Complaints increasing surveillance

Recent police radar surveillance along several Big Spring streets has been in response to citizens' complaints about speeders and is not an attempt to establish "speed traps," according to Police Lt. Jerry Edwards.

A letter to the editor in Sunday's Herald accused police of "gestapo" tactics for issuing speeding tickets to motorists traveling 25th Street and Birdwell Lane in the Kentwood addition.

However, Edwards said an increased police presence in the neighborhood was prompted by citizens who complained that motorists exceeding the 30 mph speed limit along both 25th Street and Birdwell Lane.

"We do our best to set up radar surveillance about which we receive complaints," he said.

The Kentwood area was among several places in town where complaints about speeders were received, Edwards said.

He said enforcement was also increased along Wasson Road, East Fifth and Gregg streets in response to complaints.

Edwards said state law establishes a 30 mph speed limit in all municipal residential areas unless otherwise posted.

Increasing speed limits in residential areas requires action by the city traffic commission, according to Edwards.

"All we are trying to do is enforce the law by stopping and issuing citations to people who don't obey the speed limits. It's up to the city traffic commission and city council to decide what those speed limits should be," he said.

Fewer no-pass, no-play casualties

By SARAH LUMAN
Staff Writer

Area students are apparently adapting to the no-pass, no-play rule that is now in its third year, school officials said this morning.

The Big Spring school district reports that 60 percent fewer students this year compared to 1986 will be barred from extracurricular activities for the next six weeks, as a result of the state rule requiring passing grades in all classes.

Big Spring casualties number 19 this year for the six weeks' period that ended Friday; the rule benched 48 Big Spring students last year after the first six weeks.

"This year it has not made a significant impact," said Kent Bowerman, Big Spring High School principal.

"We lost one or two varsity football players, a varsity volleyball player and three or four, maybe five, band members. It's an outstanding achievement."

One basketball player has been affected by the six-weeks' report cards, he said.

Seven freshman and three junior varsity football players lost their eligibility.

"Of course, I'd be better pleased if we'd lost none in all the sports," said Bowerman, at the same time praising efforts of students and teachers in Big Spring to comply with the rule.

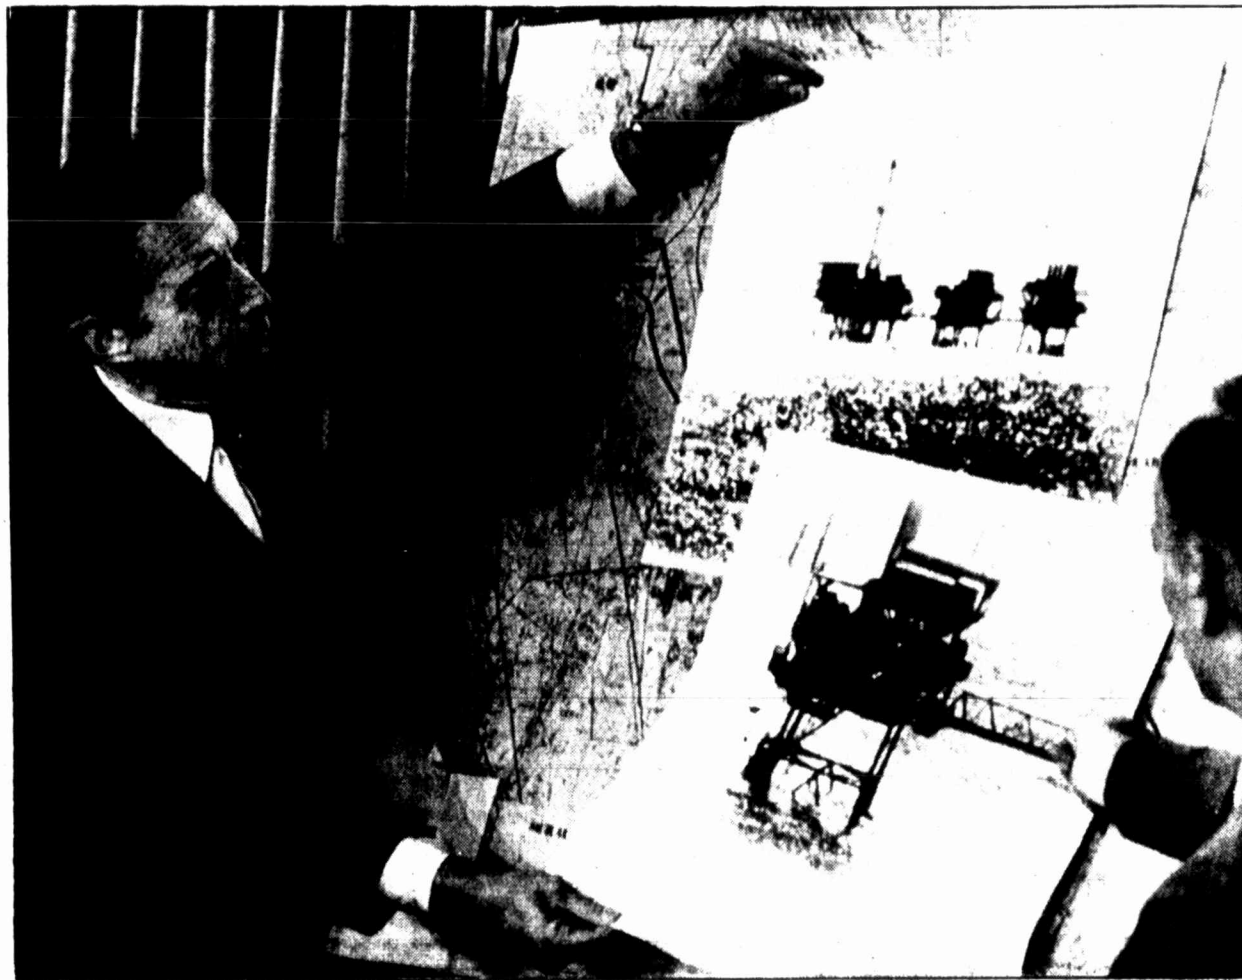

He is hopeful the second six-weeks' failure rate declines. "I would hope all our kids will be studying and the effect (of the eligibility rule) will continue to be small."

Coahoma High School principal Dennis

Ward also said the rule has had a very slight effect this year.

"We have one varsity football player ineligible, but we haven't lost any of our cheerleaders (the only program involving girls this six weeks). Really, overall, it hasn't been that detrimental." Ten members of Coahoma's 103-member band have lost eligibility.

Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger holds two photos of an Iranian oil drilling platform, which he described today as a "military platform," during a Pentagon briefing on the attack by U.S. warships on the platforms in the Persian Gulf early today. The platforms were destroyed in the attack.

U.S. warships blast Iranian oil platforms

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — The United States destroyed two Iranian offshore oil platforms in the central Persian Gulf today in retaliation for a missile attack on a U.S.-flagged tanker, U.S. officials announced.

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said gunfire from four U.S. destroyers blasted "the two platforms at one location. They both collapsed."

Iran confirmed the attack.

Gulf-based marine salvage executives, speaking on condition of anonymity, said Iranian tugboats were seen rushing to the Sassan and Rostam platforms, 30 miles apart, east of the Qatar peninsula and 60 and 75 miles south of the Iranian coast.

U.S. Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger said the attack was confined to the Rostam platforms. However, shipping sources in the Persian Gulf said another platform 30 miles away also had been attacked. They said the platforms were ablaze after being attacked by aircraft.

In Washington, the Pentagon said no Americans were injured in the attack and that most of the 20 to 30 Iranians on the Rostam platforms abandoned it after being warned an attack was imminent.

The oil platforms, like other Iranian facilities in the gulf, are used as bases for Iranian helicopters and speedboats that attack neutral commercial shipping as part of the 7-year-old Iran-Iraq war.

Radio monitors said they heard an Iranian voice saying, "U.S. warship, U.S. warship, let me evacuate the injured before you shoot again." The monitors spoke on condition of anonymity.

Iran's official Islamic Republic News Agency, in the first Iranian confirmation of the attack, said only that two platforms were raided by the U.S. Navy. The agency did not report on casualties.

The U.S. Navy broadcast radio warnings for all ships and aircraft to stay clear of the area around the Rostam platforms.

One diplomatic source said "anti-missile teams" were on the alert in the northern gulf in anticipation of Silkstorm missile attacks from Iran. The source, who asked not to be identified, did not

Jessica McClure undergoing two procedures

MIDLAND (AP) — Doctors were inspecting Jessica McClure's right foot to see whether damage from lost circulation was healing and also planned to begin plastic surgery on a silver dollar-sized sore on her forehead.

Doctors who began exploratory surgery shortly after 10 a.m. CDT hoped to complete both procedures early today at Midland Memorial Hospital, where Jessica was listed in serious but stable condition.

It is still uncertain whether surgery can save the toddler's right foot, which was damaged when she was trapped in a narrow well shaft for 2½ days, doctors said Sunday. "She is definitely improved and she has a much better chance today than she had yesterday. But we don't know yet what tomorrow's going to bring," said orthopedic surgeon Dr. Charles Younger.

"We will see if the foot is still viable ... and see what kind of progress we're making," said Dr. Shelton Viney, Jessica's general surgeon said a news conference.

Today, surgeons were checking whether the tissues in the foot were starting to heal, Viney said. They will decide later this week whether the foot must be amputated, although Viney said he was more optimistic about saving it than he was on Saturday.

He added that one or two of the three incisions from Saturday's surgery, performed to relieve swelling, could be stitched closed if the foot seems to be healing.

The 18-month-old girl was rescued Friday night after tumbling into the well Wednesday morning.

In the second surgery planned today, a cosmetic surgeon was to implant two inflatable silicone "bubbles" on each side of the silver-dollar-size pressure sore on Jessica's forehead.

During the next few days, the bubbles would be slowly inflated, stretching the skin so that it can be pulled over the area of dead skin and stitched, said the surgeon, Dr. Terry Tubb.

The procedure would avoid the scars that can result from skin grafts, although it would leave a vertical scar between Jessica's eyebrows, Tubb said. He added that other cosmetic procedures later could render the scar fainter.

The forehead was injured while it was pressed against the side of the well, creating a sore similar to a bedsore.

Fire victims' remains are under study

Herald staff report

Dr. Clyde Snow of Norman, Okla. arrived in Big Spring Sunday and was expected to study the remains today of two bodies found in the debris of an Oct. 10 fire near Luther.

The fire destroyed a two-bedroom, wood frame house on FM 846, approximately two miles east of Luther. The burned bodies of two men were found in separate rooms of the house, according to reports.

Snow also was expected to meet with local law enforcement officials concerning their investigation into the deaths, Sheriff A.N. Standard said today.

Foul play is considered possible in the deaths, the sheriff has said. Snow, a renowned anthropologist, has been summoned in the past for identification purposes, Justice of the Peace William Shankles said.

The two bodies are believed to be those of Mexican laborers who were living at the Howard County home, but positive identification has not been made.

No ruling has been made about the cause of death, Shankles added.

The sheriff said results of a Midland Department of Public Safety analysis of fire debris will be announced Tuesday.

