Kennedy expected to easily top Carter in Massachusetts

BOSTON (AP) — Democrat Edward M. Kennedy and Republican George Bush, both sons of Massachusetts, are looking to the state's primary Tuesday to pump new life into their presidential bids. But recent polls show some erosion in the support each can expect from voters. While Kennedy and most of the Republican candidates campaigned hard in Massachusetts, another GOP hopeful, Sen. Howard Baker Jr., shifted his attention to Vermont. That state also holds its primary Tuesday and Baker felt he had a better chance there of making a good showing to keep his campaign alive.

That left the Massachusetts Republican field to Bush, former California Gov. Ronald Reagan and Rep. John B. Anderson of Illinois. Former Texas Gov. John B. Connally is putting his efforts into South Carolina.

It appears Kennedy, still expected to easily top President Carter, and Bush, in a virtual dead-heat with

Defendants don't show

Two defendants free on bond failed to appear for trial scheduled in 118th District Court this morning. They are Albert Chavarria, 1111 W. 2, failure to stop and render aid, and Billy Smith, 5425 Clinton, criminal mischief.

District Attorney Rick Hamby said a judgment nisi would be issued which would state that the two have failed to appear. Proceedings for forfeiture of bond would be instituted, he said.

Attorney Roy Ford was bondsman for Chavarria. His bond was $1,500. Ike's Bail Bonds put up Smith's $3,000 bond.

Chavarria was arrested Oct. 13 on suspicion of failure to stop and render aid after a collision with a pickup driven by Kevin Wolfe. Wolfe was injured in the wreck and driven by private car to Malone-Hogan Hospital.

Smith was arrested April 10 on suspicion of destruction of a 1972 Ford truck tractor owned by Forest Guess.

Reagan, have the most at stake in Massachusetts.

A Boston Globe poll published Sunday showed potential voters in the Democratic primary still preferred Kennedy over Carter. But that portion of the polling done two days after Kennedy's loss in the New Hampshire primary last week showed substantially lower support for the senator. The poll also showed undecided voters seemed more likely to vote for Carter.

Failure to win handily in Massachusetts could spell further complications for Kennedy's troubled campaign.

On the GOP side, the newspaper's poll indicated Bush, once a 3-1 favorite over Reagan, was virtually tied with the former California governor.

After Tuesday's votes, the primary action shifts to the South, where Carter, a native Georgian, and Reagan show strength.

Waiting in the wings, meanwhile, former President Gerald R. Ford said Reagan cannot win the presidency because he is too conservative. In an interview published Sunday in the New York Times, Ford said he would become a candidate if offered a "broad based" invitation from the Republican Party.

Ford said he would have to make up his mind by about April 1 if he were to have a real shot at gathering convention delegates.

California Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. dropped his Democratic campaign in Massachusetts and said he would concentrate on the April 1 primary in Wisconsin.

The Massachusetts primary will apportion national convention delegates in line with candidate showings in each of the state's 12 congressional districts. The Democratic primary is for 111 delegates. At stake on the Republican side are 42 delegates.

Vermont's primary election will determine the loyalties of 19 Republican and 11 Democratic delegates.

Oranges freezing on trees in Florida

Storm claims 36 persons

By The Associated Press

Snow was knee deep across much of the South today with flurries falling deep into Florida where oranges were freezing on the trees in record cold. At least 36 persons have died in the storm that roared out of the Midwest into the Atlantic Coast states.

The National Guard was called out to assist stranded motorists in North Carolina where two feet of snow driven by 60 mph winds hammered some communities and 13 people died. Five-foot drifts paralyzed Wilmington, a coastal city of 50,000 people.

"A day the Tar Heels will remember," was the way one North Carolina forecaster described the two-day storm. He said it was "as close as a Midwestern blizzard will ever come to North Carolina."

Residents were ordered off the streets of Norfolk, Va., after the storm dumped heavy snow along the East Coast from Florida to southern New Jersey.

In Florida, where temperatures broke records for the date set in 1947 from Pensacola to Miami, it was 32 degrees this morning. Earl Wells of the Florida Citrus Mutual said there had been considerable damage to the citrus crop, with about half the season's oranges still on the trees.

"We know we've lost some juice, but the severity of the damage will depend on what happens tonight and during the next week."

"If it stays cold, we get the fruit off the trees and still get some juice. But if it turns warm, it deteriorates and the fruit starts to drop off."

'We expected him to come back'

Kidnapped youth returns home after seven years

MERCED, Calif. (AP) — Steven Stayner, a 14-year-old who disappeared seven years ago in a stranger's car and eventually learned to call his abductor "Dad," has come home to a tearful reunion with his parents and the Christmas presents he never got to open in 1972.

Stayner, who neighbors say attended high school and helped his surrogate father raise chickens and other livestock at a spartan one-room cabin near Manchester, was greeted by banners of "Welcome Home, Steve," when he arrived here carrying a small dog.

His family turned reporters away after enveloping him in hugs.

"We expected him to come back," his mother, Kay, had said earlier. "I know this is not something that happens very often. I expected him to have changed a lot. He really has not changed that much. He's definitely ours."

Earlier Sunday, 5-year-old Timothy Lee White, abducted Feb. 14 while walking home from school, was reunited with his parents in Ukiah, about 200 miles north of here.

Police said they found the two boys together Sunday when Stayner tried to return the younger boy to his family.

Kenneth Eugene Parnell, 48, who neighbors said Stayner had called "Dad" during their years together, was booked for investigation of kidnapping the White boy, police said.

No charges were filed in connection with Stayner's disappearance. Parnell was jailed under $7,000 bond and was to be arraigned today.

Police Chief David Johnson said the boys were found on a street in Ukiah when an officer recognized the younger child despite dye that had turned his blond hair brown.

The brown hair nearly fooled the boy's parents. "But the police said, 'look closer,' and we did it and it was him," said Jim White. "He seems perfectly healthy and glad to be home."

"We were all feeling that we were only going to find him one way — that was deceased. We're all really glad that's not what happened," said Ukiah Police Capt. Richard Perry.

Stayner told police he knew his companion had been kidnapped and that he was trying to get him home. He then revealed his own identity, authorities said.

"I didn't like what was happening," Stayner later told reporters, adding the two boys had hitchhiked the 20 miles into Ukiah. "And it happened to me, and I just didn't want to see it happen to somebody else."

Johnson said $15,000 was collected for information leading to young Timmy's return. A committee will decide who gets the money, and the police chief said he thought Stayner should.

Stayner disappeared on Dec. 4, 1972, when he got into a stranger's car on his way home from school in Merced. His parents had never abandoned hope for his return.

"We thought that as soon as he was old enough to get out that he would," his mother said. "We'll be so thankful to God that we have him back home and that somebody took care of him for the past seven years."

Merced Police Chief Harold Kulbeth said the story began when a man stopped Stayner, then 7, and asked if he wanted to "contribute to a charity." The boy got into a man's car to ask his mother if he could go, the chief said.

The abductor then pretended to call Stayner's mother, and the boy was told she said it was all right for him to go along, Kulbeth said.

Stayner was later told a court had awarded Parnell custody of him, the chief said. He said the youth once left Parnell, but "got lost and returned" to the small, remote cabin, which had no electricity or indoor plumbing.

Kulbeth said the boy played on his junior high school team. As a ninth grader at Point Arena High School, he tried out for the basketball team but quit after one day.

"He was kind of a quiet kid. Friends? He didn't have any that I knew of," said basketball coach Don woman was sucked off a balcony and tossed to her death as tornadoes tore through Broward County, near Pompano Beach.

In California, meanwhile, winds described as "a twister" were blamed for the crash of a light plane which went down in heavy snow in the San Gabriel Mountains. The three occupants were believed to be alive, officials said, but weather prevented rescue efforts as night fell and temperatures dipped.

FBI presents Soviet spy who became double agent

WASHINGTON (AP) — At an unusual news conference, the FBI today presented a top-ranking Soviet spy who became a double agent during the course of his 11-year assignment to secretly report on political trends in the United States.

The agent, a colonel in the Soviet KGB, said he was about 45 years old and had operated under the name of Rudolph Albert Herrmann. He answered questions from reporters while appearing in profile behind an opaque glass screen with his voice disguised electronically.

Herrmann operated as an illegal resident posing as a free-lance photographer living in Hartsdale, N.Y., outside New York City, and said that his primary mission was to gather political information, not military data.

He said that in 1976 he was able to get close to the entourage of one presidential candidate whom he refused to name because he said the candidate was never aware of his activity. The closest he got to the man was to talk to him "accidentally" at the San Francisco airport while the candidate was talking to a group of his aides.

Homer Boynton, executive assistant director of the FBI, said the FBI believed that Herrmann, whose real name was not disclosed, had not supplied the Soviet Union with any classified information.

Boynton turned aside questions as to whether the FBI was unveiling this man as part of a get-tough policy with the Soviet Union by saying the FBI thought it was important that the American people be aware of how such "illegal spies" operated.

An "illegal spy" is one not formally attached to an embassy or other foreign diplomatic mission with diplomatic cover.

Herrmann's major functions were selecting and servicing "drop sites" for other agents whom he never met.

Q. What are procedures for getting obscene phone callers prosecuted?
A. The process starts with phone company implementation of procedure to tape and put a trace on the obscene caller. The phone company then contacts prosecutors, according to District Attorney Don Richard.

Calendar: Band Boosters

TODAY

The Parks and Recreation Committee of Capital Improvements Program will hold their regular meeting today 7 p.m., Dora Roberts Community Center.

The Coahoma Band Boosters will meet at 7:30 p.m. at the band hall. Band parents are urged to attend.

The monthly meeting of the Voice Of The Electorate (V.O.T.E.) will be held today at 7:30 p.m. in the Howard County Courtroom. All interested persons are invited to attend.

TUESDAY

Marcy Elementary School will have an open House Tuesday from 7 to 8:15 p.m.

Tops on TV: All-black movie

A movie with an all-black cast, entitled "Let's Do It Again," scheduled to get under way at 8 p.m., on NBC, might be your cup of tea. It stars Sidney Poitier and Bill Cosby and is a slapstick comedy after two men who try to outwit some mobsters. The program, "That's Incredible," concerns itself with events that defy logical explanations. Scheduled for 7 p.m., on ABC, it features John Davidson and ex-football star Fran Tarkenton.

Inside: Sagging highway tolls

STATES AND HIGHWAY authorities found fuel-tax and toll revenues fell in 1979 as gasoline prices rose sharply and supplies fell short, keeping motorists off the road. It may mean maintenance will be delayed and tolls will have to go up. See page 5A.

GERALD FORD SAYS more and more Republicans consider Ronald Reagan too conservative to win the White House. If Ford thinks he'd be a better candidate, Reagan says, the ex-president should "pack his long johns" and join the fray. See page 3A.

Snakes bite four men

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Four men taking part in a rattlesnake sacking contest this weekend had to be taken to Brackenridge hospital for snakebite treatment.

Pat Spence, 27, Waco was listed in "satisfactory" condition today after being bitten Sunday at the Taylor Jaycees National Rattlesnake Sacking Competition at Austin Coliseum.

