24 percent over last year

Sales tax revenues continue to grow

Sales tax revenues in Rockport continue to run 24.89 percent ahead of last year's collections with the return to the city this month of a check for $74,327.18 representing the city's 1 percent share of sales taxes collected from local businesses last month.

The tax return — which reflects sales made in September — was nearly $8,000 more than taxes collected for the same period in 1982. Rockport's year-to-date totals amount to $393,355.94, compared to $314,965.49 for 1982.

Rockport is one of the few area cities to continue to show gains in sales tax collections this year. Fulton showed a 9.51 percent loss in sales tax revenues for the year to date, with a total $36,024.09 through October.

The city's collections for the month amounted to $2,373.51 — compared to $6,561.25 for the month in 1982.

Other cities in the Coastal Bend area showed comparable losses in sales tax revenue for the first 10 months of 1983. Aransas Pass received October returns of $64,133.08, approximately $300 more than last year, but year-to-date totals of $367,359.54 were 5.33 percent below those for 1982.

Ingleside's monthly collections were nearly $3,000 below last year's and the year-to-date total of $109,836.34 was 10.90 percent below the 1982 level.

Among the eight cities in San Patricio County, only two — Odem and Sinton — showed increases over last year's sales tax totals. Odem's year-to-date collections of $40,701.79 were 5.46 percent more than in 1982, and Sinton's collections of $227,640.35 represented a 13.70 percent increase.

Port Aransas showed a 5.09 percent gain in year-to-date tax collections with $211,491.52 so far. The monthly totals were down slightly, $35,376.67 compared to $36,035.64 collected for the same period last year.

The cities' 1 percent sales tax is collected by merchants along with the 4 percent tax levied by the state and is returned to the cities by Comptroller Bob Bullock.

Bullock said the city sales tax checks returned this month were a full week early because many of the businesses voluntarily paid their taxes by Oct. 20. The Comptroller added that, beginning this month, all businesses that collect sales taxes will be required to pay their taxes by the 20th rather than the last day of the month.

He observed that this early payment will bring $500 million more into the current state budget without requiring a tax increase, which is the state's goal in setting the earlier deadline. Bullock added, "It's obvious this change will also help local governments put these tax revenues to work faster in their cities."

Statewide, this year's sales tax totals continue to run behind the collections for 1982, although the monthly collections of just over $26 million were nearly $2.4 million higher than for the month in '82.

Total statewide collections through Oct. 31 this year amounted to $169,761,682.87, approximately 3.80 percent below the '82 figures.

Three schools to be air conditioned

By LESLIE ABRAMS
Staff writer

The board of education of the Aransas County Independent School District approved a motion during Monday evening's meeting authorizing American Management Engineering Associates Inc. to draw up the plans and specifications to install air conditioning and energy management systems in Rockport-Fulton Junior High School, Rockport and Fulton Elementary Schools.

Phillip Brown, a representative of American Management Engineering, was present at the Nov. 14 meeting to present the firms suggestions for the installation of air conditioning and energy management systems at the three schools. Brown estimated that the project would cost the district $286,148, including engineering fees. Of that amount, approximately $34,000 would go toward energy conservation modifications at the three schools and $252,000 would go toward air conditioning the facilities, which at the present time are the only campuses which do not already have air conditioning.

Brown presented preliminary plans to the board Monday evening, explaining what the project would involve at each school. President Pro Tem Jerry Brundrett Jr. appointed a committee consisting of himself and board members Horace Naquin Jr. and Margaret Dick to review the plans and specifications drawn up by American Management Engineering and report back to the board. Following the committee report, the board will hold a special meeting to call for bids on the project, an event which will probably take place during the next two to three weeks.

The expected payback on the project will be anywhere from 4 to 5 years, Brown said.

The board approved a motion by Naquin and seconded by board member Ottie Mundine to hire the Corpus Christi architectural firm of McCord and Lorenz to work with the district on its 5-year master plan by a slim margin. With board members Annabelle Henry and President Polly Bracht absent, the vote was three in favor of hiring the firm, one opposed and one abstention.

The firm will review the district's facilities, do a usage study and make growth projections, then relate the results to the existing facilities. The ensuing master plan may go beyond the necessary five years.

Reasons for hiring McCord and Lorenz over four other firms included their proximity, their interest in the project and discussion with former customers of the firm. Board members held two special meetings in the past month or two to interview five firms before coming to a decision Monday evening.

ARANSAS COUNTY EMERGENCY Medical Services volunteers assist a "victim" of Saturday's mass casualty extraction drill. EMS Paramedic Bobby Motes was in charge of the drill, which involved a four-car accident complete with victims (played by Rockport-Fulton High School drama students) with realistic-looking injuries. The purpose of the drill was to see how volunteers and trainees reacted to a real-life situation. More pictures on page 15a.

Toys for Kids seeks funds

A brighter Christmas for area children

Aransas County residents are being asked again this year to help make Christmas a happier day for several hundred county children.

Through the annual Toys for Kids campaign, residents are being asked to donate money or new toys for children who, because of their families' income levels, otherwise will not receive toys for Christmas.

"We need at least $5,000," according to John Jackson, chairman of the Toys for Kids campaign which is sponsored by the Rockport Lions Club.

In previous years, he pointed out, the campaign has purchased the bulk of toys with Texas Gold stamps. Last year the Texas Gold program was discontinued, which means Toys for Kids is now totally dependent on cash donations to buy toys.

And due to economic conditions, Jackson added, "We expect to have more kids (in the program) this year."

The 1983 Toys for Kids campaign was officially launched last week with a $500 donation from the Castaways organization. Jackson noted the Castaways "are one of our major contributors."

Collection jugs have been placed at a number of area businesses to receive additional cash donations. In addition to the money, Toys for Kids officials said many area schools, businesses and organizations have already announced plans to donate new toys to Toys for Kids in lieu of an employee gift exchange this year. Several businesses and organizations did this last year.

A $1 DONATION to Toys for Kids will entitle the donor to a chance to win one of 15 turkeys being given away Sunday afternoon. Pam Roe, president of the Lionesses — sponsors of the fund-raising giveaway — says donations will be taken Saturday and Sunday at H.E.B. (Photo by Pat Blair)

NO SMOKING FOR A DAY. Rockport Pilot Publisher Bob Scott looks a little dubious — but willing — to join the cause and give up cigarettes for a day during the American Cancer Society's Great American Smokeout (GASO) Thursday, Nov. 17. Joining Bob, the GASO chairman in Aransas County, is Roy Olbrich, president of the Aransas County Unit of the American Cancer Society. Mayor Burt Mills has officially proclaimed Thursday GASO Day in Rockport. Bob urges all smokers in the county to join him in giving up the habit for the 24-hour period.

Sheriff, deputies ask for pay hikes from county

Aransas County Sheriff Robert O. Hewes went before the Aransas County commissioners court Monday, Nov. 14, to request a 9 percent salary increase for sheriff's department law enforcement personnel.

Hewes main objective is to bring the salaries of county law enforcement officials to the same level as their City of Rockport counterparts. A 7 percent salary increase for all county employees has been budgeted in the county's 1984 budget.

Hewes budgeted monthly salary for 1984 is $2,039, a figure which includes the approved 7 percent increase. He proposes that his salary be raised to $2,244 per month to match that of Rockport Police Chief Joe Hinojosa. Hinojosa currently makes $2,200 per month and has the possibility of gaining an additional 2 percent through merit raises, as does the rest of his department.

Under Hewes request, the salary of the chief deputy would be raised $151 to $1,821 monthly. There is no comparable position in the Rockport Police Department.

The salary of the sheriff's chief detective would be raised from $1,496.66 to $1,651, an increase of $154.34. The police department's chief detective has a present monthly salary of $1,618 per month. A 2 percent merit raise during the year would bring his salary to $1,650.36. County detectives currently make

A&M, UT unite for seagoing research cruise in Gulf

GALVESTON — Texas A&M University and the University of Texas, always bitter rivals on the playing field, set sail together from Galveston Saturday, Nov. 12, on a six-day seagoing research cruise, the first such joint venture for the universities.

The project involves about 40 university, federal and energy company scientists who will conduct geological and geophysical experiments aboard the two universities' research ships, the 174-foot Gyre from Texas A&M and the 165-foot Fred H. Moore of the UT fleet. The two vessels carry a combined crew of 18.

The research cruise is the first joint marine operation carried out by the two universities since they formally agreed earlier this year to share Galveston-based marine facilities and personnel whenever feasible. Additional cooperative cruises will be scheduled in the future, said officials.

The scientists will carry out research on the continental shelf off the Texas coastline. The experiments are supported jointly by the U.S. Geological Survey and industry sources.

Mary Elliott, second mate on the Gyre and the first woman ever to serve as a full-time member of a Texas A&M crew, will sail as second mate aboard the Fred H. Moore this time in order to gain familiarity with the UT ship. Both vessels return to port here Nov. 19.

Although Saturday's voyage symbolizes a new spirit of cooperation between the two universities, there already had been considerable sharing of pier space, machine shops, spare parts and navigational charts before the vessels steamed out into the Gulf of Mexico.

"I am pleased to see us getting together on this first-time effort, and I look forward to this being the beginning of more cooperative work between the two universities in the field of geosciences," said Dr. Arthur Maxwell, director of UT Austin's Institute for Geophysics, which operates the Fred H. Moore.

"All of us owe a debt of gratitude for the strong support shown by the administration at the institution, especially our president, Dr. Peter T. Flawn, and Dr. Gerhard J. Fonken, our vice president for academic affairs and research," said Maxwell.

"We want people to know that the two institutions may have an intense rivalry on the playing field, but off the field we are eager and willing to work together," said Dr. Gordon Eaton, Texas provost and vice president for academic affairs.

"Dr. Arthur Hansen, chancellor of the Texas A&M University System, and UT System Chancellor Dr. E. Don Walker have worked to bring a new era of cooperation between the systems," said Dr. Eaton.

"We have too much at stake to go our separate ways," said Hansen.

Seniors' last game

RF edges Calallen

Capping off the first Rockport-Fulton winning season since 1968, the Pirates took down Calallen Friday in an exciting 20-15 battle that was the last game for 18 R-F seniors.

The 6-4 record for the year is the Pirate's best since entering 4-A play and according to Coach Aubrey Schulz, one of this year's crowning accomplishments but the last win didn't come easy.

Coming off last week's monumental win over Sinton, the Pirates were "a little bit flat" going into Friday night's contest, says Schulz. A comfortable lead was never established and the team play was "not as intense as in the Sinton game."

"It will happen on all levels — college, high school, whatever — you come off after a big mental and emotional win and you don't have a lot left," explains the coach. "I was thinking that and I could tell. During the pre-game warm-up, they were real quiet — I was trying everything in the world to pump them up.

"I'm just glad it was the last time out."

The first quarter of the game was a scoreless stand-off, then the Pirates opened up the second period with a touchdown. A 34-yard run from Dwayne Walls was the culmination of a Pirate offensive effort and David Cochran's point after attempt put the score up to 7-0 two minutes into the quarter. The lead didn't last long, however — Calallen came back four minutes later, driving down the field to score, tying things up at 7-7 and setting the stage for the decisive third quarter.

An 18-yard effort from Walls coupled with effective offense support to give the Pirates their second touchdown two minutes into the third quarter and Cochran's point after was good, leaving Calallen behind again 14-7. They made up the difference soon enough though, coming back on their next series, securing a touchdown and putting over a successful two-point conversion to give them a 15-14 edge. Trailing for only five minutes, the Pirates went ahead again when R-F strong man Scott Russ made the last touchdown that gave the Pirates their 20-15 lead. An interception by Walls late in the game took the wind out of Calallen's sails and secured the game.

