Khadafy steps up threats to strike at Europe

TRIPOLI, Libya (AP) — The government of Libyan leader Col. Moammar Khadafy stepped up threats Saturday to strike at southern Europe if the United States follows up its heated rhetoric against Khadafy with a military attack.

Libya state radio claimed that NATO Secretary-General Lord Carrington had expressed support for "the arrogant, aggressive U.S. measures" against Libya.

"This means that Libya is now facing an enemy which extends from Tel Aviv to Washington via NATO," the radio said. "Libya will, therefore, have to enter into military alliances and to apply its existing alliances, and might even have to go further and make use of the Warsaw Pact forces in confronting this imperialist-Zionist aggressive alliance."

Meanwhile, the two U.S. aircraft carriers America and Coral Sea were in a "holding pattern" in the Mediterranean off the coast of Sicily on Saturday, as President Reagan dispatched top administration officials to Europe for urgent consultations on the latest terrorist threat.

The carriers were conducting routine operations, awaiting directions on whether they should go farther into the central Mediterranean toward Libya, according to the sources, who spoke on the condition of anonymity.

The Libya radio broadcast echoed a communique issued Friday by the official news agency JANA, in which Khadafy was quoted as saying, "Since the threat this time came from the whole of NATO, the whole of southern Europe is today included in the Libyan counterattack plan."

A spokesman for the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, Robin Stafford, said at its headquarters in Brussels, Belgium, that Carrington "has said nothing that could be construed as a NATO threat to Libya."

Stafford said NATO has taken no official position on a possible U.S. military strike at Libya. Carrington, however, said America's European allies probably would favor the United States "doing something" to retaliate if it was proved that Libya sponsored the bombings of a TWA jetliner and West Berlin nightclub.

Five Americans died in the attacks. Reagan has said a Libyan link was suspected but not proved.

The chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee said Saturday no decision would be made before Monday on retaliation against Libya.

Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., speaking at a fundraiser in Bloomington, Ind., said he would attend a White House meeting Monday on a possible retaliatory attack against Libya for the April 4 bombing of a West German disco.

"A decision will be made on that occasion or shortly thereafter as to what our response ought to be," he said.

U.N. Ambassador Vernon Walters, already in England meeting with Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, will tour western European capitals this week, State Department spokesman Charles Redman said.

Deputy White House press secretary Peter Roussel said Reagan was sending U.S. counter-terrorist experts from several federal agencies "to work with European law enforcement and security authorities to reduce the risk" to Americans in the wake of fatal bombings in a Berlin nightclub and aboard a TWA jet.

"We are particularly concerned that American tourists, diplomats and servicemen are being targeted and brutally murdered in Europe," Roussel said.

The meetings, scheduled for Monday and Tuesday, were to be followed at the end of the month with a visit by Attorney General Edwin Meese, who will discuss law enforcement and information exchanges with his European counterparts, Roussel said.

The State Department declined to provide Walters' itinerary for security reasons, but an official said, "It's a fast-paced trip." The stops planned for Walters, a former deputy director of the CIA and a key diplomatic troubleshooter for Reagan, were known to include West Germany, France and Italy, where Prime Minister Bettino Craxi was quoted as saying he would receive a presidential emissary on Monday.

"Basically, we want to tell the allies where we are and what could happen," said the official, who insisted on anonymity. Deputy Secretary of State John Whitehead swung through the region in January, in a largely unsuccesful effort to persuade the allies to impose economic pressures on Libya.

Laughter binds Shriners, children

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

The giggles bubbled up from a source deep inside the people and filled the air. Young and old, scarred, burned, deformed and so-called "normal" people ignored the exterior and joined their spirits to enjoy the hamburgers, hotdogs, ice cream, cookies, songs and car rides.

The Saturday party is an annual event sponsored by the Shriners for children they send to the Burn Unit at Galveston or the Hospital for Crippled Children in Houston. This year about 75 children and family members showed up and soon the clubhouse on Trade Drive was filled with children giggling and Shriners laughing.

Giggling knows no boundaries — no race, no age, no scars. It is a limitless beauty that wrapped itself around the spirits of the people at the party and tied them together.

Shriners dished up plates of hamburgers and hotdogs cooked outside over the grill, heaped high with chili and tomatoes and pickles, and served with a handful of potato chips. Then came the large bowlfuls of vanilla ice cream and plates of cookies.

Entertainment was Elvis Presley, with black-wigged Donnie Wright — attired in white tight bell-bottom pants, shirt open to the waist and wide hip belt — swiveling his hips in rhythm to the songs with a voice similar to the original singer's. Even youngsters born after Presley's death laughed with those who could remember when the original was "King," while one older woman bobbed her head up and down with "You Ain't Nothin' But A Hound Dog."

But soon it was time for the event the children had anxiously awaited — a chance to ride in one of the Shriners' famous Tin Lizzies, miniature cars.

Round and round the back paved lot they went in the afternoon heat, each Tin Lizzie carrying one youngster and one Shriner, both laughing.

Ruling on revenues will add $424 million to state coffers

BEAUMONT (AP) — A federal judge's ruling cementing a settlement between the federal government and Texas involving offshore oil and gas revenues will put $424 million in Texas coffers, officials said.

U.S. District Judge Howell Cobb signed the order late Friday lifting a preliminary injunction against the Secretary of the Interior.

The injunction had prohibited federal officials from removing any funds from a special U.S. Treasury account where millions of dollars from offshore oil and gas leases have been sitting.

Cobb's ruling signals the end of a seven-year bitter legal and political fight between several coastal states, including Texas, and the federal government over $1.5 billion in offshore oil and gas revenues.

Charles W. Findlay III, an attorney with the Department of Justice representing the government in the case, said the federal government must distribute the money to states by Monday.

"It's conceivable that we could have gotten more money, but not likely," Texas Attorney General Jim Mattox said. "It would have been litigation on every single tract...It not only springs the $424 million it also gives us the (27 percent) share of future revenues. That we were not entirely assured of."

The dispute involved the division of bonuses, royalties and interest collected from offshore oil leases. Other coastal states filed similar suits against the federal government.

Congress last week approved a bill that provided for the settlement, which gives states 27 percent of the income from federal offshore oil and gas leases within three miles of a state's coastline and 73 percent to the federal government.

The states agreed to waive any other legal action against the government concerning the case, he said.

"This is a legislative resolution that was separate from the litigation but it does resolve the litigation," Findlay said. "There are two ways to settle a case. You can sit down and

Mexico expected to cut oil prices to regain lost sales

WASHINGTON (AP) — Mexico will cut its oil prices in an attempt to regain lost sales to the United States, Mexican Finance Minister Jesus Silva Herzog said in an interview published Saturday in The Washington Post.

Mexico must recover 250,000 barrels a day in U.S. sales to pay the interest on its $97 billion foreign debt, Silva Herzog said.

While oil prices have dropped from about $32 a barrel in November to less than $14, Saudi Arabia has increased its oil exports to the United States at the expense of Mexico, for years this nation's largest foreign oil supplier.

Meanwhile, Secretary of State George P. Shultz told the Post that the United States has ruled out any effort to persuade Saudi Arabia to cut oil production, which would increase prices. Government attempts to intervene would result in a catastrophe, he said.

Referring to remarks by Vice President George Bush, who called for stability in oil prices, Shultz said "the last thing in the world the vice president wants to do is to get ourselves into some sort of producer-consumer cartel arrangement. I heard absolutely no notion of that at all."

Shultz added that President Reagan has confirmed in recent private conversations that he firmly opposes an oil import fee or tax to bolster prices, despite calls for such a fee from oil states such as Louisiana, Oklahoma and Texas.

Absentee voting being held for May 3 election

From Staff Reports

With no decision yet from the U.S. Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals on the Midland Independent School District's request to overturn a federal judge's ruling on single-member districts, the events scheduled prior to the May 3 primary elections are taking place as usual.

In addition to deciding the two seats on the MISD Board of Trustees, voters will go to the polls that day to choose nominees for state and county offices in the Nov. 4 general election.

Midlanders planning to be out of town for the May 3 election may vote absentee from 8 to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday at the Midland County Election Administrator's Office, 709 W. Washington Ave. April 29 is the last day for absentee voting.

In the past, all citizens could vote for all places on the school board since they were considered "at-large." This year, after a lawsuit filed by the League of United Latin American Citizens and the Black Advisory Council, the school board will switch to single-member districts. U.S. District Judge Lucius D. Bunton ordered the school board be comprised of seven single-member districts with Districts 1 and 2 being decided in May.

Women should be aware of deductions

By RAMONA NYE
Staff Writer

Women are getting better educated about taxes as more and more face filing returns every year, Marlene Gaysek, with the Dallas Internal Revenue Service, said during a recent interview.

"More women are taking financial responsibility now than in the past. A lot of women are acquiring more confidence in financial matters and more interest in tax returns," Ms. Gaysek said.

And, as more women enter the work force, many are faced with filing returns on their own, as single heads of households or with a spouse.

Still, many women have historically taken care of filing returns, said Midland's H & R Block administrative assistant Rene Yahiachikh.

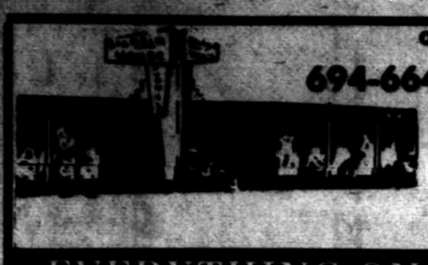

"Women take care of it. Because husbands are working. This is not a big change," Yahiachikh said.

H & R Block office supervisor Sue Keith agreed.

"I don't know if we're seeing more than we ever did. It's always been more women. Some of the women do the family money. They take care of it."

However, with money of their own to control, women are making it

Slain suspects linked to other shootings

MIAMI (AP) — Two slain robbery suspects who killed two FBI agents and wounded five others during a fierce gunbattle were suspected in the ruthless shootings of at least four other people and may have had ties to extremist groups, authorities said.

The heavily armed suspects have been linked to at least a half-dozen bank and armored car robberies in Dade County during the last year, according to law enforcement officials.

"The FBI and Metro-Dade police are continuing to probe the background of the men and are looking into armed bank robberies and armored car robberies," FBI agent Paul Miller said Saturday. He said no other suspects were involved in Friday's shooting.

"In the holdups the group would be waiting for the guards and would just shoot them. They were ruthless. They were dangerous," said Al Carballosa, a Metro-Dade police spokesman.

The suspects — William Matix, 34, and Michael L. Platt, 32 — were killed during Friday's confrontation with FBI agents behind a shopping center in the suburban, unincorporated community of Kendall.

It was the first time since 1979 that two FBI agents were killed in one incident, and the most casualties in a single action in the agency's 79-year history.

The suspects' behavior, their use of automatic .223-caliber weapons and fatigue clothes, similiar to those worn by survivalists, suggest ties to extremist groups, Saturday's editions of The Miami Herald quoted an unidentified FBI agent in Washington as saying.

"They really sound like survivalists...They are very clean-cut, definitely Americans," said Metro-Dade Sgt. Tony Monheim. "In all these robberies it's all automatic weapons, shotguns, heavy, heavy armament," suggesting a possible connection to such extremist groups.

Matix and Platt are believed to have killed two people and shot at least two more during the armored car and bank holdups, including one holdup Jan. 10, police said. In that robbery, a Brink's messenger who stopped to make a pickup at a bank was shot in the stomach by a man wearing a ski mask.

Witnesses said a second man got out of the assailants' car and, standing over the bleeding courier, fired two more shots into him with an automatic rifle.

The men then lifted two duffel bags from the armored car and fled into a Kendall neighborhood just blocks from Friday's shootout. The Brink's messenger is recovering.

The car used was traced to Emilio Briel, 25, who was reported missing Oct. 10 after failing to return home from a trip to a quarry on the edge of the Everglades that is used for target practice, authorities said. He still has not been found and is presumed dead.

And detectives said the two also may be linked to at least two known shootings at the quarry.

On March 12, a target shooter was shot four times and left in a canal at the quarry by two white males who stole his car. Jose Collazo, 30, survived by playing dead, then crawled out of the canal and walked three miles for help. His car was used in a bank robbery three weeks later.

Meanwhile, Joseph H. Kanter, chairman of the board of Miami-based Bank of Florida, started a fund Saturday for the families of the dead and wounded agents.

Two agents wounded Friday were in serious but stable condition Saturday at Baptist Hospital, a nursing supervisor said. A third was released Saturday from South Miami Hospital. Two others were treated for minor wounds and released.

Funeral services for Grogan were set for 1 p.m. Monday at the Visitation Catholic Church in Miami, with Mass celebrated by Archbishop Edward McCarthy. Burial is scheduled for Wednesday at the family plot in Grogan's hometown of Brunswick, Ga.

Funeral services for Dove were set for 10 a.m. Tuesday at Snodgrass Funeral Home in South Charleston, W.Va., with burial at Cunningham Memorial Park in St. Albans, W.Va.

Reagan likely to propose replacement shuttle

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan probably will propose that a replacement space shuttle be built for the destroyed Challenger, but his recommendation to Congress has been delayed by an administration argument over how to pay for it, according to congressional sources.

An interagency task force filed an overdue report at the White House last week recommending that the National Aeronautics and Space Administration build a new shuttle and a small fleet of expendable rockets to launch satellites, the sources said.

But they said budget director James Miller and John Poindexter, the president's national security adviser, rejected the report because the task force recommended adding extra money to the current NASA budget to pay for the new orbiter, the expendable rockets and recovery of shuttle debris.

The sources, who asked not to be quoted by name, said Poindexter and Miller believe the president ought to have the option of recommending that NASA sacrifice some existing programs to help pay these costs.

Poindexter described the sequence of events on the interagency task force report last week for a group of senior Republican congressional aides, sources said.

One congressional aide said there was little fat that could be taken out of the space agency's budget, particularly in light of the Jan. 28 Challenger disaster.

"The cost of recovering from this accident is somewhere between $3 billion and $5 billion, including fixing the hardware, replacing the orbiter and paying for the accident analysis," he said. "NASA's total annual budget is $7 billion. Clearly, $3 billion to $5 billion all can't come out of their budget."

This source said the only existing program with large funding is the space station, which Reagan has designated a national goal.

"I would be suprised if Reagan sacrificed the space station," the source said. "The only other route would take (money) out of space science and that is NASA's basic mission. I don't think Congress would permit that."

At his news conference last week, Reagan did not answer directly when asked if he would recommend restoring the shuttle fleet to its four-vehicle strength. But he voiced support for the space program and said he had promised relatives of the Challenger astronauts that the program would continue.

Space officials are now talking in terms of a delay until July 1987 before the next flight. NASA has made clear that it will not fly again until its booster rockets are redesigned, a time-consuming process.

The new expendable rockets recommended by the task force would reduce NASA's dependency on the shuttle for launching commercial and government satellites and help it cope with a backlog caused by the hiatus in shuttle flights.

SHRINERS

It's not just the party and the car rides that Shriners give of freely. For the children at the party, none would have received the specialized care they required without the Shriners' hospitals and the local organization arranging for air fare, hospitalization and treatment — all at no cost to the family.

Jeaneen Rogers of Midland began getting help from the Shriners last summer for her 6-year-old son, Beau, who was born with deformed feet. He has been to the Hospital for Crippled Children three times and doctors there will be trying a new surgical technique on Beau's feet when he turns 8. She talked of the support from all levels, the local Shriners, the doctors and the group in Houston.

Darrell Seibold of Odessa watched as his 3-year-old son Robert walked around him on the pavement at the side of the building. Robert was born with cerebral palsy, but the family didn't know it for several months until they became aware he was slow.

When told of Robert's problem, "I didn't know what to do," said Seibold. "Then someone told us about the Shriners and we checked into it." With braces and treatment from the Houston hospital, Robert can walk.

Herschel Beaty, who handles arrangements for the patients, said there is no income requirement to qualify for the Shriners' assistance. "We do whatever it takes to be done," he said.

Three children burned severely a few years ago will require continuous care for many years. The skin grafts tighten as the children grow and must be replaced, according to Beaty. Many of the children receiving assistance have birth defects, such as scoliosis or club foot. One child was born with part of its intestines outside its body and the hands bent back against the arms.

Last year the local organization spent $9,000 on these children. This year, he said, they are expecting to spend $12,000 to $14,000. One of the annual fund-raising events will be Saturday when Shriners will be stationed at stores throughout Midland to gather donations.

Some Shriners have more of a personal involvement. Billy Carr, who recently retired from University Lands, said a grandson was burned severely 12 years ago and was treated at the Galveston Burn Center. Without that, he might have died, said Carr, already a Shriner when the accident occurred.

"We just have a lot of fun. We enjoy doing it for the kids," said Gene Hancock with a laugh. "That's what the organization is about — to help the kids."

TAX

their business to become knowledgable about taxes and deductions, Ms. Keith said.

"They are much more knowledgable than when I started back in the '70s. They're working and it's their money. They're much more demanding on why and how to take deductions," she said.

While tax laws do not grant one sex benefits over the other, women should be aware of the various deductions they qualify for, said Mary K. Cotten, an auditor with Midland's IRS office.

Working women can cut their taxes by opening Individual Retirement Accounts. Also if not itemizing all deductions, they may deduct up to 50 percent of their charitable contributions on a simpler 1040 form.

Women holding two jobs can also deduct traveling expenses incurred from driving directly from one job to the other.

Working women who qualify as heads of households can deduct day care expenses for children or an incapacitated spouse.

"So many woman have to work now it's a good benefit," Ms. Cotten said.

Women also should be aware of a Social Security tax they must pay on someone hired to care for their children in their homes, she said.

Divorced women who do not have custody may still meet the requirements for claiming children as dependents, Ms. Cotten said.

Another deduction overlooked by many women is the Earned Income Credit, which helps relieve the burden of increasing Social Security deductions, according to those interviewed. To qualify for an Earned Income Credit, a woman must have a child living with her, be working with an adjusted gross income under $11,000 and be classified as a household head, married or widowed.

Married women who are working can also qualify for the working spouse deductions.

Women should be careful if they change their names through marriage or otherwise to notify the Social Security Administration, Ms. Cotten said. Many tax returns get caught in the system if a person's name does not match up to their Social Security number, she said.

For more information about tax deductions, the IRS operates a toll-free number 1-800-424-1040. Income tax forms must have a U.S. Post Office postmark by midnight Tuesday to escape late penalties.

In Milan, Craxi said he was to meet a U.S. envoy Monday, but would not identify the envoy. Craxi also said he did not expect any U.S. military action before Monday, although he did not say why.

Craxi his government would react with "great firmness" to threats by Libya against Italy or other Mediterranean countries.

Since the March 24-25 U.S.-Libyan shootout in the Gulf of Sidra, Khadafy has said several times that he would strike in southern Europe, especially Italy and Spain, if the United States attacked again. He threatened to strike at both civilian and military targets.

In the March clash, U.S. officials said Libya fired first when American warplanes held maneuvers in the Gulf of Sidra, which Khadafy claims as Libyan territorial waters.

At a news conference last Wednesday in his Tripoli barracks, the North African leader said, "If war breaks out, then Spain, Italy, the Mediterranean islands and even Arab seaports that give assistance (to the Americans) will be targets." He did not specify which Mediterranean islands.

The U.S. 6th Fleet is based in the Italian port of Gaeta and also uses two Spanish ports.

In Rome, the Italian news agency ANSA said an anonymous caller Saturday warned, "A single bullet on Libya and all the Italian cathedrals will fall." In Tunis, Tunisia, Arab League spokesman Assad Mokaddam said Friday night the organization had proposed that Arab and European Common Market ministers meet for in-depth discussions of terrorism.

A Western diplomat in Tripoli told The Associated Press that Libyan action against southern Europe "would bring the 6th Fleet down on them (the Libyans) like a ton of bricks."

"I find the whole thing a...very dangerous situation," he said, speaking on condition of anonymity.

Silva Herzog said the sharp decline in prices will force Mexico to tighten its belt in 1986 for the fifth consecutive year. He added he does not forsee much improvement in 1987 and said the situation could spark increased political and social unrest.

U.S. oil imports from Saudi Arabia increased to an average of 664,000 barrels a day in January, compared with 167,00 barrels a day in 1985. Mexican oil imports averaged 885,000 barrels a day in 1985.

Barn destroyed in fire set off by welder's torch

From Staff Reports

A Friday-night barn fire east of Midland set off by a welder's torch resulted in the destruction of the barn and about 150 bales of hay, according to the Midland Fire Department.

The fire in the barn on County Road 1120 South, about a half-mile south of Farm to Market 307, was reported at 7:13 p.m. The barn was owned by David Waldrop, Route 11, Box 11126, reports said.

Greenwood Volunteer Fire Department personnel assisted the Midland Fire Department in fighting the fire, which was extinguished with about 3,000 gallons of water, reports said.

In other reports from local law-enforcement agencies, Don Reib, 3215 Baumann, reported the theft of a five-horsepower engine worth about $275 from a fenced-in area in the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals yard at the intersection of Kerry and Barry roads.

The theft occurred sometime between Friday and Saturday, according to Sheriff's Office reports.

Susie Saenz, Route 9, Box 9857, reported an act of vandalism which caused about $400 in damage to her car.

Sometime between Friday and Saturday, somebody poured green paint on her 1976 Pontiac Grand Prix, reports said. The car was parked near space 2 at Brown's Mobile Home Park on County Road 1224 when the act of criminal mischief occurred, sheriff's reports said.

Associated Press

A group of gubernatorial candidates challenged Gov. Mark White's education reforms before a teachers' group, and former U.S. Rep. Kent Hance also blasted White's policies on energy and economics.

Hance, saying the issues constituted the "three E's" that dominated state politics this year, urged policies to simplify teaching, support state oil production and rejuvenate slumbering industries in a speech Friday to the Panhandle Press Association in Amarillo.

Hance also attended a political forum at the Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport's Amfac Hotel on Friday, sponsored by the Association of Texas Professional Educators.

Hance, a Republican hopeful in May's gubernatorial primary, told the Amarillo audience White's economic policy lacked the vision and intensity required to sell Texas to the nation and world a move Hance said would cushion the effects of falling oil and farm prices.

"We have been lazy in looking for other markets," said Hance, a featured speaker at the three-day PPA convention. "There are 20 states with economic development offices overseas and Texas isn't one of them."

He said eastern and midwestern cities should supplement overseas campaigns to promote state industries.

Hance, a Dimmitt native, advocated an oil-import fee and delaying or abolishing severance taxes on new drilling to prop up the sagging energy industry.

"If we ignore what's happening in the oil industry and the price drops to $5 a barrel, we'll see a sever drop in domestic production," said Hance, who switched parties after a narrow loss to Lloyd Doggett in the 1984 Democratic U.S. Senate primary.

"If the Saudis regain control of 40 or 50 percent of the world market, then it becomes more than a state issue it becomes a national security issue," said Hance, rejecting Reagan administration policies of allowing the free market to dictate oil prices.

Hance, joining many teachers across the state, offered a less than enthusiastic appraisal of White's school reform package.

"The program will double school district taxes in the next six to eight years," said Hance. "When that happens don't blame your superintendent, blame Mark White."

Hance, touching upon reforms that have irritated area administrators and teachers, urged more local control over taxing, disciplinary policy and classroom procedures.

"Principals should be able to discipline students at their school and not ask the state for permission," said Hance, protesting state disciplinary regulations. "And teachers should not fill out forms, they should be teaching."

Also attending the forum at DFW Airport were Democrat Andrew Briscoe III, a relative of former Texas Gov. Dolph Briscoe, Democratic candidate A. Don Crowder and Republicans U.S. Rep. Tom Loeffler and former Gov. Bill Clements.

Candidates hammered House Bill 72, the education reform bill, and especially denigrated the TECAT competency testing.

Despite polls, White stresses confidence

STATE

WHITTON (AP) — Gov. Mark White, campaigning for re-election in East Texas, downplayed new opinion polls Saturday and said he is confident of winning a second term.

"With the race developing as it is, I feel very confident of our victory," White said. "I think we're in good shape."

White pooh-poohed new opinion polls showing him with about 50 percent support in the six-candidate May 3 Democratic primary and trailing each of the three Republican hopefuls.

"These guys could have gone to a palm reader come up with about as good predictions," White said.

At stops in Lufkin, Whitton, Corsicana and Marshall, the governor continued to urge a tariff on imported oil. He called it essential for the state's economy and the nation's security.

"Don't shed any tears for Saudi Arabia. They're gleefully looking at shutting down production around the world," White said.

White has unsuccessfully been urging President Reagan to impose the emergency tariff on oil imports as worldwide prices have plummeted from $27 a barrel to as low as $10.

But the governor said he will continue trying to build national support for the tariff because today's oil glut presents a threat similar to the Arab oil embargo of 1973-1974.

Then, the United States was too dependent on foreign oil, he said, which will happen again should the current low prices continue driving American producers out of business.

"They can't starve us with lack of oil this time. But they have another way of doing it — they can drown us," White said. "It's the same result. Just as in 1973...when we were jerked around in our foreign policy by the Middle Eastern oil-producing countries.

"Then they had their fingers on the gas pump and they could choke us off any time they wanted to. They knew it, we knew it and the Russians knew it," he said.

Today, the Arab producers are flooding the market, driving American producers out and creating a new dependence on foreign supplies, White said.

"That's why I'm proposing a tariff," he said. "So we can make certain we do not close in the oil wells that are prodicing today. We cannot afford to lose them. You'll never get it back."

White also touted his public school reforms, saying such changes as the no pass, no play rule and teacher competency testing were necessary to improve the performance of Texas students.

DALLAS (AP) — A 34-year-old New Mexico man flying to Dallas to attend his girlfriend's birthday party was killed Saturday when hail broke out the windshield of his small plane and sent it nosedown in front of a northwest Dallas mansion, authorities said.

The man was identified as Mark Steven Mayer of Gallup, N.M., who was flying from Albuquerque to Addison Airport, said Justice of the Peace Kenneth Bangs.

Mayer's dog, a German shepherd, was in the other seat of the plane and also was killed, Bangs said.

Bangs and Dallas police said air traffic controllers in Fort Worth reported the last words from the pilot were that hail had just broken out the windshield of his two-seater plane.

He said the cord to the radio microphone was wrapped around Mayer's neck when his body was found. Controllers were trying to direct Mayer from the Addison Airport in far north Dallas to Love Field further south, Bangs said.

The crash occurred at 12:55 a.m. during a blinding rain and hail storm about 25 minutes before National Weather Service radar spotted a tornado in Dallas County and issued a tornado warning.

The plane went down in a neighborhood of million-dollar estates, according to Bangs.

A&M may build Houston center

HOUSTON (AP) — The Texas A&M University System may build a center at the Texas Medical Center in Houston where up to 700 Aggie scientists would engage in biotechnology research, a university regent said.

David Eller, chairman of the A&M Board of Regents, said the building could be constructed within three years where the Shamrock Hilton stands. The site was recently purchased by the medical center.

"We plan to try to expand our presence there with more high profile work in areas of nutrition, veterinary medicine and comparative medicine," Eller said.

Although nothing has been finalized between A&M and the medical center, Eller said he is "98 percent certain" an agreement can be reached, based on discussions he has had with various medical center officials.

Dick Wainerdi, president of the medical center, said the center would be "very pleased" for A&M to expand its presence there. The A&M system already is part of the medical center with its Prairie View A&M School of Nursing.

The field of biotechnology offers hope for Texas' economy, Eller said.

STATE in brief

School panel drops rules

AUSTIN (AP) — The State Board of Education voted 12-2 Saturday to drop its proposed rules for private and home schools and ask the 1987 Legislature to field the controversial issue.

The vote came two days after Gov. Mark White told Board Chairman Jon Brumley that "an issue of this importance, with many ramifications, should be left in the hands of the members of the Legislature."

Board members' review of private and home schools began earlier this year after some local school officials complained they had no way of determining if some of those schools met the requirements of the compulsory attendance law.

But the board efforts sparked heated opposition from private and home school supporters, particularly fundamentalist Christians. More than 1,000 people packed a Thursday public hearing on the proposal.

Hobby: Reform isn't over

AUSTIN (AP) — The state budget crunch will not force lawmakers to sway from their push for better education in Texas public schools, Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby told the State Board of Education on Saturday.

"If we use our financial predicament as an excuse to unravel reform, we are like the farmer who sells his seed corn and the rancher who puts his last mother cow through the sale ring. We will be willfully destroying the very thing that can help us weather this economic storm," he said.

Hobby went to the meeting to tell board members they have performed well in the face of almost constant criticism. His brief speech came shortly after the board had voted on a controversial proposal to regulate private schools.

Lamar official resigns

BEAUMONT (AP) — Beaumont businessman Jim Yarbrough has given up his post on the 14-member John Gray Institute Advisory Board, becoming the third top official in the Lamar University hierarchy to resign.

Chancellor C. Robert Kemble retired under pressure Monday. Regents appointed vice chancellor George McLaughlin to replace him.

On Thursday, Chamber of Commerce President Larry Beaumont submitted his resignation as a member of the Lamar Alumni Association in response to the regents' actions. Beaumont's resignation will go before the alumni executive board in a closed meeting Tuesday. Regents' Chairman H.D. Pate expressed concern about the resignations.

First facility planned

GALVESTON (AP) — University of Texas regents said a biotechnology research center affiliated with the UT Health Science Center at San Antonio will be the first project constructed at a 1,500-acre research park.

Regents said Friday during a meeting in this Gulf Coast city that they agreed to a plan to locate the Texas Institute of Biotechnology within the Texas Research Park in northwest San Antonio.

The research park will be on land donated by Concord Oil Co. and its president, Tom Pawel, said UT officials.

Judicial probe continues

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas Supreme Court Chief Justice John Hill said he suspects that "outsiders" have learned of the secret status of cases pending before the court through leaks.

A House panel investigating alleged improprieties by the court pierced the privacy of the judges conference room Friday when it elicited testimony from former court briefing attorneys.

A lawyer for two subpoenaed justices said the ex-briefing attorneys may have violated their oaths of office by testifying about incidents in the judges' private third-floor chamber.

Air controller blamed

DALLAS (AP) — A 1982 in-flight collision over the Dallas suburb of Carrollton that killed four people was caused largely by an air controller who sent one of the planes into forbidden air space, investigators say.

The determination by the National Transportation Safety Board came after investigators discovered radar tracking data depicting the minutes before the crash, which took place on Oct. 27, 1982, the Dallas Times Herald reported Saturday.

Try to identify snake

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — Wildlife specialists at Texas A&M University said snakebite victims should make every effort to identify the type of snake that attacked them as hot summer weather approaches.

"Try to get a good look at the snake and, if possible, take it in when you go for treatment. Treatments are different for different kinds of snakes," said Dr. James Dixon.

He and Dr. Fred Hendricks, both of the Department of Wildlife and Fisheries Sciences, identify hundreds of snakes annually including ones for bite victims throughout the state.

Wildlife experts report about one death a year resulting from poisonous snakebites in Texas and that most of the deaths occur among children bitten by rattlesnakes.

Teen to be tried as adult in slaying

EL PASO (AP) — A 15-year-old boy will be tried as an adult in the shotgun slayings of a family of four, a judge ruled Saturday.

Jesus Soltero Jr., a shy, ninth-grade honor student, hugged his parents before he was handcuffed and escorted to the El Paso County Juvenile Detention Center. He has been held there since his arrest, a day after the bodies were found March 8.

"This is one of the hardest cases this court has had to decide in a long time," State District Judge Enrique Pena said at the end of the hearing.

But the seriousness of the offense, the number of deaths and the interest of justice forced him to make the decision, the judge said.

Soltero is charged with four counts of murder in the deaths of his best friend, Fabian Castorena, 15; Castorena's parents, Jose, 36, and Luz Elena Castorena, 34; and their 11-year-old daughter, Ruby.

Police found the bodies scattered through their apartment after relatives, who had not heard from the Castorenas, went to visit and saw a body through a window.

Authorities determined the victims had been shot about two days before they were found.

Psychiatrist David F. Briones, who examined Soltero when he was admitted to the county-owned Thomason General Hospital last month, testified the teen-ager has suicidal tendencies which could become worse if he were to be sent to an adult facility.

Both prosecution and defense attorneys agreed with the judge that Soltero should remain at the juvenile center instead of the county jail.

Soltero became a suspect after lab tests showed that brown stains on his blue tennis shoes were blood, said Alfred Giron, an El Paso police homicide detective.

"The soles had a very distinctive pattern that also had blood," said Giron, adding that footprints found at the scene matched those of the boy's shoes.

The investigator said Soltero gave several conflicting statements to police, including that he shot Fabian Castorena after his friend had killed the other three family members. He also has said the Mexican Mafia was responsible for the killings, Giron said.

Tax talk taking realistic turn

By STEVE LEVINE
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — You had to listen real close, but it sure sounded like a breath — if only a whif — of realistic air coming from the West Wing of the Capitol last week.

Speaker Gib Lewis' vast in-House powers combine with the authority the Constitution vests in his chamber of the Legislature to give Lewis virtual go/no-go authority when it comes to state taxes. Thus the nuances become critical.

Consider this. On Feb. 13 — the day-before-Valentine's-Day massacre of the state budget — Lewis told reporters the Legislature could make up the projected shortfalls in the budget only by cutting back hard on state services. He was blunt.

"No tax increase," he said. "None at all."

And the Gibber has proven in the past that that's a promise he can keep if he wants to. Last week those intentions began to look just a little less firm. Listen in as the Gibber talks about what lawmakers will do when they come back to Austin for their next 140-day free-for-all in January:

"It would be hard to speculate on what will be the economic conditions in January, but I think we're going to have to look at the shortfall, see if we do have shortfalls at that time, look at what services need to be provided by the state, make what cuts we possibly can and once we've done all that we'll have to see if we balance out or," and here it comes, "see if there is a need for a tax increase."

Even House Ways and Means Committee Chairman Stan Schlueter, whose committee must approve any change in the state's tax structure and who has also proven he can stick to a never if he wants to, offered a whisper of possibility.

"We have an obiligation to the taxpayers to get out there and convince them that we have government as lean as possible, and once we've reached that point we're going to do the responsible thing," Schlueter said, "whatever that happens to be."

Reporters asked Gib to comment on the absolutely-no-new-taxes stand former Gov. Bill Clements has adopted in his campaign to return to the mansion.

"That's a popular issue because no one wants taxes, it's just a human feeling among everyone," Lewis said. "But they're saying that without being in a position to know."

With those cracks in the door, the question now becomes not if but how to bring in enough revenue to provide the services Texans need. And I'm not talking just your usual liberal welfare/health care/social services type stuff here. Remember yee conservatives — and I've made this point before — the prisons, highways and state police need money as well. And education, the cornerstone of any program to move Texas away from its lopsided dependence on oil and gas eats up more than half of the state's $16.2 billion annual budget.

We've got several options at this point. The dread income tax — which may not be as dread as some politicians dread — or changes in what we tax.

A widely cited study SMU economists Bud Weinstein and Harold Gross prepared for the Texas Economic Development Commission suggests combining budget cuts with some of the following: applying the sales tax to personal and business services, enacting a value added tax or using "special assessments" to help pay for major state projects. They've got some possiblities there, though we've got to make certain we don't make the sales tax more regressive than it already is.

A corporate income tax is a potential answer. Comptroller Bob Bullock says we can substitute a 3.5-percent corporate income tax for the $856 million-a-year corporate franchise tax and come out about $1 billion ahead. Even a recent poll of likely Republican — that's right, Republican — primary voters indicates some support for the idea.

Now wait a minute, anti-taxers cry, you put one of them thar corporate income taxes in Texas and we'll ruin our wonderful business climate and destroy any chance of attracting new industry to the state. Maybe so, if you're talking about the big manufacturing plants that use to be the prizes of an economic development campaign. A 1985 TEDC survey found two-thirds of those industries cite the state tax structure as important when considering relocation.

But smokestack industries aren't the wave of the future. Both that survey and the Weinstein/Gross study show that real economic growth is coming in the service industries. And the TEDC survey of service companies found that state taxes are an important relocation factor to only 39 percent of those firms.

Think about it.

LAJITAS (AP) — Residents of this unincorporated Big Bend community have put up with more than their usual share of political bleating lately.

In fact, they have just cause to complain that one of their mayoral candidates is making a goat of himself.

Some might say that Clay Henry's candidacy is nothing but a baa-ad joke. Clay Henry, however, happens to be a billy goat.

Bill Ivey, his campaign manager, said Clay Henry is not trying to pull the wool over anyone's eyes and is clearly a better candidate for the honorary office than incumbent Tommy Steele, a construction company owner from Houston.

Lajitas, about 230 miles southeast of El Paso, is between Terlingua and Presidio. About 100 people and 20 goats live there.

"First of all, Clay Henry is a local, and Lajitans would rather have someone local than someone who lives in Houston, of all places," Ivey said.

He described Clay Henry's position on the political spectrum as being somewhere between Pope John Paul II and Pat Paulsen.

Surprisingly, the candidate is touting his drinking record.

"Unashamed and without assistance, he has drunk as much as a case of beer a day to the delight and amazement of those who have visited Lajitas," Ivey announced in a recent press release.

Steele was elected under questionable circumstances in February 1985, Ivey said, after the death of the previous mayor, Buster, who was a dog.

That election occurred during a freak snowstorm in which a group of Lajitans and an army of out-of-towners were trapped in the town's saloon and a brief one-issue campaign ensued.

"Mr. Steele was elected that night by saying he was going to get snow moving equipment for Lajitas," Ivey said. "We don't agree with that."

Ivey charges that Steele stole that election and is likely to steal the next one unless the eligible voters who are not from Houston rally to the cause.

HOW THEY VOTED

Both sides draw victory in gun control changes

Hearst News Service

KEY HOUSE VOTES:

Both sides claim victory after house approves gun control act revisions.

In a major reversal of federal policy, the House approved, 292-130 April 10, a bill making it easier to buy and sell rifles and shotguns and to transport firearms across state lines. Gun control advocates, while disappointed at this weakening of the 1968 Gun Control Act, were cheered by the House's refusal to lift the current law banning the sale of handguns across state lines.

The Senate passed a similar measure in July of 1985, and the Senate is expected to accept the House's version of the legislation. If that occurs, the bill could be on President Reagan's desk by the end of April. Currently, the Gun Control Act bans the sale or delivery of virtually all firearms across state lines, places severe restrictions on the transportation of pistols and rifles, and regulates gun dealers.

The House bill allows firearms to be transported across state lines if they are unloaded and "inaccessible," thus barring prosecutions under state laws that do not permit carrying guns in vehicles. It also bars all future sales of machine guns, but does not affect current owners. In addition, the bill eases record-keeping requirements for gun dealers on transactions involving firearms and allows only one announced federal inspection of dealers a year.

Supporters framed their arguments with the Second Amendment to the Constitution, which says that, "the right of the people to keep and bear arms shall not be infringed." Placing restrictions on the sale and transportation of guns, they argued, has never deterred crime, because criminals can always obtain weapons. The only people hampered by the current laws, they said, are sportsmen and gun collectors. They also argued that hunters living in the 37 states that allow hunting with handguns should be able to travel from state to state without fear of prosecution by local authorities.

Opponents said the issue had nothing to do with the Second Amendment, but was instead a safety and law-enforcement matter. They argued that the bill destroyed the balance between the legitimate interests of sportsmen and the interests of police and public citizens. There is no legitimate reason for transporting a handgun across state lines, they argued.

Announced Yes: Rep. Beau Boulter, R-Amarillo.

KEY SENATE VOTES:

Rejecting arguments that the air traffic controllers fired by President Reagan after they went on an illegal strike in 1981 are needed today to increase safety for airline passengers, the Senate voted 57-39 April 9 to table, and thus to kill, a non-binding resolution urging the Federal Aviation Administration to rehire some of the over 11,000 former controllers.

The amendment — which would have only expressed the opinion of the Senate and would not have carried the force of law — was attached to a bill transferring control of two airports in the Washington, D.C. area fom federal to regional control.

Supporters of the motion to table said that they are concerned with the number of airline accidents that took place last year, and admitted that present levels of controllers are contibuting to problems with morale but, as Nancy Landon Kassebaum, R-Kan., put it, "I do not believe what problem is necessarily addressed by bringing back former air traffic controllers."

Opponents of the motion to table said that more people had lost their lives in airline disasters in 1985 than in any year since 1977. They also argued that near-misses between aircraft have increased by over 90 percent since 1981, and said that experienced traffic controllers could help solve some of those problems.

Voting to kill the amendment calling for rehiring air traffic controllers: Rep. Phil Gramm, R-Texas.

Voting against: Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas.

Study says no nation yet ready to handle aging nuclear power plants

By JILL LAWRENCE

WASHINGTON (AP) — No country that relies on nuclear power is adequately prepared to handle the potentially costly and dangerous task of retiring the highly radioactive plants, a study released Saturday says.

Some 350 nuclear plants will need to be dismantled and their wastes disposed of in the next 30 years, according to "Decommissioning: Nuclear Power's Missing Link," written by researcher Cynthia Pollock of the environmentalist Worldwatch Institute.

"Nearly four decades and 400 power plants into the nuclear age, the question of how to safely and economically dispose of nuclear reactors and their wastes is still largely unanswered," Pollock says in the study.

Furthermore, she says, so many utilities operated for so long without collecting money for the tasks that "electricity customers and taxpayers will suffer the aftershock of paying for retired reactors."

Worldwide, 17 reactors built between 1957 and 1972 were awaiting or undergoing decommissioning last year. Among them were Shippingport and Peach Bottom in Pennsylvania, Dresden-1 in Illinois, Indian Point-1 in New York and Humboldt Bay in California. The report says only seven of the 17 are scheduled to be dismantled before 1995.

Pollock contends that national and international atomic energy agencies have neglected the decommissioning dilemma while "industry emphasis is on creating new business, not on demolishing old reactors."

The biggest stumbling block, according to the study, is that not one of the 26 countries with nuclear plants has a permanent disposal site for high-level radioactive wastes from reactors.

The reasons are both political and technical, Pollock said in an interview. Spent fuel and other high-level waste must be shielded from the environment for 10,000 years, and subterranean vaults must be safe from groundwater and earthquakes. In addition, she said, no one wants the high-level disposal sites and some national governments may end up offering tax breaks or other financial incentives for communities.

Strikers stage march

AUSTIN, Minn. (AP) — Thousands of striking meatpackers and supporters from at least 19 states marched through the streets Saturday, one day after a demonstration at a Hormel plant was broken up by police and 17 people were arrested.

Shouting "They say give back — We say fight back," the marchers carried placards and U.S. flags, then nearly filled the 4,500-seat Austin arena to support the strike against the Geo. A. Hormel & Co. by Local P-9 of the United Food and Commercial Workers union.

"We're (here) to help our brothers and sisters," said Marilyn Thornton, an officer with Local 335 of the Amalgamated Clothing and Textile Workers Union in Chicago. "This company is making millions of dollars and they're not giving it back to workers."

Supporters came to this southern Minnesota community from Texas, Illinois, California, New York, Massachusetts, Alabama, Colorado, North Dakota, South Dakota, Florida, Minnesota, Washington state, Maine, Pennsylvania, Maryland, New Jersey, Kansas, Wyoming and Missouri.

"We stand for freedom, we stand for fairness. We will continue to fight against this company with an all-out bocyott of Hormel products," Jim Guyette, president of the local, told the rally.

"It certainly is a major labor struggle, and with the help of everyone here, we intend to win," he said.

"The people in Austin give courage to the people out there," actor David Soul, who also has supported labor disputes in Pittsburgh, said before addressing the rally. He said the strike "is a moral issue. It's not a question of procedures, but a question of morals."

The Rev. Jesse Jackson, who was to address the rally by telephone later Saturday, was to meet with company and union officials Sunday, both sides said.

"His suggestions, any suggestions, would be most welcome," said Hormel Vice President Chuck Nyberg said. "A pure mediation role, we don't think, would be positive."

Eight police officers suffered head and eye injuries during Friday's demonstration when protesters threw rocks and sprayed Mace and other chemicals in their faces, said Police Chief Donald Hoffman. He called the violence a riot.

There were no reports of injuries to demonstrators. The 17 arrested were to be charged with felony riot, Hoffman said.

Guyette argued that Friday's demonstration was peaceful until it was "turned into a riot by the Hormel company in partnership with the city, county and state law enforcement officials."

A warrant was issued Friday charging Guyette with two felonies and three misdemeanors, including aiding and abetting a riot and unlawful assembly, said Mower County Attorney Fred Kraft, who did not know when the warrant would be served.

County Sheriff Wayne Goodnature said Saturday he suspected authorities would make "numerous arrests" next week after they had reviewed video tapes of the demonstration.

Black mayors convene

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — The National Conference of Black Mayors said Saturday that the federal government was creating an "extremely hostile environment" and demanded more money for cities, minorities and the poor.

"We can find the dollars for everything else, for attacking Libya...for supporting the Contras in Nicaragua, things which are, in my view, un-American," said Mayor Richard G. Hatcher of Gary, Ind., as about 175 mayors concluded their 12th annual convention.

The mayors urged President Reagan and Congress to reauthorize federal revenue sharing, turn down tax reform proposals that would limit cities' abilities to issue tax-exempt bonds, and pass enterprise zone legislation.

The mayors also demanded vigorous programs to enhance equal employment opportunities for minorities and women, to protect civil rights and to help the homeless.

Khadafy not sole source of terrorism, experts say

By R. GREGORY NOKES
AP Diplomatic Writer

WASHINGTON — Middle East experts say American preoccupation with Libya's Moammar Khadafy, described by President Reagan as the "Mad Dog of the Middle East," is diverting attention from terrorism's primary cause — the unresolved Arab-Israeli conflict.

To many, Khadafy is a small fish in the big sea of world terrorism. They worry that the administration may be misleading Americans into thinking that curbing him would also end the problem.

"I think we are focusing too exclusively on Khadafy," former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger said. "As the center of anti-American terrorist acts, I think Syria, the Bekaa Valley and Beirut are at least as important as Libya." Like Beirut, the Bekaa Valley is in Lebanon.

"If I were drawing up a list of those responsible for terrorism, Khadafy would be seventh or eighth on the list," said Robert Hunter, a Mideast specialist at the National Security Council during the Carter administration.

Robert Kupperman, an expert on terrorism at Georgetown University Center for Strategic and International Studies here, said Iran and Syria play a much more important role in Middle East terrorism than Libya, a view shared by Sol Linowitz, who was Carter's special Middle East negotiator.

"We know unhappily that if he (Khadafy) dies tomorrow, there are still forces unleashed that will continue their efforts, and maybe even extend them if in some sense they could do so on behalf of Khadafy as a martyr," Linowitz said. "We have to be very careful in assuming one man is responsible and that doing away with him will solve the problem."

Geoffrey Kemp, who was a Middle East specialist at the White House during Reagan's first term, said curbing Khadafy "would be a net plus" in the fight against terrorism, but "I don't think it would be a dramatic change."

None of those interviewed thought Khadafy innocent of links to terrorism, and believed he should be held accountable. But most said the administration was giving him undeserved stature as a radical Arab leader by devoting so much attention to him, and that the actual retribution falls short of the advance buildup.

"We should stop talking of military action unless we are willing to do it.... Half-hearted ambiguous actions are worse than none," Kissinger, who was secretary of state under Nixon and Ford, said Wednesday on the MacNeil-Lehrer NewsHour on PBS.

Kupperman and Hunter both said the U.S. Naval buildup in the Gulf of Sidra was excessive. They also contended the confrontation was a psychological victory for Khadafy, who would claim he took on the American Sixth Fleet and survived with trivial losses. "I think he won hands down," said Hunter.

Most experts feel the administration has focused on Khadafy because, as Kissinger put it, he is "an easy target," while letting the more difficult issues languish. Those include a Middle East peace and the growth of Moslem fundamentalism — which provides the fire for Iran's anti-American acts.

Kupperman said the administration avoids retaliation against Syria and Iran because it fears their capacity for exporting terrorism to the United States. Hunter said the United States doesn't want to attack Syria because it wants to draw it into the peace process some day, and it doesn't strike Iran because it hopes for better relations after the Ayatollah Khomeini passes from the scene.

What is missed in the debate over Libya's role in terrorism, the experts say, is the fact that most of the terrorism springs from the unresolved Arab-Israeli conflict and the squalid camps of Palestinian refugees in Lebanon, Syria and even Jordan.

"The resolution of the Palestinian problem is not going to end terrorism, but progress on an Arab-Israeli peace is the single most important step we can take to reduce the incidence of terrorism against Americans over time," said Hunter, who is at the Georgetown Center.

William Quandt, a former Carter administration Middle East specialist, recently completed a book on the 1978 Egyptian-Israeli peace negotiations entitled "Camp David, Peacemaking and Politics." He wrote that five Middle East conflicts involving Israel — including Israel's 1982 invasion of Lebanon — stemmed from the unresolved Palestinian question.

"If we got a reasonable peace settlement that included Israel, Jordan, the Palestinians, and eventually the Syrians, we would be taking an enormous step toward changing the political climate in which terrorism flourishes," said Quandt, now at the Brookings Institution here.

