Bipartisan budget plan possible

WASHINGTON (AP) — Presidential budget director David A. Stockman raised hopes today for a bipartisan compromise on the 1983 federal budget as the chairman of the Federal Reserve Board warned an early solution is essential if the economy is to recover from its recession.

"With unusual bipartisan good faith and with a clear appreciation of the danger of stalemate, ... we could solve the (budget) problem in the spring and get the economy on the way to recovery," Stockman told a conference of the National Association of Manufacturers.

But he also warned that Democrats are asking for an impasse if they keep insisting that President Reagan agree to eliminate parts of his tax cut for individuals.

Reagan, expressing disappointment in a slackening of business support for his economic program, scolded critics who are calling for higher taxes and other revisions in his high-deficit budget.

"What we need now is not last-minute haggling or displays of blatant self-interest," he told the NAM audience. "We need the support that only America's businessmen can give us."

The president urged businessmen to "get on with the business of economic recovery, to look for imaginative ways to invest and grow and to provide jobs for the unemployed."

Repeal of the 10 percent tax cut scheduled to take effect in July 1983 "is a formula for political deadlock, not the pathway to a budget solution," Stockman said.

He also said that proposals for reducing record budget deficits by cutting benefit programs, such as Social Security, cannot be achieved "without a bipartisan neutrality pact" so that efforts to reduce these politically popular programs "will not become the object of partisan exploitation in November."

Federal Reserve Chairman Paul A. Volcker told the same group that "nothing is more urgent in these coming weeks than for Congress and the administration to reach a consensus on how to deal with that budget problem."

"Nothing would be more effective for insuring an early recovery."

Biting the bullet

received one of the bullets from the Northern Nevada division of the Associated General Contractors, along with a request to get the economy moving through further budget cuts.

OPEC urged to cut its production

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — OPEC President Mana Saeed Oteiba said today that the oil ministers' meeting beginning here Friday should cut production below 18.5 million barrels a day to maintain the $34 benchmark price.

"I think we have to look for a lower figure (than 18.5 million barrels a day)," he said. "We're willing to go all the way" to cut production to defend the benchmark price.

"We have to start with less than 18.5 million, but if we feel this is not enough we have to get together and look for a lower figure," HE SAID.

Oteiba, who is oil minister of the United Arab Emirates, said the production ceiling would have to stay in force "until the market will consolidate and the glut will disappear." The OPEC nations produce about 20 million barrels a day, 2 million of which remains unsold.

Venezuela's energy minister, Humberto Calderon Berti, said Friday's session is "going to be a difficult meeting. It's a difficult situation. I don't believe we can make a final decision of production levels."

Calderon said Saudi Arabia, the world's biggest oil exporter, will defend the $34 price before the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries. "I think the effort is needed, that's our position," he told reporters.

Venezuela has had trouble selling some of its oil products since the glut developed, being forced to cut production and exports.

The glut is pushing prices lower, OPEC production is at a 13-year-low and its petrodollar surplus is fast dwindling. Internal bickering, while always present, seems to be growing.

Some analysts believe that unless OPEC drastically reduces its production, its members will launch a free-for-all in price cutting to avoid losing customers. That could push oil prices to $25 a barrel or lower. The current contract price averages about $33 a barrel.

For nearly a decade OEC flaunted its power to set prices, and in doing so reshaped the economic paths of the industrialized West. Now OPEC is seeing its strength sapped by such non-OPEC producers as Mexico and Great Britain.

By forcing prices higher in the 1970s, OPEC spurred the importing nations to conserve, to find oil outside the Middle East and to use alternative fuel.

As a result, Great Britain and Norway — which had virtually no oil production before 1967 — have rapidly developed rich oil fields in the North Sea. Production there now exceeds 2.4 million barrels a day and is growing.

The increased output from non-OPEC countries has come at a critical time for the oil group. Its competitors have cut prices far below the Saudi Arabian price of $34 a barrel.

American action in El Salvador possible

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

Chances are better than 50-50 that the United States will step up its activities in El Salvador, and those activities could come in the form of soldiers, according to Dr. John A. Booth, a Monahans native who spoke Wednesday to the Rotary Club in that town.

A professor at The University of Texas at San Antonio, Booth talked to The Reporter-Telegram about the turmoil going on today in Central America and the U.S. involvement in those countries.

Fluent in Spanish, Booth has lived 3 1/2 years in Spanish-speaking countries, including Spain (1968-1969), Costa Rica, (1972-73 and 1979-80) and Mexico (1978-79). His views on the problems in Central America will be published soon in his book, "The End and the Beginning: The Nicaraguan Revolution."

Without outside intervention coming from the U.S. and the Soviet Union, Booth said those Central American countries would be going through the turmoil because of internal problems. Those problems he listed as worsening economic conditions for the lower and middle classes, the government's "frustrating" response to elections and the government's actions of repression.

"There is a massive amount of repression to discourage the opposition," Booth said.

The opposition in El Salvador and Guatemala comprises a broad range of people, including those in the professions, political parties, clergymen and other religious people.

Outside help won't resolve these inner problems, he contended.

"The Administration is correct in that there is some subversion from abroad. That hasn't been trumped up by outsiders," he said. "But the U.S. foreign policy is mistaken in its approach. They're treating this as a conflict between the United States and the Soviet Union."

This attitude limits the U.S. response to those countries, Booth, who keeps in touch with friends in Central America and by reading newspapers from those countries, would prefer seeing the U.S. withdraw all aid.

"We have limited our potential for responding in a reasonable way. It's leading us into a bloody conflict. I think El Salvador will last only as long as we continue to prop them (government) up."

By pulling out entirely, Booth reasoned the U.S. then would have the flexibility to work with whoever wins.

"The cost of escalated intervention of the U.S. will be awful," he said. "And the chances are better than 50-50 that the U.S. will step up its activities there either through aid or direct intervention. In fact, the chances of jumping into direct intervention stand at better than 40 percent."

President Reagan's remarks that the U.S. won't become involved always are accompanied with a qualifier, such as "not at this time," Booth pointed out.

Continuing, he questioned if the Reagan administration had realized "it won't last with protracted intervention."

Critics who have compared the U.S. involvement in Vietnam with the involvement today in El Salvador are correct in Booth's opinion. "These are the same steps taken toward escalation in Vietnam. The process is almost identical by which we are becoming involved."

What the administration hasn't considered is the growing opposition by the Hispanic community throughout this country to involvement in Central America. And Booth said they are aware that the U.S. is preparing its Spanish-speaking military forces for possible direct intervention.

"Virtually all U.S. advisers in El Salvador are Spanish-speaking," he said. And persons with family members or friends in the military have told him these Spanish-speaking people who were stationed elsewhere, such as Europe, have been suddenly called back to the U.S. And most of those people are being stationed in Texas.

Texas, he said, is headquarters for the Fifth Army and that is the branch which would be involved in an intervention, he surmised.

Booth's interest in Central America began as a high school student when he was sent there as a foreign exchange student. He received a bachelor's degree in political science from Rice University, a master's degree in gov-

"We have limited our potential for responding in a reasonable way. It's leading us into a bloody conflict. I think El Salvador will last only as long as we continue to prop them (government) up."

Caribbean initiative gets quick start in Congress

WASHINGTON (AP) — A key Republican senator says he is "absolutely convinced" Nicaragua and Cuba are controlling leftist guerrillas in El Salvador, but that the Reagan administration should reveal more evidence to garner public support for its Central American policy.

Sen. Robert Kasten of Wisconsin made his comments Wednesday as a Senate subcommittee began hearings on President Reagan's proposal to send $350 million in emergency aid to the Caribbean Basin, including $128 million to El Salvador.

The hearings got under way just hours after the president's aid package was sent to Congress. Besides emergency money, the proposal calls for a 12-year period of duty-free entry into this country for virtually all Caribbean exports and tax incentives to encourage U.S. private investment.

The trade subcommittee of the House Ways and Means Committee called a hearing for today on the economic aid package.

Kasten, chairman of the Senate Appropriations subcommittee on foreign operations, said he had no doubt about outside involvement in El Salvador's insurgency.

"I am absolutely convinced of Cuban and Nicaraguan support and control of terrorist guerrillas in El Salvador," Kasten told Thomas O. Ender, assistant secretary of state for inter-American affairs.

Volunteers strengthen efforts of American Cancer Society

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the last of a five-part series on cancer and its diagnosis, treatment and effects.

By GAIL BURKE
Staff Writer

Approximately 2.5 million people will give up their spare time this year to help save your life.

They are rich or poor men, women and children of all races who want you to live a long, healthy life.

These concerned Americans include neighborhood workers, club members, civic organization members, businessmen and women, housewives, physicians, entertainers, retired people and many more.

They are the American Cancer Society volunteers — the strength and backbone of the organization.

In the early 1900s a group of physicians and laymen established the American Cancer Society as a result of noticing that if some cancers were detected early, they could be cured. About $10,000 was raised in 1913 and a pamphlet, "Facts about Cancer," was published to educate the public.

SINCE THEN, the American Cancer Society has raised approximately $100 million each year and in April, during the organization's fund raising crusade, more than 78 million leaflets containing lifesaving facts were distributed on a house-to-house, person-to-person basis in last year's crusade.

The American Cancer Society also granted $50 million in 1981 to institutions and scientists worldwide for cancer research.

According to the society, research in the past 30 years has brought about 50 useful anti-cancer chemicals, 36 of which have become prescription medication. In addition 11 forms of cancer including acute leukemia, Hodgkin's, lymphoma and testicular cancer are now able to be controlled or cured as a result of cancer research.

Contributions to the American Cancer Society in 1980-81 were spent as follows: research, $60.3 million; public education, $30.9 million; professional education, $18.1 million; patient services, $21.6 million; community services, $13.2 million; fund raising, $24.1 million and management and general, $16.5 million.

MIDLAND'S AMERICAN Cancer Society is one of the organization's 2,915 local units.

Its main goal, according to Delia Presley, District 2 executive director, is to educate the public with emphasis on regular health checkups, the seven warning signals of cancer and informing people of the six cancers that are the most preventable and curable.

The American Cancer Society in Midland conducts an extensive Service and Rehabilitation programs for patients and their families.

In Midland, Rhonda Sawyer, chairman of the service and rehabilitation programs, oversees various patient services and support groups such as Reach for Recovery, I Can Cope and CanSurvive.

She explained there are many services available for the cancer patient, such as sickroom supplies and equipment. These include hospital beds, wheelchairs and walkers which would be returned. All this equipment is free to any cancer patient.

And, there are also gift items that the patient can keep such as wigs, dressings, oostomy supplies and prostheses.

FROM SEPTEMBER 1981 until February 1982, $16,112 was spent for these services.

"If we gave money, it would not be enough for the patients' expenses," Ms. Sawyer said. "So we take the money made from the crusade and buy hospital equipment and such for these services. We can provide more services this way."

In the future, the Society hopes to have an information and referral service, providing additional information to cancer patients on what resources are available for financial needs, transportation and meals. A transportation program to provide rides to and from the treatment center is now being organized. "Volunteers would pick up the cancer patients at home and bring them back again, free of charge," Ms. Sawyer said.

Support groups have not only been successful in helping the cancer patient, but vitally important. The ACS support programs for patients are implemented by volunteers, who are now or have been cancer patients themselves. Both the cancer patient and cancer volunteer must have written permission from their physicians before becoming active in any of the programs sponsored by the Society.

I CAN COPE is an upbeat, positive approach to living with cancer, with a main goal of helping cancer patients

Denton attacks Richard's work absence

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — State treasurer candidate Lane Denton asked opponent Ann Richards to explain a "mysterious" absence from work, and Ms. Richards said that she had taken off to deal with a drinking problem and because she missed her grown children so much.

employees have testified in recent weeks before the Travis County grand jury, but he has repeatedly declined to comment about a possible investigation of his office. Harding was out of town Wednesday and unavailable for comment.

He said drinking had had "an impact" on Ms. Richard's work as county commissioner, "and there is no reason to think it won't happen in the future."

What I did was seek counseling about not drinking any more, counseling to reassure myself that there is a great life after children. And, as far as I'm concerned, I'm a far stronger and a more valuable person than I ever was.

High for Friday predicted to be in 80s

Early morning fog may revive memories of fall, but the possibility of thunderstorms tonight and the expected high Friday in the 80s suggest an early entry into spring.

The high Wednesday of 83 was considerably below the record 91 in 1977, while the overnight low of 56 was double the record for the date of 23 in 1934.

The overnight low should dip only to near 50, according to the National Weather Service.

Odessa boy dies of traffic injuries

ODESSA — An Odessa boy has died of injuries suffered in a traffic accident here late Tuesday afternoon.

The Tidwell youth was riding a pedicycle and failed to yield the right-of-way at the intersection of 20th and Huntington about 6 p.m. Tuesday, according to the DPS. No charges were filed against the driver of the pickup truck involved, 15-year-old Bobby Patterson of Odessa.

The Department of Public Safety said 10-year-old Kimbrough Tidwell died at 7:30 a.m. today in Medical Center Hospital, where he had been in critical condition with severe head injuries following the accident.

Funeral arrangements are incomplete.

Burglar apparently shot Goss's wife

HOUSTON (AP) — The wife of impresario-entertainer Dean Goss apparently was shot to death by a burglar, authorities said.

A rear window of the two-story home had been broken but authorities were uncertain whether any property had been stolen, Newman said.

Elaine Goss died from a 22-caliber bullet wound to the back of her head, medical examiners ruled Tuesday.

In addition to her husband, Mrs. Goss is survived by three sons, Dean Jr., Craig and Andy.

The 44-year-old Mrs. Goss apparently had been dead several hours before her husband found her Tuesday afternoon lying in an upstairs room of their home in an affluent southwest Houston neighborhood, medical examiners concluded.

Goss also ran unsuccessfully for City Council in 1979, singling out law enforcement as the foremost issue and arguing crime had reached "epidemic proportions."

No suspects have been arrested, said Homicide Detective Keith Newman.

Baressi outlines four-point plan for area schools

By ED TODD Staff Writer

The deputy superintendent of the Midland Independent School District, speaking Wednesday to the Downtown Lions Club, outlined his four-point thrust in his eventual role as chief administrator of the $36-million school program in Midland.

Dr. Joseph P. Baressi Jr.

The administrator, Dr. Joseph P. Baressi Jr., said that he plans to maintain quality education by concentrating on four areas:

- Home-school communications. It is "extremely important to have a dialogue," Dr. Baressi said. "Also, we are listening to parents and getting dialogue from them."
-Teacher supervision. "We need to maintain quality control" in the classroom.
-Student discipline. "We have a tendency to lose personal contact," as the school enrollment increases.
-Improve academics.

Dr. Baressi, who will succeed Dr. James H. Mailey as superintendent on July 1, said that the school's growth rate is 10 percent at a time while the city's rate is 12 percent. "That is a phenomenal growth rate," he said.

growth in the junior high schools is "starting to be dramatic." Enrollment in the high schools is on a "slight" decline. The school system's professional staff numbers about 1,000.

The school system's proposed $9.4 million bond issue to finance two new elementary schools in west and northwest Midland, to add 20 classrooms on the existing campuses of Henderson, Pease and Travis Elementary Schools, and to expand the 1966-built Midland Freshman High School, Travis, he said, "probably is our most overcrowded school at this time."

He said that Midland Freshman High School would be expanded under the bond program so that the school will have "equal capacity with Lee Freshman High School." At present, Midland is 12 classrooms smaller than Lee.

The bond proposal will be presented to Midland voters April 3 as "one package," Dr. Baressi said.

"Obviously," he said, "there is a cost." And that added cost would raise the school's debt-service by four cents — from 9.5 to 13.5 cents.

In terms of direct cost to the homeowner, Dr. Baressi said that, for example, the bond proposal would, if passed, raise school taxes on a $70,000 house by $25 per year and $37 on a house with a fair-market value of $100,000.

"It's not an astronomical increase," he said, "but it is an increase."

In the event the bond issue does not meet with voter approval, the superintendent-to-be said that the school board simply will "set a new date for a second election."

Should the bond proposal not pass, the school system will be forced to buy portable classrooms out of the operating budget and would cut into instructional funds.

Earlier this year, Dr. Baressi was named by the school board to succeed Dr. Mailey, who has been superintendent here since 1968. Dr. Mailey in turn will be a full-time consultant on planning, future school sites, and monitoring school construction in his first year out of the superintendency and then will become a part-time consultant.

"I feel very fortunate to have his assistance," Dr. Baressi said. "I've had a lot of congratulations and some condolence," he said of his prospective role as superintendent. He said that the future of the school system appears "very bright."

Hance introduces bill to study gross tax system

WASHINGTON — U.S. Rep. Kent Hance, D-Texas, introduced legislation Wednesday that could lead to the most significant tax law changes since the first income tax was adopted in 1913.

plus Republicans W. Henson Moore of Louisiana, John J. Duncan of Tennessee and Texan Bill Archer.

The Hance bill calls upon the Treasury Department to conduct a two-part study detailing the economic and administrative consequences of adopting a low-rate Gross Income Tax system.

"As members of the Ways and Means Committee, we feel it is our duty and responsibility to examine alternative structures and systems by which the essential revenues for operating the government are raised," said Hance. "There is currently much debate surrounding the complexity, equity and level of compliance of our present net income tax system."

Under a gross income tax system, taxpayer deductions would be limited and all taxpayers would be taxed on "gross" or total income. Since the taxable income base would be enlarged under a gross income tax system, the tax rates would be much lower than under today's system.

"The legislation which we are introducing addresses these issues and may well represent the embryonic stage of the most significant change in our nation's tax laws since the first income tax was adopted in 1913."

"All taxpayers would pay one low tax rate on all their income and the tax burden would be distributed more equitably among all taxpayers," said Hance.

The bill would authorize the Secretary of the Treasury to complete within six months two studies covering the advisability of replacing the present personal income tax or both the personal and corporate income taxes with a simplified Gross Income Tax.

Hance, a member of the powerful Ways and Means Committee, drew bipartisan support for his bill from six committee colleagues. Co-sponsors of the legislation are Democrats Cecil Hefelt of Hawaii, Andrew Jacobs Jr. of Indiana and Don Bailey of Pennsylvania.

Hance also called on the Treasury Department to specifically consider the following Gross Income Tax factors:
- Protection of the economically disadvantaged;
- Reduction of paperwork and auditing requirements, taxpayer fraud and evasion, and expedition of disputes between taxpayers and the government;
- Increased economic incentives for capital formation and productivity;
- Removal of economic disincentives and obstacles;
- And, exclusion of certain benefits, such as Social Security benefits, from Gross Income Tax consideration.

The Hance Resolution also would require the Secretary of the Treasury to identify the strengths and any potential weaknesses of a Gross Income Tax system and to propose possible solutions to deal with any potential weaknesses.

become an essential part of their own treatment team.

In eight sessions, the support program includes educational classes by local health-care professionals. The group meets at Midland Memorial Hospital. Most of the participants either have been recently diagnosed as having cancer or are going through conventional treatment. The sessions will range from topics on qualifying for social security to taking care of legal matters.

The purpose is to help the cancer patient gain control over his life, increase his knowledge of cancer and decrease anxiety about his life.

"The sessions are limited to cancer patients and their immediate family," Sawyer said. "We discuss nutrition, define the disease and talk about treatments. We will tell them about surgery, chemotherapy and radiation."

ANOTHER SUPPORT program which is similar to I Can Cope is CanSurmount.

CanSurmount was begun in Denver, Colo., by an oncologist. Rather than group support, CanSurmount is a one-on-one session with trained volunteers who give an average of two to four hours each week meeting with patients. All the volunteers are also cancer patients.

All interested persons are not necessarily good candidates, some just can't handle it," Ms. Sawyer said. "You're talking to people who are afraid. You must be a strong person to help someone to get through this."

All volunteers must be approved by their physician before becoming a volunteer. It's important that you have people who are sure of themselves before they can help others." A program designed for women who have undergone mastectomies is Reach To Recovery.

The support service, a rehabilitation program for women who have had breast surgery, is designed to help them meet their physical, psychological and cosmetic needs.

MS. SAWYER SAID volunteers, who have adjusted to their own surgery, visit mastectomy patients in the hospital, with a physician's permission.

"It's important that our volunteers appear as normal as possible and that they be well-groomed and well-dressed. On their first visit the volunteer will not do anything but introduce herself and leave some literature about the program. If the doctor agrees and the patient is willing, the volunteer may then show the patient certain stretching exercises."

"This is a very regulated program. All the volunteers must go through certification every two years. The mastectomy volunteers can help this cancer patient because they understand what it is like to have a breast removed," Ms. Sawyer said.

For more information on these or any other services or programs contact the American Cancer Society, 601 S. Main St., 683-6374.

High carbon monoxide levels found in smokers' blood, new study says

WASHINGTON (AP) — Smokers may face an increased risk of complications from heart disease because of high levels of carbon monoxide in their blood, according to a study done for the National Center for Health Statistics.

The study, made public Wednesday, found that nearly 80 percent of smokers have potentially dangerous levels of carbon monoxide, which is produced by burning tobacco.

Only about 5 percent of non-smokers were found to have comparable carbon monoxide levels.

Of the four primary sources of carbon monoxide — smoking, occupational exposures and outdoor and indoor exposures — smoking was found to be "the most significant and widespread."

The study found that exposure to carbon monoxide in winter from indoor sources may be a potential public health problem because there were striking differences between blood carbon monoxide levels in summer and winter.

The conclusions were drawn from data collected by the center in its National Health and Nutrition Examination Survey, conducted from February 1976 to February 1980.

About 11,000 people ranging in age from 3 to 74 — a representative sample of the U.S. population — were tested.

A carbon monoxide level above 2 percent in healthy non-smokers was considered to be a potential health hazard. Smokers are regularly exposed to higher levels of carbon monoxide.

The smoking population showed a mean carbon monoxide blood level

Removing lead paint hazardous

BOSTON (AP) — Health officials warn that the lead paint covering bridges across the United States is a potential health hazard, especially when workers try to remove the paint.

The Massachusetts Department of Public Health monitored a repainting job on the Mystic River Bridge in Boston and found high levels of lead in the blood of some workers and children living nearby.

These researchers noted that thousands of bridges and other steel structures around the nation are covered with lead-based paint.