"The offense played better than the defense," sums up Schulz. "By far. They had 330 yards and the defense gave up 313.

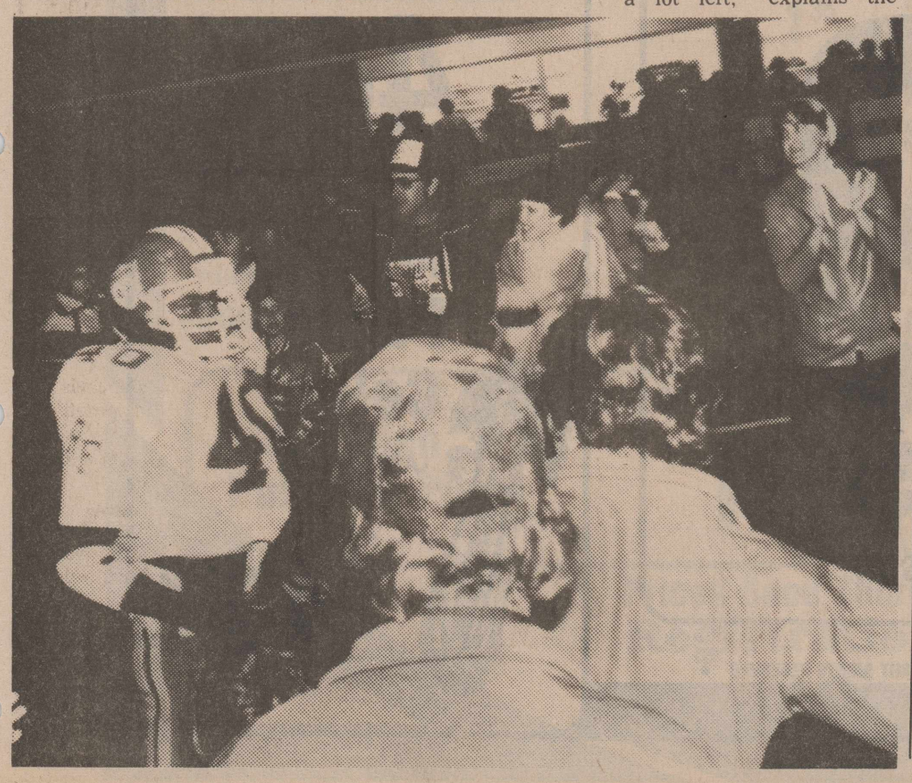

"The defense didn't have a good game statistic-wise but they came through with the big plays when they had to."

Quarterback Rudy Soliz attempted seven passes during the evening and five were completed. Outstanding on the receiving end was Cochran, connecting with four of Soliz' shots for 45 yards.

The numbers on the scoreboard at the game's end didn't tell all the story, especially for the Pirate seniors. Says Schulz, "The emotions shared between players and coaches, coaches and coaches, players and players, after the game was over — you'll never see that on the scoreboard."

(A wrap up of the 1983 Pirate football season appears in The Pilot weekend edition.)

Increased growth of rural areas is foreseen during next decade

State of the region

By JULIET K. WENGER
Coastal Bend Council of Governments

Steady growth of non-metropolitan areas is foreseen in the next decade. This is an accelerating trend. The 1980 census showed a reversal of an earlier migration from rural areas to larger cities.

Definitions of rural areas vary. The Census Bureau's definition of nonmetropolitan is "a county or group of contiguous counties where there is no city of 50,000 population." Definition used in federal programs of rural areas varies from areas with towns of no more than 2,500 up to those with cities of no more than 50,000.

Congressman Kika de la Garza is taking a lead in Congress of developing a new rural policy. It is too early to tell what direction that will take.

During the 1960s, 2.8 million more people moved out of rural areas than moved in. During the 1970s, about 4 million more moved in than left. Even at the time people were moving out, public opinion surveys showed that a large portion of the urban population really preferred to live in less populated areas.

There are many factors that made it possible for the trend to reverse itself. Commuting has become easier for those who still work in a city. There are more services in rural areas that make it possible for people to live there.

Much of this was brought out in a recent article in the National Journal, a business publication, and distributed to Councils of Governments by the National Association of Development Organizations.

This article says that higher social security and private pension benefits, improved communications and industrial decentralization are among the factors to which the reversal can be attributed.

This movement has raised the rural income. But the median rural income is still only 79.2 percent of urban income. A substantial number of the new rural residents are retirees. Federal transfer payments such as social security account for about 15 percent of nonmetropolitan personal income.

Farming has declined as a source of rural employment since 1820. Few of the new population go into agriculture.

Some of the increase in rural population is attributed to the movement of certain types of industries away from cities. The type of industry can be important. Certain industries, such as high-technology firms, can bring long-term benefits to a rural area. There is a danger with labor-intensive industries such as textiles, apparel, leather and wood products.

The National Journal says that when U.S. production costs become uncompetitive, these industries are likely to move out of the country, leaving serious unemployment behind in a rural community.

Credit is a problem that the journal sees for smaller communities. Their article says that much rural development consists of branch plants of larger firms because there is not the amount of local credit available for new companies. Rural areas have nearly 30 percent of the population but only 15 percent of the savings.

A growth problem sited is that retirees move from cities to smaller communities to get away from congestion and crime, but when they arrive, they want the local government services that they are used to. Some of them are used to paying higher taxes and are willing to do so. But that may be difficult for their rural neighbors.

One of the big concerns is what deregulation will mean to the smaller towns. Rail services are already reduced. Trucks and buses were required to serve unprofitable small towns if they wanted to serve high-density urban routes. Now they are not.

They can raise the rates of rural shippers substantially. This can be a competitive disadvantage in economic development.

Transfusion service is accredited

Memorial Medical Center Transfusion Service has been granted renewal of accreditation by the American Association of Blood Banks (AABB), according to hospital president, Wheeler B. Lipes.

Accreditation follows an intensive on-site inspection by specially trained representatives of AABB and establishes that the level of medical, technical and administrative performance within the facility meets or exceeds the association's rigorous standards.

By successfully meeting those requirements, MMC's Transfusion Service can join more than 2,200 similar facilities across the United States and abroad that have earned the accreditation rating and recognition.

Lipes explained, "The AABB's inspection and accreditation procedures are voluntary. It is not legally necessary for a blood bank or transfusion service to be accredited, but like many others our facility has sought accreditation because it represents a level of professional and medical expertise that meets and exceeds government regulations."

MMC's Transfusion Service has participated in the AABB voluntary site inspection and accreditation program for the past decade. Accreditations are granted every two years.

Miss South Texas teen pageant scheduled

The 13th annual Miss South Texas National Teen-Ager Pageant will be held at Southwest Texas State University, San Marcos, April 6-8. Young women between 13 and 18 years of age who are interested in competing for over $30,000 in scholarships are invited to participate. Finalists are judged on scholastic achievement, leadership, poise, personality and appearance.

There will be no swimsuit competition. Each finalist will present a talent (either visual or performing arts), or at her option, an essay on "What's Right About America," before a special panel of judges.

This pageant is the official state preliminary to the Miss Texas National Teen-Ager Pageant, which will be held at Texas Christian University, Fort Worth, on June 1-3. The South Texas winner will receive, among other prizes, a $1,000 cash scholarship; a full four-year tuition scholarship totaling over $10,000 to Oklahoma City University; a full modeling course scholarship from Barbizon International; and an all expense-paid trip to compete in the national pageant.

Each finalist will participate in the Volunteer Community Service Program, which is designed to promote teen involvement and participation in volunteer civic and community affairs.

South Texas teenagers who wish further information to participate may write to: Debbie Barnard, 14718 Oakbluff Ct., Houston, Texas 77070.

Boy Scout program

Siemens appointed to area executive position

Appointment of Richard Siemens as full-time district field executive to help coordinate the Boy Scout program in the Rockport area was announced by Phil Pegues, finance director of the Gulf Coast Council, Boy Scouts of America headquarterd in Corpus Christi — at a noon meeting of the Rockport Rotary Club at the Sandollar Restaurant Wednesday, Nov. 9.

Siemens was associated with headquarters of the Gulf Coast Council prior to being assigned to the Rockport post. He and his wife, Sue, and their sons — Robert, 14, and Andy, 12 — already have moved to Rockport.

As district field executive Siemens' responsibilities include providing guidance and training for local Boy Scout leaders with responsibility for Cub Scouts, Boy Scouts and Explorer Scouts. He will provide liaison service with the Gulf Coast Council, Director Pegues explained.

Siemens was present at the Rotary luncheon as was Mike Fagan who has been serving the Rockport area as field executive on a part-time basis.

Pegues explained the council is expected to reach a total Scout membership of 14,000 by the end of 1983, substantially exceeding an 11,600-member goal set in 1981. He told Rotarians Scouting provides learning and living training for boys between ages 7 and 20.

Leadership in the growing and learning process is provided by a corps of adults, often including parents or the boys involved.

Pegues added there usually is one adult leader for every three of four boys in the organization. Training of adults who volunteer for leadership roles in Scouting is provided by the Coastal Council through local field executives, he said.

Pegues said, "Scouting is by its very nature a program designed to teach youth to give service to others." The Cub Scout and Boy Scout pledges include the phrase: "to help other people at all times." The Explorer code states: "I will recognize the dignity and worth of my fellow men and will use fair play and good will in dealing with them," according to Pegues.

"A major mission of Gulf Coast Council is to extend the Scouting program so that every boy who wants to be a Scout will have that opportunity," Pegues declared.

The council operates two summer camps for Scouts and at present is exploring the possibility of making at least one of these camps available for senior citizens during periods when they are not being used by Scouts.

A recreation and social program would be provided, including fishing, archery, handicraft, swimming in the camp pool, games and dances. Meals would be served at a reasonable cost, Pegues added.

TDH seeks male volunteers for state Agent Orange study

From the Texas Department of Health
Robert Berstein, M.D., Commissioner

The Texas Department of Health (TDH) is seeking male volunteers to serve as a control group in a statewide study of the effects of Agent Orange, a defoliant used in Vietnam which is suspected of causing cancer, chromosomal defects and other medical problems.

Dr. George R. Anderson, director of the TDH Agent Orange research program, said volunteers are needed to match Vietnam veterans participating in the program. Currently, 85 veterans are in the study phase of the program, and 50 more will be added in the next year, said Anderson.

The Texas Veterans Agent Orange Assistance Program is working with the University of Texas Health Science Centers in testing veterans.

Anderson said volunteers must be men ages 30-45 years of age. The controls must not have served in Vietnam nor worked in a chemical plant, used pesticides agriculturally, nor worked as a welder. The identity of individuals in the studies is kept confidential.

The volunteers will receive laboratory work valued at some $1,140, said Anderson. If desired, the results of tests will be given to the volunteers on completion of the various studies.

The tests require the taking of blood and sperm samples. The sperm samples will be taken every six weeks over three six-week periods. Blood samples will be taken only one time. Anderson, a Vietnam veteran, served as a colonel in medical air evacuation in 1967 and 1968.

Anderson said volunteers can gain by getting a baseline laboratory study that their private physicians can use in the future. They also may just want to help out the veterans, he said.

Volunteers will be matched to veterans in age, occupation, race and certain health factors such as smoking and alcohol use. Before being selected, volunteers will be screened. "We will contact them directly and send them a questionnaire," said Anderson.

