Clinton wins with NAFTA

Senate gives final approval to trade pact

■ 61-38 roll call gives president great triumph of first year in office.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — On a strong bipartisan vote, the Senate gave final approval to the North American Free Trade Agreement on Saturday, handing President Clinton one of the sweetest triumphs of his first year in office.

The 61-38 roll call came on the heels of Wednesday night's 234-200 vote in the House, and capped a months-long debate over America's role in a global economy heading into the 21st century. The agreement would create the world's largest free trade zone among the United States, Mexico and Canada.

Final approval came as Clinton was attending a trade conference with leaders of Asian nations in Seattle. In his weekly radio address, taped before the Senate voted, he declared, "NAFTA is more than a trading bloc. It's a building block in our efforts to assert America's global leadership on behalf of American jobs and opportunity."

Clinton needed a fierce lobbying campaign to win approval in the House and didn't nail down a majority of the votes until the final day or two before the vote. Senate support was firmer, the maneuvering less intense, and the outcome never in doubt.

NAFTA won the support of 34 Republicans and 27 Democrats. There were 28 Democrats against, and 10 Republicans. Republicans also provided a majority of votes when it cleared the House.

Leaders of both political parties made strong speeches in support of the agreement in the closing moments of the debate.

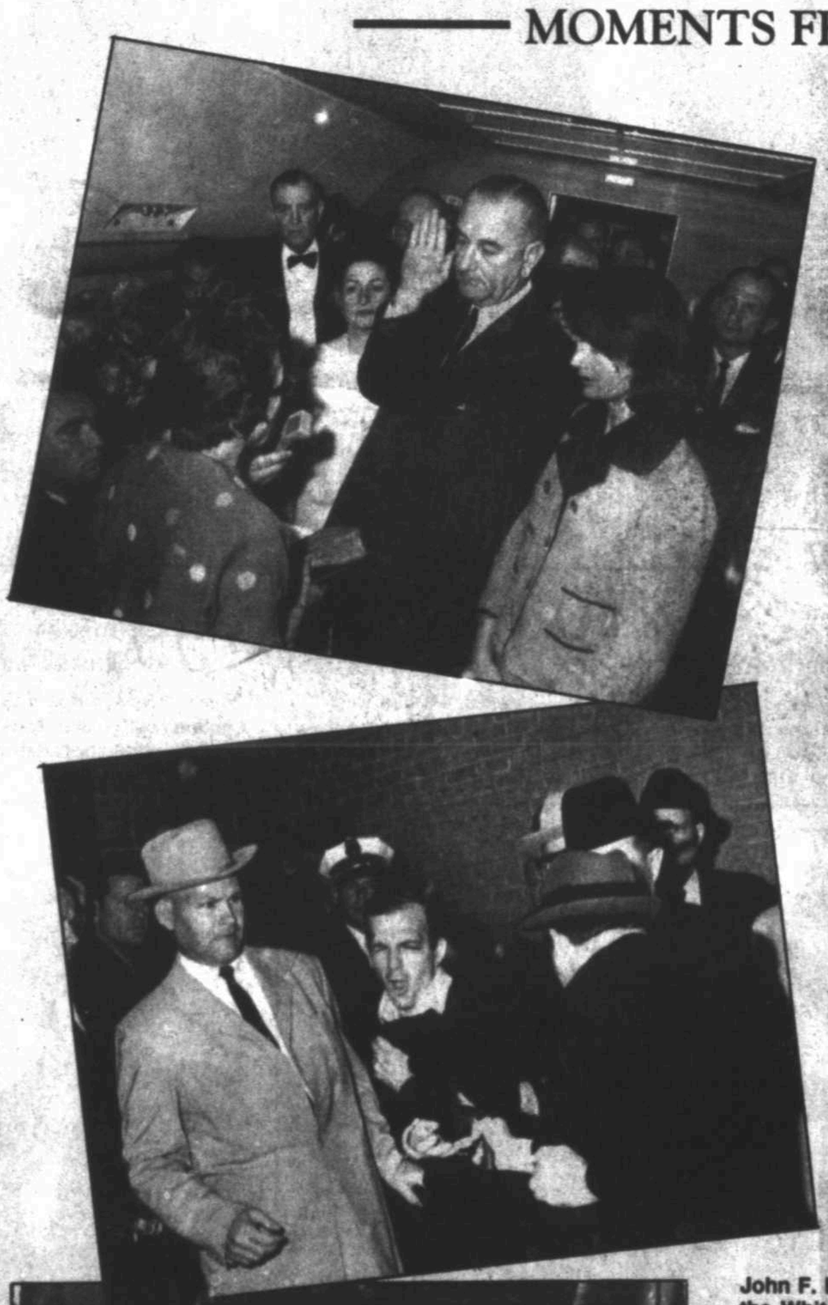

"With the passage of this agreement, Congress affirms the leadership role of the United States in this hemisphere and around the world," said Majority Leader George Mitchell, D-Maine.

GOP Leader Bob Dole of Kansas said NAFTA pre-

Time blurs Kennedy's image, but his dreams, hopes endure

HYANNISPORT, Mass. — Ed Cliggott has stood guard — literally and figuratively — over the Kennedy legacy.

As a policeman, he manned the entrance to the Kennedy compound. Then he became a teacher, answering President John F. Kennedy's call to public service.

But that was long ago. These days, Cliggott has trouble conveying JFK's impact to his young students.

"I've found it impossible to relate to my kids the feeling of those three years," Cliggot said. "The kids know the celebrity aspect of it. I don't think they understand the idealism."

Even in this community so long associated with John F. Kennedy, his image has begun to blur three decades after his presidency ended with an assassination that shocked and riveted the world.

"I've heard JFK was such a great president, but we weren't there," said Megan Ough, 16, a student in Cliggott's honors class in U.S. history. "To us, the way he died is the only thing that makes him different."

"When a president gets assassinated, you only hear about the good things," she said. "Then there are all the movies and the books and everything. It's kind of confusing."

Indeed, considerably more has been alleged about Kennedy in the last 30 years than was widely known during his lifetime, when by contemporary accounts he was perceived as far above the baser vices.

The re-examination more or less began with Chappaquiddick, which raised questions about

British need to do something positive for peace, Catholic politicians say

LONDON (AP) — Britain must make the next move toward peace if there's to be an end to IRA killing, Northern Ireland's two leading Roman Catholic politicians said Saturday.

John Hume, a nationalist who eschews violence, and Gerry Adams, president of the pro-IRA Sinn Fein, began secret talks in April to find a compromise acceptable to London and the outlawed Irish Republican Army.

Details of their proposals have not been released, but sources in both their parties have indicated that the IRA would end its campaign against British rule if London declares it has a long-term interest in withdrawing from Northern Ireland.

In a statement faxed to The Associated Press in London, the two politicians urged Britain to take advantage of their peace initiative.

"We naturally hope that the British government will respond positively and quickly to the clear opportunity for peace which this initiative provides," the statement said.

Sinn Fein, which supports the IRA's 23-year campaign against British rule, was barred last year from Britain's failed round-table talks involving the Irish government, Hume's Social Democratic and Labor Party and the three pro-British parties in Northern Ireland.

Hume has shuttled between London and Dublin trying to get support for the secret formula.

Both governments recently have shown an appetite for risk-taking, while claiming to be doing so independent of the Hume-Adams proposals.

A confidential Irish government report leaked Friday to a Dublin newspaper offered the clearest indication yet of Ireland's bargaining position and how it has been influenced by the Hume-Adams talks.

The Irish republic would amend its constitutional claim to Northern Ireland if Britain acknowledges the legitimacy of a united Ireland, according to the document as it appeared in the Irish Press.

Hume and Adams now appear determined to renew pressure on British Prime Minister John Major, who said this week Sinn Fein could join talks on Northern Ireland's political future only if it permanently abandons violence. The statement was seen as Major's bottom line on the Hume-Adams efforts.

The meetings between Hume and Adams, a former IRA commander, had been on hold several weeks awaiting developments in London and Dublin.

Predictably, the "united Ireland" agenda outlined in the Hume-Adams proposals and the Irish report has angered Northern Ireland's Protestant politicians, who oppose the IRA and Irish efforts to win influence in the province.

"The people in Northern Ireland haven't held out against IRA terrorism for a generation to have concessions made to them in order to stop their violence in 1993," said Peter Robinson, deputy leader of the Democratic Unionist Party, which opposes allowing Sinn Fein into talks under any circumstances.

"For some weeks it has been clear that diplomats in London and Dublin have been shamefully exploiting the natural desire for peace," agreed James Molyneaux, leader of the more moderate Ulster Unionists, who represent most Protestants.

More than 3,100 people from both sides have been killed in the sectarian violence.

Report: Agency took short cuts on blood tests

HAMBURG, Germany (AP) — A scandal over tainted blood spread Saturday with a report that German Red Cross officials had knowingly distributed blood suspected of being contaminated with the virus that causes hepatitis.

The report in Der Spiegel magazine said employees of the Red Cross' Mannheim blood donation center in 1991 manipulated ambiguous test results and shipped more than 100 lots of potentially contaminated blood to hospitals.

The report gave no indication anyone had been infected, but faulted the Red Cross for allowing the blood to remain in circulation after an internal report on the sloppy testing.

The Red Cross is one of many blood suppliers in Germany, where donations and preparation of blood products frequently are handled by private firms.

Hepatitis B antibodies in blood are a potential signpost of HIV infection because the two viruses frequently have affected the same population groups — homosexuals, drug users and hemophiliacs.

A report early last month that officials had covered up 373 reports of HIV infection through blood transfusions set off a national panic about Germany's blood supply.

Two companies were shut down after officials said they had distributed blood tainted with HIV, which causes AIDS. Millions of Germans who got blood transfusions over the past decade were urged to get blood tests.

Doctors' associations have accused the government of undue alarm over the threat of HIV infection through transfusions, which they put at one in a million.

Officials have confirmed six cases of AIDS stemming from blood products supplied by the two companies.

Nigeria sees setback for continent as leadership battles reform

LAGOS, Nigeria (AP) — Nigeria's descent into raw dictatorship is only the biggest of many shattered dreams on this continent, which is in danger of becoming a graveyard of stillborn democracies.

Swept by an unprecedented reform movement just a few years ago, African nations have seen almost every bright hope impeded or derailed by power-thirsty rulers or ethnic animosities.

Last week, the loudest thud in a forest of falling trees was heard in Nigeria, black Africa's richest, most populous, most powerful, and most intellectually and artistically accomplished nation.

Gen. Sani Abacha, a veteran of past coups, ousted a civilian government on Wednesday and then dissolved the elected National Assembly, 30 state governments, 529 municipal councils and the two national political parties, leaving only his tiny military junta in command.

People who see Nigeria as the standard-bearer for the continent believe the takeover will echo beyond its borders.

"Abacha's coup will send the wrong signal across Africa," said Clement Nwankwo, head of the Constitutional Rights Project here and a prominent opposition figure.

"Our fear is that the takeover could dampen the race to full democratization in Africa," he said Saturday. "If others in Africa think Nigeria, the continent's most populous nation, is not ready for civil rule, they could do as Abacha has done: Set the clock back."

In many places, they're already trying to do so:

■ The Congo's elected president, Pascal Lissouba, has become increasingly dictatorial as he battles an opposition movement that has unleashed masked guerrillas called "ninjas" on the streets of the capital. More than 200 people have died in the last five months.

■ In Zaire, soldiers last week started shooting merchants who refused to accept the new currency devised by dictator Mobutu Sese Seko. A pro-democracy government that Mobutu was pressured to form in 1990 has been stripped of power and now meets in the prime minister's back yard. More than 6,000 have died this year in ethnic clashes stemming from the political chaos.

■ In Togo, Gen. Gnassingbe Eyadema finally agreed to hold long-delayed elections and end 26 years of military rule. He won the Aug. 25 ballot, but only after opposition parties pulled out to protest rigged rules.

■ In the Central African Republic, military dictator Andre Kolingba finally agreed to hold elections in August, then, in a fit of pique, released all the nation's criminals when he lost.

Even in Senegal, Africa's oldest multiparty democracy, the leadership has turned increasingly authoritarian as it battles a rebel movement.

These setbacks to democracy do not even include the wars in Liberia, Burundi, Rwanda and Angola, where free and fair government remains only a distant dream.

Sierra Leone, riven by rebellion and run by young soldiers, said Saturday it has come up with a timetable for democracy, but wouldn't say yet what it was.

Last month, the London-based International Institute for Strategic Studies said sub-Saharan Africa was the world's most troubled region during the past year, ticking off the woes in Zambia, Zaire, Chad, Kenya, Mali, Mozambique, Rwanda, Somalia and South Africa.

The bleak outlook now is a far cry from the optimism of 1989-90, with the end of the Cold War. The superpowers no longer had to compete to woo dictators with lavish hotels or superhighways that didn't go anywhere.

Instead, Western governments and long-suppressed indigenous democracy movements pressured the rulers to reform, and most countries took tentative steps toward free societies.

The first crowning success was the agreement that ended the fighting by Soviet- and U.S.-backed factions in Angola. But when free elections finally were held, the losers went back to the battlefield and the war resumed.

Nigeria, though under military rule for a decade, had at least established a framework of democratic institutions. The nation had just voted for a president on June 12 when Abacha's predecessor said he was voiding the results.

Report: Cuban economic future appears grim

MIAMI (NYT) — A new report on Cuba paints a grim picture of the island's future, saying that attempts at economic reform now underway will probably lead to civil strife before the end of the decade.

The report, which was commissioned by the State Department, says President Fidel Castro and Cuba's Communist Party leadership are attempting limited free-market reforms modeled after those undertaken in China. It concludes, however, that a number of factors, from Castro's highly centralized rule to a reluctance by the Communist leadership to unleash market forces "will deny Cuba the economic benefits of the China scenario."

The 674-page report, titled "Transition in Cuba, New Challenges for U.S. Policy," is the product of nearly two years of work by a team of 17 academics, and was produced under the supervision of Lisandro Perez, a specialist in Cuban affairs at Florida International University in Miami.

Cuba's economy has stumbled badly since the demise of the former Soviet Union two years ago, shrinking more than half by some estimates. Hoping to arrest that decline, Havana has accelerated the pace of its own economic reforms, allowing citizens to form small private businesses, legally possess foreign currency and form their own agricultural cooperatives.

"Cuba's future will be grim, no matter what is the name of its ruler or the form of its political regime," the report says. "The most optimistic conclusions set the date for an appreciably more liberal, more democratic, and more prosperous Cuba no sooner than the beginning of the millennium."

In what the report describes as the two most likely scenarios for Cuba's immediate future, the island's leadership, unwilling to undertake bolder political and economic reforms for fear they would threaten their hold on power, will attempt to muddle through the present crisis, tinkering around the edges of a collapsing system.

In the first scenario, the government faces a challenge, such as a coup attempt or food riots, perhaps as early as next year, and is able to survive.

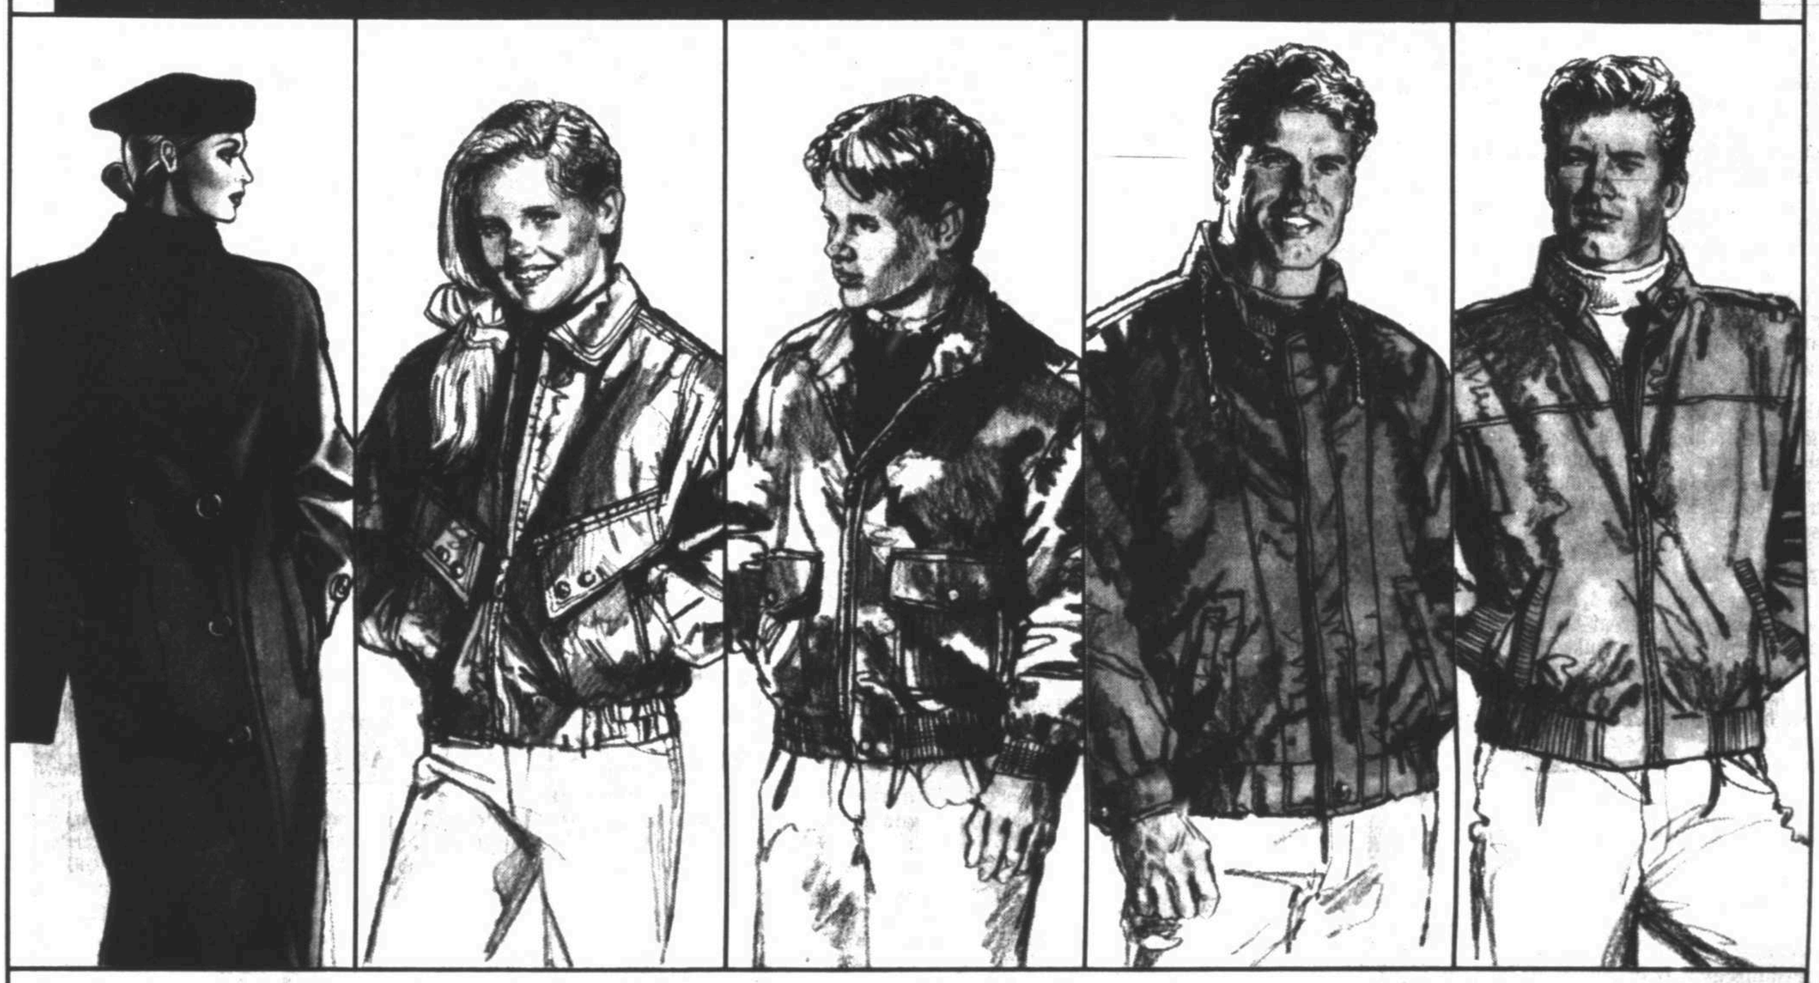

The repressive measures needed to put down the challenge, however, spark civil conflict that quickly draws the involvement of the large Cuban American community of southern Florida. As the strife spreads, the report says, the United States may feel obliged to become militarily involved to help end the crisis and remove the Castro government.

Under the second scenario, the Castro government is able to hang on until late in the decade, but at the cost of continued economic deterioration and social decay. When challenged domestically, what would by then be a much weaker government collapses, much as happened in some of the countries of Eastern Europe during the fall of Communism there.

"All the evidence available to us suggests that the willingness to undertake bold reforms is lacking," said Jorge Dominguez, a Harvard University professor who directed the political analyses in the report. "You have the possibility of a riot over food or an immigration crisis some time in the near future, or things could drag on for a while until the economy is gone, there is no more respect for the law and things just begin to collapse."

Another scenario, considered less likely but also discussed in the report, includes an attempt by Cuba's Communist Party to follow the example of the ruling party of Mexico, which has opened the country's economy and allows a limited form of political pluralism, manipulating the system, however, to retain control.

Then there were accounts of affairs with Marilyn Monroe and Judith Exner, said to have been the mistress of mobster Sam Giancana as well. And tell-alls about Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis, once the sainted queen of Camelot.

Others asked: Did someone ghost-write Kennedy's Pulitzer Prize-winning book "Profiles in Courage"? Did the Kennedy administration disguise a lackluster performance behind brilliant public relations?

A rape charge against Kennedy's nephew, William Kennedy Smith, further strained the family's esteem though he was acquitted.

Time, too, has dimmed the glow of Camelot.

Larry Newman, a friend and neighbor of the Kennedys, said the buses that still clog the narrow streets of picturesque Hyannisport bear older people or foreign tourists — not young Americans — who hope to glimpse the famous compound. They get only a view of the fence that surrounds the three main houses and the rolling lawn that fronts the harbor.

"Most of the young people today really have no idea who he was or what he was about, because it's a long time ago," said Newman. "They don't know what happened the day before yesterday, never mind 30 years ago."

"Between his assassination and Bobby's assassination and the war in Vietnam, America has changed completely," Newman said. "We're a great deal more cynical."

Perhaps the greatest evidence of the alarm about preserving Kennedy's memory is in Boston's JFK museum, which has been revamped to make its subject relevant to people who do not remember Kennedy. Among the changes: the addition of interactive computers, 25 new videos and a replica of "Main Street, 1960," along which JFK might have campaigned.

Kennedy's daughter, Caroline, noted when the new museum was opened last month that most of its visitors were not yet born when he was president.

But those who are old enough — and especially, those who knew him — have no need for such a reminder.

"My recollection of him is of a charming, intelligent and extremely effective man, who had one qualification: He was always interesting," said John Kenneth Galbraith, an economist and JFK adviser. "You never came away from Kennedy without some fresh insight. Kennedy had a wonderful capacity to say what most people merely think."

As for the dark histories of the Kennedy years: "I take it for granted that if somebody is writing another book about Kennedy, they have to say or invent something different," Galbraith said.

Others, less noted, feel the same way.

"I like to believe the good in people and I try to forget the bad," said 63-year-old Pauline Johnson, a retiree, who visited a dry and otherwise deserted JFK memorial fountain near Hyannisport this month.

"I get a little upset when I start to see these books," said Nalbert Teron, a retired firefighter browsing through a Kennedy exhibit that was opened last year in Hyannis by the Chamber of Commerce.

"Why now? Why 30 years later do they have to come out with this stuff? If you take all the things he was accused of doing, the man would have had to be 150 years old," he said, standing amid the JFK coffee mugs, tote bags and refrigerator magnets in the Hyannis exhibition's gift shop.

"The point is," he said, "that people don't forget him."

TRADE: Senate passes NAFTA, gives Clinton victory

sented a stark choice to the nation: "We can choose to be a leader in today's global ecomoy ... or we can pass the baton of leadership to Japan and to Europe, and resign ourselves to a future as an economic also-ran."

Sen. Don Riegle, D-Mich., led the outnumbered opposition.

"NAFTA is the ultimate expression of trickle-down economics," he said, adding that President Bush had left the "poison cup" of the agreement in the Oval Office, and Clinton decided to drink it.

Organized labor has strongly fought the agreement, claiming it will cost thousands of workers their jobs, but two Democrats with career-long ties to organized labor embraced NAFTA shortly before the vote.

The accord would affect virtually every American industry, phasing out tariffs over a 15-year period. Supporters say it would open a vast new market in Mexico to American goods. Opponents say Mexico, with its cheap labor costs and lax environmental standards, would become a magnet for American factories.

In separate speeches, Sens. Edward M. Kennedy of Massachusetts and Tom Harkin of Iowa backed the agreement with words of concern for its impact on American wage earners.

"What do we say to all those workers who will lose their jobs because of NAFTA?" asked Kennedy, among labor's staunchest allies in the Senate. "It is no comfort to them that others — some faceless others — will gain jobs in larger numbers."

Harkin, whose unsuccessful bid for the 1992 Democratic presidential nomination was fueled by labor support, said his decision was a close one — "perhaps 51 percent in favor and 49 percent against."

The vote effectively wrapped up the Senate's business for the year. The House was expected to conclude its work by Tuesday. In other developments:

—The Senate resurrected legislation to impose a five-day waiting period on handgun purchases and approved it on a vote of 63-36. The waiting period would end after four years, although the attorney general is granted authority to extend that for an additional 12 months. Gun control opponents dropped their insistence that the measure preempt stiffer rules in place in some states and local governments.

— The Senate voted 54-45 for a $18.3 billion bill to finish the cleanup of failed savings and loan institutions. House approval was slated for Monday. The Senate approved compromise legislation to extend unemployment benefits for those who have exhausted them. The measure was sent to the House after lawmakers rejected, 63-36, an attempt by Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, to insert a provision to lock in cuts in the federal work force that President Clinton favors. The vote on final Senate passage was 79-20.

— A bill to mandate a five-day waiting period for handgun purchases was the subject of intense closed-door negotiations in search of a compromise that would end a Republican filibuster. The bill was blocked Friday by lawmakers demanding that the five-day requirement preempt stiffer rules in force in some state and local government jurisdictions.

— The Senate Ethics Committee said there was "no credible evidence" that Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, violated any rules or laws in contacts between his office and representatives of the Bank of Credit and Commerce International. Hatch had requested the review after questions were raised.

— The House debated legislation to make the District of Columbia the 51st state. The measure was widely expected to fail in a vote scheduled for Sunday.

It wasn't all work, though. Cheers erupted in both parties' private cloakrooms at the rear of the Senate chamber late in the afternoon. Lawmakers gathered around their televisions were cheering the final few plays of a close college football game pitting Notre Dame against Boston College.

As lawmakers prepared to depart for the year-end break, next year's issues were coming into clearer focus. The Clinton administration's plan to overhaul the nation's health care system was expected to be formally introduced by day's end. Twenty-two Senate Republicans unveiled a plan to remake the nation's welfare system.

Vision of girl in window haunts neighbors

BANGOR, Maine (AP) — Neighbors used to see 5-year-old Tavielle Kigas watching them from her window. Her mother wouldn't let her go out and play.

One day, her face disappeared. Police found her body inside her apartment last week. Her mother said she starved Tavielle to death because the child was "evil."

The neighbors, haunted by the image of the girl at the window, buried Tavielle on Thursday. They are trying to cope with the senselessness of a young girl's death and the lost opportunities to intervene in a troubled family's life.

"Every day we have to look at that window," said Laurie Stratton, who lives next door in the tidy housing development. "It's hard to eat. It's hard to sleep."

Tonia Kigas, 28, is in jail charged with murder. Police have been unable to locate the father, Todd Kigas, who is wanted for arrest on an unrelated theft charge. The couple were divorced in July.

Ms. Kigas told police she believed her daughter died Nov. 12 because that's when the screams stopped, a police affidavit said.

The affidavit said Ms. Kigas began withholding food and water a month ago because her daughter was "evil." She said she didn't kill Tavielle, but just "let it happen."

The affidavit indicates that Ms. Kigas simply turned up the radio when the little girl screamed, once for a period of more than 48 hours, although her neighbors say they didn't hear anything. Ms. Kigas dialed 911 on Monday.

Problems began last fall, when neighbors said that Ms. Kigas accused them of being devil worshipers following a meeting with the Bangor Housing Authority.

Elsie Coffey, executive director of the housing authority, said Saturday that she recalled meeting with Ms. Kigas and some neighbors, but she didn't remember any charges of satanism.

"She (Ms. Kigas) did not say they were worshiping the devil. She said they were making strange noises," Coffey said.

Coffey also denied Stratton's claim that she had threatened to evict them if they complained again.

In February, police said the Department of Human Services was alerted after a complaint that Ms. Kigas had left Tavielle home alone.

Strikers take large, but effective gamble

NEW YORK (AP) — If this were a football game, the big bruisers on the American Airlines squad might be scratching their heads at half time, wondering how a bunch of puny flight attendants could outrun, outpass and out-think them.

As the surprisingly effective strike against one of the nation's largest and historically most reliable airlines went through the weekend, it was apparent that American's management had badly misjudged the walkout's impact.

Most passengers whose travel plans were disrupted seemed to be directing their outrage at the airline, not the strikers, based on anecdotal evidence from airports around the country.

American's initial inability or refusal to provide accurate information to the flying public provoked an extraordinary rebuke from the Transportation Department, which told the airline to clean up its act.

"Passengers expect a big company like American Airlines to act in a much more professional and organized manner for this eventuality," said Herb Kransdorf, a labor activist in Chicago who walked with pickets at O'Hare International on Saturday, the third day of the planned 11-day walkout. "It seemed like they were caught with their pants down."

Just a week ago, American seemed to regard the strike threat as a bluff. From outward appearances it had made few contingency plans for training sufficient numbers of replacements.

■ Analysis

Perhaps coincidentally, it even was running television advertisements showing how an American ticket agent had helped a businessman whose travel plans were disrupted find an alternate flight home.

"They miscalculated egregiously," said Neil N. Bernstein, a labor arbitrator and labor law professor at Washington University in St. Louis.

"Where we are now? It's half time, and the flight attendants are ahead," Bernstein said. "American's going to have to come up with some new and different tactic."

It was also clear that the strike by the flight attendants reflected some perceptive thinking by the union, beyond just sabotaging travel through the Thanksgiving holiday, historically the busiest time for U.S. airlines.

The strikers have said they intend to return to work unconditionally after 11 days, just before the airline can train enough recruits to replace them.

Assuming the airline doesn't soften its contract position, the flight attendants could proclaim they will strike again — without specifying when. A flying public already bruised by one acute episode of strike-bound travel travails could get the message and simply avoid American flights.

Historic presidential election campaign starts in El Salvador

By Marcos Aleman
Associated Press

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador — El Salvador's first peacetime presidential campaign in 17 years opened Saturday with firecrackers, caravans and speeches.

The March 1994 elections are supposed to complete the peace process begun in 1992, when the U.S.-backed government and leftist rebels agreed to end a 12-year civil war in which 75,000 people died.

Former members of the Farabundo Marti National Liberation Front, or FMLN, began their campaign in several parts of the country with firecrackers and car caravans decked with the red flag of the former guerrilla movement.

"On this day, the ex-guerrilla and popular movement declares its formal entry into its first great electoral campaign," said Gerson Martinez, a member of the former rebel directorate.

The governing National Republican Alliance Party, known as ARENA, began its campaign with a $60-a-head dinner at an exclusive hotel in San Salvador, as well as a mass meeting in Izalco, about 60 miles west of the capital.

Nine parties and coalitions are contesting the March 20 election for president, vice president, 84 congressional seats and 262 municipal councils. Some 2.4 million Salvadorans are eligible to vote.

The campaign has been darkened by the recent assassinations of six FMLN members, including two senior officials, as well as three ARENA activists.

About 25 former guerrillas have been murdered since the peace treaty, most in the style adopted by shadowy death squads linked to the military.

"The peace process is a delicate one and if violence starts again here it can have some negative consequences," said Alexander Watson, assistant U.S. secretary of state, during a visit to the country this month.

"It is obvious that one of the objectives of the death squads was to drive us away, but we're not going to give them the pleasure," said Shafik Handal, a former FMLN commander running for mayor of San Salvador.

Polls show an early advantage for the ARENA presidential candidate, San Salvador Mayor Armando Calderon Sol, despite newly declassified CIA documents that said a 1981 political kidnapping was plotted in his home.

El Salvador's last peacetime election occurred in 1977, when Gen. Carlos Humberto Romero was elected. He was toppled in a 1979 coup, and the leftists launched their civil war a year later.

A civilian, Jose Napoleon Duarte, was elected president during the war in 1984. The last civilian elected in peacetime was Arturo Araujo in 1931. He was overthrown a few months later, beginning 60 years of dictatorship, war and military rule.

Patriot missile's success a myth, officials say

WASHINGTON (NYT) — Contradicting claims by the U.S. Army, Israeli officials say that Patriot missiles deployed to defend Israel from attacks by Iraqi Scud missile attacks in the Persian Gulf war intercepted next to none of the Scuds.

The U.S. Army has said that its Patriots intercepted about 40 percent of the Scud missiles that Iraq fired at Israel during the war in 1991. That is a far more modest estimate than the one originally given by the military and by the Bush administration. In the gulf war, President George Bush once said that the Patriot's record was nearly perfect.

But Moshe Arens, who was Israel's defense mInister in the gulf war; Gen. Dan Shomron, who was chief of staff of the Israel Defense Force during the war, and Haim Asa, a member of an Israeli technical team that worked with the Patriot missile during the war, say that one or possiblly none of the Scuds was intercepted by the Patriots.

They appeared in a documentary scheduled to be aired Saturday on Israel television. An advance copy of interviews with the three was made available to The New York Times.

In the documentary, Shomron described accounts of the Patriot's success as "a myth;" Asa called them "a joke."

Arens, asked how many Scuds were intercepted by Patriots, said that "the number is minuscule and is in fact meaningless." All concurred with a 1991 report by the Israeli air force concluding that "there is no evidence of even a single successful intercept" although there is "circumstantial evidence for one possible intercept."

Several nations are interested in acquiring missile defense systems like the Patriot. Israel is developing a competing system, the Arrow, with assistance from the United States; Shomron heads the state-owned weapons complex.

Asked about the striking discrepancy between United States and Israeli accounts of the Patriot's performance, Arens said, "I can understand if somebody wants to sell his product."

In interviews, senior executives of Raytheon Co. of Lexington, Mass., the builder of the Patriot, said that differences over what constituted an "intercept" accounted for the discrepancy.

"The numbers of Scuds successfully intercepted are small in any case and very small changes in criteria can swing the results from one extreme to another," said Robert M. Stein, a Raytheon vice president.

By the Army's definition, an intercept is not just a direct hit by a Patriot. It includes detonations that divert tumbling, disintegrating Scud missiles from their presumed targets.

The Patriot system deployed during the gulf war was an anti-aircraft system built to defend a military base, not to defend a sprawling city from missiles. Technicians from the Israel armed forces and Raytheon frantically rewrote its software as the Scuds rained down, said Stephen R. Stanvick, a Raytheon missile systems manager.

"Clearly, if you look at the Israeli statistics, we didn't do well," Stanvick said. "Sixty percent of the incoming missiles did do damage," but Israeli morale rose after the Patriot was deployed, he said.

Dave Harris, a spokesman for the U.S. Army, said the Patriot did what it was designed to do. .

"The Army said, build me a weapons system that can defend an area like an airfield," he said. "Patriot by that definition is an absolute success and by the Israeli definition it's a total waste."

Defense experts outside the government say there were 16 engagements between Iraqi Scuds and Patriots in the night sky over Israel in January and February 1991.

If that number were correct, the Army would be claiming seven successful intercepts and nine failures. Given the Israeli officials' contention, the debate thus centers on six engagements that were poorly recorded on night-time videotapes at distances of five miles or more.

"There is no way to be sure in a close encounter whether the Patriot got it or missed it," said Peter D. Zimmerman, a physicist at the Center for Strategic and International Studies who has studied the evidence. "The data are lousy."

3 former Soviet republics to form joint military force

TALLINN, Estonia (AP) — The three former Soviet Baltic republics plan to form a joint battalion that will be trained primarily to take part in U.N. peacekeeping operations.

Chief commanders from Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania made the announcement Saturday at the end of a two-day military summit.

"We are all in total agreement about closer cooperation," said Aleksander Einseln, a retired American colonel who heads Estonia's military. "These are just the first steps."

The 650-man, all-Baltic battalion is to be created next year. A joint command will be established and a series of exercises will be held next year.

In the nearly two years since the Soviet Union broke up, the three small states have struggled to set up armies of their own, but have been plagued by shortages of money, weapons and even uniforms.

The Baltic armies number about 10,000 men. At full strength, they will have between 40,000 and 50,000 soldiers, Baltic military officials said.

The Baltic commanders, in a joint statement, said they hoped the formation of the battalion would be "a step toward eventual full partnership in NATO."

In a further sign of their Western orientation, the Baltic states have made English the working language of the common force.

Pakistan unwilling to give up nuclear weapons program, prime minister says

KARACHI, Pakistan (AP) — Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto vowed Saturday that Pakistan would not give up its nuclear weapons program despite pressure from Washington.

She also said the nuclear arms race with India can only be settled through regional negotiations on nuclear non-proliferation, which India has rejected.

"We have offered talks with India and we are prepared to talk with India, but it should be a regional solution," Ms. Bhutto said at a news conference in her hometown of Karachi, Pakistan's largest city and the industrial heart of the country.

"Rolling back the nuclear program is not feasible. It will not serve the purpose of nuclear nonproliferation in the region," said Ms. Bhutto.

Both Pakistan and India are believed to have the ability to make nuclear weapons.

Their nuclear capabilities have Western countries, including the United States, concerned because the two neighbors have gone to war three times since their independence in 1947.

They came close to fighting a fourth war over Kashmir that many feared could escalate into a nuclear confrontation in the spring of 1990.

Both India and Pakistan claim sovereignty over the Himalayan state, although Britain divided it between the two nations when the subcontinent was partitioned at independence.

"The nuclear program is linked with the Jammu and Kashmir issue," Ms. Bhutto said. "There cannot be peace in the region without the peaceful resolution of the Kashmir issue."

Pakistan has been pushing for a plebiscite in Kashmir to allow Kashmiris to decide whether they want to join Islamic Pakistan or Hindu India. Indian-held Kashmir is India's only Muslim-dominated state.

The United States cut off all aid to Pakistan in September 1990 because of its nuclear program. But Ms. Bhutto said Pakistan had not broken the letter of the U.S. law, saying Pakistan had the components for a bomb but had not built one.

Ms. Bhutto also accused Washington of discriminating against Pakistan by imposing sanctions against Islamabad and not New Delhi.

Police round up Kurd protesters

PARIS (AP) — Kurds angered by France's crackdown on anti-Turkish militants protested outside the Palace of Justice on Saturday, but police in Paris quickly rounded them up for identity checks, authorities said.

It was the second day of demonstrations by ethnic Kurds after more than 100 Kurds allegedly linked to separatist guerrillas in Turkey were jailed in a nationwide sweep.

In other protests:

■ About 150 Kurds occupied the cathedral in Strasbourg, on the German border, for two hours.

■ In Bonn, more than 20,000 Kurds marched to protest raids of Kurdish homes and cultural centers ordered by the German government in response to attacks on Nov. 4 against Turkish businesses and consulates in Europe.

A separatist insurgency in southeastern Turkey led by the Kurdistan Workers' Party has killed thousands of people in Turkey over the past decade.

In the latest incident, 10 Turkish soldiers and 21 guerrillas were reported killed overnight after Kurdish separatists based in northern Iraq crossed into Turkey and attacked the government troops, officials in Ankara said.

The Kurdistan Workers' Party is blamed for the Nov. 4 attacks across Europe, and German Interior Minister Manfred Kanther told the Welt am Sonntag newspaper he may ban the party from Germany.

In Paris, 25 Kurds arrested Thursday remained in detention Saturday. Some were found with Kurdistan Workers' Party documents, or accounting books that may deal with a ring trying to extort money for the party, investigators said.

More than 130 Kurdish protesters gathered outside the Palace of Justice to demand the release of the detainees.

By midafternoon, elite national police moved in and arrested the demonstrators. They were taken to several police stations, where their papers were checked, said officials, speaking on customary condition of anonymity.

The rally was supported by the Kurdistan Committee, a group described as close to the Kurdistan Workers' Party.

On Friday, about 200 Kurdish protesters filled the Notre Dame cathedral, near the Palace of Justice, and 100 staged a sit-in at the state-owned France 3 TV station in Marseille.

Since coming to power in April, the conservative government has toughened immigration laws, stepped up identity checks and borne down on foreigners involved in militant groups.

About 60,000 Kurds and 400,000 Turks live in France. About 400,000 Kurds and 1.5 million Turks live in Germany.

Red Cross seeks prisoner swap before winter's rage intensifies

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — Efforts intensified Saturday to arrange the release of at least 6,500 prisoners of war in Bosnia before harsh winter weather worsens already grim conditions.

The International Committee of the Red Cross, which is negotiating for a mass release as soon as possible, said all three of the warring sides are suspected of mistreating POWs.

The Red Cross president, Cornelio Sommaruga, was in the Bosnian Serb headquarters in Pale on Saturday as part of a swing through Bosnia to meet leaders of all sides.

Red Cross spokesman Pierre Gauthier said the Swiss-based organization had documented 6,500 POWs in Bosnia — 4,500 held by Croats and about 1,000 each held by the Serbs and the Muslim-led Bosnian government.

He said most were held in prisons where food, heating and medical care were substandard.

"It's impossible to imagine that these people would stay in jail this winter," he told reporters in Sarajevo.

Their plight mirrors that of countless other Bosnians, potential victims of a humanitarian aid crisis. The United Nations estimates that nearly 3 million people will need outside aid to survive this winter.

An agreement Thursday in Geneva by leaders of the three Bosnian factions promised to allow unfettered access to U.N. aid convoys. They have been blocked intermittently for months by intransigent local commanders and fighting, particularly in central Bosnia.

The agreement also pledged to allow the U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees to determine what constituted humanitarian aid. Bosnian Serb forces repeatedly have blocked winter supplies such as blankets and plastic sheeting from reaching eastern Muslim enclaves such as Srebrenica, Zepa and Gorazde.

Peter Kessler, a U.N. relief spokesman in the Croatian capital, Zagreb, said Bosnian Serbs refused again Saturday to let a 26-truck convoy reach Gorazde, which has not received outside aid in two weeks. Serbs also prevented an aid convoy from reaching Tuzla, he said.

U.N. Secretary-General Boutros Boutros-Ghali on Friday authorized the resumption of aid convoys in central Bosnia, which were suspended Oct. 26 after a Danish truck driver was killed by gunfire blamed on Bosnian government troops.

Kessler said he expected the first central Bosnia convoy to leave for Zenica on Tuesday.

With the interruption of land convoys, Sarajevo has been dependent on the international airlift for its food supplies. But heavy snow on Saturday prevented all but two planes to land.

The United Nations tries to get in 15 to 20 aid flights a day to the Bosnian capital, but even that is not enough to adequately feed the city's 380,000 residents.

Although the Red Cross never discloses details of its findings about prison camps, Gauthier said none of the three sides could claim a faultless record. One side was most prone to using POWs as slave labor on front lines, another was responsible for the most overall killings of POWs and the third was responsible for the most killings of POWs in a single incident.

Haitians pull together for 1st time since coup to clean up city

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — It's a truce of sorts: Haitians working together to clean up their capital city.

Haitians have put aside their political differences for four days to pick up some of the estimated 22,000 tons of garbage that has accumulated since President Jean-Bertrand Aristide was ousted in a September 1991 military coup.

It has blocked cars from some city streets and gathered in giant heaps in front of schools and hospitals.

Workers hope the effort, which began Thursday, will mean the removal of more than half of the accumulated waste by Sunday night.

"For the first time since the coup, all sectors of the community, in spite of their cleavages, are working together for the common good," said Reginald Boulos, director of the U.S. AID-funded Center for Development and Health and coordinator of the cleanup effort.

More than 1 million people live in Port-au-Prince, which has no sewage system. They generate between 1,200 and 1,500 tons of garbage a day.

The cleanup effort involves the government, which is supplying garbage trucks, and the army, which is providing security and controlling traffic. The fire department will spray disinfectant in the market zones.

Private construction companies are providing trucks and drivers. A private foundation and businesses have contributed $25,000. Hundreds of volunteer workers have joined in the effort.

The downtown area, where most of the garbage accumulates, will be cleaned entirely. Suburban Carrefour and Petionville will be tackled later.

Boulos will also lead a three-month U.S. AID-funded cleanup program which will be launched Wednesday, with government support. That program will ensure "permanent and regular" cleaning, Boulos said.

"One clean-up operation cannot solve the problem," he said, adding that even if 30 to 40 percent of the garbage is bio-degradable, similar heaps will be back on the street within a month.

Residents recall the last time their city was clean — during the weeks surrounding Aristide's Feb. 7, 1991 inauguration, when hundreds of volunteers swept

U.N. releases nine detainees

MOGADISHU, Somalia (AP) — The United Nations released nine Somali detainees Saturday, the first freed since a Security Council resolution suggested that all the detainees would be freed.

The nine were "low-level" members of Somali strongman Gen. Mohamed Farrah Aidid's Somali National Alliance faction, and were released for lack of evidence, said Dave Stockwell, the U.N. military spokesman.

The Security Council voted Tuesday to lift an arrest warrant against Aidid and to set up a committee to investigate a June 5 attack in which 24 Pakistani soldiers were killed. Until now, the attack had been blamed on Aidid.

Stockwell told reporters 23 more of Aidid's supporters remained behind bars, three in a secret location and the rest in a U.N. detention center in Mogadishu. The three include Osman Hasan Aly, or Osman Ato, Aidid's largest financier, and his foreign adviser Mohammed Hasan Awale.

The detainees have not had family visits or contact with outsiders except for Internatioanl Red Cross officials, Stockwell said. Reporters have so far not had access to the suspects.

The men were all arrested in connection with the killing of the Pakistani peacekeepers, and subsequent hostile acts against U.N. and American forces, including a series of vehicle explosions. Since June 5, more than 75 international peacekeepers have died, including at least 23 Americans.

Meanwhile, a U.N. peacekeeper from the United Arab Emirates reportedly drowned as he was swimming in waters off Mogadishu, said Stockwell.

It was not clear why he drowned, but the Indian Ocean around the Somali capital is known to be shark-infested and there have been a number of similar accidents. The United Nations is planning to install shark nets early next week.

Today, most Americans reject Warren Commission conclusion

By Mike Feinsilber
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — The mob did it. Fidel Castro did it. The KGB did it. The right wing did it. The left wing did it. The government did it.

Thirty years after the murder of John F. Kennedy, most Americans think that someone other than Lee Harvey Oswald killed Kennedy. Or they think Oswald had helpers, never apprehended, in a plot that's never been investigated.

They reject the Warren Commission's conclusion that Oswald was a warped loner who acted alone, without the knowledge of anyone else.

If the Kennedy family itself accepts the commission's conclusion, why is it so widely doubted? Even Bill Clinton and Al Gore told reporters last year that they doubted the official version.

A week after the assassination, a Gallup Poll said only 29 percent of Americans believed that Oswald alone killed JFK. In a 1988 poll, only 13 percent thought Oswald was responsible.

And a poll conducted for The Associated Press earlier this month found that the majority of people still reject Oswald as the sole culprit. Fewer than 15 percent said he acted alone.

One reason for the skepticism is obvious: the case is so implausible.

Consider:

A 19-year-old former Marine defects to the Soviet Union at the height of the Cold War and marries a Russian woman. Three years after his defection, Soviet authorities allow him to return to this country. He drifts to Dallas and on the day that the president is to visit, he is able to sneak a rifle into his work place, overlooking the route of the presidential motorcade.

He fires three shots in short order, killing the president and wounding Texas Gov. John Connally. Then, despite the intense security that accompanies any president, he gets away from the murder scene on foot.

But he is arrested and jailed. Two days later, while being transferred from one jail to another, a nightclub owner with ties to the mob manages to get into the jail with a gun and to kill Oswald.

It seemed preposterous 30 years ago, it seems preposterous still. Small wonder that to millions of people it remains beyond belief.

And that's not all. The official commission created to investigate the murder made mistakes of its own, starting with the way it conducted the investigation.

Instead of hiring independent investigators, the Warren Commission depended on the work of the CIA and the FBI, the very agencies that some saw as part of the conspiracy.

And when the House Select Committee on Assassinations restudied the Kennedy case in 1979, it concluded that the slaying "probably" was the result of a plot. But having decided that, it disbanded. No government body followed up.

The writer of a recent best seller that finds fault with the Warren Commission's work but endorses its fundamental conclusion points to an additional factor to account for the skepticism.

Oswald never was put on trial. Because of that, said Gerald Posner, author of "Case Closed," the American adversarial system of justice — in which two sides lay their cases before a neutral judge or jury — was denied the opportunity to work.

Compare Oswald's fate to that of James Earl Ray, who was brought to court in the murder of Martin Luther King Jr. and pleaded guilty. Ray subsequently wrote a book asserting that he was part of a conspiracy.

"But we don't pay him much heed because Ray had his day in court," Posner said.

"Oswald never had that day. If he were sitting in jail today and saying there was a conspiracy, some people might listen to him, but it would not be the same," Posner said.

And beyond that, there have been scores of books making the case for one conspiracy or another. Until Posner came along, few people were making the radio talk show rounds arguing that Oswald alone was the villain.

Distrust of the government runs strong and feeds the skepticism, said Tulane University psychologist Fred Koenig.

"People believe in things that fit their world view," he said, "and conspiracy theories fit their world view that you can't trust the government." (His own view: "Oswald did it and that's that.")

The sense that a massive conspiracy and cover-up existed was reinforced for the millions who saw the 1991 Oliver Stone movie, "JFK." Its theme was that the military-industrial complex, fearful that Kennedy would withdraw from Vietnam and ruin business for the arms makers, hatched the plot.

Those who believe a conspiracy existed may not agree on the nature of the plot, but they find it ludicrous even to ask why people believe in conspiracy theories.

"The short answer is that they have reason to believe that," said David Wrone, a history professor who teaches a course on the Kennedy assassination (and who believes, "We don't know what happened to President Kennedy and no one in the government does either.")

Finally, there is this philosophical reason for people to grasp at conspiracy theories: The mind rebels at the thought that so enormous a crime could be committed by so puny a criminal.

3 decades after assassination, there's no real change to record

By John Diamond
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — In the two days after a rifle's crack shattered the festive tableau of a presidential motorcade, the anatomy of the Kennedy assassination emerged. And after 30 years of investigating, it remains essentially unchanged.

Extensive probing by government commissions, private sleuths, and experts in forensics, acoustics, metallurgy and the mob have added tremendous breadth to our understanding of the case.

But that vast record tells us surprisingly little that wasn't known in the frenzied 48 hours after the crime.

To the police and FBI, Lee Harvey Oswald appeared the lone shooter. They had his gun, his bullets, his palm prints, a few eyewitnesses who actually saw him fire the shots from his sixth-floor perch, and an open-and-shut case on his killing of Dallas Patrolman J.D. Tippit later that same day.

They also knew they had a potential conspiracy case on their hands. There were persistent claims of shots coming from the grassy knoll. There were Oswald's communist ties. And there was his murder at the hands of a shady Dallas nightclub owner named Jack Ruby with links to the mob.

Investigators swiftly developed the single-gunman portion of the case.

At 12:45 p.m. Dallas time, 15 minutes after the assassination, a Dallas Police dispatcher, using information provided by eyewitness Howard Brennan, broke into Channel One with the following alert: "At Elm and Houston, reported to be an unknown white male, approximately 30, slender build, height five feet 10 inches, 165 pounds."

In the next 65 minutes, police found the Mannlicher-Carcano bolt-action rifle, the three spent cartridges, and Oswald's palm print on a box by the sixth-floor window of the Texas School Book Depository. At about the same point police in Dealey Plaza learned that Oswald was the only depository employee missing from the building, patrolmen were closing in on Oswald in the Texas Theater after his slaying of Tippit.

Questions about a conspiracy developed with equal speed. Seconds after the assassination, a policeman in the motorcade ran his motorcycle onto the curb and ran up the grassy knoll looking for a shooter. An hour later, in a news conference at Parkland Hospital after the announcement of Kennedy's death, Dr. Malcolm Perry said the nonfatal wound in Kennedy's throat may have been the point of entry for the bullet. The remark raised questions about whether Kennedy was shot from the front and rear simultaneously.

The research conducted over the next three decades tended to do one of two things: support the single-gunman case by disproving various conspiracy allegations; or add tantalizing detail — but no solid scenario — to those pursuing the conspiracy case.

Here are some of the key developments:

— Sept. 24, 1964: The Warren Commission releases its report arguing that Oswald acted alone. It taps extensive physical, documentary, and eyewitness evidence, but finds no clear motive for the killer.

— 1966: Publication of the first major critiques of the Warren Report. "Whitewash" by Harold Weisberg, "Rush to Judgement" by Mark Lane, and "Inquest" by Edward Jay Epstein challenge the theory that a single bullet went through Kennedy's neck and into Texas Gov. John Connally, and the validity of other evidence.

— March 7, 1967: Jack Anderson column reveals a CIA-mob plot to kill Cuban leader Fidel Castro and raises speculation that Castro ordered Oswald, a Cuban sympathizer, to kill JFK.

— 1968: A panel appointed by Attorney General Ramsey Clark concludes JFK was shot from behind. It is first of several forensic panels that will support the original autopsy.

— 1975: A House subcommittee reports that the FBI destroyed a note from Oswald to a Dallas agent delivered weeks before the assassination, raising questions about whether the agency concealed other information.

— March 1975: Geraldo Rivera airs the Zapruder film for first time on national television. The apparent movement of president's head to the left stirs conspiracy theories.

— 1976: Dr. Luis Alvarez, a Nobel Prize-winning physicist, publishes a study explaining how a shot from the rear could account for Kennedy's head movement to the left.

— 1978: Dan Moldea publishes "The Hoffa Wars" the first book to lay out the theory that Teamsters boss Jimmy Hoffa recruited mobsters Carlos Marcello and Santos Trafficante to arrange the assassination.

— 1979: The House Select Committee on Assassinations supports much of Warren Report but says acoustical evidence from a dictabelt tape indicates a second gunman on the grassy knoll fired at Kennedy and missed. Its report says the mob had "means, motive and opportunity" to execute plot.

— Oct. 4, 1981: Oswald's body is exhumed and through dental records, confirmed to be Oswald, laying to rest theories of a double or an imposter.

— 1982: A panel of 12 scientists headed by Harvard Professor Norman Ramsey finds the acoustical evidence cited by the House select committee "seriously flawed." The dictabelt contains "cross talk" indicating that the pulses examined by the House were not gunshots.

— February 1992: Researchers examining Dallas Police files find that "three tramps," long thought to have been conspirators involved in the assassination, had been arrested and were, in fact, tramps who were sleeping in a box car at the time of the slaying.

— 1992: Frank Ragano, attorney who had represented Hoffa, says that Hoffa ordered JFK killed and that he conveyed the order to Marcello and Trafficante. Some question Ragano's veracity and accuse him of trying to pump up sales of a book.

— August 1992: The Russian newspaper Izvestia reports that the Soviet KGB never recruited Oswald to be an agent or to assassinate Kennedy during the period beginning in Oct. 1959 when Oswald lived in the Soviet Union.

— August 1993: Oswald's CIA file made public at National Archives; material provides new detail on his mental condition and violent tendencies.

Senate passes Brady bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — After a day of tense, private negotiations, the Senate Saturday night passed legislation to impose a five-day waiting period on handgun purchases.

The vote was 63-36 on a bill that had been virtually pronounced dead for the year on Friday. The House has approved a similar bill, and differences will have to be ironed out in 1994.

The bill was the second major anti-crime initiative to clear the Senate in as many days as lawmakers rushed to respond to widespread voter outrage over street crime.

On Friday the Senate approved a bill calling for over $22 billion to place more cops on the street, build new prisons and ban the sale of combat-style assault weapons.

The so-called Brady Bill seemed dead on Friday as gun control foes successfully filibustered to win inclusion of a provision under which the five-day waiting period would pre-empt stiffer rules in force in some states and local governments.

But day-long talks between the two sides yielded a compromise at dusk.

Gun control opponents gave up efforts to have the five-day waiting period supersede state laws of longer duration.

Backers of handgun control agreed to allow the waiting period requirement to lapse after four years, although the attorney general was empowered to extend it another one year.

The waiting period requirement would phase out as states develop a system allowing for instant background checks.

The House measure contains a five-year expiration clause.

The bill's chief sponsor there, Rep. Charles Schumer, D-N.Y., said he still was disturbed by some Senate provisions, including language that would allow dealers to cross state lines to sell guns.

But he was optimistic the differences could be worked out in conference committee: "I think by the end of the conference we'll have a good Brady bill."

The bill is named for Jim Brady, former press secretary to President Reagan, who was shot in the head during an assassination attempt on the former president in 1981.

Brady has lobbied furiously for the handgun measure from his wheelchair for many years, and earlier in the day, he and his wife Sarah had appealed to the Senate to remain in session until it passed the bill.

Pilot survives helicopter crash

PORTLAND, Maine (AP) — The pilot of a medevac helicopter that crashed in chilly Atlantic waters after dark was found alive after drifting for four hours. Two crew members and a burn patient remained missing Saturday.

Coast Guard Lt. James Mathieu said it was amazing that pilot John G. Rafter survived after an extended stay in rough, 47-degree water.

"That is extremely cold water. Hypothermia sets in within an hour, an hour and a half in that temperature," Mathieu said.

Rafter was hospitalized, suffering from exposure, an ankle injury and a broken finger.

The search went on for the other three people aboard the helicopter bound for Portland from Maine Coast Memorial Hospital in Ellsworth.

American more forthcoming with information for irate travelers

By Susan Hightower
Associated Press

Strike-stunned American Airlines scrambled to give passengers more information about flight cancellations Saturday after the government criticized the carrier for providing inaccurate information.

In the third day of a walkout by flight attendants, American said it had added reservations staff and was better able to determine which flights were likely to run. But most of American's planes were still flying only freight and mail.

"I'm just going to go to the gate, and if it doesn't leave, I've got another flight an hour later," business traveler Phil Andrakakos said at Washington's National Airport.

"As soon as I heard about the strike, I called and I got backup reservations."

The 21,000-member Association of Professional Flight Attendants went on strike Thursday after a year of contract negotiations between the union and the airline broke down over differences in pay, health benefits, staffing and scheduling. The 11-day walkout, timed to coincide with the year's heaviest travel period, is the biggest against an airline since 1989.

According to various reports — including from company pilots — most of American's flights, which usually carry about 200,000 passengers daily, were flying but only with freight and mail. Passengers can't fly on an airplane without the federally mandated minimum number of flight attendants.

American tried to respond to stranded travelers' complaints that provoked an order from the nation's transportation chief to keep people better informed.

Airline spokesman Al Becker said more flight attendants were reporting for work each day, meaning more passengers were likely to make their trips.

The union has estimated that 95 percent of flight attendants are honoring picket lines.

On the picket line at New York's LaGuardia Airport, strikers were joined Saturday by health care workers from Local 1199.

Anne Moroh, a member of the executive committee of the flight attendants' union, said that supporters have "come out by the hundreds ... not only on the picket lines but financially, morally, making telephone calls and every way they can."

Another solidarity rally was planned by Local 1199 on Wednesday — Thanksgiving eve, the heaviest travel day of the year.

When American can't get travelers on another of its flights, they have been competing for a dwindling number of seats on rival airlines.

Other carriers were accepting American tickets, but extra seats have been hard to find because of the Thanksgiving rush.

