Moratorium on combined vaccine lifted

By MICHAEL PUTZEL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government's moratorium on flu vaccinations was lifted today so the elderly and the chronically ill can get shots to protect them from A-Victoria flu.

In the process, they also would be vaccinated against swine flu, since there are no separate vaccines for the two strains.

But Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare Joseph A. Califano Jr. maintained the moratorium on vaccine containing serum only for swine flu. He said there is no immediate need to lift it because there has been no outbreak of the swine flu strain in the United States this year. There has been an outbreak of A-Victoria flu in a Miami nursing home.

The shots were called off in the first place because of the risk of Guillain-Barre Syndrome, a rare paralytic disease, among those who receive them. Califano said the risk of contracting that ailment is believed to be about the same with any type of flu shot. He said the swine flu vaccine is not considered more risky than any other type.

Califano recommended that persons age 65 or over take the A-Victoria shot.

"At the first sign of an impending outbreak (of swine flu), we will take appropriate action," Califano said. He told a news conference he did not know at this time what would constitute "appropriate action."

Califano also announced that the moratorium would be lifted for vaccine against B-Hong Kong flu, a milder strain that usually strikes children and young adults.

He said the status of the B-Hong Kong vaccine would be the same as it was before the moratorium when health officials and physicians could use it at their discretion. However, unlike the combined vaccine against swine and A-Victoria flu, the federal government is not recommending that it be used.

A panel of medical and scientific experts urged Califano on Monday to revive limited and voluntary inoculation programs in the wake of an outbreak of 59 A-Victoria flu cases in a Miami nursing home.

The panel urged the government to encourage the elderly and chronically ill to get shots.

Rhodesian forces track guerrillas

SALISBURY, Rhodesia (AP) — Security forces hunted through the rain-soaked bush for black guerrillas who killed seven white missionaries on Sunday. The government announced today that guerrillas attacked a second mission, burning and looting offices.

A communique said there were no casualties reported in the raid on Nyashanu mission 125 miles southeast of Salisbury near the Mozambique border. About $5,400 was taken and a mission workshop and office were burned.

The government did not identify the denomination of the mission or indicate when the attack occurred.

Black guerrillas, apparently a different group, killed three Jesuits and four Dominican nuns in a Sunday night raid at St. Paul's Roman Catholic Mission, 26 miles northeast of the capital and about 150 miles from Nyashanu.

Today's communique said 10 guerrillas had been killed by government forces in the past two days and that eight African civilians were killed by guerrillas. Two blacks died after being caught in a crossfire and another died when his car hit a mine, it said.

Supt. John Potter said the 12 gunmen who invaded St. Paul's, in the Musami tribal area, were armed with Soviet weapons and were members of the outlawed Zimbabwe African National Union — ZANU — "under the alleged control of Robert Mugabe."

"They seem to do their own thing. If they want to burn down villages, that is what they do," Potter said.

The police believed the same band was responsible for recent killings of black civilians in the area.

Mugabe's ZANU guerrillas operate in that area from bases in Mozambique while a guerrilla army that reportedly answers to Joshua Nkomo, the head of the Zimbabwe African People's Union, operates in northwest Rhodesia from Zambia.

The Patriotic Front, the political alliance of Nkomo and Mugabe, claimed the guerrillas who killed the three Jesuits and four Dominican nuns were government agents in disguise. There was no official response, but it was believed the government hoped to capture the band alive to refute the claim.

An English Jesuit, Father Dunstan Myerscough, said he survived the massacre at the Roman Catholic mission 36 miles northeast of Salisbury by throwing himself to the ground as the shooting began.

He said the guerrillas ad rounded up the whites in the mission, herded them out into a sandy road running through the compound and then argued among themselves about who would do the shooting.

"One came forward, then withdrew," Father Myerscough said. "Then another did the same. Eventually three came forward and the others ran off. They raised their guns and opened fire.

"I don't know how long the burst lasted. I heard the terrorists running away. I looked at the others on the ground and I knew there was nothing I could do."

The police said they collected 111 spent shells.

Three of the nuns killed were West Germans, and the fourth was English. The other dead were two British

These 1947 photographs on display at the Naval Academy at Annapolis, Md., show former classmates Jimmy Carter, right, and Stansfield Turner. Carter, now President, has nominated Turner, an admiral and commander of allied forces in southern Europe, for the CIA.

Stansfield could be grilled

WASHINGTON (AP) — Adm. Stansfield Turner, President Carter's second choice to head the Central Intelligence Agency, may face tough questioning from senators who would prefer a civilian in the job, but the nomination appears in no danger.

Sen. Daniel K. Inouye, DHawaii, chairman of the Senate Intelligence Committee, announced today that hearings on the Turner nomination will begin on Feb. 22. Inouye said the coomittee staff is running a background check on the admiral.

The senator said he would take no position on the appointment until after the hearings.

Both Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., and Minority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr., R-Tenn., said after Carter made the nomination Monday that they knew of no strong opposition to Turner.

Turner is commander in chief of allied forces in southern Europe. Carter's first choice for the CIA post, Theodore Sorensen, withdrew from consideration in the face of strong Senate opposition, particularly among conservatives.

Another Carter nominee, Paul Warnke, named head of the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency, was starting the confirmation process today. He was certain to undergo detailed and hostile questioning from senators opposed to what they consider his dovish views on arms development.

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee has jurisdiction over the Warnke nomination, but the Armed Serv ces Committee may also ask him to appear before it.

Steelworkers deciding successor to president

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The United Steelworkers today choose between an establishment candidate and a militant rank-and-file leader in a presidential election that could help determine the future direction of the nation's labor movement.

The outcome of the race for the $75,000-a-year job now held by retiring President I.W. Abel is being watched closely not only in labor circles, but also by big business and government.

With its 1.4 million members, the USW is the nation's largest industrial union and is the most influential member of the AFLCIO. It often sets the pattern for other unions.

The establishment candidate is Lloyd McBride, 60, a close associate of Abel who has pledged to continue the union's policies, including a no-strike agreement with the steel industry.

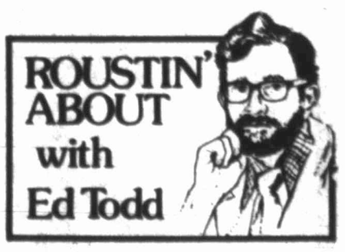
Opposing McBride is Edward Sadlowski, 38, who has repeatedly attacked the union hierarchy for allegedly "selling out" to corporate bosses and treating the rank-and-file with indifference. His appeal to shake up the labor movement has taken on the tone of a crusade.

Both candidates predict victory, but if past elections are any guide, Sadlowski must do well in the industrial belt stretching from Illinois across Pennsylvania. One-third of the union's members are located there, the ones who actually work in steel production — and the ones with the best voting turnout record.

"The weather probably will be a factor. There are still a lot of plants shut down because of the natural gas shortage and Ed needs a good turnout in basic steel," said a member of the Sadlowski camp.

McBride supporters also hope for a large turnout.

Smiling dentist gives some toothy advice



"A happy smile increases your face value," said the dentist, who naturally assumes that the teeth behind that smile are intact, gleaming white and well-cared for. No one wants to see a toothless smile reflected in the bathroom mirror. Anyway, why smile? A grin might do just as well. But you might want to pucker up after you slap in those custom-made dentures.

Ah, the virtues of a wholesome, full-toothed mouth are boringly extolled in romanticized TV toothpaste commercials and in some ads in the printed press.

And some commercials, drab as a wartime camouflage net, relate the blessings of brushing regularly and brushing with a generous squeeze of decay-fighting miracle paste.

Yes, fellow Americans, there is truth in advertising. Of course, there's a lot that's not said, too.

And that young dentist, Dr. Vincent C. Bash III, who takes stock in the face value of a "happy smile," freely offers some advice on dental hygiene.

(Drop by his office and he might, in the name of livelihood, bill you for advice and repair work.)

Paying your dentist a tidy fee for tooth-repair work is not the answer to "the problem" of maintaining a comely smile.

The drilling-filling-polishing chore simply does not rout tooth decay.

"The cure is changing your habits," Bash said, "and that's the hardest thing in the world to do — change habits."

The dental care that he's talking about takes in sensible dieting (if you're educated to that), and conscientious brushing and thorough flossing.

"That doesn't mean," he suggested, "that your teeth are the most important thing to you or that you should live your life around your teeth."

But what Bash does propose is a preventive dental care program what would have the effect of ruining the business of most of the nation's dentists.

And, sure as the wind blows, that's not going to happen. The human folks

Panel debates zoning question, urges change for mobile homes

Changes in the zoning ordinance affecting mobile home use and approval of a zoning change request by John Williams were recommended for approval Monday in a long session by the Midland Planning and Zoning Commission. Williams' request was to change five lots on the 3200 block of Wadley Avenue from single family to planned district, and to be used for construction of duplexes.

Williams originally made a similar request in May and it was denied.

He made a new request in September, and the planning and zoning staff incorrectly accepted his request for review, according to city planner Richard Hennessy. The hearing Monday was a continuation of the September request.

The review for the second request should not have been given because Williams had not waited at least one year after being turned down the first time.

This requirement of the zoning ordinance can be waived, however, if there is a "substantial change" in the character of the neighborhood.

The legal question about the commission's authority to even hear the zoning change request was made by Clarence Kissel, owner of a house across from the proposed duplex development.

Kissel originally had opposed the development, but at Monday's meeting was objecting only to the procedures of the commission in considering the case.

As a result of Kissel's argument questioning commission authority, Williams had to convince the commissioners that a "substantial change" had occurred in the neighborhood.

Any change would have had to occur after May 1976.

Citing possible traffic increases and a new restaurant as two examples, Williams got the commissioners to agree that a significant change had occurred, and this opened the way for the zoning change, which was promptly approved.

The mobile home changes, among other things, allow somewhat wider uses of mobile homes in commercial and less restrictive districts such as industrial parks, and heavy and light industry districts.

Mobile homes used as caretakers, manager or quard residences could be allowed permanently in these districts if a specific use permit were granted.

In addition, mobile homes of 1,100 square feet or less used by the same kinds of persons could be permitted in more restrictive zoning districts for up to two years with a temporary permit.

The proposed changes in the ordinance are to allow more specific guidelines than currently exist.

In other action, the commissioners:

— Approved a preliminary plat of Lincoln Mercury addition. This would be a new location for the automobile dealership in the 3700 to 3800 block of West Wall Avenue.

— Approved, with conditions, William Hickey's request for zone change of multi-family to planned district for single-family residences for tract of land at Wadley Avenue and Racquet Club Drive.

— Approved Martin Allday's request for zoning to IP-3 in lots 2 and 9 of block 5 of Midland Industrial Park. Also, lots 3 and 4 of block 5 in Midland Industrial Park were approved for zoning to LR-2, upon annexation by the city council.

— Tabled until the Feb. 21 meeting Jeff Carter's request for zone change from single family to planned district, for residential purposes, at 1001 Scharbauer Drive. The commissioners want more information about easements on the lot.

are going to continue their ingrained habit of tooth neglect.

Neglect of oral hygiene or merely the practice of slipshod home dental care from childhood forward ultimately may result in compounded and costly problems.

"The more severe problems are economic ones," Bash said. And those who don't muster up the money to get their teeth fixed in later years may run into a host of problems — from cosmetic to abscessed to the unthinkable.

Dental care, both capitalized and socialized, is not free.

"Sure, it costs a little bit," Bash said. And he noted that the payoff is well worth the price.

If not followed up by thorough toothgrooming, that costly dental repair work might be for near naught.

Bypass the sweets more than occasionally and brush and floss regularly and faithfully . . . such toothsome advice.

(Such advice Bash gives doubly free on this National Children's Dental Health Week, which is promoted by the American Dental Association.)

If you must go to the dentist for some repair work, you might try to forget the pain. The dentistry profession is working toward minimal torment.

For instance, the air-driven, high-speed drill "that just tickles a little" has replaced "the old belt-driven tooth-grinder (and) head rattler," Bash duly noted.

Those nerve-deadening liniments and shots lessen the pain. "The needles are skinnier now," Bash said.

And the dentist and his aides, such as Bash's Buckwheat, Candi and Cyn, try their dead-level best to soothe their patients and to make their visits comfortable and enjoyable.

(Sort of reminds you of the "A" train from the days of the locomotive-pulled Pullman cars or of a luxurious night flight across the ocean blue.)

"It can be pleasant," Bash said of a dental sitting.

And it can be worth the money, too, he said.

Generally, Bash said, people are not unnerved about dental cost "if they feel like they're getting their money's worth."

The disgruntlement comes to the fore when and if dental patients sense that they're "getting ripped off."

At that point, a frown and a growl might replace that "happy smile."

And the face value might be shot all to pot.

Black nuns and workers at the mission were ignored by the attackers.

Carbon monoxide kills woman, hospitalizes boys

ANDREWS — Carbon monoxide poisoning caused the death of an Andrews woman Monday morning after she started her car in an enclosed garage.

Mary Lin Stewart, 37, died about 3:35 a.m. Monday in Andrews hospital.

Two of her three sons were released from the hospital late Monday after being hospitalized most of the day with respiratory difficulties.

Police said Mrs. Stewart took the two sons to the garage at about 3 a.m. after telling her husband she couldn't sleep and wanted to listen to music.

Her husband, Ken Stewart, told police he awoke at about 3:20 a.m. when he smelled fumes which had seeped into the house and heard sounds in the garage.

Police said they believe Mrs. Stewart had gotten cold and started the car engine to get heat without thinking.

The trapped fumes leaked into the car, killing Mrs. Stewart and causing reapiratory difficulties for her sons Stephen Stewart, 11, and Jeffrey Stewart, 9.

Police ask separation from other employes

Midland police Sgt. Fred Johnson urged the separation of police officers from other city employees for consideration in matters regarding retirement and other benefits requested from city council during a meeting of the Midland Police Officers' Association (MPOA) Monday night.

"We believe that the time has come where we might be considered in city government as different from other groups of city employes," Johnson, MPOA vice president, said.

"We feel that with the council's permission that we can separate from possibly all other groups of city employees by the amount of education that we are obliged to have and the fact of our expertise in a very hard professional organization.

"We believe that by being separated that we could ask for certain things without it being planned for all city employees. We feel that we are above standards set forth by other city departments, and we certainly don't like the idea of being just a city employee," Johnson said.

Vested rights after 20 years and the possibility of retirement after 25 years or at age 55 were listed among the benefits MPOA would like to see the city council provide policeman. Currently there are no vested rights, and retirement is at age 65 or after 28 years of service, MPOA officials said.

"We in police work realize from experience that a police officer above (persons in) other professions burns himself out more quickly because of his complete, dedicated committment to society. We alone of all professions have to lead a fish-bowl type existence because of our positiom of authority," Johnson said.

The association would like to see a police officer who has left the department and come back be allowed to buy time into the Texas Municipal Retirement System if he wishes, Johnson said. And members want raised the present limitation of retirement fund into a 7 per cent of annual salary into the TMRS fund, Johnson said.

"We should be able to place an imput into a higher pension system within the police department where we can better protect our families in case of any emergency, such as sudden death, injury, or a member not being able to work," Johnson said.

"There are several rationales for educational upgrading of American police and City of Midland police officers. The first of these is improving the crime control function through better motivation. The second relates to the effectiveness with which the police are able to perform through more balanced use of social counseling and law enforcement techniques," Johnson said.

"We need to hire officers of higher education to our police department, but we cannot do this with what we have to offer them now," Johnson added.

Crane received a little shower last night and skies were cloudy this morning.

Cloudy skies, light rain or drizzle and fog covered most of the state early today except for the Panhandle and portions of extreme Southwest Texas, the Associated Press said.

Scattered light rain and drizzle was reported early today generally east of a line from Sanderson to Wichita Falls. The rainfall was light in all areas with San Antonio reporting the most at .18 of an inch.

Early morning temperatures ranged from the 20s in the Panhandle to the lower 60s in the Lower Rio Grande Valley.

Other early morning readings included 28 at Amarillo, 37 at Wichita Falls, 35 at Texarkana, 40 at Dallas-Fort Worth, 41 at San Antonio, 46 at Galveston, 47 at Alice, 45 at Del Rio, 30 at El Paso, 42 at San Angelo and 38 at Lubbock.

Rep. Kaster seeks go-ahead for Southwest

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Rep. Jim Kaster, D-El Paso, says he has 80 co-authors for a legislative proposal that would let Southwest Airlines start service to Austin, Corpus Christi, El Paso, Lubbock and MidlandOdessa by July 1.

The measure would validate the orders of the Texas Aeronautics Commission for the expansion routes.

Kaster said the bill was introduced "because of the seemingly endless litigation that Southwest Airlines faces every time they are granted a new route. This time it is the Fort Worth Chamber of Commerce and the city of Fort Worth who have filed suit in 200th District Court in Travis County to keep Southwest from landing at Love Field in Dallas."

"This matter has been decided by no less than eight court cases," Kaster said. "Ft. Worth's continuing harrassing law suit now affects a great many other Texans by the possibility of delaying further, perhaps long as 18 months, when service can start by Southwest Airlines to the new cities... We are tired of the endless lawsuits, and want to ride Southwest now," Kaster said in a statement.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Election Commission is studying proposels to change campaign laws, including a suggestion that would allow presidential candidates to spend as much as $35 million in federal funds during the 1980 campaign.

The FEC was meeting today to take up the proposals, included in a report prepared by the commission's staff.

The report does not make a firm recommendation on how high to raise the spending limit for presidential nominees who accept government funds. But it does say the spending limit for presidential nominees who do accept the federal funds "could be increased to $25 (million), $30 (million) or $35 million."

Under new campaign financing laws administered by the FEC, Republican Gerald R. Ford and Democrat Jimmy Carter each got $21.7 million from the federal treasury for their 1976 general election campaigns. They were allowed to spend no more.

In its report, the commission staff said, "The experience of the 1976 elections suggests that the Congress may wish to raise the presidential spending limitations."

The report also suggests that the $2 million each major political party receives to finance its convention might be increased, as well as the $10 million spending limit on candidates seeking their party's nomination.

The contribution limits have been criticized as restrictions on First Amendment rights of free expression. The limits prohibit any individual from donating more than $1,000 to a single candidate. Committees are limited to gifts of $5,000 to any candidate.

In its recommendations, the FEC staff also suggested the commission "drastically reduce the number of reports required to be filed, while actually facilitating public disclosure."

Reagan wasn't offered position

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Ronald Reagan hinted Monday that he might have accepted the Republican vice presidential nomination if President Ford had offered it to him at the GOP convention in Kansas City last summer.

"It would have put me in a tough spot," Reagan said. "I don't know what I would have done."

The former California governor said he and his wife Nancy had speculated frequently on what his course of action would have been if the nomination had been offered. Ford called on Reagan after the nomination and asked his views on several prospective vice-presidential candidates.

Reagan said he tried to find something nice to say about most of the people mentioned by Ford, one of whom was Sen. Bob Dole, the eventual nominee.

Reagan said that a group of 29 Republicans called on him the following morning to ask him if he would object to their proposing to Ford that he pick Reagan as his running mate. Before the meeting actually began, however, Reagan received a telephone call telling him about the Dole selection.

Various Ford strategists have said that Reagan's name never came up in discussions about the vice presidential nominee was because Reagan repeatedly had indicated he would not be receptive.

On the same day Ford was nominated by the convention a handwritten letter from Reagan to members of his own California delegation said that "there is no circumstance whatsoever" under which he would accept the vice presidency.

Richard B. Cheney, former White House chief of staff, confirmed Monday that the possibility of Reagan's being the vice presidential nominee was never raised by Ford when the two men met. Cheney said that was because one of the conditions of the meeting laid down by John Sears, the Reagan campaign leader, was that the vice presidential nomination not be offered.

Reagan's comments were made in an interview with The Washington Post, during which the former California governor also said he had no timetable for deciding whether he will run again for President in 1980. When a reporter observed that Reagan, who was 66 on Sunday, would be nearly 70 then, Reagan responded that Verdi did not write "Falstaff" until he was 83.

Reagan predicted that Ford would make another try at the White House.

"I'm sure he's going to take another whack at the presidency," Reagan said.

In the interview Reagan also:

—Said that a new political action group he has formed, the Citizens for the Republic, would try to help bright, young candidates of conservative persuasion, and that the emphasis would be on candidates who had a chance to win, not "lost causes." The organization, which Reagan said also will develop a newsletter, is being financed by the nearly $1 million left over from his presidential campaign.

—Said that President Carter remained "kind of a mystery" to him, and that Carter's political direction was still unclear. Reagan observed that Carter was "a hard target" and added, "I've never seen anyone throw a peanut in the air and shoot it."

Carter expected to change little in Ford's 1978 budget

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter probably will propose relatively modest changes in the fiscal 1978 budget he inherited from former President Gerald R. Ford, budget analysts say.

One congressional analyst said Monday he expects Carter may ask Congress to approve $15 billion in additional spending to the $440 billion Ford proposed just before leaving office.

About half of that potential increase, $7.6 billion, would be for the jobs and public works programs Carter already has proposed for fiscal 1978 as part of his two-year $31-billion plan to stimulate the economy.

With the additional $15 billion, outlays for the year would be about $455 billion, if Congress gives its approval. The budget deficit could be about $57 billion, up from the $47 billion Ford proposed.

A spokesman for Carter's Office of Management and Budget said the President still hasn't made final decisions on the budget changes he will propose. Congress also could easily add to what Carter does recommend.

The spokesman said Carter probably will not be ready to send his budget proposals to Congress until Feb. 21. That is the date the congressional Joint Economic Committee has set for its first hearing on the 1978 budget.

"If they can beat that date, they will," he said. But he said the amount of work involved in amending Ford's budget already has pushed the new administration well past its original target date of Feb. 15.

Fiscal 1978 begins Oct. 1.

Carter's proposals will be contained in a budget document of about 100 pages that will be accompanied by a presidential statement explaining the changes, the spokesman said.

Budget Director Bert Lance has said Carter will not try to rewrite the entire Ford budget, but will concentrate on areas that he feels are of major importance, such as defense and human aid programs operated by the Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

Carter already has announced that his two-year economic stimulus program would cut taxes by $8.2 billion in fiscal 1978 and increase outlays for jobs and public works programs by $7.6 billion.

In addition, analysts say it is certain he will recommend restoring several billion in reductions Ford had proposed in various human aid programs, including $2 billion from Medicare, $1.2 billion from child nutrition programs, including school lunches, and $800 million from food stamps.

Congress would be unlikely to approve those cuts in any event.

Russian's release sought

MOSCOW (AP) — More than 200 Soviet dissidents have appealed for release because of ill health of Alexander Ginzburg, who disburses the funds supplied by novelist Alexander Solzhenitsyn to aid political prisoners and their families.

In Washington, the U.S. State Department said it was "watching with concern" the treatment of the 40-year-old human rights activist and has made the Soviet government aware of its views.

It was the third time since President Carter took office Jan. 20 that the United States had warned a Soviet Bloc government about human rights.

Ginzburg's Soviet supporters made their plea in a statement addressed to the 35 governments that signed the 1975 Helsinki Accords. It said he was released from a hospital shortly before his arrest Thursday although "still suffering from pneumonia with a tubercular infection ... and should be treated at a tuberculosis dispensary."

Jail is "certain death for a man in his condition," Valentin Turchin, head of the Soviet branch of Amnesty International, told Western correspondents.

Ginzburg is reported being held in prison in Kaluga, about 100 miles southwest of Moscow. The charges against him have not been announced, but an official publication accused him last week of illegal currency dealings.

Ginzburg says that he has distributed a total of 270,000 rubles — the equivalent of $363,879 at the official exchange rate — for Solzhenitsyn to more than 1,400 persons in the last 2¼ years. The fund was started with money the novelist left behind when he went into exile and is replenished with royalties from the sales of his books abroad. Ginzburg said he was careful to deal only in rubles supplied to him by intermediaries for Solzhenitsyn so as not to violate prohibitions against traffic in foreign currency.

Other dissidents said they feared the arrest of Ginzburg was the start of a crackdown on activists who have complained to western reporters and diplomats about alleged Soviet violations of the human rights provisions of the 1975 Helsinki agreement on East-West security and cooperation.

Davis appeal fails again

WASHINGTON (AP) — Another try for bail by millionaire Texan Cullen Davis fell flat Monday when U.S. Supreme Court Justice Lewis F. Powell Jr. refused Davis' plea for setting of bond.

Davis is charged with capital murder in the deaths of his 12-year-old stepdaughter, Andrea Wilborn, and his estranged wife's boyfriend, 33-year-old Stan Farr.

The deaths occurred in a shooting spree at the showplace Davis Mansion in Fort Worth, Tex. last Aug. 2 in which Davis' wife, Priscilla, and another man were wounded.

Davis attorney Phil Burleson said defense lawyers probably will not try again to have bond set for their client.

The capital murder trial is scheduled to begin Feb. 22

"Probably, this close to trial, we will not pursue anything," Burleson said.

He said he will hold off on determining pretrial strategy until "I can find out exactly what happened (in the Supreme Court)."

Powell ruled without comment, refusing to hear oral arguments from Sam Dash.

Davis still has a bond request pending with the U.S. 5th Circuit Court of Appeals and could also appeal to other Supreme Court justices.

The request before Powell was made by Washington attorney Dash, who served as chief counsel for the Senate Watergate Committee.

Age 30 brings downer

By ERMA BOMBECK

Having someone complain to me about being 30 is like King Kong complaining his house is too near the airport.

What do people want from me? Compassion? Empathy? Iron tablets?

A reader from Westminster, Mass., said age 30 was a downer. I'll match you down for down.

She writes, "Thirty is having a friend whose three-year-old reads at a second-grade level." (Fifty is having a FRIEND who reads at a second-grade level.)

"Thirty is reading your alumnae magazine and wondering who all those people are." (Fifty is seeing one line written under your year: See "IN MEMORIAM.")

"Thirty is wearing support panty hose under your hot pants." (Fifty is never having to say, "Tuck in your blouse." It's always on the outside.)

"Thirty is not getting huffy when a truck driver whistles at you." (Fifty is moistening your lips and sucking in your stomach when the teakettle warms up.)

"Thirty is when your voice whispering huskily in the night means one of the kids just threw up." (Fifty is when a voice whispering huskily in the night means someone is ripping off the tricycle in the garage.).

"Thirty is dancing all night and recovering all week." (Fifty is organizing a car pool to the garbage can.)