There are few conclusive studies about the effects of Agent Orange — or the chemical dioxin which it contains. Animal studies have shown that dioxin is carciogenic, affects the liver and the chromosomes and is stored in the fat of the animal.

"Our problem is to translate this to humans," he said.

He said the time from exposure to development of cancer in humans is lengthy — 15 to 20 years and perhaps as much as 30 years. The Vietnam veteran is just now entering this time period, observed Anderson.

Persons interested in volunteering for the study are asked to call Anderson at 458-7251, or write to: Agent Orange Program, Texas Department of Health, 1100 West 49th Street, Austin, Texas 78756.

'Uncle John':

Remembering a friend

Editor's note: The following is from "Uncle John" Leslie whose column, "In a different vein" appeared for a time in The Rockport Pilot.

By Uncle John Leslie

I could not write a better memorial to a better Rockport Citizen than to add this short paragraph to the story I did no Murray McMillian and family in 1980.

Murray died of stroke on Thursday night, Nov. 10, and was buried in Rockport Cemetery Sunday afternoon, Nov. 13.

May the Good Lord take care of his soul and watch over his family.

One of my best Rockport friends, and has served Rockport in many capacities.

In every community, there are many families — mother, father and children who come very near "the perfect family" but who never make the front pages. They are "unsung" in our communities.

I have, in my 10 years in Rockport, had the pleasure to know and work with one of these types of families and I want to sing their praises.

Why? Because they have won it, they are a pleasure to work with, they are involved, they always respond with "yes" to most any request for civic services.

I am referring to the family of Murray C. and Patti McMillan and their three sons — (1) Andy, age 18 and now in first year at S.W. State College at San Marcos; (2) Scott, age 16 in Sr. High School; and (3) Rob, age 14 — a Freshman in High School.

When I came to Rockport in 1971, these boys were 5, 7 and 9 — the older was in a Cub Den and Patti was a Den Mother.

All three, as they came of Cubbing age, entered Cubbing and their mother, Patti, never let them down. As she used to say to me, "Uncle John, it looks like I am a perpetual Den Mother." Hurrah for a woman like that!

Murray also worked right along with his boys on Committee, etc. Their home on 2007 Cochran is next to a vacant lot which was "Cub Heaven."

Murray and Patti came to Rockport from Victoria. They had come to Texas from Missouri. Murray is a contractor and home-builder of note.

Living on the water in Rockport led to sailing. These boys took to sailing like ducks to water. The entire family was involved in the Rockport Sailing Club.

Scouting came naturally. They were members of Troop 280 and took part in all its activities including Summer Camp. Both parents cooperated as parents should and took part in all its activities.

Then came the program "Young Life" — a new program for Youth. The family helped with its organization and program.

Last, but not least, the family has been active in the First Presbyterian Church. Both parents have been active Deacons in the church.

Andy has been representing the youth of the church on the Worship Committee.

Scott represented the Rockport Church at the First International Youth Triennium in Indiana. He was one of 5,000 youths who attended and one of the 15 who attended from South Texas (del Salvador Presbytery) — and the only one attending from Rockport.

Quite an honor!

You can see why I feel that the family should have a little front page publicity.

I feel sure the City, State and Nation will never be called on to spend money to "spank" these kids. It's been one of the most pleasant things to have known them. To know and to work with a family like this is part of my reward for living in Rockport. God Bless this family!

CERTIFICATES OF APPRECIATION were presented to four Aransas County residents this week by Jack Forrest, service unit field representative for the Aransas County unit of the Salvation Army. Receiving certificates for their "outstanding service" to the Salvation Army were First National Bank (represented by President Jimmy Sorenson, far left), the Castaways (represented by Mary B. Burke) and Grover Traylor. Also receiving a certificate but not in the photograph was the firm of Ted R. Little & Sons in Cove Harbor. [Photo by Pat Blair]

Mattress causes accident

No injuries were reported in an accident Thursday morning, Nov. 10, in the 1100 block of Broadway Street.

Lac Van Hoang was ticketed for failure to secure a load of furniture and no proof of liability insurance after a matress blew off the back of his vehicle onto a vehicle driven by Mary Price Levy of Harbor Oaks.

AARP news

By Lucille E. Skrobarcek

The winners of game afternoon on Thursday, Nov. 10, were Mable Ogle and Wanda Smith. The finale winner was Frank Ogle.

Hostesses for the party were Sally Calhoun and Regina Bailey and refreshments were served during the afternoon.

The next game afternoon will be at 1 p.m. Thursday, Nov. 17, at the Paws and Taws Building on Fulton Beach Road.

There will be an AARP-sponsored dance at 7 p.m. Thursday, Nov. 17, at the Paws and Taws Building. Gene Rickles music will be featured and the public is invited.

The next regular meeting of AARP Chapter 1536 will be at 10 a.m. Wednesday, Dec. 14. This will be the only meeting in December.

The annual Christmas Party will be Dec. 14 and all members are urged to attend, as many interesting and entertaining events are scheduled.

The Rockport-Fulton High School Choir, under the direction of Martha Luigi, will entertain with a Christmas program. This is always a very beautiful and inspiring concert, something to look forward to with pleasure.

The annual Christmas Tree with Santa will be next to the agenda. All members attending are to bring a gift and put it under the tree. The ladies will mark their gifts "hers"; the gentlemen will mark their gifts "his."

Also on Dec. 14, the newly elected officers for 1984 will be installed. The new slate of officers are Olive Holmes, president; Genevieve Ohrling, first vice president; Frances Cook, second vice president; George McCague, third vice president; Cecilia Blankert, treasurer; Helen McCague, secretary; Billy Cotten, assistant treasurer; and Kay Ragot, assistant secretary.

Each person attending the party is asked to bring canned or dried foods to fill the baskets for the needy. These baskets will be turned over to the Aransas Council on Aging and the Department of Human Resources for distribution.

The party will end with a turkey dinner. Chapter 1536 will furnish the turkey, dressing, gravy and drinks. Members are asked to bring a vegetable dish, a salad or a dessert.

Criminal mischief reported

Dutch Koppenhaver of Rockport told police that two tires on his pickup truck were punctured sometime between 7 and 9 p.m. Saturday, Nov. 12, as the vehicle was parked in the driveway of his residence. Damage has been estimated at $164.

Elizabeth Ledbetter of Rockport reported that a flute and its case were taken from her unlocked vehicle in the parking lot of a city grocery store at approximately 5:15 p.m. on Oct. 5. The flute was valued at $895. The case is under investigation by Rockport police.

Police arrested a Fulton man on charges of driving with a suspended driver's license on Nov. 12. The man was also issued a traffic citation.

Golf cart stolen

A golf cart valued at $1,300 was reported stolen from a storage shed at Live Oak Country Club between 6:30 p.m. Thursday, Nov. 3, and 7 a.m. Friday, Nov. 4. The Aransas County Sheriff's Department is investigating the incident.

Edward Kennedy reported criminal mischief to his residence involving $45 in damages to a wooden door, $100 in damages to furniture and a washer and dryer, $50 in damages to a refrigerator and $50 in damages to its contents. The door to his residence had been forced open at the time the incident occured between 4 and 8:15 p.m. Sunday, Nov. 13. The sheriff's department is investigating the incident.

Sheriff's deputies arrested one woman on charges of driving while intoxicated on Nov. 9.

Residents raise dredge funds

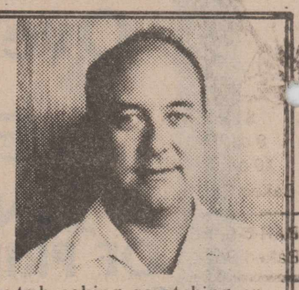

A group of Harbor Oaks residents have agreed to contribute $100 each to a special Blevens Channel Fund to help raise $3,000 for dredging and seawall repairs of the channel.

The $3,000 is what the residents of Harbor Oaks consider their share of the cost of the project which is also being funded by the Aransas County Navigation District, the City of Rockport and residents and property owners of Key Allegro.

The board of directors of the Harbor Oaks Homeowners' Association plans to request the subdivision association to approve a special assessment at the association's Jan. 29, 1984, meeting to allow reimbursement to those who are contributing to the fund at this time.

Eye Openers

By Dr. J. Martin Shaw

Caring For Your Eyeglasses

Eyeglasses are not immune to breaking, scratching, or bending out of shape. Any of these distortions in the lenses or the frame will distort the way you see and the way you look.

For better sight, and to be seen at your most attractive self, remember to:

1. Keep your glasses clean. Wash them regularly with soap and warm water. A soft toothbrush is recommended for cleaning off grime around the nose pads, the bridge and the hinges that hold the temples to the front of the frame.

2. The lenses should be cleaned at minimum once a day, just as you wash your face. If they tend to spot from your occupation or polluted air conditions, wash them more often and dry with a soft clean cloth (if they are made of glass).

3. When not wearing your glasses, put them down so that the lenses do not touch anything. Better still, put them into their proper case.

Plastic lenses need special care to avoid scratching. All dust or soot should be washed or blown off of the lenses, NOT WIPED while they are dry. If there are oily stains on the lenses, use warm water and soap to wash the stains off. Wipe with a clean, soft tissue. Never use a silicone-treated tissue on plastic lenses.

Save money with a heat pump for heating and air conditioning

You can lower your utility bills substantially by using an electric heat pump to provide the heating and cooling that account for as much as 65 to 70 percent of the electricity consumed in your home. It's a super-efficient device that should be included in any new house you build or buy. Or maybe you'll want to consider adding a heat pump to your present home to increase the efficiency of your heating/cooling system.

Although its name is somewhat misleading, the heat pump actually is designed to keep you comfortable all year long. It warms your house during the winter and air conditions it during the summer – and does both more efficiently than any other combination unit now available.

What makes it so efficient? the heat pump simply moves heat – a less expensive process than making heat, as gas and other conventional systems must do.

In cold weather, the heat pump absorbs the heat always present in outside air and transfers it inside. In hot weather, it removes heat from the interior to air condition and dehumidify your home.

The heat pump is an especially good choice for South Texas because it performs most economically in places with a relatively mild climate. In the area served by Central Power and Light Company, a properly installed heat pump can produce at least 2½ units of heat for every unit of energy needed to run it.

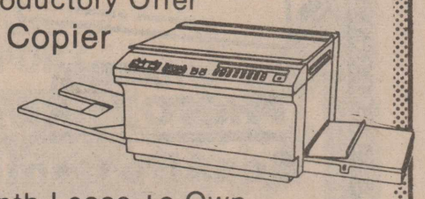

If you'd like more details, just inquire at your CPL office. We'll be happy to give you information about heat pumps and other devices that help you use energy wisely.

White-winged dove habitats are subject of Texas A&M research

KINGSVILLE — Hunting season for white-winged doves has passed and most of the game birds have migrated south for the winter. But a researcher at Texas A&I University is still very much interested in the doves and their South Texas environment.

Since June Dr. John Rappole, a post-doctoral fellow at the Caesar Kleberg Wildlife Research Institute, has been studying brush tracts in the Rio Grande Valley to determine which factors influence the whitewings' choice of nesting sites.

The study procedure involves a meticulous survey of 10 brush tracts to count whitewing nests, conduct a vegetation analysis of each nest site and note the vegetation in the immediate vicinity of each nest.

Rappole's initial efforts to familiarize himself with the region were eased by Gary Waggerman, whitewing biologist with the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department.