Construction of the pond is part of $725,000 worth of improvements being made to the plant. Passow Construction Co., Topeka, Kans. began work on the project in August. Report: S&Ls affected jobs, economy

From staff and wire reports

A real estate lending binge by Texas thrifts generated jobs but also sent the state's economy reeling into a recession that cut those positions and probably won't fully end until 1991, an economic study shows.

The two-volume, 1,100-page study commissioned by the Dallas Morning News and reported in a copyright story Sunday, is the first hard evidence of the effects of runaway thrift lending in Texas during the early 1980s, the newspaper said.

The report, conducted by Baylor University economist and consultant M. Ray Perryman, shows the activity generated $28 billion in economic activity and created 92,105 jobs.

Charles Beil, president of First Federal Savings in Big Spring, said today he read the Dallas Morning News account.

"I don't doubt the findings of the report," he said, but noted that "the industry was lending in an environment that appeared to justify such action."

The lending softened the blow of the energy bust, but also prevented the state from making a smoother transition into a post-oil-boom economy, with fewer unemployed people and smaller inventories of excess space, Perryman said.

"The problem in Texas got started in 1982-83 when building started in a major way that could not be justified," he said.

The lending binge was caused by a variety of factors that created an unusually bullish outlook for Texas, including a history of robust growth, expanded lending powers for thrifts and changes in real estate tax laws, Perryman said.

The unlikely combination of so many economic events was as "rare as the mutual alignment of several planets," he said.

"For all of those things to happen at once sent a clear signal: 'Build real estate in Texas,'" Perryman said.

The Savings and Loan industry is obviously having its difficulties, Beil said. The industry is in the low side of a cyclical cycle inherent in many businesses. Beil predicted that in a reasonable period of time the business would be back to the upward cycle.

He cited the recapitalization of the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corp. and predicted that smaller institutions would consolidate or merge with larger institutions to create more efficient associations.

Federal regulators recently began selling notes to raise the first of a $10.8 billion refunding for the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corp. Industry experts believe it will take up to $40 billion to clean up the mess created after Congress extended expanded real estate lending powers to thrifts in 1982.

Today's attack was in reprisal for Friday's missile attack that injured 18 people on the tanker Sea Isle City. The attack, which involved Chinese-made Silkworm missiles, was launched from the Faw peninsula, more than 300 miles north of the Rostam platforms.

In a statement, President Reagan said the attack was "a prudent yet restrained response to this unlawful use of force against the United States and to numerous violations to the rights of other non-belligerents."

He described the one-time oil drilling facility as "a military platform" and said it had been "used to assist in a number of attacks on non-belligerent shipping."

Weinberger told reporters in Washington: "We do not seek further confrontation with Iran but will be prepared to meet any further military escalation by Iran with stronger retaliation."

He said 1,000 rounds of five-inch shells had been aimed at the platforms.

Fitzwater, who read Reagan's statement, said the purpose of the attack "was to avoid casualties, not to cause them — but at the same time to make the important political and military point."

"Our board established the (eligibility) rule a year before the state ever thought about it," Poyner said. "So our kids are more used to it, they've prepared better."

Prime Minister visits son in Dallas

DALLAS (AP)— British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher thrilled her son's neighbors when she strolled through a suburban park, stopping to chat with bystanders.

Mrs. Thatcher and her husband, Denis, were in Dallas Sunday to visit their only son, Mark, and his wife, Diane. Mrs. Thatcher made the trip after a Commonwealth meeting in Vancouver, British Columbia.

She was warmly received by residents in the Highland Park community as she walked through Flippen Park in the morning, stopping to talk to about a dozen residents of the stately homes around the park.

The visit was a pleasant surprise to Mary Alice Stell, who was walking her 3-month-old grandson in his stroller.

"I was just taking the baby out for a walk," Mrs. Stell said after Mrs. Thatcher paused to chat with her and young Samuel Stell. "She wanted to know how old he was. She said the sun might be too bright for his eyes."

Mrs. Thatcher walked through the park with her son and daughter-in-law, admiring the flowers along the paths as photographers snapped her picture.

Although British and American security agents were in the area, security was relatively light and bystanders were able to move freely around the park and approach Mrs. Thatcher.

One bystander asked Mrs. Thatcher when she thought the United States would have a woman president.

"It's hard to say when the U.S. would have a woman president," she replied. "There are a number of people who could be. It just depends on the person."

Margaret Cox, 84, who was seated nearby in a wheelchair, said she was excited to have talked with the prime minister. "She just told me she was glad to meet me and asked how long I'd been here."

Brooke Altane, 12, shook Mrs. Thatcher's hand. "I can't believe I met her," she said.

Mrs. Thatcher said she was happy to see her son, who has a reported $60,000-a-year job representing the British Lotus sports car company in Dallas.

"We telephone quite often," she said. "I just wanted to visualize the house and see the house where he comes from."

Late Sunday afternoon, the Thatcher's immediate neighbors were invited over to the two-story red brick house to meet the prime minister, said Highland Park police officer J.B. Causseaux. Terry Purks, the prime minister's deputy press secretary, said Mrs. Thatcher's schedule for her visit would not be released.

Paul Eggers, a Dallas attorney who is a friend of Mark Thatcher, was to be host for a Monday evening dinner for 50 at a Dallas hotel.

Mark and Diane Thatcher were married on Valentine's Day in London.

UT to hire more minority faculty

AUSTIN — The University of Texas is committed to hiring 10 minority faculty members during the next year in an effort to "live up to its responsibility" to the minority community, university president William Cunningham says.

"Not a day goes by when my office does not worry about minority affairs," Cunningham told a group of Black leaders during an informal get-together at a junior high school Sunday.

The university president said he has established the Minority Faculty Recruitment and Retention Committee to search for qualified Black, Hispanic and other minority instructors.

The university would like to fill all 10 designated positions within the next 12 months, but "timetables are irrelevant," Cunningham said.

"We may well not hire all 10, but we will try," he said. "We will continue to emphasize this program if it is successful. If it is not, we will try something else."

Two killed in vehicle accident

BRADY (AP) — Two University of Texas students were killed and a third injured on a ranch near Brady when a hunting seat attached to a vehicle broke loose and pinned them underneath, authorities said.

"It was just a freak accident — a real tragic thing," said Joseph Barekman, the justice of the peace who pronounced the students dead. "I've been here 15 years, and I've never seen anything like it. It always bothers you when they're so young and have their whole lives ahead of them," Barekman said.

Killed in the accident, which occurred about 11 p.m. Saturday, were Ramona Moorman and John McWilliams, both 19, the Department of Public Safety said.

The accident occurred when a hunting carriage mounted to the front bumper of a 1976 Chevrolet Suburban broke loose, throwing Miss Moorman and McWilliams off the vehicle.

Miss Moorman was belted into one of the seats in the carriage, and McWilliams was sitting on the hood of the vehicle with his feet near the carriage rack, officials said.

Authorities said the two dead teenagers were thrown to the ground and the metal carriage and the Suburban rolled on top of them.

RV campers to convene in Odessa

ODESSA — As many as a thousand recreational vehicles are expected to pull into Odessa this weekend for a convention that was expected to draw 2,000 campers.

The Good Sam Fall Samboree, which runs Thursday through Sunday at the Ector County Coliseum, is a social event that is expected to pump as much as $500,000 into the area's economy, said Whitey Harrington, who is coordinating the event.

"We have a ball," said Claude Cleere, assistant state director for Area 9 of the Good Sams. "The main thing is to meet new friends and renew friendships with the old."

The RV owners will attend seminars, view exhibits and primarily have a good time, said Harrington, president of the Oil City Sams, host chapter for the convention. While the organization is open to people of all ages, most of the participants at the convention will be older, retired people, Harrington said.

Translator says dancer seemed ready to defect

DALLAS (AP) — A Soviet ballet dancer, who is seeking political asylum, showed signs of being ready to defect, says a translator who accompanied the dancer's troupe in Dallas.

The Moscow Ballet's official translator said lead dancer Andrey Ustinov was enamored with life in the United States and seemed ready to defect.

"He was really, really interested in the things Americans said," said Alexander Orlov from Portland, Ore.

Ustinov, said to be in his 30s and with a wife and child in the Soviet Union, is seeking political asylum, federal officials said.

The dancer sought out a stranger near his Dallas hotel and despite his lack of English somehow communicated that he wanted to contact American officials, police said.

Dallas police Sgt. Gene Summers said the person Ustinov approached Thursday evening understood the dancer and contacted the FBI.

Ustinov slipped out of the hotel after telling his roommate he wouldn't join him on the first bus to the troupe's last of three performances in Dallas but instead would take a second shuttle after dinner, Summers said.

The FBI picked him up after receiving a call from the person he approached, Summers said. The person was not identified, the officer said.

FBI agents in an unmarked car en route to the location where Ustinov had been taken were stopped for speeding by a Dallas policeman, Summers said.

"The FBI just showed their badges but they didn't say where they were headed," he told The Dallas Morning News.

The people with the troupe said they had indications he was ready to defect, translator Orlov, who lives in Fort Worth, said.

"He had a look in his eye," Orlov said. "He really liked it here."

Summers, who took the initial missing person report on Ustinov from the Soviets Thursday night, said neither he nor they ever mentioned defection.

"I didn't ask and they didn't ask," he said. "It was clear to me he had defected."

The Moscow Ballet, making its debut in the United States, is in the midst of a 21-city U.S. tour. The 33-member company was in Portland through Saturday night. The tour ends Nov. 28 in Trenton, N.J.

Exotic pet laws criticized

HOUSTON (AP) — Two recent attacks by lions has angered the head of the city's bureau of animal regulation and care, who says owners should be more responsible.

Lions, tigers, jaguars, cougars, lynxes — all have been found caged, chained or, at times, loose in the city and many are now housed with a city facility.

The latest was a lion that had to be killed after it attacked an 8-year-old girl in a shopping center and was shot by police last weekend. In Galveston on Tuesday, a 20-year-old man was scratched by a lion when he fell on the animal's head.

For Dr. Robert Armstrong, chief of Houston's bureau of animal regulation and care, his biggest complaint is not the number of animals or their species, but their owners.

"For many of them, their main qualification for owning a big cat is that they have one tattooed on their arm," he said. The "ordinance they've got in Houston is stupid. They say an animal like that has to be kept 300 feet from a building, but they don't specify what sort of pen. You could keep one in chicken wire," said W.A. Marshall, who raises tigers, cougars, leopards, panthers and bobcats in nearby Brazoria County near West Columbia.

Opinion

Views of other Texas papers

Here is a sampling of editorial opinions from around the state.

Says candidates deserve scrutiny

Harry Truman said it best: "If you can't stand the heat, get out of the kitchen." Thus, if Republican presidential hopeful Pat Robertson objects to close press scrutiny of his past, there's one sure way to stop it — drop out.

The plain fact is Robertson and all the other candidates of both parties are going to be subjected to microscopic examination because they should be.

They want to be elevated to the most important job in the world, and the people deserve to know just what sort of person they are being asked to put in that position.