"The potential for serious occupational and environmental exposures to lead during the future work on these structures is large," they wrote in today's New England Journal of Medicine.

The Massachusetts Port Authority began the project in 1979. Officials feared lead paint flaking off the span was a health hazard, so they decided to sand blast all the paint off and repaint it.

However, the health officials found that the blasting filled the air and covered the ground with bits of lead paint.

After the state's initial health studies, the sand blasting was more carefully controlled to prevent lead dust from escaping, and the work continued safely.

The researchers found that 58 percent of the workers on one section of the bridge had blood levels of lead that were higher than standards set by the National Institute for Occupational Safety and Health.

Work begun on Vietnam memorial

By MIKE FEINSILBER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Preliminary work has started on the grassy parkland that is to hold the nation's memorial to Americans who fought in Vietnam and the 57,892 who died there.

Three years after a young former infantryman, Jan C. Scruggs, began buttonholing Congress to support the idea of a memorial, work crews put up a fence at the site Wednesday and began preparations for excavation. A formal groundbreaking ceremony is to be held March 26.

"We feel like a million bucks," said Scruggs, who created the Vietnam Veterans Memorial Fund and persuaded Congress to devote a section of Constitution Gardens, between the Lincoln Memorial and the Washington Monument, to the memorial.

The monument is expected to cost between $6 million and $7 million. Scruggs said $6 million has been collected or pledged and he expressed confidence the rest will be raised.

Even though work is about to begin, a disputed point over the monument's appearance is still to be settled.

The original design called for two long, submerged walls of polished black granite coming together in the shape of a V and bearing the names of Americans killed and the 1,500 still listed as missing in the war. Some Vietnam veterans and congressmen objected to that stark design, calling it a political statement that said more about the controversy of the war at home than the heroism of the Americans who fought in it. They demanded a more traditional, and more heroic, monument.

The memorial fund agreed to add a flag and a larger-than-life statue of a soldier, but the statue design must still be selected and other details must still be worked out.

Scruggs said he agreed that those elements could be put at the center of the monument — the flagpole at the apex and the statue in front of it.

But the government's Fine Arts Commission, which must approve the design changes, suggested that they be put elsewhere — near a directory which will help people locate the names of loved ones.

The original plans also called for listing the names of those killed in the war in the order in which they died. Critics said the names should be listed alphabetically so survivors would not have difficulty locating the names they were looking for.

Last week, at a meeting between critics and supporters of the original concept, a compromise was proposed under which the names would be listed alphabetically by year in which the death occurred. Scruggs said that issue has not been settled yet. He said the memorial will be dedicated in a ceremony on Veterans Day, Nov. 11.

Merillat family to be buried

DALLAS (AP) — The secret of the disappearance and death of the Kenneth Merillat family will be buried with the couple and their younger daughter Saturday in their hometown of Adrian, Mich.

The body of Merillat, 32, surfaced Monday. The bodies of Alice Hood Merillat, 27, and 5-year-old Kendra Lee Merillat were recovered from the lake Saturday.

Medical examiners ruled the three and another daughter drowned in Lake L. Merillat was in the family outing Feb. 14. Investigators closed their case without being able to determine how or why the four were in the water.

Services for 6-year-old Kayleen Merillat, whose body was found three weeks ago, were last Saturday in Adrian.

The family moved to Lake Dallas, Texas from Tucumseh, Mich. Last April Merillat and his wife were natives of Adrian, and their daughters both were born there.

Merillat was a customer technician with General Telephone Co. and had worked for the company since 1975. In Adrian he was a member of the Lenawee County Auxiliary Search Team, which helped search for missing people and evidence in nearby lakes.

Journalists on death list

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — A right wing group issued a death list Wednesday of 34 people including 20 representatives of U.S. news organizations and the information officer of the U.S. Embassy in San Salvador.

None of the reporters on the list appeared to take it very seriously. Many said their names had been included on similar lists compiled by leftist as well as rightist factions in El Salvador's civil war.

Irish Prime Minister Charles J. Haughey and his wife, Maureen, speak with Archbishop James Hickey, right, Wednesday as they prepare to attend St. Patrick's Day Mass at St. Patrick's Church in Washington.

At a luncheon later in the day, Haughey asked Reagan and other assembled officials for support of Irish unity.

Irish head asks for unity support

By LAWRENCE L. KNUTSON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Ireland's prime minister used a St. Patrick's Day meeting with President Reagan to appeal for the United States to support Irish unity.

Prime Minister Charles J. Haughey, speaking at a luncheon attended by Cabinet members, congressmen, senators and other high officials Wednesday, also urged Great Britain to take steps that could lead to its pulling out of Protestant Northern Ireland.

"The first thing is that Britain be encouraged to seek more positively and persuade more actively a change in attitudes and outlooks which would pave the way for unity and so enable her final withdrawal from Ireland to take place with honor and dignity," Haughey said.

The prime minister told reporters he was pleased with the "warmth and enthusiasm" with which the luncheon audience received his speech.

But he gave no sign that Reagan is prepared to endorse Irish unity as a U.S. foreign policy objective.

Although Reagan's reply to Haughey at the White House luncheon was limited to light remarks, the president said in a statement released later that "despite the sorrows of the past years, there are signs that the climate has improved for moderate political solutions."

It is too early, Haughey said, to discuss the specific political changes and guarantees that must be made to accommodate Northern Ireland's Protestant population in a united Ireland.

But he did say that he believes those changes likely will require the writing of an entirely new Irish constitution "which will accommodate all of the different positions in Ireland rather than tinkering with our existing constitution."

Not all Irish eyes were smiling

Thousands of Americans who do not share the color of a shamrock strutted down city streets told jokes full of Irish blarney and drank green champagne and beer on St. Patrick's Day.

The Chicago River turned its waters a pale green and a steady Irish mist greeted parade-goers on New York City's Fifth Avenue.

In St. Paul, Minn., Jane Kiemen had to keep washing as a checker at Applebaum's supermarket as the parade marched by, but she wore green lipstick and fingernail polish anyway.

In Savannah, Ga., nearly 200,000 people lined the streets for that city's 158th annual parade.

"You won't be able to walk in a straight line," Police Capt. Ken Howard said of the crowd. "If you're anybody will be walking a straight line, you're not."

About 150,000 people lined a half-mile parade route in St. Paul, where one tavern owner did Irish business with his green champagne. A crowd of 175,000 watched 40,000 marchers and 76 floats in Chicago, and about half of the usual 1 million parade-goers in New York City braved a drizzle to watch an estimated 100,000 marchers.

In Hartford, Conn., green bagels were scattered throughout the Statehouse and Irish songs reverberated through the stone halls of the building. Rep. Richard Torpey, D-East Hartford, sang a bit of "When Irish Eyes Are Smiling," and eight Irish folk songs were danced in the Senate chamber.

At the White House, an Irish tenor, Frank Patterson and his wife, Eily O'Grady, sang traditional songs for President Reagan, Irish Prime Minister Charles Haughey and a large audience that included members of Congress, the Cabinet and the administration.

In Olympia, Wash., Democratic state Sen. Margaret Harkin of Spokane read to her fellow lawmakers a resolution dedicated to Ireland's patron saint.

"It is in part, 'God sent down a paint brush, the colors ever seen, and St. Patrick took it in his hand and painted Ireland green. The folks forgot their hunger, their sorrow fled away. And all you've done is sing and dance until this very day.'"

In Northern Ireland, however, Wednesday brought turbulence.

Protestant youths in the town of Kebra south of Londonderry hurled gasoline bombs and stones at police who in return fired tear gas and bullets. In another town nearby in the largely Protestant town of Cross Keys, Catholic youths confronted a busload of band members returning from a parade. Three people were arrested, officials said.

Northern Ireland's troubled political history also had its impact on gatherings in the United States.

Reagan issued a statement saying that violence in Northern Ireland has "continued its generally downward trend. Perhaps most important, despite the sorrows of the past years, there are signs that the climate has improved for moderate political solutions."

New York City's parade committee named as honorary grand marshal Bobby Sands, the first of the Irish hunger strikers to die last year. His picture and those of nine other hunger strikers who died were carried in the parade, along with white crosses bearing their names. Sands' brother, Sean, was among the marchers.

Arts and Education dean starts Monday at UTPB

ODESSA — Dr. James Colwell, professor and chairman of literature at The University of Texas of the Permian Basin, has been named dean of the university's College of Arts and Education, effective Monday.

He replaces Dr. William Tanksley, who resigned recently to accept a position as the dean of the School of Ministry for the United Church of Religious Science in Los Angeles, Calif.

Colwell was the founding dean of UTPB's College of Arts and Education, but stepped down in 1977 for health reasons and resumed full-time teaching. As the college's first dean, he has been with UTPB since 1972. He was involved in the planning stages of the university and recruited much of the arts and education faculty prior to the university's opening to students in 1977. He has served as chairman of literature since 1978.

Previously Colwell served as director of the Office of International Foundation at the University of Colorado; exchange professor for the College of Education, Goettingen, Germany; assistant director of the European Division of the University of Maryland; assistant director and lecturer in American Civilization at Yale Foreign Student Institute; assistant command education director and base education advisor for the United States Air Force in Tokyo, Japan; and high school English and journalism teacher in Snyder and Sterling, Colo.

Colwell, a brigadier general in the Air Force Reserve, holds a masters and a doctorate in American studies from Yale University, a certificate and diploma in German civilization from the University of Heidelberg, Germany, a certificate in French civilization from the Sorbonne (University of Paris), a master of arts degree in English from the University of Northern Colorado, a bachelor of arts degree in journalism from the University of Denver, and additional study at the National University of Mexico and Sophia University in Tokyo, Japan.

In the military, he served as a department of Air Force civilian in Japan, where he also held a reserve mobilization position at headquarters, Far East Air Forces. He has held similar reserve assignments at headquarters, United States European Command.

UTPB lists 13 nominations for outstanding teacher honor

ODESSA — Thirteen University of Texas of the Permian Basin professors have been nominated for the annual AMOCO Outstanding Teaching Award to be presented at the university's sixth annual honors convocation at 2 p.m. March 29 in the student lounge.

UTPB President V.R. Cardozer said the AMOCO Foundation funds the annual award to promote excellence in teaching. The winner will receive $1,000 cash.

Nominations, made by students and faculty, are based on a professor's knowledge of teaching fields, enthusiasm and enjoyment of teaching, and organization and dissemination of material.

The honors convocation, conducted each spring prior to commencement, is designed to honor academic achievement. Top students from each academic discipline and others who have distinguished themselves academically will be honored, along with the university's most outstanding professor.

Guest speaker for the event is Dr. Lawrence K. Pettit, assistant commissioner of higher education for the Texas College and University System.

Nominees for the AMOCO Award for Outstanding Teaching include Pamela Price, assistant professor of art; Dr. Charles J. Doryland, associate professor of accountancy and information systems; Dr. Craig Lister, assistant professor of literature; Dr. Margaret Neussendorfer, associate professor of literature; Dr. Joel Greenspoon, professor of psychology; Dr. Yonina Cooper, assistant professor of music; Dr. Pamela Muller, assistant professor of earth sciences; Dr. J.L. LeGrande, professor of criminal justice management; Dr. Mary Quinlivan, associate professor of history; Dr. James A. Nickel, professor of mathematics; Dr. Sean Kelleher, assistant professor of government; and Dr. James Olson, associate professor of psychology.

Naming agents could result in jail

By MIKE SHANAHAN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Congress is close to giving final approval to legislation permitting jail sentences and fines for journalists or government officials who publicly disclose the names of American spies.

The Senate voted 55-39 on Wednesday to approve a part of the proposal which critics said threatens legitimate investigation by reporters into the activities of intelligence agencies.

The chief sponsor, Sen. John Chafee, R-R.I., said, "The wholesale disclosure of agents is something we just can't tolerate."

A final vote on the Agent Identities Bill was likely today.

Press groups and the American Civil Liberties Union say the measure would almost surely be struck down in the courts as an unconstitutional intrusion on free press provisions of the First Amendment.

"This is a devastating blow to the First Amendment," said John Shattuck, an ACLU official.

WEDNESDAY'S VOTE resolved an issue which had been holding up final approval of the Agent Identities Bill for months. Last September, the House approved a similar proposal so the legislation is likely to go to the White House for President's Reagan's signature soon.

Sen. Joseph Biden, D-Del., and the Senate Judiciary Committee had recommended that a prosecutor be required to prove that a journalist intended to disrupt U.S. intelligence operations by disclosing an agent's identity.

But Chafee persuaded the Senate that Biden's standard of proof was too tough.

The amendment adopted by the Senate would require that a jury be convinced that there was "reason to believe" that the public disclosure of an agent's names would "impair or impede" U.S. intelligence operations.

A pattern of activities by a journalist or an intelligence officer resulting in publication of an agent's name would be enough to warrant prosecution under the Chafee measure.

Reagan and CIA Director William Casey have been strong supporters of the legislation, which first was introduced four years ago.

Because the administration expected a closer vote than occurred Wednesday, Vice President George Bush was present in the chamber to break a tie if needed.

THE MEASURE IS the result of terrorist attacks on CIA agents in a number of countries, including Jamaica and Greece, following publication of their names. The most notorious case was the assassination in 1975 of Richard Welch, the Athens CIA station chief, following publication of his name in an anti-CIA publication.

The bill parallels a court case pursued against former CIA officer Phillip Agee, who wrote books attacking his former employer and identifying former colleagues.

There have been fewer than a dozen attacks on CIA agents, even though a publication known as Covert Action Information Bulletin has printed the names of dozens of people it said worked for the CIA around the world.

DRAMA IN REAL LIFE

There comes time when must take leap of faith

By TERRY and HARRIET KING
Special from Reader's Digest

Slowly, wearily, the climbers inched their way down through the howling blizzard. It was just after noon on March 4, 1980, and Willi Unsoeld, mountaineer and professor of philosophy at Evergreen State College in Olympia, Wash., was trying to lead 20 of his students to safety.

The day before, they had climbed to within 1400 feet of Mt. Rainier's 14,410-foot summit. Without warning, a storm had erupted. They camped for the night, planning to retreat the next morning to their base at Camp Muir, 1800 feet below.

Although it was the season of avalanches, Willi decided after consulting with his students to take the most direct route down — through avalanche-prone Cadaver Gap. They knew they had to get out of the storm as quickly as possible, before exhaustion and hypothermia (lowering of body temperature) set in.

Mountains were Willi Unsoeld's life. He had been co-leader of the first ascent of Mt. Everest's treacherous West Ridge in 1963. At Evergreen State, which he helped found in 1971, Willi shared the thrill and joy of climbing with hundreds of eager students in his outdoor-recreation classes.

Now, roped to three other climbers, Willi led the way across a steep slope. Suddenly the snow mass beneath them broke loose and roller-coastered down the mountain. Willi, Janie Diepenbrock, Frank Kaplan and Peter Miller tumbled downward. They were in the midst of the thing Willi feared most: an avalanche.

Kaplan hurtled along like a feather wafted in the air. From Willi, he had learned that fluffy avalanche snow hardens into a concrete grave the moment it comes to rest. To keep from sinking beneath the snow-wave exploding all around him, Kaplan "swam" toward the surface of the avalanche in an awkward breaststroke.

Praying that his timing was right, Kaplan made a desperate lunge and broke through the surface. Immediately he caught sight of Peter Miller's limp hand sticking out of a drift. Frantically, he dug his friend out, moments before he would have suffocated.

There was no such miracle for Janie Diepenbrock. Or for Willi. Everyone stood silent, unbelieving. Willi had always filled the lives of his students with his spirit, his words, songs, zest for life. Now he was gone, leaving his students alone in the full fury of the storm.

Ian Yolles, an experienced climber, took charge. He began to act out one of Willi's "laws of mountaineering": "Pull together. Society is geared to the individual, but in the mountains you must depend upon each other for survival." Jeff Casebolt headed the first team of four, followed by a second team led by Bruce Ostermann. Three other teams brought up the rear.

At 3 p.m., Casebolt started across the slope of Cowlitz Glacier, below Cadaver Gap. He hoped that he was going in the right direction. But, as Willi used to say, it made no sense to worry: "Once committed, be confident and stick with your course. There comes a time when you have to take a leap of faith."

Leading the third team, David Ridley struggled to keep the second group in view, but within 10 minutes they disappeared into the milky swirl. Again he could hear Willi: "Brace yourself in a strong wind and block everything else from your mind. When the wind breaks, go as fast as you can. As in any crisis, simplify your thinking; focus on the essential."

Behind Ridley, Yolles kept close to the dazed Miller. Suddenly a gust of wind blew Miller off his feet and he collapsed.

"Come on, Peter!" Yolles shouted above the wind. "We've got to keep moving. It's our only hope."

"Take care of each other," Willi used to say. "Share your energies with the group. No one must feel alone, cut off, for that's when you don't make it."

Miller was suffering from hypothermia and vomiting. He tried to push everything out of his mind, kept telling himself to follow the rope, one foot in front of the other.

In some places, the drifts were chest-high and darkness was only an hour away. If they didn't find Camp Muir soon, Ostermann knew that some of them would not make it.

In desperation, the three men trudged up a ridge. For a brief moment, the wind shifted and Casebolt saw something sticking out of the snow up ahead. They ran as best they could through the deep drifts until they literally bumped into the pile of rocks that formed the main stone hut for Muir.

"My God!" Ostermann shouted. "We're here! We made it! We're alive!"

From far off, he thought he could hear Willi, singing one of his favorite old climbing songs:

*You can't kill the spirit
It's like the mountain,
It's old and strong,
It goes on and on.*

Sticky situation

CINCINNATI (AP) — Rush-hour traffic was moving, well, slower than molasses after a tanker truck overturned on an expressway and spilled thousands of gallons of the sweet, sticky syrup.

The rig carrying the molasses load flipped over early Tuesday morning and authorities closed Interstate 75's northbound lanes in Cincinnati while crews sprayed off the roads and righted the tanker.

Michael Lonicker, 25, of Millville, who drove the rig, told police the truck's tank ruptured when it overturned about 6:20 a.m. as he swerved to avoid a vehicle in the center lane.

Water issues to be aired

Water issues from conservation to importation to management and treatment of waste water will be aired at 7 p.m. today in a joint public meeting of the Governor's Task Force on Water Resource Use and Conservation and the Texas Department of Water Resources.

The meeting will be held in the Conference Room of the Region 18 Education Service Center at Midland Regional Airport.

The session is one of 13 meetings being held in Texas in an effort to gather suggestions, advice and comments on amending the Texas Water Plan. The Task Force and Water Resources are soliciting the input on the water plan from laymen, individuals, water resource professionals, public officials and special-interest groups.

Issues to be discussed in the meeting include water-resource management for population and economic growth, water laws, water quality management, flood protection, water conservation, bays, estuaries, instream flows and fish and wildlife habitat, regionalization of water and sewage systems, research and development of new water technology, and the state's role in financing water development and wastewater treatment projects.

The meeting is open to the public. The Education Service Center is just off LaForce Boulevard on the main drive leading to the terminal building at the airport.

"We must revise the water plan to meet the long-range needs of increasing population and economic growth in our state," said Louis A. Beecherl Jr., chairman of the Task Force and the Water Development Board. "Failure to provide adequate water resources and waste water treatment facilities is to virtually guarantee putting the state's well-being, growth and economic vitality in jeopardy."

The water plan was drafted at the request of Texas Gov. John Connally, who held the governorship from 1963 to 1969, and has not been revised significantly.

Weather affects phone service

If Midlanders punched out telephone calls Wednesday morning and wound up with no answer, the explanation falls on the weather.

Sam Ogletree with Southwestern Bell said a temperature inversion in West Texas that started about 11 p.m. Tuesday and continued through 9 a.m. Wednesday "adversely affected all of our microwave carrier circuits, radio circuits and operator-handled calls."

A temperature inversion, he explained, is layers of warm air under cold air "which bend our microwaves. These microwaves normally travel straight from the transmitter to the receiver."

By bending, the microwaves miss the receiver. "We call this a 'fade,'" said Ogletree. "We have two to three of these each spring, but to our memory this is the worst."

This inversion also knocked out the Lubbock-Amarillo area's ability to handle operator-assisted calls and these were referred down to the Midland-based computer. "That caused our Midland, Odessa and Abilene customers to receive slow answers when they tried to use the operator to place a call," according to Ogletree.

Midland students enter French contest

Twenty-four students from Midland High School and Lee High School competed in the 18th Annual Texas French Symposium in Dallas Friday and Saturday.

The students entered such categories as vocabulary, grammar, listening comprehension, prose, poetry, prepared speech, art and music. About 1,800 students from 76 Texas schools, including Trinity School, Odessa High School and Big Spring High School, competed.

Midland High's Tod Weiler placed second in Prose II while Lee High School students Suzanne Buford and Carol Neal placed second in Instrumental Ensemble and Bobby Winter placed third in Poetry III.

Agnes Atkins, Lee High French instructor, was awarded a study program at the Alliance Franchise for four weeks in Paris, France next summer.

Finalists from LHS were Wes Coles in Prose III and Bobby Winter in Prepared Speech III. Semi-finalists from LHS were Amy Miller, Prose and Poetry II, Meg Brennan, Poetry II, and Cindy Sommers, Prose III.

Other students participating from LHS were Josie Valdez, Johnny Bejarano, Carolyn Armendariz, Sofia Ruiz, James Martin, Karen Carpenter, Teresa Lunsford, James Reinli, Ashley Stewart and Donella Hoffman.

Other Midland High students, participating under the direction of MHS French instructor Billie Jean Odom, included Linda Vachon, Terri Golasinski, Laura Dixon, Helena Foret, Maureen McKeveloy and William Philippott.

Trinity students tour Spain, France

Eighth and ninth grade students from Trinity School's French and Spanish classes made a comparative culture study tour of Paris and Madrid over spring break.

The students who were exposed to European cultures for nine days were Shelly Bivins, Tahnee Bailey, Clay Garlitz, Nancy Huhnik, Dee Dee Dyer, Bitty Hopper, Kaye Knox, Grant Scherzer, Shannon Burnett, Magan Donnelly, Catherine Bolger, Peggy Hartman, Kelly Munn and Kathy Scott.

