FACT AND OPINION

Ralph T. Moore writes in the Oregon Voter "... the key to success in this war on poverty venture will be none other than the self-help and degree of cooperation exerted by those we wish to help. Indeed, this is true of all such ventures just as it is of teaching. The pupil must himself find the will to learn and follow up the efforts in his behalf with all the diligence he can muster. We have not prepared our people too well of late by conditioning them to this purpose. We have preferred, instead the short cut of the greased palm with the implication of political support."

A bill has been introduced in the senate designed to eliminate the confusion that comes with daylight saving time. But those choosing it would have to observe it from the fourth Sunday in April until the fourth Sunday in October. An author of the bill contends that scrambled time and clock confusion now constitute—one of the greatest public inconveniences in the Nation."

The nation's gas industry, which includes distribution and transmission companies, increased the gross value of its plants by 119 percent from 1954 through 1964. This boosted plant value to 27.6 billion.

It is estimated that 95 million kilowatts of generating equipment will be added to the nation's electric power supply by the end of 1970.

David Lawrence writes: "One of the principal reasons why the United States has been experiencing a considerable outflow of gold is the foreign aid program. Although the President has asked for only $3.4 billion for the coming year for foreign aid, there is an estimated $6.5 billion in unexpended balances from previous years. So almost $10 billion would be available for spending in 1966 and later years. It is the presence of this unexpended balance which may be having a psychological effect on those who speculate in the gold market."

The average retail price of gasoline, excluding taxes dropped nine per cent in the past six years, while the overall consumer price index rose 8.9 percent.

Writing in the Oregon Voter, Ralph T. Moore says: "There always seems to be an abundance of those who are eternally looking for something for nothing and a scarcity of those who are willing and anxious to put forth the requisite effort to get ahead. Progress exacts its high price from every generation of men. It degrades that man to progress, must also work hard. This probably explains why progress comes almost always from adversity and almost never from affluence. And yet the whole atmosphere of this co-called war on poverty is to the effect that the key to progress is held by the common government, which in its superior wisdom, now comes forward to save us all from hard, grueling labor by arbitrarily doing away with poverty via fiat and education."

According to an American Medical Association news release, the athlete—including the week-end golfer or skier—who experiments with pep pills, whiffs of oxygen, odd dietary supplements and other such fads in the hope of improving performance is doomed to disappointment and may even be courting bodily harm. It adds that for safe and effective performance there still is no alternative to the fullest utilization of one's natural resources through good personal health practices, top physical conditioning and confidence in one's ability based on careful coaching and good medical supervision.

In 1961, the cost of the Interstate Highway System was estimated at $41 billion. The latest official figure is $46.8 billion—an increase of $5.8 billion.

The Phoenix, Ariz., Republic says: "We believe it would be unfortunate for Congress to repeal right-to-work, thereby forcing workers to join labor unions." We believe that compulsory unionism infringes upon an individual's freedom of association, freedom of choice, and freedom of conscience. It can no more be defended than compulsory membership in a particular religion or a particular political party. And it is incompatible with a free society."

An average of $12.6 million a day in health insurance benefits was paid to the American public by insurance companies in the first nine months of 1964, the Health Institute reports. This was an increase of $1.3 million a day over the comparable period of 1963. The 1964 payments were ahead of the previous year for all five types of health insurance—hospital expense, surgical expense, regular medical expense, major medical expense, and loss of income insurance.

Free enterprise means that we always recognize the fact that this nation's growth rests primarily on the foundation of individual freedom.

FAMOUS FIRSTS*COFFEE 'N' DOUGHNUTS

WHO PUT the hole in the doughnut? Legend has it that Captain Hanson Gregory, of Camden, Maine, did the trick on a stormy night in 1847. Munching a fried cake while at the helm, he suddenly needed both hands to keep his ship on course. He rammed the cake over a spoke—and the modern doughnut was born.

WHAT ABOUT coffee? It dates back to 575 A.D. when it was discovered by an Arabian goatherder. Since then, it has spread all over the world, and the richest of all coffee now comes from the Colombian Andes. On these fertile slopes more than 200,000 Colombian coffee growers spend years of patient labor and cultivation to bring the best coffee to your table.

THE "coffee break", started in America, is now a happy custom in many countries. Frenchmen order coffee and doughnuts by saying, "café et beignets." In Holland, it's "koffie en olybollen." And in Colombia, the land where they grow the coffee, it's "café y donas." In whatever language, coffee 'n' doughnuts are a favorite everywhere.