Robertson's whining about the revelation that he and his wife were legally married just 10 weeks before their first child was born, and — more important — about inaccuracies in his personal resume, just doesn't deserve much sympathy.

He knew, or should have known, that when he put himself forward as a moral leader, a man of God, then as a great moral political leader, he was asking to be put to the test.

Supports grain elevator insurance

Even though Jose Cruz has taken the field for the last time for the Houston Astros, he will never be forgotten by this area's truly devoted baseball fans. Jose has been a fixture not only in left field but as a model Houstonian and family man.

The man called "Cheo" holds numerous team records and was chosen the most popular player in franchise history in a poll done by The Post. He should be given appropriate recognition of his 13 years of success and popularity. We suggest that the mayor give him a key to the city and that the Astros retire his No. 25. Good luck, Jose!

• The Houston Post

Cruz fan says retire his number

Grain elevator failures are rare occurrences in Texas, but approval of Amendment No. 1 on the Nov. 3 ballot would help the state's farmers rest easier at night.

The proposed amendment to the Texas Constitution would authorize state funds to be used as surety for a self-insurance fund to be established for the benefit of farmers who store their grain in public warehouses. The state's guarantee would be limited to $5 million.

The grain industry has provided assurance the self-insurance fund will be readily subscribed by the grain-buying and grain-storage industry. The $5 million fund is considered adequate to protect farmers without posing a threat to the state.

Texas farmers would benefit by obtaining grain storage at cheaper rates. Insurance coverage required by the state and federal government has become more expensive or unavailable because of losses caused by failures of grain elevators elsewhere in the nation.

Farmers who cannot afford grain storage pose a greater risk to the state than the state guarantee of an insurance pool established by an industry that is basically sound.

Calls Jackson serious candidate

The pros don't give the Rev. Jesse Jackson much chance of becoming the 41st president of the United States, but they have been wrong before.

Besides being the frontrunner, Jackson is the only Democrat making a second national bid. Of the Simons and Gores and Gephardts, only Jackson has overwhelming name recognition and a solid base of national support.

Jesse Jackson is a serious, bona fide candidate and should be treated as one. He was not in 1984, when his campaign was not subjected to the critical attention given other candidates.

It should be different this time and indications are that it will be. It was reported last week, for example, that Jackson signed a personal contract to work as a spokesman for a national chain of vocational schools.

Jackson discounted rumors that stories were imminent that would portray him as a womanizer. A Jackson backer, Mayor Gary Hatcher of Gary, Ind., warned supporters that "The winds of controversy will swirl around the head of our candidate. We must not let anyone tell us who Jesse Jackson is. We know who he is."

But does the country?

Reagan should condemn China

Liberal Sen. Claiborne Pell, D-R.I. and conservative Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., rarely agree on foreign policy. But this unlikely pair recently convinced the Senate to pass — unanimously — an amendment condemning China's violations of human rights in Tibet. Unfortunately, the State Department and the Reagan administration chose to take the other side.

The Senate amendment rebukes Peking for its violent crackdown against Tibetan protesters, including the shooting of at least six unarmed demonstrators by Chinese police last month.

It calls on Reagan to meet with the Dalai Lama, Tibet's national and religious leader, who has lived in exile for nearly three decades.

It also requires the president to certify that the Chinese are making progress on human-rights issues before making any new sales of U.S. weapons.

Americans are so enthusiastic about Peking's economic reforms, which have brought free-market practices to China's peasants, that we fail to pay as much attention as we should to other forms of liberty.

The Chinese ... continue to regard human rights as an unacceptable distraction from more important subjects.

The U.S. Senate disagrees. The White House should, too.

Woodward had Casey dead to rights

By JACK ANDERSON
and DALE VAN ATTA

WASHINGTON — During the late William Casey's six controversial years as director of the Central Intelligence Agency, no one who was at all knowledgeable about intelligence matters ever confused the institution with the man who was its titular boss. Casey and the CIA worked together only when they had the same goal in mind — and agreed on the best method to achieve it.

The Washington Post's Bob Woodward has come under fire for saying approximately the same thing in "Veil," his book on the CIA to be published this week.

Casey's widow, Sophia, has contradicted quotations and events ascribed to her husband, which Woodward says were based on "more than four dozen interviews or substantive discussions" with the then-director of the CIA.

We don't wish to offend Mrs. Casey; she has acknowledged that her husband didn't tell her everything. We have reason to believe Woodward.

Why? For one thing, we came to the same conclusion that Woodward did. Furthermore, we also had private conversations with Casey in which he revealed himself to be generally the kind of man Woodward has described in his new book.

In September 1983, we wrote: "Casey doesn't run the CIA. He's a lone wolf who prefers to leave the detail work and public relations chores to his deputy director."

We also noted: "Casey loves the covert-action side of his job. The cowboys down in the ranks will send up a harebrained proposal, and the next thing you know they're in his office plotting with him," complained one source. Other sources expressed concern that this sidestepped the checks and balances designed to prevent preposterous clandestine operations."

More recently — last February — while Casey was still alive, we charged that he hadn't told the Iran/Contra congressional investigators the whole truth about what he knew.

We quoted sources as saying that Lt. Col.

Oliver North, the unbridled National Security Council aide, "conferred privately with Casey, whom he greatly respected." We added: "These secret meetings and telephone calls were unrecorded for the most part, so only North or Casey could say for sure what the CIA chief knew and when. Private, one-on-one meetings were typical of Casey." North confirmed this in his subsequent public testimony at the Iran/Contra hearings.

Even more revealing of Casey the man was a secret meeting Dale Van Atta had with the CIA chief on Dec. 19, 1984. To explain how astonishing it was that Casey had agreed to an interview — as an anonymous source — we need to provide a little background:

Casey was furious over our critical 1983 profile of him. We were also on his blacklist for our frequent publication of CIA secrets. In fact, we had been told that when CIA personnel were to brief someone on "compartmented" or "codeword" information, Casey ordered them to give this explicit warning: None of the information must be leaked to "Jack Anderson and Dale Van Atta" — or to our rival columnists, Rowland Evans and Robert Novak.

Yet Casey agreed to meet Van Atta, as long as the meeting was not at CIA headquarters in Langley, Va. He chose a hideaway office on F Street, N.W., in downtown Washington, complete with CIA security and a false front.

Casey was waiting in the otherwise empty office, a few blocks from the White House. The office gave every indication of being unused except for Casey's clandestine meetings.

Casey was testy. "I can't always trust those boys at Langley," he said. He tried to pump Van Atta for information about the CIA, explaining that he didn't always know what his own agency was up to. Nor, he added with a smile, did they always know what he was up to.

Casey complained that "(you) and Jack Anderson get such sensitive stuff regularly" from the CIA. He said the reason he was meeting Van Atta at the secret location was that we had a "bad odor" at Langley.

Casey said that it scared him to realize that the CIA might be doing things without his knowledge, just as years earlier the agency had tried to assassinate Fidel Castro without informing then-director John McCone. So, Casey said, he hoped that reporters like us would give him "early warning" of any CIA rogue operations we learned about. In exchange, he hinted, he might confirm or deny other leads we got on CIA activities.

Casey told Van Atta he expected to serve as CIA chief as long as Ronald Reagan was in the White House. Even though here had been recurring controversies, he said he foresaw no possibility that Reagan would ever ask him to leave.

In sum, the Casey on display that day and in other private meetings was exactly the same as the man portrayed in Woodward's new book, despite well-meant revisionist views put forward by his widow and others.

MINI-EDITORIAL — Now that the strikebreaking professional football teams have shown their stuff, we'll be able to tell what American football fans are made of.

Will they, after groaning and/or guffawing at this week's antics, insist on top quality and boycott the games until they get it? Or are they so hopelessly addicted to their Sunday regimen that they'll put up with anything the owners decide to throw their way? It seems fairly obvious that, if the fans will pay to see second-rate players, the owners will then try for third-rate and worse, to trim their payrolls even more. Tennis, anyone?

CLARIFICATION — In a recent column we cited eight federally funded construction projects as indicative of waste in Uncle Sam's housing programs. Actually, only one of the projects was specifically for housing: a $7.1 million luxury development in Atlantic City, N.J.

The other projects, which received a total of about $33 million in federal grants, were funded by an Urban Development Action Grant program of the Housing and Urban Development Department. The program was set up to encourage development in economically depressed areas by generating construction jobs at attracting businesses, according to a HUD spokesman.

This resulted in construction of a marina with "dockominiums" in Michigan; luxury hotels in Florida, Puerto Rico and New York; a parking deck in Columbus, Ind.; and a $15 million site preparation for a Chrysler plant in Detroit.

How to tell if you're a bimbo

By LEWIS GRIZZARD

The headline on the cover of People magazine quoted Jessica Hahn, love-mate to the television ministry, as saying, "I am not a bimbo."

Upon seeing that headline jump out at me from a magazine rack at a convenience store, I asked myself, has the term "bimbo" ever been fully and exactly defined?

I don't think so, even though the term — used basically to describe a slick-brained, air-headed young female — is being used more and more often in our language.

Because there seems to be an ever-increasing number of young women (see Hall, Fawn; Rice, Donna) who are being forced to deny their bimboness, it seemed natural for me, as a public service, to offer a quiz that can be taken by female readers to determine if they are already bimbos or are headed down the path to bimbohood.

With the help of my colleague, Raunch Botts, lounge lizard, deflowerer of young girls who come to the city to meet a man who wears underwear like Jim Palmer, and whose dates all have first names that end with "i," we developed the following quiz for those concerned about being bimbos.

1. Would you have trouble naming a single capital of any of the 50 states?
2. Did you say, "No. New York, New York"?
3. Were you ever a cheerleader?
4. Did you ever forget (or forgot on purpose) those little shiny pants that went under your cheerleading skirt?
5. Do you wear matching leg warmers and headbands when you work out at "The Bod God"?
6. Does the name Ronald Reagan ring a bell?

7. Is it the one in your head that goes "Ding-dong" whenever you see a gold American Express card?
8. Do you own a cat?
9. Is a good suntan more important to you than life itself?
10. Do you think the public library is located in the checkout line at your local supermarket?
11. Are you from California?
12. Do you think panty raid is the name of a feminine hygiene spray?
13. Have you already forgotten why you are trying to answer these questions?
14. Are you an Aquarius?
15. Have you ever met a man named Raunch Botts?
16. Did you believe him when he said he was an Aquarius, too?

If you answered any of these questions, "Yes," you've got a better than average chance of being a bimbo.

If you answered them all "Yes," then you are definitely a bimbo.

Congratulations.

This probably is the last time in your life you'll have to think.

Today in history

Today's highlight in history: On Oct. 19, 1781, British troops under Lord Cornwallis surrendered at Yorktown, Va., as the American Revolution neared its end.

On this date:

In 1765, the Stamp Act Congress, meeting in New York, drew up a declaration of rights and liberties.

In 1812, French forces under Napoleon Bonaparte began their retreat from Moscow.