Eagan, Minn.-based Northwest Airlines announced Saturday it was using bigger aircraft and adding flights at its hubs as well as at American's hubs.

"People are accumulating there and getting stuck there. By switching some of our fleet around ... or adding additional flights we hopefully can relieve some of that," Northwest spokesman Jon Austin said.

On Friday, many complained to the Department of Transportation that they were getting "insufficient and often erroneous information" about flights and their options, the department said.

Transportation Secretary Federico Pena told American Airlines Chairman Robert Crandall in a letter to "take the necessary steps" to make sure travelers knew what flights were canceled so they could make other plans.

Senate confirms new director of National Institutes of Health

WASHINGTON (NYT) — Slipping in a vote between more fractious issues like gun control and trade treaties, the Senate early Saturday morning confirmed Dr. Harold E. Varmus, a Nobel laureate, as leader of the country's most prominent biomedical research organization, the National Institutes of Health.

Varmus, a professor of microbiology and biochemistry at the University of California in San Francisco, is internationally renowned for his work as a scientist who has studied the genes that cause cancer, the devious mechanisms of viruses, and other basic puzzles of biology.

He takes over as director from Dr. Ruth Kirschstein, who will stay on as deputy director. Dr. Kirschstein has been the interim head of the institutes since the departure last June of the embattled director, Dr. Bernadine Healy, who resigned in June after persistent complaints from politicians and scientists of her argumentative style and her awkward handling of investigations into scientific fraud.

In assuming the post, Varmus, 53, will command a sprawling operation with an $11 billion annual budget that finances most of the biomedical research carried out at universities and companies around the nation.

The largely administrative job is a big shift for Varmus, who has spent most of his career in a laboratory. But he has served on many policy-making panels over the years.

Varmus said in a mid-morning interview Saturday that he learned of his confirmation after returning from a late-night performance of "The Remains of the Day," a movie based on the elegantly precise novel by Kazuo Ishiguro.

Varmus has an unusual background for a scientist of his stature, having earned his bachelor's degree in English from Amherst College and a master's in English literature from Harvard University. He later went on to earn a medical degree from Columbia University and did some post-doctoral training at the National Institutes of Health.

Researchers are elated to see one of their own take the helm of the government body that feeds them. NIH directors generally have been clinicians rather than pure scientists.

"We in the trenches are really optimistic," said Dr. Jeff Boyd, head of the gynecological pathobiology group at the National Institute of Environmental Health Sciences, one of the 18 institutes that make up the NIH. "I've been here for 17 years and I must say this level of excitement has not existed before."

Dr. Samuel Broder, director of the National Cancer Institute, said: "Appointing Harold Varmus as director provides an unmistakable signal that we will have a strong basic research agenda. He's not a compromise candidate. He's a candidate of crystalline clarity. He'll have enormous credibility, and credibility is everything in this town."

But if credibility is everything, it is not the only thing. Varmus, as well as many who are watching him, know how difficult it will be to turn around an organization that is has been plagued by problems, such as recent complaints by NIH scientists of racial discrimination and sexual harassment.

He will also have to resolve acrid disputes over issues like how much biomedical research should be freewheeling and curiousity-driven, and how much aimed at finding cures for specific diseases or swiftly generating new products and technologies to strengthen the country's economic base.

In an era when every government science program is being squeezed if not asphyxiated, Varmus is unlikely to convince Congress that biomedical research deserves special dispensation.

"One of the things I'm concerned about is that there's been a pretty strong surge of enthusiasm for Harold, who's one of our own, a fundamental investigator," said Dr. J. Michael Bishop, the co-winner with Varmus of the Nobel prize in 1989 for their studies of cancer genes. "I hope that doesn't mean people will think he can double the budget and turn things around overnight."

Rather than seeking great new sources of wealth, or sketching out grand visions of the future of the institutes, Varmus said he will try to focus on immediate needs and manageable goals. His responsibilities fall into two broad categories.

He must consider the institutes' so-called extramural program, the 89 percent of the budget that goes toward supporting biomedical research and education at universities, companies and other organizations throughout the country.

Most biomedical research in America, from studying embryonic development in a model animal like a fruit fly, to testing a new immune therapy on human patients, is supported by grants from the NIH.

Secondly, Varmus must oversee intramural work, the research and other programs carried out at the 18 institutes on the Bethesda campus and satellite sites.

As the nation's leading spokesman for biomedicine everywhere, Varmus' main task, as he sees it, will be to set a tone, to promote the importance of basic research, to emphasize that the spinoffs from basic research already have been profound, and will only get greater.

N.Y. University student falls from 16th floor of dormitory

NEW YORK (NYT) — A student at New York University apparently committed suicide Saturday morning by leaping from a 16th-story dormitory window, police said.

A police spokeswoman, Detective Kim Royster, said that what appeared to be a suicide note was found in the student's room, but she would not disclose its contents. Detective Royster said the student fell from the window of Room 1621 in Hayden Hall, 33 Washington Square West, at 9:55 a.m.

In September another student committed suicide by jumping from the 13th floor in the same building, university officials said.

By noon, a flier had been posted on a bulletin board in the lobby of the dormitory, identifying the student as Eiji Kaneko, and calling for a 4 p.m. meeting at which residents could share their emotions and dispel any rumors.

Kaneko was quoted in the Sept. 14 issue of the school newspaper, The Washington Square News, after the other student, also a 20-year-old freshman, took his life. "This whole thing was tragic," Kaneko said at the time, "but these things always happen. It's not a unique thing."

"If I knew someone who wanted to commit suicide," he continued, "I'd tell them to just try and hold on to tomorrow, and that something cannot be that bad that they hit rock-bottom."

Saturday a student who lives in the 12th floor of Hayden Hall, Darla Thomas, said she was awakened when she "heard a window break and somebody screaming."

"I said 'Oh, my God, oh, my God,' " Ms. Thomas recalled, "and I stuck my head out the window. I saw him lying on the roof of the ventilation system." Mr. Kaneko's body landed on an air-conditioning structure in the courtyard between four buildings.

A spokesman for the university, Virgil Renzulli, said Saturday, "This is an individual tragedy, and it's coincidental that there were two this year, in the same building."

The university president, L.J. Oliva, lives in Hayden Hall, Renzulli said, and was there Saturday to console students. Asked if there was any reason students might be under increased pressure recently, Renzulli said, "I don't know that this was in any way academic pressure."

"In general," he continued, "while we try to provide a rigorous academic experience, we also feel that this is a time that students transform from high school kids into adults. That's why we provide so many counseling services."

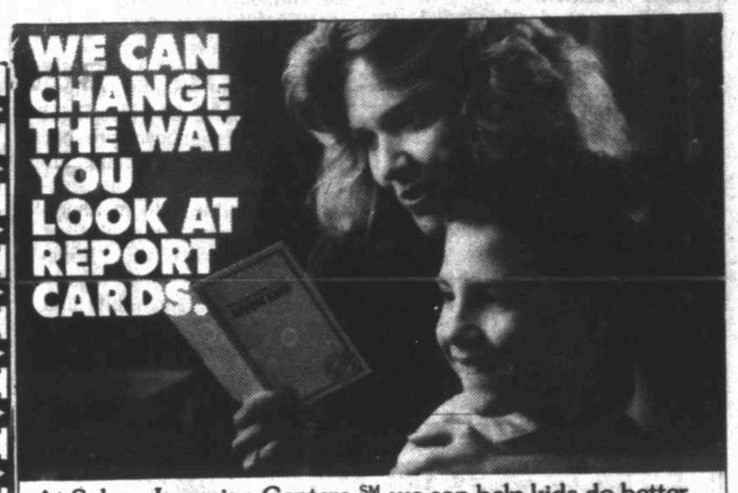

"Professional counselors were there this morning," he added, "and they will have special hours for students who feel they need help through the weekend and into next week."

Six dozen students said Saturday that they had seen no sign that Kaneko was despondent. A student who took a writing workshop with him, who asked not to be identified, described him as "quiet, shy."

Health agency to argue for smoking in nursing home

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (NYT) — The State Health Department wants people to stop smoking — usually. But it is going to court here next week to argue that a local nursing home should provide a place for its residents to smoke.

"We find ourselves a little bit conflicted, I must admit," said Peter Slocum, a Department of Health spokesman, who called the case a first for his agency. "We take a back seat to no one when it comes to beating the drums for smoking restrictions. In this case, we feel that issue collides with an individual's right to make choices."

The administrator of the Maplewood Nursing Home, which has been smoke-free since 1947, says he can't understand the state's position.

"We were dumbfounded, to tell you the truth," said Gregory J. Chambery, administrator of the home, in the suburban town of Webster. "I just couldn't believe it when they really started to push for it."

The nursing home is suing the state to remain smoke-free. Both sides are scheduled to appear Tuesday before Justice Evelyn Frazee of State Supreme Court.

Chambery said the dispute started this summer when, in the course of a routine review, a state official told him the nursing home would need a room where residents could smoke. He said the issue had never come up before in past reviews. Both he and Slocum said the state's request was not a result of a resident's complaint.

Chambery said the nursing home once had a staff smoking room, but eliminated it three years ago after area hospitals went smoke-free.

Discussing the long-time no-smoking policy for residents of the home, Chambery said: "Quite frankly, it was more of an issue of fire safety when we started. But as the years rolled on and the smoking issue came to the forefront, it has really taken on a health dimension in the last 10 years."

Slocum said nursing-home patients should have the right to choose whether they smoke. And that right is protected by the patient bill of rights.

"Patient rights rules provide for certain life style choices," Slocum said.

He said that includes the right to smoke, provided it doesn't infringe on the rights of nonsmokers, although smoking is not specifically mentioned in the state rules.

"The department vigorously supports educational efforts against smoking and also legal limitations designed to prevent 'second-hand smoke' being unwillingly imposed on nonsmokers," the state said in its response to Maplewood's suit filed in State Supreme Court. "Nonetheless, smoking is a legally available choice for adults and must be counted among the 'independent personal decisions' covered by the State Public Health Law."

Chambery, however, said the 72 residents of Maplewood were well aware of the smoking policy before moving in.

"Since we have been smoke-free for so long, people obviously make their selection of our nursing home with the smoke-free environment in mind," Chambery said.

Rabies fear is latest barrier to deer hunting

ANCRAM, N.Y. (NYT) — For the first time in 20 years, Brian Yorck will not get up before dawn on Monday to go out hunting on the opening day of the deer season in southern New York State.

"My concern is the rabies problem," he said.

Although the number of rabid deer is relatively small — only 13 confirmed cases in a deer population of almost a million — some hunters like Yorck think there is no point in taking a chance.

The State Department of Environmental Conservation shares that concern — to the point of issuing guidelines on how to handle carcasses for the tens of thousands of hunters who will be in the field for food or sport or camaraderie from Monday through Dec. 14.

But the department, which regulates hunting in the state, is more worried about long-term trends like a continuing decline in hunters and a rapid growth in the deer population. That has both environmental and economic implications in a state where hunters contribute an estimated $100 million a year to the economy.

"Kids in their formative years are spending their time in malls, not in the woods," said Ed Feldman, an official in the state's Bureau of Fish and Wildlife.

The total number of licenses to hunt deer fell from 811,000 in 1985 to 694,000 in 1992, according to the state's big-game experts. This year's figures are not yet available.

The decline in hunting in New York State reflects a national trend, according to three researchers at Cornell University.

"The future of hunting looks bleak, given social values coupled with recent and projected trends in American demographics," said the researchers, Daniel J. Decker, Jody W. Enck and Tommy L. Brown, members of the Human Dimensions Research Unit of the Department of Natural Resources at Cornell.

The wildlife experts said hunting was declining for reasons as varied as a rise in single-parent families, with fewer opportunities for children to learn hunting from their fathers, and a decrease in land available for hunting because many property owners don't allow it.

In addition, the Cornell researchers quoted other studies reporting that many Americans feel killing animals for pleasure, male bonding, tradition or food is "simply inappropriate" in modern society.

Coincident with the decline in hunting has been an increase in the deer population of New York and other states to the point where deer are considered pests in many areas.

James Glidden, head of the state's Big Game Unit, said the decline in hunting only partly explains the population rise. More important, he said, was a series of mild winters and a return of many farm fields to young forest growth that provides an ideal habitat for deer.

As a result, the statewide size of the deer herd has climbed to almost a million, up from 450,000 in 1978, too many for the natural range to support.

In their quest for food, hungry deer have invaded farmers' fields and suburban lawns as far south as Westchester County to eat shrubs near houses.

"They have reached the limit of toleration," said Glenn Cole, head of the conservation department's wildlife unit at New Paltz. "And the herd is getting bigger."

Because controlling female deers is key to controlling the population, the state issues special permits for licensed hunters to shoot an antlerless deer.

Priest named in sex abuse case acted lewdly, former students say

DAYTON, Ohio (AP) — Three former students of a priest named in a sex abuse lawsuit said he acted lewdly with them in the early 1970s, a newspaper reported Saturday.

Two of the men said the Rev. Ellis Harsham showed them pornographic movies and the third said the priest once grabbed his crotch, the Dayton Daily News said. It did not identify the former Carroll High School students.

Harsham, 52, could not be reached for comment Saturday.

Steven J. Cook, 34, of Philadelphia filed a $10 million lawsuit this month alleging that Harsham and Cardinal Joseph Bernardin, who now lives in Chicago, sexually abused him when he was a student in Cincinnati in the mid-1970s.

Harsham and Bernardin deny the allegations.

Shortly after his ordination in May 1968, Harsham became associate pastor of St. Helen Catholic Church in Mad River Township and taught biology and religion at Carroll High School through June 1973.

He was an instructor at St. Gregory Seminary in Cincinnati in the 1970s and now heads a campus ministry program at Wright State University.

House joins anti-crime frenzy

WASHINGTON (NYT) — The House leaped Saturday into the anti-crime frenzy sweeping through Congress by passing long-stalled proposals aimed at protecting women and children.

Grief-stricken parents, angry and fearful women, talk show host Oprah Winfrey, host John Walsh of "America's Most Wanted," and an unusual alliance of the National Rifle Association and Handgun Control, Inc., were among those who lobbied for bills intended to create safer streets, schools, day care centers and homes.

The bills discourage domestic, school and workplace violence, make it harder for schoolchildren to obtain handguns, make it easier to track ex-convicts who have hurt children and make it illegal to evade child custody laws by taking a child abroad.

The Senate passed similar measures earlier, either as separate bills or as part of the omnibus crime bill adopted 95-4 Friday. Sponsors said all the measures have an excellent chance of becoming law early next year.

Meanwhile, a Republican-led filibuster in the Senate delayed action on the Brady bill, a measure requiring a five-day waiting period for handgun purchases, which was passed earlier by the House.

"I think the Brady bill is dead for this year," Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell, D-Maine, said Saturday. However, Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kansas, said Republicans hope to weaken and pass the bill before Thanksgiving instead of waiting to resume the debate when the Senate returns Jan. 25.

"It will be difficult to sustain a filibuster that thwarts the will of a majority of the U.S. Senate and the will of more than three-fourths of the American people," President Clinton said in Seattle. "I believe we'll get it."

Little of the bitterness surrounding the Brady handgun control bill surfaced Saturday in the House as members passed a series of measures that had been stripped of their most controversial provisions in order to maximize support.

The House voted unanimously for:

- The Violence Against Women Act.
- The Youth Handgun Safety Act.
- The Jacob Wetterling National Child Protection Act.
- The Crimes Against Children Registration Act
- The International Parental Kidnapping Act.

The Violence Against Women Act requires all states to enforce protection orders issued in other states, encourages mandatory arrest (but not minimum sentences) for domestic violence cases, lets battered women present evidence of past abuses during federal criminal trials and allows battered wives and children of legal residents or U.S. citizens to seek legal residency on their own.

Women members of Congress "took different bills and put together all those we thought would be non-controversial, so we could finally get something voted on," said Rep. Pat Schroeder, D-Col.

Those endorsing the bill included the National Rifle Association and its bitter opponent Handgun Control Inc., which lobbied on opposite sides Friday in the Senate debate over the Brady bill.

Ethics panel presses ahead for subpoena of diaries

WASHINGTON (AP) — After delaying its sexual misconduct investigation while Sen. Bob Packwood flirted with resignation, the Senate Ethics Committee is prepared to ask a judge this week to enforce its subpoena for the lawmaker's diaries.

"The expectation is this is going to be filed Monday," a Senate source said late Saturday.

Although a Senate lawyer was standing by at the courthouse Friday, the papers were not filed because Packwood was considering resigning.

The ethics committee has been investigating allegations that Packwood made unwelcome sexual advances to more than two dozen women, but Chairman Richard Bryan has said the diaries may also contain evidence of criminality.

If the committee proceeds, Packwood would face two subpoenas for his diaries. Clinton administration sources disclosed that the Oregon Republican received a Justice Department subpoena Friday as part of a criminal investigation.

Senate sources said Packwood had considered quitting because that would end the probe of the ethics committee, which would lose jurisdiction once the senator left. That would have been a way to avoid giving up the diaries, and Packwoood could even have legally destroyed them if he wished.

But when the Justice Department subpoenaed the writings, sources said, Packwood lost the chance to destroy the diaries because it would be obstruction of justice to do so.

"Packwood's legal problems expanded exponentially" by not resigning in the window of time" before the Justice Department issued its subpoena, said one Senate source, speaking only on condition of anonymity.

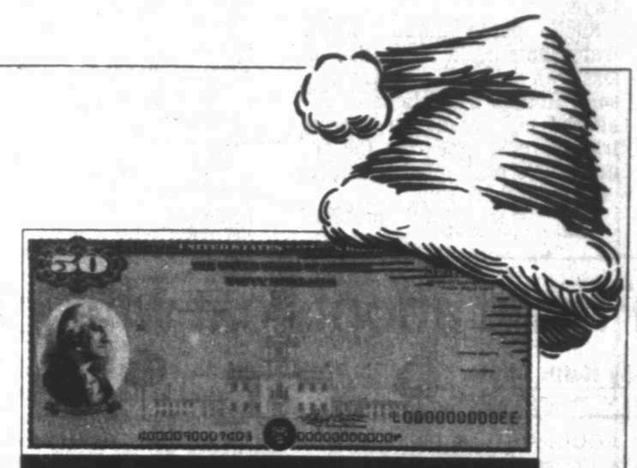

Senate sources said the committee's refusal to back down may have prompted Packwood's thoughts of resigning. The full Senate voted several weeks ago to back enforcement of the subpoena.

Clinton administration sources said Friday the Justice Department investigation focuses on whether Packwood's defense of Mitsubishi Electric Co. in the Senate, against unfair trade practice charges, was linked to a job offer to his wife from a company lobbyist.

Senate approves jobless benefits

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate approved legislation Saturday extending jobless benefits for 1 million Americans, ending weeks of stalemate that had left long-term unemployed workers without extra assistance since October.

Senators approved the $1.1 billion measure by a 79-20 vote and shipped it to the House where lawmakers were expected to send it to President Clinton for his signature before they adjourn for the year early next week.

"Let's no longer delay the unemployment insurance extension that is and will be so badly needed," said Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell, D-Maine.

The unemployment measure would provide up to 13 weeks of extra jobless benefits for an estimated 1 million Americans. Eligible would be workers who used up, or will use up, their 26 weeks of basic unemployment coverage between last Oct. 2 and next Feb. 5.

Approval came after senators voted 63-36 to clear what had been the final stumbling block to passage: a Republican amendment locking in Clinton's plan to pare 252,000 positions from the federal bureaucracy. The GOP measure would have saved $22 billion over the next six years.

"This is the last chance we're going to have this year to cut something," said Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, the amendment's sponsor. "This is the last opportunity we're going to have to save the taxpayers' money."

Democratic leaders had warned that inclusion of Gramm's amendment would have delayed passage of the jobless benefits bill because they would not brought the measure to a final vote if it contained the Gramm provision. They said they feared such a provision would have limited Clinton's flexibility to gradually trim the government's workforce.

"This is a judgment that lands in the houses of a third of a million Americans," said Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y., referring to the jobless workers who would have qualified for the benefits had they already been enacted.

The emergency benefits program was initially established in November 1991 after several fights between congressional Democrats and an initially resistant President Bush.

It had been renewed several times until Oct. 2, when it lapsed for the first time due to fights among lawmakers over how the benefits should be financed. Since that time, about 260,000 people have used up the standard half-year of benefits every week and had no extra coverage to turn to.

The expiration of the program was an embarrassment for Democrats. It occurred at a time when there are about 1.7 million people out of work for more than half a year — about 300,000 more than there were when the program was created two years ago.

Humans may one day receive organ transplants from pigs

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Proteins that scour the body like a "star wars" defense system to keep it from rejecting its own organs have been used to produce pigs with kidneys and hearts safe for transplant into humans, researchers said.

"The hope is these organs, when transplanted into man, would be rejected very slowly or not at all," said Dr. John P. Atkinson of the Washington University School of Medicine in St. Louis.

Such pig-to-human organ transplants could be routine in less than a decade, researchers said. Human transplants of unaltered pig organs have been tried several times but the organs have been quickly rejected, researchers said.

The "star wars" proteins maintain constant surveillance over human organs, blocking any attempt by the immune system to reject them.

The human genes that direct manufacture of these proteins have been transferred to pigs, who grow up with organs coated with the protective human proteins. The organs can thus resist rejection by the body's immune system.

About 50 young pigs carrying one of the proteins and a half dozen carrying another are being raised on a farm in Cambridge, England, Atkinson said recently at the annual scientific meeting of the Council for the Advancement of Science Writing.

That farm and others like it may one day raise organs for transplant .

Scientists link estrogen therapy, Alzheimer's

WASHINGTON (NYT) — Women who take estrogen after menopause appear to reduce their risk of getting Alzheimer's disease, and if they do get it, to have milder symptoms, scientists reported this week.

The findings were among several results on aging and the brain presented at the annual meeting of the Society for Neuroscience in Washington. In another report, scientists said that for the first time they had found a link between chronic stress and poorer mental performance.

McGill University scientists said they could predict, based on high levels of stress hormones in their blood, who would perform relatively poorly on tests of attention and memory. They said it might be possible to reverse the mental problems by lowering stress hormones.

On the estrogen study, Dr. Bruce McEwen of Rockefeller University, a neurological expert, said the results were important enough to start immediately on large studies of whether women should take estrogen to combat Alzheimer's or protect against its onset, but not yet certain enough to recommend that women should consider the therapy now.

The estrogen work was done at the University of Southern California in Los Angeles. The researchers, who studied 253 women over several years, found that 18 percent of those who had not had estrogen therapy were diagnosed with Alzheimer's, compared with 7 percent of those who had the therapy after menopause.

Dr. Victor Henderson, leader of the research group, said the researchers also found that women who were on estrogen therapy but still got Alzheimer's disease performed better on average on cognitive tests than other women with Alzheimer's.

In another study, the researchers looked at information on estrogen therapy and other medical information for 8,879 women living in Leisure World retirement communities in Southern California.

The scientists then reviewed the death certificates for the 2,418 women who died from 1981 to 1992 to find out which had Alzheimer's.

"We found that women who had used estrogen replacement therapy were 40 percent less likely to have Alzheimer's and related dementias compared to women who had not used estrogen," Henderson said.

Estrogen replacement therapy is often prescribed for women who have hot flashes or other symptoms of menopause, or who wish to reduce their risk of osteoporosis.

Alzheimer's is the most common cause of dementia in older people, affecting about four million Americans. Its symptoms include severe loss of memory followed by impaired speech, understanding and other mental processes. The disease is three times more common in women than in men.

In the work on stress and aging, Dr. Michael Meaney of McGill University said a common finding among older people was that some had reductions in memory and other mental capacities. Some are not affected until they are 85 while other people experience them when they are 55.

"The question which has been asked since the 1920s has been whether the amount of stress you experience in your lifetime will get you in the end," he said. The answer appears to be yes, but maybe not irreversibly.

Stress hormones, called cortisol or glucocorticoids, are pumped into the body and brain routinely in stressful situations like job interviews, sickness or physical threats.

But in some older people the mental switch controlling stress seems to be stuck .

Friend adopts cat who lost master in fire

By Keith Stone
N.Y. Times News Service

AGOURA HILLS, Calif. — Patricia Craissati came nose to nose with Elsa, the cat that her friend, filmmaker Duncan Gibbins, lost his life trying to rescue from the Old Topanga fire.

"Oh Elsa, sweetheart," Craissati whispered to the burned Burmese-Siamese mix as she prepared to take the cat home from the Los Angeles County Animal Shelter in the Los Angeles-area city of Agoura Hills.

Elsa is one of the fortunate — six dogs and a rabbit that were orphaned by the wildfires remain at the shelter — and officials expect as many as 70 more pets to slowly come out of hiding.

The orphaned animals will be kept indefinitely because many were found with collars and obviously had homes, said Bruce Richards, Agoura Hills shelter director.

"We know the owners will come," he said.

In Elsa's case, people from across the nation and as far away as Germany and Spain asked to adopt her, and someone even offered $20,000, according to Peter Alexander, one of Gibbins' friends.

But in the end, Gibbins' mother gave Elsa to Craissati, telling her that he would have wanted his favorite pet to live with one of his close friends.

It was a bittersweet reunion for Craissati, a Beverly Hills, Calif. resident who had met Gibbins about four years ago through her husband.

"By taking care of her, we would be keeping his memory alive," Craissati said and then hugged the buff-colored cat, its four paws bandaged and its whiskers singed.

"It is hard because I am such an animal lover; it can't replace a human life," she added.

A Los Angeles County Sheriff deputy found Elsa beneath Gibbins's Topanga Canyon bungalow, not far from where an arsonist is suspected of having set a fire that ultimately killed three people and leveled 390 houses and 19,000 acres.

When the fire broke out, Gibbins, a British filmmaker and producer, delayed his escape to search for Elsa. Gibbins suffered burns over 90 percent of his body and later died of his injuries.

Ron Mass, 40, suffered burns over 75 percent of his body while trying to rescue his own cat and Gibbins and Elsa. Mass is listed in critical condition at The Burn Center at the Sherman Oaks Hospital and Health Center.

Mass' cat still is missing.

Scientists wonder why ancient mountain man was in cave

By Jeff Nesmith
N.Y. Times News Service

ST. LOUIS — Like the host of one of those mystery parties in which guests try to solve a make-believe murder, a mountain man who died nearly 8,000 years ago in what is now western Colorado is leading a team of scientists in a perplexing exercise of clues and solutions.

The researchers have pieced together an odd collection of evidence — that he was right-handed and about 40 years old, that he may have been a maker of arrows or spears and that he could have been related to modern Hopi and Ute Indians.

But despite these and other bits of information, the researchers are reconciled to the likelihood that the prehistoric man will always be surrounded by mystery.

"Each member of the research team has her or his own convictions," said Patty Jo Watson, an archaeologist at Washington University of St. Louis, who is coordinating research on the find by scientists at several universities. "The evidence currently available can partially support any of these scenarios."

The man's skeletal remains were discovered in 1988 in a narrow cavern by cave explorers who named the site, "Hourglass Cave." It is in White River National Forest north of Glen Wood, Colo., at an elevation of over 10,000 feet.

Ms. Watson and her team revealed at a meeting in Wyoming last month that they have been studying the bones and the cave in which they were found for the last five years.

In an interview here, Ms. Watson said the researchers think it likely that the man was the only human being ever to go into the cave prior to the visit by the modern explorers.

His partial skeleton was found about 300 yards from the entrance.

"There is absolutely no evidence that anybody else was ever in there," she said.

However, in addition to the bones, the researchers have found 122 small black smudges on the walls. These appear to be smut from a torch, she said.

The torch never was found, leading to speculation that the man was inside the cave, perhaps exploring it or taking refuge from bad weather, lost his torch and could not find his way out.

Modern Ute Indian believes mystery skeleton belonged to an elderly tribal leader, learned man who went into cave with intention of never coming out.

"There are so many passageways that it is very unlikely he could have found his way out of there without light, even if he was familiar with the cave," she said.

Because the temperature of the eternally damp cave is between 38 and 40 degrees Fahrenheit the year round, his body temperature likely would have fallen to the fatal point in a fairly short time, she said.

Dated by an analysis of carbon molecules in a rib and some bone from his leg, the man is believed to have lived 7,710 years ago, give or take 80 years.

This does not mean his are the oldest human remains ever found in North America. A skeleton found in Florida several years ago appears to be about 10,000 years old, for example.

However, the Colorado bones are the oldest ever found at such a high altitude and seem to fit other emerging evidence of permanent human habitation of the high Rockies.

Although much of the skeleton had been removed, possibly by animals that scavenged the body, enough remained to determine that the bones were those of a man who was probably between 35 and 45 years old, would have stood about 5-feet, 5-inches tall and was not in poor health.

Analysis of bone cells later confirmed his probable age.

In addition, the outer layers of the shinbones were abnormally thick. Ms. Watson said this indicated he had hiked and climbed in the mountains a great deal because heavy exercise builds large bones, as well as large muscles.

Along with shin bones, two ribs, a vertebra, skull bones and others, the researchers found 11 teeth.

After examining the teeth, Sue Haeussler, a doctoral candidate at Arizona State University in Tempe, concluded on the basis of patterns of wear that the man was right handed.

"Right-handed people usually put food into the right side of their mouths and teeth on that side wear more," she explained.

However, Ms. Haeussler said in a telephone interview that other than this similarity, the teeth were not worn in a way usually found in ancient people.

"Most ancient people we see had worn their teeth straight down," she said, "and these teeth were worn in that way. In addition to that, however, the interior side of the teeth was worn in a curved way. It suggested that this was a person who habitually pulled something through those teeth."

One of the upper front teeth was severely worn, she said, as if the man had pulled strips of hide or sinews across that tooth. The wear is smoother than that found in some basket weavers, who pull vegetation through their teeth.

"My guess is he was doing something that did not relate to his diet," she said, "but more like something involving his vocation."

One bit of speculation is that he had softened hide strips or sinews with his teeth before using them to tie spear points or arrow heads to shafts.

From about a thimble full of ground bone, Anne Stone, a Pennsylvania State University anthropologist, found enough DNA to indicate the man was a member of an ethnic group that includes modern Utes and Hopis but not other tribes, such as the Dog Rib Indians of Canada or the Apaches and Navajos of the U.S. southwest.

Ms. Watson said that in addition to theories constructed around speculation that the man became lost in Hourglass Cave, Kenny Frost, a Southern Ute Indian who serves as his tribe's liaison to the U.S. Forest Service and the research team, has his own theory.

"Kenny is calmly certain that this was a der or learned man who was n ing the end of his life and chose this as a site to die," she said. "The cave and the surrounding area speak to Kenny in a way that is congruent to the way his people live today, and he believes the man put himself in the cave, intending to never come out."

Summit leaders seek closer economic ties

BLAKE ISLAND, Wash. (AP) — Leaders of Asian and Pacific nations concluded an unprecedented summit on this wind-swept island Saturday with a vow to forge closer economic ties, declaring "the emergence of a new voice" in world affairs.

"We've agreed that the Asian-Pacific region should be a united one, not divided," said President Clinton, summarizing for the 14 leaders. "We've agreed that our economic policies should be open, not closed."

He added that the group hopes to see long-stalled world trade talks wrapped up by a Dec. 15 deadline.

On the final day of an Asia-Pacific Economic Cooperation forum, the leaders issued a "joint vision statement" espousing freer trade and more global economic growth. The declaration was short on specific commitments.

"Our meeting reflects the emergence of a new voice for the Asia Pacific in world affairs," the statement said. "Our economies are moving toward interdependence and there is a growing state of community among us."

For the United States, the APEC conference marked a historic turn toward Asia, with the fastest-growing economies in the world, and less emphasis on Europe, struggling with sickly economies.

Never before had so many Asian leaders assembled in the same place.

Clinton, flanked by casually dressed colleagues with a Puget Sound backdrop, said the informal three-hour morning session had enabled the group "to forge a stronger regional identity and a stronger purpose."

He also said he was "struck by how many priorities we share" — among them economic growth, freer trade, environmental protection and better education and jobs.

"Of course we will not always agree on how to achieve those goals," he said. "But at least now, for the first time, our region has a means to hold serious policy discussions on such questions as how to remove trade barriers or how to sustain robust growth."

The APEC statement, strictly limited to economic issues, asserted: "We are united in our commitment to create a stable and prosperous future for our people."

The leaders — representing nations accounting for half the world's output of goods and services — directed their finance ministers to meet to discuss global economic trends and specific trade issues.

They also asked business leaders of the Pacific Rim to set up a "Pacific Business Forum" to help promote regional commerce.

Asked about difficult U.S.-Japanese trade relations, Clinton predicted progress "by next June or July, certainly by a year from now" on efforts to trim the huge U.S.-Japan trade imbalance — $49.6 billion last year.

On another subject, Clinton said South Korean President Kim Young Sam would meet with him in Washington on Tuesday to discuss a new initiative to try to open North Korea nuclear sites to international inspection. "It is a source of concern to us," he said.

The leaders pledged "our utmost efforts" to complete negotiations in Geneva on a new set of trade rules by a Dec. 15 deadline.

The statement — leaders declined to call it a formal "communique" like those issued at western economic summits — was issued after the leaders met for three hours in a lodge whose walls were decorated with wooden Indian masks.

The dress code was casual: Clinton wore a plaid shirt and outdoor half-boots. Among others leaders, sweaters were in abundance.

U.S. Trade Representative Mickey Kantor said that despite some rough spots in talks with China's leaders and lingering trade frictions with Japan, a "sense of common purpose" was emerging from the week-long conference, which began with meetings of foreign and economic ministers.

"We're more than satisfied," Kantor told a group of reporters before the final session. Of the move toward freer trade with Asia, he said, "Like a train leaving a station, I think you will see it going faster and faster and faster."

On a cold, damp morning just after dawn, Clinton welcomed the leaders aboard a state-run ferry for the 40-minute ride across Puget Sound to this 473-acre island eight miles from Seattle.

The Blake Island meeting was intended to replace the formal trappings of international summitry with a relaxed setting that shows the Pacific Northwest at its wild and scenic best.

Clinton felt that last summer's seven-nation economic summit in Japan had been stilted and constricting with its tightly regulated agenda, aides said. He believed he could make more progress in a highly personalized meeting where the only aides in the room were translators and notetakers.

In the absence of any consensus on APEC's role and how fast Asia should liberalize its trade, U.S. officials said the significance of the gathering was the meeting itself, training attention on trade and commercial opportunities among nations on the Pacific Rim.

Yet, in concrete terms, there was little evidence of progress.

For example, there was no sign of movement toward improving access to markets in Japan.

In talks Friday, Hosokawa dismissed the idea that he was ready to support an end to Japan's rice import ban — even though Japanese rice consumption is coming close to outstripping production.

18 die when bus plunges off road

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — A bus skidded off a road in the Haraz Pass and plunged into a valley, killing 18 people and injuring 22 others early Saturday, Iran's official news agency said.

The Islamic Republic News Agency, monitored in Nicosia, said the bus was loaded with volunteers going to Gonabad for "Volunteer Week" ceremonies. It did not provide any details on the ceremonies or the volunteers' work.

IRNA said police blamed the accident on the driver's carelessness. The accident occurred about 20 miles northeast of Tehran.

The tickets were presented to Green and Littlejohn on Nov. 18 at Midland International Airport. All seniors will be able to begin their trip December 6 and have until Jan. 13, 1994, to complete it. Since the program began in 1979, thousands of seniors have been able to go "Home for the Holidays." In 1986, President Reagan cited the program as an outstanding community service program and awarded it the Presidential Award for Private Sector Initiatives.

New traffic sensor spots speeders who race through local school zones

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff writer

When city officials tracked the number of automobiles driving on Illinois Avenue at McDonald Street to determine if a traffic signal was needed, they were surprised at some additional findings.

Normally on such projects, officials use a device that simply counts the number of vehicles that drive by. But for this 24-hour period in October, a more sophisticated device was used.

The instrument — a magnetic sensing traffic counter — in addition to counting vehicles, can detect the speed, the length of a vehicle, the time of day and the temperature of the road surface and whether it's wet or dry.

On that day, between 7:30 a.m. and 9 a.m. when the speed limit reduces to 25 mph because of school — with blinking yellow lights cautioning drivers — there were 69 eastbound drivers speeding and 72 westbound drivers speeding.

"At 7:30 (a.m.) I had somecne doing 65 mph in the school zone," said Danny Gonzales, a technician with the traffic engineering department.

But drivers' disregard for the speed limit was not only during the time when children were making their way to school.

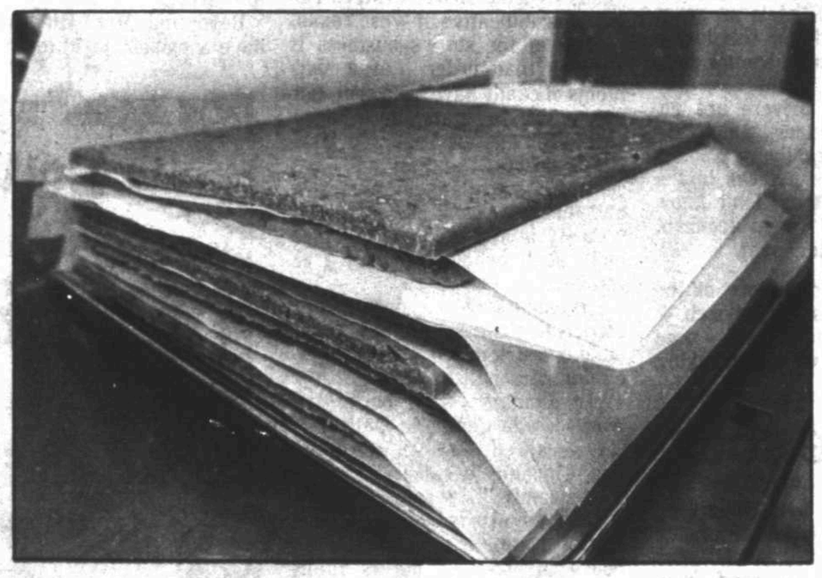

Of 8,259 westbound cars during that 24-hour period, more than 2,000 exceeded the 40 mph posted speed limit. There were 600 drivers who were traveling at speeds greater than 50 mph.

And six vehicles zipped by at speeds of at least 75 mph. The device was not calibrated — although it can be — to detect how fast over 75 mph vehicles were moving.

Eastbound drivers were more law abiding. Of the 7,564 vehicles that passed, 809 were going faster than 40 mph and 169 were moving more than 50

Candy store stands tall in cowboy land

With an eye for West Texas style and a connoisseur's sweet tooth, Susie Hitchcock-Hall and business partner Foy Boyd have created a western-style shop where a cowboy can saunter up and have some fudge.

A little more than two years ago, Mrs. Hitchcock-Hall was making candy out of her kitchen at home, opened Susie's South Forty Confections a year later and now keeps from two to 15 employees working in her candy kitchen. The candy store is located at 2801 S. County Road 1108 (Old Lamesa Highway).

Twenty gallon copper and stainless steel kettles have replaced pots and pans. A $6,000 stainless-steel cooling table has replaced cookie sheets.

Mrs. Hitchcock-Hall was proud of the cooling table, where fudge and toffee are poured to cool and set.

"What used to take half a day now takes 15 minutes," she said.

Although the industrial equipment is necessary for the volume of business, Mrs. Hitchcock-Hall has managed to maintain the homemade-style preparation of her candy.

Each piece of toffee is brushed with chocolate and covered with a powdered-sugar mixture. She said each piece of fudge is hand-dipped in Belgium chocolate before packaging.

Mrs. Hitchcock-Hall calls this chocolate-covered fudge a "Fudge Richey," and uses only Belgium chocolate for her candy. "We're very pleased with it because of the smoothness, the luster, the flavor," she said.

Mrs. Hitchcock-Hall developed all the recipes used at the South Forty. "I have a test kitchen. It's called a husband and a business partner," she said.

While developing her toffee recipe, she made a number of variations for her husband's and partner's sometimes painfully honest critique.

But her husband's words, "Baby, that's it. You've hit a home run," marked the birth of the South Forty toffee recipe,

The toffee is hand-packed and then stored in a freezer. "We treat it like it's a dairy product," said Mrs. Hitchcock-Hall, who uses no artificial ingredients or preservatives in her candy.

The rustic candy store and gift shop, located on the South Forty Ranch property is decked and paneled entirely in rough cedar, giving the structure an authentic Western appeal.

Avoiding the use of saguaro cacti, Anasazi Indian pottery, weavings and other Southwestern or Santa Fe decor, Mrs. Hitchcock-Hall has made sure every item in the store relates to West Texas.

Boyd built the western porch facade and hitching rail, as well as doing all the woodwork for the candy store. Boyd also owns the land and manages the 800-plus pecan tree orchard behind which the candy store is located.

As one might expect, the nuts ap-

Country roads lead to fluffy-cloud daydreams

There is something special about taking a nice leisurely drive in the country. It gives a person a new — and more tolerant — perspective on life.

You just roll down the windows, turn on the radio and lose yourself in your thoughts.

Ott

It's called freedom, freedom of the mind.

I'm not certain when I first started engaging in the practice, though it was probably shortly after my 15th birthday when I received my driver's license, but it has always been my favorite form of relaxation. It makes daydreaming easy, and daydreaming is something all of us — no matter how old and jaded we become — should do more of.

It has been suggested by some that West Texas is not a particularly attractive place to drive because there are no rivers, lakes and trees to look at. But that's not fair.

Indeed, the most important ingredient to "country driving" is a big sky, which is something we do possess. It also helps if that sky is dotted with numerous fluffy clouds, the kind that resemble cotton candy. For some reason daydreaming is more fun when you are staring at cotton candy.

As a 15-year-old, like most lads of that age, my drives to the country often resulted in my mind wandering toward the subject of girls, or, more specifically, why a particular young lady, usually a high school cheerleader, had chosen to "go steady," — one of my all-time favorite phrases — with the star quarterback rather than with me. This, of course, would be a devastating development in my life, so I would drive for miles and miles, pondering my fate, trying to determine what I could do to woo back Little Miss Cheerleader.

I would stare at the clouds and carefully study my assorted alternatives, not the least of which was killing the star quarterback.

Thankfully, logic prevailed and I soon moved on to new pursuits.

In my 20s, the drives became more philosophical in nature. As I contemplated the meaning of life, my questions would spring forth in rapid fashion. Why does God allow poor people to exist? Why should I hate a person just because he lives in a different country than I do? Why can't people of different races get along? Will the Chicago Cubs ever win a World Series?

Again, I would stare at the cotton-candy clouds and attempt to come up with appropriate answers. But because my questions were so abstract in nature, solid conclusions were often difficult to achieve, though I was reasonably certain Chicago would nev-mph. Two people were driving at least 75 mph.

"From my point, that's a lot of speeding," Gonzales said.

Those findings are nothing new for Midland police traffic Sgt. Brian Bogart.

"I'm not surprised; we've got a lot of speeders," Bogart said. "We get complaints every day of people speeding."

As for speeders in the school zones, Bogart said there are more at some locations than an officer can possibly stop. And with only five officers assigned specifically to the traffic division, many locations go unchecked, he said.

Access to the sensor devices can be an asset for monitoring traffic, he said.

For example, police examined the readings of a sensor placed on Greenbriar Drive.

Police were already aware of a problem with speeders in the area. The sensor device confirmed this and pinpointed the peak times of day — which turned out to be the lunch hour and after school.

"We verified it was Lee High School kids, a lot of them," Bogart said.

Essentially, the device can provide police with more precise timetables of when speeders are out.

"It makes it a little easier to deploy your manpower," Bogart said. "I wish the P.D. (Police Department) had some they could use for themselves," he said.

Likewise, the devices aid the traffic engineering department with determining whether traffic characteristics warrant any changes to regulate the flow.

"What's so good about these things is if we get a lot of complaints in a residential neighborhood, we don't have to (get a police officer to) go out there with a radar gun for 30 minutes or an hour," Gonzales said.

Furthermore, generalizations from an hour of radar detection may not be truly representative of traffic conditions, he said.

Since the city bought six of the sensors a few months ago, about 20 locations have been monitored.

"We're starting to see something that surprises us at each location," said Gary Saunders, traffic engineering coordinator. That includes the amount of traffic at a particular hour, sizes of vehicles and speeds.

"We were (especially) surprised at some of the speeds and some of the sizes of the vehicles," Saunders said.

The sensors are usually installed for 24 hours but can monitor traffic for a week. Officials program when to start and stop the device and what to measure from a computer in city hall.

On the street, drivers are unaware of the devices, which are undercover — literally.

"They look like patches in the roadway ... If they don't know they're out there we get accurate readings," Saunders said.

The city has four more of the sensors — at a cost of $850 each — ordered. In addition, the city uses other counters with less tracking abilities.

OTT: Some schemes seem 'bizarre' er win the series.

But time continued to pass. I gave up on being a philosopher, and as I entered my 30s I became more interested in financial matters, as in, "Will I ever be rich enough to own a BMW?"

So I would again take to my beloved country roads and contemplate various ways to get rich quick, none of which, of course, involved "working hard" at a legitimate job.

Instead, I would concoct bizarre schemes that involved little or no physical labor on my part, and yet, at the same time, would reap me huge financial rewards. Most, as you can imagine, were terribly illegal.

Wisely, I refrained from acting on those dreams. I remained poor, but at least I didn't have to relocate in Huntsville.

Now I have reached my 40s, and from time to time I still feel the urge to "hit the road." Problems mount, pressures build, tensions rise. So I hop in my Chevy and head for the land of the big sky and fluffy clouds.

Almost immediately my dreams soar to new heights. Suddenly I'm experiencing a rush of freedom, that natural high that comes with driving and thinking. There's just one problem: at age 41 what is a person to think about?

High school cheerleaders are a thing of the past, and so are philosophical questions about the meaning of life and the lust for a BMW. It is a frustrating time, that dreaded in-between period in life. You're not young and you're not old. You're just there.

Still, the dreams must continue. So you stare at the cotton-candy clouds and study your options. What will you fantasize about today?

OK, maybe high school cheerleaders aren't a thing of the past.

pear in all candy at the South Forty, Mrs. Hitchcock-Hall said.

The fudge and toffee are packaged in various ways, including gift boxes with jellies and other items. Other gift items at the store include mugs and ceramic wares with Texas-related designs such as bluebonnets. The cowboy Santa Claus figurine sports western riding gear indicative of West Texas.

Most of the store's business is through mail order. Large shipments of candy have been sent, not only across the state and to large cities such as New York, but Mrs. Hitchcock-Hall and Boyd have sent orders to Canada, Australia and Russia as well, she said.

Candy is also sold at the store and sold wholesale to area retailers.

The candy store also does a lot of corporate business, designing and building customized gifts and enclosing personalized cards.

"In January, we'll be in the World Trade Center in Dallas. If that goes well, we open in Atlanta and Chicago, because they like Texas candy," she said.

The store also is listed as a local tourist destination and a bulletin board of area events is maintained. The orchard is kept mowed and "park-like" and is leased for summer events, she said.

The candy store itself is used for meetings and Mrs. Hitchcock-Hall teaches dancing there at night. All displays are on wheels for quick removal.

The candy store is the first phase of a larger plan to further develop the ranch as a tourist destination and manufacturing business. Mrs. Hitchcock-Hall has a picante sauce recipe she is anxious to market.

Boyd and Mrs. Hitchcock-Hall have a private joke immortalized on the wall of their office area. The plaque reads, "Where' we going to park the buses?"

In the planning of the store, she had asked this question of Boyd, who thought the question showed an over-estimation of the business's potential and poked fun for her over-abundant enthusiasm.

After the first bus-load of people visited the candy store, Mrs. Hitchcock-Hall made the embroidered sign, which hangs over her desk.

Memorial's groundbreaking may come soon

Promoters for the Permian Basin Vietnam Memorial anticipate ground-breaking soon, having received pledges for almost all of the needed money.

About $272,000 has been raised through telethons and other fund-raising events, said John Philbeck, who has led the memorial drive for several years and is president of the memorial committee.

When these pledges are turned into cash, Philbeck and others will approach the city of Midland for the city's pledge of $25,000 and land for the memorial site.

The memorial will include a 40-foot granite "Lone Star" and a likeness of the state of Texas, also made of "Sunset red" granite, Philbeck said. The Texas carving will be etched with all 27 Permian Basin counties. These pieces will have a masonry wall to serve as a backdrop and gas plumbing will be installed for an eternal flame.

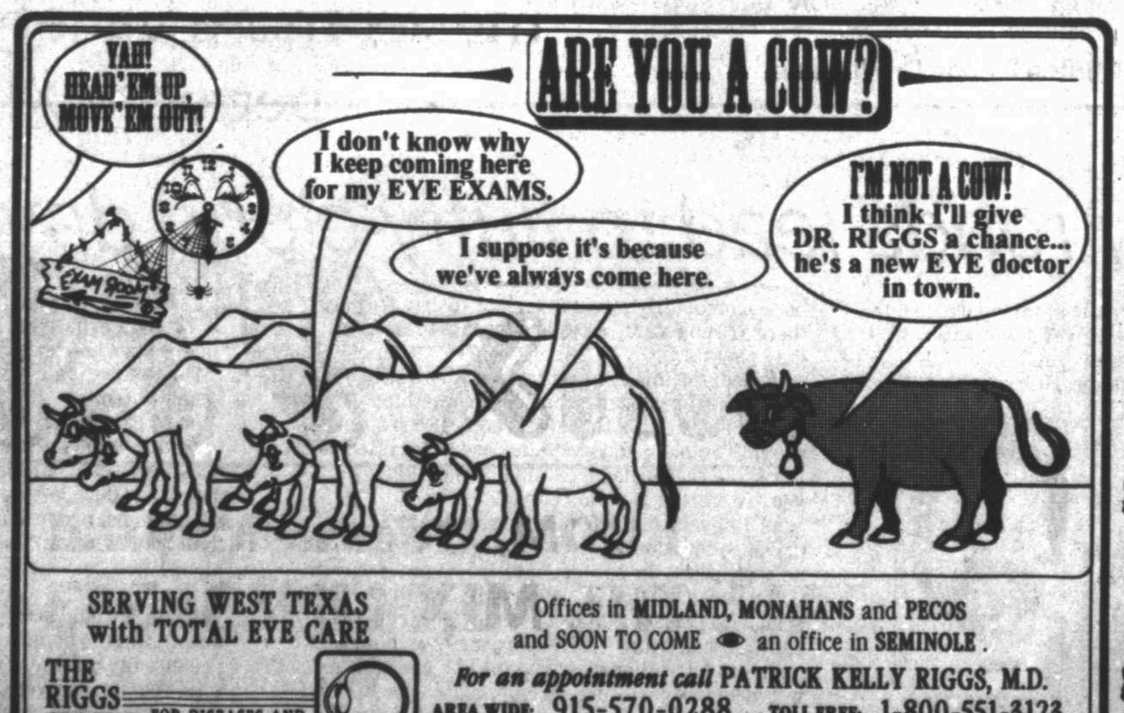

Ground-breaking is expected near the first of the year, and completion of the memorial is expected before the July 1994 commemoration date, he said.

The 213 people from the Permian Basin who are listed as killed in action or missing in action will have their names carved into the memorial.

Those wishing to be a part of the memorial can purchase inscribed bricks for $100 each, Philbeck said.

A great many of these bricks have been sold to families of those from other areas with loved ones who were lost in the war and to families of those with loved ones who served and returned from Vietnam. Buying the brick has

Law enforcers, firefighters to meet in benefit football games

By Katherine Poteet
Staff writer

Practice has just started and the ribbing with it.

"We haven't even started practicing yet," said Kevin Fetter, noting his team was last year's champions.

"Oh, so we don't need any practice," Sam Collins replied sarcastically. "Oh, so we're champs and don't need practice."

Fetter just smiled.

"We've been out five times a week," John Sikes said, letting a level of confidence in his team's determination show.

"Five times!" Joey Heinemann almost shouted. "Did you hear that? We're only at twice a week."

"Yeah, but when we get our guys in gear, we'll be up to three times and then we'll see," Collins added ominously, as if a secret weapon would be loaded into the team's gear.

No, the heckling of other teams and their players did not come from any area high school football team. Or from a college or pro team, either.

The men eager to prove their skills at tossing the pigskin are members of Midland's Police Department, Sheriff's Department and Fire Department. And, the jabs were all in jest.

"This isn't a grudge thing," said Sikes, a corporal at the Midland County Sheriff's office. "It is all done in fun, for charity."

The others echoed his sentiment.

"I depend on these guys everyday," said Fetter, a Midland firefighter. "And, they depend on me."

"It is all done in good taste and good sportsmanship," said Heinemann, a police officer. "It is done for the charities and for the fun."

The three departments will meet again this year for three friendly games of football to raise money for the Special Olympics and the Boys & Girls Club.

The games began last year. The Fire Department joined late, but proved itself the champion.

The first game will pit the Midland Police Department against the Sheriff's Office at 1 p.m. on Dec. 18 at Memorial Stadium.

The second game will be played the weekend after New Year's and will feature the Sheriff's Office against the Fire Department. The Police Department and the Fire Department will meet the following weekend in the final game.

Admission is $3 for adults. The Fraternal Order of Police will operate a concession stand.

This year, the teams will have their own equipment.

"Greenwood was real good about letting us use equipment last year," Collins said. "We all raised money this year for our own."

The teams had to purchase their own uniforms as well. The Police Department will suit up entirely in blue and play under the name "Blue Thunder." The Sheriff's Office, or "Midland County Sting," has adopted black and white as their colors. And, appropriately, the Fire Department's team "Inferno," will suit out in red jerseys and white pants.

Heinemann said the teams have talked about buying a trophy that will go to the winning team each year.

Scouts help needy

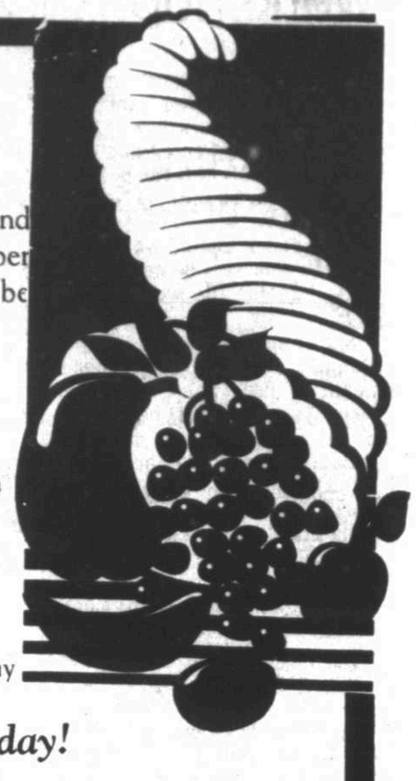

Joe D. Williams/Reporter-Telegram

Midland Boy Scout Seth Price, 11, sits in a truck waiting along with John Mezera, Robert Jarrett and Bud Presley, left to right in background, for food to arrive at the drop station behind local Boy Scout headquarters. Jody Sneed, executive director of the Buffalo Council of the Boy Scouts, said donations to the annual project were far below the usual contributions because of a problem in distribution of the bags in which local residents were to leave food for the scouts to pick up. The Permian Basin Food Bank usually receives about three months' worth of food from the project local, Sneed said.

MEMORIAL: Groundbreaking may come soon proven very popular because, "It provides a tangible means of showing support," Philbeck said.

The bricks will likely be used to lay down a walkway leading to the memorial, Philbeck said. "It's the last opportunity to really be a part of this thing."

The committee soon will be converting pledges to dollars, finalizing legal agreements with the city and releasing plans for construction for contractors' bids.

It is hoped that contracts will be awarded before the first of the year.

The memorial will be located near the Midland International Air Terminal, adjacent to the Army Reserve Unit and southwest of the Confederate Air Force Museum.

The memorial project has grown in scope and support since its inception. When completed, the memorial will serve, not only as a place for Americans to pay their respects to the sacrifice of Vietnam veterans, but a place for those who served to come to grips with the "demons" from that era of their lives, Philbeck said.

The book was first published in English in 1988 by the University of New Mexico Press.

"It is quite an honor to be published in Mexico by such a respected publisher. Mexican historians are very sensitive to accounts of the revolution," Samponaro said.

Midland College offers activities before holidays

FOR HOME DELIVERY CALL 688-2700
Midland Reporter-Telegram

This is a short week for students and staff as Thanksgiving holiday begins at 5 p.m. Wednesday. The college will be closed Thursday through Sunday. Before that, there are several activities that need to be mentioned.

Tuck

First, the Texas Fine Arts Association "Art On Tour" wraps up its exhibit at McCormick Gallery today. If you've not seen the eclectic show, you may view it between 1-5 p.m. today. McCormick Gallery is located in the Allison Fine Art Building and admission is free.

The Chaparral basketball team doesn't get much of a holiday. Wednesday night at 7:30 p.m. Midland College hosts the Lamar College Runnin' Lopes from Lamar, Colo. The game is at Chaparral Center, the final home appearance for the Chaps until Jan. 8. It's also a night when you can get in to watch the exciting Chaps with just two cans of food. It's a Thanksgiving Eve promotion of Chap Center and KCRS, 550AM, the voice of the Chaparrals. Donations of food will go the Permian Basin Food Bank.

Don't despair, however, about not seeing the Chaps any more this fall as you may see them twice later in the week as they play in the Odessa College Classic. And, believe it or not, their opponents will be those same Lamar College Runnin' Lopes at 6 p.m. on Friday. MC plays the Abilene Christian University junior varsity in Odessa at 6 p.m. on Saturday.

In fact, by the time the season is finished the Chaparrals will have played five games at the OC sports complex, and just one of them against the Odessa College Wranglers. On Dec. 3-4, MC takes part in the "pre-conference Western Junior College Athletic Conference Classic." This is a new event designed to give the conference teams some extra games since Clarendon College and Western Texas College have withdrawn from the men's WJCAC competition. MC will play New Mexico Junior College on Dec. 3 and New Mexico Military on Dec. 4.

Spring semester early registration is still under way for some students this week, and through Dec. 3. The registration is primarily for returning students who have completed their TASP (Texas Academic Skills Program) exams or who are TASP-exempt.

Students receiving financial aid or scholarships must report to the Financial Aid Office. Registration also is handled in person at the Student Services Office, which is located in the Student Center.

An alphabetical system is used to assure that students will be first during at least one of their four semesters at MC. For this week, those with last names beginning with F-L may come on Monday and those A-E on Tuesday. The rotation resumes Nov. 29 for those S-Z and Nov. 30 for those M-R. Early registration continues through Dec. 3 Registrar Don Cates emphasizes that registration isn't complete until fees are paid.

Those who don't want to pay now may obtain time permits Dec. 6-16 and Jan. 3-7 for the official enrollment on Thursday, Jan. 13.

If you have questions, pick up a spring course bulletin at the college or the Midland County Library for additional information. After that, you should come to the Student Services Office or call 685-4501.

Please mark the evening of Tuesday, Nov. 30, on your calendar. That's the evening when the holiday lights are turned on to outline the Hodge Carillon Tower and the campus building. Betty Morris, keyboard instructor, will provide her annual live carillon concert: VocalPoint, the outstanding MC performance group directed by Rob Hunt, will sing several numbers: Pete Paisana likely will appear with Santa cap and treats for the children. All that begins at 6 p.m..

Formal opening of the fall student art show starts at 6:30 p.m. in the McCormick Gallery, complete with refreshments. At 7 p.m. in the Allison auditorium, the MC community Band presents its annual fall concert.

The student art show mentioned above remains on display daily through Dec. 12, but the students are doing a second show on Dec. 3-4. It's a sale of their work to raise funds for the student art scholarship fund. On Friday, Dec. 3, from 10 a.m.-5 p.m. and Saturday from 9 a.m.-5 p.m. in the Art wing of the Allison building you may view and arrange to purchase students' works, most of them priced at $50 or less.

Here's another event you should note on your calendar. Paul Ruffin, distinguished poet-author-editor-education, will be at Midland College on Dec. 2-3. He's presenting a free public reading at 7:30 p.m. Thursday, Dec. 2, in the Roadrunner Room, Student Center. He also will read at the Hilda Simmons Levitt Poetry Contest Awards Presentation at 10:15 a.m. on Dec. 3 in the same locale.