He said a precedent is the French-Algerian conflict of the 1950s and 1960s when there was "a tremendous amount of terrorism" on both sides. He said the terrorism continued during the independence negotiations for Algeria and even for a few months afterward.

"But after that last spasmodic phase, for the last 20 years, nobody has talked about Algerian terrorism or French counter-terrorism," Quandt said.

Governor fears Florida becoming terrorist mecca

By MATT BOKOR

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — Florida's islands, beaches and sparsely populated inland regions make it a mecca for tourists and drug dealers, and they also could invite terrorists, says Gov. Bob Graham, who has proposed a $2 million bureau to protect the state from attack.

"We've seen how vulnerable we are to invasion by illegal drugs and illegal refugees," Graham said Thursday. "The same small boat or plane that today is bringing in cocaine could be bringing in terrorists with bombs."

Florida legislators, who began their annual 60-day session Tuesday in Tallahassee, also are looking at anti-terrorism measures.

They will consider a bill that would train existing Special Weapons and Tactics teams in terrorism response rather than create a special force, as Graham suggests. The bill also calls for the death penalty for terrorists who kill people and gives permission to wiretap suspected terrorists.

"It would cover everything from a foreign terrorist attack on the Miami airport to an abortion clinic bombing," said Senate sponsor Edgar Dunn.

"Should people begin to fear they can't come to Florida and be safe, they won't come," said Rep. T.K. Wetherell, who is steering Dunn's bill through the House.

The governor's recommendation, contained in his $16 billion state budget proposal, calls for a team of Florida Department of Law Enforcement officials to be trained by the FBI in counterterrorist techniques, said department spokesman Fred Schneyer.

"It would be a multifaceted kind of bureau," Schneyer said. "It is not $2 million for a terrorist squad. We obviously do not have the resources to have a bunch of guys sitting around waiting for terrorists.

"But at the same time, we feel that in a state with the various areas of vulnerability we face, (we) should have some kind of a state level response to this issue," Schneyer said.

Florida's diverse population includes thousands from Central, South American and Caribbean countries faced with political or social upheaval, and "these could produce terrorists," Schneyer said.

Rites held for TWA bombing victims

Associated Press

The four victims of the April 2 TWA bombing were laid to rest Saturday, and the man who lost his wife, daughter and mother-in-law in the attack said "we remain strong in our belief in God and our country."

Three generations of a Greek-American family were buried in Annapolis, Md., while in Connecticut, services were held for the fourth victim, a native of Colombia who had adopted the United States as his home.

The airline victims died when a bomb blew a hole in their jetliner over Greece, sucking them out of the plane. The plane made an emergency landing at Athens airport.

Three hundred people filled the pews and aisles of Sts. Constantine and Helen Greek Orthodox Church in Annapolis, and nearly 100 stood outside, as services were held for Demetra Stylian, 52, her daughter, Maria Klug, 24, and Mrs. Klug's 8-month-old daughter, Demetra Kristina.

"The innocent human beings so dear to us were taken suddenly from us — for no reason at all," said Metropolitan Silas of New Jersey, the archbishop who presided over the service.

"In the name of humanity, we decry this sickness in our world, which in reality is an act of treason against humanity itself," he said.

Two flower-covered caskets stood at the front of the small, brick church. On one was placed the picture of Demetra Stylian. On the other was a picture of Mrs. Klug and her tiny daughter, who were buried together.

After the service, Warren Klug Jr., Mrs. Klug's husband, read a statement outside, clutching in one hand a pair of his daughter's pajamas.

Klug said his father-in-law, Andreas Stylian, who died last year, was proud that he and his family were Americans. "Now our family has been murdered because they were American," Klug said. The family came to America 15 years ago.

At the services for Alberto Ospina in Stratford, Conn., the Rev. Stephen Skarupa prayed that "God may take the evil of terrorism away from our world."

About 300 mourners attended the funeral Mass at St. James Roman Catholic Church. He was buried at a cemetery in nearby Trumbull.

"Surely he was an innocent man," Skarupa told the mourners during a 45-minute service. "He lives on in our hearts and minds.... He's not just the man in seat 10F."

Ospina, 39, became an American citizen six years ago after emigrating from Colombia in 1968. "He was so proud," Carmela Cardiello, a neighbor, recalled last week. "Being an American meant good things. It meant opportunity."

Margoth Ospina, Ospina's widow, left the brick church arm-in-arm with her two children — William, 15, and Tamara, 13. Ospina's mother and brother, who live in America, also attended.

Family remembers soldier who died in Berlin bombing

DETROIT (AP) — Army Sgt. Kenneth T. Ford, killed in the bombing of a Berlin nightclub, was remembered at his funeral Saturday as a father figure who "always wanted to help somebody else."

More than 250 people packed tiny Flowery Mount Baptist Church in Detroit to honor Ford, 21, who died in the explosion April 5 at the La Belle discotheque. Another 100 mourners stood outside the chapel.

"He'll be a brother sometimes, but he was like a father also," said Robin Beecham, Ford's younger brother who is a U.S. Army private stationed in Frankfurt, West Germany.

"When he sees you make a mistake or he knows a way that you can do things better, he kind of pulled away from the brother side and would sit you down and tell you how to go about doing it," Beecham said.

Ford was ordained a deacon at the church five years ago and spent hours playing basketball with his brother and another deacon, Daniel Moore.

"As we'd play basketball together, he would tell me, 'Be strong, big fella,'" Moore told the congregation. "He always wanted to help somebody else. He always said, 'Don't worry about me.'"

Telegrams were read to the congregation from U.S. Rep. Jack Kemp, R-N.Y., and Sen. Carl Levin, D-Mich., who did not attend.

The Rev. Floyd Moore, the church's pastor, blasted President Reagan for failing to contact the family to express his condolences.

"Servicemen are going over to a land trying to protect our country, and the head of this nation doesn't care enough when they die," Moore told the congregation.

Afterward, Beecham also questioned why the family had not heard from the president.

Park gets bomb threat

PUEBLO, Colo. (AP) — Authorities evacuated as many as 10,000 people Saturday from the Pueblo Reservoir recreation area after an anonymous caller, proclaiming "Khadafy Lives," said three bombs had been planted in the park.

"Members of the sheriff's department and our guys are looking through the buildings and searched the interior of the dam and the marinas," but no bombs were found, said park ranger Mike Dowd. "We still have quite a few boats out on the reservoir and are trying to get them as they come in."

Monica Miller, a spokeswoman for the state Parks Department, said the FBI recommended the evacuation.

The call came in on the city's 911 emergency line about 1 p.m.

New brands protested

BOSTON (AP) — About 50 animal lovers, many with black X's painted on their cheeks, marched Saturday to protest a federal plan to brand more than 1.5 million dairy cows on the face with hot irons.

Chanting "hot irons, cold hearts," the demonstrators condemned the U.S. Agriculture Department's insistence on burning a three-inch cross on the right cheek of cows that are to be slaughtered or exported for federal subsidies. The program is designed to cut the production of milk.

Federal officials say the facial branding is necessary so the cows cannot be resold and slipped back into production, and Agriculture Secretary Richard Lyng has said he would not rescind the order.

Boy rescued from fire

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — A 3-year-old boy set fire to his bedding, then tried to escape the smoke and flames by hiding in a closet, say firefighters who rescued the youngster.

Craig McComas was reported in critical condition today at Children's Hospital, suffering from burns and smoke inhalation, said a hospital spokesman.

Firefighters said the boy was found hiding in a closet in his second-floor bedroom Friday night shortly after the fire started.

Battalion Chief Don Taylor said the boy apparently was playing with matches on his bunk bed and became frightened when the bedding caught fire.

Operator died in fire

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A man who officials believe operated an illegal fireworks factory has been identified as one of eight people killed in an explosion and fire linked to the factory, authorities said.

The remains of Thomas C. Cuyos, 28, were identified Friday by the San Francisco coroner's office. Officials have so far identified six of the victims of the $10 million explosion and fire at the Bay View Industrial Park.

The illegal fireworks factory was the main cause of the April 4 explosion, fire officials said.

Cuyos headed a company called Infinite Technology Inc., which was incorporated last year as a fireworks manufacturer, the San Francisco Chronicle reported Saturday. The corporation headquarters were listed as being outside San Francisco.

Student survives fall

BERKELEY, Calif. (AP) — A University of California student who fell nine stories from a dormitory window onto a parked car suffered only minor injuries after he crashed through the roof of the car and his fall was broken by the seat cushions, authorities said.

Michael McGuinness, 19, of Davis, suffered cuts and bruises but no fractures, according to officials at Herrick Hospital.

Police are attempting to determine how the student fell from the window ledge of his room Thursday night, university officials said Friday.

Abe Totah, another resident of the dormitory, said he was studying on the ground floor when he heard a "big thud."

Totah, who ran to the parking lot, said McGuinness had some blood on his shoulder and was conscious. "He was asking where he was and what happened," Totah said.

Arab image of America changing

By ROBERT H. REID

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Cries of "Death to America!" and shrill threats against "U.S. imperialism" have all but snuffed out memories of a time when Arabs looked to the United States for their national salvation.

Even America's Arab friends — Egypt, Jordan and Saudi Arabia — cringe at the prospect of more U.S military moves against Libya in retaliation for terrorist attacks.

The story of American involvement in the Middle East began with the promise of education, social change and political freedom for people dominated for centuries by Ottoman Turks and European colonialists.

In the ensuing years, that image has changed.

Many Arabs now believe America contributes to instability in the region by supporting Israel and by refusing to accept Arab demands for an independent Palestinian homeland.

Whether valid or not, this view is widespread, from the foreign ministries of Arab capitals to the squalid refugee camps of Lebanon, Syria and Jordan, where desperate young men are recruited as terrorists.

WORLD

Vice President George Bush personally heard the Arab view Thursday when North Yemen's vice president, Abdel Karim Abdallah Arashi, told him that Washington should work for a Palestinian state "under the leadership of the Palestine Liberation Organization," a demand consistently rejected by Washington and Israel.

From the Arab perspective, America's political role in the area has led to great hopes followed by bitter disappointments.

Camp David diplomacy failed to usher in Middle East peace. America's role in halting the 1982 Israeli siege of Beirut was eclipsed by a Christian militia's massacre of Palestinian civilians deprived of PLO protection. American-led attempts to stabilize Lebanon collapsed in 1983 under a firestorm of sectarian warfare.

After World War I, Arab nationalists looked to the United States to prevent France and Britain from replacing the Turks as masters of the Middle East when the Ottoman Empire collapsed.

Schools founded in the 19th century by American Protestant missionaries created an educated Arab elite, steeped in traditional Western ideals of independence.

Their hopes were raised by the British, who instigated the 1916 Arab revolt against the Turks. Leading the uprising were the great-grandfather of Jordan's King Hussein and Briton T.E. Lawrence, the legendary "Lawrence of Arabia." But France, Britain and Imperial Russia secretly agreed to divide the Ottoman Empire among themselves after the war.

Under the 1916 Sykes-Picot Agreement, France would take most of modern Syria and Lebanon. Britain was to take what is now Iraq and Jordan. Parts of modern Israel were to be administered jointly by France, Britain and Russia.

Britain, meanwhile, also promised in 1916 to establish a national homeland for Jews in Palestine.

The European moves enraged the Arabs, but their hopes were revived when President Woodrow Wilson, in a July 4, 1918, speech, denounced secret agreements and promised the Arabs would enjoy "absolutely unmolested opportunity for autonomous development."

Britain and France still insisted on a share of the Middle East as spoils of war.

To settle the various claims, Wilson sent an American commission to the Middle East in 1919, a year after the uprising ended, to survey public opinion on the future of the region.

Among commission recommendations was one that the United States oppose establishment of a Jewish homeland in Palestine because it would lead to bloodshed.

But Wilson, debilitated by a stroke and disillusioned by American opposition to his League of Nations plan, never acted on the commission's recommendations.

The United States accepted a compromise allowing Britain and France to administer Middle East territories under temporary mandates.

Arab aspirations of national independence were shunted aside.

By the end of World War II, the United States changed its mind about a Jewish homeland because of the Holocaust against European Jews and urged Britain to lift restrictions on Jewish immigration to Palestine.

But Britain's 50,000 troops in Palestine were unable to curb violence between Arab and Jewish commandos. Britain announced it was relinguishing its mandate on May 14, 1948.

Robbers take Charles II diamond, old silver

WILLITON, England (AP) — Robbers stole a priceless diamond from Charles II's coronation crown and at least $277,000 worth of silver from a manor in southwest England, police said.

Katherine Wyndham said five masked intruders broke in before dawn Friday and took her from room to room as they snatched bagsful of valuables.

"I gave them some lectures on the history of the silver as we went around," said the 42-year-old.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Terror suspects banned

BERLIN (AP) — The Allied command on Saturday banned suspected terrorists from West Berlin after the bombing of a discotheque frequented by U.S. servicemen killed two people and injured 230 one week ago.

The Allied command, composed of U.S., British and French respresentatives, asked West Berlin police to "remove from the Western sectors persons identified as posing a threat to the population of Berlin," said spokesman Peter Boon, reading from an official statement.

The measure is directed at international terrorists, Boon told The Associated Press. He refused to say if it applied specifically to Libyans or to other nationalities.

President Reagan and Chancellor Helmut Kohl have said Libya is a suspect in the April 5 blast at the La Belle discotheque, which killed a U.S Army sergeant from Detroit and a Turkish woman. Of the 230 peope hurt, 63 were Americans.

West German security authorities said last week that the Libyan embassy in East Berlin, capital of Communist East Germany, was suspected of being involved in the bombing.

Bhutto leads procession

GUJRANWALA, Pakistan (AP) — Opposition leader Benazir Bhutto led tens of thousands of people on a triumphant 38-mile procession through the countryside Saturday, as President Mohammed Zia ul-Haq warned that such rallies would not be allowed to get out of hand.

Her 11-hour procession from Lahore to Gujranwala included buses, trucks, cars, tractors and horsecarts jammed with people. Ms. Bhutto stopped repeatedly to address people who poured out of villages and towns along the way.

She has attracted hundreds of thousands of people at rallies since her return to Pakistan from self-imposed exile in London on Thursday.

Flight was 25 years ago

MOSCOW (AP) — Twenty-five years ago, with an exuberant cheer of "Let's go!" Yuri Gagarin launched man's quest into space when he rode a rocket into orbit around the Earth.

Dozens of Soviets, Americans and others have followed. Men have walked on the moon, and worked for up to eight months in a weightless world made familiar to most earthbound mortals by television.

Yet Gagarin's 108-minute orbit of Earth on April 12, 1961, was not simply a giant leap for humanity.

It sealed a superpower rivalry that began when the Soviets launched a Sputnik satellite Oct. 4, 1957, stunning America and the rest of the world. Today Moscow and Washington face a new, space-based arms race.

Kidnapping still unsolved

DUBLIN, Ireland (AP) — Armed police raided the homes of dozens of known criminals and drug dealers in the Dublin area Saturday as the hunt for kidnapped socialite Jennifer Guinness shifted away from IRA terrorists, police sources said.

But the sources, who insisted on anonymity, said no arrests were made.

"We're visiting a number of houses, both occupied and unoccupied — that's part of the operation," said police spokesman Pat Kiely. He refused to go into detail.

Poet gets literary prize

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — White, anti-apartheid poet Breyten Breytenbach, who was jailed for seven years on a terrorism conviction, was awarded South Africa's richest literary prize Saturday for poems he wrote while in prison.

In the prepared text of his acceptance speech, he addressed fellow Afrikaners, saying: "Apartheid separates you from your human dignity and your self-respect."

Breytenbach, 45, has lived in Paris since his release from prison in 1982. He returned to South Africa for the first time since then to accept the first-ever Rapport Prize for Literature.

The prize, worth $7,350, was established this year by the generally pro-government Afrikaans-language Sunday newspaper Rapport. Breytenbach won for a volume of poetry called "yk" that is not overtly political and touches on a wide variety of themes.

Lebanon's Christians, Moslems in 12th year of factional fighting

By ED BLANCHE

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — The civil war between Christians and Moslems enters its 12th year today, with Lebanon broken into feuding ministates where even supposed allies butcher each other in a never-ending cycle of chaos.

"We're not just back to square one, we're back to square one minus," said Akram Shehayeb, a top aide to Walid Jumblatt, commander of the powerful Druse militia that holds the Chouf Mountains.

His comment reflected the dismay of many Lebanese that prospects for peace are as dim as ever.

The war began when right-wing Christian militiamen ambushed a busload of Palestinians in Beirut on April 13, 1975. Since then, the conflict has engulfed every part of Lebanon with a savagery almost beyond belief.

"If we don't stop this war soon, Beirut is going to be a desert," said Jumblatt.

The seeds of conflict were sown in 1943, when France granted Lebanon independence. Christians, then apparently in the majority, were guaranteed the presidency and control of much of the government under the constitution.

Moslems, who were guaranteed the prime minister's portfolio, now figure themselves to be the majority religion. Their demands for greater political power have been opposed by the Christians.

The issue of which religion is the majority is so sensitive that no official census has been conducted since 1932.

Beirut, once the exuberant playground of the Middle East, is well on the way to becoming the wasteland that Jumblatt prophesies.

The capital has been shelled, bombed, invaded, besieged and ravaged. Whole streets have been shattered by car bombs and indiscriminate shelling.

The country has been partitioned into sectarian cantons controlled by Maronite Christians, Shiite Moslems and the Druse, a mystical offshoot of Islam.

Israel, which invaded in 1978 and 1982, still occupies a southern border strip to blunt guerrilla attacks.

In south Lebanon, where Palestinians were once virtual rulers, Syrian-backed leftists and pro-Iranian Moslems wage a guerrilla war to push the Israelis out of their last foothold in Lebanon.

Yasser Arafat's Fatah fighters are moving back into Beirut and the south, once known as "Fatahland," to threaten Israel again.

The Palestinian saga has come full circle since the Israelis invaded Lebanon in June 1982, to drive Arafat's guerrillas out.

The Syrians are entrenched in east and north Lebanon with 25,000 troops and hundreds of tanks. They deployed in 1976 under an Arab League peacekeeping mandate.

That initiative, like every other attempt to end Lebanon's bloodletting, collapsed when the Syrians found themselves fighting the Christians.

For the Syrians too, the war has come full circle. They are again at odds with the right-wing Christian Phalangists after President Amin Gemayel rejected a Syrian-sponsored peace pact signed by Islamic and a rival Christian militia Dec. 28.

Government officials estimate more than 100,000 people have been killed in the civil war and the factional bloodshed it spawned.

But detailed computerized records kept by a group of scholars list a far more appalling catalogue of misery that shows the true horror of the Lebanese nightmare:

— 148,600 men, women and children killed.

— 427,500 wounded, nearly 25,000 of them maimed, blinded or disabled.

— Nearly 700,000 people, about one-third of the population, made homeless.

— More than 13,000 buildings destroyed and another 80,000 badly damaged, the equivalent of a medium-sized city.

The government estimates reconstruction will cost more than $20 billion, but the economy is on its knees.

Kidnap victim returns to France

PARIS (AP) — Michel Brian, the French teacher who was kidnapped for three days in Lebanon and then freed in a burst of gunfire, came home to France on Saturday night, smiling but obviously exhausted.

Brian was greeted by Foreign Minister Jean-Bernard Raimond as he got off a Syrian Airline flight from Damascus.

"I'm very happy to be here. It only lasted three days and that was bearable," Brian told reporters at Orly airport,

"My thoughts are with our other countrymen still being held hostage, for whom I wish their freedom as quickly as possible," said the 42-year-old Brian, who was kidnapped Tuesday.

At least seven other Frenchmen are being held in Beirut.

The pro-Iranian Islamic Jihad, or Islamic Holy War, has claimed it killed an eighth hostage, Michel Seurat, a researcher on the Middle East, but no body was ever found.

Brian thanked Syria for "the important role" it played in his release but provided no details on conflicting claims over who freed him Friday.

In Damascus, a Syrian official, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said Syrian intelligence operatives in Lebanon's Bekaa Valley freed Brian after being informed his abductors were moving him to another hideout.

However, hours earlier Brian said in a tape-recorded interview he had been rescued by rabbit hunters who stumbled on the kidnappers while he was being transported from Beirut.

In Grenoble, France, Brian's father Jean raised doubts about the rabbit-hunting story, saying officials of the French Protestant College where his son taught told him Thursday that his son would soon be freed.

Michel Brian

In Beirut, Lebanon, an anonymous telephone caller claiming to represent Brian's captors told a Western news agency Saturday the group will kidnap more French hostages until France releases jailed Arabs.

The caller, who said he spoke for the Siffine Islamic Organization, said one of its men was wounded in a shootout with Brian's rescuers.

The Siffine group is believed to be made up of Shiite Moslem extremists. The Bekaa is a Shiite stronghold.

PLAIN SPEAKING BY Matt Blair

What is a County Judge and what does he do?

Most people, when they hear the words "county judge," think of a man that sits in a courtroom all day and listens to trials. That is no longer the primary job of the County Judge in Midland County. The County Courts at Law, with Judges Dubose and Fitzgerald, do most of the trial work.

The County Judge is the presiding officer of the Commissioner's Court. If one compares the Commissioner's Court to a city government, the County Judge is the mayor and the commissioners are the councilmen. There are differences. The County Judge is the only full time member of the Court and it is his responsibility to see that the Commissioner's Court and the rest of county government run efficiently. The form of county government in Texas was established over one hundred years ago and has changed little since. The size of county government has grown tremendously. County government demands new outlooks and fresh conservative thinking to adapt it to the demands of modern Midland County.

We are all facing a time when we must tighten our belts and make the most of our resources. We cannot afford to be complacent or stagnant.

Most politicians aren't very specific about what they want to do once elected. Some of my goals and ideas are:

1) Give myself a 5% pay cut.

2) Work to establish a County personnnel office. In a time of increasing federal and state employment regulation it is essential that the County protect itself by establishing a professionally staffed personnnel office.

3) Carefully review and reorganize, if necessary, County staff positions to operate in a more business-like manner and ensure maximum performance.

4) Work to improve communication and cooperation between the City and County to avoid duplication of effort and services.

5) Resolve the problem with our county jail.

While walking, and knocking on doors, on the more than 60 miles of neighborhood streets that I have covered since I started, I have had the opportunity to speak with many of you about your concern for County government. The citizens of Midland County want and deserve a hard working, energetic, and decisive County Judge.

I would appreciate your support on May 3rd.

"It's time to get the job done!"

Please watch for more Plain Speaking in next Sunday's Midland Reporter-Telegram.

The temperature should approach 90 degrees today under sunny skies as April continues its impersonation of July. Winds will be from the southeast at 10-20 mph. Tonight will be clear with a low in the upper 50s, and Monday will be fair and slightly less warm, with a high in the mid 80s, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport.

High pressure over the Northeast Gulf continued to pump warm, moist tropical air across the eastern third of Texas Saturday as temperatures pushed into the 70s and 80s for most of the state.

Skies over the Northeast Gulf were mostly cloudy and a small area of drizzle and fog plagued the Beaumont-Port Arthur area.

A large thunderstorm had developed east of San Antonio, but elsewhere, skies over North Central Texas were partly cloudy while most of the rest of the state had sunny skies.

Meanwhile, a weak cool front across the Central Panhandle held temperatures in the 60s across the northern Panhandle, making Dalhart the cool spot at 3 p.m. with 66 degrees.

The forecast calls for partly cloudy, warm skies in North Texas Sunday with a chance of thunderstorms. It will be mostly sunny in the west and south.

NATION

A storm system brought heavy snow and strong winds to Montana on Saturday, as the tail end of fast-moving thunderstorms battered Texas and Louisiana with hail, tornadoes, high wind and heavy rain.

The snow in Montana was accompanied by temperatures in the teens and 20s and winds up to 30 mph. Up to 12 inches fell in the mountains along the eastern slopes of the Rockies.

As the storm moved over the Pacific Northwest, travelers advisories were posted across the Oregon Cascades, the mountain passes west of the Rockies in Montana, the mountains of northern California, much of Idaho, and western Wyoming.

The thunderstorms spawned a few tornadoes early Saturday in northern Louisiana. Wind gusted to 60 mph in St. Joseph.

The forecast for today called for snow and snow showers across much of Montana, Wyoming, northern Utah and southern Idaho. Rain should fall across North Dakota, South Dakota and western portions of Nebraska.

Rosalind O'Neal, who was recently honored as the Midland Chamber of Commerce's Teacher of the Month, strives to make learning fun for her students.

DeZavala teacher creates home-like atmosphere in class

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

Rosalind O'Neal says it's a challenge to walk into a classroom everyday knowing that not all youngsters want to go to school to learn.

Yet, the sixth grade language arts teacher at DeZavala Elementary School finds a way to make learning fun.

"Let's face it, nobody wants to go to school," said Mrs. O'Neal, selected by the Midland Chamber of Commerce as its Teacher of the Month. "So I've created a home-like atmosphere where we learn and we have fun doing it."

Like home, Mrs. O'Neal's classroom is comfortably arranged so students face each other, not the chalkboard. Pictures and helpful hints cover the walls. And if there's a box on the floor, "we just walk right over it," she said. "We act like we do at home."

Mrs. O'Neal has an uncanny ability to motivate students of varied backgrounds and abilities, said former student Alexis Beck.

"Every week we had a 'Special Project,' an activity in which we incorporated our weekly spelling words. The projects included poems, 'Wanted' posters, bumper stickers, puppet shows, skits, newscasts, puzzles, fairy tales and fables," she wrote. "Not only was this a far more effective way of learning spelling words than writing each word ten times as some teachers require, but also it made us overcome our fear of talking in front of a group since the projects were orally presented."

The Goddard Junior High School eighth-grader recalled how Mrs. O'Neal encouraged her class to be better than the other sixth grade sections and to reach for the stars despite their diverse backgrounds and abilities.

"Mrs. O'Neal handled this range of abilities and encouraged each student to reach his potential...At least half of the class has run for a student council office, for cheerleader, been on the honor roll, or received other academic awards since she taught them."

Mrs. O'Neal holds a bachelor of arts degree in elementary education from Houston Tillotson College in Austin and currently is working towards a master's degree in counseling at the University of Texas of the Permian Basin. Her entire nine-year teaching career has been spent at DeZavala.

As a parent, Mary Beck said Mrs. O'Neal is the most outstanding teacher either of her children have had. "Her creativity encourages students' creativity and helps each student to find an area in which to excel."

That quality enables Mrs. O'Neal to form a cohesive unit of very diverse students — Black, Hispanic, Anglo, gifted, average intelligence, blind — who worked to help one another, she said.

Mrs. Beck mentioned how the class learned to understand and accept a visually handicapped student as just another classmate through subtle hints. Even a substitute teacher spent most of a

Programs emphasize victims' rights

From Staff Reports

This week has been proclaimed Crime Victims Awareness Week by Gov. Mark White, and local law-enforcement officials welcomed the chance to show their support for victims' rights.

"It's a program long overdue," said Midland District Attorney Al Schorre. "Our office is making every effort to support the rights of crime victims."

"This is something that should have happened in the judicial system years ago," said Midland Sheriff Gary Painter, who thinks the system has placed "too much emphasis on the criminals and their rights."

The Legislature's "Victim's Bill of Rights" is designed to help "eliminate the needless hardships that victims endure as a result of their experience," said Tedda McAnear, Schorre's victim/witness coordinator.

"Crime victims and witnesses are injured by crime and then face a second injury. They are stigmatized, ignored and forgotten," she said.

What the victim's rights movement comes down to is giving more consideration to the victims, keeping them informed on the progress of "their" cases and letting them have some input into the process, Ms. McAnear said.

"The brutal fact is that crime is still rampant around us, its casualties grow in number, and only a few of them are accorded the compassion and justice due them from their fellow citizens and their institutions of democratic government," she said.

"The system is programmed for mass justice, and it's hard to give someone individualized attention," said Midland County Attorney Mark Dettman. "Unfortunately, it's easy (for prosecutors) to become calloused" when dealing with hundreds or thousands of cases per year.

"For too many years, it appeared that the judicial system was pre-occupied with the rights of the criminals and considered the victim as merely a lesser party," he said.

But with the new emphasis on victim's rights, "psychologically, the victims now feel that they're part of the system."

Dettman, whose office prosecutes most drunk-driving cases, cited Mothers Against Drunk Driving as an example of a victim's group which has had a considerable impact on the criminal justice system.

"It's just a kind of a general attitude that's changing," he said.

To foster a greater awareness of victim's rights programs, representatives from Schorre's office are speaking to local social and service groups, visiting classrooms and sponsoring a poster contest for elementary-school children, according to Ms. McAnear.

The contest theme is "Crime Hurts," and the entries will be displayed on the ground floor of the Midland County Courthouse and judged by local officials, she said. The awards presentation will made on April 25.

During Crime Victims Awareness Week and national Crime Victim's Rights Week, which is from April 20-26, television and radio spots featuring local law-enforcement officials will be broadcast "in an attempt to inform the community on the rights of victims," Ms. McAnear said.

"The district attorney and his staff encourage local businesses and churches to request copies of the 'Crime Victims Bill of Rights' and share them with their employees and congregations," she said.

"Without the support of a concerned public, the rights of crime victims and witnesses can be forgotten," according to Ms. McAnear.

The programs scheduled for this week and the next are intended to increase "community awareness of the problems faced by crime victims as well as a network of information regarding the righs of victims and the duties of law-enforcement agencies to see that those rights are protected."

Sesquicentennial dinner tickets on sale

From Staff Reports

Tickets for the Midland Sesquicentennial Fajita dinner to be held at 6 p.m. May 2 at ClayDesta National Bank are being sold in advance at a number of Midland locations. Tickets must be purchased before April 28.

Fajitas will be served under the stars in the north portion of the ClayDesta near Air Park Drive. The dinner is one of several activities planned in conjunction with the arrival of the Sesquicentennial Wagon Train. Also scheduled are a dance and live entertainment.

Ticket prices are $5.50 for adults and $3.50 for children and are available at ClayDesta National Bank, ClayDesta Plaza, 306 W. Wall Ave.; Albertson's, 1002 Andrews Highway and 3317 N. Midland Drive; and Midland Chamber of Commerce, 109 N. Main St.

Tickets also will be sold from 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. Saturdays through April 26 at a Midland Park Mall booth, located in the "food court" entrance. In addition, mail order forms also are available at the Midland Reporter-Telegram.

Also, Midlanders are encouraged to participate in activities during the arrival of the wagon train as well as the actual celebration.

Local organizers list the following ways for Midland residents to take part:

- Welcome the wagon train with flags and banners as it arrives from Odessa. It will travel east on Highway 191, to Loop 250 and then on to its ClayDesta campsite. Midland Park Mall will have bleachers on the north side of its parking lot for spectators.
- Clubs and organizations are encouraged to make desserts to sell during the Fajita Dinner as a fundraising project for the groups. Ice cream, cookies and cakes are among the suggested desserts.
- Also, volunteers are needed for such wide-ranging jobs as being ticket-takers to being a part of the clean-up crews.

Court overturns ruling in Greenhaw case

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

The John C. "Smoky" Greenhaw case against the stock brokerage house of Merrill Lynch has been dealt another flip-flop in a tug-of-war series.

The U.S. Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans, La., has overturned a judgment from U.S. District Court Judge Lucius D. Bunton of the Midland-Odessa Division of the federal court system's Western District of Texas.

Greenhaw, a Lenorah cotton ginner and cotton broker, and his Smoky Greenhaw Cotton Co. had sued Merrill Lynch and its Dallas account executive Charles Dennis Scott for allegedly making unauthorized trades in Greenhaw's commodities account.

Bunton initially denied a trial in the case and ordered the dispute to be settled by arbitration. Instead, the appellate court in New Orleans ordered that the case go to trial court.

The trial-court jury in 1985 had awarded Greenhaw $316,447 in damages by finding that Scott made unauthorized commodities trades.

But Bunton overturned the jury's verdict in the case in March 1985 and cut the award to $4,920.

On appeal, the appellate court in part reversed Bunton's judgment and ordered Greenhaw be paid $191,447 in damages but cut out the jury's $125,000 exemplary damages.

"There was evidence that Merrill Lynch engaged in a fraudulent scheme of making unauthorized commodity trades in Greenhaw's accounts," the appellate court ruled.

The jury in the Greenhaw case had awarded Greenhaw $316,447 after the jurors determined that Scott did unauthorized trading on Greenhaw's accounts, violated federal securities law and the Commodity Exchange Act and breached a fiduciary duty.

SHORTLY AFTERWARD, Bunton reversed the jury's verdict and threw out the bulk of the cash award. In his judgment, Bunton found "no evidence" that Scott and Merrill Lynch breached fiduciary duty. However, he did award Greenhaw $4,920 for securities violations. Further, the judge ordered that Merrill Lynch and Greenhaw arbitrate their dispute on violations of the Commodity Exchange Act.

The appellate court was critical of Bunton's judgment which overturned the jury's verdict.

"The trial judge should refrain from granting j.n.o.v (judgment notwithstanding verdict) unless 'the facts and inferences point so strongly and overwhelmingly in favor of one party that the court believes that reasonable men could not arrive at a contrary verdict.'"

In dispensing with the exemplary damages, the appellate court said that there was "no evidence" that Merrill Lynch "maliciously, oppressively or wantonly" defrauded Greenhaw.

"The mere fact that the fraud may have occurred is an insufficient basis to support an award of exemplary damages," the appellate court ruled.

Greenhaw's attorney, his son, David Greenhaw, disagreed.

"I don't have to prove malicious intent," he said. "All I have to prove is that that they (Scott and Merrill Lynch) acted with 'conscious indifference.'"

DAVID GREENHAW said he has filed for a rehearing on the issue of exemplary damages and will be taking the stance that the appellate court "used the wrong criterion."

At the same time, Merrill Lynch's counsel, the Houston law firm of Vinson & Elkins, also is seeking a rehearing before the appellate court. Merrill Lynch wants to settle an ongoing racketeering dispute by arbitration and not in a trial court.

"They want to go to arbitration rather than go to trial on RICO," David Greenhaw said.

Bunton had kicked out Greenhaw's racketeering claim that Merrill Lynch violated the Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations (RICO) Act. "This is quite obviously not a RICO claim," Bunton had ruled. RICO defines "racketeering activity" as any "indictable" offense falling under federal criminal provisions, including mail fraud and wire fraud.

However, the appellate court ordered that Greenhaw's RICO claim be remanded to the trial court for a new trial.

David Greenhaw noted that one reason Merrill Lynch wants to avoid a trial on the RICO claim is because the law allows a recovery of treble damages. Should Smoky Greenhaw prevail, he could collect three times the $125,000 in exemplary damages or $375,000.

— Best I can tell, the only good thing to come out of the current oil price decline is that when you go out of town and tell someone you are from Midland, they have heard of it.

— Does anyone really care that Clint Eastwood was elected mayor of Carmel?

— OK, so they do. But why?

— Will we now be saturated with endless comparisons between him and Reagan?

— It doesn't seem like people say "Have a nice day" as often as they used to.

— Thank God for small miracles.

— It is very reassuring to know that many grocery stores stay open 24 hours a day, but does anyone shop at 3 a.m.?

— Men with excessively large rear ends should not wear designer jeans.

— On second thought, men, in general, should not wear designer jeans.

— Best one-liner I've heard recently: "Lord, can that guy talk? He can say less in more words than six people running for governor."

— Second best book title: "Elvis Is Dead And I Don't Feel So Good Myself," by Lewis Grizzard.

— Best title of a chapter in a book I've read recently: "When Smoke Gets In Your Eyes ... Shut Them," by Fran Lebowitz.

— Best country-western line I can remember: "My wife ran off with my best friend and I sure do miss him."

— First runner-up: "I don't know whether to kill myself or go bowling."

— Second runner-up: "Walk out backwards so I'll think you're coming in."

— Best story, as told by a good old boy from West Texas, I've heard in recent months: "There was this fellow who had two sows he wanted to get mated. He didn't have a boar, but he knew a fellow who did. So he called his friend up and asked if he could bring his two sows up to his place.

"The fellow said 'sure thing,' so he put his sows in the back of his pickup and drove 'em to his neighbor's farm.

"That boar got real interested and before you knew it all sorts of wild oinking broke out. After waiting a spell, the man asked his neighbor how he would know if the job had took. His neighbor said to look out at his hogs the next morning, and if they were laying up in the sunshine, everything was OK. But if they were still wallowing in the mud, he'll have to bring 'em back.

"Next morning, he looked out his window and, sure enough, his hogs were wallowing in the mud, so he put 'em back in his truck and drove 'em to see the boar again.

"Same thing happened. They started up that crazy oinking again and eventually worked up a big batch of passion.

"Next morning, though, it was the same thing. Them two hogs was still wallowing in the mud. The man took 'em up there a third time. Next morning, he couldn't bear to look out at his hog pen, so he said to his wife, 'Honey, look out there and tell me if them hogs are sitting in the sunshine or wallowing in the mud.'

"She looked out the window and said, 'Neither one.'

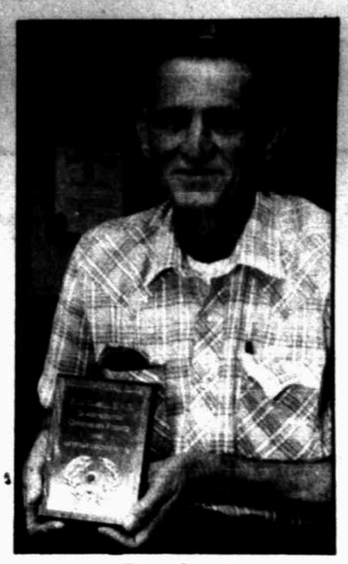

"The man said, 'Well, where are they?'

"The fellow's wife said, 'One of 'em's in the truck riding shotgun and the other one's blowing the horn.'"

From Staff Reports

The day after two FBI agents were killed in a shootout near Miami, Midland's American Legion observed Law-Enforcement Recognition Day with a free barbecue Saturday for local law-enforcement and public-safety officers.

The timing, though unplanned, was appropriate, according to Midland County Judge William B. Ahders.

"People just take them for granted," said Ahders, a former FBI agent. "Every day of their lives, they're at risk — like those two FBI agents who were killed yesterday in Florida."

The Legion decided to put on the event honoring local officers "just to say, 'Thank you,' " according to David Clyde, event chairman.

Law-Enforcement Recognition Day is intended "to recognize and show our appreciation to the law-enforcement and public-safety personnel and their families," said Clyde. "We want to make it an annual event."

From 10 a.m. until 5 p.m., the American Legion Hall at 501 Air Park Road was open to a steady stream of guests from the Midland Police and Fire departments, the Midland County Sheriff's Department, the Midland County Constable's Office, and the Midland offices of the FBI, the Department of Public Safety and the U.S. Marshal's Office.

Honored as Outstanding Officers for 1986 were Joe Ortiz of the Police Department, Elva Cargile of the Fire Department, Jim Swain of the DPS, Gail Boggs of the U.S. Marshal's Office, Clayton McKinney of the Sheriff's Office, and Bill Strickland of the Sheriff's Office Deputy Reserve, according to Clyde.

"I think it's an excellent idea," said Ahders.

Hightower reveals cattle program

WICHITA FALLS (AP) — Texas Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower announced a new cattle program designed to stop falling prices by promoting exports and beefing up in-state consumpion.

Hightower said the net worth of the state's beef industry has dropped by about $1 billion during the past two weeks because of a federal buyout program designed to decrease milk production.

He unveiled the new program in an airport press conference here Friday called after he was originally scheduled to appear at a fundraiser.

As part of his program, Hightower said his department is working with the Mexico-Texas Exchange Commission to export as many Texas dairy cows as possible, rather than dumping them for slaughter on the local beef market.

"The most immediate and serious problem with the federal buyout is that the program contains no orderly marketing procedures," Hightower said. "As implemented by the U.S. Department of Agriculture, most of the dairy cattle will be slaughtered before Sept. 1, thereby glutting the already-depressed beef market."

He said the department will meet Tuesday in Sulphur Springs and Thursday in Stephenville, two of the state's major dairy-producing regions, to inform dairy farmers that they can export rather than slaughter their herds.

In addition, he said, the department will work with the state's major grocery chains to launch a special "Taste-of-Texas" beef promotion. "Texas is the nation's No. 1 beef-producing state, and rancher sales of beef have traditionally contributed over $5 billion a year to the Texas economy," he said.

Hightower said Texas cattlemen face an economic crisis that stems from the 1985 federal farm bill. Under the bill's provisions, the federal government has offered to reduce a nationwide dairy-product surplus through a whole-herd buyout program.

Illness interrupts plans, but couple marries at hospital

BEDFORD (AP) — When a sudden hospital stay stalled Victor and Carolyn Molitor's wedding trip, they wrote their own prescription for the ceremony, saying their vows in the hospital foyer.

Molitor, 74, had a red rose pinned to his blue bath robe as he remarried Carolyn, 47, at Northeast Community Hospital Thursday. The guests included doctors and nurses.

The Molitors had planned to be married in Acapulco, but their plans were interrupted when Molitor experienced breathing difficulty during a stopover April 6 at Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport.

Don Severino and Bob Seadore, the airport paramedics who treated Molitor were among those watching as the Rev. Michael Young performed the ceremony.

"He sent an invitation over to the airport," Seadore said. "His wife called and asked us to come over, too."

"We answer about 2,500 calls a year," Severino said, "but this is our first wedding."

"If it hadn't been for you, there wouldn't be a wedding," said emergency room nurse Ann Greif.

RULING

THE ARBITRATION matter was compounded when the Dean Witter Reynolds Inc. vs. Byrd case before the U.S. Supreme Court was decided in 1985 at a point between when the jury verdict and judgment in the Greenhaw case was rendered.

The Dean Witter Reynolds case held that "even where arbitrable claims are intertwined with non-arbitrable securities claims, the Arbitration Act...requires courts to compel arbitration of the arbitrable claims."

The Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals ordered that Greenhaw's RICO claim to be settled in trial court.

When Greenhaw opened his commodities and securities accounts with Merrill Lynch, he signed a standard form in "agreeing to submit all disputes regarding accounts to arbitration." His subsequent suit alleged unauthorized trades in the commodities account.

Greenhaw began trading commodities with Merrill Lynch account executive Charles Scott and his wife, Margaret, in 1977.

Scott is "one of the largest" worldwide cotton brokers for Merrill Lynch, according to David Greenhaw. Greenhaw said the Merrill Lynch management "trusted" Scott and failed to supervise him. Scott, he said, made the unauthorized trades primarily to increase his commissions, which amount to about $300,000 a year.

Midland attorney Jim Boldrick, who represented Merrill Lynch in the 1985 trial, said Scott was "one of the very best commodities brokers in the world." Shortly after the 1985 trial, Boldrick said David Greenhaw must have been a "silver-tongued devil to persuade the jury about facts that didn't exist" and to win the case.

Amarillo boy killed

BORGER (AP) — A 3-year-old Amarillo boy on his way to watch his brother play in a soccer match was killed Saturday when he was struck by a van, police said.

Kenneth Reyes was crossing a street to reach a soccer field where his older brother was playing in a Borger-Amarillo boys-under-12 soccer game, said Borger Police Chief Mike Smith.

The boy was pronounced dead at Golden Plains Community Hospital in Borger at 2:40 p.m., Smith said. Reyes had traveled with his parents and brother Julio, 10, to the game in Borger, officials said.

The soccer game was stopped after the accident, but play later resumed. Julio Reyes went to the hospital with his coach and learned of his brother's death.

Pages and Prints Bookstore plans twice-monthly lunchtime programs

From Staff Reports

Pages and Prints Bookstore in Plaza Center has announced a new lunchtime diversion for Midlanders — noon book reviews and programs on a variety of subjects.

"It's a new idea whose time has come," said Patteann Daniel, owner of the store. "There are so many people in town who have an unusual specialty to share and who enjoy good book reviews. It just seems like a natural combination."

"It's the kind of thing I'd want to go do if I worked in an office or at home, a simple diversion to keep me stimulated," she added. "Since the programs are during lunch hour there is a chance to get away from the office and relax and learn."

This Thursday, Marilyn Culp, a local entrepreneur, will be featured at a limited seating box-lunch program on "Collecting Antique Jewelry."

On May 15, Jheri Fleet, a writer, will talk about "Writing to Sell: A Money Making Hobby or an Occupation."

On June 5, Chris Dikmen will discuss "Information Management or What a Computer Can Do For You."

On June 19, Launa Hüffines will be in Midland to talk about and autograph her new book, "Connecting." Due out from Harper and Row later this month, the book identifies 64 ways to connect with all the people in your life.

Program topics for the twice-monthly summer events will be announced later for July and August.

The public is invited to the programs which begin at noon. Seating is limited and pre-paid reservations are requested for the $5.25 box lunch. Each luncheon will be catered by Foods Fantastic.

Justified action

By now the question of if and when the United States would strike Libya in retaliation for, specifically, the most recent airline bombing over southern Greece and, generally, Moammar Khadafy's ill-concealed support of international terrorism could have been answered.

Events late in the week were rapidly leading toward such an outcome as Khadafy and Uncle Sam butted heads once more in what is rapidly becoming the status quo.

There is a perfectly natural tendency when such a confrontation is approaching to turn away, shake one's head sadly and ask the unanswerable question: "Why?" It all seems so futile. But before writing it off too quickly and relegating this latest example of weight-throwing to an inclination on Uncle Sam's part to rattle sabers, the situation should be scrutinized more closely.

Without a doubt, Khadafy has been begging a confrontation with the United States for years. Some of his chest-thumping can be written off as an obvious manifestation of his Napoleon Syndrome. He dresses outlandishly and boasts drastically enough to put a Texan to shame.

Although those excesses may be irritating, none would justify military action on the United States' part. Playing truant officer isn't a proper role for an international power.

On the other hand, intervening when another nation is openly and certifiably involved in something as deadly as international terrorism is precisely the situation in which the United States can and should wield some of its awesome military might. Americans abroad are being endangered, along with others. Some are being killed and maimed. Is that not justification enough for action when at least one of the "culprits" is identified?

Any number of authorities on terrorism have noted that Khadafy was utilizing Libya's resources to underwrite terrorism. Late this week, U.S. military officials said they had confirmed that Khadafy was behind the bombing of the TWA Boeing 727 over Greece early this month. Libya had been suspected of being heavily involved in other terroristic activities in the past.

Experts on terrorism say the pattern that has been seen throughout the world in the past few years substantiates that the assaults, the bombings, the senseless killings all are part of a carefully-orchestrated effort to create chaos and undermine the security of the civilized world. It's not war as civilized individuals recognize it, but it's war nonetheless.

Reagan is correct to go after Khadafy and any other terrorists in the interest of restoring peace and security.

Another View:

Following Georgia

A faculty investigation conducted for the regents of the University of Georgia has concluded that for a period of at least four years, there has been a pattern of favoritism in the admission and advancement of athletes at the university, and that university administrators, including the president, were aware of it.

The president, Fred C. Davison, who recently resigned, denied any involvement, but other university officials, among them the vice president for academic affairs (herself a former U.S. commissioner of education), said he was as aware of it as they were but that he wished to be in a posture of not knowing "until after the fact."

At first glance, all that seems to fall squarely into the category of "so what else is new?" Coming after a very public lawsuit in which a former University of Georgia teacher was awarded $2.5 million on charges that she had been fired for complaining about such favoritism, the report appears to be an especially obvious case of whatever is the opposite of gilding the lily. Yet, the investigation prompted by the suit is unusual, if not unique, not only at the University of Georgia, but anywhere in the American academic world. That's an appalling bit of information, but it makes an obvious suggestion. If Georgia can profitably launch such an inquiry after a scandal, why can't other institutions that engage in big-time sports conduct them from time to time before there's a scandal? Why not, indeed, make periodic self-reporting one of the NCAA's conditions of good standing for intercollegiate competition?

Few such inquiries will reveal the full truth of what's going on in any particular university. There are subtle ways of evading standards or, worse, of establishing programs open to all students that are so easy that anyone can survive. Still, it's hard to imagine a more effective way of giving the faculty some check on the most flagrant abuses.

In the Georgia case, there's no question that favors were requested and granted. Because of the large number of academically unqualified athletes who were admitted to the university, the report said, "the athletic department chose to fund directly the establishment of a Developmental Studies laboratory that was subsequently used as a route for an athlete to bypass the established academic standards" of the university. "What do you want us to do?" Davison was alleged to have asked. "Play high school football?"

The answer to that question is that if you can't find college players who can do college work, then better to play high school football than turn the whole university into a high school (or, just as likely, into a remedial school). If colleges want to hire athletes, maybe they should do so. But if they do, they should also stop pretending that Saturday's heroes are real students. Who'll be the first to follow Georgia's salutary, if belated, example?

