a (1994) hearing that nicotine isn't addictive," said Sen. Ron Wyden, D-Ore. "Today's settlement brings us one page closer to closing the book on marketing cigarettes to children."

White House spokesman Mike McCurry said the Texas settlement provided "another indicator that tobacco companies will be held accountable and another reason why there should be federal legislation to pursue these issues on behalf of all Americans." Tobacco companies are "clearly on the run and they're on the run for good reason," he added.

The proposed national settlement, which was negotiated by the industry and a coalition of states last year, foundered in Congress in 1997 and awaits further debate.

The proposed deal calls for the industry to pay $368.5 billion over 25 years and comply with new nicotine and marketing restrictions. In return, the industry would be shielded from most pending class-action lawsuits and would earn some protection from future lawsuits.

'This settlement will allow us to expand anti-smoking education efforts among children, which is crucial.'

— Rep. Nick Lampson, a Beaumont Democrat who serves on the House Task Force on Tobacco and Health

The industry absorbed its latest public relations blow this week with the release of secret documents that show R.J. Reynolds in the 1970s developed a direct advertising appeal targeted at smokers as young as 13.

Citing those revelations, President Clinton said it is "absolutely imperative" for Congress to swiftly enact legislation for a national tobacco settlement.

While many involved in the national debate in Congress weren't rushing to comment about the Texas developments, others praised Attorney General Dan Morales for securing the deal.

Texas now becomes the third state, after Mississippi and Florida, to obtain reimbursements for smokers' health care expenses borne by the state. Another 37 states have lawsuits pending against the industry.

Matthew Myers, executive vice president of the Washington-based Campaign for Tobacco-Free Kids, termed the settlement a "good deal for the citizens of Texas."

"It ensures that Texas will receive payment for the significant expenses it has incurred in connection with tobacco-caused disease," Myers said.

Rep. Nick Lampson, a Beaumont Democrat who serves on the House Task Force on Tobacco and Health, said the deal "should serve as a reminder of the hazards of tobacco products."

"This settlement will allow us to expand anti-smoking education efforts among children, which is crucial," Lampson said. Citing Campaign for Tobacco-Free Kids statistics, he added: "We know that teen-agers who smoke cigarettes are 22 times more likely to use cocaine than their non-smoking peers."

Even as Texas forged ahead, the prospects for a national pact remain clouded by wrangling on and off Capitol Hill.

The White House and Senate Majority Leader Trent Lott have been sniping at each other about their leadership on the issue. Lott accused Clinton of undermining prospects for passage of settlement legislation, saying the president had shown "no leadership" and had complicated the matter by earmarking revenue from the as-yet unratified settlement.

In his upcoming budget, Clinton is expected to propose using settlement revenue to help pay for some of his pet programs, including increased biomedical research and child care assistance.

That could place him directly at odds with Sen. Phil Gramm — a not uncommon development for the two men.

The Texas Republican, who chairs the Senate Finance health care subcommittee, has vowed to ensure that every penny of the national settlement going to the federal government be earmarked for Medicare.

Attorney lauds Texas tobacco settlement as victory for taxpayers

TEXARKANA (AP) — Joseph Rice, partner with the law firm of Ness, Motley, Loadholt, Richardson & Poole, counsel to Texas and more than 30 other states suing the tobacco industry, today issued the following statement in response to that Texas' settlement of its tobacco lawsuit:

"Today's $15 billion settlement between the state of Texas and the tobacco industry — the largest civil settlement of any kind in history — is a great victory for Texas taxpayers and a tribute to the leadership of Attorney General Dan Morales.

"Texas taxpayers will see many tangible benefits from the settlement: compensation for the cost of treating smoking-related illness; $264 million to combat teenage smoking over the next two years alone; $100 million for smoking cessation programs, enforcement of juvenile smoking laws, and an unprecedented anti-smoking and counter-marketing campaign in the first 12 months; a ban on tobacco billboard transit advertising; and more than $1 billion for children's health, medical research and other public health purposes. We are proud to have played a role, in conjunction with the entire Texas trial team, in bringing this litigation and achieving this outstanding settlement.

"At the same time, the Texas settlement makes clear why we need national tobacco legislation — because only a comprehensive approach built on the June 20, 1997 agreement between the attorneys general and the tobacco industry can save children's lives and protect the public health on a scale commensurate with the devastation this product wreaks.

"We understand that the issue of attorneys' fees will receive much attention, but are confident it stands up to any and all scrutiny. We have agreed to have this matter determined by an independent arbitration panel, with payments under this system to be made by the tobacco companies over and above the settlement amount. At the same time, the contract between the trial team and the state of Texas is a valid contract that calls for a contingency fee far below the normal market rate. While this serves as a backstop in case problems arise in the arbitration process, we are confident that these will not transpire and that arbitration will take place as intended, and the industry will ultimately pay all attorneys' fees.

"In short, Texans receive massive, unprecedented benefits that they are rightfully owed. When the smoke clears, I believe that everyone who looks carefully at this settlement will agree that this is a good deal for Texas taxpayers and children any way you look at it.

"Moreover, Texas taxpayers will receive an advance payment by the tobacco industry of $1.2 billion in 1998. The Texas trial team — without whom none of these benefits would have been won — has been financing the entire legal effort in Texas against the tobacco industry for more than two years and has yet to see a penny in compensation. Because the arbitration process determining our total fees will not take place until the end of this year at the earliest, it is only fair and reasonable that the attorneys who have labored for this victory receive an initial payment to cover costs and expenses. The amount of our advance on the fee payment as part of the settlement is a fair, reasonable and appropriate amount."

Settlement is Dan Morales' biggest win

AUSTIN (AP) — The biggest settlement in the legal assault on Big Tobacco was led Friday by a youngish politician who's leaving public office at the top of his game.

Seven weeks ago, Attorney General Dan Morales called it quits. He said he will retire from politics when his term is up at the end of this year.

"Nothing about Dan Morales really surprises me," said George Shipley, an Austin political consultant who's known Morales since he came to the Legislature in 1985.

"Dan never saw himself as a lifetime political player. He's not someone who's got long-term secret plans," Shipley said.

In announcing his retirement, the 41-year-old, two-term attorney general said he wanted to focus his immediate future on his new wife and her two children. That December announcement came despite a high approval rating, name recognition and his professed confidence that he could win a third term.

It halted a stunning career that saw Morales rise from an assistant prosecutor in Bexar County to the Texas House to the office that made him the state's highest-ranking elected Hispanic.

Morales said an advantage to his departure was that the tobacco industry could no longer characterize the state's $14 billion lawsuit as a bid by Morales to gain political clout.

"This takes politics out and forces the industry and the public and others involved to focus on the merits," Morales said then.

While many in Texas political circles were stunned, they shouldn't have been, says a former Morales aide.

"Dan Morales is certainly an enigma. He knows that he confounds journalists and other officeholders. I suspect he gets a certain glee out of that," says Gray McBride.

"Dan never seemed obsessed with playing the game by the rules, the rules which usually guarantee self-perpetuation in politics," McBride said.

Two killed in collision with police patrol car in San Antonio

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — An elderly woman and her son have died from injuries suffered when their car was struck broadside by a police patrol car responding to a call.

Although they did not characterize the officer as being in "pursuit," police officials said when the accident occurred Thursday night officer Jeffrey Bates was en route to help apprehend a fleeing suspect who possibly was armed with a gun.

Bates' patrol car slammed into a Cadillac that had stopped at a stop sign then attempted to cross an intersection, witnesses told police.

Sarah Feigenbaum, 77, died immediately. Her son, 54-year-old Larry Feigenbaum, the driver of the Cadillac, died later at University Hospital.

"It was an unfortunate tragedy," said Deputy Chief Richard Gleinser, commander of the department's patrol division. "It concerns us and deeply saddens us very much that two people lost their lives. I hope their families find the strength and prayers to get through this."

Bates, 33, also was taken to University Hospital and treated for injuries to his head and leg. He was released Friday and had not been interviewed by police investigators by Friday afternoon.

"He is very depressed over this," Gleinser said. "This is not easy for anybody, especially police officers, to take."

Bates' patrol car had its emergency lights flashing but apparently was not using its siren and possibly was traveling over the 30 mph speed limit, Gleinser said.

If the police car was traveling over the speed limit without its siren on, Bates would be in violation of department policy for the type call he was responding to, Gleinser said.

American-led inspection team leaves Baghdad, vowing to return

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) — American Scott Ritter will keep working as a U.N. inspector in Iraq — even though he left the country Friday after his team was barred from searching for evidence of biological weapons tests.

Charles Duelfer, deputy chief of the inspection program, said the departure was not a surrender to Iraqi pressure, adding that Ritter was scheduled to leave Saturday in any case.

In its latest round of complaints about U.N. inspectors, Iraq did not specifically mention Ritter. The government has accused him of spying in the past, however.

"What the Iraqis complained about was the composition of that team," Duelfer said in New York. "We fully intend to continue these types of investigations, these types of inspections, and we fully intend to continue using Scott Ritter."

The state-run Iraqi press had alleged that Ritter was a U.S. spy, a charge Ritter and the United Nations have repeatedly denied. Iraq never officially accused him.

There was no immediate Iraqi reaction to Ritter's departure.

Russia's defense minister, meanwhile, has offered to provide the United Nations with surveillance planes to replace the American U-2 spy planes that the Iraqi government objects to.

But U.S. Defense Secretary William Cohen said Friday that any adjustments to the U.N. weapons inspection program in Iraq should not include that plan.

"The U-2 flight is recognized by all concerned as being a very capable aircraft that is providing valuable information and ought to continue," said Cohen, who is visiting Thailand to meet with government officials on other topics

Iraq objects to the U-2s and has threatened to shoot them down.

Duelfer said Friday the inspectors had not yet decided whether to accept the Russian offer, but added that any Russian plane would be in addition to, and not a substitute for, the U-2s.

Iraq began blocking Ritter's team from doing its work Tuesday, saying the group included too many Americans and Britons. Other U.N. teams have continued their tasks.

Ritter and the 15 other members left Friday for Bahrain, where the inspectors have a regional headquarters. U.N. officials said they decided to withdraw the team after it became clear that it could not work.

"We are not being pressured," Duelfer said. "Ritter was scheduled to leave Bahrain on Saturday."

Ritter, who was pursuing suspicions that Iraq tested chemical and biological weapons on prisoners several years ago, said there was no reason to stay when his team was not allowed to work.

"We will be back," he said. "This inspection team had important arms control tasks assigned to it and these are still valid."

The Security Council ordered Iraq to destroy its nuclear, chemical and biological weapons as a condition for ending the 1991 Gulf War. U.N. officials report progress in eliminating the first two, but suspect Iraq is holding back significant information on biological weapons.

Iraq has acknowledged testing chemical and biological weapons on animals before the United Nations ordered those weapons destroyed. But officials deny any experiments were performed on humans.

In Washington, State Department spokesman James P. Rubin said the United States supported the United Nations' decision to withdraw the team and said Iraq acted in clear violation of the Security Council resolutions.

Iraq's U.N. ambassador, Nizar Hamdoon, said Iraq was interested in "businesslike" talks with the United States.

"Developing a dialogue with the United States is the only way these matters could be addressed in a way that could provide them with assurances that the programs of those prohibited items are really over," said Hamdoon, a former Iraqi ambassador to the United States.

Richard Butler, the chief U.N. weapons inspector, left New York for Baghdad on Thursday to demand full access to all sites.

After meeting Friday with French Foreign Minister Hubert Vedrine during a stopover in Paris, Butler said Iraq had made "considerable progress" lately in disarmament and held out hope the sanctions could be lifted.

"It's become very, very clear that progress can be made and that if Iraq will simply see it that way and work with us, there will be no betrayal," Butler said.

"Once this job is done, as is provided for by the resolutions of the (Security) Council, there would be a lifting of the embargo," he added.

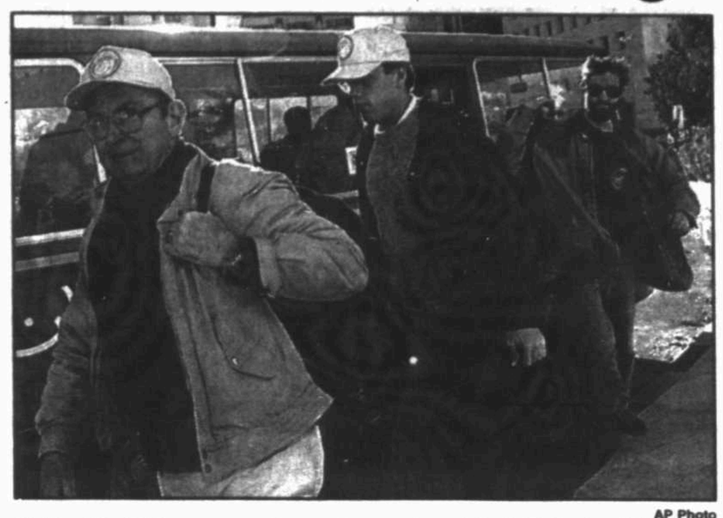

Iraq apparently has been concerned by what it perceives as tough talk from Washington suggesting that sanctions could remain in place even if Iraq complied with the U.N. resolutions on disarmament.

Outside the U.N. Development Program offices in Baghdad, about 45 disabled people took part in a government-organized demonstration against the sanctions.

As part of efforts to widen the role of other nations in the weapons team, Butler also said a senior French diplomat would join his staff.

Meanwhile, Britain announced Friday it was sending the aircraft carrier HMS Invincible and an auxiliary ship to the Gulf to beef up allied forces in the area. The United States already has 300 warplanes in the region.

"I hope it will be seen in Baghdad as a clear sign of our resolve," said British Foreign Secretary Robin Cook. "No option is ruled out."

AP Photo

Unidentified UN weapons inspectors arrive at their Bahrain offices Friday from Iraq. The U.S.-led inspection team left Baghdad Friday with a pledge to return, easing a standoff with Iraqi officials who had refused to let the American-led weapons experts work. U.N. officials said the team planned to leave Iraq Friday anyway and insisted the departure was not a surrender to Iraqi pressure.

Battered Asian markets rebound; Japan seen as key

HONG KONG (AP) — The Asian economic crisis closed a tumultuous week with shaken stock markets rebounding, partly on hopes that Japanese officials are finally getting serious about restarting their stalled economy.

Top officials of the International Monetary Fund and the Clinton administration made the final stops on a confidence-boosting tour designed to shore up support for the tough austerity programs being required of South Korea, Indonesia and Thailand as a condition for receiving $100 billion in bailout support.

The belief is that sticking to the belt-tightening doctrine preached by the IMF will calm nervous investors and encourage them to return to stock and currency markets.

"Confidence is crucial to the restoration of financial stability," U.S. Deputy Treasury Secretary Lawrence Summers said in South Korea, his last stop on a six-nation tour.

Treasury Secretary Robert Rubin was optimistic that the measures taken by the IMF and supported by the United States would be successful.

"I think there was a very serious risk when this first started of a contagion that could have affected developing and emerging economies around the world with financial instability that engulfed large numbers of countries that, in turn, could have had profound economic and national security effects on the United States," Rubin said on PBS' "Newshour With Jim Lehrer.

"I do think that by having gotten involved as vigorously and as effectively as we have that, at least for now, that process, I think, has been avoided."

IMF Managing Director Michel Camdessus was delivering the same message as Summers in Malaysia, where he said the steps taken by Malaysian Prime Minister Mahathir Mohamad were "so far so good."

Stock prices surged in Tokyo, with the 225-issue Nikkei stock average jumping 6.11 percent. The euphoria came from investor hopes that the Japanese government is prepared to go further to cut taxes and boost government spending in an effort to restart the world's second-largest economy.

The Hong Kong stock market rebounded on Friday, rising by 3.7 percent. The improvement came despite the fact that Moody's Investors Service downgraded the outlook for three major Hong Kong property companies based on concerns of prolonged weakness in the city's property markets.

The Asian currency crisis has dragged stock markets lower around the world on investor worries that declining exports to the region will slow economic growth back home. Likewise, Friday's rebound in Asia lifted markets elsewhere. The Dow Jones industrial average gained 61.78 points to close at 7,753.58.

Rubin said he thought the programs that are in place in Asia "should work, although there certainly are no guarantees."

"If they do work," he said, "we not only will have restored financial stability in these Asian countries but we will have avoided the risk of the kind of contagion and spreading of this financial instability ... that is of enormous concern to the United States given our interests and how those would be affected by a worldwide financial instability involving developing and emerging countries."

The Hong Kong market had plunged to near a three-year low on Monday following the failure of the city's biggest investment banking firm, Peregrines, which fell victim to the deteriorating economic situation in Asia.

Against a backdrop of rumors of even bigger business failures to come, Tung Chee-wa, Hong Kong's chief executive, had appealed Wednesday for the city's 6 million residents to back stabilization efforts while conceding that "the storm isn't over yet."

Hong Kong officials insisted all week they were dealing effectively with the latest turmoil despite growing anxieties that the Hong Kong dollar could be the next Asian currency to tumble if China goes back on promises to keep the Chinese currency strong.

Britain's escaped pigs caught, but lives to be spared

LONDON (AP) — The grand adventures of a pair of runaway pigs who captivated Britain after escaping from a slaughterhouse came to an end Friday.

"It's one of the great escapees — a very cunning pig," Police Constable Andy Walden said of the 110-pound boar who was cornered in a field Friday after six days on the run.

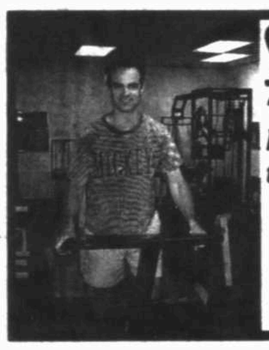

But the story of the 5-month-old pigs — nicknamed Butch Cassidy and Sundance Pig — has a happy ending: they will spend the rest of their days in an animal sanctuary.

The Tamworth pigs broke away from slaughterhouse workers last week in Malmesbury, 90 miles west of London, squeezed under a fence and swam across a river.

National tabloid newspapers enthusiastically took up their tale — and the resulting wave of public sympathy prompted a change of heart by their owner, a roadsweeper who had raised them in his backyard to eat.

Turkey's top court shuts down Islamic party

ANKARA, Turkey (AP) — Turkey's top court outlawed a powerful Islamic political movement Friday, a victory for the Western-oriented secular establishment of the overwhelmingly Muslim nation.

Still, the ruling banning the Welfare Party threatened to further strain Turkey's ties with the European Union and other Western allies, which had characterized its attempts to quash the largest party in parliament as undemocratic.

It also may prove to be little more than a temporary victory for opponents of the Islamic political movement — a new Islamic party, Virtue, had already formed in anticipation of the ruling. Twice since 1970, Turkey had banned predecessors of Welfare, only to see it reborn under new names.

Necmettin Erbakan, chief of the now-banned party, said Friday's verdict would never stop Turkey's Islamic movement. "Our cause will grow stronger, and Welfare will come to power alone one day," he declared, asking his followers to stay calm.

