La. abortion law might test Roe vs. Wade

■ Case joins several others on way to Supreme Court.

By Tamar Lewin
N.Y. Times News Service

The new Louisiana abortion law, the most restrictive in the country, Wednesday joined several others on their way to the Supreme Court. Any one of them could be a direct test of Roe v. Wade, the high court's 1973 ruling establishing the right to abortion, legal experts said.

A much less restrictive law in Pennsylvania is more likely to be the first one appealed to the court, if only because it is further along in the federal appeals process.

But Louisiana's law and two others, because they outlaw most abortions, would provide the court with a clear opportunity to reverse the basic thrust of Roe v. Wade, experts said.

In Baton Rouge, backers of the abortion measure said they hoped theirs would be the law that would

East Texas clinics expect activity

AUSTIN (NYT) — If Louisiana's tough new law banning most abortions withstands the test in court, Shreveport clinic administrator Robin Rothrock knows what she probably will do — head west to Texas.

"We would take a look at moving 20 miles west into Texas," said Rothrock, administrator of the Hope Medical Group, one of two abortion clinics in northern Louisiana.

Two abortion clinics have facilities in East Texas, one in Tyler and the other in Beaumont. But some foresee a potentially bustling border abortion business emerging in East Texas as a spinoff of the Louisiana law.

"Obviously they're going to have to go outside the state," said Phyllis Dunham, director of the Texas Abortion Rights Action League. "It does set up that patchwork that we talked about" of adjacent states having dramatically different abortion laws.

Illegal drug sales tab: $40 billion

■ Government puts price tag on street sales; critics question reliability of figures.

N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — Americans spent at least $40 billion on illegal drugs last year, according to the government's first attempt in a decade to put a price on street sales.

"It's a hell of a lot of money being spent on drugs," Bob Martinez, director of the Office of National Drug Control Policy, said Wednesday.

Cocaine accounted for $17.5 billion in retail sales last year, heroin $12.3 billion, marijuana $8.8 billion and other drugs $1.8 billion, according to a report compiled by a private research organization from government data.

While cocaine production increased 5 percent from 1988 to 1990, better enforcement caused a 22 percent decline in the amount available for purchase in the United States, the report said.

Specific estimates, calculated over a three-year period since 1988, show a decline in total drug value from $51.6 billion in 1988 to $40.4 billion in 1990.

By comparison, the Pharmaceutical Manufacturers Association says Americans spent $38.6 billion on prescription drugs in 1990.

City, park cruisers strike compromise

By Brian Pearson
Staff Writer

City officials and cruiser advocates Wednesday agreed to try to alleviate a Hogan Park traffic problem by building another entrance and providing more parking lot access.

A task force of councilmen, police and east Midland residents met in City Hall to discuss a compromise that would ensure public safety but not inhibit cruising.

The council voted last week to defer action on two ordinances that would have regulated a Sunday night tradition of cruising the roads in the south part of Hogan.

Private-plane crash kills Big Spring man

BIG SPRING (AP) — A Big Spring man was killed when his single-engine plane crashed near a highway intersection 13 miles south of Big Spring early Wednesday, Howard County sheriff and Department of Public Safety officials said.

Ralph Joseph Reinert, 43, was the only occupant of a 1983 Cessna 182 owned by Cosden Pipe Line Co., an affiliate of Fina Oil and Chemical Co. Reinert was a relief pilot for the company, said Cosden spokesman Jimmy Munn.

The crash, near the intersection of Highway 821 and Interstate 20, was reported about 8:31 a.m., officials said.

"We were monitoring his radio transmissions (before the accident), and there was nothing to let us know what was happening, nothing out of the ordinary," Munn said.

Bush expresses concern about Sununu controversy

Sununu

WASHINGTON (NYT) — President Bush said Wednesday that his chief of staff, John H. Sununu, had created "an appearance problem" by using government planes and cars and corporate jets for political and personal trips, but he defended his aide and said he was "doing a first-class job."

Specifically, the president expressed concern over a possible "appearance of impropriety" from Sununu's use of a chauffeur-driven government limousine last week for a 250-mile trip to New York for a stamp auction at which he spent about $5,000.

It was the second time Bush had publicly rebuked Sununu during a continuing controversy over his conduct. Six weeks ago, the president told the chief of staff that he must get an OK from an official junior to him — C. Boyden Gray, the White House counsel — before he could use government planes.

This time, although he argued that it had been "appropriate" for Sununu to take a limousine to New York for a stamp auction, the president added pointedly that, "It doesn't set a precedent, it doesn't say anyone that has access to a car can go any place anyone wants at any time."

And now, for some really bad rock 'n' roll — Elvis?

By Larry McShane
Associated Press writer

NEW YORK — Joey Bishop, country-western singer, is bad. John Travolta, pop crooner, is worse. And Joel Grey doing Cream's "White Room" ... well, life's not always a cabaret. But would you believe The Grateful Dead, Bob Dylan and Lou Reed all made worse albums?

That's what Jimmy Guterman and Owen O'Donnell say in their new book "The Worst Rock n' Roll Records of All Time."

While Grey (No. 36), Bishop (No. 33) and Travolta (No. 18) did make three of the worst 50 albums ever, they had plenty of company, the authors say. Dylan, the Dead, Reed, The Doors and Elvis Presley are all in the pair's 10 worst album list.

The King, in fact, tops the list with 1974's "Having Fun With Elvis on Stage," a 40-minute collection of his stage banter. "Elvis Presley made some truly horrible records that stand today as vivid arguments against barbiturates," write the authors.

DRUGS: U.S. puts a price tag on street sales

(From 1A)

"As encouraging as these signs are, more work needs to be done," Martinez said in a speech to a national conference on state and local drug policy where he unveiled the study.

But Rep. Charles Rangel, D-N.Y., chairman of the House Select Committee on Narcotics Abuse and Control, criticized the report as "insignificant and irrelevant."

Rangel questioned the reliability of the figures and said Martinez, the nation's drug policy director since March, should spend his time and efforts improving treatment and enforcement programs.

"I say people paid $100 billion for drugs. Actually, we are both wrong. The point I am trying to make is: what does it matter?" Rangel said. "It adds nothing to the policy discussions and debate over how we should slay the drug dragon."

Officials of the drug policy office said despite a possible wide margin of error, the figures are a reasonable measure.

Martinez said the report, produced for the Bush administration by Abt Associates, Inc. in Cambridge, Mass., offers "some sense of the scope and scale of the problem."

The numbers in the report were based on the volume of drug users in the nation's criminal justice system and government-sponsored surveys of drug use among high school and college students and U.S. households.

A consortium of government agencies involved in the drug fight produced estimates of the retail value of the U.S. drug market until 1980. That year, the estimate was $79 billion.

Such surveys have long been questioned by critics who suggest that respondents under-report their actual drug use and that other segments of the population, such as the homeless, are not counted.

The report estimates that:

- The overwhelming majority of drug sales, totaling $30.6 billion, are to people who have been arrested for or convicted of crimes.
- The retail value of illicit drugs consumed in 1990 by adult Americans who are not students, dropouts or prisoners was $3.6 billion, including $2.4 billion for marijuana and $1.2 billion for cocaine.

CARTEL: Colombian assembly bans extradition

for more than seven years, he surrendered with a promise that he would not be extradited to the United States.

The vote Wednesday by the country's elected Constituent Assembly apparently sealed his decision. The panel's new constitution, with a clause banning extraditions of traffickers and all other criminals, will become law July 5.

Extradition had been the most powerful weapon in the government's hand because death threats against judges have made it perilous to try the traffickers in Colombian courts.

While no major Colombian drug dealer has been successfully convicted and served prison time in Colombia, 46 traffickers have been extradited to the United States for trial since 1984.

Colombian officials said recent legal reforms would enable them to prosecute traffickers on their own. The government has created courts with secretly appointed judges to handle sensitive drug cases.

An "invisible judge" was to travel to the Envigado jail to speak to Escobar through an electronic voice distorter while sitting behind a one-way mirror.

At a news conference in Bogota on Wednesday night, President Cesar Gaviria insisted his government's leniency did not mean it had given up fighting the drug war.

"Our policy does not constitute nor will it constitute a negotiation (with drug traffickers)," he said. "No country has paid a price as high as Colombia in the battle against drug trafficking," he added.

Bob Martinez, director of the U.S. Office of National Drug Control Policy, said earlier Wednesday, "I would rather have extradition ... but what's important is an effective criminal justice system."

The Rev. Rafael Garcia, a Roman Catholic priest who negotiated Escobar's surrender, called it "a great step toward peace."

But officials in Medellin said they expected the city's cocaine trade to continue to flourish.

Escobar's punishment will be important in establishing the credibility of Gaviria's anti-drug plan, which offered leniency to Escobar and other top traffickers in exchange for their surrender.

Court officials consulted by The Associated Press said Escobar would probably serve no more than eight years in prison even if convicted of both drug trafficking and murder. Others said his sentence probably would be shorter.

CLINICS: Some foresee bustling border business

governor's veto Tuesday and enacted a law that would send doctors to jail for performing illegal abortions.

Considered the toughest abortion law in the United States, it outlaws abortions except in cases of rape and incest and when the woman's life is threatened.

Supporters of the law hope it will be the vehicle the U.S. Supreme Court uses to reverse its 1973 decision in Roe vs. Wade, which legalized abortion.

Although the law will not go into effect for at least 60 days, Louisiana abortion clinics were overwhelmed with calls Wednesday from women wanting to know whether and where they can obtain abortions.

"We've been getting calls all day. Women want to know if they can keep their appointments. 'Do I have to go to Dallas?' 'What's happening?' " said Dorothy Carnal, director of counseling at Hope Medical Group.

Said Kay Kelley, director of the Causeway Medical Suite in Metairie, La.: "We've been on the phone all morning with women who are concerned that their appointments may have been canceled."

The Hope clinic in Shreveport canceled five abortions Tuesday after the abortion law passed and before a judge made clear Wednesday that it will not be enforced immediately. Four of those women rescheduled their appointments for later in the week; the fifth went to a clinic in Dallas.

Before Rothrock opened the Shreveport clinic in 1980, many women had to drive to Dallas for abortions, she said. Women with money will still have the option of traveling out of state to obtain abortions, Rothrock said, but many of the women the clinic serves will not.

If the clinic were not on a bus route, she said, few of the low-income patients who come in would be able to reach it.

The director of Texas' largest anti-abortion organization said the number of many women expected to travel to Texas for abortions may be overestimated.

"Clearly, there will be some women who will come across the state line. I think it's overstated how many would be involved," said Bill Price, head of Texans United for Life. "If they have to plan a trip, that may give them time to reflect.

"I think most of them will obey the law."

The abortion clinic in Beaumont has always had a steady Louisiana clientele.

CONCERN: Sununu creates 'problem,' Bush says

out, said he was perturbed that his administration had been caught up in what one called "exactly the kind of chintzy-looking behavior the president wants to avoid."

But Republican officeholders and strategists said they saw no implied invitation to Sununu to resign in Bush's criticism, which was coupled with the comment that, "This beating that he's taken is unwarranted, in my view."

Officials said that the president, who is known for his fierce loyalty to his staff, was unlikely to force the former New Hampshire governor to step down unless there were further, much more damaging revelations.

"You'd think a guy with a genius IQ like Sununu could see he's hurting the president, but this guy sees things in a strange way," said a conservative Republican senator who is highly regarded at the White House. "As far as I can tell, he's staying, and everything continues to flow through him."

Charles Black, a leading Republican campaign consultant, argued that the Sununu controversy, which in the last couple of days has focused on his active solicitation of transportation on corporate jets, meant very little to the average voter.

"There's no damage out in the country," Black said, "but this is a constant distraction for the president, and that's bad. John and our people in the White House have to find some way to end it, and quickly."

Other key Republicans, who asked that they not be identified, used stronger language. Several described Sununu as a liability, not only because of his capacity for attracting criticism in the news media but also becuse of his supposedly heavy-handed treatment of members of Congress and lesser federal officials.

Yet none said they thought Bush shared that judgment; indeed, they expressed the view that Bush considered the former governor invaluable.

Marlin Fitzwater, the White House spokesman, said later that Sununu "realizes that this is a situation that's created an appearance that no one wants."

ROCK: Book lists all-time worst albums, singles

(From 1A)

The all-time worst singles? Chuck Berry grabs the top spot with "My Ding-a-Ling," while Stevie Wonder ("Used to Be," a duet with Charlene), Don McLean ("American Pie") and Linda Ronstadt ("Back in the U.S.A.") are in the bottom 10 as well.

Guterman and O'Donnell adopt a scorched-earth policy; almost no artist of the past 30 years escapes unscathed. Their favorite targets are Billy Joel and Phil Collins, but dozens of other performers come under fire — like the Doors, whose frontman Jim Morrison is derided as "the most overrated performer in the history of rock and roll."

The Doors' "Alive, She Cried," released 12 years after Morrison's death, they said, is the eighth worst album of all time.

The criteria for making the list, as outlined by the authors, is simple: "We have two goals here: to be funny and to infuriate. ... We'll have no novelty records ... For our purposes, a miserable record by a great performer (say, Bob Dylan) is far more interesting than the latest garbage installment from a hack (say, Neil Diamond)."

Some misguided attempts at rock 'n' roll make it as well, like the No. 11 worst single: a remake of the Everly Brothers classic "All I Have to Do Is Dream," by (THE FOLLOWING TWO NAMES ARE CORRECT) Andy Gibb and Victoria Principal.

"All you hear in the vocals are one mediocre singer and his untalented girlfriend," say the authors, who characterize the pair as a "teenybopper idol" and a "nighttime-soap airhead."

But they don't limit themselves to easy targets. The Rolling Stones land a worst album — 1982's "Still Life," No. 25 — and a worst single, "Emotional Rescue" at No. 20. The much-ballyhooed Crosby, Stills, Nash & Young reunion, "American Dream," lands at No. 4 on the album chart.

Clapton is God? Clapton's "Wonderful Tonight" is schlock, landing at No. 31 on the singles chart.

The disco years of the 1970s were the duo's formative years, and they lump some of the decade's worst — Debbie Boone's "You Light Up My Life" and Bobby Vinton's "My Melody of Love" — on bad album No. 20, "'70s Hits — Greatest Recordings of the Decade."

CRUISERS: City to build another park entrance

agers and younger children have made socializing at the park a weekly ritual.

One ordinance, if approved, would have prohibited drivers from stopping to socialize or park on Hogan roadways. Another ordinance would have made turning left onto Wadley Avenue from the park illegal.

The ordinance, approved on first reading May 28, would have gone into effect last Sunday.

Instead, the cruiser task force said constructing an exit onto Lamesa Road and providing more access into two parking lots would relieve traffic congestion.

Assistant City Manager Susan Thorpe said project cost estimates will be worked up in the next week, with construction likely lasting less than a week.

"I don't think it's going to be too expensive," Ms. Thorpe said, adding that the task force will meet again next week to discuss details of the compromise.

A two-way road from the south park roads to Lamesa Road would provide more park access, she said. More entrances and exits into parking lots, meanwhile, would get vehicles off the road quicker, she said.

Police said traffic congestion caused by the cruisers has posed a safety hazard. The jams could hamper officer response in the event of an emergency, they said.

Fights, shootings and stabbings have occurred, as has illegal alcohol consumption, which is not allowed in Hogan without a city picnic permit, police said.

Lt. J. Urby, who attended Wednesday's meeting, said Midland police and the city are not trying to run cruisers out of the park.

He said police only want to maintain a lawful environment there, as they do when they patrol parking lots around the city where youths congregate on weekend nights.

"We work the parking lots much more than we work the park," Urby said. "We're not interested in running the kids out of the park."

He said police want quick access to inside the park in the event of an emergency.

"I have to look out for the interests of all the city," Urby said. "It might be your neighbor or my neighbor who needs help. I feel I need to provide them a service and get there as quickly as possible."

Task force member Jose Alfredo "Beau" Zertuche, a former City Council candidate, said the proposed ordinances would have been difficult to enforce.

"Kids will be kids," Zertuche said. "They're not going to keep from stopping."

He compared Hogan traffic on Sundays to vehicular congestion following Midland Angels baseball games and events at Chaparral Center at Midland College.

Elvia Hernandez, task force member and Midland Hispanic Chamber of Commerce president, said the compromise struck Wednesday should relieve the traffic problems at Hogan.

"It will help. It may not solve it. If it doesn't, we'll come back to the drawing board and start again," Ms. Hernandez said. "But I think it's great the way the community and the city are working together to solve the problems."

ABORTION: Louisiana law joins others on way to Supreme Court

eventually demolish Roe v. Wade.

"I am anxious that this case reach the U.S. Supreme Court as soon as possible," William V. Guste Jr., the Louisiana attorney general, who opposes abortion, said Wednesday. "We believe that this law will be found to be constitutional and Roe vs. Wade will be overturned."

The first step in the law's journey through the courts was taken Wednesday in New Orleans, where a federal judge agreed to hear a challenge to it next month. For now, abortion clinics may continue to operate in the state; Guste decided that the law could not take effect for at least two months.

The high court is free to decide to hear any, all or none of the state laws that are under challenge, legal experts said Wednesday.

"No one ever really knows which case the Supreme Court will choose to hear, but my best guess is that Pennsylvania will get there first," said Dawn Johnsen, legal director of the National Abortion Rights Action League.

"And after that, there's the Guam law, the Utah law, and now the Louisiana law, any one of which could be the vehicle for overturning Roe v. Wade. The more of these laws there are out there, the more likely one will get to the Supreme Court."

As a practical matter, it makes little difference which state law ultimately provides the vehicle for reconsidering Roe v. Wade, for if that decision is overturned outright, or modified significantly, the effect would not be to substitute a new federal law governing abortions. Rather, the decision would allow each state pass its own abortion law, with the high court decision for guidance.

With each new state law restricting abortion, the abortion-rights advocacy groups like the American Civil Liberties Union and Planned Parenthood face a nettlesome dilemma:

On the one hand, they feel compelled to challenge every restriction on abortion, knowing that if they do not fight the laws, many states could move to close off women's access to abortion.

On the other hand, they are aware that any court challenge they file could hasten the day when the Supreme Court reverses Roe v. Wade, and universal access to abortion is severely limited.

Both sides in the abortion debate agree that with the newer members of the court, there is very likely a majority that favors allowing states to impose broader restrictions on abortion and that the court will accept a case on which to rule.

A proliferation of such laws not only makes it clear that the question can not be avoided forever but also gives the court a variety of different approaches to choose from.

The Pennsylvania law, which requires spousal notification, a 24-hour waiting period, and counseling about fetal development, was passed in 1989, found unconstitutional by a federal district court last year and argued before a federal appeals court in February, the final step before an appeal to the Supreme Court.

If the circuit court issues its decision this summer, as expected, and if the high court agrees to hear it, the Pennsylvania case could be argued before the Supreme Court in its next session, beginning in October.

But constitutional law experts say it is always difficult to predict which cases the high court will agree to hear, or how quickly any court will issue a decision.

Because the Pennsylvania case is about procedural obstacles to abortion and not a flat ban on most abortions, the Supreme Court could choose to hear the case but decide it narrowly. Thus it could sidestep the basic questions of whether, as abortion-rights groups would have it, abortion is a fundamental constitutional right, or whether, as anti-abortion groups put it, states have a compelling interest in the life of an unborn child.

"Pennsylvania doesn't necessarily present a direct challenge to Roe v. Wade," said Burke Balch, state legislative director of the National Right to Life Committee. "Realistically, the court seems to want to hold off on ruling on an issue related to Roe unless it has to, and only issue very narrow rulings. And while we'd like to see them address the basic question, in Pennsylvania, all they will have before them is spousal notification and informed consent."

The Guam law, which allows abortions only where pregnancy poses a grave risk to a women's health, or endangers her life, is the next likely candidate, The challenge to that law, which was also found unconstitutional by a federal district court, remains to be argued, to a federal appeals court.

Even there, there is an extremely remote chance that the court could avoid a flat-out reconsideration of Roe v. Wade.

Senate approves transportation bill

The Nation

For the first time, states could choose the projects they think are most needed within their borders rather than follow a federal model.

WASHINGTON (NYT) — The Senate on Wednesday night overwhelmingly approved the first major overhaul of the federal transportation system in 35 years, a comprehensive package that puts new emphasis on mass transit and repairing the nation's deteriorating roads and bridges.

And what its backers say is the most significant provision of the bill, states would gain freedom in how they spend federal transportation money.

For the first time, they could choose the projects they think are most needed within their borders rather than follow a federal model.

The bill, approved 91-7, would channel $123 billion in the next five years to construction and repair projects that would affect nearly every American: from rural roads to interstate highways to bridges to subway lines to trolleys.

Rather than continue with the assortment of road-building programs that were created when the federal highway network was greatly expanded in 1956, the bill would pump transportation money into repairing existing roads and developing mass transit projects.

"We have poured enough concrete," Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y., the bill's chief sponsor, told his colleagues. "The time has come to get more transportation out of the roads we have already built."

The largest share of the money, $92 billion, would be for surface transportation, including about $37 billion that states could use as they pleased, even if it meant spending more, say, on commuter railroads than highways. An additional $21 billion would be spent directly on mass transit, with another $13 billion for bridge improvements.

About $14 billion of the money allotted for surface transportation would designated for maintaining interstate highways.

A transportation proposal by the Bush administration would devote far more, $44 billion, to expand and maintain interstates and other roads; it would designate roughly half as much money for mass transit as the Moynihan one.

But in a sign of accommodation from the administration, Samuel K. Skinner, the secretary of transportation, said tonight that the Senate measure was "a step forward toward meeting America's transportation infrastructure needs."

The secretary said he was "particularly pleased" by the Senate's approval of an amendment to designate a 185,000-mile "national highway system" of important interstates and routes feeding into them that would be designated for an estimated $22 billion in direct federal aid over the next five years.

The administration proposal had called for such a system, which was not part of the the original Moynihan proposal.

Although Skinner did not mention the possibility of a veto by President Bush, the secretary said he was disappointed that the bill would reduce the financing required from state and local governments for their own transportation projects.

"We hope that as the House begins action on this legislation a more appropriate balance can be struck between federal and state/local investment," Skinner said.

Speaker Thomas S. Foley of Washington, who has repeatedly declared that rebuilding the nation's crumbling infrastructure should be a priority for Democrats, said he expected the House to take up a version of the transportation bill well before the current authorization for transportation programs expires Sept. 30, the end of the fiscal year.

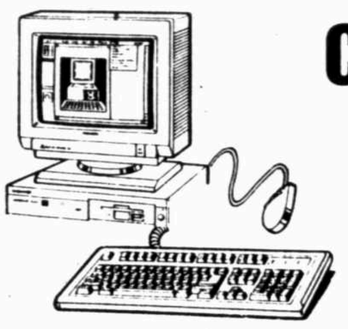

The House version would be closer to the Senate's approach to transportation policy than that favored by the White House. And Foley has advocated spending far more than the Senate version, even if the additional money had to come from an increase in the Federal gasoline tax.

"I think our bill will go beyond the bill passed in the Senate and will have to be reconciled in conference," Foley said Wednesday.

After the vote Wednesday night, Moynihan said, "If the House adds more money, it's fine as long as they retain the basic principles of the bill."

Two senators, Dennis DeConcini, D-Ariz., and David Pryor, D-Ark., did not vote.

Yeltsin wants closer U.S.-Russian ties

WASHINGTON (AP) — Boris N. Yeltsin, welcomed like a visiting head of state, lobbied Congress on Wednesday for closer ties between the United States and Russia, promising to slash his republic's contribution to the Soviet military.

"Your visit here is historic," House Speaker Thomas S. Foley, D-Wash., told Yeltsin, the newly elected president of the Russian republic. "I hope this symbolizes our countries will stand much more together in the future than apart."

Yeltsin, who arrived Tuesday on an unofficial four-day visit to the United States, held private meetings with senators and House members Wednesday. Seventy-two senators — nearly three-fourths of the chamber — turned out for one session.

House and Senate leaders held a luncheon for Yeltsin, a populist who has been pressing President Mikhail S. Gorbachev to accelerate economic and democratic reforms in the Soviet Union. Seated next to Yeltsin at the luncheon was Robert Strauss, the Democratic power broker President Bush has tapped to be the next U.S. ambassador to Moscow.

'The people of Russia are ready for democracy, ready for reform.'

— Russian President Boris Yeltsin

"The people of Russia are ready for democracy, ready for reform," said Yeltsin, speaking through an interpreter.

The tall, white-haired politician last week was elected president of the republic. With 150 million people, Russia is the most populous of the 15 Soviet republics.

At the Lincoln Memorial, the one sightseeing stop on the Russian leader's Washington schedule, Yeltsin was mobbed by hundreds of tourists surprised to learn he was coming.

He shook hands, picked up and kissed 3-year-old Ali Nepple of Herndon, Va., and gave just about every possible version of a high sign, from thumbs up to victory to hands clenched above his head.

Yeltsin on his visit has alternately praised and scolded Gorbachev, with whom he is now cooperating on a new constitution that would transfer power from the central government to the constituent republics of the Soviet Union. One lawmaker said that in their meeting, the visiting Russian leader "was very positive" about his relationship with the Soviet president. "I got the feeling they were two people working together," said Sen. Bill Bradley, D-N.J.

Vice President Dan Quayle, in presenting Yeltsin an award from the bipartisan Center for Democracy, said Wednesday night the United States does not want to choose between the central government of President Gorbachev and the separate republic governments like Yeltsin's.

"We will support reform wherever it occurs," Quayle told Yeltsin in applauding the Russian president's cooperation with the Soviet leader.

