NOBODY'S BUSINESS

BY JULIAN CAPERS JR.

Austin—W. Lee O'Daniel, the Fort Worth flour broker and his hill-billy band, still held the center of the political stage in Texas this week, continuing his trek through South Texas, and drawing extraordinarily large crowds. O'Daniel, demonstrating his sound knowledge of advertising methods, has worked out a routine that gets people out to hear him, and he shrewdly lets it ride, making virtually no changes in his speech or his program. He has borrowed from the technique of the old-time tent evangelist. He works his crowd up to a high emotional pitch by tricks that are familiar to students of psychology, and even his severest critics admit that he is a master showman. His stunt of circulating his children through the audience with miniature flour barrels, in which listeners are asked to throw in nickels and dimes to "help finance his campaign", is clever use of the old principle that if you sell a man a little interest in a movement, he becomes a convert. Also, his clever sarcasm, when he creates a symbolic figure of the old age pension inspector, and the professional politician, and then literally demolishes them before his audience's eyes, while the crowd howls, is casting the symbolic figure of the devil back into the sulphurous pit. And when O'Daniel calls for a show of hands on who is going to vote for him, it reminds the political analyst of Aimee Semple McPherson, in her palmist days, calling for those who have "the true faith" to stand up.

He Could Go Far

Opinion among the experts here is divided. Many, including some of the shrewdest political thinkers in Texas, believe that a fire that burns as fiercely as the O'Daniel flame must burn itself out before election time. Others suspect that a fire that hot may set the political woods afire and land the flour broker in first or second place. Attorney General McCraw, whose campaign, according to best reports here has been most seriously crippled by the defection of voters to O'Daniel, shifted his campaign headquarters to Dallas, attacked O'Daniel fiercely, and dropped everything that faintly resembled a wisecrack or a joke from his speeches. But the effect of O'Daniel's showmanship, which has made McCraw's efforts in this direction look very feeble, indeed, has apparently made heavy inroads into McCraw's strength.

Thompson, playing what the politicians regard as good strategy, has kept his line of campaigning intact. He continues to advocate aid for farmers, economy in the pension laws, and a policy of industrial development that will "keep open the door of opportunity" for Texas children. He vigorously denounces chain stores, monopoly, special interest, and utilities and declares they are supporting his opponents. He has let O'Daniel strictly alone, which, in view of the possibility of the flour broker being in position to deliver a substantial vote in the runoff—if he isn't in it himself—is regarded here as smart strategy.

The lack of a poll tax payment by O'Daniel, who has educated his three children at the expense of the taxpayers and hasn't contributed the $1. a year that goes to schools from the poll-tax has been the toughest circumstance that O'Daniel has tried to laugh off so far. His frank admission that he doesn't know a thing about running the State government, has also set some voters thinking.

Other Races Warming Up

There is every prospect of an interesting runoff election this year, with second choice contests in view for several major races besides that of Governor. The list of possibilities include Lieutenant Governor, where Coke Stevenson and Senator G. H. Nelson appear now to be leading contenders; Attorney General, with Walter Woodul and Jerry Mann as the

16 Cars Wheat Shipped This Year

A. J. Graham, agent for the Texas and Pacific Railway, reported Wednesday morning that 14 cars of wheat had already been shipped and two were being loaded, making the total 16 cars for the season.

This is a record wheat shipment from Loraine. Last year ten cars were shipped.

government, better administrative prospects for a second heat; Land Commissioner, where Bascom Giles has been gaining strongly, and may get into the runoff with Commissioner Bill McDonald. In the Railroad Commissioner's race, Chairman C. V. Terrell is virtually sure of a second campaign, with John Woods and Bob Stuart both pushing hard for a place in it. Stuart has been speering his campaign vigorously recently, having made 54 speeches in seven days on one foray into West Texas.

Wise Cracks

The O'Daniel boom has brought on a crop of wise-cracks around the Austin lobbies and headquarters. Bob Barker, genial secretary of the Senate, started a fad of putting an "O" before everybody's name. He introduces himself as "Bob O'Baker", and half the people in Austin were putting the "O" before their names.

Will Pace, Tyler's able Senator, brought a new one from East Texas. He sized up the situation there by declaring it is: "Ernest O. Thompson, Lee O'Daniel, and Oh, Oh, McCraw".

When Joe Lewis knocked out Schmeling in short order, the politicians went around cracking that "it looked like Schmeling didn't have any poll tax".

No Session Seen

Likelihood of a special session of the Legislature this fall seemed small, as Claude Teer of the Board of Control, issued figures to show that the present scale of old age pension payments could probably be maintained until January 1 without additional state financing. Incidentally, Teer dropped a warning, pointing out that candidates who promise $30 a month for everybody are promising something that would deprive the state of Federal contributions, and on which even the State's $15. payment would total around 45 millions dollars a year—which is over four times the present State revenue available for pensions.

Ranch Party For Colorado Banker

Colorado, July 4.—(Spl.)—As a surprise compliment for C. C. Thompson of Colorado on his 40th birthday, approximately 250 Mitchell countians gathered Sunday at the Thompson ranch south of Colorado where Harold Bennett and Bill Thompson were hosts for a barbecue dinner.

Two of Thompson's boyhood friends, Congressman George Mahon and Benton L. Templeton, both of Colorado, took leading parts in the day's program.

Present were all employees, officers and directors of the City National bank in Colorado, of which Thompson is president; employees of the Colorado National Farm Loan association, of which he is secretary-treasurer, and scores of other friends and relatives from Colorado, Coahoma, Dublin, Sweetwater, and Thompson's boyhood home, Loraine.

Thompson served several years as Mitchell county's youngest judge, and a number of county officials who served with him were present. One of the central figures of the gathering was Thompson's father, C. M. Thompson of Loraine, pioneer West Texas cattleman. Thompson's brothers, W. B. Thompson of Dublin and Bill Thompson of near Colorado, and his five sisters, Mrs. Clifton Gage of Colorado, Mrs. Kirk Taylor, Mrs. Floyd Griffin, Mrs. Cora Hall, and Mrs. T. R. Bennett of Loraine, were present.

Benton Templeton directed the program, which opened with the singing of "Happy Birthday," led by Mr. Mahon, and invocation by the Rev. C. E. Jameson. Accordion numbers were given by Christina Dann of Sweetwater. Tribute was paid the honored guests in talks by Roy Edwards of Loraine, the Rev. J. A. Scoggins of Loraine, Dell Barber of Colorado, Dorothy Jean Dawson, Mrs. Charles Smith, George Slaton, Dr. William S. Rhode, president of the Colorado chamber of commerce, P. K. Mackey, C. P. Gary, Sam Wulfjen and O. F. Jones.

Wallace Land Buried Here Friday

Funeral services for Wallace Allen Land, 28, were held at the Methodist tabernacle last Friday afternoon at four o'clock, with Rev. A. C. Hardin of Post, his former pastor, conducting the service. He was assisted by Rev. M. H. Godfrey, pastor of the Baptist Church, and Rev. J. A. Scoggins, pastor of the Methodist Church. Interment was made in the Loraine cemetery under direction of G. W. Hendrick.

His sister, Lorene, who was living in California with Wallace and Garland, said Wallace complained Sunday, June 19, of having a sore in his nose. Tuesday he went to see a doctor and Wednesday entered the Good Samaritan Hospital seriously ill with an infection in the blood stream. He died the following Tuesday at noon though every medical attention was given him.

Wallace was born June 18, 1910, and died June 28, 1938, being 28 years and ten days of age. He was converted and joined the Baptist Church at Bethel in 1923 and was a member at the time of his death.

Besides his mother and father, Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Land, he is survived by five sisters and one brother, Lonnie Land, Loraine, Mrs. Henry Doss Jr. Colorado, Eunice Land Loraine, Mrs. Vernon Lich, Tulsa, Oklahoma, and Lorene and Garland Land of Los Angeles, California.

TENANT LAND PURCHASE PROGRAM IS ENLARGED

The State Advisory Committee of the Farm Security Administration met in Dallas and designated thirty-two new counties in which loans will be made to tenant farmers for purchase of land during the fiscal year beginning July 1. A total of $2,118,147 was allocated, as compared with $820,000 during the previous fiscal year.

Rapid expansion of the land purchase program in the next few years was forecast by C. M. Evans, Texas-Oklahoma director of FSA. Evans said that the 380 farms to be bought in Texas under this new allocation will serve only a fraction of one percent of the total tenants of the state, but that "funds will be appropriated in the future as rapidly as FSA demonstrates ability to handle them effectively."

