Cunanan dead, manhunt at end

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Andrew Cunanan, the suspected serial killer who eluded a nationwide manhunt for nearly three months, shot himself to death in a houseboat just 2½ miles from where Gianni Versace was gunned down.

"All across the nation, our citizens can stand down and breathe a sigh of relief. The reign of terror brought upon us by Andrew Cunanan is over," police Chief Richard Barreto said today.

German authorities say the owner of the houseboat is a fugitive wanted on fraud charges.

As the sun peeked over the horizon, Cunanan's body was removed from the floating home, more than 14 hours after the siege began Wednesday when a caretaker visiting the houseboat reported hearing a shot. Authorities who surrounded the boat for hours now believe Cunanan was dead the whole time.

It took the police until early this morning to confirm the body was Cunanan, who had shot himself in the face.

"The shot to the face made the identification of the body much more difficult," Metro-Dade Mayor Alex Penelas said. "In addition to that, the only other available method of identifying the body was fingerprints."

Versace company headquarters in Milan released a statement from the designer's family today, offering "gratitude and sorrowful thanks to those who contributed to resolving the terrible killing of Gianni."

Stanley Trail of DeKalb, Ill., father of Jeffrey Trail, one of the men Cunanan is believed to have killed, said, "I'm very glad that he's been stopped and that nobody else got hurt when he got stopped. But I take no joy in his death. That doesn't help me at all."

"That's one of the bad things about him dying like this: Nobody will be able to ask him," the elder Trail said. "Nobody will be able to tell me why this happened."

Investigators had not found a suicide note as of early today, leaving unsolved the motive for a cross-country killing spree by Cunanan, who had been described by his mother as a gay gigolo.

More than 100 police and FBI agents surrounded the floating, two-story home Wednesday night after the report of a gunshot coming from inside.

"The best guess" is that Cunanan killed himself as the caretaker arrived to check on the property, Metro-Dade police director Carlos Alvarez said.

Police on the outside had no idea Cunanan had shot himself. They shouted, "Come out! Come out!" but the man believed hiding inside did not respond. They waited for hours before going in, and even then it took them a while to find the body. They were hampered by lingering tear gas.

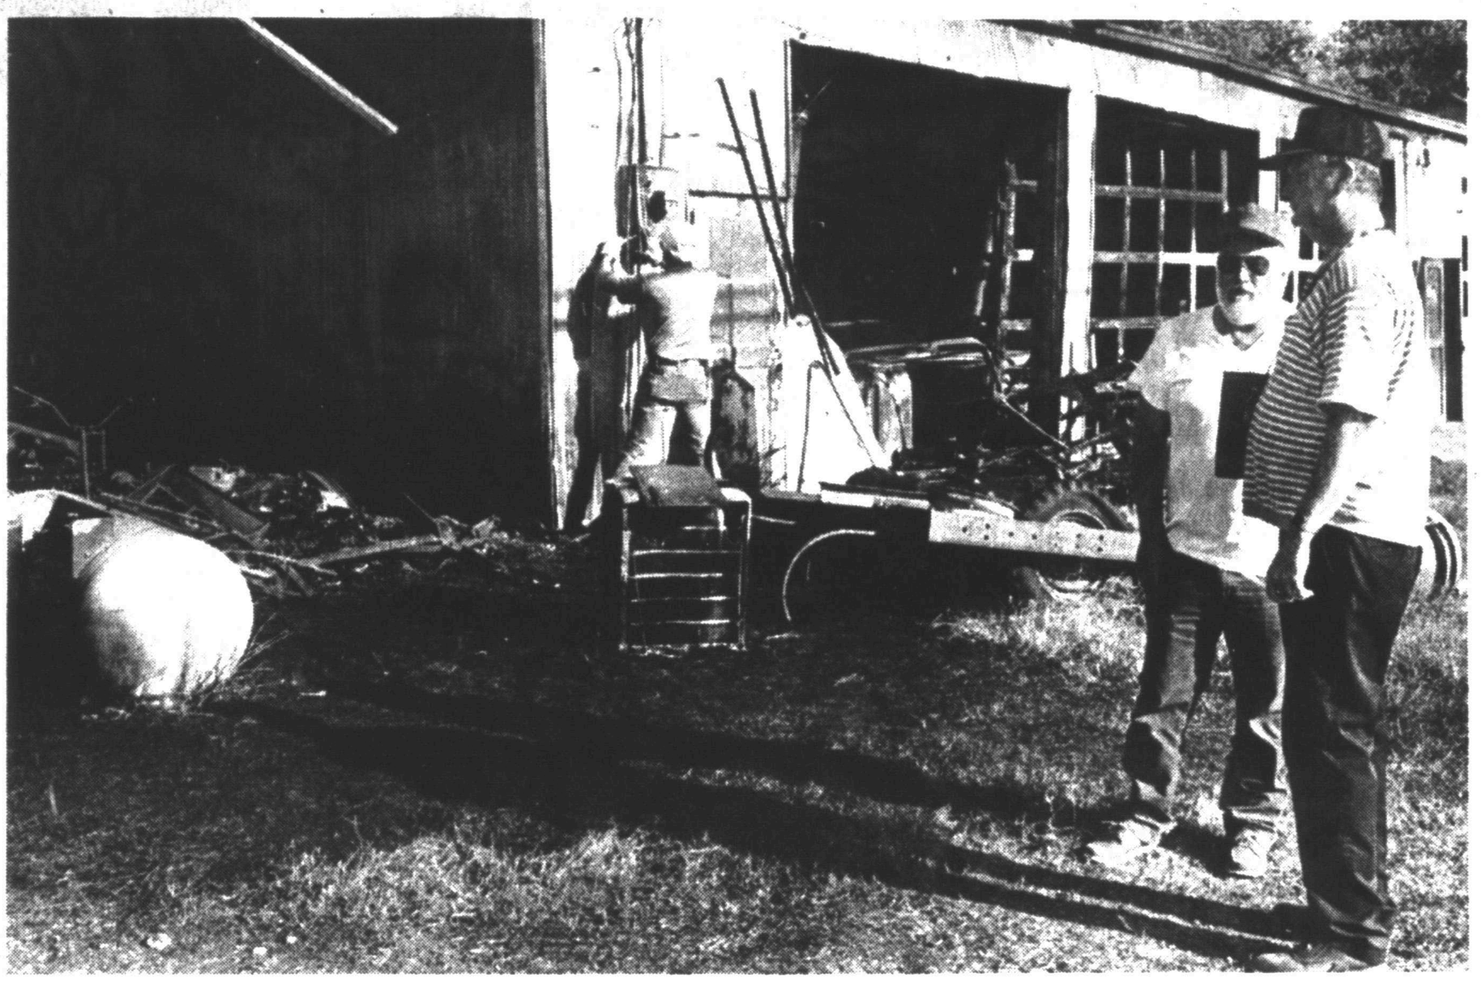

"There was an unprecedented level of pressure put on this man by law enforcement and media exposure," Barreto said. "I think he was a desperate person. He was in a situation where it was very, very difficult for him to move about."