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today's highlight in history:

On April 13, 1970, the astronauts aboard Apollo 13, four-fifths of the way to the moon, radioed Mission Control: "We've got a problem here." A tank containing liquid oxygen had burst, crippling the spacecraft and jeopardizing the astronauts' lives. The story ended happily four days later when the crew splashed down safely in the Pacific.

On this date:

In 1598, King Henry IV of France signed the Edict of Nantes, which granted rights to the Protestant Huguenots.

In 1743, Thomas Jefferson, the third president of the United States, was born in what is now Albemarle County, Virginia.

In 1870, the Metropolitan Museum of Art was founded in New York.

In 1961, the United Nations General Assembly voted to condemn apartheid, South Africa's policy of racial segregation.

In 1980, the Soviet Union condemned the decision by the U.S. Olympic Committee to boycott the Moscow Olympics, and accused the Carter administration of "unprecedented pressure and blackmail."

Today's birthdays: Former Minnesota Gov. Harold Stassen is 79. Atheist Madalyn Murray O'Hair is 67. Actor Howard Keel is 67. Actor Bradford Dillman is 56. Actor Lyle Waggoner is 51. Playwright Lanford Wilson is 49. Movie and TV composer Bill Conti is 44. Rock musician Jack Casady is 42. Actor Ricky Schroder is 16.

Reagan arms control theory has hopes

WASHINGTON — President Reagan is convinced that the Soviet Union will want to negotiate on arms control no matter how tough his administration's anti-Soviet words and actions become. And he has high hopes of achieving an arms-control treaty before he leaves office less than three years from now.

Jack Anderson

Reagan's critics are afraid he is deluding himself about Soviet intentions, and may have missed the chance for a solid arms treaty between the two superpowers. The White House has not picked up Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev's proposal for a summit meeting in Europe to negotiate a ban on nuclear tests — which some believe could have been a start toward at least a slowdown in the arms race.

Gorbachev continued the Soviets' 8-month-old moratorium on nuclear tests, even though the United States has conducted eight such tests during the Soviets' unilateral moratorium. The administration says that the tests are necessary to make sure the U.S. nuclear stockpile is reliable.

The president remains deeply suspicious of any olive branch Gorbachev holds out to him. When we asked Reagan recently if he thought he could "come home with an arms-control treaty of some kind before your presidency is over," the president replied:

"Let me say I'm hopeful that we can. And this does not mean the thing that we've done too much of in the past — believing that if, oh, we only held out our hand and smiled and were genteel that they would have a change of heart. They're not going to have a change of heart at all."

We've seen several classified White House reports to Congress that give the facts behind the president's wary view of Soviet intentions. The background against which Gorbachev made his testing moratorium was the Threshold Test Ban Treaty, which limited U.S. and Soviet nuclear tests to a 150-kiloton level. It was never ratified by the United States, but both sides agreed to abide by it. (The United States has not violated the treaty.)

The latest of the president's reports, classified Secret, charges that of approximately 190 underground nuclear explosions set off by the Soviets between March 31, 1976, and last Nov. 30, about 21 "had central value seismic yield estimates above 150 kilotons, the largest with a central value of 315 kt and nine others with central values of 200 kt or higher."

In response to these violations of the treaty, the secret Reagan report, dated Dec. 23, 1985, disclosed that the United States had made 18 "demarches" to the Soviets. A demarche is a formal communication between governments on an issue of concern. In this instance, a State Department linguist explained, the demarches would be tantamount to formal protests over the Soviet tests that were suspected of exceeding 150 kilotons.

Interestingly, there is a strong indication that Gorbachev has stopped the threshold violations in his effort to secure an arms-control treaty. The presidential report notes that of the nine Soviet nuclear tests conducted since late 1984, only one had a central value of more than 150 kilotons — and that was so ambiguous that no formal protest was filed.

"This event," the report explained, "which is thought to be the result of two simultaneous detonations, was conducted on June 15, 1985. It had a central value of 160 kt. No demarche was made to the Soviets on this occasion."

It was probably the secret indications of a serious Soviet desire for an arms treaty that led the president to explain to us his chosen alternative to wide-eyed treaty hopes that could spell appeasement.

"What we have to do is deal in hard fact realities," he said. "And right now the thing that gives me reason for some optimism is that it would be very much to their advantage now (to have a treaty)."

Reagan said he believed there are two main reasons for Soviet willingness to negotiate now. One was the military buildup during his administration, he said.

"The thing that I have difficulty making the Congress understand is that the Soviet Union in recent years had a one-way street," he said. "It was all epitomized in the cartoon of — when we started rearming — of two Russian generals, one saying to the other, 'I liked the arms race better when we were the only ones in it.' Now, what we have done is let them know they're not the only ones in it."

GEORGE F. WILL

Oh my! Another display of rightmindedness

WASHINGTON — On the count of three, campers, everybody sing: "We are the river of hope-That runs through the valley of fear...." A river of syrup is about to run through America's living rooms, ruining the rugs. It is, as you are sentenced to learn, the official song of "Hands Across America," another example of rightmindedness masquerading as moral action.

George F. Will

About six million people — 1,320 per mile — are supposed to shell out $10 apiece (more if they want the T-shirt) for the privilege of joining hands in a transcontinental chain on May 25. This is supposed to raise $100 million for "the hungry and homeless." That sum is equal to eight-tenths of one percent of one anti-poverty program (food stamps).

The spoilsport who provided that deflating figure is Mickey Kaus, a Los Angeles writer who says "Hands Across America" is another example (like Live Aid and Farm Aid and others) of "celebritics." That's a kind of non-politics that harnesses "the power of 'Entertainment Tonight' and the corporate tax deduction for worthy causes."

Coca-Cola, McDonald's, Citicorp and other corporations old enough to know better are supposed to pony up about $30 million to cover expenses. Madonna, no less, has blessed the project, so now the only problems are logistical, such as getting 1,128,400 people to line up across Arizona and New Mexico at mid-afternoon in May. Kaus calculates that will require the services of two of every three persons who live anywhere near the chain's route.

Kaus thinks celebritics express the idea that problems are the result of politicians' failures of will and that solutions result from consciousness-raising spectacles like "Hands." The organizers stress the aim of inducing "awareness." But at 4 p.m., May 25, when 12 million sweaty palms are being dried and people are dispersing, what momentum will "awareness" have imparted to what form of social betterment? Such manufactured awareness is evanescent. The normal, banal political processes so disdained by practitioners of celebritics is what matters.

Fortunately, another exercise of rightmindedness, the great peace parade, has petered out 3,115 miles short of its 3,235-mile goal. Otherwise May 25 — the day of the handholding — would have produced what Kaus calls "compassion gridlock." The peace march was supposed to send 5,000 "peace soldiers" from Los Angeles to Washington. Fewer than 1,000 made it 120 miles east of Los Angeles, then quit. Imagine, failure in spite of a paid staff of 113 and the support of Paul Newman and Barbra Streisand.

Such events are the equivalent of Easter parades for people who want to dress up their consciences and take them for a stroll so other people can see how pretty they are. This is not even sensitivity training for politicians; it is moral exhibitionism, and it is nothing new.

Irving Kristol, reviewing a new book about New York intellectuals, recalls the days in the 1930s and 1940s when the 50 or so thinkers loosely associated with Partisan Review would hotly dispute whether they should "support" the "bourgeois" governments of Britain and France against Nazi Germany. When the Soviet Union invaded Finland, these thinkers argued about whether, given that the Soviet Union was a deeply flawed workers' state but Finland was an unregenerate bourgeois state, they — these 50 thinkers, mind you — should "call upon" Finnish workers to welcome the Soviet army. Kristol says: "Having the 'right position' was what counted, not talking sense."

America has gone off the boil, so such events as "hands" are not billed as protests. Rather they are "affirmations" or "witnessings." Those words are designer labels designed to make "meaningful" the rightmindedness of "activists." "Activist" is an indicative word, because it suggests that the mere fact of activity, irrespective of consequences, is morally grave.

RUSSELL BAKER

NEW YORK — He was wearing a $500 jacket and a cashmere sweater that would have had "Big Bucks" written all over it if it hadn't been too highbrow to carry on like a T-shirt.

Russell Baker

He had just stepped out of a house that looked like about $3 million, though you couldn't tell from the front how big the swimming pool was or how many tennis courts it had.

With him came a dog that had been to one of the best dog finishing schools, as you could see from the blase way it conducted itself in the company of a $500 jacket. You could tell that the man's first name was Edmond and that he liked to be called Ed, but hated being called Eddie.

He seemed to be taking the pooch for a walk, but I knew he was going to start talking before he got very far. Probably about dog biscuits, I figured, or tick removers. When you see a man walking vigorously during the television commercial pauses these days it's a lead-pipe cinch he is going to start chewing your ear.

This is the legacy of Lee Iacocca. Ever since Iacocca became famous as a vigorous talking walker on TV, television barkers have all walked while they talk.

Ed talked about his money. I am nervous with people who talk about their money. They intend either to make you feel guilty for not lending them $20, or to depress you by letting you know they've got enough to buy and sell you five times over.

Ed belonged to the latter school. Having glimpsed his house, jacket, sweater and dog, you didn't need to be told he was rolling in mighty sweet clover, but Ed was the kind of man who tells you anyhow.

The worst of it was, he didn't look a day older than 23, and since his civilized wardrobe made it clear that he was not in the rock-star profession, I assumed Ed must have inherited his millions.

Well I was wrong, because right away he looked me straight in the eye and announced that once he had been dumb and poor because he paid a lot of his money in taxes. Now he had got smart and rich.

It seems he had hired an outfit in the tax-dodging business, which had shown him how to keep his money for himself instead of contributing some of it to help defend the country, make life less miserable for the afflicted and provide police protection for the luxurious community he infested.

Then he said something like, "What matters is not how much you make, you half-wit. It's how much you keep."

With that he strolled away and dropped an envelope in the mailbox. It was his tax return. Ed hadn't come out to walk his dog and talk tick remover. He had come out to mail his tax return and boast that he was home tax free.

I was stunned by this squalid spectacle of a deadbeat so shameless that he was willing to boast about being a rotten citizen, so stunned that I missed the name of the company that had helped him achieve such disgrace.

A few nights later, though, Ed and his uptown dog appeared again looking like several million dollars. Again Ed headed for the mailbox with the tax return that would break the president's poor heart. Again he leered at me.

"So, you poor sap, still boobing it up by the tube instead of huddling with experts who can show you how to evade your obligations to the country without breaking a single law, eh?"

"But Ed," I cried, "don't you feel like a rotten human being when you realize you haven't even contributed to the cost of stopping the elm blight in these incredibly beautiful trees gracing this fantastically lovely street you live on?"

"Wise up, creep," he said. "It's not how much you make. It's how much you keep, and I keep it all."

Again he was gone before I caught the name of the expert tax finaglers who had furnished him in cashmere and canine elegance.

Nights passed. No Ed. Perhaps he had learned shame. Maybe he had remembered something his poor dead mother told him years ago, I said to myself one night by the TV set, when, lo, who popped out of a $3 million house wearing a $500 jacket accompanied by a finishing school dog ... ?

"Sure I remember what the old lady told me," he said. " 'Sonny boy,' she said, 'don't ever let the bleeding hearts tell you there's anything wrong with beating the tax leeches out of every cent you can, as long as you keep it legal.' "

Yes, yes, I realized too late that those were the words any truly loving American mother would have whispered to her son with her final breath.

Next time Ed showed up I apologized for having thought of him as a cheap deadbeat. I had been a fool not to lay in plenty of depreciation and untaxable income, I confessed, and so had missed the secret of happiness. Could he guide me back to the right path?

"It's not how much you make," said Ed. "It's how much you keep."

Compromise rarely practiced art in modern society

Bill Modisett

Compromise is an acquired art.

Individuals are not born as compromisers. Ever tried to get a couple of squawling 2-year-olds to compromise their way out of a battle over a toy? That's a world-class recipe for disaster.

Society doesn't help much either. Almost every aspect of daily life teaches that life is a competition and people are in it to win, not to accept something less than victory. In the mind of most competitors, compromisers are something lower than fungus. Quiche-eaters, maybe. Definitely not steak-and-potatoes men.

But along the pothole-infested highway called life, there comes a time when it's somehow a little easier and less complicated to say "Well, I think this is a situation in which I could compromise, take less than I had hoped for, but still come out better than I might if I continue to press the point," and the delicate art of compromise sprouts wings.

Maybe.

Compromise occasionally falls flat. It's risky, for example, to compromise a decision on stopping at a stop sign. Particularly if an 18-wheeler is speeding past. It's far better in that instance to make a definite decision to do what the law books stipulate.

Still, there is value to a compromising nature. In fact there are any number of situations in which compromise is not only highly advisable, but about the only way of equitably resolving a dispute:

— Marital arguments.
— Jury deliberations.
— International conflicts

Yet for all its worth, compromise isn't easy by any stretch of the imagination. Compromise is difficult. It's much easier to say "No" than it is to talk about why you said no and try to justify that response.

If you've ever seen dogs compromise their way out of a fight, you can easily recognize the benefits of taking that tact in most situations involving conflict. It works, is less painful and gives one the opportunity to sit down in the shade somewhere to lick the wounds.

The beauty of compromise is that, in most situations, it allows a solution to be reached that although not providing the maximum benefit to all parties involved, at least gives a way out of a feud. Compromise makes a solution possible.

Norman Vincent Peale built a reputation around "Positive Thinking." While I never was a steadfast reader of Peale's writings, I recognize and admit wholeheartedly that there is validity to the belief that one can improve a situation by approaching it with a positive attitude.

That's was the reasoning, no doubt, behind Thursday's rally at Midland Center when a large gathering of Midlanders said in a big way: "Midland, we love ya and we'll stick with you through thick and thin, good times and bad!"

And why not? Haven't there been rough times in Midland before? And hasn't the community — not the streets and brick buildings but the living, breathing people — always survived and emerged after the difficult period even stronger than before?

I noticed during the speeches that a lot of the people in attendance were more than a little amused-embarrassed. I was, too, frankly. The reason, I believe, is because it's more difficult to be positive than it is to be negative. It demands more of a person's psyche to keep thinking positive thoughts than to wallow in self pity. All sugary-sweetness can be a little sickening, but a total diet of lemon juice is a real bummer.

The purpose of the rally was not to pass off everything in the Permian Basin as sugary-sweet. It's not. Rather, the purpose was to change our attitudes so that we would look at our problems in a positive manner.

When I walked away from Midland Center, I noticed that a lot of people were smiling, despite themselves. Obviously they were feeling good.

Folks, that's the power of positive thinking. Think about it.

Sanctuary activists have political motivations

After reading the April 6th stories concerning the sanctuary movement trial, it is clear that those who participate in or support the movement are not the religious activists they purport to be, but merely use the cloak of religion to willingly violate our immigration laws.

Allegedly innocent aliens, fleeing from their country, do not necessarily have a legal right under U.S. law to gain asylum. In fact, the law makes it quite clear that a generalized condition of violence in one's home country does not entitle him to asylum. Rather, it must be proven that the individual has a "well founded fear of persecution." Admittedly, an individual may have trouble supporting his case. On the other hand, we cannot permit people to become self-appointed refugees or anyone could invent a story of persecution. This condition exists in several West European countries as well as the U.S. with the resulting huge increase in false asylum claims.

One of the newspaper stories mentions the organizations of Clergy and Laity Concerned and the American Friends Service Committee as being involved with sanctuary. What about them? The CLC was formed during the Vietnam War and is today the principal left-wing network among U.S. churches. The AFSC was originated many years ago by the Quakers as a pacifist group. It is now closely affiliated with and shares the views of the World Peace Council, which was formed in the 1940s and functions as a Soviet front now as it did then.

When the false veil of holy secrecy is lifted from the sanctuary movement, what we see is not a spontaneous outpouring of Christian concern for refugees. Rather, it is a far left political group running a campaign against the U.S. government.

Stupid controlled media still condemns Arabs

While federal and state were raking in billions in taxes from high cost of oil, the media never missed a chance to dehumanize Arabs whose only resource is oil which Israel would like to take over with U.S. arms.

Now that England and Norway have flooded the market with oil and knocked the bottom out of oil prices and government revenue, we continue to hear the stupid controlled media condemn the Arabs.

The bottom line is: We, the people, either pay in higher prices or make up the loss in government revenue with higher taxes. Thanks to Israel, England and Norway!

Midland homes on parade for groups

By GEORGIANA BURNETT

Georgiana Burnett, a resident of Midland the past six years, is president of Midland Junior Woman's Club. She came to Midland from Richardson.

Excitement is in the air as the 17th Annual Parade of Homes draws near. Dazzling homes with various architectural designs will open their doors for parade-goers as Midland Junior Woman's Club prepares for this special event on April 27 from 1:30 to 5:30 p.m.

Past Parade of Homes have brought enjoyment to countless residents while benefiting the community with funds for numerous worthy organizations. Midlanders have offered this project tremendous support in the past and JWC is anticipating an equally strong response this year.

The proceeds for this year's parade will benefit four non-profit community service organizations: Hearthstone, Permian Basin Center for Battered Women and Their Children, Rape Crisis Center's Educational Division and Palmer Drug Abuse Program.

Hearthstone is a child care facility which provides intermediate term care for children (ages 0-17) experiencing a family-related crisis. During this period of care, Hearthstone provides help in the orderly transition of each child back to his home or to a long-term care program which will best meet the child's needs.

Hearthstone was opened Jan. 21, 1986, to house up to 12 individuals who need temporary care outside their own home due to a family breakdown, abandonment, abuse, neglect or other family-related crisis. As a cooperative effort between civic and church organizations, Hearthstone is a beautiful source of hope for countless youth.

Permian Basin Center for Battered Women and Their Children is a shelter for victims of domestic violence. Last month the center aided 61 women and children who had nowhere else to go. This Midland shelter for physically and emotionally abused women and their children meets the victims' fundamental needs and provides counseling and referrals. In 1985 the center served over 600 women and their children. The need for such a center continues to rise.

The Rape Crisis Center is a volunteer group offering counseling for sexual assault victims and their families. Of the 85 victims seen by the center in 1985, 50 were under the age of 17. Because of this alarming statistic, JWC has targeted its contribution this year for the support of carefully developed film programs designed to educate children in relevant preventive measures.

Palmer Drug Abuse Program, first established in Midland through the efforts of JWC, serves adolescents and their families in dealing with substance abuse problems. The program emphasizes early intervention for drug and alcohol abuse prevention. JWC is earmarking its contribution for PDAP's "Younger Group." Last year, PDAP provided counseling and ongoing support to 125 10- to 14-year-olds in the "Younger Group."

Junior Woman's Club, a group of 65 concerned and committed young women, promotes friendship, fellowship, and service through charitable and educational programs and projects. Each member is now selling Parade of Homes tickets for $7.50 each. JWC is proud and eager to support these four fine Midland facilities that touch so many lives.

JWC is grateful to the following homeowners for opening their exquisite homes for this '86 Parade: Mr. and Mrs. Glen J. Ellis, 5501 N. A #28 (Saddle Club Lakes); Mr. and Mrs. Jack D. Hightower, 2007 Stanolind (Warwick); Mrs. Jayne Kirk and Mr. and Mrs. Randal M. Kirk, #2 Edinburgh (Saddle Club Ranch Estates); and Mr. Cowden Oliver, 15 Hialeah (Saddle Club North).

On Sunday, April 26, treat yourself and treat your community; bring your 1986 Parade of Homes ticket and enjoy an impressive array of beautiful homes while helping to support four worthwhile community services.

Tickets are available only on an advance sale basis from any JWC member. For ticket information, please call: 689-8314, 683-6406 or 699-6696.

Readers' views on: School boundaries

MISD trustees must plan for city's growth

A couple of recent letters to the editor have criticized the school trustees for planning ahead for high school boundary changes. The writers all agree that the high schools should be equal, but they say that the future is too uncertain to be making plans. Some want to wait six months, others prefer two years, but the common theme in all of them is 'Dont' plan, just wait.'

The truth is, sound planning has never been more needed than it is right now. In this connection we believe there are three very important facts to remember.

1) The administration's skill at projecting student populations over extended periods has proven uncanny. They are very good at this kind of planning. Even when the district has had greater gains or losses in student populations than projected, the gains and losses have nevertheless been substantially proportional as between the high schools.

2) Since the 1940s our town has never had a period of predictable, stable population. If the trustees were to limit their planning to only those times when we can be sure what the future holds (which, in reality, is never) they would be precluded from all planning. They wisely recognize that they must always do the best planning they can, with the best figures and best future projections that an experienced administration can provide them. Then if projections turn out not to be proportionally accurate they can make new changes when and where they are needed, and move on. It boils down to this: the school board either makes plans based on its experience and projections or it makes no plans at all.

3) A salient fact to remember is that the proposed boundary changes will not affect any present junior high or high school students, but only those who are now in the 6th grade or below. If the school board were to delay the indicated changes, it would then be necessary to transfer students already in secondary schools.

In years past, when boundary changes were required in order to equalize high schools, parents from all areas of the district have urged the board to make the changes based on long range planning, so as to minimize whatever impact the changes may have on the students and parents who will ultimately be affected.

To have equal high schools the board must make changes whenever the facts and figures indicate a need for them. And if the future proves that a change has over-corrected for the problem, that will be the time to make a compensating change to keep us on a course of genuine equality.

The school trustees are to be congratulated and admired for the wisdom of their policy, and for their courage in insisting that they will not abandon it.

MISD board deserves thanks for commitment

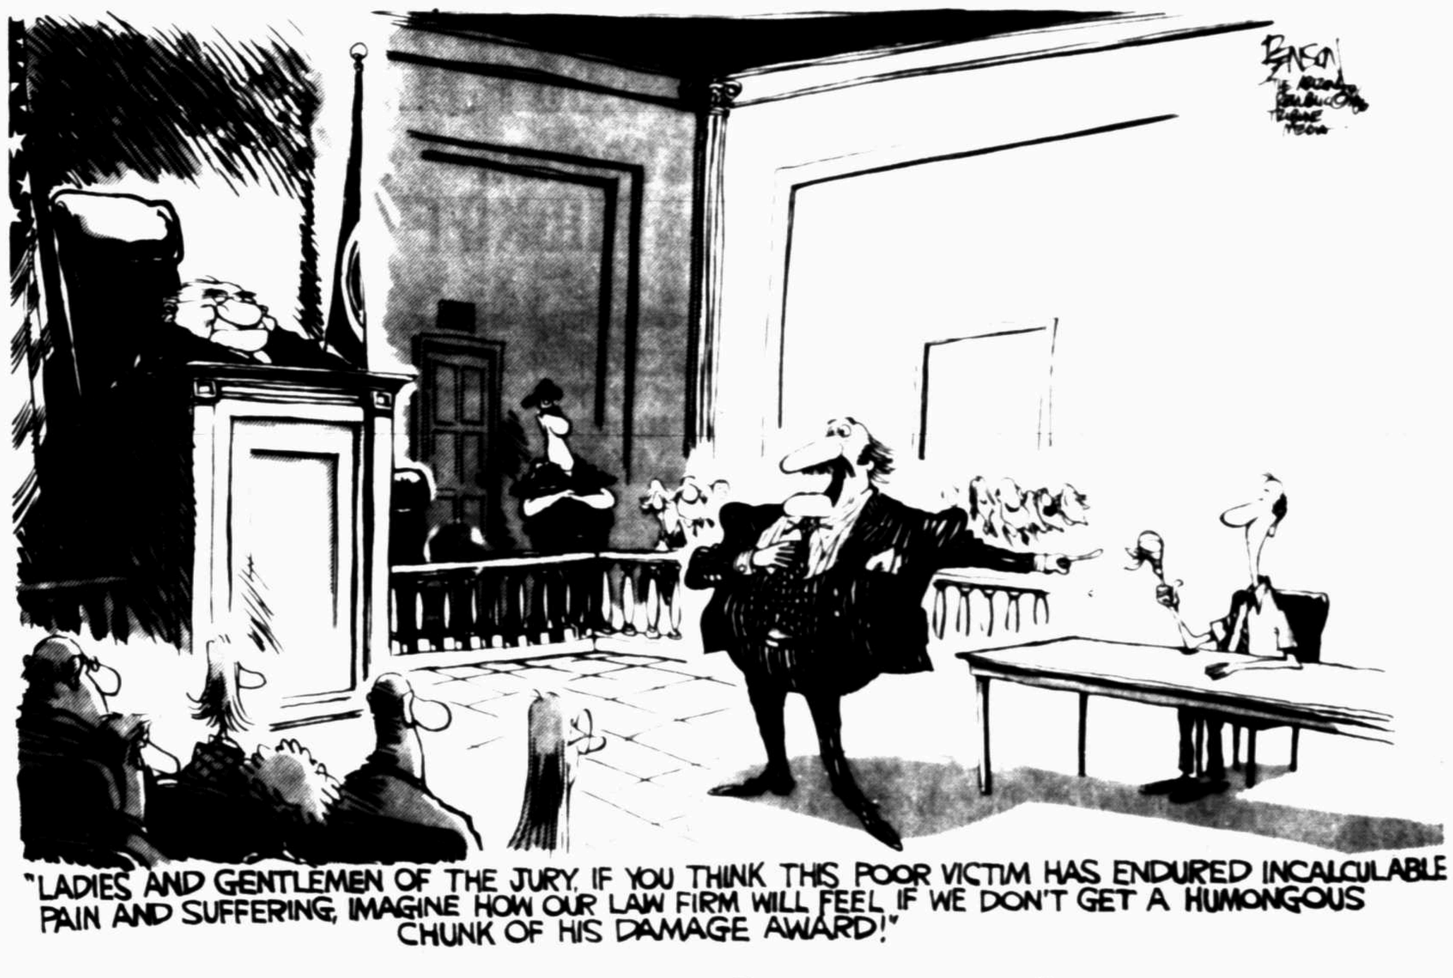

I'm writing to thank the school trustees for their commitment to equal schools and to encourage them to make that goal a reality at the earliest possible date. A recent letter to the editor encouraged delay saying, 'the disparity in numbers that is predicted by the school boards will not occur for several more years, we surely have time to wait six months to make sure the board's projections are based on realistic numbers.'

I don't know where that writer gets her information but the information I've seen shows several inequities already exist in minority enrollment and rural enrollment and discrepancies are expected to increase.

There's no time to wait and, more important, there's no reason. MISD's enrollment projections have been amazingly accurate for 20 years of economic ups and downs. Please act now.

Thanks to the board for their service to our community and children. Their time and effort are truly appreciated.

Ortega's 'red regime' exposes its true Communist nature

Editor-in-Chief, The Hearst Newspapers

Hearst

NEW YORK — With Nicaragua's torpedoing of the Contadora peace process this week, President Daniel Ortega's red regime was exposed for what it is — a Communist stooge government like the Soviet satellite ones in Europe and Cuba.

Rejection of the Contadora group's proposal for a negotiated settlement of the civil war in Nicaragua and a peace treaty covering all of Central America clearly shows that Managua's red ruler is determined to consolidate his power and make that country a bastion of Soviet-Cuban imperialism in the Caribbean.

dent Ortega, not President Reagan, who is adamantly opposed to negotiations for a peaceful settlement that could lead to the restoration of a democratic political system in Nicaragua.

I don't mean to be an "I told you so," but the fact is I didn't expect the Nicaraguan leader to accept any plan that called for the restoration of democracy in that country. No where in the world has a Communist government ever voluntarily or by agreement with anyone else let the people of a country under its control determine their own political destiny.

It should also be clear that the fundamental cause of the crisis in Central America is not poverty and injustice, as critics of our president's policy contend. It is the expansionist nature of Managua's Marxist regime supported by the Soviet Union and its Cuban puppet, Fidel Castro.

Appeasement-minded Americans have echoed the Communist lie that President Reagan has opposed both the Contadora peace effort and direct U.S. negotiations with Ortega.

The president's position is that he will authorize direct discussions with the Ortega regime if the latter starts a dialogue with the rebel leaders for restoration of a democratic system. For two years, Nicaragua's 10 Roman Catholic bishops have been calling for such a dialogue. They have been accused of treason for doing so.

Nevertheless, naive or politically-motivated American liberals continue to blame the president for lack of progress in peace efforts. Wayne S. Smith, former head of the U.S. Interests Mission in Cuba, wrote in the New York Times recently that "only the Administration's intransigence is blocking a Contadora agreement." He accused the Reagan administration of "arrogantly blocking the diplomatic initiatives" of the Contadora group led by Colombia, Mexico, Panama and Venezuela.

Now, let me report to you what the Contadora negotiators had to say early this week about the breakdown of the talks in Panama with Nicaraguan Foreign Minister Miguel d'Escoto.

"Nicaragua has refused to sign a document that all the rest agreed on," Salvadoran Foreign Minister Rodolfo Castillo Claramount said. "There is nothing left to discuss." Another Contadora official described the Nicaraguan delegation as "extremely intransigent."

This was the second time the Ortega government rejected a Contadora draft treaty that called for political reconciliation in Central America, the formation of democratic governments, an end to foreign military influence and support for subversion, and a limit on the military forces in each Central American country.

In rejecting any reconciliation discussions with leaders of the Contra Freedom Fighters, the Nicaraguan communist negotiators in Panama said they would not sign the Contadora treaty unless the U.S. ceased all aid, including humanitarian, to the Contras. They refused to make any commitment about stopping Nicaraguan support for communist guerrillas in El Salvador and elsewhere in Latin America, or reducing the size of their military forces — now the largest in the history of any Central American nation.

How much longer will it take for the Democratic leaders in Congress to recognize that the Ortega regime has no intention of negotiating a political settlement in Nicaragua or a peace treaty for all of Central America unless much stronger military pressure is brought against it? How much longer will it take for them to realize that if we do not help the Freedom Fighters maintain enough pressure to induce Ortega to negotiate a peace settlement, the day will surely come when American troops will have to be sent there to end a Soviet-Cuban-Nicaraguan bloc threat to the security of Central America and our own country?

At his nationally televised press conference Wednesday night, President Reagan highlighted the tactics of terrorism practiced by Libyan Moammar Khadafy, who he described as "The Mad Dog of the Middle East." He pointedly refused to be drawn into whether units of the Sixth Fleet steaming toward Libya will respond in answer to the terrorist bombing of a disco in West Germany last week where one GI was killed and another 50 were injured.

He also told the nation that he was urging bipartisan approval by the House of Representatives next Tuesday of the $100 million aid package he has proposed for the Contras.

House Speaker Tip O'Neill, who also returned Wednesday from a fact finding(?) mission to Central America, insists that he will oppose the aid package to the Contras. In my view, Speaker O'Neill has a closed mind and an open mouth, exactly the reverse of what a fact finder should have.

Three-day folk festival planned to commemorate Sesquicentennial

DALLAS (AP) — A three-day folk festival over the Memorial Day weekend could attract about 220,000 people in a celebration of Texas' heritage with music, arts, crafts and a rodeo, officials said.

The Central Dallas Association is sponsoring the Dallas Folk Festival on May 23-25. Officials said the festival could be the biggest event ever held downtown.

The nonprofit merchants' association and the city of Dallas planned the festival to commemorate Texas' Sesquicentennial. Officials said all costs for the event will be covered by private donations.

Festival spokeswoman Cindy Casey said the event, patterned after the National Folk Festival held annually in Washington, D.C., will feature the largest display ever of the state's regional cultures in a two square-block area around City Hall.

"The whole reason for the folk festival is to allow people to educate themselves about Texas and its heritage," said Ms. Casey. "When people typically think of Texas, they think of the cowboy and Indian. They don't think of our diverse cultural backgrounds. We hope to educate them."

She said artists, craftsmen and musicians from the state's five general "cultural regions" will show their work. The regions are the Gulf Coast, Big Bend and East, West and North Texas.

Officials said Texas blacks, Czechs, Jews, Hispanics and the American cowboy and Indian will be represented at the festival displays.

"The festival brings together regional traditions that have been carried on by specific families for generations," said Alan Govenar, the festival's folkloric director.

Excerpts will be numbered one through six. Each week's official entry form will be published Monday, Tuesday, and Thursday in the Midland Reporter-Telegram. The weekly first prize will be awarded to the entrant with the most or all (6) TV shows correctly identified. In the case that more than one entrant has all the shows correctly identified a drawing will be held. 2nd and 3rd will be awarded to the two entrants with the most correct answers respectively. Again in the case more than one entrant having identified all (6) TV shows, a drawing will be held to determine 2nd and 3rd place winners.

The correct answer and the theme song itself along with the two excerpts will be played back twice on A.M. 1510 KMND Saturday morning between 6:00 A.M. and noon. Answers will also be published in Sunday's Midland Reporter Telegram. Weekly winners will be announced each Wednesday afternoon by A.M. 1510 KMND and in the Midland Reporter-Telegram.

Our buyers select fresh meat with good confirmation and muscle tone so that you are guaranteed good taste. Beef reaches its peak flavor and tenderness when it is carefully aged, and only then do we complete the final cuts and put it in the meat case. Our butchers leave in just the right amount of marbling (fat) in beef, so that it bastes itself while cooking. Our fresh pork and lamb cuts are lean and succulent. When you buy meat at Bag & Save you can rely on its freshness, quality and flavor.

BATHROOM REFLECTIONS

Wall coverings with a metallic background are particulary effective in a bathroom. In addition to a hint of glamour and luxury, they introduce a sense of spaciousness because of their reflective qualities. The most popular metallic backgrounds are silver, gold and copper. The pattern usually is in another color. Metallic blues, reds, greens and yellows also are available. To expand the feeling of space, and for coordination, carry the wall covering up onto the ceiling. Use it to line the inside of the door as well. If the wall covering selected has a matching fabric, consider using it to make tie-back draperies for the bath. They should be hung at ceiling level and allowed to fall to the floor.

We'll help you decorate your home with window treatments at WINDOW DECOR, 30 West INDUSTRIAL Loop, 685-0875. Call for a free in-home consultation. Open: 8 a.m.-4:30 p.m. Mon.-Fri. and by appointment.

New signs should make it easier for campus vistitors

By H. A. TUCK

New identification signs have been installed at the entrance to each parking lot on campus to aid visitors. A large signboard will be placed at the Garfield entrance showing which direction to drive for each of the campus buildings. The signs, along with large names on each building that have been in place for several years, should make it easier for visitors to find their way around.

MC basketball coach Jerry Stone, along with Chaparral sophomores Ricky Grace and Eddie Frazier, are participating Friday in the Region V-Region XIV All-Star game in Waco. Stone will be coaching the Region V team that includes both Grace and Frazier. NJCAA championship coach Ronny Arrow of San Jacinto is coaching the Region XIV team. The three from Midland had a great day last Sunday in the Texas-USA Junior College All-Star game at Chaparral Center. Ricky was named the game's Most Valuable Player, while Eddie delighted spectators with his rebounding and his shot-blocking. Stone's Texas All-Stars won 112-102 over the USA All-Stars in a game that was a crowd-pleaser and featured the first local use of the planned three-point shot line. Congratulations are due the Midland Jaycees, sponsors, and all who helped make the event a great success! The Jaycees already are planning to seek NJCAA approval for the game next year.

RE-LISTING YOUR HOUSE

The listing agreement with your real estate agent is about to expire and the house has not sold. What to do? Should you re-list with the agent? Change agents? Change the type of listing? This is the time to consider not only these, but other questions even more fundamental to sale prospects.

Market conditions. Has the real estate market in your area been stable during the listing period, or has it been soft with slow sales, been affected by a recession or by extraordinary unemployment?

House price. Is your house realistically priced? Compare the price with comparable property sales and in relation to the region's economic climate.

Property condition. Consider the price in relation to age of the house, states of repair and upkeep of house and grounds.

Dyslexia. It's a word most people don't understand. But, if your child is one the millions who suffer from dyslexia, you understand the pain and frustration this disability can cause.

You know your child isn't lazy . . . stupid . . . or disobedient, as many have said. Although the strict definition of dyslexia is "a disturbance of the ability to read," you realize that it affects every aspect of your child's life.

Dyslexics find reading almost impossible

Aside from difficulty with reading and composition, your child shies away from sports involving eye/hand coordination. He has trouble following directions and is often clumsy and insecure. These are just a few of the symptoms that can make the life of a dyslexic child confusing and miserable.

Now, a special Dyslexia Screening Clinic, affiliated with Dyslexia Centers of America, offers you and your child hope for a normal life.

Sponsored by Boyd Chiropractic Clinics of Midland, who have served the health care needs of West Texans for over 40 years, the clinic will feature Dr. Carl A. Ferreri, a world renowned expert in the treatment of dyslexia.

A doctor of chiropractic, Dr Ferreri has practiced for 29 years and has developed a highly effective method for treating basic learning dysfunctions. During the Clinic, Dr. Ferreri will instruct other professionals in his treatment methods which involve no drugs or anesthesia. The treatment, which centers around adjustments of the spinal and cranial structures, along with kinesiological and muscular balancing, has brought about a marked improvement in a majority of cases.

Call 684-5436 to schedule an appointment for your child's free screening and examination. The initial meeting determines whether your child will benefit from the procedure. In most cases, a correction is performed in conjunction with the free exam. If your child is diagnosed as receptive to future care, a reasonable one-time fee will cover all exams and treatments related to dyslexia. Treatment is covered by insurance in most cases.

For convenience and accessibility, the Clinic will be held at the Holiday Inn — Country Villa in Midland. Appointments may be scheduled Monday through Friday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Permian defeats Lee, 9-8

By ERIC SCHURER
Sports Writer

ODESSA—Permian's baseball Panthers showed Midland Lee just whey they are competing for a playoff spot in District 4-5A. They hit the cover off the ball and they don't give up easily.

The Panthers collected 14 hits in their 9-8 decision over the Rebels, and each time Lee crawled back into the game, Permian bashed out a few more runs to rebuild its lead.

Lee came back from deficits of one and three runs, and nearly came back from four down in the final inning. Instead, the potential tying run was caught in a rundown between second and third for the final out as a pair of Rebel runners crossed the plate after a throwing error by Rich Fletcher.

"It's too bad we had some bad baserunning there in the final inning, we kind of had them going," Johnson said. "It certainly wasn't our only mistake of the ballgame, but it was a big one because it ended the game."

Even with Lee foiling its own rally, Permian coach Jimmy Davis bristled at the thought that luck played a part of the Panther win.

"I think we beat their tails off, I don't think we got away with anything," Davis said. "People haven't given this team the credit they deserve all season. They say we're lucky to win, but we've worked hard for the wins we've gotten. They deserve everything they've got so far.

"WE'VE GOT Cooper right here on Tuesday. They're not awesome. I think they're going to lose another game besides us before it's all over.

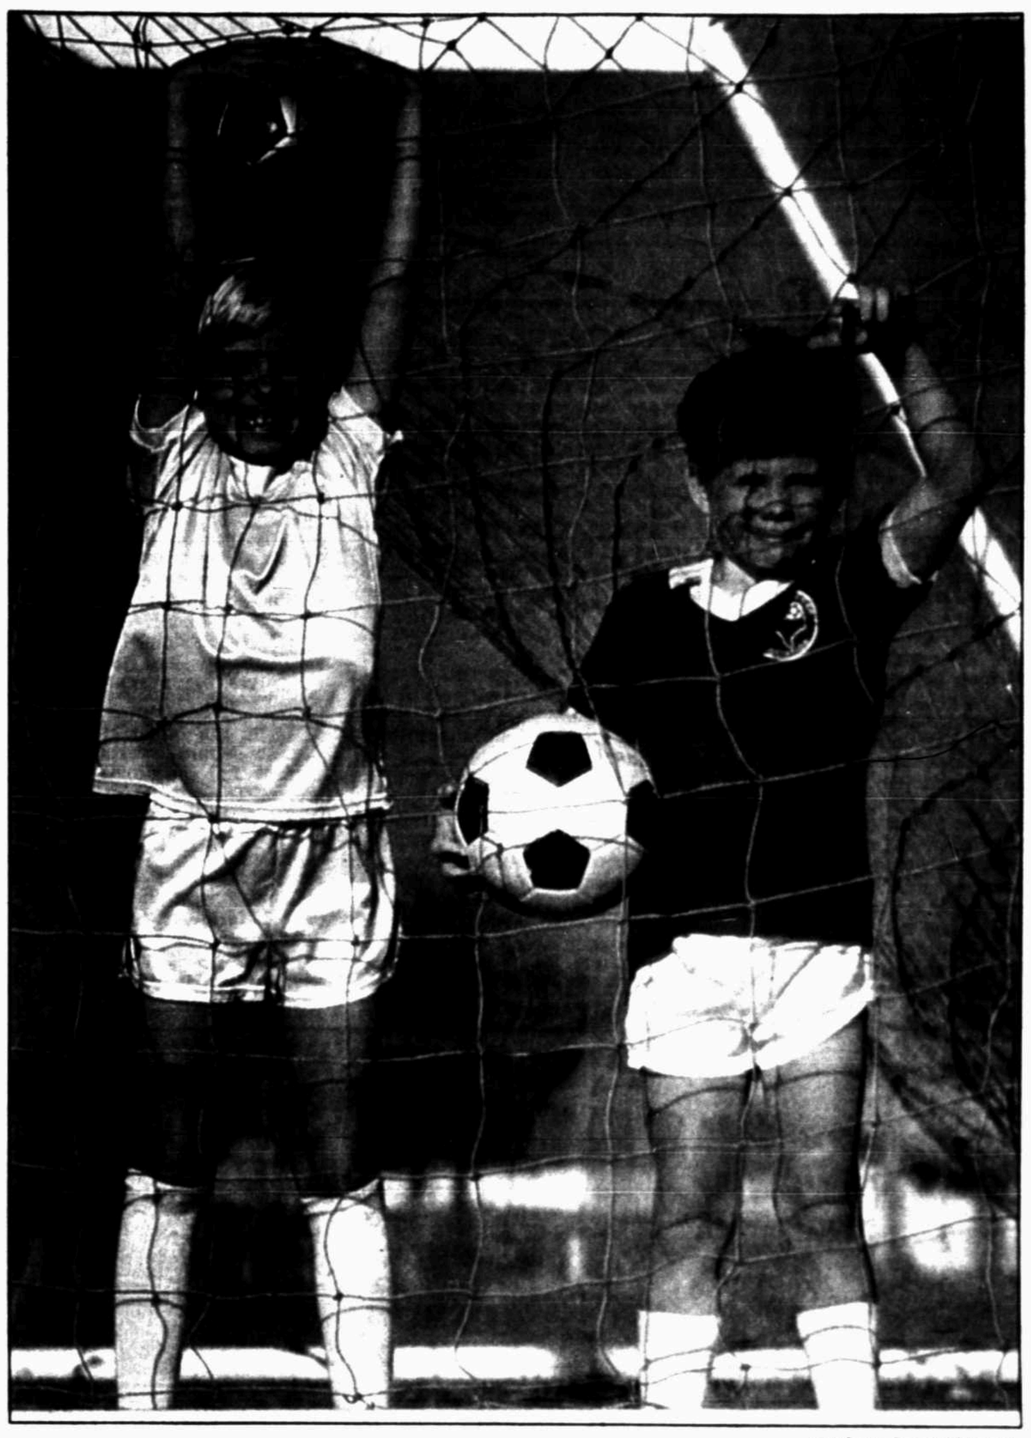

"We haven't peaked yet either. We're planning on being there at the end. Our goal is to win the district championship it was from the day we were picked to finish fifth or sixth in the district."

Whatever, Permian remained in a tie with Midland High, an 8-5 winner over Odessa High Saturday, for second place in the district behind Abilene Cooper. Both Permian and MHS are 7-3, Cooper is 8-2. Lee fell further back in the race at 4-6.

It was five Permian errors that helped the Rebs stay in the game all afternoon, however, because Permian starter Brad Cornett had the Lee hitters lunging and off balance most of the day.

Cornett, 3-0 in district, struck out seven and walked just two, in going 6 ⅓ innings for the win. The junior righthander had Lee off balance and lunging at his big breaking ball until tiring in the seventh. Larry Hill came on in the seventh to earn his first save of the season.

By TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

If you are looking for profiles in courage, start with Kathy Moran and Brian Smith, but if you want an explanation, don't ask them. They are too young and innocent, perhaps thankfully, to explain.

For the Midland youngsters it's enough that they are playing in the Midland Soccer Association's program. That may not sound like much. They say some 1,500 or so youngsters are participating in the MSA, but what Kathy and Brian have overcome to do it makes them something special.

Kathy, now seven, the daughter of Rog and Betty Jean Moran, was diagnosed as having a brain tumor in May 1984. "Swelling was causing excruciating headaches," relates Kathy's mother, "It was diagnosed as an emergency situation."

Lee, MHS win Tall City titles

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

The team titles went to San Angelo, Midland Lee and Midland High Saturday at the Tall City Relays at Memorial Stadium, but there was enough head scratching left to keep next week's District 4-5A meet a total mystery.

The Lee girls scored an amazing 134 points to defeat a powerful Odessa Permian team by a margin of four points. San Angelo's boys established themselves as the District 4-5A favorite with a 123-113 margin over Lee, but the Bobcats won only two events. Midland High's victory came in the junior varsity division where the Bullpups scored 124-98 knockout over Odessa High.

But it was the head scratching that was turning heads. Take a look at this:

— Lee's Quintus Hampton, who has been unchallenged in the 300 hurdles this year, had to take an ACT test and missed the hurdle qualifying. But he got there in time for the 200 meters and ended up winning the event in 21.49. He had never run the 200 before.

— Lee's Mike Garza was a noticeable dropout in the 3200 run, an event he is unbeaten in. He showed up in the 800 meters and ran a meet record time of 1:56.31, maybe ending forever his flirtation with the 3200.

— Midland High's Ethel Edwards forgets to put on her regular running spikes in the 800 relay, but she brings MHS from third to first in her leg and then goes on to win the 200 with a 24.59, breaking her own Tall City record and runs the anchor on MHS' winning 1600 relay.

— Midland High's Anthony Adkison has taken a lot of flak from track observers for his 10.3 wind aided 100 in Lubbock, but won in almost perfect weather with a 10.38, beating Abilene High's Erik Petty, who defeated Adkison a few weeks ago.

— Midland High's sprint relay team runs a record 41.29, over seven tenths better than they have run this year, probably causing Odessa Permian to take notice even though the Panthers weren't in this meet.

— And Lee's victory over Permian in the girls division has to qualify as a head scratcher since Lee is shallow on numbers.

— Lee's 1600 relay team sets a record 3:16.52, but had to come from behind on the final lap with Brad Cooper to beat Midland High, a team that also broke the old record with a season best 3:17.49.

IN SHORT, it was quite a day.

Garza made no bones that he likes the idea of dropping the 3200 for the 800. "It's a lot easier. I can tell you that. And the 1:56 should rank me. I think I would have a much better chance on the state level in the 800 than the 3200."

Hampton was all smiles after his 200 stint. "I like this race, but I'm not giving up the hurdles and the two events are back-to-back. I could drop out of the sprint relay and run in the 200, but those events are just too close together. Besides, I still feel like the relay team can win if we get the handoffs down."

Lee coach Eddie Wolski said, "I think you might see Garza in the 800 next week, but I don't know what we will do with Quintus. I really wish the hurdles and 200 weren't back-to-back. I do know what I would do then. I tell you one thing, those two kids are something else."

MHS coach Johnny Williams was pleased to see Adkison's 10.38. "I guess his 10.3 is legitimate. Anthony has been consistent for us all year and that is his greatest asset. You can depend on a good time from him. And gosh, I'm happy with the relays. I'd like to duplicate those times and go with them."

Lee won the girls division with a big assist from Roz Eaden. Eaden scored a meet high 32 points by winning both the long jump (16-7½) and triple jump (35-11¾). She was also fourth in the high jump, fourth in the 100 and scored four points with a leg on Lee's second place sprint relay team.

"I won the long jump and triple jump, but I really didn't do very well. I didn't have my steps down," noted Eaden. "I'm really pleased with the 100 because I didn't even know I was going to run in it until I came to the track."

Lee also got a 1-2 sweep in the 100 hurdles with Tami Woodberry (15.02) and Piette Mayfield (15.73) and a second from Tangi Carter in the 100 (12.20).

"I can't complain one iota about the way our girls performed," said Lee girls track coach Janice Baulch. "It was just a matter if we could hang on at the end. We didn't have any distance runners and Permian has a strong 1600 relay team."

MHS, scoring 60 of its 87 points on first place finishes, also got a first place from Chandra Govan in the shot put with a season best 37-4¾, beating the strong Julie Blavier of Permian. Amy Cumings had two second place finishes in the high jump and triple jump and ran on both winning relay teams.

"We haven't won in the relays this year, so this was especially pleasing for us. Everyone knocked seconds off their times, including me," said Faye Daugherty, who also ran on both winning relay teams.

Edwards scored 20 points for the MHS girls. "I did forget my shoes in the relay and I want a 23-flat in the 200. But other than that, I'm pleased with where I'm at this season," said Edwards, who was a state qualifier in the 200 as a sophomore last year.

Shaky Bulldogs survive Odessa

By BOB BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

The Midland High Bulldogs needed a victory Saturday over Odessa High to remain in a tie for second place in the District 4-5A standings. They got it, but for awhile things were looking shakey.

