Head of Beirut's American University killed

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Two gunmen shot the president of American University of Beirut today near his campus office, killing him with a bullet through the head, authorities said.

About four hours after the assassination of Malcolm Kerr, 52, a Beirut-born American, an anonymous telephone caller told the Beirut office of Agence France-Presse, the French news agency, that "Jihad Islami," or Islamic Holy War, was responsible for the shooting.

Speaking in Arabic, the caller said Kerr was "a victim of the American military presence in Lebanon," according to the news agency.

The caller also claimed the group was behind the abduction by gunmen on Tuesday of the Saudi consul in Beirut, and said the diplomat "is being tried according to Islamic law and we will soon throw out his body."

Islamic Holy War, which is believed to be loyal to Iranian leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, also claimed responsibility for the Oct. 23 truck-bombings that killed 241 American and 58 French troops in Beirut.

Several pro-Khomeini Shiite Moslem Lebanese leaders, however, have disclaimed Islamic Holy War. Sheik Hussein Fadlallah, one such leader, has said "this organization does not exist. It is a telephone organization."

Walid Jumblatt, Lebanon's top Druse opposition leader, issued a statement in Damascus saying Kerr's killing and the kidnapping of the Saudi diplomat were the work of right-wing Christians.

Kerr had replaced David S. Dodge, the acting president, who was kidnapped in July 1982. Dodge was held by pro-Iranian extremists in Lebanon's Bekaa Valley and in Iran for a year before being freed after Syrian leaders intervened.

A university statement about three hours after the assassination said two gunmen fired and Kerr was hit by two bullets. It said the two attackers "managed to escape."

"The president was taken to the hospital at the university's medical center but his life could not be saved and he was pronounced dead by the hospital," the statement said.

State radio quoted Dr. Ahmed Harati, a Lebanese coroner who examined the body, as saying Kerr was killed by one 7.15mm pistol bullet that pierced his head at the right temple and exited just above the left ear.

The caller to Agence France-Presse also said: "We also vow that not a single American or Frenchman will remain on this soil. We will take no different course and shall not waver."

A university source, who asked not to be identified, said Kerr's secretary and others in the building did not hear any shots but rushed to the scene after hearing Kerr's books, briefcase and umbrella hit the floor.

Earlier, a university professor, Delwin Roy, of Atlanta, said "one individual" shot Kerr as he was getting out of the elevator to go into his office.

An initial radio report said a lone gunman fired a bullet into Kerr's head from a silencer-equipped pistol.

University sources said the attack occurred on the third floor of College Hall, one floor above Kerr's office, as the president headed for a meeting of deans.

Lebanese army troops and police sealed off all gates of the 73-acre campus in west Beirut's Manara district and of the nearby hospital.

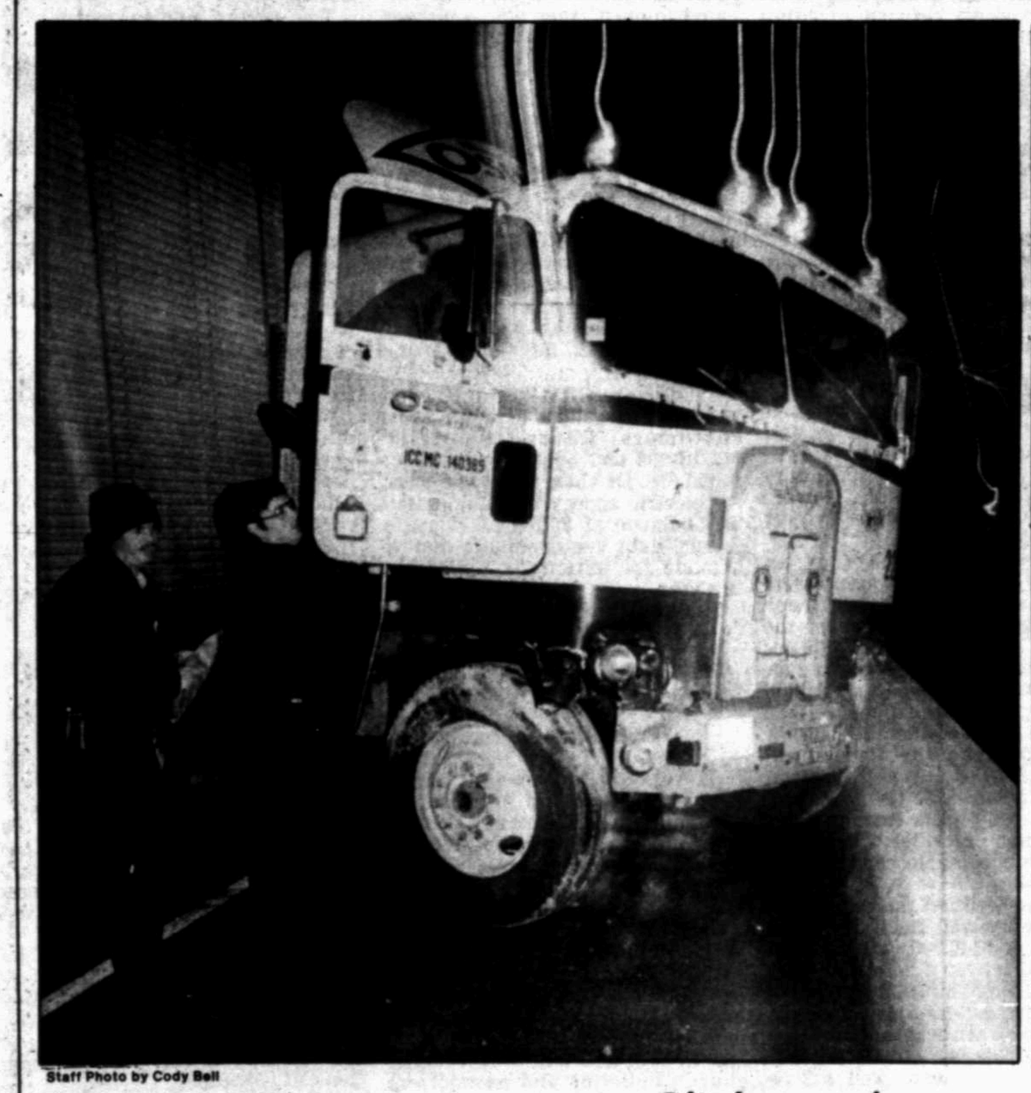

The vice president of the university, Samir Thabet, called an emergency meeting of school deans and announced classes were suspended until Monday in mourning for Kerr.

On Tuesday, gunmen with automatic rifles abducted the Saudi Arabian consul from his limousine in west Beirut, wounded his driver and beat his bodyguard. Beirut radio said the kidnappers were trying to sabotage a Saudi-mediated security plan and "inflame the Lebanon situation."

Slick roads

EMS personnel help an unidentified truck driver from the cab of his tractor-trailer rig after it jacknifed on icy westbound lane of the Interstate-20 overpass at East U.S. Highway 80 about 10:00 p.m. Tuesday. Traffic was partially blocked for several hours until a wrecker was able to move the truck, which was loaded with 25,000 lbs of tires. At about the same time as this accident, a two-car pileup in the eastbound land completely blocked traffic for more than an hour. No injuries were reported in either mishap. Treading with trepidation over the glazed sidewalk parallel to Loraine Street is Martha Grice, on her way to work at Wall Towers West. She and other Midlanders opened their eyes to icy conditions this morning.

Icy roads cripple West Texas

By PATRICK DEAREN
Staff Writer

A hard freeze this morning turned drizzle into ice and crippled travel throughout West Texas.

Highways "are extremely hazardous and icy over the whole area," said a Department of Public Safety spokesman. "Traffic is moving extremely slowly. There are a lot of accidents, though we don't have any reports of major accidents."

Glazed surfaces also caused numerous mishaps in area cities and stifled commerical airline travel at Midland Regional Airport.

"We haven't had any commercial airlines land or take off as of yet," an airport spokesman said this morning. "We have begun sanding procedures and we have had small aircraft land and take off. So it's strictly up to the airlines."

Ron Brown, meteorological technician with the National Weather Service, explained that "colder air moving in from the north — it's now moved on to South Texas — and warmer air above it led to the freezing drizzle. We've got below freezing air above us now, so it looks like...any precipitation in our area should be in the form of light snow...Wink was reporting some light freezing drizzle, and we've got westerly winds above 5,000 feet. So if we get any precipitation later on there's a possibility we could still get a little freezing drizzle."

Gromyko bitterly denounces U.S. military buildup

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko denounced the U.S. military buildup as a "pathological obsession" in a bitter speech today shortly before he met with Secretary of State George P. Shultz.

Gromyko also said it would be "pointless" to resume arms control negotiations as long as NATO adheres to its decision to deploy U.S.-made nuclear missiles in Western Europe.

Addressing the East-West conference on European security, Gromyko said it was up to the international community to stop U.S. militarism, which he likened to a drug addiction in which the addict needs greater and greater doses to survive.

Four hours later, Gromyko met Shultz at the Soviet Embassy in Stockholm — the first high-level contact between the superpowers in four months.

The American press center in Stockholm said Shultz and his party arrived at the Soviet Embassy in western Stockholm five minutes before the talks began at 3 p.m. (9 a.m. EST) and immediately went inside for the closed meeting.

In his speech, Gromyko attacked the Reagan administration for its military budget increases.

"New missiles, bombers and aircraft carriers are being churned out in a kind of pathological obsession. New means of mass destruction are being experimented with," Gromyko charged.

He called the U.S.-led invasion of the Caribbean island of Grenada in October "a piratical act of terrorism" and "a challenge to the entire world."

Gromyko demanded: "The U.S. must withdraw its troops from Grenada."

Video recorder battle shifts to Congress

WASHINGTON (AP) — The focus now shifts to Congress in the big-stakes battle to decide whether millions of Americans may have to pay extra to use increasingly popular home video recorders to tape television shows.

The motion picture industry, which suffered a major setback Tuesday before the Supreme Court, is expected to look to Congress for help in obtaining a share of the profits from the billion dollar home video recorder industry.

If the movie studios are ultimately successful, it could mean a stiff royalty that would be passed on to consumers as a tax on video recorders and blank tapes.

But meanwhile, the Supreme Court, by a 5-4 vote, ruled that the sale and use of home video recorders to tape TV shows for later, private viewing is legal.

■ Ruling worries advertisers, Page 4E

Some members of Congress expressed doubt that federal copyright law will be amended to benefit the movie makers.

Rep. Robert W. Kastenmeier, D-Wis., chairman of a House Judiciary subcommittee that is looking into the matter, said he doubted Congress would penalize viewers for taping television shows.

Rep. Michael DeWine, R-Ohio, a member of the Kastenmeier subcommittee, agreed. "It's going to be much more difficult and unlikely that Congress will want to do anything to impose a royalty fee on equipment," he said.

Anonymous caller scares, worries parents

By RHONDA RIGENHAGEN

At 11:20 a.m. Tuesday Elaine Wing was wondering what to make for lunch.

The phone rang.

"Are you Angela's mother?" a middle-aged male voice asked.

"Yes."

"Angela Wing's mother?"

"Yes."

"You're daughter's with me."

"What?"

"She's with me. I just raped her."

The scenario has been repeated in at least 18 homes in the past two weeks, according to police. Mrs. Wing and several other parents have been angered, frightened and worried by the anonymous caller.

"It looked like the first calls that were made he just went through the phone directory," Det. Capt. Billy Ray said. The caller often called people who didn't have daughters, or whose children were away at college. Then he began getting more specific.

"For the last three days now, he knows the first names of the children, what school they go to, what grade they're in," explained Det. Milton O'Bryant, who is in charge of the case. "We're just assuming he's got his hand on a school directory."

So far, parents of children in all the high schools, freshman schools and junior high schools except San Jacinto have been called. All of these schools have directories, a school official said. He didn't know how one person could get hold of that many directories.

"He's given general descriptions" of the children, O'Bryant said. "One time he came very close, but generally its just very vague and it hasn't fit, or it fits somewhat," leading police to believe he doesn't know the children.

In some instances, the man has attempted to get the parents to meet him and has threatened to kill their child.

American murdered in Beirut

The Saudi Embassy said late Tuesday it had received information that the consul, Hussein Abdullah Farrash, 45, was alive. The terse statement did not say how the information was received or whether any terms had been set for his release.

The proposed security plan calls for disengagement of Lebanon's warring factions and extending Lebanese government control in some areas around Beirut.

In Jerusalem, a senior Israeli official told reporters that Prime Minister Yitzak Shamir's government was holding discussions with the major Lebanese factions to try to get the Lebanese security plan approved.

The Israeli government considers the plan crucial to its hopes of pulling back troops occupying southern Lebanon since the June 1982 invasion.

Delays in implementing the plan have been blamed on Jumblatt, the Druse leader. He charged Tuesday that President Amin Gemayel's administration was manipulating the plan "to acquire gains for the Phalange party," an aide said.

The Druse, a secretive offshoot of Islam, contend Gemayel, a Christian, is aligned with the rightist Phalangists.

Kerr grew up at university

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Malcolm Kerr, assassinated today at the American University of Beirut, grew up here in a faculty family. A colleague said Kerr and the school he headed were "the most visible American institutions" in the city.

The slaying of Kerr, 52, the university's ninth president and a specialist in Middle Eastern politics, was "shattering," said Fred Bent, a visiting professor from New York's Cornell University.

"AUB and Kerr are the most visible American institutions here," Bent siad. "If anyone wants to shatter this, Kerr is someone who represents the Americans."

Kerr was born in Beirut on Oct. 8, 1931. His father was a professor of biochemistry at the university's medical school, and his mother was dean of women students.

The university has graduated many Arab prime ministers and presidents since its founding by Presbyterian missionaries in 1866 as the Syrian Protestant College.

But the school, chartered by New York state, is now nonsectarian and its students are Christian and Moslem.

The sign over the main entrance reads: "That they may have life and have it more abundantly."

Kerr received his masters degree at the university and taught there from 1958 to 1961. For the next 20 years, he was a professor of political science at the University of California at Los Angeles. He interrupted his stay in Los Angeles to teach at the Beirut campus again in the 1965-66 academic year.

He became head of American University to replace David Dodge, the acting president, who was kidnapped at gunpoint in July 1982. Dodge, like Kerr, a Beirut-born American, was released by his pro-Iranian captors a year later after the intervention of President Hafez Assad of Syria.

The wooded, 73-acre campus overlooks the Mediterranean and the ruins of the U.S. Embassy, destroyed by a bomb in April, and is largely regarded as an island of calm in this violence-torn city.

Yet Kerr told The Associated Press in a recent interview: "AUB has not had a happy history for the last 10 years."

He said there have been numerous disruptions by student strikes, building occupations, among other incidents. "We fear violence on the campus for itself and for its disruption of the academic process," he said.

To discourage violence, Kerr instituted a policy this year requiring all entering students to sign a pledge that they would not participate in political activities on the campus.

He said then he hoped the university could "provide a normal educational experience for people in a highly explosive nation."

But the policy provoked several demonstrations, which caused Kerr to delay the opening of the fall semester.

Recently, there have been at least two demonstrations on the campus each week. The most vocal students have been those supporting Shiite Moslems in the south in their opposition to the Israeli occupation of southern Lebanon, one professor said.

"We are desperately trying to keep the campus apolitical," Kerr said in the interview.

Kerr took his undergraduate degree at Princeton University. He holds a doctorate from Johns Hopkins University.

He met his wife, Ann, when they were both students at the Beirut university in 1957.

Last summer, when she joined her husband in Beirut, she traded her Southern California home with its view of the Pacific for a villa that overlooks the Mediterranean.

Safety in Beirut was of course "a constant worry," she said just before leaving California, "but if you want to do something important you take risks."

Gromyko denounces U.S. military buildup

After scathing attacks on U.S. policies in Lebanon and Central America, Gromyko added: "The main threat to peace is the aggressive foreign policy of the United States."

On Tuesday, Shultz said he would try to convince his Soviet colleague in their meeting that the United States wants better relations.

Gromyko reiterated the Soviets' resolve to stay away from arms talks in Geneva, which they abandoned on Nov. 23 after NATO began deployment of U.S.-built missiles in Western Europe.

"We have warned repeatedly that the deployment in Western Europe of U.S. Pershings and cruise missiles will undermine the basis for negotiations and will make them impossible," Gromyko said. "Having started the installation of its missiles, Washington has rendered negotiations pointless."

On Tuesday, Reagan administration sources said Shultz would suggest to Gromyko that U.S.-Soviet arms control talks resume on some level even if formal negotiations remain stalled.

The last meeting between Shultz and Gromyko was Sept. 8 at the U.S. Embassy in Madrid, Spain. Shultz cut that stormy encounter short after Gromyko refused to admit Soviet wrongdoing in shooting down a South Korean jetliner with 269 people aboard.

Both men are in Stockholm for the conference on European security, which opened Tuesday.

"We (the United States) approach the meeting in a constructive spirit," Shultz said of today's meeting. "Our agenda is a broad one...and we hope for a constructive response."

He said he would try to convince Gromyko that the United States wants better relations with the Soviet Union.

Administration sources told The Associated Press on Tuesday that if the Soviets are reluctant to resume formal arms control negotiations in Geneva, the United States is prepared to open other means of communication in an effort to reverse the arms buildup by the Soviets and the United States.

"We are prepared to talk in any case," said a U.S. official, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

The chief U.S. arms control negotiator, Paul Nitze, said Tuesday in Washington that the use of "back channel" talks instead of formal negotiations "has been considered and it is not favored. We think (Geneva) negotiations should resume."

In a speech Tuesday, Shultz did not offer any new proposals to lure the Soviets back to negotiations. The Soviet Union broke off arms talks in the fall to protest the start of NATO's deployment of 572 U.S.-built nuclear missiles in Western Europe.

Two sets of nuclear arms talks were being conducted in Geneva — one dealt with medium-range missiles; the other with long-range weapons.

Stacy Reservoir major issue facing CRMWD

From Staff Reports

BIG SPRING — Colorado River Municipal Water District experienced a banner year in 1983, but 1984 may roll out to be the biggest and most challenging year.

CRMWD is the regional water supplier for the upper Colorado River and Permian Basin, including the cities of Midland, Odessa and Big Spring.

The past year saw the district forced to withstand legislative attempts to water down its Stacy Reservoir permit, which had been approved by the 3rd Court of Appeals. Last year also was a time when decisions affecting future operations were reached. Directors gave the green light to additional steps to upgrade water quality, to strengthen ground water reserves on the system's west ends, to computerize the headquarters division, to satisfy oilfield secondary recovery demands with low-quality water diverted from the Colorado River and its tributaries.

The major issue facing the CRMWD this year may be the Stacy Reservoir on the Colorado River 25 miles southeast of Ballinger. O.H. Ivie, CRMWD general manager, said he was confident the Texas Supreme Court will uphold the district's permit, with a decision expected by early spring. Once past the court, the district can begin planning and financing with construction to start in two years.

Construction of a diversion project on a Colorado River tributary, Beals Creek, five miles southeast of Big Spring, will begin perhaps by mid-year. This will involve installing a low-water channel dam, a larger dam to impound a side-storage reservoir, pumps and a four-mile pipeline from the reservoir to Moss Creek pump station. Water will be pumped from Moss to secondary recovery units in eastern Howard County and other points. Project cost is $3.5 million.

This project is part of an expanded program of water quality enhancement. The Beals Creek diversion is expected to lower the chlorides reaching Lake E.V. Spence by 18 percent, which would reduce lake content by 100 parts per million chlorides, said Ivie. If there is an indication of 100,000 acre feet inflow during the year, the district will release this approximate amount from Lake Spence so the good quality inflow will replace existing water with higher chlorides. The result should be acceptable chlorides for Spence water.

Five new wells on the east side of Ward County well field, developed at a cost of $140,000, will be completed and activated before summer begins, raising the field's potential to 26 million gallons a day, 2 million gallons over the rated pipeline capacity to Odessa.

A new development well will be drilled in Winkler County to prove up new ground water leases there. Cost will be around $50,000 for the well, but water rights and land payments may raise the expenditure on the reserve to $2.7 million this year.

Last year, CRMWD delivered 18.174 billion gallons of water to its customers. Revenues totaled $12,610,998 and operating expenses $6,921,816. Of that, $4,591,764 went for electric energy to pump water. The balance of $5,789,182 went to satisfy debt requirements and to provide for extensive expansions this year.

Since the district began delivering water, it has satisfied needs of its dozen municipal customers without rationing. At the end of 1983, Lake J.B. Thomas was at elevation 2223.95 feet and contained 36,300 acre feet of water; Lake Spence was at an elevation of 1,877.70 feet and held 259,400 acre feet.

The district expects to deliver 18 billion gallons of water this year. This is 2 billion gallons less than the peak year 1974 when the 20 billion gallon total included 7 billion gallons delivered to oilfield secondary recovery units. Last year, deliveries for this purpose had dwindled to 2 billion gallons. However, municipal demands have climbed since 1974.

Church news seminar slated at OC

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — Dr. James W. Carty, lecturer, author and professor of communications at Bethany College, will conduct a seminar on "What is Church News and How Do You Get it Published?" Thursday from 9 a.m. to noon at Odessa College.

Man freed after wife says she killed mother

NEW YORK (AP) — A man jailed 28 months for his mother-in-law's murder was freed after his accuser — his ex-wife — confessed to the crime, but she might not be charged because she got immunity from prosecution for her testimony, a prosecutor says.

Nathaniel Carter, 33, of Peekskill, was released Tuesday pending a hearing next week at which his murder conviction is expected to be set aside.

He was convicted in the Sept. 15, 1981, slaying of his 60-year-old mother-in-law, Clarissa Herdon, who was stabbed 23 times in her home in the New York City borough of Queens. The star prosecution witness was Delissa Carter, 25, who testified that her ex-husband was the assailant.

Ms. Carter confessed in Bristol, Conn., on Tuesday when investigators took her into custody as a material witness in the reopened case, according to Queens District Attorney John Santucci.

"When we went up to get her today, she was not a suspect," Santucci said. "I was prepared to offer her immunity from perjury if she came and told the truth."

The district attorney said the woman apparently believed she was being arrested for her mother's slaying and decided to make "a full confession."

But Rep. Don Edwards, D-Calif., acknowledging "it's an unpopular position," said he would pursue his proposal to force manufacturers and importers of video recorders and tapes to pay a royalty to be split among copyright owners. Such royalties ultimately benefit consumers by encouraging more production of quality programs, he said.

Dean Dunlavey, a Los Angeles lawyer who represented the Sony Corp., the leading maker of the recorders, said he expects the movie industry to pursue the fight in Congress.

"A battle has been won," he said. "But you'll have to watch Congress like a hawk or they will enact a law" granting a royalty to the motion picture producers.

Kenji Tamiya, president of Sony Corp. of America, hailed the court ruling as "an important victory for consumers."

The court said recorder manufacturers may not be held responsible for possible illegal use of the video recorders, such as taping copyright productions for commercial profit.

Justice John Paul Stevens, in his opinion for the court, wrote that there is another remedy for this so-called "armchair piracy."

Stevens noted that anyone who reproduces copyright material for private financial gain can be sentenced to one year in prison and fined $25,000 for the first violation. The penalty is two years and $50,000 for repeat offenders.

But Stevens said that taping television shows, even copyright ones, for private viewing at a later time is legal.

Even though the movie industry brought its 1976 suit against Sony and not the viewing public, it could not win without proving that individual owners of video recorders were using the machines to violate copyright law. Stevens said the movie industry's lawyers failed to prove that.

"One may search the Copyright Act in vain for any sign that the elected representatives of the millions of people who watch television every day have made it unlawful to copy a program for later viewing at home," he said.

Hazardous, icy roads cripple West Texas

Only an official 0.02 inch of precipitation fell on Midland during the night, but it was enough to make driving conditions hazardous as the mercury dipped to 15 degrees, only 8 degrees off the all-time record for the date set in 1949. Light snow was falling this morning, further worsening already dangerous streets.

"I don't have any idea how many accidents we've had, but numerous, numerous ones," said a Midland Police Department dispatcher.

The NWS also reported light snow in San Angelo, and light snow, freezing drizzle and fog in Abilene. Conditions were similiar elsewhere in West Texas.

"Terrible," a spokesman for Howard County Sheriff's Department described them. "The roads are like glass. Heavy overcast and some snow flurries. Temperatures in the lower teens."

"We've had quite a few accidents here in town," said a dispatcher with Big Spring Police Department. "They're just little minor accidents, cars just sliding into each other. We've had one four-car minor accident; nobody was hurt."

"Between here and Odessa it's very icy and one car slid off into a ditch," said a Crane Police Department dispatcher. "It's not really bad here in Crane — there's some ice on the streets, but with sensible driving you'll be okay."

In Rankin and Big Lake 17-degree conditions left roads and sidewalks with a layer of sheer ice, while all-night sleet and morning snow in Stanton forced the closing of public schools. Schools opened an hour late in Lamesa, where frozen rain on the streets created driving hazards and students bundled against 14-degree temperatures.

It was 12 degrees and icy this morning in Andrews, while snow and ice covered the ground in fog-shrouded Garden City.

In Odessa, police stayed busy working weather-relating accidents this morning, with 13 reported between 6:30 a.m. and 7:30 a.m. Ector County Sheriff's Department ivestigated an additional mishap.

West Texans, already reeling from an unprecedented cold spell in December, may have to endure several days of additional frigid conditions before any respite is seen. NWS forecasts call for a low in the mid-teens tonight and a high Thursday only in the upper 20s. As soon as ice is expected to thaw under 40-degree temperatures Friday, a low in the teens that night and a chance of rain mixed with snow Saturday could create more glazed conditions.

Super Sunday, however, should dawn partly cloudy with the promise of temperatures in the upper 50s.

Anonymous caller frightens parents

The police recommend the parent hang up immediately, call their child's school to make sure the student is there and then call the police.

"That we know of, he has never made a repeat call," O'Bryant said. He said he is also working with the telephone company to trace the calls.

"This is the way he gets his joy, out of upsetting people and getting their reaction," Ray explained. If parents are aware of the situation, refuse to react and simply hang up, he may stop, police speculated.

Four officers are working on the case. "We think anything that alarms the community like this is high priority," Ray said. "When you have this many calls with this violent a message we take it seriously."

The man told Mrs. Wing he had picked up her daughter as she walked to the bus. She had driven her daughter to school that morning and realized the call was a prank. Still she was frightened and upset.

"He described her to me perfectly. He said, 'No, I don't have her, but I can get her,'" Mrs. Wing said in a voice that shook slightly.

Since then, she has been calling other parents to try and find a common denominator that may give them an indication to the man's identity. "If nothing else to have someone else to talk to who has been through it."

"Right now I feel like that's public enemy number one," she said, glancing at the telephone. "I want to stop him."

Officials think general committed suicide

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The medical examiner's office tentatively has decided that a two-star Army Reserve general found bound and hanged at Fort Sam Houston took his own life, The Associated Press has learned.

A note pinned to the body of Maj. Gen. Robert G. Ownby said he had been executed, but "all the evidence at this point indicates suicide," a source who asked not to be identified said Tuesday.

Ownby, 48, was found early Jan. 11 dangling from a second-story landing in the headquarters of the 90th U.S. Army Reserve Command, which he headed. His hands had been bound behind his back with a military web belt.

A typewritten note said the general had been killed for "crimes by the U.S. Army against the people of the world," but Pentagon officials said the message could have been only a diversion.

An official ruling on the cause of death is expected later this week, perhaps Thursday, from Bexar County Medical Examiner Dr. Vincent DiMaio.

DiMaio said he was waiting for test results from the FBI's forensics lab in Washington before announcing his official ruling.

FBI agent Pat Cowley would not disclose if his agency's probe into the general's death had uncovered any motive for suicide or murder.

"We're still interviewing and conducting our investigation," he said.

The source told the AP that the autopsy performed on Ownby "showed no evidence of any marks or bruises that would indicate a struggle. Nothing. All it showed was asphyxiation by hanging."

The FBI issued a statement last Thursday quoting DiMaio, who said it was possible the general had tied his own hands behind his back.