Yeltsin responded that "as long as Gorbachev is for reform, as long as Gorbachev is for democracy, as long as Gorbachev is for independence of the republics and the development of the entire country, Yeltsin will be with Gorbachev."

House votes to stop Jordan's military aid

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House voted Wednesday to cut off military aid to Jordan as a reprisal for its support of Iraqi President Saddam Hussein during the Persian Gulf War.

Lawmakers softened the blow by giving President Bush the authority to waive the cutoff of military aid, expected to total $27 million in the fiscal year that begins Oct. 1, if certain conditions are met.

"King Hussein showed unequivocal support for Saddam Hussein" during the gulf conflict, said Rep. Dan Burton, R-Ind., who pressed for the cutoff. "The United States of America shouldn't in any way support that country."

The aid cutoff was approved 410-4 after the House voted to let the president keep aid flowing to Jordan if he deems it to be in the national interest, and if he certifies that Jordan has committed to bilateral negotiations with Israel, recognized Israel's right to exist and stopped aiding Iraq.

The vote came as the House pushed toward completion of a $25.3 billion measure authorizing foreign aid for the next two fiscal years. It included economic, development and military assistance for U.S. allies around the globe, as well as the prospect of $15 million in first-time direct aid to Soviet republics.

The House also used the measure to register its wariness of offering direct aid to the Soviet Union.

On a vote of 374-41, lawmakers moved to ban aid to Moscow unless conditions are met on human rights, self-determination for the Baltic republics, and scaled-back military spending and military aid to Soviet allies.

In debating the Jordan issue, Rep. Lee Hamilton, chairman of the Foreign Affairs Middle East subcommittee, argued that King Hussein was being helpful in the peace process and should be rewarded.

The problem with an aid cutoff, Hamilton said, is "it looks to the past instead of to the future. . . . Jordan is now coming our way. . . . We ought to encourage Jordan in those directions."

Conditions would only make Bush's job in reviving the peace process more difficult, he said. The administration was staunchly opposed to the conditions.

But another supporter of the cutoff, Rep. Harold Volkmer, D-Mo., said "Providing Jordan with any support is like offering Saddam Hussein money to rebuild his Republican Guard."

"It is a smack in the face of those who put their lives on the line to free Kuwait and a smack in the face of the American people who watched the Jordanians' obvious support for our enemy," Volkmer said.

Black mayor to govern largely white Denver

DENVER (NYT) — These days, political campaigns are mostly waged in television advertisements. So when Wellington Webb ran out of money in his race for mayor, he turned to a rather quaint strategy.

Webb

He walked to the neighborhoods and talked to voters in person.

In a remarkable surge, Webb erased a 28-point deficit in opinion polls to win election Tuesday as the city's first black mayor. He hailed the victory as a sign that handshakes count for more than "sound bites."

"This was a victory of shoe leather over airwaves," Webb, the Denver auditor, told jubilant supporters, after defeating Norm Early, the county prosecutor, who is also black. Webb won by 57 percent to 43 percent, with nearly 116,000 votes cast.

The new mayor, a Democrat, will take office July 1 at a time when big projects are reshaping Denver's image. Last week, major league baseball officials chose Denver as a site for an expansion team.

A new airport, one of the world's biggest, is being built on land annexed by the city, and United Airlines is considering establishing a vast maintenance center here that could ultimately attract 30,000 jobs to the region.

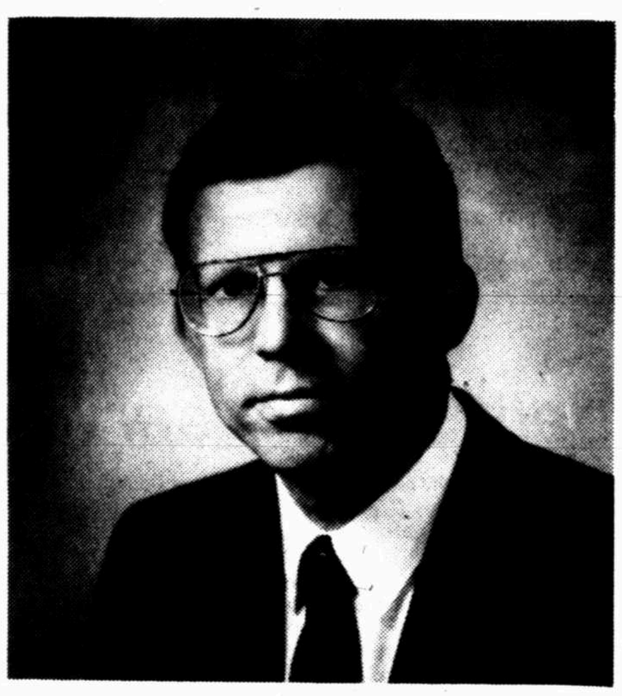

"There will be plenty to keep us busy," Webb, wearing his trademark running shoes and a tie etched with baseballs, said in an interview this morning at his home, a modest, old red brick bungalow.

The campaign was perhaps the first in any big city where whites are a clear majority in which the two leading candidates for mayor were black. In the primary election, Don Bain, a white lawyer, finished third.

Blacks in Denver account for about 12 percent of the population of 467,000 people. Races was virtually never mentioned in the campaign. Webb will replace Federico Pena, who was elected as the city's first Hispanic mayor in 1983. Hispanic people account for about one-fourth of the city's population.

Cleanliness next to mayor's heart

Residents, commuters and visitors moan about filth in New York City. True, the streets don't sparkle; they never did. But there's a lot less mess now than 10 years ago. Alas, there will be more again when the sanitation budget is cut. Instead of cursing the inevitable, everyone can help.

Cleanliness is an important part of what makes a place livable, but cleaning a big city is mammoth work. There are nearly 12,000 workers on New York City's sanitation payroll; the cleanup cost this fiscal year will be roughly $620 million. Mayor David Dinkins' new 1992 budget would slash the payroll by 2,000 and the cost by $100 million; he also says he wants union concessions to streamline the sanitation workers' wasteful and outmoded work rules.

While sanitation is clearly a city responsibility, it is timely to note that homeowners, apartment buildings, stores and businesses are required by law to clean their own sidewalks and 18 inches into the street. Violators face a $50 fine. Another law bans littering, with a $100 fine if you're caught in the act.

The clean-sidewalks law dates from 1955; the 18-inch law was added in 1979, following the city's last budget crisis. The Sanitation Department's monthly "scorecard" of street cleanliness indicated tremendous gains from 1979 through the mid-1980s. Conditions then stabilized, and have now started to deteriorate. The department estimates a further dropoff of 10 percent in certain areas if the mayor's cuts stand.

The sanitation cutback is no more welcome than cutbacks for schools, libraries and health care. But sanitation is one service that all New Yorkers — and commuters and visitors — can do something about. It is not too much to ask that everyone help keep the city clean. Besides, in New York City it's the law.

Capitol police need a wake-up call

WASHINGTON — The police who guard the U.S. Capitol let a man carry a loaded .357 Magnum through a security checkpoint unnoticed last month. The man was arrested later in the day when someone saw the gun. Oddly enough, the Capitol Police seem nonplussed.

Anderson

A Capitol Police spokesman told us that while the force is "very concerned about this incident" there's no way to stop these incidents from happening on occasion. He added that there would be no tightening of security at the Capitol as a result.

We found that odd, considering how the police reacted two years ago when we tested their security and found it wanting. We carried a plastic handgun into the Capitol, also unnoticed, and gave it to a senator. We wanted to illustrate a security problem that the police defensively claimed did not exist. They responded by searching journalists more thoroughly for a time. There was even a note posted at some of the guard desks to watch for Jack Anderson and his associates.

What we did was harmless. We wanted to prove that a plastic handgun could be slipped into a government building without detection, and we were right. The police, courteously, did not attempt to throw us in jail, so it is with some hesitation that we rattle their chain again, but here goes.

What Mark Alan Weissberger, 43, allegedly did last month was not harmless. The .357 Magnum with a four-inch steel barrel was simply wrapped in a towel and stuffed in a briefcase, according to police accounts. Our sources say that a Capitol Police officer missed the gun as it slid through the X-ray machine. Weissberger allegedly headed for a hearing of the Joint Economic Committee, which was chaired by a senator from his home state of Maryland, Democrat Paul Sarbanes. That was where a woman noticed the gun in the open briefcase.

Weissberger was charged with illegally carrying a gun on the Capitol grounds. His briefcase reportedly also carried letters to the White House urging the arrest of several politicians, and the letters were signed "World President." He apparently blamed Sarbanes and others for the loss of his federal job. Weissberger is now in jail while his attorney fights efforts to have him transferred to a federal facility for a mental evaluation.

After the incident, a Capitol Police spokesman told our Associate Jim Lynch, "We work as well as we can within the parameters that are set for us."

From where we sit, those parameters are pretty clear — the police agency gets $65 million a year from the taxpayers and in turn it protects our lawmakers. That isn't an easy job, but, given the fact that there are two cops for every member of Congress, it should not be impossible either.

The force is headed by one of its 25-year veterans, Frank Kerrigan, who has no illusions about who is in charge. The Capitol Police are run by a committee of politicians. It is the only police force in the country that is exempt from freedom-of-information laws. Records about crimes committed in and around the Capitol Building, from petty theft to drunken driving, are strictly confidential, and that's the way Congress likes it.

Congress has stymied Kerrigan's predecessors who tried to convert the force from security guards and tour guides to real cops.

Jack Anderson's and Dale Van Atta's column is distributed by United Feature Syndicate.

OTHER VIEWS

Expanded playoffs should be scuttled

For reasons that are, at best, obscure, a preponderance of superintendents of districts containing the state's largest schools voted recently to expand the Class 5A championship playoffs in all team sports.

Why on Earth would people entrusted with improving education in this state do something so foolish?

The proposal, approved by a vote of 142-60, would propel the three teams with the best records in each 5A district into the playoffs in football, baseball and girls' and boys' basketball, soccer and volleyball, beginning with the 1992-93 school year.

In trying to fix something that never was broken, the University Interscholastic League has been tampering with playoff formulas in some sports for a few years now. During the 1990 football season, 5A districts sent three teams to the playoffs, with two "state champions" — supposedly one for smaller schools and one for larger schools — ultimately being determined.

The foolishness of that alignment should have been evident to even the most obtuse observer last year when the "big school" championship team came from a smaller school than the "small school" champion.

But this state's educational leaders — a word we use with a great deal of hesitation — are held so firmly in the clutches of the coaching clique that apparently all the coaches have to do is whisper "jump," and their bosses comply without question.

The expanded playoffs are bad for a number of reasons. From a strictly athletic standpoint, flooding the brackets with teams of questionable ability — the presence in the playoffs of teams with losing records is inevitable — waters down the competition and cheapens a championship. But that's the least objectionable problem.

Of far more consequence is the potential for academic harm. Putting more teams into the playoffs in eight separate sports means that more students will miss more classroom and study time, further eroding this state's educational status, which is already shamefully tarnished.

Another problem deals with finances. Rare is the school administrator in this state who does not squeal regularly about lack of money, yet here they are proposing to transport hundreds of kids hundreds of miles just to make a bunch of coaches happy.

It's a terrible idea. Fortunately, it won't be implemented if the State Board of Education scuttles it, which we urge them to do at the earliest possible opportunity. It's past time for educators in this state to get their priorities in order.

Oh, Madonna, dance with care in Tanzania

My friend Walla Dubois, from Tanzania, came to see me. When I visited his country, Walla entertained me at a tribal music festival in his village, and I thought it only fair to reciprocate.

"Would you like to go to Disney World?"

Buchwald

"No," Walla replied, "I want to go to a rock concert and be with the real people of America."

I had no choice but to get tickets for a Madonna concert.

Walla was terribly excited. "Wait until my people back home hear that I went to see Madonna. Is she still going with Warren Beatty?"

We entered the stadium where thousands of fans were naked to the waist waving their shirts in the air.

Walla whispered to me, "Do you think they'd mind if I took pictures of them? My tribe will not believe it."

"I'm sure they won't," I told him. "Rock concert fans are always posing for tourists."

Walla snapped away as Madonna writhed all over the stage.

The fans had their arms stretched up in the air in some sort of Fascist salute. I said to Walla, "How does this compare to home?"

"We never get this primitive," he confided. "Our tribal dancing requires discipline and some sense of decorum. This is the first time I've seen so many savages in one place."

"They're not savages," I assured him. "They are just our children doing their own thing with our money."

"Madonna loves her body, doesn't she?" Walla remarked.

"If our kids couldn't yell and scream and wave their hands they would feel cheated, and they might go out and trash all of Queens. You must understand our customs, Walla. They may seem strange to you, but they have been part of our way of life for 20 years."

"I have just figured out the main difference between our music and yours."

"What is it?"

"Our performers play on drums and yours play on loudspeakers."

"That's true. But notice how sexual Madonna is when she is singing to the audience. It's almost as if she is making love to the entire world."

"In my country we're forbidden by the Supreme Tribal Council to do that. They no longer allow anyone to get too carried away by the passion of the moment. If Madonna comes to Tanzania she will have to put some clothes on, or they will run her out of the country."

"She couldn't. What makes her a great artist is that everyone is turned on by her costumes."

Walla said, "If she lived in our land, we'd find a good husband to beat her."

"We can't have any of that. Look at how many people she is making happy."

"What do these fans do when they are not at concerts screaming and dancing in the aisles?"

"They repair computers, perform heart surgery, fill prescriptions, fix cars and develop intercontinental ballistic missile systems. You wouldn't know it to look at them, but a lot of these folks are in charge of air traffic safety."

He said, "It figures."

Tests on 12th president's body serve history

WASHINGTON — The dust of America's 12th President has been disturbed in a Louisville, Ky., tomb. A coroner and a forensic anthropologist are seeking to still or confirm speculation that Zachary Taylor, not Lincoln, was the first President assassinated. Whatever is learned in this investigation will serve human happiness by underscoring the lovely contingency of history.

Will

If Taylor was deliberately poisoned, the foul deed most likely was done by Southerners angry about his opposition to expansion of slavery. If so, the plotters fell victim to the vagaries of things. They may have saved the Union by making more likely the failure of the South's eventual resort to arms.

Taylor's condition in his final days was consistent with arsenic poisoning. If that occurred, traces of arsenic will be detectable in bits of hair, fingernails, bones and other tissues.

What happened on Thursday, July 4, 1850? What usually happens on July 4th, only more so. There was much speechifying. The country did not yet have major league baseball or MTV to entertain it. Rhetoric was popular entertainment. And that day, in 1850, the president was on hand at a ceremony at the unfinished Washington Monument.

It was a typical high-summer day in 19th century Washington — sunny, hot, humid and dangerous. Humidity is natural to this river town, and was even worse then, before the draining of the marsh that lay, breeding mosquitoes, where the Tidal Basin and Jefferson Memorial now are.

The danger arose from the nature of mid-19th century urban life, the abundance of horses and animals in the midst of human population, the absence of sanitation measures and of scientific understanding that soon would produce public health advances concerning housing and food handling.

Orators did rattle on in those days, so Taylor broiled in the sun for several hours, refreshing himself with ice water, chilled buttermilk and cherries and perhaps other fruits and vegetables. Washingtonians had been told to avoid such things because the country was experiencing epidemics of Asiatic cholera.

That night Taylor was uncomfortable. The next day he worked a bit, but by Saturday his family was alarmed. An army surgeon diagnosed "cholera morbus," an elastic 19th century term denoting a variety of intestinal ailments. He died on July 9.

"Old Rough and Ready," as his troops affectionately called him, was the hero of the battle of Buena Vista in 1847. He was a Southerner who owned 140 slaves, but he was a strong-willed military nationalist who said he would personally take the field and hang secessionists.

Furthermore, he opposed the expansion of slavery. He said that if Congress passed the Wilmot Proviso, banning slavery in territories acquired from Mexico, he would sign it. Congress never passed it. If Taylor had lived, might it have?

When he died he was on the verge of sending to Congress a message demanding immediate admission of California and New Mexico as free states and settlement of a New Mexico-Texas border dispute in favor of the former.

Now, it is conceivable that had he lived, he might have cowed secessionists into permanent peaceableness. But it is much more likely he would have provoked secessionists, bringing on bloodshed.

Daniel Webster said at the time: "If General Taylor had lived, we should have had a civil war." We would have had it before another decade of growth of the North's strength through industrialism and immigration, and before the birth of a new political party that found a nation-saving leader in a former Illinois congressman who had opposed the war that had made Taylor a hero and hence president.

History is a rich weave of many threads. Many of them, if pulled out, could cause a radical unraveling, setting the past in motion as a foaming sea of exhilarating contingencies.

For more than a century we have been plied and belabored by various historicisms purporting to prove what happened had to happen, that history is a dry story of the ineluctable working of vast impersonal forces unfolding according to iron laws of social evolution. People, the historicists say, are mere corks bobbing on powerful currents. This demoralizing doctrine denies the possibility, ultimately, of meaningful self-government, for individuals or nations.

That is why either way the Louisville investigation turns out — blame unsanitary cherries or blame unscrupulous opponents — Taylor's death tantalizes. It gives a glimpse of an always inspiriting prospect — possibilities, paths not taken. Things could have been different; choices and chance cannot be scrubbed from the human story; we are not corks; we matter.

The fate of a president 141 July Fourths ago whispers in our ear: "The river of history could have cut a different canyon."

Ortega warns of war if giveaway repealed

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — Former President Daniel Ortega warned Wednesday that war could return if the legislature repeals a giveaway that enriched thousands of his Sandinista followers.

Sandinista sympathizers held at least six city halls and three radio stations in a protest against the proposed repeal.

The occupations continued after a night of bombings that rocked a Sandinista radio station and the headquarters of several pro-government parties. No injuries were reported and damage was minor.

Ortega, a major beneficiary of the Sandinista giveaway, warned a repeal would bring retribution against the government.

He threatened at a news conference to "present the bill" — Nicaraguan slang for a death threat — to government deputies in the National Assembly.

The assembly is expected to vote within three weeks on revoking two laws that gave government-controlled land, houses and other property to thousands of leftist Sandinistas, including some top party leaders, before they left office last spring.

"The (Sandinistas) and all honest Nicaraguans have the unavoidable obligation to put a stop to this dangerous maneuvering before the vengeful ones launch us again into a war that nobody wants and which we must avoid," Ortega said. "Because they want to present the bill to to the Sandinista Front, we would have to present them with the bill as well."

Passage is virtually assured because the 51 government deputies have a majority. Two independent legislators usually vote with the government deputies in the 92-member assembly.

Sandinista leaders earlier threatened chaos and violence if the repeal even was discussed in the assembly.

President Violeta Barrios de Chamorro is expected to veto the bill to comply with her policy of national reconciliation and to avoid the threatened violence from the Sandinistas, but 47 votes could override a veto.

Ortega did not deny that a rash of overnight bombings was a Sandinista response to the proposed repeal.

Residents near the transmission tower of the Sandinista-run Radio Ya said occupants of a car tossed a bomb at the tower gates and sped away. Broadcaster Silvio Rodriguez said damage was minor.

Earlier, a bomb was thrown at the porch of the Liberal Independent Party headquarters of Vice President Virgilio Godoy, breaking windows and damaging the roof. The building was empty.

The offices of Godoy, a harsh critic of the Sandinistas, are about two blocks from his party's headquarters.

Bombs also exploded at the headquarters of the pro-government Social Christian Party, the home of pro-government assembly member Julio Ruiz Quesada in the city of Matagalpa and the home of Duilio Baltodano, Nicaragua's attorney general and leader of the National Action Party.

Interior Minister Carlos Hurtado went on television Tuesday night to appeal for calm.

Hurtado also announced that Sandinista supporters took over a radio station in Leon, 60 miles west of the capital, Managua, and one in Chinandega. He said Sandinistas seized city halls in Masaya, 30 miles southeast of Managua, and in the smaller towns of Nindiri, Granada, Diriamba and Esteli and briefly occupied a city hall in Nandaime.

On Monday, pro-Sandinista activists captured a conservative Managua radio station and the Managua City Hall.

Kohl: West has duty to step up aid to former East Bloc

BERLIN (NYT) — Chancellor Helmut Kohl of Germany said Wednesday that "all Western countries" had a responsibility to provide greater economic aid to the Soviet Union and the former communist countries of Eastern Europe to help them make the transition to free markets. But it is unclear whether Germany is willing to go much beyond the money it has already committed to the Soviet Union and the former East Germany.

Addressing a group of foreign ministers from the United States, Canada and Europe who are taking part for the first time in a post-Cold War session of the 35-nation Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe, Kohl said of Eastern Europe and the Soviet Union:

"Additional assistance is needed to bolster the necessary transformation in the reformist countries, and I would emphasize that this assistance must come from all Western countries. It will be help toward self-help. We know that this is a worthwhile investment in peace and stability."

The Germans are already committed to giving about $31 billion in grants and credits to the Soviet Union, in part because of Moscow's assent to the unification of Germany.

But Bonn, faced with mounting costs in eastern Germany, has recently appeared wary of further large-scale aid programs.

Kohl's appeal is part of the diplomatic maneuvering that has begun among the Group of Seven major industrialized democracies in advance of their meeting next month in London with the Soviet president, Mikhail S. Gorbachev.

The United States, Canada, Japan, Germany, France, Italy and Britain are trying to reach a consensus on what if anything to offer the Soviet leader, provided that he agrees to move ahead with free-market and democratic reforms.

It was announced Wednesday that the finance ministers from the seven countries would meet in London on Sunday, in part to coordinate their positions. New York had been considered a possible site of the meeting.

Secretary of State James A. Baker III, in a speech to the Aspen Institute in Berlin on Tuesday, outlined some primarily technical aid programs that the Bush administration is prepared to offer Gorbachev if he starts down the path toward "serious" economic change. But the United States, unlike Germany, is markedly unenthusiastic about any vast financial aid to the Soviet Union.

'We know that this is a worthwhile investment in peace and stability.'

— German Chancellor Helmut Kohl

The Bush administration argues that technical assistance to help the Soviet Union tap its own substantial resources through market incentives is preferable to cash aid, which it has no intention of providing right now.

Many Democrats in Congress are arguing that if the reform process in the Soviet Union is to be stable, Moscow will need the same sort of financial safety net that the West provided Poland — and that this would mean a commitment of cash.

German officials say they have no intention of dictating what contribution the United States or other countries should make to Soviet change.

But Kohl and Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher have privately been urging the Bush administration to be as generous as possible, provided that Gorbachev reciprocates with genuine reform.

The Germans say they are motivated by concern that any economic or political chaos in the Soviet Union could become a pressing problem for them, given the prospect of thousands of refugees spilling westward.

German officials view Gorbachev as an exceptional figure who was prepared to take the politically risky steps that ultimately paved the way for German unification. Bonn feels it is indebted to him and has an interest in preserving his position in power.

Of the $31 billion that the Germans have already committed to Moscow, roughly $8.5 billion has gone toward removing the Soviet army from East Germany by providing housing and other aid for Soviet soldiers returning home by the end of 1994. The rest involves loans, grants and credits.

German officials argue that they have already given as much as they can afford to, since they are also spending billions of dollars on bringing the former East Germany up to Western economic standards.

They would like to see other Western allies making similar commitments to Moscow in aid, grants, or technical assistance.

"We in Germany know from our own experience that the transition from a centralized command economy to democracy, rule of law and social market economy is long and difficult," Kohl said, referring to the unemployment and low productivity in the former East German states.

"Their transition to democracy and a market economy demands courage, patience and a strong predisposition for change."

Jury finds man guilty of manslaughter

■ In addition to voluntary manslaughter, Ivy Ray McGruder found guilty of attempted murder.

By David Morris
Staff Writer

A 238th District Court jury found Ivy Ray McGruder guilty of voluntary manslaughter and attempted murder Wednesday after about four hours of deliberation.

The five-man, seven-woman jury agreed that McGruder was provoked into stabbing and killing Abel Tucker Hernandez, 23, last Dec. 22. They also agreed that McGruder tried to kill Hernandez's wife, Antricia Bedford Shaw, 20, in the same attack.

Hernandez suffered stab wounds to the neck, abdomen and heart and died within minutes of the attack, a pathologist testified earlier this week. Ms. Shaw, Hernandez's wife, survived a stab wound to the neck.

Jurors are expected to decide on McGruder's punishment today. He could face up to 20 years in prison on both the manslaughter and the attempted murder charges.

He had been charged with murder, a first-degree felony with a maximum punishement of 99 years or life in prison, in the Hernandez killing. Voluntary manslaughter and attempted murder both are second-degree felonies.

McGruder pleaded innocent to all charges Monday before Judge John Hyde.

McGruder, 27, testified Wednesday that Hernandez was his "best friend." He said he was merely acting in self-defense when he stabbed the couple in their house at 3411 Park Lane.

He said he stabbed Hernandez and Ms. Shaw with a hunting knife following a night of smoking crack cocaine — but only after they attacked him.

McGruder said that after the threesome ran out of crack early in the morning, Hernandez invited him to sleep at the house. He said he accepted the invitation and went to bed.

However, McGruder said Hernandez became paranoid and thought there was an intruder in the house. McGruder said he got out of bed to ask Hernandez what the problem was and found him in the kitchen.

That was when Hernandez tried to stab him with a knife that McGruder had left in the kitchen earlier, McGruder said. The men struggled, he said, and Ms. Shaw rushed into the kitchen and tried to hit him with a metal club.

"When I seen her swing that pipe at me, that's when I got mad," McGruder said. He said he disarmed Hernandez, stabbed him with the knife and then stabbed Ms. Shaw.

"If I wouldn't have fought them like I did, I probably would have been dead," he said.