"Thirty is no longer being able to mouth off about the bourgeois establishment because all you talk about is the price of lettuce and the wallpaper in the bathroom." (Fifty doesn't want to believe that Shirley Temple Black is toilet-trained.)

"Thirty is getting your last kid in nursery school and being bored with people who talk about Montessori." (Fifty doesn't care what kids do so long as they have clean hands.)

"Thirty is being the same weight you were five years ago, but the tops are looser and the bottoms won't zip." (Fifty is adjusting to a world without mirrors.)

"Thirty is being flattered to have your ID checked at the bar for age." (Fifty wouldn't show her ID to her parish priest even if he swore to regard it as privileged information.)

How do I know so much about 50-year-olds, you ask?

I've gained their trust and they confide in me. Few 30-year-olds can pull that off.

DEAR ABBY

Men should level with women

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Please print this for all those inconsiderate guys out there who may not know how to handle this situation or don't have the guts to:

Guys, when you decide to drop a girl you've been seeing regularly, please be kind and let her know it's all over. Don't lie about it and say, "Let's cool it for a while," when you really mean, "Let's end it."

You don't even have to give her a reason, just say, "Goodby, it's been nice knowing you."

There's nothing worse for a girl than not knowing where she stands with a guy. Of course it hurts to be told it's over, but it's a lot less painful than being left hanging and wondering and hoping. So level with her, will you?—HANGING AND WONDERING

DEAR HANGING: All right, here's a message to all you guys out there who lack the consideration (and courage) to level with the ladies. But girls, the same kind of frankness on your parts would be a kindness, too. Men also appreciate knowing where they stand. Even if it's out in the cold.

DEAR ABBY: My daughter was married for seven years. She has two children, 5 and 3. She recently was divorced and has told me that she is going to live with another woman because they have decided that they are lesbians and belong together. This other woman has an 8-year-old daughter and is a successful artist. (My daughter teaches children with learning disabilities.)

I am glad that my daughter told me the truth. She said she has been fighting her lesbian tendencies since adolescence and that during her marriage she had psychotherapy and was advised to accept herself as she is.

My daughter has asked me to welcome her ladyfriend into my home and to consider this woman's child my "grandchild." I want to do the right thing by my daughter, but I just can't see myself doing it graciously.

I'm very unhappy about all this, but I'm trying to act cheerful. Please help me.—SAD MOTHER

DEAR SAD: Unless you want to lose your daughter and your own grandchildren, accept your daughter's ladyfriend and her child. Both you and your daughter are fortunate to have such an open and honest relationship. Even in these enlightened times, it's all too rare.

DEAR ABBY: A male coworker of mine has a habit of calling all his women clients "dear."

I told him that I thought he was being presumptuous, and I was sure that some women found it offensive.

He insists that ALL women feel complimented to be called "dear"-even by a stranger. Do they?—WOMAN REALTOR

DEAR REALTOR: No one can speak for ALL women, but in my opinion, "dear" has no place in a business conversation. And that goes for "honey," too.

HOROSCOPE

By CARROLL RIGHTER

(Wed., Feb. 9)

GENERAL TENDENCIES: This is not a good day to plan any definite course of action or campaign for many difficulties and delays are likely to occur. Think of better ways to clear the obstacles in the path of your desires.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) You have responsibilities to meet and want to run away from them, but it is best to carry through conscientiously instead. Use tact with your mate or you get into trouble. Be wary of strangers.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Be sure to carry through with that contract you have with another or you can get into much trouble later. A civic affair could be annoying, but handle it well just the same.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Running away from duties ahead of you would only make matters worse in the future. Concentrate on how to solve some of these problems. Be wary of one who has an eye on your assets.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Do whatever will bring more harmony at home quietly. Try to understand others' views better. A new project you have in mind is not for you, so let it go. Make the evening a happy one with a loved one.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Look for better ways to get errands done. Not a good day to seek advice you need from experts. Use much care in motion of all kinds.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Take no chances where finances are concerned during day or in the evening or you will regret it later. Your adviser is in an unsettled mood today, so don't consult as yet. Take it easy tonight.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Try to control yourself today when you are apt to be in a poor mood and could make some unfortunate mistake. Do not argue at a social function you may attend. Be careful of strangers.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Do not get discouraged in the handling of some problems and you will be able to solve it satisfactorily now. Try to be philosophical in the face of delays and obstacles.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Don't rely on friends today who are under pressure and have no time for you. Don't be demanding where social matters are concerned. Use tact and get right results.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) TAke care that you do nothing that would make higher-ups criticize you. Pay bills on time and improve credit.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) You want to get into new projects but this is not the time to do so, although looking into them is fine. Be patient, show wisdom and courage. Avoid one who is annoying to you.

Beta Pi plans tea

Plans for the annual spring tea slated for March were finalized. Kappa Kappa Iota conclaves from Midland, Odessa and Andrews are invited.

Willie Lee Corder, retired school teacher and a former Kappa member, showed her doll collection and related some history and personal anecdotes about the dolls.

ESA chapter plans dance

The Beta Eta Chapter of Epsilon Sigma Alpha had a business session in the home of the president, Mrs. Clarence Grant.

Mrs. Frank Felts presented a program on local museums. A committee report was given on the Western dance to be held Feb. 18 in the Midland County Exhibit Building. Proceeds will benefit St. Jude's Hospital. Mrs. Felts reported on the valentine party to be given by the chapter Feb. 14 honoring special education children in Midland elementary schools.

Disaster agency earning stripes

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Ohio Gov. James A. Rhodes' plea to President Carter to declare his state a major disaster area on Tuesday sounded more like a Mayday signal than your typical impersonal government request:

At least eight dead ... roads clogged with drifting snow ...

Entire state immobilized ... absolute emergency conditions ...

National Guard members fought their way to a drift-buried farm home to rescue a family of eight who had burned all their furniture for fuel and "were throwing their shoes into the fire when the helicopter arrived."

This winter's litany of modern day plague and pestilence contines — death by freezing, babies starving without milk in rural homes at the end of impassable roads, some 50,000 migrants broke because 95 per cent of Florida's winter vegetable crop was blackened by frost, Buffalo hospitals running out of food because grocery trucks can't get through the snow.

To the rescue, at times, is the Federal Disaster Assistance Administration (FDAA), which provides funds and manpower when the President declares a state eligible for disaster or emergency relief.

Carter signed eight such declarations — unprecedented both for the conditions and for the time of year — in his first working days in the White House. Upstate New York, Virginia, Maryland and Florida were declared national disaster areas and New York, Pennsylvania, Indiana and Ohio were designated in a state of emergency. Decisions are pending in requests from New Jersey and Michigan.

What, precisely, is done for these disaster and emergency areas? It varies with each case.

"There is no such thing as 'typical' in the disaster game," said FDAA spokesman R. B. Blair. This is the first time, for example, that paralyzing storms have been severe enough to call for snow emergency declarations and the first time for disaster delcarations to pay benefits to unemployed Florida migrants or Virginia and Maryland fishermen who can't work the frozen Chesapeake Bay.

Although the FDAA turns down a third of all requests, some people think the FDAA largesse is boundless, including a group of imbibers trapped in a Watertown, N.Y., bar for four days when 10-foot drifts sealed the door. As their enforced revelry paled, a newsman stranded in the bar called a senator and said that, since the President had delcared the state in an emergency status they needed help. First, the emergency equipment to plow them out and, second, federal relief to pay the bar tab.

The federal disaster relief laws cover a multitude of natural disasters: earthquakes, hurricanes, severe thunderstorms, ice storms, floods, tornadoes, wind-driven waters, landslides, snowstorms, mudslides, droughts, fires, explosions, even tsunamis (tidal waves caused by earthquakes).

But this year's drastic energy shortage does not fit into the law. "The President may sign some energy relief bill through the energy agencies, but it just doesn't come under our jurisdiction," Blair said.

Disaster relief helps alleviate the damage, loss, hardship or suffering caused by damage of such magnitude to warrant major federal assistance. Federal emergency assistance is supplied to supplement state and local efforts to save lives and protect property, public health and safety or to avert or lessen the threat of disaster.

Here is how the FDAA worked in two states in the crisis of the past two weeks — Florida and New York.

On Thursday, Jan. 27, Florida Gov. Reubin Askew sent a letter to the President — by way of the FDAA — requesting that he declare the frost bitten state a major disaster area.

That day, FDAA regional officers flew to Florida from Atlanta and met with state officials and local groups to assess the destruction and need. Some 50,000 migrant vegetable pickers were without jobs in eight southern counties, with no means of making money and no way to collect unemployment insurance. (Migrant laborers do not qualify for regular state unemployment assistance, nor do self-employed Chesapeake Bay fishermen.)

The FDAA approved the request, passed it on to the President and by noon, Monday, Jan. 31, Carter signed the disaster declaration. FDAA officials in Florida, accustomed to handling hurricane and flood damage, had to gear up for something new — a fast way to get checks to thousands of needy people.

In the half-day left on Monday, they set up a disaster field office in Riviera Beach, Fla. — an information center where broadcasts were made in English and Spanish telling migrants and farmers where to go to get checks, small business loans, or medical help.

Meanwhile, the Washington FDAA office was transferring $12.8 million in relief funds to the Labor Department for checks. The money was based on the approximately 50,000 who would be eligible for such money during the 90-day period it would take before they could harvest new crops. The sum may reach $38 million in the three-month peiod, with migrants getting a minimum of $65 a week.

Tuesday morning, the money went from the Labor Department to the state's unemployment fund in Tallahassee. With FDAA Labor Department set up seven emergency offices to expedite the checks. By 8 a.m. Thursday, when doors opened at the Homestead, Fla., emergency office in South Dade County, thousands of migrants were waiting to file unemployment applications. In two hours, the office processed 1,000 applications, and the line of people continued all day. Back in Tallahassee, they were processing the first checks, and special courier services were delivering them to the emergency centers. Officials anticipate an 11-day turnaround period — those who applied on Thursday will get their checks 11 days from that date.

In the last weekend of January, in Buffalo people froze to death in cars and panic gripped much of western New York, which was in blinding blizzards and wind up to 60 m.p.h. The governor's federal relief request came in Friday, Jan. 28; it was rushed through FDAA and signed by the President the next day.

Boyle must remain in prison, judge says

MEDIA, Pa. (AP) — W.A. "Tony" Boyle, the former United Mine Workers president whose conviction for ordering the killing of a union rival was overturned 10 days ago, must remain behind bars, a judge has ruled.

The 75-year-old Boyle's request to be freed on bond pending a new trial was refused Monday after prosecutor Richard Sprague asked the Pennsylvania Supreme Court to reconsider its order for a new trial.

Boyle, once the ruler of the 200,000-member UMW, showed no reaction to the bail denial, according to officials at Pittsburgh's Western State Penitentiary where he is bedridden, suffering from a heart ailment. He also remains weak from a 1973 suicide attempt when a lethal dose of sleeping pills was pumped from his stomach.

The high court overturned Boyle's April 1974 conviction because of evidence not admitted during his trial. But at Monday's hearing, Sprague argued that those grounds were unfounded because that evidence would not have supported Boyle's case.

Common Pleas Court Judge Francis Cantania, the trial judge who ordered Boyle to serve three life terms, refused bail until the state Supreme Court has an opportunity to review the arguments.

By law, Boyle must be tried again within 180 days of the Supreme Court order, which was dated Jan. 28.

"We do not have a final decision from the Supreme Court. What we have ere is a person who has been convicted of three first-degree murders. This application for bail is premature," said Sprague, the special prosecutor who convinced a jury that Boyle arranged the 1969 murders of Joseph "Jock" Yablonski, his wife and his daughter.

Speed bills begin ascent

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Two bills favoring those who want to break Texas' highway speed limit were approved Monday by the Senate State Affairs Committee.

By a vote of 9-1, the committee approved a bill that would protect motorists from auto insurance surcharges if they get arrested driving 55 to 70 miles per hour.

The bill, by Sen. Bill Moore, D-Bryan, committee chairman, also would prevent tickets for 55 to 70 mph driving from being used in suspending a motorist's license.

David Irons, a spokesman for the insurance industry, said they were not opposing the plan to withhold surcharges. "Naturally," Irons said later, "we are not taking any position on driving over 55 mph, because that is against the law."

The committee also approved for floor debate a bill by Sen. Ray Farabee, D-Wichita Falls, that would give Emergency Medical Service (EMS) vehicles and those for blood banks and tissue banks the same right to exceed speed limits as fire and police emergency vehicles.

Johnson witness beat up

CORPUS CHRISTI, Tex. (AP) — A man apparently thought to have information about missing Iowa Park grain dealer Robert M. Johnson was "worked over" and hospitalized Monday night, according to Port Aransas Constable Ben Cash.

Cash said the man, who was not identified, was taken to an area hospital for observation and possible treatment for internal injuries.

The beating, Cash said, came only hours after there were news stories telling that an unidentified man had seen Johnson after he reportedly fell overboard in the Gulf of Mexico Jan. 3.

Cash said he did not know who was involved in the beating incident.

Local, state and federal authorities have been investigating the disappearance of Johnson and have been looking into records of his grain firms at Iowa Park and Wichita Falls.

The unidentified man had reportedly told officers he saw Johnson alive in South Texas after the reported drowning and that Johnson told him the drowning was faked.

Air conditioning improves play

Few players recognize how much the play of the cards owes to air conditioning. We are ready to applaud the Coup but not the cool.

Today's hand was played many years ago, when air conditioning in the home was almost unkown. If you played bridge during the summer, you kept the windows open and the fans going.

Since the cards often blew off the table you had to play a high card while it was still in sight. That's why South played the jack of diamonds from dummy at the first trick.

East covered with the queen of diamonds, and South won with the ace. And now South had to lose two clubs and a diamond. Down one.

Declarer should play low from dummy at the first trick and win the ace. He ruffs a spade, returns with a trump, ruffs his other spade, cashes the ace of clubs and gives up a club.

NO SAFE RETURN

If West wins the third round of clubs, he can lead only black cards, and dummy ruffs while South sheds the losing diamond. If East wins the third club, he can return a diamond, but this gives dummy a free finesse — if dummy still has the jack of diamonds.

If the diamond finesse is going to work at the first trick, it will work later. Time enough to play the jack of diamonds if West can win a club and lead another diamond through dummy.

DAILY QUESTION

Partner opens with one spade, and the next player pases. You hold: S-A852; H-3; D-Q10962; C-KJ10. What dou you say?

ANSWER: Bid three spades. This shows strong spade support with 13 to 16 points. You have 10 points in high cards and should count 3 points for the singleton when accompanied by four or more trumps.

Youthful prison under way

BASTROP, Tex. (AP) — A new federal prison aimed at youthful offenders in the 18-to-20 range is being built in this Central Texas city, becoming the fifth federal lockup in the state.

Federal Bureau of Prisons officials said Monday that the new prison will house from 400 to 500 inmates and will cost about $12 million.

"It will not house hardened criminals," said Charles Hughes, regional director of the FBP's south central region.

Hughes said the prison is scheduled to open by 1978 and has encountered no opposition from county or city residents or officials.

Private enterprise

A new Center for Education and Research in Free Enterprise has been established at Texas A&M University.

This undoubtedly is one of the most significant and most far-reaching developments of the still young year. It will be hailed with gratitude by all those Americans who yet believe in and appreciate the system of private enterprise which has made this nation great.

The Association of Former Students and the Texas A&M University Development Foundation are helping to fund creation of the center with an initial gift of $300,000. Additional financing will come from those groups and other outside private sources. No request will be made for state funding.

In proposing the new center to university regents, Texas A&M officials cited reports that 75 per cent of the nation's college students do not take a single course in economics and that half of the nation's 60,000 high school social studies teachers have no formal training in economics.

"The danger is that a nation of economic illiterates may, through the political process, unwittingly damage the economic system upon which the material welfare of the nation depends," the university officials explained.

This most certainly is reason enough for launching such a program of education and research. In fact, it is long overdue, but it isn't too late to help in overcoming a critical situation.

Various institutions and organizations, including the West Texas Chamber of Commerce, long have been concerned about this very thing, and they doubtless are delighted at news of the A&M development. The benefits to be derived from the new center will be significant and far-reaching.

The center, according to Dr. John C. Calhoun Jr., A&M's vice president for academic affairs, will be administratively attached to the College of Liberal Arts and headquartered with the Department of Economics.

The education division will be emphasized in initial activities, including a pre-college program to assist Texas public schools meet legislative requirenents to provide instruction in the free enterprise system, a college program to increase study of the free enterprise system, and continuing education to include public conferences, short courses and a newsletter. The center's other division has to do with research.

The acute shortage of personnel qualified to teach free enterprise courses in the public schools, along with the fact that few if any text books are available for use at the high school level have been particularly distressing to those persons and groups interested in private enterprise. The center should be helpful on both counts as its program, as stated, becomes effective.

Sponsors of the new center at Texas A&M merit widespread commendation for their interest and effort in this particular endeavor of nationwide importance. A snappy salute is sent their way by advocates of private enterprise everywhere.

No postage hike

Mighty good news, isn't it, that the U.S. Postal Service has decided against raising postal rates any time this year?

And it all came about because of a rare $36.3 million surplus in a period of less than two months. The surplus was achieved from Oct. 9 to Dec. 3 of last year. It compared with a $289 million loss during the same period of 1975.

The Postal Service now expects to end the present fiscal year next Sept. 30 with a 12-month deficit of less than $500 million. The deficit for the previous fiscal year was $1.1 billion.

This is great — as is the fact that there will be no increase in the cost of a 13-cent stamp in 1977.

Art turns on heat with warm thoughts

WASHINGTON — It isn't easy to keep warm when the President asks everybody to keep the thermostat down to 65 in the daytime and 55 at night. A psychiatrist friend of mine insists, though, that a lot of it is in the mind, and if you can think "warm" thoughts it will help you keep warm.

I'm not certain if he's correct or not, but I'm willing to make my small contribution to the energy crisis by giving you some examples of warm thoughts to think about.

Zelda walked along the beach. It wasn't easy because the hot sand almost burned the soles of her feet. She found a spot under the cove out of sight of the other sunbathers. After spreading out her beach blanket she started to put suntan oil on her brown skin. Then she took off the top of her bikini and lay down on the red towel on her stomach. The rays of the sun gently engulfed her body as she started to doze off. Suddenly, a tall bronzed man appeared and cast a shadow over her.

"Is this spot taken?" he asked with a mischievous grin.

Zelda pretended she was annoyed, but in fact she was happy to have company. The man spread out his towel next to her.

"Would you like some suntan lotion?" she asked him. "The sun is awfully hot."

"No," he said. "I'm used to the sun. And if I get too hot I can always go into the clear blue water."

Zelda thought to herself, "I hope we don't get into a heated discussion over where we can go for dinner."

The Johnsons sat down to dinner. Mr. Johnson was at the head of the table. His wife brought in a steaming bowl of oyster stew and placed it in front of him. He helped himself to some in his plate and then passed the bowl around the table.

"Well," said Mr. Johnson, "what have your children been up to today?"

"I got three A's on my report card," Gerald, his older son, said, "and I made the honor list."

A warm feeling of pride went through Mr. Johnson, as well as his wife.

"Father," said William, his second son, "I have decided to become a doctor. But have no fear. I intend to work my way through college."

Mr. Johnson glowed.

Melissa, his daughter, chimed in, "I was going out tonight with George, but I decided to stay in instead and read the National Geographic. It has a very interesting article on Tahiti, where the temperature rarely drops below 70 and never goes over 85."

"That's nice," said Mr. Johnson as he served himself a slice of sizzling corn bread with melted butter."

"Don't eat too much," Mrs. Johnson warned, "because for dessert Little Ann has a surprise for us."

"And what is the surprise?" Mr. Johnson asked as his face flushed in contentment.

Little Ann said, "I'm going to make everyone flaming Cherries Jubilee."

"Hot dog!" said Gerald.

When Little Ann served her dessert everyone applauded her efforts warmly.

Renata knew she shouldn't be there. She sat next to the fireplace as Paul threw another log on the fire. The flames shot up, lighting her beautiful face. Paul handed her a glass of brandy which she took nervously. His eyes burned into hers as he said, "Why don't you take off your coat?"

"I should be going home," Renata said. "It's awfully late."

Paul sat down next to her on the cushion and gazed into the red-hot embers. "You know you don't want to go."

Renata blushed, and a strange heat overwhelmed her.

"I guess I don't," she said, touching Paul gently on the cheek. He looked at her and then slowly, gently but forcefully, took her into his arms. The crackling of the logs in the room was the only sound that could be heard except for an occasional sigh.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Gerald Ford's farewell address

By JACK ANDERSON and LES WHITTEN

WASHINGTON — This is the story of an historic speech that was never made — the farewell address to the nation of its 38th president, Gerald Ford.

As he approached the end of his presidency, Ford remembered the eloquence of Harry Truman and Dwight Eisenhower when they bid good-bye to their countrymen. Ford felt he, too, had a legacy to leave.

He wanted to make a lasting impression on the nation, to leave a watchword for the future, like Eisenhower's parting warning about the military-industrial complex.

Ford quietly put his speechwriters to work on a farewell message, and they made an extra effort to catch the mood of the retiring president. The drafts were submitted to Ford's old friend and wordsmith, Robert Hartmann.

At times, Ford thought he would like to deliver his farewell to his beloved House of Representatives, where he served for 24 years. Other times, he favored a more informal fireside chat. In the end, he decided a farewell appearance would be too pretentious. It was characteristic of Jerry Ford that he chose to depart Washington as simply as possible.

The message he wanted to leave was being packed into boxes of confidential papers, which hold the written record of the Ford administration. But we were able to obtain two drafts of the unspoken farewell address. One was written by Patrick Butler, the other by George Denison. Both contain the parting advice that Ford wanted his countrymen to remember.

He would have liked to have told all Americans, as Butler phrased it: "In a nation as populous and diverse as ours, a nation whose borders spread a continent wide, it is unwise perhaps to ask for a return to simpler times.

"But we can ask for — we can demand — less regimentation, less uniformity, less regulation of our daily lives. We can demand to be treated with the respect and the dignity that is our birthright as American citizens ...

"If my presidency meant nothing else in the scheme of things, let it be said that may administration took the first steps on a different path that leads not to bigger government but to better government."

Denison's draft put the same message even more forcefully: "Government has spent too much time and far too much money answering the demands of the pressure groups at the expense of the individual," he would have had the departing president say. "In our complex and collectivized society, the individual — the forgotten American — has been shunted aside, his wants unmet, his goals unfulfilled ...

"If we are to avoid economic collapse, we must stop the runaway growth of government. We must stop living beyond our means, as too many of our political leaders irresponsibly give in to demands for more and more spending — without concern for the future ...

"We can no longer afford to be misled by the trusty bromide that eliminating bureaucratic waste and overlapping programs will cure all ... It is time for the American people to look their government straight in the eye and say, '"No more! We will make the decisions about our lives. You protect us from foreign aggressors and domestic criminals and give us a stable currency and courts of law, and we'll do the rest.'" The words were put together by the speechwriters, but the thoughts are Gerald Ford's. He was too modest to make a big show of his farewell ideas. But down deep in his heart, he wanted Americans to remember this last message. It would be a shame if they never got a chance to read it.

CALIFANO'S OLD HAT: As the nation's new overlord of health, education and welfare, Joseph Califano is supposed to be the voice of the voiceless, the spokesman for the underprivileged. Not long ago, he was a spokesman for the oil interests, which have sometimes oppressed the underprivileged.

In a Feb. 5, 1976, column, we described his lobbying for the small refiners. They are "small," that is, by the billion-dollar standards of Big Oil. He fought for a loophole that benefitted such affluent oil enterprises as Charter, Pennzoil, Witco and Husky, all with sales far above the $100 million mark.

Despite Califano's efforts, the beneficial loophole was finally closed by Congress last year. But Califano fought to the end to keep it open. We have now obtained some private correspondence, which reveals how vigorously he fought.

Califano tried to carry the battle to the doorsteps of the Federal Energy Administration. He sought an audience with Deputy Administrator John Hill, who completely ignored Califano's requests for a meeting.

Red with anger over the rebuff, Califano wrote Hill a sizzling letter. "I have spent many years in government service. I do not believe I ever treated individual citizens, or lawyers representing them, as shabbily as you have chosen to treat me and the small refiners I represent," complained Califano.

Hill told us that Califano wanted special treatment that no lobbyist should receive. The loophole, Hill explained, would have given Califano's clients an $8 to $10 a barrel advantage over other refiners in their areas.

Footnote: In his new role at the Health, Education and Welfare Department, Califano refused to discuss the letter. The cabinet officer referred us to a former law partner who confirmed the details of the refiners' case.

NICK THIMMESCH

McGovern keeps wary eye on Carter administration

Nick Thimmesch

WASHINGTON — Sen. George McGovern is satisfied that the Democrats now dominate this government, but he keeps a wary populist's eye on the Carter administration and presses his own advanced thinking as vigorously as ever.

The celebrated 1972 peace candidate has always been able to show spirit. "The McGovern campaigners of '72 were the mine-sweepers who cleared the way for the advancing Democratic forces of '76," he declared last fall, in summoning military language for an audience of political scientists.

The current Carter honeymoon causes most people to rein in critical remarks and wait. In McGovern's case, this means reining in most, but not all, criticism.

He did say it was "inevitable" that the Carter Cabinet "represents no real break with the past," is composed mostly of advocates of the cold war and "could have been picked by Nelson Rockefeller, Lyndon Johnson or, for the most part, even by Richard Nixon."

And he is concerned that Defense Secretary Harold Brown might encourage development and deployment of cruise missiles, B-1 bombers and nuclear carriers, and "God knows what else..."

McGovern wants the administration to negotiate a Panama Canal treaty, recognize Vietnam and begin reconciliation with Cuba — all in 1977. He also favors humanitarian economic aid to Vietnam, which "would improve our standing in the world after we unloaded as much destruction as we did.

"Nixon and Kissinger proposed $3.25 billion aid to North Vietnam in January, 1973," he recalled. "The Vietnamese know they are not going to get that kind of money. We should provide a modest amount in concert with other countries like Japan which made money off the Vietnamese war."

McGovern says the United States should begin to withdraw forces from the 38th parallel in South Korea, and gradually withdraw, but guarantee by treaty air and naval support for the South Koreans.