In addition to touring the two major cities, the group went on excursions to Versailles, Chartres and the Loire Valley in France and to Toledo, Escorial and Segovia in Spain.

Accompanying the students were language teachers Holly Floyd and Patricia Candelaria and their husbands as well as two other members of Trinity's faculty, Margaret Farrell and Mary Lynn Fernandes. The tour was arranged by the American Leadership Study Groups, based in Worcester, Mass.

Election school to be held April 30

An election school will be held at 5:30 p.m. April 30 in City Hall Council Chambers.

According to City Secretary James McCullough, the meeting is required to demonstrate use of election machines and to explain changes in the law. He also is trying to obtain a film from the secretary of state's office.

The meeting is open to the public.

Trinity students in French symposium

Eighth and ninth grade students from Trinity School competed against students from 76 high schools across the state during the Texas French Symposium held at Skyline High School in Dallas Friday and Saturday.

Trinity students, representing the only junior high school participating, competed against 1,800 students. Other area schools involved in the competition were Midland High School, Lee High School, Odessa High School and Big Spring High School.

The French instructor at Trinity School is Patricia Candelaria.

Laura Renick, ninth grader, received a trophy for winning first place in the Level II Prepared Speech contest. She also was a finalist in the poetry and extemporaneous speech divisions.

Holly Williams' performance in the Level II Culture and Civilization contest earned her second place and a plaque. The ninth grader also was a semi-finalist in the Poetry and in the Prose categories.

Sharon Graham, eighth grader, won second place in the Level I Written Grammar division. She also was a finalist in the Piano and Prose divisions.

French pastries, croissants, fresh fruit and flowers were sold from booths set up during the symposium. Representatives from several companies were on hand to explain foreign educational programs for U.S. students. Students could also buy T-shirts, posters, foreign books, tapes and records during the symposium.

The cause of freedom

Criticism of the American news media and the U.S. Senate by an expert on Afghanistan appears to be justified, unfortunately.

Professor Thomas E. Gouttierre, director of the Center for Afghanistan Studies at Nebraska University, leveled the charges recently when he testified before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

What the professor said is true and speaks poorly of the United States' commitment to the cause of freedom for the nations of the world. What he said, basically, is that the American news media has not pushed hard enough to get into Afghanistan to cover the war there between 100,000 invading Soviet troops and valiant Afghan freedom fighters.

And, he noted pointedly, "Can you believe it was the first hearing the committee has held on Afghanistan?" Prof. Gouttierre went on to add, "There is no one in the Senate who has seized upon this issue and that makes a difference."

The professor was correct to point out the shortcomings of the media and the Senate. Enough attention has not been focused on the war in Afghanistan, but freedom-loving people die there each day. Reports from Afghanistan indicate that since the Soviets moved into that neighboring country in December 1979, the fighting has waged on while more than 2.5 million Afghans have fled their homeland.

From all outward appearances, at least, Western support for the courageous Afghans has been only minimal. As Prof. Gouttierre noted, "these Afghans are the only ones in the world fighting Soviet troops today. Talk about a rapid deployment force in Southeast Asia, these men are tying down nearly 100,000 Soviets."

President Ronald Reagan has climbed on the bandwagon for recognition of the Afghani cause, designating Sunday, March 21, as "Afghanistan Day." It truly is time for Americans, recognized as the most freedom-loving people in the world today, to join in vocal support, at least, for the Afghani freedom fighters.

For years the Soviet Union has crushed the freedom hopes of millions of people throughout the world. Now they are attempting to do the same in Afghanistan but finding the going a bit rough. Every American should raise his voice Sunday in support of the Afghan rebels.

No trade with terrorists

Only a trickle of oil from Libya has been finding its way to the U.S. market, so President Reagan's decision to ban the traffic altogether has mainly a symbolic effect. But the symbolism is important.

The United States should not be doing business with a Libyan government that openly sympathizes with international terrorism and advocates assassination of its political enemies. This country can do without Libyan oil, and we regret that our Western European allies, who are more dependent on it, have decided to go along with a boycott.

Oil revenues are permitting Col. Moammar Khadafy to menace his North African neighbors with an army that his otherwise dirt-poor country could not afford. Oil money pays for his "hit squads" of assassins sent abroad, and for the weapons and other support going from Libya to left-wing governments and guerrilla organizations around the world.

Without oil, Col. Khadafy would not amount to much, either at home, where he recently survived an assassination attempt, or in those foreign capitals that still accord him a welcome.

Most of the Americans working in Libyan oil fields left the country late last year at the urging of President Reagan. The president's recent boycott decision included a ban on the export to Libya of U.S. oil and gas technology and equipment that is not available from sources outside the United States, an order that could have a more serious impact than the ban on oil imports.

The worldwide slump in demand for oil and the weakness in prices already has created a financial deficit for the Khadafy government. By shopping elsewhere for the 150,000 barrels of oil a day which we have been importing from Libya, the United States may only mildly aggravate Libya's financial problems. But anything that helps deflate the treasury of the terrorist-minded Moammar Khadafy does the world a service.

Nuclear freeze — Seductively simple panacea that won't work

WASHINGTON — I note with regret, but not amazement, that those who are advocating a mutual U.S.-Soviet "freeze" of nuclear arsenals are not like Albert Einstein, who said: "Everything should be made as simple as possible, but not simpler." Simplicity makes the freeze proposal politically attractive, and irresponsible.

In the 1970s, while the Soviets raced ahead, America unilaterally practiced a semi-freeze. It deployed multiple warheads (MIRVs) on some existing missiles, but deployed not a single new ICBM. America deployed not a single new submarine-launched ballistic missile (SLBM) in the 1970s.

Applied to intermediate-range missiles in Europe, the freeze proposal is the Soviet negotiating position: Accept the Soviet's 275 SS-20s and permit no comparable U.S. missiles. Furthermore, if their general superiority in offensive systems were secured by a freeze, the Soviets could further refine their destabilizing counter-force capabilities. For example, a freeze would prohibit new SLBMs but not new attack submarines that hunt SLBM submarines. These could eventually give the Soviets a destabilizing capability for destroying the U.S. sea-based deterrent.

A freeze would kill the B-1 bomber, but would not inhibit the air defenses by which the Soviets degrade the effectiveness of America's ancient B-52s. To try to preserve even a shadow of this leg of the strategic triad, America would have to spend heavily. The B-52's "escape time" (the time it takes to get out of range of nuclear effects from incoming missiles) is inferior to the B-1's and inadequate to the threat of Soviet SLBMs off the U.S. coast. Therefore, B-52s would have to be rebuilt for better escape capability and would have to be more dispersed (B-52s can use fewer airfields than B-1s, so airfield modernizations would be necessary) at prohibitive cost.

The budgetary impact of a freeze would be modest. Strategic programs — weapons, command, control, communications — account for just 15 percent of the defense budget. The freeze would prevent some procurements, but would make other spending necessary to ameliorate the freeze's destabilizing effects.

(The freeze proposal makes it timely to note that some aspects of existing arms-control agreements are destabilizing. The ban on missile defenses (ABMs) is one example. Another is the ban on new silos: This prevents, for example, deploying any of our permitted number of ICBMs on the south sides of mesas. Given the inherent limits on ballistic missile trajectories, such basing would make America's land-based deterrent more survivable, and the world safer.)

The proposed freeze would extend to "testing, production and further

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Feds let Ford escape safety-hazard recall

WASHINGTON — Once again, the government's auto safety regulators have let the Ford Motor Co. off the hook, at the risk of death or injury to untold numbers of Americans.

And this time, the reluctant regulators went through some strange gymnastics to justify their refusal to reconsider a massive recall of Fords that came off the production lines between 1973 and 1979. This much is made clear in a still-secret, self-contradictory memo to National Highway Traffic Safety Administrator Ray Peck from his enforcement chief, Lynn Bradford.

Here's what happened: The federal safety agency investigated complaints by Ford owners that the automatic gearshift had a tendency to slip from the "park" position into "reverse," with understandably frightening results. According to government records, the errant transmission was responsible for thousands of injuries and more than 100 deaths.

The problem, from Ford's point of view, was that the transmission was installed in 10 million vehicles. Recalling them would have cost a fortune. The safety agency took pity on the automaker and ordered Ford simply to mail out warning notices and stickers to owners of cars with the shifty gearshifts.

This was too much for Ralph Nader, the automaker's nemesis. He filed a formal request that the agency reconsider its decision on Ford.

Nader's request was turned down, and on Oct. 16, 1981, Bradford wrote a memo to his boss explaining why. It's a weird document.

Bradford said Ford's "sticker program appears to be working, in light of the apparent decline in the number of reported accidents." At the same time, however, he acknowledged that "Ford conducted no evaluation of the effectiveness of the program."

In response to Nader's request, the safety agency asked Ford to submit all its records on cases in which the gearshift slipped into reverse. Ford sent in 291 accident reports dated between March and August of last year.

As Bradford noted in his memo, this was not exactly what the agency had asked for. "These reports appear to be limited primarily to events resulting in property damage or personal injury," he wrote, "and apparently do not include many incidents where the vehicle slipped into reverse but was stopped before injury or property damage occurred."

Furthermore, Bradford noted that while the government data indicated a decline in incidents caused by slipping transmissions, it really had no way of knowing if this were indeed true. "Ford, by failing to provide reports of accidents occurring prior to the start of the Ford (notification) program, has denied us supporting data that would assist in establishing a benchmark to use in determining the effectiveness of the program." The memo continues: "These materials are ultimately essential to a review of the success of the warning label program."

In other words, there were inadequate "before" statistics on which to judge the "after" statistics. Bradford's memo also raised the disturbing possibility that Ford destroyed evidence which might have influenced the decision against recall.

Ford set up an information hotline for car owners with questions about the notification program. It logged 854 complaints of personal injury or damage "from unexpected vehicle movement" over a five-month period last year — but the records were discarded after the toll-free line was closed. Bradford noted in his memo that the 854 figure was "substantially larger than the number of written reports of accidents (291) submitted by Ford."

Footnote: A Ford spokesman told my associate Tony Capaccio that only the raw data from the hotline calls wound up in the wastebasket, and said a summary of the data was submitted to the auto safety agency. He added: "There is no defect in Ford transmissions."

PAEAN FROM THE PAST: All's fair in love, war and P.R. The conservative magazine National Review is using an endorsement from the super-salesman in the White House as part of its latest subscription pitch, without the president's knowledge.

The solicitation, addressed to "Dear Intelligent American," contains this encomium over Ronald Reagan's name: "National Review is best known to most of us as the leading conservative magazine in America — which it is. But I think it's quite a bit more than that, namely, as good a publication as you're likely to find anywhere... I hope you'll try it yourself."

In tiny print at the bottom, the puff is identified as "Statement received from then-Gov. Reagan several years ago." The magazine's promotion director said Reagan was not paid for the endorsement, and may not even know it's being used. He did not say whether Reagan had been asked for an updated opinion, or if he still reads the publication.

INSIDE DOPE: Is the Drug Enforcement Administration running a tourist guide service on the side? Pipe this reference to Hong Kong opium dens in a confidential DEA report: "The limited number of opium dens (smoking rooms) still operating have all gone underground. The operations adopt a highly erratic way of conducting their business and frequently move from one place to another to avoid detection."

WATCH ON WASTE: Hoping to improve the quality of its recruits, the Army last year extended basic training from seven weeks to eight. The move is costing millions, but there's disagreement over just how many. The Army says the added expense is only $13.5 million; the General Accounting Office says it's more like $40 million.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Thursday, March 18, the 77th day of 1982. There are 288 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history: In 1974, Middle East oil-producing states, except Libya and Syria, ended their oil embargo against United States.

On this date: In 1922, Mahatma Gandhi was sentenced to six years in prison in India for civil disobedience.

In 1937, more than 400 people — mostly children — were killed in a gas explosion at a school in New London, Texas.

In 1965, a Soviet Air Force officer became the first man to leave an orbiting spacecraft and float in space.

In 1969, the United States and Soviet Union proposed an international treaty

ART BUCHWALD

Jupiter did have effect — on prices!

LOS ANGELES — As many people may have been aware the end of the world was to have taken place last Wednesday, March 10.

The prediction was based on the so-called "Jupiter Effect," when all the planets lined up on one side of the sun and were supposed to cause earthquakes and volcanic disruptions.

Art Buchwald

I happened to be in L.A. on March 10, which is the best place to be if the world is going to come to an end, because Southern Californians seem to take things like this more in stride than any people I know.

All the stuff about them being laid back does happen to be true.

On the morning of March 10, I started making my farewell telephone calls to dear friends. I called up Newcombe first.

"Well, Newcombe, I guess you know what day this is."

"Wednesday?" he said, taking a wild guess.

"It's the day the world is coming to an end."

"You mean the L.A. Dodgers haven't signed Fernando Valenzuela yet?"

"It's worse than that. We can expect a Jupiter Effect and we're all going to be swallowed into the ground."

"That happened to me a couple of months ago during a mudslide at my house. I was sucked in right where my Jacuzzi was. But it always sounds much worse than it is. The trick is to take a deep breath and fight your way to the top of the muck."

"Goodbye, Rick. You made my stay on Earth worthwhile."

My next call was to Bernheim:

"Alain," I said, "I called to say au revoir."

"What do you mean, au revoir?" he said. "We're giving a dinner for you Sunday night."

"There is no Sunday night. The world is going to end today."

"But what about the caterer? He's already ordered the avocado dip and potato chips."

"I'm sorry you went to all that trouble, but our fate is in the stars. The planets are against us."

"You want me to tell that to a Los Angeles caterer?"

"Don't tell him anything. When the earthquake comes, he'll disappear with his avocado dip and never be the wiser."

I then called my next friend, Angie Dickinson:

"Angie," I said, "today's the end of the world. Would you like to come over to the hotel for a final drink?"

"Oh, my God. I'm glad you called. I read about it yesterday and made a 3 o'clock appointment with my hairdresser."

Before I could make the next call, the phone rang.

"My name is Peterson and I'm with the B&H Real Estate Company. As you know the world is going to come to an end today so I'm happy to announce one of my clients in the San Fernando Valley is willing to sacrifice his $6-million, two-bedroom ranchouse for $5 million."

"Suppose the world comes to an end before I get to look at the house?"

"Then the $5 million asking price will be negotiable."

Pan Am to take over some Braniff routes

Ed Acker, Chairman of Pan American Airlines, left, and Howard Putnam, Chairman of Braniff Airlines for the next four years if approved by the CAB.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Pan American World Airways, which lost $348 million last year, is coming to the rescue of Braniff Airways, which lost $160 million and has been flirting with bankruptcy.

The two air carriers announced a deal Wednesday aimed at giving both a financial boost and, more important, providing Braniff with critically needed cash so it can continue operations.

The agreement, which must be approved by the Civil Aeronautics Board before taking effect, calls for Pan Am to take over almost all of Braniff's routes to South America for four years in exchange for $30 million. Two-thirds of the money would be handed over to Braniff immediately.

The chief executives of the two carriers told a news conference both airlines would profit from the deal.

"This agreement will help Braniff survive and regain our financial vitality," declared a jubilant Howard D. Putnam, chairman and president of Braniff, which recently was forced to delay employee paychecks because of a cash shortage.

Putnam said he approached Pan Am about a month ago with the proposal. Despite Pan Am's losses last year, the carrier has substantial cash.

Putnam said the agreement is not the answer to all of Braniff's problems, but will provide for a badly needed "infusion of cash" so the carrier can gear up for the busy summer schedule.

C. Edward Acker, chairman of Pan Am, said he is confident the Braniff routes can turn a profit this year for Pan Am, even though Braniff lost $15-million on them last year and about half that much the year before.

"Pan Am already has a significant presence in South America, has the wide-bodied aircraft necessary to compete effectively in this market, and will be able to implement the service with a minimum of expense due to anticipated productivity improvements by our employees," Acker said.

A Pan Am spokesman, Merle Richman, said Pan

Am expects to gain $200 million in annual revenues and $25 million in profits from the Braniff routes. Pan Am's wide-bodied jets carry about 50 percent more passengers than the planes used by Braniff.

The agreement also allows Braniff to cut its work force. Putnam said about 1,500 employees, including pilots, flight attendants and ground personnel would be laid off when the flights are switched to Pan Am. An additional 800 ground personnel in South America would go over to Pan Am.

Panel says FAA has done little to correct management problems

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite the upheaval caused by the air traffic controllers strike, the government has done little to correct the management problems that led to the walkout, according to a special task force.

A panel of management experts concluded Wednesday that morale among working controllers is low, strife between management and controllers persists, and many of the factors that led to last summer's walkout are resurfacing.

"Most factors that had caused problems in the past are reasserting themselves, and the FAA seems headed toward more people-related problems in the future," said the 145-page report on FAA management procedures.

FAA Administrator J. Lynn Helms, testifying at hearings into air safety, acknowledged that morale among some controllers is low and promised to implement a number of recommendations from the task force.

But Helms told the House subcommittee the airways are safe and that the effort to rebuild the air traffic controller corps is ahead of schedule. He said there are about 9,600 controllers handling traffic now and that by October, airlines will be able to fly about 90 percent of their normal flights.

The congressional hearings were to resume today with testimony from the National Transportation Safety Board, which several months ago concluded that safety has not been impaired by the strike and subsequent firing of 11,500 controllers.

BUT THE task force report on FAA's management presented a much more troublesome picture of the controller workforce than has been acknowledged publicly by FAA officials.

Lawrence Jones, chairman of the panel, told reporters the FAA seems not to have changed its management approach significantly since the strike, although there is a need "to turn the organization around" if future labor unrest is to be avoided.

Jones, president of the Coleman Co., which makes lanterns, expressed concern that management insensitivity, the growth of air traffic and a resumption of wide fluctuations in traffic volume during different times of day may eventually lead to a resumption of labor strife.

Jones agreed with the two other members of the task force — Stephen H. Fuller of General Motors Corp., and David G. Bowers, a management specialist at the University of Michigan — that the FAA has acknowledged problems and the need for change.

But Transportation Secretary Drew Lewis told reporters it likely will take two to three years for the FAA's management problems to be resolved. Lewis, who appointed the task force last August, said he expects "no immediate solutions," even though the FAA intends to begin immediately to implement some of the recommendations.

FULLER, vice president for personnel administration at General Motors, said the FAA's dilemma is not unlike that faced by private industry, including General Motors, several years ago. He said his company some time ago realized the emergence of a "new style of employee" who requires "a new style of management" and not strict, authoritarian rule.

Jones said the FAA still has some supervisors who have "a propensity to be high-handed" and authoritarian, while others have attempted to improve communications with the controllers since the strike seven months ago.

The task force, which interviewed both fired and working controllers, also concluded: —The rift between management and the controllers during the two years before the strike was so deep that a strike was inevitable.

—The rift between management and the controllers during the two years before the strike was so deep that a strike was inevitable.

Carol Burnett says things 'keep getting better'

NEW YORK (AP) — Actress Carol Burnett says that at 48 she's in the autumn of her life, "and that's super. Things keep getting better and better."

"When I grow up, I want to be (actress) Ruth Gordon," she said in an interview in the April issue of McCall's magazine. "A woman who at 80 is so vital and interesting that her kids are always saying, 'We have been trying to get hold of you for days.'"

Talking about her future, she said: "I have this fantasy: 'My girls are married and they all have children and pressuring careers and interesting lives. And suddenly I step up on their doorsteps, just like Rosalind Russell as Auntie Mame."

"And I take my grandchildren by the hands and I say to my daughters, 'Bye dears, we're off to travel around the world. See you in a couple of years.' I'd love to be that kind of grandmother."

WINCHESTER, Va. (AP) — Elyse Dianne Knight, 21, an aspiring actress and daughter of actor Ted Knight, will be queen of the 55th annual Shenandoah Apple Blossom Festival in this northern Virginia city, festival officials say.

Miss Knight said her mother, Dorothy, plans to attend the April 29-May 2 festival and that her father is trying to arrange his schedule so he can make the trip too.

Her father played Ted Baxter, an egomaniacal television news anchorman, on "The Mary Tyler Moore Show." He now stars in ABC-TV's "Too Close for Comfort," in which he portrays the protective father of two grown daughters.

Miss Knight, who lives in Hollywood, is studying drama at the University of Southern California.

The 1981 Apple Blossom queen was Amelia Linden, daughter of Hal Linden, star of the "Barney Miller" television show.

AMMAN, Jordan (AP) — Prince Michael of Kent, Queen Elizabeth II's cousin, has arrived in the Jordanian capital to attend the inauguration of a potash plant on the coast of the Dead Sea.

Prince Michael

The $18 million plant, built by a group of British companies and due to be inaugurated today, stands at Ghor Alafi and is expected to bring Jordan $200 million annually through sales of the potassium compound.

NEW YORK (AP) — The woman who stayed with John Belushi in a Los Angeles hotel bungalow the night before his body was found March 5 says she and the comedian were just friends.

Cathy Smith, a backup singer for rock groups, said she stayed in the bungalow's living room while Belushi slept in the bedroom.

Miss Smith told ABC-TV "20/20" correspondent Tom Jarriel, for a report to be broadcast tonight, there was no one as close to Belushi as his wife "and there never would be." Miss Smith said she had known the comedian for five years.

Belushi, 33, died from an injected overdose of cocaine and heroin, a coroner's report said last week.

LONDON (AP) — Billy Graham plans an evangelistic tour of five English cities in the summer of 1984, his London office says.

Graham

Director Maurice Rowlandson said today the tour will run from the middle of May to the end of July, with Graham spending 10 days in each city. Graham was invited by inter-denominational Anglican and Protestant clergy and laymen, who will plan the tour.

Graham, 63, held his first British crusade in 1954. In the northwest resort of Blackpool earlier this month, he drew 9,000 people to a crusade-type meeting, the largest audience seen there, the Lancashire Evening Gazette reported.

Two Midlanders attend national JA conference

STAMFORD, Conn. — Gary D. Petersen, executive director of Junior Achievement of Midland, and Leonard Monroe, principal of Midland Freshman School, were among those attending Junior Achievement's 8th annual National Business Leadership Conference here today.

Vice President George Bush was to deliver the keynote address at the conference today, according to Dennis Hendrix, national chairman of JA and president of Texas Gas Transmission Corp.

Some 2,000 leaders of business, government and other fields are expected at this conference, which concludes with a black-tie dinner to honor the 1982 National Business Hall of Fame inductees.