We just saw (and bought) a copy of the 1993 limited edition Christmas tree ornament produced by the Downtown Optimist Club that features Midland College Designed by MC media director Dan Buckley, the three-dimensional ornament in bright gold-tone metal with a walnut stand and plaque shows the Hodge Carillon Tower and the Chaparral mascot drawing in green and gold, along with appropriate lettering. The ornament may be purchased at the MC bookstore or Paint & Palette craft store. The ornament is $15 and the walnut stand is $5. Proceeds go to the Optimist Club's scholarship fund.

There are only a couple of courses starting this week and one is a continuation of a class offered earlier in the semester. Gary Khazan is teaching Conversational Russian II on Tuesday and Thursday from 7-9 p.m. through Dec. 16. Fee is $40. Judy Griffith is teaching Oil Painting, which will meet on Tuesdays from Nov. 23-Dec. 14. The class costs $25 and meets from 6:30-9 p.m.

You might also want to consider some classes starting the week of Nov. 29. You can choose from Jitterbug & Swing I, Hazardous Waste Management, Real Estate Property Management, or Real Estate Mandatory Continuing Education.

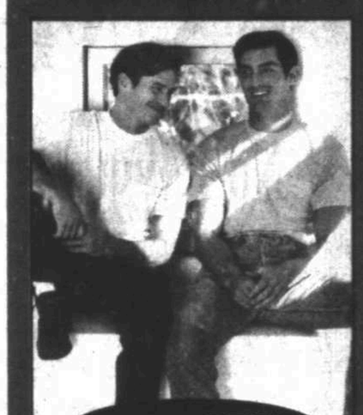

To register, just visit the Continuing Education Office, Administration Building, or call 685-4518.

Cyclists roll through Texas on their 15,000-mile adventure

By Jerry Reed
N.Y. Times News Service

ABILENE (AP) — A journey of a thousand miles begins with a single step, the old Chinese proverb goes.

For Mary Schroeder and Bruce Johnson, a 15,000-mile trip started with a single push on a bicycle pedal by each.

Schroeder, a 25-year-old from a Minnesota Twin Cities suburb, and Johnson, a 29-year-old Canadian from Wasagu Beach, Ontario, embarked on June 20 on about the longest road journey possible in the Americas going a single direction as much as possible.

When the athletic outdoor twosome cut through the Big Country the last several days, they'd reached about the 4,000-mile mark, more than a fourth of the way to their destination, Schroeder estimated.

From Inuvik in the Canadian Northwest Territories about 70 miles south of the Arctic Circle — the northernmost point in North America accessible by road — to Ushuiaia, Argentina, in Tierra del Fuego, Johnson and Schroeder are bound on an arduous journey over 18 months.

Why are they doing it?

Just for the adventure of it, they say.

The pair started planning the trip after they met two years ago in Inuvik, Schroeder said.

"We decided this was a perfect time," Schroeder said. "We don't have houses or kids."

Undertaking such a fantastic journey takes a lot more planning than a weekend campaign trip, although probably not much more gear.

Riding industrial-strength Diamond Back mountain bikes, they're fully loaded with supplies and provisions at just under 100 pounds, Schroeder estimated.

Among their camping gear is a lightweight outdoor stove, which should save them big bucks in restaurant bills over the course of their journey.

Their overnight accommodations are city parks or backyards where they gain permission to pitch a tent, or occasionally, guest rooms in private homes. In Abilene, they stayed a couple of nights with James and Irene Grant.

"Things add up (even) the cheapest way," said Schroeder. "(But) we've been pleased to be under our $10-a-day budget each."

Lions Clubs — James Grant is a local Lions Club president — and city officials have been valuable information sources of places to stay, she said.

Planning the route took as much attention as planning the finances. Steep hills and bad pavement are obstacles they seek to avoid. They also consulted the calendar with care before they started.

Their June start in the Northwest Territories was in high summer, when that corner of the globe is bathed in 24-hour sunlight. They came through some wintry weather (although it's officially still fall) in the northwestern United States, but now they're heading toward a long interlude in the tropics, where the weather's mild to hot the year round.

Once they pedal past the equator in South America toward cooler climates, they'll be coming out of winter (the same as our summer), headed for spring — our fall.

And when they hit Tierra del Fuego in December, 1994, it'll be midsummer in that place of usual bitter cold.

"We've had nothing really bad happen," Schroeder said. They've biked past several bears, as close as five feet away, but none offered violence, she said.

But more than four-legged animals that occasionally rear on two feet, their friends warn them about some creatures who habitually walk upright: bad people.

"There's always that concern about security," Schroeder acknowledged. "It's not like you can just lock your doors and just speed away."

"We keep our eyes open," she said. "Mostly, we're traveling through the countryside as well," avoiding the high-crime cities as much as possible.

For such an unceasing test of physical stamina, excellent physical conditioning is a must — and even so, there's no guarantee against all physical woes. The incessant pedaling sometimes makes Johnson saddle-sore.

"Bruce gets some sores, but I don't have a problem with that," Schroeder said. "I have enough padding naturally,"

It's the unexpected along the way that makes the trip enjoyable, she said.

Dickens County Courthouse turns 100 years old

By Bill Orr
Associated Press writer

DICKENS — In a faded photograph taken in 1896, some dark, unexcitable men can be seen in front of the sturdy Dickens County Courthouse in Dickens.

A windmill stands on the courthouse grounds in front of them, and a blacksmith's shop stands idle in the background. A shiny cupola on top of the courthouse looks out over the bleak land, giving the humble town an air of dignity.

Today the courthouse scene is minus the men, the cupola, the windmill, the blacksmith's shop, the fence, the doors, the roof and numerous other things.

The Dickens County Courthouse opened in 1893 as the first public building in a 54-county region of West Texas.

The county celebrated the courthouse's 100th birthday this month with historical exhibits and an open house.

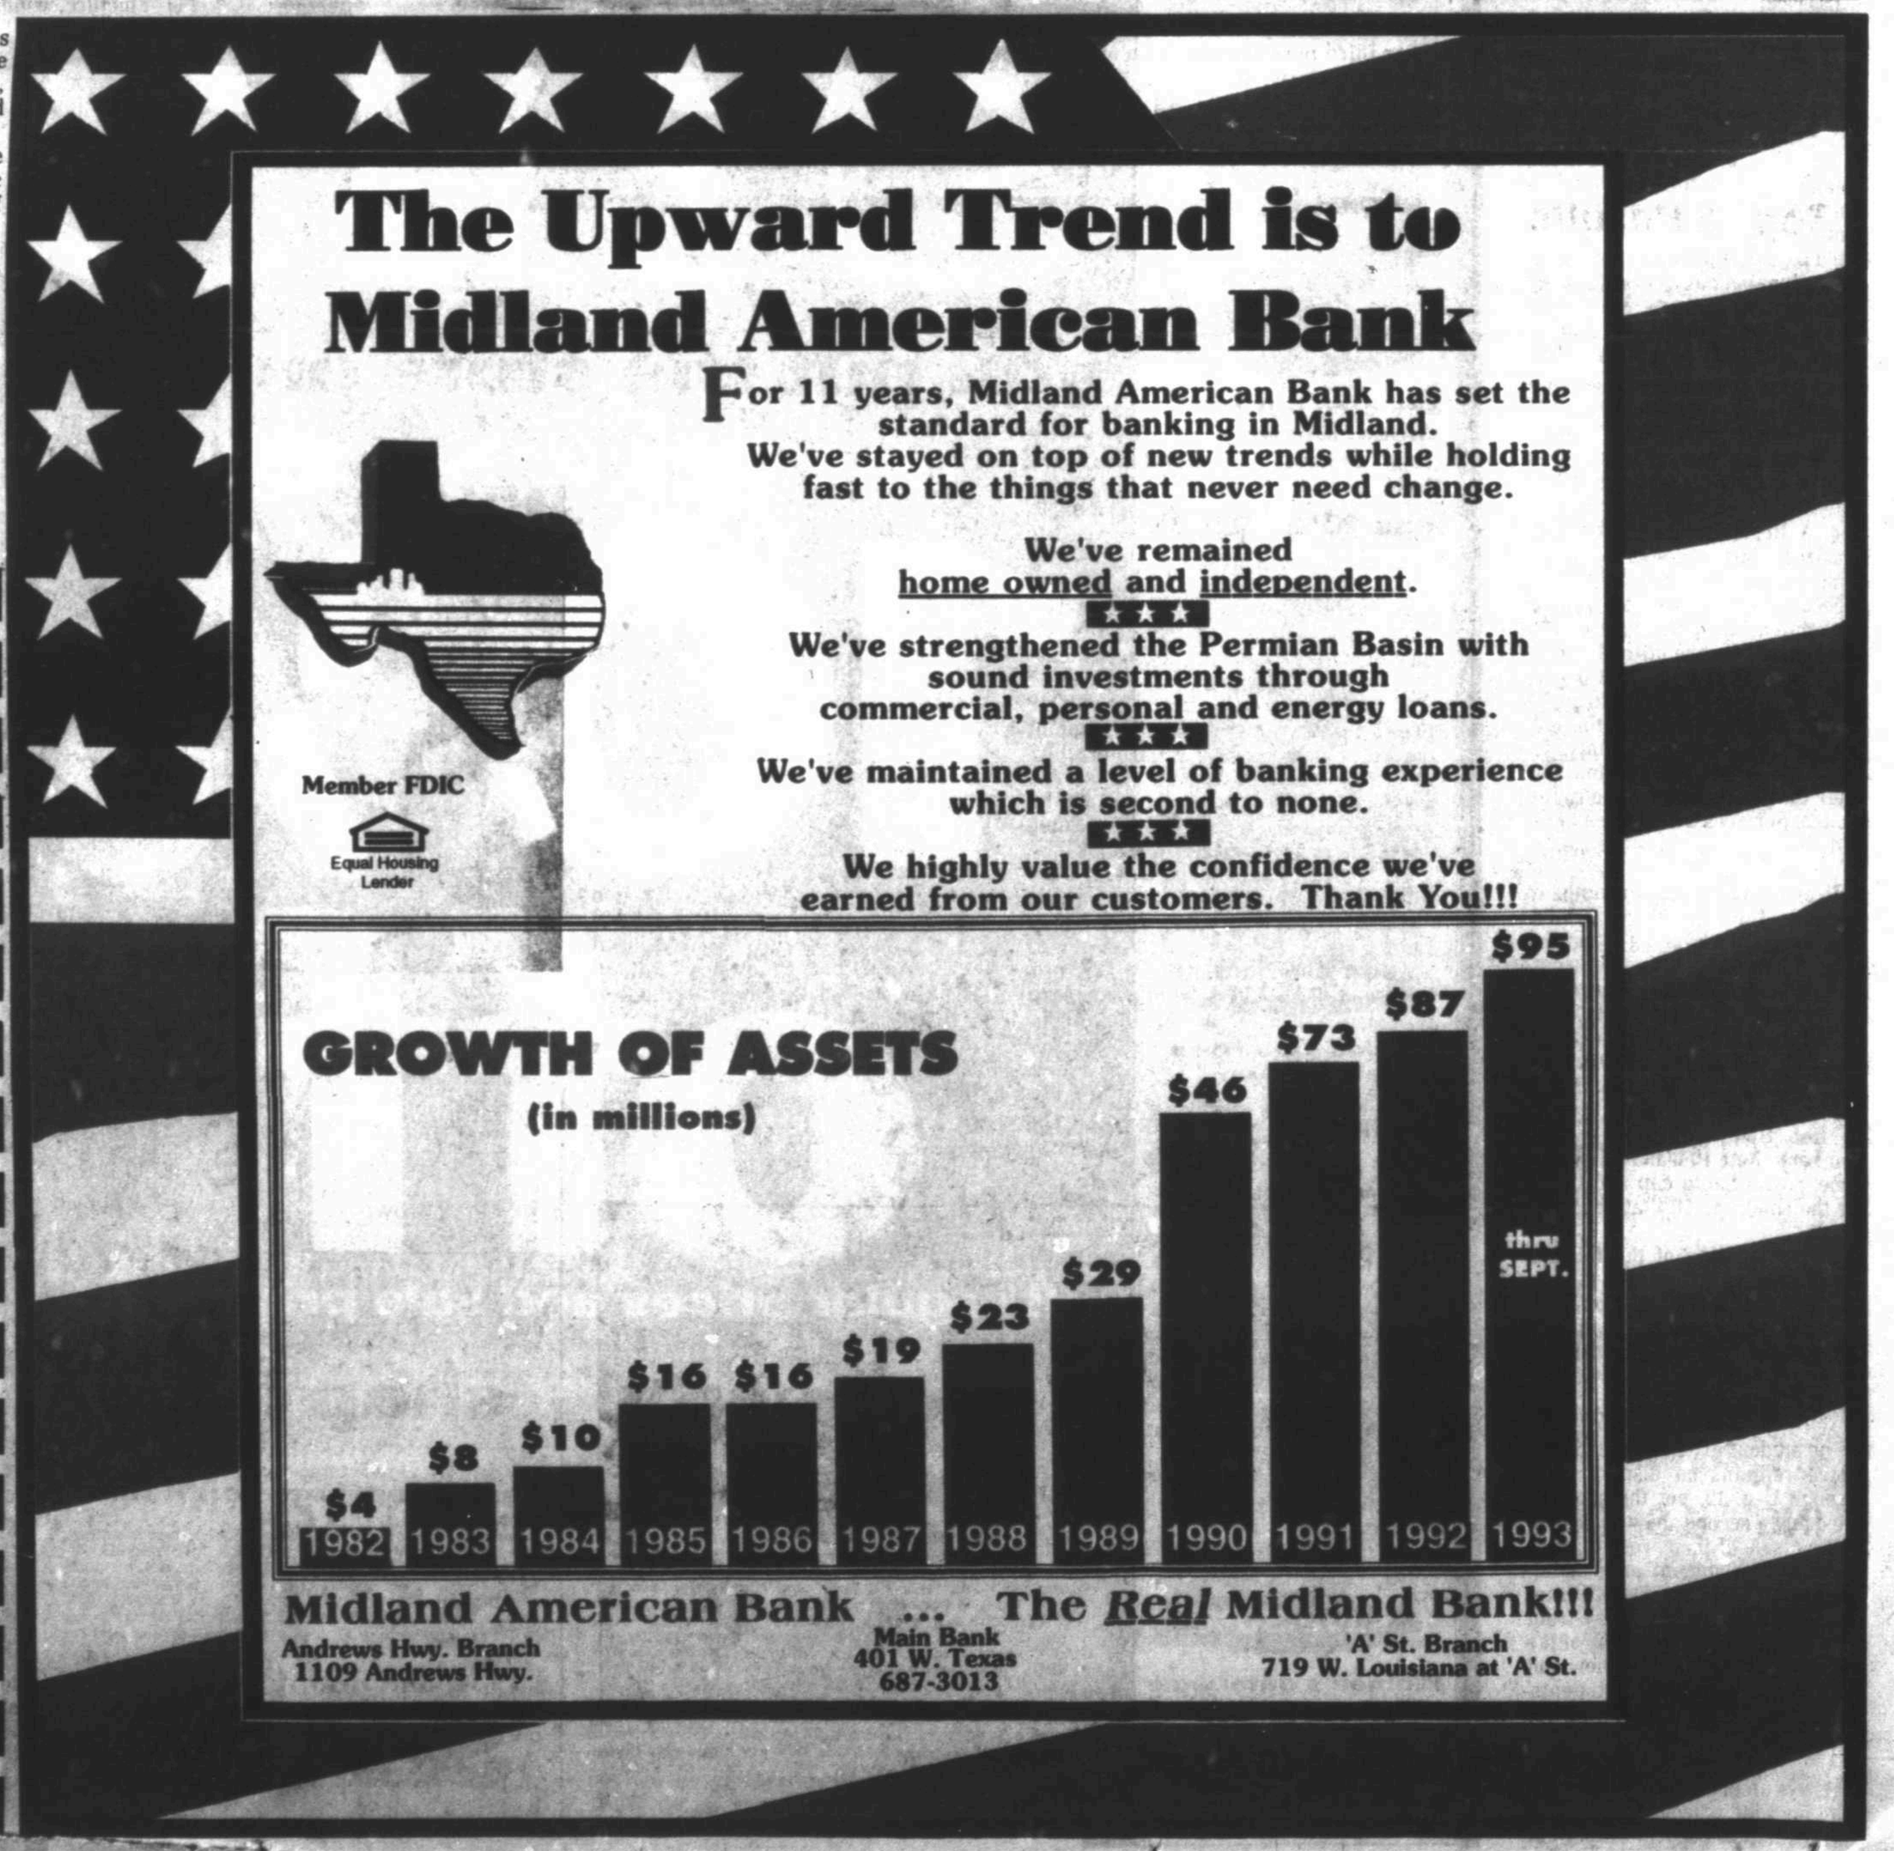

Although changes have occurred over the years, the courthouse has retained much of its original charm and character, including its gray stone walls built from stone taken from a quarry outside town.

Lee steamrolls ahead

■ Rebels chalk up another scoring record in 79-14 area win over El Paso Bowie.

By Terry Williamson
Sports editor

EL PASO — Midland Lee's record setting offensive machine is headed for Memorial Stadium with full steam after a 79-14 pounding of El Paso Bowie here Saturday in the Class 5A Area Small School football playoffs.

For the second consecutive week, the Rebels have churned out record playoff points. Last week it was 63 against Amarillo High. The Bears of Bowie were the victims this time as Lee rolled out nearly 600 yards of offense.

Bowie simply didn't belong at this level of competition as the Small School bracket trimmed to the sweet 16 round. And that means Lee (11-1) will host previously state-ranked Lewisville (11-0-1) at 2 p.m. next Saturday at Midland's Memorial Stadium.

Just with the sound of that, Lee's offensive wheels may hit the city limits in a slower gear, but as Lee coach Earl Miller said, "Lewisville is awfully tough, but at least it's at home."

But the matter at hand this week was Bowie, and that proved to be no matter at all for one Marlon Henry, who had a career day to go with Lee's best playoff production.

Henry rushed for a career high 213 yards, scored a career high six touchdowns, including runs of 53, 89, and 24 yards. Another came on a 69-yard pass from quarterback Courtney Turner.

Henry also became the first Rebel in 1993 to crash the 1,000-yard rushing barrier, now standing at 1,046 for the season.

"I've never had over 200 yards in a game and I've never had six touchdowns in a game, so it was good to enjoy that. But it's over now and Lewis-

Midland fills tall order

■ Midland High shakes off foul trouble, Copperas Cove to capture Tall City Invitational.

By Bill Petitt
Staff writer

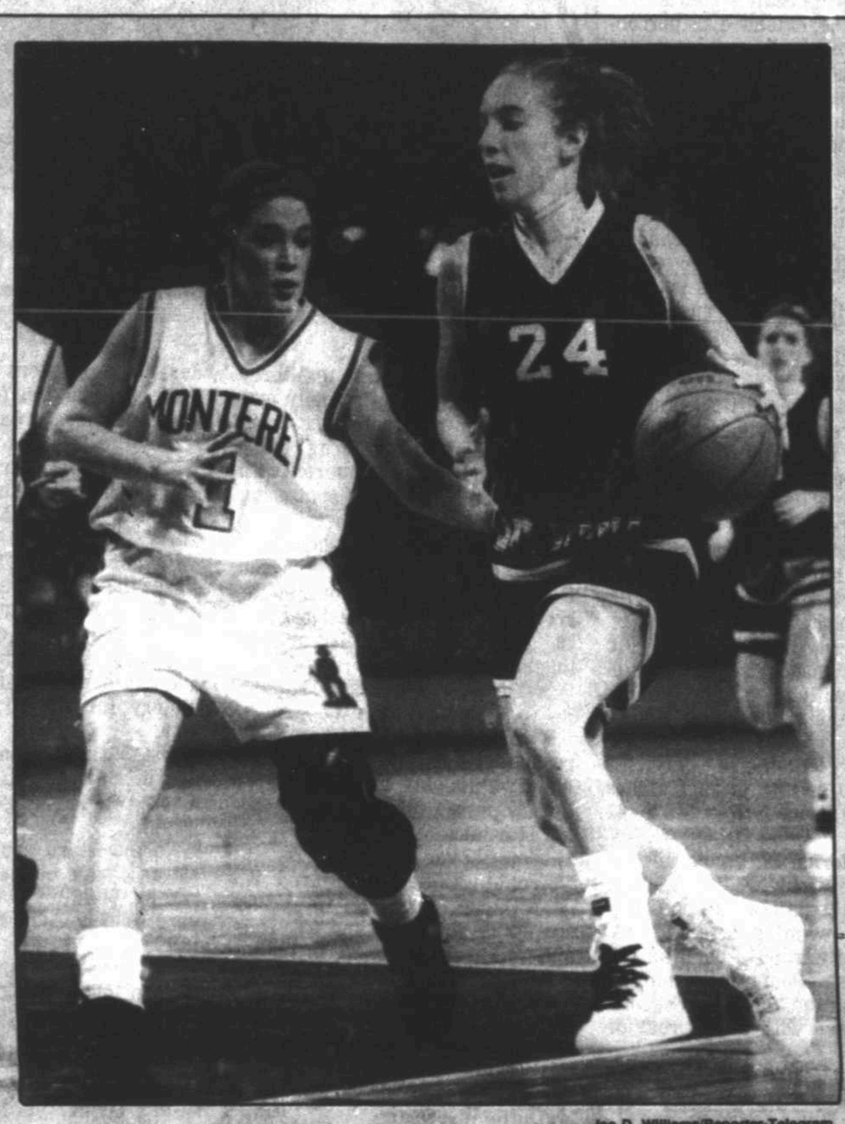

A night after what may be the biggest win in Midland coach Jim Raughton's career at MHS, Midland High avoided a big drop off cloud nine by beating previously undefeated Copperas Cove 64-49 to capture the Tall City Invitational.

"I think both teams were flat," said a drained Raughton. "We beat Monterey the night before, you know the excitement of defeating a 3-5A team and we just couldn't get it back up.

"Sometimes you're going to come out stale or flat, but you have to work through it all and we did tonight."

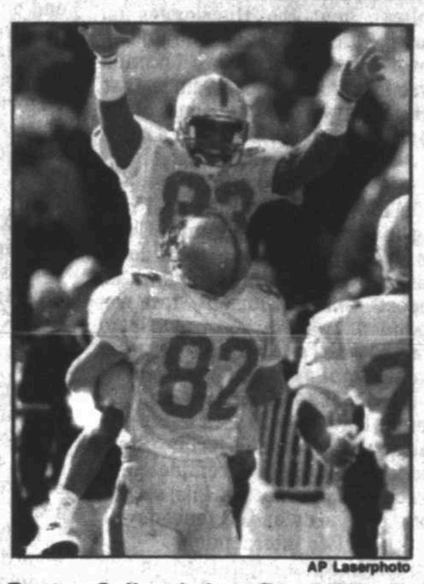

The Lady Bulldogs had to overcome early foul trouble as senior guard Julie Chancellor picked up her third personal foul with 5:17 remaining in the second quarter. Chancellor, who led MHS with 16 points, spent most of the night on

No. 1 Irish dethroned

By Ron Lesko
AP Sports Writer

SOUTH BEND, Ind. — Just when it looked like Notre Dame had found one more miracle, luck ran out on the Irish.

Boston College upset No. 1 Notre Dame and the New Year's Day bowl picture, winning 41-39 Saturday on David Gordon's 41-yard field goal as time expired.

Gordon's kick stopped the longest winning streak in the nation at 17 games and spoiled a shot by Notre Dame — which rallied from a 21-point

Tigers finish 10-0

AUBURN, Ala. — No. 6 Auburn has done all it can do. Now the Tigers must get some help to claim an improbable national championship.

With starting quarterback Stan White sitting on the bench with an injured knee, Auburn completed the first 11-0 season in school history with a 22-14 victory over No. 11 Alabama, the defending national champion.

Patrick Nix, who had thrown only 12 passes all year, came into the game in the third quarter with Auburn trailing 14-5 and facing fourth-and-15 at the Crimson Tide 35. On his first play, he threw a touchdown pass to Frank Sanders to begin the Tigers' comeback.

James Bostic sealed the victory over Alabama (8-2-1) when he ran 70 yards up the middle for a touchdown with 2:19 remaining.

Auburn's season is over. NCAA probation bars the Tigers from postseason play, but it doesn't prohibit them from claiming the No. 1 spot in The Associated Press poll. Auburn got some help Saturday when No. 1 Notre Dame was beaten 41-39 by Boston College and No. 5 Ohio State lost 28-0 to Michigan.

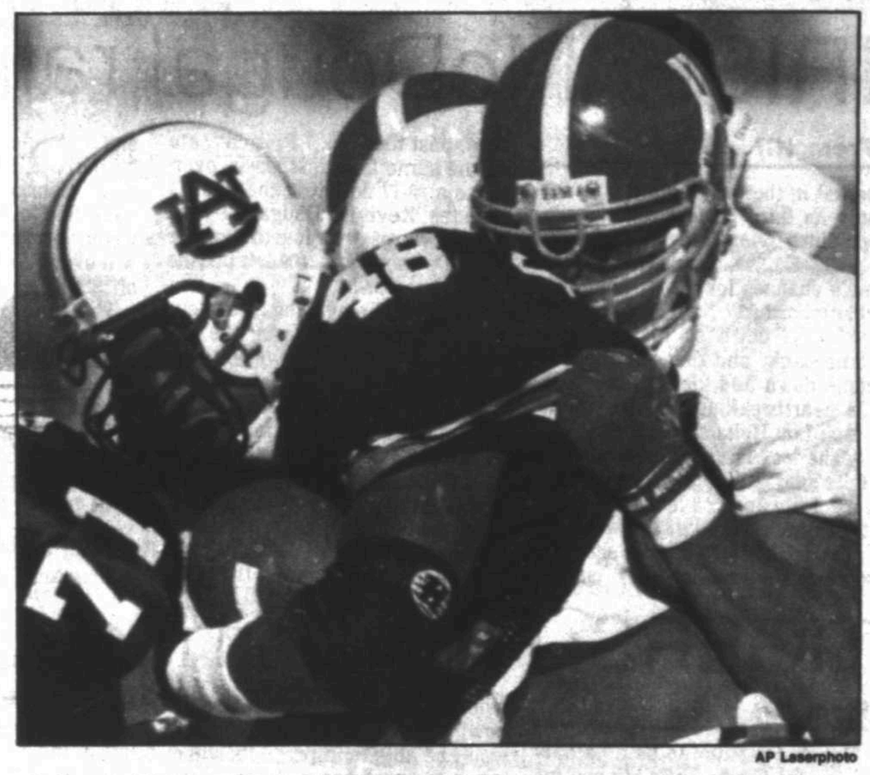

Alabama, despite its first loss to Auburn since 1989, already had clinched the Southeastern Conference Western Division title because the Tigers, 8-0 in the SEC, are ineligible for the league title. The Tide, which is 5-2-1 in the SEC, plays No. 8 Florida in the league championship game Dec. 4 for the right to play in the Sugar Bowl.

One record that will count is that Terry Bowden is the first to go 11-0 in his rookie season as a major college coach.

Bowden also became the first Tigers coach since 1904 to beat Alabama in his first try and accomplished something that has eluded his father, Florida State coach Bobby Bowden: perfection.

Auburn had gone 10-11-1 the last two years, a tumultuous period which included a play-for-pay scandal that forced coach Pat Dye to resign and led to NCAA sanctions just before the season began.

Michigan whips No. 5 Buckeyes

By Harry Atkins

ANN ARBOR, Mich. — Fans on both sides wondered why Michigan was favored over Ohio State. Now they know.

Tyrone Wheatley ran for 105 yards, Ty Law led an inspired defense with two of the Wolverines' four interceptions, and Michigan defeated Ohio State 28-0 Saturday, marring the Buckeyes' Rose Bowl dream.

The fifth-ranked Buckeyes (9-1-1 overall, 6-1-1 Big Ten) needed either a win or a tie against Michigan (7-4, 5-3) to clinch their first trip to Pasadena since the 1984 season. Ohio State will play in the Rose Bowl anyway if Wisconsin loses either of its final two games.

Ohio State, which hadn't been shut out since 1982, was unbeaten in 16 regular-season games, yet the Wolverines went into the game as 1¼ point favorites. They quickly showed the genius of the linemakers.

'Horns get revenge

AUSTIN — Texas beat Baylor at its own game and paid the Bears back for knocking the Longhorns out of bowl contention a year ago.

Mike Adams had 267 all-purpose yards and a touchdown and Tony Brackens sacked the quarterback three times Saturday as Texas kept its Cotton Bowl hopes alive and eliminated Baylor from the bowl picture with a 38-17 victory.

The Longhorns won with running and avenged a heartbreaking 21-20 victory by the Bears last year that sent Baylor to the Hancock Bowl and Texas home for the holidays.

"Last year's game was really tough for our team," said Texas coach John Mackovic. "It hurts quite a bit, so I think this is satisfying. Again, you lose last year — we should have won — and we came back this year as a competitor and played well."

Saturday's victory sets up a Thanksgiving night showdown between Texas and Texas A&M for a berth in the Cotton Bowl.

Should Texas lose to the Aggies, it too would be eliminated from bowl contention for not meeting the necessary six victories against NCAA Division I teams.

"They (Texas A&M) are going to be pretty well favored, I am sure of that," Mackovic said. "We have a lot of respect for them."

Baylor coach Chuck Reedy faulted his defense for failing to stop a startling Texas ground attack that rolled up 286 of a total 512 yards of offense.

Reedy gave credit to Texas for shutting down his team's normally potent rushing game.

"They're getting better every week, and they played well," Reedy said. "They played better defen-

Mountaineers clinch Big East, calm 'Canes

Associated Press

MORGANTOWN, W.Va. — West Virginia is the new Beast of the East.

Robert Walker scored on a 19-yard run with 6:08 left as the ninth-ranked Mountaineers beat No. 4 Miami 17-14 Saturday and clinched a tie for the Big East championship.

■ Top 25 Roundup

The Mountaineers (10-0, 6-0 Big East) can win the title outright by beating Boston College next Friday. If West Virginia loses, it would finish in a three-way tie for the title with Miami (8-2, 6-1) and Boston College.

It was Miami's first conference loss since the Big East began in 1991 and its first loss to a league member since 1984, when Boston College beat the Hurricanes on Doug Flutie's last-second touchdown pass. It also was Miami's first loss in November since that "Hail Mary" loss, a span of 32 games.

No. 2 Florida St. 62
N. Carolina St. 3

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. — Playing in his final home game, Charlie Ward threw four touchdown passes and ran for a touchdown as second-ranked Florida State rebounded from a loss at Notre Dame with a 62-3 victory over North Carolina State.

Ward was 27-of-36 for 278 yards before leaving with 2:18 left in the third period and Florida State leading 48-3. He has completed 69 percent of his passes this season for 2,586 yards and 23 touchdowns with just two interceptions.

Florida State capitalized on two North Carolina State fumbles in the first five minutes of the game to stake an early 14-0 lead. Ward threw for three touchdowns and ran for one by halftime to spark his club to a 34-3 cushion.

The Seminoles (10-1, 8-0 Atlantic Coast Conference) were the only team ranked in the top five to win Saturday when the Nos. 1, 4 and 5 teams lost and No. 3 Nebraska was idle.

Coach Bobby Bowden had hoped his team would snap back from last week's 31-24 defeat at Notre Dame to keep alive its hopes for a national title. Florida State closes the season next week at Florida, the Seminoles' third top 10 opponent of the season.

Florida State, already guaranteed a New Years' Day bowl by clinching the league title two weeks ago, closed out its second straight perfect season in the conference, outscoring ACC opponents 391-51.

North Carolina State (7-4, 4-4) lost its best opportunity for a touchdown early in the fourth period when Florida State's Corey Sawyer picked off a pass in the end zone and went 71 yards to set up Jon Stark's 10-yard touchdown pass to Warrick Dunn.

Freshman fullback Clarence Williams and reserve tailback Clyde Allen also scored touchdowns on short runs.

Steve Videtich kicked a 46-yard field goal in the first period for the Wolfpack's lone points.

Ward threw two touchdown passes to Kevin Knox on plays covering 23 and 4 yards, lobbed a 1-yard scoring throw to Lonnie Johnson and teamed with Matt Frier on a 5-yard TD in addition to his own a 2-yard run.

In just two seasons, Ward became the school's career total offense leader with 6,161 yards and his 45 touchdown passes rank second on Florida State's charts.

Bowden, 64, extended his personal NCAA mark of consecutive 10-win seasons to seven with his 237th victory, one short of former Ohio State coach Woody Hayes for fifth place on the career list.

No. 7 Tennessee 48
Kentucky 0

LEXINGTON, Ky. — Cory Fleming caught two touchdown passes, setting a Tennessee record for career TD receptions with 18, and Charlie Garner rushed 19 times for 186 yards and another score as the Volunteers crushed Kentucky 48-0.

Tennessee (8-1-1, 5-1-1 Southeastern Conference) handed Kentucky (6-5, 4-4) its worst shutout loss since a 55-0 drubbing by Centre in 1921.

Fleming's first score came on an 8-yard pass from Heath Shuler, capping a 10-play, 81-yard drive on Tennessee's first possession with 9:35 left in the first quarter.

Garner, who has rushed for 1,010 yards this season, scored on a 6-yard run with 16 seconds remaining in the half for a 17-0 advantage.

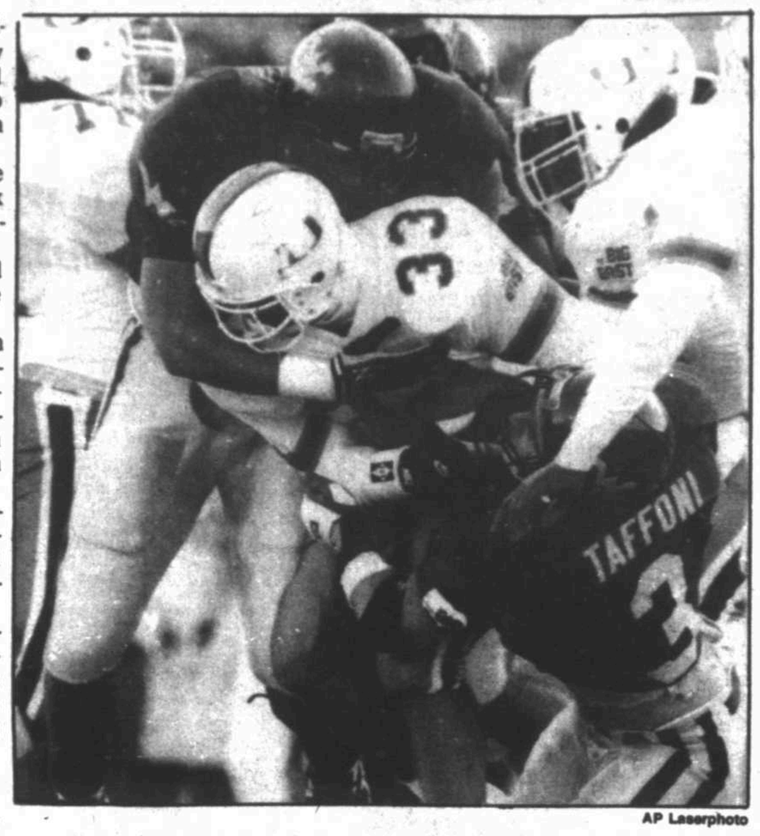

Kentucky managed only 244 yards, 190 on the ground. Jones completed seven of 15 passes for 42 yards.

No. 8 Florida 52, Vanderbilt 0

GAINESVILLE, Fla. — Florida extended the nation's second-longest home winning streak to 23 games and earned a berth in the Southeastern Conference championship game for the second straight year with a 52-0 rout of Vanderbilt.

The eighth-ranked Gators, who will face Alabama in the SEC title game on Dec. 4, amassed 454 yards and forced eight Vanderbilt turnovers in the final tuneup for next week's regular-season finale against No. 2 Florida State.

Terry Dean threw touchdown passes of 18 and 4 yards to Aubrey Hill and scored on a sloppily executed wide receiver pass from Chris Doering before being benched in the second quarter with Florida leading 24-0 but sputtering on offense.

Miami's Donnell Bennett (33) is tackled by West Virginia defenders Matt Taffoni (3) and Barry Hawkins in the first half as the ninth-ranked Mountaineers upset the fourth-ranked Hurricanes 17-14 Saturday.

Florida (9-1, 7-1 SEC) held Vanderbilt (4-6, 1-6) to 225 yards and Ed Robinson returned one of the six fumbles the Commodores lost 48 yards for a third-quarter touchdown.

No. 14 Penn State 43
Northwestern 21

EVANSTON, Ill. — Mike Archie rushed for a career-high 173 yards and two touchdowns and Kerry Collins passed for 278 yards, leading 14th-ranked Penn State to a 43-21 victory over Northwestern.

Archie, filling for injured Ki-Jana Carter, carried 27 times and scored on runs of 5 and 23 yards and Collins was 19-of-30, including a 15-yard touchdown to Bobby Engram.

Engram caught eight passes for 132 yards. It was his fourth 100-yard game this season, tying a Penn State record set by O.J. McDuffie last year.

Northwestern took a 14-13 lead in the second quarter as Len Williams ran for one touchdown and passed for another. But the Nittany Lions scored on five of the next six possessions to take a 43-14 lead early in the fourth quarter when Archie scored on a 23-yard run.

Northwestern scored a consolation touchdown in the fourth quarter on Williams' 15-yard pass to Chris Gamble.

Penn State (8-2, 5-2 Big Ten) closes the regular season at Michigan State next Saturday. The season ended with eight straight losses for the Wildcats (2-9, 0-8) and left them without a conference victory for the first time since 1989.

The Nittany Lions took a 10-0 lead on a 5-yard run by Archie and a 42-yard field goal by Craig Fayak.

Northwestern countered with a 71-yard drive capped by a 2-yard run by Williams, but another 42-yard field goal by Fayak made it 13-7.

Northwestern came back with a 74-yard touchdown pass from Williams to Dave Beazley and a brief 14-13 lead.

UCLA 27, USC 21

LOS ANGELES — Ricky Davis rushed for 153 yards and Marvin Goodwin made a dramatic, game-saving interception in the final minute to lead No. 16 UCLA to a 27-21 victory over 22nd-ranked Southern Cal and put the Bruins in the Rose Bowl for the first time in eight years.

UCLA (8-3) finished Pacific-10 play with a 6-2 record, the same as USC. But the Bruins get the Rose Bowl berth because of the win over the Trojans (7-5) and an earlier victory over Arizona.

UCLA led 17-0 at halftime, but the Trojans rallied behind two TD passes by Rob Johnson in the second half. Then Johnson almost pulled it out at the end.

No. 18 Colorado 21, Iowa St. 16

AMES, Iowa — A 49-yard touchdown pass from halfback Lamont Warren to Charles Johnson in the fourth quarter lifted No. 18 Colorado to a 21-16 victory over stubborn Iowa State.

An injury-slowed Iowa State team scored 13 fourth-quarter points to stay close to Colorado (7-3-1), which finished second in the Big Eight at 5-1-1 and secured a coalition bowl bid.

It was Colorado's 10th straight victory over the Cyclones (3-8, 2-5), running the Buffaloes' record against unranked teams to 33-1-2 in its past 36 games.

No. 20 Kansas St. 21, Oklahoma St. 17

STILLWATER, Okla. — Chad May's 2-yard touchdown pass to tight end Brad Seib with 17 seconds left finished an 80-yard drive in the final minute and gave Kansas State a 21-17 victory over Oklahoma State.

The victory gave the Wildcats (8-2-1 overall, 4-2-1 Big Eight) the third eight-win season in school history. It was just their seventh road victory since 1980, three of them coming at Stillwater.

Oklahoma State (3-8, 0-7) wound up winless in the conference for the second time in three years after seemingly having the game won.

No. 21 Indiana 24, Purdue 17

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. — Shane Thomas, a redshirt freshman, rushed for two touchdowns, including a 10-yard run in the fourth quarter that lifted No. 21 Indiana over Purdue.

The victory in the annual Old Oaken Bucket game kept alive a possible bowl bid for the Hoosiers (8-3, 5-3 Big Ten) and gave Purdue (1-10, 0-8) its worst finish in 86 years.

The 1-10 record was Purdue's worst since an 0-5 mark in 1907.

The Boilermakers, winless in the Big Ten for the first time since 1946 and setting a school record for the most losses in a season, set up two Indiana scores in the first half with fumbles on consecutive possessions.

No. 12 Wisconsin 35, Illinois 10

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. — Darrell Bevell threw three touchdown passes as No. 12 Wisconsin crushed Illinois 35-10 and pulled within one victory of its first Rose Bowl appearance in 31 years.

Before the game started, the Badgers knew that Michigan had already beaten Ohio State 28-0, preventing the Buckeyes from clinching the Big Ten title and the Rose Bowl bid. Wisconsin now can win the Big Ten title and the trip to Pasadena by defeating Michigan State in Japan on Dec. 4.

If the Spartans win that game, Ohio State would play in the Rose Bowl.

Wisconsin (8-1-1, 5-1-1 Big Ten) was simply to much for Illinois (5-6, 5-3).

The Fighting Illini, fourth nationally with a rushing defense that yielded only 96 yards a game, gave up 301 to the Badgers, who got 100-yard performances from Brent Moss and Terrell Fletcher.

No. 24 Clemson 16, South Carolina 13

COLUMBIA, S.C. — Derrick Witherspoon had a 5-yard touchdown run and late-season replacement quarterback Dexter McCleon directed a second-half comeback as No. 24 Clemson defeated South Carolina.

Witherspoon's score for the Tigers (8-3), who trailed 13-3 at halftime, evened the score at 13-13, and Nelson Welch's third field goal — a 31-yarder with 11:53 remaining — gave them the lead.

Clemson, which has won four of its last five games, finished third in the Atlantic Coast Conference and is likely headed for a Peach Bowl matchup with Kentucky.

No. 25 Va. Tech 20, No. 23 Virginia 17

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. — Virginia Tech put the finishing touches on another late-season collapse by Virginia, beating the 23rd-ranked Cavaliers.

Tech (8-3), headed to the Independence Bowl, turned a pair of Cavalier miscues into 10 points on the way to winning for the fifth time in six games. The Hokies had their most successful regular season since going 9-1-1 in 1986.

It marked the second consecutive year Virginia (7-4) jumped out to a 5-0 start before losing four of six to end the regular season. Last year's slide cost the Cavaliers a bowl bid, but it remained unclear whether this season's skid would produce the same result.

Representatives from the Peach and Hall of Fame bowls who attended the game said they wanted to keep their options open.

deficit in the fourth quarter — for only its third perfect regular season since 1949. The victory by the No. 12 Eagles clouded Notre Dame's chances for a ninth national championship.

"To be down so far and then come back, and then for them to come down and kick a field goal, it's heartbreaking," Notre Dame coach Lou Holtz said.

"The loss is very devastating," Holtz said. "We hurt, but it is all part of life and you learn to handle it. It's not the end of the world."

The Irish (10-1), finally showing some of the emotion that carried them past then-No. 1 Florida State on the same field last week, overcame a 38-17 deficit in the final 11 minutes. Kevin McDougal's 4-yard touchdown pass on fourth down to Lake Dawson with 1:09 left put the Irish ahead 39-38.

But Glenn Foley, who threw four touchdown passes, drove the Eagles (8-2) from their own 10 to set up the winning field goal. Gordon had missed from 40 yards into the wind earlier in the game.

"I knew I would make the kick," said Gordon, who also had missed a potential game-winning field goal earlier this season against Northwestern.

Gordon's kick came at the same end of the field where Notre Dame cornerback Shawn Wooden batted down Charlie Ward's pass at the goal line on the final play last week, preserving Notre Dame's win over Florida State and setting off a wild celebration.

This time, Boston College's fans swarmed the field while Notre Dame's players slowly walked into the tunnel leading to the locker room.

The victory was the Eagles' eighth in a row and avenged one of their most embarrassing defeats, a 54-7 loss at Notre Dame last year.

"You couldn't ask for a better ending to a football game. We're a better football team than we were a year ago. It was two different years, two different teams," Boston College coach Tom Coughlin said.

The Eagles lost two of the final three games following last year's loss to Notre Dame, including a defeat by Tennessee in the Hall of Fame Bowl.

"In January, when I was home after the bowl game, everyone harped on the Notre Dame game," Boston College linebacker Stephen Boyd said. "They said, 'You had a great season, but Notre Dame killed you.' We waited 365 days for this."

This was the eighth time Notre Dame had lost a perfect regular season in the final game, mostly recently in 1989 when it fell 27-10 at Miami. Not since Southern Cal beat the Irish 42-23 in 1979 had a visitor scored more points at Notre Dame Stadium.

The last time Notre Dame played as No. 1, it lost at home to No. 18 Penn State 24-21 on Nov. 17, 1990, on a field goal with four seconds left.

The Irish seemed flat for most of the afternoon and looked much different than the team that powered past Florida State last week. Boston College led 24-14 at halftime and scored a touchdown on its first possession of the second half.

"We just weren't very sharp in the first part of the game, but I felt we would play our way into the competitiveness of the game, which we did," Holtz said.

Lee Becton's 29-yard touchdown run, plus his two-point conversion pass back to McDougal, made it 38-25 with 10:12 to play. After Foley fumbled a snap, the first big mistake of the day for Boston College, Notre Dame scored again on Ray Zellars' 4-yard run with 4:02 left and cut its deficit to 38-32.

The Irish got the ball again after forcing Boston College to punt. McDougal threw 46 yards to Derrick Mayes, who made a sprawling, over-the-shoulder catch.

TIGERS: Probation may cost national title

(From 1C)

But that seemed to be a catharsis for the Tigers, who slipped by Mississippi 16-12 in their opener and got better as the season went along. When it was over, they were undefeated for the first time since 1957, when the Tigers, ironically, went 10-0 and won the national title despite being on probation.

But that was a different era, when the polls came out before the bowl season. This time, Auburn won't be able to improve its standing in the postseason. Instead, the Tigers will have to hope the teams ahead of them lose by Jan. 1.

It looked like Auburn would suffer its first loss Saturday. Alabama jumped to a 14-5 halftime lead thanks to two big plays by Kevin Lee. He ran 63 yards for a touchdown on a reverse, then caught a 34-yard pass from Jay Barker to set up Chris Anderson's 19-yard scoring run with just 1:08 left in the second quarter.

Things looked worse when White, Auburn's senior quarterback, sprained ligaments in his left knee while being sacked. Nix, a sophomore, calmly lofted a pass to Sanders, who outleaped a defender at the 4 and went into the end zone to make it 14-12.

Auburn went ahead for good when Scott Etheridge kicked his second field goal, a 26-yarder, with 14:14 left in the game. Then it was Bostic, who got through a hole at line, zig-zagged at midfield to pick up a key block by Sanders and outraced the defense down the right sideline. Bostic finished with 147 yards in the game and 1,242 for the season.

Barker lost for the first time as Alabama's starting quarterback after going 23-0-1 in his previous starts.

UPSET: Wolverines meet early expectations

(From 1C)

Todd Collins, who completed 14 of 20 passes for 140 yards with one interception, tossed a 25-yard touchdown pass to Mercury Hayes and had a 3-yard TD toss to Che Foster. Jon Ritchie scored on a 1-yard run and Ed Davis had a 5-yard TD run.

On the second snap of Michigan's second possession, Wheatley ripped off a 43-yard run to the Ohio State 30. Three plays later, Hayes made a twisting, diving catch of Collins' wind-blown pass in the end zone and the Wolverines were ahead 7-0.

The record crowd of 106,867 in Michigan Stadium erupted, and the Buckeyes never recovered.

Ohio State's defense, ranked No. 6 against the run, had allowed an average of just 99.4 yards per game. Wheatley, completing his second 1,000-yard season, had surpassed that before leaving with a shoulder injury with 5 minutes remaining in the second quarter.

Chuck Winters and Alfie Burch also had interceptions for Michigan. The Wolverines, finally playing the way they had been expected to all season, also came up with four sacks on Ohio State quarterbacks Bobby Hoying and Bret Powers.

Before this game, the Buckeyes had thrown only 10 interceptions all season, three by Powers, who gave up three of the four against Michigan.

The sacks and interceptions went a long way toward taking Ohio State split end Joey Galloway out of the game. Galloway, who already tied a school record with 11 touchdown receptions, caught three passes for 47 yards against the Wolverines.

Law's first interception, on a Powers pass for Galloway in the second quarter, gave Michigan the ball at its 5. But the Wolverines, with Collins and Alexander hooking up for a 50-yard completion to the Ohio State 1, needed just five plays to cover the 95 yards. Ritchie punched it in for a 14-0 lead with 5:30 left in the first half.

Moments later, Winters stepped in front of Galloway for another interception and returned it 19 yards to the Ohio State 31. A 10-yard pass to Alexander and a 12-yard run by Ed Davis keyed that six-play drive, which led to Foster's touchdown and a 21-0 halftime lead.

The Buckeyes were forced to punt on their first possession of the third quarter. But punter Tim Williams let his knee touch the ground while fielding the snap, giving Michigan the ball at the Ohio State 32.

Alexander gained 21 yards on a reverse to key a four-play drive which ended with Davis outrunning two defenders to the left corner for a 28-0 lead.

It was Michigan's first shutout of Ohio State since a 22-0 victory in 1976. The Buckeyes had gone 136 games since a 6-0 shutout by Wisconsin in 1982.

Cowboy DBs have kept wide receivers out of end zone

IRVING (NYT) — Sixty-three days. Fourteen dog months. Nine National Football League weeks, which in the Dallas Cowboys' case, translates into seven games. So much can happen in that time, whatever the measure.

Ross Perot can get on a television debate and cast a favorable light on the North American Free Trade Agreement by opposing it. The Bobbitts of Virginia can painstakingly inform the nation of the dangers of sharp household objects. Michael Jackson can disappear for drug treatment that reportedly does not involve cosmetic surgery. The Supercollider can turn into an expensive — even at government prices — hole in the ground.

What hasn't happened in that time, at least as of noon Sunday, is this: an opposing wide receiver catching a touchdown pass against the Cowboys. They've faced Pro Bowler Sterling Sharpe. They've faced Hall-of-Famer-in-the-flesh Jerry Rice. They've gone from winless (0-2) to sinless, carrying a seven-game winning streak into Sunday's game against the Atlanta Falcons at the Georgia Dome.

They've put in 381 minutes and 33 seconds of game time since Ricky Proehl caught a third-quarter touchdown pass in the Cowboys' 17-10 victory against the Phoenix Cardinals on Sept. 19. Not once in that time have the Cowboys' starting cornerbacks — a couple of guys teammates have tagged as "Pup" and "Scissorhands" — let down their guard in or around the end zone.

"Has it been that long?" said the Cowboys' left cornerback, Kevin Smith said. "Hmmm."

Ah, but what kind of perspective could Smith have on the passage of time? Smith is the Cowboys' 23-year-old Pup, the fourth-youngest starting cornerback in the NFL, and he leads the team with three interceptions. He plays opposite the reluctant Scissorhands — that would be Larry Brown, who, nine days short of his 24th birthday, is the NFL's fifth-youngest starting cornerback. Brown has three interceptions to show for having started 37 of the Cowboys' last 38 regular-season games. None of those interceptions have come this season, but that doesn't stop Brown from proclaiming, "We've got a new Scissorhands now — (nickel back) Kenny Gant. That's the new Scissorhands."

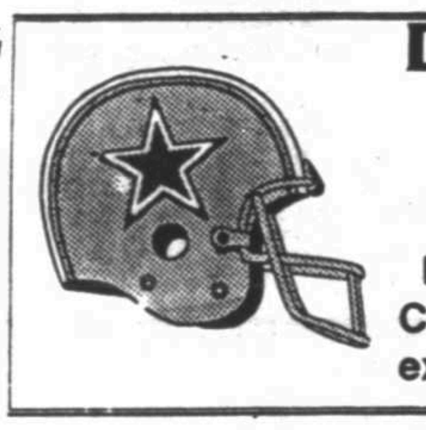

"I worked hard this off-season catching balls, so my hands have improved drastically," said Brown, who does have two interceptions in five career playoff games. "I've just got to get some balls my way."

The thing is, Brown and Smith are doing their best to discourage passes from coming their way. The Cardinals threw 46 passes last week in a 20-15 defeat against the Cowboys and got only six completions to outside receivers for all the trouble. No pass play gained more than 17 yards — the kind of development Cowboys coach Jimmy Johnson, defensive coordinator Butch Davis and defensive backs coach Dave Campo are coming to expect.

The Cowboys have limited opponents to six offensive touchdowns in the last eight games. Teams are averaging an NFL-low 9.7 yards per completion against the Cowboys, or well below the league average of 11.6. The Cowboys have allowed only seven catches of 20 yards or longer to opposing wide receivers, a testament to the kind of coverage the cornerbacks are providing. Imagine the possibilities once Brown and Smith make the transition from precocious to proven.

"We're young, and when our contracts are up, we'll still be young," said Smith, who, like Brown, is signed through the 1995 season. "That's the only way I look at it. Age doesn't matter to me. You go up against (16-year-veteran) James Lofton — he doesn't care how old you are or how young you are. He knows what to do to get open. He knows what to do to catch the ball. A lot of teams look at us and say, 'Those guys are inexperienced.' I don't like to say I'm young, because it doesn't help us out. We don't get as much recognition. They don't know what kind of time we spend."

Smith and Brown already have put in enough time in the starting lineup for the Cowboys to modify their approach to pass defense. Brown came to the Cowboys as a 12th-round draft pick out of TCU in 1991, and he stuck because of his skills as a cover man. Smith was a first-round pick out of Texas A&M last year because of his flair for playmaking, and by Game 11 he was starting for a team that would go on to win the Super Bowl.

Kosar crams for start at Atlanta

■ In only his second week with the team, ex-Brown quarterback is still trying to learn the Cowboys' complex offense.

ATLANTA (AP) — Bernie Kosar wasn't counting on taking a crash course in a new offense halfway through the season.

That's exactly what he had to do after being waived by the Cleveland Browns midway through his ninth season. He landed in Dallas 10 days ago, studied coach Jimmy Johnson's playbook enough to help the Cowboys beat Phoenix 20-15 last Sunday and now, with more cram sessions under his belt, gets his first Dallas start against the Atlanta Falcons on Sunday.

"I still got a lot to learn," Kosar said.

Kosar said he studied the Dallas offensive system daily from 6:30 a.m. until after midnight before last week's game with the Cardinals, in which he passed for 199 yards and one touchdown.

"I really didn't want to go out there and have such a basic game plan that I let the other 10 guys and me down," Kosar said.

"There's some really great players on this team, certainly on this offense, and I didn't want to take them out of their game because the quarterback didn't understand the plays or didn't understand the reads. So I kind of put a lot of pressure on myself to get a good feel for the majority of the plays that the coaches wanted me to use in the game plan."

With Troy Aikman still bothered by a pulled hamstring, coach Jimmy Johnson said he expected Kosar to be his starter in the Georgia Dome when the Cowboys (7-2) seek their eighth victory in a row.

"He ran a lot of plays in the ballgame that he had never practiced," Johnson said. "I think it's just a compliment to his ability to be able to do it, not only mentally, but being able to adjust to it physically."

Johnson said that although he expects Kosar to start against the Falcons (3-6), "There is an outside shot that Troy might play some."

The game could be the first of two appearances in the Georgia Dome this season for the defending Super Bowl champion Cowboys. Dallas is favored to win the NFC title again, earning a return trip to the Super Bowl, which is scheduled for Atlanta next Jan. 30.

"The Cowboys are, I believe just watching them on film, the best team in the NFL right now," Falcons quarterback Bobby Hebert said. "They are playing well in all phases. We'll have to probably play our best game to even have a chance to win."

Despite playing with a sore elbow, Hebert has been Atlanta's offensive leader. He has thrown for 1,334 yards and 12 touchdowns.

Atlanta's defense, coming off a 13-0 shutout of the Los Angeles Rams, faces a formidable task in trying to slow down Emmitt Smith, who missed the first two games in a contract dispute.

Smith has rushed for 746 yards and seven touchdowns as the Cowboys have gone unbeaten since his return.

"He makes people miss tackles ... plus he runs through contact," Falcons coach Jerry Glanville said of Smith. "He's a real good football player."

The Cowboys have plenty of them.

TALL: Midland remains undefeated and captures tourney title

the bench nursing those fouls, but did come through down the stretch with eight-for-eight shooting from the foul line in the second half as Midland outscored Copperas Cove 22-12 on free throws.

Junior guard Amy Alcala, fresh off a 25-point performance against Monterey, scored 14.

Copperas Cove (3-1), led by Jennifer Doyle's 10 points, trailed 17-15 after the first period before Midland went on a 15-2 run to open the second quarter.

Midland (5-0) built a 16-point lead, 42-26 in the second half and then hit clutch free throws down the stretch, including four by Chancellor to ice the win.

There were 48 fouls whistled in the game and a technical foul called on Copperas Cove coach Skip Townsend in the first three minutes of the game.

"There just wasn't any flow (in the game)," said Raughton.

In the third place game, Lubbock Monterey forced 40 Midland Lee turnovers with an in-your-face, full court press to defeat the Lady Rebels 56-43.

Lee (1-3) stayed with the 3-5A giant for a half, trailing just 26-22 at intermission.

Monterey (4-1) turned up the defensive pressure in the second half and forced 12 Lee turnovers in the third period and jumped to a 48-31 lead after three quarters.

"Fatigue set in there at the end," said Midland Lee coach Elise Kail. "They play such a physical style of defense. The pressure is in your face all night long.

"Our kids stayed with them for awhile, but (the press) just wore us down."

Susan Seay led Lee with 11 points while Monterey guard Melissa Maines scored 25 points, including three, 3-point field goals. Micah Crutcher added 18 for the Lady Plainsmen.

Lee returns to action Saturday against 3A power Graham. "They're a very good team. This ain't no jelly bean schedule," said Kail.

Midland High will face Seminole Monday.

El Paso Burges 45 Pecos 30

Burgess (2-2) blew open a close game at half by controlling the offensive boards in the ninth place game.

Pecos held its first lead of the tournament at 2-0, but dropped to 0-4 on the season.

Jennifer Lucas and Patsy Garcia led the Lady Mustangs with 11 and 10 points while Pecos was led by Liza Nichols with 14 points.

Greenwood 51 El Paso Bowie 41

Greenwood claimed the seventh place trophy with a 51-41 win over El Paso Bowie.

Senior forward Jessica Stewart scored the Rangerettes first 10 points of the game as Bowie concentrated on Greenwood post Brandy Wright, leaving the outside open.

Leading 18-16 to open the third period, Wright scored 20 second half points to build an 18-point lead 45-27 in the fourth period. Greenwood (3-2) held off a late rally of Bowie three-pointers.

"We had one more big girl than they did and we tried to take advantage of our size advantage," said Greenwood coach Alan Wooten.

El Paso Del Valle 49 Andrews 30

Del Valle used a spread attack offensively to break the Andrews front line for the consolation championship.

"It gave us a chance to control the tempo," said Del Valle coach Fred Anaya.

Andrews (2-2) had success inside from center Stacy Bookout who had a game-high 19 points, but her teammates could manage just five field goals in the game.

LEE: Henry scores six touchdowns

(From 1C)

Henry had only 63 yards rushing last week, but claims that is the nature of the Lee offense.

"With our offense, you don't know who is going to get the yards. Last week, it was Courtney (Turner) and Jeremy (Warren). I guess it was just my turn today," Henry said.

Lee quarterback Courtney Turner failed to get his double-100 this week, but he did have 104 yards passing. Reserve Melvin Dunson had 113 yards rushing and two touchdowns. Dunson had only six carries while Henry had only 10. That was almost a 20-yard per carry average.

Lee's beleagured defense saw tackle Frank Melgoza injure a hand, but overall played better than a week ago.

The Rebs gave up 292 yards passing to Bowie quarterback Jaime Romo, but the Lee defense had five interceptions, two by Brian Quinonez, who returned one 15 yards for his first touchdown ever.

"It was pretty great to get that first touchdown," Quinonez said. "The Bowie quarterback (Romo) led El Paso in passing this year. We gave up a lot of yardage, but a good quarterback is going to do that. The thing is we stepped up and got the interceptions when we needed them."