FINANCIAL PLANNING FOR NEWLYWEDS

We are approaching the big season for weddings. When a young man and woman get married, they become, in a very special sense, two different people—particularly in terms of basic responsibility to one another and to the new home they are establishing. But it is often difficult to convince newlyweds that there are positive steps that should be taken right away, even though these steps may seem inconsequential to their new happiness.

Husband Should Lead The Way

Even before the marriage, while the bride-to-be is floating on a cloud of wedding planning and anticipation, the young man will do well to begin a "family" economic and financial program. To wait until later is a great mistake, though it admittedly is the easy way out that many young lovers follow. Perhaps first on the list should be a careful and mutual decision on where to start their lives together. Marriage counselors generally favor a small, efficient apartment at a realistic rental for newlyweds, especially if the bride intends to continue, or to start, working. This will leave ample time for the days of early adjustment when extraordinary burdens should be held to a minimum.

Once the knot is tied, the young groom should supervise changeovers of various sorts, but not without the assistance and cooperative understanding of his wife. If either of them has life insurance, an immediate change should be made in the beneficiaries,—and it is a good idea to indicate any surviving children of the marriage as beneficiaries after the spouse, even though there are no children at the time. Most policies make provisions for this to ensure that the money will go to a chosen person rather than into the estate of a beneficiary who pre-deceased the insured.

Many Important Alterations

Young couples seem to think they are going to live forever, but parents or grandparents should point out to their airborne youngsters that to draw a will is a sign of maturity and intelligent responsibility. Newlyweds are likely to feel that they haven't enough to bother with yet, so they'll draw their wills later on. But they usually have a great deal more than they realize,—and there are such "would-never happen to us" things as transportation accidents that could bring tragedy. Better to make out wills early, then forget them; no need dwell upon death, but foolish to deny its inevitability. Use the family lawyer; or get another good one and stick with him.

Title should be changed on bank accounts, real estate, stocks and bonds. Make out a list of organizations or people that should be informed at once of a new address, change in marital status, and married name of the wife. It will surprise many young couples how complicated the list may be: Employers (there are sometimes extra benefits for married workers such as extra insurance, maternity leaves for wives, etc.) banks, brokers, business associations, charge account stores, auto licensing and registration bureaus, the Social Security office, unions, credit unions, the draft board, and periodical publications offices. And probably many more.

Set Up A Guideline Budget

If a young couple starts off from the very first with a budget mutually decided upon, a lot of headaches will be avoided. A key part of the budget should be outlays for a family financial program. It is an excellent idea to have a joint checking account so that both partners can see exactly where their income is going, and note how realistic their budget may be. Also cancelled checks are good evidence for income tax deductions. Young marrieds should be warned, however, that a living budget should be the key to sensible spending and

From Congressman Graham Purcell

Dear Friends:

Ever since the depression days in the 20's the specter of unemployment has been of concern to economists, politicians and of most of all—to the unskilled who suffer most during economic recessions.

The fact is our country is responding to the problem of unemployment by building a firm foundation of a strong economy. A strong economy, in turn, means more jobs. In 1964 more than a million and a half more people were employed than during the year before. There are now more than 71 million Americans engaged in civilian employment. Last year, we reduced the number of unemployed by 300,000—leaving the percentage of our work force unemployed at the lowest level in seven years.

Unfortunately while there is much to cheer about, there is also much to be concerned about. In an average week during 1964 almost 3.9 million persons were without work. Another 2.5 million who wanted full time work were employed in temporary or part time jobs. In addition, we will need 1.4 million new jobs this year to keep unemployment down to its current level.

On one side of the unemployment problem are the unemployed themselves. Too many of them have not prepared themselves to do the work required of them in our highly technical society of today.

Workers who did not complete high school have unemployment rates nearly twice as high as those with more education and five times as high as those who have gone through college. Laborers and semi-skilled workers are unemployed at rates nearly three times that of the average skilled and technical groups.

The most serious problems are with the teenagers just entering the work force. With the national average unemployment rate at less than 5 percent the average rate for teenagers is more than 15 percent. Non-white teenagers are unemployed at a tragic rate of more than 26 percent.

On the other side of the problem is the need of employers for capable employees. In some areas, skilled labor is almost unavailable.

Now the government is joining forces with industry to help train the unskilled and the uneducated so they might meet the demands of industry for skilled labor.

One of these programs is the Manpower Training and Developing Program administered by the Department of Labor. People who have been displaced by automation or whose job skills have been outdated, or who are untrained, may be trained in a job skill which is in demand.