In 1864, Confederate Gen. Jubal A. Early attacked Union forces at Cedar Creek, Va. The Union troops were able to rally under Gen. Phil Sheridan and defeat the Confederates.

In 1936, reporter H.R. Ekins of the New York World-Telegram beat Dorothy Kilgallen of the New York Journal and Leo Kieran of The New York Times in a round-the-world race on commercial flights in 18½ days.

In 1950, United Nations forces entered Pyongyang, the capital of North Korea.

In 1951, President Harry S. Truman signed an act formally ending the state of war with Germany.

Nancy says she's fine

WASHINGTON — Nancy Reagan believes that despite the loss of her left breast, her experience with cancer has been a "success story" that should encourage other women to have regular check-ups.

"Just fine. I feel great," Mrs. Reagan told her press secretary Elaine Crispin on Sunday, one day after a 12-physician team performed a modified radical mastectomy to remove a cancerous breast.

Reagans call Jessica

WASHINGTON — President and Nancy Reagan have telephoned the parents of Jessica McClure, telling them to give the 18-month-old tot who was rescued from an abandoned well "a big kiss."

The president was visiting his wife at Bethesda Naval Medical Center in suburban Washington at the time of the call on Sunday. The first lady is recuperating from breast cancer surgery she underwent Saturday.

"Everybody in America became godfathers and godmothers of Jessica while this was going on," the president told the parents, Chip and Reba Gayle McClure.

"When she's aware, give her a big kiss," the first lady added.

The couple's comments were relayed to reporters in a statement by the president's physician, Dr. John E. Hutton.

Lava flow continues

KALAPANA, Hawaii — Up to 2,000 visitors a day are braving noxious fumes and a trek of nearly a mile to watch a geologic spectacle as molten lava oozes from Kilauea Volcano and flows slowly down to the Pacific Ocean.

When the hot rock reaches the Pacific, it cools and hardens into sand, sending up clouds of steam from the ocean in the process.

"The best view is at night, when you can see the red glow through the cracks," Jim Martin, chief ranger at Hawaii Volcanoes National Park, said Sunday.

Man survives freezer

CHICAGO — The manager of a fast-food restaurant, left for dead in a freezer after being shot through the chest during a holdup, has survived and identified the gunman, who police said was being sought today.

"Whoever did it thought he was dead," said Detective Thomas Minton. "He (the manager) must have thought he was going to die, too. So he left us a note, a name scrawled with pencil on a box."

When employees arrived at the McDonald's restaurant at 6:30 a.m. Sunday, they found 28-year-old Arnold Bowman on the freezer floor.

Rescue workers assisted by soldiers remove bodies from the wreckage of two passenger trains that collided head-on south of Jakarta, Indonesia, Monday killing at least 80 and injuring more than 300. The trains carried approximately 900 passengers.

80 dead, 300 injured in Indonesia

JAKARTA, Indonesia (AP) — A train packed with rush-hour commuters smashed head-on into another train south of Jakarta today, killing about 80 people and injuring 300, police said.

Panicking passengers jumped from the roof and sides of the trains moments before the 7:30 a.m. collision, witnesses said.

"We were so shocked when we saw another train coming on the same rail there was no time to warn the others. We just jumped for our lives," said a man who identified himself only as Sukirman.

A police spokesman said 50 bodies were recovered and about 30 more bodies were believed to be in the wreckage. About 300 injured were sent to seven hospitals in Jakarta, he said, speaking on condition of anonymity.

The spokesman said the collision took place in the district of Bintaro Jaya, about nine miles south of central Jakarta.

A train carrying 600 passengers from Rangkas Bitung to Jakarta, 40 miles north, smashed into a train carrying 300 passengers from Jakarta to the town of Merak, about 85 miles west.

Police said the northbound train was traveling at high speed when conductors saw the other train approaching about two miles away. They did not know the exact speed, nor whether the second train was traveling at high speed.

A train station official said 50 or more people frequently perch on top of the train to Jakarta during rush hour.

Some people jumped from the trains when they saw the accident was about to occur, survivors said.

Sudradjat, 25, a painter who goes by one name, said he was sitting in one of the carriages when he saw the oncoming train.

"I did not have time to pick up my bag," he said. "I just jumped out the door, which was somehow already opened."

Rescue workers were using saws and hammers to dig through the wreckage for the dead and injured.

Scores of ambulances and three helicopters carried victims to hospitals.

UNESCO woos U.S.

PARIS — A candidate favored by Western countries won nomination as UNESCO director general, and he urged the United States and Britain to rejoin the organization they had accused of having an anti-Western bias.

Federico Mayor Zaragoza of Spain told reporters after getting the nomination Sunday that he would ask the United States and Britain to "join us in ... some concrete projects" in some scientific and environmental areas.

The United States and Britain pulled out in 1984 and 1985, alleging that under the leadership of Director General Amadou Mahtar M'Bow of Senegal, the agency was squandering money and exhibiting an anti-Western bias.

Shultz visits Egypt

CAIRO, Egypt — U.S. Secretary of State George Shultz began a round of meetings in Egypt today after talks in Israel that did not produce any apparent headway toward negotiations on the Arab-Israeli dispute.

"I cannot point to any particular thing and say we've gone from here to there," Shultz told reporters in Jerusalem on Sunday. He urged Arabs and Israelis to "dig in" and try to find a path to direct negotiations.

Egyptian Foreign Minister Esmat Abdel-Meguid greeted Shultz today at Cairo International Airport, where veteran reporters said security was the tightest ever for a secretary of state.

Government resigns

BRUSSELS, Belgium — King Baudouin accepted the resignation of the center-right government today after four days of talks among political leaders failed to resolve a dispute over language.

The royal palace said in a brief statement the monarch asked the government of Prime Minister Wilfried Martens to stay on in a caretaker capacity and to form a new government.

Martens offered the resignation of his coalition government Thursday in a dispute over a mayor who insists on speaking French in Dutch-speaking Flanders.

Typhoon hits islands

AGANA, Guam — Flooding and 100-mph winds from Typhoon Lynn damaged many homes in the Northern Mariana Islands today after the storm veered away from this U.S. territory in the western Pacific, officials said.

The storm swept through the islands about 10 a.m. Sunday then moved away to the northwest at 10 mph, said Capt. Bob Crosby of the U.S. Navy-Air Force Typhoon Warning Center here.

No injuries had been reported.

Tips on buying a dishwasher

When faced with a price spread of several hundred dollars between low- and high-end dishwashers, deciding where to put your money is tricky. The most obvious distinction involves dishwasher controls. Better Homes and Gardens magazine says the key for shopping for a new machine is to match up your needs with what's available.

Most machines look about the same — except for their control panels. A dishwasher with more controls won't necessarily do more work than one with fewer controls.

Are all those fancy control buttons and touch pads really worth the money? Some push buttons merely select functions controlled by the dial on a lower-priced model; others offer features that might rarely, if ever, be used. For example, a plate-warming function may be a useless luxury, while the pots-and-pans soaking function may be worth the extra cost.

The energy-saver function saves electricity by permitting the dishwasher fan to circulate air during the drying cycle, but with the dryer element cut off. Dishes take longer to dry, but the energy savings makes this control very desirable.

Rinse hold rinses a partial load so the food doesn't dry on dishes before running a full cycle later. This control can also be used to rinse a full load that needs washing later.

The pots-and-pans-control soaks the load to soften food before regular washing. This control saves energy, too, because it uses less hot water than used if scrubbing items by hand. Consider this feature a must.

The china-crystal function aerates the water to soften its force. Only a few companies offer it, however, and china and crystal will probably be safe at the normal setting.

Plate warmers use the drying element to preheat dishes for serving hot foods. This control can be passed by. To warm plates in the dishwasher, turn off the energy-saver switch and turn the dishwasher to drying.

Delayed start programs the dishwasher to start automatically up to nine hours later. This feature could save money if the utility company offers a discount for electricity used in off-peak periods. It's expensive, however, and the same thing can be accomplished manually with rinse hold.

Names in the news

Police investigate gunfire

MIAMI (AP) — "Miami Vice" star Don Johnson was having a picnic with a little gunfire mixed in for fun when police got a complaint of illegal dove shooting.

Metro-Dade police officers responded to a call from Linda Jennings about dove-shooting in the sanctuary on property adjoining her home in rural Dade County.

"They were shooting out there with the permission of the owner, but we could not determine if they were dove hunting out there or not," said Sgt. Ed Hafner.

Sunday's complaint, Hafner said, was handled much like the other 40 to 50 calls officers receive each day during dove season.

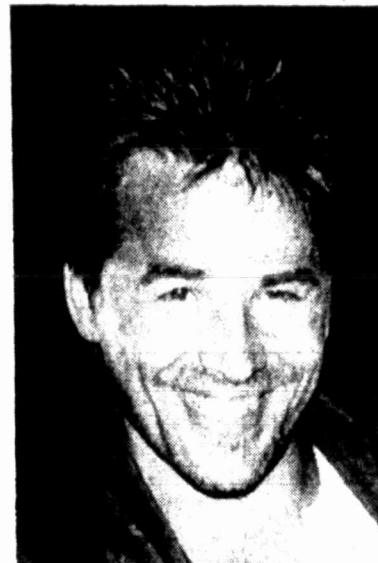

Hafner described Johnson's group as "more like a family thing, cooking chicken and having like a family-type of picnic."

Officers left without issuing any complaint "because nobody saw him actually pull the trigger and a bird fall," Mrs. Jennings said. "Don Johnson got in his helicopter and left."

PALO ALTO, Calif. (AP) — Reggie Jackson, the major league slugger who said at the end of this season he will retire from baseball, has purchased a car dealership.

"This is our first store together," said Bill Boggs, Jackson's partner, adding that the deal for the Nissan dealership was completed in September. He said they plan to buy other dealerships in the San Francisco Bay area.

Jackson, who played for the Oakland A's last season and was in Minneapolis this weekend working for ABC-TV during its coverage of the World Series, already owns an interest in a Buick dealership in Pleasanton.

DON JOHNSON

Jackson owns about 100 cars, including older model Pontiacs, Chevrolets, Mercedes-Benzes and Porsches. He also has written columns for car magazines. "This is just a natural extension to his love of cars," Boggs said.

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — Talk show host Sally Jessy Raphael says high self-esteem breeds success, and that most Americans should push aside their failures.

In a speech billed "Sex, Success and Self-fulfillment," Ms. Raphael told 600 people at a benefit for the Lincoln-Lancaster Mental Health Foundation that failure to cope with life's problems breeds low self-esteem.

"If you realize 50 percent of things will fail, you won't be so discouraged," said Ms.

REGGIE JACKSON

Raphael, who has been fired 19 times but now hosts a half-hour syndicated television program. She soon will broadcast a daily three-hour radio show.

The media contributes to the problem by rarely showing how successful people have coped with failure, she said Friday.

Ms. Raphael said sex also depends on self-esteem, and that women must feel confident enough to tell their lovers how they like sex.

PALATINE, Ill. (AP) — Science fiction writer Frederik Pohl says his latest novel, "Chernobyl," was a difficult undertaking because it blends fact with fiction.