Bill Lockey, San Antonio, and Bob Harkrider, Taylor, also were bitten Sunday. Larry Johnson, Houston, was bitten Saturday.

All three were released from the hospital after receiving treatment.

Carter's economy

WASHINGTON (AP) — Top Carter administration officials are trying to reassure the nation's 500 largest businesses that wage-price controls will not be used as weapons in the war on inflation.

At the same time, Treasury Secretary G. William Miller and Alfred Kahn, who heads the Council on Wage and Price Stability, are making it clear those companies are expected to cooperate with President Carter's voluntary anti-inflation guidelines.

'They'll keep the big ones'

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — The Colombian government proposed that the guerrillas holding the Dominican Republic's embassy keep as hostages only the 20 foreign diplomats and two Colombian officials they captured and let the rest of their captives go.

There was no immediate response from the armed band of leftists who invaded the embassy during a diplomatic reception five days ago.

The 29 guerrillas freed a doctor and four waiters Sunday after a 90-minute negotiating session held in a Ford panel truck parked outside the embassy. They released 19 other hostages last Thursday and Friday, including all 15 women, and are believed still holding 36.

"The government's proposition is that only the diplomats and Foreign Ministry officials who were attending the party when the embassy was taken by assault should remain," a Foreign Ministry source reported.

The 36 remaining hostages include U.S. Ambassador Diego C. Asencio and 14 other ambassadors or acting ambassadors, five other foreign diplomats, two Colombian protocol officers, a photographer and a reporter for a Colombian diplomatic magazine, employees of the Dominican Embassy and others.

"They'll keep the big ones," he added.

Public transportation forms go to agencies

SAN ANGELO — Questionnaires will soon be distributed to all agencies and organizations which are known to be furnishing public transportation in District 7 of the State Department of Highways and Public Transportation.

District Engineer D.R. Watson said the information to be secured in the questionnaires is critically needed in the development of both rural and urban transportation systems in Texas.

"Although answering the questionnaires may require some time to complete," Watson said, "we hope to have the cooperation of the agencies and organizations involved in accumulating the information."

Watson said there are four broad categories of transportation providers to be canvassed: municipal transit system, taxi cab system, human service, and miscellaneous providers.

Miscellaneous providers may include governmental and welfare agencies, social organizations, and commercial carriers. The questionnaires will be adapted to each specific category.

"We are particularly concerned with the elderly, the handicapped, the disadvantaged, and those persons unable to furnish their own transportation by privately owned automobiles," Watson pointed out.

All involved agencies and organizations should be furnished a questionnaire within the next two weeks. If any provider of public transportation does not receive a questionnaire within this time, or if assistance is needed in completing the form provided, one should contact Mr. Gene Hirschfeld in the District Office of the State Department of Highways and Public Transportation in San Angelo, Texas, telephone (915) 944-1501.

Three Baylor editors good bet to be fired

WACO, Texas (AP) — There was "very little doubt" that three Baylor University student newspaper editors would be fired during an emergency meeting of the student publications board late today.

"We're gonna be fired, I'd say there's very, very little doubt about that," Baylor Lariat editor-in-chief Jeff Barton said before the meeting.

The editors — Barton, Cyndy Slovak and Barry Kolar — were given a "quit or be fired" ultimatum because of an editorial criticizing the university administration.

Half the student publications board is made up of administrators, a quarter are students and a quarter are faculty members, but "it only takes three faculty votes to decide something," Barton said. Journalism professor Donald Williams resigned Friday in support of the students. He said Baylor President Abner McCall "insulted" the students and treated them "very insensitively."

Ralph Strother, director of student publications, gave the ultimatum after the students protested his deleting part of an editorial last week. Strother said the passages were unprofessional and violated McCall's guidelines.

Barton said those guidelines included submitting editorial copy a day ahead of publication for review by an adviser.

The dispute between the Lariat and the administration began when McCall threatened to expel any female student who posed for Playboy magazine's "Girls of the Southwest Conference" issue.

The Lariat ran two editorials side-by-side, one advocating personal choice in the matter, the other advising women not to pose. McCall then issued his guidelines, which also said editorials contrary to Southern Baptist doctrines "will not be tolerated."

The sentences deleted from Friday's editorial referred to McCall's "smugness" over the Playboy situation and said the administration's position was "arrogant."

McCall said he did not originate the resignation ultimatum, but said he would support the faculty's decision.

"They were obviously looking for a good excuse to get rid of the newspaper," Barton said. "It's a shame Baylor doesn't realize the value of a good newspaper and instead wants a PR (public relations) sheet."

Police beat Local man cuffs officer

A Big Spring man was arrested Sunday night for allegedly possessing a federally prohibited weapon, resisting arrest, assaulting a police officer, public intoxication, discharging a firearm in city limits and criminal mischief.

Domingo Galaviz, 301 N.E. Seventh, was arrested for allegedly going to the residence of Joe Moran, 208 N.E. Seventh and started doing damage with a sawed-off rifle. Four glass windows, four screen windows and one storm door were damaged.

Upon arrival, officers saw Galaviz allegedly hiding the rifle in an out building behind 299 N.E. Seventh.

When police were handcuffing him, he began to fight with Patrolman Ron Newby. He broke out of the officer's hold and swung the handcuffed wrist at Newby. The free swinging handcuff was allegedly being used by Galaviz as a weapon against Newby. The free cuff struck the officer on the back of the left hand when the officer's hand was brought up to block an alleged attempted blow to Newby's face.

Galaviz was finally wrestled into a position by the officers to be handcuffed and arrested.

Bond was set at $10,000, plus a $50 fine for public intoxication, by Judge John Coffee. Charges have been dropped for resisting arrest, discharging a firearm in city limits and criminal mischief.

Iranian firing squad executes seven men

By the Associated Press

An Iranian firing squad executed seven members of the Forghan terrorist group early today less than 24 hours after the nation's prosecutor general charged a leading U.S. Embassy official with links to their secret organization and asked that he be turned over to the revolutionary courts.

Tehran Radio said the seven men were executed at 1 a.m. in the courtyard of Evin Prison in Tehran after being sentenced to death by the central Islamic revolutionary court for five murders, an attempted assassination and armed bank robbery.

The broadcast said among their victims was Professor Mohammad Mofatteh, head of the theology department at Tehran University and a close associate of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, who was assassinated Dec. 18, and Hojatolislam Hashemi Rafsanjani, a member of the ruling Revolutionary Council, who was wounded in an assassination attempt last May 25.

Forghan is a leftist, anti-clerical group which was blamed for the assassination of four other associates of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, the leader of the Iranian revolution, in 1979.

On Sunday, the prosecutor general accused Victor L. Tomseth, 38, the U.S. Embassy's political officer, of links to Forghan and asked Foreign Minister Sadegh Ghotbzadeh to deliver him to the revolutionary courts. There was no indication of Ghotbzadeh's response.

Tomseth has been held at the Foreign Ministry along with U.S. Charge d'Affaires L. Bruce Laingen and embassy security chief Michael Holland since Nov. 4, the day militant students seized the embassy and took most of those inside hostage.

Meanwhile, a member of the U.N. investigating commission, Adib Daoudi of Syria, said it has received assurances it can see the American hostages "very soon." But Iranian government officials said the militants still refused to permit the visit.

The U.N. group's spokesman, Samir Sambar, said the commission's negotiations to arrange the meeting had reached a "very delicate" stage.

President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr told the Saudi newspaper Al-Medina he hoped the meeting would take place.

Bani-Sadr also reiterated that freedom for the hostages was not near, Tehran Radio said, but "the United States could speed up the release by refraining from any unilateral action."

He added that the problem "could be solved very quickly" if President Carter cooperated, presumably by meeting his demands that the U.S. government acknowledge past crimes in Iran, pledge, non-interference in Iranian affairs and not block Iranian efforts to get Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi and his wealth back.

Khomeini was released Sunday from the Tehran hospital where he was hospitalized in late January after suffering a mild heart attack. He urged his countrymen to participate in the parliamentary elections March 13 and April 3 and said he hoped they "will put Iran in order."

Clouds reported over West Texas

By the Associated Press

A warming trend was forecast today for all of Texas after a weekend of bone-chilling temperatures from the Red River to the Rio Grande.

The state remained under the influence of a massive surface high pressure system that extended from the Texas gulf coast to the Ohio Valley. The system produced mostly clear skies and quite cold temperatures.

Some high clouds were reported over West Texas, but most of the state remained clear throughout the night.

Forecasts called for a warming trend with cloudy skies expected in West Texas, partly cloudy in North Texas and mostly clear in South Texas.

Highs were expected to range from the low 50s in East Texas to the upper 70s in the Big Bend area of Southwest Texas. Most of the state was to have readings in the 60s.

Early morning temperatures were quite cold, ranging from the 20s in North and East Texas to the lower 40s in far Southwest Texas. Readings were in the 30s in both the Panhandle and the Lower Rio Grande Valley. Extremes ranged from 20 at Lufkin to 43 at El Paso.

FORECAST
WEST TEXAS - Mostly cloudy through today except partly cloudy southeast today. Windy and warmer. Widely scattered showers west of mountains today. Highs upper 50s north to upper 70s extreme south. Lows upper 30s north to near 30 along Rio Grande. Highs Tuesday mid 50s north to near 60 south.

EXTENDED FORECAST
WEST TEXAS - Turning much colder mid week but warmer again Friday. Otherwise mostly cloudy Wednesday, becoming partly cloudy Thursday and Friday. Highs in the 20s and 30s north to 40s and 50s south Wednesday and Thursday. Warming to 50s north and 60s and 70s south Friday. Lows teens north to 20s and 30s south Wednesday and Thursday. Warming to 20s north and 30s and 40s south Friday.

WEATHER FORECAST—Showers are expected in the forecast period, today until Tuesday morning, from the central Gulf to the upper Mississippi. Snow is expected from the eastern Plains and Midwest to the upper Great Lakes. Snow and snow flurries are forecast for the northern and western Plains. Cold weather is forecast from the northern Rockies to the upper Great Lakes and into the Midwest and eastern Plains. Other areas are expected to be warmer.

Joint luncheon planned for 3 area chambers

COLORADO CITY — Colorado City, Big Spring and Snyder Chambers of Commerce will hold a joint luncheon next Monday in the Colorado City Civic Center.

Ken Scarborough, legislative and political manager of the Southwestern Region United States Chamber of Commerce will be guest speaker for the event.

As an expert in the legislative field, Scarborough will relate information to chamber members on legislation concerning the small business administration and how it affects each individual and business.

Anyone interested in attending the luncheon should contact the chamber office by Monday or telephone 915-728-3403. Price of the meal has not been set. However, a charge will be set and per-

Osteopath hit with tax raps

AMARILLO — An Amarillo osteopath, formerly of Midland, has been indicted by a federal grand jury on three counts of income tax evasion.

Accused is Dr. Austin B. Tibbets, also charged with willfully failing to file his federal income tax returns for the years 1974, 1975 and 1976.