Kevin Jordan, Lee Lauderdale and Dedrick Adams also came up with interceptions.

Bowie coach Ed Reveles was left just shaking his head after the game, "We knew Lee was tough, but they just intimidated us out there. Until you play a team like a Lee or Permian, you have no idea just how much improvement you need in your program. We're not at the same level."

Miller was apologetic after the win.

"It's kind of bad to score that kind of points," Miller said. "That doesn't help anybody. But they kept throwing the ball and we kept intercepting in good field position.

"Bowie is down in numbers and they aren't a real good football team. We scored 10 times against Eastwood in a scrimmage and that is who Bowie beat last week to get here. We had a pretty good indication of how it was going to go.

"I am proud of our kids for the way they've handled the travel the last two weeks. It gets tougher when just 16 are left. But at least we will be at home. This may be the last opportunity for some of our seniors to play at home. You don't get too many playoff games this deep into it at home. We've just got to take advantage of that."

Tickets for the Lee-Lewisville game will go on sale to season ticket holders at 8 a.m. Monday. The will have through Tuesday to stake claim to their options. All tickets left will go on sale to the general public Wednesday at 8 a.m. Tickville is next. You just have to put this one behind you. Besides, I don't even think I was touched on a couple of those long runs. Our line was blowing them away," Henry said.

ets are $7 for adults, $4 for students, and all tickets $9 at the gate Saturday.

Upset of No. 2 Vandy boosts starless Tech

By Teresa M. Walker
AP Sports Writer

JACKSON, Tenn. — Texas Tech emphatically answered the question of whether there's life after Sheryl Swoopes.

The 14th-ranked Lady Raiders upset No. 2 Vanderbilt 74-67 Saturday in the Hall of Fame Tip-Off Classic without Swoopes, last year's player of the year who led Texas Tech to the NCAA championship.

"From our point of view, I think it was probably one of the biggest wins our program has ever had," Texas Tech coach Marsha Sharp said. "We spent a lot of the summer with the 'Can we do it without Sheryl Swoopes?' syndrome."

Sharp called Swoopes the best player she's ever seen play basketball but said that the Lady Raiders had to show they could play without her.

"For our program to survive, we needed to come out and have a good showing today and at least let people know we still have a basketball program," Sharp said.

Saturday's game with Vanderbilt, the earliest opening to the women's season in NCAA history, was a rematch of last season's NCAA tournament semifinal that Texas Tech won 60-46.

Texas Tech used its quickness to tie the game at 67-67 with 57 seconds to go on a jumper by Connie Robinson, who finished with 18 points.

Nikki Heath stole the ball and fed Noel Johnson for the go-ahead 3-pointer with 40 seconds left, and then Heath capped the scoring by hitting all four shots from the free throw line.

Vanderbilt trailed 35-32 at halftime but took back the lead 55-54 with 8:26 left on a layup by Heidi Gillingham. Consecutive 3-pointers by Ginger Jared and Julie Powell gave the Commodores their largest lead of the half at 66-60.

Texas Tech hit 72 percent from the free throw line on 18-of-25 shooting. Vanderbilt, which was only 36 percent from the floor, went to the line only eight times and hit five.

"We're not a very good basketball team right now," Vanderbilt coach Jim Foster said. "This team has got to wake up. I've always said the polls don't mean a blip. I could care less about them.

"That team was hungrier than we were."

Foster thought his Commodores rebounded better in the rematch with a 45-36 edge but he said his team played too streaky.

Vanderbilt twice led by six in the first half with the last coming with 2:54 left on a shot by Kelly Dougherty for a 32-26 lead. But the Lady Raiders outscored the Commodores 9-0 and led 35-32 at halftime.

Janice Farris added 15 points for Texas Tech, Michi Atkins 14 and Johnson 12.

Powell led Vandy with 20 points, Gillingham had 15 and Dougherty 10.

Pan Am wins big, 96-56

EDINBURG, (AP) — Greg Guy, the nation's leading scorer in 1992, scored 31 points and had seven assists as Texas-Pan American routed Monterrey Tech 96-56 in an exhibition game Saturday night.

Guy, who averaged 29.3 points per game as a junior, had 20 of his points in the second half as the Broncs broke the game open. UTPA led 42-28 at halftime.

Reggy Scott added 14 points and Greg Black had 11 for the Broncs.

Ignacio Garcia led Tech (15-6) with 12 points.

The Broncs open their preseason using full-court pressure to force the Rams into 30 turnovers.

American hoopsters form European team

ORENSE, Spain (AP) — For the first time, a European basketball team has assembled a starting unit of five Americans. However, it's their race, not their nationality, that has attracted the most attention.

The five black players for the Coren Orense club have raised questions about race that Spaniards are unaccustomed to addressing.

"We're five Americans, but we'd be no big deal over here if we were white," said Howard Wood, a former University of Tennessee player.

Spain's respected daily newspaper El Pais referred to the club's starters as the "Jackson Five." Another paper called them "five friends from Harlem." They've heard themselves described as the "team from Cameroon" and seen countless headlines playing off the word "black."

"If they want to call us the 'Jackson Five' and mean by that a group that's quickly becoming well known, we'll accept that," said forward Jackie Espinosa Johnson. "But if they're just trying to identify us as a group of black guys, that's not acceptable."

Polls have shown Spain to be among Europe's most racially tolerant countries, which is partly due to the fact that until a few years ago non-whites were rare here. Now there is a steady flow of illegal immigration from Africa and Latin America, but the level of racial awareness and sensitivity is still low.

"It's not racism as Americans know it, it's racial ignorance," said former UCLA player Brad Wright. "They're not educated here on these issues."

"If they were really racists they would be more subtle about it and never as obvious as they are. They just haven't thought about it," added Wright, who is married to a Spaniard.

"But calling us the 'Jackson Five' is better than calling us the 'Osmond Brothers,' " he said with a smile.

Although Wright has become more tolerant, his wife, Milagros, is more critical.

"This country was isolated for a long time and people aren't used to living together with different races," she said. "Spaniards always say they're not racists — and they couldn't be when there were only white Catholics here."

Before the 1992 Summer Olympics, many blacks were offended by a museum exhibit near Barcelona of a stuffed 19th century African bushman known as "El Negro."

Despite headlines and remarks focusing on race, Coren Orense's starting five say they are treated well by fans and residents of this largely agricultural city of 100,000 located in Spain's isolated northwest region of Galicia.

"These guys live well here and the community accepts them," said Tim Shea, an American who is in his 14th season coaching basketball in Europe. "I can't say the Spaniards (on the team) are 100 percent happy, but I think they understand."

The club, which is among the top six in the tough 20-team Spanish first division, isn't completely American. Espinosa and Wood each has taken Spanish citizenship, which is why Coren Orense can field five foreigners instead of the maximum three allowed by Spanish league rules.

Wood has a Spanish wife; Espinosa's mother was a Spaniard; Wright, married to a Spaniard, is seeking Spanish citizenship, and Shea is married to a Spaniard.

The only two without a Spanish connection are guards Andre Turner — a former Memphis State and NBA player — and Chandler Thompson, of Ball State.

"I call these guys the pioneers — this is how world and European basketball will look one day," said Shea, a New York native.

Salary demands of Spanish players forced the league last season to increase from two to three the maximum number of foreigners per team.

Spaniards generally earn more than foreigners — not because they are better players, but because there is a limited supply of quality local talent.

When only two foreigners were allowed, teams always selected big men. With the third player, which has made Spain into Europe's strongest league, teams can now take a play-making guard like Turner.

"They call Andre 'The General,' he's the best point guard in the league," said Shea, who brought in Turner and Thompson last season. "Charles Barkley does what Andre does, just in a bigger body."

The Spanish media, used to textbook, pattern-oriented basketball, have described Coren Orense's style as a playground-type game. Shea said the Spanish press just doesn't understand.

Minnesota gets NIT berth

■ Top 25 Roundup

MINNEAPOLIS — John Thomas, Minnesota's only newcomer, sparked runs in both halves Saturday and helped the 10th-ranked Gophers earn a return trip to New York with a 91-71 Preseason NIT quarterfinal victory over Georgia.

Minnesota (2-0), the 1993 postseason NIT champion, will play No. 9 Kansas on Wednesday night at Madison Square Garden. Top-ranked North Carolina will play the winner of Saturday night's Towson State-Massachusetts game in the other semifinal.

David Grim, a seldom-used reserve last season, scored 12 points and Thomas, who was making his college debut, added eight as the Gophers' bench outscored the Bulldogs' reserves 32-13.

Shandon Anderson scored 19 points for Georgia (1-1), which is off until a Dec. 4 game against Western Carolina.

Arriel McDonald, who scored 14 points, had seven assists to become Minnesota's career leader with 380, passing Marc Wilson by five. Randy Carter led the Gophers with 20 points.

Georgia took a 17-5 lead and was still up 21-12 but made only 15 of 18 shots during the final 10½ minutes of the half and fell behind 36-30 at halftime.

Thomas ignited the run with six points and three rebounds. His first basket tied it at 26 with 4:36 left and his bank shot 33 seconds later put Minnesota ahead for good.

The Gophers led 52-46 midway through the second half before Thomas tipped in a rebound to begin a 31-11 surge. After McDonald missed a shot, Thomas got the rebound to set up two free throws by McDonald. The Gophers then made their next 12 shots to take a 26-point lead. Grim had seven points during the run.

No. 22 Massachusetts 82, Towson St. 55

AMHERST, Mass — Junior Lou Roe scored 24 points and freshman Marcus Camby added 16 points and 13 rebounds to lead No. 22 Massachusetts over Towson State in the second round of the Preseason NIT.

The Minutemen will face No. 1 North Carolina on Wednesday night in the semifinals at New York's Madison Square Garden. Ninth-ranked Kansas will meet No. 10 Minnesota, which beat Georgia 91-71, in the other semifinal.

Rockets set franchise mark with 9th straight

Associated Press

HOUSTON — The Houston Rockets took care of their latest victory early.

Hakeem Olajuwon scored 16 of his 22 points in the second half as the Rockets, who had taken a big first-half lead, held off a charge by the Los Angeles Clippers for a 108-86 victory, a franchise-record ninth straight.

"We're unbeatable so far," guard Scott Brooks said. "If we keep going like this we're going to have a great home record.

"I knew we'd start well because of our nucleus. But to start like this is like every team wants to. I think the key is we like each other on and off the court."

The Rockets became the 10th team in NBA history to open the season with a 9-0 record. The all-time season-opening record is 15-0 by Washington in 1948-49.

Houston took a 60-36 halftime lead and the Clippers clearly were on the defensive without forward Danny Manning, sidelined with a broken finger. But the Clippers woke up in the third quarter.

Loy Vaught and Gary Grant led the rally and the Clippers trailed 77-66 at the start of the fourth quarter.

"They give you a solid effort for 48 minutes," Vaught said.. "Last year they'd have several lapses during a game and they didn't recover. Tonight they had a lapse but they came right back.

"Their key is aggressive defense and unselfishness. That's what's making them a great team."

Houston has held all nine opponents under 100 points this season and lead the NBA in defensive scoring average.

"Again, it was great defense, holding them in the 80s," Rockets coach Rudy Tomjanovich said. "We had that little lull — no it was a big, big lull — we've got to get the killer instinct."

Olajuwon had six points at halftime but helped brunt a third-quarter charge by the Clippers, who lost for the 15th straight time in the Summit.

Spurs 101, Bucks 97

MILWAUKEE — David Robinson scored 31 points and Willie Anderson added a season-high 28 Saturday night as the San Antonio Spurs beat Milwaukee, the Bucks' eighth straight defeat.

Eric Murdock scored 20 and Ken Norman added 16 for the Bucks, who missed eight straight shots in the final three minutes. Milwaukee is 1-8 and nearing the worst start in team history — 1-13 in 1974-75.

Three baskets by Anderson and Robinson's three-point play helped the Spurs build a 96-90 lead with just over four minutes left, but Derek Strong and Norman scored to cut the lead to two with three minutes remaining.

But the Bucks missed five shots with a chance to tie and Negele Knight hit one of two free throws to give San Antonio a 97-94 lead with 1:08 to go.

Murdock then missed a jumper with 50 seconds to go before J.R. Reid made two from the line with 26 seconds to play, giving the Spurs a 99-94 lead.

Milwaukee missed two more shots before Murdock finally found the range on a 3-pointer with six seconds to go. Knight then hit two from the line with 4.4 seconds to play.

Dennis Rodman had 16 rebounds for San Antonio

■ NBA Roundup

Hawks 96, Hornets 91

ATLANTA — Kevin Willis took control of the final period and the Atlanta Hawks not only survived a stretch of four games in five nights — they won them all.

Dominique Wilkins scored 32 points to lead the Hawks and Willis added 23, but nine came in the fourth quarter, including two key baskets in the closing minutes to pace the Hawks to a 96-91 victory over the Charlotte Hornets on Saturday night.

Stacey Augmon contributed 19 points and point guard Mookie Blaylock had nine points, 12 assists and a team-high 13 rebounds as the Hawks won before a sellout crowd of 16,368.

Alonzo Mourning led Charlotte with 28 points and Larry Johnson had 18 for the Hornets, who failed in their bid to win a franchise-record sixth straight game.

It also was the Hornets' fourth game in five nights.

Nuggets 90, Timberwolves 89

MINNEAPOLIS — Mahmoud Abdul-Rauf's jumper from just inside the 3-point line with 5.2 seconds left lifted the Denver Nuggets to a victory over the Minnesota Timberwolves.

Abdul-Rauf and Bryant Stith scored 22 points each for the Nuggets, who scored the final five points of the game.

Minnesota's Micheal Williams broke free for a jumper with time expiring, but lost control of the ball as he pulled up to shoot.

Reggie Williams added 17 points for the Nuggets, including a 3-pointer that brought Denver within 89-88 with 1:18 left.

Rookie Isaiah Rider had his best game as a pro, leading the Timberwolves with 20 points.

Jazz 86, Knicks 72

NEW YORK — Karl Malone had two three-point plays during a 16-0 fourth-quarter run, and the Utah Jazz snapped the New York Knicks' 22-game regular-season home winning streak.

Malone finished with 20 points and 12 rebounds for the Jazz, who had lost seven games at Madison Square Garden since their last victory on Feb. 15, 1986.

The Knicks, playing without injured frontcourt starters Patrick Ewing and Charles Smith, lost their second straight game after a 7-0 start. John Starks, New York's best offensive weapon with Ewing on the sidelines, scored 12 points on 4-for-21 shooting.

Bullets 104, Heat 102

BALTIMORE — Kevin Duckworth, enduring a 1-for-7 shooting night, converted a three-point play with 5.1 seconds remaining to lift the Washington Bullets to a victory over the Miami Heat at the Baltimore Arena.

Duckworth scored on a jump hook and drew a foul from Miami's Rony Seikaly, after two free throws by Harold Miner had given the Heat a 102-101 lead with 7.3 seconds left.

Tom Gugliotta scored 25 points and grabbed 10 rebounds for the Bullets, who have won three of their last four.

Miner had 24 points and Willie Burton added 18 for Miami, which has lost three straight.

Michael Adams scored 13 points for the Bullets and extended his NBA record with a four-point play in the first quarter. Adams now has 10 four-point plays.

The game featured a matchup between the NBA's two tallest player, 7-foot-7 reserve centers Manute Bol of Miami and Bullets rookie Gheorghe Muresan. Neither was a factor, as Bol was held scoreless and Muresan scored three points.

Washington used a 14-4 run near the end of the first quarter to take a 29-24 lead. Burton came off the bench to score 10 second-quarter points as the Heat pulled ahead 41-40 on his dunk with 5:59 left in the half.

Pacers 100, Celtics 94

INDIANAPOLIS — Pooh Richardson scored a career-high 24 points and Dale Davis posted career bests of 21 points and 22 rebounds as the Indiana Pacers held off the Boston Celtics.

It was the Pacers' first home victory in five starts and only their second in eight games. It came with two starters, Reggie Miller and Derrick McKey, and top reserve Antonio Davis sidelined with injuries.

Suns 112, Cavaliers 96

PHOENIX — Charles Barkley had 28 points and 20 rebounds and Kevin Johnson scored 26 points as the Phoenix Suns ended a three-game losing streak to Cleveland, beating the Cavaliers.

Both players had seven assists and Barkley took the edge off a last-ditch Cleveland rally with an assist to Dan Majerle after grabbing a defensive rebound with 3:40 left.

Majerle's basket put Phoenix ahead 98-86, and the Suns rode out the game at the free-throw line.

Cavs, the only team to sweep the Suns last season, but that was when Cleveland had injured forward Larry Nance. This time, the Suns outrebounded the Cavaliers 46-34.

Brad Daugherty added 15 points for Cleveland.

Wade recalls getting big win for Longhorns

By David Stout
N.Y. Times News Service

Tommy Wade has more reason than most people to wax sentimental when the leaves fall and the college football season winds down. In a Thanksgiving Day game 30 years ago, as the graying insurance agent from Texas recalled the other day, "I got to live every little boy's dream."

Or, he might have added, every bench-warmer's.

Tommy Wade was second-string quarterback for the University of Texas Longhorns. He had a decent arm, one that might have served him better in baseball (more about that in a minute) than on a football team whose coach, Darrell Royal, didn't much care for the passing game. Recalling an oft-quoted Royalism of yesteryear, Wade said, "You throw the ball, and three things can happen. Two of them are bad."

Hey, why pass when your team has a granite defense and a running game as unstoppable as, well, a herd of longhorns? Why indeed, when your team has won all its games and is closing in on a national championship and its first perfect season since 1920?

You only think of passing when your running game seems mired in cowflop, which was the Longhorns' predicament that afternoon of Nov. 28, 1963. They had won nine straight games, but there they were, trailing their bitter rival, Texas A&M, by 13-3 going into the final quarter of the final game.

"Going into the game, we weren't overconfident," Wade said. "We just felt we'd win." But the underdog Aggies, who had not had a good year, played inspired defense before their home fans. What's more, Tommy Wade remembers darkly these many years later, "The field was muddy — and it was to the Aggies' advantage."

From the sidelines, watching his regular, running-oriented quarterback, Duke Carlisle, struggle to rally the team, Darrell Royal looked as cheerful as a turkey awaiting the executioner. Texas did manage to score after an A&M fumble, but time was running out, and the Longhorn offense was out of sync.

"I remember thinking, 'We've got ourselves in a real mess,'" Tommy Wade said. "I wonder if we're going to start passing. ..."

Texas got the ball on its own 20-yard line when the Aggies missed a field goal attempt with just over five minutes left. "Darrell looked at me and said, 'Tommy, go on in,'" Wade recalls.

As he was adjusting his chinstrap, Wade said, a taut-faced assistant coach approached. "He started to say something about how everything was on the line, but he stopped."

Maybe the assistant coach realized that Tommy Wade was feeling enough pressure for a 21-year-old. Five minutes to go 80 yards and, Wade remembers, "We didn't have many pass patterns to work with."

What Wade DID have was an arm. Although he'd played good football his senior year in high school, he'd come to Texas to play baseball, not football. But Darrell Royal wanted him to take part in spring practice, so Wade gave up on being a pitcher.

"I was just a kid from East Texas with eyes wide as saucers all the while I was here," he said. "Back then, when the coach said something, you did it."

Even if it meant sitting on the bench, which Wade had done a lot of. Now he was on the field before thousands of noisy people, most of whom wanted him to fail, and heaven knew how many others watching on television.

His first pass was to Hicks Green, a small, quick halfback and, like Wade, a non-starter. As Wade sees it in memory, Green stretched and made "just a great catch." The play was good for 20 yards, "and I said to myself, 'Hey, this just might work out.'" (Although hearing Tommy Wade reminisce in his easy Texas drawl, one wonders why his team wasn't called for delay of game.)

After a short running play and an incompletion, Wade threw for 10 yards. He threw incomplete again — and then he was intercepted. For a moment, it seemed that the season was ruined but, as Wade reflects now, "When it's your day, it's your day."

And when the Aggie interceptor botched a lateral, and Texas had the ball back, just like that, it was looking very much like Tommy Wade's day. Reprieved, he completed two passes in a row, both for 9 yards. Two incompletions were offset by a couple of 6-yard ground gains. Texas was looking better, but there was no time to fool around. He threw for 13 yards, to the 2-yard line.

Out came Tommy Wade, in went the stronger Duke Carlisle, who scored from the 1-yard line with 79 seconds left. Final: Texas 15, A&M 13.

Did Tommy Wade resent being taken out at the end? "Nope. I'd done what I wanted to do. I got us there. Duke was a Royal-type quarterback." But Wade had saved the season, saved the Longhorns' No.1 ranking.

Royal was grateful to the second-stringer he had turned to with the game on the line. "He kissed me," Tommy Wade remembers. "I wasn't thrilled about that. But he did say a lot of nice things."

Tommy Wade played only a few minutes in Texas' victory over Navy in the Cotton Bowl the following New Year's Day. In part because of his strong arm, in part because of his coolness under pressure on Thanksgiving Day, he landed a spot on the Pittsburgh Steelers (his signing bonus was $2,500, his salary $12,000). He was cut in his third season after appearing in only a few games.

Lobos post rare winning season

Associated Press

EL PASO — Reserve quarterback Fred Schweer threw four second half touchdown passes, including the game-winner to freshman halfback Abe Ghoston with 47 seconds left Saturday, as New Mexico posted its first winning season in 11 years with a 35-29 win over Texas-El Paso.

■ Texas Colleges

New Mexico (6-5, 4-4 in the Western Athletic Conference), had its best finish since going 10-1 in 1982 under the late Joe Morrison.

Schweer, who had thrown just 10 passes at New Mexico since transferring from Oregon State three years ago, took over after starter Stoney Case went out late in the second quarter with a pulled hamstring in his left leg.

The loss was the ninth straight for UTEP (1-10, 0-7 WAC) and kept current head coach Charlie Bailey winless. Bailey took over the program after David Lee was fired seven games into the season.

Schweer's pass to Ghoston was set up by a UTEP fumble by fullback Kaio Amumua at the New Mexico 27 with 1:59 left and the Miners up 29-27. An unsportsmanlike conduct on the Miners after the fumble gave the Lobos possession at their own 47 and it took Schweer just four plays to get New Mexico into the end zone.

Schweer found Ghoston open on a 5-yard pass, then hit Zack Wesley with a 13-yarder to the Miners' 40. Two plays later, Schweer dropped back, got almost no pressure and found Ghoston open between a pair of defenders at the UTEP 10. Ghoston was hit at the goalline but fell into the end zone.

The Miners, with sophomore Marshall Young kicking three field goals and Aumua running for 136 of UTEP's 371 yards rushing, appeared to have snapped the losing streak when Young kicked a 23-yard field goal with 8:28 left.

UTEP still looked every bit of a winner when Schweer's third-down pass with 3:00 left was tipped by linebacker Pookie Floyd and intercepted by teammate Barron Wortham at the New Mexico 39.

The Miners then tried to run out the clock, but Aumua gave up the Miners' 25th fumble of the season and Lobo lineman Damon Burrest recovered.

For the second straight week, Schweer produced the big play in a New Mexico win. His 12-yard pass to tight end Jerone Williams on a faked field goal helped the Lobos upset Wyoming, 10-7, last week.

Sam Houston State 35
Southwest Texas State 10

SAN MARCOS — Charles Harris rushed for 155 yards and two touchdowns Saturday, leading Sam Houston State past Southwest Texas state 35-10.

Sam Houston (4-7, 2-5 in the Southland Conference) rolled up 395 total yards against SWT (2-9, 1-6).

Harris scored on a 1-yard run at the end of the first half to give the Bearkats a 14-3 lead, then added a 10-yard run in the third quarter. Harris' yards came on 24 carries.

Ala.-Birmingham 58
Prairie View 12

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. — John Whitcomb completed 28 passes for 447 yards and six touchdowns to lead Alabama-Birmingham to a victory over Prairie View.

Alabama-Birmingham (9-2) won its eighth straight victory as Prairie View suffered its 36th loss in a row.

In the second quarter, the Blazers set a single-quarter record for points as UAB scored 34. UAB's record came on a two-yard run by Pat Green, a 34-yard pass from Whitcomb to Derrick Ingram, a 32-yard pass from Whitcomb to Jermaine Johnson, a 15-yard interception return by Tommy Harrison and a 15-yard pass from Whitcomb to Ingram.

Stephen F. Austin 51
NW Louisiana 20

NATCHITOCHES, La. — Kevin Goodwin caught three touchdown passes and Curtis Luper ran for 153 yards and two more scores in leading Stephen F. Austin to a Southland Conference victory over Northwestern State.

Stephen F. Austin, ranked 17th in Division I-AA, enhanced its prospects for at-large berth in the 16-team national playoff bracket. The Lumberjacks rose to 8-3 overall and finished 5-2 for third place in the conference.

Miss. Valley St. 41
Texas Southern 27

ITTA BENA, Miss. — David Arrington ran for 130 yards Saturday to help Mississippi Valley State to a 41-20 victory over Texas Southern in the Southwestern Athletic Conference.

The Devils (4-4-2 overall, 1-3-2 in the SWAC) scored on their first two possessions when Honoree Britton passed 28 yards to Calvin Anderson and 4 yards to Victor Cullen.

TSU (2-9, 1-6) was able to tie it in the second when Schmanisky Peyton connected for 33 yards with Joe Rogers. Peyton scored again on a 6-yard run.

Valley came back with a 1-yard run by Vincent Ford to make it 21-14 at the half. The Devils scored again in the third when Britton passed to Ford who ran it 6 yards into the end zone.

TSU scored in the third on a Peyton pass to Rogers. TSU would score once more when Rogers ran 20 yards on a pass from Peyton with just seconds left in the game.

Valley scored twice in the third on a 51-yard run by Conja Rule and a 4-yard run by Arrington.

The two teams were playing for sixth place in the final SWAC standings. Valley has had just two victory's in its last eight games.

TSU has lost six straight games.

NE Louisiana 61, North Texas 21

MONROE, La. — Robert Cobb passed for 347 yards and four touchdowns and Irving Spikes ran for 254 yards and three more scores in Northeast Louisiana's Southland Conference victory over North Texas.

The final game of the regular season for each team produced 1,138 yards of total offense. Northeast (9-2 overall, 6-1 in the Southland) had 614 yards and North Texas finished with 524.

Northeast hoped its offensive bulge would send the Indians into the I-AA playoffs for the second year in a row.

Spikes set a school and conference record for season rushing yardage, finishing with 1,563. Against North Texas, he had touchdown runs of 57, 4 and 25 yards.

Cobb, with 13 completions in 21 attempts, had touchdown passes of 79 yards to Dennis Bamburg, 10 yards to tight end Charles Randolph and finished up with scoring passes of 60 and 57 yards to Stepfret Williams.

Cobb finished the season with 3,008 yards — a school record and the second highest yardage total in Southland Conference history.

Palermo surgery leaves surgeons hopeful, cautious

WORCESTER, Mass. (AP) — Former major league baseball umpire Steve Palermo apparently made the right call in electing to undergo a risky spinal operation.

A 10-hour operation to remove scar tissue encased in nerves on the left side of Palermo's spinal cord did no additional damage, said Dr. Arthur Pappas, an orthopedic surgeon who led a team of six doctors in Friday's operation.

But whether Palermo will be able to walk normally and return to baseball won't be known immediately, Pappas said Saturday. The surgery was "slow, tedious, but encouraging," said Pappas.

Palermo, 43, was partially paralyzed by a mugger's bullet when he came to the aid of two waitresses being attacked in the parking lot of a Dallas restaurant in July 1991.

He was in stable condition at University of Massachusetts Medical Center on Saturday, and officials said he was in good spirits. The hospital would not let him speak to reporters.

"We're trying to allow the family their privacy," said a nursing supervisor who would not be named.

The doctors had hoped to find the nerves intact, making it possible for impulses to be transmitted from the nerves to muscles in Palermo's left leg once again.

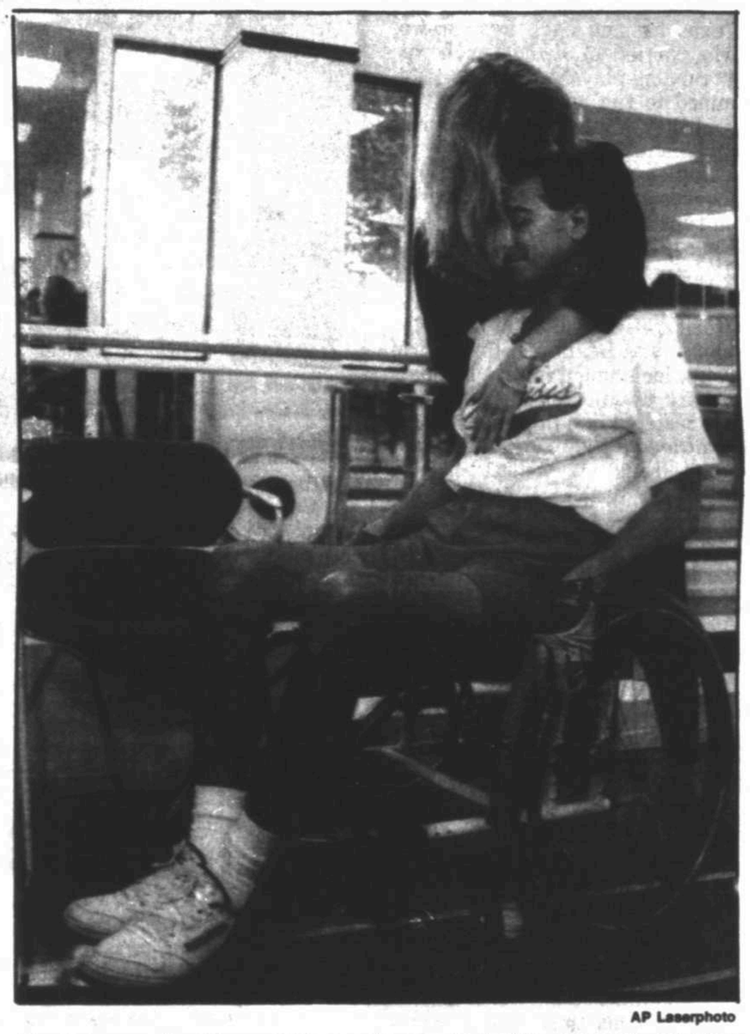

"All spinal nerves appeared to be intact, demonstrating satisfactory blood supply. The majority of nerves were freed of all compressive tissue, so that spinal fluid was permitted to pass through this area," Pappas said.

Doctors will perform tests over the next several days that should give them a better idea of the potential for returned nerve function, Pappas said.

"In a few days, we will have indicators of change. It will be at least one year before we have details about his functional recovery — that is, muscle strength and changes in walking ability," said Pappas.

Doctors originally told Palermo he would never walk again. He has waged a relentless battle to regain full use of his legs, and now can walk haltingly with the aid of canes.

But he wants to umpire again.

Soccer gaining converts from football

FOX CHAPEL, Pa. (AP) — Coach Joe Naunchik thought he had persuaded a player with the best arm at Fox Chapel Area High School to go out for quarterback. Instead, 15-year-old Craig Mauro opted for soccer.

Football linebackers are still big men on campus — especially in the western Pennsylvania steel towns that are considered a cradle for gridiron talent. But high school soccer is winning more converts.

"There's a lot more that goes on in soccer than people realize. ... I just like the all-around game," said Mauro, a sophomore.

Mauro nearly followed in the cleatprints of the Pittsburgh Steelers' third-string quarterback, Rick Strom, who grew up in this wealthy Pittsburgh suburb.

Naunchik believed that Mauro would choose football, but the boy changed his mind. Seeing the spring soccer team lose a big game on penalty kicks proved to Mauro that his heart was still with the sport he first played in kindergarten.

"One of the problems we face here is that the younger students here are weaned on soccer," Naunchik said.

Youth soccer is everywhere, as more and more young athletes of the '90s — particularly at America's affluent, suburban high schools — turn to the sport that doesn't put a premium on height or muscle.

"It's a natural game for kids to play when they're little because they can accomplish something easier," said Don Sparks, who administers soccer rules for the National Federation of State High School Associations.

The number of high school boys playing soccer last season was about 240,000, up from from about 49,600 in 1970, said Bruce Howard, also with the federation.

Football participation is down from its high in 1975 of 1.13 million to about 910,000 last season, he said.

Howard doesn't think soccer is necessarily stealing athletes from football.

"Soccer hasn't made a dent in football. It's just added to the number of kids playing in a sport," Howard said.

"Some people like to hit other people. Some people don't," Sparks said.

Coaches such as Naunchik disagree. He said football rosters are dwindling across western Pennsylvania.

The two fall sports have coexisted for years across the nation — even in Steelers country.

Monongahela's Ringgold High School has produced nine pro football players, including Joe Montana, since 1937. Also close by are Beaver Falls and Aliquippa, the hometowns of Joe Namath, Tony Dorsett and Mike Ditka.

The region, however, also has turned out top soccer players such as Sean Shapert, a former captain of NCAA champion Indiana.

In wooded suburbs like Fox Chapel, most boys can count on their parents for college tuition. They don't need a football scholarship, so they take up a sport with fewer severe injuries and an international flavor.

Soccer scholarships exist, but the NCAA permits universities about 10 times as many scholarships for football.

Many NFL coaches hope the soccer boom continues to provide an endless supply of kickers.

When soccer-style kickers such as brothers Pete and Charlie Gogolak revolutionized football kicking during the mid-1960s, perhaps no change except the T-formation had made a bigger impact on scoring. In 1943, NFL kickers were averaging .235; last season, the field-goal percentage was .743.

Jason Hanson, the Detroit Lions kicker who leads the NFL with 91 points, is a perfect example of the soccer star turned football player. He started playing soccer at age 7 and credits it with developing his coordination, running and timing.

For him, high school football was a bore.

"You kick, you're done and you sit until the next time," he said.

Because pro soccer has never developed past the curiosity stage in most U.S. cities, mostly because of its lack of scoring, there is little money in the sport. If a soccer player wants to play professionally, he almost has no option but football.

That may change next year with the arrival in nine U.S. cities of the World Cup, the world's most-watched sporting event.

SMU seniors get big win

■ Mustangs end disappointing season on high note with 42-13 trouncing of Navy.

ANNAPOLIS, Md. (AP) — Southern Methodist coach Tom Rossley handed out 12 game balls Saturday. He should have made it 13.

"All our departing seniors deserve a game ball," Rossley said after the Mustangs routed Navy 42-13. "It's great to see them go out in style."

Fortunately for Rossley and SMU, quarterback Ramon Flanigan will be returning next year. Flanigan, a redshirt freshman, was clearly the reason why the Mustangs were able to close a disappointing season on a positive note.

Flanigan accounted for 249 of the Mustangs' 297 offensive yards in the first half as SMU (2-7-2) built a 28-0 lead. He didn't get a game ball, but it's a good bet that he will get his share in the years to come.

"He's going to be an impact player for us in the next few years. He's going to be fun to watch," Rossley said.

Flanigan completed 13 of 19 passes and rushed 10 times for 112 yards before halftime. He left early in the fourth quarter, but by then the damage had been done — Flanigan finished with 148 yards on 15 rushing attempts and was 14-of-22 passing for 142 yards and a touchdown.

"Flanigan hurt us the most," Navy coach George Chaump said. "He made some big plays and put them in position to score. We just didn't do a good job controlling him."

SMU's defense, meanwhile, hardly resembled the unit that allowed an average of 34 points in its previous six games. Navy (4-6) managed only seven first downs in the decisive first half and did not score until the fourth quarter.

Navy, which had 10 turnovers in a loss to Vanderbilt last week, committed three against SMU — and two led to touchdowns. Navy's 35 turnovers this season resulted in 109 points for the opposition.

The Midshipmen set up the Mustangs' first score when tight end Kevin Hickman lost a fumble at the Navy 46. Flanigan completed three passes, including a 10-yarder to Mick Rossley on fourth-and-5 from the Navy 41, before Kevin Shepard scored on a 13-yard run to make it 7-0 late in the first quarter.

Flanigan did it all the next time SMU got the ball, running for 73 yards and passing for three more in an 83-yard drive. Four plays after his 59-yard run, the Mustangs' longest this season, Flanigan ran over right tackle from three yards out to make it 14-0.

SMU immediately regained possession when Byron Slaughter intercepted a pass at the Navy 48. Seven plays later, Kevin Thornal made a leaping grab over cornerback Chris Hart for a 37-yard score and a 21-0 lead.

Jacques Smith ended SMU's next drive with a twisting 10-yard TD run, and he scored from the 5 in the third quarter to make it 35-0.

Navy finally scored on a 6-yard pass from Jim Kubiak to Jim Mill with 11:44 to go. SMU countered with a touchdown pass from Mark Eldred to John Biggins, and Navy closed the scoring on a 6-yard run by Brad Stramanak.

"This win is a confidence boost for all of our players," Rossley said. "There's not a lot of rewards when working out during the offseason, but they can look back at this win and remember how much fun it was."

sively than we anticipated. They're a solid football team."

The Longhorns (5-4-1 overall, 5-1 Southwest Conference) turned a defensive struggle in the first half into an offensive showcase in the second half by sending runners at the heart of Baylor's monstrous defensive line.

"We went right at them," said Texas running back Phil Brown, who carried 15 of the Longhorns' 47 running plays. "We were determined to run on them after they said they wanted to stop our running game."

Baylor (5-6, 3-4) scored two touchdowns in the fourth quarter on runs of 1 and 14 yards by John Henry, but it wasn't enough.

Texas was never seriously threatened despite four turnovers, two of which resulted in 10 Baylor points. The Bears had three turnovers, including a fumble by quarterback J.J. Joe on the Baylor 17 that resulted in a third quarter 17-yard touchdown run by Texas' Curtis Jackson on the next play.

Adams did most of the Longhorns' offensive damage in the first half, catching three passes for 54 yards, including a lunging 16-yard touchdown toss from Shea Morenz. Adams finished with six catches for 153 yards, his fourth consecutive 100-yard game and sixth this season. He also had 90 yards in punt and kick returns and 24 yards rushing.

Brown took over in the second half, rushing for 145 yards in the final two periods after gaining only 17 yards in the first half.

He helped set up a 3-yard touchdown run by Rodrick Walker in the third quarter and a 3-yard touchdown pass from Morenz to Lovell Pinkney in the fourth quarter.

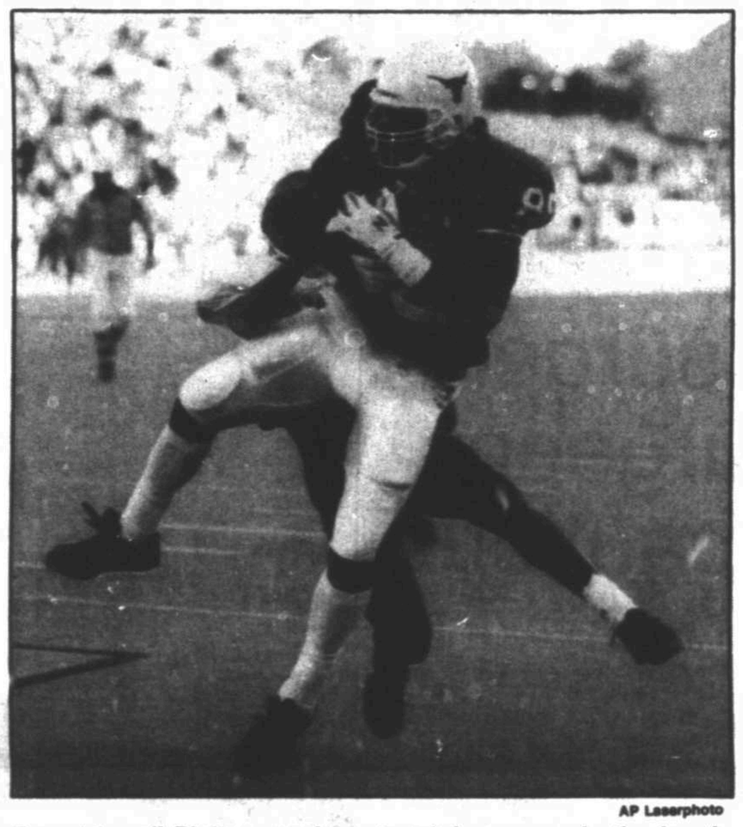

Texas led 10-0 at intermission and held 21-point margins three times in the second half, leading 24-3 in the third quarter, 31-10 in the fourth quarter and 38-17, following Juan Kemp's 20-yard touchdown run with 32 seconds left in the game.

Baylor, which had been averaging 237 yards a game on the ground, mustered only 147 yards rushing.

"Our attitude was if we lose today, it is the defense's fault," said Texas safety Van Malone. "It was a great game."

Brandell Jackson led the Bears with 21 carries for 106 yards.

Brackens had 10 tackles, including six unassisted stops and the three sacks for Texas. Winfred Tubbs, who had 12 tackles, including seven unassisted stops, also helped clog up the Baylor running lanes.

Aggies continue streak, set Thanksgiving battle

FORT WORTH (AP) — Greg Hill ran 94 yards for one of his two touchdowns and Corey Pullig passed for two scores Saturday as 10th-ranked Texas A&M earned at least a tie for the Southwest Conference title with a 59-3 victory over Texas Christian.

The Aggies (9-1, 6-0 SWC) won a record-tying 21st consecutive SWC game, placing them in the same company with the 1968-71 Texas teams of coach Darrell Royal.

TCU (4-7, 2-6), which lost for the 21st consecutive time to Texas A&M, last beat the Aggies 13-10 in 1972 at College Station.

The 25-point favorite Aggies struck quickly behind Pullig, who completed three passes for 56 yards before he hit tight end James McKeehan with a 2-yard scoring pass.

Hill scored on a 1-yard run and Pullig and wide receiver Tony Harrison connected on a 71-yard pass-and-run. Pullig didn't play in the second half and finished 9-of-15 for 202 yards.

Late in the second quarter, Hill dashed 94 yards untouched for a touchdown, tying Bubba Bean for the longest run in A&M history and third-longest in SWC record books. Bean ran 94 yards against Texas Tech in 1975.

Hill had 125 yards rushing on 10 carries and didn't play in the second half.

The Aggies led 35-3 at halftime after Donovan Greer blocked a TCU punt and defensive back Dennis Allen fell on the ball in the end zone for the touchdown.

A&M special teams produced again at the start of the third quarter when Aaron Glenn returned a punt 55 yards for a touchdown.

Rodney Thomas ran 2 yards and Leeland McElroy sprinted 35 yards for A&M's other touchdowns.

TCU cornerback Calvin Jones was carried from the field on a stretcher in the first half and was later diagnosed as having a concussion.

TCU avoided a shutout on Kevin Cordesman's career-long 46-yard field goal.

Tech, Bam blast Houston 58-7

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Bam Morris rushed for 223 yards including three touchdowns to set a Southwest Conference single-season rushing record as Texas Tech routed the Houston Cougars 58-7 Saturday and qualified for a bowl invitation.

Morris' 40 carries, a career high, gave him 1,752 yards for the season, breaking Earl Campbell's conference record of 1,744 set in 1977. Morris, a 6-2, 240-pound junior, needed 216 in the game to surpass Campbell's mark.

The Red Raiders rushed for 275 yards in all, compared with only 59 for the Cougars.

Quarterback Robert Hall contributed to the explosive Texas Tech offense by completing 20 of 29 passes for 303 yards, including two touchdowns.

After stumbling to a 1-5 season start, the Red Raiders won five straight to finish the regular season 6-5 overall and 5-2 in the conference. The Red Raiders are likely to receive an invitation to the Dec. 24 John Hancock Bowl in El Paso or the Dec. 31 Alamo Bowl in San Antonio.

It will be Texas Tech's first bowl invitation in four years.

Houston (1-8-1 overall, 1-4-1 Southwest Conference) concludes its season Friday against the Rice Owls at Rice Stadium.

The Red Raiders started scoring midway through the first period on a 1-yard run by Hall and held a 31-0 lead by intermission. All four of Texas Tech's first-half touchdowns were scored after Cougar turnovers.

Two 1-yard touchdown runs by Morris added to the mounting first-half score, as Morris set a school record for touchdowns in a season with 22, surpassing the previous record of 20 by James Gray in 1989. He also tied a Southwest Conference record for touchdowns in a season by Manny Hazard of Houston, also in 1989.

Texas Tech capped the first half with a dramatic 47-yard bomb from Hall to the end zone, where a cluster of Red Raiders and Cougars grappled for the ball before it ended up in the hands of Texas Tech's Tony Miller.

TCU great Baugh's number retired in halftime ceremony

FORT WORTH (AP) — Texas Christian University retired the No. 49 of Sammy Baugh on Saturday, 57 years after he starred for the Horned Frogs.

Baugh, 79, of Sweetwater, Texas, who lives on his ranch in Rotan, Texas, was honored in ceremonies before the TCU-Texas A&M game.

Baugh set numerous NFL passing and punting records with the Washington Redskins over a 16-season career.

He played for TCU from 1934-36. Baugh became only the second TCU player to have his jersey retired, joining former All-American and Heisman Trophy winner Davey O'Brien (No. 8).

Upsets cloud bowl berths for teams

Associated Press

Instead of getting clearer, the bowl picture got more confusing Saturday.

Losses by top-ranked Notre Dame, No. 4 Miami and No. 5 Ohio State left the Jan. 1 bowl lineups unsettled and fans scratching their heads.

Who plays where on New Year's Day will depend on the polls and a few crucial games the next two weekends.

Only one major bowl berth was nailed down Saturday. UCLA earned a spot in the Rose Bowl by beating Southern Cal 27-21 for the Pac-10 title.

Ohio State failed to clinch the Big Ten championship and the other Rose Bowl berth, losing to Michigan 28-0. Wisconsin, which beat Illinois 35-10, can earn a trip to Pasadena by beating Michigan State on Dec. 4 at Tokyo.

Nebraska, which didn't play Saturday, has already clinched the Big Eight title and a spot in the Orange Bowl. But the Cornhuskers' game against Oklahoma on Friday will play a key role in determining the national championship.

Because of Notre Dame's 41-39 loss to Boston College, No. 3 Nebraska (10-0) will move up to No. 1 or No. 2 Sunday when The Associated Press media poll and USA Today-CNN coaches' rankings are released.

That would put the Cornhuskers in a position to play for the national championship in the Orange Bowl if they beat Oklahoma.

But who would they play?

Graf, Vicario well-prepared

■ Virginia Slims

NEW YORK (AP) — The Virginia Slims Championships' title match features a unique best-of-5 format. Steffi Graf and Arantxa Sanchez Vicario have prepared well.

Graf, the world's No. 1-ranked player, needed 1 hour, 46 minutes Saturday to beat German Anke Huber 6-2, 3-6, 6-3. Then Sanchez, ranked No. 2, battled for 2:34 before eliminating unseeded Mary Pierce 6-2, 5-7, 6-2.

"This is the first time I will go best-of-5," Sanchez Vicario said. "I've had enough preparation after these two matches."

Sunday's winner will pocket $250,000, the runner-up $120,000.

"I'm the one who has nothing to lose against Steffi," Sanchez Vicario said.

The top-seeded team of Gigi Fernandez and Natalia Zvereva won the doubles title Saturday, defeating Larisa Neiland and Jana Novotna 6-3, 7-5. The winners split $90,000, the losers $46,000.

Pierce, who upset third-seeded Martina Navratilova in the quarterfinals, delighted the Madison Square Garden crowd with her huge groundstrokes that found the far reaches of the court with blinding speed. Sometimes, though, they didn't find the court.

"She can play great points, and then she can make unbelievably easy mistakes," Sanchez Vicario said. "You just have to hang in there."

And that's exactly what the Spaniard did, racing around the court, chasing down almost every ball, always forcing Pierce to hit one more shot, another chance to make one more mistake.

"I was really disappointed I lost today, but I've had a great tournament and it's given me more confidence,," Pierce said. "I'm really excited about 1994."

After Graf's elongated struggle, Sanchez Vicario began as if she would make short work of Pierce, rolling through the first set in 34 minutes.

It turned out to be an illusion.

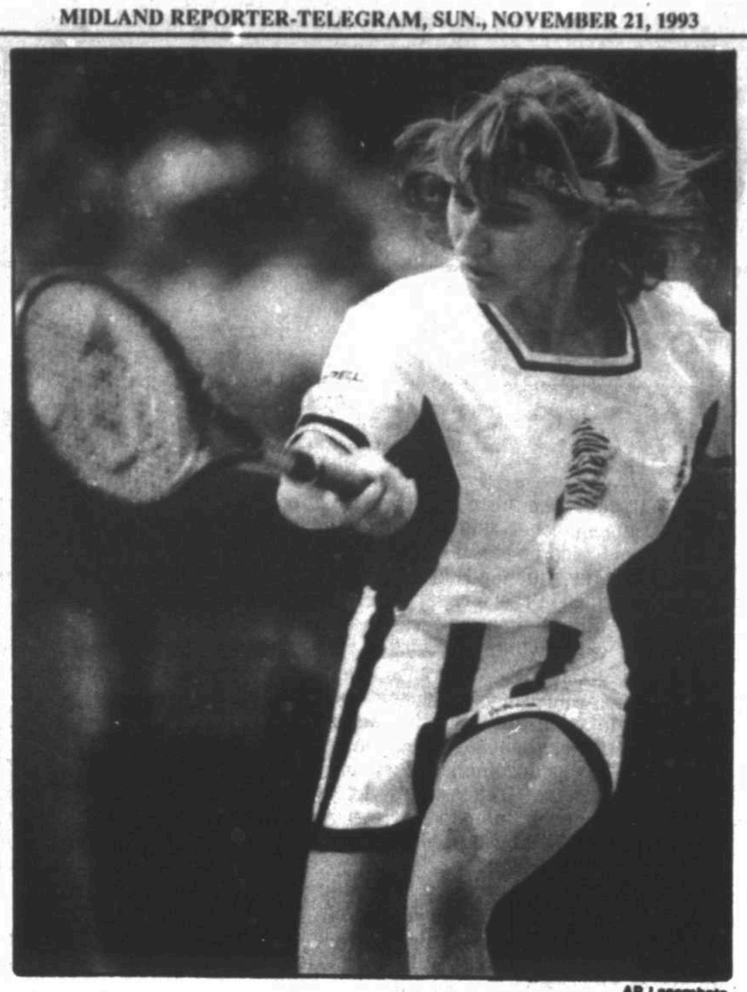

At 2-2 in the second set, there were six consecutive service breaks before Pierce fought off one break point and held to take a 6-5 lead. She then took a 15-40 lead and eventually broke Sanchez Vicario from deuce to tie the match at one set apiece.

By then, they had been on court for two minutes less than it took Graf to eliminate Huber.

"I don't think I got tight," Sanchez Vicario said. "I was not as aggressive as I could be. But I told myself, 'Hang in there.'"

When Sanchez Vicario held in the second game, it was the first time she was able to hold service in 49 minutes. And she followed it by breaking Pierce at 15 to take a lead she never relinquished.

While Graf may have been confident of the victory, the match appeared to be in doubt until the sixth game of the final set, an 11-minute struggle that saw the two fight through six deuces and Huber stave off five break points before finally succumbing.

Quick match puts Sampras in final

■ ATP Championship

FRANKFURT, Germany (AP) — Michael Stich is proving an adequate alternative to Boris Becker. All he has to do now is beat Pete Sampras.

That won't be easy.

Sampras blasted his way into the final of the ATP Tour World Championship Saturday with an impressive 51-minute victory over Andrei Medvedev 6-3, 6-0.

Stich beat Goran Ivanisevic 7-6 (7-2), 7-6 (12-10) in a battle of big servers.

Stich will replace Jim Courier as No. 2 in the rankings if he beats Sampras, who is assured of finishing the year as No. 1 even if he loses.

"I'm just playing for the title here and I want to beat Pete in the final," Stich said. "If that means I am No. 2, that's great. But if I were still No. 3, just winning this tournament would be a great success."

For years, Stich has had to live in the shadow of Becker, a darling of the German fans.

But Stich has used 1993 to firmly establish himself as the No. 1 German.

Sampras, enjoying the best year of his career, is seeking his second victory in the tournament that pits the top eight players in the world.

"If I keep on playing like this, it's going to be an open match," said Stich, whose tour career record against Sampras is 1-3. "Everyone has weaknesses."

Against Medvedev, Sampras lost only seven points in his eight service games — and four of them were double-faults.

He won 88 percent of his first serve points and ended the match with his 1,000th ace of the season. Ivanisevic finished the tour with 969 aces, while Sampras still has one match to play.

Sampras has won eight titles this year, including Wimbledon and the U.S. Open, and his singles record for the season is 83-14, the best since Ivan Lendl went 84-7 in 1985.

If he wins Sunday, Sampras will earn $1.24 million. His 1993 prize money to date is $2,593,075, already the most won by a player in one year.

Medvedev, of Ukraine, the No. 6 player who reached the semifinals in his first appearance in the tournament, was awestruck by Sampras' powerful display.

Floyd-Elkington in 2-shot lead thanks to short putting game

■ Shark Shootout

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (AP) — Short putts made a fun round for Raymond Floyd and Steve Elkington, who combined for an 8-under-par 64 Saturday and a two-shot lead in the Shark Shootout.

Floyd and Elkington's total of 18-under 126 put them in front of Hale Irwin and Bruce Lietzke, who shot a 7-under 65 for a 128.

Mark O'Meara and Curtis Strange matched Irwin and Lietzke with a 65 on the 7,025-yard, par-72 Sherwood Country Club course and were three strokes back at 129.

Floyd won the tournament paired with Fred Couples in 1990. Floyd chose Elkington this year because Couples had a prior commitment in Japan.

"Today we had no pressure," Floyd said. "All of our putts were short. It was fun. I can hardly wait for tomorrow. If we play as well tomorrow as we did today, we will win."

The unique tournament features a different format each day. Floyd and Elkington shared the lead Friday when the best ball format was used.

"I always have Ray to fall back on," Elkington said. "I like to hang around all these great players like Ray. That takes a lot of pressure off of me."

The alternate shot format was used Saturday. Each player drives and the best one is selected. The player whose drive wasn't selected hits the second shot and the team alternates shots until the ball is holed.

Irwin and Lietzke bogeyed the par-4, 9th hole for their only miscue of the round.

"I am riding a player as hard as I can," Lietzke said. "It was my partner today. I am not pleased with my results but Hale was really strong today."

Mark Calcavecchia and Brad Faxon were four shots behind the leaders at 130. Chip Beck and Corey Pavin were at 132, while defending champions Davis Love III and Tom Kite were seven shots back at 133.

Sunday's final round is a scramble format, where each player drives and the best drive is played. Each player takes a second shot from the spot where the selected drive landed, repeating until the ball is holed.

The winning team in the $1.1 million tournament splits a $300,000 prize.

No first-use plan could prove safer

For years, the Soviet Union said it would use nuclear arms only in retaliation against a nuclear attack. But its military posture and practices never corresponded to that stated policy. Soviet forces stood poised to unleash a devastating strike at a moment's notice.

Now, with its army in disarray and China looming larger on its border, an uneasy Russia recently announced a revised nuclear doctrine; it is abandoning its pledge of no first use of nuclear arms. But even as its stated position gets more belligerent, its practices are becoming more benign.

Russia is behaving for the first time as if it truly had a no-first-use policy. It is removing the nuclear warheads from some of its intercontinental missiles, for example, and taking its nuclear arms off alert.

The United States has never pledged not to use nuclear weapons first. Its policy was, and still is, to use nuclear arms in the event of a conventional attack on U.S. allies.

President Leonid Brezhnev of the Soviet Union promulgated no first use in 1982. But despite its public promise, Moscow kept its nuclear forces in exposed positions and on hair-trigger alert, ready to launch rather than ride out a U.S. attack.

There was always a risk that an intense crisis could inadvertently explode into nuclear war as each side, fearing the other might shoot first, tried to shoot sooner.

Now both sides are reaching the same sound conclusion: that it would be prudent to take their nuclear forces off alert and adopt other, fail-safe measures. The U.S. has removed 90 percent of the warheads from missiles covered by the strategic arms reduction treaty. Russia seems to be following suit. It would be useful if Kazakhstan and Ukraine would do so, too. Tactical nuclear arms have been withdrawn from forward bases, except for a few U.S. bombers in Britain. And bomber forces are off alert.

Both sides could move even further from the brink. Washington can safely send fewer missile-carrying submarines to sea and mothball some of them. Both sides could dismantle the deadly doomsday systems designed to automate retaliation in the event of nuclear attack. And both sides could call off their attack subs that still bump missile-carrying subs in a recklessly provocative undersea cat-and-mouse game.

Finally, both sides might stop talking about first use. Threatening nuclear attack only encourages others to think about acquiring nuclear arms of their own.

None of these measures will end the threat of nuclear war. But they could lessen the risk of it happening.

Win is sweet, but aftertaste could be sour

"He can take his'n and beat your'n," someone once said of Coach Bear Bryant, "and he can take your'n and beat his'n." After the stunning House passage of the North American Free Trade Agreement on Wednesday, Bill Clinton deserves to have the same thing said of him.

The new president's second big victory in Congress on Wednesday could not have been more dissimilar to his first, the narrow passage of the budget package back in August. That first win was accomplished without a single Republican vote; Wednesday's victory was a bipartisan wonder, maneuvered through the House with Rep. Newt Gingrich riding shotgun. His'n and your'n, indeed.

For Gingrich, who is seeking to establish his bona fides as minority leader-in-waiting, this was also a big win. But those Republicans who argued in advance of the vote that Gingrich's prominent role demonstrated Clinton's weakness were blowing smoke. George Bush, for all his impassioned support for NAFTA, could never have gotten it passed. Neither could any Democrat with political skills less than Clinton's.

What clinched the victory, several congressional aides agreed Wednesday, was the psychological opening that was gained when Vice President Al Gore got the better of Ross Perot in last week's television faceoff. Overnight, the balance of calls to congressional offices tilted from decidedly anti-NAFTA to about even, and a number of fence-sitting House members found the cover they needed to go for the treaty.

The White House played this high-stakes all the way, and a great deal was made — just as it was before the August budget vote — of how damaged Clinton's presidency would be both at home and abroad if he failed.

In that respect, this fight was like Jimmy Carter's passage of the Panama Canal treaties. That was a bipartisan effort also, with Howard Baker playing the part of chief Republican accomplice. But if losing the Panama Canal vote would have been a disaster for Carter, winning it never did him much good either.

For all the belated enthusiasm he worked up for this treaty, Clinton has to have some of the same concerns.

He has to patch things up with the unions, and hope that NAFTA is as good for the economy as Lee Iacocca says it will be. But the greater worry may have to do with those whom he has seemingly, for the moment at least, made monkeys of.

A persistent theme of last year's presidential campaign was that the Democrats and Republicans have become indistinguishable, and the real parties consist of those inside the Washington Beltway and those outside it.

That distinction was never made more sharply — if inadvertently — than in the pro-NAFTA commercial that showed all the former presidents, a list of former secretaries of state and Colin Powell, all of whom favored the treaty, contrasted with a quartet of NAFTA opponents: Perot, Jesse Jackson, Pat Buchanan and Ralph Nader.

It was a brilliantly effective ad, for NAFTA. But by lumping together the champions of the radicalized middle, left, right and sideboard of American politics, the ad may have helped some Americans to realize for the first time that they have something in common.

Together, Perot, Jackson, Buchanan and Nader represent the majority of Americans angry with the system, albeit for different reasons. If good times come with NAFTA, that anger may be assuaged. If they don't, that quartet of outsiders will be around in 1996, and they won't have forgotten that ad.

'Grocery coalition' helps Clinton win NAFTA

When history honors the role played by victuals in the annals of the Great Republic, let it be recorded that it was the fruit-and-veggie bloc that saved the White House's bacon when the North American Free Trade Agreement was in jeopardy at the Capitol.

Baker

To say that the president bought a victory with oranges, tomatoes and cucumbers would be unkind to the Congressfolk of the garden and sunshine states. Clinton had predicted that many patriotic Congresspersons would bravely risk their political careers "to do what they think is right."