"Just about any area that has woody vegetation in the valley has white-winged doves, so we just picked the brushtracts that were known to have ample bird populations," says Rappole.

Waggerman pointed out that doves prefer brush rather than citrus tracts, due to the greater opportunity for nesting in a continuous canopy.

"Even though there are only 10,000 acres of brush compared to 50,000 acres of citrus, under optimum conditions of food, water and cover, the citrus tracts will have only 20 to 30 pairs of doves per acre, whereas brush tracts will carry 100 to 200 pairs per acre during peak nesting periods," says Waggerman.

"There is not enough native brush to sustain a huntable bird population, so the doves have adapted to citrus tracts," he adds.

The economics of hunting and increasing the region's carrying capacity for doves through habitat management, are the far-reaching implications of Rappole's project.

During the height of the nesting season and into the fall, Rappole would enter the brush tracts in the pre-dawn hours and remain until sunset collecting data. He explained that time was very limited since all vegetation information must be obtained before insects and the changing seasons could strip the leaves from the trees.

His task was further complicated by the thick ground cover that made crawling the only way to maneuver in some places.

Typically in each brush tract he would lay a 100-meter line transect and tag each nest up to five meters away from the line on either side. The line itself was also marked by orange tags at five-meter intervals.

After the nest count, the vegetation analysis provided very specific information on the area's plant life. For five meters along each 20-meter segment of the transect, the plant species, the maximum height, the percentage of cover provided by all species and the vertical vegetation at the five-meter high mark were noted.

Finally, the third phase of data collection, still underway, is an analysis of the microstructure surrounding each nest. Information is gathered on the number and diameter of support branches, the number of branches, twigs, thorns end leaves intersecting at the compass points, plus above and below the nest, the height of the nest and the key plant species.

"With this last technique can get an idea of the three-dimensional structure around each nest," says Rappole.

He noted that the habitat study also provides clues on the basic biology of whitewings, such as the relationship between food availability and population fluctuations.

He estimated that some 150 vegetative species are found in the brush tracts with 20 to 30 commonly occurring. Huisache, grenjeno, mesquite and brasil are typical varieties.

Interest in vegetation and habitat for whitewings is not new among wildlife biologists. Over 25 years ago, the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department began habitat restoration in the valley to assure the annual whitewings' return. Since 1957 the department has purchased 11 separete tracts of land totaling over 1,212 acres for revegetation, according to Ronnie George, TP&W program leader for migratory shore and upland game birds.

"Today very little good quality brush exists in private ownership in the valley," says George about their success in buying land for reforestation.

Early reforestation efforts are largely credited to Ted Clark, now wildlife director of the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department, who was a whitewing biologist in the valley. Clark transplanted seedlings by hand from native brush tracts into neighboring farmlands purchased by TP&W. According to George, some of the new stands Clark planted had a more ideal species composition than the native tracts.

"We have recently renewed land acquisition efforts and initiated a pilot program to reforest open farmlands with greenhouse seedlings, says George about a recent project conducted in cooperation with the Kleberg Institute.

"With modern equipment we can reforest at $165 an acre, whereas Clark's early seedlings cost $1,000 an acre," he says.

The Texas Parks and Wildlife Department also undertakes annual surveys to keep abreast of whitewing usage of the native brush tracts. Each spring "coo-counts" are conducted at known whitewing concentration in brush and citrus tracts. These counts help determine the number of doves in the areas and their locations.

Nest-count transects are taken each summer to help keep track of populations fluctations and nesting success of young and fledgling doves.

Feeding flight counts are recorded in August as doves fly from their nests to the feeding areas and prepare for their migration to Mexico and Central America.

All three counting programs are designed to provide accurate figures for projecting fall hunting populations.

Habitat evaluations, such as the current project by Rappole, enlarge the network of data about these popular game birds. His work provides insight into the habitat requirements of white-winged doves and other wild inhabitants of the Rio Grande Valley.

Live Oak PAC elects officers

The Live Oak Elementary School Chapter I Parent Advisory Council met Wednesday, Nov. 9, with 12 members present.

Officers elected for the 1983-84 school year are Debbie Dill, president; Amelia Martinez, vice president; Mamie Flores, secretary; Gloria Garcia, parliamentarian; and Maria Soliz, representative.

James Gillis, principal, explained the components of the Stanford Achievement Test and how students are selected for the Chapter I Reading Improvement program based on their vocabulary or total reading scores.

Members were shown their child's Stanford Diagnostic Reading Test and an explanation of the scores was given. Materials used to stimulate growth in areas of weakness in reading were examined.

Members voted to meet again in May so that the total reading and vocabulary scores of the 1983 and 1984 Stanford Achievement Tests can be compared.

'Turista' strikes half of all visitors to Mexico

About half of all visitors to Mexico will become ill with travelers' diarrhea — or "turista" — within the first two weeks of travel, according to an article in Texas Medicine.

And although the most popular warning is "Don't drink the water," researchers at the University of Texas Medical School at Houston say the main problem is the food.

"In many areas of the world where food handling standards and personal hygiene practices are at a low level, much of the food has been shown to be contaminated," the UT researchers write in the November issue of the Texas Medical Association's monthly journal.

The article was written by two physicians, Dr. Charles D. Ericsson and Dr. Herbert L. DuPont, and students Thomas Patterson and Frank Taylor who have since received their medical degrees.

Turista is caused primarily by bacteria, which the writers note are killed by heat. They say food served steaming and too hot to place immediately in the mouth can be considered safe. Also generally safe are breads, peeled or washed fruits and vegetables and commercially bottled drinks.

The researchers warn against eating leafy vegetables, salads, food left out or served cold and sauces left out in public restaurants.

"Studies by us in July 1982 showed that 65 percent of 384 U.S. travelers to Guadalajara, Mexico, became ill within the first five weeks of travel and 28 percent became ill more than once," they write.

Turista is caused not only by bacteria but by viruses and parasites. The researchers say the diarrhea is accompanied by one or more symptoms including fever, nausea, vomiting and abdominal pain or cramps.

Dehydration is the most severe effect of turista. The writers recommend sweetened mineral waters to combat fluid loss and they cite Penafiel and Agua de Tehuacan as brands available in Mexico.

They also say persons with travelers' diarrhea should avoid milk, cheese and other dairy products; spicy, greasy, fried foods; and large quantities of fruit. Instead, dry toast, bread, saltine crackers, apple sauce, rice, chicken and broth are recommended.

For mild cases of turista, the researchers suggest Pepto-Bismol. Travelers prone to more severe attacks may need to get a prescription drug before leaving.

Elderly feel vulnerable to crime

COLLEGE STATION — Many older Americans feel more vulnerable to crime because of physical limitations and limited financial resources, says Judith Warren, a family life education-aging specialist.

"Actually, older peole are not victimized any more or less than other age groups but this fact does not help feelings of fear," says Warren, who is with the Texas A&M University Agricultural Extension Service home economics program.

Older people living in rural areas may feel the isolation more than they did when they were younger," she adds.

Crime prevention organizations have a series of suggestions for older persons:

To prevent robbery, make sure the home is locked whenever you are not home. Dead bolt locks, locks or pins in windows and closed garage doors help keep a home secure.

The appearance of someone in the home is important too. Lights left on or a radio played at normal volume can be a deterrant.

Many neighborhoods organize a Neighborhood Watch. In this, neighbors agree to be aware of each other's home and report to the police any activities out of the ordinary.

Even a casual neighbor-to-neighbor conversation asking that the home be watched, can give the older person a feeling of security, notes the home economist.

Older persons can do some things themselves too, says Warran. Women do not have to carry their purses with them all the time. If they are out for a walk or window-shopping, they can leave their purse at home and remove some temptation to a purse snatcher.

"Go out with friends," says the specialist. "There is security in numbers. Plan your route so that you are traveling in safe areas and don't always go to the same place at the same time. Go grocery shopping at different times so that an intruder can't learn your schedule."

Considering each city resident breathes in 420 cubic feet of air every day, hardy, smog-resistant trees like dogwood and Norway maple that absorb polluted air and give off clean air, have quite a useful virtue, says "National Wildlife" magazine.

Freshwater fish venture into bays

Saltwater bay anglers sometimes are surprised to catch a freshwater fish where normally only saltwater fish are found.

Local biologist Art Morris of the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department said some freshwater species have fairly high tolerances for saline waters and often invade shallow bays after rains cause heavy freshwater inflows.

"Some freshwater fish can tolerate salinities up to 10 parts per thousand, and others, such as alligator gar, can survive up to 35 parts per thousand," Morris said. He said largemouth and white bass normally shy away from salty water, but shad, carp, freshwater drum, smallmouth buffalo and blue catfish often venture into the bays.

In Galveston

Shrimp harvest topic of workshop

GALVESTON — The scientific methods used to determine when and for how long the waters of the Gulf of Mexico should be closed to shrimping will be discussed at a one and one-half day meeting here Nov. 16 and 17. More than 100 scientists, fishermen and state and federal officials are expected at the Shrimp Yield Prediction Workshop to be held in the auditorium of the Classroom and Laboratory Building on the Mitchell Campus of Texas A&M University at Galveston. Sponsors of the workshop are the Sea Grant College Program at Texas A&M University, the National Marine Fisheries Service (NMFS) and the Texas chapter of the American Institute of Fishery Research Biologists (AIFRB).

Eight speakers from Alabama, Louisiana, Mississippi and Texas will present papers, according to workshop co-organizers Andre M. Landry, Texas A&M at Galveston, and Edward F. Klima, director, NMFS Galveston Laboratory.

"Management of fishery resources, such as shrimp, is done on a state-by-state basis," said Landry, "and there has been little exchange of information between the states."

Each state gathers scientific data about shrimp stocks in the part of the Gulf adjacent to it, and manages the shrimp fishery according to its needs. For example, Landry said, the shrimp fishery off Louisiana is managed in a way that yields a harvest of smaller shrimp, preferred by consumers there, and the Texas fishery is managed to provide larger shrimp, more popular with Texans.

No studies have been done of the Gulf of Mexico shrimp fishery as a whole, he said, so scientists do not know what effect management practices in one state have on the shrimp catch in another part of the Gulf. Landry said that participants in the workshop will exchange information gathered in their own states, and the resulting "pool" of data will allow scientists to more accurately predict the size of future shrimp harvests. Improved prediction will allow state officials to do a better job of managing the shrimp fishery, he noted.

The meeting will open at 8:30 a.m. with a welcome from Robert Stickney, Texas A&M University, president of the Texas Chapter of the American Institute of Fishery Research Biologists. Speakers include C.E. Bryan, Texas Parks and Wildlife Department; William S. Perret, Louisiana Wildlife and Fisheries Department; J.Y. Christmas, Gulf Coast Reserach Laboratory, Ocean Springs, Mississippi; Steve Heath, Alabama Department of Conservation and Natural Resources; and Neal Baxter, Roger Zimmerman, Charles Gaillouet and Dennis Coi, all of the NMFS Galveston Laboratory.

Klima will summarize the presentations, and the Thursday morning sessions will consist of small group discussions, in which attendees will be invited to participate.

Registration is $15 (students may attend without charge), and includes a copy of the abstracts of papers. Checks should be payable to AIFRB and mailed to Dr. Andre M. Landry, Texas A&M University at Galveston, P.O. Box 1675, Galveston, Texas 77553. Landry may be contacted at (409) 766-3325 for further information.

Thousands of handcrafted gifts and handpainted items will be on sale during the event held to raise money for the Aransas County Emergency Medical Service.