The Bronchos opened with solo runs in the third and fourth innings to take a 2-0 lead and held the same score through the top of the fifth inning when the Bulldogs finally got things untracked.

With one gone, Eric Boyt got things started when he reached on Junior Valenzuela's throwing error. Tommy Yorkman followed with a walk, Jim Werner an RBI single, Kenny De La Garza a walk and Jaime Salazar a two-RBI single to end the pitching stint of Rodney Roman.

Anthony Deande greeted reliever Shane Lunceford with an RBI single to right for a 4-2 lead before the Bronchos could get out of the inning.

Even though the Bronchos are the worst hitting team in the district and the Bulldogs the best pitching, the scoring wasn't over. OHS knocked Bulldog starter Ricky Castaneda off the mound in the top of the sixth when Herbie Ramos blasted his third home run of the season over the left field fence.

Fred Mendoza followed with a walk and, one out later, scored on Chris Henson's single up the middle to send Castaneda to third base, Robert Malacara to shortstop and De La Garza to the mound.

Greg Norman seizes lead

By BOB GREEN

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — Greg Norman wrested the lead from Seve Ballesteros on Saturday and the finest round in this history of this old event helped turn the 50th Masters golf tournament into an international showcase.

Nick Price of South Africa took advantage of the absence of winds and slower, softer greens to compile a 9-under-par 63, a course record on Augusta National, and move to within one stroke of the top spot after three rounds of play.

Norman, a hawk-faced Australian with sun-bleached hair, moved in front with a 68 that put him through 54 holes at 210, six under par and one in front of the field going into Sunday's final round.

His challengers over the last 18 holes of the chase for the famed green jacket are primarily foreign, with Americans on the outside looking in.

Masters

— Ballesteros, the son of a Spanish peasant and arguably the finest player in the world today. The second-round leader, he slipped to a par 72 with a bogey-bogey finish on Saturday and is one back at 211.

— Price, a former Rhodesian airman who scored 10 birdies in breaking the Augusta National scoring record of 64 set in 1940 by Lloyd Mangrum and since tied five times. He's at 211, one off the pace.

— Donnie Hammond, a one-time gallery guard at this tournament and the only American in the top five. Hammond, who scored his first pro victory earlier this season, shot a 67 and also was at 211.

— Bernhard Langer, a former caddy from Augsburg, West Germany, the defending title-holder. He had a third-round 69 to join the group at 211.

The group at 212, two strokes back, included Tom Kite and Tom Watson and still another foreign star, Tommy Nakajima of Japan.

Kite and Watson, playing together before a massive, shouting gallery, each had 68s and Nakajima managed a 71.

Not quite out of it at four strokes back, but with a large number of players in front of him, was Jack Nicklaus, the 46-year-old Golden Bear who won this title five times.

"Usually, it's not how many shots behind you are, it's how many players are in front of you," Nicklaus said after a 69 that lifted him to 214.

"I assume I'm in it," he said.

"They did something to the greens, watered them or something. They were softer and you could take a run at the putts," Nicklaus said.

But it didn't help Bill Kratzert, the journeyman who had been in contention through the first 36 holes. He took a 76 and was well back at 216.

"It was an easy day. There was no guesswork because there was no wind," said Watson, a 5-time British Open champion trying to fight his way out of a two-year, non-winning string.

But it was not easy for the frustrated Ballesteros, who simply could not make a putt and lost the lead on a bogey-bogey finish.

Spewing Spanish at his brother-caddy, Vicente, he 3-putted the 17th and failed to get up and down from a bunker on the 18th.

"I had 15 putts inside of 20 feet and I didn't make any of them. That's the key," Ballesteros said. "I'm happy, confident and playing well.

"I like my position — but not my finish," he said.

That finish allowed a host of contenders, with eight men now locked within two strokes going into the final 18 holes.

SOCCER

She underwent two surgeries. The second removed the entire cerebellum, the size of a lemon. The cerebellum controls the coordination of the body.

B. J. Smith, who will be seven June 4, is the son of Paul and Mary Smith and his cancer was diagnosed in 1982 and radiation and chemo therapy treatment began in September.

That both are youngsters are back in the MSA program is one story. What their parents went through is another story and the primary reason MSA, a non-profit organization, is making $500 donations to the Ronald McDonald Houses, also a non-profit organization.

The RMH proved havens in times of distress for both families.

Kathy went to Fort Worth for the surgery that would lead to the road of recovery and she spent a total of three months in the hospital. "A motel room was not very appealing," said Mrs. Moran, "That's when I discovered the Ronald McDonald House. When they told us about the Ronald McDonald House, I thought it was a cut rate place to live, but it turned out be a beautiful place, a home away from home," and affordable. It provided the only means by which her mother could have afforded to stay with her.

BRIAN'S STAY in Houston was six weeks and again the Ronald McDonald House proved the family's savior, providing affordable accommodations near enough so that support and comfort were never far away for Brian.

"We were with parents of other children who were patients at children's hospitals," says Mrs. Smith. "At the Ronald McDonald House there was a comaraderie and support and compassion we wouldn't have found any place else."

"Most of all we felt comfortable. When the children come back from from chemo or radiation, they have black marks or bald heads from the treatment. In the McDonald House they aren't treated any differently because they aren't differnt. They all have either bald heads or black marks."

Mrs. Smith adds, "The convenience of the communal kitchen and laundry is great. You are not sitting in a dreary hotel room stewing over your problems. You can keep busy. There is a lot to do."

The rates for the RMH are reasonable and for those who can't afford it, it is free. In Houston, the stay limit is 45 days. However, a couple of nights in a motel and the family is eligible for another 45 days.

"KATHY is doing well in school, although she had problems with headaches for a year," says Mrs. Moran.

"When she first started playing, she ran behind everybody, but her stamina and coordination have improved. The wonderful thing about the MSA is that the coaches play everybody."

Brian is a halfback on the Blue Sharks and last fall was his first season. "He's the fastest kid on the team," says Coach Joe Coffman.

"B.J. really has gotten a lot from soccer. When he first started playing he couldn't stay in the game over a few minutes. His stamina since has improved tremendously," says Mrs. Smith. "He can now play almost a whole game and doesn't tire so easily. One of the most important things he has learned is to keep trying."

The $1,000 donation, $500 to the Fort Worth House and $500 to the Houston House, was raised by the MSA's Fall tournament. Darla Fisher, tournament director, and Norm Frobele, MSA commissioner, made the presentations of the donations.

The Ronald McDonald House first came into being in 1978 and the RMHs are operated by volunteers. Sick children and their families come from all over the world ...Spain, Israel, Italy as well as Waco, Midland and Big Spring. "We've made many friends," says Mrs. Smith, "and have lost some."

About the only thing that did go to form was Lee's Cooper in the 400. He won easily in 48.51 to remain unbeaten and his sterling duel with Tyrone Oliver in the 1600 relay was a moment to remember. He was a distant second when he got the baton and won going away. The pleasing thing for both Lee and MHS, was that the event was run in record times with both teams beating the old record.

San Angelo won only the long jump with C.L. Bowman and the shot put with Anthony Pape, but pointed heavily all day with amazing depth. It may be a formula that is good enough for a district title next week, but with Permian not at this meet, the question is still open for debate.

The only other records were from Odessa High's Risa King in the girls high jump with a 5-4, Big Spring's Brian Mayfield with a 6-10 in the high jump, and Permian's Sandy Houston with a 2:26.88 in the 800, breaking her own record.

Midland High won the JV division by winning five events with Billy Richardson in the high jump (6-0) and 110 hurdles (15.26), Sammy Venegas in both the 3200 (10:34.25) and 1600 (4:51.77) and John St. Germain in the 300 hurdles (40.88). Lee won the 1600 relay.

Champagne coach

PLYMOUTH, Mass. (AP) — An amateur hockey coach has been placed on probation by the youth league for giving his 13 and 14-year-old Pee Wee players champagne after a tournament victory.

"At the time I didn't really see anything wrong with it," John Woods, a 12-year coach with the Plymouth Youth Hockey League, told The Patriot Ledger of Quincy in an interview published Friday. "I'm sorry that it happened. I know all the kids. I know all the parents. I didn't think anyone would be this upset."

Following a Feb. 21 game at Tyngsboro, Woods divided a bottle of champagne among the 14 Pee Wee players, Plymouth Youth Hockey board member William Nelson said. Each player was given about a swallow of champagne, and none were forced to drink.

Midland College gals lose first tennis match

LAS CRUCES, N.M. — The Midland College women suffered their first loss of the tennis season in 22 outings Saturday, losing to Texas Tech 8-1 in the championship match of the New Mexico State University Women's Invitational here.

There were several close calls for the Lady Chaps with five of the six singles players at least forcing a third set, including Natasha Koprivica, who lost the third set in a 7-6 tie-breaker. Koprivica had four match points in the tie breaker before Tech's Lisa Roberts rallied for the 7-5 win.

The Lady Chaps wouldn't go down quickly in doubles either as two of the three matches went three sets.

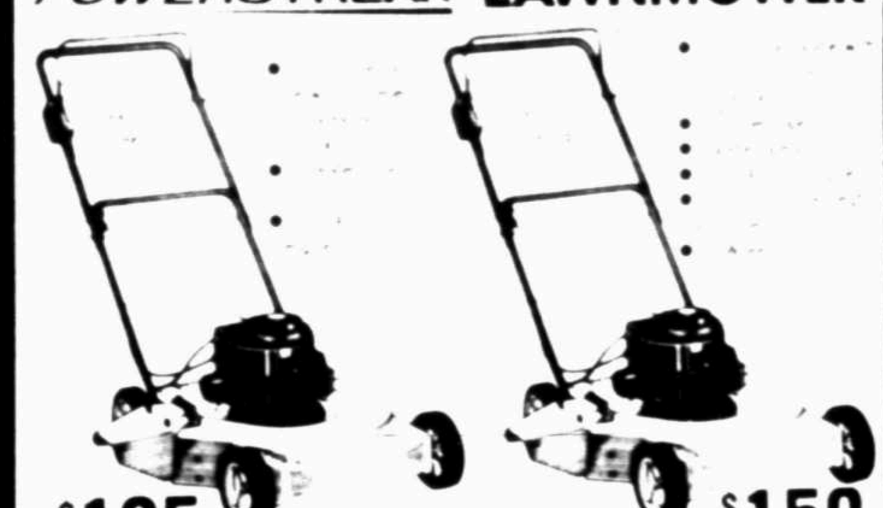

On Tuesday, MC is at Odessa College for a Western Junior College Athletic Conference match and on Friday head to Roswell, N.M. where the conference tournament will be held.

Singles: Helene Lebeller d. Julie Hrebec 4-6, 6-3, 6-3; Monica Margaroli lost to Petra Pennekamp 6-2, 4-6, 6-0; Sarah Swan lost to Ann Marie Walsom 6-3, 4-6, 6-3; Helen Schildknecht lost to Cathy Carlson 3-6, 6-4, 6-3; Natasha Koprivica lost to Lisa Roberts 4-6, 6-4, 7-6 (7-5); Charissa Pruim lost to Paula Brigance 6-2, 6-0.

She underwent two surgeries. The second removed the entire cerebellum, the size of a lemon. The cerebellum controls the coordination of the body.

B. J. Smith, who will be seven June 4, is the son of Paul and Mary Smith and his cancer was diagnosed in 1982 and radiation and chemo therapy treatment began in September.

That both are youngsters are back in the MSA program is one story. What their parents went through is another story and the primary reason MSA, a non-profit organization, is making $500 donations to the Ronald McDonald Houses, also a non-profit organization.

The RMH proved havens in times of distress for both families.

Kathy went to Fort Worth for the surgery that would lead to the road of recovery and she spent a total of three months in the hospital. "A motel room was not very appealing," said Mrs. Moran, "That's when I discovered the Ronald McDonald House. When they told us about the Ronald McDonald House, I thought it was a cut rate place to live, but it turned out be a beautiful place, a home away from home," and affordable. It provided the only means by which her mother could have afforded to stay with her.

BRIAN'S STAY in Houston was six weeks and again the Ronald McDonald House proved the family's savior, providing affordable accommodations near enough so that support and comfort were never far away for Brian.

"We were with parents of other children who were patients at children's hospitals," says Mrs. Smith. "At the Ronald McDonald House there was a comaraderie and support and compassion we wouldn't have found any place else."

"Most of all we felt comfortable. When the children come back from from chemo or radiation, they have black marks or bald heads from the treatment. In the McDonald House they aren't treated any differently because they aren't differnt. They all have either bald heads or black marks."

Mrs. Smith adds, "The convenience of the communal kitchen and laundry is great. You are not sitting in a dreary hotel room stewing over your problems. You can keep busy. There is a lot to do."

The rates for the RMH are reasonable and for those who can't afford it, it is free. In Houston, the stay limit is 45 days. However, a couple of nights in a motel and the family is eligible for another 45 days.

"KATHY is doing well in school, although she had problems with headaches for a year," says Mrs. Moran.

"When she first started playing, she ran behind everybody, but her stamina and coordination have improved. The wonderful thing about the MSA is that the coaches play everybody."

Brian is a halfback on the Blue Sharks and last fall was his first season. "He's the fastest kid on the team," says Coach Joe Coffman.

"B.J. really has gotten a lot from soccer. When he first started playing he couldn't stay in the game over a few minutes. His stamina since has improved tremendously," says Mrs. Smith. "He can now play almost a whole game and doesn't tire so easily. One of the most important things he has learned is to keep trying."

The $1,000 donation, $500 to the Fort Worth House and $500 to the Houston House, was raised by the MSA's Fall tournament. Darla Fisher, tournament director, and Norm Frobele, MSA commissioner, made the presentations of the donations.

The Ronald McDonald House first came into being in 1978 and the RMHs are operated by volunteers. Sick children and their families come from all over the world ...Spain, Israel, Italy as well as Waco, Midland and Big Spring. "We've made many friends," says Mrs. Smith, "and have lost some."

TALL

About the only thing that did go to form was Lee's Cooper in the 400. He won easily in 48.51 to remain unbeaten and his sterling duel with Tyrone Oliver in the 1600 relay was a moment to remember. He was a distant second when he got the baton and won going away. The pleasing thing for both Lee and MHS, was that the event was run in record times with both teams beating the old record.

San Angelo won only the long jump with C.L. Bowman and the shot put with Anthony Pape, but pointed heavily all day with amazing depth. It may be a formula that is good enough for a district title next week, but with Permian not at this meet, the question is still open for debate.

The only other records were from Odessa High's Risa King in the girls high jump with a 5-4, Big Spring's Brian Mayfield with a 6-10 in the high jump, and Permian's Sandy Houston with a 2:26.88 in the 800, breaking her own record.

Midland High won the JV division by winning five events with Billy Richardson in the high jump (6-0) and 110 hurdles (15.26), Sammy Venegas in both the 3200 (10:34.25) and 1600 (4:51.77) and John St. Germain in the 300 hurdles (40.88). Lee won the 1600 relay.

Champagne coach

PLYMOUTH, Mass. (AP) — An amateur hockey coach has been placed on probation by the youth league for giving his 13-and-14-year-old Pee Wee players champagne after a tournament victory.

"At the time, I didn't really see anything wrong with it," John Woods, a 12-year coach with the Plymouth Youth Hockey League, told The Patriot Ledger of Quincy in an interview published Friday. "I'm sorry that it happened. I know all the kids. I know all the parents. I didn't think anyone would be this upset."

Following a Feb. 21 game at Tyngsboro, Woods divided a bottle of champagne among the 14 Pee Wee players. Plymouth Youth Hockey board member William Nelson said each player was given about a swallow of champagne, and none were forced to drink.

Midland College gals lose first tennis match

LAS CRUCES, N.M. — The Midland College women suffered their first loss of the tennis season in 22 outings Saturday, losing to Texas Tech 8-1 in the championship match of the New Mexico State University Women's Invitational here.

There were several close calls for the Lady Chaps with five of the six singles players at least forcing a third set, including Natasha Koprivica, who lost the third set in a 7-6 tie-breaker. Koprivica had four match points in the tie breaker before Tech's Lisa Roberts rallied for the 7-5 win.

The Lady Chaps wouldn't go down quickly in doubles either as two of the three matches went three sets.

On Tuesday, MC is at Odessa College for a Western Junior College Athletic Conference match and on Friday head to Roswell, N.M. where the conference tournament will be held.

Singles: Helene Lebeller d. Julie Hrebec, 4-6, 6-3, 6-3; Monica Margaroli lost to Petra Pennekamp, 6-2, 4-6, 6-0; Sarah Sears lost to Ann Marie Watsom, 6-3, 4-6, 6-3; Helen Schildknecht lost to Cathy Carlson, 3-6, 6-4, 6-3; Natasha Koprivica lost to Lisa Roberts, 4-6, 6-4, 7-6 (7-5); Charisse Pruim lost to Paula Briganca, 6-2, 6-0.

Doubles: Sears-Lebeller lost to Pennekamp-Watsom, 6-2, 3-6, 6-4; Margaroli-Schildknecht lost to Hrebec-Carlson, 6-3, 6-0; Pruim-Paige Carpenter lost to Roberts-Briganca, 6-2, 2-6, 6-0.

Rain cancels Deputy Guaranty golf round

HATTIESBURG, Miss. (AP) — Continuing rain forced cancellation of Saturday's third-round play in the Deposit Guaranty Golf Classic, with veteran Don Halldorson and rookie Rocco Mediate tied for the lead at 9-under-par 131.

Tournament officials scheduled 36 holes for Sunday to complete the tournament, with the first round getting off at 7 a.m. and the second at noon.

The start of Saturday's round had been delayed in the hope conditions would improve enough to allow play, but when the rains continued, the postponement was ordered.

On Friday, Halldorson shot a 3-under-par 67 to go within opening 64. Mediate had 66 after the first round's 65.

Paul Azinger, with a second round 69, and Tom Byrum with a 65, were closest to the leaders at 7-under 133. Mike Miles, with a 66, and Tony Cerda Jr., with 67, were another shot back.

First-round leader Ernie Gonzalez, who opened with a course record-tying 62, was 12 shots worse Friday and 5 shots behind the leaders at 136.

Scores were generally higher in the second round at the 6,594-yard par 70 Hattiesburg Country Club course. The field was cut to the low 70 players and ties after Friday's round. It took a score of 3-over-par 143 to make the 36-hole cutoff. Seventy-one players qualified to continue.

The players are shooting for a first prize of $36,000 in the event, which is played annually the same weekend as the Master's Tournament. In past years, it has been known as the Magnolia Classic, but this year, got a new sponsor, and was upgraded to a PGA tour event.

Three share first in Mission Masters play

From Staff Reports

Mission Country Club is holding a unique golf tournament in conjuction with the ongoing Masters tournament.

The two-man scramble was paired with 12 leaders from Friday's Masters leaders, forming a three-man team. The tournament runs through today with the golfers using the same Masters' names drawn Friday.

Three teams own a 10-under par score for the first day lead. Harry Bettis and Wayne Harper are playing with Mark McCumber's Masters score while Ken and Kelly Sewell drew Greg Norman. Mickey Wilson and Daniel Gasser are playing with the scores of Cory Pavin and both those teams are at 10-under also.

Lamar hires Abatemarco

BEAUMONT (AP) — Tom Abatemarco, an assistant coach at North Carolina State, was named Saturday to replace Pat Foster as Lamar University's head basketball coach, school officials said.

Abatemarco, 36, who has worked under such college coaches as Jim Valvano, Lou Carnesseca and Lefty Dreisell, has spent the last four seasons as assistant to Valvano, including during the Wolfpack's 1982-83 NCAA championship season.

The Brentwood, N.Y., native also worked two years under Valvano in the 1970s at Iona College in New York.

In between the Valvano stints, Abatemarco worked one season with Carnesseca at St. John's, two seasons under Dreisell at Maryland and one-year stays at Virginia Tech and Davidson.

At Lamar, Abatemarco succeeds Foster, who left last week to take the head coaching job at the University of Houston after compiling a six-season record of 134-49.

"I've waited 13 years for this great opportunity," Abatemarco said. "Anyone who knows anything at all about college basketball knows that the Lamar job is a great one."

"Look at all of the NCAA tournaments, all of the NITs, all of the 20-win seasons and the other things that make up Lamar's grat tradition," he added. "It gives me a scary, yet terrific feeling knowing that I'm following such great coaches as Pat Foster and Billy Tubbs," Foster's predecessor who is now at the University of Oklahoma.

Lamar President Dr. Bill Franklin, who headed the coaching search, said Abatemarco "is clearly considered one of the top recruiters in the United States. Also, with his many years under some of the best coaches in the country, it's certain much of their success has rubbed off."

Details of Patriot sale unclear

FOXBORO, Mass. (AP) — Plans of the syndicate that bought into the American Football Conference champion New England Patriots remained unclear Saturday as general manager Patrick Sullivan indicated the team may not be sold after a three-year option period.

Francis Murray, who negotiated the group's purchase, told The Boston Globe. that Union Pacific Railroad chief Drew Lewis, a former U.S. transportation secretary, would be the group's No. 1 shareholder and could own more than 50 percent of its new properties, including Sullivan Stadium.

"Mr. Lewis wants it known that he is not the lead partner in this group," Joe McCartney, spokesman for Union Pacific, said last week. "He is involved in the possible purchase of the stadium, and not the team,"

Murray said Lewis' position would become clear during the three-year option period.

"Mr. Lewis expressed himself as of the circumstances today," Murray said. "What his view might be in the future depends on the circumstances."

The group agreed late Thursday to buy the stadium; to lease Foxboro Raceway and its adjacent land; and to purchase a minority interest in the team and a three-year option to buy the team, Super Bowl losers to the Chicago Bears for the National Football League title last season.

"By agreeing to buy the stadium and invest in the team, these men have made a clear statement that they intend to keep the team in New England," said William Sullivan, the team's president and founder, in a prepared statement.

But Patrick Sullivan, Sullivan's son and the team's general manager, said:

"If they don't exercise their option and we still retain the team, we will be on a lot more solid ground than we were last year. "We won't have to worry about the operation of the stadium or the raceway. We'll just be the tenant. That's very satisfying to me."

Patrick Sullivan said the new group held a substantial portion of the team.

"It isn't 2 percent," he said. "It's a very complicated deal. Whatever I told you wouldn't be accurate."

Besides Murray and Lewis, the rest of the purchasing group includes John Charlton, Edwin Doyle, John Fowler and Jim Murray, former general manager of the Philadelphia Eagles and brother of Francis.

"They have an agreement to invest," Patrick Sullivan said. "Like the rest of the agreement, it hasn't fully closed yet. I think it's supposed to close by June 15."

Sullivan said the price of the team will increase throughout the group's three-year option, costing $65 million in the third year. The stadium sold for more than the reported $30 million, he said.

The Sullivans reportedly have lost $500,000 annually on their $1.5 million raceway lease. The family is also paying several million dollars a year on interest on loans for the stadium.

"I feel these guys bring a lot to the table that will help us," Sullivan said. "They've been in situations in companies that lost money, and they turned them around. We've been in a money-losing situation. I'm really not concerned about my authority or anybody else's authority."

Patty Sheehan blasts out of sand.

LPGA Golf

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Patty Sheehan shot a 68 Saturday to take a three-stroke lead over two other golfers after three rounds of the $200,000 Kyocera Inamori Classic at Bernardo Heights Country Club.

Second-round leader Pat Bradley had five birdies but two double-bogeys in struggling to a 2w-over-par 74, leaving her in a second-place tie with Japan's Ayako Okamoto, who shot a 69.

Sheehan, a six-year tour veteran, is trying to win her third Kyocera tournament in five years on three different courses. She had three birdies and one bogey on both sides of the 6,391-yard course.

"I've been in a mini-slump and haven't been playing well or putting well so my confidence has been absent," Sheehan said.

"It feels good to be three shots in front. Let the rest of them chase me."

Sheehan bogeyed the par-3 12th hole between birdies at Nos. 11 and 13, then finished the round with a birdie on the par-4 18th.

After bogeying the first hole, she birdied Nos. 2, 4 and 9 to make the turn in 2-under-par 34.

Bradley, who is trying to become the second LPGA player to win consecutive tournaments this year, dropped out of the lead after missing a two-foot putt to take a double bogey on the par-3 ninth.

Her troubles continued at the 10th when she missed another two-foot putt for a bogey-5 to drop to four under par, two shots behind Sheehan.

Bradley, a 12-year tour veteran, came storming back with birdies on the 12th, 13th and 14th holes to pull even with Sheehan at seven under par. But her second double bogey of the round, at the par-3 16th, again dropped her back.

"Obviously I had some good swings to birdie three holes in a row, but I can't really explain what happened (on the holes she double bogeyed)," Bradley said.

"I think they were just some tired golf swings. It was cold and the wind was pretty strong in spots, but that's not really a good excuse because a lot of other people did well."

Bradley got off to a fast start with a birdie at the par-5 second hole after her approach shot skipped out of a pond and onto a bank in front of the green. Her chip shot ran across the green but she sank a 20-foot putt for birdie.

Okamoto, who started the day five shots back, birdied the second, third and ninth holes, then parred in on the back side.

Longhorns take two from Rice

Associated Press

HOUSTON — Kevin Garner had seven runs batted in to lead Texas to a 7-2, 10-3 sweep of the Rice Owls in a Southwest Conference baseball doubleheader Saturday.

The Longhorn's designated hitter knocked in four runs, including a two-run homer in the third and a two-run single in the seventh, in the first game victory.

SWC

In the second game, he contributed to the win by bringing home two more runs with a bases-loaded double in the third and an RBI single in the ninth. Jay Searcy had a three-run homer for the Longhorns, also in the ninth.

Mark Petkovsek had a complete game win for Texas in the first game, allowing seven hits and striking out three. The Owls could only touch him for a single run in the fifth and seventh, as Tim Bannaman hit his first college homerun.

Daniel Pena got the win in the second game, although he needed help from Wade Philips and Greg Swindell. Texas had taken a 6-0 lead through the fourth before Rice closed to within 6-3 on Chris Tucker's two-run homer in the sixth.

The Longhorn's four-run effort in the ninth and Swindell's late relief work for his sixth save wrapped it up for Texas.

Texas is now 41-9 on the season and 9-3 in the SWC, while Rice falls to 28-22 and 3-12.

Arkansas 9-8, Texas Tech 4-3

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. — Steve Parker completed his fifth straight SWC game and Kevin Campbell also went the distance Saturday as the Arkansas Razorbacks swept Texas Tech.

Parker, now 7-0, allowed eight hits, four walks and gave up three earned runs in the opener. The runs marked the first against the junior southpaw in conference play this season.

Ralph Kraus had a pair of RBI doubles to pace Arkansas' attack in game one. Doyle Wilson knocked in two runs with a double and a triple and Rod Moore and Lynn Van Every also had two hits a piece for the Razorbacks.

Kraus extended his hitting streak to 14 games in the nightcap, going 3-for-3 with his ninth home run and another pair of doubles. Van Every knocked in three runs in game two with a double and solo homer and Andy Skeels also homered for the Razorbacks.

Campbell, now 3-5, allowed six hits, walked one and struck out seven in the second contest. Johnny Videles, 7-3, suffered the loss for Tech in the nightcap while Craig Chapin, 5-3, was defeated in the opener.

The twin killing gave Arkansas a sweep of the three-game series and stretched the current Razorback winning streak to seven games. The Razorbacks are 30-11 overall, 11-4 in the SWC. Texas Tech dropped to 30-16 and 5-7.

Houston 7-4, TCU 6-2

FORT WORTH — Mike Basso had a two-run homer to lead the Houston Cougars in the first game.

The two victories gave Houston a three-game sweep of the series.

Basso's homer came in the first inning and John Fertitta drove in two runs with a line-drive single in the first inning.

TCU came back for four runs on four singles in the fifth inning before relief pitcher Mike Walker ended the rally.

Mark Soma had a triple and a single to drive in two runs for the Cougars in the second game to give Houston its first sweep of a SWC series this season.

Mark McDougall started the second game for Houston, but needed relief held from Larry Coker, who picked up the victory by pitching five scoreless innings. He struck out three and allowed only two hits.

With the win, A&M increases its season record to 31-18 and 9-2 in SWC play. Baylor, meanwhile, drops to 28-17 and 4-7.

In the opener, Barry went the distance with six hits allowed, four walks and one strike-out, continuing his seven-game winning streak.

With Baylor leading 1-0 in the fifth, Gary Geiger had an opposite field double to put the Aggies in front 2-1. Blaine Beatty, the losing pitcher, allowed nine hits, no walks and struck out one batter.

Todd Wilson had the lone extra base hit for Baylor with a sixth inning double. Scott Livingstone and Robi Chandler had two hits each for Texas A&M.

In the nightcap, Fry, now 8-4, went the full nine innings and allowed six hits, one walk and three strikeouts. Mike Malinak was the only Baylor hitter who gave Fry trouble, hitting a triple and a double.

Breland gains ring revenge

TOTOWA, N.J. (AP) — Mark Breland knocked down Daryl Anthony with a crashing right to the jaw and stopped him in the third round Saturday to avenge the only defeat he has suffered in 111 amateur and 11 pro bouts.

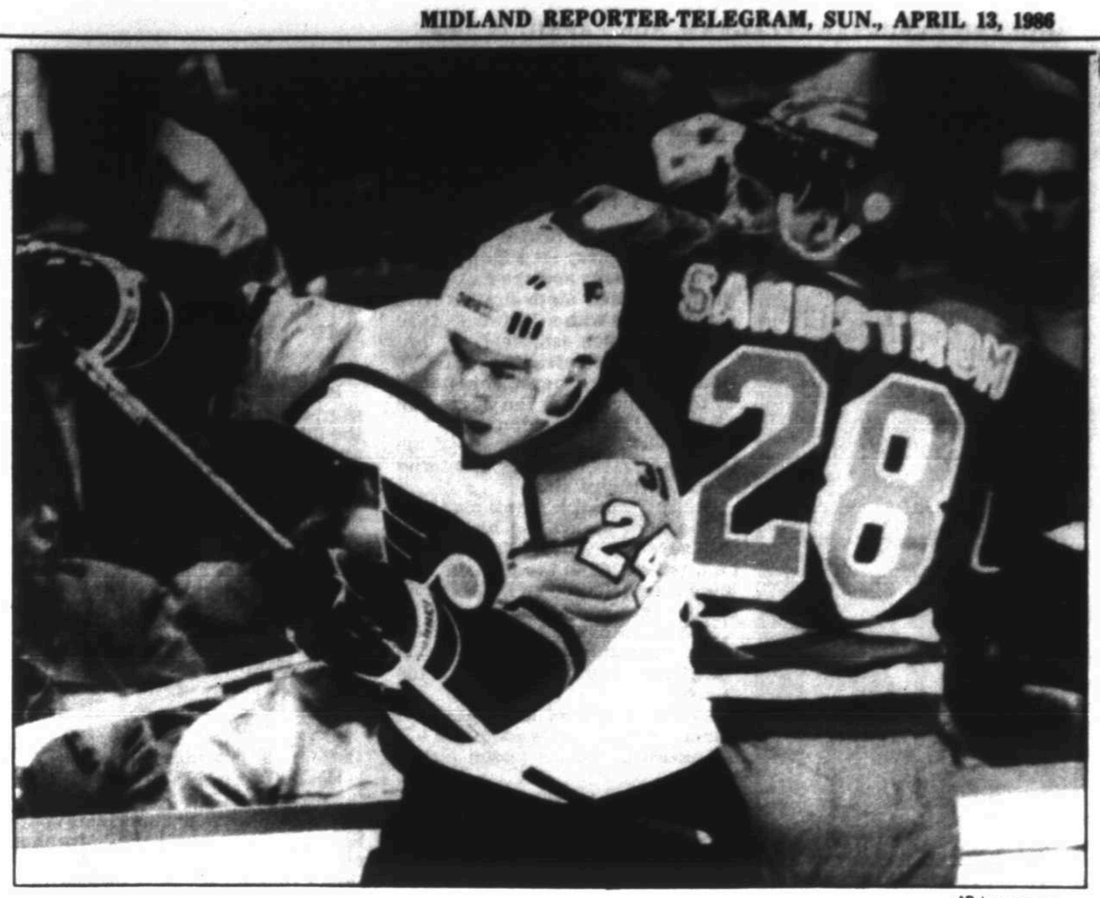

The 6-foot-2 Breland, using his height and weight advantages, took chrge at the openng bell and Anthony never had a chance.

Anthony, 143¾, of St. Louis, had a scored 3-2 decision win over Breland in a three-round bout in the U.S. Amateur Championships at Concord, Calif., in 1981.

Breland went on to win a world amateur championship and an Olympic gold medal in 1984 and now is 11-0 as a pro with six knockouts.

Anthony, who had a 200-15 record as an amateur, now is 22-3-2 with 15 knockouts as a pro.

SMU's Martin tabs track double

DALLAS (AP) — In his first performance before a hometown crowd, Southern Methodist's Roy Martin sped to victories in both the 100 and 200 meters Saturday, setting new records at the SMU Invitational Track and Field Meet.

The meet, which featured four of the top Division I collegiate teams in the country — SMU, UCLA, Texas Christian and Texas — as well as the Division II defending national champions, attracted one of the largest crowds in the history of the invitational.

But it was Martin, the nation's premier schoolboy sprinter a year ago and now a freshman at SMU, that the crowd came to see.

In the 100 meters, Martin clocked a 10.16, establishing a meet record as well as setting a new SMU mark.

But it was Martin's performance in the 200 meters which served as notice that the freshman could live up to expectations.

His time of 20.16 broke both SMU and meet records, as well as being the fastest outdoor 200 performance of the year. The current world record for the event is 19.72, held by Italy's Pietro Mennea.

In other events, Dale Jenkins of the Abilene Christian Track Club sailed 18-0½ to win the pole vault.

Ian Morris of ACU upset favorite Bert Cameron in the 400 meters. Morris finished with a time of 45.32 to Cameron's 45.37.

LEE

"Brad has really strengthened up this season and he's really been throwing well," Davis said. "He's been making a living on that curve ball and he throws it for good, low strikes."

AFTER PERMIAN opened up an early 1-0 lead in the second, Lee popped out top with a pair of runs in the fourth on an error, a single by Joe Eldridge then another rundown in which Tuey Rankin raced in from third on a throwing error by Jeff Mudd.

Chad Jordan then bounced a seeing-eye single through the third base-shortstop hole for a 2-1 Rebel lead. But the Panthers scratched back to tie on a bases on balls, a single and a sacrifice fly.

Then in the fifth, the Panthers brought out their big sticks, tattooing Lee starter Terry Baxter for three runs on five hits. Center fielder Nolen Watson's two-run triple highlighted the effort.

The Rebels bounced right back with three of their own in the top half of the sixth. Singles by Scott Smith and Chad Jordan, an RBI double to left by Danny Jordan, then a clutch two RBI single by Baxter evened the score at 5-5.

A FOUR-RUN rally in the bottom half of the sixth and the Panthers pounced back on top, however. Three hits off Baxter began the inning, then when Durian Jenkins arrived, a two-run double by Jon Hitt put things just out of reach of the Rebels.

Gretzky sets assist record

Associated Press

VANCOUVER, British Columbia — Wayne Gretzky set a Stanley Cup record for assits and the Edmonton Oilers won their ninth straight NHL playoff series with a 3-0 sweep of the Smythe Division semifinal.

The two-time defending NHL Cup champions were never threatened by the Canucks after the Oilers won 7-3 and 5-1 at Edmonton.

The Oilers face the winner of the Calgary Flames-Winnipeg Jets series in the divisional final.

Gretzky scored a power-play goal in the third period and his two assists gave the NHL scoring champion a record 103 in the playoffs, one more than defenseman Denis Potvin of the New York Islanders.

Edmonton has not lost a playoff series since they were defeated in the Stanley Cup final in 1983 by the Islanders.

Edmonton did not lose a game all season to the Canucks following a 7-0-1 record in regular-season play.

Whalers 9, Nordiques 4

HARTFORD, Conn. — John Anderson, Kevin Dineen and Ray Ferraro each scored two goals Saturday night, leading a relentless attack that gave the Harftord Whalers a sweep of their opening-round NHL playoff series.

Anderson added four assists and Dineen three for the Whalers, hockey's hottest team with just one loss in their last 14 games. Hartford also got a goal each from Dave Tippett, Ron Francis and Ulf Samuelsson in eliminating the flat Nordiques.

Hartford scored four times in the first period to knock Nordiques starting goalie Clint Malarchuk out of the game and came back with three more in the second and two in the third to clinch their first-ever victory in an NHL playoff series.

NHL

Canadiens 4, Bruins 3

BOSTON — Bob Gainey scored a short-handed goal midway through the third period — eight minutes after he had tied the game — giving the Montreal Canadiens a 4-3 victory over the Boston Bruins and a 3-0 sweep of their NHL playoff series Saturday night.

It was the 17th consecutive series in which the Canadiens had beaten Boston since the Bruins' last postseason triumph over Montreal in 1943. It also was the third straight year in which Montreal eliminated Boston in the first round of the Adams Division playoffs.

Capitals 3, Islanders 1

UNIONDALE, N.Y. — The Washington Capitals got power-play goals from defensemen Rod Langway, Scott Stevens and Larry Murphy and a strong performance from their defense complete a three-game sweep of their first-round NHL playoff series.

In beating the Islanders in their best-of-5 Patrick Division semifinal, the Capitals moved into the division final starting Thursday night against the winner of the Philadelphia-New York Rangers series.

The first-round knockout marked the earliest elimination ever in the Stanley Cup playoffs for the Islanders, who won four straight championships from 1980-83 and had defeated the Capitals in the playoffs the last three years.

It was also the first sweep suffered by the Islanders in 35 playoff series stretching over 12th straight NHL postseason tournaments.

Maple Leafs 7, Blackhawks 2

TORONTO — Russ Courtnall scored two goals and set up another as the Toronto Maple Leafs completed a three-game sweep of the Blackhawks in the Norris Division semifinal and advancing to the second round of NHL playoffs for the first time in seven years.

Rick Vaive, Tom Fergus, Miroslav Frycer, Wendel Clark and Walt Poddubny also scored for the Leafs, who rest until Friday when they begin the division final in Minnesota or St. Louis.

Blues 4, North Stars 3

ST. LOUIS — Bernie Federko scored two goals early in the third period to lift to St. Louis a 2-1 lead in the Stanley Cup playoff series.

The Blues can win the best-of-five series with a victory Sunday night in Game 4 of the Norris Division semifinals. A North Stars victory would send the series back to Minnesota on Tuesday for a deciding game.

Rangers 5, Flyers 2

NEW YORK — Goals by Jim Wiemer, Bob Brooke and Ron Greschner in a span of 38 seconds capped a four-goal third period that gave the New York Rangers a 2-1 lead in the best-of-5 Patrick Division semifinal.

A victory in Game 4 at Madison Square Garden on Sunday night would put the Rangers into the division final against the Washington Capitals, who swept the New York Islanders in three games.

Suns power past Rockets, 110-92

Associated Press

Suns 110, Rockets 92

HOUSTON Reserve guards Cedric Toney and Bernard Thompson scored 22 and 18 points, respectively, and reserve forward Mike Sanders added 20 more to lead the Pheonix Suns.

The Midwest Division champion Rockets finished the season with a 51-31 record as Akeem Olajuwon led all scorers with 23 points. The Rockets raced to a 33-19 first-quarter lead, powered by Olajuwon's 15 points.

With reserves playing in the second quarter for both teams, the Suns outscored the Rockets 29-22 to trail by seven at halftime. Thompson scored 12 points to lead the Suns in the quarter.

The Suns outscored the Rockets 63-37 in the second half and outscored the Rockets 13-1 to begin the fourth quarter.

Hawks 108, Pacers 91

ATLANTA — Dominique Wilkins claimed the NBA scoring title Saturday night with 34 points as the Atlanta Hawks defeated Indiana in the regular-season finale for both teams.

Wilkins raised his average to 30.33 points per game. His closest competitors were Alex English of Denver and Adrian Dantley of Utah, neither of whom played in their teams' final game in Denver.

Dantley ended the season averaging 29.83 points per game, and English averaged 29.80.

The victory was the 50th of the season for the Hawks, tying the record they set in 1982-83.

Bucks 116, Knicks 78

MILWAUKEE — Craig Hodges hit four three-point shots in scoring 20 points to lead Milwaukee over the injury-riddled New York Knicks in the final regular-season game for both teams.

Only eight Knicks made the trip to Milwaukee. Seven other players were out with injuries and Ken Bannister didn't make the trip with the team for an undisclosed personal reason.

It was the Bucks' 14th consecutive victory over the Knicks, dating back to December 1983.

The Bucks never trailed, jumping to a 34-14 first quarter lead on Sidney Moncrief's 11 points.

Helpless prey of hungry monster

It wasn't the intent to harm or embarrass any one. The sole purpose was to inform the readers. What has resulted is a monster that threatens to consume its creator.

It started innocently enough. A few weeks ago, in search of a Sunday column on a Saturday morning, the path led to the almost deserted news room. Although it was the last place a column was expected.

Ed Todd saw the t-shirt. "What's it say?"

Ed can read, but the East Carolina University was partially obscured by an overshirt.

"Did you go there?" he asked, not realizing he had a can of worms in his hand.

The reply was no. And maybe nothing would have come of it, but photographer Ron Jaap had to fuel the fire.

"You should see his University of New Jersey t-shirt," Jaap yapped.

One thing led to another and before long Todd began a determined search for the whereabouts of the UNJ.

From his perservering industry evolved a column, challenging Ed and all to locate the elusive UNJ.

The column, it was felt, would be little noted and soon forgotten, left to die a quick, natural and unmourned death.

It didn't die like it should have. The curious wanted to know where to get a UNJ t-shirt. And then there were the "Can you tell me where it is? I can't find it either," calls.

As a follow up, it was announced Todd would address the UNJ exes. Later Some phone calls pointedly pointed out that I'd neglected to mention where the meeting was being held. It was explained if I didn't give away the location of the UNJ, I certainly wasn't tell where their exes met.

Still, the topic refused to die. A lady stopped Tuesday while I was planting a rose bush in the front yard and demanded to know where she could get a U. New Jersey t-shirt.

I've been abused for referring to Louisville as a branch of the UNJ.

I've also been defended by a caller , "If Kentucky is such a hot bed of basketball, why do they have to go New Jersey to get their players? It's about time they Jersey got some recognition. What would Penn State do without Jersey? Texas is a football hot bed. Check the rosters of Texas teams and see how many outlanders there are? They call it UT-Norman branch and Oklahoma is proud of it. We don't have to hunt in other states for our footballers."

Wednesday John Schmidt of the Better Business Bureau dropped in out of a blue sky to inform me he had gone to the university of New Jersey and he certainly knew where it was.

But, no, he missed Ed Todd's talk to the exes.

A lot of people have asked about Todd's talk, so I asked Ed about it.

"It was great. I've never received that kind of treatment before. Even the president of the University, Endicott Peabody Heffelfinger IV came down and introduced me," Todd volunteered with a grandiose gesture.

"The turnout was so big we had to move it from the Midland Center to the Chaparral Center to accommodate everybody."

Todd expounded endlessly, "A wonderful bunch of people and I'm honored that they asked me."

They paid me $1,500 to speak, which I really hadn't expected.

In an aside not meant for nearby ears, "I'm going to get you, Battles."

Get me? At $1,500, it sounds like he's already gotten me. If I'd know they paid like that, I'd never have turned it down.

Big Patrick is top NBA rookie

By WILLIAM R. BARNARD
AP Basketball Writer

At midseason, Patrick Ewing looked like a runaway winner of NBA Rookie of the Year honors.

As the 82-game regular season comes to a close this weekend, however, the result of balloting among NBA writers and broadcasters no longer is clear-cut. The picture clouded when the powerful 7-foot center for the New York Knicks played only 14 games in the second half of the season and 50 overall because of a knee injury that required surgery.

Ewing's statistics are impressive, 20 points and nine rebounds per game, and he got nearly unanimous rave reviews where ever he played.

"He's 7-foot and 230 pounds with a feathered shot," Boston Coach K.C. Jones said. "He's definitely the center of the future."

"He's A-1; that's why he's going to be a star for years and years to come," said Ewing's coach, Hubie Brown. But when asked if he will get Rookie of the Year honors, Brown said, "It's difficult to miss over one-third of the season and come out No. 1."

That prompted Jazz Coach Frank Layden to make a case for Malone, a 6-9 forward who was the 13th draft pick. "As far as I can see, he's making the biggest contribution on the winningest team."

McDaniel and Malone have been the most consistent, starting all season and averaging 17 points and nearly 15 points, respectively. Both get about nine rebounds per game.

"I think he's running head to head with Patrick," Seattle Coach Bernie Bickerstaff said of McDaniel, a 6-8 forward. "I may be a little biased, but in terms of what Xavier has done for the Seattle SuperSonics, he's just been great."

THE 7-6 Bol has been a phenomenon and a media favorite while leading the league in blocked shots, but the Sudanese giant is one-dimensional, with far more blocked shots than points.

Oakley and Benjamin started slowly but came on strong in the second half.

Benjamin, a 7-0 center, looked like a wasted pick at midseason, but has raised his average to 11 points and 7.6 rebounds per game, up from 5.8 points and 5.5 rebounds at Christmas.

"Kids come in with a false idea, or ignorance, of what the NBA is," Clippers assistant coach Don Casey said. "Ben was young. Early on, he had to go against Jack Sikma and Kareem Abdul-Jabbar and they did a number on him. I think he was scared and in awe. He looked bad."

Clippers head coach Don Chaney had Benjamin look at films of himself. "He saw himself loafing and it embarrassed him," Casey said. "That triggered something. His work ethic in games and at practice has definitely improved."

Given a chance to play because of injuries on the Bulls, Oakley has been awesome at times.

In his first 40 games, the 6-8, 225-pound forward averaged 13.0 minutes, 4.1 points, 4.9 rebounds and shot 44.3 percent from the field. In his next 30, he averaged 34.1 minutes, 16.3 points, 12.9 rebounds and shot 54.7 percent.

"If he had played at Kentucky or Ohio State, nobody would be saying, 'Who's Charles Oakley?' " said Dave Robbins, his coach at Virginia Union College.

"We knew he was a terminator," Chicago coach Stan Albeck said of Oakley intimidating presence near the basket. "He's Rambo, Commando and Terminator all in one."

TISDALE, the No. 2 pick in the 1985 draft behind Ewing, looks impressive for a week and lost for two.

"I realize this is a year of adjustment, and it's not going to get me down," said Tisdale, a 6-9 forward averaging 14.8 points and 7.2 rebounds. "I know I can play in this league."

At the other end of the height spectrum is 5-7 Spud Webb of Atlanta, who made a splash at the All-Star game by winning the slam-dunk championship. But he started only eight games and made only an occasional impact.

If Ewing wins, he will take home the rookie award while playing fewer games than any of the previous 34 winners. He will miss 32 games, nine more than Terry Dischinger of the Chicago Zephyrs in 1963. Fifteen times, the top rookie missed no games and eight others missed just one.

Bust of Ray Kroc unveiled at game

SAN DIEGO (AP) — A bronze bust of late Padres owner Ray Kroc was unveiled in dedication ceremonies before the San Diego team's home opener against Cincinnati.

The statue of Kroc, who saved major league baseball in San Diego by buying the Padres in 1974, will stand beside a bust of Jack Murphy, the late sports editor of The San Diego Union. The municipal stadium bears Murphy's name.

Vinnie Curto, Stallone's kind of fighter

- He's a fighter.
- And not a very good one.

Any time you see a fighter whose nose is broken but his hands aren't, you know you're not exactly dealing with the new Manassa Mauler.

It's not that Curto is a bad fighter. Just careless. Vinnie figured a fight was a contest to see who could bleed the most. The way Vinnie fought, his head was on its own. Vinnie blocked punches with his ears. Vinnie came out of a fight the way most people come out of train wrecks.

Still, he beat Bennie Briscoe. Twice. Only the first one, they called a draw.

"It was in Philadelphia," Vinnie explains. Philadelphia is Briscoe's hometown. "I would of had to of killed him to win. They'd give him a draw from a stretcher."

THE SECOND fight was in Boston and that was Vinnie's territory. "I troo a shutout," Vinnie says proudly. "Not many guys beat Bennie Briscoe 10 and oh in them days."

Not too many people beat Vinnie Curto, either. Six, he likes to think. The trouble is, the record book doesn't show the biggest fight Vinnie ever lost. It's not in there because it never happened. That's just the trouble.

Marvin Hagler, the undisputed middleweight champion of the universe, has ruined a lot of fighters in the ring. Vinnie he ruined without laying a glove on him.

THEIR FIGHT was to have been in Boston on Sept. 24, 1977. It was a natural, although Hagler was only semifamous at the time. He hadn't killed anybody yet.

No one knows why Curto didn't go through with that fight. Unless you belong to that growing majority that doesn't understand why anybody shows up for a scheduled fight with Marvin Hagler.