Barreto said Cunanan was identified by his thumbprint and the gun found inside the houseboat was similar to the one used in three of five killings in which Cunanan was a suspect.

The 27-year-old Cunanan was the prime suspect in the slayings of Versace and four other men in Minnesota, Illinois and New Jersey. After the Versace slaying on July 15, Cunanan abandoned a stolen pickup truck belonging to the New Jersey victim in a parking garage and vanished.

"We were probably prepared for something like this," said FBI spokeswoman Coleen Rowley. "A person who is using desperate means and exhibiting this kind of violent behavior, you have to be prepared for a very violent conclusion."

Residents near the houseboat had reported seeing a man matching Cunanan's description after Versace was shot to death on the front steps of his mansion. On Wednesday, a caretaker who stopped by the home called police to report he had seen signs there was an intruder and then heard a gunshot as he was leaving the boat.

Jury begins deliberations

After hearing closing arguments this morning, jurors were to reconvene at 1:30 p.m. in 132nd District Court to begin deliberating the guilt or innocence of a 20-year-old Snyder man on trial for sexual assault.

Torrance Leandrew Bean is accused of sexually attacking a 19-year-old Snyder woman on March 1.

At least three peace officers, a criminologist and the alleged victim have testified for the prosecution since the trial began Monday. Bean, who has pleaded innocent, took the stand Wednesday.

Bean, of 315 32nd St., has been held on bond since his indictment. He is being defended by Jeffrey Davis of Hamlin. Prosecuting the case is District Attorney Dana Cooley.

District Judge Ernie Armstrong is presiding.

GM shuts down two plants

DETROIT (AP) — Two General Motors Corp. auto plants in Michigan today became the first dominoes to fall as the result of a United Auto Workers strike at an important GM parts factory in suburban Detroit.

The Buick City plant in Flint and the Orion Township plant outside Detroit use front-drive transmissions made at the GM Powertrain Group plant in Warren. The 2,800 UAW workers at Warren went on strike late Tuesday after negotiators failed to reach a new plant contract.

The Buick City shutdown early today affected 2,700 workers. GM said it was in the process of idling the Orion Township plant. No employee figure was immediately available.

Additional assembly plants that could close by tonight or Friday are in Lansing, Mich., and one of two in Oshawa, Ontario, GM said.

Buick City produces mostly Buick LeSabres and has been phasing out production of Pontiac Bonnevilles. Orion Township makes Buick Rivieras and Park Avenues, and Oldsmobile Auroras and Eighty Eights.

Lansing produces the Buick Skylark, Pontiac Grad Prix, Chevrolet Cavalier, Olds Achieva, and Pontiac Grand Am and Sunfire. The Oshawa No. 1 plant makes the Chevrolet Lumina and Monte Carlo.

If the strike lasts beyond two weeks, GM's entire North American production could slowly come to a halt. Virtually every GM assembly plant in the United States, Canada and Mexico uses either transmissions, suspension parts or wheels made in Warren.

Talks resumed this morning after negotiators met until shortly after midnight, GM labor spokesman Chuck Licari said.

THE SDN COLUMN

The feller on Deep Creek says, "Education is what you get from reading the fine print. Experience is what you get from not reading it."

The workplace is going to the dogs.

There's a trend among U.S. companies to allow employees to bring their pets to the office.

Managers at pet-friendly companies say the practice is a way to relieve stress and to give morale among workers a boost.

A software firm in California reports that some 100 of their 800 employees bring their dogs, but they can't attend meetings. Barking is also prohibited.

The firm also has a three-strikes-and-your're-out law. Three poops and pets are sent home. Cats are also allowed, but management frowns when they roam about or show too much curiosity.

Even a boa constrictor has shown up on the job. The snake was mistaken for the supervisor.

Another firm in Michigan provides 300 acres where buffalo and sheep graze. Employees are welcome to bring their dogs "occasionally," if they feel the need.

We thought about the idea, but decided it wouldn't work here. Dogs believe newspapers are for something other than reading.

One firm is going to the dogs — and is barking about its profits.

The company finds leaks in pipelines by using the sensitive noses of its Labrador retrievers, trained to sniff out minute concentrations of a chemical called Tekscent.

In one case documented by National Geographic, the dogs were working from small boats in a Louisiana swamp when they found a leak under six feet of water and five feet of mud.

In lab tests, the dogs were able to detect concentrations of the chemical as low as one part in a billion-billions. That's the equivalent of a drop of Tekscent in a resevoir 12 inches deep and roughly the size of the state of Washington.

That's pretty doggone good!

BCD looks at future of education

Scurry County Board of County Development members on Wednesday took a look at the future of education as seen through the eyes of Western Texas College.

College officials have been dabbling in distance learning on a local and area basis for a while, and it's time now, administrators say, to expand the boundaries.

With the idea in mind of securing some future funding, representatives of the college gave BCD members a brief overview of the complex topic.

In other business, the board agreed on a budget for 1998, allocated funds for a sprinkler system at Winston Field Airport and approved financial statements and previous minutes.

Board members unanimously approved a budget request of $50,475 for next year, the same as the 1997 budget. That request will now be forwarded to Scurry County Commissioners Court for approval.

Most of Wednesday's meeting focused around a report on distance learning from WTC representatives John Gibson, director of workforce education; Britt Canada, director of technology; and Dr. Jim Palmer, dean of instruction and director of distance learning.

Gibson briefly discussed Western Texas' commitment, citing the recently obtained grants for training Pennzoil, Amoco and Lorber Industries employees and the $500,000 in bonds which will be used to renovate the auto/diesel area into a workforce training center on campus.

Within the training center will be the distance learning laboratory, enabling Western Texas to provide and receive instant video conferencing throughout the world, said Gibson. An example of the use of the facility would be to train Pennzoil employees in Snyder directly from corporate offices in Houston, Canada said.

Some equipment could be portable, allowing it to be taken into the field.