The indictment accuses Tibbets of using cash, money orders and cashier's checks to conceal his transactions, filing a protest-type Form 1040 and admitting orally and in writing he intended to not pay income taxes.

Tibbets is subject to a maximum penalty of 18 years in prison and a $50,000 fine.

The investigation was conducted by special agents of the IRS stationed in Midland and Lubbock.

Ticket-fixing trial continues

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — The ticket-fixing conspiracy trial of an El Paso municipal judge and a policeman was expected to continue in federal court here into next week.

Suspended Municipal Judge Glen Sutherland, former El Paso police officer Edward Maynard and bail bond company employee Grace Walker were indicted by a federal grand jury Dec. 18.

Municipal Court Clerk Connie Medrano testified that Sutherland's "plea bargained" traffic ticket cases were handled casually and no court hearings were scheduled in some cases. She said Sutherland collected fines on his own and paid the fees to the city out of his own pocket.

She said some persons in plea bargaining situations would be found guilty of a general city violation code, charged $5 for the violation and found innocent on the actual traffic ticket. Convictions on the moving violation tickets are reported to the drivers' insurance companies.

Stiff increase is announced

LAMESA — The residential service charge for General Telephone Company customers in Lamesa will go up 55 percent, if the new rate scheduled is approved by the Texas Public Utility Commission.

The current one-party residential rate for Lamesa, now $6.30 a month, would be raised to $9.78 under the plan. The existing business one-party line would advance from $15 to $23.64, a boost of 57 percent.

McKinnon runs for council

COLORADO CITY — The latest Colorado City resident to announce as a candidate for the Colorado City city council is Mac McKinnon, editor and publisher of the Colorado City Record.

McKinnon has been a resident of Colorado City since 1971. He was born in Gorman and graduated from Dublin High School. He attended Tarleton State University, TCU and the University of Texas at Arlington.

Before moving to Colorado City, he was state editor of the Fort Worth Star Telegram.

He is a past president of the Colorado City Chamber of Commerce and the Colorado City Playhouse.

Coleen Palmer is candidate

COLORADO CITY — Mrs. Coleen Palmer, operator of The Occasional Specialty Shop here, has announced she will be a candidate for the Colorado City school board.

She and her husband, Mel, have three daughters.

Court leaves intact ruling that smut may be copyrighted

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court today left intact a ruling that obscene material may be copyrighted.

The justices refused to review a lower court ruling from Dallas, Texas that although obscene material does not come under the Constitution's free-speech protections, it nevertheless may be given copyright protection.

The issue arose in 1976 when Mitchell Brothers Film Group and Jartech Inc., holders of a copyright on the movie "Behind the Green Door," sued the operators of the Cinema Adult Theater in Dallas.

The suit charged that the movie house was guilty of copyright infringement, having obtained copies of the film without permission and having unlawfully exhibited it.

The theater owners defended themselves by contending that the movie was obscene and therefore was not legally entitled to copyright protection.

A copyright is an exclusive legal right, given for a certain number of years, to make, distribute and otherwise control a literary, musical or artistic work.

U.S. District Judge Robert Hill in Dallas watched the film, declared it obscene and dismissed the copyright infringement lawsuit.

The 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, reversed Hill's ruling last Oct. 16.

The trial judge was wrong in permitting the obscenity issue to be used as an affirmative defense in the case, the appeals court said without ever reaching the question of whether the movie is, indeed, obscene.

"We must read (copyright law) as containing no explicit or implicit bar to the copyrighting of obscene materials, and as therefore providing for the copyright of all creative works, obscene or non-obscene, that otherwise meet the requirements of the Copyright Act," the 5th Circuit court said.

The act was first passed by Congress in 1909. A revised version was enacted in 1976.

In seeking Supreme Court review, lawyers for the Cinema Adult Theater argued that other appeals courts have allowed the obscenity defense in such suits.

Ford invited to 'pack his long johns' Reagan too conservative to win White House?

By the Associated Press

Former President Gerald R. Ford says Ronald Reagan can never be elected president, but Reagan says if Ford thinks he can do better, he should "pack his long johns" and join the fray.

Meanwhile, fellow Republican George Bush, who already is trying to head off a Reagan nomination, says he can foresee a Ford challenge if the GOP convention in Detroit this summer is deadlocked.

Ford made his comments in an interview published Sunday in the New York Times. Reagan and Bush, considered the front-runners for the GOP nomination, responded while campaigning in Boston for Tuesday's primaries in Massachusetts and neighboring Vermont.

The former president, who narrowly beat Reagan for the party's nomination in 1976 and just as narrowly lost the general election to Jimmy Carter, muddled the 1980 Republican race considerably with this latest in a long series of hints that he is available if the party wants him.

"Every place I go, and everything I hear, there is the growing, growing sentiment that Gov. Reagan cannot win the election," Ford said. "I hear more and more often that we don't want, can't afford to have a replay of 1964."

That year, the Republican presidential ticket, led by Sen. Barry Goldwater of Arizona, suffered a landslide defeat after a campaign in which the Democratic opposition branded him as too conservative to be trusted with the White House.

Ford said in the interview confirmed by his executive assistant, Bob Barrett, that Reagan has the same problem.

"It would be an impossible situation," Ford said of a Reagan nomination. He said the former California governor is "perceived as a most conservative Republican. A most conservative Republican can't win in a national election."

As for himself, Ford said he might be better suited — "stoutly conservative" fiscally, "moderate" on social issues and "internationalist" in foreign affairs.

"If there was an honest-to-goodness, bona-fide urging by a broad-based group in my party, I would respond," Ford said, but acknowledged that "as of today, the party hasn't asked me."

"In my view, he is not going into the primaries," Bush responded.

But Reagan tossed a challenge back to Ford: "We'd like to see him pack his long johns and come out here on the primary trail with us, and join us. There's plenty of room out here."

"If he does," said Bush, "he's going to have to compete like the rest of us, and it's tough out there."

Nobody's going to hand this nomination to anyone — unless there's a deadlocked convention."

Bush added, however, that "if the convention is deadlocked, I can see a Ford move at the convention."

Bush also said if Ford thinks Reagan can't beat the Democrats, "then let's get somebody who can, and that's me."

Ford said he would have to make up his own mind about running by about April 1, the latest date for filing in many of the remaining primaries. But he also hinted he may do as Bush predicted and wait "to roll the dice at Detroit."

Only population control can save us

There's an old Spanish proverb which states in effect: "When God sends a baby to earth, He also sends the bread with which to feed it."

Who ever uttered that bit of profundity might like to have it back, in view of the tragedies that take place every day in parts of Southeast Asia.

A PRELIMINARY report of the Presidential Commission on World Hunger curiously neglects to address fully and responsibly the salient question of world over-population and omits entirely any reference to birth control as the most effective means of dealing with the problem.

According to the commission, the primary focus of this country's relations with the developing world would be on the elimination of global hunger. The population crisis gets little more than a passing reference in the document, on the other hand.

Mother Earth now has 4.3 billion people, give or take a few million. By the turn of the century, according to recent projections, those numbers will increase to six billion. At least 90 per cent of that growth will be in areas that simply cannot compete with the problem.

Providing food for the hungry without delving deeply into the matter of the number of mouths that must be fed in the foreseeable future is a classic example of treating the symptoms and ignoring the cause.

The United States, of course, cannot neglect its commendable humanitarian concern for satisfying the hunger pangs of the unfed. In so doing, however, there must be a significant proviso: The United States will do its utmost to eliminate hunger in those countries actively engaged in overcoming their population problems.

The commission accurately observes that "where hunger and poverty prevail, the population growth is more likely to increase than decrease." However, the report seems to shrug off rampant population growth by attributing it to "inequitable social and economic problems."

MOST EXPERTS ARE resigned to the fact that nothing can be done to prevent the world population from ballooning to six billion in 20 short years. There is much that can and should be done, however, in terms of motivating people to have smaller families and providing them with the means and education to limit their family size. The goal would be to stabilize world population at a figure much lower than 8 to 10 billion (the figure at which global population stabilization is expected to be reached at some point in the next 100 years).

Birth control works, if methods are given a chance. The White House Commission should not be ignoring that fact. Family planning programs have worked dramatically in places like Indonesia, Korea and Thailand.

The U.S. spent a little over $2 billion for food and agricultural assistance to the developing world in 1979, but only $185 million for world population assistance. Unless our efforts to control world population is accelerated, the proliferation of starvation, poverty and human misery can only increase in the years ahead.

Don't try it

Around the rim

Andrea Cohen

I'm sure you've seen the advertisements. A new mall opened in Odessa recently. Unless I need something specific or I've gone off my rocker, I probably won't make a pilgrimage there.

Have you ever seen one of those things? They probably offer more of nothing at exorbitant prices than anything I have ever seen. They also represent the worst in urban development.

With restaurants, pinball galleries, year-round temperature controls, trees with chirping birds and at various times of the year, special exhibits and Santa, the idea is to take the family for the day and have an outing.

DON'T TRY IT. It never works out. If you lose one of your kids, you may never find him again. You might, however, find a different kid. If he's not screaming that he wants the latest Star Trek toy, grab him. You may never find the likes of him again. Just make sure he wears the same size clothing as your original kid for cost reasons.

If you have been wanting to get rid of your husband for years now, and don't know how to go about it without 'bad feelings, drag him to a mall. Tell him you'll be hours in a dress shop. He'll get disgusted and go window shopping in other parts of the mall. About an hour later, sneak your head out of the store. If he's not there, make a run for it. After seven years, have him declared dead. He probably starved to death trying to find his way out of the place anyway.

And make sure you know where you put your car. Many people think their car has been stolen when all that happened was the person came in the north door, when they thought they came in from the east.

I never quite understood the attraction to malls. They're like rodents. Once you have one, you've got too many. And like rodents, they just seem to get bigger and bigger. All they do is take what used to be a beautiful piece of land and create traffic jams. And once you have a mall, it usually leads to more roads, houses, apartments and extra commerce right near it.

ONCE YOU GET IN the mall, it seems all the stores have the same items, for usually the same prices. The stores that are there are usually national chains, since they're the only ones that can afford the costs of operating there. The employees usually act like they're doing you a favor by waiting on you.

As one who came from a land of malls, including one with a four lane highway going around it with another smaller mall directly adjacent to it, which is located approximately three miles from the last great mall to be built which created so much excitement, I'd still rather have the independently owned shop where they want your business and are happy to help.

Andrus annoyed

Jack Anderson,

WASHINGTON — Interior Secretary Cecil Andrus, wearing a petulant air of affronted dignity and annoyance, has taken exception to my reports on his political past.

Secret investigative files and knowledgeable sources disclose that Andrus as governor of Idaho seemed to do everything possible to clear the way for Emprise Corp., a Mafia-linked sports outfit, to move into the state. His appointment of a small-town sheriff, John Bender, as Idaho's chief lawman also appalled federal agents trying to cope with the Mafia.

At a national law enforcement conference, one expert described the Bender appointment as "a classic case of corruption and infiltration by organized crime." Meanwhile, the Law Enforcement Intelligence Unit, a federally subsidized crime-fighting group, refused to send any sensitive data to Idaho when it found out Bender had unauthorized access to it.