Texas was the second state in the Union to complete its loans during the first year of the program, and credit for this achievement was given by Evans to the county committee of dirt farmers who selected the tenants to receive loans and appraised the farms bought. Eighteen percent more farms were bought than had been expected, because of the careful appraisals made by the local committees, Evans said. Names of the 32 new counties in which loans will be made were sent to Secretary Wallace of the Department of Agriculture for approval, along with some of the 23 counties in which loans were made last year which will receive a few additional loans this year. The counties will not be made public until confirmed by the Secretary. At the same time, county committees will also be announced.

Evans said the movement to put land into ownership of the man who cultivates it is gathering weight rapidly. He has received reports from a conference of 30 of the nation's largest insurance companies, at which it was indicated that 500,000 farms could be offered for sale through FSA, with purchase payments extending over forty years time at 3 per cent interest, and no down payment required. The companies indicated that they would accept the FSA method of appraisal, according to the value of the crops which the land has produced over a period of years. This permits the purchaser to pay out from the actual yield of the land, annual payments in many cases being less than the amount which has previously been paid as rent.

WHO'S NEWS THIS WEEK

By LEMUEL F. PARTON

NEW YORK.—As a token of good will, President Kemal Ataturk of Turkey sends his bomb-tossing adopted daughter on a flight over Greece and the Balkans. She holds a diamond medal for bombing Kurds, having out-scored veteran male fliers in a recent work-out.

When the timid and demure Turkish women started coming out from the harem, they kept right on going. They seem to be out-distancing our girls who are merely coming out of the kitchen.

Turkey's "Flying Amazon" is Sabiha Gueckchen, twenty-four-year-old daughter of a Turkish army captain who was killed fighting Greeks in 1921. She is a pretty little thing.

An admiring woman correspondent described her as "shy and demure," with quick recourse to her "modish little vanity case," as she climbed from her plane after a hard day's bombing. That was in the Der-sim area, in eastern Anatolia, in which she had been blasting the Kurds out of their caves.

She is a first lieutenant in the Turkish army, the only woman air force officer in the world.

Her French flying instructor says she is the most gifted woman acrobat pilot in the world.

Sabina Best Stunt Flyer, Says Mentor
She was trained in flying and gliding in Russia and later was a cadet in the Turkish army air force school. She rides a single-seated military plane, handles all types of planes and is especially accurate and skillful in bombing.

It is said no aviator in Turkey can match her in diving and stunting, but she shrinks modestly from all such, possibly unfeminine, exhibitionism, and sticks to her humdrum bombing tasks.

HERE is another diverting little news note, in sharp contrast, however, on the emergence of the modern woman. At her home in New York, Mrs. Lewis Stuyvesant Chanler presents prizes of $750 to the winners of the annual "Intellectual Olympics," conducted by her new history society.

Happily the flying bomb put is not included in her decathlon. She has been for many years a diligent and earnest advocate of peace and brotherhood, working through the international Bahai movement, of which she has long been a leader. She derives from the Blue book and has turned from society to religious and humanitarian concerns.

Her husband, now retired, is a great-grandson of John Jacob Astor, and a former lieutenant governor of New York. He is a big, gray, silent man, walking a small white poodle dog, rarely seen at his wife's salon, but a loyal partner in her endeavors. He is the brother of the late Bob and John Chanler.

The flaming-haired Valeska Suratt was an instrument of fate in the life of Mrs. Chanler. They were jointly engaged in a Hollywood script enterprise when Miss Suratt introduced her to Mirza Ahmed Sahrab, descendant of Mohammed and a disciple of the Abdul Baha. He was her tutor in the esoteric faith whose followers, like those of the Oxford movement, fervently believe the world can be saved only by a religious and cultural internationalism.

DOWN in Peru, this writer knew some dilatory natives who frequently used a word which meant, "not tomorrow, but day after tomorrow and maybe not then."

Dick Gets Degree 20 Years Late
From ancient parchments, Trinity college does lift the reverse expression—"nunc pro tunc," which means "now instead of then." With this high academic sanction, they are enabled to deal a bachelor's degree to Richard Barthelmess, who failed to touch second when he was there 20 years ago.

Baseball moguls could now say "nunc pro tunc" and hand Fred Merkle that run he didn't get in 1908. If the custom gets going, it might open the way for some European debt payments.

Mr. Barthelmess is one of the thinning line of the stars of the old silent screen who remain in the public consciousness. His mother was Caroline Harris, an actress of the Biograph days. She gave Nazimova English lessons and in return Nazimova gave her boy his professional start in "War Brides." "Broken Blossoms," with Dorothy Gish, was his last big success.

President's Call for Help Indicates Compromise . . . He Demands Election of Liberals to Congress

Speediest ship in our navy, the destroyer McCall, was commissioned at the Mare Island navy yard in California. The McCall, first privately built navy vessel since 1921, has a specified speed of 38½ knots, but in recent tests was reported to have averaged 42 knots. It carries four 5-inch guns and four quadruple torpedo tubes and is especially fitted for quick attacks on capital ships.

Signs of Compromise

THERE are distinct indications of compromise and co-operation in the American picture, and hopes for restored prosperity are somewhat revived. The stock market has become unusually active, and private enterprise is awakening. Unfreezing of three billions in stored-up credit is expected to result from new banking regulations ordered by the President. Thousands of contracts for approved projects to cost almost $500,000,000 have been sent to all parts of the country by the Public Works administration.

Mr. Roosevelt, in his latest radio address to the nation, said: "In simple frankness and in simple honesty, I need all the help I can get, and it seems that the people are ready to give that help if the administration will do its part."

Notable in the President's talk was the admission that mistakes have been made not only by his opponents and by industry and labor, but also by government leaders. He sharply attacked reactionaries in business, blaming them for much of the current depression.

Asserting his continued belief in individual enterprise and the profit motive, he criticized the recent congress for failing to enact his program for government reorganization and legislation to aid the financially depressed railroad industry. At the same time, however, he said the legislators "achieved more for the future good of the country than any congress between the end of the World war and the spring of 1933."

Wants Liberals Elected

MOST of the President's radio speech was frankly political. He declared himself the leader of the liberals and held that, as such, it was his privilege to intervene in state primary and election campaigns for the purpose of insuring the defeat of those whom he characterized as conservatives, the opponents of his policies.

This aroused the indignation of many Democratic statesmen like Senators Burke of Nebraska and King of Utah.

"I believe the people in the districts and states will resent the President's interference," Burke said. "If we were to follow the course he has suggested, we would all be goosestepping behind a leader no matter how beneficent that leader may be. I do not approve of that course."

Senator King asserted the President should not use the great advantage he has in controlling the purse strings of the huge spending program. "People who have fought for the Democratic party for a great many years do not like interference in their state affairs by outsiders," he said. "I do not believe the President should meddle in the primary elections of the Democratic party or any other party."

General opinion was that Mr. Roosevelt had widened the split in the Democratic party and by his words had placed the stamp of his approval on the attempted "purge" directed by Corcoran, Cohen and others of his advisers.

Latest War Scare

BOMBING of loyalist Spanish cities and of British ships in Spanish ports by Generalissimo Franco's insurgent planes led directly to the most recent war scare in Europe. It was reported in London that the loyalists had threatened to bomb Italian and German cities if Franco did not call off his airmen, and in Italy it was asserted that this probably would be regarded as an act of war and would be the cause for appropriate action. The rumors were denied, but their dissemination may have done some good, for information reached the British government that Franco had ordered his aviators to stop bombing British merchant vessels.

However, this news was followed immediately by dispatches saying two more British ships had been bombed in the ports of Valencia and Alicante, several seamen being killed or wounded.

Swedes Celebrate

AMERICANS of Swedish descent by the thousand and many from Sweden gathered at Wilmington, Del., for the celebration of the 300th anniversary of the landing in America of the first Swedes and Finns.

From the old country came Crown Prince Gustaf Adolf with a large party, but he was confined to his suite on the liner Kungsholm by illness. His place was taken by his son, Prince Bertil.

The principal event of the opening ceremony was the presentation of a monument erected by Sweden on the landing site. The presentation was made by Prince Bertil and accepted by President Roosevelt. Then the President presented the monument to Gov. Richard McMullen for the state of Delaware.

After the monument ceremony there was a lawn party attended by Crown Princess Louise.

The celebration was continued for four days in Delaware, New Jersey and Pennsylvania, parts of which states were embraced in the New Sweden founded in 1638 by a company of 150 Swedes and Finns sent to America by Gustafus Adolphus.

Mustn't Seize Hainan

THE British and French envoys in Tokyo warned Japan that any occupation of Hainan, Chinese island off the south coast of China, would be met by joint Franco-British action. The island, which lies near French and British trade routes, was bombed by Japanese flyers.

Germany is recalling the Germans who have been acting as advisers to the Chinese army, and diplomats believe Germany may now give active aid to Japan.