Fearing protests, the government posted riot troops around Welfare Party headquarters and the Constitutional Court.

Chief Justice Ahmet Necdet Sezer said the Islamic-based party was in violation of the country's secular doctrines, enshrined in Turkey's constitution and enforced by Turkey's dominant military.

"Secularism is the basic tenet of the Turkish state," Sezer said after the court's 9-2 vote.

"It's unthinkable to have a democracy without political parties. But it doesn't mean that no limits should be put on them," the chief justice told reporters.

Under the ruling, Erbakan and five other deputies lose their parliamentary seats, and with that, immunity from prosecution. Erbakan, 71, and the others are banned from joining any party for five years and the Welfare Party must surrender its assets to the government.

Government funds of $6 million allocated to the party for 1998 were already frozen Monday and will be turned over to the state.

Erbakan said he would appeal to the European Human Rights Commission. "It is our duty to expose the decision as a great legal mistake," he said.

In Washington, State Department spokesman James P. Rubin said the court ruling damages confidence in Turkey's democratic, multiparty system.

"The answer to many of Turkey's problems is to enhance democracy, to adopt reforms that would allow greater freedom of expression and wider political participation," he said.

Turkey, a NATO member, is anxious for recognition as an equal partner to Western countries and was incensed last year when the European Union blocked its bid at membership, again citing shortcomings in its democracy.

Turkish law ban parties based on ethnicity, religion or communist ideology. The Constitutional Court has shut down many Kurdish and communist parties in the past, as well as a predecessor of Welfare in 1971.

Its successor, the Erbakan-led National Salvation Party, was closed along with other parties in a 1980 military coup.

Welfare was founded in July 1983. Its lawmakers built support in villages and teeming urban slums, reaching out with better roads and sewers, health clinics and free food.

The movement won 21 percent of the votes in 1995 elections, giving it 158 of the 550 seats in Parliament. Erbakan led the country in a center-right coalition until June, when he resigned as prime minister under pressure from the military.

Speeches by Welfare leaders and actions by Erbakan's government — such as forming closer ties with Iran and Libya and allowing civil servants to work shorter hours during the Muslim holy month of Ramadan — were part of the basis for the government's case.

While Welfare sought a moderate Islamic state, Erbakan's rhetoric sometimes drifted toward extremes.

He once called Welfare an "Islamic jihad army" and insisted that Welfare's Islamic-guided principles will one day rule Turkey regardless if the transition is "sweet or bloody."

Welfare backers protested that the party was being unfairly punished by a system incapable of recognizing that religion and politics can coexist.

Unlike many other nations where governments are struggling to keep Islamic movements from power, Turkey's Islamic movement has never been violent.

"As long as the Islamic movement maintains representation in Parliament, Turkey will not be another Algeria," sociologist Sencer Ayata said.

Erbakan, who has pushed the Islamic political cause in Turkey for 30 years, has rebounded from past party closures, the coup, jail and exile.

This time, his age may not give him time for a comeback.

"The movement lost its best player. There will be inner clashes and loss of discipline," Ayata predicted.

Islamic Welfare Party supporters pray as another group talks about the fate of their party at Welfare headquarters in Ankara on Friday. Turkey's Constitutional Court banned the popular Islamic Welfare Party on charges of undermining the nation's secular doctrines, handing a victory to the nation's secular establishment. The ruling is certain to further strain Turkey's ties with the European Union and other Western allies.

Iran's spiritual leader differs with president, rejects U.S. talks

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Iran's spiritual leader revealed his sharp differences with the country's president Friday, lambasting the United States as the "enemy of the Islamic Republic" and rejecting dialogue with Washington.

"Talks with the United States have no benefit for us and are harmful to us," Ayatollah Ali Khamenei told hundreds of thousands of worshippers attending Friday services at Tehran University.

His remarks contrasted strongly with those of Iranian President Mohammad Khatami, who called last week for "dialogue and understanding" between Iran and the United States.

Khatami's overture, which included a call for cultural exchanges, was unprecedented for an Iranian leader since the 1979 Islamic revolution. Since taking office in August, the new president has advocated healing rifts with Iran's Arab neighbors and better relations with the West.

The ayatollah's remarks were his first public response to Khatami's bid for warmer ties with the United States, and despite near freezing temperatures in the Iranian capital, crowds poured into the university to listen to him.

"We don't need any talks or relations with the United States. The regime of the United States is the enemy of the Islamic Republic. They are the enemy of your Islam," Khamenei said.

Chants of "God is great!" and "Death to America!" interrupted Khamenei's comments.

Most of Iran's senior officials and military officers attended the 90-minute sermon, but not Khatami.

After broadcasting the sermon live, Iranian television showed a movie about the 1988 shootdown of an Iranian commercial jet by a U.S. frigate, killing all 290 people aboard.

Khamenei, who has the last word on foreign policy, is considered more hard-line than the relatively moderate Khatami. His comments showed the deep fissure that runs through Iran's leadership over policy toward the United States.

It was not the first time the two leaders have disagreed in public. At an Islamic summit convened in Tehran in December, the two gave strikingly different speeches at the opening session. Khatami urged understanding of the West and greater democracy, while Khamenei preached confrontation with the United States.

Khamenei again highlighted those differences Friday.

In an interview with CNN on Jan. 7, Khatami had expressed regret for the hurt caused to Americans by the storming of the U.S. Embassy in Tehran in 1979. Khamenei, however, blamed the United States for the incident, in which 52 Americans were held hostage for 444 days.

"From the beginning of the Islamic revolution, they made the embassy a place for planning conspiracies and these activities led the students to attack and take over the embassy," Khamenei said.

"If somebody wants to write about the crimes of the United States, it would be a big book," he added.

Khamenei suggested that any dialogue that led to formal negotiations with the United States would mean a defeat for Iran.

'We don't need any talks or relations with the United States. The regime of the United States is the enemy of the Islamic Republic. They are the enemy of your Islam.'

— Ayatollah Ali Khamenei

"What is important for them is talks. The Americans want Iran to sit down at the table of talks. This propaganda campaign is aimed at showing that Iran has surrendered," Khamenei said.

However, Khamenei also tried to play down any policy differences with Khatami.

"I listened very carefully to that interview and I have to say that all of Iran's principal positions about relations with the United States and Israel were being expressed very well. He addressed all the matters that needed to be mentioned," he said.

Although Khatami has limited room to maneuver, he remains popular among Iranians — many of whom would welcome a resumption of ties with the United States.

The United States has said it is ready for dialogue with Iran if Tehran is willing to discuss its opposition to the Middle East peace process, its alleged support for international terrorism and its efforts to develop weapons of mass destruction.

New South African history books change apartheid-era slant

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — For many South African students, history begins in 1652, when the first white settler — Jan van Riebeeck — arrived at what is now Cape Town.

During apartheid, public school teachers were prohibited from teaching black history before van Riebeeck. Textbooks made no mention of the anti-apartheid struggle — and one depicted a black baby looking like a monkey.

Though nearly four years have passed since all-race elections ended white-minority rule, many of the old texts remain in South Africa's poorly financed classrooms.

Little by little, though, new books are changing history.

Color photos of Nobel Peace Prize winner Desmond Tutu and South Africa's post-apartheid flag appear on the covers of new paperback books that are making their way into public schools, along with images of colonial mining magnate Cecil John Rhodes and African tribesmen from previous centuries.

Students are learning about ancient trade in Africa, Muslim influence that moved down the coast from East Africa, and the building of a 12th-century palace in Zimbabwe.

It is unclear what portion of South Africa's public schools are using the new books, since teachers are free to choose from several texts. But their use is not widespread because of the schools' tight budgets. One new series of texts — "In Search of History," published by Oxford University press — sells in retail stores for about $10 a book.

"A lot of schools can't afford to buy new stuff," said Sue Krige, who teaches education at the University of the Witwatersrand in Johannesburg. "The old texts are still used, especially in poorly resourced schools."

Several new history books are available from publishers such as Oxford, MacMillan and local houses, but only three of the country's nine provinces have formally approved the new books for use in public schools this year.

Available since the mid-1990s, the colorful, modern texts reflect the crawling but unstoppable changes in South African society since the end of apartheid.

Only a few years ago, teachers in black schools could be banished for violating curriculum restrictions imposed by the white government.

"If you stepped out of bounds, you were demoted, and if you did it again, you were sent to the rural areas," recalled Sylvia Lepheana, 36, who teaches history in the Katlehong black township southeast of Johannesburg. "If you refused to go, you lost your job."

Though teachers in private schools had more leeway, most of those schools were for white students. Public schools were strictly divided by racial groups.

One old text book still widely used — "History for Standard 10" by C.J. Joubert — is typical of the past. It features some cartoons that are blatantly racist, such as one showing a black baby drawn to look like a monkey being offered to South African leader Gen. Louis Botha to depict the 1920 handover of South-West Africa — now Namibia — to South Africa.

It also uses the language and doctrine of the colonial era. It refers to blacks as Bantus, a word coined by a British librarian, and explains the development of a poor black working class, in part, as the natural deference of impoverished heathens to wealthy Christians.

It says that improved wages, housing, education and health services made most urban blacks "more congenial."

"It is naturally of great importance to Whites of the country that the Bantu should be contented," says one passage. "For one thing, a materially satisfied man is less liable to indoctrination by Communists than an impoverished man."

In contrast, chapters in the "In Search of History" series include "The Destruction of Apartheid" and other topics previously banned from publication. Formerly prohibited photos of anti-apartheid leaders such as Nelson Mandela, now South Africa's first black president, Tutu and slain black activist Steve Biko fill the pages.

Quizzes and other review exercises conclude each section in a bid to break away from the rote learning methods of the past, said Pippa Visser, an author of the "In Search of History" series.

The volumes challenge students to study different versions and sources of an event, she said, so they can make up their own mind about what happened.

German lower house votes for surveillance law

■ Parliament's lower house votes to adopt landmark legislation allowing police to bug private homes.

Associated Press

BONN, Germany — Despite warnings it was reviving the police state tactics of earlier governments, Germany's lower house of parliament voted Friday to allow electronic snooping in private homes as a tool against rising organized crime.

Years in the making, the bill led a justice minister to resign and has sparked protest from some of its potential targets — doctors, drug counselors and journalists.

The measure allows police to bug private households — with approval from a judge and only while investigating certain serious crimes such as murder, kidnapping, extortion, arms and drug trafficking and smuggling of illegal immigrants.

Conversations between suspects and doctors, drug counselors, journalists and lawyers other than defense attorneys may be bugged, but a court must decide afterward whether the recorded conversations can be admitted as evidence.

Chancellor Helmut Kohl's ruling coalition and the opposition Social Democrats mustered 452 votes for the legislation, only four more than the required two-thirds majority. The upper house is scheduled to vote Feb. 6 on the measure.

The legacy of the Nazi regime and decades of secret police snooping in former communist East Germany cast a long shadow over debate on the measure, an amendment to Germany's 1949 constitution.

Many members of Kohl's conservative coalition voted against the bill, saying it violates the constitution's guarantee of the sanctity of the home. They fear judges will be lenient in allowing electronic surveillance.

Sabine Leutheusser-Schnarrenberger, who resigned as Kohl's justice minister in 1995 over the proposal, called it a "fatal step" that erodes basic freedoms.

The leftist Greens and the reformed East German communists, the Party of Democratic Socialism, also opposed the bill.

"If spouses can't have an intimate talk without fear of surveillance, Orwell's '1984' would become reality," said Greens lawmaker Manfred Such.

Professional groups have lambasted the measure, which also includes steps to curb money laundering.

Glenn must train vigorously before space flight

■ Idaho schoolteacher who was to follow Christa McAuliffe into orbit also will train as astronaut, according to NASA.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — NASA enthusiastically tapped John Glenn for a return to orbit, but the 76-year-old senator must first complete a vigorous training program before he can become the oldest person to fly into space.

The space agency also said Friday that an Idaho woman, Barbara Morgan, who backed up Christa McAuliffe, the teacher who died in the Challenger explosion 12 years ago, will train as a new astronaut.

"I see this as another adventure into the unknown," said Glenn, one of America's original space heroes and the first American to orbit the Earth. He noted that his plan to become the oldest human in space fulfills "an unquenchable questing spirit" that is typical of the nation.

"I am ready," Glenn said Friday at a news conference. "I guarantee you I will give it very best I have."

Describing Glenn as "one of the greatest heroes of the 20th century," NASA administrator Daniel Goldin said the pioneering astronaut will have "a long-awaited second flight" as crew member in a space shuttle mission in October.

Training for the mission must start within a matter of weeks, officials said, if Glenn is to be ready by October.

Glenn said the full training program has not been worked out, but he said he would try to complete it during breaks from the Senate.

A NASA official said Glenn faces some space shuttle emergency training that requires "some real strength and agility" unusual for a 76-year-old man.

In 1962, Glenn became the first American to orbit the Earth, circling the globe three times aboard the Mercury spacecraft Friendship 7. He was greeted with ticker tape parades and enduring fame, but was never offered another space ride — until now.

Goldin also said that Morgan, who was runner-up to Christa McAuliffe in NASA's Teacher in Space program, will be among the astronaut selectees who will report this summer to the Johnson Space Center. Morgan will undergo a long training period before becoming eligible to fly on the space shuttle.

Officials said Morgan was given the chance because NASA "had a long-standing obligation" to the Idaho school teacher who was supposed to have followed McAuliffe into orbit in the Teacher in Space program.

Selection of Morgan, said John Lawrence, a Johnson Space Center spokesman, does not mean that NASA is resuming its policy of flying civilians on the space shuttle. That program, which was to include teachers and journalists, was abandoned after the Challenger explosion in January 1986 killed McAuliffe and six crew members.

The decision to send Glenn back into space struck was a popular idea in official Washington.

"That's great," President Clinton said through his spokesman, Mike McCurry. "I'm thoroughly delighted. I've always encouraged him to think about this, and I'm pleased NASA thinks it's the right decision."

Even Rep. Tim Roemer, D-Ind., a longtime critic of NASA's space efforts, said the decision to send Glenn back into space "is the right stuff."

"He may ... rekindle some of the magic and glory that NASA has lost in the last few years," said Roemer.

At his news conference, Glenn noted, "I always wanted to go back up again."

He said he first made a formal proposal to return to space two years ago after he learned that scientists thought sending an older person into orbit could help do research into aging.

"So I thought, If I can pass a physical, why not me?" said Glenn.

He approach Goldin with the idea, but the administrator said he first wanted to be sure that Glenn was healthy enough for the mission and that there was useful science to be done.

"Until they satisfied me, I wasn't ready to decide," said Goldin.

Glenn twice went through vigorous physical examinations. The results were added to all of medical data collected on Glenn over four decades.

"I've been looked at physically more closely than any astronaut who has ever gone into space," said Glenn.

Goldin said he made his decision this week and denied that it was influenced by the White House or anything but "rational thought."

The astronaut-senator will conduct two experiments on his mission dealing with aging. Glenn said the physical decline caused by normal aging on Earth is similar, in some respects, to the rapid changes that occur among astronauts living in the weightlessness of space.

NASA spokesman Lawrence said that to prepare for the mission Glenn will have to learn emergency procedures for getting out of a crippled space shuttle. These include sliding down a pole and then dropping into a parachute training pit, a technique used to bail out of the craft.

Glenn also will have to be able to climb through a top hatch of the shuttle and then rappel about 20 feet down a rope. This simulates what space shuttle crew members would do if the craft lands on water.

Treasury inspector to resign in March

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Treasury Department's embattled chief watchdog, accused by congressional investigators of violating federal contracting law, said Friday she would resign in March.

"After almost 18 years in the public service, it is time for me to return to private life," Treasury Inspector General Valerie Lau said in a letter to President Clinton.

Lau, who also was under fire for her office's investigation of two Secret Service agents, said she would leave after her office issues its audit of the department's financial statements in March. She has held the position since December 1994. Earlier, she was an executive at the Office of Personnel Management.

Her contracting practices were first highlighted in a series of Associated Press stories last spring that prompted the congressional investigation.

She did not return a telephone call seeking comment late Friday.

In her letter, Lau did not mention a report by the General Accounting Office, Congress' investigative arm, that concluded she had broken the law by failing to seek competitive bids for two consulting contracts.

Clinton to face Jones, lawyers' questions today

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Clinton prepared on Friday to face Paula Jones and unprecedented questioning by her lawyers — under oath — about the accusation that he pressed her for sex seven years ago.

For at least the second time this week, Clinton was meeting with his legal team to get ready for a 10:30 a.m. Saturday deposition in Mrs. Jones' lawsuit.

Previous depositions in the case have included interviews of Gennifer Flowers and other women claiming extramarital affairs with Clinton, raising the question of how far from Mrs. Jones' allegations Saturday's deposition might range.

Rules for evidence gathering at such sessions are more freewheeling than at trials. But two people close to the case said U.S. District Judge Susan Webber Wright had directed Donovan Campbell, Mrs. Jones' Dallas-based attorney, to stick to questions on what may have happened between Clinton and the former Arkansas government secretary.

However, another source suggested Campbell would be allowed to ask Clinton whether he offered other women favors in exchange for sex. When Wright refused to let Mrs. Jones add such charges to her lawsuit last November, the judge left open the possibility that such evidence could be used to bolster her basic complaint.

Mrs. Jones traveled from her home outside Los Angeles to attend the questioning in the downtown office of Clinton's lead attorney, Bob Bennett. Caught by news cameras on a layover in the Memphis airport, Mrs. Jones said all the attention "makes me nervous."

Her spokesperson, waiting in Washington, said Mrs. Jones told her "she's very proud to be an American citizen." Clinton's deposition, said Susan Carpenter McMillan, "shows the little girl from Arkansas is not excluded under the lady of justice."

It will be the first time a U.S. president testifies as a defendant in a criminal or civil lawsuit, and White House officials made clear Clinton's distaste for the distinction.

It will be the first time a U.S. president testifies as a defendant in a criminal or civil suit, and White House officials made clear Clinton's distaste for the distinction.

"It's safe to assume that there would be other things that he would do on a Saturday, but he will do it and recognizes that he must do it and he will get it done," spokesman Mike McCurry said. McCurry cast it all as "a distraction but ... not a burdensome distraction."

Clinton's videotaped testimony, which would remain under seal by order of Judge Wright, was expected to last at least three hours. Wright, who has shown an unwillingness to let the case stray, arrived in Washington Friday and was to mediate any disputes.

Wright, known to jail those who defy her orders, has banned the parties from discussing deposition. Sources spoke to The Associated Press only on condition of anonymity.

Mrs. Jones says she rebuffed a Clinton request for oral sex in a Little Rock, Ark., hotel room in May 1991, when she was a state worker and he was governor, and subsequently suffered a hostile work environment. Clinton denies her charges and says he doesn't recall ever meeting her.

Media interest in the deposition ran high. Camera crews staked out arrival gates at National Airport on Friday, and reporters quizzed Northwest Airlines agents when ice in Memphis grounded Mrs. Jones' connecting flight.