"Chernobyl" is based on the April 1986 disaster, when the No. 4 reactor at the Soviet Union's Chernobyl nuclear plant exploded and burned.

Precautions to take horror out of halloween

DEAR READERS: Don't tell me it's time to prepare for another Halloween again! Well, it is, which means it's time to remind you that: Somebody's child will be seriously injured or killed in a Halloween-related traffic accident.

Somebody's child will be badly maimed or fatally burned due to a flammable costume.

Somebody's child will be coaxed into an automobile or lured into a secluded area and sexually assaulted.

To make sure that child isn't yours, here are some tips to ensure the safety of your children:

- Use flameproof costumes only. If costumes are made at home, treat the fabric with a flame-resistant solution.

- Because masks, floppy hats, wigs and veils often interfere with a child's vision, use make-up instead.

- Accessories such as swords, broomsticks, hatchets, wands, etc., should be made of cardboard rather than plastic, metal or wood. Sharp items are dangerous.

- Provide youngsters with flashlights to prevent falls on sidewalks or porch steps. (Positively no lighted candles should be carried!)

- Decorate your child's costume and trick-or-treat bag with reflective tape to make them highly visible to motorists.

- Remind children that they should never enter the home of a stranger or accept rides.

- Adults can help by keeping their yards well-lighted.

- Parents should check all "treats" before allowing children to eat them.

- Very young children should never be out after dark unless accompanied by an adult.

So, make it a safe Halloween, and come Thanksgiving, you'll have more to be thankful for.

DEAR ABBY: This concerns the issue of the "Boxer Rebellion". First, a 14-year-old girl wanted to know your thoughts on the new fad of girls wearing men's boxer shorts. You said it was "harmless" or words to that effect. Then a Mr. Griffith wrote to say he thought the fad was gross and pointed out the fact that there was an opening in front large enough to stuff a grapefruit through.

I'd like to tell Mr. Griffith that we young ladies either use a large safety pin to close the gap — or we stitch it shut.

LIKES BOXER SHORTS DEAR LIKES: The mail has been running 2-to-1 in favor of boxer shorts for girls. However, one mother had this to say:

DEAR ABBY: I have two daughters, ages 13 and 15, who have taken to wearing their father's boxer shorts. They sewed up the opening in front, but a pair of their stitched-up shorts got into their father's underwear drawer by mistake and he didn't discover it until he wore it one day. Thank heavens Daddy has a sense of humor.

OREGON MOM

DEAR ABBY: It is my impression that "J.F. in Vancouver" got a stupid answer to a stupid question. I spent seven years in Munich, and no, you do not have to let strangers into your home to use the bathroom, kitchen, broom closet or anything else. The architect put the bathroom near the front door because nothing infuriates Germans more than children running in and out of the house to use the john. This way, the neighborhood kids can use the bathroom without running across the wall-to-wall carpet with their dirty shoes.

Apparently "J.F." not only lacks a sense of humor, but also displays a certain amount of hostility toward people of other cultures, or the salesman would not have tied that bear on him — as the Bavarians would say.

I'll bet the Bavarian salesman is still laughing at that glibbie Yank. A.N.M., DENTON, TEXAS

Twins take 2-0 lead on Cardinals

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Every time the Minnesota Twins get something going in the postseason, which happens pretty often, Gary Gaetti is right in the middle of it.

Gaetti, who hit 31 homers and drove in 109 runs during the regular season and then was named Most Valuable Player of the American League playoffs after the Twins defeated Detroit, has continued to lead the Twins in the World Series.

"It's Gaetti every time, isn't it?" Twins right fielder Tom Brunansky said after Minnesota defeated the St. Louis Cardinals 8-4 Sunday night to take a two games to none lead in the World Series.

In Saturday's 10-1 triumph, Gaetti had two hits in Minnesota's seven-run fourth inning. On Sunday, Gaetti's home run in the second inning got the Twins on the board against St. Louis starter Danny Cox.

"I don't think he was too happy with the pitch ... a slider, right in the 'whomp-um' zone," Gaetti said. "I don't think it had too much effect on him, though, because he pitched pretty well the next inning."

But in the fourth, after Kirby Puckett and Kent Hrbek singled, Gaetti drew a walk to load the bases. Randy Bush and Tim Lardner then had two-run hits and the game, for all intents and purposes, was over.