A handwritten note was found on Ownby's desk saying that he had startled some intruders in the building and planned to go investigate.

His jacket, glasses and wallet were stacked in a neat pile on the second-floor landing, and there was no sign of forced entry to the building, the FBI said.

Ownby, who had a wife and three children, was buried Friday at Fort Sam Houston National Cemetery.

State won't have to prove nurse's motive

GEORGETOWN (AP) — The prosecutor in the Genene Jones baby-killing trial says his witnesses will offer a motive in the case, but he said jurors don't have to believe it to send the nurse to prison.

"People do things for all sorts of reasons. Sometimes it makes sense and sometimes it doesn't," Kerr County District Attorney Ron Sutton said.

"There is no motive the state has to prove in this case at all," he said.

Sutton did not hint as to his version of the motive.

Jury selection was to continue today with questioning by the defense team. The first two days of the trial passed with no jurors selected.

Ms. Jones, 33, is charged with murder in the September 1982 death of Chelsea McClellan, a 15-month-old Kerrville girl who had been taken to a doctor's office for routine care. The indictment says Ms. Jones, who worked at the office, injected the baby with a muscle relaxant that caused the death.

The baby died in an ambulance after suffering a seizure at the Kerrville office.

After a day of general statements about the case to jurors, prosecutors got more specific on Tuesday. Ms. Jones stared at Sutton as he read the indictment.

Ford: Central American report 'excellent blueprint' for action

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Former president Gerald R. Ford says he agrees with the recommendation by the bipartisan Commission on Central America that U.S. military and economic aid be linked to human rights policy.

Ford, who called the commission's report to President Reagan an "excellent blueprint," cited the death squads in El Salvador as an example.

The recommendations made by the blue-ribbon panel especially are important since Central America "is in our backyard," Ford said.

He said he expected Reagan, a fellow Republican, to follow the advice from the commission, which was headed by Dr. Henry A. Kissinger.

"It's not too different from the Reagan policy, except that the Reagan policy is not a five-year policy, it's year-to-year," he said.

Ford, who spoke at Trinity University on Tuesday night, planned to teach at some classes this morning.

He said at a news conference that Walter Mondale appears to have the Democratic presidential nomination "all wrapped up," but that Reagan shouldn't have difficulty winning re-election.

Ford said former vice president Mondale has only U.S. Sen. John Glenn of Ohio to fear for an "upset."

"I believe if (Mondale gets the nomination), President Reagan has an excellent chance of winning," he said. "And it appears Mondale will get the nomination."

Ford said Mondale's endorsements from the AFL-CIO and National Education Association have handed him 30 percent of the delegates to the Democratic National Convention.

King's daughter says blacks can't be complacent

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — Yolanda King, daughter of slain civil rights leader Martin Luther King Jr., says despite advancements, blacks cannot afford to become complacent about equality.

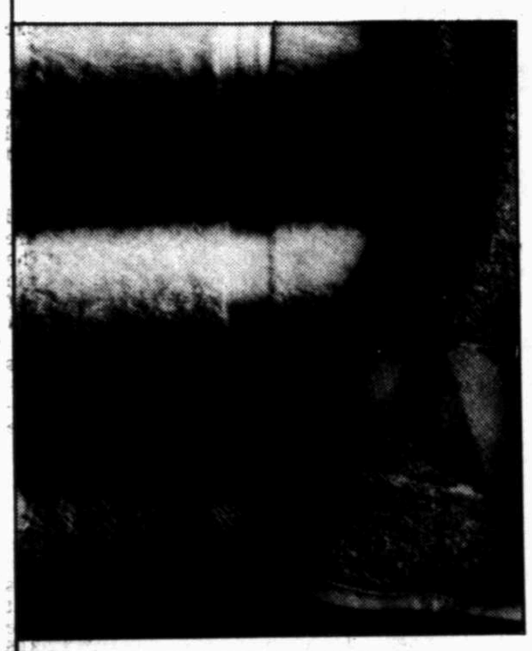

Ms. King addressed about 900 people Tuesday in an appearance sponsored by the Corpus Christi chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

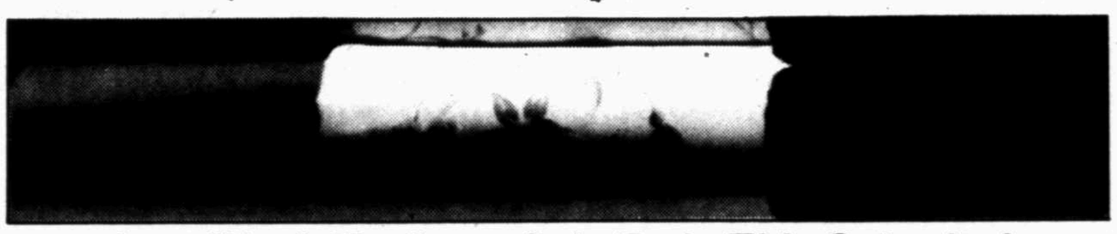

"At this point in time, it's even possible for mankind to erase all humanity from the planet," she said. "We have not yet learned the simple art of living together as brothers and sisters."

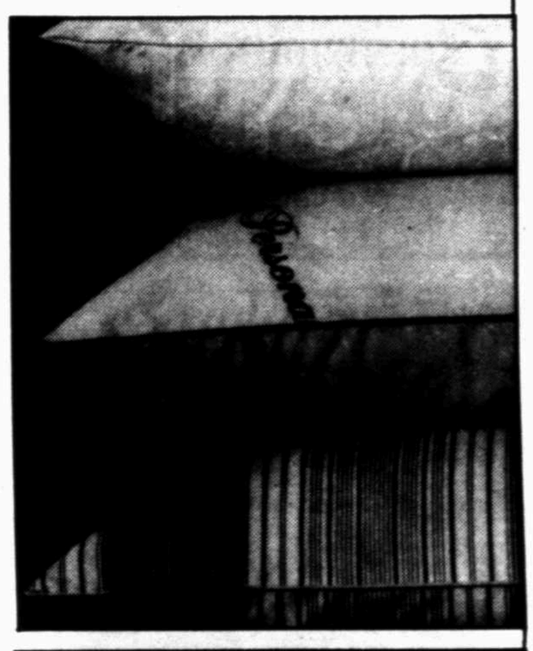

She said even though a black woman has been crowned Miss America and a black man has gone into space, "we cannot stop now."

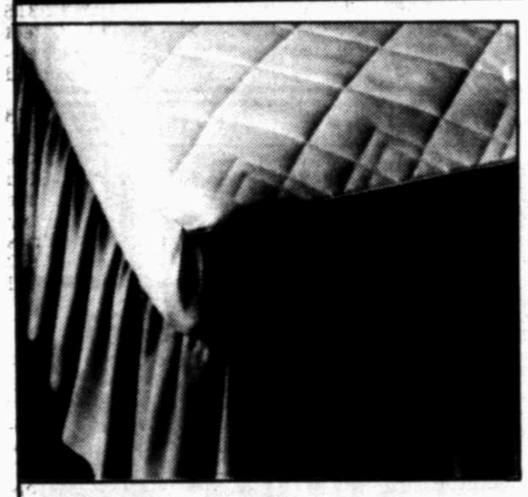

"We cannot afford to sit around and wait for something to happen or to wait for someone to deliver us from evil," said Ms. King.

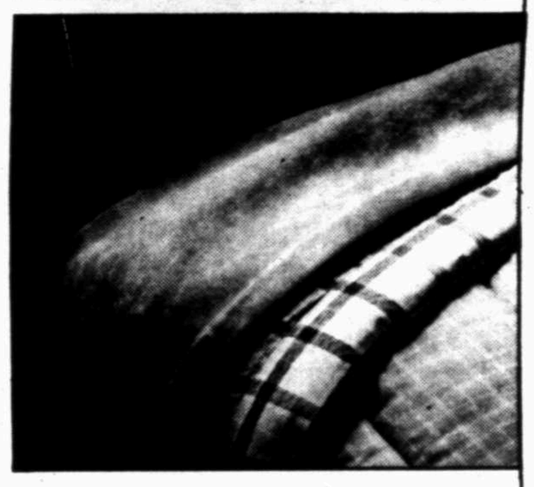

She blamed the Reagan administration for placing more emphasis on buying weapons for war than for providing social services for the nation's elderly and poor.

Presidents don't have to be exciting

Candidates strive to generate excitement with policies

An Analysis

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG

CLAREMONT, N.H. (AP) — Only 15 hours after he and Walter Mondale shouted at each other across a stage at Dartmouth College, Sen. John Glenn was in Stevens High School losing the attention of his youthful audience.

It was in marked contrast to the excitement generated the night before and it highlighted a continuing problem for Glenn's presidential campaign.

That contrast also symbolized an inherent conflict within the process, the competing demands on candidates to generate excitement while offering detailed policy programs.

The campaign process demands that candidates have flair and generate excitement. That's not necessarily a quality required of presidents.

At Stevens High, the students began to squirm about 15 minutes after Glenn started speaking.

It was the anniversary of Martin Luther King Jr.'s birth and Glenn used the occasion to talk about civil rights.

He recalled the 1963 demonstration in Washington when King stood before the Lincoln Memorial and roused millions of Americans by telling them, "I have a dream..."

It was an unusually powerfully delivered address. Glenn's audience was surely too young to remember King's remarks, and the candidate recited a couple of lines from that speech, seeming to lose the passion and the power in his translation.

Glenn's problem was not substance, it was style.

He rarely stirs an audience with his oratory. On the 1984 campaign trail, some of his speeches seem reminiscent of the keynote speech he delivered at the Democratic National Convention in 1976. Glenn was on Jimmy Carter's list of prospective vice presidential nominees that year and the keynote role offered an opportunity to display wares that might have enhanced his prospects. It didn't go well. The convention crowd, ready to be stirred, wound up talking among themselves. Carter chose Mondale as his running mate.

When a student at Stevens High asked the senator about his support of the B-1 bomber and of his vote for President Reagan's economic program, Glenn's answer ran 10 minutes. He gave the audience more than most of them wanted to know.

The contrast between Glenn's attack on Mondale during the debate and his speech to the students the next morning raised the question of whether candidates should lose points for dullness.

Either way, there is no question Glenn is capable of excitement.

When Glenn looked at Mondale on Sunday and accused the former vice president of using the "same vague gobbledygook," the place lit up. "Baloney," retorted Mondale.

People all over America snapped awake as the two would-be presidents went at each other.

It was good theater. But one might ask whether it did anything for people who wanted to know how these candidates plan to deal with national problems.

For months the Democrats have heard complaints about how dull they are and about how they must come up with credible alternatives to Reagan administration policies.

Try to come up with a real grabber of an economic policy, complete with eye catching details spelling out accelerated depreciation and the intricacies of the money supply. Or maybe some candidate is ready to offer a farm program that will have audiences on the edge of their chairs as he talks about parity and wheat set-aside programs.

A good political shouting match is more exciting than an issues seminar, but perhaps dullness ought to have a more honored place in presidential campaigns.

Juries award $586,000 in Pan Am suits

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Federal court juries awarded a total of $586,000 in the first two of more than 180 damage lawsuits stemming from the nation's second-worst air disaster that killed 154 people.

Two other lawsuits, meanwhile, were expected to go to the jury today.

Everyone aboard Pan Am Flight 759 was killed and eight died on the ground when the Boeing 747 jetliner clipped a tree and cartwheeled into 15 homes shortly after takeoff from New Orleans International Airport on July 9, 1982.

On Tuesday, one six-member jury awarded $250,000 to Renee Stephens Caire of Metairie for the loss of love and affection of her parents, John and Audry Stephens.

She had asked for $100 million in damages, including damages for the suffering of her parents just before the crash, but the jury awarded nothing on that claim.

A second jury, however, included pre-crash anguish and pain suffered in the crash in its award of $336,000 to Antoine and Bernice Savoie of Metairie for the death of their daughter, Susan.

The Savoies asked $1.5 million in damages, but received $16,000 for Susan's mental anguish and $20,000 for the pain she incurred after the crash. In addition, each parent received $150,000 each for the loss of Susan's love and affection.

nation

The lawsuits of Jean Greenwood, the wife of Phillip Greenwood of St. Tammany Parish, and Diane Bordelon, the daughter of Willie and Patricia Goudeau of Marksville, were expected to go to the jury today.

Mrs. Greenwood sought $16.5 million damages, while Ms. Bordelon sought $16 million.

Altogether, survivors of the crash victims have asked for more than $5.5 billion in damages for death or property loss.

Individually, the lawsuits have demanded anywhere from about $1 million to more than $2 billion.

Juries in the first four cases heard testimony on Monday comon to all the cases. The 24 jurors sat in one court room and watched three television monitors that graphically depicted the last minute of Flight 759.

The schematic showed the plane taking off in a heavy rainstorm and climbing to 163 feet before its left wing clipped a tree. The jetliner rolled hard to the left and bellyflopped into the ground.

The graphics were followed by conflicting testimony from expert psychiatric witnesses on the kind of distress the passengers of Flight 759 might have experienced.

Dr. Chester Scrignar, a stress specialist with published studies of "white knuckle fliers," said most of the passengers would be in a state of absolute panic from the moment they felt the plane descend until the impact.

Boy testifies at father's murder trial

ROLLA, Mo. (AP) — A 4-year-old boy burst into tears on the witness stand as he testified that he was in the kitchen when his father entered and "pointed the gun" at his mother and another man, whom the father is accused of killing.

Keith Kosirig was expected to return to court today after testifying Tuesday that he was with his mother in November 1982 when his father, former Chicago policeman Kenneth Joseph Kosirog, entered the house, took a gun out of his pocket and "pointed the gun at 'em."

The boy cried after Stone County Prosecutor Bill McCullah asked him at whom Kosirog had pointed the gun.

Phelps County Circuit Judge Douglas Long had rejected a defense motion that Keith, the prosecution's only eyewitness, should not be allowed to testify because of his age.

Kosirog, 36, is charged with two counts of capital murder in the shooting deaths of his 43-year-old estranged wife, Geraldine, and Stephen Lafgren, 36, of Carroll County, Ark. They were shot to death with a .38-caliber handgun.

The penalty for capital murder in Missouri is death or life imprisonment.

Defense attorney Tyce Smith, in a pretrial motion, had asked that the boy not be allowed to testify because of his age and because he was unable to recall events without coaching.

But McCullah has said the boy's testimony is essential because he is the only eyewitness.

Long ruled the boy qualifies under a Missouri law that allows children to testify.

Long said the boy has a present understanding of the events; his mental capacity to register and observe at the time of the incident was sufficient; his memory is sufficient to retain details of the incident; and he can recall those details at the time of the trial.

Mrs. Kosirog and Lafgren were found shot to death in Mrs. Kosirog's home on Tablerock Lake near Shell Knob in southwestern Missouri.

U.S. flag flies high at McDonald's

WASHINGTON (AP) — Memo to a few good men at the Cherry Point (N.C.) Marine Corps Air Station: There is no law that says McDonald's can't fly the American flag at half staff to honor the memory of founder Ray Kroc.

A few of you Marines were concerned enough Tuesday to phone the Sun-Journal in New Bern, N.C., to complain that one McDonald's was violating the law.

Wrong.

Lawyers at the Justice Department looked into volume 36 of the U.S. Code, Section 175 M which deals with display of the American flag. The section "suggests" flags should be flown at half staff for the deaths of public office holders such as governors, presidents and members of Congress.

On the subject of other people, like millionaire hamburger merchants, the federal law is silent.

Besides, the McDonald's outlet you saw might have misinterpreted orders from headquarters.

The chain asked its franchises across the world to lower their corporate flags: the ones with the golden arches, not the stars and stripes.

In any case, Marines, your complaint got action. The flag was raised to the top of the pole. At twilight's last gleaming, the broad stripes and bright stars were gallantly streaming over the land of Big Mac and the home of the fries.

State grows quickly

New Hampshire, the fastest-growing state north of Florida and east of the Mississippi River, has increased its population some 20 percent in the past dozen years.

THE BETTER HALF

"Where's your male ego? I don't want to hit it because Aunt Harriet says it's very fragile!"

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Thursday, January 19, 1984

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Artist Paul Cezanne, author Edgar Allen Poe, General Robert E. Lee, journalist-critic Alexander Woollcott and rock star Janis Joplin were born on this date. Also sharing your birthday: newspaper publisher Oveta Culp Hobby, Cincinnati Reds pitcher Rich Gale, actress Jean Stapleton and Dolly Parton. Profits from a small sideline business help you balance the books. A distinguished friend offers assistance when you need it most. Accept with gratitude. Something you thought lost forever could reappear.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A phone call brings a positive response. Negotiations that were stalled come to a head. Try not to antagonize an opponent. Intelligent compromises benefit everyone involved. Lay your cards on the table.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Check a prospective employee or partner's references before making a firm offer. Things may not be all they seem. Greater wealth and security lie right around the corner. Your performance wins praise.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Business travel is expensive but worthwhile. You fall in love with a place you visit for the first time. Be practical about a large purchase. The price may come down later on.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Your character is the key to your success. Common sense gets you through any bad moments. A bold, innovative approach brings wonderful business results. Romance enjoys favorable influences.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Changes at work lead to a new romance. You thrive in fresh surroundings. Deal with stress in a practical way. Do everything you can to improve atmosphere in the office.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You meet someone who will have a strong influence on the choices you make. A new business venture succeeds. Follow your instincts. Too much analysis is counterproductive. Romantic partner wants action.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Shop around for the financing a pet project requires. Writers get paid for work on spec. Do not rush into a new venture without first checking it out. Sign contracts.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Learn to mask your emotions in business situations. A conservative approach appeals to higher-ups trying to cut expenses. The future looks bright. Refuse to dwell on past mistakes.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Higher-ups offer you more freedom at work. Use it judiciously and you will be considered for an executive position. Wear bright colors. They are becoming and give you that "up" feeling.

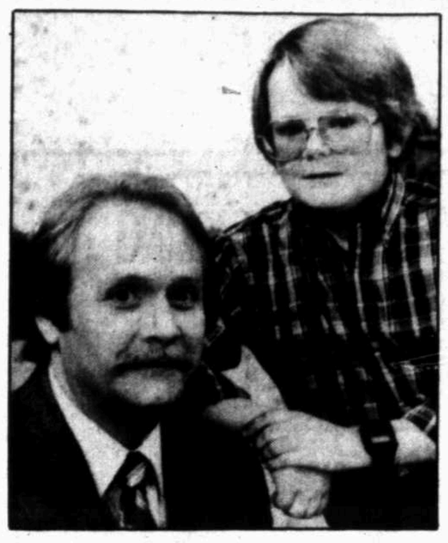

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Although travel is favored, call distant contacts before setting out. A last-minute change could foul up your schedules. You feel like an outsider at group activities. Choose your own companions.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Not a good day to begin new projects. Certain people are eager to gossip. Concentrate on routine work and avoid acting on impulse. Your behavior must be impeccable.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): The spotlight is on finances, costs and possessions. A schedule change could involve a loss of privacy or intrusions by strangers. Keep your personal affairs and business dealings strictly separate.

Crew visits Vatican

VATICAN CITY (AP) — More than four centuries ago, Vatican astronomers used a sundial in the Tower of the Winds to convince Pope Gregory XIII to cancel 10 days of time, creating in the process the Gregorian calendar that is in use today.

An American filmmaker, Martin Carr, and his four-man crew were at the walled city-state in early October to gather footage for a public-TV series co-produced by the world-renowned Smithsonian Institution.

"Few people realize that this obscure observatory in the Vatican took 10 days from our lives," said Carr, who will use the film shot at the Vatican in "Time and Light," the first program in the "Smithsonian World" series scheduled to premiere Jan. 18.

Carr, whose previous productions include the CBS documentary "Hunger in America" to the daytime serial "Secret Storm," said the Tower of the Winds was chosen as a setting for the program "because it is one of the few places in the world where the concepts of time and light can be illustrated simultaneously."

A circular chart on the tower floor designates where sunlight shining through a fist-size hole cut in the south wall — forming the mouth of an allegorical figure depicting the South Wind — should fall on the vernal equinox, or first day of spring.

On March 21, 1582, according to historians, astronomers showed Pope Gregory that the beam of sunlight hit the chart 60 centimeters (24 inches) north of the designated spot, meaning the sun had passed the vernal equinox 10 days earlier and that the Julian calendar was incorrect.

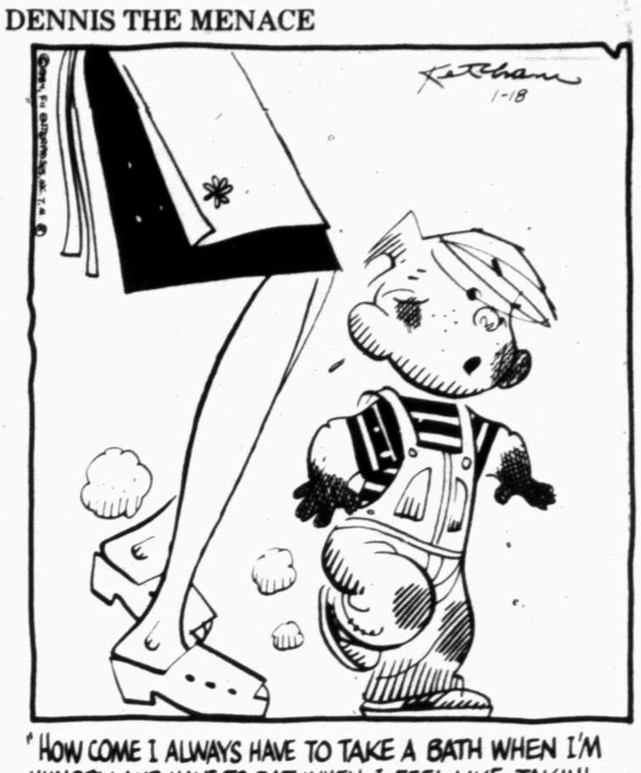

"This was the first visual demonstration that the calendar was out of phase with the true position of the sun," said the Rev. George Coyne, director of the present-day Vatican Observatory, who will explain the tower's significance in the "Time and Light" program.

Coyne, a Jesuit priest from Baltimore, Md., said Gregory set the calendar back to ensure that religious festivals would fall within the proper seasons, easily convincing Catholic nations to comply with the new time schedule.

"But many Protestant countries were reluctant to give up the 10 days," Coyne added. "In Britain, there were riots in the streets over the decision."

The staunchly Protestant nation did not abandon the Julian calendar until the mid-1700s, when lawmakers renewed a proposal for the time change, presumably because it was embarrassing to lag behind the rest of Europe.

Opening lead: Ten of ♡.

In theory, if you can finesse either way for a queen, it is a pure guess which way you play the hand. In practice, there are factors which necessitate choosing one line over the other.

South had visions of a grand slam when his partner raised his second suit after responding at the two-level. He settled on a small slam when he found out that an ace was missing.

West got his side off to a good start by leading the ten of hearts. Declarer won the ace and cashed the ace of trumps. West made the clever false-card of the eight. It appeared to South that, if anyone was short in diamonds, it would be West, so he continued with a low diamond to the king. Now West had a sure trump trick and, since declarer also had to lose the ace of spades, he ended up down a trick.

Unfortunately for his side, South did not think the whole hand through before committing himself to a second round of trumps. If trumps were 4-1, he could not afford to draw all the trumps before he had taken a heart discard on clubs and the ace of spades had been knocked out. If East had started with four trumps, the defenders could force South with a heart when they won the ace of spades, which would set up a trump trick for East.

A 4-1 trump division can be handled only if West has the four trumps. So at trick three South should lead the queen of diamonds. When East shows out, declarer continues with three rounds of clubs, allowing him to sluff his heart loser. Next comes the jack of spades. If West does not take his ace, declarer ruffs a heart with the ten of diamonds, finesses the nine of diamonds and runs clubs for 12 tricks. So West must win the ace of spades, but no matter what he does declarer makes the rest of the tricks with the help of the marked finesse in trumps.

Your play to the first trick could decide the fate of the contract! A writer once remarked: "There's no such thing as a blind opening lead, only deaf opening leaders!" Rays of sunshine

Believe it or not, there are a number of reasons to smile in this day and age, despite the abundance of gloomy news.

Consider these examples:

— Government figures released the other day indicated wholesale prices rose only a minuscule 0.6 percent last year, the smallest gain in two decades. We remember when inflation didn't just share the top spot as public enemy number one. It was the undisputed leader!

— Consumer debt rose $4.67 billion during November, 1983, according to the Federal Reserve Board. That means consumers are more willing to assume additional debt. It also paints a rosier picture of the American economy for coming months.

— Civilian unemployment fell to 8.2 percent in the nation in December, culminating what government officials termed the best post-recession recovery of any year in more than three decades. If you want to know the importance of that statistic in human terms, just ask any one of the four million Americans who found a job last year.

— Last year was a safe one if you wanted to fly, according to the National Transportation Safety Board. NTSB statistics showed commuter air carriers experienced only 17 accidents in '83 with only two fatalities. What's even more impressive, there was no catastrophic aviation accident among major U.S. air carriers last year.

— Concern that a potent cancer-causing pesticide might have found its way into public water supplies in Texas eased somewhat in recent days when test results turned up negative. That's particularly good news since the substance — called EDB — would have presented a "deadly serious problem" to Texans.

Oh, there's more than enough bad news still around to spoil your day, what with U.S. Marines still in Lebanon and taxes sure to increase. But it's nice to know that amid all the gloom there still are some rays of sunshine.

Too drunk to ride

When you stop to think about it, Will Hammett and Tam o'Shanter have a lot in common.

Will Hammett is the cowboy who was arrested for drunken driving — on his horse.

Tam o'Shanter, according to poet Robert Burns, also liked a wee drop of the sauce. Tam tethered his grey mare Meg outside the local tavern and had a few shooters with his cobbler friend.

Will rode his horse into Valley Springs, near Stockton, Calif., strolled into Fat Albert's, said his "howdies" and bellied up to the bar.

It was a rainy and windy night when Tam climbed on Meg and headed for home. Before he had gone far, Tam heard an unearthly noise and, peering into the gloom, saw warlocks and witches in a devil's dance.

Will left Fat Albert's about midnight, hoisted himself into the saddle and then squinted, surprised, into the bright lights of a patrol car.

Now, Tam wanted no part of any spooks so he whipped up Meg and raced for the river, knowing well that witches can't cross running water. Tam won his race but Meg didn't. Just as she lurched onto the bridge, a witch reached out and snatched off the mare's tail.

The witch "had caught her by the rump, and left poor Maggie scarce a stump."

Will says he didn't have a chance to outrace the patrol car. A deputy motioned him over, and had him blow into a breath analyzer. The district attorney said Will's blood alcohol was .15 percent, well above the .10 percent that is considered legally drunk in the state of California.

Is there a moral to this story? Of course. Alcohol and horses don't mix.

Just ask Will and Tam.

Another View:

Call it covert war

U.S. officials say Nicaraguan troops fired on the crew of an American helicopter after it was shot down on Honduran soil and killed the pilot, Chief Warrant Officer Jeffry C. Schwab of Joliet, Ill. Nicaraguan officials deny that their forces fired while the helicopter was on the ground, though some of their soldiers admit this was so.

On the other hand, the Nicaraguans say the helicopter was fired on when it flew over Nicaraguan territory, and they didn't know the helicopter was American because it was not marked. The Pentagon denies that it was unmarked but says the markings may have been difficult to see.

These exchanges and recriminations do not adequately explain the tragedy and certainly do nothing to hold out hope that such hostile actions will not happen again.

The background of the shooting is that the Reagan administration has been using the CIA to support guerrilla operations against Nicaragua from Honduras, and the whole border is aflame. Officially, the administration says the idea is to discourage Nicaraguan arms shipments to rebels in El Salvador, but hard-liners admit that the goal of the covert war is to bring down the Sandinista government. In any event, administration policy is one of making war, albeit with surrogate forces.

Moreover, this war has the support of a majority of the Kissinger commission which, despite some dissent, said that "Nicaragua must be aware that force remains an ultimate recourse." Nicaragua is thoroughly aware that force already is a recourse. The administration shows little readiness to negotiate. As long as war remains the policy, Central America and the United States can expect a rising cycle of violence and of victims.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Pentagon eyeing Treasury 'raid'

WASHINGTON — Is Cap Weinberger planning to bankrupt the country?