Ireland Installs Hyde

IRELAND'S first president, in the person of Dr. Douglas Hyde, was installed in St. Patrick's hall, Dublin castle, where former viceroys held their social functions. The ceremony was conducted entirely in Gaelic and was witnessed by state and church officials, members of parliament and representatives of foreign countries. Among the last was American Minister John Cudahy.

Dr. Hyde read and signed a declaration in which he promised to defend the constitution and dedicate himself to the service of the people of Ireland. Prime Minister De Valera made a speech in which he said: "You are now our president, freely chosen under our own laws, inheriting authority and entitled to the respect which Gaels ever gave to rightful chiefs. Not all the territory of Ireland is at the moment under your sway, but the justice of our claim and the tenacity of the Gaels will set that right."

President Hyde has been a poet, historian and educator. He is the son of a protestant clergyman and it is hoped he will bring about a union of Roman Catholic Ireland and Protestant northern Ireland.

SEEN and HEARD around the NATIONAL CAPITAL

By Carter Field

FAMOUS WASHINGTON CORRESPONDENT

WASHINGTON.—Rep. David J. Lewis, New Deal candidate in the Maryland primary against Sen. Millard E. Tydings, is sure of just one thing—he does not want Harry L. Hopkins, or Harold L. Ickes, or any other New Dealer to endorse him.

Actually he is running on a 100 per cent pro-Roosevelt platform. He is running against a man, Tydings, who has voted against the New Deal as consistently as any other of the so-called "purge" group. Not only did Tydings vote against the President on the Supreme court packing bill, but he has stood with Carter Glass, Harry F. Byrd, Josiah W. Bailey and Alva B. Adams on the spending issue. He has worried about the balanced budget, about politics in relief, about federal intrusion on state powers, in fact about everything that any opponent of the President has worried about.

On the contrary Lewis has voted and spoken, when he had the opportunity, for everything the New Deal has stood for. Lewis has always been a little in front of the liberal procession. Back in 1916, when he ran for the senate before, that time against Dr. Joseph I. France, many Marylanders voted against Lewis and for France because they thought Lewis was a Socialist. Reason? Because Lewis was called the father of the parcel post. He and Jonathan Bourne, then a Progressive Republican senator from Oregon, pushed the bill through congress which took the express business away from the railroads. It seems funny now, but that brand of radicalism was what kept Lewis out of the senate 22 years ago, on an election day when Maryland was going strongly Democratic for the rest of the ticket.

This time Lewis is making a fight for the senate again on the liberal side. His not wanting any Hopkins, or Ickes, or Jimmy Roosevelt endorsements is not pussyfooting, though naturally some of the New Deal element so regards it. It is a clear-visioned view of his own state, an appraisal of Maryland independence, an estimate of an electorate which likes to decide its own problems without outside interference.

Endorses New Deal

Lewis is not pussyfooting about the intervention of Jimmy Roosevelt and Harry Hopkins in Iowa was a blunder, and that their endorsements of Otha D. Wearin actually helped Sen. Guy M. Gillette. But he knows the same sort of thing, done in his interest, would be fatal in Maryland, would help renegade Senator Tydings. He has been having a lot of trouble making the New Deal see this, and has been to the White House several times to make sure that no unauthorized endorsement is issued for him.

Lewis is not pussyfooting about Roosevelt himself. His first public statement of his candidacy not only praised the President to the skies, but endorsed the New Deal in toto. But that opening statement, rather curiously worded, also stated that his fight was being made exclusively by Marylanders. Lewis knows his state fairly well, and knows that any outside interference would not be welcomed.

Incidentally, Gov. Harry W. Nice, the third Republican governor since the Civil war, is being importuned by friends to make the race this year for the senate, instead of running, as he has planned, for reelection as governor. His friends are pointing out that Lewis may win the primary, due not so much to New Deal popularity as to the fact that many Marylanders seem to be sick on Senator Tydings.

New York Situation

New Dealers and Republicans alike view the situation in New York precipitated by the death of Sen. Royal S. Copeland with mixed emotions. It is generally conceded by those in the know that Gov. Herbert H. Lehman can have the nomination for Copeland's seat if he wishes it. Several other prominent Democrats would like it, but few if any of them would want to take on Lehman for a battle especially as the contest will be by a rather hard-boiled party convention looking with cold calculating eyes at the election, rather than in a primary, where the individual voter marks his ballot for whomever he pleases without a care as to what the effect may be on carefully laid strategy plans of his party leaders.

But then whom to nominate for governor? It is a curious fact that the bigwigs of the Democratic party in New York were no little concerned about this two years ago, and again this time. They were almost in a panic two years ago, until well into the summer, when they thought Lehman was going to retire. At that time it was by no means clear to them that a big Democratic victory was ahead. They were genuinely afraid that if Lehman did not run they would not only lose the state house, but lose the 47 electoral votes of New York for Roosevelt.

Actually of course Lehman had a tremendous majority, but ran away behind Roosevelt. But the worry is present this year, perhaps based on sounder grounds, perhaps not. There is no way of telling until November, and that might be too late.

Put on Pressure

At any rate, they put the pressure on Sen. Robert F. Wagner, two years ago, to run for governor, and did not relax it until Lehman consented to run again. This year they have been putting the pressure on the senator again. He never did want to run for governor. It is no stepping stone to the presidency for him, for he is ineligible for the higher office, having been born in Germany.

But the mere fact that they have been begging Wagner to run for governor shows the mental state of the Democratic leaders.

Now the problem is complicated. They are letting Wagner alone now, willing for him to run for re-election. But they have to find somebody they think they can elect governor, if Lehman goes for the senate, or for senator, if Lehman decides to run again for governor. And, terrible thought, maybe somebody for both senator and governor if Lehman decides to retire!

All of which is all the stranger to outsiders, especially in view of the size of New York state, when actually the Republican leaders are in the same quandary. They were worried to death, before Copeland passed from the scene, about whom to put up for governor and senator. Now they have to find a candidate for the governorship, and in addition two senatorial candidates.

Looking at the Republican problem, and incidentally at most of the candidates mentioned for the three places, one wonders why the Democratic leaders are worried.

Presidential Booms

The battle of the various anti-Roosevelt groups—conservative, radical and personal—is transferred by the adjournment of congress to the states. The picture is cluttered up by presidential booms. Garner for President movements are more serious than even the vice president thinks. In fact he does not think very much about it, having had to be coaxed at length to make a fight for the nomination in 1932. Then there is the Jim Farley for President boom, sprouting in Boston and elsewhere. Last, and not politically very important for the time being, is the Joe Kennedy boom, which flowered in London just before the ambassador sailed for home.

The importance of these premature presidential booms is way out of proportion to the chances of those mentioned actually landing the nomination. If Garner were just a few years younger he would fit the picture perfectly of the type of compromise candidate the anti-Roosevelt people want. Jim Farley and Joe Kennedy are both Catholics, and the idea still persists in many quarters that it would be uphill sledding to elect a Catholic, despite the fact that the Ku Klux Klan no longer flourishes.

But these booms, and others which may be expected—there is a lot of talk about Cordell Hull—start people thinking about "somebody else." They tend to commit politicians who will name delegates, and tend to "tie them away" from Roosevelt, or even somebody Roosevelt might approve. Their effect is very clear to New Dealers, who are more than a little disturbed about the possible consequences.

All of which turns back on the importance of the primaries yet to come, and to what may happen to New Dealers in the election to follow.

Docile Congress

It is generally agreed that the congress just adjourned—the third of the Roosevelt regime—was remarkably docile for the fifth and sixth years of an administration. Especially because of its extremely top-heavy Democratic majority, which in the nature of things would encourage division into factions. The President was bumped on a few things, but astonishingly few, and he made some surprising comebacks, especially after the rejection of the wage-hour bill.

On these coming primaries and election will depend the temper of his fourth congress. If Roosevelt should win in most of the "purge" states, particularly Maryland, Georgia, South Carolina, and Nevada; if his senate leader, Alben W. Barkley—as seems likely—wins his contest for renomination, and if the Democratic loss of senate and house seats is held to a reasonable figure, the next congress will probably be the most docile any President has ever had in his seventh and eighth years.

Iowa and Pennsylvania could go Republican strongly in November without affecting this situation. Of course if either or both should go Democratic that would make the President all the stronger. But both are regarded as "enemy country."

After all, Iowa even stood against the Woodrow Wilson sweep of the West in 1916, while Pennsylvania went for Hoover in 1932.

HOW TO WRECK A VILLAGE

PIE-A-POT and Long Lodge, Cree chieftains, audacious warriors and veterans of many a scrap with other tribes, ruled their villages with an iron hand. They were happy, prosperous and had very little trouble. Shortly after the coming of the "red coated pony soldiers of the Great White Mother," the Pie-a-Pot and Long Lodge tribes of Crees had been given a splendid reservation with timber and game and fish in abundance. There they had settled down peacefully.