His story conflicted with that of Ms. Shaw, who testified Tuesday that she never attacked McGruder with the club.

Rather, she said, McGruder killed her husband before hitting her on the head with the club and stabbing her in the neck.

While Mcgruder maintained that the entire fight took place in the kitchen, Ms. Shaw said McGruder attacked her with the club in the bedroom and the bathroom before dragging her into the Officers testing new radio system

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

Midland police are getting ready to go on-line with their new $2.5 million radio communication system.

In preparation, officers have been issued new radios for testing, said Sgt. Price Robinson.

"It's time for any bugs to be worked out before it actually goes live," Robinson said.

The system is expected to go online in July, about a year and two months since City Council awarded a contract for the system to the General Electric Co.

The system will replace the current one, which is about 40 years old.

"These radios are clearer. We get better reception out of them," Robinson said. One of the objectives for the new system was to eliminate outside radio chatter.

"And they will hopefully eliminate dead spots," Robinson said. Dead spots are areas where radios will not transmit.

As part of the troubleshooting period, officers are currently using the radios in their normal course of duty to test reception and transmission.

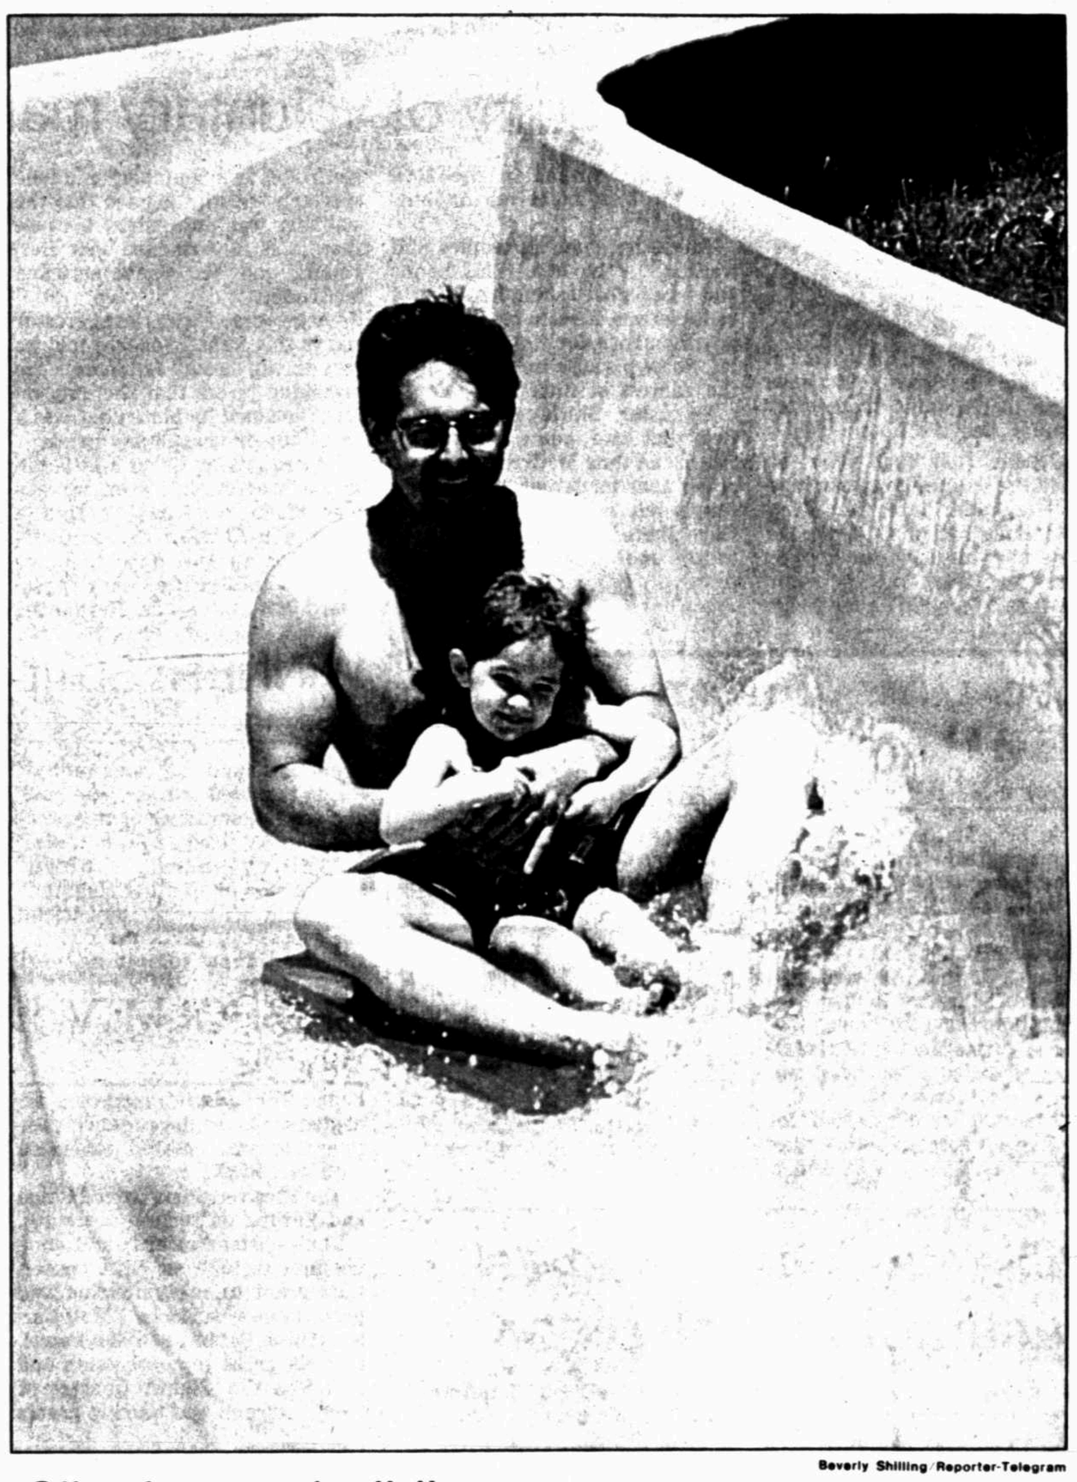

Feedback from officers so far has been positive, Robinson said.

In addition to clearer communications, officers won't have to wait as long to get an open channel to transmit.

When a channel is occupied, the new system will automatically reroute to an available channel. On the old system, an officer has to wait for the channel to clear or switch to an available one.

Another feature of the system includes more channels which will allow divisions of the police department — such as detectives — to have their own talk groups.

The system will include five channels for the city, five for Midland International Airport and three for the new communication center at 601 N. Loraine St.

Slipping and sliding

Refreshingly cool water is a popular commodity as temperatures top the 100-degree mark. David Coons and his 2-year-old daughter Diana, visiting family in Midland from Colorado Springs, Colo., took a cooling plunge at Water Wonderland Wednesday. The park's water slide will be the site of this Saturday's Great Texas Duck Race, benefitting the Odessa district of the American Cancer Society. About 1,000 rubber ducks are expected to speed down the slide beginning at 11 a.m.; duck sponsorship information is available from the ACS office at 367-0996.

Workshop to examine codependency

■ Counselors at the Glenwood seminar will help participants change traits leading to codependency.

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

"I'm tired of breaking out into tears all of the time. I feel like if my husband would just be more understanding, my brother could keep a job, my teen-age son would stay out of trouble and my mother would get off of my back, then I would be fine. If everyone else would just behave, then I would be happy. Imagine my shock when a counselor told me I was the one who needed to change."

— Stacey, a 39-year-old Midland homemaker

Stacey, 39, recently sought help from a counselor because she felt like her relatives' actions were making her life unmanageable. "Things were out of control and I felt like a victim," she said.

"Then the counselor mentioned the word 'codependent' and I got angry. I had heard that term along with 'enabler' in relation to people who put up with alcoholics," Stacey said. "I found both words distasteful, and was really confused. There is no substance abuse in my family."

Substance abuse doesn't have to be involved in order for a relationship to be dysfunctional, according to Marion Kimberly, a licensed professional counselor.

"Codependent is used in a much broader sense," Ms. Kimberly said. "It originated with describing someone in a relationship with an alcoholic, but it is used in a broader sense to describe someone who is looking to the outside to feel good about herself, safe and lovable."

Melody Beattie, author of "Codependent No More," defines a codependent as "a person who has let someone else's behavior affect him or her and is obsessed with controlling other people's behavior."

"Codependents may be overachievers, perfectionists, or caregivers," Ms. Kimberly said. "All of us fall into certain roles. There is nothing wrong with being a caregiver if it is in balance with the rest of your life — as long as there is no anger or resentment inside."

The counselor said that men's and women's changing roles in the last 25 years has "set up a lot of confusion for people."

"Their roles are not so clear-cut," she said. "A woman who finds herself being a caregiver may be playing out a traditional role. But other messages from society tell her she should be doing something else."

In order to identify codependent roles and to offer a wellness program to change these traits, Ms. Kimberly and Teresa "Sam" Guyton, another licensed professional counselor, are conducting the workshop "Enmeshed Relationships: The Need to be Needed" 8:30 a.m.-12:30 p.m. June 29 at Glenwood hospital.

Ms. Guyton said seminar participants will be given guidelines for personal assessment and to create a plan to alter negative traits.

"What we are basically going to do in the workshop is examine some of the codependent roles, or typical roles that women adopt," Ms. Kimberly said. "But the workshop is certainly for men too."

Many of the roles adults assume in relationships have roots in their childhood experiences, according to Ms. Guyton. She said certain behaviors "probably existed in the family of origin but don't manifest until a later point in life."

Ms. Guyton said that experts agree that 96 percent of families probably have some dysfunction. "Every family just does not have the same degree of dysfunction."

Sally Chisholm leaving Thouvenel quartet

By Georgia Todd Temple
Staff Writer

Sally Chisholm, a founding member of the Thouvenel String Quartet, has accepted the position of violist with the 50-year-old Pro Arte Quartet of Madison, Wis.

S. Chisholm

"It was a wonderful job opportunity that came up suddenly," Ms. Chisholm said. "The possibility of joining a historic quartet that has tremendous community support is the only reason that could draw me away from Midland and Odessa."

The Pro Arte Quartet traces its roots back 50 years to Brussels, Belgium. The quartet's residency in the United States occurred during World War II.

The Pro Arte Quartet was performing at the University of Wisconsin when Adolf Hitler invaded Belgium. As word reached the quartet that their homeland had been invaded, the University of Wisconsin faculty offered the quartet a residency there. The announcement of the residency and of the quartet's acceptance was made at the concert.

The position of violist with the quartet became available as a result of the retirement of long-time Pro Arte violist, Richard Blum.

"They are big shoes to fill, definitely," said Kevin Lynch, arts writer for the Capital Times, Madison, Wis. "The first violinist, Norman Paulu, said he didn't expect to find a replacement with such playing experience and credentials. The group was very excited about landing Sally."

Ms. Chisholm received her bachelor's degree in philosophy from the University of Oklahoma and a master of music degree with highest distinction from Indiana University where she was an associate instructor of viola while pursuing a doctorate of music.

Her honors include finalist in Naftzger Young Artist Competition, a National Endowment for the Arts Title IV Fellowship and Phi Beta Kappa.

In her new position, Ms. Chisholm also will serve on the faculty at the University of Wisconsin at Madison as an assistant professor of viola.

Philip West, manager of the Midland-Odessa Symphony & Chorale, confirmed Wednesday that Ms. Chisholm had accepted a position with the Pro Arte Quartet.

"We have been holding off on the official announcement because we did not want this to break before the concert at Kennedy Center, and we wanted to inform the board members," West said, referring to the Thouvenel's performance this week at the Texas Festival in Washington, D.C.

"We are sad to see Gene and Sally leave, but, on the other hand, this is a tremendous opportunity for Sally. The Pro Arte is one of the major string quartets in the nation."

Eugene Purdue, a founding member of the Thouvenel String Quartet and Ms. Chisholm's husband, will be working on his doctorate dissertation on the works of Ernst Krenek at the University of Wisconsin at Madison. He will be teaching private lessons.

Purdue, a violinist, is first chair and concert master of the MOSC.

The Thouvenel was formed in 1975 at Indiana University where its members were graduate stu-

Midland Community Spirit Award to be presented in July

By Brian Pearson
Staff Writer

The announcement of the 1990 Midland Community Spirit Award is long overdue but not forgotten, Rick Menchaca, city of Midland spokesman, assured Wednesday.

National leaders whom city officials hoped would present the award have been kept hopping by world events such as the Persian Gulf War, Menchaca said.

But a presentation ceremony in Washington, D.C., has been tentatively set for early or mid-July, Menchaca said.

The spirit award, created in 1989 in response to local efforts during the October 1987 rescue of Jessica McClure, is given to communities that pull together to overcome a crisis.

There were 108 communities nationwide nominated for the 1990 award, with crises ranging from an earthquake to floods to sickness.

A committee of nine Midland representatives, including Mayor Carroll Thomas, reviewed the applications and was expected to name a winner by last Oct. 1.

Although the committee picked its choice and ranked the top 10 applicants in December, setting up a presentation ceremony at the nation's capital has been tough, Menchaca said.

"World events have limited the number of public appearances by national officials," he said. "But we will be making an announcement very shortly. We're still working on the final details of who the presenter will be."

Menchaca said officials are still working to land President Bush as a presenter.

Bush presented the 1989 award to Sioux City, Iowa, whose citizens won the honor for assisting the passengers and crew of United Airlines Flight 232 after it crashed.

Judges in the 1989 contest had to sort through 88 applications. Nominees included those who responded to the collapse of a Brownsville building, a Montana train derailment, a north Texas blizzard and a dilapidated Virginia school.

Selection committee member Mary Griffith said picking the 1990 winner was difficult.

"The competition always is pretty fierce," Ms. Griffith said. "There are so many different situations. You're torn between this

Student says award 'for my whole family'

By James R. Owen
Reporter-Telegram Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — Hoang Pham, this year's valedictorian at Judson High School in San Antonio, collected his Presidential Scholar Medallion at the White House Wednesday, certifying him as one of the nation's outstanding young academics.

"It feels great," Hoang said after receiving the medal from Education Secretary Lamar Alexander at a ceremony on the South Lawn.

"This is the best reward anybody can get," he said, grinning. "But this is really an award for my whole family."

President Bush, speaking to the young scholars, their advisers and parents under overcast skies, hailed the students as "today's trailblazers and leaders."

"You see some of our best and brightest young people, you see living educational success stories, you see our hope for an exciting and rich future," Bush said of the medallion winners, while also paying tribute to their ethnic and racial diversity.

Hoang, who turned 17 last Saturday, the day he arrived in the nation's capital, was the only Vietnamese-American among the 141 medallion winners, a distinction that he said made the honor "extra special for me and my family."

Hoang was a baby when his parents, Novan and Thuy Pham, led the family out of South Vietnam during a 1975 mass exodus. Life was hard at first for his parents, who own and operate a food market in San Antonio, Hoang said.

"They didn't know English too well," he said.

Hoang earned his medallion and an all-expenses paid trip to Washington by scoring a 1520 out of a possible 1600 on his Scholastic Aptitude Test by compiling a perfect gradepoint average in high school.

In one of the essays on his application for the White House honor, requiring him to describe a fictitious conversation with a famous American, Hoang "conversed" with the late President John Kennedy about social policies and the Vietnam War.

Hoang said he will enroll in Harvard in the fall, taking science courses that he hopes will lead to a medical career. "It'll be great, but I'm sure I'll miss Texas within a month," he said.

"It's been first-class, first-class everything," he said.

Four other young Texans also received presidential medallions: Priscilla Chang, Jersey Village High School, Houston; Shannon E. Emerick, Greenhill School, Dallas, and Matthew McCormick and Gregory McFadden, both of Klein High School, Spring.

she said.

"There is a whole field of recovery for adult children of any kind of dysfunctional homes," Ms. Kimberly said. "Our parents were not perfect godlike creatures, but the amount of dysfunction is a matter of degree."

Ms. Guyton said the workshop will be "didactic and experiential."

"The workshop will be intense," Ms. Kimberly said. "It's for anyone who wants to get involved with a little introspection and do a soul-searching evaluation of their life."

Ms. Guyton offers the following questions to assess codependency. "Yes" answers indicate codependency.

- Do you care for others at your own expense?
- Do you try too hard to please other people?
- Do you exhaust yourself trying to earn love and approval?
- Do you struggle with feelings of loneliness, anger and depression?
- Do you feel you have to be perfect to be lovable?

The workshop "Enmeshed Relationships: The Need to be Needed" will be offered at Glenwood Hospital, located at 3300 South FM 1788. Cost of the workshop is $10 per person. Enrollment will be limited. For reservations or more information call workshop coordinator Marilee Kyler of Glenwood Hospital at 563-1200.

TRIAL: Man found guilty of voluntary manslaughter kitchen and stabbing her.

Midland District Attorney Al Schorre said blood stains found in the bathroom and bedroom tended to support Ms. Shaw's story.

But defense attorney Tom Hirsch said Ms. Shaw could have left the blood stains there after McGruder fled the house.

McGruder said that after he stabbed the couple, he carried the limp Hernandez into the living room and put him on the floor. He said he tried to drive for help in Hernandez's car, but the door locks were frozen. So he ran to his sister's apartment in the 3000 block of West Louisiana Avenue, he said.

There, he changed clothes and washed the blood off his hands and face before asking his sister to call relatives. He said he didn't call an ambulance for Hernandez and Ms. Shaw because he didn't know the address of their house.

His sister, Shirley Hicks, testified that two hours passed between the time McGruder arrived at her apartment and the time the family left for the police station. Once there, McGruder confessed to the stabbings, according to testimony.

Schorre, who described McGruder as a "butcher" and "the specter of death," argued that the stabbing was unjustified because there was no evidence that Hernandez and Ms. Shaw attacked McGruder.

"Ask yourself who the aggressor was in this fight," Schorre told jurors during closing arguments. He reminded jurors that the only injury sustained by McGruder was a small cut on one of his hands.

"We're talking about a little bitty cut that doesn't even leave a scar....Even Ivy couldn't find a trace of it to show the doctor."

Earlier in the day, Schorre called witnesses who said they'd heard McGruder and Hernandez arguing at a grocery store days before the attack.

A 16-year-old witness said he heard Mcgruder threaten to kill Hernandez.

But Hirsch said Hernandez would not have invited McGruder to his house to smoke crack if he felt threatened by his longtime friend. McGruder testified that he'd known Hernandez since the two were in the eighth grade.

Hirsch, who argued that Hernandez "started a fight with someone that he just couldn't finish," said he was pleased with the jury's decision.

Schorre had no comment.

Staff Reports

A U.S. Magistrate ordered one man held without bond and set bond at $50,000 for another Wednesday following their arrest on drug charges last week, federal officials said.

Jason Gardner, 20, remained jailed Wednesday in lieu of a conditional $50,000 bond.

Roy James McCoy, 19, also remained jailed after bond was denied, officials said.

The two were arrested following a federal indictment last week for conspiracy to distribute cocaine, officials said.

Man jailed

A Stanton man arrested for possession of heroin Tuesday night remained in jail Wednesday, jail and police officials said.

Police responding to a disturbance call at 1100 E. Illinois arrested Calvin Ray Lockett, 41, for possession of seven packs of heroin, about one-fifth of a gram.

Bond was set at $15,000 by Justice of the Peace Robert Pine.

Williams Aviation sues manufacturer of plane

Staff Report

Another lawsuit has been filed in connection with the 1990 airplane crash that claimed the lives of five of Clayton Williams' business associates, court records show.

Williams Aviation Co., which owned the plane, filed the lawsuit last Friday in 238th District Court. The suit claims negligence on the part of the plane's manufacturer, Mitsubishi Aircraft International Inc. and Mitsubishi Heavy Industries Ltd. of Japan.

According to the lawsuit, the plane — an MU-2 twin-engine turboprop — was "defectively designed and manufactured, rendering it unreasonably dangerous."

Those killed in the crash were Jamie Winkel, 45, Williams' companies president; independent oilman Aaron Giebel, 63; Bob Smith, 62, former ClayDesta vice-president and director of development; Randy Kidwell, 37, former president of ClayDesta Communications, and Williams Aviation pilot Ken Mardis, 52.

The men were en route to Dallas from Midland on Feb. 14, 1990, when the crash occurred near Putnam, east of Abilene. Williams was a Republican gubernatorial candidate at the time.

Last August, the families of those killed filed lawsuits against Mitsubishi in a state district court in Dallas.

Giebel's family amended its lawsuit to include Williams Aviation last November.

The suit filed by the aviation company, which is owned by Williams, seeks undisclosed damages including the market value of the destroyed plane.

community and that community."

But the 1990 winner, she said, showed outstanding community spirit in its reaction to a crisis.

"This community achieved something a lot of other communities could achieve if they tried," she said. "This particular community has done something very special."

The 1990 nominees come from 35 different states. They include respondents to the San Fransisco earthquake, Hurricane Hugo in South Carolina, flooding in various Texas cities and a boy who needed a bone marrow transplant.

The applicants sent video tapes and newspaper clippings to support their bids.

dents. The quartet members accepted an artist-in-residence position that was created for them with the MOSC.

The Thouvenel has toured China and Europe on several occasions.

The quartet's awards and commissions include an NEA consortium grant to co-commission and perform new works by Elliott Carter, Milton Babbitt and Mel Powel, an NEA grant to commission and premiere the Eighth Quartet of Ernest Krenek and touring grants from the Mid-America Arts Alliance and the Texas Commission on the Arts.

"The Thouvenel String Quartet will continue next year," West said. "Janet Chisholm and Rebecca Seiver as the remaining members of the string quartet are looking for replacements. There will be an audition period probably in July and August. We anticipate having the new people here for the beginning of the new concert season, which would be in September."

ARMY: Soldier's widow enlists

(From 1B)

Mrs. Dailey walked into a recruiting office last week and said she wanted to join.

She was sworn into the Army late Wednesday afternoon after deciding to enlist for 2½ years and train as a medical assistant. Her father, Wilton League, stood back and watched as his daughter took the oath.

"The military was always in the back of my mind. I put it off because my husband was in it," she said. "I had to do something. I can't just stay at a standstill.

"It's something that will keep me busy and something that is connected to him," she said.

Pfc. Michael Dailey died in a mine explosion March 3 in southern Iraq.

Mrs. Dailey was married only four days when her husband, also 19, was sent to Saudi Arabia for Operation Desert Storm. She said she hopes enlisting will reduce her grief.

"I don't think I really have come to grips with it. He was away for so long and I feel like he's just still away," she said.

Mrs. Dailey said she believes her husband would have teased her about joining the Army, but would have supported her.

She said she harbors no anger for the military because of Dailey's death as he was disarming Iraqi bunkers.

"It's not the military's fault he died," she said. "That's what he went into the Army for, to fight for his country."

Army recruiter Sgt. Gilbert Robles said she would make "a hell of a soldier."

Mrs. Dailey, who had been unemployed, said she was too torn by grief to look for work. After attending the June 8 national memorial service in Washington, D.C., for all the fallen U.S. soldiers in the war, she said, she decided it was time to do something.

Russian chimp gets new home

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Boris, a retired Russian circus performer, has a new home and a new lifestyle in northwest Bexar County.

The 7-year-old chimpanzee, who was freed last year from a now-defunct circus by his Russian trainer, arrived at Primarily Primates Tuesday. He was living in a quarantine cage until undergoing medical examinations and blood tests.

Officials with the Washington-based People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals drove Boris to Texas from Florida, where he had been living since the circus folded.

Primarily Primates director Wally Swett said Boris will need to learn social skills before he can be placed with other chimpanzees because the 80-pound animal has never been around creatures of his own kind.

Swett said he expects the socialization process to take about two months.

"He took the trip well, although the women who brought him didn't have any experience with chimpanzees. He spit on the woman in the passenger seat because he wanted to be the center of attention," Swett said.

Animal trainer Victor Lomakin, who recently defected to the United States, had been caring for Boris since the Soviet circus Bim Bom went bankrupt in April 1990.

When Lomakin was unable to continue providing for the chimp, he contacted People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals, who contacted Swett.

VOLUNTEERING

College students can gain valuable insight and job skills by volunteering their time with a nonprofit agency. These are wonderful opportunities to learn the "nuts and bolts" of the nonprofit business sector.

■ Join the ranks of a museum dedicated to the preservation of World War II history and vintage aircraft. Fielding calls and performing various clerical duties will provide a valuable service for this special museum.

■ Watch them smile. Volunteer teachers are needed to teach children the joys of arts and crafts, music, dance and drama. This is an excellent opportunity for students to apply their special training in a learning environment.

■ The only number to remember for answers to questions or problems is Information and Referral Midland, 697-HELP.

Public Notice

Southwestern Bell Telephone Company (Company), in accordance with the rules of the Public Utility Commission of Texas (Commission), hereby gives notice of its intent to implement a new schedule of telephone rates in Texas for Directory Assistance Services, effective August 1, 1991, unless otherwise determined by the Commission. The Company has filed an application with the Commission to restructure and change the rates for Directory Assistance Service.

To help recover its costs, the Company is proposing to increase the rates for Directory Assistance calls from $.30 to $.40 per call (after the three-call allowance). Southwestern Bell is proposing that there be no change in the number of free Directory Assistance calls allowed each month (currently three) and that customers who qualify for exemption of Directory Assistance charges because of visual or physical handicaps continue to be exempt from these charges. The company also proposes to begin charging $.25 per call for Directory Assistance from pay telephones.