JA is the oldest and largest non-profit organization offering a variety of programs to teach young people about the values of the American business system.

Ford offering buyer incentives

DETROIT (AP) — In hopes of sparking sales, Ford Motor Co.'s North American Tractor and Implement Operations will offer interest-free financing and three-year warranty plans, the automaker says.

Ford also is adding a new low-cost model to its Ford Series 10 and is giving free merchandise to buyers of some vehicles, said R.J. Nicolazzi, general operations manager of the tractor division.

The company will offer deferred payments and interest-free financing until January 1983 on the purchase of any of the new Ford TW Series farm tractors over 100 horsepower, Nicolazzi said Wednesday.

The three-year warranty program includes all Ford farm tractors through the TW series, except the FW series, he said.

Tower trying to keep military request intact

By DON WATERS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — The chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee is trying to convince his colleagues on a budget panel that they should not trim President Reagan's military spending plan.

Aides to Sen. John Tower, R-Texas, who was to appear before the Senate Budget Committee today, said he would point out the consequences to military strength that substantial cuts would bring.

Tower made similar comments in a speech last weekend, telling an audience at commissioning ceremonies for a new nuclear aircraft carrier that if Congress insists on cuts, "It must be able to identify which commitments we will no longer be able to honor."

In those remarks, the senator also said that if cuts are ordered, he will try to do it by reducing the number of people in uniform rather than weakening combat readiness and the Pentagon's weapons modernization program.

Tower's panel voted 13-3 March 4 to recommend that the Budget Committee accept the full $263 billion in budget authority Reagan has requested for national defense in the fiscal year that starts Oct. 1.

But the budget panel, which will set budget limits for Congress to follow, is not required to accept that recommendation. Leaders of the committee have proposed substantially lower ceilings.

Chairman Pete V. Domenici, R-N.M., has suggested an inflation-adjusted 5 percent increase for the Pentagon, half the Reagan request, while ranking Democrat Ernest Hollings of South Carolina has called for a defense spending freeze to help pare a deficit that the president has estimated at $96.4 billion.

Despite the widespread talk in Congress about cutbacks in Reagan's five-year, $1.6 trillion program to "rearm America," a private, pro-defense organization insisted Wednesday that the blueprint falls at least $100 billion short of what is needed to cope with a growing Soviet military threat.

Dozier claims hearing damaged

By CLARA HEMPHILL
Associated Press Writer

VERONA, Italy — U.S. Brig. Gen. James L. Dozier testified today that he suffered permanent hearing damage from listening to loud rock music through earphones for six weeks while he was held prisoner by Red Brigades terrorists.

Dozier, taking the witness stand on the fourth day of the trial of 17 men and women accused of kidnapping him December 17, said his hearing was also damaged by a blow to the ear when he was abducted.

"I was forced to listen to music and that has permanently damaged my hearing. First I asked that the type of music be changed and then that the volume of music be turned down, but this was never completely satisfactory," Dozier said. "The physical exam I have had has confirmed that the music has damaged my hearing."

The senior American commander at the Verona NATO base had said earlier he was forced to wear the earphones throughout his confinement, which ended Jan. 28 when anti-terrorist commandos rescued him from an apartment in Padua. The earphones and the music presumably were intended to keep him from overhearing his captors' conversations.

The general, wearing an olive green dress uniform, barely glanced at the defendants when he walked into the medieval courtroom here. He was seeing the faces of most of them for the first time. Dozier said in written testimony presented to the court earlier that they wore ski masks during his captivity.

On the stand, Dozier described the scuffle he had with two of the kidnapers who entered his Verona apartment posing as plumbers.

"I don't remember if I was hit with the hand or something in the hand. I saw a flashing light and then I fell. They said in English, 'We are the Red Brigades, we want your money.'"

"After I fell to the ground I saw one guy had my wife on her knees with his pistol pointed to her head. The other one was on top of me and he hit me again."

Dozier was taken from his Verona apartment in a trunk and held for six weeks in a "people's prison," a tent inside the terrorists' Padua hideout. His wife was left behind, chained to a chair in the kitchen. She eventually freed herself and notified authorities.

In Dozier's written testimony to investigating magistrates he said the Red Brigades had two objectives in the kidnapping — first, they wanted to trade him for their jailed comrades; second, they wanted information about what they claimed was a plan by the North Atlantic Treaty Organization and America to control Italy politically, economically and militarily.

DEAR ABBY
Daughter wants to date

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I am a very upset and frustrated 15-year-old. My parents have forbidden me to date boys of a different religion, but I have been doing it on the sneak and this bothers me.

I can understand their objections and have no intentions of marrying out of my faith, but I am not considering marriage now.

My parents and I have had some very heated arguments over this. Dating at 15 and marriage are two different things, but my parents can't see it that way.

I am proud of my heritage, and when it's time to look for a husband, I will restrict my dating to men of my own faith. In the meantime, I can't see the harm in dating others.

I hate sneaking around, but what am I to do? — 15 IN SHAKER HEIGHTS

DEAR 15: If you have no intentions of marrying out of your faith, you will avoid a lot of possible heartaches by dating only boys you may one day marry. The heart doesn't care what the head is thinking.

DEAR ABBY: Three of us girls from the office decided to go to a club that features male strippers. I told my boyfriend I was going and he didn't want me to go, but he wouldn't give me a reason.

I went anyway just to see what it was like, and I enjoyed it. I didn't get "turned on" like some of the women in the audience appeared to be. I thought it was funny. The audience was more fun to watch than the male strippers.

One of the girls who went with us is married, and she said her husband would not approve of her going to see men strip, so she didn't tell him. The other girl is engaged, and she said her fiancé thought it was disgusting.

Now we're asking you, Abby. Why would a man get upset because his wife or girlfriend wanted to see a male stripper? — NORA

DEAR NORA: Probably for the same reason some women get upset because their husbands or boyfriends want to see female strippers. They feel that comparisons will be made and they won't measure up.

DEAR ABBY: The letter from the woman who lamented that her guests never used her pretty little guest towels, preferring instead to dry their hands on the rug or whatever was handy, brought back memories.

When my wife was living, we didn't entertain much. But when we did, my wife always had the bathroom spotlessly clean, and she laid out her fancy guest towels. Of course, my son and I were admonished not to use them — they were for the guests. However, none of the guests used them either.

Finally, after one party, my wife mentioned that nobody used her guest towels and she seemed hurt about it. The next time we entertained, I went into the bathroom and dried my hands on not one, but TWO guest towels, and just to make sure they looked "used," I wadded them up and left them in plain view. Sure enough, one or two guests followed my example!

The morning after the party, my wife and I were discussing what a good time we had, and she said, "And this time they used the guest towels!"

After that, I always did the same thing, and it worked like magic. I never did tell my wife my secret, bless her heart. — SNEAKY IN INDIANA

DEAR ABBY: I tried to surprise my boyfriend with an engagement ring for Valentine's Day, and he refused to accept it. I was really hurt. We're not kids, Abby. I'm 27 and he's 26, and we've been dating for nearly two years.

We're both working, but I make more than he makes, so I figured I could better afford to give him a ring. So I went ahead and bought one. I wasn't really trying to pressure him into getting married right away, but I guess he thought I was because he's cooled off quite a bit since then.

Do you think I was too pushy? How should I handle things now? — HURTING IN HOUSTON

DEAR HURTING: Apparently your boyfriend wasn't ready for a formal engagement, which is what a ring usually signifies. Back off, and let him call the signals. Your valentine had a rather pushy ring to it.

Color some fun

Copley News Service

Fun for the kiddies (and mom, too, if the truth be known!). FABRIC CRAYONS: These nifty crayons can be used to create all kinds of nifty artwork. Special drawings can be preserved on T-shirts, pillowcases or sheets.

Lightly pencil in, then color your picture on plain white paper. Use plenty of pressure and, when your picture is finished, brush away any tiny flecks of crayon that could mar your work. Preheat iron.

Place fabric right side up over a phone book or other firm surface. Place picture face down on fabric. Cover with press cloth. Lower iron onto work. Do not move iron back and forth. Lift and lower until you have worked the entire area. To check picture, carefully lift one corner.

There's no pride quite like wearing a T-shirt on which you have done the artwork!

Ice cream cones, teddy bears, hearts, alligators, lady bugs... Spelling words? No, sir. Those are just a few of the darling little buttons put out by JHB International. You will want to use them not only as buttons, but as tiny pins, barrette ornaments and other accessories.

If you do not want to stitch your special buttons in place, you can use button pins for easy transfer from one garment to another.

Buttons do not always have to be accompanied by buttonholes. They can be slipped into little loops, or they can just be there all by themselves, looking pretty.

Check out buttons for decorating that special spring outfit. It will get raves.

A TEXAN'S RECORDS

Where have all the "Texans" gone? They simplified their personal Financial Records System by attending the "Investin' Texan" session at the Texan II Crash Course on April 8, 1982, and are off to the "wild blue yonder" for a Fun Summer '82!

Now, pardner, you just read an advance news release. And, if you hurry, you can still be a part of that future! How? By pre-registering NOW for the "Texan II" Crash Course to be conducted each Thursday night in April, beginning on April 8th!

But, get moving. The 200 reservations are going fast! Give us a call or mail your registratin fee of $15 right away! Pre-registration is required to be included, pardner!

One of the Texan classes to be offered during the "Investin' Texan" session on the evening of April 8 is "Personal Financial Records." The "How-To's," "Simplification" and "Systems" to consider including tips on present and future home computer selection and use will be included.

COMPUTERS-YOUR WORLD

If the computer is not already your family's "newest member," it will be in the next 10 to 15 years. In fact, the home as we know it today may well be completely reshaped. Are you prepared for the 50 to 100 percent change in your home between now and 1992 or 1997?

SECRETARY-MAID

As a home appliance, the computer will act as a secretary and maid. Wired into the home's electrical system, the electronic brain can be programmed to perk coffee in the morning, heat the oven and start dinner, secure the doors — and even vacuum the floors!

It could also select the least expensive times to do laundry or heat water.

VALUES AT STAKE

However, while the prospects of convenience and hassle-free living sound exciting, other aspects of the computer invasion of the home require additional effort to preserve our human values and dignity.

People have a fear of computers — fear of being replaced by a machine. While computers can out perform people in some situations, the computer can only do what it's programmed to do.

We need to accept the routine or mundane tasks that computers can do, which, in turn, allows us more time to spend on exciting activities and interests.

FAMILY COMMUNICATIONS "AT STAKE"

As computers become a more popular appliance in households, we also face the danger of decreased communication by family members.

Families who already had limited communication before the introduction of the computer are now becoming further alienated from one another in some cases.

Interacting with a machine and responding to the challenge of creating new functions for the machine to perform become an all-consuming task which causes some people to forget the other members of the household.

As a result, communication with anyone other than the machine becomes also non-existent in these cases.

LIVING WITH A COMPUTER

Awareness of the addictive nature of computer programming and interaction can prevent much of this alienation. Establishing a schedule for various family members, setting time limits for computer activities and sharing computer activities as a family are some of the ways to prevent the loss of inter-family communications.

Personal privacy remains an issue in our age of electronics. Some legislation has been passed to protect individual privacy, more is in process and still more needs to be written. Individuals need to analyze the full impact of sharing information via electronic mail, computer information networks and electronic data processing.

Press convention planned

The 90th annual state convention of Texas Press Women will be held in Odessa March 26-28 at the Holiday Inn.

Hosted by District Two of TPW, which encompasses most of the Permian Basin, the convention will get underway with the board of directors meeting and a local tour on Friday.

Also on Friday, Midland's 318th District Court Judge Barbara Culver will be featured speaker for the Women of Achievement banquet. Six women from districts throughout the state have been nominated for the honor, and one will represent Texas in the National Federation of Press Women competition.

Among the activities on Saturday are six enrichment workshops, conducted by local experts in various fields relating to journalism.

Saturday night, winners in the annual TPW communications contest will be announced. Winning entries in each contest category will be forwarded to national competition in June.

THE ART OF LIVING

Who takes charge?

By MORTON HUNT
(Special from Reader's Digest)

Sociologist Joan Aldous of the University of Notre Dame recently asked 48 families to decide what to do about a list of problems they might encounter, everything from an overdrawn bank account to a drug bust.

Aldous found that families which let every member speak up did better than the leader-dominated families at gathering information and considering alternatives. Moreover, she found that the more democratic the family, the fewer real-life problems they had.

Of course, when your house is on fire or your 10-year-old is bleeding severely, someone must take charge at once — but who? In an autocratic family, it's the usual head; in a democratic family, it's the one with the skills needed then and there — a far more sensible choice.

Case in point: A 50-year-old man I know became abusive toward his wife one night and threatened her with a kitchen knife. She managed to call her daughter and son-in-law, who rushed to her aid. In a traditional family, one might expect the man, the son-in-law, to take charge. But, in this democratic family, it was the daughter, a nurse with psychiatric training, who took over. She sedated her father and arranged for immediate hospitalization.

The art of preparing pasta

By VINOD CHHABRA
Hearst Feature Service

No matter how you twirl it, pasta is one of the best food buys per pound and per dollar. It is 12 percent protein, loaded with vitamins and minerals, contains fiber but no cholesterol, is low in sodium and — get this — is a low-fat food.

Low-fat is right. Blame the popular pasta-makes-you-plump notion on those TV commercials starring large mamas dishing out platters of perfect pasta for misrepresentation.

Says Janet Dewart, product development director at the Gioia Macaroni Company: "Pasta actually helps reduce fat intake. It is high in satiety, which means it makes you feel full longer, and the little fat it contains is easy-to-digest polyunsaturated fat."

A filling half-pound serving of spaghetti with half a cup of tomato sauce adds up to less than 400 calories. That's about 140 calories less than a hamburger lunch of 4 ounces uncooked beef in a 3 1/2-inch roll and 10 French fries.

Americans are no laggards when it comes to eating pasta. Last year we spent more than $1 billion to put away close to 9 pounds per person, placing the United States fourth in per capita pasta consumption. That's a lot of low-fat nutrition, but only if what you've been eating is the real thing — pasta made from pure semolina, coarsely ground durum wheat. "Look for that on the package," says Ms. Dewart. "100 percent semolina." The pasta should have a golden amber color, be free of excessive fractures and cuts and uniform in size.

While several hundreds of varieties of pasta are available in the United States, Ms. Dewart says spaghetti, pasta alphabets and elbows account for more than 90 percent of the sales in the Northeast.

"There are dozens of varieties that have yet to be discovered," she adds. "Aside from the nutritional value and low cost, pasta dishes are the delight of many gourmets, and we're seeing more and more non-Italian and food boutiques serving pasta dishes."

To keep pace with the growing demand for pasta in the United States, one of the nation's largest food companies, Foremost-McKesson, has opened a $1 million pasta research laboratory near San Francisco to come up with new versions of the noodle.

"There is a great future for pasta," says David Holmes, F.M.'s product development manager. Athletes, he adds, are now among its best advocates.

Those who know the role of food in physical performance choose pasta over a steak the night before the big game because of its capability of storing body glycogen — the energy that is stored and called upon in the game or race.

"Consumers and restaurants are discovering that pasta is so much better in terms of flavor, texture and taste when it is not overcooked, and prepared just before it is served," says Ms. Dewart. For that reason, most pasta lovers prefer their noodles prepared al dente — to the tooth. In other words, just cooked, but still with a little bite left

Hot cross buns with a different touch

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

Recipes for Hot Cross Buns usually vary only in the number of eggs and the amount of sugar and butter (or other fat) that are added to a yeast dough made with white flour. We've passed on to you a fair number of versions of the recipe.

But this year we tried something really new: a Hot Cross Bun recipe that calls for white flour plus quick-cooking oats ground until flour-like. With an electric blender at hand, the oats are easy to grind. Although the dough is beaten rather than kneaded, the buns have a smooth soft crust and a light texture.

HOT CROSS BUNS

- 1 1/4 cups quick-cooking oats
- 2 3/4 to 3 cups all-purpose flour
- 1 teaspoon cinnamon
- 2 packages dry yeast
- 1/4 cup warm water (110 to 115 degrees)
- 1 cup warm milk (110 to 115 degrees)
- 1-3rd cup sugar
- 1/4 cup oil
- 2 teaspoons salt
- 3 large eggs
- 1 cup raisins

In an electric blender whirl the oats until flour-like in texture — about 1 minute; mix with 1 cup of the flour and the cinnamon; reserve. Dissolve the yeast in the water.

In the large bowl of an electric mixer gently beat together until blended the milk, sugar, oil, salt, yeast mixture, 2 of the eggs and the oat-flour mixture. At medium speed, scraping bowl a few times, beat for 3 minutes. Stir in the raisins. Stir in enough of the remaining flour to make a moderately stiff batter. Cover bowl; let rise in a warm place (about 80 degrees) until almost doubled — about 1 1/2 hours. Stir down — batter will be very sticky. Turn out onto a generously floured surface or pastry cloth. With a stockinet-covered rolling pin, roll out to 1/4-inch thickness; cut out with a 2 1/2-inch round floured cutter.

With floured hands, shape each round into a smooth ball. Place, well apart, on greased cookie sheets. Cover; let rise as previously until almost doubled — about 1 hour. Beat the remaining egg just until foamy; brush over buns, making sure egg does not drip onto pans. Bake in a preheated 375-degree oven until golden brown and a cake tester inserted in the center comes out clean — 12 to 15 minutes. With a wide metal spatula remove to a wire rack; cool completely. From the tip of a small metal spatula, drop the frosting to form a cross over the top of each bun. Makes about 2 dozen.

HINTS FROM HELOISE

Enjoy an economical vacation at home

DEAR HELOISE:

With vacation time right around the corner, many of us are finding our budgets much too strained for a trip of any great distance or length of time.

Why not plan a vacation at home? The best vacation of all can be one centered on things around home.

Within a given radius, plan an itinerary of all the places you have never visited that are within a short drive. Then select one for each day you have free.

Stock up on frozen dinners, paper plates, cups and plastic ware. No cooking unless it can be done without messing up the kitchen. Eat out just as you do when away from home.

Now, relax, see old friends or phone them. Visit the places on your itinerary at leisure. Catch up on your reading. Do something just for fun each day.

How wonderful home can be. There is nothing quite like it. I hope you have as much fun as I have had vacationing at my back door. — Helen Conwell

Your Chamber of Commerce loves you, and so do I! — Heloise

HOUSE HUNTING

Dear Heloise: House or apartment hunting can be a real chore. To make the task easier, we listed each residence we wanted to see on a 3 x 5 card.

All pertinent information was listed on one side, such as price, size, location, number of bedrooms, baths, etc.

We organized the cards according to location. Then, when we did get in the car to look, all we had to do was decide which part of town we were going to, pull out the cards and put them in order according to street location.

As we passed each place, we noted on the cards our impression of the neighborhood and streets, convenience, schools, etc.

It made a difficult chore much

NEW TRADITION

Dear Heloise: When my niece had her beautiful traditional wedding in my home, instead of filling bags with rice to shower the couple, we filled the bags with bird seed.

This eliminated cleanup on the driveway and entrance to our home, as the little birds took care of it for us.

It worked beautifully. — Mrs. Richard Connally

TOUCHLESS WAY

Dear Heloise: When you have to pound a small or short tack or nail into a wall, here's a way to keep from pounding those fingers along with it.

Push the nail through a square of thin cardboard, then hold onto the cardboard while driving in the nail. — Ann Ruschak

KEEP IT LEGAL

Dear Heloise: I love to fish but, in my state, the law requires that a fishing license be kept on your person at all times while fishing.

It's difficult to fish hanging on to your purse, so I inserted the license in a plastic pin-backed name tag, the kind they use at conventions.

I taped each end closed. I pin it to my shirt or jacket where it's easily visible to a conservation officer. — Imogene McKinney

SHARP IDEA

Dear Heloise: I cut my scouring pads in half with my scissors, thus saving by using only half a pad for cleaning.

Not only that but when I cut the pads I'm sharpening my kitchen shears a bit at the same time. — Mrs. George Scrivani

Italian wines of 1971 reported excellent

By NATHAN CHROMAN
Los Angeles Times
Washington Post
News Service

For decades the question of vintage of Italian wines has puzzled Italian wine lovers. Heated discussions abound over the merits of one French vintage to another. But frankly, I've yet to hear much, if anything, about the qualities of an Italian grape harvest. This was rectified recently with an excellent seminar by visiting Italian producers enthusiastic about the 1971 vintage.

In a variety of red wine regions, 1971 produced a plethora of good to excellent wines. Most are mature and, if available, make for superb drinking today.

The seminar's tasting of 1971s produced a number of excellent bottles such as Barbera d'Asti, Duca d'Asti, Generoso and mature today, the wine provided a long, interesting finish. Barbera here must be at least 12.5 percent alcohol and aged for two years (one year in wood), with the superior version requiring 13 percent and three years of age. The wines are frequently round, soft and fruity and make for good drinking rather early. Look for vintages 1978 and 1979, but avoid 1977.

Two '71 Chiantis caught my fancy: Chianti Classico, Riserva Ducale, Ruffino, and Chianti, Castello di Nipozzano (Marchese de Frescobaldi). The former is velvet-like and full-bodied with traces of tannin. The latter, produced east of Florence, is rounder and in a lighter style with a dose more flavor. Both are fine Chianti examples.

As a leader in modern day Italian red wine making, Chianti probably has no peer. Perhaps its strength can be traced to the reluctance on the part of many producers to use the white wine grapes (as done in the past) Trebbiano and Malvasia. It is believed that Frescobaldi has limited its use of white wine grapes here to 5 percent and in some cases, less. Look to 1979, 1978 and 1977 for fine vintages.

An outstanding 1971 is Tignanello, Antinori. This is a superb, full-flavored wine with a perfumed nose that is subtle and elegant. The wine is made from Sangiovese, Canaiolo and Cabernet sauvignon grapes. Antinori is the venerable and esteemed Chianti house that first produced this wine with the 1971 vintage. Look to succeeding vintages of 1977, 1978 and 1979.

Another super Italian red is Barbaresco, Gaja. A wine with ample flavor and follow-through in the finish, it still requires a year or two of aging. It is well-balanced and generous, with remaining tannins representing 20 days of contact with the grape skins and four years in wood. A bit expensive at $32, it is an outstanding wine.