THIS ATTRACTED THE scrutiny of crime investigation units at both the state and federal level. No less than Nick Scopetta, the New York prosecutor of Serpico fame, came to Idaho to investigate.

There was enough evidence, he concluded, to justify calling a special grand jury. But this was precluded by Idaho state law. Instead, the facts were set forth in an investigative file which mysteriously disappeared after it was turned over to Andrus.

Upon President Carter's appointment of Andrus to the Cabinet in 1976, a team of FBI agents pulled the facts together for a routine background report. Yet astonishingly, this derogatory material was not included in the FBI report that was submitted to the Senate.

My sources said the embarrassing information was expunged from the report before any Senators could see it — a charge that a White House spokesman emphatically denied. Yet the information never reached the Senate committee that reviewed the Andrus appointment; obviously, someone's hand had been quicker than the eye.

I asked my associate Dale Van Atta to investigate the cover-up. He spent weeks in Idaho where he spoke to dozens of sources and gathered hundreds of pages of documents. Then we questioned Andrus about the allegations.

The Interior Secretary is an amiable, earnest sort, with an air about him of legitimate purpose and disarming frankness. His method is to admit candidly what was already known and beyond hiding, but to deny its logical implications.

Meanwhile, he adopted the tactics of the cuttlefish, which are known to marine biologists for their protective habit of squirting ink to evade pursuers. He began squirting ink long before I could get to my typewriter.

WITHOUT KNOWING what I intended to write, he called a press conference, labeled the unwritten story as "garbage" and huffed off. He has continued to spread the protective ink.

"Mr. Anderson has just resurrected and rehabbed old barroom gossip which has absolutely no basis in fact," he snorted. A rebash? The story had never been published, but had been actively suppressed. Barroom gossip? The information came from the files of at least three official investigations.

Here are just a few of the questions that are still reverberating: Why did Andrus as governor engage in political manipulations to promote an Emprise race track in Idaho? What happened to the investigative file that was entrusted to Andrus' care? Why did he appoint a backwater sheriff, with a reputation for corruption, as Idaho's top law enforcement officer? Who removed the derogatory information from the FBI report before it was submitted to the Senate?

The burly John Bender served Andrus as the top Idaho cop from 1971 to 1977. Yet here's what my reporter found from sources and documents:

Four separate informants told four state investigators that Bender took payoffs from them while he was sheriff in a northern Idaho gambling balliwick.

A state agent, quoting an underworld informant, reported Bender had "kept the heat off" his illegal drug pushing, which was "allowed to continue through the protection afforded by Mr. John Bender."

And will not accommodate parked cars on both sides of the street and thru traffic without causing serious traffic conditions. Also, there was no policeman to direct traffic before or after the game. We would like to know why.

We feel that the Coliseum has become a great asset to our community, but we feel that some time should be spent looking into this problem.

Looking at results

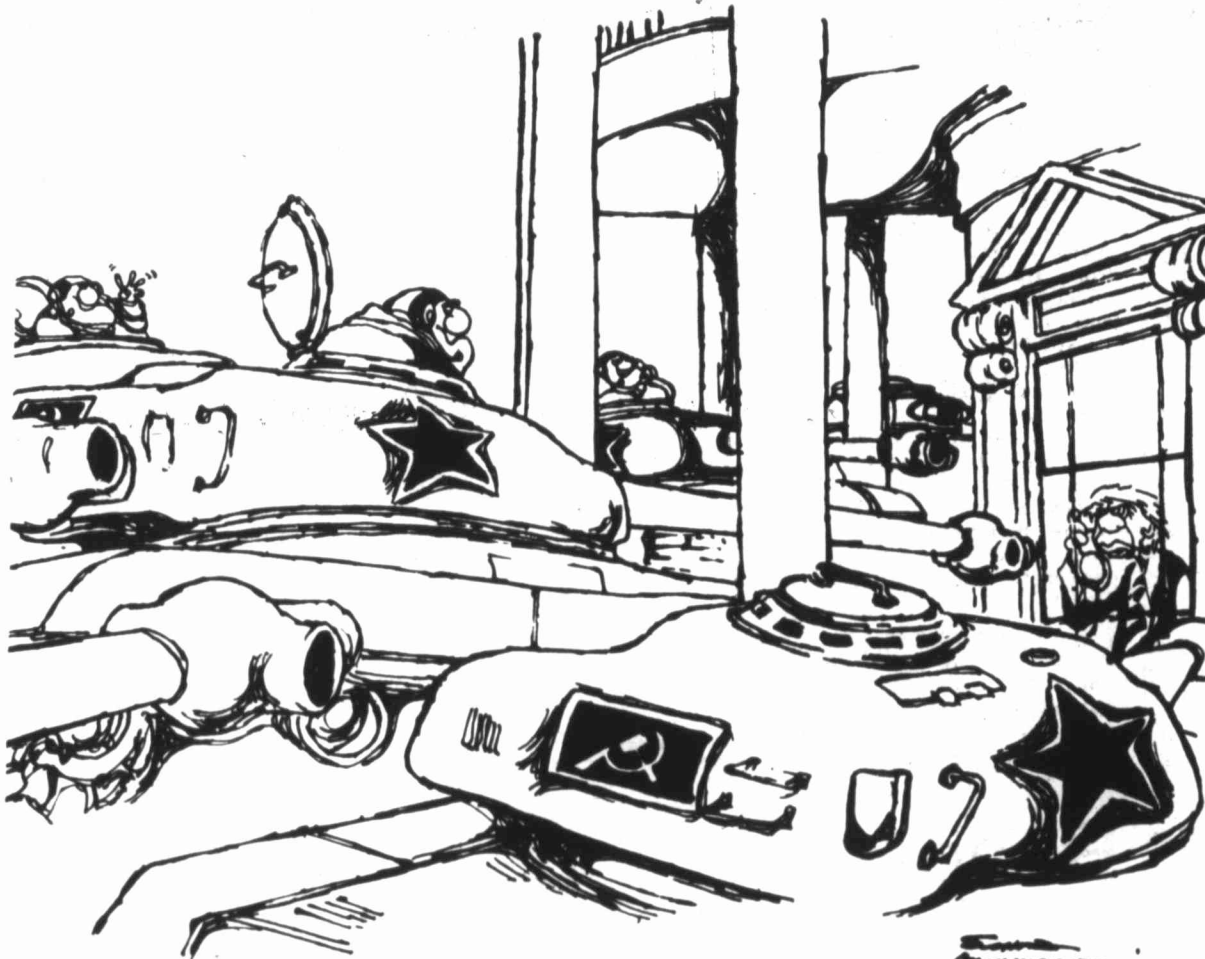

William F. Buckley, Jr.

Concerning the events in New Hampshire, a few observations:

1) The Republican voters responded to a vigorous candidate to whom they accorded seniority in the party, and did so by an astonishing plurality. There has got to be a reason why the polls, which had anticipated a close race between Reagan and Bush, were so emphatically rebuked. Although it is correct that Mr. Bush's foreign policy recommendations have not differed strikingly from those of Ronald Reagan, it is a fact that Reagan's have been around and visible over a much longer period. We have in the past two weeks been flimflammed yet again by the ayatollah, and my guess is that Reagan's widely publicized statement that he would under no circumstances apologize to Iran for our past association with its shah had an electric effect: the antipodal effect of candidate George McGovern's statement eight years ago that if necessary in order to bring back our prisoners-of-war, he would approach the North Vietnamese on his knees. Reagan's solidity, over many seasons, on foreign policy came through. This is not to suggest that Bush would act differently, merely that he is perceived as a new boy in Tombstone, and the voters want Gary Cooper around if there's going to be a shoot-out.

2) IT MAY BE that there is crystallizing a contest of an ideological character that eschews not only moderation, but the appearance of moderation. Reagan is associated with a configuration of policies that combine, however loosely, to represent the Conservative Position. Abortion is an example here. Reagan says, quite simply, that he believes the unborn child deserves the protection of the law. There are complicated ways to saying that, and they have been said — by scientists, constitutionalists, moralists. But there is a perfectly straightforward way to say it, without such ambiguities as are associated with the position taken by George Bush and others. Now it is true that to take a position unambiguously is to affront those who disagree. No doubt there will be an anti-conservative consolidation in the general election if Reagan is to be the nominee. But it may be that that is subtly desired. If it is, then the Republicans will put up the man most prominently associated with the territory on which they wish to stand. Winner take all.

3) But the winner on the Democratic side isn't likely to be Senator Kennedy. That would appear to be testimony to the good sense of the people in rejecting left extremism. If Carter continues to prevail over Kennedy, he will emerge as the Iron Moderate if you can successfully confute that image with the silly putty that best suggests the policies Mr. Carter has pursued during his term of office. What would bring the greatest strength to Mr. Carter is his having, single-handed, administered the last rites to the myth of Kennedy invincibility. That and the call to rescue the country from a Reagan candidacy. Unhappily there are many Americans who would prefer triple digit inflation and the loss of Key West to Moscow rather than endure four years of Ronald Reagan as president. There is a very touchy point beneath which lies the horrifying fear of many liberals that it could just happen that four years of Reagan might bring on a stronger and an entirely habitable America. That psychological paradox is entirely bipartisan. Next to having to live under Soviet rule, I would fear most the prospect of being happy living under Soviet rule.

"THAT DOES IT, LEONID... YOU TURKEYS JUST BLEW YOUR PAPER FRANCHISE...."

Joint pain? Is it really arthritis?

Paul G. Donohue, M.D.

Dear Dr. Donohue: Is there any way to determine whether pain and stiffness of the fingers is caused by arthritis or too much use? I am a keypunch operator five days a week. Now I'm in middle age and find I'm getting pain in my hands and fingers. So far, I can bear it, but I'm afraid it will get worse. Could this be arthritis, the kind I would get anyway, or is it related to keypunching? What do I do? — M.K.

Will you let me reword your question a bit? "Do you really have arthritis?"

Arthritis is inflammation of joints that causes pain, swelling, tenderness and stiffness. Many times, what is self-diagnosed as arthritis is not. Often people mistake muscle ache or pain from ligaments and tendons around joints for arthritis. But remember, the JOINT itself is directly involved in arthritis.

Suppose that you do have direct joint involvement. The constant wear and tear of joints can lead to osteoarthritis. That kind usually feels better after a night's rest, but gets worse with movement during the day. Key punching might make that kind worse.

The other common variety of arthritis (rheumatoid) is not initially related to wear and tear. It comes on regardless of what kind of work you do, even if none is done. But, it can be aggravated by undue stress on the joints. In this form of arthritis the joints are stiffest in the morning and tend to limber up during the day — somewhat the opposite to the wear and tear kind (osteo).

What to do? The first step is to find out if you really do have arthritis and, if so, which kind. Exercise is not prohibited for arthritis, but constant injurious motions of the joints should be avoided.

Dear Dr. Donohue: Recently, I read that women on the Pill should be taking extra vitamins. Since then I've started taking vitamins (listed). I feel great. I'm not so crabby anymore. I understand that when a woman is on the Pill her body thinks she's pregnant. When a woman is actually pregnant she is told to take extra vitamins, so why not with the Pill? — Mrs. M.M.