If approved by the Commission, this proposed rate change for Directory Assistance will increase the Company's annual revenues by $15.4 million, which is an increase of approximately one half of 1 percent in the Company's adjusted revenue for the twelve-month period ending December 1990. This proposed rate change would affect approximately 900,000 residence customers, approximately 155,000 business customers, approximately 500 private pay telephone owners and all customers who make Directory Assistance calls from public pay telephones.

Persons who wish to intervene or otherwise participate in these proceedings should notify the Commission as soon as possible. A request to intervene, participate, or for further information should be mailed to the Public Utility Commission of Texas, 7800 Shoal Creek Boulevard, Suite 400N, Austin, Texas 78757. Further information may also be obtained by calling the Public Utility Commission Public Information Office at (512) 458-0256 or (512) 458-0221 teletypewriter for the deaf.

Mediterranean diet may help protect the body's arteries

By Jean Carper

Is a diet that's good for keeping heart arteries clear also apt to keep the rest of the network of arteries in the body free of clots? It may seem evident, but until studies are done, scientists cannot be sure.

Carper

Now a new study of 200 people in Greece by Harvard researchers does indeed show that the same diet that saves heart arteries also prevents blockage of arteries elsewhere, for example, in the legs which can lead to gangrene and amputation.

The Greek subjects who ate the most saturated-type animal fat, cholesterol and proteins were most likely to have "peripheral artery disease," as it's called. Further, the odds of such clogged arteries dropped in those eating foods high in fiber, polyunsaturated fatty acids and vitamin C.

Of special interest was that monounsaturated fats (olive oil) were neutral. Even the high amount of olive oil found in the Greek diet was not detrimental to arteries.

The bottom line: It appears that the traditional "Mediterranean diet" high in vegetables, fruits, fiber, vitamin C and olive oil instead of animal fat, protects arteries, not just in the heart, but throughout the body.

More Cheers for Barley

In Mideastern folklore, this ancient grain, barley, is said to be "heart medicine." There's some justification for the claim. Several new studies have found that barley can have a beneficial effect on blood.

In a recent study by Australian researchers, 21 middle-aged men with mildly high blood cholesterol ate cereal and bread made from either barley or wheat daily for four weeks at a time. When they ate the barley, their total cholesterol sank 7 percent and their bad-type LDL cholesterol dropped 6 percent. Their cholesterol rose slightly after eating the wheat fiber.

The barley doses were very high — nearly 6 ounces a day. It takes much less oat bran to get similar cholesterol drops.

However, barley, in smaller doses, may also help protect arteries in other ways. Some researchers believe barley's most active cholesterol-lowering agent is a form of vitamin E called tocotrienol, found in the oily part of the barley kernel.

Tocotrienols are powerful antioxidants and in animals have exhibited several heart-protective activities that help thwart the formation of dangerous blood clots and the deposition of artery-clogging plaque.

The Prune Mystery

Prunes are full of fiber. And practically everybody knows prunes have a laxative effect. But how prunes work is still a mystery to most experts. Also, despite their high fiber, adding 12 prunes a day to the ordinary diet of a group of men did not reduce their mildly high cholesterol, according to new research at the University of California at Davis.

Such fiber, mostly pectin, in other fruits such as apples has significantly depressed cholesterol. The extra 6 grams of prune fiber daily was apparently not enough to have an effect. Prunes, however did work better than low-fiber grape juice.

Nevertheless, the prune fiber did cause bulkier bowel movements, according to Dr. Barbara Schneeman, study co-author. Such fiber, she says, is the so-called "magic" laxative agent in prunes. Other experts think prunes' most active laxative ingredient is not fiber, but a druglike chemical that stimulates contractions in the intestinal wall and increases secretion of fluid. Still, no one has ever successfully identified such a prune chemical.

Dr. Schneeman also notes that sorbitol, a form of sugar in fruit, including prunes, acts as a laxative in some people.

House doctors disagree on health care cure

By Faith Keenan
Hearst News Service

WASHINGTON — Is there a doctor in House?

Yes, there are two — and each has dramatically different views on how to cure the nation's ailing health care system.

Reps. Jim McDermott of Washington and J. Roy Rowland of Georgia are both physicians active in health issues before Congress.

But the two Democrats don't agree on how to respond to problems in the health-care system. In fact, their polarized positions neatly reflect the opposing sides in the dilemma over how to provide quality, affordable care to all Americans and clear the ranks of the more than 30 million people who lack health insurance.

McDermott, a jocular liberal from Seattle, backs a quick, complete overhaul that would give the United States a national health care system similar to Canada's.

"A system that controls costs similar to the Canadian and West German systems, but allows the continued multiplicity of delivery systems is the best system," McDermott said in a recent interview in his Capitol Hill office.

Rowland, a soft-spoken courtly conservative who represents a mostly rural, 300-mile swathe through the middle of Georgia, favors a slow, incremental approach that would preserve the private health care sector.

Rep. Fortney "Pete" Stark, D-Calif., who chairs the health panel of the House Ways and Means Committee described the House doctors this way:

"McDermott addresses the problems of the poor and Rowland addresses the problems of the doctors. Rowland says there's nothing wrong with doctors except government — just leave them alone and everyone would be taken care of."

McDermott predicts health care will be the major campaign issue of the 1992 presidential election and that major changes will be in place by 1995.

Rowland, however, would not apply a timetable to change. The system, he said, probably will not be fixed until it is completely broken.

"I look at our health care system kind of like a drunk," he said in a separate interview. "A drunk has to get all the way in the gutter before they do anything and I think we have to get all the way in the gutter with our system before we really do something."

Henry Aaron, an economist and health analyst at the Brookings Institution, a liberal Washington think-tank, said neither is right.

The growing clamor for a cure and last week's unveiling of a sweeping five-year, fix-it plan by Senate Democratic leaders are not likely to force George Bush to act, he said.

"Not withstanding the current brouhaha, President Bush does not want radical reform; he would like incremental changes in the current system and is sufficiently popular not to have to support major change in response to the Democrats in the course of the 1992 (presidential) campaign," Aaron said.

"It is unlikely, given the diversity of the (reform) plans out there that he's going to be forced to do something less than modest changes."

Dozens of reform packages are currently circulating in the capital, most of them variations on the public/private theme.

Both McDermott and Rowland acknowledge that political compromise will probably yield a package in between their positions.

The main problem now, said McDermott, is to cull a political consensus on which direction to head from the competing interests of labor, big business, small business, insurers, doctors, hospitals, the insured and uninsured.

Medical credentials or not, neither McDermott, a psychiatrist, nor Rowland, a family physician, is likely to be a key voice in the drive to compromise given their low seniority status in the House.

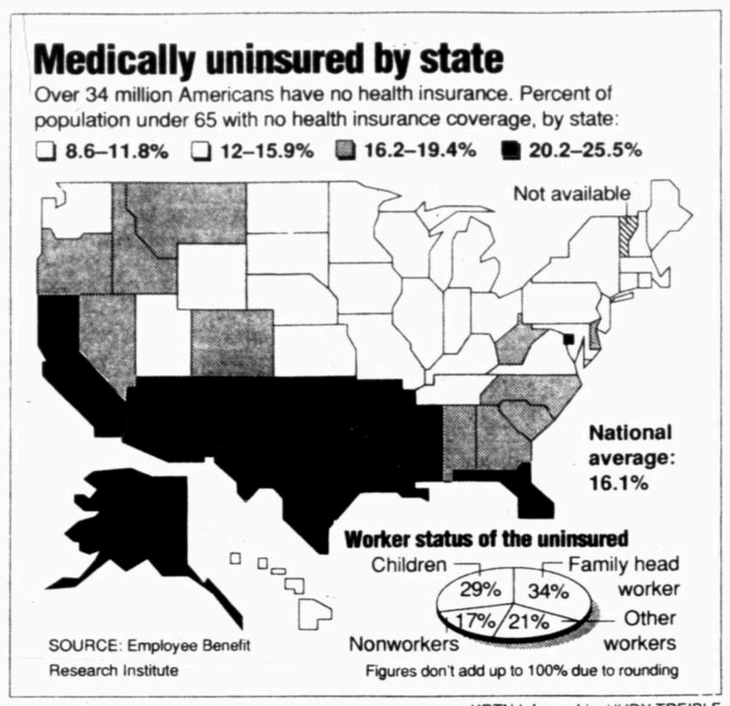

Although McDermott became a member of the Ways and Means Committee this term, he exercises little influence on the bottom rung of a seniority ladder lined with strong personalities. He also is not on the crucial health subcommittee that would handle any reform legislation.

Rowland joined the Energy and Commerce Committee in 1989, another key panel for health issues, but he has the same seniority problem as McDermott.

"The decision to begin the long political march toward extensive health care reform will ultimately be a political decision by guys with more seniority who have more clout," said James Jaffee, a spokesman for the House Ways and Means Committee.

The point is not lost on McDermott. Asked when that march would begin, he said:

"When (committee) Chairman (Dan) Rostenkowski (D-Ill.) decides it's time, it will happen."

Brain hormone pill may help insomniacs

LONDON (AP) — Insomniacs fall asleep more quickly with a pill made from melatonin, a brain hormone, British researchers say.

The study done by researchers at King's College School of Medicine in London, the University of Surrey, and the University of Lille in France lends more credence to the theory that melatonin controls the circadian rhythm, the internal biological clock. Melatonin is secreted by the pituitary gland.

Instead of the typical sleeping pill that works by inducing drowsiness and may lead to a feeling like a hangover the next day, small doses of melatonin reset the biological clock, said Dr. Josephine Arendt, an endocrinologist at the University of Surrey.

The eight people in this study, published in the May 11 issue of the journal Lancet, suffer from a disorder in which they cannot fall asleep until the wee hours of the morning and wake up at midday.

Patients fell asleep 82 minutes sooner and woke up 117 minutes earlier when they got 5 milligrams of melatonin every night for four weeks. No one felt a hangover the next day, said Arendt. The patients also got four weeks of placebo that did not help cure insomnia.

Rich districts end challenge to finance law

AUSTIN (AP) — Officials from wealthy school districts testified Wednesday that Texas' new school finance law would be hard on their residents, as a 2½-day hearing ended on their challenge of the measure.

State District Judge F. Scott McCown took the case under advisement.

The new law is designed to shift hundreds of millions of dollars in property tax revenue from wealthier to poorer school districts within education taxing regions, drawn largely along county lines.

It was passed in response to a Texas Supreme Court order to even out funding available to school districts.

The law prevents school districts with a great deal of property wealth from taking sole advantage of that tax base. But a number of rich districts say it also means they could be dragged down to an inadequate funding level or forced into large tax increases.

Deena Reeve, Coppell school board president, said residents have "really stretched" to live in the district, which has a wealthy tax base because it includes an electric utility plant.

"Our district is composed primarily of single-family residences. Most families have two working parents," said Ms. Reeve.

Dallas lawyer Earl Luna asked whether some residents had to give up their boats to buy homes in the school district.

"We hear that consistently" in public forums on education, Ms. Reeve said.

Coppell Superintendent Wilburn Echols said that under the new law, property taxes in the district would go from 93.5 cents per $100 valuation to about $1.35. That would yield about $4,100 per student, $500 less than the district has spent in the past, he said.

Mark Hyatt, assistant superintendent for business at the Carrollton-Farmers Branch school district, said his district's tax rate would have to increase from nearly $1 to at least $1.21 to recoup a loss of about $15.6 million under the bill.

If taxes weren't increased, and all the money was taken out of teacher salaries, 521 teachers of about 1,100 in the district would be eliminated, Hyatt said.

Bernard Francis, a Carrollton City Council member, called the new law "somewhat of a cruel hoax."

He said his move to Carrollton was "my attempt at bettering my son's opportunity for success in life."

"I did everything the establishment told me to do to somehow get my hands on a piece of the rock ... All of a sudden, when it comes my turn to cash in on that game plan, I'm told it doesn't quite work that way," Francis said.

Lawyers for wealthy districts argued that the law creates an unconstitutional state property tax, and unconstitutionally transfers local tax money from one school district to another.

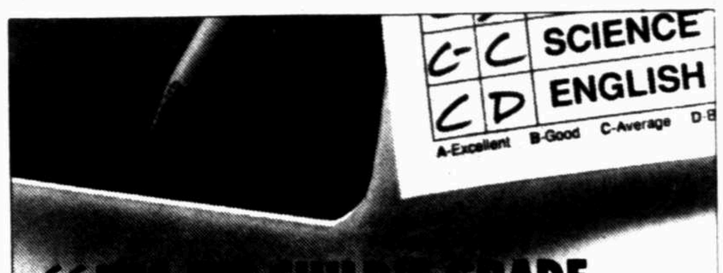

If the county levy is a local tax, they said, an election should have been provided for. There is no separate election for the minimum tax charged by the county districts.

The state contends the new law is constitutional.

STATE IN BRIEF

■ Inmates braid floss escape ladder

AUSTIN — Three inmates who braided hundreds of yards of dental floss into an escape ladder pleaded guilty to trying to break out of the Hays County Jail.

"It was ingenious," said U.S. Attorney Gerald Carruth. "They made the rope out of dental floss and used cardboard salt and pepper containers for stirrups on the ladder."

According to prosecutors, Arthur Harris Stier, 33, and Ian James Holbs, 32, were in the San Marcos facility on drug charges. David Gregory Surasky, 38, was held on charges of illegally possessing a machine gun.

Carruth said the three used smuggled hacksaw blades to saw through two panes in a window of their dorm. Guards spotted the missing panes April 29.

Maximum punishment on each count is five years in prison and a $250,000 fine.

■ Digital sign warns speeding drivers

HOUSTON — Anyone driving through the inner-Houston community of West University Place may be greeted by a friendly warning from an unlikely source.

An often-unmanned police patrol car, complete with a radar gun and a scoreboard-like attachment on the roof, displays passing motorists' speed on a 3-foot digital sign.

But drivers exceeding the residential area's 30 mph speed limit need not fear that a policeman will jump out from behind the car to ticket the leadfoot.

West University Police Chief Stephen Griffith calls the device "a friendly warning to people to think about your speed when you're driving through our neighborhoods. Nothing sneaky about it."

■ Filmmakers must apply for permit

WAXAHACHIE — Producers must now apply for a permit to film in this North Texas town, which calls itself "The Best Little Hollywood in Texas."

The City Council on Monday passed the ordinance, which is designed to eliminate the hassles of filming movies and commercials without scaring off filmmakers.

The ordinance was written after complaints that the March filming of a commercial disrupted traffic and blocked entrances to several businesses.

For future projects, producers must apply for a permit, at no cost, at least four days before filming is to begin. The production company also must have proof of at least $1 million in liability insurance.

The city managers also may require that all merchants and individuals affected by the filming be notified in writing.

■ Zavala County escapees caught

CARRIZO SPRINGS — Three men who escaped the Zavala County Jail by stabbing a jailer and stealing his pickup were recaptured Wednesday in Dimmit County, authorities said.

The men were arrested without incident about 11:28 a.m. Wednesday after they were found hiding in some brush, said Dimmit County Sheriff's dispatcher Corina Munoz.

Authorities had been looking for the trio since Sunday night when they escaped from the jail in Crystal City, which is about 20 miles north of Carrizo Springs. Both towns are in far South Texas.

The three are Jose Garcia Briseno of Carrizo Springs, who is accused of killing Dimmit County Sheriff Ben Murray in January, Ricardo Perez Basaldua of Batesville and Rogelio Mendoza Garcia of Crystal City.

Man dies after being beaten for $4

SAN ANTONIO — Gregory Terrazas Jr., who died after being beaten for $4, has become San Antonio's 100th murder victim this year — the first time the city has seen that many slayings before July.

Terrazas, 40, died Tuesday after become taken off life support systems at Medical Center Hospital, where he was taken following Friday night's beating.

"The murder rate is about 15 percent higher than last year, but we've been ahead of last year since 1991 began," said homicide Sgt. David Ramos.

■ High court to hear noisy TV case

AUSTIN — Two state inmates who have complained about noisy televisions in their prison will take their gripe to the Texas Supreme Court.

The Supreme Court on Wednesday agreed to hear oral arguments Dec. 3 in the lawsuit filed by Daniel Johnson and William Biggs.

The inmates sued the prison system, complaining of unconstitutional conditions of confinement because of the noise from five television sets that are located near their cells but are outside their view.

A state district judge in Walker County dismissed their case as a frivolous lawsuit. That decision was upheld by the 14th Court of Appeals.

"Excessive television noise surely does not rise to anything more than mere discomfort or inconvenience," the appeals court ruled in its November 1990 opinion.

The Supreme Court, however, decided without explanation to hear the case.

■ Area man to be named district judge

WASHINGTON — President Bush said Wednesday he will nominate Jorge A. Solis to be U.S. district judge for the Northern District of Texas.

Since 1989, Solis has been a state district court judge. Solis, 40, lives in Abilene.

Tom Steenburg of Water Valley, Alberta, poses with a plaster footprint he says is the sasquatch's, also known as Big Foot.

Man devotes life to search for hairy beast

By Jeffrey Ulbrich
Associated Press Writer

WATER VALLEY, Alberta — It's not that Tom Steenburg is fanatical about the sasquatch, a hairy, man-like creature Americans call Bigfoot. He's merely obsessed.

How else to describe a hobby that consumes all his spare time and, alas, as wife Pam ruefully acknowledges, every bit of spare money?

"It's been an obsession since I was a kid," said Steenburg, a 30-year-old hospital maintenance employee. "My parents hoped I'd grow out of it."

It isn't easy being Alberta's unofficial hunter of the sasquatch, which hundreds of people claim to have seen in the Pacific Northwest. Scientists generally reject the idea of such an animal and the lunatic fringe makes it hard for a serious researcher to be taken seriously.

Steenburg said he spends as much time and effort debunking false sightings and hoaxes as he does in search of the elusive beast.

"I don't believe in it 100 percent because I've never seen one," he said. "You have to be skeptical to do research."

On the other hand, Steenburg noted, he has never seen a wolverine during years of wandering the magnificent western Canadian wilderness in the foot of the Rockies. Yet wolverines exist.

"There is definitely something out there, and that something leaves huge human-like footprints," he said.

The sasquatch comes from Indian legend. Its name is the English version of the Salish word for wild man, or hairy man.

White travelers heard the legend, then hunters and settlers began telling of footprints and sightings.

According to a book by Steenburg, "The Sasquatch in Alberta," the first white man to find evidence was David Thompson, a fur trader and explorer. He recorded in his diary finding huge footprints in ice while crossing the Rocky Mountains near what is now Jasper, Alberta, in January 1811.

Steenburg has investigated more than 100 sightings and interviews each witness with a standard questionaire, including a few curves to weed out the nuts.

"When I know there is an obvious fake, I say so," he said. "I try to disprove the sightings, explain them away. It's the ones I can't disprove that are exciting."

From all accounts, the sasquatch walks upright like a man.

"If the sasquatch is real, it will be a major scientific discovery," Steenburg said. "If it doesn't exist, it has to be studied anyway, because it is an important part of Canadian folklore."

Advice to grads: Seize the day — or else

By Mike Feinsilber
Associated Press Writer

'From this day forward, I charge you to be an individual of consequence.'

— White House assistant Frederick D. McClure at Texas A&M commencement

"I am supposed to tell you graduating seniors what to do with the rest of your lives," physicist-philosopher Freeman J. Dyson told the graduating seniors at Bates College in Lewiston, Maine. "As if I knew."

"Carpe diem," said White House assistant Frederick D. McClure, seizing the opportunity to use a Latin phrase before his fellow Texas A&M Aggies. "Seize the day!"

"You do get out of life pretty much what you put into it, in the long run," Mark McCormack, chief executive officer of International Management Group, assured the graduates at St. Lawrence University in Canton, N.Y. "And you're in it for the long run."

Dyson, a professor at the Institute for Advanced Studies at Princeton, N.J.; McClure, President Bush's assistant for legislative affairs; and businessman McCormack were among a few thousand successful Americans who shared the ritual of delivering commencement addresses to graduating seniors at colleges across the land this May and June.

Elizabeth B. Lacy, a justice of the Virginia Supreme Court told her audience at James Madison University in Harrisonburg, Va.: "Commencement addresses are spring's ritualistic exercise, a brief, bittersweet purgatory between apparent education and presumed employment."

Justice Lacy's advice was down to earth.

"Save an old building."

"Coach a team, any kind of team."

"Recycle everything in sight."

"Read to the young, the old, the blind."

"... Whatever it is, do it with your heart."

McClure offered his "seize the day" counsel to the graduating class of the College of Veterinary Medicine at Texas A&M, his alma mater. The line came from Horace, the Latin poet, by way of the movie, "Dead Poets Society."

"From this day forward," advised McClure, "I charge you to be an individual of consequence."

"Resolve, at any cost, to be true to your best self," Louis W. Sullivan, secretary of health and human services, told seniors at both the University of Miami and the University of Louisville.

Yevgeny Yevtushenko, the Soviet poet, offered brooding advice at Juniata College in Huntingdon, Pa, opening his speech with a startling question:

"Why is it that so many young people commit suicide?"

His answer was that they are prepared, by schools and parents, only for happiness, not for the "science of human suffering."

"Do not be afraid when you suffer," said Yevtushenko. "Remember that full pessimism is no less stupid than full optimism."

In the same dark vein, he went on: "Forget the vulgar, insultingly patronizing fairy tale that has been hammered into your heads since childhood that the main meaning of life is to be happy. The only true happiness is to share the sufferings of the unhappy."

Given the chance to sum up a lifetime's lessons for those just starting out, the speakers put their hearts into it.

Oscar Arias Sanchez, former president of Costa Rica and recipient of the 1987 Nobel Peace Prize, told Washington University graduates in St. Louis that living under a democracy conveys special duties.

"People who live under tyranny are not responsible for the abuses committed by dictators," he said. "People who live in a democracy share the mistakes and victories of their leaders."

Thomas Pickering, the U.S. ambassador to the United Nations, speaking at Willamette University in Salem, Ore., counseled forbearance as Americans watch other countries reach for freedom.

"Americans have benefited from an entire infrastructure of values, rules and institutions we take for granted," he said. "We must remember these took us more than 200 years and a civil war to work out. For a great many other countries, however — including many trying it once again today — the experiment with democracy failed with disastrous consequences. We have a responsibility to help them get it right this time."

At St. Mary's College of Maryland, in St. Mary's City, Benjamin C. Bradlee, executive editor of the Washington Post, offered advice on how to read a newspaper: "skeptically, as a first draft."

"Be patient," he counseled. "You who are so young and so promising are going to outlast all efforts to cover up the truth. Know that and rejoice in it."

An American Humvee field medical vehicle attached to the 82nd Airborne Division crosses the desert in Saudi Arabia.

Humvee goes on sale to war-crazed public

MISHAWAKA, Ind. (AP) — In the market for a rugged car that can climb hills and conquer sand dunes? How about a humvee — the military four-wheel-drive vehicle that won raves in the Persian Gulf War.

As of Wednesday, the humvee, or hummer as it is affectionately known, is available to the public.

"We believe there is a strong market for the hummer for both business and pleasure," said James A. Armour, president of AM General Corp., a division of LTV Corp.

One humvee already has been sold to actor Arnold Schwarzenegger, who signed a lease agreement for a customized model before it was available to the public, Armour said.

The company plans to offer three models of the High Mobility Multipurpose Wheeled Vehicle priced between $40,500 and $44,000. The government pays $26,000 for the basic vehicle.

The commercial version will substitute standard headlights for blackout lights, add interior safety padding and stronger steel doors, include doorlocks, and replace the bullet-resistant roof with a conventional hardtop.

The changes won't affect the humvee's homely appearance, or its performance, Armour said.

"We won't try to beautify the hummer with styling changes at the risk of sacrificing superior off-road performance," he said.

The vehicle's four-wheel drive and eight-cylinder diesel engine enable it to climb a 60-degree grade and maneuver under extremely difficult conditions. It has a top speed of 65 mph.

The company will begin taking orders immediately and plans to begin deliveries next June, Armour said. Projections call for selling 1,000 humvees on the commercial market the first year, with sales estimates ranging from 3,000 to 5,000 vehicles after that.

Approximately 20,000 were sent to the Persian Gulf.

Texas fest play revisits 1917 race riot

Reporter-Telegram Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — Unlike most of the artistic offerings at the relentlessly upbeat Texas Festival here, the play "Camp Logan" focuses on a painful event in Texas history that most people don't know about.

The play, which premiers Thursday night at the Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts, re-creates the events surrounding a 1917 mutiny of the all-black 24th U.S. Infantry Regiment based in Houston.

"This play is about a part of Texas history that most people have no idea about," said the play's co-producer Mike Kaliski, a San Antonio private investigator who began researching the incident in 1982. Of those who do know about it, he added, "most would rather forget about it."

According to Kaliski, black soldiers working on construction jobs at the site of Camp Logan outside Houston had endured weeks of racial hatred and harassment from townspeople and, especially, local police.

Finally, on Aug. 23, 1917, about 100 black infantrymen reached a boiling point, armed themselves and marched on Houston.

In the riot that ensued, 15 whites and four black soldiers were killed.

"Camp Logan" explores the mood of the black soldiers and their views about race relations as the tension builds toward the mutiny.

"This was basically a mutiny against the all-white Houston police department," Kaliski said.

The Army quickly hushed up the incident and summarily tried and hanged 19 of the black soldiers near Salado Creek at Fort Sam Houston in San Antonio. The public learned of the verdict after the black soldiers were buried, and trial transcripts remained sealed for 50 years.

Kaliski, a former San Antonio policeman who left the force in 1976, said it was an event crying out for investigation.