Potentially one of the best programs currently in effect is the Job Corps portion of the War on Poverty. The Job Corps is a national voluntary program that will give poor youngsters a chance to help themselves. Young people from the ages of 16 through 21, who are largely unemployable because they lack education and job skills, can volunteer for placement in Job Corps Centers where they learn the needed skills. Many of these centers are operated by private industry. Others are operated by certain colleges and universities. The youngsters applying for this program are carefully screened and must be willing to work hard to improve themselves. Nearly a million young people drop out of school each year for economic reasons, because classroom work has become meaningless or because of home problems. The Job Corps can offer hope to these youngsters.

Along with the need for skilled labor, there is a serious shortage of seasonal farm workers. In Texas, in California, and other areas, farmers are unable to obtain the help they need to bring in the crops. As a result, they are losing, or even plowing under, valuable fruit and vegetable crops.

Working with the President's Committee on Physical Fitness, Secretary of Labor Willard Wirtz has just announced an imaginative new program to be tried this summer attempting to reduce the problems caused by the shortage of farm labor. Known as A-TEAM (Athletes in Temporary Employment as Agricultural Manpower), the program is designed to encourage 15-25,000 athletes between the age of 16 and 21 to take summer employment in agriculture, particularly in the fruit and vegetable areas. The program will be worked out and run entirely on a local basis between grower and schools. The Federal government's part will be to get the parties together and act as an advisor when requested. Nationally, the program will be developed under the leadership of such athletes as Stan Musial, Warren Spahn, Jimmy Brown, John Huarte, Mickey Mantle, Sandy Koufax and many others. While it will be only in the experimental stage this year, it offers the possibility of helping the growers get help when needed, of finding summer work for unskilled teenagers, finding summer employment for school teachers who would be acting as supervisors, and strengthening our physical fitness programs.

With the cooperation and encouragement of our government, programs like these will support the efforts of free enterprise to expand and develop to the point where all who want

Natives of the Fiji Islands rejected Christianity in 1875 following a measles epidemic which they considered to be punishment for abandoning their faith.

OLDER AMERICANS Gaze and Gasp in Switzerland

Shortness of breath in Switzerland is not due to the altitude; it's the scenery that makes you gasp.

The towering, snowcapped splendors of Mount Pilatus and Mount Rigi can be seen from all parts of Lucerne. Sleek, white-hulled boats with crimson sails skim the bright lake surface. Miniature cable cars scoop their camera-laden occupants from ferry docks and whiz them past a jade-green sea of fir trees to dizzying heights. And, since the air is as exhilarating as the view, tourists, like the sprightly older group pictured above, pause often for an invigorating cup of hot chocolate in picturesque, sunlit cafes.

No wonder then that an ever-increasing number of American tourists, including more and more elder people, visit Europe every year. The travel service of the American Association of Retired Persons and National Retired Teachers Association estimates in fact that a record number of mature Americans will go abroad this year.

With the special interests of this group in mind, the AARP/NRTA has custom-designed a series of 72 European and round-the-world tours for persons over 55 years of age. The tours' popularity is traced to their emphasis on relaxation as well as sight-seeing, all-inclusive prices, and three hearty meals a day.

Tourists who have dreamed specifically of Switzerland with its open-air concerts, folk festivals and incomparable lakes, can now see it as part of the AARP/NRTA Swiss Holiday and Tour which uses Lucerne as a "home base" to France, Italy, Austria, West Germany and Liechtenstein. These tours alternate with relaxing stays in Lucerne.

Prospective tourists who await Europe with bated breath and poised camera can contact the AARP/NRTA Travel Service, 555 Madison Avenue, New York, N. Y.

By Mary Whitman

The family crayon box is versatile.

Of course the youngsters want first claim — for their coloring books and freehand drawings. But some parents may find it worthwhile to keep a crayon box of their own.

"Crayons have a great many uses for the workshop, the garage, for the family bulletin board and for household labeling," points out Alice Hanson of Whitman Publishing Company of Racine, Wisconsin.

New Whitman crayons — bright, strong and non-flaking — come in forty eight delightful colors that inspire use by the whole family. In addition to the standard reds, blues, yellows and greens you can choose crayons in peach, violet, gold, silver, burnt sienna, ultramarine and dozens of variations.

Crayons can be used to make unusual place cards or colorful mats for a children's party. Planning an Easter feast? The youngsters can decorate. They could draw rabbit faces on hard-boiled eggs in the shell, add rabbit ears cut out of colored paper, and stand the eggs in wide rings of colored paper labeled with each guest's name.

Even on non-party days crayons are useful. Want to remind the children about chores? Tape a big note written in crayon to the bedroom door or bathroom mirror or the front of the refrigerator. No one can overlook a message in magenta.