Bill Bristow, attorney for Danny Ferguson, the Arkansas state trooper also named in Mrs. Jones' suit, will sit in on the deposition. Hillary Rodham Clinton had no public schedule for the day and a spokesperson said she planned her usual weekend "personal time."

Susan Carpenter McMillan, Mrs. Jones' spokeswoman and not an official party to the suit, was in Washington but was not to be permitted to witness Clinton's deposition.

Clinton, meanwhile, was hoping that the proceedings would register just a blip in the record of his presidency. "He has read so much presidential history that he knows most histories of presidencies are not really complete until years if not decades after the completion of the president's term," McCurry said.

A public opinion poll released Friday found that 42 percent of Americans believed Clinton's denials, while 28 percent thought Mrs. Jones was telling the truth. The Time/CNN survey questioned 1,020 adults on Jan. 14-15 and claimed a 4.5 percent margin of error.

Barring an out-of-court settlement or dismissal by the judge, jury selection in the case begins in Little Rock May 27. Clinton cannot be compelled to testify but either side can use his videotaped deposition in the trial.

Kaczynski's fate lies in hands of prison psychiatrist

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — The fate of Theodore Kaczynski and of his trial hang on the report of a prison psychiatrist who finished a week of interviews with the Unabomber suspect on Friday.

Dr. Sally Johnson was due to submit the results of her competency examination to the judge and attorneys late in the day. The contents will be sealed to the public.

Johnson, chief of psychiatric services at the Butner Federal Correctional Institution in North Carolina, also evaluated presidential assailant John Hinckley Jr. and former televangelist Jim Bakker.

The examination of Kaczynski was ordered by U.S. District Judge Garland Burrell Jr. on Jan. 8 after the defendant demanded to drop his defense attorneys and take over the case himself. The news that Kaczynski apparently attempted to hang himself in the jail on the evening of Jan. 7 reinforced that decision, Burrell said.

Kaczynski, 55, has strongly opposed his lawyers' plan to portray him as mentally ill in his trial on four Unabomber attacks that killed two Sacramento men and maimed two scientists.

After reviewing Johnson's competency report over the Martin Luther King Jr. holiday weekend, the judge and attorneys were to decide Tuesday whether to have a full competency hearing. That hearing would take place Thursday morning, with the trial tentatively scheduled to begin two hours later — if Kaczynski is found competent.

If he's ruled incompetent, the process comes to an abrupt halt.

"He goes immediately to a federal facility, where he remains until he's competent," said Rory Little, a Hastings Law School professor and former federal prosecutor. "There's no question of his getting out — he's charged with a violent crime."

If the trial does begin, it is unclear just who will be speaking for Kaczynski.

His request to drop defense attorneys Quin Denvir and Judy Clarke must be ruled upon. The judge will have to decide whether to force Denvir and Clarke to continue without the mental defect defense, allow Kaczynski to defend himself, or bring in a new attorney.

Bringing in a new lawyer would likely delay the case for weeks or months.

Sex offender having himself castrated

CHICAGO (AP) — A child molester is going to have himself castrated — with the $5,000 cost covered by anonymous donors — in hopes of winning a lighter sentence.

"I challenge anyone to demonstrate a more tangible example of remorse," Jeffrey Morse's attorney, Paul B. Wharton, said Friday.

Morse, 30, of suburban Schaumburg, volunteered for castration even before his conviction on charges of molesting a 12-year-old girl in 1996 and trying to attack an 11-year-old girl last year. He was accused of luring his victims into his car.

Circuit Court Judge R. Peter Grometer granted the request Thursday, allowing Morse a one-day furlough from jail to have the surgery. It is expected to take place within a week.

Morse could get six to more than 100 years in prison when he is sentenced Feb. 24. Judge Donald Hudson, who will sentence Morse, has not said whether he would take the surgery into account.

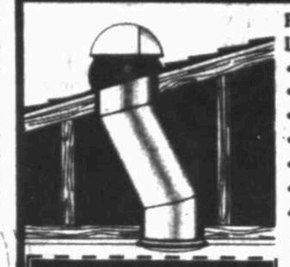

Wharton said he has arranged for an anonymous group of doctors to perform the operation. He said the idea is to lower Morse's sex drive.

"Someone said that if the flagpole isn't flying, the compulsion to sing 'The Star-Spangled Banner' is not the primary thought in the man's mind," the lawyer said.

Dr. John Mulhall, director of the Center for Male Sexual Health at the Loyola University Medical Center, said there's no guarantee the operation will prevent Morse from molesting children.

Studies from Germany, where castration is an approved procedure, show that it reduces the recidivism rate from 50 percent to 3 percent, said Michael Bailey, a professor of psychology at Northwestern University.

Snowstorm adds insult to injury in Northeast

PALERMO, Maine (AP) — Up to 18 inches of snow blanketed parts of the Northeast on Friday, hampering efforts to restore power that's been off since last week's ice storm and further dampening the spirits of winter-weary residents.

"I'm very discouraged. It's like it's going to be forever before we get power," said Angela Miller as she held her 8-month-old son at the Palermo Town Office.

About 59,580 customers were without power Friday in Maine, where 4 to 8 inches of snow fell. Up to 18 inches fell in northern New York, where 62,800 customers were without power.

On Friday, an ice storm coated much of Connecticut — which escaped the brunt of last week's storm — and knocked out power to 87,570 customers.

Up to a foot of snow fell in Massachusetts, causing car accidents and canceling classes. A snow emergency was declared in Boston, but residents said 3 inches doesn't even faze them.

"This is not bad at all," said Patty Barney, an employee of Osco Drug. "I shoveled the walk and driveway by myself."

Many people couldn't use snow blowers to clean up after the storm because of still-downed power lines and tree limbs hiding under the snow and ice.

"You have to be awful cautious," said Jim Widrick, manager of a hardware store outside Watertown, N.Y. "They'll be chewing up a lot of wood, turning blowers into chippers."

Donna Reed, a worker for Central Maine Power, gathers downed lines Friday in North Pownal, Maine. A tree-trimming crew from Delaware works in the background. About 57,000 customers remain without electricity.

AP Photo

Many snowplows in Maine were diverted to help power crews, so some roads usually cleared quickly were icy, slushy messes for much of the day.

In Palermo, a town of about 1,000 people 15 miles east of Augusta, three-quarters of the residents were still without power Friday. Fallen limbs littered the sides of the hilly, snow-covered roads.

Miller, 22, lost her power on Jan. 8. After trying to stick it out in her frigid trailer — where the temperature dipped to 18 degrees — she came to town looking for a generator to borrow.

"It's only been nine days, I know, but it feels like it's been a month," she said.

Miller seemed resigned more than angry, even though the post office in front of her trailer had electricity and she did not. But others were frustrated enough to make threats against Central Maine Power Co. workers, and the company hired off-duty police officers to protect its offices.

Hospitals say they have noticed an increase in heart attacks and other stress-related health problems.

"People are testy, but I don't think we've seen yet the increase in spousal abuse or violence that we might expect later if this continues," said Dr. David Stuchiner, director of emergency medicine at Central Maine Medical Center in Lewiston.

Police in Augusta even blamed a stabbing on the lack of power.

"Things that people otherwise would not become confrontational about are causing people to get into arguments, these type of things," said Augusta Police Chief Wayne McCamish.

Others, however, found ways to deal with the stress. A group of New Englanders at the Bradley International Airport outside of Hartford, Conn., played games while they waited for their flight to Florida to be rescheduled.

"We're not stressing yet," said Ellen Oakes, 32, of East Longmeadow, Mass. "We're supposed to be in Miami and by the pool at 1 o'clock, but that's Mother Nature."

James Brown hospitalized for possible painkiller addiction

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — Soul singer James Brown has been hospitalized after possibly becoming addicted to painkillers, his agent said Friday.

"He's had a problem with his back, and I don't want to say anything out of place, but he may have gotten addicted to painkillers for his pain," said Jeff Allen.

"That about all this boils down to — an addiction to painkillers."

The 64-year-old singer, known as the "Godfather of Soul," was picked up Thursday at home by sheriff's deputies on a judge's order, according to a sheriff's report.

The report, provided to The Aiken Standard, listed the case as a "mental transport."

The judge's order was issued when Brown's family contacted the Aiken County Probate Court after becoming concerned about his health, sheriff's Lt. Michael Frank said. It was unclear when the order was issued.

Deputies served Brown with probate papers at his Beech Island home and took him to Aiken Regional Medical Centers, Frank said. He was not admitted but was later moved to a Columbia-area medical facility.

Republicans consider denying RNC funding to candidates who won't back abortion ban

INDIAN WELLS, Calif. (AP) — Republicans grappled Friday with a volatile election-year controversy, debating whether to deny party funding for GOP candidates who won't back a ban on certain late-term abortions.

Speaker Newt Gingrich and Rep. Henry Hyde, leader of anti-abortion forces in the House, both urged rejection of the proposal, saying that applying such tests to candidates could threaten continued GOP control of the House and Senate.

"The worst thing you can do for the pro-life cause is lose our majority," Hyde, R-Ill., said in remarks before a hushed audience.

Gingrich invoked Ronald Reagan's name as he argued against imposing a single-issue standard on candidates. "Reagan understood that as the leader of America and as the leader of the Republican Party, it was his job to bring us together not to find ways to tear us apart," he said.

Supporters looked forward to a full debate and vote set for late afternoon.

"I frankly believe the leadership is out of touch" with the grass roots, said Tim Lambert of Texas, the proposal's author. A CNN-Time poll appeared to buttress his case, reporting that in a nationwide poll, Republicans by a margin of 51-35 favor withholding funds from candidates who won't back the ban.

If the resolution passes, Lambert said, "you can still run as a Republican, you're just not going to get any RNC money if you support infanticide."

Party chairman Jim Nicholson and other leaders labored to defeat the proposal when it came before the Republican National Committee later in the day, arguing that one type of "litmus test" would inevitably lead to another, and wind up damaging the party in the long run.

Aides expressed confidence they would have the votes to prevail. An alternative proposal was circulating that would drop all references to withholding support from candidates and instead criticize President Clinton for twice vetoing legislation to end most "partial birth" abortions.

Regardless of the outcome, the issue has sparked potentially divisive debate at the dawn of an election year in which Republicans will be defending hard-won majorities in Congress and attempting to strengthen their hold on the nation's statehouses.

Nicholson announced more than a week ago that he would oppose the effort to impose conditions on party funding, and has sought to enlist the aid of prominent abortion opponents in Congress and elsewhere.

Hyde said he had flown to this desert resort town at the chairman's request.

In a letter to Nicholson earlier this week, Hyde said the best way to prevail on the issue of so-called partial-birth abortions was to maintain the Republican majorities in Congress and to try and override President Clinton's veto of legislation to ban most of those procedures.

"We can win an override vote, but not by exclusion of those whose support is essential to retain our majority," he wrote.

Many make no link between abortion, politics

N.Y. Times News Service

For K.J., a slight, blond college freshman who has not told her parents that she is 12 weeks pregnant, Roe vs. Wade is ancient history, the lone demonstrator outside the Planned Parenthood clinic in Houston a minor irritant and the blistering debate over "partial-birth abortion" not even a blip on the horizon.

In her indifference to the politics, K.J. is typical of many of the women interviewed as they waited for abortions at clinics in Houston, New York, Chicago and Boston. For the first generation to come of age in the 25 years since the Supreme Court made abortion a constitutional right, the continuing political debate is oddly distant from their lives.

Most seemed to regard the fight over abortion as a remote historical phenomenon. A surprising number said they did not consider themselves "pro-choice." Some considered themselves "pro-life." And many voiced the same ambivalence about abortion, along with the same concern that it was often used too casually, that shows up among the public at large.

In the latest New York Times/CBS News Poll, for example, half of those surveyed said they considered abortion to be murder, but a third of those who took that position also said it was sometimes the best response to a bad situation. Forty-five percent said abortion should be available, but with stricter limits.

"I'm not pro-choice — I'm anti-abortion," said Y.D., a 22-year-old who like all the other women was interviewed on the condition that her name not be used.

Y.D. has a 3-year-old child, had an abortion when she was 16, and did not hesitate before calling the Planned Parenthood clinic in New York when she discovered she was pregnant again.

"I still have negative feelings about abortion," she said, "and I love children, but this is something I have to do at this point in my life."

Asked whether she would make abortion legal or illegal, given the choice, she was stumped, and then finally said:

"I wouldn't make it legal or illegal. Abortion is a bad thing, and people should protect themselves. But a lot of people can't afford to bring a child into the world."

The statistical profile of women obtaining abortions has changed little over the past two decades: They are overwhelmingly young, with three-quarters under 30. About 6 in 10 are white, 35 percent are black, and 15 percent are Hispanic. While 8 in 10 are unmarried, almost half are already mothers, and almost half have had at least one previous abortion.

Many of the women said abortion had never been discussed in their schooling, adding that their only information came from conversations with friends worrying about unintended pregnancy. Only a handful had ever heard anything about the late-term abortion method anti-abortion groups call partial-birth abortion, now the topic of sharp debate in Congress and state legislatures alike. About half had never heard of Roe vs. Wade.

Report: Pentagon might recommend end to use of troops for border anti-drug missions

WASHINGTON (AP) — Pentagon officials are finalizing their recommendations regarding the future use of armed military patrols for anti-drug operations along the U.S.-Mexico border.

"Officially, no decision has been made by the secretary of defense whether or not to resume the use of active-duty ground forces in the use of counterdrug operations," Pentagon spokeswoman Cheryl Irwin said Thursday. The policy "is still in the formulation process," she added.

Unofficially, however, it appears that defense officials will recommend the end of such patrols — a practice that provoked controversy after a West Texas teen-ager was killed last year by a U.S. Marine on patrol along the border.

"It's not worth the legal liability for our soldiers, and the actual amount of drugs seized throughout the performance of those missions proved to be modest," a senior defense official, speaking on condition of anonymity told the Scripps Howard News Service.

'It's not worth the legal liability for our soldiers, and the actual amount of drugs seized throughout the performance of those missions proved to be modest.'

— senior defense official

The Pentagon suspended the use of armed military personnel on border anti-drug patrols after a Marine fatally shot Esequiel Hernandez Jr., an 18-year-old high school student who was herding his family's goats in Redford last May. The fatal shooting occurred after the teen fired two shots from an antique rifle toward four camouflaged Marines who were hiding in brush.

A study expected to be forwarded to Cohen will advocate an end to ground reconnaissance missions in support of anti-drug missions, Scripps Howard reported Thursday. The study will advocate continued use of troops for support services along the Southwest border for missions such as road building and intelligence gathering.

News of the proposal didn't please the chairman of the House immigration subcommittee.

"Reducing the already overburdened resources at the border now opens the door for drug smugglers who are now bringing 70 percent of their product across the Southwest border," said Rep. Lamar Smith, R-San Antonio.

A Texas grand jury declined to indict the Marine, but a Justice Department civil-rights investigation has not been completed. The Defense Department's study, triggered by the death of Hernandez, will not be released until the Justice Department concludes its probe, sources said.

The moratorium on ground patrols has not prohibited the military from continuing to provide support to the Border Patrol, including document analysis, aerial reconnaissance, engineering, training and secured transportation of drug evidence, said Lt. Col. Bill Reichert, a spokesman for Joint Task Force Six, a drug-fighting military detail based at Fort Bliss in El Paso.

Last week, the Defense Department revealed plans to send more than 500 troops to South Texas to build roads and helicopter landing pads.

The deployment of military forces along the border has been controversial since it began under orders from Congress in 1989. Some critics have said that use of the military comes perilously close to violating the 1878 Posse Comitatus law, which forbids the military from engaging in domestic police work, such as making arrests.

Others say the armed forces are trained differently than law enforcement officers and operate under distinctly different rules.

Lifer captured 6 months after mistaken release

DALLAS (AP) — A man serving four life sentences for several Fort Worth-area armed robberies was free for six months because of a computer foul-up at a Dallas County jail.

Forris Andre Massey, 33, was taken back into custody Tuesday night at his mother's home after state prison officials informed Dallas County authorities that no one had returned him to Huntsville. He was returned to prison on Thursday.

Massey had been convicted in 1996 of several home-invasion-style robberies in the Fort Worth area.

"I've never heard of anything like this," said Larry Todd, a spokesman for the Texas Department of Criminal Justice in Austin.

"This was strictly a fluke," said Jim Ewell, spokesman for the Dallas County Sheriff's Department, which operates the county's jails.

Sheriff's officials in Dallas and Tarrant counties initially blamed each other for Massey's mistaken release in June 1997. But after a lengthy conference call Thursday afternoon, officials on both ends of the Trinity River blamed the error on Dallas County's computer system, which is more than 30 years old.

"What makes this thing so unusual is that this man is serving multiple life sentences and ended up free for about six months, just sitting there at his mama's house until they rearrested him," said Cmdr. James Skidmore, a Tarrant County sheriff's spokesman.

"We're very thankful that that's all he did and that he didn't harm anybody or skip the country."

Massey went from Huntsville to Dallas County in September 1996 so authorities could dispose of two pending aggravated assault charges against him. The two counts were dismissible because he was already serving multiple life sentences.

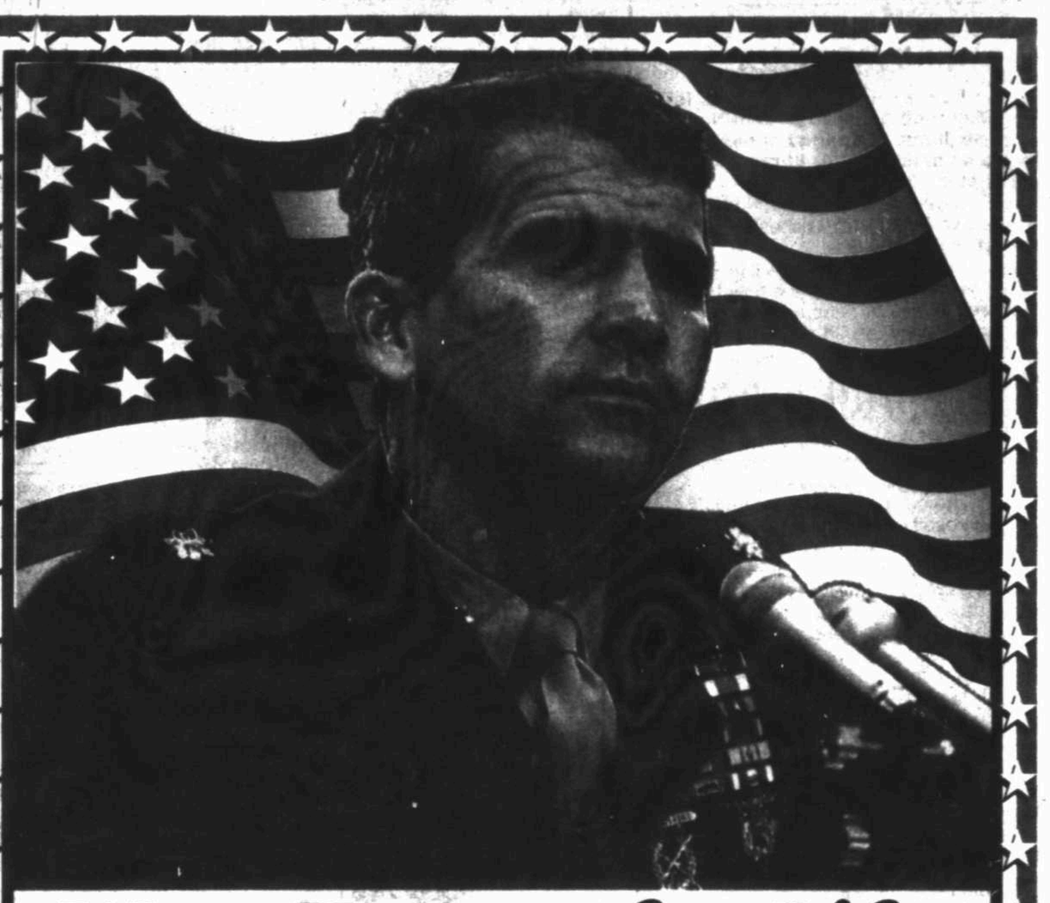

While in Dallas County's Lew Sterrett Justice Center, he was turned over to Tarrant County as a witness in yet another criminal case, officials said.