'This was basically a mutiny against the all-white Houston police department.'

— Mike Kaliski, "Camp Logan" co-producer

Kaliski and co-producer Celeste Bedford-Walker, who wrote the play, said in separate interviews that they were staging it to let Americans know the tragic history of the uprising.

"Not even many people in Houston know about this," said Bedford-Walker, who is black. "I think our play will help to teach some lessons about race relations. And I think it speaks to some bad conditions that still exist today ... although they have been alleviated to some extent from back then."

She said she was referring to police brutality and racial hate crimes.

Kaliski said that if the Camp Logan riot "had happened in New York or Boston, instead of Houston, we probably wouldn't have had to do this play," He explained that such an event in those cities would have been recorded in history books.

Kaliski said the play "still has plenty of resonance" for Texans, particularly black military personnel in the San Antonio area.

"These (Camp Logan) guys were hanged not 500 yards from where many black soldiers are training today in San Antonio," he said.

"Things are still tough (racially) in Texas. And things are especially tough in Houston." He referred to the East Texas metropolis as "basically being West Louisiana, a place where (former Ku Klux Klan official) David Duke could still be elected."

Bedford-Walker, a Houston native, has written five previous plays.

Apart from brief runs in Chicago, San Antonio, Austin and Houston, "Camp Logan" has been performed primarily on military bases.

Its run here, said Bedford-Walker, "really shows how far we've come."

The Texas Festival, which began June 11, is the first-ever showcasing here of a single state's arts heritage. It winds up Saturday evening at the Kennedy Center with a performance by the Houston Ballet and a concert featuring Willie Nelson, Nanci Griffith, "Little Joe" Hernandez and Guy Clark.

BRIEF EXPLANATORY STATEMENTS OF PROPOSED

CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENTS

SPECIAL ELECTION
AUGUST 10, 1991

PROPOSITION NO. 1 ON THE BALLOT

Senate Joint Resolution 42 proposes a constitutional amendment that would authorize the newly created county education districts to hold elections to exempt from ad valorem taxation a percentage of the market value of the residence homestead of a married or unmarried adult. The percentage exempted could not exceed 20% of such market value, and the amount exempted could not be less than $5,000. The amendment would also authorize county education districts to hold elections to exempt from ad valorem taxation not less than $3,000 of the market value of the residence homestead of a disabled person or a person sixty-five years of age or older. Finally, the amendment would authorize elections in county education districts for the taxation of certain tangible personal property exempted from ad valorem taxation by the legislature.

The proposed amendment will appear on the ballot as follows:

"The constitutional amendment to allow the voters of a county education district to adopt certain exemptions from the district's ad valorem taxation for residence homesteads and to provide for the taxation of certain tangible personal property."

PROPOSITION NO. 2 ON THE BALLOT

Senate Joint Resolution 5 proposes a constitutional amendment that would allow the legislature to pass general laws authorizing Texas Higher Education Coordinating Board or its successor to issue and sell up to $300 million of general obligation bonds to finance educational loans to students. The maximum net effective interest rate to be borne by the bonds would be set by law. The amendment would also authorize the legislature to provide for the investment of bond proceeds and to establish an interest and sinking fund to pay the bonds and provide for the investment of such fund. Bonds authorized under this amendment would be paid from the first money coming into the treasury in each fiscal year that is not otherwise appropriated by the constitution, less any amount in an interest and sinking fund established at the end of the preceding year that is pledged to the payment of the bonds or interest.

The proposed amendment will appear on the ballot as follows:

"The constitutional amendment providing for the issuance of general obligation bonds to provide educational loans to students."

Public Notice

Southwestern Bell Telephone Company (Company), in accordance with the rules of the Public Utility Commission of Texas (Commission), hereby gives notice of the Company's intent to implement a new schedule of telephone rates in Texas for residence Custom Calling Services, effective August 1, 1991, unless otherwise determined by the Commission. The Company has filed an application with the Commission to restructure and change the rates for certain residence Custom Calling Services.

The Custom Calling Services affected by the Company's application are optional telephone service arrangements that provide the following features: Call Waiting, Call Forwarding, Three Way Calling, Speed Calling 8 and Speed Calling 30.

The Company's proposal would increase the monthly rate for the individual Call Waiting feature from $2.10 to $3.10 for residence customers. Also, the rates for certain combinations of Custom Calling Features (Call Waiting, Call Forwarding, Three-Way Calling and Speed Calling-8) would increase or decrease depending upon the combination of features. In addition, the company proposes to obsolete the optional Custom Calling Service feature Speed Calling 30 for residence customers except for existing customers at their existing locations. Following are the feature combinations and their current and proposed rates.

One Feature Per Line	Current	Proposed
Call Waiting	$2.10	$3.10
Call Forwarding	2.10	2.10
Three-Way Calling	2.10	2.10
Speed Calling-8	2.10	2.10
Two Features Per Line	Current	Proposed
Call Waiting, Call Forwarding	3.75	4.50
Call Waiting, 3-Way Calling	3.70	4.50
Call Waiting, Speed Calling-8	3.70	4.50
Call Forwarding, 3-Way Calling	3.70	3.50
Call Forwarding, Speed Calling-8	3.70	3.50
3-Way Calling, Speed Calling-8	3.70	3.50
Three Features Per Line	Current	Proposed
Call Waiting, Call Forwarding and 3-Way Calling	5.30	5.90
Call Waiting, Call Forwarding and Speed Calling-8	5.30	5.90
Call Waiting, 3-Way Calling and Speed Calling-8	5.30	5.90
Call Forwarding, 3-Way Calling and Speed Calling-8	5.30	4.90
Four Features Per Line	Current	Proposed
Call Waiting, Call Forwarding 3-Way Calling, Speed Calling-8	6.90	7.30
Speed Calling 30	3.20	3.20

*denotes rate decrease

Southwestern Bell's application proposes to obsolete residence Speed Calling 30 except for existing customers at their existing locations.

Most of the Company's residence customers in Texas who subscribe to one or more of the Custom Calling Service features will be affected by the proposed rate restructuring. It is expected that the proposed rate restructuring of Custom Calling Services will increase the Company's annual revenues by $15.9 million, which is an increase of approximately one half of 1 percent in the Company's adjusted revenue for the twelve-month period ending December 1990. The restructuring will result in an increase in the Custom Calling Services rates for approximately 2.5 million residence customers and rate decreases for approximately 15,000 residence customers. Also, the obsolesence of the optional feature Speed Calling 30 will affect approximately 156,000 residence customers.

Persons who wish to intervene or otherwise participate in these proceedings should notify the commission as soon as possible. A request to intervene, participate, or for further information should be mailed to the Public Utility Commission of Texas, 7800 Shoal Creek Boulevard, Suite 400N, Austin, Texas 78757. Further information may also be obtained by calling the Public Utility Commission Public Information Office at (512) 458-0256 or (512) 458-0221 teletypewriter for the deaf.

Rodriguez stars

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Frank Rodriguez of Howard College in Big Spring was named junior college player of the year on Wednesday by Baseball America magazine.

Rodriguez led all junior college players with 26 home runs while batting .450 with 93 RBIs. As a pitcher, he paced the nation's junior colleges with 139 strikeouts while going 14-1 with a 3.14 ERA. He was the most valuable player of the Junior College World Series, tying a tournament record with 33 strikeouts in leading the Hawks to a national title.

Two days later, Rodriguez signed with Boston for a reported $350,000 bonus as the Red Sox' 1990 second-round draft choice.

Galloway hired

ABILENE (AP) — Abilene Christian University has named Scott Galloway as its new assistant men's basketball coach.

Galloway, of Denton, was former head coach at Central High School in San Angelo and at Fredericksburg, according to an ACU statement released Tuesday.

University officials said they are resuming a junior varsity program in men's basketball, which Galloway will coach in addition to assisting head coach Tony Mauldin with recruiting and coaching for the varsity team.

Chaps land net honors

■ Tonny van de Pieterman and Myriam Berthe are named No. 1 singles players by the Volvo Tennis/Collegiate Rankings.

Staff Report

Midland College had both of the nation's best junior college tennis players during the 1990-91 season, according to a final poll conducted by the Volvo Tennis/Collegiate Rankings.

Van de Pieterman

Berthe

Sophomore Tonny van de Pieterman and freshmen Myriam Berthe, as champions of their respective number one singles divisions in national tournaments, will be honored by Tennis magazine in New York City during the U. S. Open Tennis Tournament.

The vote was taken by the junior college ranking committee of the Intercollegiate Tennis Coaches Association.

"Last year Sharla Barone won the NJCAA number one singles title and was selected for this honor, but to have both the top man and the top woman in one year is unique," said MC tennis coach Joe Williams.

The 1991 MC women's squad won its second straight NJCAA team title last month, then took all six singles and all three doubles championships to make it a clean sweep. In the NJCAA championships at Tyler, the Chaparral women won the team title without losing a set, then lost just two sets in capturing all the individual championships.

Berthe had a record of 45-3 at the number one singles position for Midland College. She lost to a Division I NCAA player in her fourth match of the season, then lost to a top-ten NCAA player at the Rolex ITCA National Collegiate Indoor championship.

Two days earlier, in Minneapolis, she had won the Rolex ITCA Small College Indoor women's singles title and then became the first NJCAA player to win a match at the National Intercollegiate Indoors.

Her last loss of the season came in January, when she was defeated by teammate Seiko Ichioka in the title match for the ITCA National Junior College Indoor Championships in Midland.

Tonny van de Pieterman, who played for the Chaparrals' 1989 NJCAA championship team, returned this spring after being out for a year. He compiled a 25-4 record, with three of the losses to NCAA Division I players.

He has accepted a full scholarship to play for the University of Miami, Fla., next season.

"Since we had just one sophomore in our women's lineup, we have a chance to be even stronger next season," Williams said.

In the final rankings, freshman Seiko Ichioka is rated number three. She won the NJCAA Flight 2 singles title and had a season record of 23-2, losing to Berthe in the NJCAA National Indoor championship match and retiring with an ankle injury while leading her opponent 5-3 at a match in Las Cruces, N.M.

MC's only sophomore, Janneke Garos, finished the year with the NJCAA flight three singles title and a record of 33-5. She is ranked number five in the nation. Three of her five losses were to Berthe (2) and Ichioka (1). She has accepted a full scholarship to play for the University of Arkansas next season.

ADRIANA ISAZA, another freshman, came at mid-term and won the NJCAA flight four crown. She had a 22-0 record and finishes with a national 10th place ranking.

Freshman Boba Tzvetkova also arrived at mid-term. She won the NJCAA flight five title and ended the season with a record of 23-4.

Freshman Caroline Reynolds finished the season ranked 16th. She won the NJCAA flight six and was 27-7 for the year, winning her last 14 matches.

The Volvo/ITCA list places Berthe and Garos number one in junior college doubles. They won the NJCAA flight one title and posted a 25-2 record, with losses only to UT-San Antonio and Southern Methodist.

Isaza and Tzvetkova, who won the NJCAA flight two title, had a 13-1 record with their only loss to Berthe-Garos. They were not ranked.

Reynolds and Ichioka were paired for only seven matches, but they won all of them, including the NJCAA flight three championships. They ended up ranked 16th.

Among the men's teams, the Chaps finished the year ranked third, which was their finish in the NJCAA national team championships. Among other individuals, Greg Muller was ranked eighth, David Draper was 10th, Toby Curtis was 31st, Berhe Serekebrhan was 32nd, and Robin Van Beveren was 49th. All are freshman, although Muller will not return in the fall.

Muller lost in the flight two semifinals and finished with a record of 33-9. Draper was 28-9 and flight three runner-up.

Texas Ranger pitcher Jose Guzman, who is returning from a torn rotator cuff, takes to the mound against Kansas City in search for a second straight victory.

Gibson, Royals rout Texas, 15-2

ARLINGTON (AP) — Kirk Gibson hit a grand slam — his first in 203 career home runs — as the Kansas City Royals got a season-high 20 hits Wednesday night and beat the Texas Rangers 15-2.

Gibson homered off reliever Joe Bitker in a five-run sixth as the Royals sent 11 men to the plate and took a 9-1 lead. Before the hit, Gibson had the most home runs without a grand slam in major league history.

Kevin Seitzer, Kurt Stillwell and George Brett had three hits each as the Royals set a season-high in runs. Kansas City has scored nine or more runs in four consecutive games.

Storm Davis went three innings for his first save since April 10, 1984, when he pitched for Baltimore against Kansas City.

Hector Wagner (1-0), recalled Tuesday from Class AAA Omaha of the American Association, allowed two runs and four hits in six innings in his first major league decision. He struck out four and walked none as the Royals moved out of last place for the first time since April 28.

Jose Guzman (1-3) allowed six runs and seven hits in five innings, struck out six and walked five.

Kansas City, which won for the 10th time in 15 games, took the lead in the first on Brett's RBI double and Seitzer's run-scoring single. Seitzer added an RBI single in the third and Stillwell homered in the fourth for a 4-0 lead. It was his second in two games and his fourth this year.

Texas pulled to 4-1 in the bottom of the inning when Stillwell's throwing error at shortstop allowed Steve Buechele to score from second. Rafael Palmeiro hit his seventh home run in the sixth.

Brother Bob, another Ryan

■ Bob Ryan is definitely not the doting brother of baseball's superstar.

By David Whitley
The San Antonio Light

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Bob Ryan was like everybody else on June 11, 1990. He didn't think Nolan Ryan would ever throw another no-hitter.

He watched the first seven innings on television in his North San Antonio home. As the world grew spellbound with every pitch, Nolan's only brother yawned and packed it in for the night.

"It looked like a no-hitter, but it wasn't one of those things you put a lot of faith in," Bob said. "So I went to bed."

An hour later, his son woke him up, and he watched his brother put the finishing touches on his first no-hitter in nine years and sixth overall.

Bob Ryan didn't have much trouble getting back to sleep that night. He got up the next morning to a world buzzing over Nolan. But as usual, Bob did not chime in.

He went through his day speaking of the no-hitter only when someone brought it up. If people hadn't already figured it out, Bob wasn't going to start telling them he was you-know-who's brother.

"That's not my occupation in life," he said.

Bob knows it's a life some would kill for. Like the guy who asked Bob if he could get him a pair of Nolan's socks. Certainly the person who paid $6,250 for one of Nolan Ryan's caps might gloat a bit if his brother had thrown seven no-hitters.

"People hold him up as this perfect person," Bob said. "I see the flaws and blemishes. I see him as a normal human being who happens to be very good at what he does.

"But I look at him with the criticalness of a brother. I feel like saying, 'Look guys, this is not Moses. He is not going to lead us into the Promised Land. He's got problems, too.'"

A doting brother definitely is not one of them.

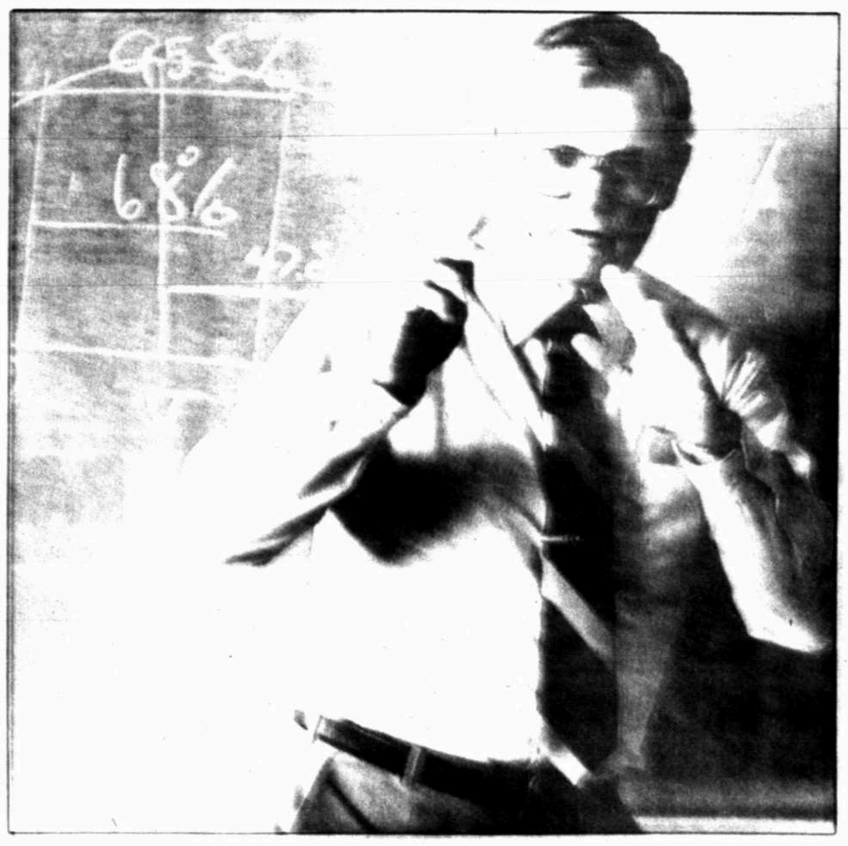

Bob lives with his wife, Nancy, in a one-story house on a big, shady lot on the north side. Their two grown sons have left a couple of posters of their famous uncle in their old rooms.

Somewhere there are a couple of autographed baseballs, including one from his fifth no-hitter. The only other hint of Nolan in the house is Bob.

At 50, he looks more than six years older than his brother. The facial resemblance is there, but it's somewhat obscured by Bob's graying hair and wire-rim glasses.

In his day, Bob could throw thunder-

Dravecky thanks fans

NEW YORK (AP) — Former major league pitcher Dave Dravecky asked for continued prayers from his fans Wednesday following the amputation of his left arm and shoulder.

In a statement released by Memorial Sloan-Kettering Cancer Center, where the surgery was performed Tuesday by Dr. Murray Brennan, Dravecky thanked fans for their concern.

"Your prayers truly have been felt," the statement said. "We have experienced such peace that it is amazing. We are truly thankful for the wonderful care we have received at Memorial Sloan-Kettering. We are thankful that God has placed us in the hands of such a fine surgeon as Dr. Murray Brennan."

Sealy Yates, Dravecky's agent, said he spoke with Dravecky on Wednesday and characterized him as being "upbeat."

"Dave said it was wonderful not to be in pain anymore," Yates said.

"Dave and his family are doing well. They see this development as a relief as much as anything. They just want Dave to get well."

Dr. Brennan is chairman of the Department of Surgery at Sloan-Kettering, which pioneered limb preservation procedures for sarcomas such as Dravecky's. Amputation, necessary in 50 percent of the cases during the 1970's, is only rarely required now, the hospital said.

There had been some hope that the arm could be saved, but according to Dravecky's father, the decision was made to proceed with the amputation following two late tests.

The amputation was performed during a 2½ hour operation, which the hospital said proceeded as planned. According to the hospital, the surgery was necessary "due to progressive pain and loss of function."

Cancer was first diagnosed in Dravecky's arm in 1988 and he underwent surgery Oct. 7 of that year.

AL: Twins back on track

(From 1D)

Twins 8, Orioles 4

BALTIMORE — Gregg Olson threw three wild pitches in the ninth inning, fueling a five-run rally that led Minnesota past Baltimore.

The Twins, who had a 15-game winning streak snapped Monday night, used four hits, three wild pitches and an error by Olson to win for the 20th time in 22 games.

Jack Morris (9-5), who went the distance for the fourth time this season, has won six straight games. He has not lost since May 19.

Olson (0-3) suffered his first-ever loss at Memorial Stadium.

Trailing 4-3, the Twins began their comeback when Brian Harper and Gene Larkin singled. Mike Pagliarulo followed with an RBI single.

One out later, the runners moved up on a wild pitch and pinch-hitter Randy Bush was walked intentionally to load the bases. Olson threw another wild pitch, allowing the go-ahead run to score. Olson retrieved the ball and threw wildly to home, allowing another run to score.

Olson's third wild pitch made it 7-4, and after Shane Mack walked, Kirby Puckett capped the rally with an RBI single.

The Orioles turned back the clock to 1966, dressing in uniforms they wore the year they first won the World Series. However, the Twins scored three runs after Jeff Robinson retired the first two batters in the first inning.

Athletics 5, Tigers 4

DETROIT — Jose Canseco and Mark McGwire homered together for the second time in four games as Oakland ended a three-game losing streak.

Oakland scored in each of the first three innings. Canseco then hit his 14th homer in the fifth and McGwire hit his 12th in the eighth. The two hadn't homered in the same game until last Sunday at Milwaukee.

Cecil Fielder had three RBIs for the Tigers, who left the bases loaded in the second and third innings and stranded 13 runners.

Gene Nelson (1-1), the second of five Oakland pitchers, pitched three innings of one-hit, one-run relief for his first victory since last Aug. 18. Dennis Eckersley got four outs for his 19th save in 21 chances.

Walt Terrell (3-7) gave up four runs and 10 hits in 4⅔ innings, only the fourth time in 15 starts he failed to pitch at least five innings.

Rickey Henderson doubled to start the game and scored on a two-out single by Harold Baines, breaking a 19-inning scoreless streak for the A's.

Angels 4, Brewers 1

MILWAUKEE — Jim Abbott allowed no runs over seven innings, leading California over Milwaukee.

Abbott (6-5) won for the sixth time in his last seven decisions, allowing five hits over seven innings while striking out seven and walking four.

Mark Eichhorn went 1⅓ innings, allowing two hits in the ninth, including Dale Sveum's RBI double. Brian Harvey got the final two outs for his 17th save.

Yankees 3, Blue Jays 0

TORONTO — Steve Howe got his first save in four seasons and Jeff Johnson got his first major league victory as New York beat Toronto and sent the Blue Jays to their fourth consecutive loss.

Jimmy Key (10-3) lost for the first time in eight starts since May 7. Key, who had won six consecutive decisions, allowed 10 hits in eight innings, struck out six and walked none. Kevin Mass' RBI groundout in the eighth ended Key's scoreless streak at 20 innings.

The Yankees won their second straight after a six-game losing streak, finishing the six-hitter with Howe, suspended six times for drug and alcohol abuse. Howe, whose last save had been on Sept. 12, 1987, for Texas against California, pitched a perfect ninth, striking out two.

The game drew 50,281, Toronto's 12th consecutive sellout and 19th this season.

Mariners 4, Red Sox 3

BOSTON — Roger Clemens continued to struggle and Seattle scored three unearned runs with the help of two Boston errors.

Clemens (9-4) lost for the fourth time since starting the season 6-0, allowing nine hits in 7⅔ innings. He walked a season-high six and struck out three, equalling his season low. Clemens had beaten Seattle six straight times since May 11, 1987, and is 9-3 lifetime against the Mariners.

Seattle starter Rich DeLucia was chased after 4⅔ innings, and Russ Swan (3-1) got the victory with 2⅓ innings of one-hit relief. Mike Jackson got two outs for his 11th save.

Boston, which lost its third straight, took a 2-0 lead in the first on Jack Clark's two-run homer, his ninth of the season.

Indians 4, White Sox 3

CHICAGO — Cleveland ended a six-game losing streak as Carlos Baerga drove in two runs with a homer and a single.

Charles Nagy (3-7) gave up seven hits and three runs in five innings. Rod Nichols allowed two hits in four innings for his first major league save.

Greg Hibbard (4-6) allowed in four runs and eight hits in eight innings for the White Sox, who have lost six of their last eight games.

Montreal extends streak to six

Associated Press

National League

MONTREAL — Pitcher Mark Gardner broke an 0-for-27 drought with an RBI single and allowed five hits in seven innings as the Montreal Expos extended their winning streak to six games by beating the Houston Astros 3-1 on Wednesday night.

The victory gave Montreal its second straight series sweep and helped the Expos conclude their nine-game homestand with a 7-2 record.

Gardner (3-3) struck out four and walked two as he won for the third time in four decisions to outduel Pete Harnisch (4-5), who allowed only five hits in seven innings. Harnisch struck out six and walked two.

Jeff Fassero pitched the last two innings for his second save.

The game was scoreless in the bottom of the fifth when Mike Fitzgerald singled with one out. Fitzgerald stole second with two outs and the Astros intentionally walked Tom Foley to get to Gardner, a career .092 hitter.

But Gardner, who hadn't had a hit since last July 17 and was 0-for-15 this season, spoiled the strategy with a single that scored Fitzgerald. Foley also scored when left fielder Luis Gonzalez's throw got away from catcher Craig Biggio.

Ivan Calderon hit his eighth homer of the season in the sixth for a 3-0 lead.

Houston got its only run in the seventh on Jeff Bagwell's leadoff single, a groundout and Casey Candaele's RBI single.

Braves 9, Phillies 2

PHILADELPHIA — Tom Glavine got his 11th victory but lost his complete game when he was ejected in a brushback war as Atlanta broke a five-game losing streak.

Glavine allowed just four hits through eight innings with a career-high 12 strikeouts before he was tossed out of the game by homeplate umpire Bob Davidson for throwing at Dale Murphy leading off the ninth.

In the top half of the inning, Phillies reliever Roger McDowell was ejected for hitting Otis Nixon in the shoulder after Terry Pendleton had driven in a two-out run with a single.

Joe Boever came in to pitch for Philadelphia and walked David Justice, loading the bases. Jeff Blauser then doubled for three more runs.

Glavine threw four pitches to Murphy, each progressively closer. On the fourth pitch, Murphy had to jump to get out of the way, and Glavine was immediately ejected. Juan Berenguer replaced Glavine.

The walk was only Glavine's third of the game, and both Philadelphia runs were unearned. Glavine also had three singles, two of them driving in runs.

Justice hit a two-run homer for Atlanta and boosted his RBI total to 51, tops in the National League.