According to Canada, such technology could allow local school teachers to further their education by taking courses offered by major universities without having to leave Snyder. Video conferences could also be held between local and corporate offices, saving time and travel expense, he said.

Canada relayed to the board a recent news article which told how a physician in Alpine used video conferencing to link up with a burn specialist in Lubbock for help in diagnosing a patient.

Another use would be concurrent courses offered to rural schools. These are courses high school students can take to receive both high school and college credit. It's something Western Texas is already doing, although not through video conferencing.

However, Canada pointed out, all high schools will begin having to offer concurrent courses to its students. Freshmen entering high school this year will, by the time they graduate, have been offered the opportunity to take as many as 16 hours of college courses.

That's unfeasible cost-wise at some rural schools, which only

Budget key DCOS focus

Preparation plans for the coming year's budget is the key topic today for Development Corporation of Snyder board members, who meet at 4 p.m. in the DCOS office.

A lien extension for Snyder Senior Citizens, Inc. is also on the agenda, as are financial statements and bills for payment.

Armey, DeLay apologize for coup actions

WASHINGTON (AP) — Apologizing to the Republican rank-and-file for their lapses during an abortive plot against House Speaker Newt Gingrich, Texans Dick Armey and Tom DeLay appear to have silenced calls for their ouster from leadership.

During an extraordinary closed-door session of House Republicans on Wednesday night, Armey, DeLay and another leader implicated in the cabal apologized to Gingrich and their colleagues alike.

Lawmakers emerged from the late-night session voicing confidence in the entire leadership roster, saying the meeting soothed wounds incurred during the two-week-old palace intrigue.

The meeting was "filled with emotion, filled with passion," said Rep. Henry Bonilla, R-San Antonio. "Every member stood up and spoke from the heart."

Armey, DeLay and Rep. John Boehner of Ohio acknowledged to their colleagues that they made mistakes, in particular by not immediately defusing the uprising.

In what was described as an especially cathartic moment, DeLay confirmed what had been widely rumored for a week: That he told the dissidents in a July 11 meeting that he would vote with them if they brought a resolution to topple Gingrich.

"He said that he made a mistake in judgment," said Rep. C.W. Young of Florida. DeLay aides said that their boss was mentally exhausted from an 18-hour day when he made the pledge.

DeLay's admission earned the respect of his peers, Bonilla said. "It was very hard for him to say what he had to say, and I think people appreciated that ... it took a lot of courage for him to stand up and say the things he did."

While many Republicans said they have no heart for any further near-term leadership upheaval, some were eager to put Gingrich's lieutenants on the hot seat. There had been talk of attempting to unseat Armey, who as majority leader is No. 2 behind Gingrich, third-ranking DeLay or fourth-ranking Boehner.

That talk was silenced, to hear members tell it.

"I think if we had taken a vote we would have had a unanimous vote of confidence in the leadership," said Rep. Kenny Hulshof, R-Mo.

Rep. Ray LaHood of Illinois, who was the impetus for the laundry-airing caucus, said: "I trust the leadership implicitly."

Armey and Boehner had earned the wrath of many for their repeated denials in recent days of involvement with the anti-Gingrich forces.

Under siege, the three worked feverishly to shore up their support — though their defense often came at the expense of one another.

In a letter to the editor Wednesday in a Capitol Hill biweekly, The Hill, Armey cast blame elsewhere, saying that to his "bitter disappointment" the rebels had received "encouraging words from someone in the leadership."

Publicly unwilling to attack Armey, DeLay's sympathizers privately seethed at what they viewed as Armey's efforts to save himself at any cost, sacrificing DeLay in the process.

Wednesday night, both camps proclaimed that the bruised feelings were only temporary.

"Sometimes friends have disagreements, but they're still friends," said DeLay spokesman John Feehery.

Echoed Armey spokeswoman Michele Davis: "They've been good friends, they'll continue to be good friends."

Military officials say...

Changes will not mean less contracts

FORT BLISS (AP) — The Army insisted Wednesday that proposed changes in how some military contract bids are will not hurt small businesses.

The defense came amid apprehension among small contractors that they will lose their ability to compete for contracts.

El Paso business and civic leaders flocked to voice concerns that the planned consolidation of some Army contracting office functions would make it harder for local businesses to land jobs at the post.

"Why is the Army proposing to take another action that will weaken Fort Bliss and the community?" El Paso County Judge Chuck Mattox asked military officials visiting the post to explain the changes.

The Army's Training and Doctrine Command (TRADOC) is considering a plan that would allow contracting offices at Fort Bliss and other TRADOC facilities nationwide to award only contracts of $500,000 or less, unless they're for construction or repairs.

Bids for all other contracts above the $500,000 threshold would be solicited and awards would be made by a centralized office at Fort Eustis, Va.

Military officials say the streamlining process would save money because it would eliminate needless duplication and use fewer people to assemble solicitations for several Army posts.

Although various solicitations would be grouped, each would still be bid separately and separate contracts would be awarded, they said.

The realignments would have minimal effect on local communities and would not affect the bidding process, said Col. Ray Gauger, TRADOC's director for acquisitions.

"You're going to have exactly the same opportunity tomorrow that you have today," Gauger told about 300 people attending the gathering.

He said only a handful of the contracts expected to be bid out by Fort Bliss through 2002 seemed likely to be affected.

But business owners and others said they would lose out With decision-making being moved so far away, they worried about no longer having a one-on-one rapport with officials awarding the contracts.

"Clearly, the past have shown that you need to have face-to-face contact," said Joseph De La Paz, a vice president for Vista Technologies Inc., which provides engineering and scientific services.

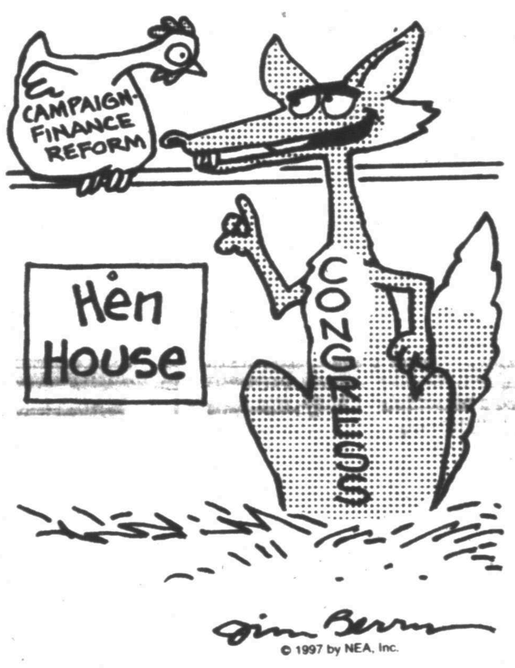

De La Paz and others noted that some area businesses don't have the resources, including computers and hardware needed for electronic bidding, to compete the way they have been able to with the office at Fort Bliss.