The firm of Gaja, now in its fifth generation, 20 years ago determined to reduce its production in favor of higher quality. Now, 70 percent of its vintage is from Nebbiolo grapes that make up this virtually unknown wine of Barbaresco.

The wines of Barbaresco are encompassed by the villages of Neive and Treiso and literally stretch to the area of Alba, a hub-town known for fine Piedmont wine and the gloriously scented tartufo, Italy's white truffle. For Barbaresco, look for 1974, 1978 and 1979.

An absolute favorite is Barolo, Pio Cesare 1971. This is an outstanding bottle with a clean characteristic Barolo nose and a lovely long, velvety, finish. At $14.99, it is an outstanding buy.

Barolos rank among the world's best reds, yet they can never be widely marketed simply because of quantity limitations.

Lamb featured in Mexican recipe

beans in Lamb Shanks Mexicana.

Old Mexico with its ancient ruins, aquamarine seas, mariachies and charming people is quickly becoming a part of America via its cuisine. The cooking components — meat, cheese, green chilies, red peppers, beans, fresh vegetables and corn or flour tortillas — become a myriad of Mexican flavor combinations.

Delicately-flavored lamb is the perfect foil for all the various Mexican dishes usually made with beef, pork or chicken.

Another interesting, attractive, and economical Mexican-style entree you might try soon is the Lamb Flauta. Lamb, refried beans, chopped tomatoes and Monterey Jack cheese are combined, wrapped in flour tortillas and baked. They are a whole meal and can be prepared ahead.

LAMB SHANKS MEXICANA

1 package (1-3/4 oz.) chili seasoning mix

- 2 tablespoons flour
- 2 teaspoons salt
- 4 lamb shanks, trimmed of all fat
- 3 tablespoons cooking oil
- 1 can (1 lb. 12 oz.) tomatoes
- 1 cup chopped onions
- 1 can (16 oz.) chili-style beans
- 2 tablespoons corn meal

oil in large skillet. Brown lamb in hot oil over medium-high heat. In casserole dish large enough to accommodate all ingredients, place lamb shanks. Mix tomatoes with onions and remaining chili seasonings, pour over shanks. Bake at 325 degrees F. for one hour. Remove casserole from oven. Skim off any fat. Add beans mixed with corn meal to casserole, stirring gently to combine. Return to oven and continue to bake for 30 minutes, or until slightly thickened and lamb is tender.

- ### LAMB FLAUTAS
- 1 can (1 lb.) refried beans
 - 12 flour tortillas
 - 2 cups cooked lamb, finely chopped
 - 1 cup chopped tomatoes
 - 1/2 cup cooked rice
 - 2 cup taco sauce
 - 2 tablespoons diced green chili peppers
 - 1 teaspoon salt
 - 1-1/2 cups Monterey

- Jack cheese, shredded
 - 1 can (8 oz.) tomato sauce
 - 1-1/2 teaspoons chili powder
- Spread two to three tablespoons refried beans on each tortilla. Top each with about three tablespoons lamb. Combine rice, tomatoes, taco sauce, chili peppers and salt. Spoon about three tablespoons tomato mixture over lamb. Using one cup of the cheese, sprinkle it equally over lamb and tomato mixture. Roll up tortillas, place end-side down in rectangular baking dish. Heat tomato sauce and chili powder. Spoon over tortillas. Sprinkle with remaining 1/2 cup cheese. Bake at 350 degrees F. for about 20 minutes, or until hot and bubbly.

THE BUTCHER Answering questions about meat

By MERLE ELLIS

Over the weeks and months, I have accumulated on my desk a stack of letters containing questions from readers of this column. Some questions are about silly things: "I have this bet with my neighbor about Rocky Mountain oysters. He thinks they are freshwater shellfish from the streams of Colorado. Can you set him straight so I can collect on my bet?" Most, however, are more serious questions about meat. We'll answer some of those today.

"What is the difference between ham hocks and ham shanks?" I bought some ham hocks for a pot of beans but there was almost no meat on them. My friend told me I should have bought ham shanks instead. What's the difference?

Ham hocks are the bony ankle portion of the pig's legs — front and rear. They have the skin left on and contain very little meat. They are cured and smoked just like ham, though they often are more heavily smoked since their main contribution to any dish is flavor, not meat.

Ham shanks are cured and smoked the same way but they have much more meat, less bone and no skin. When the hind leg of a pig is boned out to make one of the modern boneless ham products — canned ham, "tavern ham," boneless rolled ham, etc. — the lower leg bone is removed along with the tender muscles that surround it. These shanks are cured and smoked to make ham shanks. They may cost a little more but they are, indeed, much meatier than ham hocks and just as flavorful.

"What is Proveni veal and where can I find it?" I assume it is imported from Italy, but I have been unable to find Italian veal anywhere.

It's not Italian. Proveni is an acronym — you know — a word made up from several other words. In this case, PROtein, VItamins and Minerals. It is a trademark for a company that produces and markets formula-fed (milk fed) veal under the "Delft Blue" label. Veal is basically a by-product of the dairy industry. For a dairy cow to produce milk, she must be kept "fresh." That means she must have an offspring once each year.

Until the early 1960s, veal calves in this country were slaughtered shortly after birth (3 to 4 weeks), but the quality of the meat left a great deal to be desired. In the early '60s, the European method of formula feeding was introduced into this country. With this method, veal calves are placed on a formula consisting mostly of dry-milk solids for up to 16 weeks. The resulting meat is the highest quality, most tender, delicate veal available.

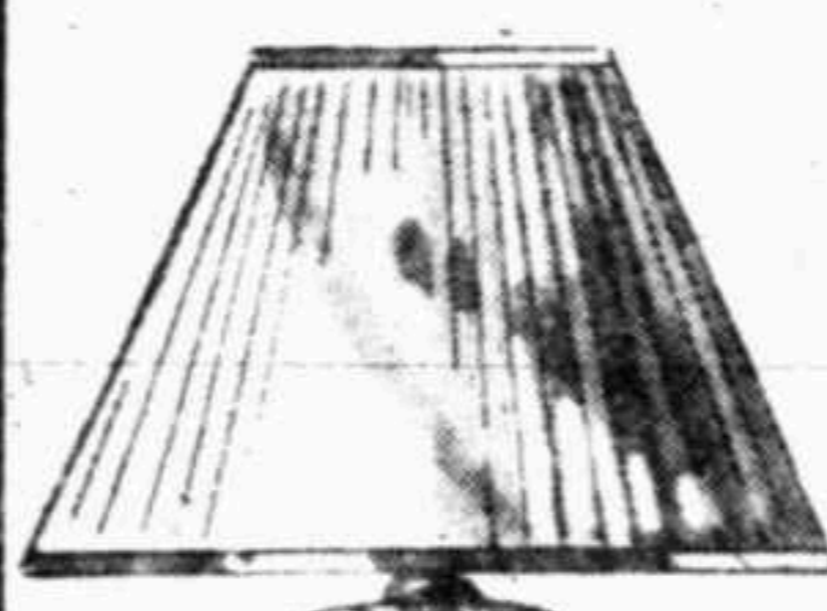

Proveni is formula-fed veal. (ital) Plume de Veau (venetian) is another top-quality formula-fed veal — and it isn't French. Both are produced in the United States and both are expensive, but if you like good veal they are worth the price.

Last week one of the supermarkets in my area ran an ad for chuck roast — on special for 87 cents a pound. That sounded like a good buy, but I went to the market and looked at the special, and it was so fat and awful that I wouldn't have taken it if they were giving it away. My question is: "Do markets order extra fatty meat to put on special?" And, if they do, is that legal?"

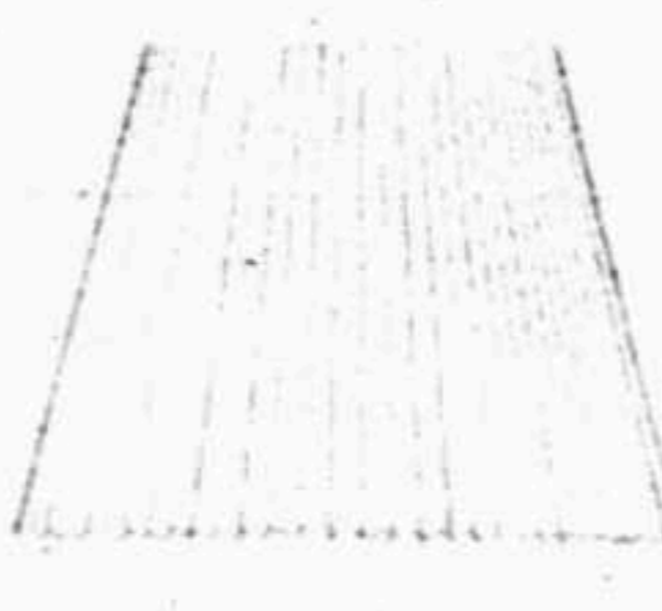

I have encountered that problem many times. It is common and one of the worst merchandising gimmicks in any supermarket's bag of tricks.

Most markets do not order inferior merchandise for their special ads. What far too many of them do, however, is alter their "trim" for specials. For example, when T-bone steaks are on special, the market will trim them differently from when they are selling for their regular price. A longer "tail" is left on and the outside fat is twice as thick as it normally would be.

Horticulture short course offered

John Williamson

A horticulture short course for adults, sponsored by the Midland High School Vocational Agriculture Department, will be held at 7:30 p.m. April 19-22 in the MHS Vocational Agriculture Building, according to Dr. Charles Thompson, vocational administrator for the Midland Independent School District, and Gerald Oakes, teacher of vocational agriculture at MHS.

John Williamson, horticulture specialist with the Agricultural Education Adult Specialist Program and the Department of Horticulture at Texas A&M University, will be the instructor. During the dates the short course is in progress, Williamson will be available to assist enrollees with individual problems and to provide on-the-farm and in-the-home instruction.

Williamson, who is qualified as a certified teacher of horticulture in the vocational agriculture program in Texas, said the course can be adjusted to the wishes and interests of people enrolled but that he expects to cover such subjects as plant growth and development, propagating media, plant propagation, vegetable gardening, developing and maintaining the landscape, establishing and caring for lawns, houseplants, and greenhouse production, operation and management. The course includes classroom and laboratory-type instruction.

Short courses in horticulture, as well as other subject matter, are available to adults throughout the state under this cooperative program between the Texas Education Agency and Texas A&M University. The program is designed to make the services of specialists available to conduct short courses under the supervision of public schools. The program enables teachers of vocational agriculture to provide improved educational services to farm people.

Specialists also are available in the fields of beef production, farm arc welding, farm electric wiring and safety, oxy-acetylene welding, pasture management and tractor maintenance.

Persons interested in enrolling in the short course should contact Mr. Oakes at 682-1322. Horticulture short course certificates will be presented to enrollees who attend all four of the training sessions.

Kremlin loosening grip on farmers?

By BRYAN BRUMLEY
Associated Press Writer

AGRICULTURE

MOSCOW (AP) — The Kremlin, showing signs of loosening its iron grip on farming, has cautiously endorsed a new policy designed to decentralize the management of agriculture and stimulate production from privately owned plots.

The shift comes amid consumers' complaints that food is less plentiful and of poorer quality this winter than in many years. Farm output in 1981 was 2 percent less than the year before, and the government has not announced final figures on the grain harvest last year, indicating it was so poor it was embarrassing.

President Leonid I. Brezhnev, apparently exasperated by the third consecutive bad harvest and the general inefficiency of Soviet farming, called food production the nation's foremost "political problem."

In a major speech Tuesday, he said a new program would "outline ways of radically solving" agricultural shortcomings.

The program is to be announced at a meeting of the Communist Party central committee, possibly in June. Soviet and Western analysts predict key parts will be based on experiments in decentralization and private farming carried out in the Abkhaz region of Soviet Georgia and the Talsinsk region of Latvia.

Agricultural managers in the experimental areas raised production by coordinating decisions through a regional council instead of referring them to the sluggish Moscow bureaucracy. Georgian officials encouraged peasants to raise more livestock on their private plots.

Josef Stalin centralized and collectivized Soviet agriculture with great loss of life during the early 1930s. Until recently, the conservative traditionalists in the Kremlin resisted pressure to de-collectivize agriculture although farmers tilling private plots now produce 61 percent of the nation's potatoes, 54 percent of its fruit, 34.3 percent of its eggs, 30.2 percent of its vegetables and 29 percent of its meat and milk from only 1.4 percent of the land, according to official statistics.

The shift was signaled last November by Pravda, the Soviet Communist Party newspaper, which wrote in an editorial: "Party committees and Soviet organs must henceforth strengthen local management links and encourage initiatives by farms and their partners."

Government and party newspapers recently carried enthusiastic reports of the Georgian and Latvian experiments, which are similar to reforms that have boosted farm production in another member of the Soviet bloc, Hungary.

The official seal of approval came last Thursday via the Supreme Soviet, the rubber-stamp national parliament. It recommended that regional governments examine the experiments carefully.

So far, the senior leader to identify himself publicly with decentralization and increased private farming is Eduard A. Shevernadze, the party's first secretary in Georgia and a non-voting, candidate member of the ruling Politburo.

Vice President Vasily V. Kuznetsov, another candidate member of the Politburo, also spoke positively of the initiatives during the Supreme Soviet's discussion of them.

Western analysts believe they also have the backing of Brezhnev and his protégé Konstantin U. Chernenko, a Politburo member who spoke recently of the need to shift economic strategy to meet the demands of the workers and other consumers.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Lloyd Bentsen says Agriculture Secretary John R. Block is dawdling while thousands of American farmers face a dilemma over how to finance their 1982 crops.

"It's worse now" than it was a month ago when senators and representatives pleaded with Block and officials of the Farmers Home Administration to make more money available for farmers, the Texas Democrat said Wednesday.

In parts of the country, farmers have been hit by a third straight year of low commodity prices.

"A lot of other senators are with me on this, and I'm going to introduce a resolution in a few days to try to push (the FmHA) harder on this," Bentsen said during his monthly news conference.

Bentsen released a copy of a letter he received earlier this week from Agriculture Secretary John R. Block that talked of more money for farmers but made no promises.

"The letter said they have all these regulations to look at, but they've had all this time and they ought to move on it and make this money available," Bentsen said.

Congress has authorized Block to make available FmHA economic emergency loans up to a total of $600 million. Block has never drawn from the fund and has contended recently that there has been no need yet to tap that resource.

Aid for Mexican agriculture urged

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States should be sending farm tools — not jet planes and destroyers — to Mexico, a Hispanic congressman from Texas has complained.

Rep. Henry B. Gonzalez, D-Texas, of San Antonio said Mexico already is laboring under a huge foreign debt and its money would be better spent developing agriculture.

The country is unable to produce enough food to meet its own needs, Gonzalez said in a speech on the House floor.

The present U.S. policy "substitutes sales of jet fighters for less beautiful, but more needed tools and credit for simple farming," Gonzalez added.

If the United States is to prevent bloodshed in Latin America, and if it wants to promote its own long-term interests, "our policy must be one that is on the side of the hopes and aspirations of ordinary people," Gonzalez said.

We are ambivalent about preemptive jump overcalls. Often, they crowd the auction mercilessly and keep the opponents from getting to their best contract. But sometimes they force the opponents into makable contracts that they wouldn't reach on their own steam, or draw a blueprint for declarer in the play of the hand. Here's an example.

West's preempt did prevent the opponents from conducting a scientific investigation of their prospects. But South made up for the lack of bidding space by simply bidding what he hoped he could make.

West led the king of spades, and declarer was not unhappy with his chances. It seemed that the contract would hinge on one of two minor-suit finesses, and the odds of one of them succeeding were better than 3-to-1. However, declarer decided that, in view of West's preempt, the possibility that neither finess would succeed was increased, so he cast about for another line.

He won the ace of spades, crossed to dummy with the ten of trumps and ruffed a spade. A heart to the king put declarer back in dummy for another spade ruff. When declarer now cashed he ace of hearts, East had been strapped of all his cards in the major suits.

Declarer continued with a diamond to the king, a diamond back to the ace and a third diamond. East won the queen but, because the suit divided evenly, he was end played. He was forced to lead a club away from the king. Declarer won the ten of clubs, crossed to dummy's ace and discarded his last club on the thirteenth diamond.

What if the diamonds had split 4-2 and East had been able to exit safely with a diamond? Declarer would have been no worse off than if he tried both finesses. He would ruff the diamond and fall back on the club finess for his slam. Only if West had queen-third, or queen-fourth of diamonds would South's line fail, and that was unlikely on the auction.

Rubber bridge clubs throughout the country use the four-deal bridge format. Do they know something you don't? 'Full' calories contain energy, vitamins, minerals

Dear Dr. Solomon: Refined sugar receives such bad press lately. I read that it is full of empty calories. If one calorie is empty, is another one full? — E.B., Oakland, Calif.

Dear E.B.: Absolutely! Empty calories, such as those in refined sugar provide only energy and nothing else. Other calories provide energy as well as vitamins and minerals.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My daughter is a very pretty 19-year-old girl — pretty, that is, except for her nose. I tell her that if she had plastic surgery, she would be more popular, but she says she already is popular. Wouldn't you wonder why a girl would not want to make herself more attractive when she could so easily do so? — Mrs. T.O., Trenton, N.J.

Dear Mrs. O.: I would wonder why you are so concerned about your daughter's appearance when she apparently is satisfied with it. I don't know how much of an issue this has become between the two of you, but I have the uneasy feeling that you may be creating a problem where none exists.

At 19 years of age, your daughter should certainly be able to decide what, if anything, she wants to do about her appearance. All you will succeed in doing by pursuing the subject is to make her self-conscious.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My doctor says I should go to Baltimore for your one-day stop smoking treatment if I want to keep from getting an ulcer, but that I can continue to take a drink now and then. Does that make any sense? — Lester, Burlington, Vermont

Dear Lester: Not everyone is in agreement on the exact causes or treatment of peptic ulcers, but your doctor's advice is in keeping with that of experts in the field.

Dr. I. Michael Samloff, professor of medicine at the University of Calif., Los Angeles, School of Medicine, says that the risk factors for peptic ulcer include aspirin and cigarette smoking, but not alcohol, coffee, or diet. Cigarette smokers have a higher incidence of both gastric and duodenal ulcer, and a higher death rate from peptic ulcer; moreover, their ulcers are less likely to heal.

Regarding my anti-smoking treatment: You should get whatever treatment will help you stop smoking and suits your lifestyle best. My anti-smoking treatment consists of a combination of decreasing the acid in your system so that you gradually eliminate the nicotine from your body; behavior modification and a shot in the arm that is postulated to release beta-endorphins. It is believed that beta-endorphins are released by the brain when you smoke, and the beta-endorphins make you "feel good." My theory is that the shot in the arm also releases beta-endorphins, giving you the same effect of "feeling good," but without smoking.

Three years ago, when I brought this method to the United States from Paris, I injected into the nose and ears. But, I now have a new approach that works just as well if not better by injecting into the arm. The majority of patients who have received my new treatment have stopped smoking the day of the treatment and have not smoked since.

If you have a medical question, write to Neil Solomon, M.D., 1726 Reisterstown Road, Baltimore, Md. 21208. Dr. Solomon cannot give personal replies but will answer as many questions as possible in his column.

Clayburgh film explores Valium use

By ELAINE WARREN
Hearst Feature Service

If movie jokes were registered on a laugh meter, the needle would probably jump off the scale every time there was a Valium joke.

In the film "Starting Over," Burt Reynolds began hyperventilating in a department store and blurted out: "Anybody have a Valium?" Everybody in sight obligingly rushed forward to offer prescription bottles — while the audience went into convulsive laughter.

And then there are the knowing cracks that Woody Allen has made about his favorite pharmaceutical.

But with the opening of the latest film to deal with Valium, "I'm Dancing as Fast as I Can," there aren't many laughs — least of all from the Hoffmann-La Roche Company.

The film, starring Jill Clayburgh and based on the best-selling book by Barbara Gordon, graphically depicts Gordon's cold turkey withdrawal from a severe addiction to the tranquilizer, for years the most widely-prescribed drug in America.

ANTICIPATING that the film will generate a new wave of anti-Valium controversy, Hoffmann-La Roche, based in Nutley, New Jersey, has issued a statement saying the movie "demonstrates the blatant misuse" of the drug and illustrates a "dramatic imbalance with great emphasis on Valium."

The company is concerned, it says, "that the film can generate serious, unjustified patient concerns and disrupt important doctor/patient relationships."

A spokesman for Hoffmann-La Roche, Kenneth Berkowitz, says he and others at the company who have viewed the film feel that it may keep those who really need the drug from taking it, and that it minimizes Gordon's "long and significant history of severe emotional problems," which make her different from the typical Valium user.

Executives at Paramount Pictures, which released the film, have reacted to the company's statement by saying it was not their intention to make an anti-Valium tract.

"We did not set out to make this film to attack Valium," says Michael Eisner, Paramount's president. "We set out to make a film that showed the kind of irresponsible use of all sorts of drugs, including Valium, and also the irresponsibility of doctors who prescribe them. We don't think the movie will cure anything, but we think it will be entertaining and enlightening."

enlightening."

HOFFMAN-LA ROCHE does acknowledge in its statement that the film dramatically illustrates "what can occur when a person with serious emotional problems takes more and more of a prescription medication in an attempt to avoid or hide from emotional problems."

Valium, classified as a "minor" tranquilizer, last year grossed nearly $200 million for Hoffmann-La Roche. It was introduced 20 years ago. In recent years, however, increased publicity about its potential dangers has resulted in prescriptions dropping off — from a peak of 61.3 million prescriptions in 1975 to 33.6 million in 1980.

Plan aids smokers' stopping

Smokers who want to kick the habit will have their chance next week. A special Five-Day Plan to stop smoking will be conducted by a physician-dentist-pastor team in Midland beginning Sunday.

The plan consists of regular group therapy sessions, films and a daily personal control program. The Five-Day Plan has successfully helped many people quit smoking during the past 19 years.

Conducting the program locally will be Dr. Larry Rusk and Pastor Rex Frost. Also contributing will be Dr. Gregory Bartha, Dr. Brian Mohr and Dr. Paul Talboys. The doctors will present information vital to the subject of smoking as it relates to health.