As fifth-ranked member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, McGovern wants the United States to continue its Middle East diplomacy, working to get the Arab states to extend full recognition of Israel, for 'Israel to withdraw to its 1967 borders and for the Palestinians to be given an independent state. McGovern, like former Sen. J.W. Fulbright, favors a security treaty to be negotiated between the United States and Israel, to formalize the U.S. commitment, but isn't sure the Israelis would like such an arrangement.

The record shows that McGovern has always voted against decontrolling prices on natural gas, but now he is willing to bend. "Maybe we ought to move the price up a little from where it is now," he explains, "but I would hate to see a complete removal of all restraints."

He makes it clear he is unhappy with the 1977 farm bill which he claims sets "target prices" for wheat and corn that are too low. "We should commit ourselves to figures that would approximate the cost of production."

Any thoughts that McGovern no longer uses fiery rhetoric are dispelled by his attack on a reported "scheme" to get control of $50 million of farmland. The plan, by a Chicago bank and Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner and Smith, is, according to McGovern, "nothing more than a high-handed attack on the basic premise of the family farm system...a cynical scheme by corporate interests..."

Indeed, McGovern's inborn prairieland wariness of power ranges across the board. Several months back, he wryly noted that "many of us" admired the strong presidencies of Roosevelt and Kennedy, but "advocated a restrained presidency after Nixon. Suddenly we were sure it was time to limit executive power and strengthen the legislative branch. Coincidentally and conveniently, the Congress was safely Democratic."

There are moments, however, when McGovern can become downright benign. He told me, for example, "I think we made a mistake in turning down (Judge) Haynsworth for the Supreme Court." McGovern also noted that "Republicans in the Senate aren't as partisan as they once were" and "are more subdued than in the Dirksen days."

Senators from heartland states must be careful not to let homefolks get the notion that their man in Washington has gone "big shot" with interests in foreign relations, urban problems, or whatever. So McGovern keeps very active in his No. 3 spot on the Agriculture Committee, is currently pushing hard for drought relief for South Dakota and for a $400 million project to complete the Oahe Irrigation Project.

"Once it was a problem for senators from my kind of state to have the interest I have in foreign policy," he says, "but people have seen in recent years that what goes on in little faraway places like Korea and Vietnam can change the whole course of their lives.

"I think people in South Dakota would be disappointed if I got off the Foreign Relations Committee. This powerful combination of being senior there and next in line to be chairman of Agriculture is the same one Hubert Humphrey and Karl Mundt had for many years. It's in the Borah, George Norris, La follette tradition. Not a bad combination at all."

Briscoe highway bill goes to House today

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Gov. Dolph Briscoe's plan to shunt $561.2 million in general tax dollars to highway construction goes before the House today for that chamber's first big debate of the session.

While the bill is expected to pass, representatives were far from unanimous in agreeing with Briscoe that it should have an "emergency priority."

The measure amounts to a drain on general revenue, dedicating a sizeable chunk of it to highways. Dedication of funds takes away the legislature's discretion over their expenditure. General revenue is used for such basic expenditures as state universities, mental hospitals and regulatory agencies.

Speaker Bill Clayton came out for Briscoe's bill late last week, giving it a foot up in the House.

The House Study Group met Monday afternoon to hear a staff report on the impact of the bill.

What they heard was this: There isn't enough money available to pass the Legislative Budget Board's version of the general appropriation bill, plus Briscoe's public school finance bill, plus the highway bill.

"You'll fall short by $121 million," said staff member Darrell Hancock.

GM has best year

DETROIT (AP) — General Motors Corp., in a dramatic turnaround from a two-year slump, turned in its best financial performance in history last year with net profits of $2.9 billion on sales of $47.2 billion.

Earnings reported Monday by the world's largest auto maker exceeded by $700 million the firm's combined profits for 1974-75, when the nation's car industry was mired in a severe recession. Sales topped the old record of $35.8 billion set in 1973 by 32 per cent.

GM's 1976 profits, equal to $10.08 per share, were more than double the $1.25 billion, or $4.32 a share, earned in 1975, and surpassed by a wide mark the previous earnings record of $2.4 billion set in 1973.

Dollar sales in 1975 were $35.7 billion.

GM also posted record fourth-quarter profits of $797 million, or $2.77 a share, up 29 per cent from $618 million, or $2.14 a share, in 1975. The old quarterly record of $667 million was set in 1972.

Sales in the final quarter were $13.1 billion, a record for any quarter and up from $10.5 billion in the same 1975 period.

Following a banner year for the industry in 1973, sales and profits plummeted in 1974 because of the energy crisis and remained anemic in 1975 due to the economic recession. GM profits in 1974 fell to $950 million, its poorest showing for a nonstrike year since 1961.

Ford Motor Co. and Chrysler Corp. also are expected to post record profits when they release their year-end results later this month.

Financial analysts predict Ford will hit the $1 billion mark — three times its 1975 profits — for the first time in its history, despite a four-week nationwide strike by the United Auto Workers last fall.

Attorneys to appeal aliens' children ruling

By GREG THOMPSON

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Attorneys for 12 children of illegal aliens say they will go to the U.S. Supreme Court, if necessary, to challenge a law barring the Houston children from attending Texas schools for free.

State District Court Judge James R. Meyers ruled here Monday that children of illegal aliens cannot attend Texas schools without paying tuition.

"This is only the beginning," said attorney Alfred Saenz Jr. "We are prepared for a very long and drawn out legal battle."

Saenz and Peter Williamson said they will file an appeal within 30 days with the state's high court and are prepared to take their battle to the U.S. Supreme Court.

Meyers' ruling, which upheld a state statute passed by the 1975 legislature, came after a suit by the children, ages 5 to 13, who alleged they were denied enrollment to Houston public schools unless they paid $90 a month tuition.

"I think you have a most interesting proposition," Judge Meyers told lawyers for both sides in his brief verbal statement. "But I think the statute is constitutional. That's all there is to it at this time."

The refusal of the Houston school system to permit the children to attend school free was made after the State Board of Education held on Sept. 11 that alien children couldn't attend Texas schools without paying tuition.

Asst. Atty. Gen. Suzan Thornton argued that Texas schools cannot afford to provide free education to all illegal alien children.

"It would virtually destroy the education we provide for our citizens and aliens that are legally admitted to the state," Mrs. Thornton said. "We can't afford it, we can't pay for it."

Attorney Kelly Frels, representing Houston school officials, said it would cost taxpayers more than $8 million to pay for the education of the estimated 5,000 alien children in the Houston district.

After Meyers' ruling, Saenz said, "My first reaction is that it is very unfortunate we could not get some temporary relief...Those children must remain out of school. I have to go back and see those children on the streets...that is very disappointing."

Williamson argued that the children were brought to Texas by their parents, who pay Social Security, sales and property taxes. "Those children are here and need to be educated," he said.

"There are children who need to go to school whether their parents can afford it or not," Williamson added.

The Houston attorney said the aliens are remaining in the U.S. since, "The Immigration Service cannot or in some cases is not or will not expell them."

Bomb-designing student turns down governments

PRINCETON, N.J. (AP) — Two foreign governments have been turned down by a Princeton University student whom they asked to supply them with information from his blueprint for making an atomic bomb.

John A. Phillips, 21, of New Haven, Conn., said Monday that he has been contacted by the Pakistani and French embassies in Washington, D.C., in the past month. He said he refused both requests.

Phillips, who wrote a 34-page term paper last spring describing construction of an atomic weapon, said he informed the CIA of the Pakistani request for a copy of the paper.

The French request was for part of his research, he said.

Phillips said last year that he designed the small atomic weapon to show that anyone with a basic understanding of physics could build a bomb. Nearly all the information and materials for such a device are available to the public, he said.

Phillips also said he informed Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., a member of the Senate subcommittee on defense appropriations, of the approach from the Pakistanis.

Proxmire said the incident "dramatized the peril of nuclear proliferation" and demonstrated how desperate foreign countries are to obtain nuclear arms capability.

Proxmire said he thought Pakistan approached Phillips because it wants to develop nuclear technology to be competitive with India, its Asian neighbor. India already has nuclear capability.

A spokesman for the Pakistani Embassy confirmed the approach to Phillips. But Iqvas Butt, a Pakistani information minister, said there was "nothing sinister or underhanded" about it.

Butt said Phillips had been contacted by an embassy official who was collecting information on nuclear energy. He said the official had been referred to Phillips by the U.S. Energy Research and Development Administration.

"We are not interested in the bomb," Butt said. "We have a nuclear energy program for peaceful uses and we collect public information that may be helpful."

'Killer Watt' new energy-saver

The Los Angeles Times

LOS ANGELES — "We want to snuff out a lot of watts."

That, says Alan Fried, president of Johnson Industries here, is why he named his new product "Killer Watt." Another finalist in the name derby was "Watt Not."

What's behind Fried's preoccupation with watts is an adapter that converts any incandescent lamp or fixture in your house to an energy-saving fluorescent one, such as those you find in commercial buildings and offices. Instead of a conventional light bulb, you simply screw this unit into the socket.

Fried claims — and utility officials agree — that fluorescent lighting uses only half the electricity of an equivalent amount of incandescent lighting.

"Given my job, I feel I would be remiss if I didn't use at least some of these in my home," comments Dane Hooper, coordinator of the Los Angeles Department of Water and Power's Energy Conservation Center, of the Killer Watt.

Pacific Gas and Electric Co., is about "90 per cent certain" to include the unit in a special catalogue of energy-saving devices for the home that it distributes to its customers, according to a spokesman for the utility.

The only hitch is the cost. The combination of Fried's basic adapter and one of the circle-shaped fluorescent bulbs it uses (the bulbs are made by General Electric Co.) costs $14.99. The conventional 60-watt or 75-watt bulb that it replaces lists for 55 cents.

Southern California Edison Co. estimates that lighting accounts for about 10 per cent of the average Southland homeowner's electric bill. If all the lights were switched from conventional incandescent bulbs to fluorescents, the homeowner would thus save about 50 per cent on his lighting bill, or about 5 per cent on his total electric bill, an Edison official says.

There are other savings — both in money and in frayed nerves when it seems that every light bulb in the house decides to burn out at the same time and there isn't a spare to be found.

The lifetime of the average incandescent bulb is between 750 and 1,000 hours, according to GE's San Francisco regional engineer, Paul Schmidt. The circline fluorescent bulbs will last between 10,000 and 12,000 hours. That means that burning an average of four hours a night, a conventional bulb will last six months vs. some eight years for the fluorescent.

Despite those advantages, only about 5 per cent of home lighting is currently fluorescent, says Schmidt. The problem has been that heretofore, special fixtures were required and unless the builder provided for them when he constructed the house, use of fluorescents meant rewiring and other modifications.

Killer Watt is essentially "a way you can retrofit to get fluorescents into existing homes," the Ge engineer notes.

Johnson Industries is a five-year-old lamp manufacturing company that did about $5 million in business last year, according to Fried. The company's first fluorescent product was a table lamp designed with a permanent adapter so it would take only the circle-shaped fluorescent bulb.

However, says Fried, "I don't care how concerned they are about energy, it was clear that the public was not going to run out and buy all new lamps." So Johnson engineer Jack Miller invented the Killer Watt adapter that turns conventional lamps into fluorescent ones.

The privately held company currently makes about 500 Killer Watts a day in two models. In addition to the basic unit, there is one which uses two circline bulbs, and which is about equivalent to a 125 watt conventional bulb. Including bulbs, the double unit lists for $19.99.

Fried says the company began national distribution of Killer Watt last week. It is included in the latest Montgomery Ward catalogue along with three of Johnson's fluorescent table lamp models. Fried says he originally expected to sell about $1 million worth of the adapters this year, but he now thinks it may be closer to $2 million worth.

With an annual market of more than one billion conventional light bulbs at stake, you might think a manufacturer like G.E. would discourage the idea of a massive shift to fluorescent lighting in the house.

Not so, says Schmidt. "We're encouraging it because we want to save energy."

Objects sticking up from the partly buried structure of the Terraset School in Reston, Va., are for air intake and exhaust. Terraset will be the first fully solar-heated and solar-cooled school in the nation.

Sun to shine on Virginia school

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — If all goes according to schedule, more than 900 children will begin classes soon in the nation's first 100 per cent solar-heated and cooled school, located inside a hill in the new town of Reston, Va.

"This technology really started with the cavemen. We got away from it when energy was so cheap. Now we're going back," said Fairfax County's school construction director, Alton C. Hlavin, standing at the crest of the hill, directly above a classroom buried in the earth beneath him.

In its most fundamental terms, Hlavin explained, the project simply represents a return to using the natural heat-insulating properties of the soil and the warming power of the sun to conserve energy.

To do that, school builders essentially bulldozed off the top of the hill, poured a concrete shell for the school, then put the hill back again, as if it were a hat on the school's roof.

Then, with a $865,000 grant from a university in Saudi Arabia, they designed an elaborate system for heating and cooling the school with solar energy, using a computer and 4,860 glass solar collectors to capture the sun's heat.

The project had its origins during the winter of 1973-74, with the energy crisis and the Arab oil embargo. Hlavin and his staff were seeking ways to save energy and eventually they hit upon the idea of putting a school underground and using the sun to heat and cool it.

"At first we named it the 'underground school,'" Hlavin said, "but that sounds kind of gloomy. Over drinks at lunch one day, we came up with the name 'Terraset,' meaning set in the earth."

Initially, Hlavin applied to the National Science Foundation for a grant to heat the school with solar energy, but he was turned down. A few weeks later an agent who turned out to be a Saudi representative approached him and asked if he'd be interested in money from a private source.

Hlavin said yes, and the deal was later sealed between the Fairfax County schools and Saudi Arabia's University of Petroleum and Minerals.

Under the agreement, the Saudis are entitled to the benefit of any technological discoveries and have the right to visit the school. Their interest in the project, Hlavin explained, stems from the fact that their oil resources, vast as they are, are limited and will eventually run out. Sunlight, which they also have in abundance, will not.

Opening of the school awaits installation of a sidewalk, delayed by the cold weather.

Over a sunken courtyard at the front entrance to the building stood a 13,000-square-foot iron rack where the solar collectors will be installed.

The solar system will operate via 4,822 feet of tubing through which thousands of gallons of water being warmed directly by the sun's rays and indirectly by reflectors will be pumped.

Computers will regulate the temperature between 180 and 240 degrees — the system is pressurized, enabling the water to reach temperatures hotter than the 212-degree Fahrenheit boiling point.

Passing from the solar collectors, the water flows into two 2,500-gallon storage tanks and from there — if it is being used for heating purposes — to heat the water in the school's hot-water heating system.

If it is being used to cool the building, the hot water — at 240 degrees — is cooled through a process of compression, condensation and absorption that brings it down to a temperature of 42 degrees. It is then circulated through coils, and fans blow the air past the coils, thereby cooling the building.

As a safeguard against sunless days, there are three 10,000 gallon insulated storage tanks that can hold water without the temperature changing more than 1 degree a day, plus a backup electric boiler system that Hlavin estimates will be used no more than two days a year.

In a normal Fairfax County school the size of Terraset, heating costs run about $40,000 a year, Hlavin said.

At Terraset, the costs will be about $10,000, and most of that will be to run pumps and fans, he said.

The building itself is completely earth covered on top and on one side, leaving three sides with windows from which children can look out on the hillside.

Inside there are offices, a library, gymnasium, cafeteria and four circular "pods," each of which can be divided up into eight pie-shaped classrooms. The earth covering on top ranges from 2 to 8 feet thick and eventually will be landscaped and used as a play area.

Since Fairfax County first announced plans to build Terraset—at a cost of $2.7 million — more than two years ago, officials have had about 400 requests for information about the school, ranging from the Israeli Department of Agriculture to education officials in Sweden and Denmark.

Closer to home, there are some skeptics.

Around the state of Virginia, when Hlavin attends meetings of fellow school constructin officials, there is a stock question.

"Have you gone crazy up there in Fairfax? Are you going to bury all your schools?"

No, Hlavin usually answers. But I do hope we're going to learn something from Terraset."

Winter of '77: bitter cold linked to changing sea

Copley News Service

In February and March of 1975, scientists from the Scripps Institution of Oceanography, La Jolla, Calif., observed the onset of an El Nino, a warm ocean current that periodically sweeps up the coast of Chile and Peru.

In August of 1976, other scientists at Scripps began to note that the waters of the north-central Pacific Ocean were abnormally cold.

Although they didn't realize it at the time, they may have been witnessing the birth of the Great Winter Storm of 1977, the worst to beset the nation, at least in this century.

The exact anatomy of the storm is still not fully understood, but the large-scale patterns that spawned it now seem to be emerging.

In fact, the pattern was clear enough that Dr. Jerome Namias, a research meteorologist at Scripps and former chief of the National Weather Service's Extended Forecast Division, predicted in December that the Midwest and Eastern portions of the nation were in for their worst winter in maybe 20 years.

Events have shown his prediction was understated.

Now, Namias and others at Scripps are beginning to put together the story of the birth, development and progress of the storm.

Since 1971, they pointed out, the winter season has been marked by a large pool of warm water in the north-central Pacific and a large pool of cold water lying off the coast of western North America.

This condition, they said, has allowed the general atmospheric circulation to progress across the United States in a gentle undulating pattern. The weather usually slips into the national scene between Washington and Oregon, makes a couple of slow bumps and grinds across the nation and then exits out into the Atlantic.

This year was different. The nation got a real show-stopper.

What happened? For one thing, the scientists said, the cold and warm pools of water changed places. Why, they don't know.

Nonetheless, the abnormally cold water they first spotted in August became a general feature of the North Pacific by November.

According to Robert Born, a senior computer programmer with the Scripps' North Pacific study program who works with Namias, "it's the first time since 1947 that the whole North Pacific has been colder than usual."

In the meantime, the cold water along the coast had been replaced by a wedge of warmer tropical water pushing up from the south.

By November, this wedge and the warm, high-pressure air associated with it had extended its influence northward into southern Alaska.

Whether these conditions are associated with the 1975 El Nino condition is not really known.

However, Dr. William C. Patzert, a Scripps oceanographer who observed El Nino, believes there might be a connection.

El Ninos have been known to be associated with other large-scale oceanic and atmospheric changes over the years.

Patzert noted that in contrast to Namias' unusually cold North Pacific waters that the equatorial waters of the Pacific have been warmer than usual.

It's very possible, he said, that "much of the unusual winter is not unrelated to El Nino."

Whether this is true or not, the situation remains: the North Pacific is dominated by unusually cold water and a low-pressure area while the coastal waters are warmer and marked by high-pressure areas.

The scene was set for the Great Storm of 1977. The normal, storm-laden circulation system crossed the cold waters of the North Pacific, ran into the warm water, high-pressure wedge off the North American coast and diverted violently northward to Alaska and the arctic.

From these frigid climes, it plunged downward into the Midwest and South and then moved eastward.

The course of the storm situation can be dramatically outlined by following the jet stream, a high-speed air current that flows along at about 40,000 feet.

Maps at Scripps show the jet stream dipping very low in the North Pacific, then swooping northward into Alaska and northern Canada and then dipping deeply into the heart of the U.S. mainland.

The Scripps analysis, of course, is much more detailed and precise than this overall view.

For example, they successfully predicted that Buffalo would experience much higher precipitation than normal.

To Namias, the central scientific question is "why this pattern, established in the fall, locked into this position throughout the entire fall and subsequent winter?"

Although the answers are not at all clear, Namias suggested it may be because the storm began to feed upon itself.

The sharp contrast between the cold and warm areas of the Pacific, he said in a news report, seemed to accentuate storms and strengthen the northward thrust of the southerly winds.

As the storm turned downward into the Midwest, he said, new storms were generated resulting in more and more snow.

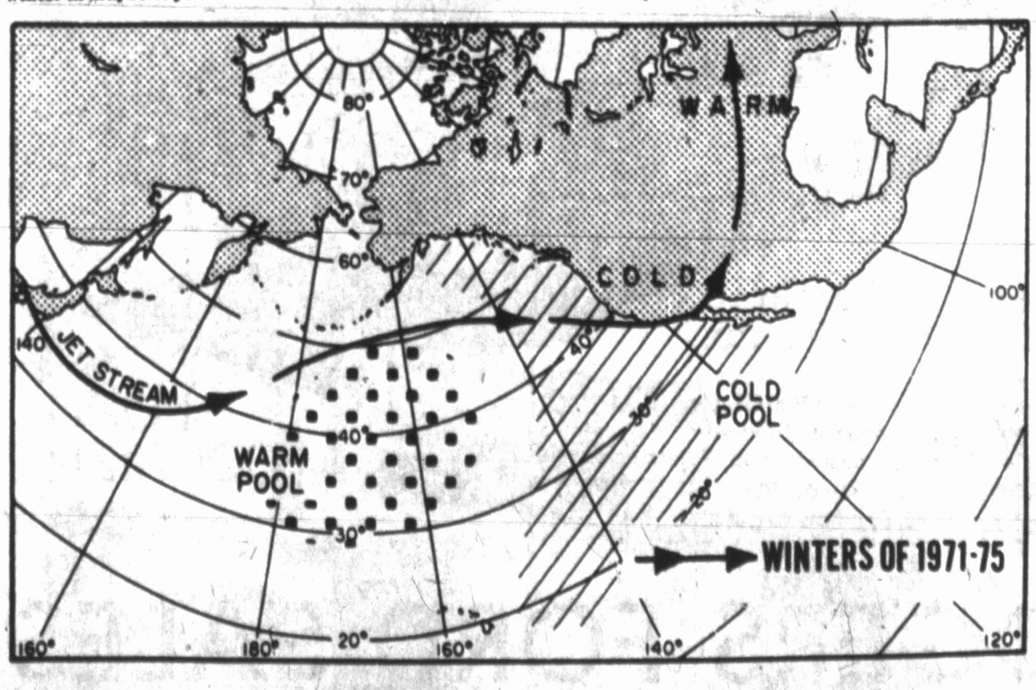
"These eastern snows, in turn, refrigerate the arctic air masses in their southward transit," he said, "and reflect a lot of the sun's heat."

These and other factors, he said, served to reinforce an abnormal situation.

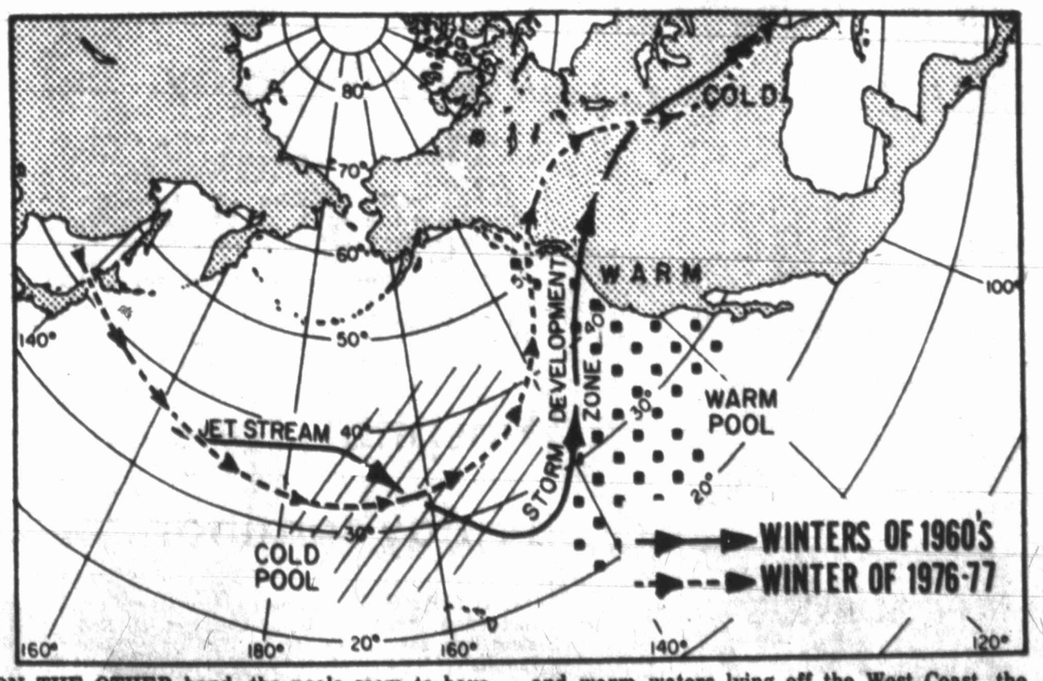
'Blue Marble' wins awards

NEW YORK (AP) — The 1976 Emmy for the outstanding children's television entertainment series tops a list of 13 awards that the show "Big Blue Marble" has won.

The series has also received the Peabody Award from the University of Georgia's School of Journalism, the Silver Screen Award from the U.S. Industrial Film Festival and the Silver Hugo Award from the Chicago International Film Festival.



ACCORDING TO Scripps Institution scientists, during the past five years, conditions with a warm water pool in the central Pacific and cold water near the West Coast have prevailed.



ON THE OTHER hand, the pools seem to have reverted this year to a condition resembling that in the 1960s. With a cold pool residing in the Pacific and warm waters lying off the West Coast, the effect is to deposit frigid winds and moisture in the Northeast.

He came to the Permian Basin in 1920 on a geological surface survey with A. M. Hagan, geologist for Benedum Trees, headquartered in San Angelo. He and Hagan covered an area fron Barnhart to Big Lake, Rankin, Fort Stockton and Grandfalls and alao spent some time in the Yates area before it was discovered.

He joined Sidwell Cable Tool Drilling Co. in 1925 and drilled in the Permian Basin, Texas Panhandle, Oklahoma and Kansas. In 1929, he was employed by Prairie Oil and Gas Co. as division manager of Southern Oklahoma, headquartered in Oklahoma City.

New MC committee to meet Wednesday

A new advisory committee at Midland College is scheduled to study the possibilities of starting a farm-ranch management or agribusiness operations program at the college.

The first meeting of the Farm-Ranch Advisory Committee will be at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday in the faculty lounge of the student center.

Members of the committee are Ray Bailey, manager of Williams Feed and Supply; J. R. Cuffman, vocational agriculture teacher at Midland High School; Dewey Baucum, vocational agriculture teacher at Lee High School; Charles Green, Midland County agricultural agent; R. D. Jones Jr., farmer; Chris Scharbauer, rancher, and Gerald Nobles Jr., farmer-rancher.

Wayne Holcomb, chairman of vocational studies, said the committee has two goals. "First is to determine if there is a need for Midland College to begin a program in farm-ranch management or agribusiness operations to serve this area. Second, if there is a need, would be to provide input as to what courses would be incorporated into the curriculum in order to provide the best-trained graduates," he said.