I took your interesting question to my gynecologist friends. They do not routinely prescribe vitamins for women on birth control pills. Some sources state that the Pill may cause a "relative" B-6 deficiency, also a drop in "folate" (another B vitamin). However, I cannot find this to be a common occurrence and I do not believe vitamins need to be routinely prescribed for those on birth control pills.

It's true, as you say, that the "body thinks it's pregnant" while on the Pill. But it isn't, of course. In a true pregnancy there is the extra "passenger" making demands on the mother's own vitamin supply, so supplements do help.

It's good that you are feeling well. I see nothing wrong in taking what you are taking, especially if this makes you feel so much better. It cannot hurt you.

Dear Dr. Donohue: Some questions for you.

1. Have you ever had a cancer patient who was a life-long vegetarian? 2. Have you ever had a patient with high triglycerides who was a life-long vegetarian? 3. Have you ever had a patient with high cholesterol count who was a life-long vegetarian? — R.L.C.

I wonder if you are trying to make a point for vegetarianism. Vegetarians, in general, do have much lower cholesterol and triglyceride levels than meat eaters. I can honestly answer all three of your questions with the single word, "No." But I should add that I have had only one patient who was a devoted total vegetarian. I should also add that I've had many meat-eating patients who had none of the problems you mention.

Dear Dr. Donohue: You look so young in your picture that's run with your column. How young are you? Mrs. D.S.

Not as young as I'd like to be. I'm 42. Some doctors could add one year for each year they've practiced medicine. That would make me about 59.

Dr. Donohue welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

My answer

Billy Graham

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: My wife is having emotional problems, and I find it hard to understand. She has always been a good Christian, but the arm would still be out of shape. In the same way, if a person has some type of mental problem (because of some childhood experiences, for example), that problem would not necessarily go away just because he had become a Christian.

If you have not already done so, I urge you to get professional help for your wife. Ask your pastor or a Christian doctor you know for advice about a Christian psychologist or psychiatrist in your area, and don't be ashamed or afraid to make use of his God-given abilities. But also do all you can to support your wife at this time. She may find it difficult to understand why she is having this problem, and you need to reassure her that you love her just as much now as you ever have. "Husbands, love your wives, just as Christ loved the church and gave himself up for her" (Ephesians 5:25).

Dear Editor:

On Feb. 22, the Midland-Odessa district basketball game was played at the Dorothy Garrett Coliseum. I would like to know why there were people turned away from the coliseum parking area. The parking area was only half full, three gates were open on the North side as they were also on the South side, but two gates on the North and three gates on the South were closed.

Several of the out-of-town visitors expressed to us that they were being turned away from the parking area and told that it was full. Therefore, they were forced to park on the residential streets surrounding the Coliseum. Cars were parked on both sides of the street on Harvard Street, on Kentucky Way, as well as Birdwell Lane.

This was a disgrace for the home owners in the area, as well as the visitors from Midland and Odessa. They did not seem to be any more pleased about it than we were.

These streets are residential streets

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court thwarted efforts by reporters to obtain transcripts of the oral arguments in the case of Henry A. I. while he was state and national security. By a 5-2 ruling, the Information authorized federal order transfer from the Congress, which stored, to the Court, for the trial of the case. The ruling leaves the State free to seek documents. The department was some pressure.

Supreme Court rejects bid for Kissinger transcripts

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court today thwarted efforts by news reporters and historians to obtain transcripts of telephone conversations of Henry A. Kissinger had while he was secretary of state and White House national security adviser.

By a 5-2 vote, the justices ruled that the Freedom of Information Act does not authorize federal courts to order transfer of the notes from the Library of Congress, where they are stored, to the State Department for release.

The ruling, however, leaves the State Department free to seek return of the documents. It is likely the department will come under some pressure to do so.

Today's decision reversed lower court rulings that had cleared the way for public access to at least a portion of the transcripts of conversations Kissinger had while secretary of state.

Those rulings had barred public release of transcripts made for Kissinger in his job as national security adviser for Presidents Richard M. Nixon and Gerald R. Ford.

Narrowly interpreting the Freedom of Information Act, a law passed by Congress in 1966 to curtail government secrecy, the court said the State Department had not "improperly withheld" the information because it did not have control of it when the requests for release were made.

"Under these circumstances, the State Department cannot be said to have had possession or control of the documents at the time the requests were received. It did not, therefore, withhold any agency records, an indispensable prerequisite to liability in a suit under the FOIA," Justice William H. Rehnquist wrote for the court.

His opinion was joined by Chief Justice Warren E. Burger and Justices Potter

Stewart, Byron R. White and Lewis F. Powell Jr. Justices John Paul Stevens

and William J. Brennan Jr. dissented, and Justices Thurgood Marshall and Harry A. Blackmun took no part in deciding the case for unannounced reasons.

In his dissenting opinion, Stevens said the court was confusing "custody" and "control" with "physical possession."

In doing so, he said, the court makes the act inapplicable "to any document which has been removed from the possession of the agency prior to the filing of the FOIA request."

Kissinger served as national security adviser from 1968 to 1975. In 1973, he was appointed as secretary of state, a post he held until January 1977.

Kissinger's secretaries both at the White House and the State Department took shorthand notes while listening to his telephone conversations.

Court documents show that some 15,000 pages of transcripts were compiled of Kissinger's State Department conversations, and some 17,000 pages during his years at the White House.

Before he left office, Kissinger donated all the transcripts and other papers to the Library of Congress on the condition that they not be made public for 25 years or until five years after his death, whichever comes later.

He did so after the State Department's legal adviser concluded that the notes were not government property.

But U.S. District Judge John L. Smith ruled in late 1977 that the State Department transcripts should not have been removed from that agency's custody because they were not Kissinger's property.

Because the transcripts had been produced on government time and by government workers and equipment, Smith ruled that they were public property.

Public release of the notes had been sought in a suit filed by the Reporters Committee for Freedom of the Press, the American Historical Association, the Military Audit Project and nine individuals.

Smith, upheld by the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Washington, ordered that the 15,000 pages of Kissinger's State Department conversations be returned to the department and be prepared for public release.

The Supreme Court today ruled that Smith and the appeals court had no legal authority to make such an order.

Sagging highway tolls, taxes sparked by dip in use of gas

By the Associated Press

Many states and highway authorities across the nation were hit with a drop in fuel-tax and toll revenues in 1979 as gasoline shortages and sharp price increases combined to keep U.S. motorists off the road.

State officials and Wall Street bond analysts say the revenue slowdown could lead to delays in highway maintenance and to boosts in tax and toll rates.

The slowdown has hit as soaring interest rates are forcing states to pay more for the money they borrow and as spiraling crude oil prices have pushed up the price of petroleum-based asphalt paving by nearly 31 percent over the past year.

U.S. gasoline use fell 5 percent from 1978 to 1979. The Energy Department predicts gasoline use will fall 2.4 percent more in 1980 as prices continue to rise and as new-car fuel mileage improves.

A doubling of foreign crude oil prices and other factors pushed the average price of a gallon of regular leaded gasoline up by nearly 40 cents last year to $1.06. The price could hit $1.52 by the end of 1980, according to the Energy Department.

The Federal Highway Administration estimates state fuel tax collections nationwide totaled $9.8 billion last year, a slim 0.9 percent ahead of the $9.7 billion collected in 1978.

Revenues from state fuel taxes, which now average about 14 cents a gallon, had been rising at a 5 percent-a-year rate in 1976-78.

The slowdown also is affecting revenues from the 4-cents-a-gallon federal levy on gasoline and diesel fuel, with collections in the fiscal year ended last Sept. 30 of $4.86 billion — 2.2 percent ahead of those for fiscal 1978.

"We expect considerable decreases" in federal fuel-tax revenues this year, said Edward Gladstone, chief of the administration's highway finance branch.

According to analyst George P. Gregorio of the brokerage firm of Prescott, Ball & Turben, toll roads used for pleasure driving and those in rural areas have been hardest-hit by the traffic decline, while roads with heavy commuter and commercial traffic are less affected.

The Pennsylvania Turnpike logged a 6 percent drop in traffic last year. In Illinois, traffic on rural and interstate roads was down by about 10 to 20 percent last summer from levels of a year earlier, while city traffic was off by 6 percent.

Toll revenues on the New Jersey Turnpike, a major truck and commuter route linking the New York and Philadelphia areas, rose about $47,000 last year to $100.9 million.

But on New Jersey's Garden State Parkway, which over much of its distance is restricted to passenger cars only, collections fell $156,000 to $65.3 million. Toll revenues fell 1.1 percent last year to $79.9 million on the New York State Thruway, and spokesman David Alexander said the road is "seriously considering a toll increase" to help pay for a $150 million rehabilitation program.

"We've got to get some new dough," said Alexander, who added the Thruway does not "expect to get back to present revenues until around 1981 or 1982."

Ten states raised fuel taxes last year, said Gladstone, while others are planning boosts in 1980.

In Florida, a gubernatorial commission has recommended raising the state's 8 cents-a-gallon gasoline tax by 4 cents. It said the new tax rate should be allowed to rise with climbing prices to keep revenues from dropping as sales fall.

But last year's increases didn't always work as intended.

Pennsylvania had hoped a 2-cent boost to 11 cents a gallon in the state's gasoline tax would add $100 million to the state's coffers. Officials now believe that the state will fall $60 million short of its $569 million gasoline tax revenue goal for the year ending June 30.

"The public has now realized that not only Pennsylvania but the entire nation will never again have the abundant supplies of gas they were once used to," said a spokesman for Gov. Dick Thornburgh's Energy Council.

In addition, consumers are worried "they just won't have the money today for gas," said analyst Terry Wolfe of the brokerage house of Bache Halsey Stuart Shields Inc.

New Mexico relies heavily on a 7-cents-a-gallon gasoline tax to finance its highway department budget, but saw tax collections drop to $27.3 million in the second half of 1979 from $29.2 million a year earlier.

"This really put a crimp in our budget," and forced the department to cut back "in some very important areas" including maintenance and road building, said Highway Administrator Fred O'Chesky.

In Louisiana, an 8 cents-a-gallon gasoline tax yielded $164.9 million in the year ending in June 1978, and $172 million in the year ending in June 1979. But revenues are expected to fall to $170.4 million in the current fiscal year.

In California, which has a 7-cents a gallon gasoline tax, revenues fell to $796 million last year from $979 revenues from a nickel-a-gallon gas tax were off by $3.2 million at $349.9 million.

Tennessee's fuel tax collections in the last six months of 1979 ran about $10 million behind levels of a year earlier. The state Revenue Department has estimated revenues for the full fiscal year ending June 30 will be $25 million behind the previous year's $214.7 million.

Sugar prices turn food bills sour

By the Associated Press

Sugar prices added a sour note to family grocery bills last month, helping boost supermarket prices by an average of just over 1 percent, according to an Associated Press market-basket survey.