"I am still concerned that the plan would hurt our small business community," U.S. Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, who has spoken out against any Fort Bliss cuts, said in an open letter about the meeting.

Over the Atlantic Ocean

I am writing this column on a plane to Cape Town, South Africa. I am going to edit the Daily Bulletins at the Zone 4 Championships. (Zone 4 is the Bridge Federation of Africa, Asia and the Middle East.) While waiting to check in for the flight out of New York, I noticed there was something in the pocket of one of my bags. It turned out to be the London Times of Saturday, March 2, 1996! I had bought it and never looked at it.

Well, once aboard, I turned to Robert Sheehan's bridge column, and he featured this deal. It occurred during the Macallan International Pairs in London. Three pairs ended in three no-trump, but only Seymon Deutsch from Dallas made it.

The other two declarers won the first trick and ran the diamond queen. When this lost, East cashed the spade 10 before playing a club to his partner's ace. Four more spade tricks left the contract three down. True, when West played the diamond 10 under the queen at trick two, perhaps the declarers should have changed tack. It was most unlikely West would play the 10 from the doubleton king-10.

Deutsch, judging that the spades were likely to be blocked (as West probably would have led the jack from a suit headed by the ace-jack-10), won the first trick and immediately attacked clubs. West could win with the ace and play spades from the top, but Deutsch's nine controlled the fourth round of the suit.

However West defended, Deutsch was sure to win at least 10 tricks: one spade, four hearts, one diamond and four clubs.

Trapping campaign

Mary Tyler Moore wrote a letter to Assembly Speaker Sheldon Silver asking the Democrat to kill a bill that would legalize underwater snare traps for beavers. The animal rights activist told Silver the noose-like traps could end up killing a host of animals.

"I appeal to you to choke and strangle this proposal instead of our friend the beaver and animals such as the bald eagle, dogs, calves and otters, which have been caught in these traps too," Moore wrote.

The measure hasn't been a high priority. It's near the end of the session and neither chamber has even voted on the bill.

Kiwanis will host tourney that benefits scholarship foundation

Snyder Kiwanis Club will be hosting the Cargile Scholarship Foundation Benefit golf tournament Aug. 16 at Western Texas College.

1997 marks the 26th year a scholarship has been awarded by the Kiwanis. The first scholarship recipient was Janet Stribling in 1971.

"I was honored to receive the scholarship," Stribling said. "It helped pay for much of my tuition and fees. And still today, it gives a lot of kids a really good start."

Snyder High School graduate Candace Barrow was awarded this year's Cargile Scholarship, which totals $500 per year while attending Western Texas College.

"I was very excited when I learned that I had been chosen," Barrow said. "I plan on majoring in accounting and this scholarship will help me a lot in paying for my first two years."

Barrow was selected by the Kiwanis Scholarship Committee.

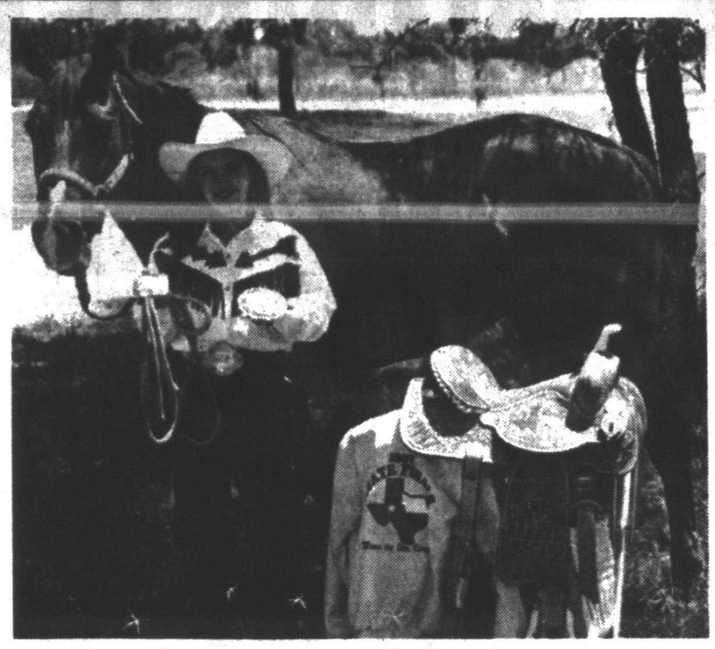

"It's nice to be involved in a group that puts money back in the community and helps local kids further their education," said committee member Shawn Ragland.

As for the golf tournament, it will be a four-person scramble, teeing off at 8:30 and 1:30. Entry fee is $30 per player and the top four teams will be awarded cash prizes.

The winners will receive $400 and any participant who makes a hole-in-one will be given the choice of a Chevrolet, Ford or Dodge pick-up. The trucks are donated by local automobile dealerships.

The scholarship is named after Hubert Cargile, a long-time member of the Kiwanis Club and leader in the community.

Players interested in competing should contact the WTC pro shop or a Kiwanis Club member.

Rodeo fans have it good.

They watch the peformance and then just drive home. No repairing of equipment. No caring of animals. No work.

But competitors work hard to rodeo. It's a full-time job to practice, care for the animals and travel to various towns on the rodeo circuits.

Now, combine all that work with going to high school and you know how Terra Bynum and the rest of the Snyder High School rodeo competitors feel.

Bynum is the 1997 Texas High School Barrel Racing Champion, keeping the title in Snyder after Stoni Riggan won it last year.

Bynum said that rodeoing is hard work, but everybody helps each other out.

"Rodeoing in part is just the luck of the draw," the SHS senior said. "So all the competitors come in pretty much equal and they help each other as much as they can."

One difference in rodeo, as compared to other high school events, is the parents foot the bill.

"We pay for all of the expenses including entry fees," Terra's mother, Cindy Bynum, said. "Terra wins some money on her own, but as far as sponsorships, there aren't any."

Despite the hard work and expenses, Terra said she enjoys the friendships she has made rodeoing.

"I meet kids from all over the state and country," she said. "Rodeo kids are really neat people and I have some good friends that I would not have if I wasn't competing."

Although Cindy Bynum loves to see her daughter compete, she knows the dangers that are associated with rodeoing.