Two of the vocational programs currently offered at the college, machine technology and petroleum technology, were developed by similar committees, Holcomb said. Several other programs at the college use advisory committees made up of community residents.

If a need for a farm-ranch management program is seen, efforts will be made to offer courses as early as the next fall semester, Holcomb said.

Olympian honored

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Bruce Jenner didn't bite the hand that rewarded him, but he did suggest the Amateur Athletic Union could make improvements and improvements will be necessary to keep the United States competitive in the 1980 Olympics in Russia.

The 27-year-old who won a gold medal last year with a world record performance in the grueling decathlon at Montreal, on Monday became the 47th winner of the AAU's James E. Sullivan Trophy, emblematic of the nation's outstanding amateur athlete of 1976.

Jenner, who scored 8,618 points in the 10-event track and field test, previously had been named the Athlete of the Year by The Associated Press.

In the AAU voting, the 195pound trackman who stands 6foot-2, outdistanced swimmer John Naber and figure skater Dorothy Hamill who also were gold medal winning Olympians. Swimmer Tim Shaw won the award in 1975.

"That gold medal meant more to me than all the money in the world," said Jenner, who now is an ABC sports commentator. "This award is the perfect way to end a career."

After thus acknowledging the Sullivan Trophy, Jenner said he believed the AAU and other organizations must make changes to keep America's athletes in top spots.

Odessa College hands Chaps bad nightmare

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
R-T Sports Writer

ODESSA—A college professor once said that dreams rarely last more than three minutes in duration, but Midland College's cage Chaparrals suffered through a 52 second nightmare in the Odessa College gym Monday night that won't be forgotten for a long time.

The Chaps blew a three-point lead with less than a minute left to lose a heart jerking 82-81 Western Junior College Athletic Conference battle to the Petroplex rival Wranglers. But it was the way they lost that hurt the most.

OC'S TONY Forch cut Midland's three-point lead to 81-80 with a pair of free throws with 52 seconds left in the contest, but still the Chaps looked like they might keep this one from falling into the fire.

That was before the Chaps threw the ball away on a bad pass and had one stolen out of their grasp after a key rebound by Jackson Pace had kept the Wranglers from scoring.

OC turned the second mistake into a game winning basket, but even that turned out to be real work. Former Midland High star Eddie Herring took a shot with seven seconds left, and the Chaps thought they had victory once again. But it turned out that Forch was in good enough position for a back-handed tip-in with five seconds left.

THE CHAPS called a time out to formulate a mircale, but the best laid plans went awry when Herring stole an inbounds pass from Pace to cut off any real threat.

Forch was the real thorn in the Chaps' feathers all the way to the end. He led all scorers with 24 points, including the last four that proved to be the game winners.

It is true that the Chaps looked a bit stale in the first half, and went into the locker room trailing 46-41. However, MC staged a patented surge in the second half behind the gunning of guard Tommy Parks and Pace.

Midland trailed 52-45 early in the second half, but begin to cut the margin before erupting for eight unanswered points with 12:02 left in the game for a 64-60 lead.

PARKS WAS the main spark in the drive and he ended with 22 points, getting fast break layups, tipins and long bombs. Pace countered inside and outside for 21 markers, and reserve Alvin Mayes chipped in with 13, six late in the game.

Forch, however, hit two baskets back-to-back to knot the score at 64, and the game was tied three more times and the lead switched hands 11 more times before the final gun. In all, the game was tied eight times and the lead switched 25 times. It was just a typical WJCAC contest.

Sim Nickerson gave the Chaps an 81-78 lead with 1:20 left in the game to set the stage for the nightmare.

THE LOSS crippled the Chaps' hopes of winning the WJCAC crown as they stayed in second place despite the loss with an 8-5 league mark. The Chaps are 17-7 on the year. Odessa Colelege is now 6-7 in league play and 16-9 on the year. The Wranglers own a 2-1 record against the Chaps this year.

Midland College will have to regroup quickly because they host league leading Western Texas Thursday at 7:30 p.m. on the MC campus. A loss there could drop the Chaps into third place if all the cards fall right or wrong, depending on how you look at it.

Midlanders choose SWC

By PAUL DOMOWITCH

Three Midland football standouts climaxed outstanding scholastic careers Tuesday when they each signed college letters of intent.

Rusty Maroney and Phillip Ward, two of the finest running backs in Midland High history cast their lots with Southwest Conference schools on this, the opening date for signing intent letters with SWC institutions.

Maroney, a 6-1, 200 pounder, who played both fullback and linebacker for Coach Jerry Hopkins' Bulldogs this season, inked with Texas Tech.

Ward, a two-time all-district selection, signed with Grant Teaff and Baylor.

The third Tall City gridder to make a collegiate decision Tuesday was Robert E. Lee quarterback Brad Wright, who signed a letter of intent with New Mexico.

All three had been hotly recruited by a host of colleges, but their decisions came as no great surprise.

Maroney rushed for 743 yards this season, averaging 5.5 yards a carry, and scored eight touchdowns. He also did the punting for the Bulldogs, averaging almost 36 yards a boot.

He played one way for most of the season until a rash of unexpected injuries to the Pack defensive corps towards the end of the campaign forced him to play linebacker as well.

He played superbly there, and his versatility, quickness, and hitting ability is what interested Tech Coach Steve Sloan in the Tall City prospect.

Ward, the fleet-footed 5-11, 170-pound wingback may have been the most sought after college prospect in the district next to Odessa's Darrell Shepard.

He made the all-district squad for the second consecutive year, rushing for 905 yards in 149 carries. His 754 yard district total gave him the 5-4A rushing title ahead of runnerup Shepard.

Ward also scored 54 points during the 1976 season, 48 in 5-4A play to tie him for top scoring honors with San Angelo's Bill Woodard.

During his junior and senior campaigns, the Baylor-bound lad carried the pigskin 271 times for 1,803 yards.

Wright, the talented Lee quarterback, who led Coach Jim Acree's Rebels to the 5-4A title this past season, did not follow his two cross-town rivals to SWC schools, choosing New Mexico instead.

The 6-3, 195-pounder passed at a 51 per cent completion clip in 1976, gathering 488 yards through the airways, tossing seven touchdown passes and throwing only two interceptions.

Wright racked up impressive running statistics as well, lugging the ball for 190 yards and five more TDs.

Other District 5-4A athletes expected to sign are: Tim Orr, Abilene Cooper with Texas Tech; Denny Harris, all-state tackle from Abilene High, Texas Tech; Herman Reece, speedy wide reciever from Abilene High, Texas Tech; Darrell Shepard, all-state quarterback from Odessa High, University of Texas and Tony Jones, wide receiver from Odessa High, Baylor.

Jennings Teel, the 6-2, 190-pound quarterback from Reagan County is also expected to sign with Texas A&M.

Aeros may be forced to give up some pay

HOUSTON (AP) — The World Hockey Association Houston Aeros have two WHA titles and a current five-point lead in the WHA'S Western Division to their credit but they need more-credit.

Despite their continued success on the ice, the Aeros are facing a financial crisis. It was revealed Monday that Aero management may ask the players to either defer or give up one or more paychecks to help meet spiraling costs.

"That's one of the things we are looking at," Aeros general counsel harrison Vickers said. "If we do the proper business planning that we are in the process of doing, then we will remain as solid a franchise as we have always been.

"This is not a desperation move. We're looking ahead for ways to cut overall costs. When we decid on the plan, it will be an across-the-board measure for all our employes and expenditures."

The Aeros are averaging 1,400 fewer fans per game this season than last. The Aeros averaged 9,553 fans per game last season but attendance has declined to 8,038 so far this season. The Aeros' breakeven attandance is 11,000 per game.

"We are discussing everything from the number of clubs we own on up to the amount of playoff bonuses that we pay," Vickers said. "Obviously, the players are a significant part of the cost of our doing business and if there is a way to accentuate savings there with their cooperation, then we are exploring that.

The Aeros' average salary is $75,000, compared to the WHA league average of $85,000 and the National Hockey League's $96,000.

"We feel that if the situation is handled now, we can ensure the operation here for the next 10 years."

Players have refused to discuss the situation. Aeros captain Ted Taylor, after a lengthy team meeting Monday, referred all questions to Aeros management.

"There's no question we have a problem," Aeros coach and general manager Bill Dineen said. "We feel the whole thing right now is to get through the season. We're down to a short period of time now.

Lee girls win again

BIG SPRING—The Midland Lee girls came from behind here Friday night to defeat Big Spring, 63-55, in a District 5-4A matchup.

Lee was behind by six points in the first half before knotting the game at 28 at the half.

Sandra Poole led the charge with 19 points while Debra Kittle added 16. Patty Adams contributed 15 and Schilla McCalister 13 points in the victory.

The Lee defense held Big Spring to six points in the third period. Debra Ledbetter, Jan Carnes, Sheryl Oudems, Cindy Harrison, Liz Hellinghausen and Carla Goodley formed the defensive unit.

Lee hosts Permian Thursday at 6:30 p.m. in the Lee gym.

Midland won the B-team contest also with a 56-32 victory. Melissa Oestman had 14 points, Mary Gavia 12 and Sheryl Jezick had 11.

OU expects bumper crop

By The Associated Press

Today is the day prep footballers can sign letters of intent with Big Eight Conference schools, and it appears Oklahoma University will get almost all of the players it has been seeking.

OU had said it would offer scholarships to 19 Oklahoma prep players, and 14, with 10 of them all-staters, said Monday they would sign with the Sooners.

Only one of the 19 has said he likely will not attend OU. He is Norman running back Bruce Compton, who says he will sign with Texas Tech today. Compton says he has not completely ruled out a Big Eight school, including Oklahoma, however.

One of OU's signees today was to be Richard Turner, a 6-3, 240-pound lineman from Edmond.

Turner said Monday night that: "I will sign with coach (Bobby) Proctor (OU defensive secondary coach) Tuesday morning. My decision has really been made all year. OU has been my favorite all year.

"I like the people. Everyone is nice there. And, they've got great facilities and a good weight program.

"I made my visit there last weekend and met lots of players, and most of the players they are recruiting they were getting. They've won in the past and I think they'll win in the future."

Another top state lineman, Frank Moore of Millwood, said Tuesday he also is headed for Norman. Millwood is a 6-6, 220 pounder.

Besides Turner and Moore, all-staters who had said they would go to Norman were tight ends Bill Becktold of Midwest City and Jim Jones of Turpin, wide receiver Randy Nelson of Woodward, quarterbacks Jay Jimerson of Norman and Steve Whaley of Cleveland, defensive back Byron Paul of Altus and linebackers Clifford Chatman of Clinton, Mike Coast of Bartlesville Sooner and John Higginbotham of Hugo.

However, Oklahoma State matched its counterpart by getting Bart Latham of Bristow. The 6-4, 260-pound offensive lineman graduated from high school at mid-term and already has enrolled at OSU.

Oklahoma State has not said who it is after in the state, but seven of the state's top prospects — three of them allstaters — say they will go to Stillwater.

Known all-staters who said they would sign with OSU were quarterback Tony Bradley of Pauls Valley, tackle Donnie Oates of Tulsa Washington and Latham.

Other top players like tight end Brad Gahm of Broken Arrow, guard John McClanahan of Jenks and linebacker Floyd Rogers of Hollis also were reportedly going to Stillwater.

Scott Dawson, brother of OSU tackle Chris Dawson, was trying to decide between OU and OSU. Scott is a 6-3, 230-pound tackle.

Rebs, Abilene face key contests

By BOB DILLON

Robert E. Lee's Rebels and Abilene, co-leaders in the second half of the District 5-4A basketball race, have key games tonight with the Eagles having the easy road.

Lee plays Big Spring in the Lee Gymnasium while Abilene tries hapless Odessa High in Odessa.

Midland, meanwhile, hits the road again for a date with the San Angelo Central Bobcats and Odessa Permian faces Abilene Cooper with the loser facing possible elimination from the second half race.

The Rebels only beat the Steers, 71-69 in the first round, thanks to a 34-point output by Billy Ray Ennis who is the No. 2 scorer in 5-4A.

Midland beat the Bobcats, 59-58, in the MHS Gymnasium and it could be another cliff-hanger on the Bobcat floor.

Lee and Abilene stand 3-0 in the second half of the chase while Permian and Cooper, first half winners with 6-1 records, are a step behind with 2-1 readings.

Byron Roberts, Abilene's 6-0 junior sharp-shooter, has scored 199 points in 10 games for an average of 19.9 per outing while Ennis is scoring at a 19.3 clip with 193 points. Next comes Casey Wilder of Big Spring with 182 points and the Rebs will have to slow down the 6-4 senior postman in order to win.

STAN STRIFER, Permian senior guard is next with 180 points, but is doubtful against Cooper in the Hunt Center Gymnasium on the McMurry College campus with a sprained ankle.

Midland's Craig Dunn is the No. 6 scorer in the loop with an average of 16.3 per game. Lee has three others in the double figures in league play with Roy Lee Smith averaging 13.0 per game. Mike Wallace and Mike Denny follow with 12.5 and 12.7 averages while Midland High's Brently Jackson is scoring 12.2 per game for the Purple Pack.

Starting tonight for the Rebels will be Ennis, Denny, Wallace, Smith and Bobby Alexander while the Steers most likely will go with Wilder, Bubba Stripling, Elory Green, Mike Harris and Kenneth Perry.

The Rebs are 25-6 on the year compared to Big Spring's 13-14 record. Midland is 9-19 while San Angelo is 9-15. Abilene stands 17-12 while Cooper is 22-7 and Permian stands 21-6 on the year. OHS had the poorest record with a 7-22 mark.

THE REBELS will play three games with the Steers with a sophomore contest slated to start at 4:30 p.m. followed by the junior varsity tilt at 6:15 p.m. Tip-off for the varsity game is 8 p.m.

There will only be a junior varsity and varsity tilt in San Angelo with radio station KCRS doing the play-by-play at 7:55 p.m.

On Friday, Lee travels to Odessa for a battle with Permian while Midland hosts OHS. In other games, San Angelo is at Abilene and Cooper at Big Spring.

Joining Dunn and Jackson in the Midland lineup tonight will be Terry Rogers, James Hicks and Steve Brittain. Lorenzo Payne, Craig Brown, Brian Narvid, Randy Drew and Kenneth Sullivan, will make up the Bobcat lineup.

Danny Whitt resigns TCU basketball post

FORT WORTH, Tex. (AP) — Danny Whitt, in his seventh year as assistant basketball coach at Texas Christian University, is resigning, effective immediately, the Fort Worth Star Telegram learned Monday.

"After long hours of deliberation and after talking with coach (Johnny) Swaim, I have decided to submit my resignation," Whitt said in a telephone interview. "I hesitate to do it at this time but perhaps now is the time since it would give coach Swaim the opportunity to select someone to help him immediately."

The Star-Telegram learned of Whitt's decision following Monday's Frog Club meeting when Swaim gave an emotional talk to to the members and said an announcement was forthcoming in a couple of days. There was speculation that Swaim, his team now in the throes of a 14game losing streak, might be resigning.

However, Swaim denied this and TCU athletic director Frank Windegger gave the coach a strong vote of confidnce.

"I am behind Johnny Swaim 100 per cent," he said. "I think he is just as good a coach today as he was six or seven years ago when he was winning championships. I have a total commitment to Johnny Swaim."

Windegger said a search for a replacement for Whitt will begin immediately.

Whitt, admittedly discouraged from his team's lack of sucess, added it was a difficult decision to leave because of his many friends at TCU. "My association with TCU has been one of great joy. I have made many friends that are difficult to leave. Yet, I feel that now is the time for me to step aside and pursue a new carreer in business."

Whitt said his decision boiled down to two factors. "I want to be home with my family more and I'm ruining my health by working hard at a job that's not giving me any return."

He added that, "Maybe a new guy can give TCU new life and enthusiasm."

Whitt came to TCU from Arlington Houston. He produced a district championship team in his initial year there. He has also coached in the Arlington junior high system and at Ben Wheeler.

Whitt and Lee Pestana have been in charge of recruiting and he also scouts many of the Frog foes.

Whitt, a native of Bonham, graduated from East Texas State in 1961.

Billy Conigliaro prepares for comeback bid with A's

LYNN, Mass. (AP) — Tony Conigliaro, plagued by faltering sight in a damaged left eye, failed in a game comeback bid with the Boston Red Sox. But kid brother Billy is determined to keep the family name alive in baseball's box scores.

Billy C., who hasn't faced major league pitching since 1973, is trying to come back at the invitation of the boss who let him go, owner Charlie Finley of the Oakland A's.

"All I want is a good shot and I'm sure Mr. Finley will give me that chance," Billy said after another day of strenuous workouts. "We've always been very honest with each other. I respect him for that."

Signed for a reported $60,000 bonus by the Red Sox in 1965, the same year that Tony led the American League in homers, Billy lived in the shadows of his more famous brother, whose left cheekbone was shattered by an errant pitch in August, 1967.

Tony sat out the 1968 season, on the disabled list, but came back in 1969, when Billy came up to the Red Sox for 32 games.

The next year, while Tony was belting 36 homers and driving in 116 runs, Billy had 18 homers and 58 RBI in 114 games in the outfield. However, the brother act was broken up in the fall of 1970, when Tony was traded to the California Angels.

Billy's dream world was shattered, and he let everyone know how he felt by sounding off against the Red Sox' management. His personal feelings affected his playing in 1971 as he slumped to 11 homers and just 33 RBI. Then he was traded to the Milwaukee Brewers.

Unable to cope with baseball's way of life, Billy played only 52 games for Milwaukee before walking out against the advice of Tony and his father, Sal.

"Tony and I actually pleaded with him," Sal recalled. "We told him he was crazy, but he had made up his mind to quit the game. He was just a kid. Now he's matured, knows what he wants to do and is working like heck to do it."

Billy signed as a free agent with Finley's A's in 1973 but played in only 48 games, suffering a right knee injury which required two operations. He was released the following March, when Finley signed speedster Herb Washington strictly as a pinch runner.

Billy thought no more of major league baseball until a couple of months ago when he received a phone call from Finley, whose team had been destroyed by the loss of such stars as Reggie Jackson, Joe Rudi, Sal Bando, Gene Tenace and others.

"Mr. Finley called just before Thanksgiving and told me he'd like to give it a try in spring training," Billy said. "That was all I needed. I've got one terrific chance and I don't want to blow it."

Olympic records already falling

NEW YORK (AP) — Opening ceremonies for the 1980 Moscow Olympics are still 3½ years away, but a couple of Olympic records have already been broken.

NBC paid the Russians $85 million for exclusive United States television rights—a record and $60 million more than ABC paid for rights to the Montreal Games last summer. And NBC will televise 150 hours—that comes out to about nine hours a day over the 16 days of the Olympics—of the Games as compared to about 75 hours ABC showed from Montreal.

NBC, HAVING outbid ABC in down-to-the-wire negotiations for the Games, disclosed its coverage plans and some terms of its contract with the Russians Monday. NBC President Herb Schlosser said, "This will probably be the biggest event in the history of broadcasting. It will involve the most massive array of people, technicians and equipment ever assembled for one event."

In addition, Schlosser said the network planned to make a profit. "We expect it to work out as a venture where this company will make money."

ROBERT HOWARD, president of NBC television and head of the network's negotiating team in Moscow, said the contract itself is brief and is based upon trust between the two parties. He said NBC would not have to televise any specific vignettes of life in the Soviet Union if it did not want to. He also said the contract provides that NBC will get its money back if the Games are cancelled, and that other contractual matters are subject to arbitration if necessary.

NBC refused to say how much money would be paid prior to the Olympics, but a source has said the network will pay $20 million in 1977 and $30 million in 1978. NBC said there was nothing in the contract to cover a pullout of U.S. athletes, should that occur.

ASKED HOW NBC would protect its investment should the Russians make additional requests after the network had already invested heavily in the project, Schlosser admitted: "You take risks all the time in the broadcast business." He also said the Soviets had bargained in good faith and "all of the Olympic Games have had advance payments of some kind."

NBC also confirmed that it will pay West German television producer Lothar P. Bock $1 million for his efforts during negotiations. Bock, who worked on behalf of CBS until that network dropped out of the bidding, has had extensive dealings with the Russians on television matters in the past and is credited with a major role in helping NBC land the rights.

NBC also agreed to purchase three Russian entertainment or sports programs a year from Bock through 1981.

Howard revealed that between the time NBC announced it had won the Games and actually signed the contracts, the network had to raise its bid. This apparently was in response to a last-minute effort by ABC to gain the rights.

Flyers burn Flames, 7-4

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Bob Kelly often has sat on the sidelines watching the accomplishments of his teammates on the Philadelphia Flyers.

But Monday night they got a chance to see what he could do, as the Flyers, sparked by Kelly, scored a 7-4 National Hockey League victory over the Atlanta Flames in a nationally televised game.

The left winger, who had one goal and two assists, refused to boast about his performance. And he said he did not expect it to change his role on the team.

"You can't dictate how much you play," he said. "I might go the next 30 games without a point. And how would that look if I shot off my mouth now?"

Kelly has scored five goals and assisted on six in the last five games, giving him 13 goals and 15 assists for the season.

A number of key Flyers are sidelined or slowed by injuries, and Coach Fred Shero backed up Kelly's theory that he would be back on the bench as soon as the regulars return.

"That's life," said Shero. "Some guys get a couple of points and think they deserve more ice time. Kelly knows better than that."

Kelly's total of 28 points is only four shy of his NHL high of 32, set in his first season, in 1970-71. His goal total is only one short of his single-season highs of 14, scored in the 1970-71 and 1971-72 seasons.

The Flyers took a 4-0 lead in the first 14 minutes. Atlanta rallied, making it 4-3. Then Orest Kindrachuk dashed the length of the rink a few minutes later and scored the gamewinning goal.

Don Saleski and Harvey Bennett scored in the first nine minutes of the final period, giving the Flyers command.

"Had we been able to get even, it would have given us a heck of a lift," Atlanta Coach Fred Creighton said. "I think we could have stayed even or won, but it takes a big job to spot a team that many goals, expecially a good team."

The victory extended the Flyers' unbeaten string to eight games and boosted their Patrick Division lead to six points over the idle New York Islanders.

SEC deadlocked as Florida nips Tennessee, 80-76

By The Associated Press

Don't be surprised if there is a mass exodus of tourists from Kentucky to Florida one of these days in appreciation of what the basketball teams of Florida and Florida State did for the Kentucky Wildcats Monday night.

While third-ranked Kentucky was walloping Florida State 97-57 in a nonconference game, the University of Florida was dealing No. 11 Tennessee its first Southeastern Conference defeat 80-76, dropping the Vols into a virtual first-place deadlock with Kentucky.

Seventh-ranked Alabama remained close to the SEC leaders with a 72-68 triumph over Mississippi, while fifth-ranked Michigan moved into the Big Ten Conference lead, downing No. 8 Minnesota 86-80.

Three other members of The Associated Press Top 20 were in action. Arkansas, rated 13th, rallied from a 10-point halftime deficit and edged Tulane 76-73, No. 17 Syracuse routed Bentley 104-86 and No. 20 VMI celebrated its first-ever appearance in the rankings by outlasting Marshall 97-90.

While Kentucky Coach Joe Hall was ecstatic over the way his Wildcats manhandled Florida State, the sellout crowd at Louisville was really awaiting the score from Florida's tiny gym in Gainesville. And when it came through, a huge roar went up.

But the decibel count probably was not as high as that of the 5,000 fans who packed Florida's cramped court.

"This place is so loud ...it's Alligator Alley," sighed Tennessee Coach Ray Mears. "You can't concentrate and you can't even hear yourself think. It's a tough place to play under any circumstances, but we did pretty well."

But Florida did better, as Al Bonner scored nine of his 19 points in the final 7½ minutes, including two free throws with three seconds left that sealed the triumph.

Tennessee's Bernie-Ernie duo led the scoring, Bernard King netting 28 points and Ernie Grunfeld adding 26. Florida's Bob Smyth aided Bonner with 17.

Kentucky put on a dazzling exhibition in crushing Florida State as Jack Givens pumped in 28 points and Mike Phillips chipped in with 19.

"We're playing with the alertness we have been looking for," said Hall. "I don't believe anyone could have handled us the way we played. And there is no question that we're going to improve."

Although Alabama led Ole Miss by as many as 12 points in the first half, the Crimson Tide did not relax until T.R. Dunn dropped in a pair of free throws with three seconds left.

In addition to his clutch free throws, Dunn held Mississippi's John Billips to eight points, 11 below his average.

"We pride ourselves on the way we play defense," Dunn said. "I was just trying to stay with him."

Alabama's Rickey Brown topped the Tide with 24 points.

The Big Ten showdown at Minneapolis was in doubt until Michigan's Steve Grote hit a baseline jump shot with 1:33 left, snapping an 80-80 tie, then made a key steal. Phil Hubbard led the Wolverines with 23 points and John Robinson had 20. Mike Thompson and Ray Williams each had 20 for Minnesota, with Thompson scoring 18 after the intermission as the Gophers erased a 10-point halftime deficit.

"We were sharp, very sharp," said Michigan Coach Johnny Orr. "We probably played about as well as we can play."

Syracuse had little trouble with outmanned Bentley in winning its 11th in a row as 5-foot10 Jimmy Williams scored 19 points and 6-10 Roosevelt Bouie contributed 18. It was the Orangemen's sixth 100-point game of the season.

VMI moved ahead of Marshall with a 12-2 spurt late in the first half and went on to record its 18th consecutive victory. The Keydets won it at the foul line, hitting on 33 of 39 attempts.

Will Bynum paced VMI with 29 points, Ron Carter had 22 and Dave Montgomery 21.

"Naturally, we're pleased about the ranking," said Coach Charlie Schmaus.

Arkansas trips Tulane

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Thirteenth-ranked Arkansas rallied from a 10-point halftime deficit behind guard Ron Brewer to beat Tulane 76-73 in college basketball Monday night in the Louisiana Superdome.

brewer scored 16 of his 18 points in the second half as the Razorbacks came back from a 38-28 Tulane halftime advantage.

Tulane, which shot 61.3 per cent in the first half, hit 12 of its first 14 shots in the second half to take a 62-50 lead with less than ten minutes left.

However, Arkansas then outscored the Green Wave 17-5, as Brewer got four field goals, to tie the game 67-67 with 3:06 left.

The Razorbacks continued their run with two free throws by Brewer and a three-point play by guard Sidney Moncrief to take a 72-67 lead into the final minute.