The price of a five-pound sack of sugar went up at the stores checked in 12 of the 13 cities on the survey list and was unchanged in the 13th city. The increases, ranging from 4 cents to 45 cents, more than offset declines in the price of pork chops and eggs.

The AP drew up a random list of 15 commonly purchased food and nonfood items, checked the price at one supermarket in each of 13 cities on March 1, 1979 and has rechecked on or about the start of each succeeding month. One item, chocolate chip cookies, was dropped from the list at the end of November 1977 because the manufacturer discontinued the package size used in the survey.

The latest survey showed that the marketbasket bill increased at the checklist store in eight cities during February, rising an average of 2.6 percent. The bill declined in five cities, down an average of 1.2 percent. On an overall basis, the marketbasket bill at the checklist store was 1.1 percent higher at the start of March than it was a month earlier. The increase compared with a seven-tenths of a percent boost during January and a 1 percent decline during February 1979.

Comparing today's prices with those seven years ago, the AP found that the marketbasket bill at the checklist stores is an average of 87 percent higher today than it was on March 1, 1972.

The increase in sugar costs reflects higher prices being paid on world markets which, in turn, reflect a smaller sugar crop. According to the U.S. Department of Agriculture, the world price averaged about 8 cents a pound during the first half of 1979, but had risen to 21 cents a pound by the first week in February 1980.

There was some encouraging news at the meat counter. The price of a center-cut pork chops declined during February at the checklist store in seven cities, reflecting the steady increase in hog production. The USDA says federally inspected hog slaughter during the first six weeks of 1980 was up 26 percent from a year earlier.

Egg prices also dropped, according to the AP survey. The price of a dozen eggs declined at the checklist store in 11 cities. On the average, the price of eggs in the AP survey dropped by about 7 percent during February, following an 11 percent decline in January.

No attempt was made to weight the AP survey results according to population density or in terms of what percent of a family's actual grocery outlay each item represents. The AP did not try to compare actual prices from city to city. The only comparisons were made in terms of percentages of increase or decrease.

The items on the AP checklist were: chopped chuck, center cut pork chops, frozen orange juice concentrate, coffee, paper towels, butter, Grade-A medium white eggs, creamy peanut butter, laundry detergent, fabric softener, tomato sauce, milk, frankfurters and granulated sugar. The cities checked were: Albuquerque, N.M., Atlanta, Boston, Chicago, Dallas, Detroit, Los Angeles, Miami, New York, Philadelphia, Providence, R.I., Salt Lake City and Seattle.

The decision was made after all tickets for the eight regular performances had been sold.

The Playhouse box office will be open until 5 p.m., today and again from 1 to 8 p.m., Tuesday to accommodate ticket purchasers.

Tickets are $3.50 each.

Vocational Office Education students from Coahoma High School were participants in the Area IV Education Youth Leadership Conference held at Angelo State University recently.

The Awards Breakfast was held in the Houston Hart Center at ASU. Students placing first or second will be attending state competition in Dallas March 20, 21, and 22.

Those eligible for state competition from Coahoma are Regina Kennedy, Pre-Employed Lab Job Manual, Kerri Read, Chapter Activities Manual and Kaci Bunn, Extemporaneous Verbal Communications II.

Four other students from Coahoma won merit awards, Tammi Doolin, Information Communications I, Jean Wanner, Prepared Verbal Communications II, Jennie Oldaker, Bulletin Board Display, and Cheryl Greenfield, General Clerical I.

The annual state leadership conference will be held at the Sheraton Hotel in Dallas. During the conference, delegates will participate in competitive events, elect state officers, elect national officer candidates, attend mini-sessions and participate in activities of the conference.

The top three winners in each cluster event at state contest will be eligible to attend the national conference scheduled April 18-21 in Minneapolis, Minn.

Mrs. Marie Ethridge, VOE Coordinator at Coahoma, will accompany these students to the State Contest.

Soviet jets strafe rebel-held village

By the Associated Press

The Afghan rebels admitted heavy losses in one communist attack between Kabul and the Pakistani border but claimed severe Afghan army casualties in two battles and the capture of a town in the area.

Soviet MIG jets and helicopter gunships bombed and strafed the rebel-held village of Kot east of the Afghan capital, killing 50 Moslem insurgents, the rebels reported. It was one of the highest tolls admitted by them in nearly two years of guerrilla war against the communist regime.

An account of the fighting, issued Sunday in Pakistan by the rebel Hizbe Islami, or Islamic Party, said the rebels captured the village in Nangarhar Province several days ago, and the Russians were trying to drive them out.

The communique did not say whether the guerrillas fled. But it said the dead included the local rebel commander and his deputy.

The rebel statement also claimed: —Rebel forces killed 90 Afghan army troops and four Soviet advisers in a battle at Nazian, a village in the same province. Eighteen rebels died in the fighting, and Soviet air raids killed 80 civilians, including women and children, in the area.

—Guerrillas captured the town of Sultanpur and killed 40 government soldiers in a series of battles near Jalalabad, 75 miles east of Kabul. It said 30 government soldiers were taken prisoner.

Rebel sources in the southwestern province of Kandahar said Sunday that Soviet aircraft attacked a mosque at Kherqa Mubarak, killing 50 Moslems who were mourning the loss of four relatives killed in an earlier Soviet artillery attack. The sources said there were several hundred persons in the mosque when the attack occurred, and an undisclosed number were wounded.

None of the rebel claims could be confirmed. Radio Kabul said President Babrak Karmal's government Saturday freed 112 persons arrested after the anti-Soviet rioting and street battles in the Afghan capital Feb. 22-23. The broadcast said the release was recommended by a government commission set up to investigate the riots in which an estimated 300 civilians were killed and 1,000 injured.

Agencies will sponsor classes

The value speaks for itself in a voice that says Howard Miller.

The solid oak case is over 6 1/2' tall and carved in the elaborate country French manner.

And every hour, it plays your choice of three English cathedral chimes — Westminster, Whittington or Winchester.

How do you handle prejudiced parent?

By Robert Wallace, Ed. D.

Millie, 14, from Tacoma, Wash., is white and she wants to date a boy who is black but her parents refuse. Millie would like a little guidance from me and from her peers. Linda Garcia, 16, from San Antonio, Texas, and Robert Shirl, who resides in Santa Ana, Calif., will do the honors. Welcome.

Dr. Wallace: I am a 14-year-old girl who has many friends both black and white.

There is a black boy whom I have known for a long time. He is a good friend, a sweet guy and I like him very much. He has asked me to go out with him but when I told my family, they "blew up."

Now when I talk to him at school, my sister runs home to my mother and tells her. My mother says that if I don't "knock it off" she will not allow me to go anywhere. In fact, she said she will come to school to make sure I don't talk to him.

This boy treats me with respect and what my sister and mother are doing is making me start to hate them.

Please, help me get through to my family that because he is black doesn't mean he is bad. For the first time in my life, I feel someone really cares for me. I would also like to hear from your teen guest writers. — Millie, Tacoma, Wash.

Millie: Prejudice is one of the more difficult of family "maladies" to cure. In many cases, the disease will never be arrested. If it means that continuing to see the boy will cause total chaos in your house, stop seeing him.

Level with the boy by telling him the truth. He will understand. Probably the best thing that has taken place through it all is when it comes to race, you are color-blind.

If there would be any way you could get this boy over to your house to meet your family — do it. — Dr. Wallace Hello Millie: I thought my dad was prejudiced but he is mild compared to your mother (my dad only wants me to date Mexican-American boys).

Why don't you suggest to this boy that his mother call your mother and have a nice little chat? It can't do any harm and who knows, your mother might allow you to at least talk to this boy. It would be a start. — Linda, San Antonio, Texas

Hi Millie: Wow! You do have problems. Racial prejudice runs deep and many times nothing can change those who are prejudiced. I see no way of dating this boy as things stand now.

The first thing that I would suggest is to win your sister over so she keeps her mouth shut. Then I would go to your counselor at school and see if this person has any positive suggestions. If that doesn't work keep seeking help from a teacher, nurse, family doctor, clergyman, etc.

You may never change your mother's views but you should "go down swinging." — Robert, Santa Ana, Calif.

If you would like to be a guest teen writer, please write to me in care of this newspaper, stating your sex and age.

Training session no Girl Scout camp

SEA GIRT, N.J. (AP) — "This isn't going to be Girl Scout camp," Col. Clinton L. Pagano barked at 102 female state trooper recruits.

"We move double-time outside here," said an instructor, ordering the recruits, some in platform shoes, to run to their next task.

"That's all right, persons, take it easy," he said as they stumbled.

"All right, now we're going to march," shouted another instructor. "You start with your left foot. Do all of you know which is your left foot? No? Well, it's the one on the left."

That's what the first day of a 20-week training session sounded like for what is thought to be the nation's first all-woman recruit class.

The women, ranging in age from 19 to 32, were drawn from a pool of 1,631 candidates who applied when Gov. Brendan Byrne ordered a special effort to add women to the force. Only two women are now troopers, and they are among the instructors for the new contingent.

The modified strength tests for women have stirred resentment among some male troopers, who claim women won't be able to handle trouble.

"There's a mixed reaction, some positive, some negative ... but they're all going to abide with it," said Pagano, the state police superintendent.

"We're not going to do anything different with this class. They're going to learn to be troopers and we're going to learn to teach females."

He said half the recruits are expected to drop out, the same number as among male recruits.

All future trooper classes will be coed again, he said. "It's a challenge and I need a challenge at the moment," said Ranette Scott-Ingram of Jersey City, one of the few married recruits.

"I'm psyched right this time," said Carolyn Miller, 32, of Newark, the oldest recruit, who dropped out a year ago.

By mid-afternoon, the recruits were learning the intricacies of precision bed-making, locker packing and caring for crisp new khaki uniforms, and a new addition to the curriculum, the military way to fold a bra.

"Is it graduation yet?" a recruit whispered.

Sorority meets today

The Alpha Tau Rho chapter of Beta Sigma Phi met Feb. 24 in the home of Sue O'Daniel.

Members observed the Ritual of Jewels ceremony. Nine pledges were inducted by JoAnne Ezzel and Mrs. O'Daniel, including Tracey Fadal, Glynn Drewery, Pat Johnke, Sheri Lepard, Jan Nichols, Kathy Nichols, Arlene White, Pat Winters and Sherry Woods.

Following the ceremony, Kathy Nichols, vice president, conducted a short business meeting in the absence of President Jayne Titsworth.

The next meeting has been rescheduled for March 3 to accommodate spring break. It will be held at Alberto's Crystal Cafe. Kathy Nichols will present a program on crafts.

holds pot luck supper

The National Association of Retired and Veteran Railway Employees (NARVRE) met at the Kentwood Older Adult Center on Feb. 21, 6:30 p.m. for a potluck supper. The regular meeting followed at 7:30 p.m. with J.W. Weidel, president presiding.

Mr. and Mrs. James A. Horton were welcomed as new members. J.H. Eastham reported on the "Widow's Bill" now in Congress and the current standing of the funding of the Railroad Retirement Act, now being considered.