Hours of the Bazaar will be from 9 a.m. until 5 p.m. Saturday and from 11 a.m. until 4 p.m. Sunday.

Booths will include fashions featuring handpainted skirts, shirts, tops, trapunto handbags and hats. Booth Chairman Jane Moren added Christmas orders will be taken.

The trim-a-tree booth, chaired by Nancy Koch, will feature handcrafted stocking stuffers, tree ornaments, Christmas decorations and wreaths, and the gift boutique, headed by Ella Anderson and Ann Callahan, will offer such items as handpainted grater boxes, shell bookends, silkscreen notecards, magazine racks and macrame items.

A linens booth, headed by Babs Muecke, will offer handpainted towel sets, pillows, crocheted tea towels, napkins and placemats.

Stuffed and wooden toys, handmade clothing and games can be found at the children's corner chaired by Pat Lister, and the white elephant booth will feature "something for everyone," according to Chairman Helen Statesir.

Gen Ohrling and Irene Striber are co-chairmen of the baked goods booth which will feature, in addition to cakes, pies, cookies and breads, canned items such as jellies, jams and pickles.

Johnnie Vermillion is heading up sale of the new ACMSI "More Taste of the Coast Cookbook" for $6.95 per copy.

Other features of this year's bazaar include "Granny's Kitchen," chaired by Juanita Wharton and offering homemade beef stew or sandwiches, sweets and beverages. A highlight of the kitchen will be a cake being made by Rose Taylor in the form of an EMS ambulance. The cake will feature six flavors — lemon, cherry, chocolate mint, German chocolate, butter pecan and orange, plus coconut, almond, chocolate and pecan frostings — and will be sold by the piece.

A handpainted trapuntoed duck quilt and a crocheted afghan will be given away in a drawing at 3 p.m. Sunday, Nov. 20. Dorothy Moeller and Dottie Lambert, co-chairmen, said tickets are available for a donation of $1 each or six for $5. Tickets are available at the Women's Committee's Handcraft Store, 513 Broadway, or may be purchased at the bazaar.

Mary Casey, general chairman of the event, has asked that all members and friends of ACMSI bring donated items except baked goods to the Paws & Taws Building after 9 a.m. Friday.

Baked goods should be delivered about 8:30 a.m. Saturday or 10:30 a.m. Sunday, Casey added.

Bentsen says deficit cuts can't wait for elections, urges leadership

WASHINGTON D.C. — Senator Lloyd Bentsen said Tuesday that efforts to reduce the federal deficit must not be suspended until after next year's elections.

Bentsen admonished the administration for sending out conflicting signals on the effect of deficits and he urged the president to put a stop to the confusion and show leadership on the issue.

"We cannot wait until 1985, after the election, to deal with the staggering interest and foreign exchange effects of the deficit. We need leadership now and we need action now, before the 1984 elections," the senator said during hearings by the Joint Economic Subcommittee on Economic Growth.

Bentsen presided over the hearing, which featured testimony by Dr. Martin Feldstein, chairman of the president's Council of Economic Advisors.

"There is great confusion over the many sharply divergent White House signals on whether Congress and the nation should worry about the astronomical, $200 billion deficits we face," the senator said.

"On the one hand you, Mr. Chairman, have repeatedly said the deficits are harmful — that they affect interest rates and must be reduced. On the other hand, Treasury Secretary Donald Regan tells us not to worry — that deficits do not 'necessarily' affect interest rates."

"On the one hand we have David Packard, the president's representative on the U.S.-Japan Advisory Commission, who says the deficit-driven, overvalued dollar is costing us 2 million lost jobs annually. On the other hand we have Treasury Undersecretary Beryl Sprinkel, who says that deficits have not increased the dollar's value — that any such link is misleading."

"There is no doubt in my mind that your concern with the deficits is justified. They have a direct and major role in keeping real interest rates higher than they would otherwise be. In fact, higher deficits over the past decade have unfailingly led promptly to higher real interest rates."

"There has been an equally striking pattern over the last decade of deficits pushing up the dollar — with a severe and crippling impact on sales and employment in our basic and high-tech industries."

"The Senate Finance and House Ways and Means Committees are trying to cut the deficit. To do that the White House must be involved," Bentsen said.

The president has said in the past that deficits do matter. I want to know if he sides with you and me on that issue. If he does, then I urge you to ask the president to use the 'bully pulpit' provided by the Oval Office to build a national consensus — a bipartisan consensus — behind the steps that will be necessary to reduce the deficit," Senator Bentsen said.

German culture discussed at seminar

On the evening of Tuesday, Nov. 22, at 7 p.m. in the O'Connor Gallery of the McNamara House Museum, the Victoria Regional Museum Association will present "Where My Heart Longs to Go: Developing a German-American Culture brought to America by German immigrants in a new world environment.

Dr. Terry Jordan, a geographer at the University of Texas at Austin, will discuss German immigration to America and the development here of a distinctly German-American culture. Jordan is a specialist in the cultural geography of Texas and the American South and is the author of many books including "German Seed in Texas Soil: Immigrant Farmers in 19th-Century Texas," "Texas Log Buildings: A Folk Architecture," and "Texas Graveyards: A Cultural Legacy."

Following his talk, Dr. Herbert Holl and Virginia Dupuy will perform the music known to German immigrants during the 19th century. Holl is an accomplished pianist and executive director of the Victoria Arts Council. Dupuy is currently an instructor of voice at Southwestern University in Georgetown and is well known to Victorians as a soloist in the Victoria Bach Festival. Refreshments will follow the concert.

Seating is limited and it is strongly advised that individuals wishing to attend "Where My Heart Longs to Go" reserve their seats by calling the Victoria Regional Museum Association at 575-8227. Persons holding reservations are asked to take their seats at least 10 minutes before the program begins. At that time, any unoccupied seats will be given to persons waiting at the door.

The McNamara House, located at 502 N. Liberty, Victoria, contains furnished period rooms and a variety of historical exhibits. The museum is open Tuesday through Sunday, 1-5 p.m.

"Where My Heart Longs to Go: Developing a German-American Culture in 19th-Century Texas" is made possible by a grant from the Texas Committee for the Humanities, a state program of the National Endowment for the Humanities.

Public comment on nursing education welcomed

Registered nurses and concerned citizens are invited to review and comment on the issue of nursing education at an open meeting hosted by the Texas Nurses Association District 17 at 10 a.m. Saturday, Nov. 19, in the basement auditorium at Memorial Medical Center.

Presented at the meeting will be a draft document titled "Directions for Nursing Education in Texas - 1983-1995: An Operational Plan." The document proposes that the state of Texas eventually require a baccalaureate degree for practitioners of professional nursing and that associate degree nursing programs prepare individuals for the technical practice of nursing.

"A lot of interest, both in Texas and nationally, has been generated over the issue of what educational entry point should be required on an individual who practices as a professional nurse," Jo Werlinger, TNA District 17 president said. TNA District 17 is sponsoring the open meeting.

In Texas, the RN licensing exam is taken by nursing graduates prepared by one of three educational programs: the four-year baccalaureate degree program, a two-year junior college program or a hospital-based three-year diploma program. Many within health care services maintain that competencies vary among the three types of graduates.

"Each person attending the meeting will receive a copy of the proposal," Jo Werlinger said. "Everyone needs to understand that the proposal is a working draft. Dialog and recommendations are welcomed and needed so that the final document will reflect the best thinking of Texas nurses and consumers."

The book is a summary of information on the biology of birds that breed in temperate and boreal North America and winter in the tropics. It contains chapters on ecology, distribution, population changes, outlook for migrant birds in the tropics and management recommendations.

Appendices are included on species, foods, habitats, distribution and status of species by country and region, and an annotated bibliography.

Kidney disease common problem

By DR. HAP LUTZ

The kidneys function to filter and remove waste materials from the bloodstream. They also regulate the composition and volume of body fluids.

Kidney disease is any distructive process within the kidney. It is one of the common medical problems of older cats and dogs. If the disease causes enough destruction, the kidneys cannot perform properly, so waste material (toxic substances) accumulate in the blood. A loss of appetite, increased thirst, frequent urination, poor hair coat, depression and vomiting may result from kidney damage.

There are many causes of kidney disease. A veterinarian can examine your pet and, through laboratory testing, can evaluate the severity of the disease and prescribe the best method of management.

At home, management of kidney disease should allow free access to clean, fresh water. Try to prevent extreme exertion, excitement and extremes of hot or cold temperatures. Your veterinarian will prescribe medication which should be followed carefully even though your pet may appear to be better.

Your veterinarian will probably suggest a diet that is especially formulated to reduce the demands on damaged kidneys.

A pet with chronic kidney disease can live a long life without pain if properly medicated and cared for.

If you have any questions concerning the health or care of your pet, mail them to Dr. Lutz in care of The Rockport Pilot, 1002 Wharf Street, Rockport, Texas 78382. Your questions will be answered by Dr. Lutz in the next issue of The Pilot.

New procedure cuts work for oil and gas operators

AUSTIN — An estimated $9,600 will be saved each year by Texas oil and gas operators through a new filing procedure to be implemented by the Railroad Commission for one of its forms.

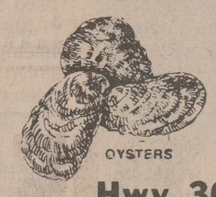

The change, which becomes effective Dec. 1, involves procedures regarding the commission's form P-4, which is a producer's authorization to transport oil, gas and condensates from a particular oil or gas lease. The form is required by the commission before any oil or gas can be moved from a lease.

Under the procedures now in effect, an operator attempting to meet the requirement had to file additional copies to be sent to various gatherers or purchasers that may have been involved with production from a particular lease.

With the new procedure only a single form will be required by the commission. Information from the from will be entered into the commission's computer file and a copy will be produced for all the gatherers and purchasers that may have an interest in the particular lease.

The commission receives approximately 200 new Form P-4's each day.

For more information about the new procedure, operators can call 445-1268 (oil) or 445-1251 (gas).

Recreation facilities topic of special ACND meeting

By PAT BLAIR
Managing editor

Emphasizing that "the district was never created to be in the recreation business," Aransas County's navigation district commissioners turned to users of the beach facilities with a plea for help in a special ACND meeting last Thursday, Nov. 10.

"We're not set up for recreation," ACND Commissioner Hillis Dominguez told those attending the special meeting last week at the district's office. The only funds the navigation district presently receives, he pointed out, are revenues from the harbors and a tax of 2 cents per $100 valuation.

The tax money is used to maintain the district's recreational facilities, Dominguez said, but it isn't supposed to be. "The 2 cents tax was originally made for harbor money," he said.

Navigation district members at Thursday's meeting presented three proposals for discussion with the audience: a single, permanent site for all special events on Rockport Beach, a users' fee and assistance from the city and county to help maintain the recreation facilities.

Three possible permanent sites were presented by Dominguez who then narrowed the considerations down to the site used for the first time this year by SeaFair. This site, Dominguez said, would require more traffic control but would not require the closing of any streets leading onto the beach or other beach facilities. The other two sites being considered — the original SeaFair site and the Bandshell — would require closing of some streets and other facilities on the beach.

Cam Leonard, president of the Rockport Art Association, on behalf of the Art Association opposed confinement of all activities to one site and in particular opposed the new SeaFair site for Art Association use.

Leonard noted it is a good site for the SeaFair, which "attracts far more people than the Art Festival" and therefore needs the additional space the new site provides.