The final margin was as close Tulane got after that.

The Arkansas victory nullified Tulane's best shooting game of the season. The Green Wave hit 35 of 51 shots, including 16 of 20 in the second half, for a scorching 69 per cent from the field.

The Razorbacks hit 34 of 61, including 20 of 32 in the second half, for a 56 per cent average.

Jeff Cummings led Tulane to its first half advantage as he scored 16 points. However, he tallied only six in the second half. Teammate Pierre Gaudin led all Green Wave scorers with 24.

Marvin Delph led Arkansas with 23 points, while Brewer had 18 and Moncrief 17.

The victory left Arkansas with a 20-1 record, while Tulane fell to 9-11.

Ramirez routs Guerry

MIAMI (AP) — Topseeded Raul Ramirez of Mexico had little trouble beating his unseeded opponent, but secondseeded Eddie Dibbs of Miami had to work hard to defeat his unranked foe in the opening round of the $50,000 Miami Grand Prix Tennis Classic.

Ramirez easily defeated Zan Guerry of Lookout Mountain, Tenn. 6-3, 6-1 Monday. Dibbs, who played high-school tennis in Miami Beach before going to the University of Miami, had to rally from a first-set tie-breaker (7-2) loss in overcoming Jun Kuki of Japan 6-7, 6-2, 6-2. Dibbs breezed through the final two sets in his first match in Miami in at least four years.

He said playing outdoors in windy, 60-degree weather may have affected his start.

"It did get a little cold, but we've been playing indoors up north and it's still cold in there, so it shouldn't bother me," he said. "It's just different, playing outside and getting used to the lights and everything. It was tough for me to adjust to the lights."

California drought may result in increase in food prices

By JACK EGAN
The Washington Post

SAN FRANCISCO — The serious drought in California has raised concern about higher national food prices and another upward nudge for inflation, because California is this country's most important food basket.

California produces a quarter of all foods consumed in the U.S. and 40 per cent of the vegetables. What is shaping up as the state's driest year on record, following its third driest in 1976, comes on top of a killer freeze in Florida that wiped out much of the vegetable crop there.

But economists at the Bank of America, a major agricultural lender, and the world's largest bank, cautioned that it is too early to predict a disaster and pointed out that the effect of the drought varies considerably throughout the state, with many prime producing areas still expecting excellent harvests.

A 0.5 per cent jump in the consumer price index as a result of the drought is the most expected now by Eric Peter Thor, who watches the California economy for the bank. He thinks that in a year this could turn out to be "a temporary blip" if the rains finally arrive.

For the July 1-Jan. 28 period California's North Coast and Cascade-Sierra areas have received 35 per cent of their normal rainfall, the Sacramento Valley has gotten 44 per cent of normal, the San Joaquin Valley and Central Coast have 85 per cent of normal moisture, while Southern California's coastal and interior regions have more than 110 per cent of normal moisture.

Water-rationing measures are getting better than expected results. In Marin county, north of San Francisco, cutbacks in the first week of mandatory conservation dropped consumption almost 60 per cent below a year ago, to 10.4 million gallons a day, well below the goal of 12 million. Other counties are considering formal conservation plans, and voluntary conservation is in effect in most of the state.

"I don't see a disaster overall because some areas of the state will have a very good year," says Richard H. Courtney, the director of commodity research for the Bank of America.

Water supplies remain ample, and some larger than usual yields are expected in Southern California's abundant Imperial Valley, famous for many specialty fruit and vegetable crops, the vegetable-producing areas north of Los Angeles and the region around Salinas in the middle part of the state, where crops such as artichokes and asparagus are grown for the entire U.S.

"Farmers down in Southern California think it's going to be a great year, and they think prices will be up 30 per cent with no reduction in acreage," Courtney says. "And the Drought Coordination Center in Sacramento says a lot of people are calling from out-of-state asking where they can buy vegetables because of the effects of the Florida freeze."

On the other hand, the prospect of a 25 per cent reduction in water supplies to parts of the state's central and northern areas is expected to have a considerable impact on production of cotton, rice, and tomatoes which are all water pensive. Wine-grape production is also expected to be affected.

Cattle raising and dairy farming, totaling nearly $7 billion in annual gross receipts for California, depend heavily on dry land grazing to feed herds, and these activities are already shaping up as the state's hardest hit sector, as they are in other drought-plagued regions in the western states.

Culling of herds is now moving cattle to market which would otherwise be kept feeding. This is dropping prices of beef in the short run, but higher prices are predicted for the future when supplies will be reduced.

California also accounts for 24 per cent of this country's rice production, almost all of it for export, and this thirsty crop is expected to drop significantly in acreage, as are forage crops like alfalfa and corn.

California grows 85 per cent of all tomatoes canned in the U.S., so tomato processing is also expected to suffer, adding to the higher prices that resulted from last year's cannery strike and settlement.

Because of higher prices, the Bank of America economists expect gross farm receipts in California to rise to a record $10 billion, but increased production costs are expected to cut net income of farmers below last year's $2.5 billion.

Already the drought is affecting some nonagricultural industry, primarily the winter recreation areas, where lack of snow has kept away skiiers. Boating enthusiasts may also find their favorite reservoir lakes unavailable this summer with effects on surrounding economies.

Because of a cut in electricity produced by hydro-electric plants, the water shortage will probably also increase the state's import bill for fuel oil.

Andrew Young in Nigeria to see ceremony

By SERGE SCHMEMANN

LAGOS, Nigeria (AP) — Ambassador Andrew Young flew to northern Nigeria today to see more than 3,000 warrior tribesmen in a traditional ceremony pledging their loyalty to their emirs and sultans.

The Great Durbar in Kaduna, the capital of northern Nigeria, was one of the most spectacular events of the second World Festival of Black and African Art and Culture. The festival opened in Lagos on Jan. 15 and ends Feb. 12.

Nigeria is the last stop on Young's three-nation visit to black Africa to demonstrate the Carter administration's "new style and new foreign policy," as he put it in an arrival statement Monday.

Arriving from Tanzania and Kenya, the first black American ambassador to the United Nations told reporters oil-rich Nigeria is as important in African developments and in resolving the Rhodesia crisis as the five "front-line" states in eastern Africa that are the chief supporters of the black nationalist guerrillas fighting to end white rule in Rhodesia.

Young met for an hour with Nigeria's chief of state, Lt. Gen. Olesegun Obasanjo, to discuss the situation in west and southern Africa.

Relations between the United States and oil-rich Nigeria, Africa's most populous nation, have improved considerably since the end of the civil war in Angola.

Although American companies have the second largest foreign stake in Nigeria's oil industry, the United States and Nigeria were on opposite sides of the Angolan conflict. Anti-American sentiment was so strong in Lagos last spring that a visit by Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger was canceled because of fears for his safety.

Buffalo digging itself out from under snow

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — A huge pile of snow topped with a sign reading "Mt. Buffalo" stands as a monument downtown to efforts to clear the snow-clogged streets of the city.

On Monday, Mayor Stanley Makowski decided enough progress had been made in the clean-up to allow an easing of the driving ban within city limits.

But the city speed limit was reduced to 20 miles per hour, parking was forbidden on all bus routes and private cars have to carry at least three persons.

Across the state, schools and businesses reopened as the natural gas crisis eased.

Buffalo School Supt. Eugene Reville said high schools would open Wednesday and all other schools on Thursday. Reville said the decision was based not on availability of gas, but on the condition of the side streets, many of which remain impassable.

The worst of the gas shortage seemed to be over, but Buffalo area industries have to wait until Wednesday before resuming operations.

The National Fuel Gas Co. said western New York industrial plants would be permitted to use 75 per cent of their authorized base volume then.

Rail traffic in Buffalo began moving after the Interstate Commerce Commission lifted an embargo placed on all railroad traffic to the city. ConRail officials said many undelivered perishables were still sitting on the clogged tracks.

ConRail had to bring in a rotary plow from Syracuse to clear off a huge 1½-mile long drift of hard packed snow blocking rail traffic north out of Buffalo.

Downtown stores were crowded despite continued delivery problems. Guy Erickson, executive vice president of the Retail Merchants Association, said the surge was a result of most residents being virtually snowbound for a week or more.

With measure assured, House providing forum for pay raise opponents

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House, after insuring that its proposed $13,000 pay raise cannot be blocked, is providing a forum for members who want to sound off in opposition to it.

The sound and fury take place in a three-day hearing being held by a subcommittee of the Post Office and Civil Service Committee.

Rep. William Ford, D-Mich., the chairman, said Monday in opening the hearings that any senator or representative who wants a chance to go on record opposing the pay raise will be welcome to speak.

There is, however, almost no chance that the House will actually stop the raises, despite 15 resolutions to do so sponsored by more than 50 House members.

The House itself is not expected to vote on the issue. And, under a system established by law in 1967, the salary increases will take effect automatically on Feb. 20 unless disapproved before then by either the Senate or the House.

A move to kill the raises was blocked in the Senate last week by a 56-42 vote. The House, unless it changes the schedule of the recesses that start this week in observance of Lincoln's and Washington's birthdays, will not be able to have a floor vote on the pay raise before it takes effect.

The pay increases, including a boost in congressional salaries from $44,600 a year to $57,500, were recommended by former President Gerald R. Ford and supported by President Carter on the basis of the findings of a special commission.

The increases average 28 per cent for federal judges and top executive branch officials as well as congressmen. They would be the first raises for those officials — except for a single 5 per cent raise—since 1969. The Consumer Price Index has gone up more than 60 per cent in this period.

The first-year cost of the raises has been estimated at $130 million.

Firm says more lost jobs than government reported

MEDIA, Pa. (AP) — Three million more Americans lost their jobs in January than were reported by the U.S. Labor Department, a private research firm says.

The Sindlinger & Co. also said true unemployment for last Wednesday was 11.6 per cent, or more than 11 million persons out of work, and that unemployment actually rose 1 per cent from December, while the Labor Department reported January unemployment had dropped one-half of 1 per cent.

The government failed to account for those who lost jobs due to the severe cold weather because it used data taken before the harsh weather began, Sindlinger & Co. said in a newsletter Monday.

Government calculating methods and the use of incomplete data also contributed to the inaccurate unemployment picture, Sindlinger said.

There was no immediate reaction from the Labor Department.

Sindlinger's surveys for Jan. 12 to Feb. 2 showed 3.3 million workers laid off due to cold-related problems, and surveys for Feb. 3-6, tabulated Monday, showed no change.

Sindlinger said his firm has conducted daily unemployment surveys by telephone in all 48 contiguous states at the rate of 1,100 calls per week for the past 20 years.

President Carter's Cabinet was told Monday that the weather had caused 1.8 million layoffs.

The Labor Department bases its monthly reports on a sample week adjusted seasonally according to historical data from the past five years.

Sindlinger does not use seasonally adjusted figures and claims the adjusted figures in the government's reports can be artificially low.

U.S. importing half the oil it consumes

By THOMAS O'TOOLE
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The cold winter and the natural-gas shortage means that the United States is now importing half the oil it burns every day.

Figures compiled by the American Petroleum Institute, a major industry organization, show that oil imports averaged more than 8.7 million barrels a day for the month of January, an increase of more than 30 per cent over January's imports a year ago and the highest monthly import average in the nation's history.

More than half the oil imported into the U.S. in January came from Middle East countries like Saudi Arabia, Iran and Kuwait.

Energy experts in the Carter administration said they believe the high level of oil imports will continue at least through the rest of the winter, partly because of the cold weather, partly because of the shortage of natural gas and partly because U.S. domestic-oil production continues to decline and cannot meet the rising demand.

The Carter administration now estimates that the oil-import bill for the nation this year will be $40 billion, which would be an increase of $6 billion over the $34 billion paid out in 1976. At the same time Federal Energy Administrator John F. O'Leary concedes there are so many uncertainties that the import bill could be higher than $40 billion.

"A lot depends on how many consumers in California and the Pacific Northwest have to switch to oil becuse of the drought and the shortage of water power," O'Leary said. "A lot also depends on when natural-gas users who have already made the switch to oil can move back to natural gas."

One reason for soaring oil imports is the bitter cold experienced in January by the eastern two-thirds of the nation, which sent demand rising for kerosene and home heating oil. The same cold weather resulted in skyrocketing demand for electricity, much of which was generated by oil-burning electric plants.

The natural-gas shortage stimulated oil and electricity demand, as factories using gas switched to oil, and as homeowners burning gas for heat turned down their thermostats and switched to electric heat.

Portable electric heaters sold out in department stores in no fewer than six eastern and midwestern states.

Manges, business partner arraigned in San Diego

SAN DIEGO, Tex. (AP) — South Texas millionaire Clinton Manges and business associate Morris Ashby were arraigned here today on a charge of theft of services before State Dist. Court Judge Ricardo Garcia.

The charge stems from a Jan. 10 indictment alleging Manges and Ashby presented a worthless $57,000 check to Claude Birge, president of Mustang Oil and Tool, Inc., of Corpus Christi. Birge's company had serviced Manges-owned oil and gas wells.

Ashby and Manges pleaded innocent to the charges.

Judge Garcia set pretrial hearings for the week of March 14.

The $57,000 check was given to Birge on Nov. 30 with the understanding it would not be cashed until funds in the name of a Swiss oil broker were released to Manges from a bank in Rio Grande City, Manges said at the time of the indictment.

Last month Manges and Ashby surrendered to Texas Rangers after sealed indictments were returned by a Duval County grand jury based on a complaint by Birge.

The two were released on $10,000 bonds each.

Asst. Texas Atty. Gen. Jerry Carruth read the charges against Manges and Ashby today in court.

CHAIRMAN RICHARD DUNHAM of the Federal Power Commission uses a map showing routing of natural gas pipelines when he announced the first transfer of gas last week. Dunham, acting immediately under the new emergency natural gas act, said the gas started flowing last Thursday.

O'Leary views switch to coal as energy source

WASHINGTON, D.C. — John F. O'Leary, named by President Carter to be the administrator of the Federal Energy Administration, thinks that domestic onshore petroleum production has had it, as far as contributing significantly to any increase in domestic oil and gas supplies.

There is some prospect, as O'Leary sees it, for some major finds in the Outer Continental Shelf and Alaska but even these will only slow down the decline in domestic supplies.

The alternative in the near future is to make greater use of coal, and to hold down demand through conservation measures —compulsory where necessary.

It was evident during the first press conference held by O'Leary, even before the Senate had confirmed his appointment, that the new head of FEA is less than enthusiastic about the prospect that natural gas price deregulation would do much to increase supplies.

He indicated that price decontrol might have a greater detrimental impact on inflation and the economy than it would have a beneficial impact on eliminating shortages.

He did note that President Carter during the campaign had said he favored decontrol of "new" natural gas prices and O'Leary listed that as on of the "options" to be considered in the over-all energy program the Administration plans to draft and have ready for Congress by April 20.

He reflected the same attitude regarding higher prices for domestic oil, saying that while it might help increase supplies to some extent the other consequences of such action could be "very severe."

O'Leary is firmly convinced that the nation has an energy supply problem and that this problem could easily worsen in the years immediately ahead. He thinks the public needs to become convinced that this is so and that strong measures must be taken to avoid serious disruptions to the economy and to the nations's life style.

His stress, and it appears to reflect the Carter Adminstration's thinking at this time, is that the emphasis has to be on conservation.

Thus far, conservation measures have not produced any substantial result, O'Leary said, primarily because they have consisted mostly of rhetoric and volunteerism rather than specific actions and enforced conservation.

As an example of conservation measures he has in mind, O'Leary pointed to the need for better insulation of buildings, old as well as new. He said this would result in big savings in fuel and that the cost of the insulation and weather-stripping would be offset within a few years by the amount saved on fuel bills.

Although he did not detail how this could be accomplished, the implication was that the building standards would be set for old and new construction and that owners and builders would be required to meet these standards. Tax incentives or outright grants might be utilized where necessary to provide the necessary funds.

He indicated the need for such standards for new homes; including mobile homes; and other buildings is clear because builders will be reluctant to spend the additional money if rival builders are permitted to build them without similar insulation. So the standards would have to be mandatory to be effective.

But he emphasized that the first step is for the nation to decide that such conservation action is required, then decisions could be made regarding how desired goals could be met.

In effect he was saying that the mood of the country must reflect a concern over the need for positive action. When that occurs, specific measures can be tailored to obtain desired results.

a Canyon sand oil discovery in Fisher County, two miles northwest of Hamlin.

The 24-hour pumping potential was for 50 barrels of 41-gravity oil and 30 barrels of water, with gas-oil ratio measuring 1,350-1.

Production was through perforations at 4,442-4,569 feet, after fracturing with 26,000 pounds of sand and an unreported amount of fluid.

Operator set 4½-inch casing at 4,676 feet, on total depth of 4,850 feet.

It is 2,173 feet from south and 1,787 feet from east lines of section 188, BBB&C survey.

Fry sand production has been reopened in the Lloyd field of Runnels with completion by Campana Petroleum Co., Midland, of its No. 1 Patterson, five miles northwest of Winters.

It completed on the pump for 25 barrels of 36-gravity oil daily, along with 20 barrels of water, and with gas-oil ratio measuring 1,840-1.

Completion was effected through perforations at 4,291-4,295 feet, after acidizing with 250 gallons and fracturing with 4,000 gallons and 4,000 pounds of sand.

Total depth is 4,340 feet, and it is plugged back to 4,311 feet, in 4½-inch casing set on bottom.

It spots 1,000 feet from north and 467 feet from east lines of H. E. Baggs survey 92, within block 64, H&TC survey, ⅛ mile east of the original Fry sand opener.

Homes insulation energy saver

By WILLIAM H. JONES
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Regulatory commissions in a dozen states are considering an innovative conservation plan under which natural gas utilities would insulate the homes of their customers and add the cost to their monthly bills.

The end result, they say, would be cheaper than present bills because of the massive savings in natural gas and other scarce energy supplies.

If approved nationwide, the program would put local gas distributing utilities in the business of installing home insulation and furnace efficiency devices, which would result in an estimated annual savings in home heating costs of between $1 billion and $3 billion and would save more natural gas than Alaska's North Slope is expected to produce through the 1980s.

Federal Energy Administration official William G. Rosenberg, who developed the plan during the past few months, said that if the conservation measures he is advocating are followed in all 34 million homes using gas heat, the nation could benefit as follows:

—An annual savings of 1.2 trillion cubic feet of natural gas, which is about 12 per cent of the current interstate pipeline sales volume, and is equal to production from 39 nuclear power plants or 215 million barrels a year of imported oil.

—Creation of an $8 billion investment program over seven years, generating 70,000 jobs a year.

—A reduction in cutbacks of natural gas supplies to industry equal to new hookups for 6 million residential users.

Under the Rosenberg plan, which is not a formal policy of the FEA, local utilities would install and pay for three conservation measures in gas-heated homes — ceiling insulation that meets the strictest federal standards, automatic thermostats that reduce temperatures by 5 to 7 degrees at night and furnace efficiency modifications.

In an interivew, Rosenberg said his proposed measures would cost about $400 for each under-insulated home and $175 for fully insulated houses. The cost of renovation would be less than the cost of extra gas purchases or supplemental fuels, over a seven-year period, said Rosenberg, who is assistant administrator for energy resource development.

The $8 billion investment needed to launch the nationwide project would be treated by state regulatory agencies the same as long-term investments designed to produce new gas supplies. That would produce a cost for the new gas — "created" by conservation — that would be added to consumer rates.

After conducting surveys of current consumer costs for three utilities in New Jersey, Michigan and California, Rosenberg estimated that the cost of new gas "created" by conservation would be about $1.50 per thousand cubic feet compared with imported gas from Algeria at $2.80 per thousand cubic feet. The current price for gas flowing across state lines is $1.44 per thousand cubic feet.

Moreover, despite the added costs of insulation and new furnice devices, average monthly consumer bills would be decreased, according to the FEA assessments because less gas would be used.

Rosenberg said an analysis at Public Service Electric and Gas Co. in New Jersey projected a reduction in gas consumption of more than 33 per cent with the conservation program; only 44 per cent of the housing units in Newark have adequate insulation today, for example.

The annual gas heating bill for a fully insulated New Jersey gas coustomer today is $236, a cost projected to rise to $359 by 1985. The owner of an uninsulated home in the New Jersey area now pays $384 a year for gas and the bill would increase to $583 in 1985 without new conservation measures.

Rosenberg said that under his plan, the 1985 bills would average $283 a year for underinsulated homes, generally occupied by relatively poor people, that would represent a 51 per cent reduction in annual gas heating costs.

The reduction would be 21 per cent.

A great benefit of the proposal, Rosenberg said, is the aid to poor people in upgrading their home heating efficiency. He contended that it also is fair to homeowners who already have adequate insulation, because they will receive other devices to improve efficiency, their rates will be lower when all customers have cheaper gas and they are a "minority of the population."

Another reason to support the plan, Rosenberg argued, is that it can be done without federal subsidy.

Strike finals, wildcats slated in Basin sectors

Pecos County gained a pay opener, a pool extender and a workover project, and Winkler drew a wildcat and a stepout. Also, a Howard reentry is slated for testing in a wildcat zone.

H. L. Brown Jr. of Midland, No. 1 GCM Harral Estate, has been reclassified to open Wolfcamp 7000 pay in the Windy Mesa field of Pecos, 15 miles east of port Stockton.

The calculated, absolute open flow potential was for 1.950 million cubic feet of gas per day, with gas-liquid ratio measuring 140,000-1. Gravity of the fluid is 38 degrees.

Completion was through perforations at 7,028-7,051 feet, after acidizing with 1,000 gallons.

It was completed in 1966 as the Ellenburger 10,250 gas and Wolfcamp 7000 oil opener. Total depth is 10,608 feet, and 4½-inch casing is hung from 7,100-10,254 feet. It also has 7-inch casing set at 7,203 feet.

The Wolfcamp 7000 oil potential was for 55 barrels of 38.6-gravity oil daily, with gas-oil ratio of 8,854-1, producing through the above perforations.

Wellsite is 660 feet from north and east lines of section 3, block 126, T&StL survey.

Texas Pacific Oil Co., Inc., has finaled No. 8 Montgomery-Fulk as a ¾-mile south extension to the Elsinore multipay field of Pecos, 24 miles south of Fort Stockton.

The absolute open flow potential was for 1.710 million cubic feet of dry gas per day, producing through perforations at 13,308-13,412 feet, following a 37,000-gallon acid treatment.

Location is 1,350 feet from south and 1,450 feet from east lines of section 87, block A, GC&SF survey.

Getty Oil Co. has filed application to reenter and plug back to around 8,355 feet at No. 2-66 Slaughter, former second Pennsylvanian detrital gas producer in the Yucca Butte, West field of Pecos, for completion try as a fourth Strawn oiler and one-mile west extension to that pay.

It was drilled and completed by Skelly Oil Co. prior to Getty's acquisition of that firm.

The old total depth is 10,950 feet and it was finaled in August 1976 for 2.662 million cubic feet of dry gas daily, through perforations at 8,752-8,770 feet.

It is 810 feet from north and 660 feet from east lines of section 66, block A-2, TCRR survey, 11 miles west of Sheffield.

WINKLER SITES

Hilliard Oil & Gas, Inc., Midland, has scheduled a 9,200-foot exploratory test in Winkler, 10 miles southeast of Kermit. It is No. 1-A Mitchell.

It is 1,320 feet from south and 467 feet from east lines of section 15, block B-10, PSL survey (A. H. Birchfield survey 123 on some maps.) It is 1⅜ mile southwest of the Mitchell (Pennsylvanian) field.

Hilliard also plans to drill No. 2-F Sealy-Smith, ½ mile northeast offset to a recent long northwest extension to Strawn detritus oil pay in the Arenoso field of Winkler.

Slated to 9,200 feet, it spots 990 feet from north and west lines of section 13, block A, G&MMB&A survey, eight miles north of Monahans.

HOWARD PROSPECTOR

Great Western Drilling Co., Midland, filed application for permit to reenter and plug back to wildcat depth of 7,095 feet at No. 1 Grantham, former opener of the Knott, West (Pennsylvanian reef) field of Northwest Howard County.

It was completed in 1974 by F. W. Holbrook to flow 75 barrels of oil per day, through perforations at 9,086-9,106 feet. Total depth is 9,211 feet.

It is 467 feet from south and west lines of section 8, block 33, T-2-N, T&P survey, two miles northeast of Knott townsite.

WARD REENTRY

Amarillo Oil Co., operating from Amarillo, intends to reenter and plug back to around 15,700 feet at No. 1-H Caroline Gas Unit for recompletion attempt as a third Atoka gasser and ½ mile north and east extension to that pay in the Quito field of Ward.

The project is 760 feet from southeast and 1,980 feet from southwest lines of section 225, block 34, H&TC survey, seven miles north of Barstow. It was completed from the pusselman in October 1975.

Bengal's program finalized

Bengal Oil & Gas Corp., a Midland, Tex., and Denver, Colo.-based independent oil and gas producing firm, has announced the successful completion of a year-end drilling fund.

Capital raised for the venture will be used in the company's continuing development of gas reserved in Pennsylvanian. Bengal will retain a net revenue interest of approximately 16 per cent and drilling operations should commence within 30 days.

The company's 10-well Ben Avon Gas Development Unit, located in Indiana County, Pa., when on stream recently and is expected to contribute materially to the company's assets. The company participated in these wells through its Bengal Fund '75 Ltd., for a 37.5 per cent revenue interest and independently for a 2.53 per cent revenue interest.

Winkler strike seen

The opening of Wolfcamp production in the Flying W, Southeast field of Winkler County apparently has been assured with the flowing of 61 barrels of oil and six barrels of load water in 5½ hours at Amoco Production Co. No. 1 J. M. Williamson, reentry project, 14 miles northeast of Kermit.

The flow was gauged through a 16-64-inch choke and perforations at 8,132-8,254 feet.

It originally was completed by Midwest Oil Corp. (Amoco), in 1971 as the Devonian opener in the field. While being drilled, it indicated Wolfcamp production with the recovery of shows on a drillstem test from 8,123-8,228 feet.

It is 660 feet from south and east lines of section 16, block 46, T-1-N, T&P survey.

N.M. sectors gain wildcat, pool tests

Chaves County, N.M., drew site for an exploratory test, and field sites have been scheduled in Lea and Eddy sectors.

Fred Pool Drilling Co., operating from Alton, N.M., filed application for No. 1-M L.E. Minerals, a 2,500-foot cable tool San Andres wildcat in Chaves, 25 miles east of Roswell.