The defense secretary would deny such a suggestion, of course. But unless Budget Director David Stockman or Congress stops them, Weinberger and the other profligate Pentagon poohbahs will spend the nation right into the poorhouse.

Jack Anderson

Their own secret "wish list" doesn't include solid gold Cadillacs — yet. But some of their budget proposals are just about as extravagant.

My associate Donald Goldberg has obtained copies of the military's dreamy proposals. They're classified "Secret," and were intended strictly for internal use. Neither the White House nor Congress has seen the documents. Here are some of the most outrageous elements of the Pentagon's planned raid on the Treasury over the next five years:

— Weinberger wanted a $322.4 billion budget for fiscal 1985, but the White House decided on a more "reasonable" sum of $305 billion. The defense secretary recommends an increase of $30 billion to $40 billion each year through 1989. That would make the budget that year $464.7 billion — not far short of half a trillion dollars.

— The bulk of these billions will go to the Navy and Air Force, presumably to fund such high-priced programs as the B-1 bomber, the MX missile system, Aegis-equipped cruisers and Arleigh Burke-class destroyers.

— The Navy has been ordered to "start preliminary alternative designs of a new nuclear attack submarine to ensure our present acoustic superiority is maintained over the increased Soviet submarine threat projected in the 1990s." As I reported earlier, this supposed threat is a Pentagon fantasy.

— The Navy also wants to "deploy one additional carrier battle group to bring the total number of peacetime forward-deployed carrier battle groups to four."

— Communication with missile-carrying nuclear submarines is given high priority. The Pentagon wants the controversial Extremely Low Frequency receivers, which would be installed under a big chunk of northern Michigan, operating by 1987. Other communications systems should be operational by 1988. Protection from electromagnetic pulse, caused by nuclear explosions high in the sky and believed to disrupt all existing communications systems, should be tested by then.

— The Air Force wants 58 anti-satellite missiles by 1989, and a new air-to-surface missile is to be developed.

— All the armed services will help develop a new, low-cost helicopter in hopes of cutting down on the wide variety now in use. The service chiefs have been told: "Be prepared to accept development programs that are 'second best' solutions to your service's mission needs, in order to provide a 'first best' solution for the Department of Defense as a whole."

- A total of 31 combat zone hospitals are to be funded over the next two years.

— The Army has been ordered to start developing "two laser weapon systems concepts, including a close combat version and (an) air defense high-energy laser weapon version."

The Pentagon's ask-for-the-moon approach is of course just a budgetary weapon to use on Congress — the technique of an Oriental bazaar. The brass hats don't really expect to get everything they want ... or do they?

HEMISPHERE REPORT

Central American need desperate

WASHINGTON — Sen. Christopher Dodd, the Connecticut Democrat who is one of the harsher critics of Reagan administration foreign policy, was to the point in his comment on the report of the Presidential Commission on Central America.

"The report identifies the problems but offers no solutions beyond spending $8 billion and increasing military aid," Dodd said when the 132-page report was released Jan. 11.

William Giandoni

Clearly Dodd intended his words as a scathing criticism, but a reading of the document, the work of a bipartisan commission chaired by former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger, indicates that Dodd's comment was accurate.

The report pinpoints Central American problems and suggests solutions that will cost $8 billion and increased military aid.

It talks about land ownership inequities, the region's colonial legacy, rule by oligarchy, political retrogression and poverty, foreign debt and housing , health and education, and more.

It also explains the growth of Communist insurgency, starting with the support Fidel Castro of Cuba began giving guerrillas in Guatemala in 1960 and continuing up to the present and Nicaraguan-Cuban-Soviet support of guerrillas trying to bring down the U.S.-backed government of El Salvador.

It goes into detail on the revolution in Nicaragua "that overthrew the hated Somoza regime (and) has been captured by self-proclaimed Marxist-Leninists" who from the outset "have maintained close ties with Cuba and the Soviet Union... This military connection with Cuba, the Soviet Union, and its satellites internationalizes Central America's security problems and adds a menacing new dimension," the report says.

The commission noted that "the mixture of extreme poverty, high unemployment, steadily deteriorating social conditions and a very young population is potentially explosive" in Honduras.

As for Costa Rica, the only functioning democracy in Central America, "the nation's economy is in distress and Costa Ricans are increasingly concerned that the violence in the region will intrude on their hitherto peaceful oasis," the commission report stated.

One thing that has impressed those who have read, or at least skimmed through, the report is, as Howard Phillips of the Conservative Caucus put it, that men who had been skeptical of the seriousness of the Soviet threat in Central America have become aware of the reality of the problem.

Phillips cited Robert Strauss, former chairman of the Democratic National Committee, and Lane Kirkland, AFL-CIO president, as two examples.

Both signed the report.

Strauss appended a note affirming that "fundamental U.S. interests are at stake in Central America." He also stressed that "creation and/or preservation of pluralistic government (in Central America) depends as much or more on a basic restructuring of internal political and social institutions as on military assistance."

If dollar figures are any indication, the Kissinger commission placed more emphasis on its political, economic and social recommendations, than on the military.

The commission report called for an immediate $400 million in supplemental economic assistance for Guatemala, Honduras, El Salvador, Costa Rica, Panama and Belize. For the long term it recommended a reconstruction and development program that would cost the United States $8 billion over the next five years.

The commission did not estimate the cost of the military aid it said should be significantly increased for El Salvador, but cited a Defense Department calculation that it would take about $400 million in 1984 and 1985 "to break the military stalemate" there.

Although the commission report did not say so, it suggested that U.S. military assistance to El Salvador merits first priority at this time.

"If reforms are to be effective, the violence must be checked — which means that the security situation must be improved dramatically," the report states.

"The present level of U.S. military assistance (to El Salvador) is far too low" to permit its armed forces to wage effective counter-insurgency.

The current stalemate in El Salvador is "a condition that in the long term favors the guerrillas."

The United States should provide El Salvador "significantly increased levels of military aid as quickly as possible," the report insists.

The commission called for certain minimum standards of respect for human rights as a condition for military assistance.

"With respect to El Salvador, military aid should, through legislation requiring periodic reports, be made contingent upon demonstrated progress toward free elections; freedom of association; the establishment of the rule of law and an effective judicial system; and the termination of the activities of the so-called death squads, as well as vigorous action against those guilty of crimes and the prosecution to the extent possible of past offenders," the commission said.

While they endorsed that clause, Kissinger, former New Jersey Republican Senator Nicholas Brady and Boston University president John Silber recorded their "strong view that neither the Congress nor the Executive branch interpret conditionality in a manner that leads to a Marxist-Leninist victory in El Salvador."

With two dissents, the commission tacitly endorsed the covert aid the United States is providing anti-Sandinista rebels in Nicaragua.

"We do not believe that it would be wise to dismantle existing incentives and pressures on the Managua regime except in conjunction with demonstrable progress on the negotiating front," the report said.

"The majority of the members of the commission ... believe that the efforts of the Nicaraguan insurgents represent one of the incentives working in favor of a negotiated settlement," the report added.

Mayor Henry Cisneros of San Antonio, Texas., and Yale University professor Carlos Diaz-Alejandro objected.

Big Brother not year's real danger!

Forget George Orwell in 1984, and keep your eye on the computer.

The new computers, which are being installed in Washington by the bureaucracy to save money and make our government more efficient, may chip away a little more at our rights to privacy.

Art Buchwald

The new computers can now "talk" to each other and gather up information from other computers without the average citizen knowing anything about it.

For example, the IRS computer can call up a credit bureau computer and say, "Honeywell, can you give me some idea on how much money Charley Ogilvy spent last year on lunches, dinners, hotels and transportation?"

"Sure TRW, hold on a second. Here it is, $23,800. Is he in any kind of trouble?"

"He might be. Call me in a few weeks and I'll let you know."

"While I've got you on the line, can you tell me what Sam Knishe filed as his income last year? He claims he's dead broke and can't pay his Lord & Taylor bill."

"Knishe made $150,000."

"Thanks for the data. I'll talk to you soon."

Meanwhile, over at the FBI, its master computer is trying to locate a Fred Lumbach, who bilked them on a sting operation. It calls up the U.S. Census Bureau. "Apple, what's the last address you have for Fred Lumbach?"

"Gosh, our census data is supposed to be confidential."

"We know that but we have to find him."

"Okay, 1222 Harding Road, Beesville, Virginia, but you don't know where you got it."

"Is this the Lethargic National Bank computer?"

"Speaking."

"This is Hewlett-Packard, the Social Security mainframe. A Mrs. G.L. Carruthers has been collecting health benefits when she doesn't deserve them. Would you transfer $800 from her bank account to ours?"

"Sure, what are friendly computers for?"

"Hi Sperry, what's new at Selective Service?"

"Did Frank Dolan ask for a student loan from your bank?"

"If my memory serves me he did."

"Well don't give it to him. He hasn't registered for the draft."

"It's done. You promised me in-depth profiles on Ivan Monk, Donald Grunewald, and George Dormer."

"I'll call you tonight, pal."

"This is the New York Welfare Department computer. Am I talking to the Health and Human Services computer?"

"That's correct."

"We have a Mrs. L.L. Jones who says she hasn't received her Medicare check for the past five months."

"Mrs. Jones is dead."

"She's in our office kicking and screaming and seems to be very much alive."

"I'll send you a printout of her death certificate. If that doesn't convince her, nothing will."

Apologia — In a recent column I blamed G. Ray Arnett, assistant secretary of Interior, for wanting to tax non-hunting conservation equipment to pay for the preservation of wildlife. He was not responsible for the user tax rules, but was just following the wishes of Congress, who passed a 1980 act instructing the Interior Department to find new revenues for wildlife conservation.

On Jan. 18, 1919, the World War I peace conference opened in Versailles, France.

Ten years ago: Secretary of State Henry Kissinger and Egyptian President Anwar Sadat said they would press Syria to enter into disengagement talks with Israel.

Five years ago: Iranian Prime Minister Shahpour Bakhtiar sent a representative to France to plead with the exiled Ayatollah Khomeini to give the new Iranian government a chance.

Study: Monday, spring, fifth of month common times for suicide

BOSTON (AP) — A study of suicides shows that people are most likely to take their own lives on Mondays, on the fifth day of the month and in the springtime.

Just why these patterns occur is a mystery, though experts suspect they reflect particularly stressful times for people who are depressed.

The latest study, conducted by Kathleen MacMahon at the Harvard School of Public Health, is based on an analysis of 185,887 suicides in the United States from 1972 through 1978. It confirms two trends that other researchers have also noticed: Monday is the most common day for suicides, and Saturday is the least. And people are most apt to kill themselves in May and least suicide-prone in December.

However, another finding of the study is new. According to the report, published in the American Journal of Epidemiology, the statistics "reveal a remarkable cyclic variation by day within month which has not previously been recognized."

Suicides reach a peak at about the fifth day of each month, when there are 6 percent more of them than usual. Then they decline to about the 23rd, when they start to go back up again. Throughout the whole year, the only major exception to this pattern is February, when suicides peak during the middle of the month.

However, none of this seems to be related to the phases of the moon, which some people think affect behavior.

"No ready explanation comes to mind for this as for the other cycles," Miss MacMahon wrote. "Possibly it is related to cycles in personal finances during the month — arrival of bills or pay checks, for example."

During April, she noted, the suicide surge arrives a bit later than usual and peaks in the week before federal income tax returns are due.

At the Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta, sociologist James Mercy said the outburst of suicides at the start of the work week has promoted some people to call this day "blue Monday."

Although it is not clear why people choose this day to kill themselves, he said, some theorize that "people are going back to work, and those who are isolated or left out feel an exaggerated sense of depression at that period."

These suicide trends are more than statistical curiosities, Mercy says.

"If we know that suicides occur at a higher rate at one point in time," he said, "we can alter interventions to take that into account."

It might help, for instance, to advertise suicide hotlines on Sunday evenings or in the springtime.

Mine fire kills eight, traps nearly 90 others

TOKYO (AP) — Fire broke out today in an undersea coal mine, killing eight miners and trapping nearly 90 others in a pit more than 700 feet beneath the ocean floor at the island of Kyushu, police said.

Officials of the Mitsui Coal Mining Co.'s Miike Mine said 707 workers were in the mine when the fire, apparently in a belt conveyer, was detected nearly two miles from the entrance. They said more than 600 people escaped by three exits, but the rest failed to return.

Japan Broadcasting Corp. said the fire died down by about 8:30 p.m.

Police said 10 miners had been found by rescue workers. Eight were dead and the other two were hospitalized, they said. There were several injuries among those who made their way to the surface, local police said.

News reports said 23 of the trapped miners had made contact with rescue workers, but their condition was not known.

Omuta police said 102 miners, wearing oxygen masks, had entered the mine after the fire subsided.

Reagan meeting official

WASHINGTON (AP) — Malaysia's prime minister, Mahathir Mohammad, is conferring with President Reagan in a session which officials here hope will strengthen U.S. trade and economic ties with one of Southeast Asia's most rapidly developing nonaligned nations.

American officials see no major problems in the relationship between Washington and Kuala Lumpur, the Malaysian capital.

Mahathir, a blunt spoken physician turned politician, has urged Malaysians to look to the methods of such industrialized Asian nations as Japan and South Korea as an alternative to dependence on the West.

But at the same time, he has looked to the United States as a market for such key Malaysian exports as rubber and tin.

"He is interested in increasing trade and in increased U.S. investment," said a U.S. official who briefed reporters at the White House on today's visit of the 58-year-old Malaysian leader.

The official, who commented on the condition he not be identified by name, said that one of Malaysia's concerns is that already low world prices for tin will be further depressed by large U.S. sales of the mineral.

The official said the United States has offered assurances that U.S. tin sales will be held at relatively low levels and that the United States will exercise restraint in this area. The action has apparently resolved the problem, at least for now.

The Malaysian prime minister's visit here follows by a week that of Chinese Premier Zhao Ziyang. And U.S. officials were known to be anxious to give him equally high-level treatment.

Mahathir was to have lunch at the White House, to be the guest of honor at a banquet given by Vice President George Bush and to meet during the week with Secretary of State George P. Shultz, Treasury Secretary Donald Regan, Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger and other Cabinet-level officials.

Malaysia, a former British protectorate, is a nation slightly larger than New Mexico, with a largely Islamic population estimated in 1982 to total about 14.2 million. Independent since 1957, Malaysia's territory occupies the southern portion of the Malay peninsula, south of Thailand, as well as a slice of the northwestern part of the Indonesian island of Borneo about 400 miles across the South China Sea.

Lufkin woos Culpepper

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

Midland may be losing its second head football coach in less than a month when the Lufkin school board meets in the near future.

Midland High head coach Pat Culpepper was termed as "a leading candidate" for the Lufkin vacancy, according to Lufkin superintendent Jack Darnell, who talked with the Midland Reporter-Telegram Tuesday.

"We are in the process of selecting a head football coach who will also serve as athletic director," said Darnell. "I have interviewed Coach Culpepper and was extremely impressed with him. He has to be a leading candidate.

"We have not set up a meeting with our school board, but we expect to make a decision within a week, two weeks at the latest."

Culpepper confirmed Tuesday that he had been interviewed for the job and is interested in the position.

"I have interviewed for the job at Lufkin, but I haven't been told anything," said Culpepper. "I was told that a decision would be made by Thursday, but I haven't been contacted.

"I am interested in the position because it is the kind of job you could do a lot with if you had the right people. The athletic director's job is included and that would be a plus of course. It's also a one school community and that has advantages.

"I really don't know what direction they are going. I've only talked with the superintendent, but he was very positive with me. The input was very good. He asked me what it would take to build a program and I told him some things I thought about. Other than that, I haven't heard anything."

Darnell is conducting the search for a new Lufkin coach and will be the one who will make a recommendation to the Lufkin school board.

Lufkin is in District 13-5A with Longview, Longview Pine Tree, Marshall, Nacogdoches, Texarkana, Tyler and Tyler Lee.

"I was told that they may want me to fly in on Thursday, but I haven't heard anything since we talked," said Culpepper.

Darnell would not say when a meeting was planned to announce the decision, but when asked if it could be this week, he said, "Yes, we could make a decision soon."

Culpepper has been head coach at Midland High since 1980, compiling a 17-23 record in four grid campaigns. The height of his reign at MHS came in 1982 when his team tied for second place in District 4-5A, missing the playoffs by a single flip of the coin to San Angelo.

Even though Culpepper is best known for developing strong defensive teams, he developed an all-out passing attack in 1983, making the Bulldogs one of the most enjoyable teams to watch. MHS was the top passing team in West Texas in 1983.

Super Bowl

Skins, Raiders both have flaws

By JERRY MAGEE
Copley News Service

TAMPA, Fla. — According to no less an authority than the Los Angeles Raiders' Lester Hayes, Sunday's Super Bowl XVII merely is "the greatest game of the last half-century."

Perhaps. All the hype and hoopla of this event, however, cannot conceal one point: The Raiders and the Washington Redskins, for all their excellence, are not without flaws.

The Raiders' problem area is an offensive line which permitted Jim Plunkett and Marc Wilson to be sacked 55 times during the regular season. Only two teams, Philadelphia (with 57 sacks) and St. Louis (with 59) had their quarterbacks placed on the ground with greater frequency.

THE REDSKINS have as much difficulty knocking down passes as the Raiders do in impeding pass rushers. Of the 28 NFL teams, Washington ranked 28th in pass defense with an average regular-season yield of 248.4 yards, a figure that was enlarged when San Francisco's Joe Montana hit the Redskins for a net 347 yards passing while Washington was winning the National Conference championship game 24-21.

The irony of this Super Bowl, then, is that in a year when football's finest teams have reached the finals of Pete Rozelle's tournament — and this doesn't always happen — the game may turn on which side is best able to compensate for its weaknesses.

Of the two, Los Angeles would seem the more advantageously placed in this regard. An offensive lineman misses a block and it's a sack. When a pass defender fails to cover properly, it can be a touchdown.

BUT THERE are favorable circumstances for the Redskins, too. Most of the sacks against the Raiders have come over the left side of the team's offensive front, where guard Charley Hannah and tackle Bruce Davis take their stances. Opposite Davis, Washington can align its most active rusher, Dexter Manley. Advantage, Redskins.

Manley is eager for the confrontation. It seems he had some, uh, problems with Davis in Washington on the season's fifth weekend, when the NFC team rallied for a 37-35 victory. Should Davis "try anything" Sunday, Manley announced Tuesday that he plans to break his neck.

"A lot of guys get a reputation with their mouth," replied Davis. "Like Dexter. Gastineau's dance. You can't blame a guy, because it's self-promotion, and most defensive linemen get their reputations and become known around the league by actions not necessarily associated with football.

"In his case, he has, on occasion, proved that he can do what he says. I'd rather play a tough, hard-nosed football game, but if it degenerates into a fist fight, we can go that way, too."

Davis, a 6-6, 285-pounder, has very large fingers and, in the thinking of many scholars, very slow feet. Hannah, 6-5 and 260, is considered to lack lower body strength, and he is just now becoming comfortable at guard after making a switch from tackle.

A FORMER UCLA athlete, Davis once sought to improve his flexibility by taking classes in ballet, but that isn't going to be any dance when he faces off against Manley.

"Playing offensive tackle is like being on an island," Davis noted. "It's you and one other guy, and if he beats you, it's a sack. And very rarely do you get help."

Still, Davis expressed confidence. "As far as offensive line play is concerned, chemistry probably is as important as ability," he said. "It takes a while to develop that. Fortunately for us, it happened at the right time during the year."

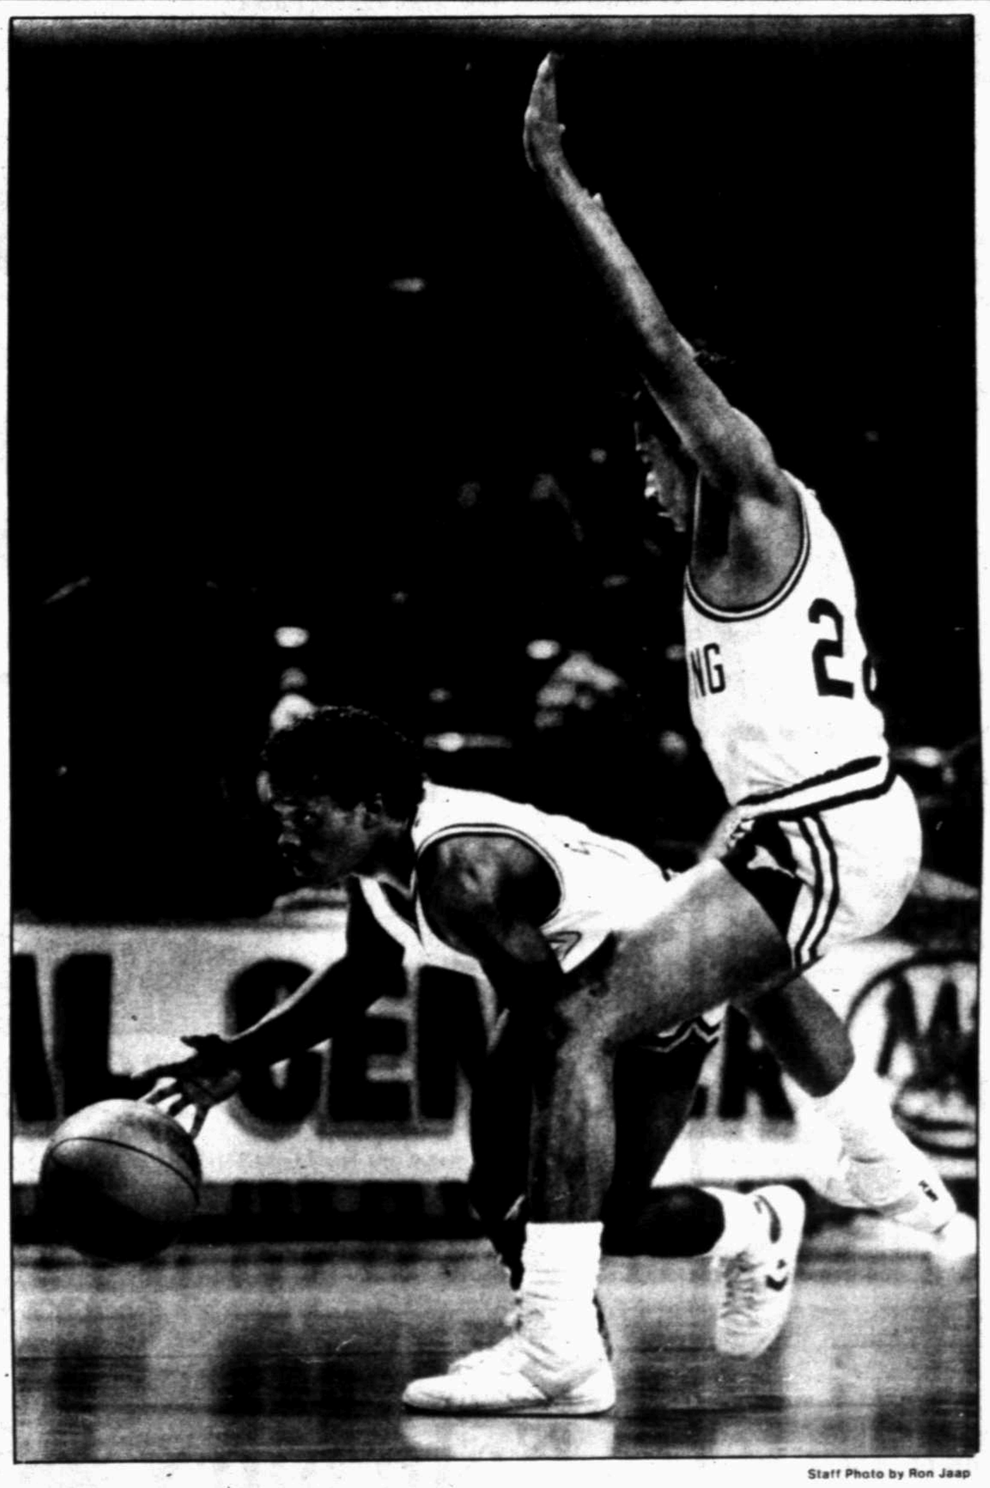

No one among the Raiders, though, compares their current front to the one they offered when Gene Upshaw and Art Shell, both now retired, played on the left. "I played with those guys for a few years," said tackle Henry Lawrence, a 10-year veteran, "and they were good. Shell and Upshaw! There may never be a combination like that in professional football. Like the guys used to say, they could block out the sun — and anything else that got in the way. They were great; the line was great. I think this offensive line is good, and has potential to be a great one."

A pretty good coach named Bud Wilkinson once said that potential is the most overused word in football. If a player has potential, why hasn't he demonstrated it?

The only newcomer to the Raiders' offensive line is Hannah. Since their 27-17 conquest of Miami in Super Bowl XVII, the Redskins have had to redo a secondary depleted by strong safety Tony Peters' elimination because of a drug-related offense, the holdout of corner defender Jeris White and the demotion of Vernon Dean, the other cornerman.

Peters was rated one of the league's finest at his position. Dean had a splendid rookie season. White was capable. The only member of Washington's secondary of a year ago who remains is free safety Mark Murphy, a wise, insightful athlete, but slow.

Midland Lee guard Tyrone Thurman weaves his way around Big Spring's Fred Cole during District 4-5A action at Chaparral Center Tuesday night. Thurman led all scorers with 13 points and he had six steals.

Rebels break out of slump

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

Midland Lee's beleaguered Rebels, who had dropped three tough District 4-5A contests in a row, got a much needed break at Chaparral Center Tuesday night in a fun-and-run 62-30 stomping of the Big Spring Steers.

"It was good for the Rebels to have this kind of game," said Lee coach Paul Stueckler. "It was nice to go out there and relax a little and have some fun. I thought we played very well, but we slacked off when we got a big lead, but I guess that is to be expected in a game like this."

The Rebels raced to a 9-0 lead in the first quarter and never took a glance over the shoulder. The rout was on and there was nothing the winless Steers could do about it.

The Rebs also stayed in the thick of the district race. They are now 2-3 and only two games out of first place with eight games still to play. If Tuesday's outing was any indication of how the Rebels can play, they could make a move in the second half.

There was little excitement in this one as the score would indicate, but the game did serve notice of the arrival of Lee junior guard Tyrone Thurman. Thurman canned 13 points in limited playing time and produced six steals along the way with lightning quick reflexes.

Thurman got a late start in basketball since he was a starting halfback for Lee's state bound football squad. Now he seems at home on the court too. He had 14 in his last outing against Permian. This development in itself should make Lee a much stronger team down the stretch.

"I don't know, but Tyrone may have set a school record for steals out there. Every time I looked up, he had picked somebody's pocket. I think he's back in form. He didn't look too good when he first came out for basketball," Stueckler said.

Thurman's 13 led all scorers as the Lee squad enjoyed passing the points around. Sophomore Anthony Dickens had 11 points, hitting four of five shots from the field in the first half. Alvin Henry, Lee's leading scorer, had 10 points with five of 13 after sitting out a game for missing practice. Alton Davis canned eight points, all in the second half. In all, 10 Rebs got in on the scoring act.

No one was able to crack the double figure barrier for the Steers as Mike Leuschner had nine points. The Steers had trouble finding the hoop in this one, which speaks well for the Lee defense. Big Spring has been scoring around 50 points a game in district play.

The Rebels held an 18-8 lead after one period, but Big Spring scored only eight points in the next two periods as Lee led 50-18 after three quarters. Lee owned a 20-point lead as early as 3:50 before the half and led by as many as 35 points in the game.

Lee hit a respectable 45 percent on the night, but hit an amazing 52 percent when they were really cooking in the first half. Big Spring countered with a 29 percent shooting effort.

It's interesting to note that 36 of the Rebels' points came from underclassmen.

The Rebels, now 12-10 on the year, should have a new outlook entering a key game against the surging Abilene Cooper Cougars Friday in Abilene. Cooper upset league leading Odessa Permian Tuesday night and may be ripe for a charging Lee team. Lee lost squeakers to San Angelo, Abilene High and Permian in the last three outings. They need a win over a good team to get things rolling.