But Massey was gone for more than 60 days, which caused Dallas County's computer to erase the fact he was a state prisoner facing a life sentence, officials said.

So last June, when a judge finally granted the state's request to dismiss the two pending assault charges, Dallas County didn't have any reason Massey should remain in custody, said Chief Bob Knowles, who oversees detentions for the Dallas County Sheriff's Department.

No one was aware of Massey's mistaken release until Monday, when he failed to appear for a court hearing in Fort Worth. Tarrant County officials called the state, which in turn called Dallas County.

Police said Massey told them he thought he had been freed of all charges, including the multiple life sentences.

Auditor: Managed health care cutting costs in Texas prisons

AUSTIN (AP) — The cost of providing medical care for Texas prisoners has dropped $277.40 per inmate per year since 1993, according to State Auditor Lawrence Alwin.

In a report released Friday, the auditor credited that drop to the implementation of a managed health care program in the state's prison system.

"The correctional health care program has achieved some efficiencies since it was fully implemented in September 1994," the report said. "Opportunities now exist to improve management controls."

In 1993, the department spent $132.4 million on health care for 60,490 inmates, a daily cost of $5.99 per inmate. In 1997, the agency spent $238.8 million on 125,110 inmates, a per-day cost of $5.23 per inmate.

One concern raised by the auditor centered on membership of an independent committee that oversees the health care program.

The six-member board contracts with medical providers for services in the state's prison system. It is made up of two representatives each from the Texas Department of Criminal Justice, the University of Texas Medical Branch at Galveston and Texas Tech University Health Sciences Center.

The committee has contracted with both UTMB and Texas Tech for services.

"This type of relationship, in the private sector, would raise questions over conflicting loyalties between the parties," the audit said.

"While we did not find any evidence of bias in contracting decisions, the close relationship between the committee's medical school members and their employers (the university providers) may hamper competition by discouraging other potential providers from pursuing service contracts."

The audit also said the department's director of health services, Dr. Lynette Linthicum, is a member of the committee and an employee of the Texas Medical Branch.

As director Ms. Linthicum has control over department actions and policies affecting the school.

Glen Castlebury, a TDCJ spokesman, said the composition of the committee is dictated by state law. If there is a problem with it, "the Legislature is the proper one to scratch it's head over it."

Castlebury also said the department is conducting a national search for a new health director but has not had concerns about employing someone with ties to its contractors.

"We were looking at the medical expertise as opposed to a vendor-consumer, vendor-client financial relationship," he said.

The new director will be a full-time employee of the department, Castlebury said.

He added that the department agrees with much of the auditor's report, and is proud of the accomplishments of the program.

"When you take an operation that is as large as this medical program and as new as three years old, you're going to be proud of what it already has accomplished," he said. "But you're going to know that you need to continually refine these very issues."

Craving a computer? It's a great time to buy

By Bill Husted
N.Y. Times News Service

■ Technobuddy

As your TechnoBuddy, I have a sacred obligation to help you spend money.

It's strange behavior coming from me, since I am not known for being a free spender when it comes to computers and technology. But when it comes to your money and computers, I am a wild and crazy guy. And, in truth, this is a wonderful time to buy a computer. A series of events have conspired to push computer prices lower than I had expected to see them this time of year.

Back in late December, Intel cut prices for the microprocessor chip used in most personal computers by 33 percent. You'd think it would take months for the benefit of that price cut to trickle down to retailers. But the computer business does not work by logical rules. If you watch Intel price cuts closely — and they generally come four times a year — you'll notice retail prices almost always take a nose dive within eight to 10 days.

And there's more going on here than an Intel price cut. Computer retailers had a so-so holiday selling season. It wasn't a horrible time, but very few retailers were planning after-Christmas European vacations. Instead, they were planning sales. Adding pressure are new lines of cheaper name-brand machines.

So this is a conspiracy of events — a price cut and a bit of merchandising — that offers consumers a chance to get a really good deal on a powerful computer now.

Let's be clear. If you have a computer and you don't think it will need replacing within the next 12 months, I'm not advising you to rush out and buy a new machine just because prices are good now. But if you think you will soon be in the market for a PC, now's the time to go shopping.

It's that Super time of year again

By Charles Stough
N.Y. Times News Service

Some people believe a football game is made of four quarters of 15 minutes each. If it is the Super Bowl, it's really several months long, starting with the first whistle of spring training and ending with the final gun that breaks the hearts of half the football world.

The Internet has given millions the chance to play along, and the action won't stop with the referee's artillery. In Usenet, the collection of thousands of discussion newsgroups, the shouting never stops.

Hotels are booked in San Diego so the room rental offers are already beginning. One fellow wants $100 per person to sleep in his den, but he wants a $500 deposit, and he'll keep $100 of that until he gets his phone bill.

Would Green Bay Packers or Denver Broncos fans run up a phone bill on someone else's dime? Sure they would, if they can't get to a computer to post their opinions in the groups alt.sports.football.pro.gb-

Neighbors finding pets, babysitters, friends with email

Associated Press

HOUSTON — The search for lost pets, baby-sitters and friends is paperless these days.

Turning to the World Wide Web, the Houston community of Woodland Heights has set up a mail network for its residents.

With a few keystrokes and the click of a mouse, a resident of the neighborhood just northwest of downtown can zip a message to 180 neighbors.

"This allows people to quickly air issues, and that's what it's all about," said Ryan Bernard, who founded the electronic mail list 1 1/2 years ago.

By e-mailing their neighbors in the mostly professional community of about 2,000 homes, people have found lost dogs, kept neighbors abreast of crime and received tips on the best local painters and carpenters.

"I really think it's a great way to help pull a neighborhood together," said Clifford Kurtzman, whose Houston-based Tenagra Corp. helps businesses design Web pages. "I think this offers a chance to connect people in a neighborly way that they haven't been for a long time."

Added Cate Read, a Continental Airlines analyst: "We find dogs, rent houses, recommend contractors and otherwise take care of each other on the list. It is a joy to belong to."

The neighborhood Internet project also includes a Web site. The goal is to provide another forum for public comment, said Matt Hartzell, president of the Woodland Heights Community Association.

"You couldn't get the type of feedback we get from this list unless you have 150 people showing up at monthly meetings;" said Hartzell, an attorney. "And you know that never happens."

The list recently helped residents in an unsuccessful fight against placement of a cellular phone tower in their area.

The e-mail network kept residents informed of the time and place for meetings and rallies. Residents could download fax protest forms.

"It allowed all of us to remain responsive — instantaneously — to whatever was going on," Hartzell said.

A good cleaning does wonders for Windows

By Jack Warner
N.Y. Times News Service

After a year or so of my wife's benign neglect and our youngest son's rampant game-playing and Internet wandering, her computer looked as though forward elements of the Golden Horde had wintered in the hard drives. Small wonder it was groaning along as if under the burden of a nearly insupportable weight.

It only took about a day and a half to get it back into decent, although far from pristine, condition.

Possibly the most common indignity wreaked upon it was wanton program removal. Neither my wife nor my son can be made to understand that Windows 95 requires a new method of removing unwanted programs from the hard drive.

If a program is written specifically for Windows 95, it plants its little footprints all over the Registry, that arcane repository of operational information. There are one or two proper ways to remove it. First, and most expedient, is to go into the Control

Ask the doctor

Dear Dr. Bombay: So, what is Microsoft going to do now that the Justice Department has it in a hammerlock? — Windoze Hater

Dear Doze: Hmmmm. I don't know. Become the richest company in the world?

You know this thing will all go away someday, and the only thing we'll remember about it is that it made Windows 98 debut a few months later than planned, as if Microsoft needed Justice's help for that to happen. So what if they include a browser with Windows for free? Any Netscape lover is still going to load Netscape. There's not a gun to anybody's head.

The original agreement that Microsoft had with the feds was that they couldn't force equipment manufacturers who license Windows to license other products. The agreement also allows Big Bill and his pals to continue to enhance Windows, which they have with lots of applications and utilities, including Internet Explorer. So why aren't the people who make fax, disk-compression, memory-management and communications software squealing like stuck pigs, the way Netscape is? If the software is good enough — and the Netscape browser is — it can compete with Microsoft without any help from Janet Reno.

Dear Dr. Bombay: As a former shareware author, I found much to disagree with in a recent column. In response to a reader's plight of uninstalling a program and not knowing how to react to Windows asking whether to delete a possible shared file, you chose to blame the entire situation on bad shareware programming. Your suggestion that this situation only occurs in badly written shareware is ludicrous. If it were not for shareware coming of age, you would still be paying $300 for a word processor to write your column on. — Outraged

Dear Out: Are we feeling better now?

Lighten up, Out. First of all, assuming you have an adequate grasp of all the big words, go back and read the response again. I told that poor bozo to leave the shared file even though there was absolutely no reason for the shareware author to have included it. Second, I never said the problem was limited to shareware. If you're going to make something up, at least be more imaginative. Tell people I advocated the violent overthrow of the government or that I talked to aliens or something like that.

On the other hand, after experimenting with shareware for about 20 years now, I can tell you that most of it — maybe 90 percent — is crud churned out by people who don't really know what they're doing. I hope your stuff wasn't in that group. Of the 10 percent that doesn't stink or isn't totally inadequate, maybe half of that is worth paying for because it can do a better job than commercial software. And, yes, I paid about $300 for a word-processing program 11 years ago. I'd replace it with shareware in a heartbeat if anything could match it, but so far, nothing comes close. Maybe all the best programmers get absorbed by commercial houses, where they can be slave-driven into turning out higher-quality work.

Now, before all you shareware authors get on your high horses and pull out your thesauruses to start looking up synonyms for "dirt bag," let me say that about a fourth of the programs I use daily are shareware that I actually paid for. So, get back to work and make your own programs better. Remember, the aliens are watching you.

Dear Amy: How do you download stuff to your computer? Will I get a virus?—Jerrica, Las Vegas

Dear Jerrica: The people who design Web sites make it easy for you to download stuff. Mostly, they have a separate page where you just click on a link and a copy of a game, plug-in or file will be sent to your computer. If it's a game or a plug-in that has to be compatible with your computer, look for the proper link and take the time to read how to install it before you click. Most download sites are safe from viruses, but you have to be the judge. It's smart to run a virus-scanning software application every once in a while, and to back up the data on your hard drive often.

XXXII: If it's Super Bowl chat, there must be talk from Cowboy fans packers or alt.sports.football.pro.denver- broncos.

A sample of the rhetoric:

■ "(Denver's John) Elway and (Green Bay's Brett) Favre — both future Hall of Famers. Definitely the two most consistent and talented quarterbacks for the season ... All in all, the Packers defense and special teams overpower the slow Broncs and Brett zips the ball into the end zone all day, winning their second Super Bowl and sending Elway back to Mile High ringless. Again. Hahahaha."

He signed his posting "Vince Lombardy (looking down from heaven on his beloved and mighty Pack)" which certainly is a forgery, or else the Internet has quietly reached another milestone with service to Heaven.

■ "Denver is 0-3-1 vs. Green Bay away from the friendly confines of home," a Packers fan jeered.

"Right," retorted a rival, "and Green Bay is 0-4 away from their friendly confines! This game isn't going to be in Green Bay either."

Statistics are a major part of every sports debate, of course, and the Packers-Broncos shoutin is in the classic mode. Some of these people know how many sacks Deacon Jones made, and he played before the statisticians even counted sacks.

'Ah, it's so good to hear a Cowboys fan utter the words, 'next year.' '

— Fan posting from a Denver Broncos Usenet news group.

The Usenet fan debate is like the world's biggest sports bar, except the debaters aren't drunk. Well, maybe they are, but nobody gets challenged to go outside and duke it out, and that's an improvement.

The argument is almost theological. Imagine Calvinists in a 17th-century sports inn, shouting, "You can keep your fast days, I'm tellin' ya the Puritans woulda had your crusaders!" and the Papists growling back, "Show me, and no fair deducting penalties for rule changes since the Schism! Dancing's legal in our conference!"

All American pro teams, in all sports, are subjects of Usenet groups. For a fan who feels strongly about a team, it's worth puzzling out the procedure to connect to Usenet. Get instructions from local Internet service providers.

In football the Dallas Cowboys probably have the angriest fans. They blame their season on bad refereeing, but fired their coach. They call themselves "America's Team" and believe in their special place in history, past and future.

Yeah, well, they didn't do so well this year and Barry Switzer is out, but they sell a lot of T-shirts.

"Packer merchandise is now outselling the Cowboys and is in fact the top selling team merchandise in the country," Green Bay fan said.

"Yeah, but where was it all of those years when they weren't doing so well?" a Dallas fan countered. "The Packers are selling 25 percent of all NFL merchandise, and the Cowboys are selling 21 percent, the difference being that the Packers are fresh off a Super Bowl win, and the Cowboys are fresh off two mediocre seasons."

Those Texas fans. They can always be goaded into saying ugly things about themselves. Sensible debaters wouldn't waste bandwidth in the hot side argument about chili recipes that laces itself through the football debates, but Texas fans do. Everybody else knows I have the world's best chili recipe, and I'm in Ohio.

But as for football, "Ah, it's so good to hear a Cowboys fan utter the words 'next year,'" someone posted in the Broncos group.

"Please, let me bask in the radiance for a while."

"And the best thing is how delusional it all is," someone else said. "These people actually think that they can just bring in a new coach to replace Switzer and pick up the pieces of their broken dynasty. Such foolishness. Face the facts, Flop fans: it's dead, and you're still in denial."

SAFARI: Get involved at the Paula Jones defense site

now aware that the science fair is just around the corner. If your student is struggling for an idea, try http://www.geocities.com/SiliconValley/Pines/6999/gsfr.html. The site serves as an information exchange for students needing a kick start.

■ If you just can't get enough of Ted Kaczynski, you are of course more than welcome to visit www.unabombtrial.com/. If you can no longer face the thought of living without transcripts of the upcoming trial, be prepared to dole out $750 for PubNetics' information. I wonder, how would a person explain that expense to his or her spouse?

■ And if you find it hard to make it through another day without coming to the side of Paula Jones, you can now visit (and make a monetary contribution to, no doubt) a web page devoted to Ms. Jones's defense. It's at http://jones-clinton.com/, and according to the home page, the site "is the result of a grass roots effort by ordinary Americans who want to help Paula Jones receive justice. ... "This is David versus Goliath."

The problem with the Internet is often also its strong suit, as well. Specifically, there is no finite news hole in cyberspace, Topics can be written on ad infinitium if authors so choose. On a related note, please see www.superbowl.com.

"Titanic" stands to become the third highest grossing movie of all time, according to figures released this week. Like the movie, the site is worth a look, at www.titanicmovie.com. If you're more of a documentary afficionado, try Titanic on any search engine and see how many pages are devoted to the historic maritime disaster.

Local site: Hockey fans can unite at www.iglobal.net/jackalopes/, just in time for the team's return to Ector County Coliseum, Jan. 23.

Random Acts of Linking: Let's take a spin on the URoulette wheel (www.iserv.net/links/roulette.html). Pretty boring this time ... : www.southwoods.com. The site claims "Camping Excellence Since 1946." And it looks like a nice weekend getaway really. If you're a New Yorker. Why go to the Adirondacks when you can visit, say, Fort Davis, at http://fortdavis.crystalball.com/ fortdavis.html.

Weak Link o' the Week: If suspended animation is your thing, you simply must visit www.europa.com/~rsc/formald1.htm, where there resides a thesis on "the biostatic and anti-neoplastic potentialities of formaldehyde." Not leisure time reading by any means. And sorry, no pictures, but maybe an innovative science project for your 5th grader.

CLEANING: Directory wipeout an option

(From 1B)

Panel, select Add/Remove Programs, scroll down the list until you find the program you want to toss out, and order it removed. If the omens are right and you have lived righteously, it will be done.

Otherwise, you can check the program itself for an uninstall routine. This can often be found by clicking on the program name after hitting the Start button and selecting Programs.

If all this fails, of course, there is nothing left to do but use Explorer to wipe out the directory. The problem is that this is somewhat akin to mowing weeds — the roots are still there, in the Registry. They don't grow a new and dreadfully mutated program, but they do hang around, cluttering up the Registry, and if you do this often enough the whole thing starts to resemble a yak on a bad hair day and becomes very slow and grumpy.

The evidence of all this was quite clear in looking at the registry program list in the Add/Remove Program section of the Control Panel. Fully half of the programs there were no longer on the computer. Actually, shards of them still existed here and there, mostly bits and pieces of games. Neither user of this computer pays much attention when installing programs. As a result, there was not only a Program Files directory in C:, but also in D:, E:, F: and G:. I found the same directory full of text files in three different logical drives.

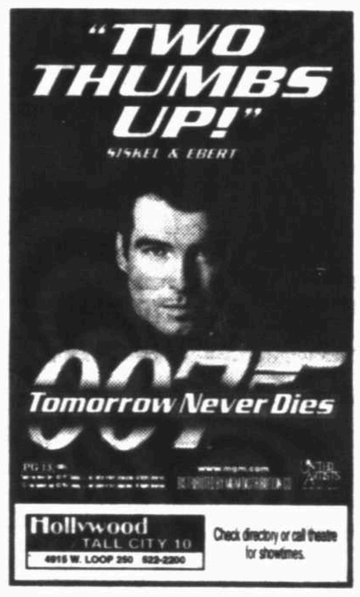

After carefully plucking out the remnants and the duplications, I used the Registry Wizard in Helix's Nuts & Bolts to do some repair work. There were several screens full of orphans — apparent references to nonexistent programs. All were excised and dumped into an archived file in case some really were needed. None was, as it turned out.