But he observed the site is adjacent to the nesting area for the least terns and noted that, although the nesting season is over at the time of SeaFair, it is at its height at the time the July Art Festival is held.

Showing photographs of least tern eggs and hatching chicks, Leonard said these were taken during the Art Festival this past summer and while the Art Festival in its present location does not interfere with the terns, moving the festival to the end of the beach would do so.

"It's enough to have the Audubon Society down on us," Leonard said of the proposed move.

'We're not set up for recreation'

Commissioner Hal McKnight at one point said, "Let's forget the birds — we have a reserve down there. What would it cost you to move down there?"

"What would it cost you for us not to move?" Leonard countered. "We don't want to move to another site that is more costly, not as workable and would draw the wrath of the nation on the Art Association and this board." Leonard argued that people going to and from the Art Festival site would ignore the cables roping off the least tern nesting site and walk through the area anyway.

Leonard gained support from Pat Brown speaking on behalf of SeaFair at the meeting. Brown said the new location is needed by SeaFair "because that's the only area that will accommodate 40-50,000 people. Our only alternative," he added, "is to move inland, and SeaFair off the water isn't SeaFair."

Told that the ACND has proposed a single special events site in part because of a recommendation from the Texas A&M Extension Service now studying the district's beaches, Bill Janecek asked, "Why does Texas A&M want us to have one spot?"

"One reason is economics," Dominguez said, saying it is less expensive to have one designated area for such events. He said it would also make it easier for the district to try for grant funds.

"What's the problem with raising (the current tax) to 4 cents?" asked Brown. "Couldn't you tell A&M and all these other grant giveaways to go fly a kite? Two cents to run these facilities is ridiculous," he added.

In response to an observation by ACND Commissioner Charlie Augustine that "federal grant money is our tax money anyway," Janecek asked, "Is it worth it to screw up what we have to get these grants? Let's get the tax rate up to be self-sustaining."

In response to questions from Leonard, Dominguez said the ACND budgets 50 percent of its operating costs to the harbors and 50 percent to the recreation fund. The result, Dominguez said, is a $26,000 deficit this year alone in the recreation fund, a figure that must be subsidized by revenues generated by the harbors.

Leonard questioned this procedure, saying, "I don't feel that 50 percent of the overhead should be paid for by recreation facilities. Since recreation traditionally has never produced an income," he said, "I don't see why you're trying to increase revenues."

Rockport Alderman Richard Beck, also attending the meeting, told the ACND commissioners, "Part of your deficit is caused by your allocations." Beck later asked, "If you go to one location, how much will this decrease your deficit?" to which Augustine replies, "Not much."

On a discussion of the ACND's second proposal, a users' fee, Leonard said the proposal of a percentage of money raised by the special event "is objectionable" although a flat fee charge would be more acceptable to the Art Association.

Touching on the third item, Dominguez said he felt "In the long run, I believe it would be better for the city to take it (Rockport Beach) over, because we're (the ACND) not set up for recreation."

George McCague, chairman of Rockport's board of parks and recreation, observed, "I've said all along the recreation in this area should all be under one head. There should be some sort of unified group" to maintain recreational facilities.

Janecek asked, "Is there some way some group could be formed? If the city doesn't want it, the county doesn't want it and the navigation district can't afford it, is there some way they could share the cost?"

Dick asked why the board has not yet had a workshop meeting to discuss its priorities for the 5-year plan. "Until we get our priorities straight, I don't understand how the professionals are going to know what we want," she said. Brundrett assured her that the board will meet as soon as the reports from the various committees working on different areas of the plan have been submitted.

During a special meeting at 12:30 p.m. Monday, the board cast its 2,972 for the Aransas County Appraisal District board of directors. A motion by Mundine, seconded by Naquin, cast 991 votes for Lenora Beck, 991 votes for Tom Rogers and 990 votes for D.H. Roberts. The motion was approved 6-0; Bracht was absent from the meeting.

A computer advisory committee consisting of Vi Shirey of Bee County College, David Perkins of Corpus Christi State University and Joe Howard Livingston of Del Mar Junior College were appointed to make recommendations to the board concerning hardware and program content. A computer education committee will be appointed by the administration at a later date.

In other board action, administrative policy delegating the the superintendent to develop administrative regulations and present them to the board for consideration was approved on second reading.

Dick was elected by acclamation to serve on an committee including representatives from all county taxing entities and administrative bodies, which will study the impact of continuous growth on various parts of the area. The study will be conducted in conjunction with the Texas A&M University Extension Service. The group, which has met twice already, will meet again in January.

Three school buses, one 18-passenger and two 72-passenger vehicles, will be ordered by the district for delivery by next September. The buses must be ordered well in advance in order to receive delivery before the next school year.

ACISD Superintendent E.J. Randow reported that as of Monday, 51 percent of the district's taxes for 1983-84 have been collected.

Deadline for cash donations is Dec. 2, according to Jo Lee McConnell, one of the two designated toy-buyers for this year's campaign. This is to give her and Pam Roe, the other buyer, time to purchase the toys before the Dec. 17 distribution date.

Another fundraising event will be a "turkey-in-the-draw" this weekend, Nov. 19 and 20, Jackson said. This event is being sponsored by the new Lionesses Club. Tickets will be available from 8 a.m. until 5 p.m. Saturday and from 10:30 a.m. until 5 p.m. Sunday at H.E.B. for a $1 donation.

Roe, president of the Lionesses Club, said the drawing will be at 5 p.m. Sunday. Fifteen turkeys weighing an average 15-20 pounds, will be given away, Jackson added. All proceeds from the drawing will go to Toys for Kids.

Jackson added it is not necessary to be present at the drawing to win, but the winners must pick up their turkeys at H.E.B. within 48 hours of the drawing. Names of winners will be posted at the store, he added.

Additional funds for the campaign have been pledged by the Aransas County Ministerial Alliance which has announced plans to donate half of the collection taken during the Community Thanksgiving Services on Nov. 22 to Toys for Kids. Services will be at 7:30 p.m. at Fulton Community Church.

McConnell asked any businesses or organizations planning to give toys instead of gifts at their Christmas parties to please notify her at 729-1684. McConnell said she is in charge of keeping an inventory of toys, both donated and purchased, to avoid overbuying or underbuying toys in various age groups. People who donate toys are asked to buy them for age ranges from infant to 12 years.

McConnell also asked anyone planning to donate a toy to "please donate a new toy, not a used one."

Jugs for collection of cash donations have been placed at the Back 40, Wal-Mart, Texas Tu-Step, Jerry's Pharmacy, Pizza Hut, the Donut Dock, Ron's Fried Chicken, Super D, Winn's, Whataburger, the Dairy Queen, Shep's, the Ice Box on Hwy. 35 North, Joe's Barbecue, Roaten's and Johnson's pharmacies, Duck Inn, Klines, Rockport Discount Liquor, Circle K, the Old Bay Oyster Bar, Maverick Market, Rick's Quick Mart and U-Tote-M, McConnell and Roe said.

Parents who will be invited to select toys collected through the Toys for Kids campaign are chosen with the assistance of the Department of Human Resources, Jackson said. Last year, more than 200 youngsters enjoyed the thrill of receiving toys on Christmas morning through this program.

"We hope to be able to give two to three toys per child this year as we have been able to do in the past through the generosity of this community," McConnell said.

Jackson added, "If we have more money and more toys, we'll be able to serve more kids."

Salary

$1,496 monthly. Hewes request would increase their salaries by $94.34, bringing them to $1,591. Rockport police detectives earn a current salary of $1,559. A 2 percent merit raise would bring their salaries to $1,590.18 per month.

Sheriff's deputies would earn $1,529 per month if Hewes request is approved, an increase of $145 monthly over their present salaries of $1,384. Police patrol officers in Rockport currently earn $1,499, $1,528 with a 2 percent merit increase.

Hewes estimated that the cost of the increased salaries would amount to $1,473 monthly of $17,682.48 per year, not including what the county pays out in insurance plus Social Security. Since fees for the sheriff's department were recently raised 70 percent, the sheriff expects to approximate increase in revenues of nearly $15,000 to be collected during 1984.

The sheriff said his request was not presented in the county's 1984 budget because the figures for the police department were not available until October. Hewes said that his employees are putting in at least 10 hours a day and are often called in to work on their days off to make up for a personnel shortage.

Chief Deputy Doug Carroll, who was also present at the meeting, added that the workload alone would justify the increase requested.

Aransas County Judge John D. Wendell told Hewes that his salary cannot be raised without a public hearing on the budget. Wendell also stated that comparing county and city personnel as a criteria for salaries is a dangerous precedent because it could similarly be applied to secretaries and other government personnel.

Hewes request was tabled by the commissioners for a workshop meeting.

In other court news, the $20,000 performance bond for construction of a cul-de-sac on Estes Dr. in the Bahia Bay Subdivision was received by the county Monday along with a $30,000 maintenance bond for a 1-year warranty on the roads in the subdivision.

The court also approved a motion to approve application to the state criminal justice division for a $23,476 grant for a "court coordinator," The San Patricio County project will have a total cost of $27,324; the difference will be paid by the participating counties on a pro rata basis.

Returns from the Nov. 8 constitutional election were canvassed by the court Monday. The figures presented were found to be correct and were accepted by the court.

A&I faculty members receive Organized Research grants

KINGSVILLE — Twelve Texas A&I University faculty members have received Organized Research grants from the University's Office of Graduate Studies and Research. The grants — totalling some $43,000 — are for September 1983 through August of 1984.

"The titles of the proposals reflect the diversity of faculty research," said Graduate Studies Dean Alberto M. Olivarez. The University Research Council screens proposals for creativity, originality and significant contribution to knowledge.

"Last year's 16 projects led to a published monograph in linguistics, five journal publications, two art exhibits, three comprehensive research studies and several invited papers at national and international meetings," Olivarez said.

Areas covered in this year's projects are agriculture, art, biology, geosciences, history and mathematics.

Agriculture professor David D. Neher is studying "A Modified Hydrometer Method of Soil Particle Size Analysis." Clark Magruder, associate professor of art, is working with the "Writers Bloc: South Texas' Tri-Quarterly Journal of the Literary Arts."

Two biology projects were funded. Professor James E. Gillaspy's work is on the "Development of Management Technology for Polistes Wasps." Dr. Jon Reyniers, assistant professor of biology, is researching the "Characterization of Nephrocytomeolia induced in Rates by 2, 3-Diaminopropionic Acid, Potentially Available from Lysinoalanine."

Various areas in Texas are the focus of four geosciences projects. Assistant professor Jon A. Baskin is conducting "A Paleoecological and Paleoenvironmental Study of Baffin Bay."

Dr. Michael A. Jordan, assistant professor, is working on a "Structural Analysis of Precambrian Rocks in Central Texas." Professor James Norwine's project is entitled "The Climate of South Texas: An Assessment of Normal Conditions and Abnormal (Extreme) Phases, 1950-1981."

Dr. William F. Thomann, assistant professor, is studying "Petrography and Geochemistry of Giant Garnets in Garnet Pegmatics of the Red Bluff Granite Complex, Franklin Mountains, Texas."

Associate professor Terrence J. Barragy, Department of History, is conducting a study on "Ownership Patterns of the Boston Merchant Aristocracy."

Beef price differences between farm and market explained

Both producers and consumers often "beef" about beef prices — the producer complaining that he doesn't get enough for his steers and the consumer complaining that steak cost too much.

The main culprit in looking at the big differences between retail and farm beef prices is the fact that we don't eat live animals.