And then one day, to the astonishment of all concerned, Pie-a-Pot and Long Lodge ordered their tribesmen to pull stakes, for the two tribes were going for a ramble across the country without having any particular destination in view. The handful of white settlers became a bit alarmed, but their alarm subsided when they observed the Pie-a-Pots and Long Lodges were orderly.

In time the Pie-a-Pots and Long Lodges came across a large party of white men digging up the ground and also laying thin strips of iron or steel across the flat prairie. "What is all this?" inquired the majestic Pie-a-Pot. "Oh . . . just building a railroad," replied one of the workmen. The Crees moved on into the west and when they were about a mile or so past the end of steel the two chiefs ordered the tribes to pitch camp.

Slowly but surely the end of steel crept closer and closer toward the Cree encampment and it was later discovered that the camp was situated on the right of way of the railroad. As the end of steel moved closer and closer, engineers and foremen parleyed with Pie-a-Pot and Long Lodge, entreating them to move either to the right or left, off the right of way, so that the work could go on without unnecessary delays. The chiefs stood firm, and in time refused to parley further with the engineers in charge.

Then, one fine morning Pie-a-Pot and Long Lodge were visited by two red-coated horsemen, a sergeant and constable of the Northwest Mounted Police. The argument was soon going again, and matters reached such a stage that the sergeant informed them that they had better move or he would do the moving for them. Pie-a-Pot let out a ninety horse-power howl, and soon the sergeant and constable were surrounded by hundreds of howling, painted Crees out for blood and scalp and the complete destruction of the white invaders. During a lull in the melee, the sergeant took out his watch and told Pie-a-Pot that he would give him exactly 15 minutes to move off that railroad right-of-way. Instantly there was another demonstration of anger and truculence, and the two Men of the Mounted sat their saddles as best they could in the milling mob. As the last tick of the fifteenth minute passed into eternity, the sergeant of the Northwest Mounted Police dismounted right into the midst of that bloodthirsty mob. He forced his way through it and walked right over to Pie-a-Pot's teepee and kicked the keyhole down. While squaws and children howled and screamed under the collapsed teepee, the sergeant walked to the next teepee and kicked the keyhole of that one down. From one to the other that lone sergeant strode, kicking keyholes down until every teepee was flat. Young bucks and so-called "braves" followed close on his heels, pushing against him, making faces at him, cursing him, and doing all they could to annoy or frighten him, but the sergeant just kept right on going until all teepees were flat, and in spite of their proximity, not one Cree had dared to strike a blow at the courageous sergeant. With everything flattened, the sergeant mounted his horse and gave his last order.

"Orlight . . . bustle abaht a bit . . . On the move . . . shove orf abaht your blurry business, wotever it is," all of which was his cockney way of saying "Get goin'." Meanwhile, Pie-a-Pot and Long Lodge were so angry they were stumped for words. Never had they seen such audacity. One lone man, wearing a red coat, had literally wrecked their village. It is highly probable, moreover, that Pie-a-Pot and Long Lodge realized that if the other Men of the Mounted were anything like this sergeant, perhaps the Pie-a-Pots and Long Lodges had better not get into any more arguments with them. These red coats were bad medicine. At any rate, as the chieftains saw the hopelessness of further resistance, they muttered a few words to nearby tribesmen, and within two hours the Pie-a-Pots and Long Lodges were heading for their reservation. En route Pie-a-Pot chanced to remember that if he didn't behave himself the Great White Mother would stop sending supplies of food and flour and clothing and that little bit of treaty money now and then. "Oh well, what a day it's been, anyway," he might have said, as he arrived at the reservation.

Jeff fired—missed. A bullet zipped past his ear. He shot again, knocking the revolver from the hands of the bandit into the creek. Norris made a rush to recover the weapon, his arm fishing the water for it. As he pulled the Colt's out of the current, Gray was upon him. The barrel of Jeff's revolver crashed down on his head and knocked him over. He lay motionless, his forty-four again in the brook.

The red-headed man made sure the outlaw did not have another gun on his person. To Ruth he gave crisp commands.

"Get the gun out of the creek, girl. And pick up that rifle over there. Then step behind me out of the way."

Ruth did as she was told. Her face was chalk-white, but she moved lightly on her feet.

Norris groaned and sat up, hands pressing against his bleeding head. "You aimin' to kill me?" he snarled defiantly.

"I'm going to drag you back with a rope round yore neck," Gray answered. "Lee Chiswick will hang you to a cottonwood."

The eyes in the swarthy face of the trapped man slid away from Gray, to take in the tethered horses and the brush that came close to the camp. What he was thinking could be easily guessed.

Ruth moved close to the man who had rescued her.

"Let him go," she begged in a low, broken voice. "I—I can't stand any more."

Jeff did not look at her. His gaze held fast to the prisoner. "No chance," he said. "He's going back with us to yore father. Go bring me a rope from that saddle."

"I'm afraid of him," the girl pleaded. "He's—horrible. You don't know."

"I can guess. Don't worry about him," Jeff added, grimly. "He'll be rubbed out plenty soon."

The slitted eyes of Norris had come back to them. He watched the man and the woman warily.

"Without a gun and without a horse he couldn't do us any harm," Ruth urged.

"You don't turn rattlesnakes loose because you're afraid of them," Gray told her coldly. "You stomp them out."

"Yes, but—" Norris dove for the brush, his lithe body moving fast as a streak of light. The gun in Gray's hand roared, and the bullet plowed into the ground. For Ruth had struck down his forearm and was clinging to it with both hands. He tried to free himself—flung the girl roughly away. The escaping man was in the willows. Jeff could see and hear the violent agitation of the young sprouts. He fired at the place twice, then plunged into the thicket after the bandit.

For a hundred yards he followed the fugitive. Abruptly he gave up the chase. He could no longer hear the rustling of foliage. Better get back to the camp. The fellow might hide, wait till he had passed, and slip back to the horses.

Anger grew in Jeff Gray as he swished back to the camp through the willows. By golden luck he had found this villain's camp and saved Ruth from disaster. For some fool woman's reason she had interfered to help him escape. With Sorley he had ridden fifty miles to save her, and for reward she made a fool of him out of sheer caprice.

Pat Sorley burst out of the brush just as Jeff reached the camp.

"I heard shots," the line-rider cried, then caught sight of Ruth and stopped abruptly, staring at her. "Glory be, he found you."

"Yes," Ruth answered, and bit her lip to keep down a sob.

Gray strode up to her. "What do you mean by knocking down my arm and hanging on to me?" he demanded, a cold, contained rage in his voice.

She swallowed a lump in her throat. "I—couldn't help it," she said meekly.

"Couldn't help it. Don't be a fool."

"I couldn't have you kill him, after what I saw him do this afternoon." She shuddered, seeing for a moment the slack body of Kansas crumpling down to the ground.

"I don't get this," Sorley said, looking from one to the other. "You never in the wor-ld kept Gray from killin' this divil when he had a chance?"

"That's just what she did—grabbed my arm and hung on while he was making a break to get away," Jeff said bitterly. "It seems he had become her dear friend during the day. Probably we butted in where we weren't wanted, Pat."

"Don't say that!" Ruth cried. "He's an awful man—inhuman. I never saw anyone like him. His face—when he killed the other man—was like that of a devil. If you hadn't come—"

Her big eyes met those of Gray and shrank away.

"You hated him so much you couldn't bear to have him rubbed out," Gray said with a curl of the lip.

"I didn't want you or Father to kill him in cold blood while he was unarmed," she explained in a low voice. "I saw him do that today—shoot down a poor man trying to escape from him. Would I want my friends to be like him?"

"So you were thinking of us," Gray said, his drawl derisively insulting. "On our account you turned him loose to kill eight or ten more men. Nice the way you manage our business. I hope Lee Chiswick is as grateful to you as I am."

He turned his back on the girl and spoke to Sorley. "Reckon we'd better get back to our own camp, Pat, eat supper, and move down the creek a ways. He might meet some more wolves and come back to howl at us."

"Not likely, with him afoot and unarmed. Still, it's possible."

"I'll walk to camp," Gray told him. "Better saddle those broncs and ride down."

Without another word to Ruth, he picked up the weapons of Norris and departed.

Pat had stopped supper preparations when he heard the shots farther up the creek, but presently he had the coffee boiling and the ham fried. Ruth sat near Pat, at a little distance from Gray, whose face still showed no friendliness. Her shoulders sagged. She felt very tired, was under a reaction from great fear and excitement that left her a rag.