"Permian is a good team, but they are not going to run away and hide with this district," said Stueckler prior to playing Big Spring. Permian was only two hours from losing its perch at the top, giving the whole league new life.

In junior varsity action, Lee whipped the Steers, 66-49, as Paul Eldridge hit for 19 points and Earl Davis 18. Colin Carroll had 14 for Big Spring and Arthur Jackson 11.

Midland Christian wins

Midland Christian went double overtime to defeat Lubbock Christian, 68-66, the Mustangs' first victory ever over LC, a finalist last year in the state private schools basketball tournament.

The win evened the Mustangs' district record at 1-1. Monday, Midland lost to Lubbock Christian at Lubbock by 12 points. The losers are now 2-1 in district.

Cary Wallace scored 24 points to lead Midland Christian while Joe Gould and Paul Thomason had 12 each. Scott Langham's 28 points were high for Lubbock.

MC trailed 44-40 going into the final period, but rallied to score 18 points for a 58-58 tie that forced the overtime sessions.

MHS ties for first

Cooper surprises Odessa Permian

SAN ANGELO — While the Midland High Bulldogs were fighting for District 4-5A survival here Tuesday night in overtime against the San Angelo Bobcats, they had no way of knowing that league leading Odessa Permian hit the skids against Abilene Cooper.

But the Bulldogs did survive with a 72-70 overtime victory over the Bobcats in a key road game and woke up this morning tied for first place in the 4-5A chase with Permian and Abilene High, all at 4-1 with eight league games still left to play.

The Bulldogs chose to jump in the jumbled 4-5A chase in high drama. They don't like to make things easy for themselves. Some high powered Bobcats may have had something to do with that, however.

MHS jumped to a 45-36 halftime lead against San Angelo, but saw that nine-point advantage disappear with only 18 points in the next two periods of play as foul trouble began to plague the Purple Pack.

San Angelo outscored the Bulldogs by 27-18 margin in the second half to force the controversial overtime.

THE BOBCATS' Rodney Anthony sent the game past regulation play with a free throw after time had run out to tie the score at 63. Midland's Eric Brunson was called for a foul as the final buzzer went off. No one was quite sure if the foul was called before or after the final horn, but Anthony was allowed to shoot the one-and-one free throw. He hit only the front end.

But the Dawgs got off to a quick start in OT as Fred Franklin, who had 10 points on the night, hit a layup and Chris Herbert followed with two free throws for a 67-63 margin.

Herbert, who hit eight of eight free throw attempts on the night, canned six of them in the overtime period to lead the final charge. A Todd Shiplet free toss gave the Bulldogs a 72-68 margin and San Angelo's Micheal Pfluger hit a basket at the buzzer for the final margin.

PFLUGER LED all scorers with 32 points, a season high and the best point production by a district player this year. MHS, however, had four players in double figures as Chris Rooker led the way with 14 points before fouling out. Kenneth Johnson, who also fouled out, had 13 points while Darrell Davis joined Franklin at 10. Anthony had 15 points for San Angelo.

San Angelo scored 24 points at the free throw line as Pfluger hit 10 and Anthony nine. MHS got only 14 charity tosses, but Herbert's eight of eight was a big plus for the Bulldogs.

Kentucky falls again

By Associated Press

The Florida Gators had a plan, which means the third-ranked Kentucky Wildcats have their second straight loss.

"We figured we were going to gamble on them making them from the outside rather than gamble on them making them from the inside," Florida Coach Norm Sloan said.

The Wildcats got only four points each from their two big men — 7-foot-1 Sam Bowie and 6-11 Melvin Turpin — as unranked Florida chalked up a 69-57 Southeastern Conference basketball victory Tuesday night.

"I knew we had the same talent. They just have more height," said Vernon Delancy, who led Florida with five assists and added 14 points.

In other games involving ranked teams, seventh-ranked Maryland downed Clemson 85-72 and No. 12 Wake Forest defeated Duke 97-66.

"I'M REALLY concerned with what happened to us early in the game," Kentucky Coach Joe B. Hall said. "Forget about our offense. The way our defense played, we couldn't have beaten anybody."

Eugene McDowell and Ronnie Williams, each 6-8, took advantage of a sluggish Wildcat defense, combining for 31 points and 16 rebounds to lead Florida to its first victory over Kentucky in five years. McDowell hit 8 of 9 from the field for 16 points, while Williams finished with 15, including 7 of 9 from the free throw line.

Freshman guard Andrew Moten added 13 for the Gators.

Jim Master led Kentucky with 18 points, while Kenny Walker added 15. The Wildcats' record fell to 12-2 and 4-2 in the Southeastern Conference.

Lamesa buries LV Chiefs, 61-38

Lamesa hardly broke a sweat in defeating Lake View's Chiefs, 61-38, in a District 2-4A basketball game Tuesday night as the Tors upped their league record to 5-0 and went 16-3 for the season.

The Tors outscored Lake View 43-18 in the second half, burying the Chiefs with a 32-point last period. Mark Murphy scored 24 points and Jerry Masons 13 to lead Lamesa.

Lake View maintained its perfect record, 0-5 in district and 0-18 for the season.

In District 8-2A, McCamey (Deirschke 14, Powell 18) defeated Wall, 62-55, a result which leaves both teams 2-1. In the girls game, Wall beat McCamey, 42-27.

Stanton (Rocky Barnes 12, Robbie Barnes 12) slipped to 1-2 with a 56-54 loss to Eldorado (Brama 12, Cheatham 12). Eldorado also won the girls game, 51-44.

Crane (Jim Vasquez 12, Tower 14, K.Walker 16) defeated Ozona, 85-72, to go 2-0 in District 6-3A. The Cranes are 12-5 for the season. Ozona is 0-2 in conference.

Iraan (White 12, Godfrey 11) won over Rankin (West 14), 45-27. Iraan is 13-4 and 2-0 while the Red Devils are 9-9 and 1-1.

Rice faculty against softening curriculum

HOUSTON (AP) — More than 200 members of the faculty at Rice University, which has the highest academic standards in the Southwest Conference, have petitioned against introducing easy classes for athletes.

The school's board of governors has announced plans to institute "sheltered" classes for athletes to improve the performance of Rice's athletic teams.

Rice's football team is consistently among the conference's worst.

Sociology Professor William Martin's petition was passed around at a meeting of about 150 faculty members Tuesday.

The document, which is to be presented to the board of governors, say the professors believe playing college football is "at most, an ancillary activity of the university. Accordingly, we do not believe that special curricula or courses should be introduced, nor special admissions standards maintained for the sake of the athletic program."

But faculty members rejected a move by history Professor Francis Loewenheim to set up an admissions standard which would apply to all students starting with the class of 1992. Athletes, as well as students of music and architecture, are not required to meet standards as high as those of other colleges within the university.

University officials report that the average entering freshman at Rice scored 1,260 of a possible 1,600 on the Scholastic Aptitude Test — a standard comparable to many Ivy League schools.

Taylor finds way out

NEW YORK (AP) — Lawrence Taylor apparently has found a way to get out of his contract with the Jersey Generals four years before he would have played a down for the USFL.

The Giants' linebacker is expected to get a new $6.2-million contract from the Giants that will keep him with them through 1989. The Giants are expected to approve the transaction today.

Donald Trump, owner of the Generals, will be paid up to $750,000 over the next five years for agreeing to let Taylor out of the contract.

Haynes or Hayes?

Raiders happy with both, thanks

By JOHN NADEL
AP Sports Writer

TAMPA, Fla. — Who's a better cornerback, Mike Haynes or Lester Hayes?

Vann McElroy won't venture an opinion. He's just glad he's playing behind the pair in the Los Angeles Raiders' secondary.

"Haynes is one of the two best, the other one is on the other side," said McElroy, the Raiders' free safety, at Tampa Stadium on Tuesday. "I won't say who's One and who's Two.

"I go through a game and I want to force myself to make more plays. They shut things out. They make you look good. That's a tremendous confidence builder. You have two guys like that on the corners, it makes your job easier."

McElroy, in his second National Football League season, hasn't needed much help to look good. He intercepted eight passes during the season and will play for the American Football Conference in the Pro Bowl on Jan. 29.

So will Hayes, for the fourth straight year. Haynes won't, for only the second time in his eight pro seasons, but almost certainly the only reason for that is because he played in only five games during the year.

THE TRIO along with strong safety Mike Davis is gearing up for the passing offense of the Washington Redskins in Super Bowl XVIII on Sunday.

Haynes came to the Raiders in a deal with the New England Patriots after sitting out more than half of the season. He became a free agent after the 1982 campaign and wasn't able to come to terms with the Patriots.

Haynes played two games in a reserve role for Los Angeles before becoming a starter, replacing Ted Watts, for the final three games.

"I thank Al Davis (the Raiders' Managing General Partner) for getting Mike Haynes into a silver and black uniform because I was getting rusty not having a lot of passes thrown toward me," said Hayes. "Now that Mike Haynes has settled in at the right corner, the offenses are challenging me more. I like that."

Haynes, who will be playing in his first Super Bowl, said he knew that was a good possibility the minute he became a member of the Raiders.

"There's definitely a commitment to winning here," he said. "It's just completely different here from what it was in New England, like day and night, cold and hot.

MHS, Abilene to play

MIDLAND HIGH and Abilene High will loosen up the district logjam Friday when they face each other Friday night at Chaparral Center. AHS won a narrow 65-62 decision over luckless Odessa High. OHS lost to Midland High Friday by a two-point margin and the defending champs are now 1-4 in league play.

Kirt Robinson led AHS with 16 points while Tom Simmons had 14 and Mickey Russell 13. Odessa's Joe Terry led all scorers with 20 points.

But the real stunner Tuesday came in Abilene where Cooper (2-3) spilled league leading Permian by a 57-50 margin. Bob Estes, who entered the game as the league's leading scorer, had 17 points while Greg Martin and Derrick Turnbull each had 14. Permian got 12 each from Paul Logan and Rocky Hendrix and 10 each from Terry Williams and Troy Nini.

Permian should remain at the top of the pack with either MHS or AHS after Friday since Mojo faces winless Big Spring, a 62-30 loser to Midland Lee Tuesday.

Redskins wide receivers key to air offense

By IRA ROSENFELD
AP Sports Writer

TAMPA, Fla. — A pair of outstanding wide receivers, Art Monk and Charlie Brown, figure to be a big help to the Washington Redskins in Sunday's Super Bowl matchup with the Los Angeles Raiders.

Brown and Monk combined for 14 catches and 238 yards on Oct. 2 when the Redskins beat the Raiders 37-35 during the regular season.

Brown, the NFC's leading receiver with 78 receptions, burned the highly touted Raider secondary for a career-best 11 catches.

At 5-feet-10 and 179 pounds, Brown glides rather than runs to his spot. His leaping ability and long arms allow him to go high over the heads of would-be defenders to haul in passes.

On Sunday, Brown will draw the Raiders' Pro Bowl cornerback Lester Hayes. Brown is anxious for the meeting.

"I know that Lester has the big reputation but honestly I don't think there's anybody out there better than I am, either as a defensive back or a wide receiver," Brown said.

Monk, a former All-American at Syracuse, forms the other half of the Redskin big play offense.

At 6-foot-3 and 209 pounds, Monk resembles Charley Taylor, the Redskins' receivers coach and a man who has caught more passes than anyone in league history.

"People say I play like Charley and I can't think of a higher compliment," Monk said.

A first-round draft pick in 1980 (the team's first No. 1 since 1968), Monk has proven to be a valuable asset to the Redskins.

The team's second leading receiver, Monk has 54 receptions through the playoffs including seven touchdowns.

Last year, Monk missed the playoffs after breaking a foot in the last game of the regular season.

Forced to watch his teammates from the stands, Monk is ready for a big day.

"You work all year to get to the Super Bowl. Last year I came so close to playing in it but lost out because of the injury. I promised myself if I got another chance nothing would stand in my way of having a great day," Monk said.

Poised to stop Monk and Brown is a Raider secondary that includes, in addition to Hayes, a second All-Pro in Mike Haynes.

Both Hayes and Haynes practice the art of bump-and-run at the line of scrimmage, trying to knock off the receivers before they can get into their passing patterns.

The Raiders may be the most physical team in the league, according to Brown. "Some teams run well, others pass. The Raiders hit.

Skins, Raiders both have flaws

AT WHITE'S position, Redskin defensive chief Richie Petitbon has Darrell Green, a rookie. At 5-8 and 170, Green compensates for his lack of size with 4.3 speed, but the line on him is that he can be lulled into major errors. Instead of Dean, the Redskins are going with slender Anthony Washington, a second-round draft choice of Pittsburgh in 1981 whom Chuck Noll dealt to Washington this season when Noll wearied of Washington's inconsistency.

The strong safety is another rookie, Ken Coffey, 6-0, 190, out of Southwest Texas State. Few people view him as exceptional.

This unit has been victimized deep so often that, in jest, it began terming itself "the Pearl Harbor Crew," and created appropriate sound effects, imitating the noise of bombs exploding, "Kapow!" Like that.

Petitbon has not been amused. "I'm not a big nickname guy," he said. "I leave the nicknames to other people. We just like to go out, play football, and do our jobs."

To Petitbon, Washington's pass defense statistics are misleading. "In most cases, if you're ahead, you get the other team out of its game plan, and a lot of those yards are give-up yards, which don't really mean anything," he argued. "If teams can't run on you (the Redskins' average yield to the run is 80.6 yards, the lowest in the league), you're going to win a lot of football games. I think it all starts with stopping the run."

Petitbon's most difficult decision was replacing Dean with Washington late in the season. "Due to injuries, he wasn't the guy we had to have in there," Petitbon said. "He had a neck injury, and he just wasn't able to turn as well as we thought he should."

Dean never mentioned his injury as he stood Tuesday in the middle of Tampa Stadium during the Redskins' phase of a Super Bowl photo day. "I just wasn't ready mentally, and when you're not ready mentally, physically you're going to be limited," he said. "I had a few personal problems. It was just one of those things. I wasn't playing well, and I got down on myself."

Dean declined to discuss the nature of his personal problems.

SOME PEOPLE suspect Dean is too slow to play corner. "That's probably so," he admitted. "A lot of times, I try to play deep. If I tried to play tighter, the guys could beat me deep. I think maybe a couple of years down the line, I'll be switched to safety."

Rangers score double

Greenwood defeats Klondike

By BRUCE CASTLEBERRY
Sports Writer

GREENWOOD— Although the temperatures were cold outside and the shooting was frosty to match, Greenwood's boys and girls basketball teams posted home-court victories over the Klondike Cougars.

The Lady Rangers lead off with a 53-41 win that featured once again the considerable talents of Belinda Duke. Duke was nearly unstoppable for Greenwood, canning 11 of 15 shots from the floor and adding a free throw for 23 points.

Duke also contributed in other categories. She nabbed 10 rebounds, made four steals and dished out an assist.

COACH ROGER Goldsmith's boys had one of the most lopsided two-point victories on record. The Cougars made a game of things for a half, but Greenwood's inside game began to dominate in the second half. Klondike rallied witha late rush, but the Rangers escaped to post a 50-48 verdict.

"We don't have to live and die by the way Belinda plays," said girl's coach Cliff Stephens afterwards, "But I'm glad she's on my team."

Duke recovered nicely from an off night (five points) in Greenwood's last effort. In fact, Stephens thinks the Ranger slump of late has been overcome for good. "The last couple of games, we haven't been as intense. We've been real flat and we were tonight in the first half. Maybe we're out of it."

Duke balanced her night with 11 points in the first half while guiding the Rangerettes to a 23-21 advantage. Klondike's Terri Cave was a factor inside, battling Greenwood's Kay Wallace for rebounds and gimmes. Cave and guard Patti Harris provided all the punch for the Cougars. Cave scrambled inside for a team-high 16 points while Harris added 11. Seven of Harris' total came at the foul line, and the Cougars outscored GHS 13-3 at the foul stripe.

Although Greenwood couldn't shut down Cave inside, the Rangers got help for Duke from Wallace (eight points) and Deonna Dean (nine points). In the third quarter, when Greenwood broke open the game from a 29-29 tie with eight straight points, Dean and Duke combined for all the scoring.

At 37-31 entering the fourth period, Greenwood simply went to their basic offense, and Klondike never got a chance. Wallace tightened down on Cave (only three points in the quarter), and Greenwood upped its record to 16-3, 3-0 in District 7A.

THE BOYS (14-5, 3-0) played gut-check defense for three and a half periods, then withstood a full-court blitz by the Cougars to become the only district unbeaten.

Klondike's unbeaten district mark meant that the game was a high-stakes test for first place. Both teams opened the game a bit cautiously, and Goldsmith used even more caution in instructing the Rangers to go to a delay game in the second quarter with a 12-11 lead.

"It's very important that we play it our tempo," said Goldsmith. "Coming into the game we felt like that was the key." Klondike is a team that likes to push the ball up the floor, but the stall seemed to throw the Cougar offense out of whack.

By the time Klondike resurfaced, Greenwood had built up a 29-22 margin entering the fourth quarter. Goldsmith put the air back in the ball, and Greenwood took off, stretching the lead to the game's largest at 43-31 with 2:52 left.

Apparently safe, but Klondike began an intense press and the Rangers started to make mistakes and miss free throws.

AFTER TROY Wallace missed the second half of a one-and one, Greenwood lead 44-35 with 2:06 left. Tim Cope was hitting for Klondike (10 of his 12 came in the fourth quarter), and after he swished a jumper the score was Greenwood 46-43 with 40 seconds left.

Wallace had game scoring honors with a 23-point performance, and he picked up the scoring from usually productive John Gilliam. Gilliam finished the game with only two points, but they came at just the right time. Standing scoreless at the foul line with eight seconds to play and the score 48-46, Gilliam could have succumbed to heavy pressure. But, the stocky forward dropped in both throws and the game was complete.

Both Ranger squads play a non-district match Friday at Forsan.

Vilas disappointed

NEW YORK (AP) — Disappointed that a three-member panel upheld a charge that he accepted an illegal guarantee to play a tennis tournament, Guillermo Vilas says his lawyers will decide whether he will take his case to court.

The panel let stand a $20,000 fine against the Argentine star, but ruled that a one-year suspension by the Men's International Professional Tennis Council be "terminated, beginning immediately."

Vilas was fined and suspended by the Pro Council for allegedly receiving a $60,000 guarantee to play in the Volvo Grand Prix tournament at Rotterdam, Netherlands. The penalties were withheld pending the ruling of the panel after Vilas appealed the action.

Cleaning up old bank's records FDIC's top task

By JULIE FAUBEL
Business-Energy writer

Updating insufficient documentation in the loan files of failed First National Bank of Midland continues to be the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp.'s number one priority.

The documentation problems must be resolved before the FDIC can seek bids from other financial institutions for the remaining loans, Thomas R. Procopio, the FDIC's liquidator in charge of FNB, said Tuesday after RepublicBank First National Midland announced it had completed its exclusive loan review of the FNB portfolio now held by the FDIC.

RepublicBank announced it had bought back 8,692 loans totaling in excess of $250 million in loans from the failed bank's portfolio. During RepublicBank's loan review which began mid-October, bank officials have said insufficient records were one of the main obstacles they had to overcome.

"The documentation problems and deficiencies were worse than anyone expected," Procopio said. "And in all fairness to RepublicBank, no ongoing banking institution, which wants to stay on the good side of banking examiners, is going to take on a loan, even from a very strong customer, without the documentation being in place.

PROCOPIO SAID he was hoping RepublicBank would initially buy back more loans.

"I think we're disappointed our original expectations of $300-400 million weren't obtained but we understand, under the circumstances, why they weren't."

Procopio said the major problems with FNB's loan documentation included missing information, outdated financial appraisals and outdated customer financial reports.

"Other problems included the fact that disclosure regulations (required information given to a customer about the total costs of a loan), which are required by other government agencies, were not in place.

"Also, updated appraisals on collateral were not in place. As a result, there was no way to determine what the loan value to collateral ratio was."

PROCOPIO EXPLAINED the importance of this ratio, "It is important because it indicates a loan's credit-worthiness and is something examiners look at very closely. It tells them what kind of cushion is there for the bank if the customer defaults on his payment and they have to look to the collateral for repayments, they need to know it's worth."

Procopio said the FDIC will primarily be responsible for "curing the documentation deficiencies" that exist in the failed bank's portfolio.

"In some instances, because RepublicBank wants the loan bad enough, they will be helping us. However, the responsibility primarily falls upon the FDIC's shoulders," Procopio said.

ONCE THAT TASK is completed the FDIC will "package" the remaining loans and try to sell them to other financial institutions and private investors.

A package consists of a number of loans based on their current status — type and performance. Procopio said the FDIC trys to package what it believes to be good loans together. The decision is based on the collateral, the borrower and the performance of the loan. However, he added, the package must be taken as a whole.

In the past, he said, the FDIC has sold loans to private investors worldwide. These investors, he said want to put their money in U.S. investments of any kind.

However, Procopio added, he wants to keep as many loans as possible in the Permian Basin.

"There's a chance some of the loans are not going to be acquireable by area financial institutions, no matter how much they may want to take them. Banking regulations and prudent lending will dictate that banks can't touch some of these loans, no matter how much we discount them."

THESE LOANS, Procopio said, will be marketed to private investors who are willing "to take a chance or the risk for the high yeild that a bank can't really do prudently."

Procopio said the FDIC has been preparing loan packages for the past 45 days in the obvious anticipation that RepublicBank would not take all of the $1.3 billion portfolio. Procopio said he expects the packages to be mailed out within the next 45-60 days.

A loan package includes all the necessary documentation required by a fianancial institution to determine if it is interested in bidding on the package including the book value of the loans, the interest rates, the terms of the loans, the types of collateral supporting the loans and if not, it tells if the loans are unsecured.

Once a financial institution decides it is interested in bidding on a loan package and the FDIC determines that it is a bonafide bidder, then the FDIC will let that institution further examine the loan file. However, Procopio said, the institutions must submitt their intentions in writing and also agree not to disclose any information which they are given.

"AFTER EVERYONE has completed their preliminary work — looked at the documentation and looked at the packages they're interested in — then they will tell us they're interested in bidding. Once we get enough interested bidders, we will set a cutoff date for all bids to be submitted. However, the FDIC does reserve the right of refusal on all bids. So if the yeild requirements of these bidders are not adequate, we will be able to turn their bids down."

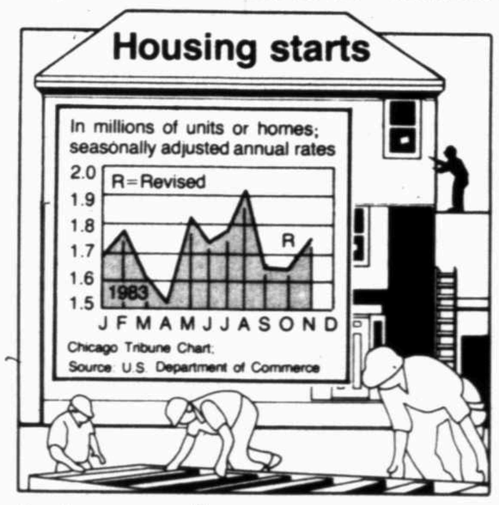

Procoipo said once a bid has been accepted the legal documents will be signed and the loans will be transferred after payment is made. He also said the FDIC will probably give other financial institutions a "put back provision" similar to the one it gave RepublicBank. This provision, in RepublicBank's case, allows the bank to give back to the FDIC a specified number of loans within one year.

"We certainly will give everyone the right to kick back any loans that are rendered uncollectable because of documentation deficiences that weren't discovered at the time of purchase."

Should the FDIC discount any loans, Procopio said, the discount will vary from package to package and depend on the quality of the loans.

"A lot of the loans we still have are not going to be discounted at all. As a matter of fact, there's an outside chance that some of them will be sold at a premium," he added.

Despite all the progress, other problems still facing the FDIC are a lack of manpower, restructuring as many loans as possible, marketing real estate in the area's depressed market and convincing area residents that the FDIC wants to help, not hurt the Permian Basin Procopio said.

New housing start rate up 60% in 1983

WASHINGTON (AP) — Construction of new homes jumped 60 percent last year over the dismal record posted in 1982, the government reported today.

However, in a sign that the housing boom is leveling off, housing starts for December showed a 5 percent drop from the month before, the Commerce Department said.

The department put total housing starts in 1983 at 1.703 million units, up from the 1.062 million units in 1982, making 1983 the best year for the industry since 1979.

The 1983 rebound would have been even better, analysts have said, but for higher interest rates last summer.

For December, the Commerce Department estimated work was started on new housing at a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 1.67 million units, compared with a revised rate of 1.76 million units in November.

All of the decline came in construction of single-family homes, which fell 11.4 percent in December. Construction of dwellings with 2 to 4 units climbed by 13.5 percent and apartment buildings with more than 4 units were up 3.6 percent.

Construction starts were down in all parts of the country in December, except the South, and analysts said this was probably due in part to unusually severe weather.

Before last month's decline, housing starts had risen in November by 6.1 percent following decreases in September and October.

Economists have said that the housing industry has pretty much achieved its recovery from the recession and that further large increases in construction are unlikely because of high interest rates.

This prediction was supported in today's report by the number of permits issued for future construction, which dropped by 2.3 percent in December to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 1.6 million units. Permits issued for single-family homes were down slightly by 0.3 percent.

New mortgages dominate lending

By The Los Angeles Times - Washsngton Post News Service

Adjustable-rate mortgages, virtually unknown nationwide three years ago, now account for almost half of the home loans being made in the United States, according to a study to be released today by the Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corp., or Freddie Mac, as the agency is known.

Among all mortgage lenders surveyed, adjustable loans captured 44 percent of the market, but that figure grew to 49 percent when only savings and loan associations were included. By contrast, adjustable-rate mortgages captured only 1 percent of the market in 1980.

The Freddie Mac survey covered loans made by several hundred mortgage lenders during 1983's first six months.

The survey, believed to be the most detailed and comprehensive study ever made of adjustable-rate mortgages, attributed the surge in popularity largely to the prohibitively high-interest rates for fixed-rated mortgages. In contrast to fixed-rate mortgages, where the amount of the monthly payment remains constant over the life of the loan, adjustable-rate payments vary according to prevailing interest rates.

A key attraction of the adjustable-rate loans, the survey said, is that they allow first-time home buyers to qualify for mortgage loans. That is because initial interest rates are as much as four percentage points below fixed-rate mortgages. Then, once the borrower has qualified, the interest rates and payments are adjusted to market rates, frequently at the end of the first year, the study noted.

Oilmen say Alaska economy needs exploration

By JACK SWANSON
Hearst Feature Service

ANCHORAGE — Alaska's economic lifeblood will begin drying up by the end of the decade unless oil companies are allowed to explore for more oil, top oilmen told the state's governor and Alaskan businessmen here last weekend.

Oil men and support industry executives criticised a request that Gov. Bill Sheffield made last week to the Secretary of the Interior to delay three offshore lease sales, calling the delays unnecessary. Sheffield defended his request, saying the government needs more time to assess possible damage to fisheries and shoreline communities.

"What is the level of exploration in Alaska? Not what it should have been over the past five or 10 years," said Roger Herrera, manager of exploration for Sohio Alaska. "Collectively, we've only drilled 20 to 25 exploratory wells a year. Last year, we drilled only 12 or 13 wells. There is no reason we couldn't double that number. We have the expertise, we have the equipment. We could do it if the lease sales were held on time."

Sen. Ted Stevens, R-Alaska, said the state should find ways to use more of its oil and gas within the state, rather than hope that Congress will approve the sale of Alaskan oil to Japan. He also predicted the state will have a difficult time coming up with funding for a natural gas pipeline to ship its vast supplies of gas to the lower 48 states.

Sheffield, Stevens and more than a dozen top oil and mining industry leaders addressed about 600 business men and women, providing an in-depth look at Alaska resource development through the year 2000. The meeting was organized by the Alaska Support Industry Alliance, a lobby group that represents Alaskan industries that provide services to the oil and mining communities.