Justice compels us to concede that risking their political careers may have been what the fruit-and-veggie bloc were doing when they told the White House it could stick free trade in its ear unless tomatoes, cucumbers and Florida orange juice were protected from foreign competition.

The prima-facie evidence, however, suggests they were less interested in doing what was right for the republic than in doing what was right for businesses that flourish in their districts, or to put it in plainer English, for themselves.

Having been told for years by demographers and political analysts that the American farmer is as gone as the horse collar, I was astonished to learn from this event that it ain't so. The tomato farmer and the cucumber grower not only live, they also have power to make Congressmen force the president to excuse them from enjoying the blessings of free trade.

A cucumber lobby: Who would have guessed it? Could it have been founded by Rep. J.J. (Jake) Pickle of Texas?

Not to be outdone in the grocery political competition, beef and wheat were also granted boons by the president. Representatives from wheat-producing areas and cattle zones had seemed strangely indifferent to statements that North American free trade would produce economic marvels.

Could it have been a rare case of Congressional unselfishness? Perhaps beef and wheat people were willing to sacrifice the benefits free trade would bring their constituents rather than vote against their colleagues in organized labor, who feared free trade would finish them off.

Not so, as it turned out. Beef and wheat were merely waiting for Clinton to assure them that if they would just vote for free trade he would help them avoid having to compete with other nations' freely traded wheat and beef.

And so the grocery coalition — fruit and veg, beef and spaghetti — was instrumental in giving Clinton his free-trade agreement. There is nothing remarkable about such bartering and buying of votes when a president wants something as desperately as Clinton wants the free-trade agreement.

In close-run fights the politician who holds out until the last moment often may walk away with so much federal gravy that he will need a tank train to get it all out of Washington. The present fight, for instance, has been garnished with news that one Texas vote may cost the Treasury $1.4 billion for construction of airplanes the Pentagon doesn't want.

The public usually pays the final bill for these exercises, but an amazing exception occurred during the fight for the first Reagan tax cut in 1981. Then Democrats decided not to fight the big Reagan cuts; instead, they started competing with Republicans to make them even bigger.

Events rarely turn out so happily for the public, though Clinton keeps assuring us that we will all bless the day free trade comes to North America.

Organized labor's disagreement is based on its rust-belt experience with industries that go abroad for cheap labor, leaving ruin and unemployment behind.

Clinton's prediction that North American free trade will invigorate the economy is the only reason he has given labor to love him. Concessions went to the grocery bloc, but not to the rust belt.

Players who create game value receive share

NEW YORK — Curt Flood, a 165-pound whippet of a centerfielder, could outrun most fly balls but it took him 24 years to catch up to his 1969 Gold Glove award. His story is rich with lessons about courage, freedom and the conceit that we can predict freedom's consequences.

He had a career batting average of .293 in 15 seasons, 12 with the Cardinals. But nothing so became him in baseball as his manner of leaving it. Although he played 13 games with the 1971 Senators, he really left after the 1969 season when the Cardinals traded him to Philadelphia and he said hell no, I won't go.

Black ballplayers have done much to move freedom forward. In 1944, 11 years before Rosa Parks refused to move to the back of a bus in Montgomery, Ala., a lieutenant in Texas faced a court-martial for a similar refusal on an Army bus: Lt. Jackie Robinson. A similar spiritedness made Flood help win for players the elemental right to negotiate with employers their terms of employment.

He was born in Houston in 1938 and played his way up through minor leagues in the South in the 1950s, before public accommodations were desegregated. He received food at the back door of restaurants that served his white teammates and he relieved himself behind the bus on the shoulder of the highway.

In the 1950s and 1960s pitchers were driven to distraction by black players such as Henry Aaron and Frank Robinson who played with an implacable intensity that suggested the controlled venting of indignation stored up during many minor league and spring training experiences in a South in transition. The Cardinals of the 1960s were fueled partly by the fierce pride of four black men who were taking out their anger on the ball and on opponents — Flood, Bill White (now president of the National League) and two Hall of Famers, Lou Brock and Bob Gibson, the take-no-prisoners pitcher who once drilled the ribs of a rookie who had the impertinence to hit a long foul off him.

When the Cardinals traded Flood, he challenged baseball's reserve clause which bound a player to a team until that team traded or released him. Seeking to win for players the right to sell their labor in a free market, he challenged baseball's anti-trust exemption. He lost the 1970 season and lost in the Supreme Court, but he had lit a fuse.

In 1975 the clause was overturned by an arbitrator. Loud were the lamentations predicting the end of baseball's competitive balance — a few rich teams would buy the best players — and a decline of attendance. Well.

The decade 1978-87 was the first in baseball history in which 10 different teams won the World Series. Until 1990 there had been no "worst-to-first" volatility in this century — no team won a pennant the year after finishing last. The Twins and Braves did in 1991 and the Phillies did in 1993. The 1993 A's were the first team since 1915 — the A's Philadelphia ancestors — to finish alone in last place the year after finishing first.

In 1993 the team with the worst attendance — the Padres with 1,375,432 — drew more fans than the St. Louis Browns drew in the entire 1930s (1,184,436). The Orioles' lowest attendance for two consecutive regularly scheduled games was 83,307 — more than the Browns' (who became the Orioles in 1954) drew in all of 1935.

In 1954, the year Jacques Barzun wrote that anyone who would know America must know baseball, the average attendance was 13,000. This year the Padres averaged 17,191 and the major league average was 31,337. The Rockies drew 4,483,350, more people than live in Minnesota or 31 other states. Major League attendance was 70,257,938, more than the combined population of 32 states.

But no one last year bought a ticket to see an owner. Because of what Flood started, the players, who largely create baseball value, now receive their share of that value.

Reader fears Reno's stand on health care

I have been a subscriber for more than twenty (20) years and have never written a "Letter to the Editor," but never before have I been fearful for the future of freedom in our country. When Janet Reno began litigation against Texas dentists for refusing to treat AIDS carriers I had confirmed what the real "cost" of Universal Health Care is. The cost is our freedom! Even before debate has begun on Hillary Clinton's personal preference for my health care, Ms. Reno is alerting us that no provider can refuse to treat anyone and that every user will be told what and when and how and by whom he or she will be treated. I am frightened.

I feel that MY rights are as important as the indiscriminate homosexual, intravenous drug users, etc. and that if I want to use a dentist that does not treat an AIDS patient immediately before I sit in the dental chair, I have that RIGHT. What has it come to in America? Are we going to be totally without a choice in doctors, dentists, schools, what we can say to a child of ours, what we can say to a co-employee, the ethnic, sex, creed, etc. makeup of a jury, etc.?

Please realize that we may be giving up far more than we are getting in EVERY instance.

Time has come for smokers to unite

Smokers — It is time to unite. We have been pushed around enough. We have 44 million votes. Let's use these votes and our strength to fight back. Here's what we can do:

1. Boycott restaurants that do not have a smoking section.

2. Vote your local politicians out of office that have banned us from public buildings, the key word here is public. Our tax money helped build these buildings. They can provide smoking areas without any trouble to anyone.

3. Boycott airlines. Don't fly unless it is necessary. Make our vacation plans within driving distance of our homes. The people responsible for banning smoking on airlines are Sen. Frank Lautenburg of New Jersey and Rep. Henry Waxman of California. You can vote them out of office next year. Fly Freedom Airlines for smokers only.

4. We can vote out of office every congressman and senator that votes for the 75 cent a pack tax. If it passes we can vote Hillary and Bill Clinton out of office in 1996. We have over twice as many votes as Ross Perot. Let's use them.

People in Houston vote Sen. Mike Andrew out of office. He is trying to get $1 a pack tax put on cigarettes. People of Texas vote Attorney General Dan Morales out of office. He wants to put a $5,000 fine on all restaurants that allow smoking.

They have already insulted us by calling that 75 cent tax a sin tax, implying that all smokers are sinners.

So organize the smokers in your city and state. Let's vote these people out of office that keep shoving us in a corner.

Two state officials exhibit hypocrisy

I am writing to point out the hypocrisy of two Texas officials. I read in the Nov. 9, 1993 Reporter-Telegram an article where David Smith, the health commissioner, called for an additional $1.25 per package of cigarettes over and above the Clinton administrations ll for a $.75 per package tax. In the same article, Dan Morales made a plea for smoke-free fast-food restaurants. Both men agreed that this would be beneficial to the youth. I am reasonably sure that Gov. Ann Richards would be more than willing to sign any bill sent to her on this issue.

Since this is a pro-choice administration, I wonder if Smith, Morales and the governor feel it is beneficial to the unborn youth to have an arm pulled off, then a leg pulled off, then finally its head pulled off during an abortion. Then after the doctor succeeds in removing the remainder of the fetus from the mothers womb, it can be thrown in the nearest Dumpster and hauled to the closest landfill for an appropriate burial. If this is not hypocritical, then I do not know what a hypocrite is.

I think the smokers of this country and the population as a whole is getting tired of the special interest groups hiding behind our children to push their agendas; whether it is crime, sex, drugs, education, social programs or raising taxes. They only do this because these people can not push their social agendas on its merits.

To quote Earl Pitts, "Wake up America!"

Reader fears Reno's stand on health care

naive enough to think kids aren't smoking, but it broke my heart to see him acting so "Cool" with his friends. Just then I was reminded of an invaluable piece of advice my mother embellished to me as a very young, moldable pre-teen. And that was: the best time to choose obedience is before the temptation comes. And it was reiterated to me as an adult in my Sunday school study of Deuteronomy this past week.

This small bit of advise went a long way. I made up my mind that I would say no and stay respectable as a growing teen. As a result, it was very easy to say no to the first cigarette my "friends" begged me to take; then as alcohol was the big deal in junior high. I didn't find it a bit difficult to find a couple of new friends who felt the way I did, then most importantly, it was a vital truth to hold onto as I dated my future husbnd (high school sweetheart) for five years and was able to give him a priceless gift on our wedding night — a wife who had saved herself for marriage.

Now as a mother of three growing kids, I find myself instilling this truth to them.

The light turned green, but I had plenty of time to wonder: what makes parents so apathetic to teaching their own flesh and blood some very basic morals; and as I sat there I saw the eyes of the boy turn to see if I was watching, I voiced a small prayer for him that maybe it's not too late for someone to take the time to teach him the value of the word "no."

'Coward' tries to keep Permian out of playoffs

Once again old Mojo is up against an opponent who wouldn't dare face them on the field. That opponent is some jealous person who would go to any lengths to prevent the Permian Panthers from progressing on in the state playoffs. This time the person is anonymous.

This person who sent the fax to the 4-5A executive committee is a very small person in every sense of the word. Perhaps a coward. A coward who does not have the backbone to come forward openly. This person must have known about this so called ineligible player since day one but waited until playoff week to send the fax.

Obvious setup, obviously planned. Why? Does this person dislike Tam Hollinshead; dislike the kids who play for Mojo; dislike Mojo's success; want OHS in the state playoffs anyway they can get there? Dislike the Mojo fans? Answer: all of the above. It comes down to jealousy.

What's happening to school spelling?

We hear so much about our kids not being able to read. I don't understand why they don't put more emphasis on spelling in all subjects.

My granddaughter brought in a language paper and there were 10 or 12 misspelled words, but she made a 97 and had missed one question. She said the teacher told them, if she could make out what it was it was alright. What happened to making spelling a part of every subject?

She is in 5th grade but is not reading on a 5th grade level and she isn't good in spelling. If you can't spell you can't read.

Investigator wonders about Aaron's position

I take issue with Glen Aaron's letter and not with Glen Aaron the person or Glen Aaron the attorney as I have known Glen for a long time and have a firm belief that he excels at both.

However, I take issue with his comment and reference grand juries being a rubber stamp for prosecutors. I have worried with grand juries for 17 years and always found the citizens who serve on our grand juries to be free thinking and free standing and ready to no bill a defendant if probable cause is not there.

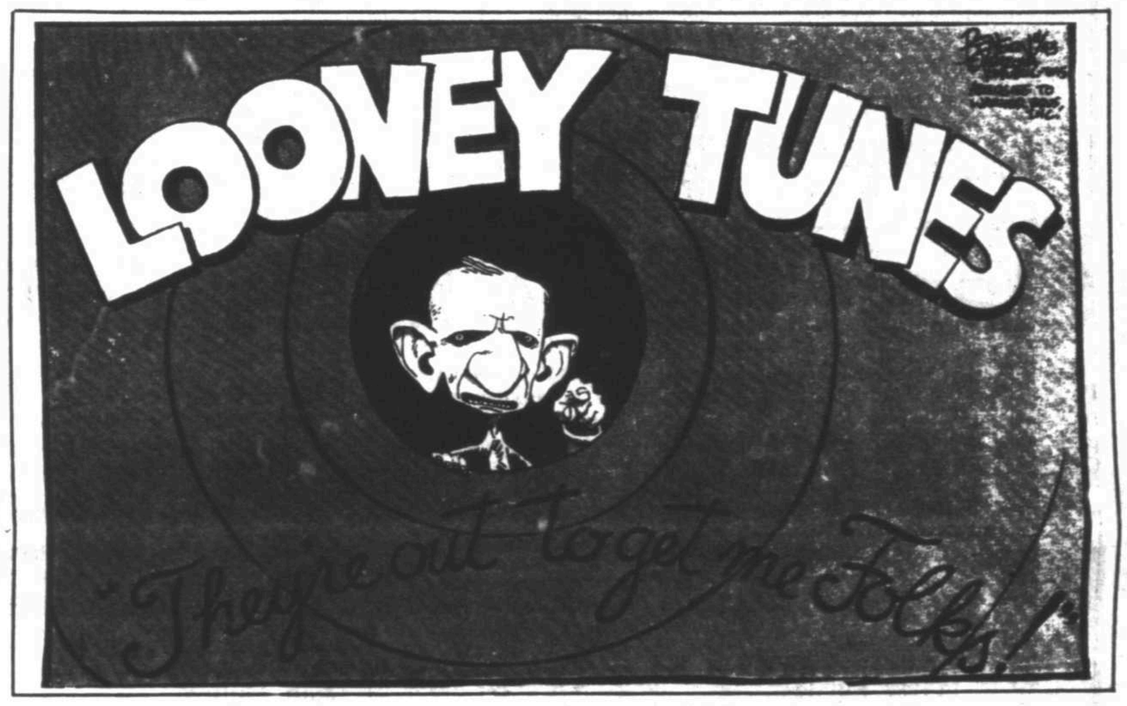

When you put the title of rubber stamp on a grand jury, you are saying that these 12 good citizens from a cross section of our community are mindless. I have only found the good citizens who are selected to Midland County grand juries to be intelligent, interested and hard-working persons. Absolutely no defense attorney should not be allowed to try their case before a grand jury as this body is not a trier of the facts, they are looking for probable cause.

I believe myself to be as good a Republican as the next person, but when our lady senator cries politics to a grand jury investigation of her, I smell a smoke screen and my blood boils. In the 17 years I have worked with grand juries I have never had a grand juror ask if this defendant is a Democrat or a Republican. They don't even want to know if the defendant is red, yellow, black, brown or white, only is there probable cause to believe that a crime has been committed and did this defendant probably commit the crime.

Reader's views on: New airport facility

'Why hasn't leaky roof been repaired?'

In regard to a new airport:

1. The control tower: The FAA approved its present location. However, if the "blind spot" is a problem, the tower could be relocated or the "leaky" roof could have skylights at that point so that the controllers could look through the building. Apparently this "blind spot" is being billed as a major problem, although it has been there since the 1970s. How many accidents have there been?

2. Ms. Petoshy is quoted as saying in regard to renovation that it "would involve raising the roof on the area" thereby blocking the view of the runways from the tower. Why does renovation require raising the roof?

3. What can the PFC fees that Midland is avidly collecting be used for?

4. Why hasn't the leaky roof been repaired? Is it possible that the building is being allowed to deteriorate, rather than being maintained in top condition? This same question can be asked about the "threadbare" carpet and generally worn appearance.

5. This issue appears to be a matter of having access to some money which is "burning a hole in the pocket" of the people who have access. We do not need a new building if there is any possibility that it would increase the tax burden on the population, however "extremely remote" that possibility is. I question any plan that would postpone establishing an "Airport Utility Tax District" until after the money was spent, and doubt the district so formed would approve the tax.

Council members seek immortality

It has finally occurred to me why the City Council unanimously voted to construct a new air passenger terminal. While I was waiting for my bags to go through the security checkpoint, I noticed lifesized photographs of the City Council members. Photographs will fade and be taken down. What the council members want is to have their names carved in the granite cornerstone of a new terminal, thereby attempting to achieve temporal immortality with our tax money.

I know. . .no tax money is going to be used. How stupid does Mayor Faircloth think we are?

City should hold airport referendum

I have come to defend Tom Dollahite and his companions who resist the premature expenditure of millions of our tax dollars. I have flown the world over as a naval aviator, corporate pilot, and airline pilot. It is a rare exception for controllers to be able to monitor all ground movement of aircraft from their control tower. That's one of the reasons pilots (sometimes) get paid the big bucks — so they won't run into each other.

I'm suspicious that the FAA is pushing for a new facility so that they might benefit from the newest "state-of-the-art" equipment and creature comforts that might accompany a new terminal and/or control tower.

If citizens don't rise and stop the bureaucrats from needlessly spending our money, our country will soon spend itself into oblivion. By the way, since the present tower was so "poorly located" by its supporters, let's make sure none of the same people offer "solutions" to any future airport improvements.

I will never believe that a company or individual would refuse relocating to Midland or Odessa because of the few deficiencies I've heard mentioned regarding our terminal facility.

Put me down for supporting renovation of the present facility. Paint, carpet, and more effective building maintenance can surely resolve the vast majority of our terminal's shortcomings.

It seems reasonable with the apparent conflict that the citizens who pay the bills should be allowed to voice their opinion by way of a referendum.

Reader's views on: Lee cheerleaders

Lee bashing reader should 'lighten up!'

Re: The letter to the editor addressing the Lee High School Cheerleaders conduct at the Permian-Lee game. I read the harsh criticism of our cheerleaders and totally disagree. I too am a Rebel fan and was at the game that night. While the cheerleaders may have exercised some poor judgment, that certainly does not classify them as delinquents. Their action was not meant to be taken so seriously.

They were just spoofing a long-standing tradition of rivalry between our two schools, not unlike pranks that have been carried on for years between rivals. When I saw what they did (dropping their outer shorts to display "No Mo Mojo" on white shorts underneath) I just laughed, as did everyone around me and I don't think of myself as an adult hoodlum. My daughter is in the Lee band and my family attends all games. The kids that participate in those games are to be praised.

They are, for the most part, good, hard-working kids. They might have indulged in some mischievous pleasure that night but that doesn't mean they are delinquents. The real delinquents were not on the field that night. Lighten up! Let's not make more of this than what it really was — a school prank.

Lee fan questions critic's 'competency'

I am compelled to comment on Elizabeth Banister's letter in Sunday, November 14th's Midland Reporter-Telegram in which she called the Lee cheerleaders "juvenile delinquents" and questioned their "morals." My two sons were involved in Lee cheerleading in years past, and I know what commitment, dedication and talent is required for the task.

First, the cheerleaders are very visible and recognizable, so I have to question the consciousness and competency of someone who can only "assume" the persons of whom she so strongly disapproves are cheerleaders. "Juvenile delinquents" or problem students CANNOT be cheerleaders. Cheerleaders are held to the highest of standards, screened by teachers, skilled judges and the student body. They must maintain these standards throughout their tenure or relinquish their position.

Let me assure Ms. Banister that, although she was "disgusted," "embarrassed" and "appalled," Lee and Permian fans know this stunt has been done many times in the past and it is only done as a "Rebel" — rousing antic and not meant as disrespectful (a clue might have been the gray shorts rather than nothing at all). Since I do not know Ms. Banister, I have to assume she has not been to many exciting, highly competitive contests where emotions run high.

The sponsor of this Lee squad is a most dedicated, competent and "moral" person and the cheerleaders' parents are always concerned and supportive. Perhaps it would have been "moral" and conscionable of Ms. Banister to take her concerns to the sponsor or parents instead of spouting her ill-founded "moral" judgments in the newspaper where the rest of Midland could assess HER "adultness."

Unfortunately, I am forced to reply in public and ask for a public apology from Ms. Banister to the cheerleaders, their sponsor, their parents, the Lee High student body, staff and administration.

Stars defense holds, Dallas snaps Calgary streak

DALLAS (AP) — Defenseman Paul Cavallini's first goal of the season snapped a tie with 10:39 to play as the Dallas Stars halted the Calgary Flames' six-game unbeaten streak, 4-3 Saturday night.

Cavallini capped Dallas' rally from a 3-0 first-period deficit, knocking in a goalmouth pass from Ulf Dahlen, who carried the puck up the right wing on the power play.

Dahlen had a goal and two assists to lead the Dallas attack and Mike Modano added his 19th goal of the season.

Neal Broten deflected in Cavallini's slap shot from the right point at 4:39 of the third period, tying the game at 3.

The Flames were 5-0-1 over their previous six games and were unbeaten in their first eight one-goal games this season.

Dallas is 6-1-4 at home this season.

The Stars dominated early play but the Flames grabbed the 1-0 first-period lead when German Titov knocked in a rebound on a power play.

That set the power play flood in motion. Al MacInnis made it 2-0 on a slap shot from the middle of the right circle seconds after Dallas had killed off one penalty in a five-on-three disadvantage.

The Flames drove Dallas goalie Andy Moog to the bench 2:43 after McGinnis' score when Robert Reichel's slap shot from the middle of the left circle got through Moog.

Classical Light

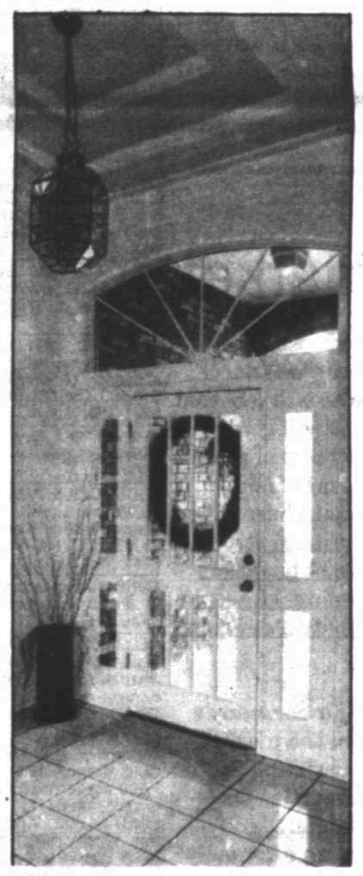

Accented with neo-Georgian highlights which extend throughout the house, this fabulous four bedroom home is perfect for those who appreciate the finer points of life.

These classical touches appear in the form of high, ceilings which vary in height and style, elegant wooden mouldings and enormous rounded windows which flood the whole house with natural light.

Located in Greentree North, it is set on landscaped grounds in a quiet cul-de-sac which guarantees tranquility and privacy.

The covered entry way leads directly into the open-plan formal living and dining area. An intelligent use of carpets and tile has separated the formal dining and the formal living areas while protecting high traffic areas.

Text by Kes Gilhome

Design by Mark Straker

This logical approach is followed in the rest of the house. The combination of kitchen and family room uses this technique to good advantage.

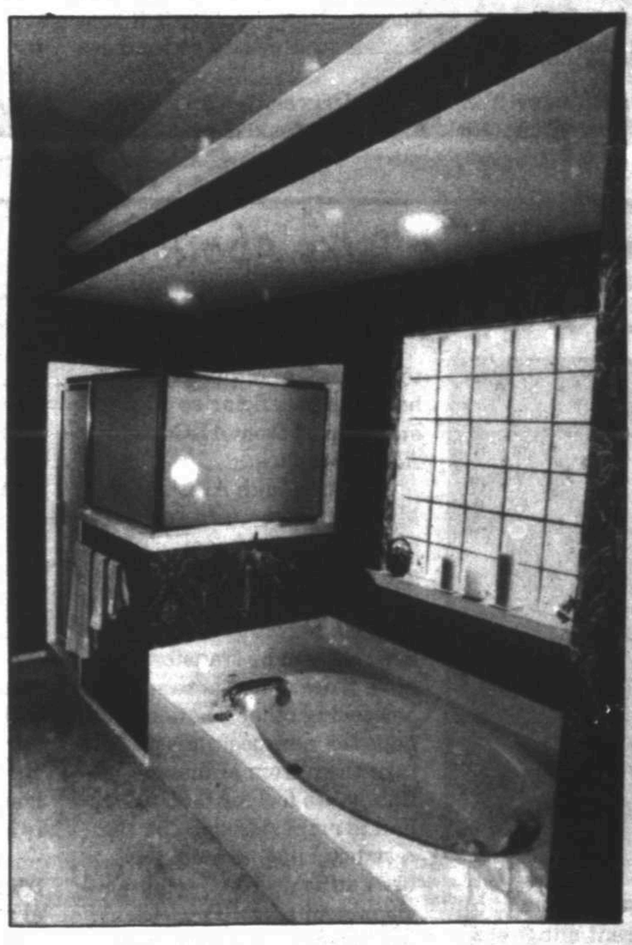

Featuring masses of work space, a curved breakfast bar that allows interaction with the family room and all of the modern conveniences that one would expect from a house such as this, the kitchen is functional as well as elegant.

It is the scale of the family room which is bound to impress: a very high sloped ceiling is matched with a wall of windows making this a very light and cool environment to relax in.

The fireplace is set into a wall of built-in bookshelves which add a touch of country warmth to the room.

Nowhere else in the house has the combination of style, elegance and practicality come together better than in the master bedroom suite.

A pan ceiling and windows on two walls add interest to the room whilst the bathroom is intelligently designed to be functional as well as supremely luxurious.

The combination of glass-brick wall, separate recessed tub and glassed in shower is coupled with an enormous U-shaped closet and separate vanity areas.

A double level ceiling with up-lighters add a dramatic aspect to this room which transcends the utilitarian and becomes a place to escape to.

Resale should be considered during transferee's home selection process

Jan Melton
Owner/Broker Remax of Midland

The home search . . .

Now that you have studied the general area and the neighborhoods, the search for your new home begins. Making the best decision requires an objective approach. Asking your agent about what style of home sells best can save you disappointment later. How wise would it be to buy a contemporary home in a neighborhood composed primarily of two-story Colonials, particularly if that contemporary had lingered on the market before the current owners bought it?

When you have gathered information and know which styles sell best, you are ready to look at homes. Inspect the homes with a sharp eye - you may even want to take pictures of them as you go. Use a checklist to help you. The one that follows does not cover everything that needs to be checked, but it can guide you in your personal inspection. Hire a professional home inspector for a more in-depth inspection.

Inspecting the Exterior . . .

1. Roof. Stand away from the home so that you can see the roof. Curling shingles, missing shakes, and broken roof tiles are signs of an aging roof or one that needs repair.

2. Chimney. Note any missing or damaged bricks or damage in the siding around the flue of a prefabricated fireplace.

3. Brick veneer. Cracks in the brickwork can indicate settling of the foundation. Although not always cause for concern, you might want to have it inspected.

4. Siding. Various kinds of siding can present different problems. Masonite siding should be examined carefully for any swelling that might indicate moisture. All siding should be checked for firm fittings. If siding is buckling, you might want a siding professional to inspect it.

5. Gutters and downspouts. Check for signs of deterioration such as rust stains, holes, or damage from fallen trees. Look for downspouts clogged by leaves; the gutters are likely to be full, too.

6. Crawl space or basement. Is it dry? Do the foundation walls show stains that might indicate a moisture problem? Mildew on the floor joists might also indicate a moisture problem. Are there any signs that indicate pest control might be necessary? Has floor insulation been installed?

7. Topography. Does the lot slope too steeply for most buyers' tastes? Will water flow toward the home rather than away from it?

8. Curb appeal. If the homes does not make a good first impression on a prospective buyer, it will not sell quickly. How much will it cost in time and money to increase it?

9. Drives, walks, patios. Are they cracked or in disrepair?

10. Windows and doors. Check for loose fits, broken window panes, broken window seals in insulated glass windows and doors, torn screens, and similar problems.

11. Porches and decks. Are boards warping or nails coming out? Are there signs of wood-destroying insects such as wood shavings on the deck?

Inspecting the Interior . . .

1. Floor plan. Check the traffic pattern established by the floor plan. If it is awkward to you, it probably will be to most buyers. If you have to go through one bedroom to get to another or do not have a bathroom on the same level as a bedroom, this home is likely to be on the market a while.

2. Walls and ceilings. Cracks, bowing, or chipping can be warning signs that further inspections should be made.

3. Floors. Look for signs of wear on carpets, hardwoods, tiles, and other floor coverings. Also check to be sure floors are level.

4. Windows and doors. Do the latches operate properly? Do doors close tightly and have they been hung correctly? Are any damaged?

5. Appliances. Ask about their age, what maintenance has been done or is needed, and if they all operate properly. If you get a seller's disclosure statement, this might be covered.

6. Heating/air conditioning, plumbing, and electrical systems. Have these checked by qualified professionals when you find the home you want. Your agent should give you guidance in this step.

7. Plumbing. Look under the sinks to check for signs of water having dripped from pipes. Press around the floor at the toilets and tubs for signs of weakness in the flooring that might indicate a leak.

8. Utility bills. Ask for the past year's bills for each home you like. Compare them. You will soon be paying one of them. Find out what can be done to increase the energy efficiency of the home and what the cost will be.

9. Kitchen. Be sure the kitchen has enough cabinets for your needs. Check the condition of the cabinets and counter tops. If the home you like has the most over-improved kitchen in the neighborhood, be careful of your offer and review the neighborhood data for housing prices. If you pay too much now, you might lose on the resale.

10. Attic. Check this area for ventilation, insulation, roof leaks, and vermin. If you cannot beg access, a home inspector should be able to do this for you.

11. Ceiling heights. The market varies from location to location in tastes, and ceiling heights can make a difference in the marketability of a home. Eight-foot ceilings might be acceptable in one market segment, but nine-foot ceilings preferred in another. Moreover, be sure that lower ceiling heights are acceptable; often, they are not.

12. Decor. Homeowners should decorate to their tastes, but recognize that most buyers prefer neutral walls and floors. If you buy today's "designer colors," you (or your company) are likely to be painting or buying neutral color carpet at resale time.

13. Warranty. Find out if the home comes with a warranty. If it does, be sure that you understand what is covered and the length of the warranty.

Have you ever read one of those travel agency ads that offers seven days and six nights in paradise for a total package price of $399? If so, you may have also noticed the fine print in the ad. It may have read like this: Airport transfers, taxes, tips, departure tax, and surcharges not included. In other words, although the basic cost of the trip is $399, there are other charges which must be paid.

When buying a home, purchasers want to know what their costs will be. Aside from the total purchase price, buyers want to know the out-of-pocket expense required to complete their home purchase.

The down payment is the most common expense attached to a home purchase. It is usually the largest amount, however it is not the only expense. When buying a home, ask the real estate agent representing the property to provide an itemized list of other fees and expenses required to complete the purchase.

Depending on the mortgage plan chosen by buyers, the other charges may include: 1) loan origination fees, 2) advance deposits for taxes and insurance, 3) mortgage insurance fees, 4) recording fees, 5) fees for credit reports and appraisals required upon loan application, and 6) discount points.

Some fees are a percentage of the purchase price or loan amount, while others are a flat dollar figure. Fees vary depending on which mortgage plan is chosen and the total price of the home.

Although only the closing office can calculate the exact amount needed to complete the thransaction, buyers may expect to receive an estimate of those costs for planning purposes from the real estate agent.

Armed in advance with the necessary figures, buyers can plan their purchase with confidence. Whjen combined with the required downpayment, a "no surprises" home purchase can be anticipated.

Langston Realtors Talks About . . .

ARCO changes should not be a detriment to market

Joanne Langston
Langston Realtors

ARCO's recent announcement on the reduction of its workforce in Midland was not welcome news. The company and its employees have been valuable contributors to the vitality, quality and economy of our city for man, many years. Community fund drives, PTA's, churches, volunteer groups, youth organizations and all of the other pieces of the "heart" of Midland have been the beneficiaries of generous support from ARCO and ARCO families.

Even though ARCO in Midland will be a downsized and altered organization, we are grateful that it will still maintain a presence in our city. We regret losing the families that will be transferred; we have concern for those who will be seeking other positions and hope the new positions do not take them from Midland; and, finally, we feel for those who had to make decisions on the restructuring - it must have been difficult from both professional and personal positions.

Since the announcement, obviously the question most asked us is "what will this to to the housing market and values of real estate?" We personally believe we will see no detrimental effect in the residential sector for several reasons:

1. As announced recently by the Midland Association of Realtors, our current inventory of homes for sale is extremely low - in the range of 650. This is 50% less than it was only 5 years ago! It also means that, with over 1500 homes being sold during the last 12 months, we are numbering only a little over a 5 month inventory. Some properties are being put under contract within the first week of listing; multiple offers are being presented in a surprising number of situations; and our agents daily complain that there are too few homes to show. The ARCO transferee homes should easily and quickly be absorbed by the market.

2. Current plans are for transfers to occur over a several month period. This means that only small groups of homes will come on the market at any one time.

3. Because a great many of the homes will be in the 4100,000 to $150,000 price range where a high percentage of sales occur and where we have a less than 4 month inventory, these homes will be welcomed by intown buyers as well as future transferees. We also venture to guess that there will be some "on the fence" buyers who will feel that the ARCO homes will give them a greater choice of properties, therefore may more actively seek to purchase. The market should remain strong, with a good ratio of buyers to properties, therefore we see no reason to anticipate a depreciation in values.

Because of our company's large presence in the market, we are already assisting in the sale of many properties for relocating Midlanders, and have formulated an extremely focused and effective marketing plan to obtain the quickest sale possible. Incentives, enhanced communication to the Realtor community, special and extensive advertising, direct mail and/or neighborhood wide promotions are utilized in the program. For more information, please call our VP of Relocation, Richard Langston, 685-0400 or 1-800-231-2483.

Distributorships Now Available

PART-TIME INCOME OPPORTUNITY

The Midland Reporter-Telegram has early morning routes which need to be filled with dependable individuals with reliable transportation. Often asked questions:

➥ Is it worthwhile for adults also?

YES! 95% of our Distributors ARE adults! Morning Routes are attractive for:
- ★ ADULTS who have fulltime jobs, yet want to supplement their income with a steady part-time job!
- ★ MOTHERS who can't justify a small job AND daycare, because as a Distributor, you don not need daycare!
- ★ COLLEGE STUDENTS needing a part-time job which will work with classes!
- ★ SENIOR CITIZENS wanting regular exercise, added retirement income, or just want to work with people, neighbors, and friends!

➥ How much money can I make as a Distributor?

Depending on the size of the route(s), from $350 to $800 monthly, in some cases...even more!

➥ OK...but how long does it take?

The actual delivery takes 1-2 hours Monday-Saturday, and 2-3 hours on Sunday, depending on the size of the route(s). Also some time is needed each month to collect from subscribers. Many Distributors choose to handle some of this by putting envelopes in the subscribers' papers and having payments mailed to them. Some collecting in person will be necessary though, particularly on some routes more than others.

➥ When do the papers have to be delivered by?

Papers must be on the yards by 6 am Monday-Friday, and 7 am on weekend mornings.

➥ Do I ever get a day off?

The job requires a 7-day a week commitment. However, most Distributors do take days off by finding a friend, family member, or another Distributor to substitute for them!

➥ What else?

An initial $100 refundable deposit is required.

Prices slump

After rising above the $17 level amid reports OPEC members were considering production cuts, crude prices fell late in the week amid profit-taking and skepticism about OPEC's possible production cuts.

On the New York Mercantile Exchange, December contracts closed at $16.69 a barrel late in the week and the posted price fell to $15 a barrel.

Natural gas prices rose to $2.33 per thousand cubic feet on the futures market.

Drilling gains

Drilling activity showed a sharp increase in the week ended November 12, according to Baker Hughes Inc.

In the Permian Basin, the rig count climbed 11 rigs to 134 during the week, above the year-ago level of 130 rigs.

Lea County, N.M. was the most active in the Basin with 22 rigs, followed by Eddy County, N.M. with 16 rigs, Ector County with 13 rigs and Midland County with 11 rigs.

Smith International Inc. reported that rig utilization in the Permian Basin has risen to 51 percent, the highest level in several years.

Nationwide, the rig count inched up two rigs to 872, below last year's count of 885.

Among major producing states, Louisiana showed the sharpest increase, eight rigs, while Oklahoma showed the sharpest decrease, six rigs.

Oil-funded schools

AUSTIN — The state's trustee for oil and gas wells on the Duvall County Ranch has presented a check for $1 million to the Texas School Land Board, bringing the total revenues from 14,720 acres of mineral rights owned by the Permanent School Funds (PSF) to $6 million.

The production was conveyed to the PSF by Mobil Oil Co. as a result of a suit settlement in 1984. The property has been managed since then by trustees designated by the land commissioner with court approval.

"That settlement has proven to be a definite financial plus for the Permanent School Fund which helps finance public education in the state," said Texas Land Commissioner Garry Mauro, chairman of the School Land Board.

ENERGY LENDING: AN UPDATE

NationsBank is top energy lender in U.S.

■ Bank is top provider of energy capital for three years in a row

By Mella McEwen
Staff writer

For three consecutive years, Petroleum Economist magazine has ranked NationsBank as the top provider of capital to the energy industry.

The magazine ranked the financial institution first in the number of financings, 152, and in the total dollar amount extended to the industry, $4.1 billion, and commitments of $2.2 billion, in 1992. Both categories saw increases of over 50 percent over 1991.

"The climate is appealing," said Frank Stowers, a vice president with NationsBank in Midland. "We have an appetite for energy loans, and not only in the Permian Basin. We've positioned ourselves with offices where we feel a lot of the core business is — in London, Dallas, Houston, Denver and Midland."

NationsBank's relationship with the oil and gas industry extends back through Republicbank, which was purchased by NCNB (now NationsBank), he noted.

"We've always been active in the industry and have never lost money."

The secret, Stowers said, is having a knowledgeable staff.

"We've felt it's been a very stable market, if you know what you're doing," he said.

He noted that NationsBank's Energy Banking Group has an experienced staff, starting with the group's executive vice president, Sam Atkins, who has over 20 years experience.

"Senior management has an average of over 17 years experience; we have 45 relationship managers and 11 petroleum engineers with average experience exceeding 10 years," Stowers said. "Locally, we've got a staff of one petroleum engineer with experience in excess of 10 years, and two lenders who

Banking on the Basin

■ Energy banks say activity is up and they are lending on it.

By John Paul Pitts
Business/Oil editor

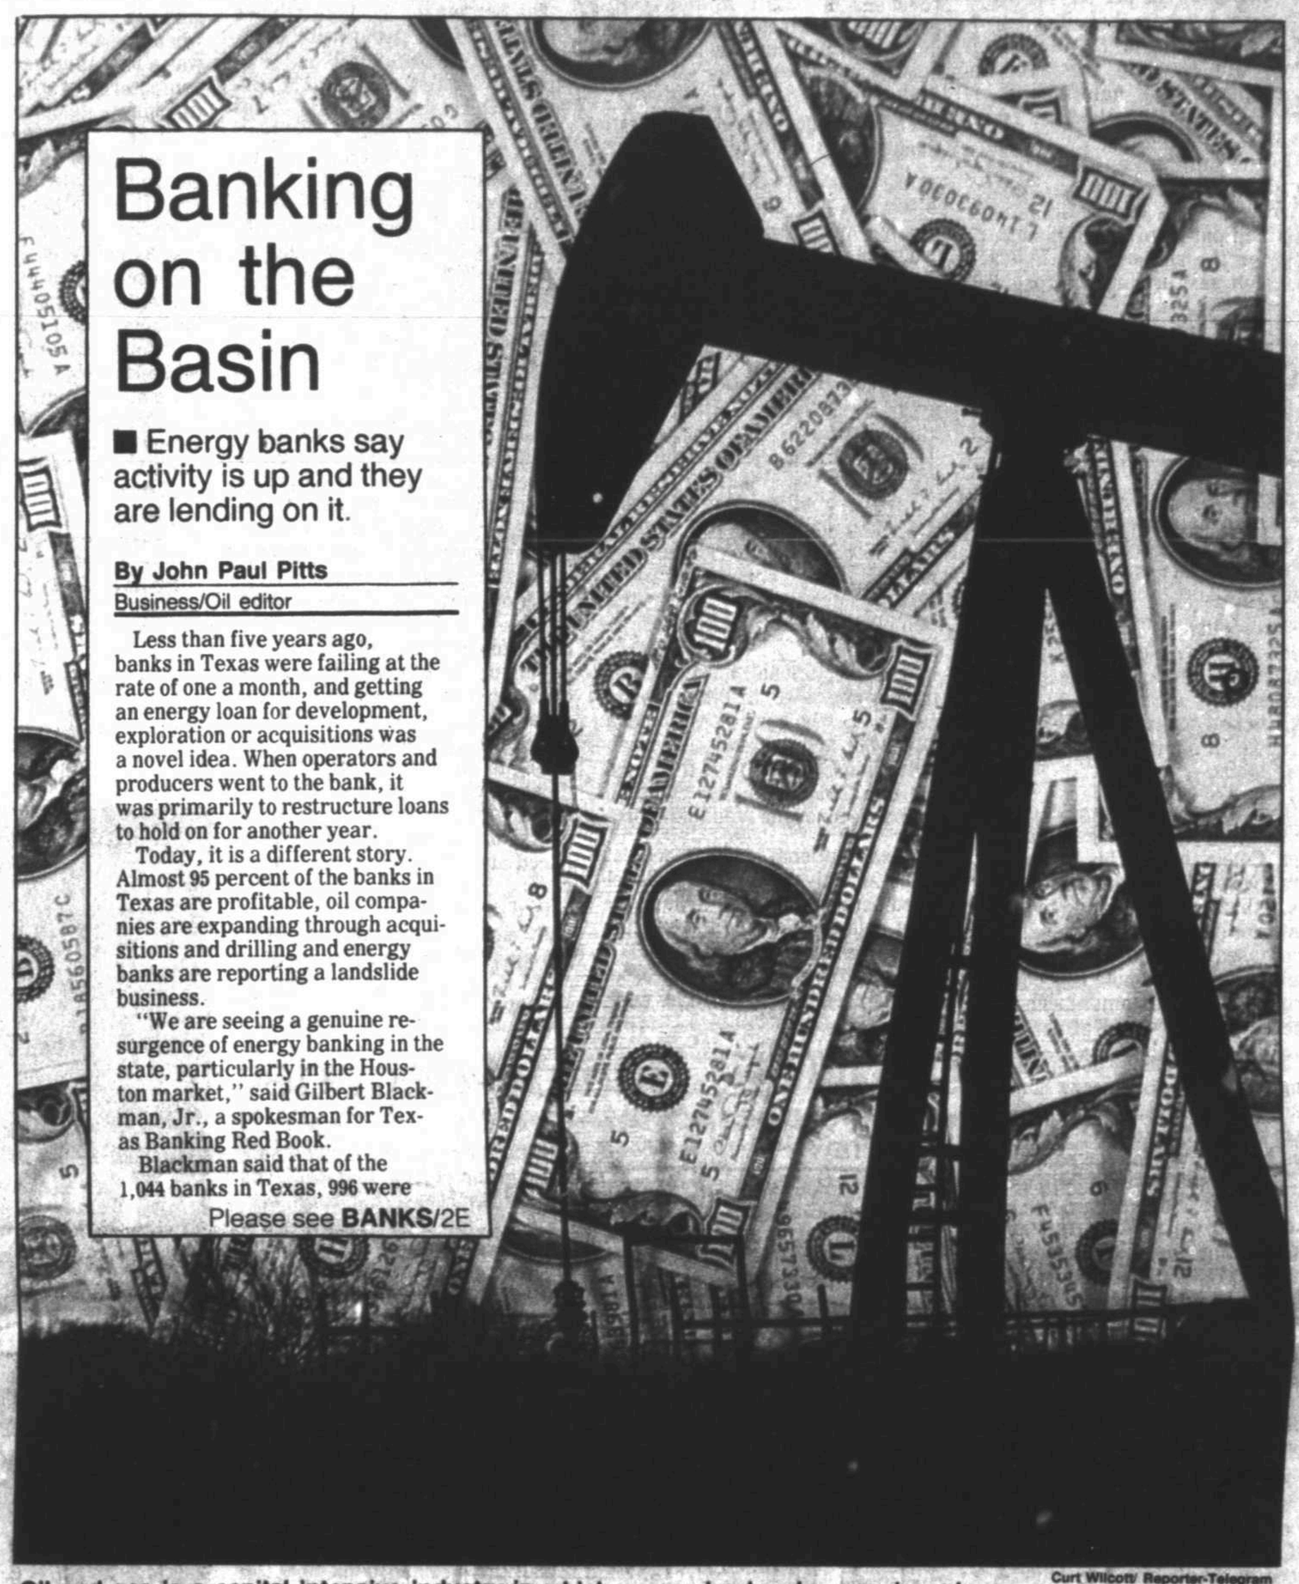

Less than five years ago, banks in Texas were failing at the rate of one a month, and getting an energy loan for development, exploration or acquisitions was a novel idea. When operators and producers went to the bank, it was primarily to restructure loans to hold on for another year.

Today, it is a different story. Almost 95 percent of the banks in Texas are profitable, oil companies are expanding through acquisitions and drilling and energy banks are reporting a landslide business.

"We are seeing a genuine resurgence of energy banking in the state, particularly in the Houston market," said Gilbert Blackman, Jr., a spokesman for Texas Banking Red Book.

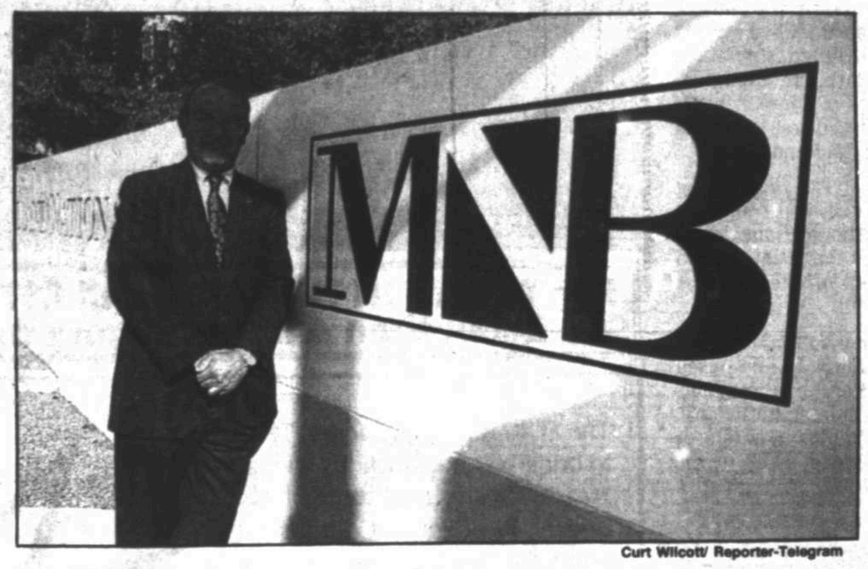

Blackman said that of the 1,044 banks in Texas, 996 were

They started out as First National and Midland National, and after a rough and bump decade, both are still alive and playing a major role in Permian Basin energy lending.

First National, now NationsBank, lost its name and local ownership, but went on to become plugged into the largest energy lending concern in the nation. Midland National, one of the most active energy lenders, got its name back, retained local autonomy and almost became locally owned again.

Known as Mother Midland, First National Bank of Midland opened for business when it received its charter on July 14, 1890, becoming the commnity's first bank. When it organized, its capital stock was $60,000 and it was staffed by three or four. In 1982, at the height of its growth, First National had $1.4 billion in deposits and employed 90.

The bank rode the crest of the energy boom of the late 1970s to become the state's largest independent bank and one of the top 100 in the nation. It was, however, the bust of the energy boom that led to the bank's downfall as huge energy loan losses caused the U.S. Comptroller to declare the bank insolvent in October, 1983.

The bank was purchased by RepublicBank Corp. of Dallas.

In 1987, RepublicBank and Interfirst mergered to form First RepublicBank Corp., creating the largest banking corporation in the Southwest.

It proved to be a short marriage, as troubled loans and weakened deposits

JOHN PAUL PITTS

Now is the right time to 'sell the Basin'

Pitts

On the heels of Arco's downsizing and consolidation into Houston, and the possibility that Unocal will probably do the same thing, it is probably time once again for my annual Houston-bashing, "Buy the Basin" pitch.

I have never attempted to hide it. I am biased for the Basin. When it comes to choosing between Dallas and Midland or Houston and Midland, I think oil companies should choose Midland everytime. I see no reason why the corporate headquarters of major oil companies cannot be located in Midland.

But biased as it is, it is not a feeling without support in fact. When the reasons for locating an oil company in Midland are stacked against the reasons for locating it in Houston, it turns out to be a pretty stacked deck.

Yet, we continue to see oil companies, with each downsizing, sending even more operations to Houston, seemingly without looking at how the move really stacks up. What accounts for this?

Obviously, there are sometimes when a move to Houston makes sense, because of real estate or support considerations. Too often, however, employees are sent to Houston for less than logical reasons — sometimes just because that is what everyone else is doing and it seems like the right thing to do. It doesn't matter so much if the decision is right one or wrong, only that it doesn't draw any flack. And, if everyone else is doing it, it is hard to be singled out for criticism.

But even if the decision could be and should be criticized, there is seldom anyone in a position to do it. Stockholders seldom become involved in such details, and white-knuckle employees, sweating their jobs, may grumble very carefully to one another, but are in no position to openly question management decisions.

That leaves only me. I have a public platform. I have nothing to lose by criticizing the management of a major oil company. And, to top it off, I have the gall to think my insight is just as valid as theirs.

I get around. Each year, I talk to dozens of major oil company employees that have been fired, could be fired, or face being transferred to Houston. Either it is my unfortunate plight to have spoken with every single major oil company employee in Midland who hates Houston, or else there is a pervasive "anything-but-Houston" feeling in the oilpatch that should not be ignored. I suspect it is the later.

With the exception of several couples who call Houston home, I don't recall having talked to anyone, not on the fast track, who would trade Midland for Houston. In fact, I have even known a few on the fast track that considered jumping the track to avoid Houston.

I write this critical column, because I would like to think that if oil companies really knew what a demoralizing effect the prospect of moving to Houston had on employees, they would think not twice, but three or four times before doing so. And, if they were genuinely interested in morale and having happy employees, they would look at seeing how many Houston employees they could res-

Parker & Parsley earnings slip

Staff report

The effect of declining oil prices has begun to show up on the bottom line of oil companies in the Permian Basin and elsewhere.

Parker & Parsley Petroleum Co. in its latest earning report says it had net income of $7.4 million or $.26 per share on total revenues of $101.7 million for the third quarter, down from $9.0 million and $.33 per share on total revenue of $55.9 million for previous period.

The company attributes the decrease directly to the decline in oil price. During the period, the average price per barrel of oil declined $3.45 per barrel or 18% to $15.94 from $19.39 while the average price per mcf of natural gas increased $.06 or 3% to $1.95 from $1.89.

At the same time, P&P total oil production increased 1.2 million barrels or 102% to 2.4 million barrels compared to 1.2 million barrels for the same period in 1992. Natural gas production rose 7.9 million mcf or 120% to 14.4 million mcf from 6.5 million in the third quarter of 1992.

The increases in oil and gas production is directly attributable to the addition of the Prudential Bache Energy Properties and the Company's 1993 development drilling program focusing primarily in the Permian Basin of West Texas and South Texas.

For the nine months ended September 30, 1993, Parker & Parsley reported an increase in net income of $30.5 million or 179% to $47.5 million or $1.70 per share on total revenues of $239.1 million compared with net income of $17.0 million or $.67 per share on total revenues of $148.8 million for the Same period in 1992.

The nine months net income includes $17.1 million or $.61 per share relating to the cumulative effect of accounting principle change in accordance with SFAS No. 109 Accounting for Income Taxes. The average price of oil declined $1.41 or 8% to $17.30 per barrel in 1993 compared to $18.71 per barrel in 1992.

Also, the average price of natural gas increased $.23 or 13% to $2.00 per mcf from $1.77 per mcf. For the nine months ended September 30, 1993, oil production increased 1.7 million barrels or 51% to 5.2 million barrels from 3.4 million barrels in 1992. Natural gas production increased 9.4 million mcf or 52% to 27.5 million mcf from 18.1 million mcf in the 1992 period.

The September 30, 1993 balance sheet remained strong with working capital of $166.8 million, compared to working capital of $8 million at December 31, 1992. Long-term debt was $623.2 million, compared to the $204.8 million total at the end of 1992. Stockholders' equity was 16 percent greater at $343.2 million on September 30, 1993, compared to $295 million at year end 1992.

cue to Midland.

It is depresssing enough to work for a major oil company and know your job is on the line every day, without having to also worry about having being moved to Houston if you're lucky enough to survive the axe.

Oil companies say they locate in Houston because that is where the oil companies are. It is the oil capital of the world: "If you're going to be in the oil business, you have to be in Houston."

There may have been a time when that meant something, but it was a long time ago. In this day of computer networks, satellites, fax machines, telephones, overnight mail and Southwest Airlines, the advantages of oil companies being centrally located in Houston, have greatly diminished. Oil companies today can do business in Midland just as easily as Houston.

Those who do business in Houston will tell you that most of the business is still done on the phone or through the mail whether it's in Midland or Houston. The president of an oil company that operates in both Midland and Houston told me recently that he actually does more face-to-face business in Midland than in Houston because of the hassles of driving.

I was once offered a job in Houston, actually one of those distant suburbs of Houston, and other than an increase in salary and status, the other benefits, I was told, was the fact that I could do nearly all my interviews over the phone, and would hardly ever have to go into Houston.

Even though it paid much more money, I turned the job down. Because, as one who lived over a decade in Los Angeles, I knew it would be just a matter of time before I would grow to hate the quality of life, and would eventually find myself sitting around the kitchen table with my wife trying to find a way to get back to Midland. It takes an awful lot of money to buy adequate insulation from crime, traffic, humidity, smog, long driving distances from home to work and business to business.

Rumor has it that one major oil company recently had to restructure a restructure when it offered some of its employees jobs in Houston or retirement packages and too many opted not to go to Houston.

I have no documentation to back this theory, but from discussions, I get the gut feeling that quality of community life has become a high priority in the career-making decisions — perhaps, even more so than position and salary.

If that is the case, oil companies might want to put more consideration into its decisions to move employees to Houston.

Happy employees make productive employees and productive employees impact the bottom line. Corporate officers who move everything and everybody to Houston simply because that's where they want to live might do well to remember that basic business rule. And stockholders should not let them forget it.

And Midland, a world class oil town with a very high quality of life, might want to look at finding ways to better sell itself to oil companies. Maybe we should be knocking on doors in Houston, trying to aggressively sell majors, independents and service companies on Midland.

BANKS: Lending on the Basin

profitable. He said there will be a few more failures or sales, but for all practical purposes that dark chapter in Texas banking history was closed.

According to Bob Coleman, senior vice president of oil and gas lending at Midland National Bank, his energy department is "going full bore" to handle the growing number of applications for oil and gas loans.

With one of the largest energy lending staffs in the Permian Basin, Coleman says his three lenders, two engineers and two lending assistants are having to work smarter and harder to handle the increased volume. Much of the new business, he noted, is coming from existing customers who have increased their level of activity.

Randy Stevens, who has three engineers on his energy lending staff at Texas National Bank, says loan demand for oil and gas loans has been strong for the past three years. Coleman says demand at Midland National became exceptionally strong nine months ago. Loan volume increased since last year, increase in business, indepdnets are more active.

Mike Davis, vice president for energy lending at Texas Commerce Bank Midland, says he is very bullish on the oil and gas business in the Permian Basin and was ready to lend money.

As to claims from some borrowers that bank loans have become too hard to get, Davis disagrees: "Companies with established good records and ability to pay back loans, can get them."

We have never taken a loss on oil and gas loans, said Stevens, who noted that a policy was to make only loans that an operator could repay without having to cut his overhead or lifestyle.

Driving the increased demand for energy loans say bankers are acquisitions, new drilling successes, and improved demand and prices for natural gas.

While acquisition activity has diminished in recent months, resulting in fewer acquisition loan, Coleman says about 50 percent of his energy loan portfolio are still acquisition, 25 percent are for exploration and 25 percent development. Success with 3-D drilling and gas prices have brought in a new demand for exploration loans, which a few years ago were almost non-existent.

"Trends we see among independents are an increased interest in natural gas and buyer-initiated acquisitions. The interest in going to auctions to buy oil properties seems to have slowed down, because of increased competiton and fewer good properties being offered," said Coleman. "This has caused buyers to single out certain properties and make the owner an offer."

Coleman said Midland National was not afraid of energy loans inspite of lower oil prices which have fallen over three dollars per barrel in the last quarter.

Midland National, like most energy banks, runs several scenarios on current production costs and declines, factoring in several projected prices.

"If oil prices were more stable it would make our job easier, but we think $15 oil will be temporary. But, even if it isn't, we think most of our independents can survive on $15 oil. They may not prosper, but they will survive."

Area bankers say there is a definite trend among their customers to participate in well drilling, due to the successes of 3-D seismic, and that they are making a number of loans for that purpose. Even though no value is assigned to seismic data, banks are now having to review lines of credit four and five times a year to keep up with the business that has been accelerated by 3-D drilling.

"We are cash flow lenders," says Coleman. "We still have to have to have a cash flow stream for collateral, before we make loans for drilling. All the exploration plays we back, are backed by production."

Midland National, however, has made some select drilling loans to customers who have a position in a 3-D shoot and are awaiting interpretation. Coleman says the value there is that the position could be sold to recover the loan and more.

Texas National lends on acquisitions and gives value to undeveloped acreage but likes to have the debt paid back during the half life of the property.

Acquisitions remain the area of heaviest lending activity say energy bankers. Coleman says he is expecting another round of sell-off of properties, especially if oil prices stay down. Also, he expects, many of the large and medium independents to begin preparing their own spin-off packages for sale.

Randy Stevens of Texas National says he sees a window of opportunity for independents that is just beginning to crack open will be open for a long time, in both the area of acquisitions and drilling.

Stevens said Texas National was trying to be more creative to help independents and that in some cases was making limited recourse loans to a few very experienced and financially strong operators. "This is an arrangement where the bank is compensated with a net profit interest, after payout, for assuming the added risk. It is never more than 25 percent."

caused the failure of First RepublicBank and its 30 banks across the state, including the Midland location. First RepublicBank was purchased by North Carolina National Bank and became NCNB Texas National Bank. In 1992, after the merger of NCNB and C&S Sovran, the new banking corporation became NationsBank, and has used the experience of the Texas banking companies it has acquired to become the nation's top energy lender.

Like First National Bank of Midland, Midland National Bank had a long proud history.

The bank was chartered in 1903 as Midland National Bank. In 1972, the bank joined First City Bancorp. of Texas, a statewide banking organization. And on Jan. 1, 1983, to reflect its membership in that organization, the bank changed its name to First City National Bank of Midland.

First City had been founded in 1924 as Guaranty Trust Co., eventually growing to 20 banks across the state.

As it did with First National, the massive economic downturn that rippled across the state beginning with the energy industry also rippled through First City and the bank ran into trouble. In 1987, the company needed a cash infusion, which came from investor Robert Abboud.

But by 1991, First City was in trouble again and Abboud was ousted. The Midland bank, along with 13 others, were put up for sale and a group of local investors was trying to purchase the bank.

But, in late October 1992, First City and its 20 banks were seized by federal bank regulators, becoming the eighth-largest bank failure in U.S. history.

Five First City banks, including the one in Midland, were purchased by Texas Commerce Bancshares in January of this year, defeating the bid by the local investors.

However, almost immediately after the sale, federal regulators said Texas Commerce would have to sell the Midland bank to settle an antitrust lawsuit filed by the Department of Justice.

In April, Texas Commerce sold certain assets of the Midland bank to First United Bank Group, which had been created from the merger of Lubbock-based Ford Bank Group Inc. and United New Mexico Financial Corp. of Albuquerque. At the time of the purchase, First United agreed to a separate charter for the Midland bank.