Next, the missus was finding it awkward to deal with so many logical drives. So I copied all the stuff on E: onto Zip disks and opened up a new program, Extra-Strength Partition-It from Quarterdeck. Partition-It is a relatively easy to use program to manipulate the partitions on your hard drive.

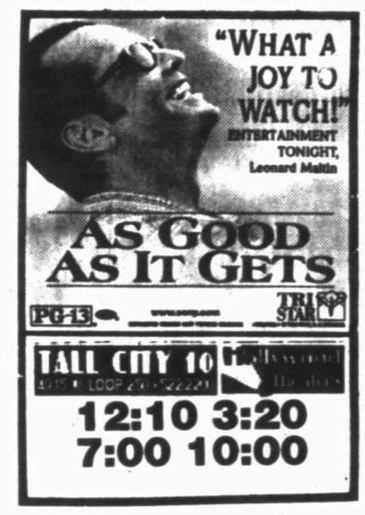

With a couple of key strokes, it knocked out the logical Drive E:, leaving a big chunk of empty space between D: and F:. That space was then just as quickly added to D: without disturbing any of the data on that drive.

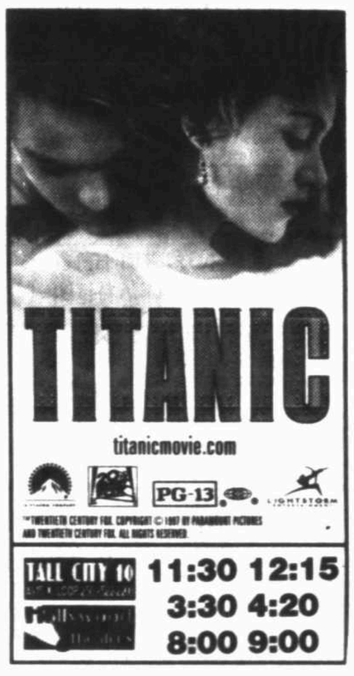

In case you find this confusing, understand that there is a difference between a physical drive and a logical drive. A physical drive is the whole piece of hardware — a hard disk. Instead of allowing the whole thing to exist as C:, it is more efficient to divide that disk up into smaller logical drives.

Family focus of education series at Holy Trinity

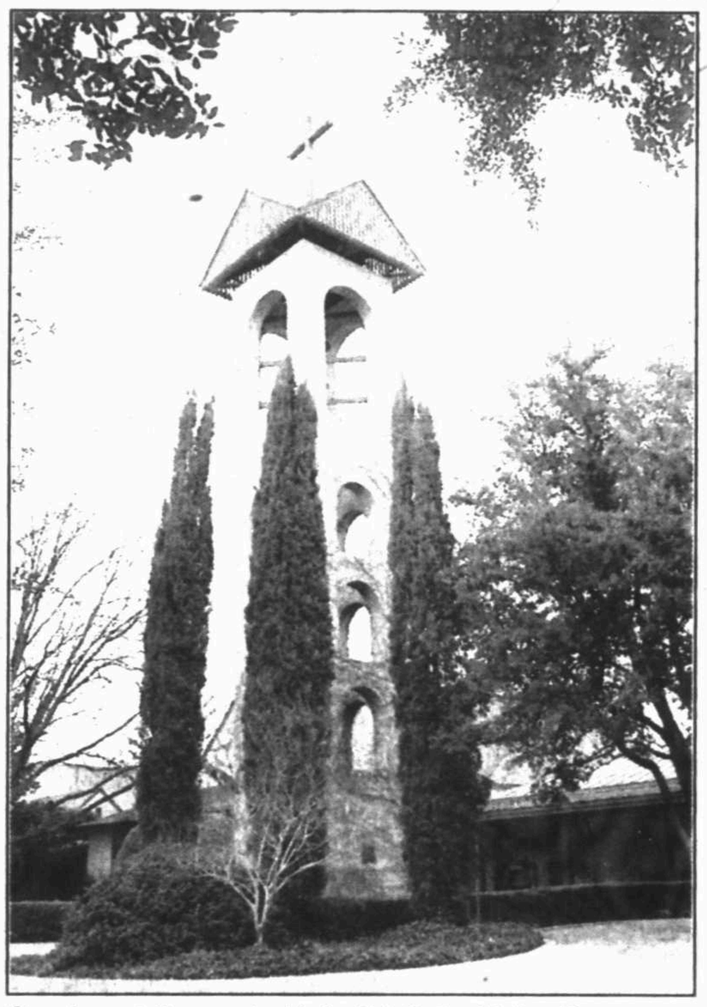

By Jimmy Patterson
Staff writer

In the second part of a multi-part series on the family, the Episcopal Church of the Holy Trinity will welcome the Rev. Dr. Jerry Kelly during its 10:05 a.m. adult religious education class Sunday. The class will be conducted in the church's Parish Hall.

According to the Rev. Stockton Williams, Rector at Holy Trinity, Dr. Kelly will speak on the characteristics of a healthy family.

"It is part of a series we're doing on community and the theology of communities in both families at home and the parish family," Rev. Williams said. "How can we best be a family for children, our youth and the elderly."

Dr. Kelly is executive director of the Samaritan Counseling Center, on West County Road 116.
Holy Trinity's family series began last week with an overview of the theology of the family, by Angela Hawk.

Sunday at 6 p.m. is Holy Trinity's Alpha Course, a series of classes in the basics of Christianity.

Other adult classes featured at Holy Trinity include a course co-taught by Kerry Faudree, a local counselor, and Marshall Mason, former Rector at Holy Trinity and himself a counselor.
The class, taught year-round, "looks at the blocks to spiritual growth using the 12-step model, but it's not just for people in 12-step programs," Rev. Williams said.

Dr. Jim May, who writes a weekly column, "Family Matters" for the Reporter-Telegram, also teaches a Bible study every Sunday at 10:05 a.m. "Right now," Rev. Williams said, "he is going through some of the New Testament epistles such as Peter and James."

Sunday at 6 p.m. is Holy Trinity's Alpha Course, a series of classes in the basics of Christianity.

"It was a course developed first in the church of England," Rev. Williams said. "We use videos, and look at questions such as, 'Who is Jesus?', 'Why did Jesus die?' and 'How can we be sure of our faith?'

Sunday's celebrations of Holy Eucharist at Holy Trinity are at 8 a.m., 9 a.m., 11:05 a.m. and 5:15 p.m. Christian education classes are at 10:05 a.m. Weekday services are scheduled at 5:15 p.m., Monday; 7 a.m., Tues., and Wed., and 11 a.m., Thurs.

For more information, contact Holy Trinity at 683-4207 or drop by 1412 W. Illinois.

Groupware shaping up to be one of '98's top technology stories

By Hiawatha Bray
N.Y. Times News Service

I've seen quite a few predictions on where the chips will fall in 1998. Yet none has mentioned one of the most interesting technology stories of the year ahead: groupware.

By simply using the word, I've divided my audience into two camps: those who think groupware is yesterday's news, and those who have no idea what I'm talking about. Message to Camp One: You're wrong. Message to Camp Two: Let me explain.

Groupware is software that runs on networks of computers and allows employees to coordinate their activities by easily sharing files and messages. It sounds simple. But nobody did it properly until Lotus Development Corp. brought out Notes, the first product designed for the purpose.

Groupware is a lot more complex than mere e-mail. For instance, with groupware you can set up a workgroup in which some files are available to all members, while others can only be read by a few. And if your office network allows it, workers a thousand miles away can dial in and join the group.

In the past five years, groupware has become one of the most dynamic segments of the software trade. Lotus, which is owned by International Business Machines Corp., still dominates. Microsoft Corp. and Netscape Communications Corp. are spending millions to catch up.

But groupware is costly stuff. Thousands of small businesses and millions of self-employed folks can't afford Notes, which starts around $1,300 for a Domino server and $70 per seat for Notes client software. Say you run a small firm and you want to share information with colleagues around the country. That's exactly what Lotus Notes is for; too bad you'd have to mortgage the house to pay for it.

What's needed is groupware for the rest of us — cut-rate products that can run over the Internet. Lotus understands. Last year the company introduced Instant Teamroom, a groupware-for-rent service that any company can afford.

Instant Teamroom is offered through several major Internet service providers, including Netcom On-Line Communication Services Inc. Anybody with a credit card can sign up on the Web, at a charge of $14.95 a month for each person using the service.

In exchange you get a virtual meeting room, accessible through any Internet browser. Here the group members can exchange data, discuss the project, and track its progress. As with Lotus Notes, Instant Teamroom lets the group leader set limits on what group members can do. If you want to discuss pricing issues with Sally but not with Sam, create a discussion area that only Sally can view.

Lotus introduced Instant Teamroom six months ago, and has high hopes for it. It figures that Internet providers in search of a competitive edge will buy the product for resale to customers.

The plan might work, but not without some tweaking, because Instant Teamroom is about to get some serious competition.

Netopia Inc. is best-known for its excellent Timbuktu Pro software, which lets business travelers remotely control their desktop computers. Now Netopia has come up with a new product called Virtual Office, a simple, cheap groupware alternative that could be one of the big software hits of 1998.

Netopia has made a deal with GeoCities, one of the big Internet sites offering free Web space to all comers. Your Virtual Office site won't be free, but it's mighty cheap — $49.95 for the first year and $19.95 for each additional year. And unlike Instant Teamroom, there's no usage charge for other members of the group. Only the leader pays. At these prices, your kids can use Virtual Office to do homework with friends.

Microsoft has 250,000 subscribers for WebTV

By David Evans
N.Y. Times News Service

Microsoft Corp. has 250,000 subscribers paying $19.95 a month to its WebTV Internet Service for buyers of its WebTV set top box, a Microsoft executive said.

Nearly all bought the Classic $199 WebTV model, because of delays that prevented the improved WebTV Plus from reaching most stores in time for Christmas, the timetable announced in September.

WebTV is manufactured by original equipment manufacturers licensed by Microsoft, including Sony Corp. and Philips Magnavox. The device allows users to surf the Internet on their TVs without a computer.

"We don't feel there was good execution on our part or the OEM's," said Craig Mundie, senior vice president of the consumer platforms division of Microsoft, in an interview at the Consumer Electronics Show in Las Vegas. "We feel bad about that."

He said all WebTV units on store shelves were sold out by year's end.

Mundie said Microsoft's focus on the living room will intensify in the second half of 1998 when it introduces a version of its Windows CE operating system for WebTV.

Subscribers pay Microsoft $19.95 a month for its service.

WebTV's principal competitor is the RCA Network Computer from Thomson Consumer Electronics which also sells for $199. It uses technology from Network Computer Inc., a unit of Oracle Corp.

Lower prices have helped WebTV sales.

During the last quarter of 1997, Microsoft offered a $100 rebate to WebTV purchasers, bringing their final cost down to $99, half the price of the Network Computer, and as much as two-thirds less than the price of other web appliances.

The WebPal from Newcom Inc. will sell for $349. The UniView from Curtis Mathes Holding Corp. is $399, as is the ViaTV VC55 from 8x8 Inc. that also allows video conferencing over a phone line. The Websurfer from Batra Inc. is $249 and Zilog Inc. makes a $250 unit.

A year ago, priced at $329, only about 30,000 units of WebTV were purchased during the 1996 Christmas season, said Mundie. He said one million subscribers by the end of 1998 is a "reasonable objective."

"We're just doing the best marketing we know how for new categories," he said.

'Net can be used to keep tabs on day care

By Gracie Bond Staples
N.Y. Times News Service

FORT WORTH — It was around midday when Skip Collins logged onto the Internet and spied a group of kids — with the exception of his 4-year-old son, Casey — mesmerized by the telling of a story.

Apparently more enchanted with hanging from a bookcase, Casey had abandoned the group to do his own thing.

That didn't sit well with Collins, who with the click of a computer mouse had literally caught Casey in the act.

Two years ago, logging onto a company computer to monitor a child's daily activities was about as possible as a parent taking a sick day for himself.

But now, thanks to the Internet, a growing number of parents can monitor the daily grind at their children's day-care centers without leaving the office.

"I've always been told by people that you should from time to time pop in to check on your children," Collins said. "This allows me to do that."

Crayon Campus in Grand Prairie, Texas, where Casey spends the day, is one of a dozen centers in Texas and Indiana wired with Online Video Communication's Watch Me! system.

Parents and relatives can log on and view images piped onto a secure Web site from closed-circuit television cameras installed in the day-care center.

In addition to Online Video Communications of Dallas, two other companies are marketing such systems nationwide: ParentNet of Roswell, Ga., offers Kindercam; and Simplex Knowledge Co. of White Plains, N.Y., sells I See You.

Frank Wagner, vice president of nationwide marketing for Online Video Communications, said Watch Me! was conceived in July 1996 when he and his wife, Amy, discovered they were expecting their first child.

"Discussing everything about having a child with my wife, it just seemed to upset her to have to work, and that's just a fact of life for us," Wagner said. "We thought, 'Wouldn't it be neat to look into child care while we're working?' "

When Wagner mentioned the idea to his partner, Eric Foster, the two of them put together a business plan and got rolling.

"Now a year and a half later," he said, "the momentum is really starting to pick up."

Watch Me! is now in 12 centers, the majority in the Fort Worth-Dallas area, plus one in Austin, Texas, one in Indianapolis, Ind., and two in Houston.

"Parents don't always get to see all the good things happening during the day, the learning, the naps, even," said Wagner. "This is a fantastic opportunity for them to do that."

Although the systems are touted as a way to foster better relationships among parents, children and day-care providers, critics fear the cameras could turn into an invasion of privacy and provide access to pedophiles.

"The Big Brother aspect is there, but in 11 months we haven't had one complaint from teachers or parents," said Wagner. "It helps centers because parents feel more secure."

Costs for the systems vary. The average cost to a center for the Watch Me! system is $200 to $250 a month for three years. For $20 a month, parents and their relatives and friends may access the service with the proper password.

Wagner said the system gets in excess of 20,000 hits a day from parents.

Collins, a project manager for J.C. Penney, said he checks on Casey about three times a day: once after arriving at work, during lunch and after Casey's nap time.

"In reality, you get the pang of wanting to see your kid during the day," said Collins. "Besides, he's a cool kid. I actually have people come by a couple of times a week who say, 'Log on, let's see your kid.' "

At Crayon Campus and Children's Courtyard, which also has installed the system at some of its centers, the response to Watch Me! has been tremendous, officials said.

"We haven't had a single complaint from parents or staff," said Rhonda Goffinet, who runs Crayon Campus with her sister, Jan Joyce. "It hasn't changed a thing."

At first, Norma Belcher, who teaches 4-year-olds at Crayon Campus, saw the system as an invasion of privacy. "I had a drawback, feeling all the time I had to be careful, constantly looking over my shoulder, but I'm really comfortable with it now. I see it as another source of comfort for parents, and that's what I'd want."

Joyce Anderson, vice president of education for Children's Courtyard, said five of its 22 centers in the Fort Worth-Dallas area have the Watch Me! system. And her company is in the process of implementing Watch Me! in a center for IBM, Allstate and Xerox in Irving.

"The reason we like it is we have an open-door policy," said Anderson. "That's nice, but most parents can't take advantage of it because they work. This extends the policy to them."

When Elaine Fogarty first began leaving her son, Colin, at Crayon Campus, the 13-month-old would cry uncontrollably. Leaving him was the hardest thing she ever did.

"But when I would log on after getting to work, I could see that he was playing, not sitting and crying," she said. "So obviously, I'm very happy with Watch Me!"

BUY: Pay careful attention to offer details while browsing ads

this week, I've seen Pentium machines running at 233 megahertz — PCs with 4-gigabyte-or-better hard disks, 32 megabytes of memory and built-in 56k bps modems — selling for around $1,200. I saw an ad for a national retailer for the state-of-the-art Pentium II machine (this one is an IBM brand, not just an IBM-compatible) that runs at 233 megahertz for $1,800.

Folks, these are good prices and — for the most part — good machines. Prices may keep dropping but, since margins are so slim in the computer business, I don't expect to see a new dramatic drop soon.

So brush off your credit card and start clipping the ads.

I do have a bit of advice when it comes to shopping, though.

Pay careful attention to the details of the offer when you are browsing the ads. Some of the computer systems that I see advertised come with chips made by manufacturers other than Intel. There's nothing wrong with that, nor is there anything bad about the competing processor chips from manufacturers that include AMD and Cyrix. If you've researched those chips and feel comfortable with them, go right ahead and take advantage of the lower prices (usually about 10 percent to 20 percent less than a machine with an Intel chip). But it's just common sense to know what you're buying.

Another caution: Some ads offer prices that include monitors and printers. Others do not. So prepare your own checklist of specifications so that — when you compare prices — you do a good job.

Finally, to avoid the inevitable letdown, keep in mind that — no matter how great a bargain you get — you are almost certain to see an even better deal within days of buying the PC.

Some scholars expect papal visit next week to have lasting impact on religious freedom in Cuba

By David Briggs
Associated Press

Pope John Paul II leaves few places unchanged by his presence. In his native Poland, his outspoken defense of political and religious freedom may have helped alter world history.

So it is no surprise that his first visit to Cuba next week has raised the hopes of many Catholics on and off the island. But what are reasonable expectations for this initial encounter between Fidel Castro and the spiritual leader of some 4.5 million Cuban Catholics?

In interviews with leading scholars, there is general agreement the papal visit may help consolidate recent gains in religious freedom in Cuba. But no one expects another Poland.

"It's a very tempting comparison, but it doesn't work," said George Weigel, director of the Ethics and Public Policy Center in Washington who is working on a biography of John Paul.

First of all, the pope is not Cuban. And unlike Poland, Weigel notes, the Catholic Church in Cuba has not been a repository of nationalist identity, nor does it represent a majority of the population.

"The pope is not going as a political figure. He's not going as a diplomat," Weigel said. "He's going as a pastor to strengthen the Cuban Church."

Some goals the church may accomplish with the papal visit are loosening visa restrictions to permit other Latin American clergy to serve in Cuba, becoming an independent charitable agency and gaining a presence in the public media, Weigel said.

Cuba was officially atheist from the early 1960s until 1992. Even before the papal visit, however, officials had softened their approach toward religion.

In 1991, Catholics and other believers were granted permission to join the Communist Party. Open-air Masses are being celebrated by Cardinal Jaime Ortega, faithful are going door to door, and catechism classes are being held for hundreds of Cubans nurtured on the philosophies of Marx and Lenin.

Segundo Pantoja of the City University of New York, one of a group of scholars on Latin America who visited Cuba in March, said people there reported a tremendous rise in religious activity, both Catholic and Protestant.

"Religion has been thriving in the last 10 years, compared with the last 30 years, and people see that the visit of the pope can be a catalyst for many people to go back to the church," he said.

AP Photo

Rome's Mayor Francesco Rutelli watches Pope John Paul II sign the guest book inside the City Hall where he paid an official visit, the first in 30 years, in Rome Thursday. The pope visits Cuba next week.

Among more political aims, Pantoja said, there also are hopes in Cuba that the papal visit will embolden government critics and that the pope's firsthand look at the effects of the U.S. economic embargo will prompt him to speak out more strongly for its repeal.