R.B. Stiles, manager of Diamond Shamrock's Diamond Alaska Corp., said Alaska has more coal reserves in known deposits than the entire lower 48 states. Coal is easy to find but difficult to sell, Stiles said. His firm is developing a mine in Cook Inlet southwest of Anchorage. Coal from the mine is worth about $20 a ton and has only about 60 to 80 percent of the energy content of most heating coal.

The biggest markets for Alaskan coal are Japan, Korea and Taiwan, because of their proximity, Stiles said. Korea is involved in a joint venture to develop the Beluga Mine near the Diamond Shamrock property.

Alaska could have at least 10 major hardrock mining operations going by the year 2000, said David Heatwole, Alaska exploration manager for the Anaconda Minerals Co.

"Development of just one major hardrock mine would have a major impact on the Alaskan economy," he said. "Mining creates a lot more jobs than oil. A typical hardrock mine has gross sales of between $200 and $300 million annually and would create 200 to 300 jobs at the site and another 200 in support industries." Ten operating mines would pump at least $2 billion a year into the Alaskan economy, he said.

Oil executives weren't as optimistic about the future of their industry, despite a consensus that there is plenty of opportunity to find major new fields.

Frank Turpin, president of Alyeska Pipeline Service Co., which operates the Alaska pipeline, said the pipeline will be pumping more oil than ever before, but will be doing it with fewer people.

When completed in 1978, the pipeline delivered about 650,000 barrels of crude from North Slope wells to the oil port at Valdez. This year, the pipeline is expected to deliver about 1.6 million barrels a day, increasing to 1.7 million in 1986, he said. But more than one-third of Prudhoe Bay's 10 billion barrels of oil is gone, he said. In 1990, the oil supply will begin dropping dramatically.

Oil is of crucial importance to Alaska's economy because the state gets nearly 90 percent of its revenue from oil royalties. Nearly one-third of Alaska's population is employed by city, state or federal governments.

Oil men said that even if exploration increases immediately, it takes at least 10 years from the time an oil field is discovered until it is brought into full production, they said.

"The only hope to avoid a downturn is exploration," said G. Tom Wilkinson, vice president of ARCO Exploration Co. He said his company alone has more than 200 people looking for oil.

"Why have there been no more big exploration successes like Prudhoe Bay? After Prudhoe and Kuparik, very little acreage has been made available," he said. "We need broader opertunities. A lot of our drilling projects have been stopped by litigation."

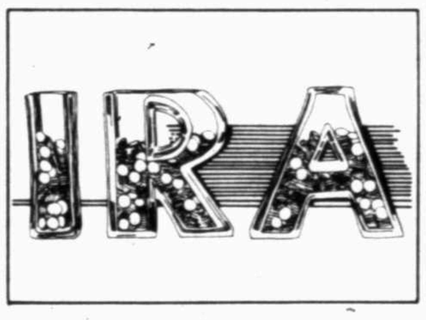

Wilkinson was critical of Sheffield's request for a delay of lease sales near Bristol Bay in order to do a more extensive study on possible effects on nearby fishing grounds.

Sheffield said he asked for the delay because he felt the federal government was moving too quickly on the lease program. He also has asked that the federal government to provide funds for coastal communities affected by exploration. The department has eight lease sales scheduled for offshore areas in 1984 and 1985.

"I believe that entry into unexplored areas should be gradual," Sheffield told the executives. "None of the delays is being sought just for the sake of delay. I think we need to proceed in a timely manner. We have been forced to resort to litigation in the past. I believe a more rational leasing schedule will result in fewer trips up the courthouse steps."

Stevens said he believes the state should find ways to use more of its oil and gas within the state. Stevens said the state also should develop fish processing plants to make fish products from bottom fish caught in Alaskan waters.

Stock market gains

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market edged upward today, following through on Tuesday's late rally.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, up 3.87 on Tuesday, rose another .63 to 1,272.09 by noontime today.

Gainers held a 3-2 lead over losers among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Analysts said the market benefited from anticipation of strong earnings reports for the fourth quarter of 1983 from many corporations over the next several days.

"By and large, these earnings reports will show very favorable comparisons with the last quarter of 1982, a period when the recession had just ended and earnings had not yet begun to accelerate," said William LeFevre, an analyst at Purcell, Graham & Co.

LeFevre said the profit figures could be the "catalyst" needed to stir the market out of its recent sluggish spell.

International Business Machines rose ⅜ to 121⅜. At midmorning the company reported fourth-quarter earnings of $3.06 a share, up from $2.50 in the like period a year earlier.

The NYSE's composite index rose .06 to 97.11. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up .24 at 227.32.

Volume on the Big Board totaled 54.59 million shares at noontime, against 42.70 million at the same point Tuesday.

Cher hopes film 'Silkwood' will improve her image

Cher

NEW YORK (AP) — Cher, hoping her performance in the movie "Silkwood" will help shed the image of having a "beaded-gown mentality," says "it took me such a long time to get into acting because no one was willing to let me have a part."

"People regarded me as a clothes hanger more than an entertainer," said the 37-year-old actress-singer said of her years on television and in nightclubs wearing flamboyant costumes and wigs.

Now, Cher, who recently moved here from the West Coast, says she enjoys "looking like a bum."

In Los Angeles "people judge you on how you look more than on who you are," while in New York "you can go around any kind of way and people accept you," she says in an interview in the February issue of Glamour magazine.

In "Silkwood" Cher wears a sweatshirt, oversized jeans and no makeup, and she admits that when she saw herself on screen she started to cry.

"I don't mean to be crying," she recalls telling director Mike Nichols, "but I hoped to be able to look better in the film."

Alan Thicke

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Despite the low ratings that have plagued it, Alan Thicke's syndicated late-night variety show has been renewed for six months, with production of new programs to resume early next month, a spokesperson for the show says.

"Thicke of the Night," a joint venture of former NBC president Fred Silverman's InterMedia, MGM-UA Television and Metromedia has been on the air since September. But for a while it looked as if not enough stations would renew their contracts to keep the show going.

The decision now has been made to keep the program on the air another six months, the spokesperson, who asked not to be identified, said Tuesday.

A formal announcement is expected shortly.

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The nation's only black chief justice is this year's recipient of the Poor Richard Club's gold medal, which was appropriately awarded on Benjamin Franklin's 278th birthday.

Pennsylvania Chief Justice Robert N.C. Nix Jr., who took over as the state's top judicial officer two weeks ago, was honored Tuesday by the prestigious advertising club in a ceremony attended by Mayor W. Wilson Goode and other city officials.

Previous recipients of the award, given to an outstanding citizen, include President Dwight Eisenhower, Walt Disney, Gen. Douglas McArthur and Bob Hope.

"Accommodations have to be made for the changes that have arrived since Franklin's time, but we must never depart from the old traditions that made America great," said Nix as he received the award. "Honesty, obligations, and responsibility must be as important as rights."

These days the medal is gold-plated, because of the metal's high cost.

Prince Charles

LONDON (AP) — Prince Charles and Princess Diana have arrived home from their nine-day skiing vacation, happy they weren't hounded by the press on the slopes.

At the outset of their visit to Leichtenstein, the royal couple held a session for photographers on condition they later be left alone.

Most news organizations complied with the request, in contrast with a previous ski vacation when reporters followed them everywhere and one Swiss magazine even hired a helicopter to track them down.

Princess Diana

The couple stayed at the castle home of Crown Prince Hans Adam and Princess Marie in Vaduz, the capital of the tiny, 61-square-mile principality tucked in the Alps between Switzerland and Austria.

"They had a very pleasant holiday," said Buckingham Palace spokesman Victor Chapman as the prince and princess arrived back in London on Tuesday.

They set out immediately for the royal mansion in Sandringham, 120 miles northeast of London, to rejoin their son, Prince William.

FRANKFORT, Ky. (AP) — Gov. Martha Layne Collins looked like a kid with a new toy she had just found under the Christmas tree, but this was no toy — it was a 57-ton tank.

The tank was the real thing — an M60A3 complete with a 105mm cannon and two machine guns, one of 68 battle tanks the Kentucky National Guard has received from the Army to replace several dating back to World War II.

As the tank was being shown off in front of the Boone National Guard Center on Tuesday, Mrs. Collins, 47, wearing high heels, climbed up and around the vehicle and peered into the turret.

She didn't drive it. "But I'd like to," she said.

Gangster version of opera 'offensive'

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — The Virginia Opera Association has an offer some Italian-Americans would like to refuse — an updated production of Giuseppe Verdi's classic opera "Rigoletto," featuring a cast dressed as machine-gun-toting '20s-era gangsters.

But an opera association official says the new version is meant to promote Italian musical genius, not to suggest that Italians are gangsters.

Newspaper advertisements for the production show a mobster in a white hat holding a machine gun, with the New York City skyline in the background.

"Look at that," Frank Guida, regional coordinator of the Italian-American Foundation, said Tuesday. "You see they've put that gangster over an Italian name like Rigoletto. People who see it are going to get the impression that all gangsters were Italian.

"It isn't so," said Guida, who owns a music publishing and production company in Norfolk.

"They are portraying an image of Italians as modern gangsters," said Merrill Beck Jr., a Norfolk engineer who is state president of the Sons of Italy. "We don't think that's fair to people of Italian descent."

In the original "Rigoletto," men in doublets and tights and women in Elizabethan-style costumes act out the tragic feud between the lecherous Duke of Mantua and his jester, the title character.

In replacing Renaissance courtiers with the guys and dolls of gangland America, the Virginia Opera Association wasn't being insensitive, insisted Peter Mark, the association's general director.

"Certainly no slur was intended to the Italian community," Mark said. "We are not trying to offend anyone.

"We announced what we were doing a year ago," he said, questioning why those now complaining failed to object "when we said we were going to do the opera in English in a New York gangland setting."

It is too late now to change the publicity in any event, he added. The production opens Friday and continues through Jan. 29.

"I don't object to updating the opera. And I don't oppose their using any period they like," said Guida. "My problem is how the opera is being showcased.

"They have kept the original names of the performers so that all the gangsters in the opera have Italian names," he said. "Why didn't they Anglicize the names too if they are going to translate the lyrics into English?

British oil paintings to be sold

NEW YORK (AP) — Two Venetian scenes, among the few paintings by British artist J.M.W. Turner in private hands and estimated to bring $2 million each, have gone on sale again after owners settled a dispute that pulled them from a 1982 auction.

The sale, set for this afternoon, marks the first time that the oil canvasses — "Going to the Ball (San Martino)" and "Returning from the Ball (St. Martha)" — will be auctioned in this country in this century.

They have been sold by Christie's four other times — in 1853, 1872, 1878 and 1895 — and they are among the very few Turners still in private hands.

Originally scheduled to be sold in May 1982, the two Turners, together with a third oil — a 1664 landscape by Dutch painter Meindert Hobbema — were withdrawn only three hours before the start of the auction by a state court order.

The owners, heirs of the late Lady Eunice Oakes and Sir Harry Oakes of the Bahamas, had argued over who had the right to sell the paintings.

The legal action was brought by Nancy Oakes Huene, one of three Oakes children, against her brother, Harry P. Oakes. Oakes said at the time that he had the agreement of the third heir, their sister, Shirley Butler, to sell the Turners, a contention Mrs. Huene disputed.

New bread developed for Army

PULLMAN, Wash. (AP) — Instead of letting them eat cake, the Army wants it soldiers in the field to eat 3-month-old bread.

So a Washington State University researcher is adding new twists to age-old recipes in an attempt to bake bread that will last that long.

"What we're aiming at is a loaf of bread that will stay fresh and stable for several months, or longer," said food science professor Henry Leung.

Working under a $70,000 grant from the Army, Leung is trying to find ways to avoid molding, hardening and spoilage.

"Store bread will spoil within two weeks because microorganisms feed off the moisture in the bread and ruin it," he said. So researchers added sorbitol, a sugar-like chemical, to absorb the moisture.

The tendency of bread to harden was offset with monoglyceride, a tasteless chemical that keeps crumbs pliable.

Unfortunately, he said, "When you're throwing a lot of foreign materials into bread, you throw off the system."

So several of the first loaves looked like brown baseballs, he said. He since has sent for a rare yeast from Japan that can survive and grow in the relatively arid dough of the laboratory bread.

Romans lavished scent on wine

In ancient Rome, perfumes became so popular that many persons used it in lamp oil and even wine, in order, as Cicero wrote, "to enjoy the lavish scent both inside and outside."

Midlander witness at 'Twilight' hearing

From Staff Reports

LOS ANGELES — A surprise defense witness from Midland Tuesday contradicted parents of the two children killed on the Twilight Zone movie set, who testified last week that they were never told the fatal filming sequence would involve special effects explosions and a helicopter.

Roger David, a Midland geologist, testified in the Twilight Zone preliminary hearing that he overheard associate producer George Folsey Jr. tell the parents about both the explosions and the helicopter a week before the July 23, 1982, crash in which actor Vic Morrow and the two children were killed.

David said he met Folsey in March 1982 when they were both skiing in Taos, N.M.

He called Folsey in July, 1982, saying he was going to be in Los Angeles. David said he stayed the night at Folsey's home July 14, 1982, and he was at Twilight Zone filming location in Franklin Canyon the 16th.

David volunteered to testify at the preliminary hearing. He said he read about the proceedings in the Jan. 11 edition of the Reporter-Telegram. "It had a headline I disagreed with," David said. The headline (on page 4C) read, "Film's producer never mentioned explosives, child's father testifies."

David said he only heard Folsey speaking to a group of "five or six Asians." He never specifically identified Peter Chen, father of one of the children killed in the accident, as the man in the conversation. And Deputy District Attorney Gary Keselman suggested in his questioning that it may have been another Asian family to whom Folsey was speaking.

The prosecution asked David several questions about what he saw at the crash site the day he visited. He most precisely remembered the conversation Folsey had about the children.

"Mr. Folsey was explaining an upcoming scene that children were going to be invited to take part in," David said, in his recollection of Folsey's meeting with the parents at the Twilight Zone filming location in Franklin Canyon a week before the crash.

"He said Mr. Morrow would carry the children across the river, that there would be a helicopter involved in that scene and there would be explosives."

Mark Graham of the Greenwood community shows the form of his 1,240-pound Chianina-cross steer, which was grand champion calf in the 35th annual Midland County Livestock Show. The steer grossed $2,666 from its first buyer, RepublicBank First National of Midland.

'Boomtown Days' live once again in Odessa

By PATRICK DEAREN
Staff Writer

ODESSA — To further a need for locally unifying events, the second annual Odessa Boomtown Days Festival will blow into Ector County Coliseum like a gusher May 18-20.

The multi-event celebration of the oilfield heritage of the 1930s and 1940s Permian Basin was the brainchild of Rob Varley, director of Odessa Convention and Visitors Bureau.

"He just thought there was a need for more community-wide activities," explained Eunice Ramsey of the Bureau, "and he just went back to the boomtown era, at the same time promoting the Oilfield Olympics, which has not been done before."

The two-day Oilfield Olympics will pit teams from area well-servicing companies against each other in ladder climbing, bit throwing, stake driving and other events unique to the oilfields.

Federal money used to repair 189 homes

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

Federal money has rehabilitated 189 Midland houses for almost $1 million in little more than a year, according to a report issued Tuesday by Susan Howell, Community Development coordinator for the city.

Ms. Howell gave the update on use of the federal funds from two programs at a meeting of the Housing Authority in City Hall Council Chambers.

In the 1981-82 Community Development Block Grant program, which didn't get started until September 1982, the city repaired 94 houses for $519,000 at an average cost of $5,521.28 per house.

As the money kept coming, the price per house dropped. With the 1982-83 program, 49 houses were rehabilitated. Total cost was $248,885.11, or $5,079.29 per house.

MC board to advertise for bids on building

By RHONDA RIGENHAGEN
Staff Writer

The Midland College Board of Trustees Tuesday afternoon approved a completion schedule for the new health sciences building and agreed to advertise for bids.

Members will meet with bond rating agencies in New York City Jan. 30 and a rating is expected to be received that week. The credit risk rating will determine at what interest rate the college will sell revenue bonds to finance construction.

"Their only concern is that Midland lately has a rather negative connotation," spokesman H.A. Tuck said, adding that the rating would probably be slightly better than the one Midland Memorial Hospital received in May. That rating of Baa was a medium rating.

Champion calf's price 'sweetened'

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

The grand champion calf in the 35th annual Midland County Livestock Show initially got $2.15 a pound — 90 cents less than last year's prize calf — in Tuesday night's premium auction of 121 head of livestock.

"That's fine," said Mark Graham, a 15-year-old Greenwood 4-H Club member who showed the prize steer, a 1,240-pound Chianina cross, which grossed $2,666 from its first buyer, RepublicBank First National of Midland.

After the auction, the sale price on the grand champion steer was "sweetened up" and boosted to $3,516 or to about $2.85 a pound by Lone Star Abstract & Title Co., Rodney Robertson and Red Roberts.

The bank returned the calf to Mark, a two-time exhibitor of grand champion calves in the county show. He plans to take the calf to state livestock shows.

"They ought not to let him come back," joked his friend, 14-year-old Stacey Bryant, whose lamb came in seventh in its class and whose pig ranked 11th. The pig made the auction; the lamb didn't. "That's confusing," he said.

MARK'S CALF, named Tiger due to its off-color, a reddish brown hue, was picked out by Mark's cousin, Randy Airhart, from stock out of Nebraska. "Dad (his father, Roy Graham) likes him," said Mark, despite the steer's off color. "Judges like black," he said. "It's hard for judges to look at a calf and not look at his color."

Last year, Mark exhibited the grand champion calf, a black Maine-Anjou breed, which commanded $3.05 a pound.

This year, however, the show's buyers seemed to distribute the money more evenly throughout the sale of 121 steers, lambs and pigs in the show, which featured 324 animals exhibited by about 200 4-H Club members and Future Farmers of America members at Midland High and Robert E. Lee High schools.

The reserve grand champion calf, a 1,220-pound black Maine-Anjou steer shown by 11-year-old Wendy Smith of Greenwood, got a high bid of $3 a pound from Gary Partain.

BUT WHAT happened to Mark Graham's steer happened to the McVey hog. C.A. Gray Plumbing Co. added $2.75 a pound to the price of the hog to bring the bottom-line bid to $1,426 or $5.75 a pound.

Ted McVey, whose four children routinely win or place high in livestock shows, philosophically viewed the lower prices for the champion animals in the show.

"Once you win out here," McVey said, "it begins to tell on you. People get tired of you pretty quick. We're not complaining."

His 17-year-old daughter, Shelly, showed the show's grand champion pig, a 248-pound Hampshire-Duroc hog, which attracted only $2.75 a pound. The reserve grand champion pig, a 198-pounder exhibited by Jennifer Dryden, drew $3.35 a pound. In the 1983 show, the grand champion pig, a Yorkshire, got a top bid of $6.25 a pound.

"And it's OK," McVey said of the bidding on the champions shown by previous winners. "It's better this way. We've been there (in the winner's ring) plenty of times, and they're not dumping much money off on one champion."

"IF WE CAN carry one down to the big (state) shows, that's what it's all about," McVey said. "We want to carry one down to the Astrodome (to the Houston Fat Stock Show). You can take one (pig) to the Astrodome and you can get $60,000" if it's the grand champion.

"I'll tell you what," he said, "we're going to win Fort Worth. He's a good enough hog to do it."

Overall, McVey was pleased with the county show.

"We've all had a good year. It's a fantastic good deal for the kids. It's the best program in Midland for young people."

Under the auctioneering of Tommy Marricle of Snyder, the three champion lambs brought $5.75 a pound for the crossbred lamb shown by Dusty Taylor, $5.35 a pound for the champion medium-wool lamb shown by Johnie Casbeer, and $6.50 a pound for the finewool lamb exhibited by Michelle Driver. Buyers were ClayDesta National Bank, TWS Pump, Carol Welch and Bob Reynolds & Sons, and Community National Bank.

TOMMY WHITE Supply Co. bought the grand champion hog, and Wagner & Brown purchased the reserved grand champion hog.

Among the other livestock auctioned off was 10-year-old Lindsay Stewart's 1,325-pound calf, Bugger, which her grandfather, Morgan Stewart, bought for $1.45 a pound.

The blonde, blue-eyed girl seemed very petite, as she led the steer into and around the show ring.

"This is my girl friend right there," said the auctioneer. "I thought someone gave her a bath last night and washed her away."

The floor-price — 65 cents a pound for calves, 55 cents for lambs and 48½ cents for hogs — paid for the animals not returned to the exhibitors will be deducted from the auction's individual bid prices. Floor buyers were Midland's Southwestern Livestock Auction Co., which bought the calves and lambs, and Lubbock's Plains Hog Co., which purchased the swine.

"We've got quite a few new buyers coming out this year," noted Milton Kirby, vocational agriculture teacher at Lee High School...They're spreading the money throughout the sale."

Earnest Kiker, Midland County agricultural agent, said the show was "fine, a very good sale."

"I think it was great," said Rusty Jones, president of the Midland County Livestock Association. "It's always better every year. No problems to speak of. We've had a good time. The auction was terrific."

Ector County residents like Bill Elms of Odessa chose to take advantage of the absentee voting option Tuesday, the deadline for those that wanted to cast their ballots on the two rollback options before election day, Saturday.

Odessa absentee voting turnout 'disappointing'

Voters have first opportunity to reduce tax rates

By LAWRENCE BUDD
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Their motives were different, but their goal was the same.

When absentee voting closed at 5 p.m. Tuesday at the Ector County Courthouse, 1,372 ballots had been cast by people that qualified — by some combination of being at least 65 years old, disabled or out of the county on election day — to vote before their registered neighbors on the two rollback propositions.

More people chose to vote in advance of Saturday's rollback election than on any local option in recent history, except the unsuccessful bond election to fund a civic center in 1982.

Never before have voters had the chance to force the county and school district to reduce their tax rates. Public hearings offered residents a forum to voice their opinions in the past, but this marks the first time voters can actually force their leaders to reduce the tax rate.

A steady flow of voters filed in and out of the county clerk's office Tuesday, the final day of the two-week absentee voting period.

But one veteran observer, Chief Deputy Clerk Margaret Molthan, had expected a heavier turnout.

"We were expecting more," said Mrs. Molthan, an employee of the county for the past 23 years. The clerk's office had expected 2,000 absentee voters, 500 on each of the last two days.

Both entities would have to roll back their effective tax rates to the eight-percent increase limited by state law — costing the county $880,000 and the school district $2.2 million — if the propositions are approved.

"We've been just a little disappointed at our turnout," she said. Contrary to trends seen in past absentee voting, voters were not coming in significantly larger numbers as Tuesday's absentee deadline got closer, though 223 voted the last day.

"We were expecting more...We've been just a little disappointed at our turnout...

A lot of our people over 65 don't know they can come in and vote absentee."

— Chief Deputy Clerk Margaret Molthan

While absentee voting would seem to cater to the elderly person hoping to avoid the crowds on voting day, Mrs. Molthan said that relatively few of the people over 65 years old had used the option.

"A lot of our people over 65 don't know they can come in and vote absentee," she said, suggesting that more chose to vote beforehand because of other commitments that would keep them away from the polls Saturday.

"You know a lot of people from Odessa go out of town on the weekend," she said.

"Absentee pretty well represents the whole city," said Mrs. Molthan in recalling past election trends.

More than 12,000 registered voters signed petitions favoring the rollback. While many are still vocally in support of cutting the governments' budgets, county and school officials have suggested that some of those that signed the petitions which signaled the rollback may not vote for the cuts.

"They don't bring the polling place to your house," said Dr. Bill Walker, the ECISD's director of business.

People who went to the absentee polling place Tuesday were there for different reasons. Rev. Kenneth Arrington of the Rose of Sharon Baptist Church said he chose to vote in advance because he planned to be out of town on election day.

Insisting he had no greater stake in the rollback than any other election, he said "Every election is important to me."

Ola Mae McDonald, 75, chose Tuesday because she had a church-school meeting this weekend, and didn't want to forget to vote.

A former ECISD teacher and wife of a former Ector County district attorney, Mrs. McDonald said "I'm for the good of Odessa. I feel people have been misled about how much good it will do."

Voting on the rollback gave Mr. and Mrs. Ray Wilson an outlet for their anger at the county taxing travel trailers and boats. Mrs. Wilson noted that the county's "fun tax" did not include motor homes, while her husband wondered why the county decided to tax enjoyment.

Voters approved a bond election to improve Medical Center Hospital in 1974, with 868 people casting absentee ballots. But two other recent local options, both to build civic centers in Odessa, were not approved.

With 2,248 people voting absentee, voters defeated a second bond proposal to build a civic center in 1982 by a two-to-one margin in the city's last local option election.

Bad weather was one reason County Clerk Lucille Wolz felt the turnout was low. She wondered about the possible effect of continuing freezing conditions on election day.

"If this were Saturday, what would we do about the election," wondered Mrs. Wolz today as icy roads kept many people at home.

"It remains to be seen," said Mrs. Wolz.

Midland DA announces re-election bid

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

District Attorney Vern Martin, who said he will "continue to take a hard line with hardened criminals," today announced his candidacy for re-election.

"There probably is more satisfaction in this job than anything I have done in my life," Martin, 52, said. "It is a job you can take pride in, but it is not an easy job. There is a lot of stress and headaches."

Martin, who has been district attorney for Midland County since 1977, is seeking the Republican Party nomination to that office in the May 5 primary elections. His re-election efforts are being challenged by a 36-year-old Midland lawyer, Al Schorre, who last week announced his candidacy under the Republican Party banner.

Martin, who said he is "unusually qualified" for the job, cited his "broader background in understanding the criminal justice system" as defense attorney and prosecutor. Further, Martin noted his background in medical and psychiatric areas and said he has "a broad acquaintance among the different strata of society."

"I feel very confident in what I am doing. I am certainly proud of the record made and the young lawyers that have worked for me and I have trained up here."

Since Martin took office seven years ago, his staff has grown from six to 15, including six attorneys, three investigators and six secretaries.

Martin said he will continue to improve the office, as he said he has "persistently done" since 1977, when he succeeded 11-year veteran DA Jim Mashburn by defeating Democrat Trey Lohmann in the general election. Mashburn did not seek re-election.

"We will continue to take a hard line with hardened criminals," Martin said, "but we will also continue to bring a mature approach to this office and treat each case individually as it should be treated in order to seek justice for all."

In trying to dislodge Martin, Schorre said he would take an even more aggressive approach to prosecuting criminals. He claimed that

Vern Martin

Martin's office was hampered by disorganization.

"This office is very well organized," Martin said. "It is so busy that it may not appear that way at times. But from the information I have, this office is as well organized or better organized than any DA's office in the state. We try to keep abreast of everything going on."

Martin said he has had "no choice but to constantly re-organize" because of the additional state district courts for Midland County, the oil boom and "things like that that make reorganization necessary."

"I do not think that he (Schorre) has anything against me personally," Martin said. "He just wants this job, and he has got to say something. I think that's what he's doing."

Martin, who suffered a heart attack in 1982, said his opponent may "try to take advantage" of that. "Everyone who knows me knows that I am in better shape now than before."

Of Schorre's proposal to institute a victim-witness program should he become DA, Martin said his office has such a program.

"There has been a victim-witness program, and there will always be one in Midland because it is built into the system. It has not been formally labeled that, as is the style now, and certainly he knows we have had a formal victim-witness program on the drawing board."

The DA, however, said he would like to have a better system and is working on one. But part of the problem in reaching that goal is lack of courthouse space, he said.

"The sheriff's office, police department and the DA's office are in contact with the victims and witnesses of crime all the time in preparation for trial. I sincerely believe that we get cases to trial quicker than anyone in the state. Exceptions are cases where the defendant has skipped town," Martin said.

"Certainly the diligence and effort of the judges is a part of this program in bringing the cases to trial in a speedy manner."

In countering Schorre's comment that Odessa's crime rate has dropped due to aggressive prosecution by Ector County District Attorney Mike Holmes, Martin said that decrease is attributable to a drop in population when the transients left in the aftermath of the boom in the late 1970s and early 1980s.