And on October 1, a flag-raising ceremony marked the return of the Midland National Bank name to Midland after the granting of a new national bank charter by First United.

Today Midland National has reconvened the same locally-based board of directors and management has complete autonomy. With $300 million-plus in assets, it is the second largest bank in the Permian Basin.

Petroleum Economist magazine has ranked the institution as the largest provider of energy loans in 1990, 1991 and 1992, and largest arranger of energy loans in 1991 and 1992.

Most of the Energy Group's lending is production-related, both on the acquisition side and based on oil and gas reserves.

Stowers said he believes NationsBank has been successful in its energy lending because it is aggressive in putting good, solid loan packages togehter.

But more importantly, he said, "it's because of the experience and knowledge base that we draw from, that's what makes us so attractive."

Cash flow management

■ Factoring offers option for managing cash flow in oilfield service industry.

Staff report

Bob owns an oil and gas roustabout service in the Permian Basin, and at the end of each month he bills his clients, most major oil companies for services. About 60-90 days later he will receive payment for those services, but in the meantime there is fuel to buy and employees to be paid this week. It's called cash flow problems.

As a new start-up company, Bob found it impossible to get an operating loan, to manage his cash flow problem, and that's where factoring, an alternative to bank lending, was able to help. Each month, Bob sold his invoices to a local CPA for three percent discount and was paid within 24 hours.

One of the oldest forms of financing in existence, factoring is not fully understood by most people, but it has become one of the most prominent vehicles for providing operating capital to businesses in the 90's, says George Shivers, director of operations for Cash Flow Management, a company that specializes in factor financing for oil service companies and other commercial companies.

"When sales are made on 30 days terms, the accounts receivable build and build, resulting in a huge non-earning asset to cash in 24 hours. A factor is a company that provides businesses with operating capital by purchasing their accounts receivable," says Shivers, former president and CEO of Seminole State Bank.

Traditionally, businessmen have looked to banks as the only source of operating capital. Unfortunately, the banking industry has been operating under extremely tight restrictions for the last several years. This situation has caused sever problems in the business community. Businesses that have depended on these traditional financing methods recently have been put in an unstable position with their funding reduced and, in some cases, banks calling their loans.

Factoring reaches virtually every segment of the business community. Any company that sells a product or provides a service to another company could be a candidate for factoring. Many people (even those in financial circles) do not realize that factoring is used more than all other types of financing combined Whenever and individual or company uses a credit card, a factoring transaction takes place.

"This is consumer factoring, but the principle is the same for commercial factoring," said Shivers.

When a business delivers a product of performs a service, if they have an agreement with a factor, they send their invoice to the factor rather than to their customer. The factor purchases the invoice at a discount and the business receives its money within 24 hours, thus eliminating their accounts receivable. The factor forwards the invoice to the debtor and the debtor pays the factor direct.

Many businesses offer a discount for early payment to their customers such as 4%/10 days - net 30 days. The problem with this kind of incentive is that the customer may not pay in 10 days but will still take the discount. The other problem is the company still does not have the immediate cash flow. Factoring has the effect of allowing the business to have immediate cash while still offering 30 day terms to their customers.

Factoring is not for every company. A typical company that uses a factor may fall into one of several categories, but the number one reason to use a factor is accelleratted growth. With increased sales and growth comes increased expenses and more accounts receivable. By releasing money tied up in accounts receivable, a company can increase the cash flow it needs to expand. Even start-up companies that are selling to an established customer base, such as major oil companies, are virtually unlimited in their sales potential. Factoring can give them the cash flow to meet weekly payrolls and keep all operating expenses current.

A factor can provide financing when a bank cannot because unlike the bank which is depending on the credit worthiness of the business needing the money, a factor is concerned with the credit worthiness of the company paying the invoice.

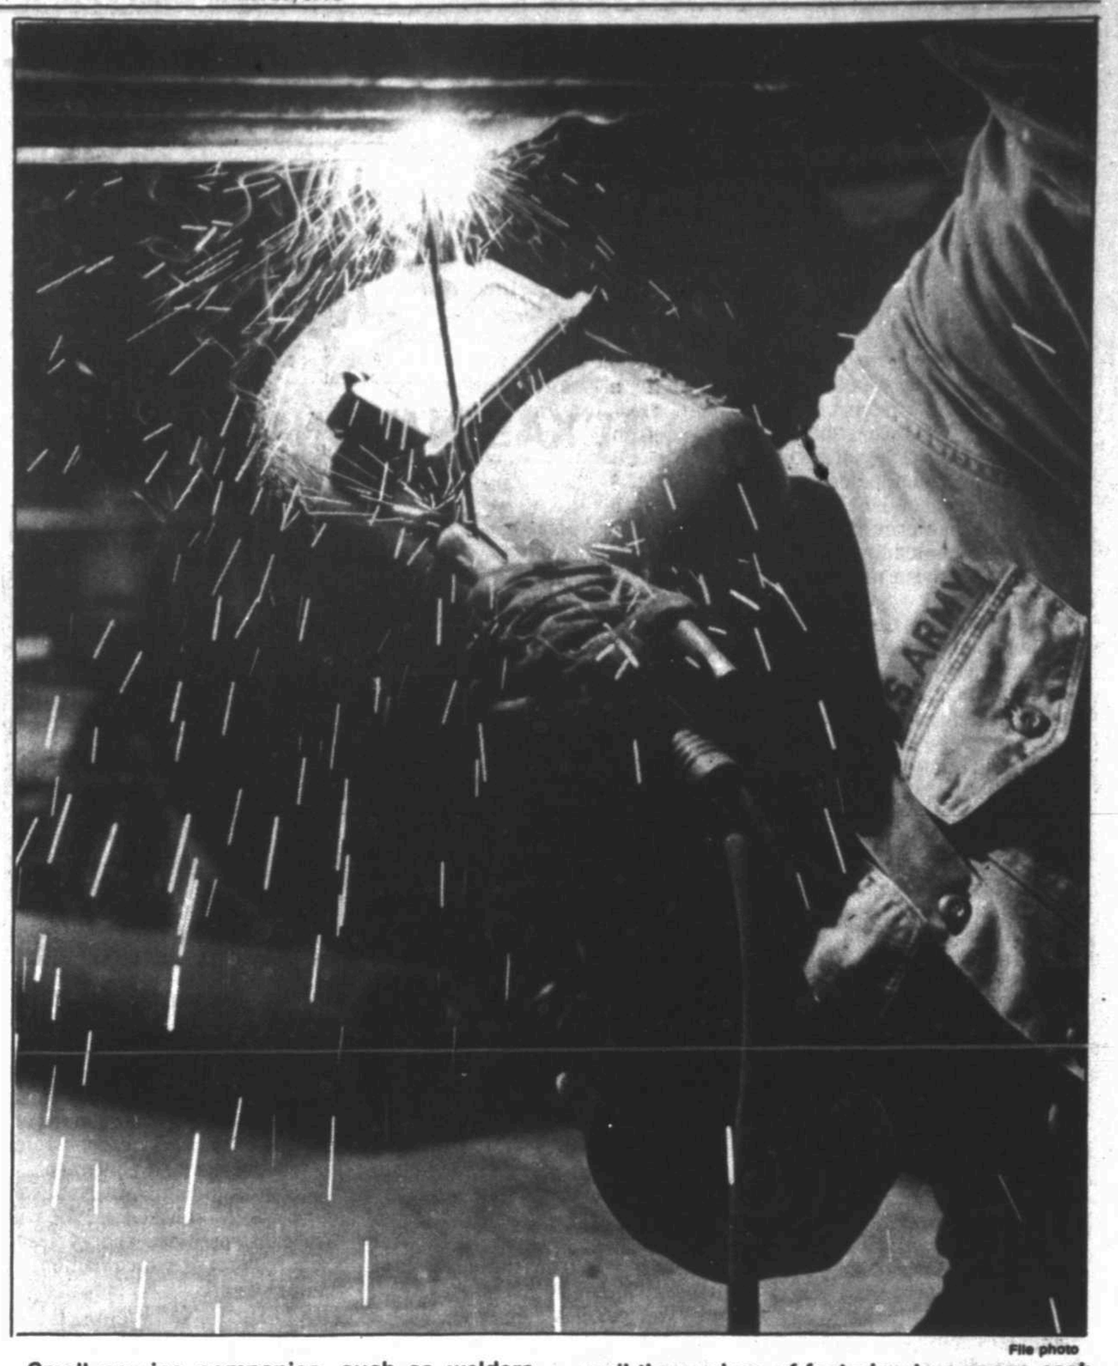

Factoring can improve a company's cash position. Along with additional working capital comes the ability to increase production and generate more sales. An increased cash flow allows a company to pay its bills, increase inventory and equipment purchases and maintain a greater daily balance in the company checking account, all of which result in an improved credit rating.

As in choosing any financial service a company must find a factor that provides the right kind of assistance. Fees, services and reputation can vary dramatically from factor to factor. Specific information is necessary before making a selection:

Make sure the factor will provide all of the services mentioned previously.

A factor must have the strength, such as backing by a major financial institution, to service a company as it grows. Many factors are totally dependent on investment capital. With this type of arrangement, money may not be available when a company needs it.

The funding capabilities of a factor are important.

Small service companies, such as welders, above, and roustabout services sometimes avail themselves of factoring to manage cash flow.

Smaller banks play role in Basin energy

■ Area banks, surveyed, indicate energy position and policy

Staff report

When one thinks of an oil and gas bank they normally think of banks in Midland, Odessa, Lubbock or Abilene, but a survey of banks in the Permian Basin indicates there are a number of smaller banks throughout the Permian Basin that could become lending resources for Permian Basin producers and operators.

Many smaller banks, in fact, consider themselves energy banks and have substantial energy loan portfolios to back the claim. On the other hand there are some who may not fit the energy bank bill, but would be willing to "talk about" making energy loans.

According to a survey of Permian Basin banks many local banks say they would not be adverse to making loans for the acquisition of producing properties within their area of interest.

Following are exerpts from interviews with officers of most Permian Basin banks, regarding their thoughts and policy on energy lending. Attempts were made to contact all banks in Permian Basin, only a few did not respond or return calls:

FIRST NATIONAL BANK OF ANDREWS — Mark Stroud, vice president, said because so much of Andrews' business is energy related, First National makes at least 10 percent of its loans in the energy field.

"We don't really have any oil companies banking with us, but we have oilwell service companies in the area and we certainly welcome inquiries on equipment loans."

Stroud said First National, established in 1945, would certainly look at whatever numbers a company presents.

"There are always a lot of variables, but we'll certainly look at the possibilities." He said the energy loan contact there is Tommy Barrows, president.

COMMERCIAL STATE BANK OF ANDREWS — Previously known as Freedom Bank, Bank President Ron McCormick said they changed the name back to Commercial State Bank last year.

McCormick said the energy loans his bank made this past year were all based on producing wells, but they are certainly willing to talk about acquisition, equipment or any other category of energy loans.

"Come in and talk with us," he said. "We're certainly open to energy loans."

He said to ask for Hugh Bearden, chairman of the board. The bank was established in 1956.

NATIONAL BANK OF ANDREWS (NBA) — Russell Shannon is president and chief lending officer of NBA which was established in 1983. He said because Andrews businesses are so closely tied with energy, all loans could be considered energy loans.

"Loans specifically to oil-related service companies comprised around 32 to 33 percent of loans last year," he said. "We're a small bank so we have to look hard at loans for exploration. We make loans to strong parties with proven track records and loans for buying existing production."

SECURITY STATE BANK OF BIG SPRING — J.D. Nelson is chairman of the board, president and chief lending officer at Security State Bank which was established in 1956. He said although his bank hasn't made or reviewed any energy loans in over five years, he certainly willing to look at the possibilities.

"We're open to any kind of loan, so we'll be glad to talk about any type of energy loan," he said.

STATE NATIONAL BANK OF BIG SPRING — Jim Purcell is president and chief lending officer at State National Bank which was established in 1909. He said the bank's policy on energy loans is limited to customers only.

"We'll make energy loans for acquisitions or whatever, but energy loans are limited to existing customers."

He added that less than ten percent of the bank's loans are energy related.

FIRST NATIONAL BANK OF BIG SPRING — J.P. Taylor is president and chief lending officer of First National. Taylor said the bank loans within its trade area only.

"We're out of the energy loaning business these days," he said, "because we haven't had any requests for them in several years."

The bank was established in 1934.

BROWNFIELD STATE BANK — Jay Andrews, president and chief lending officer, said energy loans for equipment -- primarily for the service company branch of the oil industry -- is about the only type of energy loan his bank makes.

"We just don't have the expertise to evaluate reserves so we can make production loans," Andrews said.

He estimated somewhere between five and ten percent of his bank's loans are energy related, and said, "We entertain any new business."

Brownfield State Bank was established in 1984.

FIRST NATIONAL BANK OF BROWNFIELD — First National makes energy or agriculture loans almost exclusively, according to L.J. Richardson, chief lending officer.

"Directly or indirectly our energy loans comprise about 20 percent of our loans," he said. "We don't make exploration loans, but we do loan in other areas if secured by oil runs. We do make energy loans to service companies for trucks, rigs and equipment."

Richardson said First National, which was established in 1919, will also consider other energy loans such as property acquisition, if there is equity.

THE FIRST NATIONAL BANK OF DENVER CITY — Clifford Hitt is president and chief lending officer of First National which was established in 1983. He said the bank doesn't have a policy on energy loans.

"We're a small bank and at the present time we don't have a policy on oil and gas loans because we really haven't had any. But we're certainly open to looking at whatever companies need."

He said most of the bank's loans are to small businesses.

YOAKUM COUNTY STATE BANK OF DENVER CITY — O.L. Cooper, bank president, said the bank was established in 1950 and does entertain all types of energy loans.

"We have a number of loans for equipment for the service companies and a few others that have been secured by oil or gas runs," he said. "I would estimate 15 to 20 percent could be categorized energy loans."

Cooper said that as far as actively making exploration or production loans, those requests usually go to the larger banks because Yoakum County State Bank's loan limit won't accommodate most of those.

FIRST NATIONAL BANK OF FORT STOCKTON — Moody Graham, chief lending officer, said First National continues its favorable lending policy toward oilfield service companies.

"We're a small bank, so we don't usually do any production or exploration financing," he said. "We'll look on a case by case basis at whatever type of oil loan we're asked for."

He said the bank has somewhat less than 20 percent of its loans as energy related.

THE PECOS COUNTY STATE BANK OF FORT STOCKTON — Harlan Lambert, president and chief lending officer, said the bank services the needs of its local customers among which are several roustabout and service companies.

"The loans we'd classify as energy loans are probably less than six percent of the total. We're not active in the energy market because usually exploration loans require more than our loan limit," he said.

Lambert added that he's seen an increase in loan demand the last few months which will indirectly benefit the bank as money goes to the local service companies.

"There has been more leasing and construction activity in the area. It's probably 50/50 independents and majors that are involved in deep drilling for gas."

The bank was established in 1928.

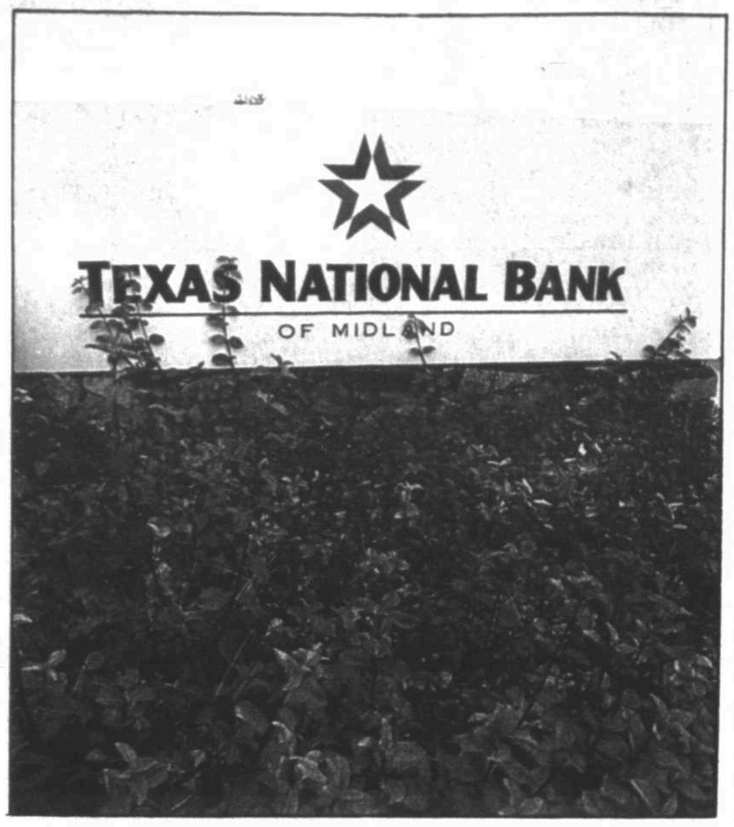

IRAAN STATE BANK — Doug Burns is chief lending officer of Iraan State Bank which was established in 1960. He said the banks lending policy guidelines are basically restricted to its trade area as defined by the government's Community Reinvestment Act. "We're willing to make any good quality loans in energy, agriculture or whatever," Burns said.

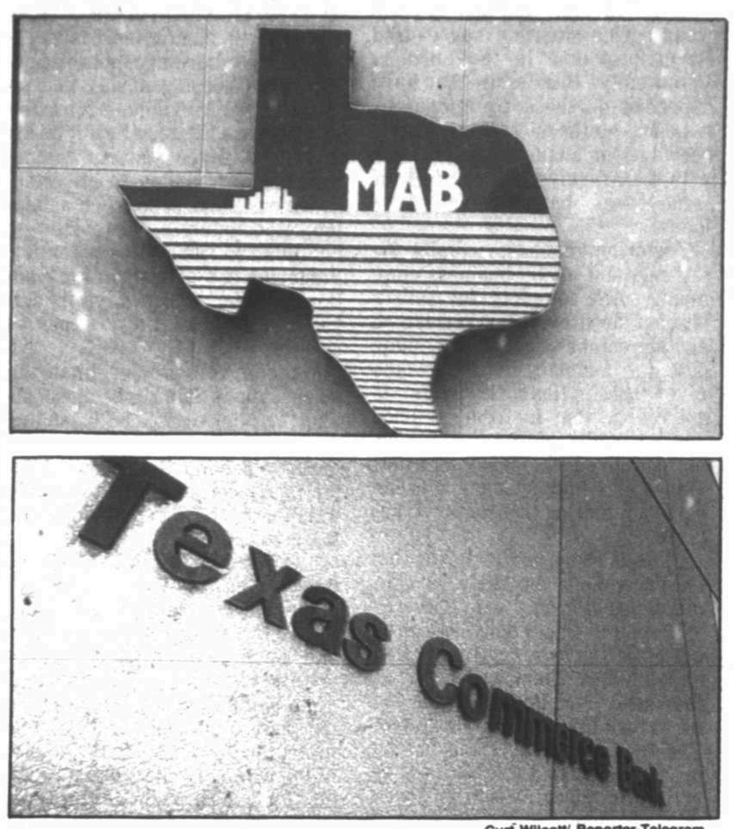

KERMIT STATE BANK — Jess Sellars is president of Kermit State Bank, and along with Greta Tatom, is the primary contact for those seeking energy loans.

"Probably 85 percent of our energy lending involves production loans and loans to oil field contractors," Sellers said. "We also have some property acquistion loans."

He added that a rough estimate of the bank's energy loans as a percent of total loans is around 30 to 40

BANKS: Oil and gas is factor in most area lending percent, and that the bank is very open to talk with customers about energy loans.

THE FIRST NATIONAL BANK OF LAMESA — Robert Henderson said the need for an energy lending policy has never come up. He feels that most Dawson County oil related companies secure loans through Midland or Odessa banks, but he's certainly open to talk with anyone in the industry.

"We're basically agriculture here and not involved in the oil industry," he said. "We certainly support it, but we haven't been asked for that type loan."

The bank was established in 1905.

THE LAMESA NATIONAL BANK — Elwood Freeman is president and chief lending officer of Lamesa National which was established in 1927. He said the bank's lack of an energy lending policy is simply because no company has requested that type loan.

"We'd be open to discussing an oil and gas loan, but only from someone local."

AMERICAN STATE BANK OF LEVELLAND — Scott Wade is manager and vice president of this branch of American State Bank in Lubbock which was established in 1948. Wade said this Levelland branch makes loans to independents in the area who are drilling or acquiring property, but most of the energy loans are made to oilwell service companies.

"We loan to these companies who are buying equipment to service the production in the area," Wade said. "We don't get a lot of requests for other types of energy loans, but we look for companies to have equity in existing properties. Probably 50 percent of all our loans can be categorized as energy loans."

AMERICAN STATE BANK, LUBBOCK — Tony Whitehead is executive vice president of American State Bank in Lubbock, and said the bank has virtually no energy lending policy.

"Ours is very limited because we're primarily farm production," he said, "And we usually require alternative sources of collateral assets (other than oil and gas) or other sources of cash flow."

Whitehead explained that the bank's expertise in energy lending is limited and so the help they can offer customers is likewise limited. "We're up front about that, but certainly willing to talk."

CITY BANK OF LUBBOCK — J.B. Potts is vice president with City Bank which came under new ownership October 1st this year. Potts said the bank's major emphasis is agriculture.

"Our activity in energy related lending is very limited due to not being in the location of production," Potts said. "Our present participation is really nonexistent and we're not planning to change that."

FIRST NATIONAL BANK AT LUBBOCK — Gary Lawrence is chief lending officer for First National and said as a general policy only, the bank handles energy loans for production, drilling rigs and other equipment with different specifications.

For example, Lawrence said the bank lends on proved developed producing properties -- at least five or more -- and doesn't usually lend for wildcat exploration. Loans for more than $500,000 should be supported by an independent engineering report.

"We typically don't lend for more than 50 percent of the discounted net future profit or cash flow," Lawrence said. "Loans are amortized monthly, usually at 36 month payout and never more than 48 months. Those loans less than $500,000 are predicated on the actual history of production, and are never for more than 36 months."

He added that the bank typically doesn't like to lend on less than five producing wells which avoids "concentration risk," and likes the production period of each well to be no less than 12 months.

"We're selective on loans for drilling rigs, and consider the financial soundness of the company or individual along with some other source of repayment," he said, adding that these loans are amortized over five years.

He said equipment for oilwell service companies are reviewed based on the company's cash flow and an appraisal of the equipment.

Lawrence said less than 10 percent of the banks loans fall into the energy category.

THE PLAINS NATIONAL BANK OF LUBBOCK — Tom Darden, executive vice president with Plains, said the bank's loans in the past have been for the acquisition of existing producing properties which are often used as collateral.

"We do have operating loans to drilling companies, and a few rigs financed," said Darden. "But just a minimal amount of rig financing and only for well established companies. We also have working capital type loans with oilwell service companies and with a few other banks in the area."

He said the bank's energy loans are less than ten percent of all loans which he attributes to a lack of opportunity, and said Jerry Schaffner is now the chief lending officer.

SHADOW HILLS NATIONAL BANK, LUBBOCK — Ken Jones is executive vice president and chief lending officer of Shadow Hills which he described as a young, small bank.

"We were established in 1983, so we've participated very little in energy lending," he said.

Jones noted the bank's legal loan limit is only about $400,000.

"We've had requests for energy loans, but that doesn't buy much property or equipment," he said. "We have loaned on a few leases and some small things, and we're open to talk to anyone. We're just not able to loan a lot."

WESTERN NATIONAL BANK, LUBBOCK — Archie Huckabee, chairman of the board for Western National, said the bank is only seven years old so they don't have a history of energy lending.

"We have no production loans, and really only have one energy customer," said Huckabee. "The drilling companies that survived are still banking with the older, established banks that were around before we were, but we're certainly open to look at anything."

WHISPERWOOD NATIONAL BANK, LUBBOCK — Gary McCoy is the servior vice president and chief lending officer at Whisperwood which he described as a small bank without many energy lending customers.

"We're ten years old and the majority of what we've done in the energy field are production based loans for individuals with a high net worth, like doctors and lawyers, investing in oil holdings," McCoy said.

He added that bank policy requires that energy loans are for customers only who live within Lubbock County.

SECURITY STATE BANK, McCAMEY — Jim Smitherman, from the bank's Crane branch, is the oil and gas lender for Security's three locations in McCamey, Crane and Big Lake.

"We have loans for some small oil and gas leases for independents and for construction equipment for service companies," he said.

He added that probably 25 percent of the bank's loans are related to energy in the lease and construction categories. Security State Bank was established in 1928.

COMMUNITY NATIONAL BANK OF MIDLAND — Bob Southerland is president and chief lending officer at Community National and said the bank handles a limited amount of energy lending.

"We're always willing to talk about the different types of energy loans," Southerland said, "But we haven't issued any production or exploration type loans. We have a lot of loans to service and supply companies for equipment, pipe and other lines of credit."

He said approximately 25 to 30 percent of the bank's loans fall into this category.

MIDLAND AMERICAN BANK — John Grist, president of Midland American Bank, said the bank is aggressive in energy lending and has issued both production and equipment loans.

"We finance producers as well as the maintenance and support businesses for the industry," said Grist. "We've employed the services of a senior vice president, Barry Simmons, who handles energy loans."

He added that Simmons brought a lot of energy experience from a previous job as executive vice president at Claydesta National job, which was active in energy lending.

"We believe that we are more aggressive than other banks in making production loans," said Grist. "We feel that our independent status in Midland means we have to be involved in the oil industry, and we think that applies to everyone who lives and works here. We want Midland American Bank to be all things to all people."

MIDLAND NATIONAL BANK — Bob Coleman is senior vice president and manager of the oil and gas division at Midland National Bank. He said the bank's energy lending policy covers about every category.

"Our oil and gas division is lending money that is secured by existing reserves and used for exploration, acquisition of property, 3-D seismic, tertiary recovery and secondary recovery projects," Coleman said. "All our lending to service companies is handled through our commercial department."

Coleman added that energy loans comprise a large part of the bank's total loans.

"Regarding loans directly secured by producing properties, our portfolio is 50 percent energy," he said.

NATIONSBANK, MIDLAND — Frank Stowers and Dale Wilson, both vice presidents and loan contacts in the Energy Banking Group of NationsBank, described the group's loan portfolio as consisting of acquistion, exploration and development loans.

They said the bank provides energy loans to corporations, refineries and publicly traded companies through the Energy Banking Group; and energy loans to service companies, small independents, one-man shops and other non-energy business loans through the Community Banking Group.

"The NationsBank Energy Banking Group nationwide has 11 petroleum engineers, one of whom is in Midland," said Wilson. "That means we're bringing directly into the Midland market the institutional expertise of dealing with large corporations on a national scale."

Stowers added that the national perspective has been recognized in the industry.

"NationsBank in the last three years has been named top provider of energy loans by Petroleum Economist Limited," Stowers said. "We want customers to know we're definitely active in the industry and entertain all aspects of energy loans."

TEXAS COMMERCE BANK MIDLAND N.A. — Terry McCarter is senior vice president and manager of energy lending for Texas Commerce in Midland and Odessa. He said the bank emphasizes reserve base lending.

"We finance gas gathering, gas treating, pipelines...those that depend on gas volumes," he said.

McCarter described pricing as a floating average price of the last 12 months.

"We escalate at five percent a year; we also escalate operating costs at the same rate."

He said loans are considered for around 50 percent of reserves -- and never more than 57 percent -- against proved, developed, producing reserves. He added that they sometimes do consider behind pipe proved reserves.

Regarding equipment loans, McCarter said TCB follows standard market lending. They don't do a lot of equipment loans but will consider that type for companies with a strong track record.

"We probably have a reserve base that exceeds 50 percent of the total loans at this Midland location," he said. "And that includes the gas plants and other categories."

TEXAS NATIONAL BANK, MIDLAND — Randy L. Stevens is senior vice president along with being a petroleum engineer since 1979.

"We have three petroleum engineers on staff," Stevens said, "and we think having this strong, technical background is a strength and shows we're committed to the industry."

He said Texas National will consider acquisition, exploration, production and equipment loans.

"About 30 percent of our loans are oil and gas and another 5 percent are loans to service companies for equipment and pipe."

He added that the bank's loan values are based on cash flow.

"While we're concerned about collateral, we're most concerned about the borrower's ability to repay the loan," Stevens said.

He feels Texas National's locally owned and independent status helps meet the needs of the many independents in the area.

"Being locally owned also enables us to make decisions here and gives us flexibility."

FIRST NATIONAL BANK OF MONAHANS — Ed Lawson, executive vice president, and Tim Nesbitt, president and chief lending officer, are the loan contacts at First National.

Lawson described the bank as an oil field servicing bank.

"We mainly loan to service companies for equipment and trucks," Lawson said. "We do not loan for exploration because we don't have the expertise to finance a driller or a lease for future production."

He added that the bank has a few loans with very good customers on proven production.

"Probably 50 percent of our loans are energy related," he said.

The bank was established in 1949 and Lawson said it is limited to Ward County customers.

FIRST STATE BANK OF MONAHANS — Charles Wade is president and chief lending officer for First State Bank which was established in 1937.

"We're very definitely in the energy lending business," Wade said.

He added that the bank is very open to talk with customers regarding many types of energy loans especially production loans and loans to service companies.

"Including the loans we have to service companies, roughly 80 percent of the bank's loans could be considered energy related," he said.

BANK OF THE WEST, N.A. IN ODESSA — Dale Holloway, president and chief lending officer, said the bank was established in 1983.

"Nearly everything we do in energy lending is for service companies to the oil and gas industry," Holloway said. "They comprise probably 80 percent of our commercial portfolio. We're too small to do any oil and gas property loans, and we don't have the expertise to do production loans."

TEXAS BANK IN ODESSA — Richard Browning is chairman of the board and said the bank's energy type loans are basically for equipment financing for service companies.

"Loans to service companies are probably 30 percent of all our commercial loans," Browning said. "We've had a fair demand for this type loan, but we're open to discussing other loans."

He said the primary contacts would be Thelma Stone, bank president, or Lee Huff, senior vice presidnet of commercial lending. The bank was established in Odessa in 1982.

OZONA NATIONAL BANK — John Lee Henderson is chief lending officer and describes the bank's loan portfolio as primarily agricultural.

"We don't have any direct energy loans," Henderson said. "We do have loans with oilwell service companies, but these are probably less than one percent of our loans."

Ozona National was established in 1905.

FIRST NATIONAL BANK OF SEMINOLE — Bob Lumpkin is senior vice president for this bank established in 1979.

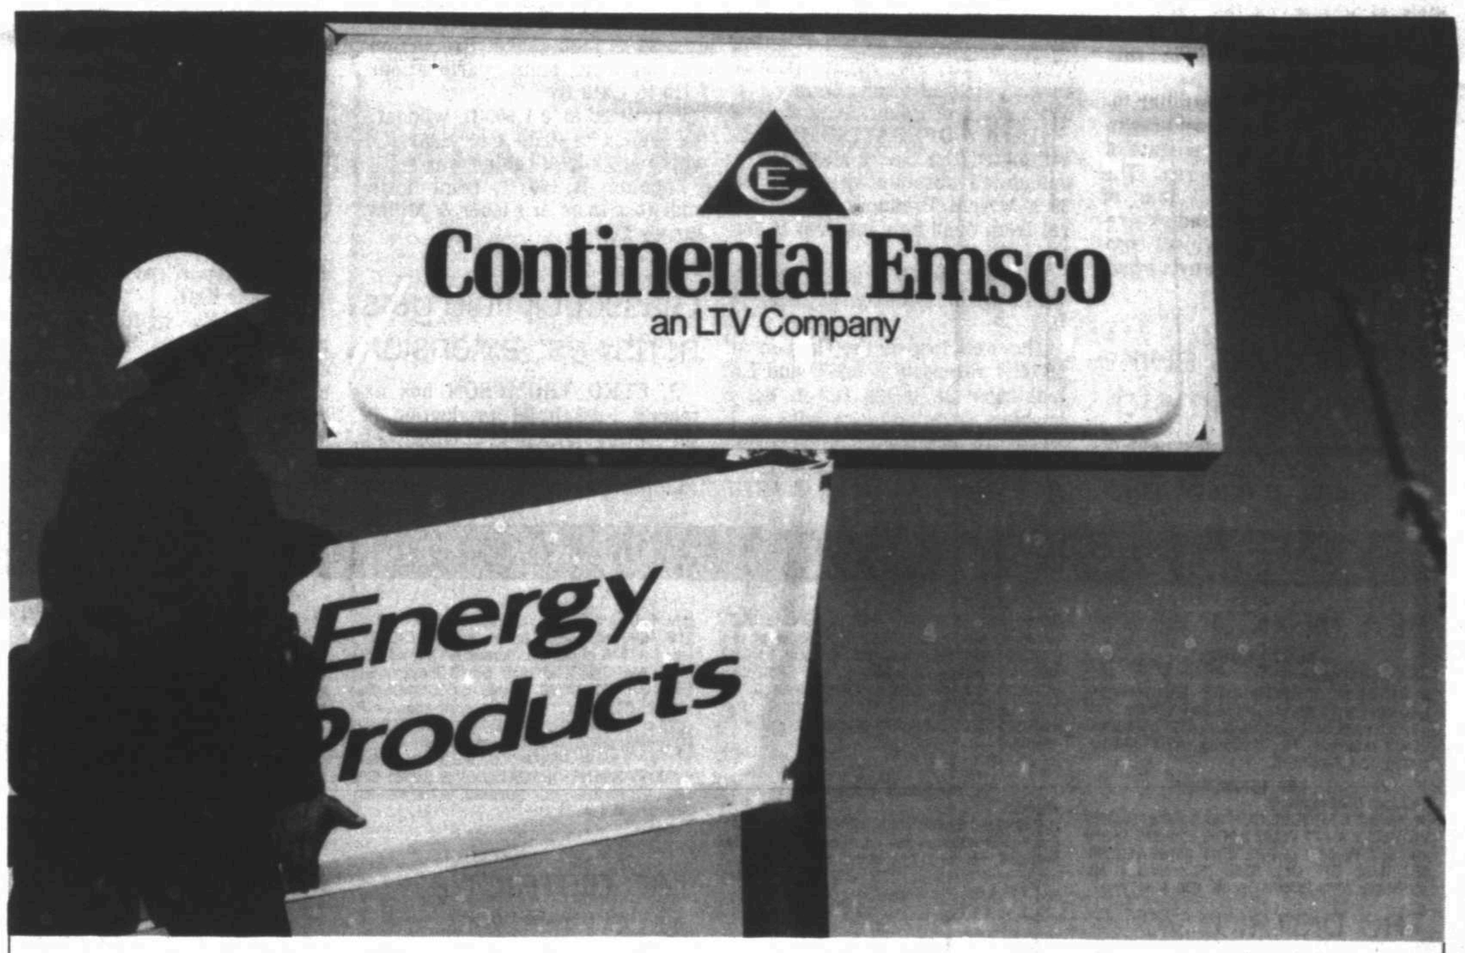

"Our energy lending is primarily to oil field service companies," Lumpkin said. "This portion of our loan portfolio is approximately four percent. We'd like to diversify our loan base and attract some other loans. We're mostly agricultural."

SEMINOLE NATIONAL BANK — Richard Watts is president and chief lending officer. He said about five percent of the bank's loans are to oilwell service companies.

"We don't have the staff to analyze production loans," Watts said. "And we only do business locally in Gaines County."

SNYDER NATIONAL BANK — Darryl Calley is vice president

Tucker announces Dawson discovery

Staff report

TUCKER DRILLING CO. INC. has announced the completion of a Fusselman discovery in Dawson County.

The No. 1 Adcock Farms was completed to flow 210 barrels of crude, 3 Mcfd and 25 barrels from an open hole interval at approximately 11,600 ft. Production flowed from a 12/64 inch choke.

Tucker owns a 6.25 percent working interest (5 percent revenue interest) in the well and in additional acreage in this prospect. It is anticipated that five more wells could be drilled in this prospect.

The company owns a similar interest in three other prospects in this area covering an aggregate of approximately 3,200 acres. The acreage comprising all four of these prospects was leased as a result of a 3-D seismic project completed during the company's previous fiscal year.

Morrow gas strike flows 6.5 Mmcfd

A Morrow discovery has been reported in Eddy County, N.M.

MITCHELL ENERGY CORP. finaled the No. 2 Apache "25" Federal Com. to flow 6.5 Mmcfd on a 15/64 inch choke with flowing tubing pressure of 4,000 psi. The well flowed from perforations 14,113 to 14,132 ft.

Total depth was 14,575 ft.

Location is 660 ft. from south and 1,310 ft. from east lines of Section 25, T22s, R30e.

Pecos well now horizontal producer

A former vertical producer has been recompleted as a horizontal producer in the Hokit (Ellenburger) field of Pecos County, 18 miles south of Bakersfield.

STALEY OPERATING CO. recompleted the No. 1 Mays for a calculated absolute open flow of 39.99 Mmcfd. Production was natural from open hole interval 10,798 to 11,038 ft.

Original depth was 11,038 ft. with 5 1/2 inch casing set at 10,798 ft.

The well topped the Canyon at 8,774ft., Simpson at 9,257, and Ellenburger at 10,798 ft. on kelly bushing elevation of 3,124 ft.

Surface location is 2,521 ft. from south and 2,241 ft. from east lines of Section 17, Block 127, T&STL survey. Bottom hole location is 248 ft. from south and 263 ft. from east lines of the surface location.

Third well added to McCulloch field

A third producer has been added to the Needle Creek (Strawn) field of McCulloch County, extending the field a half-mile northeast, seven miles southeast of Melvin.

BOWERMAN OIL & GAS INC. tested the No. 4 White Estate to flow 26 barrels of 23 gravity crude on a 32/64 inch choke. Production was natural from perforations 1,210 to 1,212 ft.

Permitted as a 2,000 ft. wildcat, the well was drilled to 1,354 ft., where 4 1/2 inch casing was set.

Location is 150 ft. from north and west lines of Fisher & Miller survey 2207.

Glasscock field gets northwest extension

J. CLEO THOMPSON has extended Fusselman production in the Dewey Lake field of Glasscock County a quarter-mile northwest, 15 miles northwest of Garden City.

On potential test, the No. 1 Beulah Mae flowed 234 barrels of 54.3 gravity condensate and 200 Mcfd on a 14/64 inch choke with flowing tubing pressure of 475 psi. The well flowed from perforations 11,017 to 11,047 ft., which had been acidized with 350 gallons 15 percent NeFeHCL acid.

Drilled to 11,065 ft., the well was plugged back to 11,050 ft. with 5 1/2 inch casing set at 11,056 ft.

Formation tops, on ground elevation of 2,623 ft., include the San Andres at 3,605 ft., Spraberry at 6,714, Wolfcamp at 8,164, Strawn at 9,978, Woodford at 10,672 and Silurian at 10,962 ft.

Location is 313 ft. from north and 100 ft. from east lines of Section 20, Block 35, T-2-S, T&P survey.

Correction

A completion listed in last Sunday's Oil Report gave an incorrect initial potential.

Santa Fe Energy Resources' No. 12 Energy Pure Gold "C-17" Federal had an initial potential of 343 barrels of crude per day. It was incorrectly listed as having an initial potential of 33 bopd.

The well is the Los Medanos field of Eddy County, N.M.

Amoco buys gathering system

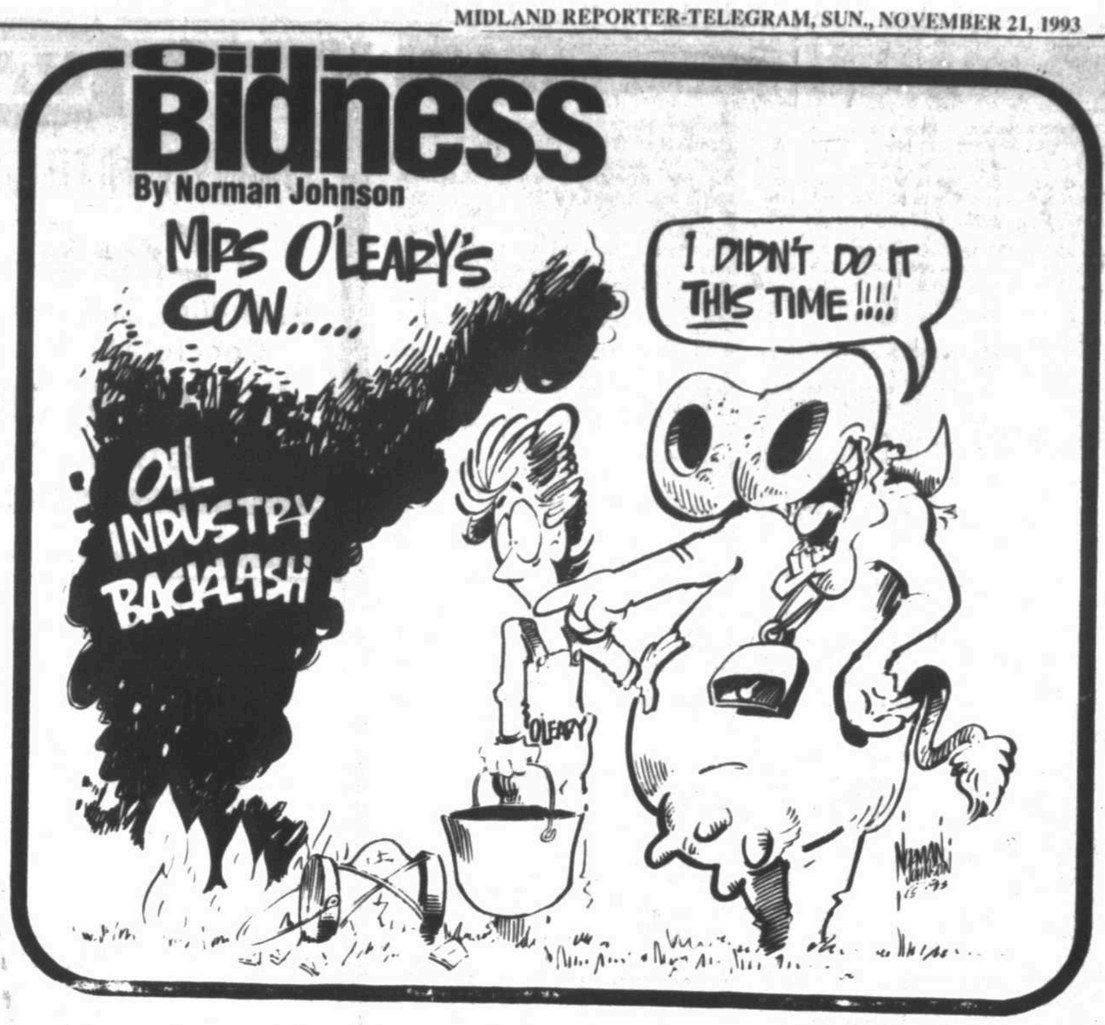

HOUSTON — Amoco Production Co. announced that it has acquired from American Central Gas Cos. Inc. the Foster gas gathering system in Ector and Midland counties.

The Foster gas gathering system currently transports approximately 13 million cubic feet of gas per day. it serves more than 2,500 wells in about 30 fields, including the Azalea, Foster, South Cowden and Spraberry fields.

Officials from both Amoco and American Central described the Foster gathering system as one of the largest West Texas packages of rich gas to become available in years. Rich gas contains relatively high levels of natural gas liquids.

Amoco will process its new source of gas at the company's Midland Farms and North Cowden gas processing plans north of Odessa.

"This acquisition shows that Amoco is serious about filling capacity at our plants and becoming the leader in full-service gas processing," said Jerry M. Brown, Amoco's group vice president of U.S. operations.

Kuwait refinery reopens after repairs

KUWAIT (AP) — Kuwait reopened the Shuaiba oil refinery, the country's oldest refinery and the most heavily damaged by Iraqi occupiers almost three years ago.

It was the last of the emirate's three refineries to be repaired following Iraq's seven-month occupation, which ended on Feb. 26, 1991.

Oil Minister Ali al-Baghli said at a ceremony that rebuilding the refineries in Mina Abdullah, Ahmadi and Shuaiba cost the government about $385 million.

Shuaiba, which was built in 1968, will process 130,000 barrels of crude per day.

Ahmed al-Mutair, director of the state-run Kuwait National Petroleum Co., said Kuwait would be able to refine 650,000 barrels a day by the end of January 1994.

Recover very low vapor volumes at a profit

STORAGE TANK EMISSIONS → VAPOR JET™ VAPOR RECOVERY SYSTEM → GAS SALES

Strict government air quality standards now regulate hydrocarbon vapor emissions from oil production storage facilities. For many low volume vapor producers, compliance has become a significant factor in their profitability—or even survival.

To meet air standards, the vapors must be recovered. But the low volumes captured for gas sales often do not justify the cost of a conventional compressor-based vapor recovery unit (VRU).

The patented Vapor Jet system is a simple, cost-efficient and virtually maintenance-free alternative to conventional VRUs. Its ability to handle very low vapor volumes at a very low cost makes it ideally suited for marginal production facilities. In many cases, the system will allow the continued operation of sites where the cost of compliance with air quality standards might otherwise have been prohibitive.

Compliance doesn't have to be an expense. At an operating cost of just dollars a day, the Vapor Jet system can pay for itself with recovered gas sales.

It is easily installed at about 50 percent of a VRU's cost. And with its trouble-free design and minimal maintenance cost, the Vapor Jet system performs at 25- to 50-percent of a VRU's operating expense. For more information call Conoco Specialty Products, 1-800-962-5882.

The Penetrator System: Downhole Liquid Jet Cutting Technology

It is virtually impossible to drill a well without causing some kind of damage to the area immediately around the wellbore. Often caused by the introduction of contaminants such as cement, drilling mud or non-compatible completion fluids, this damaged area can become a permanent barrier to production or injection for the well.

Conventional stimulation is not always the answer and this is where Penetrators, Inc. can help boost well performance by using their patented liquid jet cutting technology.

The original tool, the "Lance Penetrator Tool" (LPT) was conceived in 1983 by a team of engineers which included Penetrators' engineering manager, Alan Peters.

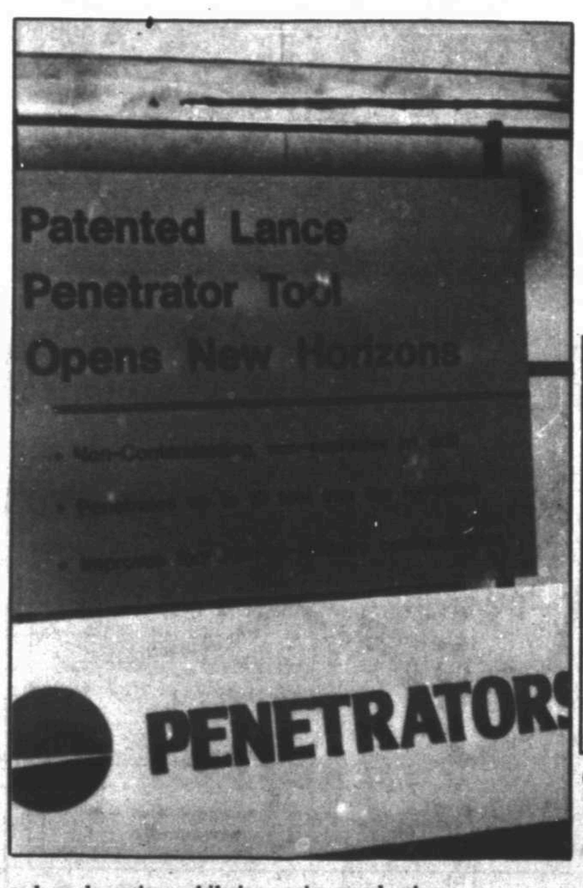

Penetrators, Inc. has taken the technology from the conception to its current commercial level and has proven that deep penetration completion techniques can be undertaken with dramatic well enhancement.

The LPT is a liquid jet drill that is run on a high pressure workstring. The tool is positioned and oriented at the correct depth. Non-contaminating fluid is pumped at up to 10,000 psi at 20 to 25 gpm. During the operation, a punch extends from the tool and through the casing. This forms the path along which the armored lance travels. The lance is equipped with a nozzle that emits the high velocity liquid jet that cuts a tunnel up to 10 feet from the wellbore.

This technology has proved successful in dealing with the challenges of difficult applications such as:
-Reaching beyond the invaded zone.
-Stimulating near the water or gas contact.
-Reduces drawdown, increases effective wellbore radius.
-Improves rates and profiles in injection wells.
-Allows selective acid stimulation.
-Provides large entry hole for fracturing.

Other benefits of the LPT include:
-Non-explosive, non-damaging to casing or cement.
-No debris or compaction in the tunnel.
-Large tunnels are easy to maintain and are less likely to plug.
-Fewer holes than perforating are required.
-Greater opportunity to intersect natural fractures.

All of these benefits mean that Penetrators can help reduce downtime while increasing production.

Penetrators has devoted much of their efforts to research and development of liquid jet cutting technology applied in downhole conditions. The result has been successful completions and stimulations not only in the Permian Basin but across the United States and Canada.

For more information about the LPT and its associated tools, call Stephen Henson, (District Manager) or Alan Peters at the MIdland office, 682-4703, or Ron Cherry (VP) in Houston, (713) 984-1773.

Survey: Gas prices equal year ago

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Despite a new 4.3 cent-per-gallon federal excise tax on motor fuels that began October 1, 1993, U.S. consumers are expected to spend about the same for gasoline this fall as they did this time last year, according to Jay Hakes, administrator of the Energy Information Administration.

U.S. gasoline prices in mid-October were about 2 cents below what they were at the same time last year. For the remainder of 1993 and most likely through the first quarter of 1994, gasoline prices are expected to remain fairly stable.

Weak worldwide demand for crude oil and overproduction by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries were the major reasons for low gasoline prices, said Hakes.

The EIA's quarterly report, the Short-Term Energy Outlook, cites that the net increase in federal revenues resulting from this tax hike is estimated to be $960 million in 1993 and $3.8 billion in 1994.

Other highlights from the outlook:

■ Heating fuel inventories and production capacity for key heating fuels appear to be adequate to meet demands this winter, even if weather conditions are severe. Petroleum demand in 1993 is expected to rise by less than 400,000 barrels per day above last winter's rate.

■ Declining domestic oil production and growing demand have resulted in a rise in total petroleum net imports of 9.6 percent for the first half of 1993. This increase in imports is attributed to a rise in crude oil imports rather than refined petroleum products.

■ Drilling for natural gas in 1993 picked up considerably and progress toward reversing the slide in domestic productive capacity is being made. Natural gas demand has been relatively weak this year, with industrial and electric utility demand slipping during the second quarter.

Enron, Yemen strike gas deal

HOUSTON (AP) — Enron Corp. and General Gas Corp. of Yemen have signed a tentative agreement for the Houston-based company to develop the Middle East country's natural gas industry.

The project calls for Enron to build and then operate a 250-mile pipeline, a liquefaction plant to convert natural gas to liquid and an export terminal to load annually 5.5 million tons of product to ships.

General Gas would supply the natural gas. An Enron subsidiary would market the product in the Far East.

"We are very excited about the opportunities that a project of this magnitude provides Enron," Enron Chairman Kenneth Lay said in a prepared statement. "This project will substantially increase our gas supply capabilities in the international marketplace."

Enron officials would not put a dollar value on the project.

BANKS: Banks consider energy

and, along with bank President Joe Jackson and Executive Vice President Bruce Kallemeyn, one of the contacts for energy lending.

Calley said the bank's policy on energy loans states that they are based on the present value of future production with a limit of 75 percent of the appraised value. Drilling rigs and equipment loans are limited to maturity no longer than five years.

"Less than 10 percent of our loans are energy related," Calley said. "This bank has been listed for the last couple years as one of the Texas Fortress Banks because we are strongly capitalized."

The bank was established in 1905.

SUTTON COUNTY NATIONAL BANK OF SONORA — A.W. Bishop is president of this bank which was established in 1983.

"We really don't have a department for energy loans," said Bishop. "We do have equipment loans for oilwell service companies, but these are less than 10 percent of our portfolio."

Bishop said loans are restricted to the bank's trade area and to those companies that have offices or warehouses in Sutton County.

"We don't have any limitations on talking with our customers about their loan needs," Bishop said. "We always like to talk."

FIRST NATIONAL BANK OF STANTON — Paul Crosthwait is president and chairman of the board at First National which was established in 1906. He describes the bank as serving the established companies and local customers in the area.

"Our delineated area comes up to Midland, but doesn't cross over into Midland for any commercial or real estate loans."

Crosthwai said the bank's energy loans are limited to financing a few contractor/service companies.

"We finance hot oil units and various types of equipment, but we have very few."

He said these loans constitute easily less than 10 percent of the bank's loan portfolio.

STANTON NATIONAL BANK — Joe Hodges is president of Stanton National Bank and said his bank likes the oil and gas industry very much.

"We have excellent banking relationships with some independent operators," said Hodges. "Those loans are probably less than 10 percent of our loan base because we're primarily agricultural."

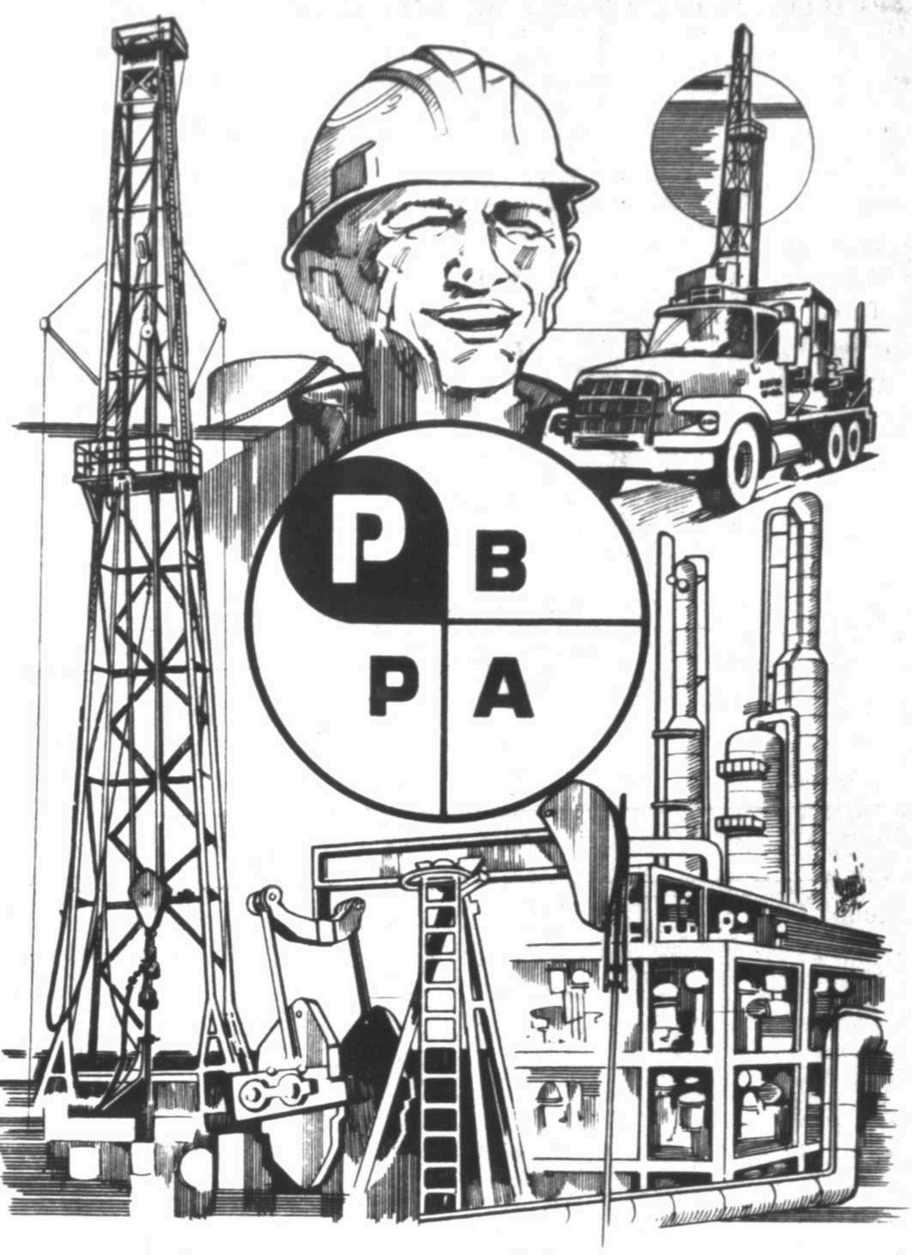

Hodges said he spent 12 years as an independent operator and that background has served him well. The executive vice president is Jack Krause and Hodges said Krause brought 15 years of oil and gas lending experience to the bank.

"Our general philosophy is to make loans and of course we provide other services for our customers," said Hodges. "We certainly don't run from energy lending."

FIRST NATIONAL BANK OF ARTESIA, NEW MEXICO — Brent Hammett is vice president of First National which was established in 1903. He said there isn't much demand for energy loans of any kind these days.

"We've been very conservative in energy lending the last five years," Hammett said. "Loans must be well collateralized and backed with reputable, dependable engineering."

He added that less than 10 percent of the bank's loans are for energy related businesses, and that most of those are for financing equipment for oilwell service companies.

WHEN YOU NEED TO GET FACE TO FACE WITH THE PERMIAN BASIN OIL INDUSTRY :

PERMIAN BASIN OIL REPORT

The Permian Basin is an oil and gas producing empire of 100,000 square miles with an oil well for every square mile. Comprised of 54 counties in Southeast New Mexico and West Texas, this far flung Industry accounts for roughly 20 percent of the nation's total oil production.

Yet, a long standing problem has been the lack of a single newspaper to serve the thousands of companies and over 40,000 workers involved in exploration, land, production, drilling, oilfield service and supply, pipelines and construction, refining, and transportation.

But now, the Permian Basin Oil Report, published weekly by the Midland Reporter-Telegram, has become the information source for the Permian Basin oil industry.

Packed with information and articles about oil and gas people, products, companies, issues, events, drilling, exploration, and production, the Oil Report appears each Sunday as a section of the Midland Reporter-Telegram. Additionally, it is mailed to producers, operators and oilfield service companies throughout the Permian Basin and in 13 Southwest states.

If the Permian Basin is your target market, the Permian Basin Oil Report is the way to reach it.

Pennzoil collects $721 million in Chevron common stock sale

By Michael Graczyk

HOUSTON (AP) — Pennzoil Co. collected $721 million by selling nearly 8.2 million shares of Chevron Corp. common stock in a block trade on the New York Stock Exchange.

The sale, before commissions, amounted to about $89 per share and allowed the Houston-based energy company to gain about $171 million over the average Chevron stock price of $67.36 per share.

Pennzoil spokesman Robert Harper said the proceeds from the sale of 8,158,582 shares would be used initially for short-term investments.

"Farther out, I'm not prepared to speculate," he said.

Harper said he did not know who purchased the stock.

Pennzoil continues to own 9,035,518 shares of Chevron common stock, or about 2.8 percent of Chevron. Dividends on those shares amount to some $31.6 million annually, Pennzoil said.

San Francisco-based Chevron, which has 325.4 million shares outstanding, had no reaction to Thursday's sale.

"We have a longstanding policy of not commenting on stock market activity," spokesman Mike Libbey said.

Harper said Thursday's transaction allowed Pennzoil to lock in the $171 million gain plus take advantage of a $25 million benefit for the 1993 tax year by using currently available net operating loss carryforwards.

"In effect, it adds about $4.70 per share to the gain," Harper said. "Those two things made it attractive to sell at this point in time."

In 1989, Pennzoil spent $2.1 billion of a net $2.6 billion settlement of its historic court judgment against Texaco Inc. to purchase 31.5 million common shares of Chevron, giving it about 9 percent ownership of Chevron.

Pennzoil had sued Texaco in 1985, claiming Texaco violated a contract when it purchased Getty Oil Co. at the same time Pennzoil was attempting to acquire part of Getty.

A Houston jury awarded Pennzoil more than $10 billion, the largest award in litigation history, but Texaco sought bankruptcy court protection afterward and the two oil companies settled on $3 billion, before expenses, as part of Texaco's re-emergence from the bankruptcy process. The net settlement to Pennzoil was about $2.6 billion.