While they ate their food and drank their coffee the line-rider did the talking for all three. He was garrulously happy at the termination of the adventure. Against all likelihood their luck had stood up. Eagerly he asked questions, and got monosyllabic answers. After a time he protested.

"Begorry, you'd think this was a wake and not the luckiest hour of the year," he snorted. "We ought to be thanking God you're safe again."

"I am," Ruth answered wearily. "Ye don't look like it," he retorted.

"I'm—tired out," she said, in a lifeless voice.

Looking at her shadowed eyes and white haggard face, Sorley felt remorse at his sharpness. "You'll have a good sleep tonight and be rested tomorrow," he said gently.

They packed, saddled, and rode down the creek for a few miles. Sorley chose for a campground a little mesa three or four hundred yards from the stream. No fire was lit, and the night was cold, as Arizona nights in the high hills are likely to be. Pat made a bed of pine boughs for Ruth and tucked her up snugly in two blankets.

"One of us will be on guard all night," he explained to her. "Don't worry about a thing, but let go of yoreself and slip off to slape like a good girl."

She promised that she would, adding with a smile, "You've been awfully good to me, Pat."

Sherm Howard was alone in the house. He had spent the evening at the Golden Nugget and had come home to sleep, but he knew that was not going to be possible for many hours yet. He sat at a table, a small coal-oil lamp at one corner of it, looking down savagely at the solitary layout in front of him. There was no pleasure for him in the game. While he dealt and played automatically, the undercurrent of his mind was absorbed by the difficulties confronting him.

A heavy gloom lay on his spirits. He was in a jam and knew it. Fifty times he had gone over the facts anxiously looking for an out, and he had not been able to find one. Until the situation had resolved itself one way or another he could be sure of nothing.

Howard came to an impasse in the game, gathered up the cards, and shuffled them. He started to deal, but stopped with a card poised. The outside door of the house had opened a few inches. Through the crack a pair of eyes gleamed. Very little more of the face could be seen, for the hat was well pulled down and a bandanna handkerchief covered the nose and mouth.

Sherm Howard had time for a moment of fervent regret. How had he happened to forget to bolt the door, with his forty-four lying in the cupboard a long five yards away from him?

The door opened farther and a lithe body slid through the widened crack into the room. The eyes of the self-invited guest did not lift from his host while a brown hand closed the door and pushed home the bolt.

Howard's stomach sagged as if from a weight of ice-cold lead. His mouth went dry. The man standing with his back to the door was Morgan Norris.

Norris grinned evilly. "Didn't expect me, did you, Sherm? Figured some of yore boys had dry-gulched me up in the hills. But I'll bet you are real pleased to see yore old friend."

The fat man pulled himself together. "What you doing here, Morg?" he asked. "Don't you know this whole county is out lookin' for you?"

"Including all Sherm Howard's willing lads. Sure I know it." The desperado limped forward. "But I dropped in because I knew you'd hate for me to pass through without thanking you for sickin' the boys on me."

The man was in bad physical condition. A blood-stained handkerchief was tied around his head. Another served as a bandage for his arm. He looked travel-worn and haggard.

But he was undaunted. Never in his wicked, ribald lifetime had he seemed more master of the situation. Howard expected that the fellow had come to kill him. Morg must have met one of the boys and learned that Howard had thrown in with his hunters.

"What's all this crazy talk about me sickin' the boys on you?" Howard asked. "You ought to know better than that. Fact is, you've played the devil, Morg. I thought you had more sense than to pull the dumb thing you did. This country won't stand for doing harm to women. You ought to know that too."

"Don't preach at me," Norris snarled out of the corner of his mouth. "Get me food, and water to wash my wounds. But first off, I want a drink."

The heart of the big man lifted. "Sure," he said. "Surest thing you know."

He heaved himself out of the chair and waddled across to the cupboard. Beside the bottle lay the forty-four he had unwarily separated himself from when he reached the house. This he pushed down between his trouser-belt and shirt. The bottle and a glass he brought back to the man at the table.

Norris poured a large drink into a tumbler. He held it in his hand and slid a menacing look at his host.

"I saw you get that gun," he said, lifting his upper lip in a jeer. "Fixin' to gun me if you get a chance, you damned double-crosser. Well, you don't get it." Norris raised the glass. "Here's to a short life and a smoky end for traitors, Sherm."

He poured the liquor down at a gulp. Coldly Howard defended himself. "Your information is not straight,

He poured the liquor down at a gulp. Coldly Howard defended himself. "Your information is not straight, Morg. Where did you hear I had turned against you?"

"I heard it from a ledge back of Coal Creek," Norris told him harshly. "Yore boys were camped just below. I heard 'em talk. Didn't know who they were at first. I found out you'd sent them out to get me, by crikes."

"Why don't you use your bean to think with, Morg? Of course I sent them after you. After you had gone crazy, I had to make a bluff, didn't I? I had to make out we were all hunting you to save our own bacon. Talk about me throwing down on you. What have you done but throw down on every last one of us?"

Howard spoke impatiently, irritably. He wanted to talk the young killer into a frame of mind less deadly, and the best way to do this was to put him in the wrong.

"What you mean, throw down on you?" the fugitive asked sulkily.

"You know what I mean, Morg. When you took that girl with you to the hills you set this whole district ablaze against us as well as you because we are your friends."

"Lou ran off with her first," Norris said.

"With her own consent. That's different. Where is the girl, Morg? What did you do with her?"

"I didn't do a thing," Norris growled. "Are you aiming to fix me up some food? Or ain't you?"

"Don't push on the reins, Morg. I asked you a question."

Norris gave information, very reluctantly, for what he had to tell hurt his inordinate vanity. "I turned her over to that double-crossing son-of-a-gun who calls himself Jeff Gray," he said.

The opaque eyes of the big man rested on him. "Tell it to me, Morg," he ordered.

"I'll tell it while you make me some supper," Norris told him. "Me, I could eat a government mail-sack. Haven't seen grub for nearly two days."

The young desperado helped himself to a second drink, then sat down and pulled off his boots. He was careful not to turn his back to Howard. Sherm began to knock together some food, always with his eye on the other.

Norris told the story of what had occurred, edited in such a way as to protect his self-conceit. He said that three men had attacked him at his camp in Wild Horse basin and that he had fought them until the revolver was shot from his hand. He had made his getaway on foot.

"You didn't walk all the way from Wild Horse," Howard said, after he had broken a fourth egg into a frying-pan.

"Most of the way," The outlaw looked down at his swollen feet. High-heeled cowboy boots are not made for walking, and he had been tortured cruelly during the long hours of tramping. "I roped a bronc at Walker's in the night and found a saddle in the stable. Most of the day I lay holed up in the rocks."

"What with yore wounds and all you must have had a hell of a time," Howard suggested.

The young man looked at him, fury in his eyes. "I'm sayin' so."

"If they shot yore gun from yore hand, I reckon you're not armed," Sherm said, very casually.

The killer watched him through slitted lids. "Don't you bank on that, Sherm," he drawled, his words dripping warning.

Howard said lightly, "I was thinking I'd have to fix you up with a gun if you had lost yore own."

What he had been thinking was that if Norris was unarmed, he could pump lead into him and take the credit for killing the man.

Chinese Elm Is Good for Rapid Growth; Tree Thrives Throughout United States

Whenever a tree is to be set out, the careful gardener takes plenty of time for thought. For there is something permanent about this type of planting in which mistakes are intensified rather than obliterated by time, states a writer in the Philadelphia Record.

Need often is felt for something fast-growing to relate a new house to its location or to give quick shade, screening or protection from wind. Too often poplars are selected because they come along quickly. Time, however, soon reveals their undesirably vast and greedy root systems, while a row rarely gets established before one or another of the trees dies, spoiling the looks of the whole.

The Chinese elm (Ulmus parvifolia) has none of those drawbacks, but it does grow quickly. Indeed, it is a matter of record that one young tree grew to 28 feet in 3 years, that a 4-foot specimen reached 40 feet in 5 years and a 6-footer in 4 years attained 30 feet.

Although native to northern and central China, Korea and Japan, the Chinese elm thrives throughout the United States, eventually growing to 45 feet. It develops a broad, round head and in maturity is as graceful as a cutleaf birch and quite as hardy as the oak. It is good not only for the suburban lawn, but for street planting in the city as well, since it can withstand soot and gas.

Drought resistance was revealed as another attribute during the severe dry spell of 1936. Where newly planted weeping willows, Lombardy poplars and cutleaf birches succumbed, the Chinese elm came through triumphantly.

To obtain maximum speed and development and a deep green color in the foliage, feed the tree yearly with a well-balanced plant food. Either early spring or late summer is a good season.