"That is my opinion," he said, "and it is taking nothing away from the DA in Odessa." Martin said "another dynamic" in Odessa's assault on crime has been the addition of about 44 street officers to the police force there.

Of what Schorre termed Martin's 42 percent conviction rate, the DA said the people of Midland are not "naive enough to buy this kind of statistical game.

"I don't know where he got his information, but the only way he could have come up with these figures would be to have started with the premise that every indictment equals a separate person." That is not the case, he said. "There is a significant differential here because people get re-indicted for the same crime."

Martin said Schorre "also probably lumped in about 800 plus cases that were here when I took office." In many of those cases, the witnesses or defendants had died, some cases were six years old and many were unprosecutable because of those reasons.

"What I think that he is trying to promise the public," Martin said, "is to change the statistics rather than the quality of prosecution."

MC board to advertise for bids on new health sciences building

The schedule calls for receiving bids March 15, awarding a contract April 1 and beginning occupancy June 1, 1985.

In other action items trustees:

— Turned over a $37,000 request from the Chamber of Commerce to the Midland College Foundation Board with a favorable recommendation. The college, city, county and school district are being asked to contribute funds for a joint celebration of Midland's centennial next year and Texas' 150th anniversary in 1986.

The Midland Independent School District Board of Trustees has agreed to commit $10,000 this year, $12,000 in 1985 and $15,000 in 1986. The funds will support a 16-member committee which will coordinate and finance centennial activities.

The MC Foundation is a separate body which raises and distributes non-budget monies.

— Reappointed five members of the Foundation whose terms expired Dec. 31. They were Murray Fasken, Al Langford, Reagan Legg, Ralph Way and Bill Kleine.

— Agreed to join the city, school district and county in joint municipal elections April 7. They will combine polling places and judges and split costs. Board president Kenneth Peeler said he would run for re-election, but Ralph Way and Jack Huff did not indicate whether or not they would seek another term.

— Appointed trustee Gloria Hinojosa to chair the salary committee. Ralph Way, Bill Kleine and Reagan Legg will also comprise the committee and make a recommendation in May or June as to salaries and benefits for 1985-86.

Tax Reduction Workshop set for Jan. 24

From Staff Reports

A Tax Reduction Workshop designed to benefit not only taxpayers but also Christmas in April is scheduled for Jan. 24 in the Midland Holidome on West Highway 80.

Sponsored by the Midland Association of Life Underwriters, the workshop will begin at 8:15 a.m. The course starts at 8:30 a.m. and will adjourn at 4:15 p.m. All profits will be directed to Christmas in April, a project conducted by volunteers to repair houses of low-income elderly persons here.

Cost of the workshop is $75 prior to the workshop and $92 at the door. Checks for $75 may be made to MALU, 1030 Andrews Highway No. 203, Midland, Texas, 79701. Further information may be obtained by calling 682-0521 or 694-4907.

The workshop was created and produced by the Tax Reduction Institute in Washington, D.C. Scheduled to speak are a CPA, a lawyer and a former IRS agent.

These speakers will explain how to deduct civic club dues, why the IRS standard mileage rates are a "joke," how to hire dependents tax-free, magic words to meet the five substantiation rules for business expenses (such as business lunch) and how tax returns are selected for an IRS audit.

Other topics include how to turn business losses into tax refunds, 27 tax deductions that are being overlooked and how to help your tax preparer.

Persons who are not satisfied with the workshop may request a refund of their registration fee. The request must be made in writing and mailed within 10 days of the workshop to the Tax Reduction Institute.

Federal money repairs 189 homes

Under a federal Jobs Bill, 43 houses were repaired with a price tag of $213,343.89. Average repair cost was $4,961.49.

The city has received another $100,000 in CD funds for 1983-84 to continue the rehabilitation program, and this should repair 20 homes. Ms. Howell said she had 35 applications which qualify for the program, five of which have been approved. The program has only touched about 10 to 20 percent of the houses that could qualify for the repairs, she estimated.

These houses, when rehabilitated, must meet the city's building code, and repairs must not total more than $10,000.

Houses that can't meet those requirements and whose owners have requested help are referred to the Christmas in April program, said Ms. Howell.

In other action, the housing commissioners approved an audit report, dwelling lease, revised utility allowance and energy audit report. They decided to pay the Department of Housing and Urban Development $650 which HUD said it was owed.

No action was taken on a management agreement for use between the Housing Authority and Langtry Village, Inc. Under this proposal, the Housing Authority would manage Langtry Village, a housing facility to be constructed for low income elderly and/or handicapped persons with a loan from HUD. Ms. Howell said the facility probably won't be completed for two years.

Dallas Morning News building evacuated

DALLAS (AP) — Fire department officials evacuated The Dallas Morning News because of fumes leaking from a broken gas line in front of the newspaper's downtown building.

Employees were kept out of the building from shortly after 8 p.m. until 11:35 p.m. Tuesday, when crews from Lone Star Gas dug to a valve and shut off the gas.

Managing Editor Bill Evans said fire department officials ordered the evacuations because they feared that winds were carrying gas fumes into the building.

Evans said Tuesday night that the newspaper might "have a few late deliveries, but we'll be publishing the same as always."

Television station WFAA and radio stations KRQX and KZEW, which are housed in an adjacent building, were not evacuated, Evans said.

Odessa relives 'Boomtown Days'

Last year, noted Ms. Ramsey, more than 15,000 persons attended boomtown activities, which this year will revolve around "Boomtown Street," a re-creation of a typical 1930s street with storefront booths lining it. The booths will be sponsored by organizations and businesses and will sell souvenirs or refreshments or will house historical exhibits.

An old-timers reunion has been added this year, and will honor J.C. "Calvin" Williamson, one of the pioneer well-servicing contractors in the area. Persons who worked with or know Williamson or who are pioneers in the well-servicing field will receive special invitations to reminisce about the early days of black gold in the Permian Basin.

Entertainment representative of the early day oilfield era also will be provided, including movies, country and western dances and a USO show. In addition, excerpts from Canyon playwright Rick Smith's "Whenever It Rains," a play about Odessa's beginnings, also will be presented.

Souvenir pins promoting Odessa Boomtown Days are now on sale for $4 from the bureau and will admit the holders into the festival. Daily tickets will be $2 per person.

Additional information can be obtained by contacting Ms. Ramsey at Odessa Convention and Visitors Bureau at P.O. Box 3626, Odessa 79760, 332-8189.

Feeding animals 'impossible' task

By ROLLA WILLIAMS
Copley News Service

This time of year, with heavy snows on the prairies and mountains, game departments in the West are flooded with calls from persons concerned about hungry deer, antelope and elk. Checks come by mail. The usual suggestion is to buy some hay (or substitute pellet foods) for the animals.

The concern is well-meaning, but scientific evidence does not support the efficacy of such feeding. It might, if the animals could be gradually worked into a hay-pellet diet — over weeks or months. Seldom is this possible.

The problem is game animals eat sagebrush and other browse-type plants, and their digestive systems aren't equipped to handle hay or substitute feeds. "We've found animals that died with stomachs full of hay they weren't able to digest," says Wyoming game biologist Walt Gasson.

Deer, elk and antelope are ruminants, cud-chewing animals — like cattle, sheep and goats. All have complex four-section stomachs very different from the single compartment stomach of humans. The first section (rumen) contains a mixture of symbiotic micro-organisms consisting of bacteria, yeast and protozoa.

These live in harmony, performing the essential fermentation process necessary for normal digestion of natural foods, leaves, twigs, tender shoots from bushes and shrubs, native grasses.

But the gastric juices reject hay, causing it to compact and begin to putrefy. Ulcers form in the tract, bacterial infections develop, and poisoning results which can, over a long period, cause death.

What's the answer? Experienced wildlife managers say several things can be done. Money is needed to develop good winter habitat and natural browse. People must refrain from feeding the animals unnatural food, and keep dogs at home so they can't chase the animals. Running in the wintertime burns off energy reserves better spent scratching through snow for edible shrubs.

Salt blasted in tunnel

CLEVELAND (AP) — Far below the icy waters of Lake Erie, Carmen Green rolls up his sleeves and opens his lunch pail. The temperature may be below zero above ground, but the weather is always spring-like 1,800 feet deep in the International Salt Company's Cleveland mine.

The company, based in Clarks Summit, Pa., takes 2 million tons of salt annually from the mine, located on Whiskey Island between Lake Erie and the Cuyahoga River. Most of it is used for ice control, said John Buck, general production superintendent.

Under the offices and storage buildings is a maze of tunnels 20 feet high and 45 feet across, running 1½ miles under the lake. Only half of the salt in the vein is mined, leaving huge pillars undisturbed to support the roof.

Of the company's 250 Cleveland employees, 100 work underground, moving salt to crushers spaced throughout the mine and drilling holes for explosive charges planted in unmined faces.

Governor White appoints new trustee

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Mark White has appointed Mary Kasting of Copperas Cove and Henry Bell Jr. of Tyler as trustees of the Teacher Retirement System for terms extending to August 1989.

Ms. Kasting, administrative assistant for planning and development for the Copperas Cove Independent School District, is replacing Dr. Lee Williamson of Wichita Falls, whose term expired.

Bell, chief executive officer of the First City National Bank of Tyler, is a reappointment.

WINTER STEWS
A Harvest of Wonderful Dishes

Great American cooking—regional specialties made up of the kind of old-fashioned foods that simmered on the back of our grandmother's stoves—has a shiny, new reputation among food experts. While most never abandoned grandma's favorite recipes, it's interesting to find them in fashion. What once was relegated to a just-family meal can now be presented for company and treated with respect.

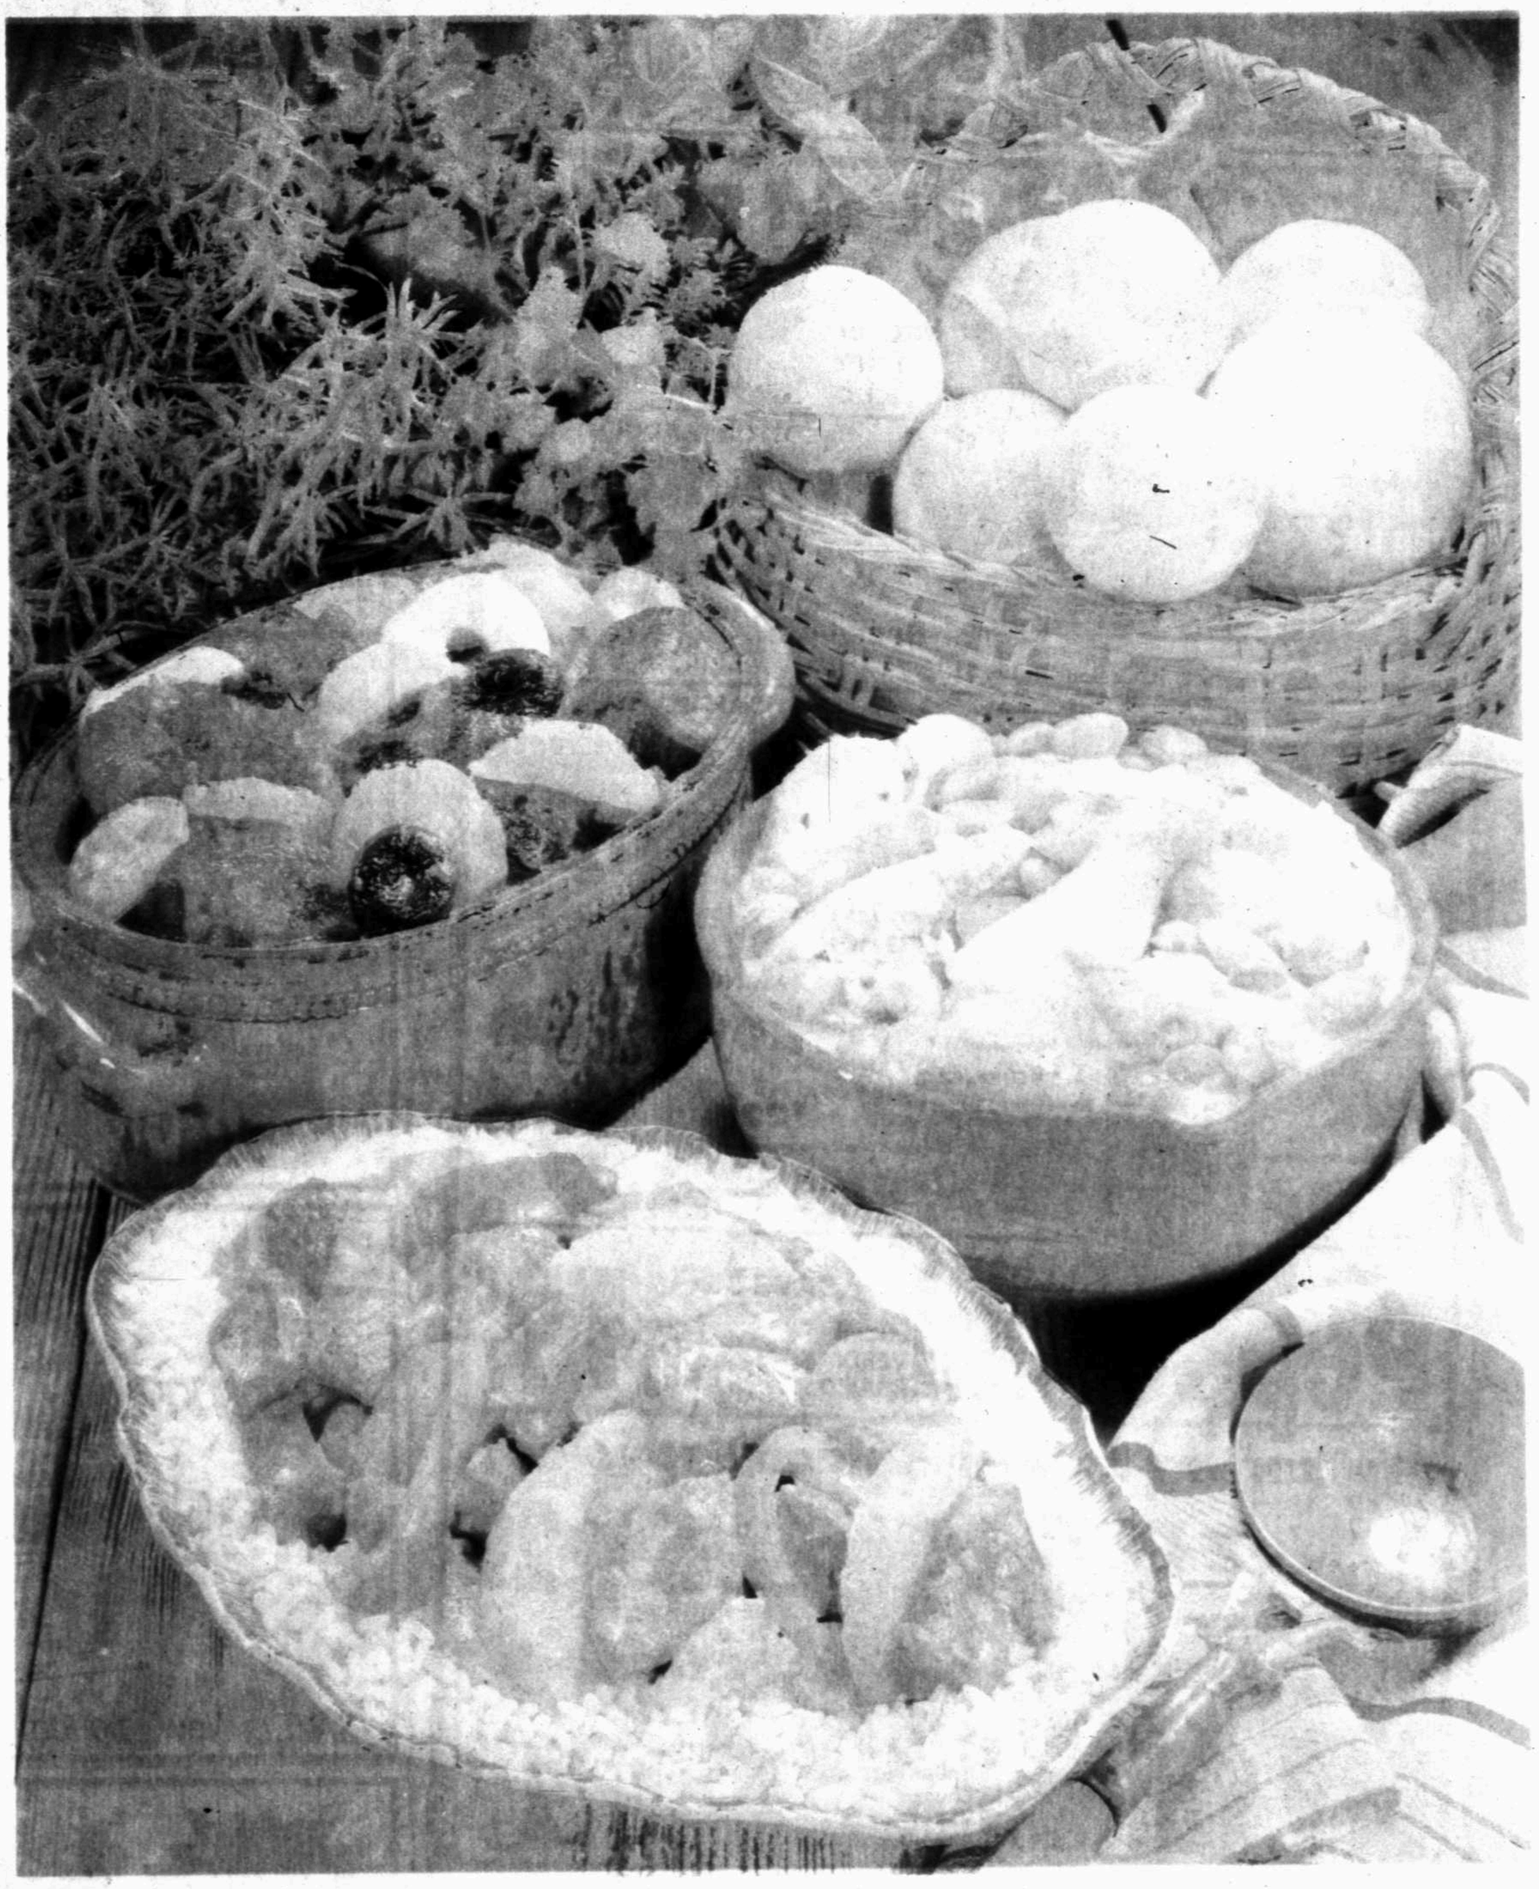

Hearty stews are part of this trend and are perfect to serve in cold weather. A memorable meal can result from an inexpensive cut of meat, simmered gently with winter fruits and vegetables. When suitably spiced and with flavors well-blended, really delicious stew can hold its own against any fancy fare. Use handsome earthenware dishes—right in keeping with regional chic—to bring the dish to the table.

Creamy Chicken Stew takes the bird and coddles it along with little white onions, carrots, celery and lima beans, in a white sauce perked with chervil and textured by heavy cream. Southern in spirit, it will enhance dinner tables in any section of the country.

Braised Pork Bahia uses boned pork shoulder, often overlooked yet tender and delicious when simmered with onion and garlic in tomato sauce. Chili peppers and green peppers give it a proper bite and fresh grapefruit sections impart succulence to the finished dish. The Hispanic influence is prevalent here as this dish uses fresh fruit with hearty meats.

Sausage Lovers Stew blends the hearty tastes of seasoned, spicy sausages with cabbage in a fragrant orange juice broth. Try easily available Kielbasa as an alternative sausage, for an ethnic Midwestern flavor.

In addition to being right in culinary fashion, a slowly simmering stew pot brings the added bonus of warmth in the kitchen on a long winter's afternoon.

FRUITED SHORTRIBS

1 tablespoon vegetable oil
4 pounds short ribs, cut in 2-inch cubes
2 1/2 cups orange juice, divided
1 can (13 ounces) beef broth (1 2/3 cups)
3/4 teaspoon salt
3/4 teaspoon ground cinnamon
3/4 teaspoon ground allspice
1/4 teaspoon ground cloves
1/4 teaspoon pepper
1 package (11 ounces) mixed dried fruit or 1 1/2 cups pitted prunes and dried apricots
2 tablespoons cornstarch
2 oranges, peeled and sectioned

In large kettle or Dutch oven, heat oil; brown meat well on all sides, cooking only a few pieces at a time. Drain off fat. Add 2 1/4 cups orange juice, broth, salt, cinnamon, allspice, cloves and pepper. Bring to boiling. Cover. Reduce heat, simmer 1 hour 45 minutes. Skim fat. Add dried fruit; mix well. Cover, cook 45 minutes longer or until meat is very tender. Skim fat, if necessary. Combine cornstarch and remaining 1/4 cup orange juice; add to stew. Stir until thickened and bubbly. Just before serving, add orange sections.
YIELD: 6 to 8 servings.

CREAMY CHICKEN STEW

1 tablespoon butter or margarine
1 cup sliced celery
1 large onion, chopped (1 cup)
3 to 4 pounds chicken, cut in pieces
3 medium carrots, cut in 1-inch pieces
1 package (10 ounces) frozen lima beans, defrosted
8 small white onions, peeled
1/2 cup water
2 teaspoons dried leaf chervil
1 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon pepper
2 tablespoons flour
1/2 cup heavy cream

In large kettle or Dutch oven, melt butter; saute celery and chopped onion until tender. Add chicken, carrots, lima beans, whole onions, water, chervil, salt and pepper; mix well. Cover. Simmer 45 to 50 minutes until chicken and vegetables are tender. Remove chicken and vegetables to a serving dish; keep warm. Blend flour and cream; stir into pan juices. Stir until mixture boils and thickens. Spoon over chicken and vegetables.
YIELD: 4 servings.

BRAISED PORK BAHIA

1/4 cup flour
3/4 teaspoon salt
1/2 teaspoon pepper
2 pounds boned shoulder of pork, cut in 1-inch cubes
1 tablespoon olive oil
1 large onion, diced (1 cup)
3 cloves garlic, minced
1 can (1 pound) tomatoes, chopped, plus 1 1/4 cup liquid from can
1 cup grapefruit juice
1 can (4 ounces) green chili peppers, drained and chopped
2 medium-size green peppers, cut in strips
2 grapefruit, peeled and sectioned

Combine flour, salt and pepper. Dredge meat in flour mixture. Reserve any extra flour mixture. In heavy kettle or Dutch oven, heat oil. Brown meat on all sides. This should be done in batches to avoid crowding pan. Remove meat from kettle and reserve. In same kettle saute onion and garlic until tender. Sprinkle in any reserved flour mixture. Stir in tomatoes, tomato liquid and grapefruit juice; return meat to kettle. Cover. Bring to boiling. Reduce heat, simmer 25 minutes. Add chili peppers and green peppers; mix well. Simmer, covered, 25 minutes longer until meat is tender. Just before serving, stir in grapefruit sections. Serve over rice or noodles, if desired.
YIELD: 6 to 8 servings.

SAUSAGE LOVERS STEW

1 tablespoon vegetable oil
1/2 pound sweet Italian pork sausage, cut in 3/4-inch slices
1 1/2 cups chopped onion
1 tablespoon sugar
3/4 teaspoon fennel seeds
1 bay leaf
1/8 teaspoon pepper
1/2 pound knockwurst, cut in 3/4-inch slices
1/2 pound bratwurst, cut in 3/4-inch pieces
1/2 pound chicken or turkey franks, cut in 3/4-inch pieces
1 medium-size head green cabbage (2 to 2 1/2 lbs.), cored and shredded (about 16 cups)
2 1/2 cups orange juice

In heavy saucepot or Dutch oven, heat oil; brown sausage on all sides. Add onion; cook until tender. Stir in sugar, fennel seeds, bay leaf and pepper. Add knockwurst, bratwurst, franks, cabbage and orange juice. Cover. Simmer 2 hours. Stir occasionally.
YIELD: 8 servings.

Chase away winter blues by sharing good food with good friends. A light meal of soup, salad and these tasty Italian breadsticks is the perfect fare to share with a few friends in celebration of the middle winter.

Breadsticks snap blahs

Midwinter can seem to drag on and on. Now that the excitement of Christmas is over and the joys of spring seems far away, it is the perfect time to relax and visit with friends.

Nothing can pick up sagging winter spirits like good food and friends. Keep the menu simple: warm soup, crisp salad and cheese and other spreads. Homemade Italian Breadsticks are the perfect accompaniment to make the occasion festive.

ITALIAN BREADSTICKS

1¼ C. buttermilk baking mix
1 tblsp. sugar
2 tblsp. firm margarine
¼ C. cold water
1 egg, beaten
Sesame, poppy seed or garlic salt

Heat oven 400-F. Mix baking mix and sugar; cut in margarine thoroughly with fork. Stir in water until dough cleans side of bowl and rounds up into a ball. Turn dough onto surface floured with baking mix. Gently roll in baking mix to coat; shape into ball. Knead five times. Roll into rectangle 12x8-inches. Cut crosswise into ½-inch strips. Place strips one inch apart on lightly greased cookie sheet. Brush with egg; sprinkle with sesame seed. Bake until golden, 9-12 mins. Cool slightly; remove from cookie sheet. Makes two dozen breadsticks.

Waldorf salad loaf

WALDORF LOAF

A version of Waldorf Salad Cake.

1½ C. unbleached flour
1 tsp. baking soda
¼ tsp. salt
1 tsp. ground cinnamon
1 large egg
¾ C. sugar
¼ C. diced (⅛ inch) celery
½ tsp. vanilla
½ C. mayonnaise
¼ C. milk
2 medium red apples, unpeeled and cut into ¼-inch cubes
½ C. chopped walnuts

Stir together flour, soda, salt and cinnamon. Beat egg, sugar and vanilla until combined. Gently beat in mayonnaise, then flour mixture in 2 additions alternately with milk, until smooth each time. Stir in apples, walnuts and celery. Turn into a buttered and floured loaf pan (9x5x3-inches). Bake in 350-F. oven until a cake tester inserted in the center comes out clean — 70 mins. Cool on wire rack for 5 mins.; loosen edges and turn out on rack; with another rack turn right side up. Cool. —(AP)

Eggplant goes elegant

By DESIREE VIVEA
Copley News Service

The eggplant is, in my opinon anyway, the most beautiful of all the vegetables. Glossy purple and shaped like a large egg (how do you think it got its name?), this vegetable can grow to be as large as a football.

To cook a small (1 pound) eggplant in the microwave, wash, peel and dice into ½-inch cubes. Place in a 1½-quart glass baking dish with 2 tablespoons water and a dash of salt. Cover and microwave 6 to 7 minutes, stirring halfway through cooking time. Allow to stand, covered, for 5 minutes before seasoning and serving.

RATATOUILLE

4 tbsps. olive oil
1 large onion, thinly sliced
1 large clove garlic, minced
1 green pepper, seeded and sliced into thin strips
1 eggplant, peeled and cubed
2 medium zucchini, thinly sliced
2 large, ripe tomatoes, cut into eighths
1½ tsps. basil
1 bay leaf
Salt and pepper to taste
Fresh chopped parsley and Parmesan cheese for garnish

Place oil in 3-quart glass casserole. Microwave for 1 minute; add onion, galic and green pepper. Cover and microwave 3 minutes. Add eggplant and zucchini, cover and microwave 5 minutes, stirring after 2½ minutes. Stir in tomato wedges, basil, bay leaf and salt and pepper. Cover and microwave 3 minutes. Vegetables should be tender. Let stand, covered, 5 minutes before serving. Remove bay leaf. Serve hot or cold, sprinkled with fresh chopped parsley and Parmesan cheese. Serves 6.

EGGPLANT CAVIAR

1 small eggplant
1 medium onion, diced
1 large, ripe tomato, peeled and diced
¼ cup chopped green pepper
½ cup sliced fresh mushrooms
2 cloves garlic, minced
One-third cup cooking oil
½ tsp. each salt and pepper
½ tsp. leaf oregano
½ cup chopped black olives
3 tbsps. lemon juice

Wash eggplant and chop finely (do not peel) to make about 4 cups. Combine egplant, onion, tomato, green pepper, mushrooms, garlic and oil in 2-quart glass casserole. Stir well and microwave, covered, 8 minutes. Stir in remaining ingredients; cover. Microwave 8 to 12 minutes. Chill, and serve as an appetizer over lettuce, or as a dip with crackers or chips.