Hostesses were Mrs. J.W. Weidel, Mrs. W.C. Cole and Mrs. Dale Smith. Visitors were Mrs. Elsie Hamby, Mrs. Lavelle Hill and Mrs. Fannie Bell Adkins.

Ben Burroughs, J.H. Eastham, Marshall Brown and S.A. Wilson sang several songs with Mrs. Arvie Walker at the piano.

Next meeting will be at the KOAC, 6:30 p.m. for a "potluck" supper with the regular meeting at 7:30 p.m. March 20.

Supreme president honored

Mrs. Paul E. Case, supreme worthy president of the Supreme Assembly of the Social Order of the Beauceant was honored by Midland Assembly 143 and Big Spring Assembly 211.

Both assemblies met in the Masonic Hall in Big Spring Feb. 27 and took part in exemplifying the ritualistic work of the order.

A dinner was held in the banquet room prior to the meeting.

Mrs. Case is a resident of Reading, Mass., and is presently touring the United States and Hawaii making her official visits to all 200 assemblies.

Other special guests attending, in addition to Mrs. Case, were Mrs. Victor Gallivan, past supreme worthy president from Las Cruces, N.M.; Mrs. Curtis Winterrowd, supreme committee member from Odessa; Mrs. J.E. Turner, worthy president of Abilene Assembly 192; and W.B. Graham, worthy president of San Angelo Assembly 190.

The Midland assembly hosted a reception following the meeting.

Mrs. Rhodes presents program

The Elbow Extension Homemakers Club met Feb. 21 in the home of Ruth Morton at 2 p.m. Ten members answered roll call. A program on "The Economic Value of a Homemaker" was presented by Zula Rhodes. Members were asked to add up their worth for a year.

Elbow club members will be hostesses for the council meeting in March.

The next regular meeting will be held March 6 at 2 p.m. in the home of Mrs. Rhodes at which time a program on health will be presented.

Parliamentary procedure reviewed

The Center Point Extension Homemakers Club met Tuesday at the Kentwood Older Adult Center. Mrs. J.R. Petty, president, presided.

Roll call was answered by each of the nine members present answering the question, "Do I save money, nerves or both with my hobby?" The devotional was taken from II Corinthians 4:8-10. Prayer was voiced by Mrs. Mattie Wren.

Members were asked to bring cookies for the Big Spring State Hospital to the next meeting March 11.

Mrs. Vernon Kent, TEHA chairman, gave the program on the proper way to conduct a club meeting and a quiz on rules of parliamentary procedure.

Points that Mrs. Kent brought out were that parliamentary procedure gives more people the opportunity to express themselves, business is conducted in an orderly manner and group decisions can be made.

Unconfined Confinement

DEAR ABBY: I have never needed advice so badly in my life, and you are the only one I can turn to. My married daughter is pregnant with her second child and is planning to have a natural childbirth this time. She and her husband have been going for "lessons." It sounds very far out to me, but if that's their choice, it's all right with me. But, Abby, she plans to have her 3-year-old son watch the delivery! Her husband will be present at the birth, and she also has invited her 19-year-old unmarried sister to witness the whole business. Lord, help me! I had all I could do to keep from getting hysterical when she told me this.

Abby, do you think a 3-year-old child can handle something like this? Even a 19-year-old unmarried girl might not be able to handle it. I get sick at the thought of it. We are conservative people, and I have raised my daughters to be modest, so this is a terrible shock to me. What do you think of this whole business?

APPALLED IN K.C.

DEAR APPALLED: There is no better way to learn about the miracle of life than to witness childbirth. I see nothing shocking or immodest about it. And a 3-year-old child should find it a fascinating and educational experience.

DEAR ABBY: Remember me? I'm Abe Puchkoff (age 83) from Brooklyn. Ever since my name appeared in your column last summer, I've had letters and phone calls from all over the country.

How's this for a story? When I was a 27-year-old bachelor, a pretty girl caught my eye. I called her for a date, but she played hard to get, so that ended that.

Well, last Saturday my phone rang, and this very same lady (only 36 years later) said, "Is this Abe Puchkoff?"

I said, "Yes, that's me."

When she told me who she was, I nearly fainted. Then she said, "I say your name in Dear Abby's column. I've been a widow for 20 years. How would you like to take me out to lunch?"

I very politely said, "It's not good for us to see each other so often." Then I added, "Besides, with God's help, my wife and I will celebrate our 50th this June."

ABE PUCHKOFF

DEAR ABE: Thanks for another day-brightener. And mazeltov!

DEAR ABBY: I have always felt that standing ovations should be reserved for exceptional performances. However, audiences in less sophisticated cities seldom see great performances, so they reward every play, concert and performance with a standing ovation.

I don't really feel like standing and joining the others in shouts of "bravo" following a merely good performance. I think a performance should be truly outstanding to rate a standing ovation.

My problem, Dear Abby, is that I always feel like a killjoy just sitting there instead of going along with the crowd. Is it OK to remain seated at such times?

SAN ANGELO, TEXAS

DEAR SAN: I can offer no better advice than that which Polonius gave to Laertes in Shakespeare's "Hamlet": "This above all: To thine own self be true, and it must follow as the night the day, thou canst not be false to any man."

Boston gets lease on life

By The Associated Press

Lawrence Boston is lucky and he knows it. He's been given a second chance, and he's vowed to make the most of it.

Boston, a 6-foot-8 forward from Maryland, was cut by Washington prior to last season. But with Mitch Kupchak unable to contribute because of injury, Boston was summoned by the Bullets for a 10-day emergency trial.

"We liked him when we had him before," said Washington Coach Dick Motta, "but there was just no room for him then. He can help us if he gives us five or six minutes a half."

Boston did just that on Sunday. He scored 14 points and grabbed 12 rebounds in 18 solid minutes, helping the Bullets to a 118-104 victory over the Indiana Pacers.

In other National Basketball Association games Sunday, the Milwaukee Bucks beat the San Diego Clippers 101-98, and the Portland Trail Blazers edged the Chicago Bulls 110-107, the Seattle SuperSonics defeated the Utah Jazz 103-91, the Phoenix Suns topped the Los Angeles Lakers 123-115, the Kansas City Kings trimmed the Houston Rockets 94-91, the Philadelphia 76ers clobbered the Golden State Warriors 144-99, the Boston Celtics nipped the Detroit Pistons 118-105, the Atlanta Hawks beat the Denver Nuggets 100-93, the Cleveland Cavaliers defeated the San Antonio Spurs 123-119 and the New Jersey Nets downed the New York Knicks 113-96.

The win was the fifth in the last six games for the Bullets, who are making a late drive toward their 12th consecutive playoff berth.

Bucks 101, Clippers 98
Milwaukee posted its fifth victory in a row and 11th in 13 games since obtaining center Bob Lanier, rallying in the fourth quarter to overtake San Diego. Reserve Junior Bridgman led the Bucks with 25 points and put Milwaukee ahead to stay 97-96 with a three-point play with 2:27 to play. Bridgman made 11 of 17 shots in his 32 minutes.

Blazers 110, Bulls 107
Portland moved one game ahead of San Diego in the race for the final playoff berth in the Western Conference on rookie Calvin Natt's three-point play with five seconds remaining.

Chicago guard Rickey Sobers had tied the game at 107-107 with a jumper from the top of the key with 28 seconds left. But Natt drove from the free throw line, scored, was fouled by Bulls center Artis Gilmore and made a free throw for the final margin. Natt led all scorers with 31 points.

Sonics 103, Jazz 91
Seattle moved back into first place in the Pacific Division, one-half game ahead of Los Angeles, by beating Utah behind Gus Williams' 28 points. The Sonics led 58-45 at the half and by as many as 23 points in the third quarter.

Suns 123, Lakers 115
Phoenix led by as many as 21 points in the final period in beating Los Angeles behind 25 points by Paul Westphal.

The Suns effectively used three centers, Alvan Adams, Rich Kelley and Jeff Cook, to neutralize Kareem Abdul-Jabbar of the Lakers.

Kings 94, Rockets 91
Scott Wedman and Otis Birdsong each scored 24 points to lead Kansas City to victory despite 29 points and 14 rebounds by Houston's Moses Malone.

76ers 144, Warriors 99
Julius Erving scored 39 points as the 76ers breezed to their fifth straight victory.

Erving, who did not play the fourth quarter, shot 14-for-11 from the field and 11-for-11 from the foul line.

Celtics 118, Pistons 115
Larry Bird led Boston with 41 points, but the Celtics needed baskets by Dave Cowens and M.L. Carr in the final 14 seconds to deal Detroit its 16th loss in 17 games. Bird had 14 points in the fourth quarter.

Hoosiers go from flat to flat out

By The Associated Press

For two months, Mike Woodson was flat on his back and the Indiana basketball team was just plain flat. When Woodson got up, so did the Hoosiers.

"I'm not sure there's another guy alive that could have come back like Woodson did this season," said Indiana Coach Bobby Knight after watching his revitalized senior lead the hot Hoosiers to the Big Ten title Sunday.

Knight's shooting star accounted for 21 points, four assists and three blocked shots to lead the 13th-ranked Hoosiers to a 76-73 victory over Ohio State.

"We've had a lot of rocky roads to travel," said Knight, in an obvious reference to the loss of Woodson and Randy Wittman for nearly the entire season.

Woodson's loss, of course, hurt most of all. The No. 2 all-time scorer at Indiana was lost for eight weeks, missing 12 of the Hoosiers' 27 games this year, because of back surgery. He had averaged 20 points a game before surgery and has averaged 20.5 in the six games since he's been back.

"Mike and Butch (Carter, the other Indiana senior) are two of the finest young men I've ever been around," said Knight. "This Big Ten championship belongs to Woodson and Carter."

The league title was the first for the Hoosiers since their NCAA championship season in 1976 and sent them into this year's playoffs as one of 48 teams in the enlarged field.

Toledo was another team to nail down an automatic NCAA berth Sunday with an 85-70 victory over Bowling Green in the finals of the Mid-American Conference playoffs. Jim Swaney scored 31 points to lead the Toledo triumph.

The Ivy League title is still up in the air after Princeton and Penn finished in a tie Saturday. The Tigers and Quakers will play off for the championship Tuesday night.

The remainder of the league championships were all decided over the weekend.

Duke's revitalized Blue Devils won the Atlantic Coast Conference title by upsetting seventh-ranked Maryland 73-72 Saturday night on Mike Gminski's tip-in basket at the end. It was Duke's third straight victory over a Top 20 team in the ACC playoffs.

Georgetown, the country's No. 20 team, whipped third-ranked Syracuse 87-81 for the Big East Conference championship as Eric Floyd scored 21 points, including two technical foul shots with 1:52 remaining.

Fifth-ranked Louisiana State edged No. 2 Kentucky 80-78 in the Southeastern Conference playoffs as DeWayne Scates scored 26 points. The victory sent LSU into the NCAA playoffs with a school-record 24 victories.

Fourth-ranked Louisville won the Metro Conference playoffs with an 81-72 triumph over Florida State behind Darrell Griffith's 30 points.

"Last Sunday (when Louisville beat Florida State) I thought Louisville was a great team," said Florida State Coach Joe Williams. "Today, I thought they were even better."