GROUP THERAPY sessions will be at 7:30 p.m. each day beginning Sunday at the Commercial Bank and Trust Building, 2301 W. Wall Ave., downstairs in the Community Room.

For those who have a desire to quit or have been advised to do so by their physician, there is a major hurdle to overcome. Tobacco is addictive and the smoker faces tremendous problems in giving up the habit.

Realizing this, the Seventh-day Adventist Church developed the Five-Day Plan to Stop Smoking in the early 1960s. Since then it has been offered as a public service to all who want to kick the habit.

SPONSORED LOCALLY by the Midland Seventh-day Adventist Church, the Five-Day Plan aims to help improve the health of the community and to contribute to the national physical-fitness program, Frost explains.

Held successfully in cities across the U.S. and Canada and in most countries of the world, the Five-Day Plan features such topics as the psychological and physiological aspects of the habit, how craving can be lessened, how willpower can be strengthened, physical effects of smoking, organization of a support system and many other techniques designed to break the habit within a five-day period.

Statistics indicate that 80 percent or more quit smoking during the five days of the program. A year later, 50 percent still have not smoked.

THE FILM "Count-down," depicting a lung cancer operation, will be shown Sunday, the first evening of the therapy session.

Those desiring to "kick the habit" should call 682-6527 or 694-1826 for reservations. The class is limited to 30 persons, so it is important to enroll early.

Nobel Prize-winning poet out of seclusion

By KERIN HOPE
Associated Press Writer

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — The public demands that came with the Nobel Prize are so great that Odysseus Elytis says he hasn't written a line of poetry since he won the world's most coveted literary award in 1979.

"Every time I say to myself, 'Now I'll sit down and work,' some new obligation comes up and I have to postpone my promise to myself," the 70-year-old poet told the Athens newspaper To Vima.

Once a near-recluse who wrote incessantly, Elytis has become an unofficial cultural ambassador for Greece and a font of information for the translators who ignored him until the prize created foreign demands for his work.

"There is so much writing to be done. But grandeur is something that imposes itself on us, and it takes great strength to keep it at arm's length," a friend said Elytis told him recently.

"My privacy has been invaded and I find it impossible to work," he told the friend. "I refuse many invitations, but there are others I feel honored to accept."

Elytis is renowned for his sensuous lyrics of the Aegean islands and "Axion Esti," a long piece set to music by composer Mikis Theodorakis, who called it "Bible for the Greek People." Its title means "Worthy It Be."

While he used to stay in his spartan bachelor flat in central Athens, meticulously polishing his poems for publication and seeing only a few close friends, Elytis now finds himself traveling regularly, giving lectures and attending cultural meetings.

Last year, he accepted an honorary degree at London University from Princess Anne.

What spare time he might have is consumed by correspondence with translators of his work from around the world. Elytis insists on personally answering each letter he receives.

He will answer his telephone only at certain times of the day. He can occasionally be seen at a Kolonaki Square cafe, a shy figure in a blazer and "Politically, Elytis is middle of the road. Poetry used to be almost his entire life. Now he seems pleased sometimes, worried at others to have emerged from his seclusion."

Greek fisherman's cap pulled down over straggling auburn hair.

The critics are beginning to become anxious that Elytis should give himself time to write. But they understand that his identification with his country obliges him to take a public role at home and abroad.

While Greece was under military rule from 1967 to 1974, Elytis went into exile in Paris, where he had lived for several years after World War II. Now he steers clear of politics but remains a close friend of President Constantine Karamanlis.

"Politically, Elytis is middle of the road," said another writer who asked not to be identified. "Poetry used to be almost his entire life. Now he seems pleased sometimes, worried at others to have emerged from his seclusion."

Elytis is the second Greek to receive the Nobel Prize in literature. Poet-diplomat George Seferis won it in 1963.

Born Odysseus Alepoudelis in Crete, early in his career Elytis chose his nom de plume from "Elias" (Greece), "eleftheria" (freedom) and "politis" (citizen).

Deeply conscious of the tradition in which he works, the name has remained a touchstone for Elytis, who often says "my poems personify Greece."

This month, he returns to his native island for a memorial service for statesman Eleftherios Venizelos, a close friend of his father. Later in March, he will be guest of honor at a literary festival in Belgium, then meet French Culture Minister Jack Lang in Paris.

The poet turned public figure flushes apprehensively when feted at a diplomatic party or greeted by an admirer.

At the Athens City Hall last week, he was visibly moved as Mayor Dimitri Beis awarded him the gold medal of the city and honorary citizenship.

"In recent years, I have become an honorary citizen in several cities here and abroad. But I have spent 60 years of my life in Athens, and this is more than an honor," he said.

"How can anyone forget the beautiful and bitter moments — youth, love, illness, war — all passed under the sky of Attica?"

Horsewoman teaches 'equitation' as therapy

By JOE HEANEY
Hearst Feature Service

BOSTON — She has ridden with United States cavalrymen, Montana cowboys and Madison Square Garden's horse set, but Marjorie Kittredge's biggest triumph has been as a teacher of horseback riding to handicapped men, women and children.

A half century on horseback has made Kittredge perhaps the country's most complete horsewoman, and the horse sense she harvested along the way has made her a fine teacher.

At 57, she is combining her skills to foster "therapeutic equitation," a riding program for the handicapped and emotionally disturbed. "Therapeutic equitation is actually positive thinking on horseback," Kittredge explained. "My belief is that, handicapped or not, we are all more capable than we think."

"I tell everyone who rides at Windrush Farm (Kittredge's estate near Boston), whether they are handicapped or not — don't cry and quit. Keep a stiff upper lip and do it."

As a child, Kittredge spent summers in Montana. "I was riding western stock horses when I was 10 and learned firsthand what a working cow horse is supposed to do and how a working cattle ranch operates," she recalls.

"I saw Windrush Farm as a wonderful tool for raising my kids, a chance to give them real jobs with responsibility, not make-work tasks," Kittredge said. "Then I began thinking, if horseback riding is good for normal folks, why can't it be good for handicapped kids and adults? I had all this training and I wanted to put it to the use where it would really do some good."

Kittredge became a licensed instructor in riding for the handicapped, and in 1964, Therapeutic Equitation, Inc., a nonprofit corporation, was formed with a class of six youngsters.

The idea of using horseback riding to improve the physical and psychological well-being of handicapped people has caught on across the country. Kittredge serves a national association that monitors riding programs for the handicapped by conducting certification tests for persons interested in becoming therapeutic equitation instructors.

Alligator sprouts legs

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Ramon the alligator, who once terrorized St. Louis in a Hollywood movie, now is growing giant legs with the help of University of Florida students who want to give him a permanent spot in homecoming parades.

The 25-foot prop soared to fame with the help of special effects experts in the movie "Alligator," portraying a reptile that grew to monstrous proportions in the sewers.

Then he was donated to UF, where he's had a friendlier image as a university mascot. For the past two football seasons, Ramon has attended games on a makeshift wooden wagon pulled by cheerleaders.

But now a dozen mechanical and engineering students are creating some special effects of their own.

With bits and pieces of springs, tubing, metal and pipe, bicycle, car and truck parts, the UF team built a walking machine that moves at about 5 mph, powered by an electric motor.

"That is one of only two walking machines in the country," says engineering professor Gary Matthew, who helped with the construction of the machine. "The other one, at Ohio State, is a lot fancier... Ours, which cost us about $250, pretty much walks straight ahead at the same speed and just over smooth surfaces."

But at least Ramon will be moving, which is more than he ever did in "Alligator."

They originally planned for two men to get inside the hollow body and walk hunched over with 200 pounds on each of their shoulders," Matthews said. "It just didn't work. No one could carry that much weight hunched over like that."

Alligator rides for a dime?

ATLANTA (AP) — When the daily calendar for the House Rules Committee listed a bill about alligator rides, bewildered legislators asked the former head of the state Game and Fish Commission for an explanation.

Without missing a beat, George T. Bagby said the bill was an attempt by the Natural Resources Department to raise funds by offering alligator rides in the Okefenokee Swamp in southeast Georgia.

The rides would cost a dime, but the first ride would be free "to those who made it," he said. Bagby, an aide to Democratic House Speaker Tom Murphy, added the rides would be for "Republicans only."

It wasn't until order was restored among committee members of both parties that state Rep. John Hawkins, D-Atlanta, explained the title of the bill had been misprinted.

It should have referred to "alligator hides," he said.

Lamar Pinney of flood-torn Fort Wayne leaves his home along the Maumee River by bicycle after he removed his car and heavier belongings Wednesday. Pinney's home is behind a dike supported by sandbags that is in danger of giving way.

River expected to crest today in Fort Wayne

FORT WAYNE, Ind. (AP) — Firefighters hurried people out of their homes and onto city buses as the floodwaters that began ravaging this city began leaking through a dike so waterlogged it was "just like mush."

Hundreds of volunteers forming long chains passed sandbags in bucket-brigade style up to the muddy, 50-year-old dike "because our engineers tell us the sheer weight of the sand is the only thing that can save it," said Al Zirkle, director of operations for the city utilities.

Water was filling streets today along the Maumee River dike in the Lakeside neighborhood in the eastern part of the city. The river, bloated from thawing ice and days of rain, was expected to crest today at a level higher than it reached in 1913, when a series of floods killed 700 people in Indiana and Ohio.

ABOUT 7,900 people in Fort Wayne and surrounding Allen County have already been evacuated in the worst flooding on the Maumee since that disastrous year, bringing the number of Indiana evacuees to as many as 10,000.

The National Weather Service predicted thundershowers for tonight and Friday. Rivers were receding in Ohio and Michigan, where floods have done a total of $19 million in damage, but the Illinois River was still rising and causing minor flooding in Peoria. A tornado damaged an Atlanta building Wednesday as thunderstorms hit Georgia, and the San Francisco area was pelted with hail, snow and rain.

Two people were killed in Michigan, two in Ohio, and one in Fort Wayne over the weekend, but no deaths have been reported in the three states since. Flooding has caused an estimated $16.8 million damage in Fort Wayne.

"The entire dike area here is just like mush," Zirkle said. "The dikes are just saturated. It's not water lapping over the top."

"It could break loose at any time in the next 24 hours," Public Safety Coordinator Anthony Meyers said late Wednesday night.

POLICE used loud speakers and firefighters went door-to-door along eight blocks to evacuate an undetermined number of people. Five city buses were sent to help take residents away, and evacuees with nowhere else to stay were brought to one of two churches. The firefighters also disconnected gas and electricity to prevent fires.

Later, buses were standing by in case the volunteers had to be evacuated, and a crane was brought in to help dump dirt on the earthen dike, if necessary.

"We have engineers all along the dike and they'll give the word if we need to get these people out," Zirkle said, adding there would be plenty of warning if something went wrong.

"We're gonna beat that river," Mayor Winfield Moses Jr. told volunteers Wednesday.

About 4,100 people left their homes Wednesday, and seven more emergency Red Cross shelters were opened, bringing the total to 11.

The three rain-swollen rivers that join in Fort Wayne — the Maumee, the St. Joseph and the St. Mary's — were expected to rise almost a foot overnight and threatened to divide the city of 170,000 into six isolated communities. All city schools were closed.

THE WATER began trickling through about 11 p.m. EST.

"The leakage has accelerated. We've not had a full breach of the dike yet," said Frank Heyman, Fort Wayne city control-

Meeting Reagan cleared up identity crisis

PORTLAND, Ind. (AP) — A farmer who loaned President Reagan a pair of boots so he could sling sandbags in flood-stricken Fort Wayne didn't have time to sit around waiting for the government to sort out the mixup he unknowingly caused.

Greg L. Miller met the president during sandbagging Tuesday in Fort Wayne and complained that he hadn't received an emergency loan to help him plant this year's crops.

The president offered to help, but it turned out there are two Greg L. Millers, both grain farmers, both living in Indiana's Jay County, both seeking federal emergency loans after crop disasters last year.

The Farmers Home Administration tried to call the two Greg Millers to sort out the identity crisis Wednesday, but neither answered.

"I did some maintenance work, wired some lights, paid some bills and picked up some tuxedos for the wedding," said Miller, 25, who is planning to be married on Saturday.

After loaning Reagan a pair of overshoes beside the flood-swollen St. Mary's River, Miller told Reagan he suffered $100,000 in rain damage to crops last year. Although 670 farmers applied for loans after their county was designated a disaster area, only 10 received money, he said.

The complaint was passed on Wednesday to Agriculture Secretary

John R. Block, who turned the matter over to the FmHA, which handles the emergency loans.

"Would you believe that there are two guys with exactly the same name and the same county and that both of them have applied for loans — and both have been found eligible?" Marilyn Aycock, a spokesman for FmHA, said Wednesday. "We really don't know which one it was yet." The identity crisis was resolved Wednesday night when The Associated Press reached the Greg Miller who met Reagan.

One of the Greg Millers — the other Greg Miller, it turned out — applied for a loan on Dec. 15, and it was approved on Monday. Aycock said a check has been ordered from the government's finance office.

The Greg Miller who met Reagan applied on Jan. 19 and was found eligible Feb. 2. The loan is still under review.

Rita Miller, the wife of the other Greg Miller, said someone from the FmHA called their home Wednesday afternoon. Confused over what he wanted, she told the caller he had the wrong Greg Miller.

Smith, Wilson lead Chaps to victory over Dixie

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Sports Writer

HUTCHINSON, KAN. — Dixie College's red-clad Rebels must have felt like St. Patrick was against them from the beginning, but in truth, it was the lethal doses of Midland College's green and gold.

In short, the St. George, Utah, team overdid, 85-82 on a pure injection of green serum from giant leprechauns Chester Smith and Puntus Wilson here Wednesday night in the quarterfinals of the National Junior College Athletic Association Tournament.

Regardless of St. Patrick fact or fiction, the 32-4 Chaparrals are in the final four owning a day of rest before meeting 32-4 Vincennes, Ind., Friday night at 6:30 p.m. in a semifinal matchup. Vincennes blasted previously unbeaten Tunkis, 94-78, in the only other quarterfinal game played Wednesday.

THE ROAD to national glory is now only two blocks away for the Chaps and the last stretch of traveled road had Smith and Wilson in the driver's seat. Smith cranked in a personal college high of 28 points, hauled down eight rebounds and held Dixie's Chris McMullin to a mere 10 points. McMullin had scored 39 against Mercer on Tuesday in the first round. Smith's defensive play on Tuesday held Westark's DeWayne Shepard, last year's tourney MVP, to only two second half points.

Smith, the 6-foot-6 freshman from Dallas, was a one-man wrecking crew, but Wilson, who had 20 points against Westark and saved the Chaps with a game-saving buzzer block, came back with 25 points against the Rebels and a tournament of 17 rebounds.

And just for good measure, throw in 16 points by 5-foot-6 Spud Webb along with 11 assists and a game turning dunk. Despite the awesome showings of Wilson and Smith, Webb is capturing the hearts of Hutchinson.

But don't get the wrong impression. This was no cake walk for the Chaps. MC never trailed in the game, but the score was tied at 50 and again at 67 with 4:31 left to play. Things don't come easy here and the Chaps have had fun all year doing it their way.

"Why should we make it look easy?" Webb asked. "Everyone might get up and leave early if we did that."

EVEN THOUGH the Chaps seemed to control the tempo of the game, Dixie kept slugging, erasing seven, eight, nine and 10-point Chap leads throughout the game. In fact, the Rebs were down by nine points with less than 1:20 left to play and were behind only 83-80 with eight seconds left.

That's where Wilson put an end to things with two free throws at the six-second mark to seal the win. That ended the frustration Wilson felt Tuesday against Westark when he missed three straight free throw attempts with less than a minute left in the game.

"You know I was thinking about those missed free throws of last night when I went to the line," Wilson said. "I wasn't going to miss these."

Smith was the key when things got close. Early in the second half Dixie erased a seven-point Chap lead to knot the score at 50 on Tim Roberts 15-foot jumper but Smith canned two free throws, a layup and three straight fall-away jumpers from the corner to give MC a 10-point margin at 63-53 with 7:32 left in the game.

"Smith just killed us," said Dixie coach Neil Roberts. "Every time we would challenge for the lead, he would go down and put in two or three baskets. You hear about Webb and Wilson, but this Smith kid did us in."

WITH THE score tied at 67, it was Smith again who followed with a tip-in to put MC back in front. The Chaps then went on a spurt and Webb's breakaway crowd-pleasing dunk came at the 1:28 mark to give MC a 77-72 lead. That's what the fans wanted to see and the 6,200 sports arena fans began to thin out.

"I've never scored 28 points in college ball before," noted Smith, "but I'm glad it came now. I don't try to be a big scorer because I feel like I have a job to do and we won and that's important. I've been pleased with my defensive play, but maybe the guys I've been against haven't taken too many shots."

It's hard to take too many shots when a 205-pound hulk around you.

"Chester is growing up right before our eyes," MC coach Jerry Stone said. "Puntus and Spud have gotten a lot of recognition and deservedly so, but Chester is the sleeper on this team. Since January he has been the solid stabilizer."

"I think our kids are beginning to think like this is our tournament. You say, hey, we just have two more games to win. We're in the tournament now with wet feet and all the anxiety is over. I think you will just see good basketball from here on out."

The Chaps are also getting good play from Lance McCain, Jerome Crowe, and Justin Morett. McCain had 10 points against the Rebs while Crowe drilled out seven assists. Morett may be Stone's enforcer. When Jerry needs some physical action on the court, he sends in Morett and the former Midland High cager can mix it up with the best of them.

GUARD BRENT Wade led Dixie with 19 points while 6-foot-7 Ron Ence pumped in 17. The Rebs also got 14 from Roberts and 12 from Eddie Benson.

In the only other winners bracket games Wednesday, Texas' Henderson County won a first-round game with a 97-74 romp over John C. Calhoun and Volunteer State crushed Allegany.

With MC and Vincennes open today, Henderson will meet Volunteer State at 9:30 p.m. today while four-time champion Moberly will meet No. 1 ranked Miami Dade at 7:45 to decide the final four field.

There are no weak sisters in the winners bracket but all of the teams at least seem to matchup well on paper. But only one will gain the honor as the national champion and that will be decided at 8:15 p.m. Saturday. The road grows shorter.

Dixie (82): Chris McMullin, 50-51-10; Ron Ence, 65-31-7; Brent Wade, 75-51-19; Olive Dockery, 1-0-12; Tom Roberts, 62-31-4; Eddie Benson, 52-11-12; Steve Flint, 4-0-18; Wes Hymas, 0-0-10. Totals: 34-14-18-82.

Georgetown will present tall problems for Fresno State

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

Georgetown will present some tall problems tonight for Fresno State in the NCAA's West Regional basketball playoffs at Provo, Utah.

The tallest is Pat Ewing. "I think Ewing's presence creates more problems on defense than he does on offense," says Fresno State Coach Boyd Grant. "John Thompson is a good coach and he has Ewing play so alertly in the middle of his defense."

The Hoyas' 7-footer rejected 112 shots in the regular season and figures to block a few more in tonight's action at Brigham Young University's 22,700-seat Marriott Center.

The game will be the nightcap of a West Regional semifinal doubleheader. In the other contest, Idaho faces Oregon State.

IN OTHER action tonight, Louisville plays Minnesota and Alabama-Birmingham faces Virginia in the Midwest Regionals at Birmingham, Ala.

Friday night, Memphis State, 24-4, plays Villanova, 23-7, and North Carolina, 28-2, meets Alabama, 24-5, in the East Regional at Raleigh, N.C. In the Midwest at St. Louis, it's Boston College, 21-9, vs. Kansas State, 23-7, and Houston, 23-7, against Missouri, 27-3.

Finals in the West and Midwest will be played Saturday and in the East and Midwest on Sunday. The winners of the regional tournaments will advance to the Final Four in New Orleans March 27-29.

The West Regional features some of the toughest defenses in the country, including Fresno State's statistical country leaders. The champions of the Pacific Coast Athletic Association have surrendered a mere 46.7 points a game, using a combination of presses and zones and man-to-man defense.

"We have to be a good defensive team to get the most out of our talent," says Grant. "It's important to play the game to win and we've won with our defense."

THE 11TH-RANKED Bulldogs, 27-2, advanced to the West Regionals with a 50-46 victory over No. 14 West Virginia in sub-regional play, while sixth-ranked Georgetown, 27-6, the Big East champion, defeated Wyoming 51-43.

Eighth-ranked Idaho, 27-2, the Big Sky champion, uses a tough matchup zone which Coach Don Monson describes as "man for man on the ball, with zone concepts of the other four players." Washington State Coach George Raveling calls it one of the best in the country.

The Vandals stunned Oregon State 71-49 in the Far West Classic last December and Beaver Coach Ralph Miller says his Pac-10 champions are eager for a rematch.

"The biggest thing that I see is that we played them in December and ours was a more experienced team than theirs at that time," Monson says.

Fourth-ranked Oregon State, 24-4, beat Pepperdine 70-51 and Idaho edged Iowa 69-67 in overtime in earlier NCAA play.

IN THE Midwest Regional, Alabama-Birmingham will face another tall problem in Cavalier center Ralph Sampson. The two-time All-America is the main reason for Virginia's fancy 30-3 record and No. 3 national ranking.

Virginia guard Jeff Jones says he expects UAB to run and press in an effort to neutralize the board advantage afforded by the 7-4 Sampson.

"They'll want to run the whole 40 minutes," Jones predicts. "We've faced some teams recently that wanted to run, but not for the whole 40 minutes — five minutes, then slow it down and get it under control."

"I think we've shown with what we have coming off the bench that if any team wants to run with us, we'll wear them out."

The game will be played at the Civic Center, UAB's home court, where the Blazers have recorded a 52-8 record in the four years that the school has fielded a basketball team. UAB is 30-1 at home over the past two seasons.

Virginia Coach Terry Holland said he was less concerned about UAB's home court advantage than UAB's fine outside shooter, Oliver Robinson, who averaged 21 points a game this season.

Considering that UAB will try to deny Sampson the ball, Holland says he doesn't want his guards to completely quit trying to get it to Sampson inside.

"We don't want to get into that syndrome," he said.