Another scholar who does not expect "anything radical" to come out of the papal visit is Yoland Prieto, a sociologist at Ramapo College in Ramapo, N.J., who with Pantoja visited Cuba and was part of a panel on Cuban religion today at the November meeting of the Society for the Scientific Study of Religion.

But she does expect closer U.S.-Cuba relations, and the "bit by bit, piece by piece" relaxation of some sanctions such as the embargo on humanitarian aid.

Ryan as owner?

AUSTIN — Nolan Ryan may be headed for a new job in baseball — owner.

A group headed by Ryan and his son Reid are trying to acquire a Texas League franchise that would be moved to Central Texas, the Austin American-Statesman reported Friday.

The Ryans would not say Thursday whether they are negotiating with any particular team in the eight-team league, but the Class AA franchises in Jackson, Miss., and Wichita, Kan., have had attendance problems, and their leases expire in the next two years.

Cooper girls nip MHS, take 4-5A lead

By Lee Passmore
Sports Writer

In Friday night's match-up with Abilene Cooper for sole possession of first place in District 4-5A, the Midland High girls basketball team did a lot of things right in order to win the game.

However, the game came down to that old basketball adage about there being only two great plays — South Pacific and put the ball in the basket. With there being little chance of the Lady Dawgs breaking into song in the MHS gym, they had to rely on the latter for victory, but they couldn't do that quite enough times.

A desperation 3-point attempt by freshman Edrea Rogers fell short as time expired, dooming Midland High to a 49-46 loss and giving Cooper the lead in the district as the first half of 4-5A play came to a close. As gutty an effort as the Lady Dawgs made in rallying from an eight-point deficit with a minute left to an opportunity to force overtime in the final seconds, the final missed shot of the game was somewhat symbolic for Midland High (13-8 overall, 4-2 in district).

The Lady Dawgs made only 18-of-70 shots from the field, and particularly struggled in the second quarter when they hit only two-of-18.

"Obviously we didn't shoot the ball very well," said a subdued Midland High coach Jim Raughton in reflecting on the loss. "I don't know what to say really."

Cooper (15-8, 5-1) didn't shoot that much better from the field, making only 11-of-37 shots, but where the Lady Cougars won the game was from the free-throw line, making 26-of-31 attempts, including 12-of-14 in the fourth quarter.

In fact, Cooper's final 12 points came from the charity stripe, after taking the lead for good, 37-35, on an offensive rebound by Robin Padgett. The Cougars began their parade to the line from there, and when Tamara Hunt made the back end of a double bonus, Cooper led 47-39 with exactly a minute remaining in the game.

That lead might have appeared safe, but Cooper coach Kirk Ellis wasn't buying it.

"We have not had much luck in this gym since I've been at Cooper," said Ellis, who has been at Cooper three years. "This is a tough place to win. I felt confident but not secure."

And with good reason. Sonia Castillo scored on a layup

Rebels survive two overtimes against Eagles

■ Lee boys end up on winning side of overtime this time.

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

Midland Lee played its second consecutive overtime game in District 4-5A play at Chaparral Center Friday night, but there was one big difference.

This time they got it down right.

The Rebels defeated Abilene High 82-81 in double overtime, one week after losing 51-50 to Abilene Cooper last Friday.

"I guess I ought to change my initials to O.T. House," Lee basketball coach Jon House said after the win that lifted his 2-2 Rebels back into the thick of the 4-5A playoff hunt.

Charncy Ephriam, who had 27 points and an amazing 21 rebounds, got the game-winning basket with 16 seconds left in the second overtime on a rebound put back off a shot by Matt Winston that just rolled off the rim.

Winston, too, contributed in a big way to the Lee victory, scoring a career-high 27 points to go with 12 rebounds, his first double-double of his career. Only Tuesday against Hobbs, N.M., Winston turned in a career-high 15 points. Now he's suddenly a scorer.

"I guess you could say this is a career week for me," Winston said of his 42 points in the last two games. "I guess it helps to play against some smaller guys, and when (Odis) Dalton fouled out in the fourth quarter, that made it a lot easier."

Abilene's Terrance Crisp sent the game into the second overtime with a 3-point shot with 38 seconds left to knot the game at 76-76. It was Crisp who had missed two free throw chances with seven seconds left in regulation that sent the game into the first overtime with the teams tied at 71-71.

Lee's Aaron Erdwurm, who had only two points in regulation play, came up big in the two overtime periods, scoring seven of Lee's 11 points in extra time.

"We just had a lot of people come up big in the overtime periods. Erdwurm was huge for us when we got to overtime, Charncy hit the winning basket and Matt Winston just had a big, big game for us overall. We found a way to win one."

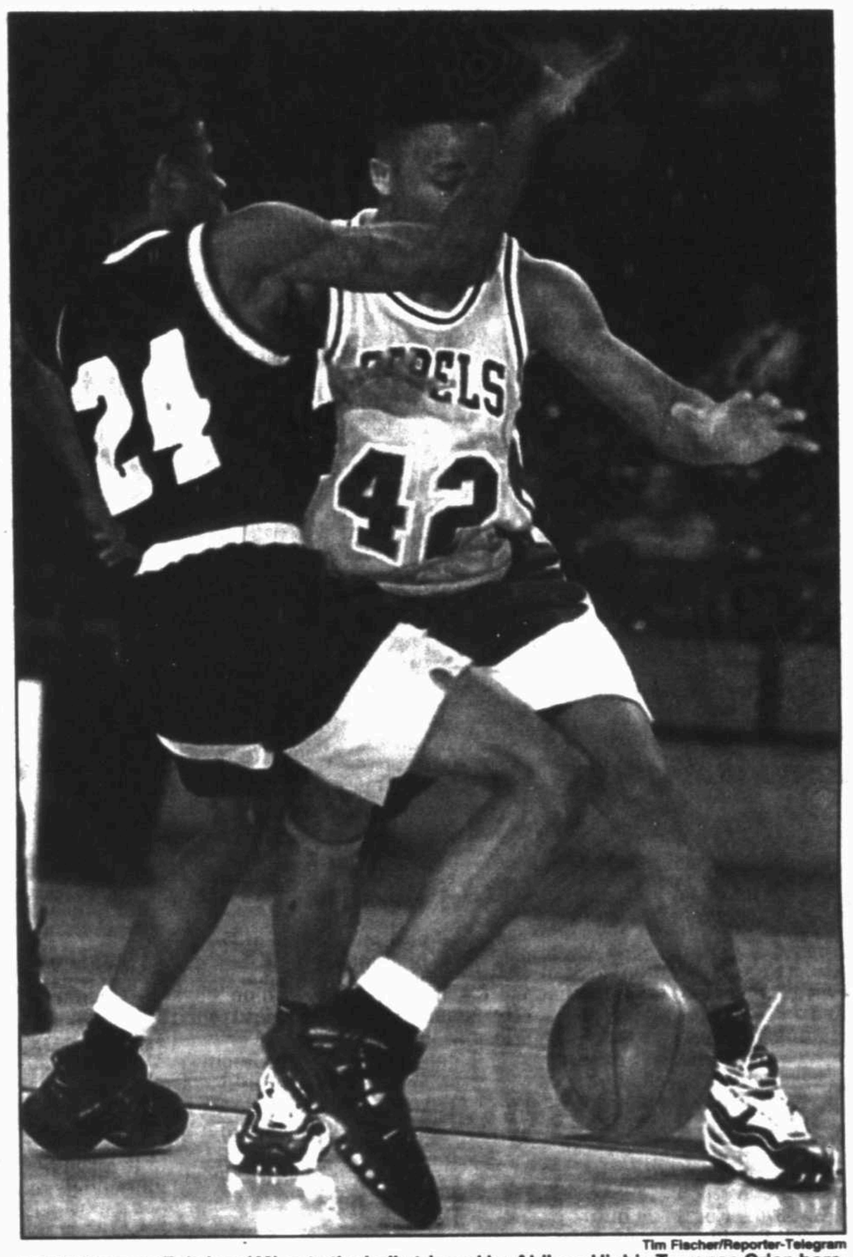

House, and his team, don't even want to think about what the playoff prospects would be had they dropped this one. Lee is now back in the thick of the playoff hunt as all teams are in the two-loss mode except for league leading Midland High (5-0).

"It would have been tough to lose this one," Ephriam said. "Someone had to step up and I had a lot of pressure on me and missed some shots. This was a big win for us."

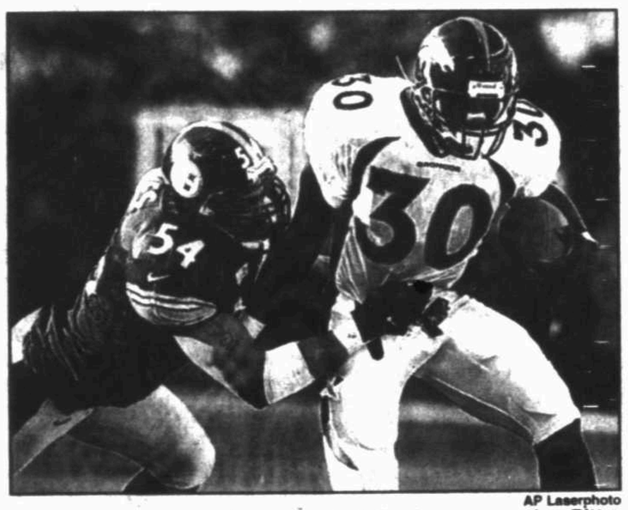

House added, "It's going to be this way. Just look at all the overtime games in the district so far. All the teams are just about dead even and it's going to be a battle. At least, this win makes it a little easier to go on. I don't even want to think about being 1-3. That would have been tough, but now all the teams (except MHS) has at least two losses."

Guard Robert House was almost lost in the final conclusion. He turned in

Davis could break two more records

By John Mossman
AP Sports Writer

DENVER — In what has already been a record-breaking season, Terrell Davis of the Denver Broncos is poised to make more history.

With only only 12 attempts and 39 yards against Green Bay in the Super Bowl on Jan. 25, he would establish NFL records for yards and carries in a single season.

In 18 games — including three in the postseason — he has run for 2,174 yards, which ranks second in NFL history to the 2,212 yards of the Los Angeles Rams' Eric Dickerson during 17 games in 1984.

Davis also is tied with Dallas' Emmitt Smith for the second-most carries in a season at 451. Only Washington's John Riggins, who had 462 rushing attempts in 19 games in 1983, has more.

"Man, I've seen a lot of great running backs, and to come up with those kinds of numbers, that's kind of wild," Davis said. "It doesn't seem like I have that many."

When Davis drags his tired body into the training room, however, it does seem like that many.

Besides the usual bumps and bruises that are a running back's lot, Davis has in the last month endured a slightly separated right shoulder and bruised ribs.

"I'm beat up," he said. "But I think these types of injuries could have happened the first couple of weeks of the season. I feel good, actually. I'm not really dragging like I thought I would be at this point."

Jones pares list of candidates, tells assistants to look around

By Josie Karp
Fort Worth Star-Telegram

IRVING — As Cowboys owner Jerry Jones moved closer to finding a new head coach Friday, some of the team's offensive assistants said they are looking for new jobs.

"I was told by (Jones) that we are open to look for other jobs," said Hudson Houck, assistant head coach and offensive line coach. "When you're told to look for a job, I take that as meaning go out and explore all your opportunities."

Jones said he has narrowed down his list of head-coaching candidates to three. But he said so with a word of caution.

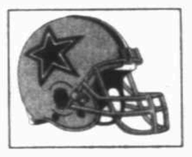

"Because of what I'm doing, that number could expand or be reduced within any 24-hour period," Jones said. "I'm evaluating and interviewing."

Jones also said Friday that he is in the process of interviewing more than just head-coaching candidates. One of those candidates might be Minnesota Vikings offensive coordinator Brian Billick.

"I'm talking to coaches that could potentially be staff members other than head coach," Jones said yesterday from New York. "A part of the process is to evaluate what our options are."

Jones was denied permission to interview Billick earlier this week.

But Billick's agent, Ray Anderson, said Friday that he is trying to reach a resolution that would allow Billick to interview with interested teams. The Vikings are on the verge of being sold, and the coaching staff is uncertain about its future there.

"Brian Billick and the entire Vikings coaching staff are operating under a unique set of circumstances," Anderson said. "There may be reasons why he should be able to talk to Jerry Jones. We're trying to work through issues. We'd like to believe (Billick's potential with the Cowboys) is not a dead issue."

Jones' initial inquiry into Billick seems to be a sign that offensive coordinator Ernie Zampese will not return. If another team is interested in talking with a Cowboys assistant coach currently under contract, league rules require those teams to ask Jones for permission. Jones has indicated to several coaches that permission would be granted.

Among the other Cowboys assistants who said they are looking for jobs are quarterbacks coach Jack Reilly and receivers coach Hubbard Alexander.

Although Reilly said he does not have any formal interviews set up, he acknowledged that he has begun the process of investigating opportunities outside of the Cowboys' organization.

"I think it's just a networking thing ... you talk to

Chaps protest last-second loss

By Oscar LeRoy
Sports Writer

Midland College filed a formal protest Friday with the Western Junior College Athletic Conference regarding Thursday night's controversial 66-65 loss by the Chaparrals at New Mexico Junior College.

The protest, filed by college president Dr. David E. Daniel's office, is contending the way a technical foul was called on the MC bench with 0.2 seconds left in the game, eventually leading to NMJC hitting two foul shots and winning the contest.

The Thunderbirds took a 64-63 lead with a little more than five seconds left in the game. The Chaps then took the ball down the court and Alu Williams hit a jumper giving MC a 65-64 lead, prompting several MC players to leave the bench in celebration with 0.2 seconds left. The officials then gave MC a technical foul for the players leaving the bench, sending NMJC to the free-throw line for the game-winning shots.

In a letter sent to WJCAC commissioner John Green, Midland College is "protesting the manner in which the head official called the game-determining technical foul on Midland College. A significant amount of time elapsed before he made the decision to call the technical foul. The technical was called while at the scorer's table in the presence of NMJC's head basketball coach who was urging him to call the technical."

The letter cites three areas in which Midland College recommends a few steps to correct this type of situation from ever happening again in a game:

"1. The calling of the technical foul should either be made at the moment it happens or after the three officials consult in the center of the court, away from the influence of the coaches and the crowd.

"2. When in consultation, the three officials should consider a) that only .2 of a second showed on the clock and that it has been determined by the NJCAA that is impossible to throw the ball in for a score in less than .3 of a second. b) that everyone at the same time that (Midland College) reserves prematurely ran out onto the court

Bulldogs roll over Cooper

Staff Report

ABILENE — Add another win to Midland High's District 4-5A winning streak.

The defending 4-5A champs and sixth-ranked team in Class 5A according the Texas Association of Basketball Coaches poll got win No. 20, and not without a struggle Friday, defeating Abilene Cooper 65-55.

Charles Tatum hit for a game-high 28 points in the MHS win, its 41st in their last 43 games and 16th-straight victory. MHS' last loss came in a pre-district tournament, falling to another team in state's top 10 (San Antonio Taft).

The win wasn't a blowout, but it didn't have to be. Midland High trailed by a point at the half (30-29), but the Purple Pack took the lead in the second half, spreading it out in the fourth quarter, thanks to 21-10 run.

"People expect us to win by 20, 30 and 40, but we can't do that every night," MHS coach Jack Stephenson said. "Abilene Cooper did a great job and played very, very well, but we do what we have to do to win. The snowball keeps getting bigger."

Playing on the road can also makes things tough. The 22-1 Bulldogs now come home for their next three district games.

"I have been here when we haven't won before," Stephenson said. "Now we have three in a row at home. It will be nice to be home."

Tatum, who had seven of MHS' eight 3-point field goals, was one of three Bulldogs in double figures. Senior Kirby Lemons added 14 and junior Jay Christian threw in 11.

For Cooper (9-11 and 2-2) Felton Freeman scored 19 and Kyle Scott added 16.

The Coogs now fall into a third place tie with Odessa Permian and Midland Lee. Midland High (5-0 in loop play) leads the district by two games over 3-2 Abilene High.

Lady Eagles get past Lady Rebs

Staff Report

ABILENE — The Midland Lee girls basketball team had a golden opportunity to move into a tie for third in District 4-5A Friday night, but had a hard time getting started.

The Lady Rebels scored only five points in the first quarter and played catch-up the rest of the way in losing to Abilene High 58-53. Instead of being in a four-way tie for third in the district, Lee fell to 6-14 overall and 2-4 in 4-5A and now sits in sixth place. The win gave Abilene High (10-12, 1-5) its first district win of the season.

It might have been a different story for the Lady Rebels if they had gotten off to a better start, but after falling behind 13-5 in the first quarter it was all uphill. Keke Strambler led Lee with 21 points while sophomore Rochelle Warren added 11.

For Abilene High, Sara Laster and Misty Mays each scored 10 points.

It was certainly one of the more physical girls games in the district this season. Both teams were whistled for 29 fouls. Lee went to the free throw line 37 times while Abilene High went an even more staggering 48 times.

Abilene High won the junior varsity game 47-32.

OTHER 4-5A ACTION: San Angelo Central forced a three-way logjam for third place with a 61-45 victory over Odessa High. Kanesha Randle had 26 points and 12 rebounds for Central (13-8, 3-3) while Kerry Hocker added 12 points and Camille DeLaCruz had 11. Barkley won't face charges until after season

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Charles Barkley won't have to face trial on charges that he threw a man through a bar window until after the basketball season.

Orange County Judge C. Jeffrey Arnold on Friday delayed Barkley's misdemeanor trial until July to accommodate the athlete's playing schedule, The Orlando Sentinel reported.

The Houston Rockets player is accused of throwing Jorge Lugo into a mirror during an October confrontation at a bar.

Barkley, 34, faces charges of disorderly conduct, battery, criminal mischief and resisting arrest without violence. Lugo, 20, is charged with misdemeanor disorderly conduct.

Witnesses say the incident began when Lugo threw ice and a glass at Barkley's table.

MHS: Lady Cougars take over first place for the Lady Dawgs to cut the margin to 47-41, and after Cooper's Ashley Varner was whistled for a technical, Midland High's Heidi Lange sank two free throws with 31.29 seconds left to make it 47-43. Lange then sank a 3-pointer to cut it to 47-46 in the waning seconds before the Lady Dawgs fouled Cooper's Catherine Weir with 4.57 seconds left.

(From 1C)

Weir, who had a game-high 20 points and made 12-of-15 free throws, made both attempts to give Cooper a three-point cushion. MHS then inbounded the ball under its own basket and rushed up the floor and Rogers hurried up a 3-point shot which never looked like it had a chance.

Although the Lady Dawgs came up short, they rose to the occasion late in the game and almost pulled off a win, signaling a moral victory, if not one in the win column.

"I'm not disappointed in the effort," Raughton said. "The kids made a great effort the whole game. I wish we'd been a little more patient in the half court offense."

Lange led Midland High with 16 points and nine rebounds and scored eight points in the fourth quarter. Rebecca Nobles added 15. Padgett scored 10 for Cooper.