After the Phillies took a 1-0 lead in the second on Charlie Hayes' RBI double, Atlanta scored four runs in the fourth, knocking out Philadelphia starter Terry Mulholland (6-7).

Lonnie Smith led off with a triple and scored ahead of Justcie's 11th home run of the year. Blauser singled and came around on Greg Olson's one-out double. Glavine's two-out single scored Olson.

Reds 7, Mets 6

NEW YORK — Super sub Chris Jones sliced a two-run, pinch-hit triple as Cincinnati took advantage of David Cone's sore shoulder and beat New York.

Rob Dibble got the last four outs, three on strikeouts, to stay perfect in 19 save chances as the Reds won the finale of the three-game series and denied the Mets their first home sweep of the season.

Paul O'Neill hit a two-run homer and Todd Benzinger tripled, doubled and singled for the Reds. Kip Gross (1-0), acquired with Randy Myers in the trade that sent John Franco to the Mets, pitched two innings and won his first major league decision.

Cone (6-5) was leading 4-3 in the sixth inning when Hal Morris singled with one out and Luis Quinones singled with two outs. After throwing a ball to Jeff Reed, Cone left the game because of muscle stiffness in his right shoulder.

Cone was examined by team doctor James Parkes and the injury was described as not serious. It did, however, hurt the Mets.

Cardinals 3, Giants 2

SAN FRANCISCO — Jose DeLeon won his first game in a month and slumping Rich Gedman hit a two-run homer to give St. Louis a sweep of the three-game series.

DeLeon (3-5) fell behind on a first-inning homer by Will Clark, but only allowed another unearned run in winning for the first time since May 22. He went seven innings and gave up five hits with seven strikeouts and no walks. Lee Smith worked the final 1⅓ innings for his 18th save which tied him for the National League lead with Cincinnati's Rob Dibble.

Padres 6, Pirates 5

SAN DIEGO — Tim Teufel's second clutch hit of the game, a two-run, two-out single in the eighth inning, gave San Diego a victory over Pittsburgh.

Tony Fernandez and Tony Gwynn opened the eighth with singles off reliever Neal Heaton (0-1). Vicente Palacios replaced Heaton and walked Fred McGriff to load the bases with one out. Benito Santiago struck out but Teufel singled past second baseman Jose Lind to drive in Fernandez and Gwynn to avoid a three-game sweep.

Larry Andersen (2-0) worked the final two innings in relief of Andy Benes, and won despite allowing the Pirates to take the lead with two runs in the top of the eighth.

Bonds hit his team-leading eighth homer, a drive just beyond the reach of left fielder Jerald Clark, followed Bobby Bonilla's single to tie the game at 2-2 in the second inning.

Hopkins earns scholarship

Staff Report

Hopkins

Tracey Hopkins, who won the District 4-5A girls singles championship last spring, has signed a scholarship agreement to play tennis at Southeast Missouri State.

SEMO, located in Cape Girardeau, Mo., plays NCAA Division I tennis in the Ohio Valley Conference. Hopkins received one athletic and two academic scholarships to constitute a full scholarship.

Hopkins is ranked 14th in the 18 Girls Singles Super Championship Division in Texas. She was named last spring as Midland High's most outstanding overall player in tennis.

Vidmar nails down seventh win

Staff Report

WICHITA, Kan. — Don Vidmar allowed just two runs through six innings for his seventh win of the season and Walt McConnell hit his second home run in as many days as the Midland Angels defeated Wichita, 5-2, in Texas League action Wednesday afternoon.

The Angels' win was their second straight at Lawrence Dumont Stadium after losing their first seven of the season in Kansas.

Vidmar raised his record to 7-1 as an Angel, scattering eight Wrangler hits.

"Tuesday night and Wednesday, we've had some good pitching," Angel manager Don Long said. "Todd James threw the ball well and Vidmar came back well on three days rest."

Two innings before his home run that put the Angels up 4-2, McConnell singled to right to score Reggie Williams. Williams' run put the Angels up for good 3-2 in the third.

The Angels took a 2-0 lead in the top of the first after Reggie Williams walked and scored on a double by Mark Howie. The hot hitting Angel first baseman moved to third on a single by McConnell and scored when Kevin Flora grounded into a fielder's choice.

Midland scored another single run in the ninth when Ramon Sambo scored on a sacrifice fly by Angel catcher Frank Dominguez.

The Angels improved to 29-37 with two games remaining in the first half race.

Midland and Wichita continue their series with the fifth of six games today at 7 p.m. The special start time in Wichita Wednesday was a result of a weekly Businessman's Special the Wranglers have. Throughout the 1991 season, every Wednesday home game is a noon start.

RANKINGS: Ameel No. 27

(From 1D)

Curtis was 33-13 and flight four runner-up. Serekebrhan was 24-6 and flight five champion. Van Beveren was 33-10 and flight six champion.

In Volvo/ITCA doubles rankings, Muller and van de Pieterman were second among NJCAA teams, national runners-up with a record of 14-1.

Curtis-Draper were listed fifth, 24-4 and flight two national champions. Jerod White, sophomore from San Angelo, and van Beveren were listed 15th.

They were 15-1 and won the NJCAA flight three championship. White will be attending Southwest Texas State University on an academic scholarship. Sophomore Richard Patte, who did not play in the NJCAA tournament, has accepted a full tennis scholarship to play for West Texas State University. Freshman Tom Erik Brun, who won the NJCAA flight seven singles, also returns for the Chaps next fall.

Former Midland High player Elizabeth Ameel ranked number 27 in singles for Tyler Junior College and number 10 in doubles with Debbie Poole.

BROTHER: Last thing Nolan needs is another fan bolts at petrified little leaguers. Only unlike Nolan, Bob's right arm did not prove immune to the laws of nature.

He blew out his shoulder playing football in junior college, joined the Air Force, got married, raised his kids and retired as a colonel after 26 years.

Bob is now an assistant professor at Incarnate Word College and is working on his doctorate in human resource development at Texas-Austin.

He has a masters degree in statistics and quantitative analysis. He owns a horse, three dogs and a cat.

Add everything up and Bob is not unlike millions of other men who have led productive lives and slid comfortably into their middle years.

Like some of them, he has occasionally wondered what it would be like to be Nolan. But perhaps unlike most of them, Bob doesn't regret that he's not.

"What he's done is so phenomenal," Bob said. "And then you stop to think, well here I had the same parents. What's so different from him and I? What's so different?"

One difference is that Nolan lives in a fishbowl Bob wants no part of. He realizes any pitcher with more than 300 wins and 5,000 strikeouts warrants attention.

And nobody has to tell him that his brother is more than just a baseball player. In baseball's Age of Canseco, Nolan trails only motherhood and apple pie as a symbol of American values.

Bob said his brother's Good Guy visage is not an act, though he has seen a little slippage as the millions have rolled in.

"He's still in a pickup truck. His concession might be that he's in a nice pickup truck with a mobile phone in it," Bob said. "It's kind of remarkable that he's not caught up more in the fast lifestyle, the glamorous, 'Here I am, Mr. Wonderful-type' thing.

"I think it's kind of sad because of the emphasis our society puts on our sports heroes. I think it's all the wrong emphasis," Bob said. "And it's not Nolan's fault. He doesn't seek it, but there's nothing he can do about it."

All Bob can do is sit back and treat Nolan like a brother. The last thing he needs is another fan.

"I've always said that I wouldn't mind having his money," Bob said, "but I wouldn't want his lifestyle."

Not to mention his socks.

"They stink," he said. "They're my brother's socks, and they smell just like everybody else's."

Thomas has key role in Royals' victory

Staff Report

Little League

Jody Thomas hit a home run to tie the game in the fourth inning and was balked in with the winning run in the sixth as the North Central Royals defeated the Mid City Orioles, 11-10, in losers' bracket action of the Little League City Championship tournament Wednesday night at Lancaster Park.

The loss spelled the elimination of the Orioles from the tournament.

In winners' bracket action, the Mid City No. 1 Angels defeated the North Central No. 1 Astros, 5-2, a game that was scoreless until the top of the fifth. That left the Angels as the only unbeaten team in the tournament.

In today's game, the North Central Astros will meet the North Central Royals. Both teams have lost one game already; the loser of the 6 p.m. contest faces elimination, while the winner will meet the Mid City Angels Friday at 6 p.m.

Should Mid City Angels lose the Friday contest, a Saturday 'if' game will be played at 10 a.m.

All "A" League tournament games are being played at Lancaster Field, on Kansas St.

Timberwolves land coach

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Jimmy Rodgers' seat on the Minnesota Timberwolves' bench won't be quite as hot as the one he occupied for two years in Boston Garden.

Nevertheless, he knows that the goal of every team — from the glorious green-clad Celtics to the tenderfoot-green Timberwolves — is winning.

"I think pressure is the healthiest thing in the world, whether it's to win championships in Boston or to build an eventual contender somewhere else," said Rodgers, who on Wednesday was named the second coach in the Timberwolves history. He received a three-year contract, more than $600,000 of which will be paid by the Celtics.

"I think high expectations are good," Rodgers said. "People here have a burning desire to win, too.

"What will be looked at here is the development of the program, how this team responds. Obviously, winning is what we're all about. But I think that also this is a little unique situation in that this franchise is only 2 years old. The main thing we're going to be looking at is trying to grow. We've got to grow. We've got to get better. We've got to move on to the next level.

"Expansion, I'm not saying that you completely eliminate that from your vocabulary, but at some point you've got to start weaning yourself away from that type of thinking in order to improve the mental state of your team so that you're not using that as a crutch."

Rodgers' predecessor, Bill Musselman, was fired April 22 after two stormy years because management thought he wanted to win at the expense of building for the future.

Conversely, Rodgers was fired May 8, 1990, from his only other head coaching job because he didn't win enough for Boston.

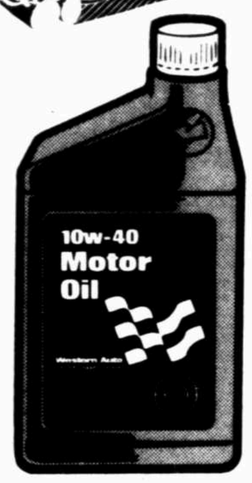

Rodgers, 48, had a 94-70 regular-season record over two seasons, but his Celtics lost in the first round of the playoffs both years. His eight seasons as a loyal assistant meant nothing when he couldn't coach the Celtics to championships.

"Obviously, when you move over 6 or 7 inches from one chair to another, the chair gets a little hotter. The expectations are different," he said of his transition from assistant to head coach. "But I have a good image of myself. I have to say I feel good about what I did in the two years I was head coach. What I learned was that my system was sound and the way I dealt with people was sound."

Musselman won 51 games over two years — beyond the Timberwolves' wildest dreams as a new franchise.

Prices hurt gas industry

Producers hit hard

By Dirk Beveridge
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — These are devastating times for people who produce natural gas, touted by many as the cheap, environmentally sound energy source of the future.

The problem for producers is that gas is too cheap, with prices at the lowest level since the 1960s. And prices are still falling, even though many in the industry have been giving up and shutting their wells.

The bleak short-term outlook for natural gas prices was underscored Wednesday when Columbia Gas System Inc. projected a $1 billion loss on its natural gas supply contracts. The Wilmington, Del., corporation said it could be forced into bankruptcy if banks refuse to restructure its credit lines.

Columbia is locked into contracts with suppliers that force it to pay up to four times the going rate for gas.

The average price for gas at the wellhead has fallen below $1.20 per 1,000 cu-

NEW YORK — Columbia Gas System Inc., one of the leading suppliers of natural gas to utilities in the Northeast, has suspended dividend payments and said it might seek bankruptcy court protection unless it could renegotiate contracts with gas producers and bankers.

On the news, the company's shares lost 40 percent of their value. The stock's opening on the New York Stock Exchange was delayed Wednesday, pending the announcement. Columbia's share price later opened at $20 before closing at $20.75, off $13.75. With 4.4 million shares traded, the stock was the most active Big Board issue.

The plunge helped send the whole stock market down, with the Dow industrials losing 31.31, to 2,955.50.

There should be no immediate effect on consumers. Spot markets determine the price paid by local utilities, and the majority of the gas Columbia ships is for these companies. Even if it files for bankruptcy, the company anticipates operating under court protection.

The company blamed warm weather in recent years for depressing gas prices on spot markets, leaving it locked into contracts to buy gas at much higher prices set years ago when supplies were

Yeltsin rekindles optimism

By Anne Pearson
Hearst News Service

HOUSTON — Muscovites aren't the only ones cheering last week's popular election of Boris Yeltsin to the newly created post of Russian president.

American oil companies that have been trying for years to strike oil and gas deals with the Soviets are counting on Yeltsin to unravel the red tape and end the indecision that have snagged Western-financed projects worth tens of billions of dollars.

The daring crusader for a free-market economy in Russia is expected to wield enormous power in the Soviet Union's quest to reform and rescue itself from economic oblivion. Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev has offered to let the republics call more of the shots in the future, and Yeltsin can't wait to do just that.

Because the overwhelming majority of Soviet oil reserves are in Yeltsin's territory, he is a key figure for oil companies.

"This election is a critical milestone in the process," said Mike Stinson, Conoco's vice president for exploration and production. Conoco has proposed three proposed projects for the Soviet Union worth several billion dollars each.

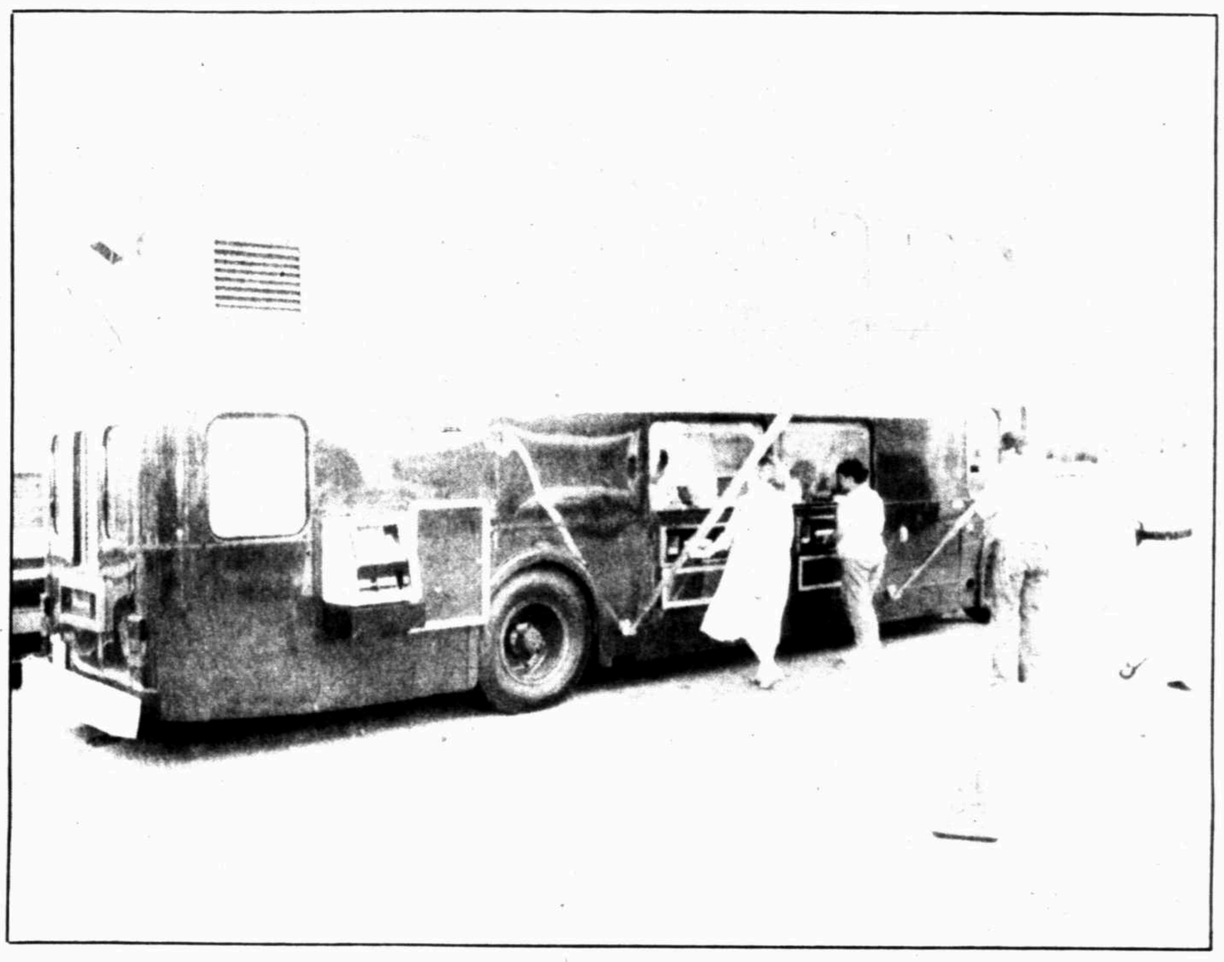

Conoco President Constantine "Dino" Nicandros came home from a meeting with Yeltsin in mid-May convinced that the Russian leader can and will accelerate reforms and pass laws that would-be Western partners need before they start writing checks and getting to work, Stinson said.

It's been a little frustrating, Stinson said, because the Soviets haven't nailed down the rules of the game or decided who has the right to sign on the dotted line. Important issues such as how much tax rates will be and who owns the oil resources — the central or local governments — remain unresolved, he added.

Jack Brougher, Soviet affairs director for the Commerce Department, said one of the toughest parts is "getting a decision one can count on" from the government.

"The bigger the project, the harder it is to get a decision from all the levels involved, particularly the central government," Brougher said.

Yeltsin is visiting Washington this week for talks with President Bush, Cabinet members and top business leaders on how the United States can work with the Soviets to revamp their economy.

Texas watches bank overhaul bill

N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — Gov. Ann Richards' trip to Washington last weekend was more than just a social visit.

In addition to her high-profile roast at the Sheraton-Washington Hotel and attendance at a gala for the Kennedy Center's Texas Festival, Richards met with House Speaker Thomas Foley, D-Wash. High on her agenda, say aides, was the bank overhaul bill that the House Banking Committee takes up Wednesday.

Richards' personal involvement illustrates the intense interest stirred in political and financial circles by the Treasury Department's proposed revamping of financial institutions.

The bill was substantially revised by the Banking Committee's subcommittee on financial institutions and now will be re-worked by the full Banking Committee, chaired by Rep. Henry B. Gonzalez, D-San Antonio.

The bill comes at a time of public preoccupation with the troubles of the banking system, as bank failures hit an all-time high and as estimates for replenishing the bank insurance fund continue to escalate.

Treasury Secretary Nicholas Brady maintains that reforms have to be attached to the engine of recapitalization so that the entire system can be modernized.

Critics counter that giving banks expanded powers opens the door to excesses that destroyed the savings and loan industry and required a taxpayer bailout that might hit $500 billion.

The bill that the committee will consider today and over at least four days recapitalizes the dwindling bank insurance fund by $70 billion; enforces payments of no more than $100,000 deposit insurance in bank failures; allows banks to expand across state lines; and expands bank powers to permit financial services holding companies to affiliate with securities firms.

The $70 billion in funding would not constitute a bailout, note Treasury Department officials, since the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. will borrow $25 billion from the U.S. government and the banks will pay it back in higher premiums.

The FDIC will be also able to leverage its equity and borrow an additional $45 billion.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Value of inherited stock set by settlement

By Bill Doyle

Q. Following the death of my brother last fall, I inherited certain securities through his will. In the spring of this year, I sold some of those securities.

Doyle

When I file my 1991 income tax return and report either a capital gain or a capital loss on each of the securities sold, will the "basis" — cost for tax purposes — of each security be its value on the date of my brother's death? Or do I have an optional date to use, inasmuch as the probate process delayed my obtaining the securities until early spring this year?

A. The basis of an inherited security is the value established when the estate is settled. In almost all cases, that is the market value on the date of death of the person who left the security.

The Internal Revenue Code does contain a provision for an alternate valuation date of inherited property. But that alternate date comes into play only if it also is used to put a value on the estate for federal estate tax purposes.

Assuming the date your brother died was used to tabulate the value of what he left in order to calculate what estate tax, if any, was due, your basis on each of the securities you inherited is its market value on that date of death.

The executor of the estate should tell you which valuation date was used to settle the estate and pay any "death" tax due.

Your capital gain or capital loss on each of those securities you sold, of course, is the difference between your basis and the proceeds from the sale — the selling price, minus commission and any other sales expenses.

Q. We bought a few shares of stock at $10 per share some 20 years ago. The shares now are worth a great deal more. My husband and I would like to give them to our two children.

If we do this and the children sell the shares, will their basis be the $10 or the new higher value?

A. It will be $10 per share. When gift stock is sold at a profit, the recipient's basis is the donor's basis. Your basis was $10 a share. Your children's basis on the stock you give them will be the same.

When gift stock is sold at a loss, the recipient's basis is the donor's basis or the market value on the date of the gift, whichever is lower.

Q. I am custodian for my daughter's investments. These are utility stocks, with good returns, registered in my name, as custodian for her name, under the gift to minors act.

The problem is she soon will be 21, when the investments will come under her sole control. She has demonstrated lack of maturity and responsibility in handling money under her control by recklessly withdrawing and spending every dime on frivolities. Since the investments were intended for her college education, I would like to protect them for that purpose.

What can I do to with the investments to discourage her from cashing them and quitting school to travel on her college money?

A. Other than providing parental guidance and attempting to convince the young lady that would be a horribly foolish thing, there's nothing you can do.

The gifts to minors acts of all 50 states and the District of Columbia, as well as the newer transfer to minors acts in force in many states, are specific on this point.

The custodian is required to transfer the custodial property into the former minor's name alone when he or she reaches the age of majority, which varies from 18 to 21 in different states.

In the case of stock, that's done through the transfer agent, whose correct name and address appears in each company's annual report to stockholders. As custodian, you have a fiduciary responsibility to do just that.

You are faced with a situation that is unfortunate but far from unique. Over the years, many letters have come in telling how new adults squandered their gift to minors accounts on low-slung, high-powered speedsters and worse.

Supply up

NEW YORK (AP) — Energy futures fell across the board Wednesday, in a sell-off that began on news that the nation's supply of gasoline was growing.

Light sweet crude oil for delivery in July settled at $19.99 per barrel, down 14 cents, at the New York Mercantile Exchange.

Unleaded gasoline for delivery in July settled at 61.86 cents a gallon, down .94 cent. Home heating oil for delivery in July settled at 53.63 cents a gallon, down .26 cent.

"It was pretty ugly," said Ed Kevelson, an oil trader at Dean Witter Reynolds Inc.

Natural gas prices hit record lows as supply continues to outpace demand. Gas for delivery in July closed at $1.215 per 1,000 cubic feet, down 3.0 cents.

"Prices continue to erode," Kevelson said.

The market's decline began Wednesday with traders selling gasoline on news that the nation's supply was up sharply. For a while, crude prices held their own, but soon all the energy futures began falling, largely for technical reasons.

Market drops

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market took its sharpest drop in more than five weeks Wednesday, beset once again by interest-rate worries.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials dropped 31.31 points to 2,955.50, for its largest loss since it fell 37.57 points on May 14.

Declining issues outnumbered advances by nearly 3 to 1 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed stocks, with 414 up, 1,156 down and 471 unchanged.

Volume on the floor of the Big Board came to 156.18 million shares as of 4 p.m. EDT, against 154.92 million at the same point Tuesday. In after-hours trading at the exchange, an additional 3.55 million changed hands.

Dollar Falls

NEW YORK (AP) — The dollar ended broadly lower Wednesday, pushed down by technical factors, economic concerns and fears that world leaders may try to stem the currency's recent rally.

Gold was slightly higher in New York after falling overseas.

Traders said the dollar opened on a bearish note in New York after failing to overcome a key psychological upper limit against the German mark in overseas markets.

Dollar sales continued on speculation that this Sunday's meeting in London of the Group of Seven major industrial nations may result in a concerted effort to keep the dollar down.

NEW YORK STOCK EXCHANGE

ANALYSIS

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market showed a broad loss today in selling ascribed partly to interest-rate worries.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials fell 29.97 points to 2,956.84 by 2 p.m. on Wall Street.

Losers outnumbered gainers by more than 3 to 1 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues, with 362 up, 1,124 down and 471 unchanged.

The drop followed an overnight selloff in Tokyo stock prices, which came amid discouraging signs about the chances of lower interest rates in Japan.

That, in turn, apparently gave investors in this country new cause to worry about the likely course of U.S. interest rates.

The government bond market chowed little change this morning, however, leaving yields in the 8.51 percent-8.56 percent range.