Chauvinism

Chauvinism, the word used to express exaggerated patriotism or jingoism, is derived from a soldier of the French republic and of the First empire, says the Standard American Encyclopedia. Nicholas Chauvin's name became a synonym for a passionate admirer of Napoleon, and the word Chauvinism was formed to signify the almost idolatrous respect entertained by many for the first emperor.

CALEB: LIFE-TIME DEVOTION

LESSON TEXT—Joshua 14:6-15.
GOLDEN TEXT—Let us go up at once, and possess it; for we are well able to overcome it.—Numbers 13:30.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Brave Caleb.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Caleb the Brave.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—A Hero's Reward.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Courage for Difficult Tasks.

"We need to know more about good men who are occasionally great, and less about great men who are occasionally good," says the Lesson Commentary, in pointing out that Caleb is one of the characters about whom the Bible does not say much, but in every case the word is one revealing high and noble character. Consider such passages as Numbers 13:6, 30; 14:7-9, 24, 30; 26:65, as well as our lesson for today.

The background for our study of today, and in fact an integral part of the lesson itself, is the story of Caleb's courageous stand with Joshua when the spies returned from their visit to Canaan, which is related in Numbers 13. He was then a comparatively young man, but demonstrated by his every word and deed that he had from his youth learned to know and obey God.

Note first of all Caleb's

I. Perfect Obedience (vv. 6-8).

"I wholly followed the Lord my God." Such a testimony from a man like Caleb is no idle boast, no effort to parade his faith and piety before others. In saying it he was repeating what God and Moses had both said about him. In his heart he knew it to be true.

It is God's will for each of His children that they should come to such a place of simple trust and complete obedience that in every circumstance of life they need know only one thing—God's will, and then in faith to go and do it. It is a beautiful in its transparent simplicity and powerful in the strength of His Omnipotence.

II. Promised Inheritance (v. 9).

"Surely the land wherein thy feet have trodden shall be thine inheritance." Such was the promise of God through Moses. Forty-five long years had elapsed, but down through this period of wilderness wanderings and the conflict in subduing Canaan the promise had lived in Caleb's heart. He knew it would be fulfilled, and he waited serenely for God's time.

Such also are the promises of God which keep the heart singing in our hours of trial and sorrow, which lighten up the dark ways, which strengthen the heart of His children. Learn God's promises, cherish them in your heart, expect God to fulfill them.

III. Preserved Strength (vv. 10, 11).

"The Lord hath kept me alive . . . and I am . . . strong." He was a man kept of God, in full vigor in his eighty-fifth year, "like a rock in a changeless sea, like a snow-capped peak in a change of cloud and storm and sun" (Meyer). No doubt there was what our forefathers liked to call "the longevity of the antediluvians," but even apart from that let us recognize that life and strength come from God, and that those who walk with Him in the renewed strength of Psalm 103:5.

An incidental, but extremely important, lesson, we should learn is that God has no age deadline. The church has frequently sinned against Him and against His faithful servants by "shelving them" for younger men, when they would have brought blessing to themselves and to the church by encouraging and using them. The writer of these lines is a young man, but he would speak here a word of loving admonition regarding his honored brethren who have gone on before to bear the brunt of the battle.

IV. Powerful Assurance (vv. 12-15).

"If . . . the Lord will be with me, then I shall be able." Caleb asked for no easy task. He was ready to go up against the giants of Hebron. Read Deuteronomy 3:11, and you will find that there were men in those days who needed thirteen-foot beds. But Caleb was not afraid. He counted not on his own strength, but on the power of God. It is significant that while the other sections of Canaan were only partially conquered Caleb brought his formidable adversaries entirely under control, so that "the land had rest from war" (v. 15).

The spiritual application to our day is evident and appropriate. There are giants in the land in this year of our Lord 1938. Corruption—social and political—raises its brazen head. Drunkenness and vice leer at us with the impudent suggestion that we cannot control them. There are giants "within us"—greed, selfishness, love of ease, lust, passion, cruelty" (Blakie). Ape we to do nothing about them? If we are to meet them in the strength of the flesh we might almost as well do nothing. But in the power of God, we are like Caleb—able. In His name we may take up a slogan of today, "Let's do something about it!" and really do it, for His glory.

LORD TAKES CARE OF BONEHEADS

As I have said before, the Lord most always takes care of the Boneheads, but sometimes before the Lord can get there, Mr.
Bonehead is a goner as was in the case of Stemwinder Bonehead.

Stemwinder Bonehead was a nephew of old Damphool Bonehead and a brother of Smarty.
Stemwinder Bonehead's dad bought a new car. He let Stem-winder take the car out for a trip to Homebrew to inspect a dun mule which he intended to buy. On the trip to Homebrew, Stemwinder had to pass through Hangtown. On reaching Hang-town, Stemwinder cocked her back to 90 m. p. h.

In passing Heck & Saggie's store Stemwinder ran over Joe Pokeasy's dog and baby which were playing in the street and killed them both. So they followed Stemwinder and that night they hung him before the sheriff could get there to tell Mr. Pokeas and his friends that Stem-

Beating the "Summer Drouth"

By T. C. Richardson, Secretary Texas Breeder-Feeder Association

One of the Southwest's climatic peculiarities is so common that
"the summer drouth" is a standard part of our vocabulary. It doesn't occur at the same time in every section, and occasionally doesn't occur at all, but as a rule there is a period when rainfall is deficient, pastures dry up, and crops suffer to a greater or less degree. This is the time when milk flow falls off and growing livestock slow up in gains. When either happens the loss is final. At considerable pains and expense the milk flow can be partly restored and normal growth will again begin when adequate feed is supplied. But the milk that might have been produced and the weight that might have been gained has disappeared down the inexorable and irreclaimable corridors of time.

That's why so many good farmers now hedge against the summer drouth by providing Sudan grass or other cultivated pastures, or keep a supply of ensilage in reserve. It is far cheaper in the long run to fence a field of Sudan so it can be grazed, than to let the growing animals take a setback or let the milk flow fall off.

"I had eight acres of corn that was 'firing up' so I dug a trench and put the corn in it," said a Guadalupe county farmer at Lul-ling. "My pasture was dry, and I fed the corn to my cows right along out of the silo and kept the cream checks up to normal. Before the corn was all fed up my hegari also began to fire before the grain was ripe. I cut that and ensiled it in the same trench. My cows never fell off in their milk all summer; and the trench, which my son and I dug in half a day, made me many times its cost before the summer was over. I'll have a bigger one ready next year."

Sudan grass at certain stages is high in protein and next to alfalfa is probably the best and cheapest winder was a Bonehead and couldn't think. The Hangtown people are decided in their views. They argued that Stemwinder wouldn't kill any more dogs and babies, which is probably true.

Cephus and Jeduahiah Bonehead were traveling one night on a lonely road. They got sleepy, shut out the lights, parked their car in the middle of the road and went to sleep.

When the other car struck them, about all the discomfort they suffered was being waked up under a lot of wreckage—the Lord took care of them, but some of the other folks waked up in a hospital.

Methiabel Jane Ann Bonehead poured kerosene on some hot coals in the kitchen stove to kindle a fire. She did. She is now one-eyed.

Smarty Bonehead turned corners on two wheels until a road cop got him and set him afire.
Smarty lost his driver's license for quite a while.—Sterling City

WEEKLY HEALTH LETTER

Austin, Texas.—"Infantile paralysis can be expected to occur more frequently during the next three or four months," predicts
Dr. Geo. W. Cox, State Health Officer. "This disease is always more frequent during the hot months."

"The germ responsible for infantile paralysis is so small that it escapes detection even with the most powerful microscopes. The first symptoms are usually vomiting, headache, fever, stiffness of the neck, pain in the legs, irritability and drowsiness. Complete recovery may follow such an illness. In the more severe cases, the germ penetrates the nervous system, resulting in paralysis of nerves controlling one or more feed for growing pigs and lambs.

It has become customary throughout the Southwest to carry spring litters of pigs through the summer on Sudan, if alfalfa or sweet clover is not available. A small amount of grain along with the Sudan pasture may be used to advantage if available, but if grain has to be bought at a high price it may be more profitable to grow the pigs out on pasture at the expense of a little more time to attain feeding size.

Another saving practice which is coming more and more into vogue is that of turning the farm flock of sheep into the corn field to graze the grass and weeds which spring up after the last cultivation. It serves the double purpose of weed and grass control in the field and relieving the pasture of its load for a few weeks, and the damage to the standing corn is negligible. If some of the old sheep develop a habit of riding down the corn take them out and leave the field to the lambs.