The defection of Curto was a matter of complete indifference to Marvin Hagler. He knocked out the guy they put in there instead, Ray Phillips. And probably didn't know the difference.

The identity of his opponents was of small moment to Hagler in those days. They weren't in there long enough for him to make their acquaintances fully. Joe Louis always had that trouble. He couldn't, for the life of him, remember names of opponents. They all looked alike to him - horizontal. They'd have to lie down for him to recognize them.

THE NONFIGHT made a catastrophic difference to Vinnie. He got as far out of Boston as he could - the Pacific Northwest where he hooked up with the restaurateur, Stuart Andersen. He next surfaced in Canada where he showed up for fights with such local ferocities as Jean-Yves Fillion, as well as a Tony Daniels and a Bud Ramsey, each of whom he knocked out twice.

In the movie, "On the Waterfront," the character played by Marlon Brando is a pug betrayed by his own brother. Vinnie Curto's story is even darker.

"I never told this to nobody before but I was ruined by my own father," he said as he sat in a downtown hotel restaurant the other day and relived his career. "I was an abused child. I was sexually abused. My father was an alcoholic and he whacked my life around. That's what happened before the Hagler fight. I started to get confused. It was like I didn't know who Vinnie Curto was."

Vinnie set off in search of himself, correctly divining that in the ring with Marvin Hagler was no place to start.

His search took him to some strange places. He became the resident enforcer - the police had a simpler word for his occupation - at the infamous Mustang Ranch brothel near Reno where a predecessor, the pug Oscar Bonavena, had gotten shot to death a year or so earlier.

THE VINNIE Curto he was looking for was hardly worth finding so Vinnie returned to the ring. It was during this period that he hooked up with the actor, Sylvester Stallone.

"He seen some 'Rocky' in me," Vinnie explained. "Rocky I, that was me. Rockies II and III, them was some other guys.

Stallone and Vinnie had a falling out. "I had to bust up Richie Giachetti, Larry Holmes' manager. He was yelling at me, giving me a headache," Vinnie said.

It was about that time that Curto played a part in "Miami Vice," he said. I assume he meant the TV show but with Vinnie you can't be sure.

Vinnie feels he is finally getting his act together and exorcising the demons of his childhood. He is ready to be a contender again. He worked 21 straight days in the gym with John (the Beast) Mugabi in Miami, getting Mugabi ready for his Hagler fight.

"I made Hagler look like a picnic," said Vinnie. Unfortunately, it was for the Hagler fight that had to be postponed. Presumably, Mugabi got rusty for the real one.

Vinnie will fight the Korean champion, Chong Pal Park, at the Sports Arena Friday (April 10) for something called the "IBF supermiddleweight championship of the world." It's a rematch of a bout they held in Seoul last June, which the Korean won by a decision.

Nick Price's 63 humbles Augusta

By GORDON S. WHITE Jr.
N.Y. Times News Service

AUGUSTA, Ga. — Nick Price, a South African who barely made the cut at the halfway mark of the 50th Masters tournament Friday, completely humbled the mighty Augusta National Golf Club course Saturday. He set course and tournament records with a 9-under-par 63 in a round that included a Masters record of 10 birdies.

The 29-year-old Price performed this amazing act of artistry even though he opened the third round with a bogey 5 after driving into the huge fairway bunker at No. 1. The record round gave him a total of 5-under-par 211 for 54 holes and put him one shot off the lead held by Greg Norman, who shot a 68 for 210. Price was tied with Seve Ballesteros of Spain, Bernhard Langer of West Germany and Donnie Hammond of the United States.

Golfers such as Ben Hogan, Byron Nelson, Jack Nicklaus, Gene Sarazen, Arnold Palmer, Watson and Gary Player never managed to do what Price did Saturday, even though all had many more chances. This was only the fifth Masters round for Price, who missed the cut after two rounds of the 1984 event.

Nicklaus and Player shared the previous course record of 64 with Lloyd Mangrum, Miller Barber, Hale Irwin and Maurice Bembridge. Price's 10 birdies broke the record of nine in an Augusta round, accomplished by Bob Gilder, Mangrum and Player.

After his opening bogey, Price was 10 under par for the last 17 holes Saturday.

Price shot 79 in the first round Thursday and seemed destined to miss the cut after three-putting six greens that day. But he rallied for a 69 Friday with only 22 putts and was at 148 after 36 holes. The field was cut to the 48 players who shot 149 or better.

Price, who said he really wanted to finish with 62, almost got his wish on the final hole when a 30-foot sidehill putt did everything but drop in the cup as it rolled around all 360 degrees of the lip and jumped out.

Price, who had 25 putts Saturday, said his wedge was the reason for his magnificent round. It was this pitching club that got him close for so many birdie putts.

—(OPTIONAL ADD)

That appeared difficult after he hit a poor tee shot into the expansive bunker on the top of the hill at No. 1. A wedge out of there, then another wedge shot to the green followed by two putts put him 5 over par for the tournament.

Then he started tearing apart the course that Bobby Jones built, where the Masters was first played in 1934 and where traditionalists fall in love with the setting at first sight.

"This is the kind of course you can get it going on," Price said. "And I guess I got it going."

Starting with a birdie on the second hole, the par-5, 555-yard test down a big hill, Price went on to birdie five, six and eight on the front. Then he ran four straight birds from 10 through 13, which meant he did something few golfers can manage — he birdied the famous Amen Corner, which consists of 11, 12 and 13.

A pause for par at 14, and he played 15 and 16 with the most spectacular birdies of the day. He parred in at 17 and 18.

He said his most difficult putt was the 3-footer at 15, the 500-yard par 5 where Sarazen made history with a double-eagle to put himself into position to win the 1935 Masters.

Price had a drive go way right on him at 15, so he had to lay up to the water fronting the green with a 5-iron. Then he used his wedge to hit the ball just 3 feet right of the cup.

"But that was a tricky thing," Price said. "It broke three inches, left to right, the most difficult break for a right-handed golfer. You have to forget what can happen and think about making it."

He sank that little knee-knocker, then went to the 16th tee, where his 5-iron shot at the par 3 sailed way right of the pin to the upper right side of the green. But once the ball landed, backspin took over and the ball began rolling to the cup. It nearly made it all the way but stopped 2 feet short, so it was an easy tap-in for his final birdie.

Price's first birdie at the second hole was helped by a wedge shot to 6 feet. He hit A 5-iron into the 435-yard par-4 fifth hole and dropped the 12-foot putt. A 6-iron at the par-3 sixth left him 15 feet away. He dropped that putt.

The wedge again got him within 6 feet of the cup at the par-5 eighth, an uphill hole, where he sank the putt for a 4.

"This is where I plan to play my golf," Price said. "U.S. citizenship is something maybe down the road."

And he immediately put himself in position to do so. He drove into the rough, but put his approach on the green, about 30 feet from the cup.

"I didn't want to leave the putt short or they'd say I was really bleeding," Price said.

He didn't. The ball was moving so quickly it wouldn't fall. It hit the cup, did a 360 degree turn and hung on the front lip. Price tapped in for the par that finished the finest round ever played here.

Nick Price of South Africa raises his club in reaction to a shot on the 18th green during Saturday's Masters at Augusta. Price shot a nine-under par to break a record that had stood since 1940.

NORMAN

Price, for the last three seasons a regular on the American tour, didn't require any favors. He stormed into contention on the greatest charge ever seen on these rolling hills.

"It's the kind of course that when you get it going, you can really get it going," said the man who lists his home as South Africa, carries a British passport and anticipates a move to America.

And he got it going better than anyone ever has, better than any of the greats who have played here in more than a half-century, better than Nicklaus and Palmer and Player, better than Hogan and Snead and Nelson, better than Hagen and Sarazen and Bobby Jones himself.

Not only did he set the Augusta National record, he matched the lowest score ever compiled in any of the Big Four events, which also include the U.S. and British Opens and the PGA.

And he did it with a bogey on the first hole, where he drove into a bunker and couldn't reach the green.

But that was the only 5 on his card. He did not reach any of the par 5's in two, but hit a sand wedge third shot inside of six feet on all of them and made the putts.

"The sand wedge was the thing that did it," he said.

He also made three putts in the 1-15 foot range, holed another from about 20 feet, once had a string of four straight birdies and went to nine under par for the day with a 5-iron shot that set up a 3-foot putt on the 16th.

That put the record in his grasp. Now he had to get it done.

The 17th went to a routine par.

"I was a little nervous playing the 18th," he said. "I didn't want to back off on that hole."

BULLDOGS

Henson stole second and, on a grounder to Malacara, was caught between bases on Roman's fielder's choice. Roman also stole second and came around to score on Junior Valenzuela's single. Odessa led, 5-4.

But, as effective as Roman had been the first four-plus innings, that's how off Lunceford was for OHS. The Bulldogs tagged the Broncho reliever for four runs on three hits, including Werner's two-RBI, game winning double.

"I HAD a bad time in Big Spring, going 0-for-3, but I've done well against Odessa each time we've played," said Werner. "I put the ball in play today and came up with two hits."

MHS coach Tim Whalen was also happy with his second baseman's effort, adding, "I'll tell you who I was proud of, Jim Werner. He did a heck of a job competing at the plate."

Also on defense, going errorless for the eighth consecutive game.

"We usually play really well on defense," said Werner. "We've probably got one of the best infields in the district and our outfield is doing real well, too."

While the defense and pitching have settled down this season, the hitting hasn't been there. Against the worst pitching in 4-5A, the Bulldogs managed nly six hits.

"There pitching was not that good," said Werner, "They were throwing a lot of strikes and we were watching them go by. We weren't that aggressive. Toward the end of the game we were and started hitting the ball."

In all, Werner was 2-for-4 with a double, two runs scored and three RBI.

PLAYING ODESSA High was a nagging worry for Whalen all week, especially since the Bronchos posted their first district victory of the year Tuesday with a 9-8 decision over San Angelo.

"I was more worried about this game than any other we've played recently becasue they're coming off a win and because they always play us tough. Also, there was no pressure on them. All they had to do was shot up and play. All the pressure was on us to win. They had nothing to lose," said Whalen.

Whalen was also happy with the pitching of Castaneda.

"I thought Ricky did a real good job until he got tired," said Whalen. "It was hot out there (a high of 85 degrees Saturday). He was pitching strong and at the plate he was putting the ball in play. He got a hit and scored the tying run."

Castaneda didn't get the victory, but went 5⅓ innings allowing nine hits, four runs, one walk and struck out nine. He also threw one wild pitch and hit one batter.

De La Garza, 8-4 on the year, finished the game for the victory while Lunceford, 1-3, took the loss.

Bobcats' Childress no hits Eagles

From Staff Reports

San Angelo's Jim Childress awoke the sleeping Bobcats Saturday by tossing a five inning no-hitter at the Abilene Eagles to stop a three-game District 4-5A losing skid.

Childress, who walked five, struck out nine en route to his sixth win of the season against one loss. The Bobcats are 4-6, 8-9. Abilene High dropped to 4-6, 8-9.

San Angelo jumped on Eagle starter Jeff Reese, 6-2, for three unearned runs in the first inning. AHS committed five errors after two were out and the 'Cats chipped in with an infield single to take the early lead.

In Abilene, the Cooper Cougars taught upstart Big Spring a lesson with a 12-3 whipping to end the Steers five-game 4-5A win streak. Dave Tollison broke out of his mini-slump with a two-run triple to give him four RBI on the day.

Cooper teammante Chris Moore added three RBI on two hits and a sacrifice fly. Moore, with 17 runs batted in, and Tollison, are running one-two in the district RBI chase.

Danny Whitford went six innings, scattering four hits to up his season mark to 5-1. The Cougars are 8-2, 18-2. Big Spring fell to 5-5, 8-9.

Cooper maintained its one game lead over Midland High and Odessa Permian with the win. Tuesday, Cooper will travel to Permian for a key district showdown, but then the Cougars will play the remaining three games in Abilene where they've lost just one game in the last four seasons.

Reynold's slam topples Braves

HOUSTON (AP) — With only 30 home runs to his credit in 10 major-league seasons, Houston's Craig Reynolds doesn't list power as one of his assets.

However, Reynolds collected his third career grand slam, with two outs in the sixth inning Saturday night, lifting the Astros to their third straight victory, a 4-3 victory over the Atlanta Braves.

With the Astros trailing 2-0, Reynolds batted for rookie Billy Hatcher and delivered his first pinch-hit homer in his eight-year tenure in Houston. The grand slam made a loser of Rick Mahler, 1-1.

Reynolds has eight of his 21 National League 21 home runs against the Braves and Saturday's blast down the right field line just cleared the orange line, but Houston Manager Hal Lanier said he thought "it was out when he hit it".

Phillies 9, Mets 8

The teams stranded a major-league-record 39 batters in the 5-hour, 3-minute game, two more than Houston and Cincinnati did on July 2, 1976. The Phillies left 23 on base, the Mets 16. New York had 19 hits and Philadelphia 17. The loss was the first for the Mets in three games this season.

Pirates 3, Cubs 1

PITTSBURGH — Johnny Ray hit a three-run homer off Chicago relief ace Lee Smith in the eighth inning Saturday as the Pittsburgh Pirates rallied to beat the Cubs behind Rick Rhoden and reliever Cecilio Guante.

The victory was the first for the Pirates in three games, their first under their new manager, Jim Leyland.

Cardinals 6, Expos 3

ST. LOUIS — John Tudor scattered five hits over 6 1-3 innings for his 18th straight victory at home and also singled and drove home two runs, helping the St. Louis Cardinals remain the only unbeaten team in the major leagues.

Tudor, 2-0, struck out five and walked three in posting his 22nd triumph in his last 23 decisions. He got relief help from Ken Dayley and Todd Worrell as the Cardinals ran their record to 4-0.

Reds 3, Padres 2

SAN DIEGO — Nick Esasky slammed a two-run homer to cap a three-run ninth inning.

Dave Dravecky and Lance McCullers had combined on a four-hit shutout through 8 1-3 innings before pinch-hitter Max Venable hit a one-out double in the ninth to chase McCullers. Dave Parker, who had three hits, doubled off reliever Craig Lefferts for one run. Tim Stoddard replaced Lefferts and after Parker moved to third on a wild pitch Esasky hit his first home run of the season.

American

Rangers top Orioles, 2-1

Associated Press

ARLINGTON — Former Midland Cub Scott Fletcher bounced a two-out single to left field in the bottom of the eighth inning to score Oddibe McDowell from second base and give the Texas Rangers a 2-1 victory over the Baltimore Orioles on Saturday night.

Fletcher's game-winning hit came after McDowell walked with two out and stole second. Two previous baserunners in the inning had been caught stealing and McDowell appeared to be picked off first, but Baltimore first basemen Eddie Murray dropped pitcher Brad Havens' throw and McDowell made it safely to second.

Royals 1, Blue Jays 0

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Dennis Leonard pitched a three-hitter in his first start in almost three years and Jorge Orta's pinch double in the eighth inning drove in the game's only run.

Leonard struck out three and did not give up a walk, retiring 18 batters in a row before Tony Fernandez singled with two out in the ninth. It was his first major-league start since the three-time 20-game winner snapped a tendon beneath his left knee while throwing a pitch against Baltimore on May 28, 1983. His long rehabilitation included four operations.

Indians 6, Tigers 2

CLEVELAND — Joe Carter, Brook Jacoby and Pat Tabler homered and Ernie Camacho pitched out a bases-loaded, none-out jam as Cleveland defeated Detroit.

Carter's two-run homer, his second of the season, highlighted a three-run first inning against loser Jack Morris, 1-1, who has been tagged for six home runs in two appearances this season.

Morris walked four batters in the first inning, throwing 48 pitches as the Indians took a 3-0 lead. Julio Franco drew a one-out walk before Carter's homer. Morris then walked three straight hitters and threw a wild pitch that let Jacoby score.

Mariners 10, Twins 4

MINNEAPOLIS — Danny Tartabull drove in three runs with a single and a two-run homer and Gorman Thomas capped a five-run seventh inning with a two-run homer Saturday, leading the Seattle Mariners.

Seattle starter Mike Morgan, 1-0, allowed four hits in 5 2-3 innings and was bailed out of a sixth-inning jam by Paul Mirabella.

Yankees 7, Brewers 3

Wynegar capped the Yankees' fifth inning with another three-run shot.

White Sox 3, Red Sox 1

CHICAGO — Reid Nichols drove in all three Chicago runs with a pair of singles and Tom Seaver posted his 305th career victory as the White Sox snapped a season-opening four-game losing streak.

Seaver, 1-1, allowed four hits in seven innings, striking out two and walking two. He lost his shutout bid in the sixth inning when Dwight Evans walked, advanced to third on a pair of infield outs and scored on Jim Rice's infield single.

AMERICAN HOME WEEK

REALTOR®

A National Celebration of Homes for People, Business and Industry.

President Reagan declares April 13-19 Home Week

The right of all Americans to own private property, and in particular their own home, is a fundamental principle of our democracy, a founding bedrock of our great democracy. Home ownership promotes citizen involvement and greater participation in our form of government. It also strengthens our economy. As President Abraham Lincoln said, "The strength of a nation lies in the homes of its people."

Anerican Home Week is a national celebration of homes for people, business and industry. It is a week for all Americans to reflect upon the fundamental values of home ownership and its importance to the stability of our society. Through home ownership each family can hold a piece of America.

Owning a home has long been the essence of the American dream because it represents personal security as well as shelter. It is within the home that we rear our families, find privacy and solace. Home owners have strong personal incentives to work for a better neighborhood, to curb crime, to improve education and to achieve greater family stability. This involvement means staying informed and participating politically: working and voting for what contributes to a better standard of living and quality of life for all Americans.

Home owners generally save more than non-home owners, thereby providing greater economic growth through housing and more funds to fill the investment needs of American industry. We can be proud of the fact that two-thirds of this nation's families own their own homes.

I encourage all Americans to join with the more than 700,000 members of the National Association of Realtors in their observance of American Home Week, April 13-19, 1986.

Ronald Reagan

Important facts about property rights

What is meant by private property rights?

These rights can be defined as an aggregate of guaranteed and protected rights that generally include the right to dispose of property in every legal way, to possess it, to use it and to exclude everyone else from interfering with it.

Are there any limitations?

Private property rights cannot be exercised if they unreasonably interfere with another's rights. Private property rights are limited by four governemntal powers: taxation, eminent domain (the government's right to condemn property for the public's benefit and pay just compensation for it), police power and escheat, which is the government's acquisition of property when an owner dies without will or heirs.

What does the erosion of private property rights refer to?

Over the years, government has imposed some unreasonable limitations on private property rights that have little to do with public good.

What are some examples of unreasonable regulations?

Zoning devices, such as minimum lot size requirements, which boost home prices and bar certain economic classes from buying in neighborhoods.

Overly restrictive and unnecessary building codes such as those that require the installation of burglar alarms or dictate the height of bedroom windowsills.

Rent controls which hasten the deterioration of housing stock and eventually cause a disproportionalte shift of the tax burden to single family homeowners.

Unrealistic environmental laws which do not recognize the pressing need for adequate affordable housing.

Historic preservation laws that can declare some property historic, thus preventing the owner from altering the property without special permission from local government.

Is there a conflict between human rights and property rights?

On the contrary, fundamental human rights are freedom and the pursuit of happiness. If the ability to own property is restricted or depleted, the "pursuit of happiness' is likewise affected. The preservation of property rights is fundamental to the enjoyment of human rights.

Many homeowners are now refinancing homes

By MAY ADELAIDE BARBER

With the recent decline in home loan interest rates, many homeowners are checking into the possibility of refinancing their homes. Especially if the house was purchased three or four years ago, when the interest rates were in the 15% to 20% range, the present fixed rate loans of 9% or 10% look mighty inviting. A $50,000 30-year loan at 16% will have monthly principal and interest payment of $672.38. The same 30-year loan at 10% will have a monthly principal and interest payment of $438.79, a savings of $233.59 every month or $2,803.08 per year.

There are, however, several other factors to be considered before jumping into a refinance situation. Taking out a loan on a property, whether it is a new loan or a refinanced loan, costs substantially. Almost all of the same costs of initiating a new loan are incurred in refinancing an existing loan.

Depending on such variables as the discount points involved, the cost of refinancing an existing loan can easily run from 3% to 4% of the loan amount to more than 8%. Part or all of this money must come from the homeowner's pocket. Some loans may add part of the closing costs to the principal amount to be financed. Frequently, however, the entire amount of the closing costs must be paid in cash at the time the loan is finalized. Many homeowners considering a refinance are not prepared to pay out several thousand dollars in order to reduce their monthly payments for the remaining time that they expect to live in the house.

Another item to be considered concerns the amount of the loan. If the house was purchased a few years ago when Midland was growing very fast, and the homeowner made a minimal down payment, there is a good chance that the property will not appraise in today's economic climate for the existing loan balance. This means that the homeowner may have to pull more money out of his or her pocket to pay off the existing loan anad make a down payment of at least 5% of the new appraised price of the property. In some instances of substantial depreciation, the homeowners are getting some financial aid from the mortgage insurance companies. Generally it is less expensive for the mortgage insurance company to help a good customer with a refinanced loan rahter than look at the possibility of a foreclosure and all the expenses entailed with that procedure.

One more thing which the homeowner should be aware of is that the amount of the refinanced loan cannot be more than the balance of the existing loan which it is replacing. According to the homestead laws of Texas, a homestead cannot be refinanced in order to recover part of the equity in the property. In other words, you cannot refinance your homestead and walk away from the closing table with money in your hand. Instead, it is going to cost you.

If your present fixed interest rate is 13% or more and you expect to live in the same house for another three years, it probably would pay you to consider refinancing. If, on the other hand, your interest rate is only a couple of points higher than the present rates and/or you may be transferred in six months, think it over carefully. Refinancing may not be the right thing for you.

Nation celebrates 31st American Home Week

American Home Week is a nationwide celebration of homeownership and private property rights for people, business and industry sponsored by the National Association of Realtors and carried out by its state associations and local boards. This week long celebration helps Realtors to create greater public awareness of private property rights and the need to protect these rights.

American Home Week began in 1956 as "Realtor Week" with the goal of distinguishing Realtors from nonmembers and emphasizing the value of homeownership as the foundation of our democracy. In 1975, the name was changed to "Private Property Week" with the objective to protect the basic human and Constitutional right to own, use and transfer property. Late in 1985, a new name was suggested to better describe the theme of homes for every segment of the community. The Assocation's Board of Directors approved the new name "American Home Week," effective this year. Despite the three changes in name, emphasis has always been on preservation of private property rights, as this year's slogan, "A National Celebratiuon of Homes for People, Business and Industry," illustrates.

Dan Danaer/Midland Reporter-Telegram

Easy-to-use, economical insulating foam helps reduce summertime cooling costs

With warmer temperatures and increased daylight hours signaling winter's departure, Americans across the country are undertaking the now-traditional rites of spring cleaning and home improvement. Typical projects range from reorganizing closets, to washing winter grime from windows, to landscaping the front lawn.

Installing insulation has long been associated with "winterizing" the home. However, protecting against drafts and air leaks is equally valuable now, because proper insulation reduces cooling costs in the summer, just as it reduces heating costs in the winter. And, with Touch 'n Foam® Instant Insulation®, the process is easier and more economical than ever.

Unlike caulking material or other sealants which are solid, heavy and non-insulating, Touch 'n Foam® Instant Insulation® expands to form an outer skin, and the closed air cells within the foam provide the most effective barrier against energy loss. (Foam insulation material carries a higher "R" factor per square inch than any other material available.)

Because Touch 'n Foam® Instant Insulation® is non-solvent, it will never shrink, dry or harden and, because it will never pull away from the material to which it is bonded, it offers long-lasting protection against moisture and air infiltration.

Sealing your home against drafts and air leaks will help reduce fuel bills all year round. With Touch 'n Foam Instant Insulation, an adhesive foanm that expands to fill hard-to-reach openings and provides air-tight insulation, all it takes is the touch of a finger.

Take care with lawn mowers, ladders

Suddenly, it's peak season for lawn mowers and ladders.

The Insurance Information Institute notes that more than 160,000 of their users wind up in hospital emergency rooms every year for treatment of injuries.

Add the 800,000 people injured on stairs, ramps and landings, and you have nearly one million people being treated in hospital emergency rooms.

The Institute says the difference between a trouble-free mowing and ladder season and one filled with injuries can be as simple as learning and observing the following safety tips.

- Lawn mowers. Be sure to keep your hands away from moving blades. Make sure the blades have stopped moving before you clean beneath the mower. Keep children and pets a safe distance away.

Clear sticks, rocks and toys from the mower's path — they could become lethal weapons if hit by the blades. And don't use an electric mower if it's raining or if the grass is wet.

- Ladders. Make sure they're in good condition and set up in the safest possible way. For added protection, have somebody on the ground hold onto the ladder.

Replace loose rungs, broken spreaders and frayed ropes on extension ladders. Never attempt to climb a wobbly ladder. And remember that stepladders can be almost as risky as extension ladders.

- Yard Garden. Don't leave tools and hoses on the ground — somebody could trip over them. Keep chemicals out of the reach of children. And use insecticides, fertilizers and pesticides with care. Follow the instructions and pay close attention to wind conditions.

Injuries from stairs, ramps and landings often are caused by improper footwear, obstacles on stairs or loss of balance.

Around the Home
Consider the home's location!
Tip #6
Check how many homes in the area have "for sale" signs in the yard. If there are a large number, ask why. High turnover usually indicates that the area is not good one in which to settle.

Fascinating Facts

by Bob & Bill Drummond, Licensed Master Plumbers

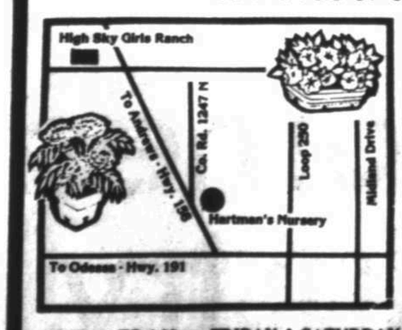

The Taj Mahal was built by the Mogul emperor of Hindustan, Shah Jahan, between 1632 and 1650, as a burial place for his favorite wife Mumtaz Mahall. It has often been described as the most beautiful 17th century building in the world and is generally considered the supreme achievement of Mohammedan architecture. In the central chamber, above the vault in which the bodies of the Shah and his wife are buried, are two centotaphs surrounded by an albster screen of open-world inlaid with precious stones.

Your home may not look like the Taj Mahal, but it's your castle, never the less. Keep it cozy with Coleman Energy Efficient Air Conditioning. Good advice makes care for new carpet a helpful breeze

Caring for new carpet is easy if you have a plan of action. This is simple:

- Vacuum regularly, even if soil is not visible!
- Remove spills and spots promptly.
- Dry clean the main traffic areas.

Vacuuming

Hard surface floors are horizontal, and show soil and spills quickly. They are cleaned by sweeping or mopping. Carpet fibers are vertical, upright surfaces which hide soil that filters down into the pile.

When thousands of soil particles accumulate, then they become visible. Regular vacuuming will remove hidden soil and preserve the appearance of your carpet. Vacuum doorways several times a week, main traffic areas once a week and in corners and long walls, once a month.

Use a vacuum with a brush and beater bar, either an upright or a tank model with these features. Empty and replace the bags regularly, since a half-filled bag reduces the machine's efficiency.

Remove spills and spots promptly

Many household chemicals cause permanent stains that are impossible to remove. Use them carefully. Acne medicines bleach out carpet color, sometimes in high humidity and always during wet cleanings.

Toilet bowl and drain cleaners cause color bleaching and fiber damage. Chlorine bleaches, mildew killers and swimming pool chemicals cause yellow permanent stains. Fruit drinks are especially harmful since they contain synthetic dyes.

Prompt action is the key to removing common spills — coffee, soft drinks, food and grease. Use dry, white towels to blot a wet spill. Never use a wet towel which will dilute and spread the spill. Use a spoon to scrape up a thick spill.

Cover the wet spill with paper towels or a clean, dry, white towel. Weight down with books, using aluminum foil between the books and towel.

Most liquid spills will dry overnight and be absorbed into the towels. If still moist the next day, repeat the process, using dry towels. If discoloration remains after the spot is dry:

1) Mix a tablespoon of liquid dishwashing detergent in a half cup of warm water. Moisten with your fingers a white towel and dab the spot lightly. Alternately dab, then blot with a dry towel.

If the color of the spot transfers into the towel, continue the process until the color transfer stops. Then cover with dry towels, using the overnight steps above.

2) If color does not transfer, try the same "dab and blot" technique using a half-cup white vinegar mixed in one-half cup warm water. If color transfers, continue the process as above. Then cover with dry towels, using the same overnight technique.

3) If neither one nor two shows color transfer, try HOST® Spot Remover, found in many carpet, vacuum, rental and selected hardware stores. Apply Spot Remover to the towel. Never pour directly on the carpet. Use the same dab and blot technique.

If one, two and three fail, most likely you have a permanent stain.

Cleaning

Sooner or later your carpet must be cleaned. Most manufacturers recommend the dry extraction cleaning method today. Wet cleaning methods carry water and detergents down the sides of the upright, vertical fibers into the carpet backing, taking along dissolved soil and spots. Removing all dissolved soil from a wet carpet is impossible.

The soil and spots remain at the base of the pile, and the carpet, at first, looks clean. As the carpet dries, wicking occurs, and the soil and spots come back up to the fiber tips — visible once again!

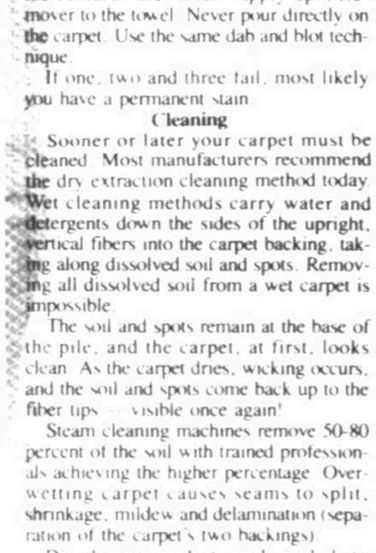

Steam cleaning machines remove 50-80 percent of the soil with trained professionals achieving the higher percentage. Overwetting carpet causes seams to split, shrinkage, mildew and delamination (separation of the carpet's two backings).

Dry cleaning products work similarly to using moist sponges to wipe up soil or spills on a hard surface. HOST® "Dry" Cleaner for Carpets, for example, is organic sponges saturated with a little water, detergents, air fresheners and safe-to-use solvents. These organic sponges clean and absorb at the same time.

Do-it-yourselfers can clean their main traffic areas by renting a lightweight, easy-to-use HOST machine. Brushes on these machines revolve inward and upward, whisking the moist sponges through the carpet fibers.

Soil and spots are dissolved and absorbed by the sponges. These are then vacuumed up, leaving a clean, dry, fresh, ready-to-use carpet with a revived texture.

Your new carpet purchase has made your home more beautiful. You can maintain that beauty for many years with the plan of action which includes HOST Dry Cleaning the main traffic areas and doorways at least twice a year, regular vacuuming and prompt removal of spots and spills.

Use the dab and blot technique to remove spots on carpet. Apply spot remover to towel only; color transfer indicates the spot is removable. Cover area with towels, foil and then weight with books to absorb remaining moisture and spot. Regular dry carpet cleaning of main traffic areas and doorways, combined with vacuuming, will maintain the beauty of your carpet.

An open house to give you answers not create more questions.

At HBF Development, Inc., developers of Mission Dorado, we realize that one of the most important financial decisions you'll ever make is the choice of location for your home or business. That's why we have an Information Center designed to address the tough questions today's prudent buyer demands be answered.

Staffed full time by our personnel, you'll find an atmosphere of warm, professional courtesy. Not high pressure. These are people who respect your time and are committed to giving you all the information you need to make a sound decision.

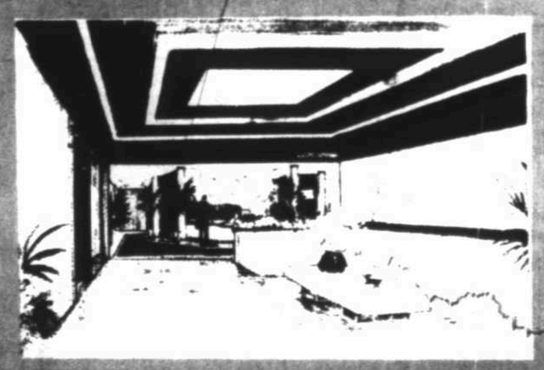

Over the years, people in Odessa and Midland have seen residential areas developed sporadically. A home here. A block of homes there. In a few years, encroached upon by commercial or retail centers that destroy the community feeling of the neighborhoods. But, Mission Dorado, a Master Planned Community, is designed to assure neighborhood integrity. It's planned now so that you you can see how your investment in a business or home site can be enhanced over time.

Commercial Business Center

In this 2,260 acre development, 600 acres are designated as a Commercial Business Center. Separated from the residential area by lush landscape and thoroughfares, the business area has sites for offices, retail shopping, hotels, churches, financial institutions, medical facilities, restaurants, multi-family housing, schools, recreational parks and other facilities essential in a self-sufficient community. For those businesses serving both Odessa and Midland, Mission Dorado offers convenience and prestige in a prime location at a price that makes it one of the best values in the market. And, at today's prices, the potential for a substantial appreciation on your investment is indeed attractive.

All in all, whether your interest is in a personal residence, priced from $80,000 - $500,000, or in a choice business location, your best decision will be made when you know all the pertinent facts. To be assured that you have all the knowledge to make the best decision, a visit to the Mission Dorado Information Center is where the prudent buyer begins.

After only two years since completion, State Highway 191, which connects Odessa and Midland and borders Mission Dorado on the north, has a daily traffic count of over 12,000 vehicles. This represents 80% of the daily traffic volume of 50 year old U.S. Highway 80 connecting the two cities, located just south of Mission Dorado. State Highway 191 is truly the new growth corridor for the Odessa and Midland area.

OUR ROLE
At first glance, a real estate company's role is to simply sell your property. But at Coldwell Banker, we take our responsibility to you a lot further than that.
More specifically, our role is to sell your house:
▸ For the best possible price.
▸ In the shortest possible time.
▸ With the least inconvenience to you.
We think you'll agree that our role and your goal are one and the same.

Let's talk about Real Estate
This week 1552 residential properties were on the Multiple listing Market. The implications of this to a buyer should be obvious: there is a wonderfully wide range of properties from which to choose and purchases can usually be made at fair, competitive prices. Add to this the fact that interest rates experienced another small dip Monday (quotes from at least one firm included 9¼% on a 15 year fixed) and it just reinforces the fact that NOW is the time to buy! And if you must sell your present property to purchase another home to fit changing family needs, please let me encourage you to call us to assist you through these more complex, but quite attainable transactions. At no cost or obligation we will help you determine the price at which you should sell and what funds you will need to purchase, by preparing a market analysis of your present home then showing you what is available to meet your new requirements. Then if you want to proceed, we will work together to attain your buying/selling goals. We've been doing just this for Midlanders for years!

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Ellis is featured in the third of a four-part Sunday series on the Midland Junior Woman's Club's 17th Annual Parade of Homes benefit. Proceeds from the homes tour will go to the Palmer Drug Abuse Program, the Permian Basin Center for Battered Women and Their Children, Hearthstone and the Educational Division on Child Abuse through the Rape Crisis Center. The Parade will be presented from 1:30-5:30 p.m. April 27. Tickets are $7.50 and are available from club members. Children under age 12 will not be admitted and tickets will not be sold at the door. For information, call 689-8314, 683-6406 or 699-6696.

THE ELLIS HOME

A reflection of beauty is one way to describe the home of Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Ellis at 5501 N. "A" Street, No. 28 in Saddle Club Lakes. Mirrors cover the walls of the entry way, living room, dining room and master bath and several closet doors.

The tri-level home, built by James Rasnick, is a spacious 5,200-square-foot showpiece representing three years of planning.

"I like to plan ahead," Mrs. Ellis said.

She and her husband worked with Pierce, Goodwin and Alexander architects of Dallas to design the home, which was just completed last April. The house is equipped with all of the modern conveniences, including an elevator servicing all three levels.

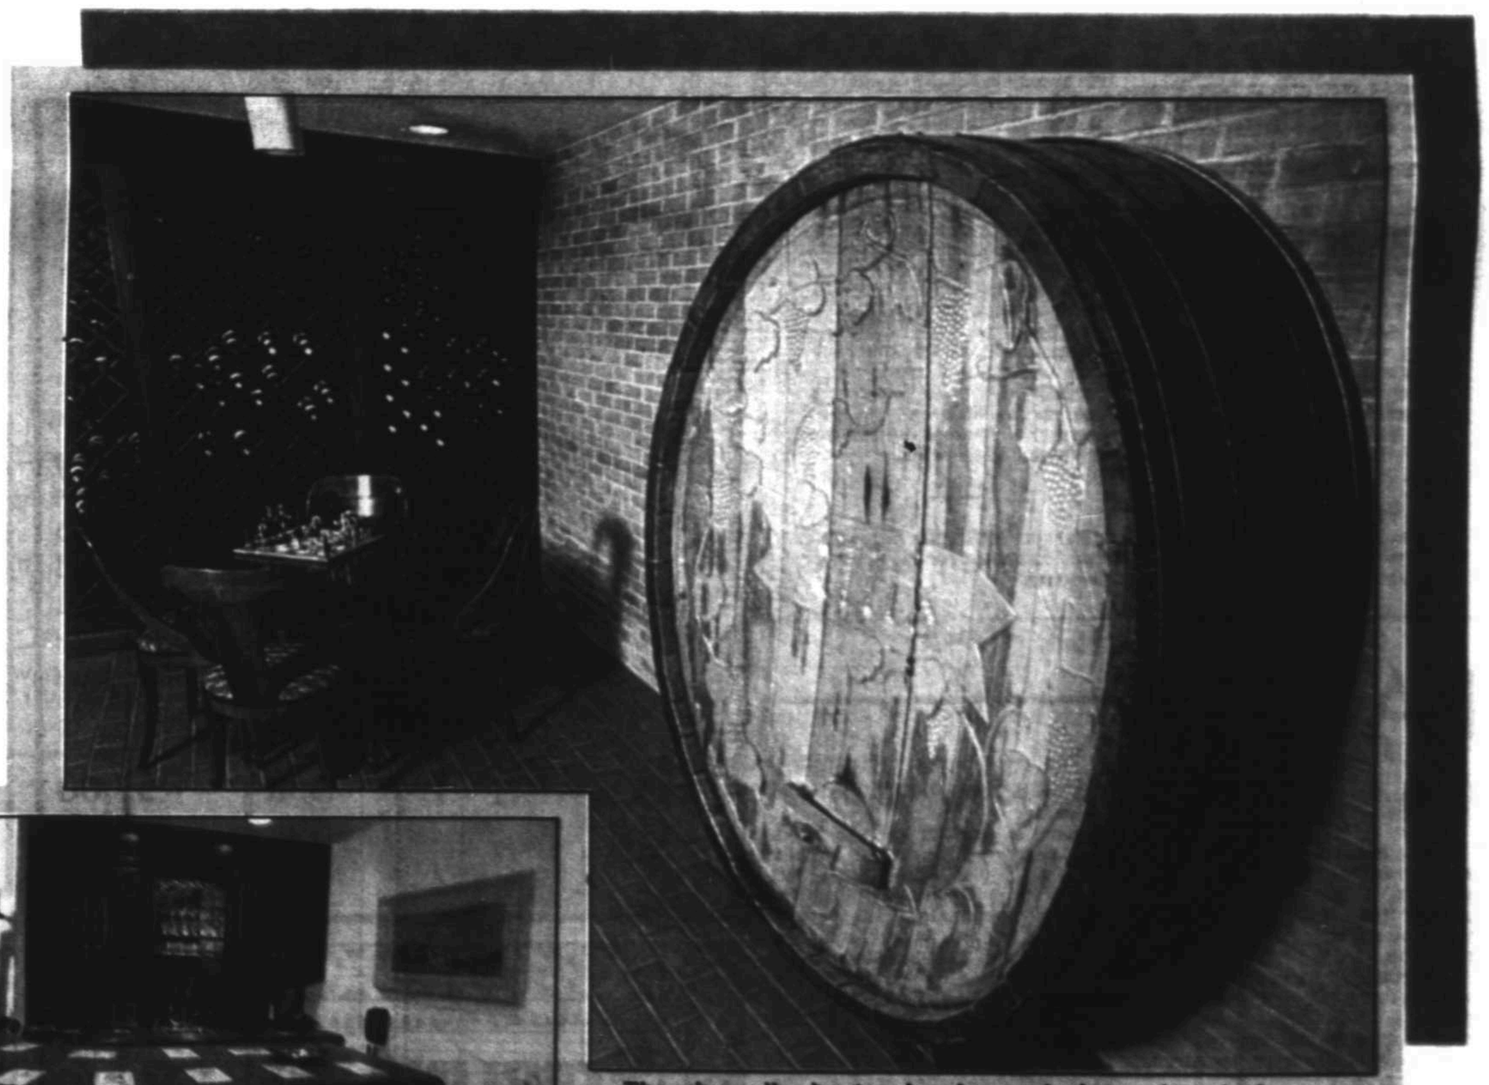

"It really came in handy when we were moving in," Mrs. Ellis said. "The movers loved it when they moved in the washer and dryer upstairs."

In addition to the laundry room, the top floor includes the master bedroom and bath, a conversation area and a guest room with a bath.

While touring the upstairs of the Ellis home, the master bath is one room not to be missed — a room of mirrors. In every direction, mirrors cover the walls, doors, cabinets, light switches and electrical outlets almost creating the illusion that these objects do not exist in the room. The sunken white marble tub is accented with gold and crystal fixtures and is surrounded by a multitude of beautiful plants and a skylight above the tub.

The wine cellar also has a wine-tasting bar.

A Monet pattern decorates the master bedroom.

By MARILYN McKNIGHT HARRISON

Since the members of the Midland Junior Woman's Club have children of their own, it is only natural that they have earmarked proceeds from their 17th annual Parade of Homes on April 27 for programs benefiting the youngsters of the community.

This year the sale of tickets will be directed toward four local organizations:

The Permian Basin Center for Battered Women and Their Children for its day-to-day operating expenses; the Educational Division of the Rape Crisis Center to make children aware of the problems of sexual abuse; the Palmer Drug Abuse Program for the direct services of the counselors of the younger children, ages 10 to 14 years old, where drug use is becoming more widespread, and Hearthstone (an emergency shelter for children from birth to age 18 who need a place to stay due to family circumstances) for playground equipment.

The lovely homes to be featured on this year's Parade are those of Lucy and Glenn Ellis in Saddle Club Lakes, Robyn and Jack Hightower in the Warwick Addition, Donna and Randal Kirk and Mrs. Jayne Kirk in Saddle Club Ranch Estates, and Cowden Oliver in Saddle Club North.

The $7.50 tickets are currently available from the club's 65 members. Parade chairmen are Pat (Mrs. Steve) Dickerson, Marsha (Mrs. Larry) Crawford and Gretchen (Mrs. Alan) Moravick. Club president is Georgiana (Mrs. Kenny) Burnett.

RECENT HOUSE GUESTS of Susan and Ron Britton were Liza and Bill Cobbett of Wallingford, Conn. Both are on the faculty at Choate Rosemary Hall, where Liza also serves as dean of women, and they became friends of the family when the Brittons' daughter, Carolyn, was a student there.

Although they flew into Midland in the midst of a typical West Texas sandstorm, the Cobbetts were nevertheless impressed by their visit here — particularly the uniqueness of the Great Southwest's landscape and by the friendliness of the people. During a brief trip to New Mexico, they visited the Carlsbad Caverns and other attractions. A snowstorm forced them to make an overnight stop at Cloudcroft, but they thoroughly enjoyed the hospitality of The Lodge. Back in Midland, they were honored with a party at the Brittons.

In other Britton news, Carolyn recently was initiated into the Pi Beta Phi chapter at the University of Arizona. The initiation ceremony was attended by her mother, who was a member of that chapter, and her grandmother, Gertrude (Mrs. Edwin) Alstrin, and her great-aunt, Helen Giffert, who were University of Missouri Pi Phis.

The bride's chosen colors of peach and ivory were featured in the decorations. Co-hostesses were Jackie (Mrs. Earl) Gaertner, Nancy (Mrs. Jack) Jordan, Carol (Mrs. James) Lamb, Nancy (Mrs. Arthur) Oestmann, Norman (Mrs. Horace) Robb, Colleen (Mrs. Vince) Scury, and Carolyn (Mrs. Larry) Seright.

Among the 40 guests were Paul's mother, Genevieve (Mrs. Harry) Libby, and his sister, Lisa Libby.

The couple will be married May 17 at St. Luke's United Methodist Church. Patti is a consultant with Southwestern Bell Telephone's Marketing Department, and Paul is a senior at Oklahoma State University.

MARJORIE AND DAN KOZAK are enjoying a family reunion in Houston this weekend. The christening of their first grandchild, Ashley Elizabeth Kozak, is the occasion for this special get-together.

The three-and-a-half month baby, daughter of Lee Ann and Dr. Jeffrey Kozak, is being baptized today at St. Paul's United Methodist Church. She is wearing a family heirloom, the christening dress previously worn by both Marjorie and her daughter, Danette.

The baby's godparents are Danette and her husband, Ron Wright, of LaJolla, Calif. The Wrights flew in for the weekend from Acapulco, Mexico, where they are temporarily living while involved in real estate development. Also present are Ashley's great-grandfather, Frank Kozak of Oklahoma City, and the baby's great-aunts and great-uncles from Oklahoma City, Santa Fe, N.M., and Capistrano Beach, Calif.

Prior to the christening, Marjorie enjoyed the experience of grandmothering for the first time. She cared for Ashley for two weeks when Lee Ann returned to Ben Taub Hospital as head of the Physical Therapy Department. Meanwhile, Jeff is completing his third year of residency in orthopedic surgery at Baylor College of Medicine, where he will become chief orthopedic resident in July.

LISA JOWELL, daughter of newcomers Susan and Jack Jowell and granddaughter of longtime resident Opal (Mrs. E.J.) Cramer, is a spring pledge of Delta Gamma social sorority at Texas Tech. A freshman, she is also a new member of Delta Sigma Pi business fraternity.

Having moved his family here last summer from Edmond, Okla., Jack is with Sun Exploration and Production Co. In addition to Lisa, the Jowells have a daughter, Laurie, a student at Midland Freshman High School.

PARADE

Just outside the master bedroom is a conversation area with a brick fireplace and a balcony that overlooks another tour highlight located on the ground floor — the safari or trophy room.

This room is reminiscent of an adventure into (or "out of") Africa. Displayed on the walls of the safari room is a portion of Ellis' collection of exotic trophies from his African hunting trips.

"He goes big game hunting as often as he can," Mrs. Ellis said. Some of the trophies include a zebra rug and trophy heads of a gazelle, a Cape buffalo and a wart hog. "We still have 14 left to mount," Mrs. Ellis noted.

The remainder of the ground level consists of an entry way, wet bar with sitting area, breakfast nook, kitchen, dining room, living room, one and one half baths and a study that can be converted to a bedroom if needed.

Points of interest are the handmade cherry cabinets in the kitchen and Mrs. Ellis' collection of over 300 spoons from all over the world, which is framed in the dining room. "I have a bunch I haven't even gotten framed yet," Mrs. Ellis said.

In the basement room of the Ellis home is a wine cellar complete with its own tasting bar. The focal point of this room is an enormous hand-carved (complete with the Ellis' name) cask dominating one wall. The cask was purchased in the Napa Valley and shipped to Midland.

The exterior of the Ellis home is surrounded by an extremely out-of-the-ordinary West Texas landscape. A brick terrace encircles three sides of the house and behind the dining area is a lap pool and outdoor jacuzzi. The view beyond the terrace reveals a beautifully landscaped lake with a small bridge crossing and fountain.

Medical facilities harboring measles

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

While infection in medical facilities accounted for only 0.7 percent of U.S. cases from 1980 to '82, it made up 2.9 percent of the cases in 1983 and '84, the Centers for Disease Control reported in the Journal of the American Medical Association.

Dr. Ronald M. Davis recommends in the article that doctors' offices have one waiting area for routine "well baby" visits and a separate area for children who are sick.

Half of the 241 doctors'-office measles cases in 1983 and '84 involved one child catching it from another. Often, the children catching measles were younger than 15 months, too young to have been vaccinated.

Ironically, the fact that measles is relatively rare may account for the increasing proportion being spread in medical facilities, Davis reports.

Copley News Service

When you have a nosebleed, don't apply ice. The cold doesn't penetrate far enough. Instead the Mayo Clinic's Health Newsletter suggests the following.

With thumb and index finger, pinch nose for five to 10 minutes, breathing through your mouth. Putting pressure on the nasal septum often stops the flow of blood.