The eight-point lead with a minute left was the biggest of the game for either team. MHS held a slim lead for most of the first half, never leading by more than six. When Weir made a pair of free throws just before halftime, the two teams went into the locker room tied at 19-19.

In the junior varsity game, Midland High had a big lead most of the way in cruising to a 73-56 win. Niki Green and Vanessa Moore each scored 11 points while Teryl Arnold and Lindsey Leaverton scored 10 apiece.

Rebels move into all-District 7 semis of ECISD soccer tourney

Staff Report

ODESSA — With two goals in the last eight minutes of their quarterfinal game with El Paso Socorro, the Midland Lee boys soccer team advanced to the semifinals of the ECISD Soccer Tournament.

Lee will play Odessa Permian at 9 a.m. at Pease Elementary while Odessa High and San Angelo Central compete in the other semifinal and complete the all-District 7 final four.

"It says a lot for our district," Lee coach John McCulloch said. "It will be a tough district. These games will be hard fought games. Hopefully we can last two games without an injury. If we do (have an injury), it could be devasting."

Lee will be without stopper Colter Marcum who was injured in Friday's action, but that didn't seem to be too much of a problem as the Rebs (4-2 overall) scored two goals in the last eight mintues to defeat Socorro 2-1.

In that game, Marcum was out, and Troy Henry and Josh Pressler were sitting on the bench after reveiving yellow cards. However, Matt Dickinson and Justin Smith took over. With eight minutes left and down 1-0, Dickinson took a through ball from Smith and scored. Then with six minutes left Smith scored on an identical pass from Dickinson. For the game, Lee outshot El Paso 20-9.

"We're just trying to put something together and get opporutnities," McCulloch said. "They weren't going in, but we kept attacking. Our persistence was excellent and it paid off. We put one goal in, we get ready for a shootout, and they put another one in."

Lee defeated El Paso Irvin 4-1 in its first game Friday.

Lee, which outshot Irvin 17-7, got three goals towards the end of the second half to break open a 1-1 game. Dickinson, Henry, Aurelio Munoz and Jeremy Swanson all scored for Lee. Henry, Smith, Marcum and Russell Matchull all distributed assists.

Lee's Shane Fisher picked up two wins in goal.

With a win against Permian, Lee will play at 3 p.m. at Ector Junior High. A loss means a spot in the third place game at 1 p.m.

MHS boys make tourney finals

DUNCANVILLE — The Midland High boys made it to the championship game of of the Duncanville Tournament with a 3-2 win over Bryan Adams in the semifinals.

This is the first time for MHS (3-2) to make the finals of the tournament in the past three years that the Bulldogs have played there. The Bulldogs will play the winner of the Duncanville-South Garland game at 5 p.m. today.

Despite dominating the first half, Adams took a 1-0 lead at the half with a goal in the 38th minute. MHS came back in the second half with a goal by Russel Jones off an assist by Zach Inman in the 60th minute. Inman scored the first of his two goals on the day in the 60th minute off a dish by Greg Hunter. After Adams tied the game in the 67th minute, Inman scored his second goal on a booming shot from midfield for the win in the 70th minute.

MHS out-shot Bryan Adams 17-6 in the game and goalie Justin Booth had two saves.

"I think we played well but we need to get a lead early when we get the chance so we won't have to come from behind," said MHS coach Tom Esikhati "I'm pleased overall with the team. The boys played extremely well today."

The Bulldogs will be without senior forward Jeremie Piette in today's championship game because of getting a red card in Friday's game.

Midland High girls makes tournament final

LUBBOCK — The Midland High girls soccer team advanced to the finals of the Lubbock Inivitational with wins over Lubbock High Amarillo High Friday.

In the semifinals, MHS defeated Lubbock High 3-0 as Melinda Baca scored two goals and Jodie Mitchell added her eighth of the season. Mitchell and Brenna Byerlotzer dished out assists for the 8-0 Lady Bulldogs. Lubbock High had defeated MHS in a preseason scrimmage.

"I felt like that was the best game we played," MHS coach Scott Hodkinson said. "It was good to see us play that way. I felt we have potential to play really good soccer. Maybe, we needed the situation to play good soccer."

MHS, which plays the winner of Lubbock Coronado and El Paso Coronado today at 2 p.m, scored two first half goals to defeat Amarillo High. Mitchell scored in the 14th minute with an assist coming from Jill Knottek, who later scored in the 20th minute.

Lady Reb's Linsey Johnson scores hat trick

LEWISVILLE — Freshman forward Linsey Johnson racked up the second hat trick in two games for the Midland Lee Lady Rebels.

Johnson scored three goals as Lee defeated North Mesquite 6-1 in pool play action from the Lewisville Cup.

For Lee, 4-2 overall, Johnson's highlight game came during a team performance where they outshot North Mesquite 17-1. Ritha Belizaire scored her seventh goal of the season just 30 minutes into the game, followed a goal from Cassie Taylor, three from Johnson and one from Desiree Early. Suzy Prucka had a hat trick of her own with three assists. Taylor also had an assist.

"We really started playing well offensively and moving the ball really well," Lee coach Mike Simpson said. "They were talking to each other and playing well with each other."

Lee will play Lewisville in a game the Lady Rebs have to win to finish first in their pool and advance to the 4:30 p.m. championship game. A loss means a trip to the 2:30 p.m. third place game.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
★★★★★ Don't make anything wrong that isn't, not only for you, but also for that special partner in your life. Sweet whisperings, shared intimacy and romance could mix, if you are ready. Are you? It's your call. You are the master of your destiny. Tonight: Warm and snuggly.
PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
★★★★★ You become whimsical and charmed, as a friend makes overtures. As exciting as this is, you might want to think about what you are doing. You are an irresistible romantic; that shines through. Popularity is high. There are even better choices. Tonight: Put on your dancing shoes.

Van Damme ordered to pay $112,000 a month to son and estranged wife

SALT LAKE CITY — There will be no body stockings and pasties in the Utah production of "Joseph and the Amazing Technicolor Dreamcoat."

The star, Donny Osmond, requested more modest attire for Potiphar's seductresses in heavily Mormon Utah, The Salt Lake Tribune said Friday.

"Donny did not believe the costumes in that scene would fly with Utah audiences," an unidentified source told the newspaper.

Donny Osmond nixed usual attire for play's performance in Utah.

When the show opened here Monday at the University of Utah, the costumes used in performances elsewhere were replaced with black vests.

RABAT, Morocco — King Hassan II made Muhammad Ali a member of the Commander of the Arch, one of Morocco's top honors.

The former heavyweight champion received the honor Thursday, the official MAP news agency reported. Ali also received a cassette recording of the Koran, the Muslim holy book.

Ali arrived in Morocco earlier this week for Ramadan, the Muslim holy month.

LOS ANGELES — A judge ordered Jean-Claude Van Damme to pay $112,000 a month to support his 2-year-old son and estranged wife.

The wife of the martial arts star, Darcy LaPier, cited irreconcilable differences when she filed for divorce in 1996. They later reconciled, but she filed for divorce again last year, alleging physical and emotional abuse.

Ms. LaPier had asked for $27,000 a month in child support and $85,000 a month in spousal support during the divorce proceedings.

"This is a new beginning for Darcy that will enable her to get on with her life," her lawyer, Stacy D. Phillips, said Wednesday.

LAWRENCE, Kan. — The University of Kansas, Bill Kurtis' alma mater, will honor the former CBS newsman Feb. 6 with an award from the William Allen White Foundation.

A native of Independence, Kurtis graduated from Kansas in 1962. He anchored the "CBS Morning News" in the 1980s and now produces and serves as host for programs on cable's Arts & Entertainment network.

"This award is one of the most impressive and prestigious invitations that could be extended to let me know how welcome I am back at my college home," he said Friday.

The award is named for the late publisher of the Emporia Gazette.

HONG KONG — Jackie Chan is putting his skills tackling bad guys to use on a new front: saving tigers and other exotic animals used in making traditional Chinese medicines.

"Some forms of Chinese medicine are a hoax and I don't believe in them," the martial arts star, who is immensely popular in Asia, said Friday. "I want to tell Asians not to use these products."

Jackie Chan's battling some Chinese on using tigers for medicinal purposes.

Tiger bones and bear gall bladders are used in Chinese medicines. Chan said herbal alternatives and Western medicine should be used instead.

Fewer than 5,000 tigers survive in the wild.

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. — A special science and technology Academy Award will go to Don Iwerks, the former Disney special-effects wizard.

Iwerks will receive the Gordon E. Sawyer award on Feb. 28, the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences said Thursday.

Iwerks worked at Disney for 35 years, pushing camera technology to capture footage in jungles, deserts and underwater.

WROCLAW, Poland — The British ambassador to Poland on Friday reopened a kindergarten named for Princess Diana after it was renovated with British aid following last summer's floods.

About 20 children wearing caps matching the colors of the British flags they waved watched as Ambassador Christopher Hum unveiled a plaque bearing the kindergarten's new name.

The school was badly damaged last July. British companies that have invested in the region donated about $43,000 for the renovation.

Magee sizzles with 64, claims four-shot lead in Hope Classic

Associated Press

BERMUDA DUNES, Calif. — Andrew Magee, playing virtually mistake-free golf, shot a 64 Friday to open a four-stroke lead in the Bob Hope Chrysler Classic.

Magee's 8-under-par round put him at 21-under, a record for the first three days of the 90-hole tournament.

Stewart Cink, the PGA's 1997 rookie of the year, and Mark O'Meara were tied for second at 17-under. Cink shot a 67 and O'Meara, who tied with Tiger Woods for second a shot behind Phil Mickelson in the Mercedes Championship last week, had a 65.

A group of four players, including Fred Couples and David Duval, were another shot back.

Second-round leader Bruce Lietzke had a 71 that dropped him six shots off Magee's pace.

Morgan, Gilbert tie for first-round lead

KAILUA-KONA, Hawaii — Gil Morgan and Gibby Gilbert shot 7-under-par 65s Friday to take a one-stroke lead after the opening round of the MasterCard Championship golf tournament.

Morgan, whose six wins on the Senior PGA Tour last year was overshadowed only by Hale Irwin's nine, had a bogey-free round, including birdies on all four of the course's par 4s.

Gilbert, who gained entry into the tournament by capturing the Royal Caribbean Classic, jumped out to a quick lead with four birdies — plus a bogey — over the first five holes before settling down with four more birdies.

Lidback leads HealthSouth

ORLANDO, Fla. — Jenny Lidback's recurring back problems flared up, but so did her penchant for dramatic eagles in the first LPGA event of the year.

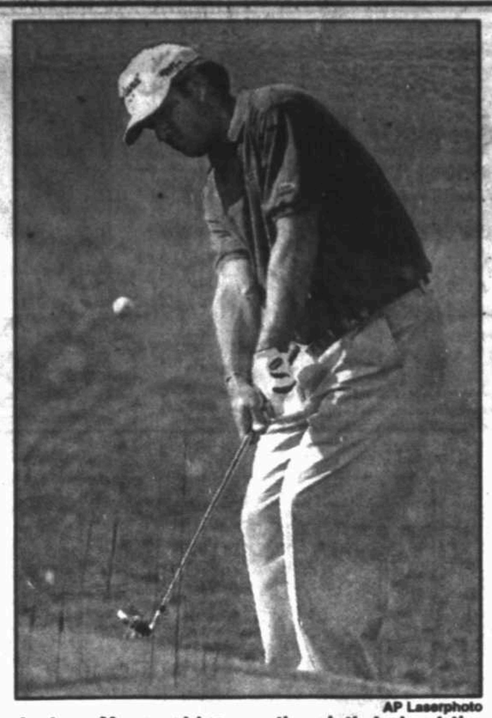

Lidback, who slept on the floor to help her aching back, holed a 6-iron from 135 yards out Friday on her way to a 3-under-par 69 and a one-stroke lead after the first round of the HealthSouth Inaugural.

Cart-riding golfer misses cut

POMPANO BEACH, Fla. — Disabled golfer Casey Martin's next round will be in court.

Martin missed the cut Friday at the Nike South Florida Classic after shooting a 1-over-par 71 for a two-round total of 147.

A rare congenital condition in Martin's right leg makes it difficult for him to walk, and a federal court trial next month in Oregon will challenge PGA rules that prohibit the use of carts.

Esiason leaves Bengals for Monday Night booth

Associated Press

CINCINNATI — Quarterback Boomer Esiason, who told the Cincinnati Bengals he will not return next season, apparently will replace Frank Gifford in the broadcast booth for Monday Night Football.

Esiason has an offer from ABC Sports that was simply too good to pass up, Bengals general manager Mike Brown said.

"Late this afternoon, Boomer called and told us he had accepted the broadcasting position on ABC Monday Night Football and he'll move on," Brown said. "That came as an unexpected and unwelcome surprise for us."

Esiason's agent, Jerrold Colton, said he had not yet reached an agreement with ABC Sports. A network spokesman declined comment on Esiason, but did confirm Gifford would move from the broadcast booth after 27 years to become pre-game host.

"Frank requested this so that he can spend more time with his family," said ABC spokesman Mark Mandel.

Monday night games, always a 9 p.m. Eastern time fixture, will begin at 8:15 p.m. starting next season. A pre-game show will be a new venture.

"We are grateful that Frank Gifford's special insight and in-depth experience will be a cornerstone of ABC's new pre-game show," said Bob Iger, president of ABC Inc.

ABC also said Gifford is likely to work with Classic Sports Network.

Esiason is expected to join Monday Night Football holdovers Al Michaels and Dan Dierdorf.

The Bengals were hoping Esiason, 36, would return for another season as their quarterback after he replaced Jeff Blake and went 4-1 as a starter last season. He had said he would consider his options — including those in broadcasting — before deciding whether to retire.

"This is such a rare opportunity, he should take it. And I told him that," Brown said. "He can ride this now and have a broadcast career starting at the very top. It would be the envy of almost anyone to start that way.

"It hurts the team, but at the same time I feel very good for him. Now we're left with a different situation than what we expected. We'll have to regroup."

Esiason led the Bengals to the Super Bowl and won the NFL's Most Valuable Player honors in 1988. After four years with the New York Jets and Arizona, Esiason returned to Cincinnati as the backup quarterback, replaced Blake for the last five games and became one of the league's hottest passers.

Flutie signs contract with Bills

BUFFALO, N.Y. — Quarterback Doug Flutie, who has failed in two attempts to play in the NFL, has agreed to a contract with the Buffalo Bills.

Bills spokesman Scott Berchtold said the team reached an agreement with Flutie late Friday afternoon. He will sign a contract sometime next week when he returns from a vacation in Hawaii.

The Buffalo News reported Friday that Flutie was to approve a two-year deal that would pay him a base salary of $300,000, the minimum for an NFL veteran, and a signing bonus of about $50,000.

Williams to face Sanchez Vicario in final

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — A year ago, Venus Williams was home in Florida, trying to stay up late enough to watch a few matches at the Australian Open.

"It looked like the sun shone all the time," she said. "I was expecting white light, white heat. So when I came this year, I was ready."

In preparing for the year's first Grand Slam event in her first trip Down Under, Williams has shown she's indeed ready. She's coped with heat, rain and a variety of opponents, from No. 1 Martina Hingis early in the Sydney International, to No. 20 Ai Sugiyama in Friday's 6-1, 7-6 (7-2) semifinal victory.

Now Williams, 17, goes for her first title Saturday against one of the toughest of the old-guard players, Arantxa Sanchez Vicario. The Spaniard is not the player Williams would have liked to meet, or the one she expected. That opponent, Williams thought, would be her sister, Serena.

"I guess it would have been history, but you can't dwell on things that didn't happen," Venus said.

A finalist in the U.S. Open last September, Venus will move from No. 21 to No. 15 in the WTA Tour rankings, win or lose against Sanchez Vicario. But because the Australian Open went according to last week's rankings when officials made the seeds Thursday, Venus will not be seeded and could meet her No. 56-ranked sister in the second round.

PROTEST: NMJC coach Black: 'Sour grapes'

(From 1C)

to congratulate the players c) that (MC officials) observed (NMJC) reserves go onto the court at the same time as (MC) players, allegedly to get a better view of what was happening. In both cases, the players had no malicious intent.

"3. The official had the option to either get the players from both sides off the court and resume the game, and make no call whatsoever, or he could call a technical with .2 of a second left while MC led 65-64."

"We hope that by us lodging this protest, hopefully it will get reviewed by a committee and make changes so that officials can do a better job in the future," said MC Athletic Director Joe Williams. "We're not insinuating that the officials did a poor job in calling the game. It just seems that the game was placed into the officials' hands and not the players'.

"We believe that we have good grounds for a reversal. We're not crying that we lost the game, we're just saying, 'just make it fair.' After talking with coach (Pat) Rafferty, we feel that we did deserve the victory. But we also understand that the officials are in a tough situation as it was under those circumstances."

Both teams' game tapes are being sent to the commissioner's office for review, along the with the three game officials' reports. Green said that after he receives the tapes and reports, then he will send a report to Dr. Scott Elliott, the conference president, and Elliott will either make the decision on his own or send it to a committee for a decision. Green said that he hopes that a decision will be made by the end of the week and added, "anything can happen."

Officials at New Mexico Junior College were stunned when they heard about Midland College's protest.

"I think once the game is in the books, it's over with," said NMJC Athletic Director Dr. Richard Morris. "From where I was sitting last night, and all the heavy action that was going on the court, you have to leave it in the hands of the game officials. There was still time on the clock and I think (the officials) made the proper decisions.

"It's unfortunate (MC) would file a protest. I think the officials control the court. But we'll abide with what the commissioner wants to do."

NMJC coach Ron Black called it a case of "sour grapes."

"It's incomprehensible to me that they would file a protest," Black said. "I believed that it was a clear-cut call. The ball was live"

Black also denied that he had any contact with the officials other than the time when both teams' coaches were at the scoring table to be informed that there were going to be technical foul shots.

"That was the only contact I had with the officials. That's a flat out lie," Black said. "I believe (MC officials) just made it up. That really upsets me. I may have been on the bench hollering 'technical' and maybe some of my players were yelling 'technical' but that's the only contact we had. I don't see any grounds for a protest. It's just sour grapes to me."

MC coach Rafferty said that his team shouldn't have been in the position to begin with thanks to his team missing shots and not playing good defense throughout the game.

"We didn't get beat, we lost the game," Rafferty said.

Green, who's been affiliated with the conference for 10 years, and Black, who's been NMJC's coach for 20, said that this is the first time they've heard of any school filing a formal protest with the conference.

Bogar settles with Astros

NEW YORK (AP) — Seven more players in salary arbitration agreed to contracts Friday, leaving 70 left to exchange figures with their teams next week.

Houston Astros shortstop Tim Bogar agreed Friday to a $725,000, one-year contract, nearly three times his $275,000 salary last season.

Toronto right-hander Woody Williams got the biggest deal of the day, one one-year contract worth $1,615,000, more than four times his 1997 salary of $387,500.