"I am building small trench silos for emergency summer use," says Robert Lindley, ace Jersey breeder of Hopkins county, Texas. "Since ensilage spoils more rapidly in hot weather, and has to be fed to a greater depth each day to avoid loss, it is economy to have small narrow silos for summer, while the main supply is stored in the large trenches for winter use. They cost so little to build and fill that it's mighty cheap insurance against feed shortage at any time."

Dairy farmers in the cow testing associations are also learning that a regular supply of green pasture or succulent feed is the only fair way to learn whether a cow has a profitable productive capacity. Many a cow has been condemned without having a chance to show what she could do, because so seldom have they had the right kind of feed throughout an entire lactation period.

Did you know that?

The picturesque natives of the Marquesas Islands were once considered the finest of physical specimens. But that was before outside epidemies were brought in and before missionaries and other influences forced them to wear unaccustomed clothes to teach them that one's body is a sin.

The Mois, a wild tribe in French Indo-China were found by the Kelly-Roosevelt Expedition of 1932 to be using the cross bow—a weapon that is stiff and requires real strength to set it. They do this by placing the butt against their stomachs and pulling with all their might on the bow string, a process that would drive the bow right through the average white man.

groups of muscles. Some remarkable recoveries have been noted.

"Flies or other insects have not been demonstrated to play a part in the spread of this disease. Infection spreads from person to person with the droplets transmitted by coughing and sneezing.
Children and grown people that are healthy may be carriers of the germs. When present in epidemic form, about one child in each hundred is apt to suffer an attack.

"Early recognition and diagnosis are essential. The use of immune serum may be a factor in preventing paralysis. A period of complete rest is essential for muscles that are affected. If parents note any symptoms of illness in their children, the family doctor should be consulted at once.

PENSION CHECKS UP ONLY 78 OVER JUNE

Austin, July 6.—Texas old age pensions, vortex of the current gubernatorial campaign whirlwind, today showed an increase of only 78 recipients over the June rolls.

The old age assistance administration will mail out, between July 10 and 15, 112,282 pension checks totaling $1,545,270, an average of $13.70 each to the needy old aged. The average was the same of that last month.

Half of the total funds expended are provided by the federal government which requires an investigation of all applicants and will match state funds only if the recipient is found in actual need.

COTTON CONSUMPTION TREND ON DECREASE

College Station—Cotton producers face a problem of competition that will probably be as far reaching in its effects as the decline of foreign markets," states W. E. Morgan, economist of the Extension Service of Texas A. and M. College.

"I refer to the comparatively recent development of fabrics produced from synthetic fibers." The 20 year trend in per capita consumption of cotton and rayon shows a sharp increase in the use of the latter fabric.

From 1918 to 1929 per capita cotton consumption in the United States remained fairly constant, and in 1929 stood at 29.4 pounds compared to 1.08 pounds for rayon. After 1929 cotton consumption dropped sharply but returned in 1936 and 1937 to near the 1929 level. Rayon consumption, on the other hand, has increased steadily since 1918 and at present is nearly twice as high as in 1929.

Cotton prices through the 20 year period have declined in about the same manner as rayon consumption increased, but, according to Morgan, it should not be inferred that the increased use of rayon is solely responsible for the downward trend in cotton prices.

The decrease in per capita use of cotton after 1929 and the wide increase in use of rayon since that period occurred in spite of extremely low cotton prices which in 1931 and 1932, were at about one-third of the 1929 level.

"Several important textile producing foreign countries have gone much farther in the use of synthetic fibers than the United States," Morgan pointed out. "Among these are Germany, Italy, and Japan, where synthetic fiber is mixed with cotton and wool fabrics by governmental decree."

HOUSEHOLD QUESTIONS

Don't Scrape Tin Dishes.—Tin cooking dishes should not be scraped, as scraping exposes the iron or steel surface underneath, which may rust.

To Keep Out Dust.—Screens covered with cheesecloth help to keep dust and dirt from blowing into pantries, storerooms, and in doors and windows near the ground.

Ironing White Silk.—To help prevent white silk from turning yellow when ironed, use only a warm iron on the wrong side of the silk and protect it with cheesecloth.

Save the Floors.—Carefully arranged newspapers make good padding under fiber rugs and matings, because the dirt which sifts through may be easily removed with the newspapers.

Bad Breath and Its Causes

By
DR. JAMES W. BARTON
© Bell Syndicate.—WNU Service.

ADVERTISING copy writers tell us that one of the biggest, if not the biggest, of advertising appeals is that of fear—fear of heart disease, cancer or other diseases, endangering health and life. Another fear is that of being disliked by other people. It is this fear that causes so many to buy throat gargles, tooth washes and laxatives because their breath may be offensive without their knowledge.

Now there is nothing wrong with taking any or all of these precautions against bad breath because they do give some temporary relief. In fact, until the cause of bad breath is found, the taking of these precautions is justified. However, while some of the causes of bad breath are of a simple nature and not likely to do much, if any, harm to the system, there are some causes that damage the body, yet the individual, because he is using mouth washes, gargles and other methods of "keeping down" any odor, neglects to have these conditions corrected.

Look to the Teeth. Physicians and dentists tell us that the most frequent cause of bad breath has to do with the teeth. There may be cavities or there may be little portions of food left on the teeth that should be removed by brushing the teeth or rinsing out the mouth after every meal. Sometimes the despised toothpick and the more efficient dental floss become necessary to remove the tiny pieces of food that get lodged between the teeth. "All cavities should be filled and tartar deposits should be regularly removed, not only because of their tendency to cause disagreeable odor but because organisms may develop and be swallowed." If any beginning pyorrhea is present alkaline mouth washes should be used.

Good Reducing Diet.

It is very gratifying to see the interest with which physicians now tackle the problem of reducing weight. This is due to the knowledge that overweight is responsible for many derangements of the workings of the heart, blood vessels, kidneys and other organs.

In the Journal of the Iowa State Medical Society Dr. M. C. Wheelock states:

"If the patient will keep strictly on a 1,000 calorie diet, medicine is unnecessary for reducing weight. If weight loss is too rapid it may be that a little more liquid—water or other fluids—is necessary to maintain a better circulation."

Dr. Wheelock outlines a 1,000 calorie diet for those who are greatly overweight after examination shows that reducing may be safely done. Breakfast: One medium serving of oranges, peaches, pineapple, or grapefruit; one-half teaspoonful of butter; one glass skim milk; one thin slice of bread; one egg; one and one-half rounded tablespoonfuls of cottage cheese.

Dinner: Two medium servings of lettuce or asparagus or celery or tomatoes or string beans or cabbage; one medium serving of lean meat; one thin slice of whole-wheat bread; one medium serving of apples or apricots or pears or raspberries; one glass skim milk; coffee or tea (without sugar or cream) or clear broth.

Supper: One medium serving of any of above vegetables; two eggs; one thin slice of bread; one glass skim milk.

The Venus Flytrap

Charles Darwin called the Venus flytrap the "most wonderful plant in the world." It is an oddity of nature found only in our Carolina swamps. The Venus flytrap is a member of the sundew family with white flowers on 12-inch stems and rosettes of leaves consisting of two hinged blades set with sensitive hairs. When an insect alights on one of these leaves, the halves snap together like the jaws of a trap and are held firm by interlocking menial bristles. The trapped insect dies. It is then dissolved and absorbed, and the plant opens and resets its leafy trap for further prey. Related to the Venus flytrap are the pitcher plants, of which the darling-tonias, or California pitcher plants, are well-known members. These also can absorb the insects which are attracted to the tubular leaves and then drowned in a digestive fluid secreted in the bottom.

Babies Prefer Bright Colors

Babies can distinguish between colors and almost invariably reach for red as their first choice. A survey to determine color preference among babies rates bright red as the first choice with bright blue, white, and bright green following in the order named. This accounts for the brilliancy of the colors used in painting toys.

New Fabrics of Sheer Loveliness

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

A FAVORITE theme this summer is the sheer loveliness of diaphanous, airy-fairy transparent fabrics, either cotton or silk. The new sheers are simply enchanting and they are the sought-for kind to make up into gowns for picturesque garden party wear or for dancing under star-spangled skies or when dining at fashionable roof-garden gatherings where beauty and romance keep rendezvous.

Gowns designed to grace summertime scenes are fashioned of wispy chiffons either printed or monotone, or of organdies crisp, sheer and intriguing, or of dainty silk marquisette which is an especial favorite. Then there are the soft fine cotton voiles in pretty colors and as for lace every summer wardrobe is expected to include at least one party frock made of it. As a matter of fact lace is playing a stellar role this summer. The lace that captures the heart of enthusiasts is a delicate-as-cobweb type the patternings of which is a mere tracery. Gowns of this fetching lace have all-around pleated skirts, since it yields beautifully to this treatment.