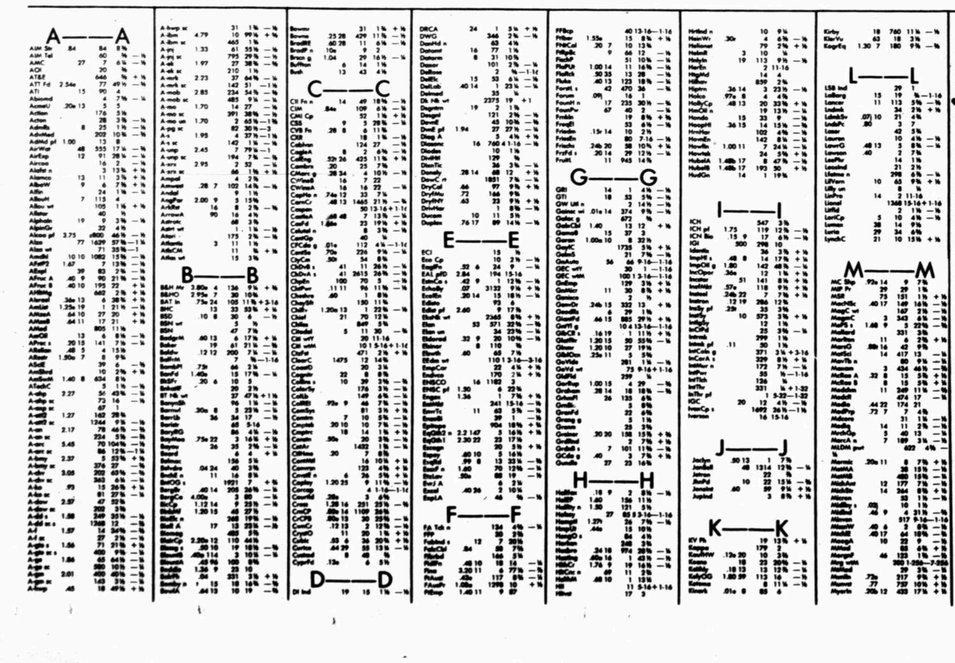

Elsewhere in the economic news, the Commerce Department reported that the U.S. trade deficit stood at $4.78 billion in April, up from a revised $4.07 billion the month before. But April exports increased to a record pace.

Among actively traded blue chips, American Express dropped ½ to 23½; Procter & Gamble 1¾ to 81⅝; Philip Morris ½ to 65½, and Pepsico ½ to 29⅞.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks fell 1.73 to 205.90. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was down 2.28 at 365.12.

PRODUCER: Prices lowest since 1960s

bic feet, compared with about $2.40 in 1985, the year gas was deregulated.

Gas futures for July delivery closed Wednesday at the New York Mercantile Exchange at $1.215, their cheapest level since gas futures trading began last year.

"Why are prices so low? There's too much production and not enough market," said Cary O'Reilly, associate editor of Natural Gas Week, an industry publication in Washington.

Gas was sold in the Rocky Mountain region for about 50 cents per 1,000 cubic feet, according to the weekly. That's about a third the price some producers say they need to break even and a fourth of what they would like to see to make money.

Many in the industry believe better times will come, as the nation adopts the provisions of the Clean Air Act and tries to shake off some of its dependence on foreign oil. But for now, many gas producers can't even survive.

It's hard to pinpoint an exact number of those who have been run out of business. But the Independent Petroleum Association of America, a group of small oil and gas producers who supply about 60 percent of the U.S. supply of gas, said its membership rolls have fallen from about 10,000 to about 5,000 over the past decade.

The easiest culprit to blame for the recent price plunge is the warm winter weather the nation enjoyed, which left companies that sell to consumers with plenty of gas on hand each of the past two summers. The recession also took a dent out of industrial uses.

Gas producers further complain of "below-cost dumping" by Canadian producers, accused by their U.S. counterparts of getting unfair government subsidies.

Sources in the industry point to other problems that limit the United States' use of an energy source that is less than half the price of oil, with abundant supplies available in North America.

For one, the nation is not equipped to use all of the gas on hand, because of limited space available on the pipelines that transport gas and limited use of gas in vehicles. Fleet vehicles are starting to make increased use of gas, however, and a portion of President Bush's energy strategy would cut through some of the regulatory hurdles to setting up new gas pipelines.

Some independent gas producers say they have been victimized by federal tax breaks given to those who produce natural gas from tight sand formations, geologic areas where gas does not flow easily, and from coal seams, where methane gas is present.

"Congress did a dumb thing that created part of the problem," said Robert A. Hefner III, chairman of the GHK Co., a gas producer based in Oklahoma City. "They basically handed a few billion dollars to maybe 10 companies. All the taxpayers are paying for it."

The tax breaks were intended to increase use of that fuel to cut into the nation's dependence on foreign crude oil.

The breaks, which will be available unless oil somehow moves to more than twice the current price, provides producers a tax credit ranging from 52 cents to 87 cents per 1,000 cubic feet, depending on the type of gas.

One of the big beneficiaries of the tax credit is natural gas giant Amoco Corp., which produces about 10 percent of the nation's gas and said roughly 6 percent of its own production is the type of gas that can receive the credit.

Amoco's chief economist, Theodore R. Eck, acknowledged that small producers could take aim at gas that was found with help from the tax credit, but he thinks they are just looking for a scapegoat.

"If 'a' sells, 'b' doesn't," Eck said. "I think if we went out of the gas business completely there might be a little more of a market ... you could say if General Motors went out of business, Ford would sell more cars."

Braniff Airlines returns to skies

DALLAS (AP) — The Braniff name is taking to the sky again.

The third incarnation of a Dallas-based airline named Braniff announced on Tuesday that it is ready for business with a schedule far more modest than that of the giant airline that collapsed in 1982, early in the era of deregulation.

"We're not trying to be a big international airline," said Jeffrey Chodorow, a New York investor who is chairman of the airline. "I don't think of it as a third incarnation of Braniff. I think it's a new company with a spirit of Braniff."

The new Braniff International Airlines Inc. has leased eight planes and painted them in the burgundy, green and blue flying colors of the original Braniff.

Chodorow and Braniff's other chief investor, Arthur Cohen, held a large stake in the second Braniff, which collapsed in 1989.

The new airline said it will shuttle business travelers between a handful of cities beginning next month: Islip, N.Y., Orlando, Fla., Fort Lauderdale, Fla., Dallas-Fort Worth, Newark, N.J., and Los Angeles. Introductory one-way fares will be as low as $69.

Braniff makes its entry into an industry that was devastated by the Persian Gulf crisis and the recession. Former airline executive Jim O'Donnell said it faces a daunting task.

"To come back in with a fractionated route system spanning the entire country and with the name on the side of the airplane that has failed twice makes the task somewhat bigger than Herculean," said O'Donnell, chairman of Houston-based Seabrook Marketing, a developer of reservations software for airlines.

The first Braniff began in 1928 and grew into one of the nation's largest airlines by the late 1970s.

SUPPLY: Columbia may petition bankruptcy court tighter.

The company said the gap between what it had to pay for gas and what it could sell for could amount to as much as $1 billion.

In a statement, Columbia said "a substantial portion" of these losses would be charged against second-quarter income, probably producing a sizable loss.

Analysts said the rest of the pipeline industry appeared to be in better shape than Columbia, having previously negotiated old fixed-price contracts to reflect spot-market prices. "I think other companies have some spot problems, but nothing near the problems Columbia has," said Paul R. Ferretti, an analyst with Dillon, Read & Co.

Still, the stock prices of other pipeline companies also fell, though not by nearly as much.

Ensearch Corp.'s share price closed at $18.25, off 62.5 cents, while that of Consolidated Natural Gas Utilities fell $1.75, to $39.50.

"While all segments of the pipeline industry have been affected to some extent, Columbia was uniquely affected because of their mix of contracts, customers and structure," said Michael Baly, president of the American Gas Association.

"We hope the contract problems at Columbia are the last chapter of the 'take or pay' era." Under such a contract, a buyer must purchase a certain amount of a product or make payments in lieu of the purchases.

The company said a recent review had shown that its "potential exposure under its above-market-priced gas purchase contracts is substantially larger than previously projected."

The company said it is offering gas producers $600 million in securities of its Columbia Gas Transmission Corp. subsidiary as an inducement to break the old, high-price contracts. But if those negotiations fail, or if banks withdraw lines of credit, it could "force the system, the pipeline subsidiary or both to seek protection from creditors under bankruptcy laws."

Columbia said the old fixed-price contracts obligated it to pay as much as $6.70 for a thousand cubic feet of gas at the wellhead, while the spot price is about $1.30.

In an interview, John H. Croom, the chairman of Columbia, said the company was "caught in a fix" because of changing regulations.

The local utilities that formerly bought gas from pipeline companies like Columbia are now allowed to purchase spot-market gas when it is cheaper. And the pipelines must transport the gas if they have available capacity.

"We have had seven warm winters in a row," Croom said, "so that has freed up capacity." He said that last year, between 60 and 70 percent of the gas going through Columbia's major pipelines was transported for other owners.

The company set a deadline of Oct. 1 for concluding agreements with gas producers. "We must have strong encouragement from representative producers by the end of July and commitments from substantially all producers" by Oct. 1, the company said in a statement.

Robert Oswald, Columbia's chief financial officer, said the size of the gas-contract problem had caused banks to cut off previously established lines of credit.

After the announcement, the Standard & Poor's Corporation announced that it was downgrading the company's senior debt from BBB-plus, to BB, and its commerical paper to B, from A-2. It said the company had $2.2 billion in debt outstanding.

Texas could become 'Dwarf Apple' home

PORT ARTHUR (AP) — New York may be the "Big Apple" but Port Arthur could get the reputation as the home of the "Dwarf Apple Tree" if an orchard experiment continues to bear fruit.

Jerry McInnis, owner of McInnis Orchard near Port Arthur's Central Mall, said most people don't believe it but Southeast Texas has a viable chance to become a commercial apple center.

McInnis said he has achieved initial success with several varieties of apples that he is grafting on dwarf rootstock, or the underground part of a plant, from Mallen, England.

The rootstock, recommended by Texas A&M horticulturists, already is producing 4' to 7' tall trees that bear 40 to 50 apples a tree in the McInnis Orchard. Two of the main varieties that have produced apples come from Israel and the Bahamas, said McInnis as he tossed an apple slice to one of his Pygmy goats, separated from the apple orchard only by a wire fence.

Though he has Pygmy goats and dwarf apple rootstocks, McInnis stresses that he is growing small apple trees that produce normal size and not dwarf apples. People see the practical small trees and mistakingly look for tiny apples, said the former pharmacist who manages a 12-acre orchard sandwiched in between his house and family awning business.

Many people tell him apples can't be grown successfully in Port Arthur. "Can't just isn't in my vocabulary," said the 53-year-old man who says he quit being a full-time pharmacist about 15 years ago because he hated being couped up.

McInnis admits he is not a typical businessman who comes to work in a pin-stripe suit and appropriate matching tie. His work environment may not be typical of an awning store either. Many times when he speaks on the phone one of the Macaw parrots he keeps in his office shrieks so loud he has to repeat himself a time or two.

And in addition to his goats and parrots, McInnis also keeps donkies that might otherwise have been destroyed in the Grand Canyon because of official attempts to control the animal population.

Though McInnis expects the dwarf apple tree to take root in Southeast Texas, he also is excited about other varieties of fruit.

With encouragement and assistance from extention agents in Jefferson, Bexar and Uvalde counties, McInnis also experiments with persimmons, plums, muscadines, blackberries, satsuma oranges and mayhaws.

Though he thinks apples can become a cash crop in Southeast Texas, McInnis said that the Northwest always will dominate apple production in the United States.

But mayhaws, which are native to the region, and other fruits which grow best in the climate of Southeast Texas and Northwest Louisiana eventually may mean a big boost to the regional economy.

"Rice and soybeans alone won't make it anymore," he said.

Recession shouldn't crimp hair style

By Francine Parnes
Associated Press

Even when your wallet is stressed in these recessionary times, you can still be tressed to kill.

Your hair, for example, can get a lot of mileage with a yard of grosgrain from the local five and dime.

"There's nothing like a big ribbon wrapped around your hair in a soft ponytail," says Patty Niemi Mitropoulos, a New York hair stylist and consultant to fashion magazines.

And you might get a lot of mileage from your next trip to the salon — if you learn to use the visit to your advantage. Many hairdressers will book consultations only, with the fee used as credit toward styling your hair. Thus, you can get good advice for a little money — and learn to create your own professional look.

"Next to your dog, your hairdresser is your best friend," says Parris Monfort. Monfort, a hair stylist and color technician at Rita's Underground Salon in Denver, charges $25 for a consultation.

JOSE EBER, a Beverly Hills hairdresser to the stars, cautions against cutting corners too close. He recommends starting with a good haircut by a professional.

"I'm not a firm believer in messing up your hair at home," he says. "It only works half the time, and then you have to go to a salon and pay three times as much."

Eber, whose clients include Cher, Elizabeth Taylor and Farrah Fawcett, says the trick is not to spend too much money. "Find someone who cares and understands," he says. "Word of mouth is the best way to find the right person."

Short hair has the advantage of minimum maintenance, says Gordon Nelson, creative director for Regis, which has 3,200 salons across the country ranging from mass-market retailers to tony specialty stores. "A short cut can be towel dried and then allowed to dry naturally," he says. "The other styles that come with it are purely alternatives for versatility."

Daily maintenance can be accomplished easily at home, says Eber.

"When a woman comes in and says 'I don't have the finances to come every other week,' I suggest buying products such as hot rollers and a blow dryer," he says. "At-home tools are within every woman's budget."

FOR THOSE WHO want to experiment with color and perms at home, stick with well-known products. For an at-home perm, pay close attention to timing. "Don't sit and gab," Monfort says, "because then I end up with a new customer who comes in for correction."

Once you've chemically changed the structure of your hair by perming it, use a protein conditioner, he advises. "Your hair no longer has the healthy PH balance of virgin hair, and a conditioner helps restore protein and moisture." If a round brush and blow dryer are totally out of your realm, just shampoo your hair and put it under wraps.

'Today's 2- to 3-inch headbands are perfect for covering a multitude of sins. When your bangs are growing out, you can hide a good 2 inches.'

— Patty Niemi Mitropoulos hair stylist and consultant

"Today's 2- to 3-inch headbands are perfect for covering a multitude of sins," says Mitropoulos, the style consultant. "When your bangs are growing out, you can hide a good 2 inches."

Headbands are available in everything from stretch velvet to cotton Lycra and quilted fabrics. If Chanel's quilted leather band is too pricey at $370, try one at J.C. Penney for $12 to $16. A silk headband at Sears, available in a variety of colors, is about $5.

Or do a hat trick. Stuffing unstyled hair into headgear helps you stay in step with hectic schedules.

"If worn with panache, your hat can carry you through the whole day and into dinner," Mitropoulos says. "People think you've got a lot of style rather than thinking your hair looks bad."

WHEN ALL ELSE fails, try a wig.

For $45 to $50 you can get a hairpiece on a banana clip, says B.L. Ochman, spokesman for Wig Information Services, a trade group in New York. Pony Express by Look of Love International offers one in curly and straight styles, sold at Macy's, Saks Fifth Avenue and May Company.

"It takes two seconds to put on," says Ochman.

While wigs are a terrific remedy for a last-minute catastrope, Eber says, "a woman should devote a little time to herself, because when you look great you feel great.

"Especially in these times of recession and war, it really helps when you can feel good."

Hairdressers offer at home tips

Associated Press

Jose Eber, a Beverly Hills hairdresser who caters to the stars, says you can create a professional look for your hair at home with a few simple instructions:

"Wash your hair and add a little mousse or gel for a touch of body." Bend forward at the waist and "blow dry your damp hair upside down while using a vent brush in every direction and lifting the roots up till your hair looks wild and crazy. Then go back to normal position and (small sections at a time) roll your hair with a round brush. Apply a little heat, then cool off and undo it."

When using hot rollers, remove after seven to 10 minutes, bend forward and brush your hair back and forth with a vent brush. "Take a little hairspray, spray underneath, tilt your head back to normal, shake your hair with your fingers and it should look incredible."

One caveat: hot rollers, curling irons and blow dryers create intense direct heat which can cause burned or split ends.

Parris Monfort, a stylist in Denver, says you can avoid that by wrapping in end paper each section of your hair before you dry it. The paper, normally used for perms, costs about $2 for 1,000 in beauty supply stores.

"Your hair will still curl, but it'll be protected," Monfort says. "And don't come back to me crying that you used toilet paper. It'll only catch fire."

DEAR ABBY

Phone bill charges add up to trouble

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I work with my brother-in-law. While routinely going over his telephone bill, I noticed there were recurring calls to the same telephone number made only on weekends and after work hours — all charged to my brother-in-law's private office line. Being suspicious, I called the number myself, and a woman answered!

Van Buren

I confronted my brother-in-law and told him either to tell my sister about this woman he has been calling — or I would. Well, he acted like I was crazy for even suggesting there was any impropriety.

I figured if I was really wrong in my suspicions, then he would tell my sister what I had accused him of, but so far she hasn't mentioned anything about it, and he has been overly nice to me.

Should I sit and watch this go on, or tell my sister of my suspicions? Or should I just keep checking the telephone bills? Meanwhile, I can barely stand the sight of my brother-in-law, and I can hardly look my sister in the eye. — KEEPING COOL

DEAR KEEPING COOL: Keep your mouth shut and your nose out of your brother-in-law's business. As an employee, you may be privy to bills and confidential information, but until you KNOW something, you are only guessing.

DEAR ABBY: Re a recent letter in your column concerning a convicted felon's right to vote: While it is true (as you said) that a felon may not vote while he is serving time, ex-felons can vote — at least they can in California. Being an ex-felon myself, I know how embarrassing it can be to reveal that one is an ex-felon. Thus, many ex-felons do not ask if they may register to vote after their sentences are up. Many believe that they have forever lost their right to vote, which is not true.

Ex-felons can vote, take out loans, and even become lawyers in many places. Please make this clear. — A LOYAL READER, SACRAMENTO

DEAR READER: Thank you for making it clear that after convicted felons have served their time, they regain their right to vote in California.

DEAR ABBY: From time to time you print letters about some small act of human kindness. I submit the following:

A little over a year ago, my husband, a staff sergeant in the Marine Corps, was leaving to spend a year away from his family. This was a very difficult time for us. His flight left from San Francisco, so my brother (who lives in the Bay area), met my husband at the airport and took him out for a real nice dinner before putting him on the plane.

While they were enjoying their dinner, the waitress came up to them and informed them that a gentleman a few tables away had already paid for their meals! Neither my brother nor my husband knew this man. When the anonymous benefactor stood up to leave, my husband stood up, walked over to him, shook his hand and thanked him.

The man replied, "Thank YOU, Marine!" — SANDRA GALLAGHER, MATHER A.F.B., CALIF.

Barber cuts are a cool bargain with top teens

By R.B. Fallstrom

WEBSTER GROVES, Mo. (AP) — Smart kids get clipped at the Lee Moss Hair Salon.

That's because Moss gives free haircuts to school children who get all A's and B's on their report cards.

Hair, he's found, is a great motivator.

"Hair is important," Moss says. "Kids take pride in their hair. They all want to look well-groomed, and this gives them something to strive for."

Moss, who has three daughters, sees himself as more than just a generous businessman in a predominantly black section of this St. Louis suburb.

"People are out there seeking role models, and I would like to be that type of person," he says.

So as of last fall, kids in the neighborhood who have proof of all A's and B's are entitled to a free 'do after each semester. Straight-A students also get a $25 gift certificate to a department store.

So far, only a few have met the standards.

"But I think it's going to catch on," Moss says. "I hope there will be a lot more."

Though he's most interested in high school, where peer pressure is at its greatest and drugs and gang abuse are prevalent, he won't turn down the younger crowd.

Candyce Handley, 11, a fifth-grader at Clark Elementary School, already has cashed in twice.

"It made me eager to get good grades," she says. "You can't pass up a deal like that."

Moss charges $8 for a basic cut at his eight-chair shop. He also does a lot of novelty business — imprinting the Nike logo, an in-flight Michael Jordan or any number of other designs on the sides of his customers' heads. Not to mention the fadecut, the high-rise styles popularized by rap artists.

Moss has an associate degree in business from Forest Park Community College in St. Louis, but his concerns go beyond the bottom line.

"My grandfather was a high school principal, and he always told me that knowledge was power," he says. "Without education, we're all lost."

Benetton puts its ad vision in its own magazine

By Randall Rothenberg
N.Y. Times News Service

To critics' dismay, some magazines tend to blur the line between journalism and advertising. Benetton Group S.p.A. will give the critics fits. It is creating what may be the first magazine to be based on an advertising campaign.

There is a catch: Neither the ads nor the magazine have anything to do with products.

Sometime this summer, Benetton, the Italian clothing maker whose rainbow of sweaters and skirts brightens store windows in nearly 100 countries, will start distributing Colors, a glossy periodical described by its editors as a mixture of National Geographic, the old Life magazine and the hip British publication The Face.

Benetton says it intends to make every article in Colors a hymn to global understanding and racial harmony, themes developed by the company in its politically charged 3-year-old advertising effort.

"Companies have vision," said Oliviero Toscani, Benetton's worldwide creative director. "They have their hopes; they have a right to say what they think. I think it is immoral how much money has been thrown out the window to say, 'Coke is better than Pepsi' or 'This detergent washes whiter.' With this money, you can do something much more intelligent, much more broadening."

TO HIGHLIGHT its interest in multiculturalism, Colors will be published in two languages, English in combination with either French, Italian, Spanish, German or Japanese, depending on the country of distribution.

The articles scheduled for the first issue include a look at the "Wheel of Fortune" game show around the world, and a piece on what the editors call "cultural transvestites" — people of one nation who style themselves after groups from another, like cowboys in Poland and hip-hop singers in Japan.

There will be no articles about clothing.

Colors furthers Benetton's effort to remove fashion from its fashion marketing. "When Benetton asked me to make an image for the company, I suggested doing it through photographs of different colored people, because that was the company," said Toscani, 49, who has been in charge of the apparel company's advertising since 1982. "That developed into taking the product out of the ads and showing the relationship of colorful products with skin color, and little by little moving the advertising into issues. The magazine is just another part of this."

The clothing company's "United Colors of Benetton" advertising campaign has sparked controversy — and much publicity — since its introduction in 1989.

The print ads and billboards have attacked racial intolerance with photographs taken by Toscani that are often prosaic — one featured a little black lamb and a big white dog — but occasionally jolting, like an ad that depicted a black man and a white man handcuffed together.

SEVERAL OF the advertisements have been rejected by publishers, and at least one — a 1989 ad that showed a black woman suckling a white infant — provoked outrage from some black American groups, which found in the image overtones of slavery. Benetton withdrew the ad.

But rather than back away from the campaign's political content, the company has augmented it with advertisements promoting AIDS awareness. A current ad, for example, shows nothing but a variegated array of condoms.

Neither the campaign, on which the company spent $78.3 million last year, nor the forthcoming magazine, which Toscani said will cost $1 million to produce, are driven purely by altruism.

Market researchers have found that growing numbers of consumers throughout the developed world perceive products in most categories, from colas to cars, to be more or less the same.

With consumers increasingly skeptical when a product claims superiority, many companies have eliminated discussions of product attributes from their advertising and concentrated on fashioning an image for themselves.

COLORS WILL initially be published twice a year, appended to the Benetton catalogue and distributed free in the company's 6,300 licensed retail stores around the world.

But the company's goals are to make the periodical a monthly and to support it by selling subscriptions and advertising, Kalman said.

'Cosmetic enhancement' sells illusion

By Erma Bombeck

Giving someone a fat lip used to be a threat. Today it's considered a cosmetic enhancement.

Bombeck

I just received a free sampling of a cream that is touted to make my lips look fuller, smooth and plump fine lines, fill in tiny crevices (try canyons!) and blur imperfections with optical diffusers. With this magic wand, my lips could do everything but steer a car and open safes.

Cosmetic surgery has taken a scary turn. What at first seemed to be an artist-surgeon creating a new vision from a palette is now an industry turning into a one-stop service station.

I mean it. Not too far down the road, women will pull into a gas station, roll down the car window and say, "Let 15 pounds of air out of the chins, pump another 30 pounds into the lips and chest, wax the mustache ... oh, put a patch on my left rear buttock."

There will undoubtedly be super-savers on crow's feet and a free wash if you avail yourself of specials for cellulite and liver-spot removal.

There's still a large segment of the population like me who want the gain, but no pain. We want to believe we can do it all with magic elixirs, creams and sealers. We're the same group who are too cheap to call a plumber but reseat the toilet with Play-Doh.

Basically, we buy illusion. I really believe that when I use a white cream under my eyes the bags disappear — even when bellhops offer to carry them. There is no doubt in my mind that with shading and feathering, I can have Audrey Hepburn cheekbones on a Shelley Winters body.

A skin specialist in a department-store aisle the other day insisted I need a "repair kit." She had my attention. "Are we talking extra parts here?"

"No, no," she said. "It's just that there is a cell breakdown and you need toning and firming, especially around your eyes."

"Hey, if I'm using them too much, I don't have to. I mean, I can cut back. Maybe rest would ..."

"Just a few drops daily would take away some of those wrinkles. And those laugh lines are getting a little deep."

"I swear," I said, "I don't know where they come from. I haven't laughed in years."

I threw the facial repair kit in the trunk of my car with my tire jack, flares and spare tire. You never know when you are going to be out on a dark road some night and your lips go flat.

Q. What medical problems are associated with being overweight?

A. Patients who weigh in excess of 20% above their ideal body weight are at increased risk for several medical problems. Obesity has been found in the famous Framingham study to be the number one cause of high blood pressure in adults. Diabetes Mellitus is three to six times more common in obese patients. Both of these disorders usually respond dramatically to weight loss, often allowing medications to be tapered or withdrawn by the patient's physician. Other medical problems associated with being overweight include cardiovascular disease (heart attack), gallbladder disease, high cholesterol, osteoarthritis of the hips and knees, increased surgical and obstetrical risks and increased risk of certain types of cancer.