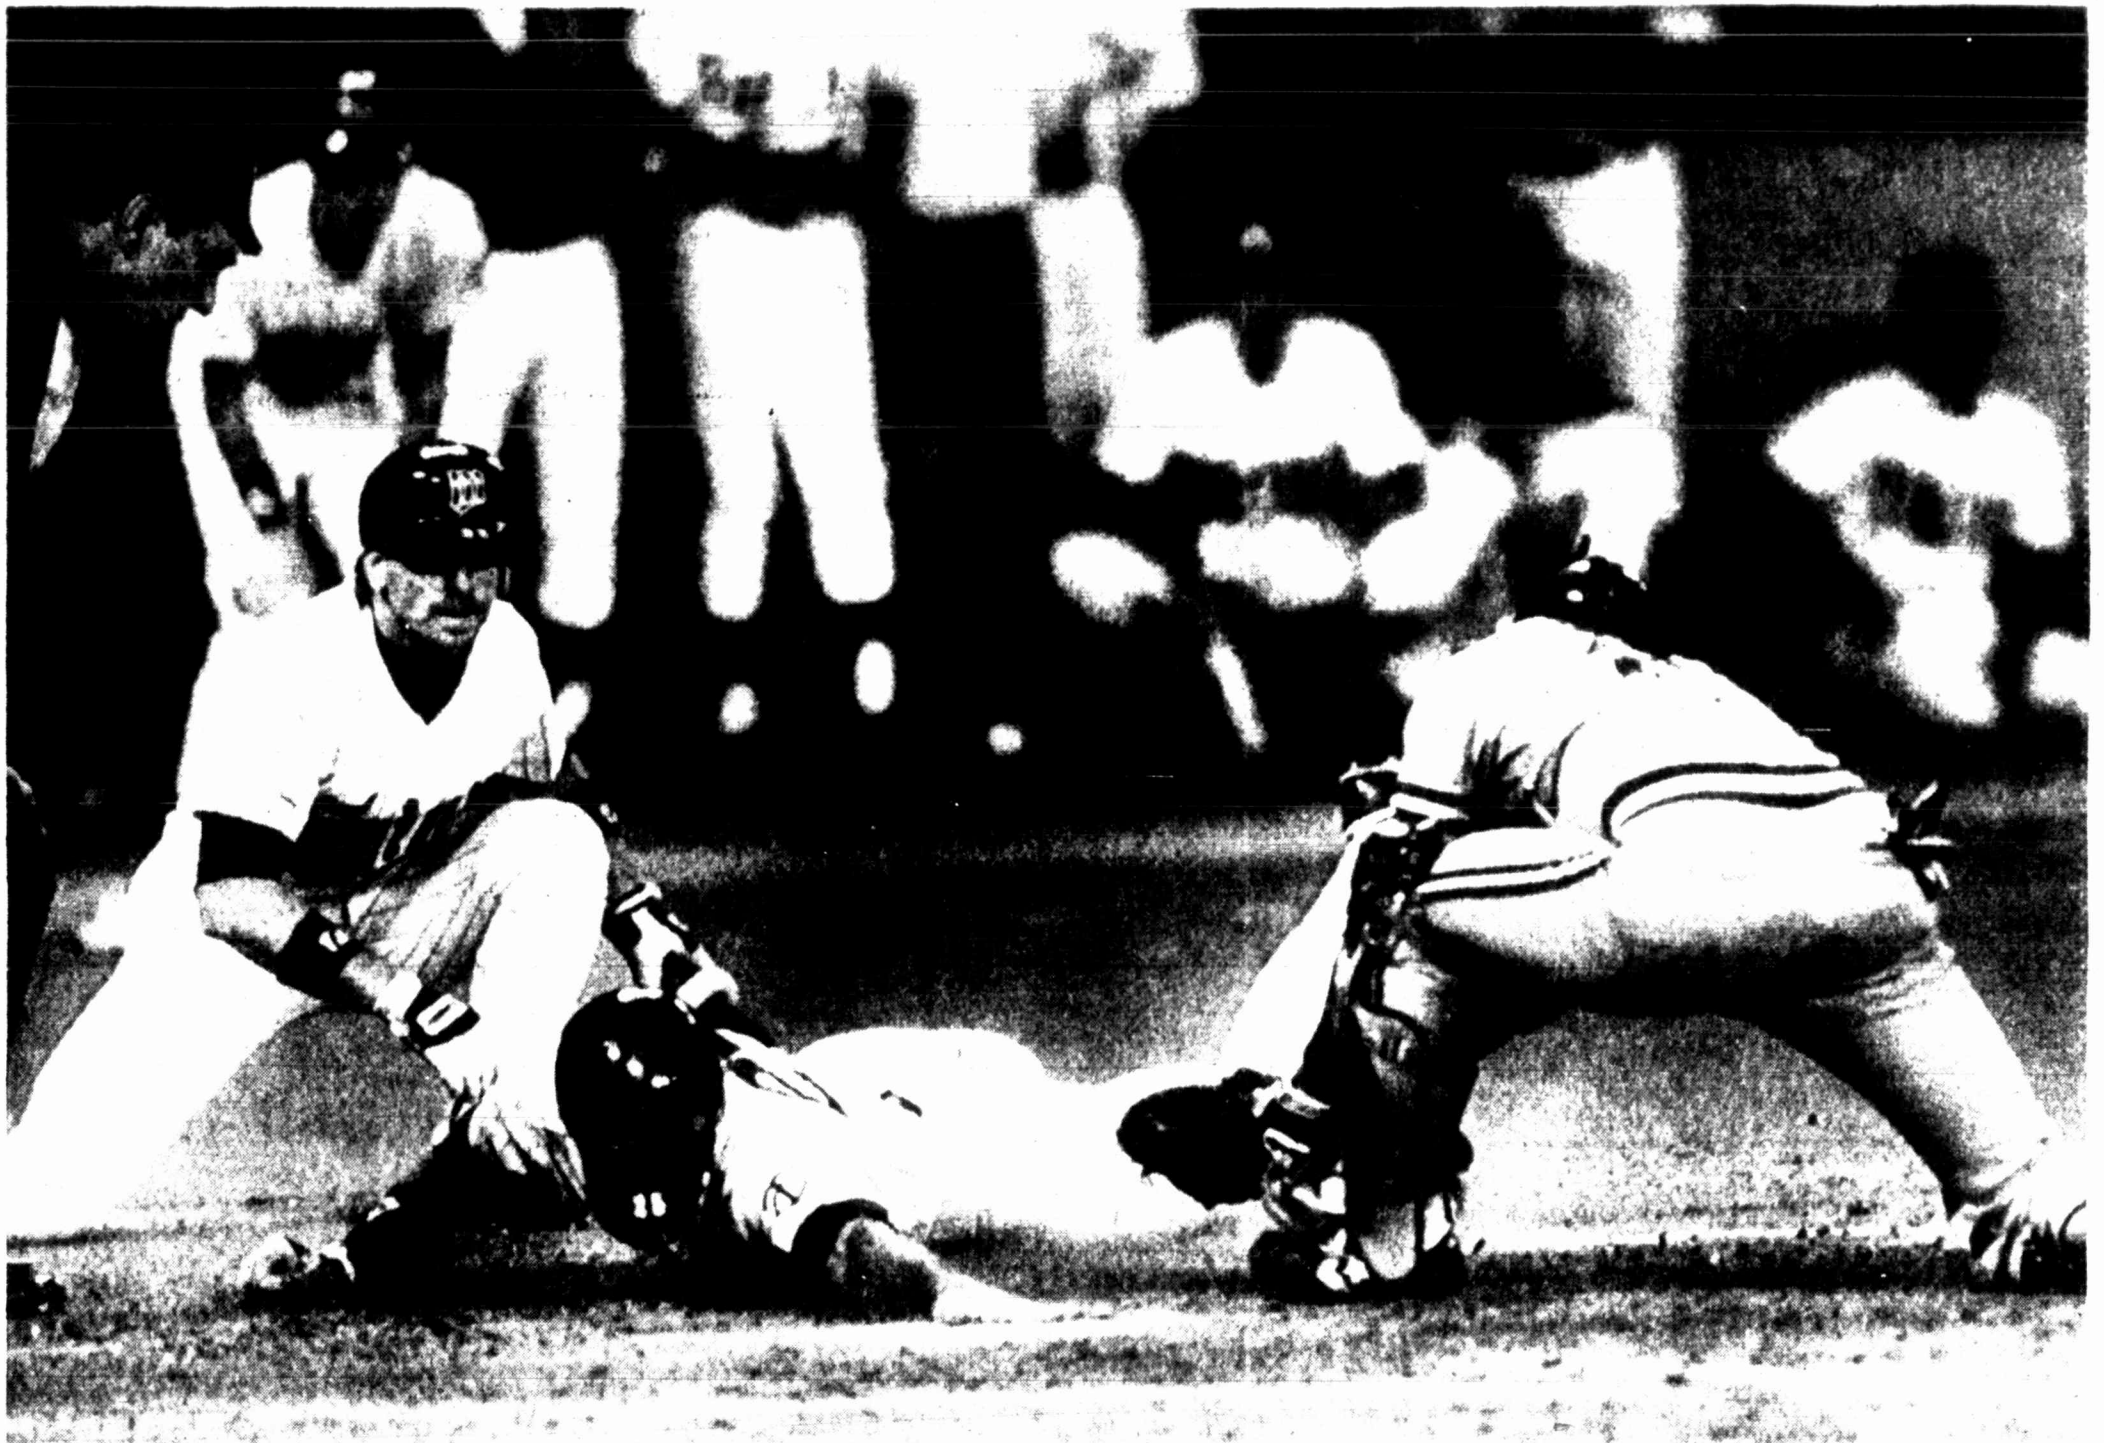

"We are on a mission," Gaetti said. "Hopefully it will continue."

When Gaetti, the original "G-Man," is held in check, Minnesota's other G-Men get going.

They are Dan Gladden, who has driven in six runs in the two World Series games; and Greg Gagne, who snapped an 0-for-7 slump with an RBI double that capped the Twins' six-run fourth Sunday.

"You say, 'Gee, I better do something. Everybody else is doing something,'" said Gagne, whose six postseason hits include four doubles and two homers. "We're on a roll right now. We've got our confidence going into St. Louis. We never played there before. We have to get used to the field. Maybe, 'Gee, I better do something about it.'"

Gladden, a former National

Minnesota Twins base runner Randy Bush slides into home plate for a score during the fourth inning of World Series action against the St. Louis Cardinals Sunday in Minneapolis.

At left is Twins player Dan Gladden, and right is St. Louis catcher Tony Pena. The Twins won the game 8-4, giving them a 2-0 lead in the Series.

League, said the Twins can count on him for hits — but not for pointers on Busch Stadium.

They — just play the game they've been playing," he said. "This is no time to make changes."

"Lardner, however, has found the World Series to be as good a time as any to make a few changes. A '91 hitter during the regular season who was 1-for-14 in the playoffs, Lardner has gone 3-for-6 with four RBIs in the Series.

said Lardner, who drove in three runs Sunday with a two-run single and a solo homer. "I'm trying to relax at the plate a little bit."

Patriots stop Oilers, 21-7

HOUSTON (AP) — New England regulars Doug Flutie, Raymond Clayborn and Andre Tippett made the difference in Sunday's 21-7 victory over the Houston Oilers.

The Oiler regulars who mingled with the previously unbeaten replacement team had the opposite effect on their team's performance.

Flutie, making his debut with New England, completed 15 of 25 passes for 199 yards, including a 27-yard touchdown pass to Larry Linde and rushed 43 yards on 6 carries for 242 yards of offense.

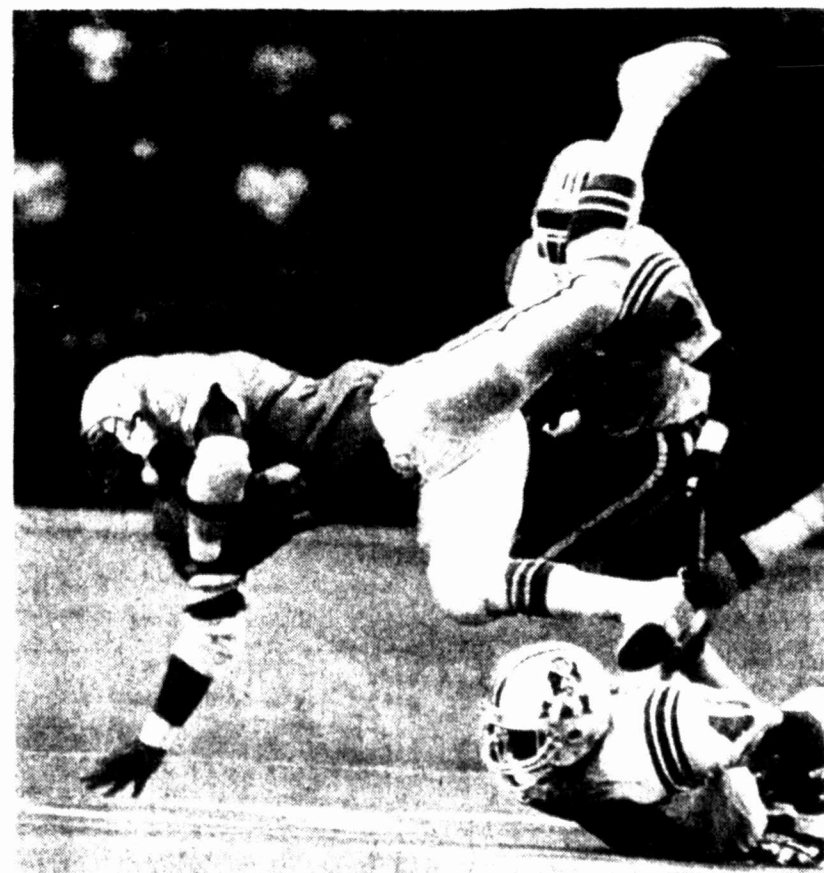

Tippett had three quarterback sacks and blocked a field goal that Clayborn picked up and returned 71 yards for a touchdown shortly before halftime.

Obtained in a trade with Chicago last week, Flutie crossed striking picket lines to play in the final replacement game. He knows where he'll be on Sunday.

"I'd be very surprised if I play next week," Flutie said. "But I'd rather be on the sidelines with the Patriots than on the sidelines at Chicago."

Oiler first round draft choice Haywood Jeffries dropped three passes and kicker Tony Zendejas missed two field goal tries, ending a string of making 12 in a row.

"I apologize to the team," Jeffries said. "It was the culmination of everything going wrong. I was pressing too hard. I have to relax next week and get more concentration."

Houston Oiler Herman Hunter is upended by New England Patriots Darryl Holmes on the tackle after a nine yard gain in third quarter action Sunday at the Astrodome.

Zendejas and Jeffries were booed by the crowd of 26,294 fans who came to see the final game of the replacement team. The fans gave the replacements a standing ovation as they left the field for the last time, despite their loss.

Flutie, who earned a Heisman Trophy while playing for Boston

College, said he felt prepared for the game, despite being with the team only five days and four practices.

"I wasn't nervous," Flutie said. "I was excited. I couldn't wait for the game to start. I was thankful for the opportunity. I had been in a bad situation and I had no future. It was time to move on."

New England Coach Raymond Berry was pleased with the offensive improvement.

"He was great," Berry said of Flutie. "His judgement in running the ball and putting it in the air was remarkable. The returning veterans made the difference."

It was a different kind of game for Oiler quarterback Brent Pease, who completed 21 of 49 passes for 250 yards.

"We just didn't play well today when we had to," Pease said. "There's nothing to be unhappy about. We could have easily won the game if the breaks had gone our way."

Houston's only score came on Pease's 36-yard pass to Oliver Williams in the first quarter.

Pease sidestepped the subject of dropped passes.

"Yes there were quite a few but Oliver caught a few that I didn't throw very well," Pease said.

Oiler Coach Jerry Glanville said the replacement players wanted to go out unbeaten.

"They worked hard all week and they wanted to win as badly as ever," Glanville said. "But some days you just don't make the catches."

Regulars make big difference in games

By The Associated Press

If there were ever any doubts about the difference between a real NFL player and a strike irregular, Steve Largent, Joe Montana and a bunch of backup quarterbacks have dashed them forever.

As replacement games mercifully dwindled down to a precious one — tonight's Redskins-Cowboys game at Texas Stadium — many of the regulars who reported this week had an immediate impact Sunday.

But there was no rush back by the fans to see them on the third week of strike football.

The average attendance Sunday was about 26,500, 38 percent of capacity, with just 8,310 watching a near-record performance by Largent at the Pontiac Silverdome and three other gatherings of less than 20,000.

But at least, most of the heroes were familiar names — Largent, Montana, Dwight Clark, Jeff Kemp, Gary Danielson, Pat Ryan and Lawrence Taylor. But despite two sacks and a forced fumble, Taylor couldn't prevent the New York Giants from losing again, 6-3 in overtime to Buffalo, dropping them to 0-5, the worst start in history for a defending Super Bowl champion.

In other games Sunday it was, Pittsburgh 21, Indianapolis 7; Seattle 37, Detroit 14; New York Jets 37, Miami 31 in overtime; New England 21, Houston 7; Cleveland 34, Cincinnati 0; Green Bay 16, Philadelphia 10 in overtime; New Orleans 19, Chicago 17; Tampa Bay 20, Minnesota 10; Atlanta 24, Los Angeles Rams 20; San Diego 23, Los Angeles Raiders 17; Denver 26, Kansas City 17, and San Francisco 34, St. Louis 28.

The Giants were just one example of the way the strike skewed the standings.

Kansas City and Minnesota, two other contenders, also went 0-3 with replacements while a 2-1 strike record left Houston and Tampa Bay at 3-2, the best start for each team since 1981.