Cheese spread makes toasty treat

CHEESE TOAST

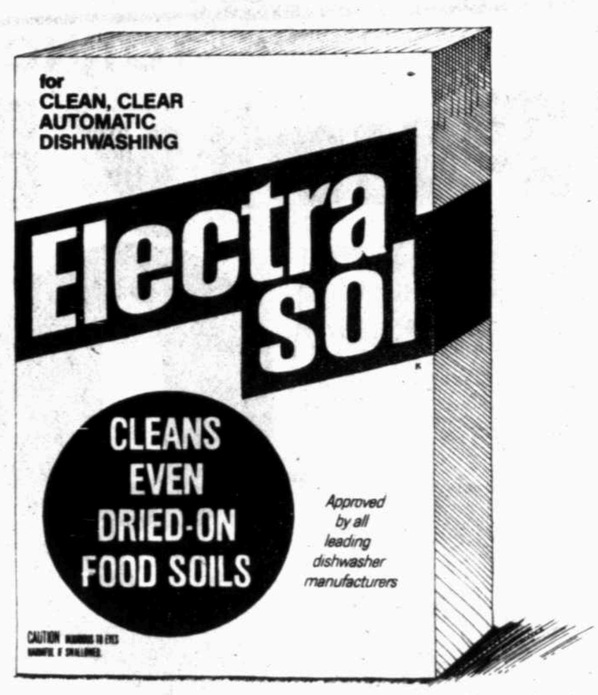

If you prepare the cheese spread ahead and store it in the refrigerator, you can make these snacks quickly.

Grate 4 ounces of sharp cheddar cheese medium fine — there should be 1 slightly packed cup. In a small bowl, with a spoon, mix together the cheese, 2 tablespoons finely chopped pimiento-stuffed green olives, 1 tablespoon mayonnaise and 2 tablespoons ketchup. (Makes about ¾ cup.) Spread on lightly toasted slices of bread, using 2 level measuring tablespoons for each slice, and making sure to cover the edges of the toast. Place on foil and broil to melt cheese and brown lightly. Cut each slice into 2 triangles and serve at once.

Spaghetti Puttanesca unusual Italian fare

By TOM HOGE
AP Wine And Food Writer

Mention spaghetti and many of us think of pasta with a tomato sauce, or possibly such mixtures as minced clams or mushrooms and garlic.

But how about spaghetti blended with ripe olives, anchovies, capers, fresh tomatoes and spices? I recently tried this intriguing dish called Spaghetti Puttanesca at Zi Peppe, a cozy bistro in New York's Greenwich Village.

It is a favorite of Mario Manno, 32-year-old co-owner of the newborn inn, which goes in heavily for pastas and other Italian favorites.

"Maybe I'm prejudiced since about 95 percent of what I eat consists of pasta in one form or another," said Manno as we sat down to a steaming platter of Puttanesca.

"We plan to specialize here in the food of southern Italy, which goes in heavily for pasta," he said. "But there will be other attractions.

"I have found that Americans are fond of many Italian dishes, like stuffed mushrooms, eggplant with an Italian sauce and squid with a hot dressing."

Manno got his grounding working as a waiter in Italian restaurants around New York for the past eight years and became impressed with American patrons' overriding interest in spaghetti and other pasta.

What some people don't realize is that pasta dishes are by no means identical all over Italy. In northern cities like Bologna they favor the flat ribbon-type noodles, whereas in the south they go in for tubular macaroni and spaghetti.

Few Americans are aware of such regional pasta favorites as agnolotti, or "little fat lambs" — rolls of pasta stuffed with meat. Other oddities are pasta creations in the shape of sparrows' tongues, mustaches and little boots.

Then there are the pasta dumplings known as gnocchi, which are made from a variety of ingredients including farina.

SPAGHETTI PUTTANESCA

3 tablespoons olive oil
2 cloves garlic, diced
¼ pound black olives, pitted
2 or 3 anchovies, cut into small pieces
Capers to taste
2 pounds fresh tomatoes, cut up
2 pounds spaghetti, cooked to desired consistency

Brown garlic bits in oil. Blend in olives, anchovies, capers and tomatoes. Cook over low flame about 5 minutes, stirring constantly. Strain cooked spaghetti and saute briefly with the sauce, stirring all the time. Serve with a green salad and a robust red wine. Serves 6.

Turkey Hash baked

SUPPER FARE
Turkey Hash & Salad
Fruit & Beverage

TURKEY HASH

It's a baked version.
1 pound (3 medium or 2 large) potatoes
4 tablespoons butter
1 small onion, quartered and thinly sliced (1-3rd cup)
¼ pound mushrooms, thinly sliced (about 1½ cups lightly packed)
2 cups cubed (½ inch) cooked turkey breast (lightly packed)
8 ounces (1 cup) heavy cream
Salt and pepper to taste
½ cup soft bread crumbs
Paprika

Pare potatoes and quarter; boil in a small amount of boiling water until tender — 20 to 25 minutes; drain; cut into ½-inch cubes — there should be 2½ cups. In a 10-inch skillet melt 3 tablespoons of the butter; add onion and mushrooms and cook over moderate heat, stirring often, until onion is golden.

Off heat stir in potatoes, turkey, cream, salt and pepper. Turn into an oblong 1½-quart baking dish (10 by 6 by 2 inches). Melt remaining 1 tablespoon butter and mix with crumbs; sprinkle over turkey mixture; dust lightly with paprika. Bake in a preheated 425-degree oven until hot, bubbly and browned — 20 to 25 minutes. If there is more cream at the bottom of the dish than you want, let stand at room temperature for 5 to 10 minutes so it is absorbed. Makes 4 large servings.

Sole fillets' sauce unique

JEAN HEWITT'S SOLE FILLETS

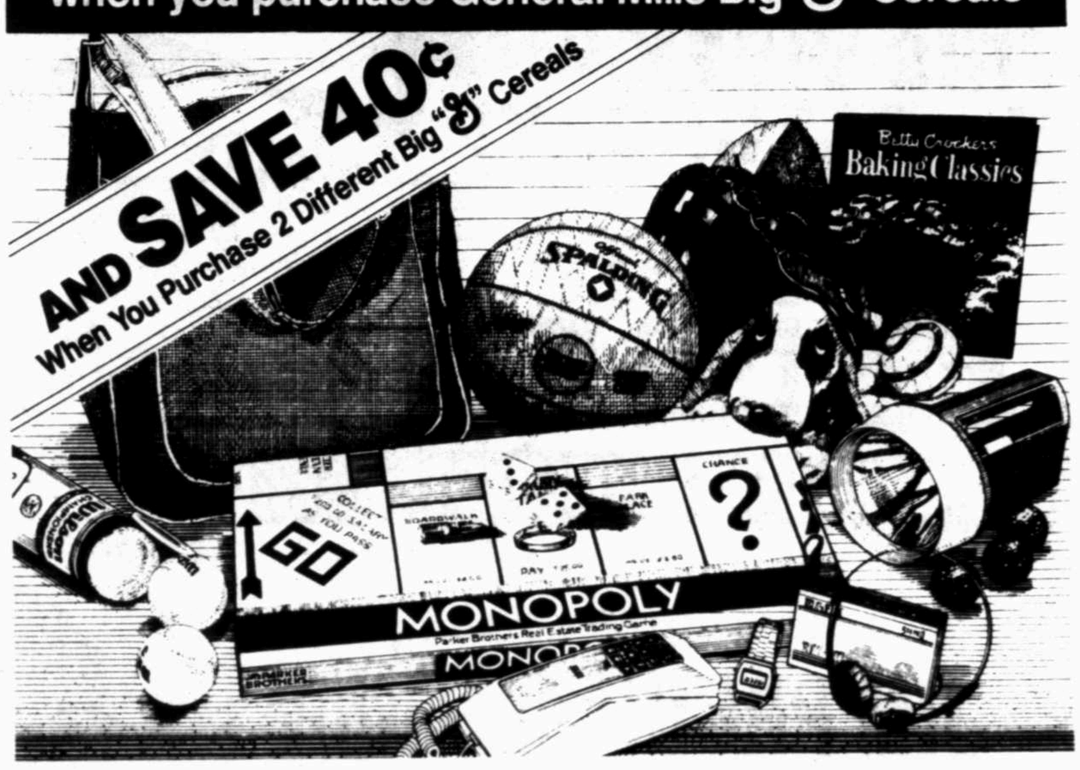

The Food Editor of Family Circle has devised a different and delicious sauce for fish.
1 large cucumber (¾ pound)
2 tablespoons (¼ stick) butter
½ cup heavy cream
Salt and pepper to taste
1 tablespoon lemon juice
12 ounces fillet of sole, fresh or frozen, thawed
Flour
1 tablespoon minced parsley

Pare cucumber; halve lengthwise and scoop out seeds with tip of teaspoon. Cut crosswise into ¼-inch slices.

Saute cucumber in 1 tablespoon of the butter in a large skillet until lightly browned, about 2 minutes. Stir in the cream, ⅛ teaspoon salt, a pinch of pepper and lemon juice. Cook mixture, stirring constantly, until it is reduced and coats the spoon heavily. Sprinkle the fish with salt and pepper to taste. Dredge lightly in flour, shaking off the excess. Heat remaining butter in a large skillet. Saute fish 2 to 3 minutes on each side, turning carefully with a large spatula.

Transfer fish to a warm serving platter. Reheat cucumber sauce. Spoon sauce over fish; garnish with parsley. Makes 2 servings.

Kiwifruit gaining fans in America

By The Associated Press

A strange-looking fruit that was once a favorite in the court of China's great khans is finally becoming popular in America.

Kiwifruit, also called the Chinese gooseberry, became known in the Western World in the 19th century. It was New Zealand which discovered how tasty this unprepossessing fuzzy brown ball became when the outer skin was removed, revealing brilliant green pulp. It was also New Zealand which gave the fruit its Western name kiwifruit. The Chinese had called it Yang Tao.

American agriculturists began testing kiwifruit in 1935, but it was not until the 1960s that the first commercial vineyards were planted in California. Today the Western state has about 6,000 acres under cultivation. In fact, California and New Zealand produce the bulk of this fruit for world markets.

I'm told that growing this exotic fruit is not simple or cheap. It involves hand labor and calls for careful tending throughout the growing and harvesting cycle.

Kiwi vines begin bearing fruit after about three years, but it takes more than twice that long before the carefully tended vines reach maturity. Once a vineyard is established, the vines will continue to yield fruit for up to 100 years.

America's kiwifruit is harvested in October and is available until May. After harvesting, the fruit is shipped to packing plants where it is cooled by air jet, then brushed clean and packaged.

Because the fruit is harvested at a mature but somewhat hard stage, the fruit on display at your green grocer is not always ready to eat. In that case, just let it stand at room temperature for several days, until it yields slightly to gentle pressure.

To prepare kiwifruit, remove the brown skin with a sharp knife. The fruit is good by itself, or in salads, entrees or desserts. It is also decorative as a garnish.

For a tasty dessert, try this recipe for Kiwifruit Gelato.

KIWIFRUIT GELATO

1 cup water
½ cup sugar
½ cup light corn syrup
3 or 4 kiwifruit, pared
5 teaspoons lemon or lime juice
¼ teaspoon grated lemon or lime peel

Combine water, sugar and corn sypup in saucepan. Cook and stir 2 minutes, or until sugar is dissolved. Puree kiwifruit in food processer or blender to equal ¾ cup puree. Add lemon or lime juice, grated peel and sugar mixture. Mix and pour into shallow metal pan and freeze 1 hour, or until firm but not solid. Spoon into chilled bowl and beat with electric mixer until light and fluffy. Return to pan. Freeze in refrigerator about 2 hours, or until firm enough to scoop. Makes about 2½ cups.

New plastic wrap may triple shelf life of fresh fruit

WASHINGTON (AP) - A new plastic wrap developed by American and Israeli scientists will triple the shelf life of fresh lemons and grapefruits, the U.S. Agriculture Department says.

Lemons that normally go bad on store shelves in three months will keep for nine months if they are wrapped in a thin film of polyethelene, a plastic made from petroleum. Grapefruits, which begin to rot after two months, will stay fresh for six.

The new film, developed in Israel, is less than half the thickness of the food wraps now in use, the department said. It allows the fruit to "breathe," letting some gases escape and taking in others that keep the fruit fresh.

Some American firms are testing the new wrap on shipments to Japan.

The project was financed by the U.S.-Israeli Binational Agricultural Research and Development Fund, which is perfecting the new process and working on other methods.

Compote made with oranges

MANDARIN COMPOTE

This combination of fruit has good flavor and color contrast.

Chill canned Mandarin oranges in their syrup. Before serving turn the oranges and their syrup into serving bowl (preferably glass).

Halve and seed large green grapes and add. Stir in orange liqueur to taste. You can, of course, make this in the quantity you need.

LUNCH FARE

APPLESAUCE GEMS

Leftover applesauce may be used in this good hot bread.

1 cup fork-stirred all-purpose flour
1 teaspoon baking powder
¼ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon ground cinnamon
¼ teaspoon ground nutmeg
¼ cup butter
½ cup sugar
1 large egg
½ cup sweetened applesauce (from a 15-ounce jar)

On wax paper or in a small bowl stir together flour, baking powder, salt, cinnamon and nutmeg. In a medium bowl cream butter and sugar; add egg and beat until blended. Stir in flour mixture in 2 additions, alternately with applesauce, until just blended each time — do not beat. Turn into buttered muffin-pan cups (each 2½ inches across the top and 1 inch deep), filling them about half full. Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven until golden and a cake tester inserted in center comes out clean — 25 minutes. Loosen edges and serve hot. Makes 10.

MARIAN ADAMSKI'S CHEESECAKE

The recipe for this delicious dessert comes from the mother of one of my friends.

2 cups fine graham cracker crumbs
Sugar
Ground cinnamon to taste
10 tablespoons butter, melted
4 eight-ounce packages cream cheese, soft
Vanilla
3 medium eggs
16-ounce carton sour cream

Stir together crumbs, 1-3rd cup sugar, cinnamon and butter; pat over bottom and sides of a 3-quart baking dish (13½ by 8¾ by 1¾ inches). Beat together cream cheese, 1 cup sugar and 2 teaspoons vanilla until blended; beat in eggs, one at a time, until blended after each addition. Pour into prepared baking dish. Bake in a preheated 375-degree oven for 20 minutes; remove from oven. Stir together sour cream, ¼ cup sugar and 2 teaspoons vanilla; at once spread over still hot cheese cake; continue to bake at 375 degrees for 5 minutes. Chill.

Student writes recipe column

HANOVER, N.H. (AP) — Darmouth College student Nick Bernstein, a government major from New York City, has begun writing a column, "Cooking With Nick," that appears weekly in the undergraduate daily, The Dartmouth.

Among the sources for the recipes he offers are suggestions from friends with hot plates and toaster ovens stashed under their beds, adaptations from more complicated recipes and his own creations.

Although his long-term career goals are in the area of filmmaking, Bernstein's interest in cooking goes back to his childhood, when with the encouragement of his parents, he started experimenting with simple tasks such as making salad dressings and hamburgers.

Snacking allowed in guide

By SHARON A. HILLIS

Good nutrition plays an important part in feeling good. Nutrition is the food you eat and the way your body uses food. Nutrition affects your physical and mental performance as well as how you look and feel.

Good nutrition means eating the proper amounts of foods. This depends on your age, sex, amount of physical activity and state of health.

The Daily Food Guide gives a plan for sound eating habits and includes the following groups:

— Milk group: Two or more servings a day for adults, three servings for children and four servings for adolescents and pregnant women.

— Bread and cereals group: Four or more servings a day.

— Vegetables and fruits group: Four or more servings a day.

— Meat, fish, poultry and bean group: Two or more servings a day.

— Fats, sweets and alcohol group: Use with caution. May be used to provide additional calories as needed.

It is not necessary to have three square meals per day to be well nourished. Americans are snacking more and feeling quilty about it. According to a national survey conducted this year by the Wheat Industry Council, two-thirds regularly snack between meals.

Snacks can be nutritious and fit into the daily food guide. For example yogurt, ice cream and cheese can be snacks from the milk group. Muffins, crackers, breads and popcorn are from the bread and cereal group. Fruit juice, fresh fruit, raw vegetables and raisins and other dried fruit are part of the fruit and vegetable group. Cold meats, nuts and seeds are part of the meat, fish, poultry and bean group.

Several small meals a day often provide for top efficiency and performance rather than one or two large meals.

You can plan ahead when you are away from home, too. Take nutritious, carry-along snacks such as fruits, nuts and canned vegetables or fruit juices.

"Busy People On The Go," a program offered as part of the "Women of the 80s" series will be offered from 7-9 p.m. Feb. 2 at the Fellowship Hall of St. Mark's United Methodist Church. The program is designed for women who want nutritious and attractive meals in a hurry for family and entertaining. For more information call the Midland County Extension Service, 682-9481, ext. 437.

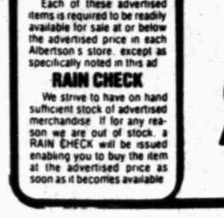

Sharon A. Hillis is Midland County Extension Agent, Home Economics.

Citrus growers expect adjustments after freeze

LOS ANGELES — California and Arizona orange growers see adjustments ahead in their shipping program but do not plan to make any drastic alterations in it in the wake of the disastrous freeze which struck Florida and Texas.

"Our goal, as always, is to deliver as many fresh oranges as possible to the consumer," said Billy Peightal, manager of the Navel Orange Administrative Committee, "but we are not going to panic and ship fruit in a manner which will create shortages in the months ahead.

"Normally our navel harvest continues through the month of May, and our program calls for doing the same thing this year. If we did otherwise there could be periods when little or no fresh oranges were available to anyone."

BETTER BUSINESS

Auto complaints can be arbitrated

By LINDA TRUITT

An historic consent order signed by the Federal Trade Commission and General Motors Corporation on Nov. 15, 1983 provides Better Business Bureau-administered arbitration potentially to millions of consumers whose complaints about major repair bills go back as far as 1974.

The final order settles of an FTC complaint filed against GM in 1980 alleging defects in certain transmissions, camshafts and diesel fuel injectors manufactured for some GM models as far back as 1974.

The order is unique because it provides for out-of-court proceedings through BBB arbitration for a large number of potential claimants. It is estimated the order covers up to six million cars built in the late 1970s with premature wear and mechanical breakdowns on THM 200 transmissions, 15 million engines with premature wear on camshafts and 500,000 cars with corrosion in diesel fuel injection pumps.

The order says consumers who presently own, or previously owned, 1974 or later GM automobiles and who have incurred repair bills on the specified components may first seek an adjustment from GM. If the consumer is dissatisfied with the GM offer he can ask the problem be arbitrated through BBB.

In BBB arbitration both the company and the customer help select an independent trained volunteer from a cross-section of the community. After a hearing at a mutually agreed time and place where both sides are given the opportunity to present their positions in person, the arbitrator has 10 days to provide a final decision.

Under the FTC-GM order the arbitrator's decision is legally binding on General Motors but not on the customer unless he or she specifically agrees to that decision in writing.

Customers who have already registered complaints with GM about the components and whose complaints are unresolved will receive information from GM about this program. GM must also provide these customers with fact sheets designed to help them present their cases if they go to arbitration.

A separate provision of the order also makes the BBB mediation and arbitration program available to current owners of GM cars or light duty trucks who have unresolved complaints about the general powertrain (defined by the order as engine and transmission, but not including front and rear-wheel final drive components). Under the order GM must offer a mediation and arbitration program for the next eight years.

Sine the program was announced in November the Chevrolet Division of General Motors has offered settlements totaling $3,675 to Permian Basin GM customers with problems relating to the consent order.

In brief the consent order covers:

— THM 200 automatic transmissions used in a number of rear-wheel drive cars and trucks, beginning with 1976 models and including those manufactured by GM through April 26 of this year.

— Camshafts or lifters in 305 and 350 cubic-inch displacement (CID) gasoline engines produced through April 26, 1983 in plants operated by GM's Chevrolet Division since 1974.

— Fuel injection pumps or fuel injectors in 350 CID diesel engines produced through April 26, 1983 in plants operated by GM's Oldsmobile Division since 1978.

Call the BBB complaint line at 563-1881 with the make, model and year of the vehicle, the vehicle identification number, a brief description of the problem, and if possible copies of repair bills and/or cancelled checks.

The BBB will take complaints and try to mediate an adjustment from GM. If the offer is not satisfactory the customer can ask for arbitration. GM and the customer will help choose an arbitrator, the BBB will arrange a hearing and a decision will be issued.

Linda Truitt is president of the Better Business Bureau of the Permian Basin Inc.

Cauliflower florets shredded

CAULIFLOWER SHREDS

1 small head cauliflower
¼ cup butter, cut in 4 pats
¼ cup water
¼ teaspoon salt

Cut apart cauliflower so florets are attached to stems; rinse in cold water. In a food processor shred cauliflower coarsely. In a covered 10-inch skillet simmer together cauliflower, butter and water, stirring several times, until cauliflower is tender and liquid has evaporated — about 12 minutes. Stir in salt. Serve hot. Makes 4 servings. —(AP)

DEAR ABBY

Buckling baby's seat belt safe bet

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: "Worried Sick" expressed concern because her sister never bothered to tell her children to buckle up their seat belts. The sister dismisses it by saying, "If anything happens to them, it will be God's will."

I'm sending you an article I clipped from Aide magazine. It really shook some sense into me, and now I religiously buckle my children into their seat belts before I turn the key:

CHILD SAFETY SEATS

This recent letter to Dear Abby made our point about child restraints better than we ever could.

"Dear Abby: Here in New York, the state legislature recently passed a law requiring all car passengers 4 years old and under to be strapped into approved safety seats. There is a $25 fine for parents who have not equipped their cars as yet, and that $25 goes toward the purchase of a seat. I can't believe all the grumbling and complaining about this law.

"We moved here four years ago, leaving behind in Ohio a deep, dark secret we never mention here. Six years ago I was driving my 6-month-old daughter, unbelted, sitting in her carrier beside me. Five blocks from home, I was broadsided by a truck.

"My car flipped over twice, and my precious baby girl was tossed around inside like a pingpong ball. She died 72 hours later of massive head injuries. (I was told it was a blessing — that she would have been a vegetable had she lived.)

"Going home to an empty nursery drove me crazy with guilt. I had always been so careful. I had padded her crib, made sure she had only the safest toys, guarded her with my life and loved her with all my heart. If I had only known what I know now, she would have ridden home from the hospital as a newborn baby in a safety seat instead of in my arms.

"We buried the truth with Tina and moved here to escape the memories. No one here knows we ever had a child. My husband finds it too hard to talk about. Since I can't tell the story, I beg you to do it for me. If it saves only one child's life, Tina's death will not have been in vain. — Learned Too Late"
— ALSO WORRIED

DEAR ABBY: In a lot of states it's the law that all children have to be buckled into safety belts when they're riding in a car. There are also TV commercials to remind adults to "buckle up."

If everyone is so concerned about safety in automobiles, how come there are no safety belts on school buses?

If safety belts save lives, why not save more lives by putting safety belts in all public vehicles, like the city buses, too? — B.P. IN AVILLA, IND.

DEAR B.P.: Good question.

DEAR ABBY: What do you think of a woman (age 46) who would play cards in her home the same evening one of her parents was buried? Also, what do you think of the guests who played with her? Thank you. — NO NAMES, PLEASE

DEAR NO NAMES: It isn't possible to make a fair judgment without knowing what was in that woman's heart. And the same goes for the guests who played with her.

(If you put off writing letters because you don't know what to say, send for Abby's complete booklet on letter-writing. Send $2 and a long, stamped (37 cents), self-addressed envelope to Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

Acid rain affects other areas

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — Acid rain pollution, previously detected only in North America and northern Europe, is now affecting parts of the Southern Hemisphere, a conservation group reports.

The soil in parts of Brazil has become severely acidified, although research has not determined the exact cause, according to a report issued Tuesday by the International Union for the Conservation of Nature and Natural Resources.

In the Eastern Transvaal high plain of South Africa, air pollution may cause acid rain, said the report by the scientific arm of the World Wildlife Fund.

Scientists suspect acid rain is caused by emissions of sulphur and nitrogen oxides from industrialized regions.

The refineries, power stations and other industrial sites around Johannesburg are probably responsible for the acid rain pollution in South Africa, the report said.

Court sentences German

ROTTERDAM, Netherlands (AP) — A Dutch court has sentenced a West German to a year in prison for illegally storing explosives. Prosecutors claimed an ex-CIA agent planned to supply the material to terrorist organizations.

Wolfgang Steiniger, 37, was convicted of keeping more than 100 pounds of plastic explosive at his Rotterdam shipping company.

During the trial, which started in October, prosecutor Rudolf Gerding said the explosives were shipped from Libya for distribution to European terrorist groups, which he did not name.

A witness identified as U.S. Army Capt. Peter Goulding testified for the defense that he arranged for Steiniger to store the explosives.At the time the deal was made, the officer said, he was working for Edwin C. Wilson, an ex-CIA agent later convicted in the United States for attempted murder and smuggling munitions to Libya.

The court said Tuesday that Steiniger cooperated with Wilson's organization "for his personal financial gain" and "seriously jeopardized public safety" by storing the explosives.

Guards ambush possession

AYACUCHO, Peru (AP) — A marine sentry apparently mistook a line of cars returning from a funeral for a guerrilla column and opened fire, killing three children and wounding nine other people, police report.

The military command in Ayacucho, 350 miles southeast of Lima, gave no information on the shooting. But police said Tuesday helicopters brought several of the wounded to Ayacucho's central hospital.

The incident occurred Sunday near Tambo, about 40 miles from Ayacucho, in an area frequented by anti-government Shining Path guerrillas. The funeral was for a woman reportedly slain by the Maoist group.

Inspector killed during talks

LAUSANNE, Switzerland (AP) — A police inspector was killed while trying to negotiate with two prison escapees holed up in an airport hangar with three hostages, police say.

One convict and a hostage were wounded when police stormed the hangar.

Police said Inspector Jean-Jacque Voegelin, 48, was shot at close range Tuesday when he went unarmed but wearing a bullet-proof vest to negotiate with the convicts at a small airfield near Lausanne.

The escaped prisoners, both Spaniards, refused to allow an ambulance to come near the inspector and demanded a helicopter, police said.Sharpshooters then opened fire and stormed the hangar.

The escapees, Geronimo Arnay-Viles, 43, and Ramos Manuel Canelo, 37, fled a prison outside Lausanne earlier Tuesday. Authorities said they pulled a gun, tied up eight guards and walked out the main gate, taking another guard hostage.

Then they seized a passing salesman and forced him to drive toward Lausanne.

TV news crew watches birth

PEKING (AP) — Fast action by a television news crew enabled viewers in China to watch a woman aboard a train give birth to a baby girl.

The nightly news, China's most popular television program, reported Tuesday that crew members heard a woman was about to give birth in a sleeper car Monday night after the train left Yanzhou en route to Nanjing.

"They immediately went to the car and filmed," said commentator Xi Chen. "At 10:30 p.m., a baby girl was born."

The broadcast showed several uniformed officials attending to the unidentified woman as one cut the infant's umbilical cord.

European women earn less

STRASBOURG, France (AP) — European women earn about 30 percent less than men doing the same type of work and have more trouble finding jobs, according to a study presented to the European Parliament.

The report, debated by the Parliament for five hours Tuesday, estimated the number of unemployed women rose from 600,000 in 1970 to 4.9 million in 1982. It said the number of unemployed men doubled during that period.

It concluded that, despite lower salaries and employment problems, the status of European women had improved because of laws on equal pay, equal job opportunities and equal treatment under social security systems.

'American pilot killed in cold blood'

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras (AP) — An American pilot was killed "in cold blood" last week by Nicaraguan soldiers, says the secretary of the U.S. Air Force, who met with two Army engineers who survived the downing of their helicopter.