Q. With the 4th of July approaching, what do I need to know about fireworks and eye safety?

A. Fireworks are a very important part of our 4th of July celebration and the safest way to observe them is to attend a public display. Even with all the warnings of serious injury possible, I realize individuals are going to continue to buy them for their own personal use.
Unfortunately every year individuals, often a young child, will suffer a serious injury and sometimes lose an eye due to improper handling or being too close to fireworks. There are many types of fireworks available to the public and there are five basic types of fireworks: firecrackers, Roman candles, fountains, sparklers and rockets. Each of these types can injure the eye. They can blow up in your face while lighting them or injure the eye due to their erratic flight path and impact. Fireworks are not toys and small children should never be allowed to play with them. Adult supervision is essential. Eye glasses or safety goggles should be worn for protection . Always read the instructions and ignite them outdoors and only one at a time. It is a good idea to keep a bucket of water available to put out fires and to douse the fireworks that do not light. Do not try to relight duds and dispose of all fireworks properly.
Even with all the precautions and warnings, every Fourth of July there are thousands of injuries due to the use of fireworks. In the event of an accident, contact an ophthalmologist immediately.

Cosmetic & Reconstructive Surgery?

Q. What can be done for prominent ears?

A. Otoplasty typically is performed to create or restore the centerfold to disproportionately large or prominent ears. The extent of the procedure depends on what changes are desired and what your surgeon deems appropriate. On your surgeon's recommendation, you may be operated on in the surgeon's office, in an outpatient surgical facility or you may be admitted to a hospital.
Otoplasty may be performed under a local anesthetic which numbs the area around the ears, or under a general anesthetic which will make you sleep through the entire operation.
There are several possible surgical approaches to otoplásty. Using a commonly employed technique, the surgeon makes incisions in the back of the ear and removes skin to expose ear cartilage. Then, the surgeon uses sutures to fold the cartilage in on itself to reshape the ear. In some instances, the same result can be achieved without sutures by weakening the cartilage before folding it. The incisions are closed with sutures.

Q. Who is a candidate for liposuction?

A. A consultation with a plastic surgeon is the first step an individual should take if considering suction-assisted lipectomy. The patient should discuss candidly his or her expectations about looking and feeling better after surgery, while keeping in mind that the desired result is improvement, not perfection.
Emotional stability is one of the most important factors to be established before any aesthetic surgery is undertaken. While suction-assisted lipectomy can enhance the contour of your body, it cannot reshape your life. Aesthetic surgery can improve your appearance and renew your self-confidence, but the rest keeping in mind that the desired result is improvement, not perfection.
Emotional stability is one of the most important factors to be established before any aesthetic surgery is undertaken. While suction-assisted lipectomy can enhance the contour of your body, it cannot reshape your life. Aesthetic surgery can improve your appearance and renew your self-confidence, but the rest is up to you.
After examining you, the surgeon will discuss other variables that influence the decisions involved in the procedure, such as the location and amount of fat present, the patient's age and his or her general skin tone. Patients with young, healthy and elastic skin who are of relatively normal weight with localized areas of fat are the best candidates for the procedure.
Suction-assisted lipectomy is not a substitute for weight reduction that can be attained through dieting and exercise nor is it a cure for obesity. It is a surgical technique suitable for carefully selected patients. Your surgeon may recommend surgical lipectomy, in which excess skin and fat are removed, instead of, or in addition to, suction-assisted lipectomy.

Family Dentistry

Q. I have heard that some children are having their teeth straightened at a very early age. I'm interested in knowing more about this.

A. As the first adult teeth erupt, at around age five or six, it can usually be determined whether the teeth will need to be straightened. (About 70% of adult teeth come in crooked.)
The new eruption guidance techniques use the natural forces of the erupting adult teeth to guide them into proper alignment.
These new methods can correct such problems as crowding of the adult teeth; overbite (upper teeth overlap the lower teeth too much); and overjet ("Buck teeth").
The bands of elastic-like tissue that anchor the teeth to the jaw bone are initially soft and relatively flexible. Therefore, it is usually better to guide adult teeth into proper alignment as they erupt, instead of waiting until a child is eleven or so to begin straightening the teeth with braces.
While this technique cannot correct all problems, the great majority of children treated with eruption guidance will not need further orthodontic treatment.

Hometown to honor rock 'n' roll pioneer Cochran

By Jeff Baenen

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — There ain't no cure for the summertime blues, as Eddie Cochran sang, but the town where the late rock 'n' roller was born will try to find one.

The southern Minnesota town of Albert Lea is throwing a 1950s party this month in memory of Cochran, a gifted guitarist known as the blond Elvis. The June 21-23 festival comes more than 30 years after Cochran was killed in a car crash in England at age 21.

Cochran sang such teen anthems as "Summertime Blues" and "C'mon Everybody." Though he has a wide following in England, he remains little known in his own country.

"The fact that Eddie Cochran was from Albert Lea was not well known," Mayor Marvin Wangen said. "I think most people in the community have sort of forgotten about him."

For Cochran's fans, friends and family, the recognition is long overdue.

"Eddie was one of the innovators of rock 'n' roll. He set standards that people are still trying to achieve," said Jerry Capehart, his manager, producer and song collaborator.

A song stylist, Cochran played a range from country to rockabilly to rock 'n' roll to rhythm and blues. He experimented with overlaying musical tracks in the studio, a new technique in his days.

"If there was Mozart and Beethoven reincarnated once or twice, he was one of those guys. He had a musical savvy that you just don't have as a 16-year-old," said his nephew, Bobby Cochran, who also is a guitarist.

Cochran influenced a generation of British musicians, including the Beatles, the Rolling Stones, the Who (who covered "Summertime Blues") and Rod Stewart. British fans mark the anniversaries of his birth and death.

"In England I would say it's no exaggeration to say he's nearly as big as Elvis. His memory has really been taken care of by the British fans," said Bruce Blake of Wayzata, founder of the 89-member Eddie Cochran Historical Organization.

ECHO is sponsoring the festival, which Blake believes will renew interest in Cochran in this country. Organizers hope the weekend becomes an annual event, similar to those celebrating Buddy Holly, James Dean and Judy Garland.

Among the events are a picnic, a classic car cruise, a dance featuring Buddy Holly's old group, the Crickets, a reunion of Cochran's band and a display of Cochran memorabilia at the Freeborn County Historical Museum. The dedication of a Cochran monument in his old neighborhood will cap the festivities.

Cochran's family was working class. His father, Frank, was a mechanic.

Cochran's surviving sisters and brother and his 84-year-old mother, Alice, who all live in southern California, plan to attend. It will be their first trip back in about 37 years.

Gov. Arne Carlson has proclaimed that weekend Eddie Cochran Weekend in Minnesota.

Actor works on both sides of the street

By Bob Thomas

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Robert Downey Jr. has an unusual kind of movie career: He moves from big-buck films aimed at the multiplexes to low-low-budget items that rarely escape the art houses.

At 26, the actor has appeared in 16 films. Among them are such Hollywood features as "Less Than Zero," "The Pick-Up Artist," "Weird Science," "Johnny Be Good," "Air America," "To Live and Die in L.A." and the current release, "Soapdish."

He has also been seen in "Greaser's Palace" for Robert Downey Sr., the noted maker of instant cult movies. Also his father's "Up the Academy," "This Is America" and "Rented Lips."

"Now Dad and I are writing something together," he reports. "It's wild — and offensive, like all good comedy should be. Somebody sent me something that said, 'Good comedy should humiliate people back into their own person.' Hopefully, this (script) will do that."

He added that he enjoys moving from the experimental to the more conventional films — "maybe some day the two will meet."

"Soapdish" takes a farcical look at the wilder side of daytime television dramas. The cast includes Academy Award-winners Sally Field, Kevin Kline, Whoopi Goldberg as well as Cathy Moriarty, Elizabeth Shue, Carrie Fisher and Teri Hatcher. Downey plays the producer of "The Sun Also Sets," an opportunist whose lust for the sexy Moriarty impels him to seek the removal of Field as star of the series.

Downey admits scant knowledge of the soap opera milieu: "For me growing up, they always meant what was on TV between 'Get Smart' and 'Gilligan's Island.' Later on, when I got interested in acting, I thought, 'If I could only get on a soap opera, everything would come together. I could work in New York, get an apartment, wouldn't have to work in restaurants.' Then I went from theater into films."

Some show biz pros believe that a lot of good acting takes place on soap operas. "I think you have the best and the worst," Downey observed. "You have actors who legitimately should be doing films and great theater. But they're locked into the show with some not-so-great actors."

He considers his "Soapdish" character the first real jerk he's played and, he says, "It was fun." The director, Michael Hoffman, suggested him for the role.

Magic Kingdom rises in the French countryside

By Elaine Ganley

MARNE-LA-VALLEE, France (AP) — On this rolling land, just a few seasons ago, farmers labored and cows lowed. Now an army of hard hats is carving an American fantasy from the rich Old World sod.

Europe's own Magic Kingdom, rising from a muddied moonscape, looks like it might need an assist from the Fairy Godmother's wand. But officials assure that the new home-away-from-home for Mickey Mouse will open in one year.

Ensconced in the heart of brie cheese country, Mickey will oversee a domain of 4,900 acres — one-fifth the size of Paris — when the entire Euro-Disneyland complex is completed in the 21st century.

Officials are confident the French and other Europeans will make good Mousketeers.

But demonstrators once threw eggs at Walt Disney Co. chief Michael Eisner and Euro-Disneyland President Robert Fitzpatrick. Newspapers have ridiculed Disney's strict employee dress code, which bars even the Pirates of the Caribbean from wearing beards. Other critics have voiced fears of Mickey's "cultural Chernobyl."

Most recently, French officialdom itself, Euro-Disneyland's most ardent backer, took issue with what it fears will be a predominance of English at the park.

Young Communists demonstrated at the 1989 opening of Euro-Disneyland shares on the Paris stock exchange.

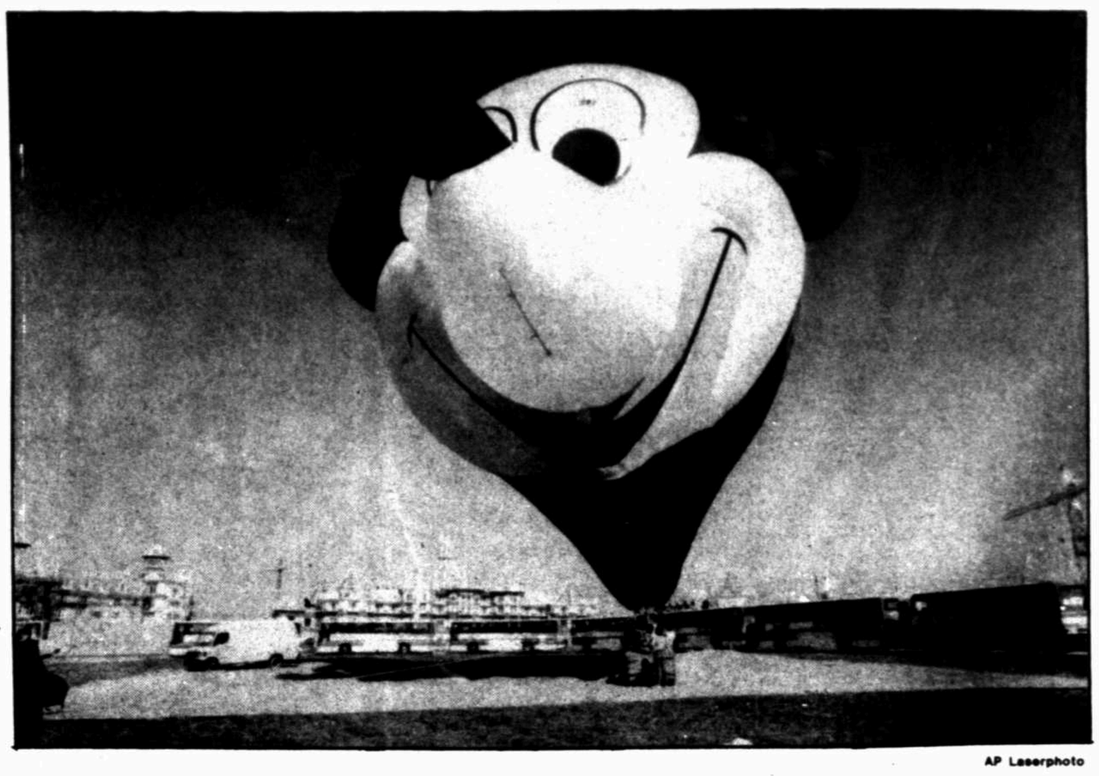

"They did throw eggs. One landed in my armpit and another in my pocket," said an unmoved Fitzpatrick. He dismisses such criticism as isolated and guarantees even the proud French will succumb to the enchantment of the Magic Kingdom — known here, noblesse oblige, as Euro-Disneyland — when the gates open on April 12, 1992.

Officials project up to 11 million visitors in the first year.

"Most of those who demonstrated I expect will be bringing their families to visit the park," Fitzpatrick says.

Euro-Disneyland is the Disney crew's fourth — and most ambitious — theme park after the original Disneyland in Anaheim, Calif., Walt Disney World in Orlando, Fla. and Tokyo Disneyland.

Rising out of what once were predominantly sugar beet fields, Euro-Disneyland lies 20 miles east of Paris. It is to be connected to the capital and other European points by a new subway and train system.

AP Laserphoto

A large Mickey Mouse balloon rises above the site of the Euro-Disneyland in Marne-La-Valle, France. It will officially open April 12, 1992.

Sleeping Beauty's castle, surrounded by a lake, will crown the 1,480-acre theme park section, which will include six all-American theme hotels, a Davy Crockett Campground and a residential district with a golf course. The price tag for the magic is about $4 billion.

In 1996, the $2 billion Disney MGM Studios-Europe is to open, followed by a mystery third project, likely to resemble Florida's Epcot Center, officials hint.

The entire complex, with more than 18,000 hotel rooms, is to be operational by the year 2017.

"We are trying to create a totally different world," says Fitzpatrick. Bridges, light fixtures, even trees gathered from all over Europe will be unlike those in the Paris region.

"From the minute people come on our property, we want them to feel they've left their daily lives behind. The whole notion is that this is some place special."

There are fears the park might be an all-American sore thumb in the land of high culture, a notion Fitzpatrick doesn't buy.

A country "so historically rich in culture, that has thrived over 1,500 years, resisted invasions and wars and everything else, I don't think that culture is going to be threatened in any way by the arrival of a mouse."

Just in case, Disney is quick to note that characters such as Cendrillon (Cinderella), Blanche Neige (Snow White) or Pinocchio were born in European fairy tales. Sleeping Beauty's whimsical pink and blue castle is inspired by the 15th-century French manuscript, "The Very Rich Hours of the Duke of Berry."

The 1987 contract with the French state calls for just such cultural flourishes. Having attended to the French identity, Euro-Disney officials refuse to compromise Mickey's.

Euro-Disneyland "is very definitely American, and it should be," its president says. "We didn't come in and say, OK, we're going to put a beret and a baguette on Mickey Mouse. ... We are who we are."

That attitude elicits smirks from the press. A recent cartoon shows Mickey waving from the turret of a castle bearing the sign: "Francais Go Home."

It also has led to a rare rift with the state, which spent years wooing Euro-Disneyland but is now unhappy with the treatment being given its most coveted treasure, the French language.

The General Delegation on the French Language objects to the English names on major attractions, such as "Frontierland," "Big Thunder Mountain" or "Pirates of the Caribbean."

Euro-Disney officials have discarded the Magic Kingdom moniker and agreed to put all signs in French, with English translations. Employees will be multinational and multilingual.

But, citing an article in the contract protecting English names of famous attractions, Disney says other trademarks will stay.

The dispute continues out of earshot of French children who are old friends of Mickey (pronounced Meekay here) and his entourage.

Nine-year-old Parisian Anne-Helia Roure, asked if Euro-Disneyland might undermine French culture, replies with an emphatic: "Mais non."

"On the contrary, I think it will be better," she says. "Instead of just having the Louvre and all that, it's good to have some amusement. People also want to see Mickey, Donald and Goofy."

But, curiosity sated, will the European public buy into the American dream?

The French have been living through what one industry expert called "parkomania." A half-dozen theme parks have cropped up within the last decade. At least two have been forced into bankruptcy. The others are struggling.

Fitzpatrick says he has paid his way through every amusement park in Europe, assessing the competition. He is unafraid.

The 600-acre Tokyo Disneyland counted some 15 million visitors in 1990, officials note.

They add that Euro-Disneyland more than an amusement park, is a vacation resort. And the Disney name has become synonymous with the tempting notion of dreams come true.

For many farmers, Euro-Disneyland was a malediction, the brutal separation from the land that was their lifeblood.

"There are wounds that will never heal," said a tearful, still angry resident of the village of Chessy. The French government expropriated the 490 acres her family had farmed for 100 years.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

THURSDAY, JUNE 20, 1991

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Look forward to many beneficial changes. An unexpected windfall is featured in November. Invest extra funds wisely after consulting with financial experts. Money for a pet project will become available in early 1992. A move to another city or state is possible by next spring. A relative may be responsible for a job offer you receive then. Handle your own salary negotiations. Business travel will enjoy especially favorable influences in May '92.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actor John Goodman, singer Anne Murray, Beach Boy Brian Wilson, songwriter Lionel Richie.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Be careful of overextending yourself in business; going too far out on a financial limb would be a mistake. Careful grooming enhances your sex appeal. Listen attentively to your partner's ideas.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Home life should be less hectic now. Relatives may lend a helping hand with small fry, giving you a breather. The mail should bring good financial news. Singles can find new romance.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Those who are reckless may not have totaled up the possible cost. If uncertain what to do next, be guided by the wisdom of your main ally. Sign papers only after careful scrutiny.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): As long as you keep your ambition within manageable limits, you will make a success of what you are doing. Say nothing about the future. Changes are likely on the romantic front.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Go with the flow at work. This is not a good day for taking shortcuts or financial risks. See things as they really are, not as you would like them to be.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Make sure you have drawn up blueprints that can be revised if you run into a financial problem. Romance may be stagnant. Replace worn-out behavior patterns with fresh new alternatives!

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Guard against careless mistakes today by keeping your attention riveted on your job. Being a know-it-all will not endear you to family members. Let others take the lead.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov.21): Accept any assignment that you can handle. Those who have unusual skills should receive the kind of compensation they are worth. Romance strikes when least expected.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Those of you who can work on your own today will accomplish the most. Financing a special project will take real ingenuity. Romance is a source of deep contentment. Be tender.

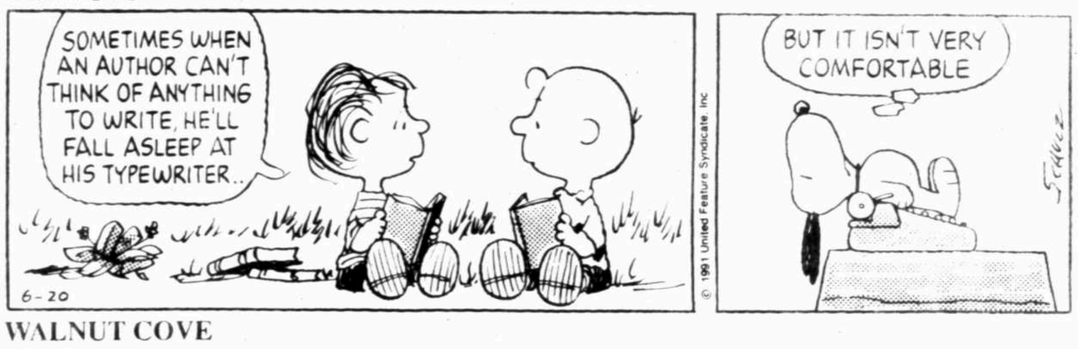

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): When one method fails, it is time to try another. Just avoid experimenting with techniques that may be dangerous. Add some sparkle to your love life. Woo your mate the way you did before!

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): The ideas you are trying to convey should find a more receptive audience today. A financial set-up could require a complete overhaul. Accept jobs that will utilize your unusual talents.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): There is a danger that you are deluding yourself. One of your most devoted friends offers advice that you would do well to follow. Protect your financial resources.

TODAY'S CHILDREN are confident, organized and very determined. Although they can usually persuade their playmates to go along with their plans, these youngsters will display a fiery temper when they are disappointed. Concerned parents will teach their offspring that they cannot always have their own way. As adults, these Geminis may refuse to take a backseat to anyone. They will probably be happiest if self-employed. They enjoy taking calculated risks but are rarely foolhardy.

Bridge Today (available from Bridge Today, 18 Village View Bluff, Ballston Lake, N.Y. 12019. $21 for six issues annually) is in its third year of publication, and the magazine has shown consistent improvement. This hand is from an article by one of the world's leading player/writers, Eddie Kantar.

As a passed hand, North has a tough bidding problem. Since the hand has little high-card strength, but great playing potential, we slightly prefer a jump to four hearts over the suggested jump to three hearts. Two hearts can be dismissed out of hand as too pusillanimous. To view the problem as posed, cover up the East-West hands and decide how you would play four hearts after the lead of the queen of diamonds.

There are all sorts of finesses you can take in the trump suit, and you have done well if you ignored such temptations. As long as hearts break no worse than 3-1 and spades 4-2, you can claim your contract.

Your best chance is to win the ace of diamonds and cash the ace and king of spades. When both defenders follow, you are practically home. Continue with a trump to the ace, and as long as no one shows out, you have landed your game.

Leave both missing trumps outstanding and cash the queen of spades. Regardless of whether or not a defender ruffs, discard your diamond loser from hand. Suppose East ruffs and cashes the king of hearts. You still have three trumps in hand to ruff a spade, thereby setting up a long spade in dummy, and two diamonds. If no one ruffs, ruff a spade to establish the 13th spade and concede a club. The defenders cannot take more than two trump tricks and a club.

Roseanne Barr settles lawsuit against National Enquirer, Star

LOS ANGELES — Comedienne Roseanne Barr has her love letters back and has settled her $35 million lawsuit against the National Enquirer and the Star.

Barr

Miss Barr and her husband, Tom Arnold, sued the supermarket tabloids for publishing the allegedly purloined love letters, written before they were married.

Terms of the settlement weren't disclosed. Miss Barr and Arnold would only say in a statement issued Tuesday that the agreement was "satisfactory."

"The Enquirer and Star have returned the letters to Miss Barr and Mr. Arnold and stated they were sorry for any distress caused to Roseanne and Tom by this incident," the couple's publicist, David Brokaw, said in a statement.

Star editor Richard Kaplan's office in New York said there would be no comment.

"We continue to maintain our right to publish material that we believe has been sent to us legitimately," National Enquirer editor and president Iain Calder said in a statement. "However, we do sympathize with the distress felt by Roseanne and Tom at the loss of the letters, and are sorry they were upset by this incident."

LOS ANGELES — Just because Data is a machine doesn't mean he can't have a singing career.

Brent Spiner, who plays the yellow-eyed android on the television series "Star Trek: The Next Generation," offers standards from the 1920s through the 1950s on his new cassette "Ol' Yellow Eyes Is Back."

"I'm a real fan of Tin-Pan Alley," Spiner said. "My father had the best record collection . . . so basically I ate dinner with Frank Sinatra and Rosemary Clooney."

Spiner produced the album with Dennis McCarthy, who has written the music for many of the episodes, and Wendy Neuss, the series' associate producer.

WASHINGTON — A 1991 Jefferson Award went to Defense Secretary Dick Cheney on Wednesday for his role in winning the Gulf War, and philanthropist Robert Macauley got the award for helping those the war turned into refugees.

Macauley is founder and chairman of Americares Foundation, which has given $350 million in humanitarian aid to needy people around the world, including Iraqi Kurds and people in Bangladesh.

The awards were made by the American Institute for Public Service, the organization said in a statement.

Also honored were Marian Wright Edelman, president of the Children's Defense Fund; Wendy Kopp, president of Teach for America; the late Sen. John Heinz, R-Pa., for a lifetime of service; Fredis Cruz, an 11-year-old student from Hyattsville, Md., who helps tutor English to Hispanic children; and Joshua Wright, a 10-year-old student from Fredon, N.J., who performs magic shows to raise money for UNICEF.

The Jefferson Awards were founded in 1972 by former Sen. Robert Taft Jr. and former first lady Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis.

SEATTLE — "Graham Kerr," a cooking show that features the star of the old "Galloping Gourmet" series with healthier adaptations of classic recipes, has died of poor ratings.

MTM Television Distribution decided to forego a second season for lack of interest among television stations, programming vice president Bob George said Tuesday. At its peak the show was aired on 130 stations.

LOS ANGELES — Rock 'n' roll drummers Alex Van Halen, Ginger Baker and Carmine Appice were inducted into the Hollywood Rock Walk.

Posthumous honors also were bestowed Tuesday on Led Zeppelin's John Bonham, The Who's Keith Moon, Gene Krupa and Buddy Rich.

Van Halen, Baker and Appice put their handprints and signatures in cement on the Sunset Boulevard sidewalk gallery, which was begun in 1985 to honor rock musicians and innovators.

Alex Van Halen is a founding member of the band Van Halen; Appice played with Vanilla Fudge, among others; Baker was part of the Cream trio.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. — A melancholy lament called "At Seventeen" sent Janis Ian to the top of the pop charges in 1975, but six years later she quit the music business. Now, at 40, she wants to try a comeback.

"For the first time in my life, I feel like I could do an album where I'd know that every single song is the best I can do," Ms. Ian said. "I think I'm real scared to do another record, because it's been 10 years, and obviously, if it's a bad record, it will be a very loud bad record, and maybe I won't get to do another one."

"I was burned out and used up," she said of her 10-year absence from the spotlight. "I had been performing publicly since I was 14, and there had never been any time to take a month off to go to the beach and not be a writer or a performer or a recording artist. I never had time to just be and think and figure out what it was I wanted to say. It's like you get to a point where you're just cannibalizing yourself."