"I still get kind of nervous when I see Terra ride," Cindy said. "Terra broke her ankle in her first high school rodeo and everytime she would get off the horse after that I would kind of hold my breath."

Terra plans on going to college, hopefully on a scholarship.

"I would like to rodeo in college, but school is the most important thing," Terra added, to the delight of her mother.

Also competing from Snyder in the Texas High School Championship Rodeo were Darla Blackwell, Shawn Purcell, Stoni Riggan, Russell Riggan and Ira's Terri Robinson.

In girl's breakaway roping, Purcell finished in the top half and Stoni Riggan took 16th place.

Bynum claimed the fifth spot in the goat tying event, while Blackwell was 14th and Stoni Riggan in the top half.

The pole bending competition had Stoni Riggan place 29th and Bynum 13th.

Irvin, Williams reach settlement with station

DALLAS (AP) — Michael Irvin says he can't talk about the settlement he and Dallas Cowboys teammate Erik Williams reached in their defamation lawsuit against a Dallas television station.

His only comment: "It's behind us."

Irvin made the statement Wednesday night, hours after he and Williams settled their defamation lawsuit in a deal their attorney said "represents a major step" toward rectifying the damage done to them.

All parties to the lawsuit kept quiet about the settlement, but attorney Peter Ginsberg and an official for the Dallas-Fort Worth television station confirmed the agreement.

They said they could not disclose details of the settlement with KXAS-TV reporter Marty Griffin and Lin Television Corp., parent company for KXAS.

A source, speaking on the condition of anonymity, told The Associated Press the settlement calls for the players to split a payment of at least $2 million.

"Erik Williams and Michael Irvin entered into this lawsuit to try to make a statement and try to come out a little more whole following the abuse that they suffered," Ginsberg said. "There is no settlement in the world that could ever make up in whole for the damage that was done to them. But the settlement represents a major step in that direction."

"We have reached a resolution with Erik Williams and Michael Irvin," he said. "We are pleased with that, and the terms of agreement don't allow any further comment."

"It's over. It's behind us," Irvin said. "I can't say anything. No. 1, I can't talk about it. No. 2, I don't think it would be fair to my teammates if I did."

Police cleared the players, saying her accusations were unfounded. But her lawyer has said Shahravan stands by her contention that she was raped. She now faces trial on a misdemeanor perjury charge.

Wait a second! Who are you?

AUSTIN (AP) — Getting autographs of the real Dallas Cowboys at their Austin training camp can be tough. Fans must wait for hours in the hot sun, stay behind a chain-link fence and hope players will stop their golf carts long enough to sign their names.

But getting the autographs of two non-Cowboys this week was pretty easy.

Newspaper columnist John "Crusher" Kelso donned an old leather football helmet, put up a card table at Cowboys camp and displayed a sign reading simply, "Autographs."

Joined by a friend, Edd "Late Train" O'Donnell, the pair told "fans" they were two old pro players from the former United Football Organization, or UFO.

"In about an hour and a half, we signed half a dozen footballs, a couple of paper fans, a couple of autograph books, several blank sheets of paper, and, amazingly, we didn't get our butts kicked," Kelso recounted in a column published Wednesday in the Austin American-Statesman.

Even though they lack what might be called much in the way of real football experience — "I watch a lot of it on TV," according to Kelso — the columnist wrote that the autograph session was kind of a public service for the Cowboys, who've been beset by off-field problems.

"We figured what the heck, by signing autographs at Cowboys camp, we might improve the Cowboys' tarnished image, since neither of us has been caught in a hotel room with exotic dancers. We don't mean to sound snotty, though. At our age, exotic dancers won't talk to us for less than a $5 tip."

Kelso said he also received a lot of funny looks, a number of questions and more than a little rejection.

"Actually, many of the Cowboys fans were quite discerning. In fact, most people ignored us," he wrote.

When a 20-something fan stopped to ask if they were two of the original Cowboys, Kelso replied, "No, not exactly. ... I was with the old United Football Organization, the old UFO."

The reaction, the columnist wrote, was underwhelming:

"'Oh, yeah. The old UFO,' the guy said. Then he wandered off without asking for my autograph. I guess he didn't think much of the old UFO."

'ER' leads Emmy nominations for third year

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Talk about a summer rerun: NBC's fast-paced medical drama "ER," television's top-rated series, led the Emmy pack for a third straight year today with 22 nominations.

In a startling sign of the increasing importance of cable TV, Home Box Office received the most nominations of any network or cable channel, a spot that traditionally has gone to one of the big three networks.

HBO, with 90 bids, edged last year's winner, NBC, by just one for the 49th Annual Primetime Emmys. CBS received a total of 60 nominations followed by ABC with 44. Fox earned 19 bids and PBS had 18.

HBO's "The Larry Sanders Show" received 16 nominations, the most ever for a comedy series in a single awards year.

Other programs making strong showings included "The X-Files" with 12 nominations and "NYPD Blue" with 11 nods. Other comedies receiving multiple nominations included the popular NBC sitcoms "Frasier" and "Seinfeld," each with nine nods.

"ER's" nominations included best drama series, and leading actor and actress bids for stars Anthony Edwards, Julianna Margulies and Sherry Stringfield, who has left the show. Absent from the list was heartthrob George Clooney, who had been nominated the last two years.

Other best drama series nominees were "Chicago Hope," "Law & Order," "NYPD Blue" and "The X-Files."

NBC dominated the comedy series category, with four of the five nominations: "Frasier," "Mad About You," "Seinfeld" and "3rd Rock from the Sun." HBO's "Larry Sanders" was the fifth.

"Larry Sanders," which stars Garry Shandling as a neurotic television talk show host, also earned a best acting nod for its star and best-supporting nominations for Jeffrey Tambor, who plays Sanders' sidekick Hank, and Rip Torn, last year's winner who plays Sanders' producer.

A best-supporting actress bid went to Janeane Garofalo for her role as Sanders' talent booker, Paula.

Among special programs, the HBO show "Miss Evers' Boys," received a leading 12 nominations, and "Bette Midler: Diva Las Vegas," also on HBO, got 10.

David Duchovny received his first leading actor bid for the supernatural series "The X-Files." Also nominated in the drama category, besides "ER's" Edwards, were Sam Waterston of "Law & Order," and Dennis Franz and Jimmy Smits of "NYPD Blue."

Duchovny also received a nod for a guest appearance in a comedy series, "The Larry Sanders Show."