Location is 990 feet from south and west lines of section 32-10s-28e, 25 miles east of Roswell. It is two miles northeast of the Chism, East (San Andres) oil pool.

LEA SITE

Belco Petroleum Corp., Midland, intends to drill a ⅝-miles northeast stepout to the four-well Hat Mesa (Morrow) field of Lea, 22 miles west of Oil Center. It is No. 1-13 Federal.

Location is 990 feet from north and 1,980 feet from west lines of section 13-21s-32e. Planned depth is 14,600 feet.

EDDY ACTIVITY

C&K Petroleum, Inc., Midland will drill No. 1-J-9 Federal, a 12,000-foot Pennsylvanian test in the White City gas field of Eddy, six miles northeast of White City.

Drillsite is 1,980 feet from south and east lines of section 9-24s-26e.

Cities Service Oil Co. will attempt to extend the La Huerta (Morrow) gas field of Eddy ⅝ mile southeast with the scheduling of No. 1-AE Government, five miles northeast of Carlsbad.

It spots 2,310 feet from south and 1,980 feet from east lines of section 27-21s-27e, and has a projected depth of 11,800 feet.

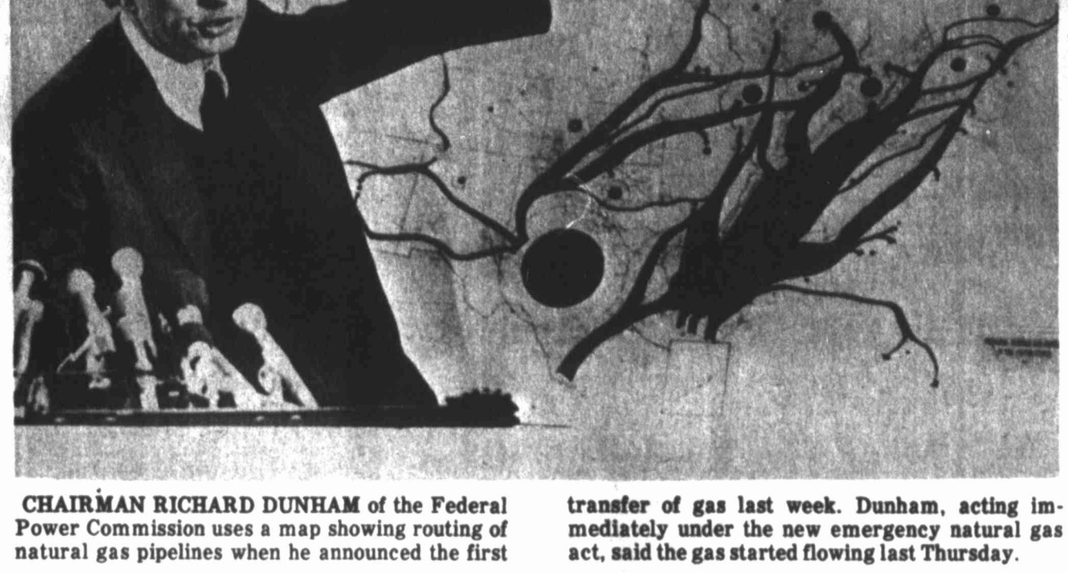
RAYMOND DO



CHAIRMAN RICHARD DUNHAM of the Federal Power Commission uses a map showing routing of natural gas pipelines when he announced the first transfer of gas last week. Dunham, acting immediately under the new emergency natural gas act, said the gas started flowing last Thursday.

O'Leary views switch to coal as energy source

WASHINGTON, D.C. — John F. O'Leary, named by President Carter to be the administrator of the Federal Energy Administration, thinks that domestic onshore petroleum production has had it, as far as contributing significantly to any increase in domestic oil and gas supplies.

There is some prospect, as O'Leary sees it, for some major finds in the Outer Continental Shelf and Alaska but even these will only slow down the decline in domestic supplies.

The alternative in the near future is to make greater use of coal, and to hold down demand through conservation measures —compulsory where necessary.

It was evident during the first press conference held by O'Leary, even before the Senate had confirmed his appointment, that the new head of FEA is less than enthusiastic about the prospect that natural gas price deregulation would do much to increase supplies.

He indicated that price decontrol might have a greater detrimental impact on inflation and the economy than it would have a beneficial impact on eliminating shortages.

He did note that President Carter during the campaign had said he favored decontrol of "new" natural gas prices and O'Leary listed that as on of the "options" to be considered in the over-all energy program the Administration plans to draft and have ready for Congress by April 20.

He reflected the same attitude regarding higher prices for domestic oil, saying that while it might help increase supplies to some extent the other consequences of such action could be "very severe."

O'Leary is firmly convinced that the nation has an energy supply problem and that this problem could easily worsen in the years immediately ahead. He thinks the public needs to become convinced that this is so and that strong measures must be taken to avoid serious disruptions to the economy and to the nations's life style.

His stress, and it appears to reflect the Carter Adminstration's thinking at this time, is that the emphasis has to be on conservation.

Thus far, conservation measures have not produced any substantial result, O'Leary said, primarily because they have consisted mostly of rhetoric and volunteerism rather than specific actions and enforced conservation.

As an example of conservation measures he has in mind, O'Leary pointed to the need for better insulation of buildings, old as well as new. He said this would result in big savings in fuel and that the cost of the insulation and weather-stripping would be offset within a few years by the amount saved on fuel bills.

Although he did not detail how this could be accomplished, the implication was that the building standards would be set for old and new construction and that owners and builders would be required to meet these standards. Tax incentives or outright grants might be utilized where necessary to provide the necessary funds.

He indicated the need for such standards for new homes; including mobile homes; and other buildings is clear because builders will be reluctant to spend the additional money if rival builders are permitted to build them without similar insulation. So the standards would have to be mandatory to be effective.

But he emphasized that the first step is for the nation to decide that such conservation action is required, then decisions could be made regarding how desired goals could be met.

In effect he was saying that the mood of the country must reflect a concern over the need for positive action. When that occurs, specific measures can be tailored to obtain desired results.

Homes insulation energy saver

By WILLIAM H. JONES
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Regulatory commissions in a dozen states are considering an innovative conservation plan under which natural gas utilities would insulate the homes of their customers and add the cost to their monthly bills.

The end result, they say, would be cheaper than present bills because of the massive savings in natural gas and other scarce energy supplies.

If approved nationwide, the program would put local gas distributing utilities in the business of installing home insulation and furnace efficiency devices, which would result in an estimated annual savings in home heating costs of between $1 billion and $3 billion and would save more natural gas than Alaska's North Slope is expected to produce through the 1980s.

Federal Energy Administration official William G. Rosenberg, who developed the plan during the past few months, said that if the conservation measures he is advocating are followed in all 34 million homes using gas heat, the nation could benefit as follows:

—An annual savings of 1.2 trillion cubic feet of natural gas, which is about 12 per cent of the current interstate pipeline sales volume, and is equal to production from 39 nuclear power plants or 215 million barrels a year of imported oil.

—Creation of an $8 billion investment program over seven years, generating 70,000 jobs a year.

—A reduction in cutbacks of natural gas supplies to industry equal to new hookups for 6 million residential users.

Under the Rosenberg plan, which is not a formal policy of the FEA, local utilities would install and pay for three conservation measures in gas-heated homes — ceiling insulation that meets the strictest federal standards, automatic thermostats that reduce temperatures by 5 to 7 degrees at night and furnace efficiency modifications.

In an interivew, Rosenberg said his proposed measures would cost about $400 for each under-insulated home and $175 for fully insulated houses. The cost of renovation would be less than the cost of extra gas purchases or supplemental fuels, over a seven-year period, said Rosenberg, who is assistant administrator for energy resource development.

The $8 billion investment needed to launch the nationwide project would be treated by state regulatory agencies the same as long-term investments designed to produce new gas supplies. That would produce a cost for the new gas — "created" by conservation — that would be added to consumer rates.

After conducting surveys of current consumer costs for three utilities in New Jersey, Michigan and California, Rosenberg estimated that the cost of new gas "created" by conservation would be about $1.50 per thousand cubic feet compared with imported gas from Algeria at $2.80 per thousand cubic feet. The current price for gas flowing across state lines is $1.44 per thousand cubic feet.

Moreover, despite the added costs of insulation and new furnice devices, average monthly consumer bills would be decreased, according to the FEA assessments because less gas would be used.

Rosenberg said an analysis at Public Service Electric and Gas Co. in New Jersey projected a reduction in gas consumption of more than 33 per cent with the conservation program; only 44 per cent of the housing units in Newark have adequate insulation today, for example.

The annual gas heating bill for a fully insulated New Jersey gas coustomer today is $236, a cost projected to rise to $359 by 1985. The owner of an uninsulated home in the New Jersey area now pays $384 a year for gas and the bill would increase to $583 in 1985 without new conservation measures.

Rosenberg said that under his plan, the 1985 bills would average $283 a year for underinsulated homes, generally occupied by relatively poor people, that would represent a 51 per cent reduction in annual gas heating costs.

The reduction would be 21 per cent.

A great benefit of the proposal, Rosenberg said, is the aid to poor people in upgrading their home heating efficiency. He contended that it also is fair to homeowners who already have adequate insulation, because they will receive other devices to improve efficiency, their rates will be lower when all customers have cheaper gas and they are a "minority of the population."

Another reason to support the plan, Rosenberg argued, is that it can be done without federal subsidy.

"If investments to produce conservation gas are treated like other investments to produce or purchase gas supply, and utilities are allowed to earn competitive return on conservation investments, then the program can be financed privately," he stated.

In response to the Rosenberg plan, the Pennsylvania Public Utility Commission has directed its technical and legal staffs to draw up a formal plan that could be implemented as early as this summer. Commissions and gas utilities in New York, Massachusetts, California, Michigan and Illinois are either drawing up proposals to implement the Rosenberg plan or have scheduled hearings in the near future.

However, Sen. Edward W. Brooke (R-Mass.), who has specialized in housing legislation, said it would be a mistake to launch such a program aimed only at natural gas heating. Consumers of fuel oil and electric heat also should be brought under any such plan, Brooke said in a recent letter to Rosenberg. Unless a comparable proposal is made for other energy sources, Brooke said he would introduce legislation to prevent implementation of a federal policy to aid consumers of gas.

Lo-Vaca hearing set

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — The railroad commission Monday scheduled a Feb. 22 hearing for Lo-Vaca Gathering Co. to account for all the money it is getting transporting natural gas through its intrastate system for others.

The commission ordered Lo-Vaca not to spend any income from such service pending its approval.

The commission noted that it was acting "to protect Texas consumers" as a result of reports that Lo-Vaca is expected to make more than $1 million from one transaction transporting gas to the energy-short northeast.

Yarborough promoted

DUNCAN, Okla. — M. V. "Vic" Yarborough, assistant manager of the Special Products Division of Halliburton Services, has been promoted to manager, succeeding Tom E. Morton, who has taken early retirement after 36 years with Halliburton.

Yarborough, also a 36-year employe of the firm, has been with the Special Products Division since it was established in 1960.

He joined the firm in 1941 at Seminole, Okla., after attending Central State University at Edmond, Okla.

Winkler strike seen

The opening of Wolfcamp production in the Flying W, Southeast field of Winkler County apparently has been assured with the flowing of 61 barrels of oil and six barrels of load water in 5½ hours at Amoco Production Co. No. 1 J. M. Williamson, reentry project, 14 miles northeast of Kermit.

The flow was gauged through a 16-64-inch choke and perforations at 8,132-8,254 feet.

It originally was completed by Midwest Oil Corp. (Amoco), in 1971 as the Devonian opener in the field. While being drilled, it indicated Wolfcamp production with the recovery of shows on a drillstem test from 8,123-8,228 feet.

It is 660 feet from south and east lines of section 16, block 46, T-1-N, T&P survey.

Bengal's program finalized

Bengal Oil & Gas Corp., a Midland, Tex., and Denver, Colo. - based independent oil and gas producing firm, has announced the successful completion of a year-end drilling fund.

Capital raised for the venture will be used in the company's continuing development of gas reserved in Pennsylvanian. Bengal will retain a net revenue interest of approximately 16 per cent and drilling operations should commence within 30 days.

The company's 10-well Ben Avon Gas Development Unit, located in Indiana County, Pa., when on stream recently and is expected to contribute materially to the company's assets. The company participated in these wells through its Bengal Fund '75 Ltd., for a 37.5 per cent revenue interest and independently for a 2.53 per cent revenue interest. Additional drilling on the lease block will begin when weather permits. Its No. 1 Goodhue, Mississippian lime well in Garfield County, Okla., potentialed for 150 barrels of oil and 450,000 cubic feet of gas per day and is now on production. It is the fourth well in the area in which Bengal has participated, and there are other locations available for exploitation drilling.

Bengal also has announced the fund raising efforts are continuing in Europe and it is anticipated that these monies will be available no later than the second quarter of 1977.

Champlin finals well

DENVER, Colo. — Champlin Petroleum Co., a subsidiary of Union Pacific Corp., announced completion of a second well, the No. 1 Bingham, in the Pineview area of the Overthrust Belt in Summit County, Utah.

The well flowed oil at a daily rate of 1,556 barrels and gas at a rate of 1.55 million cubic feet from the Nugget formation.

The completion was through perforations from 9,428 feet to 9,534 feet. The well is 2,000 feet southeast of Champlin No. 1 McDonald, the discovery well of the Pineview Field.

Gas hikes imminent

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Seven cities in Southeast Texas must pay Southern Union Gas Co. the increased cost of obtaining gas, according to the railroad commission.

The commission issued an order Monday superseding ordinances in Port Arthur, Port Neches, Groves, Lakeview, Nederland, Griffing Park and Pear Ridge.

The cities' gas supplier, Southern Union, is paying $1.8372 per thousand cubic feet (mcf) to Texas Transmission Co. Deletion of the contract adjustment clauses through city ordinances would give Southern Union only $1.2477 per mcf, the commission said.

Southern Union must file sufficient bond to guarantee refunds if the rates authorized by the commission Monday are later "deemed invalid."

East Basin areas draw discoveries

Oil strikes have been completed in Fisher and Runnels counties, while Crockett and Upton drew prospector sites. Pool development activity is slated for Schleicher and Irion sectors.

Expansion anticipated

TULSA (AP) — Demand for gasoline and other petroleum products may cause a new round of expansion in the U.S. refining industry this year, the Oil and Gas Journal said today.

A bitter winter, President Carter's plans for economic stiumlation and more growth demand tha predicted all point to a need for more expansion, the Tulsa-based magazine said.

"Demand growth absorbed virtually all of the new capacity last year and 1977 consumption is expected to average almost a million barrels daily higher than 1976," it said.

Domestic refinery capacity was 16.13 million barrels per day on Jan. 1.

Demand was previously forecast by the Journal at 18,458,000 barrels per day this year, up 5.6 per cent over 1976.

California drought may result in increase in food prices

By JACK EGAN
The Washington Post

SAN FRANCISCO — The serious drought in California has raised concern about higher national food prices and another upward nudge for inflation, because California is this country's most important food basket.

California produces a quarter of all foods consumed in the U.S. and 40 per cent of the vegetables. What is shaping up as the state's driest year on record, following its third driest in 1976, comes on top of a killer freeze in Florida that wiped out much of the vegetable crop there.

But economists at the Bank of America, a major agricultural lender, and the world's largest bank, cautioned that it is too early to predict a disaster and pointed out that the effect of the drought varies considerably throughout the state, with many prime producing areas still expecting excellent harvests.

A 0.5 per cent jump in the consumer price index as a result of the drought is the most expected now by Eric Peter Thor, who watches the California economy for the bank. He thinks that in a year this could turn out to be "a temporary blip" if the rains finally arrive.

For the July 1-Jan. 28 period California's North Coast and Cascade-Sierra areas have received 35 per cent of their normal rainfall, the Sacramento Valley has gotten 44 per cent of normal, the San Joaquin Valley and Central Coast have 85 per cent of normal moisture, while Southern California's coastal and interior regions have more than 110 per cent of normal moisture.

Water-rationing measures are getting better than expected results. In Marin county, north of San Francisco, cutbacks in the first week of mandatory conservation dropped consumption almost 60 per cent below a year ago, to 10.4 million gallons a day, well below the goal of 12 million. Other counties are considering formal conservation plans, and voluntary conservation is in effect in most of the state.

"I don't see a disaster overall because some areas of the state will have a very good year," says Richard H. Courtney, the director of commodity research for the Bank of America.

Water supplies remain ample, and some larger than usual yields are expected in Southern California's abundant Imperial Valley, famous for many specialty fruit and vegetable crops, the vegetableproducing areas north of Los Angeles and the region around Salinas in the middle part of the state, where crops such as artichokes and asparagus are grown for the entire U.S.

"Farmers down in Southern California think it's going to be a great year, and they think prices will be up 30 per cent with no reduction in acreage," Courtney says. "And the Drought Coordination Center in Sacramento says a lot of people are calling from out-of-state asking where they can buy vegetables because of the effects of the Florida freeze."

On the other hand, the prospect of a 25 per cent reduction in water supplies to parts of the state's central and northern areas is expected to have a considerable impact on production of cotton, rice, and tomatoes which are all water pensive. Wine-grape production is also expected to be affected.

Cattle raising and dairy farming, totaling nearly $7 billion in annual gross receipts for California, depend heavily on dry land grazing to feed herds, and these activities are already shaping up as the state's hardest hit sector, as they are in other drought-plagued regions in the western states.

Culling of herds is now moving cattle to market which would otherwise be kept feeding. This is dropping prices of beef in the short run, but higher prices are predicted for the future when supplies will be reduced.

California also accounts for 24 per cent of this country's rice production, almost all of it for export, and this thirsty crop is expected to drop significantly in acreage, as are forage crops like alfalfa and corn.

California grows 85 per cent of all tomatoes canned in the U.S., so tomato processing is also expected to suffer, adding to the higher prices that resulted from last year's cannery strike and settlement.

Because of higher prices, the Bank of America economists expect gross farm receipts in California to rise to a record $10 billion, but increased production costs are expected to cut net income of farmers below last year's $2.5 billion.

Already the drought is affecting some nonagricultural industry, primarily the winter recreation areas, where lack of snow has kept away skiiers. Boating enthusiasts may also find their favorite reservoir lakes unavailable this summer with effects on surrounding economies.

Because of a cut in electricity produced by hydro-electric plants, the water shortage will probably also increase the state's import bill for fuel oil.

Andrew Young in Nigeria to see ceremony

By SERGE SCHMEMANN

LAGOS, Nigeria (AP) — Ambassador Andrew Young flew to northern Nigeria today to see more than 3,000 warrior tribesmen in a traditional ceremony pledging their loyalty to their emirs and sultans.

The Great Durbar in Kaduna, the capital of northern Nigeria, was one of the most spectacular events of the second World Festival of Black and African Art and Culture. The festival opened in Lagos on Jan. 15 and ends Feb. 12.

Nigeria is the last stop on Young's three-nation visit to black Africa to demonstrate the Carter administration's "new style and new foreign policy," as he put it in an arrival statement Monday.

Arr ving from Tanzania and Kenya, the first black American ambassador to the United Nations told reporters oil-rich Nigeria is as important in African developments and in resolving the Rhodesia crisis as the five "front-line" states in eastern Africa that are the chief supporters of the black nationalist guerrillas fighting to end white rule in Rhodesia.

Young met for an hour with Nigeria's chief of state, Lt. Gen. Olesegun Obasanjo, to discuss the situation in west and southern Africa.

Relations between the United States and oil-rich Nigeria, Africa's most populous nation, have improved considerably since the end of the civil war in Angola.

Although American companies have the second largest foreign stake in Nigeria's oil industry, the United States and Nigeria were on opposite sides of the Angolan conflict. AntiAmerican sentiment was so strong in Lagos last spring that a visit by Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger was canceled because of fears for his safety.

Buffalo digging itself out from under snow

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — A huge pile of snow topped with a sign reading "Mt. Buffalo" stands as a monument downtown to efforts to clear the snow-clogged streets of the city.

On Monday, Mayor Stanley Makowski decided enough progress had been made in the clean-up to allow an easing of the driving ban within city limits.

But the city speed limit was reduced to 20 miles per hour, parking was forbidden on all bus routes and private cars have to carry at least three persons.

Across the state, schools and businesses reopened as the natural gas crisis eased.

Buffalo School Supt. Eugene Reville said high schools would open Wednesday and all other schools on Thursday. Reville said the decision was based not on availability of gas, but on the condition of the side streets, many of which remain impassable.

The worst of the gas shortage seemed to be over, but Buffalo area industries have to wait until Wednesday before resuming operations.

The National Fuel Gas Co. said western New York industrial plants would be permitted to use 75 per cent of their authorized base volume then.

Rail traffic in Buffalo began moving after the Interstate Commerce Commission lifted an embargo placed on all railroad traffic to the city. ConRail officials said many undelivered perishables were still sitting on the clogged tracks.

ConRail had to bring in a rotary plow from Syracuse to clear off a huge 1½-mile long drift of hard packed snow blocking rail traffic north out of Buffalo.

Downtown stores were crowded despite continued delivery problems. Guy Erickson, executive vice president of the Retail Merchants Association, said the surge was a result of most residents being virtually snowbound for a week or more.

With measure assured, House providing forum for pay raise opponents

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House, after insuring that its proposed $13,000 pay raise cannot be blocked, is providing a forum for members who want to sound off in opposition to it.

The sound and fury take llace in a three-day hearing being held by a subcommittee of the Post Office and Civil Service Committee.

Rep. William Ford, D-Mich., the chairman, said Monday in opening the hearings that any senator or representative who wants a chance to go on record opposing the pay raise will be welcome to speak.

There is, however, almost no chance that the House will actually stop the raises, despite 15 resolutions to do so sponsored by more than 50 House members.

The House itself is not expected to vote on the issue. And, under a system established by law in 1967, the salary increases will take effect automaticallyon Feb. 20 unless disapproved before then by either the Senate or the House.

A move to kill the raises was blocked in the Senate last week by a 56-42 vote. The House, unless it changes the schedule of the recesses that start this week in observance of Lincoln's and Washington's birthdays, will not be able to have a floor vote on the pay raise before it takes effect.

The pay increases, including a boost in congressional salaries from $44,600 a year to $57,500, were recommended by former President Gerald R. Ford and supported by President Carter on the basis of the findings of a special commission.

The increases average 28 per cent for federal judges and top executive branch officials as well as congressmen. They would be the first raises for those officials — except for a single 5 per cent raise—since 1969. The Consumer Price Index has gone up more than 60 per cent in this period.

The first-year cost of the raises has been estimated at $130 million.

Firm says more lost jobs than government reported

MEDIA, Pa. (AP) — Three million more Americans lost their jobs in January than were reported by the U.S. Labor Department, a private research firm says.

The Sindlinger & Co. also said true unemployment for last Wednesday was 11.6 per cent, or more than 11 million persons out of work, and that unemployment actually rose 1 per cent from December, while the Labor Department reported January unemployment had dropped one-half of 1 per cent.

The government failed to account for those who lost jobs due to the severe cold weather because it used data taken before the harsh weather began, Sindlinger & Co. said in a newsletter Monday.

Government calculating methods and the use of incomplete data also contributed to the inaccurate unemployment picture, Sindlinger said.

There was no immediate reaction from the Labor Department.

Sindlinger's surveys for Jan. 12 to Feb. 2 showed 3.3 million workers laid off due to cold-related problems, and surveys for Feb. 3-6, tabulated Monday, showed no change.

Sindlinger said his firm has conducted daily unemployment surveys by telephone in all 48 contiguous states at the rate of 1,100 calls per week for the past 20 years.

President Carter's Cabinet was told Monday that the weather had caused 1.8 million layoffs.

The Labor Department bases its monthly reports on a sample week adjusted seasonally according to historical data from the past five years.

Sindlinger does not use seasonally adjusted figures and claims the adjusted figures in the government's reports can be artificially low.

Carter administration to increase Israeli aid

By DON OBERDORFER
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The Carter administration has decided to increase U.S. aid to Israel by $285 million, but has rejected that country's request to be allowed to sell advanced fighter-bombers to Ecuador.

The decisions, which were made known Monday, are the first tangible signs of the new administration's policies toward military support of the Jewish state. President Carter, during his campaign, criticized the Ford administration for failing to give enough aid to Israel and promised to supply assistance "in the full amount necessary." At the same time, Carter was highly critical of increased sales of sophisticated arms.

President Ford in his final budget request proposed to supply $1.5 billion in grants and loans to Israel, which is by far the largest single beneficiary of U.S. assistance. Carter's planned increase of $285 million is in response to Israeli pleas calling the Ford total inadequate.

Israel had requested $2.3 billion in aid for the coming fiscal year. It is unclear whether Israeli officials and their allies in Congress will continue to wage a fight for the higher total. A battle with the Ford administration over aid levels created tension in relations between the two governments last year.

In order to maintain its relationships with the Arab world, the Carter administration has decided to increase its aid requests for Egypt, Jordan and Syria in rough proportion to the Israeli increase, according to administration officials. This would bring proposed aid to Egypt to about $750 million, aid to Jordan to about $220 million, and aid to Syria to about $90 million in fiscal year 1978.

Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance is scheduled to visit all these countries, plus Lebanon an Saudi Arabia, in an eight-day Middle Eastern journey beginning next Monday.

Vance held separate meetings Monday with the five ambassadors of the Arab countries he will visit and with Israeli Ambassador Simcha Dinitz.

The decision to reject Israel's request to sell 24 of its Kfir fighter-bombers, partly made with U.S. technology, to Ecuador was announced by State Department spokesman Frederick Z. Brown. He said such a transaction "would run counter to our policy against the sale of advanced and sophisticated aircraft to Latin America."

Governor wants land purchases protected

AUGUSTA, Maine (AP) — Gov. James Longley and state Atty. Gen. Joseph Brennan flew to Washington today to urge their congressmen to safeguard land purchases and bond sales from the effect of Indian claims on 60 per cent of the land in Maine.

Maine announced Monday it was offering $15.4 million in 10- year general obligation bonds. The bond sale is the first test of market acceptance of Maine securities since last fall, when the Maine Municipal Bond Bank cancelled a $27 million issue for towns, schools and hospitals, because of legal questions raised by an Indian suit.

The suit, filed in 1972 by the Justice Department on behalf of the Passamaquoddy and Penobscot tribes, sought $300 million in damages on the grounds that 12.5 million acres of land was unjustly taken from the Indians.