Right-hander David Veres and Colorado agreed to a $1 million, one-year contract, a raise of $275,000 from last season, when he was 2-3 with a 3.48 ERA and one save in 53 relief appearances with Montreal.

San Diego right-hander Dan Miceli agreed to $650,000, up from $475,000 last year. Padres outfielder James Mouton, obtained from Houston earlier in the week, will get $425,000, a $10,000 raise.

New York Yankees right-hander Willie Banks agreed to $290,000, a $40,000 raise. And Florida outfielder Cliff Floyd got a $500,000, one-year contract, a raise of $110,000.

DALLAS: Jones is closer

(From 1C)

some friends to find out what's happening in the league," said Reilly, who just finished his first season with the Cowboys.

Alexander, who has been with the Cowboys since 1989, doesn't seem to be hopeful about finding a position with another team.

"There are no jobs," he said. "There are not any in the NFL. The only thing you can do (is wait and see what happens). Nobody is beating down my door."

Jones is clearly looking for offensive-minded coaches. The Cowboys' offense has suffered through two subpar seasons, finishing 20th in the league last season, averaging 298.6 yards per game.

There is a greater chance members of the defensive coaching staff could remain. Under defensive coordinator Dave Campo, the Cowboys' defense, despite the loss of key personnel last season, finished second in the league, allowing 282.3 yards per game.

Linebackers coach Jim Bates indicated he feels his job is secure.

"I have confidence that a lot of us on the defensive side of the ball will be back," Bates said.

Although he said he is not actively seeking another job, Bates said, "You always listen."

Cowboys special-teams coach Joe Avezzano has no intentions on looking for another job.

"I haven't been doing anything but waiting to see what Jerry is going to do. I am where I want to be."

Contracts for many of the assistant coaches expire Feb. 1. Zampese and Avezzano are believed to have contracts through the 1998 season. Several other coaches have recently received extensions beyond next month, Jones said, but he has declined to name them.

Houck said he believes that opportunities will begin to open up once the Cowboys' head-coaching situation is solidified.

"A lot of teams are right in that middle area, and they have not acted yet," Houck said. "I think once someone is hired here, I think that will start a chain of events."

Houck, who has been with the Cowboys since 1993, is realistic about what a new head coach means for his future with the team.

"Most likely, the guy as a head coach has people he wants to bring in in certain areas," Houck said. "That's my understanding."

DAVIS: RB plays with pain

(From 1C)

Pittsburgh in the AFC championship game and the Super Bowl is a godsend, Davis said.

"I definitely need this — for everything, my legs, my shoulder, my ribs," he said. "I'll have a full body recovery by the time we play the Packers."

Davis, in his third NFL season, rushed for a club-record 1,750 yards despite missing one game. He led the AFC and finishing second in the NFL to Barry Sanders.

He broke his own single-game rushing record for the franchise with 215 yards against Cincinnati in September. In October he raised the bar with 236 yards against Buffalo.

Despite his injuries, he hasn't lost any productivity in the playoffs. He ran for 184 yards and two TDs against Jacksonville, for 101 yards and two TDs against Kansas City and 139 yards and a score against Pittsburgh.

Typically, he seems unaffected by his achievements.

"I'm not the type of person who just sits there and marvels over records or what I've done numberwise," he said. "That's just not me. That really doesn't light my fire. But maybe when it's all said and done, I can sit back and boast how I once had the most yards of any NFL running back in one season."

Back to Business: '98 Mazda 626 LX

RoadWorthy!

By Ken Chester, Jr.

Mazda has been through a lot during this decade. The home of the novel RX-7 sports coupe that put the Japanese automaker on the map back in the late 1970's has seen plenty of upheaval. An aborted attempt at developing a second luxury lineup of vehicles, much like Lexus and Inifiniti and spreading resources razor thin attempting to field a full vehicle line up left Mazda wandering aimlessly. The good news is that management regrouped, got focused, and is bringing to market vehicles that draw on the automaker's core strengths. Consumers were treated to the Millenia, the only sedan to bear fruit from the failed luxury attempt. Now the attention has turned toward its volume bread and butter model, the 626 sedan. I recently drove one to see how much it has changed.

New and Improved

Available in four trim levels — DX, LX, LX V6 and ES V6, the Mazda 626 sedan is built exclusively in Flat Rock, Michigan by AutoAlliance International — a joint venture of Ford and Mazda. The 626 boasts a domestic content of more than 75%, classifying it as a domestic car, a distinction held since 1992. I drove a 626 LX model, equipped with the standard 2.0L four- cylinder engine connected to a four speed automatic transmission, an $800 option. With this new generation, Mazda has brought back the best characteristics of previous models, while improving interior room and overall structural integrity. On the road, the engine was willing and responsive, delivering plenty of power at all times. Handling was excellent, with control like a professional ballerina — light on its feet and fun to throw around. The most amazing thing about this Mazda is that the LX model accomplishes this feat with skinny (by comparison) P185/70R14 Bridgestone tires! The braking system delivered excellent performance as well. Inside the cabin, displays and controls are well executed. Mazda's OptiSpace design delivers ample back seat room that is comfortable. The split rear fold down seat backs features the release on the top of the integrated head rests. In all, the basics that made the Mazda 626 such an enjoyable car in the late 80's is back — only better. Underhood fluids are easy to reach but not clearly marked. A couple of gripes: molded cupholders in the front center console are of limited use and there are no cupholders for back seat passengers in the LX model.

By the Numbers

Standard safety equipment for the Mazda 626 includes: dual airbags, side-impact door beams, four wheel anti-lock brakes ($550 on LX, N/A DX) and traction control (N/A DX or LX). EPA fuel economy ranges from 26 city/33 highway for the 2.0L four cylinder/five-speed manual powertrain to 20 city/26 highway for the 2.5L six cylinder/four-speed automatic. Retail sticker prices begin at $15,550 for the DX upto $23,240 for the ES-V6 model with the destination charge adding $450. Supplies of the Mazda are good and there are no rebates.

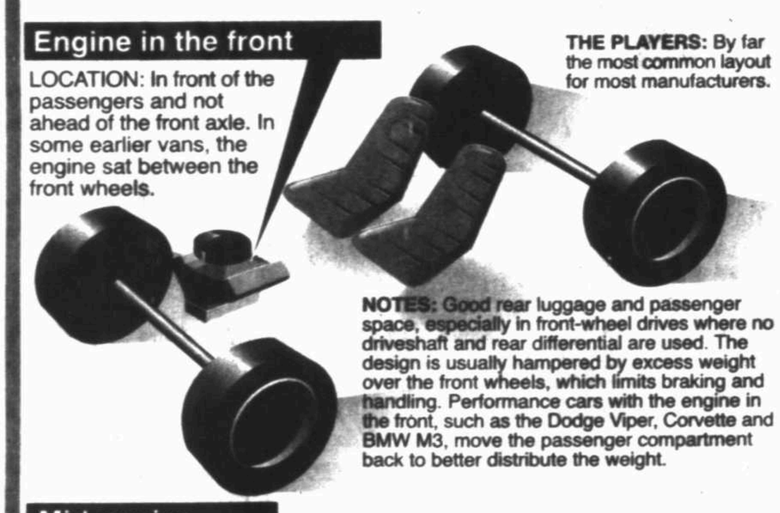

AUTOGRAPH

Drivetrain layout

Over the years, manufacturers have put the engine in three different locations in the car, each having its own benefits. Travelling into today's new-car lots, you'll find the same three variables.

Engine in the front

LOCATION: In front of the passengers and not ahead of the front axle. In some earlier vans, the engine sat between the front wheels.

THE PLAYERS: By far the most common layout for most manufacturers.

NOTES: Good rear luggage and passenger space, especially in front-wheel drives where no driveshaft and rear differential are used. The design is usually hampered by excess weight over the front wheels, which limits braking and handling. Performance cars with the engine in the front, such as the Dodge Viper, Corvette and BMW M3, move the passenger compartment back to better distribute the weight.

Mid-engine

LOCATION: In front of the rear axle, but behind the passengers. This is the choice of many high-performance vehicle manufacturers. Corvette and Plymouth Prowler, while having front-mounted engines, have transmissions mounted in this location.

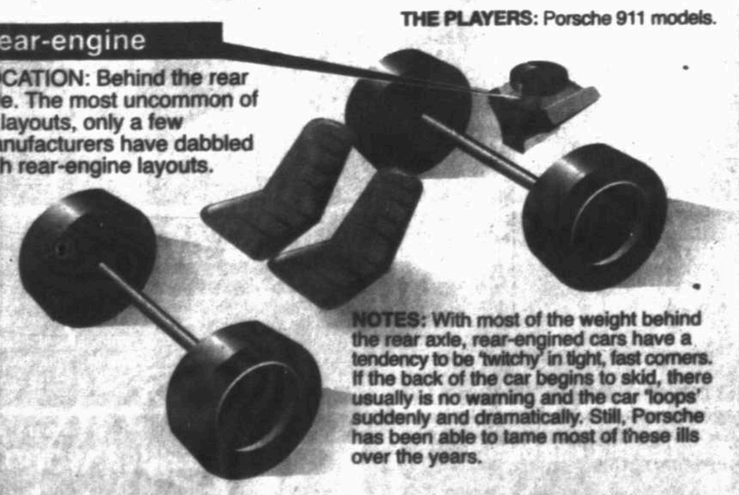

THE PLAYERS: Acura NSX, Porsche Boxster, most Ferraris (except 456 and F550).

NOTES: Good weight distribution translates into optimum handling. You usually get one or two small trunks, instead of one large one. The driver is able to sit closer to the front of the car with the lower windshield for improved visibility.

Rear-engine

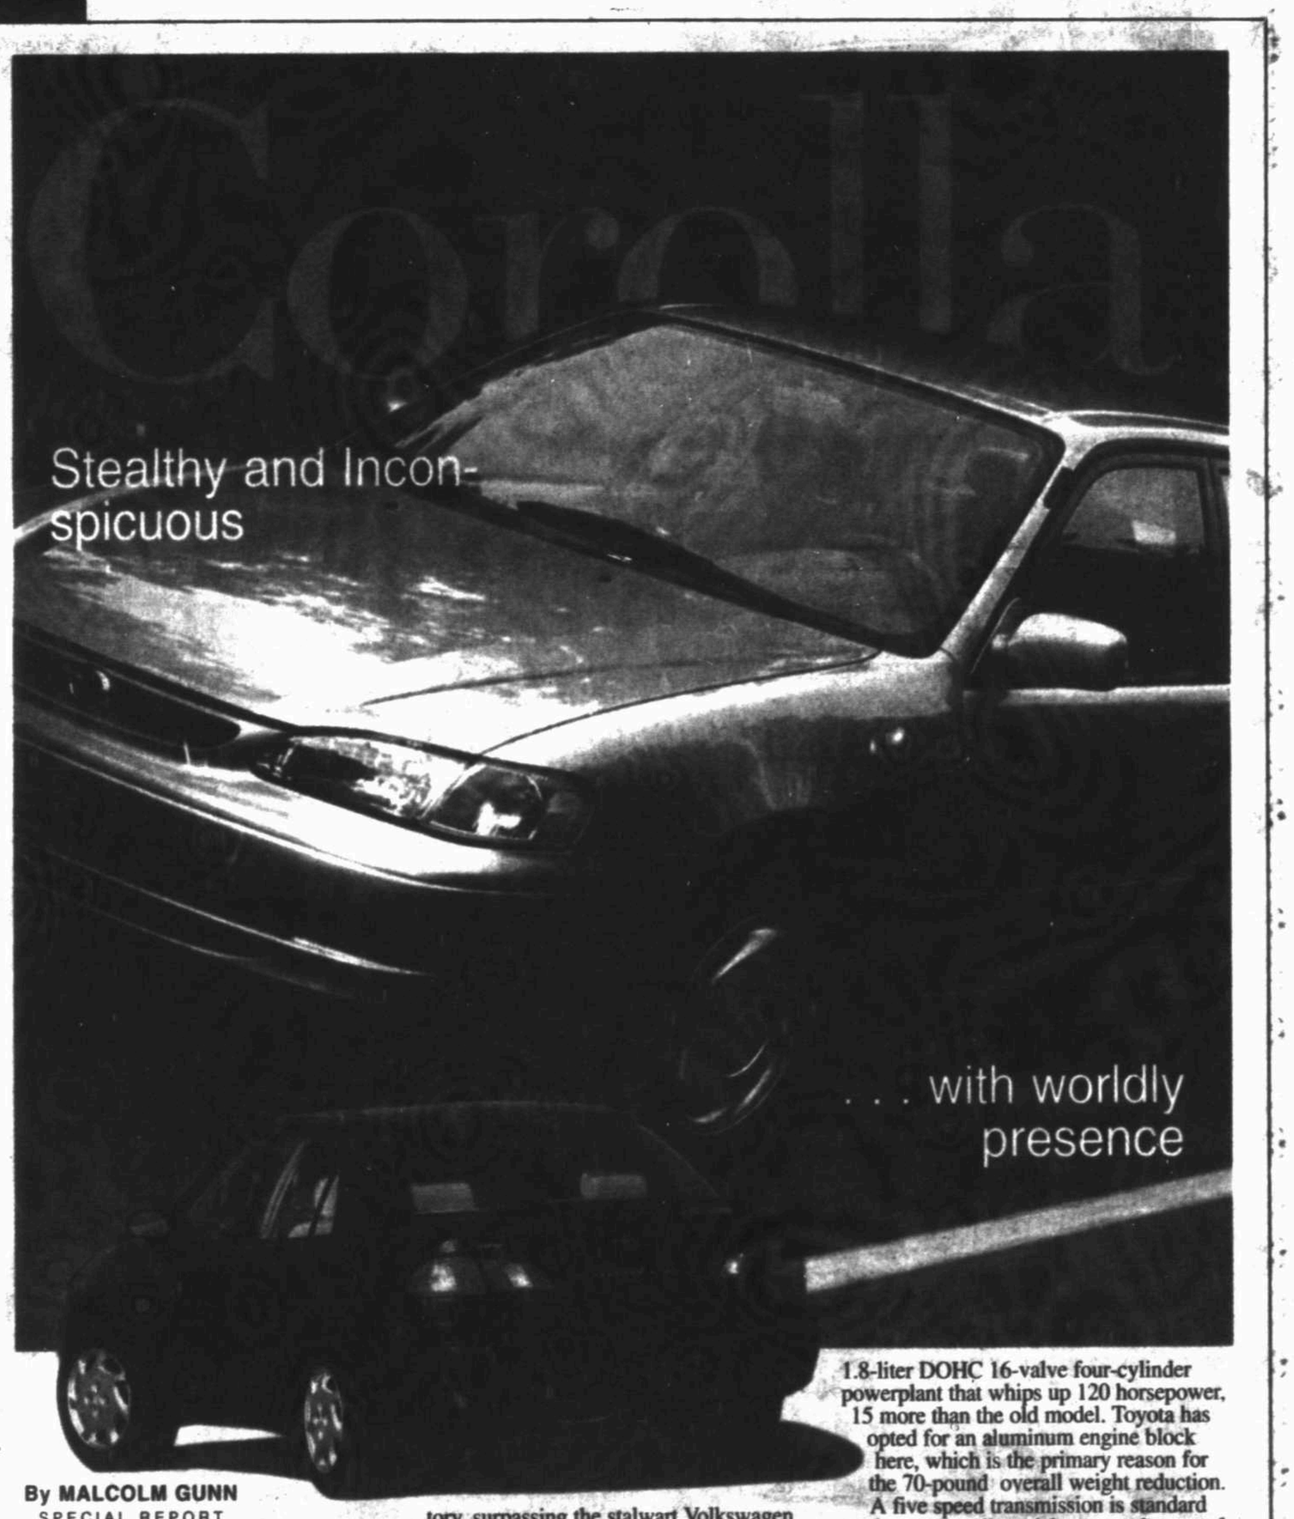

LOCATION: Behind the rear axle. The most uncommon of all layouts, only a few manufacturers have dabbled with rear-engine layouts.

THE PLAYERS: Porsche 911 models.

NOTES: With most of the weight behind the rear axle, rear-engined cars have a tendency to be 'twitchy' in tight, fast corners. If the back of the car begins to skid, there usually is no warning and the car 'loops' suddenly and dramatically. Still, Porsche has been able to tame most of these ills over the years.

SPECIAL REPORT

We just know there are new Corollas out there somewhere. They're just a little tough to spot in a crowd.

Toyota's latest anonymous-looking small sedan continues a long-standing tradition of providing value-laden compact-sized transportation that just about anyone can afford.

The release of the umteenth version of the Corolla has been overshadowed by the success of the Camry, despite the fact Corolla put Toyota on the map decades ago as a world-class builder of safe, sane and sensible transportation.

For 1998, this conservative theme continues, unabated. The front-wheel drive Corolla's speciality, it seems, is to look so totally inconspicuous that it blends into its surroundings as if wearing civilian camouflage. Like some grade school underachiever who slouches in the last row hoping to avoid being quizzed by the teacher, the Corolla will whisk you through town and country with nary a first or second glance from anyone. Sort of like an automotive version of hide-and-go-seek. And that's just how buyers prefer it, if the past 30 years are anything to go by. Believe it or not, Toyota has now sold more Corollas around the world than any other car in history, surpassing the stalwart Volkswagen Beetle.

The Corolla features an all-new design this year, if anyone cares to notice. Now a tad wider, longer and structurally stiffer, careful pruning has lead to a car that weighs slightly less than its predecessor.

Inside the passenger cabin, there's more room front and back, and most of the redesigned dash controls have knobs large enough to be operated while wearing gloves.

If the Corolla's exterior fails to ignite the flames of passion, perhaps there's a better chance with the all-new powerplant. Pop open the hood and you're greeted by a 1.8-liter DOHC 16-valve four-cylinder powerplant that whips up 120 horsepower, 15 more than the old model. Toyota has opted for an aluminum engine block here, which is the primary reason for the 70-pound overall weight reduction.

A five speed transmission is standard equipment on all models except the top-of-the-line LE. Two automatics are available, a three-speed that can be specified with the price-leader Corolla VE or a four-speed unit that can be dropped into the VE, or CE (the LE's only shifter is the four-speed auto).

As with most import or domestic cars in its class (and there are certainly no shortage here) the base Corolla VE arrives with few items that might tend to boost the car's sticker price and rendering it less competitive than everyone's else's bargain-basement compact.

The mid-range CE delivers a better grade of seat fabric, along with power door locks, tilt steering, 60/40 split rear seat, full instrumentation, wheel covers, remote outside mirrors and four-speaker cassette stereo. The full-load LE adds power windows and mirrors, LE-grade interior seat fabrics and color-keyed mirrors, door handles and body side mouldings. Dealer-installed options available, including air conditioning (all models), keyless entry and CD changer.

Toyota has successfully marketed its products, including the Corolla, as offering high quality at reasonable prices. This theme obviously hits home with many folks who value efficient, reliable, comfortable transportation above all else.

We just challenge you to spot one. ■