Largent, who extended to 142 his record for consecutive games with receptions and needs just 36 catches to become the top pass-catcher in NFL history, was by far the most impressive player

Sunday.

He caught 15 passes for 266 yards in Seattle's victory before being benched with 5:36 gone in the second half, three receptions short of Tom Fears' 37-year-old record for catches in a game.

But he seemed to have no desire for a mark that many would have denoted with a mental asterisk if not an actual one.

"The only record I was concerned with was getting a win," said Largent, who spent the day playing catch with Kemp, who was 20 of 27 for 344 yards and four touchdowns.

Most of the Sunday's heroes took the same attitude.

"It's just a team victory," said Danielson, Cleveland's 36-year-old backup quarterback, who completed 25 of 31 for 281 yards and four touchdowns as the Browns the Cincinnati "B" team. "The statistics don't really mean that much."

Montana and Clark, meanwhile, teamed up as in championship days of yore. Montana completed 31 of 39 for 334 yards and four touchdowns in a victory over St. Louis, with Clark catching two of the touchdown passes and nine in all.

Ryan, the Jets' backup quarterback, threw four touchdown passes in the Jets' overtime victory over Miami.

One notable replacement was Erik Kramer, who threw for 335 yards and three second-half touchdowns as Atlanta overcame a 17-0 deficit for a 24-20 victory over the Rams, who had 11 veterans back.

"All I can say is that I had the best day of my life. It was a dream come true. If it all ends today, it was great, but I hope to stick around the NFL," said Kramer, who had been helping coach the football team while working for his degree at North Carolina State, where he played in college.

Unless Dallas and Washington tie tonight, the Giants will be four games out in the NFC East and their 0-5 record is one game worse than Pittsburgh's 1-4 in 1976, the year after the Steelers had won two straight Super Bowls.

That means that even to make the playoffs, they may have to go 10-0, a not impossible feat considering they won 12 straight last season. But not very easy, either.

Cowboys touchdown favorite tonight

IRVING (AP) — Replacement players for the Dallas Cowboys and Washington Redskins will qualify for a half share of January playoff money after tonight's NFC East first-place showdown.

With the NFLPA strike over and the regular players set to return this week, this will be the last of the replacement games and Dallas management expects a crowd of better than 50,000 to be there to say goodbye to the "rhinestone" Cowboys.

The "carbon" Cowboys and Redskins could earn a big payday at the end of the year if the teams do well in the title chase.

"To qualify, a replacement player has to be in three games and then they are eligible for championship playoff money which includes the Super Bowl," Cowboys President Tex Schramm said. "I imagine they will be pulling hard for the veterans starting next week."

Both teams are 2-0 during the strike.

Odds makers have made the Cowboys seven-point favorites because of a large contingent of veteran players who crossed the picket line. The Redskins remained solidly behind the union during the 24-day strike and no regular players crossed the picket line.

However, Dallas Coach Tom Landry said he wasn't certain whether he will start quarterback Danny White or running back Tony Dorsett.

"I'll probably make up my mind when I walk down the tunnel just before the game starts," Landry said.

The Redskins and Cowboys face each other for the sixth time on Monday Night Football with Dallas holding a series lead of 31-21-2 and a 3-2 edge on MNF.

Dallas is 16-14 on MNF and Washington is an NFC-best 17-11.

The Cowboys' poor secondary — 28th in the NFL — will be tested by Washington's passing combination of Ed Ruppert to Anthony Allen.

Allen's 306 yards on 11 catches leads all NFL receivers, while Ruppert is 25 of 47 for 510 yards and four touchdowns.

Dallas's offense is paced by quarterback Kevin Sweeney and wide receiver Kelvin Edwards, who provide most of the fireworks.

Nelson gets unusual win

LAKE BUENA VISTA, Fla. (AP) — The victory in the Walt Disney World Golf Classic was a new experience for Larry Nelson.

Winning itself isn't unusual for Nelson, but the fashion in which he won was something new.

Nelson, a two-time and current PGA champion and a former U.S. Open title-holder, won the Disney Sunday while he was sitting in the press tent studying the leaderboard.

Moments later a PGA Tour official approached Nelson, held out his hand and said "Congratulations."

"Can you imagine that? You're in the press tent and you find out you won the golf tournament when someone walks up and shakes your hand," Nelson said.

Nelson, 40, came from six shots back with a 9-under-par 63 and won by one stroke over Morris Hatahsy and Mark O'Meara.

"The most gratifying thing to me is to be able to win so quickly after winning the PGA (two months ago)," Nelson said.

"That shows some maturity. But, I guess if you don't have some maturity by the time you're 40 you're in trouble."

Nelson acquired the ninth title of his 14-year PGA Tour career with a 20-under-par 268 total. The victory was worth $108,000 from the total purse of $600,000 and pushed his season's earnings to $437,492 — more than $150,000 ahead of his best previous season.

"I won more in the month of August than I'd ever won in a full season before," he said. "I'm very fortunate to be able to still play now that the purses have gone up so much."

Nelson hit every fairway and green in regulation and didn't even come close to making a bogey.

Minnie Mouse gets a kiss from Larry Nelson of Marietta, Georgia, as she congratulates him on winning the Walt Disney World Golf Classic. Nelson shot a nine-under-par 63 to finish the tourney with a 268 total to win $108,000.

"I could have birdied every hole," he said. He made the turn in 33, then made his move at the leaders with a 35-foot putt for eagle-3 on the 10th.

He got irons inside of four feet on the 13th and 14th and birdied both, then finished with a birdie-birdie flourish.

"To shoot 63 when you have to do it, to shoot that number on Sunday to win the tournament, well, it's a nice little notch for me," said Nelson, who finished about an hour in front of the other contenders.

Landowners encouraged to lease land

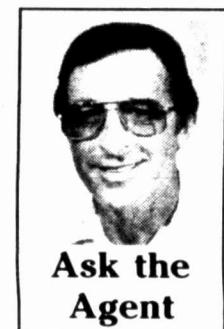

By Don Richardson

Does your office maintain a list of landowners that lease their lands for hunting purposes?

We have been encouraging landowners who wish to lease their land for hunting and/or fishing purposes to contact our office so we can develop such a list. We have calls from all over the state each year requesting such places for such recreational uses. Local landowners who have wildlife such as quail and dove are missing out on extra income by not taking advantage of such leasing arrangements. Any landowner that wishes to add his name to our list is encouraged to do so. This is a free service we gladly provide.

Is there a new law now regarding the establishment of free-ranging wild turkey flocks?

Yes. Your attention is called to House Bill No. 1330 which became effective September 1, 1987. This legislation makes it illegal to raise, purchase, sell, transport or release turkeys for the purpose of establishing a "free-ranging wild turkey flock."

Ask the Agent

For information concerning the legal requirements of restocking or establishing free-ranging wild turkey populations, please contact Mr. William (Bill) C. Brownlee, Texas Parks and Wildlife Department, 4200 Smith School Road, Austin, Texas 78744, telephone (512) 389-4973.

Do wild animals ever cross with each other or domestic animals?

Crossbreeding is a proven practice for domestic livestock production, but from the standpoint of wildlife, hybridization may not be such a good idea. In the context of wildlife hybrids, I can think of three situations: deer, quail, and coyotes.

White-tailed and mule deer sometimes interbreed over some areas of their range where they are sympatric (occur together). Two recent studies (one from Texas A&M, the other from Texas Tech) have examined the scope of such crossings in the Trans-Pecos region. These studies suggest that varying degrees of hybridization have occurred, especially in Pecos and Terrell counties. The general feeling among landowners is that the cross involves the white-tailed buck and the mule deer doe, but data presented at a recent symposium in Alpine by Jim Deer, a graduate student at TAMU, suggested that the mule deer buck and white-tailed doe are the likely partners.

Coyotes are known to hybridize with two different species, the domestic dog and the red wolf. In both situations, the crosses can be a problem, but for different reason. "Coydog" crosses are often troublemakers from the livestock depredation standpoint. Hybridization with the red wolf has resulted in the near extinction of the red wolf, a native of east Texas and Louisiana.

Qual hybrids appear to be less common. Bobwhite and scaled (blue) quail hybrids have been reported. Such "bobbles" generally resemble a bobwhite with a topknot. Whereas, the deer hybrids and coydog hybrids are generally fertile crosses, so far as I know the quail hybrids are sterile.

Sports Briefs

Regulations for deer hunters

Landowners and hunters are reminded that no antlerless deer permit issued by the Texas Parks and Wildlife department will be required for taking antlerless deer in Howard County, south of Interstate 20, for the regular deer season for 1987-88.

Antlerless deer in Howard County will only require being tagged with the appropriate tag from the hunter's valid hunting license. The regular gun white-tailed deer season for 87-88 is November 14 through January 3, with a bag limit of four deer, no more than two bucks in Howard County.

Landowners in Glasscock County are reminded that a mail-out system for issuing antlerless deer permits was initiated for the 87-88 regular deer hunting season.

Landowners or their agents that received antlerless deer permits last year were automatically mailed a renewal notice and antlerless deer permits will be mailed directly to them.

Landowners that did not receive their permits or were not on the mailing list last year, may apply for antlerless deer permits by completing an application card. Application cards may be obtained from local wildlife biologist, game wardens, and Department offices throughout the Possum Kingdom Regulatory District.

Department personnel will be available to landowners in Glasscock County on Nov. 2 between 8 a.m. and noon, and 1-5 p.m. at the courthouse in Garden City.

Booster club meeting tonight

The Big Spring Sports Booster Club will meet tonight at 7 p.m. in the high school library.

All parents and club members are encouraged to attend.

Rookie wins on senior tour

HILTON HEAD ISLAND, S.C. (AP) — Senior Tour rookie Al Geiberger birdied the second playoff hole Sunday to beat Jim Ferree and win the Seniors International golf tournament at Harbour Town Golf Links. Geiberger and Ferree finished 54 holes at 4-under-par 209 and both parred No. 10, the first playoff hole.

Mayotte beats West German

TOULOUSE, France (AP) — Top-seeded Tim Mayotte of Bradenton, Fla., won the $202,500 Toulouse Tennis Open, beating unseeded Ricki Osterthun of West Germany 6-2, 5-7, 6-4.

Martina wins on birthday

FILDERSTADT, West Germany (AP) — Martina Navratilova celebrated her 31st birthday with a 7-5, 6-1 victory over Chris Evert Saturday in the final of the $175,000 Virginia Slims women's tennis tournament.

Israeli upsets American netter

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Israeli champion Amos Mansdorf scored his second upset in two days, beating Brad Gilbert 3-6, 6-3, 6-4 Sunday in the championship of the Riklis Israel Tennis Center Classic. The 22-year-old Mansdorf, seeded third, beat top-seeded Jimmy Connors in the semifinals.

Ikangaa wins Beijing Marathon

BEIJING (AP) — Favorite Juma Ikangaa of Tanzania overcame blustery winds and several strong challenges, pulling away in the final stages and winning the Beijing Marathon in two hours, 12 minutes, 19 seconds, well off his best of 2:08.10.