To dine and dance in ingenu frocks of simple cottons made up formally is considered quite the swank thing to do. The thrilling note in regard to this season's organdies is that so many new types have been added to the list.

The crinkled organdies either plain or printed sell at sight. They make up charmingly and are easily tubbed, require little or no pressing to keep them crisp and sprightly as new. For week-end trips they are ideal as they do not crush in packing.

You will be delighted with the new lace-printed Swiss chiffon organdies. The entrancing frock centered with outspread skirt in the foreground gives an idea of how effectively the lace-stripe organdie makes up.

The printed chiffon frock to the left gives a delightful interpretation of the slim silhouette for summer. The patterning is spaced tulips in blue, red, green and black on a sheer white background. The gathered bodice suggests the Directorate. Contrasting shades of green and blue silk make the girdle and sash which forms a train. Flower bracelets are worn with it and an enormous poppy on the head instead of a hat, which goes to show the intriguing and unique ways in which flowers now play their important role in costume ensembling.

Twisted drapes are a new style feature. Designers are performing all sorts of interesting tricks with twisted drapes and as time goes on the idea is taking on added interest. When you see a dress or blouse the drapes of which tie themselves into fanciful knots or twist into clever intricacies be assured that the garment is a "last word" fashion. Be on the lookout for these inter-twisted, inter-coiled effects and choose your new frocks accordingly.

This type of styling invites the use of color contrasts. For instance, the bodice top of a navy dress may have drapes coming from the shoulder, say in the new fuchsia shade, the same coiled, twisted and perhaps knotted across the bustline with infinite grace. Or the dress may be in monotone, the artful, twisted designfulness being the only trimming feature. White crepe frocks, with twists done in crepes of vivid contrast or carried out in pastel tones are, top-notch fashion this summer.

A new feature in styling is the all-over shirred bodice with skirt of the material simply tailored. The all-over shirred jacket is likewise a fashion highlight. Chiffon and sheer marquisette yield to this treatment most charmingly.

Paquin Favorite. A favorite Paquin model for evening is the long skirt of bias cut topped by a marquisette blouse—the entire thing in white, black or pale rose.

Tailored Dinner Dress. The tailored dinner or evening dress remains a heavy favorite.

Hyacinth blue lace with touches of cerise lace is used for the graceful gown centered in the picture. It was introduced at the Miami fashion show and is one of those pleasing types that carry on into new triumphs for summer party wear. One of its charms is that the lace indicates stripes and striped effects lead in the mode.

The material that fashions the frock to the left is peach silk mousseline. It is prettily styled with vertical ruche-ruffling of self-fabric outlining the skirt gores, the puffed sleeves and there are ruffles about the neck.

One handsome suit like the model pictured, in your wardrobe, and your problem is solved as to looking smartly attired for any occasion. Contrast stitching is a swank accent to the interesting detail of this well-tailored town and country suit in fine lightweight wool shetland. Note the scalloped pocket that repeats the decorative stitching, that enhances the seams in the skirt.

WHAT to EAT and WHY

C. Houston Goudiss Noted Food Authority

Explains What Is Meant by CORRECT NUTRITION

Describes How to Construct a Balanced Diet, So Essential to Maintain Optimal Health

By C. HOUSTON GOUDISS
6 East 39th St. New York City.

TO SOME families, a summons to the dinner table means nothing more than a chance to satisfy hunger. To others, it represents an opportunity to gratify the palate, sometimes to the extent of overtaxing the digestive system.

Neither of these extremes fulfills the true function of food, which is to provide adequately but not to excess, for growth, maintenance and repair of the body.

Food May Fail to Feed

You can satisfy hunger without providing correct nutrition. You can partake of delicious-tasting foods to the point of over-indulgence—without meeting bodily requirements.

The mere spending of money will not insure good nutrition, for extremely poor diets can be found in households where the income is large and the food budget is ample.

What counts is learning to provide the right foods in the correct proportions. The return in health will be more than worth the investment of effort in acquiring this knowledge.

A Balanced Diet

Science has discovered what foods are necessary to help build top health and keep us 100 per cent fit. The amount of food required by a man for a day's work can be accurately determined. We know that a specific disease may be produced by one diet and cured by another; that growth can be influenced through changes in the quality of the dietary; that old age may be deferred by choosing the food with care.

We know that the body is a working machine which never stops but may slow down or get out of order unless the daily diet includes every element, every mineral, every vitamin needed to maintain health and avoid the deficiency diseases.

Seven Essentials

There are seven factors to be considered in planning a balanced diet. Protein for building body

Send for this Free Blood-Building Diet

Including Lists of Foods Rich in Iron and Copper

READERS are invited to write for a free bulletin containing a list of foods rich in iron and a list of those rich in copper. tissue and repairing the millions of cells that are worn out daily. Carbohydrates to produce quick heat and energy. Fats—a more compact form of fuel, which are also essential in a satisfactory diet. Minerals which serve both as builders and regulators of body processes. The six vitamins, A, B, C, D, E and G, that also act as regulators and prevent a number of deficiency diseases. Water—which serves as a vehicle by which food is carried to the tissues. And cellulose or bulk—required for the normal functioning of the intestinal tract.

Danger in Omitting One Food Substance

The homemaker who fails to take every one of these factors into consideration is depriving her husband of the opportunity to develop his greatest efficiency. Moreover, she may be robbing her children of their birthright. During every day of childhood, the body is being built, and defects in body structure are likely to arise if the child is improperly nourished. It is then that disease and disability make their appearance as a result of faulty nutrition. How tragic to deprive the young body of substances so necessary to its well being.

How to Check the Diet for Balance

Perhaps you are like the homemakers who tell me that they do not know a protein from a carbohydrate. Or it may be that while you understand the difference, you do not know what quantities should be included in the diet each day.

To simplify your task of serving balanced menus at every meal, I have prepared a Homemaker's Chart for Checking Nutritional Balance. In convenient chart form, it shows what foods should be included in the diet every day and gives the standard amount for each food. There are also skeleton menus outlined by food classifications, which enable you to plan balanced menus for every meal by making a choice from each group of required foods.

I urge every homemaker to write for this chart, and use it daily. Then you won't make such common mistakes as serving a dried legume as a vegetable at a meal in which meat is used, which tends to concentrate too much protein in one meal; or choosing a too-heavy dessert following a main course that is overly rich in carbohydrates.

60 Per Cent Carbohydrates

Carbohydrates should form at least 60 per cent of the supply of food fuel. Rarely are menus deficient in carbohydrates, because

Free Homemaker's Chart for Checking Nutritional Balance

PLANNING a balanced diet will cease to be a puzzle if you send for the Homemaker's Chart for Checking Nutritional Balance, offered free, by C. Houston Goudiss.

It lists the foods and the standard amounts that should be included in the daily diet, and includes skeleton menus for breakfast, dinner and lunch or supper, to guide you in selecting the proper foods in each classification.

they are so widely distributed in such common foods as cereals, bread, potatoes, macaroni products, sweets, and sweet fruits and vegetables, such as—oranges, grapes, apples and peas.

Fats should supply about 20 per cent of the caloric content of the diet. They are obtained from butter, margarine, cream, egg yolk, salad dressings, vegetable oils and the fat of meats.

A protein food should be provided at each meal. Meat, poultry, fish, eggs, cheese, milk and most nuts supply complete protein. Cereals and legumes furnish incomplete protein which may be supplemented by the complete protein of milk.

The Protective Foods

It is essential that the diet should contain an abundance of minerals and vitamins which are furnished by the protective foods—milk, eggs, fruits and vegetables.

Cellulose or bulk is obtained from fruits, vegetables and whole grain cereals. Water comes from juicy fruits, succulent vegetables, milk and other beverages, as well as the water that is consumed as a beverage.

To provide adequate amounts of the seven food essentials at every meal—to avoid the mistake of serving too much of one type of food and too little of another—should be the worthy aim of every homemaker. You will find the task considerably easier if you send for the Homemaker's Chart. Tack it up in your kitchen or in the room where you plan your menus, and use it to check the nutritional balance of every meal you prepare.

If you faithfully follow the food program outlined in the chart, you will help to assure your family of correct nutrition. This is the most priceless gift you could bestow upon them. For nutrition is the architect that draws the plans of human destiny. In providing the right foods, you lay a firm foundation for health on which to rear a life of happiness and success.

Questions Answered

Mrs. F. C. T.—Dried figs contain from 60 to 70 per cent sugar and 4 to 5 per cent protein. They are a fine energy food.

A. F. B.—When thorough chewing is impossible, food can be finely minced or put through a sieve, to make it easily digestible.

Mrs. A. G.—Prunes are a fine natural laxative food for those in normal health. They furnish vitamins A, B and G. But they must not replace oranges or tomatoes as they do not supply vitamin C.