A steer must be marketed, slaughtered, transported, cut into retail pieces and ultimately merchandised to consumers. During this process, well over half of the original weight is lost. In fact, a typical 1,000-pound fed steer yields much less than half of his original weight in saleable retail beef cuts.

Weight loss is going on almost constantly during the marketing phase. the 1,000-pound steer must first be marketed and transported to a meat packer. This alone causes about 30 to 60 pounds of lost weight due to shrinkage.

After slaughter, the packer is left with about 200 pounds of hide and other by-products and another 200 pounds of valueless material, leaving a beef carcass that weighs only about 600 pounds. Cooling another 2 to 3 percent shrinkage before the carcass is sold.

Usually packers sell directly to food retailers, but the carcass might be sold to a meat wholesaler who separates it into quarters or primal cuts and then sells these to retailers.

Because of these different paths to the retailer, some additional weight losses of "breaking" a carcass into wholesale cuts may be passed on to retailers.

The meat retailer finds that only a portion of the beef carcass he bought is actually retail beef cuts. Slightly less than one-quarter is roasts, almost one-quarter yields steaks and just under a quarter is miscellaneous cuts such as short-ribs, ground beef and stew beef.

Almost one-third of the total carcass is waste in the form of fat, bones and shrinkage. So, a 600-pound carcass has diminished into about 417 pounds of saleable retail cuts of beef.

Further complicating the retailer's picture is the fact that highly-demanded cuts, like steaks, are only a small proportion of the carcass. For example, a 600-pound beef carcass typically yields only about 50 pounds of sirloin steaks, close to 65 pounds of round steak and about 35 pounds of rib roasts.

A huge amount, typically as much as 140 pounds, is relatively cheap cuts like hamburger, stew meat and other miscellaneous cuts.

The key thing to remember is: "All steer is not steak." It takes about 2.4 pounds of live steer to produce just one pound of saleable retail beef cuts.

Ash Texas chairman of Great American Smokeout

To emphasize another kind of beauty — the beauty of good health — the American Cancer Society (ACS) announced today that Texas businesswoman Mary Kay Ash of Dallas will serve as honorary chairman of the 1983 Great American Smokeout in Texas.

Known throughout the country for the cosmetics which bear her name, Ash accepted the position because of the event's positive, good-natured theme.

The smokeout is sponsored by the ACS nationwide to encourage smokers to give up their cigarettes for just one day — Nov. 17 — if only to prove to themselves they can.

"I can think of few things that would be more beautiful than for a smoker to give up cigarettes . . . or for a friend to help someone give them up — whether it's for one day or a lifetime," said Ash. "Texas has volunteers all over the state promoting this as a day for the smoker and I like that."

A survey conducted by the Gallup organization last year (the smokeout is now in its seventh year) indicated more than 19 million Americans tried to quit for the day. Almost 5 million made it the whole day and 2.3 million were still not smoking one to 11 days later.

According to Texas ACS volunteers planning the smokeout, Ash's involvement is particularly timely.

"She is certainly one of the best-known, most admired women in this state and frankly, women smokers are a target audience for us," said Penny Reeves of Austin, who is the volunteer spearheading the campaign in Texas.

The ACS predicts that by the end of the decade lung cancer will surpass breast cancer as the number one cancer killer among women. If a woman smokes, her chances of developing lung cancer are five times greater than that of a non-smoking woman.

"With Mary Kay Ash as our honorary chairman, we hope to draw attention to the unfortunate truth that lung cancer is not just a male disease," said Reeves.

Another feature of this year's smokeout is an "Adopt-A-Smoker" theme whereby nonsmokers adopt their smoker friends and family members for the day offering them support and encouragement. To help promote this concept, which originated in the society's Maryland division, "adoption" papers are available.

Most Texas communities are participating in the event in various ways — from rallies, parades and school assemblies to balloon lift-offs and kissing booths. Support programs for smokers termed "Freshstart," and led by volunteer ex-smokers, are also being sponsored by the ACS in communities statewide.

All Texas smokers are encouraged to join in the fun. They may contact their local ACS volunteers or office for tips on quitting, support materials or information on locally planned smokeout events.

New arrowhead is illegal

Development of a new expanding-tip broadhead hunting arrow has raised questions about its legality for taking deer in Texas.

Texas Parks and Wildlife Department officials said bowhunters should be aware that any broadhead must measure between 7/8 inch and 1½ inches in width. Smaller or larger broadheads are prohibited for taking game animals in Texas.

The three-blade broadhead in question falls within the legal width measurements when closed, but upon impact it spreads to a width of more than 2 inches.

Law enforcement officials said under current regulations the expanding tip is illegal, but they said hunters who already have invested in the broadheads can make them legal for the 1983-84 deer seasons by immobilizing the moving parts of the broadheads so they do not exceed the 1½ inch maximum width.

La Bahia announces December 1 deadline

Nomination secretary Sandy Carothers of La Bahia Downs at Goliad announced a Dec. 1 nomination deadline for their Spring Stakes. "We expect a big increase of last year's rich purses," said Carothers this week. "Interest is running high and our big added money is going to attract the top entries," Carothers concluded.

The 1984 Spring Meet will open the LaBahia Downs racing season. Spring dates are March 17-18, 24-25, 31 and April 1. Once again the Texas Futurity (this will be the 22nd running at 330 yards) heads the stake list. The Futurity has an estimated purse of $200,000 with $25,000 added. The 1983 winner was "Burnell" owned by Rio Investors of Rio Grande. The Futurity trials will be run March 24 with the finals and two consolations on April 1.

The companion feature, the South Texas Derby, at 350 yards is being run for the 21st time. Estimated purse is $100,000 with $12,500 added. The South Texas Derby holds a world's non mutual record purse of $117,650. Derby trials will be March 17 with the finals and consolation scheduled for March 25. The 1983 winner was "Scattas Baley" owned by Winning Ways Mare Farm of Lubbock.

The third rich stake is the Great Texas Maturity for 4 year olds and up at 350 yards. This popular stake will be sponsored by Stone Well Service of Lolita and has $6,000 added money. The purse, estimated at $40,000, will be the richest Maturity ever run in Texas. The 1983 winner was "A Smooth Afton Bug" owned by Marvin Barnes of Ada, Okla. Maturity trials are March 17 with the finals on April 1.

La Bahia Downs has just completed the biggest year in its 22-year history. Track Manager, Leonard Von Dohlen III is optimistic that 1984 will be even bigger. Von Dohlen bases this opinion on the apparent leveling out of the recessional period that part of the country has experienced during the past two years. "Many new people are entering the horse business and new and old are excited about the future," Von Dohlen stated.

Inside Sports . . . New Orleans Saints coach Bum Phillips was talking about his quarterback, Ken Stabler, recently. "Stabler is like Earl Campbell," Phillips said. "He may not be in a class by himself, but it don't take long to call the roll."

"That's an old line," said a reporter.

"That's an old quarterback," said Phillips.

Wayne Gretzky would like to make one thing perfectly clear: Success has not gone to his head. "It doesn't bother me if people say I was the reason why we lost the Stanley Cup," Gretzky, 22, said of the New York Islanders' four-game sweep of the Edmonton Oilers in May. "The only thing that bothers me is people saying success has gone to my head. "The older I get and more I accomplish, more is expected of me. I think there are a lot of people out there hoping and waiting for me to do bad. It seems to be getting tougher each year. People seem to be asking questions like, 'Is Wayne Gretzky burnt out yet?' Or, 'Has success gone to his head?' Well, I'm getting tired of it. If success was going to my head, I think it would have happened three years ago."

Down in Tampa, they're still buzzing over the first drive former Pit and current Tampa Bay Buccaneers linebacker Hugh Green crushed during a celebrity gold tournament. After all, the ball flew an estimated 300 yards. Unfortunately, Green missed the ball on his first six swings.

Speaking of golf, not too long ago Lee Trevino was discussing his divorce from his first wife, Claudia. "All the time we were married, I wanted to buy a ranch," he said. "She was always against it and wanted to live in town. Then, when we split, guess what's the first thing she bought?"

Charlotte, N.C., Oct. 5 — Ron Hartill of Lake Cowichan, B.C., Canada, with perfect scores in four of six events, won the 1983 Homelit Tournament of Kings world chain saw cutting championship and $6,000 first prizes. Shirley Smith, a 46-year-old housewife from Albany, Ore., and the first woman to qualify for the international competition, finished in 14th position. The 6-foot-4, 220-pound lumberjack scored a perfect 16 points in speed-boring, precision-cutting and steeplechase events to win his second world title in the last three years. He scored 10 points in tree-falling and 15 in speed-cutting to finish with 89 points, six points ahead of runner-up Cliff Hughes of Auckland, New Zealand, who won $3,000. Roy Booth Sr., LaGrande, Ore., the 1982 defending champion, was third with 77 points and received $1,500. The remaining contestants were Sven Johnson, Jewett City, Conn., 67 points; Richard Geer, Jewett City, Con., 66; Ron Johnson, Plainfield, Conn., 57; Bill Cogar, Webster Spring, W. Va., 57; Roger Gordner, Millville, Pa., 53; Jack Stewart, Meridian, Ind., 50; Dave Geer, Jewett City, Conn., 49; Carl Saline, Ridgeway, Pa., 38; Jerry Laney, Luna, N.M., 30; Dan Bundy, Manton, Mich., 28; Shirley Smith, 24 and David Cramer, Pierce, Ind., 24.

Before an oldtimers game at Yankee Stadium, former Yankee Tommy Henrich was telling a reporter about the time he ran into a wall at Fenway park and opened a deep gash in his head. As Henrich was talking, former Yankees pitcher Lefty Gomez strolled by, and Henrich said, "You remember that, Lefty?" "Of course I do," Gomez said. "I was pitching that day. What I remember is that Joe McCarthy took me out of the game after Henrich hit the wall. Now you're bleeding on the stretcher and McCarthy looks around the dugout and says, 'We need somebody to go with Henrich to the hospital.' I was out of the game so I said, 'I'll go.' McCarthy says, 'You! You nearly killed him!' "

Somewhere, there's a very ecstatic fanatic. Or so believe officials of the New York Islanders who think that the recent theft of 17 jerseys, three helmets and three pairs of gloves was the work of a fan. "You've got some sports nuts — fanatics — and they like having players' jerseys," said Jerry Walsh, spokesman for the NHL team. The equipment was stolen from the Islanders' locker room in the Nassau Coliseum and may be difficult to recover as the authentic, stolen jerseys are identical to the ones sold in sporting goods stores. The thief, however, probably was not looking to fence the stolen goods. "It was somebody looking for some collectible items," Walsh said.

Former Pittsburgh Steelers wide receiver Lynn Swann, now a broadcaster for ABC-TV, says critics have been unduly harsh on his performance during USFL telecasts. Swann said he found the critics tougher than sportswriters, citing one critic from a national sports weekly who called Swann "mechanical" and said he "gabbed incessantly, over-analyzing replays."

"I look at my tapes," said Swann, "and I can pick out run-on sentences where I kept saying, 'And this and that' instead of completing a thought. I also could hear when my articulation or my delivery was bad. But when I looked at what the critics wrote, it sounded like they were nitpicking." Swann said he has learned one lesson about the critics. "No one ever says what you do well — they always say what you do poorly."