Sit or stand up. Being upright reduces the blood pressure in the veins of your nose and discourages bleeding.

Neutron beam therapy used for experimental cancer treatment

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Neutron beam therapy, an experimental form of radiation treatment for cancer, uses heavy, subatomic particles — neutrons — to produce a high-speed "beam" that is directed at tumors.

According to Dr. Robert Graves of the University of Rochester Cancer Center, research he is conducting will determine the physiological effects that treatment may have on patients.

The energy emitted by the neutron beams will indicate the amount of radiation patients receive and verify safe yet effective radiation levels, he says.

Lifestyle policies

The policies for publication of announcements in the Lifestyle Department of The Midland Reporter-Telegram are:

Information for Sunday pages must be in our office by 5 p.m. the preceding Tuesday. For publication in a weekday paper, we must receive the information by noon two days before the information is to run. For example, an item for Wednesday's paper must be received by noon Monday.

Engagement announcements must appear at least two weeks before the wedding date. Wedding announcements must appear within one month of the event.

Engagements, weddings, anniversaries and club notices must be submitted in writing on forms available in the Lifestyle office. All materials must include the signature and telephone number of the person submitting them. These items appear in the Sunday paper only.

We cannot mail pictures or forms to persons within Midland. Pictures must be picked up in the Lifestyle office within one month after publication. Unclaimed photos are discarded after a month.

Photographs may be submitted with bridal announcements, but are not required. Portraits of the either the bride-elect or of the future bride and bridegroom together may be submitted with engagement announcements. Wedding photographs should be of the bride only.

Photos should be vertical, black and white, glossy finish, studio portraits. Studio color pictures may be submitted, but they may reproduce poorly. Quality reproduction cannot be assured when color prints are used. In general, snapshots are not acceptable.

There is no charge for publication of photographs and stories.

Flying flowers pampered

Every week, approximately 50,000 blooms of orchids are shipped from Australia by Emery Worldwide to Europe, the Orient and the United States in the climate-controlled and pressurized sections of its airplanes' cargo bays.

Because the Australian orchids, like all orchids, are perishable and delicate, shippers must move fast to ensure delivery in near perfect condition.

Wedding parties outfitted

By DELORES CARSON
Hearst News Service

Fashion is offering a wide choice for the bride, and with each style for her, there is a corresponding one for the wedding party.

However, the Miami Vice Collection by After Six offers an alternative. Imagine the groomsmen and ushers in bright tropical colors, the bridesmaids in dresses that complement. One choice might be purple haze for the best man, groomsmen and ushers. The maid of honor and bridesmaids would complete the picture by wearing mauve.

The bouquets could pick up the color from the gentlemen's attire for the most colorful of weddings. The groom's best choice for this scenario is white tails.

Too avant-garde? Try tuxedos with the cummerbunds and ties matching the bridesmaids dresses. Tailoring is comfortable, with pleated trousers, broader shoulders and deep armholes. Lapels are notched or peaked, but the most popular is the shawl style.

Smith further stressed the use of color.

Daytime weddings are no less colorful, but the emphasis is on the bridesmaid, with the newest designs available in florals.

English garden pastels or Laura Ashley-type prints to larger, bright chintz flowers are enlivening wedding parties everywhere from the church to the home garden.

The editors stressed this advice for the bridesmaid: Create a total look. The handbag, shoes and headpiece should all be chosen to blend or match the dress. Hosiery choice should be in the same color as the dress and shoes; it should always be very sheer and pastel.

For bridal party head-wear, the news is in the floral wreath, no longer the dainty spray of baby's breath flowers. It is a minimum of two inches in width and woven with pearls and beads among silk flowers.

MISTER ROGERS

Laps: What's in a chair?

By FRED ROGERS
with BARRY HEAD

Chairs have backs...and arms...and legs...and seats. If I didn't know better, I might be inclined to look under a chair to find the seat; our seats are usually underneath us. But then I can understand the logic: We put our backs against the back of the chair, our arms on the arms, our legs where the chair's legs are, and we put our seats on the seat.

All the same, it seems to me that that's adult logic. If a very young child could tell us what he or she thought the parts of a chair were, I wouldn't be surprised to hear that child call the seat a lap. After all, we don't put just our seats in a chair; we put our laps there, too.

Laps often have a deep and special importance for a child. Children usually spend a lot of time there. Laps are closely associated with nursing and feeding. They're warm, safe places. In the earliest days and weeks of life, a child in a lap, leaning up against a caregiver's body, may hear a lot of internal sounds that became familiar during the nine months before birth.

And laps, along with breasts and necks and shoulders, may come to represent for children one of the closest points of physical contact they can have with the caregivers they are growing to love.

One child, whenever his mother would go out and leave him with a babysitter, regularly toddled over to the chair he most associated with his mother and clambered up into its...lap. For him, there seemed little doubt that it was closest thing he could have to his mother's actual body.

Once there, he'd comfort himself during his worry and sadness over her departure by rocking himself (as his mother had often done while she sang to him) and sucking his thumb in a re-creation of the nursing times he and his mother so often shared.

He knew where he was, if everyone else thought he was sitting on a seat.

There's something else that I've seen toddlers do many times, and you may have seen it too: A mother or father will take the toddler's older brother or sister up onto the lap to look at a book or share a hug, and the toddler will come tottering across the room and protest, complaining loudly and tugging at the parent's knees or the older child's legs.

"That's my place!" the toddler seems to be saying. "Mine!" The same thing can happen when a new baby is the one who gets to sit in the lap — sometimes, it must seem, almost all the time. If parents can seem like possessions to a young child, and I believe they can, then a parent's lap may become one of the most intimate and prized possessions that one child can take away from another.

Those kinds of possessions are hard to let go, even to share. Many adults find that they have a favorite chair in the house, a favorite "lap." It can be hard to have a stranger or even a friend unwittingly take that place. That can be particularly true if the chair once belonged to a beloved parent or grandparent, once held a loving lap that held us, too.

When we recognize that feeling in ourselves, we're coming close to experiencing how a young child may feel when a special lap has been usurped. We may chide ourselves and chide our children over what can seem a small matter, but we need to remember that for all of us for a time, laps and love may have been almost one and the same. And where love is concerned, small matters can seem large indeed.

Bridal registries become more important

By DELORES CARSON
Hearst News Service

The bride has chosen her gown and the wedding party outfits have been planned. Now is the time to visit the bridal registry.

"Historically, individuals are marrying older. The median age is now 24 and 26 for the bride and groom respectively," said Kathy Casey, merchandising editor of Modern Bride magazine. Because of later marriages, many couples have apartments and established ideas on decor.

"Isolating your new lifestyle preferences before the wedding is more important than ever," said Casey. "We categorize into the following ideals for the purpose of understanding other's tastes."

■ Traditional: In this category, the couple might be planning the most formal of weddings. The bride would choose a dress with a fitted bodice, very full skirt and a cathedral train. Their decorating tastes would run to heavy woods, and formal rooms.

■ Sophisticate: These are the individuals who do not heed the tried and true. They are dramatic and define style. The bride would choose haute couture and this season might opt for the new form-fitting jersey. Their lifestyle would be best expressed as eclectic, or perhaps art deco.

■ Contemporary: This bride too is very fashion-conscious. Although there are many choices, she might wear a Southern belle gown with a large picture hat. If country decor is in, that might be her choice.

You don't feel like you are in any of the categories? Don't despair. Most people find preferences in each area.

"The idea is to inspire the bride and groom to think about what they do like and find the necessary compromises before the decisions are made and money is spent," said Casey.

Casey advises registering everything you need at every price. Don't forget your 12-year-old cousin may want to buy something and her pocket book won't accommodate china and silver. Groups such as your office co-workers or professional organization, however, may want to combine resources and buy a large gift.

Doctor: Children need coping skills

Hearst News Service

Though children are among the most physically and mentally vulnerable when it comes to surviving major disasters, little is done to help them prepare for natural calamities or to cope with the traumatic aftermath, says Dr. Raquel E. Cohen, who served as a consultant on the psychological effects of last year's volcanic eruption that killed thousands in Colombia and the earthquake that wreaked similar devasatation in Mexico City.

Cohen, director of training for child psychiatry at the University of Miami, says there are specific skills that can be taught to help people survive disasters.

"We should prepare children in school to cope," Cohen says. "There are skills that they can be trained in. The instinct that we have in disasters is for survival, but instinct isn't enough. The instinct was enough when we were a very primitive society — when you could smell the tiger coming. But we don't use our sensory skills the way we did."

Now, with the technology of the 20th century, people are at a disadvantage when natural disasters strike. They need to be trained, Cohen says, in programs that teach basic outdoor survival skills.

Cohen says the horror that attended each disaster was enough to make the strongest person falter, so it was no surprise that children suffered immensely. And beeause many of the survivors could not be sure about the fate of their loved ones, psychiatrists had extra problems in helping people cope in the aftermath.

"The survivors' mourning process was suspended," she says. "That was a major mental health problem."

Many children who survived were unable to sleep, to interact with others or to get through each day without major psychiatric symptoms such as delusions. With time and intensive therapy, however, the children were able to experience their grief and go on with their lives, she says. The danger, Cohen says, is that without expressing their grief the children would bottle up their emotions and remain ill.

"We asked them to think of the most frightening thing that happened to them in the earthquake and to draw it," Cohen says, explaining that the early drawings were full of horrible scenes and death. "Eventually, the drawings became much more peaceful."

MENLO PARK, Calif. (AP) — Borderline drunk drivers, those who were just over the legal limit, sometimes could avoid arrest here in 1984 if they could walk a straight line.

Today, the Menlo Park police use a roadside saliva test that determines the driver's blood alcohol concentration while the driver remains in the vehicle.

The test, called Alcosan, uses chemically treated paper that indicates the degree of drunkeness by the shade of blue the paper turns when applied to the driver's saliva.

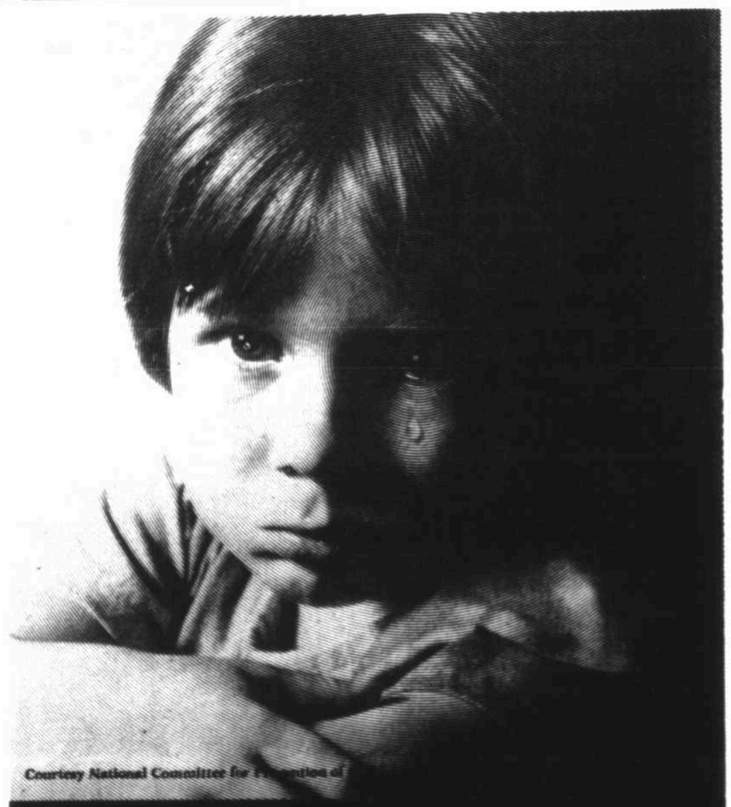

Since the new Alcosan test has been adopted, more arrests closer to the legal limit have been reported.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

By NEIL SOLOMON, M.D.

Dr. Solomon

Dear Dr. Solomon: My youngster has an allergy and, as a result, we very reluctantly parted with the family dog. Would his allergy be affected if he has a parakeet or canary as a substitute pet? — Mrs. K.D. Falls Church, Va.

Dear Mrs. D: The presence of a bird in the home is not a good idea if your child has an allergy. In the first place, the allergy may extend to the bird's feathers. But even if this does not become a problem, many patients are allergic to the mold with which bird droppings can become contaminated.

I can sympathize with a child's desire to have a pet but, from a medical standpoint, the presence of a pet may aggravate his or her allergy.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I have a friend who is always cracking his knuckles. I find this annoying and he agrees that it is a nervous habit but that he could stop it any time he wanted to. Can't this habit also be harmful to a person's health? It seems to me that it could cause something like arthritis if it is done for very long. — Betty, Los Angeles

Dear Betty: Dr. Frederic C. McDuffie, of the Arthritis Foundation, says that knuckle cracking does not cause arthritis and is generally harmless. Of course, if the habit is done too enthusiastically, the person may rupture a tendon or pull a bone out of place.

Dear Dr. Solomon: Would you please explain what the purpose of a TENS unit is and how it operates? A friend of mine tells me that it's just what I need, but he didn't have much information about it. — Debra, Cincinnati, Ohio.

Dear Debra: TENS stands for "transelectrical nerve stimulation." The unit is actually an electrical device that is used to relieve pain. It is believed to work by stimulating certain nerves that block the transmission of pain. Although the unit can make a person feel better, at least for a while, it has no effect on the underlying condition that is causing the person to experience the pain.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I have arthritis and I can go along for a while without too much trouble, and then the arthritis will suddenly start giving me a lot of trouble. Would you have any idea about why something like that should happen? — Mrs. D.L., Bloomington, Minn.

Dear Mrs. L.: In some instances, a flare-up of arthritis can be traced to a specific cause, such as extensive use of a joint, a change in the medication that has been prescribed for the condition, or even a change in the weather or in the patient's emotional condition. In many instances, however, there is no apparent reason for the flare-up.

For Curtis, Manchester, N.H.: In general, daytime sleepiness, regardless of the patient's age, may be a sign of a sleep disorder. Slightly fewer than one of every 100 Americans buys on over-the-counter sleep preparation.

Dr. Solomon is a columnist for Los Angeles Times Syndicate. If you have a medical question, write to Neil Solomon, M.D., P.O. Box 21487, Pikesville, Md. 21208. Dr. Solomon cannot give personal replies but will answer as many qestions as possible in his column.

Baby scale inexpensive, important

Copley News Service

A cheap, sturdy baby scale that can be made easily in developing countries has been announced by the United Nations' Children's Fund. A Kenyan manufacturer estimates he can make the new "hanging spring balance" scale for the equivalent of $4 (U.S. currency).

Monitoring a baby's weight and then plotting changes on a growth chart is the best way to catch malnutrition at an early stage.

Medical progress could increase older population

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

If medical science makes steady progress against the diseases that kill older people, then people 85 or older will make up 18 percent of the population in 100 years.

Such a dramatic change from the 1 percent figure of today is at least "conceivable," a study in the American Journal of Public Health concludes, and even without any medical progress, the percentage of people in that age group will more than double by the year 2080.

If, on the other hand, death rates drop by just 1 to 2 percent a year, then 40 percent of the 2080 U.S. population will be over 65.

"Delayed retirement will almost certainly be required to save Social Security from bankruptcy," predicts James W. Vaupel of the University of Minnesota. "If more of the elderly hang onto their jobs, however, promotional opportunities will diminish for the young ... "

Vaupel and fellow researcher Ann E. Gowan discuss the prospect of an older America in their article, "Passage to Methuselah." Among their predictions:

- Society will face the "major challenge" of letting old people continue to work while giving young people a chance.
- People will work 28 hours a week from age 22 to age 82, taking off two months a year and an entire year every decade "for ongoing education."
- Even people working until age 82 can still expect 18 years of retirement.
- Liberal arts education will be especially important because it "helps people maintain an active interest in life."

Intensive care patient survival depends on coordination

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

Whether patients survive in the intensive care unit depends less on the amount of high-tech equipment available than on effective coordination between doctors and nurses, a George Washington University study suggests.

GW researchers looked at 5,030 cases in the ICUs of 13 hospitals. All the hospitals had similar technical capabilities, but they differed in organization, staffing and commitment to teaching and research.

"Hospitals that had good coordination of staff outperformed hospitals where physicians and nurses frequently disagreed," said Dr. William A. Knaus, director of the ICU research unit at George Washington.

Mortality rates in the 13 hospital ICUs ranged from 8.9 to 38.3 percent, but some hospitals treated a higher percentage of severely ill patients.

The study, published in the Annals of Internal Medicine, did not identify the 13 hospitals by name in the ranking of mortality rates.

A FREE CRUISE

Want to feel the refreshing sea breeze ruffle your hair as a ship's deck gently sways beneath your feet, but simply don't have the time or spare change for an expensive cruise?

How about a brief voyage you can take the entire family on without paying a single cent?

Of course, this is a very brief cruise — just 15-20 minutes one way.

Admittedly, the Bolivar ferry, which runs between Galveston and the Bolivar Peninsula, doesn't offer many of the attractions one might find on the Queen Elizabeth II, such as shuffleboard courts, swimming pools, health spas, luxury suites and dining rooms.

On the ferry, you couldn't fit all that stuff between the automobiles parked on deck.

The ferry is operated by the Texas Department of Highways and Public Transportation to carry cars and trucks from the island to the peninsula. Without the ferry, travelers would have to drive all the way around Galveston Bay.

Probably most of the people who sail on it, however, are sightseeing tourists rather than motorists who really need the shortcut to the mainland. After making the ferry crossing, many people just turn around to ride back across.

The ferries — several normally run during peak times — operate 24 hours a day, departing at roughly 20 minute intervals, in all but the very worst weather.

Crew members wave drivers aboard and direct them on where to park on the open deck. Other passengers just walk onto the ferry, which can greatly cut the waiting time to get aboard.

The ferry's superstructure juts up out of the deck like the bridge of an aircraft carrier and has observation platforms which provide a fine view of the passing scenery.

Leaving the Galveston Ship Channel, the ferries sail by Seawolf Park on Pelican Island. Ferry passengers can see Seawolf Park's two World War II warships, the destroyer escort USS Stewart and the submarine USS Cavalla.

The ferries then enter the open waters of Bolivar Roads, which is heavily traveled by pleasure and fishing boats passing to and from Galveston Bay and the Gulf of Mexico as well as larger ships traveling the Houston Ship Channel.

During the recent spring break, the ferry ride seemed popular with vacationing college students since it combined two of their favorite attributes: it was free and provided an excuse to meet members of the opposite sex.

"Hey, look at that old shrimp boat," is, after all, probably a better line to strike up a conversation with than, "Hey, baby, what's your sign?"

Even as modest a vessel as a ferry has some of the romance of the sea.

From the bow, one can revel in the cool, salty spray in one's face, particularly on the older ferries with open fronts. In fact, unsuspecting passengers can easily get soaked by standing too close to the front when the water is choppy.

The stern is the preferred spot for watching the inevitable seagulls. Many passengers bring along pieces of stale bread and crackers to throw to the gulls, who glide effortlessly behind and beside the ferry awaiting hand-outs.

Of course, regular ferry commuters are pretty blase about all this and often don't even bother to get out of their cars during the short trip.

The other passengers only grudgingly rush back into their cars to be ready to drive off when the ferry docks on the opposite side.

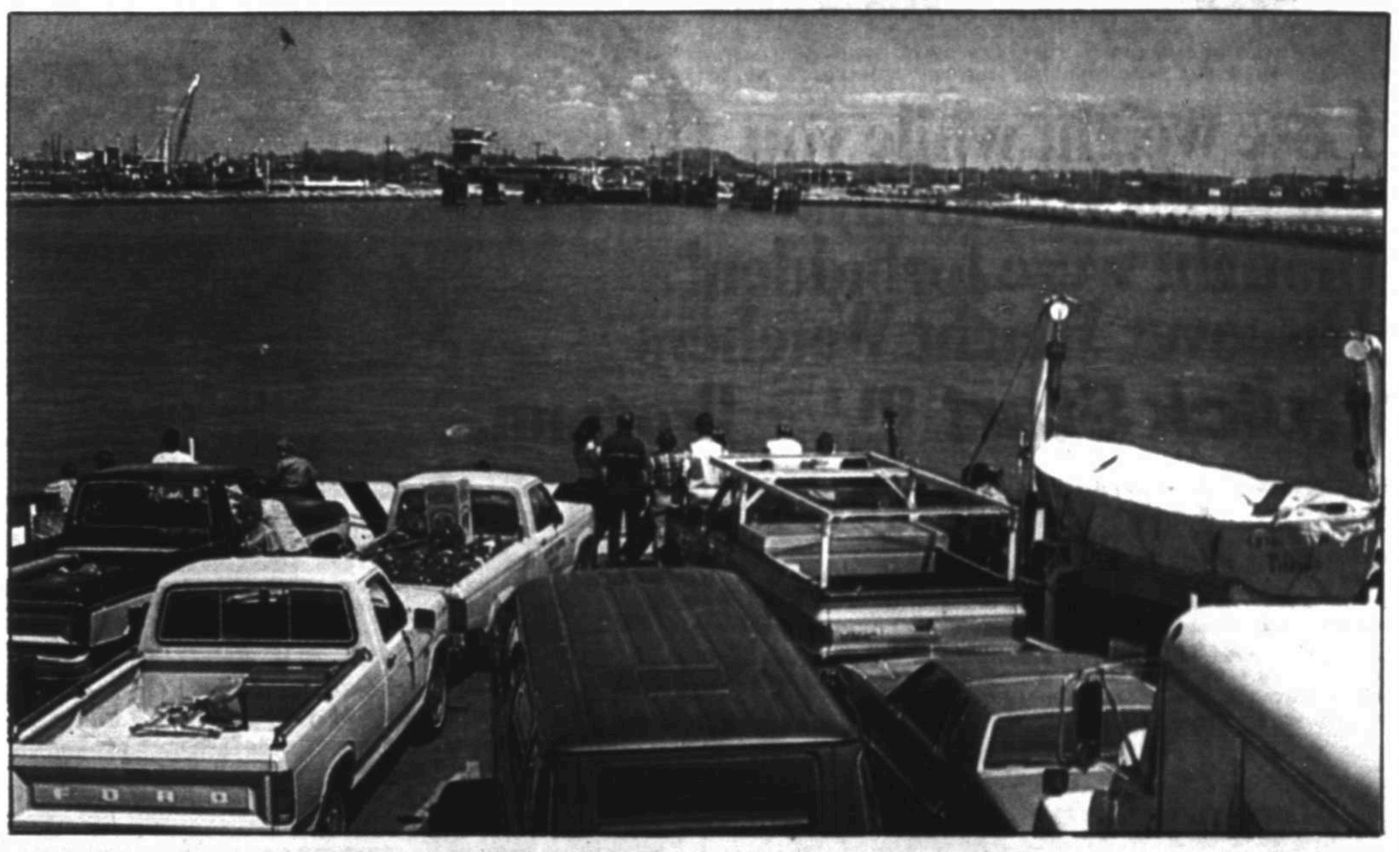

The Bolivar side near the ferry slip is fairly barren, with the sole attractions being a bait shop and an abandoned lighthouse.

Please see FERRY, Page 3F

ASK DR. RUTH

Family's acceptance may cause older Romeo's reluctance

By DR. RUTH WESTHEIMER

Dr. Westheimer

Q. My son and his wife (I live with them) don't mind if my male friend (71) stays with me overnight, but he says it would inhibit him. His rooming house, motels and lovers' lanes are out. What can I do?

A. Your 71-year-old may be ducking lovemaking, even though you may have said you don't expect Olympic-class performance. Just saying that won't always charm a man into bed. And then, he may really dislike your son's tolerance. It may seem wrong to him, not filial enough. He may think those "kids" are really kinky — voyeurs, perhaps. Probably he would rather be alone with you somewhere, to let intimacy grow between you. I take it the budget won't allow that.

I think it would be nice if, just once, or now and then, you two could have an overnight trip to the shore or to the bright lights — no pressure to "do anything." And sometimes your son and his wife could go away all day, or overnight, leaving you two alone to do whatever comes easily.

Under protection of privacy, a magic moment could melt all his understandable reluctance. In time he would probably get used to being near your family, accepting their acceptance.

Q. Since I got married I have had painful monthly periods. Will this make conceiving a baby difficult?

A. I'm flattered to have people trust me, but you must see a gynecologist, a "women's doctor," about anything like that. Such physicial problems have to be dealt with by a physician, and in person, not by mail.

Q. An elderly man told me he was depressed when he had an orgasm but didn't ejaculate. I learned later that this was usual after a prostatectomy and not a sign that sex has left the man's life, but by then the man had died. Shouldn't his doctor have told him?

A. We need to educate our doctors about human sexuality and its importance in helping patients to recover. Patients should be encouraged to ask any questions that are on their mind, making lists so they won't forget to ask during visits by or to the doctor. It is every patient's right to be told the probable sexual effects of a procedure or illness, especially anything as startling as what your friend experienced.

Frequently doctors simply forget to speak to patients about sexual effects of a medical condition, operation or treatment. The patient's sex life or concern with it just isn't uppermost in the doctor's mind.

If a patient, or a patient's spouse, should ask about sexual activity, the doctor will often have a good deal of encouragement to offer. Patients and families tend to think things will be much more limited than is really the case. So do bring the matter up if you ever have forebodings about your sex life.

THE SUBJECT IS ROSES

This spring's unusual weather stressful to roses

By JOY BUTTS

Lots of roses are already bursting with blossoms all around the Permian Basin. We hope some of them are yours, or where you can enjoy their beauty. We are having a hard spring; hard because we have received no rain in this year's first quarter — only .43 inch, so far.

How can we help rosebushes during this stressful time? With no rainfall, extreme heat far too early in the year has compounded our problem. When this happens, roses suffer along with all outdoor vegetation, including the native plants.

The natural cycle of the rosebush is to awake from dormancy, put out fresh foliage, sprout new basal canes from its bud union, produce a great energetic burst of bloom and then to make its seed pods — rose hips. If it were not for the intervention, and aid, of rosarians, roses would not continue to have many flowers the rest of the year.

When we trim off spent blooms we tell the bush, "Your job is not finished. You can do it — grow some more gorgeous blooms." Then, we help by giving the bush a feeding, just enough but not too much, and seeing that it has water equivalent to at least two inches of rainfall each week. Additionally, when necessary, we help control insect or disease problems which can attack the plant.

ONE OF THE THINGS to consider when dealing with a stressful period for roses is whether to feed the bushes in lighter applications but a little more frequently. Because every location is slightly different, the fertilizing program you establish in your yard should be an individual selection, beginning with the results of a soil analysis. It is very important to know what elements are already present before adding any others to your rose beds. A professional soil test is beneficial at this time, and your County Agricultural Extension Agent's office can help with information. (Check your local directory under County listings.)

When it is feeding time, your first step is to thoroughly soak the beds with water — late the day before is a good time. Apply the fertilizer, then follow with another good watering. Never feed a dry bed, because it can damage the tiny feeder roots of your roses.

Water by deep soaking, as opposed to overhead sprinkling. Most water around the Permian Basin is very alkaline and can cause leaf burn, which is especially common during high temperatures. The water droplets containing their minute amount of salt collect at strategic points on rose leaves and create a bad situation when the sun's rays strike them. If you have no automatic watering system — and most of us don't — a bubbler will do the job.

It is difficult, but possible, to "over-water" rosebushes in our area. In order for a bush to actually grow it must have food, and water, and air (oxygen) to its root system. If the root area is always kept "boggy" wet, no oxygen can get through to the root system. Therefore, it is advisable to deep soak about once a week. As temperatures rise, if you notice the bushes "wilting" or if you are tending new rosebushes, increase watering to about once every five days. Check the soil before each watering.

YOUR ROSE BEDS should have some type of material covering them as a mulch. An organic mulch is recommended, although other things will work, including shredded newspapers. Mulch helps retain an even moisture level in the root area for the plant and helps maintain a more even temperature, protecting roots from extreme heat or cold. Mulch helps the plant deal with stressful weather situations, summer or winter, and keeps weeds out of beds.

We have already touched on spraying for aphids, suggesting the use of Orthene. The product Orthonex combines Orthene for aphids and chewing insects with Funginex for black spot and mildew, so it does double duty. There are other effective products available, of course, and don't hesitate to use your preference. Be a "label reader." Try to use a spray which will not destroy those natural predators trying to help you, such as the Lady Beetles and Praying Mantis. And, please use your judgment and don't spray more than you really need to.

DEAR ROSIE received so many responses from male readers that we have given two free rosebushes for March: one to Roy M. Reyes, another to Neal McNabb, both of Midland. They each received a 1987 Hybrid Tea rose planted in a three-gallon pot. Congratulations and thank you, gentlemen.

Other Midland men responded with questions we have had to paraphrase, but will answer here:

DON MITCHELL: "How often does your column appear?"

A. It is scheduled to run the second Sunday each month in the Lifestyle section.

TIM HILL: "What will your future subjects be?"

A. We had planned out a year of ideas, trying to anticipate information at the time of need. Watering, feeding, managing bloom periods, companion plants, insect control (including birds, lizards, etc.), when to stop cutting blooms, going into winter and planning next season are some. Next month: Miniature Roses.

TIM HILL, also: "When is the Midland Rose Show?"

A. The Midland Rose Society's spring rose show is usually held the first Sunday in May, however this year it has been moved to October, due to severe weather conditions. Watch for publicity and a set date in October. Anyone may enter the show, and everyone is invited to view it free.

HERMAN VAUGHAN: "Please tell me when to plant roses. Wait until danger of frost is past? They've been sold here for two months."

A. Bare root roses can be planted any time during their dormant period. The last half of March to mid-April usually works well here. Container-grown roses should be planted after danger of frost is past, up to July, or until it is just too hot.

RON RONALDER: "Is it possible for a bud union to die? My Red Pinocchio has vigorous growth below, with no flowers."

A. Yes, your bud union is gone. When roses put out growth below the bud union that is a "sucker." The original root stock has sprouted and, if not removed, the sucker will kill the bud union. That growth always has different foliage and will grow quickly, tall and supple like a climber's cane. Go to where it begins, dig down if necessary, cut off with a sharp knife and scrape where it grew. Replace soil. You no longer have Red Pinocchio. It is time to "spade prune" and replant.

ARTHUR OLDHAM: "Various planting instructions have confused me on position of the bud union when planting."

A. For our area, when planting is finally complete, the bud union should sit just above ground (and mulch) level. If placed about 1-1½ inches above soil level, the plant has "settling room." The bud union needs to have the sun on it to produce well, but cover with mulch in December for winter protection.

Questions from other male readers are too numerous to be answered in this column. Each is appreciated. Most will be used in a later column, while some have been answered personally.

Now, women readers, take your turn. A No. 1 Grade Hybrid Tea rosebush, 1987 introduction, awaits your response. Let's hear from female readers all over the Permian Basin and elsewhere — not just in Midland. P.O. Box 5464, Midland 79704.

Joy Butts is an American Rose Society Consulting Rosarian and Accredited Rose Judge and past-president of the Midland Rose Society.

DEAR ABBY

Self-control best birth control

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I have been reading your column since I was 10 years old. I am nearly 15 now and I'm going steady with a boy who is 16. We love each other very much and have been having sex two or three times a week for the last four months.

I have been lucky enough not to get pregnant, but the problem is we don't trust condoms as a method of birth control, and the pill is too expensive.

We want to know if there is some method of birth control that's safe and not too expensive. If you print this, you will be helping many other kids in our situation. — IN LOVE

DEAR IN LOVE: The only method of birth control that is 100 percent safe doesn't cost a dime. It is called SELF-CONTROL. It is used by young men who care so much for a young woman that they would never put her in the position of feeling guilty, having to lie and sneak around or worry about getting pregnant. And it is also used by young women who want no worries about unplanned pregnancies.

However, since the sex drive can be overwhelming in teen-agers, it is better to use birth control in case your passions overrule your heads. Young people who are old enough to have sex but not old enough to handle the responsibility of parenthood should be thoroughly briefed in ALL methods of birth control. Family planning clinics are the place to go. They charge only what you can afford to pay. Some schools now make information as well as contraceptives available to students who want them.

Providing teen-agers with contraceptives does not necessarily mean that premarital sex is OK — it is NOT OK. But it is preferable to children having children they neither want nor are equipped to care for.

DEAR ABBY: Your response to "Worried," who was concerned about getting AIDS, prompts me to take pen in hand: Did you really mean it when you wrote: "The best way to minimize the risk of getting AIDS is to use a condom religiously?"

Abby, how does one use a condom "religiously"? Put it on and pray? Or use it only on Sundays? — AMUSED

DEAR AMUSED: An unfortunate choice of words. Better to have used scrupulously, conscientiously or faithfully.

DEAR ABBY: I'll get right to the point. If a couple have lived together for about a year, are they entitled to a big wedding? — NEEDS TO KNOW

DEAR NEEDS: They are entitled to any kind of wedding they can afford.

FERRY

The Bolivar lighthouse was built in 1872 to replace a cast iron tower built in 1852 which was dismantled by metal-desperate Confederates during the Civil War. The lighthouse signaled to ships offshore until 1933.

Cows now graze peacefully around the unused tower, which stands on private property just off Hwy. 87 near the ferry slip.

During tourist season on Galveston Island, the line of cars waiting on either side to board for the crossing can get long. Signs on Galveston's Ferry Road sternly warn motorists against trying to cut in line.

One of the best ways of handling the wait is to take along snacks and drinks and consider the time spent parked waiting for the ferry as sort of an automobile-bound picnic.

There are no food or drink sales of any kind on the boats. The ferries do have restrooms, though, which is perhaps as much luxury as one should expect free of charge.

Services geared to business travelers

NEW YORK (AP) — For business travelers on the road a significant amount of time, one of the major inconveniences is the lack of facilities normally easily available at the home office.

Now, reports Travel Agent Magazine, more and more business facilities are being made available to the business traveler. A business center at Hartsfield Atlanta International Airport offers facilities for travel insurance, notary public, photocopying and secretarial services. There also is a communications service, express and electronic mail.

A New York hotel offers "beeps for business people" — providing guests an electronic beeper upon check-in so that they won't have to miss important calls. The pocket-sized beeper has a range of 50 miles and is activated by the hotel's operators.

AT WIT'S END

Women's work now done for wages

By ERMA BOMBECK

Erma Bombeck

It's interesting to speculate, when the history of women's struggle for recognition is recorded, who will be at the top of the list.

Will it be the first woman to occupy the Oval Office of the White House who is not expected to do windows and floors?

Will it be the first woman to anchor a network newscast, the first one to find a cure for war, or the first woman to play ball in the major leagues?

Women have taken an interesting direction in their quest for acceptance, but none intrigues me more than the women who are doing bits and pieces of their old job at a new location with one difference. She's getting paid for it.

There's the woman who works in a day nursery taking care of someone else's children while she pays someone to come in and take care of hers at home.

There's the woman who started a housecleaning service for busy career women who became so successful she had to hire herself to clean her own house.

And let's not forget the female chefs springing up all over the country who pick up a frozen dinner on the way home.

The list is endless. The mother who for years tended sick children and husbands is working in a hospital. The woman who car-pooled for years is driving a cab. The woman who served a thousand meals in her lifetime is a waitress. The woman who sat hunched over a table lecturing and helping with homework is a teacher.

Why? Why did they leave home to take their services and talents into the marketplace? Money? For sure.

But maybe they felt the need to materialize. You had to have been there to know what it was like to be invisible. To move and not be seen, to talk and not be heard. To have family return to the house every evening and say, "Anyone home?"

Maybe they wanted to see if a home was magical. Could butter and milk develop feet and walk back to the refrigerator by themselves? Did kisses on a feverish forehead cure anything? Did unironed clothes hang out its own wrinkles? Was food in foil less palatable than food made from scratch? Did time heal yellow-wax buildup? Did anyone care that you were home to remind them "Don't slam the door" and "Change your clothes"? Did it matter if you sat your child or "Dallas" reruns did it?

All I know is that housewives who need someone to come in and do all the above jobs while they go out to work are in critical demand. It seems no one wants to do for money what women have been doing all their lives for free. Think about it.

'Magnet' school to teach medicine

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

Call it pre-pre-med.

A private hospital chain is negotiating with Los Angeles officials to build a high school specializing in medical subjects that would be housed in a medical facility and teach up to 2,500 students.

It would be part of the huge school district's "magnet school" program, designed to integrate white and minority students by attracting students from different areas to schools specializing in narrow fields of study.

Two medical high schools already exist in the school district, but neither is directly linked with a hospital, according to Bill Rivera, assistant to the superintendent.

The new $15-million school would be built by National Medical Enterprises in exchange for the land it needs to build other medical facilities.

Ninth- through 12th-graders would take courses in health sciences in addition to their general education requirements.

They also would hear lectures from speakers at the adjacent University of Southern California, and would work as orderlies and lab assistants in the medical building.

Teens would go to the school not only to prepare to become doctors, Rivera said. It will also provide training in fields such as nursing and X-ray technology.

Procrastination may signal fear

Associated Press

People who sabotage themselves by procrastinating are not necessarily lazy or careless — they may simply be scared.

Procrastination is not the mark of a devil-may-care romantic, according to an article in a recent issue of Harper's Bazaar, but is often a symptom of a personality frightened by the judgement or perceived threat of others.

"This does not necessarily indicate a significant psychological disturbance, nor is there anything inherently wrong with it," Dr. Jane B. Burka, who with Dr. Lenora M. Yuen, wrote "Procrastination: Why You Do It, What to Do About It."

"But if it's consistently high — if you become paralyzed in work, relationships, finances — it is obviously a deep-seated problem, reflecting an underlying neurosis. Thus it makes sense to discover what purpose the procrastination serves."

Ask yourself why you put things off, learn to recognize harmful tendencies, and alter them with specialized techniques.

"Strategies for self-improvement are fine if you let yourself use them," Birka added. "But you may have to come to an understanding of your motives for constantly delaying before these can become truly effective."

Fear of failure and obsessive perfectionism form one pattern of procrastination. Those who must always do everything perfectly but know they can't, don't do anything.

Some people procrastinate because they fear success.

A graduate student may put off completing a doctoral dissertation because when it is done she must begin facing the "real" world. Children may not want to outdo their parents in education or financial status because they feel guilty or fear parental anger. Some people are afraid their friends won't like them if they are too successful.

Others feel they do not deserve success, and procrastination is the way they put the brakes on too much good fortune or happiness.

Procrastination can be part of a battle for control or autonomy. It is a way of declaring independence with kindergarten tactics. Not doing something can be a sensitive person's way to avoid criticism — no one can criticize what you haven't done. Delay can subtly thwart a boss who has too much control over you. Of course, he can still fire you.

Another procrastinator is a manipulator who delays things to the drastic stage in order to gain attention and lure someone into rushing to his or her rescue.

The first step in breaking the pattern of procrastination is deciding whether it is a sign of psychological distress or just a bad habit. Next, throw off self-limiting personal myths such as "I'm lazy," "I can't stay away from sweets" or "I can't do math."

Identify a few undesirable habits and substitute beneficial ones. Instead of saving the least pleasant task for last and not doing it, always do it first.

To fight procrastination, you should identify your main obstacle to starting work. Once confronted, it may be less intimidating. Break down the task into feasible units; be flexible and permit time for potential interruptions.

The El Paso Natural Gas plant near Crane serves a backdrop for this lonely well. Mature production still dominates the Permian Basin, and many wells could be in danger of being plugged as a result of declining oil prices, according to a recent report by Interstate Oil Compact Commission.

Stripper wells in peril

Over 28,000 wells threatened nationwide

By ALLEN HOWLAND
Business/Oil Writer

Stripper wells produce nearly 463.5 million barrels of oil each year and account for nearly 20% of all production in Texas. But, if oil prices remain in the $15/bbl range, an additional 28,000 stripper wells in the state, possibly many of those in West Texas, may be prematurely abandoned.

According to a study conducted by the Resource & Analysis Management (RAM) Group Ltd., Oklahoma City, for the Interstate Oil Compact Commission (IOCC), the projected impact of continuing low oil prices on marginal wells in 22 states could be devastating. At $15/bbl, the study projects that nearly one-fourth of the 126,202 stripper wells, those producing less than 10 barrels of oil per day, in Texas would be abandoned. "Once plugged and abandoned, these wells will not be redrilled and their resources will be lost forever," says IOCC executive director W. Timothy Dowd.

"If wells are permanently plugged, it will take $50-$60 per barrel prices to even consider economically redrilling for the abandoned reserves," notes Glen Michel, executive vice president of the National Stripper Well Association (NSWA) in Abilene.

"With the trend toward gradually increasing consumption, our country can ill afford to lose significant amounts of proven reserves, in addition to reducing daily production," Michel warns. By the mid-1990s we could be relying on imports to provide two-thirds of our supply, an even greater reliance than during the pre-embargo years of the early 1970s.

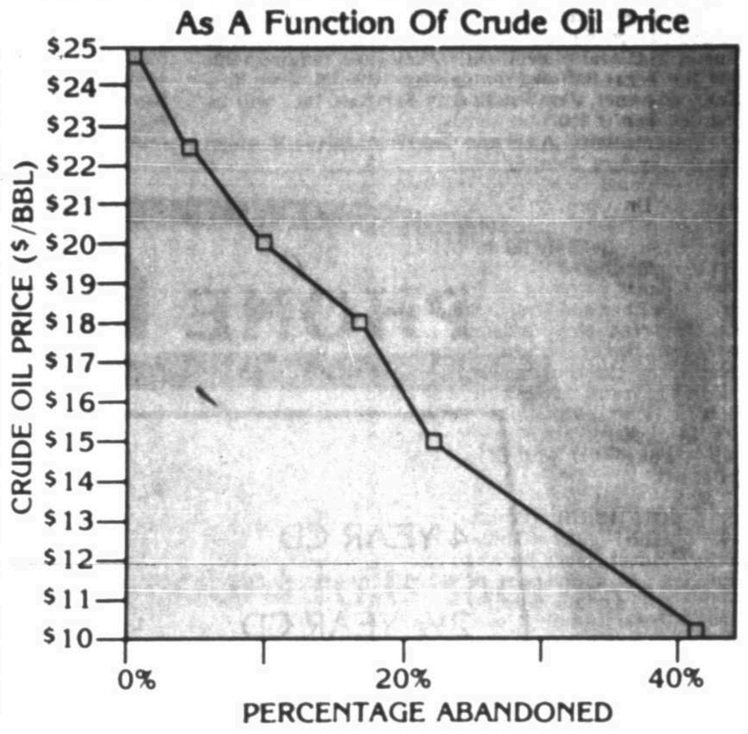

The loss in Texas' daily production from the plugged wells would be more than 91,000 barrels per day, valued at more than $500 million in the first year. Producable reserves of 242 million barrels of oil would be sacrificed if the additional 28,000 wells are plugged.

Nationally, continuing economic pressures may mean that more than 100,000 wells will be plugged, resulting in a loss of producable reserves of more than 734 million barrels of oil. National daily production capacity would be decreased by 277,000 barrels per day, with the total of the lost production valued at $1.5 billion.

Every year nearly 5000 stripper wells in Texas, and 14,000 nationwide, are plugged and abandoned because their production drops below the economic limits of the lifting cost. The projected abandonment numbers in the RAM study are in addition to the usual exhausted production abandonments.

The loss of domestic stripper well production increases dependence on imported oil and contributes directly to the international trade deficit, Dowd notes.

Although Texas leads the nation in number of stripper wells and quantity of stripper production, other states would be significantly impacted by continuing low prices, as well. In Oklahoma, where stripper wells provide 60% of the state's total oil output, 19,000 wells with collective production of nearly 57,000 barrels per day, will be permanently shut-in if prices remain at $15 per barrel.

At the same price level, Kansas will lose more than 10,000 wells producing 29,000 barrels a day; California and Illinois will each lose more than 6000 wells; and New Mexico producers will be forced to shut in an estimated 9000 barrels per day of production from about 3900 wells.

"The loss of stripper wells is only the first wave of dramatic production losses which will result from prolonged low oil prices," says the NSWA's Michel. "Other marginal wells which are not technically classifiable as strippers, those in the 10-15 barrel per day range particularly with high associated water production, are just as economically impacted, and are in as much danger of

Ultrasonic probe effective in oilpatch

By JOHN PAUL PITTS
Business/Oil Editor

Billed as the Ultraprobe and distributed by Becko Corp. of Midland, the listening device is a patented transducer which provides a level of ultrasonic sensitivity beyond anything previously obtainable. It can pick up the interior movement of a wristwatch more than three feet away and the "noise" from a nasal spray from 100 feet.

According to Don Hellinghausen, president Brecko, the instrument, which has been used in numerous industrial applications promises to have even more applications in the oilpatch. The uses he visualizes for the ultraprobe are:

- to check for natural gas leaks in gas processing plants and compressor stations and on pipelines, valves, and wellheads;
- audibly monitor the mechanical condition of pumps, motors and compressor, where bearings, gear boxes and moving parts are concerned;
- search for electrical discharges in potentially hazaradous environments;
- examine transport tanks for minute leaks, using a tone generator, and
- assist oilfield truckers in detecting tire leaks before they become flats and leaks in vacuum lines.

The ultrasonic trouble shooter works by picking up up only ultrasonic sound, undetectable by human ear, and converting it to an audible sound as well as a reading on a decible meter. Hellinghausen says it can pick up a leak smaller than a pin head (1/5,000th of an inch in diame-

Stripper operators down but not out

By JOHN PAUL PITTS
Business/Oil Editor

Stripper well operators in the Permian Basin may be down, but not out. Despite a return to 1978 oil prices, area operators say prices would have to go lower before a substantial number of wells would be plugged.

In the stripper well business, economics is the name of the game, and the new economics of lower oil prices is making it a tougher business, according to Midlander, Bill Thams, a major stripper well operator with production in Lea, Ward, Winkler, Pecos and Gaines counties.

"Trying to pry a profit from stripper wells," said Thams "is a major task. Sometimes the only profit is in the depletion allowance."

Like most stripper well operators, Thams operates pretty much on cash flow so debt is not normally a threatening factor. "We stay out of the banks and operate on cash flow, so we don't have a lot of debt hanging over us. But when cash flow is reduced we also don't have the funds for needed workovers and new drilling to keep stripper leases operational. Also, we don't have money to buy additional stripper production."

He said that stripper producers had to acquire new wells to stay in business, because wells eventually depiete even with the most tender loving care. He said his firm had plugged 40 wells in the past two year.

"Stripper wells require more attention than any other type of well," said O.H. Berry, another Midland operator with extensive stripper production. "They create lots of jobs in the service industry, and when they go down so do a lot of other businesses." He said he saw 20 well service units in yards in Seminole which was a sign of the times as a result of decreased work on stripper and other wells.

Berry said he was asking his contract employees to take a 25 percent cut in fees to keep more people working. "Right now our plan is to keep all of our employees and to hold all production," said Berry. He said the price of oil would have to go below $10 per barrel and stay there before he would start plugging wells.

The operator with production throughout the Basin is now monitoring all his wells to determine the most effecient means of operation. With other stripper operators, he cites electrical as one of the main expenses in lifting cost.

Pete McDaniel, partner of MR Oil Co. in Monahans, said his electrical bill on one lease was $18,000 and his firm had to take dramatic measures to hold down costs. His solution was to cut down pumping time on marginal wells. "We have seven wells that

Is the world oil market a true free market?

Listen carefully! First you hear it, then you don't. It's faint and fleeting, but we could be hearing the feeble beginnings of a new Reagan tune? Could it be: "Give Me That Ole Time Stability?"

I doubt if the President reads my column. But, I do know that several of them have been sent to him and at least one hand-delivered to Ed Meese. Nevertheless, it was with some satisfaction and a touch of pride, that I listened to President Reagan, at his news conference this week, repeat the theme of my column of several weeks ago. In that column, I suggested that the Saudis were once again trying to reestablish their oil monopoly by driving down oil prices and destroying competition, before proceeding to the next phase of a plan in which they will raise prices to indecent limits.

Said the President: "Is it possible that...maybe somebody would think of driving (the price) down to the point that they get rid of competition and then they would do what comes naturally to a monopolist, and the price would start going up again as it once did when others had a very dominant voice and hold on the oil market.

"So when I say free market and I really mean that, I at the same time think that we must keep our eyes open to see that no one starts playing tricks on us for some kind of illicit future gain."

INDEED WE DO, Mr. President. And, it is comforting to know that this knowledge has found a home in the White House. I suspect we can credit Vice President George Bush, himself an oilman, with bringing some of that emotion to the game, and passing it on to King Faud this week.

Essentially, what the Vice President told King Faud of Saudi Arabia this week, in the most delicate of terms, without once referring to price, was that America still stands for the free market system, but has no intention of becoming the Saudis energy slave.

For the oil industry, this exchange may offer a glimmer of home. It is the first time Reagan has wavered from his unchanging tune on absolute support of the free market concept. It also reflects his increasing concern and frustration over unstable oil prices, and offers a glimmer of hope that he might be finally ready to do something to stabilize them. It was such a radical departure from normal administration rhetoric that some reporters wondered if Bush was really speaking for the President or himself. The President assured them he was speaking for him.