Kansas State won the Big Eight playoffs by beating Kansas 79-58 behind Jari Wills' 24 points and 22 from league Player of the Year Rolando Blackman. Dave Britton scored 23 points and put on a dazzling display of dribbling and passing to lead Texas A&M over Arkansas 52-50 in the Southwest Conference finals.

"We lost some games last year because I didn't play well, but I kept my confidence," said Britton. "They called me a hot dog — but they're eating their words now."

Hawks 'Badgered' from tourney

By NATHAN POSS

Sports Editor

The Amarillo College Badgers exploded in the latter stages of the first half and the early stages of the second half to rally past the Howard College Hawks by a score of 83-73 and advance into the qualifying round of the Region V Tournament.

The contest was played Sunday night in Midland College's Chaparral Center.

Amarillo will now face Hill County at 7:00 p.m. tonight in Chaparral Center, which is hosting the Region V affair. In tonight's second contest, Cisco meets Frank Phillips.

Cisco is coached by former Big Spring High School basketball and baseball mentor Tommy Collins.

The Howard College team had jumped out to an early lead behind the shooting of freshman Jeff Faubion, who connected on six consecutive outside bombs to put the Hawks on top.

With the aid of Mike Wallace and Kenneth Jones, the Hawks had increased their advantage to 40-30 with just over a minute to play in the half, but Amarillo scored six unanswered points in the final minute to narrow the margin to four at 40-36 and enter the halftime with some much needed momentum.

The game slowed down in the opening minutes of the second half, with Howard holding a 42-38 lead with 18:03 remaining when Amarillo's 6'10", 260-pound mammoth Vic Mitchell drew his third personal.

Amarillo Coach Jim Calvin left Mitchell in, and his strategy paid off, for the time being. Mitchell quickly scored on two quick tip-ins, then David Bradley and Kevin Parker added six more points to give the Badgers a 48-42 lead.

But with 15:07 left and the Amarillo team holding a 50-44 advantage, Mitchell drew his fourth personal. Mitchell was then replaced in the lineup, but the Badger team rose to the occasion, thanks basically to a fine passing game and the short jumpers from 6'8" Bradley.

The Hawks, behind the shooting of scoring ace Mike Wallace, stayed close, narrowing the margin to within five points on many occasions. But Bradley continued to keep the Badgers ahead, as his 19 second-half points came at the most opportune of times.

Howard narrowed the margin to 73-69 with two minutes left on a Wallace field goal, but Amarillo's Tom Perry canned two free throws to give the Badgers a six point lead.

Rocky Rawls and Wallace scored again in the next minute to cut the AC lead to 75-71 with just under one minute left in the contest, and the Hawks were definitely within striking distance.

But within a span of 20 seconds, the Hawks were dead for good. Bradley canned a 15-foot jumper to give the Badgers a six-point lead, and Mitchell followed with a decisive slam dunk less than 20 seconds later to ice the contest.

From a statistical standpoint, Amarillo controlled the game more than the score would indicate. The Badgers shot 59 per cent from the field, compared to Howard's 48 per cent. Amarillo also had the rebounding advantage, taking 33 caroms to 20 for Howard College.

Nevertheless, the Hawks stayed in the game entering the final minute. Much of this was due to Wallace, who ended an excellent sophomore season by collecting 26 points and 16 rebounds.

Faubion, who scored all of his points in the first half, was the only other Hawk in double figures, with 12 points.

Amarillo, meanwhile, had four players in double figures, led by Bradley's 25 points. Mitchell chipped in with 20 and Parker 19, while David Seamon added 11.

Howard College Coach Harold Wilder felt that the play of the Amarillo team in the second half was the difference in the contest, and the fact that the Badgers were ahead when Mitchell drew his fourth personal foul.

"They (Amarillo) came out and played harder in the second half. They cut off Faubion's shot, and that hurt," said Wilder.

The Howard College coach also felt that the fact that Amarillo had regained the lead when Mitchell drew his fourth personal made a difference in the game, too, stating: "By then they were ahead. If they would have had to come back without him (Mitchell), it might have been different."

The Hawks thus finished their season with a record of 19-13. Amarillo goes into tonight's game with a mark of 22-10.

HOWARD COLLEGE (73) — Akins 40.8; Faubion 6.0; Rawls 4.0; Jones 3.3; Wallace 11.4; Green 7.0; Word 3.6. TOTALS 33/73. AMARILLO (83) — Mitchell 20.0; Summers 10.2; Bradley 11.3; Perry 2.4; Seamon 7.1; Parker 8.3. TOTALS 34/83. Halftime Score: Howard 40, Amarillo 36.

Vets miss Billy

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — For the casual observer, there is a yawning void in the lockerroom of the new-look New York Yankees — the electric current, the excitement, the expectancy generated by maverick Billy Martin long gone.

For a trio of the Yankees' greatest heroes — Mickey Mantle, Whitey Ford and Yogi Berra, all Hall of Famers — it is "The Three Musketeers" without D'Artagnan.

"Billy spent the holidays with me," said Mantle, the best friend of the fiery deposed manager. "We played golf and fished but didn't do much hunting. I can't walk with this bad knee any more. Billy was fine for a while, as long as he could get it all out of his mind. But I'd see him go into lapses. He would be sullen and moody."

"You could see he was hurting inside. This is the place he wanted to be. This is the only place he ever wanted to be."

Mantle and Ford come out of hibernation every spring to help in Yankees' spring training, joining Yogi, a regular coach, who with Martin formed the off-disciplined, fun-loving Rover Boys of the Yankees' great championship teams of the 1950s.

"I'm glad Billy is staying in baseball," Mantle said, referring to Martin's recent employment as manager of Charles Finley's Oakland A's. "It will keep him from brooding too much. Besides, he's a helluva manager."

Mantle said Billy had confided with him on the circumstances that surrounded his setto with a marshmallow salesman last October which cost him the Yankee job.

Heiden streak ends

HEERENVEEN, Netherlands (AP) — Eric Heiden, the congenial wonderboy of skating, came to the Netherlands last week to defend his world crown with the expectations of the skating world resting heavily on his shoulders.

Everyone thought the 21-year-old American would scoop up every gold medal here, as the world champion of the last three years had done in grabbing all five gold medals at the Winter Olympics last month.

Heiden won just one event, the opening 500 meters, in which he was first convincingly in 39.82 seconds. But he performed sluggishly over the next three races to wind up runnerup to Dutchman Hilbert van der Duim.

His fall from the top Sunday showed he was human and, in characteristic fashion, he was gracious in defeat.

Concealing his disappointment, Heiden talked instead of his plans for a holiday and his future outside speed skating.

"Emotionally, I wasn't ready for this," Heiden said. "The biggest problem this weekend was it was hard for me to get mentally prepared and motivated. After having to do it five times in Lake Placid, it just didn't really feel like a world championships to me."

Heiden's views were echoed by Kees Verkerk, the Dutch former world champion who is now Swedish national coach, who said that Heiden could be world champion again if he so desired.

Rodriguez starts today

The Big Spring Steer Baseball Team will start Tommy Rodriguez on the mound in the season's opening game today.

The Steers travel to Lubbock to meet Monterey in the 4 p.m. contest. The season opener had been scheduled against Andrews on Saturday, but cold weather put that one in mothballs until April 3.

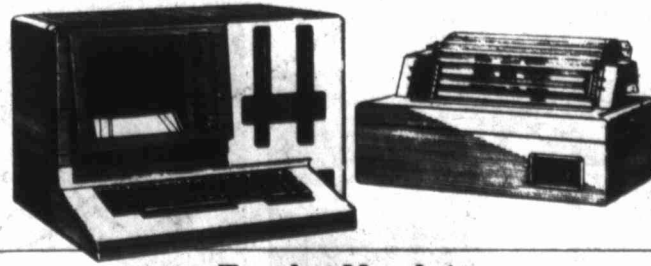

The first home game is slated for 4 p.m. Tuesday, with the Steers going up against Lubbock Monterey. Moe Rubio will hurl for the locals.

Your Daily HOROSCOPE

from the CARROLL RIGTER INSTITUTE

FORECAST FOR TUESDAY, MARCH 4, 1980

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Think more in terms of long-time arrangements that you would like to have with your good friends and relations and less about temporary matters and you'll have a day when some very worthwhile results follow. Think also about your own plans that require time to mature.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Talk over with regular associates how best to improve mutual affairs. Be tactful in case of disagreements and they are straightened out. TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Don't be hasty in a new venture you are contemplating and improve long-time jobs. Consider a change in procedure with a bigwig. GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Plan some recreational activity with good friends that will be enjoyed by all. Avoid taking any risks where money is concerned.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Ideal day to improve the appearance and comfort of your home. Avoid one who has a chip-on-the-shoulder attitude.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Get busy at communications which are important to your well-being. Ideal day to study contracts, statements and other important documents.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Study all monetary matters with others and know how best to improve them, gain more benefits. Don't overwork physically or mentally.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Know what your personal wishes really are, then go after them in a positive way. Do something thoughtful for pals and gain their goodwill.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Talking over matters with one you admire can bring fine results. You are able to solve a problem that has bothered you for a long time.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) You have some personal wishes that are important to you, so go after them in a positive way. A good time to see friends.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Talk over an important plan with a bigwig and come to right conclusions, get fine support. Avoid a co-worker who wastes your time.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Make arrangements now for a mutual trip with another that is important. Make new friends who can give you added knowledge.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Use your intuitive faculties more and gain your aims more easily at this time. Be more willing to please a loved one.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will know how to gain important objectives and then will put plans to work intelligently and precisely. A gradual climb to fame and fortune here, so give a good educational background for best results. Teach to be more of a peacemaker also. A real thinker in this chart and one with a forceful personality.

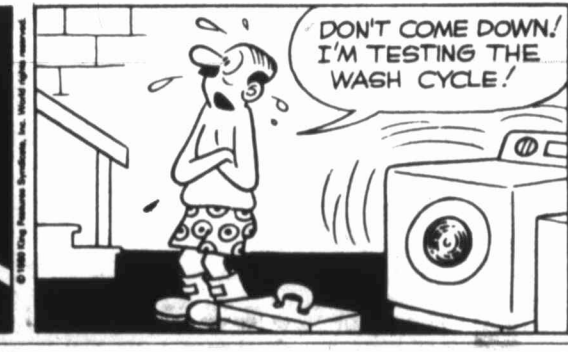

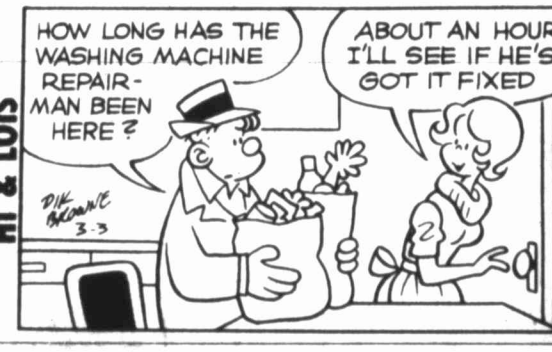

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!