Last month the Interior Department recommended that the suit be amended to seek return of the land, now occupied by 350,000 non-Indians, as well as the $300 million.

When the ownership of the land is in doubt, the ability of a government to tax property to repay its debts is clouded.

Longley said he would tell Maine's congressional delegation, "Short-range relief will have to come from Washington."

Ice cream has rich history

MT. MORRIS, Ill. (AP) — Ice cream began as a treat for the rich. From the Romans to King Charles I of England to fashionable restaurants in 17th-century Paris, ice cream was for the wealthy and powerful, says Bob Krebs, editor of American Dairy Review.

"It wasn't until 1851 that the commercial ice cream industry was born in the United States," Krebs notes. "Abolitionist Jacob Fussell converted surplus cream from his Baltimore dairy into ice cream and was awarded the contract to supply Union troops with ice cream during the Civil War."

SEC deadlocked as Florida nips Tennessee, 80-76

By The Associated Press

Don't be surprised if there is a mass exodus of tourists from Kentucky to Florida one of these days in appreciation of what the basketball teams of Florida and Florida State did for the Kentucky Wildcats Monday night.

While third-ranked Kentucky was walloping Florida State 97-57 in a nonconference game, the University of Florida was dealing No. 11 Tennessee its first Southeastern Conference defeat 80-76, dropping the Vols into a virtual first-place deadlock with Kentucky.

Seventh-ranked Alabama remained close to the SEC leaders with a 72-68 triumph over Mississippi, while fifth-ranked Michigan moved into the Big Ten Conference lead, downing No. 8 Minnesota 86-80.

Three other members of The Associated Press Top 20 were in action. Arkansas, rated 13th, rallied from a 10-point halftime deficit and edged Tulane 76-73, No. 17 Syracuse routed Bentley 104-86 and No. 20 VMI celebrated its first-ever appearance in the rankings by outlasting Marshall 97-90.

While Kentucky Coach Joe Hall was ecstatic over the way his Wildcats manhandled Florida State, the sellout crowd at Louisville was really awaiting the score from Florida's tiny gym in Gainesville. And when it came through, a huge roar went up.

But the decibel count probably was not as high as that of the 5,000 fans who packed Florida's cramped court.

"This place is so loud ...it's Alligator Alley," sighed Tennessee Coach Ray Mears. "You can't concentrate and you can't even hear yourself think. It's a tough place to play under any circumstances, but we did pretty well."

But Florida did better, as Al Bonner scored nine of his 19 points in the final 7½ minutes, including two free throws with three seconds left that sealed the triumph.

Tennessee's Bernie-Ernie duo led the scoring, Bernard King netting 28 points and Ernie Grunfeld adding 26. Florida's Bob Smyth aided Bonner with 17.

Kentucky put on a dazzling exhibition in crushing Florida State as Jack Givens pumped in 28 points and Mike Phillips chipped in with 19.

"We're playing with the alertness we have been looking for," said Hall. "I don't believe anyone could have handled us the way we played. And there is no question that we're going to improve."

In addition to his clutch free throws, Dunn held Mississippi's John Billips to eight points, 11 below his average.

"We pride ourselves on the way we play defense," Dunn said. "I was just trying to stay with him."

Alabama's Rickey Brown topped the Tide with 24 points.

The Big Ten showdown at Minneapolis was in doubt until Michigan's Steve Grote hit a baseline jump shot with 1:33 left, snapping an 80-80 tie, then made a key steal. Phil Hubbard led the Wolverines with 23 points and John Robinson had 20. Mike Thompson and Ray Williams each had 20 for Minnesota, with Thompson scoring 18 after the intermission as the Gophers erased a 10-point halftime deficit.

"We were sharp, very sharp," said Michigan Coach Johnny Orr. "We probably played about as well as we can play."

Syracuse had little trouble with outmanned Bentley in winning its 11th in a row as 5-foot10 Jimmy Williams scored 19 points and 6-10 Roosevelt Bouie contributed 18. It was the Orangemen's sixth 100-point game of the season.

VMI moved ahead of Marshall with a 12-2 spurt late in the first half and went on to record its 18th consecutive victory. The Keydets won it at the foul line, hitting on 33 of 39 attempts.

Will Bynum paced VMI with 29 points, Ron Carter had 22 and Dave Montgomery 21.

"Naturally, we're pleased about the ranking," said Coach Charlie Schmaus.

Ramirez routs Guerry

MIAMI (AP) — Top-seeded Raul Ramirez of Mexico had little trouble beating his unseeded opponent, but secondseeded Eddie Dibbs of Miami had to work hard to defeat his unranked foe in the opening round of the $50,000 Miami Grand Prix Tennis Classic.

Ramirez easily defeated Zan Guerry of Lookout Mountain, Tenn. 6-2, 6-1 Monday. Dibbs, who played high-school tennis in Miami Beach before going to the University of Miami, had to rally from a first-set tie-breaker (7-2) loss in overcoming Jun Kuki of Japan 6-7, 6-2, 6-2. Dibbs breezed through the final two sets in his first match in Miami in at least four years.

He said playing outdoors in windy, 60-degree weather may have affected his start.

"It did get a little cold, but we've been playing indoors up north and it's still cold in there, so it shouldn't bother me," he said. "It's just different, playing outside and getting used to the lights and everything. It was tough for me to adjust to the lights."

Olympian honored

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Bruce Jenner didn't bite the hand that rewarded him, but he did suggest the Amateur Athletic Union could make improvements and improvements will be necessary to keep the United States competitive in the 1980 Olympics in Russia.

The 27-year-old who won a gold medal last year with a world record performance in the grueling decathlon at Montreal, on Monday became the 47th winner of the AAU's James E. Sullivan Trophy, emblematic of the nation's outstanding amateur athlete of 1976.

Jenner, who scored 8,618 points in the 10-event track and field test, previously had been named the Athlete of the Year by The Associated Press.

In the AAU voting, the 195pound trackman who stands 6foot-2, outdistanced swimmer John Naber and figure skater Dorothy Hamill who also were gold medal winning Olympians. Swimmer Tim Shaw won the award in 1975.

"That gold medal meant more to me than all the money in the world," said Jenner, who now is an ABC sports commentator. "This award is the perfect way to end a career."

After thus acknowledging the Sullivan Trophy, Jenner said he believed the AAU and other organizations must make changes to keep America's athletes in top spots.

Odessa College hands Chaps bad nightmare

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
R-T Sports Writer

ODESSA—A college professor once said that dreams rarely last more than three minutes in duration, but Midland College's cage Chaparrals suffered through a 52 second nightmare in the Odessa College gym Monday night that won't be forgotten for a long time.

The Chaps blew a three-point lead with less than a minute left to lose a heart jerking 82-81 Western Junior College Athletic Conference battle to the Petroplex rival Wranglers. But it was the way they lost that hurt the most.

OC'S TONY Forch cut Midland's three-point lead to 81-80 with a pair of free throws with 52 seconds left in the contest, but still the Chaps looked like they might keep this one from falling into the fire.

That was before the Chaps threw the ball away on a bad pass and had one stolen out of their grasp after a key rebound by Jackson Pace had kept the Wranglers from scoring.

OC turned the second mistake into a game winning basket, but even that turned out to be real work. Former Midland High star Eddie Herring took a shot with seven seconds left, and the Chaps thought they had victory once again. But it turned out that Forch was in good enough position for a back-handed tip-in with five seconds left.

THE CHAPS called a time out to formulate a mircale, but the best laid plans went awry when Herring stole an inbounds pass from Pace to cut off any real threat.

Forch was the real thorn in the Chaps' feathers all the way to the end. He led all scorers with 24 points, including the last four that proved to be the game winners.

It is true that the Chaps looked a bit stale in the first half, and went into the locker room trailing 46-41. However, MC staged a patented surge in the second half behind the gunning of guard Tommy Parks and Pace.

Midland trailed 52-45 early in the second half, but begin to cut the margin before erupting for eight unanswered points with 12:02 left in the game for a 64-60 lead.

PARKS WAS the main spark in the drive and he ended with 22 points, getting fast break layups, tipins and long bombs. Pace countered inside and outside for 21 markers, and reserve Alvin Mayes chipped in with 13, six late in the game.

Forch, however, hit two baskets back-to-back to knot the score at 64, and the game was tied three more times and the lead switched hands 11 more times before the final gun. In all, the game was tied eight times and the lead switched 25 times. It was just a typical WJCAC contest.

Sim Nickerson gave the Chaps an 81-78 lead with 1:20 left in the game to set the stage for the nightmare.

THE LOSS crippled the Chaps' hopes of winning the WJCAC crown as they stayed in second place despite the loss with an 8-5 league mark. The Chaps are 17-7 on the year. Odessa Colelege is now 6-7 in league play and 16-9 on the year. The Wranglers own a 2-1 record against the Chaps this year.

Midland College will have to regroup quickly because they host league leading Western Texas Thursday at 7:30 p.m. on the MC campus. A loss there could drop the Chaps into third place if all the cards fall right or wrong, depending on how you look at it.

Midlanders choose SWC

By PAUL DOMOWITCH

Three Midland football standouts climaxed outstanding scholastic careers Tuesday when they each signed college letters of intent.

Rusty Maroney and Phillip Ward, two of the finest running backs in Midland High history cast their lots with Southwest Conference schools on this, the opening date for signing intent letters with SWC institutions.

Maroney, a 6-1, 200 pounder, who played both fullback and linebacker for Coach Jerry Hopkins' Bulldogs this season, inked with Texas Tech.

Ward, a two-time all-district selection, signed with Grant Teaff and Baylor.

The third Tall City gridder to make a collegiate decision Tuesday was Robert E. Lee quarterback Brad Wright, who signed a letter of intent with New Mexico.

All three had been hotly recruited by a host of colleges, but their decisions came as no great surprise.

Maroney rushed for 743 yards this season, averaging 5.5 yards a carry, and scored eight touchdowns. He also did the punting for the Bulldogs, averaging almost 36 yards a boot.

He played one way for most of the season until a rash of unexpected injuries to the Pack defensive corps towards the end of the campaign forced him to play linebacker as well.

He played superbly there, and his versatility, quickness, and hitting ability is what interested Tech Coach Steve Sloan in the Tall City prospect.

Ward, the fleet-footed 5-11, 170-pound wingback may have been the most sought after college prospect in the district next to Odessa's Darrell Shepard.

He made the all-district squad for the second consecutive year, rushing for 905 yards in 149 carries. His 754 yard district total gave him the 5-4A rushing title ahead of runnerup Shepard.

Ward also scored 54 points during the 1976 season, 48 in 5-4A play to tie him for top scoring honors with San Angelo's Bill Woodard.

During his junior and senior campaigns, the Baylor-bound lad carried the pigskin 271 times for 1,803 yards.

Wright, the talented Lee quarterback, who led Coach Jim Acree's Rebels to the 5-4A title this past season, did not follow his two cross-town rivals to SWC schools, choosing New Mexico instead.

The 6-3, 195-pounder passed at a 51 per cent completion clip in 1976, gathering 488 yards through the airways, tossing seven touchdown passes and throwing only two interceptions.

Wright racked up impressive running statistics as well, lugging the ball for 190 yards and five more TDs.

Other District 5-4A athletes expected to sign are: Tim Orr, Abilene Cooper with Texas Tech; Denny Harris, all-state tackle from Abilene High, Texas Tech; Herman Reece, speedy wide reciever from Abilene High, Texas Tech; Darrell Shepard, all-state quarterback from Odessa High, University of Texas and Tony Jones, wide receiver from Odessa High, Baylor.

Jennings Teel, the 6-2, 190-pound quarterback from Reagan County is also expected to sign with Texas A&M.

Aeros may be forced to give up some pay

HOUSTON (AP) — The World Hockey Association Houston Aeros have two WHA titles and a current five-point lead in the WHA'S Western Division to their credit but they need more-credit.

Despite their continued success on the ice, the Aeros are facing a financial crisis. It was revealed Monday that Aero management may ask the players to either defer or give up one or more paychecks to help meet spiraling costs.

"That's one of the things we are looking at," Aeros general counsel harrison Vickers said. "If we do the proper business planning that we are in the process of doing, then we will remain as solid a franchise as we have always been.

"This is not a desperation move. We're looking ahead for ways to cut overall costs. When we decid on the plan, it will be an across-the-board measure for all our employes and expenditures."

The Aeros are averaging 1,400 fewer fans per game this season than last. The Aeros averaged 9,553 fans per game last season but attendance has declined to 8,038 so far this season. The Aeros' breakeven attandance is 11,000 per game.

"We are discussing everything from the number of clubs we own on up to the amount of playoff bonuses that we pay," Vickers said. "Obviously, the players are a significant part of the cost of our doing business and if there is a way to accentuate savings there with their cooperation, then we are exploring that.

The Aeros' average salary is $75,000, compared to the WHA league average of $85,000 and the National Hockey League's $96,000.

"We feel that if the situation is handled now, we can ensure the operation here for the next 10 years."

Players have refused to discuss the situation. Aeros captain Ted Taylor, after a lengthy team meeting Monday, referred all questions to Aeros management.

"There's no question we have a problem ," Aeros coach and general manager Bill Dineen said. "We feel the whole thing right now is to get through the season. We're down to a short period of time now.

Kentucky cagers hold third place ranking

By The Associated Press

Kentucky is again No. 3 in The Associated Press college basketball ratings this week but Coach Joe Hall wouldn't have minded playing top-ranked San Francisco or runner-up UCLA Monday night.

"I don't believe anybody could control us the way we played tonight," he said following Kentucky's 97-57 rout of Florida State. "There is no question that we're going to improve."

While San Francisco, UCLA and Kentucky held onto the top three positions, Nevada-Las Vegas skidded from fourth place to 10th.

San Francisco, unbeaten in 23 games, routed St. Mary's, Calif., 103-77 and Nevada-Reno 98&1 last week to hold on to its No. 1 ranking. The Dons received 51 of 58 first-place votes and 1,115 of a possible 1,160 points from a nationwide panel of sports writers and broadcasters.

UCLA, which received six first-place votes and 1,009 points, beat Tennessee 103-89 and then upended Pacific-8 rivals Washington 75-65 and Washington State 72-59. The other first-place vote went to eighth-ranked Minnesota, which bowed to fifth-ranked Michigan 86-80 Monday night.

Last week, Kentucky shaded Mississippi State 92-85 and buried Vanderbilt 113-73. The Wildcats received 800 points.

Jolliff, Moses win net titles

Sidney Jolliff and Mike Moses won titles over the weekend in the Midland Junior Tennis Association's Round Robin Tournament.

Miss Jolliff of Midland High won 36 games to win the girl's division while Moses of Lee won boy's competition with 40 games.

Other top girls were Allison Pace, Midland High, 35 games; Pam Hamm, Lee, 31; and Monica Wyant, Lee, 30.

Jim Fitzgerald of Midland High and Tim Carter of Lee each won 38 games, but Fitzgerald won a playoff for second. Jack Hooper of Midland won 35 games.

OU expects bumper crop

By The Associated Press

Today is the day prep footballers can sign letters of intent with Big Eight Conference schools, and it appears Oklahoma University will get almost all of the players it has been seeking.

OU had said it would offer scholarships to 19 Oklahoma prep players, and 14, with 10 of them all-staters, said Monday they would sign with the Sooners.

Only one of the 19 has said he likely will not attend OU. He is Norman running back Bruce Compton, who says he will sign with Texas Tech today. Compton says he has not completely ruled out a Big Eight school, including Oklahoma, however.

One of OU's signees today was to be Richard Turner, a 6-3, 240-pound lineman from Edmond.

Turner said Monday night that: "I will sign with coach (Bobby) Proctor (OU defensive secondary coach) Tuesday morning. My decision has really been made all year. OU has been my favorite all year.

"I like the people. Everyone is nice there. And, they've got great facilities and a good weight program.

"I made my visit there last weekend and met lots of players, and most of the players they are recruiting they were getting. They've won in the past and I think they'll win in the future."

Another top state lineman, Frank Moore of Millwood, said Tuesday he also is headed for Norman. Millwood is a 6-6, 220 pounder.

Besides Turner and Moore, all-staters who had said they would go to Norman were tight ends Bill Becktold of Midwest City and Jim Jones of Turpin, wide receiver Randy Nelson of Woodward, quarterbacks Jay Jimerson of Norman and Steve Whaley of Cleveland, defensive back Byron Paul of Altus and linebackers Clifford Chatman of Clinton, Mike Coast of Bartlesville Sooner and John Higginbotham of Hugo.

However, Oklahoma State matched its counterpart by getting Bart Latham of Bristow. The 6-4, 260-pound offensive lineman graduated from high school at mid-term and already has enrolled at OSU.

Oklahoma State has not said who it is after in the state, but seven of the state's top prospects — three of them allstaters — say they will go to Stillwater.

Known all-staters who said they would sign with OSU were quarterback Tony Bradley of Pauls Valley, tackle Donnie Oates of Tulsa Washington and Latham.

Other top players like tight end Brad Gahm of Broken Arrow, guard John McClanahan of Jenks and linebacker Floyd Rogers of Hollis also were reportedly going to Stillwater.

Scott Dawson, brother of OSU tackle Chris Dawson, was trying to decide between OU and OSU. Scott is a 6-3, 230-pound tackle.

WTC wins in overtime

Western Texas College of Snyder opened up a three-game lead in the Western Junior College Athletic Conference Monday night with a 60-51 overtime win over Frank Phillips.

Odessa College aided the advancement of Western Texas with an 82-81 upset over Midland College.

WTC is now 24-2 for the year and 11-2 in the conference race. Midland College is 8-5.

The Chaps got a break in their battle for second place, however, when South Plains College upset Amarillo College, 75-69. Amarillo is now 7-6.

Midland College will host Western Texas at 7:30 p.m. Thursday in the MC gym.

Butch Person and Darrell Smith scored quick baskets in overtime for Western Texas and then slowly pulled away from Frank Phillips.

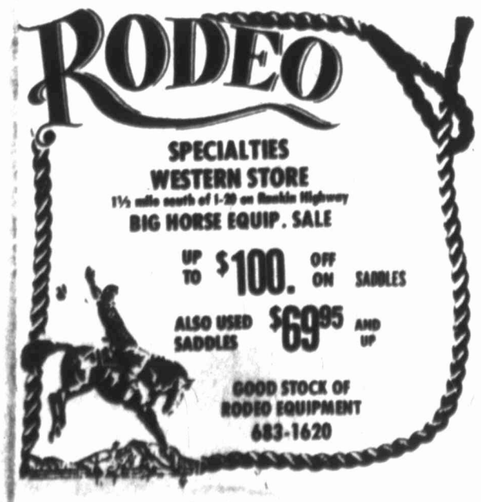
Midland fems win

The Midland High girls used a stout defense in the Midland High gym Monday night to defeat San Angelo, 43-20, to run their cage record to 20-3 for the year.

Kim White, Jo Ann Johnson, Susan Sloan and Pam Forest led the defensive charge while Terry Dean paced the offense with 18 points. Karen Cook added 11 markers.

Midland High won the B-team outing, 38-23, as Jina Rasmussen dumped in 18 points.

The Midland girls will travel to Abilene Thursday for two games with the Eagles, beginning at 6:30 p.m.



Rebs, Abilene face key contests

By BOB DILLON

Robert E. Lee's Rebels and Abilene, co-leaders in the second half of the District 5-4A basketball race, have key games tonight with the Eagles having the easy road.

Lee plays Big Spring in the Lee Gymnasium while Abilene tries hapless Odessa High in Odessa.

Midland, meanwhile, hits the road again for a date with the San Angelo Central Bobcats and Odessa Permian faces Abilene Cooper with the loser facing possible elimination from the second half race.

The Rebels only beat the Steers, 71-69 in the first round, thanks to a 34-point output by Billy Ray Ennis who is the No. 2 scorer in 5-4A.

Midland beat the Bobcats, 59-58, in the MHS Gymnasium and it could be another cliff-hanger on the Bobcat floor.

Lee and Abilene stand 3-0 in the second half of the chase while Permian and Cooper, first half winners with 6-1 records, are a step behind with 2-1 readings.

Byron Roberts, Abilene's 6-0 junior sharp-shooter, has scored 199 points in 10 games for an average of 19.9 per outing while Ennis is scoring at a 19.3 clip with 193 points. Next comes Casey Wilder of Big Spring with 182 points and the Rebs will have to slow down the 6-4 senior postman in order to win.

STAN STRIFER, Permian senior guard is next with 180 points, but is doubtful against Cooper in the Hunt Center Gymnasium on the McMurry College campus with a sprained ankle.

Midland's Craig Dunn is the No. 6 scorer in the loop with an average of 16.3 per game. Lee has three others in the double figures in league play with Roy Lee Smith averaging 13.0 per game. Mike Wallace and Mike Denny follow with 12.5 and 12.7 averages while Midland High's Brently Jackson is scoring 12.2 per game for the Purple Pack.

Starting tonight for the Rebels will be Ennis, Denny, Wallace, Smith and Bobby Alexander while the Steers most likely will go with Wilder, Bubba Stripling, Elory Green, Mike Harris and Kenneth Perry.

The Rebs are 25-6 on the year compared to Big Spring's 13-14 record. Midland is 9-19 while San Angelo is 9-15. Abilene stands 17-12 while Cooper is 22-7 and Permian stands 21-6 on the year. OHS had the poorest record with a 7-22 mark.

THE REBELS will play three games with the Steers with a sophomore contest slated to start at 4:30 p.m. followed by the junior varsity tilt at 6:15 p.m. Tip-off for the varsity game is 8 p.m.

There will only be a junior varsity and varsity tilt in San Angelo with radio station KCRS doing the play-by-play at 7:55 p.m.

On Friday, Lee travels to Odessa for a battle with Permian while Midland hosts OHS. In other games, San Angelo is at Abilene and Cooper at Big Spring.

Joining Dunn and Jackson in the Midland lineup tonight will be Terry Rogers, James Hicks and Steve Brittain. Lorenzo Payne, Craig Brown, Brian Narvid, Randy Drew and Kenneth Sullivan, will make up the Bobcat lineup.

Danny Whitt resigns TCU basketball post

FORT WORTH, Tex. (AP) — Danny Whitt, in his seventh year as assistant basketball coach at Texas Christian University, is resigning, effective immediately, the Fort Worth Star Telegram learned Monday.

"After long hours of deliberation and after talking with coach (Johnny) Swaim, I have decided to submit my resignation," Whitt said in a telephone interview. "I hesitate to do it at this time but perhaps now is the time since it would give coach Swaim the opportunity to select someone to help him immediately."

The Star-Telegram learned of Whitt's decision following Monday's Frog Club meeting when Swaim gave an emotional talk to to the members and said an announcement was forthcoming in a couple of days. There was speculation that Swaim, his team now in the throes of a 14game losing streak, might be resigning.

However, Swaim denied this and TCU athletic director Frank Windegger gave the coach a strong vote of confidnce.

"I am behind Johnny Swaim 100 per cent," he said. "I think he is just as good a coach today as he was six or seven years ago when he was winning championships. I have a total commitment to Johnny Swaim."

Windegger said a search for a replacement for Whitt will begin immediately.

Whitt, admittedly discouraged from his team's lack of sucess, added it was a difficult decision to leave because of his many friends at TCU. "My association with TCU has been one of great joy. I have made many friends that are difficult to leave. Yet, I feel that now is the time for me to step aside and pursue a new carreer in business."

Whitt said his decision boiled down to two factors. "I want to be home with my family more and I'm ruining my health by working hard at a job that's not giving me any return."

He added that, "Maybe a new guy can give TCU new life and enthusiasm."

Whitt came to TCU from Arlington Houston. He produced a district championship team in his initial year there. He has also coached in the Arlington junior high system and at Ben Wheeler.

Whitt and Lee Pestana have been in charge of recruiting and he also scouts many of the Frog foes.

Whitt, a native of Bonham, graduated from East Texas State in 1961.

Billy Conigliaro prepares for comeback bid with A's

LYNN, Mass. (AP) — Tony Conigliaro, plagued by faltering sight in a damaged left eye, failed in a game comeback bid with the Boston Red Sox. But kid brother Billy is determined to keep the family name alive in baseball's box scores.

Billy C., who hasn't faced major league pitching since 1973, is trying to come back at the invitation of the boss who let him go, owner Charlie Finley of the Oakland A's.

"All I want is a good shot and I'm sure Mr. Finley will give me that chance," Billy said after another day of strenuous workouts. "We've always been very honest with each other. I respect him for that."

Signed for a reported $60,000 bonus by the Red Sox in 1965, the same year that Tony led the American League in homers, Billy lived in the shadows of his more famous brother, whose left cheekbone was shattered by an errant pitch in August, 1967.

Tony sat out the 1968 season, on the disabled list, but came back in 1969, when Billy came up to the Red Sox for 32 games.

The next year, while Tony was belting 36 homers and driving in 116 runs, Billy had 18 homers and 58 RBI in 114 games in the outfield. However, the brother act was broken up in the fall of 1970, when Tony was traded to the California Angels.

Billy's dream world was shattered, and he let everyone know how he felt by sounding off against the Red Sox' management. His personal feelings affected his playing in 1971 as he slumped to 11 homers and just 33 RBI. Then he was traded to the Milwaukee Brewers.

Unable to cope with baseball's way of life, Billy played only 52 games for Milwaukee before walking out against the advice of Tony and his father, Sal.

"Tony and I actually pleaded with him," Sal recalled. "We told him he was crazy, but he had made up his mind to quit the game. He was just a kid. Now he's matured, knows what he wants to do and is working like heck to do it."

Billy signed as a free agent with Finley's A's in 1973 but played in only 48 games, suffering a right knee injury which required two operations. He was released the following March, when Finley signed speedster Herb Washington strictly as a pinch runner.

Billy thought no more of major league baseball until a couple of months ago when he received a phone call from Finley, whose team had been destroyed by the loss of such stars as Reggie Jackson, Joe Rudi, Sal Bando, Gene Tenace and others.

"Mr. Finley called just before Thanksgiving and told me he'd like to give it a try in spring training," Billy said. "That was all I needed. I've got one terrific chance and I don't want to blow it."

Olympic records already falling

NEW YORK (AP) — Opening ceremonies for the 1980 Moscow Olympics are still 3½ years away, but a couple of Olympic records have already been broken.