Joining "ER" stars Margulies and Stringfield in the lead dramatic actress category were Gillian Anderson of "The X-Files," Roma Downey of "Touched by an Angel" and Christine Lahti for "Chicago Hope."

Nominations for best lead comedic actor went to Michael J. Fox of "Spin City," Kelsey Grammer of "Frasier," John Lithgow of "3rd Rock" and Paul Reiser of "Mad About You," as well as Shandling.

Comedy series actresses who received nods were Ellen DeGeneres of "Ellen," whose character came out as a lesbian in May, Fran Drescher of "The Nanny," Helen Hunt for "Mad About You," Patricia Richardson of "Home Improvement" and Cybill Shepherd for "Cybill." Roseanne was overlooked for her final season of "Roseanne."

Also overlooked were series unveiled during the 1996-97 season. Although a few received critical acclaim, including "The Practice," none gained the level of viewer attention that helps a new series become an Emmy nominee.

Best miniseries bids went to "The Odyssey," "The Last Don," "Stephen King's The Shining," "In Cold Blood" and "Prime Suspect 5: Errors of Judgement."

A new category was introduced this year, best commercial. The five nominees were two ads for Levi's jeans, including one in which a man and woman have a meaningful encounter in an elevator, one for Nike titled "Hello World," an HBO ad called "Chimps" and a fifth for GM's electric vehicle.

Nominations for the President's Award, a category introduced last year to recognize social value, went to the NBC series "ER," CBS' "Touched by an Angel" and "A&E Biography," and to the special programs "Miss Evers' Boys" and "If These Walls Could Talk," both shown on HBO.

A total of 391 nominations were announced in early morning ceremonies with actress Dana Delany and Richard H. Frank, president of the Academy of Television Arts & Sciences, as hosts.

The Emmy Awards ceremony is to be held Sunday, Sept. 14, at the Pasadena Civic Auditorium and will be broadcast live by CBS, part of a rotation deal the academy reached with the four broadcast networks.

Bryant Gumbel, the former "Today" show host who moved over to CBS to anchor a primetime news magazine, will serve as master of ceremonies for the awards. But the anchorman has said he doesn't plan to try his hand at comedy for the show.

Award winners will be determined by peer panels meeting in August.

Microsoft announces new Windows product

SEATTLE (AP) — The long-awaited name for its upgrade to Windows 95 will be called Windows 98, and that's when you'll be able to buy it.

Despite the name similarities, the new version of Microsoft Corp.'s best-selling operating system will be much more user-friendly than the earlier one, the company said Wednesday in a briefing on new products.

Windows 98, formerly code-named "Memphis," will be available sometime in the first three months of next year.

Microsoft said it listened to longstanding complaints by computer users that its software is too hard to use and acknowledged that earlier efforts to fix that have failed.

Windows 98 won't be the technological leap that marked the introduction of Windows 95 two years ago. But officials promised software that would blend Internet, radio, television and other media into personal computers while being more reliable and far simpler to operate.

New versions of Microsoft programs, including Windows and Office, the best-selling bundle of business software, won't be "bloatware," said Jon DeVaan, vice president of the desktop applications division.

"Frankly, we haven't done as good a job as we should at keeping our programs simple," DeVaan said.

Windows 95 now runs on more than 100 million computers or approximately one-third of all personal computers in use, Microsoft said. Its Office programs are used by an estimated 60 million people worldwide.

The test version of Windows 98 was released June 30 to a select group of software developers and testers, said Jim Allchin.

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

Trust in Husband Disappears Along With Savings Account

DEAR ABBY: I have been married for 27 years. Two years ago, my husband was laid off from his job after 31 years. I had always saved our money, and lived with an eye toward the future. We had taken out loans occasionally at my husband's credit union. Each time he got a raise, I'd put some of it away for that "rainy day."

One Saturday when the mail arrived, there was a letter in it from the credit union saying my husband was two payments behind on a loan. When he returned from playing golf, I told him I'd seen the dun and it was a mistake; it had to be his brother's. (His brother also worked for the same company.) I said if that's the way they did business, I'd meet him on Monday and we'd withdraw all our money and put it into another bank.

The following Monday, on my way to work, we met at the place the company had set up for outplaced employees. My husband seemed nervous and said we needed to talk. He then informed me that the $75,000 to $80,000 that was supposed to be in the account was gone. He had spent the money. I had been able to deal with his losing his job and my going to work full time, but this was too much. I exploded.

I asked him what he'd done with the money. He said he spent it on the family. Well, Abby, I know what kind of lifestyle we have lived, and we have nothing to show for that amount of money.

We went to counseling. I thought I was losing my mind. I loved this man, had his two children, and have never been with anyone else. The counselor told me I was not crazy. But when I'd talk with my husband, he made me feel like an idiot. The counselor told him that all I wanted to know was what he had done with the money. My husband insisted he didn't know what he had spent the money on.

Things went from bad to worse. Then I found girlie magazines in the back of our closet. I could only imagine the kinds of things he had been up to through the years.

We are now separated. When I see him, he swears that he has changed. But he still hasn't taken any responsibility for his dishonesty.

Abby, will I ever be able to trust him again? I thought I knew him. He says he doesn't need help. Can you advise me?

NEEDING PEACE IN WASHINGTON

DEAR NEEDING PEACE: Should you trust him again? Why should you? He is clearly a liar. He knows how he spent the money.

Although he swears he has changed, leopards don't usually change their spots, especially those who don't cooperate in counseling. It's time to look out for yourself and do what's best for you.

DEAR ABBY: I need some advice. I am a cat lover and own three declawed and lovable cats. I have a neighbor who periodically visits me and panics when the cats walk by her. She keeps asking me to remove them from the room. I have tried reassuring her that they will not harm her, but she still overreacts.

Should I confine them in a separate room, or should I graciously tell her that this is my home, and my cats' home, and they are free to roam as they please?

CATFUSED IN CANADA

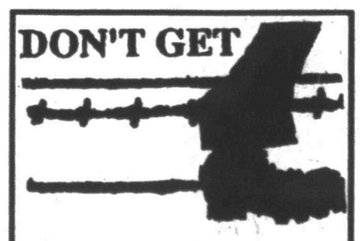

DEAR CATFUSED: The cats may be lovable to you, but not everyone is a cat lover. Also, many people are allergic to animal fur.

When your neighbor visits, keep the cats in a separate room with food and water. She will appreciate it.

NRCS Report

Farmers and ranchers may apply for the new Environmental Quality Incentives Program (EQIP) through Aug. 1. The new conservation program, a result of the 1996 Farm Bill, offers a limited number of producers who have serious soil, water and other natural resource problems with technical, financial and educational assistance.