Mavericks will fine player

DALLAS (AP) — Dallas Mavericks officials say reserve frontcourt player Roy Tarpley will be fined for missing Sunday's National Basketball Association exhibition game against the Boston Celtics.

Darren Daye hit a 10-foot jumper with three seconds left Sunday afternoon to give the Celtics a 121-119 victory.

It was disclosed earlier this year that Tarpley had sought professional counseling for a personal problem, but Sonju would not confirm or deny if the problem discussed with Tarpley Sunday was related in any way to that matter.

Regulars

"It's going to be very difficult to get out of it. I don't think we have any margin of error," Coach Bill Parcells said.

The Giants aren't the only one. The Rams, 1-2 during the strike despite an influx of regulars, are now 1-4 and last in the NFC West.

Kansas City, a playoff team a year ago, went 0-3 with replacements and is 1-4, two games out of fourth place in the AFC West after a loss to Denver.

And Minnesota, considered the only possible challenger to Chicago in the NFC Central, went 0-3 with replacements after starting 2-0. That left them two games behind the Bears, who themselves lost for the first time Sunday.

"I can't say I'm happy about anything right now," Minnesota Coach Jerry Burns said. "We're going to have to regroup together with the 'A' club and lay down the problems in front of us."

The highest attendance Sunday was 46,813 at Chicago's Soldier Field, where Bears Coach Mike Ditka alternated quarterbacks most of the second half to shuttle in plays. There were 40,719 in Cincinnati.

Pittsburgh's first home game of the replacement season drew 34,627 in Three Rivers Stadium, ending a streak of 119 consecutive home sellouts dating to Nov. 5, 1972. John Stallworth, one of six Pittsburgh regulars to play, got his 500th career reception in the Steelers' victory over the Colts.

Just 8,310 watched the Lions and Seahawks in the Pontiac Silverdome, double the number for the heavily picketed strike opener two weeks ago. Atlanta drew 15,813 for its game with the Rams, and the Packers' overtime victory over Philadelphia drew 35,842 at 57,000-seat Lambeau Field, 63 more people than attended last week's game.

The Jets drew 18,249 to Giants Stadium, a figure that qualified as the high for four replacement games for the Jets and Giants at 76,000-seat Giants Stadium. The smallest crowd in Tampa Bay history, 20,850, watched the Bucs beat the Vikings and 20,296 saw the first replacement game in Kansas City.

San Francisco drew 38,094 to Candlestick Park, their smallest crowd since 1980, and 23,541 at the 92,516-seat Los Angeles Coliseum, where Elvis Patterson's 75-yard interception return with 18 seconds left gave San Diego the victory over the Raiders.

Buffalo's Rich Stadium, which seats 80,000, was sold out for the game before the strike, but only 15,737 came for the replacement game.

AIDS strikes family twice

By MARCIA DUNN
Associated Press Writer
CRESSON, Pa. (AP) — The photographs of her husband and son, always gaunt and almost always grim-faced, are everywhere: on walls, on tables, on the refrigerator.

For Lauren Burk, they're an aching reminder of how she lost both her hemophiliac husband and young son to AIDS and how she herself has AIDS-related symptoms. Yet they're also sources of solace.

"I don't think I'd be able to face just shutting him out and not seeing him anymore. I want to see him," Mrs. Burk, 27, said, gazing at her husband's framed photographs on a coffee table in her mobile home.

"I don't want to remember him the last day because it was just constantly crying and him saying, 'Don't cry.' Me saying, 'I'm scared,' and him saying, 'Well, don't be scared.'"

Patrick Burk, 29, died March 18 at home in bed, with Lauren's arms around him.

He had contracted the deadly AIDS virus about four years earlier, apparently from his regular doses of blood clotting concentrates, and unwittingly passed it on to his wife, who became pregnant with their son, Dwight.

Lauren Burk and her six-year-old daughter Nicole are surrounded by photographs of the family's father, Patrick, and young son Dwight, who both died as a result of AIDS.

"She accepts it the way I do," Mrs. Burk said. "She says God had to make a choice and he left me down here to take care of her and he had to take Daddy up there to take care of Dwightie."

Thinking that, believing that, still doesn't ease Dwightie."

Thinking that, believing up there to take care of Dwightie."

Thinking that, believing that, still doesn't ease the pain or stop the tears. Neither do the two classes Mrs. Burk is taking this fall at a junior college or the companionship of her sister-in-law, who has moved in temporarily.

"I cry a lot. I do it at night when there's nobody here. That's the hardest time, at night," said Mrs. Burk, who has been diagnosed as having AIDS-related complex, an illness that does not necessarily lead to AIDS. Her symptoms include swollen lymph nodes, weight loss and exhaustion.

Still, she says she feels better now than in a long time and test results are encouraging.

More than anything, Mrs. Burk, a registered nurse on disability, wants to take in a baby with AIDS. She has contacted New York's Weiler Hospital of the Albert Einstein College of Medicine about becoming a foster parent, but has not yet been able to bring a child to Pennsylvania.

"I think it may help," said her mother-in-law, Donna Burk. "At least we'd have somebody to try to help and do what we could, make him (the baby) feel a little better."

While she waits, Lauren Burk looks ahead.

"I feel like I'm going to do good for years," she said. "But I also look at it from the viewpoint of, well, what if? What if I do get sick? What if I get full-blown AIDS?"

"That's why I live every day like it's my last because you just never know. I want to make sure I've done most of the things in my life that if I died tomorrow, I could say, 'Well, you know I did pretty much and I'm pretty satisfied.'"

More than 24,000 people in the United States have died of AIDS, according to the U.S. Centers for Disease Control. Of them, 381 have been children and 249 hemophiliacs.

AIDS, which is spread through infected blood, blood products or semen, mainly strikes homosexual men and intravenous drug abusers in this country.

Dwight is believed to be the only child of a hemophiliac born with AIDS who has died, said Dr. Peter Levine, former medical director of the National Hemophilia Foundation. Levine knows of only two other such cases, but both youngsters are alive.

Dwight's plight, detailed in 1985 in The Lancet, prompted the foundation that year to advise the nation's approximately 20,000 hemophiliacs to postpone having children until more could be learned. The recommendation remains in effect.

"It focused attention on how important it was for us to develop intensive guidelines, intensive programs, for helping to keep this tragedy from repeating itself," Levine said.

Eager to do what she can, Mrs. Burk keeps abreast of AIDS research and occasionally contacts stricken families, like that of Clifford and Louise Ray, whose three hemophiliac, AIDS-exposed sons encountered resistance when they returned to school in August. Soon afterward, the family's Arcadia, Fla., home burned down.

Mrs. Burk says she's been fortunate in that respect.

Local people rallied behind her family and thousands of dollars poured into a trust fund, although that later landed in court because of differences over how the money should be spent.

Sponsors of the fund contended the money was collected for Dwight. The Burks countered that they should be free to use it for any medical-related expenses, including a Bahamas cruise they took after Dwight's death on a psychiatrist's advice.

A judge ruled in January that the Burks could keep 75 percent of the $15,000 left in the fund but could not use it to pay for the cruise. He ordered that the remaining 25 percent go to terminally ill children.

These days, Mrs. Burk says, visitors regularly stop by to invite her out, but she seldom accepts, preferring to spend time alone with her daughter.

She is adjusting, she says, to this new, empty life and learning ever so slowly to accept her family's fate.

"My only salvation is knowing that someday the four of us will all be together again," said Mrs. Burk, whose name and birthdate are carved into the heart-shaped tombstone on her husband's grave. "That's how I cope with life, thinking we'll be together again."

Rodriguez to make presentation

Juan Rodriguez, Infection Control Nurse at the Big Spring VA Medical Center, has been selected to make a presentation at the 10th annual Octoberquest, presented by the West Los Angeles VA Medical Center, Director Conrad Alexander announced.

On Oct. 23, 1987, Rodriguez will present his clinical nursing research findings on the topic "Controlled Release Infusion System and its impact on Health Care Delivery." His research impacts on clinical nursing, quality care and cost containment, Alexander said.

Octoberquest is a national conference on nursing research sponsored by the VA in association with UCLA. The purpose of the conference is to present current nursing research and its implementation via studies that are understandable.

WHAT'S INVOLVED IN CORRECTING A HEARING DISORDER?

With today's advanced technology in fitting hearing correction the end result is practically foolproof. A computerized electronic check of the middle ear function reveals many important aspects of what occurs in that part of the hearing mechanism. This is an important test which is performed as a part of our free hearing analysis.

Because various tones responsible for constructing parts of words so the words make sense when interpreted by the mind, these tones must be tested relating to how soft those tones can be detected by the middle ear. Then, the same tones are tested through bone conduction which determines the functional ability of inner ear. Many factors must be considered in determining the type and degree of hearing impairment. It takes about an hour.

It is said that the human ear has the capacity to differentiate between something like 20,000 identifiable sounds. As a hearing problem develops these thousands become fewer and fewer and combine with spoken words which become more difficult to understand as time goes on. It is estimated one uses about 2,000 different sounds to produce understandable conversation. If parts of these sounds do not enter the inner ear, confusion abounds. Today's technology solves this problem and we do it with a 30 day free trial or full refund.

Please phone ahead for your appointment to keep from waiting — there's no obligation.

OCTOBER AIDS AWARENESS MONTH

The baby contracted the disease before birth, becoming the world's first reported case of acquired immune deficiency syndrome in the child of a hemophiliac, according to the British medical journal, The Lancet.

Dwight died Dec. 13, 1985, two days past 20 months of age.

"It was harder when Patrick died," Mrs. Burk said softly, "even though I believe a big part of Patrick died when the baby died. The baby was his life and his pride and his joy."

"When Dwight died, there was somebody here. We were here for each other. When Patrick died, you go to bed and you cry and there's just nobody to hold you or say it's OK."

There is 6-year-old Nicole, a healthy first-grader from Mrs. Burk's first marriage. She tenderly cares for her brother's Cabbage Patch doll and the other toys still in his dresser drawers.

Elderly subject to abdominal ill

AUSTIN — As people grow older, the body becomes more susceptible to certain medical disorders.

Two related diseases for which this is true are diverticulosis and the more serious diverticulitis. Both conditions can cause cramping pain and tenderness in the left side of the abdomen, according to the Texas Medical Association.

Diverticulosis is a condition in which small, sac-like swellings form in the wall of the large intestine. If these pouches become inflamed, then the condition is diverticulitis, an association report stated.

More than half of all people over 60 have diverticulosis and, in most cases, no treatment is necessary. Only a small number of these cases develop diverticulitis.

These diseases seem to be connected with the Western diet, which is low in fiber. Serious cases are rare in Africa and Asia, where more fiber is consumed, the report stated.

With diverticulitis, severe abdominal pain usually comes and goes at first and then becomes more constant. Touching the spot on the lower left side of the abdomen brings more pain, the report added.

In some people, the symptoms may be mild for several days before becoming serious. In others, it flares and causes severe pain within a few hours, requiring medical attention, the report stated.