The press conference also revealed that Reagan may now be having problems accepting the present world oil market situation as "free." Said Reagan: "The market is not completely free, because some of the major producers are governments."

AN EXECUTIVE and director of a major oil company assured me recently that we do have a true free market (or about as close as we will ever come to one) and we should not touch it even if every drilling contractor in the U.S. and most of the independents go belly-up. "They got in and did well when it (oil) was going up; now they have to pay the price when it's going down," he said.

I agree with his philosophy and rhetoric, but not the conclusion. I don't think we can play the free market game now, because we don't have a free market. As Lee Iacocca said this week about the President's free market position: "When someone (obviously referring to the Saudis) manipulates the free market, all bets are off." In short the Saudis now hold all the cards.

When Standard Oil and John D. Rockefeller tried to monopolize the U.S. oil industry, the government "busted his trust," and gave us a free market. But how does one deal with the Standard Oil of the Middle East (Saudia Arabia) when it's a sovereign nation? No cards, no deal!

Government oil companies also have unfair operational advantages over their free enterprise competitors in the West. They don't worry about windfall profits taxes, severance taxes, depletion allowances, loss of intangible drilling costs, investor confidence, unions, old gas-new gas, Texas Railroad Commission rules and proration. Moreover they are subsidized by the state and can use slave labor or bend the rules to their pleasure. Exxon, Union Texas, and Parker & Parsley, however, must operate within the very strict social, moral, financial, and legal limits of a democratic society. What kind of edge does that give government oil companies over free enterprise producers? Let me explain it this way: I could have beaten the daylights out of Joe Louis, if somebody had tied him up for me.

Organization seeks members

Division order analysts or those who work with division orders are being sought for membership in the Southwest Association of Division Order Analysts, according to the organization's president Gwenetta Lain, a division order supervisor with Navajo Refining Co.

The organization's purpose is an educational one, she said. Speakers are brought in to address their part of the industry and how it connects and ties into division order work, she said.

The division order, which relates to oil, gas or rental payments, describes the type of product, what interest the owner has in the well and land description where the well is located.

The five-month-old organization has 25 members primarily from Artesia and Roswell, but the area covered by the Southwest region extends from Midland-Odessa to El Paso and Albuquerque.

Next meeting of the group will be at noon on May 2 in the Golden Corral restaurant, located on West Second Street in Roswell. Jim Cieszinski will be guest speaker.

Anyone is welcome to attend, but those planning to attend should first contact Julie Baxley at 505-623-3190, so adequate seating will be available.

Permian Basin rig count falls sharply

The Permian Basin rig count fell by 32 according to the latest figures compiled by Reed Tool Co. The count stands at 146 this week.

The U.S count also fell, dipping below the 1,000 mark to end the week at 987, losing 47.

Locally, Midland County lost three rigs, leaving five still at work. Ector County managed to add one for a total of three. Menard and Cochran counties in Texas and Chaves County, New Mexico lost the only rig they had while Martin County lost its three rigs, leaving no activity there.

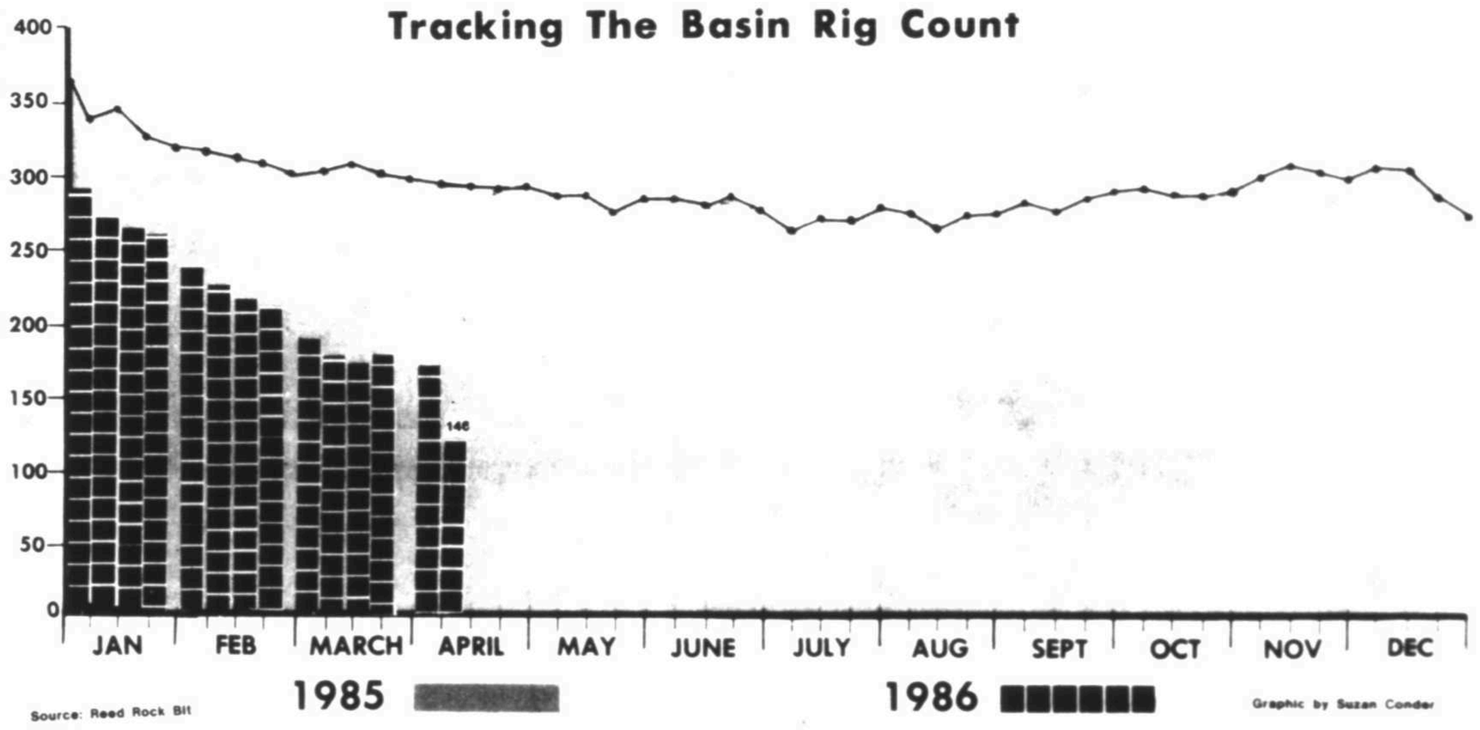

Andrews continues to be the most active county in the Basin, with a total of 23. Lea County, New Mexico, although losing six rigs, maintained second place with 16.

Nationally, Texas lost six for a weekly tally of 336. Oklahoma and Louisiana lost eight and one, respectively, while New Mexico's count decreased by four.

The only state to show a gain was Alabama, adding two additional land rigs this week.

Year ago totals in the Permian Basin was 284. The U.S. total one year ago was 1,898.

RRC levies pollution, plugging penalties

AUSTIN — The Texas Railroad Commission fined J. Moore Tank Trucks of Gladewater $20,000 for violating Commission rules against oilfield pollution.

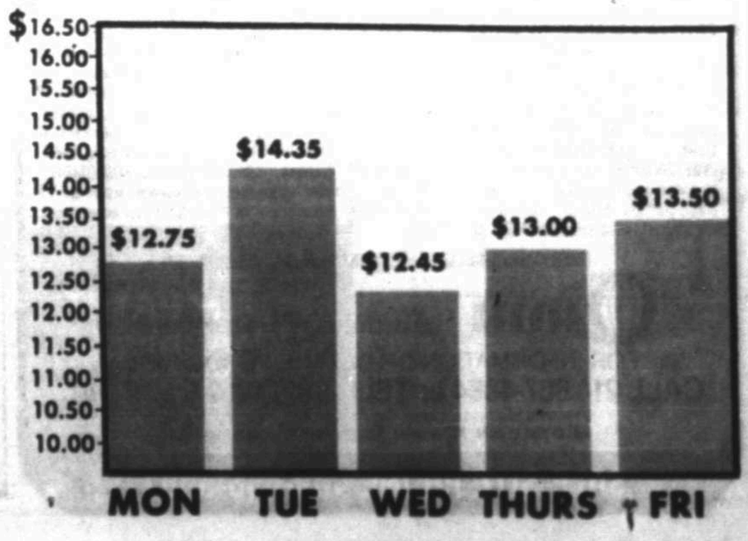

Ten other oil and gas operators netted a total of $23,600 for problems under RRC well plugging and pollution regulations.

Commission inspectors who visited J. Moore Tank Trucks' Fonville pit in the East Texas Field in Gregg County noted the pit had been overfilled with fluids such as oil and slat water to the point that it overflowed into a nearby creek. Tests showed the fluids contained chloride concentrations as high as 17,000 parts per million.

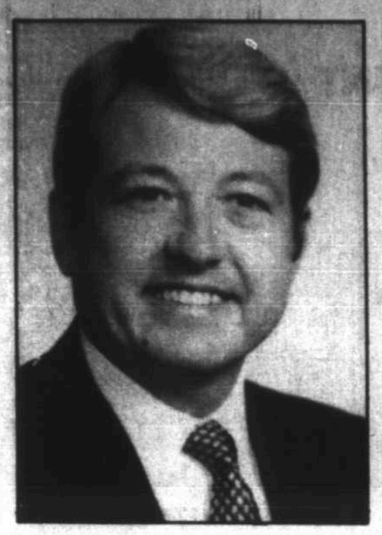

In addition to the fine, the Commission suspended the Moore Tank Trucks' salt water haulers permit for one year and directed the company to clean up the spilled fluids. Company representatives did not appear for a Commission hearing called to examine the violations.

In other penaly actions, R.H. Abercrombie and V. Neuhaus of McAllen were penalized $5,000 for operating a disposal well without a permit.

By NATHANIEL C. NASH
New York Times News Service

WASHINGTON — Treasury Secretary James A. Baker III, in a letter addressed to the Senate majority leader, Bob Dole, and the Banking Committee chairman, Jake Garn, said the administration opposes passage of an emergency relief bill for banks that lend heavily to farmers and oil and gas companies.

"The bill's provisions on agricultural and energy banks are unnecessary because of the constructive actions already undertaken by the three banking regulators," Baker said in a letter dated April 4 and released by the Treasury Department Monday.

The Treasury secretary also repeated the administration's opposition to any ban on so-called limited-service banks, which can skirt prohibitions against interstate banking by either making commercial loans or accepting deposits, but not both.

On March 25, the Senate Banking Committee passed a bill that would permit banks to use more relaxed accounting methods in recording losses on energy and farm loans. A number of controversial amendments were added to the legislation, however, including a moratorium on approval of any limited-service bank charters by the comptroller of the currency.

Last month, the comptroller, the Federal Reserve Board and the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. proposed to Congress new procedures that would reduce the losses among farm and energy banks and permit the capital levels at these institutions to fall below 6 percent of total assets.

Last week, the Baker letter was the source of strong disagreement among regulators and the administration, according to banking sources in Washington.

MEETINGS

Williams to address Petroleum Accountants

Clayton W. Williams Jr. will be the featured speaker at the "Bankers and Bosses Night" hosted by the Petroleum Accountants Society of the Permian Basin on April 16. The event will be held at Ranchland Hills Country Club, with social hour at 6 p.m., followed by dinner.

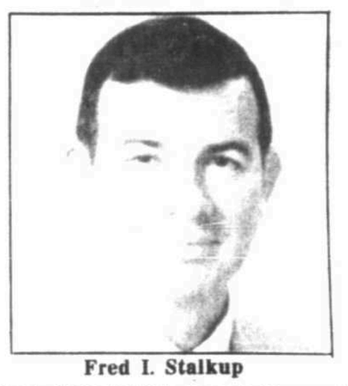

Clayton W. Williams Jr.

Williams received his bachelor's degree in animal husbandry from Texas A&M University, and entered the oil and gas business as an independent in 1957. Since that time, he has organized 21 major entities, including oil and gas exploration, production and transportation, real estate, cattle and ranching, banking, oilfield services and, most recently telecommunications.

He is also a director of MCorp of Dallas, a visiting Executive-in-Residence at Texas A&M University's College of Business Administration, and a recipient of the Distinguished Alumnus Award from Texas A&M.

SPE to host Tuesday dinner meeting

The Permian Basin Section of the Society Of Petroleum Engineers will meet on April 15 at the Ranchland Hills Country Club, with social hour at 5:30 p.m. and dinner at 6:15.

Fred I. Stalkup

Guest speaker for the meeting will be Fred I. Stalkup, senior research advisor in the exploration and production research department of ARCO Oil & Gas Co. in Dallas. His topic will be "Carbon Dioxide Miscible Flooding: Its Promise Becoming Reality."

The 400-mile 644-km pipeline recently constructed to carry Carbon Dioxide from Colorado to the oilfields of West Texas illustrates the industry's high expectations and surveys the major carbon dioxide flood projects in progress. He cites plans for future cabon dioxide floods and assesses current sources, supplies and distribution systems.

Stalkup received his bachelor's degree in 1957, and a doctorate in chemical engineering from Rice University in 1962. Since 1961, he has been director of process development, reservoir engineering research, reservoir mathematics research, recovery processes research and a consulting research engineer.

Accountants schedule technical meeting

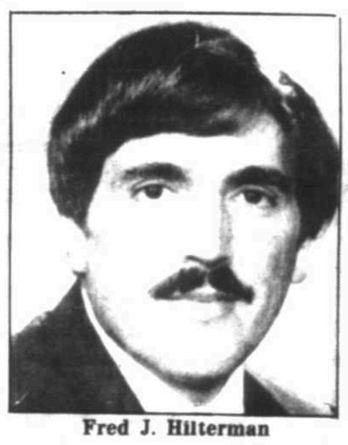

The National Association of Accountants will hold a technical meeting at the Midland Hilton on April 17. SOcial hour will be from 6 to 7 p.m., with diiner beginning at 7 p.m.

Speaker for the evening will be Dr. John Kingstedt of Grant-Thornton CPA firm. He is a partner and national director, oil and gas services. He is co-author, with Horace Brock and Don Jones, of the Oil & Gas Handbook 1986 and Petroleum Accounting: Principles, Procedured and Issues.

Geophysical Society to hear Hilterman

The Permian Basin Geophysical Society will hold its monthly meeting on April 16 at the Midland Center, beginning at 11:30 a.m.

Fred J. Hilterman

The speaker will be Fred J. Hilterman, co-founder of the Houston-based Geophysical Development Corp. His lecture is entitled "The Merging of Reflection and Refraction Interpretation" and addresses the blending of two principal techniques used by earth scientists to help find the world's petroleum and mineral deposits.

Cost of the luncheon is $8 per person, and reservations should be made by noon, April 15 by phoning Janna at 682-5221.

SIPES will meet for Wednesday luncheon

The Midland Chapter of the Society of Professional Earth Scientists will host J. Michael Muckleroy at its next meeting on April 16. The luncheon will begin at 11:30 a.m. at the Midland Country Club.

J. Michael Muckleroy

Muckleroy will speak on "Crude Oil Purchasers and the Futures Market".

He is president of Northern Liquid Fuels Co. and UPG Falco, subsidiaries of HNG/InterNorth, Inc. He is a graduate of Southern Methodist University, and began his professional career in 1955 at Rausher Pierce and Co. after four years in the Navy. He has served as executive vice president at Southern Petroleum Co., senior vice president at Saxon Oil Co., and has been active in a number of independent marketing ventures over the years. He joined HNG in August, 1984 as Director of Corporate Development, and was named to his current position after the merger of HNG and Internorth, Inc. in July, 1985.

The luncheon is free to SIPES members, and $10 for invited guests.

UAW having difficulty organizing at Honda

By WILLIAM SERRIN
New York Times News Service

The United Automobile Workers's suspension of its highly visible organizing drive at the Honda Motors plant at Marysville, Ohio, is a major setback for the union and seems to portend greater organizing difficulties. The union is placing the most favorable interpretation on the situation, saying there was a "poor climate" for a vote of the 3,300 hourly workers to see if they wished union representation. It said it would assign more organizers and ultimately organize the plant.

But the UAW has not organized a Japanese-owned automobile plant where a company has opposed union organization. And labor experts said that if the union had seen a chance of winning it would have gone ahead.

At Honda "the union took a reading and felt the odds were way too long," said Jerome M. Rosow, president of Work in America Institute of Scarsdale, N.Y., a private work and labor research organization.

In addition, Harley Shaiken, associate professor of work and technology at the University of California at San Diego, said the Honda drive would help determine whether other Japanese companies coming to the United States would be organized and, if not, whether the UAW would find reduced power in its negotiations with American automobile companies.

By 1990, Japanese-owned companies and Japanese-American companies are expected to build 1.4 million automobiles in this country, a significant share of United States production, which totaled 8.2 million in 1985.

Thus, Shaiken said, if Japanese-owned automobile companies are not organized the union "will face very different terms" in bargaining with organized companies.

Labor authorities said the suspension of the Marysville drive also illustrated the difficulty American unions face in organizing new workers, both because many workers are not attracted to unions and because of what many unionists say are labor laws that favor employers.

Roger Lambert, a Honda spokesman, said the company was neutral in regard to the drive, but nevertheless Japanese companies in the United States often strongly resist unionization even though Japanese employers have a reputation for harmonious relations with workers.

In 1985 unions represented 18 percent of the United States work force, as against 24.1 percent in 1979. Few major organizing drives have been won in recent years. Among them labor authorities cited J.P. Stevens & Co., Yale University and public workers in Michigan.

In the 1983 fiscal year unions conducted representation elections through the National Labor Relations Board for 171,548 workers. For the 1984 fiscal year the figure was 211,696. In 1983 unions won 47.7 percent of elections; in 1984, 46.5 percent.

The labor board did not tabulate the number of workers covered by the election victories, but the American Federation of Labor and Congress of Industrial Organizations says that in recent years its unions have organized about 85,000 workers a year through NLRB elections and perhaps another 85,000 through agreements with employers.

The civilian work force as of February stood at 117.1 million.

Unionists say that companies keep wages and benefits high enough to cool worker interest in organizing, that they use foreman and mandatory meetings to thwart unions and that federal labor laws often favor companies.

If representation elections were automatic once unions showed that more than 50 percent of the workers in an office or plant had signed cards calling for the election, according to Charles J. McDonald, the federation's new organizing director, union victories would increase substantially. Under present federal labor law, they have to get 30 percent of the work force to sign cards for an election, but voting can be delayed for months or even years.

However, many workers oppose unions in any case, as was demonstrated at the Honda plant, where a group calling itself Associates Alliance vigorously fought the auto union. Honda calls its workers, who have an average hourly wage of $12.25 an hour, "associates," not workers or employees.

ter) with only 5 psi pressure. "It can check valves, seams, joints, connections and other places where leaks might occur," he added, "no matter what the ambient noise level is and while the equipment is in operation."

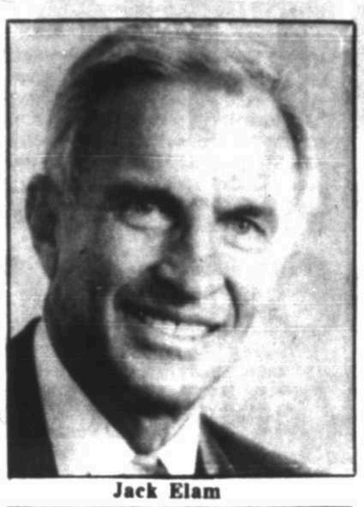

To check tanks and heat exchangers a tone generator placed inside "fills the vessel with noise" and allows the user to spot leaks by detecting the "escaping" ultrasonic sounds.

The condition of bearings can be checked by referring to readings on the analog type decible meter. An increase of 10 decibels can mean bearing are ready to be replaced.

The Ultraprobe is reported to save firms dollars by detecting problems and applying maintenance before costly down time, or accidents occur. One firm using the instrument to detect energy leaks in its plant reported a $400,000 per year savings.

In use by nearly every major industrial corporation in America, Hellinghausen is hoping to find wide acceptance for the instrument in the oilpatch.

Elam to teach oil course

Jack Elam

Jack G. Elam, Midland, will teach a short course entitled "Creativity in Oil Exploration" at the Pacific Section of AAPG meeting in Bakersfield, California on April 16, 1986. This course is in line with the theme of the conventon which is "Creative Energy."

This will be a lecture and hands-on course where a number of problems will be solved involving the question-answering techniques developed by Dr. Elam. The test will be his book, Creativity in Oil Exploration — or How to Find Oil and Gas Economically.

Elam will teach the same course in Midland, Texas at the Permian Basin Graduate Center on Wednesday, May 7, 1986.

Economist predicts $6 oil

Hearst News Service

WASHINGTON – World Bank vice president and senior economist Anne Krueger predicts that world oil prices will settle at between $6 and $8 a barrel sometime this year and remain there for three to four years.

This depends on how many U.S. oil wells are capped and taken out of production, she said, and how successful the Saudi Arabians or other members of the core oil-exporting states are in cutting production and increasing costs again.

She said she didn't expect the Oil Producing Exporting Countries (OPEC) to be able to put their cartel back together again, although she expects them to try.

As a result, she said it's likely that prices will keep falling: "I see three to four years of low prices and $6 to $8 looks like the floor to me, based on the numbers who go out of business or other factors.

Her forecast of a $6-$8-a-barrel floor is half of the $15 a barrel price which International Monetary Fund economic analysts adopted as their benchmark for their projections on how poorly or well the Third World and the developed world economies will do in the coming year.

The IMF economists said they couldn't begin to estimate the economic effects – good and bad – if oil fell much further than $15 a barrel and stayed there. They said, however, that they'd have to start by considering such threshold issues as the threat to the international banking system and the additional problems of such heavily indebted oil-exporting countries as Mexico.

In an interview, Krueger focused on the prospects of dramatic deflationary effects from the combination of falling oil prices, lower inflation and lower interest rates. They are far more positive than negative, she said, although they have to be evaluated on a country-by-country basis when the disparate impact of oil is examined.

To understand the excitement about the oil drop, she spells out the fears that have permeated the world financial community in the past four years.

W.R. Grace to sell retail business for $500 million

Los Angeles Times —
Washington Post News Service

W.R. Grace & Co. said that it intends to sell the bulk of its retail business for about $500 million to a group led by Harold S. Geneen, former chairman of ITT, and David Mahoney, former chairman of Norton Simon Inc.

A Grace spokesman said the company expects to sign a contract with the investor group, called GMR Corp., in the next two weeks. The transaction should close shortly after that, he said.

Grace revealed last December that it planned to sell the retail division as the first step in a restructuring that would allow the company to concentrate on other businesses, particularly specialty chemicals. Grace also has energy businesses and operates several restaurant chains.

Proceeds from the sale would be used to reduce the debt that Grace took on when it recently paid $596 million for a 13.6-million-share block, or 26 percemt, of its own stock.

PERIL

Without provisions to allow temporary abandonment authority for producers, the total loss of reserves could reach 2 to 2.5 billion barrels, Michel estimates. "The Texas Railroad Commission's granting of an extension from 90 days to a full year for non-producing wells is crucial for stripper producers' survival," he says. Oklahoma and Kansas are currently working to implement changes in their production rules as well.

Michel applauds the efforts of Rep. Tom Loeffler, R-Hunt, who last week introduced a bill aimed at saving hundreds of stripper wells. Loeffler's bill proposes filling the Strategic Petroleum Reserve with up to 300,000 barrels per day primarily from stripper well production.

The legislation requires a minimum bid of $15 per barrel, with no producer eligible to sell more than 10,000 barrels per day for injection into the reserve.

Loeffler says his proposal is not intended to "bring back the regulation and bureaucracy which I have worked the last five years to dismantle", nor is it a "bailout" for producers.

However, the bill would in effect provide a floor under stripper well price economics which could prevent a more disastrous scenario examined by the RAM group study.

If crude oil prices fall to and remain at $10 per barrel, Texas producers could expect 51,465 stripper wells to be shut down, resulting in a loss of $767.7 million in revenues during the first year. The loss of these wells would decrease state production by more than 210,000 barrels per day, 9.1% of the state's total output.

The study shows that on a national scale, a $10 per barrel crude oil price would result in 184,547 stripper well abandonments, 41% of the national total. The subsequent impact would be a loss of 638,046 barrels in daily production, with a value of $2.3 billion in the first year. Total loss of reserves under this scenario is estimated at more than 2.6 billion barrels.

PITTS

WHICH BRINGS US to reason: If the world oil market is not a true free market, are we under any obligation to go on pretending that it is and support it as such? Could we not serve our purposes better by saving our free market rhetoric for another time when the philosophical and practical decision is a bit more clear? And, how many American oil companies, banks, drilling contractors and barrels of undeveloped domestic reserves are we willing to sacrifice on the alter of a prostituted principal?

I have come to appreciate Governor Mark White's interpretation of the problem: "It's not a free market," says White. "It's a controlled market, and the only question is, who's going to control it."

There are a number of options available to us to control it. A gasoline tax has been proposed. A clean, temporary tariff, with no exceptions and exemptions that would not prove a breeding ground for a massive bureaucracy, would not be unacceptable to most in the industry. Michael Halbouty's and Senator Gramm's proposal to restore all incentives to the industry and totally deregulate it would certainly be acceptable. Removing crude oil from trade on the New York Mercantile Exchange as a strategic material might also prove a valid option. Can a natural resource so vital to the national security of the U.S. be subjected to such whimsical, hysterical trading? Analyst Edward Dellamonte remarked this week: "You can't trade this market (the Mercantile Exchange). They overreact at everything. Oil shot up because of a rumor the U.S. had attacked Libya. Then shot down when that was denied."

Speaking as a right wing, red neck, Republican, now is the time for the U.S. to control this laissez faire bastard for our own good, by whatever means possible and restore stability to oil prices. Enough is enough!

OPERATORS

we only pump two days per month and 20 that we only pump one day a week, and we are looking to shut-in some leases for a month," said McDaniel. He said MR eventually reduced electrical costs on its stripper wells so low that the power company called and wanted to know what happened.

Like Berry and Thams, McDaniel is not ready to plug any wells. "We could still stay in business and pay expenses at $8 per barrel, but below that we could not even pay expenses," he said.

Bill Watson, another Monahans operator and president of 3B Oil Co., said if prices got too low he could probably go out and pump his 300 stripper wells himself. "But that wouldn't be adding anything to the community. That would just be keeping me and my family alive and not contributing to others," lamented Watson, who fears falling oil prices will have a serious effect on Monahans and Ward County, where it is estimated that 95 percent of the production is stripper.

Said Watson: "If you have to get your lifting costs down to $3 to $4 per barrel to make a go, you are running a pretty poor operation, with no chemicals to prevent corrosion, no repairs, but if you can keep your lifting costs at $7 per barrel you can have a first class field and keep some people working."

Watson said he would not shut-in even a one barrel per day well, if it could pay for itself. "We're not pushings to see how much oil we can produce, but will take a longer term view," he said. "Once you shut down, it's hard to get going again."

Watson, the founder of Watson Packers Inc. an oilfield tool company, said taxes were also a problem for stripper well operators: "Last year on January 1, I had wells valued at $3 million for school tax purposes with a loan value of $2.7 million. This year the school taxes are still valued on $3 million, while the loan values of the wells are $60,000. Does that tell you anything?"

Waterfloods pose a special problem for stripper well operators. "You can't shut a waterflood in," said O.H. Berry. "It's a process that you must keep going." That means keeping injection wells operational on stripper leases and producing wells pumping, and produced water hauled from the lease — all a costly operation for operators. "Most of the stripper leases we acquire are waterflood prospects," says Thams. "We seldom purchase leases that can be just be produced, for the most part they are 'fixer-upper' projects requiring much expensive work. Thams says his stripper waterfloods create a number of service jobs in the oilpatch, that would be lost if prices go lower.

High costs and low oil prices are almost certain to cause major oil companies to place much of their inventory on the market as stripper production, but there is concern among stripper operators that some of it will go begging for buyers because of a reduced cash flow and reluctance of banks to make loans for stripper production. "One thing is certain," says Bill Watson, "stripper wells are going to be cheap again. The majors will sell a lot of them — and they will plug a lot." He said that even if the price of oil went to $30 tomorrow, banks would probably still not have the confidence to make loans for stripper production, fearing that it might drop back to $10 per barrel.

Thams says there will be a place in the industry for stripper well operators, because they are the cost-cutting specialists in the oil business: "Often, we can't make a lease make any more oil than a major can, but we can reduce operating costs." He cited one lease in which he was able to reduce operating cost $14,000 a month. Some stripper operators such as Watson and McDaniel operate their own well service units and drilling rigs to keep costs down, but with reduced workovers it is a practice that stands in jeopardy. MR recently sold its drilling rig and laid off the crew.

Said Thams: "Stripper well operators have to keep one thing mind at all times: They are in business to make money, not produce oil. Price has extended the life of many wells, and it will be price that eventually plugs all wells."

As for Berry, he is not ready to panic over today's lifting costs and oil prices. He still remembers when he was getting $3 per barrel for his oil and his lifting cost was $1.50.

Attacks on U.S. businesses up

WASHINGTON (AP) — A new State Department report says international terrorist attacks on American businesses occurred at a rate of more than once a week last year.

The report said the 67 attacks in 1985 on U.S. businesses represented about a third of the attacks on all business interests combined in 1985.

The study, "Terrorist Attacks on U.S. Businesses Abroad," said 35 of the incidents directed at American interests — slightly more than half — occurred in Latin America.

Tighter security at embassies and other government installations, it said, "may be making business people and facilities more inviting targets.

"U.S. firms frequently are victims of terrorist attacks abroad because of their number and high visibility," the report said. There were an average of about 50 attacks per year on U.S. companies in 1983 and 1984.

In the incidents involving U.S. firms last year, at least two businessmen were killed, one was wounded and nine were kidnapped. The countries where the most attacks on U.S. businesses took place were Colombia with 12 and Chile and Spain with 10 each.

American wants to start service to Mexico from Nashville

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — American Airlines wants to begin international service to Mexico from its new regional hub, which opens next week at Metro Nashville Airport, officials say.

Donald P. O'Hare, the airline's southeastern division vice president, said that American has asked the U.S. Department of Transportation for authority to fly a daily nonstop flight between Nashville and Cancun and Cozumel in Mexico's Yucatan Peninsula.

If approved, it would be the first international flight from Tennessee's capital city.

"With the creation of the hub, American will be in an excellent position to serve Cancun and Cozumel from Nashville," O'Hare told a news conference.

The hub, which opens April 15, will serve 37 destinations with 106 daily flights by June. American will have 60 daily flights to 23 points, and American Eagle will have 46 flights to 14 cities.

BETWEEN THE LINES

Elliot

Q. I would like some background on Sam Elliott, such as his age and whether he's married.
A fan
Waterbury, Conn.

A. He's 41, was born in Sacramento, Calif., and raised in Oregon, but since his parents were from El Paso, Texas, the household always had a Western feeling — which he's gone on to re-create in his own house. At his father's urging, he went to college, the University of Oregon, but after his father's death during his senior year, he dropped out to pursue an acting career.

He moved to Los Angeles and joined the Columbia Pictures Film Workshop. From there he was, ironically, sent to another studio, 20th Century Fox, which signed him as a contract player.

His movie debut, although you had to really watch the screen to see it, was as Card Player No. 2 in "Butch Cassidy and the Sundance kid." Co-starring in a much larger role was actress Katharine Ross, whom he would later marry. A few truly forgettable films followed, but in 1976 he got the lead in the film "Lifeguard," which he expected to make him a star. It didn't.

But he continued to work: the film "The Legacy" during which he and Ms. Ross got to know each other a lot better and moved in together; the miniseries "The Sacketts," "Aspen," "Once an Eagle," and "Murder in Texas."

While acting in the series "The Yellow Rose" a couple of seasons back, co-star Cybill Shepherd told him that her ex-boyfriend, director Peter Bogdanovich, was putting together a movie with a role for "a Gary Cooper type on a motorcycle." That appealed to him and he scheduled meetings with Bogdanovich to talk about it but missed three of them, once to take Ms. Ross to Hawaii, where they got married.

Finally, he did meet with the director and he was cast as Gar, Cher's biker-lover in "Mask." He also appeared in the miniseries "A Death in California" in a much less sympathetic role at about the same time. Newest project is a CBS action-adventure TV movie called "The Blue Lightning" that he shot in Australia.

Young

Q. Who was that beautiful lady who played Harrison Ford's love interest in "Blade Runner"?
Zwight Simmons
Dothan, Ala.

A. Her name is Sean Young, she's 26, one of two daughters of an NBC news producer and writer, was born in Louisville, Ky., and raised in Cleveland. Because her father worked in a visual medium, he made sophisticated home movies of the family, and as one of the stars, she became comfortable in front of the camera, something that would, obviously, come in handy later.

First, though, she trained as a dancer, at Interlochen Academy in Michigan starting at the age of 16, and then with various choreographers such as Martha Graham in New York. Dancing roles were few and far between, so she worked as a research assistant at New York's Sloan-Kettering Institute and then as a model, which she hated.

Finally, her mother's literary agent recommended her to another agent and her acting career was underway, courtesy of a film called "Jane Austen in Manhattan," starring the late Anne Baxter. She went up next for the female lead in "Raiders of the Lost Ark" that Karen Allen got, but did get roles in "Stripes," "Blade Runner," "Young Doctors in Love," "Dune" and "Baby."

She's also appeared in various prestigious TV productions: PBS's "Under the Biltmore Clock," Showtime's "Tender Is the Night" and CBS's recent miniseries "Blood and Orchids." She hasn't given up dancing entirely, however: the next time you see Laura Branigan's video "Self Control," look closely — she went undercover as a background dancer.

Cash

Q. Would you please settle a dispute in our family? I think Johnny Cash spent time in prison on drug charges or murder, but my husband says he didn't. Who's right?
E.P.
South Bend, Ind.

A. You are — technically. He was in jail briefly in El Paso in 1965 for possession of a large number of amphetamines, and again in 1967 in Georgia, also briefly, for a charge he can't remember. But he didn't have a long-term stretch as an inmate, which is the popular conception.

He's just written a number of gritty jailhouse songs and performed frequently at prisons such as Folsom and San Quentin, but he's always been released after the show.

Diamond

Q. Could you tell me if Neil Diamond will be performing live again?
Bonnie L. Porter
Anne Green
Valleyfield, Nfld., Canada

A. He should be starting a tour of the U.S. in late spring, although, as we go to press, the dates and cities haven't been confirmed. He should also have a new album out, not coincidentally, at the same time. And in May, he'll have a CBS special "Neil Diamond...A Special Day." His guests are pretty special, too: Stevie Wonder and Carol Burnett.

Weathers

Q. Please tell me if Carl Weathers ever played professional football. There's a friendly wager on this one.
Cathy Bradley
Modesto, Calif.

A. Indeed he did. He played pro ball for five years, first with the Oakland Raiders, then with the British Columbia Lions. He retired in 1974 and, like many athletes, made the switch to acting. While still a Raider, he was an extra in "The Candidate" and had one line in a movie called "The Four Deuces." He then came full circle and played a football player in the movie "Semi-Tough" several years after he retired.

Q. I always liked the actor Michael Parks. Is he still acting?
Margy Davies
Scranton, Pa.

A. He is, but according to his agent, he's fussy. "He won't do series TV," he explains. "We don't agree with him but maybe he'll change his mind. Had he gotten 'Miami Vice,' which he read for before Don Johnson, perhaps he would have, but now he's trying to put his own films together and will do a movie-of-the-week now and then."

Valerie Harper is back on prime-time with the NBC-TV series "Valerie," in which she plays the mother of three teen-aged sons and the wife of an airlines pilot.

Harper loves LIFE

JANE ARDMORE
King Features

"Tony (Cacciotti) as a boy would cook huge vats of spaghetti for kids whose families weren't so fortunate. Many people have done the same in their neighborhoods. I don't think they realized how many partners they have. It's like The Hunger Project calls on us to see how many people are in alignment and that each contribution is valuable. Maybe it's one dollar, maybe not a penny, maybe $10,000. It's not the money, it's the soul force that counts.

— Valerie Harper

What makes her Valerie Harper is the passion and pleasure she brings to every facet of her existence: to her work, to her life as a woman, to the world she yearns to feed. Witness the energy she has put into The Hunger Project and witness LIFE (Love Is Feeding Everyone), brainchild of her own true love, Tony Cacciotti.

The organization has evolved from his concept of contacting supermarkets for free groceries. Now it has three paid employees, 300 volunteers and an old Beach Boy van and is feeding 16,000 people a week in East and South Central Los Angeles. "This number," she says "will jump to more than 30,000 with our two new trucks, a gift from Lorimar," co-producers of her NBC-TV series, "Valerie."

This spring, after seven years of varied activity on film and theater, Ms. Harper is back where she belongs — on prime time with the very human comedy in which she plays the mother of three young teen-aged sons and wife of an international airlines pilot (played by Josh Taylor), whose job makes their's a romantic, commuter marriage, but also leaves her in the spot of being almost a single parent.

"I'm not playing 'Rhoda,' " she explains. "I'm playing a today woman with all her trials, tribulations and laughter...someone pretty much like me with a job and emotional commitment. I love the show.

"Bruce, our assistant director, did 'Rhoda' for five years, ditto the unit production manager and the prop man. We even started shooting the series over on my old Stage 14, then we moved to MGM. It's a different business than when I started working with Mary on the 'Mary Tyler Moore Show.'

"That was 10 years ago," she explains, "Prices have escalated. They used to order 24 shows. Now the networks have to do short orders. You get your little family of workers together and shoot six episodes. While waiting for the next order, you lose people, sometimes key people. We lost our script supervisor.

"Tony (Cacciotti, partner in TAL, her production company) has been really effective as executive producer and we've had such smooth sailing. Our partners are wonderful. Tom Miller and Bob Boyett. They were responsible for 'Happy Days,' 'Laverne and Shirley,' 'Angie,' 'Mork and Mindy,' plus 'Silver Streak' and 'Foul Play' for the movies, so they're wonderfully adept at this form. They understand comedy. And they've been so generous with Tony in that he'd not worked with three cameras before. They've shared with him all they know. These gentlemen care about the people they hire, always with the show in mind but never at the expense of the people. They understand that people being happy and fulfilled is what makes a show great."

And Ms. Harper herself is happy and fulfilled. She was always caring and always generated warmth. The difference between the Ms. Harper of "Rhoda" and today's Valerie Harper is that she is at the very best time of her life. "Oh, yes, I am. It's a matter of self acceptance, even accepting the things I'd like to change in myself: like seeking approval, like talking too much. I accept them, right now, today, and keep working on it. You have to trust yourself. Completely."

And she trusts Cacciotti. And is totally committed. "We haven't really been separated since we met." When she was filming "Chapter II," there was a bathing suit scene in the film and although Valerie had long since lost the weight which was part of the Rhoda character on the "Mary Tyler Moore" show, she'd never gotten her figure into the shape she wanted. Cacciotti, a former New York actor and assistant movie director, had been hired at "fabulous sums" in Hollywood, to get in condition stars such as Richard Gere and John Travolta. That is how Ms. Harper met him.

"And believe me, it was not love at first sight. Tony got me into leg lifts and yoga and running (like three miles a day) in a rubber suit in weather that was 90 degrees. Three hours a day, six days a week. He was entirely businesslike and I didn't have a romantic notion in my head. Here I was sweating, panting, my hair all kinked up, and he'd never let me quit. Always new exercises, always harder. When we went to New York on location, I had him come along so we could keep working.

"It was all platonic up until then. But in New York we suddenly realized how good we felt together and knew we were in love. At first we couldn't believe it. I remember him shaking that handsome head of his and saying, 'But I wasn't attracted to you in any way!' It was almost as if, having gotten me into shape, he'd taken another look and thought, 'Hey, not so bad.' "

When the pictured ended, he took her to the little town of Abruzzi, Italy, to meet his relatives. It was glorious. Ms. Harper has always felt that in another life she must have been Italian — maybe because she and her Italian stepmother have always been so close.

They have been together ever since, first at Malibu, now in a house above Sunset Boulevard in Brentwood. "It's interesting. Except for one picture I made which was shot in Tucson, it's just worked out that whatever the project, we've been working on, it's been together. In May, I did a 'Love Boat' in Egypt. Tony was in it too. And when it finished shooting, we went to Rome.

"While we were in Egypt, Tony had his brother Pat pick up their mother and bring her to Rome to see her family. We joined them there and it was unbelievable! His mom is 86. Tony was born very late in her life, so all of his uncles and aunts are in their 80's and 90's, happy, healthy, vibrant people with roses in their cheeks."

She continues, "he arranged a great luncheon party, just the older generations and their children because they number 200. If you had all those kids' children and their children, you'd have had 1,000. He rented a lovely place in the hills, 45 minutes out of Rome, rustic and beautiful. What a feast we had and outside was the music of a concertina. "As we were leaving, we passed the little church where his father used to worship."

They ate all that Italian food and then came back to America and redoubled their effort for LIFE. "Tony has been involved with ending hunger on his own pre-Hunger Project. At the age of 9, his mother tells me, he used to cook for the neighborhood kids in Auburn. In Italian working-class families, there's a kitchen upstairs where people sit at the linoleum — covered table, chatting and eating, and then downstairs there is another kitchen where you really 'cook heavy.'

By BETTY GORDON FUNKE
King Features

How would like to see 14,000 free performances? Ride free rides?View free exhibits? That's only part of what the 1986 world's fair (Expo 86) is going to offer you in Vancouver, British Columbia, between May 2 and October 13.

Exotic international shows, the latest hits off the charts and classical performances of music and dance — those are only some of the performances which will dazzle visitors from around the world. In addition, jugglers, clowns, robots, fiddlers, puppeteers, mimes, magicians and street entertainers will entertain you 12 hours a day.

The Kodak Pacific Bowl provides covered seats for 3,100 with additional hillside seating on the grass. Outdoor (covered) theaters include the 1,500-seat Xerox International and the 4,200-seat Expo theaters. Each day, the Royal Canadian Mounted Police (RCMP) dressed in their scarlet tunics, mounted on finely groomed horses, will perform their world-famous Musical Ride.

Free with your price of admission are skyrides (elevated track), monorail, ferries and Japan's HSST (the train that flies), as well as France's Soule System.

Admission includes entrance to the more than 80 pavilions, all displays, specialized demonstrations and most on-site entertainment, plus unlimited use of cable skyways, intra-site ferries and monorail. You will be charged extra for amusement rides, tickets to the World Festival and other "name" entertainment concerts.

But another freebie with your price of admission is the magnificent exhibit of treasures from the tomb of Ramses II.

The American adventures in space exploration exhibit will convey to you the sights and sounds of a trip into space. The Expo theme, incidentally, is transportation and communications.

And as this is a transportation fair, you will be able to see life-size elephants, oxen, camels and donkeys, handcrafted to form intriguing components of the Expo Land Plaza. You will find more than 40 vehicles from around the world.

How about gazing at a tuk tuk? (It's a motorcycle-driven taxicab.) Or a camel cart, a rickshaw, tram or howdah? What a great place for adults and children to climb and explore, and a paradise for shutterbugs.

And, by the way, a top attraction for your children is a covered play area on the 1986 World Exposition site. Kids can indulge in net climbs, ball and snake-tube crawls, a forest of punch bags, balance beam walkways, music machines, 3-D shadow dancers, foam swamps and air fountain towers. More than 20 imaginative play ideas are here to delight the young at heart.

As Expo chairman Jim Pattison says, "We are very pleased to unveil this play area. It will be an ideal place for children of the world to gather and learn from each other through play."

Run like a concession, the entry fee will cost $2 for a 90-minute visit. More than 1,100 children can be accommodated at one time. An estimated 22,200 children will visit Expo 86 each day — definitely a place for kids!

The United States joins more than 80 nations, provinces, states, territories and corporations for Expo 86. The exposition plans to invite the world with over a million invitations.

The last world exhibition took place at New Orleans. "We've come a long way since then. In '86, we want to show the world just how far we can go," says director of entertainment Hamilton McClymont.

World Festival attractions, such as Britain's Royal Ballet, 42nd Street, Urban Sax, the State Theater of Heidelberg, Germany (with a dance theater piece about poet Sylvia Plath) — over 14,000 live performances will be ticketed separately. The cultural and entertainment events budget alone is $60 million.

Stewart doesn't think theaters will disappear

Stewart

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — The first revolution to threaten the movie business was radio, and James Stewart remembers it well.

Back in the early 1920s, he was the first person in his home town of Indiana, Pa., to hear a broadcast from Pittsburgh's KDKA, the nation's first radio station.

"I picked it up on my crystal set," says Stewart. "It was such a big event that I had to stand up in class and give a report about it. I didn't know what to say, because this fella just talked.

"We had one movie theater in Indiana, and it used to run one bill Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, then another bill the rest of the week. I remember that when radio became so popular, the theater shut down Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday. But then it went back to playing all week."

James Stewart was a top Hollywood star when the television revolution struck in the late 1940s, and he recalls that television "knocked the bottom out of the movie business." The film industry recovered, and now it is faced with another threat: home videocassettes.

"But I can't envision movie theaters ever disappearing," Stewart said. "The other night Gloria (his wife) and I went to the Dome Theater (in nearby Ocean Park) to see 'Out of Africa,' and what a pleasant experience it was. Big screen, comfortable seats. The theater wasn't full, but there was a helluva lot of people there enjoying themselves.

"I think there's gonna be a revival of movie theaters, and I believe that home video will help — not those places where the screen is small, the sound is terrible and scratches are on the film. I think seeing movies at home will encourage people to see movies the way they used to: in theaters that have ushers, good sound and large screens."

MCA Home Video has declared March as Jimmy Stewart Month to mark the release of five of his films: "The Glenn Miller Story" (in stereo), 1953; "The Rare Breed," 1966; "Bend of the River," 1952; "Thunder Bay," 1953; "Winchester '73," 1950.

"Winchester '73" was an industry milestone. Because Universal couldn't afford his normal salary, the studio agreed to a contract that gave him a minimal fee plus 50 percent of the profits. The result was a bonanza for both Stewart and Universal and the beginning of a new era of star percentages.

In "The Glenn Miller Story," he convincingly played trombone as the swing-era band leader. "I give all the credit to Joe Yukel, who coached me on the trombone," said Stewart. "He said the sound that came out was so bad that he went home and kicked his dog. But he worked the positions on the slide like cue cards, and I managed to get by with it."

His memory of "Bend of the River" concerns the premiere in Portland, Ore. "The parade just got started when the rain began pouring down. Gloria and I were in an open car, and the people in charge suggested putting the top up. But the people had come to see us, so we stayed out in the open, and so did the people on the street. Gloria and I didn't stay to see all of the movie."

In all of Stewart's Westerns he rode the same horse — Pie. Stewart recalled his first encounters with the horse: "It was love at first sight. He was half quarter horse and half-Arabian; the quarter horse part gave him muscles. Not tall, but well put together and a beautiful shade of sorrel. I tried to buy him from the trainer, Stevie Meyers, but she wouldn't sell."

Pie's last film was "The Cheyenne Social Club," and Stewart realized that the 6,000-foot altitude of Santa Fe, N.M., was too much for the horse. "He stayed in the corral," said the actor. "After the picture was over, Hank Fonda presented me with a watercolor he had painted of Pie. It's been in my library ever since."

The "Jimmy Stewart Month" is yet another honor for an actor who has had one of the longest and most prestigious careers in film.

Stewart came to Hollywood in 1935, a Princeton University graduate who had dabbled in summer stock with Henry Fonda and Margaret Sullavan and had played minor roles on Broadway. He began an MGM contract inauspiciously, as a heavy in a B movie, "Murder Man."

In five years Stewart appeared in 24 films, first impressing the film world in Frank Capra's "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington." He was nominated for best actor of 1939, but didn't win until "The Philadelphia Story" the following year. By that time he was already in an Army Air Corps uniform. After distinguished service on bombing missions over Europe, his career resumed with the now-classic "It's a Wonderful Life."

Stewart, who will be 78 May 20, has done little acting in recent years, but he has no intention of retiring. "I look at scripts every week," he said.

Brass quintet, symphony-chorale to perform

The Midland-Odessa Symphony Chorale and the Lone Star Brass Quintet present their annual spring concert Tuesday at St. Ann's Catholic Church and Thursday at St. Paul Presbyterian Church, Odessa. Both performances will begin at 8 p.m. and are free to the public.

The Chorale repertoire will span five centuries of music by European and American composers. The works include a Victorian English motet by Charles V. Stanford entitled "Justorum Animae," "Tu Solus" by the Renaissance Netherlands composer Josquin de Pres and a 20th century French motet, "Ubi Caritas," by Maurice Durufle, based on a Gregorian chant. The first half of the concert will end with Psalm 100 set to music by the 17th century composer Heinrich Schutz. This piece was written for two choirs. The Lone Star Brass Quintet will join the Chorale to play the second choir part.