Having waited years to wrest the America's Cup from the United States, it now appears that the Australian public will have more difficulty seeing the newly won trophy. Royal Perth Commodore Peter Dalziell said that because the Royal Perth Yacht Club wanted to maintain the mystique of its new possession, the Cup would not be on permanent public display and might be exhibited only on special occasions. The ornate, solid-silver trophy arrived on Australian soil and was displayed for only 15 minutes at Perth Airport before security guards whisked it to a bank vault in the city. "It's neven been on display in the New York Yacht Club," Dalziell said. "That's part of the majesty and mystery of the Cup. People at some stage will see it, but generally it will stay under wraps."

Bill Madlock of the Pittsburg Pirates has become only the ninth major-leaguer in modern baseball history to win four batting titles, but he still calls 1983 "a bad year for me."

"I didn't play the way I can play, didn't hit the way I can hit," Madlock said. "It was a disappointing season. I didn't hit for extra bases the way I can. It was frustrating, because baseball has always come natural for me." Madlock, whose .323 average was the lowest to win a National League batting title since Edd Roush hit .321 for Cincinnati in 1919, sat out the Pirates' final game Sunday because manager Chuck Tanner feared that the third baseman would aggravate a tendon pull in his right calf that had bothered him since Labor Day. Madlock said he was "happy, but not satisfied" with the batting title, although he and former Pirates outfielder Roberto Clemente are the only right-handed batters to win four titles in the last quarter century.

Gullermo Vilas, the first tennis player to be suspended for allegedly accepting guaranteed appearance money, says he is quitting the Grand Prix circuit pending the outcome of his appeal. "I'm going to play Barcelona next and then I won't play any more Grand Prix tournaments until they have judged my case," the Argentine veteran said. Vilas received a one-year suspension and a $20,000 fine in June from the Men's International Pro Tennis Council for allegedly accepting $100,000 to play a tournament in Rotterdam, the Netherlands, last March. Calling the Pro Council's sanction "without basis in fact" and a "patently illegal and offensive determination," Vilas later filed a formal notice of appeal in New York. "I'm tired of waiting," Vilas said. "Ive been waiting since June. Everybody is slowing down things. It looks like they don't want to judge me. Last time when (John) McEnroe had a problem he was judged very fast. Why can't they do the same thing with me?"

Ron Paul challenges Paul Volcker on secrecy practices

In House Banking Committee hearings last week Rep. Ron Paul (R-Texas) challenged Federal Reserve Chairman Paul Volcker on Fed secrecy practices, saying he sees "no purpose" in the practice of not making Federal Open Market Committee meeting minutes available to the public immediately.

Edited minutes of the meetings at which decisions regarding the buying and selling of debt are reached are usually withheld from the public for 45 days.

In close questioning, Rep. Paul demanded of Volcker to know why a summary accounting of the meetings should not be released immediately. The chairman replied that making the information known would result in public reactions "to words instead of actions," leading to "a lot of concern and misunderstanding as to precisely what the words meant."

Besides shielding the meetings from public scrutiny, Rep. Paul later charged the practice has consequences far worse than those feared by Chairman Volcker. "If Volcker is concerned with public reactions to information about the meetings, he should be doubly concerned about selective leaks, rather than allowing free competition based on equal access to the information," he said.

"Above all," the congressman said, "I believe the more open the government is the better it is, and this practice violates the principle and further insulates the Fed from public scrutiny. The Fed is far too powerful and far too secretive already. The meetings need to be opened, period."

A consistent critic of Fed secrecy, Congressman Paul is sponsor of H.R. 877 mandating a Government Accounting Office audit of the Federal Reserve System.

Broadway is my beat

By JOEY SASSO

On the Music Scene: . . . RCA Records this week announced it will release a new album, "Elvis: A Legendary Performer, Vol. IV," containing two unreleased songs recently discovered at Graceland, an unreleased master acquired by RCA from Sun Records, an unreleased song from the film, "Girls, Girls, Girls," an unreleased duet with Ann-Margaret from "Viva Las Vegas," and other material never before available commercially.

This album will bring to the millions of Elvis fans and collectors a significant amount of material never before available to them further documenting one of the most remarkable careers in the history of recorded entertainment.

Also included in the October album is a rare 1956 interview with Elvis by Ran and Norma Pillow, taped just before a concert in Tampa, Fla.

In The Wings . . . Ginger Rogers would like to get the record straight — she has done 73 movies in her career and only 10 of them were with Fred Astaire.

"I hear that Fred says the same thing about me," the vivacious Ginger adds roguishly. "You know, it wasn't like we were Abbott and Costello or Stan and Ollie. We did get around to playing with other people."

Resting at the Union Plaza Hotel in Las Vegas, Ginger recalled the greatest triumph in her career was in 1940 when she won the Oscar for "Kitty Foyle."

"Oh, it's not an ego thing," she said. "It was that everyone seemed to be upset because me — a mere singer and dancer — had dared play a dramatic role. Who did I think I was, they asked, Sarah Bernhardt?"

Ginger recalled one actress, the reigning queen of drama in those days, who indicated to her that winning the Oscar was a fluke and she really had no acting talent. Ginger's Irish temper flared. "Listen my dear," she said sweetly. "You do a number with Fred Astaire and he makes you rehearse 15 hours a day and at the end of the number you have to lovingly kiss him instead of batting him over the skull with an axe, then you'll know what acting is all about."

Swing Set Confidential . . . Actress Bo Derek has discovered that her sexy allure often proves overwhelming to her leading men. All they want to do is seduce her.

"When I am doing a scene with a man they somehow believe there should be a hidden intimacy there," she said while filming her latest movie, "Bolero," in Morocco.

"They assume in a love scene that something should be going on between us." That's just what Italian actor Fabio Testi did. And after he was replaced as her leading man, that's what Andrea Occhipinti did as well. But Bo fought them both off.

Said Bo, with a toss of those famous locks: "Before he went, Fabio said we would have to become close if we were to do our love scenes and I said that would never happen. Even Andrea, who replaced him, thought that way at the beginning. They all seem to assume I will succumb."

The insult to her husband, director John Derek, was appalling, she said. "Our lifestyle is very moral," she said as she paced the square of an old walled mountain village, "We are faithful — completely. That is the way we are and if others want to be different, that is fine too. But not for me."

Bo says she doesn't look down on women who are promiscuous, though. "I don't make judgements," she added, "I am very fortunate. John and I have spent nine years of concentrated living together, 24 hours a day and that is a whole lifetime.

"He is the right half — I think his thoughts before he thinks them, and he does mine. I had a couple of boyfriends before John, but nothing serious. I think it is important that he is 30 years older than I. People believe he uses me and abuses me. The reality is that he supports my independence. He supports my strength, my decisions, all the things that make me strong and happy about myself."

Channel Views: . . . Four significantly-updated editions of this past season's "Inside Story" will air on PBS on successive Thursdays at 9 p.m. (ET).

The encore season concludes with "For the First Time Ever" (Nov. 17), adding new chapters to the story of Robert Maynard, first black owner/editor of a major U.S. metropolitan daily, the Oakland Tribune, and "Scandals at the Checkout Counter" (Nov. 24), an updated examination of how Globe Communications develops its provocative and sensational stories.

Street of the Midnight Sun . . . The public is invited to dance among the stars and become part of a celebrity bash, mingling with top names such as Jennifer Beale, Irene Cara, Dustin Hoffman, Mary Tyler Moore, Raquel Welch and many more on Friday, Nov. 4, from 8 p.m. on, at Panache on Broadway. All proceeds will go to the Spina Bifida Association.

Fish poisoning a Caribbean hazard

Here's a fish story that's no laughing matter.

It has to do with ciguatera — fish poisoning — which has been recognized in the Caribbean basin since the 16th century and is now seen sporadically throughout the United States in travelers or temporary inhabitants of the Caribbean Islands.

"Ciguatera can occur anywhere in the United States because of the high mobility of our population and the popularity of the Caribbean vacation," says Dr. Chesley Hines, an Ochsner Clinic gastroenterologist. He reports on three such cases treated at the New Orleans clinic in a recent issue of the clinic in a recent issue of the "Southern Medical

"Fish poisoning is commonly associated with the consumption of large reef fish. It is quite common in varying degrees in the warmer climates of the Caribbean where people consume large amounts of red snapper, grouper and occasionally amberjack and barracuda. The illness is caused by a toxin in the fish which is in turn caused by an organism that lives in warm waters of the Caribbean and the central Pacific Islands," Dr. Hines explains.

Dr. Hines emphasizes that the same species of fish caught in the Gulf of Mexico do not seem to have the toxin, but that the syndrome is well-recognized by the natives of the warmer Caribbean islands.

Diagnosis of fish poisoning is rather tricky because the symptoms of the illness are quite similar to other gastrointestinal distress. Nausea, vomiting, diarrhea, headache, and muscle pain are all part of the picture. Perhaps its most distinguishing characteristic, however, lies in the acute skin sensitivity of the patient, he points out.

"Patients report painful burning of fingers and toes upon contact with cool or metallic objects. They report 'tingling' and acute itching in air-conditined rooms. In addition, taste is also affected, with food and drink giving a carbonated sensation," he says.

"Once the illness is recognized, treatment is limited to basically supportive measures to limit the damage done by severe vomiting and diarrhea and to relieve some of the skin symptoms. Patients usually are ill from one to six weeks and some of the skin difficulties can take as long as six months to disappear," Hines explains.

Recently the organism which carries the toxin has been identified as one which inhabits the shallow reefs of the Caribbean and central Pacific islands. The organisms under appropriate conditions multiply and are incorporated into the food chain by plant-eating fish.

The toxin accumulates in the meat and viscera of these fish and is incorporated in ever-increasing concentration as the larger fish devour the smaller ones and are subsequently eaten themselves.

Hines emphasizes that the occurrence of fish poisoning depends upon the growth of the organism and not on the species of fish consumed. It has been reported in some degree in more than 400 species of fish. The same species in very close geographic locations may be toxic in one area and nontoxic in another. This is further complicated by the fact that the toxin is odorless, colorless and has no relation to the freshness of the catch. It is heat stable and no amount of cooking will destroy it.

Hines, himself an avid fisherman and occasional traveler to the Caribbean, cautions visitors to the region to avoid eating red snapper and grouper which are the most frequently offered fish on the menus of restaurants in the area.

RRC adopts agricultural transport amendments

AUSTIN — The Railroad Commission has adopted amendments to a rule approved in August that deregulated the transportation of agricultural commodities in Texas.

The amendments, proposed by RRC Chaiman Mack Wallace, contain additional definitions for terms that were contained in the rule. The amended rule will be published for public comment in the Texas Register.

Eligible agricultural commodities are now defined as cotton, seed cotton, cottonseed and cotton burrs; live animals, including livestock, poultry and game birds; grain (including rice); fresh fruits and fresh vegetables; wool and mohair; peanuts; nuts; seed; oil seed; fresh eggs; raw milk; sugar cane; manure produced by livestock, poultry or game birds; and hay.

The rule exempts from RRC-approved rates the transportation of these commodities for farmers, ranchers or cooperative organizations between points of production, processing or storage or to any point of first manufacture. The amendments contain additional definitions for these terms.

However, agricultural commodity carriers are still required to have a commission permit and comply with the commission's safety, vehicle registration and insurance requirements. Such a permit will be valid for one year throughout the state.

The agricultural deregulation rule was the result of a bill approved during by the Texas Legislature earlier this year.

Before that legislation was adopted, a carrier could get a seasonal agricultural permit from the commission that would exempt certain commodities from commission-approved rates. A seasonal permit was valid for 120 days and a 75-mile radius.