Crayons are handy in the garage or basement, too. Some can be used to label boxes of hardware, spare parts, or out of season clothing. The careful home craftsman who hangs his tools on pegboard finds another use. A crayon-drawn outline shows where each tool belongs, so it's easy to see if one's missing.

Crayons can even help plan dinner. If you label preserved or frozen fruits, meats or vegetables, use of different colored crayons lets you see at a glance what's in the larder.

Crayons won't replace pens and pencils. But their color and legibility make them cheerful helps at home.

THE FIZZLE FAMILY

U.S. Women Poor At Flirting, Says Senta

Viennese beauty, Senta Berger, star of Levy-Gardner-Laven's "The Glory Guys," says American wives are tops in efficiency.

HOLLYWOOD—"American housewives are the most efficient in the world, but the European woman is vastly superior in the art of flirting," says Senta Berger, Vienna's latest gift to movies.

Currently, Senta has a role which requires all of her flirtation skills. She plays a young frontier widow in the Levy-Gardner-Laven production for United Artists, "The Glory Guys." Through typical female skulduggery, she manages to hold the attentions of two husky, handsome heroes, Tom Tryon and Harvey Presnell, until she can decide which to marry.

Miss Berger says, "I'm constantly amazed at how easily American wives can stay attractive and well-groomed and still keep immaculate houses. European women aren't so clever, but as flirts, they learn that game well."

"In America, there is much talk among women as to how to handle a man, but I think they try too hard. I believe it is much better to have the attitude, 'How is he going to get me?' instead of always thinking, 'How can I get him?'" with a strong appeal. If expensive repair is needed, often the family decides to buy instead of risking the inconvenience of a breakdown. If one is moving, new equipment may fit into the situation more conveniently.

By knowing the expected life span of equipment, a family can do better longtime planning, study what is on the market, compare cost, features and models, watch special season sales, save money and avoid inconvenience.

Do your shower and bathroom tile have a grimy look. That dirty grey color may come from soap scum. You can remove it by rubbing a paste of baking soda and water over the dirty areas. Some types of water softeners work well, too. After cleaning, rinse the walls thoroughly and wipe dry. Never use harsh abrasives of strong acid solutions on bathroom tiles, for you may scratch the surface.

Keep labels with washing instructions from garments that need special care. Tack to a bulletin board near the washing machine and label with a description of the garment they refer to.

Mr. and Mrs. Claude Draper are remodeling their home. As well as well-planned added square footage they are adding well planned storage. Adequate storage for each family member as well as general family living.

If you're building a new home or thinking of remodeling your present kitchen, you'll find some valuable ideas in the new energy saving kitchen developed by housing specialists in the U. S. Department of Agriculture.

Outstanding feature of the new kitchen, is a wall cabinet with graduated shelves. The narrow bottom shelf of this cabinet is only 4 inches above the counter. This permits small frequently used items such as spices and flavorings to be stored within easy reach, yet provides adequate working space on the counter.

Everything in the cabinet is stored only one deep. The wide top shelf, with its wire dividers, lets you file pie and cake pans and plastic mixing bowls vertically like phonograph records. Because the cabinet is

FOR EARLIER HARVEST

Although hardy plants like cabbage should be set out for tender plants like tomatoes need not be far behind. Plastic over rows or individual plants guards them from frost.

An earlier crop of tomatoes or of other vegetables tends to be easier to have now that plastics are available to every gardener. They make it possible to set out tomato plants, under plastic, at almost the same time as hardy vegetables are planted to the garden.

There are two ways of protecting tender plants, through individual "greenhouses." Materials needed are sheets of transparent polyethylene plastic and U-shaped wire supports.

The plastic is widely available and so is heavy wire. Or the supports may be made of wire coat hangers. Cut the wire at both sides of the hook, stretch the remainder of the hanger full length, and then bend into U form.

The cut ends of the U-shaped wires are stuck down into the soil, the wires spaced a foot or two apart, depending on the length of the row and therefore the weight of plastic to be supported. When necessary, two wires may be placed side by side for greater strength.

After the plants are set out, plastic is draped over the wire framework, pulled down at sides and ends, and anchored with hung so low, you can reach these even from a sitting position.

Instead of doors, the cabinet has vertical shade type closures. These slide open and shut on traverse rod tracks at the top and bottom. They're easy to open and take up little space. Bamboo or aluminum slat materials for making these closures are available in curtain and shade departments.

soil heaped over the edge. Plastic should be placed so as not to touch plant parts. Insects should be allowed between plants and plastic.

Individual plant protection made in much the same way, "greenhouses." T-shaped wires are inserted right angles to one another, reaching over the other, and fastened together with wires cross. A plant is set in this framework, plastic over it and anchored with