Pennzoil, however, has been disposing its Chevron shares, most notably selling about half its stake late last year to Chevron in return for oil and gas fields in the Gulf of Mexico and West Texas.

As part of that deal, Chevron and Pennzoil also agreed to drop all legal claims against each other stemming from Pennzoil's investment in Chevron stock. Chevron had protested the investment.

Gas flowing throug pipeline

HOUSTON — Natural gas has begun to flow through the western segment of the newly constructed Empire State Pipeline from the U.S.-Canada border near Niagara Falls to Rochester, N.Y.

Sponsors said the western segment went into operation Nov. 1, and the rest of the Empire State Pipeline, from Rochester to Syracuse, N.Y. will begin deliveries by mid-November.

Empire has initially contracted to transport approximately 200 million cubic feet per day of natural gas to local utilities and electric power producers located in western and central New York. By 1995, those volumes are expected to climb to over 400 Mmcfd.

Construction of the 24-inch pipeline began on June 11, 1993, following five years of planning and regulatory reviews by numerous agencies.

Empire is currently accepting requests for firm and interruptible transportation.

Empire State Pipeline is owned by subsidiaries of the Coastal Corp., Westcoast Energy Inc. and Rochester Gas and Electric Corp. ANR Pipeline Co., a subsidiary of Coastal, was in charge of building the pipeline and is its operator.

Rochester Gas and Electric supplies electric and natural gas service wholly within the state of New York and is engaged in the production, transmission, distribution and sale of these services in a nine-county area.

OC offers oil and gas job certification

ODESSA — Odessa College now is offering people in the oil industry the opportunity to earn certificates in five specific job areas of the industry.

Through OC's petroleum technology department, certificate programs have been tailored for five jobs. These jobs are safety and environmental technician, well head pumper, gas compressor operator, gas plant operator and refinery panel operator.

Petroleum classes to be offered during the spring 1994 semester are "Industrial Safety," "Hazwoper," "Environmental Issues," "Composition and Rhetoric," "Interpersonal Relations and Team Building," "Petroleum Overview," "Well Completion Methods," "Production Methods," "Computers for Petroleum," "Cooperative Work Experience," "Petroleum Land Titles," Artificial Lift," and "Hazardous Waste and Energy Response."

To earn the certificate for safety and environment technician, the student must complete 15 credit hours; for the gas compressor or refinery panel operator, 21 hours; and for well head pumper or gas plant operator, 24 hours.

Il courses apply toward a two-year associate's degree in petroleum technology.

Those interested in taking any of the classes may sign up Nov. 22-Dec. 9 during early registration for the spring 1994 semester. Classes begin Jan. 18, 1994.

For more information, call J.D. Roberts, chairman of OC's petroleum technology department, at 335-6501.

Clayton Williams income off

Clayton Williams Energy Inc. announced net income for the third quarter of $923,000 or 16 cents per share, compared with $771,000 or 24 cents per share in the third quarter of 1992.

Revenues for the quarter were $15.1 million, compared with $16.1 million for the third quarter of 1992.

For the nine months ended September 30, the company recorded net income of $3 million or 71 cents per share, compared with net income of $928,000 or 29 cents per share, for the first nine months of 1992. Revenues for the first nine months of 1993 were $45.5 million, compared with $46.7 million in the same period last year.

Production for the third quarter increased by 9 percent over the second quarter. During the third quarter, nine horizontal wells were completed for a total of 152 productive horizontal wells. The company has also signed a letter of intent to drill six wells during 1994 to earn a 50 percent interest in a sizeable acreage block in Argentina.

Responding to lower oil prices, the company said it has temporarily reduced the level of its drilling program and currently plans to continue a three-rig program in gas-prone areas of the South Texas Cretaceous Trend.

Clayton Williams Energy Inc., headquartered in Midland, is an independent oil and gas producer. The company's operations are focused in the Cretaceous Trend where it owns approximately 250,000 gross acres, of which 150,000 remain to be developed.

Firm finds oil reserve values rise 15 percent

■ Strevig & Associates says domestic reserve values rose almost 15 percent in the third quarter.

Staff report

HOUSTON — Domestic reserve values increased by almost 15 percent to a median value of $4.46 per BOE, from the second quarter value of $3.92.

This represents a significant change in events overcoming last quarter's sub $4.00 value, a price seen only twice in the previous nine years.

The median was derived from 74 transactions, approximately a 50 percent increase from the revised number of deals, 50, closed in the second quarter.

The aggregate value of transactions was $1.53 billion, more than doubling the $728 million (revised) traded in the second quarter.

Fourteen transactions, ranging from $20 to over $300 million in value, represented 82 percent of the dollar volume transacted. However, in terms of number of transactions, deals less than $20 million in value represented more than 77 percent of the total transactions.

Natural gas was the clear winner as the fuel of choice, dominating 70 percent of the number of deals. In terms of actual reserves traded, gas was dominant, accounting for more than 67 percent of the reserves.

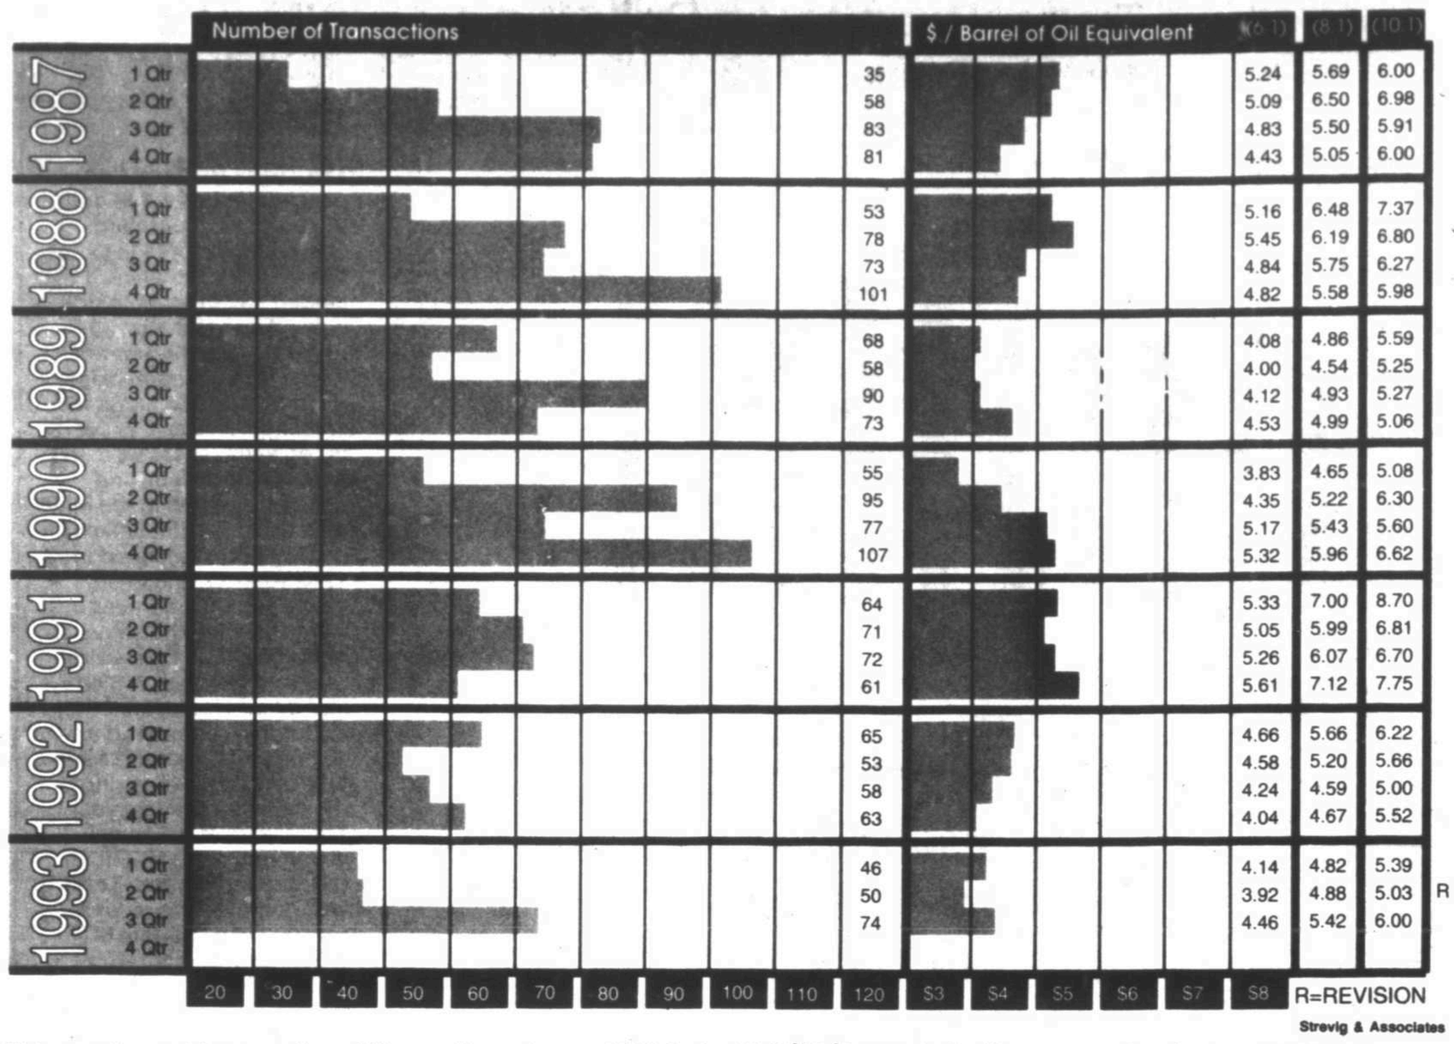

The median price paid for transactions involving a significant amount of natural gas was $0.74 per Mcf, a 4 cent increase from the second quarter median of $0.70 per mcf.

The ratio of reserve values to wellhead prices in the third quarter yielded an above average 33 percent compared to the historical 30 percent.

This ratio suggests that current market conditions are shifting in favor of sellers. Buyers were able to complete more transactions and sellers were able to receive generally higher prices.

Despite this, independent producers' acquisition budgets remained significant and substantially unused. Several property packages being sold by the majors found their way to the auction market; more are likely to follow suit.

Strevig and Associates, Inc. is a boutique investment banker specializing in negotiating oil and gas mergers and acquisitions of companies or assets. S&A publishes this information in its Quarterly Reserve Report to help its clients and industry groups understand current trends and provide a useful benchmark relating domestic reserve values to current market events.

This graph provides a review of the median prices paid historically for domestic oil and gas reserves and the correlating number of transactions indicating the acquisition activity. The median price is reported with a conversion factor of 6,000 cf/barrel, plus a conversion at 8,000 and 10,000 cf/barrel for comparison purposes.

Baker posts higher profits

HOUSTON (AP) — Baker Hughes Inc. said fourth-quarter profits rose 20 percent from the previous year.

In the three months that ended Sept. 30, Baker Hughes earned $28 million, or 18 cents a share, compared with $23.8 million, or 15 cents a share in 1992.

Fourth-quarter revenues were $654.8 million.

The petroleum product and service firm also reported year end revenues of $2.7 billion, a 6.4 percent increase from 1992. Net income was $58.9 million, compared with 5.0 million in the prior year.

Results from 1993 and 1992 include the impact of unusual charges of $42 million and $79.2 million, respectively. Charges in 1992 were for restructuring and acquisitions. In 1993, the charges were for two antitrust settlements.

Baker Hughes Chairman J.D. Woods attributed the improved results to an increase in domestic oil operations.

"Recent increases in U.S. drilling and workover activity and a slowly recovering worldwide economy indicate that industry fundamentals are likely to be better in 1994," Woods said in a Wednesday release.

Exxon puts chemical unit up for sale

COLUMBUS, Ga. (AP) — Exxon Chemical Co. is trying to sell a Columbus subsidiary, Callaway Chemical Co.

It has hired the New York investment banking firm of Wertheim Schroder & Co. to advise it on the proposed sale of Callaway and Tomah Products, based in Milton, Wis.

The proposed sale is part of an effort by Houston-based Exxon Chemical to put full emphasis on its petroleum business.

Bob Wilson, president of Exxon Chemical's Performance Products business group, said Exxon believes Callaway and Tomah "and the people employed in them will have even better futures with other companies."

Callaway Chemical, which employs about 300, was founded in 1954 by Cason Callaway Jr. as a textile chemical manufacturer. Exxon bought the company in 1985.

Annual sales have increased from $32 million at the time of the purchase to $90 million in 1992.

IT'S TIME TO TALK TURKEY

Thanksgiving day is almost here and many first time cooks may be fretting a bit about how to prepare that turkey feast. Fortunately, there are many places consumers can turn to for help.

Some basic safety rules, from the National Turkey Federation include:

■ Do not leave turkey at room temperature. Soon after serving, refrigerate it at 40 degrees or below.

■ Cook ground or boneless turkey to a minimum internal temperature of 160 degrees. Cook bone-in turkey to a minimum internal temperature of 170 degrees. Cook whole turkey to an internal temperature of 180 degrees in inner thigh.

■ Cool food rapidly. Store in small, shallow containers or wrap tightly.

■ Always keep hands, utensils and work areas clean.

But in order to cook that turkey to the correct temperature, you need to know how much turkey to buy, how and when to defrost a frozen bird, what temperature to cook it at ... and the questions go on and on.

That is why Butterball initiated the Turkey Talk-Line 13 years ago. It is probably the most well-known hotline for holiday help. There are 48 specially trained home economists and nutritionists available to answer turkey related questions. The Talk-Line added a line for hearing impaired last year, and received more than 228,000 calls.

To help avoid the "turkey trauma," the Talk-Line is in operation today until 6 p.m. Monday through Wednesday the line will be open from 8 a.m.-8 p.m. Thanksgiving day, helpers will be on duty 6 a.m.-6 p.m. Friday through Dec. 23, the line will be operational from 8 a.m.-6 p.m. Monday through Friday. The Talk-Line number is 1-800-323-4848.

The Reynolds Metal Company also wants to help relieve the pressure of creating a Norman Rockwell picture-perfect Thanksginving dinner with the Reynolds Turkey Information Line. The toll-free number is open 24 hours a day, seven days a week through Nov. 30. The easy directions, recorded by a home economist, includes tips for defrosting your turkey as well as step-by-step instructions for three different methods for roasting turkey. The number is 1-800-745-4000.

The USDA also offers a Meat and Poultry Hotline to help harried cooks along. The number is 1-800-535-4555 and it is open 9 a.m.-3 p.m. Monday through Friday.

When once is not enough...

Once the Thanksgiving dinner is over, there is usually a lot of turkey left over that can easily begin to wear out its welcome once the dinner dishes are washed. But since leftovers are almost as traditional as the meal itself, it becomes a creative challenge to find new, delicious meals to prepare.

To start, its best to remove the turkey meat from the bones before storing. The meat should be wrapped tightly in plastic and refrigerated. The less air that gets into any wrapping or container of leftovers, the longer it will keep. If the leftovers are not going to be eaten within a couple of days, it is best to freeze them as soon as possible.

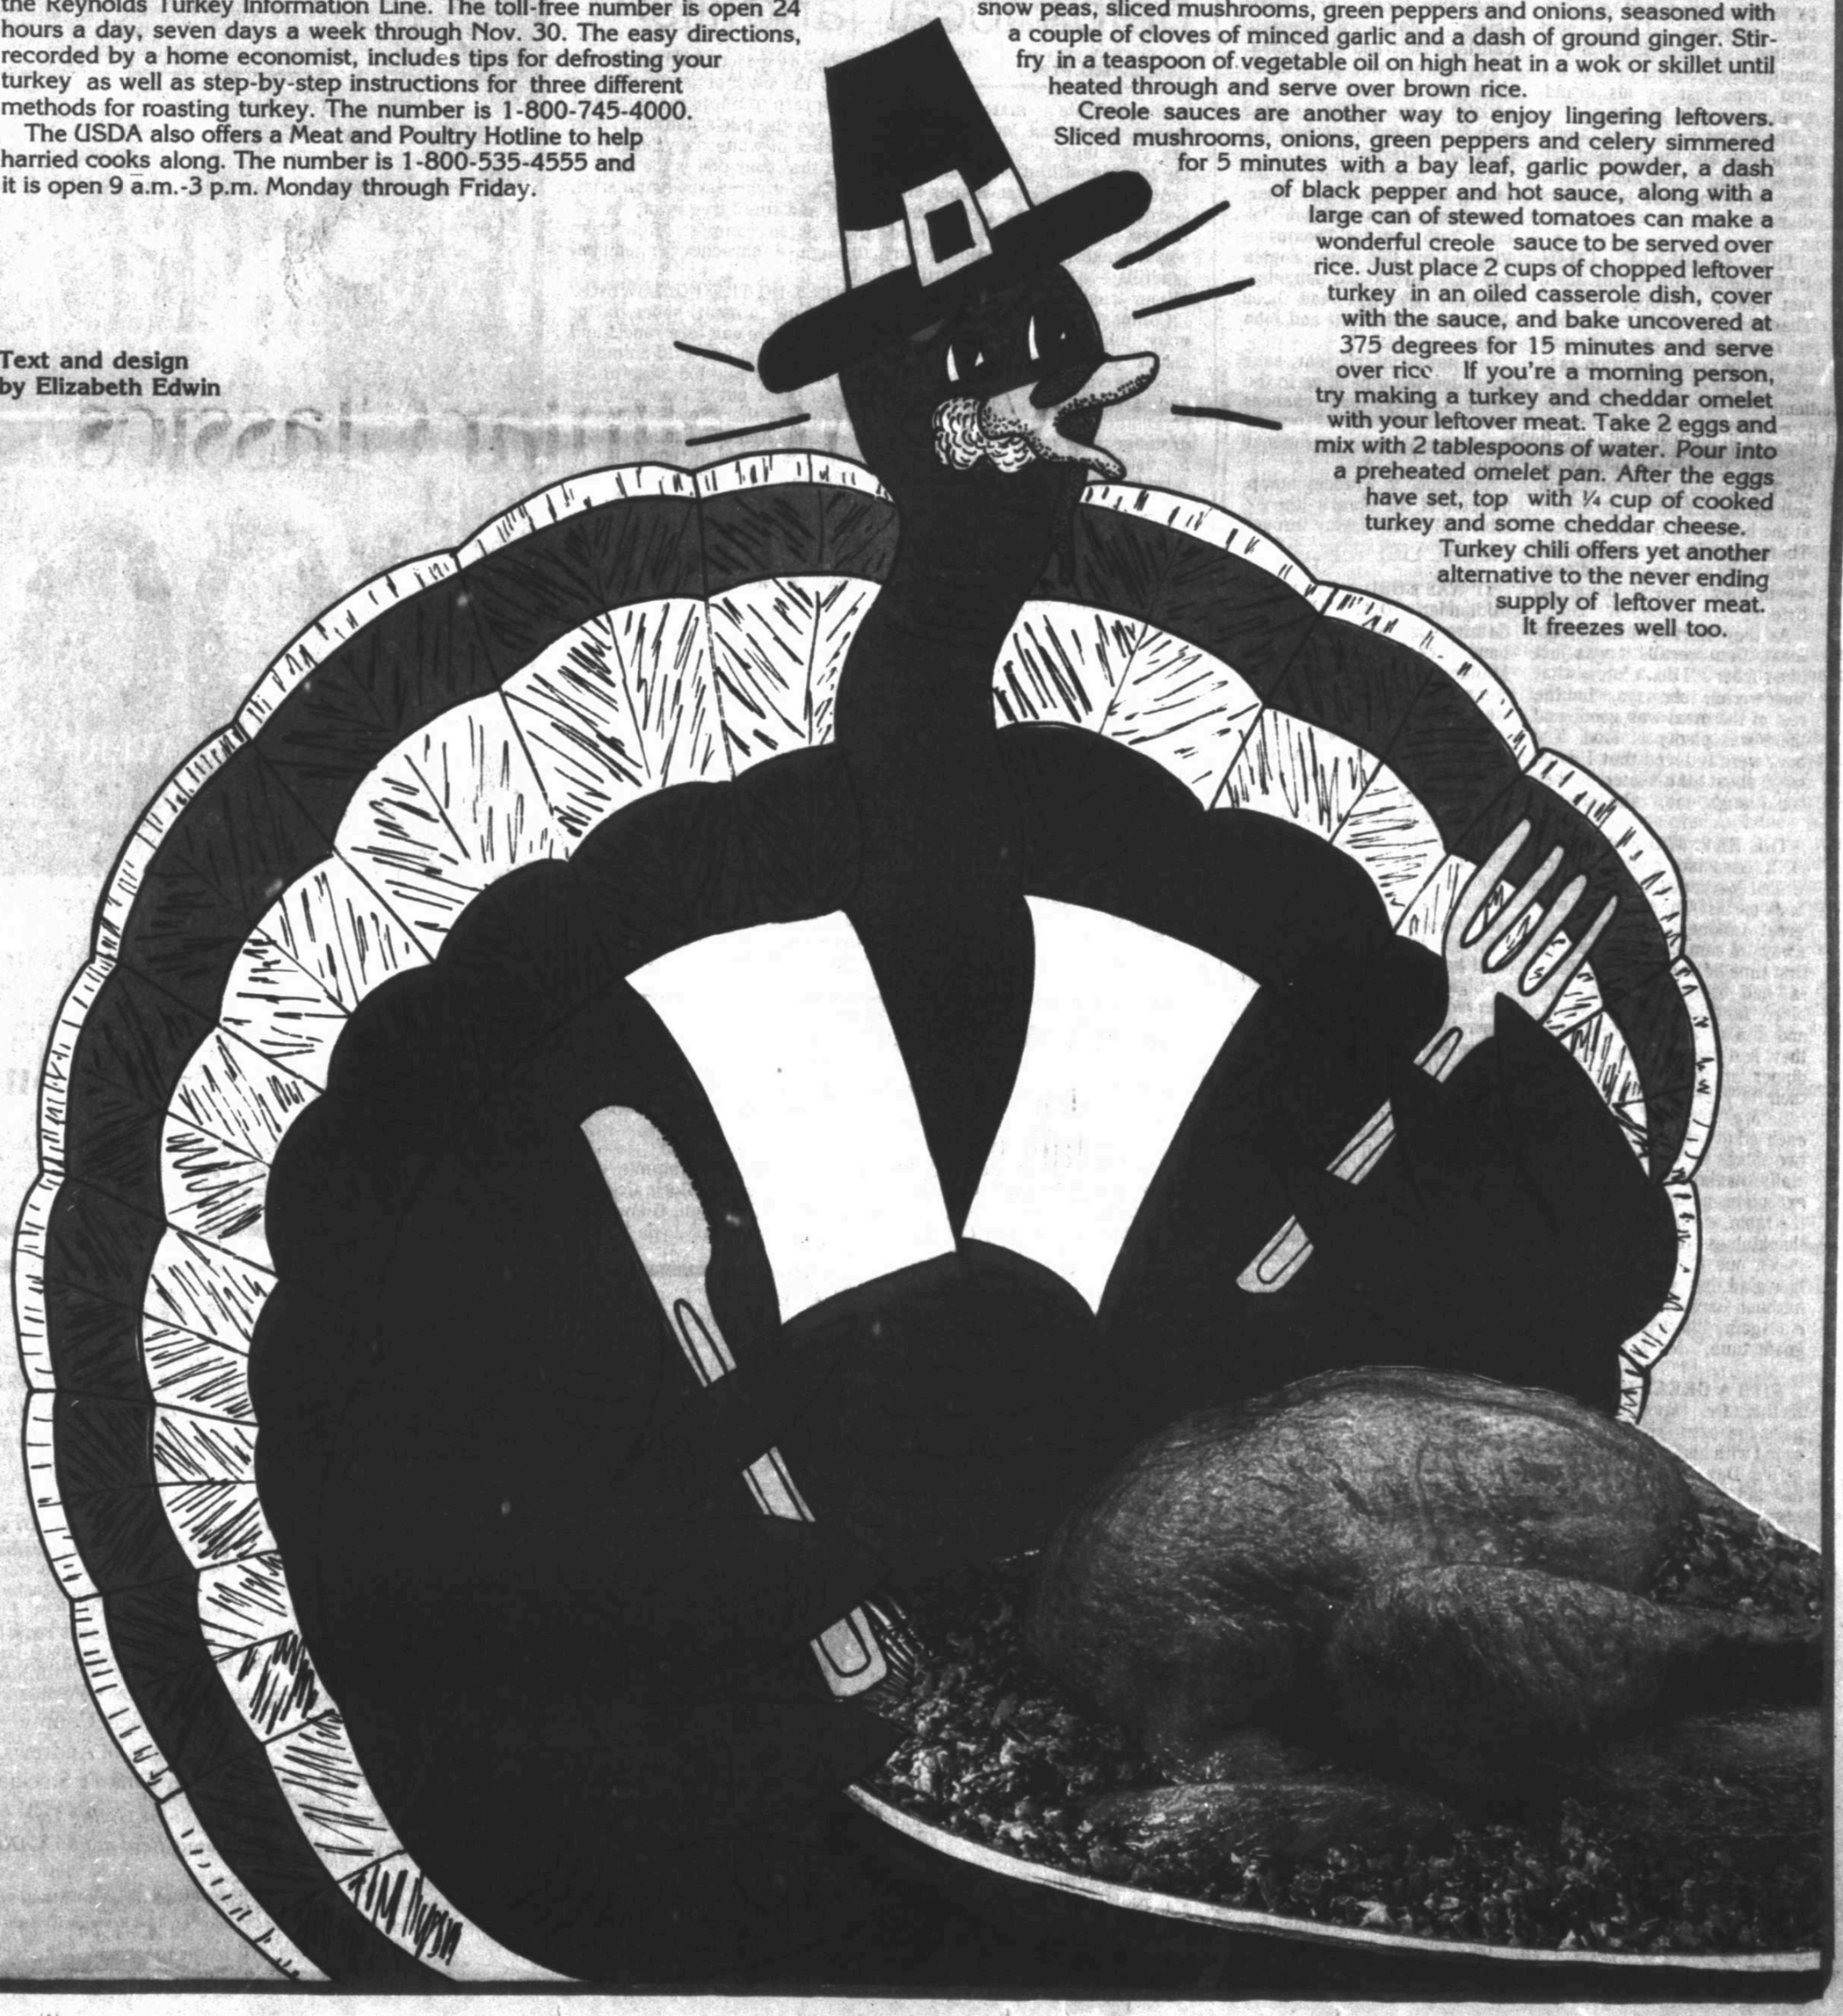

While most people don't think of the turkey bones as leftovers, they are. The bones can be used to make soup. A recipe from the American Institute for Cancer Research suggests boiling the bones for 15 minutes, then simmer them for an hour with raw carrots, celery, a bay leaf and a few peppercorns to make the broth. Remove the bones and add some cut up turkey and any leftover vegetables, and heat. To thicken the soup, remove it from the heat just before serving, dissolve a teaspoon of cornstarch in a half cup of cold water, then pour the mixture into the soup and stir gently.

For less conventional uses of leftover turkey, such as casseroles, salads, stews and sandwiches, try some international flavors. The flavor of turkey meat lends itself to Indian, Mexican, Asian and Italian spices.

For example, try stir-frying 2 cups cut-up, cooked turkey with a few dashes of soy sauce, a can of chopped water chestnuts, frozen or fresh snow peas, sliced mushrooms, green peppers and onions, seasoned with a couple of cloves of minced garlic and a dash of ground ginger. Stir-fry in a teaspoon of vegetable oil on high heat in a wok or skillet until heated through and serve over brown rice.

Creole sauces are another way to enjoy lingering leftovers. Sliced mushrooms, onions, green peppers and celery simmered for 5 minutes with a bay leaf, garlic powder, a dash of black pepper and hot sauce, along with a large can of stewed tomatoes can make a wonderful creole sauce to be served over rice. Just place 2 cups of chopped leftover turkey in an oiled casserole dish, cover with the sauce, and bake uncovered at 375 degrees for 15 minutes and serve over rice. If you're a morning person, try making a turkey and cheddar omelet with your leftover meat. Take 2 eggs and mix with 2 tablespoons of water. Pour into a preheated omelet pan. After the eggs have set, top with ¼ cup of cooked turkey and some cheddar cheese.

Turkey chili offers yet another alternative to the never ending supply of leftover meat. It freezes well too.

Midlanders share seasonal memories

By Marilyn McKnight Harrison

Nothing is as special as spending time with family and friends over the forthcoming holidays, reminiscing and recalling some of the best times of your lives.

McKnight-Harrison

This past week, we asked several Midlanders to share with us their special memories of past Thanksgivings. This is what we learned.

A NORMAN ROCKWELL setting is how Dr. Shelton Viney views some of his early Thanksgivings, dating back to when he was about eight years of age. His family would traditionally travel to his grandparents' home in Paris, Texas, for the holiday dinner. Everyone gathered together at the table and saying grace before the meal reminds him of the Rockwell painting, "Freedom From Want," which appeared in the Saturday Evening Post in 1943.

Fast forward to the year 1982, and Dr. Viney recalls the year they brought his mother home from the hospital on Thanksgiving Day. All the family was happy to be together, and as a special surprise, JoAnn and Shelton's son, Marshall, then 10 months old, decided to take his first steps just as his grandmother came in the house.

The Vineys enjoy large family gatherings and the pleasant rattle and bang of pots and pans as they work together to prepare dinner.

THE CLARENCE CHANDLER family still laughs about last year's "Rubber Ducky" Thanksgiving. Wife and mother, Dana thought she had come up with the prefect solution as to what to serve just the four of them. The boys, Greg, now a senior at Texas A&M, and Eric, a junior at Lee High School, were spending the actual holiday at the Turkey Day game in Austin and eating a traditional dinner at the home of a friend of Greg. Therefore, Dana thought she would prepare a hen for dinner when they arrived home on Friday.

As they started cutting their meat, Dana recalls it was just like rubber. "I don't know what went wrong," she says, "but the rest of the meal was good, and there was plenty of food. The boys were relieved that I could laugh about the disaster, so they could laugh, too," she says.

THE REV. MARK ALEXANDER, associate pastor of First United Methodist Church, looks back on last Thanksgiving with great fondness. Having been away at seminary, it was the first time he and his wife, Teresa, had been with their combined families in four years, and it also was the first time they had hosted Thanksgiving dinner at their own home in their 12 years of marriage.

Before enjoying the meal, each adult was asked to name two things he or she was especially thankful for, and without exception, as they went around the table, each expressed their thankfulness for the healing between one of the couples and how glad they were to have the husband back in the family circle again. "It was a very poignant time," Mark recalls.

WITH A GREAT DEAL of affection, Dr. David Snyder recalls the extra time he got to spend with his father on Thanksgiving Day. Also a physician, his dad was naturally a busy man and gone from home a great deal. However, he always took time off on Thanksgiving Day to take David and the other two Snyder sons deer hunting near their hometown of Brownwood from the time the boys were eight or so until young adulthood. They would then return to the family home in time for a two o'clock dinner. Somehow, David says, Thanksgiving Day was always special. "The weather was invariably cold; we always seemed to see more deer, and the turkey and all the trimmings capped off the day."

MEANWHILE, BEBE FISHER, former longtime secretary at Midland Community Theatre, looks back fondly on many family reunions at both Thanksgiving and the Fourth of July in her hometown of Refugio. "I was particularly touched last year, though," Bebe says. Her sister asked everyone to gather in a circle to give thanks, and after holding hands to offer a prayer in unison, one of the teen-agers suggested, "Before we eat, let's give thanks for what we were particularly grateful for this year." Bebe was deeply touched by the young person's thoughtfulness and by the others' responses.

"We are a very close family," says Bebe, "and like all families, we've had our joys and sorrows, but to put it all in perspective like the youth did, made it especially meaningful."

THE MORE THAN 200 Midlanders who attended the recent preview party of the Southwestern Impressionists Art Show and Sale at the Nita Stewart Haley Memorial Library enjoyed a wonderful fall evening.

The Midland artists, who comprise the group, are Doris Spires, Mary Rasmussen, Charles Pruitt and Don Parks.

The library was packed for the event, as guests viewed the artists' latest works, visited with friends and partook of the delicious refreshments.

Among those spotted in the throng were Mary and Dr. Thurston Dean, Janet and Bob Pollard, Ruth and Joe Thompson, Virginia and Bob Jones, Sophia and G.W. Brock and daughter, Michelle, Patricia and Leon Jeffcoat and Charlotte and John Seay.

In a new twist this year, each artist donated a painting to the Haley Library, and chances were sold at the party. Proceeds benefit the library's operational fund.

According to Frances Stapp, director of the library, the exhibit will be on display through Nov. 30.

IT WAS GOOD to see former Midlander D.A. (Plumlee) Grimes while she and her husband, Erwin, were visiting in Midland last weekend. They were houseguests of Douthea and Bill Shaner.

While D.A. was here, Douthea, along with Ruth Cole, Bebe Fisher, and Mary (Mrs. Brent) Berry, hosted an open house at the Shaners, so friends could visit with D.A. and view the handiwork she has created for her business, Afghans, Etc... The "et cetera" includes such items as Christmas tree skirts, "lapghans," placemats and house slippers.

Light refreshments were served throughout the afternoon. Among those stopping by were Becky (Mrs. Jack) Huff, Trudy (Mrs. Glen) Thomason, Marilynn (Mrs. Phil) Philpy, Alice Moxey, Anna Marie (Mrs. Ed) Vogler and Evelyn Minear.

D.A. was well known to Midland Community Theatre audiences before moving to Kerrville in 1987. She appeared on stage in a number of roles and also was a tireless backstage worker. She now enjoys her work as an artisan.

THE SANTA RITA CLUB of the Petroleum Museum recently held its annual Shrimp and Catfish Dinner at the Coors Party Room.

Sharing in the fun evening were Ann Harges, president-elect of the organization, and her husband, Marvin; Cathe and Bob Leggott, Lois Harrington, Lola and Perry Moore and Bebe and Bob Senning.

The festivities were planned by Connie Naumann and Pat McMillian.

SEEDS FOR THOUGHT

Firewood poses risk to area oak trees

By Deborah A. Benge

Burning your fireplace could be putting your oak trees in jeopardy Well, not the actual burning of the fireplace but the wood brought in from other areas could be infested with oak wilt fungus, and that can surely put your oak trees in danger.

Benge

Oaks could be considered kings among trees. They are stately, long-lived, tough, and the list goes on. They've become a popular tree for Midland landscapes. Unfortunately there are now several oak wilt fungus centers identified in Midland which probably got started by bringing in fungus infested firewood.

Oak wilt fungus is the destructive disease of oaks that has wiped out thousands of oaks in South and Central Texas. More than 44 counties in Texas have been confirmed to have oak wilt fungus; Midland County is among those. All oak species are susceptible to some degree, but Texas and shumard red oaks are very susceptible. Live oaks are not as susceptible but seriously affected, and burr oak shows some resistance.

Trees infected with the fungus usually die with a three-week to six-month period. For some reason infected trees in our area seem to tolerate the disease for a much longer period of time. Control for the disease is costly, requires special equipment and skills, and must be done during the early stages of the disease.

Diagnosing oak wilt is difficult at best and should be done with a laboratory test. On live oak, one leaf characteristic that seems helpful for identification is the veinal necrosis or brown veins symptom. Major leaf veins, the mid-rib and secondary veins, turn yellow or brown. This is just one of many foliar symptoms that can show up, which of course makes identification hard. With Texas and shumard red oaks, the symptoms are less distinct but can appear as bronzed leaves which could be easily confused for other problems.

When oak wilt is suspected, leaves, limbs and root samples can be sent to the Texas Agricultural Extension Service Plant Disease Diagnosis Lab in College Station. The Midland County Extension office has a tri-fold flyer that tells about identification, control and treatment for the disease. It also has step-be-step instructions for taking and sending samples to the Disease Plant Lab. This is available to anyone by request.

The disease is commonly spread by root grafting, but in Midland the major spread is due to insect transmission. Infected oak firewood provides the disease source and beetles provide transmission of the fungal spores. Oak trees infected with the fungus are commonly cut up and used for firewood. If the firewood has fungal mats, it can serve as a source for fungal spores. Sap feeding beetles are attracted to the fungal mats and pick up spores on their bodies, becoming very effective carriers of the fungus. When pruning cuts or injuries are made on a susceptible oak, sap feeding beetles, with spores clinging to their bodies, are attracted to the open wounds and the trees become infected.

As a precaution, all firewood being cut from an oak wilt infested area should be covered with clear plastic when it comes into an area. Stack firewood in sunny area and cover with clear, not black, plastic and seal the edges with soil. The area covered with plastic will heat up enough to kill the fungal spores and the beetles which spread the spores.

Don't worry too much about little holes that occur in the clear plastic. Temperatures should still heat up enough to kill organisms. There is a clear advantage in using clear plastic instead of black plastic. With black plastic, beetles with fungal spores can be attracted to the pin holes of light and easily escape; whereas with clear plastic, chances of beetles finding an exit hole would be slim.

The clear plastic will help rid your wood of other pests as well, such as wood beetles, boring beetles, termites, crickets, roaches and spiders. It's an easy thing to do and will help safeguard the beautiful oaks in our city. Even if you don't own an oak tree, we all benefit from the trees that have been planted in and around our city.

Other ways to safeguard your oak trees is to prune when the beetle is least active, Jan. 1-Feb. 15 and/or during July and August. Another step of precaution that can be taken is using a pruning paint sealer — this is the only time these are recommended. Trees near oak wilt centers should certainly be treated with these cautions.

Take the time to perform this simple, easy little chore of covering your wood with clear plastic. It could save your trees or someone else' trees and help hold this destructive disease at bay.

Composting garbage helps local landfills

Associated Press

Compostable materials — leaves, grass and food waste — are your biggest contribution to the local landfill after paper.

According to Better Homes and Gardens magazine, yard waste makes up 17 percent and food waste makes up 8 percent of our landfills — a total of one-fourth of all our trash.

Composting this material in your backyard, however, will shrink your garbage output, reduce the volume of the materials and give you a valuable soil amendment that provides good drainage and moisture retention for your lawn or garden. All you need to start composting is a little space and patience. If you want to make the most of your compost pile and avoid some deleterious side effects, however, there are some rules to follow.

DO THE FOLLOWING

■ Turn the pile. For the best results, turn the pile with a pitchfork about once a week. This provides the oxygen necessary to the composting process. If you leave your yard waste and food scraps in an unturned pile, they will eventually rot, but it may take a year or two.

■ Throw in a variety of items. Leaves or grass by themselves lack the nitrogen to put composting bacteria to work. Add fresh leafy greens, kitchen produce scraps, manure or specialized compost starters that you buy.

■ Water the pile. A compost pile should be moist, not soggy or dry. During dry periods, add a little water to the pile; or cover the pile with a tarp to retain moisture and increase the pile's humidity. The presence of white, lacy fungi indicates that your pile is too dry.

■ Chip or shred woody material. Bark and small tree branches are difficult to compost. Run them through a shredder or chipper first.

DON'T DO THE FOLLOWING

■ Throw in meat, bones, fat or grease. These can turn rancid and attract vermin and wild animals.

■ Put your pile too close to the house. Don't put it close to your neighbor's either. Food scraps will draw flies. And odors may result if the pile is turned infrequently.

The ideal size to build a compost pile is about 3 feet square and waist high. Any smaller and you won't get a vigorous composting action. Too much larger and you may have uneven spots or difficulty turning the pile.

Use chicken wire or boards with slats in them to get air into the pile. A gate or opening on the front will make the turning easier.

Most store-bought compost bins offer some sort of specialized convenience. They can be portable, washable or insulated. Some offer double chambers or tumblers for easy turning. On a small lot or where neighbors are close by, use a small, closed container.

The best uses for compost are in the garden. Mix it in with your soil, and it will break up clay, hold moisture and encourage the growth of friendly bacteria.

System used to name hurricanes

CORAL GABLES, Fla. (AP) — The system of using women's names to identify each individual hurricane began in the 1950s.

At that time, the U.S. Army alphabet code (Abel, Baker, etc.) was used as a reference. However, this system conflicted with the foreign weather code used in the Caribbean, and the National Weather Service began using women's names in alphabetical order to avoid confusion.

In 1979, men's names were added to the list, and today both sexes are represented in the identification system.

New Where's Waldo? book takes our hero to Hollywood

By Carol Deegan

NEW YORK (AP) — Martin Handford loves crowd scenes. When his publisher suggested a character to tie everything together, Handford created Waldo, hiding in the crowds. Six years later, children (and adults) are still asking, "Where's Waldo?"

Waldo is an unlikely hero. He's tall, thin and bespectacled. He wears blue jeans, a red-and-white sweater and pompon hat.

Other than making Waldo recognizable in a crowd, "there was no other significance in the clothing I gave him," Handford said in a telephone interview from his home in St. Albans, Hertfordshire, Britain. "A stripey top is quite eye-catching. The jeans, ordinary. Extras that would reinforce his appearance."

Handford hides Waldo somewhere in the midst of a series of busy crowd scenes — throngs of turbaned tigers, swashbuckling Musketeers or surfing pirates.

WALDO FIRST appeared as Wally in Britain, where he was "reasonably popular," Handford said. "The books were quicker to take off in the States. I'm not exactly sure why. Right from the start, he seemed to be popular.

"And then, as the book sales carried on, the fan mail started to increase, and from that, I gauged there was an interest in the character himself. Lots of letters were asking questions about Waldo. As well as the crowded places he'd been to."

"Where's Waldo?" (1987), "Find Waldo Now" (1988) and "The Great Waldo Search" (1989) have sold more than 24 million copies worldwide, according to Candlewick Press in Cambridge, Mass. The books are published in 20 languages and are available in 30 countries.

The latest book — "Where's Waldo? in Hollywood" ($14.95) — was three years in the making. It sold out before its official Nov. 12 publication date, according to Candlewick Press, which is planning a reprint for early 1994.

"I'm very much consumed by him. Thinking about Waldo," Handford said. "It really is my life. I love it."

In "Where's Waldo? in Hollywood" Handford has hidden Waldo amid casts of thousands on the bustling sets of great movie classics — a western, musical, silent movie and so on — well-known themes that appear over and over again in filmmaking.

"The genre of filmmaking, it really was one of the formative influences on me," said Handford, who was born in London in 1956. "It was literally going to the cinema, usually seeing a typical swashbuckling picture and going home and sitting down with pencil and paper and continuing on. Going on with my imagination. It made a very poignant impression on me."

HANDFORD SAID he works about 12 hours a day drawing Waldo and the unusual characters who make up Waldo's world. "I'm always hoping and striving ... I try and view it as building bricks working up to an overall body of work that I'm satisfied with.

"It takes me about six weeks to eight weeks to complete one picture," he said. "I have slowed down as time has progressed. I'm pushing myself to the limit, trying to get more ... happening in each scene."

In his latest book, Handford has made Waldo and friends — and all the minute objects he drops on each page — even more challenging to find. For just one double-page scene, Handford estimates that he's drawn 900 characters — "if you include the cameramen."

In addition to Waldo, readers of "Where's Waldo? in Hollywood" also search for Wenda, Wizard Whitebeard, Woof and bad guy, Odlaw. "All five main characters do appear together under the same cover," Handford said. "I introduced them as the popularity of Waldo became apparent to me. They seem to be worthwhile as elements for readers to look for.

"The wizard is an appropriate character because Waldo's traveling — the inclusion of a Wizard with magical powers can add to the slight confusion about what is happening or isn't happening," Handford said. "For Wenda and Woof, I've given them stripe-y tops to wear, to unify them. There's a slight mystery about them. Extra things to look for. They may be part of the same family or the same race."

HANDFORD SAID he hopes the books give the reader the feeling that Waldo's journeys could be achieved through one's imagination, as much as one's actual traveling.

DEAR ABBY

Many travelers think small children should stick close to home

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: This is for "Fellow Iowan," who boasted that his well-traveled children had been all over the world since the age of 2. I wonder how many other world travelers had their vacations ruined by children who were far too young to appreciate sightseeing.

Van Buren

A 2-year-old doesn't care whether he rides a pony around a pyramid or a potato patch, and a 3-year-old can camp as happily in his own back yard as he can at the foot of the Himalayas.

Incidentally, our children have also had the good fortune to have seen quite a bit of the world, but only after they were old enough to appreciate it and to behave respectfully toward other travelers and people of different cultures. — LAURA NELSON, PLEASANT HILL, CALIF.

DEAR LAURA: "Fellow Iowan's" letter prompted numerous letters from my readers, and if my mail is a barometer, be assured you are speaking for many. The following letter is another example of the same point of view:

DEAR ABBY: Here's another perspective on the letter from "Fellow Iowan" who resented the letter from a reader who said she and her husband were able to travel worldwide because they were childless by choice. "Fellow Iowan" pointed out that even though she had a child, when he was 2, she took him to Egypt and the Himalayas.

My husband and I enjoy traveling. We've been all over the world in tour buses, airplanes and cruise ships — and many trips were spoiled by people who brought their small children along.

Two- and 3-year-olds do not gain much from foreign travel. They tire easily, cry, whine, sing and chatter because they are tired, bored or hungry. They also kick the backs of airplane seats while Mom and Dad snore contentedly beside them.

People who travel with children should teach them how to behave in public — and also wait until the kids are old enough to enjoy the trip. — KANSAS CITY TRAVELER

DEAR ABBY: In May 1988, I bought myself an answering machine. My very first call was from an old boyfriend I had met in the early '80s when we were at "Camp Courage" in Minnesota. We were both in wheelchairs — and will be for the rest of our lives — but that is not a problem for either of us. I was 23 and he was 20 when I first spotted this handsome guy at lunch, so I arranged to sit next to him at dinner that evening. An exciting romance followed, but we eventually split up on rather unfriendly terms.

Abby, we had no communication all those years, but when I returned his call, he told me he was now living only 90 miles from me and wanted to see me. I wanted to see him, too, so the next day, he drove up and spent the weekend with me. We hit it off so well that he drove up the following weekend, too. It soon became a habit! We have had our disagreements, but I always hung onto the hope that we would eventually be together for good.

Last month, he surprised me when he told me that he wanted to spend the rest of his life with me! I was thrilled because that's what I had been hoping for.

No one knows for sure what lies ahead for us, but we love each other very much and believe we can have a long and happy future. We are both very independent and strong-willed, and it will be an interesting challenge. Our adventure is just beginning. Wish us luck. — SUE IN MINNESOTA

DEAR SUE: Thanks for a wonderful upper of a letter. And the best of luck to you both in your future together.

Baby-doll dresses return

By Bernadine Morris
N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK — Baby-doll dresses have surfaced as one of the most prominent fashions in the collections of designers everywhere.

Given the emphasis on short hemlines and loosely fitted clothes, it was perhaps inevitable. What is surprising are the variations designers have achieved within the baby-doll scheme.

Some styles are as light and ruffly as christening dresses — Anna Sui showed her white eyelet dresses over clearly visible black underwear to add some sophistication. Isaac Mizrahi offered a whole pantheon of baby-doll dresses, including some striped like T-shirts and some made demure with white collars. Todd Oldham liked wild prints, and Stephen DiGeronimo used shirring for a Grecian effect.

Empire waistlines are popular with designers, who sometimes run a belt of contrasting piping under the bosom.

Despite the attempts at differentiation, the baby-doll dresses often had the same effect: they looked too young, even on the 20-year-olds who modeled them.

In the dresses' defense, it should be noted that they are warm-weather clothes and could look wonderful at the beach. They also have a wide-eyed, pristine quality. On the right person, in the right place, they could have a lot of charm. But they certainly demand a lot of thought and care before one jumps into them. What can look piquant on one body can be disastrous on another.

What is worn on the legs? Bare legs are best, but thigh-high stockings are being shown by some designers.

Bombeck

You have to make a quick exit. What do you save? The three P's are givens: People, Pets and Pictures. In reading the accounts of the victims in California, there was little rationale behind their priorities. One dragged a mattress and his surfboard out of a flaming house. Another grabbed photos and a fax machine. Years ago, I read where a fire victim grabbed a Frank Sinatra album.

There isn't a person reading these stories who does not search his or her own mind to mentally list the top five things worth saving after the three P's.

Homes are museums of our lives. They're visible proof that we were here on this planet. We got married, had children, lived, worked, played and had hobbies. We won awards, commmunicated and conducted business. We prayed to someone or something, read books and made friends. All of these are reflected in our homes.

They're just "things" — yet they trigger moments we want to remember, stories of people long gone, special events in our lives. Some are objects we just like to look at. When they are no longer there, we are naked.

Good friends of ours lost their home a few years ago by a group of kids playing with matches. In 15 minutes, the house was gone, taking their history with it. It was as if they had never been. They moved to an efficiency apartment and began again.

When their house was rebuilt, we anguished over what to get them for a housewarming present. They needed everything. Finally, we came up with a picture that the friend had taken on a vacation to San Diego. He had given it to a charity to be auctioned off, and we bought it. We gave the picture back to him because it was a part of him that had been preserved.

A Time magazine story reported that Lois Aldrin, wife of Gemini and Apollo astronaut Buzz Aldrin, evacuated their Emerald Bay home at 2 p.m. She grabbed her billfold and a box from Neiman Marcus. In it were miniature flags, first-day stamp covers, letters, and a few items stuffed in envelopes that Buzz took to the moon.

Who is to say the surfboard and the Frank Sinatra album weren't as meaningful to someone else's lives?

Franklin former state in USA

JONESBORO, Tenn. (AP) — Even those familiar with the history of American statehood may know little about the short-lived frontier state of Franklin (1784-88), named after Benjamin Franklin.

The state of Franklin, which today is part of Tennessee, was formed by mountain settlers out of certain western lands of North Carolina and other territory purchased later from Indiana by the Treaty of Dumplin Creek (1785).

Once established, however, Franklin's problems began. Congress refused recognition. Feuding between North Carolina loyalists and those loyal to Franklin led to duplication of government services. Taxes were levied by both states.

Finally, when Franklin Gov. John Sevier's term expired, and no one replaced him, the state of Franklin quietly passed away.

Chapter hopes to deck the halls with books

'To: all of you: Thanks for the Books. The Berenstain Bears are one of the Best Books. I Loved my Book. have a Merry Christmas. Thanks alot. they were Great.

— from: Erica'

Story by Georgia Todd Temple

Erica was one of 2,098 Midland first-graders who received a storybook last Christmas through the efforts of the Zeta Xi Chapter of Delta Kappa Gamma.

"It was great," said Teresa Armstead, project spokeswoman. "The kids seemed to love the books."

All first-graders in public and private schools received a book last year through "A Storybook Christmas" project, Ms. Armstead said.

This year, they may not be so fortunate.

"We're about $2,000 dollars behind where we were last year, so we're running behind," Ms. Armstead said.

She said she recently mailed more than 100 letters and hopes to receive replies.

Thus far, the chapter has not decided what it will do if the necessary funds are not raised, Ms. Armstead said.

"We talked about it the other day, and if we cannot reach our goal, we may target several of the schools in town and present what we can," Ms. Armstead said.

Cost to provide a first-grade classroom with one book for each of the 22 students runs around $35.

"They can sponsor a class either by providing the books for that class or the money to buy the books for that class," Ms. Armstead said.

Please see BOOKS/2G

Those interested in participating may do so by sending their contribution to A Storybook Christmas, P.O. Box 13, Midland, 79702. Those wanting to donate books may call Ms. Armstead, 685-3450 or 685-6099, or Carolyn McGaha, 694-2304.

A Storybook Christmas is sponsored by the Zeta Xi Chapter of Delta Kappa Gamma, an honorary teachers' society, and the Reporter-Telegram.

This year, the books will be ordered through William Morrow and Co.

"They are giving us a 60 percent discount on the books," Ms. Armstead said, adding that the books have to be ordered in the next two weeks.

The selections are made by a group of elementary teachers in the Zeta Xi Chapter, Ms. Armstead said. The books are to be presented the day students get out of school for the Christmas break and all will have a label that goes inside.

Delta Kappa Gamma's purpose is simple.

"It's to help children learn to love reading at an early age," said Ms. Armstead, a real-estate appraiser and former English teacher. "We believe that if you catch children early enough, they will develop a love for reading, and it will continue. So that's why we want to reach them at first-grade level."

Reading is a fundamental learning skill especially in a modern society.

"It's the basis of all their learning," Ms. Armstead said. "If you can't read, you can't do math problems, you can't do science, you can't do social studies. Reading is the basis for everything."

Unfortunately, too many of today's young people are not developing a love for reading.

"They don't read; they watch television," Ms. Armstead said. "There's a big difference. I grew up reading, but kids today just don't read."

Ms. Armstead first became aware of "A Storybook Christmas" at the 1992 Delta Kappa Gamma state convention. The project had been tried in Waco.

"I liked the project, and I brought it back," she said, adding that it is handled by a special projects committee. "But, we're handling it different from the way they (Waco) did. They picked out only what they considered to be lower-income students to give the books to, and we decided to give one to every first-grader."

City kicks off season of reindeer, rockettes

By Lawrence Van Gelder
N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK — Forget the calendar. The calendar says it's mid-November, but Christmas arrived in New York on Friday when "The Christmas Spectacular" opened its annual run at Radio City Music Hall.

The nonstop 90-minute show lives up to its name. Spectacular it is: a Reader's Digest version of "A Christmas Carol." Tchaikovsky's "Nutcracker" danced by people dressed as bears, a sort of ursine Balanchine. Elves. Skaters. Old St. Nick. Pealing bells. Twinkling stars. A reindeer's-eye view of New York City — Rudolph's vision of Rudy's City, projected on a screen. A re-creation of the Nativity, right down to camels and sheep, although the popping flashbulbs from the audience lend an air of anachronism. But then, so do a rap song, lasers and a male dancer wearing his hair in a bun.

But for tradition, there are seasonal melodies, from "White Christmas" and "Jingle Bells" to "O Come All Ye Faithful" and "Hark the Herald Angels Sing." The big orchestra, swooping over and under the proceedings thanks to the miracles of stagecraft possible at Radio City, serves up the music with heart, occasionally abetted by some thunder from those Mighty Wurlitzer Organs.

And did someone ask about the Rockettes? Always a delight, they are never more so than when doing their perennial "Parade of the Wooden Soldiers." They also turn up in sparkling costumes of fur-trimmed white and fur-trimmed red, with boots to match. They wear rag-doll wigs. They play xylophones attached to one another's backs. They smile like crazy. They dance up a storm. The crowd loves it.

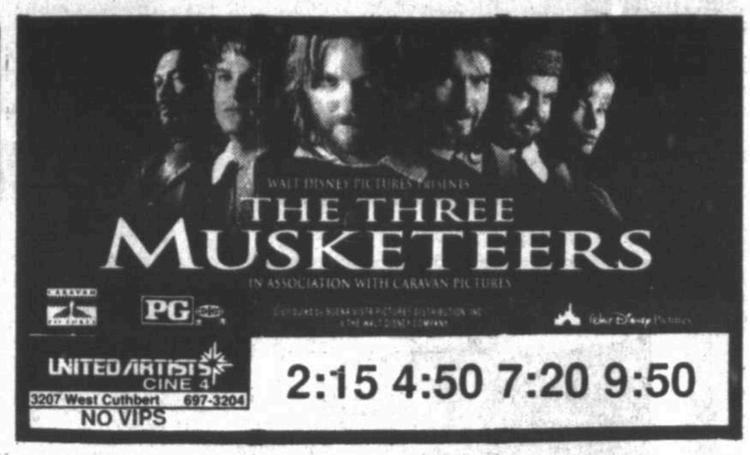

The show is a workout for the reactions: nostalgia for the tunes, awe for the scenery, reverence for the religious, cheers for the dancing, perhaps even a mild bah, humbug! for the Santa's workshop stuff with the elves.

About a million people will see the show before it ends its run on Jan. 8. Even Ebenezer Scrooge would approve. "The Christmas Spectacular" is good business, better fun.

Originally conceived by Robert F. Jani; co-director and choreographer, Linda Haberman; co-director and production stage manager, Howard Kolins; sets by Charles Lisanby; musical direction and vocal arrangements by Don Pippin; lighting by Ken Billington; costumes by Pete Menefee; choreography by Scott Salmon, Marianne Selbert, Violet Holmes and Linda Lemac; producer, David J. Nash; executive producer, J. Deet Jonker; marketing executive, Arlen Kantarian. Presented by Radio City Music Hall and Chemical Banking Corp.

HOROSCOPE

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Take your time when handling important tasks and you will reach the top sooner than anticipated. Careful attention to detail pays big dividends early in 1994. Fresh sources of income come to your attention in March. Next spring, curb a tendency to be rebellious or career success will prove elusive. The business picture improves when you embrace new technology. Summer finds you and mate pondering a change of lifestyle. Be true to your ideals.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actress Goldie Hawn, philosopher Jean Voltaire, New Yorker editor Tina Brown, baseball great Stan Musial.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A friendship of long standing could suddenly take a romantic turn, leaving you a bit breathless. Try to keep your composure. Be more level-headed about putting funds aside for a rainy day.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): If you are unhappy about your image, why not make some changes in your appearance? A complete makeover is not necessary. Your social life accelerates.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A break in your usual routine is like a breath of fresh air. Spend some time relaxing with a favorite companion. A potluck supper is an easy way to share the cooking chores.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Idle gossip is making the rounds. You would be smart to ignore it completely since you are not directly involved. A domestic adjustment is likely. Avoid sparring with your mate or business partner.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A friend may offer insights into a VIP's puzzling behavior if you just ask. Your sunny disposition and team spirit help you win immediate acceptance. Welcome a last-minute invitation.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You may still be coming back down to earth following an exciting event. Do something to ground yourself. Socially, you are right in the middle of things. Avoid discussing controversial subjects.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A chance encounter could lead to a rewarding relationship with a younger person. Avoid making new financial commitments. Creative projects progress nicely. Dress to impress.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Beware of those who would spend your money or pressure you into a reckless course of action. Vigorous exercise helps you ward off the grouchies. Socializing could produce a valuable new career contact.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Although your social agenda may have to be revised today, you are certain to enjoy the final scenario if you go somewhere you have wanted to visit for a long time.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Other people want to jump on your bandwagon. New agreements get things off to a great start! A visit with friends or relatives helps make this Sunday special. Put your credit cards away.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): If romance or your recreational plans fall short, stay in a good mood — you can pick up where you left off. For now, a day of open spaces and relaxation will refresh.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): A casual conversation with a stranger gives you food for thought. Check travel plans. Your mate's or business partner's tastes may be too extravagant for your budget.

Perhaps the most famous kibitzer in the annals of New York bridge was known as The Rabbi. Not because of any deep religious conviction, but because with the advantage of hindsight, he would always pontificate on how the hand should have been played or defended. One of his more famous aphorisms has become known in bridge lore as The Rabbi's Rule: "When the king is singleton, play the ace!" At the table no one has the vision to know that the monarch can be guillotined, but sometimes it is obvious that the "Rule" is your only hope.

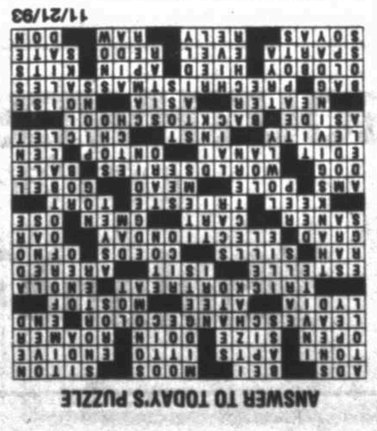

With a perfectly flat hand, North's opening bid of one club was the wise choice even for someone playing four-card majors. Once North raised spades, South bid game on the strength of the known double fit in the black suits.

West led the king of hearts and, at trick two, shifted cleverly to a low diamond. Declarer won in hand and, with three sure losers in the red suits, the fate of the contract hinged on not losing a trick to the king of trumps. With nine cards in the combined holding, the percentage play was the finesse. However, declarer decided to postpone playing trumps in favor of learning more about the hand.

Declarer continued with a diamond and West perforce had to take both red aces or risk losing one of the red-suit tricks to which East-West were entitled. But now the hand was an open book. West, a passed hand, had already shown up with the ace-king of hearts and ace of diamonds and, therefore, could not possibly have the king of spades as well.