The Quintet will continue the concert, performing four pieces including "Quintet" by Malcolm Arnold, "Fugue in G Minor" by J.S. Bach, "Suite" by William Boyce and "Quintet in D-flat Major, Op. 7" by Victor Ewald.

Following the Lone Star Brass Quintet performance, the Chorale will close the concert with an arrangement of "Three Hungarian Folk Songs" by Bela Bartok and three folk hymns and spirituals.

Eugene Pierce, conductor of the Midland-Odessa Symphony Chorale, was educated at Westminster Choir College, Florida State University, Temple University, and the University of Northern Colorado, where he is a candidate for the Doctor of Fine Arts degree in choral conducting.

The Lone Star Quintet is the resident quintet of the Midland-Odessa Symphony Chorale. Since its formation in 1981, it has a repertoire ranging from classical to ragtime. The quintet plays throughout Texas and has appeared in the Annapolis Brass Quintet Festival in Maryland. Tours have includes the states of Arizona, California, Nevada and New Mexico.

The Midland-Odessa Symphony & Chorale, Inc. offers this free-to-the-public concert and invites everyone to attend. For more information, contact the symphony office, 563-5269.

Jerry Mennenga/Reporter-Telegram

The Thouvenal String Quartet will be performing a two-concert series in Odessa at the Art Institute of the Permian Basin. The concerts, scheduled for 8 p.m., April 19, and 3 p.m., May 18, are sponsored by InterFirst Bank of Odessa.

Steve Helbing, a senior executive vice president of InterFirst Bank, said of the bank's sponsorship, "The Midland-Odessa Symphony & Chorale is a worthwhile project for both communities and InterFirst wants to help make available for Odessa one of the best things about the Symphony, which is its Thouvenal String Quartet. Odessa and Midland are very fortunate to have available a world class string quartet. We hope that everyone will join us for this concert series."

The Thouvenal is the resident string quartet of the Midland-Odessa Symphony & Chorale, Inc. and has is renown for their interpretations of old and new string quartet literature.

The ensemble was formed in 1975 at Indiana University where the four original members were attending as graduate students. Soon after their formation, the group was brought to the Permian Basin as Artists-In-Residence as well as to act as an official ensemble of the Midland-Odessa Symphony & Chorale and to occupy the principal seats of their respective sections in the orchestra. Since that time, they have established themselves as "a quartet in the upper echelons" according to Donal Henahan of the New York Times.

In 1980 the group won the Weiner International String Quartet Competition. They are now established in the New York concert scene appearing every year in either Alice Tully Hall, Carnegie Hall, Abraham Goodman House or the 92nd Street "Y".

The quartet has toured both coasts and the midwest of the United States, Mexico, and in Vienna. During the four-concert series on the Vienna, Austria Music Festival, the quartet was selected for live broadcasts and archive recordings for Austrian National Radio. In 1985 the Thouvenal received an invitation by the Chinese People's Association for Friendship with Foreign Countries to conduct a concert tour of China as one of the first American classical performing arts groups ever to be sponsored directly by the Chinese government. This occasion was brought about by the signing of the Cultural Agreement by President Reagan in April, 1984. Following the Thouvenal's return, their recording of Ernst Kernek's Fifth String Quartet was released by DRI Records.

Their awards and commissions have included an NEA consortium grant to co-commission and perform new works by Milton Babbit, Elliott Carter and Mel Powell, and NEA grant to commission and premiere Ernst Krenek's Eight String Quartet, a Texas Commission on the Arts Touring Artist grant, and the "Critics Choice" in the "Village of Voice" in New York City. They have also been "Musicians of the Month" in "Musical America," featured performers on NBC's "Today Show," and Artist Coaches of the San Diego Music Workshop since 1979.

Current members of the group are Eugene Purdue, Edmund Stein, Sally Chisholm, and Keith Robinson II. Purdue, first violinist, and Chisholm, violinist, are both members of the original quartet. Stein is second violinist and Robinson is cellist.

The Thouvenal has engaged in an annual five-concert series in Midland since their arrival in the area nine years ago.

Tickets for the two Odessa concerts are $5 each and are available at InterFirst Bank Odessa, N.A., and the Midland-Odessa Symphony offices or at the door the evening of the performance. For more information, call the Symphony office at 563-5269.

VALERIE

"Tony as a boy would cook huge vats of spaghetti for kids whose families weren't so fortunate. Many people have done the same in their neighborhoods. I don't think they realized how many partners they have. It's like The Hunger Project calls on us to see how many people are in alignment and that each contribution is valuable. Maybe it's one dollar, maybe not a penny, maybe $10,000. It's not the money, it's the soul force that counts.

"I just came back from a Hunger Project conference," she says. "It's going magnificently. In fact, the goal has been realized. The goal was to put the issue of hunger on the front burner, to make people aware.

"There is no reason in the world why you can't end hunger. There's food in the world. It's just a matter of getting it to the hungry. The really courageous people, to me, are those who were working on the hunger issue 50 years ago, when there didn't seem a chance. Save the Children. Save the Children is a 52-year-old organization!"

She reflects, "The Hunger Project has been an education for me. I work with other organizations that feed, but the project itself is the all-important idea. Intangible, but you can do nothing without it.

"With it, well, if we as a planet can make an internal commitment actually to shape the world around us, the sky's the limit as to what the world can be. Ending hunger is the vehicle, but riding it people find out who they are and how powerful they are. Which is why The Hunger Project is central to my life.

"That's why I so love LIFE. It is wonderful, active and direct. Tony and I got involved several years ago with a group no longer in existence, whose idea was to buy food, say a quantity worth $50, and sell it for $10."

She continues, "They meant well, but for us it was a bookkeeping nightmare — we had to find a way to get free food and give it free. And to whom? To the poorest of the poor, welfare mothers who give the food to their children and go without, to older people who just aren't making it, older women whose husbands have died and they get half his Social Security. Older women are starving to death.

"Dennis Weaver joined us and agreed to be president. Tony's idea of contacting the supermarkets worked. We are businesslike. We are careful not to interfere with supermarket business or the comings and goings of delivery vans. If we're to be somewhere at 8:08, we are there.

"We receive what we call 'backroom products;' all the dated stuff: milk, frozen food, sliced meat, deli, bakery, produce, if something has a slight bruise, cans with the labels on crooked. No garbage. It's all absolutely good food.

"To supplement the perishable, we have food drives where we ask people to donate food or money for food." Ms. Harper and Weaver stand out in front of a supermarket and people will go in and bring out a full cart to donate. She gives them a list of 20 needed items. Often they give all 20. Everything is packed in special cases. The market allows the LIFE people to stand outside on Saturdays and Sundays.

"The city is helping; they furnish distribution centers. And the community handles distribution. We work through churches, through shelters. In the L.A. area there are 1.3 million people who don't get enough to eat. And our program is not the solution. Jobs are the solution. Stability in communities is the solution."

She continues, "Our efforts are stopgap. I think similarly about Ethiopia. It's great that we're sending food to Ethiopia. But development, the use of windmills to get the water up and irrigate and combat drought, is the key to ultimate solution there.

"Here we are not sitting a desert. We have safeguards monetarily in every area. At Saint Anne's Church an efficient nun says, 'We have this many families. These are the most destitute. We want 150 orders.' That means 150 orders for families of four, food assistance for a week. Not the whole diet but enought to get them by.

"The church, or in other cases, the shelter pays us 10 cents a pound. That doesn't nearly pay for the trucks. We have to keep fund-raising. We have a paid manger at each center, and volunteers sort out the food, cut any wilted leaves from the produce, wash it, assemble orders.

"We went from feeding 100 families to 9,000 in one year. From 9,000 to 13,000 the next year. In South Central L.A. we found a lady, Sister Washington, an old, uneducated lady with a beautiful soul. She was already feeding 10 people in her basement, off her food stamps. Now we're working through her. Everywhere we find generous people, eager to help. These people have dignity and honor; they want to have some say in their lives."

"I'm so proud of Tony for envisioning LIFE. I'm sure part of why I love him so is that he's such a giving person. Extremely generous. And he's fun. And he's got energy, a lot of energy for living. I really like that. He has a positive way of looking at life. I don't know if I could be around a negative person."

After that, you can take a look at Design 2000.

It's a three-dimensional walk-through of our future world — what tomorrow will bring.

So whether it's the crackle and pop of fireworks, or the oom-pah-pah of a German band, whether you're awed by the huge U.S.A. Pavilion or the daily 25 free folk shows, whatever excites you, a showcase of the world is waiting to dazzle you.

'P.O.W.' escapes into stupidity

By DAVID LEE FORREST

Forrest

A southbound convoy pulls up to a North Vietnamese road block. Inside the water truck — which is so riddled with gaping holes that it couldn't possibly hold water — a group of American P.O.W.s are hiding.

"To Hanoi," the commandante answers.

People start shooting. End of scene.

Well, this is probably the level of intelligence one should expect from a movie that advertises itself as being "in the tradition of 'Rambo' and 'Missing in Action.'"

Actually, "P.O.W." starts out looking almost promising. The film shows its GI hero, played by David Carradine, as a human being — albeit a tough, sharpshooting one — rather than a Rambo-esque superhuman.

Also, unlike "Rambo" or "Missing in Action," at least "P.O.W." is really set during the Vietnam War, which, at first, adds considerably to its credibility.

After a decent beginning, however, the movie goes downhill rapidly. Carradine gets captured and is put into a North Vietnamese prison camp.

The camp commandante, played by Mako, has amassed a heap of loot over the years (apparently the Vietnamese prison camp business was terribly profitable) and wants to live like a decadent capitalist in Miami.

He offers to let Carradine go free if the American will help him smuggle all his ill-gotten gain out of Southeast Asia.

Carradine agrees, but only if Mako will let all the other American prisoners in his camp escape also.

"Everybody goes home," Carradine grimly states. Actually, someone grimly states that line about once every 18 minutes or so throughout the film.

A deal is struck and Carradine, Mako and their assorted troops try to quietly slip south, an attempt that goes haywire as soon as they encounter that guard who's bright enough to know the difference between north and south.

The story goes completely haywire, too. It gets splintered into different subplots as people start double-crossing one another with wild abandon. Sputtering chase scenes start and stop abruptly while the action becomes riddled with flaws in logic.

"P.O.W." looks a lot like someone took two or three half-completed war movie scripts and just threw them together to make one film. After all, it took no less than four different people to write the screenplay while another two men are credited with the original story.

Carradine gives a reasonable performance under the circumstances, although he doesn't seem to even kick and chop his assailants with the same gusto he had in his old "Kung Fu" television series.

Mako, whose performance in "The Sand Pebbles" won him a best supporting actor Oscar nomination in 1966, has a terrible role and doesn't do much with it.

Despite the Vietnam setting (like most recent Vietnam War films, it was really shot in the Philippines), "P.O.W. The Escape" doesn't have much to do with America's experiences in Vietnam.

The director, an Israeli named Amir Gideon, has admitted that part of the reason for making a Vietnam War movie was simply that "World War II is too far away for young audiences to relate to."

The setting probably doesn't matter much, though, since "Tokyo is the other way!" would have sounded just as stupid.

"P.O.W. The Escape," rated R for violence, strong language and brief nudity, is now showing at the UA Cine IV.

Simon's 'Fools' runs through April 26 at Theatre Midland

"Fools," a play by Neil Simon, opened Friday at Theatre Midland, 2000 W. Wadley Ave. The production runs through April 26.

The play, a comic fable, takes place in the Ukranian village of Kulyenchikov. Simon used this play as a vehicle for humor. In it common sense is uncommon and reason unreasonable. The reason for all this unreason is a curse placed upon the town 200 years ago, so the story goes. The curse of ignorance must remain until someone from the house of Zubritsky maries someone from the house of Yousekevitch, or until someone successfully teaches a member of the town something — anything. The curse also affects any visitor that does not leave the town within 24 hours.

The play is directed by Don Bachman. Set designer is David Layman, who is also handling technical directing and lighting design. Stage manager is Amy Fults.

Congratulations in order for Eastwood

By PATT MORRISON
Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

LOS ANGELES — Dear Clint — oh, jeez, I'm so sorry, I mean Mr. Eastwood:

Well, you did it. You won. But then again, you always do, you great big hunk of What's Right With America. There's not a scriptwriter alive — or who would wish to stay alive — who would dare to make you the second-fastest gun in the West, who would let you get knocked off, mission unaccomplished, in the last reel. It would be like letting Ronald Reagan lose an arm-wrestling match with Col. Khadafy.

And now you're the chosen people's choice for Carmel-by-the-Sea. Still no Oscar, but Hizzoner. Congratulations.

I've followed this campaign avidly, you know. Because it was all my fault.

I wrote that article that evidently got the .44 magnum slug rolling, that helped you to make up your mind to run for office. You recall it, from last August — the one headlined "Scrooge City?" (I don't write the headlines, sir, honest). It was about ice cream cones banned from the streets of Carmel, but it touched on the underlying problem, the grotesque but necessary symbiosis of quaint Carmel and its tourists, like the relationship between the tickbird and the rhinoceros, or the remora and the shark. In practically every interview of yours that I've read, you mentioned something about my article, that it was not the kind of image Carmel needs.

If it riled you up, I'm glad, since that's what a good story can do — prompt people to react to a problem. I'm just relieved that I was already back in Los Angeles, and out of firing range, when you were doing all that reacting. From your reputation, I should have been quaking in my Maud Frizons.

And now that I'm down here and you're up there, I can tell you something else: I've never been a real fan of yours. If I even go to the kind of movies you make, I spend half the time with my hands over my eyes; if the gore is particularly lengthy, I'm out in the lobby, leisurely re-salting my popcorn. Maybe that's why we still have a black-and-white television — I can't stand the blood.

Actually, you did make one movie I really liked, whose name I can't remember: a scary, sexy film noir in which you played a Civil War soldier held prisoner in a girls' antebellum boarding school just bursting with delicately bred young things who were bursting out of their pantalettes. But not a Russki in sight.

So you understand my perplexity when I heard you had made a movie of "Foxfire." I just couldn't imagine you and Sondra Locke in the parts so wonderfully limned by Hume Cronyn and Jessica Tandy. Silly me. The movie was "Firefox," and your love interest was a fighter jet.

Now you have a smaller, more critical audience for your new role — the 5,000 folks of Carmel, where there is no movie house and you'll be performing live and in-person at council meetings, voting things down, not gunning them down.

You'll do just fine in a town that once thought to build a wall around itself, where a proposal for public toilets can set neighbor against neighbor, where someone wrote a letter to the newspaper urging that not only ice cream cones, but chewing gum be outlawed on village streets as well. It's a tough town — just your kind.

Had I lived there, I might have voted for you, too, but for the wrong reason. I admire you for restoring the great American tradition of imperative verbs, with your gritty, too-often-quoted demand, "Make my day," which takes its place with other immortal American commandments: "Go West, young man"..."Remember the Alamo"..."Turn that damn music down!"

A lot of people figure you'll whip Carmel into shape, or else. The iron fist in the iron glove. Grim Government is Good Government. Not I. I figure anyone with the sense of whimsy to name a restaurant "Hog's Breath" must be laughing his head off at the visitors who jam in to eat Hog's Breath food. You're all right by me.

Glad to have you on our side — again — Mr. Mayor. And I sleep better at night, knowing you're part of our coastal artillery.

Hines to perform with symphony, chorale

The Midland-Odessa Symphony and Chorale will be presenting their final concert of the 1985-86 Master Season with guest artist Jerome Hines on April 29 at Midland's Lee High School auditorium and May 1 at Odessa's Bonham Junior High School Auditorium. Both concerts begin at 8 p.m.

The bass-baritone opera singer is celebrating his 40th consecutive year at the Metropolitan Opera, exceeding any other major artists' continued association with that company.

"His magnificent voice and great artistry along with his recital appearances, numbering over 1,200, and his appearances as soloist with the great orchestras and on television, make him one of the giants in music today," said Connie Linsler, general manager for the local organization.

Besides his distinguished career at the Metropolitan, Hines has won renown in lyric theatres of the world, including Bolshoi, La Scala, Teatro Colon in Bueno Aires, the Wagner Festival in Bayreauth, Germany, Teatro Massimo in Palerma and others.

Hines repertoire encompasses bass roles such as "Attila," King Phillip in "Don Carlo," and in 1953 he was the first native-born American to sing the role of Boris Godunov at the Met or any other major theater in the world.

Hines roles in broadway musicals have also proven successful. "His interpretations of Emile de Beque in Rodgers and Hammerstein's "South Pacific" have evoked praise from the critics that recalled the success of Ezio Pinza in the role, and his Don Quixote in "Man of La Mancha" has earned kudos from both audiences and critics alike," Miss Linsler said.

The concert will also feature the Midland-Odessa Symphony and Chorale, Midland College Choir, Odessa College Choir and UTPB's University Singers. The Midland performance will include the voices of the Sam Houston, Bowie, and Bonham Elementary Schools' choirs and the Odessa performance will include the choirs of Blackshear, Ireland and Milam Magnet Schools.

The concert, with voice and orchestra, will include selections fron Richard Strauss' "Don Juan," Ravel's "Daphnis and Chloe," in addition to works by Verdi, Mozart and Boito.

Tickets are $12 reserved, $9 general admission and $4 for students and senior citizens, and may be purchased at Texas Commerce Bank in Midland and Odessa, or at the door the evening of the concerts. For more information, call the Symphony office at 563-5269.

Auditions went to the dogs

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Auditions for non-singing roles in the forthcoming production of Friedrich von Flotow's "Martha" have gone right to the dogs.

Canine tryouts late last week in the Lyric Opera production attracted 37 beagles — as the chorus call had specified — for a hunting scene.

"We didn't have one impostor," said Virginia Long, the Lyric's director of public relations. Of a dozen finalists, probably nine dogs will be chosen for roles that will pay their owners $3 a performance, she said.

Ms. Long said the hounds first were put through their paces individually, eliminating those that were too large or small, old or young. Then aspirants were walked with other beagles and those that started barking at each other were cut.

Next, the dogs were introduced to the singer who plays Martha, and heard a tape recording of some of the music.

By DAVID ELLIOT
Copley News Service

LOS ANGELES — "I got to grow up a bit," said Ralph Macchio, movie star. "At least a little beyond 'The Karate Kid.' "

His growing-up occasion is "Crossroads," in which he plays a Long Island white boy who yearns to be a blues guitarist with a black style. Looking at Macchio, a slender reed with the outgoing, boyish personality of a Most Popular in Class perennial, it is hard to believe he is 24 years old. Or as he says, "A 24-year-old young guy. I still look young, and it gets frustrating, but at least 'Crossroads' is a rite-of-passage movie, not another high-school picture."

He comes from a big Italian-American family on Long Island, studied dance as a kid ("I loved Gene Kelly"), was spotted by talent agent Marie Pastor at a Hofstra University recital and was soon in commercials. He said it was the part of troubled Johnny in Francis Coppola's "The Outsiders" that "got me excited about acting, made me realize what it was about." And then the title role in "The Karate Kid," the boy who learns martial arts wisdom from Pat Morita, made him the object of such tributes as, "We love you forever, Ralph!" hurled by young women outside Mann's Chinese Theater at the "Crossroads" premiere.

Macchio blushed a bit at the memory, as agent Marie Pastor looked on smiling. "I call that Ego Night," he said, "a pure celebration of ego. If you start listening to that, you're crazy. I know most of the fans are sincere, but I can't take it seriously. I take the acting seriously. If I stayed out here, I'd go nuts."

So he lives back East, close to old friends and his family, because "I have to get away from all this. It's a snowball that can roll downhill and grab you, until you're dizzy. I trust my instincts, and those of Marie and my family. I listen to them, though I make my own decisions."

One believes it. Under his somewhat callow surface, Macchio seems built to last as a serious actor. His talent won him the prize role of Robert De Niro's son in this spring's New York Shakespeare Festival production of "Cuba and His Teddy Bear," and he is "so excited by that! De Niro is one of the best actors, ever. He takes great chances. It's a father and son story set in a Cuban-Puerto Rican family. Cuba (De Niro) is a drug dealer, and Teddy Bear (Macchio) gets hooked on heroin. And Burt Young plays my godfather. This is my first stage acting since high school."

The "Crossroads" premiere audience was wowed by Ry Cooder's sizzling score and the skill with which Macchio mimicked hot-blues guitar playing. He boned up on the blues and took extensive lessons in guitar fingering and performance style. Only when called to rip through some Mozartean arpeggios did he feel way out of his depth, he said. "I got so frustrated. That classical part was hard. But of course in the movie they cut away from what I can't do and make it look like I can. I had to be covered a lot, but I still learned some basic moves.

"You feel so great when you're up there acting it out, and everyone is applauding. Then you go home and you can't really do it, except the most basic stuff. What a letdown! But it is really satisfying to pick up a guitar and practice. I own an acoustic guitar, and an electric. I'd much rather keep up guitar than karate. That was too tough for me. I'd rather make music than get hit."

As a boy he played "some trumpet, but not very well. I do have a keen ear, and I love basic rock 'n' roll. Blues is where rock comes from, and I really got into Robert Johnson's music and also Elmore James, Muddy Waters, B.B. King. Just getting down to Mississippi, with all those cotton fields, and the heat, made me feel. 'This is the blues.' "

The kid-apprentice-of-wise-old-man story makes for obvious parallels between "Crossroads" and "Karate Kid," but Macchio said, "We didn't want to make the same movie again. This one has more texture, more edge. I knew people might say I was repeating myself, but I think that's not true. Walter (Hill, the director) calls this his 'sugar cookie' movie, but that's his joke. The movie is not as sweet as 'Karate Kid,' and it does have Walter's style, his signature."

Comparing Morita, the karate master of his first hit, and Joe Seneca, who plays the old black bluesman who takes him in hand in "Crossroads," Macchio said, "The roles are similar but not the men. Pat is always joking, cracking, always 'on.' He was the best part of making 'Karate Kid.' Joe is more ramped down. It's a big role for him, and I think he felt the pressure more. And he's a stage actor, while Pat comes out of stand-up comedy. You couldn't ask for nicer people to act with."

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Tom Hulce remembers last year when he sat in the audience at the Academy Awards as a best-actor nominee for his title role in "Amadeus."

He was relieved and happy when his co-star, F. Murray Abraham, was announced as the winner because the win was for "our team."

"We felt like a team because of where we had worked," Hulce said about filming in Czechoslovakia. "We had drawn close together in a cooperative spirit that made it seem like a small independent company rather than a big production. Everyone was putting out."

Though he knew he wasn't going to win, a few friends told him he should prepare a speech, just in case. "I tried to write something but couldn't. Just before the announcement, I had a split second of terror when I realized I wouldn't know what to say if I did win."

Instead of the $18 million budget of "Amadeus," "Echo Park" cost $800,000, or so the actor heard.

Instead of the turbulent last years of Mozart, the new film concerns "a stripper, a body-builder and a pizza-delivery guy, all with dreams of making it in Hollywood."

Echo Park is a district near downtown Los Angeles that long ago was bypassed in the city's outward growth. Its ramshackle houses and cluttered alleyways are the setting for Austrian director Robert Dornhelm's movie about the friendship of three young people.

The script is by Los Angeles film reviewer Michael Ventura, the producer is Walter Shenson, a specialist in small, memorable films ("The Mouse That Roared," "A Hard Day's Night," "Reuben, Reuben"). The financing came from Austria.

Hulce made "Echo Park" right after "Amadeus," he said. "I wanted to work soon so I could see what I had learned on 'Amadeus,' and I wanted to have the luxury of picking a film without having to wait to see what happened to 'Amadeus.'

"I liked the sweetness of the story and the fact that it takes place today. And I knew that Robert Dornhelm would bring a different quality by seeing it through foreign eyes."

Hulce hasn't made a feature film since the international acclaim for "Amadeus." For one thing, he spent six months traveling in the United States and abroad to help publicize the movie. "It seems like a nice way to see the world, but you're too busy to see anything."

He also played "The Glass Menagerie" in Waterford, Conn., with Teresa Wright and Melissa Gilbert, filmed an American Playhouse for PBS, appeared in "The Normal Heart" in New Haven, Conn.

"The movie offers covered a wide range, from buddy-cop picture to young romantic comedies that I thought would be better played by young actors," said Hulce,

Hulce expects to break the long drought in July, when he plans to film "The Long Weekend," a real-life story about two doctors who are subjected to imprisonment and torture by the South African regime.

CHECKING THE LIBRARY

Records, cassettes add dimensions to children's learning

By ALLENE KLEWENO

Recordings add a rich dimension to the materials found in the Children's Rooms of public libraries. The Children's Department of the Midland County Public Library has been in the process of upgrading the records and cassettes purchased for our clientele. Just as books need to be carefully selected for young readers, recordings must be evaluated against high standards as well. Two important criteria were established in making our recent decision:

1) Recordings must be of high quality — not only the content but the technical aspects as well.

2) They should appeal to children, encourage their interest, and engage their imagination.

Quite naturally music should be a part of children's experiences so we wanted to include a range of musical recordings. One of the best is "Reading Rainbow Songs" from the familiar television series Reading Rainbow. This charming record opens with the series theme song: "What fun! You can go anywhere you want to go, and be anything you want to be, just by reading a book." "Mainly Mother Goose: Songs and Rhymes for Merry Young Souls" received the American Library Association's designation as a "Notable Recording." The 61 seletions on this album include many long forgotten songs, jingles, lullabies, riddles, fingerplays, and rhymes.

Another ALA Notable is the creative "Dinosaur Rock" that features an imaginary journey with Professor Jones to meet Stella Stegosaurus, Leapin Lizards and other dinosaurs. Two other musical treats, "Grandma Slid Down the Mountain" and "IT's the Truth," are designed to be favorites with the youngsters.

Several recordings on early childhood learning experiences by the internationally known Ella Jenkins and Hap Palmer are being added to our collection also.

Writing in "A Multimedia Approach to Children's Literature," Ellin Greene states, "one of the best ways of introducing literature to children is through storytelling and reading aloud. Live storytellers are not always available but children can discover the pleasure of the spoken word by listening to fine recordings of favorite books and stories." Our goal was to include recordings by some of this country's leading storytellers.

Seven of the most outstanding storytellers and their recordings are: "Earth Stories" told by Jay O'Callahan; "Brer Rabbit Stories" and "Legends from the Black Tradition" told by Jackie Torrence; "Hans Christian Andersen in Central Park" told by Diane Wolkstein — New York City's 'Official Storyteller'; "Tales to Grow On" told by the Folktellers at UTPB; "Tales of the Southwest" told by Joe Hayes of Santa Fe; and the irresistable "Laura Simms Tells Stories Just Right for Kids."

Another ALA Notable is "Strega Nona's Magic Lessons." The stories on this album were written by one of the most popular children's authors today, Tomie de Paola and read by Tammy Grimes.

Of course no children's record collection would be complete without Winnie-the-Pooh. We have chosen two, "Winnie-the-Pooh and Christopher Robin" and "Winnie-the-Pooh and Eeyore." Both are told and sung by Carol Channing, whose unique voice captures the wonderful nonsense of the adventures of A.A. Milne's characters.

Records and cassettes may be borrowed for three weeks. We invite you to enjoy your library's latest purchases.

'Children of Light' not quite evil

A Review

By DAN CRYER
Los Angeles Times-
Washinton Post News Service

From "A Hall of Mirrors" (1967), through "Dog Soldiers" (1974) and "A Flag for Sunrise" (1981) to "Children of Light," Stone has taken up the challenge of the low road, slogging through the muck of greed, envy, fear, lust, betrayal, self-deception, failure and that loathsome enormity we used to call evil.

He has squandered his in boozing and cocaine-snorting; she has lost hers amid the raptures and horrors of schizophrenia. For both, time is running out on their careers, and maybe their lives.

Lee is on location in Baja California to star in a movie, "The Awakening," based on Kate Chopin's turn-of-the-century feminist novel of the same title.

Long ago, when Lee and Gordon were lovers and the novel was a favorite of hers, he wrote the screenplay with her in mind for the lead role of Edna Pontellier, a fellow native of Louisiana.

Now that Gordon's wife Connie has walked out on him, he feels compelled to join Lee and see how the shooting is going.

So Gordon drives from Los Angeles into Mexico, despite the pleas of his agent that he will be horning in on the production and can only upset Lee, who has married another man, borne children and still has an unstable grip on reality.

Gordon knows he should be tending to his own problems — alcoholism and the coke habit — but he is a driven man and will not be deterred.

When these doomed lovers meet again, the predictable chaos descends on the set. Before long Gordon's witticisms turn into insults, and bad feelings are stirred up all around.

And his booze and drugs, foolishly shared with Lee, set in motion her hallucinations, peopled by apparitions she calls her "Long Friends," but which are winged creatures too devious to be anything but enemies.

Lionel Morgen, Lee's psychiatrist husband, had been visiting with their children but has taken them away for a trip to South Africa, where his parents live.

Lee fears she will never see them again, that Lionel has given up on her. Which, in a way, he has. In her presence, he senses only evil and death. For without the drugs he administers she cannot remain sane; with them, she feels too constrained to be able to act.

If Lee's acting is inspired, the bloodthirsty Long Friends eventually will grow too strong to allow her to act at all. Just so, Lee confuses her own sorry self with that of Edna in a frightening, demonic image:

"Poor Edna. Poor Edna gets a sight of herself, she explodes, crashes, burns. Never knew she was there. Catches fire like the feckless child of family legend, little Great-Aunt Catastrophe in her going-to-mass dress on Christmas morning, alight from the Christmas candles, a torch-child spinning around the parlor."

Stone's prose reaches fever pitch only in describing Lee's hallucinations. For the most part, the writing is ordered in a beautiful, pungent simplicity, a Hemingway-inspired style that Stone has made his own.

When he wishes to set a mood, the author is given to descriptions of sea and sky and mountain. When he wishes to convey character, he writes tape-recorder-accurate dialogue.

And the talk is as steely and unforgiving as you would expect of Hollywood types. At boozy dinners, director, producer, publicity man, actors and New York journalist-in-residence snap at each other like barracudas. Privately, they fornicate and snort coke with reckless abandon.

So it is a repellent scene that Stone creates. But rarely has the atmosphere of menace and decay been created more brilliantly. About everyone here, doom swirls like fog off the Pacific.

Lee can no more fight off her madness than Gordon can stop his drinking. Together, they can no more carry off a lasting relationship than the director's randy father can stay out of bed with a starlet.

Like the Central American setting of "A Flag for Sunrise," Mexico here is not so much evil in itself as the catalyst for the undoing of Americans abroad.

What they find, if not rest, is at least an end to self-deception. They are not bad people, but in Stone's view, evil is a reality too powerful to be fended off.

Only a melodramatic ending prevents "Children of Light" from being a total literary success. At this point, Stone gives up on energetic storytelling and settles for symbol-laden pretension.

Even so, the novel as a whole is a tale of self-deception told with uncommon eloquence. It lingers in the mind like strong medicine on the tongue — harsh, bitter, absolutely necessary.

By PHIL THOMAS
Associated Press

Really fine first novels are extremely rare and probably can be counted on the fingers of one hand A lot of these initial efforts are pretty dreadful stuff, but there are some that are passable.

"Sandman's Dust" by Melvin Jules Bukiet is passable. Although the author's technique is a bit clumsy at times, Bukiet does do a nice job of spinning his themes of youth, innocence and the universal presence of evil into a pleasant reading experience.

Set in the small, rural town of Norma, N.J., a place where the major local concern is raising chickens and selling eggs, the book's plot concerns Lillian Bloom, a pretty 16-year-old, with a passion to escape her surroundings.

Why? "Because I do the same things every day and see the same people and now that summer's here nothing's going to change because nothing ever changes here. Because I'm bored and I want magic."

She gets her desire June 7, 1941, when the circus comes to town. She also gets magic, because this is no ordinary circus. It is a circus of evil, and in her pursuit of wider horizons Lillian nearly gets herself killed.

The story also concerns the girl's parents and her near-comatose aunt who does little but sleep and has been doing so for many years. This is the lesser part of the plot and while it has its moments it makes for rather dreary reading at times.

By DAVID ELLIOT
Copley News Service

LOS ANGELES — "I got to grow up a bit," said Ralph Macchio, movie star. "At least a little beyond 'The Karate Kid.'"

His growing-up occasion is "Crossroads," in which he plays a Long Island white boy who yearns to be a blues guitarist with a black style. Looking at Macchio, a slender reed with the outgoing, boyish personality of a Most Popular in Class perennial, it is hard to believe he is 24 years old. Or as he says, "A 24-year-old young guy. I still look young, and it gets frustrating, but at least 'Crossroads' is a rite-of-passage movie, not another high-school picture."

He comes from a big Italian-American family on Long Island, studied dance as a kid ("I loved Gene Kelly"), was spotted by talent agent Marie Pastor at a Hofstra University recital and was soon in commercials. He said it was the part of troubled Johnny in Francis Coppola's "The Outsiders" that "got me excited about acting, made me realize what it was about." And then the title role in "The Karate Kid," the boy who learns martial arts wisdom from Pat Morita, made him the object of such tributes as, "We love you forever, Ralph!" hurled by young women outside Mann's Chinese Theater at the "Crossroads" premiere.

Macchio blushed a bit at the memory, as agent Marie Pastor looked on smiling. "I call that Ego Night," he said, "a pure celebration of ego. If you start listening to that, you're crazy. I know most of the fans are sincere, but I can't take it seriously. I take the acting seriously. If I stayed out here, I'd go nuts."

So he lives back East, close to old friends and his family, because "I have to get away from all this. It's a snowball that can roll downhill and grab you, until you're dizzy. I trust my instincts, and those of Marie and my family. I listen to them, though I make my own decisions."

One believes it. Under his somewhat callow surface, Macchio seems built to last as a serious actor. His talent won him the prize role of Robert De Niro's son in this spring's New York Shakespeare Festival production of "Cuba and His Teddy Bear," and he is "so excited by that! De Niro is one of the best actors, ever. He takes great chances. It's a father and son story set in a Cuban-Puerto Rican family. Cuba (De Niro) is a drug dealer, and Teddy Bear (Macchio) gets hooked on heroin. And Burt Young plays my godfather. This is my first stage acting since high school."

He says he's scared "a little. I was more scared...at the premiere!"

The "Crossroads" premiere audience was wowed by Ry Cooder's sizzling score and the skill with which Macchio mimicked hot-blues guitar playing. He boned up on the blues and took extensive lessons in guitar fingering and performance style. Only when called to rip through some Mozartean arpeggios did he feel way out of his depth, he said. "I got so frustrated. That classical part was hard. But of course in the movie they cut away from what I can't do and make it look like I can. I had to be covered a lot, but I still learned some basic moves.

"You feel so great when you're up there acting it out, and everyone is applauding. Then you go home and you can't really do it, except the most basic stuff. What a letdown! But it is really satisfying to pick up a guitar and practice. I own an acoustic guitar, and an electric. I'd much rather keep up guitar than karate. That was too tough for me. I'd rather make music than get hit."

As a boy he played "some trumpet, but not very well. I do have a keen ear, and I love basic rock 'n' roll. Blues is where rock comes from, and I really got into Robert Johnson's music and also Elmore James, Muddy Waters, B.B. King. Just getting down to Mississippi, with all those cotton fields, and the heat, made me feel. 'This is the blues.'"

The kid-apprentice-of-wise-old-man story makes for obvious parallels between "Crossroads" and "Karate Kid," but Macchio said, "We didn't want to make the same movie again. This one has more texture, more edge. I knew people might say I was repeating myself, but I think that's not true. Walter (Hill, the director) calls this his 'sugar cookie' movie, but that's his joke. The movie is not as sweet as 'Karate Kid,' and it does have Walter's style, his signature."

Comparing Morita, the karate master of his first hit, and Joe Seneca, who plays the old black bluesman who takes him in hand in "Crossroads," Macchio said, "The roles are similar but not the men. Pat is always joking, cracking, always 'on.' He was the best part of making 'Karate Kid.' Joe is more ramped down. It's a big role for him, and I think he felt the pressure more. And he's a stage actor, while Pat comes out of stand-up comedy. You couldn't ask for nicer people to act with."

Beer, wine allowed in 1933

Beer and wine once again became legal beverages in the United States on April 7, 1933, after 13 years of prohibition.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Tom Hulce remembers last year when he sat in the audience at the Academy Awards as a best-actor nominee for his title role in "Amadeus."

He was relieved and happy when his co-star, F. Murray Abraham, was announced as the winner because the win was for "our team."

"We felt like a team because of where we had worked," Hulce said about filming in Czechoslovakia. "We had drawn close together in a cooperative spirit that made it seem like a small independent company rather than a big production. Everyone was putting out."

Though he knew he wasn't going to win, a few friends told him he should prepare a speech, just in case. "I tried to write something but couldn't. Just before the announcement, I had a split second of terror when I realized I wouldn't know what to say if I did win."

Instead of the $18 million budget of "Amadeus," "Echo Park" cost $800,000, or so the actor heard.

Instead of the turbulent last years of Mozart, the new film concerns "a stripper, a body-builder and a pizza-delivery guy, all with dreams of making it in Hollywood."

Echo Park is a district near downtown Los Angeles that long ago was bypassed in the city's outward growth. Its ramshackle houses and cluttered alleyways are the setting for Austrian director Robert Dornheim's movie about the friendship of three young people.

The script is by Los Angeles film reviewer Michael Ventura, the producer is Walter Shenson, a specialist in small, memorable films ("The Mouse That Roared," "A Hard Day's Night," "Reuben, Reuben"). The financing came from Austria.

Hulce made "Echo Park" right after "Amadeus," he said. "I wanted to work soon so I could see what I had learned on 'Amadeus,' and I wanted to have the luxury of picking a film without having to wait to see what happened to 'Amadeus.'

"I liked the sweetness of the story and the fact that it takes place today. And I knew that Robert Dornheim would bring a different quality by seeing it through foreign eyes."

Hulce hasn't made a feature film since the international acclaim for "Amadeus." For one thing, he spent six months traveling in the United States and abroad to help publicize the movie. "It seems like a nice way to see the world, but you're too busy to see anything."

He also played "The Glass Menagerie" in Waterford, Conn., with Teresa Wright and Melissa Gilbert, filmed an American Playhouse for PBS, appeared in "The Normal Heart" in New Haven, Conn.

"The movie offers covered a wide range, from buddy-cop picture to young romantic comedies that I thought would be better played by young actors," said Hulce,

Hulce expects to break the long drought in July, when he plans to film "The Long Weekend," a real-life story about two doctors who are subjected to imprisonment and torture by the South African regime.

CHECKING THE LIBRARY

By ALLENE KLEWENO

Recordings add a rich dimension to the materials found in the Children's Rooms of public libraries. The Children's Department of the Midland County Public Library has been in the process of upgrading the records and cassettes purchased for our clientele. Just as books need to be carefully selected for young readers, recordings must be evaluated against high standards as well. Two important criteria were established in making our recent decision:

1) Recordings must be of high quality — not only the content but the technical aspects as well.

2) They should appeal to children, encourage their interest, and engage their imagination.

Quite naturally music should be a part of children's experiences so we wanted to include a range of musical recordings. One of the best is "Reading Rainbow Songs" from the familiar television series Reading Rainbow. This charming record opens with the series theme song: "What fun! You can go anywhere you want to go, and be anything you want to be, just by reading a book." "Mainly Mother Goose: Songs and Rhymes for Merry Young Souls" received the American Library Association's designation as a "Notable Recording." The 61 seletions on this album include many long forgotten songs, jingles, lullabies, riddles, fingerplays, and rhymes.

Another ALA Notable is the creative "Dinosaur Rock" that features an imaginary journey with Professor Jones to meet Stella Stegosaurus, Leapin Lizards and other dinosaurs. Two other musical treats, "Grandma Slid Down the Mountain" and "IT's the Truth," are designed to be favorites with the youngsters.

Several recordings on early childhood learning experiences by the internationally known Ella Jenkins and Hap Palmer are being added to our collection also.

Writing in "A Multimedia Approach to Children's Literature," Ellin Greene states, "one of the best ways of introducing literature to children is through storytelling and reading aloud. Live storytellers are not always available but children can discover the pleasure of the spoken word by listening to fine recordings of favorite books and stories." Our goal was to include recordings by some of this country's leading storytellers.

Seven of the most outstanding storytellers and their recordings are: "Earth Stories" told by Jay O'Callahan; "Brer Rabbit Stories" and "Legends from the Black Tradition" told by Jackie Torrence; "Hans Christian Andersen in Central Park" told by Diane Wolkstein — New York City's 'Official Storyteller'; "Tales to Grow On" told by the Folktellers at UTPB; "Tales of the Southwest" told by Joe Hayes of Santa Fe; and the irresistable "Laura Simms Tells Stories Just Right for Kids."

Another ALA Notable is "Strega Nona's Magic Lessons." The stories on this album were written by one of the most popular children's authors today, Tomie de Paola and read by Tammy Grimes.

Of course no children's record collection would be complete without Winnie-the-Pooh. We have chosen two, "Winnie-the-Pooh and Christopher Robin" and "Winnie-the-Pooh and Eeyore." Both are told and sung by Carol Channing, whose unique voice captures the wonderful nonsense of the adventures of A.A. Milne's characters.

By DAN CRYER
Los Angeles Times-
Washinton Post News Service

From "A Hall of Mirrors" (1967), through "Dog Soldiers" (1974) and "A Flag for Sunrise" (1981) to "Children of Light," Stone has taken up the challenge of the low road, slogging through the muck of greed, envy, fear, lust, betrayal, self-deception, failure and that loathsome enormity we used to call evil.

He has squandered his in boozing and cocaine-snorting; she has lost hers amid the raptures and horrors of schizophrenia. For both, time is running out on their careers, and maybe their lives.

Lee is on location in Baja California to star in a movie, "The Awakening," based on Kate Chopin's turn-of-the-century feminist novel of the same title.

Long ago, when Lee and Gordon were lovers and the novel was a favorite of hers, he wrote the screenplay with her in mind for the lead role of Edna Pontellier, a fellow native of Louisiana.

Now that Gordon's wife Connie has walked out on him, he feels compelled to join Lee and see how the shooting is going.

So Gordon drives from Los Angeles into Mexico, despite the pleas of his agent that he will be horning in on the production and can only upset Lee, who has married another man, borne children and still has an unstable grip on reality.

Gordon knows he should be tending to his own problems — alcoholism and the coke habit — but he is a driven man and will not be deterred.

When these doomed lovers meet again, the predictable chaos descends on the set. Before long Gordon's witticisms turn into insults, and bad feelings are stirred up all around.

And his booze and drugs, foolishly shared with Lee, set in motion her hallucinations, peopled by apparitions she calls her "Long Friends," but which are winged creatures too devious to be anything but enemies.

Lionel Morgen, Lee's psychiatrist husband, had been visiting with their children but has taken them away for a trip to South Africa, where his parents live.

Lee fears she will never see them again, that Lionel has given up on her. Which, in a way, he has. In her presence, he senses only evil and death. For without the drugs he administers she cannot remain sane; with them, she feels too constrained to be able to act.

If Lee's acting is inspired, the bloodthirsty Long Friends eventually will grow too strong to allow her to act at all. Just so, Lee confuses her own sorry self with that of Edna in a frightening, demonic image:

"Poor Edna. Poor Edna gets a sight of herself, she explodes, crashes, burns. Never knew she was there. Catches fire like the feckless child of family legend, little Great-Aunt Catastrophe in her going-to-mass dress on Christmas morning, alight from the Christmas candles, a torch-child spinning around the parlor."

Stone's prose reaches fever pitch only in describing Lee's hallucinations. For the most part, the writing is ordered in a beautiful, pungent simplicity, a Hemingway-inspired style that Stone has made his own.

When he wishes to set a mood, the author is given to descriptions of sea and sky and mountain. When he wishes to convey character, he writes tape-recorder-accurate dialogue.

And the talk is as steely and unforgiving as you would expect of Hollywood types. At boozy dinners, director, producer, publicity man, actors and New York journalist-in-residence snap at each other like barracudas. Privately, they fornicate and snort coke with reckless abandon.

So it is a repellent scene that Stone creates. But rarely has the atmosphere of menace and decay been created more brilliantly. About everyone here, doom swirls like fog off the Pacific.

Lee can no more fight off her madness than Gordon can stop his drinking. Together, they can no more carry off a lasting relationship than the director's randy father can stay out of bed with a starlet.

Like the Central American setting of "A Flag for Sunrise," Mexico here is not so much evil in itself as the catalyst for the undoing of Americans abroad.

What they find, if not rest, is at least an end to self-deception. They are not bad people, but in Stone's view, evil is a reality too powerful to be fended off.

Only a melodramatic ending prevents "Children of Light" from being a total literary success. At this point, Stone gives up on energetic storytelling and settles for symbol-laden pretension.

Even so, the novel as a whole is a tale of self-deception told with uncommon eloquence. It lingers in the mind like strong medicine on the tongue — harsh, bitter, absolutely necessary.

By PHIL THOMAS
Associated Press

Really fine first novels are extremely rare and probably can be counted on the fingers of one hand A lot of these initial efforts are pretty dreadful stuff, but there are some that are passable.

"Sandman's Dust" by Melvin Jules Bukiet is passable. Although the author's technique is a bit clumsy at times, Bukiet does do a nice job of spinning his themes of youth, innocence and the universal presence of evil into a pleasant reading experience.

Set in the small, rural town of Norma, N.J., a place where the major local concern is raising chickens and selling eggs, the book's plot concerns Lillian Bloom, a pretty 16-year-old, with a passion to escape her surroundings.

Why? "Because I do the same things every day and see the same people and now that summer's here nothing's going to change because nothing ever changes here. Because I'm bored and I want magic."

She gets her desire June 7, 1941, when the circus comes to town. She also gets magic, because this is no ordinary circus. It is a circus of evil, and in her pursuit of wider horizons Lillian nearly gets herself killed.

The story also concerns the girl's parents and her near-comatose aunt who does little but sleep and has been doing so for many years. This is the lesser part of the plot and while it has its moments it makes for rather dreary reading at times.

GOREN BRIDGE

BY CHARLES GOREN AND OMAR SHARIF

©1986 Tribune Media Services, Inc.

DEAR MR. GOREN

Q.—I know that a Lightner double calls for the lead of dummy's first-bid suit. However, the position is unclear when dummy's first suit-bid has been artificial. I was faced with that problem in a recent game. The bidding had gone:

North	East	South	West
2 ♣	Pass	2 ♡	Pass
2 ♠	Pass	3 ♡	Pass
4 ♡	Pass	5 ♡	Pass
6 ♡	Dble	Pass	Pass
Pass

Did partner's double call for a club lead or a spade? (The two club opening bid was artificial and strong.) — J.E., Philadelphia, Pa.

A.—There are several clues to suggest that partner wants a spade lead not a club. First of all, if partner had a really strong club suit, he might have doubled two clubs. And if his club suit is not good enough to risk a double (after all, the opponents may redouble and make the contract, perhaps with overtricks), he can always pass and hope that you find a club lead anyway.

If his double is based on a ruffing possibility, it is more likely that he is short in the suit in which dummy is known to have length than in an unbid suit (unless you have so many clubs that a void in partner's hand is a distinct possibility).

And if his double is based on a holding such as the ace-queen, it has to be in the opponent's real suit; if he held the ace-queen of clubs, he could not be sure the king was going to appear on the table.

Q.—So you have deserted the ship at last. The latest edition of "Goren's New Bridge Complete" not only espouses five-card majors, but also suggests you play forcing no trump responses. How could you? — G.D., Birmingham, Ala.

A.—For years and years, I have maintained there is little difference between a four-card and a five-card major system—on the majority of hands you would make the same opening bid no matter which method you employed. However, most expert players, and almost all teachers, use the latter. Therefore, it seemed out-of-date to continue to propound a method which is losing popularity.

Therefore we decided to incorporate five-card majors into "Bridge Complete" as we think the system should be played, complete with a forcing no trump response. However, for those who would prefer not to use that convention, or those who want to stick with four-card majors, there are chapters dealing with those methods as well.

Young violinist will address El Paso luncheon

EL PASO — Joshua Bell will be the guest speaker at the final Prelude Lecture and Luncheon of the 1985-86 El Paso Symphony Orchestra season. The event will be at noon, April 17, at the Lockhart Room of the El Paso Chamber of Commerce.

Bell, an 18-year-old violinist, is already a veteran of the concert stage. He was the youngest soloist ever to perform on the regular subscription series of the Philadelphia Orchestra when he played with them at age 14. In the spring of 1985 he made his debut with the Cleveland Orchestra and, later, his Carnegie Hall debut with the St. Louis Symphony and Leonard Slatkin.

A native of Bloomington, Ind., Bell has studied violin since the age of five and made his first public appearance at age six. He has been the first prize winner in several competitions, including the Julius Stulberg String Auditions and the first Seventeen Magazine-General Motors National Concerto Competition.

The cost of the luncheon is $7 and reservations can be made by call the symphony office at 1-532-8707 before April 15.