NBC paid the Russians $85 million for exclusive United States television rights—a record and $60 million more than ABC paid for rights to the Montreal Games last summer. And NBC will televise 150 hours—that comes out to about nine hours a day over the 16 days of the Olympics—of the Games as compared to about 75 hours ABC showed from Montreal.

NBC, HAVING outbid ABC in down-to-the-wire negotiations for the Games, disclosed its coverage plans and some terms of its contract with the Russians Monday. NBC President Herb Schlosser said, "This will probably be the biggest event in the history of broadcasting. It will involve the most massive array of people, technicians and equipment ever assembled for one event."

In addition, Schlosser said the network planned to make a profit. "We expect it to work out as a venture where this company will make money."

ROBERT HOWARD, president of NBC television and head of the network's negotiating team in Moscow, said the contract itself is brief and is based upon trust between the two parties. He said NBC would not have to televise any specific vignettes of life in the Soviet Union if it did not want to. He also said the contract provides that NBC will get its money back if the Games are cancelled, and that other contractual matters are subject to arbitration if necessary.

NBC refused to say how much money would be paid prior to the Olympics, but a source has said the network will pay $20 million in 1977 and $30 million in 1978. NBC said there was nothing in the contract to cover a pullout of U.S. athletes, should that occur.

ASKED HOW NBC would protect its investment should the Russians make additional requests after the network had already invested heavily in the project, Schlosser admitted: "You take risks all the time in the broadcast business." He also said the Soviets had bargained in good faith and "all of the Olympic Games have had advance payments of some kind."

NBC also confirmed that it will pay West German television producer Lothar P. Bock $1 million for his efforts during negotiations. Bock, who worked on behalf of CBS until that network dropped out of the bidding, has had extensive dealings with the Russians on television matters in the past and is credited with a major role in helping NBC land the rights.

NBC also agreed to purchase three Russian entertainment or sports programs a year from Bock through 1981.

Howard revealed that between the time NBC announced it had won the Games and actually signed the contracts, the network had to raise its bid. This apparently was in response to a last-minute effort by ABC to gain the rights.

Flyers burn Flames, 7-4

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Bob Kelly often has sat on the sidelines watching the accomplishments of his teammates on the Philadelphia Flyers.

But Monday night they got a chance to see what he could do, as the Flyers, sparked by Kelly, scored a 7-4 National Hockey League victory over the Atlanta Flames in a nationally televised game.

The left winger, who had one goal and two assists, refused to boast about his performance. And he said he did not expect it to change his role on the team.

"You can't dictate how much you play," he said. "I might go the next 30 games without a point. And how would that look if I shot off my mouth now?"

Kelly has scored five goals and assisted on six in the last five games, giving him 13 goals and 15 assists for the season.

A number of key Flyers are sidelined or slowed by injuries, and Coach Fred Shero backed up Kelly's theory that he would be back on the bench as soon as the regulars return.

"That's life," said Shero. "Some guys get a couple of points and think they deserve more ice time. Kelly knows better than that."

Kelly's total of 28 points is only four shy of his NHL high of 32, set in his first season, in 1970-71. His goal total is only one short of his single-season highs of 14, scored in the 1970-71 and 1971-72 seasons.

The Flyers took a 4-0 lead in the first 14 minutes. Atlanta rallied, making it 4-3. Then Orest Kindrachuk dashed the length of the rink a few minutes later and scored the gamewinning goal.

Don Saleski and Harvey Bennett scored in the first nine minutes of the final period, giving the Flyers command.

"Had we been able to get even, it would have given us a heck of a lift," Atlanta Coach Fred Creighton said. "I think we could have stayed even or won, but it takes a big job to spot a team that many goals, expecially a good team."

The victory extended the Flyers' unbeaten string to eight games and boosted their Patrick Division lead to six points over the idle New York Islanders.

'Killer Watt' new energy-saver

The Los Angeles Times

LOS ANGELES — "We want to snuff out a lot of watts."

That, says Alan Fried, president of Johnson Industries here, is why he named his new product "Killer Watt." Another finalist in the name derby was "Watt Not."

What's behind Fried's preoccupation with watts is an adapter that converts any incandescent lamp or fixture in your house to an energy-saving fluorescent one, such as those you find in commercial buildings and offices. Instead of a conventional light bulb, you simply screw this unit into the socket.

Fried claims — and utility officials agree — that fluorescent lighting uses only half the electricity of an equivalent amount of incandescent lighting.

"Given my job, I feel I would be remiss if I didn't use at least some of these in my home," comments Dane Hooper, coordinator of the Los Angeles Department of Water and Power's Energy Conservation Center, of the Killer Watt.

Pacific Gas and Electric Co., is about "90 per cent certain" to include the unit in a special catalogue of energy-saving devices for the home that it distributes to its customers, according to a spokesman for the utility.

The only hitch is the cost. The combination of Fried's basic adapter and one of the circle-shaped fluorescent bulbs it uses (the bulbs are made by General Electric Co.) costs $14.99. The conventional 60-watt or 75-watt bulb that it replaces lists for 55 cents.

Southern California Edison Co. estimates that lighting accounts for about 10 per cent of the average Southland homeowner's electric bill. If all the lights were switched from conventional incandescent bulbs to fluorescents, the homeowner would thus save about 50 per cent on his lighting bill, or about 5 per cent on his total electric bill, an Edison official says.

There are other savings — both in money and in frayed nerves when it seems that every light bulb in the house decides to burn out at the same time and there isn't a spare to be found.

The lifetime of the average incandescent bulb is between 750 and 1,000 hours, according to GE's San Francisco regional engineer, Paul Schmidt. The circline fluorescent bulbs will last between 10,000 and 12,000 hours. That means that burning an average of four hours a night, a conventional bulb will last six months vs. some eight years for the fluorescent.

Despite those advantages, only about 5 per cent of home lighting is currently fluorescent, says Schmidt. The problem has been that heretofore, special fixtures were required and unless the builder provided for them when he constructed the house, use of fluorescents meant rewiring and other modifications.

Killer Watt is essentially "a way you can retrofit to get fluorescents into existing homes," the Ge engineer notes.

Johnson Industries is a five-year-old lamp manufacturing company that did about $5 million in business last year, according to Fried. The company's first fluorescent product was a table lamp designed with a permanent adapter so it would take only the circle-shaped fluorescent bulb.

However, says Fried, "I don't care how concerned they are about energy, it was clear that the public was not going to run out and buy all new lamps." So Johnson engineer Jack Miller invented the Killer Watt adapter that turns conventional lamps into fluorescent ones.

The privately held company currently makes about 500 Killer Watts a day in two models. In addition to the basic unit, there is one which uses two circline bulbs, and which is about equivalent to a 125 watt conventional bulb. Including bulbs, the double unit lists for $19.99.

Fried says the company began national distribution of Killer Watt last week. It is included in the latest Montgomery Ward catalogue along with three of Johnson's fluorescent table lamp models. Fried says he originally expected to sell about $1 million worth of the adapters this year, but he now thinks it may be closer to $2 million worth.

With an annual market of more than one billion conventional light bulbs at stake, you might think a manufacturer like G.E. would discourage the idea of a massive shift to fluorescent lighting in the house.

Not so, says Schmidt. "We're encouraging it because we want to save energy."

Objects sticking up from the partly buried structure of the Terraset School in Reston, Va., are for air intake and exhaust. Terraset will be the first fully solar-heated and solar-cooled school in the nation.

Sun to shine on Virginia school

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — If all goes according to schedule, more than 900 children will begin classes soon in the nation's first 100 per cent solar-heated and cooled school, located inside a hill in the new town of Reston, Va.

"This technology really started with the cavemen. We got away from it when energy was so cheap. Now we're going back," said Fairfax County's school construction director, Alton C. Hlavin, standing at the crest of the hill, directly above a classroom buried in the earth beneath him.

In its most fundamental terms, Hlavin explained, the project simply represents a return to using the natural heat-insulating properties of the soil and the warming power of the sun to conserve energy.

To do that, school builders essentially bulldozed off the top of the hill, poured a concrete shell for the school, then put the hill back again, as if it were a hat on the school's roof.

Then, with a $665,000 grant from a university in Saudi Arabia, they designed an elaborate system for heating and cooling the school with solar energy, using a computer and 4,860 glass solar collectors to capture the sun's heat.

The project had its origins during the winter of 1973-74, with the energy crisis and the Arab oil embargo. Hlavin and his staff were seeking ways to save energy and eventually they hit upon the idea of putting a school underground and using the sun to heat and cool it.

"At first we named it the 'underground school,'" Hlavin said, "but that sounds kind of gloomy. Over drinks at lunch one day, we came up with the name 'Terraset,' meaning set in the earth."

Initially, Hlavin applied to the National Science Foundation for a grant to heat the school with solar energy, but he was turned down. A few weeks later an agent who turned out to be a Saudi representative approached him and asked if he'd be interested in money from a private source.

Hlavin said yes, and the deal was later sealed between the Fairfax County schools and Saudi Arabia's University of Petroleum and Minerals.

Under the agreement, the Saudis are entitled to the benefit of any technological discoveries and have the right to visit the school. Their interest in the project, Hlavin explained, stems from the fact that their oil resources, vast as they are, are limited and will eventually run out. Sunlight, which they also have in abundance, will not.

Opening of the school awaits installation of a sidewalk, delayed by the cold weather.

Over a sunken courtyard at the front entrance to the building stood a 13,000-square-foot iron rack where the solar collectors will be installed.

The solar system will operate via 4,822 feet of tubing through which thousands of gallons of water being warmed directly by the sun's rays and indirectly by reflectors will be pumped.

Computers will regulate the temperature between 180 and 240 degrees — the system is pressurized, enabling the water to reach temperatures hotter than the 212-degree Fahrenheit boiling point.

Passing from the solar collectors, the water flows into two 2,500-gallon storage tanks and from there — if it is being used for heating purposes — to heat the water in the school's hot-water heating system.

If it is being used to cool the building, the hot water — at 240 degrees — is cooled through a process of compression, condensation and absorption that brings it down to a temperature of 42 degrees. It is then circulated through coils, and fans blow the air past the coils, thereby cooling the building.

As a safeguard against sunless days, there are three 10,000 gallon insulated storage tanks that can hold water without the temperature changing more than 1 degree a day, plus a backup electric boiler system that Hlavin estimates will be used no more than two days a year.

In a normal Fairfax County school the size of Terraset, heating costs run about $40,000 a year, Hlavin said.

At Terraset, the costs will be about $10,000, and most of that will be to run pumps and fans, he said.

The building itself is completely earth covered on top and on one side, leaving three sides with windows from which children can look out on the hillside.

Inside there are offices, a library, gymnasium, cafeteria and four circular "pods," each of which can be divided up into eight pie-shaped classrooms. The earth covering on top ranges from 2 to 8 feet thick and eventually will be landscaped and used as a play area.

Since Fairfax County first announced plans to build Terraset—at a cost of $2.7 million — more than two years ago, officials have had about 400 requests for information about the school, ranging from the Israeli Department of Agriculture to education officials in Sweden and Denmark.

Closer to home, there are some skeptics.

Around the state of Virginia, when Hlavin attends meetings of fellow school constructin officials, there is a stock question.

"Have you gone crazy up there in Fairfax? Are you going to bury all your schools?"

No, Hlavin usually answers. But I do hope we're going to learn something from Terraset."

Copley News Service

In February and March of 1975, scientists from the Scripps Institution of Oceanography, La Jolla, Calif., observed the onset of an El Nino, a warm ocean current that periodically sweeps up the coast of Chile and Peru.

In August of 1976, other scientists at Scripps began to note that the waters of the north-central Pacific Ocean were abnormally cold.

Although they didn't realize it at the time, they may have been witnessing the birth of the Great Winter Storm of 1977, the worst to beset the nation, at least in this century.

The exact anatomy of the storm is still not fully understood, but the large-scale patterns that spawned it now seem to be emerging.

In fact, the pattern was clear enough that Dr. Jerome Namias, a research meteorologist at Scripps and former chief of the National Weather Service's Extended Forecast Division, predicted in December that the Midwest and Eastern portions of the nation were in for their worst winter in maybe 20 years.

Events have shown his prediction was understated.

Now, Namias and others at Scripps are beginning to put together the story of the birth, development and progress of the storm.

Since 1971, they pointed out, the winter season has been marked by a large pool of warm water in the north-central Pacific and a large pool of cold water lying off the coast of western North America.

This condition, they said, has allowed the general atmospheric circulation to progress across the United States in a gentle undulating pattern. The weather usually slips into the national scene between Washington and Oregon, makes a couple of slow bumps and grinds across the nation and then exits out into the Atlantic.

This year was different. The nation got a real show-stopper.

What happened? For one thing, the scientists said, the cold and warm pools of water changed places. Why, they don't know.

Nonetheless, the abnormally cold water they first spotted in August became a general feature of the North Pacific by November.

According to Robert Born, a senior computer programmer with the Scripps' North Pacific study program who works with Namias, "it's the first time since 1947 that the whole North Pacific has been colder than usual."

In the meantime, the cold water along the coast had been replaced by a wedge of warmer tropical water pushing up from the south.

By November, this wedge and the warm, high-pressure air associated with it had extended its influence northward into southern Alaska.

Whether these conditions are associated with the 1975 El Nino condition is not really known.

However, Dr. William C. Patzert, a Scripps oceanographer who observed El Nino, believes there might be a connection.

El Ninos have been known to be associated with other large-scale oceanic and atmospheric changes over the years.

Patzert noted that in contrast to Namias' unusually cold North Pacific waters that the equatorial waters of the Pacific have been warmer than usual.

It's very possible, he said, that "much of the unusual winter is not unrelated to El Nino."

Whether this is true or not, the situation remains: the North Pacific is dominated by unusually cold water and a low-pressure area while the coastal waters are warmer and marked by high-pressure areas.

The scene was set for the Great Storm of 1977. The normal, storm-laden circulation system crossed the cold waters of the North Pacific, ran into the warm water, high-pressure wedge off the North American coast and diverted violently northward to Alaska and the arctic.

From these frigid climes, it plunged downward into the Midwest and South and then moved eastward.

The course of the storm situation can be dramatically outlined by following the jet stream, a high-speed air current that flows along at about 40,000 feet.

Maps at Scripps show the jet stream dipping very low in the North Pacific, then swooping northward into Alaska and northern Canada and then dipping deeply into the heart of the U.S. mainland.

The Scripps analysis, of course, is much more detailed and precise than this overall view.

For example, they successfully predicted that Buffalo would experience much higher precipitation than normal.

To Namias, the central scientific question is "why this pattern, established in the fall, locked into this position throughout the entire fall and subsequent winter?"

Although the answers are not at all clear, Namias suggested it may be because the storm began to feed upon itself.

The sharp contrast between the cold and warm areas of the Pacific, he said in a news report, seemed to accentuate storms and strengthen the northward thrust of the southerly winds.

As the storm turned downward into the Midwest, he said, new storms were generated resulting in more and more snow.

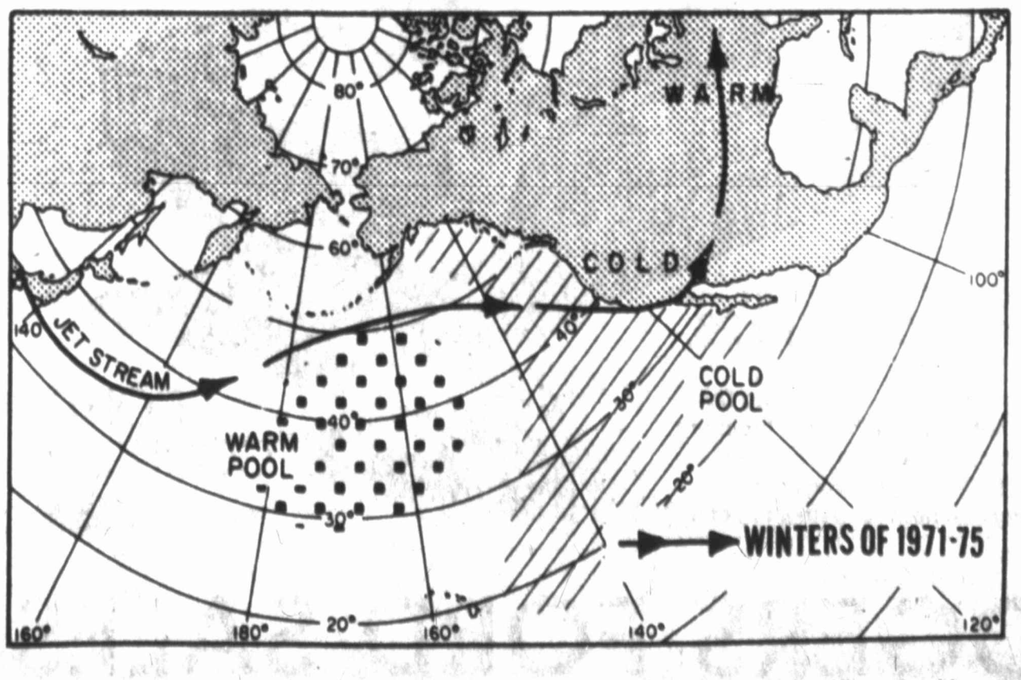
"These eastern snows, in turn, refrigerate the arctic air masses in their southward transit," he said, "and reflect a lot of the sun's heat."

These and other factors, he said, served to reinforce an abnormal situation.

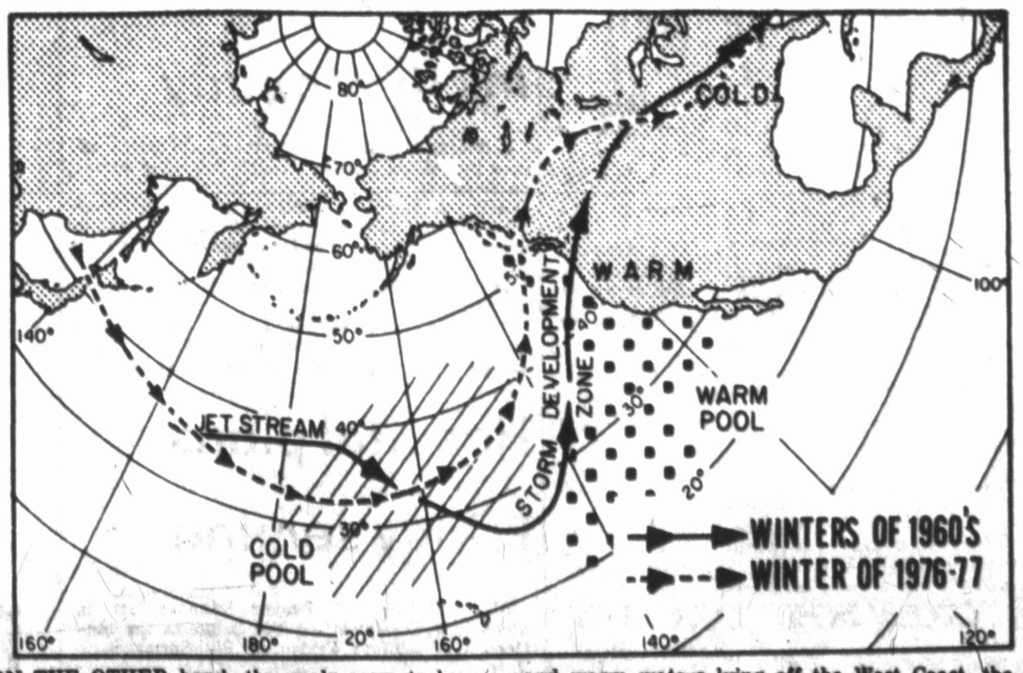
'Blue Marble' wins awards

NEW YORK (AP) — The 1976 Emmy for the outstanding children's television entertainment series tops a list of 13 awards that the show "Big Blue Marble" has won.

The series has also received the Peabody Award from the University of Georgia's School of Journalism, the Silver Screen Award from the U.S. Industrial Film Festival and the Silver Hugo Award from the Chicago International Film Festival.



ACCORDING TO Scripps Institution scientists, during the past five years, conditions with a warm water pool in the central Pacific and cold water near the West Coast have prevailed.



ON THE OTHER hand, the pools seem to have reverted this year to a condition resembling that in the 1960s. With a cold pool residing in the Pacific and warm waters lying off the West Coast, the effect is to deposit frigid winds and moisture in the Northeast.

Bergland questioning department

WASHINGTON (AP) — Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland expects many bureaucrats in his department to grumble about his plans to require each USDA employe to justify his work.

"Everybody in this place will be asked: what do you do and why? That will produce some very interesting results," Bergland said.

The interviews of each Agriculture Department employe will begin in March as a first step in developing the agency's 1978-79 budget, Bergland said.

"It's part of the President's overall zero-based budget and management concept, which I understand and endorse enthusiastically," he said in an interview Monday.

Bergland, who worked in USDA in the mid-1960s during the Johnson administration, said, "I know something about some of the dark corridors of this institution."

The job interviews will be required for the highest-paid employes down to the lowest-salaried clerks and messengers, he said.

"That is something which has never been done and it's going to be resisted, I suspect, by many who have never been required to submit to this sort of interview," Bergland said.

Lower-scale workers will be interviewed by supervisors who then will be questioned by their superiors and so on up the ladder, including assistant secretaries and others who will be interviewed by Bergland himself.

The interviews will be used to help make decisions on USDA programs. If an employe's work "can't be justified, we won't do it," Bergland said.

A former congressman and farmer from Minnesota, Bergland said USDA's transition from the Ford administration has been smooth, although he had been "prepared for a minefield strewn by those who preceded me."

Instead, Bergland said Ford's top USDA executives "have made it very easy for me and that's a pleasant surprise."

Bergland said he has a "four-year lease on the job" of secretary and that he is not afraid of it in any respect.

"I'm awed by the presence of the high and mighty, but I'm not afraid of either this job or those with whom I am associated," Bergland said.

"No one will be able to take me for granted on anything, which means nothing here will be sacrosanct or immune from close scrutiny," he said.

Carter orders less ceremony

WASHINGTON (AP) — When foreign dignitaries visit the White House they'll hear fewer trumpets and view smaller military displays. President Carter has ordered a cutback in "pomp and ceremony."

Presidential aides say the cutback is part of a Carter plan to remove the image of an imperial presidency.

"I don't want to waste my time or theirs. I want to use my time and theirs to maximum advantage," Carter said Monday in explaining why he wants to scale down the ceremonies for foreign visitors.

White House spokesman Rex Granum said Carter wants fewer trumpets sounding and "the enormous military display drastically reduced."

What Carter is taking aim at is the half-hour welcoming ceremonies on the south lawn of the White House.

Those ceremonies have grown in recent years to redcarpet pageants that include an exchange of speeches by the president and the foreign leader, a review of troops and the fanfare of trumpets sounding from a White House balcony.

There have been no decisions yet on what changes will be made in such ceremonies. But Granum said "there will not be the same number of people greeting or the same number of trumpets sounding."

In advance of his first foreign visitors — Mexican President Jose Lopez Ortillo on Feb. 14 and Canadian President Pierre Elliot Trudeau on Feb. 21 — Carter has asked his White House staff to give him a rundown on ceremonies his presidential predecessors produced.

According to White House historians it was President John F. Kennedy who started the welcoming ceremonies on the South Lawn. But in recent years such ceremonies have involved as many as 378 members of the armed forces, including 14 Army herald-trumpeters, a red-coated marching Marine band and sometimes a fife and drum corps.

Prison chief seeks millions

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — To continue to do the same job it is doing today, the Department of Corrections must have $16.5 million more over the next two years than provided for in the Legislative Budget Board's recommendation, says prison director James Estelle.

Increases in the cost of food and utilities particularly make it necessary to increase the biennium budget from $263 million to nearly $270 million, Estelle testified before the Senate Finance Committee Monday.

Estelle also told the committee the Texas prison population has increased tremendously because Texas juries have been tougher.

The population rocked along between 11,000 and 12,000 through the 1960s, but today stands at 20,830.

There are several reasons for the jump in prison population, including the rise in the general population, Estelle told the Senate finance Committee.

But the attitude of Texans is the main reason, he said.

"I'm simply convinced that the mood, temper and climate of Texas is demanding that more people be sent to prison, and not only more people but for longer periods of time," Estelle said.

The percentage of young adults in the population is expected "to peak out in 1985," he said, but that is nationally. If the projection for the "Sunbelt" states is correct, the peak will not occur in Texas in 1985, he said.

Estelle said he favors more paroles over work-release programs. If a prisoner can be trusted with the responsibility of returning to a cell at the end of his working day, he can be trusted with parole, Estelle said.

"I think parole is one of the untapped correctional tools in Texas," he said.

He supports mandatory parole proposals. "The first six months is the most critical time. If you can get 'em over that first six months, you can reduce the recidivism rate tremendously," he said.

Texas' recividism rate is 33 per cent, well below the national average, he said.

Hughes to apoint 'expert'

DALLAS (AP) — U.S. District Court Judge Sarah T. Hughes is to appoint a "special master" today to be her expert at the Dallas County Jail.

Judge Hughes said the master will make recommendations to her about how much security is needed in the jail, how many inmates are eligible for transfer to the Wodlawn Detention Center and what types of educational and recreational programs are needed.

Earl Luna, a lawyer who represents the county in its five-year federal jail suit, said the master will be paid by the county, but he said he did not know what the salary would be.

Judge Hughes told county commissioners and Sheriff Carl Thomas of her plan during a meeting in the judge's chambers Monday.

The judge has issued an order for the county to improve conditions in the jail, especially overcrowding.

A Henderson couple is seeking nearly $200,000 in damages from two San Angelo men for an automobile accident near Midland which allegedly resulted in the death of one of their daughters.

Mr. and Mrs. John R. Gossett of Henderson Monday in 142nd District Court asked the damages of Billy Clayton Branham Jr. and C. D. Sherwood, both of San Angelo, for an accident July 29, 1976, about 3.5 miles west of Midland.

As a result of the accident, according to the petition, the couple's daughter, Jonnie Lynn Gossett, received head and spinal injuries which has caused her death.

The amounts of damages requested in the petition are: $50,000 for the death, $100,000 for physical pain and mental anguish before death, $4,924 for medical and funeral bills, and $500 for the grave monument for Jonnie Lynn Gossett.

Also, $15,000 for pain and mental anguish and not less than $407 for medical bills for the mother, Dona Reese Gossett; $15,000 for pain and anguish and not less $158 in medical bills for daughter Tammy Gossett. $1,975 for damage to the Gossett car, and $119 for expenses of a replacement or rental car.