UAB, 24-5, is bidding for a Final Four berth in only the fourth year of the school's basketball program. Should the Blazers make it, Coach Gene Bartow would become the first coach ever to take three teams to the championship tournament. He made previous trips to the Final Four with Memphis State and UCLA.

MINNESOTA, THE Big 10 champion with a 23-5 record, depends on a big, strong front line, which Louisville Coach Denny Crum calls the most dominant in college basketball. Smith said his Cardinals will try to minimize the size disadvantage by out-running the Gophers.

"We're going to have to get position and make them come over our backs," he said. "We're not going to outjump those guys."

After a miserable 2-7 start this year, Louisville turned things around and finished the year at 21-9. Crum feels his team is playing as well as any time this season.

"If we've got a chance to beat teams of this caliber any time during the season, it's now, because we are playing well," says Crum, who led the Cardinals to the NCAA title two seasons ago.

In the Division II championship at Springfield, Mass., Bakersfield State meets the District of Columbia and Florida Southern takes on Kentucky Wesleyan in the national semifinals Friday night. In the Division III national semifinals at Grand Rapids, Mich., Friday night, it's Stanislaus State against Wabash and Brooklyn College vs. Potsdam State.

BASEBALL ROUNDUP

Foster slams two homers to give Mets 5-1 win over Reds

The Big Red Machine is wearing a big red face.

The embarrassment came courtesy of ex-teammate George Foster, who got involved in a salary squabble with the Cincinnati Reds and was subsequently dealt to the New York Mets last month.

The veteran slugger slammed his first two home runs of the spring Wednesday in the Mets' 5-1 exhibition victory over the Reds. Foster unloaded both times against Mario Soto, a two-run blast in the first inning and a solo shot in the second.

"I was excited about it," said Foster, who raised his arms in celebration while circling the bases. "It was something I had thought about coming into the game. I knew that getting a hit or a home run would be a good feeling."

Until he ran into his former teammates, Foster had managed only one hit in 15 previous at-bats this spring. "I've been hitting the ball hard," he said. "Knowing the type of hitter I am, at any time I can explode."

Manager George Bamberger took Foster's production in stride, but was ecstatic about six hitless innings pitched by Pat Zachry, another former Red, who walked one and struck out four.

"I know George is going to hit 30 or 40 or even 50 home runs a year," Bamberger said, "so I'm much more pleased by Zachry's six innings. When no pitcher on your staff won more than seven games last year, you've got to be happy. You can't pitch better than that."

"That's the best I've ever thrown in the spring anytime, anywhere," Zachry said. "I don't know why, except we're doing a lot more throwing this year. I think everybody's more advanced."

ELSEWHERE, THE Atlanta Braves won for the ninth time in 10 games, snapping a 2-2 tie on Brook Jacoby's RBI single in the seventh inning and beating the Los Angeles Dodgers 6-2.

Juan Berenguer, Mark Bombardier and Roy Lee Jackson combined on a five-hitter and Buck Martinez homered as the Toronto Blue Jays won their fifth game in a row, defeating the St. Louis Cardinals 3-1.

Rickey Henderson, who reached base all six times he batted, doubled home the tying run in the ninth inning and singled home the winner in the 11th to give the Oakland A's a 7-6 victory over the California Angels.

California's Rod Carew drove in four runs with a homer and single before a near-capacity crowd of 7,324 in Phoenix. The game was played for the benefit of the Ken Boyer Fund and almost $15,000 was raised for the former Cardinals manager, who is in Mexico undergoing cancer treatment.

Home runs by rookies Cal Ripken and Bob Bonner highlighted a seven-run first inning and the Baltimore Orioles crushed the Kansas City Royals 14-3.

THE MONTREAL Expos pounded Ron Gidry for four runs in the first inning, including Dave Hostetler's three-run homer, and beat the New York Yankees 6-4.

Tom Pacliorek's three-run homer and Leo Sutherland's solo shot helped the Pittsburgh Pirates 9-5. Pat Putnam and Bob Johnson homered in an 18-hit attack as the Texas Rangers hammered the Minnesota Twins 12-4.

Mike Moore, the nation's No. 1 pick in last June's free agent draft, pitched five scoreless innings and Bud Bulling's two-run single keyed a four-run sixth inning as the Seattle Mariners defeated the San Diego Padres 4-2.

Jack Clark homered in the first inning and singled home two runs in a six-run seventh that lifted the San Francisco Giants over the Milwaukee Brewers 8-5. The Boston Red Sox took advantage of three Houston errors, two in one-inning by shortstop Craig Reynolds, to score six unearned runs and trounce the Astros 8-1.

The Chicago Cubs scored four times in the bottom of the ninth inning to tie the game and nipped the Cleveland Indians 10-9 on Scot Thompson's RBI single in the 11th.

NIT ROUNDUP

Tulane facing third straight hostile environment

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

If it's Thursday, it must be Peoria, Ill., for the Tulane basketball team. "I don't know what they (NIT officials) are thinking," says Coach Ned Fowler. "We have had to play three games in a row in hostile environments."

Of the eight teams remaining in the NIT field, only Tulane hasn't played at home. And tonight, Fowler's players find themselves facing another unsympathetic audience in Bradley's Robertson Field House.

It's one of three NIT games tonight.

Elsewhere, Dayton plays at Oklahoma and Virginia Tech visits Georgia. In another third-round game Friday night, Purdue entertains Texas A&M.

The winners tonight and Friday night will advance to the semifinals at New York's Madison Square Garden next Monday night. The championship will be decided Wednesday night.

Tulane has been the surprise team in this year's NIT. In its first-ever postseason bid, the Green Wave has beaten Louisiana State 83-72 and Nevada-Las Vegas 56-51 en route to the quarter-final round.

Bradley took out its frustration Monday night with a 95-81 trouncing of Big East team Syracuse in the Big Orange's own arena. Bradley's other victory was a 76-65 decision over American University.

The Braves may have to play tonight's game without the services of junior guard Willie Scott, who is suffering from a pulled groin muscle.

"This is our 34th game and Willie has been playing really hard," Versace says. "He was in the whirlpool when I last saw him, and he may heal. But Eddie Matthews (a junior guard) and Eddie Harris (a freshman) are both healthy."

About Tulane, Versace said: "They have a style that gives everybody trouble. If you get behind a team like this, you got trouble. They're difficult to pressure."

Tulane doesn't run like Syracuse, noted Versace. "Syracuse wanted to run and we ran them out of the gym," he said.

Oklahoma has bounced back from large deficits in both of its earlier games. The Sooners opened the tourney by beating Oral Roberts 81-73 after overcoming a 17-3 deficit. They then beat California-Irvine 80-77 after shaking off a 17-point disadvantage.

"We've been very effective with the press," notes Coach Billy Tubbs. "We don't press that much in the first half but we kind of get into it in the second. You get the crowd involved in it and it gets everybody fired up and gets us moving up and down the floor."

The Sooners' two victories in the NIT improved their season's record to 21-10. Dayton, 21-8, advanced to the quarter-finals with a 76-75 overtime win over Connecticut and 61-58 over Illinois.

"Dayton is probably one of the best rebounding teams we'll go against," said Tubbs. "They're very big and strong players. We don't know a lot about them. At this point in the season, there's not much you can do. You pretty well have your game plan ready."

Dayton Coach Don Donofor: "For us to survive, we'll have to do a better job offensively than at Illinois."

Georgia, 18-11, will have the home court advantage for the third straight time in this tournament, hosting a Virginia Tech team with a 20-11 record and two victories over NCAA entrant Louisville. The Bulldogs beat Temple 73-60 and Maryland 83-69 in earlier games while Virginia Tech stopped Fordham 69-58 and Mississippi 61-59.

Purdue, the 1974 NIT champion and 1979 runnerup, won three straight NIT games at Mackey Arena last year, then finished third in the tourney finals in

New York, losing to Syracuse and then beating West Virginia. So far this year in the NIT, the Boilermakers have beaten Western Kentucky 72-65 and Rutgers 98-85.

Texas A&M, 20-10 this season, is coming off a 60-58 win over Lamar and 69-65 over Washington. The Aggies, in the NIT for the second time, are looking toward their first appearance in the Final Four.

Wichita State edges Chaps, 5-4

Wichita State University defeated Midland College, 5-4, in a girls dual match at Midland College, but Karen Mannheim and Liz Alvarado managed to keep their doubles string alive.

The Midland duo stretched it to 7-0 with a 6-4, 6-3 win over Molly Maine and Greta Siemens.

MC slipped to 5-3 in dual matches and returned to action in WJCC play against New Mexico Junior College at Midland College.

Sandy Sadler, WS, 4; Liz Alvarado 6-3, 6-0; Karen Mannheim, MC, 4; Molly Maine 6-3, 6-4; Susan Deane, WSU, 4; Jody Wertheimer 6-4, 6-2; Kim Somerville, MC, 4; Cindy Baker 7-6, 7-5; Jan Louderback, WSU, 4; Donna Dickey 6-1, 6-3; Greta Siemens, WSU, 4; Laurie Runyan 6-3, 6-3; Debra Alvarado-Mannheimer 4; Maine-Siemens 6-4, 6-3; Somerville Wertheimer 4; Sadler Baker 6-2, 2-6, 6-2; Louderback-Cindy Paul, WSU, 4; Dickey Runyan 7-5, 6-1.

Cougar centers tutored by Rockets' Moses Malone

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Cougar centers Larry Micheaux and Akeem Olajuwon had a special tutor in preparing for Friday's battle against fifth-ranked Missouri in the NCAA Midwest Regional basketball tournament — professional all-star Moses Malone of the Houston Rockets. Malone, who spends his summers playing pickup basketball at a local recreation center with Micheaux and Olajuwon, dropped by practice Wednesday to wish the Cougars well in their battle against the Tigers.

"I played with most of these guys at the recreation center at Fondre and they've got a lot of great talent on this team," Malone said. "A lot of these guys will make it in pro ball."

Micheaux says playing against Malone in the MSA board opens league to girls

At a meeting of the Midland Soccer Association board of directors Wednesday night, it was decided that girls can compete in three age divisions, 10 and under, 12 and under and 14 and under if they register before the deadline.

Deadline for entries is Friday at 5 p.m. To enter call MSA at 697-5798.

mer prepared him for dominating centers like Steve Stipanovich.

"Sure it concerns me going against a player like Stipanovich but I've played against Moses Malone too and he's quite an outstanding player," Micheaux said. "I think I'm capable of handling this guy because in the summer Mo and I just play against one another and I learned a lot from Mo."

Micheaux said he had worked on moves to the basket learned during summer sessions with Malone that often help him in games.

"If I need to get inside on a player, I just refresh my mind back to Moses and things that he did and it really helps," Micheaux said.

KENNY REDIN'S Fin & Feather

We checked out Falcon Reservoir near Zapata about two weeks ago, so we thought we might need to find out what's happening in the way of fishing at another South Texas hot spot, Amistad Reservoir near Del Rio.

We fished with Amistad guide, H.S. "Smoke" James on Monday. For those of you who know of Smoke, or have fished with this fine individual, you know that he's probably one of the finest guides on this sprawling border reservoir and seldom fails to find and catch fish for his clients.

But, we guess the word is out. Smoke, who originates from Sundown, Texas is a retired farmer who has been a guide for 10 years. His reputation as a fishing guide on one of Texas' most productive largemouth and striped lakes equals none. James who is one great fisherman is also a gentleman like we've never met. I've fished with guides all around the United States, Mexico and Cuba, but never fished with anyone like Smoke.

Whether you catch fish or not, you're going to have a wonderful time trying. And fishing with Smoke, if the fishing might be slow, is nothing to get upset over. Mr. James makes you think you are going to catch a fish on every cast. He has way of keeping you pepped-up all day long. He's one of the best and nicest guides I've ever fished with. It would be a great thing to book James sometime in May. You won't regret the fishing trip. And booking a guide on Amistad is a way, especially for the first timer of one who is not too familiar with the huge reservoir to learn how to catch those scrappy Amistad bass and where to catch them.

March is always a good month on Amistad. Like most southern Texas lakes, the water begins to warm more rapidly than those North Texas lakes. Fish, especially largemouth bass, begin searching for spawning areas and do some extra heavy feeding to primp their bodies for the grueling spawn. This is how we found the fish to be on Monday.

James had been catching fish in 15 to 25 feet of water in February for the most part. Water temperatures at Amistad normally do not dip much below 52 or 53 degrees in the extreme winter months. Therefore, when warmer weather hits the desert-setting region near Del Rio, those bass do not need much to turn them on.

The water temperature while fishing on Monday was hovering near the 59-degree mark, only a few degrees away from true spawning time for the largemouth bass.

James said, "I'm just waiting for some real warm weather to turn these bass on. We may have a streak of several warm days. On the last day, let's say before a cold front moves in, I start to catch my bass in shallow water...those looking for a place to spawn. But just as I think it's time, another cold front moves in and disturbs the fish.

"But I've been fishing Amistad long enough to know that when spawning time is just around the corner, I've got a pretty good idea where and how to catch fish...cold front or no cold front."

Two days before we fished with James, a cold front invaded South Texas. Just prior to the front, James had been catching some really nice strings of bass anywhere from five to 15 feet of water. They were bass almost ready to spawn, but conditions due to the cold fronts just wouldn't allow them to progress. The weather on Monday was cold and windy. In my opinion, I didn't think we would do much good on bass, but wow, was I wrong.

James very seldom fishes the upper end of Amistad for bass. We're talking about the regions directly north of Diablo East launching ramp, the JSan Pedro area and Devil's Canyon. His main target for largemouths is up the Rio Grande arm of this international reservoir. "I just feel like I can catch more bass up the river and on the Mexican side than I can elsewhere. I think that's because there isn't nearly the fishing pressure way up the lake like other regions," said James.

We were fishing the Zorro Creek areas near marker 14 throughout most of the day. We couldn't find any fish in the shallow water due to the recent cold front, but we were fishing in the same regions that James had been catching some bass on previous trips. He had been taking them in shallow water, but said, "Since this cold front, I know those bass probably won't be in the shallowwater, but let's still fish the same general areas and drop back off to about 15 to 25 feet." We did just that and commenced to catch a nice string of keeper bass.

Our day began casting plastic grubs in the smoke and black colors. We managed to boat a few bass but the wind wouldn't allow us to fish the places and the methods we needed to. We then began to work deeper water, off rocky points and submerged island with black plastic lizards. This was the key to our day's success. We managed to boat 18 bass from two to five and one-half pounds on that special Monday...most coming off the lizards.

As I sit here typing this column, the weather outside is about 75 degrees and tomorrow is supposed to hit near 80. I know as sure as I'm sitting here that if this warm weather continues, the fishing at Amistad should be fantastic. Only a few more warm degrees are needed for the water temperature and Amistad fishing will boom.

Changes proposed in state hunting regulations

AUSTIN — A number of amendments to the state's hunting regulations have been proposed by the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department, some subject to approval by local county commissioners courts.

Public hearings are being held in 241 counties under the TPWD's regulatory authority during March to review the proposed changes and receive public comment.

Hunters are advised to check regulations in the county to be hunted by obtaining the department's 1982-83 Guide to Hunting Regulations brochure, which will be available in early fall from hunting license outlets and department offices prior to opening of the hunting seasons.

The following is a brief summation of some of the more significant recommendations:

—Antlerless deer permits no longer would be attached to a foreleg of the animal. The regulation requires only that the permit be attached to the carcass.

—Duval County would be added to those South Texas counties having a buck permit system for quality deer management. Issuance of buck permits would be on an unlimited basis for the 1982-83 deer hunting season.

—In counties offering the either-sex deer hunting season, the department would issue special antlerless deer tags to landowners on an unlimited basis. The antlerless deer tags differ from antlerless deer permits now required in most counties, as the tags could be issued on an unlimited basis to landowners while permits are issued on a compartments and acreage basis.

—Deer hunting regulations would be standardized in Dimmit, Harrison, Kinney, Medina, Robertson, Uvalde and Zavala Counties. They would have the standard 51-day deer season, ending Jan. 2, 1983, with the standard bag limit of three deer, no more than two bucks.

—The commission would add 14 counties to the "either sex" deer hunting regulation, wherein tags are issued to landowners on an unlimited basis. Counties added would be Bandera, Comal, Crockett, Edwards, Gillespie, Rays, Kerr, Kimble, Lampasas, Mason, Real, San Saba, Sutton and Val Verde. This proposal is subject to approval or disapproval by commissioners courts (CC) in these counties.

—In Medina and Kinney Counties the buck bag limit would be increased from one to two, subject to approval by the County Commissioners Court.

—Duval County would be given the early antlerless-only deer hunting season, Oct. 23-Nov. 7 to provide landowners additional hunting days in which to remove surplus antlerless deer.

—Harvest of antlerless deer by permit would be allowed in Robertson County.

—Dimmit, Edwards, Kendall, Kinney and Real Counties would receive the standard archery-only deer season, Oct. 2-31, which provides five weekends of hunting subject to approval by CC.

—Controlled archery-only deer hunts conducted by the U.S. Fish & Wildlife Service would be permitted on the Hagerman National Wildlife Refuge in Grayson County. The deer season would remain closed in the remainder of Grayson County.

TPWC approves new park, wildlife management area

AUSTIN — Texas Parks and Wildlife Commission members meeting here last week gave final approval to a master plan for developing a new state park and wildlife management area in Kimble County.

The South Llano River State Park and Wildlife Management Area is a 2,630-acre tract of scenic limestone hills and pecan bottomland along the South Llano River, three miles south of Junction.

The land was a gift to the Parks and Wildlife Department from Walter Bunch, who operated the property as a ranch.

Park development will cost approximately $2 million to $2.5 million. Facilities will include a multi-use camping area with 29 sites, a day-use area with 25 sites, primitive camping area, hiking and wildlife observation trails and an exhibit ranch. Support facilities will include a headquarters/interpretive center, maintenance complex and residences.

Officials expect the facility to be open by summer 1984.

One of the most unusual aspects of the site is the presence of a major wild turkey roost near the river. The master plan centered around developing the site without causing disruption of the turkey's activities. Officials said the only development in the bottomland area will be a day-use area designed for river access and two wildlife observation trails.

Two factors contribute to absence of TPC favorite

By BOB GREEN
AP Golf Writer

PONTE VEDRA, Fla. (AP) — Two factors — the unknown demands of a new and potentially controversial course and the failure of the pro golf tour to produce a dominant figure this season — contributed to the absence of a clear-cut favorite in the $500,000 Tournament Players Championship.

"We're still learning the golf course. Everyone — even the officials — are still learning the golf course," said Ray Floyd, the defending titleholder in this, the annual championship of golf's touring players.

"We still don't know, the officials don't know, if the course will play easier or harder if its set up this way of another way," said Floyd, who won last season a few hundred yards away at the Sawgrass links.

This time, he and the other 146 men face the tests and demands of a brand-new course, the Players Club, owned by the touring players themselves and a permanent site for the event that is growing annually in prestige and importance.

It was designed by Pete Dye, who said the underlying thought was "to create a golf course to bring out all the shots, all the great shots the professional players are capable of playing."

There have been suggestions, however, that the penalties for a missed shot are too severe.

Hall of Fame players Jack Nicklaus and Arnold Palmer, both of whom also are professionals in the field of golf course design and construction, have lauded the course, however.

"You've got to play golf here," Nicklaus said after his last practice round. "I like it. I like the golf course. I think Pete has done a tremendous job."

"The golf course is fine. It's a good test," said Palmer, but couldn't resist adding, with a twinkle in his eye:

"With some wind, you're going to see some very high scores. You're going to see some withdrawals. You're going to see any number of things."

"With a 25-30 mile per hour wind there could be some holes out there you might not be able to finish."

"To be able to play this course, you have to have all the shots," he said, and listed Nicklaus, Tom Kite and possibly Tom Watson as potential challengers for the $90,000 first prize.

Kite, who has finished 10th or better in 26 of his last 33 starts, has won once and finished second twice this season, probably the tour's best record. With 10 tournaments played this season, no one has won twice.

Nicklaus has won not at all. But he's been in contention in five of six starts.

"The last month I haven't hit the ball very well," said the man generally regarded as the most proficient the game has produced. "I'm a little further off that I'd like to be. I keep saying I've found something, then find that it doesn't work."

"Well, I think I found a fundamental problem today. But whether I can take this and use it on the golf course remains to be seen."

He said the demands of the course are such that it will require experience and great patience to win.

"There is a saying in Scotland that golf is not a fair game and wasn't intended to be," Nicklaus said.

"You're going to see a lot of that this week. A player is going to play a shot and not get the result from it that he expects. It's going to take a lot of patience to play here."

"I like that."

Portions of the final two rounds Saturday and Sunday will be televised nationally by CBS.

NBA ROUNDUP

Fitch unhappy about how Boston defeated Atlanta

By The Associated Press

How can you criticize a team with the best record in the National Basketball Association and a season-high 13-game winning streak?

Boston Celtics Coach Bill Fitch found a reason. Upset with the way the Celtics almost lost the game at the end, Fitch gave his club a tough locker-room talk after a 113-109 victory Wednesday night over the Atlanta Hawks.

"We came at it with body and soul and up to 87 points, pretty good minds," said Fitch. "But after that, fatigue took over and we made what I call fatigue no-brainers."

The Celtics led by 17 points at one time and were up 87-72 with 3:55 left in the third period. But the charging Hawks cut the deficit to 101-99 with 4:04 remaining in the game.

Then Kevin McHale, Boston's high scorer with 25 points, led a late rally that helped the Celtics put Atlanta away for their 13th straight.

"We got complacent and just didn't play very intelligently," said McHale. "We didn't take care of the ball."

McHale did most of his fine work against Dan Roundfield.

"McHale played a great game," Roundfield said. "I didn't box him out and he got a lot of stuff inside."

The game was tied 18 times in the first half, which ended with Boston holding a 63-61 edge. The Celtics led 67-65 before Larry Bird's jumper launched a 14-2 surge that widened the lead to 81-67. The Celtics opened a 98-82 lead before the Hawks started their comeback behind Eddie Johnson, who scored 27 points.

Bird added 22 points to the Celtic cause.

In other NBA games, it was Los Angeles 120, Utah 112; Philadelphia 102, Washington 93; Chicago 102, Dallas 92; New Jersey 93, San Antonio 90; Cleveland 113, San Diego 107 in overtime; Denver 135, Phoenix 133 in overtime; and Kansas City 117, Golden State 116.