According to John P. Burt, State Conservationist for USDA Natural Resources Conservation Service (NRCS) "EQIP is not like the former Great Plains Conservation Program (GPCP) extremely limited and is for persons engaged in livestock or agricultural production who would provide the greatest environmental benefits at the least cost to the program.

"Applications will be prioritized after Aug. 1, according to specific criteria," Burt continued. "After Farm Service Agency (FSA) determines producer eligibility, NRCS conservationists and the producer will make an inventory of the natural resources, identify natural resource problems and concerns, determine treatment needs, and agree upon the land management and structural practices, fields and acres to be treated, and cost-share rate and incentive payment levels the producer will accept, as well as the total program payments, are included in a ranking formula.

Twelve Geographic Priority Areas (GPA), encompassing 167 counties, are the primary target for over $8.7 million EQIP Funds allocated to Texas. Each GPA has similar natural EQIP sign-up problems and concerns which EQIP can address. Water conservaiton, excessive wind and water erosion, limited water supply and brush invasion are a few of the specific resource concerns identified in the GPAs.

Producers in counties outside of a GPA are also eligible for the remaining $4.7 million EQIP funds provided it will solve identified statewide natural resource concerns, such as excessive erosion and ground and surface water quality.

Each application will compete with other applications in their GPA, while those outside of the GPAs will compete against each other. "Contracts will be awarded based on their ranking, regardless of location," cautioned Burt.

"That means that some counties may not have any contracts, even though they are located inside a GPA," he said. Burt added that applications for a single conservation practice on an individual field addressing a single natural resource concern may not be competitive in a GPA or with the statewide natural resource concerns.

Acceptance into EQIP will require a 5- to 10-year contract, even if only 1 year of cost-share is needed. Contracts are for a maximum amount of $50,000 with a maximum 75 percent cost-share. Though entire farms or operating units are not required to be included in a contract, the proposed area must include that portion with the identified resource concerns which meets the goals and objectives of the GPA or statewide natural resource concerns.

Producers may increase their chances of acceptance by submitting a lower than maximum cost-share rate, enrolling entire operating units in the contract, and by agreeing to fully meet treatment needs of all identified natural resource concerns on the farm or ranch.

For more information about EQIP, contact your local USDA-NRCS office in Snyder at 915-573-6317 or your local FSA office at 915-573-0171.

The United States Department of Agriculture (USDA) prohibits discrimination in its programs on the basis of race, color, national origin, sex, religion, age, disability, political beliefs and marital or familial status. (Not all prohibited bases apply to all programs.) Persons with disabilities who require alternative means for communicaiton of program information (braille, large print, audiotape, etc.) should contact the USDA Office of Communications at 202-720-2791.

Briscoe to receive Golden Spur

Rancher and former Texas Governor Dolph Briscoe Jr of Uvalde will be honored Sept. 26 with the 1997 National Golden Spur Award. His recognition honors more than 40 years of contributions to the ranching and livestock industry.

The 20th annual National Golden Spur Award and Prairie Party, hosted by the Ranching Heritage Association, will begin with a 6:30 p.m. reception followed by the awards dinner and presentation at 7:30 at the Lubbock Memorial Civic Center.

The award is a joint recognition by some of the industry's leading national associations. Past recipient Watt R. Matthews, late patriarch of the Lambshed Ranch at Albany, said, "The National Golden Spur Award is one of the most prestigious distinctions anyone could receive."

This year's Golden Spur honoree is senior chairman of the First State Bank Uvalde, and chairman of Briscoe Ranch Inc., in Uvalde, Security State Bank in Pearsall and Savala County Bank in Crystal City. The largest individual landowner in the state of Texas, Briscoe's ranches include more than 600,000 acres. A dedicated and effective ranchman, he has led a distinguished career combining his interests and abilities in ranching and state politics.

Briscoe served in the Texas Legislature from 1949 to 1957, representing Uvalde, Medina, Zavala and Dimmit counties. As governor from 1973 to 1979, he is best known for keeping his promise of no new taxes.

"Dolph Briscoe is one of those people who sees a job that needs to be done and goes after it," said D.A. Harral, president of the Texas Sheep & Goat Raisers Association.

"He has always been able to see the 'big picture' and looks for ways to help the industries he loves. He has been extemely generous with his time and many talents in working for all Texans. The livestock industry has been the beneficiary, many times over, of his good efforts."

Among Briscoe's contributions to the ranching industry is co-sponsorship and passage in 1949 of the Colson-Briscoe Farm-To-Market Road Program, which helped to pave dirt roads and aided in the development of rural Texas.

Keeping an eye on Texas

Distribution of doctors uneven across the state

In Texas, there are about 2,000 people for every licensed physician. In some counties, however, each physician serves an average of more than 4,000 residents. Other counties have no doctors at all.

Crop Report

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Hot, humid weather has caused the productivity and quality of spring gardens to decline throughout Texas, the Texas Agricultural Extension Service reports.

"Very hot and humid conditions have dried out soils very rapidly," said Tony Douglas of Overton, district extension director for East Texas. "They are starting to show signs of being highly stressed."

Extension horticulturist Dr. Frank Dainello of College Station said the extreme change in weather conditions from the cool wet spring to the hot dry summer has forced some crops into a state of shock.

"These high temperatures have had a negative influence on the productivity of cucumbers," Dainello said.

He said tomatoes have been the most impacted by the heat.

"Tomato yields have been lower than normal because they begin to deteriorate when temperatures rise above 92 degrees," Dainello said.

Dr. Doug Welsh of College Station, Extension horticulturist, said the temperature shift has produced abnormalities on pepper plants.

"Farmers have found pepper plants with only the stalks present," Welsh said. "Temperatures have dried out the plants so much that vines have not been able to grow."

Although the sizzling summer heat has disrupted growth of many garden vegetables, others have benefited from the increased temperatures.

"Farmers have reported good pea harvests throughout the area," Douglas said.

Dainello said squash's high tolerance to extreme temperatures has helped the crop continue to show good growth.

PANHANDLE: soil moisture very short to short. Ranges good, but drying out quickly. Cattle good. Corn good, but moisture- stressed. Sorghum good. Cotton fair to good. Wheat harvest complete with excellent dryland yields reported.

SOUTH PLAINS: soil moisture adequate. Pastures, ranges in good condition. Wheat harvest complete. Cotton crop good, but remains two weeks behind schedule. Peanuts good. Onion harvest under way.