So declarer won the club switch and took the only chance for the contract—laying down the ace of spades. When the king came tumbling down, virtue was rewarded.

Study: Blood pressure drug slows kidney damage

BOSTON (AP) — A common blood pressure medicine can dramatically slow kidney damage that is common among diabetes victims, a new study said.

Kidney damage, and eventual kidney failure, are a frequent complication among diabetics who rely on insulin shots. The study supports earlier suggestions that drugs called ACE inhibitors are an effective way of forestalling the complication.

The study included 409 diabetics with early signs of kidney damage called nephropathy. Half got an ACE inhibitor called captopril, while the rest took placeboes.

After three years of follow-up, the risk of dying, or the need for dialysis or a kidney transplant, was cut in half in the captopril patients.

The study was financed by the U.S. Public Health Service and by Bristol-Myers Squibb, which makes captopril.

About 200,000 Americans suffer from kidney failure and diabetic nephropathy is the leading cause, accounting for about one-third of all new cases.

The latest research was directed by Dr. Edmund J. Lewis of Rush-Presbyterian-St. Luke's Medical Center in Chicago. It was published in Thursday's New England Journal of Medicine.

The researchers aren't sure why ACE inhibitors help. But they say it appears the medicine's protection of the kidneys is unrelated to its ability to lower blood pressure.

ACE inhibitors are already frequently prescribed for diabetics who show signs of kidney problems. The authors of the new study recommend that it become routine therapy.

In an editorial in the journal, Dr. Giuseppe Remuzzi of the Mario Negri Institute of Pharmacologic Research in Bergamo, Italy, agreed.

"This new study establishes that ACE inhibitors should be part of the care of patients with diabetic nephropathy," he wrote.

L.A. station pulls plug on violence

By Fred Shuster
N.Y. Times News Service

LOS ANGELES — A Los Angeles radio station's decision to pull songs that foster negative stereotypes has drawn overwhelming support from politicians, community leaders and listeners.

Urban music station KACE-FM (103.9) is apparently the first r&b station in the country to clear the airwaves of music that "glorifies sex, violence, drugs and the disrespect of women," said KACE program director Rich Guzman.

Although the Inglewood-based station is not exclusively a rap outlet, KACE does play some examples of the genre. Since instituting the policy gradually about two months ago, Guzman and music director Mark Gunn have pulled about a dozen songs, including the hits "Knockin' Da Boots" and "Lick U Up" by H-Town, "Indo Smoke" by Mista Grimm, "Come Inside" by Intro and "Get a Little Freaky With Me" by Aaron Hall.

"Amazingly enough, some people may not think this music influences their kids," Guzman said. "Well, it certainly doesn't help them. So, why should we, as a broadcast facility, encourage this negativity?

"I've never seen a case where two negatives make a positive. And that's why we've taken out these negative elements, to try and encourage a more positive atmosphere for our community," he said.

The station has received letters of support from state Sen. Teresa Hughes, D-Los Angeles; U.S. Secretary of Health and Human Services Donna Shalala; the Massachusetts governor's office; actor Hal Holbrook; and dozens of listeners.

And even some in the record industry agree with the move.

"To put people over profits deserves more than praise," said Matt Robinson, vice president of artists and repertoire for Capitol Records. "Not all people that love hip-hop music love the senseless vulgarities that come with some of the top rap acts of the day."

Robinson said he was not advocating censorship of the music in the marketplace, but believes the gangsta rap genre should remain an underground or street phenomenon.

"The music sold millions of records before radio began playing it when it was heard only in clubs and on the street," he said. "I just believe radio shouldn't cater to it."

But Michelle Mercer, music director at top-40 KPWR-FM (105.9) — Power 106 — said KACE's rap ban was merely a clever way to announce the station is going after an older target audience.

"If you are a radio station that is trying to attract a multiethnic audience, age 12 to 25, you have to play the hit records, and the hit records today are rap," she said. "We've seen that just about nobody over the age of 25 cares for rap, so it makes complete sense for KACE to take the rap off. I think it was a great way to position the station by saying they're going to take the gangsta rap off the air."

Listener Sheryl Thomas, 33, of Los Angeles said she was "nearly knocked off my chair when I heard about KACE's positive stand."

"Some of this music encourages negative self-images. I'm most disturbed by the sexually offensive material and the profanity in songs," she said. "My younger brother says it's no big deal, but I think we shouldn't lower ourselves. We should strive for what's best rather than any less."

Competing stations, such as KPWR-FM (105.9) and KKBT-FM (92.3), continue to play gangsta rap and sexually explicit material. Until last year, KACE had the "quiet storm" format and played mellow jazz-fusion material. But Guzman denies the ban was designed to attract older listeners and create a publicity splash.

'Amazingly enough, some people may not think this music influences their kids. Well, it certainly doesn't help them. So, why should we, as a broadcast facility, encourage this negativity?

—Rick Guzman
program director

"There comes a point in time when the bottom line and ratings don't matter anymore," he said. "We've gone back to basics and set everything aside but our commitment to our community.

"Radio stations are licensed to serve the community, but stations across the country have put that commitment on the back burner. And what has happened is the envelope has been pushed further and further and further," he said. "We've decided to do something about it."

Guzman said the KACE playlist is determined on a song-by-song basis.

"Every radio station, whether they admit it or not, has certain criteria they follow to determine what to play," he said. "We follow those same guidelines but have added to our original criteria. If you call it censorship, you're missing the boat. Rock stations are not playing rap, rap stations are not playing Barbra Streisand or Barry Manilow. We're just exercising our right to play whatever we want, plain and simple. And we have chosen to be more responsible about the music we are playing."

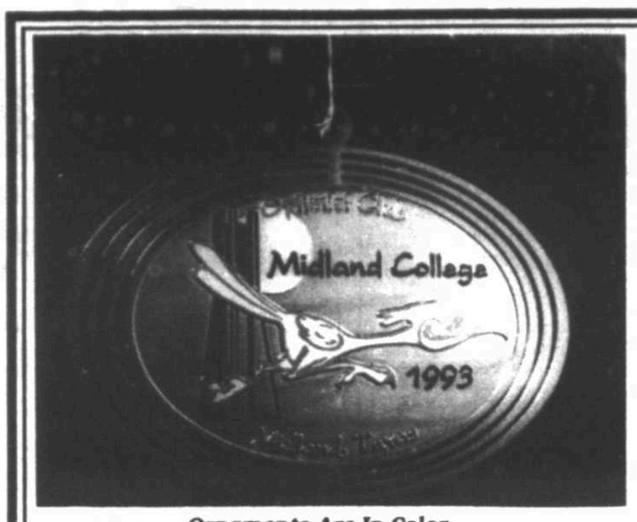

KACE's offices share a side street with a Juvenile Courts building, and Guzman said the daily view of "kids who are handcuffed, shackled and chained together" made him think about the effect of music on the community.

"When you see that every day, you really have to wonder how we as a radio station may have affected those kids either directly or indirectly," he said.

"The nice thing about America is we all have a choice. And if people want that other type of music, they have that choice and can find it elsewhere on the dial. Black music radio stations are encouraging a lot of this negativity in the very communities they're licensed to serve."

Guzman said KACE has had a positive effect just by sparking a dialogue within the city about the anti-negativity stand.

"We've already better served our community just by opening up dialogue," he said. "The main thing is, not every black person you see is a gangbanger or drive-by shooter or violent person. Not every Hispanic is a drug abuser or a woman beater. We come from great backgrounds. We should be proud of our culture. We, as a community, are better than these stereotypes. We don't have to degrade ourselves by falling for these images that are so blatantly thrown out there."

Night people and those who can spare a few hours of sleep Nov. 28 will have the opportunity to observe a total lunar eclipse as the moon passes through the darkest portion of the earth's shadow.

The Marian Blakemore Planetarium of the Museum of the Southwest, Indiana Avenue at K Street, is hosting an eclipse program at 9:30 p.m. followed by an open viewing session in Haley Park that evening.

According to Mark Hartman, planetarium director, this last eclipse of 1993 is timed just right for West Texans with the moon high in the southern sky during the entire eclipse.

The moon will enter the central region of the earth's shadow about 10:40 p.m. CST. At midnight, the moon will be entirely within the shadow for 48 minutes gradually emerging on the other side.

The next total lunar eclipse occurs in 1998. In May of 1994, West Texans will be able to see the best solar eclipse until the next century, Hartman said.

Master of mime shapes silent legacy

By Mort Rosenblum
Associated Press Writer

PARIS — Marcel Marceau, at 70, flings his teen-ager's body to impossible positions, flexes his fabled face muscles and delivers a stirring monologue on never getting old.

"No, I'm not slowing down," the French master of mime told an interviewer, speaking for a change, after 10,000 performances before college kids and kings. "I'm just starting."

In the beginning, when Marceau created Bip, his white-faced waif in a sailor suit sniffed flowers and followed butterflies in flight. Now, ageless as Peter Pan, Bip also ponders war and peace.

And Bip is only the warm-up for Marceau's latest venture, a pantomime of "The Overcoat" by Maxime Gogol, an allegory about a humble Russian clerk who earns a coveted fur at a terrible price.

The production opened Nov. 12 for a five-week run in Paris. For Marceau, it reflects an enduring dream: After defining modern mime and teaching disciples at his own academy, he wants to shape a legacy.

"Mime belongs with spoken drama, dance and music as part of the world heritage of performing arts," he said. "It is timeless and universal. Our silences breathe new life into the theater."

Mime amuses and unsettles people at the same time, Marceau said, confronting them with their own reality by forcing them to fill in their own words.

Through Bip, Marceau mocks human folly the way his hero, Charlie Chaplin, used to do, blending humor with pathos to brighten a world that worries him more by the day.

"We see so much violence and evil that we must have ways to counteract it," he said. "What can children think when they see such things every day? We must give them a different experience."

Lacking words, mime needs no translation. Demanding imagination, it says whatever the audience hears.

"Bip Remembers" comes from Marceau's horror upon returning to his ransacked childhood home in Strasbourg during World War II. His father, a Jew, was deported. His brother had gone underground.

"When I did 'Bip Remembers' in Argentina, the entire audience rose to their feet and started to sing," he said. Having just emerged from their own war, Argentines saw it their own way.

People often stand up for Marceau. On his first U.S. tour, in 1955, he was held over for months. He has returned almost every year since, to Broadway and backwater campuses. This year, he packed 60 houses.

Marceau travels ceaselessly, performing up to 300 times a year. In 1985, a perforated ulcer nearly killed him in Russia. Six months after emergency surgery, he was on stage again.

"I have a strong heart from my mother, and the mime I do is a sort of yoga," he said, running his fingers through gray curls. "My face isn't young, but my body is like it was when I was 30."

Offstage and at rest, Marceau seems incongruous, a short, wrinkled senior citizen in a blue velvet suit with pointed lapels and a Latin-lover open shirt.

When he switches on, however, he crackles with energy. His eyes blaze under rippling brows. Shoulder movements turbocharge his verbs, and flashing fingers punctuate his sentences.

A poet, a painter and a performer, he plays his words. Impassioned by the human condition, he veers from Harpo Marx to Karl Marx without a pause. On mime, he is at his most eloquent.

"My soul goes into every gesture, every expression," he said. "If I am walking up stairs, I concentrate on what is behind each stair. Mime is the invisible visible."

Usually a one-man show, Marceau is performing "The Overcoat" with 11 students of his International School of Mime-Drama, started in 1978 with a grant.

Eclipse is timed just right

Night people and those who can spare a few hours of sleep on Sunday evening, November 28, will be rewarded by observing a total lunar eclipse as the moon passes through the darkest portion of the earth's shadow.

The Marian Blakemore Planetarium of the Museum of the Southwest is hosting an eclipse program at 9:30 p.m. followed by an open viewing session in Haley Park that evening.

According to Mark Hartman, planetarium director, this last eclipse of 1993 is timed just right for West Texans with the moon high in the southern sky during the entire eclipse. "You can't ask for better than that", Hartman said, "if the weather cooperates with no clouds."

The moon will enter the central region of the earth's shadow about 10:40 p.m. CST. At midnight the moon will be entirely within the shadow for 48 minutes gradually emerging on the other side.

According to Hartman, the earth's shadow in an eclipse has two distinct parts. The central region is called the umbra. This region has a fairly abrupt edge that will appear first on the upper left portion of the moon's rim during the eclipse. Surrounding the umbra is the penumbra, an area of diminished shadow that is barely perceptible except for the inner part.

The next total lunar eclipse occurs in 1998. In May of 1994 West Texans will be able to see the best solar eclipse until the next century, Hartman says.

The Blakemore Planetarium is in the museum complex at the intersection of Indiana Avenue and K Street. For information call 915/ 683-2882 or 570-7770.

Eclipse esta justo a tiempo

Las personas nocturnas y aquellas que puedan pasar sin dormir algunas horas en la madrugada del Domingo, 28 de Noviembre, será recompensado por la observación del eclipse lunar total así como la luna pase directamente la porción mas oscura de la sombra de la tierra.

El Museo Marian Blakemore Planetarium del Sudoeste estará patrocinando un programa de eclipse a la 9:30 p.m. seguido por una sesión ocular abierta en el Parque Haley esa misma noche.

De acuerdo con Mark Hartman, director del planetarium, este último eclipse de 1993 esta justo a tiempo para los Tejanos del Oeste con la luna en lo alto en el cielo Meridional durante todo el eclipse. "Usted no puede pedir mejor que esto", dice Hartman, "si el tiempo coopera con la ausencia de las nubes."

La luna entrará a la región central a la hora sombra de la tierra como a las 10:40 p.m. costa. A la medianoche la luna estará totalmente dentro la sombra por 48 minutos emergiendo gradualmente al otro lado.

De acuerdo con Hartman, la sombra de la tierra en el eclipse tiene dos partes bien definidas. La región central es nombrada umbra. Esta región tiene un justo y áspero borde el cual aparece primeramente en la parte izquierda superior de la porción del borde de la luna durante el eclipse. Al rededor de la umbra esta la penumbra, un área de sombra disminuida que apenas perceptible excepto por la parte interior.

El Blakemore Planetarium esta localizado en el complejo del Museo en la intersección de la Avenida Indiana y calle K. Para mas información llame al teléfono (915) 683-2882 o al 570-7770.

New department sets focus on the Mexican State of Chihuahua

By Amarante Cordova.

A new program has opened it's doors in Midland, one that will facilitate the growth and development of bilateral business ventures between the United States and Mexico.

According to Fernando De La Rosa, who was recently hired as a specialist for the Midland Hispanic Chamber's Department of International Trade, the goal of this new program is to promote contact between business enterprises at all levels (large, medium, small, even micro) from Mexico, and business enterprises at the same level in the United States - and vise-versa.

Initially, the Department of International Trade, which is funded and administered by the Midland Hispanic Chamber of Commerce, will focus upon contacts between business in West Texas, and the northern Mexican state of Chihuahua, with whom it shares a border. But long-range plans do look forward to growth and expansion of the department's focus.

De La Rosa admits that Midland will have to play 'catch-up' in order to compete with the cities like El Paso, which has been a hub of trade for more than four centuries. But he adds that West Texas also has it's advantages, and that it can become competitive in importance with El Paso in the future.

The experience De La Rosa brings to this new department stems from the years he has spent on both sides of the border, learning the language and the culture of both countries. A native of El Paso and raised in the city of Juarez, in the Mexican state of Chihuahua, he has seen first-hand the benefits of business contacts across an international border. Since that time, he has made his home in Mexico City, New Mexico, and Missouri, before settling in Midland.

Businesses interested in establishing business contacts in Mexico, are encouraged to visit the department, where they will be asked to provide basic information about their company, and their product. This will be matched with similar information from Mexican companies, which are seeking to establish business contacts with the United States.

Periodically, the department will also facilitate 'matchmaking' events, where representatives of companies from both sides of the border will meet, and - it is hoped - establish lasting business ties.

De La Rosa admits that the goal of the Department of International Trade would be enhanced by passage of the North American Free Trade Agreement, which is currently being debated in the Congress of the United States. But even if 'NAFTA' were to fail, the process

Nuevo departamento fija su enfoque en el Estado Mexicano de Chihuahua

Un nuevo programa a abierto sus puertas en Midland, el cual facilitara el crecimiento y el desarrollo de empresas bilaterales entre Estado Unidos y México.

De acuerdo con Fernando De La Rosa, quien recientemente fuese contratado como especialista del Departamento de Intercambio Internacional de la Cámara de Comercio Hispana de Midland, la meta de este nuevo programa es el de promover el contacto entre compañías empresariales de todos lo niveles (grande, mediano, pequeño, y aun la micro-empresa) de México, y compañías empresariales a los mismos niveles en los Estados Unidos - y viceversa.

Inicialmente, el Departamento de Intercambio Internacional, el cual es consolidado y administrado por la Cámara de Comercio Hispana de Midland, se enfocara sobre los contactos entre compañías empresariales del Oeste de Tejas, y el Estado Norteño, Chihuahua, con el cual comparte la frontera. Pero los planes a futuro están contemplados en el crecimiento y la expansión de este nuevo departamento.

De La Rosa admite que Midland tiene que jugarsela para estar compitiendo con ciudades como la de El Paso, la cual a sido el eje o el centro del intercambio comercial por mas de cuatro siglos. Pero el admite que el Oeste de Tejas tiene también sus ventajas las cuales usándolas de una manera positiva podrá competir en un futuro con El Paso en importancia.

La experiencia que De La Rosa contribuye con este nuevo departamento se origina de los años que el pasó en ambos lados de la frontera, aprendiendo el idioma y la cultura de ambas naciones. Nacido en la ciudad de El Paso, Tejas, y criado en la ciudad de Juárez, el Estado Mexicano de Chihuahua, el a aprendido los beneficios con el contacto de los negocios por toda la frontera. Desde ese entonces, el a vivido en la Ciudad de México, en Nuevo México y Kansas, antes de establecerse aquí en Midland.

Negocios interesados en establecer contactos en México, se les alienta para que visiten este nuevo departamento, donde le preguntarán información básica acerca de su compañía, y sus productos. Esta información será comparada con información similar de las compañías Mexicanas, cuyos intereses sean establecer contactos empresariales con los Estados Unidos.

Periódicamente, el departamento organizará eventos de 'conexiones empresariales', donde los representantes de compañías de ambos lados de la frontera se reunirán, y -

Chavez's death ignites new activism for his cause

By Christian R. González

The death at age 66 of United Farm Workers founder and president César Chávez six months ago has stimulated dramatic new interest in the UFW's drive to organize and protect U.S. agricultural laborers.

As public buildings, streets and schools continue to be dedicated in Chávez's name, the union is moving forward to recruit members and staff and to provide a broader base of benefits for its current membership. It has also stepped up activities in its national boycott of California table grapes.

To honor the late leader, the UFW itself declared the first week of November "César Chávez Week."

Chávez's son-in-law, Arturo Rodriguez, elected to replace the labor movement icon in May, told Hispanic Link that union membership has increased by 3,000 to about 25,000 since then. He has pledged to add a total of 10,000 members before April 23, 1994, the first anniversary of Chávez's death.

"There has been a tremendous increase in contributions and support — of people wanting to do things to help farm workers," he said. "There is a rebirth of the movement."

La muerte de Chávez enciende nuevo activismo por su causa

Por Christian R. González

La muerte a los 66 años de edad del fundador y presidente de los Trabajadores Agricolas Unidos, César Chávez, hace seis meses, ha estimulado un nuevo interés dramático por la campaña de ese sindicato (UFW en inglés) para organizarse y proteger a los trabajadores agricolas.

A medida que edificios públicos, calles y escuelas continúan siendo dedicados en nombre de Chávez, el sindicato se mueve hacia adelante para reclutar miembros y personal, a fin de suministrar una base más amplia de beneficios para sus miembros actuales. También ha acelerado las actividades en su boicot nacional contra las uvas de mesa de California.

Para honrar al dirigente desaparecido, la propia UFW declaró a la primera semana de noviembre como "Semana de César Chávez."

El yerno de Chávez, Arturo Rodriguez, elegido para sustituir al idolo del movimiento sindical en mayo último, dijo a Hispanic Link que la cantidad de miembros del sindicato ha

"First Call for Help"

By Amarante Cordova

Oscar Rosas expects to be getting even more phone calls than usual, in the months ahead. It's the time of year when people's needs seem especially acute.

Temperatures are dropping as autumn gives way to winter, and there are those who can not afford to heat their homes. Still others can't afford warm winter coats for their children. School has begun, and some students need additional help to cope with the demands of getting an education. The approaching holiday season finds families that are hard-pressed to meet even the smallest of their children's Christmas wishes.

These needs, and the many, many more that will cross his desk, are really just business as usual for Oscar Rosas, program director of the First Call for Help agency.

"The main purpose is to connect any individual with a problem or problems, with any community resource in the city of Odessa that can help with the problem, or alleviate the problem," explained Rosas. "We opened the doors in July of 1990. A little over three years, we've been in operation."

"It is funded and administered by the United Way of Odessa. The service is free, and it is confidential."

Part of that service involves not only help-

Oscar Rosas espera tener mas llamadas telefónicas de las que usualmente recibe, en los siguientes meses. Este es el tiempo del año en que las necesidades de la gente se sienten mas agudas.

Las temperaturas bajan así como el otoño se rinde ante el invierno, y hay esos que no pueden darse el lujo de calentar sus casas. Todavía hay quienes no tienen con que comprar abrigos para sus hijos. La escuela a comenzado, y hay algunos estudiantes que están en la necesidad de ayuda adicional para hacer frente con las demandas para obtener una educación. La llegada de las fiestas decembrinas encuentra a las familias con difícil muchedumbre para que estas cuando menos reunan el mas pequeño deseo de sus hijos en esta Navidad.

Estas necesidades, y muchas pero muchas otras que se juntan en su escritorio, es usualmente el negocio de Oscar Rosas, director del programa de la Agencia Primer Llamada de Ayuda.

"El principal objetivo es de conectar a cualquier individuo entre problema y problemas, con cualquier recurso de la comunidad en la ciudad de Odessa que pueda ayudar con el problema, o aun que pueda ayudar a aliviar el problema," explica Rosas. "Nosotros abrimos las puertas en Julio de 1990. Un poco mas de tres años hemos estado en operación."

aumentado en 3,000 para alcanzar la cifra de 25,000 desde entonces. El ha prometido agregar un total de 10,000 miembros antes del 23 de abril de 1994, que será el primer aniversario de la muerte de Chávez.

"Ha habido un aumento tremendo de las contribuciones y del apoyo — de personas que quieren hacer cosas para ayudar a los trabajadores agricolas," dijo él. "Hay un renacer del movimiento." Rodriguez, oriundo de San Antonio, de 43 años de edad, tiene un grado de maestria en el trabajo social de la Universidad de Michigan. El ha trabajado para la UFW desde principios del decenio de 1970.

Desde la muerte de Chávez, la UFW ha recopilado una relación de seis páginas de las acciones conmemorativas iniciadas por los partidarios de todo el pais que se han comunicado con el sindicato. Estos van desde resoluciones municipales y murales para boicotear a las uvas, hasta becas y festividades religiosas.

Varios distritos escolares de Texas, California y Nuevo México han adoptado acciones formales para prohibir las uvas en los menúes de sus cafeterias. El sindicato tiene conocimiento de 11 escuelas, seis calles, dos parques y siete edificios, desde California hasta la Florida, que ya han sido nombrados en memoria de Chávez. Hay otros incontables propuestos.

Además, varios municipios han declarado dias feriados para conmemorar el dia de su nacimiento. La Legislatura de California aprobó un proyecto de ley presentado por el Senador Art Torres (demócrata por Los Angeles) para crear un dia feriado estatal para Chávez, pero el Gobernador Pete Wilson lo vetó, diciendo que el estado ya tenia demasiados feriados.

"Creo que el Gobernador Wilson estará ido y olvidado por mucho tiempo y que la gente se hallará todavia influida por Chávez," dijo Luis Valdez, fundador de El Teatro Campesino y narrador de la pelicula de la UFW "Combatiendo por Nuestras Vidas." "Miren a las cosas que él propugnaba. El hombre tenia integridad. Nadie puede quitarle eso."

El Representante a la Cámara Ed Pastor (demócrata por Phoenix) ha pedido al Presidente Clinton que otorgue a Chávez la Medalla de la Libertad, el mayor honor que se concede a un civil. Chávez, nacido el 27 de Marzo de 1927 en una pequeña granja cerca de Yuma, Arizona, murió de un ataque al corazón en San Luis, Arizona.

"Todos nosotros necesitamos hacer algo para asegurarnos de que su legado continúe. César no fué solamente un mentor para los Hispanos, sino para muchas personas que quieren luchar por los derechos civiles," dijo Pastor.

Rodriguez dijo que él vislumbra ganar el boicot contra las uvas como la conmemoración más importante para su suegro. "Esa seria la mejor conmemoración para su trabajo y para la continuación del movimiento."

Pastor estuvo de acuerdo. "No creo que haya una conmemoración ultima, excepto que todos nos comprometamos, a nivel personal, al trabajo que el hizo."

"El siempre aceptaba los honores que se le dieran a nombre de los trabajadores agricolas," dijo Rodriguez. "César trabajaba para fijar programas buenos y concretos para el sindicato, y nosotros continuaremos adelantando los programas que él dejó establecidos."

Jacques Levy, autor de California que escribió un libro sobre Chávez en 1975, comentó que las escuelas están siendo nombradas por Chávez porque "él era poderoso y eficaz en el cambio social y la justicia en un contexto no violento."

"César trajo cambios muy necesarios al mundo de la agricultura," dijo Levy. "Pero la lucha no ha terminado. El adiestró a otros para luchar."

Levy recordó uno de los dichos favoritos de Chávez: "Hay más tiempo que vida."

New activism

Rodriguez, a 43-year-old native of San Antonio, Texas, holds a master's degree in social work from the University of Michigan. He has worked for the UFW since the early '70s.

Since Chávez's death, the UFW has compiled a six-page list of commemorative actions initiated by supporters nationwide who have contacted the union. They range from municipal grape boycott resolutions and murals to scholarships and religious celebrations.

Several school districts in Texas, California and New Mexico have taken formal action to ban grapes from their cafeteria menus. The union is aware of 11 schools, six streets, two parks and seven buildings from California to Florida that have already been named in his memory. Countless more are proposed.

Additionally, several municipalities have declared holidays commemorating his birthday. The California Legislature passed a bill by Sen. Art Torres (D-Los Angeles) creating a state holiday for Chávez, but Gov. Pete Wilson vetoed it, saying the state already had too many paid holidays.

"I think Gov. Wilson will be long gone and forgotten and people will still be influenced by César," said Luis Valdez, founder of El Teatro Campesino and narrator of the UFW film "Fighting for Our Lives." "Look at the things he stood for. The guy had integrity. Nobody can take that away."

Rep. Ed Pastor (D-Ariz.) has asked President Clinton to award Chávez the Medal of Freedom, the highest honor given to a civilian. Chávez, born March 27, 1927, on a farm near Yuma, Ariz., died of a heart attack in San Luis, Ariz.

"All of us need to do a little something to make sure his legacy continues. César was not only a mentor for Hispanics but for many people who want to fight for civil rights," Pastor said.

Rodriguez said he envisions winning the grape boycott as the most important memorial to his father-in-law. "That would be the best commemoration for his work and for the continuation of the movement."

Pastor agreed, "I don't think there's an ultimate memorial except for all of us to recommit, on a personal level, to the work he did."

UFW vice president Dolores Huerta, who struggled side by side with Chávez since the first days of the UFW, said the union was honored with all the recognition, but noted that Chávez shied away from such tributes.

"He always accepted the honors given to him on behalf of the farm workers," she said. "César worked on setting up good, concrete programs for the union, and we will continue carrying on programs that he left in place."

Jacques Levy, a California author who wrote a book about Chávez in 1975, commented that schools are being named for Chávez because "he was powerful and effective in social change and justice in nonviolent context.

"César brought much needed change to the agriculture world," Levy said. "But the fight is not over. He trained others to fight."

Levy recalled one of Chávez's favorite dichos, or sayings: "Hay más tiempo que vida." (There's more time than life.)

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Well once again the holiday known as "Thanksgiving" is almost here. And just where it all started is controversial still to this day. And in fact if it is actually as we were taught in grade school, the fact is questioned. That is, pilgrims enjoying a feast with Native-Americans in joyful harmony is without a doubt fiction in this person's views. I don not recall the names of the Americans present at this feast, perhaps they were killed or died of a European disease. Who knows? It is of no importance to this article.

The one fact remains is the "crops" always are the same, that is turkeys, sweet potatoes, pumpkins, squash, tomatoes, jicima, plums, corn, etc. These are native to America (a European name). These were always here and a "Thanksgiving Dinner" at our house with these items comes to mind.

At the time of Cortez' landing in "The One World" (America), the ancestor to 80% of the Hispanics in "Aztlan" (Texas) were in fact eating a traditional Thanksgiving dinner before Columbus was born.

In the Adopted language of our ancestors, the Nahuatl speaking Chichimec tribes, these food items have always been at our house. Huehxotlotl (tu[illegible]), Camohtli (sweet potato), Tamalli (tamal), Elotl (corn on the cob), Izquitl (pop-corn), Tomatl (tomato), Xicamatl (jicama), Chocolatl (chocolate), Chilli (chili pepper), Exotl (green bean), Molli (mole) etc. And in fact if it wasn't for the Chichimec tribes in America (one of the first Uto-Aztecan tribes), corn and pumpkins would not have made it to the Eastern Seaboard of America.

Pumpkins, turkeys, corn, squash, and beans were first domesticated in Mexico (Mechico) before our ancestral barbaric Chichimec tribes left Aztlan (Texas) and began to conquer Teotihuacan and the Gran Chichimec Basin in central Mexico. These people soon learned agricultural and by order of the king Nopalitzin, most of the Chichimec left their hunting and gathering ways and spread the use of corn north to the other Chichimec tribes. This soon spread in trade eastwardly to the Mississippian cultures. These crops soon would up in the lands of the ancestors the Delaware and Iroquois Nations according to their legends long before the pilgrims landed.

In the southwest as trade for slaves and copper from the Anasazi, corn and turkeys were introduced by the same Uto-Aztecan Chichimec tribes.

Thanksgiving is a special holiday in the USA, but we must remember the real truth of it's meaning and where it came from. Those tribes of Acolhua-Chichimec and Mexica-chichimec who celebrated victory in the 1400's with turkeys, sweet potato, squash, beans, tamales, chili, and pumpkins at Nezalhualcoyotl's and Moctecuzoma Mhuicamina's (not the one Cortez conquered) celebration will always be remembered by all black haired, brown skinned Hispanics who are proud to be part of the real Americans and not just the hyphenated race of new-comers some would have us to be. Man has been in American some 38,000 years, the white man only 500 years.

We will enjoy the fruits of our ancestors this year again.

Farm workers president Arturo Rodriguez sees the sun rising

By Hispanic Link

Question: Why did the UFW pick the first week of November to commemorate César Chávez?

Answer: It's a continuation of all the commemorations that have been held throughout the country. It also coincides with Dia de los Muertos (the Day of the Dead holiday celebrated in Mexico and Central America). Many people urged us to do something, particularly in Los Angeles, since the funeral took place in rural California.

Q: How has the UFW adjusted to his loss?

A: Well, there were two major things that César had worked on long and hard over these last few years. One was to expand our membership program, and to provide more benefits and services to farm workers and to allow farm workers, regardless of whether they were working under a collective bargaining agreement, access to those benefits.

We have intensified and expanded that effort and really taken advantage of the sentiment and support that's there among the farm workers to escalate that program. Six months ago we had 12 offices located pretty much in California. Now we have 29 offices and we're looking to open offices in other parts of the country. We've also had some recent victories. Last Friday the workers at Diarigo in Salinas got fed up because the grower was forcing them to come to work everyday half an hour early even though they weren't getting paid for that time. Finally, the 700 workers refused to board the buses. They marched five miles to the company offices and spent the rest of the day marching through Salinas.

Q: You have said you want to increase the UFW's membership by 10,000 before the first anniversary of César's April 23 death. How is that coming along?

A: We've brought in new staff and we're beginning to offer new services. But most importantly, we're getting the workers involved in organizing so that they can apply economic pressure against growers. The key is to get those membership offices functioning, to get the staff well trained, to get them going out and organizing.

Q: What effect did the Yuma County decision in Arizona have on the union?

A: When we went into that trial, we were facing a $10 million law judgment. César was very worried about that. Now, after fighting it, we have a $2.9 million judgment against us. And we have ample material for the appellate case. We're very confident that we're going to be able to overturn the decision. In addition to that, we filed a motion in Los Angeles Superior Court alleging that because we're a California-based corporation, the Bruce Church company is going to have to come to California.

We've not made one payment to the company and we're going to do everything possible to avoid making any payments because this case has major significance to us. First of all, that's where César died during the time that he was testifying there, and in essence we should have never been in that trial to begin with.

Q: We read daily about the streets and schools and parks being renamed after César. Are the originators of the ideas contacting the UFW and asking if it s OK?

A: Some we've known about and some we find out after the fact. But most of the people alerted us to what they're doing. We try to be supportive. We supply information they might need. That's really been the extent of our involvement.

We encourage them not only to do something of that nature but to go beyond that. César would have wanted people to be committed and involved in the grape boycott and to do everything they possibly can to help farm workers better their working and living conditions.

Q: Is the grape boycott gaining strength?

A: There's been a tremendous revival — a recommitment on the part of people. For example, within the labor community we've seen a great response. The Canadian labor movement has always been extremely supportive of what we've done and once again we see that happening. Some unions have made a decision to donate anywhere from . 1 cent to 17 cents per member for the next 12 months to keep our work going.

Among the Latino community, we've seen the same thing happening. César really meant something to all of us. He was a father to us in many ways. He gave us some basic principles of how to bring about change through nonviolence, volunteerism and the use of public action. He taught us as poor people and minorities to take on the system and win. Right now we have offices in Hong Kong, where the grape growers are exporting their product, trying to urge consumers there not to buy the product because they can't sell it in the United States any longer. That's a good sign for us.

Q: Have things really changed since the 1960s and 1970s?

A: Not enough. There's still a tremendous amount of exploitation that takes place. As consumers, how can we sit down at the table and enjoy meals day after day without thinking about the people who go out and pick those fruits and vegetables? It's an injustice and disgrace when you think about how much wealth this country has and yet the people who are responsible for feeding us oftentimes live in poverty, and are exploited to the degree where the women, to provide the basics for their children, have to suffer sexual harassment.

Q: What are your thoughts on the North American Free Trade Agreement?

A: As currently proposed, it doesn't look like it's going to be a good thing for workers in this country or workers in Mexico. We're every worried about the job loss for farm workers in this country because a lot of those corporations are going to be moving their operations into Mexico. As it stands right now, we don't find it acceptable.

Q: How do you feel about the media coverage the UFW has received?

A: Prior to César's passing, the media really hadn't paid the attention they should have to César, the movement, farm workers, the problems that we confront as poor people and minorities in this country. I'm talking about mainstream media.

Latino media have been extremely helpful and sympathetic throughout the years in wanting at least to convey the message to the community that this is an issue that we can't ignore. We may have attained for ourselves middle-class status, but we can't forget about the poorest among us.

We cannot simply erase them from our lives. Since César has passed away, generally speaking, the media has been much more open. That probably has been the greatest source of encouragement for us. The people have not let César die.

Local businesses and organizations practice the true meaning of thanksgiving

One of the most popular and enduring images of the the Thanksgiving celebration is friends and family gathering together to share a holiday feast.

This Thanksgiving, as we celebrate and give thanks for our blessings, and the abundance of our lives, a coalition of businesses, civic organizations, and concerned individuals will be working to make sure that all Midlanders have the opportunity to enjoy a Thanksgiving dinner.

The 4th Annual Thanksgiving Celebration Dinner will be held Thursday, November 25th, at Midland Center. The event is sponsored by Golden Corral Restaurant, Midland Downtown Lions Club, and a host of community-minded organizations and individuals. Families in need may attend the dinner by invitation. These invitations, printed in both English and Spanish, will admit an entire family to a free dinner. Individuals are also welcome.

Invitations are being distributed at Casa de Amigos, 1101 E. Illinois; Dellwood Senior Citizens Center, 3303 W. Illinois; Midland Baptist Crisis Center, 806 S. Baird; Midland Hispanic Chamber of Commerce, 1410 N. Lamesa; Salvation Army, 300 S. Baird; Southeast Senior Center, 1803 E. Indiana; and Saint Andrews' Mission, 1708 N. Fort Worth.

While invitations will be distributed at some locations until the close of business, Wednesday, November 24th, families and individuals in need are encouraged to visit as soon as possible. This will help event sponsors as they make the final preparations for the dinner.

An invitation is also being extended to those who wish to assist in some way during the event. Many, who have helped in the past, know the joy of being able to contribute to the happiness of those in need. Persons or organizations wishing to donate volunteer time, or materials, should contact Don Maier, General Manager of Golden Corral, in Midland, at 689-7706.

Financial contributions, which would also help sustain the event in the years ahead, are also welcome. Those wishing to make such donations, can do so at a special 'Thanksgiving Celebration Dinner' account, at Midland American Bank, P.O. Box 11156, Midland, Texas, 79711. Or you can call, at 687-3013.

Each year, American schoolchildren learn the lesson of the hardships faced by the English Pilgrims, when they first arrived in this new land. They learn how the friendship and the sharing of the Indians who inhabited this land, helped the Pilgrims through those hardships.

The Annual Thanksgiving Celebration Dinner offers an all an opportunity to make sure those lessons are never forgotten.

ing the individual with their immediate need, but also exploring other areas where needs might exist, and helping with those, as well. A recent visitor to First Call For Help, provides an example.

"The other day, this lady in her late fifties, needing a place to live. Her son, that she had been living with, had passed away - just one of those freak accidents, or deaths. She was being supported by him. No other family," said Rosas. "She ends up here, wanting to know about housing. We got her connected with Landmark Apartments, which is government-subsidized apartments for the elderly and disabled. And luckily, they had an apartment available for her, and she was able to go there and sign up."

"I also informed her about the Department of Human Services, where she could sign up for food stamps, and public assistance. You know, people come in here, requesting a certain thing. During the interview process, I'm able to pick up on other things, and say, 'Well, we also have this other resource, that I would suggest for you to contact.' "

Matching needs with resources, problems with solutions, takes place over the telephone or in person, at First Call For Help's office in the Martin Luther King Building, on the corner of 2nd and Grant Streets, in Odessa. The office also helps those who have something to offer their community, referring them to an agency or program that could use their assistance.

"Matching needs with resources, problems with solutions, takes place over the telephone or in person," says Oscar Rosas

"Yes, yes, we do. We get all types of requests, you know, not only information. We get people wanting to volunteer, people wanting to go to work," said Rosas. "What we do is, it's a general information and referral line, from services to the aging, to housing, counseling, recreation, newcomers to the community."

First Call For Help is one of those agencies that can make use of volunteers.

"Yes! Anytime there's an individual out there, that has a little extra time, to come in and help me out, I'd be grateful," said Rosas, adding that bilingual volunteers are also needed.

First Call For Help, a free and confidential information and referral service, administered by the United Way of Odessa, is open Monday through Friday, from eight-thirty in the morning until twelve noon, then from one till five in the afternoon. You can visit their office, or call them at 333-4357.

After-hours calls are received by an answering service, that has been provided with a list of emergency services, including police, poison control, rape crisis centers, abuse shelters, and suicide prevention.

For those confused about where to turn in a large, sometimes confusing community, Odessa's First Call For Help, may be the best call they could make.

"El otro día, esta dama en sus cincuentas, necesitaba un lugar para vivir. Su hijo, con el que había vivido, había fallecido - uno de esos accidentes o muertes raras. Ella había sido mantenida por el. No tiene ningún otro familiar," dice Rosas. "Ella termino aquí, queriendo saber acerca de la vivienda. Nosotros la contactamos con los Departamentos Landmark, los cuales son los departamentos subsidiados por el gobierno para las personas de edad y para los incapacitados. Afortunadamente, ellos tenían un departamento disponible para ella, y ella lleno los requisitos para poder entrar a ese lugar."

"También le informé acerca del Departamento de Servicios Humanos, donde ella podía aplicar para estampillas para comida, y asistencia pública. Usted sabe gente viene aquí, requiriendo ciertas cosas. Durante el proceso de la entrevista, me doy cuenta de otras cosas, y digo, 'Bueno, tenemos estos otros recursos, que le puedo sugerir a usted para que se contacte.' "

Hallarle a uno las necesidades con recursos, problemas con soluciones, toma lugar en el teléfono o en persona, la oficina Primera Llamada de Ayuda en el edificio Martin Luther King, en la esquina de Segunda y Calle Grant en Odessa. La oficina también ofrece ayuda a esos que tienen algo que ofrecer a su comunidad, refiriéndolos a estos a una agencia o programa que puedan usar su asistencia.

"Así es. Nosotros recibimos todo tipo de peticiones, usted sabe, no solamente información. Nosotros recibimos a gente que quiera ser voluntaria, que quiera trabajar," dice Rosas. "Lo que nosotros hacemos, es información general y una línea de referencias, desde servicio para el anciano, para vivienda, consejería, recreación, y los recién llegados a la comunidad."

Primera Llamada de Ayuda, es una de esas agencias que puede ocupar a voluntarios.

"Así es! A cualquier hora, hay un individuo afuera, que tiene un poco de tiempo extra, para que venga y me ayude, yo le estaré muy agradecido," dice Rosas, añadiendo que voluntarios bilingües son bienvenidos.

El Presidente de los Trabajadores Agricolas, Arturo Rodriguez, ve que el sol se eleva

Por Hispanic Link

(Cuando el presidente de los Trabajadores Agricolas Unidos, Arturo Rodriguez, vino a Washington, DC. el 19 de Octubre, los reporteros de Hispanic Link Christian R. González y Patricia Guadalupe lo entrevistaron sobre la situación del sindicato y los seis meses transcurridos después de la muerte de César Chávez, el legendario fundador de la UFW y su único otro presidente.)

Pregunta: ¿Por qué escogió la UFW a la primera semana de Noviembre para conmemorar a César Chávez?

Respuesta: Es una continuación de todas las conmemoraciones que se han efectuado por todo el pais. También coincide con el Dia de los Muertos (que se celebra en México y la América Central). Muchas personas nos instaron a hacer algo, especialmente en Los Angeles, ya que el entierro tuvo lugar en una zona rural de California.

Pregunta: ¿Cómo se ha ajustado la UFW a esta pérdida?

Respuesta: Bueno, habia dos cosas importantes en las que César habia trabajado largo y tendido durante los años más recientes. Una era la ampliación de nuestro programa de membresia, y proporcionar más beneficios y servicios a los trabajadores agricolas, asi como permitir a éstos, sin perjuicio de que estuvieran trabajando bajo un convenio colectivo de trabajo, el acceso a esos beneficios.

Hemos intensificado y ampliado esa gestión y realmente aprovechado el sentimiento y el apoyo que hay entre los trabajadores agricolas para aumentar ese programa. Hace seis meses, teniamos 12 oficinas situadas primordialmente en California. Ahora tenemos 29 oficinas y estamos procurando abrir otras más en diversas partes del pais.

También hemos ganado algunas victorias recientes. El viernes último, los trabajadores de Diarigo, en Salinas, llegaron a su limite porque el cultivador los estaba obligando a ir a trabajar todos los dias media hora antes, aún cuando no les estaban pagando ese tiempo. Por último, los 700 trabajadores se negaron a subir a los autobuses. Marcharon cinco millas hasta las oficinas de la compañia y pasaron el resto del dia desfilando por Salinas.

Pregunta: Usted ha dicho que quiere aumentar la membresia de la UFW en 10,000 miembros antes del primer aniversario de la muerte de César, el 23 de Abril próximo. ¿Cómo está yendo eso?

Respuesta: Hemos traido a nuevo personal y estamos empezando a ofrecer nuevos servicios. Pero lo que es más importante, estamos haciendo que los trabajadores se involucren en la organización, de modo que puedan aplicar presión económica contra los cultivadores. La clave es lograr que esas oficinas de membresia funcionen, que el personal llegue a estar bien adiestrado y que salgan a organizar.

Pregunta: ¿Qué efecto tuvo sobre el sindicato la decisión del Condado de Yuma, en Arizona?

Respuesta: Cuando entramos a ese juicio, estábamos enfrentándonos a un dictamen de $10 millones. César estaba preocupado por eso. Ahora, después de luchar, tenemos un fallo de $2.9 millones contra nosotros. Y tenemos material amplio para apelar el caso. Tenemos mucha confianza en que podremos revocar la decisión. Además de eso, presentamos una moción en el Tribunal Superior de Los Angeles, alegando que debido a que nosotros somos una corporación con sede e California, la empresa Bruce Church va a tener que ir a California.

No hemos hecho ningún pago a la compañia y vamos a hacer todo lo posible para evitar el tener que hacer cualesquiera pagos, porque este caso es de una importancia extraordinaria para nosotros. Antes que otra cosa, alli fué donde murió César durante el tiempo que estuvo declarando alli, y en esencia nunca deberiamos haber estado en ese juicio para empezar.

Pregunta: Leemos diariamente sobre las calles, las escuelas y los parques a los que se está poniendo el nombre de César. ¿Están los iniciadores de esas ideas comunicándose con la UFW y preguntándole si está bien el hacer eso?

Respuesta: De algunos hemos sabido y de otros nos enteramos después de ocurrido. Pero la mayor parte de la gente nos ha avisado de lo que están haciendo. Tratamos de darles apoyo. Les proporcionamos la información que puedan necesitar. Ese ha sido realmente el alcance de nuestra participación.

Les animamos no sólo a hacer algo de esa indole, sino a ir más allá de eso. César habria deseado que las personas estuvieran comprometidas e involucradas en el boicot contra las uvas y que hicieran todo lo que pudieran para ayudar a los trabajadores agricolas a mejorar sus circunstancias de trabajo y de vida.

Pregunta: ¿Está cobrando fuerza el boicot contra las uvas?

Respuesta: Ha habido un resurgimiento tremendo — una vuelta al compromiso por parte de la gente. El movimiento sindical canadiense siempre nos ha apoyado sobremanera en lo que hemos hecho, y nuevamente vemos que eso está sucediendo. Algunos sindicatos han adoptado una decisión de donar desde un centavo hasta 17 centavos por miembro durante los 12 meses próximos para mantener nuestro trabajo funcionando.

Entre la comunidad latina, hemos visto ocurrir la misma cosa. César significaba realmente algo para todos nosotros. El era un padre para nosotros de muchos modos. El nos dió algunos principios fundamentales de cómo producir el cambio mediante la no violencia, el voluntarismo y el uso de la acción pública. El nos enseñó, como personas pobres y minoritarias, a enfrentarnos al sistema y ganar. Ahora tenemos oficinas en Hong Kong, a donde los cultivadores de uvas están exportando su producto, tratando de instar a los consumidores de alli a no comprar el producto porque ya no pueden venderlo más en los Estados Unidos. Esa es una buena señal para nosotros.

Pregunta: ¿Han cambiado realmente las cosas desde los decenios de 1960 y 1970?

Respuesta: No lo suficiente. Hay todavia una cantidad tremenda de explotación que ocurre. En nuestra calidad de consumidores, ¿cómo podemos sentarnos a la mesa y disfrutar de las comidas dia tras dia, sin pensar sobre las personas que salen a recoger esas frutas y esos vegetales? Es una injusticia y una desgracia, cuando se piensa cuánta riqueza tiene este pais y sin embargo las personas que tienen la responsabilidad de alimentarnos a menudo viven en la pobreza y son explotadas hasta el punto de que las mujeres, para suministrar lo fundamental a sus hijos, tienen que sufrir el hostigamientosexual.

Pregunta: ¿Cuáles son sus impresiones sobre el Tratado Norte-Americano de Libre Comercio?

Respuesta: Como está propuesto actualmente, no parece que vaya a ser algo bueno para los trabajadores de este pais ni para los de México. Estamos muy preocupados por la pérdida de empleos para los trabajadores agricolas de este pais, porque muchas de esas empresas van a estar mudando sus operaciones para México. Como está ahora mismo, no lo encontramos aceptable.

Pregunta: ¿Cómo se siente usted acerca de la atención que la UFW ha recibido de los medios informativos?

Respuesta: Antes de la muerte de César, los medios informativos no habian prestado a César la atención debida, ni al movimiento, ni a los trabajadores agricolas, ni a los problemas a que nos enfrentamos como personas pobres y minoritarias en este pais. Estoy hablando de los medios informativos de la corriente principal.

Los medios informativos latinos han sido extremadamente útiles y han simpatizado durante los años, tratando por lo menos de llevar el mensaje a la comunidad, en el sentido de que éste es un asunto que no podemos pasar por alto. Podemos haber logrado la situación de clase media para nosotros, pero no podemos olvidarnos de los más pobres de entre nosotros.

No podemos sencillamente borrarlos de nuestras vidas. Desde que César murió, los medios informativos en general han sido mucho más abiertos. Eso ha sido probablemente la mayor fuente de aliento para nosotros. La gente no ha dejado que César muera.

Education/Educación

Peña's art, but a reflection of his vision quest to identify himself

By Jeffrey McDonald

Education has always played an important role in the life of Amado Peña, and his development into one of the premiere artists of the American southwest.

"When I was ten, I had a very positive experience, doing art when I was in the fourth grade. My art teacher at the time was very encouraging," recalled Peña, who was born and raised in Laredo, Texas. "My sixth grade teacher was very encouraging, when I was in the sixth grade and she discovered that I was interested in art. She was very positive, and guided me."

"The next step in my experience was junior high, where, again, it was very positive. I think my teachers, from fourth grade through high school, were all instrumental in the sense that they made me aware. Because I liked art, and because I liked doing it, and they recognized I had some talent, they were very encouraging. I think that made a big impression."

In time, Peña would return much of what he had received as a student, when he himself became a teacher. After receiving his bachelors degree and masters degree from Texas A&I University, in Kingsville, Texas, he went on to teach in the public schools of Austin and Crystal City.

But the teacher never stopped being a student, and the artist within never stopped learning and growing. Peña's life, and his art, became a quest to identify himself, his culture, and the images that defined them. After many years of that quest, a gap still remained. A gap that was ultimately filled by the many visits Peña would make to a very special part of the American southwest.

"I realized that what I wanted to do was document more important imagery. Documenting my culture was the turning point, the place to turn to, as far as imagery," explained Peña. "The first step was, 'This is important. It's important to document my culture, to document the images.' And why not? If my role, as an artist, is to paint images, than what's more important than to document that part of myself that is the culture?"

"When I look back in retrospective, I recorded things that were related to my ancestry, taking it back chronologically to the pre-Columbian. Then I was documenting images that were very contemporary. But there was nothing in the middle."

It's not surprising that Peña's quest for 'the middle', where the ancient and the modern, the Spanish and the Indian, the Mexican and the Anglo, all came together, brought him to 'the Four Corners'. Geographically, it is where the boundaries of four of the United States meet at a single point. But it is also where many cultures, spanning many on, leaving their own, distinctive contribution to the region.

"And so, there's a big question as far as how to relate to those peoples," said Peña. "In the process of doing that, there's also discovery of a mixture of our culture, of the Spanish, the Mexican, the mestizo, and the native peoples. Discovering that there were a lot of contributions, many different contributions from one culture to another culture."

Peña's images of the people and the landscapes of the American southwest, have found admirers across the country, and around the world. His success as a professional artist led him to leave the classroom, at least as a full-time teacher, sixteen years ago. But he still returns, to share his experience and his encouragement with today's young people.

Such was the case last month, when Peña visited local classrooms during his attendance at the annual conference of the Texas Association for Bilingual Education, in Midland.

"I just talked to the kids about art in general, about myself, about the work I do, and my work habits," said Peña. "Just as it may relate to them, and their experiences. I think what I do is not that far removed from the kinds of experiences they might have in the classroom - just on a different scale. But there's a lot they could relate to."

With his own, positive educational experience in mind, Peña follows closely the developments in today's schools. He admits to some concern he feels over some of those developments. To Peña, art education is an important part of, not only a complete curriculum, but a complete person.

"Our educational system stresses the fact that an individual, a young mind, has to grow. It seems like the focus is on the numbers, and the literature - and that's all very necessary," said Peña. "But they miss the fact that part of being a human being, is being sensitive. Part of being sensitive is the process by which we appreciate aesthetics, and enrichment."

"I believe very strongly that it starts at the elementary level. It starts by children experiencing art, in all facets, in their formative years. And when they can't experience that, then they don't have that experience as grownups. And when the kids don't have that, I don't feel like they can be complete."

"If you want them to be physically fit, you hire a physical instructor. If you want them to learn numbers, you hire a math teacher. If you want them to learn how to read, you hire an English teacher. Then, if You want them to grow, and appreciate, and be enriched, you hire an art teacher!"

El arte de Peña, refleja una visión buscada para la identificación de si mismo

Por Jeffrey McDonald

La educación siempre a jugado un papel muy importante en la vida de Amado Peña y su desarrollo dentro de unos de los mas cotizados artistas del sudoeste Americano.

"Cuando yo tenía diez años, tuve una experiencia muy positiva, haciendo arte cuando estaba en el cuarto grado. Mi maestro de arte en ese tiempo nos alentaba mucho," recuerda Peña, quien nació y se crió en Laredo, Tejas. "Mi maestra también nos animaba cuando yo estaba en el sexto grado y ella descubrió para entonces el que yo estaba interesado en el arte. Por lo cual ella fue muy positiva, y me guió."

"Mi siguiente paso en mi experiencia fue cuando empecé mi secundaria Junior, donde, de nuevo, fue muy positiva. Pienso que mis maestros y maestras , desde el cuarto grado hasta secundaria fueron muy positivos y fueron un instrumento en la manera de que se enteraron de mi inquietud. Por la razón que me gustaba el arte, y porque me gustaba hacer arte, por lo cual reconocieron que tenia algún talento, ellos fueron muy alentadores. Pienso que esto hizo una muy grande impresión."

Con el tiempo, Peña a devuelto mucho de lo que el recibió como estudiante, cuando el mismo se transformó en maestro. Después del haber recibido su titulo y maestría de la Universidad de Tejas A&I, en Kingsville, Tejas, el se adentro como maestro en las escuelas publicas de las ciudades de Austin y Cristal.

Pero el maestro nunca paro en ser un estudiante, y un artista nunca a parado de aprender y de crecer. La vida y el arte de Peña, se a convertido en una búsqueda para la identificación de si mismo, su cultura, y las imágenes que lo definen a el . Después de muchos años de esa búsqueda, todavía queda un boquete. Una boquete que fue rellenado por muchas visitas que Peña haría a muchas partes especiales del sudoeste Americano.

"Me di cuenta de que lo que quería hacer era documentar mas importantemente imágenes. Documentar mi cultura fue el punto mas importante, el momento mas importante, tanto como las imágenes, explica Peña." "El primer paso a dar fue, 'Esto es importante. Es importante documentar mi cultura, documentar las imágenes.' Y porque no? Si mi papel, como artista, es pintar imágenes, entonces que es mas importante que de documentar esa parte para mi mismo que es la cultura?"

"Cuando observe hacia el pasado en retrospectiva, grave cosas que fueron relacionadas con mis antepasados, tomándola cronologicamente hasta la edad precolombina. Luego estuve documentando imágenes que eran muy contemporáneas. Pero no hubo nada en el medio."

No es sorprendente que la búsqueda de Peña por en 'el medio' fueron los ancianos y lo moderno, los Españoles y los Indios, los Mexicanos y los Anglos, todos vinieron juntos, lo atraeron a el 'a Cuatro Esquinas'. Geográficamente, es donde las cuatro fronteras de los Estados Unidos se reunieron en un mismo punto. Pero también fue donde muchas culturas, se expandieron por muchos siglos, que han pasado, asentado, mezclado, y mudado, viviendo ellos mismos en su propio sitio, contribución distintiva a la región.

"Así es que, está aquí una gran pregunta así como enseñar la relación de esas gentes," dice Peña. "En el proceso de hacer esto esta también el descubrimiento de una mezcla de culturas, de los Españoles, de los Mexicanos, los mestizos, y las gentes nativas. Descubrir el que hubo mucho de contribuciones, muchas diferentes contribuciones de una cultura a otra."

Las Imágenes de Peña y los paisajes del sudoeste de América, a encontrado admiradores por toda la nación, y por todo el mundo. Su éxito como artista profesional lo a llevado a abandonar su salón de clase, cuando menos como maestro de tiempo completo, desde hace diez y seis años. Pero el todavía regresa, para compartir sus experiencias y sus ánimos con los jovenes de hoy en día.

Así fue el caso el mes pasado, cuando Peña visitó salones de clase durante su asistencia a la conferencia anual de la Asociación para la Educación Bilingüe de Tejas, que se presentó en Midland.

"Yo solamente converse con los muchachos de arte en general, acerca de un servidor, acerca del trabajo que estoy desarrollando, y mis hábitos de trabajo," dice Peña. "Solo así me relacione con ellos, y sus experiencias. Pienso que lo que yo hago no esta muy lejos de las clases de experiencias que ellos tienen en el salón de clases - solamente en una escala diferente. Pero hay mucho de los que ellos pueden relacionar con lo que ellos hacen."

Con lo que uno tiene, experimentando educación positiva en sus propias mentes, Peña persigue muy de cerca el desarrollo de hoy en día en las escuelas. El admite alguna inquietud que el siente en este desarrollo. Para Peña, la educación del arte es una importante parte de, no solamente de un completo plan de estudios, pero de una persona completa.

"Nuestro sistema educativo hace hincapié el hecho que un individuo, de mente joven, tiene que crecer. Se esta viendo que el enfoque es en el numero, y la literatura - y todo esto es muy necesario," dice Peña. "Pero ellos pierden el hecho que esta parte de ser un ser humano, es el ser sensitivo. Una parte de ser sensitivo es el proceso por lo cual nosotros apreciamos los estético y el enriquecimiento."

"Pienso muy profundamente que comienza en la educación primaria. Comienza con alumnos experimentando el arte, en todas las facetas, en su años de formación. Cuando ellos nos puedan experimentar esto, entonces ellos no tendrán la experiencia cuando sean adultos. Cuando los muchachos no tengan esto, siento que ellos no estarán completos."

"Si usted quisiera que ellos estuvieran bien físicamente, usted emplea un instructor de educación física. Si usted quiere que aprendan números, usted emplea a un maestro de matemáticas. Si usted quisiera que ellos aprendieran a leer, usted emplearía a un maestro de Ingles. Luego, si usted quisiera que ellos crecieran, y apreciaran y se enriquecieran, usted emplearía a un maestro de arte!"

Claramente Comprometidos

El trabajo del National Council of La Raza, el U.S. Hispanic Chamber of Commerce, SER-Jobs for Progress, Inc., y el Southwest Voter Registration Education Project, es esencial para el progreso de nuestras comunidades. Es por ello que la compañía R.J. Reynolds Tobacco está comprometida a ayudar a crecer a estas organizaciones. Y en ninguna otra área es más visible este apoyo que en el Programa de Carteles de Servicio Público de R.J. Reynolds.

Este programa pone a disposición de estas organizaciones cientos de carteles de muy alta visibilidad en docenas de ciudades de costa a costa. El resultado simplemente es que se luce más el trabajo de desarrollo comunitario que realizan día tras día.

Esta es solamente una de las muchas maneras en que R.J. Reynolds, en cooperación con varias empresas de carteles y anuncios, demuestra su continuado compromiso al progreso de la comunidad Hispana.

This 1951 Chevy Pick-up owned by 'Bro Ed' Rodriguez of Brownfield, Texas was the Sweepstakes winner in the truck division of the show.

'Bro Ed' was awarded a 6' trophy sponsored by NuevaVista and a cash prize of $100.

Ernest Tarango of Monahans, Texas accepts a trophy from Ponciano Torres at the car show for his mini-truck bed dancing exhibition.

Ernest is the 1992 World Bed Dancing Champion.

His exhibit put the audience in 'awe' just watching what his imagination and technical skills could make the bed do.