Lakers 120, Jazz 112

Kareem Abdul-Jabbar scored 28 points and Earvin "Magic" Johnson added 23 as Los Angeles handed Utah its 12th straight defeat. The Jazz were led by Darrell Griffith's 32 points and 31 from Adrian Dantley, who had his total before being ejected with 1 1/2 minutes left in the third period. Dantley receiving two technical fouls after strongly objecting to a call.

With seven minutes left, the Jazz trailed by 100-98, but the Lakers broke open the game behind their two high scorers.

"That one was for me, being St. Paddy's Day and all," said Laker Coach Pat Riley. "I thought it was two different games, especially from the second quarter on. In the second period, we must have had 18 fast-breaks and nearly blew them off the floor. Then in the third quarter, things changed. They nearly did the same thing to us. You can't let up against a team like Utah. They really want to win against a team like us. It got close toward the end but I never worried. When you have players like Magic, you know they will come through."

Just to show he isn't greedy, Wayne Gretzky is prepared to leave something to aim for next season.

Gretzky, the Edmonton Oilers' scoring machine, collected three goals and two assists Wednesday night in a 10-4 wipeout of the Pittsburgh Penguins. The 21-year-old center set three more National Hockey League offensive records with his performance.

The three goals gave Gretzky 87, the most goals scored in a season, including playoffs. Mike Bossy of the New York Islanders had 85 last season — 68 in regular season and 17 in the playoffs.

Gretzky also broke Bossy's record for most games in which a player has scored at least three goals in a single season. Gretzky now has 10 such games, one more than the nine Bossy had in 1980-81.

Finally, Gretzky also smashed his own record for assists in a season. He has 110, one more than last year, and 197 points.

With only six games left, however, Gretzky doesn't seem to expect to hit 100 goals.

"Everything you do is for a purpose," he said, "and everything that happens is for a reason. Maybe this year wasn't supposed to be my year to get 100 goals; maybe that will be something for me to aim for next year."

Glenn Anderson scored twice and Mark Messier had three assists to aid Gretzky in blowing away the Penguins.

"If Gretzky is Irish, he had a hell of a night," said Penguins Coach Ed Johnston, referring to St. Patrick's Day. "Is it O'Gretzky?"

Bobby Jones scored 22 points and helped lead a fourth-quarter surge that carried Philadelphia over Washington. The loss marked the fifth defeat for Washington in five games with the 76ers this season.

The Bullets trailed 81-67 with nine minutes left before rallying to within 87-82. But Jones and Julius Erving later sparked a 14-2 burst that clinched the victory.

"I was pleased with the all-around effort," said Philadelphia Coach Billy Cunningham. "We came out tonight with the intention of playing aggressive defense. We had excellent shots in the first half, but rushed them. But our overall performance was good."

Bulls 102, Mavericks 92

Ricky Sobers scored 14 points in a fourth-quarter rally that led Chicago over Dallas. The Bulls never led by more than five points until Sobers, who finished with 20 points, got the hot hand in the final period.

The score was tied 13 times and there were seven lead changes through the first three quarters. But the Bulls took command in the final period, outscoring the Mavericks 16-8 at one point. Sobers collected 10 points during the spurt.

Nets 93, Spurs 90

Clarence "Foots" Walker stole an inbound pass and sank a free throw with one second left, lifting New Jersey over San Antonio. Ray Williams scored 14 of his 20 points in the Nets' fourth-quarter rally. His 15-foot jumper with 6:11 left gave the Nets the lead for good at 79-78.

"I was prepared tonight to play defense against George Gervin," said Williams, who was assigned to guard the Spurs' 6-foot-7 guard, and NBA scoring leader. "But once he (Gervin) got in foul trouble, I knew he'd play a little tentative and I could be a little more offensive-minded." Gervin, meanwhile, scored only one point in the final period and finished with 24.

Cavaliers 113, Clippers 107

Ron Brewer scored 11 of his 31 points in overtime, and Scott Wedman and James Edwards each had 22 as Cleveland defeated San Diego.

Nuggets 135, Suns 133

Kiki Vandeweghe scored eight of his 30 points in overtime to lead Denver past Phoenix. Dan Issel added a game- and season-high 39 points, and David Thompson scored 21 as Denver won its fifth straight game and first over Phoenix in four contests this season.

The Suns lost for only the seventh time in 32 games at home, despite 28 points from Dennis Johnson and 22 from Walter Davis.

Kings 117, Warriors 116

Mike Woodson scored 23 points to lead Kansas City over Golden State. The Kings sewed up the game at the end as Reggie Johnson dunked the ball on a breakaway. Bernard King scored 32 points for the Warriors, but missed all eight of his shots from the field in the first half.

Ruidoso renovation progressing

RUIDOSO DOWNS (AP) — Work is progressing on a $2.5 million renovation program at Ruidoso Downs racetrack, with the project expected to be completed by the start of this year's summer racing season on May 8.

Finlay MacGillivray, general manager of the track, said Wednesday the "new look" will extend from the track's main entrance to the grandstand and more exclusive Turf Club seating area.

"We have a new look beginning this season with the new sign in front of the main gate to the new barns on the backside," said MacGillivray.

MacGillivray said the track is installing new mutual equipment, and along with the expanded seating facilities, the popular mountain track is anticipating "a substantial increase of business."

One of the major portions of the expansion project is the addition of 200 new tables and boxes in the Turf Club. That will add 800 more seats. The track also is adding another 900 seats in the grandstand. That will raise the seating capacity to 1,248 in the Turf Club and 3,185 in the grandstand.

Young artist concert hits high note

The New Christy Minstrels will perform at Midland High School March 26 at 8 p.m. as part of this season's Community Concert series. The New Christy Minstrels single recording of "Green, Green," which sold over a million records, plus the group's three Columbia gold albums, "Ramblin," "Today" and "The New Christy Minstrels Greatest Hits," have helped the Minstrels attain national popularity.

Concert goers Tuesday night were not disappointed by the young talent which graced the Lee High School Auditorium stage. The occasion: The National Young Artist Competition performing winners concert.

This performance also marked the seventh subscription concert in the Midland-Odessa Symphony & Choral season, sponsored by Mrs. George T. Abell of Midland and Mac and Angel Boring of Odessa, in honor of the competition's 20th anniversary.

Following a short overture by the symphony,

Although Miss Rudnick has a lovely voice, it does not have the power or depth required for this type of opera, especially "Je Suis Titania." She sounded at times as if she was straining to project the necessary notes. Her animated facial mannerisms, which were not too much, made her appear comfortable from the neck up. She kept her hands too tightly to her sides, except when she would clasp them behind her back. Admittedly too many hand motions are distracting, but the reverse is also true.

The concert closed with another of the evening's high points — pianist Marie-Christine Delbeau's performance of the second and third movements of Rachmaninoff's Concerto No. 2 in C Minor, Opus 18. Her style of playing combined with her technique, was outstanding. Even though she did not play as flawlessly as Ferranti, she played a difficult piece exceedingly well.

If they have the necessary unerring drive, with the right opportunities, both names, Ferranti and Delbeau, may become, in the years to come, well known by classical music lovers.

directed by Dr. Thomas Hohstadt, pianist Clark Daniel Griffith, the winner in the secondary division, performed the second and third movements of Brahms' Concerto in D Minor, Opus 15.

This high school senior played quite well, demonstrating a remarkable ability for his age. Currently a private student of Steven de Groote, he has also studied with John Akin, Eugene and Elizabeth Pridonoff and Ragna Barrol.

His performance was followed by the second and third movements of Mozart's Concerto in A Major, K. 622, performed by clarinetist Frank Jay Ferranti of Odessa.

With what appeared to be effortless playing, Ferranti's performance was marked by clear, pure notes, hit with perfect control. His stance when not playing was dignified and poised. His performance was one of the evening's high points.

Following intermission, soprano Lisa Rudnick sang Thomas' "Je Suis Titania," from the opera "Mignon," and Moore's "The Willow Song," from the opera "The Ballad of Baby Doe."

New Christy Minstrels to perform at Midland High

The original Christy Minstrels were founded in 1842 by Edwin "Pops" Christy who believed folk music would generate new excitement if performed with the harmony and variety of a folk group. For 80 years this group in one form or another flourished throughout the U.S.

start such names as Al Johnson, Eddie Cantor and Stephen Foster. By 1917, The Christy Minstrel Show was the longest running Broadway show in the history of show business.

The New Christy Minstrels made its public debut at the Troubadour in Los Angeles in 1961. Since that time the group has recorded the single "Green Green" plus three Columbia gold albums, "Ramblin," "Today" and "The New Christy Minstrels Greatest Hits."

Shore, Julie Andrews, Foster Brooks, Buddy Hackett and Phyllis Diller.

March 26 the New Christy Minstrels will perform at Midland High as part of the Community Concert Association's concert season.

Current members are Kathryn Downey of Northridge, Calif., David Firman of Claremont, Calif., Steve Goodyear of High Point, N.C., Don Holst of Lafayette, Ind., Amy Karol of Tulsa, Okla., David Moyer of Spokane, Wash., and Hollis Payseur of Lowell, N.C.

Television exposure has led to numerous personal performances. To date, an estimated 45 million people worldwide have attended a live New Christy Minstrel concert.

ABC-TV wins weekly ratings race with '100 Stars'

NEW YORK (AP) — ABC scored with a three-hour TV extravaganza, "Night of 100 Stars," and won the networks' prime-time ratings competition for the second week in a row and the sixth time in the season that began Oct. 5, figures from the A.C. Nielsen Co. showed.

Only one show, CBS' "Dallas," had a higher rating in the week ending March 14 than the ABC special, taped at Radio City Music Hall in New York. "Dallas" now has been No. 1 in the weekly competition 10 times in the 23 weeks of the current television year.

ABC had four other shows in the Top 10 — CBS had five — and compiled a rating for the seven-period of 18.5 to 17 for CBS and 13.9 for NBC.

The networks say that means in an average prime-time minute during the week, 18.5 percent of the country's homes with television were watching ABC.

CBS, No. 1 in the weekly competition 16 times this season, with one tie with ABC, still leads for the year to date with an average rating of 49.4 to 18.2 for ABC.

The rating for "Dallas" was 27, Nielsen says that means in an average minute of the show, 27 percent of the nation's TV-equipped homes were tuned to the CBS program.

The rating for "Night of 100 Stars" was 29.4, and CBS' "60 Minutes," No. 1 a week ago, was third at 25.6.

"T.J. Hooker," newly introduced by ABC, was the week's highest-rated new series, No. 11, with CBS' "Falcon Crest" 17th.

NBC had the six lowest-rated programs, and that contributed to the network's extraordinarily low rating. A movie, "The Great American Traffic Jam," was No. 50, followed by "Barbara Mandrell" and the Mandrell-

Sisters, "One of the Boys," "Chicago Story," "NBC Magazine" and "McClain's Law."

Of the four lowest-rated shows, all but "NBC Magazine" are new series.

Here are the week's 10 highest-rated programs:

"Dallas," with a rating of 27 representing 22.1 million homes, CBS; "Night of 100 Stars," 26.4 or 21.6 million, ABC; "60 Minutes," 25.6 or 21 million, "The Jeffersons," 25.4 or 20.8 million, and "Alice," 24.2 or 19.8 million, all CBS; "Too Close for Comfort," 23.3 or 19.1 million, "Love Boat," 23.1 or 19.1 million, "Three's Company," 23 or 18.8 million, all ABC; "Dukes of Hazzard," 22.6 or 18.5 million, CBS, and "Hart to Hart," 22.1 or 18.1 million, ABC.

The remainder of the Top 20:

"T.J. Hooker," ABC; "Magnum, P.I.," and "One Day at a Time," both CBS, tie; "Trapper John, M.D.," and "Archie Bunker's Place," both CBS; "Real People," NBC; "Falcon Crest," CBS; "Happy Days," ABC; and "Facts of Life," NBC, tie, and "Laverne and Shirley," ABC.

Director Ron Howard, left, talks over a scene in the new film "Night Shift" with star Henry Winkler during production in Los Angeles. The onetime buddies of the longrunning television series "Happy Days" have reunited in a new partnership.

Ron Howard directs Fonz in 'Night Shift'

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — "Happy Days" was never like this. Imagine Richie and the Fonz at a sybaritic pleasure club, with semi-nude dollies in hot tubs. No, it's not an R-rated "Happy Days." The onetime buddies of the longrun TV series have reunited in a new partnership. Henry Winkler ("Fonz") as star of a raucous feature movie and Ron Howard ("Richie Cunningham") as his director.

after a brief attempt to revive Hollywood's night life. The place was filled with muscular actors and curvaceous women who were playing inhabitants of a Manhattan spa. "Night Shift" is the name of the Ladd Company-Warner Brothers movie, and it tells of the raucous adventures of two young men who operate a call-girl ring from the New York city morgue. Winkler plays a failed stock broker who is talked into the enterprise by a fellow morgue worker, newcomer Michael Keaton.

THIS IS the second feature movie Ron Howard has directed. The first was "Grand Theft Auto," which he made on a shoestring for Roger Corman (gross receipts: $15 million). He appeared in that one, won't in "Night Shift." "The whole thing started five years ago," recounted Howard, 27. "Brian Blazer read an item in the New York Times about a prostitution ring operating out of the New York City morgue. He thought it would make a funny idea for a picture. We both had offices at Paramount, and when he told me the idea, I agreed. "For years I had been badgering Lowell Ganz, a writer on "Happy Days," to write a screen play. He and a partner (Babaloo Mandel) got a bead on the story, and we took the project to Alan Ladd Jr. At the second meeting Ladd made a low-priced development deal. "Development turned to "go," and Howard and producer Blazer, 29, began scouting for a star. "Henry started emerging in our conversations," said Howard. "I resisted the idea because it might sound as though I was hiring a buddy. But soon he became the No. 1 candidate." HOWARD admitted he had been apprehensive about directing Winkler, but found him "so open and desirous of aid." Not at all like Bette Davis, whom he directed in a TV movie, "Skyward." "She was pretty outspoken at the beginning, indicating 'Who is this kid?' he recalled. "But I think I won her over, and it was an important lesson for me: the best actors want direction."

'Hill Street' deals with job alienation

NEW YORK (AP) — Anybody who's ever felt job frustration and dissatisfaction — and who hasn't? — will find some kindred spirits on "Hill Street Blues" tonight. "Hill Street," winner of eight Emmy awards, is the best show in television for many reasons. Not the least of which is that the show raises universal experiences and themes that gain greater applicability because human, breathing characters are trying to make sense of them each week.

Joyce is ordinarily an advocate for this kind of vigilance of the individual's constitutional protections, and she normally defends society's lowest and least defensible. But Pam Gilliam's death has forced her to focus on whether there's a place any more for idealism in an often inverted world. Tonight, she has to defend someone the prosecutor characterizes as a hopeless career criminal. It becomes too much, and Joyce rails at a system that allows itself to be exploited by low lives and high-minded public defenders.

HER FIRST explosion comes in a gripping courtroom scene, in which she is threatened with contempt. All the while, her slimy client is boisterously claiming his rights have been abridged, and he demands stronger representation from someone like "F. Lee Bailey or Perry Mason." Joyce needs a compassionate ear, but her lover, Capt. Frank Furillo, isn't supportive of talk about quitting. Part of his insensitivity comes from his uncertainty whether their relationship could survive a career change. Part of it comes from the fact that three of his top officers all threatened to quit that morning.

Doesn't anybody have the courage any more to work a job through?" he asks. The first defection came from Sgt. Henry Goldblume, normally a solid, soft-spoken sort with a strong sense of justice. But Henry has been passed over in his bid to become a lieutenant. The promotion went to a black officer, Henry considers it reverse discrimination. He requests a temporary field assignment, preferring to find an outlet for his frustration while he broods. He doesn't want to push a pencil in the precinct house while the new lieutenant is receiving "his attaboys."

Club will present preview of opera

The Musicians Club, Texas Federation of Music Clubs, will present an opera preview of Verdi's "Rigoletto," at 3 p.m. Sunday in the Allison Fine Arts Building choir room at Midland College.

Those who plan on attending the March 30 performance will come to the preview. The Musicians Club's program will include performances of several of the most loved arias from "Rigoletto" sung by soprano Lee Harley, tenor Tom Roberts and baritone Michael Jordan. Jane Ward will be the commentator. The free preview will last approximately an hour.

Jimmy Stewart on 'Good Morning America'

By DON FREEMAN
Copley News Service

HOLLYWOOD — It is not the worst idea in the world, devoting a week of "Good Morning America" segments to a major star, his thoughts, philosophies, reminiscences, all of it engrossingly anecdotal. Not long ago, David Hartman taped a week of interviews with Jackie Gleason and that was pretty great. Gleason tells a terrific story. And so does Jimmy Stewart who is the current guest, and an awfully good one.

The following goes back about 10 years to when Jimmy Stewart and Helen Hayes were on Broadway in a revival of the classic comedy, "Harvey." I went backstage to interview Helen Hayes. As I waited, out from his dressing room strolled Jimmy Stewart, ambling along in his loping gait. He looked about 9 feet tall, all loose and boneless, all knees and elbows and the old Stewart charm.

Stewart dialed a wall phone and he said, "Hallo. This the garage? Wal, this is Jimmy Stewart." "Maybe Rich Little or Frank Gorshin could have done it better. But here was the real thing, with the voice and the inflections and the rhythms — the peculiarly individual rhythms — and still Jimmy Stewart felt compelled to identify himself. Who else could have been talking like that —

Humphrey Bogart? I mean, Jimmy Stewart does a very acceptable Jimmy Stewart. And so, you might be surprised to learn, does a former actor named Ronald Reagan, an old friend of Stewart's, and now the resident of a good address on Pennsylvania Avenue. On the day that a Frenchman named Mitterand was paying a call on the White House, Ronald Reagan was also tapping his recollections of a long and cherished friendship with Stewart for "Good Morning America." And at the conclusion of the tape, which is scheduled to air Thursday morning, the president does his topper — an impression of Jimmy Stewart, presumably the first time that Stewart — who has been mimicked by everyone else — was ever mimicked by a president.

Oil price slide sets stage for emergency OPEC meeting

By ROBERT BURNS AP Business Writer NEW YORK (AP) — While consumers may be gloating over the steep drop in oil prices, OPEC ministers are gathering for an emergency session Friday to try to stop the slide.

The price slide has slowed inflation, and economists believe that will help pull interest rates lower and revive the U.S. economy. And the trend is shifting the balance of oil power from OPEC to the industrialized West.

U.S. auto companies, after spending millions to retool factories to make small, fuel-efficient cars, are seeing renewed strength in sales of big autos. Some industrial corporations are thinking twice about switching from oil to natural gas or other fuels.

The chance of revolution or disruption that could severely interfere with the flow of oil to the West. —The drying up of oil-revenue surpluses built by OPEC could strain the international capital markets as cash-hungry OPEC members try to keep their development ventures going.

That could work against the oil-importing nations by preventing a further erosion of OPEC's share of the world market. —Government and industrial decision-making is hamstrung by the rapidly changing outlook for demand and prices.

worried about lower oil prices is ridiculous. (The OPEC countries) have been dishing it out for 10 years, and now it's time for them to take it.

Iranian damage to oil installations will take Iraq at least five years to repair

By EDWARD CODY The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service BAGHDAD, Iraq — This country's oil installations have suffered extensive damage "from Iranian artillery and warplanes and will require at least five years to repair once the war ends," the Iraqi deputy oil minister said.

"There has been a lot of damage, but we are in control," said Samourai. "Some of the damage we cannot even estimate, such as the (offshore) terminals. They are way out in the (Persian) Gulf, which is a war zone. It would take a long time to estimate the damage."

Iraq may be laying groundwork for equivalent reparations demands. Despite the availability of new terminals on the Western market, Samourai estimated Iraq would require from five to seven years to restore its industry to a prewar level. He said that much would depend on the extent of damage to offshore facilities near Faw on the west bank of the disputed Shatt Al-Arab waterway as it flows into the northern end of the Persian Gulf.

Iraq strenuously pushed for the emergency meeting of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries scheduled Friday in Vienna, and is seeking an OPEC-wide accord to halt price-cutting and discounts that have been undermining OPEC's benchmark price of $34 dollars a barrel.

Worldwide conservation adds to OPEC's problems

By KENNETH JAUTZ
Associated Press Writer

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — Energy conservation in the industrialized West and Japan is sustaining the current oversupply of oil and eating away at the OPEC oil cartel's power to set prices.

Ministers of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries are gathering here for an emergency meeting Friday to devise a strategy for dealing with falling demand and declining prices.

Analysts believe OPEC will attempt to soak up the surplus oil by winning agreements on production cutbacks. The prospects for such an agreement appear dim, however, and the atmosphere at the conference is expected to be stormy.

One of the greatest forces working against OPEC is continuing conservation by the oil-importing nations that provide the bulk of OPEC's revenues.

People are driving less, turning down their thermostats and switching to cheaper sources of energy such as solar power.

Government-run conservation programs vary greatly, ranging from a lowering of speed limits to tax breaks, direct aid and other incentives to encourage industries to switch from oil to other, often cheaper, energy sources.

Here are some examples:

—In Denmark, a recent economic slump, energy taxes, lowered highway speed limits and a shift toward coal for electrical generation led to a 62 percent drop in oil use during the last decade.

—West German drivers used 10.9 percent less gasoline in 1981, and significant savings in heating oil were recorded for an overall decrease in oil use of 12 percent.

—A 20 percent decrease was registered over the last four years in Great Britain — from 590.4 million barrels in 1978 to 469.4 million barrels in 1981. But analysts say the reduction is due more to England's worst economic decline since the 1930s than conservation.

—In the United States, oil consumption fell from 17 million barrels a day in 1980 to 16 million last year, a 5 percent decrease. While much of that decline was attributed to a faltering U.S. economy, government officials say conservation, spurred by higher prices, played a key role.

—France's emphasis on an expanded nuclear power program and a $333 million government aid-to-industry program led to a 6 percent drop in dependence on imported oil last year.

—Japanese conservation efforts, including investment loans and tax cuts aiding industries in converting to alternate energy sources, resulted in a 10 percent savings of oil last year.