FAR WEST TEXAS: soil moisture short to adequate. Pastures, ranges drying out. Livestock fair to good. Wheat harvest complete. Cotton, sorghum in need of rain in most areas. Pecan crop fair to good. Melons good. Low peach yields being reported.

WEST CENTRAL TEXAS: soil moisture short to adequate. Pastures, ranges deteriorating with absence of rain. Livestock good. Sorghum stands good. Oat harvest complete. Cotton being replanted. Peach crop excellent. Pecans good, but high scab disease reported.

Pedestrian safety
Test your knowledge

Q. How many children are injured as pedestrians each year in the United States?

A. More than 50,000 children.

Of these 50,000 children:

1,800 die

18,000 are admitted to hospitals.

5,000 suffer from significant long-term disabilities.

Q. When are children at the greatest risk for injury?

A. At the beginning and end of the school year, because children are on the streets more.

A. When do most injuries occur?

A. Most injuries occur between noon and 6 p.m.

Q. How are most children injured?

A. Most children are hit by moving vehicles after darting into traffic from between two parked cars.

Think about this...

Very few children under 8 years of age can deal safely with traffic. These children are at risk because:

•They are impulsive and tend to do things without thinking first.

•They believe that if they can see a driver, the driver can see them.

•They believe cars can stop instantly.

•Few can judge the speed of traffic or distances.

•They do not recognize or react to unsafe situations.

•They are easily hidden by bushes, parked cars, etc.

Advice for parents

•Be examples for children.

•Remember that younger children are at the highest risk of being involved in an accident because they have not yet developed a sense of danger.

•Cross the streets hundreds of times with children before they cross by themselves.

•Supervise children at all times until they prove they are safe pedestrians even when distracted.

•Structure child's play areas in locations away from any type of vehicular traffic.

•Provide repetition and positive reinforcement in order for children to develop skills.

Practice makes perfect...

Parents should practice the following safety skills with their children:

•Learn to read and understand traffic signals and signs.

•Never run into a street.

•Once traffic has cleared, it is usually safe to cross. However, keep looking for oncoming traffic until the street has been safely crossed.

•Never, never cross between parked cars.

•When walking at dusk or during evening hours, make sure to wear white or bright clothes and some type of reflective device.

•Do not walk alone at night.

98,900 U.S. troops exposed to gas

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Pentagon now says 98,900 U.S. troops were exposed to trace amounts of poison gas from exploded Iraqi weapons shortly after the Gulf War but that none received doses high enough to cause noticeable health effects.

Even though the estimate of troops exposed is five times the Pentagon's earlier guess, it is sticking to its view that the chemical release on March 10, 1991, appears unrelated to the mysterious illnesses reported by Gulf War veterans.

The latest numbers, which are higher than generally expected, were revealed by defense officials Wednesday on condition they not be identified. The Pentagon scheduled a news conference today to make the official announcement.

In advance of the news conference, the Pentagon briefed members of Congress and leaders of veterans organizations on its findings and conclusions. Veterans groups have been highly critical of the Defense Department for not investigating chemical exposures earlier and more aggressively.

Matt Puglisi, director of Gulf War issues for the American Legion, said today the Pentagon report showed the government was accelerating its efforts, even though the results do not directly help veterans still suffering health problems.

"Will this information even be helpful to researchers? We don't know," Puglisi said.

Scientists and others attempting to find the cause of Gulf War illnesses such as chronic fatigue and respiratory problems have suggested chemical exposure. Exposure to biological poisons, fumes from oil well fires and the aftereffects of wartime stress also have been offered as possible explanations.

The defense officials said the new estimate of troop exposures is based on more complete information about circumstances when U.S. troops demolished the Khamisiyah ammunition depot in southern Iraq on March 10, 1991. Unknown to the troops, hundreds of 122mm rockets with sarin gas in their warheads were among the weapons blown up that day.

None of the troops involved reported ill health effects at the time, and the fact that Iraqi chemical weapons were present at Khamisiyah did not come to light until 1996.

Officials stressed that none of the 98,900 was exposed to amounts of gas that would cause even minor immediate symptoms such as runny nose or dimmed vision. Even so, all 98,900 will be surveyed as part of a continuing Pentagon effort to determine if there are delayed or long-term health effects to exposure to trace amounts of chemicals.

have a few students, said Canada. However, he said that through video conferencing, a teacher in Snyder could instruct students in several small schools at the same time.

"It's a great recruiting tool," said Dr. Palmer, who said high school students who take two or three courses through Western Texas would be more likely to come to attend classes on campus when they graduate.

The purpose of Wednesday's presentation, other than informational, was to have BCD members consider providing funding for the project. This would likely be in the form of helping out with matching grant monies. WTC officials are already in the process of trying to secure grants.

"We hope to have something up and running by next summer," said Gibson. "But you never know when you are going to hear about or receive a grant. We want everything in place, so when we do, we can be ready to go."

Though a commitment was not on the agenda, BCD members spoke favorably of the project, voicing a belief that the training center can help bring more industry and business to the county.

"If you want to help with something that is important, this is something that will help the community," John DeLille, Development Corporation of Snyder executive director, told the board.

The board approved $3,900 to have Gary W. Littlefield of Abilene to install a sprinkler system to water grass and plants around the terminal building at Winston Field Airport. In an earlier project, BCD-provided funds led to the renovation of the terminal building.

Present for the meeting were BCD board members Terry Hefner, David Koonce, Tony Scott and Mark McCormick, chairman. David Kattes was absent.

Bill would target youthful offenders

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Judiciary Committee today approved a bill that could bring sweeping changes to toughen how juvenile criminals are treated nationwide.

Many more youngsters 14 and older could be tried as adults for serious violent crimes under the legislation in both federal and state courts.

Like a counterpart bill the House passed in May, it presses states to tighten up their treatment of juvenile offenders by offering $500 million per year in incentive grants available only to states that do so.

"I think it'll make a heck of a difference on juvenile crime in this country," said committee Chairman Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, who led eight days of full committee meetings to thrash out some of the 100 amendments submitted by Democrats and Republicans alike.

The 12-6 vote for the measure saw Democratic Sens. Dianne Feinstein of California and Robert Torricelli of New Jersey join Republicans in support. All the votes against it were cast by Democrats.

Sen. Patrick Leahy of Vermont, the committee's top Democrat, said the measure would make "state legislatures, all 50, irrelevant in a lot of areas."

In approving the legislation, the committee set big battles on gun proposals for the inevitable Senate floor fight.