The engineers, identified by the Defense Department as Robert R. Green and Christopher B. Waitin, were scheduled to hold a news conference today at Palmerola, a military base 48 miles north of Tegucigalpa, Honduras' capital. Until today, the men have not spoken to reporters about the downing of the helicopter near the Nicaraguan-Honduran border.

Air Force Secretary Verne Orr arrived in Tegucigalpa on Tuesday and said Chief Warrant Officer Jeffry C. Schwab "died in cold blood in Honduran territory from shots fired by Nicaraguan soldiers on the other side of the border."

Nicaraguan officials say their troops shot at the helicopter while it was in Nicaraguan airspace but deny U.S. allegations that the soldiers shot and killed Schwab after he landed on the Honduran side of the border.

Nicaragua's defense minister, Humberto Ortega, said Tuesday that the helicopter was part of a CIA plan to help rebels overthrow the leftist government in Nicaragua.

Ortega said the plan includes forays into Nicaraguan air space by U.S. military aircraft and the use of Honduran soldiers, dressed in rebel uniforms, to aid the insurgents.

In Washington, a Defense Department spokesman, Michael Burch, said the helicopter was "off course by a considerable distance" — about 25 miles. U.S. officials have said the helicopter was flying to the site of an airfield that U.S. army engineers are improving for joint U.S.-Honduran mililtary exercises.

There were these other developments in Central America on Tuesday:

—Col. Carlos Reynaldo Lopez Nuila, of the Salvadoran army, said Capt. Eduardo Alfonso Avila, linked by subordinates to the murder of two U.S. land reform advisers, can no longer be legally held in jail.

Avila's uncle is one of the Supreme Court's 13 justices, and American and Salvadoran sources requesting anonymity said the uncle pressured authorities for his nephew's release.

Witnesses have testified in court that Avila was involved in the January 1981 murders of Michael P. Hammer, 42, of Potomac, Md., and Mark D. Pearlman, 36, of Seattle, who worked for the AFC-CIO's American Institute for Free Labor Development.

The director of the Salvadoran Agrarian Reform Institute, Jose Rodolfo Viera, 39, was also killed.

A U.S. Embassay official in San Salvador who asked not to be identified, said the embassy was "obviously disappointed" by the development.

—Salvadoran air force planes bombed and strafed hideouts used by leftist rebels to mount attacks on a key bridge in eastern El Salvador, military sources said.

The rickety trestle bridge, 51 miles east of the capital over the Lempa River, is one of two remaining links between eastern and western parts of the country.Two other important bridges were blown up by rebels over the last two years.

—In Mexico City, Ruben Zamora, a Salvadoran leftist leader, said the Kissinger Commission's report on Central America was a "waste of time and money."

—In Guatemala, an army spokesman reacted to rumors of an imminent coup by saying the military stands solidly behind the current chief of state's plans for elections this July.

Argentine exiles coming home

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — After years of repression, heartache and fears, the nightmare is ending for thousands of Argentines who are coming home from exile to life under a new, democratic government.

A government-sponsored television advertisement captures the spirit.

In it, a young man, suitcase in tow, stops at the door of a working-class home on a tree-lined street in Buenos Aires and knocks. A gray-haired man, obviously the youth's father, opens the door and the two, after a poignant moment of recognition, embrace.

President Raul Alfonsin, whose Dec. 10 inauguration ended more than seven years of military rule, told the several thousand-strong Argentine community in Spain this week, "The path is clear for the return of all those who for one reason or another left their homeland during these past years."

In the message broadcast by Spanish television, the new president said all the exiles "have the right to contribute their effort to the task at hand, because only through the active participation of all can democracy become a reality."

RELIABLE ESTIMATES put the number of Argentine citizens resident abroad at more than 1 million — out of a total population of 28 million. The majority cannot be considered political exiles, having left the country ovr the past decades in search of broader economic horizons.

But tens of thousands left for political reasons beginning in the mid-1970s, when leftist guerrilla violence and its brutal repression, first by rightist paramilitary organizations and then the ruling armed forces, caused many intellectuals, union militants and party activists to fear for their lives.

Former President Isabel Peron, who was ousted and jailed by the military in 1976, came back briefly for Alfonsin's inauguration. She has lived in Spain since being freed in 1981 but will return home next month.

For former exiles, homecoming is a special experience.

"Every day is a spectacle, seeing familiar sights and encountering old companions," said Jorge Bernetti, a 35-year-old journalist and former Peronist union activist who moved to Mexico in 1974 after appearing on a "death list" of the Argentine Anti-Communist Alliance. The "Triple-A" was believed made up of neo-fascist police and civilians and was encouraged to kidnap and murder leftists by sectors in Mrs. Peron's administration.

BERNETTI RETURNED last month with Adriana Puiggros, former professor of philosophy and letters at the University of Buenos Aires, who chose exile the same year after a bomb exploded in her office.

She too was active in the left wing of Peronism, a labor-based populist movement founded 40 years ago by the late army strongman and three-time President Gen. Juan Peron.

The two spoke with The Associated Press in a downtown apartment.

"Homecoming should be happy, but it's not that easy," said Ms. Puiggross. "There's a lot of uncertainty. You don't know what you're going to find, and the economic situation is discouraging."

Argentina is struggling through its worst recession in history, with 15 percent unemployment and 400 percent annual inflation eroding salaries.

MS. PUIGGROS has tenure after nine years at Mexico's National Autonomous University and admits such job stability would be difficult to establish here.

But she is also excited by the newly democratic Argentina.

Governor launches progress

REYNOSA, Mexico (AP) — About $6 million worth of civic improvements were launched by the governor of the State of Tamaulipas, Emilio Martinez Manoutou, during a one day visit to the city last week.

Ribbons were cut at seven locations throughout the city to initiate paving projects. A typical ceremony was held in the Colonia Cavazos where the governor, Reynosa Mayor Miguel Valdez Revilla and members of the city council held a ribbon cutting ceremony to mark the start of paving in the neighborhood.

Tamaulipas is the Mexican state which borders Texas between Brownsville and Laredo.

Karen Schwab wipes a tear from her cheek Tuesday during graveside services for her husband, Chief Warrant Officer Jeffry Schwab, in Joliet, Ill. Schwab is the first American servicemen to fall to Nicaraguan gunfire. With Schwab's widow are his parents, Robert and Helen Schwab.

U.S. serviceman buried

PLAINFIELD, Ill. (AP) — An American serviceman who was killed by gunfire when his helicopter was forced to land near the Nicaragua-Honduras border was a hero who "died for his country," his widow said.

Chief Warrant Officer Jeffry Schwab was buried Tuesday in this community of 3,800 about 40 miles southwest of Chicago.

Schwab, 27, was killed Jan. 11 after his Army helicopter was forced down in an area where U.S.-backed guerrillas have clashed repeatedly with troops of Nicaragua's Sandinista regime.

After funeral services, Karen Schwab, her 8-month-old son Jason at her side, told reporters in a soft voice: "I see my husband as a hero. He died for his country. I do hope that everyone will see him in that light." The Schwabs also had a 2-year-old year-old son, Brandon.

Mrs. Schwab would not comment about the political situation in Central America but said her husband had volunteered to go to Honduras. "At the time he left there was no implication of any problems in Honduras."

Robert Schwab, who also attended the news conference, said he was "very proud" of his son.

About 500 mourners, including Schwab's parents, three sisters and brother, gathered for the funeral Mass at St. Mary Immaculate Roman Catholic Church in Plainfield.

Bishop Joseph L. Imesch of Joliet, who celebrated the Mass, asked: "How many times, how many families must grieve before we recognize that war is not a solution, it is a problem?"

The Rev. Charles Van Duren eulogized Schwab as an "innocent" who died "for every single American."

As the family followed the coffin out the church, the choir sang the "Battle Hymn of the Republic."

Outside the church, the coffin's white covering was replaced with an American flag and taken by procession to Saints Cyril and Methodius Cemetery, near Joliet.

Voters approve plan

NANTUCKET, Mass. (AP) — Residents of Nantucket Island, where beach property is so tight that even jeans designer Calvin Klein couldn't squeeze into any, have voted overwhelmingly to create a land bank in an effort to limit commercial development on the resort island.

The vote at a special town meeting Tuesday was 293-12 in favor of establishing a land bank financed by a tax on land sales. The bank would buy land for the public at fair market value to keep it out of the hands of commercial developers.

"It is probably the last chance to preserve for public use and enjoyment some of the open spaces and beaches of the Nantucket islands," Finance Committee Secretary Norman Beach declared in support of the bank.

The bank was proposed after land sales on the 25-square-mile island off the Massachusetts coast hit $85 million a year ago. Most of the land was snatched up by New Yorkers and Texans, said William Klein, executive director of the Nantucket Planning and Economic Development Commission.

More than 300 real-estate agents are registered on the island, and old houses once occupied by whaling captains fetch up to $1.6 million on the open market.

More than 500 people packed into Nantucket's elementary school to discuss and vote on the proposal. Local attorney Michael Driscoll made the lone speech in opposition.

"It is a very dangerous piece of legislation," he said. "It was railroaded through the Legislature."

Rumors of coup spur response

WASHINGTON (AP) — Speculation that another coup might be imminent in Guatemala has prompted the State Department to announce officially that it opposes any change of government there "other than through democratic means."

Alan Romberg, the department's deputy spokesman, said Tuesday that the United States has no information to confirm the rumors that a coup attempt is likely against the regime of Gen. Oscar Humberto Mejia Victores, who came to power last August in a military coup that overthrew his predecessor, Gen. Efrain Rios Montt.

Romberg noted that since coming to power Mejia Victores has "confirmed that his government will hold constituent assembly elections this July."

"We fully support this decision and look forward to an early announcement of an electoral law," Romberg said. "...We would oppose any change of government in Guatemala other than through democratic means."

Gen. Rios Montt, had himself come to power in a coup. He was overthrown by Mejia Victores after only 15 months in office. That fact has fueled speculation that a third coup could take place.

In Guatemala City, Army spokesman Col. Edgar Djalma Dominguez Lopez said rumors of an imminent coup are not accurate. "The army stands united and committed to a return to democracy," Dominguez Lopez said, referring to the planned elections.

Anti-semitic incidents decrease

NEW YORK (AP) — The number of anti-Semitic incidents nationwide has dropped because educational efforts have reduced prejudice, publicity has heightened public interest and stricter laws against ethnic vandalism have been passed, a Jewish organization says.

Jewish institutions also have taken stronger measures to protect themselves, the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith said Tuesday.

Reported assaults, threats and harassments of U.S. Jews plummeted by 41 percent last year, and anti-Semitic vandalism dropped by 19 percent, the group reported. But "the stark fact remains that in 1983 there were 670 incidents of anti-Semitic vandalism," national director Nathan Perlmutter said.

Total windfall may be $40 million

BOSTON (AP) — Officials say the total windfall from a state tax amnesty should reach $40 million — nearly 10 times initial estimates — after thousands of tax evaders jammed offices to beat the deadline.

"On the basis of what we have and the mail still to come in the next couple of days, there isn't much doubt we'll hit $40 million," said Harry Durning, spokesman for the state Revenue Department.

About 30,000 people appeared at 11 state offices Tuesday to beat the midnight deadline, officials said.

During the three-month amnesty period, citizens were allowed to pay back taxes and interest free from prosecution and civil penalties.

Polite man may be 'cap bandit'

BOSTON (AP) — A polite man who is called the "cap bandit" and "the note passer" and is believed responsible for 22 New England bank robberies since 1982 has taken a total of more than $50,000 and averages $2,000 a robbery, the FBI says.

"He's very pleasant — he'll say 'hello' and 'thank you,' and 'no dye (to mark the money) please,'" John Burke, supervisor of the FBI's bank robbery squad in Boston, said Tuesday. "He knows the ins and outs pretty good. So would you if you'd done it 22 times."

He is called the cap bandit for the variety of hats he wears to foil surveillance cameras, and he always asks for money in a note.

Judge to delay ruling until appeal

NEW YORK (AP) — A judge who dismissed spy charges against a Bulgarian trade official accused of stealing U.S. nuclear secrets has agreed to delay his ruling granting the man diplomatic immunity while federal authorities appeal.

U.S. District Judge Vincent L. Broderick ruled Tuesday that the New York trade office where Penyu B. Kostadinov, 41, worked is part of the Bulgarian embassy to the United States, making him a diplomat protected against criminal prosecution.

Kostadinov, who remains in jail without bond pending the appeal, was arrested Sept. 23 after he allegedly bought what the FBI described as a classified document concerning nuclear weapons security procedures.

Budget deficit may force city layoffs

BOSTON (AP) — The city will be forced to lay off workers unless it can turn around a $40 million budget deficit with a combination of state assistance, new revenues and spending controls, experts have concluded in a 700-page report.

The report, which was prepared by a team of financial experts for new Mayor Raymond Flynn and released Tuesday, projects a $20.6 million deficit for the current fiscal year ending June 30 and a $40.4 million deficit for the next fiscal year.

Flynn said analysts found that 65 percent of city agencies spent more than half their allocations in the first six months of fiscal 1984, before former Mayor Kevin White ended his 16-year tenure.

Company president gets bomb package

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — The president of an air freight company was listed in critical condition today after one of two pipe bombs exploded when he opened a package mailed to him, authorities said.

Joshua Brown, 35, of Santa Ana, Calif., underwent surgery for injuries to his face, neck and abdomen suffered when he opened the package Tuesday at the Newark branch of Right-O-Way Inc., said police Lt. Armando Fontoura. The blast severed a wire on the second bomb, keeping it from exploding and killing Brown, he said.

Technique may be tested on humans

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — Eastern Virginia Medical School, launching research into using in-vitro fertilization to prevent birth defects and genetic diseases, may be using the technique on humans by the end of the decade, a doctor says.

The school, where America's first test-tube baby was conceived, announced on Tuesday the hiring of Gary D. Hodgen, chief of pregnancy research at the National Institutes of Health in Bethesda, Md.

Hodgen, 40, said he will research the detection of genetic defects in embryos, which could lead to halting genetic diseases such as diabetes or sickle cell anemia. The process, used successfully on mice last year, next will be tested on monkeys, he said.

Employee injured in bomb blast

OGDEN, Utah (AP) — Three pipe bombs that exploded in a hospital physicians' locker room tore a chunk from the wall and ceiling and injured an operating room technician who is a suspect in the case, police said.

The three half-foot pipes, placed against a wall separating the locker room from the showers, caused about $1,000 in damage when they went off at McKay-Dee Hospital on Tuesday, police said.

There were no patients or doctors in the area, which is adjacent to the surgical complex, and no evacuation was ordered.

The three bombs went off together, but only one shredded — like a banana — and the other two simply blew off the ends of the casings, said Lt. Charles Buzick, bomb expert for the Ogden Police Department.

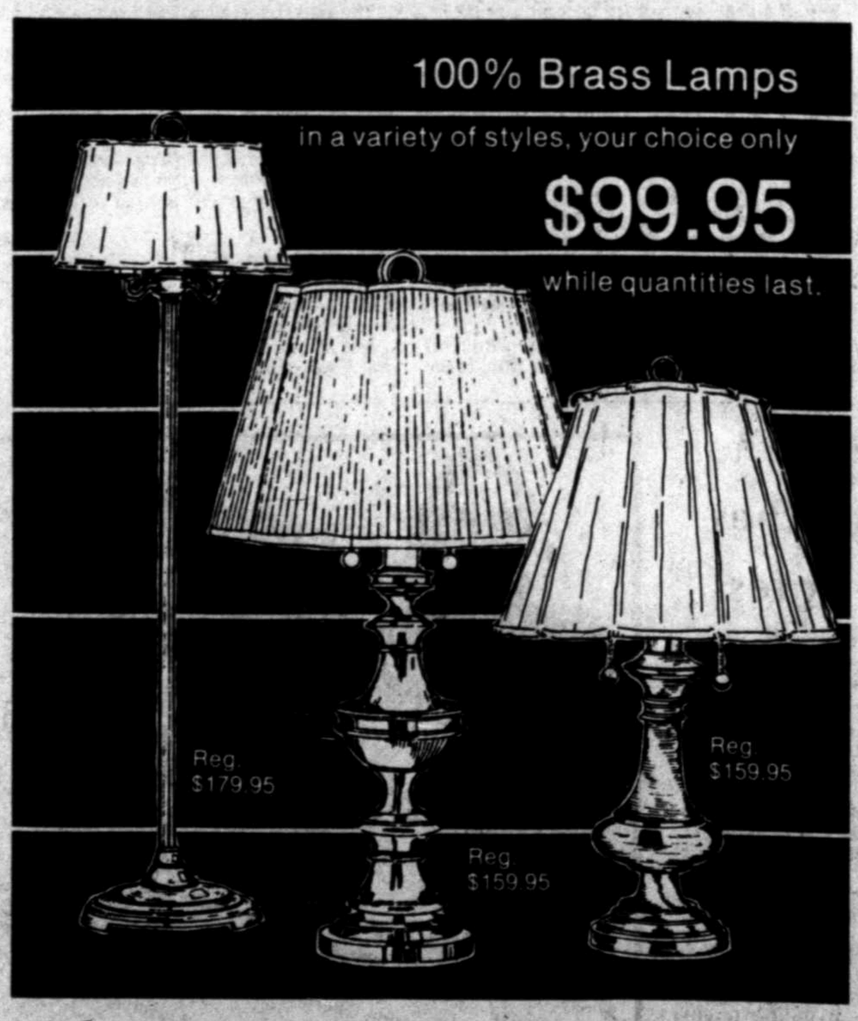

"I suspect they were packed with black powder or some other kind of gunpowder" and were set off by lighting a fuse, he said.

The name of the injured technician was being withheld today until officers could discuss the case with the county attorney, Buzick said. He said the technician was a suspect, but he and other police officers declined to discuss motive.

Mike MacFarlane, assistant hospital administrator, said the man suffered superficial cuts on the forearms and doctors planned to keep him in the hospital overnight. He was in good condition today.

FORT WORTH (AP) — Fran Reece liked the cherries and smiling faces that adorned the interesting little machine that gobbled her dollars.

She liked the machine even more when it began to ring and shake with a commotion that attracted the other players in the Lake Tahoe, Nev., casino.

Mrs. Reece had invested $59 in a slot machine at the High Sierra Hotel Casino and now has $300,000 in the bank.

"Well, I have this tendency to play this dollar machine when I go to these places," said Mrs. Reece, who retired six years ago as a counselor in elementary schools and to parents of deaf children. "And I always play the full amount. If it has spaces for three dollars, I put in three."

"Now there was this interesting little machine — a big machine, really — and, honestly, it was uncanny. I just wanted to play that machine," she told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram. "It had cherries that had faces that smiled at you, and there was music that played for you if you won. So I cashed a $20 bill and started."

She had been to Las Vegas twice before and once, three years ago, won about $200 while on a ship that was going to Alaska. But the trip Saturday with her husband, Ray, and 39 members of the Butterfly Group of women was her first to Lake Tahoe.

Fran Reese

"My husband was over there playing the nickel machines," she said. "He said, 'You're spending too much money on it.'"

Indeed, she had. By 11:30 a.m. she was down to her last $9.

"Then the first triple bar came up, and the second triple bar came up, and then the third triple bar came up, and I said, 'No, this cannot happen, it just can't,' and then that fourth triple bar came up and I about fell off my stool," she said.

Frigid weather aggravates hunger, people tell panel

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — Frigid weather early this winter has severely aggravated problems of hunger in the Brazos Valley, where more than a quarter of the people live in poverty, witnesses told a state Senate committee.

"In the winter we've had this year, there has to be a choice between paying the gas bill or stretching your food," Deborah Chapman told members of the Senate Interim Committee on Hunger and Nutrition Tuesday.

"Naturally, you pay the gas bill and add water to the soup — if you have soup," Mrs. Chapman added.

The panel, which held two similar meetings in Houston, heard testimony from Bryan-College Station area residents at a gathering on the Texas A&M University campus.

Mrs. Chapman and her husband, the Rev. J.H. Chapman of the Pleasant Grove Baptist Church in College Station, organized a free cheese distribution program.

Senators Hugh Parmer, D-Fort Worth, and John Whitmire, D-Houston, heard repeated tales of shrinking resources and worsening problems from social workers, program administrators and private providers.

Among those addressing the panel was Dr. Anne Shively, director of the Bryan area's mental health and mental retardation center, who told the senators that 26 percent of the Brazos Valley's population lives at or below federally established poverty levels.

Prehistoric Indian encampment delays building of oil-rig port

INGLESIDE, Texas (AP) — An ancient Indian encampment found on the site of a proposed 3,000-acre private industrial complex is expected to further delay construction of the project.

U.S. Army Corp of Engineers archeologists discovered the encampment at the proposed site of Baker's Port, an industrial complex and dry-dock for deep-sea oil rigs, which has been delayed for over two years for lack of a government construction permit.

The government maintains a permit is necessary because the site is on federally protected wetlands.

"I'm flabbergasted," Larry Baker Jr. of Baker Marine, developer of Baker's Port, told the Corpus Christi Caller-Times. "I didn't know I had this one to fight."

Baker has said his firm is losing nearly $20,000 on a $42 million land investment for every day the project is delayed. Baker estimates that, once completed, the complex will provide 5,000 full-time jobs.

The Indian encampment was discovered Nov. 10 by Dr. Olin McCormick, staff archeologist for Coastal Ecosystems Management Inc. of Fort Worth. The archeological exploration was part of the lengthy government construction permit process.

Film industry to seek charge on cassettes, VCRs

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Film industry officials, calling a Supreme Court ruling that home videotaping is legal "a major blow," say they'll ask Congress to slap on surcharges of at least 50 cents for every blank tape cassette and $100 for each video recorder.

But one electronics industry official predicted the ruling would discourage Congress from providing what moviemakers wanted all along: compensation for producers and artists for revenues allegedly lost because of home taping.

The nation's high court Tuesday found that existing copyright law does not make it illegal to tape programs for later viewing in private.

The court split 5-4 in its finding against Universal Studios and Walt Disney Productions. In 1976, Universal and Disney had sued Sony Corp. for selling videotape recorders which, the studios claimed, were primarily being used to violate the law by taping copyright programs.

But the majority opinion by Justice John Paul Stevens left the door open for Congress to rewrite the copyright law, saying "it may well be that Congress will take a fresh look at this new technology."

"This is a major blow to the film industry," said one studio executive who declined to be quoted by name. "They have to look to other solutions of the issue. Hopefully a compromise can be worked out."

Film industry officials said they would pursue legislation to allow surcharges on video equipment sales. The figures discussed most are $100 for a recorder that currently costs $400 to $800 and at least 50 cents for every blank video cassette.

In Washington, Jack Valenti, president of the Motion Picture Association of America, said his group will go before Congress in coming months in support of the legislation. "We have to do it or in the end the Congress is going to be responsible for the deterioration of our product," he said.

Valenti said the narrow majority ruling "is ample evidence that the court is troubled and divided."

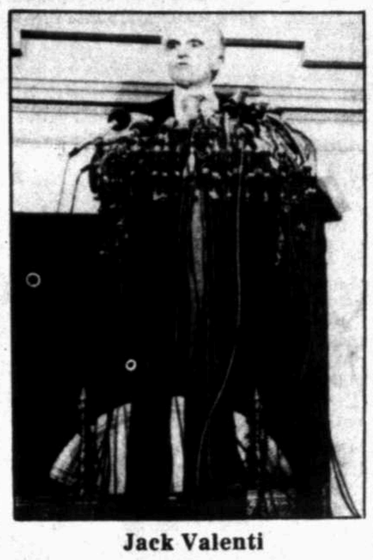

"Both the majority and dissenting opinions did agree on one point: The Congress must decide whether or not copyright is real or whether it is mush," Valenti said.

Disney and Universal spokesmen said there would be no comment pending careful review of the court's 46-page decision.

Screen Actors Guild spokeswoman Kim Fellner agreed: "I think the real key for us is that all the judges here have basically acknowledged that existing technology has outstripped existing law, that the copyright rules and regulations as we know them have not expanded appropriately to be applicable in the modern world of telecommunications."

Kenji Tamiya, president of Sony Corp. of America, told a news conference in New York that the Supreme Court decision was "an important victory for consumers."

Jack Wayman of the Electronic

Jack Valenti

Kenji Tamiya

Industries Association in Washington told a news conference that sales of pre-recorded programs are growing and that studios were being "greedy" in trying to collect twice for the same programming — once from sale to television and again from home tapers.

"We think Hollywood should fold up its tent and let the marketplace decide," Wayman said.

Dean Dunleavey, the Los Angeles attorney who argued the electronics industry's case before the high court, said he thinks the film industry may eventually get the surcharge it is seeking through a copyright law amendment, but not immediately.

"It's less likely for the moment because in an election year, what congressman wants to explain to voters that he put a tax on them so he could pay it into the pockets of the film industry," Dunleavy said. "They (the film industry) will let it die down, let the public get interested in something else and then they'll try again."

Court ruling on VCRs worries advertisers

NEW YORK (AP) — Home video recording, which won approval from the Supreme Court on Tuesday, worries many advertisers who fear that more and more viewers will fast-forward past their commercials.

By a 5-4 decision, the court ruled that taping TV shows or movies at home does not violate U.S. copyright law so long as it isn't done for profit. It was a victory for the billion-dollar home video recorder industry and the 8 million owners of videocassette recorders.

But the people who pay for the programs, the advertisers, are worried that "a word from our sponsor" will soon signal a massive speed-search past the commercial.

Richard Kostyra, senior vice president, media director for the J. Walter Thompson ad agency, said videocassette recorders (VCRs) "with fast-forward modes and TV sets with remote control are the biggest threats to TV advertising today."

"It's not a substantial problem now," said Walter Reichel, executive vice president and director of media programs for the Ted Bates advertising agency. "But the problem of getting our commercial messages across could become very serious."

Bob Igiel, senior vice president for programming and network negotiations at the NW Ayer ad agency, said "it's an issue we're looking at very closely. Technology is something you can't run away from, but the key is to learn these new consumption habits."

Igiel said that VCRs may bring more viewers to the product, if, for example, people recording afternoon soap operas would otherwise be unavailable for those shows' commercials.

In 1979, the A.C. Nielsen Co. did a first-time survey of about 550 homes with VCRs. One finding was that "the majority of recording was done during the daytime, obviously soap operas, to be viewed at the viewers' convenience," said Barry Kaplan, vice president, associate director for media information at the Ted Bates ad agency.

"You'd be a fool not to zap the commercials," Kaplan said.

No exact figures were released by Nielsen, but one conclusion was "that a great degree of people used speed search to run past the commercials," said Kaplan.

However, network researchers dispute these results because they were based on viewer self-reporting, not Nielsen's normally objective meter measuring. The weakness is that, given the choice, many respondents will say they don't watch commercials. David Poltrack, a CBS vice president for research, calls these "socially desirable responses" — the kind people feel obliged to make.

The Electronic Industries Association estimates that 10 percent of the nation's 83.8 million TV homes have VCRs. Ted Bates predicts that, by 1990, close to one-third of all homes will have video recorders and, by then, all the machines will have the speed-search capability to reduce a 60-second commercial break to six seconds.

"We're very concerned by that," said Kaplan. "When the machines reach that penetration level, we'll be paying for audiences that we're not really getting."

Nielsen's audience-rating surveys can monitor when a viewer records a program, not when it's played back. "In the next few years, we'll have to work with Nielsen to ascertain the percentage of viewers who have taped the program and actually watched (the commercials), since most of the recording viewers will be zapping," said Kaplan.

"Zapping" is the industry term describing viewers who tune out on commercials by switching channels or by skipping ahead on tape.

Nielsen recently found that, in any given commercial minute, 2.1 percent of all TV homes switched, 3 percent of homes with pay-cable switched, 3.6 percent of homes with remote-control devices switched and 4.5 percent of homes with pay-cable and remote control switched.

The Television Audience Assessment Report, released last spring, said 15 percent of all TV viewers regularly changed channels during commercials, and that figure went up to 40 percent in homes with pay cable. Network researchers, however, feel this report is loaded with socially desirable responses.

Whatever the numbers, there is widespread concern that audiences are finding new ways to ignore commercial messages.
